EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW

Vol. 12 No. 1 | June 3, 1922 | Price 25 cts.

That's What They All Say!

"THE booklet describing the forty-one Paramount Pictures for release in the six months from August to January is the finest and most comprehensive ever issued by a producer or a distributor.

"It will be of great assistance to us in selecting the productions to be played in future.

"The outlook for good pictures this fall is most promising, and all these productions should prove splendid money-makers for every exhibitor.

"I wish to express sincere appreciation, and at the same time offer my congratulations upon the excellence of your forthcoming releases."

Without the proper musical interpretation, the highest type of picture presentation is liable to a miserable failure. The story is projected on the screen. To transpose this story successfully from the head to the heart is the difficult task of the musical accompaniment. Accomplishment of this feat is the daily score of the WURLITZER UNIT ORGAN as no other accompaniment can do it. Treat your patrons to THE BEST. Make your audience a "Repeat Audience." A perpetual repetition of patronage is your biggest asset. As a musical achievement, the WURLITZER UNIT ORGAN stands alone—Supreme.

EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW

Keeping the Record Straight

By L. W. BOYNTON

NOBODY who has followed closely or participated in the chaos that has existed in the industry for years can fail to look with satisfaction upon the moves that have been made for conference between producer-distributors, on the one hand, and exhibitors on the other.

That such a development would come about has been pretty well indicated ever since Mr. Hays entered the picture business. It was made a certainty when Mr. Hays had had an opportunity to acquaint the industry with his enthusiasm, his sincerity and his driving force.

Already, the exhibitors of New York City and State have met Mr. Hays in a preliminary conference. This week the announcement comes that Mr. Cohen and his board of Directors have arranged for conferences beginning June 12.

While it is obvious that Mr. Hays, as a matter of course, will confer with any group of exhibitors who desire to meet him, attention should be called to the fact that the New York group and the Cohen group stand in very different situations. The former is a well-defined, incorporated organization with a definite legal existence. It is a responsible body. There is no cloud on its entity or its ability to enter into the making of agreements.

For the purpose of keeping the record straight, we desire to point out that the same thing cannot be said for the Cohen organization. It is an unincorporated association, operating under a Constitution upon which its National Convention never voted. By the terms of that Constitution, state units are forced to apply for charters and decision upon these applications is to be made by the National Board of Directors. So far as we are advised, no charters have as yet been issued. That point is not so important, however, in view of the fact that state organizations in existence at the time the Constitution was adopted are by the terms of this strange document continued for a period of six months.

The question, then, ceases to be one of technicality and turns into a matter of cold fact. Mr. Cohen and his director group cannot by any conceivable stretch of the imagination negotiate for the exhibitors of the entire country. At best, they can speak for themselves and a few state units whose status, even under the six months' clause, is ill-defined. Some of these units might never apply for charters; or they might apply and be turned down. There is no certainty that they will stay in the M. P. T. O. A. until the six months' period is up. All that Mr. Cohen can do, then, is to speak, in a very tentative way, for a comparatively small number of exhibitors.

All this is by way of saying that Mr. Cohen has some machinery with which to operate a national organization, so-called, but as a matter of fact he cannot know for half a year, even under the terms of his own Constitution, just what it is he is going to operate. Such is the knot in which the machine tied itself at Washington.

By all means, there should be conferences between producer-distributors—represented by Mr. Hays, and exhibitor organizations. But the Cohen group cannot speak for New York, the South, part of Ohio, a section of Missouri, at least. Its membership, considering the country at large, must be reckoned as being very far from 100%.

We come then to a period of negotiation with Mr. Hays by exhibitors in groups. Just that and nothing more.

The era of conferences will find its complete fulfilment only if exhibitors in all states form their own strong organizations, and seek conferences with Mr. Hays. There is no national organization of exhibitors which can speak for the theatre body as a whole.

New York has shown the way. Let others follow. We are entering the business epoch of the motion picture in which political machines will have to be scrapped in the interest and for the good of the whole industry.

Supply Dealers Organizing

SCIENTISTS and engineers who work with the problem of making motion pictures and projecting them have an efficient organization, The Society of Motion Picture Engineers, which is growing larger each year and is commanding the respect of its brother engineering societies. Exhibitors and motion picture directors have their organizations. The producers are knitting together. Projectionists, cameramen, musicians and actors have their societies, each fulfilling a purpose, and growing.

But theatre equipment and supply dealers are unorganized. Now a move is on foot to organize them. It is hoped it will get a good start and succeed as other organizations have.

The equipment and supply dealer has an important part in the industry, too often overlooked. It is he who furnishes the heart of the motion picture theatre; sees to it that the theatre is safely, comfortably and modernly furnished, please public tastes.

Serious attention should be given to the move which purposes holding a "get-together" meeting in Indianapolis. No petty jealousies, distrust, or differences should prevent organization.

Exhibitors may well look forward to an organization of this kind. For years the honest theatre owner has been injured in his business with supply dealers by the dishonest exhibitor, and an organization properly formed and honest in its purpose will serve as a protection to the exhibitor who is on the square. It will also drive out the dishonest supply dealer who sets up a fly-by-night shop and ropes in all within reach.

The keynote is struck when the association recognizes Will H. Hays and asks him to aid and advise.

New York Exhibitors, With Walker as Counsel, Hold First of Series of Important Conferences With Hays

THE first definite step toward understanding and co-operation between the producer-distributor and the exhibitor groups was taken on Friday, May 19, when a delegation representing the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York City and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York State conferred with Will H. Hays.

The conference was held in Mr. Hays' office. The exhibitor delegation had as its spokesman Senator James J. Walker, who has been retained as counsel by the T. O. C. C.

Full and Frank Discussion

There was a full and frank discussion of the great need for co-operation between the different branches of the industry so that a united front could be presented to enemies on the outside.

The exhibitors pointed out the necessity for the adoption of an equitable contract and the lowering of film rentals as initial steps toward harmony in the industry. Mr. Hays manifested a sympathetic attitude toward these proposals and asked the exhibitors to have what they considered an equitable contract drawn up, so that action could be taken in the very near future.

The correction of other business abuses was also discussed and Mr. Hays indicated he would see to it that every opportunity was given for remedying these evils.

More meetings between Mr. Hays and the New York exhibitors and their counsel, Senator Walker, are to follow.

The meeting in Mr. Hays' office was not heralded with a blare of trumpets, but its great significance is immediately apparent. The New York exhibitors, after waiting two years for National Headquarters of the M. P. T. O. A. to find constructive solutions to pressing exhibitor problems, decided to wait no longer. The complete divorcement of the T. O. C. C. from the Cohen organization last week opened the way for individual action by this unit and the State Body.

With the preliminary meeting between the New York exhibitors and Mr. Hays already an established fact, and other negotiations to follow, Sydney S. Cohen, President of the M. P. T. O. A., this week sought a conference with the head of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

Cohen Board to Meet Hays

It was pointed out by close observers of the situation that Mr. Cohen, having failed to take any constructive steps toward the solution of the real problems of the industry despite the fact that Mr. Hays had been at his post since March 1, fell in line because the New York exhibitors had virtually forced his hand.

On Wednesday, May 24, Mr. Cohen announced that the date for the conference had been fixed for June 12 in New York. The arrangements for the conference and the date were confirmed by Mr. Hays' office.

Mr. Cohen issued a formal statement which read as follows:

"A conference between Motion Picture producing and distributing interests, represented by Mr. Will H. Hays, and the National Board of Directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, will be held in this city commencing Monday, June 12th, 1922.

"This conference was arranged in conformity with the provisions of a resolution adopted at the recent National Convention at Washington, in which the Board of Directors were directed to arrange for such a meeting within thirty days.

"At this conference matters affecting the industry generally will be discussed, and where joint action may be deemed advisable on any line of precedure arrangement will be made to move in that way. Matters in dispute between Producer and Distributor interests on the one hand and Exhibitor interests on the other will be considered and agreements reached, when possible, which will tend to bring about more harmonious and better business relations.

"The members of the Board of Directors are:

"A. R. Pramer of Nebraska; W. A. Steffes of Minnesota; M. E. Comerford of Pennsylvania; W. D. Burford of Illinois; Claude Cady of Michigan; W. A. True of Connecticut; H. B. Varner of North Carolina; E. M. Fay of Rhode Island; G. G. Schmidt of Indiana; I. W. McMahan of Ohio; A. Julian Brylawsky of Washington, D. C.; R. F. Woodhull of New Jersey; Sydney S. Cohen of New York."

Attempt to Disrupt N. Y. State Body Fails

Machine's Effort to Create Upstate Unit Breaks Down at Buffalo Meeting—Exhibitors Urge State Unit to Leave National Organization—Confidence Voted in O'Reilly and Other Officers

THE first attempt of the Cohen machine to put into effect the charter provisions of the so-called Constitution of the M. P. T. O. A., which was railroaded through the Executive Committee three days before the Washington convention opened, met with failure this week.

At the same time, an effort to disrupt the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York State, now an incorporated body, broke down.

The machine centered its attention on Buffalo where a meeting was called May 23, by Howard Smith, president of the M. P. T. O. of Western New York. Mr. Smith, a Cohen follower, is the man who wrote a letter to the National Board of Directors at Washington seeking a charter creating a new upstate unit to be affiliated with the national organization.

The Buffalo meeting was the first move made by the machine to get a semblance of an organization in the Empire State which it could affiliate with itself.

Information received in New York City by Charles L. O'Reilly, president of the M. P. T. O. of New York State, Inc., showed that the meeting, which was intended to be a victory for the machine, resulted in the rout of the Cohen forces. Mr. Smith resigned, and Jules Michaels of Buffalo, was elected for the unexpired term.

Instead of indorsing the proceedings of the National Convention and lining up with the machine the Buffalo exhibitors adopted a resolution urging that the New York State organization withdraw from the national body.

Summarizing the situation, Mr. O'Reilly on May 24 issued the following statement:

"A meeting of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western New York was held at the Palace Theatre, Buffalo, N. Y., Tuesday, May 23. The meeting was called by Howard Smith, president of the northwestern exhibitors' organization, for the purpose of creating an up-State organization to work in conjunction with the national organization. Mr. Smith at the Washington convention had applied for a charter for the northwestern exhibitors with the evident purpose of splitting the organization of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the State of New York.

"The meeting was largely attended by the exhibitors of that territory and the proceedings of the Washington convention were discussed. A resolution was passed requesting the State organization to withdraw from the national organization, and a resolution was also passed voting confidence and support to the State officers in their efforts to keep the State organization a solid unit so that the interests of the exhibitors of the Empire State could be safeguarded. After the resolutions were passed, Mr. Smith resigned as president and Mr. Jules Michaels, of the Regent Theatre, Buffalo, who is also chairman of the Executive Committee of the State organization, was elected in his place as president for the unexpired term of office.

"The attempt of Mr. Smith to divide the State has met with failure and northwestern New York stands solid with its State organization, a unit in defense of the right of the exhibitors of the State. Attempts of the national organization, both prior to and after the national convention, to cause a split in the ranks of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the State of New York have met with emphatic disapproval of the theatre owners of the State."

Buffalo Exhibitors Quit M. P. T. O. A.

Withdraw from National Organization and Stand by State Body — Block Attempt to End Arbitration Contract

(Special to EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW)

BUFFALO, May 23.

EXHIBITORS of the Buffalo district have voted to discontinue all affiliations that they have had with the national organization and to stand by the New York State organization and its officers.

This action was taken at a meeting in the Palace Theatre to-day. Howard J. Smith, when the above action was taken tendered his resignation as president of the western New York unit and as a member of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York State, Inc. J. H. Michaels, manager of the Regent and chairman of the executive committee of the state organization, was named to act as temporary president and to continue the unexpired term of Mr. Smith.

The meeting was called by Mr. Smith, who presided up until the time the divorcement action was taken, when Mr. Michaels took the chair. Before the vote Mr. Smith, Mr. Michaels and Walter Hayes each in turn gave their versions of the Washington convention. Mr. Hayes also discussed the Rochester episode, declaring that the whole affair was staged prior to the national convention to reflect on the present officers of the state organization. He told of the falling through of the whole fiasco when Rochester exhibitors failed to sustain the charges.

Mr. Michaels, in closing his talk, declared that it was up to the exhibitors to decide whether they should ride along with the new state organization or continue with the national association. Mr. Michaels said that he felt that the friendship of Senator Jimmy Walker and other friends that the New York association had in Albany was worth infinitely more to the exhibitors of New York State than Sydney Cohen as president of the national body. Upon the motion of Mr. Hayes it was voted that the Buffalo district discontinue all affiliation with the national organization.

When this action was taken Mr. Smith tendered his resignation and upon the motion of M. Slotkin, general manager of the Monument Theatre Corporation, owners of the new Lafayette Square Theatre, Michaels was selected to act as president for the unexpired term.

A sidelight of the meeting was the discussion of Mr. Smith's returning from the Washington convention and informing Allan S. Moritz, manager of the Paramount exchange and president of the Buffalo Film Board of Trade that hereafter the exhibitors would not sit with the Grievance Committee because of action taken at the national meeting. Mr. Michaels asked Mr. Smith by what authority he has discontinued

"Let's Lay Bricks—Not Throw Them"

—Will H. Hays

Head of M. P. P. D. A., in Address at Carnegie Institute, Pittsburgh, Declares Prosperity Is Just Ahead—"I Have No Use for Commercial Slackers," He Says

WILL H. HAYS, president of Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., addressing an audience at Carnegie Institute, Pittsburgh, May 26, spoke frankly about the industry, told of its possibilities and its needs, and pledged himself and those with whom he has become associated to do everything possible to realize the great potentialities of the film.

After telling how he had been induced to take his present post by a group of leaders of the industry who convinced him they were earnestly determined to "establish and maintain the highest possible moral and artistic standards" and "develop the educational as well as the entertainment value and general usefulness of the motion picture," Mr. Hays pointed out to his hearers that twenty million Americans seek screen entertainment daily.

Picture's Great Mission

"They come in a mood of relaxation, of reception—in precisely that state of mind and emotion in which a master psychologist, a great teacher, would want them to come—in the most plastic state for receiving and holding impressions. If a man had the wish to influence the thought of the nation toward a common ideal he could not more intelligently create a situation better adapted to that purpose.

"The potentialities of the motion picture for moral influence and education are absolutely limitless. And if this is so, then the integrity of motion pictures should be protected just as we protect the integrity of our churches, and the quality of the pictures developed just as we develop the quality of our schools."

Mr. Hays likened the conditions surrounding the motion picture industry in its early days—and indeed almost until the present—to the conditions attending the rush to the California gold fields when the precious metal was discovered.

"There has been competition of the fiercest kind," he said. "There has been no time for adequate reflection. The mere physical and mechanical expansion has been so great and rapid that there has not been the time nor the mood to consider adequately the moral and educational responsibilities inherent in this great new thing.

"Now, at the end of this period of incredibly compressed physical, mechanical, financial and artistic development, the men interested in the industry find themselves the responsible leaders and custodians of one of the greatest industries in the world, with limitless commercial possibilities, and perhaps more income than all the public utilities of the country combined, this in addition to their other responsibilities."

Industry's Responsibility

Mr. Hays told his hearers that there is an investment of $500,000,000 in real estate, studios and equipment, with 50,000 persons constantly employed at salaries totalling $50,000,000 annually. For admissions to movie theatres $800,000,000 are paid annually, and possibly $200,000,000 a year spent in production.

He said he realized the enormous responsibility of his position as the head of such an industry, and continued:

"This movement to attain and maintain the highest possible moral and artistic standards and develop the educational as well as the entertainment value of the industry is a cause—with a capital C. I thought I saw a cause when I went into the work. Now I know it is here and again I say I am going to give all I have to this cause. The vital thing now is the certainty of the good faith of those who have set about these major purposes and I do have a certainty of that good faith.

"This industry shall and must maintain its high place in the business world along with the other great industries, offering enterprising capital a legitimate opportunity for profitable investment, established on a solid foundation, operated with reasonable economy, and supported properly, as are our other great industries, by the investing public. And it must and shall take its very high place in public estimation, based upon its demonstrated integrity, quality and usefulness."

Mr. Hays said the men who pioneered in the motion picture industry now proposed to make it their first business to do everything possible toward establishing and maintaining the "highest possible moral and artistic standards."

"To aid in this effort is the duty of all," he added. "So certainly is it a matter of your immediate concern that I earnestly ask your advice and active help.

I know the American public and I know that its manhood and womanhood is sound. Of course the American public will support clean pictures. It has been said repeatedly that certain objectionable pictures are the class of pictures which the public wanted, and that such productions have been a meeting of the demands of the public, based upon box office receipts. But one of the largest producers has told me that the outstanding financial successes in the last eighteen months have been clean pictures."

Public the Real Censor

Taking up briefly the subject of censorship of the films, Mr. Hays said:

"The American public is the real censor for the motion picture just as it is for the press and the pulpit. The people of this country, of course, are against censorship of press, of pulpit or of pictures. Just as certainly, this country is against wrong-doing, and the demand for censorship will fail when the reason for the demand is removed. As we move toward the consummation of the objects of our association, just in like degree will recede the demand, which seems more or less prevalent, for censorship.

"The problem of censorship which is now faced by pictures was faced by the press and settled—and settled right, so far as the American law is concerned—in one of those prolonged and bitter contests for the unrestricted freedom of expression more than two centuries ago."

Mr. Hays then pledged his association in these words:

"I promise that this agency for the distribution of information and thought, this agency for the amusement of millions and for the inevitable inculcation of standards of taste in art and conduct, shall endeavor honestly and earnestly to measure up to its great responsibility.

The Challenge Accepted

"The motion picture industry accepts the challenge in the demand of the American public for a higher quality of art and interest in its entertainment. The industry accepts the challenge in the demand of the American youth that its pictures shall give the right kind of entertainment and instruction. We accept the challenge in the righteous demand of the American mother that the entertainment and amusement of that youth shall be worthy of their value as the most potent factor in the Country's future.

"We accept our full responsibility. It is a service, and 'service is the supreme commitment of life.' It is a service which needs the very best from all, and I have great faith in its fulfilment."

Mr. Hays also spoke interestingly of the postal service of the United States, the conduct of which he resigned to take his present position; and, touching upon business conditions, declared that a great era of expansion and prosperity had already started and would develop rapidly with courage, confidence and co-operation.

Courage, Confidence, Co-operation

"No exigency however serious will present to this nation an insurmountable crisis. Every problem is solvable. Readjustment demands the best there is in us as a nation mentally and spiritually. We shall adhere to the true, clear thing and never abandon our high ideals. This nation is a success; it is still the hope of the world; it must be made a yet greater place for the sons of men.

"The fact is, of course, that there is ahead the greatest era of expansion and prosperity the world has ever seen. The only question has been when will it start. Well, it has started. There has been a lot of business that has been really sick, staggering, still with the shell shock of war and the debauch of extravagance, but there has been a good deal more business that has been merely malingering. I have had and have now full appreciation of the difficulties, but I have no use for commercial slackers. We have not been in a period of hard times coming; we have been in a period of soft times coming. Prosperity is right ahead of us and it is time to go out and meet it. I cry continually for the common sense of Courage, Confidence and Co-operation. LET US LAY BRICKS—NOT THROW THEM."

Three State Conventions in June

Georgia, North Carolina and New Jersey Will Hold Important Sessions—Attitude Toward Cohen Organization of Vital Interest

EXHIBITORS of three states—Georgia, North Carolina and New Jersey will assemble in their respective state conventions in June.

The first meeting scheduled is that in Georgia, which has openly parted from the Cohen organization as a result of the machine tactics used at Washington. The Georgia Amusement Protective Association will gather in Atlanta on June 6, and it is expected a record number of exhibitors will be on hand. Every effort will be made to build up a very strong organization, fully capable of taking care of the interests of the exhibitors of the State.

The revolt of the Southern States against the Cohen administration is in full swing, and reports to Exhibitors Trade Review indicate that, as a direct result of the Washington convention, new organizations will be formed throughout Dixie.

On June 20, 21, 22, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of North Carolina will gather at Asheville. The Langren Hotel will be convention headquarters, and the ballroom of the hotel, also commodious committee rooms, have been reserved for holding the meetings of the organization.

This will be the first convention of the North Carolina association to be held in the mountain city, all midsummer meetings have heretofore been called for Wrightsville Beach, Wilmington.

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey will hold their annual convention, June 20-23, inclusive, at The Alamac Hotel, Lake Hopatcong, in the mountains.

Henry P. Nelson of the Capitol Theatre, Elizabeth, has been appointed chairman of the convention committee.

Will H. Hays has been invited to attend the convention, and it is expected the Democratic and Republican candidates for Governor of New Jersey will be in attendance.

A number of entertaining events have been arranged for the entertainment of the delegates and their families. Several motion picture stars are expected to lend their presence toward making the affair a success.

Cohen Appoints Five Members of Executive Committee

The following statement was issued May 24 by National Headquarters of the M. P. T. O. A.:

"Under the provisions of the constitution of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, the national executive committee consists of representatives from each state unit of the organization or recognized subdivision of a state. These state units or divisions are to make the selections and certify the same to the National Office.

"In addition to the members thus selected in the states, five members are to be appointed at large by the national president. In conformity with this provision of the Constitution, President Sydney S. Cohen has named the following: J. C. Ritter, Detroit, Mich.; L. J. Dittmar, Louisville, Ky.; Harry Davis, Pittsburgh, Pa.; C. E. Whitehurst, Baltimore, Md.; Jacob Lourie, Boston, Mass."

the contract made with the films clubs of Albany, Buffalo and New York. Mr. Smith said that he had done it with the sanction of the national association, whereupon he was asked whether he knew if the contract had expired. Mr. Smith replied that it had several weeks to run.

Mr. Michaels said that the exhibitors would continue to sit with the Grievance Committee until the contract had expired and that New York State was not controlled by any action taken in Washington. He said that the Grievance Committee would continue to sit and when the contract had expired he expressed the hope that with minor changes the agreement between the film clubs and the exhibitors would be continued.

Among those in attendance at the meeting were: J. H. Michaels, Walter Hayes, vice-president of the Mark-Strand interests; M. Slotkin and Fred M. Shafer, Lafayette Square; Al Beckerich, Loew State; Henry Carr, Shea's Court Street; Vincent McFaul, Shea's Hippodrome; Art Amm, Shea's North Park; Eugene Pfeil, Mark-Strand, Arthur L. Skinner, Victoria; Bruce Fowler, Elmwood; Sid Allen, Scenic, Medina; Joseph A. Schuchert, interested in several houses in Buffalo; W. H. Bradley, Jim Wallingford, General Theatres Corporation; John Stevens, General Theatres; George Keating, Jubilee; Sam Carver, Empire; C. D. Dellemuth, Broadway Lyceum; Mr. Morris of the Happy Hour and several women exhibitors.

Friday there was another meeting scheduled to be held in the Criterion Theatre, which was addressed by Sam Berman. This meeting was held for out-of-town exhibitors.

Organizing Supply Dealers' Association

Meeting Called for Middle of July in Indianapolis by Committee

By HOWARD McLELLAN

EFFORTS to effect a national organization of Theatre Supply and Equipment Dealers' are under way. A call sent out by a temporary committee composed of H. J. Smith of Hollis, Smith & Morton, Pittsburgh, Pa.; W. C. Denney of Argus Enterprises, Inc., Cleveland, Ohio; and Leo F. Dwyer of The Theatre Supply Co., Cleveland, Ohio, is the first notice that a much needed organization, such as was suggested months ago in this journal, is at last in process of formation.

The first meeting will take place in Indianapolis, Ind., July 13, 14 and 15 at the Hotel Claypool. The response which is greeting the initial call indicates that the movement is being well received and the committee hopes that every supply dealer in the country will participate in the meeting and join.

An important feature of the movement is the effort being made to enlist the aid of Will Hays. It is possible that the new association may call upon Mr. Hays to advise it and to assist in perfecting organization.

In the year past theatre supply dealers have been hard hit by conditions. Forced to carry large stocks of equipment and supplies to meet emergency demands of theatres the dealers have gone through a season of limited buying. Relations with manufacturers have not been what they should be and a "get together," it is believed, will tend to better conditions.

The call sent out by the temporary committee follows:

Gentlemen:

We have been designated to write you with reference to a meeting of Motion Picture Supply Dealers to be held in Indianapolis, Ind., Thursday, Friday, Saturday, July 13, 14, 15, to take up the question of a national organization of all interests connected with the distribution of Motion Picture Equipment and Supplies.

After the organization is effected, the following subjects which directly affect our business and are of paramount interest to us at this time, should be discussed:

1. Credit risks.

2. Establish if possible a scale of allowances on used equipment.

3. The question of selling on cash or time basis and whether the consumer should pay the carrying charge on long term paper financing the same as automobile accounts are handled?

4. After this organization is effected, without a doubt arrangements can be made with a discounting company for handling long term paper which would stimulate our business in general.

5. The film exchanges have had their organizations and district board of trades and they have worked very effectively.

6. Endeavor to bring pressure in effort to obtain support of Will H. Hays, who has recently been appointed to better the conditions of the motion picture industry in general. We believe that we supply and equipment men are as much entitled to this support as other branches of the industry.

7. It may be advisable to include in our membership, dealers and distributors of all motion picture apparatus and supplies, including those who are specializing in the non-theatrical field.

8. To prevail upon the manufacturers to discontinue the practice of selling direct.

9. To endeavor to obtain closer cooperation from manufacturers of all equipment and accessories.

10. Of quoting educational discounts and the elimination of other practices that have worked a hardship on us in the past.

11. The matter of supporting manufacturers who will give us their undivided support.

12. One thousand and one other advantages you can think of and have the privilege of expressing yourself at this meeting.

The enclosed by-laws are proposed for our association; however, they may be revised if desired.

A great number of firms associated with the Motion Picture Equipment business have already expressed a willingness to attend this meeting, and we are assured that we will have one or more representatives from the following cities:

Chicago, Ill.; Milwaukee, Wis.; Minneapolis, Minn.; Indianapolis, Ind.; St. Louis, Mo.; Columbus, Ohio; Boston, Mass.; New Haven, Conn.; San Francisco, Cal.; Kansas City, Mo.; Dallas, Tex.; Seattle, Wash.; Portland, Ore.; Buffalo, N. Y.; Cleveland, Ohio; Cincinnati, Ohio; Omaha, Neb.; Denver, Col.; Salt Lake City, Utah; New York, N. Y.; Los Angeles, Cal.; Detroit, Mich.; Pittsburgh, Pa.; Philadelphia, Pa.; Atlanta, Ga.; Toledo, Ohio.

Can we depend upon you to be there also? Advise this committee in time that reservation may be made.

The Place: Claypool Hotel, Indianapolis, Ind.

The Time: Thursday, July 13, extending to July 15, inclusive.

Yours for a solid league of Motion Picture Equipment Engineers, we are,

Very truly,
TEMPORARY COMMITTEE.

Richard A. Rowland Joins Executive Forces of Associated First National

Richard A. Rowland, for years president of the Metro Pictures Corporation and senior member of the firm of Rowland & Clarke of Pittsburgh, with extensive theatre holdings in western Pennsylvania, has joined the executive forces of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., and will be associated in the administration of the company's activities with President Lieber, J. D. Williams, Harry O. Schwalbe and the executive committee.

Mr. Rowland's career as an exhibitor, producer and distributor, successively, makes his new association a natural and logical outcome of his varied and successful business accomplishments. With James R. Clarke, vice-president of Associated First National, Mr. Rowland played a part in the founding of First National and manifested at that time the same faith and confidence in the necessity and value of such an organization which has now brought him to an executive position in it. This in itself indicates that there will be no change in or departure from those policies which have always characterized the company, but simply adds to the executive strength of the organization one more able and experienced motion picture mind to assist in the complete realization of the ideals and aims for which it was founded.

It is hard to place Mr. Rowland predominantly in any of the three leading phases of the motion picture industry, because his experience in all three has been equally extensive and conspicuous. The firm of Rowland & Clarke were already leading exhibitors of western Pennsylvania as well as prominent independent distributors, when the collapse of the Alco Film Corporation in 1915 made it necessary for the independent exchange men who had backed that concern to take over its operation. Richard A. Rowland was selected by his associates at that time to take the executive helm, and for six years thereafter he made his headquarters in New York, where as president of the Metro Pictures Corporation, the new concern which arose from the ashes of Alco, he piloted the company to a prominent position.

"From the founding of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, I have understood fully the extent to which such an organization could safeguard the interests of the theatre owner," said Mr. Rowland in discussing his new affiliation, "and for that reason I have not only believed in it thoroughly as an exhibitor from the beginning but I have always upheld its principles."

Some Big Music Problems of Today

Speculations Rife as to What Will Happen as Result of Organized Musicians' Attitude

"THEATRE owners must decide pretty soon," said a man who has given years to the study of photoplay music problems, "just what they are going to do to make music for their patrons more secure."

The remark was prompted by a discussion of the situation in St. Louis, where the union musicians are out and the theatres confronted with the old problem of providing music in the absence of the union players.

The speaker went on, "Suppose this thing were carried along further and the organ builders formed an association of their own and told the theatre owners that they couldn't have an organ unless they agreed to take a certain kind. In St. Louis and elsewhere the public believes that the union is running the picture houses, and the public is not far wrong. Or, better yet, suppose the organ builders combined with the Musicians' Union and dictated terms. In a very short time the unions and the organ builders would build up the finest kind of a theatre trust.

"Music is very important to the motion picture theatre and the situation as I see it is just this. If business is bad this summer, what expenses are the theatre owners going to cut? Will they cut out their pictures or their orchestras? And if they do continue business what is the best possible means of putting a little animation into their pictures? Will they use a piano, a violinist or a cornet player? It's a serious question and one that must be settled pretty soon. As I see it, the organ must be resorted to, and it must be an organ that wasn't built for a church.

"I agree heartily with an article published not long ago in EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW that the organ is the recognized companion of pictures, and the funny part of it is I'm not an organ man. I only know that music is a big part of successful picture shows and it must be provided."

The situation in St. Louis is one of the most serious that has arisen. Some 450 musicians employed in ninety theatres are out.

The theatre owners point out that they have suffered great losses in recent months, that attendance fell off 35 to 45 per cent since May 1, 1921.

Although the theatre managers were most considerate of the musicians when the cost of living was mounting skyward in the war days and immediately after the close of the war, declining to take advantage of existing contracts to force impossible conditions on the players, the latter when called upon to aid the owners when conditions were reversed absolutely refuse to do so.

The theatres asked that wages be reduced 30 per cent, and especially that the management be permitted to employ only so many musicians as receipts justified, regardless of the size of the house or the admission fees. On February 24 the Musicians' Mutual Benefit Association, disregarding the advice of Frank Gecks, their president, rejected the demands of the theatres. All efforts to reach a satisfactory agreement henceforth failed.

The minimum wage that has been paid the musicians is $42 a week, but some earned as high as $75 weekly. However, the main point of controversy was the clause that compelled the management to employ so many musicians.

The attitude of the St. Louis theatre men is fully covered in their letter to the Musicians' Union, which follows:

St. Louis, Mo., March 22, 1922.

Mr. Frank Gecks, President Musicians' Mutual Benefit Association, 3535 Pine Street, St. Louis, Mo.:

My dear Mr. Gecks:

The undersigned committee, appointed by the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of St. Louis, representing every motion picture theatre charging admission over 15 cents, present herewith the necessities of their position.

The general business depression prevailing throughout the country has affected the theatrical business more extensively than it has any other industry, and this is particularly true in this locality. Since May 1, 1921, almost 75 per cent of the houses have shown substantial losses to their owners, and while the attendance of the theatres has shown a decrease of 35 per cent or 40 per cent since last May, still the music expense remains the same. That is one of the principal reasons why every theatre in St. Louis, with the possible exception of a few houses, have shown losses since that date.

When prosperous conditions existed several years ago, the theatre owners willingly granted the musicians a material increase in their salaries, and the same equitable action is now expected of your organization.

If theatres in St. Louis are to be kept open, expenses must be reduced and they must be left free to employ as many men as advisable and necessary.

It is impossible, under the contract which you compel us to sign, for any theatre of consequence, excepting a few larger theatres, which are located in populous localities, to remain in business unless theatre owners are permitted and granted the right to employ as many men as they deem necessary. In many instances the theatre owners employ more men—sometimes twice or three times as many as your rules require, where they think it necessary to have that number, and it is only just that they should be permitted a reduction of men when the exigencies of the situation demands.

It is every business man's right, under the laws of this country, to operate his business so as to make it successful, and his success, after all, is the success of every one of his employes. That is all that we ask of your organization in making this request.

We expect you to give this letter your most earnest consideration and advise us at an early date as to the action taken thereon, as we deem this of vital importance.

Signed:

WILLIAM GOLDMAN,

"One Arabian Night" Finally Approved in Ohio

"One Arabian Night" has finally been approved by the Ohio State Motion Picture Commission, and is now being shown in the Buckeye State theatres after having been barred from the screens for nearly seven months.

The approval of the commission, of which Mrs. Evelyn F. Snow is the chief, was given after the picture had been reconstructed and revised in accordance with plans perfected in consultation with Mrs. Snow by Walter E. Lusk, manager of Associated First National Pictures of Northern Ohio, Lesley Mason of the New York office of First National, H. O. Bandy, district manager, and Roe S. Eastman of the Cincinnati exchange, and exploitation agent of First National for Southern Ohio.

Mr. Mason, who titled "One Arabian Night" in its original American version, re-edited and re-titled the picture from beginning to end, adding numerous titles not only to meet the approval of the censors, but to clarify the action of the picture at certain points for American audiences.

When the reconstructed film was submitted to her at Columbus for final approval, Mrs. Snow was enthusiastic in her praise for the manner in which revision of the picture had been made, and for what she considered the added box-office value of the production.

The News of the Week

Paul Brunet Hopeful for the Future

Pathe Chief Goes Abroad for Vacation—Compliments Hays' Work and Looks for Harmony and Better Business

Paul Brunet sailed on May 24 for a few months' vacation in Europe. Just before his departure the president of Pathe Exchange, Inc., in an interview for publication, expressed himself as follows:

"I am taking a little rest, and I leave my desk with the sanguine feeling that upon my return I shall find the motion picture business still further improved.

"I think the worst is now behind us, and while one cannot expect much improvement during the summer months, the gradual and continued improvement in general conditions during the months from now until September will reflect itself in a surge upwards in the business of exhibitors, and accordingly make conditions easier for the distributor and the producer.

Paul Brunet, President of Pathe

"Almost everyone dislikes to talk about last year. While Pathe Exchange, Inc., made very little profit last year, we consider our good will asset somewhat increased. We have demonstrated that we stand by our customers, and gratefully acknowledge that they have stood by us during a very trying year, to our mutual benefit and better understanding.

"The conditions of our industry seem to be shaping themselves very nicely. Exhibitors and producers realize their mutual interdependence and are ever getting closer together in understanding and the shaping of the industry's future.

"Only a few short years ago the public felt a certain antipathy to railroads. I believe that the public now realizes fully the important relationship carrier prosperity bears to general welfare. Likewise exhibitor and public feeling toward producer and distributor is rapidly becoming more and more tolerant, and as soon as this feeling becomes fully crystallized we can look for some really wonderful developments in the production end of our business.

"The start made by Mr. Will H. Hays on behalf of the producers and distributors is interesting, and from the steps so far taken it seems clear that as he gets a full grasp of the industry's problems much good can be expected to result, particularly since I note the interest and participation of exhibitors in their organization and the apparent purpose of that body to make a trial of complete co-operation with the producer-distributor organization."

Universal Making New Version of Scott's "Ivanhoe"

Universal is making a production of Sir Walter Scott's Ivanhoe. Universal City, for the time being, has been turned into a mediaeval castle and knights in armor are no longer a novelty along the Lankershim Boulevard. The production will be a Jewel, possibly a super-Jewel.

Ever since Carl Laemmle sent King Baggot to Europe to film this classic of English literature, he has anticipated making it over again with all of the improvements which the modern method of story telling and modern photography could add to it. The Baggot Ivanhoe was filmed eight years ago in four reels.

Universal has met such success with its educational-historical serials, such as Winners of the West, With Stanley in Africa, Perils of the Yukon, In the Days of Buffalo Bill and The Adventures of Robinson Crusoe that it has established to its own satisfaction a new field not only for the making of serials but for features as well. Ivanhoe as a Jewel picture is expected to bear the same relation in its field as Winners of the West and With Stanley in Africa have done in theirs, the announcement declares.

Postpone Play Date of Coogan's "Trouble" for Children's Benefit

Sig Samuels, managing director of the Metropolitan Theatre, Atlanta, booked Trouble, Jackie Coogan's latest production, for one week commencing May 29. Mr. Samuels and his manager, Willard C. Patterson, were unusually active in exploiting the picture and were successful with their campaign.

Several days after the announcement Mr. Samuels received a letter from the president of the Atlanta Board of Education asking him to postpone the showing. The educator gave as his reason that the public schools held their graduation and other exercises every night during this particular week. The head of the school board also informed Mr. Samuels that the children were forced to study harder during this week than any other time in the school term and that very few of the children would get an opportunity to see the feature.

This recognition of the screen by the head of Atlanta's school board received the consideration of the theatre managers who informed the school board that they would postpone the picture one week to enable all the pupils to see it.

"The Son of the Wolf" to Be Released by R-C June 11

R-C Pictures announce June 11 as the release date of the Norman Dawn production, The Son of the Wolf, a screen adaption of the novel by the same name by Jack London which is interpreted by an all-star cast. It is a Canadian Northwest story abounding in action, and is expected to prove an excellent hot weather attraction. Edith Roberts and Wheeler Oakman have the leading roles.

This is the first of a series of special productions which Mr. Dawn will produce for R-C release. The cast includes Sam Allen, Askley Cooper, Thomas Jefferson, Fred Kohler, and Fred Stanton and Arthur Jasmine.

Harold B. Franklin Resigns as Managing Director of Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo

HAROLD B. FRANKLIN, managing director of Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo, and one of the most prominent exhibitors in the country, has resigned. He will leave Buffalo June 1 for a month's vacation, after which he will consider several propositions. He will remain in the industry. His leaving for Albany the middle of the week gave rise to the report that he was to discuss joining one of the big producing companies in some capacity. He is also considering an offer to become interested in a financial as well as directorial way in a mammoth new house soon to be erected in a western New York city.

No successor will be appointed to Mr. Franklin at Shea's Hippodrome for the time being. Vincent McFaul, assistant manager, will take up the work of manager with M. Shea supervising the operation of the big house. Mr. Franklin leaves his position with the good will and best wishes of the Shea Amusement Company.

During his long term as managing director of the Hippodrome, Mr. Franklin put over so many stunts that it would take a book to tell about them all. His original exploitation, advertising, presentation and house system ideas are well known in the industry. Some of his house system work was recently described in "Exhibitors Trade Review."

His coming vacation is the first he has had in eight years. He believes that he has it coming to him. Having recently acquired a big closed motor car, he will probably hit the long, long trail and forget all about picture presentation and stunts to fill up the box office—Franklin has filled many a box office with real money through his live ideas.

Madge Kennedy Returns to Screen

Will Be Starred by the Kenma Corporation, a Concern Composed of Prominent Business Men

Announcement was made a few days ago that Madge Kennedy was temporarily forsaking the stage and would soon start production as the star of a series of six new super-productions. Kenma Corporation, the concern starring Miss Kennedy, is composed largely of men who, while prominent in other lines, have not previously been identified with motion pictures. The announcement also closed the contest over the rights of filming Charles Major's celebrated romantic novel, "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall."

The industry has heard unofficially at different times first that one producer had secured these rights and then that others were bargaining for them. Kenma, the recent purchaser, now announces that the story is not for sale, and that it will be used by them for one of their early productions. Work on the first of these will commence next week at the Tilford Studio on West 44th Street, New York City.

The president of the Kenma Corporation is Harold Bolster, investment banker. Rufus Steele, the notably successful magazine and scenario writer, is vice-president. George Brokaw Compton of the law firm of Peaslee & Compton is secretary and counsel, while the directors include such well known men as Chester B. Humphrey, vice-president of the Old Colony Trust Co. of Boston; Francis L. Robbins, Jr., of the law firm of Winthrop & Stimson; E. R. Grasselli, president of the Grasselli Chemical Co., and William C. McTarnahan, vice-president of the Petroleum Heat & Power Co.

The Kenma Corporation has also secured the rights to the John Golden stage success, "Dear Me," the work of Luther Reed and Hale Hamilton. This play, in being adapted to the screen, has been extensively re-written and the title will be changed. One of the best-known directors in the industry has been engaged to stage the new Madge Kennedy specials, but his name is withheld as his contract with a big producer has not quite expired.

Rufus Steele, who writes Miss Kennedy's scenarios, will supervise production. In making the adaptation of "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall," Mr. Steele worked both from the script of the play and from the novel.

It is planned to present the first one of the new super-productions on Broadway early in September.

More Evidence Shows Opinions Differ on What Public Wants

Distinctive Productions announces the receipt of fresh exhibitor information on the question of "What the public wants" for the consideration of George Arliss, star in The Ruling Passion, a United Artists release, and other stars and producers of motion pictures. The new advices reveal a difference of opinion between two of the correspondents, Mrs. M. K. Frank, Canton, Ohio, and A. Lawrence Chase, Pawling, New York. Mrs. Frank says:

I have followed the public demand as closely as possible for my own personal benefit, and find that human nature is very much the same in small towns as in the large ones. I appreciate that there are a few exceptions, but I am speaking from my knowledge of the general public demand—that is, the every-day theatre-goer, the one who makes our business good.

Aggressively, and on the other side of the fence, Mr. Chase writes to Mr. Arliss:

Doubtless you will agree with me that country audiences are more critical than those in the larger cities. I attribute this to the fact that they have so little to divert their minds and attention as compared with folk in the city, who have every form of amusement and entertainment constantly before them.

J. M. Darymple of the Dreamland Theatre, Waverly, Ohio, is an advocate of the simple plot to win public favor, and claims the ideal story to be "a good comedy-drama with action rather than too long drawn out stationary scenes; same to have plot or theme that readily can be followed. Double plots and counter plots seem to be a hindrance to the attention of patrons who may come in after the show has gotten under way, whereas one good, plain plot can be taken up and enjoyed at any stage of the showing."

"I believe that a good comedy-drama, while it may not break any box office records," Mr. Darymple goes on to say, "will play to more people and give more real interest to the average theatre-goer than almost anything else that could be produced. Sometimes a warm spot in the hearts of the public is better than a great deal of the gold dust made from one production."

"Give the public entertainment," is the motto of H. D. Morgan, Liberty Theatre, Electra, Texas, in solving the problem. "Above everything the public wants a film that will give them entertainment," he declares. "They want that entertainment now and have little thought for the things that are educational or what they call 'deep'."

George D. Hazelton, Rialto Theatre, Missoula, Mont., says:

"I never fail to do good business with a good, clean, consistent comedy. For that reason, The Ruling Passion was the most satisfactory picture we have ever shown in this theatre."

"The Stroke of Midnight" Will Be Released July 26

July 26 is the date chosen by Metro for the release of the Swedish Biograph production, The Stroke of Midnight, recently purchased for distribution in this country.

The photoplay was written by Selma Lagerloff. Adaptation and direction are by Victor Seastrom, who enacts the character of David in the picture. The girl, Edith Larsson, is played by Astrid Holm.

The first showing was given in Sing Sing prison the evening of Sunday, May 14. W. E. Atkinson, vice-president and general manager of Metro, and Colonel J. E. Brady, scenario editor, made the trip to Ossining for the presentation.

Metro Signs Malcolm McGregor

Malcolm McGregor, a young actor whose work in Rex Ingram's production for Metro of The Prisoner of Zenda has brought him to the favorable attention of critics, has recently signed a long-term contract with Metro. He will be seen in prominent roles in several of that company's forthcoming releases.

Copeland Gives Praise to "Klean-Up" Plan for Theatres

When H. H. Buxbaum, district manager for Famous Players-Lasky, started "Kent Klean-up Kuarter," it was arranged in an effort to clean up all bookings, so that the fall business could start with a clean slate. At the same time "Bux" issued a special letter to all exhibitors, in which he called attention to the fact that "Kent Klean-up Kuarter" should also be considered a period to clean and renovate all theatres where this was necessary, so that they, too, would be ready for the fall.

This matter was brought to the attention of Dr. Royal S. Copeland, health commissioner for New York City, and the result was the following letter:

May 17, 1922.

Mr. H. H. Buxbaum, District Manager,
Famous Players-Lasky Corporation,
729 7th Avenue, City.

My dear Mr. Buxbaum:

Thank you for your letter of April 29th, giving me the details of your program for "Klean-up Kuarter." I am very glad indeed to have so influential an organization as yours co-operating with the Health Department in its work of keeping the places of amusement in New York City fresh and clean. The motion picture theatre owners of New York City always have been among the foremost supporters of the Health Department in its work for the protection of the public, but none of us is perfect, of course, and we all need these occasional reminders like yours to keep us keyed up to our utmost in efficiency.

With best wishes for the success of your "Kuarter."

Very truly yours,
(Signed) ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
Commissioner.

"Smilin' Through" Runs Extended

Associated First National Attraction Is Being Regularly Booked for Second and Third Weeks

Smilin' Through, the current Norma Talmadge-First National attraction, appears destined to be the 1922 record oreaker. In scores of houses it has set up new figures for box office receipts and attendance and reports of run extensions are being received at the offices of Associated First National, says the announcement.

The picture was the first one ever held over for a second week at the Metropolitan Theatre in Atlanta, according to the following telegram from the management:

"Despite bad weather conditions all week, Smilin' Through broke all house records. We are holding picture second week. This is first time in history of Metropolitan Theatre any production has been held second week. Will you please convey to Mr. Schenck and Miss Talmadge our sincere thanks and gratitude for having delivered a production at this time that gets such splendid returns."

At the Stillman Theatre, Cleveland, it was booked originally for one week, but the engagement was extended to two and then to three weeks.

A one week booking at the Branford Theatre, Newark, N. J., was extended to two, and then the picture was put into another Fabian theatre in that city for an additional week.

At the Kinema Theatre, Los Angeles, where the picture opened on April 29, the run was extended from the original two weeks to three weeks.

Many other theatres have reported run extensions.

San Francisco Club Women Will Review Pictures

The public should be its own censor, according to Mrs. F. M. Sponigle, president of the California Club of San Francisco, an important factor in the California Federation of Women's Clubs. Mrs. Sponigle recently visited the Lasky studio in Hollywood, where she met and became great friends with Lois Wilson and Lila Lee, and watched Cecil B. DeMille and Penrhyn Stanlaws at work upon their current Paramount productions.

"In a plan which we are going to put into effect in San Francisco, we hope to find the answer to the censorship question," she said. "A committee representing the women's clubs will view every picture at its opening, or first showing. From their findings they will make up a list of the pictures which they recommend for family patronage. This list will be circulated through the public schools, and will be available for everyone who wants the information. It shall be our policy to say nothing about the bad pictures, simply leaving them out of our list.

"The women of our committees will be representative citizens, with the interest of the family, particularly the children, at heart. Their opinion may be relied upon, and if the San Francisco public want better pictures, here is its chance to support them, and let the bad ones fall of their own weight.

"I find the people of the studios an earnest and hard-working lot, a fact which does not seem to be generally understood outside, and I believe that they would rather make good pictures than bad ones. By supporting the good ones, we must inspire them to make the very best of which they are capable."

Cosmopolitan Productions' Company Returns Home

Cosmopolitan Productions' company that had been in Banff, Canada, making The Valley of Silent Men, the James Oliver Curwood story, returned to New York this week.

In the company were Frank Borzage, director; H. P. Carver, production manager; Richard Carver, secretary; John Lynch, scenario writer; Cyril Gardner, cutter; O. O. Dull, assistant director; Chester A. Lyons, first cameraman; H. Weil, second cameraman, and the following cast: Alma Rubens, Lew Cody, Joe King, George Nash, Mario Majeroni and J. M. Johnson.

Also with the party were Mrs. F. Rubens, Alma Rubens' mother; Mrs. C. A. Lyons and Major Woodward, engineer.

Charles W. Beyer Engaged for Next Arliss Film

With the engagement of Charles W. Beyer for a prominent role, the cast of The Silent Voice, which Distinctive Productions, Inc., is making, starring George Arliss, is now complete. Ann Forrest will appear opposite the star, while Edward Earle will play the leading juvenile.

Beyer recently completed a tour of the leading theatres in the East, where he made personal appearances in connection with the showing of Ten Nights in a Bar Room, in which he plays the "heavy" lead.

Vitagraph Moves Publicity Department to Brooklyn Studio

Vitagraph has completed arrangements for the housing of its entire publicity organization in its Brooklyn studios. The action is taken as part of a plan to more closely co-ordinate the production and distribution units.

The quarters selected in Brooklyn are convenient to art, still and printing departments, and will put the staff in daily touch with the atmosphere of production. The change will not affect Vitagraph Exchange, which occupies an entire floor at 1600 Broadway.

Rothafel Declares Pathe Special Feature "Unique and Gladly Accepted Surprise for Capitol Patrons"

Announcement is made by E. A. Eschmann, Pathe General Sales Manager, that the premiere public showing of Nanook of the North will be on Broadway, at the Capitol Theatre, New York City, on June 11. Mr. Eschmann closed the Capitol booking arrangement last week for the Pathe special feature of native life, love and struggle in the Arctics. Samuel Rothafel stated frankly that the picture was unique and gladly accepted it as a surprise for Capitol patrons. He added:

"I consider Nanook of the North so out of the ordinary, so distinctive and original, and so rich in other elements entering into an unusually fine picture, that I feel no doubt of its welcome by Capitol patrons."

"It was a foregone conclusion," said Mr. Eschmann, "that this novel and wonderful human interest story of cheerful and courageous conflict with the most forbidding forces of Nature would begin its career on Broadway. We felt from the time of our own first view of Nanook of the North that no exhibitor in the world could afford to deny his patrons the privilege of seeing it. On viewing the six remarkable reels of this epic of the frozen regions, Samuel Rothafel frankly agreed with our view."

Nanook of the North is said to be the only picture feature ever photographed wholly in Arctic conditions and dealing from beginning to end with the life-drama of native Eskimo-characters—men, women and children. It was made during two winters and summers by Robert J. Flaherty, leader of five Sir William Mackenzie expeditions into the Northeast Hudson Bay regions known as the Ungava Peninsula. The only human inhabitants of this vast region are the families of a small tribe of Eskimos.

The real life hero of the picture is Nanook, leading man and mightiest hunter of this tribe, who accompanied Explorer Flaherty into the icy wildernesses as guide and faithful companion.

"Crossroads of N. Y." Wins Newspaper Praise in Metropolis

The Crossroads of New York, a Mack Sennett production released by Associated First National, was the feature at the Capitol Theatre, New York, this week. It is the first picture of feature length which Sennett had made since Molly O, and it received an enthusiastic reception.

The picture received considerable praise from the New York newspaper critics, who hailed it as a new type of photoplay, blending melodrama and comedy. Some of their reviews follow:

New York Daily News: "It will mean a rollicking hour."

New York Herald: "A photoplay that is better and faster than Molly O, and that tickles you on the spine when it isn't tickling you on the funny bone."

New York World: "It is distinctly refreshing and is chock full of funny business. Some one at the theatre yesterday said it struck him as being just as interesting as George M. Cohan's The Tavern. The photoplay manages to keep the laughing pretty steady throughout the house. It looks as if here was a picture that would cause a great deal of comment."

New York Evening Mail: "This film teaches no great moral lesson; it does not seek to impress the burning vital truths of life; it deals in no propaganda, but for simon pure entertainment it is, in the language of the hoi-polloi, decidedly 'there.' Its comedy passages, and there are many, are in the true Sennett vein, while the melodrama speeds on with a 'zip.'"

New York Evening Telegram: "In The Crossroads of New York at the Capitol Theatre this week, Mack Sennett has hit upon a novel idea—a new departure in screen entertainment which is guaranteed to tickle the palate of even the most jaded theatre-goer. It is a happy combination of thrilling melodrama and uproarious comedy, fashioned in a new way."

New York Sun: "It will arouse in many persons about all the variety of emotions, with uproarious laughter predominating."

New York Evening Journal: "The Crossroads of New York are humorous avenues that divert and satisfy the tired mind."

Colleen Moore to Star in Hodkinson Released Picture

Colleen Moore will star in the Mary Roberts Rinehart story, Affinities, to be produced by Ward Lascelle for release by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, according to an announcement issued from the Hodkinson offices this week.

Work on the production was started during the past week on the Pacific Coast under the personal direction of Mr. Lascelle. The production will be ready for release during the late summer or early fall and will constitute the first of a series of super-specials to be released regularly by Hodkinson.

"Understudy" Completed by Doris May for R-C Release

Having been given the definite title of The Understudy, the latest Doris May comedy drama has been completed at the R-C Studios in Los Angeles. The Understudy will be the fifth Doris May picture to be released by R-C Pictures Corporation, and will follow Gay and Devilfish which was issued to exhibitors on May 14th.

"Silver Wings" Wins Praise of Newspaper Critics

Silver Wings, first of the super-specials scheduled by Fox for 1922-23 to be shown on Broadway, opened at the Apollo Theatre, New York, Wednesday night, May 17. The premiere was attended by an audience composed mainly of newspaper critics, magazine editors, well-known clergymen, educators, and a large group of prominent actors and authors, whose hearty applause at the close of the showing resulted in bringing Mary Carr before the assemblage for a short address.

Following are extracts from reviews published in the New York daily press:

Morning World (Quin Martin) — "'Silver Wings' is the kind of motion picture you want to write home about. After seeing it you feel as though you ought to drop a line to mother and tell her what a no-account rascal you used to be."

Evening Mail—"It was distinctly Mary Carr's night at the Apollo Theatre last night."

Evening World (Don Allen)—"Mother love in great big portions is served in 'Silver Wings,' starring Mary Carr, which started an extended run at the Apollo Theatre last night. The story is well told, well directed, and for those who like to sob a bit should prove attractive.

Evening Telegram—"It is an eloquent film, never failing in interest." "You remember how popular she (Mrs. Carr) was in 'Over the Hill.,' Well, she is every bit as good, and perhaps even better, in 'Silver Wings.'"

Morning Telegraph — "'Silver Wings' may even duplicate the popularity of Mr. Fox's earlier tribute to mother love, 'Over the Hill.'"

Daily News (McElliott)—"The homely details of living are excellently outlined, and Mrs. Carr is without doubt the ideal film mother.

American (Grena Bennett)—"The story is as old as the hills, but age cannot wither a theme so irresistible nor a treatment so full of charms."

Efficiency Plan Is Devised by Whitman Bennett

The system of production invented by Whitman Bennett and used in the production of his two United Artists releases, The Iron Trail and Fair Lady was made public this week when it was learned that the Distinctive Productions, making the George Arliss pictures, were employing it in the filming of their next release at the Bennett Studio in Yonkers, N. Y.

"I have made no attempt to keep secret the system I devised," says Mr. Bennett, and any producer is at liberty to follow it if he so desires. I believe that it is the nearest approach to getting every dollar into the picture and the elimination of waste that has yet been devised for practical production purposes, and the first essential of the system is the engagement of a staff, competent not only to perform the work assigned to them, but fully versed in every other detail of production and with an intelligent view of the importance of speed and accuracy in every department."

"Next comes the advance preparation, of all sets, revisions of scripts, and the setting of production details, before the cast is engaged and the actual shooting commenced. Then one of the most effective parts of the system is put into operation. —This is the 'error sheet' and I have found that it works better than a time clock in increasing efficiency.—The 'error sheet' is kept close at the hand of the director and on it is noted every delay experienced during the day's work; the reason for the delay, the department responsible for it, and the amount of time lost is set down, and the matter is officially taken up with the persons at fault."

"Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood," United Artist Release, Will Present Camera Innovations

New developments in screen photography may be looked for when Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood, Douglas Fairbanks' forthcoming production, is released through United Artists' Corporation.

A series of paintings before which the story is enacted; a combination of beauty and dramatic feeling; an ingenuous expanding of the power of the camera for recording that which constitutes the highest form of gratification to the eye — this is an accurate analysis of Mr. Fairbanks' version of Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood from a photographic standpoint.

There are no precedents from which comparisons can be drawn, says the announcement, for the reason that the photography in this forthcoming feature will present camera innovations never before attempted.

A large measure of the credit for the inventive skill belongs to Arthur Edeson, chief cameraman for Mr. Fairbanks, who has displayed new methods for transferring to the film an artistic composition in background effects.

From the very beginning it was calculated that a certain amount of extra time was to be given to every "shot" in the whole production in order to make possible a careful working out of an absolutely unbroken series of perfect views — the whole to furnish a continuous "backing" for every bit of the dramatic action of the players, attired in perfect harmony as to period and environment.

Americans Going to Europe to Produce Pictures

American producers are gathering in Berlin to work out plans for increased production of pictures in Germany and for wider distribution of American-made product in Central Europe.

Ben Blumenthal, president, and Ralph A. Kohn, vice-president and treasurer of the Hamilton Theatrical Corporation, are sailing for Europe on the "Majestic" next Saturday.

They will confer with Albert A. Kaufman, who is in charge of European production for Hamilton Theatrical Corporation, and lay plans to produce the type of pictures now in demand for American distribution. Mr. Blumenthal and Mr. Kohn will remain in Germany for about three months to see these productions started.

Three production units are now making pictures in Europe for the Hamilton company and a fourth, headed by Director Joe May, will begin filming in August.

"Torchy's Nut Sunday" Is Strong on Elaborate Sets

Production reports from the C. C. Burr studios indicate that the latest Johnny Hines two-reeler, titled Torchy's Nut Sunday, will eclipse by far the number of sets used in any of the previous Torchy comedies. Coincident with the many scenes to be used in this production will be an exceedingly large number of film players in the support of Johnny Hines. Among the many sets completed is an exact replica of a sanitarium which has been reproduced in splendid detail.

Paramount Lists June Releases

Specials by Melford and Stanlaws, and a New Pola Negri, Are Included

Five productions, including starring pictures of Wallace Reid, Thomas Meighan and Pola Negri, and special productions by Penrhyn Stanlaws and George Melford, are announced for Paramount release in June by S. R. Kent, general manager of distribution.

Heading the list for release June 4 is Wallace Reid in Across the Continent. This is an automobile story by Byron Morgan, author of the previous Reid pictures, The Roaring Road, Excuse My Dust, Too Much Speed and What's Your Hurry? Philip E. Rosen directed from Mr. Morgan's scenario. Mary MacLaren plays opposite the star.

Also scheduled for the 4th is the Penrhyn Stanlaws production, Over the Border, with Betty Compson and Tom Moore. This is an adaptation by Albert Shelby LeVino of Sir Gilbert Parker's story, "She of the Triple Chevrons."

June 11 is the date set for George Melford's production, The Woman Who Walked Alone, with Dorothy Dalton. Milton Sills and Wanda Hawley are also seen in leading roles. The picture is from a story by John Colton, with scenario by Will M. Ritchey.

On June 18, the first direct contribution to the screen by George Ade is placed before the public. Our Leading Citizen is the title, and Thomas Meighan is starred under the direction of Alfred E. Green. The scenario is by George Ade and Waldemar Young, with original titles by Mr. Ade. Lois Wilson is Meighan's leading woman.

On June 25 the Hamilton Theatrical Corporation presents Pola Negri in the UFA production, The Eyes of the Mummy, with Emil Jannings. Egypt and London furnish the locales for this modern drama.

Keen Rivalry for "Grandma's Boy"

Harold Lloyd Insists Feature Belongs to Straight Picture Houses; Long Runs Are Only Considered

Inspired by the success of Harold Lloyd's Grandma's Boy, at the opening of its world's premier run in the Symphony Theatre, Los Angeles, first run exhibitors in New York and throughout the country are reported indulging in spirited bidding for bookings of this Associated Exhibitors feature, according to Arthur S. Kane, Associated's president.

A significant feature of the bids which the big exhibitors are making, according to Mr. Kane, is the fact that none gives consideration to an engagement of fewer than two weeks, at the minimum.

With the opinion of exhibitors thus expressed, it became known this week, the company has adopted as a policy in the distribution of the feature the principle of long runs. Engagements of a few nights or even a week's duration, are not being considered at this time.

Another point which has been definitely determined upon, says the announcement, is the decision to play only straight picture houses. Mr. Lloyd himself was insistent upon this. In the following letter to Mr. Kane he gives acknowledgment of the work of exhibitors and makes plain his position regarding this feature of the distribution plans:

"I am most decidedly of the opinion that Grandma's Boy, my forthcoming release, belongs in the straight-out picture theatres rather than the 'legitimate' houses. This is as true in the case of long runs as in those of brief duration; of the large centers as well as the smaller towns.

"The exhibitor is part and parcel of our industry. He devotes his time, his abilities and his capital to it, and he stands to lose as well as to gain. The owner of the 'legitimate' theatre, on the other hand, is interested in pictures only occasionally, and rarely if ever when a risk is involved.

"The exhibitor is the central link in the chain binding the star to his public. To him I owe no small debt of gratitude for the success that has come to me in such generous measure, and I should consider myself both disloyal and ungrateful were I to consent to place what I regard as my greatest and best production elsewhere than with him."

Hal Roach, the producer of the Lloyd features, supplemented the star's letter with this one over his own signature:

"Mr. Harold Lloyd's preference for the picture theatre in the showings of Grandma's Boy is mine also, most emphatically. The live, enterprising exhibitor has helped to make Mr. Lloyd and his products internationally famous, and it is to our advantage, as it is our pleasure, to serve him in every way possible.

"Whatever makes for a spirit of closer cooperation among stars, producers, distributors and exhibitors results to the benefit of each and the good of the entire industry, for, in the final analysis, we are all partners, whose interests are intertwined and who are seeking to reach a common goal.

"Aside from this, the exhibitor is a good fellow, a staunch friend and a loyal champion. Grandma's Boy for the straight picture theatres by all means."

The attitude of Mr. Lloyd and Mr. Roach was in harmony with the opinions frequently expressed by Mr. Kane himself and enthusiasm was displayed in giving official sanction to the "exhibitors first and always" policy.

Inquiries for Blaney Drama

Since the announcement only a week ago that C. B. C. would handle a picturized version of "More to Be Pitied Than Scorned," the company has been in receipt of a steady stream of inquiries as to when the picture would be ready.

Robert G. Vignola and Joseph Urban Try Out New Idea

Cosmopolitan Productions have adopted a slogan for Marion Davies' ten-reel super feature, When Knighthood Was in Flower. The production will be called the most beautiful picture ever made.

Robert G. Vignola, who is directing, and Joseph Urban, who designed the sets, are trying out a new idea. They are making all exteriors indoors, utilizing three studios—Cosmopolitan's plant at 127th Street and Second Avenue, the Jackson Studio in the Bronx, and the Famous Players studio in Long Island City.

There are many advantages in shooting the exteriors indoors with the aid of super batteries with 200,000 candlepower lamps. In the first place, the company has lost no time due to bad weather. Work is begun promptly at 9 o'clock every day and continues without interruption.

An example of the time saving that results from indoor shooting—a street scene, two blocks long, all built under cover at Famous Players Studio, was completed in two days. If done outdoors this scene might have taken two or three weeks, due to weather interruptions.

Mrs. Keating Joins Warners

Mrs. Pearl Keating, former Boston newspaper woman and producer of historical pageants for many states, has been engaged by Warner Brothers to handle special feature and fan publicity in connection with forthcoming productions.

Prior to joining the Warner organization Mrs. Keating was on the scenario staffs of Metro and Cecil De Mille on the west coast.

"John Smith" Excites Comment as Film Title

John Smith, the title of the forthcoming Selznick release, starring Eugene O'Brien, has excited some little comment in the trade. The business of selecting titles for photoplays has always proved more or less difficult.

The importance of a "good title" has always been recognized, but there have been almost as many ideas as to what constitutes a "good title" as there are executives in the motion picture industry. Some titles are "good" because they are short, some because they roll easily off the tongue, some because they influence some original train of thought, and so on, ad lib.

"John Smith is a title which just won its way onto the Selznick posters because it gradually convinced one after another that the photoplay to which it belongs simply could not properly be called anything else," says the announcement. "It was the title on the story when the script was placed in the director's hands long before the matter of a permanent title was taken up. That it stood the gaff is quite remarkable since few 'working titles' are chosen as permanent titles.

"John Smith is probably the most commonplace name which is encountered in real life. John Smith aspires to be nothing greater than a dramatic representation of commonplace life, using the adjective in its true, and not the accepted, sense of the word."

Mary Astor appears in leading support of Mr. O'Brien. Others in the supporting cast are: Vivia Ogden, William J. Ferguson, Ester Banks, Frankie Mann, George Fawcett, J. Barney Sherry, Warren Cook and Tammany Young.

Will Rogers to Star in Film for Hodkinson Release

Work on a picture called The Legend of Sleepy Hollow, based on Washington Irving's classic, starring Will Rogers, for release by Hodkinson, was started last week under the direction of Edward Venturini for The Legend of Sleepy Hollow Corporation. The interiors of the picture are being made at the Norma Talmadge studios on 48th Street, New York.

In The Legend of Sleepy Hollow, Mr. Rogers will be seen in the famous fiction character of Ichabod Crane, while Ben Hendricks, the man who played the part of Omaha Pete in the Sinclair Lewis picture, Free Air, will be seen as Brom Bones. Lois Meredith, who at the present time is playing in support of Doris Keane, in The Czarina, will be seen as Katrina. Other members of the cast are Emily Fitzroy, Charles E. Graham, Downing Clarke, Nicholas Brunham, Kate Jepson and a number of other types of established dramatic ability.

Laemmle Sees Turf Classic Filmed

King Baggot Given Unusual Facilities at Churchill Downs for Reproduction of Charles T. Dazey's Famous Melodrama

With 45,000 sport-loving Americans as atmosphere, and with America's great turf classic, the Kentucky Derby, as the star thrill, a Universal production company, headed by King Baggot, and working at Churchill Downs, Louisville, Ky., under the personal supervision of Carl Laemmle, last week completed the final shots of The Kentucky Derby. A battery of camermen planted at various places around the famous racetrack got remarkable "shots" of the great race run by Morvich, the wondercolt, and which will be used as the climax for the Baggot picture, an adaptation of Charles T. Dazey's stage melodrama, The Suburban.

Prior to the big race, Baggot and his company, including a score of actors, actresses and technical men, spent two weeks in and around Louisville, Ky. Both at Lexington and at Churchill Downs, the Universal director received hearty cooperation on the part of municipal officials, racing officials and leaders in the turf world. As a result, Universal announces that The Kentucky Derby will be a picture every horse lover will delight in, and one which every lover of sports will appreciate.

Among those who extended unusual courtesy to Universal were Col. James P. Whallen and Col. Matt Winn, manager at Churchill Downs.

The Universal production company "covered" the Kentucky Derby even more completely than the news reels. Eight moving picture machines were constantly grinding during the great event, in addition to the efforts of a number of still camera men. Mr. Laemmle supervised their work from the box of Colonel Whallen, veteran horseman, and later from the box of Ben Bloch, owner of Morvich.

King Baggot brought his company to Kentucky from Universal City, Cal., in a special car. Martin H. Bendheim, business manager of the company, preceded the company. Those who came East to play in the picture were Reginald Denny, former star of The Leather Pushers, now being featured in Universal productions; Lillian Rich, Kingsley Benedict, Gertrude Astor, Lionel Belmore, Walter McGrail, Emmet King and others.

The first part of the picture The Kentucky Derby is laid in the midst of the Blue Grass region. Scenes were taken at "Ashland," the home of Henry Clay, and at other estates in middle Kentucky. While in Lexington, the players and Baggot made personal appearances at the Strand Theatre, where The Leather Pushers and other Universal pictures were being shown.

Baggot's company now is en route back to California, where The Kentucky Derby rapidly will be whipped into shape, edited and prepared for early release as a Universal-Jewel production.

Cast of "White Shoulders" at Monterey for Scenes

The entire cast of White Shoulders, the Preferred Pictures' production in which Katherine MacDonald is starred, is at Monterey, the California resort, where some of the important scenes of the screen version of the George Kibbe Turner's Saturday Evening Post serial are being filmed under Tom Forman's direction.

The latest addition to the cast of White Shoulders is that of little Richard Headrick, the child actor.

Other players who will be seen in the support of Miss MacDonald in White Shoulders are: Bryant Washburn, Nigel Barrie, Lincoln Stedman, Charles French, James Barrows, Lillian Lawrence and Tom Forman who, in addition to directing the picture, will also enact one of the chief parts.

Franklyn E. Backer Places Von Tilzer at Head of Sales

Jack Von Tilzer has been appointed general sales manager of East Coast Productions, Inc., by Franklyn E. Backer. Mr. Von Tilzer's headquarters are in the New York offices on the sixteenth floor of the Times Building. Mr. Von Tilzer is a veteran in the film field, and has had much experience in sales. While comparatively new to the independent field, he has already made his presence felt and looks for big results with East Coast Productions.

Elaborate Exploitation Aids for "Reported Missing"

An elaborate press book and newspaper text sheet have been prepared by Selznick for the use of exhibitors in exploiting "Reported Missing," starring Owen Moore.

Besides complete listing and display of accessories and novelties for the picture, sample ads and drawings from which cuts may be made are shown on a large separate sheet. The newspaper matter has been prepared with an eye to the practical, and virtually every variety of press story is furnished.

The whole is a work of art and an unusual bit of exploitation. Exhibitors will find it to their advantage to make use of this material in acquainting the public with the merits of "Reported Missing."

Harry Carey's First for R-C Pictures Nearing Completion

Harry Carey's first picture for R-C release, Combat, as the picture is now titled, will give the new star a role which will not only require finish in characterization, but which will demand considerable rapidfire action, says an R-C announcement.

Ethel Grey Terry has been selected as the leading lady. Miss Terry has an extensive training on both stage and screen, having followed a career with Belasco. During her screen experience she played important roles for practically every leading company.

Henry B. Walthall has been assigned an important male role. Ever since his first success in The Birth of a Nation, Mr. Walthall's name has been before the public either as the star or in important roles in all-star pictures.

The picture is now nearing completion at the Los Angeles studios and a print is expected at the home office within a short time. It will probably be released at the beginning of the fall season. Val Paul is directing the picture.

Al Lichtman Corporation Will Distribute Pictures Nationally

Following many weeks in perfecting details of organization, announcement is made this week of the formation of the Al Lichtman Corporation, with offices at 576 Fifth Avenue, New York. The chief executives as well as the organizers of the new concern are Al Lichtman, Ben P. Schulberg and J. G. Bachmann.

Mr. Lichtman will head the distributing activities, while Mr. Schulberg, with offices in Los Angeles, will devote his attention to production. Mr. Bachmann, who has been the associate of Mr. Schulberg in various enterprises including the production of pictures starring Katherine MacDonald, as well as treasurer of the company making those subjects, will be the treasurer of the new corporation.

Mr. Lichtman is now organizing Al Lichtman Exchanges in the various territories. It is his intention not to open new exchanges, but to form alliances with "territorial partners," with men of integrity and high standing who now are in position to distribute pictures in their jurisdiction. It is stated the first subject will be ready for showing in August, with distribution to follow in September.

Mr. Schulberg will continue his production headquarters at the Louis B. Mayer Studios in Los Angeles. Six pictures already are slated for production, although it is the intention of the company not to limit itself to its own product.

Pathe's Series of Screen Snap Shots Hits Popular Fancy

The widely published announcements of a new series of Screen Snap Shots, dealing exclusively with popular screen favorites at home, at work and at play, produced for distribution by Pathe, are declared to have created more than the "mild" sensation in the industry and among motion picture patrons caused by many more pretentious production promises. Pathe says that the many opinions received from exhibitors and others are unanimous in favor of a reel of this sort that will be kept clear of personalities, however celebrated and interesting, that are not directly associated with the screen.

As an indication of the acknowledged wide appeal of this "fan magazine of the screen," editors of newspapers are seizing the idea as a means of brightening the pages of their Sunday supplements, the Cleveland Leader, for example, appearing with a full page of pictures showing screen stars in their personal activities on and off the screen. This sort of unceremonious representation of public amusement favorites is as attractive in print as on the picture screen. It is allied to the time-honored column of personal gossip about people in the public eye.

Inglis Here From Coast to Confer With Kane

Gus Inglis of Los Angeles, member of the firm of Willis & Inglis, general manager for King and Florence Vidor, and vice-president of Charles Ray Productions, arrived in the city early this week and is stopping at the Biltmore Hotel. Mr. Inglis attended the convention of Motion Picture Theatre Owners in Washington and came on to New York to confer with Arthur S. Kane respecting Florence Vidor's future starring arrangements for Associated Exhibitors.

Miss Vidor's second production, The Real Adventure, from the novel by Henry Kitchell Webster, has been set for release May 28. The print of the third production, now called The Shuttle Soul, is expected to arrive in New York in a few days.

It is understood that in their conferences Mr. Kane and Mr. Inglis are discussing plans for a series of yet more elaborate and expensive productions than those is which Miss Vidor has appeared so far.

Construction Started on New Associated Authors Studio

Work began last week on the construction, two miles from Orlando, Fla., of a two-unit studio building for Associated Authors Productions, Inc., of which John Howard Carr is president. As announced at the time, this company closed a contract a few weeks ago for the production of six pictures to be released by Associated Exhibitors.

It is expected that the new building will be ready for occupancy by Sept. 1, next. Meanwhile, the company will produce the first of the features in the vicinity of New York City. Production work will start within the next few weeks, and it is believed that the picture will be finished in time for delivery Aug. 1.

The studio property comprises ten acres, with a lake frontage. The building, which will be in the Spanish style of architecture, will house the administration offices as well as the operating departments.

Coming Torchy Film Is Staged in and Around Sanitarium

Torchy's Nut Sunday, which is in its final stages of completion, and starring Johnny Hines, has been the means of great elation at the Burr studio. So well pleased is the studio staff with the latest of the Torchy two-reelers that they are exerting their utmost energies toward rounding out what in their estimation is the best of the Torchy comedies to date.

The picture is said to be replete with new stunts in comedy construction, and Hines himself is particularly elated with the results of the work done to date. The plot devolves about a sanitarium in which Torchy is sent by the board of directors to apply for a position as attendant in order that he may ascertain the cause of brewing trouble which has created pandemonium among the patients. This central theme is also aided by another plot in which Torchy's rival for the hand of Miss Ellins comes to the sanitarium to undergo a reducing process. What with home-brew getting into the patients' milk and the peculiar ravings of the head doctor of the sanitarium and Torchy's expedients for keeping his rival fat, many amusing incidents are involved.

C. C. Burr, producer of Torchy comedies, is sparing no means in the production.

The art of combining work with pleasure. A radiophone "played" atmospheric music while Associated Exhibitors' "The Real Adventure," starring Florence Vidor, was being "shot." The program was known in advance and the "shooting" was arranged so that there was proper music for the different scenes. Miss Vidor and friend husband, King Vidor, are enjoying the national indoor sport of "listening in"

Al Herman Stocks Up Ark for Making Animal Comedy

Al Herman, Century Comedy director, has engaged a score of veterinaries, mule skinners and kindred animal trainers. He is directing Queenie, the horse, with a supporting cast of Camie the dog, Jack the parrot, a goat and her kid, a ram, an ostrich, a pelican, cats and kittens galore, several rabbits and a monkey.

Jimmy Adams, who was one of the featured players in the Hall Room Boys series of pictures, and who has recently played important parts in several Century Comedies, is now turning his attention to directing. He is making a picture for Century with Johnny Fox in the featured role.

Al Christie Plans to Form International Comedy Trio

Word has been received at the home office of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., from Al Christie, supervising director of Educational-Christie Comedies, who has just arrived in Europe, telling of plans to engage an English and a French girl to make up an international comedy trio for Christie Comedies.

Production will go right ahead at the Christie Studio during the six weeks Mr. Christie intends to spend in Europe. Work has already begun on The Son of a Sheik, in which Christie will take a fling at the deluge of desert pictures which have followed the success of The Sheik. This is following up the idea which brought Cold Feet, a travesty on the snow melodramas.

Century Comedy Notes

Stern brothers have signed Blanche Payson for Century Comedies on a long term contract. Blanche is the 6 foot 4 giantess who attained fame some four or five years ago as chief of police at Universal City.

Johnny Fox will take the place vacated by Harry Sweet, who is leaving the Century Comedy forces. The little chap shows such screen ability that the Stern brothers are having special scenarios written for him.

Ena Gregory, who is seen in support of Lee Moran in his Century Comedy, Too Much Family, has put in fifteen of her eighteen years on the stage. She started at the age of three in pantomime in Australia and was ballet dancer and child actress until she put down her skirt and put up her hair. She has appeared in many Century productions.

Lloyd Hamilton Again at Work

Lloyd Hamilton, who is starred in six out of thirteen of Educational's current series of Mermaid Comedies, is back in Los Angeles after his trip to New York, where he made plans with E. W. Hammons, president of Educational, to produce six special Hamilton Comedies during the coming year.

Max Asher with Century

Max Asher has returned to the screen and is now playing at the Century Studio with Director Alf Goulding in a Baby Peggy picture, Peggy Immigrates.

Goulding has finally cut and titled Little Red Riding Hood, in which Baby Peggy has the stellar role.

Gerson Company at Work on Comedies of "Plum Center"

The Paul Gerson Pictures Corporation of San Francisco is now actively at work on the next of the Plum Center Comedy series, which it is producing for R-C release. Dan Mason, veteran stage and screen actor, with a career extending over fifty years, is featured.

While it is the intention of Mr. Gerson to build up the rustic character which Mr. Mason portrays in the entire series, this will not be done to the neglect of the story interest. Each picture will be built around a well-defined comedy theme, so that greater exploitation possibilities will result.

It is the belief of the producers that the exploitation of comedies has been greatly neglected, and that this can be overcome by building each picture around an exploitable idea. At the same time, the series will be connected by the unique character created by Dan Mason, who will be the binding link of the Plum Center series.

Dan Mason will be remembered for his portrayal of The Skipper in the Toonerville Comedies.

"Orphans of the Storm" Is Praised by Theatre Manager

"Orphans of the Storm, in my opinion is the greatest picture D. W. Griffith ever made," wrote J. Lloyd Dearth, manager of Pantages Theatre, Memphis, Tenn., in a letter to United Artists home office. "To say that it pleased my audiences is putting it mildly. However, I was a little bit handicapped in exploiting the picture on account of having only two days to work in, but last week was the biggest picture week Memphis has ever known."

Live News of the West Coast

BY RENEE BEEMAN

"THE Age of Chivalry," which Douglas Fairbanks is producing, has been retitled Robin Hood. It is believed the later title will have a more universal box office appeal, and it will also serve to identify the picture beyond any chance of imitation by leeches. The picture story is based on that of Robin Hood and is said to be the most unique and pretentious ever filmed by Mr. Fairbanks. The sets in Hollywood are remarkable and the detail holding to reality is splendid. The film will be finished in about two months.

Jackie Coogan, it is declared, is responsible for bringing hundreds of new patrons of the box offices of the motion picture houses throughout the country. The starlet's fan mail has brought dozens of letters written by parents for children stating they have seldom if ever attended the theatres until Jackie's productions arrived on the scenes.

During the distribution of My Boy, the Coogan offices were daily filled with letters from parents commending Jackie for his clever work and for the clean and wholesome nature of his screen presentations.

The growth of Universal City, Carl Laemmle's experiment in 1914 and the plant of to-day, attest the rare judgment of the producer. Of the several thousand sets built by the Universal, over 500 remain standing to-day. Their value is estimated at close to $2,000,000.

The area of Universal City, Cal., is about 600 acres and comprises land of various kinds—flat, rolling, and hilly. Universal pictures very often show a greater diversity of natural back-ground than other pictures due to the fact that Universal City is in the San Fernando Valley and every section of the world is represented in the valley.

Eileen Percy and Helen Jerome Eddy will have the principal feminine roles in The Flirt, which will film at Universal City as a Universal-Jewell all-star production from the Booth Tarkington story of small town life.

Both girls are stars in their own right.

Hobart Henley will direct and is interviewing scores of players. So far Miss Percy, Miss Eddy, Lloyd Whitlock, little Buddy Messenger, Tom Kennedy, Robert Russell, George Nichols, Lydia Knott, Bert Roach and Edward Hearn are chosen in the cast.

Rags to Riches is the current Wesley Barry production for Warner Bros. The cast consists of Niles Welch, who has been borrowed from Selznick for this picture, Ruth Rennick, Russell Simpson, Ninna Ferry Redman as the mother, Wallace Wordsley is directing this Harry Rapp production for Warner Bros.

Joseph Girard has been engaged as the "heavy" of the Universal historical chapter play, Perils of the Yukon, in which William Desmond is starring. Laura La Plante is the leading woman. Perry Vekroff is directing from George Morgan's story. The title has been changed since the beginning of the production from The Great Conspiracy to The Perils of the Yukon. The story will animate the dramatic history of the purchase of Alaska from the Russian government by the United States.

Frank Kingsley, juvenile leading man, who played with such success in One Wild Week and other recent pictures, has been engaged to support Marie Prevost in her current picture at Universal City, They're Off!

Harry Pollard, director of The Leather Pushers, starring Reginald Denny, has begun work on his second feature starring Hoot Gibson at Universal City. The story, "The Cherub of the Seven Bars," is by Ralph Cummins, prepared for the screen by George Hively. The preceding Gibson-Pollard effort was titled Trimmed and Burning Hapsburg Liebe's Ozark mountain story, finished on the day of Gibson's wedding to Helen Johnson, the Orpheum actress.

Tony Gaudio, who photographed the Norma Talmadge production, The Duchess de Langeaise, has been assigned by Joseph M. Schenck as the cinematographer for the forthcoming production at United Studios of East Is West, in which Constance Talmadge will be starred.

The latest in protective screen organizations is the film screen stars club, started by Helen Ferguson. Mary Pickford has been nominated president and the membership is to be by invitation only. The object of the club is to protect the good names of the picture actresses. A meeting was held at the home of Miss Ferguson last week for the purpose of organizing and naming the club.

One of the desires of the club will be to investigate reports of girls not being treated right at the studios. Miss Ferguson announced, "We will not let the club interfere with business affairs of the girls, however, as in the matter of salaries, for we consider that an individual matter."

The club will consist of the younger set among the feminine picture players. The charter members of the club are Lois Wilson, Mary Pickford, Clara Horton, Vola Vale, Maryon Aye, Virginia Valli, Mildred Davis, Betty Francisco, Patsy Ruth Miller and Bessie Love.

Sid Grauman, Los Angeles' noted showman, will present some 12 year old Paramount re-issues at the Grauman Million Dollar Theatre next week.

Jack Holt, Bebe Daniels, Mary Pickford, King Baggot, and Shannon Day are among some of the stars that will be presented.

Holt and Miss Daniels will be seen as the co-stars of North of the Rio Grande, and Mary Pickford and King Baggot will appear in Going Straight.

Mr. Grauman is anxious to give the Los Angeles public the opportunity to compare the advancement of the two celebrities in the past 12 years and to compare modern methods with those in vogue at the present.

The current Harold Lloyd comedy for Pathe is as yet untitled. Over two reels have been filmed, but still a title is lacking. The scenes are played in a millionaire's home and are closely interwoven with nurses and a very pretty invalid in the person of Mildred Davis. The comedian is endeavoring to make this picture so much better than his former ones that to watch his work it would never be guessed that Harold Lloyd was making a comedy.

Mr. Lloyd is supported in the present cast by Mildred Davis, Eric Mayne, John T. Prince, Norman Hammond and others.

"Paul" Parrott has finished his street car comedy and will shortly begin on a motor cop story which will be shot in the main thoroughfares of Los Angeles and the near vicinity. Jim Davis will direct the next Parrott picture with Jobyna Ralston and Eddie Baker will support the comedian.

"Sunshine Sammy" will buy out a whole town in the forthcoming His Rascals kid comedy now being produced by Hal E. Roach. About 100 small children under 6 years will appear in the current comedy which Bob McGovern is directing.

Colleen Moore will play the leading feminine role in Broken Chains for Goldwyn release. The role is that of a young rancher's wife chained in her house by a brutal husband, which will give Miss Moore an opportunity to show her dramatic ability which has made her one of the most popular of the younger players. Allen Holubar will direct the picture at the Goldwyn studios and production will start shortly.

Mahlon Hamilton and Wallace MacDonald will be seen in principal supporting roles in Under Oath with Elaine Hammerstein, which George Archainbaud is directing for Selznick.

Toilers of the Sea, the next Rex Ingram production, will have an Eastern background. When Mr. Ingram finishes The Black Orchid, he will leave for the East to make arrangements for filming the Victor Hugo story of the Maine coast. Alice Terry, Edward Connelly and Ramon Samoniegos have been chosen by Mr. Ingram as a part of the cast and they will go East with him in June, when he expects to begin operations for his next picture under the new Metro contract.

Buster Keaton has completed filming My Wife's Relations, a Joseph M. Schenck production for release through Associated First National.

The picture was directed by Eddie Cline and the cast is made up of Joe Roberts, Tom Wilson, Monte Collins, Kate Price and Harry Madison.

Katherine MacDonald and her supporting company, including Bryant Washburn, Mitchell Lewis, June Elvidge and others have finished the production of The Woman Conquers, for First National under the direction of Tom Forman.

Hal E. Roach has added Herman C. Raymaker to the directorial forces at his Culver City plant. Mr. Raymaker is handling the megaphone for "Snub" Pollard, who is at work on his second two reeler.

The complete cast for Someone to Love, the most recent Thomas H. Ince feature to enter production, has been announced. The cast includes Madge Bellamy, Cullen Landis, Noah Beery, Vola Vale, Harry Rattenburry, Carrie Clark Ward, Bert Sprotte, Lincoln Stedman and Harry Steers.

The company is now on location near Sante Cruz, in northern California, under direction of John Griffith Wray, who directed Hail the Woman.

Will Issue Two Sherlocks a Month

Educational Announces That June Will Mark the Release of Twelve Adaptations from the Works of Conan Doyle

The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes, the series of twelve two-reel pictures made from the famous stories by Sir A. Conan Doyle, which Educational announced some time ago were being prepared for distribution, have been scheduled for release by Educational two each month, beginning early in June.

The first two releases of the series will be The Devil's Foot and The Dying Detective. The former is a poison mystery story. Holmes is at the seashore for a rest when he finds two brothers and a sister sitting upright about a table in their home, dead. The next morning their brother, from whom they have been separated and who lived at the rector's home, is found dead under the same conditions. The solving of this mystery by the famous detective makes two reels of keenest interest and suspense, as it made one of Conan Doyle's best short stories.

Eille Norwood, famous English actor who is a genius at make-up and disguise, plays the part of Sherlock Holmes in these pictures. Another well-known English character actor, Hubert Willis, is the detective's bosom friend, Dr. Watson. The pictures were directed by Maurice Elvey, and were made in England, in the locations about which Conan Doyle wrote.

So keen is the interest in these short subjects that the Cameo Theatre in New York booked the first of the group, The Devil's Foot, for a pre-release showing before Educational had even had time to prepare accessories on the pictures. It went into the Cameo Sunday, May 21.

"We are beginning to release these remarkable short subjects as the summer season approaches, while many other companies generally hold up their strongest subjects until fall," said E. W. Hammons, president of Educational, "because Conan Doyle's visit to the United States has brought about an unusual amount of interest in this great man and in all his writings at this time, and because we believe the exhibitors of the country ought to have strong pictures to show at a time when warmer weather begins to make people want to stay out of doors. We think these subjects are among the strongest box office attractions that have been offered to exhibitors in the last two or three years.

"Exhibitors who have been served by Educational in the past knew when Educational announced this series of pictures that they could rely on us to provide them. They know that Educational does not make definite announcements unless and until it has the material and the legal right to back up its promises. Educational has the negatives on this series of pictures, all the working prints and all material necessary for the fullest exploitation. All prints delivered to exhibitors will be new ones.

"Educational has all proper contracts with the duly accredited agents of the producer for all rights to these pictures, and Educational will prosecute to the fullest extent of the law any person or company 'duping' any of its pictures or otherwise violating its rights."

Sir A. Conan Doyle's visit to the United States, with the vast publicity about it in the newspapers and magazines of the country, has brought interest in this literary genius and his works to the highest point it has ever reached. His most popular writings still remain the Sherlock Holmes stories, and with interest in them thus rekindled, theatres can easily find a limitless number of exploitation schemes to make these pictures work for the box office.

Eille Norwood

Educational is preparing a large number of exploitation helps. At a luncheon given a few days ago by Educational, at which editors and critics of the national trade publications were present, these men made valuable suggestions as to methods of exploiting these short subjects. Many of these suggestions are being incorporated in Educational's big exploitation plans. These many exhibitor helps will be announced soon by Educational in its advertising.

Among the first aids to exhibitors will be advertising to about 24,000,000 readers through such national magazines as The Saturday Evening Post and The Ladies' Home Journal.

Sport Review Will Feature Slow Motion in Coming Numbers

One of the most attractive features of the Sport Review releases, issued every other week by Goldwyn, is the variety of slow motion photography presented. Jack Eaton, producer of this series of short subjects for Weiss Brothers' Artclass Pictures Corporation, has secured several shots involving slow motion camera work which is said to be unusual in many respects.

Among the various athletic pastimes shown in this manner may be mentioned high jumping, swimming, diving, wrestling, golfing, boxing, etc. In each instance champions of these different branches of sport are first shown through the means of regular motion picture photography, followed by interesting analyses of their form and methods through the use of slow motion.

Up to date sixteen single reel Sport Reviews have been issued by Goldwyn, and it is said the pictures are rapidly springing into favor with first run exhibitors and the public through their cleanliness, outdoor atmosphere and general novelty. Mr. Eaton promises an interesting release on the sports of hunting and fishing within the next few weeks, as he has just returned from a special trip made for the purpose of securing scenes in Maine, upper New York State and Indiana.

Stirring Northwest Role for Denny

Athletic Young "Leather Pusher" in "Never Let Go," Universal Two-Part Subject, Again Proves He Belongs

Affording a contrast with his work in The Leather Pushers Reginald Denny comes back to the screen in Never Let Go, a two-part Universal subject in which the athletic youngster has the role of a Northwest mounted man. It is a bruising and a speedy characterization, in which the redcoat not only plays constable but also detective. And in the latter twist there is a bit of a surprise. The story is George H. Plympton's, and the scenario Harvey Gates's. Nat Ross directed.

It is the writer's opinion no manager looking for two-reel material should miss a screening of this subject. Denny demonstrates that he is not limited to the role of the gentleman boxer or to those of the gentleman and the boxer. In a military role or in a role where knowledge of military discipline is called for he supplies a snap that is obtainable only at first hand. When saluting, undergoing examination by a superior, or walking away he is the ideal soldier. It is an accomplishment the studio cannot confer, a bit that stands out.

The story is of a lone trooper at an isolated post, a daughter of the storekeeper with whom the trooper is in love, a storekeeper and a bunch of thieves whose depredations have defied detection. Also there is a girl of the dance hall infatuated with the constable. As the trooper encourages this friendship his sweetheart is dismayed and her affection cools. When a burglary takes place and it is revealed the trooper was visiting the dancehall girl the inspector quickly disgraces the constable and removes him from the force. In the role of a bum the constable hangs around the settlement, but when the next job is executed the inspector is warned, and is on the ground to witness the discomfiture of the thieves and with high commendation formally restores the uniform of which he apparently had deprived his subordinate.

Never Let Go is a thrilling two-reeler, well conceived and well executed. Mr. Denny is supported by Molly Malone as the daughter, and finely she plays her part; by George Williams, the storekeeper, and Jack Walters as the leader of the fur stealers. G. B.

Eille Norwood a Striking Sherlock

In First Two Episodes of Series Shown by Educational Portrayal of Detective Displays Deep Thought and Skill

Educational Pictures last week showed two episodes of its Sherlock Holmes Series, adapted from the stories of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. The chapters, which were The Devil's Foot and The Dying Detective, like their companions, were in two reels. As all of the episodes will contain so far as possible the same cast, it is a fair assumption that the quality of the whole may oe judged by that of the two numbers screened for the trade press; and it is a fair statement to say that it is exceptional.

In the first place, the leading character, the player who is seen in the title role, is a man of real ability and of screen personality. Eille Norwood fits the part of Holmes right down to the ground. One cannot witness his work in the two episodes under review without feeling that he has given deep and intelligent thought to the interpretation of the character of the detective. Mr. Norwood is not well known to screen followers in the United States, but it is certain that he will be well and favorably known by the time the release of the series is well under way.

To Maurice Elvey has been intrusted the direction of the Holmes pictures. Mr. Elvey has done nothing better. His players show a fine regard for restraint, and at no time do they yield to the temptation to drop into the melodramatic. In both episodes it is always stern drama we see upon the screen.

We advise exhibitors not to miss a screening of the Sherlock Holmes series—and in case they decide to show them to exploit the leading player; for it is our belief Mr. Norwood will make a place for himself among American picturegoers.

Four Urban Popular Classics Are Playing Broadway Houses

Four Urban popular classics are playing in Broadway theatres this week. At the Strand is another of the "Great American Authors" series, the subject being James Fenimore Cooper. At the Rivoli is Ancient Rome in Africa, a scenic that gives glimpses of the ruined cities of Timgad, El Djem and Carthage.

At the Criterion is Camping Adventures, being the experiences of a youthful rover in Oregon.

The other Urban Popular Classic is playing at the Capitol and is entitled The Silvery Salmon, depicting the hatching and catching of the gamest of fish in the northwest of America.

"Go-Get-'Em Hutch Causes Manager to Recant on Serials

When a leading picture exhibitor announces from his own stage where Go-Get-'Em Hutch is being presented, that this chapter-play caused him to reverse his decision not to use any serial, Pathe considers the event of wide interest—in the nature of the "flying straw that shows the direction of the wind." The following letter on the subject from Samuel Perlin, manager of the Strand and Clearmont Theatres, Oakland, Cal., is quoted:

"I want to thank you for the opportunity of screening your serial, Go-Get-'Em Hutch. I had for some time past—in fact, since I took over this house—made up my mind that I would not run a serial; have always been opposed to serials, and went so far as to make a statement from the stage of my theatre to my patrons to that effect. However, after seeing Go-Get-'Em Hutch, I have a complete reversal of opinion, and was glad to book this picture for both my Strand and Clearmont Theatres, introducing it to my public as a novelty.

"I personally think that Go-Get-'Em Hutch is one of the cleanest, most entertaining and exciting adventure pictures I have ever seen, and feel that the same will be a treat to my patrons."

Pathe Adds Twelve Rolins

Pathe announces the addition of twelve Rolin comedies to its short subject schedule, for release one each week beginning June 11. This is in response to many exhibitor inquiries for still more bright and snappy laughmakers, which make most acceptable entertainment at any time and particularly useful to help fatten receipts during the "dog days."

The Rolin round dozen examples are said to be interestingly varied in subject and treatment and to supplement very creditably the short comedy output of the Hal Roach Studios distributed by Pathe.

REVIEWS OF CURRENT SHORT SUBJECTS

HIS PREHISTORIC BLUNDER—Universal two-reel comedy.—Roy Atwell in the guise of a henpecked husband is the star of this farce devised by Glenn Lambert and directed by Craig Hutchinson. Roy is one of a number of male neighbors who suffer from his complaint. When advised by one of these that he can get his wife to do his bidding by throwing a fit he tries it out and with fair success. So Roy gets a trip to the fishing grounds, by the banks of a creek, where he induces his wife to don the simplified tiger skin garb of the caveman period. Ethel Ritchie has been selected for the role of the wife with a due regard for the requirements of this particular characterization. There will be no complaint that she does not fit her role. Also there probably will be no complaint that the subject does not make good as a comedy.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS—Released by Pathe.—Pathe's first issue of this popular number will go to exhibitors the week of June 4. Among the features is a snapshot of the Lasky Studio Orchestra, performing during the noon hour, with close-ups of Wallace Reid, Theodore Roberts, Cecil De Mille, Gus Edwards (at the piano), Lila Lee, Betty Compson, Thomas Meighan and Tom Forman. Others shown in succeeding subjects are Guy Bates Post, Charles Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks, Gloria Swanson, the Talmadges, and Herbert Rawlinson.

THE LITTLE RASCAL—Two-part Century comedy released by Universal.—Baby Peggy is the featured player in this story of mischief and near slapstick—perhaps just a bit too much of mischief to please those parents who already have their hands full in keeping their offspring out of trouble. There is no denying the charm and naturalness, the winsomeness and cuteness, of this little player, even when she is by all the rules of infantile discipline storing up bad quarters of an hour.

PATHE REVIEW 158—Excellent photography marks the opening section, that of "White Days," scenes of a child and a dog in the snow. There is an intimate glimpse of the life of men and women in the far north in "Summertime in Greenland." "At Home with the Seals" is an interesting pictorial description of a thousand of these fearless creatures in the Southern California surf. In "The Glories of Oporto" we get many glimpses of life in Portugal's second largest city.

KIDDER & KO.—Pathe Playlet.—Bryant Washburn is featured in this three-reel re-edited subject. It is a comedy-drama showing Washburn in the role of a ne'er-do-well son of a hitherto indulgent father, but who decides it is time the young man went on his own. The son falls in love with the daughter of the tin plate king, and makes good. The picture is up to the average of its predecessors, and that is a pretty good average.

ROBINSON CRUSOE—Universal Serial, Chapter 9, The Jaguar Trap.—There is a goodly amount of action in this episode, which tells of the attempt of the mutineers to capture and kill Crusoe. Through the release of the jaguar from the trap just as Crusoe, tied to a gate, is about to be shot, the indications are the attempt will fail. There are thrills in the chapter.

PUNCH THE CLOCK—Hal Roach Comedy, released by Pathe.—"Snub" Pollard adopts new tactics to save his job, going so far as to camp all night on the factory steps, only to discover the shop is closed for the day. Marie Mosquini, as the wife of a giant-like and jealous husband, is the innocent cause of much trouble for "Snub," who always is doing the wrong thing. O. K.

STARLAND REVUE NO. 2—This number opens up with a trip through the Earl Carrol Theatre, one of New York's newest, and shows some of the innovations and devices used in a modern theatre. It is followed by "camera interviews" with several stage stars of Broadway successes, giving peeps into their home life and everyday surroundings. It is interesting.

TRAVELAUGHS NO. 3—Such Is Life in Monte Carlo is a typical Hy Mayer scenic that is, if anything, a little bit better than its predecessors. It contains splendid views of life in Monte Carlo that bring to the front some of the comedy in real everyday life. There are also several surprise elements in this one that will make it popular.

NOTHING BUT TROUBLE—Harold Lloyd reissue released by Pathe.—There is a reminiscence of the almost forgotten bathing girls in this single reel, in which Lloyd is supported by "Snub" Pollard and Bebe Daniels. Besides the incidents at the beach there is a series of happenings in a restaurant in which Lloyd wins a job as waiter. Good farce.

THE DOG AND THE WOLVES—Aesop's Film Fables released by Pathe.—Cartoonist Paul Terry continues his fast gait in the line of funmaking. In the present number he makes amusing use of a modern children's toy in exemplifying an ancient adage.

UNDER THE CAULDRON—Episode 9 of Go-Get-'Em Hutch, Pathe serial release.—A good number, with several exciting incidents.

Warners Move Into Larger Quarters

Leave 1,000 Foot Space on Fourth Floor for 12,000 Feet on Ninth—Harry Warner Discusses Business Fundamentals

Faith in the continued stability of the independent market is displayed by the firm of Warner Brothers in its latest "move." That "move," too, is tangible, physical. It is from the fourth floor at 1600 Broadway, where the offices occupied about 1000 feet, to the ninth floor, where there will be available for present and future use twelve times that amount of room. The space is in two sections, equally divided by the center hall which runs south from the elevators.

The Seventh Avenue side already is in full working order. At the corner of the avenue and Forty-eighth Street, with a sweeping view down the avenue and overlooking the busy theatrical district, is the office of Harry M. Warner. Ranging away to the north and west are rows of offices for the use of Warner executives. Also there is a spacious projection room, equipped with two new machines. The Broadway side of the floor at present is in the hands of the decorators, and when ready will be utilized as the emergencies of the business require.

The expansion of the home office of the Warners marks another milepost in the business career of these men who for eighteen years have fought their way along a tough road. They have had their disappointments, bitter ones some of them, but they have never lost their faith in themselves nor in the business they had selected for a lifework. Every factor they acquired in the way of experience only served to quicken and revitalize their determination to pursue the course they had mapped out years ago—to proceed slowly and surely—and squarely—and they would be bound to win in the end.

An associate of Harry and Abe Warner told the writer of an incident following the final setting in order of the new offices. The two brothers named met in the room of Harry, looked around them, over the big floor and down the avenue. They shook hands, but they didn't smile—not at first. There was a mutual if momentary recognition of the significance of what the new offices meant to them. But if they were reminders of the past they also spelled opportunity for the future.

The writer had dropped in at the ninth floor of the Mecca Building to look over the place. He was seated in the office of Harry Warner.

"A man situated in a new office like this and looking back over eighteen years ought to have something in his mind if not on it that he can say to the readers of the TRADE REVIEW," we remarked to Mr. Warner. "Just what stands out above everything else?"

"Nothing but what has been said many times before," replied Mr. Warner. "Something that may sound trite, too—but it is always good. That is, that honesty is the best policy. I believe that is one of the most important things for a man in the motion picture business to bear in mind. This business has got down to a basis where a man's word is more than his signature, and that is just the same as in any other line of endeavor. Those who work along those principles are bound to be the survivors.

"In addition to just working for the dollar, which we all love, you must have the best of the industry at heart and look out for its welfare if you want to be one of those who remain factors in it.

"The greatest compliment paid to the firm of Warner Brothers was when a distributing company offered us a substantial deposit upon the signing of a contract for our next year's product, and that company was willing to leave it to us to make pictures that we thought were good. It takes a great deal of heart interest to turn down a proposition such as was submitted to us, but we felt it the wise if not the easy thing to do.

"We had an experience this week where a certain party wanted to buy our product for a certain territory. We refused to do business with him on the ground that he had allowed his name to be dragged down in a failure in the motion picture business when he could well have afforded to pay the debts of that concern, and no one need to have lost a dollar.

"We feel that these big men who come into the motion picture business knowing nothing about it and take their trusting friends in with them should be men enough to pay their obligations when they discover they are in a business they know nothing about—and the picture business as a whole suffers from things of this kind.

"A man who does not play on the level with himself will not last. A man who schemes to beat others is only beating himself. Be honest with the public, with your friends—and with yourself. If you are honest with yourself you will be honest with others.

"The firm of Warner Brothers has not a stock certificate to sell. Instead of selling stock certificates it devotes its time to making and selling pictures. It has missed many chances in the past to further promotions, but it did so with its eyes open.

"Naturally it was a matter for deep gratification that we received so flattering an offer from a great distributing company, but while we felt that it established the recognition for which we had been fighting it was because we wanted to be independent that we declined and also because we are firmly convinced that we can right here build a real organization."

Guinn Williams' "The Trail of Hate" Is Wild and Woolly

"Big Boy" Guinn Williams' second picture for Di Lorenzo release, The Trail of Hate, is, like its predecessor, a "western" subject. But unlike that predecessor it is more so—and perhaps for the general run of motion picture houses a trifle too much so. It is woolly as well as wild, "if you get what we mean." In creating the action large dependence has been placed on fisticuffs and gunplay, on picturing the west and some of its residents at its worst rather than selecting an average community and building around that. The story has its exciting moments.

Young Williams is revealed as a hard-hitting, fast riding and, as rare occasion demands, straight shooting ranchman. He lives in a community infested by rustlers, who back up their depredations by a willingness to kill and are backed up by a complaisant, even crooked sheriff. It is not an impossible situation, nor even an improbable one, but undoubtedly, as intimated, an unusual one.

"Silent" Kerry, the character portrayed by Williams, is a chivalrous young man who gets into a lively fight at the opening of the story when he insists upon acting as escort for a young woman who is coming west to visit her father. Two drunks assigned by the father of the girl to meet her are properly beaten up. The sheriff, sent to arrest Kerry, is disarmed and sent back to Beeker, the leader of the rustlers, bound to his horse. Beeker abducts the daughter, along with the sister of Kerry, and the ranchman overtakes the rustler and in a fight the latter is thrown over a cliff and killed.

Molly Malone as daughter and Audree Tourneur as the sister of Kerry make a charming pair. Mauine Chadwick as Carmencita, of the dance hall, also does creditable work. John Anthony Miles is responsible for the story, which was directed by W. Hughes Curran and photographed by Charles Stumar. The picture will be distributed by Di Lorenzo. G. B.

Holland-Bound Americans Hold Reception on Steamer

The departure of Evelyn Greeley and Carlyle Blackwell and Director Oscar Apfel for Holland, May 20, brought out many friends and admirers and a big reception was held aboard the liner Majestic.

The party is in charge of Miss Elsie Cohen, representative of the Hollandia Film Company, for whom the Americans will produce. After a week in London the company will proceed to Haarlem to start work immediately. Producers' Security Corporation will handle the American distribution of the Hollandia product.

Chapin Engaged by Rapf to Assist on "Rags to Riches"

James Chapin, one of the youngest and most promising assistant directors in the industry, has been engaged by Harry Rapf to assist Wallace Worsley in directing Rags to Riches, featuring Wesley Barry, which is being produced at the Warner west coast studios.

Mr. Chapin, prior to joining Mr. Rapf, assisted Hugo Ballin in the production of Other Women's Clothes, and also aided in bringing to light three recent Warner pictures.

Ekeburg Takes Burr Review

Affiliated Distributors has announced through its short subject manager, Raymond S. Harris. that the New England territory on Burr's Novel Review has been acquired by John E. Ekeberg, president of Screen Art Pictures Co., Inc., 42 Melrose Street, Boston.

Hallroom Producers Gather Consensus

Invite Ten Exhibitors to See First of New Series as Part of a Regular Program and to Express Their Views

Producers of the Hallroom Boys Comedies put one of their releases through a new test this week.

The first of the comedies on the new series was received at the New York offices. At the same time came a wire from Producer Harry Cohn to Jack Cohn suggesting that a special screening be given for New York exhibitors who had run the previous series, so that their viewpoint and criticism might be secured.

Accordingly invitations were extended to ten exhibitors and an entire program of pictures was run through for them, with the new Hallroom Boys subject as the comedy. Each spectator was asked to answer four questions—whether it was, in his opinion, a good comedy; was it what the public wanted; how did it compare with previous Hallroom Boys comedies; and how it compared with the majority of other two-reel comedies. Remarks and reasons were requested with each answer.

The answers were unanimous in declaring it a good comedy. Two said it was as good as the best of the Hallroom Boys Comedies they had run, and the remaining eight that it was much better than any they had seen. In comparing it with other two-reel comedies six said it was the best two-reeler they had seen in many months and four said it was on a par with the most recent comedies featuring big comic stars.

Sacred Films to Produce Fifteen More One-Reelers

Sacred Films, Incorporated, at Burbank, Cal., producers of the motion picture version of the Bible, are ready to put into production immediately fifteen additional single-reel Bible subjects. The first year's schedule of films now being released on the state rights market calls for twelve single-reels, all of which have been completed, and are awaiting release dates.

The newer episodes take in the Egyptian period covered in the chapters of Genesis, and Dr. Edgar James Banks, Biblical authority and Oriental archaeologist, has completed the scripts for these episodes. The studio draughtsmen are going ahead on the plans for the big sets.

The closing of negotiations for the rights to Sacred Films in China completes the world-wide distribution of these Bible films. Hy Winik, of the Western Import Company of New York, and Pearl Films, Ltd., of London, is releasing the first eight episodes at once in Great Britain. Mr. Winik reports heavy bookings.

Western Pictures Reports Many Sales on Two Productions

Irving M. Lesser of Western Pictures Exploitation Co. reports the following sales on The Man from Hell's River and The Sagebrush Trail, regarding which Mr. Lesser comments that as the two subjects have only been before buyers for five weeks it does not indicate that "the State Rights market is dead":

Greater New York and New York State—First National Exhibitors' Exchange.

New Jersey—First National of New Jersey.

New England—Eastern Film Corporation.

Ohio, Western Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Michigan—Standard Film Service.

Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas—Specialty Film Co.

Wisconsin—Mid-West Distributing Corporation.

Iowa and Nebraska—Fontenelle Feature Film Co.

Kansas and Western Missouri—A. H. Blank Enterprises.

Utah, Wyoming, Colorado and New Mexico—Liberty Theatres Corporation.

Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana—De Luxe Feature Film Co.

California, Nevada, Arizona and Hawaiian Islands—All Star Feature Distributors.

Indiana—A. H. Lieber Co.

Steiner to Rejoin Neal Hart

William Steiner will leave shortly to rejoin Neal Hart, who is finishing the last two of the first series of eight pictures. Mr. Steiner will formulate plans for a second series of eight.

Report Four Sales on Eddie Polo Serial at Home and Abroad

Territorial sales were closed this week on two more important territories for the serial Cap'n Kidd, which Eddie Polo is making. Fontenelle Feature Films of Omaha took over rights to Iowa and Nebraska. This sale was made in record time.

Fine Art Pictures Corporation of St. Louis will release the serial in Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois. With Western Missouri being handled by Richards & Flynn of Kansas City, and Northern Illinois by Celebrated Players of Chicago, these states are entirely covered. Fine Art Pictures announces it is completing an extensive exploitation campaign to accompany the release in its territory.

Two important foreign sales also were made this week. One unusual sale for a serial of this type was that made for the Far East to J. Pearson, whose offices are in London.

Spain and Portugal have been sold solid also, these countries to be handled through the Sociedad Anonima de Comercio, of Barcelona. The sale was made through Trieste & Co. of New York.

Chapters 5 and 6 of Polo Serial with Paper Ready to Go

Final editing and titling was completed this week on two more episodes, Chapters 5 and 6, on the serial Cap'n Kidd, in which Eddie Polo is starring.

These episodes, the Star Serial Corporation announces, are ready for release.

Number 5 has been titled Missing Plans, and in this chapter the search for the missing parchment which contains the secret of the buried treasure continues. Trapped is the title of Chapter 6, in which the chase continues with both Polo and the girl finally trapped in two secret passages of the bandits.

"Paper" and advertising accessories on these two episodes have also been completed and are ready for exchanges and exhibitors. The twenty-four sheet has been especially commended, in that it is a successful example of catching on paper something of the thrills and excitement to be found in a serial—a real pirate ship full of action being shown.

Second National Is Now Booking Third of Season's Output

Four of the twelve Second National Pictures Corporation photoplays announced for release in the current season now are being booked in all parts of the country. These are:

The Night Riders, a picturization of the popular Northwestern novel by Ridgewell Cullum, with Maudie Dunham, Albert Ray and Andre Beaulieu; Her Story, by Dion Titheradge, featuring Madge Titheradge, star of The Butterfly on the Wheel, a speaking stage drama which enjoyed a long run on Broadway, New York; Broken Shadows, an Irish romance based on the famous novel "Nance," by Charles Garvice, with Isobel, Mary Forbes, James Lindsay and Ivan Sampson; David and Jonathan, an adaptation of the popular novel of that name by E. Temple Thurston, with Madge Titheradge.

Reports to the New York offices of Second National indicate widespread and growing popularity for these pictures.

Belasco Productions to Make "Baldy of Nome"

Edward Belasco, president of Belasco Productions, announces he has signed a contract to produce as a motion picture Mrs. Esther Birdsall Darling's book, "Baldy of Nome." "Scotty" Allan, the well known racing driver, is leaving for Nome on the first boat to collect his original racing equipment, harness, dogs and some of the old time drivers who will be used in this picture. Many of the scenes will be taken in San Francisco and the snow scenes will be photographed in the California mountains.

End Litigation on "After Six Days"

Weiss Brothers Announce Amicable Adjustment of Legal Difficulties with Luporini Brothers Over Biblical Film

Louis Weiss, of Weiss Brothers' Artclass Pictures Corporation, issued a statement this week setting at rest rumors concerning the production After Six Days, the feature version of the Old Testament, and incidentally brought out the fact that his organization has acquired an important new production:

"On behalf of Weiss Brothers, I wish to make it clear that all legal difficulties involving the production After Six Days have been adjusted and settled out of court satisfactorily to all parties concerned," says Mr. Weiss. "I believe in justice to the importance of the subject, and to all concerned, all rumors should be set at rest as to the fate of this picture. After Six Days is controlled and will be handled exclusively by Weiss Brothers' Artclass Pictures Corporation.

"In passing I wish to express the highest personal regard for Luporini Brothers, American agents of the foreign interests from whom the production was acquired by Artclass. Their actions and demeanor throughout the entire course of the litigation are to be commended highly, and at the present moment the most cordial relations exist between Luporini Brothers and Weiss Brothers. I consider this film one of the most important ever brought to this country, and it is our intention to accord it an exploitation campaign and presentation in keeping with its general magnitude and public appeal.

"Mario Luporini has sailed for Rome, for the purpose of finishing up the business details in connection with the settlement. Ferdinand Luporini will remain in New York to act as American representative in connection with the American premiere. Weiss Brothers were represented by Harry G. Kosch, while the interests of Luporini Brothers have been handled by Thomas McMahon.

"Incidentally I would like to make known the fact that we have acquired this week from Decla-Bioscop of Berlin a feature production which I feel sure will create a furore when it is shown in this country. The subject matter dealt with and the entire production is of such unusual entertainment value that I hesitate to express my opinion concerning its merits before the trade in general has an opportunity of seeing it."

North and Weber Buy American Rights to "Curse of Drink"

It was learned this week that the special, The Curse of Drink, produced by the Export and Import Film Company, was sold to L. Lawrence Weber and Bobby North of 1600 Broadway, for American distribution. Export-Import will retain the foreign rights to the picture.

The feature is a romantic melodrama with the biggest kick coming at the finish, when the hero and heroine give chase to a runaway train speeding headlong into a flooded roadbed. A full half reel is devoted to this scene alone. The suspense aroused as the pursuing train creeps up to the fugitive engine is said to be unusual.

The picture does not, however, depend on melodrama for its excellence and interest. It has a story that combines the picturesqueness and sentiment of the "folks back home," the comedy of the rural regions, and the romance of wealth and poverty. As far as the producers know, no picture of its all-embracing scope has made its way to the independent market as yet.

Players of the first rank have been assembled, among them Edmund Breese, George Fawcett, Marguerite Clayton and little Miriam Battista.

Announcement of sales of territory will soon be made.

"Big Boy" Williams to Make Appearances in Western Country

Harry Nolan of First National Exhibitors' Circuit of Denver has just wired Joe Di Lorenzo, president of Di Lorenzo, Inc., that he has definitely arranged with Frederick Herbst to have "Big Boy" Williams appear in Denver in conjunction with his latest five-reeler, during the week of June 25 at Fox's Isis Theatre. The following week the player will appear in Salt Lake City.

This is the sequence to the closing of the Denver territory on the series with First National Exhibitors' Circuit of Denver.

Louis Sidney, general manager of the Isis, looked at Blaze Away and The Trail of Hate, the first two of the series, and closed with Nolan for the group.

Pending negotiations on other territories indicate that a great portion of territories will be closed within the next ten days on the series. The third subject, The Freshie, which depicts Williams in the role of a college freshman, is in its final stages of completion and will be ready shortly for distribution.

Impresario's Widow to Appear in Coming Goodman Production

Daniel Carson Goodman, president of Goodman Productions, Inc., which is now producing What's Wrong With the Women? for release through Eddy Pictures, will introduce a well known person to the screen public in the person of Mrs. Oscar Hammerstein, who is making her motion picture debut in this picture. Mrs. Hammerstein ever since the death of her husband has been before the public in the famous old Manhattan Opera House.

Production on the subject is now well past the half-way mark and Dr. Goodman will deliver the completed print to the hands of Equity in plenty of time to allow a big publicity and advertising campaign to precede the release. The story, which is from the pen of Dr. Goodman, will be interpreted by a cast including Wilton Lackaye, Barbara Castleton, Montagu Love, Rod La Roque, Hedda Hopper, Huntley Gordon, Julia Swayne Gordon, Constance Bennett, a daughter of Richard Bennett, who is afforded her first big screen role, and Mrs. Hammerstein. The direction is by R. William Neill.

Louis Auerbach Goes West to Confer with Col. Selig

Louis Auerbach, vice-president of Export and Import Film Company, Inc., left New York Wednesday for Los Angeles for a conference with William N. Selig.

Export and Import recently contracted with Selig for the world rights of his entire output for a period of three years.

Selig controls the picture rights to a very extensive library of famous novels and plays. It is understood Mr. Auerbach will discuss new production plans and that a program for the fall will be decided upon.

Export and Import will offer several features on the independent market this fall in addition to the product which it will put through national distributor channels.

Aywon Making a Series of Two-Part Western Subjects

The Aywon Film Corporation announces the sale of Lure of the Orient to the Commonwealth Pictures Corporation of Chicago for the territory of Illinois and Indiana.

A new series of twelve two-reel western pictures featuring Cherokee Jill is now in the course of making by Aywon, and will be released shortly.

President Nathan Hirsh announces that he has purchased for the New York exchange from the Anchor Film Corporation a series of four race-track pictures. The first one, They're Off, is now ready for distribution.

Blumenthal Sails for Europe

Ben Blumenthal, president of the Hamilton Theatrical Corporation and Export and Import Film Company, sailed for Europe May 20. Ralph Kohn, vice-president of Hamilton, accompanied him.

Abramson to Portray "Flapper" Type

Producer Negotiating with Nationally Known Star for Leading Role and Promises Strong Supporting Company

Graphic Film Corporation promises one of the biggest independent productions to be released on the State rights market this year when Ivan Abramson, aided by Assistant Director M. A. Sachs, begins production on a six-reeler. The actual story dealing with the present "flapper" girl will be a feature attempting to portray with as much truth and vividness as possible the typical New York "flapper," the sophistications, the originality, and the ideas and ideals of her type.

Mr. Abramson has felt that in these young women the paramount difference between the grandmothers of yesterday and themselves is a knowledge of the world which has strengthened their moral fibre better than Sunday sermons. On the assumption that the New York "flapper" is "too wise to be morally bad," Mr. Abramson intends presenting an interesting story picturization.

A nationally known star will be featured in the lead, whose name will probably be announced to the trade next week. Supporting the star will be among others Julia Swayne Gordon and Thurston Hall, who already have signed contracts.

In all probability production will begin about June 1, all depending upon the rapidity with which the cast is completed.

Retain Warners' "Your Best Friend"

Following Wide Exploitation and Personal Appearance of Star, Detroit's Broadway-Strand Holds Picture Second Week

Warner Brothers' Your Best Friend, a Harry Rapf production starring Vera Gordon, is creating a number of precedents since its release, according to exhibitor and newspaper reports.

The feature was held over for a second week at the Broadway-Strand, Detroit, following a widespread newspaper and billboard campaign announcing the personal appearance of Miss Gordon in conjunction with the picture.

Many theatres, including the Strand, Cincinnati; Orpheum, Akron; Colonial, Columbus, and the Strand, Milwaukee, have arranged to take advantage of Miss Gordon's popularity by having the star appear during the showing.

During the engagement of the production at the Kismet Theatre, Brooklyn, it played to the biggest business in the history of the house, according to the management, and it was necessary to have ten policemen in attendance.

"I have just finished a four days' run of Vera Gordon in Your Best Friend at my Kismet Theatre," writes Manager Blemdes, "and I wish to compliment you on the wonderful box office results and the satisfaction expressed by my patrons with this picture. I wish to thank you for the interest shown by you and your organization after the picture was sold to me and the way you co-operated with me.

"It may interest you to hear that it was necessary to have ten policemen in attendance during the run of the picture to help clear the crowd from the street car tracks so as to permit the street cars to pass the theatre. I played to turnaway business the entire four days, my only mistake being that I did not have it booked for the entire week."

Due to the crowds which tried to get into the Kismet Manager Blemdes has arranged to show the feature at his State Theatre, Brooklyn, for a longer run.

Cherokees to Make Ten-Reelers Directed by John Paul Jones

The Nighthawk Keetoowah Society, which is composed of full-blood Cherokee Indians, and whose origin dates back to the Seven Council Fires of the Iroquois, have under process of production a series of two-reel pictures depicting Indian legends and folklore, the cast being composed wholly of members.

Upon the completion of these two-reelers the Keetoowahs will produce a ten-reel subject depicting the major events in the contemporary history of the red man and the white man since the colonization of America. The continuity is now being arranged, the working title of which will be The Passing of a Nation. The direction will be under the supervision of John Paul Jones.

De Luxe Takes Over Nineteen Subjects From Arrow's List

An important sale in the Independent field has been consummated between Arrow Film Corporation and De Luxe Film Company of Philadelphia.

Under the terms of the contract De Luxe will distribute in Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey the following product:

The Broken Silence and Jacqueline, Curwood productions; four Peter B. Kyne pictures, six new Jack Hoxie pictures, four Neva Gerber pictures, The Innocent Cheat, Arrow's fall special; Chain Lightning, the Ann Little racetrack drama, and The Deceiver.

Oscar Lund Forms His Own Producing Company

An addition to the list of directors who are producing on their own account for the independent field is O. A. C. Lund. After completing his contract with William Fox, Mr. Lund spent some time abroad, returning to America several months ago with the intention of forming his own producing company and making a definite type of special productions. His company is now fully organized and financed and will start work on its first contribution to the independent market at once. Mr. Lund will produce at the Paragon studios in Fort Lee, where sets are now in course of construction.

Prepare Novel Accessory for "Sawing a Lady in Half"

Weiss Brothers are preparing a novel accessory to assist exchanges and exhibitors in exploiting the film exposé of Sawing a Lady in Half. This consists of miniature reproductions of the box and saw used in the stage act and the film, and in which the woman is placed during the process of sawing. These small boxes and saws are made up in cardboard. They contain space on one side for the imprint of the exhibitor or the exchange, while the other side carries information containing the film illusion. Several thousand boxes and saws have already been ordered by exchanges handling the subject.

Frederick Herbst Production Company on location shooting "The Trail of Hate," one of the "Big Boy" Guinn Williams series, distributed by Di Lorenzo, Inc.

"One-Eighth Apache," From Wilson Studio, Received by Arrow

From the home office of the Arrow Film Corporation comes an announcement to the effect that many of the new productions on which various of its units have been at work are now completed and in the vaults.

The most important picture to be received on what may be termed the new program was the Peter B. Kyne production, third of the series, made by Ben Wilson from Mr. Kyne's magazine story, One-Eighth Apache. This is a picture which may be classified as a "society western." It is full of thrills, splendidly directed and acted by a cast headed by Roy Stewart and Kathleen Kirkham.

A new Eddie Lyons comedy, Follow Me, also has been received and will soon reach the screen. It contains many unusual situations and many new "gags."

These are but two of the many pictures coming to strengthen the Arrow line-up and to enable the exhibitor to win out.

Weiss Brothers Make Two Sales

The rights for Michigan on the exposé of Sawing a Lady in Half, being distributed on the independent market by Weiss Brothers, Clarion Photoplays, Inc., have been purchased by the Favorite Film Company, Inc., of Detroit. Al Kahn has bought the exposé for Iowa, Nebraska, Western Missouri and Kansas. First run bookings continue to pile up in the various territories for this novelty offering.

Columbia Buys "Parish Priest"

The Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia rights on The Parish Priest were bought the past week by the Columbia Film Service of Pittsburgh.

The H. Lieber Company also has bought the same subject for Indiana. The Special Attractions Company of Toronto has secured the Canadian rights, and the picture opened in Montreal last week.

Goldstone Has Three Units

Another old time melodrama will be filmed for the state rights market by Phil Goldstone, who now has three producing units, including Richard Talmadge and Franklyn Farnum features.

An all-star cast and well known director have started on the production of Deserted at the Altar.

Norfleet to Visit Exchanges

Hal C. Norfleet, sales manager of Sanford Productions, Hollywood, is in New York and plans to visit all of the exchange centers. He has with him a print of the two-reel Tweedy comedy, Fire! Fire! and of the five-reel semi-western, The Better Man Wins, featuring Pete Morrison.

Institute Publicity Campaign

The Export and Import Film Company has embarked on a "direct to the public" publicity campaign on Selig's The Jungle Goddess serial, which is expected to reach every part of the country within the next two months.

Exploitation Contests—Try Them

Summer Is On and These Will Build Business for You If Anything Will

No. 1—The Postal Laws and Contests

A close perusal of Sections 482 and 483 of the United States Postal Laws and Regulations leads us to believe that Uncle Sam's post offices and some contests are not on very friendly terms. In fact, some paragraphs in them show a distinct enmity and, furthermore, they threaten the perpetrator of the said non-welcome contest with a sojourn in one of his well kept penitentiaries. Not a pleasant thing to look forward to, so the best way to avoid incurring an unpleasantness with our uncle or any of his agents is to first submit the rules of a contest to your local postmaster and obtain a ruling from him before you place an advertisement in the newspapers or mail any letters or pamphlets on the subject.

He can give you a ruling and it will cost you less money to abide by that ruling than it will to go against it. This does not mean that all contests are not permissible. On the contrary, any kind of a contest can be used as long as it does not contain an element of chance or when the participants do not have to pay either directly or indirectly for the privilege of entering.

Wide Variety

There are plenty of contests that come under this head. Good ones, too, that an exhibitor can use without playing with fire. They all contain an element of chance in a way that makes them interesting, but this element is done away with in the manner of awarding the prizes. Take a voting contest, for instance. There is plenty of chance in it, but this chance is all eliminated by the judges in awarding the prizes. They have something definite (the votes) on which to base their decision, something that can be counted and proven or disproven, and as such this kind of a contest is admissible. On the other hand, if the awards are based on the personal opinion of one or more judges, then the contest becomes a violation of the postal laws and is prohibited in the mails.

Take an essay contest on a picture. This contest is not permissible if participants have to purchase tickets in order to take part in it. On the other hand, if a synopsis of the picture is given free, so that anyone can participate without having to purchase a ticket to be eligible, you can advertise the contest in the newspapers without infringing on any of Uncle Sam's laws. There is an element of chance in this contest, a big one, but still one does not have to pay for the privilege of entering. When the rules, however, call for the participant to purchase a ticket to the theatre conducting it, then it is a violation. You see, they pay indirectly for the privilege of entering by having to buy a ticket of admission to the theatre.

Watch Out

On puzzle contests it is hard to say what is permissible and what is not. When you decide to hold one, either take it from some press book or else talk your plans over with the local postmaster before you do any newspaper advertising. Puzzle contests given in press books have been ruled on by the postal officials, and in using them be sure to follow the plans outlined or you might stumble into trouble. By changing one or two words or awarding the prize in a different manner, may violate the law. As an illustration, the press book's contest awarded the prize in one way, and you changed it by giving a prize for the first correct answer received at your theatre. Two people solve the problem at the same time, one living close to the theatre and the other quite a distance from it. Then the element of chance

Theatres' Biggest Problem Is Getting Them In—Try Out a Contest

EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW has made a survey of conditions in the motion picture theatre field. Every theatre it was possible to reach was asked this question:

What is your biggest problem to-day?

The replies are notable for the difference of opinion existing.

The biggest problem appears to be getting folks into the theatres. Here is a percentage tabulation of the replies:

Problem	Percentage Replying
Getting more business	43¼
Lower film rentals	24½
Too many taxes	4¼
More new idea films	7
Cutting expenses	5
Too many theatres	3
Building new theatre	1½
Booking conditions	3⅔
Getting better prints	1½
When to raise admissions	6⅓

SOUTH—Biggest problem is getting more business, with lower rentals next and new idea films third.

WEST—The main problem in the West is getting more people to attend the theatres and reduction in film rentals following closely, reflecting the agricultural and industrial conditions in that section which are now improving.

EAST—The lack of business leads as a problem in this section but the demand for lower rentals is not one-third as great as in the West. Too many theatres is a big problem in this section as well as taxes and new idea pictures.

NORTH—Poor business is this section's big problem with new idea pictures and lower film rentals sharing equally.

comes is as to which one gets there first with the answer. And that little change can make you a free guest of Uncle Sam for one or two years.

Another stunt that seems to be quite popular in some parts of the country is to have an aeroplane drop envelopes, some of which contain money, some tickets to the theatre and others nothing but air. Don't advertise a stunt like this in the newspapers or send any literature about it through the mails. That, according to the ruling of some of the postal officials, is a distinct violation of the law, even though you do not have to pay in any way to participate in the scramble for one of the envelopes. The element of chance is in it and that knocks it out of the mails. To use a stunt like that, it is permissible to advertise it in front of your theatre by window cards or in any way so long as none of the advertising is handled through the mails.

Safety First

The purpose of this article is to simply give a general idea of what can be safely used and what should not be used. The question of just why some things can be used, while the same things couched in a little different language cannot, is something that only a lawyer who has made a specialty in postal laws and regulations can answer. The why and the why not is based on decisions handed down by the courts, most of which make very dry reading, and aside from that, the rulings are so numerous and so complicated it would take a big book to cover the question thoroughly, and then a legal education to understand it. As to exhibitors having the legal knowledge necessary to understand and "translate" court rulings, some of them have but most of them have not. What is more important, however, none of them have the time in the scramble for business to make a study of the law on puzzle contests, and it is not necessary. Uncle Sam has a postmaster in every little hamlet in this wide country who can give you the information you want, and if he is not able to, then they have a highly trained legal staff in Washington that can, and the postmaster will get any line of dope on a contest you want without any cost to you. It will be cheaper in the long run to get the information from him rather than run any risk of a court scrap—a very expensive thing to do—and the rulings he gets for you will be authentic.

COMING—The second article of this series will describe contests of all sorts.

What Is the First Thing to Do When You Start a Contest?

In starting a contest which involves the use of the United States mails, or newspaper advertising, it is imperative that you do not run afoul of the United States laws. The Postoffice Department has strict rules and classifies some contests as lotteries. Lotteries are prohibited by United States laws and the Postoffice Department is charged with denying the use of the mails to lotteries and publications printing details concerning lotteries.

The first thing to do then, when you have prepared your contest plan is to submit it to your local postmaster. He will tell you whether it conflicts with Postal Regulations and the law and it is good judgment to observe what he tells you.

For the benefit of those who are not familiar with the postoffice laws on contests this extract from the Postal Laws and Regulations is published:

Sec. 482. No letter, package, postal card or circular concerning any lottery, gift enterprise or similar scheme offering prizes dependent in whole or in part upon lot or chance; and no lottery ticket or part thereof, or paper, certificate or instrument purporting to be or to represent a ticket, chance, share, or interest in or dependent upon the event of a lottery, gift enterprise, or similar scheme offering prizes dependent in whole or in part upon lot or chance; and no check, draft, bill, money, postal note or money-order, for the purchase of any ticket or part thereof, or of any share or chance in any such lottery, gift enterprise or scheme; and no newspaper, circular, pamphlet or publication of any kind containing any advertisement of any lottery, gift enterprise, or scheme of any kind offering prizes dependent in whole or in part upon lot or chance, or containing any list of the prizes drawn or awarded by means of any such lottery, gift enterprise or scheme, whether said list contains any part or all of such prizes, shall be deposited in or carried by the mails of the United States, or be delivered by any postmaster or letter carrier. Whoever shall knowingly deposit or cause to be deposited, or shall knowingly send or cause to be sent, anything to be conveyed or delivered by mail in violation of the provisions of this section, or shall knowingly deliver or cause to be delivered by mail anything herein forbidden to be carried by mail, shall be fined not more than one thousand dollars, or imprisoned not more than two years, or both; and for any subsequent offense shall be imprisoned not more than five years. Any person violating any provision of this section may be tried and punished either in the district in which the unlawful matter or publication was mailed, or to which it was carried by mail for delivery according to the direction thereof, or in which it was caused to be delivered by mail to the person to whom it was addressed.

Sec. 483. The term "lottery," as used in Section 482, embraces all kinds of schemes, general or local, for the distribution of prizes by lot or chance, such as gift exhibitions or enterprises, concerts, raffles or the drawing of prizes in money or property at fairs.

Extract from United States Official Postal Guide

Attention * * * is directed to Section 482 of the Postal Laws and Regulations by the provisions of which newspapers or other publications of any kind, circulars and pamphlets, containing advertisements of lotteries, gift enterprises or similar schemes offering prizes dependent in whole or in part upon lot or chance, or lists of the prizes awarded in pursuance of such schemes, and all other matter relating to them, are declared to be unmailable. The terms "lottery, gift enterprise, or similar scheme offering prizes dependent in whole or in part upon lot or chance," as used in that section, include "guessing" or "estimating" contests for prizes, as well as drawings and raffles of every kind, whether general or local, whether for private gain or in aid of charitable, educational or religious objects, and whether the consideration for chances be money or other thing of value. Enterprises in which prizes are distributed among purchasers of merchandise in stated amounts, or among subscribers for publications, or for shares of corporate stock, through the medium of drawings or guessing contests, are lotteries within the meaning of that section. Publications, circulars, cards or pamphlets containing advertisements of such enterprises, or notices or other information of any kind relating to them, should be withdrawn from the mails and treated in accordance with Sections 547, 574 and 593 of the Postal Laws and Regulations.

"Endless chain" enterprises designed for the sale or disposition of merchandise or other things of value through the circulation or distribution of "coupons," "tickets," "certificates," "introductions" and the like, are held to embrace the elements of a lottery, and also to be fraudulent. Matter of every kind relating to such enterprises should be excluded or withdrawn from the mails, and treated in accordance with Sections 547, 574 and 593 of the Postal Laws and Regulations.

Persons who contemplate the use of the mail in the operation of prize competitions, contests or schemes are advised to ascertain whether matter relating thereto is mailable under the law, and should submit specimens of any advertisements, offers or literature with full particulars relating to the project.

Publishers are cautioned against the printing of advertisements or announcements of enterprises of the character referred to before ascertaining whether the matter is mailable, as publications containing matter relating to schemes which are not in conformity with the law are unmailable at any rate of postage.

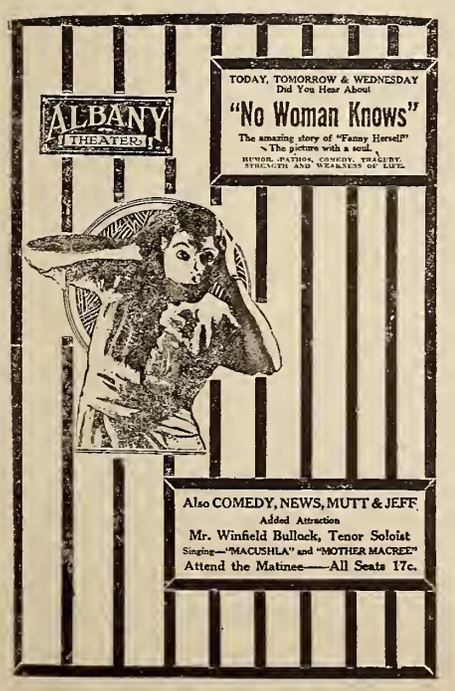
Newspaper Ads With a Punch

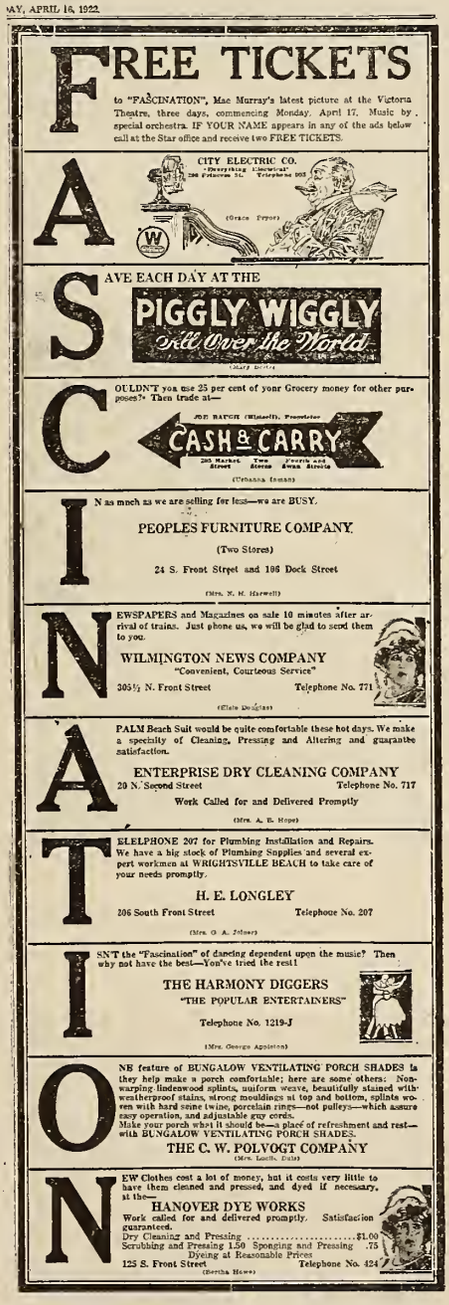
A Few Samples That Have Boosted Business for Exhibitors Who Used Them

A NEWSPAPER display advertisement that will attract attention and be read is the aim of every advertiser. Some hit the nail on the head with their ads while others miss it a mile, but here are five, one of which is a co-operative, that will attract attention in practically any newspaper.

The first one, used by Alexander Frank, proprietor of the Rialto and Waterloo Theatres, Waterloo, Iowa, for Fox's Over the Hill, has plenty of reading matter in it, in the way of an open letter to the ministers. The letter by itself, would probably have been passed by in rapidly looking over the paper but for the picture of the old mother, which caught the eye. Naturally, the gist of the ad was read then, as attention had been attracted. It was four columns wide by 10 inches deep.

An ad of the opposite type, one with little reading matter, was used by the Albany, Schenectady, N. Y., for Universal's No Woman Knows. It was three columns wide by 10 inches deep, and the white space broken by bars, presented a striking appearance. The busiest reader read this ad, even without intending to, as the printed matter was so prominently displayed it was read at a glance.





A good co-operative ad is that of the Victoria, Wilmington, N. C., for Metro's Fascination. There is no use of calling attention to the good points of it, as they stand out plain enough for any exhibitor to see. Occupying half of a right-hand inside page, it could hardly be passed without the word "Fascination" being read.

Frank's double ad for his two theatres, playing up United Artists' attractions in the center panel, is not as good as his other one. It could have been made much stronger by using only one panel, the center one, leaving out the letter and setting the word "Because" in 48 point type and the two lines following in 24 point to balance, at the bottom of the ad.

A good example of a black background ad is the Virginian's, Charleston, W. Va., for Universal's No Woman Knows. It printed well in the paper, and with a minimum amount of reading matter that stood out strongly against its dark background, was quickly read.

The Kozy, Paducah, Ky., conducted a beauty contest during the run of Paramount's "Beyond the Rocks" and not being able to get an empty building for headquarters, they tied up with a music dealer, who gave over his entire store. The inside was decorated with stills and art photographs of Miss Swanson and Valentino, while the banner on the outside drew the people in.

Against settings with a Dutch windmill background, Manager McCormick of the Allen, Cleveland, Ohio, staged a Mother Goose Nursery Rbymes prologue for First National's "My Boy," tbat made nearly as big hit in Cleveland as his jazz week did.

No doubt "greater wonders" were worked within, but George Schade of Schade's Theatre, Sandusky, Obio, worked a "wonder without" in the way of exploitation, for First National's "A Perfect Crime," when he staged a demonstration of a miniature automobile moved and controlled by radio in front of his tbeatre.

Beauty Contest

With a beauty contest occupying the position on the front page of the Peducah, Kentucky, Sun, and a whole store devoted to stills and advertising for Beyond the Rocks, the Kozy Theatre, just naturally cleaned up.

Manager R. C. Davis and A-Mike Vogel, Paramount exploiteer tied up the Sun for a beauty contest in which the whole town took interest. The two exploiteers even saved the theatre the price of the prizes. The biggest department store in town furnished a box of silk lace hosiery and a silk lace Spanish mantilla—both retailing at $50—to be awarded the winners.

Two weeks before the run of Beyond the Rocks the activities centered around the "Headquarters" which Messrs. Davis and Vogel established after much effort. There was no empty building available but they did even better. They tied up with McLaughlin, the leading musical dealer, who gave over his entire store. The inside was decorated with stills and rare art photographs of Miss Swanson, Mr. Valentino and others, all provided by Davis. Vogel had Miss Swanson and Valentino send telegrams of congratulations, which were duly shown in the windows.

A cut-out of Valentino, showing the life-size figure of the dapper star in a saucy observance, was taken from a three-sheet. It was mounted and placed on the curb with a card reading:

> Greeting Friends. Won't you step into McLaughlin's and see some of my latest pictures.

Newspaper advertising as well as cards in McLaughlin's windows made it plain that a visit did not obligate the visitor to either buy records or go to the show. It was to be purely a "hang-out." Such a rendezvous on Paducah's main street was something new and it became the talk of the town. McLaughlin was so pleased with it that he asked Davis to try it again whenever he had a picture worth it.

The department store donating the prizes did better than that. They gave their front window, and a twenty-four-sheet cut-out of both Miss Swanson and Valentino dominated it. Miss Swanson's figure was cleverly supplemented by a cascade of silk formed by the mantilla which was one of the prizes. The silk hosiery was also shown and stills and a one-sheet completed the display.

These events covered the town as it has never been covered before. Press book ads were used in the newspapers and the title and the dates were kept constantly before the public.

Double Truck

The Paramount-Empress, Salt Lake City, tied up enough merchants for a double truck on Is Matrimony a Failure? but chose to scatter the ads through the paper rather than combine them for a flash.

There was a big co-operative ad on every inside page. George Carpenter said, whereas the double-page truck or single-page knocks the reader between the eyes, the scattered ads inevitably catch him and impress him through repetition. Rick Ricketson, Paramount exploiteer, helped land the merchants for Mr. Carpenter.

Theatre Hostess Appears on Scene

New Wrinkle in Theatre Operation and Exploitation Tried Out in Texas

Have you a hostess at your theatre? If you haven't, you're a step behind the procession.

Earlier in the history of the motion picture theatre a hostess might have been considered as much of a luxury as two projection machines were once thought to be. Now it's a poor theatre that doesn't sport a pair of projectors.

Taking time by the forelock and stepping forward to set a precedent in the Southwest at least, the Hope Theatre, which opened in Dallas during the last days of April, has incorporated a hostess into the theatre staff, and it is the forecast of J. D. Williams, Managing Director Stuart and other executives of the theatre that the hostess will prove to be a vital and pivotal factor in the success of the Hope.

In the events attendant upon the opening of the Hope Theatre the Hope hostess, who on this occasion was Mrs. Grace Wynden Vail, played an important part in securing the sympathetic attention of the leaders of Dallas women's activities in the occasion.

Over her own signature the Hope hostess addressed personal letters to the president of the Girls' National Honor Guard of Dallas, the officers of the Mothers' Council of Dallas and of the women's clubs, inviting them to be present at the private preview of "Stardust," the Hope Hampton feature which opened the theatre named in honor of the star. Stress was laid upon the fact that Miss Hampton is a Texas girl and that she would be present in person.

Immediately following the opening, the Hope Theatre management began to lay active plans to make the house the centre of a gala celebration of Mothers' Day, Monday, May 15, and City Federation Day the same Wednesday.

In conference with Mrs. W. H. Carson, of the Federation of Women's Clubs, and the Mothers' Council, Mrs. Eugene Bagley, Mrs. George Francesco, Mrs. J. H. Brower, Mrs. Emma Wynne Ballard, of the Mothers' Council; Mrs. P. P. Tucker, president of the Hope Cottage Association, and Mrs. Mamie Folsom Wynne, editor of the woman's page of the Dallas Dispatch, the Hope hostess was able to formulate an impressive program for the observance of these days by the presentation of a special series of appropriate features during the week at the Hope.

Meeting of Dallas women with the Hope hostess

Following the conference, the leaders of Dallas social and civic life were addressed with one of the two letters:

The first of these letters was addressed to members of the Parent-Teacher Association, the second to the members of the City Federation of Women's Clubs:

Tuesday, May 9, 1922.

Dear Mr. Speaker:

The Hope Theatre has set aside Monday, May 15, for special observance of Mothers' Day. On that day the theatre will introduce extra numbers on its program, and it is our wish to seek the cooperation of the Dallas Council of Mothers in lending dignity and import to the observance.

I have talked with Mrs. Bagley, who has graciously indorsed our plan. She has also consented to act as one of the associate hostesses on that day.

As Hostess of the Hope, I am extending a cordial invitation to you to act as associate host with me, either during the matinee or evening performance. I am also inclosing a pass for admission on that day.

May I ask that you notify the members of the Parent-Teacher Association, which you head, of this Monday performance at the Hope? The feature film for the week is little Jackie Coogan in My Boy, a picture that is an especially happy choice for the particular week. Grown-ups and youngsters will find splendid entertainment in it. Then, of course, there will be the usual musical features and shorter films. I mention these inducements in the thought that the question of our program may be asked you.

Will you please notify me at the theatre as to whether or not you will be able to honor us with your presence, and at which performance I may expect to count upon you to assist in receiving—the matinee at 2.30, or the evening performance at 8?

Thanks for your attention and interest.

Very cordially,

THE HOPE HOSTESS.

Wednesday, May 10, 1922.

Wednesday, May 17, has been set aside by the Hope Theatre in special observance of the clubs comprising the City Federation of Clubs in Dallas. The theatre has always voiced its indorsement of the type of civic activity represented in the organizations included in the city clubs.

Through the courtesy of Managing Director Buddy Stuart and the particular efforts of a Graham Harris, orchestral conductor of the Hope, a special program is being arranged for Club Day, to be given in conjunction with the regular current bill, headed by young Jackie Coogan in My Boy. The high quality of the Hope artists represented in our quartet and the orchestra, will receive fine demonstration in the special program.

In addition, Mr. Stuart has made a generous monetary combination to the fund for the maintenance of the Girls' Summer Camp at Backman's Dam.

At the Hope Hostess, I have the pleasant duty of greeting patrons and of welcoming them. It is the same agreeable task I ask of you. As the performance both afternoon and evening will be in honor of the club, will you acquaint me of whether or not you will be able to be with us, and at which time you prefer to be present, at the matinee at 2.30, or the evening performance starting at 8?

As a further courtesy, may I ask that you acquaint members of your organization of this Club Day at the Hope and urge their attendance?

My hearty thanks for your interest and the sincere hope that you may be with us on the 17th.

Very cordially yours,

THE HOPE HOSTESS.

Small Drawings

Little thumb-nail drawings executed by the house artist of the Royal Theatre, Kansas City, were used in a highly effective manner for newspaper teasers for Is Matrimony a Failure?

The first showed a minister with a bride and groom in front of him going through the joining process. The caption was:

> 5685 couples were married in Kansas City last year—"Is Matrimony a Failure?"

The next day the sketch showed the court room with the following caption:

> 1610 couples were divorced in Kansas City last year—"Is Matrimony a Failure?"

The third showed the long-legged stork aflight with a diaper through his beak suspending a baby. The caption was:

> 6921 babies were born in Kansas City last year—"Is Matrimony a Failure?"

This local appeal got the attention of the readers right away and sold the title. The simplicity stunt put it within the means of the average house artist so it is of no extra expense to the theatre.

Alligator Lobby

The Liberty Theatre, Yakima, Wash., decided that America in the lobby during the run of Fool's Paradise wouldn't do, and the only way to get the proper atmosphere was to obliterate it.

H. A. Gillespie, advertising manager for the theatre, built in a wall-board front covering the lobby entirely. The crocodile scenes from the picture were painted on the blank board.

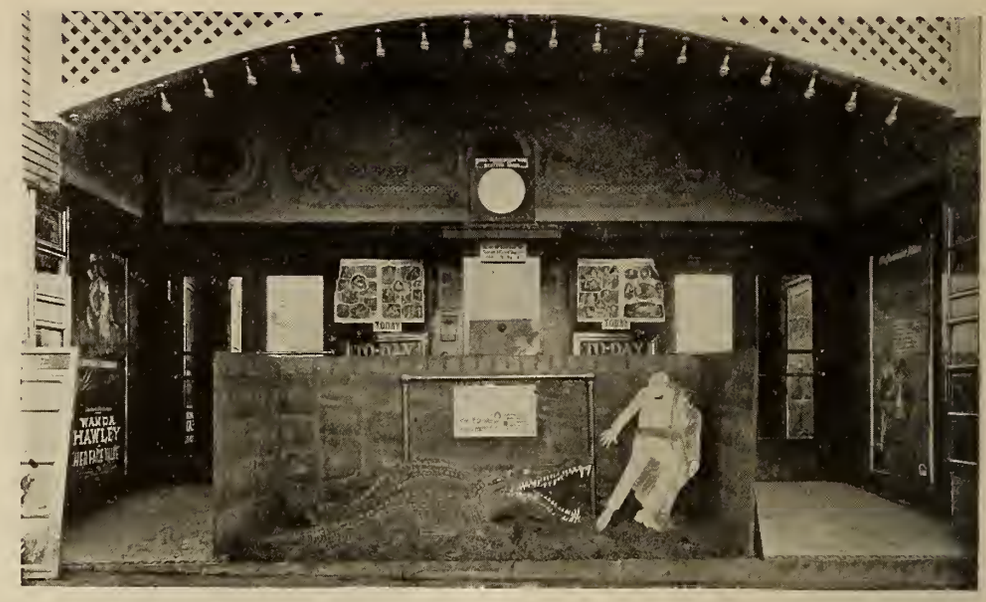
> This stirring sign helped pull them in: Positively no one will be seated during the blood-stirring scenes of the crocodile den.

The entrance doors and even the box office were masked. Anybody getting within three blocks of the theatre caught the flash and the whole town buzzed with conversation.

Kids' Exploitation

Molly O was being played at the Opera Hall, Mapleton, Iowa. The city has still to acquire a regular motion picture theatre, so the First National attraction was staged under the auspices of the consolidated schools. The youngsters had read in the trade papers of the power of exploitation and started out on their own account to make the show a financial success that would warrant bringing other pictures to Mapleton and perhaps induce a theatrical man to put capital into building a theatre there.

The stunt was a simple ballyhoo and still different from any of the previous exploitation on Molly O. They brought out the old hook and ladder to play up the fire scene in the production, bordered it with banners and clanging bells, manned it with a crew of juvenile firemen, and had it traverse the main streets of the town. The ingenuity and initiative paid at the box office and Molly O was reported a success. The kids say that when they have a theatre they expect to put on some real exploitation.



Manager Stalcup of the Princess, Eastland, Texas, could not secure live alligators with which to make a display for Paramount's "Fool's Paradise," so he cut some out of a poster, mounted them on beaver board, and had just as good a display, without running any risk of one of the alligators making a meal of a spectator.

Publicity Director Cullen of the Branford, Newark, N. J., used the English garden effect in his lobby decorations for First National's "Smilin' Through" with a new angle. The wall was used as the side of a house covered with ivy, the doorway to it heing the entrance to the theatre, at the left of the lobby.

This unusually artistic window display was secured by the Hippodrome, Huntington, West Virginia, for United Artists' "Orphans of the Storm." The settings of the window, being imitations of stone walls, ledges and tile floors in tinted shades, formed a typical atmosphere for the two figures representing Lillian and Dorothy Gish.

Cutts Puts Over Big Campaign

Uses Some Brand New Stunts That Sold His Feature to Seattle with a Bang

"Foolish Wives" Usherettes

FOOLISH WIVES did not come to Seattle unannounced. On the contrary, it had one of the biggest exploitation campaigns the city has ever seen, that, starting one week in advance of the showing, was continued until the last day of the run, and has been talked about in that neck of the woods ever since.

Manager Cutts of the Columbia Theatre planned and conducted the campaign. It was started by a series of six-inch teaser ads that appeared in the Seattle papers one week previous to the opening—Sunday, to be exact—these ads being increased in size each day and telling something about the picture. They only told enough, however, to whet curiosity, until Thursday, when the "cat was let out of the bag" with a half-page ad. This was the largest ad used, and beginning with the next day they dwindled in size, until toward the end of the run they had again reached the size of six inches.

On that same Thursday, at the theatre, each patron was handed a well-gotten-up herald printed on heavy enameled stock that told the story of Foolish Wives. It consisted of four pages and gave a brief history of the picture, its cost, and what the leading dramatic critics of the country thought of it. On the last page was given the price schedule, the time of the showing and something about the length of the production. Ten thousand of these descriptive heralds were given out in the theatre and on the streets in its immediate vicinity.

The heralds were followed by a mailing campaign, a picture postcard being used instead of a letter or herald. This postcard contained a picture of Von Stroheim with six catchlines about the picture on one side, and on the other a message in fac-simile handwriting, addressed to "Dear Friend," and signed "Mary." They were addressed by hand in the same shade ink as that used in printing the message, and mailed to five thousand women in Seattle.

On Friday night, after the show, Manager Cutts decorated his lobby, as the picture opened on Saturday. This was not such a hard job, as the false front and decorations on the interior are all sets built of wood and hinged so they can easily be taken down and put up. These sets were built months ago and are similar in every respect to regular sets used on the stage, and the savings effected by being able to use them over and over again has more than repaid their original cost. After they have been used for one picture the scenic artists repaint them for the next one, and it only takes a few minutes to put them up. The art glass effect, however, on the upper part of the canopy and just over the doors inside of the lobby is not a part of the sets, but was made of oiled paper and illuminated from behind. It will also be noticed that Cutts has done away with the regular easel in the lobby, which is constantly being knocked over by patrons. He placed a plain brass bar at the back of the frame, which is fastened in a hole in the floor of the lobby. When anyone strikes these frames, instead of falling over, they simply turn to either the right or the left. Trees when used in a display are also mounted in the lobby in the same manner.

The decorations of the interior of the lobby were made up of draperies on the sides and the ceiling festooned with gilt cloth. Over the box office he placed some real lilies of the valley, and back of them a red light. From a concealed source in the ceiling a white spotlight was thrown on them, which made the lilies stand out in a very striking manner, as all other lights in the lobby were red.

Cutts has also changed the lighting system in the lobby from the direct to the indirect. Troughs, similar to those used on the stage, contain colored lights, and they are concealed in the walls about four feet from the ceiling. There are three different circuits in each trough, the circuits being controlled by switches in the box office, and any one of the three colors can be used without the necessity of changing all of the globes. This, of course, makes it very easy to blend the lighting effects with the general color scheme of the lobby.

A "Foolish Wives" Window

On top of a big building two blocks from the Columbia he had an electric sign Foolish Wives erected, the letters being five feet tall, and it could be read for five blocks in either direction. Right under the letter "H" was placed a battleship searchlight, and at night this light was maneuvered up and down the street until it attracted the attention of pedestrians and motorists, then was flashed on the front of the Columbia. It made the front stand out like a lighthouse on a stormy night.

Rather than go to the expense of bringing Von Stroheim or any of the other prominent members of the cast to Seattle, Cutts employed two impersonators, one of whom impersonated Von Stroheim as Count Karamzin and the woman impersonated Mrs. Hughes. These two impersonators rode about the city in a large open car without any advertising matter on it whatever. They also visited every place where crowds of any size congregated and created a great deal of talk and discussion as to whether they were genuine or just imitations, and at the theatre, all employes were dumb on the subject.

In order to create atmosphere in the theatre, the ushers were dressed in full evening costume. The dresses were new, and in most instances were designed along the same lines as the costumes worn in the picture. The long trains, which would have gotten in the way of the girls in walking, were "tacked" up on one side, and really added to their appearance rather than detracted from it.

When the picture started on its second week, Cutts arranged with a well-known Seattle aviator and his wife to make a flight over the city. This was widely advertised in the newspapers, under a heading "The Foolish Wife of An Aviator will make flight across the city today." A prize of $20.00 was offered to the first person to reach "the foolish wife" after the flight and escort her to the office of a morning newspaper.

Although the stores of Seattle are rather "hardboiled" when it comes to letting an exhibitor have their windows for a display, Cutts had plenty of them. He made an address before the Ad Club, which is composed of the advertising managers of all of the larger stores, and explained to them how co-operative windows paid in other parts of the country. This address lead to the advertising managers offering him the use of their windows instead of Cutts having to ask for them with the likelihood of being refused.

Another stunt that got a lot of publicity was the radio station of the Post Intelligence. It is considered the most powerful on the coast, and Manager Cutts tried to get in radio connection with Von Stroheim in Los Angeles over it. Von Stroheim could hear Seattle alright, but Seattle could not hear him. It was good for several free stories that tied up effectively with "Foolish Wives."

Appropriate Prologue

A soprano sang "Eli, Eli," a Jewish hymn, in Edward L. Hyman's prologue for Cosmopolitan's "Humoresque" during its one day engagement at the Brooklyn Strand Theatre when "Film Masterpiece Week" was being observed. The prologue, which showed the interior of a synagogue, was timely inasmuch as it was presented just after the close of the Hebrew holidays.

A plush drop was used as the background, and in the middle there was an opening through which was seen a stand upon which was a large six-pointed star flanked on either side by tall, lighted candles. It was here that the soloist stood when she rendered her number.

The stage was almost completely dark. There was a dark red flood illuminating the star and the soloist. Unlike Hyman's prologue for The Inside of the Cup, where a church scene was used. The orchestra accompanied the soloist.

The singer was dressed plainly and there was a heavy shawl about her head. The overture was Dvorak's "Humoresque" and the Original Piano Trio played Cadman's "From the Land of the Sky Blue Water" on this program.

The organ solo was Yon's "Adagio Plaintive."

New Slogan

Harry Arthur, managing director of West Coast Theatres, has found a new slogan for the Kinema of Los Angeles that ties up directly with its First National product for which it holds a franchise. The slogan is: "Park Your Cares." Below the sign is a frame, 20 x 40, surrounded by gold border, which incloses the title and star of each First National picture playing at the Kinema. The combinations have proved to be an effective medium.

Manager Cobe of the Central, New York City, had a job on his hands when it came to photographing his display for Associated Exhibitor's "Lady Godiva." It had to be done in the "wee sma' hours" before the street was awake, otherwise, the crowds along Broadway, would have been photographed and not the lobby. His decorations were based on one of the scenes from the picture.

Eight real logs, six pine trees, and a cut out of Priscilla Dean holding a canthook borrowed from a local hardware store, were used to make an attractive but inexpensive lobby display by Oscar White, manager of the Rex, Sumter, S. C., for Universal's "Conflict."

After giving this bunch of "Georgia Peaches" the once over, you won't doubt Willard Patterson's word at all when he says that First National's "Smilin' Through" enjoyed a big run at the Metropolitan in Atlanta. With such good looking unsherettes to guide you to a seat, it certainly should have a big run."

OUT IN THE TERRITORY

With Live Exhibitors

The Kaier Grand Opera House, Mahanoy City, Pa., which was destroyed by fire in 1913, is to be rebuilt. New York capitalists are negotiating for the acquisition of the site and plan to erect a big motion picture playhouse there if the deal goes through. While their names are not divulged, managers of the Kaier estate interests declare the New York men have the funds for putting over a big proposition.

George C. Naylor has relinquished the management of the Hippodrome Theatre at Okmulgee, Okla., to become manager of the Southwestern Theatre Company, which operates the Orpheum Theatre. A. Allen Karf, formerly manager of the Newman Twelfth Theatre at Kansas City, will succeed to the management of the Hippodrome Theatre. A. C. King, recent manager of the Orpheum, will become connected with another theatre in Oklahoma in the near future.

B. R. Steven, Philadelphia architect specializing in theatrical work, has started the preparation of plans for the remodeling of the Family Theatre at Mahanoy City, one of the first playhouses in Pennsylvania to show motion pictures in the old days of Herseker and Knoblauch, motion picture pioneers. The Knoblauch estate will lower the theatre level to the first floor and add a balcony seating 1000 persons. Ladies' rest rooms, smoking rooms, a foyer, lobby and other installations are to be provided at a cost of $70,000.

The sum of $60,000 in cold cash was paid at Bethlehem, Pa., for land at Broad and Guetter streets to Aaron Potruch by the New York People's Theatre Co., Truman & Robinson, proprietors, for a playhouse site. L. H. Sobolosky, manager of the Grand Opera House at Bethlehem, stated that the New York People's Theatre Co. is capitalized at $25,000,000, and that it is buying up motion picture theatres as well as desirable sites where playhouses will be erected. Plans are being drawn for a $200,000 theatre, where pictures will be shown at 15 and 20 cents admission.

J. C. (John) Stille, who is well known throughout the northwest territory as a splendid showman, is the new manager of the Columbia Theatre, Seattle. Mr. Stille was former manager of the People's Amusement Company of Portland, having supervision of several houses. Later he was manager of the Kinema Theatre in Salt Lake, and more recently was located in San Francisco. He has been welcomed by many friends in the local territory, where he is popular, and though a poor advertiser when it comes to "24-sheeting," J. C. Stille is right there in the showman's game.

Brieg Brothers, Scranton, Pa., theatre builders who put up the State, Miles and many other playhouses in the Pennsylvania hard coal fields, have been given the contract by the M. E. Comerford Amusement Enterprises, Inc., of Scranton, Pa., to remodel the Comerford house on Main Street, Avoca, Pa. An addition will be constructed on the rear and the entire interior will be altered. All four walls will be reinforced with steel, modern lighting and projection apparatus will be installed and the newly renovated theatre when reopened in September will seat 730 persons.

The Minneapolis Pantages Theatre has undergone extensive repairs costing nearly $50,000. It has been closed during the last six weeks, but was reopened this week. It will feature a Paramount picture weekly, together with its vaudeville program. The changes were under the direction of John J. Cluxton, personal representative of Alexander Pantages. Warren F. Lemon, formerly manager of the Minneapolis State Theatre, is now directing the theatre. Jack Quinlan, former manager, has left for Milwaukee to accept the management of a theatre in the Saxe string of houses.

Eddie Haas, manager of the Midland Theatre, Hutchison, Kan., has just pulled a stunt that wins the crocheted bicycle. It was a quick piece of work on his part. On looking over the morning paper, just prior to starting his run on Penrod, he noticed that two junior High and one senior High had just published their Honor Roll. Straight to the office of the Hutchison Daily News went Eddie, and the editor grabbed it off like he would a life-sized photograph of a living "umph." The party was staged in an elaborate fashion and brought in three good stories, as well as a capacity house at every performance.

The political turmoil over the position as motion picture censor in Kansas City has come to a termination. Henry Goldman, "the man who contributed $200 to the campaign of the newly elected Mayor Frank Cromwell," has been presented with the proverbial bouquet of raspberries and will be succeeded by James J. Larkin. Mr. Larkin's qualifications, as expressed by the Kansas City Star, is that he formerly carried law books to and from the city hall for a well-known political boss. All of which, of course, assures the motion picture producers of a "highly efficient" man to act as judge of their productions.

