Team Work within the industry is already well started under the Hays leadership. It will be carried forward, it must succeed, because it is sound as a business principle and is the foundation upon which all the problems are to be solved.

Team Work is the fundamental in real organization. It is established upon Confidence and Co-operation. Not a person in the industry but can play his part according to the measure of his ability.

THE demonstration at Los Angeles shows that the number of those who are joining the "partnership for service" is increasing in tremendous proportions. And running parallel to the new situation within the industry is the development of a changed attitude on the part of the public.

There is real leadership. The response to that leadership grows—within the industry and outside the industry.

Clearly, we are on the way.

A New Service to Exhibitors

BEGINNING with next week's issue, Exhibitors Trade Review will expand "The Voice of the Box-Office" in several important respects.

First, there will be added to our regular reports on pictures from the first-run centers brief newspaper reviews from established photoplay critics. These will serve as additional guides to exhibitors who book subsequent to first runs. The newspaper photoplay reviewer plays an important part in reflecting public likes and dislikes. His estimates are useful, if they are sincerely and intelligently made, and the number which comes under that classification increases each year.

The exhibitor ought to have them. He ought to know what newspapers throughout the country think of individual pictures. We propose to see that he does—in as simple and serviceable a form as possible.

Second, instead of classifying under the names of cities, we shall henceforth classify our Box-Office Reports under the titles of pictures, the name of the city being subordinated. This, we believe, will enable exhibitors to avail themselves more easily of the service we are giving.

"Voice of the Box-Office" will continue to present, briefly and concisely, an account of the exploitation used, and we shall, as far as possible, indicate the admission price charged, noting increases as they occur in connection with particular films.

Several weeks ago, we began printing the programs of many of the important theatres throughout the country. This feature will also be expanded, and should prove of great value to theatre managers, because the programs can be adapted to fit the needs of almost any sized house.

Used in connection with our own reviewing service, our release pages, and our "Making the Theatre Pay" Department, "Voice of the Box Office" becomes a real booking guide for the exhibitor.

"Go-to-the-Theatre Weeks"

IN the Northwest, with Minneapolis as a center; in the South, pivoting on Atlanta; and in other sections of the country the co-operative business drive is in full swing or about to begin.

The plan is simple and effective:—it involves team work between exhibitors and exchanges and the fullest use of newspaper and other publicity for the purpose of bringing the greatest possible number of patrons to the box-office of the theatres at the beginning of the new season or in the very midst of the so-called summer slump.

Better Films Committees are also being enlisted, where these are available. Civic organizations are aiding. Official proclamations by Governors or Mayors are sought. On all sides there is vigorous and successful effort to gain public support, organized and unorganized.

It is a splendid idea. It works both in the big town and the little town. An example of what happened in the latter instance is told in detail in this issue, Page 735. Read what happened in Wilmington, N. C. We shall tell the stories of Minneapolis and Atlanta and other cities in later issues.

Exhibitors everywhere should get busy and put into effect definite, well-planned drives for patronage. We know of no better plan than the "Go-to-the-Theatre Week."

30,000 at Great Meeting in Hollywood Cheer Hays; Big Advance for Industry Seen as Result of Coast Trip

By L. W. Boynton, Editor, Exhibitors Trade Review

Los Angeles, July 29.

AMID the roar of cannon and tremendous cheering from thirty thousand people jammed into the Hollywood Athletic Bowl, Will H. Hays this afternoon bade farewell to his "partners in service" at the film capital after a notable visit, the like of which the Coast had never before witnessed.

The scene in the Bowl, where the thousands of filmdom mingled with other thousands of citizens of Hollywood and Los Angeles, presented a brilliant spectacle. In enthusiasm and numbers it was unrivaled in the history of motion pictures.

Remarkable Demonstration

The central figure of this remarkable demonstration was a slender man, attired simply, modest in bearing, but dynamic in energy and spirit. For six days he had been fêted and honored by city and film colony. His message had gone out clear and strong, carrying conviction, inspiring enthusiasm, giving new hope to the picture leaders and the picture rank and file.

In the Hollywood Bowl, the climax came. Standing there, in the silence that only real leadership commands, Mr. Hays summed it all up in simple words:

"All for one and one for all.

"To Confidence and Co-operation must be added Team Work.

"Every one must help. Then success will be insured.

"Service is the supreme commitment of life. My sole hope is to be of some service to this, the greatest of the arts.

"I came to meet the men and women who make the pictures. I have met them. I feel I know them and I want the same sincerity I feel in this great undertaking to go out to them—from the humblest extra to the directors, stars and producers.

"I am leaving Los Angeles with a heart full of gratitude for what the press and people of California have done this week for the industry.

"I realize that this great demonstration is for the industry, not for me. I have never seen anything like it anywhere, any time, in my life."

At the very end the crowd rose and cheered as one man. If there had been any doubt in anybody's mind as to Mr. Hays' sincerity, or that he was working for the best interests of all the industry, it vanished. It is not too much to say that a new and brilliant chapter of great significance to the whole picture world was written in the Bowl at Hollywood.

Big Space in Newspapers

And its significance found reflection, not merely in the columns of space devoted to Mr. Hays' visit by the newspapers of California, but also in their editorial expressions. The press of Los Angeles is one hundred per cent for the Hays program. The meaning of his visit was pointed out by hundreds of members of the film colony, and their views are summed up in these expressions:

Abraham Lehr, Goldwyn: "Mr. Hays' visit to Los Angeles has given new confidence to the producers, and he has, I believe, crystallized public sentiment in favor of the things which the motion picture industry is honestly trying to accomplish. We have found a great leader."

Jesse L. Lasky, Famous Players-Lasky: "There is no question but that his visit here has accomplished great good for the industry as well as for Los Angeles, the capital of this business. He has given the public greater faith in the motion picture."

Irving Thalberg, Universal: "Hays is harnessing the motion picture Niagara. He is showing us how to do the most good to the most people through the tremendous power of the screen. His visit has been an inspiration."

Joseph M. Schenck: "By his visit here he has

Hays Taking Brief Vacation

Will H. Hays left Los Angeles July 29 via San Francisco for a brief period of rest in one of the Western States. Since Mr. Hays entered the industry in March he has been ceaselessly engaged on its problems, and has made a number of public addresses in widely scattered sections of the country.

It is expected Mr. Hays will be away from New York for at least two weeks, and it is the hope of his associates at headquarters that he will decide to take a month's much-needed rest.

When Mr. Hays visited his "Partners in Service" at the film colony. (Above) He is greeted at the Lasky studio by a great throng. On the steps are Mr. Hays, Cecil B. DeMille, Jesse L. Lasky, L. W. Boynton of "Exhibitors Trade Review," F. W. Beetson of the Hays office, and other film notables. (Below) The General speaks at Universal City. In the foreground, with Mr. Hays, are Irving Thalberg, Mr. Lasky and other well-known figures brought all of us closer together and he has delivered his message in such a forceful, ardent way that there can be no doubt of its meaning. I believe that his converts are limited only by the number of his hearers."

It was a gala day for Hollywood. The Motion Picture Producers Association, which had the affair in charge, saw to it that all the arrangements moved with clocklike precision. The program was managed by a committee appointed by President Abraham Lehr, of the association, and it comprised Victor Clarke, Irving Thalberg and M. C. Levee. Great credit is due the committee for the excellence of the arrangements.

Sid Grauman supplied ten acts of vaudeville which entertained the crowd until the arrival of Mr. Hays. In the studios activities stopped early in the afternoon, and all the workers thronged to the Bowl.

Under the escort of a group of film notables and an American Legion Band Mr. Hays proceeded to the meeting. Before his arrival, prominent stars, directors and producers had been presented to the audience from the platform, the vaudeville acts had been staged, and the crowd was in real holiday spirit.

When Mr. Hays entered the amphitheatre, he was given a tremendous ovation. There was a halt for a moment, as the Legion band retired, its place was taken by the Postal Workers' Band. and Mr. Hays made his way to the dais amid renewed cheering.

Every organization in the Coast film world was represented on the platform. Four hundred postal workers sat in a reserved section. All the principal clubwomen of the city were present. Los Angeles was represented officially by Mayor Cryer and many other officials, and the names of the exhibitors, stars, directors, producers, studio employees and others who were there would read like a bluebook on the industry on the Coast.

The scenes in the Bowl, preceding and during Mr. Hays speech, were filmed by a battery of cameras, and will be sent broadcast through the country, thus giving the public an accurate pictorial record of the great event.

On Wednesday night, as already reported in these pages, Mr. Hays was the guest of honor at a notable dinner at the Ambassador Hotel. The following day he plunged into a program of appointments that kept him busy until late at night.

Thursday morning he received a delegation of prominent women from the Los Angeles Branch of the California Federation of Women's Clubs, headed by Mrs. J. C. Urquhart, president. The clubwomen pledged their co-operation to Mr. Hays in carrying out his announced plans, and thus his appearance before the recent national convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs at Chautauqua was tied in with his Coast visit.

No "Hollywood Horrors"

After making his daily round of the studios and lunching at the Goldwyn plant, Mr. Hays went to the woman's clubhouse, Hollywood, where he was the guest of honor at a dinner given by the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce. It was here that Mr. Hays struck a telling blow in defense of the industry and of Hollywood itself.

"For the life of me, I cannot see the horrors of Hollywood about which I have been reading," he declared. "The one bad influence in Hollywood is talk. The duties of the people of this community and all persons interested in the motion picture industry are to hush the lies about Hollywood. Ours is a duty to youth. We are more interested by far in the influence of motion pictures upon the millions and millions of children whose morals and education are invested in the industry than in the millions of dollars invested in it."

More than three hundred were in attendance

Western A. M. P. A. Holds Banquet

L. W. BOYNTON, Editor of Exhibitors Trade Review, was among the guests of honor at a banquet given by the Western Associated Motion Picture Advertisers (the Wampas) held at the little Hollywood Club, July 26.

The other guests included Justice Charles A. Shurtleff, of the State Supreme Court; S. R. Kent, General Manager of Distribution for the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; Sheriff Traeger, of Hollywood; and Joseph J. O'Neill, personal representative for Will Hays.

Mr. Kent discussed the value of publicity and exploitation in the marketing of pictures to the public. Mr. O'Neill brought a greeting from Mr. Hays. Justice Shurtleff voiced a friendly attitude toward the industry, and Mr. Boynton made a short talk on the value of trade publications.

at the dinner. Allen Shore, president of the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce, presided. Among the speakers were Mrs. J. F. Mead, president of the Hollywood Woman's Club; Dr. Willsie Martin, president of the Ministerial Association; Walter Long, president of Hollywood Post, American Legion; Wedgwood Nowell of the Bears' Club and Jesse L. Lasky.

Mrs. Mead, after a strong declaration against political censorship, declared: "We ask for nothing more than the moral and artistic fulfillment of the constitution of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America."

"We have a wonderful spirit of good will and religion here in Hollywood," said Dr. Martin. "Hollywood is not ashamed of its religion. Every Sunday thousands throng our churches. Mr. Hays has asked for our co-operation. I would like to assure him that he already has it."

On Friday Mr. Hays held an important conference with the motion picture committee of the Los Angeles Branch of the Federation of Women's Clubs. The committee, headed by Mrs. A. A. Hummel, chairman, pledged the most cordial support to the Hays' plan for screen betterment.

The committee sends out regular bulletins recommending pictures which, in the committee's judgment, are suitable for children and for adults. There is no attempt at censorship, whatever, the committee merely endorsing what it considers good pictures and ignoring the others.

Later in the day, Mr. Hays addressed a meeting of directors, authors and publicity men in Hollywood. Frank E. Woods presided and speeches were made by Frank Lloyd, for the directors, and Arch Reeves for the publicity men.

"Upon the author, the director and the publicity man rest the greater part of the responsibility in the film world to-day. It is the author who comes first, for it is in his brain that the idea for a picture is first born, and it is he who puts that idea into words," said Mr. Hays.

"It then becomes the duty of the director, speaking in a general way, to select the costumes and to direct the movements and the actions of the players, whose influence, customs and habits affect the whole world.

"Finally, it is up to the publicity man, whose printed words of pictures in the making and the complete product mean so much to the reading public. It has been my good fortune to be in a position where I have been able to realize the tremendous, almost overwhelming powers of the press. I may say, and you will pardon the reference, that some of my best friends are newspapermen such as you once were, and that I have found their judgment and knowledge of incalculable benefit.

"So it is up to you, the last in line, as it were, to write that which will have the best results from every standpoint.

"The independents have made a number of great and successful films," he continued. "They have worked conscientiously and given the best that was in them to this great art. There has been some criticism, perhaps, on the cost of distribution to them, and this will be taken up and a more agreeable arrangement entered into.

"The producer occupies an important field and he should be encouraged in every possible way."

A New "Go-to-Theatre" Week

In the Dullest Season in North Carolina, Did the Showmen Weaken? They Helped Themselves and the Merchants

Picture this situation to yourself.

Dullest week in midsummer. Three mammoth beaches pulling the props from under your box office. Merchants suffering from the general exodus away from the heat. Whole town awry.

What was done to stop it? What would you do to stop it? Can it be stopped? Read on.

By D. M. Bain

Chief of Publicity, Howard-Wells North Carolina Theatres

We used a new idea in putting over Go-to-Theatre Week in Wilmington. We were challenged by the wiseacres to try it. We did. Here's how it was done without any "hokum" thrown in.

The deadest week of the summer season was purposely selected for putting over this campaign, when three adjacent ocean resorts were pulling mammoth crowds of city people every day and business both in the local stores and theatres was at a standstill.

As a concrete result more than seventeen thousand theatre ticket coupons each with an admittance value of fifteen cents were sold, over three thousand out of town shoppers and theatre patrons were brought into the city and more than three thousand inches of merchant advertising carrying as their main display line "Go-to-Theatre Week" was published in the two local newspapers.

Instead of going out and selling the hook-up proposition individually to the merchants of Wilmington Bain approached the officers of the Retail Merchants Association, the membership of which includes practically every business of importance in the city with one or two exceptions. The proposition was sold to the Executive Committee of this organiza- for one hundred per cent of their membership, agreeing however, to exclude all non-members of the Association. The general idea was the issuance of a special coupon good for fifteen cents towards admittance to any theatre in the city (all under one management) at any time during Theatre Week but not good after the close of that week. Each merchant issued one of these coupons with each one dollar cash purchase, three coupons with three dollars cash purchase, etc. The coupons of course, were sold to the merchants at a big discount off face value, since during this dull season business was almost at a standstill.

In the same manner a special "out of town" visitors ticket was issued good for full admission to any theatre during the week, and the merchants mailed these with their compliments to out-of-town customers on their selected list offering other special inducements for them to visit Wilmington during "Go to Theatre Week." All tickets were issued to the merchants on consignment unused coupons being redeemed at the end of the week, so that all merchants bought freely, and having a good supply on hand, dispensed them in the same manner.

THE BIGGEST AND BUSIEST DEPARTMENT STORE IN WILMINGTON

An independent merchant, not a member of the local association, was also included—in fact, no one got by. It was the whole town's affair.

Six hundred one-sheet posters, five hundred window and tack cards, and several thousand hand bills were posted and distributed, this campaign starting a week ahead and going through the entire week. By being a co-operative movement with the Merchants Association cards were obtained on the front of every trolley car on all the city lines.

Both newspapers through the solicitation of the Merchants' Association which includes all the heaviest advertisers, entered largely into the success of the campaign, offering their news columns daily for front page local stories in advance of the opening of the campaign. Big-head front page stories were given daily a total of eleven columns of such matter having been carried the week before the campaign. The advertising departments of the newspapers solicited a cooperative page among the merchants for advance publicity and during the week encouraged all merchants to use increased space and play up the "Free Movie Ticket" angle. Huge banners were provided and displayed in the windows of every store advising shoppers that "we are giving free movie tickets with all purchases this week," and several of the larger stores executed special window displays using posters and stills from the theatre offerings of the week as a background for the display of their merchandise.

Efirds', a chain department store and the largest in the city, not being a member of the Merchants' Association could not get in on the agreement. After repeated attempts to horn in, they finally bought regularly numbered tickets at the different theatres and came out with page advertisements and thousands of hand bills announcing that they, too, while "belonging to no entangling alliances," were prepared to meet any offer made by any other merchant in Wilmington and would give free tickets with all cash purchases in the same ratio as other stores. When it is taken into consideration that this store was compelled to pay face value for their tickets, the appeal of the proposition can be more readily seen when worked on a discount basis.

As an aid to promoting good-will and serving to wake up business during a dull season, the campaign was highly successful, the merchants reporting many evidences of the appreciation of their customers and congratulations upon evolving such a unique campaign, the association, of course, being allowed to take the credit for inaugurating the idea.

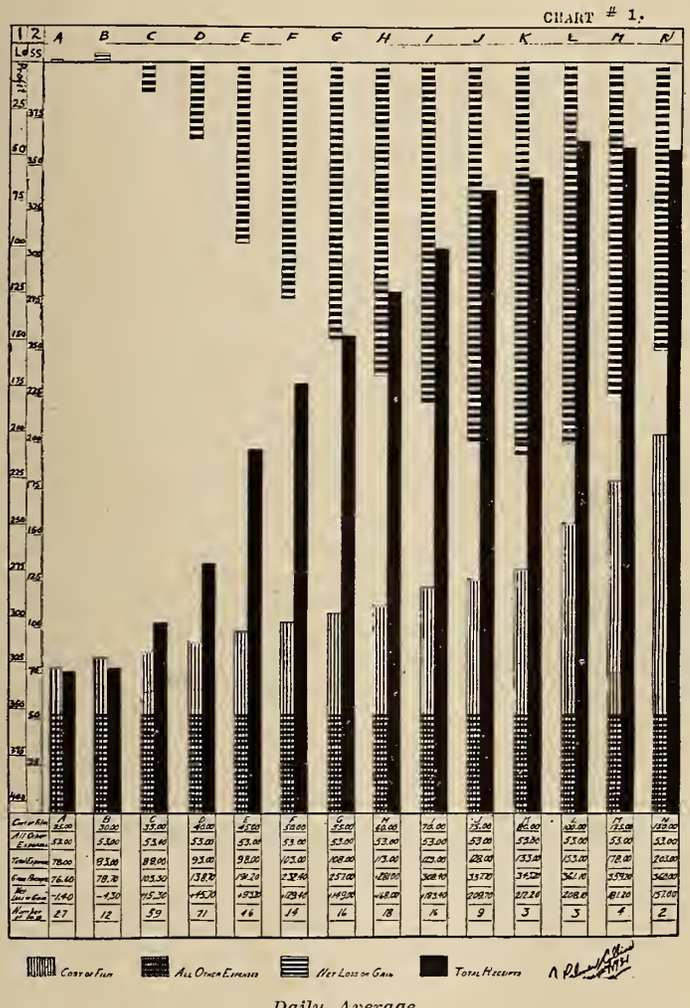
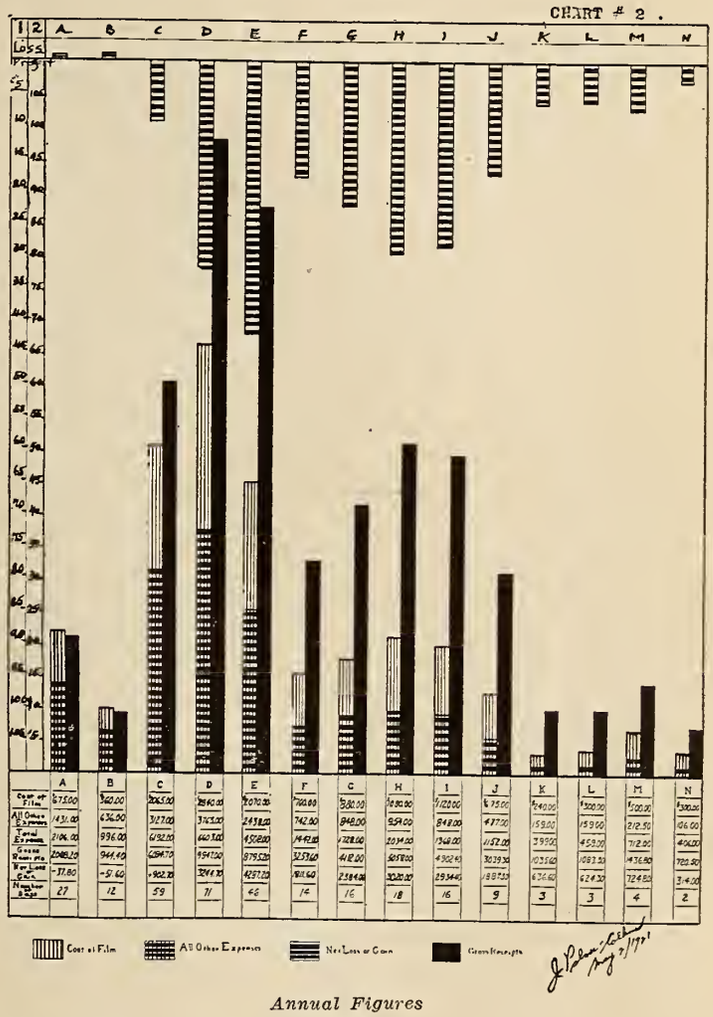
What Collins' Charts Show

The Story of Theatre Operation Told in Charts and Figures Based Upon Actual Conditions—Analysis of Film Cost and All Other Expenses in Relation to Net Loss or Gain



Daily Average



Annual Figures

THEATRE RECEIPTS, EXPENSES AND PROFITS

Note: Columns 1 on both charts should be read down; columns 2 should be read up. On chart 2 columns 1 and 2 are in hundreds.

WE have, at last, some figures and charts to tell the story of theatre operation, thanks to the work of J. Palmer Collins, son of John Collins, veteran New Jersey exhibitor. The charts shown herewith are based upon actual conditions in a real theatre and were prepared as part of a graduating thesis by young Collins, who, during his college course, participated in active management of his father's four houses.

The charts are concerned with the receipts, expenses and profits of a theatre and tell their own story clearly.

For the purpose of establishing the statement that an exhibitor might rather pay a rental which would equal 50 per cent of his gross receipts for a picture which has a tremendous drawing power rather than to pay a rental of only 20 per cent of his gross receipts for a picture that will hardly fill his house, I have constructed the charts attached showing figures for one of a chain of four houses," says Collins. The figures are for 300 days preceding April 1 of a given year.

The receipts for each day were listed along with the price paid for film rental that day and an arithmetic mean was established as indicated. The earning of this theatre could be materially increased if the total number of days devoted to pictures in classes A and B were used for production of classes F and G and perhaps a few less days devoted to class C productions and pictures of the classes F and G used in their places would also show larger earnings. These two classes, F and G, seem to be the ones which would make the largest profits and have not been used sufficiently. This method of analyzing film costs can readily be used for any theatre and throws light upon the subject in a way that mere figures could never do.

The classes of pictures are represented by their cost and the only part of the analysis that would vary would be the figures, the principle holds good for all. A comparison of charts for two or three succeeding years would reveal very interesting facts in most cases. In this particular case facts were brought out which were a surprise to the management.

The pictures have been divided into 14 classes according to the cost of rental as follows:

Class A	.....	$25 or under
Class B	.....	$26 to $30
Class C	.....	$31 to $35
Class D	.....	$36 to $40
Class E	.....	$41 to $45
Class F	.....	$46 to $50
Class G	.....	$51 to $55
Class H	.....	$56 to $60
Class I	.....	$61 to $70
Class J	.....	$71 to $75
Class K	.....	$76 to $80
Class L	.....	$81 to $100
Class M	.....	$101 to $125
Class N	.....	$126 to $150

All pictures rented for the period were grouped according to this classification. The expenses were pro rated over the period and an average of $53 per day included all expense other than cost of film,

A Gold Mine—Of Facts

If a man who had ten years' experience in motion picture exhibition, who enjoyed your fullest confidence, came along and told you that the higher rental you pay for pictures the greater would be your profits, you'd probably call him Bolsheviki and break up a friendship of long standing.

This week we introduce a young man, J. Palmer Collins, who has shared the experience of his father, John Collins, pioneer exhibitor of New Jersey, and has prepared an interesting paper on the financial aspect of theatre operation.

He tells you with facts and figures in this issue that high priced rentals turn over the most profits when those high priced pictures have drawing power.

Of course we all look, frequently in vain, for that elusive thing called drawing power, but we don't all know at just what point the gap between good profits and good pictures is bridged.

There is a shout for lower rentals and good pictures all along the line. In view of this the Collins article is well worth your time.

Another article from Mr. Collins will appear in an early issue. It concerns the dollars and cents problems and lets you in on inside figures that disclose some meaty facts about overhead and pitfalls exhibitors encounter.

The article will repay you a hundredfold for the reading.

both operating expense and fixed charges. As already stated the expenses are fairly constant throughout the year and do not vary with the price paid for pictures with the possible exception of advertising, and this item is affected only in the case of the last three or four classes of "super-specials" and the additional cost has been added in the cost of the film.

Chart 1. This chart is made up on a daily basis. The annual expenses have been averaged for a day as have the gross receipts. The number of days which were devoted to pictures of each class during the year is given in the data at the bottom of the chart. It is assumed for this work that the additional cost of a film is directly due to its additional drawing power. The figures have only a relative value. For a house twice the size of the one taken for this example it may be assumed that the film costs would be twice as great and gross receipts should be proportionately larger.

Pictures in Classes A and B when charged with their proportion of the total expense show a net loss of a few dollars. Class B charging a greater loss than class A. In class C the gross receipts advance more rapidly than does the cost and this is the first class to show a net profit, a daily average of fifteen dollars and thirty cents ($15.30) for fifty-nine days. With each succeeding class the receipts continue to advance much faster than the expenses, up to class K, at which point they begin to decline. This is clearly the point at which the law of diminishing returns starts to operate. In this instance $360 seems to be the maximum limit of receipts and additional amounts invested in better films will not increase this amount so that the last three classes LMN show a smaller daily average net profit than does Class K.

It will be noticed, however, that more than half of the days in the year have been devoted to the exhibition of pictures in one of the three classes C, D or E and that only twelve days have been devoted to the four classes K, L, M and N. This is because these last classes furnish exceptionally good feature pictures and play to capacity houses. This condition could not be continued indefinitely. Pictures of this type can be run at such a profit only occasionally.

Chart II deals with the costs and receipts on a yearly basis. The figures are the product of the figures in Chart I and the number of days devoted to each class.

Chart II—Classes A and B show a net loss of $89.00 for the thirty-nine days of the year. Class C is the first class to show a profit and for fifty-nine days this amounts to nine hundred and two dollars and seventy cents ($902.70). Classes D and E both show large total profits, class E showing the largest of any of the classes in spite of the fact that pictures of this class were shown only forty-nine days. The totals of classes F and G are much smaller but this is due to the fact that pictures of these classes were shown only fourteen and sixteen days, respectively. The classes from J to N are probably as large as it is practicable to make them, as it is very easy to run too many of these very expensive productions.

Children's Theatre in Censor's Town

Novel Idea to Be Tried Out Under Eyes of Head of New York Motion Picture Commission

The city of Watertown, N. Y., with a population of 30,000, is to have the only theatre owned and operated by a commercial theatrical company as a playhouse exclusively for children. It is the Strand Theatre in that city, owned by the Nova Operating Company, strictly a children's motion picture theatre.

Watertown is the home of George H. Cobb, chairman of the New York State Motion Picture Commission. In his annual report to the New York State Legislature last January Mr. Cobb expressed himself as in favor of children's theatres, declaring that it was the logical step in presenting screen subjects to children.

At the coming theatre only children are to be admitted, except such grown persons as may attend as parents or guardians. Every program shown will be made up entirely of features which appeal to children. These programs will include children's stories, comedies, educational and scenic reels, as well as novelty pictures having an educational basis.

All programs are to be selected by the management of the house in cooperation with various agencies of the city which have the welfare of the children at heart, these including the orphanages as well as parent-teacher associations. All programs are to be shown to these agencies for approval a full week in advance of their showing to children.

The house will shortly be closed for the installation of a modern fan and ventilating system, in order that the health of the children may be safeguarded in every possible way. The exact capacity of the house will be allowed admission, another move on the part of the management toward averting any danger from overcrowding.

All performances are to be regulated to the end that the children may return to their homes at an early hour in the evening. It is probable that afternoon shows will be held shortly after the closing hour of the schools.

On Saturday mornings there are to be free shows for the poorer children of the city. Tickets to such performances will be distributed each week by the orphanages, parent-teacher association and the Salvation Army.

The musical programs will be such as to appeal to the children. The price of admission will be 10 cents. It is intended also to see that all children attending are cleanly dressed, as a further precaution for the welfare of the entire audience.

Kansas M. P. T. O. A. Will Appoint Business Manager

A meeting of the Executive Board of the M. P. T. O. of Kansas has been called for August 21. It is probable that a business manager will be nominated as two candidates recently nominated were forced to decline the position, due to the pressure of outside business. James Foland, former manager of the Associated Exhibitors' Kansas City branch and former secretary of the Kansas organization, is a favorite for the nomination at the meeting and he has signified his desire to accept the position, should he be nominated.

Making Money in a City of 300,000

"Don't Be Afraid of Competition—Be Original and Create Ideas" Is Keynote of Message from Successful Exhibitor—The Building of Prestige

By RALPH LIEBER,
Manager Circle Theatre, Indianapolis

[EDITOR'S NOTE.—This is the third of a series of articles by winners of First National's Advertising Contest, on the subject of making money in a city of the size of that in which they maintain their houses. These winners, known as "Dollar-A-Week Men," were selected by a committee of trade paper editors. Each of them has made a success of his house. EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW is presenting the articles exclusively.]

THERE are many things that come into one's head as he thinks over the theme on which I am writing, and it is mighty hard to pick out some one of those things for a start, but it seems to me that along the line of box offices that have been closed this summer there must have been some one dominant cause. On the other hand, there must be something convincing and self-evident in the operation of the theatres that have stayed open and managed to pay.

Enthusiasm covers a vast sea of things that might otherwise go wrong in the theatre world. We have to have enthusiasm, not just the skin-deep kind, but that kind of enthusiasm that goes way through, the kind that makes something inside us fairly burst when everything is going smoothly along the paved road,—and on the other hand, when things aren't so good, makes us have some of the good old-style optimism.

We can't sell our public until we have sold ourselves, remember that. We know as well as anyone whether a picture has an appeal or not, whether it is up to our standard and will support our type of show. If we are enthusiastic about it, all is well and good, it will pull because it is up to our theatre's standard. If just a few times we can get the public to realize that we are putting on good shows, and thereafter keep them convinced of it, then we are set; that is, we are set unless we let that standard fall. Our theatre is right, our picture is right, and our support is right, in fact, our entire program is right. Optimism is unnecessary. All we need is enthusiasm. Our show is good, we know its good, and our public must know its good.

Good pictures cannot be talked of too much. That is what brings people to the movies. The feature picture is the essence of our show. It may be that some times it needs help, but the feature still remains the thing that will draw. We keep our features as near a standard as we can, not going big one week and then flivvering the next, but making every week as strong as possible.

We must balance our programs, even them up, using good short subjects, and our patrons will stay after the feature is over. This means that we do not merely select a big picture and because of that big picture let the rest of the program ride along as it will, but we use great care in the selection of subsidiary films, so there will never be a dull moment during our show. It is within the theatre manager's power to make the patrons laugh until their sides ache, or send them home with handkerchiefs that are wringing wet. It is said that the public is hard to please, that you never can tell what the public wants, but I have always found that they want good shows, whether happy or sad ones, and we have always believed it wise to balance our programs.

Our orchestra helps out immensely—it is the voice of the silent drama. Our policy is to maintain a large orchestra and to let the public know that we have it. The person who says the public doesn't like good music is wrong. True enough, they won't sit and listen to it all night but they do like it. If they didn't the classics would die to-night or only live three or four months, as the popular song does. If you cannot have a big orchestra have a good one. There is nothing more disagreeable than poor music. We intersperse our classical selections with a little popular music and a little life, and have found that our patrons are constantly speaking of our orchestra and its selections. One thing is certain, however, a good orchestra alone will not pay expenses. There is no doubt that music helps people enjoy a picture, but if they do not like the picture ten orchestras would now draw the crowd.

Occasionally, we use stage presentations, and find that they add to our programs. I do not believe they are essential and they do not make any great difference in our box office receipts, but perhaps they pay in another way.

When we have finished planning a program it consists of a good feature picture, a novelty reel of some kind, or an unusual scenic with special musical accompaniment, a carefully edited news reel, and the program is complete with music.

Exploitation may be misconstrued by many, for it means a variety of arts. Exploitation is advertising, it is publicity, it is co-operation, the co-operation of the newspapers, the stores, and the public, but essentially it is advertising. Advertising can be too easily wasted. At the Circle we take the greatest of care in the preparation of copy for the newspapers, using the best art that can be obtained, and making by that art the first impression that in the Circle Theatre there is something more than just a movie.

Posters, signboards and street car cards are all good secondary mediums.

Publicity is a bit farther along the road of exploitation, and cannot be overlooked. We "grab" all the news space we can by "stunts." When a tie-up possibility presents itself we use it.

First of all, we watch our advertising, appropriating all we feel that the picture needs to put it over, and applying that appropriation where it will be the most effective. Some pictures need more work than others. For instance, a Chaplin picture does not need the treatment that a picture such as John M. Stahl's One Clear Call does. Both are excellent productions, but one pulls by being a picture with a popular star, and the other needs to be sold to the patron.

And now we come to the vital point, expenses. They must be kept within reason. Perhaps anyone could spend a lot of money and get business, but to make money expenses must be less than receipts. We have found that this year as never before we have had to curb our expenses. In times like these it is necessary to spend less and obtain greater results. True, we are not making a lot of money, but we are open and making a profit, and when fall comes we will still be open and have the crowds coming. Economy enters into the most elaborate of programs.

Be original, create ideas. Don't be afraid of competition for competition is the life of trade. Competition is often given too serious thought. Don't swamp it, encourage it; giving less thought to our competitors gives us more time for ourselves. There are enough pictures for all and enough patrons for all. We have found that by persistent and concentrated effort we have established prestige, and therefore in boosting our own shows feel that we are co-operating and assisting the producer in giving better productions for the public.

Reformers Busy in Missouri

Fleming, Paid Lobbyist, Launches Another Attack Against Screen, This Time in Kansas City—Denounced by Member of Bill of Rights Committee

FROM St. Louis the reform campaign against the screen has extended to Kansas City and in most cases is being welcomed like a food famine in Russia. The attack, headed by Dr. William S. Fleming, a paid lobbyist and manager of the Mississippi Valley district of the National Reform Association, is being launched in the direction of the anti-censorship proposal before the Missouri constitutional convention at Jefferson City.

Characterizing the screen as "America's greatest school of crime," Dr. Fleming launched his campaign last week. Dishonesty on the part of those who are presenting the anti-censorship proposal at Jefferson was insinuated by the reformer, who charged that the industry "was willing to use means to get that measure put over at Jefferson City, but you had some men that couldn't be bought."

The success of the proposal is somewhat doubtful at present, but the measure has not yet been killed, as it was stated by the reformer and published in Kansas City newspapers, which quoted Dr. Fleming. The committee on Bill of Rights has not yet made its report on the measure, but the committee has passed over Section 14 of Article 2, which deals with the question, and in so doing voted adversely to the proposal.

Judge H. E. Benton, chairman of the committee, has announced that if the committee was willing he would allow the proposal to come out on the floor of the convention without an adverse report and thus enable delegates to move the adoption of the proposal without the handicap of the apparent disapproval of the committee. Judge Benton has been informed by delegates favorable to the measure that the subject is of such vast importance that it is entitled to be considered upon the floor of the convention. If this were done, even though defeated, these delegates have announced that they will have no complaint to make.

Paul S. Conwell, member of the committee of Bill of Rights, rose to a question of personal privilege on the floor of the convention last week and in severe language denounced the activities of Dr. Fleming, and stated that Dr. Fleming was called before the Bill of Rights Committee where he admitted that he was a paid lobbyist and a reformer. Mr. Conwell called attention to the fact that Dr. Fleming was then present upon the floor of the convention. From outward appearances, Mr. Conwell's address met with the unanimous approval of the delegates to the convention.

The following article, published in the Kansas City Star, lends an idea as to the type of the vicious bunk propaganda being spread by the reformers:

"In a speech last night at the Baptist tabernacle, Linwood boulevard and Park avenue, Dr. William S. Fleming, manager of the Mississippi Valley district of the National Reform Association, said the motion pictures of to-day were 'America's greatest school of crime.' He urged that a fight be made by the citizens of Missouri to keep the Bible from being eliminated from the public schools.

"Mr. Fleming told of the attempt of the motion picture industry to obtain legislative measures exempting the pictures from public control. He declared the industry endeavored to have such a measure passed in the constitutional convention. He said the Bill of Rights Committee, however, voted unanimously against the proposal.

"The motion pictures exert a greater influence to-day than the schools, the home and the churches combined," he said. "Corrupt pictures are more damaging to the morals of the country than the saloons ever were. The damage is most appalling."

Fighting Parson Defends Picture Stars

Rev. Christian F. Reisner, of New York, Intends Having Them Speak from Pulpit

A REGULAR "fighting parson" is the Rev. Christian F. Reisner of the Chelsea Methodist Episcopal Church, one of the largest in New York City. He has astounded his brother pastors by inviting motion picture producers and actors to speak from his pulpit.

"Yes, I have been criticized for this," says Mr. Reisner, "but I want my people to get in closer touch with those who furnish their entertainment. I have no patience with those people who are decrying and denouncing persons connected with motion pictures. The church can work in harmony with motion pictures and should use them to greater advantage.

"I number many motion picture people among my acquaintance; I have the highest admiration for D. W. Griffith, and I am proud to say that Richard Barthelmess is one of my dearest friends.

'It is so easy to say thoughtless things about the people in the motion picture industry. I recall one night I was standing outside of a theatre after having seen a picture in which a young woman whom I knew personally had appeared. I spoke about the young woman's work and one young fellow spoke so contemptibly of her that I turned on him and said:

" 'Here young man, you take back what you said or I will make you eat your words.' "

"Well, what happened?" the reverend gentleman was asked.

Dr. Reisner smiled as he recollected the incident, and with a little laugh, answered:

"Why, he admitted that he knew nothing about the young woman and made the remark because of her calling."

"The trouble with the people is that the motion picture actors are too far away from them and are not understood," he said. "I have spent much time in and about the studios. It was while Mr. Barthelmess was with Griffith that I met him and I was impressed by the seriousness with which he regarded his calling and it required no effort on my part to believe that here was a young man who lived clean, thought clean, not because he was afraid that the merciless lens of the camera would portray any deficiency, but because he believed in cleanliness as an unalterable law of nature.

"When I return from Europe in the fall, I intend as often as I can to have motion picture actors speak from my pulpit. The first one will be Mr. Barthelmess."

N. Y. Operators Vote Strike Sept. 1

Action Taken by Local No. 306 Is Latest Development in Wage Scale Controversy

MOVING Picture Machine Operators Local 306, at a meeting held August 2, at 57 St. Mark's Place, New York City, unanimously voted to go on strike September 1, which date marks the expiration of their contract with the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, comprising 700 theatres in the metropolitan district.

On August 1, the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce sent out telegrams to its membership, reading as follows:

"You are hereby advised that the Board of Directors and the Operators' Committee have terminated negotiations with representatives of Local 306, failing in mutual understanding between them. Notice is hereby given releasing you from the pledge which bound you not to negotiate for the services of an operator with any individual or union pending negotiations with 306. You are free to act from this day. The Chamber of Commerce has pledged itself to protect to the fullest extent you, your house and anyone you will employ other than 306 men."

A statement from the union said:

"In statements appearing in the daily press, theatre owners have claimed that operators have asked a 10 per cent advance in wages but this is untrue. The fact is that the operators have not yet presented a wage scale to the employers and the present strike order resulted from information which reached union officials to the effect that a telegram had been sent by the theatre owners' organization to its members, informing them that all wage scale negotiations with the operators were at an end. This action was taken without previously informing union officials.

"At the Wednesday meeting of the operators a resolution was passed increasing the salary of President Samuel Kaplan to $6,000. It was stated that Kaplan's personal business, that of motion picture equipment dealer, had suffered recently because of his union activity. The salary raise was voted him to compensate for his losses.

"If as the theatre owners are reported as stating, they have not asked for a 10 per cent reduction, then union officials do not know what the fuss is all about. The employers' wage scale committee has repeatedly met with the operators' wage scale committee and on each occasion the operators were asked to accept a 10 per cent cut. Further, theatre owners are quoted as saying 'the impending strike will not affect the large Broadway houses, but merely the small neighborhood houses.' Exactly the reverse is true. Projection machines in all the Broadway houses are manned by men of Local 306.

"Books of Local 306 have been thrown open, which means that any licensed moving picture machine operator of Greater New York will be welcomed to the organization."

The board of directors of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce held a long meeting on the afternoon of August 3. At its conclusion an officer of the organization said a formal statement would be issued on the following afternoon. He said the meeting had been devoted to a discussion of the situation precipitated by the notice of strike issued by the operators.

Rhode Declines to Run Again

Will Not Be Candidate for President of Wisconsin M. P. T. O., Despite Pressure, It Is Declared

JOSEPH G. RHODE of Kenosha, will not be a candidate to succeed himself as President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Wisconsin, at the state convention, August 15-16, according to information received by EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW this week.

It is declared that, despite the pressure brought to bear upon Mr. Rhode to continue his administration, he has positively declined to run for a third term. At the last Board of Directors' meeting in Milwaukee, June 14, sentiment, it is declared, was strong for Mr. Rhode's continuance in the office of President.

"It is with extreme pride and satisfaction that the Board of Directors as well as the members in general look upon the accomplishments of the Association under his capable leadership," said a prominent member. "It has been a great disappointment to the Board and to a great majority of the membership that Mr. Rhode positively refuses to become a candidate for a third term.

"When urged for an expression about his refusal, he replied that his other interests demanded more of his time and attention than hereto fore and that he could not in justice continue as the head of the M. P. T. O. of Wisconsin."

This leaves the field open and there is much speculation among the membership as to the next president of the Wisconsin state organization. Several rumors are afloat as to Mr. Rhode's probable successor, but nothing definite has been learned.

Black Theatres Being Sold to Exhibitors

Black New England Theatres, Inc., announced this week the sale of the following theatres:

Princess Theatre, Brattleboro, Vt., to M. S. Cronin.

Star Theatre, Waldoboro, Me., to I. Rokes.

Lincoln Hall, Damariscotta, Me., to Otis Paige, originally one of the owners of that house.

This is in accordance, says the announcement, with the policy of co-operation with exhibitors throughout New England wherever it is possible.

Agreement Near in Kansas City on Operators' Wage

The controversy between the Kansas City Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce and the operators' union, relative to wage scales, appears to be drawing to a close. The operators, who, at first demanded an increase to $1.25 an hour in suburban houses, now have reduced their demands to $1.15, which is the 1921 scale. The scale in downtown houses is $1.35 an hour. Kansas City exhibitors do not favor the adoption of the 1921 wage scale, but it is conceded that settlement is much nearer.

The exhibitors, at a meeting with the operators next week, will demand that a clause be inserted in the contract, stating that each year in the future, contracts for the following year be submitted to the exhibitors sixty days prior to the expiration of the time limit and that the exhibitors be allowed thirty days in which to consider the contract, either to reject or approve it.

Northern N. Y. League Holds Enthusiastic Meeting

A largely attended and enthusiastic meeting of the Northern New York Exhibitors League, a unit of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York State, Inc., was held recently at Potsdam, N. Y. President V. A. Warren, of Massena, was in the chair.

Discussion was held regarding local film troubles and steps were taken to remedy them and to put into force a closer working agreement among the members.

A drive is in progress during the summer to gain the membership of every exhibitor in the territory for the unit and the state organization. Encouraging reports as to the success of the drive were made at the meeting.

The News of the Week

New Price List of Accessories

Exhibitors, Queried by First National, Give Preferences as to Styles of Posters and Lobby Cards They Desire

With elaborate productions promised during the forthcoming season, with the popularity of exploitation increasing, one of the problems now confronting exhibitors is just what will be of the most value in the poster and lobby display line during 1922-23.

Associated First National announces it has been in touch for several weeks with exhibitors in the United States and Canada and has obtained from them data on which it is basing its new output of accessories.

"Having made a nation-wide survey of the accessory problem, First National proceeded to improve its methods of buying and handling accessories so as to minimize the element of chance in the handling of them," says the announcement.

"In its survey, First National sent questionnaires to hundreds of exhibitors asking them to give their ideas as to the number of designs for one and three-sheet posters, the styles of lobby displays they favored, and their views on accessories in general. The survey brought out these facts:

"Number of exhibitors favoring one design one and three-sheet, 640.

"Number favoring two styles of one-sheet, 312.

"Number favoring less expensive, uncolored 11 x 14 lobby display, 424.

"Number favoring more expensive lobby display cards, 84.

"Number favoring 22 x 28 colored lobby displays, 600.

"Number favoring uncolored lobby displays, 84.

"Number favoring 24-sheets on all subjects, 168.

"Number favoring 24-sheets on big subjects only, 536.

"In accordance with the verdict of the exhibitors First National will hereafter supply accessories as follows:

"One design one and three-sheet posters on average releases.

"Six sheets on all releases.

"Two design one and three-sheet posters on exceptional releases.

"Uncolored 11 x 14 lobby displays on average releases.

"Colored 11 x 14 lobby displays of the highest artistic merit on exceptional releases.

"Colored 22 x 28 lobby cards on all releases.

"Twenty-four sheets on exceptional releases.

"Special novelty accessories on exceptional releases.

"We believe we now have our accessory business established upon as sound and efficient lines as possible, all conditions considered," says First National in a letter to exhibitors setting forth the results of its survey. "On going over the new price list you will note that there is no reduction in the price of a single one-sheet or three-sheet, but that six-sheets are now 75 cents instead of 15 cents per sheet, or 90 cents.

"This is because it costs as much proportionately to handle a single one or three-sheet as it does a six-sheet, or a couple of one, two or three-sheets. Exhibitors who want to post a quantity of paper will note substantial reductions, increasing with the quantity purchased on any one picture.

"For instance, ten one-sheets advertising The Masquerader will cost you 11 cents each, or $1.10, but if you buy ten one-sheets on ten different pictures the price will be 15 cents each, or $1.50. The same principle holds good on quality purchases of all accessories on any given release.

"The purpose of these reduced quantity prices is to stimulate the advertising of First National pictures and thus increase the quantities of accessories used which, we believe, will benefit all exhibitors, and we hope, will bring about reduced manufacturing costs. It must be recognized that the first-run exhibitor who puts out 100 one-sheets or a quantity of 24-sheets, is also advertising the picture for the theatres in the same town which run the picture after him. Accordingly, we believe the first-run account which spends money on quantities of accessories is entitled to a lower rate because of the service rendered theatres which follow him.

"First National does not seek a profit on advertising accessories. We figure that the more accessories the exhibitor uses the better chance our pictures have of making money for him. We're all dependent upon each other and our success depends entirely upon the box office—and that success depends greatly upon exploitation.

"Advertising accessories are the staple and recognized media for reaching the average theatre's patrons. Every distributor wants to make advertising accessories easy to buy. It would be the most short-sighted policy conceivable to attempt to make a few pennies profit on the very articles which help to make profit.

It should be recognized that advertising accessories have to be paid for one way or another. If the exhibitor buys them at less than manufacturing cost, plus cost of handling, then he may rest assured that the difference will be added to his film rental."

Reports Marked Improvement in Business Conditions

Paul D. Mooney, general manager for Louis B. Mayer Productions, Inc., which releases through First National, has just completed a trip to seven large key cities in the interests of "One Clear Call." During his trip he conferred with First National exchange managers, and also interviewed bankers and business men regarding the industrial outlook for the fall and winter. Asked as to the results of his tour, Mr. Mooney said:

"Bigger sales and practically all the wholesale and retail business point to a steady and marked improvement in the industrial situation throughout the Middle West. Not alone is the improvement a marked one, but it is steady and gives every indication of being based on sound and solid foundation."

Werner Says Only Few Theatres Are Closed This Summer

H. J. Werner, president of the American Photo Player Company, builders of the Robert-Morton organ, recently arrived in New York headquarters, after a coast to coast inspection of the company's dealers and branch offices.

Relative to motion picture conditions, Mr. Werner stated: "Although I traveled through the country at an unseasonable time from the point of view of the exhibitor, I found that the number of theatres closed for the summer period was fewer than in the preceding two years. My itinerary was intensive and covered a large territory. I purposely traveled through the smaller towns to get the average exhibitor's point of view.

"I was particularly impressed and gratified with the amount of interest exhibitors are taking and appreciation that audiences are showing in the value of music. What the newspaper and popular magazine has done in a literary manner for the village, the motion picture has accomplished in the furnishing of popular and semi-classic music to the untrained ear of the average audience.

"From results attained in the recent St. Louis musicians' strike, the fact is really established that the value of tone to the proper picture presentation is as necessary as that of a shadow. Good pictures demand good music and now that harmony prevails between the various musician unions and exhibitors associations we sincerely trust that a proper understanding will be consummated for the future."

Mr. Werner spoke enthusiastically about the new Fotoplayer Pit Pipe Organ. This is really a combination of Fotoplayer and organ, using the regulation console and attaining the volume and variety of tone combinations necessary for a house with a capacity up to 1000.

When King Baggot finished directing "Human Hearts" at Universal City, he couldn't resist the temptation to line up the company for a family group. This feature had its premier showing at the Central Theatre, New York City, this week

Premieres for "In Name of Law"

F. B. O. Police Drama Opens at Broadway Strand, Detroit and Mission, Los Angeles

"I never believed anything could best the terrific Detroit summer weather plus the usual summer outdoor competition, but my opening with In the Name of the Law has made me change my mind. I thank you for this unusual attraction. Regards."

Such was the wire received at the Film Booking Offices home office from Phil Gleichman, who opened the Emory Johnson police drama at the Broadway Strand, Detroit, July 30.

"The F. B. O. police drama was welcomed by Detroit in the same big way that it was greeted in New York," says the announcement. "Aided by an exploitation campaign under the direction of Al Boasberg, home office exploitation expert, who was dispatched to Detroit, In the Name of the Law overcame a week of hot weather and filled the Broadway Strand with as large crowds as it has seen this summer.

"The second big booking to follow the George M. Cohan run of the picture in New York was the Mission Theatre, Los Angeles. A crowd packed the streets for four blocks as a police band of fifty pieces swung down Broadway to the theatre. A banner, bearing the title of the picture, stretched from curb to curb, while a battery of portable Sunlight arcs turned night into day and a motion picture camera ground away, making a panorama of the spectacle. This parade proved to be one of the best exploitation drawing cards ever staged in Los Angeles.

"For the first time in its history the playhouse departed from its custom and permitted a lobby display. In the foyer was a ten-foot photo enlargement of Ralph Lewis as Officer O'Hara and two framed enlargements of the official endorsement given the production by Mayor Cryer of Los Angeles and Chief of Police Oaks. The entire cast, Emory Johnson and the author, Mrs. Emilie Johnson, were spotlighted for introduction to the audience. Ralph Lewis made a speech before the showing.

"One of the most interested spectators was P. A. Powers, president of the Film Booking Offices of America, who is now in Los Angeles on his quarterly tour of inspection. Mr. Powers, together with Mr. Johnson and Chief Oaks, were the honored guests at the showing. A movie close-up of Chief Oaks, obtained through the efforts of the R-C Studio publicity department, introduced the picture."

Help Small Theatre, Lichtman Urges Advertising Men

Al Lichtman was the guest of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers at their weekly luncheon July 27. The president of the Al Lichtman Corporation was accompanied by his partner, J. G. Bachmann, treasurer of the company. Harry Reichenbach, just home from a long stay on the other side of the water, came in late and was given a hearty greeting by his fellow members.

Following the address of Mr. Lichtman, President Yearsley called upon Mr. Reichenbach for a short talk, saying that at the luncheon on Aug. 10 the members would expect from the returned traveler a "regular talk" on what he had noted during his stay abroad.

Mr. Lichtman made a special plea for consideration for the exhibitor in the smaller communities. He declared the advertising men could do a real service in concentrating their attention upon means and devices for merchandising the pictures in the small towns.

"If the men who are in charge of advertising and publicity would take definite steps to get acquainted with the methods of operation in the small towns and study how to help the exhibitors in these places sell their pictures to the public, I think you could increase the attendance of these theatres tremendously and be the biggest possible aid to the exhibitor. You are the only merchants in the business and you must help the exhibitor," said Mr. Lichtman.

MacManus Returns With Feature Made in Porto Rico

Edward A. MacManus returned to New York from Porto Rico this week, bringing the film of the first of the four features which he has contracted to make for Associated Exhibitors. May Allison and Robert Ellis, who play the leading roles in this picture, also arrived, and all were enthusiastic over the results of the first serious production work ever attempted exclusively on the tropical island.

This feature, known at present as The Woman Who Fooled Herself, is from a script by Charles A. Logue, who, with Mr. Ellis, directed the production. In the supporting cast are Frank Currier, Louis Dean and Frederick Schabel.

Some of the outstanding scenes show a night carnival in the quaint old streets of San Juan, a carnival which was created and staged especially for the photoplay. The event attracted about 25,000 fun-loving residents who turned what was intended to be make-believe into a genuine celebration. E. Mont Reily, Governor of Porto Rico, and a group of other American officials, who at first were interested onlookers, were pressed into service as active participants.

Mr. MacManus will spend a week or two in conference with Arthur S. Kane, president of Associated Exhibitors, respecting the future productions for that company, and will then return to Porto Rico.

Eve Unsell to Be Scenario Chief for Preferred Pictures

Eve Unsell, one of the screen's ablest and best known writers, has been engaged by B. P. Schulberg as editor of his Preferred Pictures. Miss Unsell has just completed a year's work as head of the Robertson-Cole scenario department.

Eight years ago Eve Unsell was a play reader and play constructionist with Mrs. H. C. DeMille, mother of Cecil and William DeMille, and at that time one of the most successful of New York play-brokers. She attracted the attention of B. P. Schulberg, then with Famous Players, and she was engaged to write her own stories for screen production. Miss Unsell later became scenario editor of Famous Players.

"4 New Paramount Films Will Make History"—Kent

"Manslaughter, Blood and Sand, The Old Homestead and Burning Sands are four of the biggest pictures we have ever put out. In all our history we have never had four pictures like these ready at one time, and I doubt if we ever have again. They will make new motion picture history."

These statements were embodied in a telegram Adolph Zukor received last week from Sidney R. Kent, who has been at the Lasky studio for nearly two weeks conferring with the Paramount production executives on releasing plans for the coming season's product.

Will Dance for Cosmopolitan

Ruth St. Denis will appear in motion pictures with the Cosmopolitan Film Company when she returns from her European tour. Before leaving Los Angeles, the dancer expressed her willingness to perform some special Oriental dances before Sol Polito's camera.

All-Star Casts in Public Demand, Declares Sloman

Director Edward Sloman declared this week that the selection of an all-star cast for his first personally produced picture was in accordance with the present demands of exhibitors and the picture public.

Before production started on Blind Justice, his initial subject, Director Sloman believed that the all-star film was in greater demand than the picture with a single star; and to strengthen this belief he sent out more than 200 letters to exhibitors in various parts of the country. The letters were in the form of a questionnaire and sought information regarding the present popularity of the single star and the all-star film.

What type of picture is to-day considered of the greatest box-office value? This was the question in Mr. Sloman's letter.

The replies convinced him that the all-star film, with a well exploited cast, is of greater appeal to the public to-day than the picture with a single star.

Bryant to Announce Releasing Plan for "Salome" in Month

Definite announcement of the distributing medium of Nazimova's Salome will be made by Charles Bryant, director of the picture, the star's husband and business manager, within a month.

This was the only statement Mr. Bryant would make regarding the photoplay before leaving New York for Hollywood and conference with Nazimova.

Mr. Bryant's work will be largely coming to a decision which will enable him to release Salome to its own best advantage, and at the same time deal equally with the many bidders for the opportunity of distributing it, it is stated.

The problem was complicated by consideration of Nazimova's plans to appear in New York during the coming theatrical season in a stage version of Salome. Several proposals had come to Mr. Bryant from controllers of legitimate theatres in New York and elsewhere to place the photoplay in their houses with the same price scale as that which obtains in theatrical productions; and this matter, in connection with the stage appearance of the star will have an important bearing upon Mr. Bryant's choice of a means of releasing.

"The Valley of Silent Men" Ready for Release in September

"The Valley of Silent Men," the new Cosmopolitan production featuring Alma Rubens which was adapted from the story of the same name by James Oliver Curwood, will be shown at the Rialto Theatre, N. Y., September 10th.

The entire cast was transported from New York City into the heart of the Canadian Rockies for the filming of the picture. Frank Borzage directed.

The cast, supporting Miss Rubens, includes Lew Cody, Joe King, Mario Majeroni, George Nash and J. W. Johnston.

The Purple Highway

An Idea, Born in a New York Skyscraper, Comes to Fruition in a Noteworthy Picture

Maybe there is nothing new under the sun, but here is something that sounds like an exception.

The Purple Highway is the outgrowth of an idea conceived in a Wall Street skyscraper. The idea proved to be a sort of magic talisman. It was whispered to persons prominent in the financial district and in the professional life of New York, and they immediately became backers of the idea. With their influence they opened the way for an ambitious motion picture undertaking. Not picture people themselves, they supplied the capital to employ the best skill and the best facilities in the production field.

Their idea was this: That the making of big stories into big pictures with big stars would bring not only substantial financial rewards, but a measure of real satisfaction.

The Purple Highway, now being edited for September showing on Broadway, is the first fruits of this idea.

The men with the idea formed the Kenma Corporation and engaged Madge Kennedy as their star. She had been in a dozen motion pictures which had made money; but the Kenma view of her was that she had never appeared in a picture story which gave opportunity to her full abilities. Miss Kennedy was a noted comedienne; but she was notably an emotional actress as well. No play or book providing a complete vehicle for so versatile a star was to be found in a search of the New York market. One would have to be manufactured.

Dear Me, the John Golden play written by Luther Reed and Hale Hamilton, was purchased on account of the elements which made it a success on the stage. It was Cinderella come to life again. But the play as written was to serve merely as a basis. To Rufus Steele, vice-president of the Kenma Corporation and expert hand, was assigned the task of developing from Dear Me a scenario that would give complete scope to Madge Kennedy's sparkling comedy talents and to Madge Kennedy's abilities in the sphere of serious drama.

The Purple Highway was evolved, and Henry Kolker, who had been called to Rome to make a picture after finishing Disraeli, was secured as the director.

A cast was engaged such as is seen in few pictures or plays. To Miss Kennedy's support were brought such artists as Monte Blue, Pedro de Cordoba, Vincent Coleman and Dore Davidson. The Tilford Cinema Corporation was asked to set a new record for itself in providing the studio sets. Novelties were introduced in both the indoor and outdoor scenes.

The Kenma Corporation has made plain at every step that the integrity of its original idea is to be preserved. No pains, brains or capital have been spared in making the production worthy, in its every detail, of the unique star and the unique story.

Kenma is to present Miss Kennedy in six super pictures which it will take three years to produce. The second is to be Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall.

Obviously, the first picture of this series would have to set the pace, and the Kenma officials volunteer the information that The Purple Highway is an achievement by which they are ready to be judged.

When asked for a specific statement, the company's office gave out the following:

"The Kenma idea, born in a downtown skyscraper, has reached fruition in The Purple Highway, a picture of the highest excellence, which may be expected to win new laurels for a star already known and loved throughout the picture-going world."

Shirley Christie Thrown from Horse and Killed

Los Angeles, Aug. 1.

Shirley, eleven-year-old daughter of Al Christie, died Sunday as the result of being thrown from a horse.

Charles Christie, the uncle of Shirley, was located at Winnipeg on his way to New York, and sent word he would be back in Los Angeles on August 4. The funeral will be held on his arrival.

The entire motion picture colony has joined the personnel of the Christie studio in extending condolences to the bereaved father.

"My Dad" Starts Run at Cohan Theatre, Aug. 6

Following In the Name of the Law, the Emory Johnson police drama which is this week completing a four weeks' run, My Dad, the first Film Booking Offices of America release, starring Johnnie Walker, will occupy the screen of the George M. Cohan Theatre, New York, for an indefinite period beginning Aug. 6.

Johnnie Walker also plays the leading role in In the Name of the Law.

The story of My Dad is one of the Northwest, the entire action being laid in a trading post cut from the rest of the world by the unbroken trails. The picture was directed by Cliff Smith. Walker's leading lady is Ruth Clifford.

Vitagraph President Home from European Trip

A. E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph Company, arrived on the Aquitania, accompanied by Mrs. Smith, known on the screen as Jean Paige. Mr. Smith spent six weeks with the London and Paris branches of Vitagraph, and is enthusiastic over the outlook abroad.

W. S. Smith, general manager of the Vitagraph West Coast studios, has arrived in New York with President Smith. While in New York the coming fall and winter activities will be discussed and tentative plans made.

Burton King Engages Two Stars

Burton King has engaged Dorothy Mackail and Barbara Castleton for two leading parts in The Street of New York.

F. P-L. Eastern Studio Ready for Rush

Big Plant Preparing for Busy Season —Negri and Others to Work There

Paramount's big Long Island City studio will soon assume its old-time activity, according to plans initiated by Jesse L. Lasky while in New York recently and now being worked out in detail by the home office executives of the production department.

After being closed for just a year, the studio was reopened two months ago for the production of Alice Brady's first starring picture for Paramount, "Missing Millions." Joseph Henabery, who directed the picture, brought his entire producing unit from the Coast and will remain here indefinitely. Mr. Henabery, with Albert Shelby LeVino, who wrote the scenario, are now engaged in supervising the editing and titling of the picture.

In a few days Miss Brady will start work in her next picture, "Anna Ascends," from the stage play by Harry Chapman Ford. Victor Fleming has been specially engaged to direct this production.

George Fitzmaurice will soon come on from the Coast to prepare for the production of a special in which Pola Negri will be starred. Miss Negri, whose coming to America was recently announced by Mr. Lasky, will arrive here some time before the first of September, and by that time a detailed announcement as to the authorship and nature of the story will have been made.

Jack Holt, who recently completed "On the High Seas," in which he is featured with Dorothy Dalton, is now enjoying a vacation after a year of almost continuous work at the West Coast studio, will shortly come to New York for the production of part of his next picture, "Making a Man," a Peter B. Kyne special, which Joseph Henabery will direct.

As soon as Thomas Meighan completes "The Man Who Saw To-morrow," which he is now making on the West Coast, he will come East for the production of his second George Ade original story, "Back Home and Broke." Alfred E. Green will also come on from the Coast to direct.

Elsie Ferguson will resume her picture work in the early fall at the Long Island studio. The picture she will make—the first since "Peter Ibbetson" was produced at the same studio more than a year ago —will be "Outcast," a picturization of the stage play. John S. Robertson will direct.

The studio staff, under the management of E. C. King, is now hard at work making preparations for the busy season to come.

Brilliant Opening for "Zenda"

Newest Rex Ingram Picture Given Premiere at Astor Theatre, N. Y., Before Distinguished Audience

The Prisoner of Zenda has come again to Broadway. Anthony Hope's story, so widely read as a novel and later so popular on the stage, has been produced on the screen by Rex Ingram, maker of Ibanez's The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse into pictures. The evening of Monday, July 31, was the time set for the photoplay of The Prisoner of Zenda to begin its indefinite run at the Astor Theatre.

This playhouse was the scene of the long-season success of the earlier Ingram production, The Four Horsemen. And the premiere of The Prisoner of Zenda was as brilliant an event as the initial presentation of Ibanez's story.

Personages of the social, financial and the several artistic worlds of the theatre, writing, painting, and the like, constituted the first-night audience of Mr. Ingram's new picture. The metropolitan newspaper critics accorded high praise to the picture.

An enthusiastic audience saw the opening. Motion pictures were taken in front of the theatre of the stars arriving. Among those who attended were Mae Murray, Theda Bara, Doraldina, Nora Bayes, Mrs. Rodolph Valentino, Grace Darmond, Priscilla Dean, Wallace Beery, Tod Browning, May Allison, Diana Allen, Mary Anderson, Miriam Battista, Rex Beach, Tyler Brooke, Monte Blue, Mrs. Mary Carr, Lew Cody, Peggy Coudray, Dolores Cassinelli, Willie Collier, Jr., Marion Davies, Violet De Baros, Edward Earle, Madge Evans, Pedro De Cordoba, Perle Germonde, Bernard Granville, D. W. Griffith, Hope Hampton, Anna Held, Jr., James Harrison, Arthur Houseman, Zena Keefe, Madge Kennedy, Doris Kenyon, Virginia Lee, Sheldon Lewis, Virginia Pearson, Lenore Masso, Dorothy Mackaill, Alice Maison, Martha Mansfield, Audrey Maple, Marguerite Marsh, Will Morrissey, Tot Qualters, Rubye De Remer, Helen Shipman, Virginia Smith, Coletta Ryan, Kitty Kelly, Bennett Twins, Clarence Nordstrom, Beverly May, Mabel Withee and many others.

"Knighthood" Wins High Praise from Duveen, Art Expert

A tribute to the Cosmopolitan Production, "When Knighthood Was in Flower," starring Marion Davies, was contained in an interview given to Robert Prew in London by Sir Joseph Duveen, art expert.

Mr. Prew is the London correspondent for Universal Service and the cabled interview was published in newspapers throughout the United States. The interview follows:

"It is the most stupendous reproduction of Henry the Eighth court life that has ever been achieved—a marvelous piece of artistry.

"Sir Joseph Duveen recently returned from New York, where he witnessed a private showing of the film and made a careful study of its settings. He was also at the studio when several of the scenes were taken.

"What most amazed me was the sumptuousness of the setting. Hampton Court is the background and the wonderfully great hall is depicted with extraordinary fidelity. Real Gothic tapestries were used for the hangings and there were also ancient suits of armor—remarkable art treasures—employed for stage effects.

"The costumes also were things of rare beauty. It was truly an entrancing pageant of gorgeously attired court ladies of the time of the bluff King Hal.

"The gowns worn by Miss Marion Davies were truly queenly and her acting superb, while Lyn Harding as Henry the Eighth was a living Holbein.

"When Knighthood Was in Flower is worthy of highest tribute as a fine artistic production, not before equalled in my experience."

Mack Sennett Returns to Coast After Gathering New Ideas in New York

Mack Sennett, whose productions are released through First National, has returned to the Coast with a lot of new ideas, garnered while taking observation rambles along Broadway and motoring through the suburbs of New York and New Jersey.

Mr. Sennett had a busy time of it while in New York. He held daily conferences with the officers of First National, discussing pictures for the forthcoming season, and also devoted much time to putting the finishing touches to Suzanna.

Mr. Sennett started work on another big First National-Sennett feature Aug. 1.

Mother of E. E. Shauer, Dead in Eighty-fifth Year

Mrs. Anna Shauer, mother of E. E. Shauer, head of the foreign department of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, died Tuesday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Morris Kohn, at Nanuet, N. Y. Mrs. Shauer, who had been ill for some time, was in her eighty-fifth year.

2 Universal-Jewels Being Given Final Shape for Screen

Two Universal-Jewel productions have just gone into the editor's hands at Universal City, The Flirt and The Kentucky Derby.

The Flirt was directed by Hobart Henley with a cast including Helen Jerome Eddy, Eileen Percy, Edward Hearn, Bert Roach, Harold Goodwin, Lloyd Whitlock, William Welsh, Lydia Knott, Nell Craig, Buddy Messenger, Tom Kennedy, George Nichols and others. The Booth Tarkington novel, a classic of middle western American life, was adapted by A. P. Younger.

The Kentucky Derby was directed by King Baggot, the man who directed Human Hearts, and carries in its cast the names of Lillian Rich, Reginald Denny, Lionel Belmore, Kingsley Benedict, Gertrude Astor, Walter McGrail and others. It is an adaptation of Charles Dazey's stage success The Suburban.

The Galloping Kid, a Hoot Gibson vehicle from the pen of Ralph Cummins, and directed by Nat Ross, also has just gone into editorial hands. Edna Murphy plays the leading feminine role.

Gladys Walton's vehicle, The Girl Who Ran Wild, which is being filmed from Bret Harte's story, "M'Liss," under the direction of Rupert Julian, is in the final stages of production and will enter the editorial stage within a week. Herbert Rawlinson's newest vehicle, Confidence, from a story by Bernard Hyman, has just been completed by Harry A. Pollard. Harriet Hammond is the leading woman.

Book of Stills Replaces the Usual Press Book

Instead of the usual press book "More To Be Pitied Than Scorned," Jack Cohn has designed a morocco leather book somewhat similar to a photograph album and filled it with fifty stills. The name of the feature is embossed in gold lettering on the front of the book.

When Bobby North of the Apollo Film Exchange, who has just bought the series of features, saw the books he ordered one for each of his salesmen.

Laura La Plante, Universal's serial star, doesn't mind playing grandmother roles. In "Perils of the Yukon," she had to play the role of a girl of the sixties Australian Showmen Visit U. S.

J. McLeod Bolton and Stanley N. Wright Confer with J. D. Williams of First National

Stanley N. Wright J. McLeod Bolton

In New York, on their visit to the United States, are J. McLeod Bolton, Australian financier, chairman of directors of the Haymarket Theatres, Ltd., of Sydney, and Stanley N. Wright, old-time motion picture showman, and now general manager of the Haymarket Theatres, Ltd. These two distinguished Australians are making an 18,000-mile trip for the purpose of looking over the picture field in this country. The first thing they did was to visit the offices of Associated First National, and confer with J. D. Williams, general manager of that organization, whom they knew in Australia.

The Haymarket Theatres, Ltd., comprising eight of the biggest first-run houses in Australia, show First National attractions and, according to Mr. Bolton and Mr. Wright, find them big box office magnets. In the Haymarket Theatre at Sydney, which has a seating capacity of 2000, all first-run First National Attractions are shown. American motion pictures are shown almost exclusively in Australia, according to Mr. Bolton and Mr. Wright, and the reason is that "American producers turn out more modern stock than those of any other country and show pictures that depict every-day life."

"The picture industry in Australia is in its infancy," said Mr. Bolton. "We have found it a sound investment and are ready to embark on a policy of extension that will help considerably in developing cinema showmanship and result in a wider distribution of film in Australia."

Indefinite Runs for Lloyd Film

Big Exhibitors Book "Grandma's Boy" as Matter of Self Protection, Says Arthur Kane

Since Grandma's Boy, Harold Lloyd's production, presented by Hal Roach, broke the record for the continuous run of a comedy feature, big exhibitors in many cities, in booking the attraction for their theatres, are taking the precaution to specify in the contracts that the engagements shall be of indefinite length, according to Arthur S. Kane, president of Associated Exhibitors.

"When he was arranging for the world's premier showing of Grandma's Boy, in his Symphony Theatre, Los Angeles," said Mr. Kane, "Dr. H. B. Breckwedel profited from his experience with A Sailor-Made Man which ran for seven consecutive weeks at the Symphony. This was a world's record, but Dr. Breckwedel was embarrassed to find at the end of the seventh week that there were still a lot of people who hadn't seen the picture and were clamoring for a view of it.

"Accordingly, in booking Grandma's Boy to open its Los Angeles run May 14, the Symphony management insisted upon playing safe by refusing to permit of a time limit in the contract. Since Grandma's Boy has sent Mr. Lloyd's former world's record galley West—it opened its twelfth week at the Symphony last Sunday—other exhibitors in all parts of the country are telling us frankly that they don't propose to be caught unawares by having their runs close while their patrons are still demanding more performances.

"M. L. Markowitz, of the Strand, San Francisco, where this production opened July 16; Calvin Heilig, of the Heilig, Portland, Ore., whose run began July 30; Balaban & Katz, of the Roosevelt, Chicago, starting July 31; Charles Olsen, of the Apollo, Indianapolis, where Grandma's Boy is booked to open Sept. 10, and Samuel Harding, who has booked the attraction for the Liberty, Kansas City, beginning Oct. 1, are among the big owners who have insisted upon keeping the closing date open. Moreover, they are holding off on runs to follow Grandma's Boy until they can see when it will be safe for them to set in another show.

"Meanwhile, there is great activity among smaller exhibitors as well as the holders of first-run accounts. Spirited bidding for second and third-run showings far in advance of play dates indicates unmistakably their realization of the tremendous box office value of this feature."

Coast Critics Hail "Blood and Sand"

Pre-Release Showing at Rialto, Los Angeles, Brings High Praise from Newspapers

At its pre-release opening in the Rialto Theatre, Los Angeles, Blood and Sand, Fred Niblo's Paramount picture starring Rodolph Valentino, was hailed by newspaper critics in the Coast city as a masterpiece of film art.

In a telegram to Adolph Zukor Jesse L. Lasky said: "'Blood and Sand broke all records for attendance at the Rialto Sunday. Line of people one block long in front of theatre from 11 in the morning until 10 at night. Nothing like it ever seen here. Picture scored great success. Valentino's performances greatest of his career."

Excerpts from the reviews are as follows:

Express—"Blood and Sand, one of greatest pictures that Broadway has seen in many months. To those persons who have begun to despair of the cinema's artistic future will be reborn belief in the silent drama's ultimate goal. A niche in the hallway of artistic creation."

Record—"It is the best picture Paramount has ever made."

Edwin Schallert in Los Angeles Times—"At last a great masterpiece. You simply have to go and see it. It is the first opus contributed by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation to the cause of a greater screen art. With the exception of The Four Horsemen and possibly Broken Blossoms, which now seem much inferior, it is the first really great tragedy we have had in the cinema. It is the great art that we have been calling for in the silver sheet. It is directed with a masterly intelligence from a scenario that is replete with human feeling and sincerity."

Examiner—"Valentino's new film a triumph—a shining stream of sunlight cleaving the murky haze of the summer's films. The book was better than the play; the film is infinitely superior to the book"

Herald—"A creative masterpiece in which author, director, scenario writer and players have combined in their utmost talent."

"Tailor Made Man" Called Hit

Los Angeles Newspaper Critics Accord High Praise to Charles Ray Picture

AT a premier showing before what is said to be the biggest summer crowd in the history of the California Theatre, Los Angeles, Charles Ray is reported to have scored a triumphant success in his latest film production, A Tailor Made Man, his first for United Artists.

Telegraphic advices received by United Artists after the opening performance at the California, Sunday, July 30, state that the public is unanimous in its enthusiasm over the production.

"We predict a great popular success for Carles Ray in A Tailor Made Man," says the reviewer for the Los Angeles Times, "and we are quite delighted to receive his comedy on a more ample and more human scale than heretofore."

"You feel that you want Mr. Ray to know that you think this should be a day of rejoicing for United Artists and a world of motion picture fans," says the Los Angeles Examiner.

"Charles Ray's new film is a knockout," says the critic for the Los Angeles Record.

"A Tailor Made Man is made to your measure," declares the review in the Los Angeles Herald, "and Charles Ray's screen version of the famous stage play of the same name apparently suited every taste of the patrons of the California Theatre yesterday."

"Charles Ray once more shows his subtlest and best art in his screen version of A Tailor Made Man," says the Los Angeles Express.

"We have a wonderful picture, and everybody out here is more than enthusiastic," said Fred Miller, manager of the California Theatre. "We opened with the biggest summer crowd in the history of the house, and everybody is really delighted with Charles Ray's great acting. There is no question regarding the complete success of this production."

"Human Hearts" Given Premiere at Central, N. Y.

Human Hearts, the Universal-Jewel production adapted from Hal Reid's stage play, had its first presentation to the New York public last Sunday night in the Central Theatre, Broadway and Forty-seventh Street. The crowds which filled the theatre accorded the star, House Peters, a reception equally as enthusiastic as that which marked the opening of his previous Universal-Jewel, The Storm, which preceded Human Hearts into the Central.

Andrew J. Cobe, manager of the Central Theatre, after the opening showing last Sunday, said that Human Hearts promises to go further in establishing Peters as the outstanding male figure on the screen, than any role the star heretofore has portrayed.

The cast also includes George Hackathorne, Edith Hallor, Russell Simpson, Gertrude Claire, Ramsey Wallace, Mary Philbin, Snitz Edwards, H. S. Karr, Gene Dawson, Lucretia Harris, George W. West and Emmet King. King Baggot, the director, played the leading role in the old melodrama a decade ago.

Manager Cobe has preceded the picture by a colorful prologue, showing the interior of a blacksmith shop, including three characters, two men and a girl, similar to characters in the film. After clanging of the hammer and anvil, the characters sing "Human Hearts." a song written especially to go with the photoplay.

It is expected that Human Hearts will remain in the Central Theatre for several weeks. It is Universal's November Jewel release.

L. B. Mace, of Laugh-O-grams, Arranging for Distribution

Leslie B. Mace, general sales manager of Laugh-O-gram Films, Inc., of Kansas City, registered on August 1 at the Astor, where he will remain two weeks. Mr. Mace brought with him four of the single-reel subjects produced by Laugh-O-grams, which are the first of the series of twelve which the company plans to release fortnightly.

Quality Film Buys "Big Six"

Another sale is announced this week of the "Big Six" features of the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation to the Quality Film Exchange of Western Pennsylvania, Ohio and Kentucky.

STATE RIGHTS

ALL THE NEWS OF ACTIVITIES IN THE TERRITORIES

The Wheels Are Beginning to Turn

WELL, who says the state rights market is not picking up? If any one has doubts in the matter that really are serious just let him take a glance at the news of the week. While it is true there are no developments that will "rock the industry" nevertheless several things have happened which in the aggregate are symptomatic of the better times coming in the independent field.

As a starter we have had trade showings of Dr. Daniel Carson Goodman's What's Wrong With the Women, which Equity will distribute. While it may be true there will be some—not exhibitors, bless you, no—who will choke on the title there is no reason to believe that women will be among those experiencing any contraction of the throat muscles. While denying anything is wrong with themselves it is a safe bet they will journey theatreward in order to obtain the masculine viewpoint. And the men they are going to drag along will be with them entertained and stirred by a moving domestic drama that squares with its unusual title.

Then The Country Flapper was put on for its première at the Capitol. As to the drawing qualities or to put it another way the amusement qualities of this independent subject you may obtain any verdict you like. One or two of the New York papers "panned" it where many praised it, some with qualifications and others without. Perhaps for an explanation of the varying opinions we must examine the age of the reviewer—that is, of course, of the male species of the tribe. We understand perfectly well that the suggestion so far as regards the opposite if not opposing sex is out of order. But the picture is of youth, youth that is certain it has undergone a self-ministered ageing process, youth that believes it has in some subtle, mysterious fashion traveled the royal road to experience. So to these same Youth out front the picture will be "great." To those who have journeyed half the way in age and all the way in spirit the picture will be "not so good." And there you are.

We have referred to two completed pictures. But to cut trees, or melons, it is necessary to plant seed. That is what Whitman Bennett and Charlie Burr have been doing for upward of a year, and now The Mysteries of Paris—in but six reels, mind you—is well started on its growth. The story of the enterprise of Messrs. Burr and Whitman appears on another page of this department. Followers of the independent market will find in it much that will interest them. They will read that it is a hobby, the making of this particular subject, that Mr. Bennett has been riding for five years. That means instead of entering upon the project as one would ordinarily, as a part of the day's work, for him it is a labor of fascination. And with Mr. Whitman's varied experience in the amusement field and his admitted enthusiasm for the famous tale of Eugene Sue the completed production ought to be one that will reflect credit on the whole industry. There is a significant sentence in the final paragraph of the story, one that will bear slow reading.

Arrow has purchased for state rights distribution the A. B. Maescher production, Night Life in Hollywood. While this writer has not seen the picture, from what he has learned regarding it he is convinced it contains no such fearsome matter as the title might incline one to believe. In fact, its producer is authority for the statement that it was designed and made to refute the wild tales of those agents of filth dispersion we have always with us.

The message sent to readers of the TRADE REVIEW last week by Dr. W. E. Shallenberger, in which he referred to his discussions with Will H. Hays regarding the independent side of the industry, and in which the doctor urged his business competitors to join him in supporting Mr. Hays in every way possible, was read by state rights men with lively interest.

It was plain from the conversation of Harry M. Warner of Warner Brothers that he and his organization entertain for Mr. Hays the most cordial feelings and also that the inside of Mr. Hays' offices were by no means strange surroundings to some of the members of his firm.

"I do believe it will take a man of the integrity and capacity and size of Mr. Hays to get straightened out the muddle into which overambitious men have drawn the industry," said Mr. Warner. "And I am convinced the sooner the men who are influential go out and tell the world that the industry is not in politics, but in a business with enormous investments at stake the better it will be for us all. Surely if the motion picture men, through Mr. Hays, shall regain the confidence of the public a great deed will have been achieved."

Joe Di Lorenzo said the message of Dr. Shallenberger was bound to be of tremendous interest and importance to independents. What chiefly caught the attention of Mr. Di Lorenzo was the declaration that Mr. Hays' policy stands for all that is good, "regardless of whom it concerns." He added that his organization intended to support Mr. Hays in every way possible.

Louis Burston smiled when the message of Dr. Shallenberger came into the conversation. "Well," he said, "Mr. Hays wants clean, wholesome pictures. That is what I am trying to give him, and I submit Forget Me Not as an evidence of that intention. But speaking directly to the point, I read the articles of Dr. Shallenberger and Mr. Boynton with interest and satisfaction.

"It was my conception all along that the independents as well as the big releasing concerns would benefit alike in the good that would be brought to the industry through the association and connection therewith of Mr. Hays. In my judgment the sooner we all get together and cooperate in the good work advocated by him the better it will be for all.

"I have only heard Mr. Hays speak once, but I have read everything he has said since his connection with the pictures, and my impression is that everything he has said applies to the little one as well as to the big one."

Regardless of the varying opinions the fact remains that if there were any doubt as to Mr. Hays' attitude toward the independents they have been removed. His position has been clarified. The latchstring is in plain sight and in easy reach.

GEORGE BLAISDELL.

Combine to Make "Mysteries of Paris"

Whitman Bennett and C. C. Burr Join Forces to Produce and Distribute Elaborate Version of Eugene Sue's Story

C. C. Burr announces that he has entered into an arrangement with Whitman Bennett for the production and distribution of an all-star elaborate version of Eugene Sue's world-famous melodrama, The Mysteries of Paris. As a matter of fact, the active work of production has already been under way for a week at the Whitman Bennett studio in Yonkers.

For more than a year Mr. Bennett, in collaboration with his scenario writer, Miss Dorothy Farnum, has been preparing a version of this famous novel which should condense the tale into the space of six reels, eliminating the costume element and yet keeping the atmosphere of picturesque and unusual ultra-romantic melodrama which has given this masterpiece its undying appeal to generations of readers.

Kenneth Webb, who is familiar with the entire history of the development of this screen adaptation, will direct the picture. The quaint and unusual sets, minutely correct to the last conceivable degree, will be constructed from designs by Elsa Lopez, who, like Mr. Bennett, is familiar with the locale covered by the story.

Through the co-operation of Mr. Bennett and Mr. Burr an unusual cast has been assembled. Leading roles are being played by Lew Cody, as the romantic prince; Gladys Hulette, as Mayflower, the pathetic heroine of the story; Montagu Love, as "The Schoolmaster," possibly the greatest underworld role in all dramatic or literary history; William Collier, Jr., as Francois, a young outcast from society, big enough to sacrifice everything for love; Lucille La Verne as "The Owl," a fit companion for "The Schoolmaster"; and Effie Shannon, as Mme. Ferrand, a mother character as famous for beauty and sympathy as "The Schoolmaster" is for vice and infamy.

In turning the active management of the work over to Mr. Burr, Mr. Bennett said: "Because of my many new plans for extensive production work, now being rapidly developed, I have found it absolutely necessary to take an associate into the completion of an undertaking which has been my pet hobby for nearly five years and into which, during the past year, I have put a vast amount of time and a considerable sum of money. The work of condensing and adapting the fifteen hundred pages of vivid narrative which constitute The Mysteries of Paris as written by Eugene Sue so as to get the thrill and essence of the whole into six reels has been a unique experience for both Miss Farnum and myself. Scripts have been written, thrown away, and written again and again. The same process has necessarily been gone through with in the problem of sets and effects.

"The production has been financed to its utmost needs and the entire energy of the Whitman Bennett Studio and staff will be focused on this task. It is possible that this association with Mr. Burr may develop into something far more significant than appears at the moment, and I feel confident that Mr. Burr will do everything in his power to make The Mysteries of Paris not only an artistic achievement but a practical money-getter for box-offices all over the world."

Warner Brothers' Full Years' Series Sold Countrywide

The entire series of Warner Brothers pictures for the coming season have been sold throughout the country, according to Harry M. Warner. Fully three-fourths of the independent buyers already have signed for the pictures, and the remaining portion of the country will be disposed of as soon as proper arrangements are consummated.

The latest deals involving the series of seven productions for Boston and the New Jersey territory.

A. M. Fabian has contracted for Northern New Jersey, and the Franklin Film Company, Boston, has taken over the New England States. The Independent Film Company, Philadelphia, has purchased the rights for Southern New Jersey, Eastern Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and District of Columbia.

The first feature to be released by the Warner Brothers is announced as A Dangerous Adventure, a wild animal picture starring Grace Darmond, with a supporting cast including Philo McCullough, Jack Richardson, Robert Agnew and Derelys Perdue.

Squirrel Comedies Booked on New Eastman Theatre

The Lee-Bradford Corporation, which is handling a series of novel Squirrel Comedies, has recently received a communication from President Zimmerman of the Nu-Art Pictures Corporation, Buffalo, to the effect that he has been successful in contracting for the entire series of Squirrel Comedies to play at the New Eastman Theatre in Rochester.

The series already has been purchased by the Nu-Art Pictures Corporation, Buffalo; American Feature Film Company, Boston; National Cinema Corporation, Indianapolis; Masterpiece Film, Philadelphia, and the Canadian Exhibitors Exchange, Toronto.

Dr. Shallenberger Returning After Eventful Coast Trip

W. E. Shallenberger, president of Arrow Film Corporation, will return to New York this week after a brief but eventful trip to the West Coast.

The original purpose of the doctor's trip was to complete arrangements for the acquisition of a new product which, it is reported, he has done very successfully.

Another high light in Dr. Shallenberger's trip was his meeting with Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, as was exclusively told in this journal last week.

Mangan to Book Through Offices of Edward Small

Arrangements have been completed between Francis A. Mangan and Edward Small whereby the Mangan versions of Victor Herbert's miniature operetta for motion picture theatres will hereafter be booked through the Edward Small Offices, 1493 Broadway. The Edward Small forces likewise will handle the bookings of the Francis A. Mangan Productions, consisting of elaborate stage and prologue numbers.

Dr. Daniel Carson Goodman has made a substantial contribution to the state rights market. In What's Wrong with the Women he gives us a production that should be welcomed to the screen of any house in the land. It is rare indeed we have presented a subject that is written, adapted and supervised by one man. Many times we have been told by skilled workers in the production field—those who have seen their craftsmanship nullified by some one of lesser or no judgment to whom later on in the process of picture-making it has been confided—that the ideal picture would be a one-man picture. Well, that's what we have got in the present instance—a one-man picture.

It well may be that Dr. Goodman wrote his story around his title. That statement is justified by the fact that throughout its seven reels it adheres closely to its theme. The story climbs steadily from an interesting opening to the stirring reconciliations in two households at the ending. It is a happy closing, and a perfectly logical one.

The tale is of domestic infelicity—in two homes. One of these is that of the Bascoms, the head of which is an architect with a "climbing" wife and daughter. The other is that of the Lees—the head of which is an employe of Bascom & Watson and whose wife through the influence of her across-the-hall neighbor is transformed from a contented "mother-woman" to a discontented participant in "swell hooch parties" and a liar to boot.

R. William Neill directed the production with fine discrimination. To be sure, he has had the advantage of guiding a group of actors thoroughly trained in their craft—as an example, Wilton Lackaye, Julia Swayne Gordon, Montagu Love, Rod La Rocque, Huntley Gordon, Barbara Castleton, Constance Bennett, Hedda Hopper and Paul McAllister. It is a worthy gathering.

The thought behind What's Wrong with the Women is the unhappiness caused by wives and daughters who are dissatisfied with their surroundings. Dr. Goodman takes the daughter of the architect, who when her father forbids her receiving the attentions of a rake twits her parent with being a failure and that "everybody knows" his income is only $50,000 a year. The producer goes down the financial scale and ties in the wife of the architect's employe whose head is turned by the attention she receives from the same rake.

The picture has power and it is impressive. Enhancing the latter quality is the character of Matthews, the bearded janitor of the apartment, a "Carpenter," the friend and conciliator. There is just a faint suggestion of the spiritual, but it is effective. If the subject should be described as a dramatic sermon here is one person who will not quarrel with the appellation. But don't fail to see for yourself, and soon, What's Wrong with the Women. G. B.

"Country Flapper" Will Be Real Asset in Small Community

You may have looked at many pictures, perhaps hundreds of them, the titles of which did not square with the action. The statement never can be made about The Country Flapper, which opened its world premiere for a week at the New York Capitol on July 29. As a production it is just what its name implies, a story of a rather lively and also an interesting girl in a small town, whose experiences probably are paralleled by thousands of her "fellows" in other small towns.

If in its general result the subject is saved and made it is saved and made by the work of Dorothy Gish. If the picture proves to be successful it will be because of two factors—its title and its leading player.

The subject was directed by F. Richard Jones. In the supporting cast are Glenn Hunter, whose budding reputation hardly will be enhanced by the role he is called on to play—for one reason, his is far from being a "great part"; Mildred Marsh, who portrays the Other Flapper, a pert young person who is strong for "stealing 'em away from the other girl"; Harlan Knight, the Boy's Father, who portrays the village druggist, otherwise "seemingly respectable" but actually a moonshiner with a still in his barn; Tommy Douglas as the Bashful Boy and Raymond and Albert Hackett as two brothers.

The Country Flapper should be a distinct asset to exhibitors in the thousands of theatres in smaller communities, and lend itself to wide exploitation. What it will do in three or four days or one-week runs is commended to the individual managerial judgment.

The Capitol staged an effective prologue, with Caroline Andrews singing the tuneful "The Country Flapper," by E. G. Van Pelt and Jesse Winne, with an accompanying pantomime by Thalia Zanou. The composition served as the music theme for the presentation. G. B.

"Tenement Tales" to Be Released by Clark-Cornelius

Included in the short subjects which the Clark-Cornelius Corporation will release to the state rights market this season will be the series of "Tales of the Tenements." There will be twenty-six subjects of two reels each.

Walter Miller and Nellie Burt are the featured players, and the stories are written by Ross D. Whytock for many years a court reporter on the New York World.

William Burt is directing these pictures The Clark-Cornelius Corporation will market them on its franchise plan to the independent exchanges in each territory.

Arrow Buys the Maescher Production

"Night Life in Hollywood," Designed to Show the Motion Picture Colony as It Is, to Be Released on State Rights

Negotiations have just been completed between Arrow Film Corporation and A. B. Maescher Productions whereby Arrow acquires the world distribution right for Night Life in Hollywood, one of the more unusual productions listed for the state rights field.

J. Frank Glendon is the star of the production. Wallace Reid, Theodore Roberts, J. Warren Kerrigan, Sessue Hayakawa and William Desmond are among those who appear in the picture.

Arrow officials are enthusiastic concerning the acquisition of this subject. The title is rich in exploitation possibilities, and it is declared the production itself will back up all that has been written about it.

W. Ray Johnston, vice president of Arrow, has placed himself on record as prophesying an even better record for the new picture than was marked up by Ten Nights in a Barroom.

Warners' Second Barry Picture Is Near Completion

The second Wesley Barry picture, Little Heroes of the Street, being produced by Harry Rapf at the Warner Brothers coast studios, is rapidly nearing completion, according to recent dispatches received at the Warner offices.

One of the big scenes filmed for the feature is declared to have transformed a Los Angeles city street to represent one in New York on Christmas Eve. It is said to be the first big snow scene the inhabitants of Los Angeles have witnessed.

Marie Prevost, who was recently signed to appear in several forthcoming Warner pictures, is playing the feminine lead. Other members of the cast include Jack Mulhall, Wilfred Lucas, Will R. Walling, Aggie Herring, Joe Butterworth and Charlotte Jackson. The story was written by Edmund Goulding, and it was adapted for the screen by Mildred Considine and Isabel Johnston. William Beaudine is directing, with James Hogan assisting.

Following Month's Trip Lee Reports Many Sales

Arthur A. Lee, president of the Lee-Bradford Corporation, has just returned from a four weeks' motor trip throughout Canada and the Middle West and finds that conditions are slowly but gradually improving. Mr. Lee was successful in consummating the following sales:

"Wildness of Youth" to Be Shown First at Nursery Benefit

The distinction of having its premier presentation sponsored by a goodly portion of New York and New Jersey's summer colonies is to fall to the lot of Ivan Abramson's seven-reel drama, Wildness of Youth. Announcement comes through the Hebrew Day Nursery and the offices of the Graphic Film Corporation of a performance for charity under the conditions of which Mr. Abramson has consented to loan "the dramatization of youth and its follies" which he recently completed at the Talmadge studios so that the proceeds of the performance may go to the support of the nursery.

Intended for September release, the feature will have its preshowing under direction of a committee of the Day Nursery's patrons on August 20 at Asbury Park. Summer colonists not only at Asbury but at Long Branch, Red Bank, Bradley Beach, Deal Beach and other sections of the Jersey Coast will join in making the benefit a real occasion.

Charles S. Goetz Will Be Manager of New W. B. Exchange

Charles S. Goetz, formerly of First National, has been engaged by the Warner Brothers as general manager of the new W. B. Exchange, Inc., which will distribute in Greater New York the series of seven productions being made by the organization for the coming season. The rights for the Northern New Jersey territory have been purchased by A. M. Fabian.

Mr. Goetz began his film career in the early days of Warner Features. He also has been with Fox as manager of the St. Louis office, with International covering Detroit and Cleveland, with Artcraft, and has spent three years with Famous Players in New York. Mr. Goetz has served as sales manager for Robertson-Cole in New York, and with Associated Producers as Chicago manager. He joined First National, following the amalgamation of Associated Producers with First National.

An Appreciation

EQUITY PICTURES CORPORATION takes this means of publicly expressing its appreciation to Mr. Daniel Carson Goodman, author and producer of "WHAT'S WRONG WITH THE WOMEN," for the elaborate and wonderful screen drama he has brought to life in this remarkable picture.

Independent Exhibitors throughout the length and breadth of the world may fittingly join us in expressing appreciation to Mr. Goodman in this brilliant achievement, not alone for the financial gain this beautiful picture will return to all exhibitors, but for the high goal it will set for all those engaged in the making of motion pictures.

In its atmosphere—its innate refinement—its skillful handling in the presentation of such a daring theme, "WHAT'S WRONG WITH THE WOMEN" will establish newer and higher records among those things embraced in the category of the finer things in life.

Here is a true and genuine example of what can be accomplished on the screen in cleanliness, beauty, strength and extraordinary entertainment value.

It is with unusual pride and pleasure we announce that "WHAT'S WRONG WITH THE WOMEN" will be released on the Independent market shortly.

Billy Bitzer Will Photograph Burr's "Sure-Fire Flint"

Billy Bitzer, D. W. Griffith's cameraman, who photographed Way Down East, has been engaged by O. C. Burr as chief cameraman for Sure-Fire Flint. Bitzer's work in his particular field stands out pre-eminently, with the result that Sure-Fire Flint photographically should be greatly enriched with his experience.

Another highly important addition to the quality of the Johnny Hines picture is Burr's contract with Ralph Spence to do the titling. Spence expects to leave for England shortly, and with the scenario in his possession will devote a great deal of time while abroad to the titling. The picture, with its possibilities for humor, will give Spence every opportunity to call forth his best ideas.

Kansas City Exchange to Supply Blank Contracts

Price of film rental for western pictures starring Jack Hoxie, William Fairbanks and Franklyn Farnum will be left entirely with the exhibitors of Missouri and Kansas, according to Bernard C. Cook, branch manager of the Standard Film Company. Blank contracts have been sent broadcast and it remains for the exhibitor to fill out the contract. An approved copy of the contract will be returned to the exhibitor, providing the price is within the bounds of reason.

"It is not that the products are cheap in quality," said Mr. Cook, "but I have always found exhibitors in this territory very fair, and most western features are sold at a uniform rental price."

Many Players Are Shown in Federated Review No. 3

Marion Davies, in her private apartment in the Cosmopolitan Studios, is one of the principal subjects in Federated Screen Review No. 3 of a series edited by A. D. V. Storey and distributed by Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc.

Doraldina, Corinne Griffith, Ruth St. Denis, Johnnie Hines, Monte Blue, Diana Allen, Lucy Cotton, Lew Cody, Zena Keefe, Helen Rowland, Maurine Powers, Barney Sherry and Bernard Granville are among the stars and players shown at home or in stunts, hobbies or sports and Directors Sydney Alcott and William Nigh are shown at work in their studios making pictures.

Producers' Security Will State Right "In the Night"

The Producers Security Corporation announces another feature for the independent market. In the Night, the famous stage play, has been adapted from the screen by Cyril Harcourt and the production was directed by Frankland A. Richardson. The book is by Joan Southerland.

The film version is said to be full of the mysterious episodes.

The Producers Security Corporation reports the subject now ready.

Principal Pictures Personnel

Sol Lesser and M. R. Rosenberg, president and secretary-treasurer respectively, of Principal Pictures Corporation, of Los Angeles, announce the personnel of the company as follows: Colin Campbell, director; George Bertholn, assistant director; James Francis O'Shea, production manager; Sam W. B. Cohn, publicity; Dal Clawson, cameraman; Gordon Jennings, assistant cameraman, and Miss Jo Morrell, secretary. The company is working on the Elinor Glyn story, The World's a Stage.

Will Nigh Goes to Water Gap to Stage "Notoriety" Scenes

Will Nigh has left for location with his assistants and players to shoot important scenes for Notoriety. The production is now on its fifth week, and when completed will be distributed on a state rights basis by Weber & North.

The first stop of the company was the Delaware Water Gap. A number of outdoor shots were staged. Weather and other elements were favorable. The company will be homeward bound in short order, to wind up the indoor action on the picture.

The augmented cast includes J. Barney Sherry, Maurine Powers, George Hackathorn, Rod La Rocque, Mona Lisa, Richard Travers, Mary Alden and Hedda Hopper.

Von Tilzer Showing Warners

Jack Von Tilzer, general sales manager of East Coast Productions, Inc., has left on a visit to many key cities, screening the J. B. Warner series of Westerns.

Mr. Backer will leave for the coast early in the autumn, to confer with Clifford S. Elfelt, president of the producing unit, Metropolitan Productions, relative to the new series of stories in which Warner will be starred.

"The Devil's Land" Has Mount Vesuvius for Part of Locale

The Devil's Land is a new seven-reel photodrama produced on and around Mount Vesuvius and in the ancient cities of Naples, Pompeii and Syracuse near the Volcano. The film shows Mount Vesuvius in action, the pouring rain of lava and the destruction resulting from the fiery mountain.

The story is a drama of love, intrigue and the search for gold in the crater of the Volcano into which one of the searchers plunges in his anxiety for the metal.

The Edward L. Klein Company, 152 W. Forty-second Street, New York, represents the producers in America and has just received a print of this production. Distribution arrangements will be announced in the near future.

Among the Northwestern State Rights Exchanges

The Felix cartoons, which were recently purchased for the Northwest territory by Greater Features, Inc., have been booked by Jensen & VonHerberg for their theatres in Seattle, Tacoma and Portland. The first of the series opened at the Seattle Coliseum July 29.

It looked like Greater Features week in Portland for the seven days beginning July 29. Every first run house in town had at least one of its films, while at the Liberty two complete changes of program were furnished; Seattle and Tacoma also were well represented.

Seattle and Portland Blue House Theatres will have day and date showings of The Man from Hell's River the week of August 12. DeLuxe Feature Film Company is the distributor for the Pacific Northwest.

Renting Music Rolls Like Films

With the aim of lessening the expense on those theatres which employ music rolls H. M. Hull, of the New York Music Roll Exchange, explains how his company is now renting from fifty rolls a month upward at a price which would represent the purchase of only a few. Regular music programs are arranged to suit the pictures the theatre may be showing.

Under the former method of purchase, Mr. Hull points out, patrons frequently grew tired of the music they had heard repeatedly, whereas under his company's system there is a constant change.

"Beware of the Law" for Fall

Among the productions listed for fall release is Beware of the Law, which will be handled on the state rights market by Jawitz Pictures Corporation. It was made on the Canadian border and is said to be a comedy-drama embodying a new slant on bootlegging. Charles Jawitz is having it re-edited and titled by Martin & Natteford, and will back it up by a full line of advertising and exploitation accessories.

Plan to Feature Kerrigan

The William R. Lighton Productions, Inc., of Hollywood, have completed arrangements through Harry M. Owens, general manager, with J. Warren Kerrigan to be featured in a series of Billy Fortune stories, by William R. Lighton.

Short Subjects and Serials

Mermaids Get Away to Strong Start

"Look Out Below," First of Jack White's New Series, Contains Steady Procession of Mirthmaking Incidents

Jack White's opener for the series of thirteen Mermaid Comedies for release by Educational in 1922-3 is Look Out Below, slated for regular issue in September. It is up to the average of the immediately preceding Mermaids, and that surely is a statement which does not damn with faint praise. It was directed by Del Lord and Harry Edwards and was supervised by Mr. White. The subject is not flawless—for instance, a black-hulled merchantman and a white coastwise passenger steamer are employed in the same sequence—but it is 99.44 per cent pure fun, nevertheless. And that is the chief aim of comedies.

The picture marks the introduction of Don Barclay as a partner of Lige Conley. His work gives every indication that the latter has a star associate. Barclay is far from a novice, having been a hit in the Follies a few years ago and also has behind him large burlesque experience. He is of the non-smiling, serious-faced type, and looks like one who will improve on acquaintance.

Look Out Below is fast. The two reels slip through all too quickly. There is no let-up in following incident. Much of the action takes place on a steamer, and contributing to the excitement are a dog and a monkey. The former alone will put over the picture, but the comedy does not lean on him by any means.

Two of the bits intrusted to the dog are exceptionally well done. The first is the stealthy pilfering of a chocolate cream from the collection of a young woman passenger, with a quickly ensuing attack of seasickness. The distress of the pup is one of the funniest things of its kind since John Bunny, years ago, showed the possibilities for mirthmaking in a seizure of mal de mer. It is a remarkable exhibition of canine pantomime, an exhibition that asks no odds of the human actor. Then again, when the dog discovers the monkey crossing the stateroom floor disguised in a bit of feminine apparel he promptly "faints." The monkey, too, is a regular performer, not the least of his accomplishments being the lighting of the fuse attached to the bomb.

It is taking no chances in predicting that the mishaps of the stout matron as she falls through one deck and then through two will upset any house. Nor will there fail to be equal hilarity at the dismay of the souse outside the three-mile limit as he gazes on the tail of the monkey protruding from the dress of the disguised Barclay. The monkey, it may be said, is in hiding from the dog.

There are some old stunts with a new twist in this picture, and there are some new ones. By and large, it is a real comedy.

Lloyd Films of All Denominations Are Kept Moving Briskly

Reports from various sources corroborate the statement of Pathe that all Harold Lloyd films are kept briskly moving. This includes the one-reel reissues, the extraordinary demand for which is one of the highlights of the season's business, and the entire list of nine two-reel Lloyd comedies.

Repeat bookings of the Lloyd two-reelers in a single contract, says Pathe, are a common occurrence, preferences for individual comedies being overbalanced by the advantage of being able to announce forthcoming showings of the entire list.

Hardly a week passes, the Pathe statement says, without the spectacle of houses in the same large city section playing at the same time the first of the Lloyd multiple-reel comedy, A Sailor-Made Man, repeating a Lloyd two-reeler and showing one-reel Lloyd re-issues.

Fifth Plum Center Comedy Completed by Gerson Pictures

The fifth of a series of twelve two-reel comedies starring Dan Mason under the direction of Robert Eddy was completed last week at the Paul Gerson Studios in San Francisco.

The series deals with the activities of Pop Tuttle, played by Dan Mason, in the little burg of Plum Center. In this fifth picture Pop Tuttle trades off his old nag, Wildfire, for a Ford, which he transforms into an autobus by putting his old bus body on the chassis.

Pop is not so expert at driving a car as he is driving a horse, and his first trip in his improvised bus furnishes plenty of comedy action.

Wilna Hervey, the tallest comedienne in pictures, is leading woman in the character of Tillie, the station agent. Other prominent characters are Ed Bodfish, mayor and proprietor of the Palace Hotel, Nosey Nichols, Doc Pellet, and other rural types.

These comedies will be released through the Film Booking Offices of America, beginning September 1.

Famous Players Buys "Torchy" Output for Australian Division

An important deal on foreign distribution of the Torchy comedy series was consummated this week between Famous Players and Mastodon Films, Inc., when Famous contracted to buy the complete Torchy output for Australia.

Coincident with this announcement of the stamp of approval by Famous is the fact that the Rivoli Theatre this week is presenting John Hines in Torchy's Ghost. This marks the fourth Torchy played at Broadway's leading show houses in the past two months, inasmuch as the Criterion, Rivoli, Rialto and Strand Theatres have during this period shown them.

Torchy's Ghost, now playing at the Rivoli, has had an unusually successful run since its release, having played Balaban and Katz's Chicago Theatre, the first run houses on the coast, and the largest theatres in the East.

Charles H. Christie on Way to New York Stops Off in Canada

Charles H. Christie, financial and business manager of Christie Comedies Company, paid a flying visit to Seattle on his way to New York from Los Angeles, via the Canadian Pacific. He will also stop at Vancouver, Toronto and Winnipeg. Mr. Christie had time for a few handshakes, renewed old acquaintances and conferred with J. A. Gage, manager of the local Educational exchange, which handles the Christie product throughout the Pacific Northwest.

Microscopic Feat in Review

An unusual subject, The Marvel of the Egg, in which the microscopic camera reveals a chick in the process of creation, is the outstanding feature of Pathe Review No. 168, which has been scheduled for release by Pathe August 13. The subject was photographed by Charles F. Herm, and the scenes are magnified 1000 diameters. It is shown that at the beginning of the incubation the yolk and "white" are fastened by thick cords of albumen and these twists serve to keep the embryo always uppermost. At first, the embryo is merely a tiny white spot, but the second day develops the beginnings of the new chick's circulation system.

Miss Loeb in Movie Chats

Sophie Irene Loeb, well-known feminist, appears in Urban Movie Chats in a picturized interview. Miss Loeb is seen in several of her many activities. A meeting in City Hall Park in New York, where, as president of the Child's Welfare Board, she makes an address in the interest of lower-priced milk for babies, is a particularly interesting scene.

Jean Havez, Lloyd Scenarist, Sees Big Boom Coming in Fall

Jean Havez, known for his songs and stage and screen productions, and for the last year an active member of Harold Lloyd's scenario staff, visited New York last week en route for a vacation in Europe. Mr. Havez had his full share in the writing of Never Weaken, A Sailor-Made Man, Grandma's Boy and the latest Lloyd multiple-reel production for Pathe just now completed and called Dr. Jack, and the story for the next Lloyd comedy as yet unnamed. He referred with enthusiasm to the spirit of efficient co-operation that pervades all that is undertaken by the Lloyd scenario staff—and to many evidences of the comedian's and Producer Hal Roach's appreciation of the results.

Recently, on the West Coast and along the route of his travels east, Mr. Havez talked with exhibitors, especially in the large centers. He found them eager for news about Lloyd productions.

Without exception the exhibitors Mr. Havez talked with were fully alive to the fact that as soon as the hot weather was over their own business was certain to reflect the marked improvement observed everywhere in general lines of business. "As a result," said Mr. Havez, "I have the feeling that picture patronage will be so big this coming season that theatres presenting spoken drama only will feel the competition even more than ordinarily."

REVIEWS OF CURRENT SHORT SUBJECTS

THE YELLOW FACE—An Episode in the "Adventures of Sherlock Holmes," Released by Educational.—A well-made two-reeler and one possessing a goodly amount of suspense. The story is of the husband who comes to Holmes for aid in solving a domestic mystery. Holmes makes a bad guess as to the cause of his visitor's worries, but he quickly gets to the bottom of the matter. Instead of a former husband that is annoying his client's wife, one that had been reported dead, it proves to be a child by her first marriage that she has sent for and is keeping across the street from her home. A mistaken fear of her husband's jealousy is the cause of all the distress. A good picture.

UNMASKED—Two-reel Western, Released by Universal.—Art Acord is the star in a two-part Northwest Mounted story. He portrays O'Doone, a mounted man in love with the daughter of a bandit. He uncovers the outlawry of his prospective father-in-law, and while hesitating to arrest the culprit, the latter is murdered by a confederate. O'Doone arrests the murderer, but conceals the banditry of the dying man in whom he is interested. This is the story's weakness, as it assumes the murderer will remain silent. Otherwise the picture is worth while. Frank Lanning plays the role of the bandit who is killed; Jim Corey, the accomplice, and Esther Ralston, the daughter.

CUPID BY PROXY—Pathe Playlet.—Baby Marie Osborne is the center of a good cast who portray a lively story. Among the players is Mildred Davis, who has since the picture was made become well known to picture-goers through her work opposite Harold Lloyd. John Stepling and J. N. McDowell, who are "twisted" in the introduction, have the roles of heads of neighboring families. The interest does not depend solely on the little player who is featured, but rather on a half dozen who are participants in a drama that stands up well.

INDIA'S THREE HUNDRED MILLION—Urban Popular Classic. — A full reel is devoted to scenes of life among the people of a country where bathing is one of the hard and fast customs. Many views are given of the people and their domestic animals taking the waters. Also there are shown many scenes from everyday life. Among the more interesting are those of a mela, or religious festival. After seeing this subject one can believe there are three hundred million persons in India.

SHORT WEIGHT — Two-part Century Comedy, Released by Universal.—Brownie, the Century dog, is the star of this story of a dog and a boy, played by Johnny Fox. Brownie is a great pup, there's no doubt about that. In the present subject he is at the top of his form, and his work will be followed with the closest interest. As was intended by the director, he is the feature of the picture, and his performance will make for the amusement of adults as well as youngsters.

THE UNSELFISH SHELL—Released by Prizma.—Some rarely beautiful photographs are included in this single reel, one of the more notable being a representation of the work of the Seri Indians of Southern California in simulating flowers with carved shells. The abalone shell is shown in its natural and polished states, as well as reduced to manufactured forms. Examples in shell craft also are displayed from Ceylon and Australia.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS No. 6—Released by Pathe.—There's a good list of well-known screen players shown in this number, several of them snapped as they arrive for a Legion benefit in Hollywood. Others appearing are Marshall Neilan, Blanche Sweet, Al St. John, William Farnum with a bunch of little folks, Ruth Roland changing expressions in slow motion, and Larry Semon joining hands and dancing with a dozen girls arrayed in typical Semon garb. The most interesting of all, however, is the appearance of the animal trainer and his big pet lions, three of whom at one time show their regard for him—and he shows his faith in them.

Johnny Jones, star of J. K. McDonald's "Johnny Jones Comedies," released by Pathe

PATHE REVIEW No. 168—"The Marvel of the Egg" shows a chick in the process of hatching, the earlier photographs being magnified a thousand times. It is of unusual interest. Among other scenes in a good number are "The Hikers of Alaska," taken in the summertime; views of the Ashokan Reservoir, a part of New York's water supply, and "Somaliland Smiles," Pathecolor scenic taken in Jibuti, on the east coast of Africa.

CÆSAR'S GHOST—One-reel Universal Comedy.—Roy Atwell is the featured player in this burlesque on reincarnation. Lila Leslie is the wife who sees in herself a one-time Cleopatra and Margaret Cullington the aunt who thinks she was Salome. Atwell, in order to get even and smash the bubble, plays Cæsar and brings in the cook and a cop to help him. The subject will make a good short diversion.

TOUCH ALL BASES—Hal Roach Comedy in One Reel, Released by Pathe.—Paul Parrott exercises his ingenuity in endeavoring to get on the inside of a baseball grounds, but Eddie Baker, in the guise of a guard, not only keeps him out but escorts his girl in. It is a subject that will interest the baseball fans and many who are not members of that large fraternity.

PERILS OF THE YUKON—"Trapped by Fire," the seventh episode of the Universal serial, is a hummer from start to finish. It is a chapter that will stand out in any serial. Like its immediate predecessor, it is noteworthy also from the scenic side, the views of mountain and valley and stream and snow being unusual.

SEEN IN SMYRNA — Urban Popular Classic.—The reel is given over to the occupations and pastimes of the peasants. There are scenes of primitive breadmaking, of the herding or raising of turkeys and goats, of the making of mats and rugs, of bee culture and of making a quilt. It is good entertainment.

THE DOG AND THE FISH—Cartoon Fable, Released by Pathe. — Cartoonist Terry takes for his basis "He who dreams catches no fish." The dog dreams of great achievements, but in the meantime the fish have a dance about him. Terry continues to show inventiveness in making entertainment.

THE TIMBER QUEEN—"The Yukon Trail," episode 5, shifts the locale of the Pathe serial to Alaska, and as an evidence of the change we are treated to some genuine snow scenes, with several dog teams to liven things. The chapter maintains the strength indicated by its predecessors.

SUCH IS LIFE ON THE RIVIERA—Released by F. B. O.—The Hy Mayer Travelaugh was shown at the Capitol for the week of July 29 and was well up to the high mark of the artist.

LET'S GO—Pathe One-reel Reissue.—Lloyd, Pollard and Daniels combine in a rapid farce staged around and between a soda counter and a "hot dog" stand.

The Voice of the Box Office

How the Latest Releases Are Being Received Throughout the Country

"One Clear Call"
(First National)
Baltimore, Md., Week of July 24

RIVOLI.—Drew big crowds throughout week, despite hot weather. Theatre reopened after three weeks of darkness. Feature film won high comment.

Exploitation.—Newspaper display advertising about double usual style. Comedy feature also helped.

Short Subjects.—Larry Semon in "A Pair of Kings," Rivoli News.

"The Man Unconquerable"
(Paramount)
Baltimore, Md., Week of July 24

CENTURY.—The picture pleased.

Exploitation.—No special advertising used, other than newspaper displays and cards.

Short Subjects.—Overture, "Morning, Noon and Night" (Suppe), Charles E. Farson, conductor; Century News Pictorial, "Children of France," a novelty film; comery, "Toonerville Blues"; vocal selections, organ solo.

"The Delicious Little Devil"

ATLANTA, GA.

METROPOLITAN

"SONNY," Richard Barthelmess (First National). Exceeds "Tol'able David" in attendance and equals it in favorable comment. A pronounced success. Excellent business.

Short Subjects.—"Fair Enough," Kinograms News Weekly, musical number.

CRITERION

"GAS, OIL AND WATER," Charles Ray (First National). Fell below average, barely registered "Fair."

Short Subjects.—"A Rag Doll Romance" (Campbell comedy) and Kinograms.

HOWARD

"OVER THE BORDER," Betty Compson and Tom Moore (Paramount). Good. "Dixie's Mountain Majesty," a special two-reeler covering the Constitution's forest expedition into the mountains of North Jersey, is responsible for no small part of the success of the program. On the whole, the week was very satisfactory.

GRAND

"DON'T WRITE LETTERS," Gareth Hughes (Metro), first half. The star's a favorite at the Grand and drew good business the first three days. "A VIRGIN'S SACRIFICE," Corinne Griffith (Vitagraph). Fairly good business.

Short Subjects.—Hy Mayer Travelaughs, "A Trip Through Paris," Century comedy, "Live Wives," Fox News, Mutt and Jeff and a Goldwyn Graphic.

RIALTO

"THE TRUTHFUL LIAR," Wanda Hawley (Paramount), first half. Very good business.

"BOOMERANG BILL," Lionel Barrymore (Paramount). Considered one of the most entertaining pictures played at the Rialto in months, and can be termed a winner.

Short Subjects.—International News and a Grantland Rice Sport Pictorial, "Girls Will Be Boys."

STRAND

"YELLOW MEN AND GOLD," Richard Dix and Helene Chadwick (Goldwyn). Played to very good business.

BOSTON

MODERN

"GOLDEN DREAMS" (Goldwyn).

"GAS, OIL, AND WATER" (First National). Program as a whole better than average, and despite good weather for the beaches, the houses were generally good for the season. At this house the Zane Grey feature was especially well liked.

Exploitation.—Regular newspaper advertising, with specials in all Sunday editions. Advance week with framed stills in lobby and automatic still projector, and the same during the run. Advance heads on the screen. Window cards, and posters in all subway and elevated stations.

Short Subjects.—Educational comedy, "Rapid Fire," International News Weekly and Topics of the Day.

BEACON

"GOLDEN DREAMS" (Goldwyn). Same strong pull as at the Modern. A picture appealing to all classes.

"GAS, OIL, AND WATER" (First National). Went much better here, the result being that program as a whole went better. Business very good for summer.

Exploitation.—Same as the Modern.

Short Subjects.—Same as the Modern.

PARK

"ANN OF LITTLE SMOKY" (Associated Exhibitors). Well thought out and well screened, if audience comment will show that.

"WISE HUSBANDS" (Eastern). Went fairly well. Business good throughout the run. Evenings best.

Exploitation.—No newspaper advertising. Window cards and poster ads in all subway and elevated stations. Advance lobby display advance week and during run of framed still groups, stretchers, and three sheets.

Short Subjects.—Independent comedy, "Pardon Me," International News Weekly, and Movie Chats. A very satisfactory program on the whole.

BUFFALO

SHEA'S HIPPODROME

"THE WOMAN WHO WALKED ALONE," Dorothy Dalton (Paramount). With cool weather prevailing, business opened strong and held up exceptionally well for the first half of the week. Hippodrome fans enjoyed the picture and told the management so.

Exploitation.—Newspaper advertising, billboards, window cards and lobby and marquee displays.

Short Subjects.—Harold Lloyd in "Just Neighbors," Hippodrome Review, pictures of western New York firemen's lake outing and the Courier Camera, showing local events.

"THE INFIDEL," Katherine MacDonald (First National). Business was satisfactory.

Exploitation.—Newspaper advertising, lobby and marquee display, window cards and billboards.

Short Subjects.—Al St. John in "The Village Sheik," Hippodrome Review and the Courier Camera, including firemen's outing.

LOEW'S STATE

"UP AND GOING," Tom Mix (Fox). The mere announcement of a Mix feature is the signal for a box office stampede at the State.

Exploitation. — Manager Beckerick tripled his usual advertising appropriation on this attraction. Window cards used all over town and flashed attraction the front of the house.

Short Subjects.—"Any Old Rags," Federated Chester comedy, Mutt and Jeff cartoon, Pathe News.

LAFAYETTE SQUARE

"WOMAN, WAKE UP," Florence Vidor (Associated Exhibitors). A cool wave hit town when this one was offered and the box office barometer went right up to high receipts.

Exploitation.—Newspaper ads, window cards, billboards and big display on front of house.

"THE FIVE DOLLAR BABY" (Metro). The theatre was crowded at every performance.

RANDOLPH

"THE CROSS-ROADS OF NEW YORK" (First National). Good business all week.

STATE-LAKE

"SOUTH OF SUVA" (Paramount), Business was very satisfactory.

CASINO

"OUT OF THE SNOWS" (Selznick). Pleased the patrons. Attendance was good.

INDIANAPOLIS

APOLLO

"THE MAN UNCONQUERABLE" (Paramount). Pleased audiences that filled the theatre.

Short Subjects.—Bobby Vernon and Josephine Hall in "Hokus Pokus."

COLONIAL

"FLOWER OF THE NORTH" (Vitagraph). Business continues good.

OHIO

"THE MAN FROM LOST RIVER" held attention and pleased more than the average attendance.

CIRCLE

"HURRICANE'S GAL," Allen Holubar's production (First National), drew spontaneous applause from Circle audiences.

KANSAS CITY

NEWMAN

"OUR LEADING CITIZEN" (Paramount). This one played to good crowds all week.

Short Subjects.—"Spooks," Mermaid comedy, and Newman News and Views.

Exploitation.—Name and large cuts of Thomas Meighan played up big in newspaper space. Also billboard and lobby display feature the line, "A Landslide of Laughter."

LIBERTY

"HEAD OVER HEELS" (Goldwyn). Did a good week's business, although hot weather kept the attendance lower than it would have been.

Short Subjects.—"My Wife's Relations," Buster Keaton comedy, Pathe News, and "Nanook of the North."

Exploitation.—Large sketch of the star featured in Sunday newspaper space, while her name was given much prominence in lobby display and billboard space.

ROYAL

"FAIR LADY," Betty Blythe (United Artists). A fair attendance. Unusually hot weather and strong competition had to be contended with.

Short Subjects.—Torchy Comedy and Royal Screen Magazine, Current Events.

Exploitation.—Postal cards bearing photographs of the theatre on one side and the writing, "Meet me at the usual time any day at the Royal theatre; signed, "Fair Lady," were mailed out to all patrons. Also newspaper, lobby display and billboard space.

TWELFTH STREET

"THE CRIMSON CHALLENGE" (Paramount). A lively attendance for the week. The star is very popular here.

Short Subjects.—"One Stormy Night," Chester comedy; Screen Magazine, and "Plain Grit," short drama.

First Runs on Broadway

Their Presentation and Press Comments by Various New York Dailies

Strand

OVERTURE—Selections from "Carmen" (Bizet).
ODDS AND ENDS: (a) The Trapper Plant; (b) Peter, Polly and Pat; (c) Living the Life of Reilly A.D. 1999; (d) The Crystal Hills (Pathecolor).
PIANO RECITAL—(a) "Prelude" in C Minor (Rachmaninoff); (b) "Papillon" (Greig).
MARK STRAND TOPICAL REVIEW.
VOCAL PROLOGUE.
FEATURE—Fools First (First National).
ORCHESTRA SELECTION—"The Parade of the Wooden Soldiers" (Jessel).
COMEDY—All Wet (Fox).
ORGAN SOLO.

Press Comments

Times.—Is a crook story that is interesting. Mr. Neilan has made his story stand up and breathe and seem alive, at least. Tribune.—Fools First is one of the best pictures the Strand has had this season. Herald.—As excellent a crook tale as one could imagine. World.—Mr. Neilan's conception of naturalness in specific characters' action is one of the very best things in our pictures to-day. American.—Mystery is ever a fascinating element in drama, and never was there more of it crowded into a single film than in the picture under discussion now. Daily News.—Besides being a tremendous sociological study, Fools First is exceptional entertainment. Journal.—It is a novel variation of the theme of regeneration carried to the utmost degree. Telegram.—The characters are primarily human and the director has achieved a noteworthy effect by making the players portray them in a reasonably human way. Sun.—It is an exceptional underworld play.

Capitol

Unit No. 1. OVERTURE—"Southern Rhapsody" (Hosmer).
Unit No. 2. PIANO RECITAL—"Capriccio Brillante" (Mendelssohn).
Unit No. 3. SHORT FEATURE—The Unselfish Shell (Prizma).
Unit No. 4. DIVERTISSEMENTS: (a) "Ere Tu" Aria from "The Masked Ball" (Verdi); (b) "Caprice Viennois" (Kreisler).
Unit No. 5. CAPITOL MAGAZINE.
Unit No. 6. PROLOGUE—"The Country Flapper." Music Theme: "The Country Flapper" (E. O. Van Pelt and Jesse Winne).
Unit No. 7. FEATURE—The Country Flapper (Producers' Security).
Unit No. 8. "The Blue Danube" (Strauss).
Unit No. 9. HY MAYER TRAVELAUGH—Such Is Life on the Riviera (F. B. O.).
Unit No. 10—CAPITOL GRAND ORGAN.

Press Comments

Herald.—Like many photoplays of the Sennett species, the picture doesn't follow any straight line of development, but just scampers about as it pleases. Times.—The Hy Mayer Travelaugh is interesting and diverting . . . and the Prizma picture is attractively colored . . . but the programed feature is merely something to sit through if you want to see the other films very much or have an active appetite for the musical numbers. World.—The cutest thing in films this week is Dorothy Gish. American.—The kind of picture to which one can—and is urged to—bring the whole family. Sun.—Miss Gish and Glenn Hunter extract considerable joy out of their flirtations. Mail.—A joyous frolic of youth.

Rialto

OVERTURE—"Orpheus in the Lower World" (Offenbach).
RIESENFELD'S CLASSICAL JAZZ.
MUSIC-FILM—"Moorish Dance" (Prizma).
SOLO—"Within the Garden of My Heart" (Alicia Scott).
RIALTO MAGAZINE.
SOLO—"Bird Song" from "I Pagliacci" (Leoncavallo).
FEATURE—The Bonded Woman.
COMEDY—Pop Tuttles' Clever Catch (Robertson-Cole).

Press Comments

American.—The moral of The Bonded Woman is the finest thing in the film. World.—The exterior scenes of this picture of sea life are beautiful. Herald.—For about half its length this adaptation . . . is as interesting as a sea trip—after that it gets flighty. Journal.—Best of all is the series of marine and island pictures; beautiful, vivid and commanding admiration. Sun.—It is an interesting story of the sea, with many exciting moments. Globe.—In this form is vastly more entertaining than it was originally—which is saying a great deal.

Rivoli

Press Comments

Herald.—The play, after an interesting and dramatic first act, wound up in a typical musical comedy finish. World.—There is no denying that her (Gloria Swanson's) dresses as "Fleur d'Amour" cost a lot of money. American.—The scenes were lavish and the clothes worn by Gloria Swanson were—as I have suggested—numerous. But what a story! Tribune.—The story is without any great moments; but if you like the work of Gloria Swanson as much as we do, you will mildly enjoy the picture, anyway. Mail.—Makes a better film than it did a stage production; and the picture is not uninteresting. Globe.—None is so glorious as Gloria. Sun.—Miss Swanson deserves so much better stuff than this. Journal.—Gloria Swanson appears in one of her most lavish productions.

FOR THE EXHIBITORS BOX-OFFICE

EDITED BY GEORGE T. PARDY

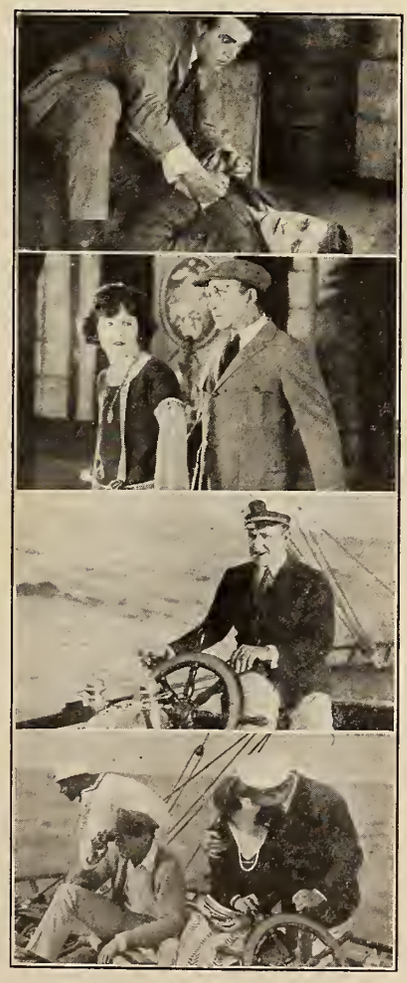
Oathbound

Released by Fox. Story by Edward LeSaint. Scenario by Jack Strumwasser. Photographed by Don Short. Directed by Bernard Durning. Length, 4,468.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Lawrence Bradbury, Dustin Farnum; Constance Hastings, Ethel Grey Terry; Jim Bradbury, Fred Thomson; Ned Hastings, Maurice Flynn; Hicks, Norman Selby; Alice, Aileen Pringle; Gang Leader, Bob Perry.

Lawrence Bradbury marries Constance. While aboard their yacht he gets word that thieves have been operating on one of his vessels and have stolen valuable merchandise. Ned Hastings, who is the brother of Constance, appears to be implicated in the deal and she begs him to discontinue having anything to do with the affair. However Ned swears her to secrecy and tells her that he must go on. Jim Bradbury persuades his brother Lawrence to refrain from calling the detectives and asks to be allowed to apprehend the criminals alone. Lawrence consents but after several unsuccessful attempts, in which he always appears following the escape of the gang, Lawrence engages the services of a special man. The new detective brings in the information that throws suspicion on the captain of the boat operating with Ned and he also recognizes Constance to be the woman whom he had seen working with the men. Lawrence, infuriated, starts out himself to get at the bottom of the thing. At the dock he discovers the gang at work again and captures one man who turns out to be Jim. Ned appears and tells Lawrence that he has been doing some secret service work but knowing his great love for his younger brother had hesitated to bring the truth before him and had made Constance swear not to divulge what information she had. Jim confesses that he had become involved with a crooked gang and had been forced into this act and is forgiven by his brother.



A good story with melodramatic flavorings and a fairly well concealed mystery element that develops keen interest as the plot thickens. There are some excellent water scenes depicting plenty of real fast action of the more or less uncommon variety and although the trend of the story is not out of the ordinary the quality of the production is quite good and should afford agreeable diversion in practically any house.

Points of Appeal.—Detective plots usually register well and, if convincingly done, satisfy a large majority of the patrons. In Oathbound this feature has been capably handled and by the use of ambiguous subtitles the solution of the mystery has been made less evident thereby heightening and holding the interest until the climax is reached. This picture is one of the best of the recent issues in which Dustin Farnum has been starred.

Cast.—A sufficiently entertaining cast has been chosen for the various roles. Dustin Farnum lends his usual he-man punch to the story. Ethel Grey Terry is an attractive lead and Maurice Flynn partially regains his former honors as Ned Hastings. Other members of the cast contribute good support.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—All exterior shots have been clearly photographed. The boat races have been especially well done. Interiors are pleasing. The continuity is satisfactory and moves rapidly. Direction O.K.

Fools First

First National Photoplay in Six Parts. Adapted from Hugh Kahler's Story of the Same Title. Director, Marshall Neilan. Cameramen, David Kesson and Karl Struss. Running Time, Sixty-Five Minutes.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Tommy Frazer, Richard Dix; Ann Whittaker, Claire Windsor; Denton Drew, Claude Gillingwater; Tony, Raymond Griffith; Spud Miller, George Siegmann; Blondie Clark, Helen Lynch; Spider Webb, George Dromgold.

Tommy Frazer, brought up in the "gang" surroundings of Hell's Kitchen, is sentenced to a prison term for forgery. Upon his release he meets Ann Whittaker, clerk at a bank. Ann confides to him that she is not averse to making easy money. Together they plan to rob the bank. Ann obtains references whereby Tommy gets a job at the bank. Denton Drew, the banker, has confidence in the two and trusts them implicitly. An unusually heavy deposit is made. Tommy steals the money and meets Ann at the railway station. Then he suddenly decides that he cannot go through with the plot and when he tells Ann he intends to take back the loot, she agrees with him. But the gang with whom he was formerly connected learn of the deposit having been made and when Tommy replaces it, they knock him out and make a getaway with the package. It turns out that the package contains only paper, Denton Drew having arranged the fake as a test for Tommy. When Tommy makes confession to Drew the latter is pleased that in the outcome Tommy proved himself worthy. Tommy is marked for promotion and wins Ann, whose mission all the time has been to help him keep straight.

A picture that is likely to please all admirers of crook melodramas. It is an established fact that movie audiences always take deep interest in a hero who is trying to break away from the sinister influences of the underworld and Tommy Frazer, in the present instance, is a likeable sort of chap who wins everybody's favor from the start and holds it to the finish. While the "doings" of the desperadoes headed by Tony the Wop, a gent who displays grisly dexterity in the use of a knife on various occasions, may seem somewhat lurid occasionally, yet there is no getting away from the thrilling effects achieved, such as the fooling of the detectives by the ruse of manipulating the dead body of one of the gangsters so as to convey the illusion that the deceased is very much alive and actively engaged in a card game. This is but one of the many tense situations which reflect credit upon the directorial skill of Marshall Neilan and dramatic ability of the cast. Fools First gives every indication of winning widespread and well deserved popularity and is worthy the attention of all exhibitors.

Points of Appeal.—The love interest is sympathetically developed, Tommy Frazer's regeneration being brought about in pleasingly natural fashion; there are numerous exciting situations in evidence, a trifle of effective comedy and a good climax is reached.

Cast.—Richard Dix gives a clean-cut, energetic performance in the rôle of Tommy Frazer, Clair Windsor wins all hearts by her sincere, artistic portrayal of Ann Whittaker, Raymond Griffith is tremendously impressive as the sinister, murderous gang leader, Helen Lynch scores as Blondie Clark, Claude Gillingwater is excellent as the philanthropic old banker and well balanced support is rendered by the rest of the company.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—The camera work throughout is of the best quality, including many beautiful exteriors, neat long shots and clever use of deep sets in filming the interiors, with perfect lighting. There is no break in the continuity and fast action prevails.

Her Gilded Cage

Paramount Photoplay in Six Parts. Author, Ann Nichols. Scenario by Percy Heath. Director, Sam Wood. Cameraman, Al Gilks. Running Time, 65 Minutes.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Suzanne Ornoff, Gloria Swanson; Arnold Pell, David Powell; Lawrence Pell, Harrison Ford; Jacqueline Pell, Anne Cornwall; Bud Walton, Walter Hiers; Gaston Petitfils, Chas. Stevenson.

Suzanne and Jacqueline Ornoff, sisters, live in Paris. Jacqueline is an invalid. Suzanne gives piano lessons and poses secretly for Arnold Pell, American artist. He proposes marriage but Suzanne refuses, believing it her duty to stay with Jacqueline. Their uncle, Gaston Petitfils, an elderly beau, impoverished by the war, obtains Suzanne an engagement as cabaret entertainer, where she becomes known as Fleur D'Amour. King Fernando, traveling incognito, visits the cafe and is attracted by Suzanne. A press agent turns this to account by advertising her as the king's favorite. Arnold Pell arrives, recognizes Suzanne and is angered by her supposed preference for the king. Suzanne makes her debut in America, where she scores a big success, but keeps Jacqueline in ignorance of her stage identity. Larry, younger brother of Arnold, becomes interested in the invalid Jacqueline. Later he meets Suzanne and gives a party in her honor. Arnold makes his appearance unexpectedly at the party, denounces Suzanne, whom Larry offers to marry. In a moment of pique Suzanne accepts him, but later tells him she must break the engagement, as she does not love him. In the finale Jacqueline suddenly learns that her sister and Fleur D'Amour are identical. The shock brings the crippled girl to her feet Explanations follow, Arnold is convinced that Suzanne loves him and Larry pays court to Jacqueline.

The best that can be said for Her Gilded Cage is that it is passable entertainment. Here and there the story succeeds in "getting over" a bit of pathos and the comedy relief, thanks to the efforts of that sterling, ever jovial artist, Walter Hiers, tickles the mirthful sensibilities of the audience hugely. But in the main one remains unconvinced by the plot, which lacks logic and suspense. The sequence of events is painfully obvious at times, it is easy to guess that the "shock" which the attending physician hopes may some day restore to the invalid Jacqueline the use of her legs will come in the shape of sudden knowledge that her sister and the supposedly notorious dancer have a common identity and nobody doubts that Suzanne's American lover will eventually be reconciled to her. The picture may be successful in sections where Gloria Swanson's name is of particular drawing value, but it does not measure up to the standard of other productions in which that star has been exploited.

Points of Appeal.—The most telling dramatic effect is attained in the scene where the involuntary announcement that Suzanne is really the much advertised Fleur D'Amour startles Jacqueline into arising from her invalid chair, cured of a paralysis which only existed in her mind. The devices of the resourceful American press agent for exploiting the heroine provide a lot of fun, aided largely by the humorously slangy sub titles employed in connection with those situations.

Cast.—Gloria Swanson, as Suzanne, seems lacking in ability to express the tenderer emotions satisfactorily but wears a number of elaborate costumes which should please feminine patrons. Walter Hiers, as the hustling Yankee press agent, scores a decided hit with his versatile comedy, David Powell has little to do as the artist lover, but does that little well, Anne Cornwall is prettily appealing as the suffering Jacqueline and the support is adequate.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—There are many fine interiors, the banquet scene being particularly well filmed and the lighting is excellent. The continuity is fairly smooth and the action moves without a hitch.

The Prisoner of Zenda

Rex Ingram Production. Released by Metro. Adapted by Mary O'Hara from the Edward Rose Stage Version of Anthony Hope's Novel. Personally Directed by Mr. Ingram. Photographed by John F. Seitz.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Rudolph Rassendyll, King Rudolph, Lewis Stone; Princess Flavia, Alice Terry; Colonel Sapt, Robert Edeson; Duke Michael (Black Michael), Stuart Holmes; Rupert of Hentzau, Ramon Samanyagos; Antoinette de Mauban, Barbara La Marr; Count Von Tarlenheim, Malcolm McGregor; Marsball Von Strakenez, Edward Connelly; Countess Helga, Lois Lee.

Rudolph, new King of Ruritania, awaits coronation. His brother, Black Michael, plans to seize the throne. Rudolph Rassendyll, a youug Englishman, a perfect double of the King, appears on the scene, and is taken to the hunting lodge at Zenda by Colonel Sapt, tbe King's aide, and Count Fritz von Tarlenheim. The King drinks a bottle of wine sent him by Michael and is drugged. Sapt persuades Rassendyll to impersonate the King at the coronation. He meets tbe Princess Flavia and they fall in love with each other. Michael orders the King kidnapped and put in a dungeon. He plans to assassinate Rassendyll. The latter continues his impersonation and announces his betrothal to Flavia. Rassendyll is almost killed by Micbael's hired assassin but recovers, and he, Sapt and Fritz go to Zenda to save the King. Rassendyll fights Michael and his confederates single banded and kills the former. Rupert escapes by leaping into the moat into which the conspirators had planned to throw the King. Rassendyll confesses to Flavia that he is not the King and urges her to return to England with him. She is heartbroken, but decides she must remain with her people. They part and Flavia weds the real King.

The skill that Rex Ingram demonstrated in The Four Horsemen is brought to bear on Anthony Hope's romantic story and the result is a picture far above the average. It moves in the even tempo for which Ingram has become famous. It is photographed with amazing ability; the soft-focus effects that Seitz knows so well how to use are more than merely pleasing to the eye —they become part of the dramatic action.

Decidedly, this is a production of "class." It is done with the good taste that is an inseparable part of real intelligence. In Ingram's hands, the Hope story does not become a cheap melodramatic thriller. Instead, it is a study in romance, with plenty of action, suspense and the thrill that comes from sword-play, but the characterization is stressed and characters sharply defined. There is admirable contrast. The picture has the other elements of box-office success in generous measure, though it does not, of course, carry the power of The Four Horsemen. The total effect is highly pleasing. The spectator leaves the theatre with reluctance: he has been living the story with the players in the romantic kingdom of Ruritania.

Carefully chosen as to type and ability, the cast easily ranks with the best. Lewis Stone, in the dual role of the King and Rassendyll, gives a polished and sympathetic performance of parts that are widely contrasting. The radiant beauty of Miss Terry never shone to better advantage than here. She is Princess Flavia to the life. As Colonel Sapt, Robert Edeson is a sturdy figure, always effective and often brilliant. Many there will be who will regard the work of Stuart Holmes as the best he has done in a long career of screen villainy. The other players are more than adequate.

If your audience wants the mythical kingdom story, here it is, artistically done, and effectively done, in nearly all dramatic respects. The Ingram version of The Prisoner of Zenda is not what is usually called a great picture, but beside the average production it shines with the steady light of the fixed star.

The Bonded Woman

Released by Paramount. Story by John F. Wilson. Scenario by A. S. LeVino. Directed by Philip E. Rosen. Cameraman, J. C. Van Trees.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Angela Gaskell, Betty Compson; John Somers, John Bowers; Lee Marvin, Richard Dix; Captain Gaskell, J. Farrell MacDonald; Lucita, Ethel Wales.

Angela Gaskell's father is captain on board the S. S. Comet. While Angela is awaiting his return she receives news that his ship has gone down. A few hours later John Somers, first mate, brings her father in badly injured. Lee Marvin, wealthy shipowner, is in love with Angela. During her father's illness Angela is forced to seek employment, and asks Marvin to permit her to work in his office. Marvin continues to press his suit, but finds that Angela has lost her heart to the man to whom she is indebted for saving her father's life. Somers' weakness is drinking, and Angela tries to exert a good influence over him. Before leaving on a new voyage he promises to reform. Later a chance comes for Somers to become captain and Angela asks Marvin to give him a tryout. At first jealousy causes Marvin to refuse the request, but he agrees to accept Somers if he can put up bond. Angela and her father feel that it is their chance to repay Somers for his act and mortgage their place to go his bond. Somers takes command of the ship in Australia and brings her safely into port. It is then discovered that the money and papers are missing, and Somers, unable to explain, is accused of the theft. He is discharged and Marvin, with new hopes of winning the love of Angela, refuses to cash the bond. Angela traces Somers to the South Sea Islands and follows him there, where she finds he has fallen back into his old habits. He has managed to buy a small vessel, and Angela demands this in payment of his obligation and also forces him to take orders from her aboard. She is unable to convince him of her love, and not until the ship is purposely wrecked by her is she able to triumph over him. They then return and find Marvin waiting to wish them well and explain that the real thief has been apprehended.

The Bonded Woman, featuring Betty Compson, contains some entertaining material of the highly romantic and tried out variety that seems to win popular favor wherever shown. There is some well placed comedy in the first couple of reels and also the beginning of thrills and suspense that last throughout the story. The picture gets a firm grip on the audience and numerous complications set in to furnish the development of the theme. This production should please in a locality where romance and sentimentality hold sway.

Points of Appeal.—There are many moments of excitement. The storm at sea has been capitally filmed and affords some scenes of real worth. The love story that involves two well liked male leads is of the sort that will appeal of its own accord plus the popularity of the actors. There has been added, as a sort of finale, a dash of the South Sea island atmosphere just for good luck.

Cast.—Betty Compson, as Angela Gaskell, gives a pleasing performance. John Bowers, who does the role of John Somers, is good in his part and does his drunken scenes without being obnoxious. Richard Dix, as Lee Marvin the rejected suitor, makes himself so agreeable that it appears to be a toss-up to see which man the audience prefers to see win out. The supporting cast is good in all of the required roles.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—Fine effects have been obtained for the storm scenes. Some interesting lighting has been used in other parts of the picture. The interiors are appropriate. The exteriors of the island scenes are not as picturesque as they could have been made. The continuity of the story is easily followed and action fairly rapid throughout. Direction good.

When the Devil Drives

Associated Exhibitors Photoplay in Five Parts. Released by Pathe. Author, Leah Baird. Director, Paul Scardon. Cameraman, Charles J. Stumar. Running Time, Fifty-Five Minutes.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Blanche Mansfield, Leah Baird; Grace Eldridge, Arline Pretty; John Graham, Richard Tucker; Robert Taylor, Vernon Steele; Nanette Henley, Katherine Lewis.

When Blanche Mansfield learns that Robert Taylor intends to cast her off and marry Grace Eldridge, she goes to his apartment to remonstrate with him. Taylor proves obdurate to her pleading and Blanche stabs him. She is arrested on a charge of attempted murder, but John Graham, always a devoted admirer fo Blanche, visits Taylor and persuades him not to prosecute the girl. Blanche is released, but the affair is made public in the newspapers and Grace Eldridge breaks her engagement with Taylor. Grace, disillusioned and hating bitterly the woman who has come between her and her former fiancee, engages in settlement work. Blanche, repentant, changes her name and as luck has it, rents an apartment opposite one in which Grace is living. They become acquainted and friendly, neither being aware of the part they have played in each other's lives. On Christmas Eve Graham gives a party in his cabaret to which Taylor comes and is brought face to face with Blanche and Grace. The revelation which follows drives Grace wild with anger and on returning home she shoots Blanche. But Blanche, wounded, appeals for her aid and Grace, repentant and remorseful in her turn, nurses her back to health. The two girls are reconciled, Grace forgives Taylor and Graham wins Blanche.

This picture may be listed as an average program attraction. The plot will not stand the test of careful analyzing, as many of its incidents are unconvincing, giving the impression that the director is inclined to sacrifice the probabilities for the sake of developing exciting situations. The result is that the action appears rather forced at times and the thread of suspense snaps under the strain. Yet despite this fault the interest is fairly well maintained and the film will likely pass muster with audiences not disposed to be too critical. The photography is excellent, the work of principals and supporting cast deserves praise and the gorgeous costumes worn by the feminine members of the company will undoubtedly prove an unfailing lure to patrons of their own sex.

Points of Appeal.—Of the two women in the case, Blanche Mansfield earns the most sympathy because one feels that she is largely the victim of fate and her attempt to kill the man she loves seems rather pardonable under the circumstances. On the other hand the shooting and wounding of Blanche by Grace Eldridge doesn't appear plausible, belonging as she does to a higher stratum of society and not being the sort of person who would be likely to resort to such a revenge. But as Grace gets over her fit of temper, is reconciled to her erstwhile rival and lover and Blanche finds happiness with another suitor, a happy climax is attained and everybody satisfied.

Cast.—Dramatic honors are sharel by Leah Baird, as Blanche, and Arline Pretty is the role of Grace Eldridge, both actresses giving very appealing performances. Vernon Steele's impersonation of that uncertain lover, Robert Taylor, is without a flaw, Richard Tucker wins favor as John Graham and the support is adequate.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—There are some extremely handsome interior sets in evidence and skilful long shots, with splendid lighting effects. The continuity is tolerably smooth and the action moves at a fair pace.

Sign of the Rose

Produced by George Beban. Released by American Releasing Corp. Story by George Beban. Scenario by J. A. Brocklehurst and Carroll Owen. Photographed by Sam Landers. Directed by Harry Garson.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Pietro Balletti, George Beban; Rosa Balletti, Dorothy Giraci; Lillian Griswold, Helen Sullivan; William Griswold, Chas. H. Elder; Dorothy Griswold, Jeanne Carpenter; Philip Griswold, Gene Cameron; Annetta, Louisa Calmenti; Cecil Robins, Stanhope Wheatcroft; Lynch, Arthur Thiasso; Moses Ebstein, M. Solomon.

Philip Griswold, in ueed of immediate cash upon being refused by his brother kidnaps his little niece and holds her for ransom pretending to his brother that an Italian who had delivered a Christmas tree to the house is responsible. Pietro, after purchasing presents for his little girl Rosina returns home to find that she is the victim of William Griswolds car that ran over her as he went in search of the Italian. Philip draws Cecil Robbins, the manager of a flower shop and to whom he is indebted, into the conspiracy and sends a note to Mrs. Griswold to hand over the money to a man wearing a rose. Mrs. Griswold keeps the appointment, accompanied by a detective who takes the place of the manager. Pietro goes for a rose to place on his little girl's grave and is suspected. His plea is disbelieved and he is about to he thrown into jail when Philip, upon learning that his plan has gone amiss, hurries to his brother, claiming to have rescued the little girl from the kidnappers. Pietro is released and tells the story of Rosina's death and the tragic loss of his wife at sea. William Griswold then realizes that it was Pietro's child that he ran over and offers him a large sum of money. Pietro refuses it but accepts a bunch of roses. Philip is feted as a hero at the family Christmas dinner but his conscience forces him to confess. A servant in the house overhears the conversations and it is discovered that she is Pietro's wife who had been saved from drowning at sea as he had thought. They are reunited and with a substantial gift from the Griswolds they start life anew.

The Sign of the Rose is a picture that has apparently been done with exceptionally worthy co-operation on the part of everyone who had anything to do with the production in any way. The story is graphically told and is thoroughly realistic and complete in detail. The plot is plausible enough to bear close scrutinizing and offers material in the style that usually reaches a wide appeal.

Points of Appeal. — There is a great deal of pathos in this story that has been brought out in a very genuine manner, that is to say, sans the time worn glycerine-teared close-ups. George Beban's acting is natural and compelling. The Christmas spirit that supplies a considerable amount of the early material in the story and the legend of Santa Claus will please the children. The automobile accident is, to our mind, one of the best pieces of this sort that has been screened and the cutbacks of the shipwreck are also vividly shown. There are many tense moments throughout and if a tearful audience is any indication of good entertainment value then The Sign of the Rose has it.

Cast. — The especially fine acting of Mr. Beban in his role as Pietro Balletti deserves high praise. His movements and expressions are characteristic and always convincing. Dorothy Giraci, who plays the part of Rosina, does some excellent work. Each member of the cast has contributed his best and the result is absolutely satisfying in every instance.

Photography, Lightnig, Direction.—The exteriors and interiors are suitable to the requirements of the story. Lighting has been done with good effect. The continuity is satisfactory and action usually well developed. However, the last reel of the picture grows slightly wearisome in the long drawn out unravelings and possibly necessary procedure to bring about a happy ending.

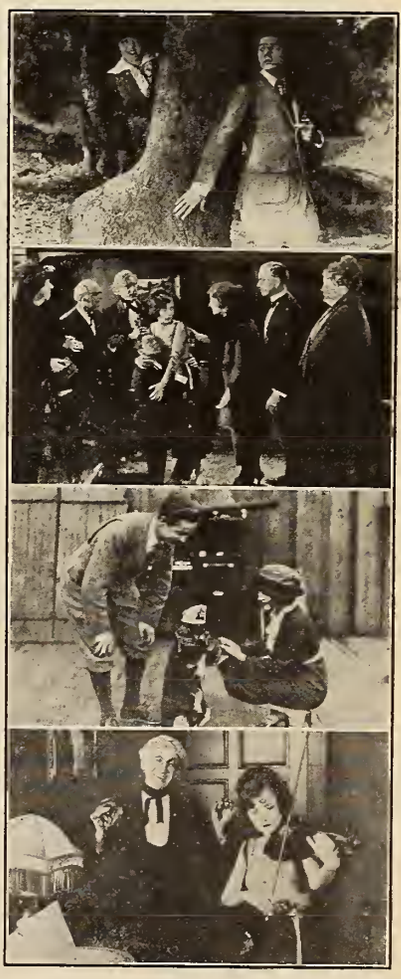
Forget-Me-Not

Metro Photoplay in Six Parts. Author, Henry R. Symonds. Scenario by John Clymer. Director, W. S. Van Dyke. Running Time, Seventy Minutes.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

The Mother, Irene Hunt; The Father, Wm. Machin; The Other Girl, Myrtle Lind; The Musician, Otto Lederer; The Boy, Gareth Hughes; The Girl, Bessie Love.