L. H. Lembert & Son of Rochester, N. Y., prepared the plans for the new $250.000 theatre that the Carbondale Amusement Co. will erect at Carbondale, Pa. L. A. Farrell, manager of the Majestic, owned by the same corporation, will handle the new playhouse, which will be ready October 1. Brieg Brothers of Scranton have already started work on the new structure. It will be 78x150 and four stories in height, built of white stone and gray brick. It will seat 2040 persons. Farrell has announced that the Comerford interests, which own his company, have bought the Olimo Building, at Main Street and Seventh Avenue, and will turn the property into an amusement place..

S. M. Greenbaum of New York and Chicago, representing the People's Theatre Co. of New York City, has paid $15,000 for the site the Capital Theatre Corporation bought at Allentown, Pa., and then gave up the project. The lots are 160x100 and are on Tilghman Street, near Seventh Avenue. Ruhe & Lang, theatre architects, will draw up plans for a house to seat 1250 people and work will be started at once. This corporation, through Mr. Greenbaum, also purchased for $60.000 the Rigel site on Broad Street, between the Kurtz and Lorenz theatres, at Bethlehem, Pa., and Ruhe & Lang will draw plans for a 1250-seat playhouse at the steel city also. The People's Theatre Co. owns some playhouses and will erect others for a chain to show high-grade films at popular prices. Contracts for the Allentown and Bethlehem houses will be let simultaneously.

The Man Under Cover was the title of the picture. It was being shown at the Globe Theatre, Kansas City, recently. The Man Under Cover flashed from the screen and was supplanted by tongues of flame, lapping the drops. Someone yelled "Fire." "Cy" Jacobs, manager, dashed to the stage. There was some confusion. Many patrons rose from their seats. Ushers hurried toward exits. The orchestra launched into "The Stars and Stripes." Many in the audience attempted to reach the doors. Finally they "cooled down" as a small fire in the operator's booth was extinguished. It had been magnified many times on the screen. The orchestra continued playing. All except the bass viol. The owner looked dolefully at his instrument. A fat woman brushed splinters from her dress. In the excitement she had jumped into the orchestra pit. Casualties—one bass viol.

The ordinance at Waco, Texas, creating a censor and regulating the motion picture industry in that city has been declared unconstitutional by Judge R. H. Kingsbury. The case was styles the City of Waco vs. A. Levy, the charge being a violation of city ordinances regulating the picture shows. Judge Kingsbury said that he agreed with much that had been said in the motion to quash the complaint, but that in addition that he could add a few things. In the first place, the ordinance conferred authority to enforce the ordinance upon "the director of public welfare," when, in fact, there was no such officer in the city. The ordinance, he said, was in contravention of every human right and seemingly the ingenuity of its framers was exhausted in the effort to violate every principal of individual freedom in the conduct of business. It attempted to delegate powers that belonged exclusively to the legislative branch of the city government, and he would dismiss the complaint. The ordinance, he said, was plainly unconstitutional and the defendant was discharged.

James A. McGlynn, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., architect, is preparing plans for a $150,000 theatre to be built by Louis Marinos of Luzerne, Pa., at the latter town, located ten miles from the coal center and itself an anthracite-producing center of large population and considerable industrial importance. Marinos has demanded a building 165x50, with seats for 900 persons. It is to have brick, steel and hollow tile walls, with a 13-foot lobby, affording room for a store on each side of the entrance. Overhead will be two apartments. The theatre is to have a stage 12x24 and will be equipped with drop curtains and a proscenium arch. Women's rest rooms will be provided and dressing rooms for road attractions in case Marinos switches from movies to the legitimate. The decorative effects will be especially elaborate and considerable money will be spent to produce them. The heating plant will be located in a separate building from the main theatre. Its name has been discussed but not settled. It is thought the new theatre will be ready for opening about mid-September or thereabouts.

Government Survey for 1920 Shows Theatre Building Reached Peak

By HOWARD McLELLAN

THE average cost of building 426 theatres in 1920 was $95,122. This information is authentic and comes from an advance copy of the U. S. Department of Commerce survey of building operations in 196 representative American cities.

The survey shows two things: the potentiality of the motion picture theatre field and the sections of the country where the demand for first-class theatres was heaviest.

It sets at rest also misguided propaganda sent out by reformers who are always attacking the industry that more amusement places were built in 1920 than schools for the education of the young, inferring that the American nation was being made movie mad and was neglecting its educational institutions.

The survey was made in a year when theatre building was at a peak. Fortunes were being devoted to theatre enterprises in the second year following the great war. In 1921, according to an estimate, the figures of 1920 may be exceeded owing to the demand for smaller theatres.

In non-residential building activities the theatre ranks sixth, as the following table shows:

	Total for 196 cities
Use of buildings	Number of buildings	Cost	Per cent of total cost
Amusement places	426	$ 40,522,240	3.4
Churches	527	17,810,540	1.5
Factories and workshops	5,381	191,682,550	15.9
Garages	93,121	94,713,879	7.9
Gasoline service stations	853	3,668,222	.3
Hospitals	91	20,701,309	1.7
Office buildings	1,102	133,044,360	11.0
Public buildings	191	16,369,420	1.4
Stores and other mercantile buildings	6,737	144,054,972	12.0
Schools	547	50,023,140	4.2
Sheds, stables and barns	13,160	5,274,205	.4
All others	9,253	42,523,381	3.5
Total nonresidential buildings	131,389	760,388,218	63.1

In studying these figures it must be borne in mind that not all of the amusement places are motion picture theatres. It is safe to assume, however, that 90 per cent are devoted to motion pictures. The average cost, however, is based on 426 amusement places costing $40,522,240.

The greatest activity is noted in New York, where 105 theatres were constructed. Baltimore, Md., is next with Cleveland, Ohio, third; Flint, Mich., fourth; Toledo, Ohio, fifth.

WYDEANGLE SCREEN

For High and Long Throws
In Very Wide M. P. Theatres

The Best Pictures Are Seen On Jacobsson Screens

This company long ago, through its policy of service, recognized the necessity of each theatre being equipped with a screen technically suited to the particular conditions existing.

The WYDEANGLE SCREEN is scientifically correct for wide houses with long or high throws, or both. It makes every seat desirable, eliminates eye-strains, its high reflective surface reduces power bills, and it is guaranteed for five years.

The CAILLE Security Ticket Chopper

Recognized as the standard for years

Size 45x12x12 inches
Weight 100 lbs.

Choppers That Chop

The CAILLE SECURITY TICKET CHOPPER actually tears the tickets into shreds, removing all possibility of again smoothing or ironing them out to be used a second time.

The cutting knives and mechanism are so constructed that coins or metal checks will pass right through without injury to machine.

Chopper is also equipped with agitator to force strips of tickets down onto the cutting knives.

In lower compartment, under lock, is large metal box to retain the cuttings.

The choppers are supplied in birch, mahogany or on special request in any other finish desired. Top and feet are of white porcelain enamel. We also manufacture electric ticket choppers and ticket boxes. Be sure that it is a CAILLE

If your supplier does not handle our chopper, write us.

Using Grills in Ventilation

Some Installations in Ceilings Fit in Exactly With General Theatre Design

Some theatre owners in approaching the ventilation problem exhibit some concern as to how they can overcome problems incident to the installation of popular systems of theatre ventilation.

In the installation of the cooling systems one of the most important features to be considered, in order to get the desired results, is the size and location of the grills or openings into the theatres through which the air passes before reaching the audience. No two theatres are constructed exactly alike, therefore the problems of the Typhoon engineering staff are entirely different with regard to the grill work on each theatre job. It is an easy matter, however, to overcome any difficulties which may at first seem impossible to the theatre owner as the system is so constructed that it can readily be installed in any size theatre, old or new.

Installations are usually made on the roof, although if the construction of the theatre does not allow for this arrangement, there are other locations such as the attic space, or in a room above the stage or auditorium. There is still one more location that has in many instances proved very satisfactory, and this one is on the outside wall of the theatre, near the screen.

No matter where the installation is made, it is necessary to construct the grill work, which also must be placed in its proper relation with respect to the audience.

In the accompanying photographs will be seen several different locations of the grills used in connection with the cooling system.

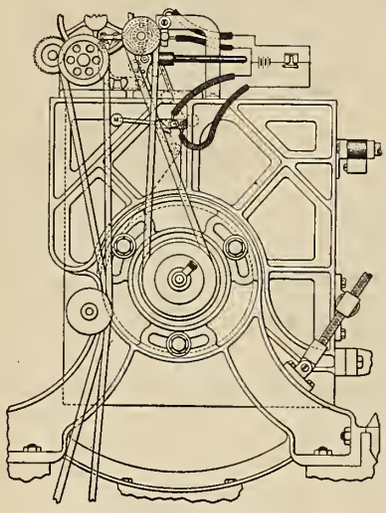
PROJECTION

A New Safety Appliance

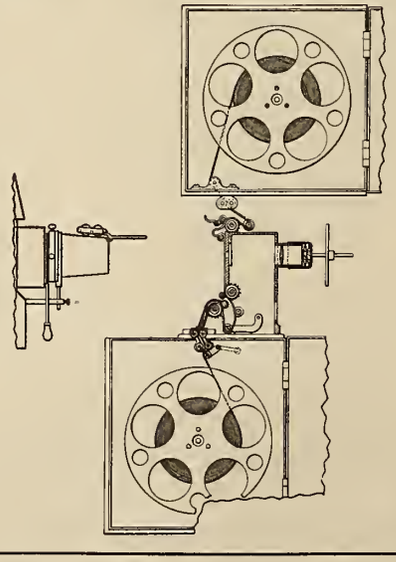
Coda Device Is a Fire Preventive Measure. Just Invented.

By HOWARD McLELLAN

Every projectionist knows from experience how quickly the film catches fire when exposed to a strong light from the lamp of a projection machine. The purpose of the Coda safety appliance is to protect the operator from serious injuries caused from such fire and film gas explosion and also to protect the audience from serious injuries and possible death caused by panic following a scare from film fire in the projection room.



This illustration shows the Coda system installed on the take up



How the arrangement operates on the mechanism and both magazines. How it fits the condenser hood

The Coda safety appliance does not extinguish the fire, but by its instant and automatic action prevents the fire itself. This is its main function.

This device works with the film, that is to say, if the film breaks or fails to take up, or for any reason the sprocket holes in the film are stripped, or if by any chance the film is left exposed in the aperture plate this automatic dowsing device automatically cuts off the light itself instantly, and at the same time the buzzer gives ample warning to the operator.

The roller attachment in the upper magazine similarly acts if the film breaks above the roller and automatically the contact is formed dowsing the light at the end of the reel before the film leaves the upper magazine, thus preventing a white screen.

A push button system is installed where two or more machines are used, and any machine in the booth may be controlled from the machine or advantageous point in the booth, thereby enabling the projectionist to make perfect change-overs or pick-ups without the use of the present dissolving devices now coming on various machines.

The device is simple in construction and operation. It is approved by the Massachusetts Regulations and operators throughout Greater Boston and in many of the best theatres in New England have been using this device for over a year. Many cases have been known where, through the use of the Coda safety appliance, actual life has been saved and many hundreds of dollars' worth of film.

Those Film Patches

War on haphazard and imperfect splicing of film has been declared by the Wisconsin Exhibitors Association. Ways and means to eliminate this evil from the industry will be outlined at the next session of the organization.

"The organization has from time to time been receiving complaints from exhibitors of the State in regard to the deplorable situations brought about by the kind of factory patches used on film," the association announces. "In the last few weeks these complaints have become so numerous that some action in the matter has become necessary. Factory patches on film are causing more trouble to exhibitors than ever before.

"Recently an exhibitor in one of the key centers reported that a new print of a picture came apart fourteen times during a threeday engagement of the picture. This was due entirely to the fact that the splices on the film were so narrow that there was not sufficient cement to hold them together while running through the machine. Perfect splicing should be the rule rather than the exception in new film, and it seems but a small thing to make a perfect splice using a lap of at least one complete sprocket hole, instead of the narrow ones that are in vogue at the present time."

What Is a Theatre Organ?

By T. J. A. Mapp

Mr. T. J. A. Mapp, one of Chicago's leading organists, is writing this series of articles on the Theatre Organ. He has played for six years in some of the leading houses in the country, and his musical accompaniments to the pictures are models of synchronization and artistic taste.

WE are now going to consider the second point referred to in the previous article, viz., the entertainment value of the theatre organ. We may sum this up in the one word "variety." Variety in the tone of pipes and variety in the other effects.

In the following table I give a list of the sets of pipes in the order to their importance in the theatre organ, and I also describe the use of them:

Sets of Pipes	Description
1. Soft Flute	This is to give body to the strings (violins); for soft accompaniments, and played in chords gives soft churchly effects.
2. Violin	Used with soft flute supplies foundation tone of orchestral organ, just as string tone is the foundation of the orchestra.
3. Vox Humana ...	This is one of the most pleasing stops in the organ and more or less imitates the human voice, hence its name. Its appeal is pathetic.
4. Clarinet	The clarinet has various colorings in its different registers, the high notes are brilliant, bold and joyous; the middle notes for smooth and tender melodies, but the low notes are hollow, cold and threatening, and are useful for mysterioso effects.
5. Diapason	This is the foundation tone of the Church organ, and provides a fine contrast to the orchestral tone, and is also a pleasing solo stop.
6. Tuba	The Tuba supplies the brass (cornet and trombone) orchestral tone, and is useful in solo work, being stirring and martial, and good for heroique characters.
7. Violin Celeste ...	This is used with the Violin, and as it is tuned slightly sharp it adds brightness to the string tone, and enhances the orchestral effect.
8. Oboe Horn	This is a pleasing Solo Stop, and although it has no counterpart in the orchestra, it enriches the full orchestral effect.
9. Tibia	This belongs to the Flute family and is really the solo flute of the orchestral organ.
10. Gamba (string)..	Heavy string tone, which is now necessary to add to prevent the string tone from being obliterated in the full orchestral ensemble.
11. Kinura	This is a peculiar novelty stop, sounds like a bee in a bottle, and is most useful in comedy and imitative effects.
12. Trumpet	This supplies the heavy orchestral brass.
13. Orchestral Oboe..	This stop expresses tender grief and pastoral simplicity for shepherd or mountain scenes. A good substitute may be got from the 12th of the Flute with the 8-ft. string.

It will be seen from the above what a variety in tone color there is in the various sets of pipes. Then by combining two or more sets of pipes at the same pitch, or lower or higher pitches, it is possible to get a great variety of tone.

Now we come to these effects which for entertainment value are worth many times their cost, viz., chimes, chrysoglott, or harp, xylophone glockenspiel, marimbaphone, repeating bells, etc. These are the things which make the theatre patrons sit up and take notice, and make the difference between monotony and variety. They brighten up the whole organ and give it more snap. They make it more interesting to play as well as to listen to.

The chimes, with their dignity and noble appeal, are almost magic in effect, while the sweet arpeggios and accompaniments of the harp or chrysoglott add refinement to the musical effect. The brilliant glockenspiel and other bells are used with telling effect in joyous scenes, and used judiciousy will brighten up monotonous parts of the picture. Besides other pleasing uses, the marimbaphones supply just that touch of percussion effect when needed, similar to that of the piano in the orchestra. The xylophone, last but not least, is always used for comedy effects, and gives snap to foxtrots and other comedy music.

NOTE—Readers interested in the theatre organ are invited by Mr. Mapp to call upon him at 339 S. Wabash Avenue, Chicago, where he is to be found daily in concert and demonstrations on the new Smith Unit organ.

Music Every Musician Should Know

Rackoczy March—Liszt

This number was originally a gypsy pie e written by Michael Barna, leader of the gypsies and court violinist to Prince Franz Rackoczy, II, who lived from 1676 to 1735.

This piece has become of national significance and has been for many years a sort of Hungarian Marsellaise. Berlioz set this march in his "Damnation of Faust" and Liszt's version is much the same, being built mostly of the true Rackoczy song, but having also some of Ruzsitka's battle music.

The march is played loud, nearly all through, marked and with as much fire as possible. The real march begins after the first six bars of the introduction, and consists of sixteen-bar period (eight bars repeated), ten measures of episode and fourteen of a somewhat altered period.

Care must be used in shading this number and it must always be played in strict tempo.

Score for "The Four Horsemen"

S. L. Rothafel and his assistants were several weeks preparing the musical score for The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse which was recently shown at the Capitol Theatre, New York. The score was carefully orchestrated and arranged with probably a greater number of individual selections than have ever been put into a score. The myriad details and shifting scenes of the picture required the greatest care in dove-tailing and coordination of themes, a large portion of which consisted of original music. An outstanding feature of the score was the descriptive theme given to each of the Four Horsemen; Conquest, War, Pestilence and Death, which were distinctively individual and were yet so constructed so that they were played simultaneously.

The prelude which introduced the picture was a novel combination of musical and pictorial effect. An original overture, written by William Axt and arranged by the Capitol staff opened the presentation. It pictured the peaceful scene of a French village before the war. While the angelus is ringing, clouds come up rapidly, distant hoof beats are heard faintly at first and then louder and louder as the Four Horsemen charge madly by. The four themes of Conquest, War, Pestilence and Death were introduced one after the other, then minglng together in a crashing climax, followed by the ominous calls of Pestilence and Death.

II—Covering the World

Who's Who With the International News and What Their Stars Have Done

John Bockhorst

Bockhorst is a former studio cameraman, but prefers the excitement of news work. He is a member of the Aero Club of America, and is known to practically every airplane pilot in America. Bockhorst made the first motion pictures to be "shot" from an airplane while looping and tail-spinning. He has had several accidents, but has never been seriously injured. During the army bombing tests upon the old battleship Alabama, Bockhorst flew sixty miles to sea, cramped into an army bomber with his camera and the rather discomfiting knowledge that his only companions other than the pilot were six 200-pound bombs.

Bockhorst is the only "movie" man who ever flew from the Atlantic to the Pacific. He photographed the trans-continental flight of the U. S. Air Mail Pathfinders—making the trip in 29 hours and 10 minutes, actual flying time. In the same airplane with Bockhorst was Captain "Eddie" Rickenbacker, American "Ace of Aces." Flying over the Rocky Mountains, Bockhorst's ship reached an altitude of 22,500 feet, with the temperature 14 degrees below zero. A series of very extraordinary pictures was the result of this remarkable trip.

Bockhorst on Duty

U. K. Whipple

U. K. Whipple is one of the all-around star men of the International. He entered the game as a cameraman for the Universal Animated Weekly and later joined the International. He went abroad with President Wilson in 1918, photographed Wilson in Paris, and "covered" the Versailles Peace Conference. With William Hearfield, another International man, he accompanied Woodrow Wilson on his triumphal tour of Europe and returned with him. Whipple also accompanied Albert, King of the Belgians, on that monarch's tour of America. He was constantly with the King and became very friendly with him and with the Queen and young Prince Leopold. King Albert decorated Whipple before leaving to return to Belgium.

Hearfield is a former newspaper photographer, but he boasts ten years in the "movie" game. He "covered" the Pancho Villa raid on Columbus, New Mexico, and has many famous "beats" to his credit. It was Hearfield who gave International its famous "beat" on the arrival of President Wilson in France for the Peace Conference.

John A. Bockhorst is the "Flying Cameraman." He has more flying hours credited to his record than most aviators. Bockhorst specializes in aerial photography and has been responsible for all of the many remarkable air pictures that International has featured for the past several years. It was Bockhorst who discovered Lieutenant Locklear, the famous "stunt" pilot.

The Voice of the Box Office

How the Latest Releases Are Being Received Throughout the Country

ALBANY

LELAND

"THE FOUR HORSEMEN OF THE APOCALYPSE," All Star (Metro). Running for the entire week, this picture made more money for the house than anything shown in months. The place was packed every afternoon and evening. Aside from the feature a news reel made up the program.

CLINTON SQUARE

"MY OLD KENTUCKY HOME," All Star (American Releasing). This picture, while it made money for the theatre, did not attract as well as "A Fool's Paradise," the preceding week. Learning that many patrons were confusing the title with "In Old Kentucky," management went to considerable expense in explaining through newspapers and other mediums that the two pictures were not identical. The confusion in titles resulted in some loss in patronage.

MARK STRAND

"FAIR LADY." The fact that an Albany actress played an important role in this picture no doubt attracted more dollars than the picture itself, which pleased only moderately. No extra exploitation. Ran for three days. The last three days given over to "Is Matrimony a Failure?" but did only the usual business.

ALLENTOWN, PA.

COLONIAL

"MORAN OF THE LADY LETTY," Dorothy Dalton and Rudolph Valentino (Paramount) unusually successful, with attendance far past average. Played up as sea story and featured as a real yarn of the ocean. Advertising all centered on thrills of picture, together with all-star cast.

RIALTO

"THREE LIVE GHOSTS," Anna Q. Nillson (Paramount).—Good angle of exploitation essayed by playing up fact that picture was no feature for people to see who had cracked lips or broken ribs brought in large audiences for most shows.

STRAND

"FOOLISH WIVES," Eric Von Stroheim (Universal) went whole week without interest flagging.

ATLANTA, GA.

HOWARD

"IS MATRIMONY A FAILURE?" All Star Cast (Paramount). People liked it immensely and business built up steadily all week. Despite downpouring rain the first of the week, business for the week was especially good.

Exploitation.—Management used a clever lobby display for a week previous to the showing, consisting of tiny church made of beaver-board and having lights shine through the colored glass representing stained glass windows. Kewpie dolls dressed for the occasion represented the minister and wedding party on the church steps. Very effective.

Short subjects.—"The Bashful Suitor," Triart, and Selznick News.

METROPOLITAN

"SMILIN' THROUGH," Norma Talmadge (First National). Necessary to hold it over another week. People were delighted with star and story and despite inclement weather business was exceptionally good.

Exploitation.—Transformed lobby into English garden with high brick wall effect and iron gate exact copy of the gate which plays a prominent part in the picture. Vines and flowers were fastened to it and the ushers were charming in trim bodices, hoop skirts and low necked blouses.

Short Subjects.—Mermaid comedy, "Step This Way" and Kinograms.

Presentation.—Director Dave Love had arranged a musical theme for the picture which combined "Smilin' Through," Those Endearing Young Charms" and "Then You'll Remember Me." During the pathetic death scene of Monyeen, a sweet soprano voice behind the scenes took up the words of "Smilin' Through" which was a final note of beauty and effectiveness.

CRITERION

"THE RIGHT THAT FAILED," Bert Lytell (Metro). Business was fair for the week. Picture seemed to please but did not draw very well.

Short Subjects.—Buster Keaton in "The Paleface," Kinograms and news events.

STRAND

"TRAVELIN' ON," William S. Hart (Paramount). Chained them out. Kind of picture the Strand patrons like the best and the kind of role they want to see their hero in. Business was wonderful and about doubled the receipts for the last few weeks.

Short Subjects.—Lloyd Hamilton in "April Fool."

Exploitation.—Had a uniphone playing popular airs travel over town and in front of the theater. Also had a rider bedecked like a circus cowboy ride a spotted horse that looked a great deal like the one in the picture. Man carried placards "I'm Travelin' On" to the Strand to see William S. Hart."

GRAND

FIRST HALF

"MARRY THE POOR GIRL," Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven (Associated Exhibitors). People liked it very well and business was very good.

Short Subjects.—Star Comedy, "Taking Chances," Chester Outing, Fox News and Educational Comedy, "Water Works Wonders."

LAST HALF

"GUILE OF WOMEN," Will Rogers (Goldwyn). Seemed to please but star doesn't seem to be such a big drawing card. Plenty of laughs.

Short Subjects.—Goldwyn Graphic, Fox News, Century Comedy, "Cheerful Credit" and Fox's Mutt and Jeff.

TUDOR

"THE MAN WHO MARRIED HIS OWN WIFE," Frank Mayo (Universal). Monday and Tuesday pleased better than any of his pictures lately except "Tracked to Earth."

Short Subjects.—International News and Star Comedy, "Society Sailors."

"THE FORGOTTEN WOMAN," Pauline Starke (Southern States). Wednesday and Thursday. Pleased but nothing phenomenal.

Short Subjects.—Gaiety comedy, "Wild and Willy."

"O'MALLEY OF THE MOUNTED," William S. Hart (Paramount). Friday and Saturday. Return engagement, and theater practically full during engagement.

Short Subjects.—International News.

RIALTO

"THE BRIDE'S PLAY," Marion Davies (Famous). Average business. Star has not established a real box office value yet and her pictures are sometimes considered a little light with their fairy-tale sequences. But they are generally pleasing.

Short Subjects.—The fourth of "The Leather Pushers" and International News.

BUFFALO

SHEA'S HIPPODROME

"THE WALL FLOWER," Colleen Moore (Goldwyn). While the crowds really came to see Chaplin in "Pay Day," the audiences were greatly pleased with this very fine box office attraction. Mr. Franklin changed his bill the last half of the week, putting in "The Woman's Side," Katherine MacDonald (First National). Business on the week was very fair, considering the arrival of the season's first warm weather.

Exploitation.—Extensive newspaper publicity, lobby display, electric signs on top of marque, window cards.

Short Subjects.—Charlie Chaplin, in "Pay Day," Hippodrome Review and Pathe hand colored scenic.

MARK-STRAND

"THE SEVENTH DAY," Richard Barthelmess (First National). Dick put over a fine bit of work in "Tol'able David," and Strand patrons came to see an equally fine offering in "The Seventh Day." They were disappointed, however, and business was just about average.

"ISLAND WIVES," Corinne Griffith (Vitagraph). This attraction was put on for the last half of the week and proved a box office feature. The women like Miss Griffith and her gowns. Business was good.

Exploitation. — Newspaper advertising, lobby display and window cards.

Short Subjects.—First half, Hallroom Boys in "Taking Chances," "Old England and New," a scenic and Kinograms; last half, "A Terrible Knight," Christie comedy, Screen Snapshots and Kinograms.

LAFAYETTE SQUARE

"GAS, OIL AND WATER," Charles Ray (First National). Charlie Ray's popularity was the only thing that brought them in on this one. The story did not enthuse patrons. Business was good.

Exploitation.— Newspaper advertising, big electric display on front of building, window cards.

Short Subjects.—"Snub" Pollard comedy and Fox News.

LOEW'S STATE

"FASCINATION," Mae Murray (Metro). This picture broke all attendance records at this house during the week. Patrons like this type of picture and showed their appreciation at the box office.

Exploitation. — Management got out some of the best advertising this house has ever produced, and in addition to the newspapers used window cards, billboards and lobby displays.

Short Subjects.—Lige Conley, in "Step This Way," Mutt and Jeff cartoon and Pathe News.

PALACE

"GYPSY PASSION," All Star Cast (Vitagraph). In spite of the general excellence of this production the coming of warm weather put a crimp in business.

"RIP VAN WINKLE," Thomas Jefferson. This picture was put on the last half of the week in response of the Women's City Club. The club boosted the picture and had matrons in the house to chaperon the children each afternoon. The business was fair.

KEITH'S

"SKY HIGH," Tom Mix (Fox). Patrons of this downtown house, like their westerns. Turned them away on the opening day of this offering.

SHEA'S NORTH PARK

"THE WALL FLOWER," Colleen Moore (Goldwyn). This feature greatly pleased the audiences of this house and the figures at the box office were very fair considering the warm weather.

CHICAGO

ROSE

"GAS, OIL AND WATER," Charles Ray (First National). Plenty of action and sure to please. Excellent patronage.

CHICAGO

"ONE CLEAR CALL," Claire Windsor (First National). A dramatic story developed into a splendid production. Business was very good.

ROOSEVELT

"YELLOW MEN AND GOLD," Richard Dix-Helene Chadwick (Goldwyn). An adventure tale that holds the interest. The added feature of Will Rogers in person helped swell the attendance figures.

ZIEGFELD

"THE RIGHT WAY," Vivienne Osborne (Commonwealth). An interesting story well handled. Business was fair.

STATE-LAKE

"THROUGH A GLASS WINDOW," May McAvoy (Paramount). A pleasing little drama well acted and directed. Business was good.

CLEVELAND

STILLMAN

"SMILIN' THROUGH," Norma Talmadge (First National). This picture was accorded a splendid reception and lived up to all the advertising on same claimed for it.

Exploitation.—Advanced screening for various civic organizations; street car cards, window displays and billboard advertising. An attractive lobby display was also instrumental in attracting business, but one of the outstanding feats was the manner of attaching cardboard shields on all the trolley poles which read "Let's Go Smilin' Through 1922."

A local vocalist was engaged to sing with the picture, at the opening of each performance. It will be retained for another week at least.

STATE

"THE BACHELOR DADDY," Thomas Meighan" (Paramount). Meighan, who is a favorite in Cleveland, was well patronized at the State, where aside from the Sherwood Band and various other musical novelties were featured. A candy-making exhibit was also one of the attractions.

Short Subjects.—Pathe News, Mutt and Jeff Cartoon, Topics of the Day and a comedy.

STANDARD

"THE MAN WHO MARRIED HIS OWN WIFE," Frank Mayo (Universal). This Mayo attraction did not do as well as his former attractions, but it was through no fault of the management.

PARK AND MALL

"SEEING'S BELIEVING," Viola Dana (Metro). This picture was featured for three days and Back Pay was shown during the last half of the week.

COLUMBIA, S. C.

LESTER'S RIVOLI

"THE GOLDEN GALLOWS," Miss DuPont (Universal).—Played to very acceptable business and is a pleasing production.

KANSAS CITY

LIBERTY

"THE GOOD PROVIDER," Special cast (Paramount). An excellent week's business. One of the best drawing cards in several weeks.

Short Subjects.—"Aesop's Fables," comedy, and Pathe News, current events.

Exploitation.—"Mothers' Week" was featured in conjunction with the picture, which was played up as a production for patient parents and impatient children. Large three column by half page, depicting father and mother, son and daughter, was played up in newspaper space. Also billboard and lobby display space.

DORIC

"PARDON MY FRENCH," Vivian Martin (Goldwyn). This one did only a fair week's business. Competition was strong and weather warm.

Short Subjects.—"In the Movies," Snub Pollard, comedy, and International News, current events.

Exploitation.—The name of Vivian Martin and the fact that the production is from the farce comedy, "Polly in the Pantry," was played up in newspaper, billboard and lobby display space.

NEWMAN

"TURN TO THE RIGHT," Special cast (Metro).—An extensive advertising campaign put this one over great. Good week's attendance.

Current Events.—Newman News and Views.

Exploitation.—Card board signs, cut in the shape of index fingers, bearing the words, "Turn to the Right," were placed at the entrance of driveways to motor car filling stations, and at various other locations about the city. The line, "A 'Peachy' Picture About Peaches," was used extensively in newspaper space. Also billboard and lobby display space.

ROYAL

"SMILIN' THROUGH," Norma Talmadge (First National). Despite the fact that this was a return engagement, the attendance was good all week.

Current Events.—Royal Screen Magazine.

Exploitation.—The most vital factor in the advertising of this picture hinged upon the line, "Establishing a precedent! For the first time in its history—and the Royal is nearly eight years old—a picture is being brought back for a return engagement."

TWELFTH STREET

"FOOTFALLS," Special Cast (Fox). This one did an average business for a week's run.

Short Subjects.—Torchy comedy and Screen Magazine, current events.

Exploitation. — The letters spelling "Footfalls," in large black-face type, and arranged in the formation of blocks, forming stairs, with the feet of men and women visible, were featured in newspaper space, at the bottom of which was a large question mark.

LOS ANGELES

MILLERS

"THE SILENT CALL," Special Cast (First National). Closed after showing 14 weeks which totaled 99 days and registered over 250,000 paid admissions. It played to 792 performances and the only trouble with a picture like that, management said, was there were so few of them. It has broken all records in Los Angeles for long runs and has proven a revelation to exhibitor and director alike. Comedy on bill, "Schooldays."

CALIFORNIA

"HIS BACK AGAINST THE WALL," Raymond Hatton (Goldwyn). Went over fairly well. Added feature, "Bali, the Unknown." Best travel story shown in Los Angeles for some time. House was only fairly well patronized.

Short Subjects.—Carli D. Elinor's popular daily concert, California, Topical Review and Magazine, Topics of the Day.

KINEMA

"SMILIN' THROUGH," Norma Talmadge (First National). In the second week, and will be held over for the third week. Has received a wealth of news space.

HIPPODROME

"THE CLOSED ROAD," House Peters. Usual advertisement and a good audience picture. Feature given preference over vaudeville bill in adv. space.

PANTAGES

"MARRY THE POOR GIRL" and "HIGH AND DIZZY." The former Mr. and Mrs. Carter DeHaven (Pathe). Very good audience picture. The latter, Harold Lloyd (Pathe), a reissue. Lloyd's name a drawing card. No exploitation used.

CLUNE'S BROADWAY

"SILENT YEARS," All Star Cast, (R-C.). Also "BRIDE AND GROOM," Harold Lloyd (Pathe). The theatre played to an excellent box office in spite of the extreme heat part of the week and heavy fog the first of the week. Usual weekly advertising was used and no exploitation.

GRAUMAN'S

"THE BACHELOR DADDY," Thomas Meighan (Paramount). Went over big, very well criticized with numerous news stories. Management does not believe in billboard advertising. Pictures are unexploited except for the daily newspaper space.

Short Subjects.—Pathe Weekly, Grauman's Symphony Orchestra, atmospheric prologue.

GRAUMAN'S RIALTO

"BEYOND THE ROCKS," Gloria Swanson (Paramount). In the second week, receipts fell off slightly over the first week, but considered good business. No billboards, usual weekly advertising and no exploitation.

LOEW'S STATE

"FASCINATION," Mae Murray (Metro). In the second week, a little drop over the first weeks run, but still very good business; above the average. The picture was widely exploited with added advertising space and 35 window tieups and plenty of news space. No billboards.

TALLY'S BROADWAY

"TOO MUCH BUSINESS," All Star (Vitagraph). It marked the twelfth anniversary of the Tally Theatre and announcement was given plenty of space in the dailies. The picture was very well received. Daily advertising doubled, no exploitation.

SUPERBA

"A WONDERFUL WIFE," Miss Dupont (Universal). This is the sixth picture in which Miss Dupont has starred and it has drawn better than any of the former releases. The "Leather Pushers" was an added attraction on the bill.

SYMPHONY

"THE FIGHTING STREAK," Tom Mix (Fox).—Business good. Usual advertising and no exploitation.

MISSION THEATRE

"ORPHANS OF THE STORM," the Gish Sisters (United Artists). Run five weeks and dropped very little over the first week. Considered very good business.

MILWAUKEE

ALHAMBRA

"ORPHANS OF THE STORM," Lillian and Dorothy Gish (United Artists).—Excellent business. Film ran two weeks to crowded houses at popular price.

Exploitation. — Newspaper publicity, street car and billboard and lobby advertising displays.

BUTTERFLY

"FAIR LADY," Betty Blythe (Famous). —Good business. Newspaper criticisms unanimously favorable.

Exploitation. — Lobby display, newspaper, street car advertising.

Short Subjects.—Century comedy, Fox News reels.

MERRILL

"OUR MUTUAL FRIEND," All Star Cast.—Fair business. Picture was presented under the patronage of the Milwaukee Teachers' Association and the Parent-Teachers' Council.

Exploitation.—A local newspaper gave prizes for the best essays on the works of Dickens; special lobby display; newspaper advertising and street car posters.

Short Subjects. — "The Creation," a short Biblical film; International News Reels and first showing of the Kentucky Derby races.

GARDEN

"HER OWN MONEY," Ethel Clayton (Paramount). Good business. Miss Clayton has many fans in this section of the country, and her films can always be depended upon to draw.

Exploitation. — Lobby display, newspaper advertising.

Short Subjects.—Christie comedy, "Cold Feet" and Garden News reels.

SAXE'S RIALTO

"GLASS HOUSES," Viola Dana (Metro). Very good business. Viola Dana, the star, and the story itself received unanimous commendation from newspaper criticisms and audiences alike. Everybody liked it.

Short Subjects.—A two-act comedy starring Al St. John; Selznick News reels and fashion hints.

SAXE'S STRAND

"THE SEVENTH DAY," Richard Barthelmess (First National). Good business. Dick Barthelmess has many admirers in Milwaukee, and Louise Huff, whom we have not seen for some time here, received a cordial welcome back.

Short Subjects.—"Buster" Keaton in "Cops;" First National Kinograms and Sketchograms.

MINNEAPOLIS

STATE

"MORAN OF THE LADY LETTY," Dorothy Dalton and Rudolph Valentino (Paramount.) Valentino's popularity was noticeable in the heavy attendance. Stirring action of picture pleased the audiences.

Short Subjects.—A Johnny Hines comedy, the State Digest and special numbers by Pallma's Band Supreme.

NEW GARRICK

"TURN TO THE RIGHT," Alice Terry (Metro). The picture was fairly well attended. The stage play of the same name was here recently and this undoubtedly affected the attendance. It pleased.

BLUE MOUSE

"BEYOND THE RAINBOW," Harry Morey (R-C Pictures). The attendance was excellent. The audiences were taken with the picture and many favorable comments were heard.

NEW STRAND

"THE BARNSTORMER," Charles Ray (First National).—Considered not up to the average of Ray's pictures. It held up well during the first part of the week, but attendance slumped somewhat toward the last.

NEW ASTER

"THE SCRAPPER," Herbert Rawlinson (Universal). It drew fairly well. This type of picture always draws well with the fans. However, Rawlinson has not been seen here for some time and this had something to do in keeping down attendance.

NEW HENNEPIN

"TILLIE," Helen R. Martin (Realart). This picture went over well. It created much favorable comment and, with a strong vaudeville bill, made up a good program.

NORFOLK, VA.

WELLS

"POLLY OF THE FOLLIES," Constance Talmadge (First National).—A whole week to very good business, but rather disappointing to Talmadge fans.

GRANBY

"MOLLY O," Mabel Normand (First National).—A whole week to capacity business. A sure box office bet.

STRAND

"RECKLESS YOUTH," Elaine Hammerstein (Select).—Fair business in the face of strong opposition.

OKLAHOMA CITY

CAPITOL

"SCHOOL DAYS," Wesley Barry (Warner Bros.). This picture ran the entire week with packed house at all times. According to the management, it proved itself one of the best moneymakers in a long time. The picture was heavily exploited by newspaper advertising and cutouts used in many stores throughout the city. Billboard and street car also advertised extensively.

Short Subjects.—"Leather Pushers," "Round Three," Capitol News and Kinograms.

CRITERION

"MOLLY O," Mabel Normand (First National). Audience and newspaper criticisms unanimous in their approval of the picture. Splendid houses prevailed all week.

"MOTHER O' MINE," Lloyd Hughes and Betty Blythe (Associated Producers). A well-balanced bill and pleased large audiences prevailed.

EMPRESS

"THE SONG OF LIFE," Gaston Glass and Grace Darmond (First National). The picture enjoyed, pleased large business.

Short Subjects.—"The Skipper's Policy," Pathe News.

"GAY AND DEVILISH," Doris May (First National). The picture enjoyed splendid pleased business for second half of the week.

BROADWAY

"THE CONFESSION," Henry Walthal (National Film Corp). The picture enjoyed pleased good business.

"THE MYSTERIOUS RIDER," Robert McKim and Claire Adams. Drew good houses for last half of the week.

NEW FOLLY

"BUCKING THE TIGER," Conway Tearle (Selznick). The picture enjoyed, pleased good business.

"THE CALL OF HOME," Special Cast (Robertson-Cole). Fine picture and business.

"THE NIGHT ROSE," Special Cast (Goldwyn). Very good audiences, picture pleased. No exploitation and average advertising.

RIALTO

"THE BROADWAY PEACOCK," Pearl White (Fox). Only a fair return. The picture was put on with the average amount of advertising.

Short Subjects. — Sunshine comedy, "Pardon Me," Mutt and Jeff in Fast Freight, Fox News and Views.

PHILADELPHIA

STANLEY

"BEYOND THE ROCKS," Gloria Swanson and Rudolph Valentino (Paramount). The drawing power of these stars is tremendous, and the picture drew such big houses that it was held over for the second week.

Short Subjects. — "Out of the Inkwell" cartoon, Bruce scenic, "My Country," and Pathe News.

KARLTON

"ACROSS THE CONTINENT," Wallace Reid (Paramount). Drew well all week, with increasing business the last three days.

Short Subjects.—Mack Sennett comedy, "Gymnasium Jim" scene, "Cataracting Niagara," and Pathe News.

ARCADIA

"MIDNIGHT," Constance Binney (Realart). Picture drew good houses considering strong counter attractions in the immediate vicinity.

Short Subjects.—Monty Banks comedy, "Please Remit," Pathe News and Movie Chats.

VICTORIA

"MAN TO MAN," Harry Carey (Universal). Title well put across with lobby displays and satisfactory business all week.

Short Subjects.—Mack Sennett comedy, "Gymnasium Jim," Pathe News and scenic, "Automotive Power."

CAPITAL

"BACK PAY," Matt Moore and Seena Owen (Paramount). It was well advertised as a picture of merit, and enjoyed good patronage throughout the week.

Short Subjects.—Christie comedy, "Fair Enough," Kinograms, and scenic, "Away Dull Care."

REGENT

"I CAN EXPLAIN," Gareth Hughes (Metro). Did not do so well, and story was not, it appeared, to the general liking of the patrons.

Short Subjects.—Mutt and Jeff cartoon, "Hop, Skip and Jump," one reel; Harold Lloyd, "Follow the Crowd," and Pathe News.

STANTON

"ORPHANS OF THE STORM," Lillian and Dorothy Gish (United Artists). Run for the first time in the city at popular prices, it did very well. Being held over indefinitely. Fox News also shown.

ST. LOUIS, MO.

Note—It must be understood that owing to the musicians walking out in the theatres here that none of these houses have music.

MISSOURI

"BEYOND THE ROCKS," Gloria Swanson and Rudolph Valentino (Paramount). Attendance was very good. Despite various papers panning the picture some of the matinées and nights registered well.

Short Subjects.—News and Views, Short comedy, Topics.

Exploitation.—The Missouri advertising representative played up four things big. The two stars, the fact that it was an Elinor Glyn story and the gorgeous gowns worn by Miss Swanson. Copy was increased and the two stars and Miss Glyn's name held the majority of space.

NEW GRAND CENTRAL

"THE PRIMITIVE LOVER," Constance Talmadge (First National.) Connie never fails to draw in this city; very good attendance all week. Local papers gave praise to the picture.

Short Subjects.—A short subject, "How to Grow Thin." As a short subject this is one of the best ever. News and Views, Topics and Johnny Hines in "Torchy's Ghost."

Exploitation.—An increase in space. "How to Grow Thin" subject given equal space as feature during the week in local paper advertising. A teaser read, "All ladies weighing over two hundred pounds admitted Free to Matinées to see 'How to Grow Thin.'"

WEST END LYRIC

"GAS, OIL AND WATER," Charles Ray (First National). Night attendance very good during the engagement. Ray popular here.

Short Subjects.—Ben Turpin in "Step Forward." News and Views and Topics.

Exploitation.—Increase in space. Turpin's offering played up almost as large as feature in advertising copy.

ST. PAUL

CAPITOL

"POLLY OF THE FOLLIES," Constance Talmadge (First National). Pronounced by patrons as one of, if not the best picture Miss Talmadge ever appeared in. They were delighted with the attraction and a full house was the result throughout the week.

Short Subjects.—A Johnny Hines comedy, Capitol Digest, vocal solo and a special orchestral program.

NEW GARRICK

"TURN TO THE RIGHT," Alice Terry (Metro). Did a good business and packed them in at times during the week. Part of the attendance was undoubtedly due to clever advertising, which took advantage of the recent appearance of the stage play of the same name.

TOWER

"BACK PAY," Seena Owen (Paramount). Attendance was up to the average. While the picture was not considered as good as some of the stories from the pen of Fannie Hurst that have been screened, it went over well with the majority of the patrons.

NEW ASTOR

"THE BARNSTORMER," Charles Ray (First National). The picture was a fair success during its week's stay.

STRAND

"PENROD," Wesley Barry (First National). Heavy attendance during the week. It went over well.

SEATTLE, WASH.

STRAND

"IS MATRIMONY A FAILURE?" All star (Paramount). Booked for four days, held over week by popular demand.

Exploitation.—Newspaper advertising, billboards, window cards and lobby display.

Short subjects. — "Campbell of the Mounted," Irving Cummings. "Nights of Many Shadows," Bruce Scenic, Kinograms.

COLISEUM

"THE SEVENTH DAY," Richard Barthelmess (First National). Audiences well sustained throughout engagement.

Exploitation.—Billboards, window cards, regular newspaper space and lobby trim.

Short Subjects.—"Toonerville Trolley," Sunset-Burrud Scenic, Pathe News, Kinograms.

COLUMBIA

"THE MAN UNDER COVER," Herbert Rawlinson (Universal). Patronage better than average.

Exploitation. — Newspaper advertising, interest heightened by announcement that "crook" feature was written by life-termer. Lobby display with cutouts in blue velvet frames.

Short Subjects.—"Cheerful Credit" Century comedy starring Brownie Dog. International news.

WINTER GARDEN

"WOMAN, WAKE UP!" Florence Vidor (Associated Exchanges). Fair business.

Exploitation.—Regular newspaper space, lobby display.

LIBERTY

First Half—"THE CRIMSON CHALLENGE," Dorothy Dalton (Paramount). Good business. Star has nice following here.

Exploitation. — Newspaper, billboards, window cards and lobby display with stills of star.

Short Subject.—"Bright Eyes," Ben Turpin. Liberty news.

Last half: "The Devil's Pawn," Pola Negri. Good business.

Exploitation.—Billboards, newspaper and lobby cards.

Short Subjects.—"Torchy's Frame Up," Starring Johnny Hines. "Trapping the Weasel," a Bill and Bob adventure, Liberty News.

BLUE MOUSE

"THE FOUR HORSEMEN OF THE APOCALYPSE," Rodolf Valentino (Metro). Excellent business. Third popular engagement at same house.

Exploitation.—Newspaper advertising, lobby display and original musical score.

PALACE HIP

"AT THE STAGE DOOR," Billie Dove. Splendid business. Very well received.

FOR THE EXHIBITORS BOX-OFFICE

EDITED BY GEORGE T. PARDY

The Angel of Crooked Street

Albert E. Smith Production Released by Vitagraph. Story by Harry Dittmar. Scenario by C. Graham Baker. Cameraman, Steve Smith. Directed by David Smith. Length, 5,280 Feet.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Jennie Marsh, Alice Calhoun; Schuyler Sanford, Ralph McCullough; "Silent" McKay, Scott McKee; Thurston, Rex Hammel; "Cap" Berry, William McCall; "Mother" DeVere, Nellie Anderson; Mrs. Sanford, Martha Mattox; Mrs. Marsh, Mary H. Young; Stoneham, George Stanley; Dan Bolton, Walter Cooper.

To support an invalid mother Jennie Marsh worked as maid in Mrs. Sanford's house. While at a dance one evening she met a young man by the name of Bolton, who escorted her home. When the girl went in at a call from Mrs. Sanford Bolton made a haul from the house. And when she returned Bolton gave her a piece of jewelry to keep. Later Mrs. Sanford discovered the robbery, and detectives found this piece in Jennie's room. She was sent to the reformatory. While there her mother died. After her release she went to live with "Mother" DeVere, whose guests were more or less inclined to keep out of sight of the police. Jennie resolved to get vengeance upon the woman who had unjustly treated her and plotted with the crooks to frame up Schuyler Sanford, her son. However she soon fell in love with the young man and was unable to go through with her plans. The boy's mother comes in and realizes that she has done Jennie a terrible wrong and consents to their marriage.

In this picture, The Angel of Crooked Street, which features Alice Calhoun, there is enough sympathetic appeal to win over an audience which is easily moved. But the same people will want to know why an attempt was never made to locate the man who committed the crime. The story follows the life of a girl who has unjustly been sent to prison and upon her release seeks vengeance upon her accuser. This furnishes a theme that is by no means new, but generally one that has proven satisfactory.

Points of Appeal. — The fact that the girl is absolutely innocent of the crime for which she has been sent away provides the greatest amount of pathos throughout the entire picture. With this fact in mind the ensuing happenings seems to gain force and are able to carry. The scenes at "Mother" DeVere's are also entertaining.

Cast. — Alice Calhoun does the role of Jennie Marsh with feeling. She has very good support from the other leading characters in the story.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—The interior sets are appropriate and the few exteriors good. The lighting is well taken care of and continuity of the story easily followed. Direction O. K.

The Men of Zanzibar

Released by Fox. Story by Richard Harding Davis. Scenario by Ed. J. Le Saint. Cameraman, David Ables. Directed by Rowland V. Lee. Length 4999 Feet.

Hugh Hemingway, William Russell; Polly Adair, Ruth Renick; George Sheyer, Claude Peyton; Wilbur Harris, Harvey Clarke; Arthur Fearing, Arthur Morrison; Sir George Firth, Michael Dark; Lady Firth, Lila Leslie.

Wilbur Harris, the American Consul in Zanzibar, receives a letter from a detective agency in America advising him to be on the alert for Brownell, cashier of a Boston exporting company, who is believed to be headed that way. Hugh Hemingway of Boston, who answers the description of the defaulter, arrives about this time. He is attracted by Polly, the Consul's secretary. The Consul believes Hemingway is really Brownell, but notes another man at the hotel who also fits the description and registers as "George Sheyer." Hemingway searches Sheyer's room and takes a package. At the same time Sheyer is in Hemingway's room on a similar errand. He finds nothing. Sheyer discovers his package is gone. Hemingway sees that Polly favors Fearing, who is a regular visitor at the Consulate. He decides to leave Zanzibar. While Hemingway is at the Consulate, Sheyer, who claims to be a detective representing the agency in America, comes in. Hemingway confesses to the theft. Fearing states that Hemingway is doing this as a subterfuge, and confesses to the embezzlement himself. Hemingway shows Fearing the package from Sheyer's room and snaps the handcuffs on Sheyer's wrists. He then tells Fearing if he returns the money there will be no prosecution. Upon learning that Polly is only Fearing's sister, Hemingway tells her of his love.

The Men of Zanzibar is taken from the story by Richard Harding Davis and makes a slightly tepid adventurous picture. It generally pleases as it goes along and at times creates a fine suspense. There are, however, no particularly big moments. Its greatest appeal will be through the mysterious touch that predominates. It has a sprinkling of humor that hovers betwixt farce and burlesque in the character of the American Consul. The necessary love theme that materializes in the final clinch and a little extra action keep the story moving.

Points of Appeal. — The suspicions that are made to reflect directly on a great many members of the cast succeed in raising the question as to who the real crook might be. This has been well concealed until the final scenes and serves to stimulate the interest.

Cast. — William Russell does well with the material he is given as Hugh Heminway. He has been seen to better advantage and in more likeable roles in previous pictures. Other characters give adequate support.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—Clear interiors and exteriors are usually well lighted. The effect is rather poor occasionally, caused perhaps by the apparent "faked" settings. At most times, though, the continuity and direction are both good.

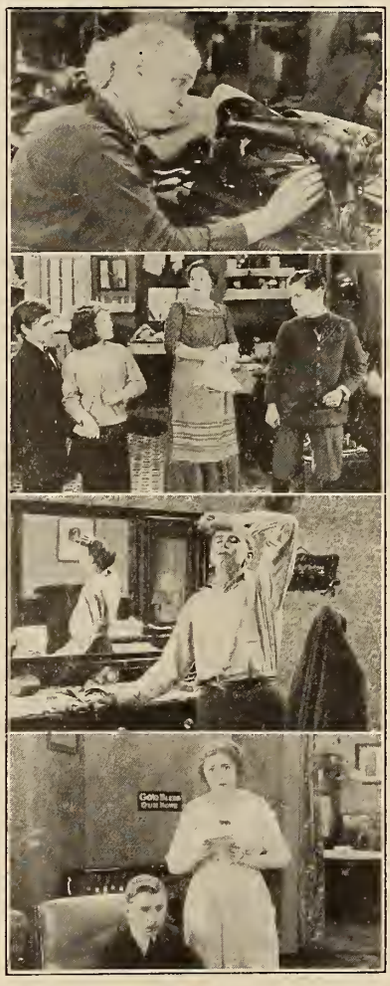
CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Anna Webb, Mary Carr; John Webb, Lynn Hammond; John Webb, Jr., Percy Helton; Harry, Joseph Striker; Ruth, Jane Thomas; George Mills, Roy Gordon; Uncle Andrews, Claude Brook; bank president, Roger Lytton; Jerry Gibbs, Eruest Hilliard.

John and Anna Webb are the parents of three children, John, Harry and Ruth. Through an invention of the father and the executive ability and business foresight of the mother the family acquires wealth. The father dies and the mother continues the business. The older son, Harry, is lazy, a spendthrift, a social climber and thoroughly selfish. In the factory he enters the cage of John, the cashier, and abstracts cash. He forges his mother's name for a large sum of money, and it is in making good the money in order to stop prosecution of the son that the mother is bankrupted. Harry has departed leaving no address. In the meantime Harry has objected so strongly to the marriage of Ruth to a worthy young man that the daughter has left home, married, and gone to a distant city. John, unwilling to tell the truth as to his brother's thefts, leaves home under a cloud and joins his sister. The mother, reduced to poverty, is taken ill in the street, and the story of her downfall makes a page in a Sunday newspaper. John and Ruth, in the West, read the story and come home to find their mother. Harry, an outcast, is discovered by his brother and is restored to his mother and his family. The group leave New York and go to Kansas City.



Here is another story of a mother and a wayward son, one whose waywardness the overindulgent mother is directly responsible for. It is a story of an everyday family, one that starts on small beginnings. reaches affluence, and then through the misdeeds, the crimes of the older son and the extravagance into which the mother has been led by her "pet," is brought to absolute ruin. There is a daughter and a younger son, who, by reason of the intolerable dominance of the older son, are compelled to leave home. They remove to a distant city and "on their own" prosper in a moderate way—and they are happy aside from the natural concern as to what may be happening to the mother and brother in New York. Silver Wings is a good picture, even if it is not a great one. It possesses the quality that will hold an audience and at times move it. It might move it far more deeply were it not for the natural feeling of irritation against a mother so blinded to the faults of one son and to the virtues of the two other children; and of indignation against the cad, who, through his "jollying" tactics, so thoroughly ingratiates himself in the misplaced affection of his mother. Somehow one cannot get away from the feeling that the mother, altogether fine and lovable and portraying in many ways the highest type of motherhood, has earned a large measure of real retribution. As to the worthless son he escapes punishment that should have been swift and sure. The picture is wholesome in its influence—it cannot help being—and is one that should be seen by all the members of every family.

Points of Appeal.—There's an abundance of genuine appeal in this story. The outstanding factor, nevertheless, is that its star is the Mother of Over the Hill and a woman who has raised a family of six fine children. They all stood beside Mary Carr on the stage of the Apollo following the premiere performance on the night of May 17, and their appearance and the applause that greeted it was one of the moving incidents of the night. No better lobby display could be devised than a large photograph of the group. The role of Anna Webb is played by a real and not an imitation mother.

Cast.—There is a temptation to say it is flawless. Its accomplishments are measured by the opportunities. As to Mary Carr, it is unnecessary to refer at length. Percy Helton as the good son gives a notable performance of a difficult role. Joseph Striker was a thoroughly natural bad egg, and deserves credit for his self-effacement. Lynn Hammond, the father, is human. Then there are, among others, Jane Thomas, Roy Gordon, Claude Brook, Roger Lytton and Ernest Hilliard who must be named.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—From all these angles the production is excellent.

Universal Special Attraction. Story by Arthur Somers Roche. Scenario by Doris Schroeder. Cameraman, Bennie Bail. Directed by King Baggot. Length, 4,231 Feet.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Constance Keener, Marie Prevost; Merton Torrey, J. Krank Glendon; Dr. Sherman Moss, Lloyd Whitlock; Mrs. Keener, Lillian Langdon; Horace Peabody, Arthur Hoyt; Editor Needham, Percy Challenger; Bob Rennesdale, Harold Miller; Miss Smith, Marie Crisp; Jim Kernochan, Harold Goodwin.

Everyone in the little town where Connie and Merton Torrey lived considered their marriage inevitable. Everything was so matter of fact that the girl longed for romance and refused to marry Torrey. On the occasion of a masked ball, Torrey was unable to escort her to the dance and she decided to go alone. While standing out on the balcony, someone suddenly seized and kissed her, then disappeared over the railing. She watched to see where he went and discovered that he joined two other fellows who were in identical costumes as his own. Perplexed and interested she sought them out after the dance and finally decided that the thief must have been Dr. Moss. A few days later they plan to elope and after boarding the train Connie receives her first kiss from Moss. She suddenly realizes that she has eloped with the wrong man. Further down the track the train comes to a sudden stop. Torrey comes in and boldly captures his girl. He kisses her and then she is aware that he is unquestionably the thief who had set her heart pounding at the dance and disappeared.

For light frivolous entertainment Marie Prevost's new picture, Kissed, offers pleasant amusement. The story runs its own course with a general "much ado about nothingness." It is constructed in a romantic schoolgirl fashion and should readily satisfy an audience who takes amusement for its face value and does not question too deeply the whys and wherefores of the situations. The theme carries a somewhat new finish, but has the familiar mask ball and rejected suitor aspect of many others. However, the story on a whole is entertainingly done and contains material that popular demand praises.

Points of Appeal.—The art of osculation comes in for its full quota of prominence, as suggested by the title. Clever art titling succeeds in supplying the visible evidence of the "kick" derived therefrom where imagination is likely to fall short. The scenes in the hospital nursery also have an appeal.

Cast. — Marie Prevost gives a pleasing portrayal of Constance Keener. She possesses a great deal of charm, which she uses unstintingly in this role. Adequate support is given by other members of the cast.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—The picture has some attractive night views and good interiors. The lighting is sufficient. Action slow in taking place, but the better part of the story runs a lively clip.

Trouble

First National Photoplay in Five Parts. Director, Albert Austin. Running Time, Fifty-six Minutes.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

The Boy, Jackie Coogan; Ed Lee, the Plumber, Wallace Beery; The Plumber's Wife, Gloria Hope.

Little Jackie, inmate of the Community Orphanage, runs away from the Home because objections are raised to his keeping his pet dog. A policeman finds Jackie and his dumb chum asleep in a barrel. He takes Jackie back to the Orphanage, and the dog follows. Despite all attempts to keep the dog out he sticks to Jackie, and the kind-hearted matron finally relents to the extent of allowing him to remain. A newspaper campaign is started to induce people to adopt the orphan children. Jackie and the dog fall to the wardship of Ed Lee, a plumber, and his wife. Lee is a big fellow who refuses to work and illtreats his wife. Back from jail for beating her he falls asleep. A message comes demanding his services at a wealthy lady's residence. Lee abuses Jackie when the latter awakens him and goes to sleep again. Jackie succeeds in getting his adopted father's tools to the scene of action and tackles the job, with the result that a leaking pipe bursts and the place is flooded. The mistress arrives, rescues Jackie from the indignant servants and gives him a five-dollar bill. Jackie runs home to his mother with the money, but Lee strikes her and takes it away. Jackie throws dishes at him. The noise brings a policeman to the scene. In a fight between Lee and the officer the latter is nearly knocked out, when Jackie heaves a flower pot at the bully which knocks him senseless. Lee is handcuffed and arrested. His wife's parents, living in the country, read in the morning paper of Lee's arrest on the charge. They are present in court when the case comes up. Mrs. Lee is examined and Jackie also tells the story of his adopted father's brutality. Lee is sentenced to a year in prison. The parents welcome their daughter and take her to their home, accompanied by Jackie and the ever-faithful dog, where all live happily together.

The many admirers of little Jackie Coogan will not be disappointed in this latest production exploiting their favorite. It is the sort of picture which carries a universal appeal, adults and juveniles alike will acknowledge its charm, and exhibitors will welcome it as a sure-fire box office hit. The principal drawback to the development of a child star is the propensity of the average director to handicap the youngster with situations which either display the infantile player as a veritable imp of mischief, whose trickish tendencies border on sheer viciousness, or else represent the kid as an angelic brat oozing sentimental sweetness at every pore, both characterizations being utterly untrue to life and peculiarly repulsive to the average hard-headed citizen. No such mistakes have been made in Trouble. The story, a model of simplicity, possesses a world of pathos without being unnecessarily "gushy," and plenty of delightful comedy; wee Jackie shows himself once more to be a wonderful actor for his age, always a real boy, natural, unaffected and a miniature dynamo in point of energy. His ability to keep an audience fluctuating between tears and laughter was never better demonstrated than when the film was given its initial metropolitan showing at the Strand Theatre, New York, recently, scoring a genuine Coogan triumph.

Points of Appeal.—The scenes in the orphanage are irresistibly funny, Jackie and his faithful dog doing splendid team work. His experiments in plumbing later on, which result in the flooding of a palatial residence, "get the laughs" in large quantity, and his affection for his adopted mother is demonstrated in a manner frankly boyish and touching. The scrap between the brutal plumber and the policeman, in which Jackie takes a hand at a crucial moment, is a whirlwind of action and the trial episode is excellent. Especial praise is due the sub-titles, which are witty, terse, pungent and help the narrative along amazingly.

Cast.—Whether in registering emotion or bringing out the fine points of comedy incidents, the tiny star never fails to score and leaves the spectator with the fixed impression that there is but one Jackie Coogan. Wallace Beery gives a vivid performance in the role of the ruffianly Edward Lee, which will earn him the hearty detestation of the gallery gods wherever the picture is shown, and add fresh lustre to his laurels as an accomplished artist. Gloria Hope is prettily appealing as the abused wife, and unbounded credit must be awarded the four-footed member of the cast, as clever a canine as ever faced a camera.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—Exteriors and interiors are well filmed, the lighting is good, unbroken continuity prevails and the action moves swiftly throughout the entire five reels.

The Crossroads of New York

Six-Reel Mack Sennett Production. Released by Associated First National. From an Original Story by Mack Sennett. Directed by F. Richard Jones.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Michael Flint, George O'Hara; James Flint, Noah Beery; Grace St. Clair, Ethel Gray Terry; Press Agent, Ben Deely; Press Agent, William Bevan; John D. Anthony, Herbert Standing; A Landlay, Dot Farley; A Star Boarder, Eddie Gribbon; Ruth Anthony, Kathryn McGuire; Garrett Chesterfield, Robert Cain; A Waitress, Mildred June; A Wall Street Wolf, Raymond Griffith; A Judge, Charles Murray; A Lawyer, James Finlayson.

Michael Flint comes from the country to visit his rich city uncle, and in crossing the park he rescues a child from a runaway horse that is later stopped by a policeman. He becomes ambitious to wear a uniform, but failing to tell his uncle what kind, he lands a job as a street cleaner. Taking it good naturedly, he goes to live in a boarding house and his landlady promptly engages herself to him. In the meantime his uncle falls for a stage vamp whose demands for money become so frequent that they quarrel, and the uncle goes to Alaska and circulates the rumor that he is dead. Michael becomes his heir also inheriting the stage vamp, who brings breach of promise suit against him when his engagement to Ruth Anthony is announced. Ruth is kidnapped by a former suitor, who also entices her father to a lonely lodge in the country. Michael's case goes against him until his uncle shows up and denounces the actress. He and his uncle go to the stock market, where the bottom has fallen out on account of absence of Ruth's father. Michael, through clever calculation, discovers their whereabouts, rescues them both, and after Mr. Anthony restores the stock market Michael is rewarded by marriage with Ruth.

The only objection that could well be found with Mack Sennett's latest production, The Crossroads of New York, is the name. It is somewhat of a misnomer, but for all that, it is one of the most entertaining burlesques on modern melodrama that has come out of the present crop. It not only pokes all manner of fun at the stage and filmdom, but also takes a good-natured slap at the dignity of the courts by bringing in a breach-of-promise suit that is rich in comedy, then pictures the doings of some of New York's citizens and citzenesses in a very ridiculous manner. Aside from the comedy angles, it also contains quite a few thrills in the way of a rescue in Central Park, some well done falls and a fairly good fist fight. Judging its value by the enthusiastic manner a large audience received it at the Capitol the other night, this picture will probably prove to be a moneymaker of the first water. It is of a type that will appeal to the general run of human nature.

Points of Appeal.—There is enough variety in this picture to make it appeal to young and old alike. For those who like the comedy side, there are the overdrawn troubles of an unsophisticated country boy in New York, who makes a big hit with the ladies. For the thrill lover, there is a rescue in Central Park, some breath-taking falls, and a fairly good fist fight that is well staged. It also contains some very good shots of New York street scenes to satisfy those who like scenics, but the love theme is so broadly burlesqued it does not contain any appeal.

Cast.—The cast is so well balanced it would be difficult to single out any one of them without slighting the others. Each one of the different members overact their roles just enough to stamp "burlesque" on the film with an emphasis and seem to enter into the spirit of the picture—pure unadulterated fun.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—The photography is not of the best, appearing to be slightly out of focus in places. This may be due, however, to poor lighting. The direction is excellent, and it is very seldom that sub-titles are seen that contain as much humor or carry the story forward as pointedly as those in The Crossroads of New York. They are of the best.

Very Truly Yours

Fox Photoplay in Five Parts. Author, Helen Hawkins. Scenario by Paul Schofield. Director, Harry Beaumont. Running Time, Fifty-five Minutes.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Marie Tyree, Shirley Mason; Bert Woodmansee, Alan Forrest; A. L. Woodmansee, Charles Clary; Jim Watson, Otto Hoffman; Archie Small, Harold Miller; Mrs. Evelyn Grenfall, Helen Raymond; Dr. Maddox, Hardy Kirkland.

Marie Tyree, stenographer in a hotel, falls in love with Archie Small. They are engaged, but later Archie is lured away by a widow with plenty of money. Disillusioned by her experience, Marie resolves to trap a wealthy spouse. Her chance comes when she makes the acquaintance of Bert Woodmansee at a business convention held at the hotel. Bert is said to be worth millions, and Marie captures him after a short and vigorous courtship on his part. But when the honeymoon is over she discovers to her dismay that it is Bert's uncle who is the real millionaire, while the nephew is in humble circumstances. Bert is unable to pay for some costly clothes Marie has had charged to his account. She upbraids him and leaves his house. The rich uncle receives a bill for several thousand dollars for clothes purchased by Marie, and this leads the older man to trail her down. He does so, with the result that Marie makes a wonderfully good impression upon him, wins his heart completely, through his kindly offices she and her husband are reunited and all ends well.

A bright and pleasing picture, well directed, handsomely photographed, and cleverly presented by a thoroughly capable cast, Very Truly Yours ranks as exceptionally good entertainment. There is a bit of a moral to the story, too, a sort of hint that money grabbing in matrimonial speculations is a dangerous experiment likely to have a disagreeable "reverse-English" effect on the speculator, also that because one person plays you false is no reason why you should thereafter view the whole world with suspicion. But no attempt at preaching is made—nothing could be further from the design or development of this latest Shirley Mason vehicle, which is a wonderfully breezy and human story, with a romantic flavor, yet natural atmosphere, not a dull moment in it, and a sure box-office winner.

Points of Appeal. — The story is convincing because the girl in the case acts just as you would expect her to do in real life under similar conditions. Nor, even when she deliberately makes up her mind to contract a loveless marriage for money's sake does she forfeit the audience's sympathy, for the impression remains that she has a sort of right to "get square" for the manner in which her first lover treated her. And when the climax brings her happiness everybody is satisfied.

Cast.—Dainty Shirley Mason is lovable and alluring in the whole of Marie Tyree, which she invests with singular charm, giving a performance remarkable for its ease and dramatic polish. Alan Forrest is excellent as the well-meaning husband, Charles Clary provides a splendid character sketch of the rich uncle, and the support is all that could be desired.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—The interiors are handsome, the deep sets very effective and numerous pretty shots are included in the exterior scenes, with superb lighting. The continuity is unbroken and fast action governs the entire production.

The Wall Flower

Goldwyn Photoplay in Six Parts. Author, Rupert Hughes. Director, Rupert Hughes. Cameraman, John Mescall. Running Time, Sixty-five Minutes.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Idalene Nobbin, Colleen Moore; Walt Breen, Richard Dix; Pamela Shiel, Gertrude Astor; Prue Nickerson, Laura Laplante; Roy Duncan, Tom Gallery; Phin Larrabee, Rush Hughes; Allen Lansing, Dana Todd; Mrs. Nobbin, Fanny Stockbridge; Mrs. Nickerson, Emily Rait.

Idalene Nobbin is so accustomed to being treated as an "ugly duckling" by her mother and compelled to wear queer clothes, that she has grown to consider herself as a hopeless wallflower. She attends a dance given by Prue Nickerson, and is much surprised when Roy Duncan, football star from a nearby college, asks her to dance. But later she is made the victim of an unkind jest, which so mortifies her that she determines to kill herself. She throws herself in front of a speeding auto, is hit and picked up by Pamela Shiel, a wealthy society girl, and the latter's guest, Walter Breen. Idalene's legs are broken, and Pamela nurses her back to health in her own home. Idalene tells Pamela she wisbed to die because she was convinced no man would ever care to marry her. Pamela tries an experiment, surrounds Idalene with luxuries, teaches her to walk gracefully, how to dress her hair, wear costly clothing, and the little wallflower blossoms out into a beauty, to whom Pamela's male friends pay constant attention. Idalene falls in love with Breen. Pamela gives a party in her honor, at which those who formerly snubbed her render due homage. She refuses Breen's proposal of marriage because she learns that Pamela also loves him, and returns to her mother's house. Pamela then makes a sacrifice. She tells Breen that Idalene loves him and through Pamela's kind offices the lovers are united.

Having essayed successfully the triple role of author, scenario writer and director of The Wall Flower, the ambitious Mr. Rupert Hughes can be credited with having produced a feature possessed of considerable heart interest and enlivened by judicious flashes of humor. The plot is simplicity itself, sponsoring a sort of modern Cinderella heroine, a very familiar screen type, but one of which film fans never seem to tire. Director and players have handled their material so skilfully that a very engaging comedy is the result. The sentimental urge of the story is powerful, and this, in turn, is neatly balanced by mirthful situations which do not miss fire, so that a species of "between smiles and tears" atmosphere may be said to dominate the picture from start to finish. Exhibitors will find this attraction worthy of their attention.

Points of Appeal. — Unbounded sympathy is garnered for the "ugly duckling" of a heroine, who turns out a swan in the long run, even when one is laughing most over Idalene's blunders, a feeling of pity predominates. It is the usual case of prejudice being developed in favor of a downtrodden person, and this bulks large in The Wall Flower. The comedy is excellent and a most satisfactory climax is achieved.

Cast.—Pretty Colleen Moore displays great ability both as a comedienne and emotional artiste in her impersonation of Idalene Nobbin. The role affords wide latitude for Miss Moore's powers, her portrayal of the awkward, hesitant damsel in the earlier portion of the picture is extraordinarily good art, and wonderfully fascinating is the versatile little leading lady when she appears as Idalene, polished, graceful and clad in costly garments. Richard Breen is a very likeable lover, Gertrude Astor scores as the loyal and self-sacrificing Pamela, and adequate support is furnished by the remainder of the cast.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—There are many pretty rustic scenes, with pleasing long shots, the interiors are well filmed and good lighting prevails. The continuity is smooth and the action moves briskly.

The Cradle Buster

Tuttle-Waller Production. Released by American Releasing Co. Story and Scenario by Frank Tuttle. Cameraman, Fred Waller, Jr. Directed by Frank Tuttle. Length, 5947.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Benjamin Franklin Reed, Glenn Hunter; Gay Dixon, Marguerite Courtot; "Blarney" Dixon, William H. Tooker; Melia Prout, Mary Foy; Polly Ann Parsons, Lois Blaine; "Spoony," Osgood Perkins; Holcomb Berry, Townsend Martin; Mrs. Reed, Beatrice Morgan.

Benjamin Franklin Reed, otherwise known as "Sweetie," resents the way he has been tied to his mother's apron strings, and decides on the occasion of his twenty-first birthday to strike out and be a man. He smokes his first cigar, looks over the morning paper, and is attracted to a picture of a dancer appearing at a local amusement park cabaret. He takes his first venture, and while in the cabaret the "jazz baby" comes over to him and sings a "kiss" song. He chases her to the stage, violently kisses her before the audience and then goes back to her dressing room to apologize. That starts the romance. A few days later they decide to elope, but are intercepted. The girl is taken back by her father. "Sweetie" learns of a plot the jealous clown has planned to kill the girl. After a desperate struggle he succeeds in rescuing her and shortly afterwards starts on a real honeymoon.

The Cradle Buster can easily be classed as one of the best juvenile comedies that has been put on the screen recently. There is so much realism about it that "strikes home," the picture is bound to have a wide appeal. In addition to the refreshing comedy there is a more serious side that at all times is well placed and effective. With laughs steadily piling up and first-rate thrills and suspense constantly developing, there is little left to be desired at the close of this very entertaining film.

Points of Appeal. — Every boy always looks forward with great anticipation to his twenty-first birthday. Benjamin Franklin Reed's sudden assertion of his independence is one that will delight everyone who sees it. The love strain that goes along with the picture has sufficient charm to even up the story.

Cast.—This picture is the first starring vehicle of Glenn Hunter. His portrayal of "Sweetie" is delightful and natural. It would be difficult to find any serious fault with his conception of the self-conscious boy who is suddenly awakened to his manhood. Marguerite Courtot, his leading lady, is very pleasing to gaze upon and also does some good acting. Each member of the supporting cast gives fine assistance.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—The photography throughout the picture is splendid. Interiors are attractive and good in detail. The lighting has been done with skill and effectiveness. Continuity easy and full of action. Direction O. K.

Nero

William Fox Production. Story by Charles Sarver and Virginia Tracy. Cameraman, Harry Plimpton. Directed by J. Gordon Edwards. Length, Approximately Nine Reels.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Nero, Jacques Gretillat; Horatius, Alexander Salvini; Tullius, Guido Trento; Otho, Enzo De Felice; The Apostle, Nero Bernardi; Hercules, Adolfo Trouche; Galba, Nello Carolenuto; Gracchus, Americo De Giorgio; Garth, Alfredo Galaor; A Roman General, Fernando Cecilia; A Roman Captain, Enrico Kant; Poppæa, Paulette Duval; Acte, Edy Darclea; Marcia, Violet Mersereau; Julia, Lina Talba; First Handmaiden, Lydia Yaguinto; Second Handmaiden, Maria Marchiali.

Nero, Emperor of Rome, takes as his consort Poppæa, who is the wife of one of his soldiers. During the time of the conquests Galba, who is with the armies in the field, sends Horatius into the Vannian Kingdom to bring back as hostage the Princess Marcia. Horatius falls in love with the girl and wishes to follow her to Rome, but duty takes him to Spain. When he returns to Rome great honors are paid him, and Nero promises him anything he desires. Horatius chooses Marcia and his wish is granted. When the Emperor sees the girl he offers Horatius great wealth to give him back his word. Horatius refuses, and under cover of the storm escapes with her to his villa at Capua. He learns that Marcia has become a Christian and must have the Apostle's consent to wed. Meanwhile great hatred is being aroused against the Emperor, and when he has Rome burned to satisfy his own selfish desire they rise up and storm the palace. To quiet them he tells them that the Christians have set fire to the city, and promises his people a magnificent spectacle by allowing them to witness the feeding of the Christians to the lions in the big arena. While the spectacle is going on Horatius, who was at one time the idol of the city, pleads for Marcia's life, but Nero's thumb goes down against him. While they are in the arena word reaches Nero that Galba has been proclaimed Emperor. Realizing that the end of his power means death, he chooses to have one of his own soldiers stab him. And so ends the last of the Cæsars.

A spectacular production of compelling magnificence and beauty that has been done in Italy reaches our shores in the Fox presentation of Nero. The picture with its many choice settings was made in and around Rome under the direction and supervision of an American staff. The tragedy picturing the events taking place in Rome during the reign of Nero is so vividly done that the interest is keyed up to the top pitch from beginning to end. Tense situations and thrills abound in the second half of the picture and bring the story to a close with a tremendous climax.

Points of Appeal. — Aside from the gorgeous spectacle that this picture offers, the story qualifies in every respect as high-class entertainment. The beautiful love story of Marcia and Horatius brings in the persecution of the Christians. The scenes in the arena, chariot races, lions and warriors all carry a thrill. The colored effects in the burning of the city, the fires of victory and lighted torches are beautifully done.

Cast. — A large and capable cast has been chosen throughout the picture. It is particularly gratifying to witness the performance of Violet Mersereau as Marcia. Indeed, so splendid is the acting on the part of each member that too much praise could hardly be given.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—Perfection seems to have been the keynote of this production. Excellent photography, exceptional lighting, and 100 per cent direction.

Press Comments

American—A comedy photoplay that hits the bull's eye is the "Crossroads of New York," cleverly combining all of the worth-while elements of comedy, tragedy and drama. World—It looks as if here was a picture that would cause a great deal of comment. Hokum in new wrappers generally hits the crowds. Herald—The touches of comedy could hardly be outdone, despite of the fact that not a single custard pie is hurled. Sun—It will arouse in many persons about all the variety of emotions, with uproarious laughter predominating. Telegram—The feature is guaranteed to tickle the palate of even the most jaded theatre-goer.

Press Comments

Telegram—The feature is one of intriguing interest, holding the audience's attention every second. Journal—The perfect mystery play is a baffler to the last thrilling moment. And such a play is "Find the Woman." Evening World—The feature is worth seeing if you are seeking cool shudders on a muggy evening. World—There isn't much to be said about the feature except that Alma Rubens plays the principal part—and does it quite effectively. Tribune—"Find the Woman" would have been a more interesting picture if it hadn't taken them so long to find her.

Press Comments

Tribune—"Trouble" is excellent entertainment for children. Every child ought to love it. World—"Trouble" is a little forced for comedy's sake at times and it isn't so good a story as Jackie deserves. Journal.—"Trouble" is Jackie Coogan at his best, and his best is far better than you ever guessed. Sun—"Trouble" is shrewdly contrived to the end of showing off Jackie's winsome and varied talents, and is an undiluted delight. Herald—Jackie is a true genius for he can rise above rules and a barrage of plates. Mail—Jackie has lost none of his skill to completely win his audience with his every act.

CENTRAL

Overture—"Egyptian March" (Strauss).
Current Events.
The Leather Pushers (Universal).
Feature—Priscilla Dean in The Virgin of Stamboul (Universal).
Comedy—Some Class (Century).
Organ Recital.

Press Comments

Telegram—It is only fair, right at the outset, to say that the feature is still a thriller. It holds one's interest throughout and is remarkable for its smoothness. The scenes and photography generally compare with the best seen this season, or that matter, any other season, and constitutes a monument to the directing powers of Tod Browning. Journal—No tender young flapper is the heroine in "The Virgin of Stamboul." She is young, to be sure, but she is also a fiery, flashing vivacious creature, who can wield a knife like a powerful man and pilfer with the cunning of a veteran pickpocket.

CAMEO

Adventures of Sherlock Holmes—The Devil's Foot (Educational).
Violin Solo—"Jocelyn" (Godard).
Feature—The Cradle Buster (American Releasing Corporation).
Personal Appearance of Glen Hunter.
Organ Recital.

Press Comments

Journal—The feature is a straight-away vigorous picture, alive with action and retaining interest to the final fade-out. American—Strong in plot, clever in its situations, and with a highly interesting character delineation, "The Cradle Buster" proved one of the most appealing pictures seen this season. Times—There is a good deal of pictorial entertainment in "The Cradle Buster." Sun—The feature ought to be added to every one's list of summer film reading. Herald—The story takes a rather slow start, but after pulling itself together ends with a flying leap. It might have been written by Booth Tarkington, so pervaded is it with the spirit of romantic adolescence.

APOLLO

Feature—Silver Wings (Fox).

Press Comments

Evening Mail—It is a well done picture with Mary Carr taking the supreme honors. She is at all times an appealing figure with a true understanding of the mother heart and the finest ability to convey that understanding to the screen. Evening World—The story is well told, well directed and for those who like to sob a bit, should prove very attractive. Telegram—It is an eloquent film never failing in interest and moreover is full of illuminating touches. Globe—It is a fitting successor to "Over the Hill," and other productions by Fox in the last few years, and provided the heart throbs one is led to expect in advance.

Press Comments

Tribune—It is as great a picture as William Fox thinks it is. Can a critic say more? Other pictures have been as elaborate and costly; others have been abroad with thousands of people in the mob scenes. People have been thrown to the lions and trampled to death to make a movie fan's holiday, but few pictures have ever had what this "Nero" spectacle possesses. It catches your interest from the first title and holds it throughout. Herald—The picture is more than a photoplay—it is a series of geological disturbances. The patron is left gasping, feeling he has been through a cross between a violent gale at sea and a rough cross country trip in a flivver. On the whole, it is the best picture Fox has ever done, capable of arousing great and dizzy delight.

THE public-wise manager knows that an audience comfortably seated is half won. He knows, too, that with the other elements of attraction more or less evenly balanced, the more comfortable seats of one theatre will easily swing the decision of "where to go" in its favor.

Seating that was tolerated five and ten years ago is endured under protest now or altogether avoided.

Our Theatre Engineering Seating Department will be glad to consult with any Theatre owner or manager on new installations or renewal of old. We can show you without obligation how your theatre can "cheat old age" and revive its youth for further years of public service.

Czar Levenson at It Again

By L. W. BOYNTON

"WE are conservative when we claim that more than half the population of America is below normal intelligence."

No, kind reader, it is not Mrs. Evalyn F. Snow, the Ohio censor Czarina, who speaks, though we don't blame you for thinking so. The speaker is Joseph Levenson, talkative member of the Motion Picture Commission of New York State, which, being translated into plain English, means the film censors of the Commonwealth.

Mr. Levenson was addressing the Rotary Club of Buffalo when he made his attack on the intelligence of the American people. The date was May 25th.

EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW, a few weeks ago, devoted considerable space to Mrs. Snow, you remember. She earned it by her tyrannical censor antics and particularly by her oft-quoted statement that 75 per cent of the people never think at all.

But Mrs. Snow evidently has no monopoly on public condemnation of her own country. She formed the club, and now Levenson, by his utterances in Buffalo, votes himself into its membership.

We have a copy of extracts from the Levenson speech. It is a weird document, a frantic, poorly-constructed argument by a job-holder, the only apparent motive being to vilify the industry which Levenson pretends he wants to help; an utterance by one of those few queer public officials who think they are far above the masses.

Levenson stands and surveys the world. He goes all the way back to the Bible, and says the Divine authority of Moses was contested by Korah and "250 Princes of the Congregation, men of renown," and he consigns the rebels to the class of demagogues.

We assume that the censor czar is occupied here in showing that censorship of motion pictures is—or ought to be—a matter of Divine authority, and we have no doubt he could cite the chapter in the Bible which specifically authorizes it.

Having received the sanction of Almighty God, as he apparently thinks, Levenson has no difficulty in identifying the troublesome cusses who are against censorship. We quote: "The unthinking, and those who do not know the facts, have questioned its wisdom and it is to such people that the appeal must be made to properly study the reasons for motion picture regulation or 'censorship,' as it is termed."

"The unthinking" . . . A list of the unthinking ought to be interesting. In part, it would read something like this:

Calvin Coolidge, now Vice-President of the United States, who, as Governor of Massachusetts, vetoed a censorship bill.

Samuel R. McKelvie, Governor of Nebraska, who vetoed a censorship bill.

Samuel Gompers, head of the American Federation of Labor, who has denounced censorship.

Arthur Brisbane, the highest paid newspaper editor in the country, who is a vigorous and able opponent of censorship. The present Governors of Georgia, Minnesota, Connecticut; many State and municipal officials; scores of other men and women of national reputation; newspapers and other publications throughout the nation, and the plain citizens of America, who have never been given the opportunity of voting on this same question of censorship. But they will—some day—they will! And that referendum election in Massachusetts next fall will be the opening wedge.

What's the use of piling up the names of "the unthinking"? Levenson is an expert on the subject of thought. Hasn't he said that half the people of America are subnormal in intelligence? Doesn't that qualify him to be an expert?

Let's go on and find out what this speech is all about. Levenson talking again: "Most interesting of all, however, is the legislation in Germany and Poland, although these countries are under socialist control. Those of us who know of the vaporings of socialists since the days of Karl Marx for freedom of speech, freedom of press, freedom of stage, and even freedom of love, can appreciate Germany's action in following the example of capitalistic countries in censoring motion pictures."

Did you get that? Read it again. You'll discover some "historical facts" you probably didn't know before. That provision in the Constitution of the United States, which guarantees freedom of the press and of speech, wasn't written by Karl Marx. It wasn't made in Germany. It wasn't the result of the "vaporings of socialists." What does Levenson know about freedom, anyway, except that the same Constitution which guarantees specifically the freedom of speech and of the press protects him as an American citizen—even gives him leave to make such a speech as he made at Buffalo?

If we had the same kind of censorship which he admires so much in Germany, he'd have to submit his speeches in advance to Governmental authority. And so he would class free love with freedom of the press and speech, would he? That statement alone should result in his being immediately removed from public office.

But there is more of this. The All-Highest Censor speaks again: "The main reason for the establishment of such censorship everywhere is scientific" (O science, what crimes are committed in thy name!) "Students of psychology have devoted considerable attention to the influence of the picture on the minds of people and they agree today that it has an indescribable power in moulding thought, particularly with children, mental defectives, illiterates and the ignorant. These classes make up a large proportion, perhaps a majority, of the attendants at motion picture theatres."

What a pitiful falsehood! What a disgusting statement for a public official to make! What a libel on the industry of the motion picture and on the American people themselves!

In the name of common sense, why should a man guilty of such utterances be permitted to pass upon the entertainment of ten millions of people?

But, you see, the Censor Czar thinks half the people of the United States are below normal intelligence. And he wants to get across the insinuation that what he calls the intelligent half never attends the picture theatre. He goes about the State, making these speeches, vilifying his own country, damaging this industry, gets a hearing before prominent citizens, and nothing is done to stop him.

We say something should be done—and done by his official superiors. Let him talk as a private citizen, if he just must talk, after he has been thrown out of office, and his chance to damage a great industry taken away from him.

The Dinner to Senator Walker

SELDOM, if at all, has the industry seen so instantaneous a response as that evoked by the announcement of the dinner to be tendered by the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce to Senator James J. Walker. The dinner committee, of which William Brandt is the aggressive leading spirit, is literally swamped with applications for table reservations.

Men prominent in many walks of life will be there to pay their measure of esteem to the brilliant and lovable counsel and spokesman of the exhibitors of New York. The industry as a whole will be richer because of the affair, for it will mean the further cementing of happy relations between the motion picture and an influential section of the public. Such a result can only come about when the industry puts forward men of the wide influence and standing of Jimmie Walker.

EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW is happy to see this testimonial to the Senator.

T.O.C.C., By Unanimous Vote, Writes Final Chapter in Secession from M. P. T. O. A.—Heavy Blow To Cohen Machine

THE Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce of New York, comprising in its membership seven hundred theatres in the metropolitan district, wrote the final chapter in its secession from the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America on Wednesday, May 31.

By unanimous rising vote the Chamber struck out the provision in its by-laws which required that members must first join the M. P. T. O. A. before they could become members of the Chamber.

Changes in the by-laws are required to be given three readings before adoption. The third reading came up on May 31 and the question was then put. President William Landau stated that he desired a standing vote, and the response was unanimous for complete severance of relations with the so-called national organization.

The majority of the members of the T. O. C. C. are also members of the New York State organization which, as already noted in these columns, is acting independently of the Cohen regime. It is expected the state body will shortly take official action through a meeting of its Board of Directors, called by President Charles L. O'Reilly, which will end its relations with the M. P. T. O. A.

The secession of the T. O. C. C. is a heavy blow to the Cohen machine. The local organization in itself was the strongest single unit in the national body. With the state organization, it was the largest contributor to the M. P. T. O. A. treasury. According to the

Washington State Women's Council Abandons Censorship Move in Deference to Hays

AT their regular meeting last week, in Seattle, the Women's Legislative Council of the State of Washington had the motion picture censorship bill stricken from the 1923 legislative program.

According to Mrs. Victoria L. Trumbull, president of the Council, the women are very much interested in the matter and intend to have "cleaner pictures"; but they also have great faith in Will Hays and feel confident that he will bring about many reforms and that censorship legislation will not be necessary. They are willing to wait and see what is done, and therefore would not indorse the measure at this time.

A. I. C. P. Thanks Industry for Aid in Making Charity Drive a Success

WILL H. HAYS made public this week a resolution adopted on May 24 by the Board of Managers of the New York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor, thanking the industry for its aid in making the May Carnival a success.

All divisions of the picture business, under Mr. Hays' leadership, participated in the charity drive which raised over $100,000. Aside from helping a worthy cause, the May Carnival, as already pointed out, was a fine step forward because it brought the industry to the favorable attention of the social, business and philanthropic leaders of the metropolis. The resolution follows:

"The Board of Managers of the New York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor desires to express its grateful appreciation to the May Carnival Committee and to all those who were associated with it in making the Carnival a success. The voluntary services of the May Carnival Committee and the large number of individuals who gave liberally of their time and energy, and the hearty support and great activity of the motion picture industry assured the splendid success of the May Carnival, which resulted in raising over $100,000, for the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor.

"This makes possible the continuance of the relief, fresh air, old age, unemployment and other activities of the Association for the current year, a fact of no little importance to the large number of widowed families, sick families, aged persons, and undernourished infants and children who will be benefitted by these funds. The Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor wishes to spread on its minutes an appreciation of the services of every organization or individual which contributed to this splendid success and requests its president, Mr. Cornelius N. Bliss, Jr., to express to such organizations and individuals the very deep appreciation of the members of its Board of Managers."

report rendered by Mr. Cohen to the national committee and board of directors at Washington, but never submitted to the convention, New Nork State contributed $11,000 of the $39,000 collected from the entire country during the period from the Minneapolis to the Washington conventions.

The Empire State thus gave to the M.P.T.O.A. about twenty-eight per cent of its entire finances. The withdrawal of the T. O. C. C. and the state organization will leave Mr. Cohen without representation in New York City and State, which in the nature of things are vital factors in the success of any national exhibitor organization.

It is in New York that the relations between producer-distributors and exhibitors necessarily come to a focus, and close observers of the situation pointed out this week that Mr. Cohen was maintaining the headquarters of his so-called national organization on foreign soil, that is to say, in the midst of exhibitor activities which had repudiated him and his machine.

The determination of the T. O. C. C., working in close co-operation with the New York State body, to continue its efforts for the solution of the real problems of the industry was emphasized at the meeting on May 31. As already announced, the organization, with Senator James J. Walker as its counsel and spokesman, is engaged in negotiations with Will H. Hays looking toward an equitable film contract and the adjustment of other business difficulties. Discussion of the contract was taken up at the Wednesday meeting and considerable progress was made. Senator Walker and the T. O. C. C. Executive Committee will shortly hold another conference with Mr. Hays, and there is every reason to believe that the negotiations will lead to specific results of a far-reaching nature in the near future.

Record Attendance Indicated for T.O.C.C. Dinner to Senator Walker

SO overwhelming have been the reservations from the industry for the dinner which will be tendered to Senator James J. Walker by the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York, that the Committee has been obliged to cancel the date originally set for Wednesday, June 14, at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, to more spacious quarters at the Plaza Hotel, for the evening of Monday, June 19, which, incidentally is the Senator's birthday.

Not only have requests come for reservations from exhibitors in distant cities, but innumerable friends of the Senator in every line of endeavor, upon hearing of the dinner, have made requests for tables. In many instances, prominent civic associations have reserved entire tables.

The insistence from other organizations and associations for participation in this testimonial, has made it necessary to form an Honorary Committee, composed of the heads of various organizations desiring to participate. The names of this committee will be made public next week.

Prominent Speakers to Appear

Those expected on the dais as speakers at the present writing are:

Ex-Governor Alfred E. Smith,
United States Senator James W. Wadsworth, Jr.
Mayor John F. Hylan, Will H. Hays,
Charles M. Schwab, Augustus Thomas
E. F. Albee and Raymond Hitchcock.

Reservations are coming in so rapidly that the affair promises to be one of the most brilliant testimonials ever tendered to any individual.

Those desiring to participate can make reservations by applying to the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, 1540 Broadway. Inclose a check made payable to Louis F. Blumenthal, Treasurer, at $10.00 per cover.

The 100% Opportunity

MEETING THE DEMAND FOR CONSTRUCTIVE SERVICE TO THE WHOLE INDUSTRY

The idea of publishing a Theatre Equipment Directory Number for the Motion Picture Industry was born of the belief that this gigantic business of making and showing motion pictures has emerged from its Dark Ages.

A period of reconstruction has been upon us for some time. We see it in every activity of the industry.

In two years theatre owners have organized. The producing interests of the industry found a leader in the President's cabinet and placed him at the head of their organization. Evidence of organization and reconstruction appears on every side. While these various movements have gone on Exhibitors Trade Review has watched with keen interest awaiting an opportunity to serve in that reorganization and reconstruction in a larger way than had ever before been attempted in the publishing end of the industry.

We believe we have found that opportunity in the 1922 THEATRE EQUIPMENT DIRECTORY NUMBER of EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW which will be in the hands of every motion picture theatre, exchange, supply dealer, producing unit and studio in this country and Canada not later than July 8. It will bear date of July 8 but in conformity with a custom long in vogue will be off the press July 1.

A PUBLICATION DEDICATED TO BUYING USEFULNESS

This Directory Number should appeal to every producer in the United States; to every manufacturer of equipment used in the industry and to every person connected in any way with the operation of a theatre, from owner to usher. For the producer and manufacturer it represents an opportunity to tell the story of his product to everyone interested in it; to tell that story in a published medium that will be preserved for constant use — buying usefulness—day in and day out, through the year.

In size it will be larger than any edition the trade press has ever published, thus directly and substantially testifying to the importance and size of the industry.

YOUR SALESMAN CAN'T ALWAYS BE JUST WHERE HE'S MOST NEEDED

In usefulness it will have no end. It will solve the problem of the man who wants to avail himself of the best pictures or to improve his theatre, studio or exchange but is necessarily held up in the purchase of the necessities by the problem, "Where can I get it?" The Directory Number will prove a boon to him. It will end numberless delays.

For the producer it will register his product indelibly. He can tell the important story of his product, list his pictures—those that still have exhibition life thought to have ceased and those that are to pile up new box office records during the year. He may list his exchanges. He may do all of these things, not for the passing week, but permanently. The Directory Number will carry his story. It will be found on the theatre owner's desk or at his telephone—where all successful trade directories are found — and in the absence of a salesman it will tell the story as completely as any salesman.

In short, it is a medium which will be one hundred per cent on the job, one hundred per cent of the time!

"LET US HAVE SOMETHING THAT IS ONE HUNDRED PER CENT AND—WATCH US"

"If you think we are not alive to changing conditions in this industry give us something in a publication that is one hundred per cent and we'll show you."

Not one but thousands have made that statement. Such a statement shows an alert business sense, that demand for something better, that comes with the upward and healthy growth of business. Ten years ago in this industry no one ever spoke of anything one hundred per cent. It was young and unsophisticated then; gullible as is all youth. It has seen "special issues" of unknown value come and go. At first they were unusual and attractive because they were novel, but the purposes they served seemed unknown which is attested to by the fact that "special issues" are not getting the support formerly accorded them.

DIRECTORY ISSUE RECOGNIZED IN ALL GREAT INDUSTRIES AS SELLING MEDIA

The Directory Number has a purpose—to serve the user and to stimulate and expedite trade between buyer and seller.

It will serve the entire industry and will serve it permanently.

The Directory Number will be in the hands of the theatre men when the Fall season plans are under way; when they are in buying mood and will welcome assistance such as this Number will give them.

Finally, it is a testimonial which Exhibitors Trade Review gladly offers to the stability, progress and future of this industry which it is trying to serve in a new and distinctive way.

Your Theatre Has Two Entrances

One Leads Into the Lobby, and the Other Is a Wire—Read What the Manager of the Rialto, Omaha, Has to Say About Telephone Etiquette

"RIALTO Theatre, Mr. Hermann speaking. . . . Yes, Mrs. Joslyn, at 7 o'clock. . . . Party of seven? . . . We're glad to. Good-by."

No, Mr. Exhibitor, not a monologue. Just August Hermann, assistant manager of the big downtown Rialto Theatre in Omaha, Nebraska, talking over the telephone.

"Mrs. George Joslyn—you've seen her mansion up on the hill, haven't you?—just called to say she wanted to reserve seven good seats for the 7 o'clock showing," said August, after he had gently hung up the receiver.

Julius K. Johnson, angular and temperamental-looking manager of the Rialto, unwrapped his legs from around the ink-well atop his desk and gave evidence of being interested. "Did you notice how Augie hung up the receiver?" he queried. "Well, that's all part of a scheme. A telephone scheme.

Telephone Etiquette

"Let me tell you something: No employee in the Rialto ever slams a 'phone receiver. In the first place it is hard on the telephone, and in the second place it might bang a patron in the ear.

"We have two big entrances to our theatre. One of them is this one down here on the street, where the big doors swing out from our beautifully tiled lobby. The other is the telephone switchboard. I am not sure I can say which is the more important.

"Nobody around this theatre ever says 'Hello.' They don't do that any more except in New York and elsewhere out on the frontier. We always say, just as sweetly and as gently as we know how, 'Rialto Theatre, Mr. Johnson speaking,'" and to have heard it, one would have thought Mr. Johnson was speaking so sweetly in an attempt to make the birds ashamed of themselves. His voice began fairly low, then climbed with an ascending inflection that would have charmed a dove to sleep.

"Why don't we say 'hello?' Simply because it isn't polite, it wastes time and it isn't proper.

"Another thing, we try to make our telephone service personal. We learn the name of the party calling, and we make it a point to mention that party's name once during the conversation. Know why? Well, just talk to someone once who tries this out on you, and see what a warm feeling of satisfaction spreads over you—"

"Ri-i-i-i-ing!" said the telephone, interrupting.

"Rialto Theatre, Mr. Johnson speaking—" again the birds would have hushed their voices.

"Yes, Mrs. Walton. They have been left in the box-office for you, and if you'll call— . . . Oh, we're glad we found them . . . That's all right. If we can ever be of further service, let us know . . . All right, good-by."

A Useful Animal

Gently placing the receiver on the hook, Mr. Johnson pointed to the telephone and remarked: "Woman. She lost her gloves and we found 'em. Called up to tell her and she wasn't home. Maid told her we'd called, and now she calls.

"The telephone is a useful animal. I'm getting gosh-darned sick of these stale jokes some of our would-be humorists have pulled about telephone service. I'd like to see those birds shanking it about the streets. Where'd they be if the telephone would stop for just half a day? Their tongues would be hanging out from hollerin' for help. They're the type that argue with their wives if the baby cries, but if some man sasses them they turn the other cheek. They pick on the poor little telephone girl because she can't help herself. They call themselves gentlemen, but they don't even know what the word means!

"But, getting back to the subject, the exhibitor is making a mistake when he doesn't pay attention to the telephone etiquette in his house. A sharp tongued ticket seller and a telephone can drive away more business for a longer time than a newspaper can bring into the theatre in a thousand years, and the newspapers are the most reliable business getters we know anything about.

"I sometimes have occasion to call our theatre from outside, and I like to make the experiment of listening to the answering voice with the feeling that I am a patron. Our girls have studied to give a pleasing inflection to their voices. 'The voice with a smile wins' is more to them than an opportunity for a cheap prohibition joke.

Personal Service

"If someone calls for me when I'm out, Augie offers to serve them, but if the message is personal, he offers to take their name and telephone number. He leaves me a note and I call at once upon my return. The man who ignores a telephone call on his desk will push little chicks into the creek.

"And here's another pointer I'd like to pass on to exhibitor friends, if they care to listen. And that is: Be careful how you talk over the telephone. If you have a wad of gum parked between your teeth, or a cigar stubbed in a corner of your mouth, and if you look out the window and talk with your mouth two feet away from the telephone receiver you needn't be surprised if the party talking to you should hang up. I haven't much time for the clack of a bird who talks out of the window, just as though it was the telephone's job to follow him around.

"But, gosh! I've taken up a lot of your time, and I've got to get down to the organ."

For Mr. Johnson is an organist. Maybe that is why he has so far developed the art of getting results over the telephone. The ear ever is an important part of the human opinion.

Decision on News Weekly Case July 6

July 6 has been set as the date on which the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, New York State, will render its opinion in connection with the pending action brought some little time ago by the Pathe Exchange, Inc., against the New York State Motion Picture Commission, relative to the right of the latter to censor motion picture news weeklies.

The court has just adjourned and will reconvene in Albany on the date mentioned.

The News of the Week

Lichtman-Schulberg Plans

Detailed Announcement Made of New Producing and Distributing Organization—First Picture, "Rich Men's Wives"

An ambition of years' standing was realized when Al Lichtman and Ben Schulberg announced last week the formation of a new producing and distributing organization—the Al Lichtman Corporation and Preferred Pictures, Inc.

Mr. Lichtman is to be at the head of the distributing organization which bears his name, while Mr. Schulberg will direct all matters having to do with production and the activities of Preferred Pictures, Inc.

J. G. Bachmann, a lifelong friend of both Mr. Lichtman and Mr. Schulberg, is treasurer of both companies. Mr. Bachmann has been the partner of Mr. Schulberg in the production of the Katherine MacDonald pictures. Prior to this association he was a certified public accountant devoting most of his time to picture interests.

Preferred Pictures are to be produced in the Louis B. Mayer Studios, and Mr. Schulberg has permanently located in Los Angeles in order to maintain personal supervision over all production activities. Work has already been started on the first release of the new organization, Rich Men's Wives, an original story by Frank Dazey and Agnes Christine Johnson. This is the first of a series of Gasnier special box-office attractions which are to be filmed by the producer of Kismet. The cast has been selected.

Some of the subsequent releases already arranged for are Ching Ching Chinaman by Wilbur Daniel Steele (this was the prize short story of 1917); Are You a Failure? written especially for the screen by Larry Evans, and also to be produced as a stage play in the near future; A Bird In a Gilded Cage, based on the famous old song of that name, adapted by Arthur J. Lamb; Poor Men's Wives, which is a sequel to Rich Men's Wives; When a Woman Marries, picturization of a present-day life and its manifold problems.

Al Lichtman

Ben Schulberg

The Al Lichtman Corporation will not confine its activities to the product of Preferred Pictures alone, but will also market productions of other producers. Further details are promised in the near future.

After weeks of consideration as to the most effective method of distribution and after a thorough canvass of the market, it was decided that the plan of establishing Al Lichtman exchanges with territorial partners should prove the most economical and desirable, both from the viewpoint of the company and the exhibitors.

"The territorial partners are in every instance men of integrity, high standing and extensive experience, and possessed of intimate knowledge of the problems of every theatre owner in their respective districts," says the announcement. "Many of them also operate some of the finest theatres in the country and will give each Al Lichtman production a representative presentation, coupled with exploitation commensurate with its quality. This in itself assures the success of the picture in its subsequent showings."

The first production scheduled for release by the Al Lichtman Corporation is "Rich Men's Wives," according to an announcement by Mr. Schulberg.

"We have every reason to be proud of our maiden effort," says Mr. Schulberg. "First of all we have an engrossing original story especially written for us by Agnes Christine Johnson and Frank Dazey. These well known collaborators have supplied us with exceptional material.

"The direction is in the hands of L. J. Gasnier, whose work in Kismet and other great pictures is too well known to require elaboration.

"The expression 'all-star' is a much abused one but in this instance I think everyone will concede that the following personnel actually does deserve the designation of 'all-star': House Peters, Claire Windsor, Rosemary Theby, Gaston Glass, Myrtle Stedman, Little Richard Headrick, Charles Clary, Carol Halloway and Martha Mattox."

Variety Claimed for Pathe's New Special Features

Pathe claims it must be exempted from responsibility for the complaints emanating from many quarters that the feature picture output is marred by a dead level of sameness in subject and in treatment. As a specialist in short subjects, Pathe distributes comparatively few features. General Manager Elmer Pearson makes the point that "the wide variety of the long pictures which it occasionally puts out is, owing to that circumstance, all the more remarkable."

Mr. Pearson instances particularly its two most recent acquisitions in the feature category, which, he remarks, are in subject and in all their production effects "as wide apart as the poles." The productions referred to are The Isle of Zorda and Robert J. Flaherty's film of native life and adventure in the ice-bound Arctic regions called Nanook of the North. The Isle of Zorda, released in March, is reported to be increasingly successful all over the country. Nanook of the North bears the approval stamp of Samuel Rothafel in booking its public premiere week at the Capitol Theatre beginning June 11.

In substance, General Manager Pearson's comparisons of the new Pathe special features, The Isle of Zorda and Nanook of the North present these special points:

Zorda, Old World civilization, sophisticated to the nth degree; Nanook, New World, elementary, ingenuous. In the former the conflict is between the exercise of heroic ideals and the operation of sinister forces evolved by effete society; in the latter the conflict is between natural Man and his environment of Nature's most forbidding forces. Therefore, in their essence the two subjects are direct opposites. The "locations" are diverse in the same degree.

In Zorda there are marble palaces within which men hazard vast fortunes at the gambling table and Oriental markets where women are sold like cattle. In Nanook there are vast fields of ice and snow, where men survive through their indomitable courage and resolution, and where women are their loved and helpful mates. Zorda depicts two classes of human beings—the enormously rich and self-pampered, and the miserably poor and persecuted; Nanook shows one class, neither rich nor poor, united in the purpose of making existence bearable—often even happy—in the face of incredible difficulties.

Johnny Walker to Star In Six R-C Pictures

Johnny Walker, who appeared in Over the Hill, is the latest star to be added to the R-C production forces. According to a contract signed on May 29, at the home office of R-C Pictures in New York, Mr. Walker will produce a series of six features at the R-C studios in Los Angeles.

The new R-C star is leaving New York for the West Coast within the next few days and production will be started within a short time. Mr. Walker's director will be announced later.

Accessories An Important Factor

Paramount Giving Special Attention to Them— "If It's Worth Running, It's Worth Advertising"

"If it's worth running, it's worth advertising." This is the slogan recently adopted by Paramount's Advertising Accessories Department, by way of emphasizing the importance with which that department is now regarded in the sales organization of that company. Some time ago suggestions were asked for throughout the various exchanges and the slogan which eventually was chosen was created by Roy Davis, accessories manager at the Pittsburgh exchange.

For some time S. R. Kent has been paying a great deal of attention to the matter of improving the Paramount accessories and the system for their distribution. He proceeded on the assumption that no live-wire exhibitor will contest the box-office value of the right kind of accessories placed in the right location. To that end the department has been revolutionized and placed upon a most systematic basis whereby waste has been entirely eliminated and energy has been directed to the enlargement and improvement of the entire line.

The department has been placed under the jurisdiction of the Division of Exploitation, of which Claud Saunders is the director, and Mr. Saunders gives his personal attention to the creation of the ideas to be incorporated in the accessories. J. Albert Thorn has charge of the making of all the sketches and finished art work, together with the supervision of their manufacture, while Mel Shauer has the responsibility of the selling and distribution. Under Mr. Shauer's supervision the distribution has been standardized, with an accessories manager functioning in each of the branch exchanges. These men are all trained in their line and many of them have attended the sessions of Paramount's school for salesmanship conducted at the home office by Fred Creswell.

Approximately 110,000 sheets of poster paper are handled every week by the department—a tremendous item in itself—while the output of heralds, lobby cards, advertising mats, electrotypes, etc., is fairly staggering in the aggregate.

On Paramount's forty-one productions listed for release during the first six months of next season, the efforts of the department are being centered upon the preparation of accessories which will measure up to the standard of the pictures themselves. In the making of posters, lobby cards, heralds and other specialties the one dominating idea will be "money at the box-office."

From now on special attention will be paid to the advertising of these accessories through the advertising pages of the trade papers, the company thereby demonstrating its own belief in the slogan which it is passing on to exhibitors—"If it's worth running, it's worth advertising."

Gilson Willets, Production Manager for Pathe, Dies

The death of Gilson Willets, Pathe production manager, in Los Angeles on May 25, is announced in a telegram received by General Manager Elmer Pearson at the Pathe home office. Mr. Willets had been operated on five weeks ago for cancer of the stomach and during the last three weeks his condition had grown steadily more grave.

"The loss to Pathe is very great," said Mr. Pearson, "and not less so to the entire motion picture industry, for Mr. Willets' knowledge, experience and untiring energy were consistently exerted on behalf of better pictures."

Vignola to Take Vacation After Finishing "Knighthood"

Robert G. Vignola's ten reel production of When Knighthood Was in Flower for Cosmopolitan, will, according to present plans be completed in early June.

While the taking of scenes will be completed by then, the cutting and titling will take several weeks longer, after which Mr. Vignola plans to go on a long vacation and not do another production until fall. He expects to start work on another production in September.

Three Exhibitors Win Universal's Exploitation Prizes

Universal recently distributed $950 in prizes among three exhibitors in the $7,000 prize contest for the best exploitation put over with The Adventures of Robinson Crusoe, the Universal chapter-play adapted from Daniel DeFoe's book.

A. P. Desormeaux, manager of the Strand Theatre, Madison, Wis., won first prize of $450; Al Hamilton of the Palace Theatre, South Norwalk, Conn., won second prize of $300. The third prize, $200, was won by J. S. Woodhouse of the United Theatre, Alhambra, Cal. Honorable mention was awarded to Harry Holland of the Bishop Theatre, Bishop, Cal.; Otto L. Meister, Whitehouse Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis.; Max Marcus of the U. S. Theatre, Cleveland, Ohio; A. T. Simmons of the Dome Theatre, Akron, Ohio, and D. L. Suddath of the Amusu Theatre, Natchitoches, La.

The contest was judged by J. S. Dickerson of Motion Picture News, James Beecroft of Exhibitors Herald, and Charles Simpson of EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW.

The prizes were awarded for the three best exploitation campaigns on Robinson Crusoe put over during the month of April. Each of the three prize winners had previously won a $50 prize for one of the four best exploitation stunts put over during one or more weeks of April. In awarding the monthly prize, the entries were limited to the sixteen winners of $50 prizes.

The Robinson Crusoe contest contemplates the awarding of four prizes of $50 each week during April May, June and July. Three major prizes are awarded each month to the best three campaigns of that month.

John L. Day Goes on Annual Trip to Brazil

John L. Day, South American representative of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, will sail for Rio de Janeiro on the American Legion on June 10, on his annual trip to Brazil.

He will spend several months at the Paramount offices in Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo, arranging for increased distribution for Paramount Pictures during the coming year, under plans worked out with E. E. Shauer, director of the foreign department.

"Under Two Flags" Nears Completion at Universal City

Under Two Flags, the Universal-Jewel production of Ouida's novel, is approaching completion at Universal City. The production unit headed by Tod Browning rapidly is nearing the final "shot" in the making of the drama. Priscilla Dean, who plays the role of "Cigarette," asserts it is by far the best thing she has done for the screen.

In order to speed up production on the picture, and get it ready for early release, editing was started more than a week ago. Browning and Miss Dean have been working more than 16 hours a day since that time, rushing each day from the studio to the laboratory to superintend and assist Arthur D. Ripley and his corps of film cutters.

The cutting was delayed for several days by a fire in the cutting rooms. Miss Dean was slightly burned while helping Browning and the others remove cans of edited positive film from the proximity of the fire. She was not prevented, however, from continuing work in the final scenes being made for the picture. Several cans of the edited positive were lost, thereby necessitating a duplication of much of the editing work already done. The final picture is expected to be in eight reels.

The cast in support of Miss Dean includes James Kirkwood, who plays the chief support role; John Davidson, Ethel Grey Terry, Stuart Holmes, Bobby Mack, Fred Cravens, W. H. Bainbridge and Burton Law.

Shipman Acquires Interest in Ultra Productions

Riccardo Pizzi represented the "Ultra" Producing Company of Rome and other Italian film interests in contracts recently executed in New York City under the terms of which Ernest Shipman acquired a half interest in all productions to be made by "Ultra" for a five-year period.

Jackie Coogan will next be seen in the screen version of "Oliver Twist," produced by Sol Lesser. Quite a contrast between the stern and lovable faces, yet an angry person never did worry Jackie

Coogan's "Oliver Twist" Completed

Jackie Coogan Vehicle Screened for Company Officials at Hollywood—Prologue Is Being Written

For the first time since Frank Lloyd completed the filming of Oliver Twist, starring Jackie Coogan, the production was thrown on the screen. Only a selected audience witnessed the initial showing at Hollywood. Among those present were Sol Lesser and Adolph Ramish, having just returned from New York City. Others were Jack Coogan, Sr., Frank Lloyd, Arthur Bernstein, production manager for the Coogan company, and Mike Rosenberg of Western Pictures Exploitation Co., Hollywood.

Without titles the feature runs eight reels. Walter Anthony has been engaged to create the titles for Oliver Twist. Mr. Anthony is working with Frank Lloyd on the captions.

Oliver Twist will not be released until fall, according to the officials of the Coogan company. Whether the feature will be sent out in road-show form or released in the usual manner, is yet undecided.

Seventeen players are in Jackie's support in the Dickens production. Chief among these are Lon Chaney, Gladys Brockwell, George Siegmann, Carl Stockdale, Lionel Belmore, Aggie Herring, Edouard Trebaol, Lewis Sargent, Taylor Graves, Eddie Boland, Joseph Hazelton, Nelson MacDowell, Joan Standing, Florence Hale and others.

Anthony is creating a worded prologue which will precede the showing of the feature. This prologue will be in title form, giving the audience a brief but concise idea of the treatment given the production by Mr. Lloyd.

Mr. Lloyd was in complete charge of production with Harry Weil assisting him. Camera work was done by Glen MacWilliams as first cameraman and Robert Martin as second cameraman.

"Real Adventure" Is Current A. E. Vehicle for Vidor

The Real Adventure, Florence Vidor's second starring feature, is the current offering of Associated Exhibitors, May 28 having been the official release date.

The Real Adventure is declared by the Associated officials to be an attraction far superior to anything in which this fascinating artiste has ever before appeared. A King Vidor production in five reels, adapted from the novel by Henry Kitchell Webster, it is said to offer Miss Vidor a rare opportunity for display of her histrionic abilities.

The picture abounds in gorgeous scenic effects — strikingly impressive exteriors, such as the snow scenes on Bear Mountain, California, and wonderfully attractive interior sets, as the predominant atmosphere throughout is one of wealth and beauty. There is a display of chic and beautiful gowns which is certain to delight the heart of every woman, says the announcement.

Los Angeles Critics Praise Lloyd Film

Coast Newspapers Declare "Grandma's Boy" Raises Star and Comedy Itself to New Heights

High praise was given by the picture critics of the Los Angeles newspapers to the Harold Lloyd-Associated Exhibitors comedy, Grandma's Boy, following the world premiere in the Symphony Theatre in that city, May 14, for an indefinite run.

In the course of his review in the Los Angeles Times, Edwin Schallert says:

"Be sure and don't miss the show, because it is great. There's a serious undertone to the picture, and it's entertainment of the very best. See it and I'm certain you'll laugh a lot, and think a little too."

The Evening Herald says:

"I'd like to see a gloom germ live within seeing distance of Grandma's Boy. Lloyd hasn't overlooked a single opportunity to score a laugh, and none of them are of the forced sort; they just happen naturally and the audience rocks in its seat."

Florence Lawrence, in the Examiner:

"A bas the slapstick! 'Legitimate' comedy is henceforth to be the watchword at the Culver City studio. The intelligence of American audiences need no longer be offended by make-up which is silly and unconvincing. 'Horse-play' is definitely out. Of course all Harold Lloyd films are initially laugh-producers. They are made with that idea in mind—and they have made about a 100 per cent achievement record for giggles, smiles, guffaws, chortles, hysterics and hurricanes of mirth. But this comedy does more. It gives you more than enough to laugh about, and then food for thought as well."

Monroe Lathrop in The Evening Express:

"Sapient observers who saw Lloyd's first five-reel feature and heard its audiences roar with glee predicted a run of many weeks for the picture. It is unlike anything Lloyd has ever done and displays the star as an actor of broader scope than his most ardent admirers have known."

Doris Anderson in the Examiner:

"Harold Lloyd has achieved the ultima thule of all good comedians. He has made a five-reel comedy that is comic. Grandma's Boy is the kind of a picture that makes one wonder what he is going to do with the rest of his young life. For he has set a terrific pace for himself that might defy a new record if Lloyd weren't the indefatigable worker that he is. Grandma's Boy proves him a consummate actor who has not lost sight of the many facets of artistic appeal through his concentration on the brilliant surface of the comical."

Hastings with Merritt Crawford

Charles E. Hastings, who recently handled publicity for Distinctive Productions, Inc., and George Arliss, has joined the staff of Merritt Crawford, managing director of Screen Bulletin Service, 904 Fitzgerald Building.

More W. C. T. U. Backing Is Given "Ruling Passion"

Making good their promise to assist every exhibitor who plays George Arliss in The Ruling Passion, the motion picture service bureau of the W. C. T. U., under the directorship of Miss Elizabeth Newman of Evanston, Ill., has written to the Federated Women's Clubs giving reasons for the support tendered this Distinctive Productions feature being released through United Artists.

"We seem to have an audience with the producers, as we are living in a commercial age when figures talk," said Miss Newman in this letter. "One producer told me that his business has increased 30 per cent since the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution had gone into effect, and he seemed to think that this organization had something to do with this amendment.

"The same machinery that put field kitchens and ambulances at work on the front during the World War before the Government could assemble its machinery to meet this crisis, can accomplish just as practical results if it is directed toward moving pictures."

Expressing practically the same thought to clergymen, Miss Newman has addressed an official W. C. T. U. letter to pastors of churches in which she says:

"Do you have any thoughts on the subject that you would like to have reach Mr. Hays through this organization when I have an interview with him in the near future? The moving picture industry is to-day about what the drama was in the time when Shakespeare went to London. Is it going to take thirty-five years for us to find our Shakespeare of the moving pictures?"

It is not the aim of Miss Newman's organization to attempt a censorship of motion pictures, but it is their belief that if the public can be brought to support such a clean product as The Ruling Passion, producers will for practical reasons sons develop their work along that line.

G. A. R. Veterans Guests of Hyman on Decoration Day

The members of a Brooklyn G. A. R. Post were the guests of Managing Director Edward L. Hyman at the Brooklyn Mark Strand Theatre, Decoration Day. The men marched from their Post rooms to the theatre and attracted a great deal of attention along the way and at the entrance of the theatre. They were cheered by the assembled crowd as they entered the theatre.

Playing host to these veterans is one of Hyman's yearly policies. He greeted them personally as they entered the theatre, and they all remembered him because of his generosity on a like occasion last year.

Paramount to Film Sheldon's First Original Screen Story

The first original story for the screen by Edward Sheldon, famous author of Salvation Nell, The Song of Songs, Romance, The Nigger, and other stage successes, is shortly to be put in production by Paramount. On the High Seas is the title and it has been assigned to Irvin Willat to produce.

Dorothy Dalton and Jack Holt will be featured in the new picture and Mitchell Lewis will have an important role. Mr. Sheldon's original has been adapted for the screen by E. M. Ingleton.

Mr. Willat has just completed the filming of The Siren Call, in which Miss Dalton is also the featured player, and just as soon as he finishes the cutting he will turn his entire attention to the Sheldon story.

Henabery Arrives from Coast to Direct Alice Brady

Joseph Henabery, with his Paramount producing unit including Albert Shelby LeVino, scenario writer; Gilbert Warrenton, cameraman, and Richard Johnson, assistant director, has arrived from the Coast and will start work Monday, June 5, at the Long Island City studio of Famous Players-Lasky, on the production of a Paramount picture starring Alice Brady.

E. C. King has been placed temporarily in charge of the studio. Production there virtually ceased nearly a year ago with the completion of Peter Ibbetson. Since then the plant has been used only intermittently for production work, the company concentrating its energies at the Lasky studio in Hollywood.

The picture in which Miss Brady will be starred is Missing Millions, an adaptation of a story by Jack Boyle which ran serially in Red Book.

"Face in the Fog" Will Be Directed by Crosland

Alan Crosland, who has recently joined the Cosmopolitan corps of directors, will make The Face in the Fog, a story by Jack Boyle. The continuity is being written by John Lynch, assisted by Jack Boyle. The story is based on one of the "Boston Blackie" stories and ran in serial form in the Cosmopolitan Magazine.

The work of casting has not commenced as yet, although several prominent players are under consideration.

The picture will be made at the International Studios, 127th Street and Second Avenue, New York.

Nazimova's "Doll House" Is Praised in Detroit

"A Doll's House is a picture that every woman and every girl, every husband and every young man, should see without a doubt," said the critic for the Detroit Free Press when this United Artists' release was shown at the Washington Theatre, Detroit, recently. "Nazimova makes of Nora a genuinely real, actually pulsating personality. It is a remarkable picture, telling a remarkable story in a remarkable way.

"The story of A Doll's House is simply that of a woman slamming the door on her husband after six years of his domination," says the critic for the Detroit News. "There are marvellous bits of acting by Nazimova."

"Tess" Has International Cast

Players in Mary Pickford's Screen Revival Represent Five Countries and As Many States of Union

Insofar as birthplace is concerned, there are five different countries represented in the cast portraying the various characters in Mary Pickford's screen revival of Tess of the Storm Country, for release this fall through United Artists. There are also five different states of one of those five countries—the United States—represented.

Miss Pickford was born in Toronto, Canada, but has lived in the United States ever since she was five years of age, devoting herself at first to the speaking stage and then entering pictures in which latter field she soon became the most luminous of all stars.

David Torrence, who plays the part of Elias Graves in the new Tess of the Storm Country was born in Glasgow, Scotland, while Jean Hersholt, the Ben Letts of the revival first saw the light of day in Copenhagen, Denmark. Mme. Bodamere, who was cast in the role of Mrs. Longman, claims Paris as her birthplace.

The remaining five members of the cast were born in the United States. Lloyd Hughes, the leading man who has the part played in the original production by the late Harold Lockwood, was born in Bisbee, Arizona. His wife, known professionally as Gloria Hope, and who enacts the pathetic character of Teola Graves, made her advent into the world at Pittsburgh, Pa.

Forrest Robinson, playing Daddy Skinner, was born in Denver, Colo., while Danny Hoy, the modern Ezra Longman, is a New Yorker by birth, and Robert Russell is a native of Washington, D. C.

Thus it seems quite appropriate to term Miss Pickford's company for this production an international-interstate cast.

Filming Is Begun on First Special for Miss Kennedy

Actual filming has been commenced on the first of the series of six Madge Kennedy special productions in which Miss Kennedy is being starred by the new Kenma Corporation.

While the cast has not as yet been entirely completed, the players selected so far indicate that the all-star cast promised for the first of the new Madge Kennedy pictures will be an actuality. The leading male part will be portrayed by Monte Blue. Vincent Coleman playing leading juvenile role. A prominent character part falls to Dore Davidson, and Emily Fitzroy plays another important character in the story. Kenma is continuing to cast the picture at the Tilford Studios on West Forty-fourth Street. It is promised that other names well known in the trade and to the public at large will be announced when the cast is completed within a few days.

One of the locations secured for the production is a mammoth Italian garden on a Long Island estate. Some of the most prominent members of Long Island society will appear in these scenes.

The first two of the new Madge Kennedy productions — Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall and an adaptation of the John Golden stage success, Kiss Me—will be made in quick succession. Both will be completed and released by early fall.

"Smilin' Through" Wins Praise of Los Angeles Critics

Smilin' Through, the Norma Talmadge-First National picture, was held over for a second week at the Kinema Theatre in Los Angeles. There, as elsewhere, newspaper reviewers were lavish in praise of the production. Excerpts from some of their comments follow:

Los Angeles Examiner—"To be expected to write coherently after seeing Norma Talmadge in Smilin' Through is hardly reasonable and barely possible. It is a time for unquestionable superlatives, for sentimental outbursts and for frenzied insistence that Norma has never done a more glorious piece of work in all her career."

Los Angeles Times—"Smilin' Through is a feature with that rare thing—a heart appeal."

Los Angeles Herald—"A sincere, beautiful picture—one which leaves a deep and lasting impression and belongs to that type of photodrama which makes the world better—that is Smilin' Through. The story is exceptionally dramatic and appealing."

Los Angeles Express—"This is a production that all who are interested in better films should rejoice in."

New York F. I. L. M. Club and Hoy Service in New Quarters

The Hoy Reporting Service, of which Charles D. Hoy is proprietor, has taken possession of offices on the fifth floor of the New York Theatre Building, 1520 Broadway. Adjoining offices have been taken by the F. I. L. M. Club of New York. The latter organization now will have quarters in which it will be possible to extend hospitality to visiting exchangemen, with full office facilities.

Mr. Hoy left New York June 1 for Pittsburgh and Chicago. in which cities he will open service offices.

First National Enters Foreign Fields

Nearly Every Country in Europe and Orient Playing Attractions — May Open Exchange in Mexico

Quietly but steadily, First National attractions have been penetrating the foreign field during the last six months, under the impetus of an intensive and centrally directed sales campaign, until, with a few exceptions, every country in Europe and the Orient counts them among their regular screen entertainment, according to announcement this week.

In Great Britain, where Associated First National Pictures, Ltd., was launched early in the year with the object of booking First National attractions direct to the British exhibitor, these attractions have taken a place in their industry which they are strengthening and enlarging. Weekly trade shows are the order of the day for First Nationals in London now.

Many of these attractions are being shown in the British film world almost as soon as they are released in the United States, thus overcoming the complaint often made by English theatre men that they do not get American attractions until months, and sometimes more than a year or two, after their appearance in American theatres. While the "block booking" system, which has been the bane of the English renter, makes it impossible to achieve this completely or all at once, substantial steps have been taken by Associated First National Pictures, Ltd., to offset this booking "moratorium" in so far as they are able to do so, and they feel that it will be possible to overcome it more and more under their present mode of operation.

In Germany, First National attractions are making substantial headway and reports from the Central European market are that prospects are extremely bright and that the outlook for an excellent season next year is distinctly encouraging. The Kid has been sold for Germany for what is claimed to be an exceptional figure, and the booking of other First National attractions is reported proceeding on an equally satisfactory basis.

One of the most recent deals closed was for the territories of Belgium, Holland and Switzerland and well as with the Luporini Brothers of Milan and Torino for Italy. First National attractions have also been substantially placed for South America, South Africa, Japan, Australia, China, India, the Straits Settlement and other Oriental regions.

Another important project that is being carefully considered is the opening of an Associated First National exchange in Mexico, which will be linked up with the United States exchange system as an integral part of it. An experienced Hispano-American film man is investigating conditions south of the Rio Grande at the present writing and will present a comprehensive report on the advisability of opening an exchange in the Mexican capital at the present time. Such an action is unique in American film history, for it will be the first time an American distributing company has operated an exchange outside the United States—with the single exception of Canada—as a unit of its American exchange system.

Other developments in the foreign progress of Associated First National Pictures are expected to take definite shape within a very short time, and will form the basis of equally interesting announcements. In the opinion of First National executives, conditions in practically every foreign motion picture market are on the mend and offer increasingly favorable opportunities to the owners of worth-while box-office attractions. One or more of the First National executives will in all probability make an extended visit to Great Britain and the Continent between the present time and September 1.

The Theatre Inter-Insurance Exchange

What It Is and Does—

THE PLAN	The Theatre Inter-Insurance Exchange writes only theatre insurance. It operates on the Reciprocal plan, whereby the amount remaining from each year's premiums, after losses and expenses are paid, is returned to the policyholders instead of going to the stockholders of the company under the ordinary insurance plan.
THE SAVING	Each policyholder has saved 40% of his premium deposit, and this in view of the fact that the same initial rates are charged as are required by other companies.
SECURITY	Only a safe amount of insurance on any risk is carried net, all amounts above this being covered by a reinsurance contract with London Lloyds, the strongest and best reinsurers in the world.
SERVICE	In addition to the actual saving in cost the Exchange furnishes an inspection service and assistance on fire prevention methods and equipment that is of real value to the exhibitor.

"Reported Missing" Playing Loew Circuit in N. Y.

On April 23 Lewis J. Selznick introduced his special feature, starring Owen Moore, in Reported Missing, to the public at the Criterion Theatre, New York, and about a month later Marcus Loew brought the comedy-drama back to Times Square for four days at his State Theatre, the Loew engagement ending Sunday, May 28. The Criterion and Loew's State are just a block apart, facing Times Square, New York.

Shown publicly for the first time at the Criterion, Reported Missing has been exhibited in practically every big city in the country since April 23. The feature will now go the rounds of the Loew theatres in Greater New York, following its engagement at the State.

Jack London Novel Bought for Universal Production

John C. Brownell, Universal Scenario Chief, has just bought the screen rights to The Abyssmal Brute, one of Jack London's stories. It will be prepared for production within a few weeks, and probably will be released early in the fall.

Screen rights to this prize-ring classic were obtained from Mrs. Charmian London, widow of the novelist.

Two Releases from Paramount Week of June 4th

Over the Border, a Penrhyn Stanlaws production, featuring Betty Compson and Tom Moore, and Wallace Reid in another Byron Morgan automobile story, Across the Continent, are the productions announced by Paramount for release June 4.

Betty Compson is said to have one of the strongest emotional roles of her career in Over the Border, a story of rum-running in the Canadian Northwest. Snow scenes, including a blizzard, feature the picture. Over the Border is an adaptation by Albert Shelby Le Vino of the short story, "She of the Triple Chevron," by Sir Gilbert Parker. In the support of Miss Compson and Mr. Moore are Casson Ferguson, J. Farrell Macdonald, Sidney D'Albrook, L. C. Shumway, Jean de-Briac, Edward J. Brady and Joseph Ray.

Speed, pep, thrills and plenty of action constitute the new Wallace Reid picture, Across the Continent. The theme of the story is a transcontinental race, in which Reid drives the poor man's car, the well known flivver.

Byron Morgan wrote both the original story and the scenario especially for Mr. Reid.

Shapiro Heads Pathe Publicity and Exploitation Departments

Victor M. Shapiro's activities in the Pathe Home Office organization have been broadened by the combination, under his management, of the publicity and exploitation departments, heretofore conducted separately. It is announced that Mr. Shapiro's title while discharging his much increased duties and responsibilities will continue to be that of Exploitation Manager.

Victor M. Shapiro

This arrangement was effected on the retirement of Randolph Lewis, long chief of the Pathe Publicity Department, who recently sailed for England.

A Correction

A caption under a cut of Alan D. Marr in last week's issue stated that Mr. Marr had been appointed general manager of the Arthur S. Kane Pictures Corporation. This was a typographical error. Mr. Marr has been appointed Assistant General Manager of the corporation. The General Manager is, of course, John C. Ragland.

Praise Paramount Announcement

Exhibitors Throughout Country Find Much to Commend in Program of Forty-One Features Heralded in Trade Press

Paramount's announcement in the trade press of its program of forty-one features for the first six months of next season with release schedule and complete information concerning every one of the productions, has been received with approval by leading exihbitors throughout the country, according to an announcement made this week by the company.

From all sections, from big exhibitors and small ones alike, it is stated letters have been received congratulating the company upon its line-up and the comprehensive way it has been placed before them. One of the first heard from was Fred N. Tynes, of the Columbia and Lyric Theatres, Portsmouth, Ohio, who wrote as follows: "It is without any doubt the most interesting and comprehensive piece of publicity in this line that I have ever seen, and should prove a source of great aid and genuine benefit to all exhibitors."

Harod B. Franklin, formerly of the Shea Amusement Co., Buffalo, N. Y., wrote: "The method used by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in announcing their forty-one pictures for next season is the most complete manner of announcing a program that has come to my notice in my many years of experience in motion pictures. It cannot help but inspire confidence in an organization that has the wonderful facilities that make it able to actually plan and complete forty-one productions of such high exceptional merit."

Nathan Robbins, president, Robbins Amusement Co., Utica, N. Y.: "This is one of the greatest moves that any film company has ever made. It is honest, frank and straight from the shoulder, giving in detail the cast, story and everything pertaining to the picture, which allows every exhibitor an equal chance of knowing what he is buying. This knowledge also helps to put the exhibitor in a receptive mood when the salesman comes to sell these pictures."

Walter Hayes, vice-president, Mitchel H. Mark Realty Corp., New York City: "It will tend to obviate the haphazard and unscientific method of future bookings under which handicap the exhibitor has heretofore conducted his business."

Aaron J. Jones, president, Jones Linick & Schaefer, Chicago, Ill.: "I want to be among the first exhibitors to congratulate you and your company on your line-up. At present business is bad in all theatres and everyone is looking for better times in the fall. Whoever gets these forty-one pictures, or even a fair portion of them, ought to make money. I hope your company makes as much, for you certainly deserve it."

Edward L. Hyman, Mark Realty Corp., Strand Theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y.: "The booklet issued by you giving a definite and lucid description of the forty-one Paramount pictures to be released in the period from August to January is an ideal handbook that any exhibitor might be proud to possess."

Ben L. Morris, Spragg Amusement Co., Bellaire, Ohio: "I was very much interested in your announcements of the new output of your company, which appeared in the trade journals for the past week. I was struck with the most attractive manner in which each picture was presented—it appealed to me, an old time exhibitor who believes that most of that kind of stuff is pure bunk. I have been thinking what a wonderful one-sheet for your stuff any one of those page ads would make."

Griffith at Work on New Picture for United Artists

D. W. Griffith has begun rehearsals for his next photoplay for release through United Artists. The new production is described as a comedy drama now being outlined under the working title of "At the Grange." The story is by a Kentucky woman author, Irene Sinclair. The cast has not yet been selected.

Field Marshal French of the British Army was a guest of Mr. Griffith recently at this Orienta Point studio. Earl French was in command of the British forces at the time Mr. Griffith was taking scenes on the western battle front for "Hearts of the World."

Live News of the West Coast

BY RENEE BEEMAN

THE Mission Theatre, Los Angeles, opened last Wednesday with Fox's Monte Cristo. The Mission premieres are famous in this city as being very gala occasions. Manager Harry David always does himself proud in inviting all the cast of the picture, and all the other notables in the city who are in the industry. Flares are stationed in front of the theatre by the studio who produced the picture and movies are taken of the crowds gathered to witness the notables coming and going.

The opening performance of Monte Cristo was no exception from the rule and all of the Pacific Coast Fox contingent seemed to be present.

T. L. Tally, owner of Tally's Broadway Theatre has celebrated his twelfth anniversary as an exhibitor in Los Angeles.

Mr. Tally came to Los Angeles in 1895 and opened a photograph and kinetoscope parlor. This was his first step in the direction of the new entertaiment. The first stage of actual fulfillment was his establishing of a motion picture house in 1902. It was described as the first exclusive motion picture theatre in the world and the opening attraction was A Trip to the Moon, which was in less than one reel.

Four years later, he opened his first house on Broadway and the timely program showed pictures of the San Francisco disaster which occurred that year, 1906.

Mr. Tally has been one of the most progressive exhibitors in the city and his farsightedness not only contributed to his own attainment of success, but had much to do with the growth in picture entertainment in Los Angeles. He was concerned in the launching of the First National Exhibitor's Circuit, which has proved one of the most powerful trade organizations ever formed. He disposed of his interest in this circuit to advantage about two years ago and became interested in a California mountain resort, since that time he has been gradually loosening the reins as an exhibitor and last evening, the old Tally Theatre opened under new managership.

Mischa Guterson, orchestra leader at Grauman's, has taken over the house. One of the principal features under his direction will be a larger orchestra and special concerts, to which the Los Angeles public are so responsive.

The opening performance under the Guterson direction was attended with exceptional good-fellowship and auspicious house-warming was given by a gratifying attendance. Many floral tokens symbolizing the well wishes of Mischa Gutterson's friends were in evidence, and speeches were made by Governor Stephens and other notables.

Lois Weber has returned to Los Angeles after a year of the "most wonderful holiday anyone has ever had." She and her husband, Phillips Smalley, have traveled around the globe spending much time in Egypt, India, France, England and Germany.

She will very soon be back at work again.

Mildred Davis, who has supported Harold Lloyd in so many successful comedies, left the Hal E. Roach lot long enough the other afternoon to visit the Joy Comedy Co., where her brother Jack, eight years old, has started his motion picture career.

A Hollywood newspaper is having a campaign on clean picture productions and one headline reads: "What makes the 'movies' move? Good clean pictures, well acted with stars of ability; directed by a man who thinks more of his art than the salary he draws each week."

A series of pictures to be known as the B. P. Schulberg Specials, with Louis Gasnier directing will be made at the Louis B. Mayer Studios.

The first of these pictures will be an original by Agnes Christine Johnston and Frank Dazey, entitled Rich Men's Wives. The continuity for the production has been completed by Lois Zellner, who has many scenario achievements to her credit.

During his vacation abroad, Marshall Neilan is combining business with pleasure, by photographing scenes in the Swiss Alps and other internationally famous beauty spots of the world, which he will embody in one of his forthcoming productions under the Goldwyn banner.

At the United Studios in Hollywood things are beginning to hum. Announcement was made by President M. C. Levee of the production schedule of the producers and stars who are tenants there.

Constance Talmadge has commenced work on East Is West. It was decided to defer her round-the-world-trip, which included shots in China for this vehicle, so the Chinese atmosphere was constructed by Hollywood artists. The Norma Talmadge production of The Mirage will go into production in the very near future and Richard Walton Tully begins work on Omar the Tentmaker, with Guy Bates Post, this week. J. L. Frothingham is ready to begin shooting The Vengeance of the Deep, which he will personally direct.

As soon as Sol Lesser returns from New York the new Jackie Coogan production will be announced. The two Selznick stars, Elaine Hammerstein and Owen Moore are finishing their current productions, Under Oath and A Previous Engagement. Ruth Roland is in the middle of a Pathe serial. Allen Holubar will return to United to continue his series of Dorothy Phillips starring pictures, as he completes a special at Goldwyn and the Hamilton-White units will return from the East and resume production early in June.

Ward Lascelle will start a series of production at the Thomas H. Ince studios, the first picture of the series will start in about a week and is entitled Affinities, a Mary Roberts Rinehart story. This comedy will be directed by Mr. Lascelle with a troupe of well known players in the cast. Colleen Moore has been signed as the feminine lead and will appear throughout the series.

The Ward Lascelle productions are being released through Hodkinson.

The Roy H. Klumb Productions are releasing Tom and Jerry, the new Pygmy productions made by J. L. Roop. The producer stated he had worked for over two years on the "props" alone before he started production. Tom and Jerry's playground is not much bigger than a dining room table and the cast of their company numbered 29, including the owl, the fly and the mosquito. All the tiny props are perfect working models, even to the little windmill which stands about two feet high.

Pictures are improving according to these holdovers: The Silent Call, at Millers for 14 weeks, 792 runs for over 200,000 people, creating a world's record. Orphans of the Storm, at the Mission, 6 weeks and got space galore in the dailies. Come on Over at the DeLuxe 5 weeks and fine reviews, Beyond the Rocks, Rialto 4 weeks and going good; Smilin' Through, Kinema 3 weeks and good box office receipts.

Manager Fred Miller, of Miller's California and Miller's Theatres, Los Angeles, has booked The Crossroads of New York for the Miller Theatre, to open about the 15th of June. The Miller has just finished a 14-week run with The Silent Call, establishing a world's record. The Crossroads of New York will not be released outside of New York and Los Angeles until the Fall season. Mr. Miller is planning extensive exploitation on this new feature and is contemplating making it one of the high-spots of the season.

Carmelita Geraghty, daughter of Tom Geraghty, supervisor of productions at the Lasky studios, has returned from New York and has as a house guest Miss Elizabeth Cobb, daughter of Irvin Cobb, who will spent her vacation in Hollywood.

Lambert Hillyard has finished Brotherhood of Hate for Ince and will direct Frank Mayo in his forthcoming super-feature Universal. Hillyard directed Bill Hart for four years and is well-known in the picture field for his splendid work. The cast will include Gertrude Olmstead, Edna Murphy, Jack Curtis and Wallace MacDonald, and scenes will be taken in the extreme part of California. The picture was titled Broken Chains but conflicting with Goldwyn release by that name, the Universal title will be changed.

Carl Laemmle has ordered production on a scientific serial based on the wonder of the age, the radio. The chapter will be called The Radio King. Not only will it explain the working of the radio, but it suggests new inventions which scientists say will be perfected within the year. Robert Dillion wrote the story and Robert F. Hill, who directed Robinson Crusoe will direct the new radio serial. A big star is being considered for the title role.

Film editors under the supervision of Arthur Ripley have already begun cutting Under Two Flags, at Universal City, though the dramatic spectacle starring Priscilla Dean and directed by Tod Browning has some weeks as yet to go before the last shots are taken. The footage shot so far has simmered down to 60 reels, which indicates that Browning will have around 120,000 feet of O.K. film to judge from for the final choice in compiling about eight reels. James Kirkwood, John Davidson, Ethel Grey Terry, Stuart Holmes head the cast.

Frank H. Gowdy, who is building a $35,000 theatre for Astoria, Oregon, in addition to being a live showman is a live baseball manager. His Astoria Centennials have not been beaten so far this season. He admits they are fine boys, and according to Harry Sigmond, Oregon representative for Greater Features Inc., who recently witnessed a Sunday game, they can sure play ball.

Short Subjects and Serials

Louise Fazenda Signed for Mermaids

While in New York Jack White Engages Clever Player Who Is Now in Los Angeles with Her Hair in a Curl

Just before departing for Los Angeles a few days ago after a long visit to New York, Jack White, head of the organization producing Mermaid Comedies for Educational, revealed through the home office of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., some of his plans for work on the twelve Mermaid comedies which his company is to make in the coming year.

With Lloyd Hamilton making special comedies under his own name, new faces will be seen in some of the Mermaids. But they will be faces well known to motion picture comedy lovers. Some of the most popular comedians appearing in the Mermaid Comedy series just completed also will be seen again.

Louise Fazenda, famous comedy actress of the kinky curls, who appeared in three Punch Comedies for Educational after several years of most successful work in Sennett Comedies, will be one of the bright lights in the new year's Mermaid Comedies. Miss Fazenda was signed up by Mr. White shortly after his arrival in New York, and she is now on the coast and will work in the first picture of the new Mermaid Comedy series. Her splendid work in the Punch Comedies has received hearty praise from critics and exhibitors all over the country. The last picture in which she has appeared is the Cosmopolitan feature production, The Beauty Shop, in which she supported Raymond Hitchcock.

Lige Conley, whose work in the latest series of Mermaid Comedies was such that it won him featured parts in the last few pictures, will continue in the pictures made by Jack White, as will also Elinor Lynn, the beauty who has been seen to such advantage playing opposite Conley, and Jack Lloyd. It is probable Miss Fazenda and Conley will appear together in the earliest release of the new Mermaids.

There will be three or four units in the Jack White company, but every one of the pictures of the series will be under the detailed supervision of Mr. White himself.

Pathe Film Fables Celebrates End of First Twelvemonth

Aesop's Film Fables, Pathe's weekly animated cartoon translation of the ancient fabulist's renown tales, now celebrates its first birthday. With the release of The Maid and the Millionaire on June 11. the popular series produced by Fables Pictures. Inc., and created by Cartoonist Paul Terry, completes fifty-two weeks of screen success.

Beginning with the release of The Goose That Laid the Golden Egg on June 19, 1921, the popularity of Aesop's Film Fables has never been in doubt, and enjoys the regular attendance appeal of the serial for the exhibitor.

"I run one of these every week and it seems to be one of the best cartoons I have ever used," writes R. Navary of the Liberty Theatre, Verona, Pa. The manager of the Union Station Theatre, St. Louis, Mo., writes: "The Fables are O.K. We've been playing them right through."

While Aesop's Film Fables have strong entertainment appeal they are also of interest to the educator and student, as is evidenced by the fact that schools have indorsed them and are showing them to pupils. A news article states: "At Holley, Principal F. W. Van Zile is running these films at the local high school to the delight of the pupils and others composing capacity audiences."

"Tips" Will Reveal Baby Peggy in Role of a Hotel Bellboy

Baby Peggy, the three-year-old star of Century Comedies, has just completed two pictures which give her unusual opportunities to show her powers of mimicry. The first is called Tips, and in this she is the little boy of the elevator man in a big hotel. Her father puts her to work as a bellboy and she rustles suitcases, takes the pets of the women guests out for an airing, and works the vacuum cleaner with disastrous results to the shoes of the guests which are left in front of their doors to be polished, and to the hotel cat which is stalking a mouse through the halls. The cast comprises Fred Spencer, Jack Henderson, Inez McDonnell, and also Pal the bulldog, who is Brownie's understudy.

In The Messenger Boy a similar part has been written for Peggy. She wears a rakish uniform and carries messages from lovers and other folk with more or less mischief, but always with her ever-ready dimple and smile. The cast is composed of Blanche Payson, Harry Ascher and Inez McDonnell.

Century Comedies Making Another Animal Picture

Century Comedies has a reputation for its trained animals. Its latest release is a picture in which all the actors are animals and is called Horse Tricks. It stars Queenie the educated horse. She is supported by Maud the trained mule, Tiny Tim the pony, Stripes the Zebra, Jennie the organ grinder monkey, and Pal the dog.

The Stern Brothers were given the idea of making this picture because of the success of Mutts, the film starring Brownie with an all-dog supporting cast.

Universal to Issue "The Radio King," Up to Minute Serial

Universal has turned its attention to scientific development and is preparing for the early release of The Radio King, a serial based on the radiophone craze now sweeping the country.

The story already has been worked out, and the picture will be packed with romance and adventure, but it will also be scientifically accurate and will teach much about the radiophone.

Here are some of the ingredients promised: A brainy scoundrel, alarming the whole country with false news reports, perpetrating this national sabotage through a powerful and secret broadcasting station.

The perfection by this villain of a master wave, through which he plans to disrupt all radio receiving service in the United States and destroy millions of dollars in electrical apparatus.

The thwarting of this plan by an electrical genius, aided by the boy operators of the country.

The new photoplay will foretell inventions on which leading scientists are now working; will show the revolution in national life to be worked by the magic wand of radio.

Abe Stern Traveling in Germany

Abe Stern, vice-president of Century Film Corporation, is traveling through Germany studying film conditions there. From Frankfort, where he is staying at present, he will go to Carlsbad to take the baths.

"Rivals" Is Century Kid Picture

The second picture issued by Century Comedies with a cast composed of children is called Rivals. Brownie is starred. It is directed by Alf Goulding.

Jack White, director-producer, Educational-Mermaid Comedies, and Louise Fazenda and Lige Conley, featured in these subjects in 1922-3

Hal Roach Has Come to the Front Fast

Starting with Harold Lloyd, Producer Has Increased His Output to Include Comedies Featuring Pollard and Parrott

Hal Roach, producer of the Harold Lloyd comedies and the single reel offerings featuring "Snub" Pollard and Paul Parrott, has come to the front with rapid strides as a producer of laughs for theatre programs. Starting in a modest way only a short time ago, Mr. Roach has risen to the foremost rank of comedy producers, with his studio products becoming more popular all the time. When Hal Roach began, the "custard pie era" was in full swing, but now each offering is carefully worked out with a real idea and an amusing story forming the background for the situations provided for his featured player and staff of funmakers.

When the combination of Harold Lloyd and Hal Roach was first formed, the "Lonesome Luke" comedies were the result. Then Lloyd adopted the spectacle make-up, causing him to spring to his present popularity as a screen comedian. With the success of Harold Lloyd assured, Roach branched out in his activities, making comedies featuring "Snub" Pollard, and later comedies featuring Paul Parrott, and even going into serial production with Ruth Roland as a star.

That his efforts have been successful is evidenced by letters of approval received from exhibitors in all parts of the country. The most recent testimony comes from the Middle-West sections, where exhibitors are pleased with the Pathe policy of reissuing the Lloyd one-reelers, as well as with the rest of the Roach comedy output.

The Manager of the Liberty Theatre, Minneapolis, writes: "The Harold Lloyd reissues are very good and my patrons like them. The star has real drawing power. The films were in fine condition." The manager of the Stockholm Theatre in Minneapolis writes: "The Harold Lloyd reissues are real money getters at a right price. My patrons think they are great."

Special Music to Accompany "My Country" at the Capitol

My Country, one of the Wilderness Tales by Robert C. Bruce released by Educational, has been selected for the special program at the Capitol Theatre, New York, the week of June 4 marking the second anniversary of the Rothafel regime at the Capitol.

Mr. Rothafel caused a symphony to be written around "My Country 'Tis of Thee," which required several weeks of work by his musical staff, and this special music is to be played as part of the elaborate presentation to be given this single-reel artistic gem.

My Country is the only picture of the current series of Wilderness Tales that is not built on a dramatic story. It is all beautiful scenery.

In "Nut Sunday" Johnny Hines Is Said to Go Fast

In Torchy's Nut Sunday, featuring Johnny Hines, C. C. Burr promises one of the best two-reel comedies released this year. The theme is an elaborate one. One of the scenes will be that of a cyclone, which took the mechanical staff seven days to perfect and which was finally "shot" with excellent realism in Elmhurst, L. I. In addition, an elaborate gymnasium scene containing all possible athletic paraphernalia will be presented, in which Johnny Hines, as the athletic director, is said to cause no end of laughs in his efforts to give his rival-in-love a thorough course in physical instruction.

Another scene that should cause hilarious moments is shown in the exteriors of a sanitarium in which Torchy directs the traffic of the wheel-chair invalids according to true city cop fashion.

Included in the support of Hines are Winifred du Barry as Torchy's sweetheart; Mrs. Ida Pardee as Mrs. Ellins; Richard Thorpe as the insane head of a sanitarium; Dave Hill, Torchy's rival-in-love, whose avoirdupois gives Hines opportunity for "gags," and Sidney Dean, whose part as the wealthy Mr. Ellins, Torchy's boss, has been so admirably played by him in most of the "Torchy's" released to date. In addition, a large staff of extras in the form of nurses, doctors and patients round out the ensemble.

Breymaier Praises Entertainment Value of Pathe Review

"Highly attractive angles on what the wide world and its inhabitants offer for general entertainment on the picture screen," is one reviewer's explanation for the demand for the Pathe Review. It is stated the new service, with its novel and striking presentation and containing such original and appealing devices as the examples of screen caricature and the picturized origin of odd manners and fashions, in addition to the Pathecolor scenics, slow motion marvels and other established features, has contributed an impetus to the circulation of Pathe Review.

Pathe quotes from the following exhibitor letter among others recently received:

"It is with pleasure," writes Frank X. Breymaier, of the Barcli Theatre, Schenectady, N. Y., "that I write you of the excellent educational value of Pathe Review, which we have been showing regularly at this theatre for some time past. I feel it our duty to recommend it as exceptional and of great entertainment value.

"It offers universal appeal, and it would be folly to make any spection mention of any particular subject, as every reel is brimfull of real live and up-to-the-minute subjects. We could not afford to be without this great reel every week."

Production Humming at Christie's Studio While Boss Is Away

Production is humming along at the Christie Studio while Al Christie is away in Europe. Directors William Beaudine and Scott Sidney are on the busy list, working on the first two pictures under Christie's new contract with Educational Film Exchanges, calling for twenty Christie Comedies during the next year instead of twenty-four, as in the season now drawing to an end.

Beaudine has already started a comedy which will feature Bobby Vernon in a college and prizefight story called Pardon My Glove, which was written by W. Scott Darling. He is taking fight arena scenes every day.

Scott Sidney, having completed casting for The Son of a Sheik, is starting work on this travesty, with Neal Burns and Viora Daniel playing the leading roles. The subject is said to be the fourteenth Arabian desert picture to go into production in Los Angeles this spring, but it will be far different from any of the others, since it is a two-reel comedy and will find the funny side of romantic Sahara love.

Pugilists Praise "Leather Pushers"

Attel Enthusiastic Over Fidelity to Ringside Atmosphere and Tunney Declares the Film Is Accurate and Authentic

To reassure itself as to the technical perfection from a pugilistic standpoint of The Leather Pushers, the Universal-Jewel-Collier series of ringside two-reelers starring Reginald Denny, Universal has obtained criticisms from several prizefighters of international fame, including Abe Attel, former lightweight champion of the world; Gene Tunney, former light-heavyweight champion of America, and others.

Attel, who has retired from the ring and is now engaged in the retail shoe business, was given a private showing of Universal screen version of the H. C. Witwer stories in the "U" Projection Room, 1600 Broadway, and was enthusiastic about the fidelity with which the ringside's atmosphere was retained on the screen. The series, he believes, will go far to correct the conventional idea that boxing and prize fighting are not on the level.

Tunney, then training for his match with the challenger, Harry Greb, was unable to leave his training quarters at Red Bank, N. J., so Universal offered to send an operator, projection machine, screen and film to the champion's quarters. Tunney, who is popular and served with distinction in the A. E. F., wished to have so many of his friends and "buddies" see the pictures, that he arranged to have the series projected at the Red Bank Armory.

Tying-up with the Automobile Show Association, Universal arranged to have all war veterans, members of the State Militia and men of prominence in fistic circles invited to the showing. Considerable advance and follow-up newspaper publicity was obtained and the town plastered with one-sheets, resulting in the largest crowd ever gathered under one roof in Red Bank attending the performance. The crowds applauded the rounds shown, enthused over the big action scenes, and, despite not altogether satisfactory presentation conditions, were able to get a good idea of the pictures' quality.

Gene Tunney, in complimenting Universal on its achievement, said: "I cannot conceive of a better man in the role than Reginald Denny, who is an excellent boxer as well as splendid actor. The film is accurate and authentic in every detail and will prove intensely interesting to thousands of persons who know the 'squared circle' only by hearsay. I cannot praise The Leather Pushers too highly—it is the best series of the sort I have ever seen."

"Timber Queen" Looks Like Big Stuff

First Three Episodes of Brilliantly Photographed Ruth Roland Serial Filled with Thrills and Physical Struggle

The first three episodes of Pathe's The Timber Queen easily comes within the category of stout stuff. For the average picture-goer in search of entertainment it is likely it will be rated as a little too much so, where the three are shown together. Each one of the three episodes contains enough in the way of excitement, of thrills, to satisfy any one of near normal requirements.

The story of The Timber Queen is by Val Cleveland and the screen version by Bertram Millhauser. The direction is Fred Jackman's, under the supervision of Hal Roach. Mr. Jackman has tackled no light job, especially in view of the forest fires that seemingly rage in the third episode—which are bound to be incidents or events that lay heavy responsibility upon the guiding authority.

It may as well be mentioned right in the beginning that the photography in the new Ruth Roland serial is notable—in the matter of backgrounds and in technical execution. Those who love the big woods—and who does not—will find the sharply defined shifting scenes a continuing delight.

The story is of Ruth Reading, trustee of the timberlands, left to her on condition that she marry before her twenty-first birthday, and that in the event of her failure so to do the property shall go to her second cousin, James Cluxton. The latter, rejected as a suitor, is determined Ruth shall not marry Don Mackay, a former employee discharged by Cluxton. The period at the opening of the story is three months before Ruth's twenty-first birthday.

Those who are fond of fisticuffs will find these episodes just one fight after another—and they are ungentle affairs at that. There is a thrill almost in the opening scene, in the fall of a big tree toward the ground on which Ruth is standing. Mackay gets her out of the way. At the close of Episode 1 Ruth, on the roof of a freight car, goes spinning down the twisting side of a mountain until spectacularly rescued again by Mackay.

One of the corking shots in the second chapter is the photographing from above of four persons who dive from a cliff into a lake below. There is an aeroplane rescue of Ruth from the top of a burning tree which may be convincing to those not overkeen in their scrutiny of the action.

The trial of Mackay for murder by the sheriff under drumhead circumstances is a travesty upon justice as it would be construed in a court, but the practical lynching bee suits the ends of the scenario writer and furnishes the basis for a series of exciting incidents.

The Timber Queen, as was remarked in the opening, is stout stuff. As a serial it is big stuff so far as we may judge from three episodes. G. B.

Next Hy Mayer Travelaugh Peeks Around Monte Carlo

The fourth Hy Mayer Travelaugh to be released by R-C Pictures will be Such Is Life in Monte Carlo, which will be available to exhibitors on June 4 at R-C Exchanges. Mr. Mayer presents in this reel some fascinating views of the famous "playground" of the world in his usual entertaining manner. Street scenes, pictures of the various types of people, and all sorts of quaint views of the resort enliven the entire reel. As is usual with Mr. Mayer's pictures Monte Carlo is not merely a travel picture or a scenic. The scenic views of the little kingdom are combined with many interesting sidelights on the natives and the quaint humor of the artist.

REVIEWS OF CURRENT SHORT SUBJECTS

THREE WEEKS OFF—Century Comedy, released by Universal.—Lee Moran devotes two reels to proving to his boss that he is entitled to a vacation of three weeks and winds up by getting away with a loaf of double that length. He plays sick, and the boss feeds his employe so much medicine that he becomes actually sick. Lee retaliates, however, when the boss suffers an attack of headache. The employe puts the sick man through the same rough treatment that was meted out to him, but he cures the boss. That is the story, which Alf Goulding directs. Alberta Vaughn plays the wife to the clerk. Johnny Fox is the office boy, but there seems to be nothing about his work to stamp him as being any different from any other boy. As a matter of fact, he has little chance.

TOONERVILLE BLUES—Released by Educational.—Producer Ira M. Lowry brings into this two-reel comedy several of the more prominent cartoon characters of Fontaine Fox. There are the Skipper, with his antiquated trolley; Katrinka, the Terrible Tempered Mr. Bang, and Vernon McNutt. Dan Mason is the true to life Skipper and also justice of the peace. One of the incidents of the story is a baseball game between adjoining towns, or a burlesque interpretation of one. The titles, by Ralph Spence, contribute to the humor of the skit. There is a girl in the role of Jerry Connors who is unusually attractive.

PATHE REVIEW 159—Remarkable views of "The Falls of Natal" form the opening number. There is a poker game in which particular attention is paid to the faces of the players with the aid of the queer mirror and a camera. "Little Miss Mischief" shows the antics of a child when she dissects the contents of her mother's dressing paraphernalia and "Playing Around with the Pelicans" contains shots of the cliffs of Southern California with these long winged birds in abundance. The Pathecolor is "Where the Caravans Jump Off," showing life at an oasis on the edge of the Sahara.

A FALSE ALARM—Campbell Comedy released by Educational.—As is frequently the case in these comedies in which the monkey and the dog have parts the bulk of attention is centered upon them. Certainly their work makes a strong bid for the interest of the spectator. The first of the two reels is devoted to the adult part of the cast almost exclusively and the last half to the juvenile and animal actors. The story was written and the picture was supervised by W. S. Campbell, with Charles Hochberg and A. Linkof directing. The subject maintains a good average with its fellows.

OFFICIAL URBAN MOVIE CHAT OF M. P. T. O. A. No. 17—Distributed by Hodkinson.—F. H. Gillette, Speaker of the House of Representatives, expresses his sentiments concerning educational motion pictures. In addition to this there are views of the salt industry in California and a few household hints brought to the attention of the housewives. Also there are a nature study and scenes at a public welfare camp.

TORCHY STEPS OUT—C. C. Burr Comedy released by Educational.—The opening scene in this two-part comedy is of Johnny Hines roller skating through Fifth Avenue following the title "Unless you've made a lucky strike you've got to roll your own." Before he reaches the end of his adventures Torchy goes through fire and lands in the flood. The subject is frank farce and will rate fair to good.

KINETO REVIEW—The opening number treats of science at home, the story of sound waves as recorded by Prof. F. P. Smith of London. These interesting views illustrate the vibrations of sound waves caused by certain experiments ranging from the well-known glass bell, the tuning fork and in another case an ordinary knitting needle to a more complex apparatus that produces intricate designs when at work.

KINETO REVIEW—Seeing Scotland, by train, motor and boat.—While this subject does not seem to be new, if we may judge from the garb of the women shown in the various scenes, the mountains and vales, of which there are unusual shots, are "eternal." It is altogether a most interesting number, with views of bridges, gorges, falls, winding mountain railroads and highways, lakes, castles, and cities.

KINETO REVIEW—This number is devoted to "The United States Navy in the Making." There are twenty-six subjects, from building of models to the operating of the completed battleship. Among these are a launching, making of big guns, views of Commodore Perry's old frigate, a relic of the war of 1812; training of crews and scenes of the graduation at Annapolis.

STRICTLY MODERN—Hal Roach comedy released by Pathe.—Events and characters move quickly in this farce built around a tumbledown hotel which under the supervision of "Snub" Pollard is transformed into an institution equipped with appliances never before thought of. All right.

BILLY BLAZES—One-reel Pathe reissue.—Harold Lloyd, "Snub" Pollard and Bebe Daniels join forces in putting on a satire on the wild and woolly west as some picture makers would have us see it. It might be said to be a trifle overdrawn, if that be possible. But surely it is wild and wooly.

GO-GET-'EM HUTCH—Episode 10 of the Pathe Serial.—Charles Hutchison keeps the spectator on edge in this chapter, especially during the scenes in which he uses a scaling ladder in his effort to reach the roof of a building when the outer door is locked against him.

THE MAID AND THE MILLIONAIRE—Aesop's Fables released by Pathe.—Cartoonist Terry gives us some of his best and most humorous work in a single reeler devoted to an exemplification of the adage that "Those who try to fool others more often only fool themselves."

EASY TO COP—One-reel Star Comedy, released by Universal.—Neely Edwards as Nervy Ned and Laura La Plante as the Mayor's daughter stir up considerable excitement and make a goodly amount of fun in this comedy of the country police chief.

"More to Be Pitied Than Scorned" Expected in New York Within Fortnight Ready for Its Second and Final Editing

Actual production work on More to Be Pitied Than Scorned, first of the series of melodramatic features which C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation is to distribute, has been very nearly completed. According to word from the West Coast production center, all interiors have been "shot," and if the production schedule is carried through the coming week will see all the actual photography complete and the picture well on the way toward final editing. It is expected it will be in the New York offices of C. B. C. within a couple of weeks at the latest.

Charles E. Blaney, author of the story, has been kept in close daily touch with the progress of production and this week wired congratulations to Director Le Saint and each member of the cast on the progress that had been made in the work.