Poverty compels little Anne's mother to place her baby girl in an orphan asylum and she does so, without revealing her identity. Anne is a cripple and makes friends with a boy orphan with whom she plays. He is finally adopted by a visitor and other orphans also find homes, but Anne is left because of her crippled condition. An organ grinder who is in the habit of playing tunes to amuse the children discovers that all of the little ones except Anne have been taken away. He comes to the asylum and reveals himself as a wealthy man, whose dislike of the world in general had led him to assume a beggar's garb. He adopts Anne and having once been known as a famous musician, he proceeds to instruct the child, who develops into a great violinist. Fifteen years later Anne, who has never forgotten her childhood sweetheart at the asylum, is called upon to play the wedding march at his marriage. It develops that he has been adopted by Anne's mother, who on her return had been unable to find her own child. His wife dies and he wins Anne, who is also restored to her mother.



A very touching picture, replete with heart interest, well photographed and directed, Forget-Me-Not accomplishes exactly what it is intended to do—keep the emotional strings of one's nature vibrating at the highest tension and create an atmosphere of sympathy that never loses its hold on the audience. It is inevitable that in a film of this kind the sentimental wave should occasionally overflood the surrounding, but on the whole it must be admitted that there is but scant excess in this direction. And it must be a truly hardened cynic who could look upon the scenes in the orphan asylum without feeling a poignant pang of pity for the hapless little ones, even in their happiest moments of recreation. The feature will surely win equal favor with old and young. It is intensely human in every detail, provides excellent entertainment, while at the same time exploiting a lesson of charity and good will to suffering fellow creatures and should prove a valuable box office asset.

Points of Appeal—One of the best scenes is that depicting the farewell between the youthful lovers, an episode fraught with deep feeling, that in which Anne electrifies her audience by her wonderful skill in the violin recital is also extremely well staged, the theme of the picture is sad, but the gloom lightens toward the close and happiness reigns supreme for all concerned.

Cast.—Bessie Love, as the orphan girl, Anne, gives a sincere and wonderfully sympathetic interpretation of a very difficult role. Her performance is thoroughly artistic and natural and ranks as one of the best contributions she has yet made to the screen. Gareth Hughes fills the part of The Boy in capable fashion, Otto Lederer plays the kindly musician with fine emotional appeal and Irene Hunt scores heavily in The Mother role.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—The exteriors and interiors are well filmed—in fact the camera work throughout is of the best quality and superb lighting prevails. The continuity is unbroken and the action rapid.

Making the Theatre Pay

Exploiting the Picture

Equipping the Theatre

The spirit and essence of the political campaign expressed with some bunting, a cutout and a banner. John B. Carroll, manager of the Imperial, Asheville, N. C., has produced many fine lobby effects, but it is doubtful if he or any of his colleagues in showmanship have ever designed anything that exceeded in attraction value this lobby for Tom Meighan's Paramount vehicle "Our Leading Citizen." It is one of those "happy" ideas which enabled an exhibitor to spend a little money and a little labor to get a big, smashing effect that on the face of it must have fairly dragged 'em in past the box office.

Exploitorials

A MAN who was regarded wise even before he expressed the opinion, said: "If you have no good reason for doing a thing, you have an excellent reason for not doing it." Conversely, the same sound theory applies. It is for one of the best of reasons that the exploitation and equipment pages of EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW emerge from the press this week in slightly different form—improvement of the service they render by facilitating matters for the reader. The showman is concerned with getting people into his theatre and making them comfortable when they get there. "Exploitation" and "Equipment" are vital factors in making the theatre pay.

SID GRAUMAN is putting Nice People over in bang-up style at his Rialto Theatre in Los Angeles. His campaign thus far has about covered the entire range of exploitation stunts. Tie-ups with an automobile concern and a newspaper, double truck co-operative ads, liberal use of the mails, billboards and advertising columns, all have been worked to the utmost. Result: an extended engagement to capacity houses. A call for Mr. Summer Depression at that house stands unanswered.

THE most rigid of rules has its breaking point. Thus First National's policy of refraining from mention of names of its personnel gives way before the performance of Al Sobler, exploiteer in Louisville. Al staged a home-talent movie that put The Crossroads of New York over in Louisville with a real punch, and then repeated the stunt in Lexington. First National could not resist the urge to crow over Sobler's work. Crow they did, and with due justification say we.

FASHION shows have demonstrated their value to the exhibitor. Their appeal to the public and the low cost through co-operation with a fellow business man make them desirable. Even so, it took imagination to hit upon the idea of a fashion tie-up with Nanook of the North. The Mark Strand Theatre, Albany, put the idea into practice. A local fur merchant displayed his select stock on "New York models" as a prologue to the Eskimo film, and big houses throughout the run are reported.

TOM KENNEDY.

Keith House Exploits "Nanook" in Brooklyn

A cutout that bordered the entire marquee was designed as an outside display. Thermometers were the main feature of this painting, the entire force of the attraction being directed at the hot weather angle.

A cake of ice with an Eskimoo doll frozen in was used as advance publicity for the showing of Pathe's "Nanook of the North" and during the run of the feature the lobby was profusely decorated with Eskimo curios and display frames

When B. F. Keith's Prospect Theatre in Brooklyn booked the Pathe feature, Nanook of the North, Joseph F. Mead, of the Keith Staff did not overlook a bet in exploiting the production.

On the marquee of the theatre cut-outs were built, Arctic and torrid scenes were shown, with an Eskimo, or a native of our own regions, pointing to a thermometer on one side of him showing the temperature outside of the theatre to be 90 degrees, and the thermometer on the other side of him to be 70 degrees, registering the temperature inside of the theatre.

To register the ice-cold impression, in the lobby near the box-office, an Eskimo doll was shown frozen in a huge cake of ice, and a placard announced: "I will appear in Nanook of the North." The lobby was also converted into a Museum, displaying curios collected by Robert J. Flaherty while making the picture.

Before the picture was thrown on the screen, an original prologue was presented. A man appeared, garbed in the furry clothing of an explorer and told the audience many interesting things about the picture.

Completes "Crossroads" Stunt

Tieups with the Street Cleaning Department and the Police Department are formidable enterprises which go to the credit of Manager Loverage and enabled him to acquaint Davenport, Iowa, with his showing of First National's "The Crossroads of New York." The insert shows the mailing piece used in the campaign.

The Crossroads of New York, Mack Sennett's offering through First National, sported a new line of exploitation during its run at the Capitol Theatre, Davenport, Iowa, managed by John Loveridge. The crossroads sign stunt was consummated to its logical conclusion because the manager actually completed a tie-up with the police department by which he was permitted to place a certain number of his signs: "Mack Sennett's Crossroads of New York, Capitol," at prominent intersections, and had them worked as traffic semaphores by real cops.

From the mailing list angle of the campaign, Manager Loveridge delved into the plot of the picture. He used circulars both for general distribution and mailing. One read, "BUY 100 shares Special motors at market. Deliver any time next week to the Capitol Theatre"; taking the cue from the frenzied scenes of the stock exchange shown in the picture.

There were other unusual features used. One was the tie-up with the street cleaning department that got a card for The Crossroads of New York on every implement and truck used by the department.

Extended Engagement

Manager J. M. Edgar Hart put over a neat stunt in exploiting Beyond the Rocks for the Palace Theatre, El Paso, Tex. He booked the picture for a week and announced it for a three-day run. He sent out 5000 Postal Service telegrams addressed on the outside to O. Peepin. All that these cost him was the printing, because the Postal People saw the chance to advance their own game, and had their own messengers deliver them to the homes of El Paso people. The telegram was a message from the director of theatres of Texas, praising the picture and predicting that it would break all records.

For three days the Palace played to capacity business, and Wednesday afternoon 5000 more of these telegrams went out, addressed to R. U. Koming, announcing that, inasmuch as the picture had broken all records during the run, the management had been fortunate enough to be able to hold the picture for the remainder of the week.

By breaking the week up with these stunts, interest was sustained through the week.

Money Bag Stunt

A four-million-franc sack was placed outside the Empire Theatre, Syracuse, N. Y., before the house began its run of Pilgrims of the Night.

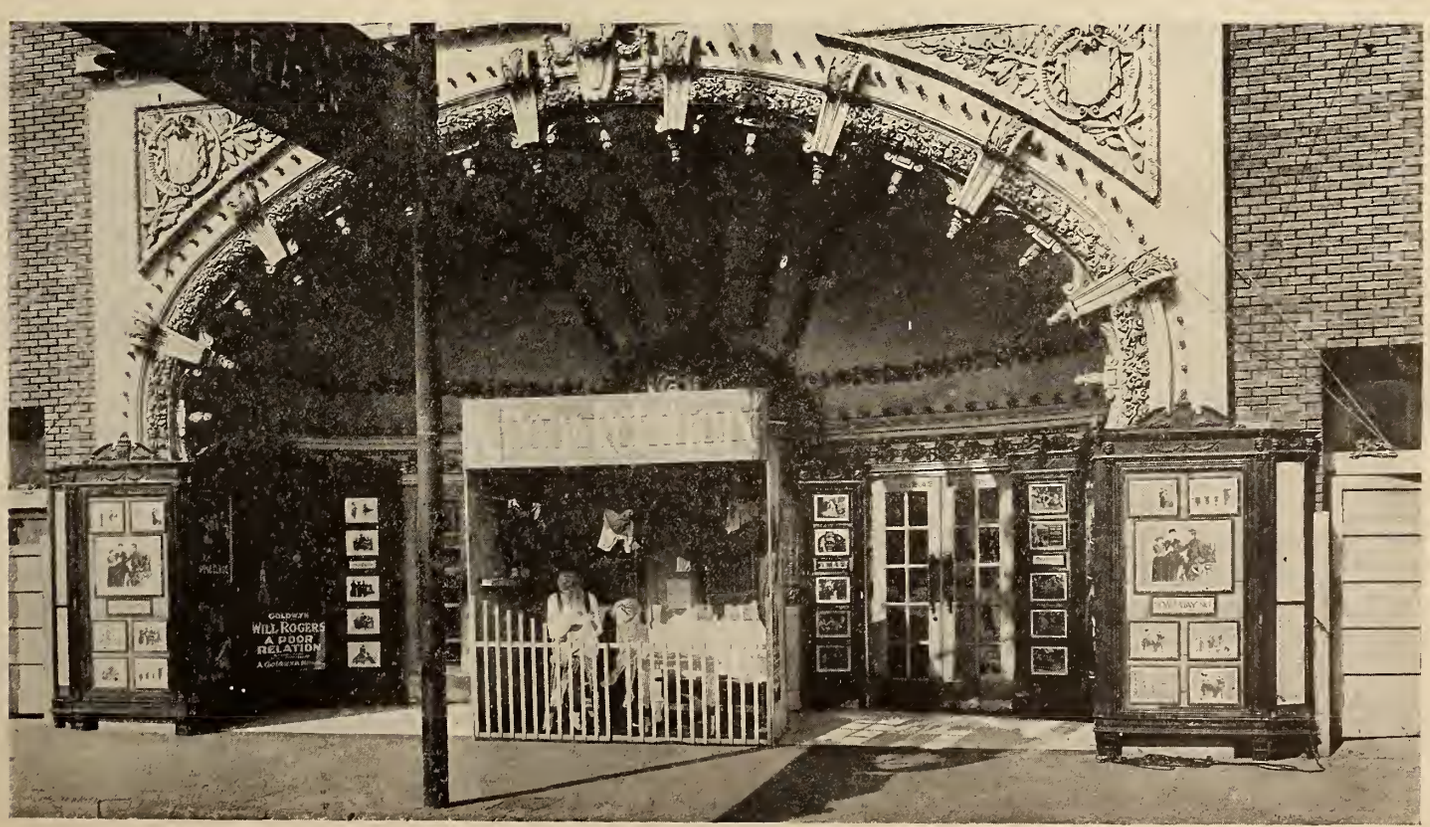
The sack had been carefully measured and its capacity estimated so that the manager was justified in labeling it: "This six-foot sack would hold the 4,000,000 francs stolen from the French sub-treasury in Pilgrims of the Night coming here next week."

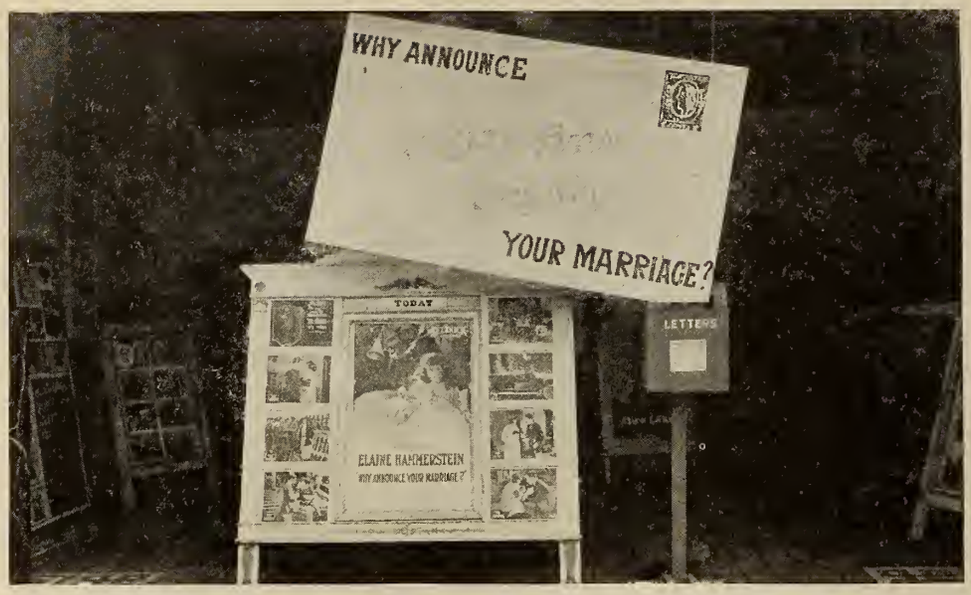
It didn't say anything about a man carrying away a sack of that size weighted down with coins, but asked the question: "How was it stolen" The air of mystery helped the novel lobby display.

Scenes That Sell

Made of Posters and Some Compo Board

The paper gotten out by film producers supplies the means wherewith the exhibitor may reproduce a life-like and attractive scene from the picture for display purposes. The illustration above shows the effective use of the cutout display by the Liberty Theatre, Portland, Ore., in connection with First National's "Trouble." Below is another good example. A tenement interior gotten up by the Hippodrome, Ft. Worth, Tex., for the Goldwyn play "A Poor Relation."





This lobby arrangement had the desired effect in attracting notice to Selznick's "Why Announce Your Marriage?" when it played at the Rialto Theatre, Augusta, Ga. The large envelope and the letter box were painted cardboard. This feature was the central attraction, the balance of the display being made up of display frames.

Wholesale billboarding was an important feature of the campaign for Universal's "Foolish Wives" when it played the Adams Theatre, Detroit, as illustrated by this complete blanketing of a four-story building in the downtown district.

A delivery auto, bannered glaringly for Paramount's "The Good Provider," was the means used to get the picture theatre before the public when a circus parade was staged in Provo, Utah. The car brought up the rear of the parade and succeeded in attracting attention to the film that was in competition with the circus.

Effect Big Tie-up

A nation-wide tie-up has just been effected by the Paramount publicity department with the Mallory Hat Company, Inc., of New York, in connection with the forthcoming release of William de Mille's production, Nice People.

The Mallory people are going to open their fall retail sales campaign with an advertising smash run in the rotogravure sections of fifteen leading newspapers on Sunday, Sept. 3. The advertisement will consist of a quarter-page display dominated by a portrait of Wallace Reid, who heads the all-star cast of the de Mille production.

This advertisement will appear on the very day of the day and date release of Nice People, Sept. 3. The newspapers to be used are the Los Angeles Times, San Francisco Chronicle, Chicago Tribune, Louisville Courier-Journal, Des Moines Register, Baltimore American, Boston Herald, Detroit News, Minneapolis Tribune, St. Louis Post-Dispatch, Omaha Bee, Buffalo Courier, New York Times, Cincinnati Commercial-Tribune and Cleveland Plain Dealer.

In addition to this newspaper space, the advertisement will run in quarter-page size in the Saturday Evening Post and also in the September issue of the American Magazine.

The Mallory company is also getting out a four-page folder, fifteen thousand copies of which are to be sent to Mallory dealers, and four thousand window cards. These window cards are to be sent to dealers wherever the picture is to be shown, with instructions to the dealers to tie up directly with the theatres in window displays.

Lourie's Campaign

Jacob Lourie, owner of the Beacon Theatre, worked out one of the cleverest exploitation stunts that has been seen in Boston for the run of that great horse story by Zane Grey, When Romance Rides.

He turned his lobby into a judge's stand, the structure being built around the box office. At either side of the window he placed blackboards on which results of all races were announced as soon as received. This idea was continued inside also, all starts being thrown on the screen by slides.

Not satisfied with all this he had an eye to the patronage of the National Educational Association, thousands of delegates of which were attending a convention there. Lourie hung a huge banner from his flag pole on the fourth story of the building bearing the inscription "Welcome N. E. A." From the top of the judge's stand, which had white walls and red tiled roof, he strung thousands of tiny red, white, and blue, pennants in every direction to the top of lobby walls. As a final touch he put a four foot cut-out of a horse's head over the stand, and fastened cut-outs of the stars on black lattices placed against all sides of the square lobby pillars. Ushers and ticket sellers were garbed in bright colored silk jockey suits.

A Stunt That Played to the Grandstand

The line-up on the Tacoma Speedway for the Rialto Theatre's "Across the Continent" stunt.

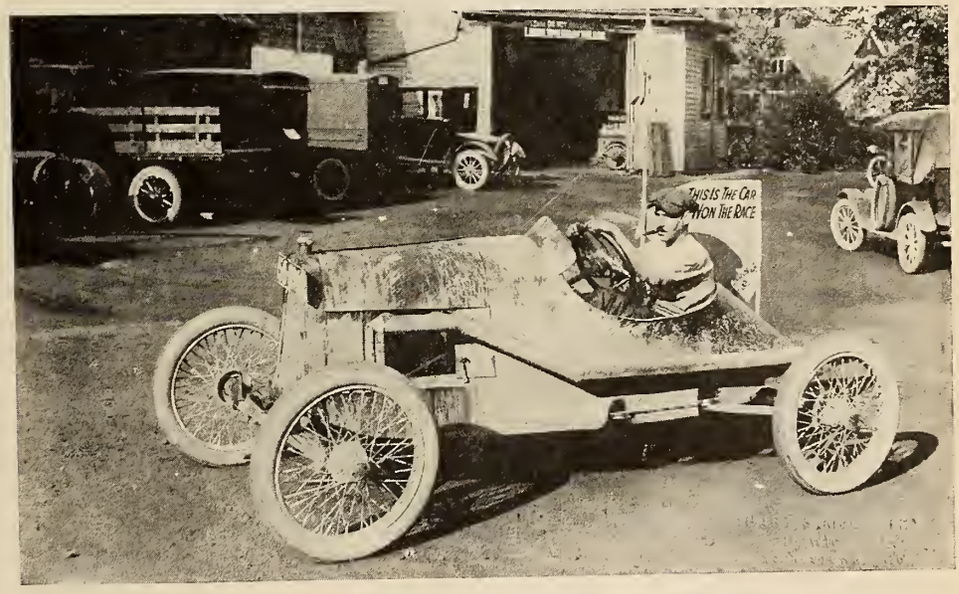
The old timers had gathered at the Tacoma Speedway for the Eleventh Annual Motor Classic and were looking for the Duesenberg Specials, Frontenacs, and Peugeots.

Instead of this glittering array of powerful machines, out into the track sputtered old "999," built by Henry Ford ages ago for Barney Oldfield, and at the wheel sat Barney.

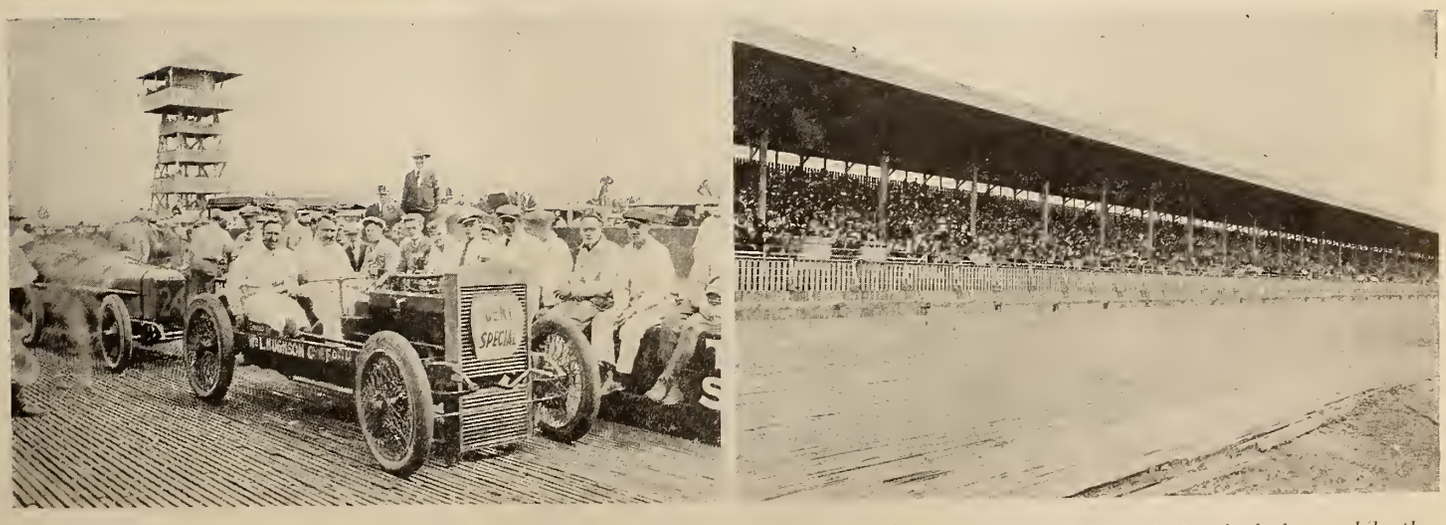
The fourth entry was a "Dent," which caused the puzzled brows to wrinkle further. "We ain't never heard tell of that one," was the consensus. If they had visited the Rialto Theatre that evening, they would have identified it with the car driven by Wallace Reid in "Across the Continent."

Programs were distributed among the twenty thousand in the grandstand announcing the "Across the Continent" race with Wallace Reid.

This freak race was the exploitation of the Rialto Theatre, one of the Jensen and Von Herberg string.



A "Dent" special was built as a ballyhoo for the showing of Paramount's "Across the Continent." The Jensen and Von Herberg house used this to good purpose in building up enthusiasm for the Wallace Reid race thriller.



Barney Oldfield, the most spectacular of race stars, participated. On the right is a section of the grandstand that looked on while the Rialto Theatre staged its freak race.

Lobby display and house front arranged by management of the Fort Armstrong Theatre, Rock Island, Ill., when D. W. Griffith's "Orphans of the Storm," a United Artists release, was played.

A specially painted 24-sheet hung up over the entrance of Gordon's Olympia, Boston, as a front display in connection with the showing of Pathe's "Nanook of the North."

A crowd of youngsters large enough to make a good sized parade turned out for the special matinee of Paramount's "The Bachelor Daddy" at the Liberty, Youngstown, Ohio. Manager C. W. Deibel's announcement of a performance for the children of a fresh air camp was taken up by the newspapers which made a plea for automobiles to transport the children and a big parade was the outcome.

Shows Church Slides

In line with his policy of building up good will toward his picture house from every possible angle, Manager E. Metzger of The Strand Theatre, Creston, Iowa, has adopted a plan of showing slides on Saturdays announcing the services to be held in the churches of Creston on the following day, according to one of the correspondents of Associated First National Pictures.

One of Mr. Metzger's mottoes is, "The only way to make friends is to let people know what you are like." Acting on this motto, he began by inviting ministers to attend pre-release showings of his pictures and asked for criticisms from them.

While attending a special showing of a picture at the Strand one afternoon one of the ministers commented on the value to local merchants of slides advertising their goods. "Why wouldn't it be a good plan to announce our Sunday services on the screen every Saturday evening?" He asked. Mr. Metzger said it would be a fine plan and offered to show the slides gratis.

Displays Treasure

Knowing the lure of buried treasure, F. J. Miller put a safety box, the kind express messengers used to use, in the lobby of the Rialto at Augusta, Ga., and half covered it with sand. This was for Yellow Men and Gold, carrying out the idea of the search for buried treasure in that picture. The box was filled with rocks, which were gilded over to represent gold nuggets.

The display was almost covered by a large pile of sand and a narrow strip of batting around the edge of the sand pile kept it from scattering all over the floor.

Cut-Out Display

William W. Hays, manager of the Grand Theatre at Dallas, Texas, used a very attractive cut-cut for showing Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight?

Manager Hays built a miniature stage, placed a cut-out of the mother of the picture in back of his proscenium opening. An old fashioned oil lamp was placed in the window, the wick having been replaced by a small electric bulb. White carnations were used to tie the display up with Mothers' Day. The cost of the display was only $4.00. Mr. Hays did the whole job himself, including the hand lettering, and with large increased box office receipts.

Novelty for Lobbies

Cosmopolitan Productions have arranged to use some novel lobby displays in connection with the first-run showings of The Young Diana, Marion Davies' new picture. Large ornamented gilt frames, holding twelve 11 x 14 colored photgraphs, have been made. The photographs are transparent and have the appearance of glass, although they are non-breakable. Each frame is wired, so that the colored transparent photographs are beautifully illuminated.

The first frame will be installed in either the Rialto or Rivoli Theatre, where the pre-release showing will be made.

Rea's Campaign Hit the Bull's Eye

Well Planned It Included Contests, Parades, Special Matinee and Merchant Tie-ups That Resulted in Good Business at Forum and Orpheum Theatres

There have been My Boy contests galore; but the Forum and Orpheum Theatres, of Hillsboro, Ohio, not only put the printed story of their successful exploitation on paper; but produced the evidence. Both houses are under the management of Rea and Rea (comprising the former vaudeville team of Mr. and Mrs. George Rea), and they played My Boy on succeeding days.

A big cut-out of Jackie adorned Rea's auto during the run of First National's "My Boy"

The management had their contest for the best impersonators of Jackie -Coogan; and when all the returns were in and counted they had 150 youngsters, headed by a big Jackie Coogan cut-out, marching up Main Street. The parade was so large and unwieldy they couldn't stop at the chief street intersection for a photograph but had to march on to the outskirts of town at a quiet square where the grass grew undisturbed and automobiles didn't rush by at the rate of more than two a minute.

Merchant tie-ups played a big part in the campaign. A confectioner introduced a My Boy sundae and a restaurant blossomed out with a My Boy salad. The exhibitors also took advantage of the fact that they were getting the picture direct after its first run in Cincinnati and advertised it under the slogan: "My Boy—From the Strand, Cincinnati, to the Forum, Hillsboro, In One Week."

The impersonation contest—free admission was offered to all kids who presented themselves at the theatre dressed up as Jackie Coogan—was tied up with an "Old Clothes" campaign. The old clothes were afterwards left at the office of the newspapers co-operating and distributed among worthy charities.

A special matinee was arranged for the youngsters at the Highland County Country Home and this was preceded by a parade of all the young star's impersonators, the feature being Jane Lepley, who won one of the prizes by her daring appearance in male attire. Even the local censor didn't kick but was forced to simulate a reluctant grin as he watched the proceedings.

Champions a Patron

Arthur L. Skinner, manager of the Victoria, Buffalo, is boosting one of his patrons who has entered the Good Will contest in which women winners will be given trips to France by the Committee for the Restoration of Devastated France. Mr. Skinner is aiding C. Anna Nolan, cashier for the Dold Packing Company. He is showing films of conditions in the war zone.

"Rent Free"

Charlotte, N. C., Imperial Theatre, Ray Beall, Mgr.

Manager Beall played Rent Free at the Imperial, to an increased business of at least fifteen per cent and his exploitation didn't cost a fortune, either.

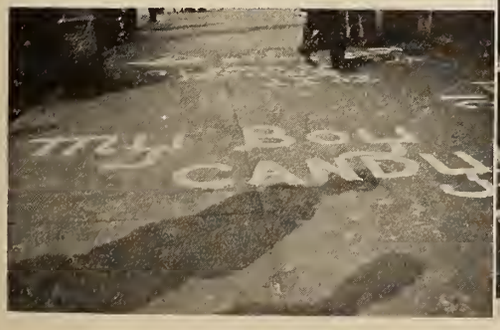
He printed a thousand cards with the two words, Rent Free, and distributed them freely over town, tacked to telephone poles, vacant buildings, fences, etc. It so happened that one of these, in a hotel window, attracted the attention of a passerby who entered the hotel, demanding rent free in that room. The newspaper story which resulted, of course, added momentum to the advertising of the picture.

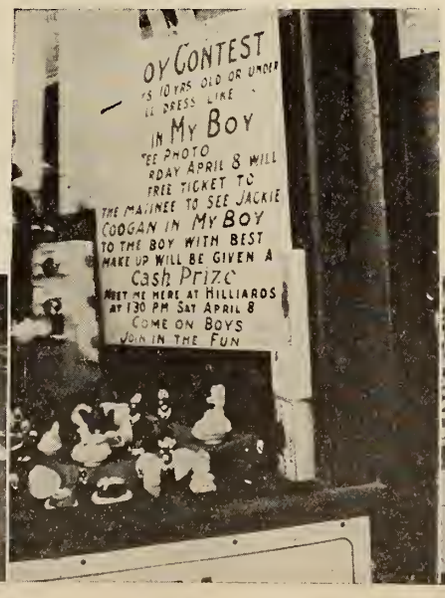
For a week ahead of playdate, Beall invaded the Classified and Real Estate columns of the Charlotte Observer with catchlines of "Rent free; watch this space daily" and others equally engaging. During the run of the picture, he had a banner on sides, front and back of the Charlotte street cars with the legend "Wallace Reid in Rent Free now playing at Imperial Theater.

Model Tieup

Grand Junction, Col.—The Gem Theatre and the Daily Sentinel have come together for a ten-day tieup beginning during the run of the Bachelor Daddy, which is a model of a fifty-fifty proposition.

Each day the Sentinel publishes a coupon. Readers are supposed to clip each coupon and present it at the Gem Theatre each day when they purchase admissions. After the tenth coupon has been handed in the reader-patron may ask for an autographed picture of his or her favorite Paramount star.





Hillsboro, Ohio, knew George Rea was playing First National's "My Boy" simply because every way they turned was a sign, a window or something, that told the tale. A campaign such as he used will bring the stay-at-homes out nearly every time. Try it and see

What's in a Name?—Exploitation

SHAKESPEARE was the first one to ask the question (sc. "Romeo and Juliet" Act II Sc. II), and the query he instigated had been given a comedy tone until the motion picture industry came along.

Since that time the question is a momentous one in the realization that the name of a picture means dollars and cents at the box office.

Pictures have had their title changed 24 hours before release on the supposition that the substitution would bring more returns to the exhibitor.

However much, however, the producer may do to provide a magnetic title he cannot fill the place of exhibitors over 9000 or more square miles of country who know the likes and dislikes, prides and prejudices of every community.

The factors that enter into consideration in the ultimate selection of a title are too many to be outlined at length. We have the simplest kind of a problem in the case of Smilin' Through which was a title that was not only extensively advertised and popularized by the stage play, but it offered exhibitors tieups in connection with the song which has been responsible for almost 1000 window displays to date. The two words supplied a slogan that has been used effectively by Chambers of Commerce, Rotary Clubs, telephone companies, traffic organizations and other civic bodies.

"The Rosary" and "Smilin' Through" offered song tieups.

Likewise there was never any question of retaining Penrod as the title for the Marshall Neilan picture. The name was a byword throughout the country, almost a national synonym for irrepressible American boyhood and the ready made tieup with clothing stores and book shops made it a desirable title.

The same is true of Sonny, Richard Barthelmess' latest picture in a slightly lesser degree. The one word epitomizes all that mother love constitutes. It has come to be a hailing word in places where the picture has been shown—a cheery greeting from the older generation to the male members of the younger; and it has helped at the box-office.

We could mention scores of others: The Rosary was a ready made "seller" through the value of association with the song; East Is West will be another through association with the play.

The Crossroads of New York it is generally known was adopted as a title at almost the last moment because it afforded a chance for adequate street and window display with the use of crossroad signs, that its former title might have had to forego.

It is the exhibitor's knowledge of local conditions that will reduce the message contained in the title to terms that will please and interest. It may be a ballyhoo, a window display, a civic movement in which he co-operates or a lobby front. The best the producer can do—and what far-seeing producers are trying to do—is to make their wares as attractive as possible to the public; but it is the exhibitor who must display them to their best advantage, because he alone knows how to do it in his community—the territory over which he is supreme.

Plans Reunion

George Williams, manager of the Linden Theatre Buffalo, is planning a real old fashioned show in which all the old employes who worked with him 20 years ago at a Main street theatre will take part. Old pictures, songs, slides and projection machines will be used. Mrs. Watson, mother of the famous Watson sisters, will sing.

"Smilin' Through" supplied a slogan that has been used effectively by Chambers of Commerce, traffic organizations and other civic bodies. Likewise there was never any question of retaining "Penrod," the ready made tieup with clothing stores and book shops made it a desirable title. The same is true of "Sonny"—a cheery greeting from the older generation to the male members of the younger.

Equipping the Theatre

Organ Vibrations Not a Danger

Old Propaganda Bobs Up Again, But Engineers' Reports Refute Claim That Heavy Organ Tones Weaken Structure of Buildings

PERHAPS you have seen the recent full-page article appearing in numerous daily newspapers, entitled "When Death Played the Organ; How Musical Vibrations Are Believed to Have Sent the Washington Theatre Roof Crashing Down." A ghastly drawing of a skeleton sitting at the console of the modern organ illuminated the article. It was intended to scare theatre goers and is one of the most vicious of the many unfounded theories which scare-head-line writers have tried to put over.

It may have kept some weak-kneed persons out of the theatre; and it may not have kept a single soul away.

However, what are the facts concerning the Knickerbocker Theatre disaster, and do they support the sensation writer's claims? The article says:

"And now science is of the opinion that this disaster with its heavy toll of human life, was due to the fact that Death played the organ on this fatal evening—that Death's bony fingers pressed the keys in what became a funeral hymn for so many of those who sat there listening, all unconscious of danger.

"It is believed that the collapse of the Knickerbocker Theatre roof was the direct result of the booming notes of the organ selection which preceded it. Some hidden defect in the great spread of steel and concrete—a defect which, under ordinary conditions might never have done any harm—was aggravated in the first place by the added weight of a heavy snowfall. Then came the atmospheric vibrations set in motion by the powerful notes that poured from the organ's pipes to add to the strain on this point of weakness."

Investigations conducted by Government authorities and a number of competent engineering and architectural bodies entirely refute the writer's claim. As eminent an authority on architecture as the Architectural Record declares that regardless of the presence of a heavy snow on the roof, it was destined some time or other to fall. Organ vibration had nothing to do with it.

Allowances are made to-day in the structure of all buildings for vibration. Vibration comes from many sources, and the organ provides less vibration than any other feature that may be installed in a building. Vibration which does issue from an organ does not weigh upon the roof.

The findings of a board of engineers in Washington gives twenty-one causes for the failure of the Washington theatre roof, none of which attribute the disaster to organ vibration. In brief, the engineers' report found as follows:

Use of tile walls to carry heavy concentrated loads.

The unusual height and length of the unsupported tile wall on Columbia Road.

Lack of a column with knee brace or pilasters under the main truss at the wall.

Inadequate bearings of beams on the tile wall with small bearing plates, regarded as particularly important in connection with the "skew" bearings.

Absence of concrete fill in the tile at beam bearings with wall bearing plates on edges of tiles.

Insufficient anchorage of steel to walls.

Roof slab too thin for span and loading and insufficient steel reinforcement.

Absence of restraint at sides of roof slabs.

Ceiling load concentrated in center of roof slab.

Short bearing of main truss on lintel, and truss not stiffened for bearing.

Absence of bracing between steel members, and particularly at ends of main truss.

No stiffness in connection of main truss to column.

Use of bolts instead of rivets on all field connections and insufficient bolts at truss connections.

Column top and splices not milled.

Reinforcing steel in roof slab was not raised over the beams to take negative bending over supports.

No evidence of increase of enforcement in end panels of slabs.

Heavy load of nine and one-half inches of cinder concrete fill at center of drainage ridge.

Loads of ventilating equipment where cinder fill occurred and absence of special bracing to take vibration.

Defective detailing as witnessed by absence of splices for chord and end post cover plates.

All tile not hard burned and some had scant webs and walls, notably at top of Columbia Road wall.

Insufficient bonding between front and back tile in Columbia Road wall.

Summer Music

Reports from various parts of the country indicate that the movement to dispense with expensive orchestras in favor of theatre organs has been quite general during the summer.

Where it has been impossible to cut out the orchestra entirely the size has been reduced and many houses will undoubtedly go through the season with smaller orchestras.

Organ companies report that the sale of instruments of all sizes and types has been active during the summer, which would also indicate the return of the picture to its original companion—the theatre organ.

Recent organ installations of note are the Rialto Theatre, New York City (Wurlitzer); Capitol Theatre, Pittsfield, Mass. (Marr & Colton); Orpheum. Oshkosh, Wis. (Barton); Forest Hills, N. Y. (Smith Unit); Fairfax Theatre, Miami, Fla. (Robert-Morton).

It is interesting to note also that the new Eastman Theatre in Rochester has 19 organs.

Building Notes

George W. Hewitt Construction Co. was awarded the contract for the construction of the four-story film exchange building at Dallas, Tex., and the work of excavation has commenced. The cost of the building will approximate $250,000. The building will be constructed with strict regard to fireproof features, and a recurrence of the disastrous fire of last spring will be impossible in this building. Space in the building has been leased to ten film exchanges. The building will be completed in six months, it is believed.

The New National Theatre at Mexia, Tex., will open for business in the near future. The new Liberty Theatre at Nashville, Ark., opened to pleased capacity business last week. The Ro Nile Theatre has opened at Highland Park, Dallas, Tex.

The Star Theatre at Houston, Tex., was partially destroyed by fire. Loss estimated at about $10,000.

The Majestic Theatre at Allen, Okla., has been sold by Clint Butler to C. E. Armstrong and V. C. Randolph, who have taken charge.

The Peoples Theatre at Beaumont, Tex., has closed down for the summer, assigning poor business as the cause.

Notable progress is being made on the new motion picture theatre on West Main Street, near Badger Avenue, Endicott, N. Y. The house, which is being built by the Elvin Theatre Company, is of tile, brick and steel. The steel framework is in place and most of the tile laid. The seating capacity will be about 1200, or about a third more than the present Lyric Theatre on Washington Avenue. It will be completed, according to present plans, by Sept. 1.

During the installation of the big Wurlitzer organ in the Elmwood Theatre, Buffalo, the house will not close, as at first announced. Presentations will continue during the "putting in" process, according to Bruce Fowler, managing director. The Elmwood will dispense with its orchestra when the organ is ready, about Sept. 1.

The Schick Opera House at Plainview, Tex., has been sold.

John D. Jones and Frank Roberts are now the owners of the Palace and Lyric theatres at San Angelo, Tex., buying these interests from the Southern Enterprises.

The Orpheum, Okmulgee, Okla., has installed a new cooling system that cools. A giant blower and twenty oscillating fans will circulate iced washed air throughout the house. The system will use about 500 pounds of ice daily, and the big blower will force the cool air through the mushroom ducts in the floor. A six-foot exhaust fan will be placed on either side of it to assist in the air distribution.

MOST everybody runs a news weekly, but how many men know the anonymous workers who record the events and thrills that make your program scintillate? We mean the cameramen who travel the four quarters of the globe in search of material for the screen. Like newspaper reporters they are concealed behind anonymity.

In past issues we have told of the organization and work of the Pathe and International News Weeklies. This week the staff of Selznick News demands our attention. The article is not only of interest to the industry but is of especial use to the theatre exploiteer who can cut out this page and make an attractive frame of it in his lobby.

The public likes to hear about adventurous daredevils and there is not a more romantic set of soldiers of fortune than the news and free lance cameraman.

Larry Darmour, editor of Selznick News, was formerly editor of the Gaumont News which old timers will recall. The production is in charge of Myron Selznick and David Selznick, his brother, assists.

The men who gather the strips that make up the complete reel are a varied sort. One specializes in climbing steeples for new and novel views; another uses his suave personality to get important personages to pose. Another plays his luck strong and just tries to be where big things are happening. The sum total of their efforts takes form in the News Weekly which has become as much a part of complete program units as the comedy. The world is their field. To-day they are on Broadway "shooting" a parade; to-morrow they are off to Alaska.

Simple Instructions Sufficient for Any Intelligent Operator

THERE is no "joker" in the selection of a Cremona Orchestra-Organ. No trained pipe organist at a fancy salary is necessary. Any girl or man, after simple instructions, can operate the Cremona with most enchanting results.

But even more interesting, perhaps, to the average exhibitor is the fact that organ and orchestra music is available without the services of any operator. This is an assurance easily appreciated where the house personnel overhead is limited.

Features not obtainable in any other instrument are built into the Cremona. It cannot be excelled for manual operation. The double roll system permits using cue sheets player roll with operator or by solo organ roll without operator. The double roll system permits using cue sheets and instant change from one to the other.

Recent features, even more firmly establishing superiority, have been developed. Every exhibitor not wholly satisfied with the appeal his music has, should investigate the Cremona Orchestra-Organ.

Hartsoe has been operating the North Newton Theatre for a little more than three years and his business heretofore has been in a wooden building. He hopes to be in his new place not later than August 1. The house is to have the very best ventilation possible. He will use two Powers' projectors and a Minusa screen.

William P. Taylor, until recently employed by the Southern Theatre Equipment Co. of Memphis, also Exhibitors Supply Co. of St. Louis, Mo., is now a member of the force of Argus Enterprises, Inc. at Denver, Colorado. "Bill," as he is universally known, is a past master at the art of repairing machines of all makes and also a man who is well versed in projection from every standpoint.

The new theatre building erected by the M. O. Parker Construction Co. at Robstown, Tex., has been completed and will be opened at an early date. E. E. Elliott of Corpus Christie, Tex., has leased the theatre and will operate it.

The Chamberlain Amusement Co., owners of theatres at Shamokin, Pa.; Tamaqua, Pa.; Bloomsburg, Pa.; Lewisburg, Pa., and Mt. Carmel, Pa., has awarded the contract for its new $300,000 theatre at Mt. Carmel to Percy Swank.

The M. E. Comerford Amusement Co., running sixty-five theatres in northern Pennsylvania and southern New York, and with headquarters at Scranton, has paid $40,000 for land at the corner of Price and Maine streets, West Scranton, Pa. The Comerford interests will erect a large new theatre on the land this fall.

The Cozy Theatre and Cozy Studio have been completed at Merkel, Tex., at a cost of $38,000. The new building is 60 by 145 feet in dimensions. The corner space, with additional measurement of 32 by 140, is utilized by the theatre, which has a seating capacity of 600. In the piano pit, which is screened off with a lattice music rack, is a Wurlitzer organ, which is supplemented by an automatic xylophone and Deagan Symphony bells. The theatre is fireproof and has two elaborate emergency exits.

O. P. Elkins, operating a string of theatres in Oklahoma and Texas, has annexed the Electric Theatre at Rocky, Okla., which will be refurnished.

Amid—

thunder, lightning, rain and hail

ON ONE OF THE HOTTEST DAYS SINCE 1883—

The record for the RIVOLI was smashed to pieces!

ON August 7th New York's millions sweltered in the heat of one of the most oppressive days in years. The official temperature was 81, the average for 33 years was 73. And at two o'clock a terrific hail storm broke out, continuing all afternoon.

But undaunted by the rain and hail, thousands stood in front of the Rivoli all day long, waiting to buy tickets for "Blood and Sand".

The paid attendance for Monday was 8,587. The biggest Monday in history hitherto—and this was in the winter—was 7,977.

There is a record if there ever was one!

It means that "Blood and Sand" is the biggest box-office attraction ever released. It means that the critics were right when they said:—

"The greatest picture ever made"..... N. Y. Telegraph
"One of life's great moments"..... N. Y. Herald
"Makes Valentino the idol of America. Crowds cried 'Bravo'"... N. Y. Tribune
"The most exciting and colorful film of the year"..... N. Y. Globe

And dozens of other superlative comments too abundant to print.

EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW

Why Not Your Town, Too?

EVERY key city in the country, every town of any size, for that matter, ought to have a "Go-to-the-Movies" Week.

Why?

Because it will open the new season with a rush. It will definitely stage the business come-back of the industry. It will show the public that we believe in ourselves, our product, our theatres, our future. It will mean much in capturing additional good-will, and that means more patrons at the box-office.

The Northwest with Minneapolis as a center is doing it. "Go-to-the Movies" Week opens there August 26. Every branch of the industry is co-operating. Des Moines and Milwaukee are getting busy. Atlanta will follow a little latter. Other cities have tried the idea. It has always worked. We have yet to hear of a failure.

WHAT does the plan imply?

Co-operative advertising; tie-ups with merchants; official recognition by state and city; parades; slides; posters; exploitation stunts;—any method of publicity that will arouse the public successfully and legitimately, and bring to all the theatres in a given territory increased business and prestige.

The organization of such a movement ought not to be difficult. Committees composed of exhibitors and exchangemen, working in co-operation with civic bodies, should be formed. That is the method being followed already in a number of key centers. Agreement can be made on a date at which the new season should be formally inaugurated. In some territories it will be the end of August. In others the first or second week in September, according to local conditions. Whatever the date, it ought to be fixed—and fixed soon—by an exchange-exhibitor committee, in the key cities, and by co-operative exhibitor committees at points distant from distribution centers.

Where exhibitor organizations exist, the plan can be handled on a state or zone basis. That is what is being done in Minnesota, in Iowa, in Georgia.

IT'S a national proposition, capable of being adapted to any locality. It's practical. It's a builder of good-will, of box-office receipts, of confidence, of co-operation.

It's a job in which every branch of the industry can play a vital part. So we say: get busy. Form your committees. Map out your "Go-to-the-Movies" Week. Give the new season a real inauguration, and if there is any aid which Exhibitors Trade Review can render in planning your campaign, call on us.

Sidetracked

LAST year the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce appointed a committee to make a study of the question of motion picture censorship. Speakers on both sides of the question were heard, and the findings of the committee (there are majority and minority reports) have been gathered into a pamphlet issued by the Chamber under the title, "Shall the Movies Be Censored?"

The majority report favors Federal regulation. The minority is against any form of legalized censorship. The matter was submitted to the Board of Directors of the organization.

What happened?

While the survey was in progress, Mr. Hays entered the industry as the head of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. The Board of Directors of the Cleveland organization, of which Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War, is President, decided to sidetrack the whole movement because of Mr. Hays' entry into the picture world.

No action will be taken until autumn, if action is taken then. The Municipal Committee—and remember the majority had gone on record as favoring Federal regulation—makes this statement:

"At the suggestion of President Baker and with the consent of Chairman Watson of the Committee, a copy of the above report was submitted confidentially to Mr. Hays and his associates with a request for their comments. It was felt that, although the motion picture producers' and distributors' organization was only recently formed, it represented the great majority of producers and distributors and the views of its president would be very helpful to both the committee and the board of directors.

"Communications were received by Mr. Baker from both Mr. Will Hays and his secretary, Mr. Ralph Hayes. A special meeting of the committee was called on Monday, June 19th, to consider the comments contained in these communications. These comments were in opposition to any kind of legalized censorship.

"The committee wishes to express its appreciation to Mr. Will Hays and Mr. Ralph Hayes for these comments which the committee found very interesting. The Committee wishes to commend Mr. Hays and his organization for the splendid things which have already been accomplished by them and to wish them every success in accomplishing the ideals which they have set for themselves in their articles of association."

Thus the great work of winning over influential sections of the public goes steadily on under the leadership of Mr. Hays.

A Friend of the Industry

GOVERNOR JOHN BLAINE, of Wisconsin, has joined the rapidly increasing number of people in high station who are against the muzzling of the screen.

His declaration is as important as it is forceful. "Why bring back all the ancient vengeance of the blue laws and their attending vices and injustices?" the Governor said in a recent speech. "It seems to me we should recognize that there are three things most necessary for the normal man and woman. I regard these things as religion, rest and recreation. A little of each will do no harm, and a proper amount of each will do a world of good.

"I believe in the picture show because it is the poor man's place of recreation. I also believe that the people should do their own censoring of pictures."

EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW is indebted to Ralph A. Wettstein, manager of the Merrill Theatre, Milwaukee, for a copy of the Governor's stand in behalf of a free screen. We publish it for the information of the industry and particularly for the use of exhibitors who may be beset by reform agitation.

To the list of its influential friends the industry is happy to add the name of John Blaine, Governor of Wisconsin.

Hays Returns from Trip to Coast

Convinced There Will Be "Closest Confidence and Co-operation Between All Branches of Industry"—Found Great Enthusiasm for Efforts of Organization He Heads

WILL H. HAYS, who returned to his office in New York on Wednesday, August 9, after an absence of three weeks, during which time he made his now famous visit to Los Angeles, declared he came away from the film colony "convinced that there will be the closest confidence and co-operation between all branches of the industry."

"Altogether it was a wonderful trip," said Mr. Hays, "and I am very grateful. It must be that the prospects for the future of the industry are immeasurable."

In the course of the interview, Mr. Hays touched upon several matters of great moment to the industry. Among other things, he declared: "The motion picture has already accomplished the most wonderful things, and before long its severest critics will be warmest in its praise."

On his return to New York, Mr. Hays immediately gave his attention to the numerous problems upon which he is engaged. One of the most important of these is the negotiations over the uniform contract, in which the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York; the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the State of New York, Inc.; and the M. P. T. O. A. have been participating.

"I wish that everyone in the country might have the intimate insight into the purposes and activities of this great industry that I had during the week I spent out there," said Mr. Hays when asked about the impressions he received in Hollywood. "I thought I had some adequate conception of the immensity of the motion picture industry, but I was wrong. I did not even begin to realize the physical vastness of the thing.

Sees Closest Co-operation

"I went to the Pacific Coast, as I told the folks out there, to meet the men and women who actually make and direct the pictures. In any great enterprise, partners should know each other. These men and women are our partners, and it was my pleasure and privilege to meet them. My first endeavor was to make clear to them that I am not in any sense a dictator, ruling autocratically upon pictures and persons, but just a fellow worker in what I believe to be a very great Cause—a Cause with a Capital C—the establishing and maintaining of the highest moral and artistic standards, and the development of the educational value as well as the general usefulness of the motion picture. I came away convinced that there will be the closest confidence and co-operation between all branches of the industry.

"It was indeed gratifying to find in every department the most enthusiastic support for some of the newer efforts of the Association, such as the plans to make certain that all pictures sent abroad correctly portray American ideals and opportunities, and the consequent inevitable betterment of international relationships; and the plans which are developing with the educators of the country to make classroom pictures which are pedagogically, scientifically and psychologically sound."

Critics Will Be Won Over

"What, if anything, did you find wrong with motion pictures?" Mr. Hays was asked.

"Nothing is wrong with motion pictures—except youth," was the prompt reply. "Whatever mistakes may have been made (and no one denies that there may have been mistakes) were the errors of youth. You know, picture play-making is a matter of less than twenty years in age—and it really cannot be expected fairly to have the splendid stability, poise and standards of, for example, the press, which has reached its present estate only after 600 years of endeavor. The motion picture has already accomplished the most wonderful things, and before long its severest critics will be warmest in its praise."

Coast Optimistic Over Coming Season— Big Meeting in San Francisco August 15

By L. W. BOYNTON,

Editor, Exhibitors Trade Review

San Francisco, August 9.

OPTIMISM over the coming season is the keynote of expressions heard on every hand in the Golden State. The production center in Los Angeles reflects it. Exchangemen here and at the film capital are virtually of one mind on the subject. And, perhaps most important of all, exhibitors are confidently expecting that the very near future will see a definite general turn for the better and a return to normal prosperity in unmistakable fashion.

This spirit received a tremendous impetus from the visit of Will Hays to the Coast cities. The industry received columns of newspaper space in connection with Hays Week in Los Angeles. Mr. Hays literally took the Coast by storm, and the effect of his visit, considered along with the promised exceptional pictures, will undoubtedly be felt at the theatre box-office for a long time to come.

In San Francisco, the movement for "Confidence and Co-operation" is taking very definite shape. The combined motion picture interests of Northern California will hold a meeting here on August 15 in connection with the convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners. All branches of the industry are co-operating.

Government Charges Against Fox

Federal Trade Commission Issues Complaint, Alleging Certain Old Films Re-issued Under New Titles Without Being Labeled Re-issues—Corporation Makes Statement in Reply

A FORMAL complaint has been issued by the Federal Trade Commission against the Fox Film Corporation. The question raised by the complaint is whether or not the reissue of an old film under a new title, without disclosing that the films are re-issues, is an unfair method of competition.

The Fox Film Corporation, the complaint alleges, selected several pictures which had been previously produced by it and exhibited throughout the country and gave them new names, such names being different from those under which the pictures had already been exhibited.

This was done, the complaint states, notwithstanding the fact that the contracts under which such films were furnished to exhibitors called for new releases and not re-issues.

This practice, it is charged, tends to mislead exhibitors and through them the public into the belief that such re-issues are first-run pictures.

The Fox corporation on August 8 issued a statement to the press in reply to the Federal Trade Commission charges. The Fox statement read as follows:

Fox Makes Reply

"The dispatch from Washington which appeared in some of the New York daily papers of August 8th reciting motion picture grievances which has been reported to the Federal Trade Commission regarding re-issued films, placed Fox Film Corporation in a false light, it is claimed by that company. Having first named Fox Film Corporation as an offender and having mentioned the name of no other motion picture producer or distributor, the dispatch enumerated a number of instances of complaint to the Commission with reference to re-issued pictures. The effect was to make it appear as though Fox Film Corporation was charged with all the alleged misleading presentations of pictures. This is, however, contrary to the fact and highly unjust to Fox, as that company is involved in only one case brought by the Commission.

"Under the title of 'To Bar Old Films Under New Titles' the dispatch states that 'Through a complaint issued to-day against the Fox Film Corporation of New York City, the Federal Trade Commission inaugurated a campaign which, members said, was designed to prevent motion picture exhibitors and the public being imposed upon by film brokers and producers through marketing of old films under new titles, or of films bearing titles of noted books or plays when the subject matter has little or no connection with the name.'

"The dispatch further stated that 'The commission's policy was determined upon following the visit of all its members in a body to two local theatres exhibiting films bearing the same title and ostensibly purporting to portray the characters and atmosphere of a world-famous novel. One film was found to accurately interpret the characters of the novel, it was said, while the other bore no resemblance whatsoever to the book, and, in the opinion of the Commission, the title was employed solely in a deceptive sense.'

"In the opinion of the Commission 'The theatre owner is imposed upon, and the public, which is attracted by the title and expects to witness a show identically similar to the play or novel bearing the same title, is imposed upon. Such practice, it was said by the Commission, does an irreparable injury to the industry in the eyes of the public.'

The Question at Issue

"So far as the Fox Film Corporation is concerned the only matter in which it is involved with the Federal Trade Commission is the following:

"In 1915-1916 Fox Film Corporation produced three pictures, A Yankee Way, The Love Thief and The Silent Lie. After these pictures had been withdrawn from circulation for two years, they were re-edited and re-issued in the season of 1919-1920 under the respective titles Sink or Swim, The Tiger and Camille of the Yukon. The pictures were known and leased to the trade as re-edited and re-issued pictures. They were served mainly to theatres in very small towns and to neighborhood theatres of the poorer class—such houses as could not afford to pay higher rental charges.

"These re-issued and re-edited films have been off the market since December, 1920.

"Fox Film Corporation is willing to stand by its acts in regard to the pictures made and distributed under its name. It is not willing that there should be any misunderstanding in this matter or that it should be made to appear as being solely responsible for the condition complained of by the Federal Trade Commission. The three pictures involved in the action have been off the market for more than a year. The various other complaints mentioned in the dispatch from Washington had nothing to do with this case nor was the Fox company involved in it."

Text of Complaint

"Acting in the public interest pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled, 'An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes,' the Federal Trade Commission charges that the Fox Film Corporation, hereinafter referred to as Respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce in violation of the provisions of Section 5 of said Act, and states its charges in that respect as follows:

"PARAGRAPH ONE: Respondent is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of New York with its main office and principal place of business in the City of New York in said State. It is and at all times hereinafter stated has been engaged in the production of motion-pictures and photo-plays, and of thereafter leasing and selling to the owners and operators of moving picture theatres throughout the United States the right to exhibit said plays to the public. Said owners and operators are hereinafter called exhibitors. For the purpose of contracting with exhibitors for said exhibition rights and distributing to them its said motion-pictures and photo-plays, Respondent maintains agencies at various points in the several States of the United States. Respondent's method of doing business in connection with the exhibition of said motion-pictures and photo-plays to the public is as follows: It makes positive photographic films of the motion-pictures and photo-plays produced by it, which films it arranges and packs in such a manner as to be adapted for use in motion-picture projecting machines. Said positive films are hereinafter referred to as films. From time to time as motion-pictures and photo-plays are produced, and films thereof made by it, Respondent ships said films from its aforesaid place of business in the City of New York to its said agencies, and said agencies deliver the same to the exhibitors for presentation to the public. Motion-pictures and photo-plays thus furnished for exhibition are known to the trade, and hereinafter called, releases. In the course and conduct of its said business, Respondent is in competition with other persons, partnerships and corporations similarly engaged in the

N. Y. Operators Revoke Strike Order

The strike order issued by the New York Moving Picture Machine Operators' Local 306, on August 2 has been revoked pending the signing of the wage scale agreement by the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce which, it is expected, will be accomplished early next week.

Wage scale committees of both organizations met on Monday at which time the theatre owners rescinded their demand for a 10 per cent wage reduction. As this was the chief point of contention, the representatives speedily got together and agreed to have their respective organizations ratify the results.

The Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce ratified the agreement at its Tuesday meeting, and similar action was taken by Operators' Local 306 at a meeting held August 9. Jeremiah P. Mahoney of the law firm of Phillips, Mahoney & Libell represented the operators, and Senator James J. Walker acted for the theatre owners.

Deal Between Associated First National and Goldwyn Is Off

THE deal between Associated First National and Goldwyn, which has been in process of negotiation for several months, is off. Under the terms of the contemplated merger First National was to have become the distributor of Goldwyn product, which would have meant the addition of twenty pictures to the First National schedule.

The only statement issued in connection with the failure of the deal came from Associated First National on August 7 and read as follows:

"After a thorough consideration of the contemplated contract between Associated First National Pictures, Inc., and Goldwyn Pictures, Inc., both companies have reached the opinion that the difficulties involved in a contract of this magnitude are so many that it is better at this time not to conclude the deal."

Up to a short time ago, it had been expected that the contract would be signed, and it was said only a few points remained to be ironed out by counsel.

Goldwyn will continue its system of exchanges and maintain its identity as a producing and distributing concern.

An important sales conference, which will be attended by its division managers, has been called by First National in New York next week, after which it is expected announcement will be made of the First National release schedule for the new season.

production and distribution of photo-plays in interstate commerce and with the trade generally. Respondent through its said agencies enters into leasing contracts with the exhibitors, by the terms of which Respondent agrees to furnish the exhibitor from time to time, over a fixed period in the future, its current releases and grants the right to the exhibitor to exhibit same to the public for a stated number of performances. In consideration of said undertaking, the exhibitor agrees to pay the Respondent a certain sum of money stated in said lease. It is further provided in said leases that the exhibitors will not use any posters, bills or other advertising matter to advertise exhibitions of motion-pictures and photo-plays contracted for in said leases except advertising matter furnished or approved by Respondent. It is the custom of the trade that unless otherwise specifically agreed between the parties photo-plays so furnished to an exhibitor shall be new photo-plays, not theretofore exhibited to the public in the locality in which the exhibitor's theatre is in each instance located, and through the representations of its agents in charge of said agencies, and by reason of said custom in the trade, it is understood and agreed between Respondent and exhibitors entering into aforesaid leases that the motion-pictures and photo-plays furnished thereunder by Respondent will be new productions not theretofore exhibited in the locality where the theatre of the exhibitor is in each instance located. The amount which the exhibitor agrees to pay under the terms of said lease for the privilege of exhibiting Respondent's releases is, among other things, based upon the undertaking by Respondent to furnish new releases as above set out. After a photo-play has been exhibited to the public throughout the United States, in the course of which the film has travelled from city to city and has passed a great number of times through projecting machines such films become second class or old films for the reason that they have been once generally exhibited to the public and for that reason no longer possess novelty, and frequently have become scratched, marred and otherwise mechanically injured, so that they cannot be projected upon the screen with satisfactory clearness and lack of blemish. Films thus once exhibited throughout the United States and thereafter sent out by the producer for re-exhibition are known to the trade as, and are hereinafter called, 're-issues.' The price fixed and paid in the trade generally for the privilege of exhibiting re-issues is much less than the amounts fixed in said leases between Respondent and the exhibitors to be paid by the latter for the privilege of exhibiting Respondent's releases.

Specific Charges

"PARAGRAPH TWO: In the Year 1919, Respondent selected several photo-plays which had previously been produced by it and exhibited throughout the United States and which therefore if re-exhibited would, under the custom of the trade, be re-issues. Respondent gave to said photo-plays new names, different from those under which said plays had theretofore been exhibited to the public, and correspondingly changed the films of said photo-plays, and through its said several agencies supplied said films to exhibitors with which it had leases as hereinbefore set out in purported performance of respondent's aforesaid undertakings in said leases. In addition to the said changes in the names of said films, Respondent furnished posters, bills and other advertising matter to its exhibitors to be used by them in connection with said films, which advertising matter exploited said plays under said new names and wholly failed to disclose that said plays were re-issues and Respondent further wholly failed to disclose to said exhibitors the fact that said films were re-issues. Said exhibitors, upon receiving said re-issues and advertising matter, exhibited said re-issues to the public and used said advertising matter to advertise said exhibitions without knowing, therefore without disclosing to the public, the fact that said photo-plays were re-issues. The photo-plays referred to in this paragraph are:

"A play originally issued as 'The Yankee Way' and re-issued as 'Sink or Swim';

"A play originally issued as 'The Love Thief' and re-issued as 'The She Tiger';

"A play originally issued as 'The Silent Lie' and re-issued as 'Camille of the Yukon'; and others.

"PARAGRAPH THREE: The aforesaid acts and things done by Respondent had the capacity and tendency to mislead aforesaid exhibitors and through them the public into the belief that aforesaid re-issues were new releases and therefore to cause said exhibitors to advertise and exhibit, and the public to patronize said exhibitions in that belief, before the fact that said plays were re-issues became apparent to either said exhibitors or the public and therefore tended to injure the reputation of said exhibitors with, and to cause them to lose the goodwill of, the theatre-going public.

"PARAGRAPH FOUR: The above alleged acts and things done by Respondent constitute an unfair method of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled, 'An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes,' approved September 26, 1914.

"WHEREFORE, THE PREMISES CONSIDERED, the Federal Trade Commission, on this 29th day of July A.D., 1922, now here issues this its complaint against said Respondent.

NOTICE

"Notice is hereby given you, Fox Film Corporation, Respondent herein, that the 18th day of September, 1922, at 10:30 o'clock in the forenoon, is hereby fixed as the time, and the offices of the Federal Trade Commission, in the City of Washington, D. C., as the place, when and where a hearing will be had on the charges set forth in this complaint, at which time and place you shall have the right, under said Act, to appear and show cause why an Order should not be entered by said Commission requiring you to Cease and Desist from the violation of the law charged in this complaint.

"IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the Federal Trade Commission has caused this complaint to be signed by its Secretary, and its official seal to be hereto affixed, at Washington, D. C., this 29th day of July, 1922.

"By the Commission:

Arbitration for Kansas City Zone

Hoy System Abolished and New Agreement Signed Between Missouri M. P. T. O. and Film Board of Trade—"Dark House" Penalties Specifically Barred—Important Provision on Play Dates

AN arbitration board for the purpose of settling disputes between exhibitors and distributors, was formed in Kansas City last week. The new body, which is far in advance of anything ever before attempted by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Missouri, has created wide interest through the press in Middle Western States.

The new board, including three exhibitors, three distributors and a chairman, differs vastly from the usual film board of trades and will have supreme authority. The agreement entered into includes the abolishment of the Hoy system.

The first session of the new body will be held in Kansas City, Aug. 14. The board: (Theatre owners) —T. C. Goodnight, Warrensburg; C. T. Sears, Nevada; J. W. Watson, Kansas City. (Distributors)—Harry Graham, Pathé; A. H. Cole, Paramount; Frank Warren, Standard. Lawrence Goldman, president of the T. O. C. C., Kansas City, chairman. The agreement:

Text of Agreement

"This agreement is hereby entered into by and between the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Missouri, an association of motion picture exhibitors, and the Kansas City Film Board of Trade, an organization of exchange managers, for the purpose of minimizing to the lowest possible degree the number of differences between exhibitors and exchanges in that portion of Missouri generally known as the Kansas City Zone, and to that end, establish certain principles from time to time to govern the business relations between the two classes of the industry and, further, to create a Joint Board of Arbitration to hear and determine disputes and complaints between such exchanges as are members of the Kansas City Film Board of Trade and such theatre owners as are members in good standing of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Missouri.

"Article One: It is hereby recognized by the contracting parties hereto that the objects of this agreement cannot be accomplished unless all connection between the Kansas City Film Board of Trade and the Hoy Reporting Service is discontinued. In accordance with this the Kansas City Film Board of Trade agree to refrain from any use of the Hoy System or to employ any "dark house" penalties or any other restrictive means against any member of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Missouri. The contracting parties hereto pledge themselves to do all in their power as is reasonably possible to assist in the enforcement of the judgments of the Joint Board of Arbitration, as herein established.

"Article Two: The Joint Board of Arbitration shall be composed of seven members, three of whom shall be selected by the Kansas City Film Board of Trade and three members by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Missouri. The seventh member who shall serve as Chairman of the Joint Board, with voice but without vote, shall be selected alternately from either organization party heerto. The members of this Joint Board shall serve for a period of three months each except, however, this shall not apply to the first Board created hereunder, the members of which shall be appointed for the following periods: One member from each class for a period of five months, and two members and the Chairman for three months each. Those succeeding shall serve for the three month period.

"In the absence of any member of the Joint Board, the secretary of the respective organization to which the absentee shall belong, shall appoint a substitute to serve during the absence. In event of the failure of the secretary to so do, the other two members of the same class as absentee shall designate a third person from their class to serve. This same proceedure shall apply where any member of the Joint Board shall be interested, or whose firm is interested, in any complaint coming before the body for attention.

In Case of Tie Vote

"Where a tie vote shall result as a decision on any matter before the Joint Board, the Board shall designate one person from each class, and these two designated shall appoint a third disinterested party, to hear the case "de novo" and render judgment.

"The Joint Board of Arbitration shall meet twice per month on such days and at such place as the Board may designate, provided, however, that the time and place designated shall not be changed without the unanimous consent of the entire Board.

"Article Three: The Joint Board of Arbitration shall, as one of its functions, take cognizance and jurisdiction of all matters of equity arising from the business relations between exchanges and exhibitors.

"Article Four: The following rules and principles shall govern the Joint Board of Arbitration:

"All complaints filed for the Joint Boards action shall be made in writing and shall set forth all facts in detail. The complaint shall agree to abide by the decision of the Joint Board and that he will personally appear at the hearing of the cause or authorize another person to appear in his behalf.

"The party against whom a complaint shall be filed shall be immediately notified by the Board and summoned to appear at the time of hearing, such time shall be sufficient to permit the person complained against to appear fully prepared in defence. Continuances will be permitted for cause. Notification hereunder shall be delivered in writing to the defendant.

"The exchange must furnish at least fourteen days notice to the exhibitor of a change in play date, in which case the exhibitor may rebook the production within fourteen days if he has open time, and if not, at his option, cancel the picture. In case the exhibitor does not care to exercise his option of cancelling the picture the exchange shall supply the exhibitor with a play date on the picture within fourteen days of original play date. In case of failure of the exchange to give to the exhibitor such notice, the exhibitor is entitled to further booking on this production without charge.

As to Film Contracts

"The right of the home office or branch office to accept or reject any application, except as otherwise herein set out, shall not be abridged or denied, provided the exhibitor is notified within thirty days after the date of application for service or offer of purchase. In the event the exhibitor receives no such notice within the time specified (thirty days) he shall consider the contract accepted and the exchange shall be bound to deliver thereunder. In the event any picture is bought and play date set within thirty days after the signing of the contract by exhibitor, the exchange must accept or reject not less than ten days prior to the date booked. If not so notified, the contract shall be considered as accepted and the exchange bound to delivery.

"The terms of a written contract shall be binding on all parties as to specific protection and price but oral evidence shall be admissible to explain the terms and conditions of a contract.

"Any clause in a contract with regard to protection shall be deemed to cover any new theatres erected in that zone after the date of contract.

"Where several contracts are sold to theatres in the same zone and no protection clause inserted, priority or run shall depend upon priority of contract.

"Requests by an exhibitor for change in play date must be made in writing and mailed at least 14 days in advance to date set and the exhibitor shall furnish in said notice dates within fourteen days after the original date booked. In the event the dates supplied by the exhibitor cannot be filled by the exchange, the picture in question shall be paid for and a further booking of the picture given without any other charge, provided, however, that the exchange must show to the satisfaction of the exhibitor that the picture is not available at dates furnished with notice. Failure of the exhibitor to give this notice to the exchange of such removal shall entitle the exchange to payment as of date of original booking, and the picture shall be available for booking by exhibitor without further charge, an in such instance, the exhibitor waives his protection to the extent of the number of days set back. In the event any exchange finds it necessary to make a substitute booking due to any cause reasonably beyond its control, the exchange shall not be penalized. If, however, such substitution is necessary because of its own negligence, the substitute and advertising accessories shall be furnished gratis.

"In the event an exchange C.O.D.s an exhibitor for film or accessories already paid for, the exchange shall promptly refund the amount of the C.O.D. and return charges.

Copy of Contract For Exhibitor

"The exchanges shall furnish the exhibitor with a copy of the contract at the time of its signing by the exhibitor. When an application for service is rejected in part, the exhibitor, at his option, may accept or reject the balance of the pictures on the application. For this purpose all contracts for individual productions shall be deemed as a single application and not as individual contracts.

"No film shall be held by any exhibitor beyond play-dates booked. Any exhibitor so holding-over shall be liable for all damages accruing therefrom.

"Article Five: Whenever any member of either organization hereto shall fail to comply with the judgment rendered by the Joint Board of Arbitration within fifteen days after the date of decision, he shall be automatically suspended from his respective organization and so remain until he has complied by the decision affecting him.

"Article Six: This agreement shall be binding upon the contracting organizations for a period of six months from the date hereof, subject to renewal from time to time. The principles and regulations herein set forth are subject to revision, amendment, repeal or addition from time to time as shall be approved by the contracting organizations.

Adler Forced Out of Office

Compelled to Resign Presidency of M. P. T. O. of Southern California—Vanderlip Succeeds Him

TURMOIL, consternation and strong language, which recently reigned along the Rialto of Los Angeles, has subsided with the news of the drastic action taken by the Board of Directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Southern California, in forcing their recently elected president, F. O. Adler, out of office.

The particular case that resulted in Adler's removal was with regard to the opening of the new Victoria Theatre in San Pedro, about twenty-five miles south of Los Angeles.

The owners of the Victoria Theatre had announced a program of pictures and vaudeville which was to run in opposition to Adler's house where no vaudeville was played. It is said that Adler thereupon dug up an obsolete law dating back to the days of the "nickelodeon" which prohibited pictures and actors in the same theatre, and complained to the chief of the fire department asking him to enforce the law.

As every modern theatre in Southern California uses prologues or vocal and musical soloists to some extent this hit the pocketbook of every exhibitor in the territory. A hasty meeting of the Board of Directors of the Theatre Owners' organization was called and President Adler, at a closed meeting, was asked to resign his office.

According to report, he refused and the secretary was then instructed to read the clause in the constitution of the association providing for impeachment of officers. Upon learning that the board was determined to carry the thing through, it is reported that Adler then consented to put in his resignation. The vice-president, D. B. Vanderlip, was elected president to fill out the term.

Considerable satisfaction has been expressed by exhibitors on every side at the prompt and efficient action taken by the board of directors in thus protecting the good name and integrity of brotherly association of the showmen as a whole.

"Petty or private politics tending to discredit the Southern California Theatre Owners Association will always be instantly stamped out," said one of the big exhibitors. "This organization is for the greatest good to the greatest number and if we inadvertently put a man in office who is not big enough to serve us all we will waste no time in replacing him."

Important Meeting of Minnesota M. P. T. O.

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Minnesota will hold an important meeting at Minneapolis on August 24-25, the call having been issued by President W. A. Steffes recently.

This special convention will have an important bearing on the Northwest "Go - to - the - Movies" Week, which will open August 26. The exhibitor organization is putting its full strength into the campaign.

Action with regard to high film rentals will also be taken at the meeting, it is expected.

Memphis Theatre Men Arrested in Sunday Closing War

Special to Exhibitors Trade Review.

MEMPHIS, TENN., AUGUST 9.

A fight against the operation of theatres on Sunday, which is being conducted by the Laymen's Committee of the Protestant churches of Memphis, has resulted in the arrest of two theatre managers, Lloyd Dearth, of Pantages, and Charles A. McElvary, manager of the Consolidated Enterprise Theatres.

The two managers, who are charged with violating one of the old Blue Laws passed by the Tennessee Legislature one hundred and nineteen years ago, entered pleas of not guilty and were released on bail after being held for the grand jury. It is said the arrest of other theatre managers is in prospect.

The church committee declares it will fight to a finish against Sunday amusements in Memphis. Fred Callahan, attorney for the church people, announced that if the Blue Laws are found not to be strong enough, the reform crowd will seek legislative enactments that would turn Memphis into a Puritan village.

Callahan charges that the "theatre managers are openly violating the state laws by operating their theatres on Sunday and are attempting to prejudice the public morals, all of which is a violation of the laws of Tennessee." The theatre managers have made no statements.

Financial Problems of Operation

Some More Facts and Figures from the Actual Books Prepared by J. Palmer Collins

You have already been introduced to J. Palmer Collins through the interesting charts of his design published in a recent issue. You may, or may not, have agreed with the results of his figures, but it is interesting to know that one young man in the picture business has been tackling the financial end of theatre operation in a businesslike way.