The individuals in the cast—Alice Lake, Rosemary Theby, J. Frank Glendon, and Philo McCollough—all have been featured players in large productions. "Every member of the cast has done great work," said Mr. Le Saint. "Miss Lake and Miss Theby are fine. They entered into the spirit of the production wonderfully, as did Mr. Glendon and Mr. McCollough. I am confident this is a production that will live, just as did Mr. Blaney's original play, because the material is there, and the players have brought it out."

A system of "double-editing" and "double-titling" is to be used before the production is considered complete, namely, after the feature has been edited and titled on the coast the editorial staff will come East with the picture. There another special staff of editors and titlers has already been secured to go over the picture with them again in detail, so that an altogether fresh viewpoint may be brought to bear upon it.

This plan has been hit upon by producers and distributors, the former believing that living too closely with a production tends to lessen the perspective of it.

Aywon Planning for Busy Times During Next Twelvemonth

That Nathan Hirsh, president of the Aywon Film Corporation, is convinced through observations, based on years of experience as producer, distributor and exchangeman, that the coming season will be big in the history of the motion picture industry is evidenced by the announcement he made this week of his 1922-3 releases.

The releases are led by a production starring Maciste, the international star who did such meritorious work in Cabiria and The Warrior. The picture is now being produced in Italy by the Societa Itala.

White Hell, the Northwest melodramatic success, starring Richard Travers, is another special slated for early Fall release on the Aywon program. It is a Charles Bartlett Production. Mr. Bartlett will release another production on which he is now working at the Blazed Trails, Inc., studios in Gloversville, N. Y., on the Aywon slate.

Mr. Hirsh announces also the release of a series of twelve two-reel Western pictures starring Cherokee Gill, the Indian player. In addition to this, there will be a featured entitled With Wings Outspread. This production was made in Cuba with an all star cast.

Mr. Hirsh also will release next year a series of "Diamond Dot" five reelers. In addition to these pictures, Mr. Hirsh is also negotiating for a number of well-known independent productions.

Federated, in New Offices, Contracts for Rock Comedies

Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc., has moved its New York office to 220-228 West Forty-eighth Street. Joe Brandt, executive director, elated over his new offices because of the fact that it was in the same offices he now occupies that Jesse Lasky started his first motion picture enterprise, and Brandt feels that the spirit of success that hovered over the Lasky enterprises while they were in these offices is still dominant.

The first contract signed by the Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc., for the fall releases was a series of twelve Joe Rock special comedies to be released one a month, starting the latter part of August. Joe Rock was in New York last week and outlined his plans for production, and they include the acquisition of two of the best comedy directors now producing on the coast and also a staff of comedy story writers who have a number of big comedy successes to their credit.

Thirty-six Singers to Aid Showing of "Your Best Friend"

What is declared to be the biggest and most ambitious campaign that has thus far been announced for the Warner Brothers attraction Your Best Friend, starring Vera Gordon, will be put into effect by the Screenart Pictures Corporation, Boston, controllers of the New England rights to the picture.

The feature will be shown for an indefinite run at the Providence Opera House, Providence, with a male chorus of thirty-six under the supervision of John E. Ekeberg, who is a member of the Screenart Concern. Mr. Ekeberg, prior to entering the ranks of the industry, was prominent in musical circles throughout New England. The ideas he has utilized in the musical field will be used in conjunction with the showing of the Gordon picture.

Vera Gordon has concluded her year and a half of vaudeville bookings, and is at present making appearances in conjunction with the Warner picture.

The first personal appearance of Miss Gordon was made at the Broadway-Strand, Detroit, and it is said the theatre played to the biggest business in the history of its career. Up to the present writing Miss Gordon has been booked by the Strand, Cincinnati; Strand, Milwaukee; Colonial, Columbus, and Orpheum, Akron.

Other theatres that have contracted to show the production include the Globe, Flint, Michigan; Majestic, Muskegon, Michigan; Palace, Long Beach, California; Broadway, Lawrence, Mass.; the Mary Anderson, Louisville, Ky., one of the representative houses in the blue grass territory.

According to reports received at the Warner offices the usual summer business depression has had no ill effects on those exhibitors who have shown the Gordon film.

Report Three More States Sold on "Jungle Goddess"

Another block of territory on The Jungle Goddess was disposed of this week when W. B. Underwood of Specialty Films, Inc., of Dallas, purchased Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas rights for the serial from Export and Import Film Company, Inc.

Underwood has handled the two previous Selig serials, The Lost City and Miracles of the Jungle, and is planning a big exploitation campaign to back up the latest product when he releases it some time in the early fall.

Sam Warner Talks of Studio Waste

Says There Are Production Managers Who Lack Training and That They Largely Are Responsible for Extravagance

Sam Warner, of Warner Brothers, arrived this week from the coast studios and commented interestingly on the production, management and incidentally waste of money in the making of feature productions.

It is Mr. Warner's contention that every studio should have a production manager who knows his business, that jazz music should not be overly tolerated in the studios, that most of the big film edifices on the coast have been built wrong—requiring a half day to get around to the studio proper from an office—and that no golden rule can be laid down for the making of a motion picture.

"Fully 80 per cent of the studios are busy turning out big feature attractions," said Mr. Warner. "To-day, more than at any other time, pictures are being made on a larger scale, and in the making thereof tremendous sums of money are needlessly being wasted. To curtail this waste, I believe that a production manager —one who thoroughly understands the business—should be responsible for each and every production under his supervision.

"Unfortunately producers are not training production managers. There are a great many organizations whose production manager is a man who has a financial interest in the concern and who knows little or nothing of production costs. For example, one production manager of this calibre, upon being asked by the director how much more money he could spend making a feature, immediately called up the auditor to find out the balance in the bank. He was told they had about $100,000. And the production manager informed the director that that amount was available for the director. The man who knows his business would have saved thousands of dollars, in this instance. And there are scores of similar instances on record.

"Money is wasted in this business as it is most carefully guarded in other enterprises. Jazz music, for instance, should be wiped out of the studios when not needed. I have seen many orchestras used in studios taking up valuable time and money and ofttimes seldom used for the purpose for which they were hired. Another source of waste is in the purchasing of expensive clothes for 'extras.' These people are often fitted up with costumes which could be had much cheaper. In other words, a man who did not know the business was handling the job.

"Most of the studios on the coast have been built wrong. It takes an executive almost half a day to get to the studio proper from his office. In this instance I can modestly state that our studios are ideal. From any window one can look right down on the stage. It is a one-ring circus affair with offices in front, dressing rooms on one side, carpenter shop and property room on the other, paint shop in one corner and the generating room in the other, with the stage in the center of the building.

"No one man is big enough for studio management. What I mean to imply is that there must be harmony between a production manager who knows his business and a director who knows how to direct. No golden rule can be laid down for the making of a production. but studios should have efficient and capable production managers in order to keep down the cost of a feature and produce it within a reasonable figure."

Mr. Warner has come East for an indefinite stay, and it is intimated he will produce several Warner subjects other than those being made by Harry Rapf at the West coast studios.

O'Conor Productions Will Issue Comedies Direct to Exchanges

The O'Conor Productions has entered the state rights market with a distribution plan which will release direct to state rights exchanges. This firm, of which Robert O'Conor, for five years with Hal Roach, is the chief executive, will produce and issue from its Hollywood plant a series of twenty-six two-reel comedies starring Billy Franey.

Four of these comedies have already been completed and two are in production. The title of the four, in the order of their release, are No Brains, Highly Polished, Peace and Pieces, and Hot and Cold. The principal feminine support in this series consists of Gale Henry, Vera Reynolds and Ena Gregory, all with a wide following among comedy fans.

The New York headquarters of the O'Conor Productions will be at 220 West Forty-second Street.

F. E. Samuels, formerly manager of the Los Angeles exchange of the Cinema Distributing Company, has been appointed general sales manager and will spend a month in the Eastern territory, where he will secure the personnel for the New York branch and personally answer inquiries relative to the new series of Billy Franey comedies.

"Curse of Drink" Arouses Interest of Many Exchangemen

Six prominent exchangemen visited the office of Weber & North last week to look at the five-star State rights special, The Curse of Drink, with a view to buying territorial rights. More than twice that number of local distributors are expected this week. A good number of territories were sold. Announcement of these will be made shortly.

The Curse of Drink is a six-reeler, directed by Harry O. Hoyt, produced by Joseph M. Shear and adapted from Charles E. Blaney's successful melodrama of years ago. It is not a preachment and has nothing to do with prohibition propaganda.

The high spots of the picture are a poor-rich romance between a stenographer and millionaire's son, tickling rural comedy, family sentiment, and a zig-zag runaway train episode that comes at the finish and smoothes out the threads of the story.

Harry T. Morey, George Fawcett, Edmund Breese, Marguerite Clayton and Miriam Batista form the stellar line-up.

Pacific All Set for Feature

With three juvenile screen stars in the principal male roles, the Pacific Film Co., Inc., will begin the filming of its first feature about the last week in June, according to word received from John J. Hayes, president of Pacific. Actual filming has been delayed by difficulties encountered in arranging for the three juveniles, who at first objected to a story in which a triumvirate share stellar honors. All friction has now been eliminated and the three will work in harmony, they say.

"Big Stakes" Is New Title

Franklyn E. Backer has changed the title of J. B. Warner's first starring vehicle to Big Stakes. This Western special was previously announced as High Stakes, as that was the original title of the magazine story. This is the first of a series of six Western specials in which J. B. Warner is the star.

Premier of Abraham Series

Formal invitations were issued from Burbank, Cal., for a premier showing at the University of Southern California of the Abraham Series of the Great Stories of the Bible on the evening of Thursday, June 1, in the Bovard Auditorium of the Administration Building.

Smith to Represent Pacific

After being retained by cable to represent the Pacific Film Co., Inc., throughout the entire European territory, Harry R. Smith, head of Smith's Film Sales, Ltd., of London, Eng., is en route to America. Mr. Smith will go at once to Culver City.

Buys Rights on Neal Harts

The Export & Import Film Co., Inc., announces the acquisition of all the available Neal Hart productions for the foreign market. The contract covering six pictures was closed with the Pinnacle Productions, Inc., of Chicago late this week.

Fineman Returns to Los Angeles

B. P. Fineman, president of the Edwin Carewe Pictures Corporation, which produced the independent special I Am the Law, has returned to Los Angeles. He has started plans for another Carewe production.

Mary Anderson to Portray Flapper Role for Graphic

Announcement of the final cast that is to portray for the screen Ivan Abramson's conception of the American "flapper," was announced from the offices of the Graphic Film Corporation this week. Coincident with the announcement is the decision of the title, which, according to Mr. Abramson, graphically conveys the spirit of the picture, and which, it is alleged, will pull in local flappers to every box office. Wild Youth is the caption under which the feature will be released. Mary Anderson has been decided upon by the Graphic Film Corporation to portray the American flapper. In support of the leading role of the production is Harry Morey, Thurston Hall, Julia Swayne Gordon and Joseph Stryker. The last named has been selected for the portrayal of the male flapper. The five characters chosen to date do not represent the complete cast, it is stated. The Talmadge studios have been contracted for and four sets are already in process of construction.

"We have striven for the human interest element in our story above all," said Mr. Abramson. "Lots of things have been said about the elements that make or break a picture. It is my firm contention that, given the element of something which strikes home successful box office results are assured. I think there will be a million strong who wear collegiate clothes that are going to recognize themselves in this production. I think that to at least that number the sub-titles and typical American slang will uncover many laughs.

Initial Lund Feature Is "Love's Old Sweet Song"

With every stage in the large Paragon studio at Fort Lee, N. J., occupied by sets for his first special picture under his own management, Oscar Lund is producing Love's Old Sweet Song from the story by Augustus Bertilla, with the scenario by Jacques Byrne. By keeping his technical staff busy building several interiors at once and moving his company from stage to stage without having to wait for the completion of new sets, Mr. Lund has planned to complete the studio work of what is said to be an exceptionally heavy production with elaborate interiors in the time usually taken to make a picture of average proportions. Although this method of production necessitates the use of an entire studio for one picture, the time required for the shooting of spectacular exterior scenes is said to have decided the director to follow this course so that the subject will be ready for early release.

Second National to Increase Releases to Two Each Month

Second National Pictures Corporation, which began operations at the beginning of the year with the release of David and Jonathan, a picturization of E. Temple Thurston's novel of the name, is planning to release two pictures a month, beginning with August or September instead of the one each month scheduled for the first year. The corporation had contracted for twelve pictures for the current season, for monthly release, with a wide range of subjects. The offer of additional feature pictures and special productions by independent producers, it is announced, has resulted in the change of plan.

The current releases by Second National are The Night Riders, Northwestern, from the novel by Ridgewell Cullum, filmed in the Canadian Rockies; Her Story, by Dion Titheradge, featuring Madge Titheradge; Broken Shadows, an Irish romance adapted from the novel, "Nance," by Charles Garvice, and David and Jonathan, with Madge Titheradge.

Leahy Joins Houdini Pictures

William H. Leahy has been appointed sales manager for Houdini Pictures Corporation, which is producing special feature productions for the state rights market. Mr. Leahy is concentrating his efforts on the first Houdini picture, The Man From Beyond, which was shown recently at the Times Square Theatre, New York.

Star Serial Employs "Follow-Up" System for Production Use

A "follow-up" system whereby the Star Serial Corporation, producers and distributors of Cap'n Kidd, the Eddie Polo serial, will be in complete touch with territorial buyers and through them with exhibitors playing the serial, has been instituted.

Briefly, the plan calls for a checking up on every one of the fifteen episodes through every detail of their booking, the real work not being over but just beginning when the serial is sold for a given territory.

As soon as a territory is sold a letter goes to the buyer asking that Star Serial be kept advised of every smallest detail of the handling of the serial—pre-release showings, special exploitation, and especially a list of all bookings secured.

These bookings are then indexed under the name of the exchanges, according to date. A few days before each booking a letter goes to the exchange asking it to communicate with the exhibitor as to any special exploitation he is putting over on the serial, and to notify Star Serial how the showing goes over, what the exhibitor thought of it, and how his patrons liked it. A similar letter goes to the exhibitor himself.

All details on how the picture went over are carefully assorted according to the number of the episode shown. These are referred back to the production and scenario departments.

Zimmerman Brings Two Films from Vienna Studio

Raymond R. Zimmerman, identified for some time with motion pictures in Texas and the Southwest, has arrived in New York from Central Europe, where he has been investigating studio and production work with Vienna as his headquarters. He is American representative of Mondial Productions, of Vienna. Two productions which Mr. Zimmerman has brought with him and which were filmed under his advice and co-operation for the American market are Sylvia of the Tyrol, produced in the Alpine villages, and On the Blue Danube, a romance of old Vienna life. These pictures are to be distributed on the states-right plan, according to Mr. Zimmerman, who is now stopping at the Marlborough.

"Cap'n Kidd" Goes to Mexico

The Star Serial Corporation, which controls world rights to the serial, has signed contracts with International Pictures, whereby the latter company will handle Cap'n Kidd in Mexico.

Mr. Castro announces that advices from International state it considers the acquisition one of the biggest things it has done in some time, both because of Polo's personal popularity in Mexico and the word that has reached them regarding Cap'n Kidd.

Pacific to Open Exchanges

During the first week in July the Pacific Film Co., Inc., producers and distributors, will open at least six exchanges in key cities west of the Mississippi, according to word received from John J. Hayes, president of Pacific.

E. H. Silcocks, general sales manager of Pacific, who recently returned from a sales tour, will supervise the opening of the exchanges.

Special Titles for "Hallroom Boys"

Producer Harry Cohn Will Pay Especial Attention to Their "Dressing Up," Giving Heed to Pictorial and Verbal Values

Believing that the titles of a comedy are of almost equal importance to the action itself in getting laughs, and that good titles can make or break a comedy, Harry Cohn, producer of the popular two-reel Hallroom Boys Comedies, announces this week that the closest attention will be given not only to the content of the titles on the new 1922-3 series but to their "dressing up" as well.

With this end in view, the titles on the new series are all to be specially illustrated with cartoons, each cartoon carefully thought out to get the greatest comedy value out of the action preceding and following the title and out of the comedy meaning of the title itself.

The purpose is to make these cartoons as effective as possible, and, with that end in view, several well known cartoonists were given a special showing this week of the first comedy on the new series, which is now in the New York offices of Hallrom Boys Photoplays, Inc., and asked to submit their ideas of how the titles should be cartooned. New styles of cartooning and line sketching have been requested specially, and the sketches will be judged according to both originality of style and the humor of their subject. H. A. McGill, originator of the famous Percy and Ferdie cartoons, upon which the Hallroom Boys Comedies are based, is heading the committee to whom the sketches are to be referred, and the style chosen will be used throughout the series.

This is the second innovation producer Harry Cohn has instituted in the titling of the Hallroom Boys Comedies, the first being made some time ago when he instituted the method of taking down funny remarks and spontaneous "wise cracks" made on location during the making of the comedies and working them into titles, believing that this type of spontaneous humor would prove most telling.

"Comedy titles need much more thought than do titles for a feature," said Harry Cohn. "A comedy's got to be funny every minute, and if the titles flop it's mighty hard for the action to boost the comedy up again. We are always looking for something new in the titling of our Hallroom Boys Comedies."

"Big Boy" Williams Makes Appearance at Dallas Theatre

A record in first run booking in a leading theatre at Dallas, Tex., took place this week when L. T. Pellerin of the R. D. Lewis Film Co. found that "Big Boy" Guinn Williams could make a personal appearance in Dallas. Having contracted for the Williams series to show in the south and southwest at a later date, Pellerin realized that he could "cash in" by playing the latest "Big Boy" Williams production produced by Frederick Herbst.

As soon as Williams wired his assent for an appearance Pellerin got busy with local newspapers, which were generous with their space. "Big Boy" was played up, so that his coming was an event in Dallas. The record mentioned was made when Pellerin wired Joe Di Lorenzo, president of Di Lorenzo, Inc., distributors of the "Big Boy" Williams series, asking whether it would be possible to get a print of The Trail of Hate out to Dallas in time for the personal appearance. It arrived on time, and so well pleased was the local managment with Williams' latest westerner, that it was decided to play it for a full week in conjunction with Williams' appearance.

Arthur Housman Is to Be Featured in "The Snitching Hour"

Herbert L. Steiner plans to produce a series of five-reel comedies and comedy dramas featuring Arthur Housman, to be released by the Clark-Cornelius Corporation.

The first, The Snitching Hour, directed by Alan Crosland from an original story by Lewis Allen Browne, is nearly completed. Joseph W. Farnham has titled the picture, which is said to be a farce comedy of unusual mirth-producing qualities.

Mr. Housman is well known to photoplay goers, but hitherto has not been featured in a long photoplay. His early screen work was with Selig, Edison, Kalem, Lubin and others of the old time companies and with Goldwyn, Selznick and others.

Syracuse Residents See "Isle of Doubt" and Greet the Cast

The Syracuse Motion Pictures Company entertained many film notables and representative residents of Syracuse, N. Y., May 24, at a private showing of The Isle of Doubt, the first feature picture to be completed. The Hotel Onondaga was all dolled up for the occasion, and the society folk of the up-state city made the event a great success.

Wyndham Standing, the star of the production, made a speech. Director Hamilton Smith and Chief Cinematographer Arthur Cadwell, who were in charge of the festivities, introduced other members of the cast, including the great American favorite, George Fawcett, Dorothy Mackaill, Warner Richmond, Marie Burke and Arthur Dewey.

Ricord Gradwell, President of the Producers Security Corporation which will handle distribution of the Syracuse Pictures, and his sttaff journeyed to Syracuse to witness the showing, and all expressed delight.

Immediately after the showing, all the guests retired to the grand ballroom, where a reception and ball was held. The second of the Syracuse Motion Pictures Company's series of features will be started at once.

"Retribution" Opens at Park

Lou Rogers of Rialto Films, Inc., will present at The Park Theatre, Fifty-ninth Street and Columbus Circle, New York, on Monday, June 5, for the first time in America the six-reel feature picture, Rètribution, or the story of Lucretia Borgia. The subject was made in Italy under the direction of Innocenti. The scenario was prepared by Fausto Salvatori. The cast is headed by Countess Irene Saffo Momo, Enrico Piacenti, Eugenio Gilardoni, Signorina San Gusto, Signor Troise and Signor Papa.

Lester Scott in South

Lester Scott, sales representative of Affiliated Distributors, Inc., has been in the South for the past week in the interest of the Edwin Carewe independent special I Am the Law. Scott has done some very fine work in the marketing of this production among state rights buyers, and has succeeded in disposing of the rights to the picture in a majority of the United States territories.

Samford Completes Second

The second of the series of the two-reel Tweedy comedies, produced by the Sanford Productions, 6046-6048 Sunset Boulevard, Hollywood, is now completed and the releasing title is Take a Tip. This is the story in which the company went to Tia Juana, Mexico, in order to secure actual race track scenes and atmosphere.

Bromberger to Handle Pacific

A. C. Bromberger of Atlanta will handle the entire feature series released by the Pacific Film Co., Inc. Mr. Bromberger's first Pacific feature was The Fatal 30, the maiden production effort of Pacific.

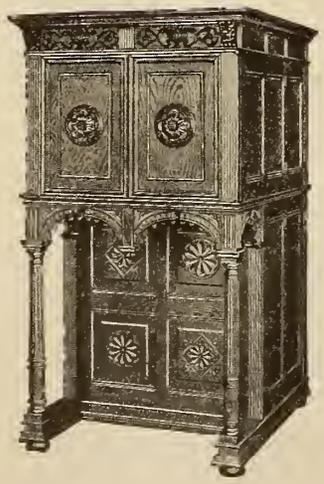
The LYRADION Concert Grande

Equipped With

Seabrook Amplifying Horn

Only one theatre in your city can have a Concert Grande—will it be yours?



A Smaller Model

The true value of any theatre attraction is always its ability to show results in the box office. The Lyradion Concert Grande combines high class entertainment with a real service to your patrons that is not only novel and innovative but a source of permanent attraction.

By playing the current phonograph records as they are released you give your patrons the opportunity of making their record selections at your theatre instead of at the stores of several dealers. It brings to your theatre a host of phonograph fans who can be made movie fans as well.

The Lyradion Concert Grande is built for theatre use exclusively—it is powerful enough to fill any theatre and capable of reproducing phonograph music in the same volume and purity of tone that characterized its original recording.

There is no instrument like the Lyradion because there is no horn like the Seabrook amplifyer. This remarkable horn is constructed on entirely new principles fully covered by basic patents. It gives a clarity and distinctness of tone that completely separates the various instruments of a recorded selection—any one of them can be followed through the entire record with no confusion of sound so common with other phonograph reproductions.

Play the "feature" with your organ and use the Concert Grande as a phonograph during the comedy and news reel.

Only one Concert Grande will be placed in cities up to 200,000 population. Act quick if you want to secure this popular attraction for your theatre.

When Outdoor Shows Come to Town

Some Exhibitors Shudder and Let Them Get Away With the Business

THIS is the season for the advent of the carnival and circus and the opening of outdoor parks. It is the natural season also for many exhibitors to show extreme nervousness over the opposition which outdoor attractions present to the local theatre.

To fight this opposition fairly and effectively is a problem and throughout the Middle West as this article is being written showmen report that business takes a tumble when the tent shows come to town.

In meeting this opposition a showman must be careful not to fight his opposition in such a way that his efforts will in any way advertise the opposition. Much valuable advertising is often given by calling attention to the opposition.

In recent years public opinion has turned against the carnival and freak show. In many cities it has brought with it a crime wave and often the hangers on in a carnival are ex-jailbirds and ply their trade while the carnival is in full sway. So an exhibitor need not worry much about carnivals. They have been barred in many cities.

The circus is tough opposition. It is a legitimate attraction, a national institution, but fortunately its stay in the majority of American cities is limited to one, two and three days and to a week or longer in the largest cities.

STIR UP YOUR LOCAL FEELING Thanks to the hard work of motion picture theatre owners throughout the country the picture house is getting recognition to-day as a local institution and entitled to the support of the residents of the locality and its business houses. The harmonious manner in which theatres have tied up with local merchants on exploitation stunts has led to a better mutual understanding. Theatres have worked hand in hand with local civic bodies, giving benefit performances and lending themselves to charitable movements. The theatre owner is thus intrenched in the esteem of his fellow townsmen and he should take advantage of the fact. In taking this advantage he is not to be considered selfish any more than the merchant who advertises "patronize home industries" or "deal with your neighborhood stores" is to be criticized for his home appeal.

DIGNIFIED CAMPAIGN Except in promoting "Go to The Movies" weeks and similar drives we have yet to hear of an exhibitor who has gone after his transient opposition in the right way. In this connection we have several suggestions to offer, the first being a type of newspaper advertising to be used when outside opposition comes to town. Such catch lines as these should be used in the regular newspaper advertising:

> WE PAY OUR TAXES IN NEBRASKA YEAR IN AND YEAR OUT.

> THE LIBERTY THEATRE IS AS MUCH YOURS AS THE TOWN HALL.

> WE ARE OPEN DAY IN AND DAY OUT THROUGHOUT THE YEAR FOR THE BENEFIT OF PEORIA'S CITIZENS.

> THE BEST MOTION PICTURES AND MUSIC ARE PROVIDED FOR ATLANTA BY THE STRAND.
> ATLANTA APPRECIATES HOME INDUSTRIES.

MAKE POST CARD APPEAL The use of the mailing list will help to combat transient opposition; for it makes a personal appeal that seldom fails to reach home. For post card effects we suggest something like this:

> IT COSTS MONEY TO PROVIDE THE BEST IN MOTION PICTURES AND MUSIC FOR THE PEOPLE OF ATWATER, BUT THEY GET THE BEST AT THE CRITERION THEATRE BECAUSE THE MANAGEMENT BELIEVES ATWATER IS ENTITLED TO THE BEST.
> ARE YOU PATRONIZING YOUR HOME TOWN THEATRE? HENRY JONES, Mgr.

We suggest that the postcard bear the written signature of the manager or owner. Another postcard effort might be:

> SEABRIGHT SUPPORTS YOU!
> YOUR FAMILY LIVES HERE, YOU EARN YOUR LIVELIHOOD HERE.
> THE SAVOY THEATRE DEPENDS UPON THE PATRONAGE OF SEABRIGHT FOLKS AND WE TRY TO GIVE YOU THE BEST.
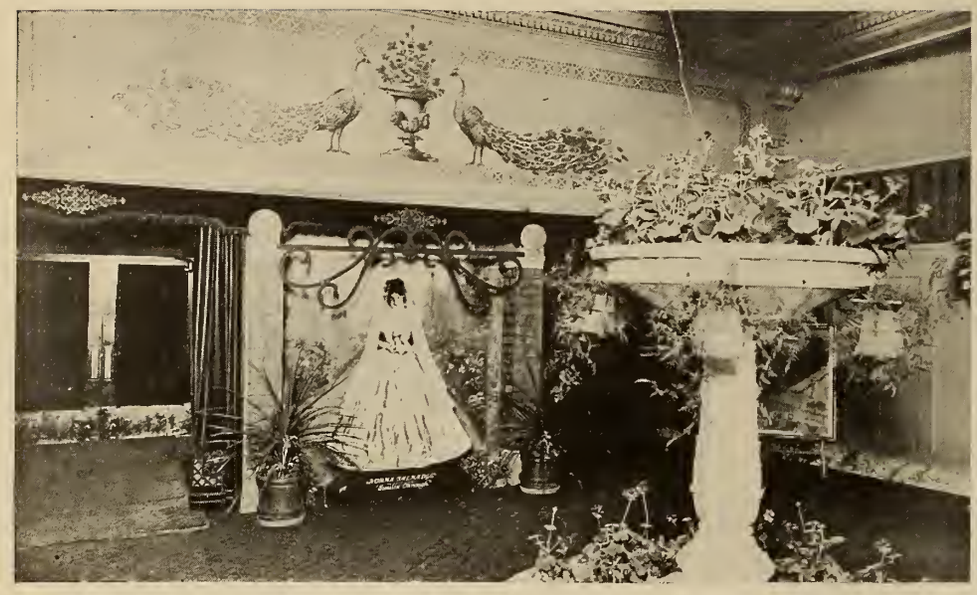
> BOOST SEABRIGHT BY PATRONIZING ITS HOME THEATRE. JOHN SMITH, Propr.
> SAVOY THEATRE.

It might not be amiss this summer when the transient show comes to town to invite you local newspaper editor and his staff to come down and inspect your house and give you a write up. You can interest him mightily. Show him how much it costs you to keep a going. Interest him in the mysteries of your house, the projection room (editors still think magic lanterns are used in movie theatres), show him your screen, your booking arrangements and all the other things he is not acquainted with.

When the story appears it will impress your fellow townspeople with the importance of your theatre and the effort to which you go to supply the town with proper amusement.

It costs but little to do these things and they help a lot.



Manager Noble of the Liberty, Portland, Ore., used a large cut-out of Norma Talmadge against a background of a garden scene made of papier mache posts and imitation trellis as a lobby decoration for First National's "Smilin' Through." It was placed in the lobby two weeks in advance of the play date.

Even Luther Burbank would have looked with interest at this floral window tie-up for First National's "Smilin' Through" while it was playing at the Olympia, New Haven, Conn.

The manager of the Olympic told the citizens of Wichita Falls, Texas, he was playing First National's "Molly O" with a huge electric sign twenty-eight feet high and three feet wide.

When United Artists' "Orphans of the Storm" was playing the Providence Opera House, Providence, R. I., it was a draw as to which attracted the most attention, this window or the picture. The simplicity of the window is one of the things that made it so attractive.

Boosters' Club

Several unique angles were opened for exploitation in the Smilin' Through campaign for the Park Theatre, Boston, Mass., that brought stupendous results on this First National attraction.

One of them demonstrated the efficacy of providing your own working machine. With a limited amount of time at his disposal the exploitation man arranged for the co-operation of the Boosters' Club. No one else in Boston knew of the club so he received credit for being the founder, organizer and the first and only member. Streamers posted throughout most of the prominent Boston stores prior to and during the run of the picture carried the slogan:

> "Buy from Boston Merchants—Help boost your city—Go Smilin' Through 1922—This Store is a Member of the Boston Boosters' Club."

For the second time in its history the Boston Street Car Company permitted the use of one of its cars for advertising purposes and gave over a car which was placarded with Smilin' Through posters. The exploitation man hit two targets at once because he also carried a line for the Jewish War Relief drive on his posters. It created good will and aroused additional interest in the car of "Smiles."

An old fashioned victoria of the Civil War period was dug out and equipped for a pair, apparently going to the church for the ceremony. On their tour of the streets they gave out 10,000 wedding invitations. The principal point to the stunt was that it brought people up to the victoria and guaranteed that they would know what it was all about. Two thousand telephone hangers were placed, thirty-six window displays were landed and Smilin' Through was played in 100 theatres, restaurants and cabarets the week before the engagement at the Park began.

An exclusive dry goods company conceded a window in which a reproduction of Norma Talmadge in bridal array was arranged as an incentive for June brides to shop there. For the front of the theatre the old graphophone was used to good effect. Just the horn of the machine showed in front, but the wiring from the rear connected with it and when the record of Smilin' Through was put on, it came upon the assembled crowds apparently from nowhere. The stunt may have been used before; but it worked wonders in drawing interest.

Drug Store Tie-Up

The big drug-store near the Idle Hour Theatre, Milwaukee, found a lot of advertising value in Fool's Paradise for they donated a window which sold by the picture and kodaks for other kinds of pictures.

The background of the window was covered by four Paramount one-sheets which gave a great flash. In the front were palms suggestive of the Florida or Siamese atmosphere of the picture, kodaks, and stills.

The window card read:

> Even with this little camera, you can take pictures of your trip to Florida, the woods, or the zoo, that will continually bring back fond memories of your animal friends.

Three baby alligators gave still more life to the display.

Penrod Tie-ups

The Branford Theatre, Newark, N. J., has figured in the annals of exploitation before; but it added its most luminous chapter when M. J. Cullen, publicity director, put over his campaign on Penrod. The addition of this chapter to the annals of exploitation covered a period starting several weeks before the picture opened its run through the use of teaser ads.

Tie-ups were effected with a florist who featured a "Penrod Tulip," a soda shop selling "Penrod Sundaes" and music shops carrying the "Penrod" song. The largest department store in Newark participated in a triple tie-up that included the "Penrod" song, the book "Penrod," by Booth Tarkington and a display of "Penrod" suits. The makers of these suits were so interested in the success of that angle of the campaign that they personally supervised the display and visited Newark to work in co-operation with the store and theatre.

The Newark Safety Patrol, consisting of public school pupils who do traffic duty before and after school hours, were guests at a special Saturday morning show. Two of the honor boys who had been mentioned for heroism, were awarded "Penrod" suits, the award placing the theatre, the store and the suit in the newspaper news sections with appropriate photographs snapped as the awards were being made. Motion picture news cameramen were on hand to take footage with the result that added interest was gained for Penrod when this section of film was shown at local theatres.

The front of the theatre had five foot letters that spelled "P-E-N-R-O-D" suspended from the maruee. Inside the lobby the tile was written out with letters cut from beaver board and set against the marble work with about six feet between each letter. A large cut out of Freckles Barry's head was placed on the corner of the theatre with the title of the picture. Electric lights illuminated this display.

Good Work

Manager W. E. Drumbar of the Riviera Theatre, Knoxville, Tenn., planned and executed one of the notable campaigns of the season in connection with Fox's A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court. The publicity and advertising devoted included everything from lobby display to special billings.

To start with the mirrors of the lobby were so draped as to give an outside balcony effect while the marble was draped to give an inside court effect. The draperies and curtains were rich in color and draped in the fashion of the time. Otherwise the lobby was set in keeping with the atmosphere of "King Arthur's Court."

A large flaring banner, fifty feet wide and eight feet high, was stretched across the principal street from the top of the Riviera Theatre to the top of the Queen Theatre, across the street. A powerful search light played on this at night, making it visible for blocks. The city was billed as for a circus. Idle windows, fences, telephone posts and similar places were put to work and Drumbar even got permission from the City Commissioners to use the city trash cans located on all principal corners.

Are Seattle usherettes competing with Atlanta's? This bunch of maids, all dolled up, handled the crowds that visited the Strand, Seattle, Wash., during the run of United Artists' "Orphans of the Storm." They make the sign under which they are standing easier to read.

Manager McClure of the Strand, Emporia, Kan., put out this ballyhoo for Paramount's "Fool's Paradise." What could be more appropriate than foolishness to exploit "Fool's Paradise."

Manager Burns of the Beacham, Orlando, Fla., changed his box office into a "pay office" for First National's "Pay Day." Instead of paying out, he received from the waiting line.

The New Theatre, Baltimore, Md., put out a ballyhoo for R-C's "Queen o' the Turf" that was led by Morvich's rival. His rival, however, was the race horse in "Queen o' the Turf." This made a splendid ballyhoo, as interest in Morvich is now at fever heat. His name on the lead horse made people talk.

Ten Commandments of an Usherette

By W. J. Quinn, Manager Director, Kinema Theatre, Los Angeles

1—Always make it a point to be anywhere from ten minutes to a half hour late. This will be sure to make a big hit with the Chief Usher, whose sudden death might be caused by the girls being on time.

2—On entering the theatre, always rush in through the front entrance and go up the main staircase two or three steps at a time and in doing this be sure and make as much noise as possible so that everyone in the theatre will know that you have arrived.

3—Before coming down on the floor to go on duty be sure and put plenty of rouge and powder on so that it can be seen plainly enough from any place in the theatre. This will make a decided hit with our patrons who like to see everything very clearly from wherever they may be sitting.

4—Just before leaving your dressing room never fail to start an argument with some of the other girls, telling them just exactly who you are and what you think of them. This always tends to create a good feeling among everybody concerned.

5—On reaching the main foyer to be given your instructions by the chief usher, never fail to disagree with her and give her to understand that you really know a great deal more about the work than she does. If she gives you a certain position to work at, always do just the opposite. You will be sure to last a long time working in this manner.

6—Always run to the manager with every petty little tale that you can think of in order to make it miserable for someone else. This makes quite an impression on the manager as a rule and he never forgets you.

7—While on duty be sure to make the patrons feel as though you were doing them a big favor in looking after their interests and that as a matter of fact they had no right in the theatre anyway.

8—When a patron asks for any information concerning the theatre, let him or her know very plainly that you are not an information bureau. You're only an usherette. Then let them stumble around for a while until they finally walk out and request their money back. Then you may rest assured your work is completed.

9—Never take any pride in the way your uniform looks. Always let it get run down as much as possible so that it always needs mending, pressing, etc., so bad that the patrons will be sure and notice it, and so that they in turn can tell the management, who always feel very proud to have the patrons notice the improvements.

10—Finally, you should always watch the clock very carefully so that you will be ready to jump the minute your time is up and rush upstairs, pull off your uniform as quickly as possible, adding a rip or two wherever necessary, then throw it on the floor, because lockers are really a nuisance with so much floor space, and then rush downstairs again and out through the front entrance, not forgetting to bump into some of the patrons who might be unfortunate enough to want to go out at the same time. The manager will always be glad to see you getting away so promptly and quietly.

New Angle on Rain Insurance

Theatre Patrons in Bethlehem and Allentown, Pa., Furnished Free Taxi Should Rainfall Exceed One-Tenth of One Inch

Something decidedly new in co-operation between producer and exhibitor in making the screening of a feature film an assured success has been evolved by Allen Glenn, publicity man for Determination, one of the I. F. C. feature shows.

Put on first at the Lehigh-Orpheum Theatre at Bethlehem, Pa., and at the Lyric Theatre at Allentown, Pa., two towns of 50,000 to 75,000 population about ten miles apart, the plan consisted of furnishing taxicab service to patrons in the event that it rained during the week's screening of Determination at these two playhouses.

Its unique and novel features were widely advertised in Allentown and Bethlehem by the two theatres, whose managers used billboards, newspapers, placards and posters, as well as announcements in the lobby and from the stage, to tell the patrons that they could arrange to see Determination even though heaven rained town the traditional pitchforks and frogs. All that must be done was to go to a telephone, call up a taxicab company, and if in Allentown, say, "send Lyric taxi please to No. so and so" or in Bethlehem to demand, "Lehigh-Orpheum taxi please for No. so and so" and a car would call, take the patron to the theatre and bring him or her back home after the show, provided that it still was raining.

This arrangement was made by one of the national insurance companies which has opened a department of insurance for enterprises which have invested considerable money in advance on open weather productions, such as fairs, carnivals, mass meetings, pageants, parades, circuses and similar events, whose business would be knocked into a cocked hat if old Jupe Pluve were to open his floodgates and "throw cold water" on the scheme when the day for its fruition was at hand. These policies cover the investments of persons promoting such events, so that if one tenth of an inch of rain should fall on the day of the affair, the amount of the policy would be paid to the promoter or promoters. Under this arrangement, people engaged in open air work have gone ahead with their plans secured against loss in the event of storm. It will be recalled that Lloyds, the famous English underwriters first started this system of protecting amusement enterprises against loss about twenty years ago when the sudden illness of the late Edward VII. of England on the eve of the planned coronation and that monarch at Westminster Abbey caused losses running into millions of pounds for those who had arranged to entertain visitors gathered from the four corners of the earth to help celebrate his formal coronation as King of England and Emperor of India. After the Edward VII. fiasco, Lloyds started the fair weather, visitation of providence, act of God, storm, tornado and other insurance for out door enterprises and other events whose success depended upon there being no combination of causes conspiring to upset plans made whose consummation hinged upon everything going through as arranged originally.

It remained for Allen Glenn of the Independent Film Corporation to turn a perfectly good out of doors scheme into one that works inside a theatre. For, while rain does not hurt a playhouse as far as the structure is concerned, a Cecil De Mille or D. W. Griffith production will go on the rocks if the weather is such that the patrons won't venture out of doors. Hence the extension of the "act of God" policies to the indoor amusement enterprise.

With such an arrangement, the managements of the Lehigh-Orpheum at Bethlehem and the Lyric at Allentown booked up Determination for the full week and went ahead with all possible zest in its preliminary exploitation, because they were assured that the average person would date ahead a night to see the show and would go, taking a taxi at no cost to the theatre. The feature in itself was dandy advertising, says Manager Joseph Levy of the Lyric at Allentown and brought the film before the public in a way that makes the plan seem one well worth the attention of producers who have some thought for the welfare of the men who take a chance on bad weather when they book pictures at high rentals such as feature films will command for first release.

Best things come last, so here is the kernel of the whole story. It did not rain any time that week. The taxi companies have no bills to send in to the insurance company. But, as a stunt, it worked well and showed consideration toward the emergencies which might confront the patron which left a good taste in the mouth of the public.

Personal Approval

Rarely does the Saenger Amusement Company place its personal stamp of approval on any picture; but when it does that endorsement is generally accepted as sincere and genuine by the theatre going public. Such approval was given the showing of Smilin' Through by the company at all its theatres, and these endorsements, discreetly used have a distinct box office value.

Building a Prologue in the South

ENRICO LEIDE, managing director of the Howard, Atlanta, Ga., started to work on his prologue for Fox's Queen of Sheba, four weeks in advance of the play date. His first step, after being informed by the Central office (Southern Enterprises) of the date on which he was to play this feature, was to secure all of the stills possible from the exchange.

From these stills, he decided on what sort of a prologue would be most appropriate for Queen of Sheba, and then carefully went over each detail of it with his art director, chief electrician and stage manager. After all of these details had been decided on, rough sketches of the settings and props were made and turned over to the art director to complete.

After having made up his mind as to what situations he wanted to use, Leide then writes the score. He usually chooses popular ballads, songs with tuneful melodies that are popular with his patrons, and from this selection he prepares the orchestration. He generally revives popular numbers from once favorite musical comedies, and has recently brought old songs from the "Merry Widow," The Red Mill," and "Katinka" back into popularity in Atlanta by using them in his different presentations.

Atlanta does not have Sunday shows, so the first rehearsal of a prologue or special musical number takes place on Saturday night after the last show. This rehearsal is conducted with a piano, and on the following Monday morning, before the first show, a full-dress rehearsal is staged in which the orchestra is used, and all of the rough spots which developed in the Saturday night rehearsal are smoothed out. At this rehearsal, signals, controlled by a pedal system of bells operating between the electrician and stage manager, are worked out in a special code, so there will be no slip in the proper lighting effects.

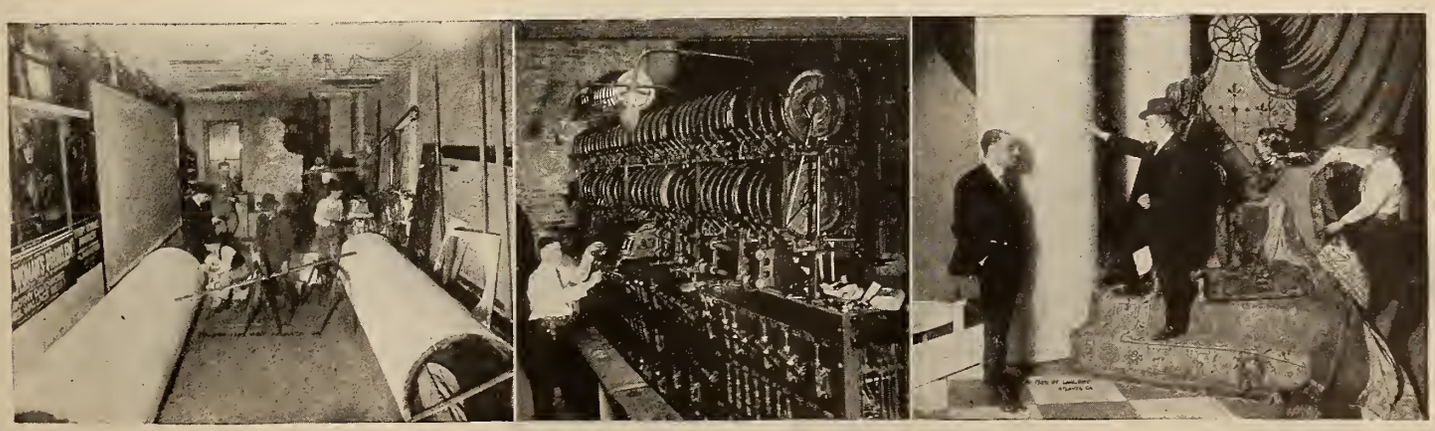
One great difficulty Leide has encountered in Atlanta is the dearth of theatrical talent. To offset this lack of professional talent, which often necessitates a different shaping of his prologue, he plays up home interest by using amateurs who are well known in and around the city. So far, he has been very successful in his selections, and has not yet been forced to sacrifice any part of his prologues to meet this limitation.

Leide always makes a practice of tying his prologue up with the theme of the picture if possible, but when this cannot be done he follows some situation that is thrown into relief, or he plays up some current event that he knows the patrons of the Howard are interested in. By doing this, he is gradually bringing the Howard to a point where it will soon be regarded as an Atlanta institution; one that must be seen by every visitor.

Music Tie-up

From both a national standpoint and from effectiveness with a music tie-up the exploitation on the song, "Smilin' Through," has been a big thing. Tie-ups with First National's Smilin' Through have been effected in Newark, Boston, Atlanta, Cleveland, Brooklyn, Seattle, and in fact every city where the picture has played.

The results are due in large part to the effective and alert agents handling the song. In every city and town they have evidenced a keen readiness to co-operate with the theatre manager. As a result scores of managers have written to the First National offices that this is one of the easiest and most effective tie-ups conceived in some time.



Left—View of the workshop of the Howard, Atlanta, Ga., preparing sets to be used in prologue for Fox's "Queen of Sheba." Center—Switchboard and dimmers of the Howard. Right—Placing the sets used in the prologue for Fox's "Queen of Sheba"

The Tower Block, Saginaw, Michigan, is a "flatiron" shaped building at the intersection of five streets in the center of the city, and the management of the Mecca Theatre, drew a "royal flush" when they covered this corner with billing for United Artists' "Orphans of the Storm."

Two of the windows arranged by Manager Creamer of the Strand, Chillicothe, Ohio, for First National's "Mother O' Mine." The one on the left is a tie-up with a shoe store, while on the right is one with a music store in which a large cut-out from a poster was used.

Creamer got hold of a big window of a furniture store in which kitchen cabinets were featured along with a large poster of First National's "Mother O' Mine." The tie-up is a good one, as kitchen cabinets are appreciated by mothers, whether old or young, and women nearly always stop to look at a display of them.

Resemblance Contest

As a rule, when a newspaper puts over a contest for a theatre it generally demands exclusive rights, but not so in Frederick, Md., when Beyond the Rocks played there.

Manager Bob Decker of Opera House and the Empire Theatre and Leslie Whelan, Paramount exploiteer, sold the Gloria Swanson resemblance contest to both the Post and News.

Both papers saw the news value in such a contest and didn't handle it as an advertising stunt. With every newspaper reader in town thus covered there was little chance for it to flop.

Interest ran high and five prominent citizens acted as judges. The picture of the winner was published on the front page of both sheets.

Magic Carpet

There is a magic carpet in Fool's Paradise, and there are some mighty fine rugs at a department store in Sarania, Ont., and the Imperial Theatre didn't see why the two floor-coverings couldn't get together.

Through the efforts of Leon Bamberger, exploiteer from the Toronto exchange, the Imperial hooked up with the store for one of their best windows. A cut-out taken from a Paramount poster showed Mildred Harris and her partner dancing on the aforementioned carpet.

A card in the window read:

> You'll find the magic carpet in "Fool's Paradise." But the magic of low prices on rugs is being proved this week in this store—as never before.

Popularity Contest

Joseph Goldberg of the Kentucky Theatre brought the fans into his house by running Norma Talmadge in Love's Redemption for the early part of the week program and sister Constance in Polly of the Follies the latter half. His display advertising called for a popularity vote from the fans between the two. The stunt polled more than 5000 votes by the middle of the week and was still running strong then. This combination of booking and exploitation furnishes a medium open to every house at no more than the usual newspaper display advertising.

Lost Dog

Because he offered a fifty dollar reward for his lost Belgian police dog, Manager G. M. Gruppa of the Hamilton Theatre, Lancaster, Pa., aroused the interest of several thousand people in his coming attraction, The Silent Call. The dog was advertised as answering to the name of Strongheart under a blind number. The following day, when the display ads announced the coming of Strongheart to the Hamilton, interest was worked up in the name so as to be immediately attracted to the ad. The people who did take the trouble to write in about the lost dog were pleasantly surprised with passes to the theatre and the thanks of the management for their effort.

Excellent Lobby

Across the front of the lobby of the Modjeska Theatre, Augusta, Ga., was a fence of beaverboard, about shoulder-high, painted to imitate a stone wall. In the center of this wall, was a tall, wide arched gateway, the posts being very large and square, and each one bearing aloft a giant white-painted electric globe. Across the gate, forming the arch, was a snowy half-circle of card-board about three feet wide, on which the letters, in royal blue, hand-drawn, gave the name of the picture.

On either side of the gate, fastened to the "wall," were cards about eighteen by thirty-four, white back-ground, hand-drawn letters in royal blue, the one on the left reading

"What Has God Got Against Women?"

Under this line of capital letters, were small English script letters which read

"See 'Hail the Woman' for the answer."

The card on the opposite side read

"If Your Daughter Came Home at Ten O'Clock, Would You Drive Her From Your House?"

In small English script letters at the bottom was the line

"See 'Hail the Woman' and find out what Judith Beresford's father did!"

Beneath the arch and a little to the rear, was a cut-out from the twenty-four sheet.

Around these cards, let into the "stone wall," with lights behind them, making them seem transparent, were stills from the play. The only advertising matter used included two stock one-sheets in Frames on either side of the lobby, the stills used on the "wall," and a lobby frame of stills and straight photographs just on the other side of the wall, inside the lobby.

At night, there was no illumination save that in the two big white globes on the fence-posts, behind the stills and a few concealed around the box-office. It was a lobby that not only aroused interest, but that caused people to stop and think—and then go in and see the picture.

Two Phrases

"History made entertaining"—
"Scenes that will bring America's greatness home to every one"—

These two phrases, in the letter written by H. B. Johnson, manager of The Shadowland, Rush City, Minn., to superintendents, teachers and class readers in the school of his vicinity brought them to see The Last of the Mohicans when the First National attraction played at his house. He declares that this letter alone increased his receipts considerably.

Civic Tieup

Through the good office of First National's exploitation man for New Jersey, the Regent Theatre of Paterson, N. J., enlisted the support of the Rotary Club, the Kiwanis Club and the Paterson Chamber of Commerce for its run of Smilin' Through. The Chamber of Commerce even issued a special letter to its members, urging their co-operation in the Smilin' Through movement for better business in 1922 and urged the use of this slogan in all advertising done by its members.

The Manager of the Empress, Dalles, Ore., succeeded in evolving something new when he did over the front of his theatre to represent a Persian Garden in order to obtain atmosphere of the near East in conjunction with his showing of First National's "One Arabian Night." Ferns and foliage hung from the ceiling of the marquee with streamers running down to complete the effect.

A novel and profitable bit of exploitation was put over by Manager Joe Jackson of the Strand, Marshalltown, Iowa, for Paramount's "Rent Free," when he constructed this little house and placed it in the center of his lobby. How interesting it really proved to the citizens of Marshalltown was reflected in the box-office count-up after the run.

The Standard, Cleveland, Ohio, got up a good display for Universal's "Conflict" without much expense by using beaverboard and posters. The logs in front, as well as the fence on the right, are imitation, while on the left two large posters were used. The display was balanced by a banner hanging just over the entrance to the theatre.

The Superba, Los Angeles, went after South Sea atmosphere in their lobby decorations for Universal's "Man to Man." The display was not costly by any means, but it was arranged so artistically it attracted quite a lot of attention and received a great many compliments from all who saw it.

Taking scene five from the fourth act of "La Forza Del Destino," Production Manager Reid of the Branford, Newark, N. J., arranged a prologue for First National's "Smilin' Through" that held 'em out during its run in Newark.

Building a temporary marquise was one of the means used by the Strand, Memphis, Tenn., to attract attention of passers-by to the fact they were playing a special feature. The huge cut-out letters on the lattice work and also suspended from the canopy told them this feature was Goldwyn's "Theodora."

Biggest Week Ever

Bucking Holy Week, Manager Guy Kenimer made it mighty hard for the people of Jacksonville to stay away from the Arcade Theatre because he put over a good advertising campaign. First he booked two good pictures, The Lotus Eater and The Green Temptation, for a run of three days each and instead of advertising the pictures most heavily, he advertised the "Biggest Week Ever."

A week in advance, he started his campaign by using slides on the screen; three days in advance he started his newspaper campaign which built up each day, but only the usual amount of billing was used.

Fifteen hundred cards 15x x 18 were printed, headed

"Good Morning. Biggest Week Ever At the Arcade."

He secured several bundles of plasterers' lath which he cut in two, tacking a card to each and sharpening one end. Starting at twelve o'clock on Saturday night with two motor trucks and about a dozen boys, who thought it a great lark, he covered the best residence districts of Jacksonville placing a stake and card in the front yard of every residence and facing the front door so that it was a greeting to the folks as they went out for their morning paper or possibly to church.

Then, with interest aroused over the coming of the two attractions, he followed the advance campaign up with lobby displays which are worthy of special mention. Small palms, cactii and ferns were arranged on a pile of sand and stones in the center of which was a cutout of the principals. A tropical setting was used for a background. That was for The Lotus Eater.

For The Green Temptation, all the lobby lights were dyed green and green backgrounds were used for all art mats and other advertising in the lobby. The house artist worked an emerald design into each.

Distance

The suggestion of distance contained in the title, Beyond the Rocks, was enough for Phil Gleichman of the Broadway-Strand, Detroit, to score another inexpensive knock-out.

He got Johnny Howard, the Paramount exploiteer, to design a tack card containing the title and the arrow gag. It read:

"Beyond the Rocks" Straight Ahead.

These were tacked on nearly every wooden pole in town, on fences, in empty buildings, and other locations found.

Little, But Good

For The Green Temptation, Manager D. A. Dorster of the Strand Theatre, Montgomery, Ala., used a decidedly good cooperative window display to great advantage. The leading department store of Montgomery dressed an entire window with the most fetching models in green—hats, frocks and "accessories to harmonize." The keynote was a draped figure in the center of the display and the temptation proved too great for some who bought the articles displayed.

OUT IN THE TERRITORY

With Live Exhibitors

The question of city censorship is being discussed at Beaumont, Texas, and will be decided by a vote in the near future.

James J. Daubert, organist of the Strand Theatre at Easton, Pa., for several years, has resigned and has re-located at his old home town, Emas, Pa.

Stuart Parmelee, formerly assistant manager of the Loew State in Buffalo, is now managing the Capitol, controlled by the South Park Amusement Company.

Announcement has been made that fire insurance on the Alice Theatre recently burned at Hope, Ark., amounting to $108,000, will be paid in full in the near future.

Herbert Griffin, sales manager for the Nicholas Power Co., is in Seattle, while on an extended tour of the entire United States in the interests of Powers projectors.

The Palace Theatre, McAdoo, Pa., owned by Peter Sidari and part of the Hersker-Sidari circuit, went on a three days a week schedule for the balance of the spring and the summer.

The city of Enid, Okla., by a two to one vote, voted May 12, to discontinue Sunday shows. It is understood that the theatre managers will not contest the election in the courts, but will abide by the results of the election.

Louis Buettner, in conjunction with Louis A. Shearer, is planning to erect a 1500 seat house in Cohoes, N. Y., a few miles from Albany. This house will be modeled along the lines of the Capitol Theatre in Pittsfield, Mass.

Bert P. Gage, collector of internal revenue in Buffalo, has placed evidence before Colonel William J. Donovan, United States district attorney, which, it is alleged, shows that the owners of the Academy and Empire filed false tax returns.

Frank Nowak, manager of the Lincoln Theatre on Broadway, Buffalo, is giving only two shows a week these days. The Strand in Oswego has closed, also the Temple in Rochester. Shea's Court Street Theatre in Buffalo will be closed during June and July.

Parke Delahanty, of the Garden Theatre, West Pittston, now has a chain of seven theatres. His two latest acquisitions are the old Solt playhouses at Berwick, Pa., one being the Lyric and the other the Arcade. He has taken them over on long leases.

John Jones is the new manager of the Garden Theatre at West Pittston, Pa. He will handle the affairs of this playhouse succeeding Parke Delahanty, who has now seven theatres on his chain and will give his attention to the general running of all of them.

Topton, Pa., site of the famous Lutheran orphanage of the East, has a movie theatre, the Palace, just opened by Nathan R. Klein, of Philadelphia. Klein purchased the playhouse from the estate of the late M. T. Butz, of Topton, who started work but died as the project neared completion.

W. A. Graeper, owner of the Union Avenue Theatre, Portland, is in Seattle preparing to motor to California for a six weeks' vacation. He will take in the Shrine convention, June 13, 14, 15. Mr. Graeper is a pioneer showman of Portland and says he probably holds a time record for sticking to one spot.

John Evins has returned to Savannah, Ga., and the Odeon Theatre. He has been in Atlanta and other key cities for the past several months. Frank Strozier, who has been managing the Odeon during Mr. Evins' absence, has been transferred to Columbia, S. C., where he will manage the Ideal and act as assistant to C. W. Irwin, in charge of the Columbia Theatres.

Four persons were seriously injured and twelve others escaped with slight bruises when the roof of the Majestic Theatre collapsed at Pittsburgh, Pa., the crash catching the sixteen who sat in the front row. The Pittsburgh authorities have instituted a rigid inspection of all the theatres in the place, as a result of the accident.

Pete Preddy, manager of the Queen Theatre at West Columbia, Texas, was taken from his car by a band of unmasked men and severely flogged. The authorities have been given a list of the floggers and will make an investigation. A musical tab or burlesque show had been shown at the Queen Theatre the night before the flogging took place.

Functioning along the lines of merchants' credit associations, the motion picture theatre supply dealers of Kansas City have organized what is to be known as the Motion Picture Supply Dealers' Credit Association of Kansas City. Better credit dealings with purchasers of theatre equipment is the object of the new organization.

Seattle Lodge No. 92, Elks, won the Coliseum Sunday Concert Prize of $500, for the largest attendance during the twelve weeks the contest ran. The programs, which were suggested by musical organizations of the city, were played by the Coliseum orchestra under Arthur Kay. The Elks' program was played April 22, and all the antlered herd was there.

Fred Elliott, owner and manager of the Clinton Square Theatre in Albany, N. Y., has just had plans completed for a 1200 seat house which he is expecting to erect in the near future, occupying the same site as the Clinton Square Theatre. The plans have been filed with the city department of public buildings for approval.

E. O. Weinberg, manager of the Buffalo Mark-Strand, has left Buffalo to take charge of the Syracuse Strand. Edgar Weill has been forced to go away for his health. Mr. Weinberg expects to be in Syracuse for several months. He has been succeeded at the Buffalo Strand by Eugene Pfeil, who has been assistant manager. Frank Davidson, formerly in charge of projection at the Strand, and now local manager for the Independent Movie Supply Company, is spending part of his time assisting Mr. Pfeil.

Following almost two weeks of "no music" in local theatres, the correspondent for the EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW made a tour of the principal houses to note any difference in attendance. It must be admitted that there was a slight fall off, but so slight that only one who visited theatres as often as the writer does could notice it. Then it must be taken in consideration that last week was very warm and there are no airdomes open as yet. Thus far the no music has not affected the theatres, the writer believes. Each week some sort of musical act is being featured at the various houses and the best acts obtainable are secured. Radio has also made its appearance in the local houses, that is two of them, and although only used as an act, there is music to be heard if only for a few minutes.

After the advertising representative for the New Grand Central had flooded the local papers with announcement that Isham Jones and his famous orchestra was to appear there, on the eleventh hour the union musician officials notified the Skouras Brothers, who operate the New Grand Central that Jones could not appear, owing to the controversy between the theatre managers and union musicians, which resulted in the union musicians walking out of all local picture houses May 1. Jones' first appearance was to be at the matinee Saturday and Skouras was notified at 11 o'clock, Saturday morning, that Jones could not appear. It is said that the union had agreed to let Jones play at the house, but reversed their decision at the "eleventh hour." The Skouras Brothers then had no way of notifying the public that Jones could not appear and so they explained to the public via the screen why the famous jazz king would not be there, as expected. The act was transferred then to the Empress, also controlled by the Skouras Brothers a vaudeville house. All attendance records were broken at this place during Jones' engagement.

The right of local courts to restrain picketing of theatres by labor unions has been established in Minnesota. This decision, handed down by the Minnesota Supreme Court, ended last week five years of litigation by John J. Campbell of Minneapolis, proprietor of the Wonderland Theatre, against the Minneapolis Trades and Labor Assembly. The labor organization has voted to abide by the court ruling and to pay attorney's fees of more than $200. Owner of a tiny house down in the "floating population" district of Minneapolis, Mr. Campbell discharged his operator in May, 1917, and he and his wife ran the theatre to decrease their expenses. He was immediately declared by the Trades and Labor Assembly to be "unfair to union labor," and his place was bannered. Mr. Campbell brought action in the lower courts for damages to his business occasioned by the picketing and sought a restraining order against the labor organization to prevent further picketing. Then ensued five years of bitter fighting. The lower courts sustained his contentions, ordering the picketing discontinued and commanding the four labor leaders named in his petition to pay damages of $125 each. The men refused to pay the fines and were jailed for contempt of court. Upon their appeal to the supreme court they were released. Mr. Campbell and his wife are still in command at the Wonderland.

Types of Signs Suited to Theatres

History of Development of Electric Signs Shows Theatres First to Use Them

By HOWARD McLELLAN

THE statement has been made, and is accepted in electrical circles, that the motion pictures theatres of the United States are the largest users of electric signs in the world. Their importance to the motion picture theatre should not be underestimated.

In tracing the history of the electric sign it is noted that improvements have been made in two directions—in the lamps used and the construction of the structural features of signs. Few exhibitors are familiar with the various makes of electric signs and when it comes to selecting the one best suited to their purposes they frequently rely upon the advice of someone who knows no more about signs than they do.

This article covers all types of signs, as well as the importance of the new colored lamp hood for incandescents and sign flashers, both being sign accessories which reduce current costs and sign operating expense. In Signs of the Times, E. A. Mills, sign expert for one of the largest electric companies in the world writes:

The first commercial use of the electric sign was in the field in which it is now most used—the theatre. The sign was installed in 1894 in front of Miner's Fifth Avenue Theatre, Twenty-eighth Street and Broadway, and read "Miner's Fifth Avenue Theatre—Fanny Davenport."

The first large display sign was placed in 1896 on the north wall of the building facing Madison Square on the side now occupied by the Flatiron Building. This sign advertised Manhattan Beach "Swept by Ocean Breezes," "Gilmore's Band," "Brock's Fireworks."

Later on Admiral Cigarettes and Heinz's Pickles were advertised here. This sign may be considered the father of the present Broadway display signs. This sign contained colored lamps and was flashed on, one line at a time, then all out, then all on. This was accomplished by hand switches operated by an attendant located in a small shanty on an adjoining roof.

These pioneer signs were naturally of crude construction. There were no specially designed sign receptacles, and the Fifth Avenue Theatre signs already mentioned consisted of wooden letters through which holes were bored for the insertion of regular wiring receptacles. The wiring was all open on the backs of the letters, which in turn were bolted to a wooden framework. Since then special waterproof sign receptacles have been developed. In the early stages these were inserted through punchings in the face of the sign and held in place by small brass machine screws. This type has since been superseded by a receptacle which is either self-locking in the face of the sign or held in place by porcelain bushings screwed through from the front.

Flush Letter.—The original signs were made up in what is now known as the flush letter, that is, the letter was painted on the background and the receptacles mounted therein. All that is usually seen is a mass of bulbs; furthermore, the lamps illuminate the background as well as the letters, resulting in considerable halation and consequent illegibility.

Block Letter.—To overcome these objections the raised block letter was developed. In this type the letter is raised from the surface of the background. While the results obtained are a great improvement over the flush type, there is still considerable halation.

Groove Letter.—To overcome these objections the groove letter, sunk below the background, was developed. In this type halation is absent, the light from the lamps is confined to the groove and the background remains in total darkness, giving wonderful definition and legibility at night, particularly when viewed from in front. This type of letter, however, had the fault of being costly to construct, was rather indistinct when viewed from an angle. Likewise the placing of the receptacles below the surface of the background made the sign rather bulky or thick, particularly in a double-faced sign.

Wall Type Letter.—The latest development and the type of letter generally used now is known as the wall type. Such a letter is virtually of the flush type, but the letters are outlined by a wall of metal of sufficient height to confine the light to the enclosure and prevent it from spilling over the adjacent letters and the background. The usual practice is to paint the channel a flat white and to improve its daylight legibility, the edge of the wall is turned over and painted a color contrasting with the background. To improve the reading at an angle by daylight, the outside wall is also painted a color contrasting with the background. This type of letter can be as cheaply constructed as the flush type, is characterized by absence of halation as in the groove type, and is an improvement over the latter on this when viewed from an angle.

Roof Signs.—So far this discussion has been confined to the general type of letter employed in signs used directly over the sidewalk or on the face of buildings. The roof or sky sign also presents its difficulties, and under certain conditions has to be handled in a different manner. The usual custom is to paint the face of the letter a flat white and with a contrasting background; this is good practice. Where, however, the letter is of the so-called skeleton type and the sky is the background, a white letter would be nearly invisible by day, and in such instances the letters are painted black.

Where a large roof sky sign is to be read a considerable distance a different method of treatment is necessary. In order that the sign may be read by day the stroke of the letter should be made wide. This, however, is a decided drawback from the standpoint of legibility when lighted, particularly where the letters are close together, as the halation is more pronounced as the distance increases. To overcome this the letter is divided by walls in which the lamps are located. This gives much better spacing between the letters and makes for better legibility by night without interfering with the daylight appearance.

Panel Sign.—So far we have considered only the so-called lettered sign. To give the very small consumer an opportunity to use electric signs various adaptations of the electric sign have been evolved.

The panel sign consists of a frame containing lamps surrounding a central panel on which the advertisement or announcement is painted. This sign has the advantage of cheapness and lends itself to ready change in wording should this be desired.

Glass Letter Sign.—The raised glass letter is a very pleasing and effective type, having all the advantages of the lens type as far as economy of operation is concerned, and presents a satisfactory appearance both day and night. In this type the background consists of a stencil. The lettered spaces are filled with convex opal glass. This produces a sign very easily read at an angle and particularly clear both by day and night.

Cut-out Sign.—Still another type is the so-called cut-out sign. The letters are located inside the sign body and the letters are outlined by holes punched along the edge of the letter in the stroke itself.

Transparency.—A popular small consumer type is the so-called glass panel transparency. This combines all the features of economy of operation incident to the foregoing types, with the added advantage of getting away from the rather fixed or stereotyped signs. In the transparency considerable lettering may be used to good effect in a small space. The artist may run riot as to coloring and design. The sign is entirely free of halation and the effects produced are altogether pleasing, both by day and night. To avoid bright spots the back is painted a heavy white.

Suggestion Sign.—New York City, as is well known, is made up of all kinds of people. There are many to whom a sign is nothing more than a sign. To be effective the sign must also visually suggest something. Thus a shoe store sign is made in the form of a shoe, etc.

The electric sign has been considered above from a more or less general viewpoint. A sign to be serviceable should be clear by day and particularly at night. This has been accomplished by adopting the wall type letter confining the light to the space to be illuminated. Ten watt 120-volt Mazda lamps are generally used, although recently larger lamps have become in vogue. Natural colored glass lamps are rarely used owing to their high cost. Instead, colored effects are produced by placing color-glass caps or hoods over plain lamps. This makes for economy, as the color cup may be used repeatedly. The cap, which only covers the bowl of the lamp, acts as a reflector by throwing the light on the letter, thus further enlivening the effect.

Spectacular and moving effects are produced by the medium of rotating commutators or flashers operated by motors. The different effects produced naturally vary with the type of flasher used and the method of wiring.

MOTION PICTURE APPARATUS.—O. Antonelli, 108 Bay Forty-ninth Street. Brooklyn, N. Y. The aim of this invention is to provide a motion picture apparatus which is extremely simple, and in which one unit shall be capable of taking as well as projecting the pictures. An object is to combine the essential parts of this apparatus in such way that they will function for the purposes of both photography and projection, thus reducing the initial cost as well as the subsequent expense to a minimum.

New Publications

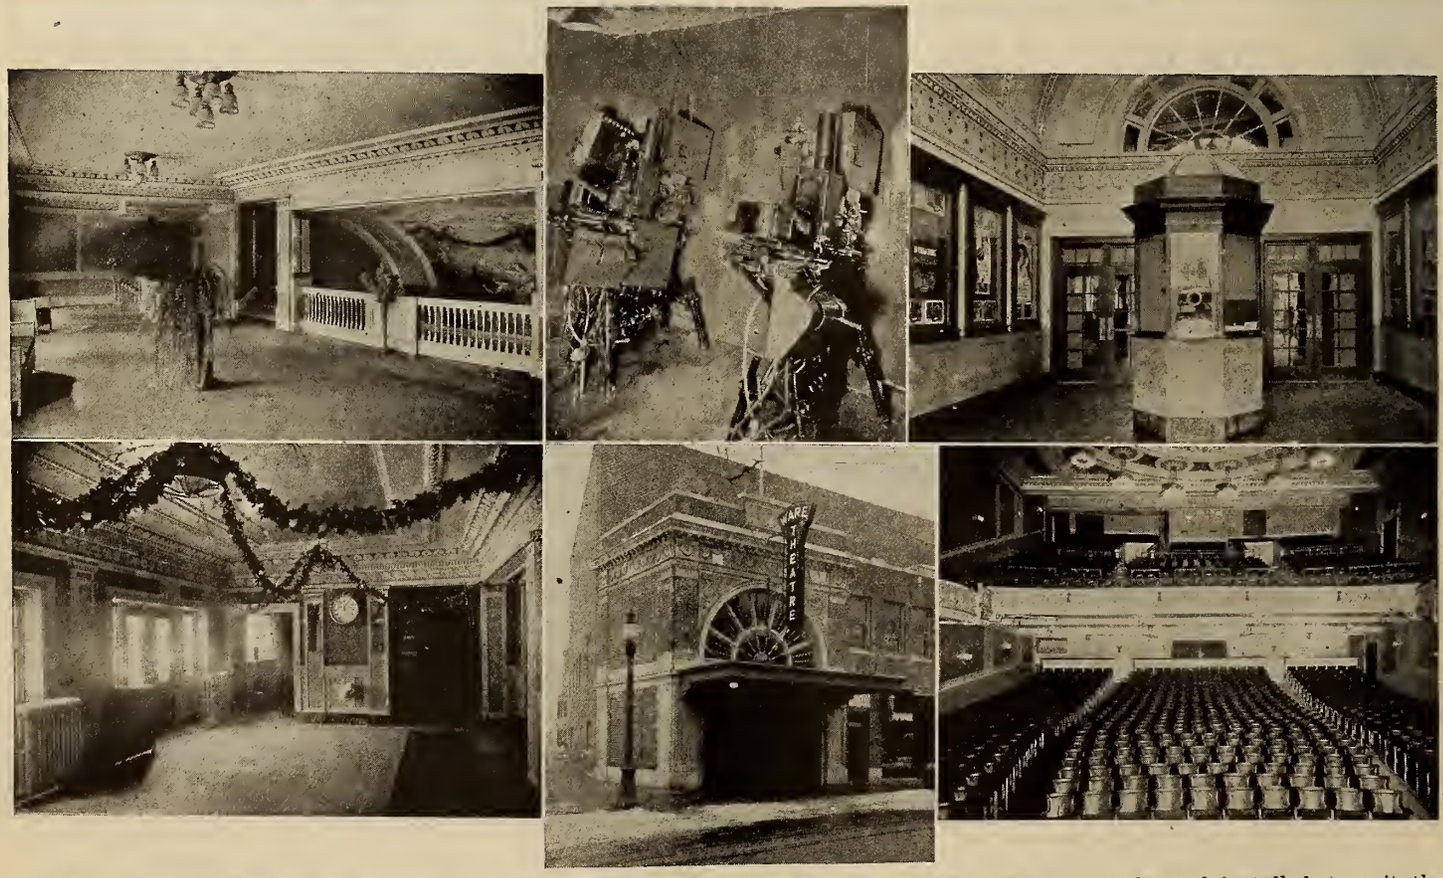
Of Interest to Exhibitors

ORCHESTRA LAMP SHADES.—This important feature of theatre lighting, which we have discussed many times, is touched upon in this publication—a small booklet prepared by the manufacturer of a new orchestra lampshade called "Light-right." At last we find a subject so dear to our hearts and so important to screen illumination covered by a patented article which, it is claimed, actually does away with the awful glare arising from improperly lighted orchestras.—H. McL.

THEATRE ACOUSTICS.—A collection of papers by the late Wallace Sabin of Harvard University which covers, among other things, proper theatre acoustics. The writer states that many expensively constructed theatres and halls have been failures through lack of knowledge of the principles of acoustics. A very comprehensive work useful to theatre architects and managers.—H. McL.

The Newman Manufacturing Co. of Cincinnati, Ohio, has just published two new catalogues for broadcast distribution. No. 1 is devoted exclusively to high-grade etched glass signs and cast bronze tablets. A comprehensive price-list covering both types accompanies a wealth of actual photographs. No. 2 shows building directories and bulletin boards with changeable letters in numerous types and a variety of popular sizes. It also illustrates metal road signs, roof signs, street signs, sidewalk signs and so on.

A New England Powers Equipped House



Folks in Beverly, Mass., call the Ware Theatre the "Golden Theatre Beautiful," and that slogan has been adopted in the local advertising for the theatre. It is Power's equipped, and, like many other New England playhouses, uses Mazda projection, installed by Robert Hosmer of Boston. The photos show the projection booth and other parts of the house. The seating job was done by the American Seating Co., and the illustration shows how each seat has been made, and installed, to suit the individual conditions in the house.

The house seats 1450, has a 127-foot throw, and 18 by 7 picture. A Minus A screen is used, together with 6¼ Cinephor lenses, made by Bausch & Lomb of Rochester. Glover Ware, manager of the house, is an old-time show man. His brother, Harris Ware, is the house organist.

Operators May Do Much to Help Themselves by Establishing More Friendly Relations and Charting Improvements Considered Necessary

CONTINUING on the vital subject of projection booth ventilation, it is extremely gratifying to learn in the very earliest stages of an educational campaign in the mutual interest of operators and exhibitors, of the enthusiasm which the articles have provoked in widely scattered sections of the country. That the improvement of working conditions for the operator bids fair to receive merited attention from manufacturers of projection accessories and exhibitors alike is disclosed by correspondence stimulated by the publication of these articles and it would appear now is the opportune time for every operator to think very seriously and constructively on the subject and to discuss with their employers ways and means to bring about more desirable conditions. The executive board of Local 306 is making a serious study of conditions which affect the welfare of operators.

They declare:

"The candid operator must acknowledge responsibility in a large measure for the deplorable conditions under which a majority of the craft work. 'God helps those who help themselves' is a truism which has very definite application to the operator ranks, and workers should not hesitate any longer to establish more friendly relations with their employers. The exhibitor worth working for is a very busy man. His problems are greater rather than simpler as time goes on and it is distinctly up to the operators to endeavor to establish more friendly relations in order that as ideas for the betterment of working conditions and hours are advanced they receive a sympathetic hearing.

"In the private office of one of the industry's leading executives hangs on the wall a sign which reads, 'I Don't Want To Know The Trouble, I Want The Remedy.' Every operator in the business who is seriously interested in his work should study out thoroughly the improvements honestly necessary in the particular booth in which he is working.

"Approach the matter with the same care and consideration you would were you obliged to spend your own money. Remember that many theatres have been standing a considerable time. Be reasonable in your requirements. Write them all down in simple fashion obtaining an estimate of cost if possible.

"The foregoing seems a fair way to make an attempt to better conditions. We say fair way advisedly and recommend it rather than the alternate, long delayed and "red tape" bound method of solving the matter by State legislation or city ordinance. It seems that a more friendly and speedy solution of the problem is for the operators and exhibitors to work together on the matter and when a common ground is established on this obviously necessary ventilation subject, it may serve in many instances to bring the operators and exhibitors together harmoniously to the continued advantage of both.

"Among the larger manufacturers whose interest has been aroused concerning the welfare of the operators as related to adequate ventilation of projection booths is the Sun-Light Arc Corporation. They are conducting a detailed investigation to evolve various ventilation schemes which according to a statement issued by them, is being done for the welfare not only of the operators, but the exhibitors, the public and themselves.

"This corporation aims to furnish exhibitors with an improved, powerful light which in the hands of operators working under proper conditions insures the public better projection and which desires to co-operate with operators throughout as indicated by the fact they make many of the suggestions which follow are theirs. They appreciate the average current used in projection electric arcs has been steadily increasing during the past few years, and although many of the new and larger houses have increased the size, convenience and healthfulness of their projection rooms, thus keeping pace with the increased power used, a majority of theatres have increased their projection power in booths without corresponding enlargement of the booth or ventilation facilities.

"The amount of current consumed in a booth regulates the amount of dust or ash given off by electric arcs. In types of carbon giving off excessive dust the hazard to the health of the operator is naturally increased. It should be understood the lamp dust is not especially poisonous except where the operator is exposed for long periods and it is for this reason that the six hour shift advocated by Samuel Kaplan, president of Local 306 and recorded in a recent article is proposed.

"Proper ventilation of the lamphouse is the first essential and ventilation of the booth itself is next in importance. The worst attempt at ventilation is where the lamphouse is ventilated and not the booth; that is, the fumes from the lamphouse are allowed to stagnate the booth. Other ventilations take care of the booth but allow the lamphouse to exhaust fumes therein.

"An inexpensive and simple method of ventilation is to make the lamphouse inhalent by piping each lamphouse to the outside of the theatre in order that the air shall flow from the booth into the lamphouse rather than from the lamphouse into the booth; where it is possible to have a stretch of vertical pipe without bends this method may be accomplished by natural ventilation.

"With this arrangement, thus keeping the booth pure, the only other feature affecting the operator is the temperature of the booth. The best and easiest remedy for this is, of course, a booth with a higher ceiling and a certain amount of natural ventilation. Where this is impossible, any ordinary room ventilation methods may be applied without any of the complications due to the removal of vitiated air or dust, since the inhalent lamphouse completely prevents this trouble. Another inexpensive idea which has been suggested as a supplementary way of keeping the air in the booth pure and which originated with an inspector of the New York Board of Health which is actively working on this important industrial problem, is that the operator close all extra apertures in the booth facing the stage using transparent glass for the purpose. In this way the view is not cut off and a great deal of vitiated air which naturally rises from the lower sections of the house is not sucked into the booth to add to the already bad conditions therein.

"With just a little study and by keeping everlastingly at it operators working in sympathy with their employers can improve at least 100 per cent the conditions under which they have so long continued to work; surely the time and thought expended is an investment. Keep in mind the fact that your employer does not want to know the trouble, he wants to hear the remedy."

Orchestral Instruments

The Flute

The flute is one of the most ancient of instruments and was, in fact, invented the first time man blew across a hollow reed. There were two flutes commonly used in the time of Bach and Handel—the flute-a-bec, held vertically and played with a mouthpiece, and the flauto traverso, held like a modern flute. The flute was a faulty instrument, uncertain as to intonation until Theobald Boehm (1794-1881) greatly improved the mechanism. There is no reed on a flute; it consists simply of a hollow tube, stopped at one end. Near that is an aperture across which the performer blows to set the air inclosed in the tube in vibration. The compass extends from middle C for three octaves. The lowest octave is very "woody" and colorful, almost menacing at times. The octave above is clear and mellow, and the lower half of the remaining octave is very brilliant.

By "overblowing," overtones (harmonics) may be produced, giving another variety of tone color. The flute is very agile and can play rapid passages, scales or arpeggios very rapidly. By "double" and even "triple" tonguing, reiterated notes in groups of twos or threes can be played with great rapidity. The dynamic range of the flute is rather limited, and it can play neither so soft nor so loud as the violin. The piccolo, a small flute, is also used in the orchestra, usually by the second fluatist, or the third when there is one.

The Bass Tuba

The bass tuba is practically a gigantic cornet, and is the largest and deepest of a group of instruments of this class. Its range is from E-flat, nine scale-degrees below the bass staff, to the B-flat below middle C. The instrument has a powerful tone, and is frequently united with three trombones to form a quartet. It can also play softly with remarkable effect; a well-known instance is a passage from the last few measures of Tchaikovski's "Symphonie Pathétique," in which the bass tuba and three trombones play some mysterious chromatic harmonies with awe-inspiring effect. Wagner was the first to use the tuba in the orchestra to any great extent, and since his day it has been very generally employed in larger orchestral works. As with all instruments of the cornet type, it is not difficult to perform on the tuba passages demanding surprising agility. It will be seen that the bass tuba, three trombones, two or more trumpets (often four), make up the brass section of the orchestra, balancing the woodwind instruments. To either group may be added the French horns. The woodwind, brass and string instruments of the orchestra have been likened by Widor to the main groups of the army; infantry, cavalry and artillery, each group being capable of acting alone or in conjunction with other groups.

Famous Composers

FRANCOIS AUBER

Auber was born Jan. 29, 1782, at Caen, France, and died in Paris, May 14, 1871. He began to compose early in life, and produce songs and "romances" at the age of eleven. He was destined for a commercial career, and sent to London a few years later. He paid little heed to commerce, and when war between England and France broke out in 1804 he returned to Paris, where he remained ever afterward—even when the Germans besieged the city. Cherubini heard of one of his operettas—his first—and was so much impressed with Auber's genius that he superintended the young musician's further instruction in composition. In 1835 Auber was made a member of the French Academy, and in 1842 succeeded Cherubini as director of the Conservatoire. His life was mainly devoted to writing operas, of which he composed a great number. Some of these are still produced, including "Masaniello," "Fra Diavolo," "Crown Diamonds," etc. His style is typically French chic, polished and sparkling. He may be regarded as the legitimate follower of Boieldieu, and superior to Herold and Adam. As director of the Conservatoire he exercised a great influence upon the younger French musicians of his generation. In spite of his ready wit and brilliant gifts Auber was very shy as a man, and never conducted his own operas, nor even went to see them.

Franciscus Maguire Writes Interesting Letter from St. Louis on His Work Out There

Oldtimers will recall Maguire, who has been in the news game for years. Here is a note from him that will be good news to his many friends:

"In sending in my subscription renewal for the REVIEW I have open before me the Cameraman's Department.

"My mind wanders back over the many years that I have been in the game shooting news for the various weeklies. I started off back in 1909 with the old Atlas Film Company owned by the late O. T. Crawford of St. Louis. They produced one-reelers, comedy and real drama. I think one of the first five-reel pictures made was the James Boys of Missouri, made by the Atlas company in 1910. I remember well when it first appeared. The exhibitors of the day flatly refused to run more than two or three reels of it. That was perfectly all right, however, for it was so cleverly made that you could run one or five reels without the audience getting next, for there was no start or finish to it. It was simply a series of exploits of the famous James boys.

"Shortly after this I secured an old Williamson outfit and started shooting news stuff. The first went to the old Gaumont company. I think it was a train wreck on the Missouri Pacific. After this things dragged along and in later years I shot for Pathe, Hearst, Gaumont, Mutual and on down the line. For the last few years I have been covering for the Kinograms company. For some years I was with Terry Ramsey and Ray Hall, and after they left the news reel game I continued with Kinograms.

"I think that the news reel of to-day has reached a point where it is indispensable to the exhibitors' program. There is hardly a house in St. Louis that does not put on a weekly with every show.

"Well do I remember the days when every subject in the news reel was on a different frame line. By the time the operator framed up the title was gone and if you could tell just where the fire, wreck or ship launching was taking place you were entitled to the rubber tooth pick.

"We have been fairly busy throughout the Middle West on cyclones and floods and there is quite a little material in view for the spring shooting.

"I trust very much that you will be able to enlarge on the cameraman's department in the near future, for no doubt many of the boys have quite a lot of stuff up their sleeves that would be of great interest to the rest of us.

"With kindest regards to the fellow brethren, I remain,

"St. Louis, Mo. F. L. MAGUIRE."

Trick Prismatic Lens

An invention, which is said to embrace new and untold possibilities in motion picture photography, has been devised by Leon F. Douglass, a resident of Menlo Park, Cal. Mr. Douglass is a former vice-president and general manager of the Victor Talking Machine Company and is at present chairman of the board of directors of that company. He has previously been associated with Thomas A. Edison.

The perfection devised by Mr. Douglass, it is said, will not only make possible many new things in the way of novel films along trick photography lines, but will prove the means of duplicating those already in use at a great saving of time and labor.

The new effects are produced by means of prismatic lenses. For instance, a picture can be taken of two men at a table. Fifty feet away a woman sits in a chair in line with rays from the prism. In the film she appears a miniature vision—solid and complete—unlike the "shade" form common in double exposure work. An image of a player can be multiplied five or ten times through the new discovery. An idea of its illusion possibilities are seen in an instance cited on a film where a woman is about to be crushed by the wheels of an oncoming automobile when in reality she was twenty-five feet away.

How the Latest Releases Are Being Received Throughout the Country

ALBANY

CLINTON SQUARE

"QUEEN OF SHEBA." All Star (Fox). Holding for the entire week, proved a moneymaker. Was heavily exploited through extra newspaper advertising, and in other ways. A news reel completed the bill.

MARK STRAND

"ACROSS THE CONTINENT." Wallace Reid (Famous). Three days. Picture pleased everyone, but should have done an "S. R. O." business. The remainder of the program was a scenic, a news reel, a comedy and a musical program.

"PEACOCK ALLEY," Mae Murray (Metro). Last three days, the title itself presented a strong appeal. Excellent business.

ALLENTOWN, PA.

COLONIAL

"BEYOND THE ROCKS," Gloria Swanson and Rudolph Valentino (Paramount). Did fair business at all shows and capacity at other screenings.

LYRIC

"DETERMINATION" (Lee Bradford Corp.). Excellent business and good results from this attraction. Ran for whole week with no slump in business.

RIALTO

"LOVE'S REDEMPTION," Norma Talmadge (First National). Not a criticism heard. Most people liked show and star's name was enough with many to make them come across with cash at box office. Ran whole week.

STRAND

"RECKLESS YOUTH" (Selznick). ure was run for three days, followed by Conway Tearle in "A Wide Open Town." Both pictures were liked and were responsible for business above average.

ATLANTA, GA.

HOWARD

"BEYOND THE ROCKS," Gloria Swanson and Rudolph Valentino (Paramount). Played to most admissions in history of the theatre. With reduced summer prices, receipts held to one of best on record. People liked the picture immensely.

Short Subjects.—Howard News and Views, featuring Selznick news reel.

Presentation.—Brilliant prologue took the form of an ensemble of fifty voices. It was fittingly called "The Enchanted River and Forest Fire" and was featured by wonderful screen effects.

METROPOLITAN

"SMILIN' THROUGH," Norma Talmadge (First National). Second week of its run, having been held over by public demand, and business was very good.

Short Subjects.—Mermaid Comedy, "Step This Way,' and Kinograms.

Presentation.—The overture arranged by Director Dave Love and the music score were a delight.

RIALTO

"MISS LULU BETT, William DeMille Production (Paramount). Pleased immensely all who saw it. The weeks receipts were little above normal.

Short Subjects.—International News.

GRAND

First Half.

"A STAGE ROMANCE, William Farnum (Fox). A tremendous hit; liked the best of any picture at the Grand lately.

Short Subjects.—Chester Outing, two comedies, "Loose Nuts" and "The Mysterious Stranger," Fox News.
Last Half.

"ISLAND WIVES," Corinne Griffith (Vitagraph).—Big hit. Many scenes made e vicinity of Miami, a fact which was played up by Manager James.

Short Subjects. — Goldwyn Graphic, Chester Comedy, Fox News and Fox's Mutt and Jeff.

CRITERION

"MY BOY," Jackie Coogan (First National). Return engagement and played to unusually good business. Children de- ted and older folks pleased.

Short Subjects.—A fast-moving Torchy Comedy, "Battling Torchy," and Kinograms.

TUDOR

Monday and Tuesday.

"THE GIRL FROM GOD'S COUNTRY," Nell Shipman Production (Wid Gunning). Pleased and business was very good.

Short Subjects.—International News and Comedy "Taking Things Easy."
Wednesday and Thursday.

"TWENTY-THREE AND A HALF HOURS' LEAVE," Douglas McLean and Doris May (Paramount). Had played previous engagements in Atlanta, but pleased very much. Despite intense heat, business was very good.

Short Subjects. — Comedy "Chicken Hearted."

Thursday and Friday.

"DANGEROUS LITTLE DEMON," Marie Prevost (Universal). Snappy little flapper offering which pleased. Business good.

Short Subjects.—International News.

STRAND

First Half.

"PEACOCK ALLEY," Mae Murray (Metro). Average business for the week, this being a return engagement.

Short Subjects.—Billy West in "He Loves Her Still."
Last Half.

"JAN OF THE BIG SNOWS," James Oliver Curwood Story (American Releasing). More in keeping with the Strand policy and went over big.

Short Subject.—Bud Duncan in "The Knockout."

BETHLEHEM, PA.

PALACE

"JANE EYRE," Mabel Ballin (Hodkinson). Good interest for warm week and attendance up to average. Pulled good houses.

LEHIGH ORPHEUM

"CONNECTICUT YANKEE IN KING ARTHUR'S COURT," All Star (William Fox). Ideal picture to show in college town where literary standards are high. Mark Twain's works in almost all homes and turnout to see show was strong all week. Made six day runs without turning a hair.

KURTZ

"IS MATRIMONY A FAILURE," All Star (Paramount). Good show, not a world beater but nice entertainment for a warm spring evening. Drew well, with vaudeville bill as magnet to aid in business gaining.

LORENZ

"BEYOND THE ROCKS," Rudolph Valentino and Gloria Swanson (Paramount). Picture rated as good and well worth seeing. Up to usual standards.

BUFFALO

SHEA'S HIPPODROME

"PENROD," Wesley Barry (First National). Audiences got a lot of good laughs out of this offering and business was very fair.

Exploitation.—Big newspaper campaign, electric display on front of house, billboards, window cards.

Short Subjects.—Buster Keaton in "His Wife's Relations," Hippodrome Review,

Topics of the Day and Pathe hand colored scenic.

LOEW'S STATE

"THE WORLD CHAMPION," Wallace Reid (Paramount). Business fell off a bit on this attraction. The fine outdoor weather was to blame. Wallace Reid is a favorite here and this accounted for saving the situation.

Exploitation.—Newspaper advertising of exceptionally attractive style, window cards, lobby display, billboards.

Short Subjects.—The Hallroom Boys in "Nobody's Baby," Mutt and Jeff cartoon and Pathe News.

LAFAYETTE SQUARE

"PERJURY," William Farnum (Fox). Almost every seat was taken during the evening shows all week and the matinees were fair. Patrons liked the picture and the star.

Exploitation.—Newspaper advertising, billboards, large electric display on front of theatre, window cards and lobby display.

Short Subjects.—"Snub" Pollard comedy, Fox News and scenic subject.

MARK-STRAND

"STARDUST," Hope Hampton (First National). Originally scheduled for a half week, it was continued for the week. Audiences were probably interested in the star who visited here a few months ago.

Exploitation.—Special ads in newspapers, lobby display and window cards.

Short Subjects.—Viola Daniel in Christie's "Cold Feet," "Screen Snapshots," and Kinograms.

PALACE

"THE WAY OF A WOMAN," Norma Talmadge (Kempson Pictures Corp.). The popularity of Norma helped to attract fair business on this one. It's a revival of one of the star's old features.

Exploitation.—Newspapers, lobby display, window cards.

Short Subjects.—Century comedy, Movie Chats and International News.

SHEA'S NORTH PARK

"CONCEIT," All star cast (Select). Did a very fair business on this picture which was shown first run at this neighborhood theatre. The advertising helped to attract business. Buster Keaton in a pre-release showing of "His Wife's Relations," was an important factor in the box office returns.

KEITH'S

"NO DEFENSE," William Duncan (Vitagraph). Audiences like thrills. This one was full of them. Good business.

CHICAGO

RANDOLPH

"YOUR BEST FRIEND," Vera Gordon (Warner). Another drama of mother love well acted. Business was fair.

ROOSEVELT

"IS MATRIMONY A FAILURE," All Star (Paramount). An excellent comedy that kept the audiences chuckling. Presented to very good patronage.

CHICAGO

"SONNY," Richard Barthelmess (First National). With a story more or less hobbled, that acts as a handicap, the star does excellent work Barthelmess' popularity kept the theatre filled throughout the week.

BARBEE

"OTHER WOMAN'S CLOTHES," Mabel Ballin (Hodkinson). A pictorial delight and excellently acted. Business proved very satisfactory.

ALCAZAR

"THE BLACK BAG," Herbert Rawlinson (Universal). A mystery story that sustains the interest throughout. Attendance held up nicely.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.

IMPERIAL

"GRAND LARCENY," Elliott Dexter (Paramount).—Played two days only to fair business.

BROADWAY

"A SMALL TOWN IDOL" (Associated Producers).—This is still a money getter, though late in reaching Charlotte, and played three days to big business.

CLEVELAND

STATE

"REPORTED MISSING," Owen Moore (Selznick). This feature was given wide publicity and was augmented with the film "Sawing a Lady in Half, Exposed," which attracted considerable talk as the stage version had played at five different theatres. This gave the attraction a goodly amount of publicity and played to good business.

ALLEN

"WILD HONEY," Priscilla Dean (Universal). Despite a generous advance newspaper advertising campaign and an attractive lobby display of 40 x 60 photos of the star and scenes in the production, business was just fair on this attraction.

Short Subjects.—"Cain and Abel," the second chapter of "Narratives of the Bible," Snub Pollard in a Pathe comedy, "Light Showers" and International News.

MALL AND PARK

"THE BEAUTIFUL LIAR," Katherine MacDonald (First National). Just a bit of advance newspaper advertising and the usual lobby display were featured on this vehicle which showed to fair business.

STILLMAN

"SMILIN' THROUGH," Norma Talmadge (First National). This attraction finished a three weeks' engagement with flying colors.

STANDARD

"SECOND HAND ROSE," Gladys Walton (Universal). Business fair. Was exploited by way of a "song plugger" and a piano in the lobby of the theatre, which was decorated with a number of banners, made from one sheets and copies of the song.

COLUMBIA, S. C.

COLUMBIA

"MY OLD KENTUCKY HOME," (American Releasing Corp.). This is the legit. house, with poor location for pictures and business is only fair on anything. This was above average, though.

IMPERIAL

"NORTH OF THE RIO GRANDE," Jack Holt-Agnes Ayres (Paramount). Two days was the length given this, business very poor.

"THE HEART SPECIALIST," Mary Miles Minter (Paramount). Three days to very good business.

LESTER'S RIVOLI

"WHERE IS MY WANDERING BOY TO-NIGHT?" (Equity). Two days to very good business.

"SHAME." (Fox). A three day run with exceptional business.

LIBERTY

"THE GOOD PROVIDER," Special Cast (Paramount). Now on its second week and still drawing good crowds. A money maker.

Current Events.—Pathe News.

Exploitation.—An article, published as a news in the Kansas City Times, headed, "A Picture You Can Live," was given full space in newspaper advertising, along with the explanation, "A critic wrote our ad this week; here it is." Also billboard and lobby display space.

DORIC

"THE SEA LION," Hobart Bosworth (First National). Did a good week's business and met with the approval of patrons.

Short Subjects.—"F. O. B. Africa," comedy, and International News, current events.

Exploitation.—Large character drawing of Hobart Bosworth, a mermaid and a ship in the background, featured in newspaper space. Also lobby display and billboard space.

NEWMAN

"QUEEN OF SHEBA," Betty Blythe (Fox). Went over good. Drew large crowds for a week's run.

Current Events.—Newman News and Views.

Exploitation. — Extraordinary large newspaper space, featuring the woman, "Queen of Sheba," on the throne, the chariot race and playing up the fact that the production included 10,000 people, 500 horses, 300 camels and 671 scenes. Billboard and lobby display space.

ROYAL

"NORTH OF THE RIO GRANDE," Bebe Daniels and Jack Holt (Paramount).

The popularity of Bebe Daniels here helped this one draw good for a week.

Short Subjects.—"The Picaninny," comedy, and Royal Screen Magazine, current events.

Exploitation.—A trio of profiles, "Sunshine Sammy," Jack Holt and Bebe Daniels, were played up in Sunday newspaper space. Also billboard and lobby display space.

TWELFTH STREET

"A DOLL'S HOUSE," Nazimova (United Artists). Did not come up to expectations as a drawing card. Only a fair attendance for the week.

Short Subjects.—"A Rambling Romeo," Christie special comedy, and Screen Magazine, current events.

Exploitation.—The production was emphasized in newspaper copy as "a clear portrayal of a woman's duty to herself." Also mention made of the play, by Henrik Ibsen. Billboard and lobby display space.

LOS ANGELES

SYMPHONY

"GRANDMA'S BOY," Harold Lloyd (Pathe). A long line up every night. From 1 in the afternoon until after 10 at night the crowds can not be accommodated. The 100-24 sheets were posted three days before the opening and news stories have been more than plentiful. It is believed the picture will play about seven or eight weeks.

CLUNE'S BROADWAY

"BELLS OF ALASKA," Jane Novak (Chester Bennett Production). This was one of the three theatres in town Sunday night that had a line up. All week the program pulled fine. Usual advertising and no exploitation.

Short Subjects.—Bells of Borneo, Comedy and Kinograms.

LOEW'S STATE

"TURN TO THE RIGHT," Alice Terry (Metro). Good audience picture. Only average advertising was used and no exploitation. The evening audiences seemed to enjoy the picture more than the matinee audiences.

PANTAGES

"THE CALL OF HOME," Gasiner (R-C). Good audience picture with vaudeville program. Monte Banks comedy which rather amused.

GRAUMAN'S RIALTO

"BEYOND THE ROCKS," Valentino and Gloria Swanson (Paramount). In the fourth week and going good. There has been very little drop over the first week's business. No exploitation and no billboards; only normal newspaper advertising.

CALIFORNIA

"FAIR LADY," Betty Blythe and Robert Elliott (United Artists). Did a fair week's business with average advertising and no exploitation.

Short Subjects.—Carli D. Elinor's Concert consisted of "Madame Butterfly," "Serenade and Buddha-Zuma, special fox trot, Joe Rock comedy, "All Wet."

SUPERBA

"THE MAN WHO MARRIED HIS OWN WIFE," Frank Mayo (Universal). The picture did very good business and presented Mayo in a role where he did some real acting. It is one of his best pictures, if not the best. The average amount of advertising was used.

Short Subjects.—International News, Organ solo on the new organ, "Cheerful Credit" with "Brownie," and Topics of the Day.

MILLERS

"FOOTFALLS," All Star Cast (Fox). Ran four days and was pulled; very poor business; supplemented "Kismet," which is drawing very well. "Footfalls" was well advertised with 20-24 sheets and daily advertising increased.

KINEMA

"SMILIN' THROUGH," Norma Talmade (First National). In the third week and pulling good. The reviews have been very favorable and the picture has run with very little extra advertising over the average weekly space.

Short Subjects.—Eddie Horton at the organ with exceptional musical entertainment and solo by Vivian Strong Hart.

MISSION

"MONTE CRISTO," All Star Cast (Fox). Excellent business, will run about four weeks. For the first week, 95-24 sheets were placed on the boards—150-3 sheets—40 inches in Saturday and Sunday papers—10 inches, two days previous to opening, and 3 inches single column daily thereon.

HILLSTREET

"REMORSELESS LOVE," Elaine Hammerstein (Selznick). The star is not as popular in the extreme West as in the East. The title was not attractive, but with a vaudeville program the picture went over fairly well.

"HUSH MONEY," Alice Brady (Realart). A good, clean picture, a model of the new type for which the industry is striving. The audiences were full of praise for this feature.

MILWAUKEE

ALHAMBRA

"BEYOND THE ROCKS," Gloria Swanson and Rodolph Valentino (Paramount). Good business.

Exploitation.—Extensive newspaper advertising, and street car card display.

Short Subjects.—A Neal Burns comedy, Educational news reels, Lillian Crossman, soprano; Literary Digest and Pathe news reels.

BUTTERFLY

"WOMAN, WAKE UP," Florence Vidor (Associated Producers). Good business. Star gaining popularity here among motion picture fans.

Exploitation. — Lobby display, newspaper advertising and street car signs.

Short Subjects.—"Why Pick on Me," Harold Lloyd revival; Fox news reels and newsettes.

GARDEN

"THE RULING PASSION," George Arliss (United Artists). Star is one of the best box office attractions in this section; newspaper criticisms unanimously favorable; audiences enthusiastic and well pleased with picture. A sure thing.

Exploitation. — Lobby display, newspaper advertising.

Short Subjects. — "Torchy's Ghost," comedy; Educational news reels and Fox news reels.

MERRILL

"PILGRIMS OF THE NIGHT," Ruby De Remer, Raymond Hatton and Lewis Stone. Fair business. Title not a good business getter.

Short Subjects.—An old time movie, "Little Mary," featuring Mary Pickford, with King Baggott; International news reels.

SAXE'S RIALTO

"CHASING THE MOON," Tom Mix (Fox). Tom Mix's admirers are always pleased to see him. Newspaper critics on the whole favorable.

Short Subjects. — Two-act Sunshine comedy, Selznick news reels.

SAXE'S STRAND

"YOUR BEST FRIEND," Vera Gordon (Warner Bros.). The personal appearance of Vera Gordon helped greatly to bring in customers.

Exploitation.—Miss Gordon was given a fair-sized amount of space in the news columns as well as in the advertising columns. She addressed audiences several times a day.

Short Subjects.—First National Kinograms and Sketchograms and Literary Digest.

NORFOLK, VA.

WELLS

"THE ORDEAL," Agnes Ayres (Paramount). Fair business on a six-day run.

Short Subjects.—Christie comedy, "Kiss and Make Up."

GRANBY

"WAY DOWN EAST" (Griffith-United Artists). Second run and played to very big business for a week.

STRAND

"WOMAN, WAKE UP," Florence Vidor (Associated Exhibitors). Fair business on a three-day run.

PHILADELPHIA

ALDINE

"THE SILENT CALL" (First National). Was advertised as being from the Saturday Evening Post story, "The Cross Pull," and it was felt did well on that score. Animal stories have to be out of the ordinary to get praise from audiences here, but this succeeded in doing that.

Short Subjects.—"On Patrol," Billy Bevan, Pathe Review, "Wonder Caves," Starland Review, and Universal News.

KARLTON

"MISSING HUSBANDS," Special Cast (Metro). Picture did not go over especially big, and did not seem to make a popular appeal.

Short Subjects.—Krazy Kat cartoon, "Felix All At Sea," Post Nature Picture, "Western Ways," Pathe News, and special one-reel "Boy Scouts of America."

ARCADIA

"FIND THE WOMAN," Alma Rubens (Paramount). Fair business first three days, with noticeable improvement last three. Picture liked because of its heart interest, and good impersonations.

Short Subjects.—Christie Comedy, "Any Old Port"; Pathe News, Urban Movie Chats No. 15.

VICTORIA

"BROADWAY PEACOCK," Pearl White (Fox). Star seemed to be just as popular as ever, and drew them in good numbers throughout the week. Novel lobby displays helped materially.

Short Subjects.—"Step Forward," Ben Turpin; Pathe News, Screen Snapshots No. 24, Movie Chats No. 15.

REGENT

"CONCEIT," Special Cast (Select). Didn't do so well, although those who saw it declared it a worth while production. Did pick up a little on last two days.

Short Subjects.—"Laughing Gass," Sunshine Comedy; Mutt and Jeff cartoon, "Modern Fishing" and Pathe News.

CAPITAL

"GLASS HOUSES," Viola Dana (Metro). Did very well. Star is popular, and title was well exploited. Proved a very good box office attraction.

Short Subjects.—Charlie Chaplin, "His New Job"; Kinograms, Topics of the Day, and special scenic "Cataracting the Niagara."

RICHMOND, VA.

BROADWAY

"SMILIN' THROUGH," Norma Talmadge (First National).—Played an entire week to capacity business. One of the biggest successes of the year.

BIJOU

"FOOLISH WIVES," Eric Von Stroheim (Universal).—Played a whole week to record-breaking crowds and seemed to give general satisfaction.

COLONIAL

"THE BACHELOR DADDY," Thomas Meighan (Paramount).—Three days to big business.

"THE LURE OF JADE," Pauline Frederick (Robertson-Cole).—Three days to fair business.

SCRANTON, PA.

NEW STATE

"FOOLISH WIVES," Eric Von Stroheim (Universal). Good run of this feature, even though censors took out some of the pepful sections. Million dollar end of production was boomed, with some reference also to All-American angle of feature. Made an impression among theatre goers.

STRAND

"PAY DAY," Charles Chaplin (First National). Took solid week to handle business. Chaplin's name enough to bring in crowds. Special advertising here on pay days at mines, a feature that has been missing since strike started on April 1 gave Chaplin yarn a new atmosphere which made a real hit.

MILES

"BILLIONS," Nazimova (Metro). Only average business. Nothing in title to draw and as box office attraction, picture does not seem to be in super class.

POLI

"THE VERMILION PENCIL," Sessue Hayawka (R.-C.). Jap star repeats usual success with his large following. Good attraction for any theatre.

SEATTLE, WASH.

COLISEUM

"THE GOOD PROVIDER," Vera Gordon (Famous). Capacity audiences throughout engagement.

Exploitation. — Billboards, newspaper advertising, window cards, lobby display.

Short Subjects.—Cartoon comedy, Pathe News, Kinograms, Miss Betty Anderson in songs.

COLUMBIA

First Half.

"THE BEARCAT," Hoot Gibson (Universal). Good business.

Exploitation.—Usual newspaper space, attractive lobby display.

Short Subjects.—"The Little Rascal" with Baby Peggy; International News.

Last Half.

"A WONDERFUL WIFE," Miss Du Pont (Universal). Good business.

Exploitation. — Usual newspaper and lobby.

Short Subjects.—"Sic'-Em, Brownie" comedy featuring Brownie dog.

WINTER GARDEN

"QUEEN O' THE TURF," Brownie Vernon (R.-C.). In spite of attraction patronage was light.

Exploitation. — Newspaper advertising and lobby trim.

Short Subjects.—Comedy, news reel.

PALACE HIP

"THE MATCH BREAKER," Viola Dana (Loew-Metro). Excellent business. Popularity increased by recent personal appearance.

LIBERTY

"SCHOOL DAYS," Wesley Barry (Warner Bros.). Tremendous hit. Clever prologue added to atmosphere.

Exploitation.—Extra newspaper space, billboards, window cards, lobby built to represent old red school house, with bewhiskered schoolmaster taking tickets, ushers in overalls and straw hats. Free distribution of dunce caps and lollypops to children at matinees.

Short Subjects.—"The Duck Hunter," Mack Sennett Comedy. Liberty news.

STRAND

"BEYOND THE ROCKS," Gloria Swanson and Rodolph Valentino (Paramount). Capacity audiences.

Exploitation.—Newspaper advertising, billboards, window cards, solid lobby trim of blue shot with red and gold. Medallions of stars alternating in panels.

Short Subjects.—"Any Old Port," Christie Comedy; Kinograms.

BLUE MOUSE

"PERJURY," Wm. Farnum (Fox). Better than average patronage.

Exploitation.—Newspaper and lobby displays, window cards.

Short Subjects.—"Excuse Me, Sheriff," Sunshine Comedy, Fox News.

WILKES-BARRE, PA.

CAPITOL

"THE CRADLE," Ethel Clayton (Paramount).—Post-Easter desire for entertainment put people in receptive mood and this popular star's offering was well received.

POLI

"RECEIVED PAYMENT," Corinne Griffith (Vitagraph).—Star well liked here and pictures always draw. This offering was good booking and did business above average.

SAVOY

"DON'T TELL EVERYTHING," Wallace Reid and Gloria Swanson (Paramount).—Ran whole week and business held up satisfactorily. Harold Lloyd's "Never Weaken" proved good drawing card also.

POLI

"A MIDNIGHT BELL," Charles Ray (First National).—Lovers of this comedian's work were out strong and picture was about up to average in bringing in patrons.

WILMINGTON, N. C.

VICTORIA

"TURN TO THE RIGHT" (Metro).—Fair business on a three-day run.

GRAND

"BEYOND THE ROCKS," Gloria Swanson (Paramount).—Exceptional business on a three-day run.

Strange Idols

Released by Fox. Story by Emile Fost. Scenario by Jules Furthman. Cameraman, Don Short. Directed by Bernard Durning. Length Approximately 4,300 Feet.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Angus McDonald, Dustin Farnum; Ruth Mayo, Doris Pawn; Ted Raymond, Philo McCullough; Malcolm Sinclair, Richard Tucker.

Sinclair and his friend McDonald, from the Northwestern woods, were dining at a fashionable cafe. He introduced McDonald to Ruth Mayo, the dancer there. A romance followed and shortly afterwards McDonald took his bride back home with him. A few months later Ruth tired of the new country. McDonald came back to New York with her. A baby was born. Business demanded that McDonald return at once and Ruth and the baby remained in the city. One night when Ruth went back to the cafe she was recognized as the former favorite. In response to their requests she gave a dance with her old partner who was there. A booking agent saw them and offered flattering terms to have them on a European tour. When McDonald returned from the West he found a note from her stating that she had gone away. Six years later McDonald came back to New York. He learned that his child was dancing at this same cafe. He went to her and through her he found the way back to his wife.

Strange Idols is just about the average in motion pictures. It is one of the many stories that carries the spectator through "life" in New York out into the great Northwest and back again some years later to the big city. The plot is along the stereotyped form, not without interest, but lacking in action for a good three-quarters of the picture. It has its moments of pathos and humor and no doubt will carry an appeal in certain localities.

Points of Appeal. — Here we have the story of a young girl, accustomed to the gay life of a city, suddenly transplanted out into the Northwestern woodlands. Although deeply in love with her husband, she cannot seem to live without her former surroundings. This forms the main thread of the story and gradually leads up to a climax in which the woman is released from the bonds of her former self.

Cast. — Dustin Farnum does the role of Angus McDonald with power and feeling. Doris Pawn is attractive as Ruth Mayo. Other members of the cast offer good assistance.

Photography, Lighting, Direction. — Photography through the picture is clear. Good lighting prevails in all of the sets. Continuity of the story easily followed, but the picture requires some added action. Direction, otherwise, satisfactory.

The Face Between

Bayard Veiller Production, Released by Metro Corp. Story by Justus Miles Forman. Scenario by Lenore J. Coffee. Cameraman, Arthur Martinelli. Directed by Bayard Veiller. Length, 4,997 Feet.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Tommy Carteret, Jr. and Tommy Carteret, Sr., Bert Lytell; Sybil Eliot, Andre Tourneur; Marianna Canfield, Sylvia Breamer; Mr. Hartwell, Hardee Kirkland; Mrs. Eliot, Girard Alexander; Joe Borral, Frank Brownlee; Jared, Burwell Hamrick; Mr. Canfield, Joel Day; The Doctor, Dewitt Jennings.

The night of Tommy Carteret's engagement to Sybil, he waits up to tell his father. They are suddenly interrupted by the entrance of a man who claims that Tommy has just left his house where he heard his wife mention the name of Carteret as the intruder made his escape. Tommy realizes that it is his father who is guilty but takes the blame upon himself and consents to go with Hartwell, the man who has thus charged him, to remain in a desolate country spot as long as this Hartwell lives. Tommy says good-bye to the girl he loves and takes up his abode in a cabin in the spot selected by Hartwell. Here he meets Marianna, the daughter of a poor family. She is loved by Joe Borral but does not return his love. Joe blames this on the newcomer and determines to run him out of the village. Marianna goes to warn Tommy of the danger and is found in the cabin when Joe and his gang arrive. She tells them that Tommy is going to marry her and in a daze he agrees. They start to a minister's and on the way a boy brings a message to Tommy that Hartwell is dead and that his fiancée has forgiven him. But Joe who has gone ahead, hides in the woods and fires a shot that kills Marianna and then a second shot that sends Tommy unconscious to the ground. He is taken back to his home and nursed by Sybil. From time to time he suffers from hallucinations and sees Marianna always coming between them. As time passes he improves and finally finds himself free to marry Sybil.

It is possibly solely because of the popularity of Bert Lytell that The Face Between gets by. It is so conspicuously false, with apparently almost every issue forced to make up the required number of feet, that it loses its interest as a story and becomes simply a vehicle for the star. Inasmuch as Lytell plays a dual role, that of the father and son, his admirers will get a goodly share of him on the screen.

Points of Appeal. — The story itself will not bear up under any amount of reasoning. If, however, one chooses to take the various happenings for what they are worth there can be found some particular charm in each one. The most decided feature throughout the picture, though, is the photography.

Cast.—Bert Lytell as Tommy Carteret, the father, and Tommy Carteret, the son, contributes his usual bit of pleasing acting. Sylvia Breamer, as Marianna Canfield, is an attractive type for this style of work. Andre Tourneur is fairly pleasing as Sybil. Moderately good support is given.

Photography, Lighting, Direction. — There are many pleasing night effects. The interiors are attractive and at all times the lighting has been amply taken care of.

The Girl in the Taxi

Released by First National. Story by Stanislaus Strange. Scenario by Bob McGowan. Cameraman, Ross Fisher. Directed by Lloyd Ingraham. Length, 5,420 Feet.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Mignon Smith, Mrs. Carter De Haven; Bertie Stewart, Carter De Haven; Major Smith, King Baggott; Mariette, Grace Cunard; Alexis, Otis Harlan; John Stewart, Tom McGuire; Mrs. Stewart, Margaret Campbell; Percy Peters, Lincoln Plumer; Mary Peters, Freya Sterling; Dr. Paul, John Gough.

John Stewart thinks his son Bertie a mollycoddle and refuses him an increased allowance. The youtb pawns his father's best clothes to get money to spend. On one of his nights out he suddenly spies his father coming down the street and to avoid meeting him jumps into a waiting taxi. He finds himself being whirled away witb a strange girl sitting beside him. A few days later he sees the same girl come to call on his mother. He invites her to go to a cafe for supper tbat evening. While in the private dining room the girl hears the voice of her husband. Wild consternation follows and while on the "run" Bertie bumps into his father and his uncle Percy who, like himself, are secretly away from home. The next morning at breakfast the men are confronted hy the new butler who happens to have been the waiter the night before. To make matters worse the girl comes in to tell Bertie that her husband is on his trail. Major Smith arrives and finds his wife there. After considerable explanations the affair is finally straightened out to the satisfaction of all.

The Girl in the Taxi is Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven in another farce comedy. This story is just about what one might imagine could happen under these conditions and with the aid of much padding and a little slapstick, the picture is carried out to full feature length. The comedy is by no means of the unfamiliar variety to picture-goers, but is of the sort that always seems to get its share of laughs. It is of the light and fairly speedy type that requires no effort to follow and can easily be picked up anywhere along the story.

Points of Appeal. — Probably the men in the audience will enjoy the situations more than the ladies. The scenes in the cafe, when father meets son and hubby meets wife, will most likely prove to be some of the best laugh getters in the picture. The scenes with the new butler are also good. The aim of the whole thing is simply to provoke fun, and regardless of the fact that some of the material is extremely stale, it does not seem to detract from its usefulness along these lines.

Cast.—Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven have the leading roles. Their comedy is well received. The remainder of the cast appear to have rather limited material furnished, but give acceptable performances.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—Interior sets are adequate for the carrying out of the story. Lighting generally good. It could have survived on less "hokum" and been given a little swifter start.

The Glory of Clementina

Released by Robertson-Cole. Story by Wm. J. Locke. Scenario by E. Richard Schayer. Cameraman, Dev. Jennings. Directed by Emile Chautard. Length Approximately 5,700 Feet.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Clementina Wing, Pauline Frederick; Quixtus, Edward Martindel; Huckaby, George Cowl; Billiter, Lincoln Plumner; Tommy Burgrave, Edward Hearn; Etta Concannon, Jean Calhoun; Vandemeer, Wilson Hummel; Lena Fontaine, Louise Dresses; Sheila, Helen Stone; Sheila's Maid, Lydia Yeamans Titus; Lady Luoisa Malling, Truly Shattuck.

Clementina was a successful portrait painter but seemingly without interest in life. At ber studio one day she introduced Tommy, her protege and Etta Concannon. Clementina was ordered by her doctor to take a rest. She got up a party and invited Tommy and Etta to join her. Meanwhile Tommy's uncle Quixtus had discovered some letters that his dead wife Angela had received from Will Hammersly, his best friend, that indicated that these two had been in love. He decided to go away and forget. At the seaside he met Mrs. Fontaine, a young widow and adventuress and fell an easy victim to her well laid plans. Clementina and her party were at the same hotel. A message came from Hammersly, who was at one time a sweetheart of Clementina's, begging her to come to him and also to hring Quixtus. Not knowing the cause of Quixtus' sudden bitterness toward his friend she finally persuaded him to accompany her. They arrived too late but he had left a note entrusting his little daughter to their care. Later Clementina learns of Mrs. Fontaine's plot to capture Quixtus. She determines to outwit her and on the occasion of a dinner given in honor of Tommy's engagement to Etta she appears much to the amazement of all, heautifully gowned and for the first time taking interest in tbings about her. She mentions that Angela had received by mistake some letters originally intended for her from Hammersly. This clears things for Quixtus and having regained his faith in womankind and dazzled hy the revelation of Clementina's beauty he asks ber to become his wife.

There is much about The Glory of Clementina that is admirable. The story is unusual, or, to say the least, it is not commonplace. Although at times somewhat befuddling, it carries an intense amount of interest. It is, perhaps, more of a "high brow" study than most of the stories that find their way to the screen. There is a pleasant sort of satisfaction that runs through it and the story offers some striking examples of human nature. It is possible that the people who have the "finer" feelings of life will appreciate the picture more.

Points of Appeal.—The character of Clementina Wing is rather a novelty. Seldom has a part like this been done with as much accuracy and meaning as Pauline Frederick puts into the role. The eccentric Clementina is a likeable character and the development of the love story is quite out of the ordinary.

Cast.—This role offers a decided contrast to anything that Pauline Frederick has done recently. Her portrayal wins smiles and sympathy. It plainly shows that the star is not one who depends alone on her beauty, but that she is an actress of splendid capabilities. Support good.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—The interiors are well lighted and pleasingly furnished. There are comparatively few exteriors. Direction satisfactory in most instances, but the handling of the mysterious letters could have been made less complicated.

The Ordeal

Paramount Photoplay in Five Parts. Author, W. Somerset Maugham. Scenario by Beulah M. Dix. Director, Paul Powell. Cameraman, Harry Perry. Running Time, Sixty Minutes.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Sybil Bruce, Agnes Ayres; George Bruce, Clarence Burton; Dr. Robert Acton, Conrad Nagel; Helen Crayshaw, Edna Murphy; Geoffrey Crayshaw, Edward Sutherland; Minnie, Ann Schafer; Gene, Eugene Corey; Mme. St. Levis, Adele Farrington; Sir Francis Maynard, Edward Martindel; Kitty, Shannon Day; Elise, Clare Du Brey.

Sybil Bruce, in order to provide for her younger sister, Helen, who is a cripple, and her brother Geoffrey, marries George Bruce, a man twenty years her senior. Bruce is a drunkard. Sybil is attracted by Dr. Acton, a young physician and falsely accused by her husband of infidelity. In a heart attack Bruce calls for digitalis but Sybil allows the vial containing the drug to fall to the floor, where it is broken and Bruce dies. Sybil inherits her husband's large fortune. Helen is operated on and is cured. She and Geoffrey trade on their sister's love and mix with a gay set. Sybil, by her husband's will, loses all her money if she marries again. She loves Acton and suggests to him that she might keep the fortune and still he his, but the physician refuses. News comes that Helen is at a roadhouse where a couple of crooks are about to force her into a marriage with a confederate. Acton and Sybil motor out to the inn and rescue her. Minnie, a nurse, tells Sybil that she poisoned Bruce and that the digitalis could not have saved his life. Sybil realizes that the money has brought nothing but unhappiness to Geoffrey, Helen and herself. She consents to give up the fortune and marry Acton.

The moral pointed by The Ordeal appears to be that it is foolishness to carry self sacrifice to an extreme angle for the benefit of one's relations, as does the heroine of this picture when handicapped by the burden of a selfish invalid sister and worthless brother. Whatever sympathy the lady in the case wins at the start during her sufferings at the hands of a dissipated wretch of a husband is decidedly lessened after that gentleman's demise. His will prevents her from contracting a second marriage unless she is prepared to lose the ready cash, but as she loves and is loved by a young doctor who seems to be fairly prosperous there seems to be scant reason for her long hesitation in giving up the money in exchange for true affection. However, she yields in the long run, after the man of medicine, with heroic determination, refuses to accept her as his mistress and insists on a wedding, or nothing. The story is the first original contribution to the films by the eminent novelist and playwright, W. Somerset Maugham, and affords fair entertainment.

Points of Appeal.—There are many strong emotional situations, the old negro nurse, Minnie, who is killed while saving Helen from the latter's crook suitor, prior to the arrival of Sybil and Acton on the scene, gets a good deal of sympathy; and a satisfactory climax is reached when the heroine decides to relinquish the fortune which has brought her nothing but trouble in favor of the man who really loves her.

Cast.—Clare Du Brey, in the role of Elise, the French maid who constantly intervenes between her mistress and the latter's hysterical sister and wastrel brother, does an excellent bit of character acting. Agnes Ayres gives a capable performance as Sybil Bruce, Conrad Nagel scores heavily in the part of the lover physician and adequate support is furnished by the rest of the cast.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—The camera work throughout is of the best quality, the exteriors and interiors are well filmed and the lighting effects attractive. The continuity is unbroken and the action tolerably fast.

Sonny

First National Photoplay in Six Parts. Adapted from the Play by George V. Hobart. Scenario by Frances Marion and Henry King. Director, Henry King. Cameraman, Henry Cronjager. Running Time, Seventy-Nine Minutes.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

"Sonny" (Charles Crosby) Richard Barthelmess; Joe Marden, Richard Barthelmess; Mrs. Crosby, Margaret Seddon; Florence Crosby, Pauline Garon; Madge Craig, Lucy Fox; Harper Craig, Herbert Grimwood, Alicia, Patterson Dial; Summers, Fred Nichols; James, James Terbell; Crosby Twins, Margaret Faulconer and Virginia Magee.

When America enters the World War Charles Crosby, son of a blind, wealthy widow, and affectionately called "Sonny" by his family, goes to the front. At the same time Joe Marden, leaves his billiard parlor in Hoboken to answer the summons to arms. Both lads find themselves in the same regiment. They are so wonderfully alike in appearance that mistakes are constantly made by their comrades and officers in identifying them. They become close friends. "Sonny" is killed in No Man's Land, where Joe has gone to attempt his rescue. Before dying "Sonny" makes his buddy promise that the latter will go back to his blind mother and pretend to be her son. Joe, brought in wounded, is supposed to be "Sonny." Aided by a nurse, a protege of Mrs. Crosby, who knows the truth but thinks it best to fulfill "Sonny's" request for a time at least, Joe goes to the Crosby residence. True to his promise to the dead man Joe keeps up the kindly deception, is well received by his supposed sisters and mother. Many complications ensue, Mrs. Crosby sees her dead son's spirit in a dream and realizes that he is dead. The spirit also appears to Joe and urges him to confess. He is about to do so when Mrs. Crosby herself anticipates the confession by telling him she knows, but that he must always be a son to her.

The case of the missing soldier whose identity becomes merged in that of another man strongly resembling him has become a familiar screen theme ever since the great war began and ended. But never has the idea been so cleverly handled and presented on the silver sheet as it is in Sonny. This picture is undoubtedly another big triumph for the star—the versatile Richard Barthelmess, whose sympathetic and charmingly natural work in the dual role assigned him dominates the feature and makes you forget that the plot is not remarkable for originality. For the fact remains that the story plays havoc with the heart strings and were it not for the lightening effect of timely comedy touches, and an ingenious straightening out of matters at the close—would leave rather a gloomy impression behind. But as it stands, the film is a wonderful and refreshing thing — part sunshine, part tears — deliciously human, a high-grade, technically perfect entertainment which is a credit to all concerned in its production. Sonny should prove a powerful box office magnet.

Points of Appeal.—There is just enough of warfare in France shown to furnish a pivot for the plot to swing on, without laying unnecessary stress on horrors which many people are only too willing to forget if possible. As a matter of fact, the real tragedy is the mental one which develops after Joe comes to his buddy's home and assumes the burden of false identity. The mother's love, her strivings with odd intuitions as to Joe's personality, the latter's struggles to carry his promise through faithfully, the hint of romance in connection with "Sonny's" little sister, all are set forth with extraordinary vividness. The phantom appearance of the deceased lad at crucial moments is exceedingly effective, and as the spiritualistic cult is receiving so much publicity in the daily press, this ghostly element is likely to add to the picture's popularity. There are many clever flashes of humor relieving the serious tension and a marvelously artistic climax, a sort of camera benediction, as rare as it is pleasing.

Cast.—In the dual hero role Richard Barthelmess once more shines forth as an actor of tremendous dramatic strength, giving a performance which is bound to linger in the memory of all who witness it. Margaret Seddon is pathetically interesting as the blind mother, Pauline Garon a captivating figure as little sister Florence and the support as a whole is excellent.

Yellow Men and Gold

Goldwyn Photoplay in Six Parts. Author, Gouverneur Morris. Director, Irvin Willat. Cameraman, Clyde DeVinna. Running Time, Sixty-Five Minutes.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Parrish, Richard Dix; Bessie, Helene Chadwick; Carroll, Henry Barrows; Carmen, Rosemary Theby; Lynch, Richard Tucker; Craven, Fred Kohler; Todd, Henry Hehert; Cunningham, William Moran; Chang, Goro Kino; Jili, George King; John, William Carroll; Abraham, R. T. Frazier.

Parrish, a struggling young author, leaves his study during a storm to answer a call for help out in the garden. He finds a dying man and is rewarded hy the discovery of a treasure chart which he shows to Carroll, retired sea captain. They plan a quest for the treasure but prior to the sailing of Carroll's ship, the Calliope, Parrish is drugged, the map taken from him and he is thrown from the dock. From the deck of the vessel Shantung a girl named Bessie leaps and drags Parrish to safety. Bessie is the feminine hoss of the Shantung and her Chinese crew. Learning that Carroll has tricked him, Parrish who has retained a copy of the treasure chart, starts on the Shantung to find the concealed gold. He gets there before Carroll but the latter's armed gang interrupt the proceedings. Bessie is imprisoned on Carroll's ship. Parrish fights his way to the beach, swims to the Calliope and sets it afire. He also rescues Bessie and takes her to the Shantung, and they are successful after many thrilling adventures, finally discovering that they are in love with each other. At this point, the story turns back to the young author in his study and it transpires that the whole treasure hunt tale is one of his manuscripts which has been accepted for publicatiou.

This latest contribution to the screen by author Governeur Morris is a lively riot of romance, wild adventure and whirling action which furnishes good entertainment and can be depended upon to win the favor of a majority of movie patrons. It is, of course, melodrama of the most unrestrained type, one of those fanciful treasure hunt yarns that must not be taken too seriously from a critical standpoint, the sort of thing that is merely designed to amuse, and fulfills its mission in that direction creditably. Evidently the author himself didn't want folks to think that he was altogether in deadly earnest when he doped out Yellow Men and Gold, for at the finale it transpires that the whole plot is the product of a young writer's fervid imagination, which has just been accepted for publication, after many of his manuscripts have been coldly turned down. The picture is well directed, beautifully photographed, and presented by a capable cast of players. It ought to prove a satisfactory box-office asset.

Points of Appeal. — An odd point about the story is that it represents the Chinese seamen in a favorable light, instead of showing the much-maligned Orientals as a gang of sneaking and unscrupulous assassins, which is rather a refreshing change from ordinary screen directorial methods. There are any amount of cleverly staged thrills, one exciting situation follows fast upon the heels of its predecessor, hardly giving the spectators time to catch their breath, and a triumphant climax is happily achieved.

Cast.—Helene Chadwick is an extremely fascinating heroine who wins golden opinions in the role of Bessie, Richard Dix plays the hero with electrical dash and spirit, Rosemary Theby, Fred Kohler and Henry Barrows are excellent in their respective parts, and adequate support is rendered by the remainder of the company.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—There are many fine marine views in evidence, the long shots are admirable, a remarkable effect is achieved by the volcanic eruption scenes and the lighting throughout is superb. The continuity holds together well and the action never falters.

Gay and Devilish

Robertson-Cole Photoplay in Five Parts. Author, Charles A. Logue. Scenario by Garret Elsden Fort. Director, William A. Seiter. Cameraman, Pliny Goodfriend. Running Time, Fifty-Five Minutes.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Fanchon Browne, Doris May; Peter Armitage, Cullen Landis; Uncle Peter Armitage, Otis Harlan; Lilah Deane, Jacqueline Logan; Tony, Bull Montana; Aunt Bessie, Lila Leslie; The Butler, Ashley Cooper; First Detective, Arthur Millett; Second Detective, Kingsley Benedict; Third Detective, Milton Ross; Nethercote, George Periolat.

Martin Nethercote loses money in Wall Street, most of which belongs to his pretty young ward, Fanchon Browne. Also, his business rival, old Peter Armitage, threatens to close him down unless Fanchon agrees to marry the elderly broker. Fanchon's Aunt Bessie aids Nethercote to obtain Fanchon's consent. They visit her studio, where she is trying to make a heroic statue of Tony, heavyweight prizefighter. Her cbum, Lilah, is also present, with whom Tony has fallen in love. Fanchon agrees to marry old Peter, but before she meets him, makes the acquaintance of a young man in the woods, whom she decides to win and persuades Lilah to vamp Peter Armitage. Lilah vamps the wrong man, who is the object of Fanchon's affections. His name is also Peter Armitage, nephew of the rich Peter. Fanchon undertakes to make old Peter tired of his bargain and leads him a weary life by inducing him to indulge in strenuous outdoor sports. Aunt Bessie falls in love with the elder Peter. Fanchon takes one thousand dollars from old Peter's safe to help out young Peter in a speculation. The speculation is a success, but young Peter is accused of having robbed his uncle's safe of twenty thousand dollars. It transpires that the butler is the real thief. Young Peter marries Fanchon and his uncle is united to Aunt Bessie.

This picture offers a plot of extremely light construction, which is, in a measure, redeemed from registering as sheer nonsense by the clever acting of a very capable cast and a number of amusing farcial situations. Director William Seiter has seen to it that the action moves so rapidly that the spectators are too busily engaged in following the whirl of events to become over-critical, a fortunate result from the producer's point of view, for the story would hardly stand the test of being analyzed. However, one does not look for a very massive plot in a comedy picture of this type, and, taken on the whole, Gay and Devilish can be set down as providing fair entertainment for patrons who prefer not to overtax their thinking capacity in hot weather.

Points of Appeal. — The chief interest lies in the somewhat impish pranks executed by the resourceful heroine, who decides that a poor nephew is a better marital proposition than his wealthy uncle, and starts out to lure the older chap into the toils of the vampish Lilah. A funny twist is given the plot when Lilah attempts to ensnare the wrong Peter Armitage, whom Fanchon has marked for her own prey. The money theft, of which young Peter is falsely accused, furnishes a bit of a melodramatic thrill and the climax sees the loving couples properly sorted out and everybody happy.

Cast.—Doris May plays the role of Fanchon with all the dash and vivacity for which she is noted, Jacqueline Logan is a fascinating vamp as Lilah Deane, Otis Harlan's ability as a front rank comedian is amply demonstrated by his portrayal of Uncle Peter, while Cullen Landis gives a capital performance in the part of the nephew.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—The outdoor scenery includes some pretty rustic shots, with woodland and water views. The lighting is effective, the continuity fairly well woven together, and the action breezes along merrily through the entire five reels.

Mr. Barnes of New York

Goldwyn Photoplay in Five Parts. Author, Archibald Clavering Gunter. Scenario by Gerald Duffy. Director, Victor Schertzinger. Running Time, Fifty-Five Minutes.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Barnes of New York, Tom Moore; Marina Paoli, Anna Lehr; Enid Anstruther, Naomi Childers; Gerard Anstruther, Lewis Willoughby; Antonio, Ramon Samaniego; Tomasso, Otto Hoffman; Danella, Sidney Ainsworth.

Mr. Barnes of New York, famous international pistol shot, while in Corsica, is witness to a duel between Paoli and a British naval officer in which the former is killed. Marina, sister of Paoli, vows a vendetta against the slayer, the only clue to whom is his name on the pistol butt he used in the combat. Marina paints a picture of the duel scene. It is hung in a Paris art gallery. Barnes sees the picture and takes such interest in it that detectives paid by Marina suspect him to be the slayer. He overhears a pretty English girl, Enid Anstruther, telling a friend that she has fallen in love with the portrait of himself as shown in the painting. He follows Enid on a train journey to Nice and makes her acquaintance. He wins her affections, but is afraid that sorrow awaits her as a result of the suspicion that her brother Gerard is the naval officer sought by Marina for slaying her brother. Gerard is in love with Marina. Her guardian, Count Danella, plots to have her wed Gerard and reveal the fact that her husband is the man who killed her brother, whom she has sworn to avenge. With Gerard dead, Marina will then be free to wed Danella. However, Barnes proves that Gerard loaned his pistol to a fellow officer and that it was the latter who shot Paoli. As Gerard's name was on the pistol butt, he was supposed to be the slayer. After many adventures, Count Danella's designs are utterly defeated. Barnes weds Enid and Marina is united to Gerard.

Both as a fiction best seller and stage attraction of a generation ago, Mr. Barnes of New York attained widespread popularity and there is every reason for believing that the film version will score a well-deserved success. The story is rich in romantic and adventurous ingredients, the love interest well sustained, the action moves briskly and there are thrills in plenty. Suspense is not lacking and the final reel swings through a medley of exciting complications, plotting and counter-plotting without any slackening of the tension, until a sudden surprise twist ends everything satisfactorily. The picture is skilfully directed, well acted and should make money for the exhibitor.

Points of Appeal. — The costumes of the early eighties, in which the action is supposed to take place, are reproduced with faithful accuracy and add much to the picture's artistic charm. A bit of comedy relief is injected with happy results in the scene where Barnes skilfully starves Enid, the girl with whom he has fallen in love, into making his acquaintance on the train, with the aid of a friendly guard. But for the most part the interest centers in Marina's vengeful quest, which at first has the man she loves and weds as its object. Barnes' desperate cross-country ride to rescue Gerard from the fate that threatens him, and the killing of the scheming Danella by old Tomasso are scenes vibrating with real melodramatic thrill, which lead up to a pleasing climax.

Cast.—Tom Moore plays the part of Barnes with the easy-going, natural charm which characterizes the work of that popular leading man. Yet, when occasion demands he flashes into dynamic spurts of energy and Barnes is very much Johnny on the Spot at crucial moments. Anna Lehr does splendid work in the role of the Corsican girl, Marina, and Naomi Childers is pretty and appealing as Enid Anstruther. Lewis Willoughby is convincing as Gerard with excellent support.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—The Corsican scenes are replete with colorful atmosphere, the marine views delightful, skilful long shots abound and the lighting effects are faultless.

The Black Bag

Universal Photoplay in Five Parts. Author, Louis Joseph Vance. Scenario by George Hively. Director, Stuart Paton. Cameraman, Virgil Miller. Running Time, Fifty-five Minutes.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Billy Kirkwood, Herbert Rawlinson; Dorothy Calender, Virginia Valli; Mulready, Bert Roach; Mrs. Hallam, Clara Beyers; Freddie Hallam, Charles King; Samuel Brentwick, Herbert Fortier; Burgoyne, Lou Short; Martin, Jack O'Brien.

Billy Kirkwood, young business man, goes to New York on a vacation. In a cafe he meets Dorothy Calender, whom he escorts to a taxi to save her from the annoyance of a man who has been following her. She is staying at a seaside resort, and Billy goes there. Dorothy has a diamond necklace in her bag, which a crook has seen her take while in Brentwick's big jewelry establishment. This man and his confederates pursue her to where she is staying. Billy takes a hand in the game. He, too, imagines that Dorothy has stolen the necklace and intervenes. He gets the necklace away from two of the gang after they had secured it and hides it in his hotel room, but his room is searched by the thieves, who regain the diamonds and escape in a motor yacht. Billy chases them in another boat, overtakes his quarry and forces them to give up the necklace at the point of his gun. He compels them to return with him. On reaching port the hotel detective and police arrest the thieves, but also take Billy into custody. In Dorothy's bungalow Billy faces the girl, her brother Martin and uncle. The latter turns out to be Samuel Brentwick, the jewelry merchant. It transpires that Dorothy stole her own necklace in order to raise money for Martin, who had been caught short in a stock deal. Mutual explanations are made and Billy wins Dorothy.

This bright and amusing crook comedy drama "gets across" with amazing zip and dash. It is all action, a hurry-scurry of dynamic thrills intermingled with scintillating jets of humor, the energetic hero is always in evidence when needed to thrash a crook or cow a bunch of them at the muzzle of a six-shooter, the complications of the plot are many and varied, but so well has Stuart Paton directed the feature that there is little difficulty in following the story, of which it may be frankly said that there isn't a dull moment in the entire five reels. Also, the surprise element figures largely, it is impossible to anticipate the ending, and the idea that the heroine is really a crook prevails until the climax, when matters are cleared up to everybody's satisfaction. The Black Bag is mighty good entertainment, viewed from every angle, and should draw shekels into the box-office wherever shown.

Points of Appeal.—That the thieves, the hero and girl in the case are all working at cross purposes helps to tangle things up in great style, one never can guess what is coming next, and it is seldom that so much suspense is crowded into a story in which the comedy touch is so pronounced. The love interest is skilfully worked out and developed, the scrapping episodes are remarkably realistic and the melodramatic situations never carried to the point of absurdity.

Cast. — Herbert Rawlinson's infectious smile, his engaging personality and athletic ability are all qualities which go far toward making the character of Billy Kirkwood one of the best of his screen portrayals. Virginia Valli is a prettily appealing heroine, the crook types are excellent, and the support as a whole could hardly be improved upon.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—The marine views are extremely beautiful, including some tasty long shots, the other exteriors charming and the interiors well filmed. The lighting is clear and distinct at all times, the continuity smooth and the action speedy.

Press Comments

Journal.—The reviewer liked it despite the incongruities and technical faults, such as the suspicious similarity of the two vessels and the incredible stupidity of the hero. Herald.—It is a blithely romantic tale for all it moves jerkily at times and leaves several points unexplained and there is a vigorous, messy fight. Evening World.—A fine film for a warm night. It'll send you home all a shiver. The music is Capitol quality, which is the sterling mark in that line of entertainment. Evening Mail.—The feature is high speed melodrama of the kind to stir the most sluggish pulse; a slashing adventure story of treasure hunting absurdly improbable, but done so vigorously that it is interesting despite of the worst subtitles ever written. Globe.—Lovers of the primitive will find nothing to complain of in "Yellow Men and Gold." Lovers of nature will find in this picture some very striking bits of photography, sea and rocky coasts and perilous cliffs. In fact, if the action proves distressing, one can ease the eyes by the tranquillity of the settings. Telegram.—A refreshing love story runs through the feature with a smashing climax at the end. It is as thrilling as anything Mr. Morris has ever written. Tribune.—"Yellow Men and Gold" is above the average picture in entertainment value.

Telegram.—"Sonny" stands, in a way, as a tribute to post-war regeneration. The story is truly human in conception and realistically interpreted. There is something absorbing in the pledge of Joe Peters, the double in appearance of his buddy in France, to take the latter's place in the Westchester mansion and to keep up the deception for Sonny's blind mother. The role is played in a marvelous way by Richard Barthelmess. Globe.—A very pleasurable hour may be passed with the more handsome than usual Richard Barthelmess. It is a war picture and tells how Sonny enlists, goes over seas, is wounded and dies, and how his buddy, who is enough like Sonny, returns to the blind mother and takes the part of the dead son until embarrassing complications arise. Mail.—It is not difficult to explain the great popularity of Richard Barthelmess among picture fans. He plays human beings. He likes his roles and throws into them real sincerity. Evening World.—"Sonny," Richard Barthelmess' latest and nearly best, is the venerated mother-love idea with reverse English and it gives this pleasing young star ample chance to thrum away on the heart strings. Herald.—The feature is a rare film flower, more stirring than Flanders poppies, for it is the expression of a personality which is as difficult to find on the screen as a golden haired heroine who does not fluff out her hair.

Comedy—The Count.

Press Comments

Telegram.—"The Ordeal" is a highly dramatic study of a beautiful girl's sacrifices for her invalid sister and weakling brother. The story in its pictorial form moves smoothly and along a direct course to its climax. Evening World.—"The Ordeal" doesn't live up to its name at all. It is certainly not an ordeal to sit through almost any film in which Agnes Ayres is the bright and particular star, at least capacity audiences did not find it so at the Rialto yesterday. Herald.—The action in the feature, in singular distinction to the average cinema drama, gets the jump on the audience from the start and is never headed. Journal.—Unselfishness, its good and bad effects, is eloquently depicted in "The Ordeal." It is a question, however, as to whether the means really justifies the end. Agnes Ayres as Sybil Bruce, willingly accepts an Atlas-like load and, strange as it may seem, her chief aid and accomplice is digitalis. American.—The increasing difficulty of finding good picture stories was never more emphatically shown than in "The Ordeal." Its cast was better than its story. Although Agnes Ayres has no very large assortment of emotions, she managed to give semblance of verity to the agonized heroine.

EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW

The Turn in the Road

By L. W. BOYNTON

FOR a comparatively long period, Prosperity and the Motion Picure Industry have not been on very friendly terms. There are definite signs that this interval of estrangement, which began when the war period of inflation ended, is due to be closed with the coming season.

Elsewhere in this issue we present the facts uncovered in a nation-wide survey conducted by Exhibitors Trade Review through its correspondents in the key centers. No effort was made to build up a story of false optimism. Our correspondents were told to get the facts—and they did. The result shows that those who have believed the picture business sound at heart, and depressed only because the whole structure of industry everywhere has been under the burden that succeeds every great war, were accurate in their judgment of the situation.

The conclusions which we draw from this survey are in line with the best business thought of the country on the subject of "conditions." There is one theme which runs almost universally through the response of exhibitors to questions by our correspondents.

It is this: a strong belief that the coming season, which opens in September, if not earlier, will usher in one of the greatest periods of normal prosperity the industry has known. The turn in the road is in sight. The worst is definitely over. To be sure, there is a pronounced Summer slump in some sections, but the surprising thing is that in more sections than might have been figured fewer theatres are closing and business is holding up well.

There is no shadow of excuse on anybody's part for crying that the industry's best days are over. The public's attitude toward the motion picture is not antagonistic; it is discriminating—and that fact instead

Announcement

Exhibitors Trade Review takes pleasure in announcing the accession to its editorial staff of Thomas C. Kennedy, an experienced writer in the motion picture trade publication field.

Mr. Kennedy's appointment is in the nature of a return, for he was one of the members of the original staff of this publication.

Through association with one of the large distributing companies, he has also had thorough experience in the handling of publicity and exploitation material. More recently, he has been engaged in business activity outside the industry.

Mr. Kennedy will devote himself to the exploitation department of Exhibitors Trade Review and will be an important factor in the week-to-week presentation of this vital service to exhibitors.

of being an evil ought to be reckoned a positive good.

Why? Because it compels the producer to give the public better pictures; and compels the exhibitor to exploit them in a more effective fashion. The industry, from top to bottom, is undergoing a process of the survival of the fittest.

To those exhibitors who are discouraged, we say: take heart; stick to the fight; keep your theatre open if possible this Summer. In any case, read the lesson that is written for you in our survey, and get ready for better times. They are coming. They will come to you and your theatre—if you go out and meet them half way.

And don't forget this: it is the duty of the producer and the distributor to provide you with pictures with which you can make money, satisfy your patrons, and build prestige for your theatre. It's your duty to give the pictures you book the proper handling and exploitation. And the motion picture trade paper is at work, week in and week out, to help you in that very task.

Mr. Cohen and the State of Georgia

THERE was a convention in Georgia on June 5. It wasn't Mr. Cohen's convention. It was thoroughly representative of the State exhibitor body, and it decided, among other things, that Georgia would remain free and independent, refusing to affiliate with the political machine that ran roughshod over it at Washington.

There was a statement from Mr. Cohen's office on June 6—so we understand. And in the statement was incorporated a copy of a letter which Mr. Cohen announced he had sent to every exhibitor in Georgia, informing them that he would soon organize a unit in that sovereign state.

But Georgia has already organized itself. Isn't it strange how some of these states just simply won't behave themselves? Isn't it peculiar that Georgia, like New York, got tired of promises and speeches and machine methods?

And what will Mr. Cohen say of the exhibitors who refuse to do his bidding? Are they all wrong?

We hear a voice from the crowd asking if Mr. Cohen didn't plead for harmony at and after the Washington convention. "Yes, yes," we reply. And the voice answers: "Well, then, the great man is determined to have harmony in Georgia even if he has to fight the exhibitors of the state to get it." And the voice keeps on saying: "He wants harmony—he wants harmony—he wants harmony. Why, then, is he attempting to destroy a perfectly good state organization?"

And then another voice comes in: "Which one of the chairmen at Washington was it that said, 'We have finished with Georgia'?"

And our answer must be: "We don't seem to remember that particular chairman's name. But we do remember the name of the man who answered him and we do remember what he said. His name was Patterson. And what he said was, 'You bet your life you've finished with Georgia'."

And the voice comes back at us: "Then the chairman couldn't have been Mr. Cohen, because he's finished with Georgia and doesn't know it."

Hays Organization Puts Into Effect Movement for Highest Standards in Pictures; Orders Sent to Studios

ANNOUNCEMENT was made this week by Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., of an important step toward the fulfillment of one of the great objects for which the organization was formed, namely, "establishing and maintaining the highest possible moral and artistic standards in motion picture production."

The members of the Hays organization, at a meeting held in his office on May 17, agreed unanimously that the time had come to put into effect the movement for higher standards.

On May 19, Mr. Hays addressed a letter to each member of the organization, setting forth his views on this vital matter; and this was followed by letters from the heads of the member companies to their studios throughout the country instructing all those concerned in the production of pictures to see to it that the spirit of Mr. Hays' remarks was carried out to the fullest degree.

These letters, accompanied by the communication from Mr. Hays, have been posted on the various studio bulletin boards in Los Angeles and New York.

The letter written by Mr. Hays went to the following concerns which comprise the membership of the M. P. P. D. A.: Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., Earl W. Hammons, President; Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, Adolph Zukor, President; Fox Film Corporation, William Fox, President; Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, Frank J. Godsol, President; Metro Pictures Corporation, Marcus Loew, President; Select Pictures Corporation, Lewis J. Selznick, President; Universal Film Manufacturing Company, Carl Laemmle, President; Vitagraph, Inc., John M. Quinn, General Manager; Joseph M. Schenck Productions, Joseph M. Schenck, President.

Letter from Mr. Hays

Mr. Hays' letter read as follows:

"I know that none of us are unmindful of the objects of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., as definitely stated in the Articles of Association as follows:

> " 'The object for which the corporation is to be created is to foster the common interest of those engaged in the motion picture industry in the United States, by establishing and maintaining the highest possible moral and artistic standards in motion picture production, by developing the education as well as the entertainment value and the general usefulness of the motion picture, by diffusing accurate and reliable information with reference to the industry, by reforming abuses relative to the industry, by securing freedom from unjust or unlawful exactions, and by other lawful and proper means.'

"We are all familiar, too, with the efforts being made by all to carry out these objects and, personally, I thoroughly appreciate the cooperation which is being given by everybody.

"It is impossible, of course, to overestimate the importance of the immediate application of these purposes in connection with the production which is now in process for next season. It is to this that I want most earnestly to call your attention.

"We can make the greatest immediate progress in 'establishing and maintaining the highest possible moral and artistic standards of motion picture production,' if those charged with the responsibilities in connection with the production now in progress make certain that they do strive for this very thing. We are giving and we must give preferred attention to these purposes right now in the pictures which are now being made. Every day there is opportunity in the studios to take that action which will more and more eliminate the objectionable features and nearer and nearer reach the 'highest possible moral and artistic standard.' These pictures which are being made now and which will be made this summer, are being made after we have agreed to use our best efforts to attain the purposes of the Association, and our responsibility for these pictures cannot be avoided.

Pictures Will Be the Proof

"These pictures now being made will come out soon and they will be the proof either of our honesty of purpose or of our failure; they will be the proof either of our ability to correct our evils ourselves, or of our inability to run our own business. There is nothing in which we can possibly be engaged which is of as much importance to the success of our efforts as to make certain that these very pictures, the first pictures made after the organization of the Association, shall clearly show successful effort toward 'establishing and maintaining the highest possible moral and artistic standard.'

"I cannot too strongly urge you to make certain that everything possible shall be done to that end.

"With very kindest personal regards, and best wishes always, I am,

"Sincerely yours,

(Signed) "WILL H. HAYS."

Typifying the letters of instruction which went out from the various member companies to their studios, the following communication from Carl Laemmle, President of Universal, to Irving Thalberg, at Universal City, was made public by Mr. Hays:

"Letter to Thalberg from C. L. Write this letter so that it can be posted on the studio bulletin board alongside of the enclosed letter from Hays.

"My Dear Mr. Thalberg:

"I am enclosing herewith a letter just received from Mr. Will Hays, President of

T. O. C. C. and Hays Organization Name Committees To Handle Negotiations

AN important stage in the negotiations between Will H. Hays, representing the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., and the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York City, was reached on June 6 at a meeting in Mr. Hays' office. Senator James J. Walker appeared as counsel and spokesman for the T. O. C. C.

Committees were appointed by both organizations to work out the details of the negotiations, which represent the first real effort to solve the vital inner problems of the industry. The committee which will act for the T. O. C. C. is composed of the following members of its Executive Committee: Louis F. Blumenthal, Leo Brecher and Bernard Edelhertz. Representing the M. P. P. D. A. the following were named: Sidney R. Kent, general manager of distribution for the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; John M. Quinn, general manager of Vitagraph; and Karl W. Kirchwey, of counsel for the Selznick Enterprises.

As already announced, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York State, Inc., which is acting independently of the Cohen organization, is closely allied with the T. O. C. C. in the negotiations with Mr. Hays. Considerable progress has been made in the discussion of an equitable contract and the situation is clearly defined, with the appointment of the committees in advance of the meeting of Sydney Cohen and his Board of Directors with Mr. Hays, which is scheduled for Monday, June 12.

the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., of which the Universal Company is a charter member.

"You will please post this letter, as well as Mr. Hays' letter, in some conspicuous place in Universal City, where every employee can read it, and you will please notify every employee that I desire to carry out the entire spirit of Mr. Hays' remarks.

"Since, as Mr. Hays says, the whole industry will be judged BY THE PICTURES BEING MADE AND HEREAFTER TO BE MADE, the Universal does not propose to make any picture, or any scene in any picture, which can in any way bring condemnation upon the Universal or upon the picture business.

"Our record has been good in the past, but we now intend to make it one hundred per cent good, and I herewith serve friendly notice upon each and every Universal employee, from the highest to the lowest, that I shall not be satisfied with anything less than one hundred per cent cooperation along this line.

"Read Mr. Hays' letter carefully and remember that every word of it means business; and the Universal intends to stand back of it to the limit.

"Sincerely,

(Signed) "CARL LAEMMLE."

Georgia Maintains Its Independence

Patterson's Stand at Washington Unanimously Indorsed—No Affiliation With Any Organization Now Existing—Factionalism Buried—Lynch Theatres Join Association One Hundred Per Cent

WHEN the Georgia Amusement Protective Association at its first general meeting held in the Ansley Hotel, Atlanta, on June 5, formally and unanimously adopted the tentative by-laws under which the association has been operating since its inception last July the action amounted to an endorsement of the stand taken by Willard Patterson at the Washington convention when he refused to countenance the effort to cast a vote for Georgia under the machine rule of the convention.

An absolute unanimity of opinion prevailed on this point at the meeting of Georgia exhibitors: that the development of state organization should not be hampered by political issues and factionalism that have been so disastrously evident in the so-called national organization, and at the reading of the by-laws article by article due emphasis was laid upon Section 3 of Article 1 which expressly forbids affiliation with any other organization in the amusement industry.

The clause in question says: "This association shall be automatically dissolved should it affiliate in any way any organization of the amusement industry existing at the time of the adoption of these by-laws."

No Factionalism

For the first time since exhibitor organization was attempted in Georgia there is no suggestion of factionalism. Large exhibiting interests who are by virtue of their affiliations pitted in direct and powerful opposition in the regular conduct of their business are applying themselves assiduously to the development of an organization which they expect to embrace not only every theatre in the State of Georgia, but all other major amusement enterprises. Although at the present moment the membership of the association is made up entirely of motion picture theatre exhibitors, the by-laws are so shaped as to include baseball associations and other similar amusement enterprises, and a definite move will be made to bring several major amusements into the association as active members.

For the first time since exhibitor organization was attempted in Georgia there are no factions. Of the eight-two theatres already actively enrolled in the association unquestionably the strongest are those represented by the Southern Enterprises, generally referred to as the Lynch organization, and those represented by Sig Samuels and Willard Patterson. By virtue of their affiliations which have placed them in direct and powerful opposition the Southern Enterprises have been regarded as the natural enemies of Sig Samuels and Willard Patterson, who are the outstanding exponents of First National in Georgia. And they have waged a fast and furious competition. But, that competition applies exclusively to the conduct of their individual theatres.

Lynch Theatres Join

When it comes to a question touching upon the Georgia Association Y. F. Freeman, as the spokesman for the Enterprises and Willard Patterson speaking for Sig Samuels, bury their hatchets. And individual interest will be sacrificed for the good of the association.

It is equally interesting to note that never before in the history of their theatre activities in Georgia have the Southern Enterprises sponsored any exhibitor organization.

Patterson Issues Scorching Statement on Cohen's Attempt to Disrupt Georgia Organization

ON June 6, Sydney S. Cohen made public a copy of a letter which he announced he had sent to every exhibitor in Georgia, containing the following paragraph:

"At the request of a number of independent theatre owners in your State, we propose at an early date to completely reorganize and perfect the Georgia State Division of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners so that the interests of all theatre owners in that State will be fully conserved."

The announcement of this attempt on Cohen's part to dictate to the State of Georgia and disrupt the Georgia Amusement Protective Association brought a scorching statement from Willard C. Patterson, chairman of the Executive Committee of the Georgia organization. The statement was telegraphed to Exhibitors Trade Review from Atlanta on June 8 and read as follows:

"If Cohen thinks he can disrupt the Georgia Amusement Protective Association, let him try. As a self-appointed leader he is about as popular in Georgia as he is with the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce. Ask him to publish the name of any exhibitor in this State who has sought an affiliation with the M.P.T.O.A. since the Washington Convention.

"If Cohen wants to be a little Moses and lead exhibitors out of darkness let him practice with his own State of New York and leave Georgia alone."

Until a year ago when the imperative need of a business association of amusement enterprises inspired the formation of this organization, neither Mr. Lynch nor Mr. Freeman had ever committed themselves to any exhibitor body. Now they have brought their Georgia theatre holdings into the association 100 per cent strong.

Following the reading and adoption of the by-laws came the election of officers with the following results: Joe Burton of the Star Theatre, Toccoa, president; Mrs. Chas. Cinciola of the Alamo Theatre, Gainesville, first vice-president; R. J. Edenfield, Dreamland Theatre, Augusta, second vice-president, and Y. F. Freeman of the Southern Enterprises, Atlanta, treasurer.

Patterson Heads Executive Committee

Willard Patterson was elected chairman of the executive committee. Serving with Mr. Patterson will be O. C. Lam of the Elite Theatre, Rome; Mrs. M. E. James of the Strand Theatre, Athens; H. E. Center, Palace Theatre, LaFayette; A. E. Johnson, Strand Theatre, Valdosta; Thomas W. Hogan and Bonita Theatre, Canton. Miss Anna Eugene Aiken, publisher of the Weekly Film Review, was chosen by the executive committee to serve as secretary of the association.

Under the provisions of its by-laws the Georgia association will hold two general meetings annually —one the first Monday in July to be held in Atlanta, the other to be held approximately six months later at a point to be determined by the executive committee.

The association went on record indorsing the work of Will Hays as head of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors and pledged support of such measures as Mr. Hays might initiate looking toward the advancement of the industry in general. The motion was made by Willard Patterson, seconded by Y. F. Freeman, and unanimously passed.

Immediately upon the adjournment of the general meeting the executive committee composed of the four newly elected officers and the six executive committeemen, went into session. The prime question before that body was the adjustment of the matter of assessments as provided in the by-laws. Under the scale adopted the maximum per seat assessment in towns of 5000 and under will be 3 cents; 5 cents per seat in towns of from 5000 to 15,000 population, and 10 cents per seat in towns having a population of from 15,000 to 40,000. Theatres in towns of more than 40,000 population will be figured on individual and actual seat basis.

With the meeting of the Georgia Legislature only twenty days off the executive committee laid out a definite campaign which will be put into operation immediately, and which is intended to bring about closer acquaintance and a larger measure of harmony between the exhibitors and their representatives in the Legislature to the end that the lawmakers will understand the problems of the industry and foster no adverse legislation.

Northern N. Y. Unit Is Organized

Big Exhibitor Meeting at Massena Declares for Severance of Relations with Cohen Organization

A REGIONAL unit of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York State, which is acting independently of the so-called national exhibitor organization, was formed at Massena, N. Y., on June 7. This action is in line with a well-defined plan under which the various directors of the state organization are forming units and thus strengthening and holding intact the state exhibitor forces.

The following statement was issued on June 8 by Charles L. O'Reilly, president of the New York State organization.

"Word has just been received at state headquarters that the largest gathering of theatre owners ever held in the northern part of the State took place on Wednesday, June 7, at Massena, N. Y.

"Over fifty theatre owners, representing almost the entire number of theatres in the northern counties of the State, were present.

"V. A. Warren of Massena, member of the board of directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York State, presided. Mr. Warren is also president of the Northern New York Division of the State organization.

"Resolutions requesting the board of directors and officers of the State to sever all further relations with the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, were passed unanimously.

"A rising vote of appreciation was given to Senator James J. Walker for his untiring efforts in behalf of the theatre owners of this State.

"The Northern New York Division of the State organization embraces the counties of Jefferson, St. Lawrence, Franklin, Clinton, Essex, Lewis and Warren. The officers are: V. A. Warren, president, Massena, N. Y.; J. C. Carpenter, vice-president, Gouverneur, N. Y.; F. P. Meehan, secretary and treasurer, Malone, N. Y."

True Re-elected President of M.P.T.O. of Connecticut

President W. A. True was unanimously re-elected head of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Connecticut at a convention held at the Garde Hotel, New Haven, on June 6, according to a statement issued from National Headquarters of the M. P. T. O. A.

Other officers were elected as follows: First Vice-President, J. W. Walsh, Hartford; Second Vice-President, Jacob Albert; Putnam; Recording Secretary, Joseph Saperstein, Bridgeport; Executive Secretary, Mrs. Agnes Cavanaugh, Hartford; Treasurer, James T. Rourke, Bridgeport.

The Executive Committee was chosen as follows: M. A. Heanue, Bridgeport; L. J. Hoffman, Ansonia; M. Pouzzner, New London; L. B. Murphy, Thomaston; Louis Sagal, New Haven; Charles Repass, Hartford; H. Engel, Middletown; J. R. Shields, Derby; C. M. Maxfield, New Hartford; and I. Burbank, Thompsonville.

The statement says the convention was largely attended and much enthusiasm prevailed. It adds: "In his annual report, Mr. True included the affairs of the Washington convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. He went into detail in this matter and the delegates gave complete approval to all that transpired, as well as ratifying the work done by the State officers and executive committee."

President Sydney S. Cohen was present and made an address. Addresses were also delivered by Dr. Francis Holley and M. J. O'Toole.

It was decided to establish a Service Station "to care for all the requirements of exhibitors all over the state" and to arrange for the issuance of an Exhibitors' Bulletin in Connecticut, ultimately extending "these elements of service to all New England," according to the statement.

Trade Review's Nation-Wide Survey of Conditions Shows Exhibitors Preparing for Real Business Revival in the Fall

A DISTINCT spirit of optimism for the future.

Almost unanimous belief that the Fall season will usher in one of the industry's greatest periods of prosperity.

Fewer theatres closed this Summer than last, except in a few territories.

These are the outstanding features in a nation-wide survey of theatre conditions conducted by Exhibitors Trade Review through its correspondents in the key centers of the country.

These reports indicate clearly that while the Summer loss in business is being recorded this year as in past years, industrial and agricultural conditions everywhere are gradually righting themselves. Far from being in despair over the situation, nearly all the exhibitors interviewed by the correspondents of this publication speak with great confidence of the coming Fall season.

Even in localities where theatre attendance is at low ebb, experienced showmen generally are keeping their houses open or closing, if at all, for a few weeks to renovate or improve and get ready for the expected rush of business in September or earlier.

Summary of Reports

Summarized, the reports thus far received by EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW tell this story:

Atlanta—In the Southeastern States a smaller number of theatres closed than anticipated. Admission prices generally maintained; lowered in a few instances. Almost without exception exhibitors expect Fall will bring great prosperity.

Washington, D. C.—No closings; two new houses soon to open and two under construction; conditions improving and September looked forward to as beginning of first class business.

St. Louis—Big business expected in Fall; admission prices stable; "hot weather depression" not so pronounced as in former years.

Kansas City—More houses open this season than last in big towns and rural districts of Kansas and Missouri. Conditions better than at corresponding time in 1921. Coming season expected to eclipse all others save inflated war period.

Chicago—Marked improvement in patronage past two weeks. Of five hundred theatres in Chicago, fewer than five per cent will close during Summer. Admission prices stable. Great optimism for future.

Omaha—Fifty per cent of small theatres in Iowa and Nebraska closed last Summer. Less than fifteen per cent closed this season and indications are total will not exceed twenty-five per cent. Prosperity returning in farming sections. Small exhibitors and large declare business revival sure to come in Fall.

Philadelphia—The territory comprising Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware is one of the very few which report more widespread retrenchment for the Summer season than ever before. It is expected twenty-five per cent of the theatres in the territory will close. Nevertheless, the general belief is that the theatre business will gradually turn to normal in the Fall or early Winter.

Great Optimism Shown

Northeastern Pennsylvania—Conditions abnormal here because of the continued coal strike. Probable that forty per cent of the theatres in this region will close within next month to remain dark till September. As soon as mines resume work in the Fall, exhibitors expect banner season.

Milwaukee—Business poor, but downtown theatres remaining open; some reducing admission prices and giving "bargain matinees" to attract patronage.

Buffalo—Improvement over last year when all neighborhood houses closed and business everywhere was practically at standstill. More houses open this year throughout territory. Admission prices generally stable. "September will mark opening of biggest season in years."

Albany—Business has picked up since Easter and real revival looked for in the Fall. No houses will be closed in Albany, Troy or Schenectady. Admission prices stable. Good business being done in all three cities.

Cleveland—Great optimism regarding coming season. No reduction in admission prices.

Jones, Ascher and Trinz All Optimistic Over Coming Season

"It looks like an unparalleled Fall business," said Aaron J. Jones of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, commenting on the outlook for next season, and basing his opinion on the fact that workers in numerous trades are putting in full time.

Nathan Ascher of Ascher Brothers, operators of eighteen theatres, speaks in an equally optimistic mood when he said: "Business is holding up very well even now in most of our theatres and I am confident the new season will be an unusually profitable one. The local labor troubles seem to be getting ironed out and with the resumption of work in the different crafts business should be good."

Joseph Trinz of Lubliner & Trinz, whose chain of seventeen theatres cover Chicago, speaking in a similar strain, said: "Conditions are improving, not only in the theatre business, but in every line in a slow but sound fashion that augers well for the coming season."

A few neighborhood theatres will close for two months. About forty per cent will go on a three-day a week schedule with the downtown houses running full time.

Oklahoma City—This is one of the sections where the outlook is not considered good, on account of poor crops. About 15 per cent of the theatres of State will close for Summer and ten per cent permanently. Admission prices generally decreased.

Los Angeles—Conditions in general good throughout Southern California. Very few theatres will close this Summer. Practically 50 per cent of Arizona houses will shut down till September. Majority of exhibitors in territory expect big business next Fall.

Seattle—Despite Summer slump throughout Northwest, theatre men feel optimistic for future and believe present depression will be of short duration. Admission prices decreased, but will probably be raised when new season starts.

In this issue, and succeeding issues, EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW will print these reports in detail. The whole series of articles will embody a mass of business information that should prove of great value to all branches of the industry.

Marked Business Improvement Shown Throughout Middle West

WHERE fifty per cent of the small town theatres closed in Iowa and Nebraska during the hot summer months of 1921, less than fifteen per cent have actually closed thus far this season (June 1) and moving picture men who are constantly in close touch with the field say the number closing will not be more than twenty-five per cent, according to present indications. Instead, there has been a marked improvement in business during the last two months and some theatres that were on the verge of closing have taken on new life.

A great many theatres in the small rural places have always fallen back to one night a week during the summer, and during the hottest months have closed altogether because they were not equipped to handle crowds in convenience, and because patrons have driven their automobiles to larger and better equipped towns.

Several factors are contributing this year to the fact that small town theatres will not only close in fewer instances this summer than they did a year ago, but to the actuality that the great majority will remain open all this summer. Principal among these factors is the demand by local business men that they keep open, offering entertainment to farmers who would go to other villages to the shows—and incidentally to do their shopping—if no entertainment were available.

Another reason is returning prosperity in the farming communities of the Middle West. Ever since corn showed a marked increase in price two months ago there has been a revival in rural business conditions. One of the first indications of this improvement was in moving picture theatre patronage. Livestock is bringing good prices, and money for farmers desiring to develop investments in this product has been more readily available, with the result that feed yards and ranches everywhere are well stocked. This promises good business this summer, and even more substantial results during the season which opens September 1.

Third among the influences which are expected to keep the rural theatres open this summer is the tardiness of hot weather. On June 1 a survey of the weeks just past shows a surprisingly low temperature, with a steady spring-time attendance, restricted only by the fact that farmers generally were very busy in their fields. Iowa, it will be remembered, has more automobiles per capita than any other State in the Union, with Nebraska a close second. This fact offsets to a considerable degree the restriction effected by the busy spring-time duties of the rural patrons.

New Theatres

Building conditions will not be worse, and there are indications that there will be a sudden boom in the erection of new theatres. More new homes and business houses are being built than at any time in the last two years, and this activity is expected to spread to the theatre building industry. The big, new World theatre, the largest house in Omaha, was completed this spring. The new Sioux theatre at Sioux City, Iowa, has just been opened. These are both houses which represent immense investments. While no new theatres have been reported under way in small places, it is true that more and more towns are demanding small, up-to-date houses to attract trade. S. A. Westall, consulting engineer on motion picture theatre equipment in Omaha, reports a flood of inquiries. "Many of these inquiries are from new men going into the business, apparently with plenty of backing," he said, "but most of them are from exhibitors who want to replace their old stuff. Business in our line is one hundred per cent better than a year ago, and from close observation of business conditions in our territory I am convinced it will continue to improve during the summer."

Last year, due to the cost of materials and labor being much higher than this year, practically no building was done.

September Outlook

Three exhibitors in comparatively small towns—Shenandoah, Iowa; Valley, Nebraska and Beatrice, Nebraska—declared they look forward to highly successful developments during the fall and winter season, which opens September 1 in the Middle West. The increasing price of farm produce, the outlook for good crops, the loosening up of money and a general return to normalcy give the basis for their predictions, they say.

Julius K. Johnson of the big Rialto theatre in Omaha optimistically says that the coming season will see a more rapid advancement in the exhibiting end of the industry than for years. "We have been at a standstill for months," he said, "and the revival is bound to come. It will be marked in music, prologues and systematic attention to details. The advertising end of the business has engrossed us to the exclusion of these details in many cases, and our business is now on a basis where it must assume its aspects of permanency."

Admission Prices

Generally speaking, the trend of admission prices in the Middle West is at best uncertain. Many smaller theatres are reducing from the 15-25 basis to a 10 and 15 cent rate. This applies to the small theatre in the rural community, and to the second-run houses in the cities. The big first-run houses are holding to the prices that have obtained for the last few years. It is the belief of the exhibitors that if they can survive the summer months, the present admission prices can be maintained on a permanent basis after September 1. There has been no talk of an increase in admission prices.

Methods of Reviving Business

Individual instances are numerous of where exhibitors have "given away" their houses in brief spurts to reinterest patrons, but the general effort of most promising result has been the hearty cooperation of the theatres with other business in fighting to regain business. Such affairs as "Community Weeks," when stores and business places generally have put on special inducements, lasting over a period of a whole week, have been successful. At certain hours every day all the whistles were blown, bells rung and automobile horns worked overtime in the towns. The psychological effect of this artificial stimulation has been marked.

A recent trade excursion traveling over Iowa and Nebraska out of Omaha returned with the cheering report that business was climbing back to its old basis of prosperity in the small towns of the Middle West.

This part of the country, being essentially agricultural, can be looked upon with confidence as a business weather-vane for the rest of the nation. If so, then exhibitors generally need only tighten their belts a bit tighter, cling on a while longer, and then attain heights more permanent and desirable than ever before.

September Will Mark Opening of Big Season Is Buffalo Belief

THE summer season opens in the Buffalo territory with exhibtors in the larger downtown and neighborhood theatres taking a more optimistic attitude than last year, when practically all the neighborhood houses closed down and business everywhere was practically at a standstill.

This summer the Victoria, Elmwood and Regent, three of Buffalo's big community theatres, are making plans for continuing open all summer. Managers figure that if they can break even it will be worth while. They declare that closing sets them back too far in bookings. Many smaller neighborhood houses, however, are going to close, some having already done so in Buffalo and neighboring towns. Some are opening three nights a week and some over the week end. A few of the theatres in the General Theatres Corporation chain in Buffalo have closed.

However, the general situation is an improvement over last summer with the probability that there will be houses open all summer in all parts of the territory to serve the amusement wants of everyone. None of the downtown picture houses will close from present indications.

Just at present new building is at a standstill in the city of Buffalo, where two houses opened only recently the Loew State and the Lafayette Square. A new theatre will open in Niagara Falls this summer, the Strand, which is being built by A. C. Hayman and prominent Falls business men. The new Amendola opened only a few weeks ago in the Cataract city. New houses are being built in Batavia, Jamestown, Lockport, Depew and Lackawanna have just dedicated new picture temples. This is a big improvement over last year.

Turn in Road Reached

The consensus of opinion is that September will mark the opening of the biggest season in several years. Working conditions have greatly improved and in a few instances raise in wages has been noted. The turn in the road will be reached by that time.

Admission prices generally are remaining stable, although here and there decreases have been put in force for the summer. The Strand has reduced admissions in Buffalo for the warm weather and the Elmwood in the same city has sliced a nickel off all around. The Regent is down. All will probably go back in the fall with the coming of bigger shows.

An interesting experiment is being made in Binghamton, where Paramount and Goldwyn first run features for 10 cents and no war tax is to be O. S. Hathaway's contribution to the drive to keep open during the summer. The Binghamton theatre, managed by H. M. Addison, has been thrown open with this policy. The Binghamton is a high class house in every respect. This experiment undoubtedly will be watched by owners and managers everywhere with interest. They will be interested in learning if it is possible to give first run pictures at "ye olden remodeled store movie prices" and less. Mr. Hathaway and Mr. Addison think it is possible. They are banking on drawing exceptionally large crowds and so making the policy pay. The house seats 2200 and if it can be filled several times a day the plan will succeed. Every Monday, Wednesday and Friday there will be a complete change of shows. Special maids will be engaged for the dressing rooms, where every attention will be given to women and children, large numbers of whom are expected. Mothers are invited to bring their babies to the matinees and there will be no charge for children in arms.

"A dollar a dozen" will be the admission charge for parties of women in the afternoon if special arrangements are made at the box office.

Good Outlook for Summer Business in St. Louis Theatres

ACCORDING to statements made by various exhibitors to the EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW correspondent, business in St. Louis motion picture theatres for the summer season looks very good. Although 20 per cent of the neighborhood theatres will close as usual for the summer months, it is understood that almost 20 airdomes will be opened. It is said that there will be at least ten new airdomes in the city this summer, most of them adjoining the theatres which are closed and in case of rain the performance is transferred into the theatre for the evening. This policy was adapted last year by various exhibitors in this city and it proved to be valuable. The Fox Liberty Theatre will be the only large house to close for the summer season here. This house closes every season during the hot months.

There will be very little construction during the

"Everything Normal Soon," Says Milton Feld of Newman Theatres

Milton H. Feld, managing director of the Newman theatres, Kansas City: "Our theatres, of course, intend to remain open this summer. I am optimistic. The usual falling off of patronage during the summer is to be expected, but I believe the coming season, beginning next September, will be a good one. Conditions slowly and surely are becoming better. It is a matter of only a short time until everything will be normal."

summer. Just a few small neighborhood houses will be built, the amount not near as large as last year. Harry Koplar of the St. Louis Amusement Company, which controls 20 neighborhood theatres and airdomes, said that he believed that there would be little falling off in attendance at the theatres this summer owing to the fact that St. Louis cannot brag of having but two real amusement places which would tend to draw any attendance away from the theatres in the summer. These two places being a large amusement park and the Municipal Opera. With the added attractions, such stage offering that the local houses are now presenting, which was not offered last summer, Koplar is under the belief that this will bring about added interest to theatres and airdomes during the hot months.

William Goldman, managing director of the Missouri Theatre, when interviewed regarding the outlook for business during the summer months said, in part, that "the proverbial hot weather depression will not affect us this season as in former years. Our program will carry greater features than ever and our intensive campaign, exploiting the comfort and coolness of the theatre already shows gratifying results. In the early fall we predict sensational business, basing our anticipation upon the genuine merit of the pictures we intend to play."

Admission prices are remaining stable just now, and according to various managers there is no thought that there will be a reduction or increase.

Cleveland Getting Ready for New Season; Few Houses Close

JUNE first in Cleveland showed the attitude of practically every exhibitor in that territory with regard to the policy to be followed during the coming summer months.

There are approximately 40 per cent of the neighborhood theatres which will effect a summer schedule—that of remaining open about three nights a week—similar to last season, with about 20 per cent closing for the entire months of July and August.

The fact that the merchants in general are gradually getting back to normalcy encourages the exhibitor to conduct his affairs along similar lines, to plan carefully and thoughtfully with regard to the coming season which event happens about the first of September.

Last year was a lesson to many—not alone in Cleveland, but throughout the country. It was general. They were all hit and hit mighty hard—a blow that felled a number who have even to this day failed to recover from.

There is little theatre building activity in Cleveland this season, but the outlook seems to be that two or three new photoplay theatres will be built, or will start to build in the fall.

Of the few theatres that have closed, it is doubtful if they will open again in the fall. Some are being torn down to make way for commercial structures, while others remain idle with no one over anxious to reopen them. They have, apparently, been robbed of their former patronage by the newer theatres, built in close proximity of their trade and offering much more elaborate programs.

The condition in Cleveland is somewhat different from other of the larger cities.

The first-run houses are controlled, with the exception of one theatre, by one organization. The neighborhood theatres are literally in the hands of four circuits. Last year these neighborhood circuits played about three days a week and found that while they did not make money, neither did they lose a great deal.

It is doubtful if the theatres will close for a definite period. There is too much dissension among the exhibitors for a general observance of a closing agreement.

There is one fact upon which all the exhibitors seem to agree and that is the great possibility of good business during the coming fall season.

Much optimism has been evidenced through the messages that the producers have carried in the trade journals.

Admission prices will not, in fact they cannot, be lowered. Early last fall a general reduction in admission prices was effected and this prevailing schedule must remain.

There is a general "shaving" of overhead in effect just now; orchestras are being reduced, ushers and other attaches are being minimized so that it will be possible to enter the fall "buying" campaign with the knowledge that there are no large accounts outstanding that must be taken care of with the earnings of the fall business.

The situation in brief is this: No reduction in admission prices. No building to speak of. A very few neighborhood theatres will close for two months. About 40 per cent will go on a three-day-a-week schedule with the downtown or first-run theatres running "full time."

Theatre Attendance in Chicago Distinctly on the Upgrade

CHICAGO promises to be a very cheerful place this summer from the theatre owner's viewpoint.

While summer closing was the obsession in early May, the marked improvement in patronage during the past two weeks has developed a feeling of optimism among exhibitors and "business as usual" is now the prevailing slogan.

No representative photoplay theatre will close for the vacation period.

Of the approximately 500 theatres in Chicago less than 5 per cent will suspend business and these are theatres of a few hundred seating capacity that close during the summer months every year. Of these theatres perhaps 25 per cent open on Saturdays and Sundays.

At the present time there are no new theatres under construction, but plans are being completed to begin work on four neighborhood theatres this fall. The Chatham, a new south side theatre, with a seating capacity of 1000, has just been completed and will open shortly.

Admission prices, in general, will remain stable as experiments made by several houses with price reductions were found to have no influence on the attendance.

Honorary Committee of Prominent Citizens Aid Arrangements For Walker Dinner

THE testimonial dinner which the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce is to tender to Senator James J. Walker at the Hotel Plaza, N. Y., on June 19, has every indication of being one of the most representative affairs ever held—not only of the Motion Picture Industry, but of the civic, commercial and professional world as well. The dinner committee, of which William Brandt is the chairman, has been deluged with requests for reservations since the announcement of the affair was made.

The dinner date falls on the birthday of Senator Walker, and thus the event will have a double significance. Those that are to be present include the most prominent names in the State and municipal governments and the judiciary, as well as those of the motion picture industry and the theatrical fields.

On the afternoon of June 19, members of the Executive Committee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York State are to hold their meeting in New York City and they are to attend the dinner in a body, it is understood.

Requests from a number of exhibitors in various parts of the country who wish to take this opportunity of expressing their regard and personal appreciation, regardless of their association affiliations, for the really tremendous work that Senator Walker has done in behalf of the motion picture exhibitors of the country, have assumed formidable proportions. The committee is making special effort to keep the various applications from the different localities of the country in unit form.

The affair has assumed such cosmopolitan proportions that the Dinner Committee of the T. O. C. C. has found it advisable to name an Honorary Committee that is to cooperate with them in the arrangements for the event. The Honorary Committee will comprise the following:

The Honorary Committee

Former Postmaster General Will H. Hays, president Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc.

E. F. Albee, head of the B. F. Keith Booking Exchange and the Keith Circuit of Theatres.

John Ringling, of the famed circus-owning family and who is vitally interested in the sport of boxing in New York, will represent that section of the sporting fraternity.

Lee Shubert, the theatre owner and theatrical producer.

Judge Francis X. McQuade, as representative of the major league baseball clubs.

Horace De Lisser, president of the Broadway Association.

Robert Grier Cook, president of the Fifth Avenue Association.

Hon. Max Levine, president of the Grand Street Boys Association.

Sam H. Harris, president of the Producing Managers Association.

Samuel Rothafel, managing director of the Capitol Theatre.

John McE. Bowman of the Bowman Chain of Hotels and Charles Gehring of the Hotel Men's Association.

Marcus Loew of the Loew Circuit.

Guests who have accepted invitations to be present include: Governor Edward I. Edwards of New Jersey; Mayor John F. Hylan; Charles M. Schwab; J. H. Ward; Henry D. Sayre, head of the New York State Industrial Commission; John J. Lyons, New York Secretary of State; Edward J. Flinn, Sheriff of Bronx Country; Commissioner Phillip F. Donohue of the Board of Water Supply; Fire Commissioner Thomas J. Drennan; Commissioner of Licenses John F. Gilchrist; William E. Walsh, chairman of the National Board of Standards and Appeals; Borough President Matthew J. Cahill of Richmond and the following Judges of the Court of Special Sessions: Hon. Arthur J. Salmon, Hon. James J. McInerney, Hon. John J. Freschi, Hon. Moses Herrman and Hon. Clarence Edwards.

The producing branch of the industry is to be represented by practically every organization now active, including Adolph Zukor of Famous-Players Lasky Corporation; A. E. Smith of Vitagraph; Paul Brunet of Pathé; Frank J. Godsol of Goldwyn; Hiram Abrams of United Artists; Fred B. Warren of American Releasing; and Winfield R. Sheehan representing the Fox Film Corporation.

Louis F. Blumenthal of the T. O. C. C. is treasurer of the Walker Dinner Committee and requests for reservations should be forwarded to him at the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, 1540 Broadway, with check at $10.00 per cover for the number of the seats wanted.

Referendum on Daylight Saving

Crandall Turns Screens of Six Washington Theatres Into Means of Community Expression and Doubles Vote Recorded by Newspaper on Important Question — Plan Useful to Other Exhibitors

HARRY M. CRANDALL, owner of the chain of twelve Crandall Theatres and the First National regional franchise in the Washington, D. C., territory, last week inaugurated a distinct innovation by converting the screens of his six photoplay houses in the National Capital into a means of community expression on a matter of prime civic importance to residents of the District of Columbia. For the first time in the history of the motion picture theatre in Washington, the voteless citizens of the Capital were able to vote in a referendum, the result of which is to be communicated to the White House and District authorities as a bona fide public manifestation of the majority wish in the matter of daylight saving.

As a result of an Administration suggestion, Washington has for several weeks been in the throes of an heroic attempt to adjust itself to a particularly complicated "jazz system" of daylight saving. The clocks have not been changed, but many of the government departments, employing thousands of clerks, and many of the retail shops, employing thousands more, have moved their opening and closing hours ahead. Other departments and other stores have not made any change in their customary schedules. The theatres and railroads have adhered without exception to the standard eastern time and their regular routine hours of opening and closing, arrivals and departures. The outcome of this arbitrary system has been to completely scramble Washington industrial life. There has been endless complaint and wide discussion of the hardships being wrought, but without a satisfactory means of making itself heard the voice of the people has been wasted upon the thin air, until Mr. Crandall hit upon the scheme of conducting a vote on the question in his six Washington theatres.

The first step in the conduct of the referendum was the showing of a 150 foot film in each of the Crandall theatres announcing that voteless Washington would be given the opportunity to express its preference with regard to daylight saving by filling out and depositing in the lobby of any Crandall theatre or mailing direct to the Crandall executive offices a ballot card providing three propositions upon which public opinion might be expressed. The three propositions were as follows:

1. I am opposed to any form of daylight saving.
2. I am in favor of daylight saving with change of clock.
3. I am in favor of the present system of daylight saving.

The cards were supplied to every attendant at a Crandall theatre for a period of one week, but voting was not restricted to the purchasers of tickets. Since the idea back of the referendum was to determine as accurately as possible the actual majority view in the matter of daylight saving, it was urged in the film trailer run on the screens that every patron vote once and take as many ballot cards as he might wish to supply his friends not in attendance at the theatre.

The response was immediate and overwhelming. Votes poured into the theatres and into the executive offices of the Crandall organization by the thousands. Seventy-five thousand of the ballot cards were distributed and more than twenty-five per cent were returned as authentic votes recording the name and full city address of the voter.

At time of writing the complete count of the ballots, which did not close until Saturday night, June 3, has not been made, but the voting during the first five days of the seven-day referendum registered opposition to any form of daylight saving for the District of Columbia by a ratio of something over 2 to 1. Out of the first 18,000 votes counted, approximately 11,000 were opposed to any form of daylight saving; about 5000 favored daylight saving with change of clock, 2000 expressed endorsement of the jazz system now in unsatisfactory operation.

The importance of this ability of the screen to become a potent agency in the decision of important public questions cannot be overestimated.

The Crandall referendum has proved the power of the screen to be even greater than that of the newspaper press of the nation. This is determinable by reason of the fact that the Washington Star, Washington's leading afternoon daily, with a circulation running from 75,000 to 105,000 a day, also held a voting week on the daylight saving question by use of a coupon printed in the paper. The Star's vote aggregated approximately 15,000, a figure that was more than doubled by the total vote in the Crandall theatre referendum.

It seems entirely reasonable to suppose that in other communities where daylight saving may be working the hardship it always works on the motion picture exhibitor, or threatens to be adopted through the active fostering of a diligent minority, given an opportunity to express themselves through the screen, an equally impressive negative vote might be secured wherewith successfully to combat the imposition of an injustice on any motion picture man who relies on early night crowds for satisfactory gross revenues.

There is another aspect to the vote that also will prove of the utmost service to the exhibitor. That is, the possibility of compiling an absolutely live mailing list from the names and addresses furnished on the ballots. The expense of conducting such a referendum as that just concluded in the Crandall theaters is negligible and its valuable results enormous.

The daylight saving referendum was conceived by Harry M. Crandall and successfully carried out by Joseph P. Morgan, general manager of the Crandall enterprises; Nelson B. Bell in charge of Crandall advertising and publicity, and the managers of Crandall's Metropolitan, Joy, Savoy, Avenue Grand, Apollo and York theatres in the Capital.

Harold B. Franklin Heads F. P.-L. Theatre Dept.

Harold B. Franklin, who recently resigned as managing director of Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo, will be at the head of the new theatre department to be established at once by Famous Players-Lasky. Mr. Franklin left Buffalo last Sunday morning for a motor tour through the Berkshires to Boston and New York, where he will arrive in about a week ready to take up his new duties at 485 Fifth Avenue.

Before leaving Buffalo Mr. Franklin was the guest of honor at farewell dinners given in the Hotel Iroquois by both the Buffalo Theatre Managers' Association and the exchange managers. The former presented him with a traveling case and the latter with a gold fountain pen. Mr. Franklin plans to reside in Mount Vernon, N. Y., this summer.

The News of the Week

Two New Appointments Announced

Art Schmidt Becomes Universal's Gen. Sales Mgr. and Harry M. Berman R-C's Gen. Mgr. of Distribution

Carl Laemmle announced this week the resignation of Harry M. Berman and the appointment of Art Schmidt to succeed him as general sales manager of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company. Mr. Berman resigns much to Mr. Laemmle's regret and after five years of efficient and frictionless management of the Universal exchange system. He has accepted from Robertson-Cole an appointment as general manager of distribution, together with an interest in the business, which made the proposition altogether too attractive to turn down. As an evidence of the cordial feelings and of his solicitude for his future, Mr. Laemmle is granting to Mr. Berman a three weeks' vacation, starting on Saturday.

Art Schmidt

Although Mr. Berman's resignation does not go into effect until June 30, Art Schmidt will assume his new duties on Monday. Until he received his present appointment, Mr. Schmidt was general manager of the short product for Universal, with offices at 1600 Broadway, where he has been since Oct. 11, 1921. His successor in this position has not yet been chosen.

It would be difficult to find a man of wider experience or more uniformly respected than Art Schmidt. He has the fullest co-operation of everyone in the home office and of every exchange man at the very start. Mr. Schmidt began his film career as manager of the Talking Machine Company film service, a part of the licensed film exchange system, before the General took it over. The next year he became manager of the Victor film service of Buffalo, and from there went to the management of the Rex exchange in Albany. From there he became manager of the Victor in Cleveland. When the district system of controlling exchanges was devised, Art Schmidt was named district manager of the exchanges now included in the Eastern division, only at that time he had offices in Buffalo. Four years ago he resigned and for eighteen months was out of the moving picture business entirely. Three years ago he came back to take charge of the same Eastern district, only with offices in Cleveland. From this position he was appointed as general manager of the short product.

R-C Pictures this week announced the appointment of Harry M. Berman, for several years manager or exchanges of Universal Film Manufacturing Company, as general manager of distribution of the R-C organization. J. I. Schnitzer has been promoted to the vice-presidency of R-C and will continue to be active in an executive capacity.

The appointment of Mr. Berman to the position of general manager of distribution is in line with the general policy of P. A. Powers, who several months ago acquired a controlling interest in R-C, of surrounding himself with the most able executives obtainable. Mr. Powers is aiming at establishing an efficient selling and distributing organization which will assure the new R-C product of the widest circulation. Mr. Berman is known as one of the most able sales organizers in the industry, and in his connection with Universal, extending over a period of five years, he has been largely active in building up the Universal exchange system.

Mr. Berman will assume his duties on July 1 in time to lend his efforts to the distribution of In the Name of the Law, the special feature which is to start an indefinite pre-season run at the George M. Cohan Theatre early in July. He is about to start on a few weeks' vacation, which he intends to spend entirely in resting and in preparing himself for his new connection. The new manager of distribution will find the R-C exchange system fully prepared for activities greater than ever before, the announcement says.

Paramount Buys New Gypsy Story for Bebe Daniels

The Law of the Lawless, a tale of gypsy life from the collection of short stories entitled "Ghitza and Other Romances of Gypsy Blood," by Konrad Bercovici, has been purchased by Paramount as a possible vehicle for Bebe Daniels. This story is referred to by one critic as "perhaps one of the most blood-curdling and tragic descriptions of the ruin of a weak man by a strong woman that has ever been written."

Mr. Borcovici did not hesitate to say, on his first visit to the Lasky studio recently, that he visualized Miss Daniels, with her dark, striking beauty, in his tales of the Tsiganes and that he hoped she might play the first one of his characters to reach the screen.

Mr. Bercovici was born in Roumania, and is part gypsy himself. He was educated in music, studying for a time at the Sorbonne in Paris. He started writing in 1917, and his first story "Ghitza," was included in E. J. O'Brien's selection of the best short stories of 1920, while his second story, "Fanutza," was included in Mr. O'Brien's honor list for 1921.

The Roumanian author came to the United States twelve years ago. At first he worked at his profession of music, as an organist, but feeling the urge to write, he got a position on the Sunday World. Later he worked on other New York newspapers, and has also composed music. He is making his first trip to California. After spending a short time in Los Angeles he will make a pilgrimage to the artists' and writers' colony at Carmel, California, where he may spend most of the summer.

Mr. Bercovici has published three books since he began writing five years ago: "Crimes of Charity," "The Dust of New York" and "Ghitza." These are all collections of short stories.

Ernest Hilliard Engaged for New Lund Picture

With the engagement of Ernest Hilliard to play the "heavy," the cast of Love's Old Sweet Song, which went into production this week at the Paragon Studios, at Fort Lee, New Jersey, under the direction of O. A. C. Lund, is now complete. The picture, which is to be in seven reels, will be based on the ballad of the same name.

No announcement as to the releasing arrangements for Love's Old Sweet Song has yet been made but, it is said, it will probably be distributed in the independent market.

S. R. Kent Back from Trip to Middle West

Sidney R. Kent, general manager of distribution, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, returned Wednesday from a tour of Paramount exchanges which took him as far west as Kansas City. District sales conventions in which plans were completed for the handling of next season's product, were held in a number of the cities visited.

Storey Finds South "All Pepped Up"

Reports Conditions Indicate Return to Prosperity Predicted by Will Hays and Paul Brunet

Wonderful agricultural conditions throughout the South have the people of that section "all pepped up" over prospects of a speedy and full return to prosperity. John E. Storey, General Representative of Pathe, who returned last week from a tour of Southern branch exchanges as far West as Dallas, Texas, reports this as the keynote of popular discussion and sentiment all the way from Charleston to beyond the Mississippi.

"Never in my experience," said Mr. Storey, "have conditions changing for the better produced a feeling more generally optimistic. Traveling from one community to another, the effect was the same—a breeze of confidence, as stimulating as waves of ozone suddenly stirring strata of stagnant air. I found everybody enthusiastic over the certainty that the coming Fall would witness a complete and lasting return to prosperity.

"This feeling was independent of expert prophecy from financial and industrial headquarters, as voiced, for example, by Will H. Hays and Paul Brunet. It has grown out of the results of local observation of local conditions in every community throughout the Southern States. The emphatically hopeful outlook has the most solid of foundations—agriculture, crops. The recent ample rainfalls have rendered assurance doubly sure of bountiful harvests.

"All the way west into Texas the country is blooming. In the vicinity of New Orleans, only, is there some slight pessimism owing to ravages of the late river floods. All the other industries of the South are stirring into vigorous new life as a natural consequence of the happy agricultural outlook. The picture business throughout that entire region has picked up wonderfully—as though it were already enjoying a large part of the prosperity due in September. The majority of exhibitors freely express their conviction that prosperity's 'advance guard' has arrived."

Complete Cast Chosen for "Tess of Storm Country"

A list of the principal players in Tess of the Storm Country, the picture in which Mary Pickford made her first great screen success, and which she is remaking now for United Artists release this fall, has just been announced.

Miss Pickford, of course, plays the role of Tessibel Skinner. Forrest Robinson is in the role of Daddy Skinner, Lloyd Hughes plays the part of Frederick Graves, Gloria Hope that of Teola Graves, David Torrence appears as Elias Graves, Robert Russell as Dan Jordan, Jean Hersholt as Ben Letts, Danny Hoy as Ezra Longman and Mme. de Bodamere as Mrs. Longman.

Work on the revival of Tess of the Storm Country is progressing rapidly. This is the first picture that Miss Pickford ever made where she used but one location. A fishing village was constructed on the shores of Chatsworth Lake, near Los Angeles. The price of a mansion was spent to produce a few shacks, which are reputed to be the best examples of artificial dilapidation ever made. Miss Pickford spent five weeks at this location traveling the thirty miles daily by motor car and frequently communicating with her studio by radiophone so as to be in constant touch with business and production activities.

Accessories Vital to Exhibitors' Success Says M. A. Shauer

Melville A. Shauer, manager of Paramount's advertising accessories department, who, perhaps more than any other person, has been responsible for the present standard of service in the production and distribution of Paramount accessories, is firm in the belief that the quality of accessories should, and in nine cases out of ten does, reflect the quality of the pictures which they exploit.

"No one in the industry can afford to overlook the importance of good advertising accessories," says Mr. Shauer. "Exhibitors insist, and rightly so, upon good quality of prints, and distributors bend every energy toward satisfying this demand. But too often exhibitors forget the fact that the advertising accessories furnish the only basis on which the public is able to judge in advance the merits of pictures.

"The public is wise and if accessories are of poor quality, if they have been used and are soiled and worn, the picture is going to be judged accordingly. It is the most false economy for an exhibitor to assume otherwise, for the public has come to believe that the very character of the exhibitor himself is reflected in the quality of the advertising he puts out.

"The box-office thrives only in proportion to the theatre's direct advertising contact with its patrons. Many an exhibitor has lost the benefit of a sure-fire winner by shorting himself on good accessories and good locations for them. Likewise, many a salesman has been deprived of future business after taking a contract which looked good on the face of it, because he has slid over the consideration of advertising accessories.

"And tracing the thing right back to the source of product, many a producer of good pictures has suffered needlessly because his pictures have been poorly advertised and exploited—because the accessories have not measured up to the standard of the pictures.

"I feel that it is for the good of the whole industry that Paramount is putting its energies behind the making of good accessories. We have a slogan and we aim to keep it always in mind—'If It's Worth Running, It's Worth Advertising'—and by that we mean also that it's worth advertising well. We are designing our accessories for the box-office. We are delivering them bright and new, fresh and clean, because we believe that the exhibitor can get more out of that kind of stuff than the other, and judging from the letters and increased orders we are receiving every day, the great majority of exhibitors are of the same opinion."

"Nanook of North" Premiere Showing at Capitol, June 11

Many people prominently associated with exploration and all forms of life in the open will form part of the audience at the Capitol Theatre premiere of Pathe's picture of the Arctics, Nanook of the North on June 11. Samuel Rothafel, Director of Presentation, and Pathe have united in preparations to make the occasion fully worthy of the introduction to the American public of Explorer Robert J. Flaherty's picture. Along most of the metropolitan thoroughfares billboards give forecasts of what Captain Roald Amundsen characterized as "bring the North down to the South."

The American Geographical Society, the Canadian Club, the Explorers' Club and the Camp Fire Club membership have been got into line for the occasion. New York society has been circularized, and a number of its best known leaders have declared they will be present.

The Capitol Theatre's foyer and lobbies, besides their display of character photographs, all taken in surroundings of snow and ice, will be converted into a veritable museum of the actual implements and utensils, for hunting and for domestic life, used by the picture's hero. His skin-covered "Kayak" or boat, dog-drawn sledge, snowshoes, harpoons, fishing tackle, etc., will be on exhibition.

Universal to Star Chaney in Another Underworld Picture

Lon Chaney is to make another Universal-Jewel production, it has just been announced by Carl Laemmle, president of Universal. A recent picture starring the character actor is now showing on the screens of the country.

The picture will be adapted from Bitter-Sweet, a story of San Francisco's underworld, by Dudly Pelley. Chaney's role in it will be vastly different from his characterization in The Trap, for which he played a varying role, at times sympathetic and at other times repulsive.

In this forthcoming picture of the San Francisco Barbary Coast, Chaney will have a role of great versatility. He will be called upon, more than ever before, to demonstrate his right and title to "the man of a thousand faces."

Others in the cast have not yet been selected. No director has been selected, although it is possible that Robert Thornby may receive the megaphone.

The story is now being put into screen form by Charles Kenyon.

Joe O'Neill Joins Staff of the Hays Organization

Joseph Jefferson O'Neill, for more than a decade a member of the editorial staff of the New York World, and other metropolitan newspapers, became associated this week with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., as an aide to Will H. Hays.

Joseph Jefferson O'Neill

O'Neill's acquaintance with the big men of the country and his outstanding work as a newspaper writer have made him one of the best known men in newspaper circles. As a tribute to the esteem in which he is held by the writing fraternity, the Newspaper Club of New York is tendering him a dinner on June 10.

In 1907 O'Neill left Philadelphia for New York, and his first assignment in the big city was the celebrated Thaw case. Thereafter his signed stories on many of the big news events were regular features on newspaper front pages.

He was born in Philadelphia and lives at 620 Riverside Drive, New York city.

First National Appoints Committee

Purpose Will Be to Obtain Best Stories Available for Its Stars and Producers

First National announced this week an innovation in motion picture circles—the appointment of a "story committee" for the purpose of obtaining the best vehicles available for its stars and producers.

The committee consists of J. D. Williams, Richard A. Rowland, C. L. Yearsley, E. J. Hudson and Bob Dexter. Mr. Hudson has been elected secretary of the committee, which is now in active operation.

The producing units releasing through First National will be the beneficiaries of the new plan, for the story committee will co-operate with their staffs and assist them in searching for books, plays and other material.

The committee will not solicit original material from the public in general, but will devote its energies to judging the meris of published books, magazine stories and successful stage plays, with the objective of determining their cinematic possibilities.

Each member of the committee has been assigned to read the output of specified magazines and book publishers. Whenever a tale with screen possibilities is discovered, it will be considered in committee session, where every element of the story will be discussed at length.

Every story will be subjected to a test which includes audience appeal, logic, dramatic, qualities, comedy relief, box office drawing power, characterization, and pictorial potentialities.

When a story is found that proves sufficiently meritorious to pass this test, it will be sent to a First National producer or star, with the recommendation of the committee that it be purchased and produced.

The information of the committee does not imply any deviation from the policy which has characterized the operation of Associated First National. It remains solely a distributing organization, but the new plan has been designed to provide an auxiliary service which will permit every unit to devote its entire time to producing pictures. In addition, none of the units could conduct as comprehensive a survey for material that is possible for an organization the size of the First National.

However, with the official O. K. of the story committee, backed by the approval of the executive committee, practically every case will result in the production of the story selected.

The committee made it clear that it did not care to consider unsolicited manuscripts from unknown writers, because of the physical impossibility of reading all the stories that would reach it from this source, and the great amount of work involved merely in passing on plots which have found publication or stage production.

To Start Work on Atlanta Studio

With arrangements for the erection of a $100,000 studio building on the outskirts of Atlanta practically completed, the plan of the Southern Motion Picture Finance Corporation and the Atlanta Studio Corporation to make Atlanta a producing center is an assured fact.

It is expected that work on the building in which pictures will be produced by and for these corporations for distribution through Hodkinson will commence within a few weeks, and by early fall the first of the productions will in all likelihood be ready for release.

The Southern Motion Picture Finance Corporation and the Atlanta Studio Corporation are allied corporations. Ralph B. Small, a prominent business man of Macon, Ga., is president of both. U. M. Dailey is vice-president and general manager, and Henry B. Troutman, of Troutman and Freeman, Atlanta, general counsel. G. E. Farley is secretary and treasurer. The directors are Mr. Small, Mr. Dailey, Mr. Troutman, J. G. Inman, G. J. Gallaway, F. C. Munroe, vice-president of Hodkinson, and Raymond Pawley, vice-president and treasurer of Hodkinson. The executive committee consists of Mr. Small, Mr. Dailey and Mr. Pawley.

Constance Binney Being Starred in a British Production

A new development in the rapidly growing movement to produce for the American market pictures with international casts and stories of international reputation in the actual scenes of the original drama, is to be seen in the announcement that Constance Binney, the American screen and stage star, has commenced work at the studios of Ideal Film Co., Ltd., of London, where she is starring in the screen version of A Bill of Divorcement.

Miss Binney arrived in England on June 3 and motored direct to London. The following morning she was at the studio in consultation with the heads of the Ideal, and Dennison Clift, who is directing the production of the picture. Shooting has already begun. It is expected that the picture will be completed by the first week of July.

A Bill of Divorcement, which is a powerful study of the effects of war upon the happiness of a returned officer and his fiancee, was one of the outstanding successes of the New York season this year. Its popularity in London was even more pronounced, for there it ran for two solid seasons.

Miss Binney will create upon the screen the part of the girl, played in New York by Katherine Cornell. Dennison Clift, the producer, is an Englishman who has had several years of experience in the American studios, and is one of the pupils of Cecil de Mille. A picked cast has been chosen to support Miss Binney, and the picture will be photographed on the very spots where the action of Allan Pollock's drama is supposed to have taken place.

Plans for the American distribution of A Bill of Divorcement have not been perfected, and will not be announced until after the production has been received in this country. Reginald Warde, who will be in charge of the arrangements for the marketing of the production here, says that Miss Binney's first international feature will be ready this fall.

Mr. Warde, who is representing the Ideal Film Company in the United States, declares that A Bill of Divorcement will be the first of a series of productions made on the same basis and carrying the greatest possible box-office value for the American and other English-speaking markets of the world.

Select Pictures to Release Wilde Play

"A Woman of No Importance" Will Be Presented June 20—Pre-Released Exhibitions Also Planned

Oscar Wilde's "A Woman of No Importance" has been secured by Select Pictures Corporation for release under date of June 20. The work was shown for the first time to the newspaper reviewers June 2, and there is likely to be some pre-release exhibitions of this picture the week starting June 12.

Oscar Wilde's work has always been a matter of interest to the American reader of recognized literature. Of his several plays, "A Woman of No Importance," was best received on this side when, a few years ago, Rose Coghlan starred in it, following stage presentations of other plays by the talented Irish author. "Lady Windermere's Fan" and "The Importance of Being Earnest" are other Wilde plays that have been staged in America.

American theatregoers who witnessed Rose Coghlan's presentation, in which Maurice Barrymore, Effie Shannon, Robert Taber, Grant Stewart, Thomas Whiffen and Louise Thorndyke Boucicault had important roles, are assured by Select that in casting the screen presentation players were selected who would stand comparison with the stage cast.

Milton Rosmer plays the role of George Harford, the dashing philanderer, done on the stage by Maurice Barrymore. Fay Compson is Rachel, played by Rose Coghlan, and the remaining cast introduces Lila Walker, Daisy Campbell, Julie Hartley-Wilburn, Gwen Carton, Dorothy Fane, Hetta Bartlett, Gray Murray, Henry Vibart, Ward McAllister, Ralph Forster and George Traverse.

"A Woman of No Importance" was directed by Dennison Clift. It is in five reels.

First National Production Units Work at Top Speed

No summertime let-up of activities is as yet visible among the producing units releasing through Associated First National, according to reports received this week from the West Coast and the Eastern studios.

Richard Barthelmess is now making The Bond Boy at the Biograph studios in New York. It is a dramatic story by George Washington Ogden. A murder mystery is one of the features. It is being directed by Henry King, and the cast includes Mary Alden and Mary Thurman.

Constance Talmadge started production last week on East Is West, an adaptation of the Broadway success. It is probable that Director Sidney Franklin will take the principals of the cast to China for the exteriors.

John M. Stahl, who recently completed One Clear Call, is now making a spectacular drama, entitled The Dangerous Age, based on an original theme by Frances Irene Reels. Lewis Stone heads the cast.

Having finished The Woman Conquers, Katherine MacDonald is now engaged in filming White Shoulders, based on a Saturday Evening Post story by George Kibbe Turner. Tom Forman, who is directing, also plays a part, and the rest of the cast includes Bryant Washburn, Little Richard Headrick, Nigel Barrie, Lillian Lawrence, Charles French, James Barrows, Lincoln Stedman and Fred Malatesta.

Allen Holubar is now completing the editing and cuttings of Hurricane's Gal, a spectacular drama of the sea with Dorothy Phillips as the star.

Preparations are now in progress for the next Norma Talmadge production, with Infatuation completed. It will be an adaptation of the stage play by Robert Hichens, The Voice From the Minaret, a tale of Oriental love and adventure. Frank Lloyd will direct.

Buster Keaton has just finished The Frozen North, a burlesque on wild and woolly melodramas, and is making The Electric House.

Charles Chaplin's next comedy is destined to be one of his best, judging from the time involved in making it. No hint as to the nature of the comedy has issued from the Chaplin headquarters.

At the Mack Sennett studios Mabel Normand's latest starring vehicle Suzanna, a Spanish tale, is being edited by Director F. Richard Jones, and the two-reel comedy companies are hard at work.

Richard Walton Tully, the creator of The Masquerader, with Guy Bates Post as the star, which will be released in the Fall by First National, is now shooting the first scenes for the second Post pictures, Omar the Tentmaker. James Young is directing.

While Marshall Neilan is taking advantage of a well-earned vacation, his studios forces are cutting Her Man, a story of a small town journalism. The story, by George Pattulo, originally appeared in the Saturday Evening Post.

Hope Hampton's latest production, The Light in the Dark, is now being edited in the East. It was adapted from William Dudley Pelley's novel, "White Faith," and was directed by Clarence L. Brown. The supporting cast includes Lon Chaney, E. K. Lincoln, Dorothy Watters, Dobie Davidson and Edgar Norton.

Big Theatres Show "John Smith," New O'Brien Production

The Victor Heerman production of John Smith, in which Eugene O'Brien makes his final appearance as a Selznick star, has been shown in many of the big theatres throughout the country on pre-release. Houses on the Loew circuit that have first run on the Selznick product played the picture some time in advance of its regular distribution date, June 10, and the State-Lake gives the feature its first Chicago week starting June 12.

It was at the State-Lake that O'Brien was billed for his second week in vaudeville (having opened at the Columbia, St. Louis) when it became necessary for the Selznick star to cancel his date because of illness. Patrons of the State-Lake are declared to be "O'Brien fans" and every picture in which he has lately appeared has found its way to the State-Lake screen with a welcome assured.

Universal Revives Two Reeler as an "Old Time Movie"

Universal has aroused interest among exhibitors by a two-reel novelty release consisting of a re-issue of an old Mary Pickford picture, made by Universal twelve years ago, when Miss Pickford was first becoming known as a screen personality. The title is Going Straight, and it unfolds a story of a Salvation Army lassie and a reformed crook. King Baggot, now one of Universal's directors, then a member of Universal's stock company, plays opposite Mary.

The picture has been re-edited and interspersed with humorous and enlightening sub-titles calculated to send any audience into roars of laughter, despite the apparent seriousness of the story.

Imposing Cast for "Knighthood," Starring Miss Davies

Cosmopolitan Productions eleven reel feature, When Knighthood Was In Flower, in which Marion Davies stars, is now practically completed. The cutting is being done under the supervision of Robert G. Vignola, who directed the picture.

The picture will be notable, it is said, for the beauty of the scenery and costumes, which have been designed under the direction of Joseph Urban, head of the Cosmopolitan scenic staff.

The cast is so large that a list of the players almost seems like a directory of lights of the screen and legitimate stage. The following is a partial list:

Marion Davies, Ruth Shepley, Theresa Maxwell Conover, Lyn Harding, Forrest Stanley, Ernest Glendinning, Pedro de Cordoba, Charles Gerard, Arthur Forrest, George Nash, Johnny Dooley, William Kent, Gustave Von Seffertitz, Macey Harlam, Arthur Donaldson, Dowing Clark, Mortimer Snow, George Ogle, Constance Berry, Ann Warwick, Arlene Booth, Rena Morgan, Marguerite Draper, William Cooley, Henry van Bousen, George Partridge, Henry Guttman, Henry West, Carl Hayes, Martin Faust, Henry Tanner, Douglas Garden, Guy Coombs, Paul Panzer, Charles Brook, George Humbert, Helen Lindroth, Maud Hill, Ora Jones, Marie Schaeffer, Dorothy Knight, Augusta Perry, Bernard Reinold, Basil Broadhurst, R. Bongini, Alan Brander, Con MacSunday, Antrim Short, Francis J. O'Rielly, William Norris, William Powell, Orville Cauldwell, Flora Finch, J. McDuff, Lindsay Hall.

Harry M. Crandall at First National Office

Harry M. Crandall, prominent exhibitor of Washington, D. C., on Monday took up his duties as a member of the First National Rotating Committee, to serve two weeks in that capacity.

Under a plan adopted several months ago, each of the 26 original First National franchise holders spends a fortnight at the New York headquarters of the corporation, acting in an advisory capacity with the officers and executive committee.

The Rotating Committee was an outgrowth of recommendations made at the Get Together of franchise holders in Chicago last October. In effect it provides direct representation of the franchise holders at the New York office and a voice in the management of the company.

Mr. Crandall succeeded I. H. Rubin, of Rubin and Finkelstein, Minneapolis, franchise holders, who completed his two weeks of service last Sunday.

Cast Completed for Next D. W. Griffith Production

New faces will appear in D. W. Griffith's next production for the United Artists program.

The completed cast includes Carol Dempster, Porter Strong, Henry Hull, the young man who has been so successful in the stage play, The Cat and the Canary,; C. H. Croker-King, the star of Bull Dog Drummond; Morgan Wallace, Margaret Dale, Frank Wunderlee, Frank Sheridan and Irma Harrison.

The picture will be in seven reels. Mr. Griffith has begun the active filming of the opening scenes.

Paramount to Use 1200 Newspapers

Advertising Co-operation with Exhibitors for Paramount Week Will Be Bigger Than Last Year, Company Announces

With the fifth annual Paramount Week, Sept. 3-9, just three months away, the Paramount advertising department already has its campaign completely mapped out, even to the preparation of the newspaper copy to be used.

Although Paramount long ago set new records in the matter of advertising co-operation with exhibitors, and has eclipsed its own previous achievements with each succeeding Paramount Week, this year's campaign, according to an announcement from the company, will surpass all others in size and scope. Last year, approximately 900 newspapers were used as the media for the company's direct contribution to the exploitation budgets of the exhibitors participating in Paramount Week. This year, the number has been increased 33 1/3 per cent, the plans calling for the purchase of advertising space in more than 1,200 newspapers in some 900 cities and towns.

The largest space to be used will be full pages in about one hundred of the biggest newspapers in the country. The remainder of the papers on the list will run space ranging from six full columns to a minimum of 900 lines, the latter space being equivalent to an advertisement five columns in width and more than twelve inches deep.

These advertisements, as before, will contain a full list of all the participating exhibitors in the territory covered and, wherever space will permit, the complete week's program of the exhibitor. It is the purpose of the company that every exhibitor co-operating in the Paramount Week celebration shall be adequately advertised in the local press at Paramount's expense, and when it is considered that last year nearly 10,000 exhibitors participated in Paramount Week, and that it is confidently expected that this number will be exceeded this year, some idea of the immense scope of this newspaper campaign may be gained.

This newspaper campaign will be supplemented by a big smash of magazine advertising, which will start early next month and keep magazine readers, especially the motion picture fans, constantly reminded of the program of productions which Paramount is to release next season. Full pages and double-page spreads will be used in the Saturday Evening Post, the Ladies' Home Journal and all of the fan magazines and the climax will be reached with a double truck in the Post of September 2 in which Paramount Week is announced.

Lillian Gish to Appear in Own Productions

D. W. Griffith, Inc., is now completing plans for Lillian Gish, probably the best known of all Griffith stars, to appear in a series of her own production under the supervision of Mr. Griffith. The films will be distributed by the United Artists Corporation.

Miss Gish will continue her film work under the same methods that have proved so successful with Richard Barthelmess, a former Griffith star. From an unknown juvenile to stardom was Barthelmess' progress under Griffith's direction, and his appearance in his own productions has been one of the conspicuous successes of the year.

Although having her own company, Miss Gish will produce under the management of D. W. Griffith, Inc., and her company will work in the Griffith studios.

Use Brooklyn Church to Film Parts of "The Silent Voice"

Distinctive Productions, Inc., recently was permitted to use St. Ann's Protestant Episcopal Church, Brooklyn, New York, for several interior scenes in its forthcoming George Arliss picture entitled The Silent Voice, Dr. Cuthbert, Assistant rector of the church, one of the oldest in Brooklyn, is a strong Arliss admirer and also a believer in the future of the motion picture. It is the first time that any of the historic edifices of the celebrated "City of Churches" was ever utilized for motion picture purposes.

While this was taking place an audience in another church was listening to a lecture on The Ruling Passion. This was the Church of the Redeemer, Newark, N. J., whose pastor, Dr. Henry R. Rose, gave a talk on the film illustrated with colored slides. Almost one thousand were present. Dr. Rose will be remembered by exhibitor readers for his recent attack on screen censorship methods.

He later repeated his lecture at the Central Y. M. C. A., Brooklyn, and wrote as follows to Arthur S. Friend: "I am thinking favorably of taking this lecture to Lake Mohonk House where I spend a part of my vacation and let the guests enjoy it. They represent the very best people of the country."

Many Exhibitors Visit Coast to See "Grandma's Boy"

The premier run of the Harold Lloyd-Associated Exhibitors feature Grandma's Boy, which opened at the Symphony Theatre, Los Angeles, May 13, already has established two undeniable facts, according to announcement. One is that the showing "struck home" with patrons, for during the first two weeks there was a line constantly in front of the theatre.

Another outstanding fact is the number of exhibitors who are viewing the picture. Showmen from Washington, Arizona and Colorado, in addition to California exhibitors, have already seen the picture.

Dr. Breckwedel, manager of the Symphony, played host to out-of-town exhibitors who went to Los Angeles especially to see this feature.

Although it has been advertised that this showing will be the only one until the official release date, the Los Angeles offices of Associated Exhibitors and Pathe have received more than a score of applications for summer dates. It is announced that absolutely no other dates will be allotted until this engagement has been completed.

Metro to Screen "Peg O' My Heart"

Laurette Taylor to Appear in Film Version of Her Greatest Stage Success—Hartley Manners to Assist in Direction

Laurette Taylor will make her screen début in a Metro production of Peg O' My Heart, her greatest stage success, and one of the most popular plays ever to be presented on the English-speaking stage.

This was learned this week from the home offices of Metro in New York, after the closing of a contract between the company and J. Hartley Manners, author of Peg O' My Heart.

The picture will go into production in Los Angeles about July 5. No director has as yet been chosen, it is understood; nor is it known to whom will fall the task of preparing the scenario. Mr. Manners will be at the Metro studios in the west during the making of Peg O' My Heart. He has volunteered to aid in any way he can the proper reproduction in pictures of his play. This arrangement is comparable in a measure to the assistance lent the Metro production staff by Vicente Blasco Ibanez, prior to the screening by Rex Ingram of Senor Ibanez's novel The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse.

Miss Taylor's entrance into motion pictures is in itself a move of big import. She is one of the few of the great American actresses never to have given an impersonation before the camera. Maude Adams is the only other of that rank whose name, upon brief reflection, comes to mind as having withheld her art from the screen. Whether Laurette Taylor will continue to appear in pictures is problematical.

Henry King, who has signed a contract to direct four more pictures for Inspiration Pictures starring Richard Barthelmess. Mr. King is now filming the fourth of the Barthelmess series

"The Real Adventure" Gets Praise from Exhibitor and Critic

The Real Adventure, starring Florence Vidor, to be released by Associated Exhibitors, got off to a flying start, according to reports from the Associated offices.

The opinion of Charles W. Picquet, general manager of the Pinehurst Theatre Company, owner of the Carolina Theatre, Pinehurst, N. C., is expressed in the following letter:

"I have just seen Florence Vidor's new picture, The Real Adventure, and I am glad to be able to state that I was delighted with it. Here is a picture that you can boost as a picture of the 'better class,' and a picture that is going to please anywhere."

The picture opened a successful week's run at the Gift's Theatre, Cincinnati, May 28. Following the first showing the Cincinnati Inquirer's reviewer said:

"It is a stimulating photodrama, and its merit is due in no small part to the acting of Florence Vidor."

Alice Brady in Pictures After Year's Absence

With the beginning of production work on Missing Millions, one of Jack Boyle's Boston Blackie stories, Alice Brady returned to the screen Monday after a year's absence, re-opened the Paramount Long Island studio, which has been closed for eleven months, and made her début as a Paramount star.

Miss Brady's last motion picture work was done in Realart pictures nearly a year ago. Since that time she has been appearing on the legitimate stage.

David Powell, who recently completed work as Gloria Swanson's leading man in Her Gilded Cage and in The Siren Call at the Paramount West Coast studio, will have the leading male role, that of Boston Blackie. Others in the cast are Sidney Herbert, who won much praise for his work in Orphans of the Storm; William B. Mack of Within the Law fame; George LeGuere, who has appeared in several Metro productions; Frank Losee, one of the screen's best known heavies; John B. Cook, Riley Hatch, Beverly Travers and Alice May.

Joseph Henabery will direct the picture from the adaptation by Albert Shelby Le Vino.

R. William Neill Directing Picture for Equity

R. William Neill, who is directing What's Wrong with the Women?" for Dr. Daniel Carson Goodman at the Biograph studios, which will be released through Equity Pictures Corporation, has many screen productions to his credit.

Neill launched his directorial career on the Coast, assisting Raymond West in the production of Civilization, for Thomas H. Ince. He directed Constance Talmadge in A Woman Gives and Dangerous Business. He was then engaged by Famous Players, for whom he directed Something Different, The Idol of the North, and The Conquest of Caanan. More recently he directed Rex Beach's The Iron Trail for United Artists.

Madge Kennedy's New Series Directed by Henry Kolker

Henry Kolker is directing Madge Kennedy in her new series of six productions, the first two of which are to be an adaptation of Dear Me and Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall.

A short time ago Mr. Kolker returned from Rome, Italy, where he directed an Italian spectacle adapted from the F. Marion Crawford novel, "Sant Alario."

Mr. Kolker was for years a prominent player and director on the stage. He played many leading parts and several star parts and at one time was a well-known Shakespearean actor.

Several well-known screen players were added to the all-star supporting cast of Miss Kennedy during the past week. In addition to Monte Blue, Vincent Coleman, Dore Davidson and Emily Fitzroy, previously announced as having important roles, the cast of the first production includes Pedro De Cordoba, William H. Tooker, Fuller Mellish, Charles Kent, Winifred Harris, Charles Eldridge and Charles Moore.

Alma Hinding, Star of Nordinsk Films, Visiting New York

In the course of a tour around the world, Alma Hinding has been spending a few weeks in New York. Miss Hinding, who is one of the earlier and successful screen players of Europe, is accompanied by her husband, Hans Gade, who besides being a publisher also is a director of motion pictures. Miss Hinding has been featured in fifty-five Nordinsk productions, but has not appeared before the camera during the past two years.

The Gades have just completed a trip in Brazil and the Argentine, including a stop in the West Indies, and from New York will make a visit to Los Angeles, proceeding by way of the southern route and visiting Mexico.

Mr. Gade said it was not Miss Hinding's intention to sign any contract during the trip but that after touring China, Japan and India and returning to their home in Copenhagen it was their intention to come to the United States in 1923.

Change Title of Norma Talmadge Production to "Infatuation"

Infatuation has been definitely decided upon as the title of the Norma Talmadge production based on the Honore Balzac novel, "The Duchess of Langeais," and filmed under the temporary title of The Eternal Flame, First National announces.

Announcement of the change in title was made in the following telegram sent to the New York offices by J. D. Williams, now in Los Angeles:

"We have decided to change title from The Eternal Flame to Infatuation. I think this is great title and suits the picture. Prepare greatest advertising campaign on this production we have had on any up to date. Am sure that production will measure up to every expectation. It is simply class and Fifth Avenue from start to finish. Shows Norma Talmadge's wonderful personality and work. Marvelous cast, including Conway Tearle, Rosemary Theby and Otis Harlan. One of the finest love stories ever thrown on the screen."

Ragland and Frank Touring Country

Will Discuss Booking Plans with Exhibitors for Harold Lloyd's New Picture, "Grandma's Boy"

Starting in different directions, and each with a different itinerary before him, J. C. Ragland, secretary, and W. B. Frank, general sales manager of Associated Exhibitors, have left New York City for extensive tours of the country. The respective trips are being made in connection with the distribution plans for Grandma's Boy, Harold Lloyd's first five-part picture.

Reports from exhibitors who have seen this offering, have made demands upon Associated Exhibitors offices for bookings. Showmen throughout the country have coupled their offers with suggestions of runs extending beyond the period ordinarily set for for any attraction.

President Arthur S. Kane of Associated, after a series of conferences with his executives and members of the field staff, decided that arrangements for distribution could best be perfected following face-to-face talks with big theatre owners and managers. Hence the decision for Mr. Ragland and Mr. Frank to make tours of the country, with personal meetings with exhibitors. Each of these tours will occupy several weeks, the itineraries being by no means limited to exchange cities but including also many other key centers in almost every region.

On his trip Mr. Ragland will visit in the following order, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Richmond, Charlotte, Atlanta, Birmingham, Memphis, New Orleans, Dallas, Oklahoma City, Kansas City, Omaha, Des Moines, Chicago, Springfield, Ill., St. Louis, Louisville, Cincinnati, Cleveland and Pittsburgh.

Mr. Frank's itinerary will take him to Boston, Albany, Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit, Indianapolis, Chicago, Milwaukee and Minneapolis.

R-C Picture to Have B'way Showing

"In the Name of the Law" Will Be Given Pre-Season Run at Geo. M. Cohan Theatre, N. Y.

R-C Pictures Corporation this week made its first public announcement of In the Name of the Law, an Emory Johnson production which will be released as a Fall special, following a first run in a Broadway theatre which is now being arranged. In The Name of the Law was originally titled "The Midnight Call" and was purchased by P. A. Powers immediately after he acquired a controlling interest in R-C Pictures several months ago.

The R-C production will start its preseason engagement in the George M. Cohan theatre in the early part of July and will be issued to exhibitors in the early fall. Negotiations were carried on with Max Spiegal, who has just taken the theatre under his control, and In the Name of the Law will be the first big picture to play that house.

In the Name of the Law is announced as an all-star production with a cast including Johnnie Walker, Ralph Lewis, Ella Hall and Claire McDowell as well as Master Bennie Alexander, Josephine Adair, Johnny Thompson and Jean Adair. The story revolves around the simple home life of the middle class American family and is developed with pathos and heart interest.

The R-C exploitation and advertising department has been concentrating for some time on preparing suitable material for this picture. R-C is now in possession of more than one hundred letters of commendation from police chiefs throughout the country, all of whom have said they will give their personal support to this picture, as one of the very few which has ever shown the American policeman in his true light. Under tentative plans tie-ups of various sorts will be arranged with the police forces. The picture has already been shown to the Police Honor Legion of New York at a special meeting and was greeted enthusiastically as an accurate story of police life.

By the time the picture is released, R-C will have prepared the most comprehensive and elaborate exploitation material it has ever issued, it is declared.

Fox Donates $10,000 to British Exhibitor Fund

William Fox entertained by a large gathering of British exhibitors at the Hotel Metropole in London on June 2, expressed keen sympathy with the fight against the twenty-five per cent entertainment tax and headed the list of donors to a fighting fund with a contribution of $10,000. Amid great enthusiasm a fund of $40,000 was subscribed.

This news comes to Exhibitors Trade Review in a cable from Alderman Trounson, president of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association of Great Britain.

Gloria Swanson Back from Europe with Six Trunks Full of Gowns

Gloria Swanson, star in Paramount pictures, was among the arrivals from Europe last week on the Mauretania. Incidentally, she won the distinction of being the last passenger to leave the dock, for it took the customs officials three hours to check her declaration. Miss Swanson, who left five weeks ago with one trunk returned with six, all of them full of Parisian gowns and wraps.

A large part of the wardrobe Miss Swanson brought back is for use in her next picture, The Impossible Mrs. Bellew, which is already in production at the Lasky studio in Hollywood.

Neilan, Back from Europe, to Start First Goldwyn

Marshall Neilan is back in New York after spending several weeks in Europe. He will proceed within a few days to Goldwyn's Culver City studios to begin work on his first picture under his arrangement to make all of his productions for a term of years in association with Goldwyn.

His first picture will be a film version of one of the biggest of recent successes on the speaking stage, the identity of which Goldwyn is not yet ready to disclose.

Nine Productions Keep Lasky Studio Force on Jump

With hundreds of people working and about nine productions under way, the Lasky studio at Hollywood just now is one of the busiest places in the film world.

Cecil B. DeMille, with his Roman spectacle as a vision in Manslaughter, occupies a big part of stage four. About three hundred extra people and others take part. Leatrice Joy, in a marvelous costume, is the hostess at the revel. Thomas Meighan and Lois Wilson, together with other principals, appear in the big scene, which forms an interlude to the modern story of a modern girl who becomes reckless and pays the penalty. Jeanie Macpherson wrote the adaptation.

A big ballroom scene is now being staged by George Melford for Burning Sands—rich, brilliant and wonderfully set. Wanda Hawley and Milton Sills are featured, while in the cast are Jacqueline Logan, Robert Cain, Winter Hall, Louise Dresser, and others.

On another stage Penrhyn Stanlaws is making scenes for Pink Gods, with Bebe Daniels and James Kirkwood featured, and Anna Q. Nilsson, Raymond Hatton, Adolphe Menjou and others in the supporting cast.

The Irvin Willat production, On the High Seas, entails scenes which will be taken largely on the water. Dorothy Dalton and Jack Holt are featured and Mitchel Lewis appears in a strong character role.

Wallace Reid and company making The Ghost Breaker, under the direction of Alfred Green, with Lila Lee in support. Walter Hiers has his first experience in black face as a funny negro servant.

Pirates, seventeenth century swashbucklers, and ladies-in-waiting, Indians, colonists, and what not, take part in George Fitzmaurice's production for Paramount of To Have and To Hold, which Ouida Bergere adapted. Betty Compson and Bert Lytell are featured, and Theodore Kosloff is a picturesque villain. Alternating scenes at the studio and on location keep this company on the jump.

The same may be said for James Cruze and his troupe of actors who are making The Old Homestead—a modern picture version of America's second greatest stage classic. The Lasky ranch, where the village and the old homestead are built, is the scene of much of their activity.

Sam Wood is getting in shape for his next production, starring Gloria Swanson, titled The Impossible Mrs. Bellew. Pending the return of Miss Swanson from her European trip, Mr. Wood is now busy with establishing shots and scenes in which the star does not appear.

Production of Agnes Ayres' picture, Borderland, under the direction of Paul Powell, is drawing to a close. The final scenes, in which Miss Ayres is attired in a ghost costume, require most exacting work on the part of the cameraman, with much complicated double exposure. Milton Sills is Miss Ayres' leading man in this picture, which is from an original story and scenario by Beulah Marie Dix.

"Storm Is Coming" Will Be Written in Sky by Universal

Universal is making arrangements for the most gigantic advertising for The Storm that ever has been attempted in the moving picture or any other field. The name of the picture and other data concerning it will be emblazoned in letters five hundred yards tall.

The effect will be obtained by a method new in the realm of advertising, and one which has only been experimented with in a small way up until now. The message concerning the big Universal-Jewel production, starring House Peters, will be written in the sky. It is estimated that the entire message of half a dozen words will stretch across at least ten miles of sky, at a height of several miles.

The air-writing recently was tried out in London for the Daily Mail. Captain Turner, an English birdman, startled the hordes at Derby Day at Epsom by writing the words Daily Mail in the sky. The effect was all the more uncanny by reason of the fact he was so high his airplane could not be seen from the ground.

Captain Turner later repeated the stunt over London, to the amazement of millions. It is estimated that many millions of cubic feet of smoke were used in the stunt. This smoke is produced by a patented process.

Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, is in communication with Lord Northcliffe concerning the American rights to the smoke patents.

European Motion Picture Co., Ltd., to Distribute Entire Universal Film

With the formation in London recently of the European Motion Picture Company, Limited, it is announced that that organization in future will distribute the entire forthcoming product of the Universal Fim Manufacturing Company. The London office of the new company will be opened shortly at 167-169 Wardour Street.

The Board of Directors of the new organization at their first meeting appointed as Managing Director, Edwin J. Smith, one of the best known film men in America, and an expert in sales and distribution on the other side of the water.

Wheeler Oakman in R-C's "Son of the Wolf"

Live News of the West Coast

BY RENEE BEEMAN

J. D. WILLIAM of First National is in Los Angeles on a business trip and it is his intention to remain for several weeks. His interest is centered in the new programs under way for several new contracts that have recently been signed under the First National banner.

The Mission Film Corporation which has just released Science or God is now producing a short screen version of the famous old song The Ninety and Nine. Clarence Geldert is directing and Nigel De Brulier is portraying the role of the Shepherd. The picture is being made on the Melone ranch near San Francisco.

Carter De Haven and his wife, Flora De Haven are two of the busiest people in the film colony these days. They have already completed two pictures for the R-C Company. The first being titled Alone at Last and the second is called Christman.

The third production is now under way with the working title of Their First Vacation. A fourth picture is already in the synopsis form and will be started immediately after the completion of the present one.

During the filming of Their First Vacation the entire company went to Merced Falls, Cal., to take some thrilling scenes in and about the Yosemite Lumber Company's sawmill. Over 500 were laid off for the entire day to allow Mr. De Haven to get the scenes he required. The De Havens are the busiest people on the R-C lot, or almost any other lot in Hollywood.

Neal Burns and Viora Daniel of the Christie Comedy Co., will be featured in The Son of a Sheik, which has been started under the direction of Scott Sidney.

Baby Gloria Joy, formerly of pictures and lately of vaudeville has signed a contract with R-C for a series of two reel comedy dramas. Work will begin on the first of the series about the first of June with Sherwood MacDonald directing.

Harold Lloyd's five reel production Grandma's Boy having its world premier at the Symphony Theatre, Los Angeles, is proceeding to crash all records which Lloyd set for the house with his last production, The Sailor-Made Man.

Grandma's Boy has set a new attendance record for the house.

Mildred Davis is given a good opportunity in this five reeler, and Charles Stevenson and Dick Sutherland gather in the laughs with their villainy, while Anna Townsend as the grandmother scores an individual triumph. The picture is shown with a very clever musical score compiled by the orchestra leader, Ted Henkle.

Our Mary is on location at Chatsworth Park, Cal., which is a suburb of Los Angeles. It is situated 30 miles by motor and to this place the star rides daily, sometimes as early as seven o'clock in the morning and seldom returning until after dark in the evening.

Often times she will go from location to the studio without dinner to clean up some detail of business.

Director John S. Robertson has been loaned by the Famous Players Lasky for this one picture. He will be recalled as the director of Sentimental Tommy.

The Astra Studios, comprising 26 acres, have been taken over by Fred L. Bagley formerly assistant general manager for Charles Chaplin and for four years comptroller at Universal.

He has one company now producing and will have several more units quartered on the lot before very long. He will completely remodel the studios, the name of Astra will be discarded, a reservoir now on the grounds will be turned into an artificial lake and the plant otherwise beautified. Mr. Bagley is hoping to make this one of the finest studios on the West Coast.

Henry MacRae, director of Cameron of the Royal Mounted and other Ralph Connor films has been selected as the director for The Man from Glengarry, an Ernest Shipman production.

The cast includes Ralph Faulkner, Amders Randolph, E. L. Fernandez, Harlan E. Knight, Pauline Garon, Marion Swayne and William Colvin.

The Glengarry School Days will follow The Man from Glengarry with the same director.

The Rapids, a story of Sault Ste. Marie, is now being put in scenario form; the actual shooting on it will begin about the middle of June. The Chivalry of Keith Leicester will be made at a later date in about the city of Vancouver, B. C.

Ernest Shipman is disposing of some of his foreign holdings in order to give his personal attention to these activities and expects to have a large number of Canadian productions ready for the fall release.

William Colvin, who managed the Italian production of F. Marion Crawford's Sant Ilario in Rome for Mr. Shipman, has been signed as producing manager of the Canadian film productions.

Anita Stewart will return from New York in time for the Los Angeles release of her latest picture, The Woman He Married which is a Louis B. Mayer-First National release, directed by Fred Niblo.

Al Christie has sent his brother and his studio staff his first bulletin from London, immediately on reaching the other side. He says London is a fine place and believes it has a future.

Among other observations he says it reminds him of his old birthplace, London, Canada. Christie was also surprised to hear such a great number of people speaking un-American English. He is reported to have found almost as many English actors at the Savoy Hotel, London, as he did at the Hotel Hollywood.

His first night in London he saw a preview of Harold Lloyd's Sailor Made Man.

Lewis Stone has been engaged by Louis B. Mayer for the leading role in the next John M. Stahl production. This will be the second picture Mr. Stone will appear in under Mr. Stahl's direction, the former being, The Child Thou Gavest Me. He will start at the Mayer Studio as soon as he completes his part in Black Orchids which Rex Ingram is now directing at the Metro studios.

It is understood that Robert Brunton upon his return from abroad will be associated with the Cosmosart Pictures Corporation.

Harry "Snub" Pollard is burlesquing high life in a two reeler for Hal E. Roach, under the direction of Herman C. Raymaker. Pollard in this comedy is a chauffeur who has married a magnate's daughter, Marie Mosquini. Noah Berry is heavy.

His Rascals, the kiddie comedy company at the Hal. E. Roach studios, has started on the third comedy of a series. The current production will be invested in most elaborate sets which have been built at the studio, comprising a beautiful home and ranch house. In addition to the regular featured animals, a monkey and cat will appear in the scenes while the same children will have the leading roles. Tom McNamara wrote the story and Bob McGowan is directing.

William Farnum, Fox Star, will come West at the end of June and will start work on a series of pictures, one of which, at least, will be a costume play; others will probably be Westerns. In the meantime Farnum is to make one more picture in New York. When he arrives in the West he will re-open his house in Hollywood. He will be accompanied by his wife and little daughter.

The Siren Call will have the wonderful Yosemite Valley, Cal., as the background for the dramatic action of this Paramount picture. The Alaskan story by J. E. Nash was adapted by the author and Philip Hurn and has a great amount of exciting action and tense love interest. Dorothy Dalton is featured and will appear as a dance hall girl in the Far North. David Powell is the leading man.

Mary Miles Minter has returned to Los Angeles after spending a few months in Honolulu. The Cowboy and the Lady, Clyde Fitch's famous drama, will afford the lovely star her next screen vehicle for Paramount, with Tom Moore in the leading male role.

Alfred Green is directing Wallace Reid in The Ghost Breaker, with Walter Heirs in the role of a colored serving man. Lila Lee, who has finished in Blood and Sand will interpret the feminine lead.

Rodolph Valentino's next starring vehicle for Paramount, following Blood and Sand will be The Young Rajah adapted by June Mathis from John Ames Mitchell's story "Amos Judd."

After working on location in a town about 60 miles from Los Angeles, George Melford and company have returned to the Lasky studios and will continue with the production of Blood and Sand. The interior settings are exotic in character. Wanda Hawley and Milton Sills are the featured players in this Paramount picture, which is an adaptation by Olga Printzlau and Waldemar Young from the novel by Arthur Weigall. Burning Sands is virtually an answer to The Sheik, the Melford production.

Finis Fox, who is perhaps best known as a scenario writer, has been engaged to make a seven reel feature from the story, The Bishop of the Ozarks, written by H. M. Howard, congressman, lecturer and author. Production will start in the near future.

Short Subjects and Serials

Six More "Leather Pushers" Coming

Universal Announces Second Series of Popular Prizering Two-Reelers, with Same Star, Director and Principals

Plans are under way at Universal City for the immediate production of six more "rounds" of The Leather Pushers, the popular two-reel prizering pictures adapted from H. C. Witwer's stories of the same name. The same director, the same star, and as far as necessary the same players will be used in the addition to the series as were used in the original six pictures, now being released.

Harry Pollard has been re-engaged for the new ones, and Reginald Denny, who has been made a Universal star since his initial success in The Leather Pushers, will be taken from the production of five-reel features long enough to complete the new "series" of two-reelers.

The Leather Pushers is the story of Kane Halliday, a young society man just out of college, who takes to the prizering to recoup his father's dwindled fortune. Halliday, as "Kid" Roberts, is known as the millionaire boxer. Reginald Denny, the star, not only is a polished actor, but a boxer of note, and proved ideal in the role. The fights, and there is at least one good one in each round, are real prizering mix-ups which have won the praise of pugilists and sport followers the country over.

So unusual has been the success of the first six rounds, especially among women, that exhibitors have flooded Universal with requests for more of the series. Therefore, Universal has just obtained screen rights for six more from the author-humorist, Witwer, creator of the stories.

The original six rounds were made in and around New York City. The series will be completed at Universal City.

Denny's two chief supporting players are Hayden Stevenson and Sam Ryan, who enact the roles of his manager and his opponent's manager, respectively. Denny is just completing The Kentucky Derby, a Universal special, in which he is being directed by King Baggot.

A formidable list of West Coast ring favorites is being lined up by Universal for appearance in the new series. Universal reports that The Leather Pushers is the most successful short subject series it has ever released. It is known as the Universal-Jewel-Collier series.

Heavy Advertising Campaign to Exploit "The Timber Queen"

Ruth Roland's best serial," as scores of exhibitors are testifying in booking Pathe's latest completed chapter-play from two months to six weeks in advance of release, is scheduled to benefit from the most comprehensive advertising campaign yet undertaken in connection with the distribution of any single offering by the "House of Serials." Pathe declares that its faith in the drawing power of The Timber Queen had put a nation-wide advertising enterprise in preparation even before the early episodes of the serial had reached branch exchanges.

In order to give the special advertising the highest degree of efficiency in all of the various districts, Pathe branch managers were called into consultation at an early stage. In twenty-five important cities twenty-four-sheet posters will be lavishly displayed. In fifteen principal centers there will be liberal use of newspaper space. In each instance the favored form of display announcement will be supplemented by the alternative method.

Branch exchange and exhibitor experience with the attractiveness and force of the poster displays designed by the Pathe Art Department has resulted in orders for a vast quantity of this form of advertising.

Burr Aims to Make "Torchy's Feud" Johnny Hines' Best

In the past three months Torchy comedies have been consistently shown in Broadway show-houses, and judging from the calibre of the new Torchys it is believed probable Torchy Steps Out and Torchy's Nut Sunday, just completed, also will find booking along the Rialto.

Torchy's Feud, which went into production this week, probably will outstrip any other Torchy comedy made, in plot, cast and settings. Johnny Hines and the whole studio staff have plunged into work on the story, the locale of which is in the Kentucky Mountains.

According to Producer C. C. Burr, this will be the most pretentious two-reeler attempted by Hines, and already local color and settings of the Kentucky country are being built on the grounds outside the Burr studio in Glendale. The plot is an elaborate one which calls for continual action from the start to the finish. It will be necessary to cary a large cast and a force of extras in order to portray the clans and tribes into whose feud Torchy is unexpectedly drawn, with humorous and hair-raising incidents as the result.

Sport Review Sales Week to Wind Up Exploitation Smash

As a climax to the exploitation campaign fostered by Weiss Brothers' Artclass Pictures Corporation in behalf of the Sport Review, preparations are now being made for a Sport Review sales week. During this week, the date of which will be announced, Artclass and Goldwyn, through which organization the Reviews are released, will co-operate in a concentrated sales drive. An effort will be made to tie up this sales drive with the various newspapers which publish the Grantland Rice sport column inasmuch as Rice is the editor of the film subjects. A special one-sheet will be prepared for the use of exhibitors. This will carry reading matter aimed directly at the public and urging it to see its favorite sport champion and pet summer sport as picturized in the various single reel releases.

A small book will be prepared in the form of a combination booking record and sport almanac. This will be supplied in quantities to exhibitors. A special slide also will be prepared.

During the drive an effort will be made to have exhibitors show one Sport Review each day where their change of program permits.

Widely Exploiting "Sherlock Holmes"

Educational Announces Many Helps for Exhibitors Showing Two-Reel Adaptations from the Stories of A. Conan Doyle

A large number of forceful exploitation helps have been announced by Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., for the series of two-reel pictures on "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes," of which the first, The Devil's Foot, has just been released.

A press sheet considerably larger than those usually issued on Educational's two-reel subjects has been prepared on The Devil's Foot, which not only will provide publicity helps for this particular picture but will offer suggestions for advertising and exploiting all pictures of the series.

The adventures do not constitute a serial. Each picture puts on the screen complete one of Conan Doyle's original Sherlock Holmes stories. It does not depend on other pictures of the series for interest. But with the same stars in the cast of each picture, and with all of them based on Conan Doyle's stories about Sherlock Holmes, most ideas for exploitation can be worked out successfully on any picture of the series.

A stock one-sheet poster presenting an artistic interpretation of the character of Sherlock Holmes is available for announcing any picture of the series, in addition to the regular one-sheet and three-sheet on each release.

Many novelties have been prepared which will be especially attractive to children. These include a complete Sherlock Holmes disguise, printed in colors, to be cut out from a large sheet. On this sheet is a space for the theatre to announce the date of the next showing of "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes."

A detective badge will be another attraction for children. Snipes one-sixth the size of a one-sheet will bear different messages.

Interest in this series of short subjects has already reached a high point, although the first subject has just been released. So great has been the demand for them that it was necessary to rush prints and accessories on the first picture, The Devil's Foot, to provide for a number of pre-release showings in the biggest cities of the country. Not only New York, where it showed at the Cameo Theatre, but Kansas City and other key centers have already had their first showings.

Reviews of this picture have been decidedly favorable.

Clean Comedies or None, Says Roach

At Conference of Production and Technical Staff, Coast Funmaker Outlines His Views as to What Public Expects

"If you cannot make comedies clean, don't make them at all." That was Hal Roach's most emphatic utterance upon the occasion of the conference held at the Roach Studios, Culver City, Cal., on May 24, to which he had summoned the members of his production and technical staff. These included directors and scenario writers.

Primarily, the conference was called to discuss the comedy situation and to make plans for fall releases. At the present time, in addition to the Harold Lloyd comedies, Mr. Roach has three other comedy companies at work, the "Snub" Pollard, the "Jimmy" Parrott, and the kiddie-animal units. All of this largely increased Roach comedy output is aimed at Pathe distribution, under the arrangement effected when the producer visited New York last winter.

Hal E. Roach, producer of Pathe Comedies

"I would rather," said Mr. Roach at this conference, "that a thousand persons be disappointed by a comedy that is poor because of a lack of laughs than to have any one person offended by a questionable bit of business."

Genuineness in comedy making was another serious topic of discussion. One reason why many comedies fail to "get over," in Mr. Roach's opinion, is their lack of sincerity. He continued: "There must be a sense of reality about pictures, or you immediately lose the support of your audiences. If you have to use a police patrol, for instance, for goodness' sake use a real one.

"Make your characters real, and also your settings. Surround your pictures with 'class.' The public to-day looks for the same finished product in comedies that it does in so-called feature productions. The sooner we get this idea firmly planted in our minds, the sooner comedy is going to win the recognition which it deserves in amusement ratings. The public craves comedy to-day. There is not one person in a thousand who does not enjoy clean, wholesome fun on the screen."

Producer Roach predicted a return to normal conditions in the Fall.

Showy Backgrounds for Peggy

The Bernheimer estate, one of the show places of California, for the first time in its existence, has been loaned for the exteriors of a moving picture. This will be Baby Peggy's release in which she plays the part of a messenger boy.

The estate is valued at $6,000,000, and is situated on a high elevation. The house is noted for its art treasures and its magnificent gardens. Interior as well as exterior views have been shot.

Hodkinson to Issue Twelve One-Reelers Devoted to Sports

The W. W. Hodkinson Corporation announces this week that it will release a series of twelve one-reel sporting pictures under the general title of Days Afield With Rod and Gun. The series will be made under the personal supervision of Eltinge F. Warner, editor of the magazine Field and Stream, and will be ready for release beginning in the early fall.

One of the pictures in the series will figure as an early release. W. W. Hodkinson, president of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, is featured in this picture.

All twelve pictures in the series will deal with out-of-doors sporting subjects and the stories will be written around actual experiences with rod and gun. Some will picture big game hunts in Africa, trapping and shooting in the far north and hunting expeditions in South American jungles. Deep sea fishing and fishing along the streams and in the lakes of America will also be shown.

Two Educationals Playing Broadway Week of June 4

Educational Pictures are represented on New York's Broadway during the week of June 4 with a Torchy Comedy and one of the Wilderness Tales by Robert C. Bruce.

Torchy and Orange Blossoms went into the Rialto Theatre, while My Country, the only one of the current series of Wilderness Tales which is not based on a dramatic story, but which has been called the "most beautiful scenic ever made in this country," was run at the Capitol.

The preceding week marked the close of a long run on Broadway for From Dawn to Dusk in Egypt, one of Educational's World Wanderings. After an extended stay at the Criterion with Loves of Pharaoh, it went to the Rivoli for another week, making ten weeks in the two houses.

New Yorkers See New Pathe Issue of "Snap Shots"

"A million dollars worth" of screen stars at work and at play and in domestic life flashed on the screens of the Rivoli and Rialto the week of May 28 introduced to New Yorkers the new series of Screen Snap Shots made for Pathe distribution and which are released one reel every two weeks. These scenes included such well-known persons as Wallace Reid, expert at the "traps"; Theodore Roberts indulging his love for "jazz"; Gus Edwards making the piano "talk" while Cecil De Mille listens. Betty Compson, Thomas Meighan and Tom Forman were others pictured more intimately than they ever are in the productions which they adorn.

Since the announcement that Pathe was to handle the new series of Screen Snap Shots inquiries have been coming into the branch exchanges, accompanied by a large number of contracts from exhibitors. Announcement is made that arrangements have been perfected whereby every star of note, every interesting occurrence in the film world, with scenes taken in every studio in the East and West, will be included in the twenty-six issues to be made during the current year for Pathe release.

Bessie Love Charming in "Carolyn of the Corners"

A real and a charming kid in a kid picture is Bessie Love as we see her in Carolyn of the Corners, a three-part Pathe Playlet. While seemingly there is not much to the subject, nevertheless it is genuinely entertaining and contains a bit of drama besides. The characters are finely drawn, there is an absence of villainy, the picture is wholesome—and in fact it ought to give satisfaction in any kind of a house. G.B.

Personal Letters Helpful

Personal letters to educators and to leaders of American Legion posts have attracted added attention to Educational's special The Battle of Jutland in showings all over the country. This has proved successful in the West, where this short subject special is said to have been a favorite since its first showings in San Francisco and other Coast cities.

"Bucking Broadway" Is Rare Comedy

Elaborate Christie Production Is Tale of Young Man Who Outpoints Determined Father and Wins Musical Show Star

We have just seen two of the recent products of the Christie Studio, Mile-a-Minute Mary and Bucking Broadway, each in two reels, and listed for release by Educational. The first is a good comedy as a whole—not 100 per cent in spots, particularly in the first half, but in the latter part picking up speed aplenty and finishing in a really satisfying manner. The second is a rattling good picture, all the way, one on which a manager may go the limit prior to his showing and during it.

Mile-a-Minute Mary features Dorothy Devore in a story written by Walter Graham and directed by Harold Beaudine. The tale is of four girls who go on a camping party, the outing being interrupted by a hurried trip with the father of one of them to take up an option on oil land that has proved to be valuable. Rival interests do their utmost to prevent the taking over of the property, but of course they fail—by the 'steenth part of a minute.

Bucking Broadway has a musical comedy background, with dancers—lots of 'em—for atmosphere and incidentally for real entertainment. Practically all of the action takes place on a stage, and much of it back stage. Well-to-do Father talks economy to his directors while his son talks something more than soft nothings to the prima donna of the show. Father in desperation at his failure to balk his son buys the show and orders his heir kept away from the stage. How his plans are upset and how he is compelled to welcome a daughter-in-law under his own roof—or lose the most popular part of his show as an alternative—makes not only a pretty story but an unusually lively and interesting one as well.

Frank Roland Conklin has built up a tale which will delight the photoplaygoer. Scott Sidney has brought to it expert direction and staging. Neal Burns in the role of the smitten and affluent son gives an excellent performance. Surrounding him is a cast of uniform competence.

Bucking Broadway is a rare type of high-class comedy. After seeing it we can understand why Al Christie felt he was entitled to a trip to Europe. We'll say he was. G. B.

Travelaughs 4 and 5 Reflect Artistry of Producer Hy Mayer

Hy Mayer in his Travelaughs Nos. 4 and 5, which were shown this week by R-C Pictures, maintains where he does not exceed the high quality promised in the opening numbers. No. 4 is Such Is Life in Mon Petit Paris, and in the French capital the artist finds wide opportunity for the exercise of his genuine talent in the delineation of character. Not only does he pick out the high spots, the famous landmarks, bridges, buildings, squares and river, but he wanders into the byways and shows us the everyday Frenchman and Frenchwoman and French child—at work and at play.

Travelaugh No. 5 is devoted to "Children of France." Youngsters of all sorts and conditions are pictured, and all of them are interesting.

Enhancing the interest of the actual scenes are the skillful and entertaining drawings of the artist—and Hy Mayer surely is a master with crayon and pencil and pen. The artistry noted in the Travelaughs is not bounded by achievement in bold outline or in selection of strong backgrounds. Within this category also easily falls the work of the title writer. It is work that will survive careful scanning in the "library" as well as hasty reading on the screen. G. B.

REVIEWS OF CURRENT SHORT SUBJECTS

OFFICIAL URBAN MOVIE CHATS NO. 20—Released by Hodkinson.—Senator William E. Borah of Idaho urges a return to the leadership and teachings of Washington. A specialist in social etiquette explains and commends the dances of other days, at the same time that she disapproves some of the dances of to-day, which are illustrated so fully as without question to justify the condemnation. The specialist goes into matters of deportment in detail. A woman in a southern city conducts an academy of music for birds, in which the latter are taught to sing. There are interesting pictures of how the Columbia River Highway and railroad were cleared of snow following a great storm.

THE SILVER GIRL—Re-edited Pathe Playlet in three reels.—This is a western subject in which Frank Keenan is featured as a miner with a young wife who longs for the sights and gayeties of the city. In the support are George Hernandez, Irene Rich, Herschel Mayall, Donald McDonald, Catherine Adams and Cliff Alexander—an excellent cast. The picture is well staged, whether we are considering the western exteriors or the city interiors. While the picture contains perhaps no really great moments it provides good entertainment.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS—No. 2, released by Pathe.—Florence and King Vidor are shown at play in deep snow in the mountains, remarkably picturesque shots, by the way. Victor Herbert plays a studio organ for Dorothy Phillips and Wallace Beery. Harry Carey is photographed intimately on his big ranch in California. Harold Lloyd breaks the monotony of a train trip by a brief attack on a pogo stick. The final number is a "gag" dialogue between Ben Turpin and Charlie Murray. A fine number.

PATHE REVIEW No. 160—Right up to its high standard, this number opens with a novelty, "To the Ladies." There are "South Sea Hours," aptly described as "a pictorial idyll of the Samoan Islands"; "The Feather Factory," showing an ostrich ranch in South Africa; "Horsemen Who Dare," photographs in normal and slow-motion of the New York State troopers; and "The City of Heights," in Pathecolor, views of Grenoble, France, with its picturesque houses and striking mountain setting.

FELIX IN LOVE—Pat Sullivan Animated Comedy released by M. J. Winkler.—Seen at the Strand in New York during the week of May 28, one could not fail to be impressed by the verdict of the house, by its laughter and steady flow of mirth. Felix is funny, there's no doubt about that—for one reason because his creator is ingenious; fertile in imagination and clever in execution. When Felix with his banjo sits atop the fence and sings and plays to his ladylove in a window above him, his head swaying in time with the strains of the instrument, disregarding the unkind things that are shouted from surrounding windows and the variegated brickbats that pass harmlessly over his head—that is, all but one—he comes within the category of the lover that is loved by all the world. You don't have to be one who likes cats to enjoy the antics of Felix.

HALE AND HEARTY—One-reel comedy released by Pathe.—"Snub" Pollard, Marie Mosquini and Eddie Baker are introduced to us as all advanced in years—and be it said Miss Mosquini is charming as the elderly person of to-day or as the maid of years ago—but the garb she wears in the latter character very much antedates the era of the ordinary bicycle which Eddie rides. However, that is incidental—what counts is that the picture is all right, whether from the pictorial side or the comic.

BE MY WIFE—Pathe single reel reissue.—Harold Lloyd and Bebe Daniels are featured. Bebe is the new stenographer and Harold tries to prevent the boss not only from indulging in conversation with the newcomer but also from dictating a letter. Not much work is done, but the office force, including the girl at the switchboard, are entertained. Some of the latter will get over to the audience.

THE FARMER AND HIS CAT—Aesop's Fables released by Pathe.—Cartoonist Paul Terry is at his best. The moral which he seeks to illustrate—and with hilarious result—is that "The surest way to get rid of a cat is to move." The moral, however, is not proved, as the cat comes back, and at the last with a large number of kittens.

THE ADVENTURES OF ROBINSON CRUSOE—Chapter 11 of Universal Serial—Friday saves Crusoe's life, endangered by exposure to the rays of the sun projected through a lens, by rescuing his master. The chief incident of the chapter is the attack on Crusoe's stockade by the mutineers and the forcing of an entrance.

OFFICIAL URBAN MOVIE CHATS NO. 19—Released by Hodkinson.—Mrs. Wilson Woodrow in an illustrated interview gives her opinions on the question "Should Wives Obey Their Husbands?" The making of an automobile storage battery is shown in detail. Scientific cultivation of roses is demonstrated. What the United States is doing to exterminate Argentina ants is illustrated. The concluding number shows outdoor life in Paris, with intimate "close-ups" in Montmartre streets.

GOOD MORNING, JUDGE—Rolin Comedy, released by Pathe.—Eddie Boland is featured as the judge, a farcical one, it may be stated in passing. There is an attempt to bolster the single reel with accelerated action, but not with any measureable degree of success.

THE AIR-LINE ROUTE—Eleventh episode of the "Go-Get-'Em Hutch" serial, released by Pathe.—Charles Hutchison continues supplying thrills, of which in this chapter there are several.

A POWDER ROMANCE—One-reel Star Comedy, released by Universal.—Roy Atwell and Ethel Ritchie are featured in a skit that will mildly amuse.

ROBINSON CRUSOE—Episode 10 of Universal serial.—There is a fair amount of action in this number.

Whitman Bennett Enters Open Market

Announces Production of Five Important Subjects for Season of 1922-23, Four of Them Starring Betty Blythe

Whitman Bennett announces that, in expanding his producing activities for the next season, he has determined to give a large portion of his time to the producing and releasing of not less than five important productions for the open market. Four of these will be ambitious special star pictures of luxurious metropolitan life, with Betty Blythe as the stellar artist. The fifth picture will be a special with a notable cast, but no star, and will be specifically announced in the near future.

Mr. Bennett states most emphatically that his decision to enter the open market does not mean that he intends to make less important productions. On the contrary, it means that he hopes and expects to give the open market more important productions than it has heretofore averaged. Even admitting that business conditions are now bad, Mr. Bennett believes that August is going to see a widespread business revival; and it is his contention that the open market will be better this autumn than ever before in film history.

The four Betty Blythe pictures have all been financed in advance on a liberal basis and will be elaborately produced under the name of the newly formed B. B. Productions, Inc. Work on the first picture will begin almost immediately at the Whitman Bennett Studio in Yonkers. The director will be Kenneth Webb, whose association with Mr. Bennett is of long standing and widely known. The scenario is by Dorothy Farnum, and the art work will be in charge of Elsa Lopez.

The first story is a subject centering around the Metropolitan Opera House, dealing with the most elaborate and little understood phases of international musical life in the studios and before the public. Miss Blythe's role offers not only dramatic opportunities but also a chance to provide the player with an array of beautiful and highly picturesque gowns.

This first story will be released under the title of How Women Love. It is founded on A Dangerous Inheritance, the novel by Izola Forrester. The other stories in the series of Betty Blythe specials will also deal with New York "high society" life. The second release will be entitled The Idol of the Rich.

Speaking of Miss Blythe and his determination to release on the open market, Mr. Bennett says:

"I have undertaken to make Miss Blythe a star because she genuinely deserves that distinction and has deserved it ever since The Queen of Sheba. Her personal popularity is evidenced not only by the demand to see the pictures in which she appears but also by the success of her many recent personal appearances.

"My decision to test the open market is the result of careful and patient analysis. Up to date I am only half convinced that the buyers are serious in their oft-repeated demands for a regular supply of better pictures, but I am going to take them at their word for the moment and find out. To remain definitely in the open market, I must be convinced that the local distributors are not only good business men but good showmen—that they will get the right bookings and give my star the right advertising.

"Up to date, I have received and declined four genuine propositions from national distributors for the Blythe pictures. I believe that I was justified in doing this, and hope that my expectations will not be disappointed. I shall positively make the pictures of such calibre that, if the open market proves to be only half a reality, the national distributors will want the pictures more after each release. I must do this for the protection both of myself and my star, but will never desert the open market if it proves capable of doing justice to our enterprise.

"The fact that I am offering pictures to the open market does not mean that I have ceased producing for national distributors. The contrary is the case. I am, however, enormously bent upon establishing myself in the open market and always keeping active in the thoroughly independent field."

Commonwealth Buys Four Arrow Features and Lyons Comedies

Arrow announces this week the sale to Commonwealth Film Company of New York of a group of its biggest pictures which will be marketed by Commonwealth in the New York and Northern New Jersey territory. Included in the deal were the rights to A Motion to Adjourn, Back to Yellow Jacket, Chain Lightning, Headin' North and a series of Eddie Lyons comedies.

Samuel Zierler, President of Commonwealth, admits he is greatly pleased by his purchase.

"I feel," said President Shallenberger of Arrow, in commenting upon it, "that this deal indicates very clearly the definite return of those long-awaited 'better times.' Mr. Zierlier is a hard-headed business man who scrutinizes every proposition with the utmost care before entering into it. And I feel he would not have put his good cash into such an array of expensive productions unless he saw his way clear to getting it back—plus!"

"Speaking for myself, I can only say that I am looking forward to a brilliant fall season."

"School Days" Ties Up With Gas Company and Wins Out

The receipts of the Royal Theatre, Sioux City, Iowa, were notably swelled during the showing of the Warner Brothers' attraction of School Days, by a stunt put over by Harold Horne, of the Supreme Pictures Corporation, Omaha.

Mr. Horne, in conjunction with Homer Lombart, newspaper man, sold the Sioux City Gas and Electric Company the idea of giving fifty free tickets for matinee performances to the first fifty women to attend the morning demonstrations of one of its new heating regulators. The company carried on a newspaper advertising campaign of four days, and also paid the theatre twenty cents for every ticket it gave away. Four column ads were devoted to the stunt in connection with the picture, and this with several other tie-ups brought home the bacon for the Royal.

"After Six Days" Will Have Premier Within Few Weeks

It has been decided by Weiss Brothers' Artclass Pictures Corporation to present its biblical spectacle After Six Days at an out of town theatre during the early part of July. This decision has been caused by the many inquiries received for summer bookings. A finished print of the production was screened privately this week for a select audience. The production will be released in twelve reels, and in its present form presents the various important episodes of the Old Testament from Adam and Eve up to and including the Songs of Solomon.

The picture has been hand-colored in many sections and the coloring and laboratory work has been done by a special staff under the supervision of Jack Leo, of the Fox laboratory. A special musical score is now in preparation requiring the use of a choir of forty voices. The presentation will be under the management of Lous Weiss, and will be for the purpose of testing the possibilities of the production in an out of town legitimate theatre, prior to bringing it to New York for a run throughout the fall and the winter season.

Aywon's Maciste Production Is Now on Way from Italy

A cablegram received this week by Nathan Hirsh, president of Aywon Film Corporation, from Italy informed him that production on the Maciste feature had been completed and the American negative has been shipped. The scenes are laid in various parts of Italy and the Alps.

Negotiations for sale of territorial rights on Aywon product for 1922-23 have started. White Hell, the Charles Bartlett Northwest Mounted Police production, starring Richard Travers, has attracted attention.

Mr. Hirsh announced this week that he had opened negotiations for additional product for next season.

The Cherokee Jill Indian series of twelve two-reelers promises to be popular. These productions include Indian casts. The stories will be of the historical and adventure type.

With Wings Outspread, the other feature Aywon will release in the fall, was made in Cuba and is the first of a series of such productions Mr. Hirsh will offer.

Arrow Launches Drive on Short Stuff

Institutes National Campaign on Ten Series and Three Serials, Aggregating Over a Quarter of a Million Feet

The Arrow Film Corporation has this week launched a national sales drive on short subjects. Few realize the volume of single and two-reel subjects this organization handles. Its annual release of short subjects probably ranks it as among the first three organizations. As an illustration of the short subjects now available Arrow offers the independent exchanges and exhibitors:

A series of twelve two-reel Eddie Lyons comedies.

Fourteen two-reel Broadway comedies.

Twelve two-reel Speed comedies.

Fourteen two-reel Mirthquake comedies.

Five two-reel Cruelywed comedies.

Eighteen two-reel Spotlight comedies.

Eight two-reel "XLNT" comedies.

Five two-reel Muriel Ostriche comedies.

A series of Hank Mann two-reel comedies.

Twenty-three one-reel sport subjects released under the brand of "Sport Pictorials," produced by Jack Eaton and edited by Grantland Rice.

Three fifteen-episode serials: Thunderbolt Jack, starring Jack Hoxie; The Blue Fox and Nan of the North, starring Anne Little.

Arrow has always felt that the short subject was of extreme importance to the independent exchanges and to that end has concentrated its efforts to secure the best product available. Arrow points out that an independent exchange can secure an excellent volume of business with a minimum sales expense by handling several series of short subjects. A careful analysis of booking conditions throughout the country has conclusively proved that exhibitors in booking short subjects prefer to contract well in advance for these pictures.

"Big Boy" Williams Receives Warm Home Town Reception

"Big Boy" Guinn Williams, star of Blaze Away and The Trail of Hate, produced by Frederick Herbst productions and released by Di Lorenzo, Inc., enjoyed the time of his life in Dallas last week as the guest of the Dallas Chamber of Commerce and L. T. Pellerin of the R. D. Lewis Film Corporation. The player was invited by Mr. Pellerin to appear in person at the Old Mill Theatre, Dallas, in conjunction with the showing of his latest production. Williams is a native son, and the Chamber of Commerce to show its appreciation of his film success tendered him a luncheon which was attended by several hundred guests from out-of-town.

Following the luncheon "Big Boy" Williams took part in a rodeo, and being an old hand at rope-throwing and cow-punching his efforts were creditable. Williams, later in the evening, was guest of honor at the Oriental Hotel, where he was introduced to the film trade men.

Hoey Lawlor Finishes Series of "Joe Jackson, Detective"

Producing Director Hoey Lawlor, credited with being one of the prominent art technicians in the motion picture industry, has completed the first of a series of "Joe Jackson, Detective" stories, written by Irving J. Lewis. The pictures are said to be all of one-reel length, and each completed production has no relation to those that precede or follow. According to Mr. Lawlor, negotiations for the distribution of the detective series are under way with a prominent organization.

Abramson Begins Work on "Flapper" Tale of New York

Ivan Abramson, president of the Graphic Film Corporation, and his staff of players and cameramen went into production this week on Wild Youth. The picture will be taken at the Talmadge studios in New York City and in Greenwich Village.

Already contracted for are the services of Mary Anderson, Harry Morey, Julia Swayne Gordon, Thurston Hall, Joseph Striker, Harry Southard and Bobby Connelly for the feature roles in this "flapper" picture.

In order properly to portray the action and to bring to it all the realism possible the head of Graphic is sparing no means to make the sets as realistic as possible. It is estimated the cost of production will exceed by far any previous outlay made by him.

The title itself is explanatory in a large measure of the type of coming production. It will be a story attempting to mirror the twentieth century young man and young woman, their habits and pleasures, their sophistications and their ideals.

Lustre Photoplays to Make Pictures at Plattsburgh Studio

The Lustre Photoplays, Inc., of which J. W. Foster is the president and Robert Carson director general, announces plans that call for three producing units, which will stage twenty two-reel semi-western pictures, twelve five-reelers, based on famous novels and stage successes, and fifty-two one-reel comedies in which Charlie Fang, a Chinese comedian and protege of Director Carson, will be the chief luminary.

The first producing unit, which will stage the two-reel subjects, will begin work next Monday at Plattsburgh, N. Y., where a studio has just been completed.

Ollie Leach, who recently photographed My Old Kentucky Home, has been engaged as chief camera man. Besides Mr. Foster and Mr. Carson other executives are Louis L. Mayer, second vice-president; William Briberman, third vice-president; Lafe Cohen, treasurer, and Leo K. Mayer, secretary.

Priest to Distribute Eustace Pictures of African Jungle

Mrs. Harry Kaigh Eustace and Miss Hilda Kaigh, wife and daughter respectively of Harry K. Eustace, the famous African sportsman, explorer and big game hunter, are in New York where they arrived recently from Africa, to join Mr. Eustace for the premier of his motion pictures which depict the latest adventures of the trio in the jungles and which shortly will be presented at a Broadway theatre under the direction of Robert W. Priest, who has acquired the world's rights to all of Mr. Eustace's motion pictures.

Auerbach Prepared to Purchase

Louis Auerbach, vice-president of Export and Import, who arrived in Los Angeles, May 27, for a conference with William N. Selig, will remain there for several weeks. The two men are going over fall production plans. Mr. Auerbach also is viewing other independent productions and has announced that his company is ready to purchase the world rights on negatives of merit.

Export and Import Sales

Among the foreign sales reported by Export and Import Film Company, Inc., during the past week were a series of eleven Sun-Lite Comedies for the United Kingdom, and The Jungle Goddess, Selig serial, for Argentina, Uruguay, Paraguay, Chile, Peru and Bolivia. The Holland and German deal on this serial which was recently reported under negotiation also is closed.

Dorothy Gish Film for Independents

Producers' Security Announces Coming Distribution in the State Rights Market of "The Country Flapper"

The Producers Security Corporation this week closed a contract to handle the distribution of The Country Flapper, starring Dorothy Gish. Glenn Hunter is at the head of the supporting cast. The production will be distributed through the independent market.

F. Richard Jones, who directed Mickey, Molly O' and Cross Roads of New York among other subjects, directed the new production, and is said to have injected all of his well-known pep and action into this most timely subject.

The city "flapper" is a well-known character, but now comes her rival "the country flapper." Dorothy Gish is ideally suited to portray the small-town maiden's antics in her pursuit of the handsome young Romeo's affections.

If screen patrons long have craved for youth in pictures, Dorothy Gish's advent in this characterization should be welcome news.

The picture is now in the cutting room and will be ready for release in ten days to two weeks.

The Producers Security Corporation staff is speeding up its campaign, which it promises will be a brisk one.

Plan Four Complete Hallroom Comedies Ahead of Release

Four Hallroom Boys Comedies, absolutely complete, titled, cartooned, ready in every detail for exhibitor showing before any of them on the new series are released—and four always ready in advance of release schedule, is the announcement this week from Harry Cohn, producer of these two-reel laugh-makers.

It is the intention of Mr. Cohn and his production staff to keep this far ahead of release throughout the making of the series. This declaring a comedy "completed" includes, in addition to its actual making, the pre-release showing of every picture on the series in two separate theatres in Hollywood, as part of a regular program before regular audiences, and editing the pictures in accordance with the audience reaction to them.

"By working thus far in advance," says Mr. Cohn, "we can keep up the standard of excellence we have planned for this series, and give all the time and attention that must be given to the matter of scripts, locations, 'props,' working out of 'gags,' acting, direction, titling, art work, and final editing and re-editing."

Madge Titheradge Popular, Reports Second National

Madge Titheradge, featured in two of the four Second National Pictures Corporation releases now booking, is winning widespread popularity as an emotional screen actress, according to reports received at the New York offices of the concern. It is only recently that Miss Titheradge turned to the screen as her career, after winning fame on the speaking stage, beginning with the long run of The Butterfly on the Wheel, a Broadway success in which she was starred. The Second National pictures featuring Miss Titheradge are Her Story, written by her brother, Dion Titheradge, and David and Jonathan, from the popular novel by E. Temple Thurston.

Many exhibitors who have been looking forward to the Peggy Hyland series, to be released by Second National in the course of the current season, are inclined to think these pictures must make a strong bid for popularity in order to wrest any laurels from Miss Titheradge.

Eddie Polo Makes Two Special Scenes for "Cap'n Kidd"

Two special features were staged this week for scenes for Cap'n Kidd, the serial in which Eddie Polo is starring as his first Independent serial.

The first of these features was the laying out in New Jersey of an entire gypsy camp, with tents, "local color," and caravans. This was done with the aid of a gypsy band which the company found there. The settings required the services of 150 extras and many picturesque scenes were shot—especially those made at night.

The second feature staged was, according to Polo himself, one of the biggest thrills he has ever made in his serial career. This was a fight staged on top of a train traveling at the rate of fifty-five miles an hour. In this, Polo climbs up the side of the moving train, dragging another man after him, fights him while the train is in motion, and finally throws him over the side into an automobile keeping pace below, jumping in after him.

Dr. Goodman's Special to Be Ready for Equity's Fall Issue

Daniel Carson Goodman announces this week the completion of What's Wrong With the Women, which will be released by Equity Pictures in the fall on the state right market. It was produced at the Biograph Studios in New York with a cast including some of the stage favorites of Broadway. Dr. Goodman completed his picture on schedule time, allowing ample opportunity to cut and edit the production, and permitting Equity sufficient time to start the advertising and exploitation campaign with which it is intended to back this picture. The cast includes Wilton Lackaye, Barbara Castleton, Huntley Gordon, Julia Swayne Gordon, Montague Love, Rod La Roque, Hedda Hopper, and Constance Bennett.

"Determination" Plays to Big Business in Providence

The photo drama Determination surprised exhibitors and independent exchangemen in New England by playing to capacity houses last week at E. F. Albee's Victory Theatre, Providence, despite the hot weather and strong opposition on the part of four big productions and a street carnival.

There was not a morning during the entire engagement which did not see a good-sized line waiting for the theatre to open and it was not an exceptional thing to see a line waiting throughout the day, says a report to Lee-Bradford.

The Lee-Bradford Corporation advises that the New England rights have been disposed of for this production and will announce the purchaser within the coming week.

McCarthy's Organization Ready

John P. McCarthy of Los Angeles announces the completion of his organization to continue production. He has secured the film rights of the Frederic Remington works and will produce a series of features suggested by these wonderful and world-known paintings.

Out of the Dust, a McCarthy production, has recently been released in Los Angeles. Associated with Mr. McCarthy is R. Holmes Paul, formerly an art director at Thomas H. Ince and Robert Brunton studios.

Aldene Books "Splendid Lie"

Arrow is in receipt of information from the De Luxe Film Company of Philadelphia that the splendid new Aldene Theatre of Philadelphia has booked The Splendid Lie and arranged for the personal appearance of the star, Miss Grace Davison, for the week of June 12.

The Aldene Theatre is one of the newest and finest theatres in Philadelphia and Mr. Luchese of De Luxe Company feels that this selection is another mark of the quality of the picture.

Plan Large Campaign on Blaney Story

C. B. C. Film Sales to Splurge on "More to Be Pitied Than Scorned," the First of Its Series of Melodramas

All the forces of the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation are being concentrated on the planning and preparation of a big exploitation campaign to accompany the release of More to Be Pitied Than Scorned, the feature based on the Charles E. Blaney melodrama, and the first of a series C. B. C. has announced for distribution.

Work on the exploitation for this feature is already under way, under the direction of Joe Brandt, president of C. B. C.

Something new and original is being planned in the way of paper, and a special corps of artists has already been lined up and is at work submitting sketches, ideas, color schemes and suggestions for this purpose. Joe Brandt is now heading up a special staff experienced in putting over big features and lining up a definite schedule including every angle—from regular showmanship to "fan" publicity.

"More to Be Pitied Than Scorned presents strong exploitation possibilities," says Mr. Brandt. "We have a great box-office title and this title in itself gives opportunity for much feature work in the way of playing it up. We have, too, a great cast, each separate name, such as that of Rosemary Theby, Alice Lake, J. Frank Glendon, Philo McCullough, Gordon Griffith and Baby Adair, having a real box-office value and strong audience pull. We are confident, too, that we have a great picture, and that Edward Le Saint, who directed it, and whose name means an all-around well directed feature, has put into this one the most that could be got from the original great Blaney melodrama."

Sam Warner Asserts Approaching Season Will Be Biggest Yet

Sam Warner, of the Warner Brothers' organization, arrived east last week from the coast studios and reported increased production activities in Los Angeles, as was announced in these columns last week. It is Mr. Warner's opinion that the coming season will be the biggest in the history of the film industry. Mr. Warner also declared that the forthcoming Harry Rapf production, Rags to Riches, featuring Wesley Barry, is rapidly nearing completion under the direction of Wallace Worsley.

The cast in support of the freckled youngster includes Niles Welch and Ruth Renick, both of whom play the romance leads, and Russell Simpson and Mrs. Minna Ferry Redman, in the character roles.

"The west coast studios are humming with activity," said Mr. Warner, "and without exaggeration I can say that the coming season will be the biggest in the history of the industry, from a production standpoint. Practically every studio is working at full speed, and this increased activity augurs well for the stability of the business."

Tarzan Show at Luna Park

Through arrangements with Weiss Brothers', Adventures of Tarzan Series Sales Corporation, Luna Park, New York's famous summer resort, will present a Tarzan animal show throughout the season. A large collection of animals under the direction of Walter Beckwith, well-known animal trainer, will entertain visitors to Luna Park. Among these animals is Jimmie, the famous Tarzan lion, and the principal actor in the serial, Adventures of Tarzan. Arrangements have been made to photograph the entire performance as given in the arena and these pictures will be used in the Fall for exploiting a new animal serial.

"Retribution," from Italy, Is a Stately Tale of the Borgias

One of the outstanding scenes in Retribution, a six-part subject produced in Italy under the direction of Camillo Innocenti, is the finely portrayed election of a Pope. It is dramatic in the extreme; and it is spectacular as well. Perhaps part of the interest is due to its nearness to the recent Vatican election, to which so much attention was paid in the newspapers.

The picture, which is being distributed by Rialto Productions, is said to be based on a number of incidents in the life of Lucretia Borgia. The Lucretia we see on the screen is not only a sinless but a saintly person, one very much in love with her effeminate husband and in great terror of her brother, Caesar.

The scenario is credited to Fausto Salvatori. The program distributed on the opening night at the Park Theatre in New York carried the line "The Story by Hamilton Fyfe." This, we assume, means that Mr. Fyfe in titling the picture changed the work of the director and scenarist to conform to what he believed to be the expediency of the American as distinguished from the Italian situation—having in view the avoidance of antagonisms. Certainly the story as it is does not reflect history.

Accepting it as nearly pure fiction Retribution will entertain even in its present form—for its drama, its staging, its costuming, its grouping and in a number of instances its acting—notably Countess Momo as Lucretia and Miss Sangusto as Rosa, the girl who is blinded at the order of Caesar. It is a stately tragedy; it is dignified, impressive. G. B.

Billy Franey Will Play Genteel Clown in New Two-Reelers

State rights exchanges are promised a "different" Billy Franey, who is now appearing in a series of two-reel comics, than his one-reel series of former days. In a letter to F. E. Samuels, general sales manager, Robert O'Conor, chief of the O'Conor Productions, producers and distributors of this series, says:

"Don't be afraid to promise exchanges a Billy Franey different from the same man who appeared in the one-reel series. Billy Franey's art is the same and he will remain a clown, but a genteel clown. In this series he will not engage in 'rough stuff' and his costumes are in keeping with the higher standard of the new series. Also his direction is better, stories and gags are new, and his support will be at all times of the very best available."

Included in the list of players supporting Billy Franey, in his new series of two-reel semi-slapstick comedies, will be found the names of Gale Henry, the elongated "queen" of screen "hokum," and Vera Reynolds, former featured Christie ingenue. According to the O'Conor Productions, manufacturers and distributors of this series, Billy Franey's support through the entire series of twenty-six comedies will be uniformly good.

Backer to Market "Crimson Gold" in the Next Fortnight

Franklyn E. Backer of East Coast Productions expects the second picture of his series starring J. B. Warner to arrive in New York within two weeks. This is Crimson Gold. As soon as it arrives Mr. Backer will have it screened for the trade, as the state rights buyers have shown considerable interest in the J. B. Warner series. This is said to be due largely to their possibilities for exploitation. The first one, Big Stakes, which was screened in New York about two weeks ago following a successful showing at Kreer's Ambassador, Los Angeles, is now being successfully marketed.

Mr. Backer has completed a practical press sheet and special exploitation sheet for the picture. It is small in form, yet with most of the practical aids of the elaborate and expensive plan book. Much of the space is taken up with exploitation suggestions.

Although Mr. Backer's general sales manager, Jack Von Tilzer, sold a few of the territories for this picture under its original title, High Stakes, the contracts were changed this week to read Big Stakes, as it was learned that the original title had been used for a previous production. The picture is the adaptation of an American magazine story.

Laugh-O-Gram Films Will Issue Cartoon Every Two Weeks

The Laugh-O-grams Films, Inc., has been organized, with offices at 1127 East Thirty-first Street, Kansas City, for the purpose of producing animated cartoon comedies to be known as Laugh-O-grams. The subjects will be modernized fairy tales and will be created by Walt E. Disney.

For the past two years Mr. Disney has been making Newman Laugh-O-grams exclusively for the Newman Theatre, Kansas City. He finally reached the conclusion that if he could make cartoons that would entertain patrons of a theatre such as the Newman, he could by elaborating on his work and using the right kind of subject matter successfully produce animated cartoons for national distribution.

Six productions already have been completed, and Leslie B. Mace, general sales manager of Laugh-O-grams, declares they are most entertaining. Mr. Mace announces a release of the single reels every fortnight. The method of distribution has not as yet been fully determined.

Report "Jungle Goddess" Sale

Export and Import Film Company, Inc., world distributors of the Selig product, have just closed a contract which disposes of the entire southern rights of The Jungle Goddess to the Eltabran Film Company, of which Thomas Brannon is president.

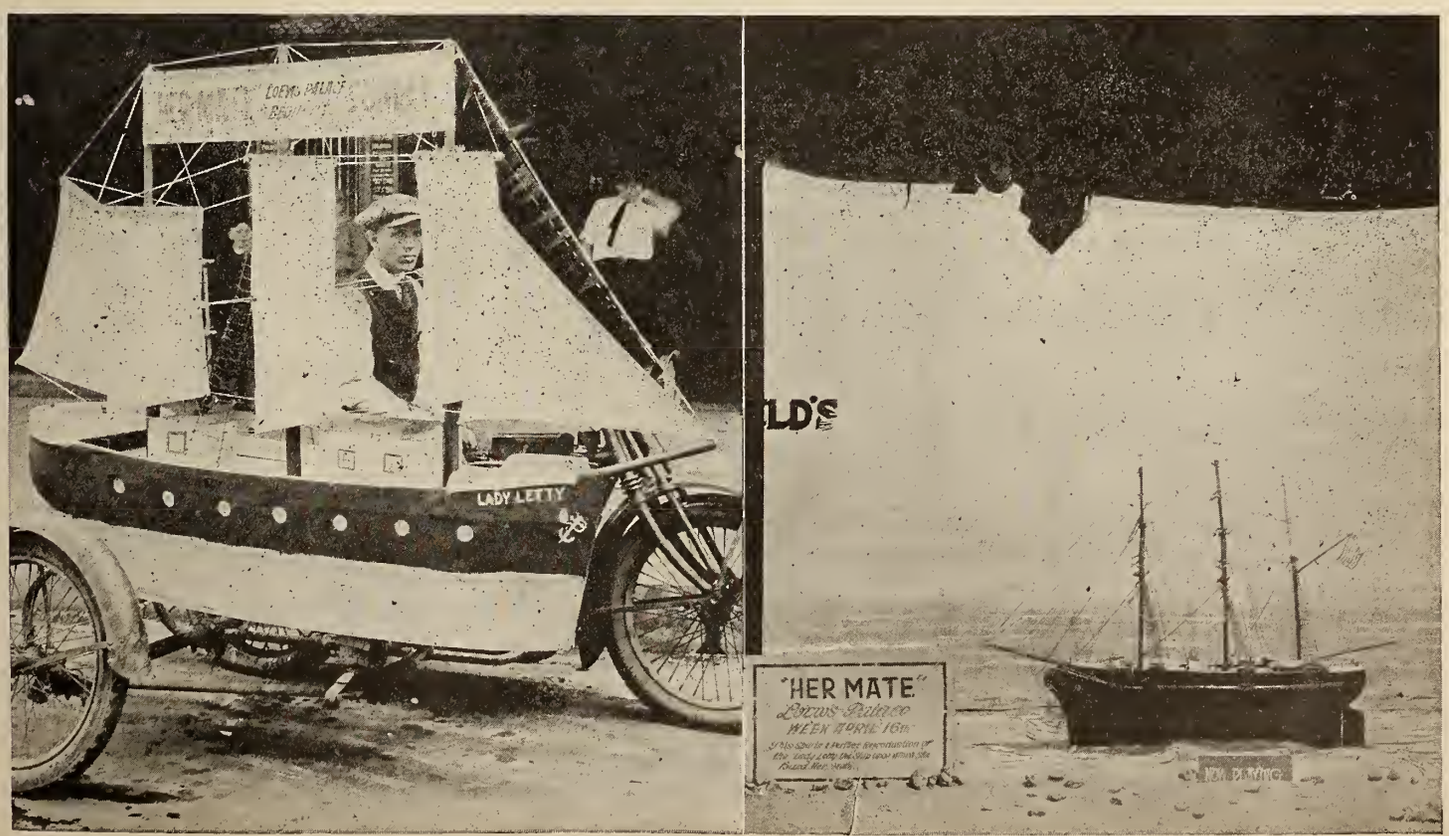
Mr. Brannon's company will distribute the fifteen episode serial in Georgia, Florida, Alabama, North and South Carolina and Tennessee.

The immense billboard shown above was put up in Times Square, on Broadway, New York City, by Paul Gray, the Jackie Coogan exploiteer, as part of a "bring your old clothes" movement tied up with the Daily News.

OUTDOOR STUNTS

That Have a Special Summertime Appeal

The stunts below are appropriate for Summer. The window display shows a whaler in the cool seas while the man in the side car is hitting the breeze for Loew's Palace, Memphis, Tenn., to exploit Paramount's "Her Mate."



Exploitation Contests—Try Them

If You Are Gloomy These May Build Business for You If Anything Will

No. 2—The First Assortment

CAREFUL DRIVING Arrangements can be with almost any Police Department to hold a contest among careful automobile drivers and it is a stunt which appeals to communities where there are many autos. Announcement should be made in the newspapers or by mail or on the screen that the traffic officer who guards the thoroughfare nearest the theatre would award a pair of free passes to the picture you are running to the five most careful automobilists who passed during the specified days. The picture should have some appeal in it to autoists. This stunt has been tried out with success.

ECLIPSE CONTEST Here is a stunt which can be worked with A Connecticut Yankee. Ten thousand small cards were printed bearing this legend. Prizes given away for the first ten correct answers to "What happened at 12.03 (noon) June 20, year 528 A. D.?" Mail answer to Connecticut Yankee ..... Theatre before ..... These cards were mailed to more than 3000 names on a selected list and distributed also by boys who got free tickets for their labor. The superintendent of schools will help. The answer was that on the date mentioned there was a great eclipse of the sun which is capitalized in the picture. This stunt brought many replies.

HOME TALENT AD STUNT Offer your patrons free tickets for the best two newspaper ads prepared by them and when you have selected the prize winning ads run them in your newspaper. You will be surprised at the response and when the ad is printed specify in it that it was prepared by So-and-so and give the address.

CRYPTOGRAPH PUZZLE Cryptographs are secret codes used by the old Egyptians long before radio came into existence. It is a fascinating sport. In an issue of your house organ or on a slide on your screen, or a line in your program offer prizes to patrons who correctly decipher this cryptogram "Oga Hmpue?" The first five correct replies should be awarded with passes. The correct answer was Quo Vadis solved in this way: A code alphabet is first written and then a second alphabet, the "A" of which was placed under the code letter "O" and the remaining letters in regular sequence. Be careful of this stunt because many young people are familiar with the secrets of cryptograms.

AUTOMOBILE LICENSES Publish in your local papers, or on your screen, various local automobile license numbers and announce that the owners of the license numbers displayed will be rewarded with two good seats to a specified performance. The owner of the car is required to show his license number and card at the box office. The number is changed daily and it is a good stunt to work in the summer when you have a picture on like Wallace Reid's automobile adventure pictures.

POSTER CONTEST Announce that you are offering $10 or season's passes to local artists who get up the best poster on pictures you are showing. The schools will co-operate and select a committee of local business men and women to sit in judgment. Hold the judging on the stage. You will get newspaper co-operation too and a good collection of posters. Put all the posters in your lobby and give a local talent art exhibit. It will certainly arouse interest in your house and the poster art.

EXPERIENCE CONTEST People you meet everyday of your life are always anxious to tell you the sad story of their lives. Well, let them tell their sad stories if it will help you and your business. Every once in a while a picture with titles like The Wonderful Thing or What Will Women Do get your club women to send in their own experiences as to what is the most wonderful thing or what will most women do. It will stir up interest and you can reproduce short excerpts on your screen on home made slides. This stunt has worked successfully in many places.

MISSPELLED WORDS This is by no means a new stunt but it always works. Get your local merchants to tie up on a co-operative advertising stunt and in each add misspell a word. To the ten winners who send in correct list give away passes. Any newspaper will co-operate with publicity especially if you can so arrange the stunt as to have the misspelled words appear in the classified ad columns. Newspapers are always trying to boost the classified pages.

DANCING CONTEST Stage a dancing contest for the kiddies one night each week, giving a prize for the best dancers. Follow this on one night during the month, with an elimination contest and award a grand prize. This will stimulate interest among the kids who will bring out the grown folks to see them perform. It has been used to good advantage many a time.

DRESS ESSAY Offer a prize for the best essay on how low a woman's evening dress may be cut before it borders on indecency. This will arouse interest for and against, among the women, and if deftly handled will result in a good deal of newspaper publicity.

BIRTHDAY PRESENT Go to the city or county official, who has charge of birth registrations and secure a list of all of the recent births, then arrange with one of the leading furniture stores to arrange a window full of cradles, carriages, perambulators and hammocks, all of them being occupied by a life-size doll. Name each one of the dolls after a newly-born baby and attach a card bearing the name. Put a full size card in the window announcing that free seats are at your theatre for the parents visiting the store and finding their baby's name in the window. The same announcement should be made in the newspaper.

HOOK-UP CONTEST Work up a co-operative ad with the merchants in your town, and when you have sufficient interested, put a picture of one of the movie stars in each ad and get the public to vote on which one is their favorite. Require the contestants to clip the coupon, and tell in not more than fifty words, why this star is their favorite. The judging could probably be handled best with a local newspaper, as it will be the means of getting them more subscribers. The results of such a contest will give you a line on which stars are the most popular, and would be a fairly good guide in booking pictures.

SINGING TEST Pick out the poorest day in the week, and advertise a kid's singing contest. Give us a prize, a box of candy, to the kid receiving the greatest amount of applause. By awarding the prize in that manner, you let the audience act as a judge, and it will not be as likely to cause hard feeling, as it would, if you have judges on the stage. The other kids competing in the contest should be given some little momento for participating.

KITE FLYING CAMPAIGN While this is not the right season for kite flying, still a good contest with a big advertising angle can be staged with one. Arrange to have a children's matinée, and the day before, hold the contest under the auspices of some club. Each kid who flies a kite should be given a free ticket to the show, if he brings his kite with him. At the matinée award prizes for the altitude of the flight and novelty of the kite design. The advertising slant will come from the racket the kids raise in making their kites out of season. Questions will be asked, and the answer will include the name of your theatre.

BABY CONTEST Here's a contest that can be used, but you must handle it with gloves, otherwise the effect will be just the reverse of what you are trying to obtain. Tie up with the "Better Babies" movement and arrange for a baby show, giving a prize to the baby that is judged, by specialists as being the most perfect. Divide the entries into six classes, one for girls under certain ages, one for boys under certain ages; one for girls over one age and up to another; one for boys the same way; the last classes have them over a certain age. This will probably arouse a great deal of interest, but be very careful who you pick for judges, or you may bite off more than you can chew in the way of angry mothers, whose kids did not get a prize. Have your contest foolproof.

Exploiting Non-Tax Music Numbers

Theatre Owners Supporting Publishers Who Are Not Asking Tax

Theatre owners who have learned the importance of exploiting music with pictures are now killing two birds with one stone by exploiting "Romany Love," a new musical number, published by the Sam Fox Publishing Co., publishers of non-tax music. In this way they help a non-tax firm and get a good musical number.

At theatres where they do not go to the expense of singers and where the orchestra is the big feature, a beautiful drop can be made showing a gypsy scene and, with the proper lighting effect, make an artistic background for the performance of the overture—using such a number as "The Fortune Teller," "Bohemian Girl," or a similar number, with "Romany Love" as the encore. Announcement of the titles can be flashed on the screen or printed in the program if they have them.

The song can be put on by the organist with slides in a very effective manner.

Instead of the organist playing the song with the slides, the orchestra can do so.

The song can be beautifully staged with singers, showing a gypsy camp and having two principals sing the song. One of the principals could be a violinist and play an obbligato to the voice.

The song could be done as a solo number, supported by a singing chorus in the finale.

It can be put on with a male quartet or mixed quartet in costume.

It can also be sung as a solo number and then the orchestra can pick it up in fox trot tempo, played as a dance number.

"Romany Love" can be put on in an act with other material in keeping with the gypsy atmosphere—a regular gypsy scene—and several people in the cast.

It can be included in a review or follies, as a special number.

The words of "Romany Love" are susceptible of exploitation:

The gyspy camp is at rest,
The moon is high in the West,
The voice of love is softly calling;
In your dear eyes I can see
Sweet dreams of love's mystery,
You fill my heart with melody.

Refrain

Romany Love, Romany Love
My heart's afire all for you.
Nestle close with your wondrous charms,
Rest in my loving arms.
For the light of your smile
Makes life worth while,
Always for you I pine,
Romany Love, I want you,
Romany Love, be mine.

The stars grow pale in the sky,
'Tis time to kiss you good-bye.
The breezes sigh because I leave you;
But when one more day is through,
I'll still be longing for you,
Until my golden dream comes true.

Daring Stunt

One of the most daring and unusual street stunts St. Louis has ever seen was arranged by Frank Leonard, Equity exploitation man, to aid the run of Where Is My Wandering Boy at the Fox Liberty theatre in that city. Leonard arranged a stunt that blocked traffic during the noon hour in St. Louis' principal business street and which collected a crowd of such proportions that for a time it appeared as if a riot might develop.

After considerable diplomacy, Leonard succeeded in convincing police authorities that no harm would result from allowing a man in convict garb to run through Olive street shortly after noon. This man was to run at top speed and men and women stationed along the route were to raise the cry of "escaped convict" as soon as he got under way. At the end of the run he was to be "captured" by two girls, also in the employ of the exploiteer, and dragged to the huge truck which had been advertising Where Is My Wandering Boy?, through the streets of St. Louis.

Everything went off as arranged. The "convict" alighted from a taxi, and at a given signal started down the street. Immediately the excitement started. The cry was raised along the line and by the time the runner had reached the girls by whom he was to be captured, the police had found it necessary to divert all traffic. The crowd became so great that it was only with the greatest difficulty that the "convict" was taken before the huge truck carrying the banner. Thousands were crowding on all sides and it was twenty minutes before the truck was able to move. During all this time the piano on the truck was playing and the girls were singing, "Where Is My Wandering Boy" as well as popular songs.

The stunt created excitement throughout the entire business section of St. Louis and was a topic of conversation during the remainder of the day. Everyone knew before the end of the business day that the "convict" had been advertising the motion picture, Where Is My Wandering Boy. On the following day the newspapers carried stories of the "escape" and "capture."

Doughnuts

George Rea, who broke all records for exploiting My Boy has established another precedent by stringing Love and Doughnuts across the wash line in front of his theatre. A dicker was arranged with the village baker and the wash line became a matter of reality. A cutout of Billy Bevan with the ostrich was in the property room. Rea used this, cut out Billy and inserted Ben Turpin, with his bag of doughnuts; on top of the ostrich was a doughnut for a boutonniere. The baker did a big doughnut business and Rea cashed in on Love and Doughnuts.

Using the Other Man's Window

A Helpful Tie Up From Which No Backfire Comes

A THEATRE cannot use its own windows for special displays because, as a rule, they have no windows. That's simple enough.

It's simple enough too to get your local merchant to tie up on a window display because it's very difficult for the average merchant to get enough outside color to attract attention to his goods alone. A little card about your theatre and the picture is all you need to get the benefit of a display but be sure you have the card which should bear the title of the picture, name of theatre and date line.

The selection of windows is important. Recently we went to Hartford, Conn., to see what was ballyhooed to us as a smart bit of window tieups. We got into a machine and were driven onto the side streets. We saw the window displays but they were on side streets. The best windows had been overlooked. We mean by best windows, those on prominent streets, particularly corners.

Is the average big department store manager willing to tie up for his best windows? We can best answer that by saying that recently four of the best windows in Marshall Field's, Chicago, were devoted to tie ups. One window showed Penrod school clothes, another Molly O hats and another had an assortment of articles usually purchased or used on Saturday night.

The proper approach to make to a merchant when you ask for the use of his window is to tell him of the advantages a little sprinkling of pretty lobby cards and photographs will make. Ordinary goods placed in a window are not novel enough to attract a great deal of attention, but a personality such as a star's photograph or a photo of a big scene from the picture will serve as an invitation to look.

Candy stores are quick to see the value of tie ups as witness the photos on this page. Any local candy man can select a chocolate candy, give it a name such as "Wild Honey" or "Smilin' Through" or Molly O and push its sales through window displays.

Likewise the men's furnishing goods stores, the milliners and dozens of other merchants can take some one line of goods off their shelves, tack a picture title on to them and make up a fine display.

Drug Store Tie-ups

The advantages of knowing the story of a picture—for exploitation purposes—was again demonstrated when the First National attraction, Polly of the Follies, played at the Kinema Theatre, Los Angeles. The house was familiar with the comedy stunt by which Constance Talmadge, in her home-made movie in the film, uses card advertisements to illustrate the titles of her domestic picture. Benefiting by this knowledge the theatre gained a tie-up with the Owl Drug Store, at one of the most prominent street intersections on the picture. The display featured a standard make of nail beautifier, which formed the basis for the comedy title.

Cradle Stunt

The hand that rocked the cradle did so at a cost of $14.50 and increased business $100 in the Imperial Theatre, Jacksonville, Florida. Very few pictures fail to get exploitation of some kind from Manager Richmond Dorman, of the Imperial, and this stunt was so simple that a child can operate. He had a huge cradle made from beaverboard and painted white. This was suspended about 30 feet above the marquise and swung back and forth. At night it was illuminated and could be seen for many blocks. Cards with snappy lines were strung from the edge of the marquise and were of various colors. They attracted much attention and mirth.

When Personal Appearances Pay

A Shopping Tour of Your Home Town Stores Is Used Advantageously

THERE are as many theatre owners for personal appearances of screen stars as there are against them. Thus, the question as to whether they are always successful is undecided. For some they work; for others they fizzle and as a personal appearance sometimes involves an extra cost those who have tried them without success are vociferous in condemning them.

It appears, however, from photographic and documentary evidence that Marc Lachmann, Universal exploiteer, demonstrated box office strength of personal appearances during a recent showing of Foolish Wives at the Goodwin Theatre, Newark, N. J.

Not being occupied at the time Maude George, who has an important part in the picture, consented to make personal appearances in the city. Her appearance on the stage was but a minor consideration while her daily appearance in the stores, public offices and prominent spots around the city aroused interest outside of the box office and certainly let the town know that there was a picture at the Goodwin and that it had a group of fine actors and actresses in it.

The shopping tour feature caused the local merchants to eagerly consent to advertise that Miss George would appear in their stores. The announcement that she would visit the Mayor and public officials got free space in the newspapers but the most advantageous advertising was that of the star's appearance among the shopping crowds. They followed her through the streets; they congregated around her in the stores and whenever she made a purchase her admirers made similar purchases.

The talk it caused was without limit. Folks who attend the picture shows are always comparing notes about the actors. They wonder if their hair is real; what is the color of their eyes and so forth and so on without end. Having these questions in mind they seek the closest views of the star in the flesh when the opportunity presents itself.

A male star can well be used on shopping tours. We recall a most successful shopping tour conducted by Lew Cody in Cleveland. He not only went through all the shops but he wrote an account of his daily experiences for one of the big dailies. He made many purchases but, in the parlance of the game "he returned these purchases with thanks."

Merely appearing at each performance does not always turn the trick. Big stars of course draw crowds but big stars are expensive and not always available and when a lesser light of the screen comes along a little pulmotor treatment like a shopping tour helps out.

Incidentally it lays the foundation for a better acquaintance with your local merchant who is beginning to look upon the motion picture theatre with the same eager interest that he looks upon the daily newspapers.

Unusual Lanterns

Improvised lanterns made of window cards for Fox's Over the Hill and Queen of Sheba were use dto great advantage by the management of the Egypt Theatre, Fort Worth, Tex., during runs of these productions.

By using four window cards the lettering on which had been cut out, shaping them into box formation, and touching them off with paper tassel work, a unique lantern was obtained. Electric bulbs were placed within, and the light shone out through the apertures of the letters. These lanterns were hung in windows and at street corners about Fort Worth, and attracted much attention.

Profiting by the unusually large type in the twenty-four sheets of First National's "Cabiria," the manager of the Modjeska, Milwaukee, spread it across the top of the lobby so it would be visible some distance away. The other decorations consisted of six and three sheets mounted in large frames.

Some Oriental atmosphere was obtained by the Tower, St. Paul, Minn., for Vitagraph's "The Shiek's Wife" by dressing the attendants in Oriental costumes. Imagine the feeling of having a quaintly veiled usherette lead you to a seat? No matter how tough the hide may be, it will get under it every time.

The fact that the hero of Universal's "Tracked to Earth" was a railroad official led Manager Hearne of the Kinema, Salt Lake City, to devise this lobby. The cut-out of the engine was the most expensive thing about it, the lanterns, flags and other paraphernalia being borrowed from a local railroad.

Kodak Window

A Paducah, Ky., drug store perceived that the public was tired of seeing cameras advertised by snap shots of mountain creeks, front porches, and babies in diapers.

"What kind of pictures would the public like?" was the question that perplexed the proprietor.

Manager R. C. Davis of the Kozy Theatre chimed in with the answer, "Pictures of moving pictures."

Davis' program was Gloria Swanson in The Great Moment, so he sent for Exploiteer A-Mike Vogel, who brought some especially clear and well-defined production stills from St. Louis.

"Very good," said the drug store manager, "but how are we going to work them in with our kodak displays?"

Vogel showed him. He prepared a large mount for the stills lettered, as follows:

> Miss Gloria Swanson, star of "The Great Moment" showing at the Kozy Theatre, snapped with her favorite camera. Of course it's a Kodak. Paramount Picture.

The manager was reluctant to knock such a good proposition, but being a scrupulous gentleman hesitated. "But she didn't take them herself," he said.

"Say," broke in Davis, "did you ever hear of Barnum?"

"Yep," was the laconic assent of the druggist, as he began to lay out the display of the mount, cameras, and a poster cut-out of Gloria.

Well Done

Ralph Lieber, manager of the Circle Theatre, Indianapolis, Ind., arranged an elaborate presentation with First National's Smilin' Through, and a vocal prologue of a man and woman in the dress of the period of early episode rendered the song to fine effect. The man worked in one in a "spot." Woman is discovered through a scrim drop, as the lights dim up to show her in a scene representing a garden. At the conclusion of the second chorus, the girl vision fades out and the screen is dropped into place as the skrim is raised, while the feature is screened.

Donn McElwaine, Circle publicity director, had been plugging Smilin' Through in his house organ and by announcement in lobby for about sixty days previous to the play date. An organ solo accompanied by hand colored word slides of the song "Smilin' Through" was a part of the Circle program the week previous to the showing. Ten thousand heralds advertising Smilin' Through (the song and record on one side, the attraction, theatre, and play date on the other) were supplied to song shops, phonograph stores, etc., and were wrapped with music and "stuffed" in record envelopes. A head of Norma Talmadge and announcement was on the front page of "Theatre Guide," which is distributed gratis in stores throughout the city, with a circulation of about 10,000. The "original gown" was displayed in a prominent downtown store window with card reading:

> "This gown worn by Miss Talmadge in the filming of 'Smilin' Through,' now playing at the Circle, while a small bisque boudoir lamp doll was dressed in a dress copied from the large one and displayed in the Circle Theatre lobby, carrying a credit announcement for the merchant — saying replica of gown worn by Miss Talmadge in Smilin' Through, original now being displayed in his window. About ten downtown store windows displayed songs, records, rolls, and they were set off by appropriate settings built by the Circle art staff, representative of the "gates" in the fence in Smilin' Through. About two dozen handpainted window cards with a head of Norma and an announcement were placed in downtown stores, getting a flash that would have been impossible with any ordinary window card. The song "Smilin' Through" was broadcasted several evenings by a woman singer from Hatfield Radio Station.

A room nearby was rented, and ten telephones were installed with ten girls who called numbers in the directory, announcing the new policy at the Circle and the presentation of Norma Talmadge in Smilin' Through.

For the opening day, prominent city and state officials were invited to attend. Monday many members of the various women's clubs attended also the Indiana Indorsers of Photoplays, invitational letters having been sent out in advance to the officers.

Here's an illustration of what can be done in the way of window dressing with nothing but cut-outs. Arranged by the Empress Theatre, Lansing, Mich., for United Artists' "Orphans of the Storm," it consisted of two small frames, two one-sheets and a few cards. The window had a crowd before it all the time.

Feather Throwaways

The throwaway lived up to the significance of its name in the exploitation stunt of the Lyric Theatre, Cincinnati, during a recent engagement of Fox's Shame.

Five thousand white feathers, six inches in length, and attached at the point of the quill to a burdock, were imprinted with the message:

"William Fox presents 'Shame'—Lyric Theatre."

The feathers when thrown at woolen and fibrous garments would cling tightly. A hundred boys, each paid with free tickets, were employed to throw away the throwaways. Each was stationed at a busy corner of the city and hurled the little feathery spears at all passers-by. Not only was the stunt original but the people who were "attacked" on the streets were well pleased with the little souvenirs which they tore from their coat-sleeves and trouser fronts.

Peter Dennis, manager of the Minerva, Pittsburgh, Pa., put one over on the Smoky City when he added to its smoke by placing a smoking Moloch in the lobby of his theatre for First National's "Cabiria." The great god emitted fire and smoke from the cavity in its mid-section at the discretion of the manager. It created talk, all right

Road Map

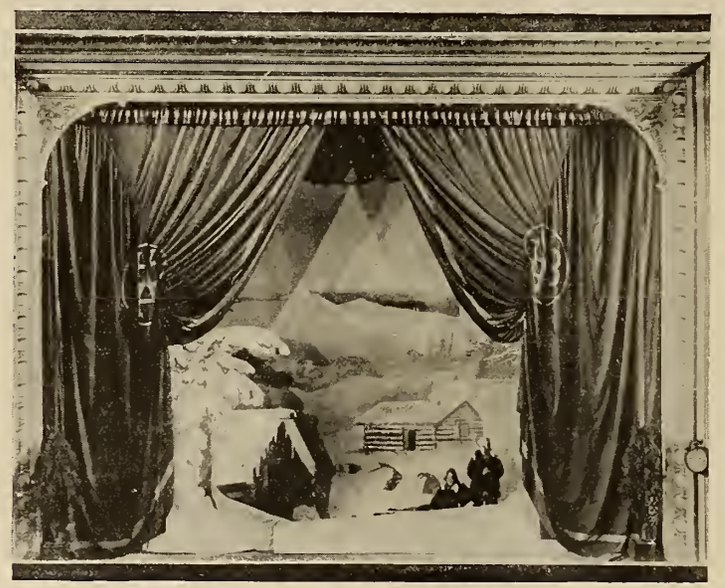
An ingenious method of exploiting Goldwyn's Dangerous Curve Ahead was devised by Manager McNeill of the Breezy Point Library, Charlotte, Vt., when he showed that film recently.

He drew an elaborate road map called "Road Map for Dangerous Curve Ahead," typed underneath it a paragraph about the photoplay and another devoted to the music, admission charge, etc., and had the whole thing run off on a mimeograph. These mimeographed heralds or dodgers were distributed in various stores, in the library, at the box office and other points of vantage. The device won much attention for the film and it did a remarkably good business.

On the road map, which crossed a branch of Happy River, were marked the various stages in the early section of the matrimonial road, such as Daily Divorce, Expense, Loneliness, First Baby, Bills, Old Lover and Lure of Society. McNeill reaped an excellent harvest in coin of the realm from using this mimeographed herald.

Manager Rea of the Forum, Hillsboro, Ohio, put a sign on this irregular brick wall informing prospective purchasers that it was a sample of Charlie Chaplin's work in First National's "Pay Day." It may not speak very well for Charlie's ability as a bricklayer, but it sure did speak for its own ability to draw a crowd. It did it.

The People's Theatre, Portland, Ore., achieved a very presentable lobby for United Artists' "Orphans of the Storm," at a minimum cost by judicious use of posters and cut-outs. The twenty-four sheet is mounted against the rear wall of this wide but shallow lobby, with two cut-outs flanking it.



This prologue was used in far-off Hobart, Tasmania for First National's "The Golden Snare," by George W. Hislop, manager of the Strand Theatre, who not only manages the theatre, but paints, designs and erects his displays, then writes his orchestra parts as a side line.

A close-up of some of the cut-outs used in decorating the lobby of the People's Theatre, Portland, Ore., for United Artists' "Orphans of the Storm," showing how they were arranged at the left of the box office so as to be easily seen from the street.

Four-Corner Tieup

George Carpenter of the Paramount-Empress Theatre, Salt Lake City, got behind Is Matrimony a Failure in a four-cornered tie-up that made it impossible for anybody to overlook the picture.

The court-house records in Salt Lake City, Farmington, and Bountiful—adjoining county seats—showed that cupid had been busy these last few months so the Paramount-Empress came across with a newspaper ad offering a pair of seats to every couple married in April. Instead of making the recipients call at the theatre for their tickets; Carpenter brought the Deseret News, one of the towns largest newspapers, in on the stunt to give free publicity and distribute the passes.

If a couple had not been married in any of the three counties they could still have the tickets if they presented their marriage licenses. "So these newlyweds could not go wrong." Carpenter tied up fourteen merchants for co-operative ads presenting their wares to the couples under the captions,

"Buy From Us So Matrimony Will Not Be a Failure."

Carpenter didn't stop here either. He went to the local advertising club and got them to offer a silver loving cup to the firm arranging the best co-operative window display for the picture. The winning window was photographed for the Deseret News and the stunt stimulated the same fourteen merchants to give their most important display to the theatre.

Prosperity Campaign

Youngstown, Ohio, had been bemoaning the hard times, until the Chamber of Commerce informed the town that "Prosperity Lies Just Around the Corner." You could have supplemented it with, "If You Believe It, It's So."

But the C. of C. didn't get the inspiration, until Manager Deibel of the Liberty Theatre, sold them the idea in conjunction with his program which was Just Around the Corner. The campaign ran every day for a week before the picture opened.

The Chamber of Commerce, like the theatre owner wasn't keen on spending money so they simply made the merchants pay for it. Each day one of the prominent stores took a full page and worked the title in conspicuously. The best ad of the bunch came from a department store, which reproduced newspaper clippings which pointed to the better business conditions.

Book Tie-up

Because it was a principle to take advantage of every possible exploitation angle, Manager Frank Miller of the Modjeska Theatre, Augusta, Ga., arranged with his local book dealer to send a rush order in for copies of Andrew Soutar's One Principle. This is the book from which Norma Talmadge's First National attraction, Love's Redemption, was adapted. The copies arrived in time for the showing of the picture at the Modjeska and an effective window tie-up was arranged. To the best information available this is the first time this book tie-up has been used.

Lucky It Rained

Manager J. H. Welborn of the Aiken Theatre, Aiken, S. C., feels that all the lucky gods were hot on his trail when he played Dinty for a two-day run.

The Aiken Theatre, cleaned up, painted up, refurnished with new equipment was all ready to open, First National's Dinty had been booked for Friday and Saturday. And it had been announced that James Cox was to speak in the Court House square Saturday afternoon, Ty Cobb was going to bring over his gang of wild Detroit ball-players for a big exhibition game, that same afternoon, and the society folk were going to have a polo game. The lame, the halt and the blind seemed about the only ones Manager Welborn could count on to see Dinty that afternoon.

He hired an Augusta newsboy whose raucous voice and caustic humor have made him a byword in both Aiken and Augusta. This young scamp, disguised as "Dinty" and carrying under his arm a bundle of Aiken and Augusta papers with the red letters across the face, "See Dinty —Aiken Theatre To-day," he was ordered to "circulate among the crowd" and at least let 'em know that there was an Aiken Theatre!

And then it rained! And spoiled the polo field, and the baseball diamond—and the wind blew a perfect gale, and a man like "Jimmy" Cox couldn't be expected to speak out in the rain, even if the loyal Aiken folk hadn't been willing to stand in the rain to hear him.

So, to make a long story short, the pseudo-"Dinty" insisted that they could all come over to the "opry house" and see that picture—and Manager Welborn telephoned the Mayor, assuring him that he would be delighted to have "the speakin' " take place at the theatre—and so the whole show was switched to Manager Welborn's theatre, and he played to a literally jammed house!

Bath Tubs

H. A. Gillespie of the Liberty Theatre, Yakima, Wash., got all the lobby flash necessary for Saturday Night by installing two bath tubs in front of the theatre on the curb. A sign on each read:

"This is 'Saturday Night.' "

They were borrowed from a local plumbing house which didn't mind doing the favor at all. A cut-out from a Paramount six-sheet mounted and also placed on the curb helped the profitable run along.

Visiting Cards

A neat calling card can be simulated by little hand presses to be found on the main streets of most cities, and cost around fifty cents a hundred. The Golem, recognizable as the hero of a rather well-known story, had 3500 printed and proceeded to visit as many residences of Harrisburg, Pa.

The cards also seemed to have this little pen and ink notation on them:

Dropped in to see you but you were out.
See me at the Regent Theatre, Monday.

Manager Peter Magrao said the whole stunt cost him about $7 and the opening which greeted The Golem showed that it was effective.

The psychology of folks falling for a tropical moon was proven by H. B. Clarke, manager of the Majestic, Memphis Tennessee, when he arranged this display for First National's "Loves Redemption." They "fell" in the theatre in big league style during Holy Week, and Clarke says that the moon did it.

A window in Huntington, W. Va., that helped to put United Artists' "Orphans of the Storm" over in big style at tbe Hippodrome.

Louis St. Pierre, managing director of Fisher's Majestic, introduced Paramount's "Moran of the Lady Letty" with a prologue, utilizing a ship scene and a singer dressed in sailor's costume.

In one of the most prominent and exclusive stores in Memphis, Tennessee, this window display for First National's "Hail the Woman" did not cost Manager Morrison of Loew's Palace a cent. Everything in it was borrowed, and the window dresser of the store fixed it up. It is a good illustration of what a little diplomacy can do in the way of obtaining choice locations and good displays at no cost.

Cleaning the Capitol Theatre

How Over One Hundred Thousand Square Feet of Surface Is Cleaned Daily in New York's Largest Theatre

By John Matthews, House Manager,
Capitol Theatre, New York City.

ONE of the most important phases of managing a theatre and one that is often neglected, is that of keeping the house scrupulously clean. In fact, the failure of some theatres to maintain their popularity after being operated for a length of time can be traced directly to this lack of properly cleaning and disinfecting the house. A lady soiling a pair of white gloves or some part of her dress on a dirty railing or panel, will not forget it soon. And that is not the only thing about it either. She will take particular pains to tell all of her friends and they will tell their friends, probably adding a little each time it is told, until the box office soon begins to feel the effect of those dirty gloves or soiled dress. When that starts, then it is only a short time until the popularity of the theatre drops to zero, and the management begins to wonder what is the cause.

When a theatre's popularity is once lost through a lack of cleanliness, it is a heartbreaking undertaking to regain it, if it can be regained. Even after the management has been changed and a large sum of money spent in redecorating the interior and advertising the fact, the public remains leary as to whether the house will be kept clean or not, hesitating about patronizing one that has had the reputation of being neglected. And it is much easier and cheaper in the long run to keep a theatre clean from the beginning than it is to try and build up business after dirt has driven it away.

Another thing, too, that detracts nearly as much from the neat appearance of a theatre as dirt, is burned out electric light globes. They are quickly recognized by the theatre-going public as one of the signs of carelessness and neglect in cleaning. A new globe only costs a few cents; a burned out globe will frequently cost several dollars at the box office, if it is not quickly replaced.

We start cleaning the Capitol after the last show at night by turning up every seat in the orchestra and balcony. At 6 o'clock in the morning the cleaning force, consisting of twelve porters and thirteen scrub women, come on duty, and by 12 o'clock, 30 minutes before opening time, the house is thoroughly cleaned and inspected.

A vacuum cleaner is used in cleaning the carpets and draperies, about 5000 square yards, and the upholstering on the divan seats. This work is done by the scrub women, and any torn or badly worn places in the carpets or upholstering are promptly reported to the chief porter, who has them repaired before the house opens. These women also report any seats that are in need of repairs.

While the women are cleaning the orchestra and balcony, the men are working in the lobby, promenade, toilets and retiring rooms. This is the hardest portion of the house to clean, as there has not yet been a machine invented that will take the place of "elbow grease" in cleaning marble, tiling, woodwork, glass and brass railings. Soap powder and water, backed by a mop in the hands of a strong man, are used to clean the six thousand square feet of tiling every day. The marble work, nearly five thousand square feet, is cleaned with Surgent powder, and lemon oil is used in cleaning the fifty thousand square feet of walnut woodwork. These men also clean and polish six hundred square feet of bronze doors, one thousand lineal feet of brass railing, one thousand square feet of leaded glass and twenty-five hundred square feet of plate glass mirrors. All of this is done by hand every day, and any of the woodwork that becomes scratched or bruised is immediately touched up with paint, so the house will always present a fresh appearance.

During hot or warm weather we are very careful to keep the "human smell" at a minimum in the Capitol. No matter how well a house is ventilated, and we have one of the most elaborate systems money can buy, this odor will come up occasionally, especially when a house is crowded. To offset it, we use a perfumed disinfectant at stated intervals all through the showings, which is sprayed in front of certain ventilating grills by one of the porters, and the incoming air distributes it throughout the house without its being noticed by the patrons. In that way we are never troubled with "human smell," even when the house is packed and jammed on a hot day.

Will Supply Blue Prints on Booth Ventilation

In order to co-operate with exhibitors to the fullest extent in the campaign for better ventilation of projection booths, the executive board of Moving Picture Machine Operators, Local 306, collaborating with J. C. Rybicki of the New York Board of Health and Commission on Industrial Hygiene, will supply blueprints, indicating practical and inexpensive systems of booth ventilation, which are adaptable to conditions which exist in the average projection booth.

The blueprint was evolved following an inspection of projection booths in many of the theatres of Greater New York.

Get Perfect Light and a Perfect Dissolve at Less Cost With

TransVerteR

The Standard M-G Set of the Motion Picture Industry

TRANSVERTER (double arc type), furnishes two perfect arcs in series simultaneously, each of the same amperage and light value—and in striking the second arc the one showing is not disturbed in the slightest degree. This gives a perfect dissolve.

And, throughout the whole operation the automatic voltage control maintains constant amperage without the use of wasteful resistance, which, of course, means less heat in the booth and less maintenance and operating cost than any other device.

These are but a few of many TransVerteR features that contribute to the successful operation of motion picture theaters.

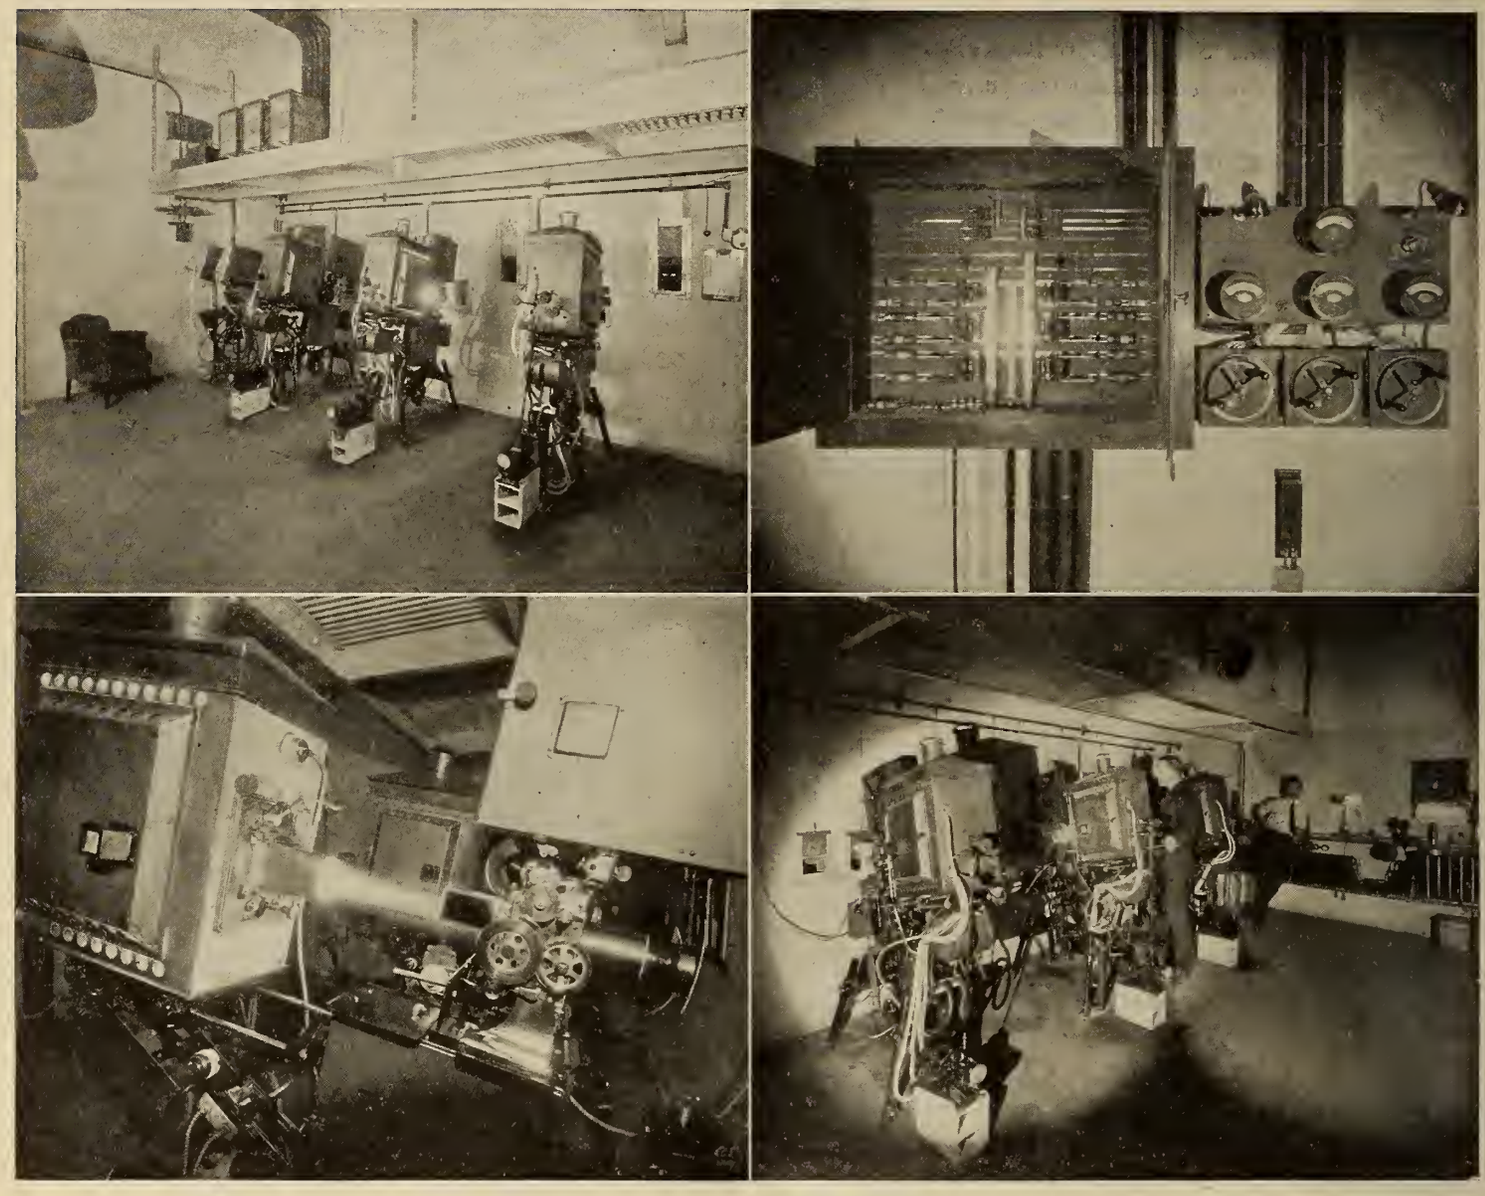
Close Ups of Allen Projection Room



F. A. De Nol, chief projectionist of the Allen Theatre, Cleveland, O., is shown in his shirt sleeves in the lower right hand picture. He says he prefers the Powers (and he runs three of them) because the mechanism is open and he can always see what is doing; the intermittent is much faster than any other on the market and because Powers service is unexcelled. He has operated Powers for fourteen years and has also run all the other makes. The other equipment consists of Snaplite Lenses, two Kleigl spots, three Fulco speed controls, two Fulco film containers, one Powers re-wind. Three rheostats shown in position in the upper left, three ammeters and voltmeter were furnished by Cleveland manufacturers.

The Capitol Theatre, Pittsfield, Mass., the most beautiful theatre in the Berkshire region, opened Wednesday, April 28th. A three-manual Marr & Colton concert organ is used exclusively for the musical program. Mr. Grierson presided at the console. The new Rivoli, Syracuse's newest motion picture theatre, opened on Friday, April 28th. Many compliments were received by Fitzer on his beautiful new theatre. No expense has been spared to make this one of the leading motion picture theatres of Central New York. A two-manual Marr & Colton concert organ, presided over by Mr. Paddock of Rochester, N. Y., was used effectively for the musical program.

The new Family Theatre has opened in Lackawanna, N. Y. L. R. Lipowitz is the owner. The capacity is 450. Two Simplex machines have been installed by the Becker Theatre Supply Co. of Buffalo. There will be a daily change of program.

A luncheon and get-together meeting of the Northwest Film Board of Trade was held recently at the New Washington Hotel and was voted one of the best meetings the board has ever had from the point of enthusiasm and co-operation. Forty salesmen, bookers and association managers were present, and none failed to respond when called upon to express his ideas and give the rest present the value of his opinions. It has done much for the good of the industry since its organization about seven years ago. Portland, Spokane and Butte have auxiliaries, and the Seattle board is associated with similar units in San Francisco, Los Angeles, Minneapolis, Salt Lake and Denver.

What Is a Theatre Organ?

By T. J. A. Mapp

Mr. T. J. A. Mapp, one of Chicago's leading organists, is writing this series of articles on the Theatre Organ. He has played for six years in some of the leading houses in the country, and his musical accompaniments to the pictures are models of synchronization and artistic taste.

In my last article I referred to the unit-orchestra type of organ, and before proceeding to discuss the two main requirements of a theatre organ, I will describe what a unit orchestra is.