This week we reproduce another set of figures on financial problems of operation based on actual conditions.

By J. Palmer Collins

Expenses of operation, of course, vary with the size and type of the theatre, but a fair estimate of the costs may be had from a study of a typical "neighborhood" house of usual size; i.e., 600 to 800 seats. Under present conditions it barely pays to operate a house of less than 600 seats. In a busy section of a city where there is a large transient trade and a continuous performance can be run from morning until midnight, a house with fewer seats might pay, but such houses are rapidly going out of business.

The following figures have been taken from the statement of two theatres in adjoining towns and are typical of a number of others which have been examined. They are both of the type of "neighborhood" houses; i.e., depending for support on the same local patronage. For comparison figures from both theatres are given. Theatre A has a seating capacity of 650 and theatre B a capacity of 950.

Films

The largest single item of expense is film rental, which in theatre A amounted to $12,383.26 for the year 1920. The same item for theatre B amounted to $15,210.

Salaries

The next largest expense item is salaries, the figures for the smaller theatre being $7,644 and for the larger one $9,360. This account is made up as follows:

Manager: The duties of the manager are to do the booking, select the show and look after the affair of the business generally. He may enter into contracts for a short period of time, but yearly contracts for service are in all cases subject to approval of the proprietor. The manager receives $50 per week and commission on weekly profits. Other items are as follows:

	Theatre A	Theatre B
Manager	$45.00	$50.00
Musician	35.00	45.00
Operator	22.00	25.00
Cashier	12.00	15.00
Janitor	18.00	25.00
Extra Help	15.00	20.00
Total	$7,644.00	$9,360.00

What is the practical and profitable seating capacity for a neighborhood theatre?

What is your biggest item of expense?

Can you make your business pay with one full house a day?

Do you get better than 19.5 average attendance per person per year?

What is a safe overhead for the average neighborhood house?

These are questions in the mind of every exhibitor. They are answered in the comprehensive study made by J. Palmer Collins in the article on this page.

Fuel, Light, Heat and Power

This item includes coal for heating and electrical power for lighting the house and operating the machines.

Theatre A—$1,339.89
Theatre B—$1,514.00

Express

Films in this instance were carted to the New York Exchange every day at a weekly charge of $10.

Advertising

Advertising is done by printing the daily program with a short review of the picture in the local paper, published weekly. In addition to this the weekly program is distributed to patrons as they leave the theatre. The cost of this is partially defrayed by a bank advertisement which occupies the back cover. In addition to these two methods of publicity slides are thrown on the screen during the performance giving nature of pictures which will be shown in the near future. Posters furnished by the distributors at a nominal cost are placed on bill boards about the town. Theatre A spent last year $898.67 and Theatre B $1,400.

Incidental Expenses

Other items not listed separately amounted to $1,236 for the smaller house and $2,510 for the larger one.

Summarized the figures are:

	Theatre A	Theatre B
Films	$12,386.26	$15,210.00
Salaries	7,644.00	9,360.00
Fuel	1,339.89	1,514.00
Advertising	898.67	1,386.00
Incidentals	1,236.00	2,510.00
Rent	5,000.00	7,000.00
Total	$28,501.82	$36,980.00

It will be noticed that the item rent appears in both statements. This item is used in place of the overhead expense as the two houses were not operated under the same conditions. The figures taken just cover the interest on the investment in the building and provide for depreciation and repairs. No attempt is made to show a profit on rent, but only to charge a sum which would defray carrying charges. This item was more fully discussed under consolidation.

The receipts of Theatre A amounted to $43,829.58 and Theatre B to $63,954. This is an average slightly in excess of one full house per day. Both houses charged an admission of 25 cents, including war tax, or 22 cents net.

	Theatre A	Theatre B
Gross receipts	$43,829.58	$63,954.00
Operating expenses	28,501.82	36,980.00
Net profit	$15,327.76	$26,974.00
Per cent of net profits to gross receipts	35%	42%

It will be seen that there is a larger percentage net profit to gross receipts in Theatre B than in Theatre A. This is not entirely due to the fact that B is the larger house and hence can be operated more economically per unit of income, but also to the fact that the population of town B is a better "movie population" than that in town A. To illustrate: Each of these towns has only one theatre. The population of A is 10,000 and last year the total attendance was approximately 195,000 or an average attendance of 19.5 per person per year. Town B has a population of 12,000 and the total paid admissions last year were 285,000, or an average of 23.7. The lack of social life in larger towns accounts for the larger average attendance. Local conditions play a very large part in determining the success or failure of a theatre.

A specimen page from the Film Ledger which has been adopted in Rowland & Clark's main office. It serves as a check in many ways, as this article illustrates. It concerns only the film end of the shows but covers that thoroughly

When a few million dollars are invested in a circuit of motion picture theatres it is hardly possible that the investors will trust to a lax method of keeping track of finances and the welfare of their theatres. The growth of the theatre chain has been tremendous in the past few years. As it has grown so has the circuit grown until to-day chains are being rapidly absorbed into circuits.

Figures which are quoted by responsible firms who sell hundreds of thousands of dollars of goods to the theatres show that two years ago there were 890 circuits and chains. To-day figures show that there are about 400 circuits which indicate that the absorption of the chain by the circuit has been the tendency.

These figures are useful in showing what millions are at stake and impress one with the importance of system as applied to theatre management. The old time theatre manager used to throw open the door of his theatre, stick a fat cigar in his mouth and stand in the lobby watching them come in. The "movies" were new then. He kept his books under his hat. He succeeded with the single theatre and took on more, and then more, but found that there wasn't a hat store in the country which could supply him with a lid big enough to keep the figures which the increasing business heaped upon him.

In the early stages he went to the exchange and booked his pictures largely on the basis of his friendship for the exchange man and, while booking his pictures, he bought his theatre supplies, for at that time exchange and supply house were one and the same thing. But other men like him had dreams of expansion and new men came into the business; new exchanges grew up and the film salesmen entered into the scheme of things. The old law of supply and demand justified itself. Systems of theatre management were as bound to come as night follows day.

A search for system took the writer to Pittsburgh, Pa. Pittsburgh is away from Broadway. It doesn't do things the Broadway way. That fact was somewhat a relief for one who sticks too closely to Broadway is likely to think that it represents all the wisdom in the world when, as a matter of fact, the rest of the country is living, working and succeeding and giving a living to old Broadway and its habitues.

A visit to the Rowland & Clark head offices in Pittsburgh disclosed a willingness on the part of its managers to discuss freely the various systems which are used. Contact was established with W. E. Kirsch, booker, purchasing agent and office manager. Books were thrown open and a great many courtesies extended the writer, a fact which entirely contradicted the ancient idea that theatre managers are the most secretive, unsystematic persons in modern business.

Of the various systems in use Mr. Kirsch first brought out his Film Ledger or cost reference book, a specimen page of which is reproduced on this page. This book shows everything about the cost of shows in each theatre, the attendance, weather conditions, etc., and at a glance gives daily and weekly profits and losses.

"And what is the great advantage of this Film Ledger," Mr. Kirsch was asked.

"It saves us a lot of trouble in dealing with film salesmen," he replied. "Of course we recognize that the film salesman must be; he is an integral part of selling and naturally the better price he gets for his picture the better salesman he is and the more the exchange and home office thinks of him.

"When a film salesman comes into this office to sell us a picture the price interests us. The theatre man knows that the film salesman's usual story is 'you'd better buy this picture. Take my tip. It's a bigger picture than the one I sold you last September and you know how much money that made for you.'

"Now if the booker hasn't got a ready reference to show what the picture the salesman referred to actually did in September he misses the first element in successful buying—past experience with the product. I turn to the Film Ledger for September, show the salesman what the picture did for us and if it shows a profit he wins and if a loss is disclosed he's either got to shave the price or explain.

"We don't try to trap salesmen. That isn't our idea at all. We simply do what every business house does and the salesmen know to-day that we buy in accordance with our books' figures.

"There are many other advantages the Film Ledger has for any theatre man.

Securing Strikers' Patronage in Penn.

If our readers, who keep files of this publication, will turn back to the issue of April 8 and look at pages 1307 and 1308, read the article on Ezra Rhodes' experience in South Bend, Ind., and then study the article printed below, they will find that merely glancing through a trade paper is not the thing to do. Real service was performed when we printed the Ezra Rhodes article for here are two showmen who carried out the Rhodes idea in the strike ridden regions of Pennsylvania.

In view of the fact that the soft and hard coal fields strike belt extends from Pennsylvania to Kansas and has rendered 700,000 persons idle, affecting the incomes on which over 3,500,000 people live, the plan worked out by Christ Weber and C. Max Stauffer of Hazleton, heads of the Hazleton Theatre Co. operating the Grand Theatre in the Pennsylvania coal town, is one which could be used with great success in other depression areas.

The suspension occurred on April 1 and has gone three months, with possibly longer to travel before its duration is terminated. Naturally the business done by theatres all over the coal producing regions of the East, South and Middle West has suffered to such an extent that in some regions the theatres which have suspended total 40 per cent of the number existing, while over 30 per cent are on half time and others are still in the ring but wishing the gong would sound soon.

Stauffer and Weber, in the heart of a district where union organizations are at a maximum of strength, hit upon a popular chord at the Grand by announcing in special advertising that all union men and their families, on account of being idle, would be given special concessions. Two days a week, any union man can take his whole family to the Grand matinees and pay ten cents admission for himself and all of his own family, instead of the regular rate. All he need do is to show his union button at the box office to win his special price. In addition, on other matinee days, two children under the age of twelve years can gain admission on one ticket.

Making Box Office Pay in a Town of 30,000

Experience of Alfred Gottesman in Shenandoah, Pa.—How He Took a Theatre That Had Seen Better Days and Made It a Paying Proposition—His Method Was to Show Good Attractions and Win the Confidence of the Public

By ALFRED GOTTESMAN

Manager of the Strand Theatre, Shenandoah, Pa.

The accompanying article is the fourth in a series prepared by the exhibitors who won the advertising contest conducted by First National during its Anniversary Week. Eight of the winners went to Los Angeles as the guests of First National. EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW is presenting these articles exclusively. The writer of each article adapts his subject to conditions confronted in a city or town of the size of that in which he is conducting a theatre.

SHENANDOAH is located in the heart of the anthracite coal region. It has a population of not less than 33,000 people although the last census gave the town but 25,000. It is conceded on all sides, however, that a mistake was made by the enumerators and the town is regarded as the largest—in point of population—in Schuylkill County.

I came here about two and a half years ago when I was advised there was an opening here for an up-to-date theatre. And if any man was beset with discouraging conditions I was the man. I found a theatre that had seen better days and was badly in need of repairs. Besides this practically every nation under the sun is represented in the population but after circulating among some of the live wire citizens I was given some encouragement and decided to take a "Brodie."

It was a hard nut to crack but I accomplished the almost impossible by perseverance and sticking everlastingly at it. The theatre when I took it over did not stand very high in the estimation of the public and I realized that I must change the name of the house. When I attempted to do this I met my first opposition at the hands of the owners who were anxious the house continue under the old name.

It was a warm battle while it lasted but backed up by some of the citizens of the town I started a newspaper campaign offering a cash prize of $25 and a ticket to the opening performance to the person who would suggest the most appropriate name for the theatre.

The contest ran several weeks during which time I caused to be published in the papers from day to day an outline of the improvements being made at the theatre. Thousands of suggestions were made. So great was the rush that the newspaper was almost swamped. Interest was intense and when "The Strand" was selected as the most appropriate name the theatre was known from one end of the county to the other. On the opening night everybody was agreeably surprised at the change wrought in the old house.

The next thing to give me concern was the fact that patrons here were accustomed to seeing pictures for only 10 and

Alfred Gottesman

15 cents. I broadcasted my policies through a newspaper campaign announcing that I would show only feature pictures. I continued my publicity campaign, calling attention to the First National attractions I was playing and now have the satisfaction of seeing my plan work out.

I opened the Strand Theatre two years ago this month and am very well pleased with the result so far. Old theatre managers in this region tried to discourage me but are now willing to admit that perseverance and going after things on a big scale were factors in my success. My theatre has never been closed a day— except Sundays—since I opened it and this was never accomplished before in this part of the country. It was a hard matter to determine what my mixed audiences really wanted. The men appeared to go in for wild and wooley stuff while the women leaned toward the society drama in the movies. I took a stand with the latter and gave them pictures of only the higher class using only 10 or 12 Westerns since the theatre has been opened.

The one thing that contributed to my success as much as anything was the liberal advertising campaign I continually resort to. Very little of the exploitation stuff sent me goes to waste and I frequently carry from five to six column and page ads in the daily papers. I use several hundred inches of display advertising monthly and this backed up by posters, lithographs and other means of advertising has brought the desired results. I never worried about the opposition and I try to deserve success by giving my patrons the best that can be secured. This educational campaign in the newspapers has restored confidence in the house and the result is that I am enjoying a fair share of prosperity. During the summer months or if business begins to lag, at any time, I increase my advertising space and push the exploitation stuff harder and have excellent results. The three movie houses located here marveled at my success and adopted some of my plans.

In a word I left nothing undone to get the confidence of the public. And after I had it I held on to it by not disappointing them. I keep my theatre as clean as any home; the ushers and attendants are courteous under all circumstances. I went out of my way for talent for the orchestra and now have one of the best musical organization to be found in a theatre in a town of 30,000 people anywhere. I paid better than union prices for my musicians, but I realized music was essential and I gave them the best. All these things my patrons appreciated as I expected and to-day the theatre has a reputation from one end of the county to the other and is looked on as the cleanest, most up-to-date house in the lower anthracite region.

I am not strong on giving advice but I am sure I could go into any territory and by the same methods as I used in Shenandoah make a theatre a success if there were people near enough to get into it. Exploiting is a big factor in the theatre game. It is my middle name and I did not follow one line but varied as occasion requires. It is my honest opinion that if all theatre managers would let the public know what they have to offer and then when you get them in make every effort to please them most of the troubles of the manager will be wiped out.

Of course all this took a lot of action. In other words it was simply a matter of hustle from start to finish. But instead of sitting down and bemoaning my fate I put my shoulder to the wheel, as it were, and won out with colors flying. And I am continuing to hustle. To my mind any theatre in the country can be made a paying proposition providing the proper methods are used. I would suggest to the dissatisfied manager that he get out and hustle a little more. Pay more attention to exploitation, keep the place clean, take the public into your confidence, contract for generous display space in the newspapers, give your patrons good music and don't forget that patrons go into your theatre to be entertained and see to it that they are entertained. Try this method and I am sure you will be the gainer.

The News of the Week

Kent Appraises 4 New Paramounts

Declares "Manslaughter," "Blood and Sand," "Old Homestead" and "Burning Sands" Among F. P.-L's Greatest

"Manslaughter, Blood and Sand, The Old Homestead and Burning Sands are four of the biggest pictures we have ever put out. In all our history we have never had four pictures like these ready at one time, and I doubt if we ever have again. They will make new motion picture history."

These statements were embodied in a telegram Adolph Zukor received last week from Sidney R. Kent, who has been at the Lasky Studio for nearly two weeks conferring with the Paramount production executives on releasing plans for the coming season's product.

This telegram from Mr. Kent followed four other wires sent after seeing each one of the four productions named. The first one he saw was Fred Niblo's production which June Mathis adapted from Vicente Blasco Ibanez's novel, Blood and Sand, starring Rodolph Valentino. After seeing it screened he sent the following wire to Mr. Zukor:

"Blood and Sand a positive knockout. In my opinion it will take in more money for exhibitors than any other picture we have ever released. Niblo's direction marvelous and work of Valentino, Lila Lee and Nita Naldi cannot be surpassed. Simply can't get this picture out of my mind."

After seeing Cecil B. DeMille's production, Manslaughter, he again wired Mr. Zukor.

"Screened Manslaughter last night. By far DeMille's greatest production. Meighan's performance will stand as one of the greatest ever given on the screen. Work of Leatrice Joy close second. Story is intense in its dramatic interest, most beautifully done. In my opinion by far the best box-office picture DeMille has ever had."

Then came the screening of The Old Homestead, featuring Theodore Roberts and an all-star cast, which was directed by James Cruze. "Screened Old Homestead today," Mr. Kent telegraphed. "It's the greatest motion picture that any one has ever made. We laughed, we cried and we cheered, but it seemed that nothing we could say could give adequate vent to our feelings. The cyclone in it is the biggest thing that has ever been done in motion pictures in the way of a thrill."

Concerning George Melford's production, Burning Sands, from the novel by Arthur Weigall and featuring Wanda Hawley and Milton Sills, Mr. Kent wired:

"Burning Sands is a desert knockout, five times the picture that The Sheik was. Cast is wonderful and a marvelous story.

Report New Method of Stereoscopic Exhibition Perfected

The Perfect Picture Company of Los Angeles announces it has finished an all-star feature production, The Power of Love, a story of the early days of romantic California, with such well-known players as Barbara Bedford, Elliott Sparling and Noah Beery, to be shown in conjunction with their method of stereoscopic exhibition which the company has perfected and is now ready to show in a commercial way to the theatre-going public.

"Their new idea of exhibition has been shown to several leading film factors who have been amazed at the wonderful realistic effects that the screen shows with the perfect stereoscopic method," says the announcement. "They have stated that there has never been an advancement or anything new offered to the public since the inception of the picture industry that should create the sensation that this will."

An exhibition and preview will be given for the public in Los Angeles within the next few weeks and will then be road showed throughout the country, in the bigger theatres.

Ingram Will Go to West Indies to Film Next Picture

Rex Ingram's next production for Metro will be The Passion Vine, by John Russell.

This will postpone the making of a screen version of Toilers of the Sea by the young director of The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse and The Prisoner of Zenda.

Mr. Ingram has arrived in New York from Hollywood en route to the West Indies, where The Passion Vine, a story of the South Seas, will be staged; and Toilers of the Sea will have the coast of Maine for its background. After the production of these two the likelihood is that the director will make a picture in Europe, a long-desired ambition.

Accompanying Mr. Ingram east is Alice Terry, his wife; Ramon Navarro, a young histrionic discovery who plays Rupert of Hentzau in The Prisoner of Zenda and an even more prominent part in Trifling Women, the most recently completed Ingram production; Edward Connelly, the character actor; and John F. Seitz, photographer of all the big Ingram photoplays.

After a few days' conference in New York with Metro officials, Mr. Ingram will leave for Jamaica, West Indies, where headquarters will be established for the filming of The Passion Vine.

Seattle Exchanges Getting Ready for Big Fall Season

A number of changes are taking place along film row in Seattle during these warm days, getting ready for a big season in the fall. On Aug. 1 the Robertson-Cole exchange moved from 1933 Third Avenue to occupy half of the Vitagraph building at 1917 Third Avenue. The Universal exchange will then remodel the R-C Building, install a new Simplex machine in the projection room, and move into the new larger quarters from their present cramped space at 217 Virginia Street.

Pathe moved into its brand new building and Hodkinson will have a new building ready by Oct. 1. Over at Fox, they are remodeling and redecorating inside, and painting the building front.

Pictures Must Be Made for All the People, Says Ince

To the Universal audience that first gave its support to motion pictures when they were "five and ten-centers" the producer must still direct his appeal if he is to remain successful, Thomas H. Ince, the producer, told a group of producers here during the visit of Will H. Hays to the Ince plant in Culver City.

"If we cease to appeal to a wide humanity, we shall perish," Ince declared. "I, for one, hope that we shall never forget that our art must be of universal appeal and that we must never lose sight of the people who gave us our first money."

Rabbi Tedesche Again Takes Stand Against Censorship

"Censorship of motion pictures is unnecessary; it is a relic of barbarism. The most absurd sight in all the world will always be the attempts of isolated groups to dictate the morals of an entire body politic. I am glad and proud that I had a part in keeping this dangerous movement out of the city in which I live."

Such were the words of Rabbi Sidney Tedesche of Temple Bethel, San Antonio, Tex., when he recently supplemented a long-sustained campaign in behalf of the films by an actual visit to the Lasky studio in Hollywood, where for the first time he saw pictures in the making.

More Records for Lloyd Film

"Grandma's Boy" Continues Los Angeles and Chicago Runs—Booked in Boston

Arthur S. Kane this week declared that the Harold Lloyd-Associated Exhibitors feature, Grandma's Boy, produced by Hal Roach, had broken three more records since the publication of the latest bulletin.

"You will recall," said Mr. Kane, "that the world's record for the continuous run of a comedy feature was shattered when the Lloyd picture entered its eighth week at the Symphony Theatre, Los Angeles. That was five long weeks ago and the Symphony continues to 'pack 'em in.'

"I have just been advised that when the picture had run in the Symphony for 10 weeks and 4 days, Dr. H. B. Breckwedel was compelled to obtain a new print. The first one had been worn out completely. I believe I am safe in saying that never before in the history of the industry did any theatre anywhere have to renew the print of any picture because the print had run its race."

"By the way," said Mr. Kane, "on the day following the opening of the run in Chicago, I received the following telegram from Balaban & Katz:

"'Harold Lloyd in Grandma's Boy broke all Monday opening records in history of Roosevelt Theatre. Picture a howling success.'

"And, oh, yes," resumed Mr. Kane, "here's a little item from Boston. In negotiations with our Mr. W. B. Frank, general sales manager of Associated Exhibitors, and Stanley B. Waite, Boston sales manager, Jake Laurie has just contracted for the showing of Grandma's Boy in his big Park Theatre, at a higher rental price than was ever paid for a picture in The Hub. The run will open September 4th and close at some time in the indefinite future.

"Grandma's Boy," Mr. Kane added, "played its third week in M. L. Markowitz's Strand Theatre, San Francisco, last week. It's been a big success there."

New Sales Representatives for Associated Exhibitors

Arthur S. Kane, president of Associated Exhibitors, announced this week the appointment of four new sales representatives.

E. C. Fielder goes to Associated's branch office in Cleveland, his home city.

Mack D. Weinberger, a picture veteran of 12 years' experience, is the new appointee to the Indianapolis office.

W. A. Busch's appointment is to Washington to which territory his entire career of six years has been confined.

Sidney J. Baker, appointed sales representative in charge of Associated's Omaha office, entered the industry in 1914.

Sloman Film, "Blind Justice" Near Completion

According to announcement made this week from the productions quarters of Edward Sloman in Hollywood, Cal., Blind Justice, Mr. Sloman's first personally produced picture, has entered its final stages of production. Only a few exteriors, requiring about ten days' work, remain to be filmed before the picture will enter the cutting-rooms to be prepared for early screen presentation.

Business Improving in Southeast, Says R. D. Craver

R. D. Craver, President of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., of the Southeast, with headquarters at Charlotte, N. C., is serving on the Rotating Committee of Associated First National Pictures, during the present week.

"Business conditions are improving in the southeast," said Mr. Craver. "Building operations are picking up. Many new theatres are being built, especially in the small towns. Many of the mills and big industrial plants are installing equipment. In our section we consider First National attractions the best of any. Every progressive exhibitor is making money and getting by with First National pictures. Smilin' Through has gone well in the southeast. So has Sonny. Other big pictures are doing big business."

Mr. Craver, who is an old-time showman, has been interested in motion pictures since 1897.

Charles J. Post Joins Hodkinson in Executive Capacity

Charles Johnson Post has become a member of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, with the official title of assistant to the president. Mr. Post leaves the Fox Corporation, where he was assistant director of publicity and advertising.

Mr. Post has handled some of the most important publicity campaigns in the country. He was selected by the united periodical publishing organizations—representing a combined circulation of some 35,000,000 copies per issue—to organize and establish their national campaign against unfair postal conditions. He has at various times appeared before Congressional and Senatorial committees in Washington to outline or defend the publishers' positions.

Charles J. Post

Mr. Post is well known in the publishing and art field as a writer and a former illustrator. He was among the first making animated cartoons and subsequently was sent to the Coast by the Triangle in its early, famous days to organize their Coast publicity department. He conceived and personally directed the first film given to the United States Government at the time of our entry into the great war for the purpose of recruiting and training sailors.

As a writer Mr. Post is the author of "Across the Andes," "Jimmy's Infant Industry," "Manual of Pack Transportation"—a treatise on mule-back transport for Government use—"Mrs. Hogan on Gurruls," "A Caraquenian Gavroche," and has also been an extensive writer for all of the leading periodicals and newspapers. As to the latter, he will be recalled for his exposures of the scandals of the Rock Island Railroad, the United States Army court-martial abuses, and the powder trust. In the Cuban revolution, he took the field for the New York World and was used as an interpreter with our forces in the Santa Clara district.

Norman Kerry to Play Lead in Von Stroheim Picture

Von Stroheim has selected Norman Kerry to play the leading masculine role in Merry Go Round.

Merry Go Round will have essentially an all-star cast, says the announcement, but Kerry and Mary Philbin are to have the outstanding roles upon which von Stroheim will concentrate the action.

4 New First Nationals Finished

"East Is West," "Omar," "Money, Money, Money" and Chaplin Comedy Completed

Four pictures that will shortly be released by Associated First National were completed last week. They are Joseph M. Schenck's production of East is West, starring Constance Talmadge; Richard Walton Tully's Omar the Tentmaker, featuring Guy Bates Post; the Preferred Pictures, Inc., production, Money, Money, Money, with Katherine MacDonald in the stellar role; and Charles Chaplin's latest reel comedy, as yet unnamed.

This output marks a record production week for First National on the West Coast. The editing, titling and cutting of each of these super pictures is now in progress and the date of their release will be announced within the next month.

Norma Talmadge is making great strides in The Voice from the Minaret. Last Sunday the polo game scene was "shot" at Santa Barbara. More than 1,500 people were used.

Buster Keaton last week completed Day Dreams, and this vagary is now being cut and titled. He is now working furiously on The Love Nest, a comedy that will be unique in field because there is not a single woman in the cast.

Now that she has completed Money, Money, Money, her next First National release, Katherine MacDonald without an interruption will start on The Scarlet Lily. Actual shooting of The Scarlet Lily will begin next Monday under the direction of Victor Schertzinger.

The cast that John M. Stahl has assembled for The Dangerous Age includes such screen luminaries as James Morrison, Edith Roberts, Lewis Stone, Ruth Clifford, Helen Lynch, Myrtle Stedman, Richard Tucker, Cleo Madison, and Lincoln Stedman.

The Sennett Studio buzzes with industry these days. Ben Turpin is now at work on a burlesque on The Sheik, to be known as The Shriek. He will be supported by Kathryn McGuire. The next Billy Bevan-Mildred June comedy is to be called When Summer Comes. Homemade Movies, featuring Ben Turpin and Phyllis Haver soon will be released.

The Murfin-Trimble feature, Brawn of the North, featuring the dog, Strongheart, is rapidly nearing completion.

Government Permits Entry of Kitchener Film

Announcement was made at the office of J. Parker Read, Jr., 565 Fifth Avenue, New York, this week that the Department of State had consented to the admission to the United States, under bond, of the production "How Kitchener Was Betrayed," which had been held up under protest from the British Embassy.

The history of "How Kitchener Was Betrayed" was more or less sensational in England. The production, upon its release, having aroused a storm of protest from high officials of the British Army and close friends and relatives of Lord Kitchener to such an extent that the powerful interests of official England secured an order prohibiting its exhibition in the British Isles.

It develops that the basis of the controversy revolved around the alleged fact that the picture was not historically correct.

In view of the unexpected and unsought publicity which has resulted from the controversy over the admission of the film to the United States, it has not been decided at this time which method of distribution will be utilized, whether on the state rights basis, or direct to the theatres, or through a distributing organization.

It is reported that a New York theatre has been engaged for its premiere presentation, although it may be released instead to one of the big Broadway houses.

Guy Bates Post Makes Film Debut in "Masquerader"

Guy Bates Post in The Masquerader, a Richard Walton Tully production, is a First National Attraction for current release. The Masquerader opens at the Strand Theatre in New York on August 13 and the Brooklyn Strand, the following week. This production marks the entry of a distinguished actor and producer into the film field.

Tully has selected The Masquerader as his first film attraction because he wanted the honor of introducing Guy Bates Post into the screen world. Just as his stage production have been marked for high grade of cast and scenic investiture, so the film version of The Masquerader is similarly notable, it is declared. James Young is the director, Wilfred Buckland the art director, and Georges Benoit the cinematographer. The cast which supports Mr. Post includes Edward M. Kimball, Ruth Sinclair, Barbara Tennant, Marcia Manon, Herbert Standing. Lawson Butt, Kenneth Gibson and others.

It is regarded as fitting that Post's first film vehicle should be The Masquerader, with its dual roles of Chilcote and Loder, for he has been playing them on the stage for over six consecutive years, aggregating more than two thousand performances, all over the United States and Canada. His tours have also included six months stay in Australia with this play. Furthermore, Post has been under Tully's management for twelve years; two years in The Bird of Paradise, four years as the star of Omar the Tentmaker, and six years in The Masquerader.

There is much in The Masquerader that will be widely discussed by followers of motion pictures, it is stated. In the production there is said to be double exposure work such as has never before been attempted on the screen. The picture was shown privately to the faculty of Yale University and highly praised.

Compose "Grandma's Boy" Song

Pathe Exchange, Inc., has completed arrangements with Stark & Cowan, Inc., music publishers in New York City, for the publication of a song, "Grandma's Boy," to be used as an additional exploitation accessory for the Harold Lloyd feature. Herbert Crooker and Jean Havez, well known lyric writers, wrote the words, and the music is by Pete Wendling, who has many song hits to his credit.

Hodkinson Autumn Releases

Seven Specials and Six Series of Short Subjects Are Announced

A complete revision of the releasing schedule with the advancement of several super-specials to early autumn is one of the outstanding features of the fall sales schedule as announced this week by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

Seven specials and six series of short subjects are contained in the announcement made public this week.

The first release on the schedule is that of The Veiled Woman, a mystery drama produced by Renco Film Company. The release date is September 3. This is a six-reel screen adaptation of Myrtle Reed's "Spinners in the Sun." Marguerite Snow is the featured player.

Married People, a six-reel Hugo Ballin production featuring Mabel Ballin, is set for September 17. This is a society drama written by Nell Marie Dace, a Chicago stenographer, who won the Hugo Ballin-Chicago Herald scenario contest which was conducted by Mr. Ballin and the Chicago Herald last winter.

Slim Shoulders, the third Irene Castle picture, will be released on September 24. This is a six-reel society drama by Charles K. Harris, the noted song writer, and was directed by Alan Crosland.

On October 15, Hodkinson will release Affinities, a Mary Roberts Rinehart story, adapted and produced by Ward Lascelle. It is in six reels. Colleen Moore and John Bowers play the leading roles, while the two other important roles are played by Joe Bonner and Grace Gordon.

Heart's Haven, a six-reel Benj. B. Hampton production, will be released on October 29. Heart's Haven is a drama by Clara Louise Burnham, presented by a cast that includes Robert McKim, Claire Adama, Carl Gantvoort, Claire McDowell and other B. Hampton players.

Carl Stearns Clancy's production of The Headless Horseman, adapted from "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow," with Will Rogers in the role of Ichabod Crane, will be released on November 5. The picture was produced in Sleepy Hollow and Tarrytown where Washington Irving laid the plot of his famous classic. Lois Meredith is one of the featured players in the cast and others are Ben Hendricks, Jr., Mary Foy, Charles Graham, Downing Clarke, Robert Ayerton, Bernard Reinold, Sheridan Tansey, Jerry Devins and others.

Mind Over Motor, another Mary Roberts Rinehart story produced by Ward Lascelle, will be released on November 19. This is one of the Rinehart Tish comedies. Trixie Friganza plays the leading role.

Hope, the fourth Triart production in the series of Great Masterpieces, will be released on September 3.

There will be six Chester comedies featuring Snooky, the Chimpanzee, the first of which, A Jungle Romeo, will be released on September 3. The balance of this series will be released at the rate of one production every second month.

Two separate series of Bray productions are listed on the release schedule. One of the series, known as Technical Romances will be released one every month. The other Bray series is a series of Bray comedies which will also be released at the rate of one a month.

Fun from the Press, a short reel of quips and jokes compiled by the Editorial Staff of The Literary Digest will be released at the rate of one a week beginning with the week of September 3.

Days Afield with Rod and Gun will be released beginning October 1. This is a series of six productions, one reel in length, featuring field and water experiences.

Mrs. Talmadge Writes Life Story of Her Children

Simultaneous with the release by Associated First National of Norma Talmadge in The Eternal Flame will come the publication of "The Life Story of the Three Talmadges," by Margaret Talmadge, mother of Norma, Constance and Natalie, mother-in-law of Buster Keaton, Sr., and grandma of Buster Keaton, Jr.

Victor Herbert Writing 2 Numbers for "Knighthood"

A musical score is now being arranged for Cosmopolitan Production's picturization of When Knighthood Was in Flower, with Marion Davies as the star. Victor Herbert has been engaged to compose two original numbers.

The first is "Marion Davies March," written in honor of the young star. This will be used for the marches and other stirring scenes. A waltz entitled "When Knighthood Was in Flower" furnishes the love motive for the picture, is also being composed by Mr. Herbert.

William Fred Peters, who made the musical scores for Way Down East and Orphans of the Storm, will arrange the orchestral accompaniment for When Knighthood Was in Flower, basing his score largely upon genuine old ballads and dances which were popular in the Tudor period.

Schleiff Becomes Assistant to L. J. Selznick

A triple announcement was issued this week from the executive offices of the Selznick enterprises. It contains the information that Joseph W. Schleiff has been appointed assistant to Lewis J. Selznick, carrying the official title of Assistant to the President of Select Pictures Corporation. Mr. Schleiff has been with the Selznick production unit—Selznick Pictures Corporation—for a number of years.

Mr. Schleiff in his new capacity occupies the position formerly held by E. J. Doolittle who has been advanced to the position of Export Manager.

Adalbert G. Volck has been appointed assistant to Myron Selznick, succeeding Mr. Schleiff, and carrying with the office the official title Assistant to the President of Selznick Pictures Corporation. The changes become effective October 1.

Illinois Exhibitor Plans "Pickford-Fairbanks Week"

The week of August 21-26 inclusive has been set aside by W. G. Sturdivant, manager of the Hoyburn Theatre, Evanston, Ill., as a "Pickford-Fairbanks Week," during which he will show the following United Artists releases:

Monday, Mary Pickford's Pollyanna; Tuesday and Wednesday, Douglas Fairbanks' The Mark of Zorro; Thursday, Mary Pickford's The Love Light; Friday, Douglas Fairbanks' The Nut, and Saturday, Mary Pickford's Suds.

"Oliver Twist" Movie Edition Book Will Be Published

When Jackie Coogan's forthcoming production, Oliver Twist, is released, one of the exploitation assets that will accompany the feature will be a special motion picture edition of the Dickens volume.

The production of this book is now under way and for the first time in book publishing history, the edition will be manufactured on the west coast. Heretofore all popular movie editions of books have been published in the East.

A large selection of still photographs from the production will be inserted in the volume and a beautifully designed "jacket" will accompany each book.

A nation-wide campaign on this book will be put into effect early in August, and it is the thought of the book publishers that when Oliver Twist is ready for release, the book stores throughout the land will be ready to co-operate with the exhibitors in putting the sale of books over in conjunction with the film showing.

It is the intention of Sol Lesser to enter negotiations with the various boards of education throughout the country, whereby teachers will read a chapter of "Oliver Twist to the classes each day or twice each week.

Meanwhile Jackie is hard at work on his fifth feature, which holds the temporary title, Fiddle and I, and which is being directed by E. Mason Hopper.

Cullen Landis Promoted to Stardom by F. B. O.

Cullen Landis will be starred in a series of pictures for release through the Film Booking Offices of America, according to an announcement made by that company this week.

Landis joins the company of Ethel Clayton, Harry Carey, Johnnie Walker, Helen

Cullen Landis

Jerome Eddy, Jane Novak and Carter De Haven in enlisting under the F. B. O. banner.

P. A. Powers, managing director of F. B. O. is responsible for this addition to the program of the organization. Mr. Powers is now at the R-C Studios in Los Angeles on a visit of inspection. No announcement is made of Mr. Landis' director or type of story.

"Human Hearts" Heavily Booked

Success Reported for Universal-Jewel Production in Several Cities

In New York, in the Middle West and on the Coast, Human Hearts, the Universal-Jewel production, is being presented at pre-release bookings.

In New York, the picture is in its second week at the Central Theatre, Broadway and Forty-Seventh Street. Andrew J. Cobe, manager of that theatre, reports that the picture has surpassed his expectations, despite an unusually strong opposition line-up.

On the West Coast, Human Hearts has just completed a run at the Granada Theatre, San Francisco, Cal. The following telegram has been received at the Universal home office from J. A. Partington, managing director of the Granada:

"Want to congratulate you and King Baggot on your magnificent production of Human Hearts which is now enjoying a financially and artistically successful engagement at our Granada Theatre. If Human Hearts is a specimen of what we are to expect from your Nineteen Twenty-Two program of Jewels, you are entitled to a vote of thanks by the entire industry."

J. H. Kunsky, one of Michigan's leading exhibitors, had equally as good results with Human Hearts in his new Capital Theatre, Detroit, as Parrington had in the Granada. In a wire to Carl Laemmle, Kunsky said:

"Greatly pleased at opportunity to give premier showing of Human Hearts at my new Capital Theatre. Just the picture for my patrons. Business big. Everyone pleased with production. You deserve much credit."

Although Human Hearts is not to be released until October, Universal reports a steadily growing list of advance bookings.

"Blood and Sand" Smashes All Records at Rivoli Theatre, N.Y.

Amid thunder, lightning, rain and hail, on one of the hottest days since 1883, the record of the Rivoli Theatre, New York, was smashed Monday by Rodolph Valentino's Paramount picture, "Blood and Sand," according to figures given out by Paramount.

Opening Sunday to immense crowds, "Blood and Sand" was hailed by the critics in Monday morning's newspapers as one of the greatest motion pictures ever made. To see "Blood and Sand," thousands stood in front of the Rivoli all day long, waiting to buy tickets. At the end of the evening's performances the box office reported that there had been 8587 tickets sold. The biggest previous Monday at the Rivoli was two years ago, when John Barrymore drew an attendance of 7977 to see "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."

F. B. O. Sends Out Exploitation Men for Police Film

F. B. O. is enlarging its field force of exploitation men for first-run bookings on In the Name of the Law,

The picture following its New York premiere was booked by Phil Gleichman for his Broadway Strand, Detroit, where it is now completing its second week, and at the Mission Theatre, Los Angeles.

F. B. O. has already sent out a half dozen exploitation men. Jesse Weil is in Syracuse; M. B. Rice on the West coast; and Charles Creegerich throughout the East and in the New England states.

Special Lobby Display for Marion Davies Film in New York

Hugo Riesenfeld, director of the Rivoli and Rialto theatres, has suspended the strict rule in regard to lobby displays in order to admit a frame of beautifully illuminated scenes from The Young Diana, Cosmopolitan's picturization of Marie Corelli's novel, with Marion Davies as the star, which will be the attraction at the Rivoli the week of August 27 and at the Rialto the week of September 3.

The frame contains twenty pictures, hand tinted on glass and illuminated by electric lights inside the frame. The photographs of Marion Davies in the dual role of Diana May and "The Young Diana" lend themselves to the illuminating process, which brings out the details of the costumes which Miss Davies wears in this picture.

Reichenbach Tells Advertising Men of Conditions Abroad

At the weekly luncheon of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Aug. 3, Harry Reichenbach, recently returned from Europe, briefly told of some of his experiences and of conditions as he saw them. The organization also appointed a committee to report on the feasibility of initiating a movement the object of which will be to "Boost All Good Pictures." The general plan as outlined in the preliminary discussion was to accord a certificate of quality to deserving productions, regardless of the producer.

Mr. Reichenbach said that Germany was following very closely American methods of production and presentation of pictures. England was slow to let go to time-worn traditions. France was not encouraging tourists by reason of the many charges at hotels. It was a case of "Grab everywhere," he declared.

Traveling through Germany, Mr. Reichenbach said, you will find every stack smoking, whether it be night or day. France, on the contrary, was doing little or nothing; that one might pass through hundreds of towns and see no evidence of attempts to rebuild. In England Lloyd George is doing everything he can to improve conditions.

The Theatre Inter-Insurance Exchange

What It Is and Does—

THE PLAN	The Theatre Inter-Insurance Exchange writes only theatre insurance. It operates on the Reciprocal plan, whereby the amount remaining from each year's premiums, after losses and expenses are paid, is returned to the policyholders instead of going to the stockholders of the company under the ordinary insurance plan.
THE SAVING	Each policyholder has saved 40% of his premium deposit, and this in view of the fact that the same initial rates are charged as are required by other companies.
SECURITY	Only a safe amount of insurance on any risk is carried net, all amounts above this being covered by a reinsurance contract with London Lloyds, the strongest and best reinsurers in the world.
SERVICE	In addition to the actual saving in cost the Exchange furnishes an inspection service and assistance on fire prevention methods and equipment that is of real value to the exhibitor.

Write for information or a personal call and inspection.

STATE RIGHTS

ALL THE NEWS OF ACTIVITIES IN THE TERRITORIES

"Independents Hungry for Good Pictures"

A BUSY place is the office of Jack Cohn of the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation these days. In the first place the centre B. of the outfit, Joe Brandt, is out in the territory showing 'em More To Be Pitied and wiring in the contracts for the series comprising that really fine picture and the five others that go to make up the group of "Six Box Office Winners." Then, too, Joe is closing up contracts for the "Hallroom Boys Comedies," which are sold almost 100 per cent. Added to the detail involved in these transactions is the preparation for a smashing send-off for More To Be Pitied about the first of September, as well as the completion of the second of the six, Only a Shopgirl, as to which studio reports indicate it is well on its way.

On Saturday we looked in on Jack—yes, we will say it even as you do—that's a fine day (not) on which to look in on anybody. But the fact that he was in and not down at the beach was the best proof of his being swamped with work. Jack said that twenty-four hours after the announcement was made that the six pictures would be state righted the series was sold for almost half of the country—and Canada. Joe reports the exchangemen glad to get six pictures at a time, as practically no more effort is involved in arranging for the distribution of the half dozen than of one.

Jack declared the success of his company in the rapid sales on the two groups proved the independents were hungry for pictures. As to the melodramatic titles, the distributor quoted a Western New York film man as declaring that good honest to goodness melodrama is what the exhibitor wants now; that when he was in the show business the present picture man always made money with that type of play, and the up-state man expressed the opinion that money always would be made with it.

Only a Shopgirl is to-day returning royalties from stock houses to the Blaney treasury. As to its drawing power as a play Jack quoted Gus Schlesinger, now manager of the foreign department of Warner Brothers, who had at one time during his show experience officiated as treasurer of the Arch Street Theatre in Philadelphia. Gus declared the play made more money than any other shown at that house in his time. "If anybody tells you to change that title you make application to have his head examined," enjoined Gus.

"The Hallroom Comedies are the oldest on the independent market," said Jack, reverting to that part of his company's activities. "The series is now going into its third year. When a month ago we were considering how we would distribute the new ones we received offers from good program concerns. But on going into the matter we found that the independents could give us quicker and better action than could the national distributors."

WHY is a trade paper? That is a question sometimes projected more or less ferociously and vociferously and with an air of conviction that is designed to be attention arresting. If the aforesaid conviction is not assumed it might have received a jolt could its possessor have looked over some of the telegrams handed to this writer by Jack Cohn. Here, for instance, is one from the Pacific Coast—there's no need to name the sender, but he will recognize it—which was typical of the mass:

"Your advertising in trade papers with titles your future feature releases sounds good. Wire us your proposition for this territory.

Billy Bitzer is to do the photographing of Sure-Fire Flint, which C. C. Burr is producing with Johnny Hines in the top role. Many men are called to photography, and from these many are chosen, but Billy Bitzer from the early days has been among the best—perhaps without exception the best known. His acquisition will be a guarantee of more "sure fire" than that represented in the title. Then, again, on the same production Ralph Spence will invent the sub-titles. There may be stars seen in the pictures, but oftentimes there are several who are of it and in it, but who are unseen. Did it ever occur to you?

Samuel Zierler Joins Dr. Shallenberger

The recent invitation of Dr. W. E. Shallenberger, president of Arrow, following a conference with Will H. Hays, extended to independent producers, distributors and exhibitors urging them to join him and his organization in supporting the president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors has brought a hearty and an affirmative response from one of the representative state rights men, Samuel Zierler, president of Commonwealth. Mr. Zierler is not only one of the most substantial of the distributors, but recently has entered the ranks of the producers. His letter to Dr. Shallenberger follows:

COMMONWEALTH FILM CORPORATION
Samuel Zierler, President and General Manager
729 Seventh Avenue
New York City, Aug. 2, 1922.

Dr. W. E. Shallenberger, President Arrow Film Corporation, 220 West 42nd Street, New York City.

My dear Doctor:

I notice in Exhibitors Trade Review in the issue of August 5 where you request the independents to support Will Hays. I wish to state that I was of the same opinion as you, that only a certain few individuals in our business were privileged to belong to the organization which is headed by Mr. Hays.

I am pleased to learn from the article contained in the Review that the independent distributors can become part of the Hays organization.

As we have implicit confidence in Mr. Hays and in his methods, I would like you at your convenience to advise how we can become affiliated as members of that organization.

Assuring you of our desire to give our full co-operation to Mr. Hays, I am

Cordially yours,
S. ZIERLER, President.

"Notoriety," with Remarkable Cast, Set for September

Word from Will Nigh was received at the offices of L. Lawrence Weber and Bobby North this week to the effect that Notoriety, the latest feature of this independent director, would be ready for release on the state rights market in September.

Will Nigh is now at the Delaware Water Gap, one of the country's famous beauty spots, shooting some outdoor scenes on the picture.

Maurine Powers leads the feminine half of the group. Mary Alden, Mona Lisa, Rod La Rocque, J. Barney Sherry, George Hackathorne, Richard Travers, John Goldsworthy, Anders Randolph, William H. Tooker and Ida Waterman are the other members of a remarkable cast.

Warners Add Players to "Heroes of the Street"

A large number of prominent screen players have been engaged for the Warner Brothers picture, Heroes of the Street, a Harry Rapf production starring Wesley Barry. The most recent additions to the cast are Philo McCullough, Charlotte Jackson and Joe Butterworth.

Other members of the cast include Marie Prevost, who plays the leading feminine role; Jack Mulhall, Wilfred Lucas, Aggie Herron, Al Walling and William Beaudine, Jr. The picture is being directed by William Beaudine.

Four Territories Buy Goodman Film in the Same Day

Seldom does it happen that a sale is made on any production before the buyer is able to see the accessories accompanying the picture, but such a "coup" was accomplished by Equity Pictures during the week. The deal was closed on What's Wrong with the Women and is probably one of the biggest and quickest that has been negotiated by an independent concern.

The territories sold were New York State and Northern New Jersey, Samuel Zierler, of Commonwealth Film Corporation; Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey, Ben Amsterdam, of Masterpiece Film Attractions, Philadelphia; New England, Sam Grand, of Federated Film Exchange, Boston; Northern Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin, Joe Friedman, of Celebrated Players Film Corporation, Chicago.

The picture was screened simultaneously for all four prospective buyers, and before the end of the day every territory had been closed. Every buyer expressed complete satisfaction in obtaining the picture. Mr. Baum, general manager for Equity, assured the franchise holders of the constant co-operation of the home office in extensive advertising and publicity campaigns.

Six Territories Buy Warner Brothers' Darmond Production

Six state-right buyers have purchased the exclusive rights for their respective territories of the Warner Brothers' production, A Dangerous Adventure, featuring Grace Darmond.

These deals, according to Harry M. Warner, are the forerunners of negotiations now being consummated for the distribution throughout the country of the series of seven Warner pictures.

E. G. Tunstall, of the Tri-State Film Exchange, Minneapolis, has purchased the rights for Wisconsin; Second National Pictures of Illinois has secured Northern Illinois; Regal Films, Ltd., of Canada, has taken over Canada and Newfoundland; Franklin Film Company, Boston, contracted for New England; A. M. Fabian has purchased the rights for Northern New Jersey, and the Independent Film Company, Philadelphia, controls eastern Pennsylvania, southern New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia and District of Columbia.

A Dangerous Adventure is described as a sensational wild animal feature. The story is woven around two white girls who in the pursuit of a treasure chest hidden in the African wilds are held captives by savages.

Friedman of Celebrated Sticks to Percy and Ferdie

J. L. Friedman, head of Celebrated Players Film Corporation of Chicago, has signed a contract with Joe Brandt, of C. B. C., to handle the series of twenty-six comedies based on the adventures of Percy and Ferdie, in Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin.

Mr. Friedman has distributed the Hallroom Boys Comedies in his territory ever since C. B. C. started producing and distributing them four years ago.

Discuss Merging Exchange Facilities

New York Managers Conferring on Plan Submitted by Julius Singer Designed to Reduce Overhead Expense

For several months Julius Singer has been working on a plan designed to bring a group of ten or a dozen independent exchanges of New York City under one roof, with one set of salesmen, one booking department and one shipping department. It is estimated if the plan can be brought to fruition it will mean a saving of approximately $300,000 annually. The matter is still in the conference stage, with the exchanges concerned admittedly interested but not definitely committed.

The exchanges that through representatives have been attending the meetings are the Myriad, Arrow, Second National, Metropolitan National, Climax, Model, Alexander, Criterion, Aywon, Pioneer, Champion and Arista.

"One of the thoughts behind the general plan," said Mr. Singer, "is that if we can convince the exhibitor we are not trying to fight one another we may be able to prove to him that we don't have to fight him in order to live. If we can save 25 or 30 per cent on our overhead there is bound to be some money left at the end of the year. If ten of us can save $200 a week for a year right there is a fund of $100,000 to pool on productions.

"In a trip through the country a couple of months ago I heard much talk of sharp competition between exchangemen and of failure to make the money they believed they should. It is my idea that the plan be put into effect if at all first in New York in order that exchangemen in other centres may be encouraged to adopt a similar expedient.

"There are men in California with money and brains that are willing to make pictures. 'Supposing,' one of them remarked to me, 'I make a good picture for you independents. If I don't sell it among a certain restricted circle I am cooked.' Of course, one of the difficulties we have encountered in discussing the new idea is that of disposing of present leases. Still, I believe if we can make a start with six or seven organizations the others will join later. There will be another meeting Thursday, August 10."

Graphic Exchanges to Hold Convention at the Hotel Astor

Prominent independent exchangemen representing territories over the country will convene at the Hotel Astor on Monday, August 14, to determine policies of co-operation within state right ranks for the coming fall. The convention represents the first get-together of the entities affiliated for the distribution of products under the name of Graphic Film Exchanges, Inc. Under the plan of Ivan Abramson, president of the Graphic Film Corporation, which was announced to the industry several months ago, the latter affiliated himself with leading independent exchanges throughout the country for distribution of his future pictures in which the exchanges were to retain an interest. The meeting will primarily consider a new angle in the development of this plan which, according to Abramson, is calculated to "house the independent producer, exchangeman and exhibitor under one roof."

Among those expected or now in town to consider Abramson's proposition are E. H. Emmick of San Francisco, Frank Zambreno of Chicago, Frank Fay of Dallas, Harry A. Lande of Pittsburgh, Herman Rifkin of Boston, E. E. Richards of Kansas City, Sam Werner of St. Louis, H. A. Sherman of Philadelphia, Mills and Berkowitz of Buffalo.

The second day of the convention will be the occasion for the initial trade screening of the new Graphic feature Wildness of Youth. Mr. Abramson will take this opportunity of showing the picture to both the trade press and the visiting exchangemen.

Included in the business on hand is the election of a Board of Directors of the Graphic Film Exchanges. The number of special features to be made during the coming year will be discussed as will the matter of publicity and advertising appropriations. The meeting will indicate the complete voice which the exchanges are to have in all decisions relative to production.

Rochester's Eastman Books "Out of the Inkwell" Series

The Eastman Theatre of Rochester has booked the Out of the Inkwell Comedies of Max Fleischer as its first short subject for the opening week of the house. The action followed a screening of a number of the series, through the Apollo Exchange, which is the distributor.

The choice of the Fleischer product by the theatre for its opening night is nothing unusual in the history of this subject. When the Capitol opened in Detroit it was picked. The Rialto, Criterion and Rivoli, in New York, have been showing the novelty regularly.

"Babes in Toyland" Girls on Tour Will Wear Uniform Garb

A novel feature connected with the exploitation of Victor Herbert's Babes in Toyland is a scheme whereby all members of the company except the principals will wear a uniform dress while on tour. The uniform will be of a military design, modeled after a character in the production. No mention, however, is made of the fact that the wearers are members of the company, but the constant viewing of these girls in uniform on the streets, going to and from the theatre, will act as a refined bally-hoo for the exhibitor playing the attraction. Great care has been taken in selecting the girls. The height and weight of all are nearly proportioned, making a complete and attractive ensemble and ballet corps.

Final rehearsals have been completed and the first complete traveling unit to tour the motion picture theatres is a reality and now ready for its premier in Atlantic City.

Among Los Angeles Studios

Victor B. Fisher, supervising director, and Edward Belasco, president of Belasco Productions, Inc., are in Los Angeles preparing to start production in the next few days.

Clifford Elfelt has returned from New York and is making preparations to start work on a picture starring James B. Warner.

C. W. Stater, the Oklahoma producer, who is temporarily at the Long Beach Studios, has announced his production plans for the remainder of the year. He is at present gathering a staff and cast for a twelve-reel production, on which he expects to start work about Aug. 15.

The William R. Lighton Productions, Inc., is preparing for production at the Hollywood Studios. They have completed arrangements for the starring of J. Warren Kerrigan in a series of Billy Fortune stories written by Lighton and printed in the Saturday Evening Post.

Sol Lesser Takes C. B. C.'s Feature for His Territory

Sales are going over on the new C. B. C. feature More to Be Pitied. Joe Brandt, who is out in the territory, reports a specially important sale was made this week to Sol Lesser, head of all-star Feature Distributors of San Francisco and Los Angeles, who will handle the picture in California, Arizona and Nevada.

Mr. Lesser is now arranging a big first run showing in Los Angeles and another in San Francisco and announces he will launch the feature with one of the biggest campaigns in the history of his organization.

"Flesh and Blood" a Story of Power

Subject Marking Irving Cummings' Debut as a Producer Is Strongly Played by Excellent Cast and Competently Staged

With Flesh and Blood, starring Lon Chaney, Irving Cummings makes his debut as a producer. It is an "opener" that will reflect credit upon him and those who are associated with him. The subject, which is 5300 feet in length, is being distributed by Western Pictures Exploitation Company.

Mr. Cummings has selected for his cast DeWitt Jennings as Detective Doyle, Noah Beery as Li Fang, Ralph Lewis as Fletcher Burton, Jack Mulhall as Ted Burton, Edith Roberts as the Angel Lady, Togo Yamamoto as the Prince, Kate Price as the Landlady and Wilfred Lucas as the Policeman.

Much of the work falls on Lon Chaney, who in the role of David Webster, an escaped convict, is shown throughout the greater part of the story evading the police so that he may gain revenge upon the older Burton, whom he rightly blames for his conviction. Sharing the honors with Mr. Chaney is Mr. Beery, as the influential and wealthy Chinaman who from motives of gratitude for past services gives Webster an asylum from the police. Another player who in the latter half of the tale comes to the front is Mr. Lewis, as the conscience-smitten man of means.

Others whose portrayal stand out are Mr. Jennings as the typical sleepless representative of the law and Mr. Mulhall and Miss Roberts, the two latter providing the sweetheart angle.

The theme is of sacrifice, the refusal of the fugitive to accept freedom following the confession of Burton when he learns that the Angel Lady, Webster's daughter, is to marry young Burton. Webster goes back to jail to finish his sentence, only Burton knowing of the relation. The ending is not what may be called a happy one in all respects, in that the guilty goes free and the innocent returns to prison, but it is an effective ending nevertheless.

The action is not fast moving. Rather it gives the impression of relentlessly forging ahead to a crushing finish. The denouement comes as a surprise. The characters are finely portrayed and the picture is competently staged.

There is a bit of inserted action, illustrating a tale related to the impatient Webster by the philosophic Li Fang, which is told in color with Chinese players, which makes a picturesque and entertaining change without losing the thread of the story.

Flesh and Blood ought to go well anywhere, and strongly if reasonably exploited. And in the latter event there will be no complaints on the part of patrons—they will be entirely satisfied. G. B.

"Secrets of Paris" Will Be Title of the Burr-Whitman Film

Following the announcement in the trade papers last week that C. C. Burr and Whitman Bennett had arranged to produce The Mysteries of Paris, based on the famous story of the same name by Eugene Sue, word has come to the Burr offices that no less than three companies intend releasing pictures bearing the same title.

In order to offset any doubt as to the real authenticity of the Eugene Sue story, Mr. Burr announces to the trade that his production will be released under the title Secrets of Paris, based upon "The Mysteries of Paris" by Eugene Sue. This title has been copyrighted, and it is further announced by Affiliated Distributors that it will protect its right to Secrets of Paris title to the fullest extent.

Western Pictures Announce Sales on "Flesh and Blood"

Irving Lesser, general manager of Western Pictures Exploitation Company, has sold state rights on Flesh and Blood, featuring Lon Chaney supported by an unusual cast, to Sam Zierler, for New York and Northern New Jersey; to Twentieth Century Film Company, Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey; Midwest Distributing Company, Wisconsin; All Star Feature Distributors, California, Nevada and Arizona; De Luxe Film Company, Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana.

The picture was produced by Irving Cummings, and marks his initial effort as an independent producer wherein he has not himself appeared in the cast. Western Pictures has contracted for two more productions by Mr. Cummings, to be made upon the completion of his contract with Universal.

The company has sold The Sagebrush Trail to the Royal Pictures, Inc., for Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey, and to the Apollo Exchange for Greater New York. Royal Pictures also has bought The Man from Hell's River.

Among the independent exchangmen who have been in New York during the past week looking at Flesh and Blood are Harry Charnas, Oscar Oldknow, Dave Thomas and Herman Rifkin.

"More to Be Pitied" Passes the National Board 100 Per Cent

Additional proof of the quality of More To Be Pitied and the care that went into its making is evidenced by the announcement that this C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation feature was passed this week by the National Board of Review with not a single cut or suggestion for a change.

The feature, the first of C. B. C's big series, was given a screening for the Board and the report turned in passed it 100 per cent, commending it as a whole as wholesome, worthwhile, and a picture of the type suitable for presentation before any audience.

According to Jack Cohn, of C. B. C., this report is especially gratifying in view of the fact that, according to board statistics of pictures reviewed by the New York and various state censorship boards, it is in melodramas that most of the eliminations are made.

Walter Miller Will Play Leading Role in "Tenement Tales"

It has been definitely decided by A. M. Putnam, producer of the Tales of the Tenements, two-reel detective stories, to retain Walter Miller to play the leading male role in each of the twenty-six productions which comprise this series.

The series is being distributed by Clark-Cornelius Corporation to the independent exchanges on its franchise plan. The stories are written by Ross D. Whytock, well known for his many detective stories. Mr. Whytock was formerly a secret service man and police court reporter for a New York newspaper.

"I feel that we have been fortunate in securing Mr. Miller for this series." said Mr. Putnam. "He is well known and in addition has the asset of youth and ability for the many different roles in which he will naturally be cast because of the wide range we will cover in this series of pictures."

Mr. Miller plays the part of a detective in The Arnsley Case, one of the first stories to be released in the series, and in a later picture assumes the part of a newspaper reporter.

Maclyn Arbuckle Is Praised for His "Mr. Potter of Texas"

Maclyn Arbuckle has scored what is declared to be another distinct success in his portrayal of Mr. Potter of Texas, Archibald Clavering Gunter's story.

How the genial senator from Texas got into a Bedouin revolution is reported to be as amusing as it is serious.

In Maclyn Arbuckle's long career as a legitimate star as well as a film star no character gives him greater opportunity than Mr. Potter of Texas. The player has earned the title of "The Apostle of Happiness."

The Producers' Security Corporation is handling the releasing arrangements.

Dr. Shallenberger Names September as "Arrow Month"

W. E. Shallenberger, president of Arrow, announces that the month of September, which will be known as "Arrow Month," is to mark the beginning of a sales drive.

"No time could be more propitious for such a drive," said Dr. Shallenberger. "The industry at large and particularly the independents have undergone a severe baptism of fire.

"'Arrow Month' will be marked by an extensive advertising campaign in the national and regional trade papers; a direct mail campaign will be inaugurated, also various novel ideas will be carried out."

"Lost in a Big City" Secured by Arrow from Blazed Trail

Arrow Film Corporation has just completed negotiations with Blazed Trail Productions, Inc., for a special, Lost in a Big City, which will be constructed very much along the lines of Blazed Trail Productions' Ten Nights in a Barroom.

The same scenarist, L. Case Russell, who was in so large a measure responsible for the success of the former picture, has been engaged to adapt Nick Woods' old melodrama to the screen, and John Lowell will again play the leading role. George Irving will wield the megaphone, while J. Stewart Blackton, Jr., will act in the capacity of production manager.

"Lost in a Big City is Arrow's first contribution to the quota of big special productions which will be so vitally necessary to the independent market during the coming year," said Dr. Shallenberger. "We shall make every effort to supply the demand for bigger and better pictures and this may be considered typical of what the independent exchange man may expect from us."

Bennett Finds True French and Italian Types for Sue Film

These are busy days at the Whitman Bennett studio at Yonkers. Since Mr. Whitman Bennett and Charles Burr, of the Affiliated Distributors, have joined hands the producers have started on Eugene Sue's famous novel, The Mysteries of Paris, titled Secrets of Paris.

One of the features will be the street scenes. Mr. Bennett has spent weeks in and about New York's Latin quarter, picking out his characters. He says there are many talented French and Italian persons to be found who are true to the types he is looking for, and now that the big street scenes are ready these players will be given a chance to add color to the picture. It is expected that Dolores Cassinelli and Edmund Breese will be added to the cast within a few days.

Many Buyers Hold "Your Best Friend" for Autumn Release

Many of the state-right buyers throughout the country handling the Warner Brothers picture, Your Best Friend, a Harry Rapf production starring Vera Gordon, have held the feature for fall release, and it is reported that many big bookings have been secured.

From Screenart Pictures Corporation, Boston, comes the report that practically all the leading theaters throughout New England have contracted to show the feature. The production is said to have had a successful and indefinite run at the Providence Opera House, Providence, and at Tremont Temple, Boston.

The Creole Enterprises of New Orleans, handling the attraction in Mississippi and Louisiana, have successfully negotiated with the Saenger Amusement Enterprises to have the picture shown throughout its entire circuit.

The Independent Film Corporation, Philadelphia, also reports an unusual number of bookings throughout its jurisdiction.

Arrow to Release Six Westerns with William Fairbanks

One of the first results of Dr. W. E. Shallenberger's trip to California is evidenced in an announcement which comes through the home office of Arrow Film Corporation to the effect that it is to release a series of six Western features, starring William Fairbanks.

Fairbanks made his first appearance before the camera recently, since which time he has appeared in a number of pictures. Ben Wilson was quick to see in him a box office possibility and placed him under contract.

Mr. Wilson has purchased stories from W. C. Tuttle, a magazine writer. The first picture will be an adaptation of Peaceful, which appeared in a magazine.

Aywon Announces Sales

The Aywon Film Corporation announces the following sales on the Snowy Baker and Big Boy Williams pictures for the month of July: H. Lieber & Co., Indianapolis; Liberty Film Exchange, Washington, D. C.

Other sales during July were made to the Fine Arts Film Corporation of St. Louis, Mo., for the pictures Lure of the Orient, With Wings Outspread and The Woman of Mystery.

"Snub" Is Now on His Two-Reel Way

Pathe Comedian as the Good Grandson in "365 Days" Makes a Good Start as Contender for Higher Honors

As the Good Grandson in 365 Days, which Pathe will release, our tried friend "Snub" Pollard joins the contenders for the big stuff—he emerges from the single-reel division where he has been the top-notcher to the class of the two-thousand-footers, where if the rewards be large the competition is keen. Nevertheless, the two-reel comedy field has been narrowed a bit by the reaching out of Chaplin and Lloyd for feature honors, which will provide the basis for a pretty contest between several strong candidates for the two-reel comedy premiership. "Snub" Pollard has a host of admirers who will wish him well in his departure. He has done well the work that has been allotted him in the past, and there is every reason to expect from him in the coming months the same brand of consistent, sincere effort. But, as everyone understands not quite so well as does the comedian himself, he is now on a job that is different.

The tale in which "Snub" makes his bow is of an elderly man who decides to pack all his more than numerous relatives for one year on a plot perhaps 100 by 100 feet, with the proviso that the ones or the one who can for that period and under that seemingly impossible handicap emerge with an untarnished record for peace and amity shall take the hundred thousand odd he is anxious to bestow in the form of an ante-mortem legacy.

Quite naturally the domiciles built in conformity with the harassing stipulations are thick, to say the least. They range one on top of another. "Snub," for example, is housed in a bungalow which is suspended from a gas bag, its elevation being controlled by the size of the coin deposited in the gas meter.

Here is a working basis for a lively comedy, and that is what "Snub" makes of it. Aiding him is an unusually large number of players, headed by Marie Mosquini as of yore. The increase in the size of the cast is noticeable. The unusual groundwork for the farce affords many novel opportunities for fun, which if at no time is riotous surely has the merit of being continuous.

All in all, "Snub" gets away to a good start. Here's luck to him and his fellow-players.

G. B.

"One Terrible Day" Is Funny, Beyond Question, but Rough

We are going to admit right at the beginning that it is an unusually difficult task to estimate what will be the mass judgment on One Terrible Day, the first of Hal Roach's Our Gang series which Pathe will release. Fun there is in it, in chunks, fun of the housebreaking variety, at times verging on the vandalistic. At other times it is of the most innocent sort, as for example a spat between a cat and a monkey, in which the feline tries to get away from the simian and never has a chance. And that clever near-human animal gives us a new understanding of what large significance there may be in the expression "monkeyshines."

The cast is mainly juvenile, and it is composed of all sorts and conditions of boys. Among these are two blacks—"Sunshine Sammy" and a three-year-old bow-legged toddler that takes his work—or play—as seriously as a Buster Keaton. The white youngsters range in character from a prim and proper young person to the extreme opposite of the scale. There's a little chap who owns a splendid big dog and who declares in his friendship for the pup "No dog, no me," and he accordingly is invited to the picnic. This picnic, by the way, is arranged by a socially aspiring woman as a means of getting "publicity" in her contest for leadership. She gets it, and she earns every line that comes to her.

For the many things that happen to her property never will be enumerated in any narrow space. Suffice it to say the lady is cured of her ambition to provide a party for a promiscuous gathering of youngsters.

But don't miss seeing One Terrible Day and forming your own conclusions. You may even agree with us that without question it is a kid picture for an adult audience; but that for young children whose parents aim to see they are ordinarily reared it may be a horse of another color.

"Hansel and Gretel," with Baby Peggy, Is Finished

The latest Century Comedy fairy tale, Hansel and Gretel, with Baby Peggy as Gretel, is finished. The old popular folk story was written into a comedy and directed by Alf Goulding, who has made all the other fairy tales and who will continue with the series.

The story, modified but slightly to keep up fast moving comedy interest, follows in the main the tale written by Grimm.

The cast is a notable one, and besides, Baby Peggy is composed of Buddy Williams, Blanche Payson, Jim Kelly and Jack Earle, Century's seven-foot giant and villain.

Levine Off on Long Tour on Behalf of Universal "Shorts"

George Levine, general sales manager for Universal short subjects, has just left New York for a two months' tour of Universal exchanges in the Middle West for the purpose of perfecting the distribution and booking of Universal Comedies, westerns, and serials, and of conferring with leading exhibitors.

Universal has recently made over its short subject production policy. Not only has its serial policy undergone a striking change in the past few months, substituting historical, educational and scientific chapter thrillers for the old style serial, but it has reorganized its comedy production department. Century Comedies, the two reel brand released by Universal, are being projected as a series of high class comedies for the coming year.

Pathe Reports Good Start on "Johnny Jones Comedies"

The new series of "Johnny Jones Comedies," made for Pathe distribution, are reported to find early favor with exhibitors. Supply and Demand, announced as the initial release of the series, for July 30, and which had its first showing at the Capitol Theatre, New York, has won pre-release bookings in other cities.

Notable examples reported by Pathe are week engagements at the Capitol Theatre, Detroit, and at the Rivoli in Baltimore. It is said that other "Supply and Demand" contracts made in different sections of the country prior to release are accompanied by evidences that exhibitors have great faith in the "business story" idea.

Educational Is Set for Coming Year

Distributing Company Now Has in Hand at Least One Subject for Each of Its Series in Season of 1922-3

Educational has received from the producers at least one picture of each of its series of short subjects for the season of 1922-3, and is rushing prints to all branches so that exhibitors all over the country can be given an idea of the Educational program.

The first two-reel comedy to be released in September will be the initial subject of the new Christie Comedy series, That Son of a Sheik. Into this travesty on the many desert dramas which have flooded the screen in recent months, Scott Sidney, as director; Neal Burns, as star, and Viora Daniel, as leading woman, have put their best.

Following in the Christie series will be Pardon My Glove, a prize fight picture featuring Bobby Vernon.

Lloyd Hamilton starts off his new series of Hamilton Comedies with The Speeder.

Jack White has a surprise in store with Look Out Below, with which he begins the Mermaids for 1922-3.

The first of Educational's new Earl Hurd Comedies, One 'Ol Cat, has already had its first run, showing at the Rivoli Theatre in New York the week of August 6, where it attracted a great deal of attention for its novelty.

The First Barber will begin the distribution of Tony Sarg's Almanac. In this unusually funny short novelty, Mr. Sarg shows what he thinks might have happened in prehistoric days when friend husband went to get a hair cut.

In addition to these new subjects release of the current series of Toonerville Comedies by Fontaine Fox, Adventures of Sherlock Holmes, Wilderness Tales, by Robert C. Bruce, and Campbell Comedies, will be continued in September.

Plum Center Comedies Start Finely

"Pop Tuttle's Clever Catch," Starring Dan Mason, Has a Delightful Brand of Restrained and Refined Humor

There's an original and a refreshing brand of refined humor in Pop Tuttle's Clever Catch, produced by the Gerson Studio of San Francisco, directed by Robert Eddy and distributed by F. B. O. The humor is not confined to the excellent portrayal by Dan Mason of the title role, that of a village character who as one of his duties drives the bus and transports the mail from the station to the post office. There is a delicate wit in the sub-titles which reveals the handiwork of one gifted as well as skilled in that particular branch of the art of writing. The style will be recognized by the many exhibitors who for years followed the entertaining "Rubbernecking" articles about Filmland written by A. H. Giebler.

At the Rialto Theatre, where the comedy was shown for the week of July 30, the titles shared the honors with the action of the rustic tale and the rarely amusing delineation of the veteran Dan Mason. The tale is simplicity itself—until a much sought bandit holds up Pop, bringing the mail to the post office. Pop bemoans his fate. To his plea that for forty years he has carried the mail without losing a postcard the highwayman brutally remarks that the incident will serve to break the monotony.

The robber agrees to the suggestion of Pop that there be tangible evidence the bus driver has put up a fight and obligingly shoots holes into his hat and into the coat Pop removes for that purpose. As the cartridges in the weapon are emptied Pop asks the bandit to help him on with his coat. During the process Pop pulls his own pistol with the remark: "Now climb up on that horse or I'll break your monotony." A little later Pop pulls down the reward.

There is an allusion to a present topic of film interest when Pop is knocked down by the well-delivered cast of the mailbag from the flying express. As Pop gets to his feet he remarks: "Them clerks have been actin' up ever since the Postmaster General went into movin' pitchers," adding, by way of consolation: "If it had been Tuesday I'd been hit with the Sunday papers."

The two-reeler gets away to a start that augurs well for the series of Plum Center Comedies. One of the characters contributing to the mirth of the little comedy is Wilna Hervey, the giantess, who portrays the station agent. G. B.

"At Large," with Tom Santschi, Is a Good Western

Universal's two-reel Western, At Large, featuring Tom Santschi, is good drama. For that we may thank Harvey Gates, who drafted the story and scenario, and Robert North Bradbury, who directed. The person who selected the locations also is entitled to credit, for some of these are decidedly picturesque. And Cameraman Virgil E. Miller has caught and reproduced them so that the pictorial quality is highly enhanced.

Santschi has the role of Dan, a resident in a small town, in desperate circumstances and with a very ill wife. Nevertheless, he is able to sell in this town a horse which he has stolen in order to buy medicine. When his wife collapses as a deputy sheriff bawls him out as a horse-thief, Dan escapes on a horse of one of the sheriffs. Later in the desert he finds the offending deputy, crippled, and brings him in. He is forgiven.

The story has dramatic moments and should be liked by all except those who are antagonistic to Western stuff. G. B.

"Copper Beeches" Is a Holmes Story of Real Suspense

The Copper Beeches, from the Sherlock Holmes stories by Conan Doyle, which Educational is distributing, is noteworthy from several angles. The two reels are packed with suspense, the picture is well directed, and the acting is of the best. In the last department the attention of the observer is centered right at the beginning on the work of Madge White, who plays the governess. Miss White's portrayal of the terrified member of the Rucastle household is realistically done and never overdone.

The story has a bit of the weird. The start is not promising, but before a hundred feet is down the suspense is on and one is plunged into the mystery—for mystery it is—one that is not dispelled until practically the close.

Eille Norwood as Holmes and Hubert Willis as Watson continue their characteristic and true-to-character portrayal. Lyell Johnston as Rucastle is sufficiently repulsive, and the remaining types are carefully selected.

The feature that is accompanied on a program by The Copper Beeches must be good or it will be topped. G. B.

REVIEWS OF CURRENT SHORT SUBJECTS

PERILS OF THE YUKON—Universal serial.—Chapter 8 by reason of its action will have interest for those who have not seen the episodes preceding. Adding to the entertainment value is the quality of the photography, credited to Milton Moore. The close-ups are particularly noteworthy, and will repay the careful scrutiny of any one concerned in the photographic division of production. The scenic side of the episode, like that in some of its predecessors, also stands out. William Desmond, Laura La Plante and Joseph Girard are the principals in the chapter as they are in the serial. One of the incidents that will start shivers is the rescue by Mr. Desmond of Miss La Plante from the center of a lake the sides of which are snow-covered hills. Then there are hand-to-hand combats on land and in water as well as thrilling canoe chases down a tumbling stream.

PATHE REVIEW 169.—The reviewer missed the major part of this subject, but without hesitation he would if he were an exhibitor book it on the Pathecolor section alone.—that of "The Vale of Romance," where the River Aude comes down from the Pyrenees. The views of ancient castles, towering structures that give life and reality to the history of other days, are remarkable. There is the city of Carcasonne, begun in the seventh and finished in the fourteenth century, and looking it. There is a quarry that has been supplying stone for 1500 years. And where once was a moat children now play on the greensward among the geese and pigs. It is truly a rare picture.