It is a single instrument containing the foundation tone of the church organ, and also sets of pipes more or less approximating the tone of most of the instruments in the orchestra. If we analyze the unit orchestra, we find we have six main divisions, as follows:

Organ Tone—1. Diapasons and flutes—vox humana and oboe horn.
Orchestral— 2. Strings (violins, 'cellos, bass).
" 3. Wood wind (flutes and tibias, clarinet, oboe).
" 4. Brass (cornet and trombone (tuba) trumpet and horn).
" 5. Percussion (drums, cymbals, tympani, harp, chimes, glockenspiel, xylophone, etc.)
" 6. The numerous combinations of stops possible, including use of Kinura for comedy effects.

When properly played, it is found that this instrument blends perfectly with the orchestra, and when relieving the latter, it is hard for an audience to tell just where the orchestra leaves off and the organ begins playing. During those hours when the orchestra is not playing, too, the unit orchestra takes care of the show in a real way.

Now we come to the first and most important requirement of the theatre organ, viz., its effectiveness in suitably accompanying motion pictures. Seeing that the various tone colors approximate those of the different instruments in the orchestra, it will be seen that the various moods, love, joy, sorrow, fear, mysterious, agitated, etc., can be properly registered with the right tonal effect. Besides the tone of the orchestral instruments, there is the vox humana which always has a fine pathetic appeal, the full rich tones of the diapason, the pleasing solo oboe horn, and the very many combinations of stops possible which can be adapted to any mood.

I want to say something now about the drums, cymbals, and other percussion instruments. Yes, it is better to have them on the unit orchestral organ, or any theatre organ. Those who disagree have probably had a bad experience with an organist who did not know how to use them. They must, of course, be used sparingly, but when properly used are most effective. Take an anger or small fight scene and while playing agitato, add a roll or two on the tympani (bass drum roll) just at the psychological moment, and the effect is put over more forcibly. For scenes of great excitement, i. e., big fights, riots, etc., the tympani drum heightens the dramatic effect, and for fire scenes the cymbal roll (only appearing on the Smith Unit Orchestra) is wonderfully effective with full orchestral tone accompaniment.

It is essential, too, to give the correct atmosphere to characteristic scenes, and for this purpose we have the real cymbal for oriental, chimes for religious, tambourines and castanets for Spanish, tom tom for Indian and oriental scenes, etc., etc.

For processions, marching scenes, races, gallops, etc., the snare and bass drums supply the necessary rhythm, and the effect is much more stirring with than without them.

Later we will deal with the second point to bear in mind in regard to the theatre organ, viz., its entertainment value to the patrons.

It should be understood that some organ builders specialize in church organs, and others in theatre organs. Those that specialize in church organs have developed their business by contact with church organists, who know what they want for religious purposes, but are mostly not conversant with, and also are out of sympathy with theatre requirements in an organ.

It is therefore safer to deal with an organ builder who has progressed along with the needs of theatre work, and it is merely stating now a recognized fact that the greatest advancement in this regard has been made by the Smith Unit Organ Company. Their new three-manual unit orchestra is a delight to all who play and hear it. It has beautiful soft effects, as well as a full body of orchestral and organ tone. The ultra quick action affords opportunity for the most brilliant technique, without blurring, and the several new patented improvements are worth investigating, as they greatly increase its effectiveness in playing for pictures.

Music Every Musician Should Know

Kamennoi-Ostrow—Rubinstein

This piece forms one of the series of portraits from the Album de Portraits, Opus 10. The title—meaning "Stone Island"—requires explanation. It refers to an island in the River Veva near Petrograd upon which is an old monastery famous in Russian history. The piece can be considered to belong to the class of descriptive music; being doubtless an attempt to portray the thoughts and emotions aroused by comtemplation of the great names of the past, their strivings and achievements, in contrast to the present peaceful environment. Rippling water is suggested, and the bells and chants of the monastery are portrayed.

The Musical Appliance Company of Birmingham has recently placed on the market a transposing machine which, though the act of musical transposition is mechanical enough in itself, is valuable to the musician because of the amount of time it saves, many of whom time is essential; in particular composers of orchestra music and leaders of orchestras.

You Can Watch Your Attendance Figures Increase

The box office never fails to reflect the appeal of high-class, appropriate music. The Cremona Orchestra-Organ has proved this as almost no other theatre organ.

A representative attendance "curve" before and after the installation of a Cremona Orchestra-Organ is shown. Note how attendance increased right in July, after the organ was installed.

The Cremona is unsurpassed as a hand-played organ. In addition it provides appropriate, perfectly-toned orchestra numbers. A double roll system permits playing with any standard player roll or solo roll. A varied appropriate program is assured with or without an operator, and your musical overhead is minimum.

Cameraman's Department

Using the Blue Glass

Glen MacWilliams, Coogan Cameraman, Explains Proper Use of Important Device

THE old-fashioned monocle is no longer in style in moving picture circles.

It has been replaced by the "monotone filter" (as it is properly called)—the "blue glass" as it is known on the "set" of every moving picture studio in the country.

Now comes Glen MacWilliams, cameraman for Jackie Coogan's productions in Hollywood, two of which, Peck's Bad Boy and My Boy, have been distributed by First National. Mr. MacWilliams is a young chap.

MacWilliams in this article explains the proper use of this little piece of blue glass.

MacWilliams and Jackie Coogan using the blue glass

"The blue glass," says Mr. MacWilliams, "is so often misused that I feel safe in saying that eight out of every ten men using it are being misguided. Only experienced cameramen realize how mighty this little glass is. The correct use of the blue glass is only to determine color gradations. The blue glass transforms all natural colors into monotones, which means the steps between colors such as blue to grey to white, etc. It does not give light values, however, and here is where so many people are misguided. The blue glass is used to help build up proper contrast of colors so that there will be no sameness, but instead graduation and color values.

"Many directors of long experience and their assistants, and even their cameramen use their blue glass, thinking the scene they perceive through it will appear on the silver screen as it does through the glass itself. This leads to the discussion once more of light values—something that a blue glass does not nor never will give forth.

"It had its birth in the hands of photo engravers, artists and painters. It served to give them their color values. Later the scenic department heads of the studios coralled its service. Then a cameraman saw possibilities for it in his work and introduced it to the camera as another asset added to the many improvements that were then and still are being made to the little boxes with the crank. Later the directors themselves made use of the blue glass.

"A common mistake made by those using the blue glass is thinking, of course, the scene will appear in photographic form as it does to the naked eye through the glass itself. This is wrong. Persons with these thoughts do not stop to consider the fact whether or not they are viewing a set or an object under the proper photographic light. For proper photography, light values must be built up to get the proper effect through the blue glass. The same color gradations are discerned but not the same density. As proof of this, take the blue glass in an ordinary room under an incandescent lamp. It will give every bit of detail value, which is impossible to obtain for photographic purposes with the ordinary motion picture camera operated normally. It is, therefore, necessary to add and add light until the photographic value appears.

In Wardrobe Department

"The wardrobe department is another unit of the studio where a blue glass is of value," says MacWilliams. "The wardrobe mistress can correct her color schemes. For example, take a gown of orchid and white, which looks beautiful to the eye. The orchid is of a soft color and the white dominates it. Then view it through the blue glass. Horrors! Our white goes into a musty grey, because the orchid reflects the ultra-violet rays, and the photograpic result—if it is photographed—is plain white, which, of course, ruins all beautiful color combinations and disappoints everyone when the gown is seen on the screen.

"On the other hand, take a black dress, silk, trimmed with red. The black, of course, appears blacker than the deepest of red, but when viewed through the little blue glass what do we find? A universal color-black!

"The blue glass is a great asset to the cameraman—if used properly. There are various kinds of blue glasses. Correct and incorrect. A correct blue glass will give true color systems under Cooper-Hewitt lighting, whereas an incorrect blue glass will not give the same result as to color values under a like lighting system. There are other blue glasses that will not affect the color red. These are fatal to a cameraman or director. These glasses are more of a purple color and remind me of plain pieces of old bottles.

"There would be less trouble all around if this little blue glass were used on the 'set' for the one and only purpose it was destined for—that of color gradations under the photographic light.

Territory Notes

The Strand Theatre was opened at Wichita Falls, Texas, last Monday to pleased capacity business.

The Liberty Theatre, Angelo Bott owner, at Nuremberg, Pa., has gone on a one day a week schedule for the summer, playing on Saturdays. Nuremberg is in the anthracite strike belt and business is affected accordingly.

Claude Henderson, of the New York Hippodrome staff, has taken a post as manager of the Refowich Theatre at Freeland, Pa. He succeeds Albert Werner, of Reading, who has resigned to locate elsewhere.

The Sunset Theatre, Astoria, Ore., is undergoing extensive repairs. Frank H. Gowdy, the new lessee, plans to spend $15,000 on improvements. He is installing two Type S Simplex projectors, transverters, Gardiner screen, Heywood-Wakefield opera chairs with full upholstered spring seats, Automaticket machine, carpets and draperies. The seating capacity will be about 650. The opening will be early in June. B. F. Shearer, Inc., of Seattle, is furnishing the equipment.

The Eagle Hotel, at Catasauqua, Pa., may be torn down and a motion picture theatre erected on the site. New York men looked over the project and made an offer. It is on the revision of this proposition that the Iron Borough's latest picture theatre project hangs fire, for the owners of the site decline to accept the second mortgage feature of the offer of the promoters.

Oscar Althoff, manager of the Family Theatre at Mahanoy City, Pa., for years, has resigned as manager of the Sult houses at Berwick, Pa., after their sale to the Parke Delahanty interests and has opened a pool room at Mahanoy City. Althoff, who has been in the theatrical business for twenty years, had the breaks dead against him in the shuffle. When he quit as manager at Berwick last winter to go to the Refowich at Freeland, Pa., the Sults held him to his contract. Then the sale took place. Althoff expects to go back into the amusement business again and by an odd coincidence the pool room he has opened as a stop gap is located in the old Franey building, where Mahanoy City's first motion picture theatre was operated years ago.

Ground has been broken at Sixth Street and Minnesota Avenue, Kansas City, Kan., for the erection of a new $25,000 open-air motion picture theatre. Contracts for the construction were closed by Lew Nathanson, president of the Wyandotte Amusement Company. The theatre, which will be roofed and built of steel and seat 3200, will be completed by June 1. It will be named the Minnesota Theatre.

Threats were succeeedd by action at the Majestic and Victoria theatres at Shamokin, Pa., where warnings failed to break up the practice of boys panhandling patrons as they entered the lobbies, seeking to "cadge" their way into the playhouses. Several score have been arrested and taken before the brugess, who is co-operating with the managements of the theatres in breaking up this annoyance.

Hyman Steifel, vice-president of the Steifel Amusement Company of Philadelphia has returned from an eight months' trip abroad. During his stay on the continent he visited various motion picture houses in Roumania, Germany, France and Switzerland, and gave an interesting account of his observations at a welcome home party given to him by fellow exhibitors and exchange men at his home in the Quaker City.

The Voice of the Box Office

How the Latest Releases Are Being Received Throughout the Country

ALBANY

CLINTON SQUARE

"REPORTED MISSING," Owen Moore (Selznick). Although management used plenty of teasers and additional newspaper space, this picture, running for the entire week, did not pan out from a box office standpoint. After the first day the picture attracted only ordinary attention.

"BEYOND THE ROCKS," Gloria Swanson (Paramount). This picture run the entire week and did fine business. The picture was admired for the settings.

MARK STRAND

"SMILIN' THROUGH," Normal Talmadge (First National). Backed by the Albany Chamber of Commerce in exploitation and with extra newspaper space good business was done throughout the week.

ALLENTOWN, PA.

RIALTO

"THE BEAUTIFUL LIAR," Katherine MacDonald (First National). Drew well when summer slump is considered and gave all around satisfaction among patrons.

STRAND

"THE GLORIOUS FOOL," Helene Chadwick and Richard Dix (Goldwyn). Playing up Mary Roberts Reinhart as author helped to increase interest. Business was good.

COLONIAL

"POLLY OF THE FOLLIES," Constance Talmadge (First National). Star popular and business good.

HIPPODROME

"NOBODY," Jewel Carmen (First National). Exploited along lines of honeymoon, yacht trip, dope, loss of memory, frantic husband, etc. Did a lot to bring in good houses.

ATLANTA, GA.

HOWARD

"THE PRODIGAL JUDGE," Maclyn Arbuckle (Vitagraph). Drew poor business. Although abounding in southern atmosphere public did not respond to this picture as expected.

Presentation. — Special dance number by Arthur Murray and Margaret Bryan.

Short Subjects.—Selznick News.

METROPOLITAN

"FAIR LADY," Betty Blythe (United Artists). Business was dull throughout the city, but particularly so at this theatre.

Short Subjects. — Educational comedy, "Monkey Shines." Kinograms.

CRITERION

"ORPHANS OF THE STORM," D. W. Griffith (United Artists). Opened to fairly good business, but did not build up. Fell far below expectations. Management thinks a different handling might have insured success. Film will certainly stand another showing in Atlanta.

Presentation. — Special orchestra using Griffith's original score for the picture.

STRAND

First Half.

"FOOL'S PARADISE," all star cast (Paramount). Unusually good business, especially for a return engagement.

Short Subject.—"The Sap," Billy West comedy.

Last Half.

"THE CLEAN UP," William Fairbanks (Southern States). Was fairly pleasing.

Short Subject. — "The Leather Pushers." The return of this series met with great success.

Exploitation. — 25,000 people attended prize fight on Monday. Had banner 28 feet long raised just before fight announcing the "Leather Pushers" at the Strand last half of week. Distributed 2,000 heralds.

GRAND

First Half.

"WITHOUT FEAR," Pearl White (Fox). Audience delighted with picture and business very good.

Short Subjects. — "Fox News," "Star Comedy," "Gay Deceivers" and "Chester Outing."

Last Half.

"POSSESSION," Special Cast (R-C Pictures). Drew big business.

Short Subjects. — "Mutt and Jeff" and "Sis and Brownie" Comedy.

TUDOR

"SECOND HAND ROSE," Gladys Walton (Universal). A very pleasing presentation, and well suited to the appealing beauty of the star. Business good.

"THE BLOT," Lois Weber (Wid Gunning). Return engagement drawing very favorable business during two-day engagement.

"DANGEROUS LITTLE DEMON," Marie Prevost (Universal). Clever little flapper story, playing to very good business.

RIALTO

"THE CRADLE," Ethel Clayton (Paramount). Business grew steadily during the week. The picture has an exceptionally good cast.

Short Subjects. — The sixth of the Leather Pushers, International News and many fine shots of the Kentucky Derby.

Week ended May 27th.

HOWARD

"NORTH OF THE RIO GRANDE," Jack Holt and Bebe Daniels (Paramount). The theme of the play, combined with the popularity of the two stars, kept receipts for the week up to expectations.

Presentation. — George McNully, well-known tenor, appeared on horseback against a drop which represented a desert, and sang "My Little Grey Home in the West," during which the lights changed from day to darkness, and lights appeared in a little house shown in the distance.

Short Subjects.—"The Fall Guy," Larry Semon, comedy.

METROPOLITAN

"FASCINATION," Mae Murray (Metro), and Doraldina, in person, divided honors of one of the best weeks in some time. Doraldina started the week with four appearances daily, but in order to take care of the large crowds had to make five.

Short Subjects.—Kinograms.

CRITERION

"THE LIGHT IN THE CLEARING," Special Cast (Hodkinson). A rank failure and was taken off at the end of the first day, and supplanted by "The Inferior Sex," Mildred Harris Chaplin (First National). Although this picture was linked with Charles Chaplin's "A Dog's Life," business was very poor and closed at low ebb.

Short Subjects.—Kinograms.

STRAND

Monday—Tuesday—Wednesday.

"LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY," Mary Pickford (United Artists). Return engagement. Did not appeal to patrons and business was only fair.

Thursday—Friday—Saturday.

"THE HEART OF A TEXAN," Neal Hart (State Rights). Return engagement. Was fairly pleasing.

Short Subjects. — "The Leather Pushers," second run.

GRAND

First Half.

"THE RAGGED HEIRESS," Shirley Mason (Fox). Highly appreciated by patrons. Star scored her highest mark in this production.

Short Subjects. — "A Shaky Family Tree," "Fox News," "Chester Outing," "A Charmed Life."

Last Half.

"IF WOMEN ONLY KNEW," William Christy Cabanne Production (R-C Pictures). This picture was also pleasing and the Grand had a very good week.

Short Subjects. — "Off His Beat," Fox News, and "Mutt and Jeff."

TUDOR

Monday and Tuesday.

"THE GREAT MOMENT," Gloria Swanson (Paramount). Pleasing and business good, despite heat and rain. (Return engagement.)

Wednesday and Thursday.

"A MILLIONAIRE FOR A DAY," Arthur Guy Empey (Southern States). Good business.

Friday and Saturday.

"RED FOAM," Zena Keefe (Select). Very good business.

Short Subjects.—International News.

RIALTO

"THE ORDEAL," Agnes Ayres and Conrad Nagel (Paramount). Fair week's business.

Short Subjects.—"The Alibi" and International News.

BETHLEHEM, PA.

KURTZ

"THE NIGHT ROSE," Lon Chaney. Business was just as usual, no rush to speak of.

LORENZE

"THE FOUR HORSEMEN OF THE APOCALYPSE" (Metro). First time at popular prices. It was good chance to take as business was very encouraging.

PALACE

"THE SCOFFER," James Kirkwood and Mary Thurman. Drew average business and did not make much of a ripple.

BUFFALO

SHEA'S HIPPODROME

"THE GOOD PROVIDER," Vera Gordon (Paramount). Production attracted good business. Audiences helped by word of mouth advertising.

Exploitation.—The same cast as that which presented "Humoresque" is seen in "The Good Provider," and was played up big in all the advertising. Black and white ads were used in the newspapers. There was an attractive lobby and display at the marque.

Short Subjects —Mack Sennett's "Gymnasium Gym," Hippodrome Review and Pathe hand colored scenic.

LOEW'S STATE

"CHASING THE MOON," Tom Mix (Fox). Audiences like Tom Mix. Business was fair.

Exploitation.—Management put over some eye-catching black and white ads in the newspaper, showing Tom straddling a giant fire cracker soaring toward the moon. Window cards, an electric display and good lobby frames were used.

Short Subjects.—Hallroom Boys comedy, Pathe News and Mutt and Jeff.

LAFAYETTE SQUARE

"RECKLESS YOUTH," Elaine Hammerstein (Select). This one seemed to appeal to the patrons and the box office figures were very fair.

Exploitation —Newspaper advertising, window cards, lobby display.

Short Subjects.—"Snub" Pollard comedy and Fox News.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.

BROADWAY

"A CONNECTICUT YANKEE IN KING ARTHUR'S COURT," Harry Myers (Fox). Four days to big business. A sure box office attraction.

IMPERIAL

"BEYOND THE ROCKS," Gloria Swanson and Rodolph Valentino (Paramount). This played only three days but business was very good. Was originally slated for a week's run.

CHICAGO

ROOSEVELT

"THE TRAP," Lon Chaney (Universal). Business showed a very pleasing improvement.

CHICAGO

"TROUBLE," Jackie Coogan (First National). Crowded houses greeted every performance.

STATE-LAKE

"THE INFIDEL," Katherine MacDonald (First National). Business was good.

BARBEE

"YOUNG AMERICA," Charles Everett (Essanay). Fair attendance record for the week.

RANDOLPH

"FAIR LADY," Betty Blythe (Bennett). Played to excellent patronage.

ROSE

"THE FIGHTING STREAK," Tom Mix (Fox). Not up to the usual standard but star's popularity kept the theatre well filled at all performances.

CLEVELAND

ALLEN

"FAIR LADY," Betty Blythe (United Artists). Good business.

Exploitation.—Personal appearances of the star at all performances, during which time she spoke on conditions in Hollywood and rendered vocal selections.

STATE

"THE PRIMITIVE LOVER," Constance Talmadge (First National), and "The Four Seasons." The Raymond Ditmars study of animal life was the superior attraction of the two, but was not publicized to the best advantage. The real big feature on the program was relegated to second place, giving the Talmadge vehicle the preference. Business was very good on the whole.

PARK AND MALL

"NINETEEN AND PHYLLIS," Charles Ray (First National). Business was just fair on this production that played a three day engagement. "Smilin' Through" was the attraction the last half of the week.

KNICKERBOCKER

"A MAN WITHOUT A COUNTRY," Arnold Daly (American Legion). Business good.

Exploitation.—The American Legion, in cooperation with the theatre, staged a parade twice a day for the four-day engagement, sold the tickets, and put on a generous campaign. The mayor and other city officials were high in their praise for the picture.

STANDARD

"STEP ON IT," Hoot Gibson (Universal). Very little advertising. Just a two-inch ad. in the papers on Sunday and seven lines during the week. An attractive lobby assisted in creating fair business.

COLUMBIA, S. C.

RIVOLI

"SMILIN' THROUGH," Norma Talmadge (First National). Three days here to very good business.

"THE GRIM COMEDIAN," Jack Holt (Paramount). Fair business on a two-day run.

IMPERIAL

"THE ORDEAL," Agnes Ayres and Conrad Nagel (Paramount). Fair business on a three-day run.

KANSAS CITY

LIBERTY

"THE ROSARY," Special Cast (First National). Played to good crowds for a week's run.

Short Subjects.—"The Leather Pushers," serial, and Pathe News, current events.

Exploitation. — Atmospheric prologue advertised extensively, featuring the songs, "The Holy City" and "The Rosary." Also billboard and lobby display space.

DORIC

"BEAUTY'S WORTH," Marion Davies (Paramount). The star is popular here and always draws good. This picture did a good week's business.

Short Subjects.—"Ten Seconds," comedy, and International News, Current Events.

Exploitation.—Large sketch of Marion Davies, with lines, "She was so innocent that she thought they put shades on bath room windows to keep the sun out," was featured in large newspaper ad. Also lobby display and billboard space.

NEWMAN

"THE FOUR HORSEMEN OF THE APOCALYPSE," Rudolph Valentino (Metro). One of the best drawing cards of the season. Crowded house all week.

Short Subjects.—Newman News and News, Current Events.

Exploitation.—The fact that it was the first showing of the production here at popular prices was played up big in billboard and lobby display space.

ROYAL

"SHAME," Special Cast (Fox). The title of this one proved a greater factor than anything else in drawing a good attendance for a week's run.

Short Subjects.—"Tony Sarg Almanac," film novelty, and Royal Screen Magazine, Current Events.

Exploitation.—The word "shame" was written in bold, black face type across the ad, which contained a sketch of wife looking inquiringly at husband.

TWELFTH STREET

"THE LAST TRAIL," Special Cast (Fox). Made a hit with patrons and played to full houses all week.

Short Subjects.—"Nothing But Trouble," comedy, and Screen Magazine, Current Events.

Exploitation.—As Zane Grey is a popular author with fans here, the name was played up to great extent in newspaper, billboard and lobby display space.

LOS ANGELES

TALLY'S BROADWAY

"REPORTED MISSING," Owen Moore (Selznick). In the second week and has only played to fair box office.

Short Subject.—News weekly.

CALIFORNIA

"YELLOW MEN AND GOLD," Helene Chadwick and Richard Dix (Goldwyn). With usual weekly advertising, the picture went over very good. The only exploitation comprised a float which transversed the main streets of the town.

MISSION

"MONTE CRISTO," All Star (Fox). In the second week and holding up very good. Put out extra boards and extra daily newspaper space.

KINEMA

"TROUBLE," Jackie Coogan (First National). In the first week and doing capacity business, it is believed will hold over for second week. Eight window tie-ups used. Jackie's picture appearing almost daily in one of the newspapers.

SUPERBA

"SECOND HAND ROSE," Gladys Walton (Universal). Showed better business than her former pictures. The lobby resembled a second-hand clothing store, the weird old-fashioned garments that adorned the lobby, attracted hundreds of passersby. Regular weekly advertising was used.

Short Subjects.—Lee Moran Comedy and Reginald Denny feature.

CLUNE'S BROADWAY

"THE TRUTHFUL LIAR," Wanda Hawley (Realart). Only fair in spite of the fact that the management booked an old Harold Lloyd picture—a two reeler, and filled the lobby with Lloyd paper.

LOEW'S STATE

"BEYOND THE RAINBOW," Billy Dove and Harry Morey (R.-C.). Very good audience picture. Miss Dove's picture was placed in most of the newspapers.

HIPPODROME

"MISS PETTICOATS," Alice Brady (Realart). Very entertaining picture. Miss Brady is not so well known here as in the East. The picture was given most of the ad. space with the vaudeville only mentioned in small type.

SYMPHONY

"GRANDMA'S BOY," Harold Lloyd (Pathe). One of the biggest pictures that has ever hit town. Opened with big box office receipts. The house has a line-up from 3 until 10 in the evening.

HILL STREET

"ISLAND WIVES," Corinne Griffith (Vitagraph). Business fair.

Short Subjects. — Kinograms, Screen Scenic and Christie Comedy, "One Stormy Night."

RIALTO

"BEYOND THE ROCKS," Gloria Swanson (Paramount). In the fourth week and business very slow. No exploitation used and average amount of advertising.

GRAUMAN'S

"THE MAN FROM HOME," All Star (Paramount). Very good business.

MILWAUKEE

ALHAMBRA

"DOLL'S HOUSE," Nazimova (Metro). Newspaper criticisms unanimously declared this feature surpassed anything star has done recently.

Exploitation. — Lobby display, newspaper advertising, street car posters and billboards.

Short Subjects.—Two-reel comedy, Educational reels, Pathe news reels.

BUTTERFLY

"THE TRAP," Lon Chaney (Universal). While moving picture critics here lauded the film, the public were not enthusiastic about it. Business fair.

Short Stories.—A Lee Moran comedy, Butterfly news reels.

GARDEN

"THE ORDEAL," Conrad Nagel, Agnes Ayres and Clarence Burton (Paramount). The cast is a good box office drawing card.

Short Subjects. — A Lloyd Hamilton comedy, Fox News reels, and Educational reels.

MERRILL

"FIND THE WOMAN," Alma Rubens (Cosmopolitan). Fine business. Many people who read the story were anxious to see the film version of it. Newspaper criticisms favorable. Good mystery story.

Exploitation. — Lobby display, newspaper and billboard advertising.

Short Subjects. — International news reels and Tony Sarg's Almanac.

SAXE'S RIALTO

"THE RIGHT THAT FAILED," Bert Lytell (Metro). Good business. Mr. Lytell is well liked in this territory.

Short Subjects. — Two-act Sunshine Comedy, "The Barnstormers"; Selznick news weekly.

SAXE'S STRAND

"THE WOMAN'S SIDE," Katherine MacDonald (First National). Crowds not so good, although newspaper critics claimed star did good work.

Exploitation. — Newspaper advertising, lobby display and street car signs.

Short Subjects. — A revival of Charles Chaplin's "A Dog's Life"; First National Kinograms and Sketchograms, and motion pictures of President McKinley's inauguration.

MARK-STRAND

"THE WOMAN HE MARRIED," Anita Stewart (First National). Business was good enough to warrant holding this feature for a week, a departure from the usual Strand policy.

Exploitation. — Newspaper advertising, lobby display in which large cut-outs from 24 sheets were a feature, window cards.

Short Subjects.—"Afraid of His Wife," a Christie comedy, "Burial of the Unknown Dead," a Prizma subject and Kinograms.

PALACE

"THE MARIONETTES," Clara Kimball Young (Kempson). Business was fair on this revival.

Exploitation. — Newspaper advertising, lobby display and window cards.

Short Subjects.—Star comedy and International News.

KEITH'S

"TOL'ABLE DAVID," Richard Barthelmess (First National). Packed them in with this one and patrons were loud in their praise of the offering.

SHEA'S NORTH PARK

"THE GOOD PROVIDER," Vera Gordon (Paramount). Memorial Day and a circus took the sails out of business.

"Spanish Jade," a Paramount production, was the attraction the last half of the week and business was better.

Exploitation.—Advertised in the Community newspapers and mailed out attractive announcements.

Short Subjects.—"Gymnasium Gym," a Mack Sennett comedy and Pathe and International News.

NORFOLK, VA.

WELLS

"GLASS HOUSES," Viola Dana (Metro). Six days to very good business with Buster Keaton in "The Boat" as an added attraction.

GRANBY

"THE FOUR HORSEMEN OF THE APOCALYPSE" (Metro). Six days here to big business.

PHILADELPHIA

STANLEY

"SMILIN' THROUGH," Norma Talmade (First National). Preceded by the reputation that it was one of Norma's best, the picture had little difficulty in filling the house at every performance throughout the week.

Short Subjects.—Prizma, "Cape of Good Hope," Fox and Pathe News reels and Topics of the Day.

KARLTON

"TOO MUCH BUSINESS," Tully Marshall (Vitagraph). Was advertised as a comedy, and drew well. Box office receipts were satisfactory.

Short Subjects.—Christie Comedy, "Cold Feet" (Educational). Sport Review, "Split Seconds" (Goldwyn) and Pathe News.

ARCADIA

"WHY ANNOUNCE YOUR MARRIAGE," Elaine Hammerstein (Select). Star has established following here, and turnout was pleased with production.

Short Subjects. — Johnny Hines in "Torchy's Hold Up," Movie Chats No. 16, Pathe News and Burton Holmes Travelogue.

REGENT

"PARDON MY FRENCH," Vivian Martin (Goldwyn). Star is a great favorite at this theatre, and drew good houses all week.

Short Subjects.—"Why Pick On Me?" Harold Lloyd one-reel special, Pathe News, Mutt and Jeff Cartoon, "Hither and Thither."

VICTORIA

"THE LAST TRAIL," All star (Fox). A very novel lobby display that caught the eye of all, and a tri-colored sign that flashed day and night put the picture over big.

Short Subjects. — Mermaid comedy, "Danger," Pathe News and Urban Movie Chats.

ALDINE

"SISTERS," All Star Cast (American Releasing). Very good business all week with a turnaway Saturday night—one of the biggest if not really the largest since the house opened.

Short Subjects.—"Aesop's Fable," Pathe Review, Universal News, and Hy. Mayer's Travelaughs.

Week of May 27th.

ALDINE

"WOMAN, WAKE UP," Florence Vidor (Associated Exhibitors).—Packed them in solid the first three days of the week, and the picture went over with honors to spare as one of the best box office attractions of the season.

Short Subjects.—Harold Lloyd comedy, "I Do," Starland Revue and Pathe News.

STANLEY

"PENROD," Wesley Barry (First National).—Did not come up to box office expectations, and no one went out of his way to praise it.

Short Subjects.—Buster Keaton in "His Wife's Relations," and Prizma, "The Glorious Dead."

KARLTON

"THE TRAP," Lon Chaney (Universal). —Drew well all week, with very noticeable increase the last three days, due to plenty of newspaper publicity.

Short Subjects. — Larry Semon, "A Pair of Kings," Krazy Kat cartoon "Felix at the Fair," and Pathe News.

ARCADIA

"THE SPANISH JADE," David Powell (Paramount).—Did one of the best week's business since the advent of daylight saving. Standing room on most nights—very unusual.

Short Subjects. — Lloyd Hamilton in "Poor Boy," and Urban Movie Chats.

VICTORIA

"SHACKLES OF GOLD," Wm. Farnum (Fox).—Star always popular here. Did a very satisfactory business.

Short Subjects. — Larry Semon in "A Pair of Kings," and Pathe News and Federated Screen Snapshots.

CAPITAL

"NINE SECONDS FROM HEAVEN," All star cast (B. & B., State Rights).—Did miserable business for two days, and was taken out and succeeded by "The Seventh Day," with Dick Barthelmess (First National). This helped to retrieve the week.

Short Subjects. — "Torchy's Hold-up," Johny Hines, Bruce Scenic, "My Country," and Kinograms.

REGENT

"NANCY FROM NOWHERE," Bebe Daniels (Realart). Star is well liked and this picture drew an especially good crowd all week.

Short Subjects.—"The Barnstormers," Fox Sunshine Comedy and Pathe News.

RICHMOND, VA.

BROADWAY

"ORPHANS OF THE STORM" (Griffith-United Artists). This packed in capacity crowds all week.

BIJOU

"FASCINATION," Mae Murray (Metro). Six days to turn away business.

COLONIAL

"ACROSS THE CONTINENT," Wallace Reid (Paramount). Three days to good business.

SCRANTON, PA.

STRAND

"HER HUSBAND'S TRADEMARK," Gloria Swanson (Paramount). Business disappointing. Due not to picture, but to industrial conditions.

STATE

"ORPHANS OF THE STORM," Dorothy and Lillian Gish (United Artists). Attendance was as good as could be expected. Suffered from industrial situation.

MILES

"THE GOLDEN GIFT," Alice Lake (Metro). Business only average, no cleanup possible, because of mine strike.

POLI

"THE ANGEL OF CROOKED STREET," Alice Calhoun (Vitagraph). Would make new records for any house. No chance for a cleanup at Scranton, due to mine situation.

SEATTLE, WASH.

COLISEUM

"FOOL'S FIRST," Claire Windsor (First National). Good business. First showing in U. S. Prize Poster Contest stimulated interest. Star Seattle girl.

Exploitation.—Extra newspaper space, billboards, window cards and lobby. Newspaper contest on "Who's the World's Most Foolish Fool?"

Short Subjects. — "Schoolboy Love," Campbell comedy.

BLUE MOUSE

"FASCINATION" Mae Murray (Metro). Large audiences well sustained.

Exploitation.—Newspaper advertising, cards, lobby very attractive with stills and illuminated frames.

Short Subjects.—Fox News. "The Model Dairy," Æsop's Fables.

COLUMBIA

"SECOND HAND ROSE," Gladys Walton (Universal). Popular star proving pleasing in new role. Business good.

Exploitation.—Newspaper advertising, lobby display.

Short Subjects. — "Leather Pushers," "Red Hot Rivals," Le Moran comedy, International News.

WINTER GARDEN

"DON'T DOUBT YOUR WIFE," Leah Baird (Asso. Exh.). First program at new popular price. Played to packed houses.

Exploitation. — Newspaper advertising and lobby displays.

LIBERTY

"HIS BACK AGAINST THE WALL," Raymond Hatton (Goldwyn). Shared honors on bill with Larry Semon Comedy, "The Show." Played to good houses.

Exploitation.—Newspaper advertising, billboards, window cards, lobby display.

Short Subjects.—Liberty News, scenic.

STRAND

"BEYOND THE ROCKS," Gloria Swanson and Rodolph Valentino (Paramount). Held over for second week. Newspaper advertising sustained throughout engagement.

Short Subjects.—"Any Old Port" Christie Comedy.

PALACE HIP

"THE RIGHT THAT FAILED," Bert Lytell (Loew Metro). Special advertising featuring popular star drew big houses.

COLUMBIA

Week ended May 27.

"THE TRAP," Lon Chaney (Universal). Excellent business. Star has many admirers.

Exploitation. — Newspaper advertising, billboards and solid lobby trim using log cabin effect with stills of star on either side.

Short Subjects.—Harry Sweet in "Speed 'Em Up," International news.

STRAND

"THE ORDEAL," Agnes Ayres (Paramount). Fans commenting favorably on this one. Business good.

Exploitation.—Newspaper space, billboards, window cards and lobby trim.

Short Subjects.—"Torchy and Orange Blossoms," Bruce Scenic, Kinograms.

COLISEUM

"THE BACHELOR DADDY," Thomas Meighan (Paramount). Delighting large audiences.

Exploitation.—Regular newspaper space, window cards and lobby, billboards.

Short Subjects.—"Hokus Pokus" comedy, Pathe news, Kinograms.

LIBERTY

"THE PRIMITIVE LOVER," Constance Talmadge (First National). Excellent business. Decided hit.

Exploitation.—Clever advertising, lobby, window cards and billboards.

Short Subjects.—"By Heck," Mack Sennett comedy, Liberty News, Scenic.

BLUE MOUSE

"FASCINATION," Mae Murray (Metro). Held over to second big week's patronage. Regular newspaper space for continuation of run. Comedy and scenic complete bill.

WINTER GARDEN

"HER LORD AND MASTER," Alice Joyce (Vitagragph). Patronage heavy at new popular price.

Exploitation.— Newspaper and lobby display.

Short Subjects.—Snub Pollard Comedy, International news.

ST. LOUIS, MO.

NEW GRAND CENTRAL, WEST END LYRIC AND LYRIC SKYDOME

"FASCINATION," Mae Murray (Metro). Despite warm weather and no music Mae Murray's offering drew very good attendance at both the night and matinee performance. The Lyric Skydome is located three blocks from the Lyric Theatre and the Skydome is the largest in the city, but both places found night attendance very good. The New Grand Central registered an increase in matinee attendance.

Short Subjects.—Short comedy, "Cold Feet," News and Views and Topics.

Exploitation.—Increase in advertising space only.

MISSOURI

"THREE LIVE GHOSTS," Anna Q. Nilsson (Paramount). Attendance at both matinees and nights, despite warm weather, very good.

Short Subjects.—News and Views and short comedy.

CAPITOL

"THE SCOFFER," James Kirkwood. This attraction at a downtown house failed to draw them in, when it ran the first half of the week.

Short Subject.—Larry Semon in "The Show," "How To Grow Thin" and Kentucky Derby Pictures.

KINGS

"THE CRADLE," Ethel Clayton (Paramount). Good attendance throughout run of picture.

COLUMBIA

"A VIRGIN'S SACRIFICE," Corinne Griffith (Vitagraph). All performances found good attendance while this picture held screen.

WILMINGTON, N. C.

GRAND

"GET RICH QUICK WALLINGFORD" (Paramount). Two days to fair business.

VICTORIA

"SATURDAY NIGHT" (Paramount). Three days to poor business.

FOR THE EXHIBITORS BOX-OFFICE

EDITED BY GEORGE T. PARDY

Domestic Relations

Released by First National. Story and Scenario by Violet Clarke. Cameraman, Bert Glennon. Directed by Chet Withey. Length, 5192 Feet.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Barbara Benton, Katherine MacDonald; Judge James Benton, William P. Carleton; Joe Martin, Frank Leigh; Mrs. Martin, Barbara La Mar; Sandy, Gordon Mullen; Pierre, George Fisher; Dr. Chester Brooks, Lloyd Whitlock.

Judge Benton devotes little time to his wife and always reproaches her for her hoydenish actions that might reflect on him. In the poorer section of the city lives a laborer, Joe Martin, and his wife. The laborer also finds it difficult to give much of his time to his wife. When he finds that she has been going to the movies with another man and sees this man making love to his wife, he does not allow the woman to explain but beats her severely. He is arrested and sentenced by Benton. Meanwhile Benton has brought to his home a young artist to paint a portrait of Mrs. Benton. As the picture nears completion he comes in one afternoon and finds his wife in the embrace of this man. Benton orders the artist from his house and refuses to listen to his wife's story. She leaves him and goes to live in the poorer section of the city, where she meets Joe's wife. When Joe has served his time he plans to get vengeance and goes to the home of the Judge. Mrs. Benton learns of the danger that is near her husband and rushes to him. Through Joe she makes her husband see the light that brings about a reconciliation between them.

Katherine MacDonald's latest picture, "Domestic Relations," runs along like a regular double header. At all times the audience is witnessing the domestic relations in the rich man's home and close after follows the showing of similar happenings in the less elegant home of the laborer. The various incidents all happen simultaneously or nearly so in each case. The story is fairly interesting and toward the end offers new complications that serve to freshen up the waxing enthusiasm. It is along the usual lines of regulation movie stuff and provides no new thrills but affords rather good entertainment for anyone who admires the star.

Points of Appeal. — The contrast between the two homes is appealing. It shows "that low-brows as well as high-brows can show irritation." This form of drama revolving about two married couples in widely different stations of life contains some material that will no doubt prove entertaining to a great many people.

Cast. — Katherine McDonald does well with the part she is given to play. She never fails to look lovely and appears in some stunning gowns. William P. Carleton, as Judge Benton, is also good. In fact, the entire support is first-rate and entitled to better material.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—The photography is pleasing all the way through the picture. There are some nice lighting effects and outdoor scenes. Interiors are adequate. Continuity slightly confusing owing to the two themes. Direction satisfactory.

Rough Shod

Released by Fox. Story by Charles A. Selzer. Scenario by Jack Strumwasser. Cameraman, Lucien Androit. Directed by Reeves Eason. Length, 4,486 Feet.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

"Steel" Brannon, Charles Jones; Betty Lawson, Helen Ferguson; Josephine Hamilton, Ruth Renick; "Satan" Latimer, Maurice Flynn; Les Artwell, Jack Rollins; "Denver," Charles Le Moyne.

Josephine Hamilton went West to visit her college chum who had a large ranch. The first day there she met and recognized "Steel" Brannon, the foreman of the ranch, to be the man from whom she had helped rescue another cowboy from that day. She had taken an immediate dislike to Brannon but Betty, her chum, had intimated that she and this man were engaged. To the ranch came Latimer, who had the reputation of being both handsome and wicked. Betty had suffered great losses by rustlers and her men went out to round them up. The next day Josephine while riding over the ranch came across Artwell, the man whom she had rescued from Brannon. He was badly wounded and she insisted on taking him back to his ranch for aid. She went with him to Latimer's where he told her he was staying. Latimer, fearing that the girl now knew too much about him and his gang of rustlers forces her to leave with him. Brannon learns that Josephine has gone to the other ranch and realizes her danger. He gets together his men and goes after them. A big fight between Brannon and Latimer takes place and Josephine is brought back safely.

Compared with some of the former Charles Jones' westerns "Rough Shod" does not seem to measure up to his usual standard of thrills and quick action. The picture suffers mostly from a lack of plot. There is an uncommonly good cast, but the principals seem to have been practically wasted on very much inferior material. We do not mean to infer that the picture is without some merit. What there is of it will no doubt suffice to please the majority of patrons who like this sort of entertainment.

Points of Appeal.—The story contains a romance that is practically hidden until the very end of the picture. There are some picturesque outdoor scenes and enough action in the latter part of the film to almost make up for lost time. The fight on the cliff is spectacular and provides some breathtaking moments.

Cast.—Charles Jones is a convincing actor when cast in these familiar western roles. Although handicapped he gives good account of himself in "Rough Shod." Helen Ferguson and Ruth Renick are the female leads. Maurice Flynn has been chosen to do the villainous part of "Satan" Latimer. Flynn, himself, has formerly been doing hero stuff and no doubt this new arrangement will come as quite a little jolt to some of the fairer sex.

Photography, Lighting, Direction. — The photography and lighting are good. No serious fault can be found with the direction.

Woman Who Walked Alone

A George Melford Production. A Paramount Picture. Story by John Colton. Scenario by Will M. Ritchey. Photographed by Bert Glennon. Directed by George Melford. Length, 5,947 Feet.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Iris Champneys, Dorothy Dalton; Clement Gaunt, Milton Sills; Earl of Lemister, E. J. Radcliffe; Muriel Champneys, Wanda Hawley; Marquis Champneys, Frederick Vroom; Marchioness Champneys, Maym Kelso; Otis Yeardley, John Davidson; Sir Basil Deere, Harris Gordon; Schriemann, Charles Ogle; Hannah Schriemann, Mabel Van Buren; McKinney, Maurice B. Flynn; Mombo, Cecil Holland; Butler, John MacKinnon; Maid, Temple Pigott.

Iris Champneys marries the Earl of Lemister to save her parents from financial disaster. Her husband realizes that she does not love him, and has her maid spy on her actions. Her sister Muriel has written some letters which are being used to blackmail her by one of the guests in Iris's house. Iris enters his room and gets possession of the letters, but is caught in there by her husband. She refuses to say anything and her husband divorces her. Before her marriage to the Earl she had met a young American, Clement Gaunt, who had fallen deeply in love with her, and had gone to South Africa immediately after her marriage. He became foreman on the place of one of the Dutch settlers and was known as "Yankee Jim." The wife of the owner fell in love with him, and one night went to his house. The husband found them together and tried to kill Clem, but is himself shot down by his wife, who suggests to Clem that they can run away together. When he refuses she tells everyone that he killed her husband. Clem makes his escape and goes in hiding. Later he prepares to make his way to the port, and while in town recognizes Iris who is running a tavern there. The place is frequented by the mounted police, and Clem waits a chance to see her alone. At night he goes in and is recognized by her servant to be the man who killed Schriemann, and goes to tell the police. Before they arrive he tells Iris who he is and about the affair at the ranch. Iris rides to get Hannah Schriemann to confess. She tells the woman that "Yankee Jim" has been killed for her crime. The police bring Clem to the house, and she thinks that it is his ghost and confesses. Iris and Clem then find a way to happiness.

"The Woman Who Walked Alone" is adapted from the original story, "The Cat That Walked Alone," by John Colton, and makes a thoroughly enjoyable picture. From first appearances it seems that the story is destined to follow the usual line of those in which the heroine is forced into a money marriage by her parents. However, it soon loses its triteness and branches out into a tense drama that succeeds in piling up suspense and holds the interest until the end. The plot is good, straight drama without any superfluous embellishments used to make or mar its progress. It is a picture that should, generally speaking, fill audience requirements.

Points of Appeal.—Everything is satisfactory about the picture. The elaborate settings at first, the fine gowns worn by the women, and later the South African scenes lend good atmosphere. The story contains a little bit of familiar thriller, but possesses an individuality that is distinctive. There is a kissing scene that will not fail to amuse.

Cast.—Dorothy Dalton heads the cast that is composed of such well known players as Milton Sills, Wanda Hawley and Maurice Flynn. Other members lend capable assistance in their various roles and contribute good support in making this a pleasingly enacted and realistic production.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—There are some splendid interior sets and the exteriors are equally good. Fine lighting effects have been accomplished in several of the scenes. The story is easily followed and the direction is excellent throughout.

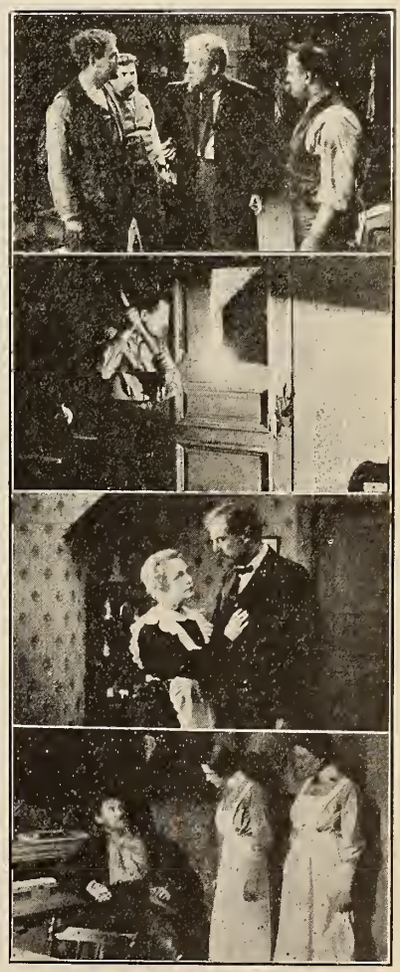
The Stroke of Midnight

A Swedish Biograph Production. Released by Metro. Story by Dr. Selma Lagerlof. Adapted and Directed by Victory Seastrom. Length, 6,601 Feet.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

David Holm, Victor Seastrom; His Wife, Hilda Borgstrom; Edith Larsson, Astrid Holm; Geller, Tore Svennberg.

Upon David Holm's release from prison he goes home to find that his wife and family have deserted him. Embittered by life he drifts aimlessly about. He goes to a mission for shelter one night, and through them a reconciliation is brought about with his wife. His old life gets the better of him and his wife is unable to stand it any longer. David goes back to his vagrant life, and on New Year's Eve is seated along the street curb with two other derelicts. Toward midnight he tells them a story that a friend of his had told, that anyone who was killed on the stroke of midnight on New Year's Eve would become the driver of the cart of death for one year. He tells them that his friend who had told him the story had died the year before. As David finishes his story a man comes up to get David to go with him to the mission. David refuses and his friends try to force him to go. A fight follows and David is knocked unconscious. During his delirium he sees his old friend approach near him with the cart of death and forces him to become the driver for the coming year. They drive up to the house where David's wife and children are, and he sees the mother preparing a poison to end it all. Remorse seizes him and he tries to make them hear him, but in vain. Desperate and struggling he finally awakes and finds that it has been in his subconsciousness. He fears for the worst and rushes to his home just in time to save his wife from really taking her life. He convinces her that he intends to reform, and the following New Year's Eve finds them in happy circumstances.



A remarkably fine enacted picture is "The Stroke of Midnight," which has been produced by the Swedish Biograph Co. The story itself is the spookiest of the spooky; ghosts, the cart of death, and possibly a few stray ectoplasms, all of which have been photographed with seemingly the greatest precautions to register the proper creeps. Reformers, and followers of Conan Doyle, will probably derive an immense amount of satisfaction out of it, and even just ordinary human beings will not be able to resist its appeal. Of course this type of picture will not be as enthusiastically received in some localities as others. There are still some few who draw the line at ghost stories, but for the more susceptible of the masses here is one that grips beyond description.

Points of Appeal.—The story portrays vividly the bitterness a man bears toward life and everything good following his release from prison. In his subconscious mind he is able to see his mistakes and tries to reform, but to no avail. The double exposures used in the latter part of the film are excellently done and lend an artistic touch to the picture that has seldom been equalled.

Cast.—Victor Seastrom is an actor of tremendous force. His study of David Holm is complete and thoroughly satisfying. A very capable cast assist in making this one of the finest pieces of cinema art shown on the screen today.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—This company has contributed some of the best offerings that have come to us from Europe. "The Stroke of Midnight" is no exception. The lighting in straight sets is poorly handled at times, but splendid work has been accomplished in creating the scenes that call for double exposure. Direction O. K.

Over the Border

Paramount Photoplay in Six Parts. Adapted from Sir Gilbert Parker's Story, "She of the Triple Chevrons," by Albert Shelby Levino. Director, Penrhyn Stanlaws. Cameraman, Paul Perry. Running Time, Sixty-five Minutes.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Sergeant Tom Flaherty, Tom Moore; Jen Galbraith, Betty Compson; Peter Galbraith, J. F. MacDonald; Val Galbraith, Casson Ferguson; Snow Devil, Sidney D'Albrook; Corporal Byng, L. C. Shumway; Pretty Pierre, Jean de Briac; Inspector Jules, Edward J. Brady; Borden, Joseph Ray.

Jen Galbraith is the sweetheart of Tom Flaherty, sergeant in the Royal Northwest Mounted Police. Her father and brother are engaged in smuggling whiskey across the Canadian border to the United States, old man Galbraith's tavern being their headquarters. Jen is anxious to have her lover leave the force, and although she does not know it, he has applied for discharge. "Pretty" Pierre, a half-breed, is devoted to Jen. Snow Devil, an Indian who is a spy for the police, frequents the tavern. While Jen is riding home from a tryst with her lover she espies a squad of police coming along the trail. She rides ahead to alarm her father, is pursued by a trooper but shoots his horse. Meanwhile Tom comes with another squad of officers and discovers the concealed liquor. Jen is identified as having fired the shot by a broken shoe on her horse, which leaves an irregular mark in the snow. The Galbraiths are released on bail. At the moonshiner shack, Jen's brother Val quarrels with Snow Devil. The Indian wounds Val and the latter shoots and kills him. A badge on the Indian's body reveals the fact that he is a police spy and Val starts for the border with Pierre. Val grows weak and stays to rest on the trail while Pierre hurries to the tavern to procure a sleigh. Snow Devil's death is reported and Tom Flaherty sent with sealed orders to the next post to intercept Val. Tom stops at the tavern. Old Galbraith drugs his coffee and he sleeps heavily. Jen, unaware that Tom is carrying a warrant for her brother's arrest, and realizing that her sweetheart's honor demands the delivery of the letter, evades her father and Pierre, dons Tom's uniform and makes her way through a fierce blizzard to the Post. She then returns. The sleigh fails to reach Val and he struggles to reach the tavern on foot. The police are in pursuit. On Val's arrival at the tavern, Tom determines to save him. When the police arrive he announces that Val is his prisoner. His discharge has arrived and is to take effect at eight that morning. Inspector Jules is seized and bound, his men being outside. Tom jumps through the widow clad in Val's coat and they follow him. Meanwhile Val heads for the border. Pierre is struck by a bullet fired at Tom. The police come up. Pierre thereupon confesses that he was the one who shot Snow Devil and dies. Although inspector Jules knows the confession to be false, his admiration for Pierre's loyalty leads him to accept it as true, Val is cleared and the lovers are happy.

Whiskey running on the Canadian frontier being a subject which attains considerable prominence in the newspapers nowadays it follows that the activities of the band of hootch smugglers figuring in Over the Border are strictly up to date, as it were, and not without value as advertising assets for the picture in question. But apart from its timeliness the film is strong in adventurous and romantic lure, its love story prettily developed and the photography admirable. The Canadian wilderness scenes are wonderfully realistic, the snow effects remarkably impressive; there are some marvelously beautiful long shots and striking light and shadow contrasts, as well as a bitter blizzard of such tremendous proportions that one actually shivers in contemplating it. Penrhyn Stanlaws has directed the feature with fine artistic judgment, and it was well received when given its initial metropolitan showing at the Rivoli Theatre, New York, recently.

Points of Appeal.—The heroine's ride through the snowstorm to deliver Sergeant Flaherty's sealed orders to the post is a deed of daring which furnishes a distinct thrill, but the most acutely dramatic moment of the picture occurs when she finds that she has been the unconscious instrument of fate in handing over the warrant which calls for her brother's arrest on a murder charge. A clever twist is given the plot by Flaherty's taking advantage of the fact that at eight in the morning his connection with the mounted force expires, thereby allowing him to act as a free individual in helping Val Galbraith to escape. The death of Pierre, who "lies like a gentleman" in the interest of his pal and the girl he loves, injects a shade of melancholy into the climax, which is balanced by the good effects of his loyal action.

Cast.—Tom Moore was never so much of a genuine Celt as in the role of Sergeant Flaherty, looking the part to the life, although little demand is made upon his comedy talents, the Sergeant's lot being cast in rather serious mold. Betty Compson is fascinating and emotionally appealing as Jen Galbraith; Jean deBriac is a lovable "Pretty Pierre," and the support excellent.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—The outdoor views are beautifully filmed, the lighting is faultless, continuity unbroken and action speedy.

The Five Dollar Baby

Harry Beaumont Production, Released by Metro. Story by Irvin S. Cobb. Scenario by Rex Taylor. Cameraman, John Arnold. Directed by Harry Beaumont. Length, 6,143 Feet.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Ruth as a baby is picked up by a bum who thinks that the basket in which her mother has left her contains food. In the basket he finds a note that says the person who cares for the baby will be richly rewarded by presenting the note at a certain bank on the baby's eighteenth birthday. Not knowing how he will care for the child he finally decides to pawn it. Ben Shapinsky takes the baby thinking it to be a joke and lends five dollars to the Solitary Kid on it. Time passes and the "Kid" does not call to claim her but retains his right by keeping the interest paid up. Ruth grows to young womanhood and is loved by all. On her eighteenth birthday the "kid" goes to the bank and presents the note. He learns that his reward will be "in Heaven." He goes to the pawn shop and demands his claim and finally decides to sell the ticket he holds for $10,000.00. Although this amount is everything that "Uncle Ben" has in the world he promises to have the cash for the "Kid" that evening. Ruth overhears what is about to take place and the law takes a hand in it and saves her from the "Kid."

"The Five Dollar Baby" with Viola Dana is another one of New York's East Side stories. It was originally suggested by Irvin S. Cobb and a considerable amount of his "style" has been carried out on the screen. Naturally, in a story of this sort, there is to be found lots of good comedy and plenty of pathos. It has a very human appeal throughout and is done with the enviable charm of mingling laughter and tears. The general outline is satisfactory enough to embody all of the best situations that go to make up an enjoyable little comedy drama.

Points of Appeal.—As the "Tom-boy" school girl, Ruth (Viola Dana) succeeds in reaching the heart of the audience. Later as she develops into young womanhood the same sympathies follow her. The story of "the cross-eyed cat" is amusingly shown and the incident of "the three spoons" will come in for its share of laughs.

Cast.—Viola Dana looks and does the part of the twelve or thirteen-year-old girl with great ability. In her role as the young girl just returned from college she is as charming as usual. The Hebraic and Irish characters are all good and give excellent support.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—The sets are appropriate, being chiefly of the "pawn shop" and "over the store" variety. In some instances the sub-titles are conspicuous from the lack of dialogue. Direction generally good.

Head Over Heels

Goldwyn Photoplay in Five Parts. Author, Edgar A. Woolf. Scenario by Julian Josephson and Gerald Duffy. Directors, Victor Schertzinger and Paul Bern. Cameraman, George Webber. Running Time, Fifty-Five Minutes.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Tina, Mahel Normand; Lawson, Hugh Thompson; Papa Bamhinetti, Russ Powell; Pepper, Raymond Hatton; Sterling, Adolphe Jean Menjou; Edith Penfield, Lilyan Tashman; Al Wilkins, Lionel Belmore.

Tina Bamhinetti, a little Italian acrobat, is engaged hy Sterling, New York theatrical promoter, to star at $500 a week. She arrives in native costume and at first glance Sterling repents his bargain. Orders are given not to admit Tina at the offices hut she puts the whole force to flight and comes through the transom. Then Pepper, a press agent, persuades Wilkins, motion picture magnate that Tina is just the person required as a screen star. Pepper takes Tina to a beauty parlor where she is given a thorough overhauling. She emerges looking like another person and so pretty that Lawson, a member of Sterling's firm, falls genuinely in love with her. Tina fancies Lawson hut does not want to give up her chances as a screen star, whereas Lawson wishes her to retire into private life with him altogether. Wilkins urges her to sign a contract. While an argument is going on Lawson receives a note from Edith Penfield, an actress, who wants to see him on the roof garden above regarding an engagement. Wilkins tells Tina that Edith is Lawson's sweetheart. Tina immediately rushes to the roof garden, where she attacks Edith and disarranges things generally. Tina prepares to return home to Italy, when Lawson seeks her out. He convinces her it was all a mistake about Edith, they embrace and all ends well.

This picture depends almost entirely on the personality of the star to keep its interest alive. The plot is of exceedingly filmsy texture, consisting of a series of more or less whimsical incidents exploiting the acrobatic agility and unique clowning gifts possessed by Miss Normand, and so far may be said to fulfill its purpose. Also the action buzzes along at a merry gait, and the feature, while it cannot be listed as an attraction of extraordinary merit, offers fair entertainment, and where the leading lady happens to be a strong favorite, may prove a good box-office asset.

Points of Appeal.—Two of the best scenes are those in which heroine Tina demonstrates her athletic vigor, first by scattering an entire office force in a whirlwind campaign of a few seconds' duration; and again when she proceeds to beat up the actress lady whom she suspects of stealing her lover. In each instance the fun is fast and furious and the story on the whole amusing; the settings are colorful, and the climax, which smooths out the course of true love, is pleasing.

Cast.—Mabel Normand's quaint mannerisms, which are the despair of all would-be imitators, are very much in evidence all through the picture. As a comedienne, she works in an entirely original groove; her portrayal of Tina is distinguished by that pert turn of the head, the peculiar, yet queerly fascinating gestures and convincing bits of pantomine which are so thoroughly "Normadesque," to coin a word for the occasion. She has appeared in much better pictures, but, nevertheless, her performance in "Head Over Heels" will not disappoint her numerous admirers. Raymond Hatton scores a pronounced hit in the character of the irrepressible press agent; Hugh Thompson wins favor in the role of the rather melancholy lover, Lawson; and creditable support is furnished by the remainder of the company.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—There are many well filmed interiors, a few pretty exterior shots and adequate lighting effects. The continuity holds together as well as could be expected when allowances are made for the episodical nature of the plot; and the action moves briskly.

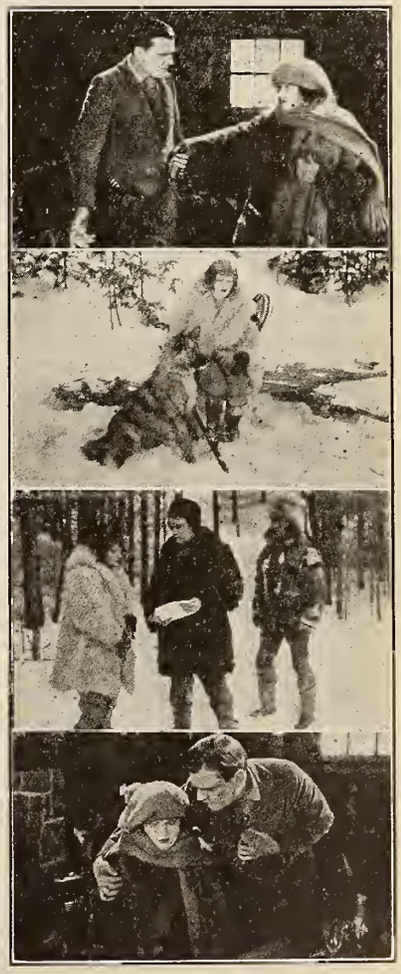
A Virgin's Sacrifice

Albert E. Smith Presentation. Released by Vitagraph. Scenario by William B. Courtney. Cameraman, Arthur Ross. Directed by Webster Campbell. Length Approximately 5,000 Feet.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Althea Sherrill, Corinne Griffith; Tom Merwin, Curtis Cooksey; David Sherrill, David Torrence; Mrs. Sherrill, Louise Cussing; Jacques, Nick Thompson; Nokomis, Miss Eagle; Sam Bellows, George McQuarrie; Batielle, Charles Henderson.

Tom Merwin and Althea Sherrill met one day in the great North Woods. The girl was unahle to reach home by dark and Merwin persuaded her to accept his hospitality for the night. A warm friendship developed and next day as Althea was preparing to leave Tom promised to always he her friend and servant. He saw that something was trouhling her and was told that he could render her a great service if he would accompany her to her home and pretend that he was her hushand. But she cautioned him that he must ask no questions. At the house the girl's parents soon arrived to see their grandchild. Tom was dumhfounded hut did not ask any questions. Althea was tricked into going to Bellow's cahin. Unless she oheyed his wishes he threatened to turn over the affidavit of the child's hirth to her father. Tom soon learned of her predicament and with a hundred woodsmen and their dogs they made their way into the cahin where the girl was held. Bellows and Althea had left though and the gang soon followed on their trail. The dogs overtook them and tore Bellows to pieces. Althea then realized that Tom Merwin was more than a friend to her and she confessed to him that the haby was not her own hut her mother's and she had done this to save her father from knowing the truth. Tom tells Althea of his love, and together they go back home.



A Virgin's Sacrifice cannot be classed as a picture that possesses any great amount of originality. Nevertheless, there are new twists, new faces and new scenes. And mighty fine scenes these are. Taken in the snow covered mountains and forests they display quite a bit of charm and have a rather cooling effect. For anyone who likes melodrama this picture should fulfill the most exacting demands. The title itself fairly intimates that the story is brimming over with villainy and silent suffering, and does not lead one far wrong.

Points of Appeal.—The cut back used in the first part of the story adds a bit of picturesqueness in its olden day setting. Following this the exteriors that are used have beautiful scenic value. The burning of the cabin is also spectacular and effective. As for the story, the true identity of the child is well concealed and stimulates interest until the end.

Cast.—Corinne Griffith, as Althea Sherrill, gives a pleasing performance and "emotes" satisfactorily. Curtis Cooksey, who does the part of Tom Merwin, makes an agreeable hero. The remainder of the cast is good.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—The beautiful manner in which this picture has been photographed makes it a production that it worth seeing. The snowstorms, the white country and the sky effects are all good. Sufficient lighting is used in all sets and the continuity of the story clear. The direction is good.

The Spanish Jade

Paramount Photoplay in Five Parts. Author, Maurice Hewlett. Scenario by Josephine Lovett. Director, John S. Robertson. Running Time, Sixty Minutes.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Gil Perez, David Powell; Don Luis Ramonez de Alavia, Merc MacDermott; Esteban, Charles de Rochefort; Manuela, Evelyn Brent; Manuela's Stepfather, Lionel d'Aragon; Tormillo, Frank Stanmore; Esteban's Spy, Roy Byford; Oswald Manvers, Harry Ham.

Manuela, a Spanish girl, is made the subject of a wager by her stepfather which results in the latter falling into the power of gambler Esteban. Gil Perez warns Manuela and she runs away. Perez follows and Esteban pursues them. Outside the city Oswald Manvers, a young American, rescues Manuela from a band of roughs. Esteban overtakes them and Manvers is deceived by him into leaving him alone temporarily with Manuela. In a struggle between Esteban and Manuela, the girl preventing him from ambushing and killing Manvers, Esteban falls on his knife and dies. Manuela flees on Esteban's horse. Manvers, returning, finds the couple gone and goes back to his hotel. Fearing that Manvers will be charged with Esteban's murder, Manuela urges Perez to save the American. Perez informs Manvers of the state of affairs. Don Luis, Esteban's father, hires an assassin to slay Manvers in revenge for his son's death. Manvers is stabbed, but only slightly wounded. He notifies his fiancee in America and she sets out with her mother to join him. Manuela gives herself up for the slaying of Esteban. She is sentenced to life imprisonment. The Spanish law allows a woman to be released if some man is willing to wed her. For the sake of the girl who saved him from Esteban's knife Manvers offers to marry her. Manuela agrees with Don Luis that she will atone for Esteban's death with her own life, if Manvers is spared. Don Luis is about to stab her with Esteban's knife when Perez intervenes. It develops that Manuela really loves Perez. Don Luis abandons his revenge, leaves the lovers happy and Manvers free to wed his American fiancee, Joan.

Patrons who enjoy straight, unadulterated melodrama with the "heroics" laid on thick and the "lid off" as regards a generous provision of scraps, stabbing affrays, hair-breadth escapes, threatened murder and sudden death, with a Latin blood feud thrown in for good measure, should find The Spanish Jade excellent screen diet. Those of a more critical turn of mind will probably grin over many of the episodes where melodramatic fury is piled up "regardless" and savors strongly of burlesque. Allowance must however be made for the fact that while such a plot would be deemed a rank absurdity if developed in the prosaic U. S., its gory complications assume a more natural air when the foreign settings are taken into consideration. And there is no denying the beauty of the scenery caught by the camera. The film was produced abroad and the views obtained in the country where the action takes place. As might be expected, the local color is superb and from an artistic standpoint the picture leaves nothing to be desired.

Points of Appeal.—Frankly melodramatic, the story is crammed with thrills. the heroine wins sympathy through her loyalty to the young American wrongfully accused of having slain the villain in the case, and her willingness to sacrifice even her love for Perez because of a strong sense of justice. The element of suspense is not lacking and a pleasing climax is achieved.

Cast.—David Powell fills the hero role with his accustomed grace and energy, Evelyn Brent is physically attractive in the part of Manuela and fully equal to the demands made upon her emotional ability as the beautiful senorita, Charles De Rochefort is an impressively sinister figure as the villainous Esteban and adequate support is rendered by other members of the company.

Photography, Lighting, Direction. — The Spanish views are rich in beauty, there are many fine exteriors and interiors, with skilful long shots and clear, distinct lighting. The continuity is tolerably smooth and the action moves rapidly.

Golden Dreams

Goldwyn Photoplay in Six Parts. Author, Zane Grey. Directors, Jean Hersholt, Gus Peterson and C. O. Rush. Cameraman, William Edmond. Running Time, Sixty Minutes.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Countess de Elberca, Madame Rose Dione; Mercedes McDonald, Claire Adams; Enrique McDonald, Norris McKay; Sandy Buchanan, Carl Gantvoort; Althea Lippincott, Audrey Chapman; Countess de Elberca's Cousin, Ida Ward; Duke Othomo, Bertram Grassby; Don Felipe de Cristobal, Frank Leigh; Pedro, H. G. Mullen; Big Bill, Pomeroy Cannon.

Mercedes MacDonald, Spanisb senorita reared in America, returns to live with her aunt, the Countess de Albercas, in a country settled formerly by Spanish colonists in the United States. She falls in love with Sandy Buchanan, American mining engineer, who is developing the oil lands of her aunt's estate. Don Felipe conspires with Duke Othomo to win Mercedes and plots to get rid of his rival, Buchanan. In attempting Buchanan's life, Mercede's brother is injured and Don Felipe inflames the countryside against Buchanan. The Countess dismisses Buchanan and locks up Mercedes. Buchanan rescues the girl and they are pursued by a mob lead by Don Felipe. They seek refuge in an inn, where they are aided by a traveling troupe of American circus folk. A fight takes place, the circus animals are loosed and Felipe and Othomo killed. Buchanan and Mercedes returns to the countess, who gives her consent to the marriage of the lovers.

The action of this picture takes place in a mythical Spanish State known as Chinora. When a dashing young American hero is screened in such surroundings it is a safe bet that he is going to have a lively time manhandling the natives, defeating conspiracies against his peace of mind, cheating death by violent means on various occasions and finally winning the belle of the burg despite all obstacles. This is exactly what happens in the present instance, but although the plot travels along rather familiar lines in its early stages, it holds its interest fairly well. Then comes a really unique scene, that in which a bunch of wild beasts pertaining to a circus hailing from the U. S. is turned loose to aid the hero and heroine by rough-housing the villains and their gang of armed cutthroats. This situation lifts the feature out of the ordinary class and provides a period of excitement warranted to send chills chasing adown the spine of the most blasé film fan. The ramping lions and tigers take the offensive in a charge that is the very acme of spectacular battling and Chief Malvolee meets his doom in a hand-to-paw encounter with one of the huge cats, a combat which registers as one big thrill from start to finish. Golden Dreams was the principal attraction on the program of the Capitol Theatre, New York, which marked the second anniversary of the S. L. Rothafel regime in that house and received a warm ovation.

Points of Appeal.—The love interest is well developed, the melodramatic incidents so freely scattered throughout the plot are enhanced by the rich color of the tropical settings and a satisfactory climax is attained.

Cast.—Claire Adams shines as a fascinating specimen of a Spanish beauty, Carl Gantvoort fills the hero role in capable style and the supporting cast does creditable work.

Photography, Lighting, Direction. — There are many fine views of wide stretches of open country, frowning castles and estates, with artistic lighting effects, the direction is satisfactory and fast action prevails.

World.—Here we have Mr. Hampton calling for his luxury squad. Herald.—While the animals are good, they don't always get stellar support from the humans. Evening World.—The Robert C. Bruce "My Country" film is wonderful and should not be missed. Journal.—The company is fitted to the plot nicely, but the animals and the action must be depended upon to put the film across. Globe.—There is really very little to be said for this picture. The feature is the unit on the program least to be recommended. Evening Mail.—A splendidly diversified program is offered. Telegram.—Zane Grey supplies the story with enough thrills to supply two or three films with excitement. American.—Suddenly the whole menagerie of a circus was uncaged and the snarling brutes lunge forward to a feast of human flesh. That was the big scene, and I revelled in it, but, alas they were satiated too soon.

American.—Katherine McDonald is admirable in the film. Tribune.—She continues to be the most beautiful and gracious star. But the picture itself is one of the most unnecessary things we have seen. Herald.—This variation on the triangle theme by driving it tandem in parallel cases has been directed with very few of the hackneyed formulæ, and though most of the real drama is borne by the subplot, one really is interested in the affinity question once more. Evening Mail.—Despite its excellent cast it is uninspiringly done. Journal.—Katherine MacDonald is to be forgiven for past trifles. She vindicates herself admirably in her latest contribution. Telegram.—Miss McDonald's comeliness is much appreciated by the spectators. World.—With Katherine MacDonald and her company there is no fault to be found. They did their best—but how they worked.

American.—Betty Compson showed some improvement over her previous impersonations. Tribune.—Aside from two or three wonderful shots (with the camera) it failed to interest us in the least. Herald.—This is a hard story to sit through in hot weather—because it has several things that are enticing. Two of them are the deep drifts of snow and the bootleg whisky that flows so freely. Evening World.—It all comes out right in the end and one goes away on these humid nights with a fond memory of delightful snow scenes. Journal.—Betty Compson is a picture in the Quasi-Esquimaux clothes. Telegram.—Dramatically and pictorially the film is of the highest order. Sun.—It affords genuine pleasure to see a film producer extract the picturesque, the dramatic and romantic from a story and put it on the screen without overloading his picture with non-essentials.

Herald.—The principal interest attached to this picture lies in watching the expensive stellar cast perform. Evening World.—The film is certainly well worth seeing, even if one merely wants to see some beautiful photography. Globe.—While produced with extravagance and wonderfully well photographed it can hardly be said to furnish more than fair entertainment. Journal.—Nothing especially new in all this. But the banality of the play is saved by the charm of Miss Dalton and the sincerity of Milton Sills. Telegram.—Dorothy Dalton excels all her previous accomplishments on the screen. In the earlier part of the story she appears as a dominating figure in English social life. Later in more primitive scenes she is doubly impressive as a woman in a wilderness.

Press Comments

Times.—Just another photoplay showing how a youth who is led astray by social sham finally redeems himself. Herald.—There is a potent quality in this story of social hypocrisy. Evening World.—The story of a Southerner who comes to New York. His experiences are interesting and at times pathetic. Globe.—Gives a new angle on the old story of the youth from a small town who comes to New York. Journal.—This reviewer felt as though he were hearing an argument in support of an impossible cause. American.—To an addict of Childs it's an education to view such a picture and "False Fronts" was a delight with its dinner scene showing the guests toying with grapefruit. Telegram.—While it is admitted that there is very little depth to the story, it will be found very entertaining and permits one to leave this little "drawing room" theatre in a very pleasant frame of mind.

Press Comments

Times.—It is compellingly interesting. World.—It makes you shiver one minute and stew the next. Not a smile from start to finish. Herald.—Here is a form of a Christmas carol done with the sombre, heavy tints of the Scandinavian fjords. Evening Mail.—Grewsome film introducing a grizzly ghost passage, though this self-same episode is the most interesting of the film. Journal.—The great and perhaps only attraction is the excellent acting of its four principal players. Telegram.—One of the masterpieces of the famous Swedish novelist, Miss Selma Lagerlof, is the basis for a remarkably absorbing film drama. The foreign aspect of the picture lends an additional appeal to this remarkable film. Sun.—A searching but sombre study of the manner in which a spark of good in the soul of a good-for-nothing may be fanned to flame by a good woman's trust. There is something Ibsenesque in this adaptation of Selma Lagerlof's book.

THE public-wise manager knows that an audience comfortably seated is half won. He knows, too, that with the other elements of attraction more or less evenly balanced, the more comfortable seats of one theatre will easily swing the decision of "where to go" in its favor.

Seating that was tolerated five and ten years ago is endured under protest now or altogether avoided.

EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW

The Handwriting on the Wall

By L. W. BOYNTON

FROM Ohio comes the news that Mrs. Evalyn F. Snow, who reigned for some months as a Czarina of the films, has lost her job. Whatever other reasons may be assigned for her dismissal, nobody will forget the fact that she literally talked herself out of office. She leaves in the public mind a sorry memorial in the form of her oft-quoted statements that "seventy-five per cent of the people never think at all" and "the people are not fit to judge for themselves."

Elsewhere in this issue we discuss in detail the history of the Snow episode and we give an account of the fight which Exhibitors Trade Review waged against censorship tyranny in the State of Ohio.

In the life of this publication we have seen the disappearance of several official representatives of that singular form of inquisition known as motion picture censorship. We recall Dr. Ellis Paxson Oberholtzer, who once held the power of life or death over the industry in Pennsylvania; there comes to mind also one Major Funkhouser who used to have the final say as to what the people of Chicago could or could not look at on the screen. There were others. They all had one outstanding characteristic: they got to the point where they considered themselves appointed from on high. Such is the nature of autocrats. Censorship breeds autocracy.

Ohio has no monopoly on censors who believe themselves better than the people. There is a parallel case in New York State right at this moment. Every censor board seems to have its talkative member. In Ohio it was Mrs. Snow. In New York it is Joseph Levenson.

Levenson, as we pointed out recently, joined the club Mrs. Snow formed. His attitude toward his country is that "more than half the population of America is below normal intelligence." He too, goes about the state making speeches in attempted justification of his job. He, too, like all autocrats is obsessed with the idea that he rules by divine right; and he, too, like all tyrants, is placing himself on the toboggan upon which he will slide rudely into oblivion.

We just take this occasion to point out to Levenson that the same fate which Mrs. Snow met is in store for him—sooner or later. Levenson ought to look up the files of Exhibitors Trade Review and there read the opinions of citizens throughout the country published over a series of recent weeks, condemning censorship, yes; but more especially condemning tyrants who belittle and berate the intelligence of the people of America.

These opinions, gathered in a nation-wide canvass, were provoked by Mrs. Snow's tactics and utterances in Ohio. But they apply in equal degree to the silly little strutting autocrat Levenson.

We suggest that he read them. And while he reads them, let him remember that he is reading an advance notice of is own official obituary.

Another Forward Step by Mr. Hays

ANNOUNCEMENT is made that representatives of many of the national civic, philanthropic and educational organizations will meet Mr. Hays in conference on June 22 to discuss the vital subject of the industry's relation to the public.

Mr. Hays has invited these leaders of thought and influence in America to co-operate with the organization of which he is the head. He seeks their sympathetic interest; their suggestions; their ideas for making the motion picture an increasingly greater power in American life.

Last week Mr. Hays announced that the movement for higher standards had been put into effect at the studios. This week he makes known the fact that he is enlisting the aid of the great social, welfare and educational agencies. The constructive work that was assured the industry when Mr. Hays came into it thus goes steadily forward.

Not a theatre in the country but will gain in prestige and commercial stability through this latest big forward step. The influence of the leaders of America thrown on the side of the motion picture—think what that means! To take only one phase of the matter, think what it will mean in laying the spectre of censorship!

The building of good-will; the bringing about of a change in attitude toward the motion picture and the motion picture industry on the part of many influential citizens; in short, the mobilization of public opinion was the most important task that confronted Mr. Hays when he took office.

Is there any man in the industry so blind that he cannot see this tremendous job actually being accomplished under the Hays leadership—a leadership which combines—in remarkable degree—enthusiasm and sincerity with wisdom?

Hays and Cohen Start Negotiations; O'Reilly Calls State Board to Confer with M. P. P. D. A.

NEGOTIATIONS for the settlement of the inner problems of the industry were started this week between Will H. Hays, President of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., and a group of exhibitors headed by Sydney S. Cohen, representing the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

As already told in the columns of Exhibitors Trade Review, Mr. Cohen and his associates are the second group to confer with Mr. Hays. The first was the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York City, which took up with the producer-distributor head the question of an equitable contract and other problems shortly after the Washington Convention.

O'Reilly Group to Meet Hays

A third exhibitor group will shortly be added to the list. Charles L. O'Reilly, President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York State, Inc., announced on Wednesday, June 14, that he had arranged a meeting between his Board of Directors and Mr. Hays for next week.

The T. O. C. C. group, of which Senator James J. Walker is the counsel and spokesman, has already reached an advanced stage in its negotiations with the President of the M. P. P. D. A. A form of equitable contract has been drawn and has been under discussion participated in by Senator Walker, Bernard Edelhertz, Louis F. Blumenthal and Leo Brecher, for the T. O. C. C.; and the following committee representing the Hays organization: Sidney R. Kent, of Famous Players-Lasky; W. R. Sheehan, of Fox Film Corporation; and Karl W. Kirchwey, of counsel for Selznick.

It was pointed out by a prominent member of the T. O. C. C. that the New York City organization was in a position to give definite guarantees for the performance of any agreement that might be reached. Close observers called attention to the fact that the crisis in the Hays-M. P. T. O. A. negotiations would be reached when Mr. Cohen and his group were called upon to prove definitely just what exhibitors and how many they represented and could vouch for.

The Hays-M. P. T. O. A. negotiations were initiated on Monday, June 12, with a luncheon at the Hotel Biltmore. A general discussion was held, after which it was decided to appoint subcommittees to thresh out details of the problems and report back. It is understood that Mr. Cohen appointed as his subcommittee W. A. Steffes, W. A. True and W. D. Burford of his Board of Directors. The committee representing the Hays organization was: Mr. Hays, Mr. Kent, Mr. Sheehan, R. A. White of Fox, and Courtland Smith, secretary of the M. P. P. D. A.

The only statement issued with regard to the negotiations came from Mr. Hays' office on Thursday afternoon, June 15. It read as follows:

"The conference commenced on Monday last between Will H. Hays, President of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., and President Sydney S.

Hays Calls Conference of Big Civic and Social Welfare Organizations

REPRESENTATIVES of many of the national civic, social welfare and educational organizations will meet in conference with Will H. Hays on June 22nd, to discuss ways and means for public co-operation in the attainment of the objects for which the Association of Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America was founded. Invitations have been sent to more than fifty of these organizations.

The purposes of the Association, as stated in its Articles of Association, are:

1. "Establishing and maintaining the highest possible moral and artistic standards of motion picture production," and
2. "Developing the educational as well as the entertainment value and general usefulness of the industry."

Mr. Hays, in referring to the Conference, made the following statement:

"As the principal amusement of the great majority of our people and the sole amusement of millions, and as an agency of limitless moral influence and educational possibility, motion picture production is a matter of very definite public concern. We hope that this Conference and similar meetings will aid us in getting every possible viewpoint for the benefit of the producers, and bring the leaders of civic affairs into the closest co-operation, all to the end that we may develop constructive ways and means for the effective application of what must be in all thinking people a sympathetic interest in the success of the Association's purposes of establishing and maintaining the highest possible moral and artistic standards of motion picture production and developing the educational as well as the entertainment value and general usefulness of the industry."

Cohen and the members of the Board of Directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, is yet under way and many matters of vital concern to the Motion Picture Industry have been and are yet being considered.

"The first meeting was held at the Hotel Biltmore, following a luncheon, and other sessions were held in Mr. Hays' office and meetings of subcommittees of both organizations were held at different offices.

"The subject of a more uniform and understandable contract for the mutual advantage of all concerned was one of the main issues. The reduced cost of accessories, the question of deposits, and the development of an effective arbitration plan operative in each exchange section of the country, were matters discussed.

"Understandings and agreements are in process of formation on all of the phases indicated and at the time of going to press the committees having the matters in charge are in session. There is every indication that substantial progress is being made.

"Those attending the conference sessions are:

"For the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc.: Will H. Hays, Sidney Kent, W. R. Sheehan, Karl Kirchwey, R. A. White and Courtland Smith.

"For the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America: Sydney S. Cohen, W. A. True, W. A. Steffes, W. D. Burford, H. B. Varner, Joseph Rhode, Claude E. Cady, A. R. Pramer, R. F. Woodhull, E. M. Fay, M. E. Comerford, A. Julian Brylawsky, Charles Whitehurst, W. H. Cadoret, Jacob Lourie, Howard Smith, M. J. O'Toole, A. J. Moeller, John Collins, Dave Cohen and Harry Davis."

Ohio Censor Czarina Loses Her Job

Mrs. Evalyn F. Snow Dismissed from Office; Exhibitors Trade Review Printed Mass of Opinions from Representative Citizens and Sent Them to Newspapers Throughout Country

EVALYN FRANCES SNOW, for thirteen months chief motion picture censor of Ohio, was summarily removed from her position of great and hardly brief authority on June 10. The axe that severed her official head was wielded by Vernon H. Riegel, director of the department of public instruction, who declared there were no political or personal reasons for his action.

"According to the law, I am responsible for the way the division of censorship functions," declared Director Riegel. "I was convinced that if it were to be administered properly a change would have to be made—and I made that change."

Mrs. Snow on the evening of her dismissal said the letter of notification contained no reasons for the action. She declared there had been a "determined effort on the part of Director Riegel to get rid of me. He threatened me with dismissal last Monday, and for some months back has told me he was going to have me removed.

Mrs. Snow was given two days in which to vacate her office, and she immediately took steps to remove her personal belongings, all of which were out of the office on the day she received by messenger her notification of removal. She indicated that she would take no steps to contest the action.

The former chief censor charged that on the Monday preceding her dismissal her office had been entered under instructions from Mr. Riegel and official papers removed. When she complained, she said, she had been threatened with dismissal.

To Establish New Policies

Director Riegel would not comment on Mrs. Snow's version. He said the work of the censor division would be taken under his personal supervision. "We expect to establish standards for strict and consistent censorship," he added. The director expressed confidence in the ability of the division to develop standards for judgment of films and declared every effort would be made to serve everybody concerned, in accordance with the constitution, enacted laws and the rights of the public in general.

"We will get things completely organized and establish an entirely new set of policies," said Mr. Riegel. "Then when the successor comes in the policies will be there for him to follow." This statement was construed by those interested as indicating there will be no appointment of a successor to Mrs. Snow for some time to come.

The departure of Mrs. Snow may not necessarily have any effect on the fate of pictures rejected by her, Director Riegel said. No wholesale reviews will be ordered, but pictures that have been rejected may again be examined if the facts warrant.

Ever since Mrs. Snow's appointment there has been friction within her department and between her department and the governor's office. The situation was further complicated by the fact that Director Riegel is a Democrat, an appointee of former Governor Cox. Nevertheless, throughout the entire controversy that has raged around the personality of the woman who was "so sot in her judgments" Governor Harry L. Davis has stood by his director of education.

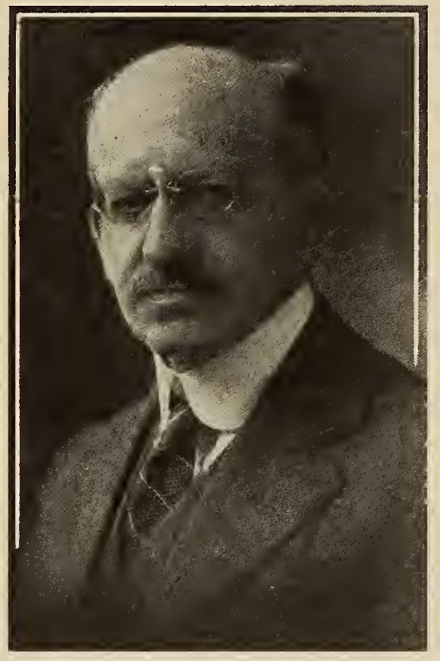
The official passing of Mrs. Snow marks the end of a long and bitter fight—a fight for the establishment of the rule of reason in place of what for producers has been a reign of terror. The woman who for thirteen months imposed her will so far as concerned film distribution in Ohio on the motion picture industry was not permitted to hold autocratic sway without challenge on the part of the men whose interests were being attacked or by the public at large whose rights were being invaded.

One of the companies that refused to be silenced out of respect for further disfavors to come was Pathe. From the first it stood out for its rights, as it understood those rights to have been established by the rulings of courts since courts have existed.

Exhibitors Trade Review may be pardoned for renewing to recent memory its leadership in the fight

Mrs. Evalyn F. Snow, deposed censor Czarina of Ohio, photographed by Pathe News. This view of Mrs. Snow, with others on the same reel, were ordered off the screen by her. Pathe appealed and won its right to free expression about public officials shortly before Mrs. Snow was dismissed from office.

Mrs. Snow Belittled the People's Intelligence—She is Out Levenson Also Belittles the People's Intelligence— ?



"More than half the population of America is Below Normal Intelligence"

—Joseph Levenson, of the New York State Censorship Board in a Speech Before the Buffalo Rotary Club

for the removal of Mrs. Snow. A reference to its files will show that in the six issues printed between April 8 and May 13, inclusive, more than nineteen pages were devoted to censorship as a whole and to the Ohio situation in particular. In addition to this, proofs of the collated opinions of prominent men and women were sent out to 200 newspapers throughout the country.

One of the most effective examples of the work of Pathe in the campaign of defense in Ohio was its initiation of steps leading to the decision by Attorney General Price of Ohio that State Director of Education Riegel was the supreme authority in the state in matters affecting the censorship of pictures—in other words, that Mrs. Snow not only was not supreme but that she was subordinate to Mr. Riegel.

Mrs. Snow and Her Photograph

In the latter part of March last the Pathe News Weekly carried a photograph of Mrs. Snow in her office in Columbus and showing her in the act of examining film. Accompanying the scenes were captions to which Mrs. Snow immediately took exception, which was manifested in the following official order:

Cut out sub-title "In the Limelight, Cincinnati, Ohio. Mrs. Evalyn F. Snow." "Can Americans Think?" "Chief of Ohio Censorship, who is quoted as saying '75 per cent of the people never think at all.'"

Cut out all scenes showing Mrs. Snow.

Cut out sub-title "She says the people are not fit to judge for themselves. What do you think?"

Cut out all scenes showing Mrs. Snow and operator.

The Pathe Company immediately made formal appeal to the Department of Education for a hearing, asking for a reversal of the order of Mrs. Snow.

That reversal has just been ordered by Director Riegel.

Paul Tessier, former Pathe manager at Cleveland, was placed under arrest charged with failure to make an elimination in a "Snub" Pollard comedy as ordered by the chief censor. The Pathe Company vigorously contested the arrest, demanded and secured a jury trial, and won the case.

Stanley C. Jacques, Pathe manager at Cincinnati, has been arrested on an affidavit sworn to by the Rev. Raymond G. Clapp of Cincinnati, charging that on March 25 he saw Pathe News No. 25 shown in a theatre without an accompanying license.

The Trade Review's Campaign

It was on April 8 that EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW in a two-page editorial article entitled "Censorship and the People" opened its batteries upon the proposition, fathered for years by the "reformers," that the "best people" want censorship. Also it began the publication of opinions of representative citizens of the country at large which most effectually cut the ground from under the feet of the reformers.

Mayors, municipal officials, lawyers, judges, bankers, ministers, school superintendents and principals, college heads and professors, newspaper editors, clubwomen and writers all declared against not only the brand of autocracy imposed upon the public by the Ohio censor chief, but against legalized censorship in any form.

These declarations were printed in six consecutive issues, over a dozen pages being devoted to them. Also, as stated, proofs of these views were supplied to over 200 of the principal newspapers of the country.

"Meanwhile, we take occasion to reaffirm our own unalterable opposition to censorship and our determination to fight until the censorship tyranny is forever ended," declared this journal on April 8.

Another Cohen Attack Answered

In Response to Letter from Exhibitors Trade Review, New York President Gives Facts About State Contribution to M. P. T. O. A.—Independent State Units As Exhibitors' Salvation

ON June 14, the following letter was addressed by L. W. Boynton, Editor and Publisher of EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW, to Charles L. O'Reilly, President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the State of New York:

"Mr. Charles L. O'Reilly,
"President,
"Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York State, Inc.,
"708 Times Building,
"New York City.

"My Dear Mr. O'Reilly:

"On June 1st, a representative of EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW received from you the information that New York State had contributed to the treasury of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America the sum of Eleven Thousand Dollars of the Thirty-Nine Thousand Dollars which Sydney Cohen informed his Board of Directors and Executive Committee was collected from the entire country during the period from the Minneapolis to the Washington conventions.

"In our issue dated June 10th, Page 70, that statement was printed.

"We invite your attention to the fact that the Exhibitors' Bulletin of date June 10, 1922, printed the following:

" 'In a recent issue of EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW the statement is made that the New York State Division of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America contributed $11,000 to the national body during the past year.

" 'No such sum or anything approaching it was paid over to the national body by the New York State unit. If it was collected from the Theatre Owners of New York State to pay their quota to the national body it did not reach the intended destination.

" 'It would be well for the Theatre Owners in New York State to ascertain what became of this money if they paid it in. The national organization did not get it. The small amount received from the New York State organization during the past year looks puny indeed compared with that which EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW claims was piad.'

"Will you please give us a formal statement in writing of the facts in this matter?

"Sincerely yours,
"L. W. BOYNTON,
"Editor and Publisher."

Mr. O'Reilly's Reply

On June 15 Mr. O'Reilly replied as follows:

"Mr. L. W. Boynton,
"Editor and Publisher,
"Exhibitors Trade Review,
"New York City.
"My dear Mr. Boynton:

"In answer to your communication of the 14th instant, referring to an article in Cohen's "Bull-a-ton" issue of June 10, 1922, I beg to state as follows:

"The financial report of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America covering the period from the Minneapolis to the Washington conventions, was read to the officer body at the Washington convention. This financial report was under Cohen's direct control, as were the finances of the organization itself. The report showed that the entire amount collected from all sources was approximately $39,000.

"Of this total, the report showed, as I recollect that over $4,000 had been retained by the Cohen organization from the two checks given to Mrs. Dodge and Mr. Schwartz as reimbursement from the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation to them.

"This leaves the amount collected from the exhibitors of the entire country at approximately $35,000. Of this latter sum, motion pic-

Glenn Harper, Cohen Lieutenant in Southern California, Defeated in His Local Organization

By Telegraph to Exhibitors Trade Review

Los Angeles, June 15.

GLENN HARPER, a Cohen lieutenant and recently elected First Vice-President of the M. P. T. O. A. at the Washington Convention, has been defeated in his own local organization, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Southern California.

According to information obtained by your correspondent, Harper came back from the Washington Convention demanding his re-election as Secretary of the Southern California unit, the majority of the members of which were dissatisfied with his handling of the office.

When the election was held, Harper, a candidate for the Board of Directors, received eight votes out of a total of thirty-nine. This defeat made him ineligible for Secretary.

The following officers were chosen: President—F. O. Adler, Victoria Theatre, San Pedro; Secretary—J. L. Lazarus, Royal Theatre, Los Angeles.

The news of Harper's defeat was interpreted in exhibitor circles in New York as probably meaning that Southern California was preparing to repudiate the Cohen regime. He has been the chief Cohen representative in the Los Angeles territory, and was a member of the National Executive Committee prior to his election as First Vice-President.

ture theatre owners in the State of New York contributed over $9,000—more than twenty-five per cent of all the money given by the exhibitors of the country to the Treasury of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

"The statement contained in your publication is correct, inasmuch as the State of New York was ready to pay an additional $2,500 into the National Treasury. That it was not paid, Cohen and his machine have nobody but themselves to blame. When the New York delegation was subjected to steam roller tactics and gag rule at Washington, the State Board of Directors refused to contribute anything further to the Cohen organization.

Character Assassination

"I note that Cohen's house organ, which you quote, is guilty of the publication of an old falsehood about the disposition of the New York State funds. The circulation of this lie immediately preceded the Washington Convention and was part of the Cohen program of character assassination. Its official repudiation by Cohen's own state at the Albany meeting just prior to the Washington convention seems to have made no impression on him. He is continuing to spend the money of his organization in the publication of scurrilous attacks on the theatre owners of the State of New York who gave of their time and their money to build up a national organization for the protection of the exhibitors of the country, only to find their hopes wrecked at Washington by Cohen's insistence on rule or ruin.

"His tactics in the present instance are only additional proof that the salvation of the exhibitors must be found in strongly organized, independent, self-governing State units, such as the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the State of New York.

"When the exhibitors of the country awaken to the realization of the real character and purpose of Cohen, they will appreciate the spirit of the men who live so near him and who know him so well.

"Sincerely yours,
"CHAS. L. O'REILLY,
President,
"Motion Picture Theatre Owners,
"State of New York."

Complete Plans for Walker Dinner

Former Governor "Al" Smith Will Officiate As Toastmaster at Chamber of Commerce Testimonial to Senator—Giants and Yankees Will Be Present

ALFRED E. SMITH, former Governor of New York State, will preside at the testimonial dinner to Senator James J. Walker, which will be tendered him by the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce. Attending the function, which is scheduled for the Plaza Hotel, New York, on the evening of June 19, will be the members of the Giant and Yankee baseball clubs. Among the speakers will be De Wolf Hopper, famous as comedian and citizen of New York, one-time screen player and known to the world of baseball fans at large as the exponent of "Casey at the Bat." Also in attendance will be all the boxing champions who may be present in the city.

Charles L. O'Reilly, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the State of New York, will attend, accompanied by the entire Board of Directors of the organization.

Applications for reservations already indicate that the capacity of the Plaza's dining room will be tested, reports William Brandt, chairman of the dinner committee. All the judges on the New York bench as well as Mayor Hylan and the entire personnel of the commissioners of the municipal administration have signified their intention of being present to do honor to the Senator.

Big Response from Industry

The response of the film industry to the announcement of the dinner by the Chamber of Commerce has been practically unanimous. Every company has made application to Louis F. Blumenthal, treasurer of the committee, for reservations, and these applications have come from the smaller companies as well as the large ones.

Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., heads the honorary committee. Other members of the same committee are E. F. Albee, chief of the Keith enterprises; John Ringling, of the long known circus family; Lee Shubert, theatre man; Judge Francis X. McQuade, representing major league baseball clubs; Marcus Loew, Horace De Lisser, Robert Grier Cook, Max Levine, Sam H. Harris, Samuel Rothafel, John McE. Bowman and Charles Gehring.

Senator James J. Walker

Indicating the interest in the dinner, which has extended even to the humbler constituents of the Senator, Chairman Brandt reports that on Wednesday the headquarters of the Chamber of Commerce was visited by two residents of the district represented by the Senator in Albany, men who, judged by their appearance, were unaccustomed to paying $10 for a dinner ticket. The visitors insisted they be permitted to procure tickets, as they could not think of being debarred from the opportunity of adding their testimony to the esteem in which the Senator is held in his own community.

Buffalo Men to Attend

Buffalo and western New York will be well represented. Buffalo theatre men who will attend will be J. H. Michael, executive chairman of the State organization and president of the western New York unit of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York State, Inc.; Walter Hays, vice-president of the Mark-Strand interests; F. R. Kramer, treasurer of the Shea Amusement Company; M. Slotkin, general manager of the Monumental Theatre corporation, operators of the new Lafayette Square and Olympic. From Niagara Falls will go Charlie Hayman, president of the Cataract Theatre corporation, and Harris Lumberg, of the Lumberg Theatre. Nate Robbins and other prominent central New York exhibitors will join the Buffalo special en route.

Those who have not already signified their intention of attending may forward applications for reservations to Mr. Blumenthal at the headquarters of the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce, 1540 Broadway, with check for $10 for each cover desired.

New Unit Is Formed in Syracuse

M. P. T. O. of New York State Continues Mobilization of Forces—Cohen Organization Condemned

FURTHER crystallization of the forces of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York State, Inc., was announced this week by President Charles L. O'Reilly, who made public the news that Syracuse had been organized 100 per cent at a meeting on June 12.

Mr. O'Reilly also made formal announcement that the State Board of Directors and officers would meet in New York City next Monday, June 19. Arrangements have been made for the State officials to meet Will H. Hays for the discussion of an equitable form of contract.

Mr. O'Reilly's statement follows:

"All of the theatre owners in the city of Syracuse attended a meeting called by State Secretary S. I. Berman on Monday, June 12.

"A key city organization was formed to co-operate with the State organization.

"All of the theatre owners in the city of Syracuse are members of the State League.

"The following theatre owners were elected to office: President, James Rowe, Turn Hall Theatre; Vice-President, Jack Griswold, Savoy Theatre; Treasurer, Benjamin Fitzer, Happy Hour Theatre; Secretary, A. Robbins, Eckel Theatre.

"Resolutions were passed endorsing the work of the officers of the State organization and pledging undivided support to them, and requesting the State organization to sever its relations with the national organization, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

"A resolution was passed by a unanimous standing vote thanking Senator James J. Walker for his efforts in behalf of the exhibitors of the State.

"The Board of Directors and officers of the State Association have been called for an executive meeting to be held in the City of New York on Monday, June 19, at 1 p. m., at State Headquarters, Times Building. The matter of construction and regulation of theatres in the State will be taken up at this meeting. It is expected that Commissioner Sayre of the Industrial Board or his deputy will be present to hold a conference with the board of directors.

"The arbitration agreement with the F. I. L. M. Clubs of the State is about to expire and a new and more equitable agreement must be drawn. Representatives of the three F. I. L. M. Clubs of the State will be present for negotiation of same at this meeting.

"Arrangements have been made to meet Mr. Will H. Hays, head of the Producers and Distributors Organization, to arrange for an equitable and standard contract.

"A testimonial dinner will be given to Senator James J. Walker at the Plaza Hotel on Monday evening, June 19. Reservations have been made for our board of directors to attend.

"Reports will be made as to the various local organizations organized as part of our State Association. The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the State of New York has been incorporated as ordered at the last meeting of the board of directors. Arrangements for a constitution and by-laws will come up for final passage at this meeting.

"A complete final report of the organization's funds will be submitted."

Cohen Faces New Test in Kansas

Executive Committee Meeting June 20 Expected to Determine Whether State Will Remain in "National" Body

THE real strength of the anti-Cohen faction of the M. P. T. O. of Kansas promises to be revealed in the meeting of the executive board of that organization at the Hotel Baltimore, Kansas City, June 20. The meeting originally was scheduled for last week, but was postponed.

Rumors that the Kansas theatre owners were contemplating a secession from the national organization have been denied by M. Van Praag, president. The real strength, and there comes from authentic sources that it is real strength, of the faction opposed to Cohen, will be shown at this meeting, which bids fair to rival any State convention in importance.

Methods of raising the national quota will be adopted perhaps—if there is not too much discord in the ranks of the exhibitors. The appointment of the new business manager will be confirmed and the new system of operating the M. P. T. O. of Kansas outlined.

Peculiar circumstances confront the Kansas theatre owners in that there seems to be an organization within an organization in the M. P. T. O. of Kansas, one faction solid behind M. Van Praag, who is a staunch supporter of Cohen, and the other anti-Cohen. Everything will hinge upon the question of adopting methods to raise the national quota, which is expected to be the "match in the powder." But little is known of the plans and attitude of the anti-Cohen forces, as they are as a rumbling stream in a deep chasm.

That the original plans of the M. P. T. O. of Kansas, in installing a business manager and placing the organization on a comparative new plane, will be carried out despite any unexpected developments at the executive board meeting, is beyond doubt. The following of President Van Praag is conceded to be strong enough to do this. As for other developments—another week will tell much of the story.

North Carolina to Meet June 20

Arrangements for Financing State Organization Will Be One of Main Problems at Convention

ARRANGEMENTS for the financing of the State organization without the heretofore burdensome outlay by just a few of the leading exhibitors of the State will be one of the main subjects of discussion by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of North Carolina at their annual convention at the Langren Hotel, Asheville, June 20 to 22, inclusive.

A. J. Moeller, general manager of the M. P. T. O. A. and general manager of the Michigan exhibitor organization, will attend the convention and will tell the Carolina exhibitors how the Michigan organization was brought to the front as one of the strongest and best financed State units in the country. W. G. Allen, representing the Paramount Publicity Corporation, will also attend and speak to the exhibitors upon a matter of financing the organization through their slide proposition.

H. T. Jones, public relations representative of the Southern Enterprises, Inc., of Atlanta, who has done wonderful work in Georgia, Florida, South Carolina and Tennessee toward combating sentiment for censorship, through the establishment of better films committees and educational work, has been invited and accepted to attend and give the exhibitors a few pointers upon a subject that both President Wells and Secretary Varner are very anxious to take up to a definite end.

E. F. Dardine, veteran exchange manager of the Universal Charlotte office, has also been invited to meet with the exhibitors with an idea to bringing closer relations between the film exchanges and the theatre owners.

Tuesday, June 20, will be taken up with meetings of the executive and other committees, the first open session of the convention opening at 10 A. M. Wednesday, June 21.

Missouri Exhibitors Win Music Tax Case

Missouri exhibitors at last have obtained a decision in the much discussed music tax problem. The case against William Parsons, Pershing Theatre, Joplin, Mo., charged with playing the "Wabash Blues," has been dismissed, free from any settlement out of court and devoid of any complicating circumstances. It developed that the song was played on a mechanical piano, if it was played at all. Mr. Parsons denied the song was played. After a number of conferences with Lawrence E. Goldman, counsel and secretary of the M. P. T. O. of Missouri, Mr. Parsons was prepared to fight to the last ditch when the case was dismissed. This decision, it is believed, will end the burdens of Missouri exhibitors, so far as music tax is concerned.

With the appointment of a business manager and the adoption of the same operating plan that is prevalent in the Michigan State organization, the M. P. T. O. of Missouri plans to start life anew. The appointment of the new manager, whose name has not yet been announced, probably will be early in the fall, just a time when delegates to the constitutional convention are framing a new charter for Missouri.

South Expects Prosperity in Fall

Detailed Analysis of Theatre Conditions Shows Fewer Houses Closed Than Was Anticipated— Leading Exhibitors Discuss Situation in Dixie

IN the midst of the summer slump which unquestionably hits the South harder than any other section there are reports of fewer closings than might have been anticipated. A small percentage of theatres after more or less disastrous sailing through the winter season closed their doors rather than face an even greater loss during summer; others have reduced from six to three days, and a very few have cut down to two days a week.

The majority of summer closings are noted in the smaller towns, which incidentally form 80% of the theatres in the South. And there are more "summer closings" in Florida than any other State. That is easily accounted for and it is not a condition to cause alarm, for Florida has a "season" opening in October and continuing throughout March in full blast. That is the tourist season.

Before the summer season set in the South had just about reached rock bottom on the question of closings. For more than a year theatres have been dropping out. From a live, healthy aggregate of 1061 theatres in seven southeastern States eighteen months ago the total has dropped below nine hundred. But most of those theatres closed their doors before June 1.

It is true, however, that a number of exhibitors who are good business men as well as good showmen have taken occasion to close temporarily for repairs, remodelings and complete overhauling of their houses. The move was not entirely one of economics, but represented that element.

Maintain Admission Prices

For the most part exhibitors have tried to maintain present admission prices, though in a few instances reductions have been made with a marked increase of attendance which more than made up for the reduction per person. Even the largest houses have recognized the necessity for keeping amusement prices in line with the reductions in necessities and commodities. As far back as a year ago some localities effected reductions, and six months ago some radical cuts were made. With the beginning of May new scales went into some of the South's largest houses where the programs are of the highest class and where no retrenchment in that direction was made as a result of lowered admissions.

Almost without exception exhibitors of the South believe that the Fall season will initiate a healthier era. The psychological effect of a new season ushered in with particularly attractive and often with exceptionally strong pictures is to give new impetus. But in addition to that there is another very sound reason for revival of business in the Fall. That is the season when the major crops are marketed, and the South being largely agricultural responds to the stimulus of harvesting and marketing. At no time in the South's history has a general business depression been overcome until a good crop—meaning good general crops—were successfully grown, harvested and profitably marketed.

Offsetting Summer Depression

A survey of the territory develops three distinct theories as to the best method of offsetting the summer depression and bringing about a healthier condition that will be in a measure permanent. The remedy for the situation is pictures. Eighty-five exhibitors out of a hundred believe that pictures of consistently high merit will solve the problem. General Manager B. H. Mooney of the Mudd & Colley Amusement Company, Birmingham, Ala., says: "If theatres are to survive, to say nothing of gaining ground, it is imperative that we have pictures that enable us to hold our present patronage and build more patronage. When we say this to producers they begin to cite some of the year's outstanding productions—perhaps ten or twelve, or as many as thirty. Does that provide for a house that must have fifty-two top-notch pictures a year? And since we have competition and cannot pick from the entire market what percentage of the fifty-two programs of exceptional merit may we expect?

"When we can get one real box-office winner after another—pictures of consistently high standard graded with the uniformity that makes their brand an assurance of distinction, we will have no further problem.

Albert Sottile of the Pastime Amusement Company, Charleston, S. C., has his own opinion on this point. Mr. Sottile is not only an exhibitor, he is one of the biggest real estate men in Charleston and owns the theatre properties. Since he is building for permanence in Charleston and is more concerned to bring uniformly good business into his theatres for the sake of the theatres and their entertainment than to boost any given picture he is opposed to the method of exploitation which makes the patrons lose sight of the theatre as an institution. On this subject Mr. Sottile says: "I hold to the opinion that expensive super-specials and stunts in the exploiting of same are responsible in a large measure for the slump in business. What we need most is a regular clientele and not once-in-a-while picture fans who are attracted by the noise we make.

Should Standardize

"Business will be better when we standardize our business by offering always a good show and by cultivating a following based on the average merit of the merchandise that we sell."

Joe Burton of the Star Theatre, Toccoa, Ga., believes that we may hope for better times in the Fall; indeed he says, after traveling over practically the entire northern part of Georgia making more than fifty towns in the interest of exhibitor organization, that business is going to be good in another six months. But he declares that the producers are not alone responsible for the present condition. Though he appreciates the necessity for "bigger and better pictures" he says the exhibiting end of the business will never be strong until the exhibitors themselves are banded together with enough power to do some really constructive work.

Roland G. Hill, who has theatre interests in North and South Carolina, the largest being in Greensboro, N. C., says that "we are going through our lowest period now. The summer will probably be one of the worst in the history of the show business, but it is the deadly lull before the tide turns back. When the Fall season comes with cooler weather, new pictures, and the moving of a new crop we may expect a revival of interest in pictures and the beginning of a boom in business that will bring us back to normal."

The News of the Week

$1-a-Week Men Go to the Coast

Winners in Exploitation Competition to Be Feted While They Study Picture-Making in Los Angeles

Eight of the liveliest "live wire" exhibitors in the United States now are in Los Angeles, getting recreation, education and acquainted generally, as the guests of Associated First National Pictures, Inc. Unofficially they are known as the "$1-a-week-men." Officially they are the winners of the Exploitation Competition conducted by First National during its Anniversary Week, Feb. 18 to Feb. 25, 1922. There were nine of these winners, but one was unable at the last moment to make the tour, and alternates were chosen for two others.

Six of the exhibitors started from Chicago on their trip on Wednesday, June 15. They received a royal send-off in the Windy City. En route they picked up the seventh. The eighth left from Seattle. Following is a list of those who are making the trip: Alfred Gottesman, Strand Theatre, Shenandoah, Pa.; Ben Davis, manager of the Colonia Theatre, Norwich, N. Y.; Frank Steffy, Coliseum Theatre, Seattle, Wash.; A. G. Stolte, Des Moines Theatre, Des Moines, Iowa; Nick McMahon, Marlow Theatre, Ironton, Ohio; O. K. Mason, Regent Theatre, Wichita, Kan.; Joe Burton, Star Theatre, Toccoa, Ga.; Ralph Luber, Circle Theatre, Indianapolis.

Mr. Davis goes as an alternate for Edward L. Hyman, manager of the Strand Theatre, Brooklyn, who was unable to make the trip because of business pressure; Mr. McMahon is an alternate for John Paxton of the Musselman Theatre interests, Paris, Texas, and Willard C. Patterson of the Metropolitan Theatre, Atlanta, Ga., one of the winners, also is held at home by pressing business. First National will present the men who were unable t ogo with handsome tokens emblematic of the honor they won. On the trip, Messrs. Burton and Mason have with them their wives, who also are close students of progressive methods in conducting picture theatres. Mr. and Mrs. Mason joined the party at Newton, Kan. Mr. Steffy went to Los Angeles direct from Seattle.

During the time the "$1-a-week-men" are in Los Angeles they will meet First National stars and producers and will go through the various studios, studying at close range the making of pictures. Thus, by the time they have finished their visit, they will have become familiar with every angle of motion pictures, from the preparing of scenarios up to th emaking and finishing of productions.

Crowds of prominent motion picture people welcomed the winners when they assembled at Chicago. E. J. Eichenlaub, manager of First National's Chicago branch, took charge of the party. The first thing he did was to hand them a congratulatory message from Hon. George E. Cryer, mayor of Los Angeles. Similar messages were received from the Independent Screen Artists' Guild and the Western Associated Motion Picture Advertisers.

During the time the "$1-a-week-men" are in Los Angeles they will be entertained by the Screen Writers' Organization, the Western Association of Motion Picture Advertisers and various stars and producers. Louis B. Mayer will give them a big dinner. After remaining in Los Angeles for a week, they will get back on their jobs, and each will then write the results of his observations, and at the same time offer suggestions for the benefit of First National franchise holders.

Colored Night "Shots" of Madge Kennedy Picture Shown

The first experimental colored night shots of the new Madge Kennedy production were screened early this week for Director Henry Kolker, Rufus Steele, who is supervising production, and various members of the Madge Kennedy cast. These motion picture views of a brilliantly lighted Italian garden were taken with a special color-camera at the Shonnard Estate at Oyster Bay, Long Island.

Elaborate set pieces of fireworks were set off at that time, the scene representing a gala water-fete at which the heroine was the guest of honor.

First National Enters Suit Against T. H. Ince

Associated First National Pictures has instituted suit in the Supreme Court of New York State against Thomas H. Ince, alleging breach of contract. The papers in the case, which were filed this week by Loewenthal & Szold, of 23 Exchange Place, charge that Mr. Ince has failed to deliver pictures according to a contract entered into on August 31, 1921, to run for a period of three years.

The papers set forth that under the agreement Mr. Ince was to deliver a picture at periods of not less than four weeks and not more than ten weeks; that aside from "Hail the Woman" no production has been delivered to First National under the contract; that while Mr. Ince has complained of the terms of the contract, First National cannot concede that the exceptions were just or correct, and that in the interests of its franchise holders it was impossible to cancel the contract, and asks that Mr. Ince be restrained from directing, manufacturing, supervising or producing for any concern but First National.

At the offices of First National it was ascertained that the suit in no way involves the distribution of pictures by First National under the separate contracts between Associated Producers and First National, nor any of the other contracts executed between First National and various old Associated Producers' producers at the same time the contract was made with Mr. Ince, and that all of these contracts are being carried out as they were made.

At the offices of Mr. Ince it was stated that acting under instructions of counsel no statement would be given out.

Higham Will Be Honor Guest at A.M.P.A. Luncheon

Elaborate plans are being made by the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers for a luncheon at the Hotel Biltmore, New York, next Thursday, June 22, in honor of Sir Charles Higham, M. P., the first advertising man to serve as a member of Parliament and the first to be knighted.

In connection with the luncheon, which will be attended by city officials, advertising men in all lines of business and persons prominent in the motion picture industry, there will be an unusual exhibition of motion picture advertising. This exhibition, which is expected to be complete in every detail, will contain specimens of motion picture advertising from the early days of the industry to the present time.

Every big producing company is preparing its own special display for the exhibition. Paramount is arranging some striking original drawings and posters. Vitagraph is going back to the days of John Bunny and other popular stars of the early days; Warner Brothers and Warner Features will contrast their old with their new; Pathe predicts that it will have the most complete exhibit of all, and First National, Robertson-Cole, Goldwyn, Universal, Fox and other companies also are making enthusiastic predictions.

The A. M. P. A. has been busy for more than a week on plans for the luncheon and exhibition, and the following committees are working daily in preparation for the affair:

Sale of Tickets—Thomas Wiley, Charles Einfeld, P. A. Parsons.

Exhibition—J. W. O'Mahoney, Harry Lewis, Vincent Trotta, Lambert Guenther, Arthur Brilant.

Printing—A. M. Botsford, Horace Judge, Irving Green.

Publicity—Paul Gylick, Victor M. Shapiro, J. M. Loughborough, Charles McCarthy.

Guests—John Flinn, J. W. O'Mahoney, J. M. Loughborough, Vivian Moses.

D. W. Griffith will be the principal speaker at the luncheon and will introduce the guest of honor.

Sir Charles Higham came to this country as a representative of Lord Northcliffe and is Great Britain's credited delegate to the annual convention of the Advertising Clubs of the World.

Lavish Scenes Portray DeMille's "Manslaughter"

"The most lavish scenes since Joan the Woman, according to announcement, is the verdict of the veterans around the Lasky studio after witnessing the staging of the Roman bacchanal by Cecil B. DeMille for his current production, Manslaughter.

The episode, which is used to point a powerful moral, shows Rome just before the fall—pagan Rome with all its licentiousness and debauched beauty. At the height of the revel—while the guests, dancers and guards slumber in drunken stupor—the barbarian hordes storm the gates and pillage, burn and destroy everything in their path.

Leatrice Joy, Thomas Meighan and Lois Wilson have the principal roles.

No Real Business Decline in April

THE amusement business in April really did not decline, despite the impression to the contrary created by the publication of the Government tax returns, according to an analysis of the Government figures by S. R. Kent, in conjunction with Paramount's statistical department.

Official Government tax returns, as published, are as follows: April, $5,439,014; March, $6,284,528; January, $5,369,200; April, 1921, $7,415,568.

"At first glance," said Mr. Kent, "these figures might be construed as indicating a further slump in the amusement business since January of this year. Further analysis, however, shows that the amusement business is proceeding on about the same level of activity.

"The difference in the tax figures is due to a change in the law under which these taxes are levied. Beginning January 1, last, the Government admission tax was removed from admissions of ten cents or under. The best statistics available show that ten per cent of the total motion picture business is done by theatres charging ten cents or less for admission.

"Although this change in the law went into effect in January it is not apparent in the tax figures until February. Thus the published figures show an apparently sharp decline from January to April.

"Another factor entering into the apparent slump in April is that the tax offices in Washington are swamped from March 15 on, through handling the income tax, with a consequent neglect of less seasonal taxes. Every April the Government tax figures for April show a decline, due largely to the tremendous pressure of work put on the Government taxing machinery by the handling of income tax returns beginning March 15.

"I might add that when the Government tax figures are made public for this month of June they will show a big jump.. The reason for this sharp rise will not be so much in the improvement of the picture business, although it is improving steadily, as in the desire of Government officials to get all the money possible onto the books before the end of the Government's fiscal year, June 30.

"So you see, you have to look behind all figures to find out what they really mean."

Developing New Idea in Set Lighting

Interesting Experiments in Photographic Color Values Being Conducted by Myron Selznick on Pacific Coast

To completely change from one scene to another, yet still maintaining the same identical sets and backgrounds, by the mere turning of a series of electric switches, is the innovation which Myron Selznick promises to give to the art of the silent drama in the near future.

"For the past several weeks Myron Selznick, in conjunction with a research staff, has been experimenting upon a new method of stage lighting, radically different from anything that has yet been introduced to motion pictures, and the developments made in recent experiments prove that the process is practical in every way for cinematography," says a Selznick announcement.

"The principle on which these developments are being carried out is in the theory that, as various colors have different photographic values when painted upon scenery, these colors will have the same photographic values if thrown upon the scenery and back drops by means of colored lights instead of being painted on.

"To carry out these experiments, Mr. Selznick has built a miniature stage and studio, complete in every detail, with an entire line of baby spot-lights, mercury lights and every other type of illumination known to the studio, all specially built and scaled down to be in proportion. Several unique miniature sets have already been erected and are being experimented with. These sets are painted on a color scheme which, when exposed to the eye under natural light appear to be nothing but a weird hodge-podge of colors, but when viewed under colored lights thrown from certain angles of the stage, take on a definite and distinct shape and become an established scene. This scene can then be completely changed into a different one by no other action than simply throwing on and off a series of lights.

"The chief difficulty in perfecting the process was due to the establishing of known photographic effects and values from certain color combinations and angles. Mr. Selznick, who will apply for a patent to the process, predicts that not only will many new and striking photographic effects result from its use, but a distinct advancement will be given the art of the photoplay."

Lincoln's Life to Be Picturized by New Company

The life of Abraham Lincoln and his times is to be done into a picture by the Rockett-Naylor Productions, Inc., recently organized under the laws of Delaware, with offices at suite 304, Security Building, Hollywood.

The capital stock of the Rockett-Naylor company is $1,000,000, the officers being David H. Naylor, Jr., president; Ray R. Rockett, vice-president and general manager; Al Rockett, business and production manager; E. H. Christensen, treasurer.

Ray and Al Rockett were formerly president and production manager, respectively, of the Rockett Film Corporation in California, producers of The Truant Husband, Keeping up With Lizzie, Handle With Care, etc. David H. Naylor, Jr., is retired oil president and banker, late of Minneapolis, Kansas City and Tulsa, well known throughout the Mid-continent oil field.

Mr. Christensen was formerly vice-president of the Rockwell Film Corporation. He made his fortune in land, live stock and farming in the Middle West.

The tentative title of the Rockett-Naylor special will be The Life of Abraham Lincoln. Production will begin in about two months or as soon as all arrangements can be completed regarding the locations—Washington; The Virginia Peninsula; Hogenville, Kentucky; Springfield, New Salem, and other points in the Lincoln country of Illinois—for the producers will photograph the actual historical locations, relics and documents whenever possible, using sets only where the originals cannot possibly be utilized.

The studio and laboratory work will be done in Los Angeles and if present plans are carried out the picture will be released to the public as a road show under management of the producers and to exhibitors by direct arrangement.

Silas E. Snyder, since 1914 a director of motion picture publicity on the West Coast, will retire from the managing editorship of The American Cinematographer to handle the exploitation of the Lincoln picture.

"Merry-Go-Round" Is Title of New Stroheim Production

Merry - Go - Round is the title selected for the new Universal-Jewel production being made by Erich von Stroheim. The story is from Stroheim's own pen, and is said to be filled with dramatic qualities, suspense and romantic interest.

Construction work has started at Universal City on the many elaborate sets which will be used in this new Super-Jewel.

Elmer Sheeley, art director; Capt. R. W. Day, art director for the Stroheim unit; Archie Hall, technical director and others all are devoting their attention to the Stroheim unit.

Mary Philbin will have the big feminine role. Dale Fuller has refused three other offers and is concentrating on her copy of the script. Maude George is nearing the completion of a stage engagement and is ready. Caesar Gravina, another chosen for Merry-Go-Round, is on his way from Brazil by way of the Panama Canal. He will arrive for the opening scenes.

Scores of other players remain to be selected, and the all-important question of a leading man has not been decided upon.

Lloyd's Name on 300 Houses in and About New York

An exhibitor's remark that "Harold Lloyd is a short name but long enough to reach around the world, spelled in letters of electric lights," was recalled last week in a remarkable variation of the simile—square miles instead of linear extent. In Greater New York alone upward of three hundred houses had their "Lloyd" sign out, announcing either a recent two-reeler, the four-reel Sailor Made Man, or one of a score of Pathe's successful Lloyd comedy re-issues. The "electric" lure of the star's name was recognized as the main inducement to picture patrons. Big theatres like the Rivoli, the Broadway and the Strand on Broadway and the Strand in Brooklyn, and smaller theatres of equal importance in their respective neighborhoods in Manhattan and all the other boroughs had their Lloyd signs out.

On the opposite side of the continent the most lavish display of "Lloyd electricity" was in Los Angeles—where every week has been described as "old home week for Harold." While the Symphony Theatre was staging the second week of the world's premiere of Grandma's Boy, Lloyd's first five-reel picture, Pantages big combination house was showing From Hand to Mouth, one of the first Lloyd two-reelers produced for Pathe distribution. At the same time several Los Angeles theatres were running other Lloyd's the one-reel reissue, Pipe the Whiskers drew crowds to Clune's Broadway, while the Garrick was showing Bride and Gloom. In the meantime the boards in all Pacific Coast cities present a barrage of twenty-four sheet Grandma's Boy anticipation.

Douglas Fairbanks Picture Is Fifty Per Cent Finished

Latest advices from the coast bring the news that work on Douglas Fairbanks' new production, Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood, his most ambitious effort for United Artists release this fall, is fifty per cent completed.

Among the recent guests of Mr. Fairbanks at the Pickford-Fairbanks studios was Opie Read, the novelist, who spent the greater part of a day watching the star and his supporting company making scenes for Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood. Later Mr. Read declared his journey through the acres of huge sets had amounted to "a journey of awe-inspired gasps," as he had no idea of the magnitude of this motion picture in the making. When he got his first glimpse of the replica of King Richard's Twelfth Century castle, Mr. Read says he was actually made dizzy.

Dawley Completes "Hearts and Faces" for Achievement Films

J. Searle Dawley completed his first production for Achievement Films, Inc., according to an announcement by Gilbert E. Gable, president. The picture, first known as Face Value, but now changed to Hearts and Faces, is by Bob Dexter and has as its basis the idea of facial-transformation which is availed of by Apaches in the Montmartre, Paris, in order to escape detection.

The principals in the cast include Gladys Hulette, Frank Losee and Robert Frazer. Cameraman Bert Dawley, and adaptation by William Dudley Pelley.

R-C Distributing Changes Name

Will Be Known as Film Booking Offices of America; Clearing House for R-C and Independent Productions

An announcement of interest to the motion picture industry and one which is expected to have an important bearing on the future distributing methods of pictures is made this week by P. A. Powers of R-C Pictures Corporation. The substance of Mr. Powers' statement is this:

On and after July 1, 1922, the Robertson-Cole Distributing Corporation will be known as the Film Booking Offices of America.

The purpose of the Film Booking Offices will be the distributing of R-C and independent productions through the medium of a selling organization.

By means of the Film Booking Offices, the independent producer will be assured of an exploitation and selling medium without losing his identity. Each brand of pictures will be handled separately and distinctly. The F. B. O. will be simply a highly specialized exploitation and sales agent.

The new film clearing house is willing to assist the independent director, star or author who offers a worth-while idea or plan for a picture or a series of pictures.

The R-C Studios in California will continue production, and the product of R-C Pictures will be released through F. B. O. Independent producers will find a studio available for their use and may have the assistance of a staff of production specialists thoroughly conversant with the needs of the independent producer.

"To me this announcement means a realization of an idea that I have cherished for many years," states Mr. Powers. "It means that I am at last able to give the industry an organization to fill what I believe is its most acute need—an exploitation and selling medium for the independent producer—efficient, established and reliable.

"After July 1 we will start our plan of distribution which will guarantee each producer who releases through F. B. O. the popularization and perpetuation of his brand name or the name of the individual picture. There will be no merging under one name. It will not be an 'F. B. O. Production,' but an 'Ethey Clayton Production,' or a 'Harry Carey Production' or a 'Carter deHaven Comedy' that we will sell. The producer will have his full and just credit with the trade and with the public. The F. B. O. will act simply as his agent—a pipe line bringing the product to the ultimate consumer.

"It is our intention to assure the producer not only of a perfect physical distribution through our thoroughly organized system of exchanges, but also the best exploitation and selling service that can be found in the industry. To do this we are building up and strengthening ourselves with the aim of developing into an efficient, progressive and practical organization.

"The Film Booking Offices will be willing to finance or to assist in the financing of either individual productions or a brand of productions. We believe in the independent producer, and we believe that he always will and must exist for the well-being of the industry. Once convinced of his ability and the value of his production plan or idea, the F. B. O. will aid him in the production and assure him a means of distribution unequaled in the industry. It will be always ready to listen to and consider the suggestions of independent producers.

"It is not only in distribution that we will aid the independent producer. He may avail himself of the use of the R-C studios in Los Angeles, the most complete and up-to-date in the film metropolis. At the R-C studios he will find a staff of experts ready to work with him in the production of his picture. At the present time such independent producers as Harry Carey, Carter de Haven, Robert Thornby, Norman Dawn, Emory Johnson and Chester Bennett, who is starring Jane Novak, are working or are about to start working."

Epworth Herald Editor Answers Film Critics

Dr. Dan B. Brummit, of Chicago, editor of the "Epworth Herald," official organ of the 750,000 members of the Epworth League, a Methodist Church organization, has made pointed answer to his critics who found severe fault recently because the "Epworth Herald" advertised motion pictures.

Dr. Brummit bases his reply on the assertion that millions of church people go to the movies every week, and will continue to go, no matter what is said and done or by whom. He also took occasion to declare that the Church, instead of attacking motion pictures, should make use of them for educative, recreative and evangelical purposes.

Dr. Brummit's approval of the photoplay has received editorial recognition from the Ashland (Ohio) "Times-Gazette," which says, in part:

"It is good to note how many educational films are being shown now, and stories that reveal facts of history, pictures like 'Disraeli,' which is now being shown here. It is an inspiration to see pictures of this sort and our picture houses show many of them.'

Gets Letters of Appreciation

Mike Connolly, casting director of International Film Service Co., Inc., is proudly displaying two letters of appreciation for his work in connection with the May drive for the benefit of the Association for the Improvement of the Condition of the Poor. One letter is from Cornelius N. Bliss which enclosed a copy of a special resolution that has been spread on the minutes of the association and which reads in part: "The Board wishes in particular to express its thanks to Mr. Mike Connolly for his generous assistance to the May carnival." The other letter is from Will H. Hays.

Unusual Tie-Ups for "Nanook"

General Public Interest Aroused in Broadway Showing of Pathe Arctic Picture—Eskimo Lobby Display at Theatre

In connection with the première week of Nanook of the North at the Capitol Theatre, beginning on June 11, Pathe and the theatre management united in tie-up displays which thoroughly focussed public interest on the picture. In addition to Mr. Rothafel's attractive lobby and foyer displays of native Eskimo costumes, weapons, implements, utensils of all kinds and a veritable museum of Eskimo curios, he "tied up" the Capitol engagement of Nanook with "Eskimo Pie" in seventy-five Liggett windows.

The Winchester arms shop windows on Forty-second Street held attractive Eskimo curios brought down from the North by Explorer Robert J. Flaherty, F.R.G.S., producer of Nanook. In the windows of Putnam's book shop at Fifth Avenue and Forty-fifth Street photogravures of characters and scenes were displayed. A set of eighteen of these realistic art representations is issued by Putnam in portfolio form. The interior of the Coffee House Club nearby—favorite meeting place of literary men, authors, critics and publishers—liberally displayed art reproductions of Mr. Flaherty's collection of "stills" from Nanook.

On Tuesday Mr. Rothafel and Mr. Flaherty were guests of honor at the Dutch Treat Club, whose membership contains celebrated names in American art and literature. They delighted their hosts with a screening of the high-lights of Nanook of the North. In the meantime the Capitol management and Pathe had secured for the Nanook première the interest of society leaders and the entire membership of the American Geographical Society, the Explorers' Club, the Canadian Club, and other organizations of wide influence in travel and out-door recreations.

High Praise Given "The Storm"

Langdon McCormick's Great Drama Commended by Author and Stage Producers at Showing in Universal Home Office

Praise of a high type is accorded to Universal's Jewel-Production of The Storm, Langdon McCormick's stage drama, by the author and by those who produced and acted in the stage version.

At a preview of the Universal picture, recently held in the Universal home office projection room, Langdon McCormick, the author; George Broadhurst, the producer; Mrs. Lillian Trimble Bradley, director of the stage version; Louis Cline, who managed it, and Miss Helen McKellar, who starred in it, were the guests of Mr. Carl Laemmle.

Without exception, they lauded Universal's screen presentation of their play.

Mr. Broadhurst summed up his views as follows:

"To describe it properly and with due justice, the most flowery superlatives are inadequate. It is a magnificent picture and I want all my friends to see it. I congratulate Mr. Laemmle and likewise congratulate each and every person that had a hand in its production."

Mrs. Lillian Trimble Bradley, the only woman director on Broadway, paid a splendid tribute in a few words when she said:

"As the director of the stage success, I simply want to say to the director of the picture, 'Congratulations.'

"It is the first picture," continued Mrs. Bradley, "made from a stage play with which I had been associated that I can say I thoroughly approve of as a moving picture."

Louis Cline, business manager of the stage production of "The Storm" and general manager for Mr. Broadhurst, said:

"I am in hearty accord with every bit of praise and commendation voiced by Mr. Broadhurst and Mrs. Bradley, and can only add that Universal's version of The Storm is more than astounding."

Langdon McCormick, the author, phrased his views as follows:

"There isn't one single flaw or false note in the Universal's version of The Storm. As the author, I want to express my thanks for the manner in which you have faithfully followed the script. After doing fire and storm scenes for fifteen years, I find the film contains the finest and most thrilling scenes I have ever gazed upon. It was far beyond my hopes."

Edward Arnold, leading man in the stage version, also was present at the preview and was equally enthusiastic. Mr. Arnold said:

"I was exceptionally well pleased with House Peters' work in the role of Burr. Like Miss MacKellar, I feel no better man could have been selected for the part."

The Storm was adapted from the McCormick-Broadhurst play by H. G. Hawks, scenario writer, and directed by Reginald Barker, who made The Old Nest. House Peters is its featured player, supported by Matt Moore, Virginia Vallie and others.

It will be shown to the public at a pre-release booking in the Capitol Theatre beginning June 18, and probably in several other cities at later dates during the summer. It is set for actual release early in September.

Five Consecutive First Runs for American Releasing

William Jenner, Western representative and manager of the American Releasing Corporation, announced five consecutive first run pictures to be released in Los Angeles in the next five weeks. His Wife's Husband will play at Tally's for two weeks, The Lying Truth will play at Clune's for one week, The Cradle Buster, a Glenn Hunter picture, will play at Hillstreet for one week, My Old Kentucky Home will play at the Kinema for one week.

Mr. Jenner has been associated with Mr. Warren for many years and has been in the motion picture exchange business for over nine years. He reported business conditions very good throughout the territory and exhibitors looking for a big new season. The admission prices are remaining the same and a great deal of new building going on with business looking better every week. Most of the theatres in this district remain open for the summer.

Baby Peggy Bookings Grow in New York's Large Houses

As an example of the growing popularity of Century Comedies, Horse Tears, a comedy featuring Queenie the equine star, has been booked for three weeks' run at the Criterion Theatre in New York City. The same comedy also is booked for the entire Loew circuit, succeeding the Criterion.

Tips, starring Baby Peggy, plays the Rivoli the week of June 18. This is the comedy where Peggy takes the part of a bell boy.

The Strand Theatre in Brooklyn is booking a Baby Comedy for the first time —The Little Rascal.

Production of Century Comedies is ahead of schedule, the entire product for August being now shipped to the exchanges.

New Faces in Next D. W. Griffith Production

Announcement is made that new faces will be seen in D. W. Griffith's forthcoming production for release through United Artists. The completed cast includes Carol Dempster, Porter Strong, Henry Hull, the young man who has been so successful in the stage play, "The Cat and the Canary," C. H. Croker-King, the star of "Bull Dog Drummond," Morgan Wallace, Margaret Dale, Frank Wunderlee, Frank Sheridan and Irma Harrison.

The picture will be in seven reels. Mr. Griffith has begun an active filming which is going forward under the working title of At the Grange.

Cast Completed for Paramount's Feature "The Young Rajah"

The task of selecting a cast for The Young Rajah is now completed and production activity will soon begin upon this new Paramount picture starring Rodolph Valentino. The photoplay is an adaptation by June Mathis of the book, "Amos Judd," by the late John Ames Mitchell and will be directed by Philip Rosen.

Wanda Hawley will play Molly Cabot, the American girl with whom Amos Judd (the adopted name of the young Hindu) falls in love while attending Harvard.

Bertram Grassby again portrays a colorful Hindu villain—a maharajah who usurps the throne. He is assisted in his villainous designs by J. Farrell Macdonald.

Joshua and Sarah Judd, the kindly old New Englanders who adopt the boy, are played by Charles Ogle and Fanny Midgely. Other Hindu characters are enacted by George Periolat, George Field and Edwin Stevens.

Betty Blythe Begins Work As Star for Whitman Bennett

Betty Blythe, who has been on an extended tour of personal appearances, returned to New York on Saturday, June 10, and on the following Monday began work on How Women Love at the Whitman Bennett Studio in Yonkers, under the direction of Kenneth Webb, and the management of B. B. Productions, Inc.

Betty Blythe

Miss Blythe's tour of personal appearances was in connection with first run showings of Rex Beach's Fair Lady, produced by Whitman Bennett, and the last of her non-stellar productions. Her appearances were all for full weeks and all at leading theatres in Philadelphia, Toronto, Cleveland and Buffalo.

Bronx Exhibitors Plan Benefit

On June 21 the entire matinee receipts of forty motion picture theatres of the Bronx, in New York City, will be given to the widow and children of Douglas W. Hay, a policeman who, on May 18, was killed in the performance of his duty. A substantial financial return is expected as the result of the active co-operation of every exhibitor in the section. Each house is displaying a big banner setting forth the objects of Douglas W. Hay Day.

Fox Issues Warning to Exhibitors

Against Showing of Old Version of "Monte Cristo" a General Film Co-Release, Following Court Decision

Fox Film Corporation, which is to release soon its modern version of Dumas' "Monte Cristo," has issued warning to all exhibitors in the United States and Canada against exhibition of the old Monte Cristo film distributed many years ago by the General Film Company.

The Fox company claims that the General Film Company's Monte Cristo, now reissued, it believes, on the strength of the new Fox picture, has been declared by the courts of New York an infringement on the O'Neill-Fechter version. Fox serves notice that its company owns all the motion picture rights to the O'Neill-Fechter version of "Monte Cristo" and will prosecute any persons who exhibit, exploit, license, sell or in any manner deal with the reissued Monte Cristo film.

The warning statement follows in full:

"Notice is hereby given to you that the undersigned has received information that several alleged distributors in the United States are soliciting contracts for the exhibition of a motion picture photoplay entitled Monte Cristo, which is a reissue of a film distributed many years ago by the General Film Company, starring Hobart Bosworth. That film is based on the so-called O'Neill-Fechter version of 'Monte Cristo' and is an infringement of the rights of the owners of the O'Neill-Fechter version, because the General Film Company had not acquired any rights to picturize the O'Neill-Fechter version. That question was litigated in the courts of the State of New York in litigation entitled 'O'Neill vs. General Film Company,' and the courts of the State of New York held that the General Film Company was guilty of an infringement of the said O'Neill-Fechter version by reason of the exhibition of said picture without the consent of the owners of the O'Neill-Fechter version, and that decision stands unreversed in the State of New York. He will further take action in the Federal or State courts in any State of the United States or any province in the Dominion of Canada where an infringement of our rights occurs.

"This notice is published for the purpose of warning all exhibitors and all persons who attempt to exploit or in any manner make use of that film that the Fox Film Corporation, which owns all of the motion picture rights to the O'Neill-Fechter version, will prosecute any attempt to infringe those rights against any persons who exhibit, exploit, license, sell or in any manner deal with the aforesaid Monte Cristo film.

Collections Tell Story of Renewed Exhibitor Prosperity, Says Eschmann

Of all barometers which record changing business conditions, none is to be compared for accuracy with the one called "collections." E. A. Eschmann, Pathe general sales manager, makes this observation in connection with a positive statement that recent collections on account of film rentals are very much better than they have been for months past.

"Largely increased collections," says Mr. Eschmann, "are reported from practically all of the Pathe branch exchanges. This means that every section of the country shares in the renewed prosperity of which quicker collections is the best possible evidence. It also means that the picture business is marching along with the trend of business in general. The tendency in picture exhibition is the same as that indicated in recent statements made by Secretary Hoover of improved conditions in other important industries and of commerce generally. Babson's latest reports note the same significant facts. All of these indications are further fortified by those of international character—the advance of sterling exchange, the German loan, etc.

"Mr. Will H. Hays, for the motion picture industry, declares that prosperity is here for those who grasp it. Other expert observers predict full resumption of all business early in the fall. Improved collections on film rentals serve as a highly practical endorsement of all these favorable reports and predictions."

Cast Engaged for Constance Binney Vehicle

The cast which has been engaged to support Constance Binney, the American stage and screen star, who is now filming A Bill of Divorcement for the Ideal Film Co. of London, contains the names of some of the most popular British players now appearing before the public.

Fay Compton, a London favorite, plays the part of the wife; Malcolm Keen (by permission of Rean Dean) has his old role of the husband, which he originated in the English production of the stage play; Henry Vibart, a popular screen actor, essays the doctor.

National Board Praises Lloyd Picture

Lists "Grandma's Boy" As Exceptional Photoplay—Markowitz to Show It in San Francisco

Grandma's Boy, the Harold Lloyd-Associated Exhibitors feature, is the kind of picture producers must make if they are to enjoy the favor of the American public, declared "Exceptional Photoplays," the official publication of the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures. In the current number Grandma's Boy is one of three films recommended to exhibitors.

"Everything," says the bulletin, "is there (in Grandma's Boy) for those who are weary of life and of business and just want to laugh—and something more besides. That something is another signpost on the way that American producers must travel if they wish to keep the interest of the public, as it is whispered they do, providing they could only find out how.

"Harold Lloyd's latest vehicle, Grandma's Boy, carries on what 'The Kid' began as a form of picture, developing its comedy around a trivial but definite plot, utilizing a concept of character, and putting across through a series of buffooneries its cartoon of human nature.

"It is all done with a grin and a chuckle and a fine sense of the incongruous, with a sure technique of building the preposterous on the ridiculous until a clear and well proportioned idea is presented.

"It is a tribute to Mr. Lloyd's acting that one can always find the heart to laugh at him. It is as if he had said, 'I will give you a comedy, if that you must have, but it will all be a very serious matter for my character Harold!'"

Arthur S. Kane, president of Associated Exhibitors, announced this week that M. L. Markowitz, owner of the Strand Theatre, San Francisco, has been successful in obtaining the first engagement in that city of Grandma's Boy, now having its premier run in Los Angeles. The picture will open at this well known Market Street house July 23, booked for an indefinite run. The contract is understood to call for the largest rental ever paid for a picture in San Francisco.

Valentino the Favorite For Fan Magazine Cover

Evidence of the drawing power of Paramount stars comes from the test just announced by Motion Picture Classic, one of the fan magazines published by Eugene V. Brewster in Brooklyn, with a circulation of nearly two hundred and fifty thousand.

"In the June issue the editor, Miss Susan Elizabeth Brady, announced that the subjects for Classic color covers would be chosen by readers interested enough to write a request for their favorite," says a Paramount announcement. "In the month since the publication of the June issue more than five thousand letters were received with one name dominating the requests—that of Rodolph Valentino, star in Paramount pictures, the subject of 1227 letters.

"Thomas Meighan, another Paramount star, was second on the request list for covers. Third place went to Antonio Moreno, while Wallace Reid, also a Paramount star, came fourth."

The Theatre Inter-Insurance Exchange

What It Is and Does—

THE PLAN	The Theatre Inter-Insurance Exchange writes only theatre insurance. It operates on the Reciprocal plan, whereby the amount remaining from each year's premiums, after losses and expenses are paid, is returned to the policyholders instead of going to the stockholders of the company under the ordinary insurance plan.
THE SAVING	Each policyholder has saved 40% of his premium deposit, and this in view of the fact that the same initial rates are charged as are required by other companies.
SECURITY	Only a safe amount of insurance on any risk is carried net, all amounts above this being covered by a reinsurance contract with London Lloyds, the strongest and best reinsurers in the world.
SERVICE	In addition to the actual saving in cost the Exchange furnishes an inspection service and assistance on fire prevention methods and equipment that is of real value to the exhibitor.

Antarctic Pictures of Mawson Journey Unusual in Interest

The Rialto Theatre in New York showed during the week of June 11 Below the Antarctic Circle, two reels of remarkable pictures. They were selected from six thousand feet photographed by Cameraman Frank Hurley, attached to the scientific expedition to the Antarctic country headed by Sir Douglas Mawson during the years 1911-14. The group of pictures was shown by Sir Douglas in 1915 as illustrations for his lectures, but until the exhibition at the Rialto, as stated, never have been booked theatrically. It is understood Sir Douglas believed their interest was chiefly scientific and that the general public would not be concerned in them. Sir Douglas will experience no difficulty in locating a host of men who will go to the mat with him on that proposition—of men who will insist the pictures have vital public interest and possess unusual entertainment qualities.

One of the aims of the expedition was to obtain data on wind velocity. It may be remarked the object was attained. At the site selected for a camp, the instruments recorded winds that never fell below 50 miles an hour, with a maximum of 216 miles. Pictures were taken during some of the blizzards, pictures which depict most realistically the hardships and the dangers faced by polar explorers.

The group shown at the Rialto opens with views of a heavy sea on the southern ocean—the most realistic thing of its kind the writer has seen on the screen, which is a strong statement. There are pictures of the steamer plowing through ice fields that extend to the horizon. In one bit the camera is placed out in front of the cutwater, so that the breaking of a path is most interestingly and vividly shown.

There are close-ups of giant icebergs, seemingly too close for safety, and disregarding the possibility of projecting, underwater shelves. These are rare subjects for the photographer, and Mr. Hurley rose to his opportunity. Masses of penguins, literally a million of them, crowd before the camera. In one instance the Chaplin comedy-gaited fowl form a guard of honor for a sea lion and escort the big fellow to the water's edge. Other pictures are shown of hundreds of this feathered tribe leaping or flying from deep water to the high bank at the edge of the ocean.

The difficulties of approach to the windswept observation station are clearly shown. The most realistic of all the pictures, however, is that of the blizzard which drives every living thing to what shelter may be found. G. B.

Florence Vidor Begins Work on Fourth Feature

Gus Inglis, general manager for Florence and King Vidor, announces that production work on the fourth of Miss Vidor's features for Associated Exhibitors began Monday, June 12, at Catalina Island, with Mr. Vidor directing. Following the finishing of this picture, which will complete the first series of four Florence Vidor films for Associated Exhibitors, the star will take a short rest, during which time Mr. Vidor will direct Laurette Taylor in Peg o' My Heart, for Metro, as announced.

Upon her return in August to the King Vidor studio in Hollywood, Miss Vidor will begin the first of her second series of four for Associated Exhibitors, and King Vidor will again handle the megaphone in her productions.

Would Make Miami Producing Center

John Brunton Appointed General Manager of Studios—To Encourage Independent Producers—May Film Life of Edison

An extensive plan to put Miami, Fla., on the map as a producing center was made public this week with the announcement that John Brunton, brother of Robert Brunton and formerly associated with him in the operation of the famous Brunton Studios in Los Angeles, had been made general manager of a group of Miami concerns.

The parent concern is the Miami Studios Corporation, headed by Glenn Curtiss and several Florida capitalists. A complete and elaborate studio plant, on a tract of 144 acres just outside Miami, was finished some time ago, and it is now planned to make it a real producing center.

John Brunton will take over the operation of this property. In addition, Mr. Curtiss and his associates will form a producing company, in order to insure studio activity, and a financing corporation, which will aid legitimate and reputable independent producers who may come to Miami to make pictures. Mr. Brunton will be general manager of the producing and financing concerns, as well as the studios.

In order to encourage independent production at Miami the financing croporation will arrange to provide funds from local banks to aid producers who themselves may not have sufficient capital. Liens will be taken against negatives by the banks through the financing corporation.

Negotiations are now under way for the making of a motion picture of the life of Thomas A. Edison, in connection with the coming celebration of Edison's discovery of incandescent light. The famous inventor will, it is stated, appear personally in the picture and will supervise its filming. The General Electric Company is said to be interesting itself in the film, and negotiations will probably be closed soon.

The studio buildings erected by Mr. Curtiss and his associates are declared to be among the most elaborate in the world. A canal is now under construction from the city to Lake Okeechobee, and this waterway will run through the studio property. A variety of natural scenery for location work is at hand on the studio tract and the surrounding country.

Mr. Brunton left New York June 14 for Miami to meet Mr. Curtiss, who is already in Florida, and begin active work on the new proposition.

International Seeks Injunction Against "I Am the Law" Film

Before Judge Knox in the Federal Court in New York on June 9 application was made by Nathan Burkan on behalf of International Film Service for a temporary injunction against the photoplay "I Am the Law," produced by Edwin Carewe and being distributed by Affiliated Distributors. The application was opposed by Frederick F. Neuman of Neuman & Newgass.

Mr. Burkan charged an infringement of "The Valley of Silent Men," by James Oliver Curwood, for the motion picture rights to which it was stated Cosmopolitan had paid $15,000 and the production of which had cost $170,000. The lawyer outlined the synopses of the two productions, declaring the main theme to be the same. He said his clients did not seek damages, merely the elimination of the part of the story which they claimed infringed on their purchase.

Mr. Burkan stated that Mr. Curwood also was justified in his action asking for injunctive relief, declaring that the story sold by the author on which "I Am the Law" was based had been printed in 1910 before Curwood had established a reputation, and asserting that "The Poetic Justice of Yuko San" did not contain an incident that is in "I Am the Law."

Mr. Neuman quoted "Macbeth," "Hamlet" and "Julius Caesar," saying that in each there is a murder of a king or of one about to become a king, and in each there is a ghost. "If Shakespeare had sold to these plaintiffs the rights to 'Julius Caesar,'" asserted Mr. Neuman, "they would have attempted to enjoin him from disposing of 'Hamlet' and 'Macbeth.'"

Mr. Neuman declared Curwood knew the defendants did not intend making a picture out of "Yuko San," and that if it had been made it would have been a laughing stock. The lawyer offered to omit the name of Curwood from the film, or to follow any suggestion of the court.

Mr. Burkan asked for a quick trial and Mr. Neuman said that was what his clients wanted. The court said he would give notice later when he would be able to hold the trial and examine the picture and the story which it was charged had been infringed.

Live News of the West Coast

BY RENEE BEEMAN

J. D. WILLIAMS, general manager of Associated First National, has summed up in a few words, the business conditions in the Southern part of California. He said in part: "Even where business conditions are not of the best, theatre owners report a sure but slow change for the better. I believe from a box-office standpoint September will mark the beginning of one of the best years in the industry.

"The big productions have hitherto been released on a par with the smaller bookings but from now on big specials are to receive the attention which they deserve. They are to get concentrated exploitation so their full value will be obtained in extended runs. The day of the small program picture is on the decline. Real artists who produce film masterpieces are demanding and deserving of more recognition and the exhibitor is learning that such productions are the real thing for the financial betterment of his business."

The studio where D. W. Griffith made his famous masterpieces has come to life again and is humming with activity.

J. P. Hogan is making Muggsy Comedies, starring George Cooper. He is putting across a number of new gags in his new pictures that will prove to be winners. They are not the regular hokum stuff but something new and with a whale of a kick.

Jess Robins is preparing another comedy-drama, while McCarthy-Meehan are working on another Western. Robins is starring Edward Everett Horton.

Lloyd Ingraham is making a picture called Goblin Point with an all-star cast.

Pete Hungate is making a specialty. It will be dramatic in nature and is interesting. The actors act behind a screen, the camera shooting only the silhouettes. The work is rather difficult but the pictures when finished prove very interesting.

One of the biggest fairs of the year in the interest of charity will be staged on the Pickford-Fairbanks lot the middle of June and will be called the Robin Hood Tournament. Mr. Fairbanks in Robin Hood costume will be the chief host of the occasion. Mary Pickford will also be present, if it is possible for her to be in the city at that time.

Members of the Fairbanks company will do fancy horseback riding and will engage in many bloodless battles in duels that are being filmed in Douglas Fairbanks' Robin Hood, by Douglas Fairbanks.

Jack Coogan Sr., father of Jackie is to enter the producing business on a larger scale. He is to add two producing units to his present Jackie Coogan company. Both units will produce at the United Studios, Hollywood. The first is a Western picture and will be known as Rodeo Productions. George Marshall will direct. The stories are being compiled by W. C. Tuttle and an all-star cast will enact them.

The second unit will be the Fred Hibbard productions, and Coogan will combine with Director Frank Lloyd in this organization. Direction will be in the hands of Fred Hibbard. Twelve two-reel novelty comedies is the production plan of this unit. Distribution will be announced later.

The California Pageant of Progress and Industrial Exposition will be held in Los Angeles this coming July and the motion picture industry is planning to make a big showing. The people that have been named to represent the industry in preparing for the big event are Hal E. Roach, Charles H. Christie, Victor Clark, Irving M. Thalberg and W. J. Reynolds.

While Allen Holubar produces Broken Chains for Goldwyn, his wife and star of most of his pictures, Dorothy Phillips, will take a trip to New York and to her old home in Baltimore.

The Talmadge family, including Norma, Constance, Mrs. Talmadge and Joseph Schenck, husband of Norma, will leave for Europe about the first of August. It is not the plan of the party to make any pictures abroad, they are taking the trip purely as a well earned vacation. Paris, London, and the usual route will be visited.

In the meantime Norma will finish The Mirage which Frank Lloyd may direct and Constance will complete East Is West, the feature which is being filmed at present.

They are planning to be gone for only a few weeks, one reason being given that they cannot be away from the new baby which arrived in the Natalie Talmadge Keaton household a few weeks ago. It is rumored that the baby is already spoiled.

The Goldwyn company filming The Christian in England has a distinguished location manager, who is none other than Hall Caine himself, the author of the well-known play. News from Director Maurice Tourneur says that Mr. Caine is showing the company places on the Isle of Man where John Storm and Gloria Quayle, the chief characters in the story, lived. The author is a Manxman and thoroughly familiar with the history and geography of the island. Director Maurice Tourneur, Richard Dix, Mae Busch and other members of the cast are enjoying the novelty of making a picture on foreign soil.

Eric Von Stroheim is still casting for his forthcoming picture. The story was written by Von Stroheim around the star, Mary Philbin. It is the director's belief that Miss Philbin with a year's experience added to her natural talent is proving one of the most promising girls the screen has ever seen.

At the Universal Studios, Universal City, short dramas with Art Acord, Reginald Denny and Tom Santschi are being put into shape, while active progress is being made with the comedies starring Roy Atwell and Neely Edwards.

Thirty reels of The Kentucky Derby, the all-star Universal-Jewel special directed by King Baggot, are in the editorial department, though Mr. Baggot is but fairly started on the picture. Reginald Denny, Lillian Rich, Gertrude Astor, Lionel Belmore, Kingsley Benedict and a number of other popular players are in the cast.

J. L. Roop, originator of the "Tom and Jerry" manikins that are appearing in short reel films now being released by the Roy B. Klumb productions, boasts of the fact that there is never any dissension among his stars, never any illness and they are always on the job when needed.

The little fellows are made of a rubber-like composition perfected by Mr. Roop some time ago and when the characters have finished a part, they are simply melted up and in a short time are molded into entirely different forms. He suggests, for instance, the horse in Throbs and Thrills may be a farmer in The Gasoline Trail.

The Roy B. Klumb Productions are releasing a series of these pictures and they are being exihbited one a month in a local theatre.

One of the most interesting parts of the current Mack Sennett-Mabel Normand release, Suzanna is the hacienda of the Spanish rancho, which Sennett has built in Edendale. It is the colorful Camulos rancho revivified for the edification and delight of the artistic-loving motion picture public.

Helen Hunt Jackson, in her beautiful story of Ramona, immortalized this California landmark in the Halls of Literature, Mack Sennett will immortalize it on celluloid.

The picture will be ready for release in the early fall.

That Lass O'Lowrie's, the Universal-Jewel special version of Frances Hodgson Burnett's famous novel in which Priscilla Dean starred under the direction of Hobart Henely has been changed to The Flame of Life as the release title.

Rupert Hughes, who has become one of the outstanding figures of the motion picture world, has signed a new contract with Goldwyn, under the terms of which he will write, direct, title and edit his own pictures.

The Goldwyn company is to have first call on all the author's literary work, past, present and future. Mr. Hughes is now titling The Bitterness of Sweets, which he has just finished. His next production may be the filming of Souls for Sale, which has been running serially in a national magazine. The story deals with motion picture studio life.

The most recent pictures completed by Mr. Hughes are The Old Nest, Dangerous Curve Ahead, Come On Over, Hold Your Horses, and two yet to be released.

After twelve months of hard and conscientious work, Mabel Normand will take her leave from the home of comedy to absent herself until August 15. She will visit friends in New York City and will sail for Europe with her mother and secretary about the middle of June, on board the Aquitania for a two months' trip through the British Isles and the Continent.

Her latest vehicle, Suzanna, will be released after her return to this country. Mack Sennett has announced that it will be the biggest feature as yet produced under his direction.

Short Subjects and Serials

Pathe Issuing Johnny Jones Comedies

Contract Signed Calling for Monthly Releases of Series of Six, of Which the First Will Be "Supply and Demand"

Under a contract just signed by Pathe and J. K. McDonald Productions, Inc., the Johnny Jones series of two-reel comedies will have Pathe distribution, releases starting July 30. The first release will be Supply and Demand, which already has been shown at the Capitol Theatre. Five others of the first series will be put out at intervals of four weeks. The boy star, Johnny Jones, is well known to picture patrons for his characterizations in the Edgar Series, written by Booth Tarkington. In a new series bearing his name there are promised the same engaging qualities of American boyhood that won Johnny Jones' reputation as foremost among the boy actors, "always natural and lovable," while the stories will present an original and thoughtful boy angle in the logic and romance of business.

The Canadian, English and Australian press have shown Johnny Jones to be a great favorite with film patrons in those countries. Both here and abroad boy clubs bearing his name have been organized. When Supply and Demand was presented at the Capitol, published reviews contained such expressions as these:

Evening Mail—"We predict without hesitation that the combination of Johnny Jones and Gertrude Messinger is going to rival some of our most famous grown-up movie duos if the standard they have set in Supply and Demand is continued."

Gertrude Messinger has been called the "prettiest and sweetest little ingenue in the entire industry." She is co-starred with Johnny Jones. Each of the stories in the Johnny Jones series depicts some business enterprise formed in the boy hero's mind and carried to a successful issue with the expert aid of his "gang."

Larry Semon Dons Crown and Puts Up Stiff Fight to Hold It

With A Pair of Kings Larry Semon turns parodist. Very clearly he had in mind The Prisoner of Zenda, insofar as the comedian in his newest production assumes a dual role, the one a weakling king and the other a fearless, happy-go-lucky roustabout. The latter is the Semon we know. It is to him the burden of the characterization falls, as the real king early fades from the picture.

A Pair of Kings depends largely on speedy slapstick for its impulse. The humor that has been so marked in the immediately preceding releases of the comedian is noticeable for its absence. There are throughout the 2030 feet of this Vitagraph comedy some striking exceptions to this remark, notably in the opening scenes, when tangled in the hook at the end of the derrick apparatus he is hoisted from the deck of a vessel and suspended over the pier. A rascally monkey, who had previously destroyed the passport on which the roustabout had figured on getting ashore, sees his victim swaying at the end of the rope, grabs a knife and runs up the boom. A slash of the blade and the pendulumlike human sprawls on the pier—quite hard.

The real king maintains below stairs a crew of strong-arms for the purpose of doling out adequate treatment to especially rebellious subjects. In the strife that ensues upon the donning of the uniform by the substitute the latter finds himself in this den. A bit of search reveals a manhole which covers a sure enough oubliette. In quick order his four chief enemies splash in the "drink" and the immediate troubles of the new monarch are nearly over.

The picture is lavishly staged throughout. G. B.

Educational Keeps Up Efforts for Good Stuff During Summer

Perhaps the most notable feature of Educational's effort to provide exhibitors with the best in short subjects at a time when they need extra quality to overcome the handicap that warmer weather puts on the box office, is the beginning, in June, just as the hot season starts, of distribution of The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes.

Two of these pictures, The Devil's Foot and The Dying Detective, have already been released, and two more will be released each month until the series is concluded, July and August. A Case of Identity and A Scandal in Bohemia will be the next releases, being made available to exhibitors on July 9 and July 23, respectively.

Eille Norwood portrays the role of Sherlock Holmes in all these pictures, and Hubert Willis is Dr. Watson. They were directed by Maurice Elvey, and were made from the original stories by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.

But this series is not the exception to the rule in Educational's spring and summer releasing schedule. An extra effort has been made to put into the closing pictures of the Christie Comedy, Mermaid Comedy and other series of Educational Pictures the finest work of the year.

Hollywood's First Studio Undergoing Extensive Changes

A landmark of the moving picture country is coming down out in Hollywood. As an item in the house cleaning and studio building program being carried out at the Christie Studio while Al Christie is away in Europe, the dressing rooms along Gower street, which housed the first actors who ever made pictures in Hollywood, are being razed to make way for scene docks and another covered stage.

The historic buildings were once part of a roadhouse and were transformed into dressing rooms in 1911 for actors of the David Horsley's Nestor Company, which, under Al Christie's direction, filmed the first pictures in the now well-known Hollywood section of Los Angeles.

Taurog Working for Century

Norman Taurog, Larry Semon's former director and co-author, is working on his first comedy for Century. With him as associate director is Gill Pratt, former Star Comedy director and comedy man.

Taurog, after the completion of his present picture for Johnny Fox, will direct Lee Moran. He is the third new director to be signed by Julius Stern in the past month.

White Has "Gone and Done It Again"

"Rapid Fire," a Mermaid Comedy, Lives Up to Its Lively Name and Is Corking Follow-Up on Hamilton's "Poor Boy!"

Jack White has committed the unpardonable sin; he has violated one of the cast-iron canons of production. Twice and in a row he has placed before us a comedy that stands out. The first and permissible instance was Lloyd Hamilton's final effort for the Mermaid calendar prior to cataloging his share of the White-Hamilton activities under his own name—Poor Boy!

Continuing his hand, Mr. White now introduces us to Rapid Fire, a Mermaid-rural laughmaker of pure slapstick—yes, that goes both ways, for it's pure enough. The players are Lige Conley, Otto Fries, Cliff Rowes, Elinor Lynn, Jack Lloyd and Frank Hayes. The direction was by Mr. White and Bob Kerr, and the former and Archie Kerr were responsible for the story.

The picture starts with a jump and never lets up. There is an instinctive fear at the end of the first reel or first round that the speed can't be maintained—that it just can't be did. But fears are groundless. Furthermore, the tale never gets away from the farm except for a short period at the close, when the action shifts to an automobile and a freight train.

And while we are referring to the machine and the freight train it may be well to set down here that the car runs up on to a station platform as the train is passing through and just easily and naturally transfers right on to a flat car. Of course, the girl is rescued by her new husband and the two jump from the roof of a freight car to an automobile running alongside. The girl lands all right, but owing to the fact that the machine collides with a fence the new husband sprawls in the road—bing!

There's a lot that might be written about Rapid Fire, but it won't be here. While the picture will not be released by Educational until July 16, any exhibitor looking for a novelty should make it a point to look it over. It will repay examination or this writer does not know a hawk from a handsaw. G. B.

Review Board Gives Praise to Subjects of the Bruce Series

And Women Must Weep, the first release of the Wilderness Tales by Robert C. Bruce which Educational is distributing, was the first one-reel picture ever discussed as an exceptional picture in the National Board of Review's publication, Exceptional Photoplays. It was reviewed in the first issue of this publication for this year.

In the second issue, for March-April-May, just out, another picture of this series, The One Man Reunion, is reviewed.

Four of the Wilderness Tales have been released so far by Educational. My Country, the only picture of the series that is a scenic without a story basis, is now showing for the second week at the Capitol Theatre in New York, where it was held over in spite of the fact that the rest of the program was entirely changed. It is being presented with what is said to be the first symphonic musical score for a motion picture, which was written by Mortimer Wilson.

REVIEWS OF CURRENT SHORT SUBJECTS

ALL WRONG—Two-reel comedy released by Arrow.—Bobbie Dunn in the role of a boob seeks any kind of a job where he may be near Vera Pretty, a motion picture player portrayed by Helen Dale. He adopts many ingenious expedients to get into the studio. The regularity with which he is thrown out in no way discourages him. He wins out and secures a job in the end on account of the realistic manner in which he portrays terror when fleeing from a prison posse, mistaking him for an escaped convict. There is plenty of action and a goodly share of amusement in the farce.

SPEED 'EM UP—Two-part Century Comedy, released by Universal.—Harry Sweet adopts with variations a stunt employed a few months ago by one of his competitors—and it's a funny one. The farm boy goes to the pump with a bucket. As he manipulates the handle he is unable to get the range of the receptacle. Johnny Fox is listed as one of the featured players, but aside from his freckles there seems to be nothing about him that is out of the usual or even up to the average of juvenile requirement for screen performance. Fred Spencer is Roscoe, the fat foreman, Jack Henderson the father, and Albert Vaughn the girl. The comedy is lively rural stuff.

WANTED, $5,000—Current Pathe one-reel reissue.—Harold seeks the sum named in order to meet the demands of his prospective father-in-law for a bank account as a condition precedent to assuming that relationship. Bebe is unable to help him; "Snub" tries to insure his life and limbs, but Harold tears up the policy. Then the machine of Bebe's father properly mauls Harold, and the owner of the car without looking at the victim hands over a check for the amount necessary to complete the happiness of the young lover. And the latter keeps the check as well as the girl. O. K.

SHOULD WATCHMEN SLEEP?—Universal single-reel Star Comedy.—There's a bit in this skit which will strike the average viewer as novel—when the burglars have tied in bed Neely Edwards, playing a night watchman. The rascals are almost to the ground floor in a descending elevator when Nervy Ned sticks out his foot and throws the elevator switch, tying up the two between floors. Laura La Plante acceptably fills the role of the daughter of the department store keeper. A pretty good single reel.

PATHE REVIEW NO. 161—The number is introduced with a series of rare photographs of winter scenery. "The Reindeer Round-Up" portrays vividly the growth of the herd in Alaska—pictures that will surprise the man in the street. "The Breaking Point" shows the relative resistance under hydraulic pressure of pine and metals—very interesting. "What Next?" illustrates modes of hair dressing in previous periods. In "Alsace Under the Tricolor" we see the present prosperity of the restored province—and in Pathecolor.

ALL IS FAIR—Two-reel comedy released by Arrow.—Eddie Lyons in the role of a bridegroom tries to escape from his kind friends who, following the marriage ceremony, plan to separate him for a day from his bride. He succeeds, only to fall into the clutches of a band of fraternity initiators. His flight through the streets in abbreviated garb will add to the hilarity contained in the subject. Nor will the excitement measurably be lessened when the bridegroom, finally reaching home, comes in contact with a policeman in search of a burglar. The direction is by Mr. Lyons and Eugene De Rue and the scenario was written by Vincent Bryan.

THE ADVENTURES OF ROBINSON CRUSOE—Episode 12 of Universal serial.—As Crusoe prepares to leave the island for England there is a bit of a romantic scene between the castaway and the Water Witch, who previously has set adrift the small boats so that the mutineers may not steal the ship. The chapter closes with Crusoe and his little band fighting a fire on board. At the close Crusoe and Marion are imprisoned in one of the rooms, with Fridav and his father struggling to assist them.

THAT'S IT—Two-reel comedy distributed by Arrow.—Eddie Lyons here plays a dumbbell, one of the forgetful kind, a role that will endear him to a host of humankind. Of course, Eddie is a bit extended in his eccentricities, such as forgetting to finish shaving, starting for work and failing to remember his destination, and also such minor details as forgetting to lock the safe at night. But he does remember at last that he has been married—and is forgiven. The comedy is lively.

SOME BABY—Hal Roach Comedy, distributed by Pathe.—"Snub" Pollard and Marie Mosquini start off the single reel with a wedding, but when they enter their machine at the conclusion of the ceremony they find some one has left for them a full-fledged baby. Shortly after the two arrive at their home they find the baby and their other wedding presents are missing. Then things happen. A regulation steady-going "Snub" release.

MANY HAPPY RETURNS—Rolin Comedy, released by Pathe.—Eddie Bolana is featured, and helping him out are Sunshine Sammy—a youngster who is gaining in cleverness—Ethel Broadhurst and Mark Jones. Eddie has a narrow escape from being "pinched" when the fly cop surrounds his premises, but the "evidence" is spilled on the way to the station. There are some laughs in the single reel.

SEEING RED—Two-reel Western Universal.—Tom Santschi is featured in this story of Francis Quilan, for which Harvey Gates wrote the scenario. Robert Bradbury directed. The picture will go over, but rather on account of the leading player and his associates than because of any particular merit in the story.

A JAPANESE NIGHTINGALE—Three-part Pathe Playlet.—Fanny Ward is the featured player in a story staged with unusual Japanese backgrounds. The production will interest, too, from its dramatic as well as from its picturesque side.

BETWEEN THE RAILS—Episode 12 of "Go-Get-'Em Hutch," released by Pathe.—The thrill in this chapter is at its close, where Hutch fades from view hanging on to the chains of a wrecking train and being dragged along the ties.

THE CAT AND THE PIG—Fable Cartoon, released by Pathe.—Cartoonist Terry very aptly and humorously illustrates and exemplifies the old saying that "Some folks are never satisfied."

STATE RIGHTS

ALL THE NEWS OF ACTIVITIES IN THE TERRITORIES

Miss Pearson Signed for "Wild Youth"

Ivan Abramson Adds Popular Player to Notable Cast—Will Portray Leading Emotional Role in State Rights Subject

Ivan Abramson, head of the Graphic Film Corporation, who is producing Wild Youth with a strong cast, added to the prestige of his subject when he engaged Virginia Pearson to portray the leading emotional role.

During the past three years this well known star has been appearing with Sheldon Lewis throughout the Keith Vaudeville Circuit, where she increased her popularity. Miss Pearson will be remembered for her interpretations during her work with Famous Players, Pathe, Vitagraph and Fox, for whom she made some thirty-five productions.

Also included in a cast are Mary Anderson, Harry Morey, Julia Swayne Gordon, Thurston Hall, Joseph Striker and Bobby Connelly.

Production has been started at the Talmadge Studios, where some remarkable sets have already been constructed to keep up with the general merit of the story itself. Mr. Abramson will leave no stone unturned to make Wild Youth a production that will merit commendation from every possible angle.

Southern Enterprise Makes Big Booking of Eddie Polo Serial

One of the larger bookings recorded by First National Pictures of Charlotte is that just made on Cap'n Kidd, Eddie Polo's first Independent serial.

First National has just announced to Star Serial Corporation, which holds world distribution rights, the bookings of the serial to eighteen big houses over the Southern Enterprise circuit, and that exhibitors on the Circuit are planning special big exploitation for these bookings.

The Alpha Theatre in Atlanta started its first run on the serial this week—and reports that the showing was a tremendous success from a boxoffice and patron's point of view and that the majority of the audience stopped at the boxoffice to ask when the next episode would be shown.

Burr Studios Hard at Work on Coming "Torchy's Feud"

The manner in which the C. C. Burr staff at the Glendale Studios has taken hold of its work in Torchy's Feud gives promise of a production of merit. The latest Johnny Hines vehicle having for its locale the backwoods district of Kentucky, it was necessary to build entirely new props and settings that would effectively portray the locale desired. Accordingly, fifteen sets have been built for interiors alone, and an entire community set up on the grounds immediately outside the studio. The interior sets used this week consisted of a mountaineer's lodge, a huge barn, including stalls, hay racks and troughs for the horses; the interior of a Pullman car wherein Torchy meets up with a revenue officer and proceeds to win his bankroll; the interiors of a southern estate with its rambling rooms, and a lodge beautifully decorated with trophies of the hunt.

The exteriors show a small village of some ten log cabins, a railroad station, a general store and a cleverly constructed moonshine "still" around which many humorous and hair raising incidents take place, with the unsuspecting Torchy bearing the brunt of all sorts of trouble.

"After Six Days" Opens on June 17 At Atlantic City

Through arrangements made between David Starkman, lessee of Wood's Theatre, Atlantic City, and Louis Weiss of Artclass Pictures Corporation, After Six Days will be shown publicly for the first time on June 17. Beginning with this date, the picture will play an extended engagement at the theatre mentioned above and it is planned to keep the picture in Atlantic City through the entire summer.

Extensive arrangements for exploiting this opening have been made by Artclass Pictures, and Messrs. Weiss and Ennis will be at the Jersey resort through the next two weeks for the purpose of directing the exploitation campaign and the presentation. A special musical score has been prepared and a unique prologue will be staged under the direction of Mr. Starkman. A widespread billboard campaign will be instituted, and space for 300 twenty-four sheets has been secured between Philadelphia and Atlantic City.

At the opening performance a gathering of celebrities in all walks of life will attend. As presented at Woods' Theatre the picture will be in twelve reels, with special hand colored effects in many of the scenes. It is planned to follow public opinion as to the future length of this film. One of the features of the premiere will be the distribution of several thousand small balloons together with a special souvenir booklet, descriptive of the film itself.

Plan Bigger Stories for Productions of "Big Boy" Williams

Joe Di Lorenzo, president of Di Lorenzo, Inc., is in receipt of a wire this week from Roy Stone of Frederick Herbst Productions, stating that the latter is coming from the coast to confer with Mr. Di Lorenzo on production plans for future "Big Boy" Williams series.

In view of the reception given to the initial two Williams pictures, Producer Herbst and his staff are strongly considering greater expenditure on the forthcoming pictures for "Big Boy."

Mr. Di Lorenzo has just drawn up an exhaustive report on state rights conditions gained from his coast to coast tour in behalf of the new Williams series. This report will have great bearing on future plans for Herbst Productions, and it is intimated that due to the healthy aspect of its findings Mr. Stone will carry back with him on his return to the Coast a decision to make the future Williams stories bigger than they have been.

"Her Story" Leads Four Releases of Second National

Her Story, second of the four releases so far announced by Second National Pictures, appears to be taking the lead of the series so far in popularity, according to reports received at the New York offices. New York City theatres, twenty-four of which have booked the attraction for the current month, have aided in placing this picture in its present position.

Her Story differs from David and Jonathan and The Night Riders, first and third releases by Second National, in having been written especially for the screen, and for the featuring of Madge Titheradge in the leading role by Dion Titheradge, brother of the stage and screen actress. The other two pictures are visualizations of popular novels by E. Temple Thurston and Ridgewell Cullum. The fourth release, Broken Shadows, from the Irish novel, Nance, by Charles Garvice, is showing up well in the early bookings, it is said.

These four pictures, of the series of twelve to be released by Second National in the current season, differ widely in theme and setting.

Federated Announces New Screen Review of Players

A contract was closed last week with Lester Soman and Julius Singer whereby they will produce for the Federated a Screen Review. It is to be a single reel release issued, for the time being, every other week, starting about the last week in June. This reel will contain intimate views of the motion picture stars, their life at home, their fads, hobbies and amusements. A. D. V. Storey will edit the reel, and the first number is already completed.

This release will take the place of the Federated Screen Snapshots previously distributed by Federated.

Important Sale by Arrow

W. E. Shallenberger, president of the Arrow Film Corporation, reports the closing of a contract for the distribution of short subjects in New England with the American Feature Film Co., 37 Piedmont Street, Boston, of which company Harry Ascher is president.

The contract calls for the exclusive distribution in New England of forty-five 2-reel comedies released on the Arrow Comedy Franchise.

Man from Hell's River

Adapted from "The God of Her People," by James Oliver Curwood. Starring Irving Cummings; supported by Eva Novak, Wallace Beery and Rin-Tin, the dog hero. Distributed by Western Pictures Exploitation Co.

Housman Comedies' "Snitching Hour" Is Light and Mirthful

The Clark-Cornelius Corporation is offering the independent market The Snitching Hour, a farce comedy in five parts, presented by Herbert L. Steiner and directed by Alan Crosland. The picture was produced by Housman Comedies and features Arthur Housman. The titles are gay in spirit and in keeping with the atmosphere of the story. These are the work of Joseph W. Farnham.

Mr. Housman is supported by a good cast—Gladys Leslie, Mario Carillo, Nita Naldi, Frank Currier and George Lessey. The subject perhaps is more farce than comedy. The featured player enacts the role of a good-natured "souse," one in the dress suited variety, we hasten to add. He enters the story in an "illuminated" condition and goes out of it in the same merry mood.

The tale is of the attempts of a small band of international crooks to get possession of a ruby in the keeping of Richard Dickerson, played by Mr. Currier. Bunny, played by Mr. Housman, in love with the daughter of Dickerson (Miss Leslie), prevents the theft, which is planned to take place at a house party at which the Dickersons are hosts.

The picture is put on and played in a competent manner. The characters and the settings are of the well-to-do, the Dickersons, for instance, being the possessors of a 1922 "cellar." There may be a tendency on the part of the more straitlaced to "choke" on the drinking stuff, but that is a matter for each exhibitor to determine for himself. As a matter of fact, the leading character has very nearly a monopoly of the liquor consumption, and he is duly threatened with discipline, with the breaking of an engagement. Very plainly the production aims to be light and mirthful, and in all probability the reports will indicate that it has succeeded.

Equitable Pictures Buys Equity's "Wandering Boy"

With the announcement this week by Equity Pictures of the sale of Where Is My Wandering Boy in Washington, D. C., only one territory in the country remains unsold.

The latest buyer of this state right subject is Equitable Pictures, of 240 Fallsway, Baltimore. This newly organized concern will control the rights for Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia. The only unsold territory in the country is Southern Illinois and Eastern Missouri.

Equity is now prepared to concentrate on What's Wrong with the Women, which will be its fall special.

Notes From the Northwest

Word has been received that Jack Lannon, well known president of Greater Features, Inc., will be back at the home office, 2010 Third Avenue, Seattle, by the first of the week. Mr. Lannon has been in the Montana territory for the past month. While there he visited the company's new Butte office, which is proving popular with Montana exhibitors, who have heretofore been obliged to deal through the Seattle office.

* * *

The Equity Film Co. of Portland has been taken over by the Reliance Distributing Co., Theo. Johnson, manager. Leo Potter will have charge of the Portland office, which will handle a number of other high class releases in addition to the Equity product. A Clara Kimball Young series, Life's Greatest Question, with Louise Lovely, and a Harry Revier Production, Heart of the North are being booked throughout the Northwest territory at the present time.

Warner Coast Studios Finish "Rags to Riches" with Barry

The Wesley Barry feature, Rags to Riches, a Harry Rapf production to be distributed by the Warner Brothers, was completed last week at the Warner coast studios. The story is said to deal with a wealthy adventurous youngster who, imbued with the desire to emulate the hazards of dime novel heroes, becomes embroiled with a gang of crooks. In the supporting cast are Niles Welch, Ruth Renick, Russell Simpson and Mrs. Minna Ferry Redman. Wallace Worsley directed the feature, assisted by Jim Chapin. The story was written by Will Nigh.

Pacific Exchange Opened on Los Angeles' Film Row

With E. H. Silcocks, general sales manager of the Pacific Film Co., Inc., in temporary control, John J. Hayes, president of Pacific, has opened the first of a chain of independent exchanges on film row, Los Angeles, Cal. According to Mr. Hayes, this chain of exchanges, handling Pacific products exclusively, will extend from coast to coast in a year's time.

President Hayes is now in the east, making a survey of film conditions. While in the east Mr. Hayes, who is being accompanied by his family, will visit his parents at Atlanta.

"Innocent Cheat" at Broadway

Announcement is made by W. E. Shallenberger, president of tthe Arrow Film Corporation, that the big Arrow-Ben Wilson special, The Innocent Cheat, starring Roy Stewart and Kathleen Kirkham, will have its New York premier at the Broadway Theatre, where it opens for a run on Sunday, June 18.

Manager MacDonald of the Broadway Theatre has planned an elaborate exploitation campaign and many novelties for the showing of this picture, which he considers one of the remarkable subjects of the year.

Foreign Buyers Visit Arrow

D. J. Mountan, manager of the foreign department of the Arrow Film Corporation, reports a number of visitors during the past week. Among them were C. A. Olsen of Christiania, Erik Lundberg of Stockholm, John Wainright, F. M. Hall and F. Kilner of London, J. C. Ramos of Ponce, Porto Rico, and Henry Bredhoff of Honolulu.

Mr. Mountan states that they all report healthy activity abroad and that foreign conditions are rapidly getting back to normal.

Ben Friedman Optimistic

Ben Friedman of the Friedman Film Exchange, Minneapolis, visited Arrow this week and was enthusiastic over the results being obtained by Arrow's Ten Nights in a Barroom. Mr. Friedman stated this picture was breaking records in Iowa and Nebraska, for which territory he controls it, and that he expected to gross a record figure in the two states. He reports conditions there greatly improved and looks for the biggest and best business of many years during the coming season.

"Your Best Friend" Goes Over Strong in Providence Run

Despite the hot weather, carnivals and theatrical competition, the Warner Brothers' attraction, Your Best Friend, a Harry Rapf production featuring Vera Gordon, was put over in whirlwind fashion during its two weeks' run at the Opera House, Providence.

The showing was executed by Mr. Ekeberg, of the Screenart Pictures Corporation, Boston. More than 1000 street cars carried an announcement of the picture on the dashboard in both Rhode Island and Massachusetts. Fully 25,000 milk bottles were labeled with Your Best Friend stickers, and department stores carried attractive window displays by using the oil paintings available with the feature.

Another novel tie-up was made with a number of the larger restaurants in the city by placing the stickers on the bottom of the menus. Thousands of bank book heralds were used by the banks of Providence, and in connection with the showing a bank account was started for every baby born during the run of the feature.

According to Mr. Ekeberg, the success of the feature brought an unusual number of bookings from New England exhibitors. It is said that several second run theatres were so enthusiastic over the campaign that they willingly paid a booking price secured from a first run engagement.

Warners Buy Two More

To the list of a half dozen novels already purchased by the Warner Brothers, have been added the screen rights to two more, according to Harry M. Warner. They are The Old Folks at Home, written by Justine Adams, and Lover's Lane, from the pen of Clyde Fitch. Both stories are scheduled to be produced by Sam Warner, production manager of the West Coast studios.

Mayhood Prepares Music Score

Louis Weiss, of Artclass Pictures Corporation, has announced that Orville Mayhood is to prepare a special musical score for After Six Days. It is understood Mr. Mayhood will interpret this score in person as conductor of the orchestra at the premiere of this picture, which opens at Wood's Theatre, Atlantic City, June 17.

Craver Takes on "Felix"

R. D. Craver, franchise holder for First National in Georgia and North Carolina and who operates his exchange system in North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida and Alabama, this week acquired the rights to the "Felix" cartoon comics, the series of which is controlled for world-wide distribution by M. J. Winkler.

Hayes Planning to Expand

An option on fifty acres of land in the heart of Culver City, adjacent to the Hal Roach studios, has been signed by John J. Hayes, president of the Pacific Film Co., Inc., who plans to use the property for studio purposes.

Extend Congratulations

Last week Producers Security Corporation announced the acquisition of Dorthy Gish's The Country Flapper, and already dozens of messages have been received by the company congratulating it for offering to the states rights field the first of the Dorothy Gish Productions.

Ballyhoos and Billboards

1. George Tooker, Regent, Elmira, N. Y., tied up with the Buick agency on a Bought and Paid For parade. 2. Ford sedan used as street stunt by Fred Gerber, Corning, N. Y., for The Call of the North. 3. Three ghosts in the street ballyhoo Palace Theatre, Dallas, Tex., showing of Three Live Ghosts. 4. Manager Bill Duncan, Plaza, Sioux City, Ia., got publicity with his girl bill posters of Fool's Paradise 24 sheets.

Business Is Going to School—I

In Which Edward Hyman Takes You Into Confidence

By EDWARD L. HYMAN
Managing Director Brooklyn Mark Strand Theatre

Edward L. Hyman, managing director of the Brooklyn Mark Strand, declares that industries in great groups are studying their own machinery of operation—are collecting statistics—are planning to meet changing public relations, while the motion picture exhibiting industry is floundering.

Mr. Hyman has collected data and studied reactions within his own theatre so that he will have a detailed survey of his own business situation, which he believes should be studied and compared with the problems of other exhibitors to the end that mistakes of years may be righted. This is the first of a series of informative articles based on Mr. Hyman's survey, the first being introductory and reviewing the situation as he sees it.

How many managers of motion picture theatres are able to see past their own box offices?

How many exhibitors have stopped learning, have shut the door of their brain against radical policies and are skidding to nowhere-in-particular on the momentum gained when the going was easy?

How many motion picture executives are willing to go to school again?

How many managers are content to take a chance on the old threadbare shabby ways of running a house that have been in practise for ten years?

Self contemplation is a mighty disturbing proposition, especially if you are honest with yourself. Only the Lord knows how many motion picture exhibitors have the nerve to admit that they have only learned their own business, say about 15 per cent.

It is true just the same. Surveys of industry made by governmental bodies show that in practically every industry given a thorough once-over there were only a few who were harnessed and equipped so that they were operating on anywhere near the normal basis that they should. There was waste and inefficiency everywhere, due mostly to the application of obsolete worn-out managerial ideas.

It was proved that industrial heads needed to get together to quickly accumulate and disseminate statistics which would give business at all times an insight into the national and international situation. These engineers showed conditions up so badly in a great number of trades with the result that now business is going to school to unlearn and to re-learn.

> If Mr. Hays does nothing more than to get motion picture business men to go to school he will accomplish all that could be expected of a man of his extensive capabilities.

By going to school I mean just this. When the Chamber of Commerce of the United States met in convention recently hundreds of leaders in commercial life "went to school" to such teachers as President Harding, Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Labor Davis, famous financiers, celebrated economists.

After studying my own theatre and its relation to the public with extreme care I am of the opinion that I have made mistakes and am repeating these mistakes which are being made throughout the industry, and that if all of us—exhibitors, owners, etc.—went to school for a week or two each year this needless floundering might be eliminated.

The trade paper is the most valuable text book that the exhibitor has. It comes to him every week. The good it does could be increased by surveys and conferences which could be held at stated intervals.

Some radical policies are necessary in our wonderful business. You may say—is your own house in order? I believe it is to the extent that I am able to administrate it without a definite knowledge of what the future will bring forth. Statistics and surveys would give me a better insight into that future.

There is a general complaint today that the only problem we have is—more business.

> Plants that grow wild like Topsy don't produce prize vegetables.

> The exhibiting industry today is sitting back dazed and wondering where in tarnation it is going to land.

All the perseverance and work and novelty and quality in the world won't bring that more business permanently if the fundamentals are shaky, temporary and need strengthening.

I am not going to even predict what is generally wrong. I don't exactly know, although I have my opinions. The industry will find out if it goes to school, if it unlearns and re-learns.

The exhibiting industry cannot be standardized—but it can be operated sanely with a view to the future. The hit-or-miss plan must go—or business will.

I have found:

That a manager is deliberately courting poor business when through failure to properly gage the drawing and amusement value of a picture, coupled with a lack of knowledge of the desires of his clientele, he recklessly presents a thrown-together program and trusts to luck that it will go across.

That a manager is heading for the scrap heap when he substitutes pep, energy and originality for common sense and a knowledge of the entertainment needs of his community.

That a manager is falling down when he holds his taste above those of his community.

That a manager is neglecting an opportunity when he declines to make his theatre as much a civic institution as the public library or the public parks.

That a manager is not on the job who does not watch his audiences to determine the reactions caused by certain types of pictures and musical numbers.

I have found we are making the same old mistakes in the production of pictures, in the writing of scenarios—and that we are just as culpable as the producer when we continue to be a party to his errors.

Hot Stuff—Now You Get It

By Walter F. Eberhardt

ENJOYMENT goes smilin' through hot weather.

It may not break into an open faced guffaw but it usually registers satisfaction in an unmistakable manner. If the question of giving satisfaction were the only thing the exhibitor had to face in summertime his problems would concentrate upon the one question of booking.

It happens that that is far from being the case, however. In the months of July and August the best attraction in the world may be a box-office flivver because it has not been presented to the public in a manner sufficiently convincing to overcome the real and imaginary objections that accompany the hot spell; and the succint lines of salesmanship and exploitation are strained a bit tauter during the summer period than at any other time of the year.

As almost every form of ill has some remedy, so has the summertime box-office jaundice a medicinal tonic. There are recognized forms of advertising and exploitation especially adapted to the warm weather fever.

Among these the institutional form of advertising—copy that establishes in the public mind the coolness and comforts of the interior of the theatre on the hottest day—has implanted itself so firmly that it is being recognized almost as essential as the name of the attraction itself.

There are the summertime matinees. There are the ice cream parties. They were initiated for 1922 by the Barcli Theatre, Schenectady, N. Y., recently during a run of My Boy when the management effected a deal whereby every youngster attending the matinee performance was given an ice cream cone.

There are the fans and the ventilators, the tea parlors and the rest room, the palms and the summer drapings, the subdued lights and the restful appointments of the interior.

All of these are direct, tangible selling points awaiting the advertised word that will bring their attractiveness in hot weather before the public.

More subtly the entrance to the theatre can convey, by suggestion, a tempting idea of the coolness of the interior. The blazing asphalt pavements, regarded as the seasonal enemy of good business, is really an asset when the theatre front is arranged to form a pleasing contrast.

A few illustrations come photographically to hand. The Empress Theatre, The Dalles, Ore., has a fetching front of hanging streamers and vines that intimates sunken gardens, a refreshing oasis—in fact anything suggestive of coolness and comfort.

The foyer of the Liberty Theatre, Portland, Ore., for Smilin' Through is another indication. The growing plants and hanging vines, the suggestion of a fountain and the sombre hue of the drapings outline a wealth of restful ease inside the theatre that offers a haven of refuge to the sun-baked pedestrian on the streets.

Another typical example is furnished in the permanent trellis front of the Forum Theatre, Hillsboro, Ohio, where Manager George Rea has built up a lobby front that indicates lightness, garden surroundings, a tea party—anything distinctive from the heavy, heat glazed thoroughfares.

Outdoor ballyhoos and exploitation are particularly pertinent at a time of year when nature calls to thousands of nature lovers who have over-digested their annual ration of stuffy boarding houses and monotonous interiors.

Newman's Theatre, Kansas City, Mo., exemplified this recently for their run of Smilin' Through when they hung a huge banner across the main thoroughfare where it was visible to the unusually heavy automobile traffic—5000 cars daily—that passed underneath it.

Window displays of seasonal appeal, picnic party equipment, ice cream sodas, etc., are of value at this time of year. The Wintergarden Theatre of Jamestown, N. Y., makes a particular play for this line of co-operation during the hot weather and the results, as instanced by the tie up on Molly O, have justified the effort.

There is still another brand of exploitation—that tells its story indirectly. We have the example of the southern manager who advertised that any patron who announced to the management that he felt uncomfortably warm in the house would immediately have two colored attendants at his disposal to fan him.

After the darkies had been on hand and done nothing for five days a robust patron sent the S. O. S. call to the manager's office. Within two minutes there was a darky boy before and another behind him vigorously applying a palm fan; and within five minutes more the ponderous individual called them off again.

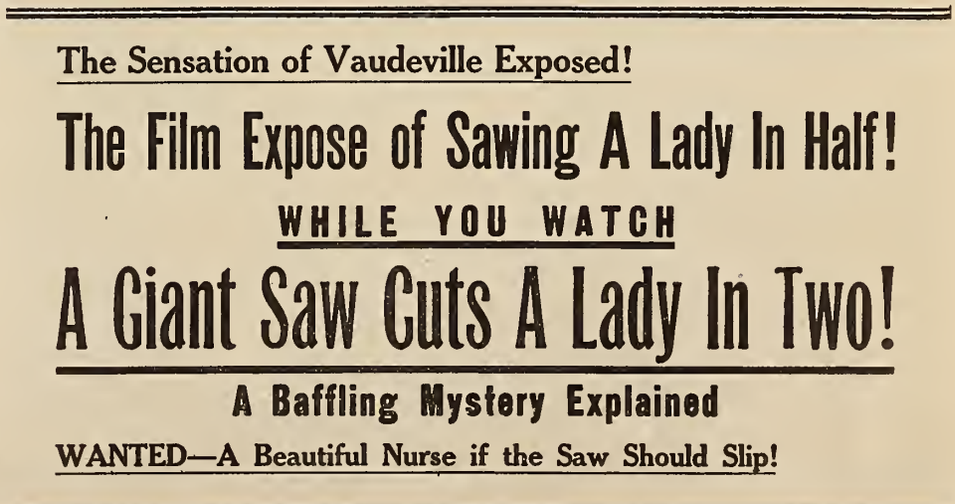
The stunt was not tangibly significant, but as exploitation it guaranteed, in the first place, that the manager's belief in the comfort of his house was supreme and, in the second place, it was such an unusual method of announcing the fact that it attracted widespread interest. The indirect method of approach is often more effective in arousing interest than a direct statement of fact. In this instance the hot weather antidote was played up primarily as an advertising stunt and only secondarily as a direct weapon against hot weather; but it functioned both ways.

Another indirect method of combatting hot weather was used by a theatre on the Jersey coast. Instead of fighting the competition of outdoor sports the manager cooperated with it. When a swimming race was held he advertised it in his theatre. The same with a program of beach races.

But he always arranged that the closing number ended up at his theatre, strangely enough, just as his feature picture was about to start.

One need not be on the sea coast to visualize the possibilities of this line of attack. A band concert, a returning picnic party, a community sing or civic ceremonies and addresses can always be terminated in a manner of similar satisfaction to the theatre.

There is one other suggestion to meet the objections of the precise mathematical people who insist upon accuracy and that is the installation of a huge thermometer at the side of the stage. It has been done. It will be done again—not because the installation of the thermometer will lesson the heat any more than 12 o'clock will bring a meal to a penniless beggar, but because it will bring physical evidence to the exact individual that the coolness of the theatre is all that has been vouchsafed by the management. This assurance, in the display advertising and the physical evidence of it inside the theatre, has a strong psychological effect that will last just as long as visual evidence is of any importance.



This is one of the accessories put out by the Clarion Photoplays for "Sawing a Lady in Half." These cards, measuring seven by eleven inches, are, in a way, teasers that will rouse curiosity, as the average man, woman or boy all want to know how baffling feats of mystery are done.

Children attending Saturday morning matinee, in which the Branford Theatre, Newark, N. J., and the Paramount Exchange co-operated to collect flowers for decoration of graves Memorial Day. Admission was by presentation of potted plants or cut flowers. "Huckleberry Finn" was the feature. The movement was supported by the American Legion and civic organizations.

Manager Charles F. McNamara of the Colonial Theatre, Tacoma, Wash., utilized this tasteful arrangement of display frames in connection with the showing of United Artists' "Orphans of the Storm." The stills and hand-lettered placards were mounted on brown plush.

Manager H. J. Gould, Hippodrome Theatre, Ft. Worth, Tex., used a live baby in his lobby display for "The Cradle" and kept a nurse in constant attendance. By a tie-up he secured the cradle and other baby furniture from a local store at a nominal cost—by using placards announcing through whose courtesy they were displayed.

Stunt Road-Showed

The manager and executives of Loew's Metropolitan Theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y., aided by First National's exploitation man, established what may be a new departure in exploitation when they conceived an effective idea and then road-showed it for the other Loew houses which were to play Smilin' Through, the feature attraction.

It is thought possible by some that the campaign that found its origin in Brooklyn may set a precedent for road-showed exploitation.

The prime generator in arousing interest was the marriage surrey of the Victorian era. In this instance the exploitation man secured a girl of unusual loveliness and her charm was an added inspiration for passersby to find the excuse for dallying a few minutes before the carriage. Those who did pause were handed invitations from Mr. and Mrs. Clare to attend the wedding of their daughter Moonyeen to Mr. John Carteret.

For each performance, before the feature picture was run, the surrey drove up to the front of the Metropolitan, and the couple alighted, posed in the lobby a few moments and then entered. Business boosting for Brooklyn also featured the campaign. Easily visible on the roof of a building was the sign: "We Are Telling You to Boost Brooklyn and Go Smilin' Through 1922." Two sailors engaged from the Brooklyn Navy Yard with semaphores signalled the message to thousands of interested pedestrians on the street below.

Abraham and Straus furnished a window reproducing the wedding gown worn by Norma Talmadge. The Victoria carriage and the couple in it were signed up for nineteen days to accompany the showing of the picture at other Loew houses.

Stock Exchange

Ray Deusern, manager of the Terminal Theatre, Newark, used a bit of original exploitation in connection with the recent engagement of Fox's Shackles of Gold.

In the front of the lobby a large black board was erected and painted to resemble that of the stock exchange. Large white letters at the top said: "Stock Market Today." Under tabulations of "high," "low," and "closing" were listed the stocks of "Farnum," "Shackles of Gold," "Mexican Oil," "Lounge Lizard," "Loveless Marriage," "Terminal Theatre," 'Opportunity," "Wizard Finance," "Gold," "Great Masterpiece" and "Stevedore."

A young man attired as a stock exchange page and outfitted with a conventional megaphone stood at the entrance and called out the new "listings" on the factors. Large crowds were attracted to the theatre front during all hours of the afternoon and night.

Profitable Discount

Manager Walker of the Barcli Theatre, Schenectady, N. Y., obtained the aid of the "Daughters of Isabella" for his run of Hail the Woman, the largest woman's organization in the city. By allowing a discount of ten per cent for their own organization, five hundred tickets were sold at the initial discussion of the plans. The members further agreed to sell enough additional tickets to make up a stated quota.

Getting Them to Go

A go-to-theatre week is O. K. if people will go to the theatre, and this is what Elwood Simons of the Family Theatre, Adrian, Mich., took care of. He got out more than half the town.

He had a new program every evening, and persons attending the first six were admitted free for the last one, Just Around the Corner.

The "week" opened on Sunday night with After the Show, then followed one each day, The Lost Romance, Travelin' On, Rent Free and Ladies Must Live. Just Around the Corner, to all intents, was thrown in as the premium.

Mr. Simons advertised liberally in the newspapers and tied up enough merchants for a co-operative page; 10,000 handbills anouncing the plan of the theatre were printed and given a house-to- house distribution.

Mr. Simons reports that nearly 8000 people attended his theatre during the seven days. He can seat 1500 and he had a packed house each time.

Armored truck makes appearance for "Fools First" and "Penrod" in double ballyhoo stunt used by the Hope Theatre, Dallas, Tex. The armament of advertising lines was sufficiently heavy to attract attention and send home its message even when the car attained the speed limit.

Mails Civic Pride Letter

The note of civic pride and direct appeal featured the letter sent out by Manager M. F. Schnibben of the Opera House, Florence, S. C., to his patrons for Hail the Woman, and struck a responsive chord.

He told his fellow citizens that he was proud of the picture not as a manager of the theatre but as a citizen of Florence which would see it. He declared that it was a more expensive picture than Florence had seen before, and he was advising them of its appeal not because it was coming to the Opera House, but because it was coming to Florence.

Because of the heavy expense of bringing it there, he told them he had insured it for $500 against bad weather, but in the event of good weather he hoped for their support as a citizen striving to bring finer entertainment to the city.

And he wound up an unusual letter of direct appeal with: "When I saw Hail the Woman I forgot I was a manager, forgot everything except the wonder of the drama Thomas H. Ince has created."

This personal indorsement, if rarely given, is the surest builder of box-office business in the world.

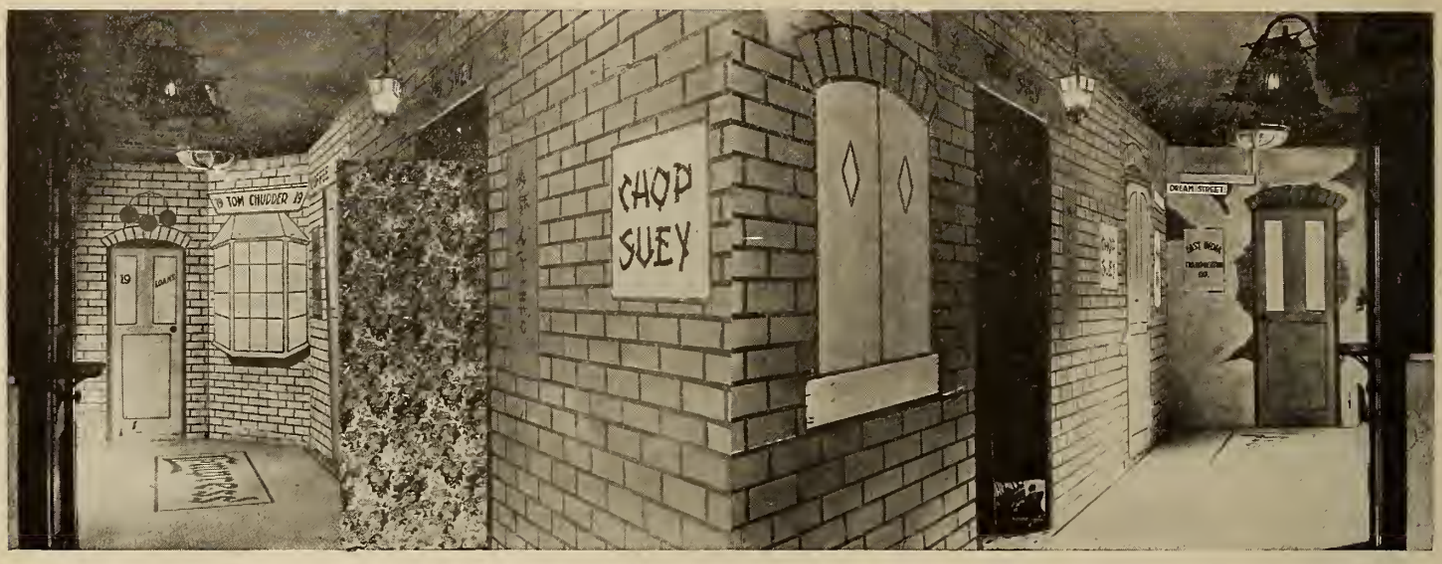
Paramount's "Beyond the Rocks" exploited in a fashion window of the Reich and Lievre store, Fresno, Cal. A replica of one of Gloria Swanson's gowns was featured in this simple but effective display, which was arranged by Wayland Taylor, San Francisco exploiteer for Paramount.

Hostess by Proxy

When it was "discovered" that Norma Talmadge would be obliged to decline the invitation to see herself starred in Smilin' Through, at the Avon Theatre, Watertown, N. Y., arrangements were promptly made by a clever theatre manager and his exploitation man to see that the formalities that were to have been connected with the star's visit should not be interrupted. Miss Talmadge was to have had as guests of honor some of Watertown's fans. In her inability to attend, she was still to act as hostess. A copy of the city directory was sent to her, and she herself selected the thirty ladies who were to be her guests at the special performance.

Frank E. Empsall & Co., running the largest department store in the city, tied up with the showing, and as soon as the announcement came of the list of Miss Talmadge's guests the store gave over a window to a co-operative tie-up and used the photographs of the lucky ladies.

Book tie-up in which R. H. Macy co-operated for mutual benefits with the Rivoli Theatre, New York. This window, in the store at 34th Street and Broadway, attracted the notice of blasé Broadway pedestrians by a neat combination of copies of the novel and stills from the photoplay "Beyond the Rocks."



Lobby Stunts

The Empress Theatre, Lansing, Mich., attracted widespread attention with this special lobby for the run of United Artists' Dream Street. The locale of the play is vividly suggested by means of painted compo-board

Lobby of the Palace Theatre, Ft. Smith, Ark., made spring-like for the run of Paramount's Forever. Trellis built over the box office gave the effect of a summer house, and cut-outs fastened to a trellis made of twine formed an arch in the lobby. As a street stunt a man and girl were dressed in period costumes

Lobby and front display for First National's Smilin' Through. Composition board served for the cottage effect given the ticket booth, while potted shrubs and a garden table aided the reproduction. Cut-outs and display frames were used outside. The insert is a signed personal message used for a three-column ad

Movie Day Celebration

Bloomington, Ill., recently dealt a blow to the reformers in a highly popular Movie Day Celebration, staged by Guy Martin, manager of the Martin Theatre, and the Consistory Club of the city, composed of members of the Masonic fraternity affiliated with the Consistory and representing strong local influence.

The Consistory Club holds a luncheon twice a month in its temple, which is one of the show places of the town. On this occasion, the guest of honor is invited to give an address on any given subject. When Mr. Martin thought of the "Movie Day Celebration" his idea was received enthusiastically by the club, and Dan Roche, Paramount exploiteer of Chicago, was drafted to handle the details.

The two daily papers, the Pantagraph and the Bulletin, immediately took hold and arranged to decorate the city, and invite theatre men from the adjoining towns to make Bloomington Movie Day Celebration one of the biggest affairs in the history of the city.

Martin and Roche made the entrance of the Consistory Temple look like a theatre lobby with posters, stills and cards advertising the following pictures on the Irving Theatre bill: The Green Temptation, The Lane That Had No Turning, Is Matrimony a Failure?, Beyond the Rocks, The Cradle, and The Ordeal.

Inside there was a speakers' stand decorated with photos of Paramount stars, directors and authors. The music was furnished by the Irvin Theatre orchestra, and the address of the day, on "The Motion Picture Industry," was told by C. C. Wallace, branch manager of the Paramount Exchange in Chicago. There were more than 500 men in attendance.

"It was a great day for Bloomington and a great day for the motion picture industry," Mr. Martin said. "When a representative body of influential citizens take it upon themselves to recognize the motion pictures by holding a celebration, that form of entertainment receives the highest kind of indorsement."

License Admits Two

People applying for marriage licenses at the Court House in Pittsburgh were startled by a sign announcing that all applicants for marriage during the week commencing May 22 were cordially invited to be the guests of the Olympic Theatre to see Is Matrimony a Failure?

They were invited to come and have a good laugh and told to show their licenses to the doorman and it would serve as an admission ticket.

Lobby Decorations

Pretentiousness was lent to the lobby of the Bleich Theatre, Owensboro, Ky., during a recent engagement of Fox's Queen of Sheba by the super-imposition of cleverly designed compo board colonnades.

The colonnades permitted four entrance and exit arches and were painted to resemble white stone. Above the arches were painted tapestries of the "Sheba" period. Atop these was a foot-high banner reading "Queen of Sheba." Two smaller signs spoke of the run. One-sheets and stills were used to decorate the empty spots in the front.

Conrad's Auditorium Dialogues

Gets Up a Neat Throwaway and Talks Personally to His Townspeople

Gordon Conrad, manager of the Auditorium, Melbourne, Australia, isn't letting his show go dead on him.

Recently, when he played Midsummer Madness, he engaged the "jazzbo band," which blared forth not from the inside, but from a balcony just above the box-office. The old Barnum sideshow ballyhoo worked there, too.

Conrad also specializes in teaser throwaways, which he calls "Auditorium Dialogues." Sometimes he runs a series for one picture. He got four out of Midsummer Madness.

Double Display

Manager R. P. Whitfield ran a Harold Lloyd comedy on the same bill with Will Rogers in A Poor Relation and was thus able to rig up a clever and inexpensive lobby on the two together. On one side he used a cutout of Rogers doing the family washing for the little waifs he was caring for. On the other side was a cut-out of Harold Lloyd laughing and placed in such a position that he seemed to be laughing at Rogers. In the center was an electric washing machine lent by the local power company and manipulated by a demonstrator from the power company's office.

The total cost was $4 and besides gaining the goodwill of the power company which is not to be sniffed at with the amount of current a show has to use, business showed a good increase.

Toy Balloons Win

Taking advantage of the timely interest in the national balloon flying contest from Milwaukee, Manager R. B. Thomas of the Empress Theatre, Fremont, Neb., aided by First National's exploitation man, staged a balloon contest all his own.

The Empress was playing Hail, the Woman, at the time; and on the same day the papers announced the start from Milwaukee of 15 entrants, Manager Thomas announced the start of his own 15 entrants on Main Street. Each balloon was given the name of a famous First National star and a color to signalize it and was supplied with a pass to the Empress. Where the spectators at Milwaukee applauded the length of time each balloon stayed up, those at Fremont greeted each heavenward flurry with a profound objection which increased interest in the race.

By-Laws of New Dealers' Association

Formation of New Organization Is Under Way and Arousing Interest All Over Country

THE interest aroused by the news that an association of motion picture equipment and supply dealers was being formed, which was printed exclusively in this publication three weeks ago, is widespread. Inquiries have come to us from manufacturers and dealers with a request that more information be published.

In this issue we publish the proposed by-laws. Further information may be obtained from, and suggestions sent to, the Temporary Committee, P. O. Box 426, Cleveland, Ohio. The association will organize at the Hotel Claypool, Indianapolis, Ind., July 13. 14 and 15.

The proposed by-laws follow:

CONSTITUTION

ARTICLE I

NAME

This corporation shall be called The Moving Picture Equipment and Supply Dealers' Association of America.

ARTICLE II

OBJECTS

The objects for which the association is formed, as stated in its articles of incorporation, are: to foster trade and commerce among its members and the business interests of such members; to create a closer relationship between manufacturers of machines and equipment and the supply dealers; to reform trade abuses on behalf of its members; to procure uniformity and certainty in the customs and usages of the trade and commerce, particularly in the business and trade as carried on by its members; to promote and cherish a feeling of fellowship and goodwill among its members and to provide a dignified, authoritative voice for their unit of the theatre industry qualified to represent and speak for it nationally.

For the accomplishment of these objects the association seeks to insure united action wherever the interests of its members are concerned.

ARTICLE III

LOCATION

The principal office of the association shall be located in Cuyahoga County, Cleveland, Ohio.

ARTICLE IV

OFFICERS, EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE AND TRUSTEES

Section 1—The officers of the association shall consist of a president, four vice-presidents, elected without regard to rank or priority, a secretary and a treasurer. There shall be a board of (blank) trustees. The president, vice-presidents and treasurer shall be elected from the board of trustees. All other officers, including the secretary, shall be elected by the board of trustees. The trustees shall elect the officers immediately following the annual meeting of the association. The secretary need not be a member of the association.

Section 2—In the interim of the meeting of the board of trustees the duties of the board shall be performed by an executive committee to consist of five (5) trustees to be appointed by the president; however, to serve on the executive committee a member must be the representative, in his business, of a manufacturer of a professional moving picture machine with a national reputation and for every one of said manufacturers of a moving picture machine who has alloted representation to five (5) or more members of this association there shall be appointed to the executive committee at least one member who is one of the said manufacturer's representatives. The president shall be an ex-officio member of the executive committee. Five (5) members of the executive committee shall constitute a quorum.

BY-LAWS

ARTICLE I

MEMBERSHIP

Section 1—Any person, firm or corporation engaged in the moving picture machine and theatre supply and equipment business, in good standing, may become a member of the association in conformity with the by-laws.

Section 2—Persons, firms or corporations in good standing not eligible to membership under the foregoing section may in conformity with the by-laws become associate members of the association, and shall pay such dues as the board of trustees shall fix.

Associate members shall have no right to vote, shall not be eligible to be trustees or officers, and shall acquire no interest in the property of the association, but shall be entitled to make use of all the facilities of the association as hereinafter provided for members.

Employees of a member of the association may become associate members of the association.

Associate members shall be subject to all the rules and liable to all penalties which are provided for by these by-laws governing members, where same are applicable.

Section 3—Application for membership shall be made in writing to and upon the form to be provided by the secretary and shall be referred by the secretary to the membership committee for its consideration. Upon approval of said committee such applications shall then be referred to the board of trustees for final action, who alone shall have power to elect. Members of the board of trustees may cast their vote by mail or telegraph, as hereinafter provided.

Section 4—The election of members and associated members shall be by ballot by mail or telegraph or may take place at any regular meeting of the board of trustees. It shall be necessary for election that the candidate shall receive the votes of two-thirds of the trustees constituting the quorum, whether present or voting by mail or telegraph.

Section 5—Each person, firm or corporation so elected, upon receiving notice of such election from the association and remitting one-quarter of the annual dues in advance, shall be entitled to all the privileges of membership or associate membership, as the case may be. Every member and associate member, upon election, shall become and be obligated to pay the annual dues for at least one year from the first day of January next following the date of admission to membership.

Section 6—The sale or transfer of a member's business to any person or persons not members of this association shall not include the right of membership or associate membership therein.

In the event any member of the association or associate member makes a change from one established business to another established business, or to a new business, said member or associate member loses his, their or its membership in the association within thirty days thereafter unless said member or associate member submits the facts of the change to the secretary, treasurer or president. who shall refer same to the board of trustees and upon an affirmative vote of two-thirds of that body, said member or associate member may be reinstated to membership or associate membership and status in the association as said board of trustees direct.

Section 7—Resignations must be submitted in writing to the secretary and a member or associate member cannot resign except as of the first day of July and the first day of January of any year. The resignation of any member or associate member must be accompanied by payment of all indebtedness to the association to the first day of July or the first day of January, respectively following the date of such resignation, but the association may accept such resignation and extend the time for payment as above defined in its discretion.

ARTICLE II

DUTIES AND PENALTIES

Section 1—Every member or associate member shall pay to the treasurer such quarterly dues, in advance, as may be determined by the board of trustees.

Section 2—The board of trustees may assess members from time to time for the general purposes of the association, but such assessments shall not aggregate over $25 in any one fiscal year. No associate member shall be assessed.

Section 3—Each and every assessment shall be submitted to the entire membership, excepting associate members, with a statement of the purpose for which such assessment is required, and unless a majority shall object within fifteen days after the mailing of the notice of the assessment and referendum, such assessment shall be binding on all the members and pavable according to its terms.

Section 4—Any member neglecting to pay the prescribed dues or assessments within sixty days after having been notified to do so shall be suspended by the board of trustees from all the privileges of membership until all arrears of dues and assessments are paid, or shall upon the vote of two-thirds of the trustees present at any regular or special meeting, be expelled, provided said member has had an opportunity to be heard before a committee appointed by the trustees.

ARTICLE III
RIGHTS AND PRIVILEGES

Section 1—Every individual member of the association and each partner of a firm and officer of a corporation which is a member, and any person authorized by such firm or corporation to act as its representative on the board, shall be eligible to serve on the board of trustees. Every member is eligible to any of the offices of the association and is entitled to cast one vote only, either in person or by proxy or by mail or telegraph, except as qualified by Section 2 of Article III of these by-laws, at the annual election for trustees, and on all questions upon which members may vote. Such vote, however, in the case of a firm or corporation, may be cast by any partner or officer of such firm or corporation, or any person thereunto duly authorized in writing by such firm or corporation.

Section 2—A member who is acting as a branch manager for a firm or corporation shall be entitled to vote and hold office and become a member of the board of trustees of the association; however, no single firm or corporation shall be entitled to cast more than one vote at the annual election for trustees and on all questions upon which members may vote.

ARTICLE IV
GOVERNMENT

Section 1—The government of the association is vested in a board of (blank) ( ) trustees, who shall be elected from such locations as to fairly represent all sections of the United States, but not over one-third of said trustees shall be representatives in their business of the same manufacturer of moving picture machines. The said trustees shall hereafter be elected by ballot by a plurality vote of the members of the association present and voting at the annual meeting or casting their vote by mail or telegraph.

No member of the association shall serve two consecutive terms as a trustee. At the annual meeting there shall also, by ballot, and by a plurality vote, be elected from the board of trustees so elected, the following officers: a president and four vice-presidents and a treasurer. However, there shall not be more than two officers elected who are representatives in their business of the same manufacturer of moving picture machines.

Vacancies occurring or existing in the officers or board of trustees during the interval between annual meetings shall be filled by the board of trustees.

The board of trustees may also elect a secretary, who shall perform such duties as may be designated by the board of trustees or the president. The secretary need not be a member of this association.

All the detail work in connection with the various official positions in the association may be performed by the secretary and his assistants.

Section 2—The standing committees of the board of trustees shall consist of a finance committee of five, an auditing committee of three and a membership committee of five, who shall be appointed by the president from the board of trustees subject to the approval of said board and who shall serve until their successors are appointed. All other committees appointed by the president shall be subject to the approval of the board of trustees.

There shall also be a standing committee known as the good and welfare committee, consisting of three members of the board of trustees and seven members of the association who are not trustees, who shall be appointed by the president and who shall serve for one year or until their successors are duly appointed. The president shall be a member ex-officio of all committees.

The treasurer shall be a member ex-officio of the finance committee.

The finance and auditing committees shall hold at least two meetings each year, and special meetings at the call of the chairman of said committees or of the president.

Section 3—The term of office of all these officers shall be for one year. No officer shall receive compensation, except the secretary elected by the board. Said compensation shall be fixed by the board of trustees.

Section 4—The board of trustees shall appoint an attorney at law as counsel to the association and arrange with him for his compensation.

THE FINANCE COMMITTEE

Section 5—The finance committee or its chairman shall examine and approve all bills rendered and all charges made against the association, and the treasurer shall not authorize the payment of any such bills or charges until they have been certified as correct by the finance committee or its chairman.

Section 6—The finance committee or the president shall have power to employ a certified or bonded public accountant for the purpose of making a complete examination and audit of the books of the association at such times as they or he may deem proper.

THE MEMBERSHIP COMMITTEE

Section 7—The membership committee shall investigate the standing and character of all applicants for membership or associate membership in the association and report thereon to the board of trustees.

AUDITING COMMITTEE

Section 8—It shall be the duty of the auditing committee from time to time to audit the report of the treasurer.

THE GOOD AND WELFARE COMMITTEE

Secion 9—This committee may take cognizance of the objects for which this association is formed as are not under the care and supervision of the other standing committees. This committee shall not bind the association for any expenses or disbursements except upon express authorization from the board of trustees or the finance committee. But this committee when authorized by the board of trustees or the finance committee may collect and disburse funds for any specified purpose.

This committee shall be subject to the control of the board of trustees and shall report from time to time as required by the board.

Section 10—No committee of three members or less shall have more than one member on it who represents the same manufacturer of moving picture machines.

All committees shall have serving on them members who in their businesses represent different manufacturers of moving picture machines, but where committees are larger in number than the number of manufacturers of moving picture machines who have allotted representation to five (5) or more members of this association, then the excess number on any one of said committees up to six (6) members shall in no case exceed two members who represent the same manufacturer of moving picture machines. This ratio of representation shall apply to all larger committees.

Projection Problems

I am having a lot of trouble with condensers breaking, so am taking the liberty of writing your projection department for help.

The following are the various distances I think you will need know in order to give me the required information:

We have a throw of 135 ft.; picture, 16 ft. x 13 ft. 6 in.; simplex projectors type S lamphouses; working distance of projection lens, 6 in.; free diameter of projection lens, 1⅝ in.; plano convex condensers, 6½ collector and 7½ converging; distance face of converging lens to aperture, 15 in.; use 100 amperes at arc; ⅞ core positive and 7/16 silver tip negative. My projection lens are marked 7¾ inches.

Could you tell me what size condensers to use and if we are using the right size lens; also distance between condensers and distance from condensers to aperture.

Thanking you in advance and hoping to hear from you soon, I remain yours,

J. H. Keener,
14 Elizabeth Street,
Charleston, S. C.

First see that none of the vent holes in the lamp housing are clogged up. Then examine the condenser mounts and see whether or not they are binding the lenses. The proper combination to use is two 7½ condensers spaced not more than 1/16th of an inch apart in the holder. The proper working distance from the face of the converging lens to the aperture plate is 22 inches, but this distance cannot always be obtained. Anyhow, pull your lamp house back just as far as you can from the aperture plate and your trouble will probably vanish.

Building Notes

J. A. McGlynn, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., well known architect, is drawing plans for a theatre, store and apartment building on Main Street, Shickshinny. The playhouse will be 50 x 140 ft.

Arvid Kantor, of New York, president of the Peoples' Theatre Co., announced that work will be started within a week on the new Peoples' Theatre at Bethlehem, Pa. Kantor states the theatre will run pictures at 10 and 15 cents.

The Rialto, Plymouth, Pa., has suspended for the summer and during the layoff extensive repairs and innovations will be essayed. The Palace Theatre in the same town is under the Roberts management and the Rialto books will be run at the Palace, in conjunction with the cream of the dates the Palace holds, until the Rialto opens again in the fall.

The Leland, one of the largest and oldest houses in Albany, N. Y., was sold by the F. F. Proctor interests to C. H. Buckley, a real estate operator of that city. The deal involved $300,000.

The new theatre A. K. Smith is building at Quakertown, Pa., should be ready by Labor Day. The site has been cleared and work has been started upon the foundations.

The Gem Theatre, Seattle, has installed two new projectors.

Whiteside Bros., Corvallis, Wash., who have a new house under construction have purchased a Wurlitzer organ.

Port Angeles is to have a new $60,000 house, seating 1040. Mack J. Davis is owner of the house which will be named the Mack Theatre. It will have a fall opening. The Theatre Equipment Co., distributors of Powers machines have entire charge of projection and equipment.

A. S. Kolstad, of the Rialto Theatre, Hood River, Ore., has sold it.

As the result of an agreement between the Stanley Company of America, and the Nixon-Nirdlinger interests in Philadelphia, the gross receipts of the Cross Keyes and the Nixon will be pooled, and a distribution made on a 50-50 basis. One theatre which has been operated as a motion picture and vaudeville house will be devoted to stock for the summer, while the other will retain its policy of vaudeville and pictures.

The Olympia, Philadelphia, which was closed on account of the orders of the fire marshal has re-opened. Only part of the house can be occupied during the exposition of pictures until certain structural changes are made.

Harry Marsey, general manager of the General Theatres Corporation of Buffalo, has resigned. He has been succeeded by James Wallingford, who has been connected with the organization as manager of various houses.

A new theatre will soon be built in Cortland, N. Y., by Meyer Shine, it is rumored. The Capitol in Oswego was recently taken over by Shine.

The Jefferson, Auburn, N. Y., has been closed for redecoration and renovation.

All the theatres in Dunkirk, N. Y., have been taken under one operating head, the Lincoln Theatre Corporation, which has been capitalized at $500,000 with the following officers: Henry P. Lally, president; Mark F. Lally, vice-president; John J. Walsh, secretary. This new company will control the Regent, Drohen Avenue and Empire theatres.

The Miles Theatre at Scranton, Pa., has closed for the summer. The Miles will have its new entrance through the Arcade Building, installed while the place is closed.

The Lyric Theatre at Allentown, Pa., burned down in 1916, had a close call from another blaze when a cigar lighter in a pool room set the place ablaze. No damage.

Maltese Cross Going?

New Swedish Invention Claims to Facilitate Projection

Great attention has lately been paid by Swedish experts to a young Swedish engineer, Axel Larsson of Älvdalen. Mr. Larsson recently exhibited in America a cinematographic machine of a new type, invented by him, which it is supposed will create an immense sensation. It goes directly against the principle which has hitherto always been the sole way used ever since the very beginning of the film business, viz.: the Maltese Cross. This has been substituted by a far larger feeding-wheel, which seizes the film with a great number of cogs at the same time, thereby insuring a perfectly quiet run.

The advantages claimed for the new machine are:

The quiet and sure feeding, which is effectuated without any knocks whatsoever, the perforation is not injured and the film cannot be broken, for which reason the risks of fires are eliminated.

The duration of the film will on this account be very much longer than it now is—a contemporaneous German invention of a method to wash away scratches in the film makes the invention still more valuable.

Thanks to this machine, damaged films may again be used.

At trials made with this machine it has proved possible to drive with films which had up to twenty perforation holes torn away, and this circumstance has not in the least effected the steady motion of the machine.

Regarding his work with the invention Larsson says:

"My idea was that the retina must have the greatest possible time to grasp the picture; further that the moving of the pictures must begin and end softly, but otherwise move quick as the lightning. While the pictures in the machines now mostly used, are standing relatively still about half the time (perhaps a little longer) and the other half part of the time is being used for the movement, my machine needs only one-tenth part of the time for the movement, while it is standing motionless nine-tenths of the time for each picture! I can increase the time for the picture still more and decrease the movement to a corresponding degree if such a procedure should prove advantageous.

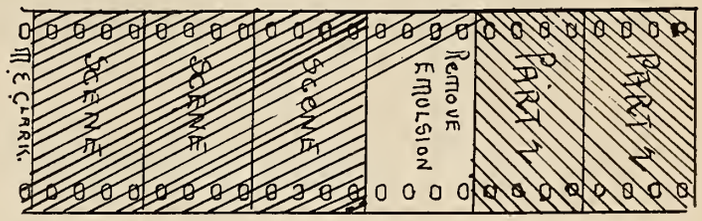
It is easy to understand that in this manner the exposition of the pictures has been entirely revolutionized. When the operator of my machine is carrying the pictures forward with about twenty cogs instead of five at the most which was previously the case that unreliableness, which before has been so common, has been entirely eliminated.

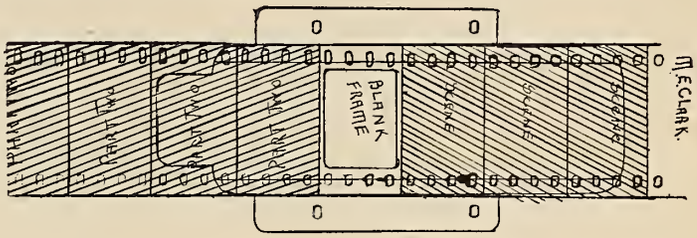
At trials made in the presence of film experts films with about twenty perforation holes torn away have been driven through the machine without the least trouble and still the picture was perfectly steady. When thirty parallel holes were missing the picture slipped up about one-third part of the height of the picture, but the film went through the feeder without any trouble whatsoever on the rollers and, not counting the insignificant sliding, the picture this time also went perfectly steady through the machine. When one knows that if only four parallel holes are missing in machines now used, it is next to impossible to use the film, which is sure to be a failure, one understands what it means that my invention can use any film rags at all and still give steady pictures.

BRIGHT IDEAS

This Department offers $2 for each practical idea submitted. It may concern any part of the theatre.

To make framing a simple and accurate task for the projectionist, without his having to bother with devising or handling framing lights, the producers of pictures could do all of this without going one step out of their way to accomplish the stupendous simply by photographing all leaders in the same manner that they would photograph inserts, black against a white background.





Through this system of leader titling, the projectionist can quickly and easily determine the frame lines and in threading the machine would place them so the aperture would come between them. By using such a method of photographing the leaders, the producers would do much to reduce lost motion and time in the booth.

Since this is not being done at the present writing, I am going to pass something on to the brethren that will do for the time being.

Moisten the frame next to the image of each reel, subject matter pertaining to the action of the picture. Hold this part of the film up to the light and carefully remove the emulsion between the frame lines; this can be done with the aid of a sharp scissors blade and the thumb, by drawing the blade across the full length of the frame.

This done when the time comes to frame the picture, threading the machine, place the blank frame directly over the aperture opening, which can be done without the aid of any light whatever except that stray light which is within the booth at all times.

Simple and easy, eh? Glad you think so, and hope the producers will help us think it all the time by giving the projectionist SERVICE in this respect.

Fraternally yours,
MAURICE E. CLARK,
Projectionist, Grenada Opera House.

A $1 Bill Now Does The Trick

Music for the Photoplay

Conducted by NORMAN STUCKEY

Organ Music by the Ton

Very few people realize how much muscular force is expended in playing an organ composition, even when the action is electric and lighter than the action of a grand piano. One will use a muscular force of between two and four ounces in pressing every manual key, and about four pounds in pressing the pedal keys. Almost every organist uses more force than is really necessary. Accenting and the tendency to play firmly, while absolutely necessary, are apt to be overdone, and muscles of the arms and shoulders are thus made to exert an unnecessary force in addition to the force of the fingers, which is really all that is necessary.

When an organist plays the greater G minor fugue of Bach, if he plays without any over-exertion, he will use a muscular force of about 6,300 pounds, which is equivalent to lifting over three tons of coal a distance of half an inch. If he goes through various exaggerated contortions of the body in playing he will use possibly three times as much muscular force as the organist who sits still.

In playing the piano much more muscular force is necessary than in playing the manual part of organ music, as a loud chord requires more muscular force on the piano than a soft chord, while there is no difference on the organ (if the instrument has tubular or electric action). On the organ four ounces are necessary for the softest note, and only four ounces are necessary for full organ. Of course, in old organs which have tracker action, the addition of a coupler doubles the muscular force necessary, but this is not the case in modern organs. A German composer has figured that an hour's playing of Chopin's music requires a force varying from twelve to eighty-four tons.

Organists' Societies

In Los Angeles and Long Beach, Cal., the theatre organists, following the example set by the theatre organists of New York, have organized societies to promote their mutual interests.

With the increasing popularity of organs and the demand for organists to play them, a society composed exclusively of organists is necessary in cities where organists and their interests are ignored by musical unions.

In some cities it is true that the officers of unions have considered the organist and have regulated the price scale accordingly, but in many cities we find unions opposed to organs and organists, and the organists' interests are neglected.

Managers are known to be opposed to such organizations, and unions may regard a separate and distinct society, composed of organists alone, as disloyalty to the organization to which the organists may belong.

But aside from regulating hours, price-scales, the greatest object of a society of theatre organists, which cannot be ignored or belittled either by managers or unions, is the fact that such a society will improve the standard of organ playing in theatres, which, as many know, is too low at present.

In organizing such a society this fact must be made known, and, incidentally, the question of wage adjustments, better hours and other problems can be solved in an intelligent manner and without any friction or strife, which is likely to occur when a society is organized primarily for "less work and more money."

The Editor of this department will be glad to receive suggestions regarding the progress made by organists' societies, especially in cities where there are but a few theatres and where organists are confronted by unfair conditions.

Over 1,000 musicians are looking for work in Los Angeles, according to a report issued by the secretary of the Los Angeles Musicians' Union.

Creetie Ivor Van Etten has accepted a position as organist with the Atlas Amusement Co. of Milwaukee.

Under a bill which has been introduced in the House of Representatives called the Lampert Bill, music publishers and composers of music who have objected to the use of their music in motion picture theatres will have their rights clearly defined. If this bill passes, exhibitors look to a much needed relief from the present music tax.

The Society for the Publication of American Music will receive applications for the publication of original compositions for the fourth season, 1922-23, not later than Oct. 15, 1922.

About twenty-five rare autograph letters and manuscripts of Rossini, Verdi, Wagner, Gounod, Massenet and others were exhibited recently at the music show for the Caruso American Memorial Foundation, held in New York. The development of the musical arts was depicted; old musical instruments were on exhibition, including a spinet dating back to 1690, a clavichord and a harpsichord, rare Burmese and Indian instruments, and a number of old harps and violins.

An orchestra and large pipe organ are the features at the new Park Theatre, Asheville, N. C.

For the Bruce scenic, "My Country," which was shown at the Capitol Theatre, New York, S. L. Rothafel prepared a special score descriptive of waterfalls, mountain-tops from "My Country, 'Tis of Thee."

At the Stillman Theatre, Cleveland, the orchestra, under the direction of Homer Walters, featured an overture entitled "Neviniana,' which included the following numbers by Nevin: Tournament, Venetian Love Song, Gondoleria, Mighty Lak a Rose, Narcissus and the Rosary.

A new edition of the "Musical Blue Book of America" is in press, comprising a directory of 10,000 musicians in this country and Canada.

The first musical notice of Verdi has been found in the Gazzetta di Parmi of Aug. 20, 1837, as follows. "In the Parish of Croce, in San Spirito, near Busseto, there was, on the second Sunday of last month, a solemn function in honor of the B. V., under the title of the Rosario. The Philharmonicians of Busseto performed the music of the mass and vespers written by the youthful but capable composer, G. Verdi of Busseto." Verdi was, in fact, then 24 years old. His first opera, "Oberto," was written a year later.

The Constant Appeal of Appropriate Music

The musical demands of lovers of the silent drama have become positive. The house where superior, varied music is found is the house of popularity.

For various reasons your features may not always be a success, but add the unfailing musical "atmosphere" of the Cremona Orchestra-Organ and the line at the box office becomes dependable.

No theatre organ orchestra has been developed to better meet the requirements. It is unsurpassed as a hand-played organ. It renders, besides, orchestrations selected or set to the film offering.

A double roll system permits playing by either solo roll or any standard player roll. It may be played with or without an operator. But best of all, the Cremona is not prohibitive in price to the smaller house.

Write for the whole Cremona story.

Using the Blue Glass

"The blue glass has been the source of much amusement to one which really understands its purpose. For instance, I receive a tremendous amount of entertainment when, as I start 'lighting up' my set, the assistant director will walk out, whip out his blue glass and very seriously gaze about the set and walk away. A few moments later a technical expert will do the same thing. Then the property man will come along and peer through the little glass—each carrying his own, mind you. And last, but far from least, some of the extras will jauntily appear beside me, carefully extract their blue glass and gaze through it for several minutes, place it back in their vest pockets and saunter off with the blue glass 'blues.' If I were not fully aware of my knowledge with the blue glass, at times, I confess, I would not know whether I were coming or going.

"The blue glass has become so vividly identified with the silent drama that many people now carry them in place of the old-time puttees and knickers. One man I know carries a blue glass set in a beautiful ivory frame to which is attached a neat black silk cord. He wears this around his neck and is constantly snatching it from his pocket and peering into it, reminding me of the ubiquitous lorgnettes at the opera.

"However, if it makes them happy, I am for giving everybody a blue glass with the condition that they use it as much as they desire, but leave the final effects to one who really knows what they are used for and uses them for that purpose and that alone."

MacWilliams has been identified with the Jackie Coogan Company for some time, having photographed most of Jackie's film offerings. He has that happy combination of being both artistic and commercial—a hard thing to find in one person these days. When he started with the Coogan organization he was told that Jackie's features were to be more or less story value and that his artistic ability must be cast to one side. This he did—until announcement was made that Jackie would film "Oliver Twist." Going to Jack Coogan, Sr., he easily "sold" the starlet's father the idea that artistic photography was now necessary. Director Frank Lloyd, making the "Oliver Twist" production, likewise agreed to this.

With the Men Behind

A Series of Close-Ups of Prominent Studio Cameramen You Hear About Every Day

While Fred Niblo rehearses Anita Stewart for a close-up in "The Woman He Married," released by First National, Cameraman Dal Clawson studies the star to line-up his lighting effects

Among the productions at which MacWilliams presided with his camera, Kismet, starring Otis Skinner; nine features for the William Fox Corporation, five features with Alan Dwan, as many for Selznick, spent three years with Douglas Fairbanks, and is now filming the fourth Jackie Coogan production.

MacWilliams is about half-past twenty—a scholar—a student. He spends his spare time working out new ideas for the screen—new theories for camera art.

Publications of Interest to Cameramen

BASS BOOK OF CINEMA APPARATUS.—The 1922 Edition of Charles Bass's catalogue is an ever improving publication; more than a catalogue and doubly interesting. This year he devotes considerable space to the De Franne camera in its various types and his principles of cinematography, written by Bass, are as interesting as ever. He also announces that very shortly the new Bass-Diemer printer will be placed on the market. The catalogue is well worth having. Typographically it is very neat and—full of meat.

The Voice of the Box Office

How the Latest Releases Are Being Received Throughout the Country

ALBANY

MARK STRAND

"BEAUTY'S WORTH," Marion Davies (Paramount).—Picture drew only fairly well probably due to extremely hot weather.

"THE SEVENTH DAY," Richard Barthelmess (First National).—Running for the last three days of the week, drew fairly good houses. Program was braced somewhat with Charlie Chaplin in "Pay Day."

CLINTON SQUARE

"SHAME." All Star (Fox).—Ran for three days with extra exploitation. Nothing wonderful as a business getter.

"A VIRGIN PARADISE," Pearl White (Fox).—Last three days, did better.

LELAND

"WATCH YOUR STEP," All Star (Goldwyn) and "BE MY WIFE," Max Linder (Goldwyn) first three days, did capacity business. Double features are again the vogue at this house.

"THE BACHELOR DADDY," Thomas Meighan (Paramount) last three days. Good business. No extra exploitation.

ALLENTOWN, PA.

RIALTO

"BEYOND PRICE," Pearl White (Fox). Popular prices, reduction recently inaugurated, good factor in bringing in fair business.

COLONIAL

"A CONNECTICUT YANKEE IN KING ARTHUR'S COURT," Harry C. Myers (Fox). Mark Twain authorship of story made big appeal. Spectacular end of drama played up for general run of patrons and had its own drawing power.

STRAND

"POVERTY OF RICHES," Leatrice Joy (Goldwyn). Le Roy Scott was featured as the author in the exploitation and the advertising and this pulled well among those who keep up with modern fiction. Married life drama also was used in booming picture which went across for fair results.

BETHLEHEM, PA.

LORENZ

"TILLIE," Mary Miles Minter (Realart-Paramount). This is the Moravian country and picture had points of appeal which made it go over big. Pennsylvania Dutch interested, although most of them in hostile attitude; attendance was good.

PALACE

"MY LADY'S LATCHKEY," Katherine McDonald (First National). Theatre has suffered from summer slump but is taking on pictures of good type without recent date release issue being considered. Policy O.K. as attendance is not so bad and pictures seem to take, even though not very new.

LEHIGH ORPHEUM

"TRAILIN'," Tom Mix (Fox). Good run of business for whole showing and the film was one that was heartily enjoyed by the Mix devotees.

BUFFALO

SHEA'S HIPPODROME

"THE BACHELOR DADDY," Thomas Meighan (Paramount). Audiences always flock to see Tom Meighan. He's a great favorite in this town. In spite of warm weather the box office figures were very satisfactory.

Exploitation.—Attractive newspaper ads, featuring scenes from the play. Fine lobby and electric display on front of house. Window cards. Billboards.

Short Subjects.—Larry Semon in "A Pair of Kings," A Prizma subject and Hippodrome Review.

LAFAYETTE SQUARE

"FAIR LADY," Betty Blythe (United Artists). House jammed during the showing of this picture. Betty appeared in person. The picture was well received by the audience.

Exploitation.—Management played up Betty's "Queen of Sheba" stardom in all advertising. Her name was all over the big electric signs on the front of the house. Enlarged newspaper advertising, used billboards and window cards. Betty got a lot of publicity in the papers in the way of interviews.

Short Subjects.—"Snub" Pollard comedy, Fox News and scenic.

LOEW'S STATE

"THE GREEN TEMPTATION," Betty Compson (Paramount). Following a big advertising campaign this one brought in good houses, Betty can always be relied upon to do well at the box office.

Exploitation.—Fine black and white advertising, hand drawn, lobby display, window cards, big electric display.

Short Subjects.—Hallroom comedy, Mutt & Jeff cartoon, Pathe News and scenic subject.

MARK-STRAND

"BURN 'EM UP BARNES," Johnny Hines (Affiliated Distributors). This picture, showed in connection with an Irving Cummings western and Chaplin's newest "Pay Day," helped keep business up to average during a week of warm weather.

Exploitation.—Newspaper advertising, lobby display and window cards.

Short Subjects.—Charlie Chaplin in "Pay Day," Kinograms and "Corporal Jim's Ward," an Irving Cummings western.

SHEA'S NORTH PARK

"THE BACHELOR DADDY," Thomas Meighan (Paramount). Business was fair on this one.

PALACE

"SCANDAL," Constance Talmadge revival. Business was fair.

CHICAGO

RANDOLPH

"THE LOVES OF PHARAOH," Dagny Servaes (Paramount). Despite a return of unseasonably hot weather business held up very well.

CHICAGO

"ACROSS THE CONTINENT," Wallace Reid (Paramount). Very good attendance at every performance.

ROOSEVELT

"MY OLD KENTUCKY HOME," Sigrid Holmquist (Pyramid). Business was very satisfactory.

STATE-LAKE

"GAY AND DEVILISH," Doris May (R-C). Business held up very well all week.

ROSE

"THEY LIKE 'EM ROUGH," Viola Dana (Metro). Business was good.

KANSAS CITY

LIBERTY

"GAS, OIL AND WATER," Charles Ray (First National). Ray is popular idol here and the picture did a good business for a week's run.

Short Subjects.—"Step Forward," Ben Turpin comedy, and Pathe News. Current events.

Exploitation.—Large cut of Ray used in Sunday newspaper space, along with scene of motor cars passing filling station, containing lettering at top, "Gas, Oil and Water." Also billboard and lobby display.

DORIC

"OUR MUTUAL FRIEND," Special cast (Wid Gunning). The title of this one alone attracted good crowds for a week's run.

Short Subjects.—"The Little Rascal," comedy, and International News, current events.

Exploitation.—The picture was widely advertised as "the perfect movie" and the fact that Dickens wrote for the masses was greatly played up in billboard, lobby display and newspaper space.

NEWMAN

"ACROSS THE CONTINENT," Wallace Reid (Paramount). This one was shown during the Newman's "Third Anniversary Week" program and played to capacity houses for a week.

Current Events.—Newman News and Views.

Special Number.—"Third Anniversary Week" program, including chorus of twenty-six and elaborate stage settings.

Exploitation.—Wallace Reid and the anniversary program given equal space in newspaper, lobby display and billboard advertising.

ROYAL

"THE FOUR HORSEMEN OF THE APOCALYPSE," Rodolph Valentino (Metro). Now on its second week at popular prices and still going good.

Current Events.—Royal Screen Magazine.

Exploitation.—The production drew so well the first week that the second week of advertising consisted mostly of playing up the fact that it was the "last chance" to see the picture.

TWELFTH STREET

"THE MAN WITHOUT A COUNTRY," Special cast (American Legion Production). Did a big week's business.

Exploitation.—Campaign ticket sale made by Legion men and special appeal made to all former service men. Newspaper, billboard and lobby display space.

LOS ANGELES

CALIFORNIA

"OUT OF THE DUST" (Supreme). Only did fair business. Usual weekly advertising used without exploitation. Picture received good reviews.

SYMPHONY

"GRANDMA'S BOY," Harold Lloyd (Pathe). In the third week and still lining them up. The management reported surprise that any picture should hold up the way this has.

MISSION

"MONTE CRISTO," All star (Fox). In the third week and doing better than the second. The advertising has been reduced to normal weekly space and the boards are showing 50-24 sheets.

LOEW STATE

"GLASS HOUSES," Viola Dana (Metro). Running very good. Received good write-up in news stories and the critics gave it good reviews.

HIPPODROME

"THE HELLHOUND OF THE WEST," Dick Hatton. Good entertaining picture with vaudeville. The title a drawing card. Usual advertising.

KINEMA

"TROUBLE," Jackie Coogan (First National). In the second week and doing very good business. Buster Keaton in "The Pale Face" was the added attraction and drew good business for the two weeks run.

PANTAGES

"THE FIRE BRIDE." Fair audience picture. Extraordinary scenery was played up in newspaper review. Hallroom Boys in "The Dentist" was the added attraction with the vaudeville bill.

RIALTO

"THE GOOD PROVIDER," Vera Gordon (Paramount). In the second week and doing good business. Regular advertising used without bill boards, and no exploitation.

GRAUMAN'S

"OVER THE BORDER," Betty Compson (Paramount). Doing regular weekly business, nothing extra. Usual weekly advertising without exploitation.

ALHAMBRA

"WATCH HIM STEP," Richard Talmadge. With Charlie Chaplin in "Pay Day" as an added feature, the bill went over good.

SUPERBA

"STEP ON IT," Edward Gibson (Universal). Picture went over good. The average amount of advertising was used and the only exploitation was a worn-out flivver painted up with "See Edward Gibson at the Superba in 'Step On It.'" Mary Pickford and King Baggott in "Going Straight" was an added feature on the bill and played up in the advertising.

CLUNE'S BROADWAY

"THROUGH A GLASS WINDOW," May McAvoy (Realart). Business fair. The usual amount of advertising.

PHILADELPHIA

ALDINE

"BEYOND THE RAINBOW," All star cast (Robertson-Cole). Drew well all week in spite of adverse weather conditions. Title was well exploited, and seemed to have plenty of box office value.

Short Subjects.—Snub Pollard in "Punching the Time Clock," Prizma, "Where the Caravan Jumps Off," "Travelaughs," Aesop's Fables, and Universal News.

STANLEY

"THE BACHELOR DADDY," Thomas Meighan (Paramount). Fairly good business, with improvement the last three days. City was well covered with twenty-four sheets, playing up the star, rather than the picture.

Short Subjects.—Out of the Inkwell cartoon. "The Mosquito" scenic, "White Magic." Fox and Pathe news reels, and Topics of the Day.

ARCADIA

"SIGN OF THE JACK O' LANTERN" (Hodkinson). While the patrons seemed to feel that the picture was "nothing to rave about" it drew very satisfactory business throughout its week's run.

Short Subjects.—Buster Keaton in "My Wife's Relations," Screen Snapshots and Pathe News.

KARLTON

"THE BEAUTY SHOP," Raymond Hitchcock (Paramount). The fact that it was adapted from the stage play was largely played up in the advertising, and as a result it did very good business, although patrons were not particularly impressed with the star.

Short Subjects.—Adventures of Sherlock Holmes, "The Man with the Twisted Lip" and Pathe News.

REGENT

"THE RED PEACOCK," Pola Negri (Paramount). Picture got some little publicity on the score that it was rather risque, and had been severely cut by the censors, and the result was obvious—big business.

Short Subjects.—Special re-issue of Harold Lloyd in "Ask Father."

VICTORIA

"REPORTED MISSING," Owen Moore (Selznick). Preceded by a lot of expensive publicity, it did exceptionally fine business, and was well liked.

Short Subjects.—"My Wife's Relations," Buster Keaton, Pathe News, and Urban Movie Chats.

CAPITAL

"THE FACE BETWEEN," Bert Lytell (Metro). Star is a favorite here and picture had good drawing power throughout the week.

Short Subjects.—"Cold Feet," Christie Comedy, "Snow Birds," scenic, Kinograms, and Topics of the Day.

SEATTLE, WASH.

COLISEUM

"THE SIGN OF THE ROSE," George Beban. Took audiences by storm. Dramatic appeal of thirty minute act with setting of flower shop scene with original company, tremendous.

Exploitation.—Extra newspaper space, billboards, window cards, lobby display.

Short Subjects.—Pathe News, Kinograms, Mermaid Comedy.

STRAND

"BACK PAY," Seena Owen (Paramount). Average audiences.

Exploitation.—Regular newspaper, lobby and window cards, billboards.

Short Subjects.—"The One Man Reunion," Tony Sarg Almanac, Kinograms, Wilderness Tale, scenic with Albert Nightingale in trumpet solo, "Bonnie Sweet Bessie."

LIBERTY

"NORTH OF THE RIO GRANDE," Jack Holt (Paramount). Stars popular here. Business good.

Exploitation.—Billboards, lobby, window cards and newspaper advertising.

Short Subjects.—"Step Forward," Ben Turpin comedy, Sunset-Burrud scenic, "The Desert's Spring Song," Liberty News.

BLUE MOUSE

"REPORTED MISSING," Owen Moore (Selznick). Excellent business. All Seattle laughing at it.

Exploitation.—Newspaper advertising, Billboards and lobby display with illuminated frames.

Short Subjects.—"The Boy Scouts of America," Aesop's Fable, news.

COLUMBIA

First Half.

"KISSED," Marie Prevost (Universal). Fair business. "Going Straight," old-timer with King Baggot and Mary Pickford, "Horse Tears," starring Queenie horse, International News.

Last Half.

"THE MAN WHO MARRIED HIS OWN WIFE," Frank Mayo (Universal). Average audiences.

Exploitation.—Usual newspaper space, lobby display.

Short Subjects.—"Live Wires," with Brownie dog, International News.

Illustrated Screen Reports

FOR THE EXHIBITORS BOX-OFFICE

EDITED BY GEORGE T. PARDY

Tracks

A Noble Johnson Production, Released Through Pathe. Story and Scenario by L. V. Jefferson. Cameraman Not Credited. Directed by Joseph J. Franz. Length, Six Reels.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Norman Draper, Bill Patton; Elicia Valverde, Beatrice Burnham; Leon Serrano, Noble Johnson; Marcos Valverde, Francois Dumas; Jack Bess, J. Farrold McDonald.

A reward is offered for the capture of horse thieves who have puzzled the community of cow tracks in every trail of horses stolen. Leon Serrano, newly sworn in deputy is loud in his assertions that he will catch the thieves. Time passes and he realizes that the people will soon demand a victim. He arrests an old man who has innocently bought one of the stolen horses from the thieves. The cowboys are about to lynch him when he is recognized and rescued by Draper, a ranger, who has also been sent to round up the thieves and who is a rival to Leon for the hand of Elicia, the daughter of a wealthy ranchman. From the old man Draper learns in which direction the thieves have gone and they are captured. They confess that Leon is their leader, and has used cloven hoofs on his horse. Draper takes Leon as his prisoner and gives the reward to the old man, while he himself is sufficiently rewarded in winning the hand of the girl.

Tracks is a Western story that has been made by combining various episodes of sentimentality, treachery and bits of comedy. It is well done and creates some good thrills. After the first few feet of sob stuff that is more or less given in a semi-prologue fashion, the story develops a good mystery strain and introduces in spots some fairly essential comedy. The plot has to do with the capture of horse thieves, who have been operating in that particular section, and although cattle rustlers and their ensuing stories have occupied a good many reels of the present day films, this one should not fall short of turning out to be a well received attraction.

Points of Appeal. — The first scenes, taken in the storm, are effectively done. The very human treatment that has been given the story is good. There are some nice ranch scenes and some of the unusual shots of the barren Western country. The mystery of the cloven hoof tracks keeps the interest alive and is a means of getting in the necessary thrills.

Cast.—A very good and natural cast has been chosen here to handle the story. Bill Patton is a pleasing hero for this type of picture. Edith Roberts, as Elicia, is rather good in her role, and Noble Johnson makes a convincing villain. J. Farrold McDonald, who takes the role of the old man, is appealing and readily wins the sympathy of his audience.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—Good, clear sets, with ample lighting. The rainstorm has been admirably photographed in the early part of the first reel. Continuity is sometimes slightly confusing, but generally the picture is easily followed. Direction good.

The Son of the Wolf

Released Through R-C Pictures Corp. Story by Jack London. Scenario by W. Heywood. Cameraman Not Credited. Directed by Norman Dawn. Length, 4,970 Feet.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Scruff Mackenzie, Wheeler Oakman; Chook-Ra, Edith Roberts; Father Roubeau, Sam Allen; Harrington, Ashley Cooper; Malemute Kid, Fred Kohler; Chief Thling Tinner, Thomas Jefferson; The Bear, Fred Stanton, The Fox, Arthur Jasmine; Shaman, William Eagle Eye.

When Scruff Mackenzie arrives at his quarters he announces his intentions of seeking out a wife. A few days later he meets Father Roubeau, the priest, and his Indian ward, Chook-Ra. Scruff's treacherous partner seeks to put him out of the way, and releases a snow slide that comes very near sending these three, who had just met, to their death. But Scruff succeeds in getting them out of the path in time. He falls in love with the girl, but the priest refuses to marry them until her father consents. Scruff leaves for the nearest town to purchase some gifts for Chook-Ra. While there he becomes infatuated with a dancer. Chook-Ra learns of this and goes to win him back. Her father, the chief of the tribe, arrives and forces her to go back with him to her own people. Scruff follows, and after a battle with knives against one of her warrior suitors wins her for himself.

This story of Jack London's has been interestingly told in the screen version, The Son of the Wolf. It is done amidst picturesque surroundings and the film has a variety of splendid shots of mountains, waterfalls and snow-covered trails. The picture possesses that certain appeal that the author has always tucked into his stories and in a likeable manner attains a pleasant and somewhat thrilling climax.

Points of Appeal.—This type of story usually goes over best with the scout members of the family, although it has enough of the satisfactory love element and a sufficiently big theme to hold the attention of the elders. The male members of the Indian tribe, whose warpaint resembles a first-aid bandage for a broken nose, are of a species that is rather unfamiliar, though very probably authentic, and give some of their characteristic dances.

Cast. — Wheeler Oakman, as Scruff Mackenzie, the frontiersman, is of a good, rugged type, and gives a regular "he-man" performance. Edith Roberts, as Chook-Ra, the Indian maiden, is pleasing. Other members of the cast contribute good support.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—The photography throughout the picture is of the best. There are occasionally some shots that show true genius and artistry. Lighting good. Continuity of the story is evenly done and well directed.

A Woman of No Importance

Select Photoplay in Five Parts. Adapted from the Play by Oscar Wilde. Director, Dennison Clift. Running Time, Fifty-Five Minutes.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

George Harford, Milton Rosmer; Sir Thomas Harford, M. Gray Murray; Lady Cecelia, Hetta Bartlett; Elise Farquhar, Gwen Carton; Mrs. Arbuthnot, Fay Compton; Her Father, Henry Vibart; Gerald Arbuthnot, Ward McAllister; Lady Hunstanton, Daisy Campbell; Hester Worsley, Lillian Walker; Lady Rufford, Julie Hartley-Milburn.

Twenty years before the play opens Mrs. Arbuthnot was betrayed by John Harford, who cast her aside, despite her trust in him, as a "woman of no importance." During those twenty years she had struggled valiantly to bring up her son in ignorance of the cloud on his name. Gerald, the son, has been equipped with a fine education and has prepared for diplomatic service. He receives an offer of the post of secretary to a Lord Illington, who proves to be the former John Harford. Mrs. Arbuthnot pleads with Illington to leave her her son, but he reminds her that she has brought him up in a manner to make him a severe judge of her past. She then tells Gerald her case as though the chief figure was another woman and learns that he is indeed harsh and stern toward women who have received the treatment Mrs. Arbuthnot suffered at the hands of Harford, now Lord Illington. While she is discussing this with Gerald, the latter's sweetheart, an American heiress, rushes into the room and denounces Lord Illington for having attempted to kiss her. Gerald is furious and threatens to kill Illington, so that Mrs. Arbuthnot is forced to tell him that Illington is his father. Gerald is floored at this revelation, but he becomes determined to make Lord Illington marry his mother and recognize him. But Mrs. Arbuthnot refuses and as the facts offset her own rather Puritan ideas, the American heiress agrees with the mother and is satisfied to become Gerald's wife despite his lack of a name, and so Mrs. Arbuthnot triumphs in the end.

Oscar Wilde's more sinned against than sinning Mrs. Arbuthnot becomes a sympathetic and rather effective screen character as she is portrayed in the five-part photoplay version of A Woman of No Importance. To be sure, the prototypes of this victim of the now well-worn "double standard" have graced the picture screens in great profusion and variety since the dawn of the photoplay, but for all that there is still some appeal and dramatic effectiveness in the personage, and a good portion of it is achieved in this filmed-in-England Selznick production. It was not to be expected that the flashing wit of Wilde would be present in a screen presentation of his work and, while A Woman of No Importance in this guise is merely a drama of plot and plot only, the characters are portrayed with a semblance of reality and the play makes interesting fare. It is worked rather effectively to its one really strong dramatic scene, in which Mrs. Arbuthnot is forced to reveal her past to her son.

Points of Appeal.—The wronged heroine is a sympathetic figure despite the conventional character of the play and with the maternal-affection element added to her side should have no difficulty in enlisting the interest of the average audience. Thus it is a play capable of getting on on its own without the introduction of anything spectacular in the way of scenic effect or stirring melodrama.

Cast.—Fay Compton as Mrs. Arbuthnot is a person of no little personal charm and beauty and in a restrained sort of way realizes the better portion of her opportunities. The other members of the cast do good work in support of the leading figure and as a whole the company imparts life to the people of the story. They are all too talkative in their foreground scenes and so seem to rely more upon the technique of the stage than the studio. This, however, is a fault they overcome in holding consistently to their portrayals and attaining ultimate success.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—The settings and locations go a bit beyond being merely adequate and there are some examples of fine interiors and pleasant garden scenes. The photography is clear and has tone. The director permitted too slow a pace to the work of the early portions of the play but his work generally must be classed as good. Some few fragments of the original lines are found in the titles and they are a delight in contrast to those in which the inclination to rant is too strongly evident.

Lights of the Desert

Released by Fox. Story by Gladys E. Johnson. Scenario by Paul Schofield. Cameraman, John Arnold. Directed by Harry Beaumont.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Yvonne Laraby, Shirley Mason; Clay Truxall, Allan Forrest; Andrew Reed, Edward Burns; Slim Saunders, James Mason; Marie Curtis, Andree Tourneur; Ma Curtis, Josephine Crowell; Susan Gallant, Lillian Langdon.

A cheap theatrical company stranded in a little Nevada town makes up a purse among themselves to get back to Frisco. Reed, a young native, contributes, but takes Yvonne Laraby, the ingenue, aside and asks her to marry him. She says she will give him her answer in the morning. In the hotel lobby she repulses the advances of the village masher, Slim Saunders. On the way to her room she is recognized by Clay Truxall, owner of the local oil well. The young man goes up to her room and is seen entering by Saunders. Yvonne tells him that she wants to marry Reed, his foreman, and Truxall, himself in love with her, offers her a position pending her marriage. A few days later at a community ball Saunders forces her to admit that she had entertained Truxall in her room. Reed leaves her flat. The gossips triumph and Truxall takes her home. Two trouble makers head a gang to run the oil man out of town. They persuade Reed to join them, but when he learns that they intend to tar and feather him he refuses. Yvonne learning of the intentions of the gang rushes ahead to warn Truxall. He bravely faces the mob, but is about to be overcome when Yvonne's landlady, a Western Amazon, arrives with the sheriff and disperses them. Yvonne, won by Truxall's courage and chivalry, accepts his love and persuades Reed to go back to his faithful village sweetheart, whom he had deserted for her.

The latest Fox release, Lights of the Desert, is the type of picture that will have a rather wide appeal. The story has no special novelty (unless the characterization of the Western Amazon might be termed as such), and is without subtlety of any kind, but it is direct and human, and builds steadily to its climaxes. The characters are well drawn and contrasted. The motivations and their reactions on each other are natural and one feels that it is real life, breezy and fairly stimulating. There is good suspense and the interest is never allowed to lag. This type of story is frequently seen, but the splendid manner in which this particular one has been handled makes it a worth-while attraction.

Points of Appeal. — The emotional episodes are genuine and are not overdone. They are happily broken by contrasting comedy. The race of the girl to reach Truxall and warn him before the arrival of the gang is thrilling. The portrayal of the mannish landlady is one that will amuse.

Cast. — Admirers of Shirley Mason will be delighted with her acting in this role. She has numerous occasions in which to show her ability and charming mannerisms in the various situations. Allan Forrest, as Clay Truxall, acts the thoroughbred in every move and expression. All other members of the cast do splendidly and are entitled to their well-earned commendation.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—The photography is generally clear. The outdoor scenes are expansive and interesting Western country. Interiors suitable. Lighting at most times good. Direction unforced and true to type.

Nanook of the North

A Pathe Picture. Produced by Robert J. Flaherty, F. R. G. S. Footage, 5,757 Feet.

THE CAST

By Themselves—Nanook the Bear, Nyla the Smiling One, Alice, Cunayou and Comock. Huskies, walruses, seals, white foxes and salmon.

In the ordinary acceptance Nanook is not a photoplay, but it has high claims to rank as a photodrama; for surely it is a series of actions that, considered collectively, possesses dramatic unity. Nanook is not fiction. It is life in its most primitive environment; life that is sustained by flesh alone, minus vegetables; life as it is found on the eastern shores of Hudson Bay and a couple of hundred miles south of Hudson's Strait.

Mr. Flaherty has taken for the centers of interest in his remarkable tale the members of a family, the head of which is Nanook, a mighty hunter, a man not without honor in his own country. And it is safe to say long before this epic of the North has completed its appointed rounds he will be not without honor in any country, in any country at least where there is a projection machine and where there is respect for men and women who victoriously combat nature in its most savage forms.

Five thousand persons in the Capitol Monday night sat in deep silence through the unfolding of the story of Nanook, except on those occasions when they were moved to mirth or to applause. Let us cite just one instance of the latter manifestation. Nanook and his family, with their dogs and belongings, find it necessary while on a trek to erect a shelter.

The head of the family with his knife of walrus ivory carves out blocks of snow about two feet by four, and perhaps a half foot thick, and constructs an igloo—in shape resembling the half of an egg—with a perfectly curved top. Nyla, the Smiling One, his wife, with the unclothed infant snuggled Indian fashion in the "parka" at her shoulders, follows the artisan as he builds and with snow closes the chinks.

The final block in place, Nanook cuts his way out, creating a door. Then, with his harpoon, he chops a piece of crystal-like ice perhaps eighteen inches square and three inches thick. In the side of the igloo he removes a section of snow of equivalent size, inserts the ice, and gazing into the sky to get a slant at the angle of the sun places the bit of removed snow so that it may serve as a reflector for the window he has put in his house.

The structure has been built within an hour. Twice in succession the house applauded this incident. And this writer knows, because he sat through a second showing.

The picture opens with a laugh. Nanook, in his frail kyak, comes ashore. He slowly extracts his bulky figure from the only part of the craft that is unhooded, picks up a youngster that is stretched across the forward "deck" and puts him ashore. Then from the "hold" he extracts Nyla, followed by several others, and finally by a tiny husky. It resembles legerdemain.

Among the incidents that stand out are the capture of the walrus, in spite of the aid given the two-ton brute by his mate; the battle of strength between Nanook and the great seal, speared through the ice; the trapping of the white fox under the snow; the fight between the master dog and one of his companions who disputes his leadership—an animated leaf out of The Call of the Wild; spearing salmon through the open ice; trekking over piled up ice and snow where two miles may be a day's journey; the scenes in the gathering dusk of the swirling, blinding snow—with no aeroplane motor to accelerate it.

Nanook, chief of the three hundred Itivimuits who inhabit a territory nearly as large as England, is a real screen hero, and apparently a very happy one. May his tribe increase.

Entertainment? Rare. Photography? Superb.

Out of the Silent North

Released by Universal. Story by Harry Sinclair Drago and Joseph Noel. Scenario by Wallace Clifton. Cameraman, Arch Reeves. Directed by William Worthington. Length, 4,211 Feet.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Pierre Baptiste, Frank Mayo; Marcette Vallois, Barbara Bedford; Andre Vallois, Lionel Belmore; Ashleigh Nefferton, Frank Leigh; Reginald Stannard, Harris Gordon; Pete Bellew, Christian J. Frank; Jean Cour, Frank Lanning; Mattigami, Louis Rivera; "Lazy" Lester, Dick Lareno.

Pierre Baptiste, a young French Canadian, lived in a distant outpost of civilization, loving Marcette, daughter of old Andre Vallois, the only store keeper. Reginald Stannard, a polished young Englishman, comes to that country seeking a gold claim left by his father. The girl is charmed by the genteel stranger and asks Pierre to guard Stannard on his prospecting trip. The two strike a rich vein of gold and are working feverishly against the coming of winter, when Stannard is accidentally injured. Pierre brings him back to the trading post and returns to safeguard their mine. Nefferton, a renegade white, secretly files on their claim and comes to dispossess Pierre, who sees from their map that they have the location wrong. He slips away to the land office to file on it properly for Stannard and himself. Nefferton and his friends give chase, but after a fight on the trail, Pierre wins out. Returning to Marcette and Stannard, Pierre learns the temporary infatuation has passed and that she really loves him. He has shown his bigness in befriending and protecting the man he thought had thwarted his fondest desires.

Out of the Silent North is a regulation photoplay with a plot that is built up around a self-sacrificing half-breed, a girl and a villain. Most of the action is centered about a gold mine in the far North. The scenes, most of them blanketed in heavy snow, are both beautiful and cooling and should prove to be a welcome summer attraction. The picture does not contain any particularly big thrills but progresses through several anti-climaxes to a fairly speedy closing. Although offering no strikingly original situations, the story gives good and satisfactory entertainment.

Points of Appeal.—The principal appeal in the picture will be its many charming settings. The shots of the snow-clad country will please. The hero of the story wins over his audience with his big-heartedness and to the satisfaction of all finally wins the girl for whom he has risked so much. It is sort of semi-pathetic and touched up in parts with bits of comedy.

Cast.—Frank Mayo is a good type for the half-breed hero. His acting is natural and a role of this kind seems to suit him better than some of the society parts he has been doing. Barbara Bedford is appealing as the French-Canadian girl. Frank Leigh, as Nefferton, the villain, is satisfactory although he is not as much in evidence as the usual villain. Support is good.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—Pleasing effects have been obtained through all of the picture. The interiors are well supplied with light. The outdoor scenes are attractively done. Direction O. K.

Our Leading Citizen

Paramount Photoplay in Five Parts. Author, George Ade. Scenario by Waldemar Young. Director, Alfred Green. Cameramen, L. G. Wilky and William Marshall. Running Time, Fifty-Two Minutes.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Daniel Bentley, Thomas Meighan; Katherine Fendle, Lois Wilson; Ogleshy Fendle, William Carleton; Colonel Sam de Mott, Theodore Roberts; Cale Higginson, Guy Oliver; J. Sylvester Duhley, Laurance Wheat; Honorable Cyrus Blagdon; James Neill; The Editor, Lucien Littlefield; The Judge, Charles Ogle; Boots Mnoego, Thomas Kennedy; Mrs. Brazey, Sylvia Ashton; Eudora Mawdle, Ethel Wales.

Dan Bentley, lawyer, in the town of Wingfield, is more celebrated for his talent as a fisherman than his legal lore. War breaks out and he enlists and goes to France. There he meets Katherine Fendle, engaged in Red Cross work, and sister of Wingfield's wealthiest citizen, Oglesby Fendle. Dan distinguishes himself abroad and is given a great reception when he returns home, but slips back into his lazy groove and goes fishing again. Katherine persuades him to run for Congress against old Blagdon, the regular nominee and machine man of Wingfield. Dan has no money to pay campaign expenses. Ogleshy Fendle and Colonel de Mott offer to provide him with cash if he agrees to protect their interests. He refuses and supposes that Katherine has used him as a tool for her brother's sake. But Blagdon signs an agreement with the schemers, who swing their support to him. Katherine gets hold of Dan in time to fight the election. Dan proves victor, finds that Katherine paid his expenses after all, but goes to Congress with clean hands and happy in the fact that he is going to marry her.

George Ade's first original story for the screen has been shaped into a very pleasing comedy-drama by Director Alfred Green. It provides excellent entertainment for the heated term, bubbling over as it does with delicious humor, tinged here and there with the subtle irony so characteristic of the author. The action takes place in a small Hoosier town and deals with a series of political complications, while an unbroken thread of love interest prevails to the finish. The principal character, lazy Dan Bentley, a youthful lawyer, who prefers fishing excursions to wrangles in the courts, is an original creation that catches an audience's fancy at once and as played by Thomas Meighan, delightfully convincing. The feature was given a hearty welcome when shown recently at the Rivoli Theatre, New York, and ought to prove a lucrative box-office attraction.

Points of Appeal. — Not the least of the picture's good qualities is the sub-titling, which carries the genuine George Ade mark. These sterling flashes of wit are tersely put, brilliant, and of great help in developing the action, which never drags from the first to the final reel. The gradual awakening of hero Bentley, through the energetic efforts of his resourceful sweetheart, to the fact that there is something in life better worth doing than playing with hook and line is smoothly outlined, and a big "punch" registered when he suddenly reappears in time to contest the election and defeat his opponents, incidentally winning a wife as well as a seat in Congress.

Cast.—Thomas Meighan fits the role of Bentley like the proverbial glove. His portrayal of the erstwhile unambitious young lawyer is one of the best contributions he has yet made to the silent drama. Lois Wilson plays the part of heroine Katherine Fendle with infinite charm and a keen sense of its quiet comedy possibilities. Lucien Littlefield as a rustic editor, and Theodore Roberts as a wily politician, give excellent performances and capable support is rendered the principals by others in the company.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—The small town atmosphere is well developed and maintained, there are many pretty long shots and the lighting is adequate. Smooth continuity and fast action distinguish the entire five reels.

The Great Alone

Produced by West Coast Film Corp. Released Through American Releasing Corp. Story and Direction by Jacques Jaccard. Cameraman, Frank B. Good. Length, 5,912 Feet.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

"Silent" Duval, Monroe Salisbury; Nadine Picard, Lura Anson; Winston Sassoon, Walter Law; Mary MacDonald, Maria Draga; Bradley Carstairs, George Waggoner; MacDonald, the Factor, Richard Cummings.

It is on New Year's Eve in a dance hall in Lac Du Bois that "Silent" Duval learns that Mary MacDonald, daughter of the fur company's factor, is marooned in a distant cabin with a stranger, both unable to fight the terrific blizzard that is raging. He goes to her aid and is trailed by two henchmen of Sassoon, his enemy. Their orders are to waylay Duval and bring the girl back in. At the cabin Duval finds the girl delirious, and her lover, who was a former college mate of his, in a critical condition. He leaves the Indian who had accompanied him to take care of the man and starts back with the girl. On the return trip he is attacked by two men, but succeeds in making an escape and takes Mary back to her father. Sassoon has been blackmailing MacDonald, and when Duval learns of this he forces him to leave the post. The Indian returns with Bradley Carstairs, who had recovered and is engaged to marry Mary. Duval leaves them and goes to Nadine Picard, a girl of his own people, with whom he is in love.

Another offering of particular summer appeal because of its winter scenes that psychologically have a refreshing effect. The story is one of the best of its kind, inasmuch as it has some originality and also contains reminiscences of other days when football pictures were considered to be the best thrillers of the times. There is, of course, the inevitable villain, who needs must bear a secret hatred against the hero in order that the popular melodramatic touches might be supplied. The Great Alone has a tenseness and a generally satisfying element that predominate.

Points of Appeal. — It is a real out-of-doors picture and contains many interesting shots. The flash-backs of the Stanford University football game are well brought in and serve to bring this production out of the ordinary class of the familiar Far North stories. The characterization of "Silent" Duval, the collegian half-breed and football star, is well drawn and will make a sympathetic appeal. The subtitles are done frequently with excerpts of Robert Service's famed poems.

Cast.—Monroe Salisbury handles his role excellently. Lura Anson and Maria Draga are the two female leads. The rest of the characters are capably done by other members of the cast.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—There are some fine exteriors. The panoramic views that are shown in the beginning of the first reel furnish an effective example of the "great alone." Lighting good throughout, continuity even and well directed.

The Devil's Pawn

Paramount Photoplay in Five Parts. Adapted from "The Yellow Ticket," Stage Drama by John Brennert and John Kraly. Running Time, Fifty-Five Minutes.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Lea, Poli Negri; Professor Stanlaws, Adolph Edgar Licho; Demetri, Harry Liedtke; Astanow, Werner Bernhardi; Ossip Storki, Viktor Jansen; Dance Hall Owner, Margarette Kupfer; Vera, Marga Lind.

Sholem Raab, Russian Jew, when dying gives his friend, Ossip Storki, important papers concerning his adopted daughter, Lea. The latter goes to Petrograd to study medicine in the university. Because she is a Jewess the law refuses her admission. As she cannot even remain in the city without taking out a "yellow ticket," the identification of the prostitute, she does so. Professor Stanlaws admits her to the university under the name of a dead sitser of Ossip Storki. She becomes Stanlaw's favorite pupil. Dimitri, a young student, falls in love with her, and she returns his affection. Lea's landlady decoys her to a disreputable house, where Dimitri finds her and believes her to be a woman of the streets. Ossip learns that some one is using his dead sister's name, and finds out that Lea is Professor Stanlaw's natural daughter. Lea, denounced by her lover, throws herself from her window. She is taken to the university hospital. Professor Stanlaw's aid is sought in the operation which has to be performed. He recognizes his daughter and saves her by superhuman efforts. She recovers and Dimitri is reconciled to her.

This latest of Continental films to reach the American screen registers as a decidedly third-rate production. Were it not for the fine acting of Poli Negri in the star role, it would prove totally uninteresting, and even the praiseworthy exertions of the leading lady fail to cover up its faults of poor construction and twisted technique. Obviously, it is either an old picture made when Miss Negri was first experimenting in movie material, or else a hurry-up affair hastily thrown together in order to take advantage of the hit scored in this country by the actress in question when she made her initial appearance on the American screen. The theme is unpleasant, the continuity badly broken and the direction distinctly amateurish. The market value of the feature lies altogether in the drawing power of the star's name, founded on past successes, but it is crude entertainment of a type not likely to win favor with critical patrons.

Points of Appeal.—The heroine wins sympathy because of the desperate up-hill fight she is obliged to make against race prejudice and the unjust law which compels her to register as a woman of the streets in order to remain in the Russian city, where she takes up her abode. There are many emotional crises and melodramatic thrills, most of which lack conviction and the somber trend of events is brightened somewhat by a happy ending of conventional mould.

Cast.—The work of Poli Negri as Lea is effective, due largely to the magnetic personality of the star, Harry Liedtke gives a capable performance as the lover, Demetri, and the support is adequate.

Photography, Lighting, Direction. — The interiors are well filmed for the most part, but some of the studio sets present a remarkably "shoddy" appearance, and the lighting is uneven in spots. The continuity is ragged and the direction generally poor.

Silas Marner

Associated Exhibitors Photoplay in Seven Parts. Released by Pathe. Adapted from George Eliot's Novel of Same Title. Scenario and Direction by Frank P. Donovan. Cameraman, Alexander Penrod. Running Time, Eighty Minutes.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Silas Marner, Craufurd Kent; Sarah, Marguerite Courtot; William Dane, Robert Kenyon; Sally Oates, Nona Marden; Elina Tampscum, Ricca Allan; Jem Rodney, Austin Huhn; Squire Cass, Anders Randolph; Godfrey Cass, Bradley Barker; Dunsey Cass, Charles Coghlan; Nancy Lammeter, Marie Edith Wells; Dolly Winthrop, Alice Fleming; Dr. Kimble, George Fawcett; Eppie, Helen Rowland and Jean Girardin; Aaron, John Randall.

After his best friend betrays and his sweetheart jilts him Silas Marner leaves Lantern Yard, an English hamlet peopled by a narrow religious sect, and goes to Raveloe. There he leads a solitary life, saving up money he earns at weaving. Fifteen years later his hoard of gold is stolen from his home. An unknown woman dies in the snow on his threshold. Her baby is alive, and Silas adopts the child, whom he names Eppie. She brings him good luck and happiness. Eppie reaches womanhood and is sought in marriage by Aaron Winthrop, whose affection she returns. When the stone pits in the neighborhood are drained a skeleton of a man and Silas's gold are found at the bottom of one of them. The remains are those of Squire Cass's son, Dunstan, who disappeared mysteriously. Godfrey Cass confesses that Eppie is his daughter by a secret marriage to a girl of humble station. He offers to take Eppie to his luxurious home, but the girl refuses, preferring to stay with her adopted father, Silas, and wed Aaron Winthrop.

Skilful direction and clever acting by an accomplished cast of players combine to make Silas Marner a feature of distinctive merit. George Eliot's story of the fortunes of the humble folks of an obscure English hamlet is replete with human interest and has lost none of its deep emotional urge by its transfer to the screen. In fact, the plot as set forth in the film will probably fascinate many patrons who would hardly take the trouble to follow the slower movement of events as portrayed in the novel. As it stands the picture affords excellent entertainment. Artistically, it is a delight to the eye, the costumes of the age in which the action takes place are reproduced in accurate detail, the village scenes are beautifully filmed and better local color could not be desired. An unusual attraction and a credit to all concerned in its production, this photoplay ought to prove a valuable box-office asset.

Points of Appeal.—The mystery surrounding the disappearance of Silas Marner's treasure is a strong factor in keeping the element of suspense alive all through the picture, the coming of the little child through whose gentle influence the old weaver regains his faith in humanity is a wonderfully effective episode, her growth to womanhood, and the development of her love idyl follow in smooth sequence and a satisfying climax is attained when Eppie, remaining faithful to her lover and the home of her adopted father, refuses to desert either for the wealthy parent who at last acknowledges his daughter.

Cast.—Craufurd Kent gives a masterly performance in the role of Silas Marner, a character sketch remarkable for its natural ease and artistic polish. The various village types are portrayed with realistic power and fidelity to life and every member of the talented supporting cast may be said to contribute heavily to the film's success.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—There are many fine exteriors, with pleasing shots of the English countryside, the lighting is perfect, the continuity unbroken and the action moves

My Wild Irish Rose

Vitagraph Photoplay in Six Parts. Adapted from Dion Boucicault's Drama, "The Shaughraun." Scenario by C. Graham Baker and Harry Dittmar. Director, David Smith. Running Time, Seventy-Five Minutes.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Conn, the Shaughraun, Pat O'Malley; Rose O'Neale, Helen Howard; Claire Ffolliott, Maude Emery; Moya, Pauline Starke; Robert Ffolliott, Edward Cecil; Captain Molineaux, Henery Herbert; Corry Kinchella, James Farley; Harvey Duff; Bobbie Mack; Father Dolan, Frank Clark; Barry, Frank Daniels.

The action takes place in the early Victorian Age, just before the English Queen extended pardon to the leaders of the Fenian movement in Ireland. Robert Ffolliott, living with his sister Claire and Rose O'Neale, his fiancee, is arrested through evidence given by informer Harvey Duff, tried and sentenced to penal servitude in Australia. Duff is the willing tool of Magistrate Kinchella. The latter poses as Robert's friend, but holds a mortgage on the Ffolliott home. Conn O'Kelly, the Shaughraun, in love with Moya, niece to Father Dolan, ships as sailor on the ship taking Robert to Australia, files his chains apart and rescues him. Conn and Robert return secretly to Ireland. Harvey Duff again betrays Robert. The soldiers, headed by Captain Molineaux, come to his home. Robert takes refuge in a big grandfather's clock. Father Dolan is present. Captain Molineaux, who is in love with Claire, offers to withdraw his men if the priest will give his word that Robert is not in the house. At this point Robert emerges and surrenders himself. Duff carries the news of Robert's rearrest to his patron, Magistrate Kinchella. The latter has just received official notice of clemency to be extended to all Fenians surrendering themselves. As Robert does not know of the pardon, Kinchella visits him and persudase him to break out of jail. Kinchella intends to have Duff shoot the escaping prisoner, but Conn intervenes and chokes Duff into silence. Conn and Robert take to the cliffs by the sea. They are followed by Kinchella and Duff, and the soldiers also pursue them. Kinchella attacks Rose on the cliff. Robert arrives and hurls him to his death over the precipice. Captain Molineaux and his soldiers appear. Harvey Duff turns evidence against his dead patron. Captain Molineaux releases Robert, and later the British captain is rewarded by Claire's hand. Conn wins Moya and Robert finds happiness with Rose.

Dion Boucicault's celebrated melodrama, "The Shaughraun," a great stage success of a past decade, takes on a new lease of life in the film version—My Wild Irish Rose, which gives every indication of scoring as decisive a hit on the screen as the original did before the footlights. It goes without saying that the picture will draw the Celtic element in this country as surely as honey draws flies. But its patronage range is liable to extend still further, for, setting aside the racial appeal, the story fairly vibrates with dynamic action, thrills and exciting situations, strikes the sentimental chords with unfailing accuracy and winds up with villany defeated and true love triumphant. All of which is set forth on the silver sheet in a wealth of beautiful photography, enhanced by excellent direction and presented by a splendid cast. It is the sort of feature which should win widespread popularity without any reference to national taste, although its intensely Irish atmosphere will naturally add to its box-office value in certain localities.

Points of Appeal. — There are no less than three distinct love romances threading through the plot, all of which reach a very satisfactory conclusion, pathos abounds, lightened by judicious touches of comedy, the subtitles punching the humor button effectively on occasions; there is plenty of suspense and the fight between the villanous Kinchella and Robert Ffolliott on the edge of the cliff, which terminates in the hurling of the base conspirator to death in the waves beneath, registers as a fine bit of nerve-straining realism.

Cast.—Pat O'Malley fills the role of Conn, "The Shaughraun," effectively. He both looks and acts the part to the very life and the same may be said of Edward Cecil's portrayal of Robert Ffolliott. A more sinister and unprepossessing ruffian than James Farley in the part of Kinchella could scarcely be imagined, and Bobbie Madk is equally repulsive as the informer, Harvey Duff. Little Richard Daniels does excellent work in the juvenile role of Barry, Frank Clark shines as a most lovable olr priest, and the three feminine principals—Helen Howard, Maude Emery and Pauline Starke are wonderfully enticing and pretty colleens. Nor must Henry Hebert be forgotten in his artistic character sketch of the British Captain Molineaux, a very fine performance, while the Celtic types of the peasantry are pleasingly true to life.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—There are many beautiful rustic and marine views in evidence, with charming tinting and light and shadow effects. The lighting throughout is clear and distinct, the action fast and the continuity smooth.

Evidence

Released by Selznick Pictures Corp. Story and Scenario by Edward J. Montague. Cameramen, Jack Brown and J. Cronjager. Directed by Geo. Archainbaud. Length, 4642.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Florette, Elaine Hammerstein; Phillip Rowland, Niles Welch; Judge Rowland, Holmes Herbert; Edith, Constance Bennett; Mrs. Bascom, Marie Burke; Louise, Matilda Metevier; Walter Stanley, Ernest Hillard.

Florette, a popular actress, and her chum Editb were rivals for the love of Walter Stanley, the leading man. Florette set aside her own desires and left the other girl to win his affection. Three years later Phillip Rowland, an aristocratic youth, fell in love with her. Edith, also allowed her fickle heart to turn toward the new suitor. Florette confessed her love to Rowland, but told him their widely different social positions of life would only make it all end unhappily. However, when she learns that Edith has intruded again in her affair she decides to marry him anyway. As she had expected, his family snubbed her but her husband stood manfully by her. One day Stanley returned home with Florette. He was now a pawn in the hands of the scheming Edith and by trickery placed the young bride in a compromising situation. Rowland's brother sought to rid the family of this actress forever and prated about divorce. Florette, by a clever ruse soon put her brother-in-law on the defensive and he was quick to make amends and bend his efforts to re-instate her in the family's good graces.

An entertaining drama wherein the social difference existing between stage and blue bloods is the basis for this pleasingly enacted picture, Evidence. It is quite probable that themes having to do with actress-brides and artists' models come under the same category and might appear to be somewhat trite. However Evidence is comparatively free from melodramatic climaxes and the story is interestingly done. It progresses in a natural way, satisfying as it goes along and finally creates splendid suspense toward the close of the picture.

Points of Appeal. — The star never fails to look and carry herself well. Her gowns cause many Ohs and Ahs. At all times there is maintained sufficient interest to warrant the close attention of the spectators. The story is slightly threadbare in spots, but not sufficiently so to detract in any material way.

Cast.—Elaine Hammerstein, as Florette, displays her charming personality to best advantages in this picture. Her performance is entirely satisfactory in every detail. Niles Welch, who plays opposite her, rather lacks animation in this particular instance and for the most part carries a terrifically bored countenance through his scenes. Holmes Herbert, as Judge Rowland, gives good account of himself. Other members also lend adequate support.

Photography, Lighting, Direction. — The interiors are generally done with taste. Good lighting prevails. Continuity and direction O. K.

Press Comments

Herald—Taken amid actual arctic surroundings 800 miles north of civilization, is superior to the ordinary travel picture in that it is pervaded with the stark drama of human existence. The photography is almost incredibly good. Tribune—The picture runs the length of the usual feature and is far more interesting than most of those we have seen lately. World—Is a surprise picture. The surprise comes in the amazing beauty and dramatic texture of this simple story, though it is acted entirely by Eskimos. Ballet and music program is worthy of exceptional commendation. Times—Beside this film the usual photoplay becomes as thin and blank as the celluloid on which it is printed. Its people are not acting, but living. The struggles they have are real struggles. American—Generates more thrills than a serial, provokes more genuine mirth than a slap-stick comedy. Journal—Entertainment along the most liberal lines are joyously blended. Sun—Grinding struggle for existence graphically portrayed. World—It is fairly interesting because it is different. Telegram—It is life—stark and tragic and real. Mail—One of the most appealing, absorbingly interesting films it has been our pleasure to see in years.

Press Comments

Herald—Settings have been well chosen and the picture will be enjoyed by all those who would travel miles on foot to hear Chauncey Olcott say "Ah, darlint." Pat O'Malley and Pauline Starke as the main pair of lovers certainly look as if they belonged to the old sod. It is a fairly stirring tale. World—If any one enjoys ANY sort of hothouse entertainment, this sort of weather, they will enjoy My Wild Irish Rose. Sun—Is not so much wilder nor distinct from other roses, even in a title that smacks of a popular song. Journal—Is a beautiful, interesting and efficient adaptation of Boucicault's play. Telegram—Is a strange coupling of two classics. It sips the sweetness from both Chauncey Olcott's song and Dion Boucicault's famous stage success. Mail—An interesting and colorful melodrama of the Ireland of several generations ago.

Comedy—Baby Peggy in Tips (Universal).

Press Comments

Herald—There is a lack of suspense, though the naively amusing phases may compensate all but those who insist on having their suspense handed to them in big hunks. World—A very welcome addition to the American screen. Ade has achieved a well knit, consistent, delightful film comedy without the aid of flood, ice jam, railroad wreck, cabaret fight, or impugning the motives of a married lady. Times—Mildly, but genuinely humorous, and gently, sometimes too gently, satirical story of town life. Is enjoyable, but one imagines if Mr. Ade had been permitted to write a two-reel instead of a five-reel scenario it would have been more so. American—Those who like Thomas Meighan will like him as the most heroic hero of Our Leading Citizen. World—It's well worth an afternoon or evening, no matter what the weather. Sun—Thomas Meighan will delight his admirers as Daniel Bentley. Globe—Is extremely worth while. Telegram—Has clean, good humor—it has the fight for honesty and some delightful romance.

RIALTO

Overture—"Pique Dame" (Von Suppe).
Rialto Magazine.
Soprano Solo—"Love, Here Is My Heart" (Lao Silesu).
Scenic—Below the Antarctic Circle.
Baritone Solo—"Visions Fugitives" (Massenet).
Feature—The Devil's Pawn (Paramount).
Rialto Orchestra—"Hungarian Dances" (Brahms).
Comedy—Larry Semon in A Pair of Kings (Vitagraph).

Press Comments

Herald—Pola Negri should be confined to spectacular historical features where her sort of glamorous vamping seems more in order. The edict of the Russian Czars that a Jewess could not remain in a city even to gain a university education without the baleful "yellow ticket" seems too much a matter of recent history to cause chills to chase up and down the average American's spine. Below the Antarctic Circle, amusing and thrilling scenic, is worth a dash to this theatre. Tribune—Hasn't a thing to recommend it save the presence of Miss Negri. Pola Negri is always interesting to watch and probably you will forget all about the story. World—Pola Negri is again afforded an opportunity for her complete range of powers, though the story is a bit tawdry and not worthy the attention shown her earlier dramas. Below the Antarctic Circle is a remarkable record of an expedition near the South Pole. Mail—The story is well told on the screen, and Miss Negri is accorded excellent support. Sun—Combines satisfactions of the specified appetites. Globe—Is readily distinguished for its excellent acting and photography.

CAMEO

Overture—Melodies from Faust.
Cameo News Events.
Comedy—Snub Pollard in Some Boy (Pathe).
Vocal Solo—"Sometime" (Friml).
Pathe Review.
Violin Solo—Two Hungarian Poems.
Feature—The Great Alone (American Releasing Corp.).

Press Comments

Herald—Monroe Salisbury plays the half breed with considerable variety and force, and his arms and legs stand up under the strain of the part remarkably. American—Lip readers may have a good time watching The Great Alone, but it's rather an ordeal for the ordinary devotees of the screen. The fundamental difficulty lies in finding out what the film is all about. Journal—Hand-to-hand fighting, long-distance shooting, primitive love and other elements of the same virile variety. World—Deals with an Indian who becomes a football star and then comes in for a lot of razzing because of his Indian blood. Telegram—The picture is likeable. Its good sequence and beautiful scenery leave a favorable and lasting impression.

EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW

An Event of Great Importance

By L. W. BOYNTON

THE announcement that Senator Walker has been invited by Associated First National to aid in redrafting the subfranchise contract is an event of great importance.

It marks a forward step in the era of Confidence and Co-operation which Mr. Hays brought into being when he enunciated those three words and put into them the breath of life.

To Senator Walker personally the invitation is a deserved tribute. As spokesman for the exhibitor he knows how to fight when it is necessary, but he fights only that he may build something constructive.

On the part of Associated First National, the action is most praiseworthy. It reveals anew that company's continued determination, long ago evidenced and made a fact, to maintain faith with its subfranchise holders and the great exhibitor body throughout the country.

Viewed broadly, the announcement is another indication that the council table is growing steadily in favor as the logical place at which to adjust the inner problems of the industry. Months ago, Exhibitors Trade Review took the stand that the public forum was not the place where business difficulties could finally be settled; and we may be pardoned if we make passing mention of the fact that our judgment in that regard is being vindicated more and more as the weeks go by.

Changed conditions in the currents of the picture business render changes in the subfranchise desirable. Senator Walker is preeminently qualified to "sit in" and help.

His selection is as natural as anything could possibly be, and furnishes the latest proof of his splendid abilities and the high qualities of his leadership.

Build Up Your Local and State Exhibitor Organizations. They, and Not "National Headquarters", Are Your Business Insurance

"Play Dates Are Pay Dates"

OUT of the negotiations which the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York City initiated with Mr. Hays has arisen the phrase which forms the caption of this editorial. It has occupied a prominent place in the discussions which have been held between the producer leader and the exhibitor groups which have conferred with him.

Around the question of play dates revolves one of the most vexatious problems of the industry. If it can be solved—and we believe it can—much of the strife between distributor and exhibitor will have been eliminated, and the whole structure of the picture business rendered more secure.

The fault lies on both sides. The distributor, anxious to sell his product in bulk, forces the exhibitor to book pictures in block. That is to say, the theatre man is put in the position of taking a chance on a large number of productions, because there are two or three or half a dozen in the list which he knows will be money-makers.

On the other hand, the exhibitor too often books more pictures than he can possibly play simply to keep them away from his competitor. The result is almost hopeless confusion in both branches of the industry.

The solution will be found of course in mutual understanding and agreement, which must take into account the necessities of both distributor and exhibitor.

The theatre owner and manager should not book more pictures than he can play; and he should book with the distinct understanding that he must pay for those he does book. The distributor, for his part, should make it his business not to oversell the exhibitor; and he should most certainly not permit his salesmen to play one exhibitor against another in the booking of film. These are the broad lines upon which the situation, it seems to us, will have to be solved. It can be, and we have no doubt an excellent start has been made in that direction as a result of the various exhibitor-group negotiations with Mr. Hays.

A Radical Departure

THE announcement by Famous Players-Lasky that it has established a school, stock company and rules of conduct for players in its studios at Hollywood is another evidence of the new day in the industry.

The higher development of motion picture technique on the part of those who are already public favorites is, of course, increasingly necessary for the sake of better pictures. The school at Hollywood will not be open to that host of would-be candidates for the screen of whom there must be thousands among picture fans. Its courses of instruction will be given only to members of the Paramount family. That should be clearly understood.

The finer the knowledge—the wider the experience—the better must necessarily be the work of the screen artist. And, by the same token, the more regular the life of the player, the more effective in the end must the level of his or her achievement be.

So far as personal conduct is concerned, it is obviously not the intention of Famous Players to become a corporate moral guardian for its people. Instead, strict standards are set up, and the player who cannot live up to them—if such there be—will disappear from the screen.

We recommend to every member of the picture world detailed reading of the Famous Players' announcement of this radical departure printed elsewhere in this issue. It is one of the finest things ever done to advance the welfare of the industry as a whole.

Walker Invited by First National to Aid in Rewriting Subfranchise; T.O.C.C. Dinner in Senator's Honor Is Brilliant Affair

SENATOR JAMES J. WALKER, counsel for the Theatre Chamber of Commerce of New York City and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the State of New York, has been invited by Associated First National to assist in modifying the subfranchise.

This announcement, made by Senator Walker himself and later confirmed by officials of First National, was the outstanding feature of the brilliant dinner given in honor of the Senator by the T. O. C. C. at the Hotel Plaza, New York City, June 19.

The significance of the occasion was heightened by the presence of Will H. Hays, who paid a remarkable tribute of friendship and esteem to Senator Walker. It was further emphasized by the presence of a great number of men prominent in the New York political, business and sport worlds. Alfred E. Smith, former Governor of New York, was the toastmaster.

Impressive Tribute to Walker

No more impressive tribute of affection and whole-hearted regard has ever been rendered to any man in public life than was accorded to Senator Walker. At the speakers' dais, besides the guest of honor and the toastmaster, were: Daniel Frohman, the theatrical producer; Hon. William T. Collins; Thomas J. Gray; Hon. Edward J. Flynn; John McE. Bowman, the hotel magnate; De Wolf Hopper, the actor; Hon. Robert F. Wagner; Charles Brady; Joseph Levenson of the New York State Motion Picture Commission; Thomas D. Drennan, Fire Commissioner; Charles L. O'Reilly, president of the New York State exhibitors' organization; William Landau, president of the T. O. C. C.; Mr. Hays; Hon. Edmund Machold; Hon. James A. Foley; Hon. John Gilchrist; William E. Walsh of the Bureau of Standards and Appeals; Henry D. Sayre, Industrial Commissioner; Hon. Morris Koenig; Charles Gehring; Judge Otto Rosalsky; Robert Grier Cooke, president of the Fifth Avenue Association; Horace De Lisser, president of the Broadway Association; Hon. Murray Hulbert; Bernard Edelhertz, chairman of the T. O. C. C. Executive Committee; Hon. Perceval E. Nagle; Congressman Frederick Landis of Indiana; and Hon. James H. McCooey.

Senator Walker's statement with regard to the First National invitation came at the very end of his speech and created a sensation among the motion picture men present.

"Within the last forty-eight hours," said the Senator, "I have received an invitation—not from any individual or any clique—but from the theatre owners who go to make up what we picture men understand to be Associated First National to go in and sit with them and modify their contract with their subfranchise holders. In that, I believed we have reached the last stage.

"These men with millions invested have said, in effect: 'Walker, you have been squawking about this contract for two years. If there is anything wrong about it, point it out, fix it up or stop squawking. We are with the exhibitor one hundred per cent.'"

The importance of this step was immediately apparent to the large delegation of members of the industry present. It was hailed, as the Senator himself said, as the last stage in the present era of conferences to adjust business difficulties.

More than a thousand men sat down together in one of the Plaza's largest banquet halls to do honor to the Senator. The affair got under way about 8:30 o'clock. The arrangements were admirably handled and compliments were heard on all sides for the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce and the Dinner Committee, of which William Brandt was the chairman.

Besides Mr. O'Reilly, the following members of the Board of Directors of the New York State exhibitors' organization were there: W. A. Dillon of Ithaca, Louis Beuttner of Cohoes, W. H. Linton of Utica, S. I. Berman of New York City, Jules Michaels of Buffalo, Leo Brecher of New York City, Dave Cohen of Binghamton, Joseph Quittner of Middletown, Charles Steiner of New York City, Samuel Suckno of Albany and V. A. Warren of Messena. A number of others prominent in exhibitor circles were on hand, including E. T. Peter of New York City.

When Senator Walker entered the room at 8:25 o'clock, the guests rose to their feet and greeted him with tremendous cheering. Immediately after the dinner was served, a surprise was sprung in the form of a motion picture entitled, "The Life and Bottles of James J. Walker," which proved to be a clever reel composed of cartoons and witty titles which kept the assemblage in an uproar of laughter. The picture was directed by William Brandt; the scenario and titles written by Tommy Gray; and the cartoon work done by Max Fleisher.

When the lights were turned on again, Mr. Edelhertz on behalf of the T. O. C. C. made a stirring address of welcome, at the conclusion of which he presented former Governor Smith as the toastmaster of the evening.

Mr. Smith received a great greeting from the crowd. Mr. Hays was the first man on his feet and led the cheers for the former Governor. The toastmaster first read letters and telegrams from Jack Kearns and Jack Dempsey, Harry Carey, E. F. Albee and United States Senator James W. Wadsworth, Jr., expressing regret that they could not attend.

He then reviewed the public career of Jimmie Walker from the time the latter entered the Assembly at Albany in 1910 until the present.

"In legislative life," said Mr. Smith, "there is no rosy path to success. Leadership there bespeaks the survival of the very fittest. As leader of the Democratic side of the State Senate, Jimmie has acquitted himself with fine distinction and made himself known throughout the country. He is a real liberal leader," said the toastmaster, referring to the Senator's championship of Sunday baseball, the boxing bill, Sunday opening of theatres and opposition to censorship.

"Jim is a good scrapper—a scrapper who leaves no scars" Mr. Smith went on. "Now, what is the answer? The answer is found here to-night in this enthusiastic reception, in his countless friends. No man can succeed in public life without hard work. No man can succeed without honesty," and then the former Governor evoked a great demonstration by a tribute to the sterling honesty of Senator Walker.

Hays Makes Speech

Mr. Hays was then introduced as the first speaker of the evening.

In opening, Mr. Hays made reference to a remark of Mr. Smith, the toastmaster, about the latter having been appointed on a committee to aid in the removal of the old postoffice in order that the site might be restored to municipal uses. Mr. Smith had been placed on the committee at the time Mr. Hays was postmaster general.

"I don't know why you haven't attended to that little matter," declared Mr. Hays amid laughter, "but I shall be glad to go down to Washington with you at any time and see if we can't do something about it.

"I am glad to be here to-night," went on Mr. Hays. "I am glad to be this close to the heart of New York—to be in a Tammany meeting. (Laughter.) For many years, since I first went into politics, I have had a wholesome respect

Hays Confers with Civic Organizations

Meeting of Vital Importance to Industry Held in New York—Promote Better Relations With Leaders of Thought and Action in Many Lines of Activity

A GREAT advance in furthering better relations between the motion picture industry and civic and welfare leaders in the United States was made this week.

Representatives of two-score nationally federated organizations met Thursday, June 22, at his request with Will H. Hays at a conference held in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York City.

The importance of the meeting was emphasized, so far as the industry was concerned, by the presence of the principal producers and distributors, and exhibitor leaders from various sections of the country. Besides Mr. Hays and the representatives of the civic and welfare organizations whose names are household words, one of the chief speakers was Senator James J. Walker.

Mr. Hays requested a general conference with the officials of these federations in order to be advised of the work being done and planned by them with reference to motion pictures and in order to learn their viewpoints with respect to the relationship of the motion picture industry to the public in general and to these organized groups in particular.

The following statement with reference to the meeting was made by Mr. Hays: "A frank talk with these important leaders of action and of thought will be immensely valuable to those of us who hope to see the motion picture develop still further as a factor in the Nation's recreation, amusement and education. I am sure it will be valuable, too, in bringing to the delegates of these associations problems of the picture industry. As a result of this and other similar meetings the motion picture may become more and more responsive to those progressive civic, social and artistic objectives represented by these organizations meeting today."

The sessions began at 11 o'clock and continued until late in the afternoon, with recess for luncheon.

Mr. Hays, in opening the conference, made a stirring speech which produced a deep impression upon those present. Although no formal resolution was passed on the matter, the sentiment of those present, as the session went along, was clearly opposed to legalized censorship of motion pictures.

Among the speakers were: Hugh Frayne of the American Federation of Labor; Colin H. Livingstone, president of the Boy Scouts of America; Senator Walker; Rex Beach, the author; Rev. Charles S. McFarland of the Federal Council of Churches; Rev. Charles A. McMahon, National Catholic Welfare Council; Jesse H. Neal of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World; George H. Sherwood of the Museum of Natural History; Paul Tanner, Actors' Equity Association; James E. West, Secretary, Boy Scouts of America; J. H. Hall of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World; Mrs. Louis Slade, National League of Women Voters; and Sydney Cohen.

Upon motion by Mr. West a committee, composed of Lee F. Hanmer, Russell Sage Foundation; Mrs. Oliver Harriman, president, Camp Fire Girls; and Mr. West, was appointed to help Mr. Hays in the selection of a general committee of fifteen or twenty representatives from the organizations present to continue the work of co-operation with the General, and through him with the entire industry.

Those attending the conference were:

Rex Beach, playwright; David S. Beyer, vice-president, National Safety Council; Miss Borrow, secretary, Colonial Dames of America; Leroy E. Bowman, secretary, The National Community Center Association; H. S. Braucher, secretary, Community Service, Inc.; Mrs. Philip A. Brennan; Mrs. Richard M. Three Exhibitor Groups Conducting Negotiations With Hays Organization

NEGOTIATIONS were carried forward this week between Will H. Hays, President of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., and three exhibitor groups for the adjustment of the inner problems of the industry.

On Tuesday, Mr. Hays conferred with Charles L. O'Reilly and the Board of Directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York State. On Wednesday morning and afternoon, Sydney Cohen and his committee, representing the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, met Mr. Hays and continued the discussions begun last week. Mr. O'Reilly and his committee conferred with Mr. Hays both in the morning and the afternoon. On Wednesday also the committee representing the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York City continued their negotiations. Senator James J. Walker appeared as spokesman for the State and city organizations.

On Wednesday afternoon the New York State committee and the T. O. C. C. representatives met Mr. Hays in joint session. The meetings between the General and the Cohen committee were entirely separate.

All the conferences were in the most friendly spirit and proceeded in the most constructive way, it is declared. Details are still being worked out, and it is expected announcements of a definite nature will be made soon.

On Thursday the negotiators adjourned their sessions to attend the Hays conference with representatives of the National Civic Organizations at the Waldorf-Astoria.

New York State Officially Secedes from M.P.T.O.A.; Will Not Promote New National Organization

THE Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the State of New York, on June 19, by official action of its Board of Directors broke off all relations with the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

The meeting of the Board, which was largely attended, was held at State Headquarters, Times Building, New York City. The vote to withdraw carried overwhelmingly.

On June 22 Charles L. O'Reilly, president of the New York State organization, issued the following statement:

O'Reilly's Statement

"The officers and Board of Directors of our State organization were called for the purpose of considering the very many definite requests of the various local units and members of our organization throughout the State to discontinue any further relations with our former national organization, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

"This subject brought up for discussion was the first order of business at the meeting on Monday, at State Headquarters, and the order to withdraw from the national organization was passed by an overwhelming vote. Mr. Howard Smith of Buffalo was the only member of the Board of Directors who voted to continue our relations with the national organization.

"Mr. Smith subsequently resigned, and his resignation was unanimously accepted.

"The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the State of New York, in taking this action, realize its importance to the exhibiting branch of the industry throughout the country, and for that reason and because of the fact that the State organization wishes the theatre owners of the country to know definitely its position in the matter, this statement is issued.

"The theatre owners of the country must realize that Sydney S. Cohen was formerly the president of this organization, and was sponsored by it for the national presidency at two former national conventions—Cleveland and Minneapolis.

"Before, at, and after the Washington Convention, his attitude towards his own State was so unfair and so evidently selfish that he earned for himself the bitter resentment of the entire delegation that represented his State at Washington, with his ruthless methods and his lying propaganda, even going so far as to deny his own State from placing before the delegates of the other States their position in the controversy.

"His actions after the Washington Convention, in trying to disrupt when he found he could not control the exhibitor forces of his own State, have deepened the bitter feeling of resentment throughout the entire rank and file of our organization.

"We wish the exhibitors of the country, as well as the leaders of the other State organizations throughout the country, to know, despite innuendoes, rumors and statements to the contrary, that no attempt will be made by the New York State Organization to promote any new national organization, or in any way create dissatisfaction within the ranks of the membership of other states.

"As a matter of fact, the same feeling of friendship still exists in the hearts of the exhibitors of the State of New York, and their desire for co-operation with their sister states is as keen as ever.

"We are more than willing to confer and to co-operate with the other State organizations on any issue that may arise in the future where the strength of the State of New York can be of benefit to the exhibiting branch of the industry, or to the industry as a whole. But, under no conditions, will the State of New York recognize the leadership of Sydney S. Cohen.

Hand of Friendship to Other States

"Many State leaders are members of the national Board of Directors. They are men who have given of their time and their money to build up organization for the protection of exhibitor rights, and we wish to definitely assure them that our strength and our treasury will always willingly be used in the defence of those exhibitor rights any place in the United States.

"We are forced officially to withdraw from the national organization which we in New York State did so much to create and promote, to preserve our independence from being crushed by Sydney S. Cohen with his high-handed attempt to force an illegal constitution upon us. Had we subscribed to Mr. Cohen's constitution we would have sold our independence, and placed in the hands of that man whom we have learned to mistrust a weapon which, in our opinion, not only will eventually disrupt the national organization, but will be used by him in an effort to destroy any State organization that dares to assert an opinion which would run counter to his ruthless personal ambition."

Important Matters Discussed

Besides the act of secession, a number of important matters affecting exhibitor welfare in the State were taken up in the three-day session of the Board.

On Tuesday the State Directors conferred with Will H. Hays on the question of an equitable contract and other vital problems. A full and frank discussion was held, after which the Board named a sub-committee composed of Jules Michael, of Buffalo; Louis Beuttner, of Cohoes, and S. I. Berman, of New York City, to work out the details of the negotiations with the committee representing the Hays organization.

After the resignation of Howard Smith, of Buffalo, A. C. Hayman, of Niagara Falls, former National Committeeman and one of the most prominent exhibitors in the State, was elected to the vacancy. It was decided to add another director to the Board and William Benton, of Saratoga, a prominent lawyer and a member of the State organization for many years, was chosen. Mr. Benton is a colleague of Senator Brackett, one of the best known of the State Republican leaders, and in addition to operating a fine theatre in Saratoga is the owner of a new theatre soon to open in Schenectady.

To a representative of EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW Mr. O'Reilly pointed out the business stability and prestige of the men who compose the State Board of Directors. "These men," he said, "are among the most substantial theatre owners in the country. They own and operate more than a hundred of the finest houses in the United States. There is no State in the Union which has a greater number of independent theatre owners."

One of the most important steps taken by the board was the designation of Senator James J. Walker as a member of the Advisory Board of the New York State Industrial Commission to redraft rules and regulations for the operation of picture theatres. The appointment was offered to the New York exhibitor organization by Industrial Commissioner Henry D. Sayre, so that the view of the theatre owners could be obtained in this vital matter of protecting the public. Mr. O'Reilly announced that he would appoint a committee of prominent up-State exhibitors to work with Senator Walker. The board was unanimous in its designation of the Senator, whose work for the New York City organization in a similar connection for the Bureau of Standards and Appeals has established him as an expert.

Senator Walker conferred with the exhibitor board frequently during its sessions, and its members were pleased to learn that the Senator was making great progress in the matter of reduction of fire and liability insurance rates. It is expected a reduction of 50 per cent in fire rates and a corresponding lessening of cost for liability insurance will soon be arranged with the National Board of Underwriters.

It was also announced that the correspondence between Mr. O'Reilly and L. W. Boynton, editor and publisher of EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW, which appeared in these columns last week, was made a part of the official record of the New York State organization by vote of the directors.

The officers and members of the Board of Directors are Charles L. O'Reilly, president, New York; W. A. Dillon, vice-president, Ithaca; Frank Koch, vice-president, Rochester; Louis Buettner, vice-president, Cohoes; Bernard Edelhertz, vice-president, Bronx; W. H. Linton, treasurer, Utica; S. I. Berman, executive secretary, Brooklyn; Jules Michaels, chairman executive committee, Buffalo; Leo Brecher, New York; David Cohen, Binghamton; A. A. Elliot, Hudson; Jules Greenstone, Rochester; Walter Hays, Syracuse; Samuel Peyser, Port Richmond; Joseph Quittner, Middletown; Nathan Robbins, Utica; Charles Steiner, New York; Samuel Suckno, Albany; Samuel Sheer, Corona; Rudolph Sanders, Brooklyn; V. A. Warren, Massena; A. C. Hayman, Niagara Falls; William Benton, Saratoga.

Hays Indorsed by North Carolina

ASHEVILLE, N. C., June 22.

THE midsummer convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of North Carolina, which was scheduled to open at 9.30 Tuesday morning, June 20, actually got under way at 10.45 Wednesday morning when President Percy Wells called to order some fifteen North Carolina exhibitors and more than thirty exchangemen from Atlanta and Charlotte.

During the morning session Secretary Varner reported the progress of the conference with Mr. Hays, advising that all matters had been referred to sub-committees, who are now at work in New York and who will shortly report.

Mr. Varner suggested an arbitration board of six members for the State, to be appointed from the M. P. T. O. of North Carolina, and three from the Film Exchange Managers' Association of Charlotte.

That a strong tendency toward co-operation is developing between the exchanges and exhibitors of the State is evident by the reception given E. F. Dardine of the Charlotte Film Managers' Association when he presented a number of suggestions relative to the handling of film in the projection room, and the prompt shipment thereof.

Miss Anna Eugene Aiken spoke of the splendid work of the better films committee of Atlanta and outlined the method by which North Carolina might secure the co-operation of civic organizations, women's clubs and parent-teacher associations. She presented the report of the findings committee of the Southeastern conference for better films, and the North Carolina exhibitors unanimously indorsed those findings. Subsequently President Percy Wells named a committee of two, composed of A. F. Sams of Winston-Salem and E. F. Dardine of Charlotte, to visit Atlanta the third week in July when the better films committee meets.

Walter T. Murphy, member of the lower house in the North Carolina Legislature, and ardent friend of the industry, in his brief but forceful talk, dwelt upon his opposition to censorship on the ground that it violated the principles of democracy and freedom.

The concluding speech was made by Charles C. Pettijohn, who came as the personal representative of Mr. Hays, and brought a message which rang with sincerity. He urged constructive measures that would build toward permanency. He declared that only through 100 per cent exhibitor organization could this industry advance beyond a given point. Instead of the usual complimentary remarks he gave North Carolina exhibitors a good-natured scoring for lack of interest in exhibitors' organization, telling them that instead of fifteen exhibitors this meeting should have drawn 150.

The report of the resolution committee occupied the last few minutes of the session. The resolution included one of renewed allegiance to the M. P. T. O. A.; one of commendation for Mr. Hays, one calling for co-operation with Charlotte Film Exchange Managers Association and one empowering the M. P. T. O. of North Carolina to send an official organizer through the State with a view to making the organization 100 per cent strong.

On Thursday the election of officers for the ensuing year was held, all officers being re-elected to serve as follows:

President, Percy W. Wells, Wilmington; secretary, H. B. Varner, Lexington; first vice-president, E. F. Dardine, Charlotte; second vice-president, S. S. Stevenson, Henderson.

At the morning session a motion was made and adopted to start movement for a convention of entire Southern states to be held in 1923 at some central location.

Jersey Exhibitors Hold Convention

LAKE HOPATCONG, N. J., June 22.

THE Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey, in annual convention here, passed a resolution to-day declaring that the organization would apply for a state-wide charter in the M. P. T. O. A.

Resolutions were also adopted endorsing Sydney S. Cohen, ratifying the acts of the Washington convention and endorsing Movie Chats. An executive board composed of one member from each of the twenty-one counties and the four officers of the organization was authorized. This board will name the twelve delegates and alternates to the National Convention at least thirty days before that event. The board of directors was given the power to transact business between conventions.

President R. F. Woodhull, of Dover, has no opposition for re-election. Other officers were chosen as follows: First vice-president, W. P. Hunt, Wildwood; second vice-president, Peter A. Adams, Paterson; treasurer, Louis Bollinger, Union Hill; secretary, Sidney Samuelson, Newton; national executive committeeman, D. J. Hennessey, Newark.

Board of Directors—John T. Collins, Rutherford; Charles Hildinger, Trenton; W. P. Hunt, Wildwood; D. J. Hennessey, Newark; David Kaiserstein, Jersey City; Herman F. Jans, Newark; A. D. Austin, Wildwood; A. M. Fabian, Paterson.

This occasion was remarkable from the oratorical side, and from the entertainment side, too. The latter was contributed by a party of two score players, screen and stage, headed by Marcus Loew. Thursday evening there was a ball.

The banquet on Wednesday evening, by reason of the quality of the speeches and the eminence of some of the speakers, easily would rank with the best of similar affairs at National conventions. One of the outstanding events was the speech of the Rev. Dr. Henry R. Rose, pastor of the Church of the Redeemer of Newark; another was that of Hudson Maxim, who likened the censor to the flea on a dog. Then there were addresses by Fred B. Breitenbach, Mayor of Newark; Henry P. Nelson, convention chairman; R. F. Woodhull, president of the state organization; Hugo Ballin; Sydney Samuelson, the secretary, who on behalf of the New Jersey Exhibitors presented a watch to Mr. Woodhull; A. M. Fabian, Marcus Loew and Sydney S. Cohen, national president.

Kansas M. P. T. O. Board Indorses Cohen

At a meeting of the Executive Board of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Kansas, held at Kansas City, June 21, a resolution was adopted indorsing Sydney Cohen and pledging allegiance to the M. P. T. O. A.

The resolution was sponsored by President M. Van Praag and R. G. Liggett, and was adopted after a strenuous all-day session in which there developed stubborn opposition. The final vote, however, was unanimous.

Paramount Establishes Conduct Rules

Formation of Stock Company and Inauguration of School, with Classes for Instruction of Players, Announced by Zukor—Radical Departure Made in Effort to Improve Quality of Pictures

ONE of the most radical departures ever attempted in an effort to improve the quality of motion pictures was announced Tuesday, June 20, by Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. It is the formation of the Paramount Stock Company and School at the Lasky studio, Hollywood, with classes for the instruction of players in every branch of their art and with complete rules governing the players' conduct inside and outside the studio.

The object of the school is to establish a perpetual reservoir of talent from which can be drawn the stars of to-morrow, and the results are expected to be the development of a corps of screen players such as has never been assembled before by a picture producing organization and the raising of the standard of productions to new levels.

Zukor Explains Plan

Operation of the school and the rules governing the players will be effective immediately, said Mr. Zukor.

"In organizing the Paramount Stock Company," Mr. Zukor stated, "we have only one aim—better motion pictures.

"Therefore we have assembled an organization of men and women who by their work have shown themselves to be the leading personalities on the screen. Many of the men and women in this organization already have achieved the position of stars, others have shown that they have in them the magnetism and ability to become the stars of to-morrow. Altogether we have, in the Paramount Stock Company, a group of players who will give Paramount Pictures the finest casts it is possible to assemble.

"But none of us wishes to stand still. Therefore Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has placed at the disposal of all the people in the studio its entire resources for their artistic development along principles of proven soundness."

In many respects the school will be one of the most remarkable ever attempted. Famous directors will act as instructors and the pupils will have among their number men and women known throughout the world as the leaders of their profession.

These include the stars under the Paramount banner—Gloria Swanson, Rodolph Valentino, Betty Compson, Elsie Ferguson, Thomas Meighan, Wallace Reid, Dorothy Dalton, Agnes Ayres, Jack Holt, Bebe Daniels, May McAvoy, Pola Negri, Wanda Hawley, Alice Brady and Mary Miles Minter, most of whom work in the Lasky studio.

Others in the Paramount Stock Company are such well-known screen players as Lila Lee, Lois Wilson, David Powell, Conrad Nagel, Theodore Roberts, Sylvia Ashton, Walter Long, Charles Ogle, Clarence Burton, Kathlyn Williams, Ethel Wales, Helen Dunbar, Leatrice Joy, Anna Q. Nilsson, Milton Sills, Theodore Kosloff, Walter Hiers, Julia Faye, Guy Oliver, Lucien Littlefield, Robert Cain, George Fawcett, Bert Lytell and William Boyd.

In speaking of the aims of the school, Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of Famous Players, in charge of production, says:

"The Paramount Stock Company is the first effort in the history of motion pictures to develop motion picture actors in purely motion picture technique. It also is the first time motion picture players have had an opportunity to broaden their technical education so that their training may embrace a knowledge of all phases of picture production.

"Unlike the student body of most schools, the members of the Paramount Stock Company are persons who already have established reputations in their life work of acting for the screen. Therefore, the purpose of this school is not to instruct in the fundamentals of screen art, except as such instruction may correct minor faults, but to broaden the working knowledge of the members of the stock company to the end that they may increase their versatility and have a wider outlook on their art.

"In the arduous work of the studio it too often is the case that an actor finds little time to study anything in connection with his art save the particular role he is called upon to play. But the membership of the Paramount Stock Company not only includes men and women who are the foremost stars of today, but also players who, with an established reputation gained by good work, will be the screen stars of to-morrow. To assist them in their progress, this training school has been organized, because the motion picture has progressed so rapidly that the coming star of the screen must be equipped with a broad knowledge of all phases of his art."

Board of Control

Complete rules and regulations, courses of study, officers and instructors have been provided for the conduct of this stock company. There is a Board of Control, which includes Mr. Zukor, Mr. Lasky, S. R. Kent and Cecil B. DeMille. The Board of Administration is made up of Mr. Lasky, president; Cecil B. DeMille, director; Robert T. Kane, Victor H. Clarke and Frank E. Woods. There is also a Players' Board of Control, of which the members are Conrad Nagel, Lois Wilson, Thomas Meighan, Sylvia Ashton and Theodore Roberts.

Courses of training include everything connected with the motion picture art. The technical branches are divided into two parts—physical training and studio training. Under the physical training there are the subjects of health, action dancing and fencing. The studio training courses are very elaborate. They include cinematography and lighting, pictorial values, stage mechanics, stage business, make-up, costuming, architecture, interior decoration, direction and acting.

In the realm of the higher ideals of picture making there is a department of creative effort which includes photo-dramatic analysis, photo-drama — theory and practice, photo-comedy, scenario and motion picture history. Under the title of expressional branches three subjects are taught—physical expression, life study and pantomime.

The subjects and the men who will handle them as the faculty of instructors are: Photo-drama, theory and practice, William de Mille; Pictorial Values, Penrhyn Stanlaws; Motion Picture History, George Melford; Dancing, Carriage and Fencing, Theodore Kosloff; Physical Culture, Norman Selby (Kid McCoy); Costume Theory, Paul Iribe; Architecture and Interior Decoration, Max Parker;

Cinematography and Lighting, Alvin Wykoff; Acting, George Fitzmaurice; Scenario, Frank E. Woods; Direction, Cecil B. DeMille; Make-up, George Fawcett and Theodore Roberts; Photo-comedy, James Cruze.

Rules of Conduct

When the project of the stock company school was explained to some of the stars and directors early in the spring by Mr. Lasky, they suggested that they be allowed to participate in the control of the work, as is done in some of the larger universities. As soon as the news got around the members of the company drew up a set of rules and appointed the Board of Control, which is to assist in their enforcement. They are strict, but are considered necessary by the artists for their own protection. As they were finally agreed upon in conference with Mr. Lasky they read:

1. To protect the good name of their profession, the members of the Paramount Stock Company have suggested and adopted these rules of conduct and work. Therefore infringement of these rules not only works harm to yourself as an actor and an individual, but it also works injury to your associates. Strict adherence to these rules is demanded of every member of the company, and it also is requested that members by precept and example strive to have other members of the company observe them.

2. The basis of all good work is good health. Therefore, members of the Paramount Stock Company should guard their health as their most precious asset and avoid any conduct or circumstances that will put their health in peril. Proper exercise, sufficient sleep, fresh air, proper diet—all these are essential to good health. Avoid alcoholic stimulants and late hours. If you are a woman, nothing can destroy your good looks so quickly; if you are a man, nothing can incapacitate you so much for the arduous work of the studio.

3. Any member of the Paramount Stock Company who fails to maintain 75 per cent standing in classes, attendance and general deportment is liable to expulsion from the company.

4. Although the stock in trade of the members of the Paramount Stock Company is their ability to portray their emotions, the place for such portrayal is on the screen, and not in the studio. Temperament is a valuable asset, but temperament out of control is a nuisance to yourself and everybody about you. Bursts of so-called temperament in the studio will not be tolerated; we are all grown men and women, and our actions should be governed by sanity and common courtesy.

5. No member of the company will be allowed to make a public appearance at a theatre or public entertainment without permission of the director of the stock company.

6. Gifts and gratuities to any instructor or officer of the Paramount Stock Company, or anybody else connected with the studio, are strictly forbidden.

7. Members of the stock company will be expected to play any part assigned to them. Success can be based only on good work, and ability to do good work can be demonstrated as well in a small bit as in a leading role. Therefore, never slight your work, no matter how inconsequential your role may seem.

8. Be careful in the choice of your associates outside the studio. Remember: "A man is known by the company he keeps." A woman is known by the company she avoids.

9. Do not confine your outlook on life to the activities of the studio. Broaden your viewpoint. Read good books; read a good newspaper and keep abreast of developments in politics, literature, economics, art. Remember that your mentality and your tastes shine through your eyes on the screen.

10. The motion picture, because of its great distribution, gives you popularity, wealth and a great career. But, by virtue of this very distribution, it also brings enormous responsibilities. You must accept these responsibilities. The motion picture has made you an intimate friend of countless people whom you will never see. You are their friend, nevertheless, and it must be your constant care never to do anything or say anything that will betray the confidence these millions of motion picture lovers have placed in you. Therefore, members of the Paramount Stock Company are expected to avoid places, people, circumstances and conduct which might in any way bring themselves and the motion picture profession into disrepute. Any member failing strictly to observe this rule is liable to instant dismissal from the company.

That these rules will be something more than a formality is evidenced by the fact that Mr. Lasky is to receive weekly confidential reports on the work of each member of the company from the director, Cecil B. DeMille. These reports will carry details as to what classes each student has entered, the student's work in each and also his work in productions, his general deportment inside and outside the studio, with a statement as to the average rating.

"Attendance at church," said Mr. Zukor, "is to be urged, but, of course, no effort will be made to dictate the religious practices of our people."

Important Move for Screen Freedom

Provision May Be Adopted in New Missouri Constitution Placing Motion Pictures on Same Basis as Press

HISTORY in the making, as far as Missouri exhibitors are concerned, was begun by the State Constitutional Convention, in session at Jefferson City, Thursday, when a proposal, which would place the screen on the same basis as the newspaper, as far as censorship is concerned, was introduced.

The proposal, introduced by A. A. Speer, would broadly widen the scope of the "freedom of the press" section of the present Missouri constitution, providing that every person shall be free to say, write or publish, either by written or printed word, or by pictures in motion, or otherwise, on any subject whatsoever, being responsible for all abuse of that liberty.

The proposal, which, in the opinion of leading Missouri politicians, will be adopted by the convention which is framing a new constitution for Missouri, is the culmination of a long standing fight on the part of the reformers to secure the passage of a censorship in the "Show Me" State. It was at the constitutional convention that the reformer mustered together his strength, hoping vainly to deal a death blow to the screen. But the best bet was overlooked. The most influential delegates at the convention, delegates who have refrained from the ballyhoo system of announcing their policies, are staunch supporters of the freedom of the screen. Among the most prominent of these delegates is Charles Morris, editor and publisher of the St. Joseph Gazette, a daily metropolitan newspaper, who recently set forth in a lengthy editorial that the public alone should be the censor.

Then, too, to make the battle more hopeless for the reformer, Attorney General Jess Barrett recently proclaimed himself as firmly opposed to any form of state censorship, involving the erecting of a needless department that merely would be a financial burden on the taxpayers of the State, and stating that the PUBLIC ALONE would discriminate between the good and bad productions.

262 New Theatres Opened in Pacific and Rocky Mountain States, According to First National Statistics received by Western officials of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., show that 262 new motion picture theatres have been opened in the Pacific and Rocky Mountain States since May, 1921.

Last year there were 1692 motion picture theatres in the eleven States. Now there are 1954 and more to come. Arizona leads with 47 new houses, Wyoming is next with 38, and California third with 34 new theatres. Three of these, with a seating capacity for 8300 people, are in San Francisco.

Following is a table showing the old and the new list of theatres in the Pacific and Rocky Mountain States:

	1921	1922
California	443	477
Oregon	163	194
Washington	282	299
Nevada	20	31
Arizona	54	93
New Mexico	38	85
Colorado	195	220
Idaho	149	158
Utah	154	156
Wyoming	30	68
Montana	164	173
Totals	1692	1954

Most of the new houses are in the downtown districts, but they do not seem to have affected residential district theatres.

Theatre Conditions in N. Y. State

Admission Prices Maintained Generally, and Most Houses Remaining Open—Survey of Situation in the Albany-Troy -Schenectady Territory

OWNERS and managers of motion picture theatres in Albany, N. Y., while admitting that business has picked up to some extent since Easter, are nevertheless not looking for any great increase much before next fall. There are two reasons why they are taking this attitude. In the first place the motion picture theatres in Albany feel the effects of hot summers, and then again the car shops in the Capital City are not employing, at the present time, their usual quota of men. This latter fact affects the so-called residential theatres, perhaps, more than the downtown houses. For instance, the Colonial Theatre, owned and operated by William Berinstein, who also operates theatres in Elmira, N. Y., depends to a large extent for his patronage on the employees of the railroad shops and their families. When these shops are running on part time the theatres almost immediately feel the effects.

No Decrease in Admission Prices

There will be no decreasing of admission prices in Albany this summer in the hopes of securing larger audiences. Proprietors and managers of houses are of one voice in declaring that it is utterly impossible for them to decrease admission prices so long as the exchanges are charging present-day prices for pictures. For instance, Fred Elliott, owner and manager of the Clinton Square Theatre, which has a seating capacity of about 1000, and who is charging a 25-cent admission, including tax, states that with the class of pictures which he is now showing he cannot clear himself on a seating capacity with anything less than a 25-cent admission charge.

"Business has picked up since Easter," said Mr. Elliott in discussing conditions, "but I am not looking for anything like the former business much before next fall."

Mr. Elliott's opinion is shared and voiced by others, including George Roberts of the Hudson Theatre, Samuel Suckno, owner of a chain of four theatres in Albany, and others whose fingers are almost always on the pulse of the public.

No new houses are planned for Albany. Business has not been good enough in the Capital City to warrant the erection of any more motion picture theatres. Mr. Elliott has had plans drawn for a house which will have a seating capacity of perhaps 1500, to be located on the site of his present establishment, but the date of construction is indefinite and will be until such time as Mr. Elliott can complete certain financial arrangements.

The largest house in the city, the Mark Strand, will continue its present policy of charging a 50-cent admission and presenting a program which will warrant the charge. While the house is not doing anything phenomenal in the way of business, it is probably making some money and has been drawing what might be termed good audiences.

No houses will be closed in Albany this summer. The managers claim that they have been able to go along up to the present time, and that any closing between now and next fall would only serve the purpose of throwing whatever patronage they may be enjoying to some other house and that they would only be losers through any such arrangement.

No Closing in Schenectady

In the neighboring city of Schenectady, where the owners of motion picture theatres have probably encountered as many lean months as any city in the entire United States, through the laying off of thousands of men in the General Electric Works, there is one new house being built at the present time. This house will be one of the Strand chain and will cost when completed in the neighborhood of $500,000. The house is one of the most ornate in the city and likewise will be the largest. Its construction is quite similar to the Mark Strand in Albany, and the program to be given will be practically identical.

None of the houses operating in Schenectady are planning to close this summer. Admission prices are to remain as at present. Some of the owners, including John Walker, of the Barcli, are rather optimistic as to the future, admitting in the same breath that they have been losing money right along because of the hard times which have prevailed in the Electric City. There is, however, every evidence of a returning business prosperity to the manufacturing establishments of that city, and in this the owners and managers of the motion picture theatres are hoping to participate.