URBAN MOVIE CHATS NO. 28—Released by Hodkinson.—The number opens with a tour of Rome, beginning with St. Peter's. The views are confined chiefly to fountains. The making of overalls and mackinaws is shown. In Ohio we see the house where General Grant was born and the tannery once owned by the father of the soldier, and in St. Louis the log house where the latter spent his early married life. Also there is a view of the Grant Memorial in Washington. There is a picture of a barefooted boy sitting by a rapidly running stream catching fish as fast as he drops the line, which is somewhat faster than most of us are able to catch them.

OUR BETTER SELVES—Pathe Three-Part Playlet.—Fannie Ward is the star and Lew Cody and Charles Hill Mailes the heads of a good supporting cast in a story of the war. This theme turns on a pleasure loving Frenchwoman who fails to realize what war means to her country and is brought to her senses when her husband, an American, is wounded. The ending is a tragedy, in which the two before they are killed give real service. The subject is finely staged.

URBAN MOVIE CHATS NO. 27—Released by Hodkinson.—Dr. Royal S. Copeland, commissioner of health of New York City,' gives a most interesting and informative illustrated talk on "how to keep cool in hot weather." It covers diet and bathing, sleeping and exercise—and drinking. With rhymed titles we take a cruise through a menagerie. There are several fine views of the Grand Canyon of Arizona.

THE FIRST BARBER — Tony Sarg's Almanac, released by Educational.—Here's a single reel of quaint fun executed by Herbert M. Dawley, "ye Director," and he deals in the period of 1730. He might as well have made it 730, so primitive are his settings and characters. The subject is as novel—and as artistic—as are its predecessors, and that is saying much.

THE HOUSE OF A THOUSAND TREMBLES—Universal Star Comedy.—William Watson is the author and director of a single-reel story in which Neely Edwards is featured, aided and abetted by Bert Roach as the tramp valet. It is a ghost story, and ought to go over easily and well.

THE TIMBER QUEEN.—Episode 6 of the Pathe Serial.—"The Hidden Peril," as the chapter is titled, is filled with action in a snow-covered country, with many combats of the hand-to-hand sort. In this episode the final smash is omitted, leaving it for the beginning of the following chapter, with the observer in suspense.

THE FARMER AND THE MICE—Pathe Fable. — Exemplifying the moral "In rash endeavors to reduce existing ills we may increase our troubles," Cartoonist Paul Terry provides a single reel that is filled with fun. It is a good number.

IT'S A WILD LIFE—Pathe Single-Reel Reissue.—The comedy is all its title implies, with Harold Lloyd, "Snub" Pollard and Bebe Daniels to lead it.

Live News of the West Coast

BY RENEE BEEMAN

WEARING a smile that radiated achievement, P. A. Powers, head of the F. B. O. organization, has returned to Los Angeles from New York, and reports that he is very pleased indeed with the way things are going at the R-C studios.

Mr. Powers finds on his return that seven companies are at work at the studio. Harry Carey is just completing his second picture; Ethel Clayton is embarking on her first; Jane Novak has begun Thelma. Helen Jerome Eddy is at work on her first stellar production; Carter deHaven is well up on his year's schedule of twelve two-reel domestic comedies; Gloria Joy has embarked on her two-reel comedy-drama series, and Johnny Walker is about to begin on a series of six subjects, in which he will be starred.

"There are no shelves in our office," said Powers, "we produced our first Carey pictures with the definite object of putting it where Carey belonged, in the best house in the world. The Kick-Back is playing at the Capitol in New York.

"Our big police drama, In the Name of the Law, so enthused the leading officials of the United States and Canada when it was previewed by them at their annual convention in San Francisco that they voluntarily signed an endorsement. It is running, and will run for weeks to come to sold-out houses at the George M. Cohan Theatre in New York."

Manager Fred Miller of the California Theatre, Los Angeles, previewed some rushes on the Al. Lichtman production, Rich Men's Wives, and was so favorably impressed that he booked the picture, which will be shown at the California immediately upon its completion. Mr. Miller has also booked Charles Ray's Tailor-Made Man, which will be shown in a couple of weeks.

With the first half of the 1922 season closed in the ledgers of the Los Angeles theatres, an unusual situation of runs and bookings is pointed out by Harry David, managing director of the Mission Theatre, who during the past six months has shown just six pictures. These are Disraeli, which ran two weeks; Hail, the Woman, which ran three weeks; Foolish Wives, which ran six weeks; Orphans of the Storm, which ran six weeks; Monte Cristo, which ran five weeks, and A Fool There Was, two weeks. Last year the Mission ran but eleven pictures, and the prediction is made that with the forthcoming fall attractions booked by David, this number will not be exceeded.

Marshall Neilan's production, Minnie, is now receiving the final editing, and will be released in the early fall. D. J. Gary, film editor of the Marshall Neilan productions, has just returned to Los Angeles to give the new picture its final cutting under the producer's supervision.

The industry is entering on one of the most successful seasons enjoyed since the war is the opinion of E. A. Smith, personal representative of Thomas H. Ince, who has just completed a tour of the country.

"From indications throughout the country, I am convinced that beginning this fall the motion picture industry will reach the high-water mark which it touched just before the war," he states. "This applies only to clean, meritorious productions, for the public will no longer tolerate questionable plays.

"As to the talk that the public is losing interest in motion pictures, I have found that wherever a worthwhile picture is shown it is supported to the fullest extent. This was particularly impressed upon me in several cities where business conditions were very bad, where the weather was unusually hot, but where theatres exhibiting big pictures were showing to capacity houses."

The Paramount current productions are The Man Who Saw To-Morrow, starring Thomas Meighan, directed by Al Green. Perley Poore Sheehan and Frank Condon wrote the story. Leatrice Joy has the feminine lead, and in the cast will be found Theodore Roberts, Eva Novak, John Miltern, Albert Roscoe, Alec Francis, June Elvidge, Lawrence Wheat, Robert Brower and Ed. Patrick.

The Booth Tarkington's story, Clarence, which was adapted by Clara Beranger and directed by William deMille, is half through production. Wallace Reid, Agnes Ayres, May McAvoy, Kathryn Williams and others appear in the cast.

Crowds are attracted to the beach these days to watch Gloria Swanson and Conrad Nagel in the filming of The Impossible Mrs. Bellew.

Ebb Tide is now under way, directed by George Melford. The story is being filmed on an island in the Pacific, which has been transformed into a tropical paradise. Waldemar Young and Lorna Moon adapted the story to the screen. Lila Lee, James Kirkwood, Raymond Hatton, George Fawcett, Noah Beery and Jacqueline Logan are the featured players.

Comedy will be found to abound in The Cowboy and the Lady, the current vehicle for Mary Miles Minter and Tom Moore. Highly dramatic scenes are also part of the story, particularly those which take part in the court room during a murder trial.

Rodolph Valentino as The Young Rajah promises splendid results. June Mathis adapted John Ames Mitchell's book, Amos Judd, to the screen. The interior of a Hindu temple and other scenes in the Far East have proven especially effective under the direction of Philip Rosen.

The cutting and titling of Pink Gods will be completed shortly by Penrhyn Stanlaws, and he will start work on Singed Wings, with Bebe Daniels in the lead.

The new series of Fairy Tales as Century Comedies are being prepared under the supervision of Century's president, Julius Stern. The new series will commence with Hansel and Gretel, with Baby Peggy as Gretel and Albert Williams in the role of Hansel. Those others planned for production are The Little Match Girl, Little Bo Peep, Alice in Wonderland and Little Boy Blue.

The entire series, including the first two, Little Red Riding Hood and Jack and the Beanstalk, are being made under the direction of Julius and Abe Stern.

The Cosmosart Studios, Los Angeles, had a formal opening, entertaining over 4000 guests. The entertainment consisted of The Making of Movies and the preview of Heart's Haven. The picture was received with great applause.

The Cosmosart have bought over the B. B. Hampton productions, which was known as the Federal Photoplays, Inc. Heart's Haven is a Hampton production by Clara Louise Burnham. The cast includes Claire Adams, Robert McKim, Claire McDowell, Carl Gantvoort, Betty Brice, Jean Hersholt, Frank Hays and Frankie Lee, with Jean Hersholt directing.

The preview was followed by dancing, with a special jazz orchestra. The entire grounds of the Cosmosart Studios, comprising twenty acres, was in gala array.

The casting for The Shriek has been completed at the Sennett Studios. This is the title for the next Ben Turpin comedy special, and will be directed by F. Richard Jones. Kathryn McGuire will be the featured comedienne in the place of Phyllis Haver, owing to that young lady's temporary engagement to portray Polly Love in the new Goldwyn production of The Christian.

B. P. Schulberg has engaged Victor I. Schertzinger to direct The Lonely Road, the next preferred Picture Pictures contribution to the list of Associated First National attractions in which Katherine MacDonald is to be starred.

The Lonely Road is an original story by Charles Logue, who wrote The Infidel and Heroes and Husbands.

Declaring that many of the motion picture studios have been virtually closed to the scenarios which have been prepared by writers not affiliated with these studios, the Palmer Photoplay Corp. announced that it will attempt to alleviate this condition by producing motion pictures from scenarios prepared by so-called outside writers.

The Palmer Corp. announces it will inaugurate a royalty basis payment scheme for the independent writers.

The Palmer Photoplay was organized four years ago and many prominent producers are included in its advisory council. The corporation is now erecting a building in Hollywood which will be used in carrying out this new policy.

Corinne Griffith will come to Hollywood to film for Vitagraph. Miss Griffith's first picture on the coast will be One Stolen Night.

Jack Coogan, sire of the celebrated Jackie, attributes the youthful film star's success to four persons, not one of whom is himself.

He affirms that Mrs. Coogan taught and influenced the boy, that Sid Grauman, one of the leading exhibitors in Los Angeles, introduced the parents to Charles Chaplin, that Chaplin became impressed with the youngster's talents and co-starred him and Sol Lesser, through his financing genius made Jackie's stardom.

Jackie is now busy in the filming of The Fiddler and I, and promises to be one of the best stories the little fellow has appeared in. Will Hays pronounced Jackie a genius of the first water.

Sid Grauman will transport the Christie Studio to his theatre, Grauman's Million Dollar, for the prologue of the Christie comedy, Bucking Broadway. The many stars from this company will appear and intimate glimpses of the "works" will be presented.

FOR THE EXHIBITORS BOX-OFFICE

EDITED BY GEORGE T. PARDY

Fools of Fortune

Released by American Releasing Corp. Story and Scenario by W. C. Tuttle, Cameraman, King Gray, Directed by Louis William Chaudet. Length 5609 Feet.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Chuck Warner, Frank Dill; Magpie Simpkins, Russes Simpson; Scenery Sims, Tully Marshall; Ike Harper, Frank Brownlee; Milton De Puyster, Thomas Ricketts; Mrs. De Puyster, Lillian Langdon; Marion De Puyster, Marguerite De La Motte.

Chuck Warner, Montana cowboy, reads a newspaper story to the effect that years ago, at the age of twelve, Ashburton De Puyster ran away and is probably now somewhere in the West, ignorant of his heritage as a member of the wealthy De Puyster family in the East. Humorously Chuck conceives the plan of representing bimself as a De Puyster, and persuades his good-natured comrades to embark on the adventure. They journey to the home of tbe De Puysters, and after various setbacks appear before the family. Old Milton De Puyster denies he ever bad a son, and prefers to idolize his daugbter Marion than any possible usurper. So riotously do Chuck and his friends behave that the police are summoned, and finally, facing arrest, Chuck sheepishly admits his deception, but adds tbat his real name is Ashburton and he did run away while a boy. By means of an old watch Mrs. De Puyster recognizes her son by an earlier marriage, and Chuck unexpectedly comes into his own, which includes the friendsbip of Marion, whose eyes hold out larger hopes.

The magazine story Assisting Ananias, written by W. C. Tuttle, takes on the name of Fools of Fortune in the motion picture version. There is some good comedy back of it all but the production is slow and draggy, being padded with material that only indirectly concerns the plot. Little or no advancement is made during the first part of the picture and although there are some fairly good laughs scattered here and there the picture does not contain enough action to put it over.

Points of Appeal.—The train scenes are humorous to a certain degree and then, like the round-up in the De Puyster mansion, are carried to the extreme limit of nonsense. As a whole it may satisfy as a lukewarm comedy but the story is too shallow to justify feature length. Therefore the occasional high spots of comedy have been almost totally swamped with second rate material that considerably reduces the value of the main points of appeal.

Cast.—Frank Dill, as Chuck Warner, the long lost cowboy son of Mrs. De Puyster gives a fairly amusing impersonation and his stunt of wiggling his ears will no doubt get a laugh. Marguerite De La Motte is entitled to much better material than she is given as Marion De Puyster. Lillian Langdon, as Mrs. De Puyster is good. Other members of the cast have for the most part been forced to portray characters that are greatly exaggerated.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—The photography is usually clear and sufficiently lighted. The interiors of the Pullman are well done and lend a realistic atmosphere to this part of the story. Direction for the most part is satisfactory.

Affinities

Ward Lascelles Production, Released by Hodkinson. Story by Mary Roberts Rinehart, Scenario by H. Landers Jackson. Cameraman, Abe Schultz, Directed by Ward Lascelles. Length six reels.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Fanny Illington, Colleen Moore; Day Illington, Jobu Bowers; Ferd Jackson, Joe Bonner; Ida Jackson, Grace Gordon; Prof. Savage, Pietro Sosso.

Day Illington is a golf enthusiast and spends much of his time out on the links. His wife Fanny accompanies him to the club, but is usually entertained by Ferd Jackson while her husband is out playing. Fred convinces her that she is being neglected, and suggests an "affinity" party to include all of the members of their set who are similarly afflicted. Arrangements are made and a few days later the party goes out to an island on a moonlight picnic. When the time arrives for the party to go home Fanny and Ferd are left on the island through a misunderstanding on the part of the others. After a desperate effort they reach the opposite shore, and in order to get back to the city they are forced to appropriate a car that belongs to some other picnickers nearby. In their haste to get home Ferd is arrested for speeding. Fanny finally reaches bome and confesses to Day the following morning what has happened. Day admits that he, too, has been out on a different party with Ida Jackson, and after explanations and apologies they both decide to discard their affinities and stick to each other.

Affinities is a farce with a lot of laughs and a lot of hokum too. It is, however, very inferior material when compared to the other writings from the pen of Mary Roberts Rinehart. The story, or at least what there is of a story, goes along in a hilarious manner dotted with occasional outbursts of humor. At times even some slapstick is resorted to. Affinities is strictly a rollicking bit of entertainment, a conglomeration of good and poor alike, and should serve to amuse patrons who enjoy frivolity for a change.

Points of Appeal.—The greatest asset the picture has is the fact that Mary Roberts Rinehart is the author. The next thing in its favor is that Colleen Moore and John Bowers are in it. There are quite a few situations that will afford plenty of laughs and the picture will no doubt satisfy where this type of entertainment is relished.

Cast. — Colleen Moore displays her usual grace and charm. John Bowers hasn't very much to do in the picture but is satisfactory in the role given him. Joe Bonner, as Ferd Jackson does most of the work for the male members of the cast with a final withdrawal in favor of leaving the hero role to Bowers. The support rendered by others in the cast is satisfactory.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—Good, clear shots are obtained throughout the picture. Exteriors are well filmed. The lighting has been accomplished with good effects. Action is brisk and continuity can be assumed as being satisfactory. Direction good.

Just Tony

Fox Photoplay in Five Parts. Adapted from Max Brand's Novel, "Alcatraz." Director, Lynn F. Reynolds. Running Time, Sixty Minutes. Cameraman, Dan Clark.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Tony, By Himself; Red Ferris, Tom Mix; Marianne Jordan, Claire Adams; Oliver Jordan, J. P. Lockney; Manuel Cordova, Duke Lee; Lew Hervey, Frank Campeau; Shorty, Walt Robbins.

While intoxicated in a Utah saloon, Oliver Jordan, ranchman, fires a shot which slightly wounds Red Ferris, a cowboy. Lew Hervey gets Jordan away without giving him a chance to explain. Ferris recovers quickly and vows to get even if he can find Jordan. Later, while riding through the foothills, Ferris sees "Tony," a fine horse, which is leader of a gang band of wild mustangs. The horse in question is caught and becomes the property of Manuel Cordova, who illtreats him. Tony is entered in a race at a rodeo held at Glosterville. Marianne, daughter of Oliver Jordan, and helping to manage her father's ranch, hopes that the wild horse will win, because its victory will enable her to buy some mares at a lower price. Cordova plots to make Tony lose the race, but Ferris also enters and by clever tactics forces Cordova to win. While abusing Tony the horse breaks loose and kills Cordova. Tony escapes to the wilds again and helps other horses to break away from the Jordan ranch. Marianne, who has met Ferris, induces him to take the job of capturing Tony. Hervey plays on old man Jordan's fears, and persuades him to stay in Glosterville while Ferris is at his ranch. Ferris tracks down Tony and finally captures him, but Tony gets free again and of his own accord acknowledges Ferris as his master. Hervey and his gang plan to kill Ferris. Marianne intervenes and saves the man she has learned to love. They are pursued and their horses shot by Hervey's gang. But Tony appears, they both mount him and are carried to safety. Mutual explanations take place between Ferris and old Jordan and they are reconciled. Ferris wins Tony and Marianne.

An excellent attraction, altogether different from the usual run of Western pictures, Just Tony is the sort of film that will appeal equally to young and old. A more lovable and intelligent creature than Tony, the sagacious steed who divides the dramatic honors with his master, Tom Mix, and Claire Adams, heroine, has never yet appeared on the silver screen. All true lovers of animals will be thrilled with sympathetic delight over the adventures of this most remarkable equine actor and enjoy the well staged riding scenes and development of the lover yarn between the wandering cowboy and the daughter of the ranch owner, with whom through no fault of his own, he becomes involved in a shooting feud. The feature affords clean, wholesome entertainment, is well directed, handsomely photographed and possesses undoubted value from a box office standpoint.

Points of Appeal—The rodeo, with its bucking mustang stunts and exciting race, wherein the hero helps Tony to win despite the "pulling" efforts of the latter's rascally rider, is a splendid bit of skilled camera work, and sympathy for the lovers reigns supreme all through the picture. Red Ferris' adventures during his attempts to capture Tony on the range and the complications which arise when the scheming ranch foreman and his henchmen intervene are admirably outlined, and the escape of the sweethearts from their pursuers, when Tony "carries double," after their horses are shot, brings the feature to a triumphant climax.

Cast.—Tom Mix's genial personality has never been seen to better advantage than in the role of Red Ferris, his horsemanship is unequaled and he gives a performance remarkable for its natural ease and magnetism. Of Tony, it is sufficient to say that that gifted four-footed actor does everything but talk, and Claire Adams figures as an extremely fascinating heroine. The support is all that could be desired.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—There are many fine shots of wide, rolling country, with impressive mountain backgrounds, wood and water, and the lighting is effective. Smooth continuity and fast action prevail.

Blood and Sand

Paramount Photoplay in Eight Parts. Author, Vicente Blasco Ibanez. Scenario by June Mathis. Director, Fred Niblo. Cameraman, Alvin Wyckoff. Running Time, Ninety Minutes.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Juan Gallardo, Rodolph Valentino; Carmen, Lila Lee; Dona Sol, Nita Naldi; El Nacional, George Field; Plumitas, Walter Long; Senora Augustias, Rose Rosanova; Antonio, Leo White; Don Joselito, Charles Belcher; Potaje, Jack Winn; El Carnacione, Marie Marstini; Garabato, Gilbert Clayton; El Pontelliro, Harry Lamont; Marquis de Guevera, George Periolat; Dr. Ruiz, Sidney De Gray; Don Jose, Fred Becker; Senora Nacional, Dorcas Mathews; Fuentes, Wm. Lawrence.

Juan Gallardo becomes one of Spain's most noted bull-fighters and weds his childhood playmate, Carmen. His career is followed with great interest by Don Joselite, a schoolmaster. He and Plumitas, a bandit, are great friends, for the outlaw robs the rich in order to give to the poor. Gallardo is happy with his wife, but she suffers great anxiety when he performs in the arena. Gallardo falls under the fascinations of Dona Sol, widow of a diplomat. He is badly wounded in the arena and nursed back to health by Carmen, but does not forget Dona Sol. Gallardo loses popularity and Carmen begs him to give up his profession, but he refuses. At a bull fight Dona Sol is seen sitting in the company of a handsome stranger. Plumitas is in the audience and is betrayed to the authorities by Dona Sol. He makes a dash for freedom and is shot down. Dying he tells Gallardo that happiness cannot survive if based on bloodshed. Gallardo, bereft of his old fire and dash, goes down before the first charge of the bull he faces. Fatally wounded, he reclines in his wife's arms, realizing at the last that his love for her is unshaken.

It is regretfully seldom that big feature films live up to the reputation built in advance by the publicity experts but it must be admitted that Blood and Sand is quite worthy of the huge boosting campaign which has been conducted in its behalf. With its magnificent settings, perfect Spanish atmosphere, beautiful photography and talented cast of players this picture unhesitatingly takes its place as an attraction de luxe among the season's productions. It is a well deserved triumph for the star, Rodolph Valentino, and a credit to the fine directorial skill of Fred Niblo, who in this instance has fairly surpassed all his previous screen successes. During the initial showing of the film at the Rivoli Theatre, New York, thousands of eager patrons stood patiently in line for hours awaiting their turn to enter the house, where "standing room only" was the order of the day, and the stormy applause which virtually raged throughout every reel spoke volumes for the future of the new masterpiece as a sure-fire box office asset.

Points of Appeal.—In the making of a film designed to please the eye by use of lavish color effects, handsome photography and spectacular "punches," it too frequently happens that the all important human interest angle is thereby sacrificed. But this is most emphatically not the case with Blood and Sand. Exciting as the bull fight scenes are and insistently though the prowess of the matador hero is kept to the front, the love interest is well preserved and the main thread of the story never lost sight of. It is a most deftly woven and absorbing narrative in which the element of suspense holds sway right up to the tragic finale.

Cast.—Valentino, as the ambitious toreador Juan Gallardo, reaches the greatest height he has yet attained as an interpreter of strong dramatic roles. There is not a false note in his entire performance, which is refreshingly free from unnecessary posing, always sincere and full of vibrant energy. Nita Naldi, that curiously exotic beauty, is an ideal siren in the role of Dona Sol, Lila Lee plays Carmen, the wife, pleasingly, Walter Long shines as Plumitas, the bandit and excellent support is rendered by other members of the company.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—Space does not permit of a detailed description of the myriad fine long shots and splendid closeups achieved by the camera, it is sufficient to say that photography and lighting effects are artistically faultless. The continuity is unbroken and the action moves at a lightning clip from start to finish.

Heart's Haven

Benj. B. Hampton Production, Released by Hodkinson. Story by Clara Louise Burnham. Photographed by Gus Peterson and Friend Baker. Directed by Eliot Howe and Jean Hersholt.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Joe Laird, Carl Gantvoort; May Caroline, Claire McDowell; Vivian Breed Claire Adams; Adam Breed, Robert McKim; Gladys Laird, Betty Brice; Bobbie Laird, Frankie Lee; Ella Laird, Mary Jane Irving; Doctor Burchard, Harry Lorraine; Henry Bird, Jean Hersholt; Pynch, Frank Hayes; Mrs. Harohan, Aggie Herring.

Joe Laird is accepted as the new secretary for Adam Breed. He moves with his wife and two children out into the country on a place supplied by Mr. Breed so that he can be close to his work. Joe's mother comes to live with them and his wife continues to shirk the responsibilities of the home and goes off on pleasure. Joe's little son is crippled and while playing with his sister one day they are in danger. Mr. Breed's daughter saves them but at the same time receives a fall that injures her spine. Her case is pronounced hopeless by the doctors but Joe Laird's mother has faith in the power of God and one day shortly afterwards the little boy is able to walk alone. Mr. Breed marvels at the cure and asks May Caroline (Joe's mother) to help his daughter. She visits the girl daily and soon is able to effect a healing. Meanwhile Joe's wife has gone from bad to worse and leaves him to go West to get a divorce. She is killed in an accident and Joe leaves for California with Mr. Breed on business. They are gone a year and when they return he finds that he and his children are in love with Vivian Breed and that Mr. Breed has proposed to Mrs. Laird.

Heart's Haven, written by Clara Louise Burnham, has been adapted for the screen in a production that bears the same name. A splendid cast has been selected in this and through their efforts the somewhat drawn-out situations have been partially relieved. The final outcome of the various love affairs is fairly evident from the early part of the picture and the story seems to follow along the usual lines except for the fact that a religious element, dealing with the power of God in healing the sick, has been given a place of importance throughout. It is quite noticeable that this subject has not been as delicately handled on the screen as was possible to do with the book and from this there may be some who will choose to take exception to the picture, while there are others who will be thoroughly pleased with it.

Points of Appeal.—For those who place their faith in God above everything else this picture will have a tremendous appeal. There is, however, other material in the story that supplies the romance and some comedy that should satisfy. The religious atmosphere that permeates the picture consists of some demonstrations that have been made through daily prayer and the faith of a woman who had gained sufficient understanding to accomplish healing without medical aid.

Cast.—Claire McDowell as May Caroline gives a capable portrayal of the mother role. Betty Brice, as Gladys Laird, also does a convincing bit of acting. Carl Gantvoort, Robert McKim and Claire Adams have been seen to better advantage in other roles that were less cramping than the ones given them in this picture.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—There are some nice exteriors and the sets are attractive. Good lighting prevails. Practically no thrills or any moments of great suspense are registered. Direction good.

Daring Danger

American Releasing Corporation Photoplay in Six Parts. Director, Cliff Smith. Running Time, Sixty Minutes.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Cal Horton, Pete Morrison; Ethel Stanton, Esther Ralston; Bill Stanton, Bill Pyno; Steve Harris, Lou Meehan; Bull Weaver, Bob Fleming.

Cal Horton, ranchman, has suffered considerably at the hands of men who have stolen his cattle repeatedly. A foreman of a neighboring ranch is a confederate of the cattle thieves. The U. S. Government finally awakening to the menace to life and property, Horton is selected to run down the outlaws. He visits his sweetheart, Ethel Stanton, and tells her about his mission, then bids her goodbye. The foreman who is in league with the thieves is also a suitor for Ethel's hand. Due to his hinting that Horton is really a member of the outlaw gang, the engagement between Cal and Ethel is broken off. Horton and his trusted aids ride the plains night and day after the cattle rustlers. There are several hand-to-hand encounters. In a fight Horton is thrown into a river, the current of which leads to a high waterfall. He escapes and swims safely to shore. The sheriff and his men come to Horton's rescue. They trail down the thieves, who are duly captured and the plotting foreman pays the penalty of his deceit. Horton is rewarded by the Government and marries Ethel.

This is a typical Western melodrama, alive with action, well photographed and directed and likely to please those patrons who find entertainment in a series of thrills, one following fast on the heels of another, horseback stunts unlimited, scrapping galore and a love yarn wherein the hero duly wins the girl upon whom he has set his manly affections. There is nothing very original about the plot, it is the same sort of thing which has been exploited on the screen ever since the first "Westerner" hit the popular taste, but as there is "something doing all the time," and the reels slide by with dazzling speed, the feature should prove a fairly good box office proposition.

Points of Appeal.—Frankly melodramatic. The story is one that must be taken on trust, so to speak; you must simply accept the whirl of events as it transpires, without subjecting the plot to any severe criticism, in order to enjoy the wild adventures of hero Pete Morrison and his faithful steed as they plunge through field and flood in pursuit of the U. S. Government's foes. The love interest is well preserved and developed and a happy climax achieved.

Cast.—Pete Morrison, as Cal Horton, rides his intelligent horse, "Brownie," with splendid dash and reckless disregard of their respective bones. He is a very effective hero of the cowboy persuasion, athletic, agile and fully equal to the demands made upon his emotional ability by the many melodramatic situations which fall to his share. Esther Ralston, as Ethel Stanton, is a pretty and fascinating heroine and excellent support is rendered the principals by the remainder of the company.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—There are many fine exterior shots, that in which Cal Horton fights his way successfully through the foaming waters when just on the verge of being carried over the falls being an extremely sensational and spectacular bit of camera work. The western atmosphere is colorful and the lighting adequate. There is no break in the continuity and fast action prevails from start to finish.

Voices of the City

Goldwyn Photoplay in Six Parts. Author, Leroy Scott. Director, Wallace Worsley. Running Time, Sixty-Five Minutes.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Duke McGee, Lon Chaney, Georgia Rodman, Leatrice Joy; Sally, Betty Schade; Detective, Milton Ross; Graham, John Bowers; Jimmy, Cullen Landis; Police Clerk, Lefty Flynn.

Visiting San Francisco's underworld with her sweetheart, Jimmy, Georgia Rodman is an unwilling witness to the murder of a policeman by a man he is trying to arrest in an all-night cafe. Her mother drives her from home. Jimmy takes her to his friend, Duke McGee, who is really a notorious gang leader. McGee, who pretends to protect Georgia, is planning Jimmy's removal, and arranging to get rid of Graham, a young district attorney, who is on his trail. Sally, McGee's girl, is jealous of Georgia. The latter, frightened by McGee's warning that the police are seeking her, remains hidden by day and becomes known as "The Night Rose," because she is only seen after dark. McGee arranges a big midnight ball at which Georgia, Graham and Jimmy are present. Jimmy is shot by a gangster in McGee's pay, but recovers. McGee is shot and killed by Sally. Jimmy and Georgia are united.

This picture was produced by Goldwyn just about a year ago under the title of The Night Rose. It came under the ban of the New York censors for some reason, and only recently, with certain eliminations, was pronounced fit for exhibition in the Empire State. As it now stands the film registers as a crook drama of average interest. It is not a particularly convincing sort of story and the continuity is rather ragged in spots, a fault which may be due to the changes the producers were forced to make in the plot. There is no lack of action, however; the cast is a capable one and admirers of exciting melodrama will likely find it pleasing entertainment.

Points of Appeal.—The night scenes on the Barbary coast are alive with lurid atmosphere and there is plenty of excitement provided as the chief of the gangsters conducts his pursuit of the heroine and formulates schemes of vengeance against the young district attorney for whom he possesses a strong dislike. The arrest of the hero simply because he happens to be present in a restaurant when another man shoots an officer is a somewhat illogical proceeding, but quite in keeping with the rest of the haphazard nature of the plot in which probability is largely sacrificed to melodramatic demands.

Cast.—Lon Chaney plays the part of the gang chief with his usual energy and ability to invest such roles with a species of sinister fascination. Leatrice Joy shares the dramatic honors with Mr. Chaney by giving an extremely artistic performance as the heroine. The underworld types are realistic and the support as a whole satisfactory.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—There are many well-filmed interiors in which deep sets are employed with good advantage, some attractive exteriors and adequate lighting effects. There are several gaps in the continuity, but the action proceeds at a lively gait.

The Queen of the Moulin Rouge

Pyramid Pictures Photoplay Distributed by American Releasing Corporation. Adapted from the Play by Paul Potter. Scenario by Garfield Thompson and Peter Milne. Director, Ray C. Smallwood. Cameraman, Michael Joyce.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Rosalie Anjou, Martha Mansfield; Tom Richards, Joseph Striker; Louis Rousseau, Henry Harmon; Jules Riboux, Fred T. Jones; Gigolette, Jane Thomas; Moozay, Tom Blake; Albert, Lenoir, Mario Carillo.

In the interest of art Jules Rousseau, a violin teacher evolves the scheme of casting a shadow of doubt over the character of Rosalie Anjou, whom Rousseau's pupil, Tom Richards has rescued from an Apache. The professor argues that Tom has not suffered, has not known the sorrows and joys of true love and that therefore his playing lacks "soul." Rosalie, accordingly, is told by Rousseau that she can help Tom by becoming a dancer in the Moulin Rouge and with her salary pay for the student's lessons. Then Rousseau contrives to have Tom discover Rosalie at the notorious cafe. The violinist is torn with the anguish of disappointment and bitterly rebukes Rosalie as a deceiver who made him believe her a sincere, innocent girl while she indulged in the gay life of the Moulin Rouge. In a passionate search for expression of his pain, Tom grasps a violin and plays with a fervor and feeling that elevates his playing to artistic heights. Then the teacher tells him of Rosalie's innocence and there is a reunion.

With its original title and some of the plot left, the Paul Potter play, Queen of the Moulin Rouge, gains much in its transfer from the stage to the screen. The Pyramid production is an interesting picture, not especially because it is The Queen of the Moulin Rouge, and in spite of its excessive length. But here is illusion, atmosphere, color, so deftly measured that the spectator finds something to engage his eye constantly. For all the smart figure it has always cut in the cinema, atmosphere is rarely at once so prominent and important as in The Queen of the Moulin Rouge. The picture fairly drips atmosphere. One has the feeling that here is Paris, with all its gaiety, its sordidness and, though by implication only, its lofty artistic urge. That this has been done with a play fundamentally so inadequate to the purpose is indeed a tribute to those responsible for the production. We repeat, it is too long. There is sufficient incident to keep things going throughout, but an hour and a quarter is more than a spectator should be asked to give to this play.

Points of Appeal.—The scenes are truthful and convincing; the atmosphere pervasive and many spectacular effects are presented. Badly motivated, the plot is not good, but an especially skilful job of scenario writing gives it flow and movement, while each incident has individual interest, thanks to the manner of its telling and presentation.

Cast.—The company is a capable one. Martha Mansfield is effective in the name role, save for her dance interludes, and Arthur Stryker makes good all his opportunities in the lighter moments of the play.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—Ray Smallwood's direction is up to a high standard and merits the highest praise. The camera work is good. The scenario, by Garfield Thompson and Peter Milne, it seems to this reviewer, shows a nice appreciation of photoplay technique.

The New Teacher

Released by Fox. Story by Myra Kelly. Scenario by Dorothy Yost. Cameraman, Frank Good. Directed by Joseph Franz. Length, 4,453 Feet.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Constance Bailey, Shirley Mason; Bruce Von Griff, Alan Forest; Edward Hurley, Earl Metcalf; Henry Hurley, Otto Hoffman; Mrs. Hurley, Ola Norman; Georgie, Pat Moore.

Bruce Von Griff, society man, is daily proposing to Constance Bailey. She refuses him as she feels that her mission in life is to do good, somewhere or somehow. Constance's mother urges her to marry Bruce and tells her daughter that their income has been very much reduced. Constance then decides the time is opportuue for her to contribute to the family support and takes up a position as teacher in one of the schoolhouses on the east side. It is here that she sees the poverty and suffering of the lower class, and she finds that she is able to do her bit in relieving the situations that come directly before her. She has informed Bruce that she has gone abroad for the Summer not wishing to reveal her whereabouts. He searches the passenger list and fails to find her name and forms the conclusion that she is in hiding and sets about to find her. One day quite unexpectedly she runs across him in the slums. He has joined the police force to gain further aid in finding her. After an unpleasant experience with one of the bullies of the neighborhood Bruce comes to the rescue and convinces her that she has undertaken a job that is too big for her shoulders and persuades her that together they will be able to keep up the good work.

The New Teacher, featuring Shirley Mason, is adapted from the story, "The Little Alien," by Myra Kelly. It contains lots of material of common appeal. The story deals with a society girl who takes up slum work, and portrays very descriptively the manner in which "the other half" lives. There are many amusing situations and dramatic incidents that seem to especially cater to the favorings of "the other half" and generally succeed in winning wide admiration for the star. It is well told and carries enough action to swing it along briskly, supplying pathos and humor in generous proportions, and should draw good houses where Miss Mason is a favorite.

Points of Appeal.—New York's East Side has been done rather frequently on the screen here of late, but this type of picture usually finds favor whenever shown. The slum scenes are appealing. The little school room, the children and their pranks, is another entertaining feature and are lively and full of fun. The love element that runs through the story is satisfying and holds the interest.

Cast.—Shirley Mason is well cast in the role as Constance Bailey the society girl who wants to do some good in the world. The material furnished her in this presents ample opportunities for her to play up the philanthropical act and as the new teacher she will reach a warm spot in the kiddies' hearts. Alan Forest is a pleasing hero and does his part well. All of the children in the story are good and afford pleasant diversion.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—Good exteriors are shown and the interior sets are well lighted and adequate for the picture. The story progresses in a likeable manner and has been capably directed.

Man's Law and God's

Finis Fox Production Released by American Releasing Corp. Written and Directed by Finis Fox. Length 4781 Feet.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Bruce MacDonald, Jack Livingston; Mrs. MacDonald, Kate Anderson; Uncle Jimmy, Bohby Mack; Kitty Roshay, Ethel Shannon; Aunt Jenny, Joy Winthrop; "Cameo" Brooks, George Cummings; Helen DeBrose, Jose Melville.

Bruce MacDonald, of the Northwest Mounted, swears to avenge the death of his mother, who described the murderer just before her death. Bruce goes to "Uncle Jimmy's" cabin and finds the old bachelor reading a matrimonial paper. "Uncle Jimmy," an old bachelor with a blighted romance, is caught by Bruce MacDonald of the Northwest Mounted perusiug a matrimonial paper. He tells Bruce that for a joke he is going to insert an ad. In Seattle Kitty Roshay, the daughter of a wealthy mining man, happens to pick up one of the papers and sees the ad that old Jim has put in describing Bruce instead of himself. The girl also seeking a bit of fun replies, inclosing a picture and in return receives a photograph of the Northwester. She receives a letter from her father telling her to join him at Eagle's Nest, and she leaves at once. Her maiden Aunt finds the letters from XYZ, and fears that the girl has gone to him instead of her father, so she follows. Arriving at the little town she asks to be directed to her father and a stranger offers to take her to him. On the way he gets the girl out of the conveyance and bribes the driver to leave them. Kitty battles with him, and he receives a fall that renders him unconscious and she makes her escape. She takes refuge in a deserted cabin and is surprised to find Bruce MacDonald there. He orders her to surrender, mistaking her for a woman whom he has been sent to arrest. She recognizes him from the photo, but he of course has never been told of the exchange of photographs. Bruce later captures the real criminal and also finds the man who murdered his mother. A romance follows between Kitty and Bruce and Aunt Jenny and Uncle Jimmy fiud each other after forty years' separation.

Man's Law and God's from first appearances closely resembles the usual run of stories set in the locale of the Canadian Northwest. It has been made somewhat different by bringing in a romance that has its origin through a matrimonial paper. The plot with the frequent touches of comedy hovers closely around the melodramatic and a fair amount of interest is maintained throughout. There are some thrills and a few moments of suspense and the production should please an audience that is not overly critical in regards to strictly logical material.

Points of Appeal.—The title has no evident connection with the story except in one instance. The novelty of bringing the hero and heroine together through an advertisement placed in a newspaper is rather well worked out and affords a pleasing note to the story. There is no particular reason why the picture could not have been produced without the murder entering into it unless this was included to furnish additional thrills.

Cast. — Jack Livingston is a good type for the role in which he has been cast as Bruce MacDonald, the guardian of the peace in the great Northwest. His acting is pleasing and well done. Ethel Shannon, as Kitty Roshay is also a likable heroine. Bobby Mack, as Uncle Jimmy and Joy Winthrop as Kitty's maiden aunt both give satisfactory character performances. The support is usual.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—There are occasionally some nice exterior views. The interiors are adequate and good lighting prevails. Continuity fairly smooth and action generally satisfactory. Direction O. K.

Helps Pianist Break Record

Showman Sets Up Shop in Store Window and Gives Show to Endurance Contestant

J. L. McCurdy, manager of the Standard Theatre, Cleveland, Ohio, is an opportunist. One night a few weeks ago he was reading a newspaper account of the attempt of William E. Arnold to beat the endurance record for piano playing in which the following paragraph appeared: "If I could only have the movies to watch and keep my mind off this job, I know I'd win," he (Arnold) said as his twenty-fifth hour of continuous playing began."

McCurdy immediately rounded up a projector, an operator, a print of Outside the Law, two Century comedies and the show he was playing that week at the Standard Theatre. He set up shop right in the immense show window of the Wurlitzer store and gave Arnold a show of his own. Several hundred interested spectators also enjoyed the performance which lasted from 1 a. m. to 8 a. m. A bulletin board in the window read: "Courtesy of Standard Theatre and Universal Film Exchange."

Arnold broke the former record, 44 hours and 30 minutes by more than half an hour, his new mark being 45 hours and 1 minute. "Thanks to Universal's kindness," he said to reporters just before breaking the world's record, "I was able to pass the worst stage of the grind successfully, forgetting entirely my strain in watching Priscilla Dean's wonderful work."

Personal Indorsements

Just as long as people enjoy a little flattery this very human trait can be capitalized by the wise showman—provided he doesn't run it into the ground and become known as a heat atmosphere artist.

Well, the business men of Tampa, Fla., are no exception to the rule, so H. C. Frost wrote fifty letters to fifty of the most prominent men of Tampa—mayor, president of the Chamber of Commerce, presidents of all the banks, etc., extending an invitation to a private showing of Our Leading Citizen, which was another example of the clean and wholesome picture program that the Victory Theatre was determined to give Tampa. A card was inclosed with the letter and each man was asked to write in a few words on the reverse side of the card his opinion of the picture.

These indorsements were then rushed to the local newspaper and arranged in an ad which was headed "What Tampa's Leading Citizens Think of Our Leading Citizen."

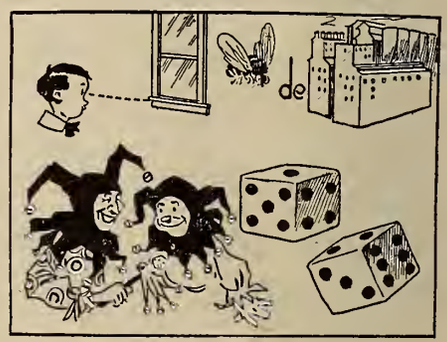
Ready-Made Puzzles

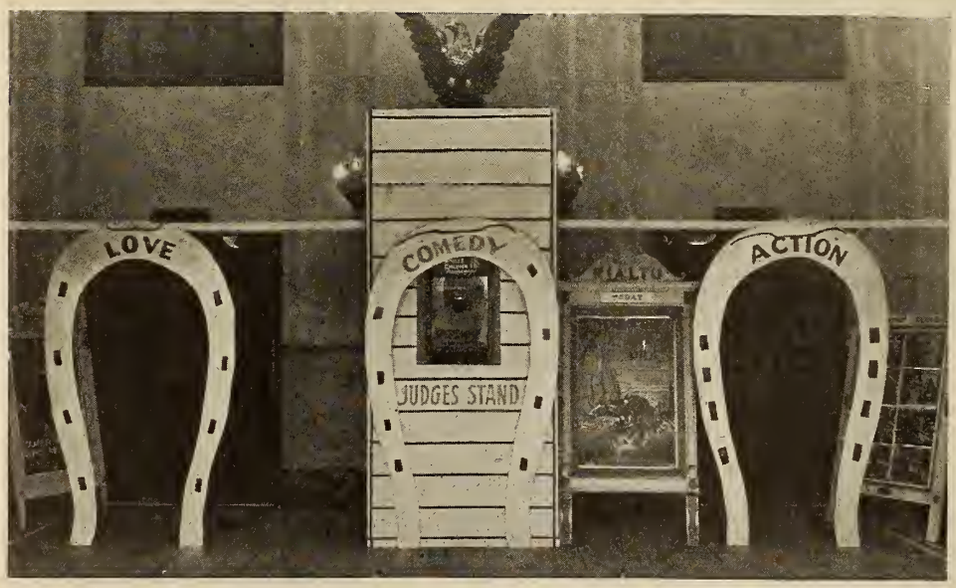
A puzzle stunt that will facilitate tieups between newspapers and theatres running Fool's Paradise is included in the exploitation material prepared by Paramount. This article is a picture puzzle made up in mats all ready for insertion in the newspaper.

Interest in these contests goes on unabated, and their continued fascination for the public and children especially is shown in recent reports from theatres which used them. Fifteen thousand replies are said to have been received by a Newark newspaper which ran a puzzle contest in conjunction with the Newark Theatre.

The prizes to be awarded those who solve the riddle is a matter that may be economically taken care of by offering passes.

MOVIE FANS SOLVE THIS ONE





Playing Up the Races

Few features of the photoplay exceed in picturesqueness the race track element. Consequently, it is rather the usual thing to find lobby displays built up around the race track phase whenever opportunity affords. The three lobbies here reproduced are good examples of the colorful effects possible with fairly simple materials of decoration.

The lobby of the Rialto, Augusta, Ga., shown to the left, employed painted composition board. Altogether an effective setting for Goldwyn's When Romance Rides.

Below is the front display used by the Rivoli, Columbia, S. C., for the R. C. Production Queen O' the Turf.

Equipping the Theatre

Entertaining youngsters at a special advance showing proved a profitable inauguration of a week's run of First National's "Trouble" at the Circle Theatre, Indianapolis. The children were assembled and marched to the theatre carrying signs that "told the world" they were on their way to have a good time. The invitation performance was given in conjunction with the Indianapolis "Star." Interest in the stunt was heightened through a tieup with a local ice cream company which gave out cones to the children on entering the theatre and advertised it with signs pasted on its trucks. The attendance was in the neighborhood of 2000 at the advance showing, and 2000 kids can produce a lot of verbal advertising

Exploitorials

"LOCAL stuff" is on the increase. The day when most every town no matter how small will see events of local interest regularly on their favorite screens seems to be coming with a rush. Exhibitor enterprise is doing the thing, too. Home talent films gotten up to exploit features seem to be scoring so emphatically that they will make their way to the fore sooner than it was expected they would.

MAILING lists are not a hobby. In introducing a new article, a chewing-gum manufacturer whose product has been advertised until it is a byword, recently directed his greatest effort to the mailing list. Once upon a time a list was regarded as something that could be wrought only by some sort of magic, which led to a valuation of everything from a million up being put on the list of a leading mail-order house. Occultism gives way to a little systematic labor. Illustration: the series of articles on mailing lists published in the Exploitation pages of EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW, commencing with the Directory Number dated July 8 and concluded in the issue of Aug. 5.

IT is not the film alone that educates. Other branches of the industry are forces working in that direction. Every exhibitor who makes a tieup of mutual profit with a fellow business man is demonstrating, not preaching, the lofty doctrine of fraternity, co-operation and harmony between men.

RADIO, not so long since hailed in certain quarters as the "Bogey" who would gobble up the movies, lends itself nicely to the general enterprise of the showman. Exhibitors who installed receiving sets and arranged a radio address by stars in conjunction with their appearance on the screen played to S. R. O. on the stunt. Ed. Hyman used a certain small portion of his diplomatic store and a Brooklyn broadcasting station sent out word that "The Storm" was reported on its way to town. Later it sent a correction and announced that the "Storm" reported earlier was to be the feature at the Mark Strand Theatre, Brooklyn, gave the date and all particulars.

The Hot Weather as Conversation

The Views and Discussions of Some Exhibitors on How and How Not to Meet the Summer Problem

Hot weather expedients unfailingly dominate the discussion and discourse for the entire stretch of the straw-hat season. This recurrent fever, always manifesting the same symptoms in much the same form, gives rise to the suspicion that the hot weather occupies the same position in the realm of the film trade that weather in general holds in the stock conversation of the great human mass as a whole.

However, it would be disingenuous and erroneous to suggest that nothing definite has come out of all this "summer talk." From several quarters we learn that exhibitors who stand high in their profession have some very positive views on the subject. These expressions, of course, show a wide divergence of viewpoint and are downright contradictory in some cases.

We find one big chain of theatres emphasizing in its advertising the fact that cooling and ventilating systems, as efficient as they were costly to install, assure all patrons of a "cool, comfortable evening of entertainment." Another takes the stand that it is a decided mistake to even mention hot weather or suggest it in any fashion whatsoever.

One of the most ambitious of these recent hot weather essays is a series of suggestions offered by A. Mike Vogel, Paramount exploiteer in St. Louis. "Change your lights," says Vogel, "both inside and outside, to soft blue or green. Red and orange suggest heat. Blue and green suggest the opposite. Use white paint in your lobby. It costs just a few cents a day," continues Mr. Vogel, "to serve cold lemonade in your lobby. Don't charge for it. The investment will be returned over and over again. Have the lemonade stand just inside the door and serve customers as they come in. Invest in fans. And fire the first employee who says 'Aint it hot?'"

In the matter of advertising copy we have the Balaban and Katz example of playing up the cooling systems of their Tivoli, Riviera and Central Park theatres in Chicago. This campaign was a big newspaper drive and was reported to have shown immediate results at the box office —so much so that other theatres in that city followed suit.

On the other hand, Edward L. Hyman, managing director of the Brooklyn Mark Strand, emphatically takes the stand against mention of hot weather even by suggestion in advertising matter. "It has been my experience," says Mr. Hyman, in a recent article in EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW, "that every effort made to create an atmosphere of coolness within the theatre and outside pays greater dividends than by putting an idea of heat into a possible patron's mind through advertising."

Booking photoplays that play in a locale of the snowdrifts—the Canadian Northwest, or the chilly regions at either extreme from the equator, is a method that has enjoyed some vogue this year. S. L. Rothapfel opened his summer season at the Capitol in New York with three or four successive weeks of Northland dramas, a fact commented upon quite generally by the press reviewers.

Lobby displays in which the frosty atmosphere predominates appear to be one of the most effective antidotes for sluggishness at the box office during the warm weather. Houses all over the country repeatedly grasp the opportunity for such displays whenever any feature of the program has a suggestion of "snow stuff" whereon to hang a display.

To produce these effects requires nothing extraordinarily elaborate or expensive in the way of properties. The photographs of lobbies of summer design shown on this page illustrate that. The lobby for the Fox production, A Virgin Paradise, required nothing more than some pine and cane branches and a stuffed animal borrowed from a local furrier. The lobby for Paramount's Over the Border, the Selznick play, Channing of the Northwest, Arrow's The Broken Silence, and the First National attractions, Smilin' Through, The Cave Girl and The Silent Call, illustrated here, did not impose any great expense upon the theatre and each one individually is reported to have produced real results at the box office.

Desmoreaux's Campaign a Winner

Wisconsin Exhibitor Puts Universal Serial Over with Ingenious and Comprehensive Exploitation

By Arthur P. Desmoreaux

Arthur Desmoreaux's campaign to exploit "Robinson Crusoe" was awarded one of the four weekly prizes and the capital prize for the month of April in the Universal contest for exhibitors. After reading Mr. Desmoreaux's description of his campaign and considering the ingenuous manner of its conceit and execution it will be apparent that the campaign was certainly of prize-winning caliber. A stunt not included in the account below, but one which won the exhibitor and the theatre the lasting esteem and good-will of his community, was a special free matinee for the crippled children of a local hospital. Following the show the children were taken outside and filmed by a movie camera and the film was shown at the hospital.

Never in the history of Madison has any production received the unusual exploitation and co-operation accorded the opening chapter of Robinson Crusoe at the Strand Theatre.

The first chapter was shown at a free performance to over 1500 children. The kiddies assembled at a given point one hour before the performance and marched around the State Capitol square, led by the Boy Scouts Fife and Drum Corps and 300 Boy Scouts, with Robinson Crusoe himself and his faithful dog in the lead of the procession.

Two 12-ft. banners in glaring letters, informed the inhabitants that the throng were on their way to the Strand to see the first chapter of Robinson Crusoe, and the Strand cameraman was on the job to click every movement of importance, the tripod of the camera carrying a placard announcing the fact that the pictures being taken would be shown in connection with chapter two.

When the procession reached the theatre the Mayor of Madison was in front of the house with the Strand Key of Happiness, a large 4-ft. wooden key, which he handed to Robinson Crusoe, who proceeded to open up the theatre.

A brief talk by Mayor Kittelson opened the showing. Immediately following the show, the crowd marched to the State Capitol, where the Boy Scouts gave an exhibition in scoutcraft.

The following Saturday afternoon was the date advertised for the opening chapter, which had already been witnessed by the children. Did they come back to see the same chapter they had seen the week before? Here's the answer: "It was my intention to run this subject once only, between the first and second afternoon performances. The doors opened for the 2 o'clock show at 1.30 and the 1500 seats were all occupied by 2.10. Over 900 people jammed the spacious lobby for the second show, which necessitated our running Crusoe for the two performances. This was a record-breaking crowd, by far, for any Saturday afternoon at any theatre in this city.

"The big problem that confronted us in the beginning was an appropriate outfit for Crusoe. It was impossible to rent or purchase a costume anywhere, all available costumers being combed. Neither was it possible to obtain the proper fur to make the suit. There was only one course to pursue, so we made the rounds of the meat markets in the vicinity for a sufficient number of raw calf skins to make the coat, trousers, umbrella and hat. Madison boasts of no tanneries, so we went into the tanning business, temporarily. The University of Wisconsin furnished the formula and seven days later Crusoe had his outfit."

A good window tie-up was put over with the Commercial National Bank in connection with this showing. A large pile of dirt was used in the foreground of their window. Several pieces of crushed stone, dipped into gilt to resemble gold nuggets, lie in the center of a hole in the dirt, a card adjoining reading "Robinson Crusoe had no bank account. He buried his wealth." Another card read, "Buried money is very unsafe and draws no interest. Madison people deposit their money in the Commercial National Bank. One dollar opens an account."

Crusoe, in his outfit, posed in this window with an old pick and shovel, the background being covered with Crusoe advertising matter.

It is only of comparatively recent times that the State Theatre, Pittsburgh, has used lobby displays. Non-believers for some time, the management finally tried a display and the results obtained are receiving testimony in the finely designed displays now in practice. An especially good example of the arrangements made by Manager Charles S. Smith of the State is this scene reproduction on the walls of the lobby for Pathe's "Nanook of the North."

This is the way the front of the Modjeska Theatre, Augusta, looked when "The Sheik's Wife" was playing. Through the tent door can be seen a miniature desert scene. It was made on a box 6 feet square and 2½ feet high. Sand was heaped into hills and valleys and a tiny doll was dressed like an Arab. The tenting, which almost covered the front of the lobby, was red and white Exploitation and ballyhoo in the oil fields. This triangular shaped wagon was sent out to bring them in to see First National's "Smilin' Through" when it played the Lyric, Burkburnett, Tex. Manager H. H. Holman also had a lobby display featuring color panels of Norma Talmadge as business getters for his show.

Something for Baby

Gordon's Central Square Theatre, Boston got out two novelty stunts for "Beyond the Rocks" which were nearly 100 per cent effective. One was a little envelope with the following on the cover:

You will be surprised—but don't throw this at anybody.

Upon opening, the recipient found a little rock and card reading:

This is a lucky stone. Keep it in your pocket. It will carry you safely "Beyond the Rocks." See why and how in this Paramount Picture at the Gordon Central Square Theatre.

The other novelty was a similar envelope with the following card enclosed.

Use this in case of accident. Gloria Swanson met with a series of accidents in "Beyond the Rocks" but Rodolph Valentino was always there to save her. You will see this Paramount Picture at Gordon's Central Square Theatre.

McConville says this stunt was one hundred per cent effective because nobody would throw the pin away and most people carried both the card and pin home in their pockets.

Rea's Teaser Campaign

One of the most illuminating illustrations of the effective use of a teaser campaign was provided by George Rea when he played Tol'able David at the Forum Theatre, Hillsboro, Ohio. Two weeks before the opening of the First National attraction, Rea plastered every foot of the space within a radius of two miles of billboards and stands with the sign "June 22."

This, in big, bold red lettering attracted attention and aroused interest. After two days the one word "Forum," the name of the theatre, was put before every date sign.

Several days after that the name "Richard Barthelmess" was added to the sign already legible, and finally the title of his new picture.

Frozen Pictures

To get a sufficiently chilly atmosphere for James Oliver Curwood's story Broken Silences, Manager J. B. Robertson used cedar trees covered with artificial snow and ice and a miniature snow-covered cottage. But what really provided a breath of frigid air which was more realistic than anything else, was a huge cake of ice into which were frozen stills on the picture. Several of these cakes were made up, one taking the place of the other as soon as it began to melt. At night these were sent back to the ice plant. They attracted ever so much attention and were inexpensive.

Harem Gazing

For $5 Phil Gersdorf increased business at least 15 per cent when he ran The Isle of Zorda in the Capital Theatre, Macon, Ga. He simply used a shadow box in the lobby, made to represent the casement window of a harem. The harem 6-sheet included in the accessories formed the background and with the proper draperies and lights it attracted considerable attention.

Putting the Show in the Merchant's Display

The arrangement for Metro's "The Four Horsemen" was valuable to the merchant and attractive to the public because of striking effect. "Screen Stars and Clothes," a natural tieup illustrated by this window for Paramount's "Beyond the Rocks."

Milwaukee Journal files displayed in conjunction with showing at Saxe's Strand of the Universal film of the McKinley inauguration.

Where an idea, a bit of imagination, supplied the means. "Your handkerchiefs are here" is the line that got the Rex Theatre, Oshkosh, a big flash for United Artists' "Orphans of the Storm."

A tieup of mutual interest. Cutouts of Jackie Coogan, autographed baseballs, and the display for First National's "Trouble" was complete. Through the song of that title "Smilin' Through" has had window displays in music stores to the number of a thousand and more.

Paramount's "The Beauty Shop" displayed in the window of a shop that dispenses charm at a fair profit per bottle, box or jar. The new flapper dolls were an important feature of this arrangement by the 103rd Street Theatre, New York City.

H. C. Griffin borrowed six desks from the public schools of St. Petersburg and put them in the lobby of the Pheil Theatre. He made two blackboards by painting beaverboard a flat black and he provided chalk with which several children were allowed to write their opinion of the picture. So many boys and girls hung around to be able to sit in the seats that Manager Griffin had to make up a waiting list.

Manager George Schade of Schade's Theatre, Sandusky, O., took advantage of an Elks' convention to deck out the front of his theatre in holiday fashion. The decoration of flags and bunting combined with "Welcome Elks" banners won the theatre a favorable place in the minds of the visiting Elks.

Plays Up Beauty

S. S. Wallace, Jr., featured the beauty angle in Beauty's Worth when he played it in the Capitol Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla., and had two of the leading merchants co-operate with him in window displays and for a fashion show on the stage of the theatre. Their windows held the most delectable gowns, hats and wraps that they possessed and oil paintings of Marion Davies were displayed conspicuously.

For his fashion show the very smartest apparel the stores could boast was placed on figures lent by the stores. Mr. Wallace built a box about a yard square with a plate glass top. About twenty-five lights were strung around the interior of the box so that when the figure stood upon this pedestal it was thrown into bold relief. The rest of the stage was dark and the curtain parted only far enough to reveal each figure as it was placed. The color wheel was used, making the display even more effective. The public felt that, with Marion Davies and the fashion show both, they had their money's worth of beauty and boosted the show to their friends.

Ad a Public Service

Seasonal timeliness added a new element to an old Smilin' Through exploitation stunt when the picture played the Colonial Theatre, Cassapolis, Mich. Manager Owens took time by the forelock and issued this warning:

"Be Careful in the Handling of Firearms and Fireworks and You'll all Go Smilin' Through 1922."

The division of public safety co-operated and ordered the distribution of the cards carrying this warning at every public place. It helped the picture and gave the manager a reputation for being a public-spirited citizen.

Starts Something

Phil Gersdorf started a campaign in the Macon, Georgia, newspapers several days in advance of the run, asking if all the girls of Macon had gone Boy Crazy. He worded these like some pessimistic old duck writing to the editor.

He also distributed 1000 small cards inviting the girls of Macon to be his guests at the Rialto. All that was necessary was for them to bring two boys with them. Any number of girls came with two escorts who bought tickets while she smiled at the ticket seller and doorman.

Varies the Stunt

The Garden Theatre, Battle Creek, Mich., had run Peck's Bad Boy, the exploitation for which centered around a Jackie Coogan contest and other angles of the young star's daily habits and personal characteristics. Along came My Boy, and the manager of the Garden, determined to give his patrons a change of program, selected the old sea captain as a picturesque figure to vary the street menu for a score of Jackie impersonators.

An old salt was found who dressed up to resemble the captain and gave out cards advertising the picture.

Lobby Displays Reduced to a Technique

Lobby displays designed by Manager Noble Hearne, of the Superba Theatre, Los Angeles. Mr. Hearne gives careful attention to detail in contriving his decorations and through the use of stock articles, such as the display board over the entrance and the frames at either corner, succeeds in maintaining the individuality of the theatre. The contrast between the display and the two Universal attractions Out of the Silent North and Once to Every Woman was accomplished more by the detail than the scheme of decoration. In both cases the box office, the lobby ceiling and cutouts served as the main features. For Once to Every Woman the ticket booth was hung with Chinese embroideries, the ceiling latticed and entwined with lotus flowers. Lanterns and cretonne used in the display frames completed the picture. The display for Out of the Silent North was made up with painted board to give the log cabin effect to the ticket booth and stairway entrance and boughs hung from the ceiling.

Infidelity Teaser Campaign

How One Exhibitor Startled the Community and Kept Them Talking

Glenwood, Iowa, almost called out the Ku Klux Klan to put Hezekiah Corntassel in order. Hezekiah began airing his dirty linen outdoors. Through the medium of the Mills County Tribune, Glenwood, he announced in a black-bordered quarter page ad that he was going to leave his Rebecca, as it was time for a change.

Rebecca got sore and answered that he had better think twice before he changed his wife. On the third day Zeke repented and said he had seen Why Change Your Wife in Omaha, Neb., and it got him. He was sorry and invited Rebecca to go with him to see Why Change Your Wife playing in Glenwood at the Crystal Theatre.

As a teaser campaign it ranks as nearly perfect. The first ad got a big flash. The catch line read "Why I'm Leaving My Wife Rebecca"—and didn't mention a word about the title of the picture.

The second ad introduced the title, but told nothing about it. The third flash gave the game away. The ad ran, as follows:

WHY I'M LEAVING MY WIFE, REBECCA

They's been many a roomer in these yere parts sayin' as I'm a-gonner leave my wife, Becky. Well, folks, I hain't sayin' I hain't! Beck's been a good girl ter me, but as I ernounced at the last eleckshun, hit's time fer a change. So I'm a-gettin' out. Good-bye, Beck, and good buy folks. I'm a-gonner try my luck with some other woman.—Hezekiah Corntassel.

TAKE CARE, ZEKE!

To the good folks uv Glenwood, as hez been wonderin' what Zeke's been drinkin': Why is this good-fernuthin' husband uv mine, Hezekiah Corntassel, goin' ter leave me? Hain't a-took good keer o' him? Hain't I treated him right? Hain't it true thet the only support he ever got outside uv me wuz his suspenders, and hain't I give him them? Zeke, afore yer spend my two dollars fer yer railroad fare, calc-late and ponder:

"Why Change Your Wife."

—Rebecca Corntassel.

MEBBE YER RIGHT, BECKY

I been a-thinkin' uv what yer sed last Monday, Rebecca, and don't know but what I'll stay. Hit's because I loves yer, Beck, and besides, if I gits, the boys sez they'll string me up. So I hain't a-goin', I saw a pitcher in Omaha not a'long ago, and hit's acome back ter me. Hit's name is

"Why Change Your Wife."
And it's a-playin' at the CRYSTAL THEATRE

Prize Exploitation

Benjamin Wallerstein of the Broadway Theatre, Buffalo, has won a $50 prize for his exploitation of Universal's Robinson Crusoe. Mr. Wallerstein turned his lobby into a log cabin, put a man, dressed like Robinson, on the streets, painted footprints of Friday on streets for blocks and elaborately decorated the marquise. Business, by the way, was overflow as a result of his efforts.

The Rialto, Waterloo, Iowa, displayed a cutout from the 24-sheet designed by Associated Exhibitors for its presentation of "The Devil." A "Go and See The Devil" in electrics and plenty of illumination gave the theatre a long-distance attraction value at night. Display arranged by Alexander Frank.

EQUIPPING THE THEATRE

Novel Exploitation of New Chairs

New Collins Theatre in New Jersey Installs Mov-Ezy Chairs and Holds Contest to Determine How Patrons Like Them

The first theatre in the East to completely install the new Mov-Ezy chairs is the New Collins Theatre, Lyndhurst, New Jersey; and the management made the most of the innovation by exploiting the new chairs and arousing public interest in the latest angle of theatre comfort.

The opening took place at the evening performance on August 1. For several days the country surrounding Lyndhurst, including several small cities larger than Lyndhurst, was broadcasted with the announcement that the Collins would show the people something new in seat comfort and that a contest with awards of $100 and season passes for the best article on why the patrons preferred the new type of seat would be held. The importance of the film for that one evening was really dimmed, so great was the interest in the new chairs.

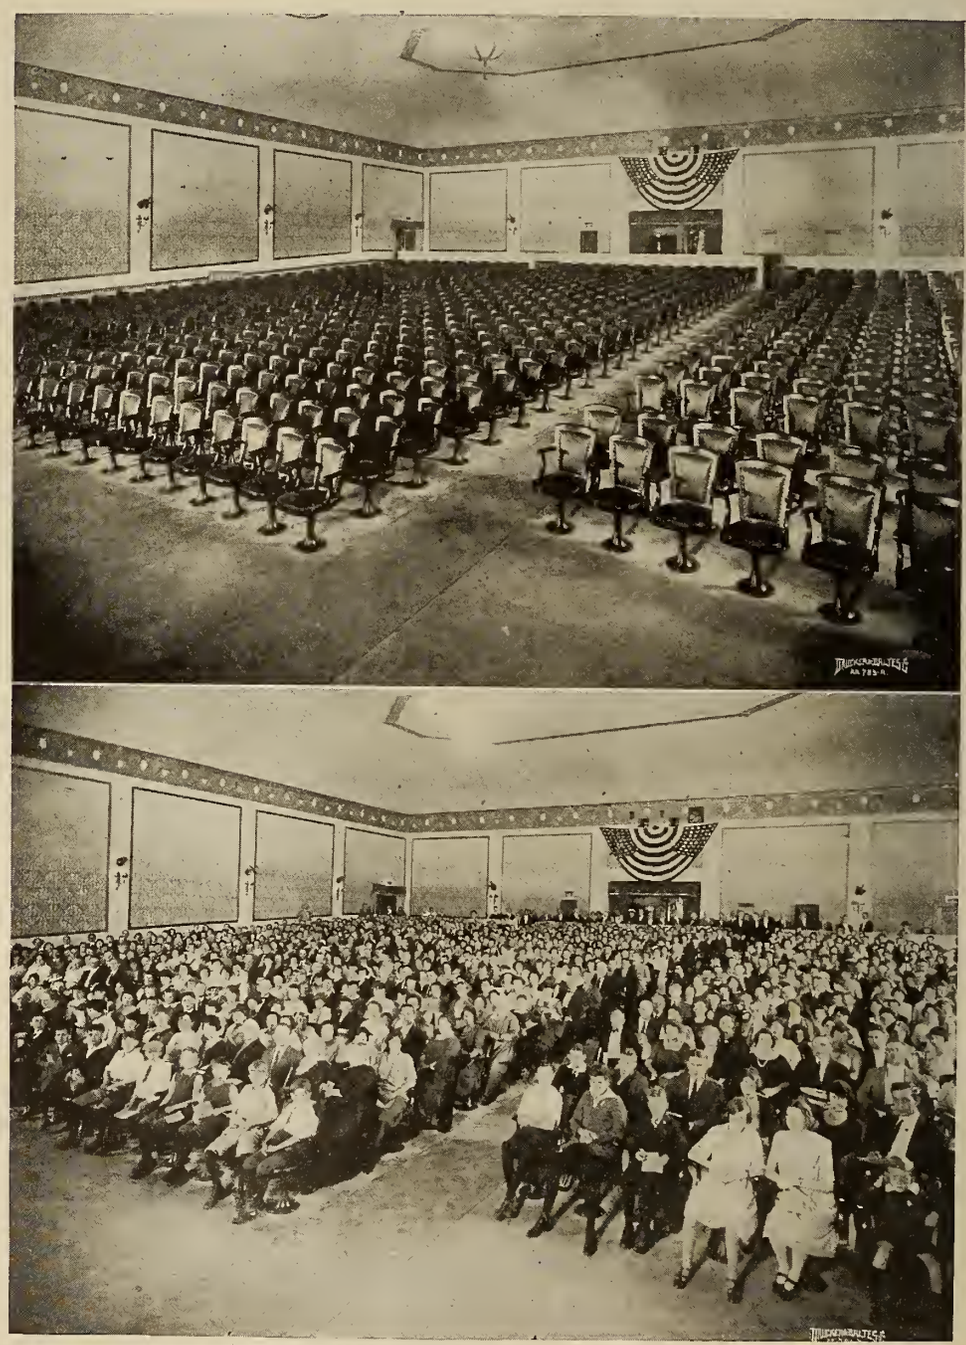
When the audience was seated the opening number on the bill, a specially made reel illustrating the advantages of the new chair, with neat titles was shown. It showed how patrons passing along rows, going to or from their seats, were not forced to disturb those who were seated and held enrapt by the picture.

The film showed also how a quarter turn of the new chair allows ample space for the moving patron to pass without cramping the knees of the seated patron or compelling the latter to arise. It did not require much time for the audience to appreciate the new arrangement and on the day following the premiere contest letters began to pour into the theatre office.

The new chair has been in process of development for quite a time. They are patented and the manufacturers, Josiah Partridge & Sons of New York City, state that they are noiseless in operation and swing back into position when not intentionally turned to one side. In its statement to theatre owners the company says:

"The most important feature of the appearance and comfort of a theatre is the seating arrangements. One glance at the Mov-Ezy chairs suggests what their installation will mean to your patrons.

"Mov-Ezy chairs eliminate the annoyance, inconvenience, and interruptions occasioned by late arrivals endeavoring to get to their chairs by climbing and stumbling over persons already seated. A quarter turn of the chair, without the necessity of its occupant rising, provides ample passage space. Mov-Ezy chairs always maintain perfect alignment except when intentionally swung to one side. They are noiseless.

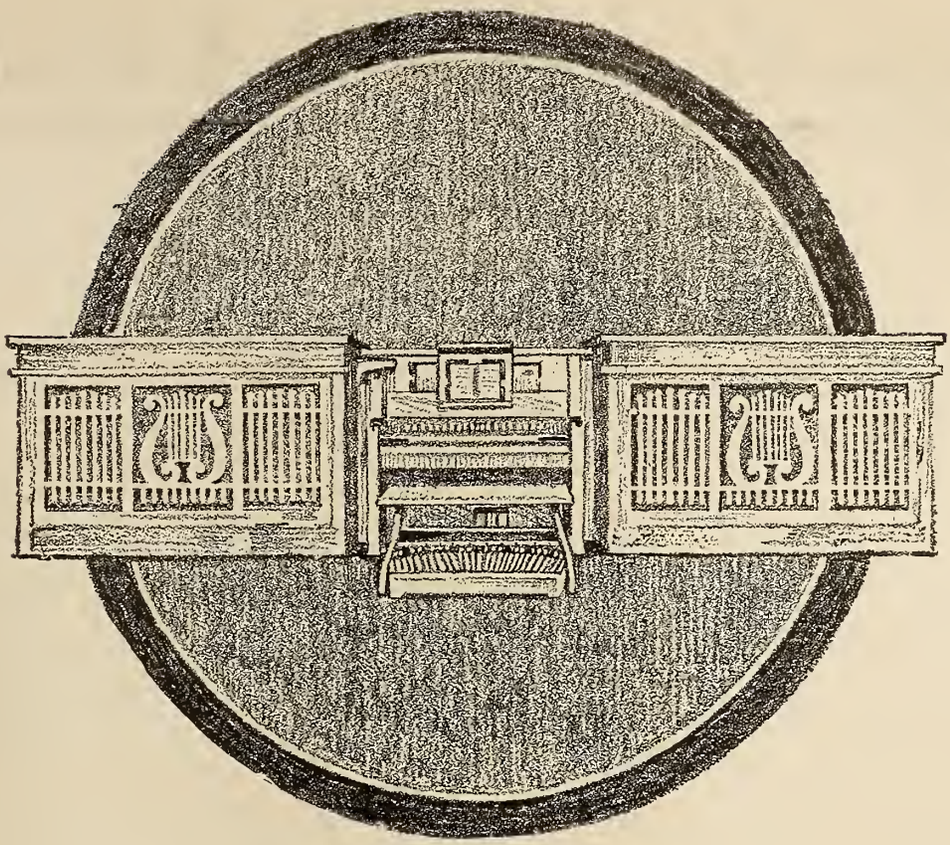


EXPLOITED NEW STYLE THEATRE CHAIR

The upper photograph gives one a clear idea of the neat arrangement of the new Mov-Ezy chair installed by Josiah Partridge and Sons Co., N. Y. City, in the New Collins Theatre, Lyndhurst, N. J. It is easy to picture the ease with which the theatre floor may be cleaned with this type of chair installed. On the opening night the audience shown in lower photo engaged in a contest to determine who could write the best description of the chair and why it was preferred.

"Mov-Ezy chairs are individual chairs, each with two arm rests. They are roomy, comfortable and convenient, presenting a splendid and distinctive appearance, allowing each person a maximum of freedom of movement, yet taking up no more actual floor space than the old-fashioned cramping and immovable type. It requires less time to fill and empty a theatre where they are installed, besides improving sanitation and cleaning.

"Mov-Ezy chairs come in a wide variety of desirable types designed to harmonize with any scheme of interior decoration."



Appealing Music—
The Mark of Good Management

No longer can even the smallest home of silent drama succeed without good music.

The most prosperous house in any community has recognized the pulling power of superior, appropriate musical accompaniments.

The wonderful Cremona Orchestra-Organ contributes the musical background so necessary to put your film across big. South Sea Islands or Labrador settings, travel, comedy, or what-not, there is instantly available just the right music pipe-organ, orchestra or combination, played either by hand, by standard player roll or solo roll to best create that sense of reality that satisfies the lover of pictures.

But best of all—the Cremona is not prohibitive for the smaller house. Write for literature.

It Can Be Done—With Service

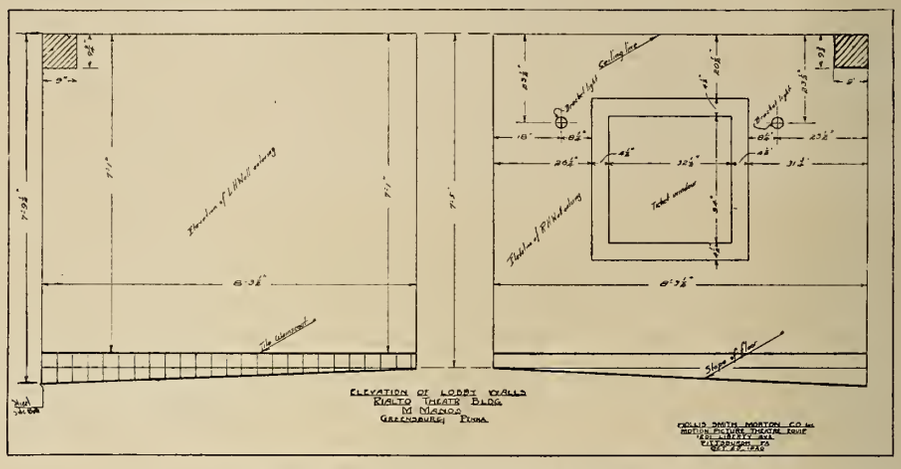
The Problem of Putting Poster Frames in Side of Lobby With Ticket Office Was Presented and Solved

Nearly eight and a half feet of good display space were going to waste on one side of the lobby of the 1000 seat Rialto Theatre, Greensburg, Pa., which was too much for M. Manos, the owner. Wasted lobby space is wasted patronage, and Manos decided to use it to attract attention, since that is one of the best things that poster displays do in lobbies.