Of the three cities comprising the Albany, Schenectady and Troy group, all closely linked by interurban car service, the Collar City (Troy) appears to be the best off of the trio. During the last few months one new house, the Palace, a residential theatre owned and operated by Battaglia Brothers, has been opened and is doing a good business. The Lincoln, owned by Symansky Brothers, a handsome theatre located in the centre of the city's business district, will be open in the early fall, the exterior having been completed and with work on the interior progressing in a favorable way. This house will be a first-run theatre and will have a seating capacity of approximately 2200. This house will have the advantage of being located within a comparatively few feet of the Rand Theatre, which was destroyed by fire some few months ago.

A new Strand, costing in the neighborhood of $500,000, is in course of erection in Troy. This house will not be finished for a number of months to come, but when completed it will rank as the largest and handsomest house in the city. Like the Schenectady Strand, it is being patterned after the Albany theatre of the same name.

Another theatre, which will be known as "Roseland," is also being erected in Troy by Rosenthal Brothers. This house, while comparatively small, will be one of the most attractive theatres in the city when finished.

Good Business in Troy

Prices of admission at all houses are not to be decreased in Troy this summer. None will be closed. The majority of the houses are making money these days, and, what is more to the point, every manager and owner is firm in his belief that better times are on the way.

for that institution. I was asking just now how one could apply for membership, and I was told you have to put your name on the waiting list.

"In the motion picture industry are two important groups. One of these is the theatre owners, represented in this city by the Chamber of Commerce, and the men with whom I am associated make another. I am proud of our industry and of the progress being made to create a greater and a coalescing industry. It is in every way representative of that substance and character which makes for the best in this state and city.

"For those producers and distributors with whom you have so much to do, with whom I am proud to be associated, for whom I am speaking on this occasion to you theatre owners, I would reiterate those suggestions which I have made heretofore and to which the members of this Chamber of Commerce have so splendidly responded—that what we need in this industry are two things, Confidence and Co-operation.

"For you in New York City not in the picture business directly or indirectly, for you who represent the wealth, the character, the integrity of the great New York and all it means do you know that the motion picture business is taken a great deal for granted? You know all about it and yet you know nothing about it.

"Do you know that where practically it din't exist twenty years ago that to-day it is probably the greatest industry in this nation when its wonderful development in the last decade is considered? It has five hundred million dollars invested, it spends annually two hundred millions in production and the public spends eight hundred millions in your theatres—a turnover of a billion dollars a year.

"This seemingly incredible achievement in an industry that is both artistic and commercial—this thing that has come like an Aladdin's lamp or dream—this accomplishment of the men who had the nerve and the vision and the capacity to make it what it is, these men who were the pioneers are to-day in control of it—and they are expected to have that industry as well organized as is the newspaper after 600 years of development. I say you can't compare the development of the motion picture industry with that of any other industry in the history of the world.

For Highest Standards

"The men who are behind the motion picture industry are not only the responsible custodians of the fourth or fifth largest industry in this country, but they are the responsible custodians potentially of moral and educational influences the like of which there are not in this world to-day. The men in this business to-day aim to do two things—to establish and then to maintain the highest possible moral and artistic standard of motion picture production and then to develop it to the highest possible degree of educational as well as general usefulness. What does that mean to the commonwealth? It is just as much to your interest, you men outside of the industry, as to ours to help in this business.

"The motion picture to-day is absolutely the chief entertainment of the great majority of our people and the sole entertainment of millions and millions. That is a fine subject for consideration. You can't over-estimate the importance of this thing.

"I feel very deeply about it. It is a cause, and to that cause I have brought, such as it is, and laid down all that I have. I do feel it very deeply—and I know that I am repeating—but it is a cause that merits the very best consideration from every one.

"Very early in my work in this industry—some two or three months ago—it seemed to me that the greatest, the first thing, to be attended to was the relation with that great group the exhibitors, the owners of the screens in the country.

"Through the courtesy of your Chamber of Commerce I was invited to a luncheon. I found there had not been quite as much co-operation up to date as there might have been and I tried to say to these men there was a new day, and that it was here. They took that suggestion from the producers, that we will agree there are no yesterdays, that we will sit on the same side of the table.

"Of course, I am the friend of Senator Walker. I respect you as a man (turning to the Senator), and I know men. I have got that much out of a pretty active life. This is all I have got, and I appreciate you as a man. In the two or three short months I have known you, Jimmie Walker, I have come to regard you as a friend.

"What I was most anxious to bring to the minds of the exhibitors was the period of no yesterdays. I got the encouragement from you, Senator, which at that stage of the proceedings meant more to me than anything that could possibly have happened. I will never forget it.

"On behalf of my associates I bring the same earnest expressions as were uttered by the chairman of the exhibitors' committee—the highest possible regard from these men with whom I am associated, of their friendship for you, and their appreciation for what you have done and will continue to do for your industry."

De Wolf Hopper told some funny stories, and then recited "Casey at the Bat," to the great delight of the crowd.

In introducing Congressman Landis of Indiana, Mr. Smith took occasion to register opposition to censorship as a political principle. "There are, however," he declared, "some strong arguments behind censorship. It is better to break down those arguments than to decry censorship as a political principle. The great majority of people in this country want that which teaches a clean lesson. Success is won by cleanliness of heart."

Mr. Landis, who is a playwright as well as a public official, declared that the fight against censorship could only be won by a campaign of education in the country towns. "Tell them the truth about your business," he urged.

Co-operation Is Keynote at Walker Dinner

"They will give you fair play if you conduct a campaign of education. It is unthinkable that a great business like this should be halted and inspected at every state line. Appeal to the common sense and justice of the people of this country and you will win. I wish you Godspeed in your fight against censorship."

Tommy Gray gave one of his inimitable monologues and then Senator Walker was introduced. He received a remarkable ovation which lasted several minutes.

Walker's Speech

"You know I am always against this dinner thing," the Senator began, "but I wish I could make you believe how very proud I am to-night of this gathering.

"In the last two and a half or perhaps three years since I became associated with some of the men in and became so absolutely infatuated with the motion picture business, have learned to believe so absolutely in it, that I gave myself over to it completely. I have given the best that was in this poor frame and dedicated it to the motion picture business. There was something that drew me to it.

"They tell you that the motion picture caters to the millions but they don't know how true that is." Mr. Walker here referred to the district which he represents in Albany and enumerated some of the nationalities from which its population is drawn—"a veritable league of nations," he declared. "In a theatre in my district, although many in the house might not understand the language in which the titles were written, yet there is not one of them who cannot understand what is depicted on the screen—the only universal language of the world, a screen made by the motion picture business. (Applause.)

"So after two and a half or three years, as against my own personal interests—and I don't say this, if you will permit me to employ a theatrical phrase to play to the gallery, but just as a matter of fact—I gave myself over to that industry. It didn't mean so much, but the response that came from the men in it brought to me more satisfaction than has any other association with which I have been identified except that of official public life.

"I have been very glad to-night about this dinner—you know it has been just a bit different. If all the men had just talked about Walker I know how unentertaining that would have been. But with Hopper and Gray talking to you and elevating your spirits for the moment you will go away feeling that you had simply come for the paying of respect to one you may like but that you had been entertained.

"I love this business. I have made up my mind I am going through with it, and whatever I can contribute to it I am going to give with a determination that cannot be stopped. I am going to get some place for the good of the industry if not for the good of Walker.

"I see about me to-night many public men, men who have devoted themselves to public service, and I see many men in the motion picture business. Men in the motion picture business will forgive me if I say my first thought is for men in public life.

"I came here to-night with no well-thought-out speech. My only thought is the one I have just tried to describe. My friends in the motion picture business have made me feel as though there is a great deal between the men in public life and the men in the motion picture business."

The Senator here appealed for more consideration on the part of producers for the men who give their lives to public service to put a stop to the besmirching of the character of men in government employ. He quoted the toastmaster as an example of men who in their public and also private life have done so much to uphold the standards of citizenship. Also he referred to Will Hays in the same connection.

"At a dinner which I recently attended," went on the Senator, "I said I was willing to sit at Will Hays' feet and accept his mental prescriptions while I preferred to take my physical prescriptions from some one who followed a different diet. For that statement I was criticized exceedingly and references were made to professional politicians.

"I was glad when Will Hays came into the industry. It was a compliment when a man laid down a portfolio in the President's cabinet and gave his all to the industry. Now I repeat, and motion picture men will understand this, that Will Hays has got to get a bigger pair of shoes for all the men who are willing to sit at his feet.

"I wish the men in public life knew the men in the motion picture business and that the men in the picture business knew the men in public life—knew them in all relations just as I do.

"Do you realize that in this State we have 1200 motion picture theatres. Throughout the country we have approximately something like 15,000. Did anyone ever stop to think of the investment that is represented by those 15,000 theatres? It amounts in the billions as you must know.

"In justice to the theatres I want to tell you that in New York State alone in the last ten years the United Booking Offices, which makes up the Keith Circuit, the Fox theatres and the Loew theatres, have paid over $400,000 in insurance premiums with a loss of $2500. Can you imagine what it means throughout the country, with all your taxes on the theatre, there has not been a fire in a theatre since the Iroquois excepting the little one in New Haven? Then bear in mind that in addition to the millions invested the theatre in the small town is frequently the only institution to which the attention of the visitor will be called. I say for these reasons I want the public men that I know to know the motion picture industry.

What Industry Really Is

"I don't want these men to think that the only persons in the motion picture business are the ones of whom they read in the headlines of the newspapers. I want them to know they are men of integrity, that it is an industry to which has been attracted the best executives in this country.

"It is to this industry I have cast my lot, an industry second in my opinion only to public life. I had promised myself when I came in here to-night not to say anything but to thank you for your presence, but I do desire to make you understand this business that is so irresistible. I ask you men as you go out of this room to carry out a better understanding of the business and of the desires of its men for real accomplishments.

"To motion picture men I want to say my congratulations go to General Hays and the exhibitors," continued the Senator. "The producer and the distributor got together and they called Will Hays and he has made wonderful progress. It is fine that we have been able to sit down with Will Hays to readjust our differences, at least we have got to the place where we may hope that they will be adjusted." Then followed Senator Walker's announcement of the invitation from First National.

The News of the Week

Selznick Abandons Star Series Plan

LEWIS J. SELZNICK, champion of the motion picture "Star" as an attraction par excellence at theatres where photoplays are shown, has abandoned the star series production plan.

No more will "Selznick stars" be made to stand out pre-eminently, over and above story and production value, in pictures made by Selznick Pictures Corporation or by other producing units identified with Select Pictures Corporation whose destinies Mr. Selznick controls.

No more will photoplay attractions distributed by Mr. Selznick and his Select organization be offered to exhibitors with their guarantee of excellence based only upon the reputation of a photoplayer who has been made a favorite with the public.

"It is not that I love Caesar less but that I love Rome more, about expresses my position in this matter of production," says Mr. Selznick. "The present Select organization has been serving exhibitors for about six years. During that time there has been an almost revolutionary change in the general conduct of the motion picture business insofar as it has to do with the contact of the general public with the photoplay. The past few years have been the era of bigger and more expensive motion picture programs. The construction of palatial theatres and the installation of shows that compare favorably in cost with those offered in any other branch of the amusement business has become the rule. This development has tended to centralize the exhibiting business. The smaller theatres in the outlying, or neighborhood, communities where 'good' pictures and nothing else once sufficed to make them profitable are less numerous than they were. People have contracted the habit of traveling farther for their motion picture entertainment than was formerly their custom. It has followed quite naturally, then, that motion picture men—producers, distributors, and exhibitors, have been brought to see the desirability of giving the public something which can be announced in a manner calculated to make them 'travel.' The big strength of the unsupported star idea lay in the developing of the popularity of a star and his plays among people who might be expected to attend the same theatre day after day or week after week and adding constantly to this following, in numbers, day after day and week after week, taking advantage of cumulative advertising. Since it has become the tendency of audiences to shift from one section to another it is easy to see that the draft of the star name, unsupported by story and production appeal, has been materially weakened.

"Of more importance insofar as the Select interests are concerned, however, is the development of the producing units who may be counted upon to contribute largely to the product which it distributes, notably the Selznick Pictures Corporation.

"Selznick Pictures Corporation have had a definite objective ever since the first day of their existence. My son Myron, president of the company and actively in charge of its affairs, has been steadily planning a series of productions so big and important that from their very nature, they could not be restricted by the limitations of the star idea as it is generally understood. It has always been his desire to choose for production the type of stories he believes the motion picture public wants and then make them in the manner they should be made. It is no damaging confession to say that this is not always possible when the human limitations of motion picture stars identified with any individual company are considered, and when that company is partial, if not bound, to a small group of stars which it may have under contract.

"And so, in planning for the season of 1922-23, we find conditions ideal for cutting away from our earlier policy—a policy we still consider a splendid one but, nevertheless, a policy which both the Select Company and the industry at large have outgrown. We are going to make a limited number of productions—fewer than we have made in any previous year of our existence, but we're going to make them of the nature that folks will 'travel' far to see. We're going to abandon the 'star idea'—but only as it has come to be known to the trade. And by this we mean that we're going to give the story and production their full chance, ourselves holding them as of first importance and choosing such casts from the field at large as we think best suited for them.

"Nothing which I have said can possibly be taken to mean that it is not our intention to take full and complete advantage of the popularity which certain artists on the screen have created for themselves through their splendid work. It has always been our conviction that the real 'star' of the industry—and the only ones who may be expected to live long enough to make them worth while from the producer and distributor's standpoint—have a just claim upon the public's affections in that they have 'delivered the goods.' We're going to choose this particular type of artist for all of our pictures in the future—and we're going to star them—not because our business arrangements with them make it materially worth while for either their future or ours, but because their performances or their draft at the exhibitor's box office warrants it, and because they approach perfection in the parts for which we have selected them. As a proof of this I might say, that in planning for next year, we have already definitely set on eight of the productions to be made and for four of these productions leading players, including at least ten who are stars of the first magnitude, have been engaged. Each production we make will have 'stars'—not a star—for the exhibitor to bill—but it will have a real story and production reason for the appearance of the star members of the cast.

"Elaine Hammerstein and Owen Moore, whose productions we have been proud to offer for the past two or three years, will continue to appear exclusively in Selznick Pictures, the firms general policy governing the manner in which they will be used from time to time."

The company's detailed announcement pertaining to the season of 1922-23 is expected to be released soon.

Associated Exhibitors Declare Another 2 Per Cent Dividend

Following a meeting of the board of directors of Associated Exhibitors, June 20th, it was announced that a dividend of 2 per cent on the preferred stock, for the second quarter of the calendar year 1922, had been declared. The quarter ends June 30th and the dividend is payable in the first week of July.

This is the second quarterly dividend which has been declared since Arthur S. Kane took active charge of Associated Exhibitors, March 6th of this year. The dividend for the first quarter was declared April 16th and paid April 20th.

"The Storm" Is Acclaimed As a Screen Classic

The Storm, Universal's Jewel screen production of Langdon McCormick's celebrated stage drama, had its premiere presentation this week in the Capitol Theatre, New York City.

Despite the fact it had only a fraction of the advance advertising and publicity given to Universal's other 1922 picture, Foolish Wives, says the announcement, The Storm is running close to the box-office records established at the Capitol by the former picture.

The critic of the New York World said it was a screen classic. In part, he wrote the following opinion:

"One of the greatest works of screen art of the year is The Storm, a Universal-Jewel production, at the Capitol this week. Paens of thanksgiving are due Reginald Barker, director, and the three principals of the cast of six, Virginia Valli, House Peters and Matt Moore. They have produced one of the classics of the cinema.

"A usually non-exuberant reviewer checks himself to guard against rapturous extravagance. Were any of the scenes underplayed or overplayed? No. Did the photographer dominate the director? No; not even a furious snowstorm and a raging forest fire were given undue length. Were the titles ever grandiose or mawkish or trifling? No, not once. If one were a Senegalese and this picture were being seen by him in Timbuctoo, without a musical accompaniment, would he be extraordinarily moved? Yes; this is a work of fine art and it will have vigor in any land and any time.

"By her performance in The Storm, Virginia Valli takes rank with the very first of screen actresses. House Peters as the woodsman and Matt Moore as the city friend lived their roles with the same truth that gives big life to every inch of this film."

The picture impressed reviewers from other papers much the same.

Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, presenting loving cup to Edward Laemmle

Large Silver Loving Cup Presented to Edward Laemmle

One of the most interesting ceremonies of the summer took place last week in Carl Laemmle's office, when he personally presented to his nephew, Edward Laemmle, a gigantic silver cup in recognition of his services to the company. Carl Laemmle only recently was the recipient of a cup presented by E. L. Crandall of the Board of Education of the City of New York as the pioneer producer of educational serials. Inasmuch as Edward Laemmle was the director of this pioneer serial, Winners of the West, and the director of In the Days of Buffalo Bill, a serial which, when released in the fall, will be a revelation of what can be done along those lines, Mr. Laemmle thought it only fitting that this service, too, should be fittingly recognized by the company and its president.

The heads of departments were invited informally into Mr. Laemmle's office and there witnessed a short but extremely heartfelt expression of pride and appreciation.

"Edward," said Mr. Laemmle, "oftentimes I wish I had been born with the gift of words. This is one of those times. You have brought honor on the name of Laemmle and have made me very proud of you. You have more than fulfilled my expectations and my hopes. You conducted our most successful over-seas expedition and on the eve of another expedition I want you to know in some substantial way how much we, as a company, and I, as an individual, appreciate what you have done in producing two such wonderful serials as Winners of the West and In the Days of Buffalo Bill. Furthermore we want you to realize fully the confidence we have in you in this important expedition which we are putting in your hands. We fully expect that you will bring back a super-Jewel with you from Europe."

Mr. Laemmle then called on Paul Gulick to say a few words as touching the interest that the various heads of departments in the room had in the cup that was being presented.

"Mr. Laemmle has a personal interest in you," said Mr. Gulick, "an interest of blood that none of us can have. Our interest is entirely one of admiration in your accomplishments and appreciation of work that is so salable and so thoroughly commendable as Winners of the West and In the Days of Buffalo Bill. We wish as heads of departments to join our chief in all the felicitations of the occasion and to add our heartiest appreciation of the honor which has been conferred on you by sending you to Europe.

"Most people would consider that you were born a fortunate person to be so closely related to the president of a big film company. You are fortunate. But I am here to testify that you have earned every bit of success that has come to you. With some uncles it might have been possible for a young man like you with ambition to become a director to accomplish it in a few months. Such an uncle would have made you an assistant to a good, safe director and as soon as you knew an iris out from a close up made you a director. Not so Carl Laemmle. He sent you into Universal City to work and to get ahead on your own merits, not his name. Four years of every kind of work about a studio have given you an insight into picture making enjoyed by very few men. If anything could have dampened your ardor, to direct some of the jobs you were given to do would have knocked your ambition into a cocked hat.

"We are mighty proud of your perseverance. We are proud of the way you won every step in the ladder of fame you are mounting. We are glad to see that the ladder is very high and that it leads to a conspicuous and honored place. We have followed with interest your Cannibal Expedition, we were amazed and overjoyed at your success as a short subject director and at your triumphs in Winners of the West and In the Days of Buffalo Bill, and finally we realize how much real manhood and character is required of a man to succeed as a director in a company where he has performed every subordinate office.

"As a director, we are glad to do you honor, as a friend we are proud to shake your hand, and to have a part in this cup, though we may not be able to fill it in a deserving manner."

The handshakings were continued on the White Star dock when the huge Majestic sailed. An illness induced by nervous exhaustion prevented Edward Laemmle from sailing, but he was at the dock to bid good-bye to Carl Laemmle, who sailed on his annual vacation in Europe. He will follow next week.

Pathe News Cameraman "Shoots" Victoria Falls

South Africa, and its natural wonders, only recently made accessible to tourists, are not too remote to be covered by the Pathe News cameraman. Issue No. 39 contains a generous succession of thrills furnished through the daring of the photographer in "shooting close-ups" of Victoria Falls, South Africa, from the wings of an airplane.

These exclusive pictures are correspondingly valuable and impressive—as though the spectator himself were floating about in the spray-filled air viewing at close quarters, from every angle, the marvels discovered by Livingston Rhodes, the African "empire-builder."

No tourist will ever get the variety of sensations felt by those who view these pictures.

"One Clear Call" Wins Praise of N. Y. Newspapers

One Clear Call, the John M. Stahl production which is being released by First National, opened at the Strand Theatre, New York, for a week's run on June 18, and played to crowded houses. This picture, based on the book of the same name by Frances Nimmo Greene, has an unusual cast, in which are Milton Sills, Claire Windsor, Henry B. Walthall, Irene Rich and Joseph Dowling.

Commenting on the showing at the Strand, the motion picture critic of the New York American writes:

"Heart interest is what John M. Stahl evidently sought when he produced One Clear Call, and he surely got it. The picture is one of the most interesting of the kind presented in a long while."

Harriette Underhill, in the Tribune, begins by expressing it as her belief that Claire Windsor is "nearly as beautiful" as Katherine MacDonald, and says:

"One Clear Call is very clear, indeed, and it ought to be extremely entertaining to all people who enjoy pictures because they move." Other comments are as follows:

World—There are several situations that tighten the throat.

Morning Telegraph—One Clear Call can demand the attention of any fan on two counts. One is the splendid acting of Henry Walthall. The other is the equally gratifying performance of Milton Sills. One Clear Call is excellent entertainment.

Johnnie Walker Picture Will Be Released by F. B. O.

Johnnie Walker, one of the featured players in the police picture, In the Name of the Law, will be seen in a drama of the Northwest, which the Film Booking Offices, the newly-named Robertson-Cole Distributing Corporation, has acquired for release some time in July. The picture has been titled My Dad, and features Walker and Ruth Clifford.

My Dad affords the popular young player who rose to fame in Over the Hill a new type of role. No picture in which Walker has hitherto appeared, states R-C, has given him a part calling for such virile action.

My Dad was directed by Clifford Smith, who also adapted the story to the screen. It will be issued by the Film Booking Offices with a complete exploitation campaign.

Walker has just reached the R-C studios in California, where he will start production in the near future on a series of pictures for release through the Film Booking Offices.

Cabanne Finishes Filming of New Feature Production

W. Christy Cabanne, the director, has finished the filming of Fulfillment, the working title of a production which is being made for Morris Kohn. In the cast are Mae Marsh, Norman Kerry, Walter Miller, Martha Mansfield, J. Barney Sherry and Julia Swayne Gordon. The cameramen were Billy Tuers and Philip Armand.

Mr. Cabanne is now engaged in cutting the picture.

N. Y. Clergymen Give Praise to "Nero," Fox Film

Fox Film Corporation announces it has been the daily recipient of letters from prominent clergymen, school teachers, business men, editors, and publishers expressing praise for Nero, the Fox super-special production for the season of 1922-23, which is now in the fifth week of an indefinite run at the Lyric Theatre, New York City.

"A feature of all the commendatory testimonials is based on the constructive educational and amusement value of the super-picture, which was produced in Rome under the supervision of William Fox and the direction of J. Gordon Edwards. Despite the necessarily important religious trend of the story of ancient Rome, ministers of all denominations have lauded the manner in which the subject has been handled and the great moral value of this superb spectacle," says the announcement.

Among the New York clergymen who have written their encomium are Rev. J. R. Henry, pastor of the Church of All Nations; Rev. Dr. John G. Benson, pastor of the Union Church; Rev. Dr. George Adams, pastor of the Reformed Episcopal Church; Rev. Dr. F. B. Upham, pastor of Old St.. John Street Church; Rev. Dr. D. O. Osterheld, pastor of the Cornerstone Temple, Brooklyn; Rev. Dr. Harry Knight Miller, pastor of the Hanson Place Church, Brooklyn; Rev. Norman W. Twiddy of the St. James Methodist Episcopal Church, Brooklyn, and numerous others.

"In the Name of the Law" Opens July 9

In the Name of the Law, the R-C special, will be released early in the fall throughout the country, will open for a pre-release run at the George M. Cohan Theatre, at Forty-third Street and Broadway, New York City, on Sunday, July 9. The announcement of this picture and its Broadway run some time in July was made to the trade last week.

With an enlarged corps of exploitation men, R-C Pictures has prepared forty-one separate and distinct ideas with which In the Name of the Law will be exploited. Each of these, state R-C officials, will be entirely original and so varied frrom the conventional exploitation stunts that they will be of unfailing appeal.

An elaborate presentation will be afforded the picture at the Cohan theatre, which will undergo a number of changes to make it perfectly suitable for the showing of motion pictures. The feature is scheduled for an indefinite run.

O. F. Woody Is Appointed Los Angeles Select Manager

O. F. Woody, who was recently appointed branch manager at Los Angeles, is one man who is mighty glad to be back with the Select organization.

Manager Woody was a member of the house of Selznick back in 1919, as head of the Denver branch, and as a token of appreciation at being back in the fold he has started off on a sales drive which he promises will get results.

Sees Upward Trend in Industry

Many Big Picture Houses Soon to Be Built Show Prosperity Coming, Says John J. McGuirk

John J. McGuirk, one of the best-known motion picture men in Pennsylvania, has succeeded Harry M. Crandall of Washington, D. C., as a member of the First National rotating committee, and will serve for two weeks in this position.

Mr. McGuirk came to New York with some highly optimistic reports as to the outlook for motion pictures from the building angle.

"I believe we are on the eve of excellent times," he said. "It is my opinion that the big change in the motion picture situation will be in full swing by October or November. Let's look at the situation from an ordinary business point of view.

John J. McGuirk

"In the first place, business in all lines is getting better. There is more of a demand for labor. And when you get that demand you have healthy times. For a considerable period there was a slump in the building of big motion picture houses. Why? The high cost of labor and material. But these costs now are coming down. Facts and figures are the big things in business. Let's consider the following facts:

"Next week the Stanley company begins breaking ground at Eleventh and Market streets in Philadelphia, on the site of the Bingham Hotel, for a structure to cost in the neighborhood of $4,500,000. This structure will have the finest type of motion picture theatre, seating almost 3400 people. It will be a combination office building and motion picture house, and its front will contain seven stores. The theatre ought to be in operation within ten months.

"In the very near future work will be started in Philadelphia on a $400,000 theatre on North Broad Street, in the Logan section, and a $250,000 structure will be erected at Woodland Avenue and Sixty-third Street.

"In all of this building activity there is great encouragement everywhere. People who sink millions of dollars into a house don't do it on an over-night decision. The fact that all of this work is being planned for Philadelphia alone shows the tremendous confidence that exists in motion pictures. And it shows an even more important point, which is that the industrial world is beginning to reach a normal level."

Rothacker Will Make Trip to England

Watterson R. Rothacker, head of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company of Chicago, was a visitor to New York this week on important business. Mr. Rothacker announced he would sail for England about July 9 to be awav for some weeks in connection with business matters abroad. He returned to Chicago on the Century June 19.

The Rothacker New York offices have been moved from 220 West Forty-Second Street to Room 118, 542 Fifth Avenue.

George Levine Promoted to Be Universal Short Product Mgr.

Following the appointment of Art A. Schmidt as general sales manager of the Universal, announcement is made of several other promotions and changes in the exchange system and the home office.

To fill the vacancy caused by the promotion of Mr. Schmidt, George L. Levine, formerly manager of the Universal exchange at Milwaukee, has been promoted to manager of the short product, with offices at 1600 Broadway. Mr. Levine's place in Milwaukee will be taken by Ross J. Baldwin, formerly short production manager in Milwaukee. Mr. Baldwin has been with the firm a number of years. He will be succeeded in his former position by Charles J. Casanave.

Another promotion is that of LeRoy W. Alexander, for four years salesman and more recently short product manager of the Chicago exchange, to be exchange manager of the Kansas City territory. "Curly" Calvert has been taken from that exchange to do special work in a number of central and western exchanges. At the same time, announcement was made in Chicago of the appointment of auditor of the exchange, Platzman, to be European auditor of the company.

Cites Error in Title of New Arliss Picture

Arthur S. Friend of Distinctive Productions announces that a New York press item has caused photoplay editors in various sections of the country to erroneously name the forthcoming George Arliss production The Silent Call. The new Arliss subject for United Artists release is an adaptation of The Silent Voice, Jules Eckert Goodman's play. Distinctive has been seeking a play for Mr. Arliss for more than a year, and the Goodman play was finally purchased. There is a picture entitled The Silent Call, which was released some time ago.

George Arliss completed his scenes in The Silent Voice last week and left for England on board the Mauretania for a summer rest abroad. Ann Forrest, leading woman in this production, is also going to England for a vacation.

"Nanook" Wins Newspaper Praise

New York Critics Commend Pathe's Arctic Feature—Rothafel Classes It As One of Four Most Distinctive Features

"I consider Nanook of the North the greatest sensation of this season," declared S. L. Rothafel, following the premiere of the big Pathe feature at the Capitol Theatre. "It ranks as one of the four most distinctive pictures I have ever run at the Capitol Theatre. There is more drama in it than the so-called dramatic features and it has a suspense which has a spell-binding power. It is truly the marvel photoplay of the North from every standpoint of photography, beauty, laughter and extraordinary human interest. Pathe is to be commended for their remarkable vision in procuring this subject, I am proud to have run Nanook of the North at my theatre."

The New York Times devoted considerable space in its news columns, commenting on the merit of the picture as follows: "* * * But Nanook of the North, also seeking of reality is real on the screen. The struggles they have are real struggles. When Nanook, the master hunter, matches himself against a walrus, there is no pretense about the contest. Nanook's life depends upon his killing the walrus, and it is by no means certain that he will kill him. So the spectator watches Nanook, as a man engaged in a real life-and-death struggle. And how much more thrilling the sight is than that of a 'battle' between two well-paid actors firing blank cartridges at each other. Nanook is emphatically a leader, a man who does things, a man who wins, but who, at any moment, may lose. He is a genuine hero then, one who is watched with alert interest and suspense and far-reaching imagination. What 'dramatic' photoplay can show such a one?"

The New York Evening Mail comments: "Nanook of the North is one of the most appealing, absorbingly interesting films it has been our pleasure to see in years."

Of Nanook of the North, the New York Herald states: "Whether due to the insight of Robert J. Flaherty or to the arrangement of the adapters who edited it for presentation, there is a most powerful thematic feeling running all through the picture, ending with inspired appropriateness with scenes of dogs howling in the bleak wilderness as a storm comes on, and then dropping off to sleep, too tired to do anything but freeze."

The New York World comments as follows: "Nanook of the North at the Capitol is a surprise picture. It's a screen classic as sure as Maupassant's 'One Life' is a literary classic."

"Talk about atmosphere in photo-drama!" writes Joseph Mulvaney in the New York American. "There is more atmosphere to the cubic centimeter around Nanook of the North than ever was compressed into the same space in the previous history of the screen."

Tom Terriss to Produce Features in England

Tom Terriss, film director, is sailing for England on the Olympic this Saturday. He will make a series of productions on the other side for joint distribution in England and America. Arrangements for American distribution have been completed, and those for English release are awaiting only the signing of the dotted line, after which the names of the releasing companies in both cases will be made public. This will be done probably as soon as Mr. Terriss lands in England.

England is the director's home, although he has not been in it for nine years.

Complete Cast for "The Tentmaker" Is Announced

Besides Guy Bates Post in the title role of Omar the Tentmaker, the current Richard Walton Tully production, the cast contains several names of real stellar quality and covers considerable territory both artistically and geographically.

Nigel De Brulier, whose success as a character actor came with his portrayal of the Stranger in The Four Horsemen, will play Nizam, the friend of Omar. He was born in France, educated there and has had a variety of stage experience of note.

Rose Dione, another established character player of French extraction, will be the Shah's mother. At the age of fifteen she made her debut with Sarah Bernhardt in Les Mauvis Bergers. Soon thereafter she starred with her own company.

Douglas Gerrard, director and actor, will create for the screen the role of Hassan, the villain of Omar. Gerrard is especially remembered for his direction of Metro and Universal pictures. His most recent engagement has been in the production of Blood and Sand.

Evelyn Selbie plays another important role, that of Zarah, the confidante and protectress of Shireen. She has played eleven years in stock companies in New York, Philadelphia, San Francisco and San Diego.

Boris Karloff will be the Iman Mowaffak in Omar. This is the role of the wise and aged teacher. He was born in Russia.

Patsy Ruth Miller, charming young film actress for Goldwyn and Fox pictures will be little Shireen and Will Jim Hatton plays Mahruss, the childhood playmate of Shireen. This young actor will be recalled in his role with Bill Hart in The Whistle.

The feminine lead will be played by Virginia Brown Faire and James Young will direct this Tully production which is being made at the United Studios, Hollywood. Wilfred Buckland is art director and Georges Benoit is cinematographer.

25,000 "Extras" Reported Used in Fairbanks Picture

When there came a settling down to a statistical contemplation of facts and figures in connection with the record-breaking photoplay production, Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood, which Douglas Fairbanks is now producing as his most ambitious starring vehicle, a series of surprises was inevitable.

"For instance," says the announcement, "in the course of the many weeks required for filming this tremendously big romantic screen drama of the Twelfth Century, it was found that a total of about 25,000 different persons will have been given at least one full day's employment each in various supernumerary capacities, and that many of these will have worked for several weeks. On the banner day for "extras," when the great jousting contests were enacted and filmed, 1800 men and women were used, and few days found less than a hundred doing their "bits" before Allan Dwan's battery of cameras.

Hope Hampton Filming Retakes

Hope Hampton, First National star, is engaged filming some retakes at the Paragon Studio, Fort Lee, for her latest picture, The Light in the Dark, which is scheduled for early fall release. This film contains a reel in Eastman Kodak color.

N. H. Gordon Gets Studded Watch from Cooperative Exhibitors

As a token of appreciation of his faithful and meritorious service with Associated First National Pictures, Inc., N. H. Gordon of Boston this week received from his fellow members of the co-operative organization a specially designed and jewel-studded watch. Mr. Gordon's work with First National and his practical counsel have played an important part in developing the affairs of the organization and his services as an executive committeeman during the last two years have proved of inestimable value to the company. Following is the text of a resolution passed by the Executive Committee:

Whereas, by the generous dedication of his experienced business acumen, judgment, loyalty and vision, Mr. Nathan H. Gordon, of Boston, Mass., has contributed greatly to the position of pre-eminence which Associated First National Pictures enjoys to-day, and to the furtherance of First National ideals, and

Whereas, the unavoidable demands upon Mr.

N. H. Gordon

Gordon's time and energies by his own theatres and interests in New England make it necessary for him to decline the honor of re-election as a member of the Executive Committee to the sincere regret of his associates, although he still remains one of the pillars of First National, as one of the five Voting Trustees and as a Director, and

Whereas, for more than three years Mr. Gordon has served this company without compensation, giving freely and without stint of his time, experience, judgment and energies for the advancement of its interests, success and future, now, therefore

Be it resolved by the Executive Committee of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., that it express to Mr. Gordon the sentiment in the mind and heart of each of his fellow members by recording here their profound and lasting gratitude for the loyalty and splendid service that he has volunteered, many times to the neglect of his more personal interests, and further, the hope that he will in the future, as he has in the past, make available that guiding influence, practical counsel, and substantial advice which have been of such benefit in the past, so that with his associates, collectively, First National may continue to advance and mature the best interests of the motion picture industry and particularly the welfare of exhibitors, and that as a slight token of the appreciation and gratitude of First National and of the sincere friendship of all those in First National who have the privilege of Mr. Gordon's acquaintance, he be requested to accept the accompanying symbol of the spirit of this resolution.

"Padding Must Go", Says Laemmle

Shorter Serials, Improved Advertising Material, Employment of Noted Writers and Feature Stars in Chapter-Plays a Few of Innovations Promised by Universal

For the first time in the history of serial production, chapter-plays will be filmed without recourse to padding, says Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Co. Serials will be of no prescribed length—if there is only material enough for six episodes, they will be produced in six episodes; if there is sufficient "meat" in the script for ten or twelve episodes, they will be produced in those lengths.

"I firmly believe the sooner we make our chapter-plays conform strictly to the unpadded value of the story," he said prior to his departure for Europe last week, "the better it will be for the industry in general. Years and years of experiment have convinced the magazines that serial stories running longer than six installments are not wanted. They lose their force. The same is true of chapter-plays.

"No story I have ever read was strong enough to carry for eighteen weeks—magazines no longer even attempt to find such material. One of our greatest difficulties has been to find good serial stories. We have rejected hundreds of submitted scenarios because they did not contain material enough for eighteen episodes. Making short serials will revolutionize the production end of the industry and throw open a brand-new field for serial material to us. In future, when we make a serial, we shall eliminate all 'hokum.' Chapter-plays will be made in their natural length, and if we film a classic in episode form, it will be the original story without one foot of extraneous material injected to obtain footage.

"Being able to select better stories, we won't have to rely on elaborate sets, expensive stunts and other irrelevant matter to put the chapter-play over. All the money formerly spent on these items will now go to buy better stories and higher class stars. Instead of acrobats we shall have actors—insuring a marked advance in the acting seen in serials. Stars with feature followings will appear in our forthcoming serials, insuring exhibitors increased attendance. Harry Myers, William Desmond, Roy Stewart, Art Acord and Laura La Plante are some of the feature stars who will appear in Universal chapter-plays next season.

"Chapter-plays will gain in prestige by being shortened. Many theatres, particularly those catering to transient patronage, will be able to run the new-type serial as features; a six-episode serial can be presented as two six-reel features; a nine-episode chapter-play can be shown as three features of six-reel length. This new policy will give us a far more elastic proposition than we now have, and will mean an entire change in selling methods. The releasing angle will no longer be the controlling factor—chapter-plays will be made solely on their merits. This phase of the industry, built up on yard-stick methods, will completely revolutionize the selling end of the serial business."

J. Irving Greene Weds

J. Irving Greene, director of advertising and publicity for Associated Exhibitors, Inc., was married at noon Thursday, June 22, to Miss Millicent Hoagland. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Hoagland, Stamford, N. Y.

Mr. Greene, a graduate of Brown University, entered the advertising end of the picture business seven years ago and has been in the industry continuously, except for two years when he served as a lieutenant in the A. E. F.

Charles Ray Finishes First United Artists Film

Camera work is finished on A Tailor Made Man, Charles Ray's screen version of the stage play of the same name, and first of the photoplays Mr. Ray is to make for United Artists.

Work on assembling, cutting and titling A Tailor Made Man already is well under way. It will be released in the early fall.

Mary Against "Personal Appearances"

Miss Pickford Believes They Will Become Less Popular with Each Succeeding Season

Contrary to the recently-announced belief of many motion picture stars, Mary Pickford declares that "personal appearances" of stars will soon lose popularity, will become less popular with each succeeding season, and, further, that the general public will be just as pleased to see the idea pass into the permanent discard.

Recently there has been wide discussion of the idea of photoplay stars making personal appearances at theatres showing pictures in which they are featured. Several prominent screen players have predicted in interviews that the day was at hand when practically every star would be compelled to "go on the road" with each new feature, arguing that this plan would remove any seeming indifference among the masses of theatre-goers caused by the monotony of seeing only moving shadows of their favorites.

Miss Pickford, who is now busily completing her revival of Tess of the Storm Country, which she plans to have ready for early fall release through United Artists, asserts that the time will never come when the screen star will be required to parade herself, or himself, before, between or after the reels in which his or her likeness is shown in dramatic animation.

Miss Pickford argues to the effect that the silent drama came into its own through its power and influence as an art independent of the personal equation, citing the fact that its value as entertainment is dependent entirely upon visualization for which neither words nor personal bows are needed.

Film Man Legislative Candidate

J. J. Thompson, Jr., New York representative for George Kleine, pioneer in the motion picture industry, has been nominated for the New Jersey State Assembly on the Republican ticket. Mr. Thompson, who resides in Bloomfield, is one of the nominees from Essex County, which comprises Newark, Montclair and other representative cities.

Rapid Progress Is Reported by Lichtman Corp.

Things are humming merrily at 576 Fifth Avenue, where the Al Lichtman Corporation has established its Headquarters. The offices are being remodelled, and, to the tune of carpenter's saws and hammers, the office force is reported struggling with the heavy correspondence evoked by recent advertisements and trade announcements.

Although it is only a short time since the first publicity was given to this new organization, Mr. Lichtman states that they have received many letters, particularly from exhibitors, voicing approval of the Territorial Partner method of distribution.

There appears to be a general sentiment among exhibitors, according to their letters, to the effect that it is distinctly to their individual advantage to secure pictures from men who are directly interested in the success of their product, as is the case with Territorial Partners.

"We are being congratulated on every side on the excellence of our cast in Rich Men's Wives, our first preferred pictures production," says Mr. Lichtman. "Mr. Schulberg has been particularly fortunate in his selections and I know we are going to have a fine box office attraction to offer exhibitors in this picture."

The development of the new organization is going forward rapidly and practically all Territorial Partners have already been designated or will be in the near future.

William H. Swanson, Veteran Exhibitor, Passes Away

William H. Swanson, a prominent motion picture exhibitor and a First National franchise-holder, died of pneumonia Monday, June 19, at his home in Salt Lake City.

Mr. Swanson, in the early days of the industry, was interested in the Universal Film Manufacturing Co. and was in the supply business. Next he formed a partnership with Mr. Nolan in the firm of Swanson & Nolan. Shortly afterward the firm became original First National franchise-holders for the Colorado, Utah, New Mexico and south Idaho territory. The partnership was dissolved by mutual consent, and Mr. Nolan continued as the original franchise-holder for that territory, while Mr. Swanson operated the American Theatre, Salt Lake City, as a franchise-holder.

Betty Blythe Story to Be Syndicated in Newspapers

A Dangerous Inheritance by Izola Forrester, on which is founded the first of Betty Blythe special star open market film productions, How Women Love, is to be syndicated through the Bell Service in not less than forty of the leading newspapers in key cities.

The serialization of the novel will begin during July and will continue, in each paper, for two weeks. The story will appear in New York in the Evening World.

After the story has appeared in the forty leading cities it will be turned over to another syndicate service and will appear in scores of the smaller towns and cities throughout the country.

Special Productions Basis of Metro's Plans

Atkinson Sees Greatest Year Approaching for This Company—"Prisoner of Zenda," "Broadway Rose," "The Five Dollar Baby," "The Hands of Nara" and Montana Comedy Scheduled for Early Fall

WITH a schedule of special productions "of distinctive merit, and balanced excellence," Metro Pictures Corporation announces it is beginning the most auspicious season of its history.

The special production, according to William E. Atkinson, vice-president and general manager of Metro Pictures Corporation, is the solution of the box-office problem.

The public, even more than it has done in the last year, is going, in 1922-23, to shop for its pictures; select them for the reputation of story, director, star and excellence of production—regarded collectively. Pictures must have more than one point of excellence to recommend them to an increasingly critical public.

This is in part the significance of the statement issued this week from the home offices of Metro Pictures Corporation by Mr. Atkinson. The full text follows:

"Metro pictures are produced with a single, dominating principle always in mind: That every release must be a winner for the man exhibiting it, that every picture must turn over a sound profit for the showman.

"That principle is the basis for Metro's successes in the past, for its present enviable place in the faith of the exhibitor, and for its policy during the coming season of 1922-23.

"To adhere to that principle is becoming more and more difficult of achievement, as the demands of the public are becoming more and more difficult of satisfaction.

Public Shops Now

"The public no longer selects its evening's screen entertainment with the carelessness of a man buying a straw hat. The public shops for movies now with the discerning eye of a woman who can only afford one hat a season.

"What the public shops for is the special production.

"And since Metro must give the exhibitor what the public wants, special productions only constitute the Metro schedule for the crucial year to come.

"Every Metro picture during this period will come easily under the classification of a super-production. The most dramatic story material available, the most capable directors in the world to-day, stars that pull irresistibly, with casts of players of proven artistry—these essentials of photoplay excellence Metro has gathered together for the purpose of making every Metro picture a winner.

"The wise exhibitor, then, is the exhibitor who books Metro solid, for thus he insures the solidity of his profits."

The first five of the special productions announced by Metro for its early fall release-group are:

The Rex Ingram Production of The Prisoner of Zenda, based on Anthony Hope's novel. The photoplay has been produced on the scale of The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse, and is enacted by a cast which includes Lewis Stone, Alice Terry, Ramon Novarro, Barbara La Marr, Robert Edeson, Lois Wilson, Malcolm McGregor and Edward Connelly. The scenario of this picture was written by Mary O'Hara, and the photography is by John F. Seitz. Stage dramatization was by Edward Rose.

Mae Murray in Broadway Rose, presented by Robert Z. Leonard, who likewise directed the picture. This third of the Tiffany Productions, following Peacock Alley and Fascination, is expected to outdraw the first two. Edmund Goulding wrote both the story and scenario of Broadway Rose.

Viola Dana comes to the screen for the first time during the coming season in a photoplay of Irvin S. Cobb's story, The Five Dollar Baby. Harry Beaumont, director of Miss Dana's successes, The Fourteenth Lover, Glass Houses, Them Like 'Em Rough and Seeing's Believing, staged The Five Dollar Baby and has been retained by Metro to direct Miss Dana in her later productions. First of these will be Page Tim O'Brien, by John A. Moroso, and already the star and director are at work on it before the Metro cameras in Hollywood.

First C. K. Young Photoplays

One of the best-selling novels of the year, the much-discussed story by Richard Washburn Child, "The Hands of Nara," has provided the structure of Clara Kimball Young's first appearance in a Metro release. The photoplay has been directed by Harry Garson, who presents it. Following this Miss Young will be seen in a picturization of the New York dramatic success, Enter Madame. The Hands of Nara is a story of Russian intrigue and the strange power attributed to a fugitive girl.

Bull Montana, the only tractable caveman in captivity, has frankly turned comedian. Hunt Stromberg has produced a three-reel comedy starring Mr. Montana, entitled The Ladies' Man. This is to be the first of a series of eight. The seven to come will be of two reels each—a length to which it was hoped to hold The Ladies' Man. But this premier appearance of Mr. Montana, in the role of a coy courtier of the expensive sex, proved so full of robust comedy that it was deemed a sheer waste of laughs to crop it.

Virtually completed, or in a more preliminary stage of growth, are other pictures similar to the group constituting the early fall releases. Rex Ingram is expected to bring to New York with him, within a month, a first print of a recently made photoplay, the story and direction of which are both his own. The title of this has not as yet been announced.

Fred Niblo, who directed The Mark of Zorro, The Three Musketeers and Blood and Sand, is at the point of beginning production of a special, to be presented by Louis B. Mayer. Metro has contracted with this director for four Fred Niblo Productions during the coming year. What Mr. Niblo's choice of subjects is, has not as yet been reported from Hollywood.

Laurette Taylor has started for the west coast for the work of enacting for the screen her most beloved role, that of the title character of J. Hartley Manners's play, Peg 'o My Heart. There is little need to comment upon the celebrity of this piece. It has been given more than 14,000 times on the stages of the English-speaking world. Mary O'Hara, adapter of The Prisoner of Zenda, is writing the scenario, and King Vidor will direct Miss Taylor before the camera.

The famous home-folks story, Quincy Adams Sawyer, by Charles Felton Pidgin, will be screened as a Metro-S-L Special Production by Clarence Badger, who is responsible for many Paramount comedy successes, and human-interest dramas for Goldwyn. His making of the Will Rogers pictures, Honest Hutch and Jubilo are examples of Mr. Badger's work.

A special stories series, picturizations of outstandingly meritorious works by the most popular short-story and photoplay writer of America, is being begun, it is stated. Each of these pictures is to be enacted by an especially distinguished cast, headed by Billie Dove. Among the stories mentioned in this group are Country Love, by Hulbert Footner—now being made, under the direction of Emile Chautard; The House on the Avenue, by Cosmo Hamilton; East of Suez, by E. Lloyd Sheldon; The Girl in the Gilded Cage, by Marion Fairfax, and A Temporary Marriage, by Cardell Hale.

Future Ingram Productions Discussed

Metro Predicts They Will Surpass Even "The Four Horsemen" — Atkinson Gives Views

Before a fraction of the period of Rex Ingram's new contract with Metro Pictures Corporation has expired, the photoplay company believes the young director will have achieved advances in picture production over "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse."

Such is the sense of the opinion voiced this week by William E. Atkinson, vice-president and general manager of Metro, at the home offices of the company in New York. As Mr. Atkinson points out, Mr. Ingram is the genius of the motion picture world who has demonstrated that artistic merit in pictures and box-office returns are concomitant qualities.

"The industry will recall the predictions of many well acquainted with the film market that to make such a photoplay as 'The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse' was sheer folly from the commercial point of view," says the statement. "Granting that as a novel it was popular—for there could be no gainsaying that—reliable motion picture experts felt that its appeal to the public would be limited only to those members of it possessing a degree of literary appreciation. Now that the picture has behind it an exceptional run on Broadway at the Astor Theatre, showings of commensurate length in every big city in the United States, the attendance record of the Capitol Theatre, the world's largest picture palace, enthusiastic receptions and bonanza receipts in theatres in Paris, Madrid and other Continental capitals, and recently forty simultaneous exhibitions in Chicago theatres—critics of Metro and of Mr. Ingram have come to see that times change in the picture business as well as in the other activities of the world.

"The truth of good pictures pay has been demonstrated not only by Mr. Ingram's initial big production for Metro, but by his subsequent works, 'The Conquering Power' and 'Turn to the Right.' These productions differ as distinctly from one another as both do from 'The Four Horsemen'—in subject. But the artistry in the making of all three is equal.

"And that same merit in direction will prevail in the forthcoming Ingram productions, two of which are already completed and six more of which will be in the course of the two years beginning this fall.

" 'The Prisoner of Zenda,' Rex Ingram's production of Anthony Hope's romantic novel; and a second picture, a drama of exotic love, the title of which has not as yet been announced, are already filmed. The first of the two will be included in the Metro releases for the early fall; and it has been denominated by critics of the screen as fully as great as 'The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse.' There is every indication that it will score an even more sensational box-office success for the reason that its story is even more suitable to the public taste than is that of the Ibanez novel. Of the Ingram photoplay to follow 'The Prisoner of Zenda' little has been divulged, except that its story, as well as its direction, is Mr. Ingram's own.

"Mr. Ingram plans next to make Victor Hugo's 'Toilers of the Sea,' and the importance of this photoplay is indicative of the calibre of which will constitute Mr. Ingram's contributions for Metro release during the coming two years.

"Absurd though it may sound at this time," said William E. Atkinson, vice-president and general manager of Metro, "we believe that before Mr. Ingram has half completed his projected next six pictures for us he will have made strides in photoplay making that will make even 'The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse' appear at a disadvantage in comparison.

"No matter that it seems impossible, it is inevitable. Before 'The Four Horsemen' no one, even those in the Metro organization most confident of Mr. Ingram's ability, would have believed that so perfect a motion picture could be made—and made to pay. And yet there is 'The Four Horsemen' for evidence that the unattainable was attained. It is only reasonable to expect that the man who made that great advance will make others, for Mr. Ingram is young, utterly absorbed in his art, intensely discontented with anything but perfection as he estimates it. A great director now, he will be a greater. Exhibitors may count on that, and count on the fact that Ingram productions are invariably productive of profit."

Metro to Release Eight Comedies With Bull Montana

A series of eight Bull Montana Comedies will be released during the next two years by Metro Pictures Corporation, according to an announcement this week from the home offices of the company in New York.

They are to be produced and presented by Hunt Stromberg, who, upon the completion of a first one, A Ladies' Man, signed Bull Montana for seven more.

With the exception of A Ladies' Man, which is a three-reeler, the comedies will be of two reels in length. It was the original intention of Mr. Stromberg to hold this initial offering to the shorter length, but review of the completed film is said to have disclosed such a wealth of comedy material as to make an arbitrary cutting down a sheer waste of entertainment.

A Ladies' Man will be among the first group of Metro pictures to be released in the fall.

"Prisoner of Zenda" Released in Fall

Ingram's Newest Production Expected by Metro to Surpass "Four Horsemen" at Box Office

The Prisoner of Zenda, the Rex Ingram production for Metro, based on the novel of Anthony Hope, will be among the first of the fall releases of this producing company. The statement has been made to supply definite information to the numerous exhibitors who have already expressed to Metro their desire of being among the first to book the production.

"If the advance reviews of critics who have witnessed this Metro photoplay is a standard by which the industry can form its conclusions. The Prisoner of Zenda should prove a box-office attraction of even greater power than The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse. The photoplay was shown at the recent Exhibitors Convention at Washington, and the crowds who viewed it were convinced that this Metro attraction was certain to establish itself as the most phenomenal box-office magnet in a decade," says the announcement.

Arthur James in Moving Picture World summed up his prophecy for The Prisoner of Zenda with the statement that:

"Metro will find a harvest in releasing it, and exhibitors who take advantage of its extraordinary advertising opportunities should break house records."

"A splendid box-office, sure-fire picture," re-echoes Film Daily.

"Has several things in it that may make the famous quartet of 'Horsemen' look out for their blue ribbons," advises Exhibitors Herald.

"Rarely has a production earned such a remarkable unanimity of critical praise. Only an exceptional production like The Prisoner of Zenda could merit it," the announcement continues.

"The quality of the photoplay is such that its appeal is a really universal one. The elements of its greatness are that it can be relied upon to provide fascinating entertainment for every type of motion picture patron. Romance, danger, intrigue, love, charm—these qualities are the basis of universal entertainment, and it is in these qualities that this picture abounds. That The Prisoner of Zenda was to be a photoplay was inevitable. Its lavish coronation scenes, its brilliant balls and receptions as produced by Mr. Ingram are masterpieces of crowd handling as well as supreme achievements of scenic art; while its breath-taking episodes, exciting and unexpected turns of plot make it a feature long to be remembered.

"The painstaking care which has characterized all of the Rex Ingram productions for Metro is apparent in The Prisoner of Zenda. Mr. Ingram has displayed the same genius for picking players who represent to the life the persons that they are called upon to portray, that made The Four Horsemen a portrait gallery that has never been surpassed.

"Alice Terry, whose characterization of the beautiful Marguerite Laurier in The Four Horsemen was one of the most appealing in that photoplay, is seen in the leading feminine role. Her superb grace and delicate beauty as Princess Flavia in her present part make her portrayal the finest she has yet done.

"Lewis Stone, the well-known actor of stage and screen, does the best work of his brilliant career in the dual role of Rudolf Rasaendyl and King Rudolf, playing opposite Miss Terry.

"Ramon Novarro, the young Spaniard whom Ingram considers one of the most promising actors of the day, plays the part of Rupert of Hentzau in a manner that fully justifies the faith which the director has placed in him.

"Barbara La Marr, as Antoinette de Mauban, provides a remarkable characterization. Her portrayal of Hope's adventuress is one of the interesting portrayals in the production.

"Others in the long cast are Robert Edeson as the genial Colonel Sapt; Malcolm McGregor as Fritz Von Tarlenheim; Stuart Holmes as Duke Michael, and Lois Lee as the Countess Helga.

"The Prisoner of Zenda was adapted by Mary O'Hara from the novel by Anthony Hope. John F. Seitz photographed it. Edward Rose dramatized the story."

The Prisoner of Zenda

A Rex Ingram Production based on the novel of Anthony Hope and starring Alice Terry as Princess Flavia. To be released by Metro in the Fall.

"Record of Money-Makers"

Company Declares Its Specials During Past Year Have Provided Exhibitors with Real Box-Office Winners

In the box-office achievements of its big productions during the past year Metro believes that it has provided exhibitors with record money-making photoplays.

The pictures in the mind of the producing and distributing organization are the Rex Ingram productions of The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse, The Conquering Power and Turn to the Right, and the presentations by Robert Z. Leonard of Mae Murray in Peacock Alley and Fascination.

"The success of these Metro releases is not measured by hearsay or rumor, but by official and unsolicited statements from theatre managers, from exhibitors comments in trade magazines and, chiefly, box-office figures," says the statement. "The dependability of these standards makes this information of unquestionable reliability.

"Perhaps no further proof of its power as an audience-getter is necessary in the case of The Four Horsemen than to say it established a new record for receipts at the Capitol Theatre in New York, the world's largest picture theatre, where it was shown a year after the conclusion of its phenomenal run at the Astor Theatre. At the Capitol the audiences averaged 20,000 persons a day. In order to accommodate the crowds the doors were opened at noon. The nation-wide welcome granted this film version of the Ibanez masterpiece has, if anything, increased since its initial showing. It is now being booked —in many cases for a return engagement —in theatres of various classes throughout the cinema world. It is the first real world-picture. The comment of exhibitors is uniformly: "Wonderful business"; "run extended"; "played to capacity"; "congratulations to Metro." This is the general vein of exhibitors' reports.

"No less a magnetic attraction has been Turn to the Right, Rex Ingram's production of the famous John Golden stage hit by Winchell Smith and John E. Hazzard. Praise from every New York newspaper followed its premiere at the Lyric Theatre. And these criticisms have proved an accurate index to its box-office power, for in every case where the picture has been shown exhibitors' statements have coincided with the reviews. When H. A. Schwan, general manager for the Eau Claire Theatre Co., wired to Metro that it shattered all records at his theatre and that it pleased its patrons 100 per cent, he expressed the general box-office reaction to the picture. At New York's Capitol it nearly duplicated the phenomenal success of The Four Horsemen.

"The Conquering Power, which Ingram produced after his picturization of the Ibanez novel, is another Metro special of exceptional merit. Mr. Ingram's direction, said a reviewer on the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures, is 'an advance on his work in The Four Horsemen. It was this film that was shown at the Rivoli Theatre in New York, after a capacity week at the Rialto Theatre. These theatres are two of the finest in the metropolis and it is only a production of such great appeal as The Conquering Power that is transferred to one after having completed its normal run at the other.

"Metro is the distributing medium for its own productions exclusively, but in exceptional cases acts in a similar capacity for photoplays which it would not hesitate to claim as its own. It was in accordance with this policy that arrangements were concluded for Metro to distribute the new series of Mae Murray productions, in which the star is presented by Robert Z. Leonard. The first release under the agreement was Peacock Alley, Miss Murray's gorgeously costumed play of the white lights of New York and Paris, which marked the opening of the new Cameo Theatre in New York.

"Capacity audiences were the rule throughout this engagement and standing room was at a premium. When the feature was available for general release, a repetition of its first triumph was recorded everywhere. The magnificent opportunities for lavish and spectacular tie-ups were taken advantage of by aggressive exhibitors. Big circuits and first-run houses snapped up the production for long runs, and tremendous business at advanced prices was reported from all parts of the country.

"Fascination, Miss Murray's latest production, is meeting with an even greater response than her first. The house records of New York's Capitol Theatre were threatened by the crowds which fought their way into the palatial house when it was first shown there. Facing Easter week and a session of warm weather, Fascination proved one of the greatest attractions ever presented at this theatre. At the Stanley Theatre in Philadelphia, where it was simultaneously exhibited, it duplicated its triumph. Exhibitors were unanimous in their opinion that the brilliant star and her director, Robert Z. Leonard, had combined their talents in making a production the success of which equaled Peacock Alley and in some respects exceeded it."

Fred Niblo Will Make Four Big Pictures for Metro

Fred Niblo, whose record as a director includes the making of such photoplays as The Mark of Zorro, The Three Musketeers, and Blood and Sand, will stage for Metro four pictures, to be released during the coming season. These will be presented by Louis B. Mayer.

Definite announcement of the subjects of these Fred Niblo Productions has not as yet come from the Metro offices, but is expected soon.

Ever since signing the contract with Metro, Mr. Niblo has been going over likely stories, plays and scripts, and word of his selection of a first subject doubtless will be forthcoming within a few days.

The acquisiton of Mr. Niblo by the Metro forces is regarded as one of the most strengthening units of that organization's already strong structure. A director schooled by more than twenty-five years of dramatic experience, both as an actor and a producer, he entered the motion picture field only a few years ago, and immediately won for himself a place at the very top of those who make photoplays highly agreeable to the public taste, as well as possessive of genuinely artistic merit. Among directors Mr. Niblo is known as "the man who never made a failure," and inasmuch as his work, ever since his engagement in the producing of dramas for the screen, has shown an increasing finish, Metro is certain that the four productions later to be released by its exchanges will outdraw at the box-office even the record-breakers he has made in the past.

Before turning to the screen, Mr. Niblo was in close touch for many years in the New York theatre with George M. Cohan. As the title character in "Hit-the-Trail Holliday," Mr. Niblo scored one of the biggest successes of the then current theatrical year; and later he went on tour with a company of players, enacting principal parts on the stages of every country where English is spoken. A two years' association with Thomas H. Ince, concluding with the direction of Mother O' Mine; followed by making Daughters of Job for J. Parker Read, gave Mr. Niblo the special technical skill in studio work to supplement his already full and resourceful dramatic technique. His production for Douglas Fairbanks of The Mark of Zorro and The Three Musketeers, and the more recent screening of Vicente Blasco Ibanez's novel, Blood and Sand, with Rodolph Valentino, are eloquent testimony to the artistry of Mr. Niblo as a director.

Trade Praise Is Given Viola Dana's New Picture

Not only in the estimation of the officials of Metro, which made and will distribute The Five Dollar Baby, starring Viola Dana, but also in the eyes of the trade paper critics who have seen this screen version of Irvin S. Cobb's celebrated short story, this photoplay is the most successful offering in which the little star has ever appeared.

"A sure fire number that is real entertainment" is the comment of the Film Daily, and an accurate summary of the entire favorable criticism of The Five Dollar Baby.

Expanding the digested criticism in its headline, "A sure fire number that is real entertainment that is sure to please," the Film Daily continues: "A really delightful comedy offering that mixes laughs with pathos in appealing fashion . . . Human interest stuff that never fails to satisfy; gives star another fine vehicle . . . A picture that contains genuine audience appeal, a mixture of humor and pathos that never fails to get them . . . It certainly deserves a place among the list of productions that offer real entertainment . . . If you want to show them a really pleasing picture and a fine entertainment you will lose no time in booking Viola Dana's latest. It is just the sort of picture that they all like."

In other words Moving Picture World gives the same advice to motion picture showmen when it says:

"Few pictures lately can be said to carry a greater human appeal than this one. . . . . This film can be counted on to come in for a great deal of praise from any sort of audience. It will prove a money-maker for exhibitors no matter from what station in life their patrons are drawn. Miss Dana does some of the best work of her career."

Motion Picture News places The Five Dollar Baby immediately among the season's best: "When the season's best contributions are compiled at the end of the year Metro's picture, The Five Dollar Baby . . . . will be ranked among the winners . . . If the public fails to respond to this feature then you should lock up your door and throw the key into the gutter."

Miss Dana's picture is adapted from Irvin S. Cobbs short story, which appeared originally in The Saturday Evening Post. The scenario of this Harry Beaumont Production was written by Rex Taylor.

Metro Believes Picture Version Will Better Long-Run Records Made by Stage Play

Peg O' My Heart as a motion picture will equal, in many cases surpass, the long-run records the stage play has set in the great cities of the world, Metro declares.

"Theatrical statisticians have been kept busy ever since the première of this comedy by J. Hartley Manners, May 26, 1912, in keeping with the number of performances; and it is anticipated that they will be given double duty as soon as Laurette Taylor, who created the world-famous title-role of Peg O' My Heart, makes her screen début in the Metro production of the piece," it is pointed out.

"Motion pictures of this high order are no longer regarded as presentations of only weekly or even monthly duration. In New York the dramas of the screen often show greater box office stamina than do the legitimate attractions played nearby and at the same prices.

"In the case of Peg O' My Heart, of course—for the play has been given 14,925 times and in parts of the world ranging from Indiana to India—the photoplay has work cut out for it to equal the theatrical presentation's record; but the quality of the motion picture production—its scale and the wealth of new scenes the technique of the screen will allow where the theatre could not—are expected so to enhance the attraction of the Manners comedy that it will outdistance, in the end, the performances before the footlights.

"The presence of Laurette Taylor in the character of Peg is in itself of inestimable value to the exhibitor of the picture. To think of Peg O' My Heart is to think of Miss Taylor; and it must be noted that while the play has been enacted 14,925 times, the original star herself has appeared in the leading role only 1127 times, these including performances in the United States and in London. American theatre-goers and picture fans are divided into three classes; Those who have seen Laurette Taylor as Peg; those who have not, and those who have not seen the play at all, but know it only by reputation and the praise of the friends.

"It is obvious that everyone who saw Miss Taylor in the piece will make a point of witnessing the motion picture; that those who were so unfortunate as not to see her as Peg will take opportunity to do so; and that those who missed out on both counts will make good by attending the exhibition of Peg O' My Heart when it is shown at their picture theatre, and so coming up on even terms with the rest of the country.

"In addition to the popularity of Peg O' My Heart as a play, the novel based upon it has outsold many of the volumes big publishers herald as fiction sensations. In the United States 197,424 copies have been sold; and in England, 48,856. With this widespread international reputation as a book, as well as a play that has seen the stages of the United States, England, Australia, Holland, India, the Far East, Honolulu. South Africa, Scandinavia, France, Italy and Spain, the motion picture exhibitor has a world-wide, ready-made popularity awaiting the issuance of the film, as well as an international interest in the forthcoming picture.

"Mary O'Hara already has advanced sufficiently far with the script of the photoplay to allow Miss Taylor to begin work at the Metro studios, under the direction of King Vidor, at the scheduled time of July 5. J. Hartley Manners, author of the play, and Miss Taylor's husband, will accompany her to Los Angeles, there to render such assistance as he can in the suitable reproduction of his play for the screen."

Billie Dove Heads Casts in New Metro Special Stories

Metro has begun the making at the studios in Hollywood of the first of a series of super-productions of special stories, to be enacted by distinguished casts, headed by Billie Dove.

The initial photoplay is Country Love, adapted by Edith Kennedy from Hulbert Footner's story, and being staged under the direction of Emile Chautard.

After Country Love will come other stories. Those mentioned by Metro are: East of Suez, by E. Lloyd Sheldon, A Temporary Marriage, by Cardell Hale, The Girl in the Gilded Cage, by Marion Fairfax, and The House of the Avenue, by Cosmo Hamilton.

Miss Dove will head the distinguished casts chosen for the portrayal of the characters in this special stories series. Before entering motion pictures, Billie Dove was famed as one of the beauties of the New York theatrical world, and since then, for her performances in Cosmopolitan and other productions of similar class, she has demonstrated potentialities of popularity of an unquestionable sort.

The nature of the story of Country Love is suggested clearly by the title: A photoplay of youth and gingham and moonlit roadways. The scenario is being done by Edith Kennedy, whose deft adaptation of her sister's story, The Fourteenth Lover, starring Viola Dana, will be remembered by all who found that picture delightful.

"Broadway Rose" Is New Vehicle for Mae Murray

In part on account of the success of Mae Murray's appearance in Peacock Alley and Fascination, this star's coming presentation by Robert Z. Leonard in Broadway Rose, a Metro release, will outscore at the box-office even the records of either of these two earlier Tiffany Productions.

Such is the conviction of M. H. Hoffman, vice-president and general manager of Tiffany Productions in regard to the newest photoplay for Miss Murray written by Edmund Goulding.

At the studios in New York, Mr. Hoffman said this week:

"The most amazing thing about Miss Murray and Mr. Leonard, her director and husband, is that they are not content with big successes. They are constantly seeking bigger ones, never striving merely for the equalling of their last.

"Peacock Alley, I know from the booking reports from Metro, and Fascination have proven two of the most certain paying attractions of the year. There is a glamour, a brilliancy about the Mae Murray picture which, in addition to the magnetism of the star and the splendidly presented drama, sets them apart as something different from any other photoplays. They cast a spell over the audience, an illusion of colorful romance which once experienced calls for repetition.

"The thrills and enchantment in Peacock Alley and Fascination have generated an eagerness on the part of the public; and this, in addition to the fact that in her new picture Miss Murray is seen as an American girl, after French and Spanish roles, is bound to make Broadway Rose the most powerful attendance magnet of the series so far."

William E. Atkinson, vice-president and general manager of Metro Pictures Corporation, expressed himself as fully as confident as Mr. Hoffman of the immediate and big-scale success of Broadway Rose.

"Broadway Rose, directed by Robert Z. Leonard, as were Peacock Alley and Fascination, will in every respect be comparable with those productions in the elaborateness of settings, the artistic development of the story and the beauty of the costumes," is is stated. "Every effort has been made to create a production which shall exceed Miss Murray's previous pictures in public favor.

"An extraordinarily large number of exhibitors after showing Fascination telegraphed or wrote to Metro exchanges asking for more pictures like it. Whatever the varying public taste may be there seems to be a very decided demand for the type of picture with which Miss Murray has become identified and exhibitors are discovering that they cannot afford to ignore this demand."

Screen Version of "Quincy Adams Sawyer" Is Begun

Quincy Adams Sawyer, by Charles Felton Pidgin, has been bought for conversion into photoplay form for release through Metro and is at present in course of production at the company's studios in Hollywood. It is to be a Metro-S-L Special Production.

Clarence Badger, to whose credit are many Paramount and Goldwyn screen successes, is directing Quincy Adams Sawyer. The script has been written by Bernard McConville, adapter of Mark Twain's A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court.

Quincy Adams Sawyer comes to the screen with the advantage of accumulated popularity. The setting is New England, the people those who indulge in chores and straw rides and dances in the fire company's hall. Both as a book and as a play it has scored over a long term of years. A million and a half copies of the novel were sold and, as if the public could not be satisfied with this, there was such a demand for further acquaintance with the title character that the author, Charles Felton Pidgin, was practically forced by weight of popular desire to write two sequels: "The Further Adventures of Quincy Adams Sawyer" and "The Chronicles of Quincy Adams Sawyer, Detective." These were read no less avidly than the original story, bringing the friends of Quincy Adams Sawyer up into the many millions.

S-L Pictures (Arthur Sawyer and Herbert Lubin) and Metro have exercised discerning judgment in the delegation of the responsibilities of adaptation and direction. Bernard McConville's skill in translating into pictures the quaint, twangy hero of A Connecticut Yankee merited his choice for the task of imparting the same flavor of reality and humanness to the fiction characters of Quincy Adams Sawyer, the most popular down-East story ever written.

Miss Young's Debut as Metro Star

She Will Be Seen in Principal Role of "The Hands of Nara," Richard Washburn Child's Novel

Making her début as a Metro star, Clara Kimball Young will be seen in the principal role of The Hands of Nara, a screen version of Richard Washburn Child's novel.

The Hands of Nara, in which the star is presented by Harry Garson, was produced at the Garson Studios in Los Angeles. The story on which it is based was written by Richard Washburn Child, the novelist who is the present ambassador to Italy. It ran as a serial for sixteen weeks in Collier's Magazine, and was subsequently published in book form by E. P. Dutton and Company. As a novel it has had a very large sale, and it is considered one of the "best sellers" of the year. Because of the interest which is certain to be manifested in the picturized version, the publishers have decided to issue a special jacket for the novel, on which will appear a scene from the photoplay with the caption "Clara Kimball Young in 'The Hands of Nara,' by Richard Washburn Child."

The story, highly colored and dramatic in character, concerns an aristocratic Russian refugee in this country, beset by agents of the Red régime. Those who have had glimpses of the film delare that it affords Miss Young the biggest opportunity of her career. Her characterization in the role of the heroine is said to be one of the greatest she has ever portrayed. Elliott Dexter is cast in the leading male role, playing opposite Miss Young.

Following The Hands of Nara, the star will be seen in Enter Madame, the successful play by Dolly Byrne and Gilda Varesi, which played for forty-five weeks on Broadway, New York, both at the Fulton and the Republic Theatres. After its Metropolitan engagement, three companies toured the United States in it. Later the play was seen at the Royalty Theatre, in London. Enter Madame has been shown or is scheduled for production in France, Germany, Italy, Spain, Poland, South America, and the Scandinavian countries.

The stellar role in the play is that of Mme. Della Robbia, a temperamental Italian opera singer who enjoys an international reputation. Her marital difficulties with an American husband who is unwilling to merge his own identity into that of his wife and who balks at serving merely as companion to the talented singer, forms a comedy-drama of real entertainment. Each of its characterizations is clear-cut and sharply defined, and the humor and pathos of its complications caused critics to greet it as one of the finest plays that the American theatre had produced.

As was The Hands of Nara, Enter Madame will be produced by the Samuel Zierler Photoplay Corporation, and directed by Harry Garson. Except in New York and northern New Jersey, Metro is distributor of these special productions. In the territory excepted, they are released by the Commonwealth Film Corporation, which is under the same management as the producing unit.

To Take Final Scenes of "Valley of Silent Men"

Cosmopolitan Productions, The Valley of Silent Men Company will leave for the Kippawa River Province of Quebec, forty miles from Temiskanny, a lumber town, for the purpose of completing their much talked about production. In the party will be: H. P. Carver, production manager; Frank Borzage, director; Lew Borzage, O. O. Dull, Alma Rubens, Lew Cody, Joe King, Chester Lyons, Harry Wild, Jim Tirney, Mrs. Rubens, George Henry, Herman Zerenna and two cameramen.

The company will be gone for two weeks and will take the finishing shots of the picture, which is due for release in September.

New Production Precedents Claimed for Paramount Film

George Melford's recently completed Paramount production, Burning Sands, which features Wanda Hawley and Milton Sills, is said to furnish a demonstration not only of efficiency but of the great scale on which things are done these days in motion pictures.

One of these was the building of a complete tent city large enough to accommodate 400 people, and its conduct for nearly three weeks, without mishap or delay, except that occasioned by cloudy days and a sand-storm. This city, laid out according to the best military practice, rose in quick order under the direction of Production Superintendent Tom White, who was in charge of sanitary arrangements, food supplies, lighting, etc. The location of this camp was on the sand dunes near Oxnard, Ventura county, sixty miles from Los Angeles.

The other project was the artificial lighting for night scenes of an area two miles square, said by Leo Green, manager of the electrical department of the Famous Players-Lasky studio, to be an unprecedented feat. This was accomplished by the co-operation of Mr. Green and Bert Glennon, chief cameraman of the Melford production unit. The set, built at the Lasky Ranch, represented a great Arab encampment on the Libyan desert. Current for the light was furnished by six power wagons, aggregating 4650 amperes, the voltage varying between 110 and 125.

The equipment used included twelve "Sun-Arc" lamps, twenty spotlights, two automatic "baby" arcs and forty "broadsides," which were operated by twenty men. The main street of the set was 1¾ miles long, and it was only by the use of a system making absolutely efficient use of the equipment and current, which has been perfected by the Lasky electrical department, that even this amount of amperage could be spread over such large area.

Hodkinson Corp. Contracts for Release of Chester Comedies

Contracts were signed during the past week between the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation and the Chester Pictures Corporation for the distribution by the Hodkinson Corporation of a series of six Chester comedies. The productions are in two reels.

The first of the series which is already completed and approved by the Hodkinson Corporation is The Jungle Romeo, featuring "Snooky," the inimitable chimpanzee.

According to the terms of the contract the pictures will be released at intervals of two months, the date of the first release being tentatively set for late in September.

The Chester Comedies is the first series of short comedies ever announced for release by the Hodkinson Corporation, and with a few exceptions constitute the only short features this company has marketed. The exceptions are the Triart series of two-reel masterpieces, the Great American Authors' Series and Movie Chats.

The acquisition of the Chester Comedies by the Hodkinson Corporation adds a unit of unusual strength to Hodkinson's fall schedule of releases.

"Get Your Story Going" Paramount's Production Motto

The day is past, at least so far as Paramount is concerned, when an author and director feel it necessary to waste a reel or two at the start of a picture "establishing" such vague things as atmosphere and character environment.

The instructions at the Lasky studio are much like those given the writer of popular fiction:

"Get your story going, and keep it going!"

Take, for example, three pictures that are just getting under way this week.

Irvin Willat is making On the High Seas with Dorothy Dalton, Jack Holt and Mitchell Lewis. Here's the way it starts:

In a palatial stateroom on a Pacific liner a spoiled young society girl is irritated because her maid has forgotten to sew the ribbon on a slipper. In the hold the rats are leaving the ship, men are pumping water in an attempt to stay a fire. On deck the passengers are fleeing to the boats. The ship is sinking and the girl refuses to believe that she is in danger. The ship goes down and the girl and two stokers find themselves together in a leaky row boat.

That's the beginning of that one.

Take The Young Rajah, starring Rodolph Valentino, which is being directed by Philip Rosen. The scene is the sitting room of an old-fashioned New England home on a stormy night. A farmer and his wife are interrupted by the entrance of two East Indians, a prince and a general, who bring with them a dark-skinned boy, who is treated by them with great deference.

They lay on the table $2,000 in American money, 12,000 pounds in English bank notes, and diamonds, rubies, emeralds and pearls valued at 160,000 pounds.

"Will you take this boy, and these?" they ask.

Then there is The Ghost Breaker, starring Wallace Reid, directed by Al Green.

"Wally," a New Yorker visiting his old home in Kentucky, finds he has arrived just in time to dodge bullets in a feud. He fights his way out and gets back to New York, followed by the chief feudist, who has sworn to kill "Wally." They meet in a hotel elevator. "Wally" shoots first and escapes out of the elevator, dashes into the first room he finds, and discovers a beautiful Spanish princess in bed. The princess saves him from the police and he agrees to go with her to Spain to fight the ghosts that fill her ancestral castle. That's just the start.

F. B. O. Ready to Start Functioning on July 1st

The work of completing the change of name of the Robertson-Cole Distributing Corporation to the Film Booking Offices of America is now actively under way and by July 1, when the change becomes effective, all of the present Robertson-Cole branches will be fully prepared to continue their business under the name of the Film Booking Offices. While the name Robertson-Cole will pass out of the film world on July 1, R-C Pictures will continue as a producing organization. The studios in Los Angeles will continue to be known as the R-C studios, and pictures produced in them by R-C Pictures Corporation will bear the familiar R-C trademark.

Under the present releasing schedule, the Chester Bennett production, Colleen of the Pines, starring Jane Novak, will be the first picture to bear the caption "released through Film Booking Offices." It will be issued on July 9.

N. Y. Strand Gets Lloyd Picture

Broadway Playhouse Will Show "Grandma's Boy," Now in Its Sixth Week at Symphony, Los Angeles

A contract was signed this week by which the Mark Strand Theatre, Broadway and Forty-seventh Street, secures the first New York showing of the latest Harold Lloyd-Associated Exhibitors feature, Grandma's Boy. The opening of the run will be either Sept. 3 or Sept. 10, at the option of the Strand officials.

In an informal statement this week Arthur S. Kane, president of Associated Exhibitors, said that the opening of the Strand run will coincide approximately with the national release of Grandma's Boy, except in certain west coast cities where weather conditions in the summer are always favorable. The feature is now in the sixth week of its world's premiere at Dr. Breckwedel's Symphony Theatre, Los Angeles. It opens an indefinite run at M. L. Markowitz's Strand, San Francisco, July 9, and it is expected that first run engagements in Seattle and Portland, Ore., may begin before the autumn season sets in.

In the arrangements which preceded the signing of the New York contract, Mr. Plunkett, managing director, acted for the Strand, Moe Mark, president and general manager, joining him in the final negotiations. W. B. Frank, general sales manager, in co-operation with Lester W. Adler, in charge of the New York exchange, represented Associated Exhibitors.

"The signing of the contract brought to a close a lively contest in which several of the best known exhibitors took part, each determined to land Harold Lloyd's first five-part feature, which California reviewers declare is the finest picture he has ever made," says the announcement. Promise of an all-summer run was one of the inducements offered by one of the smaller first-run theatres in the Broadway district. "Legitimate" houses also joined in the competition, but Mr. Lloyd, Hal Roach, the producer of his features, and Mr. Kane were in agreement that only straight-out picture theatres should be considered in the distribution, both in New York and elsewhere.

"I consider Grandma's Boy a wonderful picture, and of course I am gratified and elated to have it for the Strand," said Joseph Plunkett, following the signing of the contract. "As a box-office attraction I consider this a super-production and I am hopeful for a record business during its first New York run."

Los Angeles exhibitors are taking their hats off to Harold Lloyd's newest Associated Exhibitors feature, Grandma's Boy, which is now completing its sixth week at the Symphony Theatre.

After three weeks of "stand-them-out" business, exhibitors began to question the ability of Grandma's Boy to maintain the attendance pace it was setting, for there is a limit even to the population of Los Angeles and its neighborhood. But the fourth and fifth weeks were as big as any of those preceding, and late reports say that the rush is continuing in the sixth week.

In fact, the business gives every indication that the picture will establish a new record run for the Symphony. This will be a great feat, for Harold Lloyd in A Sailor-made Man ran there for seven weeks, and in Never Weaken held the screen for just two days short of seven weeks.

If Grandma's Boy runs only seven weeks, and in all probability it will surpass this mark, Mr. Lloyd will have established a record unique in theatredom in the United States. It will mean that in a period of approximately forty weeks, Mr. Lloyd will have been featured more than half the time by the Symphony.

Pathe's Chicago Manager Optimistic About Better Business

H. O. Martin, Chicago branch manager of the Pathe Exchange, Inc., declared that he is extremely confident of better times throughout the Middle West as the fall approaches, during his visit to the home office in New York, where he is making arrangements for the presentation of the Pathe feature, "Nanook of the North," in the Windy City.

"I am very optimistic over the future," Mr. Martin stated. "The exhibitors in Chicago, as a whole, cannot complain of poor business even now. Building has increased 40 per cent, a sure sign of business improvement, and officials of manufacturing industries in the Middle West are looking forward to the busiest fall in years. I noticed particularly that in the Chicago Sunday newspapers jobs are not scarce, due to seven pages of want ads carried in some of the different papers, whereas a short time ago only half of this was carried."

Finish Script for "Face in the Fog"

Jack Boyle and John Lynch have finished work on the continuity of The Face in the Fog, Boyle's story, which Cosmopolitan Productions will make into a feature film immediately. Working with the two authors is Alan Crosland, who will direct the picture.

Alma Rubens has been engaged to play the leading female role and Mike Connolly, casting director of Cosmopolitan Productions, will proceed to cast the picture immediately.

TWO of the biggest stories ever procured for Jane Novak will go into production immediately, according to an announcement made by Chester Bennett. Marie Corelli's Thelma will be the first to be produced. Miss Novak will play the title role—the daughter of a Norwegian viking. The scenes are laid in England and Norway. Rock of Ages will follow the Corelli story. This is written around the well-known hymn and the world famous painting.

For the first time the Novak sisters will appear in the same picture. Eva, Jane Novak's younger sister and a star in her own right has been secured to support the Robertson-Cole star in The Rock of Ages.

William Garwood, production manager for the Chester Bennett-Jane Novak productions, returned from New York recently and announced that The Snow-Shoe Trail would be released later than Colleen of the Pines and would go out under the super-feature banner. These are the two most recent pictures released by Robertson-Cole for the Jane Novak productions.

Norma Talmadge and Eugene O'Brien are once more to appear together on the screen. O'Brien is to play opposite Miss Talmadge in her next Associated First National picture, Robert Hichen's A Voice from the Minaret, which Frank Lloyd will direct.

Cullen Landis has been engaged by Metro to appear opposite Viola Dana in Page Mr. Tim O'Brien, this being Metro's newest picture. Harry Beaumont is directing.

The Sherwoods—the "singing orchestra"—are en route to Los Angeles via motor and will arrive early in July to fill a summer engagement at the Kinema Theatre. The Sherwoods have recently closed in Cleveland after seventeen weeks of unheralded success. Sol Lesser is going to make the summer season at this leading Los Angeles First National theatre so interesting that no matter how hot it becomes the public will fill the house all through the slack season. Especially fine pictures are booked for this season and the musical programs will be of the very best.

Preparations are being made for the premiere in the West of the Mack Sennett melodramatic comedy, The Crossroads of New York, which will open at the Miller Theatre the middle of June for an indefinite run.

The Miller Theatre has recently closed a fourteen weeks' showing of The Silent Call and eleven weeks with A Connecticut Yankee.

Aside from showing at the Capitol Theatre in New York, the picture will not be shown anywhere else until late in the fall. Manager Fred Miller confidently expects The Crossroads to equal or surpass the runs of these other successful attractions.

Lon Chaney has been signed again at Universal to make a Universal-Jewel of six or seven reels under the direction of Lambert Hillyer. Virginia Valli, Jack Mower, William Welch will head the cast in Bitter Sweet. The title may be changed in the future as it is found to conflict with Goldwyn's Bitterness of Sweets.

Graf Productions, Inc., are to renew the first picture activities at the Pacific Studios in San Mateo, near San Francisco. The Modern Madonna starring Milton Sills will start production the middle of June under the direction of James Horne.

Estelle Taylor plays the leading feminine role and is expected to surprise with her conception of the vampire. Lewis Stone plays opposite the star.

Harold Hurley, former manager of the Superba Theatre, Los Angeles, has been transferred to Salt Lake City where he will be in charge of the Universal interests in that territory. He will have his headquarters at the Kinema Theatre there and will probably remain throughout the summer. The management of the Superba Theatre has been taken over by Noble Hearne, one of the best showmen of Southern California.

The new pictures ready for release are The Village Blacksmith, an all-star Fox; Trooper O'Neill with Buck Jones, a Fox; A Self-Made Man with William Russell; Strange Idols with Dustin Farnum, Fox; Lights of the Desert, Fox, with Shirley Mason; The Man Unconquerable, Paramount, Jack Holt; The Siren Call, Paramount, Agnes Ayres; Crimson Gold with James B. Warner; Wreckage, R-C, Harry Carey; Up and At 'Em, R-C with Doris May; Christmas, R-C with Carter De Haven; The Crow's Nest with Jack Hoxie; The Married Flapper, Universal, with Marie Prevost; A Previous Engagement with Owen Moore; The Fighting Guide with William Duncan and Dickey with Earle Williams.

Jackie Coogan is a real live radio fan, having a receiving set at the studio and one at his home. Recently arrangements were made with a Los Angeles newspaper to broadcast a whole speech made by Jackie.

Arrangements are now being made by Sol Lesser whereby Jackie will make radio connections with all the West Coast theatres showing Trouble and speak via this new device, the sub-titles of the picture. This will be the first time in motion picture history that a stunt such as this has been arranged.

Madge Bellamy, one of the most popular photoplayers who has recently completed an engagement in the leading role of the Thomas H. Ince production, Someone to Love, has been selected to play opposite Jack Pickford in his first United Artists picture. Miss Bellamy will start next week, when Pickford returns to Hollywood from New York, where he has been taking scenes of the Metropolitan Handicap, which will serve to give his racing story realistic backgrounds. Arthur Rossen is directing and Elmer Harris is supervising the production. Garrison's Finish will mark the formal return of Jack to the screen as a star. He has been directing for the past two years, during which time he has presided over the megaphone in two productions of his sister, Mary. These were Through the Back Door and Little Lord Fauntleroy.

Metro is lining up a number of new stories for its newest star Billie Dove, lately of the Follies. The company has just purchased The Temporary Marriage written especially for the screen by Cardell Hale.

Harry Carey's Production Condemned has been completed at the R-C studios. The story is an original by Edgar Forrest, adapted to the screen by George Edwards Hall. The members that support Mr. Carey in this new picture are Ethel Grey Terry, Henry Walthall, Verter Pegg, Charles Lemoyne, Mignone and Jimmie O'Neil. The picture will be sent East this week and will be the first of the Harry Carey Productions to be released through R-C.

The next vehicle to go into production under the Harry Carey banner is Good Men and True from the pen of Eugene Manlove Rhodes, whose stories appear in the Saturday Evening Post. Mr. Carey will enact the role of J. Wesley Pringle, a character made famous by this author. The other two Rhodes stories filmed by Mr. Carey are West Is West and The Wallop, which were made under the Universal banner.

There has been considerable discussion on the Lasky lot as to who would direct Rodolph Valentino in his next picture, The Young Rajah. Some time ago it was announced by the Lasky organization that Fred Niblo was to direct a series of features starring Valentino, but Mr. Niblo has been engaged by Louis B. Mayer to make his own productions, so the latest announcement from the Lasky lot bears the news that Philip Rosen is the chosen one. The story is adapted by June Mathis from the novel Amos Judd by J. A. Mitchell. Mr. Rosen is busily engaged in selecting New England scenes near Hollywood.

Daniel Carson Goodman Productions have announced that the following players will be in the cast of What's the Matter with the Women, a William Lackaye story: Barbara Castleton, Rod La Rocque, Julia Swayne Gordon, Montague Love, Hedda Hopper, Constance Bennett and Beatrice Wagner. The story will go into production immediately.

Rowland V. Lee has completed the editing of his latest William Russell production The Self-Made Man the print of which has been shipped to New York. The title of his next picture will be announced shortly.

Gareth Hughes has been signed to play in The Christian by Hall Caine. His role will be brother Paul, the lay-brother in a monastery, whose soul struggle in his effort to renounce the world supplies a poignant theme.

Hughes will join the company on the return of Director Maurice Tourneur, with Richard Dix and Mae Busch, the principals, to Culver City about the end of June. They are now in England filming scenes.

United Stars Productions, a new company, chartered at $1.000,000, announced it will construct a studio at Oakland, Cal. N. J. Whelan, Peter N. Toscano, Lawrence A. Hughes and Eugene A. Perry, the latter former manager of Loew's State, constitute the board of directors. It is understood that Arthur Rossen will be the director general.

Manager Harry David of the Mission Theatre, Los Angeles, announces the world premiere of the Fox super-feature, A Fool There Was. The story has been modernized over the Theda Bara version.

Robert Bruce Has New Canine Actor

Ugliest of Airdales Will Be Featured in "Jenkins and the Mutt," for Education Release in Wilderness Tales

Robert C. Bruce, noted scenic artist, as is well known to admirers of his pictures, is a lover of dogs, and has taken many of them with him on various picture making expeditions. Most of the dogs he has owned and loved have come to some violent and untimely end. One fell off a cliff. Another happened to be standing on an ice floe just at the point where the ice split, and he never was seen again.

Now Mr. Bruce, who is on the Pacific Coast, making more of his Wilderness Tales for Educational release, has a new dog, which he acquired in San Francisco to use in a picture which he is calling Jenkins and the Mutt. This dog is so ugly that Mr. Bruce thinks he couldn't find another dog to match him if he hunted up and down the whole coast.

Jenkins and the Mutt and the sea picture, which is as yet untitled, will be units of the second series of Wilderness Tales. Pictures of the first series are now attracting much attention in all parts of the country. My Country, in which are presented the pick of a large number of beautiful shots made in Washington and Oregon, has just run for two weeks at the Capitol Theatre in New York, although the feature picture was changed.

And Women Must Weep and The One Man Reunion have been listed and reviewed as exceptional pictures in Exceptional Photoplays, the National Board of Review's critical publication, which had never before reviewed a single reel subject.

Mrs. Lowy Praises Pathe's Serial of "Timber Queen"

Unusual praise has been given the new Pathe serial, The Timber Queen, starring Ruth Roland, by Mrs. Arthur Lowy, manager of Schindler's Theatres in Chicago. Mrs. Lowy has been prominent in the motion picture industry in the Windy City for some years and is considered one of the best authorities on good pictures in the Middle West. Not only high praise is given the chapter play by Mrs. Lowy, but generous words of commendation are also given to Pathe for sponsoring an offering which is clean in every respect and which is censor-proof.

"I want you to pardon me for being tardy in writing you regarding The Timber Queen, writes Mrs. Lowy to Pathe. I might start my letter by telling you that I seldom look at a feature unless it is a great big special. I never occupy my time in this direction for the very good reason that I run only a feature one night and I think that it is not necessary for me to devote my energy in this direction, but on the serial it is different. I am buying something that I run for fifteen solid weeks, and I must know that this picture possesses all of the attributes and essentials to hold and entertain the adults as well as the children. I have an exceptionally good adult business as well as a children's clientele, and I, therefore, must be very cautious when I book a serial.

"I believe that I am safe in saying that I booked 60, perhaps 70 per cent of all the serials that have been made and believe I can qualify as a judge of good serials. I not only play them, but I see each episode of each serial, and of all the serials that have ever been made, The Timber Queen is the best that I have ever seen. The first three episodes are the snappiest, brimful of action pictures to my notion yet produced."

Interest in Eaton's Sport Reviews Is Not Confined to Theatres

In addition to the theatrical value of the Sport Review series now being produced by Jack Eaton for Weiss Brothers' Artclass Pictures Corporation, it is said these various single-reel releases are attracting the attention of public school authorities throughout the country. Due to the outdoor nature of these subjects and the fact that they sponsor various well-known branches of sport, they are being booked for public school and college showings regularly.

Among the most popular Sport Reviews for Young America, according to Goldwyn, the distributor, are Playing the Game, Record Breakers, Building Up, Winter Pep, and Speed. These particular films carry an especial appeal, dealing with athletic training and the proper care of the body. In addition to the popularity of Sport Reviews in the public schools, bookings are also being requested by various Y. M. C. A. branches, Government posts and the Navy Yard. The series of twenty-six has been booked for the dreadnoughts of the navy.

Pathe Says There's Only One Make of Screen Snapshots

Producers of Screen Snapshots and the Pathe organization, which holds distribution rights to the new series of this "fan news magazine" of the screen, this week issued a general warning to the effect that there is only one series of Screen Snapshots and that this is issued through Pathe alone.

It has come to the attention of the Pathe officials, and of Jack Cohn and Louis Lewyn, editors of Screen Snapshots, that because of the popularity of this reel with exhibitors and the general public other organizations are making similar subjects.

Mr. Cohn has requested that no appointment to photograph anything for Screen Snapshots be honored unless with direct authorization from himself or Mr. Lewyn, and that the name under a copyright filed in Washington belongs exclusively to this reel, which is released through Pathe.

"Pathe has sole distribution rights to this reel," the company said this week. "It has been a great success since its inception, and it is one of the biggest single reels on the market to-day. Anything successful is sure to be copied—but there is only one Screen Snapsohts, and that is Pathe's."

Educational Issues Booked for Showings in Largest Houses

Poor Boy! the final release of the Mermaid Comedy series in which Lloyd Hamilton is to be featured, and a current Educational release, is showing at the Rivoli Theatre, New York, the week of June 18. Irene Dalton is Hamilton's leading woman in this two-reel laugh fest, which has been classed as Hamilton's best work by several well known critics.

'Tis the Bull, an Educational-Christie Comedy in which Bobby Vernon both throws and fights the bull, is showing at the Branford Theatre, Newark.

Cold Feet, Christie's travesty on the Curwood stories of the frozen North, and Spooks! a Jack White production in the Mermaid Comedy series, in which a "chamber of horrors" is the scene of a lot of fast and funny comedy action, have been booked for showing at either the Rivoli or Rialto Theatre in New York, but the dates have not been definitely set.

New Stages for Century

Four new stages, a new large garage and new fire protection are only a part of the visible growth of Century studios which will also include larger and improved quarters for the recent added animal stars.

With the signing up of directors such as Herman, Taurog and Pratt the additional stages became necessary. So much outside work has been done recently that the larger garage was necessary for the location cars. New scenery, cameras and Cooper Hewitts are being ordered and an up-to-date fire extinguisher added which protects every building.

"Case of Identity" Maintains Quality of Sherlock Series

Educational's third release in the series of "Sherlock Holmes" stories is A Case of Identity. Eille Norwood is Sherlock Holmes, and he plays the role with the same fine regard for the character of the detective that he has displayed in the two preceding chapters. Mr. Norwood takes the part of Holmes with the utmost seriousness, carefully avoiding anything that might incline toward lessening in any way the respect he feels is due the great crime detector.

In the role of Mary Sutherland, the stepdaughter of Joseph Windibank, is a young woman who will be remembered by the photoplaygoer of a decade ago—when she was very young—Edna Flugrath, sister of Viola Dana, and a well-known member of the Edison stock company.

The story is of Windibank, who, in order to make secure the continued enjoyment of his stepdaughter's income, makes love to her, with the aid of a disguise, and then disappears. In distress the girl appeals to Holmes.

An interesting fact in connection with the story is that undoubtedly it was one of the first occasions in which the expert in typewriting figured, in which was disseminated the information that each machine has an individuality.

The picture is well made and will interest.

Pathe News Adds Babson Statistics As Novel Feature

With the current mid-week issue Pathe News inaugurates a new and novel feature of statistical cartoons on vital subjects made in co-operation with the Babson Statistical Service. The first of the series illustrates Russia's financial survey.

Each cartoon of the series will have a direct bearing on business conditions, and will show the operations of upward and downward business flow. The authenticity of these facts and figures visualized in graphic form are guaranteed by Babson's experts, whose accuracy in forecasting trade conditions have won them worldwide reputation.

Pathe believes this innovation will prove a service that will be appreciated both by alert business men who study the flux and reflux of currency and to exhibitors who realize that the international money question affects his own box office.

The next issue will contain a more pertinent cartoon applicable to all who are interested in where their money goes. This will be called The Outcome of Your Income.

Joe the Monk Is a Genuine Funmaker in "Circus Days"

Joe, the little monkey, who made such a hit in The Four Horsemen, continues his antics in Circus Days, a Campbell Comedy released by Educational. He is surrounded by the same youngsters and a lot of others besides. The picture is a combination of kid stuff—and we are in no measure speaking in derogation of the subject—and adult stuff. The kids have their own part and the grown-ups theirs.

There's a circus by and for the youngsters which contains a number of laughs—and that's where Joe enters and the Campbell dog also shows a few tricks.

Hamilton in Electrics

An evidence of Lloyd Hamilton's increasing popularity in the South as well as in other parts of the country comes from Atlanta, where the big first run Metropolitan Theatre has just carried his name in big lights on the front of the theatre for a week. This is the first time any film comedian with the exception of three notables has been advertised in street lights in this territory.

The picture being shown was the Educational-Mermaid Comedy, The Rainmaker, which has won praise for Hamilton everywhere shown.

REVIEWS OF CURRENT SHORT SUBJECTS

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS NO. 3—Pathe Release.—In a fudgemaking spree are seen Carmel Myers, Bessie Love, Ruth Clifford, Pauline Stark, and Colleen Moore—and it is for a charitable purpose. Baby Peggy maintains her reputation as the child marvel—a marvel surely and easily a contender for the "the" qualification. Others seen are Bryant Washburn, Anita Stewart, Buster Keaton, Paul Scardon, Miss Dupont, Clarence Badger, Marie Prevost, "Snub" Pollard, Marie Mosquini and Nell Shipman.

KINETO REVIEW—"Lighting the Sea Lanes to New York Harbor."—An interesting demonstration of the manner in which the Government protects and guides the incoming and outgoing mariner. As an illustration, Ambrose Channel, the "Broadway of Waterways," six miles long and 2,000 feet wide, is shown in detail, with its lighted buoys and its caretaker and its lightship.

PATHE REVIEW NO. 162—Among the subjects treated interestingly are the polar bear hunters of Northern Siberia—an unusual section; remarkable photographic views of St. John's River in Florida; the police dogs of South Africa; the world's greatest bridge, that over the Firth of Forth, and the Pathecolor "The City of Arles and Arlelatum."

THE ADVENTURES OF ROBINSON CRUSOE—Chapter 13 of Universal serial.—There are some good scenes at the opening portraying the escape of Crusoe, Marion, Friday and the old man from the burning and sinking vessel. The closing of the episode is of a sword fight between Crusoe and the buccaneers, in the course of which Crusoe's sword is broken.

KINETO REVIEW—"Science at Home," third series.—The entire subject of 854 feet is devoted to showing what may be accomplished with a home-made gyro-designer. While there is a lot of footage devoted to one subject, nevertheless it should be of genuine interest, especially to the feminine portion of the house.

THE GHOST OF THE RANCHO—Pathe Playlet.—Bryant Washburn is the featured player in a story of the border that contains considerable drama, a bit of a thrill and also a little comedy. Rhea Mitchell plays opposite Washburn, and the two make a good team. William Worthington directed.

KINETO REVIEW—"British Castles."—Windsor Castle, the chief residence of the sovereigns of England, is shown from many angles, with many views of the grounds and surroundings. Other castles shown are Carnavon, Picton, Bodiam, and Hampton Court.

JUST NEIGHBORS—Harold Lloyd reissue, released by Pathe.—A story of over-the-fence squabbles of two married couples, with Snub Pollard and Bebe Daniels contributing their full share. One of the best of the series.

TEN SECONDS—"Century Comedy," released by Universal.—Lee Moran plays a would-be battling chauffeur in these two reels. The comedy is attenuated, almost to the vanishing point.

FRIDAY, THE THIRTEENTH—Hal Roach Comedy released by Pathe.—Paul Parrott is featured in this single reel comedy, and is ably assisted by Jobyna Ralston and Eddie Baker.

UNDER THE ICE—Chapter 13 of the Go-Get-'Em Hutch serial, released by Pathe.—The chapter holds up the interest of the serial, and ends in a way that may be characterized as out of the ordinary.

THE MAN HATERS—Rolin Comedy, featuring the Rolin Girls, released by Pathe. Rather thin comedy, but the girls will make it interesting for many.

"The Innocent Cheat" Goes Over Big

Arrow Gives Much Attention to Exploitation of Ben Wilson Special for Broadway Premiere, Using Small Town Methods

The awaited Arrow special, The Innocent Cheat, was given its premier presentation at B. S. Moss' Broadway Theatre, Broadway and Forty-first Street, New York, Monday, June 19, and met with enthusiastic reception from press and public.

Long before time for the box office to open crowds stood in line waiting to see this production which has received the benefit of considerable publicity created and put into effect by Arrow.

Working on the theory that New York was just as susceptible to "hokum" as any other section of the country Arrow's exploitation department put over a campaign which was no different from that employed in thousands of smaller cities throughout the country time and time again but which was very different from the usual method of advertising a production in a Broadway theatre. That this reasoning was sound was proved by the tremendous interest aroused and the capacity business done by the picture. The campaign consisted of an extensive use of a novelty mailing card supplied by Arrow for this production. One was a reproduction of a playing card imprinted with the name and date of the theatre. The other was the two-women-in-one novelty folder, and both of these attracted a great deal of attention.

These were sent out to the house's regular mailing list and in addition men were sent through the metropolitan district distributing them in offices, stores, hotels and dwelling houses. Arrangements were made with the Atlantic and Pacific Tea stores to send one out in each package. Next a baby carriage was secured, on the cover of which was painted a huge question mark. On both sides and the front of this carriage was lettered the name of the attraction and the theatre, and a heavily-veiled, well-dressed woman was engaged to wheel the baby carriage from the theatre up one side of Broadway and down the other, through Forty-second Street and up and down Fifth Avenue.

It sounds simple and nothing original about it—which is perfectly true—but when you take into consideration the fact that even the old-timers cannot remember having seen a baby carriage on Broadway in many years, one can imagine the effect this this produced. So much attention did the young woman and her Innocent Cheat baby carriage on Broadway attract that it was necessary for the police to clear a passage for her and she frequently blocked traffic.

Arrangements were made with the New York Morning Telegraph whereby several thousand copies of this paper, were imprinted with red ink over the entire face of the paper, the imprint consisting of a huge "extra" across the top and the announcement that The Innocent Cheat opened at the Broadway Theatre that day. Ex-service men were employed to invade the theatrical district as the crowds were leaving the various theatres, particular care being taken that a man was placed in front of every theatre.

In addition to the above Manager McDonald had prepared a most artistic front for the theatre, used a number of oil paintings in his lobby display and had out in front of the theatre previous to the showing and during the showing a trailer shown on an automatic projection machine which ran continuously day and night. This attracted a crowd.

Results: A spell of hot weather backed up with a lot of rain failed to keep the public away and excellent business for the theatre and an I-told-you-so smile on the face of Dr. W. E. Shallenberger, who has believed The Innocent Cheat to be one of the big pictures of the year.

Players in "Wild Youth" Make Stage Appearances

In connection with the extensive publicity campaign which is to mark the States right release of Ivan Abramson's Wild Youth in early September a novel and effective shot in the series of exploitation stunts being prepared was fired last week when eight screen notables in the cast of the picture told of their individual parts in the story from the stage of Moss's Broadway Theatre. Those who made personal appearance in behalf of the production and discussed the plot and movies in general included Virginia Pearson, Mary Anderson, Julia Swayne Gordon, Joseph Striker, little Bobby Connelly, Harry Morey, Thurston Hall, Harry Southard and others.

Work on the production, it is announced at the Graphic offices, is progressing at the Talmadge studios, where all of the interior sets will be completed within two weeks.

"Night Life in Hollywood" Is Story of Players at Home

In Night Life in Hollywood, which has just been released, Fred Caldwell, author and producer, has used Hollywood and its leading film stars as the background. Among the players introduced are Wally Reid and family, Bryant Washburn, Sessue Hayakawa (showing his beautiful Hollywood castle), Theodore Roberts, William Desmond and many others.

Famed stars' kiddies also make their first appearance in this picture. In one of the scenes the swimming pool of Will Rogers is used.

The most spectacular scene presented is the Hollywood Bowl with 75,000 in attendance.

Mr. Caldwell is at the present time in New York making arrangements for distribution.

Arista Announces Release

The Arista Film Corporation of 729 Seventh Avenue, New York, which makes a specialty of subjects pertaining to Jewish life, announces The Orphan of the Ghetto, a drama of the life of New York's East Side, featuring Arthur Donaldson as the Pawnbroker. The picture is in six reels and is already booked in several Marcus Loew houses as well as to the entire circuit of houses of the M. & S. theatres.

Jack Warner and Harry Rapf Bring "Rags to Riches"

Harry Rapf and Jack Warner arrived last week at the eastern offices of the Warner Brothers organization with the print of the next Wesley Barry feature, Rags to Riches, which was directed by Wallace Worsley. The feature, a Rapf production, will be released in the fall.

Jack Warner

The sudden departure of Mr. Rapf from the Coast to the East is said to have been necessary in connection with several other stories scheduled to be produced by Rapf for the coming season. Mr. Rapf reiterated the report that the Coast studios are humming with activity.

This is Mr. Warner's first trip East in two years. He has confined himself mainly with the production of the Monty Banks two-reel comedies. He believes that future comedies must be devoid of vulgarity and horseplay.

"Good, clean comedies," said Mr. Warner, "serve to add spice to an exhibitor's program. The day of slap-dash-hokum comedies is gone. The trend of the times indicates that future short subjects must be made with good taste and discernment in screen values. By that I mean wholesome, worthwhile, entertaining comedies devoid of suggestiveness. There is a constant demand for good comedies, and the popularity of some of the comedy stars proves this fact."

Sanford Reports Sales

Sanford Productions has sold its series of twelve two-reel "Tweedy" comedies and eight five-reel semi-Westerns featuring Pete Morrison to the Peerless Film Service of San Francisco, for California, Nevada, Arizona and Hawaii. To the Southern States Film Company of Atlanta, Dallas, New Orleans and Oklahoma City the Pete Morrison productions also have been sold.

Weber and North Sign William Nigh

Director of "Why Girls Leave Home" and "School Days" to Make Four Productions for the State Rights Market

William Nigh, one of the foremost directors in the independent field, has signed up with the state rights team of Weber & North, to direct and present four superproductions for the coming season. He will aim to make the calibre of the pictures as high as that of Why Girls Leave Home and School Days.

The announcement is accepted as a guarantee that independent distributors and showmen will have four strong productions next season. Ever since Nigh completed his former contract the director has received many proposals. Weber & North's proposition filled the bill and Nigh accepted.

The deal places Weber & North among the larger factors in the state rights field. Nigh's performances in the past have drawn attention. Last year he turned out Why Girls Leave Home, which was created by him and molded from nothing into a clean-up. He followed this with School Days, a Wesley Barry feature with nothing but a kid song as its basis, and made it a big box-office success.

Nigh thereby showed a genius for box-office value. His last handiwork, Your Best Friend, is another revelation in direction and manipulation when the time and material with which he had to work are considered.

It is said Nigh knows no rest or relief from the beginning to the end of a film. No detail escapes him. Scenario, titling, continuity, setting and the endless details from start to finish come under his personal scrutiny.

Weber & North will extend unlimited facilities for the success of Nigh's future output. Nigh will have a free hand. Every possible support will be extended to him and no expense will be spared. Nigh's own belief is that his coming productions will outclass anything he has done. He has at his disposal abundant stories and stars. The features will be made in the East.

"Son of Napoleon" to Be State Righted by Howells Sales

The five-part feature attraction, The Son of Napoleon, which is being prepared for the American state rights market by the Howells Sales Co., is a screen version of the life of the Duke of Reichstag, the son of Napoleon and Empress Eugenie, and whose life was made the subject of Rostand's drama, L'Aiglon, in which Maude Adams appeared several years ago.

The Howells company has prepared advertising matter to be distributed in connection with the attraction, original in character. The picture has been titled and edited by Lesley Mason and is the first of the early fall releases to be distributed by way of the state rights market by the Howells company.

Second National Reports Bookings Are Holding Up

Hot weather bookings of Second National Pictures Corporation releases are holding up well, according to reports received at the New York office. It is said that the suggestion of cooling sea breezes in David and Jonathan and Her Story, photoplays of romantic adventure by land and sea, and of the bracing mountain air of the Canadian Rockies in The Night Riders, is proving gratifying to patrons of the theatres showing these pictures.

The first is the picturization of E. Temple Thurston's novel of the same name, in which a charming young woman and two young men are cast away together on an island near the coast of Africa after the burning of a ship at sea. In Her Story, written for the screen by Dion Titheradge to feature his sister, Madge Titheradge, the heroine, daughter of a ship captain, takes command of the vessel after the death of her father at sea and brings it safe to port. The Night Riders is the visualization of Ridgewell Cullum's popular Northwestern novel, featuring Maudie Dunham, Albert Ray and Andre Beaulieu.

Miss Du Pre Stars in Subject Made by Casco Productions

From the offices of the Casco Productions, Inc., in the Candler Building, New York, comes the announcement that the first production starring Louise Du Pre, Mary Pickford's former understudy, has been completed, edited and titled, and that this five-reel subject will be available to independent distributors at once as a special hot weather attraction, to fill the present demand for something exceptional to boost attendance, or for fall delivery to those exchanges with full slates for the summer season.

An extensive publicity campaign has been carried on by the Casco company for the past several months and already several hundred thousand lines of space has been given by newspapers to the coming debut of Louise Du Pre as a star in Casco productions.

Catherine Calvert as Adora Winstanley in "That Woman," produced by Capt. F. C. Mims and directed by Harry O. Hoyt

An elaborate line of advertising accessories has been prepared for the subject that will simplify the showing of this picture.

The press book is a thirty-two page volume, laid out in the order in which stories are usually carried by an advance man.

Practical tie-ups of real benefit to merchants as well as the exhibitor, and therefore easy to "put over" are suggested.

The picture will be released under the title of The Proof of Innocence—a dramatic romance of the art studios of Greenwich Village, with Louise Du Pre playing the part of an artist model.

R. C. Reports Good Demand for Revue and Travelaugh

Following the fifth Hy Mayer Travelaugh on the R-C short subject program will be Starland Revue No. 5, which contains its customary fascinating scenes of Broadway stage stars and plays. Starland Revue is fast winning the reputation of "bringing Broadway to Main Street." Reports from R-C branch managers indicate that the small towns as well as the large cities are interested in the current Broadway stage attractions.

Both the Hy Mayer Travelaughs and Starland Revue are proving popular throughout the country, reports R-C. Many of the largest first run theatres are following the lead of the Capitol Theatre in New York and showing the entire series of Travelaughs at regular intervals.

"Ten Nights" Sold Abroad

Ten Nights in a Barroom, the success released by the Arrow Film Corporation, figures prominently in the news emanating from the foreign department of that company this week. Pearl Films, Ltd., of London, has bought it for the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

This picture has been given a premier showing at one of London't foremost theatres and is said to have met with the same success abroad that it enjoyed here. In addition, twelve Speed Comedies and The Blue Fox serial, starring Ann Little, were sold to Interocean Film Corporation.

Ten Nights has been sold to International Variety and Theatrical Agency for South Africa. This firm also purchased a series of eighteen single reel Spotlight Comedies for South Africa.

"Short Weight" Goes to Rialto

Short Weight, the trials and tribulations of a grocery clerk who doesn't want to work, will be seen at the Rialto Theatre, New York, the week of June 25. This Century Comedy features Johnny Fox, as the unwilling grocer's boy, and he is supported by Brownie the wonder dog, who in the story helps Johnny to keep his job as long as it is humanly possible. This is one of the small town boy series in which Julius Stern is featuring young Fox.

Zierler Buys "Big Stakes"

Sam Zierler of the Commonwealth Film Corporation of 729 Seventh Avenue has purchased from Franklyn E. Backer of East Coast Productions the rights of Big Stakes for New York and northern New Jersey.

The picture is a Western five-reel feature in which J. B. Warner is starred.

The second of the Backer series, Crimson Gold, has reached New York.

Howells Sales Resumes Distribution

David P. Howells Announces Completion of Plans for State Rights Circulation of Substantial Productions

The Howells Sales Co., which has heretofore released via the state rights market the serial The Son of Tarzan and among other feature attractions Vendetta and Intrigue, each starring Pola Negri, and You Find It Everywhere, featuring Herbert Rawlinson and Catherine Calvert, have been for the past two months perfecting its plans looking toward the state rights distribution of a substantial series of feature attractions, and have quietly but thoroughly effected such plans for an enlarged fall market.

The Howells company, which is the state rights corporation handling independent attractions for the domestic market, was the natural outgrowth of David P. Howells, Inc., which has attained eminence in foreign exploitation of American-made productions.

"While the position of the larger producing organizations can never be materially lessened," said David P. Howells, "nevertheless there must always remain a substanital market for what is termed state rights productions, just as long as such attractions are of merit. It is and always will be quite impossible for any individual institution or even group of institutions to monopolize the distribution of motion pictures in the American market, and theatre owners will and must always be left free to book productions of merit, regardless of the source of either their production or distribution.

"The state rights market will continue to gain impetus and strength in proportion to the increasing high character of the independent releases and the exploitation assistance that state rights distributors render to the exchange and theatre owners.

"With that belief in mind I have so shaped our state rights organization as to distribute a steady supply of motion pictures made both in foreign countries and in the United States and to back up such distribution with continued assistance by way of advertising and exploitation.

"We have at present six productions the exploitation of which will commence immediately, and we will keep adding to our releases sufficient attractions to supply the state rights market with a commodity that will stand favorable comparison with the best of American made pictures. By this I do not mean the Howells company will exploit foreign made pictures only.

Artclass Pictures' "After Six Days" Has First Showing

The first showing anywhere in the world occurred on Saturday, June 17, of After Six Days, the much discussed feature version of the Old Testament, sponsored by Weiss Brothers' Artclass Pictures Corporation. The picture was opened for an indefinite engagement at Wood's theatre on the Boardwalk. Up to the present writing all box office records have been shattered by the Weiss production in the summer resort theatre. The film did $1,800 on the opening day and has been showing big box office receipts each day during the week.

Louis Weiss and Bert Ennis attended the premiere and took charge of a big exploitation campaign. The entire city was covered with lithographs and window cards, the various organizations were circularized through means of a special letter, and the clergy and leading figures in public life were invited to the opening, in addition to several celebrities at present visiting Atlantic City.

A special display of twenty-five paintings was made in the lobby. The advertising in the newspapers dominated the amusement section in each instance, together with special stories carried on the front page. Particular attention was given to the music and presentation of the picture. It is expected the Old Testament film will stay at Wood's theatre for the next four weeks.

Saenger Enterprises Books Over Circuit "Your Best Friend"

Bookings on the latest Warner Brothers attraction, Your Best Friend, a Harry Rapf production starring Vera Gordon, being received at the Warner offices are said to reveal in no small measure the increasing popularity of the star and the merits of the feature.

From the Creole Enterprises, New Orleans, comes the report that the Saenger Enterprises has booked the attraction throughout its entire circuit. This is said to be the biggest single booking thus far secured in the southern territory. The Creole concern controls the rights for Mississippi and Louisiana.

Reports from other state rights buyers are declared to indicate the success that is attending its exhibition.

Export and Import Receive Print of Greenland Scenes

Export and Import Film Company, Inc., has received a print of the exclusive motion pictures of the Rasmussen Expedition to Greenland. The subject is now in five-reel form, and is said to contain many beautiful Arctic scenes, among which are an exciting polar bear chase, a walrus hunt and some sensational seal shots. The life of Greenland Eskimos is shown in all its picturesqueness. J. G. Wainwright brought the pictures over from London. They should be of especial appeal to summer audiences. Distribution as yet is unsettled.

Ben Wilson Comes East to Start Off "Innocent Cheat"

Ben Wilson, producer and director of the Ben Wilson-Arrow special, The Innocent Cheat, starring Roy Stewart and Kathleen Kirkham, made a flying trip from the Coast in order to attend the premier presentation of his picture at B. S. Moss's Broadway Theatre.

Mr. Wilson was called upon to make a few remarks at the evening performance and expressed himself as delighted with the manner in which the production was presented and the reception accorded it by the New York audience.

Mitchell Gets Quick Action on Warner's "School Days"

That the southern exhibitors are getting big results from the Warner Brothers feature, School Days, featuring Wesley Barry, is evidenced in the report sent by M. Mitchell, who controls the southern rights, to the Warner offices.

He reports more than $10,000 in bookings were secured within a fortnight, following the announcement of the release of the feature in six states. Virtually every key city theatre in the south has contracted to show the feature.

Mildred Phillips Engaged to Manage Starland Revue

Jack Cohn this week announces the appointment of Mildred E. Phillips as managing editor of Starland Revue, a single-reel devoted to stage people and plays, and released through the R-C Distributing Corporation, which after July 1 will be known as the Film Booking Offices of America. Miss Phillips comes to Starland Revue from the Fox Film Corporation, where she served on the editorial staff of Fox News. Previous to this she was Sunday editor of the Syracuse Post Standard. She has a thorough knowledge of the New York theatrical field.

Completing "Mr. Potter of Texas"

The Producers Security Corporation, which last week announced the acquisition of world's distribution rights for the new Dorothy Gish feature, The Country Flapper, announces that the big Maclyn Arbuckle feature Mr. Potter of Texas, will be ready for release in about two weeks.

This is the famous Archibald Clavering Gunter story which found its way to nearly every library in the country. The feature is in six reels.

Beckert Has Arabian Nights Story

Edward Harten Beckert announces he has acquired the exclusive rights for the sale in the United States and Canada of the Ermolieff picture, Thousand and One Nights. The production is reported to have been successfully exhibited in Paris and London. It is acted entirely by Russians, with Natalie Kovanko in the leading role. The story is from the Arabian Nights. The picture is being retitled and edited by J. E. Robbins. Announcement will be made shortly as to distribution.

Burr Denies Any Idea of Stopping Torchy Productions

Persistent trade reports that production on the Torchy series featuring Johnny Hines had come to an end were emphatically denied at the Mastodon film office this week when C. C. Burr, producer of the "Torchy" comedies, announced that the Torchy series would positively be continued, reports to the contrary notwithstanding.

"From the very inception of the Torchy comedies based on the famous stories by Sewell Ford," said Mr. Burr, "we have applied ourselves religiously toward making this series one that would fill a popular demand. No means were spared to make each comedy better than its predecessor. The prestige obtained by the Torchy comedies and the high place accorded them in film circles has prompted us to enlarge rather than curtail it, as the trade reports have it.

"As a matter of pure business policy alone, it would be foolish to curtail production when the largest theatre owners in the United States persistently book our Torchy product, and consistently ask for more. Torchy comedies are being played not only in every key city, but in every sizable town throughout the country, as evidenced by a survey of bookings made on each comedy.

"In view of the formidable array of solid bookings on the complete output, and the many praiseworthy exhibitor and circuit expressions of the merit and quality of the series, it would be foolhardy to curtail production on a series that is so universally in demand. Torchy comedies will continue to be made," concluded Mr. Burr.

Cohn and Le Saint Reach New York With C. B. C. Film

Edward Le Saint, who directed the production of More to Be Pitied Than Scorned, and Harry Cohn of the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation, arrived in New York from California this week on the Century, bringing with them the print of this first of the company's new series of melodramas.

Mr. Le Saint had not at first intended making the cross-continent trip, but changed his mind at the last moment upon receipt of word of a special showing that is being arranged for Charles E. Blaney, on whose great Broadway success the film version is founded.

Meanwhile, the plans for the special trade showing are rapidly maturing, and C. B. C. reports the receipt of more inquiries every day and requests for showings at the earliest possible opportunity. It is probable from the looks of things now that a special showing will have to be held for exhibitors and another one for other branches of the industry—territorial buyers, program organization heads and others who have expressed interest in the feature because of the story itself and the strength of the cast, including Rosemary Theby, Alice Lake, J. Frank Glendon, Philo McCollough, Gordon Griffith, and Baby Josephine Adair.

A reason for Mr. Cohn's and Mr. Le Saint's trip East is also the necessity for going over plans on the other features on the series which C. B. C. has announced.

More to Be Pitied Than Scorned is the first of the series to be followed by Only a Shop Girl another of the Charles E. Blaney successes, which is to be produced with an all-star cast of equal strength.

Urban Movie Chats Convert Theatre Patrons Into Readers

Just as the motion picture orchestras have made patrons for the symphony concerts by acquainting them with the composers, so are the Urban Movie Chats making theatre patrons into readers of books by acquainting them with authors.

In the newest Urban Movie Chat Mrs. Wilson Woodrow, the well-known writer on topics of especial interest to women, is asked her opinion on the moot question, "Should wives obey their husbands?"

In a fine pictorial interview Mrs. Woodrow says:

"In the past the law gave men authority over their wives, but no legislation can control the instinct which insists upon equality of mind, soul and body between husband and wife.

"Marriage is a partnership and not a despotism. Partners in business aim to further their mutual interests. Partners in the home should do likewise.

"If a woman should try to carry out all orders given by her husband, she would be laughed at. But she doesn't—she has too much common sense."

Jans to Distribute Preferred

Herman F. Jans, president of Jans Film Service, announces that he has secured for northern New Jersey, including Trenton, a franchise to distribute the Al Lichtman Corporation "Preferred" Productions.

Jans Film Service will inaugurate early in September the release of these productions with Rich Men's Wives, a picture directed by Louis Gasnier, and will follow with others at regular intervals to be announced later.

Auerbach Returns to New York

Louis Auerbach, vice-president of Export and Import, returned to New York Monday from a three weeks' visit at the Coast, where he made arrangements for the fall producing campaign of his company.

It is stated he has opened negotiations for the world rights of several independent productions.

Out-of-Town Arrow Visitors

Among the visitors to Arrow offices this week was W. G. Underwood, president of the Specialty Film Co., Dallas, Tex., who dropped in to talk things over and plan his fall campaign.

Ben Friedman of Minneapolis, Minn., Sam Grand of Boston and Harry Charnas of Cleveland were also among those present.

Lobby Magnetism

Gestures Which Beckon to the Man Outside

E. R. Rogers, managing director, Rialto Theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn., specializes in dressing the lobby for the occasion. The decidedly martial air achieved for the Metro production "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," is shown above. Below is the same lobby made suggestive of the frontiers for the run of Universal's "Wild Honey." His success in carrying the atmosphere of the play to the front of the theatre is notable for its simplicity of scheme and striking effect.

Hyman Scores with "Trouble" Stunt

Brooklyn Responds to Campaign Effected Through Tie-up with Newspaper and Near East Relief

By EDWARD L. HYMAN
Managing Director Brooklyn Mark Strand Theatre

THIRTY-FIVE hundred enthusiastic boys and girls of Brooklyn—kids of every station in life—headed up the campaign of exploitation we put on at the Brooklyn Mark Strand in advance of the showing of Jackie Coogan in Trouble.

Added to the 3500 youngsters was the influence of the Brooklyn Eagle, which newspaper worked with the children's army of boosters. And added to the Brooklyn Eagle was the help of a great national relief organization, also an ally in our advance program to mould public opinion in favor of Jackie and his comedy. Mrs. P. H. Andrew, director of the Near East Relief, joined whole-heartedly in the plan, standing behind the kids and side-by-side with the Brooklyn Eagle.

Added to this community support was the aid of three companies of Boy Scouts. These were the principal business-getting factors employed in our exploitation scheme.

We took into consideration the fact that in great money-raising patriotic campaigns the entire community is enlisted and made to work. That was our idea, and I do not think we neglected any exploitation angles. As to the business it brought, we'll vouch for that.

Briefly, this was the procedure. One week prior to the showing of Jackie Coogan's picture an arrangement was entered into whereby the Brooklyn Eagle sponsored a "children's party" to be held Saturday morning, May 27, in the Brooklyn Mark Strand with Jackie Coogan in Trouble as the chief attraction for the party. The regular engagement of the film opened the next day, Sunday, May 28. All children in Brooklyn were eligible for the party, the only requirement being that they bring an article of old clothing for the needy of the Near East and a coupon from the Brooklyn Eagle, which would admit them to the party.

The Brooklyn Eagle entered into the spirit of the plan and daily carried news stories and the coupon advertising the children's party. For at least five days parents were telling children of the free party and children in turn were discussing the matter of old clothing with their parents.

Strand and its children party prior to the affair and following it, I believe was responsible for more effective and lasting advertising than we have accomplished in months. The Eagle coupon read like this:

THIS COUPON and an OLD GARMENT
for the needy children of the Near East will admit to a special "EAGLE" performance of the new Jackie Coogan film,
A CHILD
"TROUBLE,"
Saturday morning, May 27, at 9 o'clock,
at the Mark Strand Theatre,
Fulton Street and Rockwell Place,
Brooklyn, N. Y.

This coupon was published with daily reading notices inviting all Brooklyn children and explaining the admission proviso. The burden of advertising the plan fell upon the Eagle. Several of the press stories told that a suit of Jackie's clothing would be given to the child who wrote the best article on the film after viewing it at the special advance children's party.

The Eagle agreed to transport the old clothing brought as admission to the Near East, which organization also gave the plan plenty of publicity. The Strand through Mr. Mark and myself put on the show.

Police, Boy Scouts and theatre attaches had a hard time handling the mob of children carrying bundles of old clothing. Outside the Strand the bundles were piled in a small mountain and the children admitted. Two big five-ton trucks carried the garments contributed to the Near East headquarters in New York. These trucks carried big banners reading:

JACKIE COOGAN, star of
"TROUBLE," which plays at the
BROOKLYN MARK STRAND THEATRE,
beginning to-morrow, Sunday, May 28th, collected this truckload of clothing for the needy of the Near East at the benefit children's performance held under the auspices of the BROOKLYN EAGLE

The children's party was a success, I think, in every detail. The children applauded everything on the bill. To add to their entertainment a letter written to them by Jackie was shown on the screen prior to the showing of the film.

The youngsters gave the organist, the soloists and every number on the bill an ovation. Before they entered the theatre a score of policemen and thirty Boy Scouts from Troops 32, 2 and 11 had no easy job in keeping them in line.

In addition to the feature picture a news reel and comedy were shown. George DuFranne, tenor; Florence Mulholland, contralto, and Frederick Jagel, tenor, sang for the children, and "Aunt Jean," a children's writer for the Brooklyn Eagle, made an address in which she offered prizes for the best account of the party written and sent in to her.

To add to the publicity given to the party by the Eagle, I had school principals and teachers notified of the free party so that they could announce it in their classrooms.

At Left—A fragment of the crowd that turned out for the special morning performance. Center—Bundles of clothing realized for the Near East Relief from the "pay with old clothes" admission stunt. Right—The capacity audience ready for the show Manager A H. Lynch erected a transportation booth on one of the street corners of Jackson, Tenn., where many bookings were made for the excursion to "Fool's Paradise" via an orchestra chair at his Lyric Theatre. The display landed many passersby and also a reproduction in the rotogravure sections of the local newspaper.

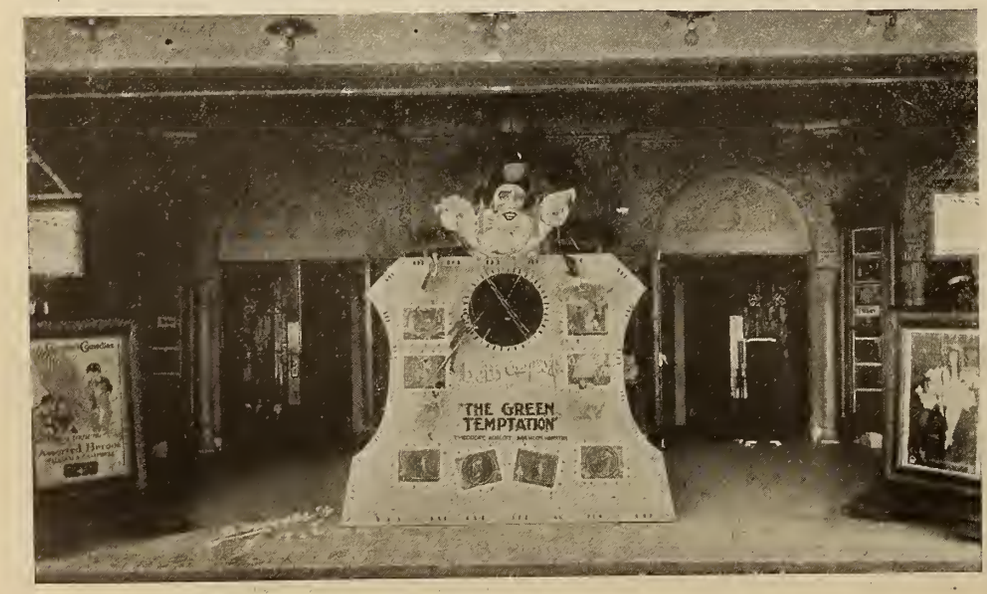
First National's "Courage" was the attraction, and Manager Sutter of the Modjeska, Milwaukee, had the courage to play it up with this novel display. It was made entirely of beaverboard and cut-outs, and the greatest expense attached to it was the outlay in time and labor. The results, however, more than paid for the time and labor expended on it.

Witb the aid of a borrowed railroad switchlight, which he dyed green, Manager J. Edgar Hart, Palace Theatre, El Paso, Tex., flooded his lobby with a greenish hue for the running of "The Green Temptation." In the center he used a cut-out of Theodore Kosloff as the Harlequin, with five ribbon streamers reaching to small cut-outs of Betty Compson.



Gets Into Print

The proprietors of the Opera House, Centerville, got on the front page of the Centerville Observer in a little rain insurance gag, which they considered worth many times the amount of money invested in it.

When they booked The Sheik, Leslie F. Whelan, Paramount exploiteer, induced them to spend $16 as a premium on $300 worth of insurance to be paid the theatre in the event if as little as one-tenth of an inch of rain fell during the run of The Sheik.

When Earl & Johnson, local agents of the Hartford Fire Insurance Co., took the risk it was a 2 to 1 shot that the weather would be clear, and they were willing to take the chance just for the advertising. Since the weather was clear, the insurance company pocketed a clear profit.

Whelan allowed the story to "break" in the insurance offices, and the Centerville Observer took it up as a news story and gave it a prominent position on page 1.

Love Expert Appeals

Manager I. C. Holloway had the curiosity of Columbus, Ga., well up by the time he opened First National's Lessons in Love, at the Rialto Theatre. About a week in advance he started a teaser campaign in the daily papers with a quiet and unostentatious announcement that Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of the the following week, lessons in love would be given by an expert. The lesson would take only a trifle over an hour and was guaranteed to please. For further information call 1736. These changed only a little in wording, some giving the street address of the theatre.

The lobby display was simple but effective. A trellis of narrow white strips gave the effect of the window of a summer house, and through the window a cut-out could be seen showing Constance Talmadge giving a very successful lesson. A simple announcement over the opening gave the desired information about the expert.

Stages Baby Peggy Contest

During the week of May 28 when The Little Rascal had its run at Sid Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre in Los Angeles he originated a novel exploitation contest centering around Baby Peggy, the three-year-old star.

A prize was awarded to the child most resembling Baby Peggy as chosen by four judges. The prize was a valuable wrist watch. At the close of the contest Mr. Grauman gave a luncheon to all the children entered in it.

Good Teaser

Because he recalled the effectiveness of the department stores' shopping advertising of

"So Many days until Christmas."

August Ilg, manager of the Wonderland, Lorain, Ohio, revived these memories in his advance teaser advertising on Smilin' Through. Until the day of the opening he said not a word about the nature of the magnitude of the production. Instead he simply advertised: "Three More Days and Then Norma Talmadge in Smilin' Through." When he got ready for his big splash, the public was all keyed up to listen to it.

Capitol Theatre foyer became a museum of Eskimo objects for the run of Pathe's "Nanook of the North"

Exploitation Stunts on Broadway

New York Theatre District Responds to Film Exploitation Idea

WITH two of New York's leading theatres represented in the demonstration, Broadway during the week of June 11 was given an example of the mark to which theatre presentation has developed under the guidance of motion picture men.

The period in question brought before theatre-wise Broadway once again the art of picture presentation in the lobby and foyer display arranged by the Capitol Theatre, in connection with the offering of Pathe's Nanook of the North, the drama of real life in the Arctic, and the conspicuously attractive theatre front used at the Central for the playing of Universal's The Delicious Little Devil.

Few museum exhibits are scrutinized with the interest that was lavished upon the collection of Eskimo paraphernalia that S. L. Rothafel had on show in the foyer of the Capitol. These objects, displayed with rare good taste, attracted the notice of people before they entered the auditorium, but they were viewed almost invariably with the closest attention by all those who had witnessed the picture and were on their way to the street.

The Capitol display consisted of a rather complete collection of the implements, clothing and articles requisite for the life and existence of the hardy people who inhabit the Northern regions.

This "museum" exhibited a "kayak," or boat; a sledge, snowshoes, harpoons, fishing tackle, the harness used to hook the huskies to the sledges which are their particular burden. Also there was a complete outfit of clothing.

The latter collection included several types and specimens of tunics, fashioned of fur. This is the only article of clothing used by the Eskimo as a covering for the upper body. There were also many pairs of fur trousers on display, and all of them as shaggy and cumbersome as those worn by Nanook in the scenes of the picture. And one must not forget the seal boots—sturdy footwear of the kind put into wearable condition by the faithful wife, who removes the stiffness from the toes of the boots after a night of biting frost and cold, by chewing them for ten minutes or so.

This array of authentic materials was supplemented by enlarged stills from the picture, most of them selected with the specific view in sight of illustrating the manner in which the articles are used by the North people.

Due to the present popularity of the most recent concoction of the confectioner's art, Eskimo Pie, there appeared in the drug store windows many co-operative advertising displays in which this confection and the show at the Capitol were associated. Shops dealing in feminine finery and masculine and feminine smoking materials, as well as others, also showed enlarged stills from Nanook of the North, doubtless because these snowbanked scenes added a cooling and welcome note to the decorations.

The "Delicious Little Devil" front at the Central Theatre

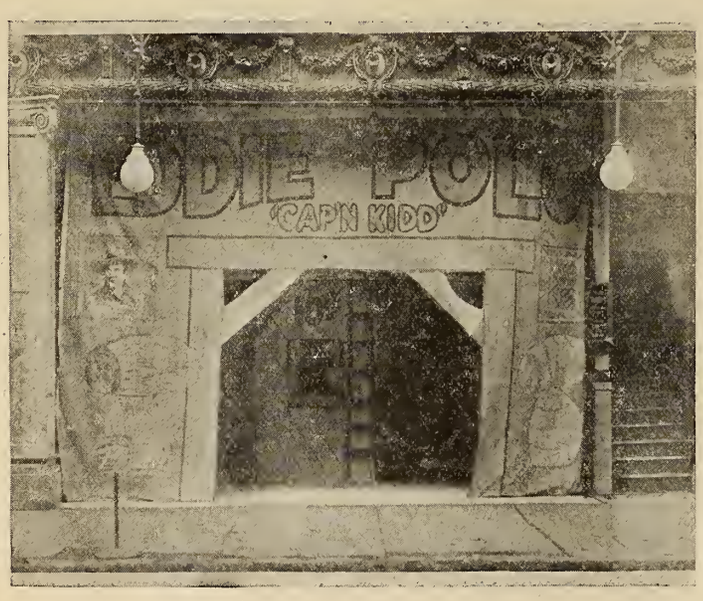
Specializing in circus front advertising, Manager H. B. Clarke, Majestic Theatre, Memphis, Tenn., prepared this frontal display in which he used to good effect banners, cut-outs and display frames in his drive for Paramount's "The Ordeal."



This is the way Manager W. E. Drumbar of the Majestic Theatre, Knoville, Tenn., launched Universal's serial starring Eddie Polo as "Cap'n Kidd." The front is constructed of coarse canvas, can be removed and replaced with little effort and will be the stock front for "Cap'n Kidd." The lobby and an adjustable set which gives it the effect of a pirate ship.

The "Reported Missing Float" that served as one of the leading advertising mediums for the Selznick production for its run at the Gordon's Olympia, Boston. Two characters in more or less faithful make-up as Owen Moore and Tom Wilson manned the boat that was 'towed" about the city on a truck.

Ballin's Referendum

Hugo Ballin, producer of independent pictures in which Mabel Ballin has been the star, announces that he has asked the public, through some fifteen hundred newspapers, to write to him and tell him what novel, stage play or short story they would like to see screened.

The plan is to have the readers of the newspapers write to Mr. Ballin at his residence, 662 Lexington avenue, New York City, and forward the name of the book or play favored, and the letter will count as a vote. The book or play or story receiving the largest number of votes will be screened, provided the screen rights are obtainable by Mr. Ballin.

Mr. Ballin has discussed the matter with a number of prominent exhibitors, who, in turn, will co-operate with him in his newspaper campaign. These exhibitors will use a slide, announcing that their local newspaper is carrying the details of the plan. The slide, as suggested, reads:

Would you like to see your favorite novel, play or short story screened in this theatre? Read the conditions of Hugo Ballin's offer in the (name of paper), and after Mr. Ballin has made the picture, we will show it here.

Flower Prologue

Manager A. R. Cunningham of the Princess Theatre, Sioux City, Iowa, used a unique flower prologue in his presentation of Smilin' Through, offering a startling example of what a theatre in a smaller town can do. Miss Beryl Burton, soprano soloist, sang Smilin' Through under a strong light that silhouetted her against a bouquet of roses, the only thing visable on the screen, so that she appeared to be in the very center of the flowers.

In addition to having unusual appointments inside the theatre, Manager Cunningham duplicated his feat of fine effects at little expense on the outside. Three lobby panels of Norma Talmadge, two being hand painted and one hand decorated, were used around the business section of the city as business builders.

Writing Contest

The Capital Evening News of Boise, Idaho, asked its readers this searching question: "Is the marriage contract stronger than the bonds of love?"

This kept Beyond the Rocks and the Pinney Theatre on the front page for a week. Everybody was invited to contribute a letter not to exceed 100 words explaining their opinion in the matter. The Evening News offered money prizes amounting to $15 and tickets to the Pinney Theatre for the best letters.

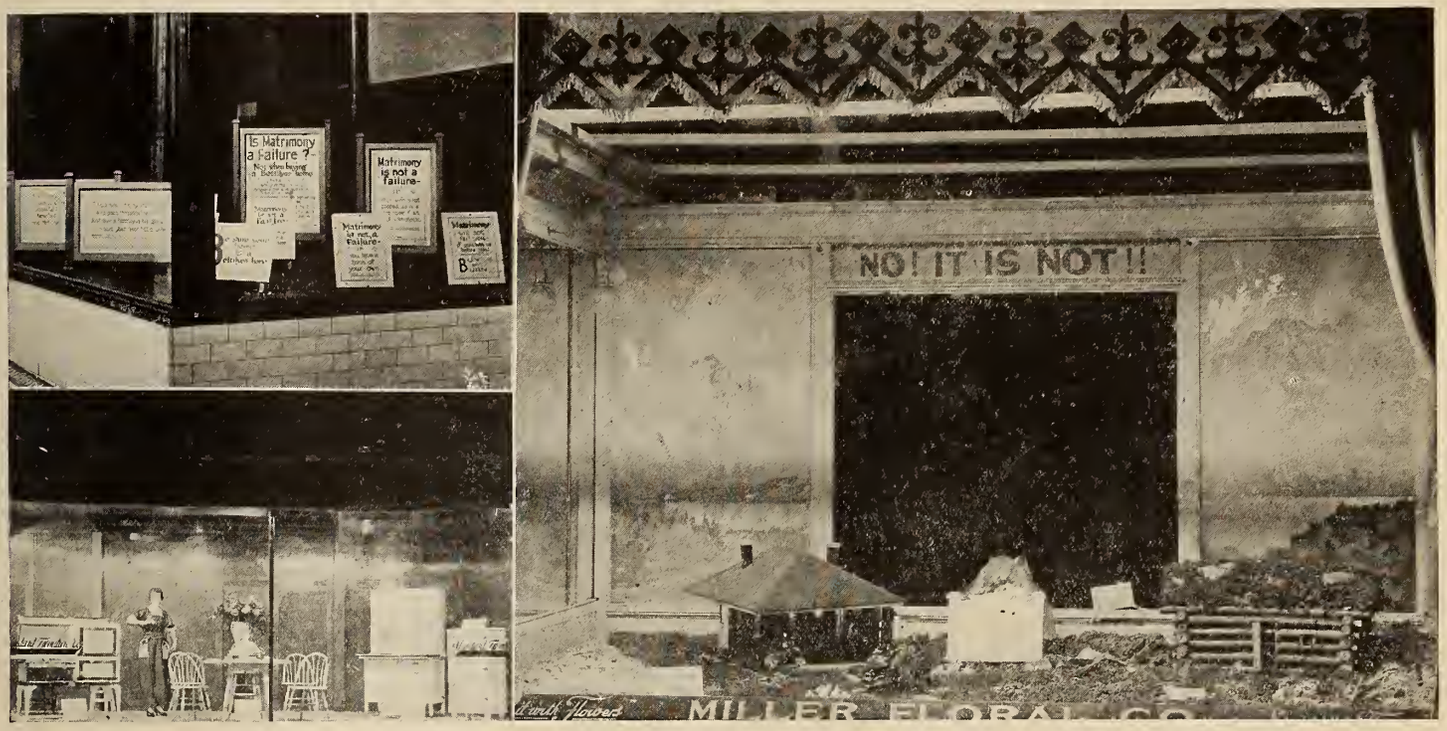
Thirteen hundred people made answer to this question. The letters made entertaining reading matter and the publicity brought crowds to the theatre.

Offers Good Tie-Up

Harold F. Wendt, managing director of the Rivoli Theatre, Defiance, Ohio, reports he used only window displays to exploit Hobart Bosworth in White Hands. And he used only displays of soap, at that. Merchants reported very satisfactory results. Manager Wendt found the one-sheets furnished excellent backings for the windows.

Competitive Window Stunt Scores

Prize for Best Co-operative Window Advertising "Is Matrimony a Failure?" Gets Response from Thirteen Salt Lake Merchants



Co-operative displays showing more than the usual attention by merchants resulted when a silver loving cup was offered by the Paramount Empress, Salt Lake City, for the best window featuring "Is Matrimony a Failure?" In the real estate window, upper left, there are several compelling catchlines featuring the own-your-own-home idea. Lower Left—A furniture company's window which makes the point that a well furnished kitchen is an item of great importance in contributing to the success of the matrimonial state. Right—The prize-winning display arranged by the Miller Floral Co. This display introduced a pantomime with a cast of four amateur actors. It was carried out in such an elaborate and clever manner that widespread publicity resulted

GEORGE CARPENTER, of the Paramount Empress, Salt Lake City, assisted by Rick Ricketson, exploiter, accomplished the unusual with his "competitive window stunt" in a campaign for Is Matrimony a Failure? For thereby he accomplished a double hit, gaining valuable advertising for the run of the Paramount feature, and improvement of the local condition with respect to co-operative work between the theatre and the merchants.

The scheme of offering a silver loving cup as a prize for the most attractive co-operative window advertising its wares, and Is Matrimony a Failure? was entered into by thirteen merchants and the displays resulting therefrom constituted an extensive advertising campaign. In addition to the actual interest value of the windows themselves there was a considerable amount of newspaper and word-of-mouth publicity.

The plan was hit upon while casting about for a method of reviving and sustaining the interest of fellow business organizations of the city. The enthusiastic response which greeted the announcement of the contest left no doubt that future efforts of the theatre to have window space for announcements and displays would be received with interest.

The prize awarded for the contest went to the Miller Floral Co. with a display that included four living models. Two of these were children, costumed as bride and groom, while the second couple were over sixty years of age. The demonstration went to prove a negative answer to the question of the picture's title. The models posed before a velvet curtain at the back-center of the set. "Down stage" was a miniature rural scene, with a little bungalow and a log cabin. The former was electrically lighted, while the cabin's window showed the dull red glow of an oil lamp.

This display was accorded about eight columns of free publicity in the newspapers. The story lacked nothing in local interest, for Rick Ricketson scouted out feature articles about three old couples with the largest families in Utah. The newspapers also carried an amount of advertising on the windows, which was paid for by the merchants.

Supplementing this newspaper publicity, the theatre printed coupons which when clipped and presented by any bride of the month of April was good for two tickets to Is Matrimony a Failure?

Mr. Carpenter is authority for the statement that this stunt, which he considers the most successful of his career, was put over at a cost of $25, of which $20 went for the loving cup and $5 for the actual advertising.

The exact value of the stunt in putting a little spice into the co-operative window scheme cannot be estimated in dollars and cents. But it is certain that the interest of merchants in this sort of advertising is likely to flag after repeated practice of the stunt, a factor that is realized by many exhibitors who think it well worth the expense necessary to keep the co-operative spirit alive and active.

Theatre Co-operation

Among the features of a comprehensive exploitation campaign on Smilin' Through, for the Rialto Theatre, Tulsa, Okla., were printed invitations and co-operation between theatres. Three thousand invitations were sent out in this city of 72,000 inviting the recipients to attend the wedding of John and Moonyeen, the leading characters in the story.

The city is remarkable for the co-operation among theatres. The Orpheum Theatre, running vaudeville, had a slide for a week announcing the coming of Smilin' Through at the Rialto, and the latter house reciprocated.

The record for the campaign includes five window tie-ups, the use of twenty-four cutouts in other windows, a half column free reader in the Tulsa World, which never before published theatrical news, and the street stunt of a bridal couple in an old-fashioned surrey.

Mails Newspaper Teaser Ads

Manager Lick Uses Mailing List to Good Purpose by Posting Material Designed for Newspaper Teaser Campaign

A series of four teaser cards, designed for 1-column newspaper display and issued by Goldwyn as part of the exploitation material furnished with The Wall Flower, were converted into a follow-up series of mailing pieces by Manager Lick of the New Theatre, Ft. Smith, Ark., and in that form realized exceptional results for the run of the Rupert Hughes play.

The series of teaser ads, which were prepared by the Goldwyn advertising department and reproduced in the campaign book, were printed on cards and mailed out to the names on the mailing list of the New Theatre.

Sending the cards out a day or so apart enabled Manager Lick to carry on an advance campaign for The Wall Flower, which, despite the fact that it was inexpensive, measured up to the best standards of the follow-up system of direct-by-mail publicity.

The first of these teasers contains an illustration of a woman's feet, pigeon-toed, with brief text calling attention to one reason why Idalene Nobbin was a wall flower. The second teaser showed a couple on a dance floor, the man holding in his hands one foot, which his partner had trod on. The third shows the wall flower trying to dance. The fourth, and final card, contained two portraits of Colleen Moore, star of The Wall Flower, one as the Idalene of the title and the other as Idalene transformed into the charming and happy heroine of the final scenes of the play.

All Angles Used

In a satisfying campaign that embraced "wide angle" exploitation, Smilin' Through was put over to splendid business for the Hipp Theatre, Sioux City, Iowa, a second-run house.

The manager, aided by First National's exploitation man, had Smilin' Through posters and wildly colored banners put on the fence before a plot of ground where excavation was in progress. This part of the work was done by the exploitation man himself. Immediately the bill posters' union complained to the police department of an alleged violation of the city's ordinances. Followed two days of stalling, and by the end of that time the story was in all the newspapers, and before the signs were taken down, more than 3,000 people had attended Smilin' Through.

The general run of signs, dodgers and advertising was supplemented by the peek-hole stunt and a ballyhoo. In the window of an empty store, prominently located, the peek hole was used with the sign: "Do Not Look." Arrows on the sidewalk leading to it were marked "Dangerous." The peek hole itself, as the several thousand who investigated discovered, contained nothing more dangerous than a colored photograph of Norma Talmadge in the bridal costume she wears in the picture.

A truck covered with banners concealing a Magnavox phonograph covered the city, playing "Smilin' Through." The powerful instrument could be heard a distance of several blocks, and was an effective exploitation medium. Telephone hangers, heralds and streamers completed a well-balanced campaign.

Exploitation Stunts

No less notable as an outstanding feature along Broadway was the artistic frontal display at the Central Theatre. The house was disguised under a dressing of the latest design of stage decoration.

The specially designed front for the Universal feature was commented upon as embodying in equal measure good art and good advertising. It held out to the passerby a coaxing invitation to enter the play house. The Central display was done under the direction of Andrew J. Cobe, managing director.

Aside from the particular details of these displays, is the more interesting fact that both demonstrations attained their objects, which goes to prove that exploitation ideas which utilize front, lobby and window displays are not advertising devices with a restricted scope. When properly treated these methods of picture exploitation are as effective on the broadways of the big cities as they are in the villages.

The observer seeking information as to how these exploitation stunts were faring in New York was not long in gathering abundant proof of their success.

The lobby of Loew's Metropolitan, Brooklyn, with special decorations for the showing of First National's "Smilin' Through." The ballyhoo stunt, which used an open victoria in which the couple dressed as the characters of the play drove through the streets and entered the theatre, is to be roadshowed, according to present arrangements. The carriage paused occasionally on its journey through the streets and distributed invitations to the marriage of Moonyeen and John at the Metropolitan Theatre. The carriage pulled up at the entrance of the theatre and the couple entered. They paused in the garden set erected in the lobby and following a bit of pantomime entered the auditorium.

Child's Theatre In Same Building

Kenosha Builders Has New Idea for Catering to the Youngsters

Announcement has been made by Dayton Brothers of the Orpheum Theatre, Kenosha, Wis., that plans have been made for a novel theatre in Waukegan, Ill.

The entire cost of the new theatre, land, etc., will be about $325,000.

One of the interesting features of this new theatre is a juvenile theatre in the upper part of the building. Dayton Brothers have planned this with the end in view of taking care of the children who may come to the theatre with their parents and who get tired of the big pictures which are too heavy for them to understand.

Accordingly, the idea is to have a juvenile theatre where educational, religious, etc., pictures will be shown, especially adaptable and interesting for the children. Thus the parents may be enjoying a big picture down stairs and their children will be properly entertained in the upper portion of the building. A special attendant will be in charge of this small theatre and so far as known it is the first time that an idea of this kind has been installed in a playhouse in the United States.

The architects for the new theatre building are Rapp and Rapp, who constructed the new Chicago theatre, Tivoli, the new Rivera and other modern theatres in Chicago.

To Start in 30 Days

The Dayton Brothers announce that work will proceed on the new building within a very short time, in fact, they may break ground within 30 days from date.

The seating capacity of the new theatre will be approximately 1400, a trifle smaller than the Kenosha Theatre.

No steps have been taken as yet to award the contract, but the Daytons say that the contract will go to the lowest bidder providing it is possible for him to handle a proposition of this magnitude. In the construction of the building is represented one of the biggest investments in the business section that has ever been carried through in Waukegan.

Special attention will be paid to the music which will be provided in this theatre. Mr. Dayton states that an organ that will cost about $15,000 will be installed with all the latest appliances, etc.

While the theatre is opened primarily as a moving picture and vaudeville house the stage will be large enough to accommodate any road show that may come through this community. Mr. Dayton has done this with the end in view of staging now and then some of the big productions which come out of Chicago.

Smith Unit for Forest Hills

The Smith Unit Organ Company of Chicago, the youngest, but one of the lustiest, of organ-building companies, has won an important contract in the New York district, the order for a four-manual unit organ having been awarded to it a few days ago by the Sheer Amusement Enterprises for the new Forest Hills Theatre on Long Island. Forest Hills is one of the most exclusive suburban districts of New York and the new theatre is in keeping with the surroundings, and is one of the most palatial houses anywhere in the country. There is only one afternoon and one evening performance and for this all seats in the house are reserved. The organ is to have a beautiful ebony console, designed by F. W. Smith, who before coming to Chicago was associated with the late Robert Hope-Jones for a number of years.

Two features of the organ of special interest to organists are patents of the Smith Company. One is a new arrangement for swell control, by which on using the second touch the swells are opened automatically from the manuals. To control the device a stop-key for each manual is provided. This device enables the player to use both feet on the pedals when necessary and at the same time open and close the swell-boxes. The other invention is the tenuto arrangement. By this the organist, on depressing a foot piston, may sustain any chord he has struck on any manual, leaving both hands free to play on the other manuals.

Rothacker Recovered

Watterson R. Rothacker is back at his desk in Chicago, having recovered from an operation in St. Luke's Hospital. He expects to spend a week in New York prior to sailing for Europe, July 8, in connection with a London Rothacker laboratory.

New Trenton House

George B. Ten Eyck, that live showman responsible for the costly picture theatre opened in Trenton, N. J., in March, known as "Ten Eyck's Orpheum," a first run house, believes that Trenton will support another. The Trenton Evening Times recently announced that Ten Eyck, in collaboration with John V. Boyd, reputable property owner and business man of Trenton, will erect a building including a theatre devoted to high class vaudeville and pictures, at a minimum cost of $750,000. The construction will be one of steel and brick, be equipped with every appointment identified with largest theatres in largest cities with view to comfort and safety of patrons. An elevator system will be necessary, plans for the building indicating a roof auditorium.

Radioing the Picture

Experiments Conducted in Rothacker Laboratory Bring Up Question of Talking Pictures

The movies and the speakies have at last been wedded. The radiophone was the minister.

A device has been perfected whereby any number of motion picture theatre projection machines can be operated in synchronization with a master projection machine at the radiophone broadcasting station. This master machine itself projects a picture which furnishes cues to the actors who supply the sounds heard by the theatre audiences.

This is the principle of the radio talking movie: A motion picture is produced in the studio as usual, the scenario writer having supplied speaking lines and sound effects as though the production were to be given behind the footlights. A number of theatres are equipped with radiophone receiving instruments and projection machine synchronizing apparatus. The movie company, possibly composed of the same persons who made the original film in the studio, is assembled at the raidophone broadcasting station.

Out at the theatres the overture has overtured and the audiences settle back for the evening's feature movie-speakie. Buz-z-z goes the signal at the broadcasting station and in all the theatre projection booths. The master projection machine begins throwing the photoplay upon the screen at the broadcasting station and simultaneously, to a fraction of a second, the silversheets at the various theatres are illuminated with the shadow drama.

And at the broadcasting station the movie actors re-enacting the drama, speaking out their lines, word for word, just as though the many different audiences were seated in down front instead of in many different theatres many miles apart. The actors watch the film being screened by the master projector very closely lest they supply the speakies too swiftly or too slowly for the movie.

Thus when the heroine screams for help the audience will hear her cries. They will hear the hero's shout of encouragement as he speeds to the rescue. And when he fired the shot that puts an end to the villain's villainy the movie-speakie fans will hear the deafening roar.

The radio talking picture is the invention of Harry J. Powers, Jr., of the Colonial Theatre, Chicago. The wedding of the movies and the speakies took place at the Chicago practical picture studio of the Rothacker Film Co. Frank Bacon, famous as the star of "Lightnin'" was the best man.

The Rothaker studio lights flashed on. Bacon took his position behind a table set in front of a black velvet curtain. Watterson R. Rothacker, president of the film company, shouted "Camera!" the cameraman began to crank and the world's first radio talking picture was in the making.

"Ladies and gentlemen," began Bacon, accompanying his words with those inimitable gestures of his, "it gives me great pleasure to be the first to try to demonstrate something which will prove the most wonderful, the greatest amusement the world has even known—the human voice synchronized with motion pictures through the radio telephone. We are living in a very rapid age in which nothing seems impossible."

To one side of the studio set a stenographer was taking down Bacon's words in shorthand so that he could later give a precise repetition of them over the radiophone broadcasting apparatus.

"Suppose that in a motion picture," continued Bacon, "the heroine is in great temper; she sees a water glass and, seizing it, she smashes it down upon the table thusly." Bacon smashed the glass.

And on through 200 feet of film Bacon proceeded, ringing a dinner bell, blowing a whistle and finally firing a revolver at an imaginary abductor of the banker's daughter.

"And this," he concluded, lifting a radio receiver to the table, "is the receiving end of the wonderful radiophone which makes it possible for you to hear my voice—or any actor's voice. Upon this occasion I predict that the time is at hand when the radiophone will supply natural sounds in connection with motion pictures in theatres all over the world."

Scene II of the experiment followed next day after the negative had been developed and two prints made. One print was placed in a projection machine at the Rothacker laboratory, and the other in a projector at the broadcasting station. The signal to start was received from the broadcasting station by the receiving instrument beside the projector at the Rothacker plant. Both projectors started simultaneously.

Big Film Warehouse

Prominent Film Men Will Erect Much Needed Service Plant in New York

A film storage warehouse which, its projectors declare, will be the most complete and best-equipped in the world, is to be erected this summer in Long Island City by the Film Storage & Forwarding Corporation, a company recently organized by well-known motion picture men of New York.

The building, which will be of two floors and basement, constructed of brick and steel, will occupy a plot of ground 102 x 145 feet, at Harris and Van Alst Avenues. The cost is estimated at $200,000. Construction work is about to begin and will be rushed to insure completion by September 1.

The plant will be of a thoroughly modern type, equipped with the most approved fire prevention materials and devices. The plans and specifications have been examined, approved and passed by the authorities of the New York Fire Department, the Bureau of Fire Prevention, and the New York Board of Fire Underwriters. It is declared that promise has been given of a fire insurance rate on the contents of the warehouse, when the plant is opened for business, at least 50 per cent below the prevailing rates on risks of a similar character.

The storage warehouse will have a capacity of 12,000 cans of film, and 6,000,000 feet of raw stock. The greater part of the interior is to be divided into 41 vaults for positives and negatives, 2 raw stock vaults, 3 projection rooms and 2 cutting rooms. A forwarding department is being organized to handle domestic and foreign shipments, both incoming and outgoing, and an up-to-date delivery service will be maintained. These are to be made important features of the business and every facility will be introduced to insure expeditious handling.

Arrangements have already been completed to rent a section of the building to Watterson R. Rothacker, president of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company of Chicago. This will be fitted out as a laboratory for specializing in first print work.

The Film Storage & Forwarding Corporation is organized with a capital stock of $150,000. Its officers are: Hugo H. Kempf, president; Arthur S. Kane, vice-president; John C. Ragland, treasurer, and Robert F. Noonan, secretary, these officers serving also as the board of directors.

Hugo H. Kempf was formerly with the Robertson-Cole interests as treasurer of the Robertson-Cole Distributing Corporation, Robertson-Cole Studios, Inc., and Robertson-Cole Realty Corporation, and secretary of the Robertson-Cole Pictures Corporation. He resigned these positions in March last to devote his entire time to the new enterprise.

Arthur S. Kane is president of Associated Exhibitors, Inc., and Arthur S. Kane Pictures Corporation. He organized the latter enterprise and directed the reorganization of Associated Exhibitors more than a year ago. He also had formed Realart Pictures Corporation and was its first president. Through a business career of many years he has occupied important positions with many other motion picture concerns also.

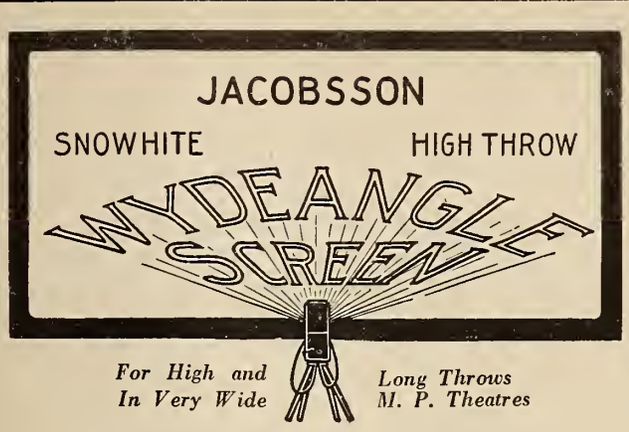
John C. Ragland is secretary of Associated Exhibitors, Inc., and has been vice-president and general manager of Arthur S. Kane Pictures Corporation since its organization.

Robert F. Noonan for years has been a close student of motion picture insurance in all its phases, and it is due largely to his intimate acquaintance with the subject and his untiring efforts that the new company will be enabled to give the picture industry such a rate on negatives as has never been possible in the past.

The construction of the new plant has been entrusted to Wharton Green, a well-known builder and contractor, who has specialized in buildings covering the needs of the film industry. He had charge of the construction work on the Robertson-Cole building and the Chile Exploration Company's building, among many others, and is now building in Long Island City a raw stock storage warehouse for the Eastman Company.



For High and Long Throws
In Very Wide M. P. Theatres

The Best Pictures Are Seen On Jacobsson Screens

This company long ago, through its policy of service, recognized the necessity of each theatre being equipped with a screen technically suited to the particular conditions existing.

The WYDEANGLE SCREEN is scientifically correct for wide houses with long or high throws, or both. It makes every seat desirable, eliminates eye-strains, its high reflective surface reduces power bills, and it is guaranteed for five years.

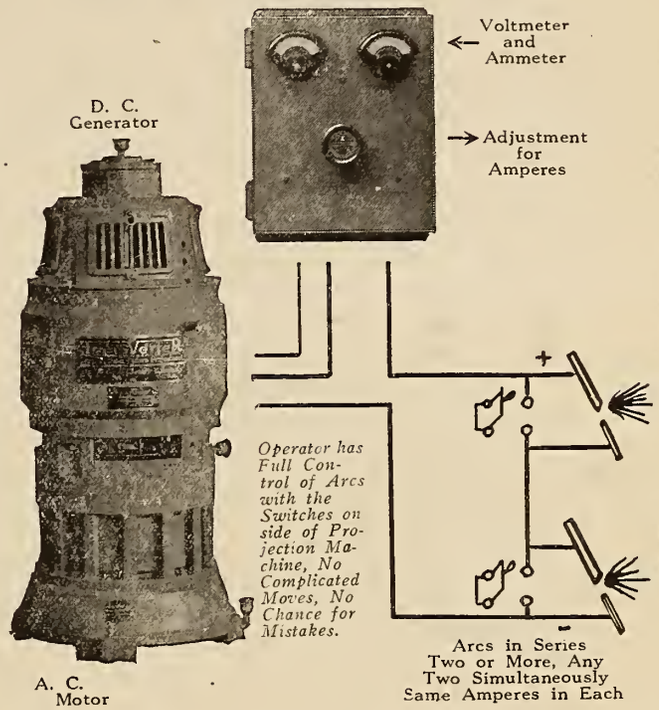
TransVerteR



The Series Arc M-G Set That Produces Perfect Arcs

TransVerteR (Double Arc Type) is a series arc motor generator, having automatic voltage regulation.