He wanted a ticket booth window located in the center of this side wall and around that he decided in favor of poster frames. The job if done by a local firm would have cost quite a bit, with carpenters, painters and special lobby frame makers on the job.

However a supply dealer with a service department had been handling the business of the Rialto and E. B. Morton, the engineer was called in. He drew a set of service plans for the rejuvenated lobby sent them on to the New York frame maker represented by Morton in Pittsburgh and the ticket window and poster frames were made to fit.

The manufacturer shipped them knocked down—like automobile dealers ship machines—and Morton made the installation without interrupting performances. The drawing shows how the problem was met and overcome and the story illustrates what service means when practically applied.



IS THIS YOUR LOBBY PROBLEM?

The service drawing above, by E. B. Morton, of Pittsburgh, shows how M. Manos, of the Rialto Theatre, Greensburg, Pa., utilized the waste space on the side of his lobby and installed poster panels and ticket booth window. The lobby is small; most small house lobbies are small and perhaps this will answer the problem in your mind right now.

WHAT DON'T YOU KNOW ABOUT PROJECTION?

No matter how well posted you may think you are on projection fundamentals it will do no harm to keep in touch with Wesley Trout's short articles on projection and booth management. Below he furnishes more information on the subject he is so thoroughly acquainted with.

By Wesley Trout

(Q) What is meant by the term frequency?

(A) The number of cycles per a second with an alternating current is called frequency. The frequencies in most common use are: 25 cycles, 60 cycles and 135 cycles per a second. The 60 cycles is most generallly used for lighting the theatre and for the projection arc, and frequently for electric motors. Motors on all projection machines are for 60 cycles.

(Q) What is meant by the term cycles?

(A) With an alternating current where the current flows first in one direction and then in another with a change in the polarity for each reversal, a cycle includes a change in polarity to the opposite, and back to the starting point. That is, a cycle includes flow in two directions and consequently includes two polarities; and this is repeated over and over again in the alternating current.

(Q) What is the effect of increasing the aperture of a lens?

(A) Increasing the aperture of a perfect projection lens or a combination of lenses with undirected light has two effects.

(A) It increases the definition, that is, the image shows a finer structure than does a lens of a smaller aperture, i.e., it will show more lines to the millimeter or inch.

The effect of increasing the aperture of a projection lens when using directed light as with a motion picture machine depends somewhat upon circumstances. If the directed light spreading out in the form of a cone has a greater diameter than that of the projection lens, the larger the lens up to the full diameter of the cone, the greater the amount of light which gets through, and the brighter will be the screen image just as with undirected light.

(Q) What is meant by the term reflection?

(A) By this is meant the change in direction of rays of light when they meet a surface. The principal kinds of reflection are: regular reflection, irregular reflection, and semi-regular reflection.

(Q) What is regular reflection?

(A) If the surface is smooth, as in a mirror, the incident and the reflected ray will be in the same plane and will make equal angles on opposite sides of the normal erected at the point of reflection. Most cases of irregular and semi-regular reflection if considered from the standpoint of a small enough part of the surface are really cases of regular reflection; that is, any small particle of which the surface is made reflects light striking it regularly, but each particle of the surface reflects the light in a different direction. Taken as a whole, such a surface will not reflect the light regularly.

(Q) What is meant by irregular reflection

(A) If the surface is irregular then the light striking it is reflected in various directions depending upon the position of the irregularities on the surface receiving the light.

(Q) What are the requirements of a good grade of transformer coils for the transformers used for the projection machine arcs?

(A) They should show very little evaporation at 200 deg. Fahr., and they should not give off gases at such a rate as to produce an explosive mixture with the air at a temperature little below 356 deg. Coils should not contain any moisture, acid, sulphur or alkali compounds.

(Q) How can you tell if a coil contains any moisture?

(A) The presence of moisture can be very easily detected by thrusting a red hot nail in the coil; now if there is a "crackle," water is present. Moisture can be easily removed by raising the temperature slightly above the boiling point, 212 deg. Fahr., but the time consumed (several days) is excessive.

(Q) What size carbons should be used on 60 amperes of alternating current?

(A) Use five-eighths cored upper and lower.

(Q) What is the best size carbons to use on 75 amperes alternating current?

(A) The best size suited for this amperage is three-fourths upper and lower.

(Q) If arc lamp cannot be started what is some of the causes?

(A) This may be because there is no voltage in the main line. The presence of current in the line may be easily determined by using the testing lamp. The connections in the arc lamp may not be good or a fuse may be blown in the circuit some place. See that the switches are properly closed.

(Q) What is the cause of a direct current ammeter not registering?

(A) In first installing an ammeter if the hand does not register on the dial when the current is turned on and the projection arc lamp started, either the instrument is out of order, or more likely the wires are wrongly connected. Remember that the ammeter must be inserted in one wire then if it does not register when the lamp is burning the wires were inserted wrong. Trace all the wiring and see that it is correct.

(Q) What size motors is the internal resistance method used?

(A) Best suited for small motors.

New De Brie High Speed Camera Is Now on the Market to Supply Long-Felt Want Among Cameramen

The new De Brie high speed camera, news of which motion picture cameramen have been awaiting with keen interest for several years, is now on the market. The Motion Picture Apparatus Co. of New York City, now under management ownership of the Willoughby Corp., has taken over the exclusive rights for the machine for United States, Mexico and Canada.

The first shipment of this latest camera has almost been exhausted, so great was the response, and among the first to make practical use of one was Jack Eaton, maker of sport films, who in a letter to the distributing company declares that it is proving itself the peer of all motion analyzing cameras.

The history of high speed camera making is replete with unsuccessful attempts to manufacture high speed and high frequency cameras, capable of analyzing rapid motion and slowing it down sufficiently for the eye to follow such motion in detail.

In tracing the developing of this type of photography H. McKenzie, in charge of the Motion Picture Apparatus Co., said:

"None of the cameras developed the ability to produce pictures at the rate of 200 or more per second, the speed necessary to make them practical. It remained for De Brie in France, after long experimentation, to perfect a camera which, though light and simple in manipulation, has been found to meet all the requirements and produce a steady picture on the screen—as steady as the pictures taken at the normal rate of 16 pictures per second.

"The De Brie high speed camera is made of metal but is extremely light in weight. It carries an outside, double magazine of 400 feet capacity and is fitted with an automatic film trap which is opened only when the camera is shut. The magazine fits in a groove and is locked in place by means of a screw inside the camera.

"The front of the camera is opened by turning the knob beneath the lens to the mark "O" and when opened is held in place by a spring catch at the top of the camera. The entire mechanism is enclosed, the only movement visible being the piloting pins, two on each side, insuring absolute accuracy and steadiness.

"The mechanism is driven by means of a large gear on the outside of which the crank handle is attached and can also be supplied with motor drive when desired. The camera is extremely easy to load and in operation the crank is driven with much less effort than is required with the average speed camera.

Two views of the new De Brie high speed camera showing the interior mechanisms and exterior with tripod. This new box is being handled in the U. S. by the reorganized Motion Picture Apparatus Co., New York City, which has opened a cameraman's headquarters at that address.

"The camera is equipped with ball bearings throughout and has a complete oiling system by means of which the oil is applied at one point only and is distributed automatically to all bearings and surfaces liable to wear.

"A speed indicator is fitted on the sloping top of the camera denoting the number of times normal at which the pictures are being taken and also the actual number of pictures per second that are being produced. The dial is marked:

Number of pictures normal,
3-4-5-8-10-15.

Pictures per second,
48-64-80-128-160-240.

The new cameras are on view at the offices of the Motion Pictures Apparatus Co., 118 West 44th St., New York City, where distribution for the entire country, Canada and Mexico is made. The Willoughby company, which has specialized for years in handling photographic materials, has taken over the management of the Forty-fourth street store, which is rapidly becoming a headquarters for cinema and still cameramen. In addition to handling cameras, laboratory equipment, projectors and other cine equipment, a repair service has been installed which is in charge of an expert who is both a camera operator and cine mechanician. The company extends an invitation to all cameramen to visit the store.

The supply of cameras on hand includes Chronik, De Brie, regular and high speed, Ertel, Pathe, Sept and Universal. Cinematograph publications, carbons, camera carrying cases, tripods, film cement, changing bags, counters, crystals, dissolvers, double exposure attachments, raw film stock, filters, finders, generators, finder glasses, camera handles, irises, lamps, flares, lenses, magazines, and all other camera accessories. A new catalogue and price list has just been issued by the company.

MEANS "EASE AT THE MOVIES"
(Copyright 1922.)

It's a Great Picture!

But it's greater when seen from a MOV-EZY, the Chair that Means "Ease at the Movies." An uncomfortable chair can spoil the best picture ever screened. So can constant interruptions as late arrivals stumble to their seats.

The MOV-EZY does away with all of this. It provides every one with a beautiful, comfortable chair that by means of a patented device enables the occupant, without even getting up, to swing the chair to one side to allow others to pass.

We're proud of this chair and it gives us real pleasure to show it to theatre owners, managers and others interested. Stop in at your first opportunity.

Building Notes

The Leland, Albany, N. Y., will be managed by Oscar J. Perrin. The theatre is one of the largest motion picture houses in the city and is located in the business center. For years Mr. Perrin acted as manager of the Empire Theatre at Albany.

The Madison, Troy, N. Y., was badly damaged by fire early Saturday morning, July 29. The house is owned by Rosenthal Brothers, of Troy, who also operate the Majestic Theatre and who recently announced plans for the construction of a new house which will be known as the Roseland.

M. E. Comerford, head of the M. E. Comerford chain of over 65 theatres at Scranton, Pa., and other Pennsylvania cities, although he has four new playhouses under construction, is to take on another project at Hawley, Pa., in Wayne County. Manager Henry T. Richardson, of the Comerford Theatre, at Hawley, states Mr. Comerford looked over the ground with a view to putting up a new resort to seat 1000 persons and to cost $60,000.

The Rialto Theatre at Cordell, Okla., has installed an up-to-date radio set and is prepared to receive all that the air offers.

Our Theatre at Parks, Tex., has closed down indefinitely..

W. B. Shugars, of Pottsville, Pa., has purchased the Pinegrove Theatre from A. B. Gicker, of Pinegrove, for $15,000. The playhouse occupies a lot 34 x 110 ft. and seats 800 persons. Pinegrove is near Pottsville, on the road to Harrisburg, Pa., and is the center of an agricultural district.

The Columbia Hose Co. at Saint Clair, Pa., which had plans drawn and bids offered for the erection of a theatre, has decided to postpone action on the project until the mine strike ends. The plan was to place the engine room in front on the first floor, run the lobby to the theatre along the side and have the auditorium in the rear, with meeting rooms and lounging quarters for the firemen on the second story.

Thomas E. Husband and son, Bert Husband, new owners of the Palace Theatre at Edwardsville, Pa., bought from James E. Thomas, have announced they will manage the playhouse personally and will open on Labor Day.

I. Schlank, vice-president and general manager of the Peoples Theatre Co., in visiting Allentown, Pa., where work has been started on a playhouse to seat 1500 persons, announced Allentown has been made headquarters of the fifty-two theatres in Zone No. 1. Offices will be opened in the Perkins Building in that city.

The Lyric Theatre at Chandler, Okla., has closed down indefinitely.

Walter Penn has taken over the management of the Gem Theatre at Palestine, Tex.

The Liberty Theatre has opened at Ranger, Tex., with W. D. Palmer as manager. The Liberty was formerly known as the Majestic.

"Blood and Sand" Breaks Both in Sweltering August!

THE money record for the Rivoli Theatre, New York, was held by "The Sheik." This was in November, in a week containing two holidays, and the war tax was higher. The attendance record was held by "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."

"Blood and Sand" last week broke them both. This was one of the hottest weeks of the summer, and on two of the days there were heavy rain and hail storms.

Every showman, actor, musician and every man or woman who must win fame and fortune on personality is striving for that indefinable, elusive, enigmatic "something" so few possess and thousands drudge their weary lives away in seeking.

God gave it to Mary Pickford. It lives in John McCormack's appealing voice. Stradivarius put that "something" in his Violins.

It has been built in the WURLITZER UNIT ORGAN.

This wonder organ unconsciously weaves a band about its hearers that brings them back again and again. Organists play it as if inspired.

On the edge of the "make believe," where all picture patrons stand, hearts open underneath its magic beauty to receive the BEST the picture has to give. That's what gets a picture over in one house where it has failed miserably in another.

There is WURLITZER MUSIC for every style of Theatre, whether large or small and Wurlitzer prices and terms are within the reach of all.

EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW

The Public Knows

PRE-RELEASE showings of pictures in widely scattered sections of the country demonstrate that the public knows a good picture when it sees one.

Every exhibitor has had the experience of opening with a film about which he wasn't so sure himself, seeing it play to fair business stimulated by exploitation, and then pulling the crowds.

Every exhibitor has had just the opposite experience, too.

The public knows when there is a good picture, knows the name of the theatre, the highlights of the story, who the players are, and pretty nearly everything worth knowing—from the public's viewpoint—about the show.

Many exhibitors will tell you they have never been able to figure out just how it is that the public gets the information, and gets it so accurately. Mostly, it is explained on the "word-of-mouth" basis. But the reaction is sometimes so sudden that even that explanation doesn't seem to suffice.

WHAT'S the answer, and what's the lesson?

Why, this: we're out of the Klondike stage of the industry. Nothing will do now except real pictures. They're the only ones that will survive the test. In the same way, and for the same reason, the only exploitation that will justify itself is exploitation that correctly represents the picture, doesn't overstate or exaggerate, is attractive and compelling, but without a boomerang.

The public knows. The public is critical—very critical. It "shops," of course. And it "shops" for theatres just as it "shops" for pictures. The public develops very quickly an aversion to a theatre in which it has seen two or three poor pictures in close succession, or at narrow intervals.

THE reasoning is something like this: the last picture we saw at THAT theatre was pretty poor. Well, we'll take another chance tonight, and go again—and again the picture is not so good. By this time, a percentage of the theatre's patronage—sometimes a fairly large percentage—is dissatisfied, with the result that they stay away for long periods.

Nothing will bring them back except the certain knowledge that the picture is exceptional. If they know that, they'll come back. If they don't, they won't. And the chances are they won't go to anybody's else theatre, in the meantime, either. They become very cold on the whole subject of motion pictures.

The effect is a virtual strike against the picture theatre on the part of a large section of the public, a percentage which the exhibitor cannot afford to lose.

THERE'S a lesson and a warning in this for the whole industry: don't try to give the public poor product, even mediocre product, and expect to register success with it. It can't be done—any longer.

What's the other side of the story? Every time an exceptional picture is shown, on Broadway, or on Main Street, in any town anywhere, the public will be there in large numbers. Pre-season showings in many cities have already proved that—this year—right now.

Business Aids for the Exhibitor

ATTENTION is invited to the several articles in this issue which contain specific information of business value to the exhibitor. The improvement of theatre management is a wide field, and there is plenty of opportunity for progress in it. The saving of money, and the control of expenditure through practical systems, is one of the most important problems with which the exhibitor has to deal in the conduct of his theatre.

But systems, elaborate in theory, and of little use in practice, do not even attract the exhibitor's attention. He has not time for them. Certainly, he ought to have time for those that have been proved workable. It is the latter class of information which Exhibitors Trade Review prints, and we believe careful study of it will reward any theatre owner or manager.

For example, this issue presents a carefully written article on "The Advantage of Booking Sheets," prepared by one of our own staff, and based on first hand observation in the general offices of a large circuit. A kindred subject is treated under the heading "Keeping Track of the Business," which shows the great benefit of practical system in theatre operation.

In a somewhat more specialized field, the story of the coupon book is told on another page. This plan alone should be of real value to theatre men in helping them solve the problem of making the theatre more attractive to entertainment buyers and thus building box-office receipts.

Publication of such articles is part of the established editorial policy of Exhibitors Trade Review. Theatre operation is becoming more and more a business, and it is clearly a trade paper's duty to see that the exhibitor is kept constantly informed of new ideas—business ideas—that will help make his house increasingly successful—or pull it out of "red ink," as the case may be.

Northern California Goes Into Action

THERE was a significant meeting in San Francisco the other day. All branches of the industry were represented. Our correspondent describes it—the detailed story will be found on the opposite page—as the most important event in the history of the industry in the Golden Gate city.

Co-operation—practical co-operation—was the keynote. All the interests represented agreed that the time had come for team work on common problems and for ratification in action of the policies laid down by Mr. Hays.

The message sent by Mr. Hays through Rupert Hughes stressed the fact that the Hays organization is working for the good of all the industry. The justification—the appeal—of this program is found in just such enthusiastic meetings as that held in San Francisco.

And there is cause for congratulation also in the fighting attitude taken by the Californians toward those who plague and harass a great industry under the guise of reform. Frank Devlin, a former state official, who has been retained as general counsel by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Northern California, summed it up by saying:

"Look the situation in the eye. The personnel of the industry is an average cross-section of American manhood and womanhood. We will not take dictation from the paid destroyers and vilifiers of our industry."

The industry in the San Francisco territory advanced the ratification of the Hays program, brought first hand to the Coast by Mr. Hays himself and over-whelmingly indorsed during his recent visit to Los Angeles.

Industry of Northern California Mobilizes in Support of Hays Policies and for War on Screen's Enemies

Special to Exhibitors Trade Review

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 15.

TWO hundred exhibitors and allied members of the motion picture industry in Northern California hurled defiance to agitators for political censorship of the screen at a convention here to-day, called to harmonize the picture forces with the policies of Will H. Hays.

The meeting was the most important event in the history of the industry in Northern California, in the opinion of the film men participating. It was declared to be the only meeting ever held in the San Francisco territory that has been truly representative of the industry in its various branches.

Congressman Julius Kahn, of California; Rupert Hughes, the Goldwyn author-director, who brought a message from Mr. Hays; and representatives of the churches, the municipality and the Federal Government were speakers at a banquet to-night which closed the session.

In Honor of Devlin

The convention marked the debut of Frank Devlin, former chairman of the California State Railroad Commission, as general counsel for the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Northern California. Mr. Devlin is acting for Northern California in a capacity similar to that of Mr. Hays in the nation.

Rupert Hughes, the toastmaster at the banquet which was given in Mr. Devlin's honor, declared that the present period in motion pictures is the darkest hour before the dawn out of which will rise a new art triumphant and unshackled.

The telegram sent by Mr. Hays to Mr. Hughes read as follows:

"Have just had telegram from San Francisco that you are going to be the toastmaster of the banquet there on the fifteenth and asking this association to have a representative there. We have no one in California actually representing the association and I have no one there and I have wired that you yourself will represent this organization. I want you to make at the banquet the following statement for me:

" 'The purpose of our Association —the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America—is pretty well understood. The announcement has been made repeatedly in the press as well as in the different statements and speeches that have been made. However that there may be no question about just what we are trying to do, I want to call your attention to the articles of association as filed in Albany, N. Y., under the Board of Trade Statute of the State of New York, where the objects are definitely stated. Quoting verbatim, they are as follows:

For Good of All

" 'The object for which the Association is created is to foster the common interest of those engaged in the motion picture industry in the United States by establishing and maintaining the highest possible moral and artistic standards in motion picture production; by developing the educational as well as the entertainment value and general usefulness of the motion picture; by diffusing accurate and reliable information with reference to the industry; by reforming abuses relative to the industry; by securing freedom from unjust or unlawful exactions, and by other lawful and proper means.'

" 'And I particularly call your attention to the fact that in the statement of their purposes the men who have made this Association do not say that it is to foster the common interest of producers and distributors, but that it is created 'to foster the common interest of those engaged in the motion picture industry.'

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 16.

THE annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Wisconsin, held August 15-16 in the Colonial Rooms of the Hotel Wisconsin, Milwaukee, was, according to the new president, F. J. McWilliams, Madison, Wis., the most constructive ever held in the history of motion pictures in the State. More than 150 Wisconsin exhibitors attended the convention, the attendance on the second day being almost double that of the first.

An invitation was read at the first day's meeting from Al Steffes, president of the Minnesota and North and South Dakota exhibitors' association, requesting the Wisconsin exhibitors to attend movie week at Minneapolis on August 25. A telegram of greeting from Sydney Cohen, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, was also read.

In his address before the convention Joseph G. Rhode, outgoing president, said the big issue of the day was high film rentals. A resolution opposing high film rentals was adopted. Steps were also taken by the convention for the combating of the carnival evil. Another resolution adopted by the convention opposed the Hoy system.

A motion which was greeted with cheers was the proposal that word be sent to Carl Laemmle to the effect that the Wisconsin exhibitors would be greatly pleased if he should see fit to return George Levine, now head of the short subject department in New York, to Milwaukee. A resolution opposing the block plan of selling films was unanimously adopted by the convention and one strongly opposing the music tax was also passed.

A feature of the convention's work was the organization of a public affairs committee consisting of twenty-two members, with one member in each of the Congressional districts. The purpose is to keep in touch with public affairs of any nature in which the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Wisconsin can be of assistance.

Mr. McWilliams, who was elected by acclamation, is manager of the Strand Theatre at Madison, and has been connected with the film business in the Wisconsin territory for the last fourteen years.

Other officers elected were: Vice-president, Charles Guelson, Badger Theatre, Stoughton, Wis.; treasurer, Joseph Winninger, Davidson Theatre, Waupun, Wis.; recording secretary, J. H. Silliman, Downer Theatre, Milwaukee; sergeant-at-arms, Steve Bauer, Atlas Theatre, Milwaukee.

F. C. Seegert, of the Regent Theatre, Milwaukee, was elected a member of the national executive committee. Former President Rhode was elected to the state executive committee for a period of five years, and Tom Foster, Stanley, Wis., was elected to fill the vacancy in the state executive committee made by the election of Mr. McWilliams as president. Others elected to the state executive body were: Ernest Langemack, Colonial Theatre, Milwaukee, for a term of two years, and Henry Goldman, one year. Eugene Phalen of the Allis Theatre, West Allis, was elected as a member of the grievance committee for three years.

Pacific Northwest Strong for Hays — Prosperity Returning, Is Exhibitor Belief

By L. W. BOYNTON, Editor, Exhibitors Trade Review

SEATTLE, August 14.

THERE are two things which stand out most conspicuously in the attitude of the men of the industry on the West Coast. The first is a hearty endorsement by exhibitors and exchangemen of the Hays policies. They believe in his sincerity. They believe in his ability to improve general standards. They agree that there must be team work and they are willing to co-operate. That's the West.

And the second: Exhibitors met by the writer in the Coast distribution centers are all sure that prosperity is returning. The only cloud on the horizon seems to be the question of transportation, not the moving of films, for that matter has been anticipated and attended to, but in the moving of crops to market by the railroads.

The Northwest Film Board of Trade today, anticipating a possible rail tie-up, arranged for prompt deliveries of film by motor truck to all exhibitors usually served from the Seattle, Spokane and Portland exchanges. Salesmen are maintained at those points, and also at Yakima and Wenatchee. The same plan has been adopted by the San Francisco and Los Angeles exchanges, which are determined that there shall be no dark houses for exhibitors on account of inability to move film. This commendable move, which was speedily put into execution on the Coast, should be followed in other exchange centers.

Never has this writer witnessed such loyalty and co-operation as is evidenced by the West Coast exchangemen. They are all boosters for their towns, the whole Coast and the industry.

For example, there is Herman Wobber, Famous Players' Division Manager, who reports that the Paramount September Drive will be the biggest ever seen on the Coast, each exchange under his jurisdiction attempting to outdo the others. Pathe Division Manager Wessling declares that business is increasing normally. He has been with Pathe ten years and his enthusiasm for his company and his industry increases daily. Harry Leonhardt, Goldwyn Division Manager, is just about the busiest man on the Coast. I met him in Los Angeles, again in San Francisco, and in Seattle.

These men are typical of the exchange branch of the industry on the Coast. It will be a pleasure to write about all of them in detail later—about their efficiency and their royal hospitality.

"'While it is an association of producers and distributors primarily, yet our efforts are directed most certainly to the benefit of the entire industry. Thus the purpose of our Association is succinctly stated in legal language and becomes a very definite program of our effort. This is not a vague gentleman's agreement. It is the legal statement of a legal purpose by a legally organized body. It creates no super court autocratically to pass upon pictures nor to do many of the things which have been suggested. The purposes of the Association are stated in its articles of association and I respectfully submit to you that no articles of association breathing a more important message could well be found.'

"This is a statement which we had read at the banquet at Los Angeles the other night. In addition, I want you to say anything that you feel will do good about our Association and what we are trying to do, because I am sure you do sense it and do sympathize. Thanks and best wishes."

Sensational exaggerations about the industry on front pages of newspapers will be combated through a committee appointed during the afternoon session. W. Harold Wilson, San Francisco correspondent of EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW; Thomas D. Van Osten, of the M. P. T. O. of Northern California and editor of The Independent Exhibitor; William H. Taylor and Charles M. Thrall were appointed to protest to newspapers against distorted and featured scandals.

A telegram from Mr. Hays to Mr. Devlin was read expressing regret that Mr. Hays could not be present and extending best wishes. Other messages were received from Jesse L. Lasky of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal; Richard Walton Tully and Sol Lesser.

A permanent organization of all the interests represented was proposed and the following committee named to work out the details: W. W. Kofeldt; Morgan Wash; R. A. McNeil; W. A. Krank; M. L. Markowitz; Paul Gerson; E. H. Emmick; T. C. Reavis and L. Beach.

One of the important speakers at the banquet was the Rev. James L. Gordon, pastor of the First Congregational Church of San Francisco.

"The motion picture is the greatest mechanical invention of a thousand years," he said. "For ten years it has kept America safe and sound and it will be the first defense against Bolshevism in the future."

Dr. Gordon recommended the public appearance of actors in churches. He also urged the frequent attendance of preachers at motion picture theatres.

In extending the city's good wishes to Mr. Devlin, Edward Rainey, secretary to Mayor James Rolph, declared: "Yours is a new business challenging the attention of the world, but you must learn the difference between giving the public what it wants and putting something over on it."

Congressman Kahn made an impressive speech. He spoke as a friend of both Hays and Devlin.

Womanhood was represented by Mrs. Anne Godfrey, educational representative of the Federal Bureau of Naturalization, who declared the motion picture to be the most vital factor in the assimilation of foreigners. The financial interests spoke through H. A. Nater, vice-president of the Bank of Italy.

A ringing message was brought by Mr. Devlin.

"Have no fear," he counseled. "Look the situation in the eye. You need not apologize or go on the defensive. The personnel of the industry is an average cross section of American manhood and womanhood. We will not take dictation from the paid destroyers and vilifiers of our industry."

The convention and banquet arrangements were admirably handled. P. J. Hanlon of Vallejo was introductory convention chairman; Thomas D. Van Osten, convention manager, and John P. Meehan, honorary chairman.

Censorship Repudiated in Georgia

Federation of Women's Clubs Active in "Live and Let Live" Policy As Opposed to Legalized Inquisition—Luxury Sales Tax Bill Also Dies on Calendar

THAT the passage of a state censorship bill in Georgia would prove a "tragedy," was the stand taken by the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, through a letter written by Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, chairman of the Federation's Division of Citizenship, to members of the Georgia Legislature.

Anti-Censorship Sentiment

Mrs. Richardson's letter, it is declared, expresses the prevailing sentiment in the Better Films Committee of Atlanta, of which she is a member, and the sentiment of similar organizations throughout the six Southeastern States. It also represents what is rapidly coming to be the sentiment of the majority throughout Georgia, Alabama, Florida, South Carolina and, to a lesser extent, Tennessee.

In sending Mrs. Richardson's letter to EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW, Turner Jones, Public Relations Representative of Southern Enterprises, Inc., points out that "no member of the industry has entered the Legislature this year in connection with the censorship bills. When we have been approached in this regard we have invariably referred the interested party to the Better Films Committee."

Mrs. Richardson's letter is of great importance, not only because of the part it played in the Georgia situation, but also because it ought to be useful to exhibitors everywhere in seeking the active co-operation of Women's Clubs. The letter follows:

"As chairman of the Department of Citizenship of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, as a member of the Advisory Committee of the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures, and as a member of the Better Films Committee of Atlanta, I feel that I can legitimately present to you, as a legislative official of the State of Georgia, the true attitude of the women's clubs of this state and the opinions of that ever increasing number of men and women now working in several cities in Georgia for the betterment of motion pictures.

"After making a thorough study of the operation of state censorship in Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, Maryland and Kansas, the only states in which it exists, we have become convinced that this form of regulation cannot help the situation and that it has proven a failure in these states, so far as the betterment of pictures is concerned. At the recent convention in Chautauqua, N. Y., many women from these states assured us of this fact.

"Motion pictures come under my division of state federation work and I can truthfully say that the vast majority of the women of Georgia do not want censorship, but desire to follow a community program of education, leadership and selection based upon the democratic principle of co-operation.

"Already we have established Better Films Committees, based upon these principles, in the leading cities of Georgia. In these cities the motion picture theatres are co-operating in a most satisfactory manner to give the public at large clean pictures and to give suitable pictures for children. As mothers we are more interested in the problems of the child and motion pictures than in any other phase of the matter. Censorship cannot standardize an adult amusement so as to adapt it to children and we feel that this important angle of the question can best be handled through our volunteer committees.

"Enclosed is a copy of the findings of the Southeastern Conference for Better Films which included some four hundred religious, civic and educational leaders of the six Southeastern states (Georgia primarily), which utterly repudiates state censorship. These findings have been approved and endorsed by such bodies as the Grand Jury of Fulton County, the Committee on Inter-Church Co-operation and the Christian Council, by some of the minister's associations, by the Women's Club, parent-teacher associations, Civitan Club, etc.

"These facts are respectfully submitted for your consideration of this subject. We are having good pictures in Atlanta, and the fact that in a town in Georgia, an objectionable picture reported to the Better Films Committee and in turn reported to Mr. Hays, and was immediately withdrawn, is but one instance of the real effect of the co-operative effort. Georgia clubwomen are busy working out the "live and let live" plan and I earnestly beg of you to help us, rather than hinder by voting for the passage of a state censorship bill, which, in the minds of the women actually doing the work, would prove a tragedy."

Luxury Tax and Censorship Bills Die

By Anna Eugene Aiken
Atlanta, Aug. 17.

The Georgia Legislature adjourned last night without action on the luxury tax or censorship bills. The vigorous and highly intelligent co-operation of exhibitors in the Georgia Amusement Protective Association gained this victory.

Ohio Exhibitor Fights Blue Laws

Frank Murphy Uses "Common Sense Newspaper and Screen Campaign"

In his battle against the blue law Sunday closing agitation at Wilmington, Ohio, Frank Murphy, manager of the Murphy Theatre, that city, has attracted much favorable interest through his dignified and logical campaign, according to a correspondent of Associated First National Pictures. In co-operation with the editor of the Wilmington News-Journal, Murphy launched his "common-sense" movement in defense of Sunday amusement on Aug. 1. In addition to the use of the newspaper, the theatre manager took full advantage of the possibilities of his screen and billboard service.

In the newspaper Murphy presented his argument, clean-cut and dignified, and marked by his fair-minded attitude towards the question, in a three-column advertisement. Flanking this the editor of the newspaper placed news articles describing the stands taken by the Mayor of Manchester, Ohio, and the same officials of Sandusky, who refused to close the picture theatres of their towns and gave their reasons in no uncertain terms. Details of the efforts of ministers and reformers in both of these neighboring cities to close up the motion picture theatres were given in clear and convincing manner.

And Murphy's advertisement, which was titled "A Square Deal For Everyone," with a straight-from-the-shoulder outline of facts. His example might be followed with profit by other exhibitors facing similar agitations against Sunday amusements. The text of the advertisement follows:

"Shall Wilmington have a common sense law enforcement, or shall we have a radical blue law enforcement which has been tried out in many other places (to their sorrow)? Shall we have clean, innocent amusement for our young people on Sunday, after they have fulfilled their religious obligations or shall we continue to force them to seek their amusement at the shows, parks and dance halls of Dayton, Springfield, Columbus and Cincinnati, returning home at 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning, which they are doing every Sunday? Is it right that a business that did more for charity and other war activities than any other business in town shall be made a victim of blue law enforcement? Is it right that a business that has been helping the College, the public schools and the churches of the town shall be singled out and closed on Sunday, while every other business in town can run, when they are all violations of the same 'Blue Laws'?

"We are not asking any special favors, but we are asking for a square deal, every one is entitled to that. We are not making any charges against any other business in town, but you can read the letters from a couple of mayors of other Ohio cities and see what are the violations of law going on around us every Sunday.

"These letters can be found in today's News-Journal. Read them over carefully and consider what the effect of a strict enforcement of the Blue Laws would have on Wilmington.

"Remember when we start in to close there is no place to stop until we finish the job.

"This letter is not meant as a threat against our officers or anyone else. It is to try to help the people in general to see these things in the same light we do."

Bitter Sunday Battle in Tennessee

Memphis Sentiment Overwhelming Against Blue Laws, But Church Committee Prepares for Conflict

Threats of the Laymen's Committee of the Protestant churches of Memphis to make Memphis a "Blue Sunday" town are having little effect on Memphis theatres, which are going along, planning for the opening of the 1922-23 season.

The cases against Charles A. McElravy, manager of the Consolidated Enterprise Theatres, and Lloyd Dearth, manager of Pantages, which were to have been considered on Aug. 11 by the Shelby County Grand Jury, have been postponed indefinitely because of the fact that attorneys for the Laymen's Committee were unable to secure their witnesses on that date. McElravy and Dearth were arrested on complaint filed in justice court, charging them with violation of a law enacted by the Tennessee Legislature in 1803, which provides a fine of from $3 to $40 for operating a place of amusement on Sunday.

Meantime, it is understood that attorneys for the churches are attempting to unearth state laws, which, when put to a test, will prove more binding than the 1803 model. Both the theatre managers and the attorneys for the churches are aware of the fact that the theatres could worry along and keep running, even if the managers were assessed the maximum fine on each Sunday. The committee from the churches has announced it will leave no stone unturned until all Memphis amusement houses are closed on Sundays. The matter will be carried to the Supreme Court of the United States, both sides agree, but even if the showmen win in court, they admit that the rural legislators will outvote the city law makers when blue laws are introduced in the Tennessee Legislature.

Sentiment in Memphis is overwhelmingly against Sunday closing.

Sunday Chautauqua Means Theatres, Too, Say Kansas Exhibitors

Augusta, Kan., does not have Sunday motion picture shows—or, at least, it did not. Last week a chautauqua, supported by the ministers of the town, widely heralded a Sunday performance, while public sentiment forced Jack Johnson, owner of the Isis Theatre, to close his doors. Things looked rather dark. In a huge black bordered box on the front page, W. K. Leatherock, publisher of the Augusta Daily Gazette, had the following to say:

"If the local moving picture shows were to attempt to operate on Sunday you would find hundreds of local people up in arms in an effort to close them up. In all probability, the onslaught would be led by those who are prominent in church activities.

"Yet next Sunday the Chautauqua will open here and give two performances, one in the afternoon and one in the evening. It is probable that the union services of the churches will be dismissed early so that every one can attend the evening performance. The afternoon performance at the chautauqua will be a vaudeville performance of about the same class as is usually shown in local theatres.

"The Sunday performances of the chautauqua are indorsed by ministers and many church people. Yet there is only one major difference between a chautauqua and vaudeville theatre. A number of public spirited citizens signed a contract guaranteeing the chautauqua company a certain amount of money before the first performance was even booked. The theatre takes chances just like other business institutions.

"One can operate on Sunday without running afoul of the law. The manager of the other would probably land in jail if he attempted to run on Sunday. Can you beat it?"

Following this incident, the M. P. T. O. of Kansas, through M. Van Praag, president, instructed exhibitors of Augusta to open on Sunday in the future and assured them that the entire support of the State exhibitors' organization would be behind them.

New York T. O. C. C. Would Prevent Coal Shortage in Theatres

Concerned over the possibility of a shortage in coal, the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York, at a meeting held Tuesday, August 15, appointed a committee to take such steps as in their judgment the emergency seemed to make necessary.

William Brandt was named as chairman of the committee, with instructions to select associates to work with him. Mr. Brandt has asked to serve with him Lou Blumenthal, Leo Brecher and Bernard Edelhertz, and they have accepted.

Mr. Brandt stated on Wednesday his committee immediately would take up the whole question with the local Mayor's Committee on Fuel, which has been created to take charge of the coal situation in New York City, and the State Fuel Administrator.

It is the understanding in New York that if the shortage becomes acute only the essential industries will be allotted coal.

"The members of the Chamber of Commerce, representing 700 theatres, each theatre consuming on an average of 50 tons of coal annually, desire to be included in the 'essential' class," said Mr. Brandt. "We claim to be essential within the meaning of the term. During the last great shortage it was demonstrated that the theatres were sought by many persons who had no coal in their homes and came to the heated theatres just to keep warm.

"We are willing to help the local and state committees in every way possible, as, for instance, turning out the lights in front of the houses and on our big signs, which in the aggregate require considerable fuel for their operation.

"It is absolutely necessary that the theatres be heated. It was the desire of the Chamber of Commerce that the plight of the theatre owners be presented to the proper authorities now rather than to wait until the emergency was upon us."

Washington Board of Trade Ready

Exchange Organization Prepares for New Arbitration Plan — To Meet Exhibitors

IMPORTANT changes in policy and also in officers was made by the Film Board of Trade of Washington, D. C., at a meeting of the organization held last week.

R. Clinton Robin, Pathe, was unanimously elected president. The other officers elected were: Walter Price, Goldwyn, vice-president; Eugene Wilson, Vitagraph, treasurer, and C. M. Thomas, Strand Film, secretary. It was also voted to continue the services of Charles E. Wagner as corresponding secretary.

It is understood that in line with the new policy it will be the purpose of this Association to form a solid foundation upon which the new Hays plan can be strongly built.

According to the new president it is hoped that the Association will be able to develop harmony between the exchange and the exhibitor through closer co-operation with the various exhibitor bodies in the territory. Plans are now in the process of development by which a better understanding between the distribution and the exhibition branches of the business can be had.

The first step in this direction will be the establishment of a Grievance Committee composed of three exchangemen and three exhibitors, one appointed by the Virginia Exhibitors League, one by the Maryland Exhibitors League and one representing the District of Columbia. The exchanges will be represented by Clinton Robin, Pathe; Joseph S. Hebrew, Fox, and C. M. Thomas, of the Strand Film. The Film Board of Trade of Washington is expected to invite the heads or representative committees of the various exhibitor organizations to Washington for the purpose of better explaining the plan they have in mind and also to receive assurances of their co-operation.

According to President Robin, it is hoped that by the adoption of these plans the Film Board of Trade of Washington will be strongly organized and will be able to fall in line with the new Hays Arbitration Plan, announcement of which is expected shortly.

Northern N. Y. Theatre Owners Hold Meeting

A largely attended and enthusiastic meeting of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Northern New Cork, which is a regional unit of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York State, Inc., was held August 14 at Malone.

President V. A. Warren of Massena presided. Progress toward the securing of one hundred per cent membership was reported, and it is expected this goal will be reached within a short time. Robert Landry, of Ogdensburg, is vice-president of the organization, and Frank Meehan, of Malone, secretary-treasurer.

The Advantages of Booking Sheets

Here Again System Has Its Place in the Successful Conduct of a Circuit of Theatres and Here Is an Example

By HOWARD McLELLAN

BY means of a booking sheet the shows presented in the Rowland & Clark circuit of theatres in Pittsburgh and nearby suburbs and cities are kept track of for months ahead of actual showing and play dates are pretty regularly insured. There are many different kinds of booking sheets and nearly every theatre man has his favorite type or has a dream of what his favorite should be.

The booking sheet reproduced on this page is the Rowland & Clark idea. It has been in use for several years and W. E. Kirsch, who handles it for the circuit, says it has never fallen down on the job. It works for the seventeen houses in that circuit and this includes four first run houses in Pittsburgh, five neighborhood houses in the city, two first runs in Erie, Pa.; two in Wilkinsburg, Pa.; two in Titusville, Pa.; one in Kensington, Pa., and will work for one house building in Braddock, Pa.

This sheet, thanks to the generosity of the Rowland & Clark management, has been adopted in many houses from coast to coast.

This sample sheet of the Rowland & Clark booking sheet is 22 by 17 inches. It lists all the theatres in the circuit and in the first column after the Liberty Theatre, under Sunday, we have shown the system that is worked with the sheet. When the film is booked a notation is made in pencil. When a play date is given it is erased and substitution made in ink. When the show is delivered the bill goes to the booker and he inserts the cost opposite the title of the picture (shown in the circled figures). The bill is then turned over to the house manager for each theatre who checks it against the circled figures. The article explains the advantages of this method.

The writer sat down at Kirsch's desk in Pittsburgh a few weeks ago and asked him to sum up the advantages this system offers and to explain its working. The advantages he pointed out are:

"I can go ahead and set in dates for six months or a year ahead."

"It keeps track of our bookings for years back and in case a dispute arises as to bookings I can refer to the back files."

"I can get the total film cost for all houses or any house, for any day or for every picture or set of pictures."

"It is a handy and accurate reference for every department in our organization. The publicity and advertising department finds it especially useful to get out its matter in advance."

Explaining it further Kirsch said:

"The house manager gets his show from this booking sheet. As the circuit booker I make up this sheet as fast as play dates are given. At the present moment (this is written on July 22) I am booked ahead on this sheet as far as September.

"The house manager when he gets his show from this booking sheet checks the bill for his show against this sheet, and as we pay our bills once a week, his bill for the show is put into a mail box in the main office and with this bill in hand he calls for the booking sheet and checks against it. There is no chance of a slip.

"When the picture is booked I set down the title in pencil opposite the name of the house in the column under the day of the week. When the dates are actually confirmed I erase the pencil notation and set it down in ink, and then I know they are permanent. As each feature or subject comes in with its price that price is set down opposite the title in red ink, which the house manager and I check."

It is a simple operation. Kirsch assured the writer that very few mistakes had occurred and that when they did it was an easy matter to rectify them.

The system has been in use since 1917. The sheet is printed on bookkeeping stock 22 inches wide by 17 inches deep. It is on ordinary ruled stock and is kept in a canvas covered loose leaf cover.

The booking sheet also proves its usefulness in preventing loss of shows in delivery to and from the theatre and delivery mix-ups that rob the next man of his show. From the booking sheet a list of programs for each theatre is made up, for each day, or change in program. This is given to the film delivery man in the place of the old and antiquated six-card system where a card was made for each show to be delivered and returned. These cards were frequently lost.

In Rowland & Clark houses the show data is taken from the booking sheet, typewritten on a sheet in which the name of each theatre is printed, with one carbon copy. The original is retained in the booker's office and the duplicate is given to the delivery man.

Opposite the title of the picture is the name of the exchange. The delivery man takes the sheet, calls at the exchange, gets his show and takes it to the theatre named on the sheet. He retains the sheet until the show is ready for return and goes to each theatre for his collection. In this manner lost shows—the bugaboo of the exchange—are eliminated.

The delivery sheet is finally returned to the booker, who checks it against the booking sheet. He has physical evidence then that the shows were delivered and returned. The delivery sheets are retained by the booker for a considerable period to be referred to in the event that a claim for lost film is made.

The delivery sheet also acts as the delivery man's order for the film which is to be used at the exchange.

If the booker happens to be away, or the house manager is ill, the delivery man knows where each show is coming from and where the old show is to be returned.

Hays Going to Minneapolis

Will H. Hays will attend the convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Minnesota, to be held in Minneapolis next week. Mr. Hays will leave New York Wednesday, Aug. 23, and, according to present plans, will address the convention at its session on the second day, Friday, Aug. 25. It is expected he will then return direct to New York.

The convention is being held just before the opening of Northwest "Go-to-the-Movie" Week, a plan in which Mr. Hays is greatly interested and the adoption of which on a national scale is being considered, it is understood.

Added significance is given to Mr. Hays' trip to Minneapolis also by the fact that it will be the first state exhibitor convention he has addressed.

Keeping Track of the Business

How Some Circuits Have Systematized Handling of Payrolls and Theatre Reports

SYSTEM in a theatre is a fine thing if you keep it up. It becomes a waste when you start a system and then discard it before it has been given half a chance. Some managers with lofty ideas get up cards and sheets for all departments in the theatre, pay a neat price to the printer then let everything go by the boards.

Two things must be absolutely systematized in a theatre—the payroll and the daily receipts. The house staff must be paid on schedule and unless you keep a record of your receipts you never know where you are and the government tax authorities are liable to pop in on you any day and raise a fuss.

It is not difficult in these days to find system in theatres. Even the smallest house has adopted some kind of a system and the circuits and chains are all thoroughly systematized. The systems differ, however, in almost every theatre, or group of theatres. The fact remains that they can be made uniform, and if percentage ever becomes universal—and there is more talk about it to-day than ever—a uniform system of recording receipts and expenditures will be necessary.

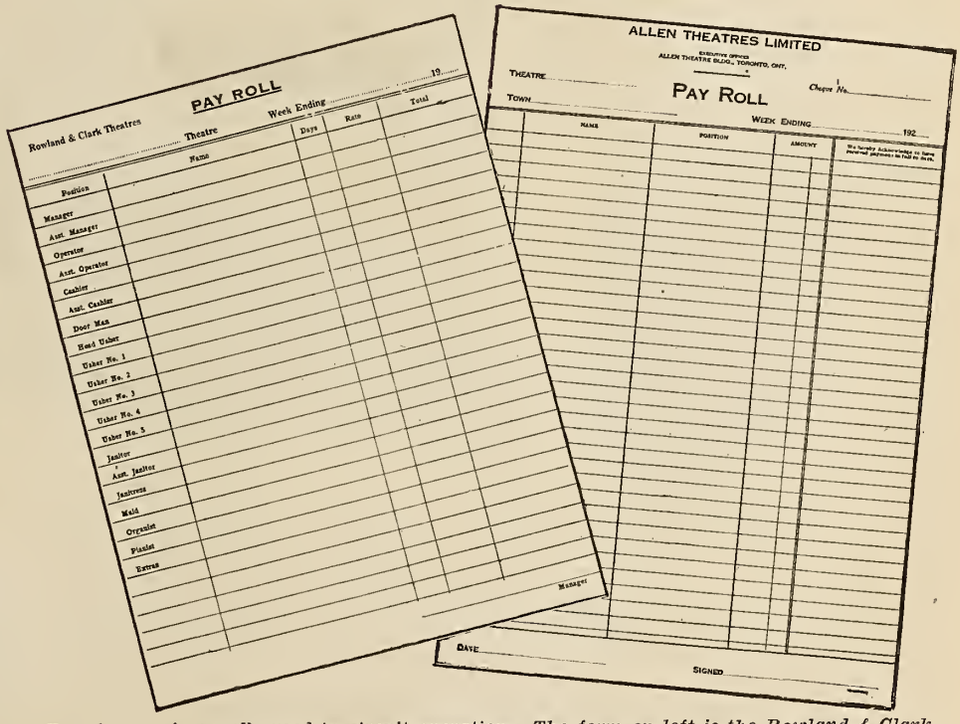
Where stockholders must be satisfied reports on the theatre's business must be made with regularity. In fact they are demanded by accountants and auditors serving the stockholders.

Taking the payroll for a start pretty much the same information is detailed on all payrolls as the two specimen payroll reports in the accompanying illustrations show. The Rowland & Clark payroll is more detailed than the Allen Theatre sheet but on the latter the employee signs his name upon receipt of his money and the record thus becomes complete and stands as a receipt. This form is used in nearly every case where cash is used in paying off. It is an absolute check.

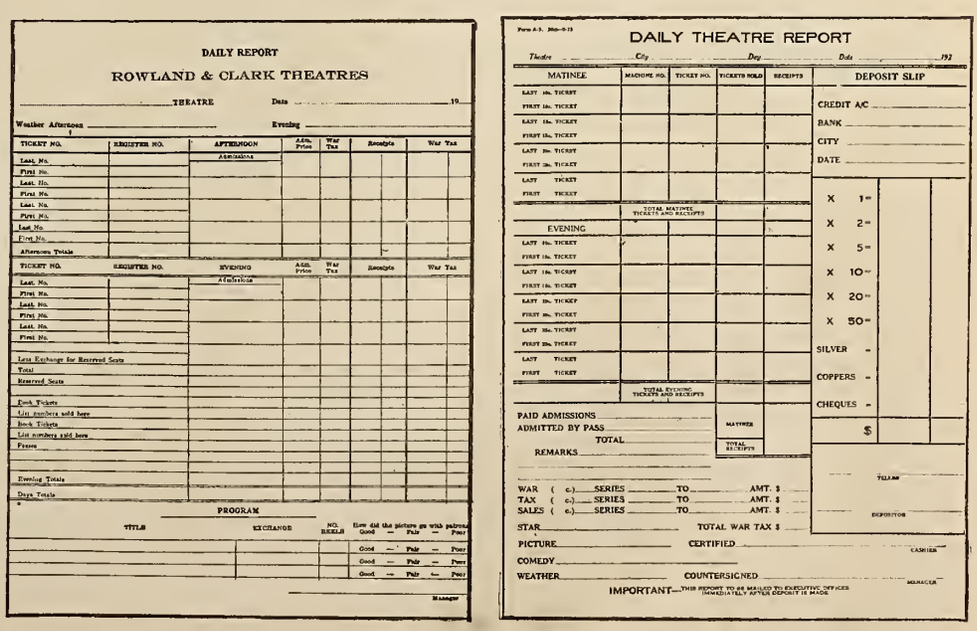
The Rowland & Clark form omits the employee's signature as the help is paid by check. It is a little more complete than the Allen form in that it enumerates all the positions, the days employed and the rate per day or week. In both cases the house manager signs the payroll and is responsible for its accuracy.

The daily theatre reports, also shown in the illustrations, are alike except in the type arrangement. Both reports are used with automatic ticket selling machines and the machines are a great help. With the Rowland & Clark form the manager alone signs while the Allen form requires the signature of the cashier and the counter signature of the manager, thus dividing the responsibility. On both reports complete track is kept of weather conditions, but the Rowland & Clark form goes farther than the Allen in that it requires the manager to give the titles of pictures, number of reels and an opinion as to how the picture went with patrons.

To answer the question as to how the picture went with the public the house manager must keep in touch with his audiences so that he may express an opinion as to how the picture went. Sometimes a picture will draw big crowds but the comment in the audience will be unfavorable in which case the report shows a good business at the box office but unfavorable comment from patrons. This feature is valuable in determining frequently whether a picture that relies solely upon its exploitable title has fallen down when the audience saw it.



Two forms of payrolls used in circuit operation. The form on left is the Rowland & Clark idea in use for a number of years. The right shows the Allen Theatres' system, which is of Canadian origin. The latter, as the last column shows, serves as a receipt.



Two daily theatre reports. In the form on the left the manager must give his opinion of how the picture went with patrons, which is carrying out the personal touch idea to perfection.

Two Styles of Coupon Ticket Books

One at the Regular Price the Other at a Reduction and Both Are Successful

In a recent issue a pretty little question was raised as to who discovered and first used the coupon ticket book now in use in many theatres. Carl Miller of the Miller Theatres, Fremont, Ohio, has been using coupon books for six years. Besides the theatres mentioned in this article we find the Jensen & Von Herberg houses in the Pacific Northwest sell $4 worth of admissions for $3.50 and the idea is successful.

Have you ever tried the coupon, or book ticket, stunt as a steady business builder?

Do you really understand how the idea is put over? Are you in doubt as to the U. S. tax regulations on the subject?

We have taken two instances of the successful use of the book of tickets, one in the Brooklyn Strand Theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y., and the Rowland & Clark neighborhood houses in and around Pittsburgh, Pa.

Rowland & Clark use the book tickets in three of their smaller houses where there is a certain amount of community spirit; where families are in the habit of attending; where going to the movies is one of the most popular afternoon and evening outdoor sports.

In Pittsburgh the tickets are always on sale at the box offices and considerable thought has been given to a suggestion that they be placed on sale at various stores. On the first day they were placed on sale at one of the small theatres twenty-two of them were sold without any special effort or advertising. The record demand was during the week preceding Christmas when 400 books were sold in one day. The demand is always greatest at that time because the coupon book is an ideal gift.

The book of twelve tickets costs the patron $3.30 which includes the 30c. war tax. It is on the war tax that many theatre men stumble when considering the coupon book, believing, as many do, that the tax must be paid on each ticket within the book. If this were so the total tax would have been 36 cents instead of 30.

The tax question was settled by W. E. Kirsch, booker and office manager for the Rowland & Clark circuit, who wrote the Bureau of Internal Revenue in Pittsburgh, Pa., and received the following ruling, which, of course, applies to every federal revenue district in the country:

"Where you sell a book of 12 tickets for $1.50 the tax will be 15 cents; and where you sell books with twelve tickets for $1 the tax would be 10 cents as the $1.50 and $1 are the amounts you charge for admission."

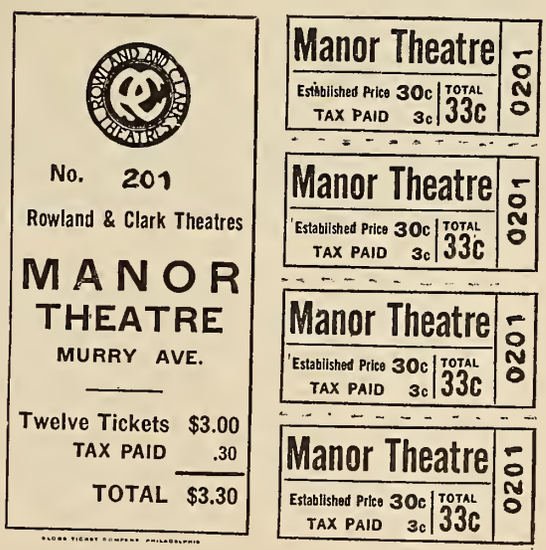
The Strand Ticket Book is 2¼ by 4½ inches printed on ordinary ticket stock, but is not a "bargain book," just a convenience and a good one



The Rowland & Clark books are 2 by 4¼ inches and save the buyer 72 cents. They have proved a big success

The Strand Idea

Books of ten tickets have been placed on sale at various times at the Brooklyn Mark Strand Theatre by Managing Director Edward L. Hyman. On the screen at the theatre is an announcement telling of the books, and there is also a sign at the box office where they are being sold.

"These books are not only suitable for Christmas giving, but can be on sale all the year around," Hyman says. "Every showman in the country can attract steady patrons to his theatre by selling these books. The ten tickets, and the knowledge that he does not have to wait in line every time he visits the theatre, is an incentive to the purchaser to attend regularly.

"Many persons have bought these books to give someone for Christmas. There are no price marks on the tickets, and the ten cost the usual amount including war tax."

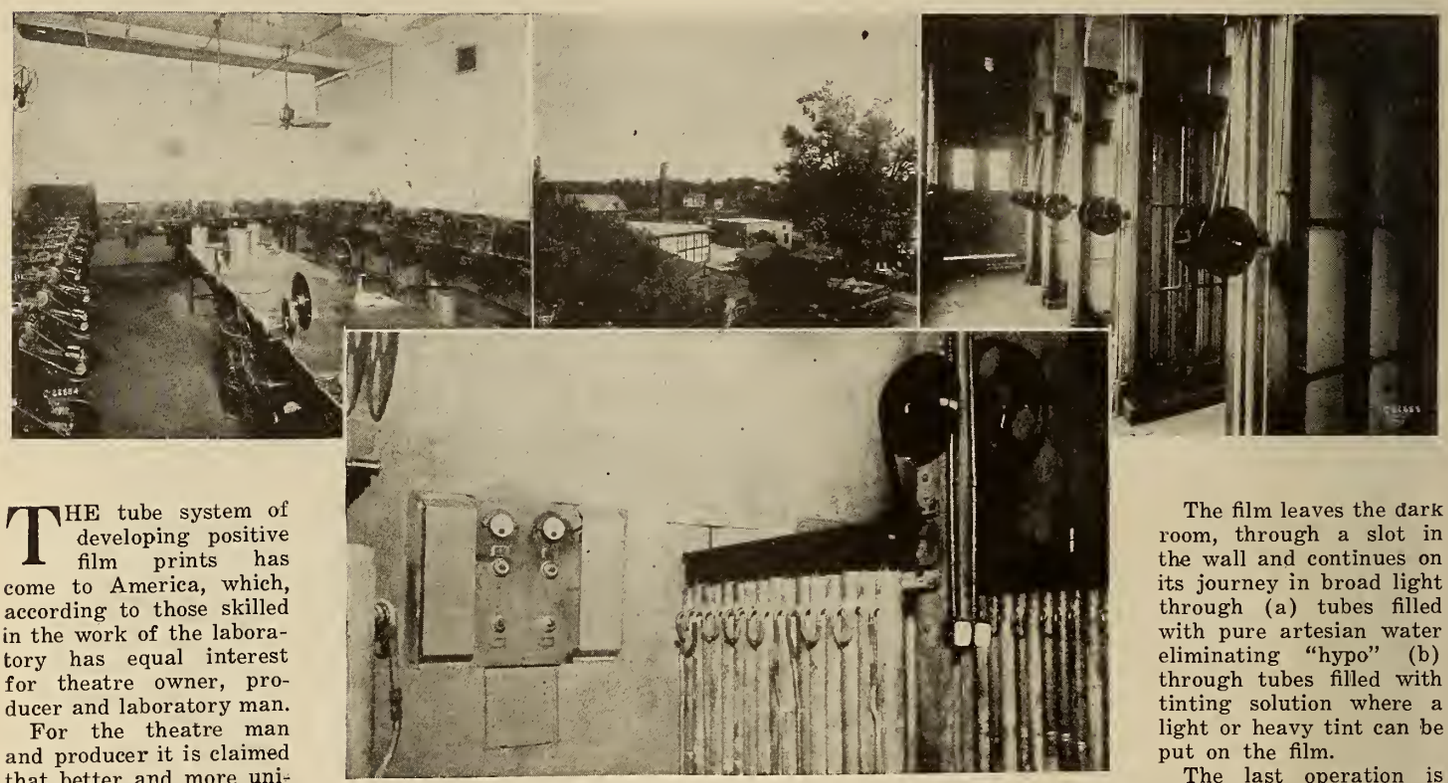
The books are each numbered and on the front cover is the following: "The Convenient Way. Buy Brooklyn Strand Tickets in Books of Ten. They cost the same as Box Office Tickets. No waiting in line."

The inside front cover says: "A book of Mark Strand tickets assures you, or the person you give it to, with a consistently artistic and carefully selected policy of entertainment. The management suggests a book of Mark Strand tickets as a gift that will meet with appreciation from the recipient. The Brooklyn Mark Strand ticket book plan is an assured method of buying happiness."

The back cover announces that the booklet is "amusement insurance" and that "inside is protection against unhappy hours." The tickets are declared to be ten reasons why the purchaser will be cheerful. The inside back cover tells of the policy of the Brooklyn Mark Strand.

How Film Is Developed in Tubes

Innovation in Laboratory Technique Adopted at New Flushing Plant



The lower photograph shows a section of the tube system in the dark room. The film is conveyed slowly through the tubes by means of sprockets at the top of each lead tube. On the wall is an ammeter for each system, signal lights and place for each record card. It is possible to stop development at any point. The photo at the left is the perforating room. Center photo is the Associated Screen News plant at Flushing, N. Y. On the right are the new dryers, enclosed in glass with the film always in view of the inspectors. The plant is managed by E. G. White, treasurer and general manager; Paul M. Bryan, editorial manager; Clinton White, salesmanager, and C. E. Schwengeler, laboratory manager, all of whom are men of long experience in laboratories. The laboratory is within twenty minutes of New York City. In taking it over from the Gaumont company much rebuilding and a complete installation of new machinery was necessary.

THE tube system of developing positive film prints has come to America, which, according to those skilled in the work of the laboratory has equal interest for theatre owner, producer and laboratory man.

For the theatre man and producer it is claimed that better and more uniform prints are obtained by the tube system. For the laboratory man it means that an easier way of obtaining standard prints has been found, if the claims of the tube system advocates are justified and already this system has been in use in Europe with definite improvement.

The tube system is installed at the laboratory of Associated Screen News, Inc., Flushing, L. I., a modern plant taken over by Associated Screen from the Gaumont Company of Paris. It is now in operation and an inspection of its workings was made by the writer and other members of the Trade Press.

For many years it was claimed that hand development was the only practical method of insuring the proper kind of prints. For more than fifteen years the tube system has been in vogue in Gaumont's French plant. At one time photographers laughed at the tank system until the Eastman Kodak Company and other manufacturers proved that it produced more uniform, a better grade and quality of prints than would be possible by hand.

Then the tube system came along adding what benefits it possessed to those demonstrated by the tank system. This system is an interesting development and its description here will throw light on the laboratory business, an intricate technical branch of the industry which exhibitors are prone to overlook because they encounter very little trouble with modern American prints and therefore have little occasion to kick or investigate.

Instead of going through tanks the positive film in the tube process comes from the printing machine wound on a reel. Each series of tubes and the Associated Screen lab has more than two dozen series—is threaded with about 280 feet of blank film. One end of the undeveloped positive film is attached to one end of the blank, or leader film. Then it begins its journey, slowly, through tubes filled with developing fluid.

After development it continues its journey in the dark room through lead tubes filled successively with developing solution, rinsing water and "hypo" solution.

The film leaves the dark room, through a slot in the wall and continues on its journey in broad light through (a) tubes filled with pure artesian water eliminating "hypo" (b) through tubes filled with tinting solution where a light or heavy tint can be put on the film.

The last operation is drying. After leaving the last tube the film enters a glass box where it is dried. The drying drums which have always required much space are eliminated.

And the most interesting feature of the new process is that the moving film is at every stage of the process under the constant observation of the human eye.

The glass dryers, in addition to placing the film before the inspector continuously, prevent dust from reaching the sensitized film, which, in its wet condition clutches any foreign particle that may touch it. The spotty condition of prints, sometimes seen on the screen (where they are magnified to unpleasant dimensions), is due in many instances to collection of dust by wet positive prints during the course of the process of development.

Months were spent manufacturing and installing the tubes. It was necessary to solder the tubes together into complete units, to insert glass tubes at the top of each tube where the eye could watch the developing and tinting solutions and finally the interior of each tube was painted with a non-corrosive paint to insure the absence of particles of lead or dust which might have been collected there.

The News of the Week

Ince to Release Through 1st National

Eight Pictures Scheduled—First Will Be "Skin-Deep," About Sept. 1

Announcement was made this week by Thomas H. Ince and Associated First National Pictures, Inc., jointly, that eight Thomas H. Ince special productions would be released during the season of 1922-1923 through the Associated First National.

The negotiations between Thomas H. Ince and the executive committee of Associated First National Pictures terminated at Indianapolis, where an agreement was signed by Robert Lieber, president of First National, and Clark W. Thomas, general manager of the studios, representing Mr. Ince.

The Ince productions have been produced each as an individual special in accordance with the Ince producing policy with especially selected casts, under the supervision of Mr. Ince. They represent an estimated negative investment in excess of $2,500,000.

The first of the series will be released about Sept. 1. The others will follow at intervals of four and six weeks.

Thomas H. Ince

The first release will undoubtedly be Skin Deep, a drama of New York's east side. It was directed by Lambert Hillyer with a cast including Milton Sills, Florence Vidor and Marcia Manon.

Among the early releases will be The Hottentot, an adaptation of Willie Collier's stage success. The chief role is portrayed by Douglas McLean, supported by Madge Bellamy.

Douglas McLean will be the featured player in Bell Boy 13, a comedy drama. Under the working title of Jim a drama has been built from Bradley King's original story with John Bowers, Milton Sills, Marguerite De La Motte and Francelia Billington in the cast.

The Sunshine Trail is the title of a comedy drama in which Douglas McLean will be featured, supported by a cast of well known players.

It will be followed by Someone to Love, a drama of the circus in which the heroine is portrayed by Madge Bellamy and the hero by Cullen Landis. Frank Keenan, Lloyd Hughes and Marguerite de la Motte appear in a drama temporarily titled The Brotherhood of Hate, a story of old Kentucky. The eighth of the series will be A Man of Action, in which Douglas McLean will star.

In addition to the eight productions announced for release, First National is distributing the following Ince pictures: Hail the Woman, Mother o' Mine, Homespun Folks, Lying Lips and The Cup of Life.

Two New F. B. O. Features Are Now Nearing Completion

Two feature productions which will introduce new F. B. O. stars to exhibitors are now nearing completion at the R-C Studios in Los Angeles. These are The Three Cornered Kingdom, in which Ethel Clayton will make her debut under the F. B. O. banner, and When Love Comes of Age, the first Ray Carroll production starring Helen Jerome Eddy.

Miss Clayton is directed in The Three Cornered Kingdom by Wesley Ruggles and Warner Baxter is her leading man. The picture is from a story by De Vernet Rabell and tells of the adventures of an American girl in a mythical Balkan principality. Others in the cast are Murdock MacQuarrie, Andre Begendre, Genevieve Blinn and Victory Bateman.

When Love Comes of Age is adapted from a story by Miss Carroll and presents Helen Jerome Eddy in a story of New England. William A. Seiter is wielding the megaphone. Miss Eddy's leading man is Harrison Ford.

Both these productions are scheduled for early release by the Film Booking Offices.

"Grandma's Boy" Enters 14th Week in Los Angeles

Entering its fourteenth week in Dr. H. B. Breckwedel's Symphony Theatre, Sunday, Aug. 13, the Harold Lloyd-Associated Exhibitors attraction, Grandma's Boy, has now equaled the best record ever made for the continuous run of a feature picture in Los Angeles.

Grandma's Boy passed the high water mark for a comedy feature seven weeks ago. Up to Aug. 10 more than 325,000 persons had seen the big attraction in Los Angeles alone, according to a telegram received by Arthur S. Kane, president of Associated Exhibitors.

Last week Grandma's Boy got off to a splendid start in the Heilig Theatre, Portland, picturegoers and reviewers in the Oregon metropolis giving it just such a reception as had marked the opening of the world's premier in Los Angeles.

Grandma's Boy opened in Denver this week. Arthur S. Kane received this telegram Sunday:

"Harold Lloyd in Grandma's Boy got away to a flying start to-day, running at both Rialto and Princess Theatres on Curtis Street. No question but that all records for big pictures will be broken. Homer Ellison, big boss of above theatres, says he feels sure this wonderful picture will run for at least two weeks. It is the best thing given Denver picture fans in many moons."

Mrs. C. S. Jensen Dead

Mrs. Emaline Etta Jensen, wife of Claude S. Jensen, manager of Jensen & Von Herberg, died at her home in Portland of double pneumonia after an extended illness on Monday night, Aug. 7. She leaves two small children and her husband. Mrs. Jensen is mourned by a large circle of Seattle friends formed while Mr. Jensen was active manager of the Coliseum Theatre here several years ago.

Babson Statistical Organization Finds Period of Business Expansion and Prosperity Already Here

That this country has now entered the anticipated period of industrial expansion and prosperity is the conclusion reached at the ninth annual conference of the Babson Statistical Organization held during the week of August 1 at Wellesley Hills, Mass. Delegates to this conference were the heads of large producing and financial concerns and secretaries of commercial organizations from all over the country, with a few from foreign countries. One delegate from the motion picture industry was present—John E. Storey, Pathe general representative.

The administration at Washington was represented by Vice-President Calvin Coolidge and James Davis, Secretary of Labor, who were among those delivering optimistic addresses.

"These addresses," said Mr. Storey on his return to New York from the conference, "including that of Roger W. Babson, all conveyed the one predominating idea that at present and for some time to come the principal incentive of every big manufacturing, financial and distributing organization should be 'Sales Promotion.' The general sense of the conference was that sales promotion and intelligent distribution are the two principal problems of the next two or three years."

To Film New York-Brazil Flight

"The Log of the SC-1" Will Be Pathe News Record of 8,500-Mile Seaplane Journey

The Log of the SC-1 is the screen title chosen for the Pathe News motion picture "news serial" record of the 8500-mile seaplane flight from New York to Brazil. Negatives will be rushed back to New York from the various points touched by the voyagers, for developing, printing and release as a feature of the next semi-weekly Pathe News issue.

These and other details were agreed upon at a conference between Pathe News Editor Emanuel Cohen, Pilot Walter Hinton and the navigator, Dr. E. Pinto Martins, a few days before the start of the flight. Also present were J. Thomas Baltzell, Editor Cohen's final choice from his cameramen staff to make the photographic record, and George T. Bye, the member of the party representing the New York World.

Editor Cohen made an inspection of the 800-horsepower air cruiser which was to be the home of the party for at least three weeks, and of the Pathe News equipment which had been taken aboard. This included 10,000 ft. of film stock and three camera outfits, one of them a small and compact apparatus to be used for picturing incidents in the life.

Editor Cohen stated that The Log of the SC-1 would be the first motion picture record ever made of this kind of a voyage. Its serial Pathe News presentation, he said, would include cable news items dispatched from the different ports where landings were made.

Will Hays Now Member of "Wampas"

Will H. Hays has been unanimously elected to honorary membership in the Western Motion Picture Advertisers, comprising the advertising and publicity men of the studios, theatres and exchanges in Los Angeles.

At a meeting of the "Wampas" where the leader of the industry spoke to the publicity men, Arch Reeve, president, offered Mr. Hays the membership in his organization.

"Our business is to sell specific pictures to the public," said Mr. Reeve in his address to Mr. Hays. "Your business is to sell the entire motion picture industry to the public, so we feel that you should be a member of the Western Motion Picture Advertisers."

The offer was gratefully received by Mr. Hays and the following day at the mass meeting held in the Hollywood Bowl the leader of the industry was presented with his honorary membership card by Pete Smith, vice-president, in the absence of the president.

Marilyn Miller May Co-Star in Jack Pickford Film

That Marilyn Miller, bride of Jack Pickford, will in all likelihood co-star with Husband Jack in his next production is one of the features of a statement recently issued from the Pickford-Fairbanks studios. It is understood that Miss Miller's contract with Flo Ziegfeld runs only until next September, at which time she will be free to take that fling at films which she has said she wanted to attempt. Jack Pickford is now completing Garrison's Finish.

Another announcement was to the effect that the new company recently organized as a subsidiary of United Artists Corporation is to be called Allied Producers and Distributors Corporation. At the same time a report to the effect that United Artists intended to put out a program was emphatically denied, it being explained that such a report probably had spread because many persons in the industry had not yet learned the official name of the new allied organization which is to distribute pictures of other independent producers on exactly the same basis as that under which the four United Artists—Mary Pickford, Charlie Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks and D. W. Griffith—now market their productions.

"The allied company, which is everything that the name implies," explained Douglas Fairbanks, "was formed not so that the present United Artists could make more money—which, by the way, none of us needs—but to insure an outlet for other independent producers, some of them star-producers, working on exactly the same basis as we who make up United Artists Corporation now operate."

British Film, with Mae Marsh, Is Coming Here

Two pictures made by Graham-Wilcox Productions, Ltd., of London, "Flames of Passion" and "The Wonderful Story" are to be sent to America for showing in the early fall, and are the first of a series of screen plays that are designed for the international market.

In "Flames of Passion" British and American talent are combined. Mae Marsh is starred, supported by C. Audrey Smith, Miss Hilda Bayley, Miss Eva Moore, A. G. Poulton and George K. Arthur.

Duke Lee Is to Make Personal Appearance with "Buffalo Bill"

Duke R. Lee, who plays the role of Buffalo Bill in Universal's new historical serial, In the Days of Buffalo Bill, has obtained leave of absence from Universal City in order to tour the country as "The Man Who Knows the Movies," making personal appearances as a sort of "Answer Man in person." Besides answering any questions concerning moving picture making and moving picture people, Lee recounts much interesting information about picture making and about the ideals which prompt the picture makers.

Lee was picked to play the role of William F. Cody in the "Buffalo Bill" chapter-play because he was a personal friend of Buffalo Bill and traveled with the celebrated Wild West Show for many years as an expert marksman, rider, roper and knife thrower. During his tour Lee will make personal appearances with In the Days of Buffalo Bill.

"Heroes and Husbands" Is Current First National Release

Katherine MacDonald, in Heroes and Husbands, produced by B. P. Schulberg, is a First National Attraction scheduled for current release. It was written by Charles A. Logue and directed by Chet Withey.

Miss MacDonald is supported by Nigel Barrie, Charles Clary, Charles Gerard, Mona Kingsley and Ethel Kay.

Goulding and Smith Celebrate

Alf Goulding, director, and David Smith, his assistant for the past five years, will celebrate their association together this week. They have been with Julius Stern, president of Century, for three years and the two others with Pathe. Goulding and Smith have been responsible for many successful Brownie and Baby Peggy comedies. Goulding has been appointed director in charge of the Century Comedy Fairy Tale Series.

Here's a painting from "Human Hearts," the Universal-Jewel directed by King Baggot from Hal Reid's play of small town life. If the remainder of the picture is as appealing as this "still" it ought to be worthwhile

Long Run for "Tailor Made Man"

Charles Ray Picture a Hit in Los Angeles —Theatre Sets Aside Precedents

The California Theatre, Los Angeles, where the premiere of Charles Ray's first picture for United Artists, A Tailor Made Man, was held, has set aside all former rules and is giving the picture an indefinite run, according to announcement by United Artists. Telegraphic reports to United Artists give the facts that the first week's run of the production drew more than thirty thousand patrons and that the theatre management's rule of limiting pictures to one week has been set aside, continuing the Ray production indefinitely, after which the production will be played at the Miller Theatre.

Frederick A. Miller, managing director of the theatre, stated in a telegram to Hiram Abrams that "The world premiere of Charles Ray in A Tailor Made Man did the biggest week's business the California Theatre has done this year. This is undoubtedly Mr. Ray's best picture. Open second week to-morrow and expect to get a long run on this wonderful picture."

The premiere of this production was made very much of a gala affair by Mr. Ray's new associates. They welcomed him into their circle with floral tributes that filled the lobby of the playhouse. On a basket of red roses was a card bearing this message, "With best wishes for a record run — Mary Pickford." Another floral piece had the inscription, "Welcome to the ranks of United Artists—Hiram Abrams, President." Another rich cluster bore the card of Douglas Fairbanks, and still another from David Wark Griffith.

Framed telegrams from Mr. Griffith and Mr. Abrams reposed near by.

From the first day of the run of the picture Mr. Ray has been the recipient of letters and telegrams from members of the profession and outside complimenting him upon the production. Hal Roach wired him, saying, "Tailor Made Man one of the best pictures I have ever seen." H. Warren, manager of the Motion Picture department of Barker Brothers, wrote, "I had the privilege of enjoying one of the best pictures I have seen in the past five years."

Joseph M. Schenck after seeing the production wrote Mr. Ray, saying, "Your portrayal of John Paul Bart is splendid and I certainly enjoyed the picture. Congratulations." Paul Bern, editor in chief for Goldwyn, wrote, "I congratulate you on the extraordinary things you have done to make A Tailor Made Man into a motion picture. You certainly have made it interesting, bright, humorous and thrilling screen entertainment. It is a mighty fine job, away above the average, and you have my admiration for it."