No more amperes used than actually required for the light or dark pictures.

Only such voltage is generated as is used in the arc itself (no ballast being used).

TransVerteR produces better results and uses less current than any other device.

TransVerteR is ball bearing; gives better light and better pictures. It is easy to operate, thoroughly reliable, and is an important factor in drawing full houses, by reason of superior projection.

ARTICLE V

DUTIES OF OFFICERS, EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE AND TRUSTEES

Section 1—It shall be the duty of the president to preside at the meetings of the association, board of trustees and executive committee and to exercise a general supervision over the interests and welfare of the association. He may call special meetings at his discretion, and shall call special meetings of the board of trustees upon the written request of four trustees and a special meeting of the association on the written request of twelve members.

Section 2—In the absence of the president any one of the vice-presidents may perform all the duties and be clothed with all the powers of the president.

Section 3—The secretary shall see that each member of the board of trustees is notified of all meetings and each member of the association of every meeting of the association. He shall see that a true record is kept of all the meetings of the board of trustees and of the association and of all committees. He shall see that all authorized notices are issued to members and have jurisdiction over the correspondence of the association and perform such other duties as shall be directed by the president or the board of trustees. He shall have general executive direction and management of the business of the association, subject only to the president and board of trustees.

All contracts binding on the association must be by the sanction of the finance committee or the board of trustees.

Section 4—The treasurer shall be charged with the responsibility for the funds of the association. He shall have charge of the receiving and the care for all dues and assessments and others moneys due or paid to the association. All disbursements shall be authorized by him subject to the sanction of the finance committee or board of trustees. All funds received shall be deposited in a bank satisfactory to the board of trustees, and all disbursements and payments shall be made by checks signed by the treasurer and countersigned by the secretary, or, in his absence, by the president or acting president. In the absence of the treasurer checks shall be signed by the president or acting president and countersigned by the secretary. The treasurer shall have at all times access to the books of account of the association and the records of all receipts and disbursements and make a report of same to the board of trustees at each regular meeting and to the association at its annual meeting, and shall perform such other duties as shall be directed by the board of trustees.

Section 6—The trustees shall present at the annual meeting of the association a report, verified by the president and treasurer, or by a majority of the trustees, showing the amount applied, appropriated or expended during the year immediately preceding the date of the report, and the purposes, objects or persons to or for which such applications, appropriations or expenditures have been made, and the names and places of residence of the persons who have been admitted to membership in the association during such year, which report shall be filed with the records of the association and an abstract thereof entered in the minutes of the proceedings of the annual meeting.

Section 7—The vice-presidents shall be named without distinction of rank or priority and shall be elected from such locations as to fairly represent all sections of the United States, and each shall be the representative of the president in his respective district to promote and encourage the association's aims.

ARTICLE VI

MEETINGS

Section 1—The annual meeting of the association shall be held wherever the board of trustees in office direct; said annual meeting shall be held in the month of (blank) of each year.

Section 2—All regular meetings of the board of trustees shall be held on the second Thursday of each month at the office of the association.

Section 3—The executive committee shall meet upon the call of the president or by the request of four (4) members of the executive committee at such time as the president or the secretary may appoint.

Section 5—The members of the board of trustees shall convene at such time and place as shall be designated by the president or the executive committee, providing due notice of such meetings has been mailed to them by registered mail or telegraphed at least ten (10) days prior to the time of such meeting from the headquarters of the association by the secretary.

ARTICLE VIII

QUORUM

Section 1—A majority of the total number of members serving as trustees on the board shall constitute a quorum of the board of trustees, and twenty-five (25) members a quorum of the association, provided not over one-third of any quorum constitutes members who in their businesses represent the same manufacturer of moving picture machines. Quorums may be made up by balloting, by mail or telegraph.

Five (5) members of the executive committee shall constitute a quorum.

The affirmative votes of five (5) members of the executive committee shall be necessary to determine any action on their part.

ARTICLE IX

BALLOTING BY MAIL

Section 1—Whenever it shall be inconvenient or inexpedient for any member of the board of trustees or of the executive committee or any member of this association to cast his vote upon any question arising upon which a member of the association, board of trustees or executive committee is entitled to vote, the secretary, acting under instructions from the president, shall mail by registered mail, or telegraph the member of the association, or of the board of trustees, or of the executive committee, requesting their vote on any matter or question that may be submitted by the president or upon any question that may arise at any meeting of the members, members of the association, or of the board of directors or of the executive committee may thereupon write or telegraph their answer and the vote so cast shall have the same effect as if their respective votes had been cast in person. In each such case a two-thirds majority vote of the members or of the board of trustees voting shall govern, or five (5) votes of the executive committee shall govern. The votes so counted, however, shall constitute the quorum, and Section 1, Article VIII, respecting quorums shall in all cases apply.

ARTICLE X

REVISIONS AND AMENDMENTS

This constitution and by-laws may be revised or amended at any regular meeting of the association or at any special meeting called for that purpose, provided that notice of such revision or amendment has been sent by registered mail to each member of the association at least twenty days before said meeting and that such revision or amendment be passed by a two-thirds vote of the members voting either in person or by mail or telegraph, but the provisions of Section 1, Article VIII, respecting quorums shall apply in counting said votes.

ARTICLE XI

ORDER OF BUSINESS

1. Calling of the roll.
2. Reading of minutes of the previous meeting.
3. Reports of officers.
4. Reports of standing committees.
5. Reports of special commitees.
6. Elections.
7. Unfinished business.
8. New business.
9. Adjournment.

ARTICLE XII

SEAL

The seal of the association shall have inscribed thereon the name of the corporation and the words corporate seal. The board of trustees shall appoint a custodian of the seal.

ARTICLE XIII

The rules contained in "Roberts' Rules of Order" shall govern the association in all cases to which they are applicable and in which they are not inconsistent with the by-laws of this association.

ARTICLE XIV

AFFILIATED DISTRICT ORGANIZATIONS

Section 1—The association shall be empowered to constitute affiliated groups of its members in any section of the United States and Canada, such groups to be known as "Districts of The Moving Picture Equipment and Supply Dealers' Association of America."

It shall be the duty of the secretary to attend district meetings whenever called upon and it is feasible for him to do so and to perform the duties of secretary to such meeting.

Section 2—Each district formed by this association shall name annually a chairman and vice-chairman. It shall be the duty of the chairman to designate the date and place of meeting within his district and notify the secretary to issue call accordingly. The vice-chairman shall act in the event of the absence or inability of the chairman. It shall be the further duty of the chairman to aid, as far as possible, the building up of the association membership in his district and to further all its aims.

The district groups will take care of all matters of a strictly local character affecting their district alone.

Section 3—The by-laws of the national association, so far as the same shall be applicable, shall govern the several districts, but other by-laws may be passed by district organizations not inconsistent with the by-laws of the national association.

"A Disgrace to Civilization"

TUBERCULOSIS was once considered a disease that "had to be." Now we know better. We know it for what it is—a disgrace to civilization. Under proper conditions of daily living, tuberculosis would disappear.

Deaths from this cause in New York City have been greatly cut down, particularly in the past dozen years. Last year, in fact, the reduction was 18 per cent over 1920.

This is certainly encouraging. Yet the fight must be kept up. There must be no slackening in effort. Six thousand deaths a year are six thousand too many!

For the good of New York, we shall be glad to give helpful information, without charge, to all who may inquire of us.

Making a Volt Ammeter

Here is described a home-made volt-ammeter. For the first type a brass box is made for the windings, top and bottom ends, 1½ in. x 3½ in., as shown in Fig. 3; the inside portion to fit core is 1 in. x 1¾ in. and 1 in. deep. When finished it is first wound with three layers of bell wire. When that winding is complete, a coat of shellac is applied and when dry five layers of No. 38 cotton-covered magnet wire is wound, leaving about five inches of wire for connection as shown in diagrams.

It is then tested with a compass and the negative end of the coil turned down. The hand is then made of aluminum 4¾ in. long with a piece of brass, No. 7, fastened at the end, ¾ in. up from the weight 5. An axle is soldered in place. This axle must be made of aluminum, No. 6, 1 in. long and 1/16 in. in diameter. On the axle a piece of steel (to be magnetized) is also fastened. It is 1½ in. long by ½ in. wide, ¼ in. thick. Bearings, No. 8, are then made of brass. There are two supports 1 in. high and 1 in. wide, countersunk on both sides so that the axle 6 will swing easily between them. It is then placed in the middle of the coil as shown in Fig. 3 and held in place with two brass screws, No. 1. It is put in a suitable box and three binding posts connected to it as shown in the diagram. The meter is then ready for calibration, as plainly shown in Fig. 4, for design No. 2.

Volt-Ammeter No. 2

Here is the description of volt-ammeter No. 2. First we make a bobbin; Fig. 3 clearly illustrates the same. The ends are of hard rubber No. 6 and the brass tube, No. 5, is then fastened in place. It is wound with two layers of bell wire and on top of that we wind five layers of No. 38 gage insulated copper magnet wire. It is connected to the proper binding post shown in Fig. 1. The roller is constructed of wood and placed on the axle. The hand is placed on the front of the roller. It is made of aluminum and is 4 in. long as shown in Fig. 2. A spring No. 13 is fastened to the roller to hold it in place and to register on zero when no current is applied to the meter. A piece of silk thread is placed on the roller No. 4 and fastened to it. On the other end a piece of stick No. 7 is fastened. It is then placed in the box and two pins are fastened in place to guide the thread and weight into the hole. The apparatus is then ready for calibration as shown in Fig. 4. The diagram is all that is necessary for the instruction.

Multiple Unit Rheostat

There are two general methods of regulating the arc in projectors. One is by having a motor generator, with the voltage of the generator from 60 to 80 volts, and regulating the voltage and current on the arc with the field rheostat of the generator.

The rheostat method is satisfactory, it is claimed, because it allows a very much larger current range, which is absolutely necessary in order to bring out the fine points of dark pictures, as well as light ones.

The multiple unit rheostat, manufactured by The Leonard Electric Mfg. Co., of Cleveland, Ohio, gives this condition. They consist of a large number of resistance units connected in parallel through the multi-point dial switch. The switch is easily operated over the 20 to 40 points of regulation, to give the proper current value required. This company says:

"The projector arc works best at from 55 to 65 volts, with a slightly higher voltage on the higher capacity machines. The Leonard multiple unit rheostats are designed to give this voltage automatically, at the same time that the current is being regulated.

"The only argument against the rheostat method of regulating the arc is the somewhat higher current bills, but theatre operators who are using the Leonard Multiple Unit Rheostat say the good pictures secured more than make up for the little additional current used. The difference in the initial investment required for rheostats is only about one-tenth that required for a motor generator installation.

"In the usual form of series rheostat, when the flow of current is heaviest, the smallest amount of conducting medium is in use, putting a heavy burden on a small portion of the rheostat and, in many cases, causing a burn-out which puts the entire rheostat out of service.

"With the Multiple Unit Rheostat, which is adjustable, having a lever and dial with 10, 20 or 40 steps, according to style and size, should an accident occur to any unit it is only necessary to raise the lever one step on the dial and the result will be the same as before. The rheostat can be used in this condition until such time as it will be convenient to replace the damaged unit with a new one, which is very easily accomplished.

"The Leonard Multiple Unit Rheostat works as well on A. C. as on D. C. and can be supplied for any line voltage."

Music for the Photoplay

Conducted by NORMAN STUCKEY

The Musician's Bookself

Music as a Humanity and other Essays, by D. G. Mason, forms vol. iv of the Appreciation of Music series (H. W. Gray). The writer has chosen a wide range of subjects. Starting with the rightful idea of placing music on an equality with letters, and tracing the attitude of the college man to music, Mr. Mason devotes a whole essay to "Harvard the Pioneer"—for Harvard was the first American college to introduce into its curriculum the study of music. Since then other colleges have more or less followed Harvard's lead. In the first essay he launches out against the undue exploitation of personality among artists. It leads, he says, to the exaggeration of the importance of virtuosity and the silly idolizing of soloists and opera singers, all of which, he considers, are as injurious to musical art as the star system is to dramatic art. The achievement of impersonal expression and beauty he regards as the aim of musical art.

Orchestral Instruments

The Trumpet

The trumpet may be traced back to the ram's horn of the Scriptures, but the trumpet we know to-day first came into use about the time of Monteverde, at the beginning of the seventeenth century. Bach and Handel used the instrument, often for bravura effects, occasionally writing passages which seem out of range to the modern trumpeter. As with the horns, the introduction of the valve did much to simplify the playing of the instrument and to add to its resources. The modern trumpet has a range from E below middle C to B-flat above the treble staff, even higher on occasion. The whole of the chromatic scale between these points can be played forte or piano.

The trumpet, like the flute or cornet, can be played with single, double or even triple tonguing, so that rapidly reiterated notes can be played with brilliant effect. A pair of trumpets are commonly used in the orchestra, together with a pair of trombones, thus making a complete brass quartet, to which may be added a bass trombone and a bass tuba if desired. The trumpet and trombone are much more "brassy" than the French horn, which blends equally well with either the brass instruments or the woodwind. Trumpets muted produce a strange, pinched effect, much in vogue with modern composers such as Strauss, Debussy, d'Indy and Puccini.

Music and Movies

"Music and movies are now commonly associated with each other, doubtless more to the delight of the movie-fan than the music lover," says Homer Walters, conductor at the Stillman Theatre, Cleveland, Ohio, "but the time will come when the mating of music and pictures will rival grand opera as an artistic form and as a popular medium of public entertainment."

Mr. Walters, who is one of the pioneers in this particular field, believes that many people prefer going to the large theatres because they like to hear the orchestras.

"Perfect synchronization between a film and its musical accompaniment has long since been achieved," says Mr. Walters, "but few persons have any conception of the amount of labor required in perfectly synchronizing the music to fit the action on the screen. My library consists of several thousand orchestral numbers, many of them from European publishers, and for many features it is necessary to use over a hundred numbers to give the film the proper atmosphere. As these numbers vary from the popular or jazz to the classical, it is needless to say that a high type of musician is required to interpret music that ranges from "Blue Danube Blues" to Wagner's "Rienzi Overture" or from "The Old Gray Mare" to one of Beethoven's symphonies.

"In order to fit a certain scene, it is often necessary to examine many selections before the suitable number is found, and one must be familiar with thousands of different selections in this exacting task. In arranging my musical scores for the productions at the Stillman, I use the highest grade of music, knowing that the audiences demand the best.

"There is no gainsaying the education and artistic value of the orchestras found in motion picture theatres when they play from the best symphonic music, and the fact remains that many persons are gradually becoming acquainted with the better forms of musical compositions, which, in no small measure, is due to the conductors and musicians who are devoting their best efforts to the musical interpretation of the film."

A Wurlitzer, Hope-Jones organ has been installed in the new World Theatre, Omaha, Neb.

Erno Rapee, director of the Capitol Theatre orchestra, New York, has composed and arranged an especially elaborate musical score for the William Fox screen production, Nero, which opened at the Lyric Theatre, New York.

J. F. Leventhal, of the Out-of-the-Inkwell Films, is making music films; that is, through photographing the head and shoulders of a leader, any orchestra may be directed from the screen, thereby synchronizing music for featured dances.

A film opera is to be attempted in the sunny vineyards of southern France, with the villagers themselves as the actors in the setting of their natural environs. The action is to be taken from Mistral's "Mireille" and the music from Gounod's opera on the same theme.

Fred Zimmerman has installed a Wurlitzer Hope-Jones organ in his Avondale Theatre at North Tonawanda, N. Y.

The Capitol Theatre, Pittsfield, Mass., opened recently with a three manual Marr and Colton organ which is used exclusively for the musical program. Mr. Grierson is the organist. The new Rivoli, Syracuse, N. Y., is also equipped with a Marr and Colton organ which is presided over by Mr. Paddock of Rochester, N. Y.

Opportunities for Students

"The moving picture houses are opening up a new field for musicians who cannot reach the top," says W. J. Henderson in the New York Sun. "Such men as Mr. Riesenfeld and Mr. Rothafel are doing very much for the cause of good music. They offer excellent orchestral performances and they engage singers of repute. Young musicians should not harbor the idea that there is something beneath their dignity in appearing in a moving picture house.

"The truth is quite the contrary. The audiences in these theatres listen most attentively to good music and applaud it heartily. They like it. And the more they like it the more ready will other moving picture managers be to follow the lead of the big Broadway houses in presenting short but excellent programs of music."

Simple Instructions Sufficient for Any Intelligent Operator

THERE is no "joker" in the selection of a Cremona Orchestra-Organ. No trained pipe organist at a fancy salary is necessary. Any girl or man, after simple instructions, can operate the Cremona with most enchanting results.

But even more interesting, perhaps, to the average exhibitor is the fact that organ and orchestra music is available without the services of any operator. This is an assurance easily appreciated where the house personnel overhead is limited.

Features not obtainable in any other instrument are built into the Cremona. It cannot be excelled for manual operation. The double roll system permits using cue sheets player roll with operator or by solo organ roll without operator. The double roll system permits using cue sheets and instant change from one to the other.

Recent features, even more firmly establishing superiority, have been developed. Every exhibitor not wholly satisfied with the appeal his music has, should investigate the Cremona Orchestra-Organ.

Another for Rothacker

The third link in the Rothacker laboratory chain will be forged in New York this summer. Watterson R. Rothacker has made definite arrangements to start construction soon on an east coast research laboratory devoted primarily to negative developing and art prints suitable for trade showings.

Upon Mr. Rothacker's return to Chicago, the headquarter's technical staff immediately got busy on final changes in the New York laboratory plans. Technical experts leave soon for New York. Mr. Rothacker will be there early in June.

While in New York, Mr. Rothacker arranged to transfer the New York Rothacker offices from 220 West Forty-Second Street to a location on Fifth Avenue near Forty-fifth Street.

How the Latest Releases Are Being Received Throughout the Country

ALLENTOWN, PA.

COLONIAL

"A CONNECTICUT YANKEE IN KING ARTHUR'S COURT," (Fox). Continued run finds business still encouraging, despite advent of hot weather. Good sized audiences and picture appreciated.

STRAND

"THE POVERTY OF RICHES," All Star (Goldwyn). Another run of longer duration than usual. Attendance not so heavy as at start of booking but not so bad nevertheless.

RIALTO

"VENDETTA," Pola Negri. During this feature's appearance, the star was the main point of interest used in appealing for patronage. Showed, as usual, that European actress has her own following but can't break in with others. Many go to see her, others won't respond to the appeal for pictures in which she is starred.

ATLANTA, GA.

METROPOLITAN

"FOOLS FIRST," Marshall Neilan (First National). Splendid week. The production was characteristic of Marshall Neilan pictures and held the audience from start to finish. Raymond Griffith was given especial credit by the papers for his interpretation of "The Wop," but every player received their share of praise.

Short Subjects.—"The Rainmaker," Educational comedy. Kinograms.

CRITERION

(First three days)

"THE BELLE OF ALASKA," Jane Novak (American Releasing Corporation). Audiences liked it very much and it proved successful in spite of heavy rains.

"GLASS HOUSES," Viola Dana (Metro). Return engagement which proved very successful.

Short Subjects.—Campbell, Educational Comedy, Kinograms.

HOWARD

"THE GOOD PROVIDER," Vera Gordon (Paramount). Won highest praise from patrons and drew good business during week of very bad weather.

Short Subjects.—Selznick News.

STRAND

"FOOTBALLS," Tyronne Power (Fox). Did not please patrons. Played to very poor week.

Short Subjects.—Christie Comedy.

GRAND

(First half.)

"LUCKY CARSON," Earle Williams (Vitagraph). Good drawing card, and above the average run of program pictures. Pleased large crowds.

(Last half.)

"ELOPE IF YOU MUST," Eileen Percy (Fox). Star popular with patrons and picture was a great success.

Short Subjects.—Goldwyn Graphic, Fox News, Mutt and Jeff, and a Century Comedy.

TUDOR

"THE PRICE OF POSSESSION" (Monday and Tuesday) (Paramount. Business good despite heavy rains.

"TRACKED TO EARTH" (Wednesday and Thursday) (Universal). Good business.

"THE FIRE EATER" (Friday and Saturday), Hoot Gibson (Universal). Good business.

Short Subjects.—Star Comedy, International News and Gaiety Comedy.

BETHLEHEM, PA.

PALACE

"BEYOND THE ROCKS," Gloria Swanson and Rudolph Valentino (Paramount). Good feature from business standpoint. Pretty warm weather but picture brought 'em in.

LORENZ

"THE BRAND," Russell Simpson, Robert McKim (Hodkinson). Strong arm stuff of Alaskan dance halls made hit. Windup was thriller and made people gasp.

KURTZ

"BEYOND THE RAINBOW," All Star Cast. With this showing the Kurtz went into stock for the summer. Good feature and did average business although hot spell cut into receipts to some extent.

BOSTON, MASS.

LOEW'S STATE

"ACROSS THE CONTINENT," Wallace Reid (Paramount). Did a big business, the house being filled at every performance regardless of weather, and the fact that the circus was playing nearby. A great film according to all comments overheard.

"HATE," Alice Lake (Metro). A picture that went over big. The feature had to share the honors.

Exploitation.—Window cards, advance lobby display, and large amount of billboard advertising. Ordinary newspaper advertising with a special in the Sundays.

Short Subjects.—Universal Comedy, Pathe Review and News, and Screen Snapshots.

GORDON'S OLYMPIA

"THE BACHELOR DADDY," Thomas Meighan (Paramount). Drew a lot of favorable comment, and is an all around good picture. No mistake on this one.

Exploitation.—A few three sheets in advance, large advance lobby display, featuring large painted strechers that catch the eye going both in and out, window cards widely distributed, and some one sheets. Usual newspaper advertising.

Short Subjects.—Fox Comedy and Kinograms.

MODERN

"THE TRUTHFUL LIAR," Wanda Hawley (Paramount). The best here for a long time. Wanda is a favorite.

"MR. BARNES OF NEW YORK," Tom Moore (Goldwyn). Both of these pictures went to make a great show. They were both good drawing cards and pleased.

Exploitation.—Regular advance display of stills in lobby frames and small sheets. Usual newspaper advertising.

Short Subjects.—Bobby Vernon Comedy and International Weekly.

PARK

"FACING THE WORLD," Barbara Bedford (Hodkinson). Did not have very much appeal. Less than average.

"FREE AIR," Thomas Douglas (Hodkinson). Fairly well liked and made the show.

Exploitation.—Advance of large stretchers in the lobby. Automatic still exhibitor and stills framed in lobby, also three sheets.

Short Subjects.—Movie Chats and International Weekly.

BUFFALO

SHEA'S HIPPODROME

"REPORTED MISSING," Owen Moore (Select). While the newspapers gave this attraction a great send off and those who saw it gave it a lot of free word of mouth advertising, business was only fair.

Exploitation. — Newspaper advertising of original type, billboards, window cards and one sheets, lobby and marque electric display.

Short Subjects.—James Oliver Curwood's "The Northern Trail," "Nippon," a prizma subject and Hippodrome Pictorial Review.

LOEW'S STATE

"BLIND HEARTS," Hobart Bosworth (First National). Business was fair during the week on this one.

Exploitation. — Newspapers, window cards, lobby and marque displays.

Short Subjects.—"Snub" Pollard Comedy, Educational and Pathe News.

LA FAYETTE SQUARE

"BEYOND THE RAINBOW," All-Star Cast (R.-C. Pictures). Picture was well liked by audiences. Most of the seats were filled at all performances.

Exploitation. — Newspaper advertising, window cards, big electric display on front of house, billboards.

Short Subjects.—Courier Camera, showing local events, Fox News and Educational Comedy.

MARK-STRAND

"THE PRIMITIVE LOVER," Constance Talmadge (First National). The picture was well received. Average business for the week.

Exploitation.—Newspapers, lobby display and window cards.

Short Subjects.—Pat Sullivan cartoon, "Drawing Cards," a Sport Pictorial, Kinograms and Screen Snapshots.

PALACE

"SECOND HAND ROSE," Gladys Walton (Universal). Business was about average on this production.

Exploitation. — Newspaper advertising, lobby display, window cards.

Short Subjects.—Roy Atwell in "A Powder Romance," Star comedy and International News.

SHEA'S NORTH PARK

"REPORTED MISSING," Owen Moore (Select). This neighborhood house attracted a capacity business on this one for a half week run.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.

IMPERIAL

"OVER THE BORDER," Betty Compson (Paramount). Excellent business on a two day run.

"ACROSS THE CONTINENT," Wallace Reid (Paramount). Three days to fair business.

BROADWAY

"UP AND GOING," Tom Mix (Fox). Fair business on a three day run.

"THE LOTUS EATER," John Barrymore (First National). Ordinary business only.

CHICAGO

RANDOLPH

"THE WOMAN WHO WALKED ALONE," Dorothy Dalton (Paramount). Played to excellent audiences.

CHICAGO

"THE MAN FROM HOME," Anna Q. Nilsson (Paramount). Business held up in a satisfactory manner.

ROSE

"SHARLOCK BROWN," Bert Lytell (Metro). Business was fair.

STATE-LAKE

"JOHN SMITH," Eugene O'Brien (Selznick). Business was good.

ROOSEVELT

"NORTH OF THE RIO GRANDE," Jack Holt, Bebe Daniels (Paramount). Presented to fair audiences.

CLEVELAND

STATE

"THE RULING PASSION," George Arliss (United Artists), and "SHOULDER ARMS," Charles Chaplin (First National). Business was very good.

STILLMAN

"THE GOOD PROVIDER," Vera Gordon and Dore Davidson (Paramount). Good business. Despite favorable newspaper criticism, advance newspaper advertising and street car cards, the picture played but one week.

PARK AND MALL

"WHAT NO MAN KNOWS," Clara Kimball Young (Equity).

Just a little advance publicity on this picture which played for a three day engagement. Business fair.

Short Subjects.—Sunshine comedy "The Landlord," Topics of the Day and News Weekly.

KNICKERBOCKER

"THE VERMILLION PENCIL," Sessue Hayakawa (R.-C.). Fair business. No advance publicity and just a small ad during the run of the picture. This house changes pictures three times a week and doesn't deem it advisable to make a big showing when they get a worth while attraction.

COLUMBIA, S. C.

RIVOLI

"THE FATAL MARRIAGE," Wallace Reid and Lillian Gish (R.-C. Pictures). This is an old picture re-vamped and did good business here.

IMPERIAL

"OVER THE BORDER," Betty Compson (Paramount). Three days to very good business.

LIBERTY

"REPORTED MISSING," Owen Moore (Selznick). Played to good houses for a week's run.

Short Subjects.—"A Rural Cinderella," comedy, Pathe News and current events.

Exploitation.—The line, "When they made this film they dragged down the catalogue of tricks and then—shot the whole darn works," was used in conjunction with large cut of Owen Moore, garbed in sailor's uniform and holding up right hand in response to roll call. Also billboard and lobby display.

DORIC

"BLIND HEARTS," Hobart Bosworth (First National). Did good good business, due largely to star's popularity.

Short Subjects.—"The Adventures of Robinson Crusoe," chapter play, and International News, current events.

Exploitation.—Names of members of the cast were played up in newspaper space. The serial also given liberal space, with sketch of Robinson Crusoe living in plebian style. Also billboard and lobby display space.

NEWMAN

"TROUBLE," Jackie Coogan (First National). Packed houses all week, despite unusually hot weather and opening of amusement parks.

Short Subjects.—"The Rainmaker," comedy, and Newman News and Views, current events.

Exploitation.—Large sketch drawings of Jackie Coogan in various poses were used, billboard space being featured by the young star crawling out of a barrel. Also bill board and lobby display.

ROYAL

"THE ORDEAL," Agnes Ayres (Paramount). Good crowds for a week's run despite strong competition and hot weather.

Short Subjects.—"Adventures of Sherlock Holmes," serial; "The Show," comedy, and Royal Screen Magazine, current events.

Exploitation.—The entire program was played up as a "program of features," in newspaper, billboard and lobby display space.

TWELFTH STREET

"SHACKLES OF GOLD," William Farnum (Fox). William Farnum has a good following here. The picture did a good business for a week.

Short Subjects.—Torchy comedy and Screen Magazine, current events.

Exploitation.—All advertising, billboard, newspaper and lobby display, devoted to playing up the name and pictures of William Farnum.

LOS ANGELES

KINEMA

"YOUR BEST FRIEND," Vera Gordan (Warner Bros.). Went over fairly good, nothing exceptional. Only average advertising used and no exploitation. A great deal of advance publicity was used in the form of news stories and playing up "Who is Your Best Friend," but the picture pulled only medium receipts.

HILLSTREET

"BOBBED HAIR," Wanda Hawley (Paramount). Fair audience picture with vaudeville bill. Audiences discussed "old plot," "illogical theme" and "no special kick" to picture. On the bill was a comedy "Rag Doll Romance," Scenic and Kinograms.

MISSION

"MONTE CRISTO," All Star (Fox). Closing in the fifth week and has held up very good. Management reported a little flop during the last week but witn average advertising after the first or opening week, the picture has played a very satisfactory booking.

SUPERBA

"KISSED," Marie Prevost (Universal). Went over very good, the title was good. The wording of the ad. "An unusual comedy drama based on the international art" drew some interest. International News, Organ solo, Century comedy completed the bill.

CLUNES

"THE MAN FROM HELL'S RIVER," Irving Cummings (Western Pictures Exploitation). Went over very, very good. Pulled a page advertising in one local paper and average space in other papers. Also played a Lloyd comedy "Follow the Crowd," and with "Grandma's Boy" having a world premiere a block away the whole program went over big.

LOEW STATE

"THE PRODIGAL JUDGE," Maclyn Arbuckle (Vitagraph). Very good, the title proved attractive and the daily advertising was played up over the vaudeville program.

SYMPHONY

"GRANDMA'S BOY," Harold Lloyd (Pathe). In the 4th week and "Knockin' 'Em Dead" as the management expressed it.

MILLERS

"THE INNOCENT CHEAT," Roy Stewart and Kathleen Kirkham (Arrow-States Rights). Hardly fair. The picture received poor criticism in the newspapers and the title was not attractive. The picture did not pull.

CALIFORNIA

"THE TRAP," Lon Chaney (Universal). Only average advertising used as Lon Chaney's name sold the picture on the face of it. Prizma "Seeing the Unseen," Aesops Fables "The Dog and the Wolves." Cal. topical Review and Magazine and Topics of the Day completed the bill.

GRAUMAN'S

"FOR THE DEFENSE," Ethel Clayton (Paramount). Went over very good. One of the prominent members of the cast, Bertram Grassby appeared in person in a very startling prologue "A Night in India." Usual weekly advertising was used, no billboards and no exploitation. The bill started the week with Mack Sennett's new comedy "Be Reasonable" but it was pulled off Tuesday and a Christie took its place on the bill.

MILWAUKEE

ALHAMBRA

"THE MAN FROM HOME," Anna Q. Nilsson (Paramount). Fair business. Weather and intense heat unfavorable.

Short Subjects.—Two act comedy, Pathe news reels and educational reels.

BUTTERFLY

"ISLAND WIVES," Corinne Griffith, and "A PAIR OF KINGS," Larry Semon (Vitagraph). Fair business. A good combination, and if weather conditions had been favorable, would have done better.

Short Subjects.—Fox news reels and educational films.

GARDEN

"THE GREEN TEMPTATION," Betty Compson (Paramount). Good business considering weather.

Short Subjects.—Two reel comedy, Fox news reels and educational reels.

MERRILL

"THE MAN WITH TWO MOTHERS," Mary Alden and Cullen Landis (Goldwyn), and "HEAD OVER HEELS," Mable Normand (Goldwyn). Fair business. Mable's picture criticized by local press as not being up to snuff.

Short Subjects. — International news reels, Tony Sarg's Almanac and educational reels.

SAXE'S RIALTO

"JAN OF THE BIG SNOWS," James Oliver Curwood film. Fair business.

Short Subjects. — Two act Century comedy; Selznick news reels.

SAXE'S STRAND

"REPORTED MISSING," Owen Moore (Selznick). Good business. Praised by local newspaper and by the public.

Exploitation.—Manager got out the Strand Bulletin several days previous to the showing, and had newsboys peddle them with their regular papers. The "make-up" of the paper proved sensational, red type figuring largely in the make-up.

Short Subjects.—First National Kinograms and Sketchograms.

NORFOLK, VA.

WELLS

"THREE LIVE GHOSTS" (Paramount). An entire week to fair business.

STRAND

"THE REFEREE," Conway Tearle (Select). Fair business on a three day run.

GRANBY

"THE WOMAN WHO WALKED ALONE," Dorothy Dalton (Paramount). Excellent business on a six day run.

SEATTLE, WASH.

COLISEUM

"THE INFIDEL", Katherine MacDonald (First National). Good business. Star well liked here.

Exploitation.—Newspaper advertising, lobby display, billboards and window cards.

Short Subjects.—"Toonerville Blues," Topics of the Day, Pathe News, Kinograms.

COLUMBIA

First Half

"THE PRODIGAL JUDGE," All Star (Vitagraph). Fair average audiences.

Exploitation. — Regular newspaper space and lobby display.

Short Subjects.—Lee Moran comedy "Apartment Wanted," International News.

Last Half

"THE TRAP," Lon Chaney (Universal). Return engagement by popular demand. Distinct departure in policy of management.

Short Subjects.—Century Comedy, International News.

LIBERTY

"ACROSS THE CONTINENT," Wallace Reid (Paramount). Audiences well sustained.

Exploitation.—Billboards, newspaper advertising, window cards, lobby display with stills and little red racer ballyhoo in business district.

Short Subjects.—"On Patrol," Sennett comedy, Liberty News.

BLUE MOUSE

"REPORTED MISSING," Owen Moore (Selznick). Held over for second week to capacity audiences, with regular newspaper space throughout engagement.

STRAND

"THE MAN FROM HOME," James Kirkwood, Anna Q. Nilsson (Paramount). Good business.

Exploitation.—Newspaper and billboard advertising, window cards and lobby.

Short Subjects.—"Poor Boy," Mermaid comedy, Kinograms.

WINTER GARDEN

"THE SILVER CAR," Earle Williams (Vitagraph). Excellent business.

Exploitation.—Newspaper advertising and lobby display. Silver car with white pennant advertising show in downtown district.

Short Subjects.—"Good Morning, Judge," Pathe and International News.

ST. LOUIS, MO.

MISSOURI

"ACROSS THE CONTINENT," Wallace Reid (Paramount). Star is a drawing card here at all times. Matinees drew a nice women attendance, while nights, despite very hot weather, found the crowd very good, in fact better than usual.

Short Subjects.—"Split Seconds," Grantland Rice Sport Pictorial, "Women Must Weep," News and Views, and cartoon "Out of the Inkwell."

Exploitation.—Usual amount of advertising in local papers. Staged a big automobile parade on day feature started. Went over big.

NEW GRAND CENTRAL, WEST END LYRIC AND LYRIC SKYDOME

"FOOLS FIRST," Richard Dix (First National). Attendance at all the theatres very good during run of this attraction. Attendance at West End Lyric Skydome very good during the hot nights.

Short Subjects. — Buster Keaton in "Cops," News and Views, Topics.

Exploitation.—Slight increase in newspaper advertising. Advance copy on picture ran in local papers.

KINGS

"TRAVELIN' ON," William S. Hart (Paramount). Good attendance at most every performance.

COLUMBIA

"DEVOTION," Hazel Dawn. Matinees, despite warm weather, showed a slight increase, while night attendance registered nicely.

SCRANTON, PA.

STRAND

"A SAILOR MADE MAN," Harold Lloyd (Pathe). Special children's matinees used to build up business. Picture featured in headliners and was good drawing card. Mine suspension hit trade in general though.

POLI

"BE MY WIFE," Max Lindner. French comedian played to average business, with weather hot and business conditions depressed because of mine strike. No great flury created by feature.

MILES

"TILLIE," Mary Miles Minter (Realart). Good picture and stood up well as magnet, despite rather discouraging industrial status of affairs.

STATE

"ORPHANS OF THE STORM," Dorothy and Lillian Gish (United Artists). Continued run needed to handle business, since offer of feature at popular prices proved good move and brought in best business done probably at any theatre for the week.

WILKES-BARRE, PA.

POLI

"DE LUXE ANNIE," Norma Talmadge (Select). Re-issue of old time success went across for good results.

CAPITOL

"FIRST LOVE," Constance Binney (Realart). Went well, with vaudeville to boost it along. Good booking, safe for any exhibitor to take on for run at his house.

ORPHEUM

"ORPHANS OF THE STORM," Dorothy and Lillian Gish (United Artists). Extended run continued with average success. Interest dropped after first part of booking but despite this attendance was good.

SAVOY

"PEACOCK ALLEY," Mae Murray (Metro). Another run of greater length than usual but necessary to handle business. Feature continues to make showing in box office.

WILMINGTON, N. C.

VICTORIA

"TEN NIGHTS IN A BAR-ROOM" (Arrow). Three days to only ordinary business.

ROYAL

"HAIL THE WOMAN" (Ince-First National). Poorest business of the season on this.

FOR THE EXHIBITORS BOX-OFFICE

EDITED BY GEORGE T. PARDY

For Big Stakes

Released by Fox. Cameraman, Dan Clark. Directed by Lynn Reynolds. Length 4378 Feet.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

"Clean-up" Sudden, Tom Mix; Dorothy Clark, Patsy Ruth Miller; Scott Mason, Sid Jordan; Rowell Clark, Bert Sprotte; Ramon Valdez, Joe Harris; Sheriff Blaisdell, Al Fremont; Tin Horn Johnnie, Earl Sompson.

Sudden, a newcomer to the Verde Ranch, arouses the jealousy of Scott Mason, the foreman, because of his proficiency in lassoing and shooting. Mason also feels that Dorothy, the daughter of the ranch manager, is favoring Sudden too much. At a dance he and Sudden get into a fight and Dorothy's father asks Sudden to leave. He takes up his abode in a little shack not far distant from the ranch house. The sheriff comes to order him off, but Sudden knows of the crookedness he has committed in office and forces him to resign. He also orders some other cowboys who have been starting trouble around there to leave. Mason seeks to get even with Sudden and gathers the gang together and goes after Sudden. Sudden puts each of them in turn to flight. Mason captures Dorothy and ties her to a tree and then makes for the ranch while everyone is away. Having been discharged by the manager, he seeks revenge and sets fire to the place. Sudden sees the smoke and finds Mason setting fire to the house. He learns that Dorothy is helpless down the road in the path of the oncoming flames and rushes to her rescue. When they return to the ranch Dorothy informs her father that she and Sudden are to be married and that Sudden is the new owner of the place.

For Big Stakes is a typical western, full of real live action and holding possibly a greater chance for the star to "show off" than in any of his former pictures. Just as "all roads lead to Rome," apparently all westerns lead to a hero, a villain and a girl. The story in this case is really secondary, inasmuch as it is visibly used as a vehicle in which Mix is able to display his ingeniousness. For an audience who like this type of amusement there are thrills galore, fights, more fights, shooting, riding and a sprinkling of pathos and humor to fit every mood of the spectator. The romance that has been interwoven serves to bring about a satisfactory climax and results in the usual final clinch.

Points of Appeal.—Tom Mix followers will chuckle with delight at the various methods he uses in handling his enemies. And even Tony, the horse, has a chance to do some of his clever acting along with the star. The big fire scenes in the latter part of the picture are very realistic and spectacular.

Cast. — Tom Mix as "Clean-up" Sudden is an enjoyable character. This role affords him splendid opportunities to play up to his audience and is one in which he easily wins them over. Patsy Ruth Miller is a very pleasing heroine, but with none too much to do. Others in the cast give adequate support.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—The photography is usually clear and well lighted. The western shots are of the familiar type; interiors appropriate for the story. Continuity and direction good.

South of Suva

Paramount Photoplay in Five Parts. Author, Ewart Adamson. Scenario by Fred Myton. Director, Frank Urson. Cameraman, Allen Davey. Running Time, Fifty-five Minutes.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Phyllis Latimer, Mary Miles Minter; Pauline Leonard, Winifred Bryson; Sydney Latimer, Walter Long; John Wehster, John Bowers; Marmaduke Gruhh, Roy Atwell; Karl Swartz, Fred Kelsey; Alfred Bowman, Lawrence Steers.

Phyllis Latimer goes to the South Sea Islands to rejoin her husband, whom she married three years before on the eve of his sailing. She finds him a drunken degenerate, incapable of reform. She runs away to a neighboring island, where she poses as Pauline Leonard, ward of John Wehster, owner of the land. Phyllis has met Pauline and is able to impersonate her successfully to the man who has never seen his ward. Phyllis's husband incites a native uprising against Wehster, who hires Hindoo instead of native labor. Finding Phyllis, Latimer drags her back with him and gives her to the natives for a human sacrifice. Webster arrives with the police in time to save the girl. Latimer is slain in the fight which follows. Wehster and Phyllis confess their mutual love.

The best that can be said regarding South of Suva is that it is very prettily photographed and provides charming backgrounds for the dainty figure of the star—Mary Miles Minter. The story runs along stereotyped lines, there is the usual white man who goes to the bad in the sensuous surroundings of the tropics and another of the same race who rises superior to temptation, fights successfully against a revolt of the natives and wins a blushing bride for reward. It is all the usual South Sea stuff, which has become a drug on the film market through constant repetition and the present feature must be listed as below the average in point of interest.

Points of Appeal. — From the first moment of the meeting between the heroine and John Webster it becomes obvious that the pair will be united in the end, somehow the element of suspense is almost entirely lacking up to the point where Phyllis is about to fall a sacrifice victim to the natives. Then there is a bit of a thrill and her subsequent rescue by her lover and the government police is "put over" in realistic fashion. With the death of the brutal husband and rapturous embrace of the sweethearts a conventional climax is reached.

Cast.—Mary Miles Minter is attractive in the role of Phyllis Latimer, looking wistfully sweet and helpless when occasion demands, John Bowers is satisfactory in the part of the stalwart lover, Walter Long an energetic and unscrupulous villain, and the support is all that could be desired.

Photography, Lighting, Direction. — The tropical scenery is luxuriously beautiful and realistic; in fact, it is hard to believe that it isn't the actual native stuff and was filmed in California. The long shots and close-ups are pleasingly clear and the lighting effects excellent. The continuity holds well.

One Clear Call

First National Photoplay in Seven Parts. Adapted From Frances Nimmo Greene's Novel. Scenario by Bess Meredith. Director, John M. Stahl. Running Time, Ninety Minutes.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Dr. Alan Hamilton, Milton Sills; Faith, Claire Windsor; Henry Garnett, Henry B. Walthall; Maggie Thornton, Irene Rich; Sonny Thornton, Stanley Goethals; Tom Thornton, William Marion; Colonel Garnett, Joseph Dowling; Mother Garnett, Edith Yorke; Phyllis Howard, Doris Pawn; Dr. Bailey, Donald MacDonald; Jim Ware's Daughter, Shannon Day; Yetta, Annette DeFoe; Starnes, Fred Kelsey; Jim Holbrook, Albert MacQuarrie; Toby, Nick Cogley.

Henry Garnett runs The Owl, a cafe and gambling house, in an Alabama town. His blind mother believes him dead, her husband having adopted this means of preventing her from knowing that their son is a social outcast. Dr. Alan Hamilton, a boyhood chum of Henry's, does not swerve in his friendship for him. Hamilton is much attracted by a patient who comes under his care at the hospital. She is a handsome young woman, with a colored nurse, and successfully conceals her identity. On leaving, she becomes a neighbor of Hamilton's sister. The physician learns that her first name is Faith. She confesses that she loves him, but that something which occurred in her past life has placed an impassable barrier between them. Henry Garnett seeks Hamilton's medical advice and is told that he is facing death. Hamilton insists on sticking by Henry despite the opinions of his townsmen. When the Ku Klux Klan raid The Owl, with the intention of lynching Garnett, they are induced to desist by Hamilton. Garnett confides in his friend that he was married, but that his wife, on being informed of his dissipated career, left him. He beseeches Hamilton to help find her. Later, Hamilton makes the astounding discovery that Faith is the missing wife. She is about to go to Garnett when Hamilton stops her. The next day Faith leaves town. Hamilton, disgusted with the double part he has played, begins drinking heavily. He is recalled to himself when an accident to his sister's little boy almost results fatally. The child's life is saved when Hamilton performs a dangerous operation on him. Faith returns to town with the intention of rejoining her husband. . In the meantime Henry becomes aware of the love borne by Hamilton for his wife. Faith goes to Henry, who receives her tenderly, but refuses to accept her sacrifice, saying that he has found a better way. When she leaves he takes poison and dies quietly. In the course of time Hamilton and Faith are united. Henry's mother still retains her unshaking belief in the nobility of her dead son.

The most significant fact about this picture is that it stretches over seven reels and yet—there isn't a superfluous inch of film in it. The feature which can hold an audience after the five-reel limit is passed must be composed of pretty good stuff—the one that can run ninety minutes without the least slackening of tension or loss of atmospheric appeal certainly belongs in the de luxe class of photoplays, and it is thus that One Clear Call registers. The picture is a veritable surge of emotionalism from beginning to end, a sort of symphony in minor chords played with unerring delicacy of touch on the spectators' heart strings, with never a false note to mar its harmony. Yet its intense pathos does not degenerate into bathos at any stage, the story is nothing if not human in its naturalness, the black sheep of the cast, you can scarcely mark him down as villain because his self-sacrificing finish atones so amply for past offenses—has something peculiarly attractive about him, while the hero, unlike most screen heroes, isn't perfection by a long shot, and you like him all the better on that account. The production is a credit to all concerned in its making, Director John M. Stahl has excelled himself in point of fine technique, the work of the star cast is delightful, the photography superb, and it will be strange if One Clear Call does not win golden opinions from the most critical patrons, besides piling up shekels in many box-offices.

Points of Appeal.—The keynote of the picture is sympathy—unstinted and merciful, running hand in hand with "the charity that covers a multitude of sins." The blind mother's love for her erring boy, a love which never falters and is left undisturbed by cruel revelations at the close, is never quite lost sight of amid the passion storm of events which engulfs the other characters, and despite the suicide of the ill-fated Henry Garnett, a climax is attained which leaves a cheerful impression behind. It is worth noting that the suicide in question is pictured without any unpleasant details, nor in the operation scene where Dr. Hamilton saves the child's life, is there any unnecessary insistence upon surgical realism.

Cast.—Henry B. Walthall has never done a better bit of character work than in his masterly portrayal of that pitiful example of wrecked manhood—Henry Garnett; Milton Sills gives a splendid performance in the role of Dr. Hamilton; Claire Windsor as Faith, Irene Rich as Maggie Thornton, Doris Pawn as Phyllis Howard and Edith Yorke as the blind mother, are perfect in their various parts. Mention should also be made of Annette DeFoe's forceful impersonation of Yetta, the colored girl, and Joseph Dowling as the stately old Colonel Garnett. The support is excellent.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—There are many beautiful exterior views, with fine moonlight effects, the lighting is faultless, the continuity unbroken and the action smooth and speedy.

John Smith

Released by Selznick. Story and Direction by Victor Heerman. Cameraman, Jules Conjager. Length, 6,000 Feet.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

John Smith, Eugene O'Brien; Mary Mason, Mary Astor; Martin Lang, Barney Sherry; Haynes, George Fawcett; Butler, William Ferguson; Cook, Vivian Ogden; Maid, Frankie Mann; Doctor, Warren Cook; Chauffeur, Tammany Young.

John Smith, unjustly forced to serve a sentence in prison, is finally released on probation. He takes the name of Hilliard and returns to the city and makes good in the office of Martin Lang. Realizing Hilliard's ability as a "fixer," he sends him to straighten out the domestic affairs at the home of Mrs. Lang, his aged mother. Hilliard is coldly received by the old lady and the servants, but in a short time his likeable personality wins them all over to his side and peace is restored in the home. Hilliard is made treasurer of a local charity organization, and from his picture in the papers some of his former associates recognize him and attempt to blackmail him into splitting the money. On the following morning the money is gone and the chauffeur has been murdered. Neither Mrs. Lang nor any of the servants believe Hilliard guilty, but inasmuch as he refuses to talk, fearing that his former record might be exposed, he is placed under arrest. At the trial Haynes, the probation officer to whom Hilliard has been reporting, produces the real criminals and thereby exonerates Hilliard without an expose. Haynes, delighted with the good showing that the young man has made and realizing that he is in love with Mrs. Lang's secretary, destroys all records pertaining to "John Smith" and informs Hilliard that the person who was "John Smith" is dead.

John Smith, featuring Eugene O'Brien, is one of the most pleasant bits of entertainment that one could wish for. It satisfies in every instance and seems to display the faculty of completeness in combining mystery, humor and pathos. For quite some space the picture moves in a more or less light vein and finally develops a tense murder mystery. The comedy is unusually good, thoroughly natural, and the sort that forces one to say "that reminds me of so-and-so." The fundamental qualities of the story are not always strictly original, but as a whole the picture has every element that tends to make up a satisfactory attraction.

Points of Appeal.—All of the characters in the story are drawn true to life and will find an instantaneous appeal with the audience. The touch of mystery that has been included suffices to bring about a big climax, with a court-room scene that is tense, and the culmination of a pleasant little romance. The simplicity of the plot and the very human way in which it moves is refreshing and somewhat of a relief from the heavier type of dramas.

Cast. — Eugene O'Brien rarely before has had a more pleasing role than he is given in John Smith. His work in this picture is of the highest quality and his many admirers will be thoroughly delighted with the production. The individual memers of the cast are good types and render excellent support.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—All of the interiors have been well done and offer many pleasing backgrounds for the story. Exteriors are good and the lighting throughout skillfully handled. Continuity of the story is easily followed and very well directed.

The Storm

Universal-Jewell Attraction. Released by Universal Pictures Corp. From George Broadhurst's Stage Production by Langdon McCormick. Directed by Reginald Barker. Scenario by J. G. Hawks. Cameraman, Percy Hilburn. Running Time Approximately One Hour and Thirty Minutes.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Dave Stewart, Matt Moore; Burr Winton, House Peters; Jacques Fachard, Josef Swickard; Manette Fachard, Virginia Valli; Nanteeka, Frank Lanning; Sergeant, Gordon McGee.

Dave Stewart from the East prepares to spend the winter with his friend, Burr Winton, a woodsman, in the wilderness of the great Northwest at the latter's cahin. To them comes Manette and her father, who has been wounded en route. The girl's father dies and leaves her to the care of Burr, whom he asks to take her to the convent. The coming of the winter snows blocks the pass, and the girl is compelled to remain in the cahin with the two men until spring. But before the warmer weather comes they have both fallen in love with her, and these two men, who were formerly the staunchest of friends, become the hitterest of enemies. Manette favors Burr, and Dave resorts to treachery to convince the woodsman that the girl does not love him. Their supply of food being nearly exhausted Burr undertakes the dangerous trip ahead to replenish their stock. He runs into a hig forest fire and returns to help Manette and Dave to escape the flames. When they reach safety Dave realizes how cowardly he has acted and confesses the truth to Burr, and upon the arrival of the Indian guide returns to civilization and leaves the two lovers there awaiting the coming of the priest.

One of the finest pieces of motion picture art that has ever been exhibited on the American screen is The Storm. The theme is bigger than most stories of this sort and is packed full of real human interest every minute. It is somewhat unusual in that both of the male leads are familiar heroes and to many of the people who have not had the opportunity of seeing the stage play this point will afford keen interest as to the final outcome of the romance that goes through the story. There are numerous thrills scattered about and splendid acting, done in magnificent outdoor settings, all tend to make this one of the finest attractions obtainable.

Points of Appeal.—Much of the charm that was gained so effectively on the stage by the French-Canadian accent has been preserved in thorough keeping with the story by the use of subtitles in dialect. They are, however, never overdone and always strictly "readable." The picture possesses wholesome value as a real entertainment of merit and from every angle should prove most satisfying to any audience.

Cast.—House Peters as Burr Winton and Matt Moore as Dave Stewart both give performances that are highly pleasing and convincingly done in detail. Virginia Valli, as Manette the little French-Canadian girl, proves her capabilities as an actress. The intermittent support by other members of the cast is adequate.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—The photography has been masterfully done and affords some artistic shots that are real scenic gems. Interiors and lighting effects are good. The forest fire is a bit of photography that will long be remembered. Direction excellent.

The Half-Breed

Oliver Morosco Production Released by First National. From the Play of the Same Name by Oliver Morosco. Cameraman, Charles Clarke Hutchison. Directed by Charles Taylor. Length 5484 Feet.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Delmar Spavinaw, Wheeler Oakman; Doll Pardeau, Ann May; Evelyn Huntington, Mary Auderson; Ross Kennion, Hugh Thompson; Dick Kennion, King Evers; Judge Huntington, Joseph Dowling; The Snake, Lew Harvey; Juan Del Rey, Nick F. De Ruiz; Isahelle Pardeau, Leela Lane; Leon Pardeau, Sydney DeGrey; Marianne, Eugenia Gilbert; John Spavinaw, Carl Stockdale; Mary, Evelyn Selhie; Nanette, Dorris Deane; Hops, Albert S. Lloyd; Kito, George Kuwa.

Evelyn Huntington, daughter of Judge Huntington, has two suitors—one, Ross Kennion, a widower with one child, and the other Delmar Spavinaw, who despite his polish and education remains a half-hreed in the eyes of the Western whites. Kennion owns land from which Spavinaw's mother is ordered to leave. The rights of Government concessions are disregarded. Evelyn, at school, confides to her friend, Doll Pardeau, her fascination for the half-hreed. At vacation they go to the Huntington ranch, where Kennion and Spavinaw have also come. Spavinaw arranges an elopement with Evelyn, hut Doll, knowing that Evelyn really loves Kennion, insists that she cancel this arrangement. When Judge Huntington finally decides to evict the squaw the Indian blood comes uppermost in the half-breed. With Juan Del Rey, a cattle rustler, he plans revenge. Through an amhuscade Kennion is wounded. The title to the land is stolen and turned over to Spavinaw, who orders a raid that night on Huntington's cattle. He himself goes to kidnap Kennion's young son, and on his arrival there finds Evelyn and is ahout to capture her also, when the approach of the sheriff forces him to flee. He meets Doll, lost in the ranges, and she hinds his wounds. She also confesses her love for him, and together they escape over the border.

Taken from the stage play of the same name, The Half Breed offers a rather glorified melodrama of the West. The production has been well handled and an ample supply of thrills and suspense has been generally maintained throughout the picture. There is a fault, however, of seemingly crowding too much into the story and by thus overburdening the spectator there are times when the interest is allowed to drag. It is the type of story that revives itself, though, very readily and should manage to please in a locality where the audience is partial to films of this sort.

Points of Appeal.—The story embraces two romances and both come to a close in apparently the only possible way that serves best to satisfy the onlookers. There is an interesting bit of fun contributed by the two children in the hotel scene. The question of intermarriage, of course, has its pros and cons and stimulates interest along with other problems pertaining to the Indians.

Cast.—Wheeler Oakman, as Delmar Spavinaw the half-breed, gives a good performance but is not convincing in his make-up. Mary Anderson and Ann May, the two female leads, are good. Hugh Thompson as Ross Kennion is an acceptable hero. Joseph Dowling has formerly had much better opportunities in which to display his talents.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—Some good Western exteriors have been used in this production. The interiors are good and agreeably supplied with light. Direction O. K.

The Top of New York

Paramount Photoplay in Five Parts. Author, Sonya Levien. Scenario by George Hopkins. Director, William D. Taylor. Cameraman, James Van Trees. Running Time, Sixty Minutes.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Hilda O'Shaunnessey, May McAvoy; Emery Gray, Walter McGrail; Micky O'Shaunnessey, Pat Moore; Gregory Stearns, Edward Cecil; Mr. Isaacson, Charles Bennett; Susan Gray, Mary Jane Irving; Mrs. Brady, Carrie Ward; Mr. Brady, Arthur Hoyt.

Hilda O'Shaunnessey works in the Toy department of the Bon Ton store and also plays the part of an animated doll in a big Christmas display. She is anxious to save money enough to send Mickey, her crippled little brother, where he will receive medical care. Micky spends most of his time on the roof of his tenement home. Across the way, in a roof bungalow, lives a young artist, Emery Gray, a widower, with his little girl, Susan. The boss of the Bon Ton makes advances to Hilda and asks her what she wants for a Christmas present. She tells him she would like a fur coat. She gets the coat, which she pawns for five hundred dollars and promises to meet Stearns, the boss, next night in front of the house. On Christmas Eve Hilda dances for Mickey in her doll costume and he is sent to the hospital. She goes to the roof, intending to leap to her death, so that Stearns will find her in front, as she promised. But Emery appears and saves her. Stearns, impatient, comes to the roof. Emery recognizes him as the man who wrecked his home and thrashes him. Hilda becomes little Susan's new mother.

There is nothing extraordinarily original about the plot of this picture, which offers the "poor but honest and beautiful working girl pursued by a wealthy chap with evil intentions" for its heroine, a type with which movie fans are extremely familiar. But the subject matter is so well handled by the director, the late William D. Taylor, and cleverly acted by a capable cast of players, that there is no hitch in the action and one's interest in the fortunes and misfortunes of pretty Hilda O'Shaunnessey doesn't peter out before her final triumph over adverse fate and snaring of a perfectly good husband. The Top of New York is likely to win favor with that large class of film patrons who are keen on sentiment served up in generous measure, with villany defeated and virtue properly victorious.

Points of Appeal. — A telling contrast is achieved by the introduction of Hilda in her doll dancing costume, with the drab surroundings of her slum home for a drab background. The heroine gains plenty of sympathy in her brave struggle against poverty and the desperate measure she adopts in order to obtain funds to provide for her little crippled brother, and the cheerful climax which follows the thrashing of the "bad man" in the case by her lover gives universal satisfaction.

Cast.—There is no fault to be found with May McAvoy's work in the leading role, her "Hilda" is a charming little person and pleasingly natural. But just why her fascinating brunette beauty should be disfigured by the wearing of a blonde wig is a screen problem difficult of solution. Walter McGrail plays the part of the artist lover, giving a well-balanced, appealing performance; Edward Cecil furnishes an impressive character sketch of the would-be seducer, Stearns; little Pat Moore, is a pathetic figure as the cripple, Micky, and the support is adequate.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—The camera work throughout is of the best quality, the roof and tenement views are realistic and good lighting prevails. The action moves swiftly and the continuity is unbroken.

They Like 'Em Rough

Metro Photoplay in Five Parts. Author, Rex Taylor. Director, Harry Beaumont. Cameraman, John Arnold. Running Time, Fifty-Five Minutes.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Katharine, Viola Dana; Richard Wells, Jr., William E. Lawrence; Richard Wells, Sr., Hardee Kirkland; Mrs. Wells, Myrtle Richell; Waddie, Colin Kenny; Grogan, Steve Murphy; Kelly, Walter Rodgers; La Grande, Burton Law; Pete, W. Bradley Ward; Dr. Curtis, Knute Erickson; Mrs. Curtis, Elsa Lorimer.

Katharine Trowbridge, orphan, living with her aunt and uncle, is peculiarly headstrong and always rebels against her guardian's wishes. Consequently, because they desire a marriage between her and Lucien Weathersbee, they pretend to oppose the match, knowing that the girl will be all the more likely to wed him. But Katharine accidentally discovers that she is being tricked. In a temper she leaves home with the determination of marrying the first man who will have her. She meets a big, bearded lumberman, offers him a hundred dollars to marry her and he accepts. The ceremony is performed by a justice of the peace. Katharine intends to leave her husband immediately, but he forces her to accompany him into the mountains to a logging camp, where he is boss. Katharine is unaware that he is really Dick Wells, a former suitor. Katharine is compelled to cook and make herself generally useful. Among the camp hands, Kelly, an agitator, is stirring up trouble. Dick runs Kelly and two of the latter's pals out of the camp. Katharine escapes but falls into the hands of Kelly's gang. Dick's father arrives, with his wife and Katharine's uncle and aunt. Dick trails Kelly and rescues Katharine after a savage fight, during which his face is slashed by a knife. When the doctor dresses the wound and Dick's heard is removed Katharine recognizes him. He apologizes for his rough treatment of her, but Katharine replies that she likes 'em rough and has learned to love him.

This is good comedy drama, a lively mixture of humor and melodrama, spinning along at a rattling clip, things happening so swiftly that the spectators haven't time to begin analyzing the plot and determining whether it is convincing or absurd. The main fact is that the picture is very entertaining. and nobody is likely to worry over the vexed problem of the likelihood of a heroine yielding to caveman methods as she does in the present instance. And as a matter of record, the said heroine is none too gentle herself at times, and despite her diminutive size, appears quite capable of paying back the aggressive lover in his own coin, if given a fair chance. There is plenty of fun and not a few original situations, with satisfactory thrills, in They Like 'Em Rough, and the feature gives every indication of proving a valuable box-office asset.

Points of Appeal.—One of the most amusing scenes is that in which Katharine, who is more than a bit of a vixen, makes her debut unwillingly in the logging camp, attired as befits a fair fashion flower and forming a strong contrast to her rough surroundings. Dick Wells's troubles with agitator Kelly and the latter's scheming pals, and his vigorous methods of dealing with the rebels, win favor for the hero at once, and the fight in which he saves Katharine from her abductors is extremely realistic. Katharine's recognition of her former admirer and present husband brings about a happy and pleasing climax.

Cast.—Viola Dana enters thoroughly into the spirit of her role and plays Katharine with immense dash and dramatic artistry. Her keen sense of humor was never displayed to better advantage than in the episodes where she is for once compelled to bow to the force of circumstances and a stronger will than her own. William Lawrence is excellent as Dick Wells, the masterly lover.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—There are many impressive exteriors, the forest and mountain scenery is beautifully filmed and the lighting faultless. Even continuity and fast action distinguish the entire production.

Herald.—Is a typical Cinderella story, with all the charm and irresistible appeal of such a story, and to be taken just as seriously. American.—There is some good photography. There is also some excellent acting. Nearly everything is good except the story, and that is a typical picture story, designed for easy understanding. Tribune.—The whole thing is obviously false and unbecoming as the blonde wig which the beautiful and sincere young actress, May McAvoy, is forced to wear in her characterization. Telegram.—May McAvoy has a charming role. Miss Levien wrote the story and brought to it her intimate knowledge of the big city. Times.—Is an excessively long and stereotyped story. Journal.—St. Nicholas and Christmas cheer are the real inspirations of a somewhat old-fashioned photoplay. Sun.—Is a typical sob story. Nothing more could be asked in the way of settings and the acting is satisfactory. May McAvoy disports herself in a blond wig and makes an adequate "poor woikin' girl." World.—Christmas, with all its joys and heartaches, is dragged in, just to add to the already overworked heart interest. One of those things the feminine film-goer will describe as "Oh, it's the sweetest little film story. I cried all the way through it and had a perfectly wonderful time." The music, however, will serve to cheer you up a bit.

Times.—There is some excellent direction, a good deal of remarkably good acting and material for a dramatic story. But the photoplay lacks unity. World.—But for the acting of Henry P. Walthall, Milton Sills and Claire Windsor, it would be not quite an average photodrama. There are several situations that tighten the throat. Herald.—On the whole the picture has some fine material mixed with dross and possessing almost everything up to the minute besides the Klansmen. American.—Heart interest is what John M. Stahl evidently sought when he produced One Clear Call, and he surely got it. The picture is one of the most interesting of the kind presented in a long while. Tribune.—The nicest thing about it is that it has Claire Windsor in it. Telegram.—If the success of a motion picture can be measured by audience response, One Clear Call ranks with the best. World.—Walthall has one of the best screen parts he has played since his great work in The Birth of a Nation. Sun.—The picture presents some interesting glimpses of present-day life in the South, and will appeal to those who like their triangle plays well done. Journal.—Possesses an extremely interesting plot, elaborated with vivid incident, and thrills are stirred frequently. It is a story of human folk and the struggle between what people desire and what they know is right.

RIALTO

Press Comments

Herald.—The scenery in this case is very good and well worth several exclamation points. It is not the authentic background being made to order in Los Angeles, but it seems more real than the story. American.—Several situations are ingenious, others are amusing and not a few are picturesque after the fashion adopted by the people of the tropics. Telegram.—Mary Miles Minter in the most dramatic film play of her career. Journal.—Worth seeing if only for the graphic representation of tropical scenes, life and pursuits. Nothing especially new in the story, but there are compensations even in meeting and seeing some melodramatic situations that defy time. Globe.—An unusually good story, remarkably well directed and acted. It is a moving picture that moves. Mary Miles Minter, playing the leading role, is at her best and she is ably supported by an almost perfect cast. Sun.—The atmosphere is excellent. Contains numerous complications and thrills and the photoplay is quite entertaining. Mary Miles Minter is pretty and charming. World.—Mary Miles Minter would be fair to look upon whether she was planted in Iceland or the Antartic. And so, given a South Sea background, plenty of shredded wheat clothes and puffed rice atmosphere, little M. M. M. gives a fair account of herself in her latest picture.

Press Comments

World.—One of the greatest works of screen art of the year. Paeans of thanksgiving are due Reginald Barker, director, and the three principals of the cast of six, Virginia Valli, House Peters and Matt Moore. They have produced one of the classics of the cinema. Herald.—From the very start the story keeps moving, never letting the spectator get the jump on it. The story proceeds with scarcely any exaggerated posturing by the principal trio. American.—All the elements of violent melodrama are in The Storm, but they are scattered through too many feet of film to be fully effective. Telegram.—In many respects, notably the fire and storm scenes, the picture version surpasses the stage play with its impressive and inspiring wood and mountain country. Is the feature of the excellent program at the Capitol Theatre this week. World.—There is somewhat of a thrill in the big fire scene; there always has been and there always will be. Sun.—Fans the flame of passion into an impressive, roaring conflagration. While it is melodrama of occasionally hackneyed type, it has enough thrills to satisfy the most critical. Globe.—Pictorially The Storm is all that its name implies. In theme and substance of idea this picture is average or, possibly, below. In mounting and acting it is superior. Journal.—Must be given a high place among the season's attractions on the screen. When the shears are run through the film * * * this picture will be materialy improved.

Yours For Rejuvenation

THE public-wise manager today knows that seating that was tolerated five and ten years ago is endured under protest now or altogether avoided. He is aware, too, with the other elements of attraction more or less evenly balanced, the more comfortable seats of one theatre will easily swing the decision of "where to go" in favor of the theatre with the more comfortable seating.

Fortunately the reseating and rejuvenating of a theatre is a less complicated matter than the restoring of youth to old age in man. It is entirely possible and practical.

Our Theatre Engineering Seating Department will be glad to consult with any theatre owner or manager on new installations or renewals of old.

Without obligation, this department will be glad to advise you on how your theatre can "cheat old age" successfully and revive its youth for further years of public service and increased profits.

EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW

The New Day in the Industry

By L. W. BOYNTON

TO theatre owners and managers throughout the country—and this issue of Exhibitors Trade Review reaches them all—there are two recent developments of supreme importance.

The first is: a definite constructive movement, under the leadership of Mr. Hays, for enlisting the active co-operation of the public toward the industry.

The second: progress in the solution of business problems that have burdened exhibitors, producers and distributors for years.

Taken together, these two herald a new day. They are the realization in action of "Confidence and Co-operation," which began as a happy phrase and is now a living thing in this industry.

On the side of public relations, the record is brief but inspiring. In the few short months since Mr. Hays entered the industry he has appeared before such representative bodies as the publishers of America, the General Federation of Women's Clubs and invited delegates from fifty of the great civic organizations of the country. The program he has formulated appeals to them all. It is shot through with his irresistible sincerity and enthusiasm and it gets a real hearing for the industry in high places—something that had never happened before, but had to happen if the motion picture business was to go on.

What does this mean, specifically, for the exhibitor? Why, it means that the powerful influences in this country—influences that have been mostly indifferent or hostile—are gradually being won over. Not a community in the nation but will feel the effect. So far as the boxoffice goes it is our notion that every time Mr. Hays makes an address he is winning new patrons for the picture theatre—and patrons with real influence. He is cutting the ground from underneath the professional censorship advocates by going out and taking the public into his confidence, showing it that the producers are putting higher standards into effect, convincing it that the industry is entitled to consideration and co-operation.

Paralleling this vitally important work is the active movement for pictures of the highest moral and artistic standards. Instructions to this effect have been sent to all the studios represented in the Hays membership and it is perfectly logical to assume that concerns not members of the Hays organization will fall in line as a matter of course, if they have not done so already.

What exhibitor is there who would not welcome with open arms an aroused public opinion keenly favorable to his business; highly sympathetic toward his theatre; vitally interested in seeing it made a real part of community life?

If that comes about—and we firmly believe it will—is there anybody who cannot see greater prosperity for the whole industry?

With reference to the situation within the picture field itself, steady progress is being made. In recent weeks—for the first time—exhibitors, producers and distributors have sat around the table and discussed the equitable contract, film rentals and kindred problems. All the knots that the years have tied in the dealings of the branches of the industry, one with another, cannot be cut in a day or a week. There is no royal road to the solution of difficulties in a business as complicated as this.

But the start has been made. The impressive thing is that the different elements are actually taking counsel with each other. The spirit of negotiation that leads to "Confidence and Co-operation"—maybe it is the other way around—is in the air. Clearly, a new day is dawning.

Elsewhere in this issue we present a letter from Mr. Hays which embodies a message to exhibitors everywhere. It carries the spirit of the new day; and it will appeal significantly, we are sure, to the great army of men who operate the theatres throughout the length and breadth of the land.

Hays and Exhibitor Groups Near Final Agreement on Standard Contract Clauses; Code of Ethics Drafted

AN advanced stage has been reached in the negotiations between Will H. Hays, President of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., and the three exhibitor groups—The Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York; the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the State of New York; and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

Standard clauses to be incorporated in the film contracts of the company members of the Hays organization have been drafted, tentatively agreed upon in discussion between the Hays committee and the various exhibitor representatives and are now in the hands of counsel for approval.

These standard clauses would remove the great evils that have existed for years in the dealings between exhibitors and distributors. And a big step forward has been made in the drafting of a Code of Ethics, designed to protect exhibitor and distributor alike against unfair business practices.

CODE OF ETHICS

1. While a salesman has every right to trade among respective customers to obtain the best offer possible for his product, after he has selected a particular Exhibitor whose offer he believes to be the best, and takes a written application from such Exhibitor he should forward the same to the home office and make no further effort to sell the same service to any other Exhibitor in competitor's territory until the application so forwarded has been formally rejected or accepted.

2. No paid advertising should be inserted in any feature pictures, comedy, scenic or news reel.

3. In the event of the adoption of standard clauses for a uniform contract contracts already taken for 1922-'23 products should be carried out in the spirit of the new form of agreement.

The principles which are expected to become standard in the industry and which in themselves may be said to constitute a uniform contract were set forth by Mr. Hays in letters written to the three exhibitor groups last week. There was marked unanimity of agreement as to the main points on the part of all the exhibitor and distributor representatives; and the letters written by Mr. Hays incorporated the same principles in each case, differing only in minor details.

The letter written by Mr. Hays June 21 to Bernard Edelhertz, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, the first of the exhibitor groups to negotiate with the M. P. P. D. A. head is understood to incorporate the chief principles agreed upon by all the parties concerned in the negotiations. The letter follows:

"Mr. Bernard Edelhertz, Chairman, Board of Directors,
"Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, 1540 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

"Dear Mr. Edelhertz:

"I take pleasure in transmitting herewith three copies of a memorandum embodying the principles that have been suggested by our Committee, subject to approval of counsel, as a basis of a uniform contract between distributors and exhibitors.

"I hope you will agree with me that this draft marks a decided advance in eliminating, as far as possible at this time, consistent with sound business and the natural right of June 23, 1922.

Mr. L. W. Boynton,
Exhibitors Trade Review,
42nd Street and Broadway,
New York City.

My dear Mr. Boynton:

I am glad to have your suggestion that I say a word to the Exhibitors of the country through your Theatre Equipment Directory Number which, I understand, you are sending to all the theatre owners and managers. I am pleased, indeed, to do this.

The men who have come together in our Association are the same men who played the great part in the creation of the industry and its incredible development over the brief space of twenty years.

In taking this forward step to endeavor jointly "to establish and maintain the highest possible moral and artistic standards of motion picture production" they are acknowledging and fulfilling their responsibility to the American people first, and, second to the Exhibitor himself. We must recognize, of course, that there can be no progress forward in the effort without the confidence and the sympathetic cooperation of the Exhibitor. With a mutual confidence and cooperation in the coalesced industry will come the natural resultant of the confidence and cooperation of the public. It means much indeed that the Producers and Distributors and Exhibitors have been together as they have in very recent days, working earnestly on their mutual problems. On the commercial success of the Exhibitor more than on anything else depends the prosperity of the Producer and Distributor.

To Exhibitors everywhere I would send felicitations and again assure them of our desire for this closest cooperation and fullest confidence; we are all enlisted in the same great Cause and I have the fullest hope for a large fulfillment.

I am glad to take this occasion, also, to express my appreciation of the friendly and constructive attitude of the Exhibitors Trade Review toward all we are trying to do. I am very grateful for this.

With kindest personal regards, I am

Sincerely yours,

a manufacturer to exert a reasonable control over his product, various grievances both of the distributors and exhibitors.

"The present draft eliminates all penalties on both sides.

"It sets up what I hope will prove to be a workable and fair method of selecting play dates which will cure at the same time the evils both of over-buying and over-selling.

"It provides for the delivery of all pictures released by a distributor during the period of the contract, which we hope will reach the complaint that it has been the practice occasionally to withhold a picture intended to be delivered when the contract was written but which by reason of superior merit was subsequently withheld because it was believed it would command a higher price.

"It cuts down the period of payment of license fees from seven to three days in advance of shipment of the film.

"It provides for a uniform payment for films lost or destroyed.

"It provides in every case of a re-issue or a re-named negative, that the photoplay should be specifically enumertaed in the contract as a re-issue.

OTHER PROVISIONS MADE

"To cure the complaint that signed applications of exhibitors are not acted upon with reasonable promptness, we propose to provide that unless a written acceptance is mailed within fifteen days from the date of the application by the exhibitor, such application shall be deemed withdrawn.

"We have consented to the assignment of contracts in the case of a sale of a theatre, under suitable regulations, and, finally, we propose with your cooperation to promulgate a mutually agreeable code of ethics, a copy of which is enclosed, in which we announce and declare our views as to certain practices to be observed by both parties, which do not properly belong in a formal contract and tend to unduly extend it.

"I should like very much to have your written comments, if any, by noon Thursday, and would then like as soon as possible thereafter to meet your Special Committee for a discussion which I hope will be in the nature of a final conference.

"With very kindest regards, I am, Sincerely yours,

(Signed) "WILL H. HAYS."

"Hon. Will H. Hays,
"522 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

MR. EDELHERTZ REPLIED:

"My dear Mr. Hays:

"I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 21st instant enclosing three copies of a memorandum, embodying the principles of the proposed uniform contract between the exhibitor and distributor; also the proposed code of ethics.

"I have no hesitation in saying, that the principles embodied in this form of contract, when finally agreed upon, will mark a new era in the business relations between the exhibitor and distributor. Furthermore, I am firmly of the opinion that it will mean the taking of a long step in the direction of a better and more harmonious understanding between these two important branches in the motion picture industry.

"I am particularly pleased with the excellent standard and high order of principles set up by your code of ethics. It shows good faith and will undoubtedly, serve as an important factor in the consummation of the fundamental idea you have so forcibly advocated, to wit:—Confidence and Cooperation.

"In our conference yesterday, we have submitted to your special committee, certain modifications which I have no doubt, will be adjusted in our final conference.

"With kind personal regards, I am, Sincerely yours.

Hays Addresses Women's Federation

Declaring Against Political Censorship of Screen, He Urges Sympathetic Co-operation and Active Aid of Great Organization Toward Problems of Industry's Relation With Public

WILL H. HAYS, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., in a striking address delivered before the General Federation of Women's Clubs, at Chautauqua, N. Y., June 28, urged the fullest possible co-operation from the Federation in the cause of better pictures.

The Chautauqua meeting was really the national convention of the most powerful women's organization in the world. Mr. Hays was invited to address the body as the representative of the industry, and his appearance there was of very great importance in the movement for gaining a sympathetic attitude from the public toward the screen and its problems.

Mr. Hays began by saying that he wanted "to approach the subject, not merely from the viewpoint of the men who have millions of dollars invested in the business, but from the viewpoint of the fathers and mothers who have millions of children invested in the business."

What New Effort Means

"There has been some query," he went on, "as to just what this new effort which the industry is making at this time is all about. It is simply that these men who make and distribute pictures have associated themselves together to do jointly those things in which they are mutually but non-competitively interested, having as the chief purposes of such association two great objectives—and I quote verbatim from the formal articles of association which have been filed at Albany:

" 'Establishing aand maintaining the highest possible moral and artistic standards in motion picture production,' and

" 'Developing the educational as well as the entertainment value and the general usefulness of the motion picture.'

"This is not merely a vague gentlemen's agreement; it is the legal statement of a legal purpose by a legally organized body. It creates no super-court autocratically to pass upon pictures, nor does it place anyone in the attitude and most certainly I shall not be placed in the attitude of being the judge of the morals of those who are in the industry. The purposes of the association are stated in its articles and I respectfully submit to you that no articles of association breathing a more important message could well be found."

No Over-Night Miracle

"They (the producers and distributors) simply have recognized their responsibilities and their duties to the public, and so certainly is this a matter of the immediate concern of every one that I earnestly ask and hope to receive the advice and co-operation of the public," Mr. Hays said in part. "To much can not be expected too soon. There can be no over-night miracle but preferred attention is being given to the purposes of the association right now in the pictures which are now being made. Every day there is opportunity in the studios to take action at the place and at the only place where effective action can be taken. Responsibility for these pictures now being made by the members of our association cannot be avoided. They will be the proof either of our honesty of purpose or of our failure; they will be the proof either of our ability to correct our evils ourselves or of our inability to run our own business. The members of this association, acting on that definite knowledge, are doing everything in their power at this moment to live up to their professions, and the pictures will soon be able to show the results of their efforts.

"While asking for your aid and co-operation I would like to ask, too, that you judge us by our actual performances rather than by any promises we may make. We are building this industry for years to come—for generations to come—and though our progress may perhaps seem slow at the beginning, the results, we are confident, will be certain and permanent.

"And we will not be stopped, mark you, nor will we be deterred either by any possible machinations or obstacles developed or planted by any interest that might from any wrong purpose want to prevent the success of our effort or by those who, with good motives yet mistaken judgment, expecting too much too quickly, would unconsciously put obstacles in our way.

Not One-Sided Matter

"Now this is not a one-sided matter. We must consider these motion picture problems with that patience and tolerance which result from a recollection of the habits and customs wherever a new thing comes. Every new industry, every new science or art makes mistakes, and is criticised. All of them have had to remedy their faults of early days. The telegraph and telephone were criticised. It was regarded as a sinful act to disseminate the printed word in any form among the humbler people, who are supposed to remain in the niche of life 'in which God placed them.' The bicycle and then the automobile were pronounced 'agencies of the devil.' Riding on railroads was so evil that the use of school houses for even a discussion of the question was prohibited, with proclamations that 'such things as railroads are impossibilities and rank infidelity. If God had designed that His intelligent creatures should travel at the frightful speed of fifteen miles per hour by steam He would clearly have foretold it through His Holy prophets.' (From letter signed by School Board of Lancaster, Ohio, to F. W. Force of Gilman, in 1826.) Medical men declared bathtubs a menace to health. In 1843 Philadelphia tried to prohibit bathing between November 1 and March 15 by ordinance, and in 1845 Boston made bathing unlawful except when prescribed by a physician, and Virginia taxed bath tubs $30 a year.

"In another way, indeed, it is not a one-sided matter. It has been said repeatedly that certain objectionable features which have been made are the class of pictures which the public wanted and that such productions have been meeting the demands of the public, based on box office receipts.

"One way for you to help us make

Hays to Address National Education Association

Will H. Hays has been invited to address the National Education Association at its annual meeting in Boston next week. Eight thousand teachers in colleges and public schools in all parts of the country will be in attendance. Mr. Hays' address will be delivered on July 6.

The message of the industry will thus be brought for the first time to another of the most influential and representative organizations in the United States. To date Mr. Hays, besides having addressed a number of important local bodies in New York City, has spoken before the Publishers of America; the Carnegie Institute, Pittsburgh; the General Federation of Women's Clubs at Chautauqua, and representatives of fifty of the most powerful educational, civic and welfare organizations. The latter met at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York City, last week at Mr. Hays' invitation and authorized the appointment of a permanent committee to co-operate with him.

good pictures is very easy, and that is by refusing to patronize bad pictures. If one were to start a vegetarian hotel and day by day a large number of the guests were to storm into the dining room demanding roast beef cooked rare, this hotel keeper, though the most enthusiastic of vegetarians, would experience substantial difficulty in putting over a bill of fare consisting entirely of asparagus.

Against Censorship

"May I refer a minute to this question of censorship, which is an incident in the matter? The people of this country, of course, are against censorship fundamentally, against censorship of press, against censorship of pulpit and against censorship of pictures. But just as certainly, my friends, is this country against wrong doing—and the demand for censorship will fail when the reason for the demand is removed. As we move toward the consummation of the objects of our association, just in like degree will recede the demand which seems more or less prevalent for censorship. The problem of censorship which is being faced now by pictures was faced by the press and settled, and settled right, so far as the American law is concerned, in one of those prolonged and bitter contests for the unrestricted freedom of expression, more than two centuries ago.

"I am against political censorship, of course, because political censorship will not do what is hoped for it in the last analysis. Now and then someone might ask, 'If the motion picture producers really mean to make better pictures, why do they object to political censorship?' The chief answer to this question was written when human nature was formed, at least that part of human nature which is doing business under the Stars and Stripes, and that answer consists chiefly of one word —Liberty. I presume that it is unnecessary to elaborate on the desirability of human rights before an audience whose members have just succeeded in abolishing taxation without representation after a battle of half a century.

"The motion picture business objects to political censorship for one great reason—the motion picture business is American. We are for modesty in dress, yet you are against political censorship of fashions. It is needless to remind those who read the daily papers that all over the land there have been more or less effective efforts to determine the latitude and longitude of skirts by public statute. And that is not all—they have sought to limit the amount of landscape gardening in which the women of America may legally indulge. Now you have the highest and most rigid conception of propriety, yet you do not want any public official to have the right to walk up to you at the post office and take out a yard stick and proceed to determine whether you are constitutional or unconstitutional.

"There is one place, and one place only, where the evils can be eliminated and the good and great advantages of motion pictures retained, and that is at the point where and when the pictures are made. And it can be done then and there, make no mistake about that. There is no zone of twilight in this matter. Right is right and wrong is wrong, and men know right from wrong. The corrections can be made, real evil can and must be kept out, the highest standards of art, taste and morals can be achieved, and it is primarily the duty of the producers to do it.

"I reiterate: it cannot be done in a moment. Women are sufficiently versed in the art and agony of house-cleaning to realize that it sometimes takes more than a week. Years of accumulation cannot be removed in a day, and it cannot be done as a practical matter without the support of the public, and that support I know you will give.

How Federation Can Help

"Exactly how can this General Federation help? Every individual can help by her own words and actions very easily and materially by refusing as I have said to patronize bad pictures. You can have your affiliated clubs do the same thing. As a great organization you can, and I earnestly hope you do, maintain a vigorous active department for better films, and that you, Mrs. Winter, and you others, interest yourselves in it, ascertaining everything that is going on, and all we are trying to do. Get close to the situation; constructively criticize and earnestly help in everything. Mobilize all the good women of the country for better films; get better film committees under the auspices of your division of films, in every community where there is any kind of organization affiliated with the General Federation. Definitely plan by any method you can devise to get the good pictures supported and the bad pictures condemned. Get in touch and co-operate with the exhibitors in your communities. Get the demand for good pictures reflected in the box office receipts. Join in our effort in sympathy and with appreciation of our problems and the conviction, based on proof which you can acquire, that never were men more sincere in any effort in this world.

"You will not be unmindful, I am sure, of the things which in a small way have already been accomplished possibly in connection with the action taken by the association to date, some of which you have heard of in the press, such as the orders by the producers to the studios as to productions being made right now and what is being done in that regard; the rules of the schools for actors; the hopeful conferences with the exhibitors bringing closer co-operation and confidence, and the splendid help from them, without which this effort would entirely fail; the conference last week with the representatives of more than fifty nationally organized movements for better things, and their promise of co-operation—all to the end that we may develop constructive ways and means for the effective application of sympathetic interest.

"We accept our full responsibility. It is a service and 'service is the supreme commitment of life.' It is a service which needs the very best from all and I have great faith in its fulfillment."

The Future of the Motion Picture Industry

By L. W. BOYNTON

(Editor's Note: This article was written in response to a request from Associated First National Pictures, Inc., which sought the opinions of all the trade paper editors on the subject of "The Future of the Motion Picture Industry.")

IN commenting on the general condition and outlook of the industry, let me begin by pointing out that Exhibitors Trade Review recently completed a survey of the theatre field, which uncovered an almost unanimous belief on the part of exhibitors that the coming fall and winter will usher in the greatest season of normal prosperity the industry has ever known.

This survey was made first-hand by our correspondents in all parts of the country, and is a significant index to the real situation. Many sections reported the usual summer slump. A greater number than might have been expected, however, showed absence of theatre closing; and in several territories actual improvement in business over that recorded in the preceding few months was noted.

With regard to shortage of features, it is my belief that there is always a shortage of first-class features. The present curtailment in production, however, does not necessarily mean that the shortage in the coming season will be any greater than usual. On the other hand, it will probably be less, because the producer to-day is making a more strenuous effort than ever before to give the exhibitor pictures of the highest box-office type.

The big special is being developed more and more. That is an inevitable outcome of the first-run system under which the industry is operating. There is, however, still a place for the so-called program picture. I believe the present tendency is toward specialization. And I see no reason why there should not be specialization in the program picture as well as in the special and the short subject.

It does not necessarily follow that because production has been curtailed, there will be a demand that cannot be suitably filled. The point is not quantity of pictures, but quality. I see no reason to believe that the supply will be so short that any theatre will have to close for the want of a picture to show. What the exhibitor is after is box-office pictures. Give him those—in consistent measure—and he will solve the question of longer runs naturally and without any great difficulty.

Unquestionably, there has been a general turn for the better in pictures within the past year. The whole situation, of course, hinges upon the attitude of the public toward the industry. I believe we are becoming more and more responsive to public demand; more and more mindful of our responsibilities toward the American people.

Because we need the active co-operation of the public more than we need any other single thing, we also need healthy co-operation within the industry itself. Unless all signs are wrong, we are entering an era of real co-opreation with the public and with ourselves.

And that fact, above all others, makes me a thorough-going optimist about the industry's future.

Reaching Public from Religious Side

Dr. Rose of the Church of the Redeemer, Newark, Tells New Jersey Exhibitors How Lectures on Motion Pictures Have Helped

By GEORGE BLAISDELL

ONE of the factors contributing to the large success of the convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey, at Lake Hopatcong, June 21 and 22, was the banquet held on the evening of the first day. One of the several notable speeches that followed the dinner was that of the Rev. Henry R. Rose, pastor of the Church of the Redeemer of Newark. Among the diners were two score players, stars of screen and vaudeville, who had attended the convention under the leadership of Marcus Loew, and under the guidance of N. T. Granlund contributed a rare entertainment. They were seated at one long table, at right angles with the speakers, and were among the most intent of the listeners to the minister—the latter, on his part, plainly not being unmindful of their presence.

Henry P. Nelson of the Capitol Theatre, Elizabeth, chairman of the convention committee, deserved the gold watch presented him on Thursday evening in recognition of his work in making the occasion as a whole stand out. Here are the speakers assembled by Mr. Nelson for the banquet: R. F. ("Pete") Woodhull, state president; Fred B. Breitenback, mayor of Newark, who opened the theatres on Sunday with a resulting contribution to the charities of the city approximating $100,000 annually; Hudson Maxim, inventor and scientist of international fame; Sidney Samuelson, state secretary, who presented a watch to President Woodhull; the Rev. Henry R. Rose, pastor of the Church of the Redeemer of Newark, who on Sunday evenings gives religious lectures, taking for his themes motion pictures or plays and illustrates them with slides, turning away throngs; Hugo Ballin, artist and producer; A. M. Fabian, Newark, exhibitor; Marcus Loew, producer, and who during the evening had been referred to as the world's greatest exhibitor, and Sydney S. Cohen, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. M. J. O'Toole of Pennsylvania was the most competent toastmaster.

Helping Americans to Live

"The object of those who entertain as well as those who preach should be to build up human life, to bring joy and all the good things to the human race," declared Dr. Rose, who was given a hearty greeting. "I believe you men and women, as Mr. Maxim says, are helping this country of ours to live a life that the American people ought to live.

"I had been rather troubled in the matter of reaching the public at night because my church is situated in the heart of Newark, a great manufacturing center. Fifty persons pass my church door a minute. I gave much study as to how I might reach the floating people. I tried illustrated lectures. The church had no congregation in the evening, and the trustees imagined that the people would not come down town.

"Just as soon as we began giving these illustrated lectures the response on the part of the public was so marked that in a very short time the structure was filled, and now we are turning away from 100 to 500 persons every Sunday evening, and I might add that the theatres in my district are thick.

"A man opened a theatre just across the street from my church and announced he was going to draw away the people and close the Church of the Redeemer on Sunday night. I want to tell you"—and Dr. Rose was speaking slowly and with emphasis—"now we are sending him our overflow. (Laughter.)

The Minister Must Dominate

"In considering the problem of reaching the people on a Sunday night I came to this conclusion: I am going to give them drama.

"I don't show motion pictures on Sunday night, and I will tell you why—I will not let anything come in front of me. (Laughter.) But I do have slides, made from the stills of the motion pictures and of the leading plays given in New York.

"I tell the story of the picture or the play in four or five thousand words, which I write myself. In the congregations are represented many creeds. I have seen Catholic priests and Jewish families, just as an illustration. After the lecture I take a free will collection. Yes, everything is free to the public. (Laughter.)"

Dr. Rose here described the program which he usually follows on Sunday evening. In opening, he said, there is congregational singing, and declared his belief that it was as fine as anything of its kind in the city, comparing it on terms of equality with that of one of the finest glee clubs in Newark. He said at first there were sacred numbers and then the congregation joined in singing popular songs, citing among others "Pack Up Your Troubles In Your Old Kit Bag." These numbers are followed by singing by the choir. Then in order come the illustrated lecture, congregational singing of a hymn and the benediction, making it fundamentally a religious service.

Subjects Chosen for Lectures

The speaker named some of the pictures he had chosen for subjects. Among these were Intolerance, Way Down East, The Conquering Power, Inside the Cup, Peter Ibbetson, The Four Horsemen, Over the Hill, Smilin' Through, Sonny, The Ruling Passion, The Old Nest, The Sky Pilot and Get Rich Quick Wallingford. Also as subjects for lectures he had chosen threescore plays.

"The result is," went on Dr. Rose, "that I reach the people from the religious side. In addition, I help the motion picture producers. In a number of instances lectures have been given several evenings prior to the showing of a picture in our city.

"Mr. Hays sent a representative over to one of our services to see how we do this thing. After Mr. Hays got his report, he reached the conclusion that this is the way the Church may work with the motion picture and the motion picture may work with the Church. It is not my business to advertise yours, but if you are advertising God, I want to help you, and if I am advertising God I want you to help me. A great proposition was made me by Mr. Hays, but I can't tell you about it now.

The Ideal Motion Picture

"Now, what do you want in the ideal motion picture? I am a producer from within the Church for purposes of religion and morality. People want a chance to smile. That is why Charlie Chaplin holds so preeminent a place as an entertainer.

"People also want excitement and they want thrills. That is why

Douglas Fairbanks is tremendously popular.

"People also want sentiment; they want love. And when you think of sex, don't think of sensuality. Sex is the primal impulse of man—love, affection, loyalty and friendship all spring from the fundamental craving of the human soul.

"People want pathos, they want to cry. That is one reason why Over the Hill, one of the saddest pictures ever produced, has had such tremendous success—it brings the tears to the souls of men and women and acts upon them as a kind of penance.

"They want knowledge. You and I never liked to go to school, we had a tendency to recoil from the thought of anything that is educative. Yet you must give your audience something in the way of knowledge.

"They want to be made better. Also people want to go away with a good taste in the mouth; they certainly do, and this is important.

"And the man who can produce these six elements, these six tests, in the best proportion, is the best producer."

Teaching Public What to Want

"We have got the public into the Church—we are giving the public what the public wants," the doctor went on. "Of course, our aim is to teach the public to want what we want it to want. As a preacher I am trying to do that on Sunday morning as well as on Sunday evening.

"Does the public want to be written down to? Are you going to subscribe to the statement that the average intelligence is only twelve years of age? Are you going to imagine that the American people are abnormal? Did Shakespeare write for the twelve-year-old or the abnormal? No. He wrote for the men and women of normal intelligence—he wanted to lift them higher in the plane of intelligence and especially higher in the plane of morality. Many things in his plays could be criticised from a moral viewpoint if you take the play as a whole, because he used the evil as a foil to make the good more resplendent. Therefore to Shakespeare we owe the moral character, the moral principles, the moral perceptions of the Anglo-Saxons—in other words, our position as leaders of the world.

Censorship Is Un-American

"There are those who say we should have censorship. Friends, I don't believe in a state or federal censorship, because the moment you do establish either of these you place this great industry in the hands of politicians, giving one who has the appointing power the opportunity of controlling the industry in his own selfish or partisan interest, or it would put the industry in the hand of the killjoys of life.

"Who shall be clothed with the responsibility of deciding what the public ought to see? It is too responsible a position. In addition to this, friends, it is not American. Censorship is un-American except in time of war. This is a free country, and you and I must fight to keep it free. The Declaration of Independence has established that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

"There must be no legal censorship, because by and by it will mean censorship of the press, of the pulpit, of books, of schools—and that will be tyranny indeed. What kind shall we have? Friendly, such as we have in the city of Newark.

"In Newark we have a Contemporary Woman's club, with 1600 women members. A committee of twenty goes to see every motion picture that comes into the city and offers friendly advice. The Catholics have a committee, the Jewish women have a committee and the police department has its legal censor, and these get together in the theatres and offer friendly and wise criticism. The other day a stock company was barred because its play was declared to be not fit. These committees mean better pictures for our city. I have suggested to Mr. Hays that it might be well to have representative women come to New York and see pictures a month in advance of their release."

Speechful Woman Makes Trouble

The doctor here related a story of a talkative wife who on one occasion amazed her husband by remarking, "George, I am speechless." "If you can make women speechless you are all right," went on Dr. Rose. "It is when they are speechful that trouble comes.

"Man's impulse is to indulge; woman's is restraint. Always think of the effect upon the woman of your community of any picture you are going to permit to go through. Reach the clergy. That is your great problem; because the clergy for years have had the idea that amusements are of the devil, and you must get that out of their minds. Sunday opening is prohibited by law. Be law abiding, and if you do not believe the law is just or wanted by the people of to-day, work to have it changed. My Master said, "The Sabbath was made for man, not man for the Sabbath." He was the great believer in His day of doing good on the Sabbath. He was a real Man among men. The common people heard Him gladly. Little children ran into His arms because He was their friend and the friend of all that is wholesome, no matter what day of the week.

"I stood behind the Police Commissioner of Newark when he opened the theatres. I believe in meeting competition, not in strangling it. If you open a theatre across the street from me I am going to try to beat you at your own game by giving the people something better. I believe in the boys. They are the men of to-morrow.

"I said these very things yesterday afternoon before the Federation of Ministers of Newark, who fought against the open motion picture house on Sunday. It is up to you motion picture owners, and what you do on Sunday in connection with your motion picture houses, that will decide whether they are to remain open.

"Sweeten the Lives of Men"

"Of course, one of the first considerations in life is money. We have got to have it to live. May I suggest to you that is not the only thing, to live? There are the larger factors of manhood and womanhood. Players, one thing you want as you get older, and that is self-respect, to feel that one of the things to do in life is to sweeten the lives of men, because we are born for eternity. My fundamental counsel for you men and women is, whatever you do, prove to the clergy you are on the side of law and order. If you do not believe in certain laws, let's have a referendum!

"Great interests are at stake. You have built up the most wonderful business in America to-day. You have largely in your power the future of the United States of America. Your business will live or die in proportion as you use your influence for better manhood and womanhood and childhood.

"May I close by thanking you for this privilege of being here and feeling the spirit of those who are entertainers? We are all entertainers, but you have got to catch your bird before you can put salt on his tail. I can't preach until I get an audience. I can't do any good to an empty seat!

* * * *

"There are pioneer souls that blaze their paths
Where the highways never ran—
But let me live by the side of the road
And be a friend to man.

"Let me live in a house by the side of the road,
Where the race of men go by—
The men who are good and the men who are bad,
As good and as bad as I.
I would not sit in the scorner's seat
Or hurl the cynic's ban—
Let me live in a house by the side of the road
And be a friend to man."

The News of the Week

Establish New Arbitration Board

F. I. L. M. Club of New York and Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce Appoint Joint Boards to Sit Weekly

The F. I. L. M. Club of New York City and the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, in order to facilitate the handling of claims and other disputes of exchange men and theatre owners, have inaugurated the plan of having two joint arbitration boards sitting weekly.

One board holds its session on Wednesdays as heretofore, and another board serves on Fridays. Meetings are held in F. I. L. M. Club headquarters in Loew's New York Theatre Building, 1520 Broadway.

The Joint Arbitration Boards now serving are made up as follows:

Wednesdays—F. I. L. M. Club representatives, Messrs. John Hammel (chairman), Unger, Iris and Abeles. Alternate member, Mr. Laird. Theatre owners, Joseph Jame, William Brandt, J. Unger.

Fridays—Messrs. Bradbury, Steiner and Raives of the Theatre Owners, and Messrs. S. Zierler (chairman), Herman, Schwartz, Fabian, and Lyons, alternates.

No meeting of the F. I. L. M. Club was held last week, due to the absence of many of the members at the Theatre Owners Convention in Jersey. The Arbitration Boards met as usual. The F. I. L. M. Club has a committee, headed by Thomas Murray of Metro Exchange, completing arrangements for the annual outing to be held at one of the nearby shore resorts sometime in August. Date will be definitely fixed at the next meeting.

C. B. Hoy, head of the Hoy Reporting Service, is still in the West opening offices at various points, and organizing and reorganizing Film Boards of Trade in all the distributing centers. The Hoy Service has branch offices now in the following cities: New York, Pittsburgh, Chicago, Cleveland, St. Louis and Detroit. Other offices will be opened shortly.

This service is now operating in connection with Film Boards of Trade in the following cities: New York, Albany, Buffalo, New Haven, Boston, Washington, D. C., Chicago, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, St. Louis, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh.

N. Y. State Theatres Must Display Inspection Certificate

All motion picture theatres in New York State must display a certificate after Oct. 1, to the effect that the house has been inspected and found to be safe from the standpoint of a law recently enacted in New York State as a means of providing greater protection to audiences. Provisions of the new law are in the hands of the State Industrial Board, and constitute what are known as the "State standard building code."

Inspection will determine whether theatres conform to the requirements of the law. Such as are found to meet with the new requirements will be enabled to display a certificate to that effect. Before any certificate can be issued to a theatre erected after Oct. 1, plans of the building must be filed with the industrial commissioner, or with a local enforcing authority. The fee will be ten dollars.

The new law is a direct result of the catastrophe which occurred in Washington, D. C., last winter in the Knickerbocker Theatre, which collapsed from an overweight of snow.

Early Release For Lloyd Picture In Foreign Lands

Motion picture lovers in a dozen or more other countries are likely to enjoy Grandma's Boy, Harold Lloyd's new Associated Exhibitors feature, before the picture is released generally throughout the United States. Already the feature has been placed for immediate release in England and throughout the British Isles; in the countries of continental Europe, and on the other side of the globe, in Australia and New Zealand.

This information was obtained this week from M. L. Cohn, treasurer of the Inter-Globe Export Corporation, which holds the foreign rights to all Associated Exhibitors attractions.

The adoption of extraordinary precautions to prevent piracy was considered necessary from a business standpoint, according to Mr. Cohn, who discussed the foreign distribution arrangements in the absence in England of Sidney Garrett, president of the Inter-Globe Company.

"At all times Harold Lloyd is a favorite with foreign as well as American audiences," said Mr. Cohn, "and exhibitors are eager to secure his attractions. For Grandma's Boy has come a demand such as we have never known before. Under such conditions we considered it good business judgment to give immediate consideration to the offers of foreign picture interests of high standing and close contracts for distribution abroad with a minimum of delay."

Universal Pictures Are Popular in Mexico

Universal pictures are the best liked film product in Mexico to-day, states J. W. MacFarland, Universal's branch manager in Mexico City, who now is in New York on a short visit. Strict fairness in dealing with exhibitors, even during the most chaotic conditions, has done much to win popular favor for Universal, he explains.

Big Convention Will Inaugurate F. B. O. Activities

A general meeting of branch managers and division chiefs will mark the birth of the Film Booking Offices of America, the new name of the Robertson-Cole Distributing Corporation. The convention is scheduled to be held at Chicago starting July 1, the day on which the change of name of the organization takes effect.

Branch managers will have an opportunity to meet the executives and officials of R-C Pictures and the F.B.O. for the first time since the reorganization of R-C. While Mr. P. A. Powers has left New York for the West Coast to supervise production activities at the R-C Studios, Joseph I. Schnitzer, vice-president; Harry M. Berman, who takes up his duties as general manager of distributing on July 1, and Nat G. Rothstein, advertising and publicity director, will attend and address the branch managers.

The meeting has been called in order to get all of the F.B.O. men in the field fully acquainted with the policy formulated by Mr. Powers for the distribution of R-C and independent productions. It will be explained to the branch managers that the aim of the F.B.O. is not to submerge the individual picture or brand of pictures under the trade name of the Film Booking Offices; and that the organization is prepared to foster independent productions and assist the exchange managers with a complete line of sales and exploitation aids.

"Our plans are too big, our policy too radically different to be explained in any other way than through personal contact," stated Mr. Schnitzer, in announcing the meeting.

Harriet Hammond Has Lead in New Rawlinson Play

With Harriet Hammond, bathing beauty, as his leading woman, Herbert Rawlinson has started his latest Universal Attraction. It is an original story by Bernard Hyman, and will be called Confidence. Harry A. Pollard will direct.

The selection of Harriet Hammond to play the principal feminine role was received with interest in the film colony. Miss Hammond became famous as a Sennett bathing beauty. Her entry into dramatic work is believed to have been inspired by the success of Marie Prevost in Universal productions.

Outstanding players among others who will support the star are William Robert Daly, noted director and character actor; Melbourne McDowell, Gerald Pring, Sam Allen, Lincoln Plumer, William A. Carroll, Otto Hoffman and John Stepling.

The story concerns a young man who has no confidence in his own ability. He creates an accidental impression that he is rich and the world doffs its bonnet respectfully. Pepped up by a new confidence, he sails into the city and becomes both rich and important under his own power.

AN OPEN

To the Officers and Members of the MOTION PICTURE THEATRE OWNERS ASSOCIATION, EXHIBITOR'S ORGANIZATIONS, CHAMBERS OF COMMERCE, Etc.

In the Motion Picture World of May 27th, 1922, appeared an article by Mr. E. C. Mills, entitled "The Other Side of the Music Tax", containing a suggestion relative to the most practicable solution of this matter.

In the Motion Picture News of June 17th, 1922, appeared an editorial under the caption "The Music Tax—Its Stipulations", in which there was again clearly suggested a solution of the differences between exhibitors as a class, and the proprietors of copyrighted music as represented by this Society.

We responded to both of these articles with a paid advertisement headed "An Invitation", addressed to all concerned in this aged controversy. The advertisement contained an invitation to a conference; it was cordial, sincere and well-intentioned.

We have received no response to the invitation. It was extended by us, and printed in two of the trade papers, because or our desire to reach an amicable understanding with the exhibitors and their leaders, based upon justice and right, founded upon law and equity, conceived in a friendly and honorable understanding and recognition of each other's lawful rights.

When exhibitors violate the law which protects our rights, and in defense of them we summon such exhibitors into Court, it is quite the custom to accuse us of having done so without fair warning to the exhibitor; without having given him a chance to inform himself on the subject.

When exhibitors are advised of our rights, and urged not to infringe them; when they are advised that only under certain circumstances and conditions have they a lawful right to publicly perform our compositions, and then when we have, after repeatedly warning them of the consequences of a violation of these rights, sent our inspectors into their theatres and found them violating the law with utter disregard—which, of course, results in the filing of actions to protect our rights —we are accused of unjustly summoning them to Court, of "spying" upon them.

When we state a fee for licenses, fixed at a figure ridiculously low in comparison with the value of the product which we furnish, and WITHOUT WHICH THE MOTION PICTURE THEATRE CANNOT EXIST; when we permit this fee to be paid in installments; when we maintain the fee at the same fixed figure at which it has been placed for years, in the face of advancing costs, we are accused of extortion, and called "robbers."

LETTER

When we openly and frankly tell the exhibitors, and their leaders, that we welcome them to a conference at which it is hoped a mutual understanding may be reached, there is no response, no notice, and we therefore continue in our discovery of violations of the law; and punishment of the guilty exhibitors.

When you assemble in your conventions from time to time and adopt resolutions on this subject, that are NEVER carried out; when year after year this old question is brought up and militantly discussed —without eventual result of any sort, don't you think it is time to "get together"?

When, year in and year out, in case after case, we bring exhibitors into Court and our rights are then upheld at the great cost of the exhibitor, don't you think it is time that you knew the TRUTH about this whole matter, and learned it from your leaders, your trade press, and your own lawyers?

Or, are you determined to mislead yourselves and your followers with such "bunk" as is in fact what the resolutions adopted at your last national Convention with respect to this subject, amounted to?

We have invited you to a free and open conference, where whosoever has aught to say may be freely heard, in the hope that we may render you, more than ourselves, a service. Bear in mind that our rights are secure, and are being protected, but we could wish that there were more good will, more friendly understanding, than now prevails. It is to that end, to the end that we reach a mutually acceptable basis for operation, that we invite the conference.

Do you gentlemen fear to discuss the question? Do you already know so well that our position is just that you hope to evade the final and logical solution of the vexing question in order that you may continue to use it for propaganda purposes?

Let's have the TRUTH!! We know what it is in respect of our position; our members know what it is in respect of the operation of this Society; does the rank and file of the exhibitors know what it is?

We repeat the invitation to meet with us, individually or collectively, officially or informally, at our offices or yours, at your convenience, for the purpose of discussing issues related to the so-called "Music Tax," and arriving at an equitable adjustment of all differences that may now exist.

Dollar-a-Week Men leaving Chicago for Los Angeles as guests of First National—Left to right, Alfred Gottesman, Strand, Shenandoah, Pa.; two guests; Ralph Lieber, Circle, Indianapolis; Mrs. Burton, Joseph Burton, Star, Tuccoa, Ga.; guest; Arthur G. $1-a-Week Men End West Coast Trip

Exhibitors Who Went to Los Angeles as First National Guests Feted at Film Colony

First National's "$1-a-Week Men" are back on the job. First they took off their coats, along with thousands of other exhibitors during First National Anniversary Week, Feb. 18 to Feb. 25, 1922, and worked to establish new records in the showing of pictures. This was done in First National's Exploitation Competition. Next, the winners of that competition—known as $1-a-Week Men—went to Los Angeles as the guests of First National.

These exhibitors were from all parts of the country. They reached Los Angeles on Monday, June 19, were greeted by the Mayor, city officials and prominent motion picture people, and from that time until last Saturday they had a week of gayety, mingled with serious study. Then, with a royal sendoff, they started back for their "home theatres."

During the time they were on the Coast the "$1-a-Week Men" went to Catalina Island on Thomas H. Ince's palatial yacht, "Edris" and were entertained by Mrs. Ince; dined with such picture stars as Norma and Constance Talmadge, Buster Keaton, Katharine McDonald and Jackie Coogan; were feted by Richard Walton Tully and Guy Bates Post; entertained at dinner by Louis B. Mayer; were guests at a special boxing exhibition arranged by Marshall Neilan; were guests at a dinner-dance given by Mack Sennett at his home and, last but not least, they went in bathing with the Mack Sennett bathing beauties.

Following are the exhibitors who went to Los Angeles:

Alfred Gottesman, Strand Theatre, Shenandoah, Pa.; Ben Davis, manager Colonia Theatre, Norwich, N. Y.; Frank Steffy, Coliseum Theatre, Seattle, Wash.; A. G. Stolte, Des Moines Theatre, Des Moines, Iowa; Nick McMahon, Marlow Theatre, Ironton, Ohio; O. K. Mason, Regent Theatre, Wichita, Kan.; Joe Burton, Star Theatre, Toccoa, Ga.; Ralph Lieber, Circle Theatre, Indianapolis.

Mastbaum Elected Director of Phila. Exhibition

Theatrical and motion picture people all over the United States will be interested to learn that Jules E. Mastbaum, of Philadelphia, president of the Stanley Company of America, has been honored by the election to membership in the board of directors of the Sesqui-Centennial Exhibition Association which will oversee and supervise the mammoth exhibition which will take place in Philadelphia in the year 1926.

Mr. Mastbaum was elected on Tuesday, June 20, immediately accepted the appointment, and at once entered actively upon the duties of his new position.

E. E. Shauer Leaves July 6 on Extended Visit to Europe

E. E. Shauer, assistant treasurer and director of the foreign department of Famous Players-Lasky, will sail with Mrs. Shauer on the Laconia on July 6, for a visit of several weeks in Europe.

Mr. Shauer will visit the offices of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in Great Britain, France, Denmark and Germany and will discuss with J. C. Graham, general foreign representative, plans for further extension of Paramount distribution in Europe during the coming year.

Tarkington's "The Flirt" Screened by Universal

Booth Tarkington's classic of American life, The Flirt, is three-fourths translated to the screen. Hobart Henley is directing the filming of it at Universal City as an all-star Universal-Jewel production.

Helen Jerome Eddy, Eileen Percy, Lloyd Whitlock, Edward Hearn, Harold Goodwin, William Welsh, Buddy Messenger, George Nichols and others have principal roles.

De Mille Depicts The Sack of Rome For "Manslaughter"

In spite of the fact that there were on photographers to record the dress and customs of the day when the barbarians overthrew ancient Rome, Cecil B. DeMille has produced, it is said, a historically faithful reproduction of this important event in the world's history for his latest Paramount picture, Manslaughter.

The episode in question is a brief historical cutback depicting the arrival of the barbarian hordes within the gates of the capital of the Roman Empire.

Weeks of research work on the part of the director, by Jeanie Macpherson, scenarist of the story; by Paul Iribe, art director of DeMille productions, and the studio research department, preceded the actual filming of the scenes.

Leatrice Joy, who is one of the principals of the modern portion of the story, is the hostess at a lavishly beautiful Roman bacchanal which is interrupted by Thomas Meighan in the role of the leader of the Goths. Lois Wilson, John Miltern and Casson Ferguson are the other members of the notable cast who appear in this sequence. A realistic gladiatorial combat is one of the many interesting features of the bacchanalian entertainment.

Rupert Julian to Film Next Gladys Walton Feature

Shooting from his own script of Bret Harte's famous story, M'Liss, Rupert Julian expects to make the Universal production the most appealing vehicle so far with Gladys Walton.

While a cast is being selected, Miss Walton is getting her costumes together and recuperating from the strain of the emotional work she did in her recent story, Top o' the Morning.

It is probable that most of the exterior scenes of M'Liss will be filmed in the Seven Oaks district of the San Bernardino Mountains.

Rupert Julian returns to Universal City as a director after an absence of several years, in which time he further distinguished himself as a player and director with other organizations. His outstanding work is considered to have been as the Kaiser in The Beast of Berlin, Carl Laemmle's contribution to the morale of Americans in the first tense days of the war.

Goldwyn Prepares for the Filming of "Ben Hur"

With the identity of the man who will direct the picturization of Ben Hur still not known, preliminary work on the gigantic production is now well under way at Goldwyn's California studios. The work of adapting General Lew Wallace's novel for screen purposes is a task in itself, calling for the most skillful treatment, yet under the direction of Goldwyn's editorial staff, and with the advice of A. L. Erlanger, who has guided the stage destinies of the play, Ben Hur, for the past quarter of a century, the continuity is well under way.

Cedric Gibbons, Goldwyn's art director, and his staff of technical assistants, are hard at work on the sets that will be required for the Ben Hur interiors. Skilled architects and city engineers have been called into consultation on the laying out of the villages and cities which will be built in Palestine, where most of the exteriors will be photographed. Goldwyn purposes to have these cities and villages architecturally correct in every detail.

Abraham Lehr, Goldwyn vice-president, in charge of production, and Casting Director Robert B. McIntyre, have been flooded with applications for various roles in Ben Hur. These letters and telegrams have come from both stage and screen players—many of them stars in their own right. While it has been stated by Goldwyn that the leading roles will be filled by American players, no member of the cast has yet been selected. It will probably be several weeks before the preliminary work has progressed far enough to make the selection of individual players advisable.

Harper's Defeat Not Slap at Cohen, Lazarus Reports

EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW is in receipt of a telegram, dated Los Angeles, June 26, from J. L. Lazarus, president of the M. P. T. O. of Southern California, in which Mr. Lazarus gives another version of the recent defeat of Glenn Harper for secretary of the organization. The telegram says:

"At a meeting of Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Southern California, held to-day, the articles appearing recently in trade papers construing the election of the new secretary, succeeding Glenn Harper, whose term had expired, as a reflection upon Sydney Cohen and national organization, were condemned. By a rising vote of 100 per cent this organization reaffirms its past and present allegiance to national organization, Sydney Cohen, president; Glenn Harper, vice-president, and its other officers. There is no dissension of any nature in southern California organization, and we are wholeheartedly with the national organization."

R. C. Plans Big Drive for "In the Name of the Law"

That the opening of In the Name of the Law, an R-C Picture, at its pre-season run at the George M. Cohan Theatre on July 9, will be marked by one of the biggest exploitation campaigns ever seen in New York is the prophecy of the R-C officials. In the Name of the Law is a police drama with an all-star cast including Johnnie Walker, Ella Hall, Ralph Lewis, Claire McDowell and little Bennie Alexander.

"The biggest picture isn't big without the exploitation; the best exploitation is nothing without the picture behind it," stated Nat. Rothstein, director of publicity and advertising of R-C Pictures. "If you can find a combination of both you have solved the problem of the show business."

The ambitious plans R-C is making includes the use of stands in the most sought-after advertising spots; banners and placards in places that have not carried a line of advertising material since the Red Cross drives during the war; street stunts for Broadway; window displays throughout the city so that those who motor, trolley or walk will find the words In the Name of the Law before their eyes continually.

New Play for Constance Binney by English Author

When Constance Binney returns to America in July, it is probable that she will have with her the manuscript of a new play by Clemence Dane, the author of A Bill of Divorcement, in which Miss Binney is starring at the Ideal Film Company's studios near London, England. The new drama will be used by the young star as her theatrical vehicle for the coming season, and Mrs. Dane is said to be writing it with the ultimate idea of a motion picture production in mind, after the play has become established on the boards.

The nature and substance of the play is being kept a complete secret, apart from the fact that it will be a comedy-drama, rather than anything of a "problem" as was the case with A Bill of Divorcement.

It is said on good authority that Mrs. Dane may come to America early in the autumn to supervise the American production of the play.

Reginald Warde has charge of the American distribution of A Bill of Divorcement, which will be released through one of the principal concerns this fall.

Paramount Lists Five Productions For July Release

Five productions are listed for release on the Paramount July schedule as announced by S. R. Kent, general manager of distribution.

Opening the month on July 2 is Jack Holt in The Man Unconquerable, a story of South Sea pearl fisheries by Hamilton Smith. Joseph Henabery directed. Sylvia Breamer returns to the Paramount banner as leading woman and others in the cast are Clarence Burton, Ann Schaeffer, Jean de Briac and Edwin Stevens.

One of the releases for July 9 is Ethel Clayton in For the Defense, adapted by Beulah Marie Dix from the stage play by Elmer Rice. In this picture Miss Clayton portrays the highly dramatic character of a girl who becomes the victim of a hypnotist. Paul Powell directed, Vernon Steele is leading man and Zasu Pitts, Bertram Grassby, Maym Kelso, Sylvia Ashton and Mabel Van Buren are prominent in the support.

On the same date the Hamilton Theatrical Corporation presents The Greatest Truth, a UFA production directed by J. May. It is described as a sensationally dramatic story of modern life.

South of Suva, starring Mary Miles Minter, is the release for July 16. This is a story of life in the South Sea Islands and Miss Minter appears for the first time in a truly "grown-up" role. Frank Urson directed. John Bowers plays opposite the star, Walter Long is the heavy and Roy Atwell has a comedy role.

Agnes Ayres in Borderland is the release for July 30, a story dealing with the supernatural. Miss Ayres plays three distinct roles and is supported by Milton Sills, leading man; Fred Huntley, Bertram Grassby, Casson Ferguson, Ruby LaFayette, Sylvia Ashton, Frankie Lee, Mary Jane Irving, and others.

Director Relates Experiences With Mr. George Arliss

"When you ask how we 'handle' George Arliss, I say that Mr. Arliss is not 'handled'," said Harmon Weight, director of The Ruling Passion, a United Artists release in which Mr. Arliss is the star. "Mr. Arliss works with us, and we work with him," went on Mr. Weight. "The whole scheme of things is all against anybody 'handling' anybody else."

Henry M. Hobart, president of Distinctive Productions, Inc., and head of the producing forces, smiled his entire approval of Mr. Weight's statement. "The common thought, I have been surprised to learn," he said, "was that we were going to have a lot of trouble in fitting Mr. Arliss with proper vehicles. Somehow it was thought that because he was great in sinister roles, he must needs be deficient in other roles."

An exhibitor viewpoint of The Ruling Passion is given by Harold Frank of the Majestic-Colonial Theatre Company, Jackson, Mich., in a letter to H. N. Marin, general manager of Distinctive, in which he says:

"In a somewhat skeptical mood, I screened the picture one morning without another soul around at the beginning. Midway in the picture a caller came in, and sat down to wait for me. Soon I heard chuckles from across the aisle, joining my own, and before the end of the picture we were having an uproarious time."

Hays Commends Paramount Move

M. P. P. D. A. Leader Joins Players and Directors in Commending Establishment of Stock Company and School

"The inauguration of the Paramount Stock Company and School is a splendid step forward in the direction of the association's high purposes. I am of course most happy about it."

This was the comment of Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, upon Paramount's announcement of its plan for the betterment of motion pictures as published in full in the trade press and newspapers. This step taken by Adolph Zukor and his associates in the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is in complete accord with the Hays program.

Corroborating their earlier request for rules to govern all the players, nearly all the stars and directors at the Lasky studio have sent messages to Mr. Zukor pledging their enthusiastic support of the rules and the plan for the school. These telegrams by reason of their source, stood out among all the hundreds of telegrams and letters that have been received by Mr. Zukor since the announcement was made, and give most gratifying evidence, Mr. Zukor says, of a spirit of the heartiest co-operation and an appreciation of the fact that the benefits of the plan far outweigh the restrictions imposed.

Among the first to give formal expression to their approval of the plan were the members of the Players' Board of Control, Conrad Nagel, Lois Wilson, Sylvia Ashton and Theodore Roberts.

Messages were also received from Frank E. Woods, supervisor-in-chief; Alfred E. Green, director; Wallace Reid, Walter Hiers, Clarence Burton, Victor H. Clarke, May McAvoy, Paul Powell, George Melford, Lila Lee, Sam Wood, Betty Compson, Bebe Daniels, and Agnes Ayres.

Rotarians See Mary Pickford As "Tess" Herself

During the recent thirteenth international convention of Rotarians at Los Angeles, the Pickford-Fairbanks studios were thrown open to the delegates, and thousands of members of the big organization swarmed to this favored spot in Filmland.

Douglas Fairbanks was in the midst of the task of producing Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood, and Mary Pickford was just as busy at the task involved in her new production of Tess of the Storm Country. Both these special features are being made for fall release through United Artists.

Miss Pickford had intended to leave most of the entertaining of the Rotarian guests to her actor-producer husband. She had a very good reason for this, inasmuch as at the time she was living the life of Tees, the waif of a lowly fishing village, and not only was she attired in rags, but her ankles and feet were bare. Her modesty forbade her parading before strangers in such attire.

However, when something like 5000 Rotarians had succeeded in getting into the grounds and were assembled in the huge banqueting hall of the King Richard castle set where Mr. Fairbanks and his company were working on Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood, there was a decided demand for Miss Pickford. Fairbanks ordered a recess for his workers and disappeared.

On informing Miss Pickford of the call for her presence, Fairbanks found that she demurred strongly. He laughingly insisted that she return with him for at least one "bow." She begged for time to get into street clothes, but was dissuaded.

In five minutes Mr. Fairbanks had "America's Sweetheart," togged out as the humble Tees, in the presence of the guests, and leading her by the hand, escorted her the full length of the set between two lanes of cheering men.

DeMille Finishes Filming of "Manslaughter"

Setting a speed production record excelled only by the preceding picture Saturday Night, Cecil B. DeMille has completed the filming of Manslaughter with Thomas Meighan, Leatrice Joy and Lois Wilson in the principal roles.

Manslaughter was officially launched on May 1. Inasmuch as previous DeMille productions have frequently required ten or twelve weeks to film, the record on Manslaughter speaks highly for the efficiency and co-operation of the present production system, says Paramount.

Cutting and titling of this picture will occupy the attention of the producer and scenarist for several weeks to come.

Fairbanks Gives Robin Hood Show to Aid Charity

Douglas Fairbanks, who never loses an opportunity to aid in charitable matters, recently gave at his Hollywood studio a Robin Hood tournament which in one day netted the Assistance League of Los Angeles a small fortune, thus enabling that organization to pay all its debts and have a surplus to carry on its work of helping unfortunates of that city.

According to Mrs. Hancock Banning, president of the League, $11,000 was realized from Mr. Fairbanks turning over to her the mammoth Norman castle and Nottingham sets for Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood, being made for fall release by United Artists Corporation.

The program included archery and other exhibitions of English sports popular eight hundred years ago, which took place on the big tournament field before King Richard's castle, and a concert in which a number of noted artists appeared. There were Charles Wakefield Cadman, composer and pianist; Viola Ellis, who sang selections from the opera "Robin Hood"; William Tyroler, pianist; Sol Cohen, violinist; Harold Stanton, tenor; Melba French Barr, soprano; Jeanette Rodgers, flutist; Morris Stoloff, violinist, and Blanche McTavish Smith, contralto. The Denishawn dancers added to the novelty, while Mr. Fairbanks' exhibition with the long bow and his arrows proved a thriller.

William Fox to Star Mary Carr In Another Film

Mary Carr will soon be presented in a new production, by William Fox, it was announced to-day. The Custard Cup, one of the year's best sellers, has been selected as the story for Mrs. Carr's next picture.

The Custard Cup, by Florence Bingham Livingston, has been pronounced by critics one of the greatest humorous novels since Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch. The title of the photoplay will be Penzie.

Penzie tells the story of the joys to be found in the little things of life. The book is a portrayal of the lives of people who manage to live on almost nothing a year and have an uproariously good time. "Penzie" is the mother not only to a brood of adopted waifs, but to all the people in the tumbledown section, called The Custard Cup.

Mrs. Carr will be directed by Herbert Brenon, who is now at work on a new picture, Moonshine Valley, in which William Farnum is the star. When this picture is completed he will begin at once to prepare Penzie for screening.

Less than two years ago William Fox secured Mrs. Carr to impersonate the mother in Over the Hill. The picture was a tremendous success and the talented actress became a decided favorite.

Following Over the Hill Mr. Fox presented the special feature Silver Wings. So great was the success of the two pictures in which Mrs. Carr was featured that motion picture audiences soon demanded another picture.

New Neilan Production Policy to Boost Los Angeles

Marshall Neilan's new production policy, which practically eliminates the building of artificial "sets" and which was instituted with the production of Fools First, now playing at the Kinema Theatre in Los Angeles, is to prove a national "boost" for that city.

Instead of building interiors of hotel lobbies, schools, banks and other scenes required by the action of the plot, Mr. Neilan in the production of this and future pictures made in Los Angeles, uses original interiors which are available in Los Angeles.

"Nanook" Wins Favor in Dallas

Pathe's Arctic Feature Wins Approval of Public and Critics in Texas Metropolis

Almost immediately following the premiere week of Nanook of the North at the Capitol Theatre, the popular human appeal of this screen epic of native life and adventure in the desolate frozen regions, declares Pathe, is established beyond any doubt by its reception by public and critics at the Palace Theatre, Dallas, Texas, operated by The Southern Enterprises, Inc.

Pathe quotes the following telegram received from Southern Enterprises:

"Just completed week's engagement at the Palace of Nanook of the North. This is some picture. It has caused more favorable comment than any picture we have ever run. Patrons, newspaper critics and film men are unanimous in their verdict, 'wonderful'."

This verdict is fully borne out by reviews of Nanook of the North printed in the Dallas newspapers, as the following paragraphs indicate:

Dallas Amusements—"If one thinks there were thrills in the ice-jam in Way Down East, or if there were thrills and suspense in other big pictures of the year, then this graphic story will undeniably hold one spellbound."

Dallas Journal—"Venturing far into the Arctic Circle, a Pathe cameraman attached himself to an Eskimo family. And when he returned to civilization he brought with him some of the most interesting and unique moving pictures ever taken."

Times-Herald—"Nanook of the North is something entirely new in the way of motion picture entertainment . . every foot of the film is crammed with breathless, vivid interest."

Dallas Morning News—"Nanook of the North is epochal. Nothing like it was ever offered before."

Finds Improvement in New England Business Conditions

"Business conditions throughout northern New York State and the whole of New England are showing a marked improvement, and exhibitors are happy in consequence. Indeed, a decided advance has already set in in the industry and yet greater results are expected in the autumn."

This statement was made this week by A. Nacht, manager of the sales control and statistical department of Associated Exhibitors, on his return from an automobile tour which took him almost to the Canadian border. Mr. Nacht made stops in some forty or fifty cities and towns in northern New York, Massachusetts, Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine.

Universal Holds National Meeting of Exchangemen

The first national gathering of Universal managers from all exchanges in the United States and Canada was held at the Congress Hotel, Chicago, Saturday and Sunday, June 24 and 25. The meetings were presided over by E. H. Goldstein, treasurer of the company, and A. A. Schmidt, general sales manager, assisted by George Levine, newly appointed general manager of short product.

Straight-from-the-shoulder talks to the exchangemen present were given by the general officers, and the spirit of enthusiasm reigned throughout the meeting.

Treasurer Goldstein returned to New York on the Twentieth Century, Sunday. The other general officers remained over in Chicago until Tuesday with some of the sales representatives who came from distant points for further conference.

Theda Bara Is Returning to Screen

Signs with Selznick Pictures Corporation for One Production to Be Made During the Coming Season

Myron Selznick, president of Selznick Pictures Corporation, announced this week that he had completed arrangements for the return of Theda Bara to the screen and had signed her to appear in a special in the coming season.

Negotiations with Miss Bara had been under way for a number of weeks—ever since the Selznick company secured the story in which she is to star and which seemed suited to no other motion picture actress in the world quite so much as to her. The contract is one of the most important which Myron Selznick, president of the Selznick producing organization, has yet been called upon to sign.

The engagement is for a single picture. Miss Bara's box-office draft and the fact that the need for her seemed great may have been the combination of circumstances which ran the engagement price up to a figure considerably beyond anything the Selznick company has yet been called upon to pay, despite the fact that they have, in times past, employed some of the biggest people on the screen.

In making the announcement it is stated that in no sense is it true that Miss Bara has at any time since her first appearance in motion pictures been in retirement in so far as the photoplay public is concerned.

Miss Bara has been in great demand throughout the country for personal appearances. Her contract with the Selznick company was signed just a few days after her return to New York from a long tour during which she appeared in and broke the box-office records of many of the leading theatres in the Middle West.

The announcement of the engagement by the Selznick company of the most celebrated "vamp" which has ever flashed across the international amusement horizon will very naturally give rise to interesting speculation as to the nature of the vehicle in which Miss Bara will appear. Until the script, now only in indefinite outline, has been reduced to its final form, President Myron Selznick has only this to say:

"We have engaged Miss Bara because we feel that we have a story which no person else in the motion picture profession can do as well as she. Our decision in this regard is based not only upon our observation of her performances but also because of our conviction that what she has done in the past is only a slight indication of what she may do if provided an opportunity such as we are fortunate enough to be able to give her. Full advantage will be taken of every peculiarity of style for which Miss Bara has become known—but our story will go much further.

"I am confident that Miss Bara will always have occasion to remember the Selznick special in which she appeared as the biggest thing in her career."

Get Things from You, Even When You Watch

The greatest instrument in shaping public opinion is the motion picture. You know there are always enemies, there are always fleas that get on the dog, and there are the motion picture censors. They recognize that they can't stop free speech in the newspapers, in the churches, and in books, but they want to stop it in the motion picture. They get things away from you when you are not watching, and, like a magician, they get them from you even when you are watching. That flat-footed bunch needs watching. Don't let these blue devils strangle you.—Hudson Maxim to New Jersey Exhibitors, June 21.

Cohen Addresses Rochester Exhibitors at Outing

Sydney Cohen, president of the M. P. T. O. A., was the chief speaker at the annual outing of the Rochester Motion Picture Theatre Owners at the Point Pleasant Hotel, Rochester, June 26, according to a telegram received from Jules Greenstone, president of the Rochester Motion Picture Exhibitors League.

A vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. Cohen. Mr. Greenstone, who presided, stated that the Rochester organization stood one hundred per cent for the M. P. T. O. A.

Mr. Cohen was accompanied by M. E. Comerford, member of the M. P. T. O. A. Board of Directors; M. J. O'Toole, William Cadoret of Illinois and E. M. Fay, president of the Rhode Island M. P. T. O.

The Cohen party were the guests of George Eastman while in Rochester.

Blackton's Color Feature Will Be Handled by Allied

Announcement is made by Hiram Abrams that The Glorious Adventure, the J. Stuart Blackton color production featuring Lady Diana Manners, will be released this fall through Allied Producers and Distributors Corporation, the recently formed subsidiary of United Artists Corporation. As previously announced, the productions of Allied Producers and Distributors Corporation will be handled the same way as the releases of United Artists Corporation.

The Glorious Adventure had a prerelease showing of one week at the Capitol Theatre, New York City, and won high praise from both the New York newspapers and the trade press.

"If you like melodrama intense and unrestrained, with a historical background and action in abundance, The Glorious Adventure will hit you squarely between the eyes," said the critic for the New York American. "The new process of color photography employed makes every picture stand out like a holiday postcard, and there is enough violence of action to supply a serial with material."

"The Glorious Adventure is a new and beautiful addition to screen art," said the review of the Morning Telegraph. "From the standpoint of color photography it is a notable achievement. London's great fire is marvelously reproduced."

"The Glorious Adventure is a noteworthy piece of work," said the critic for the New York World. "The appearance of Lady Diana Manners is interesting and proves that she is not alone a strikingly beautiful woman, but a natural actress."

"A splendidly done picture and at times gorgeously beautiful," said the Evening Mail's critic. "Lady Diana Manners is altogether acceptable as a screen heroine, a charming, gracious, beautiful young woman, who handles the role of Lady Beatrice Fair splendidly."

"The London fire scenes gave this Prizma camera a remarkable opportunity for a realism beyond the scope of the ordinary motion picture processes," said the Evening Telegram. "Lady Diana Manners' performance is marked by a refusal to overact, and in this she contributes not a little to the realism of the role."

The story and direction of The Glorious Adventure are both by J. Stuart Blackton, the producer. The scenario was prepared by Felix Orman, and the photography is by William T. Crespinel. The American version is in part retitled by Katherine Hilliker and Capt. H. H. Caldwell. The picture is in seven reels.

Norma Talmadge Begins Work on "The Voice From the Minaret"

Norma Talmadge's next picture is to be The Voice From the Minaret, adapted from the novel of that name by Robert Hichens.

The Voice From the Minaret enjoyed a tremendous success on the speaking stage in London. Work on the new production will start this week at the United Studios, Los Angeles.

Upon the completion of The Voice From the Minaret, Miss Talmadge will immediately proceed to The Garden of Allah. Frank Lloyd will direct Miss Talmadge in both The Voice From the Minaret and The Garden of Allah.

Advertisers Dine Noted Englishman

Sir Charles Higham, M. P., Is Given Luncheon at the Biltmore Attended by Prominent Men in the Industry

The Associated Motion Picture Advertisers of the United States on June 22 entertained at luncheon at the Hotel Biltmore Sir Charles Higham, M. P., the first advertising man in Great Britain to be knighted and the first to be elected to Parliament. In addition to the luncheon there was a display of motion picture advertising from the earlier days of the industry to the present.

C. L. Yearsley, president of the association, presided. D. W. Griffith welcomed the guest of honor, following an address by John C. Flinn, in which he sketched the history of the organization.

"Business is the most beautiful thing in the world," said Mr. Griffith in the course of his remarks. "I have hands, body, a little thought and a little brain, but what little I have I am putting to some kind of decent, creative business and advertise that to the world, and sending it to all the nations, and have all the nations meet and understand that they should not interrupt our business, which is only service and brotherhood."

"It must be a matter of great pride to you gentlemen who know Mr. Griffith," declared Sir Charles in responding, "who electrifies the masses of the world on the screen and who gets up at a board meeting and talks like Mr. Griffith has done today. It begins in my judgment a new era in your business when you can find men of sufficient soul to see something good in another man and then have the decency to get on their feet and say it even though it may not all be true. I am pleased indeed to come to this table to-day and to enjoy your hospitality.

"You have the greatest gift given to man or woman—the ability to make a million or ten million people act in unison on a given thing. A doctor, scientist, preacher couldn't do it. The only men that have that gift are advertising men. What are we going to do with that gift? Are we going forever to use it for putting up on walls these different charming pictures, which are a great credit to your industry? Are you forever going to make comedies? You men who mold public opinion can make them change their minds because you have got cleverer minds than they have—the public. If it weren't for advertising men there wouldn't be great manufacturers throughout the world. You have got the advertising story of the American spirit to tell. You are planting the American story under every flat by the greatest medium in the world, by photography of the human brain."

Among those at the speakers' table were J. D. Williams, E. W. Hammons, Courtlandt Smith, Robert Lieber, H. O. Schwalbe, Richard Rowland, Edwin Carewe, C. L. Yearsley, Paul Gulick, Victor M. Shapiro and Colonel J. W. O'Mahoney. Also there were many prominent representatives of large business concerns, of publications and of advertising associations.

F. B. O. Issues First Vehicle For Jane Novak

The first of a series of six outdoor special productions starring Jane Novak is announced as the current release of the Film Booking Offices of America, the newly named Robertson-Cole Distributing Corporation. It is titled Colleen of the Pines and was produced by Chester Bennett from an original story by J. Grubb Alexander. Colleen of the Pines will be the first picture to be released through the Film Booking Offices, the change of name becoming effective on July 1.

Colleen of the Pines is a romance of the Northwest. The plot revolves around the romance of the daughter of a stern, unbending trapper in the Saskatchewan country, and a member of the Northwest Mounted Police.

Miss Novak's leading man is Edward Hearn. The remainder of the cast includes Alfred Allen, J. Gordon Russell, Charlotte Pierce, Ernest Shield, and "Smoke" Turner.

Colleen of the Pines will be available at F. B. O. Exchanges on July 9.

Plans Completed for Filming Second Madge Kennedy Picture

Although the Madge Kennedy production, Dear Me, the first of the new series of this star, has not yet been completed, the Kenma Corporation has made all arrangements for the filming of the second production, Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall.

The scenario has been written, the working continuity completed to the satisfaction of the star, the director and the production manager, and the Kenma Corporation will probably cast the chief roles of this production at the Tilford Studios, New York City, within the next ten days.

Live News of the West Coast

BY RENEE BEEMAN

J. E. BOWEN, president and general manager of the Cosmosart Pictures Corp., has purchased the B. B. Hampton productions, known as the Federal Photoplays, and as president of that organization, Mr. Bowen announces that production of these well known Zane Grey pictures will be resumed at the Cosmosart Studios, Los Angeles, about the latter part of July.

Mr. Bowen is leaving about the first of July, to personally investigate conditions in the East and confer with the Goldwyn, Pathe and Hodkinson releasing concerns in reference to the seventeen Federal pictures already released and the four current vehicles made under the supervision of B. B. Hampton.

After deciding on conditions throughout the United States, J. E. Bowen will launch a country-wide campaign presenting the Federal Photoplays with renewed energy to the exhibitors.

The much beloved dog "Strongheart" is finishing his current production with the Murphin-Trimble Productions. Jane Murphin stated that she believes the present production will far surpass The Silent Call, which played to fourteen weeks at the Miller Theatre in Los Angeles. The present vehicle is handled under the working title of Brawn of the North, but it is believed this title will be changed, as the "North" cycle has about run its course. First National may be the releasing agency for the latest "Strongheart" picture.

The recently completed Standard Film Laboratories at 959 Seward street, Hollywood are entirely dust-proof, dust being one of the many financially dangerous agents to film producers, because the fine particles of dust sift into even carefully guarded drying rooms and ruin wet film in the laboratories.

S. M. Tompkins and J. M. Nickolaus, owners of the new plant are inviting executives and cameramen of the industry to inspect their new dust-proof rooms. In addition to sealing every possible point against dust, an elaborate air conditioning system has been put into operation so that the temperature and humidity is constantly the same.

The Paramount productions are: To Have and to Hold, which is nearing completion with George Fitzmaurice directing and Betty Compson and Bert Lytell in the title roles, Theodore Kosloff playing the heavy. The Ghost Breaker, directed by Alfred Green, in which Wallace Reid is starred with Lila Lee in the supporting role, is progressing rapidly. William DeMille will start Clarence next week, the popular Booth Tarkington play adapted to the screen by Clara Beranger. Cecil B. DeMille is making Manslaughter with Thomas Meighan and Leatrice Joy in the leads and Lois Wilson and others in prominent roles. Pink Gods, with Penrhyn Stanlaws directing, featuring Bebe Daniels and James Kirkwood, also Anna Q. Neilson, Adolphe Menjou, Raymond Hatton and others in the support. Scenes for the week were laid in Kimberly, So. Africa where Boers and Kaffirs thronged the streets. Miss Swanson has returned and is well into the production of The Impossible Mrs. Bellew. Sam Woods had the picture started before Gloria's return and with a few days rest, she joined the company which was enroute to San Francisco where steamer scenes will be made and some shots will be taken at Burlingame, Cal. The current George Melford production, Ebb Tide, will go into production the first week in July. It is a Robert Louis Stevenson story, in which Lila Lee, James Kirkwood. Raymond Hatton, George Fawcett, Noah Beery, Jacqueline Logan will appear. Mr. Melford has recently completed Burning Sands and is extremely enthusiastic over the results. On the High Seas, Irving Willat's production for Paramount in which Dorothy Dalton and Jack Holt are featured has gone to the south part of the state on location.

Louis Gottschalk, noted composer, has been secured by Rex Ingram to prepare a special musical score for The Prisoner of Zenda, Mr. Ingram's recently completed production for Metro.

English Making Costlier Productions

Aim to Cater More and More to American Market, Says Al Christie, Returning from European Trip

Al Christie, accompanied by H. D. Edwards, production manager at the Christie studio, arrived in New York June 21 after a trip abroad which included visits to England, Scotland, France, Belgium and Holland. The two left for their homes in California three days later.

Just before starting for Los Angeles Mr. Christie said the journey had been for pleasure and for observation, too. He expressed the view that every comedy producer should make it a point to travel as much as possible. He said this would serve a double purpose, that not only would it give him an accurate idea of national or racial atmosphere, but it would give him any number of fresh ideas.

The influx of American producers into England has been the cause of some concern on the part of English picture makers, Mr. Christie said. The result has been that the producers in that country are giving increased attention to the making of more pretentious subjects, with the aim of catering more and more to the American market. As an illustration, Gaumont is to produce Rob Roy in Scotland on a scale unusual among English companies. Ideal Films, Ltd., is preparing to produce A Bill of Divorcement with Constance Binney, with Dennison Clift as the probable director. These subjects are to be distributed on the basis of merit, on the single as distinguished from the block booking basis.

One of the objects of Mr. Christie's visit to Scotland was to assimilate local atmosphere for the benefit of a comedy soon to be undertaken at the Christie studio under the title of Hot Scotch.

Asked as to his views of the desirability of American producers making pictures abroad, Mr. Christie declared he was strongly impressed by the possibilities of making pictures in foreign countries. "With this exception," the producer explained, "that the American who undertakes the work carry along with him his chief players. I believe that step to be essential if the highest success is to be attained. One of the fundamentals of American comedy is speed—pep, if you will. Then again primarily your audience is American, and you must cater to that division of it first. Consequently you have got to give it what it looks for, and I very much doubt if you could do that with players selected in countries the natives of which take life much more calmly even if more joyfully than we do here. But with an American producer and American players, with foreign backgrounds—and I have seen some charming examples of these—I will say the idea is fine."

Among old friends Mr. Christie met abroad were John C. Tibbetts, again on his way by this time to the United States; Donald Crisp, who went abroad to direct for Famous Players, and who at present through an arrangement by the latter company is directing an English production: Oscar Apfel, who with Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley as his principal players, is producing in Holland for the Haarlem company; Maurice Tourneur, with Richard Dix and Mae Bush, was making night scenes for Goldwyn's The Christian in Trafalgar Square, London.

Mr. Christie declared one result of his journey was to increase his realization of the responsibility resting on the American producer when portraying American life and customs. Men and women in other countries judge American men and matters by what they see in American pictures.

Referring to general policies at the Christie studio the returning tourist said the more indorsements he could get from parents and teachers' associations the better he would like it. "It is no trick to get a laugh in a comedy if you care to be a bit risque," he said, "but it is usually difficult to do that if you would stick to situations that contain no offense.

"If there is to be any cutting of my pictures I prefer to do it myself. Yes, I have a censor board right in my home—my mother and my sister—and I don't mind telling you if I can get a picture by that committee of two I feel reasonably sure it's uncensorable, for they do criticise with that frankness and authority one expects from—and incidentally respects—the feminine members of his household. I prefer any time to kill a laugh rather than take a chance on giving offense."

Real Giant Jack to Play Role in Fairy Story for Century

Alf Goulding, Baby Peggy's director, has started production on the second fairy tale to be made by Century—Jack and the Beanstalk. The first of the series was Little Red Riding Hood, and a series of well known fairy tales will be produced.

Goulding, after several experiments with faked giants, made up his mind that only the real thing would suit him and he found a successful applicant no further off than in Venice, Cal. Jack Erlich is his name, and though only fifteen years old he weighs 237 pounds and stands 7 feet 3 inches. His arm reach is 96¼ inches, which is a trifle over eight feet.

No expense is to be spared in making the screen versions faithful to the originals so that the children who form Baby Peggy's following will not be disappointed.

Pathe to Release Screen Novelty of "Song of the Lark"

The two-reel feature called The Song of the Lark, whose poetically human theme is derived from the celebrated Jules Breton painting bearing that title, has been accepted by Pathe for distribution, the release date shortly to be announced. The picture is written and produced under the supervision of Arthur Maude, creator of The Beggar Maid, The Bashful Suitor and other screen novelties inspired by art works which have deeply impressed the people of all countries.

The Song of the Lark, as screened, reveals a double source of inspiration, for in its graphic opening scenes it shows Jules Breton, painter, inspired by Franz Schubert's immortal melody, Hark, Hark, the Lark. In the picture, Breton's peasant girl is represented by a charming, more refined, yet simple, type whose passionate application to herself of the lark's joyous freedom, in opposition to her lover's masterful attitude, furnishes the drama's impressive conflict. Ideal beauty of sentiment and treatment is said to be realized by the author-producer.

The dramatic and artistic "tie-up" in the picture of two popular masterpieces of song and of the painter's art is said to have convinced Pathe that the feature would make a very wide appeal—as in the case of its noted predecessors which developed similar themes. It is presented by Selig and Kalen.

Increasing Interest in Roach Comedies, Reports Pathe Office

There is increasing evidence, reports Pathe, that exhibitors find Hal Roach Comedies profitably enriched by the one-reelers featuring Paul Parrott. This loose-legged comedian has already been distinguished in newspaper reviews as the "Doodlewit of screen comedy." Every exhibitor realizes the value of qualities which win public recognition aptly expressed in this humorous fashion. That Paul Parrott lives up to this grotesque title better than ever in late Pathe releases each successive screening has shown for itself.

It is pointed out that both the press and the public are attaching almost unique importance to the Hal Roach Comedy trade mark—which is associated with every step of the rise of Harold Lloyd. It has steadily advanced Harry "Snub" Pollard, placing him in his present position as a favorite with audiences here and in Europe. And now "Hal Roach Comedies"—meaning, broadly, the steady flow of one-reelers distributed by Pathe—are bringing the odd personality and diversified talents of Paul Parrott into the limelight.

At the present time the demand for Hal Roach Comedies is keeping four production units busy on the Culver City lot.

Educational to Release Six Burr-Hurd Comedies

Six Earl Hurd Comedies, a new series of cartoon comedies each in one reel, will be presented by C. C. Burr through Educational Film Exchanges, Inc,, during the season of 1922-1923. The first of the series will be released about the middle of August. It is called One Ol' Cat. Releases will follow one every other month, so that the series will extend over the year.

The drawings for these clever fun pictures are done by Earl Hurd, who has made pictures for Bray for five years, and has become famous for his Bobby Bumps.

The Earl Hurd Comedies mark a new step in cartoon comedies. They are a clever combination of "shots" of living actors and actual, material settings, and animated cartoon characters.

McKinley Film Jumps Into High Favor

Remarkable Novelty of "The Mirror" Attracting Wide Notice from Newspapers—Eleven Other Issues Already Scheduled

A one-reel film novelty called The Mirror that instantly has jumped into popular favor and now is being shown in the country's leading theatres is being issued by the International News Reel Corporation, through Universal. It is a revival of great news events of the past, made before news reels were thought of. The first number, now being issued, features pictures taken twenty-five years ago during the inauguration of President William McKinley in 1897.

Everywhere this reel has been shown it has attracted great attention, and assumed feature proportions during its run. Columns of newspaper publicity have been written round the novelty of viewing moving pictures of events which now are far back on the pages of history. The inauguration pictures are surprisingly good, but the vast improvement in the art of the moving picture camera is easily seen by contrasting the McKinley pictures with pictures of President Wilson's 1913 inauguration, and President Harding's last year, excerpts of which are shown in the same reel.

The Rialto Theatre, New York, featured The Mirror containing the McKinley pictures, during that theatre's recent anniversary week. Balaban & Katz' new Tivoli Theatre, Chicago, also featured the first issue of The Mirror. The Stanley Theatre, Philadelphia; the Central Park and Riviera, Chicago; the Broadway Theatre, New York; the Strand, Milwaukee; the Allen, Cleveland; the Newark, Newark; and many other first run theatres have reported exceptional success with this novelty reel.

Following issue No. 1 of The Mirror, there will be subsequent issues, of which twelve interesting and historical news revivals already are scheduled for inclusion.

Englishman Shown What an American News Reel Can Do

Sir Charles Higham, M. P., the man who "advertised himself into the peerage and parliament," was amazed by the speed of American news reel work as shown with the pictures taken following the dinner of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers at which he was the guest of honor last week.

Pictures were taken exclusively by Kinograms, Educational's news reel, of the guest of honor and a few other prominent guests immediately after Sir Charles' address at the dinner, which was given at the Biltmore Hotel, New York, and within five hours they were being shown in motion picture theatres as part of the regular Kinograms news reel.

Sir Charles visited Educational's home office Monday and had a private showing of the entire length of film from which the "shots" were selected for the news reel. After the showing, the film was presented to Sir Charles, who is taking it back to London as a souvenir and an example of the high speed work of the "film newspaper" in America.

Two Educational Comedies Open in Eastern Houses

Danger! a Mermaid Comedy produced under the supervision of Jack White, and featuring Lige Conley, began a run of two or three weeks at the Criterion Theatre in New York on Sunday, June 25. Danger! is the most recent Jack White production in the Mermaid Comedy series released by Educational.

Baby Peggy's Two "Doubles" Will Have Tryout by Century

Baby Peggy's two "doubles," the little girls who looked the most like her in the contest held at Sid Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre, will receive their opportunity to be screened in a Century Comedy as promised. The lucky babies are Clarice Joy, aged three years, and Baby Jane, aged four.

The contest ran for several weeks simultaneously with Peggy's comedies. From over two thousand contestants whose fond parents thought they looked like Baby Peggy Clarice Joy won first prize, a handsome little wrist watch. Baby Jane ran such a close second the judges decided to give a second prize.

That the contest may be the means of bringing new talent to the screen is the hope of Julius Stern, who it will be remembered "found" Baby Peggy when he gave her a small bit in a Brownie comedy, after which her versatile personality as shown in the comedies with the dog brought her to the top.

REVIEWS OF CURRENT SHORT SUBJECTS

MOVIE CHATS NO. 22—Distributed by Hodkinson.—Nina Wilcox Putnam, writer, describes her idea of reducing weight through regard for diet. From hemp to rope is shown in a series of pictures. Interesting shots are taken among the magnolia trees and gardens of the Drayton family estate in South Carolina. A weather vane in the form of a rooster thirteen feet high and ten feet wide is photographed on top of a New York skyscraper. From his perch the cameraman trains his lens on the surrounding city. In order are shown timber wolves, tapir, polar bear, sea lion and the otter.

PATHE REVIEW NO. 163.—Striking scenes of South Africa are shown. "Where did you get your face?" is the scientist's answer to the question, employing a series of skulls from other periods to indicate the progression. "If a Table Could Talk" shows a card game without players. Navajo Indians illustrate the method of rugmaking followed by that tribe from earliest times. The Pathecolor is "Keeping the Family Fed," and portrays the unfeathered youngsters at home in their nest.

A JAZZED HONEYMOON—Pathe Reissue.—Harold Lloyd is shanghaied as a fireman on an ocean steamer when he thinks he is going on a honeymoon. Bebe Daniels is the bride. "Snub" Pollard is an accessory before the fact to the shanghaiing. Most of the fun is supplied, however, by Lloyd. He gets the opportunities —and the rough handling.

THE LITTLE DIPLOMAT—Pathe Playlet.—Baby Marie Osborne is the featured player in a charming sketch and is supported by Betty Compson, William Welsh, Lydia Knott, Murdock and Al MacQuarrie, Jack Connolly and Sunshine Sammy. There is a crook twist at the end which adds to the dramatic interest.

KINETO REVIEW—Beyond the Horizon.—The entire single reel is devoted to views of Australia, the picture opening with pictures taken from the deck of a steamer approaching Sydney. That city as well as Melbourne is pictorially described, with its chief points of interest.

IN THE DOORWAY OF DEATH—Episode 14 of Pathe serial, Go-Get-'Em Hutch.—The chapter opens with the escape of Hutch from under the ice and ends with him enmeshed in the clutches of a new fangled device. There is a goodly amount of action in the number.

CRIME IN A BIG CITY—Fable cartoon released by Pathe.—Cartoonist Terry has provided us with some laughs in illustrating the moral that "Those who lay traps for others often get caught by their own bait." There are good bits in this single reel.

THE LATE LAMENTED—Rolin Comedy, released by Pathe.—Paul Parrott, Mark Jones and Ethel Broadhurst have the principal roles in a story of wooing a girl and incidentally if possible winning a legacy. It will mildly amuse.

Arrow Plans to Make Eight Pictures

Dr. Shallenberger Announces These Will Be Elaborate and Selected Largely for Their Exploitation Qualities

The Arrow Film Corporation plans entering production this fall on a substantial scale. An outline of the company's intentions was given on Wednesday in a few minutes' conversation with Dr. W. E. Shallenberger, president of the company, who was standing on his toes for a getaway to make his suburban train. In his hand was a briefcase, which somehow looked like a scenario. "What's the idea? You reading stories these days?" inquired a TRADE REVIEW man. The doctor smiled.

"I have been reading stories for a month," he replied. "Yes, we are going to make some pictures—some super-productions, as the boys call 'em. And I guess that's what they will be, too. You see, I have been digging into this independent market thing for the last six months—and digging hard. I haven't studied as hard to find out what's what since I went to school. And things really are coming back. Incidentally, I think I know what the men in the independent market want in the way of material.

"As I said, I am personally reading stories and searching for dependable stuff. We expect to have at least eight productions made during this season. Before I accept a story I am going to be satisfied that it is clean, and that it will lend itself to real exploitation. I am naming just two of the essentials, but when I find those I am satisfied the others so necessary also will be present.

"In addition, we are seriously considering taking most of the first run bookings direct from New York and sending them out with special forces of men for that purpose, all of this prior to selling the pictures to the territorial purchaser. Of course, such bookings will be turned over to the buyer. The whole eight productions will be released during the season.

"For our purposes it is not necessary that a story shall be of a big book or of a big play. What we want are those of real entertainment value. In studying the field we have learned or rather had again borne in on us that there are many picturegoers who frequently are disappointed in viewing adaptations of books and plays with which they are acquainted. The complaint is made that it is like reading a book's last chapter first. Of course, admission will be made that the complainants knew what they were going to see, but they realize once the picture is started that by reason of their acquaintance with the subject suspense for them has been destroyed. Really, I believe the employment of old stories is responsible for driving more people from the theatre than any other single factor.

"It is up to the theatre and to its advertising department and to the exploitation department of the distributor to originate ideas of merchandising rather than to depend on the name of some author or the name of a well-known play or story to create an interest in the production. It is our aim to give something that will afford a chance to the men in the business to employ new ideas.

"Just to slip you a laugh, and as showing we are believers that the exception proves the rule, our first production probably will be from Maravene Thompson's The Net, produced on Broadway two years ago by Lee Kugel. There will be in the leading roles players whose names will mean something to exhibitors, and these will be directed by men of proved ability and supported by a strong cast. It is not sensational, but it has a real human interest theme."

It may be well to remark that Dr. Shallenberger has had a lot of experience in production. "No, since 1910 I never have been out of it," he said in response to a question.

Pacific Film Opens Offices

J. J. Hayes, president of the Pacific Film Company of Culver City, Cal., who is in New York for an extended stay, following a trip across the country in the interest of his company, has opened offices in Suite 809, Loew Building, New York. These will be in charge of Julius Singer, Pacific's eastern representative.

Warner Men Write Fox Trot to Push "Main Street" Sale

As an added and an advance exploitation stunt for the Warner Brothers' production, Main Street, being produced by Sam and Jack Warner at the organization's coast studios, Eddie Bonns, director of advertising and publicity, and Louis Marangella, his assistant, have composed a popular fox-trot number based on the title of the picture.

The title of the song is "There's a Main Street in Every Town, but There's Only One Broadway," and it serves to drive home the theme of the story. Negotiations are said to be now under way for the mechanical and publishing rights. The plan is to make the song a popular number by the time the picture is released.

"Still Going Strong" Is Hallroom Title to Open New Series

Still Going Strong is the title that has been given the first comedy on the new series built up around the adventures of the redoubtable Percy and Ferdie Hallroom.

This title was selected by the producers not only because it suits the spirit of the comedy itself, and of the exploits of the four-flushing Percy and Ferdie, but also because of the exploitation and publicity value in such a title for the opening release on the fourth series of these comedies.

Based on H. A. MacGill's famous cartoons of the Hallroom Boys, the subjects are three years old—and they are, literally "still going strong." The producers always have been of the opinion that the title of a comedy is an extremely important factor in "selling" a comedy to the public—a "catchy title" and one that gives opportunity for clever advertising and exploitation being just as important as making the comedy itself good. They have always exercised this idea in the naming of the Hallroom Boys Comedies, with the result that they have been greatly aided thereby in catching the public fancy.

Goldstone to Make More Specials

Following his Deserted at the Altar, Phil Goldstone will produce three more specials along the same lines for the independent showmen. He has just completed his first series of six Richard Talmadge productions, and for the coming season will make eight pictures with this player.

Franklyn Farnum will shortly complete his first series of six comedy drama westerns for this season's market.

Samuels Opens Office in New York

General Sales Manager of O'Conor Productions Says His Company Is All Set for Making Twenty-six Franey Films

F. E. Samuels, general sales manager of the O'Conor Productions, producers and distributors of the new series of Billy Franey two-reel comedies, arrived in New York this week and opened a branch office with Frank A. Tichenor at 220 West Forty-second Street.

In discussing his new connections and the state rights business conditions in general, Mr. Samuels said: "I am looking forward to at least two months' stay in the Eastern territory, making my headquarters in New York during that time. On my way East I stopped over in several of the larger cities, and it appears to me conditions are rapidly assuming normal shape. My survey was superficial, of course, but the reports from the coast to Cleveland are all encouraging for the independent. Unless there is a marked increase in production of short subjects I predict a comedy 'famine' in the fall. In this respect my firm is fortunate, as we have four comedies completed and two under production.

"When I left the coast I noticed a marked change among producers, optimism taking the place of pessimism in the minds of studio heads. While the producer understands there will be a 'slump' this summer, he also understands that September will be the banner month for independent sales.

"We will produce the entire series of twenty-six Billy Franey comedies during our fiscal year. A proportionate sum has been set aside for advertising and exploitation, which we will prosecute vigorously during the 'dog' days."

Hold Torchy While Hines Makes Couple of Comedy Dramas

Before beginning work on his next Torchy comedy, Johnny Hines will be featured in two six-reel comedy-dramas, is the statement issued this week at the Mastodon Films office by producer C. C. Burr. The first will have as its working title, Go Get 'Em Gallagher. Advance reports on this scenario, which has been especially prepared for Hines, indicate it will be brimful of action with comedy gags interspersed profusely to allow the comedian every opportunity.

In view of exhibitor requests for additional Johnny Hines features, Mr. Burr is particularly anxious to begin production on the first, which will probably take about three months to complete. Accordingly the studio staff is constructing the first of the interior sets.

Producer Burr firmly believes the time propitious for the appearance of Hines in feature roles, and with that end in view he has made extensive plans for a program of production which should keep Hines active for the ensuing year. Mr. Burr has carefully gauged the market demand for comedy dramas, and as a result of his findings, which cover the demand of the country's largest exhibitors, he is firm in his opinion that Go Get 'Em Gallagher and the other story now being written will be enthusiastically received.

Arrow Breaks Into Broadway Twice Within Fortnight

The fact that the day of the Independents is here is again demonstrated by the fact that the Arrow Film Corporation is represented for the second time within a fortnight in one of Broadway's foremost theatres with one of their productions. First came The Innocent Cheat, the big Arrow-Ben Wilson special which enjoyed phenomenal success at B. S. Moss' Broadway Theatre. Now comes the announcement of the booking of the James Oliver Curwood special. God's Country and the Law, at the Mark Strand Theatre, Broadway and Forty-seventh Street.

It has always been against Dr. Shallenberger's policies to rent a theatre and force a run on Broadway, it being his contention that it was not necessary in order to put a picture over, and that such a run was of little or no importance to exhibitors throughout the country. On the other hand, when an independent production is selected and bought by the management of any of the big regular motion picture theatres on Broadway he feels it is a stamp of approval and also recognition of the quality and box office value of such an attraction, for these men have the entire industry to select pictures from.

The Pine Tree Pictures' special goes into the Mark Strand Theatre, Manhattan, July 2, the Mark Strand Theatre, Brooklyn, July 9, and the Sheridan Theatre, New York.

Rialto Productions Is in the Market to Purchase Negatives

Rialto Productions, Inc., announces that it is in the market for the purchase of negative rights for film productions for the United States and Canada. The president of the company, Lou Rogers, already has consummated several deals, the first of which was Queen O' the Turf, being released through R.C.

Arrangements have been made with the Al Lichtman Corporation for the distribution of the second purchase. The Man and the Moment, by Elinor Glyn. The present subject handled by Rialto is Retribution, a story of Lucretia Borgia, now running its third week at the Park Theatre, New York. Arrangements for the distribution of this picture will shortly be announced.

Lou Rogers, president of Rialto, has had long experience in the motion picture industry. He was connected with William Fox for seven years. At the time of his resignation he was general sales manager and Canadian general manager. His next connection was with Lewis J. Selznick, when he purchased a franchise for Selznick pictures for New York State. He severed his connections with this concern, after which he was with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation as sales manager of the New York Exchange. He resigned to produce the Jane and Katherine Lee two-reel comedies, which are now being released through his offices.

Sanford Productions Are Contracted for in Six Territories

F. M. Sanford, president of Sanford Productions, of Hollywood, Cal., who has returned to the coast, reports that while in New York he closed contracts with the Myriad Pictures Corporation of New York City for Greater New York and northern New Jersey on both his series of twelve two-reel "Tweedy" comedies and eight five-reel semi-western productions featuring Pete Morrison; with the Masterpiece Film Attractions of Philadelphia for the Tweedy comedies for Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey; and with the Twentieth Century Film Company of Philadelphia for the Morrison productions. They have also closed for their product in the entire eleven southern states with the Southern States Film Company of Atlanta, Dallas, Memphis and Oklahoma City, and with the Peerless Film Service of San Francisco and Los Angeles for both their lines of productions for California, Arizona, Nevada and the Hawaiian Islands.

Dorothy Gish "Flapper" Story Ready for Release

The much heralded Dorothy Gish Feature, The Country Flapper, is ready for release by Producers Security Corporation, which will place it on the independent market.

Following closely the announcement of the release of The Country Flapper, the Producers Security Corporation announces the release of Archibald Clavering Gunter's great story, Mr. Potter of Texas, in which Maclyn Arbuckle is starred.

In the Night, the New York and London stage success, is being prepared for release by Producers Security, and will be offered to independents.