"Blood and Sand" Breaks All Rivoli Records

"The proof of the greatness of any picture is found in the reports from the box-office, and measured by this infallible standard 'Blood and Sand' comes close to being the greatest motion picture ever made."

This was the remark of Adolph Zukor when informed that the production had broken all records for attendance and receipts at the New York Rivoli during the first week of its run in the metropolis.

At the Rivoli, "Blood and Sand" topped the best previous receipts for a week at that house by nearly $1,500, according to a statement from the Paramount office. The former record was held by George Melford's production, "The Sheik," which featured Valentino and Agnes Ayres. "Blood and Sand" grossed $37,006.42, as against $33,084.69 for "The Sheik."

Marion Davies to Be Starred in "Adam and Eva"

Contracts have been signed by Guy Bolton and George Middleton, the authors, and F. Ray Comstock, the manager of the play, Adam and Eva, whereby the International Film Service Company, Inc., acquired the motion picture rights to this successful comedy for Cosmopolitan Productions. Marion Davies will be starred in the production.

Adam and Eva ran for a whole season at the Longacre Theatre in New York, and was presented by two companies on tour for two seasons more.

Nita Naldi Chosen for Crook Role in Alice Brady's Drama

Nita Naldi, whose portrayal of the role of Dona Sol, the Spanish vamp, in Blood and Sand has been praised by the New York and Los Angeles critics, has been added to the cast of Alice Brady's new Paramount picture, Anna Ascends, which is now in production at the Long Island studio.

Miss Naldi will have a feminine crook role in the picture, which is said to give her an opportunity to equal her work in Blood and Sand.

Pyramid Announces Three New Stories for Photoplays

Arthur N. Smallwood, production manager of Pyramid Pictures, Inc., announces the purchase of three stories for photoplay production, namely, Wife in Name Only, by Bertha M. Clay; Captain Eri, by Joseph C. Lincoln, and What Fools Men Are.

Lewis Allen Browne has adapted for screen use Adeline Leitzbach's stage version of the Bertha M. Clay novel, and this dramatic offering will be put into production at once.

Mr. Smallwood plans to bring an all-star cast of exceptional merit together to present his special feature, What Fools Men Are.

Withey to Direct Elsie Ferguson

Chester Withey will direct Elsie Ferguson in her new Paramount picture, Outcast, which is scheduled for production the latter part of August at the Long Island studio, instead of John S. Robertson as has been previously announced. Mr. Robertson is at present directing Mary Pickford.

Faire Binney in "Flapper Love"

Faire Binney is at work on Eugene Walter's story, Flapper Love, which Director George W. Terwilliger is making for Pyramid Pictures, Inc., in the Pyramid studios in Astoria, L. I.

To Create Accessories for Pictures

Sol Lesser and Associates Launch Project for Big Manufacturing Enterprise on Coast

One of the biggest deals of the year has been recorded in Los Angeles by Sol Lesser, who with his associates, Mike Rosenberg and Irving M. Lesser of Principal Pictures Corporation and with the aid of his West Coast associates, A. L. and M. Gore and Adolph Ramish, has launched a project whereby accessories pertaining to exploitation of motion pictures will be manufactured and sold to exchange centers and exhibitors.

It is the plan of Mr. Lesser and associates to erect a building in Los Angeles in the industrial section of the city. In this edifice will be installed machinery and workmen who will create and turn out every available accessory that the film executives deem worthy of exploiting a photoplay. Artists will be engaged and designers will have their shops in the building. The entire work will be carried on and manufactured on the coast, according to Lesser.

The scheme, as Mr. Lesser relates it, will bring more harmony and closer co-operation between the producer and the exhibitor and exchange men. The nucleus of the idea was obtained by Mr. Lesser at a meeting of the Western Motion Picture Advertisers last week when he was one of eight speakers whose topic was co-operation between the producer and distributor. Another speaker on this topic was Motley H. Flint, of the Los Angeles Trust & Savings Bank, Los Angeles.

According to Lesser, the new project represents close to a million dollars before it will be ready to function. It is the plan of Lesser to begin the accessories on his own productions which include the Jackie Coogan Productions, in which the West Coast Theatres, Inc., are also interested; the Elinor Glyn stories, of which Dorothy Phillips is now making the first and in which Mike Rosenberg is directly interested; the series of Dick Hatton, Lester Cuneo, Irving Cummings, and other stories.

Mr. Lesser gives as an example the accessories that would naturally be manufactured and supplied the exhibitor or distributor insofar as the Jackie Coogan productions are concerned. These would include a motion picture edition of "Oliver Twist" (speaking of the Dickens film) which could be used in many ways; Jackie Coogan walking dolls, stationary dolls and statuettes, beautifully hand-colored slides, elaborate sets of photographs of the star and the supporting players, novel herald effects, beautifully designed lithographs, cardboard window cards, cardboard frames for production stills—these and dozens of other novelties for exhibitor use.

It is the plan to open offices in New York City as well where a point of distribution can be maintained. These offices would come under the managership of Irving M. Lesser, who is now in the East.

Public Demands Happy Ending, Schenck Declares

Joseph M. Schenck, who produces for First National, believes there is a bit of Peter Pan in everyone, and that the sooner all the producers realize it the better.

Mr. Schenck is so serious on the subject that he is taking a vote on the favorite characters in fiction with the result that so far that Cindrella and Pollyanna are in the lead.

"Sometimes people drop into a motion picture theatre who are disillusioned and in a mood of desperation. They want to be diverted, to forget their troubles, and what is more, they instinctively want their perspective of life changed," says Mr. Schenck. "Think of the exhibitors' responsibility. The pictures shown should therefore be so filled with the humanities of life that they will mellow the most desperate mood.

"And tears, too. People want plenty of tears, preferably sandwiched with laughter. It is the best test of a picture when some one in the audience is heard to say, 'That might happen to anyone'."

Mr. Schenck is the producer of the Norma Talmadge, Constance Talmadge and Buster Keaton features. Miss Talmadge is rapidly nearing completion of the Robert Hichens story, The Voice From the Minaret, under direction of Frank Lloyd, and Mr. Schenck feels that this production will send her audiences home with the keen realization that the voice of conscience must always be listened to and that its happy ending is quite worth the temptations to be overcome.

Final Scenes Being Filmed for "Knighthood"

Laddin Rock farm, near Stamford, Conn., has been selected as the natural background for the tournament scenes in When Knighthood Was in Flower, with Marion Davies as the star, and the Cosmopolitan company under direction of Robert G. Vignola has begun work on that location.

Two hundred and fifty citizens of Stamford impersonate the old English populace who used to crowd the sidelines at such affairs and cheer their favorites.

Goldwyn Announces Order of Release for 8 Pictures

Goldwyn this week announced the order of release of the first eight of its twenty super-features for the coming season, as follows: Rupert Hughes' Remembrance, John Barrymore in Sherlock Holmes, The Sin Flood, Peter B. Kyne's Brothers Under the Skin, Anzia Yezierska's Hungry Hearts, The Christian, from Sir Hall Caine's novel, A Blind Bargain, with Lon Chaney and Marshall Neilan's first production in association with Goldwyn—The Strangers' Banquet, from Donn Byrne's novel.

Universal to Film "The Hunchback"

Universal has definitely decided to film "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," Victor Hugo's famous novel. Word flashed to the coast from the Universal home office early this week to begin work on the film, which is planned to be the biggest picture of the year for Universal.

Universal is not ready to announce its selection of star or director.

Studio Revel of Asst. Directors Plays to S.R.O.

There's only one reason why the Midsummer's Night Studio Revel of the Assistant Directors' Association, held Aug. 10 at the Willat Studio, Ft. Lee, did not play to "standing room only." And the reason is because the assistant directors proved themselves all that Will Rogers implied when he defined an assistant director as an "Undertaker, because he will undertake anything."

At the big entertainment staged by the association they undertook to seat everybody that put in an appearance, and the wonderful part of it is that they did.

The big studio was filled to brimming with celebrities of the stage and the screen, with a generous sprinkling of the dear public.

A stage was erected against the inside wall and graduated seats put up all around the studio. The stage was roped off to make a ring, wherein several boxing exhibitions took place.

Later in the evening stars of the screen and the stage performed. It was an ambitious program even for the Assistant Directors' Association to attempt. The list of stars present comprises names that have been up in electrics all over the country. One cannot mention a few as any more prominent than all and to list all would make this look like a directory.

Niblo to Film "Capt. Applejack" for Metro Release

At a luncheon given at the Hotel Astor in his honor, Fred Niblo, motion picture director, announced that the first of his four productions, to be released by Metro, will be a screen version of the current theatrical hit, "Captain Applejack."

This play by Walter Hackett ran for two years in London, and, as presented by Sam H. Harris in New York, has run for eight months.

After revealing the name of his initial production, to be presented by Louis B. Mayer, Mr. Niblo appealed to the editorial and critical guests present at the luncheon which Metro arranged in celebration of the director's connection with the company, for a frank criticism of his picture.

The man who directed The Mark of Zorro, The Three Musketeers and Blood and Sand prefaced his request for serious opinions upon the quality of his work by stating that he took the art of motion pictures seriously. In the course of his introduction to the company by J. E. D. Meador, director of advertising and publicity for Metro, it was stated that Mr. Niblo gave up a highly lucrative position on the stage to work a year, without pay, in a motion picture studio, there to learn what he could of the new art.

Mr. Niblo left this week for California.

Camera Work Is Completed on Fairbanks Picture

Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood is practically completed. The cameramen have ceased their grinding, and the work of cutting, editing and titling is well under way for this United Artists release.

The task of editing and titling is being carried on under the supervision of Fairbanks himself

It is expected that at least a month will be taken up with the final preparation of the picture.

It was directed by Allan Dwan. Present plans call for the release early in the fall. The first showing will be in New York city, after which it will be released in other cities.

Hamilton Accumulates Automobiles

In Lloyd Hamilton's first feature two-reel comedy for Educational, The Speeder, practically every known make of automobile, representing some $200,000 worth of investment, will be seen. The comedian succeeded in having traffic tied up on busy Sunset Boulevard, in Hollywood, for fifteen minutes, and in that time a large number of wealthy motorists, riding in the most expensive cars, worked in the picture as "extras," but without pay checks.

"The Storm" Wins at Box Office

Pre-Release Showings Bring Popularity for Universal Production

The Storm is creating havoc with box office records from coast to coast, reports Universal. Although it is still being shown only in a few pre-release bookings, it has established a popularity for itself far greater than any Universal picture ever before produced, it is understood.

General release of The Storm is set for Labor Day, the first Monday in September. Universal sales officials predict that by that time it will have been booked in more than thirty per cent of the big houses in the United States and Canada.

The Storm had three consecutive Broadway runs. It was first shown at the Capitol for one week, where it did capacity business. Then it was transferred to the Central Theatre at an advance in price, where it enjoyed a four weeks' run. Following its Central Theatre run, it went into the Broadway for a week.

In Chicago The Storm also had a triple engagement in the first run houses, playing the Chicago, the Tivoli and the Riviera, three of the leading Balaban and Katz houses. S. Katz of that firm, communicated with Universal as follows:

"It takes rank among the first three money-makers and pleased the audiences as well as any picture shown at this theatre. We shall eagerly await more pictures like The Storm."

Among the other first run theatres which have played The Storm or are about to play it are the Empire, Syracuse, N. Y.; Leland, Albany, N. Y.; Olympic (two weeks), Buffalo; Capitol, Cincinnati; Kearse, Charleston, W. Va.; Strand, Akron; Mozart, Canton, Ohio; Colorado, Denver; Majestic Garden, Grand Rapids; Pantheon, Toledo; Adams, Detroit; Ascher's Merrill (two weeks), Milwaukee; Strand, Hartford, Conn.; Sun (two weeks), Omaha; Karlton (two weeks), Philadelphia; Rialto, Washington; Grand Opera House and Alhambra, Pittsburgh; Aris, Erie, Pa.; Imperial, San Francisco, and Pantages, Toronto.

F. B. O. Poster Campaign Will Be Started Soon

A billboard campaign which will advertise Film Booking Offices of America releases in New York and Chicago and eventually in every large city in the country was this week arranged by the F. B. O. Under the terms of the contract, it is said, more than $100,000 will be spent in this direct-to-the-public advertising campaign.

The contract calls for many replacements and a total of 200 24-sheets will be seen in New York and a slightly larger number in Chicago. This campaign is by no means sporadic, but will continue during an entire twelve months. It is planned to extend the scope at an early date so that F. B. O. posters will cover every large city in the country.

"This poster contract," said Mr. Schnitzer, vice-president of F. B. O., "is another step toward ultimate leadership by the Film Booking Offices of America. We are doing this primarily in the interest of exhibitors, for this campaign will follow the principles of all our advertising in popularizing first and foremost each individual picture. Not a single twenty-four sheet will be devoted to the exploitation of the F. B. O. trade mark."

New Fox-Trot, "Nanook"

The success accorded the Pathe feature, Nanook of the North, has resulted in a new fox-trot, "Nanook," which will be heard in a new Broadway musical production and will also aid the exploitation of the feature. Cameo Music Publishers are issuing the "Nanook" fox-trot, which was written by Herb Crooker, Milt Hagen and Victor Nurnberg, who were also responsible for the fox-trot, "The Isle of Zorda."

Vignola to Begin New Production

Robert G. Vignola, who has just completed a vacation, has returned to the Cosmopolitan studios and will shortly begin another production. When Knighthood Was In Flower, starring Marion Davies, is about completed and, following the final touches, Mr. Vignola will begin work on his next picture.

Selznick Will Have Production Unit in the East

The Selznick Pictures Corporation are about to resume production in the East. This does not mean that work at the United Studios in Los Angeles will be discontinued.

A new production unit under the personal direction and supervision of David O. Selznick is about to be established to begin work in New York City.

This production unit will be in addition to the one now operating on the Pacific Coast in charge of Myron Selznick, president of Selznick Pictures Corporation, which went west some months ago after a long tenantcy of the Selznick studios in Fort Lee, N. J., and on West Forty-eighth Street, Manhattan.

The establishment of a second producing unit is in line with the general policy of expansion which the Selznick Company is said to be planning for the future.

The first picture to be made in the East under the new arrangement will be the special starring Theda Bara which will mark her return to the screen after an absence of almost two years.

Geraghty Returns to Paramount Long Island Studio

Thomas J. Geraghty, formerly chief supervising director at the Paramount Long Island studio, will return from Hollywood this week to resume his old post. When the Long Island studio was closed a year ago Mr. Geraghty went to London to be chief of the scenario department of the Paramount studio there. After eight months in Europe he went to the Lasky studio in Hollywood, where he has been a supervising director.

With Mr. Geraghty will come E. Lloyd Sheldon, author and scenarist, to be a new member of the Paramount Eastern scenario department.

Universal Issues a Novel "Buffalo Bill" Press Book

An unusual press book is that which Universal is issuing for In the Days of Buffalo Bill. The issue contains twenty-four pages of advertising matter, stunts, tie-ups, lobby displays and complete outline for exploitation. This latter extends to each of the fifteen chapters. There is a feature newspaper story. Then there are sixteen pages printed on one side devoted to publicity. The cover is in colors. Altogether it is a publication that reflects credit on the organization issuing it.

"Thematic Cue Sheet" Reported in Big Demand

"The Thematic Music Cue Sheet, issued by a number of the film companies has undoubtedly filled a long felt want in the industry, judging from the congratulatory letters from musicians and exhibitors throughout the country, that are being received by the distributors and makers," says a statement from the Cameo Music Publishing Co.

M. J. Mintz and James C. Bradford are responsible for this new departure.

Lester Tobias Goes with Universal

After having been connected with the Famous Players and Realart organizations for the past four years, Lester S. Tobias, until recently sales representative for Paramount in its New Haven Branch, has resigned to accept a post with Universal in the same city.

"Grandma's Boy" Highly Praised By Al Jolson

"Grandma's Boy is the greatest comedy picture I ever saw, and I've seen them all," declared Al Jolson, arriving back in New York from Los Angeles, the other day. "Just to show you what I thought of it:

"I went to California expecting to make some pictures of my own. I saw Harold Lloyd at the Symphony and—well, I got cold feet. That line of Pope's came to me, the line about fools rushing in where angels fear to tread, and I beat it back to New York without daring to look a camera in the face. I had a long, hard, hot, dusty trip across the mountains and deserts, but it was worth it all—just to see Grandma's Boy."

"One of the reviewers, wishing to pay Mr. Lloyd a particularly high compliment, has referred to him as the Al Jolson of the pictures," the interviewer reminded him.

"I wish I were worthy to have my name linked with his in that way," the Broadway idol responded, modestly. "I'll tell you honestly and truly, my ambition now is to be called the Harold Lloyd of the stage."

Conditions Hopeful, S. R. Kent Finds on Cross Country Tour

"While exhibitors are expecting a return to normal business after Labor Day, they are not going to be fooled by a false dawn, and in buying their product for next season they are being guided by an intelligent, alert faith—a faith which has been justified by the past performance of the product offered for sale."

Such is the declaration of S. R. Kent of Paramount, who returned to New York this week after having spent a month touring the country from Los Angeles east.

"Wherever I went," said Mr. Kent, "I found that uniformly the big first run accounts were finding conditions on the upward swing. The smaller places, especially in the Middle West, are waiting for the coming of cooler weather before committing themselves to an optimistic buying policy.

"But all of them—big and little—are demanding big pictures. They tell me that if they are given two big pictures and an even break on the weather in September—they expect to swing into a season more prosperous than anything they've had in a long time.

"Wherever I went I found the utmost enthusiasm for Paramount's early action in announcing, with release dates, casts, exploitation and advertising accessories, the now famous forty-one pictures which form our product for the six months ending February 1. From the owner of the biggest chain of theatres to the smallest individual exhibitor I received thanks for what they consider the biggest boom ever given the industry."

Getting Ready for "Buffalo Bill"

The opening chapters of In the Days of Buffalo Bill have been received in all Universal Exchanges, and preparations are being made to hold pre-views for exhibitors in each territory. Universal considers this serial the ultimate in chaptered pictures, and plans to go further in putting it across than ever has been done for any other serial.

Live News of the West Coast

BY RENEE BEEMAN

EDWARD SLOMAN has completed the filming of Blind Justice and is now preparing the film for early screen presentation. Those acquainted with Mr. Sloman's efforts in the directorial field declare that Blind Justice is one of the most powerful plays in theme and action he has ever handled for the screen, excelling in quality The Ten Dollar Raise and Shattered Idols, which he directed for J. L. Frothingham; The Westerners for B. B. Hampton and others.

The story is from the prolific pen of Frank R. Adams and is presented with a remarkable cast, including Milton Sills, Alice Francis, Pat O'Malley, Charles Clarey, Carmel Myers, Walter Long, Eric Mayne and Jack Mower.

It is becoming a recognized fact by a number of producers and exchangemen that there is still a great deal to learn about exploitation from the exhibitor's point of view. The exhibitor has complained that the exploitation sent out by the producers and exchanges is not forceful enough, or from the right point of view, and with this in mind, President J. E. Bowen of the Federal Photoplays, Inc., has commissioned the heads of his different departments to spend three afternoons a week for one month in the Tally Theater, Los Angeles, to study exploitation from the exhibitor's viewpoint.

The Federal Photoplay, Inc., is presenting the world's premiere of Heart's Haven at the Tally Theater and it is expected the feature will have a long run. The premiere is under the supervision of Lincoln Hart, formerly associated with Thomas H. Ince and David Hampton, son of B. B. Hampton, who is rapidly following in his father's footsteps.

Production on the first of a series of twelve two-reel "specials," featuring little Arthur Trimble, latest child screen actor to achieve stardom, has commenced at the Hollywood studios.

Master Trimble, who is but five years old, can hardly be classed as a novice, having portrayed many juvenile and kiddie roles in dramatic features for the past three years. He is also well known for his stunt work in comedies.

The production staff will consist of Fred G. Becker, director; Clem Beauchamp, assistant director; Hal Mohr, cinematographer; Norman Kennedy, art director.

Broad Daylight is an all star production directed by Irving Cummings with Jack Mulhall, Lois Wilson, Ralph Lewis and others in the principal roles. Harvey Gates wrote the story and scenario, which embraces the most "ultra" society crook atmosphere. The picture will be released through Universal. This is said to be the only independently produced picture distributed by Universal.

Irving Cummings is filming his stories at Universal City. Universal is buying the young producer's pictures outright.

After 14 weeks of continuous work, Mary Pickford has completed her new version of Tess of the Storm Country, the Grace Miller White story which established this little star's perennial fame a decade ago, when she made her first feature picture.

The last scene was made on location near Los Angeles and showed a dog capturing the villain just as he was about to grasp the fleeing Tess, that belligerent hoyden of the squatters' village so convincingly portrayed by the lovely Mary.

Present indications are that the Tess will not be more than seven reels.

Owing to the popularity of this vehicle, every precaution has been taken with the production to make it superior to anything Miss Pickford has ever done. Direction has been under the guidance of John S. Robertson, and Chas. Rosher handled the camera. In the cast are such film notables as Lloyd Hughes, Gloria Hope, Forrest Robinson, David Torrence and Jean Hersholt.

In filming this play 20 sets were built, one of them an entire fishing village.

Joseph M. Schenck, one of the largest independent producers of motion pictures; Mrs. Margaret Talmadge, mother of the stars, and John Considine, Jr., secretary to Mr. Schenck, will accompany Norman and Constance Talmadge on their trip to Europe about Sept. 1. They will tour England, France, Germany, Italy, Algeria and Egypt.

Constance Talmadge has completed East Is West, while Norma is busily engaged taking final scenes for The Voice of the Minaret. Sidney Franklin and Frank Lloyd, directors of the Talmadge units, are giving their productions final editing before forwarding to New York.

According to Mr. Schenck, the Talmadge girls will return late in November to film three stories each. Norma Talmadge will picturize Within the Law, to be followed by The Garden of Allah. No vehicles have as yet been selected for Constance Talmadge.

The Universal art director, Elmer Sheeley, and the technical director, Archie Hall, are supervising the construction of a replica of the Prater, or pleasure park of Vienna, which will be used for Eric von Stroheim's next big picture, Merry Go Round.

With the return of Mack Sennett to his studio last week, the work of cutting and editing Suzanna is progressing rapidly under the direction of Mr. Sennett and Director F. Richard Jones. This early California romance, starring Mabel Normand, will be released in the fall.

B. P. Shulberg has started production of The Lonely Road, starring Katherine MacDonald and under the direction of Victor Schertzinger. The story is of the rural type that have proven Mr. Schirtzinger's biggest successes. It is said to be an admirable vehicle for the American beauty.

Bryant Washburn has been engaged for the leading male role in June Madness, Viola Dana's newest Metro starring picture which is being produced in Hollywood under the direction of Harry Beaumont.

Cosmopolitan Film Co. is putting the finishing touches on its first picture, the Bishop of the Ozarks, written by Congressman Howard, who also plays the lead. The picture has been made under unusual circumstances, in that every shot has been preceded by prayer, according to Dr. Guy Bogart, the secretary of the company.

Actual photography will be finished this week on Rupert Hughes' production of Gimme, the story of the young wife who has always to ask her husband for money, and it promises to be one of the most entertaining of the Hughes contributions to the Goldwyn pictures.

"Toonerville Topics" Is Real Comedy

There's Fun in Several Sequences of This Rural Travesty and the Mirth Is Materially Lifted by Worthwhile Titles

Toonerville Topics, which Educational is releasing, is one of the best of the series. There are several sequences that will make for hearty laughter, even if you are sitting in a projection room watching it with the operator the only other person present. Several factors contribute to this result.

One of these is the excellent set of titles prepared by Ralph Spence. Then again there is a story behind the picture, a tale that while supposed to turn on the Skipper, finely played by Dan Mason, also has its ramifications. There is a "Broadwayward" young man who comes to the little town, where he is promptly smitten by the "peach orchard"—and no wonder. The best of the fun comes when the sweetheart of the girl informs her the newcomer is crazy, his delusions being called into full flower whenever the conversation turns on checkers.

So when the city man, informed by the same sweetheart of the girl that the charming miss is a great devotee of checkers, presents her with a fine checkerboard he immediately and forcibly is placed under restraint—and in spite of his vigorous protests.

The work of the unnamed girl is most pleasing. Another character that stands out is that of Ezra McNutt, played by a real comic. Don't miss looking over this two-reeler. G. B.

Dozen Witwer Fight Stories to Be Made by "Film Booking"

A new series of H. C. Witwer fight stories are to be put on the screen by the Film Booking Offices. P. A. Powers of the F. B. O. this week announces the purchase of the screen rights for twelve of these popular short stories.

The Witwer pugilistic stories have given their author a position of prominence in the magazine world. Mr. Witwer's stories have been published in Collier's and Cosmopolitan magazine, and those which already have been put on the screen have proved themselves excellent box office attractions. The new series is expected to prove an excellent addition to the F. B. O. short subject program and is in line with the company's policy of supplying exhibitors with a high-class and well diversified list of attractions.

No announcement has been made as yet of a star, but it is understood F. B. O. has already selected a popular actor who is perfectly suited by personality and physique to meet the difficult requirements of the champion boxer. Production will start at an early date at the R-C Studios in Los Angeles.

Sternbach Is Back on the Job

Bert Sternbach, casting director for Century Comedy, resumed his duties at the Hollywood Studio, where he arrived with Abe Stern from New York. Sternbach went as Mr. Stern's companion to Europe, where the two visited England, France, Germany, Belgium and Austria. His first act upon returning was to obtain talent for Century's next fairy tale, Little Bo Peep, in which Baby Peggy will star. Over 300 head of sheep have been hired for this picture and the supporting cast is now being assembled.

Jack Earle, Young Giant, Prefers Screen to Big Tops

Jack Earle, the 7-foot-3 young giant who though only fifteen years old, weighs 237 pounds, did such good work in Jack and the Beanstalk that Julius Stern decided to let him play the father in Hansel and Gretel.

Earle, who had never appeared on the screen before, also displayed dramatic talent in Peggy of the Mounted, in which he takes the part of a desperate smuggler who is overcome by the tiny ranger impersonated by Peggy. Earle, who might easily get a job with a freak show, prefers the silver screen, and it is so unusual to find a giant of his size who can act that Century Comedies will use him to complete the illusion of the special fairy tales now being produced.

Earl Hurd Comedies Get Flying Start in Broadway Theatres

The Earl Hurd Comedies, which Educational has just begun releasing, got off to a flying start in New York, with the first two pictures showing simultaneously in opposition Broadway houses. One Ol' Cat, the first picture of this new series presented by C. C. Burr, went into the Rivoli Theatre with Blood and Sand on Aug. 6 for an indefinite run, and is still showing at that big house. The following Sunday, Aug. 13, the Strand program included Fresh Fish, the second number of the series.

Other Broadway bookings of Educational Pictures during these two weeks included Toonerville Blues, comedies by Fontaine Fox, at the Capitol the week of Aug. 7, where it was announced in street lights; The Drifters, one of the Wilderness Tales by Robert C. Bruce, at the Capitol the same week, and A Penny Reward, a Campbell Comedy, which continued through both weeks at the Criterion. Poor Boy, a Mermaid Comedy featuring Lloyd Hamilton, was at the Branford in Newark the week of Aug. 5.

Stanley Houses Book Johnny Jones Series from Pathe Exchange

Pathe reports that its new series of six Johnny Jones Comedies are being liberally booked in a single contract. Following the showing of Supply and Demand at the Stanley Theatre, Philadelphia, the Stanley Booking Agency took the whole series for the houses in its circuit. The New York Capitol Theatre engagement of the same picture produced similar results, newspaper reviews being emphatic in their approval. Bookings for Marcus Loew theatres were early in evidence.

Regarding the active demand throughout the country for this new Pathe product, exhibitors are said to be impressed with the juvenile star's wide reputation gained through his "past performances" in picturized stories by Booth Tarkington. The formation of "Johnny Jones Club" in many sections indicates the affection in which this boy actor is held by thousands of boy patrons of the screen—which has not missed the attention of exhibitors.

The second of the Johnny Jones Comedies, Makin' Movies, is announced for August 27.

William Desmond and Laura La Plante, in a scene for Universal's serial, "Perils of the Yukon," found acting no summer sport in these Alaskan rapids

"The Empty House," of Holmes Series, Possesses Strength

The Empty House, one of the series of "Sherlock Holmes" stories which Educational is releasing, matches its predecessors in strength and suspense. Eille Norwood, as the portrayer of the wily detective, continues his fine characterizations, aided by Hubert Willis as Dr. Watson.

The story is of Moran, the card cheat who kills the fellow clubman who had uncovered his dishonesty and had threatened to expose him if he did not leave the city. The clever manner in which Holmes goes about catching the guilty person, even to the extent of exposing himself to the murderer and inviting a fate similar to that of the man who was killed, is convincingly shown on the screen.

The capture of Moran through the substitution of a dummy of the detective where it may be seen from a window of an empty house opposite the Holmes home is excitingly portrayed. It demonstrates how a conviction may be secured without an eye-witness. In this case it was the employment by Moran on the dummy of a high-powered air rifle with a soft-nosed bullet identical with that found in the body of the murdered man that clinched the case of Holmes. The picture is worth while. G. B.

"Makin' Movies", by Johnny Jones, Has a Touch of Humor

Johnny Jones, described as "the juvenile star of bright business deals on the screen," follows his Supply and Demand, in which he sold mousetraps, with Makin' Movies. Johnny purchases a Moviette camera—the brand is very distinct—on the excitement plan on the promise to pay $15 as an initial installment and puts on an Uncle Tom show. He knows how to operate the camera, because we are shown in a close-up a copy of the instructions in regular printed form.

The picture possesses elements of fun for the juvenile and some for the adult. One of the latter instances is where Gertrude Messinger as Little Eva, crossing "the ice," is outdistanced by the "hounds." A retake is naturally essential. Johnny gets excited and turns his crank about 120 to the minute, as a result of which the picture projected in due course on the screen is so slow as to put the neighbors in fits of laughter. If the regular audience has sufficient knowledge of the technique of the camera to "get" the cause of the effect they certainly will enjoy it.

The picture is in two reels and will be released Aug. 27. G. B.

Forest Fires in Northwest Disarrange Bruce Schedule

Robert C. Bruce, who is in the Northwest making his second series of Wilderness Tales for Educational, has had to rearrange his schedule considerably because of the dense smoke throughout the lower country due to forest fires.

"In every timbered county in the states of Oregon and Washington," writes Mr. Bruce to the home office of Educational, "there is at least one forest fire burning at the present time, and the country is full of smoke, which makes it very difficult to plan ahead. But I believe that the smoke does not reach much over 5,000 feet, so that we are going to high altitudes for the rest of the summer. This week I am making a prospecting trip of three days to the top of Mount Adams to see whether or not it is feasible for us to go into the high altitude at the present time."

REVIEWS OF CURRENT SHORT SUBJECTS

A LADIES MAN.—Hunt Stromberg Production, three reels, released by Metro.—Bull Montana has material that makes the picture somewhat of a novelty in the comedy line. There is a fairly good plot to the story and some ludicrous situations with a wide range of appeal. A wealthy family adopts a son for whom they plan a brilliant social career. When he is still a youngster he disappears from home and several years later returns to greet his parents who have invited a large gathering to meet him. When Oswald enters he is not the suave, polished gentleman that his mother had dreamed him, but a roughneck with pugilist outlines. He brings along a couple of his pals who contribute much to the mirth as the story progresses into a mysterious ghost affair that renews the interest during the last reel. There is good entertainment value throughout and plenty of action.

THE TIMBER QUEEN—Pathe Serial. Chapter 7, entitled "Mutiny," includes a lively fight on shipboard as the three conspirators endeavor to prevent Ruth from reaching her destination. The fight is prolonged, and due to fault somewhere as the picture was seen by the reviewer, either in the camera department probably or in the projection, which was unlikely, the figures in the "scrap" moved with ridiculous swiftness. It is a matter that seemingly may be remedied by the operator slowing down a bit if the fault be in the photographing. The end of the chapter shows Ruth imprisoned below decks, the ship on fire, and the crew in two boats escaping.

PATHE REVIEW 170.—There are remarkable views of the treatment accorded young victims of the white plague in a New York institution. Troops of children swarm through the snow with no clothing other than a breech clout and enjoy their fun. The "Photographic Gems," idylls in light and shade, deserve every bit of the title. There are golf shots by Kirkwood, Australian champion, that will have marked interest, by reason of the skill displayed, even for those who never swung a club.

PERILS OF THE YUKON.—Chapter 9, The Gold Rush Universal Serial.—This chapter is filled with thrills and excitement including some excellent shots of the gold rush. Standing records Petrof's claim and discovers Scully making an attempt to destroy the register. Three new characters are introduced into the story here and the development of the plot builds up keen interest for the coming episodes.

OFFICIAL URBAN MOVIE CHATS, No. 29.—Distributed by Hodkinson.—John Barton Payne, chairman of the Central Committee, American Red Cross, expresses his appreciation of educational motion pictures. Also there are some attractive views of New England in midwinter and comparative views in the tropics. Also included are animal subjects, showing the peacock and the monkey, which are entertaining. Another interesting part of the film shows Luther Burbank at home and in his remarkable garden.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS—Pathe release.—An interesting number, with good judgment displayed in nearly all instances. It is questionable, however, if the scene taken in the studio wherein the director shows one of the players how to kiss a woman will enhance the respect of the public. Kissing is a function or whatever you will that as a rule requires little instruction so far as concerns grown men and women.

ROUGH ON ROMEO—Pathe single-reel release.—Paul Parrott is the featured player in a comedy marked by fun that turns on a male one-piece undergarment. It's perfectly proper, you may be assured. His "intended" is forced to set the paternal house on fire in order to win her man, but what's a little thing like a little fire in a case like that?

SIMPLY SHOCKING.—Star Comedy, released by Universal.—One reel of burlesqued reform with a lot of eccentric goings-on regarding kissing and one-piece bathing suits. Mrs. Simpkins, who is the chief reformer, is finally persuaded to decrease her efforts against others and pay more attention to her own personal affairs by the use of a snapshot held as evidence.

ALL WET.—Al St. John Comedy in two reels, released by Fox.—One of the most highly amusing of the comedies given Al St. John. The first reel, although containing a lot of familiar stuff, is laughable and affords average entertainment. The second reel is screamingly funny and presents some original situations that should be well received.

BATH DAY.—One reel Century Comedy, released by Universal, featuring Harry Sweet and Queenie the horse. which is put through some clever tricks for the benefit of all lovers of animals. Aside from the shots wherein the horse is shown, there is little entertainment value except for those who can get a laugh out of the usual slapstick.

ROVING THOMAS SEES NEW YORK FROM AN AEROPLANE—Kineto.—Pen and ink sketches of a cat drawn in on various views in and around New York. This film is entertaining from its standing as a scenic if for nothing else. The shots of New York are good and there is a bit of comedy worked in by the various antics and acrobatic stunts of the cat.

THE EGG.—One reel comedy, released through Metro.—Usual comedy with Stan Laurel in the title role. There is some lively action with a dash of slapstick and pie throwing involving the uncovering of a plot against a wealthy lumber man who is saved from financial disaster by the hero.

HEAR 'EM RAVE—Pathe Reissue—In this issue there is added to the usual trio of Harold Lloyd, "Snub" Pollard and Bebe Daniels, our newer friend Paul Parrott. The picture is marked by slapstick, but possesses a wealth of snap.

THE MECHANICAL HORSE—Pathe version of Aesop's Fables.—Just as funny as ever, and that's saying enough for any film of the character of this one. The horse is a marvel, and will interest more than the multitude which follows the ponies.

Hub's State Rights Men Optimistic

Boston's Independent Distributors All Are Confident Coming Season Will Be Notable for Lively Demand from New England Exhibitors

By George Blaisdell

No one can for three days discuss with Boston exchangemen trade conditions in New England without coming to the conclusion that there are good times coming. The spirit of optimism is practically everywhere evident. The weather in New England during the summer so far has been on the side of the exhibitor and incidentally of the exchanges.

The writer journeyed to Boston primarily to hold converse with independent exchangemen, but also he was fortunate in meeting a number of the representatives of the national organizations, who without exception are looking for a busy winter.

One of the facts uncovered that should have interest on both sides of the film house is the statement by Sam Grand, treasurer of the Federated Film Exchanges, that at the next meeting of that organization he will recommend the body join the Hays organization.

Inquiry brought the figures on the seating capacity of the nine mill towns affected by the textile strike which has been on for weeks. The number is interesting—99,660.

Then, again, there was the question of towns that are overseated. Bridgeport, Conn., with a population of 143,555, contains theatres with 25,522 seats. And motion picture theatres in a city as a rule put on two shows a day.

The statement was made that the New England film man, whether exchangeman or exhibitor, is conservative, that he is slow to adopt expedients in showmanship that come under the general description of exploitation. Leon J. Rubinstein, well known in New York, for six months has been permanently settled in Boston and is devoting his time to editing and publishing Photoplay Record, the New England regional, and to matters of exploitation. Among "Ruby's" activities is arranging a dinner which Boston exchangemen will hold and which will be attended by the exhibitors of New England. The theatre men of each community will bring as their guests the editors of their local papers. The idea is to establish contact between the two forces. The dinner had been set originally for the spring, but it was decided to hold it in the fall in order that more time could be given to the arrangements. Will H. Hays has been invited to be present.

The protagonists of lower admission prices point to what has happened to the National Theatre with 3400 seats, which was closed for four years and which now has been opened by P. N. Smith of Syracuse on a daily-change 10-cent basis and is "cleaning up." The Victoria of Lawrence, it is declared, is another similar case.

Sam Grand, of the Federated Film Exchange of New England (Boston and New Haven), and treasurer of the national organization of that name, was the first film executive visited by the TRADE REVIEW man.

It is no figure of speech to say the treasurer of the national body of independent exchangemen, which now is represented in 73½ per cent of the territories, is a man of wide interests. As partial evidence of this it may be cited that among the productions being distributed from his Boston exchange are the William Nigh series of which Notoriety is the first; four Betty Blythe productions beginning with How Women Love, six Equity pictures, the initial release of which is What's Wrong With the Women? six Russell productions featuring George Larkin, another six specials to be announced later, and of short subjects 26 Hallroom Comedies, 12 Tweedy, 12 Monty Banks, 12 Federated, 12 Joe Rock, 26 Federated Screen Reviews and 12 one-reel sacred films.

It will require the services of no soapbox orator to convince the multitude that Sam Grand is entitled to discuss with authority matters pertaining to the independent market.

To Recommend Joining Hays Body

Mr. Grand made the statement to this writer last week that he was going to try to induce his fellow-members in the Federated organization to join the Hays organization. Without going into details the film man let his statement rest right there.

"The coming season will be an independent year," declared Mr. Grand. "For the first time in the history of the trade independents like myself can go out and advertise a national product just the same as do the chain organizations. Ninety per cent of the exhibitors in this territory now realize that where the independents have got such a big lineup for the coming year that they, too, can afford to be independent, and as a result next year you will not see them signing up so quickly as they have formerly."

Across Piedmont Street from the office of Mr. Grand is the spacious building occupied by the American Feature Film Company, one of the finest exchanges to be found anywhere and presided over by Harry Asher. Mr. Asher is the Universal Film Manufacturing Co. in New England. And it will be conceded that's a pretty fair start—a day's work for any man. Then, in addition to all the Big U stuff and 52 Arrow Comedies, 14 Broadway, 12 Speed, 12 Cruelly Wed and 14 Mirthquake comedies, he has taken over the 12 subjects to be released by the Al Lichtman Corporation.

"Yes, I have seen the first release of the Al Lichtman company," said Mr. Asher, Rich Men's Wives. It has not everything in it that will appeal to the West Coast Independents Commend Shallenberger

L. W. Boynton, Editor of "Exhibitors Trade Review," telegraphs from Seattle under date of Aug. 14 that all the independent exchanges in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland and Seattle heartily commend the statement issued by Dr. W. E. Shallenberger from Los Angeles in which he urged his fellow-independents to support and to join the Hays organization, the Producers and Distributors of America, Inc. Dr. Shallenberger's remarks were issued following a long conference with Mr. Hays while the two were fellow-passengers on a west-bound train and were printed exclusively in the Aug. 5 issue of "Exhibitors Trade Review."

Mr. Boynton reports the exchangemen declare they will buy only the better pictures demanded by exhibitors. Increasing demand and better business are recorded in the four cities.

"All are very optimistic over fall business and the future prosperity of the State rights market," continues the editor of the "Trade Review." "The exchanges are operated by men of the highest class who are working in harmony with their confreres in the program exchanges for the best interests of the industry."

public—it's a box office attraction, a classy, clean, high-grade production.

Strikes Only Untoward Factor

"Barring the presence of two important factors now standing in the way I feel very optimistic for the coming season. There remain to be adjusted the coal and railroad strikes, for if they continue we are bound to feel them. They must be adjusted. With those out of the way I don't know of anything that can stop an era of prosperity. There are indications of an adjustment in some of the mill disputes, and in fact already some have been settled. Construction work, too, is lively in Boston.

"Our business has been holding up very well and has not fluctuated to any extent. This may be due, of course, to the fact that we are selling on a basis of live and let live. We are doing business with 75 or 80 per cent of the territory on some of our product, so we would not so keenly feel the harsh conditions that have affected many of the exchanges.

"The demand in this territory for short stuff is not so great as in the majority of the jurisdictions. For that, of course, the double feature habit may be blamed. So you may understand why other territories can afford to pay relatively five or ten times as much for short subjects as we can. Where there is a double feature it means fourteen or fifteen reels, with perhaps a comedy and a news reel as the only shorts."

Fred Murphy, of the Crown Film Corporation, and president of the New England Film Board of Trade, talked interestingly of the situation throughout the territory. Mr. Murphy expressed the view that one way to offset the present circumstances was to cut down overhead and build up unit programs—in other words, to cater to the smaller business.

Returning to First Principles

Mr. Murphy said that in following this policy he had done more business this summer than he had during the height of the season. "That is because I went back to the first principles of the business," he said; "to those of the General Film—I locked the show. Yes, if two features are wanted that is the way the show is sent out.

"The independent exchange man cannot get all good pictures unless he pays a tremendous sum of money.

"There has been a remarkable improvement in the last two weeks in the attendance at theatres, but the fact is the business in many of the industrial towns is dead. They are Manchester, Nashua, Haverhill, Lowell, Lawrence, Fall River, New Bedford, Pawtucket and Woonsocket —nine of them. What is the seating capacity of the towns affected by industrial troubles? Let's see."

A little figuring and a talk over the 'phone with one of his brother managers brought the result—99,660 seats in the motion picture houses of these nine towns, or an average of over 11,000 seats in each municipality.

Mr. Murphy said the business had been hit a "terrible wallop" by industrial troubles in the Naugatuck and Pawtucket valleys.

Asked as to the situation in regard to the towns that are said to be overseated, Mr. Murphy was questioned as to Bridgeport. Here it was developed that in a city with a population of 143,555 the theatres contain 25,522 seats. If every house runs two shows a day this means it would require over 35 per cent of the population to fill the seats on a given day.

Earlier Sam Moscow had called attention to Portsmouth, N. H., where three theatres have a seating capacity of 2800, with another house of 1200 seats closed. Here 56 per cent of the population would be required to fill the seats on a two-performance day.

"The personnel of the men in the business directing exchanges will compare more than favorably with those of any other industry in the state," resumed Mr. Murphy. "We have learned a lot and we have mingled a lot with persons in all walks of life, conferred with women's clubs, for example, and have striven to obtain clean, wholesome entertainment for the entire family.

Looks for Peaches and Cream

"If the coming three weeks shall gather momentum as fast as the preceding two I don't see but what it will be peaches and cream."

George M. A. Fecke, president and general manager of the Motion Picture Corporation, is getting ready to send out Yankee Doodle, Jr., which is slated for distribution in September. For it he is looking to do as big a business as he did with The County Fair, which he says has been on its rounds for a year and still is going strong. The Burnside picture has been signed by the entire Poli circuit. Mr. Fecke declared he could not see the difference between borrowing money at 25 or 50 per cent and releasing a strong picture in the summer.

Harry Seegal, president of the Pioneer, was seen at his new offices, which will not be opened "officially" until the second week in September. Mr. Seegal started the exchange a year ago not under the most encouraging conditions, and has put over his little concern with a bang that will be heard when he admits his new quarters are ready for business. He concedes he has made money this summer, and he ascribes his plan of "volume" business as responsible for that success.

Mr. Seegal said he believed there was in evidence a change of attitude toward independent product on the part of the New England exhibitor, a change favorable to the exchangeman.

"Some of the fellows say the big picture is the thing," said Mr. Seegal. "But the exhibitor can't book big pictures all the time. And that is the reason I am going out to release sixty-four pictures, all features, during the coming year. I believe the average house in this territory needs that kind of a picture—which can be made to make money for the exhibitor.

Failure to Advertise Short Stuff

"I am going to feature short subjects—that is, if I can get the right material to sell to the exhibitor and then induce him to advertise it. I believe if he will follow this course he will make as much or almost as much money as he will with his feature department.

"Speaking of exploitation there has been very little of that in New England. In fact, we never had much of the real thing until 'Ruby' (Leon J. Rubinstein) came over here. The New England exhibitor is conservative, and you have got to show him on the matter of exploitation, but I believe he is beginning to concede the necessity for it."

Mr. Seegal went through the theatre advertising columns of one of the principal Boston newspapers, and with the exception of a reference to a "Torchy Comedy" at the Loew State Theatre no mention was made of the supporting program at any house.

"Yes, serials are all right," Mr. Seegal said later, "but some of their producers do want a lot of money for them, more than I can see my way to pay, certainly. Here was a case recently—on a good serial, to be sure—where I was asked to pay $24,000 for the New England rights and to supply my own prints, a matter of $5,000 more. Later it was offered me at $16,000, but I could not take the chance.

"You can't give the public big pictures all of the time because the exhibitor cannot get his money out of the public. The talk of overfeeding of pictures is bunk—people simply haven't got the money. It is not always necessary to spend more than $50,000 to make a good picture.

"Then again there's the question of admissions. Take the cases of the National Theatre, seating 3400 persons, and which was closed for four years, and the Victoria of Lawrence. Both went broken under the high prices, but when opened up at 10 cents are cleaning up. Now big pictures as such mean high prices. They are all right for the big house, where there is a tremendous transient trade and where people will spend a dollar that wouldn't think of yielding anything like that sum in their home town.

"If I go to an exhibitor in Lawrence, for instance, with a picture that cost me $8,000 I have got to ask him for from $500 to $1,000, but he can't pay it because his people haven't got the money to spend. He knows there's no use kidding himself with a 'big picture.'

After Volume Rather Than Price

"You may give an exhibitor a schedule of big pictures, but after he has played ten or a dozen they won't stand up. It's like a steady diet of tenderloin steak—it can't be digested. All big pictures means no big pictures. The law of relativity steps in. I am after volume rather than price, and I believe that is the policy that will win this season."

William H. Patten, president, and Joseph A. McConville, treasurer and general manager of the Independent Films, Inc., were found in their offices. The company was started a year ago last May by these two experienced exchangemen, and has prospered. Speaking of the four Arrow Curwoods Mr. Patten said they had obtained excellent circulation for the three already issued.

In Massachusetts, in order to put on shows on Sunday in those centers where they are permitted it is necessary that the program be passed by the state police.

Mr. Patten said state right exhibitors were no longer interested in Broadway premieres as such; what concerned the regional distributor was what the big theatre had paid for the booking.

"We have had an example in this town recently of a well-advertised independent picture getting the jump on a less advertised but better production simply because the producer of the former through his trade paper advertising and publicity had sold the exchanges and the exhibitors. The average independent picture is not given enough advertising in the trade papers," Mr. Patten declared. "And the time is coming when an exhibitor will buy the picture he wants regardless of who produces it. Yes, there has been discrimination.

Herman Rifkin has formed the Eastern Feature Films Corporation, of which he is treasurer and general manager. The president is an assistant district attorney and a former city treasurer. Mr. Rifkin said it was the intention to extend the company's business.

Sam Moscow, of Moscow Films, Inc., is in favor of Federal censorship—that is, if we must have the thing in some form or other, believing the national the lesser of two evils. Mr. Moscow put over Burn 'Em Up Barnes in New England and is all ready to repeat the performance with Sure-Fire Flint and the other Burr Six.

"I positively do see a picking up in the demand from exhibitors," said Mr. Moscow.

E. V. Corbett, manager of the Lightning Photoplay Corporation, said the summer had been quiet but there was noticeable a marked increase in inquiry.

"Wildness of Youth" Is Tender Story

Ivan Abramson's Graphic Production, Which Contains Last Work of Bobby Connelly, Is Strongly Portrayed

THE CAST

Louise Wesley.....Virginia Pearson
Jule Grayton.....Mary Anderson
James Surbrun.....Harry T. Morey
Andrew Kane.....Joseph Striker
Edward Grayton.....Thurston Hall
Mrs. Martha Kane.....Julia Swayne Gordon
Teddy Wesley.....''Bobby'' Connelly
Dr. Carlyle Preston.....Harry Southard
Senora Gonzales.....Madeline La Varre
Roger Moore.....George J. Williams

Graphic Exchanges and their exhibitor customers and the patrons of the latter will find an unusually moving story in Wildness of Youth, which Ivan Abramson has produced for the independent market. The subject will rank with the best of the recently screened State rights subjects. It is stern, straight drama, unrelieved by any attempt at injecting touches of humor. If tears or action that moves to tears be an unfailing stepping stone to popularity—and dramatic history would seem to sustain the statement—then surely Mr. Abramson's picture will be popular.

The production gains added pathos from the fact that it registers for the benefit of the next generation as well as that of the present the splendid artistry of little Bobby Connelly, whose untimely death was recorded shortly after the completion of the picture. Bobby was a born actor.

Aside from the little fellow the honors will go to Virginia Pearson, Julia Swayne Gordon, Harry Morey and Thurston Hall —and Mary Anderson. The latter had a particularly difficult part, one calling for self-effacement, like that of Mr. Morey's, and she met the demands upon her without regard to self. Madeline La Varre as the adventuress made much of her slight opportunity. Joseph Striker's work was commendable as a whole, but on a few occasions he was inclined to act. He, too, had a role that in its sum was not a pleasant one.

The photography of Marcel Le Pickard and the staging of the Tri-Art studios were excellent. Ivan Abramson and Don Dundas are the authors of the story and scenario. They have built a logical tale of to-day, one that runs smoothly and convincingly.

The story reflects just what its title indicates—an uncontrollable son and a headstrong daughter, in love with each other. There is an indulgent mother of the former and also a would-be stern parent of the latter. There is a seemingly respectable and generous broker who wins the consent of the girl to be his wife, an act on the girl's part dictated by motives of pique directed against the young man. There is a benevolent woman, superintendent of a children's home, who, it proves, has lost a son through the rascality of her husband. She finds the one and later through a logically contrived accident comes face to face with the faithless husband. In a scuffle over the possession of a pistol which the latter draws the man is killed. There is a dramatic trial of the young man for murder—there is an abundance of motive —but as the jury returns its verdict the child calls to the judge that the young man is innocent. The mother enters the courtroom, tells her story, the accused is freed and the two young lovers are reconciled.

The ending of this seven-reel production, or the last 2000 feet, is marked by steady accumulating tension. But every one will go out happy. G. B.

Australasian Films and Glucksmann Buy Equity Production

Equity Pictures Corporation announces that What's Wrong With the Women has been sold for Australia, New Zealand, Argentina, Uruguay, Paraguay, Chile, Peru, Bolivia and Ecuador.

The buyer for the first-mentioned territory is the Australasian Films, Ltd., of 729 Seventh Avenue, New York City. Jacobo Glucksmann of 220 West Forty-Second Street was the purchaser of the rights for the Spanish-speaking countries.

The delay on accessories has been taken care of, and Equity is accordingly in a position to handle the inquiries.

Millard Johnson, speaking for Australasian Films, declared What's Wrong With the Women was as fine a picture as has been shown in the Antipodes.

"Secrets of Paris" Is Making Headway at Yonkers Studio

Work on Charles C. Burr and Whitman Bennett's elaborate production of The Secrets of Paris, taken from Eugene Sue's novel, "The Mysteries of Paris," is progressing rapidly. The big studio at Yonkers is the scene of much activity. Three new members have been added to the cast. Rose Coghlan is down for an excellent part, that of the Owl, and everybody is more than pleased with her brilliant work. In spite of years Miss Coghlan is still a great artist and is an inspiration for the younger people to watch. Dolores Cassinelli is playing the role of Lola. For the role of the Strangler, Mr. Bennett has chosen Walter James, standing 6 feet 3 inches.

In the part of the Prince, which is played straight, Lew Cody claims he has the ideal role of his career.

Standard Buys Warner Product

The entire series of forthcoming Warner Brothers productions have been purchased by M. Mitchell of the Standard Productions Company, Atlanta, for the southern territory. The rights include Georgia, Florida, Alabama and North and South Carolina. Standard Productions also is handling Why Girls Leave Home and School Days.

C. B. C. Issuing a Novel Press Book for Blaney Story

The completion of what is the most complete, extensive and co-operative press book possible for C. B. C. to make has just been announced by the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation on More to Be Pitied.

The book is an unusual one, according to Jack Cohn of that company, because it represents the exchangemen and exhibitors' ideas of what a helpful press book should contain.

For several weeks before any work was begun on the book, officials and members of the exploitation department interrogated showmen—both exchangemen and exhibitors—with a view to learning what it should contain for the greatest amount of real "put it over" power.

Bobby North, of the Apollo Exchange; Ben Amsterdam, Tony Luchese and Sam Grand are among the men in touch with the needs of exhibitors and exchanges whose suggestions contributed to the completeness of the book.

The same plan was used to a certain extent in the planning of the lobby display, which is of an unusual type—that of an attractive oval.

SEATTLE NOTES

Jack Lannon and J. T. Sheffield of Greater Features, Inc., have returned from a two weeks' automobile trip through the Portland territory, during which they tied up Jensen & Von Herberg for Portland on the series of twelve Felix Cartoons, Federated Screen Snap Shots and The Black Panther's Cub, which will open at the Rivoli Aug. 19.

Mrs. Ida M. Schwartz of the Schwartz Production Company of Los Angeles spent a week in Seattle recently on business.

Fontenelle Buys Hallrooms

Shallenberger Talks of New Pictures

Arrow President Declares He Never Was So Optimistic as to Trade Conditions and His Own Company's Plans

W. E. Shallenberger, president of Arrow Film Corporation, left for Boston early this week in the interests of his company's fall product and also to give "Arrow Month"—September—additional impetus. The Doctor was accompanied by J. S. Jossey, special representative of Arrow.

"At no time since my entrance into the motion picture industry have I been so optimistic," Dr. Shallenberger said before leaving. "Not only over conditions in general as I find them, but concerning the part which my company will play in the forthcoming era of prosperity. We have assembled for the independent exchangeman a collection of real box office attractions—good pictures, carefully made, which will mean big business for the exchanges and the theatres using them, and which will materially assist in the restoration of public confidence in the screen. Night Life in Hollywood, to be released by Arrow in the early fall, has stirred up a tremendous amount of anticipation and excitement among independent exchange men, and I sincerely believe it will prove one of the outstanding successes of the season.

"As regards Lost In a Big City, I feel that here, too, we will have another enormous money-maker, because it was made by an organization which knows how to create just that type of picture. Blazed Trail Productions, Inc., the producers, made Ten Nights In a Barroom, and every exhibitor and exchangeman is familiar with the history of this picture.

"I expect to get big results and so does my entire organization with the new series of Western photoplays starring William Fairbanks, for which we have just contracted. Fairbanks is a thoroughly capable youngster and, considering the short space of time he has been before the camera, he has gained for himself a personal following which these new productions will do much to augment. Ben Wilson, who is making them for Arrow release, has taken every step necessary to insure the success of the pictures."

"Notoriety," Being Made by Will Nigh, Has an Unusual Cast

Will Nigh has added four sure-fire players to the cast of Notoriety, as announced in these columns last week, making ten top-notch favorites in the one subject. The stellar combination represents one of the longest lists of popular players ever assembled for an independent production.

William H. Tooker, a performer who stands practically alone in his type of character, has been featured in many successful pictures. In the present instance he takes the role of a theatrical manager.

Anders Randolf, sensational actor of The Lion and the Mouse, recalls many successes. With Will Nigh he will play the important part of vaudeville agent.

Ida Waterman, on the stage as well as on the screen, has played many notable roles.

Mona Lisa is the last of the ten names to join the line-up.

In the supporting cast also are John Goldsworthy, Ernest E. Pollock, Dorothy Dank, Joe Smiley, Michael Donovan, and William Gidgeon.

Arrangements for state-right distribution of the Will Nigh series of four are being made by L. Lawrence Weber and Bobby North.

Loew Circuit Books Second National's Series of Features

Twelve pictures provided by Second National Pictures Corporation for the current season have been booked by the Loew circuit of theatres, and two of these are showing in New York City and the Metropolitan district. The Night Riders, melodrama of the Northwest featuring Maudie Dunham, Albert Ray and Andre Beaulieu, from the novel by Ridgewell Cullum, and Her Story, written for the screen by Dion Titheradge for his sister, Madge Titheradge, speaking stage star of "The Butterfly on the Wheel," were selected for the launching of Second National pictures on the Loew circuit.

These are to be followed immediately by David and Jonathan and Broken Shadows.

Second National Pictures Corporation is nearing the close of the first year in its career and with exchanges covering practically the entire territory in the United States it is preparing for an ambitious campaign in the coming season.

"Country Flapper" Goes to R. D. Craver for His Five States

R. D. Craver, president of the Associated First National of the Southeast, now in New York on company business, left his duties long enough last week to find his way to the Producers Security Corporation, 516 Fifth Avenue, to contract for the distributing rights of Dorothy Gish's The Country Flapper in his five Southeastern States. His exchanges in Charlotte and Atlanta will handle the bookings.

Producers Security reports a great demand for the Gish feature from every section of the country and many big first run bookings are being arranged. The success of the picture in the Capitol Theatre, New York, goes to prove, the company claims, that the summer season is not a drawback when the right kind of entertainment is offered.

Louis Baum, Promoted, Is Off to Close Territory

At a meeting held at the Equity Pictures Corporation on last Monday, Louis Baum, at present general manager, was promoted to the position of vice-president. This promotion has been given to Mr. Baum in appreciation for his past services.

Mr. Baum has left New York for a tour of the United States with his new production, What's Wrong With the Women. He will stop at Washington, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Chicago, Denver, Des Moines, San Francisco, Seattle and Minneapolis.

Supplying Theatres with Music

The New York Music Roll Exchange, in order to maintain its service, reports it has secured a selected stock of music rolls from leading manufacturers. The new monthly issues also are added to the stock as fast as released. This makes it possible to supply theatres with any music rolls that may be desired. The company is prepared to supply fresh selections from ten rolls up, avoiding the possibility of patrons growing tired of too often repeated music.

Herman Rifkin Buys "Tarzan"

A deal was consummated this week between Louis Weiss of Weiss Brothers and Herman Rifkin whereby the latter has secured for the territory of New England the rights to "Adventures of Tarzan." The production now has been sold for every territory in the United States with the exception of Washington, Oregon, Northern Idaho and Montana. Rifkin will release the serial October 1.

Eastern Issues Chinese Picture

The Eastern Film Corporation announces the release of The House of Darkened Windows. The picture carries the atmosphere of China, and it is said great care was taken to insure accuracy in settings, costumes and customs. Many Chinese appear in the production.

Weiss Brothers Plan Busy Season

Starting with "After Six Days," Company Will Issue Several Features Including "The Woman Who Believed"

After marking time for the past two months, Weiss Brothers, sponsors for Artclass Pictures Corporation, have again resumed activities on an increased scale. They will proceed to place in effect several of the plans affecting their various productions laid during the summer months.

In anticipation of an active fall and winter season the personnel of the organization has been increased in its various departments, the executives in charge of these departments continuing without change.

Additional office space has been taken in the Marcus Loew State Theatre Building. The first of the big pictures of the Artclass organization to receive attention will be After Six Days, the feature film presenting the complete story of the Bible from Adam and Eve to the Songs of Solomon. This film will be presented in a Broadway theatre in September for an extended run, following which it will be offered throughout the country in the principal cities as a special road show attraction with augmented orchestra and special exploitation tie-ups.

Another important production on the Weiss Brothers' roster of releases for the fall and winter is the picture titled at the present moment Destiny. This film has been acquired for the United Kingdom by Goldwyn and is also playing an extended engagement at the present moment in Paris under the title of The Three Candles. It will be released in this country under another title.

The company also will offer a six-part drama under the title of The Woman Who Believed. Among its players are Walter Miller, Ann Luther, Dorothy Bernard, Frank Evans, and it will be augmented by Walter Beckwith's wild animals, at present a feature in Luna Park.

Artclass will continue to produce, in conjunction with Jack Eaton, the series of Sport Review single reel films which have gained popularity during the past nine months. These subjects will be released, as heretofore, by Goldwyn. It is said negotiations are now on for the acquisition of a special feature presenting one of Shakespeare's greatest works. Plans for the production of a new serial as a successor to Adventures of Tarzan, starring Elmo Lincoln, also are in course of formation.

"Saved by Radio" Is Atlantic Enterprises' Initial Production

Saved by Radio is the title of the first production made abroad by Atlantic Enterprises, Inc. A radiogram received at the company's New York office advises that the last episodes are now being filmed and that the feature will be shipped by September 1.

A clean melodrama full of heart interest and suspense is the way Atlantic Enterprises describes its first picture. The story was written by Marx Nathan, and is laid in America and Europe. Every effort has been made by the producer to keep production costs within a limit that will insure a real box-office attraction at a price within the reach of every exhibitor.

Saved by Radio is the first of twenty five-reel features planned by Atlantic Enterprises for the coming year. Another producing unit is now being organized in New York and will probably sail for Europe early in September. The company is now dickering for the services of a well-known director, cameraman and scenario writer for this unit.

Producers Security Offering Apfel's "The Wolf's Fangs"

The Wolf's Fangs, a new Oscar Apfel Production, is being offered to independents by Producers Security Corporation. Mr. Apfel, who just finished directing Bull Dog Drummond in England, completed the former picture just prior to leaving.

It is Mr. Apfel's own production and is a romantic tale staged in the North Maine Woods. Wilfred Lytell is starred and is supported by Nancy Deaver and Manila Martan. The Wolf's Fangs is described as full of thrills and of scenic beauty.

Producers Security reports activity in the independent market for the production.

Dell Henderson All "Het Up" Over Work in "Sure-Fire Flint"

"If realism and stellar acting by an all-star cast of legitimate actors will put over a production, Sure-Fire Flint, starring Johnny Hines, will go over with a bang," said Director Dell Henderson at Burr's Glendale Studio this week in an interview with some local newspaper men who were the guests of Charlie Burr. Henderson is all "het up" about the remarkable results he has obtained from Hines, Doris Kenyon, Edmund Breese, Effie Shannon, Robert Edeson, J. Barney Sherry and Charles Gerrard.

"Never have I seen a cast put such force, such energy and such excellent characterizations in a picture as these players have done," continued Henderson. "To me it was like sitting in on some big Broadway show, and you can't blame me for my thoughts when you realize that all of these actors have appeared in some of the best legitimate shows presented on Broadway.

"The cast has proved an ideal one for just such a comedy-drama, for the manner in which each of these stars has taken hold of his work in the production has been a source of great satisfaction."

"Man Wanted" Will Start Ball Rolling for Clark-Cornelius

According to the Clark-Cornelius Corporation its big fall release to inaugurate the season will be Arthur Housman in Man Wanted, a comedy drama specially written by Curtis Benton, whose stories are appearing in current fiction periodicals.

The picture is described as a "rollicking comedy drama." It was directed by Jack Dillon and its cast includes Frank Losee, Flora Finch, Diana Allen, Huntley Gordon, Warren Cook, James Harrison, Ricca Allen, Lou Gorey, Florence Ashbrook and H. H. McCullum.

The Clark-Cornelius Corporation has placed this picture at the head of its fall releases. "We feel we have catalogued this picture rightly," said Mr. Rollo, general manager of Clark-Cornelius. "We feel certain both exchangemen and exhibitors will want it as their opening attraction for the fall season. Each year the exchangeman comes to New York searching for a picture big enough to stand the opening strain, something that will bring back the business and put the public in the mood for more amusement."

"Beware of the Law" Nearly Ready for Trade Showing

Charles Jawitz, who will State right his new feature Beware of the Law this fall, announces that the production is being rapidly polished into final shape. Editing and titling have been completed, the Ritchey Litho Company's artists are preparing the paper, and a press book jammed full of exploitation material is now being written by a practical showman.

The production, made in the north woods, is said to contain an appeal to every picture fan. Mystery, melodramatic fights, homely human interest and light comedy touches abound. It was directed by W. A. S. Douglas and features a charming actress well known on the screen, Marjorie Payne.

Big Circuits Secure Warner Output

Many of the Best Known Independent Names Recorded Among the Firms Buying Product of the Coming Year

The biggest circuits and exchanges throughout the country have contracted for the entire series of seven forthcoming Warner Brothers attractions, according to Harry M. Warner. In the estimation of Mr. Warner these deals serve to indicate in no small measure that exhibitors, regardless of affiliation, are eagerly seeking big pictures, and in doing so are not only catering to the public demand, but also helping to maintain the public confidence in the motion picture industry.

The Warner product has been practically sold solid throughout America. The deals were made with Balaban & Katz, Rubin & Finkelstein, R. H. Lieber, A. M. Fabian, R. G. Tunstall, A. H. Blank, L. K. Brin, M. Mitchell, Regal Films, Ltd., Toronto; Skirboll Brothers, Cleveland; S. & O. Pictures Corporation, California; Joe Skirboll, Pittsburgh; Franklin Film Company, Boston; the Independent Film Corporation, Philadelphia, and Standard Productions, Atlanta.

The series of Warner pictures being made at the coast studios include four Warner Brothers productions and three Harry Rapf productions.

"A feature of these deals reveals two significant facts," said Mr. Warner. "The first is that the concerns that have contracted for our pictures have done so without seeing the pictures. And the second fact is that these men, fully aware of our policy to carry out a sweeping publicity and advertising campaign with each and every picture, have faith in our ability to follow the same procedure with our forthcoming pictures. Furthermore, it serves to indicate in no small measure that exhibitors are shopping for high class productions just as much as the public is flocking to the theatres showing big box-office attractions. A summary of the situation will convince the industry that only big pictures will make money for exhibitors and at the same time help to maintain the public confidence in the motion picture industry."

For these productions a number of prominent screen players, writers and directors have been engaged to picturize the stories. The screen writers include Julien Josephson, Monte M. Katterjohn, Olga Printzlau, Edmund Goulding, Mildred Considine and Isabel Johnston; the directors, Wallace Worsley, William Beaudine and E. Mason Hopper; the players, Marie Prevost, Niles Welch, Jack Mulhall, Wilfred Lucas, Russell Simpson, Ruth Renick, Richard Tucker and a large number of other well known actors and actresses.

Unity Pictures to Enter Distribution Here September 1

Sept. 1 is the date set for Unity Pictures, Inc., of 723 Seventh Avenue, to enter the distribution of their product in the independent market. The first production which Unity will offer will be Why Do Men Marry?, featuring Edy Darclea. Miss Darclea will make a series of starring vehicles for Unity within the coming year. Advertising accessories are now being made ready for Sept. 1 release. One, three, six sheets, window cards, press books, special cue sheets, lobby photographs and oil paintings are being made. A special advertising campaign will be started soon on this production.

Unity Pictures, Inc., invites all independent exchanges to write, wire or personally get acquainted with them. It occupies the entire third floor of 723 Seventh Avenue, in which a comfortable projection room is one of the facilities.

Harry Rapf Finishes Work on "Heroes of the Street"

Final scenes for the second Wesley Barry picture, Heroes of the Street, produced by Harry Rapf for the Warner Brothers, were filmed last week under the direction of William Beaudine. The first Barry vehicle, Rags to Riches, was completed under the direction of Wallace Worsley.

Immediately upon the picturization of the Barry story, Harry Rapf began preparations for the shooting of Brass, the Charles G. Norris novel of marriage and divorce. S. L. and Jack Warner will also begin the production of The Beautiful and Damned, F. Scott Fitzgerald's tirade against the modern flapper.

"More to Be Pitied" Heartily Praised by North and Blaney

An unsolicited letter of congratulation received by C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation from Bobby North, head of the Apollo Exchange, New York, marks proof of the latter's enthusiasm over this feature.

Immediately following his purchase of this all star feature Mr. North requested that a print be rushed to him, and in an extremely complimentary letter reported that it had gone over 100 per cent with every big exhibitor in the Greater New York territory to whom he had shown it, and that they had all been enthusiastic and booked it.

Another letter was also received from Charles E. Blaney, on whose stage play the film version is based.

"The screening surpassed my expectations beyond words," said Mr. Blaney. "You have produced and followed the story faithfully and retained all the thrills, heart interest, and human appeal. It will please the most critical and appeal to all classes. It's a corker."

Stevenson of Toronto Buys C. B. C. Story for Canada

Canadian rights were sold this week on C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation's series of six, of which More To Be Pitied is the first to be taken by Charles L. Stevenson, with offices in Toronto.

Mr. Stevenson notified Jack Cohn of the C. B. C. organization that pictures of that type—melodramas with heart interest—had great appeal to Canadian audiences, and that the original stage play of Blaney had been one of the greatest successes played in Canada.

Following his purchase Mr. Stevenson wrote that he would launch a big campaign through Canada when he released the feature.

California Theatre, Los Angeles, Cal., Week of July 30.—Admission 25-35-55, matinee, and evening, 35-55-75. Pulled the biggest business of the year.
Exploitation.—Tie-up with 30 tailoring shops; tailors mailed 20,000 postcards supplied by California; tie-up with Los Angles "Express" of three-page spread ad with feature ad at the top and the 30 tailors' ads.
Short Subjects.—California Topical Review and Magazine, Topics of the Day.
Press Comments.—"Has the quality of genius and sincerity."—"Examiner." "Is made to your measure. The hilarious screen version of the famous play of the same name apparently suited every taste of the patrons that attended the theatre." "Herald."

"THE TRAP"
(Universal)

Twelfth Street, Kansas City, Mo.—The popularity of Lon Chaney here, combined with cool weather, resulted in a good attendance all week.
Exploitation.—Four cuts of the star, each containing a different facial expression, were used with these lines under the cuts: "Love with him—Hate with Him—Scorn with him—Suffer with him," in newspaper space. Also billboard and lobby display space.
Short Subjects.—"Aesop's Fables," comedy; Toonerville comedy, and Screen Magazine, current events.
Daily Press Comment.—"A picture that will not be forgotten in a long time."—"Star-Times." "A story which gives Lon Chaney the opportunity to justify the faith the Universal Film Company had in elevating him to the ranks of stardom."—"Journal-Post."

"THE TRUTHFUL LIAR"
(Paramount)

Wells, Norfolk, Va., Week of Aug. 7-8-9.—Very good business, with Buster Keaton in "The Paleface" drawing even honors with the feature. No extra exploitation.

American.—There was not much fault to be found with what was presented in the film version of this wonderful romance, but there was so much that was missing! Times.—It is a good picture, notwithstanding its several and serious shortcomings. Herald.—Pomp and pageantry which might have delighted the heart of Mark Twain himself are revealed. Daily News.—This film has caught the spirit of Mark Twain if ever any one or anything has caught it, and you owe it to your children and to yourself as well to take them to see it. Telegram.—Makes a notably excellent film. Mail.—Mark Twain is one of the few American litterateurs recognized abroad, and from Europe comes the best adaption of his best work.

American.—Both star and producer have given the best they have to make The Masquerader a picture well worth seeing. Times.—The production is remarkably well made, as to photography and continuity, and the acting is nicely above the average. Tribune.—It is unbelievably dull. Herald.—Has a strong and legitimate appeal of its own as photo-drama. Telegram.—Achieves a new lease on life as a screen play. Mail.—Katherine Cecil Thurston's novel had quite a vogue and James Hunter Booth made a successful Broadway play out of it. Richard Walton Tully's film ought to be just as much of a hit. Globe.—The film unfolds with ease and to a remarkably good tempo. Journal.—For one thing, he has accentuated and emphasized the love interest with telling effect.

American. — Spectacularly presented. Can always be relied upon for pointing a moral—which helps. Herald.—The little fable about the dissipated flapper spreads thinly over the screen. Telegram.—As a Broadway play, was an immediate hit. As a motion picture at the Rialto Theatre it continues in that happy class. Mail.—Is a vastly entertaining production. Globe.—Nice People is truly an all-star screen production. Journal—It is not often that a play, carried to the screen, is improved in transit, but Nice People . . . is an exceptional picture in that and other respects.

IN its review of the principal photoplay productions of the first six months of the current year, the New York Times, one of the most powerful critical authorities of the country, has this to say of two HODKINSON releases·

"JANE EYRE—This Hugo Ballin production has the flavor of an old novel, which means that it has been sincerely and intelligently done"

"THE YOUNG PAINTER—As a motion picture existing for its own sake, the best of the Triart productions, based on well-known paintings Herbert Blache and Lejaren a' Hiller are the directors, Mary Astor and Pierre Gendron the principal players. Simply and expressively staged and photographed."

In its introductory remarks, the Times says of its list of pictures that they are nominated, "not for the hall of fame, but for exhibition before reasonably intelligently and normally patient people seeking screen entertainment."

After all what more could be expected of any photoplay, than that it entertains?

EDITED BY GEORGE T. PARDY

The Eyes of the Mummy

U. F. A. Production Released by Paramount. Length 3800 Feet.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Marah, Pola Negri; Radu, Emil Jannings.

While in Cairo Albert Vernon, an Englishman, hears weird stories regarding the shrine of Ug-Balak. He determines to go there and see for himself. After several days travel he reaches the shrine and is shown through by Radu the keeper. He discovers that Radu has captured a young Egyptian girl and is holding her as high priestess there. A fight between Vernon and the keeper takes place and Vernon rescues the girl Marah and takes her back to England with him. Here he has her educated and finally marries her. His friend Lord Evertson returns from Egypt, and while crossing the desert has saved a native who begs to be his slave. Vernon and his bride visit the Lord and Marah discovers that the servant is Radu. He continues to exert his hypnotic influence over her and she suffers a mental breakdown. After careful nursing she regains her health but Radu persists in appearing before her. One day while Vernon is away he enters the house and plunges a knife into her and then does likewise to himself. Vernon returns and finds her body lying on the floor beside the dead form of Radu. She still breathes and with the fear of Radu gone they live happily.

This picture at its best is far below the majority of former German films that have been shown in this country. Usually one has stupendous settings at least to rely upon, but a total absence of any convincing atmosphere is conspicuously felt in The Eyes of the Mummy. The story is another one of the thoroughly unreal plots that carries no note of sympathic appeal along with any of the characters given and consequently shows little sign of interest in the development. It is not the sort of picture that appeals to the average American, first because of its exaggerated theme, and, second, on account of the inferior quality of the whole production.

Points of Appeal.—There are a few shots of Oriental atmosphere that may attract attention. Some of the characters in the street scenes are good but it is like watching a three ringed circus to get anything out of it. The dance that Marah gives in the drawing room is all right if it gets by the local censors.

Cast—Pola Negri emerges from this picture with considerably less praise than she usually receives. It is, however, entirely the fault of the material that has been used and not because of her own acting. Emil Jannings' reputation also suffers, but it is quite evident that in both cases this picture was made during the earliest stages of their screen careers.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—The photography is fairly good and lighting is generally sufficient. Very badly directed and a ridiculous conception of Englishmen and English ways. Exteriors look fakey and interiors are of the appearance of having had everything in the studio crowded before the camera.

Up and at Them

Film Booking Offices of America Photoplay in Five Parts. Authors, Wm. Seiter and Lewis Milestone. Scenario by Eve Unsell. Director, Wm. A. Seiter. Cameraman, Joseph Dubray. Running Time, Fifty-five Minutes.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Barbara Jackson, Doris May; Supported by Hallam Cooley, J. Herbert Frank, Otis Harlan, Clarissa Selwynne, John Gough and H. Carter.

Barbara Jackson, arrested for speeding in an auto during the absence of her father, who is an art collector, is rescued by her aunt who pays her fine, but as punishment for her scrape refuses to allow her to have the car to meet her father on a night when he returns from a business trip. But Barbara succeeds in bribing the chauffeur, dons his uniform and a false mustache and drives triumphantly away. As the train is late she decides to take a spin. A stranger, mistaking the car for a public conveyance, gets in and orders her to drive him to a house which proves to be the home of Bob Everett, another art collector and business rival of Barbara's father. Barbara enters into the spirit of the jest, but discovers that he and some other crooks are bent on burglarizing Everett's house. She tries to escape but is forced to accompany the crooks, who break in, steal a valuable painting and lock her inside. The owner of the house finds her and concludes she is a thief, but later becomes aware of her identity. Barbara is determined to recover the painting and after a number of amusing adventures does so and marries Everett.

This is a lively comedy, with plenty of adventure and romance thrown in for good measure, skilfully directed and without a dull moment in it. As a starring vehicle for pretty, piquant Doris May it thoroughly fulfills its object to keep an audience amused through five reels of fast action and humorous situations. The plot is, of course, a trifle farcical, and not to be taken too seriously, but nobody will feel inclined to be critical in that particular so long as it affords such excellent entertainment. Up and at Them possesses the double advantage from the exhibitor's standpoint of being the kind of film which will please juvenile as well as adult patrons and is peculiarly well adapted to the hot weather period, when the heavier type of picture is apt to prove tiresome.

Points of Appeal.—Although the comedy element holds principal sway, there are many well staged thrills introduced and the love interest is not neglected. The heroine's adventures in her self-imposed pursuit of the crooks who have stolen the painting are full of ginger and excitement and a very neat turn is given to the plot toward the close by means of which she and the hero are brought together.

Cast.—There is something very magnetic about Doris May and she has never shown to better advantage than in the role of the slightly impish but altogether lovable Barbara. It is a delightfully natural performance without a single false note to mar Miss May's artistic portrayal of this dashing little heroine and should add many recruits to her already large legion of admirers. Excellent support is given the star by the other players.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—There are many well filmed interiors, some pretty country shots and effective lighting is in evidence. The continuity is unbroken and high speed marks every foot of the film from start to finish.

Me and My Gal

Distributed by American Releasing Corporation. Director, George Pearson. Length, 5,433 Feet.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

"Squibs" Hopkins, Betty Balfour; Ivy Hopkins, Annette Benson; Sam Hopkins, Hugh E. Wright; "Bully" Dawson; Cronin Wilson; Sgt. Charles Lee, Fred Groves; Inspector Lee, Ambrose Manning; Mrs. Robert Lee, Mary Brough.

"Squibs" Hopkins lives in a dirty flat with her father, a corner bookmaker and her frivolous sister. The girl peddles flowers on the streets and revolts against her home life but does nothing much about it until she meets Charles Lee, a policeman. He finds it a case of love at first sight and takes Squibs out to the country to meet his mother and father, but Squibs and the mother quarrel over the fact that the girl has never been in the domestic service of some influential family. It looks like an end of the romance for Squibs. The sister has a suitor named Dawson who suddenly discovers he likes Squibs better and he attempts to force his attentions on her. In the midst of a scene in which Dawson tries to kiss Squibs, the policeman arrives. Of course, there is a fight—a spirited one—and the villain is vanquished. Then of course Squibs and her "copper" embrace for a final fadeout.

As a study in types and manners, Me and My Gal, a melodramatic comedy dealing with characters of London's Whitechapel district, assumes more than ordinary interest. From top to bottom the cast shows decided types and the settings are uniquely picturesque. The play is of interest from another angle. Here is an English production which gives the greatest prominence to comedy in treating decidedly melodramatic material. Can it be that the heavy-handed treatment characteristic of the English photoplay has begun to pall even in England. If so, then there are bright hopes for the future of English production. Of course, it was to be expected that in taking suddenly the decision that the laugh was worth while, the producers should play their hand too strongly. In this they are aided by the actors, all of whom exaggerate considerably in seeking comedy effects. The success of Me and My Gal depends altogether on average audiences. Should types and character study prove sufficient to satisfy, it is a good picture. If not, it is a slow-footed, undramatic narrative revolving about a little hoyden who seems to this reviewer to be altogether too hoydenish.

Points of Appeal.—Interesting characters and colorful settings. A faithful picture in portraying the life and surroundings of the poorer class in London. Perhaps these attributes are sufficient to offset a lack of pace and compensate for the fact that since most of the drama takes place off stage, being then related in titles, there is no approach to suspense.

Cast.—Betty Balfour is at times amusing, but mostly she overacts. The others are successful in portraying the physical aspects of their characters.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—The photography and lighting are splendid.

West of Chicago

Released by Fox. Story by George Scarborough. Scenario by Paul Schofield. Cameraman, Lucien Androit. Directed by Scott Dunlap. Length, 4,694 Feet.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Conroy Daly, Charles Jones; Della Moore, Rene Adoree; Hampton, Philo McCullough; English Kid, Sid Dalbrook; Judson Malone, Chas. French; Senorita Gonzales, Kathleen Key.

After three years absence Conroy Daly returns to his Uncle's ranch in Texas to find that the old man has been murdered and that his foreman has taken over the estate by improvising the heirs of his own selection. Daly gets a job on the ranch so that he can better watch the goings on and discovers that the girl who is impersonating his sister has been forced into doing this against her will. He learns that her brother is in jail accused of the murder of Malone. Daly does some investigating and is caught eavesdropping. Hampton tries to fire him but Daly tells him that he knows Conroy Daly personally. The foreman then gets Daly to pretend that he is the heir little thinking that he really is the man. Daly discovers his Uncle alive and wandering through the woods. Since the attempt on his life he has been suffering from aphasia but he recognizes his nephew and they go back to the ranch and start a clean-up. Daly has fallen in love with the girl who has been pretending to be his sister and she confesses that she did it on a promise from Hampton that he would help her brother. Con makes her promise him that she will still keep the name of Daly.

A speedy story, with plenty of good action to satisfy and keep the audience interested. West of Chicago fills the bill as a Western story, consisting of some worth while value that should register well in a house whose patrons clamor for melodrama without being overly bloody. There are a few thrills and some riding stunts and the development of the romance through the story is pleasing. The building of the plot is well handled and sustains the interest to the big climax that follows.

Points of Appeal.—A good bit of excitement is gained in several parts of the story. The Mexican marriage is pleasing, although bearing no direct influence on the story. Nevertheless it furnishes a laugh and good action. The train scenes are entertaining, but have been done before. Charles Jones is given more of an opportunity in this production to show his versatility than has been the case in the majority of his former stories and his efforts appear to have been well spent. There should be no difficulty in getting the approval of patrons on this picture in localities where this type of story and the star is known.

Cast.—Charles Jones as Conroy Daly gives a peppy performance and no doubt will delight his audience with suave mannerisms and dare deviltry. Rene Adoree is pleasing in the role of Della Moore and gives good support. Philo McCullough is a thoroughly despicable villain and his work registers well. The rest of the cast is also good.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—There are some attractive outdoor shots that have been nicely filmed. The interiors are adequate for the story and lighting is good throughout. The story is well balanced and moves along at a lively clip. Direction satisfactory.

Nice People

Paramount Photoplay in Six Parts. Adapted from Rachel Crothers's Stage Play of Same Title. Scenario by Clara Beranger. Director, William de Mille. Cameraman, Guy Wilky. Running Time, Sixty-five Minutes.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Billy Wade, Wallace Reid; Theodora Gloucester, Bebe Daniels; Scotty Wilbur, Conrad Nagel; Hallie Livingston, Julia Faye; Margaret Rainsford, Claire McDowell; Hubert Gloucester, Edward Martindel; Eileen Baxter-Jones, Eve Sothern; Trevor Leeds, Bertha Johns; Oliver Comstock, William Boyd; Mrs. Heyfer, Ethel Wales.

Despite her parent's disapproval Theodora Gloucester persists in amusing herself in the company of a number of young folks of the ultra smart set, who are fond of drinking, flirting and gambling. Scotty is the most popular man among them because he is the best dancer. Billy Wade, back from army service abroad, cannot see much difference between these so-called "nice people" and the inhabitants of the underworld, but becomes interested in "Teddy," as her intimates call Theodora. After a party with her wild friends at a cabaret Teddy spends a day in the country with Scotty. A storm drives them to take refuge in a farmhouse where they are alone. Scotty goes to sleep and Teddy seeks repose upstairs. The storm forces Billy Wade to look for shelter and he also comes to the farmhouse, where he watches Scotty asleep. Billy leaves without Scotty having been aware of his presence. Teddy's father and aunt Margaret arrive. Mr. Gloucester insists that Teddy, to save her reputation, should announce that she is engaged to Scotty, but she refuses and stays at the farm with her aunt. Scandal arises and only Billy sticks up for Teddy. He is in love with her and feels much hurt when she insists on going to the city to attend a large party. She goes and is snubbed by everybody. On returning to the farm she refuses an offer of marriage from Scotty. Her father comes to take her home, but she tells him that she wants nothing but Billy who avows his love for her.

This screen version of Rachel Crothers's stage play adheres pretty closely to the original plot, is a well directed picture with fine settings, handsome photography, presented by a cast of unusual strength and gives every indication of proving a popular success. The story is interesting as well as timely, dealing as it does with the widely advertised follies of the so-called smart set and "jazz" spirit which prevails in modern American society. It drives home the moral that disregard of all conventionalities and decencies of life does not pay in the long run, and does so very cleverly, without resort to unnecessary preaching of the kind that handicaps the entertaining values of a film heavily. Nice People, with its acute vein of irony, its mingling of pathos and quiet humor, is likely to please all classes of patrons and registers as an attraction well worthy the attention of exhibitors.

Points of Appeal.—Despite her waywardness and resolute determination to have a good time whether her dismayed guardians like it or not, the heroine wins favor from the beginning, due to the fact that you feel she isn't a bad sort really and one's sympathy goes right out to her when she is snubbed by the scandalmongers at the ball and bravely defies her critics. The love interest is neatly developed, a bit of comedy helps to balance things nicely and a satisfactory climax is achieved.

Cast.—Wallace Reid scores a decided hit in the character of hero Billy Wade, giving an energetic, clean-cut portrayal of the frank, wholesome ex-soldier lad. Bebe Daniels is prettily fascinating as the wilful Teddy, a heavier role than she is in the habit of filling but whose emotional demands she is fully equal to. Others in the all-star cast render excellent support.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—There are many elaborate sets, some beautiful interiors and attractive rustic outdoor shots, with exquisite lighting throughout. The continuity is smooth and the action fast.

Rose o' the Sea

First National Photoplay in Seven Parts. Author, Countess Barcynska. Director, Fred Niblo. Cameraman, Dale Cawson. Running Time, Eighty Minutes.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Rose o' the Sea comes to New York to make a living after her only friend, an old sailor, who saved her life when the ship she sailed on as a baby was wrecked, dies. She finds employment selling flowers in a Gotham shop. Elliott Schuyler, rake and millionaire's son pays her attention. One night when auto riding with Rose he becomes intoxicated, attempts to embrace her forcibly, falls and is stunned. Rose, believing him dead, goes to his home and tells his father, Peter Schuyler. Elliott recovers, however, and apologizes, while his father is favorably impressed by Rose. Elliott is involved in a love affair with Viv Raymond, a chorus girl, forges his father's name to a check which gets into the hands of Roger Walton, a gambler. Rose prevents Elliott from killing himself and visits Walton to redeem the check. She is seen in Walton's apartment by Peter Schuyler and falls under the latter's suspicion. But Walton tells him that Rose is unjustly accused. Rose, indignant, returns to work in the shop. Later she is the means of reconciling Elliott, who has married Viv Raymond, with his father and finally she herself weds Peter Schuyler.

One of this picture's commendable qualities is that it gets out of the regulation rut for plots, offering a story with many original situations, a good deal of touching sentiment, devoid of banal excess, and holding its interest without dragging at any stage. Few directors could have resisted the temptation to supply the waif heroine with a wealthy mother, father, uncle or aunt in addition to providing her with a rich husband, but Fred Niblo is proof against the lure of stereotyped film methods and was content to leave Rose's origin severely alone, without wasting time and footage in tracing her parents and thereby tying the narrative thread up in unnecessary knots. So the yarn runs along smoothly, furnishes Anita Stewart with a role which suits her in every detail and exhibitors with an attraction whose box office value ought to register at high water mark.

Points of Appeal.—The fact that the heroine is thrown on her own resources and compelled to fight the battle of life alone in a big city naturally wins considerable sympathy, all the more so because the young lady in question shows plenty of pluck and ability to look out for herself and the possession of a remarkably independent spirit. That she finally weds the father of her first admirer is a bit unusual, but quite satisfactory, as the elder Schuyler registers as a likeable sort of chap, and the climax, with Rose bringing about a reconciliation between father and son, is pleasing.

Cast.—Anita Stewart fills the role of Rose admirably, expressing its emotional situations with a certain amount of reserve strength which makes a telling impression on the spectators and never overacting. Thomas Holding has a capital part as Schuyler senior to which he does full justice, Rudolph Cameron makes a favorable appeal as the handsome scapegrace, Elliott Schuyler, and Margaret Landis wins favor as Elliott's chorus girl bride. The support is adequate.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—There are many handsome interiors, a prettily filmed night scene, some pleasing exteriors and good lighting prevails. The continuity holds together well and the action moves rapidly.

The Masquerader

First National Photoplay in Seven Parts. Adapted from Katherine Cecil Thurston's Novel and John Hunter Booth's Stage Play of Same Title. Director, James Young. Cameraman, George Benoit. Running Time, Ninety Minutes.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

John Chilcote, M. P. and John Loder, Guy Bates Post; Brock, Edward M. Kimball; Eve, Ruth Sinclair; Fraide, Herbert Standing; Lakely, Lawson Butt; Lady Astrupp, Marcia Manon; Robbins, Barbara Tennant; Blessington, Kenneth Gibson.

Debauchery has shattered the nerves of John Chilcote, British member of Parliament and his liason with Lady Astrupp almost alienated the affection of his wife, Eve. Called upon to make a speech in the House as the World War is about to break, he fails badly. In the fog going home he encounters a cousin unknown to him, one John Loder, struggling journalist, who resembles him strangely. Loder comments scathingly on his failure and remarks that he himself could do better. Chilcote pursues his course of drink and dope, despite the efforts of Brock, the trusted old family butler to prevent him. On the verge of disgrace, unable to respond to the call of duty, he goes to Loder's lodgings and, with the aid of Brock, persuades him to go in his garments to Parliament and make a speech in favor of England aiding Belgium. Chilcote remains in Loder's rooms, the latter makes a thrilling speech which sends Chilcote's name to the height of popularity. Loder goes to his double's home and is warmly received by Eve, who is delighted because he has unwittingly snubbed the advances of Lady Astrupp. She is once more deeply in love with the man she supposes to be her husband. Numerous complications ensue. Chilcote refuses to exchange identities again. Loder, by this time in love with Eve, grows desperate. At a masked ball given by Lady Astrupp, Loder narrowly escapes detection by the siren and Eve begins to suspect that he is not her husband. Finally Chilcote dies in the lodgings in Brock's presence. Brock identifies him to the authorities as John Loder. Returning, he tells Loder he must remain as Chilcote but Loder decides he will enlist as a private in the army. Before leaving he and Eve have an explanation and acknowledge their mutual love. Wounded, he receives the Victoria Cross and comes back to Eve and happiness.

Undoubtedly one of the season's best pictures, The Masquerader, which scored such a decided success as a "legitimate" attraction, promises to win as great, if not greater, popularity through the medium of the screen. The work of Guy Bates Post is an artistic treat, he is supported by a rare aggregation of dramatic talent, the photography represents the very acme of camera skill and James Young has directed the feature with unerring accuracy of detail, fine technique and admirable judgment. The net result is a film which no exhibitor will make a mistake in booking and can be depended upon to swell box office receipts to a gratifying extent. It is a truly remarkable offering and a lasting credit to all concerned in its production.

Points of Appeal.—It is an extremely difficult thing to make convincing a film which depends upon a plot dealing with the hero's dual personality, and the fact that this has been done with The Masquerader speaks volume for the clever manner in which director and players have handled the story. There is abundance of pathos and suspense, comedy of a delightfully subtle and effective kind and the British atmosphere and local color could not be better.

Cast.—The beauty of Mr. Post's interpretation of the double role is that he succeeds in thoroughly separating the characters of the two men without any seeming effort. Chilcote, the dissipated rake, and the clean, wholesome Loder, are as far apart as the two poles, despite their facial resemblance. It is a wonderful bit of acting which must be seen to be appreciated, as it fairly beggars description. Edward Kimball, as Brock, the faithful old butler, offers an incomparable character sketch, Ruth Sinclair is wistfully sweet in the role of Eve, Lady Astrupp, as played by Marcia Manon, is a witching siren to the life and credit must be given Barbara Tennant for a touching impersonation of the slavey, Robbins.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—The London night scenes and fog effects are exceedingly fine; there are some pretty garden shots, handsome interiors and the lighting is faultless. Even continuity and rapid action distinguish the entire production.

Don't Shoot

Released by Universal. Story by George Bronson Howard. Scenario by George Hively. Cameraman, Virgil Miller. Directed by Jack Conway. Length, 5130 Feet.

James Harrington Court, burglar, learns of a valuable necklace given to Velma Gay, fiancee of Buck Lindsay, whom she has been forced to consent to marry. She has, however, been exchanging notes secretly with her boyhood sweetheart, and Lindsay intercepts one that tells of a clandestine meeting that night. Lindsay hides, and when Jimmy enters to steal the necklace mistakes him for the sweetheart, and forces Velma to marry him then and there. Jimmy takes his bride to the home of her sweetheart, but refuses to shield her, fearing to have his name linked with the scandal. Jimmy then takes her to his apartment and he goes to a hotel. Velma sees his good qualities and decides to stand by him if he will go straight. He has been the right-hand man of Boss McGinnis, and when he tells him of his plan to reform McGinnis threatens to send him to prison unless he continues in his service. Jimmy finally gains the confidence of Alderman Lysaght, and with his help he and Velma look forward to a new life.

Don't Shoot is the second filming of a story by George Bronson Howard formerly produced under the title of Come Through in 1917. It is an entertaining crook drama with fairly logical situations taking place that stimulate tightening interest during the progress of the story. The story moves along pleasantly without causing a great amount of excitement but at the same time furnishing sufficient entertainment value to keep it from being too draggy. The plot is somewhat similar to others wherein the crook reforms because of a girl but a few new twists have been added here and there to freshen it up. The picture should prove a satisfactory box office attraction in almost any house and especially so in places where Herbert Rawlinson has a drawing power.

Points of Appeal.—The crook element in a story is usually conducive to create a more generous range of appeal, and when this is linked with the necessary supply of romantic material it generally affords a double angle of interest. There are a few thrills to be got at odd moments during the story, although little effort has been apparently exerted to arouse any great suspense.

Cast.—Herbert Rawlinson, as Jimmy, gives a fairly convincing performance in this crook role. Edna Murphy, playing the female lead, is pleasing and puts quite a bit of feeling into her role as Velma Gay. The support is good throughout.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—The photography is generally good through the picture, although some of the exterior shots are a little too glary. Interior lightings satisfactory. Continuity agreeably handled and direction good.

Front of the Empress Theatre, Oklahoma City, Decorated for First National's "Rose of The Sea"

The Tivoli theatre's ad in the SAN FRANCISCO CALL AND POST in which the romantic flavor of Vitagraph's "MY WILD IRISH ROSE" are played up in the illustration.

Wauna's Monthly Mail Bulletin

Looked for as Eagerly as the Agricultural Reports and Weather Dope

A distinct novelty in the advertising of a small town theatre's program, as well as a new idea in the adaptation of the text matter of press book advertisements, has been put in successful operation by Sorsby & Morrow, proprietors of the Wauna Theatre, Wauna, Ore.

Wauna is a tiny town of only 200 inhabitants, without even a weekly newspaper and many miles from the nearest town where a newspaper is published. The Wauna Theatre opened as a once-a-week house and experimented for a while with mediocre service. Paramount pictures were finally secured and the Wauna now gives two performances a week, on Sunday and Wednesday evenings. The medium through which Messrs. Sorsby and Morrow bring their audiences in—and they are filling the house at every performance—is a monthly bulletin which is mailed to a large list covering the territory for miles around the village. The bulletin is neatly printed in clear, ten point type, and in general appearance resembles the bulletins sent out from time to time by the State agricultural departments or the U. S. Weather Bureau. Set out conspicuously in a wide white margin at the left of the sheet are the dates of the month's performances, and opposite each date is the title of the evening's picture, together with a brief, snappy description of the photoplay.

For the descriptions of the May pictures Messrs. Sorsby and Morrow lifted bodily the text matter found in the Paramount press book advertisements. For instance, here is the announcement on Ethel Clayton in Sham: "A limousine life on a trolley car income. Thus she tried to bluff society till her charms could snare a rich husband. But the creditors wouldn't wait, the rich men didn't suit, and love sneaked in and made a dreadful mess of things until—just like a woman! you'll say.

And here is the paragraph on Bryant Washburn in Burglar Proof: "The girls all called him the 'human safety vault.' You had to use dynamite to get a dollar out of him. But one night in the Lyric Temple of Jazzopation, he met a vision who shook a wicked hoof in the name of art. Now he's one of the best 'prospects' a gold-digger every struck. A ticklesome tale of a tight-wad that love loosened up."

Breezy, interesting, and they tell the story. With the general heading, "Wauna Theatre — Bulletin 122," and containing also the general announcements such as prices, time of performance, etc., the sheet is just the thing to hang on a nail or hook on the inside of the kitchen door —or out in the little jitney garage.

Compete for Doll

More than 300 children under twelve years, of Brockton, Mass., were interested in the Rialto Theatre and Beauty's Worth through the prize contest conducted by Manager J. J. Cahill, the Brockton Enterprise newspaper, and John McConville, Paramount exploiteer, Boston.

The contest consisted of making the most number of words out of the letters spelling "Marion Davies — in Beauty's Worth."

The winner was presented with the doll on the stage Saturday evening. The prize went to little Miss Alice Dunbar, twelve years old, who managed to find as many as 6752 words.

Reproduction of a double truck run in the Los Angeles Times tied up with Grauman's Rialto presentation of the Paramount production of "Nice People." By using a trailer in which the Times received some publicity the theatre got especially prominent space in the ad without further cost.

Making the Theatre Pay

Equipping the Theatre

Living up to the title of the picture in his frontal display, Manager Abe Levy of the Strand, Waco, Texas, made an imperative call to a public suffering in the swelter of a sizzling spell when he played First National's "The Silent Call." The snow scene, reproduced in cutout, has that effectiveness that comes of simplicity of treatment. The snow tipp ed spruces and the drifts banked against a winter moon had a lure that showed itself on the balance sheets.

Exploitorials

AMONG the visitors to B'way last week was one Lem Stewart. Lem is Exploitation Director for the 200 theatres of the Southern Enterprises. If it seems to you, as it does to us, that some of the cleverest of present day exploitation is issuing from the South, you will allow that he knows how to take care of a big job.

STEWART has a rule of thumb for lobby decoration. Here it is: If it will have entertainment value, go to it. If not, spare your time and money, as in that case both will be worse than wasted, since they will live to operate against you.

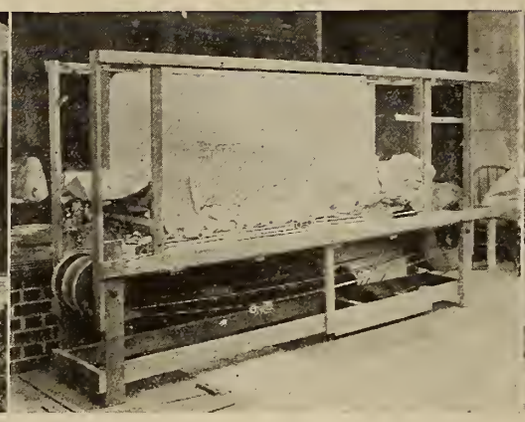
AT the luncheon Metro tendered Fred Niblo in New York last week the guest of honor was not long in proving one thing at least. That is that he does not need a lot of words to say quite a bit. His allusion to the censors as the "wrecking crew" proved that.

CHILDHOOD seems to have its innings in the pictures as nowhere else. Among the topnotch drawing cards kiddies are to be found, and look at the way the showman pals up with them in many of his campaign stunts! It has always been suspected that persuasive powers were at their height in childhood. The suspicion has been turned to account and now the showman reaches the parent through the child. When he wants to reach the child he goes direct.

THE cinnamon—heavengs, how we are tempted to spell it "cinema"—bear cub, which is blanketed with a sign announcing My Dad at the Cohan Theatre, seems to us the most unconscious and self-possessed of strollers along the Rialto, and the most conspicuous. But it just trundles along at the end of a leash oblivious to everything save its job of ballyhooing the F. B. O. romance of the Northwest.

TOM KENNEDY

Motor Race in Miniature Exploits Reid Play



A lobby display that drew the crowds was contrived by R. R. Russell for the run of Paramount's Across the Continent. As illustrated by the reproductions above, this consisted of a miniature race course showing four automobiles constantly in motion against a background of a map of the States with the course from New York to Los Angeles clearly defined.

The mechanical arrangement was fairly simple. Four belts run over pullies of wood were driven by a small electric motor. Two small racing cars, of cutout board were fastened to each belt so that a race was on at all times. The belts were timed so that the car representing the famous "Dent," whose driver was represented by a small cutout of Wallace Reid, passed all the others just before making its disappearance "behind the scenes" at the end of the course.

The exploitation also included a street ballyhoo of a Ford wearing the make-up of the Dent in the picture and bearing a sign iDENTifying it.

Baby Show a Huge Success

Youngstown Exhibitor Puts His House in the Center of Interest with Stunt

One of the biggest things that ever happened in Youngstown was the Better Baby Contest inaugurated by Manager Trunk of the Dome Theatre, Youngstown, Ohio. Started principally to exploit Trouble, the stunt has been enlarged upon and continued during subsequent weeks because of its stupendous success.

The Youngstown Telegram sponsored the movement, contributing $50 for a first prize while the Dome Theatre duplicated this award later on. Retail merchants came in on the advertising and offered awards advertising their stores.

The contest opened with a full page spread in the Telegram and a wire, ostensibly from Jackie Coogan that read: "I'm sorry that I do not live in Youngstown so that I could enter the Telegram Dome Better Babies' Contest. Hope all of you kids enter 'cause it will do you good whether you win a prize or not. Best wishes."

At the start the sponsors had been dubious about renting the Moose Hall for the contest because of its size. When they got going the hall was overcrowded with more than 143 babies entered daily. The lists of awards by local merchants, detailed in the papers, took a full column to record. A photograph of the prize winners occupied a full page in the Telegram.

Final returns showed that in a city of about 100,000 population, exactly 1182 babies were entered in the contest during two weeks.

The figures are all the evidence that is necessary. Such an idea should go over in any city or town, regardless of size, if it is properly sponsored and conducted. Speaking from the viewpoint of the Dome Theatre, Manager Trunk is authority for the statement that it has not only built up large receipts for Trouble, but has aroused an interest in the theatre that will have a lasting benefit.

Candy Tie-Up

Smilin' Through candy made its bow when Norma Talmadge played at the Dawn Theatre, Hillsdale, Mich. The manufacturer, whose name is DeRose, used a specially prepared box with the caption: "You can go 'Smilin' Through' from the top layer to the bottom."

Ballyhoo with Punch

"I am looking for My Boy."

With this sign on his back a weather beaten, aged man in tattered clothes and a flowing white beard walked the streets of Litchfield, Minn. His pathetic figure and the heart interest of his appeal evoked sympathy and countless people stopped him to ask questions. Toward dusk he carried a lighted lantern on his back that illuminated the advertisement he carried.

It gained immense publicity for the picture until the display advertising gave the secret away; and then Litchfield, knowing that "My Boy" was in town, flocked to the Unique Theatre to see Jackie Coogan's attraction for First National.

Frank Steffy Stirs Up Seattle

One big tieup was not enough for Manager Frank Steffy of the Coliseum, Seattle, in his campaign for First National's Trouble, so he kept at it until he effected several. The big features of the exploitation was a tieup with the Seaboard National Bank which showed photographs of Jackie Coogan in its window and a card reading "Jackie Coogan, seven year old star of Trouble, has a savings account of $60,000, what are you doing for your boy's future?"

Another stunt that created a big stir was the tieup with the Life Saver Candy representative, in which an eight year old boy impersonated Jackie and distributed 25,000 sample packages. Carrying a tray with a sign reading "I'm in Trouble" the boy was the center of attention.

High-Power Ballyhoo

The Kind That Make Them Stop, Look, Listen and Talk

Novelty is the life's breath of the ballyhoo. The cost of it is often daring and always some dash. An approach to the ultimate in automobile decoration was made by Manager Fleming of the T. D. & L. Pasadena Theatre, Pasadena, in his ballyhoo for First National's "The Crossroads of New York." Below: No difficulty is experienced in recognizing novelty in the bathtub idea used for Paramount's "Saturday Night" by the Illinois Theatre, Centralia, Ill. There is attraction value here.

The igloo box office effect with the strip of snow scenes above the entrance was the decoration for the Pathe production, "Nanook of the North," at the Palace Theatre, Philadelphia. Enlarged scenes from the film were hung in the door panels.

In announcing Goldwyn's "The Girl with the Jazz Heart" from the front of the Rialto, the management said it with hearts, cut from paper and fastened to mesh wire, which was strung over a light frame above the entrance. In the lobby a phonograph with one of those shimmying dolls was kept playing jazz music.

The display designed by the Columbia Theatre, Seattle, for the Universal feature, "The Trap," combined nicely pictorial value and the atmosphere of the great outdoors. The side walls, doors and ticket booth were covered with cutouts.

Complete Campaign

To put over Bought and Paid For with a bang, Manager Raymond Willie of the Palace, Dallas, Texas, started several weeks in advance. His first stunt was tying up with a local department store, which he persuaded to mark all of its goods during the week the picture was run, with the title "Bought and Paid For." Not only one but several stores cooperated on this stunt, and Willie had special rubber stamps made so as to stamp the title on packages as well as on the goods. The packages were marked "It's Bought and Paid For Because I Like It."

His lobby display had a good, healthy punch in it, too. He brought out the justice side of the picture by having a large cut-out in the form of scales of justice which stood in the lobby, with head cut-outs of Agnes Ayres and Jack Holt in the respective hands. His street ballyhoo consisted of a tie-up with a local automobile distributor which resulted in a parade through the business district of Dallas, each car bearing a sign, "Bought and Paid For. Look at Them." The automobile horns blowing at a high pitch attracted attention to the parade from those who might have overlooked it. The campaign cost $25.00.

Brings in the Farmers

All the farmers and merchants in the vicinity of Abilene, Texas, gather in town on Friday and Saturday so Hugo Plath, manager of the Queen Theatre, turns this to his advantage.

When he has an especially good picture, he sends some 600 personal postals to farmers of that section, telling them about it and suggesting that they come around when they get into town.

Then he puts a banner 15 feet long across the middle of the street where it can be seen for some distance along Main Street. This reminds the farmer and his family of the card and the combination simply proves too much for the countryman and he planks down the admission price for himself and usually at least part of his family. This is an example of tying one stunt up with another.

Ties Up Convention

During the recent Shriners convention in San Francisco, the Savoy Theatre "cashed in" most successfully on the Pathe feature, The Isle of Zorda, which was selected as the official photoplay of the convention.

The lobby of the theatre was decorated in Oriental hangings, giving the atmosphere of the production. The advertising, posters, lobby display, carried phrases such as "Welcome, Nobles," and other lines which would catch the eye of the Shriners.

Another tie-up was with the Oriental Fox-trot, "The Isle of Zorda," written by Herb Crooker, Milt Hagen and Victor Nurnberg. A special singer was engaged to sing the number in the prologue. In addition, every restaurant and cafe orchestra played the melody throughout the convention, with the big State restaurant featuring it on its menu and program.

"Masquerader" Exploited Widely With Ballyhoo

The Masquerader seems to call for ballyhoo. And the opportunity for street stunts is being taken hold of in great shape by theatres playing the new First National production.

At St. Paul, a first cousin to the old Raffles stunt made its appearance when the Capitol Theatre sent out a big touring car with a masked fashion-plate on the rear seat. On the side of the car was a sign bearing the question "Who Is the Masquerader?" The ballyhoo attracted attention in the streets and was written up in the newspapers, thus proving altogether successful.

At the State Theatre, Minneapolis, the manager centered his exploitation around the staff of the theatre itself. The usherettes, dressed in hussar outfits, were masked and patrons were asked to vote the beauty prize to their favorites. This stunt is reported to have gained considerable word of mouth publicity, each visitor to the theatre increasing the circulation value of the advertising.

Novel Co-operative Ads

Stills from "Beyond the Rocks" and unusual advertising copy made space in the co-operative page in the Evening News exceedingly valuable. The Regent Theatre, Galt, Ont., got a fine flash for its picture, and attendance was noticeably stimulated.

Eleven merchants tied up for the display. Each ad was illustrated by a still and the text played around both the story and the merchant's wares. For example, a picture of Valentino talking over the telephone appeared in the display of Q. A. Wright, grocer. The copy read:

Hello, everybody! This is Rodolph Valentino on the wire. I hope you can find your phone number in this ad, and that you know of this high class grocery store. Yes, you will always find them courteous obliging and furnishing you with the best food in town.

Another ad contained a still of Valentino and Swanson in love—a clinch. The copy read:

Why does she love him so. No doubt because he brings her sweets from our candy shop. Booty and Fletcher.

Edgar's Lobby

El Paso, Tex.—For a lobby display for "Across the Continent," Manager J. M. Edgar of the Palace used a cutout from the six-sheet poster, showing Reid speeding across the continent with an audience of men and boys laughing at the car he drives.

Above this display was a sphere, representing the world, around which was built a race track on which Reid and his Dent speeded.

The local Ford agency came in for a co-operative newspaper ad.

Old Stunt Works

The brief announcement "Charlie Chaplin is in town" gave "A Day's Pleasure" to fans of Augusta, Kansas. It is an old stunt; but some of them actually believed that the comedy king was in the city and called up the leading hotels to inquire if he were stopping there.

It took the display advertising of the Isis Theatre to make them realize that he was there in "A Day's Pleasure," but they came around to see him just the same.

Window Idea

C. A. Barbian, of the Waldorf Theatre, Akron, Ohio, secured the original suit of clothes worn by Charles Chaplin in making Pay Day, and used them in a window tie-up with a local clothing store in such a manner that the crowds gazed before the display. The clothing dealer unfortunately marked the ragged suit worn by the star $18. Barbian says this was asking $17.95 too much.

Cutout Basis of Display

Austin, Tex.—Manager Ray Whitfield of the Majestic built a compelling lobby for Beauty's Worth from a six-sheet cut-out of Marion Davies seated on a throne.

Plush curtains were borrowed from a local interior decorator's shop, and hung artistically to frame the figure. Imitation marble columns made of wall-board and large palms made it an inviting entrance.

Mr. Whitfield also tied up with the Austin American for an essay contest on "What is Beauty's Worth." This got front page publicity. To build good-will, Mr. Whitfield invited the inmates of the Confederate Home, the Old Men's Home, the Old Women's Home, and the town's two orphanages for a special performance.

The cost of the exploitation was $25 and it increased business fifteen per cent, Mr. Whitfield said.

Above is the hallyhoo of 18 flashily uniformed men who paraded Broadway for Metro's "The Prisoner of Zenda" playing at the Astor Theatre. And to the right the bus loads of children on their way from orphan asylums to the Criterion to see "Forget Me Not."

The Hope Theatre's automohile hallyhoo has become a familiar sight in the streets of Dallas and the interest is maintained by radical changes of style in the displays used. For First National's "The Woman He Married" the management used a cutout large enough to dwarf the car and produce an effect that compelled attention.

The management of the Criterion, Atlanta, Ga., contrived a suggestion of the oil fields for the front of the theatre during the run of First National's "Gas, Oil and Water." Cutouts pasted up on compo board and a twenty-four sheet over the entrance produced a good flash.

There is always room for one more ballyhoo at Coney Island, so the management of Henderson's Theatre sent out a jaunting car well "signed up" for Vitagraph's "My Wild Irish Rose." This feature of a campaign that included window displays and other mediums was the center of a lot of the interest of which visitors to Coney seem to give with such prodigality.

Patrons Enjoy Joke

The difference between success and failure in comedy is whether or not your fans laugh at you or with you. George Schade, manager of the theatre bearing his name in Sandusky, Ohio, got them laughing with him, which accounts for the fact that The Beautiful Liar, the First National attraction starring Katherine MacDonald, was a success at the box office.

Schade put a sign up:

"Free Candian Rye inside. Help Yourself."

It couldn't help attracting attention and arousing interest. The queerest part was that the manager had told the truth. Inside the theatre was genuine Canadian rye—cropped from the harvest fields of Canada and stacked up in small bundles, just as it is on the field.

Grave Stone Grows

GALT, ONT. — Residents of this town were astonished one morning to find a full-size grave stone erected on the principal corner of the street with this inscription on it :

Beneath this hunk of stone so cold
Lies a guy who's gone already,
Who laid down and died when he was told
He missed "Moran of the Lady Letty."

It really was made of wood by Manager J. S. Brown, Jr., of Scot's Opera House. It was painted white and inscribed in black. Paramount Exploiteer Bamberger of the Toronto Exchange tied up with the Royal Canadian Bank to allow the stone on its property.

Introduces Masks

George Schade, of the theatre bearing his name in Sandusky, O., has introduced a feature of novelty masks for the coming of The Masquerader First National's coming release starring Guy Bates Post. These masks were distributed among the youngsters and they've been wearing them ever since. One kid took the idea of a wild west make up with his mask. He was more frightened at the cap pistol than any one who came within 100 yards of him; but the authorities didn't say it might lead the boy to wild west banditry this time so the exploitation proved a hit.

Schade is thinking of introducing a masked society idol as the next step in his exploitation for The Masquerader.

Apples and Kids

While Babe Ruth might take exception to the manner in which the phrase "hitting the apple" was used by Manager J. Marshall Taylor of the Liberty Theatre, Wenatchee, Wash., the fact remained that the youngsters of Wenatchee hit the apple for apples when the Liberty played The Silent Call. You see Manager Taylor offered a barrel of apples as an award for the best drawing of Strongheart, the wonder dog in the picture. Some of the efforts contributed among the 200, looked like Japanese schoolboys and Esquimaux children but there were enough good ones to justify the distribution of a barrel of apples, and the parents who watched their offsprings efforts were equally interested in seeing The Silent Call.

Selling Them Next Week's Show

Posters announcing the limited engagement of First National's "My Boy" displayed in the lobby of the Apollo Theatre, New York City. The Apollo, in addition, played up a puzzle contest arranged as advance advertising. Hand painted three sheets made up a stand used in the lobby of the Princess Theatre, Sioux City, for advance announcement of Norma Talmadge in "Smilin' Through."

Frieze mounted over the entrance, inside, the Howard Theatre, Atlanta, for Paramount's "Her Husband's Trademark."

A flash that just had to be noticed used at the Tivoli, Chattanooga, for the Selznick feature "Reported Missing," as advance advertising.

The lobby affords an advantageous setting for advance billing. The illustrations above show how effectively cutouts were used for Paramount's "The Beauty Shop" in the Central Theatre, Jersey City, "Beyond the Rocks," Henderson's Theatre, Coney Island, and "The Bachelor Daddy" at the Central.

EQUIPPING THE THEATRE

Maximum Fire Protection in Booth

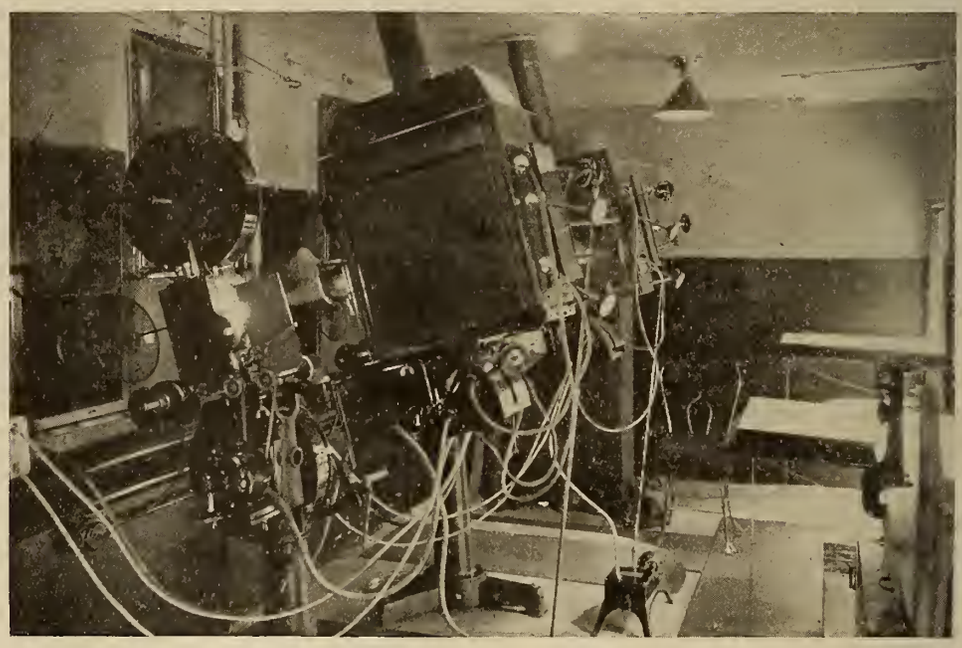
Apollo Theatre Installation Was Made With the Engineer's Eye Constantly on the Fire Problem and Good Projection

Projection authorities in the Middle West are pointing with pride at the installation made in the Apollo Theatre, Indianapolis. They claim that from a fire prevention viewpoint the booth has no equal in any part of the country.

The room was designed by Vonnegut, Miller & Bohn, architects, in collaboration with the fire engineers of Stone, Stafford & Stone. It contains the latest improvements as to construction and safety devices as recommended by the national board of fire underwriters. The booth is of concrete throughout with only one door leading up from the theatre proper. This door is a standard metal which automatically closes by a chain and weight attachment. The openings in front of the booth are protected by 3-16-inch solid steel plates which automatically close in case of fire.

Above each moving picture machine is a fusible link which, in case of fire, in the machine, melts and causes the steel shutters to close all openings, thus, cutting off the room from the rest of the theatre. At the side of each machine is a hand fire extinguisher, and in addition there is a large type fire extinguisher placed near the door of the room. All films when not in use are kept in approved metal cases. The table on which rewinding of film is done is also of metal. There is not a piece of wood in the booth.

Fresh air is supplied the operator from a 10-inch electric fan which brings the air in through a specially constructed stack through the roof of the theatre, insuring a current of cool air throughout the booth at all times.



NOT ONE PIECE OF WOOD USED

The Apollo Theatre (Indianapolis) booth is a marvel from the fire prevention standpoint. Not a piece of wood was used. The photograph shows the lay out. Note the fire window shutters on the right which, in the photo are down with chains hanging. Two Type S Simplexes are used plus two Peerless arc controls. The air vent runs straight up through the roof

BOOTH WIRING DATA

Wesley Trout writes again about modern booth wiring completing a series of that important subject. He also answers some questions pertaining to projection.

By Wesley Trout

Interior Wiring

Different methods of interior wiring may be very conveniently grouped into the following classes. 1. Wires run through moldings. 2. Open or exposed wiring. 3. Rigid conduit wiring. 4. Concealed knob and tube wiring. 5. Armored cable wiring.

Open or Exposed Wiring

This method of wiring possesses the advantages of being very cheap, durable and easily accessible. It is being used a great deal in many factories, mills and buildings where the unsightly appearance of the wires exposed on the walls or the ceilings is of no important consequence.

(Q.) Name the best kind of wires that are suitable for this method of wiring?

(A.) You can use either a rubber covered or slow burning weatherproof wire for this method of wiring.

(Q.) Just how are these wires installed in buildings and other places?

(A.) They are usually laid on some cornice, wainscoting, or other architectural feature that is suitable for the purpose by means of porcelain knobs and cleats.

(Q.) What are the disadvantages of the open wiring?

(A.) The wiring is not sufficiently protected from the moisture and the effects of fire which will easily destroy the insulation of the wires; also are liable to mechanical injury.

(Q) Explain how the resistance is gradually cut out in internal resistance motors.

(A) By operating a lever which engages a collar free to slide horizontally on the shaft. Collar moves over the internal resistance grids, (these are located within the armature spider), thus gradually reducing their value until they are completely cut out.

Wants Correct Carbon Combination

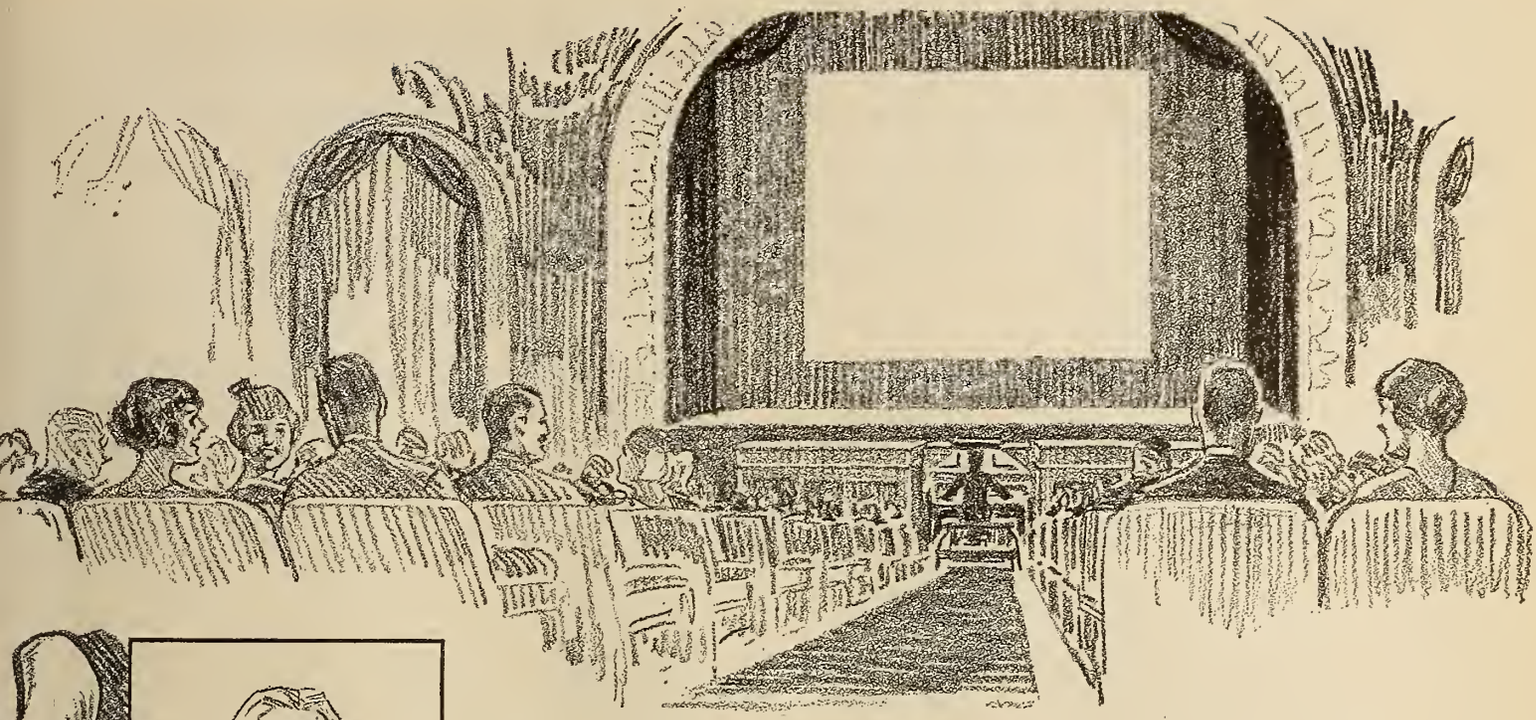
KANSAS CITY, MO., July 17, 1922.

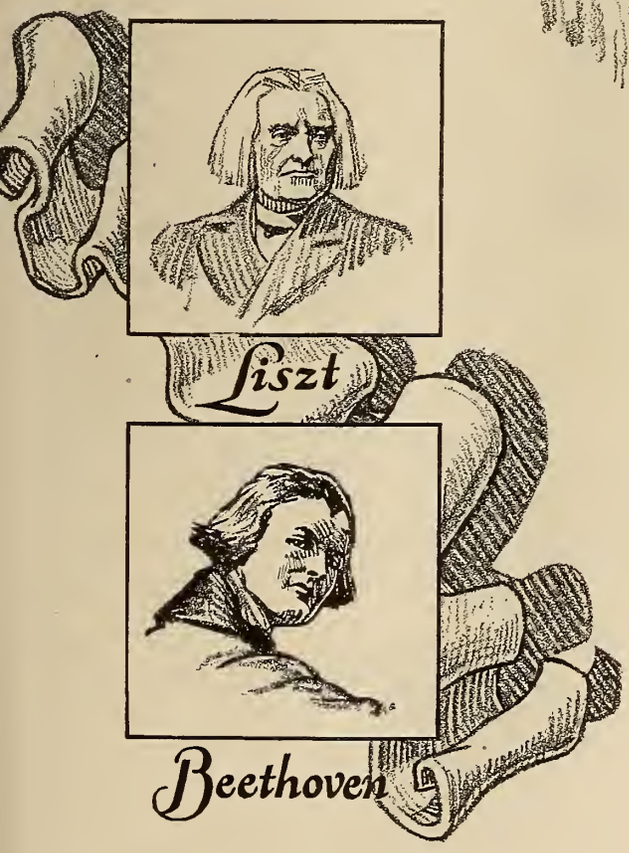
Am writing you to get your opinion on what is the correct size carbons to use on 50 amperes of current and using A. C. I have been using three-fourths carbon of the National make but these do not seem to work very good as the light is not strong on the screen. We have about a 80-foot throw and use a plain painted projection screen. I keep my condensers clean and have them matched according to the late amperage chart. Several of the I. A. boys told me to write you as you could give me the correct information better than some salesman as you were an expert in matters of this kind.

Beg to advise that I find your articles on electricity and questions and answers to be very good and a big help to us projectionists. I am tearing out your articles and filing them so that I will soon have a handbook without much expense. I am enclosing stamp for your reply at a late date.

C. B. HAGERBOONERS,
Projectionist.

You are using too large carbons for the amperage you are using at the arc. The best combination to use on 50 to 60 amperes is five-eighths cored upper and lower. See that the carbons make good contact in their holders and the carbon jaws are bright and clean. You will find the National or the Columbia to be very good carbons if you use the correct sizes. To correct your light troubles be sure and keep your condensers clean and also the projection lenses, that your leads entering the lamp house have not been badly burned, that all your electrical connections are good and tight.





A New Outlet for the Old Music Masters

The compelling, ennobling effect of classical music is widening its circle. The inspired music masters of old no longer must be confined to the grand opera and concert stage.

Development of the Cremona Orchestra-Organ for the homes of silent drama has brought pipe-organ and orchestra reproductions hitherto unknown. It has enabled exhibitors to furnish the "atmosphere" so essential to putting the picture across big. It has brought refinement and dividend-producing attraction to houses all over the country. There is assurance to every patron of pipe-organ and orchestra offerings, appropriate, gratifying.

The Cremona brings economy as well as versatility. For it plays with operator or without, plays any standard player roll or solo roll. Instant changes are possible. Cue sheets can be precisely followed without effort.

Best of all, there is a Cremona of type and size to best meet the requirements of every house. Write or wire for details.

Dealers' Association Is Growing

Membership Committee Reports That Supply Men All Over Country Are Taking Out Membership

JOE HORNSTEIN, chairman of the membership committee of the Association of Motion Picture Equipment Dealers of America, reports that new members are coming in fast. The growth is in both classes of membership, active, which is limited to dealers and distributors and associate which includes manufacturers of equipment.

"I believe we are on the right track this time," Hornstein stated this week. "We have not made any tremendous effort to get new members; they are coming in of their own volition and this is a good sign. It shows the need of the association."

It is probable that within the next thirty days the committees in charge of organization will get together in Chicago to draft final by-laws and take up business which remained unfinished at the end of the initial meeting at Indianapolis.

Although the purposes of the new association have been fully set forth in EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW in previous issues, a misapprehension has arisen in certain quarters where exhibitors have spoken of the organization as "another association like the Hoy System to blackjack exhibitors." The association's aims are furthest from that thought. The writer, who sat in at sessions at Indianapolis, and who has met many of the dealers and manufacturers, has encountered some of the difficulties which beset the supply dealer.

It is well known that many supply dealers aid in a material financial way their customers who own theatres. They must "take" the theatre's notes and mortgages and arrange to carry them although they must meet their own obligations with the equipment manufacturers from whom they buy. If the theatre was to buy direct from the manufacturers it would find them unwilling in the majority of cases to "carry" the theatre's paper. An adjustment which will equitably distribute credit to the theatres and at the same time protect the dealer's paper is looked forward to by the association, and when that time comes a benefit will certainly accrue to the theatre.

At the present time the building laws and fire regulations governing the construction and equipment of theatres differ in every state. There is no uniformity in the laws. One kind of a booth may be constructed in one State; a totally different type is permitted in another State. This incongruity prevails everywhere, and when the association functions, as its founders hope it will, these differences will be wiped out. Economy in theatre construction and equipment will follow the standardization as it always follows in every industry.

These are but a few of the benefits that will accrue to both supply house and theatre and the misapprehension that has arisen seems unfounded. The new association is built along the lines of the electrical jobbers association and that well known organization is certainly working to the satisfaction of the dealer in electrical supplies and buyers.

Joe Hornstein, left, chairman of the membership committee of the A. M. P. E. D. A., being congratulated on the success of the organization by William Kunzman, National Carbon representative in the field

Will Supply Blue Prints on Booth Ventilation

In order to co-operate with exhibitors to the fullest extent in the campaign for better ventilation of projection booths, the executive board of Moving Picture Machine Operators, Local 306, collaborating with J. C. Rybicki of the New York Board of Health and Commission on Industrial Hygiene, will supply blueprints, indicating practical and inexpensive systems of booth ventilation, which are adaptable to conditions which exist in the average projection booth.

The blueprint was evolved following an inspection of projection booths in many of the theatres of Greater New York.

Make a Hit with the Audience

That's just what the management of the Collins New Lyndhurst Theatre at Lyndhurst, New Jersey, did when they installed the Mov-Ezy chairs—the chair that means "Ease at the Movies."

People from Rutherford and other neighboring towns are now regular patrons of the theatre. They know they can see good pictures anywhere —but not every theatre has seats especially designed for convenience and comfort.

MOV-EZY

The Mov-Ezy chair is the only real advance in theatre seating in years. Besides being beautiful, roomy, individual chairs, each with two arm rests, a patented device enables the occupants to swing them to either side to allow late arrivals to pass. This eliminates confusion and tends to an uninterrupted view of the picture.

Stop in at the Mov-Ezy show room in New York for demonstration or write for beautiful illustrated catalogue.

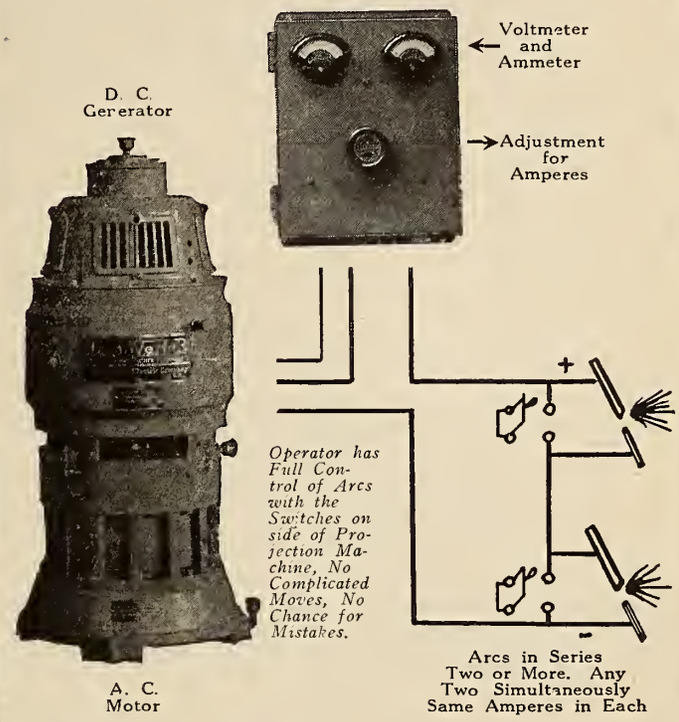
TransVerteR



The Series Arc M-G Set That Produces Perfect Arcs

TransVerteR (Double Arc Type) is a series arc motor generator, having automatic voltage regulation.

No more amperes used than actually required for the light or dark pictures.

Only such voltage is generated as is used in the arc itself (no ballast being used.)

TransVerteR produces better results and uses less current than any other device.

TransVerteR is ball bearing; gives better light and better pictures. It is easy to operate, thoroughly reliable, and is an important factor in drawing full houses, by reason of superior projection.

Have You A Projection Problem?

How a Screen Difficulty Was Overcome and a Projection Wiring Job Was Completed

ALL problems affecting the screen and projector are not the same and necessarily there must be a different solution for each problem. Many problems are not problems. They are simply questions arising because of a lack of understanding of what should be done.

On this page are presented several subjects, a screen problem, a projector wiring plan and a general discussion of booth and theatre wiring, the latter being from the pen of Wesley Trout, who is writing a series of articles from the projection engineer's standpoint.

THE SCREEN PROBLEM

The Strand Theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa., wanted to change its screen, the one being used having outlived its usefulness. The location of the projection booth and the position of the projectors could not be changed because the latter were anchored in concrete. The wall opening could not be changed because the wall was concrete. Furthermore the beamed ceiling made it impossible to raise or lower the machines.

The theatre called in E. B. Morton, the Pittsburgh projection engineer whose supply house had installed the machines. He took the required measurements, made a drawing of the screen position and openings and sent it to a Cleveland screen manufacturer who made up the screen according to requirements on the blue print Morton had made. The factory gave a final touch to the job by painting a black border around the screen. It worked. The screen is in use now.

It may seem simple to those who have never tried to adjust the screen to the projector as was done in this case with little leeway afforded for changes.

PENNSYLVANIA BOOTHS

The building codes of Pennsylvania will not permit a projection booth smaller than nine feet across front, eight feet deep and seven feet high inside the clear. The law will, however, permit larger booths. The booth shown in the drawing on this page is a No. 2 Transite asbestos booth of the minimum size, and while it belongs to Pennsylvania it will be found to conform to the laws in many other states. Pennsylvania laws are strict concerning theatre projection.

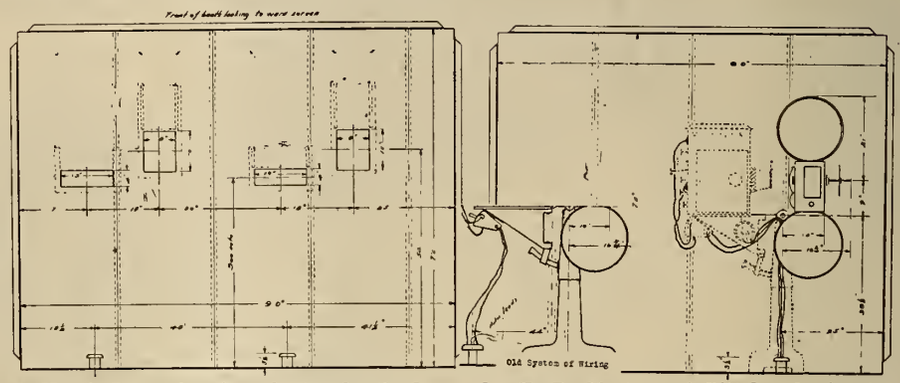
The service drawing shown was made by E. B. Morton who is also responsible for the screen drawing.

WIRING THE BOOTH

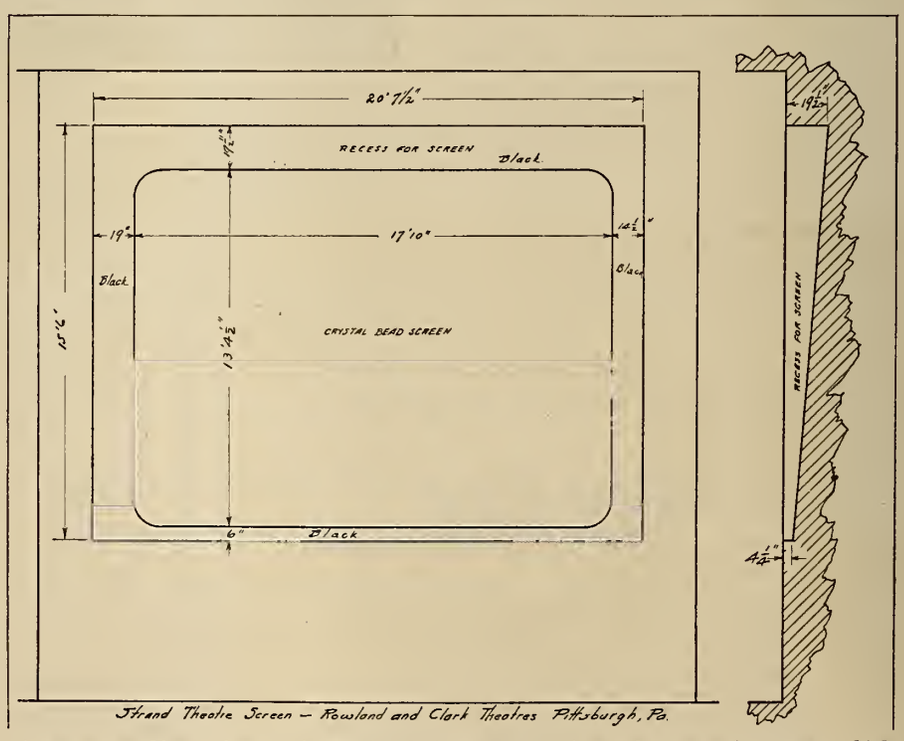
Few theatre owners know anything about the requirements of the electric code on projection wiring. They leave it to their projectionists. However the article which Wesley Trout writes will serve both manager and projectionist.

By Wesley Trout

In most all cases of interior conduit work, and in most cases of inside open work, the main electric feeders from a three-wire circuit of supply are installed on the three-wire plan, and sub-feeders and the distributing mains on the three-wire plan, except where the application



A No. 2 Pennsylvania asbestos booth drawn by E. B. Morton, of Pittsburgh, for two machines. The 13 and 8-inch openings are respectively the ports and projection holes. The two mushrooms are conduits for the cables to machine. The side view on the right shows the new system, originated by Morton for bringing the cables through the conduit up through the pedestal of the machine thus keeping the cables out of the projectionist's way where they won't be stumbled over. Measurements given are based when center of lenses is in direct line with screen center.



The screen problem solved. The sectional view on right shows the recess for screen which is sunk in concrete. The problem as it presented itself to Morton is explained in the accompanying article of the method necessitates the use of unwieldy sizes.

Sub-Feeders and Mains

Now in the laying out of the sub-feeders and mains, the total load, under normal operating conditions, should be divided as nearly as possible into two equal parts and one part connected on each side of the neutral part of the entrance cut-out, or the neutral bus bar of the switchboard, thus making the load on each side of the neutral wire of the feeder as near equal as possible.

The projectionist knows how the size of wires for the mains may be calculated, but in calculating the outer wires of the three-wire feeder the neutral wire should be disregarded and the outer wires connected as a two-wire circuit carrying the entire total load at the over-all pressure of 220 volts.

Size of Neutral Wire

In the three-wire circuits the size of the neutral wire will depend to a very great extent upon operating conditions. Installations which very occasionally have been worked as a two-wire system, the cross-section of the neutral wire should be equal to the combined cross-section of the two outer wires.

About Inside Wiring

The term wiring is commonly understood by most projectionists to mean the methods employed in laying the conductors used for transmission and the distribution of electrical energy for lighting, power, and other purposes.

An Exhibitor's Wife Showed the Way

She Did Not Know What to Buy But the Up-to-the-Minute Supply Service Department Helped Her Out

"JOHN has been in bed six weeks now," said a little woman who wore a worried look as she related her tale of woe to her husband's favorite supply dealer. "I'm running the theatre for him. We need carbons; something's gone wrong with our projector and I confess I don't know what to do about it. I don't know what we've got in the projection booth. We need them to give a show, and we need them right away."

You will know from the conversation just quoted that the woman speaking is the wife of a small town exhibitor. Likewise you know from what she said that she was hard hit. Her situation is similar to hundreds of other situations, occurring today, tomorrow and always with the small town man. If he doesn't turn over his business in an emergency to his wife, it's his daughter, his son, his partner or some employee who hasn't at his finger tips all the essential information necessary to make intelligent and economical purchases.

The conversation quoted actually occurred. We have the word of Ed Morton, the Pittsburgh supply dealer, for it. It occurred quite a while ago, but it brought to Morton, as it has no doubt to many others,—exhibitors and supply dealers,—the necessity for giving service.

"That conversation," said Morton, "gave me an idea. I started on a system of technical information that has stood me in good stead for a long time and is getting more useful every day. I believe every supply dealer could do what I am doing. It will save him telephone bills, carfare and prevent many a lost sale.

"When an exhibitor's wife comes in to us now, when we receive an order or inquiry by mail, and even in some cases when an exhibitor who knows nothing about his equipment comes to us, we can serve them instantly by referring to our card index system of the theatre's requirements.

"Take for instance an inquiry for carbons. Time and again a buyer has come to us for carbons. He knew nothing about the combination they were using but by referring to the card index system we were enabled to immediately make the sale. It applies to nearly everything the exhibitor buys. I have gotten up a simple card with the information we need and it is filed away.

"We get the information for that card from the exhibitor himself, our salesmen collect it, and projectionists furnish it. The cost of getting it is nominal. The salesman has to make his call anyway and why not let him get the information while trying to make the sale?

"In this connection is an interesting story. We travel a salesman through the coal mines of West Virginia. It is a tough territory where there are always strikes and much violence. Our salesman was traveling toward a certain town in the coal regions when a group of strikers got aboard the train and told him he could not enter the mining country. They turned him back.

"The picture show he was trying to reach had to run. Soon came a time when the carbon supply ran out and the machine needed new parts. The owner wrote us a letter asking us to send carbons and a set of intermittents. He did not mention size of carbons, make of machine or any other information that would help. We filled his order and kept him alive because we had a card on him in our files. If this information had not been in our possession he would have had to close up shop."

It does not need any imagination to do what Morton's firm has been doing. The wherewithal to get up the card system is only a few dollars; the information can be obtained with a little spare labor and the office stenographer can keep it collated and up to date.

When a supply dealer wants to circularize his prospects this card index will come in mighty handy. If one wants to pursue the idea a little further certain information as to the date when the projectors were purchased, when they were repaired, when the last lot of carbons were purchased, whether incandescent projection might not be used, could be placed on the back of the card and a circular sent out advising the exhibitor that it is about time to get a new machine, some more carbons, etc., etc.

The idea really has big possibilities for anyone who will analyze it and add features that will improve service and help sales.

JUST TIPS

The Wilmer & Vincent interests have booked the first Irish Regiment Band to give a series of concerts through the circuit of Pennsylvania and New York in October. This is believed to be the first Irish band that ever toured the country and it is expected that the appearance of the organization will build up motion picture interest at the Wilmer & Vincent playhouses.

In order to help and benefit the farmers, the Crystal Theatre at Okemah, Okla., has been showing pictures, showing how to poison the boll weevil, with various other pictures of farm life arranged on the same program.

During the recent showing of "Where Is My Wandering Boy To-night," at McKinney, Tex., the house management acted as host to all women over fifty years of age. Invitations were addressed to everyone who came under this classification and the stunt proved to be a decided boost for the engagement.

Manager J. Pierce of the Erie Theatre at Antlers, Okla., recently offered free admission to this theatre to each boy or girl bringing 200 or more dead flies to the box office. More than 13,000 dead flies resulted in free admissions to about sixty-five boys and girls. Another swat-the-fly campaign will be put on by Mr. Pierce in the near future.

For the opening of the spring and summer season the Mission theatre, Amarillo, Tex., is treating the people of that city to a flower display so pleasing to the eye that the passer-by is helped to forget his hurry and worry when he is forced to stop and gaze at the beauties of the blossoms and arrangement in general. In the center of the lobby is a bed of geraniums bordered with green foliage of the vinea plant, centered with a low plant of the palm variety, and with a background of lilies topped by an immense bunch of scarlet tulips.

Building Notes

Fred J. Dolle, head of the Fourth Avenue Amusement Company, operating a string of motion picture houses in Louisville, Kentucky, will inaugurate a new policy for his principal theatre, the Alamo, beginning August 27. A direct appeal will be made to the music loving public through the medium of a high class orchestra. Walter J. Rudolph of Chicago will be the director. Classical music will be essayed, enlivened by syncopated tunes of the better class. Extensive alterations are being made on the stage of the Alamo and the stage settings in connection with the new policy. The sum of $10,000 is being spent. Prologues and specialties will be put on with particular care given to lighting effects.

Work on the new Chamberlain $250,000 theatre, Mount Carmel, Pa. is progressing and the steel frame has been finished. The theatre will be opened about October 1.

Thomas Herrity, owner of the Lotus Theatre at Allentown, Pa., is having plans prepared for a gallery and balcony in his playhouse at Gordon and Sixth Streets.

Joseph Heim's at Danville, Pa., has been extensively remodeled and improved. It is claimed to be among the best appointed theatres in the Keystone State.

Mrs. McTauge, Coaldale, Pa., owner of the Palace Theatre has made a number of improvements in the theatre which was closed June but which will re-open soon.

The Peoples' Theatre Corporation, New York, which has been buying theatres and sites throughout Pennsylvania for a chain of 50 playhouses, has purchased the Haines Building, Slatington, Pa. and will remodel it into a playhouse. The same firm is putting up theatres at Allentown and Bethlehem, close to Slatington, and has opened zonal operating offices at Allentown.

Building Activities in New York on Increase

ALBANY, N. Y.—In Albany, Troy and Schenectady, N. Y., there are at the present time three theatres in course of construction and which represent an investment of close to one million dollars. When completed these houses will have a combined seating capacity of close to 9000 persons. Included in the trio are two Strands, one in Schenectady, costing approximately 365,000, with a seating capacity of 3000 persons, while the other will be located in Troy, and like the one in Schenectady, operated by Max Spiegel and his associates.

The Strand Theatre in Schenectady, now being built, will probably not be in shape for opening much before November, and possibly a little later.

The theatre is located in the business center and is of the type known as the entresol, or stadium variety, without balcony. The architect has paid particular attention to the ventilation, with the result that the house will embody the very latest ideas along this line with a system of mushroom ventilating prevailing. The throw from the projection room where three machines and a spotlight are to be installed, will be about 170 feet. The stage, which will be centered by the screen, will be semi-circular in its effect, secured through the use of colonnades.

In Troy, where a new Strand is under course of construction, the masonry work is about 85 per cent complete.

It will have a seating capacity of 2500 persons, and will cost in the neighborhood of $350,000. In the respect that it will have a balcony, the Troy house will be somewhat similar to the Albany Strand.

The work of construction on both houses is being done by Shapiro & Son of New York City, who are also engaged at the present time in partially razing one of the old churches in Albany and remodeling it into a theatre, which will be taken over by the Shuberts and opened on Dec. 1.

SHADOWS

have worried mankind through countless centuries, and in these modern times the employment of

SHADOWS

on a lighted screen to produce what we call "motion pictures" is troubling the minds of many film producers and distributors who are staggering under preposterous burdens of overhead. Not so, however, with which, by systematic methods, is distributing pictures of extraordinary merit with a minimum of expense. Twelve features and specials are scheduled for release in the current season, and the following now are being booked throughout the country:

"THE NIGHT RIDERS," a thrilling Northwestern in which Maudie Dunham, Albert Ray and Andre Beaulieu represent striking types in the visualization of Ridgewell Cullum's famous novel; "HER STORY," with Madge Titheradge, who scored a tremendous hit on the speaking stage in "The Butterfly on the Wheel," in an intensely emotional human interest role; "BROKEN SHADOWS," an Irish romance based on the popular novel, "Nance," by Charles Garvice, and "DAVID AND JONATHAN," a visualization of E. Temple Thurston's wonderful story of love and adventure, featuring Madge Titheradge.

"OVER THE BORDER"

WITH BETTY COMPSON
AND TOM MOORE

PRESENTED BY ADOLPH ZUKOR

Big Names Are Essential to Box-Office Success!

ALL right—now look at these names!

Two stars of world-wide renown—Betty Compson and Tom Moore. Each with a host of followers, each a top-rank attraction.

An author with many screen successes and a score of popular novels to his credit—Sir Gilbert Parker, who wrote "Behold my Wife."

A director already famous as an artist, now established as one of the world's finest producers—Penrhyn Stanlaws.

And finally, the name Paramount, symbol of the best.

That's enough to break records with, isn't it?

P. S.—Another point—the snow stuff makes it the greatest hot-weather picture ever made.

"The Woman Who Walked Alone"

with

Dorothy Dalton

THERE'S a title that will make people stop and pay attention!

And the picture will more than satisfy the interest aroused. It's George Melford's best since "Behold My Wife!" Dorothy Dalton never had a better rôle.

The story is rich in dramatic action, in vivid contrasts. Scenes in London society; in the depths of the jungle; scenes of daring, of romance; of struggle, heart-interest and drama wonderfully entwined.

From the novel, "The Cat That Walked Alone"
By John Colton. Scenario by Will M. Ritchey.

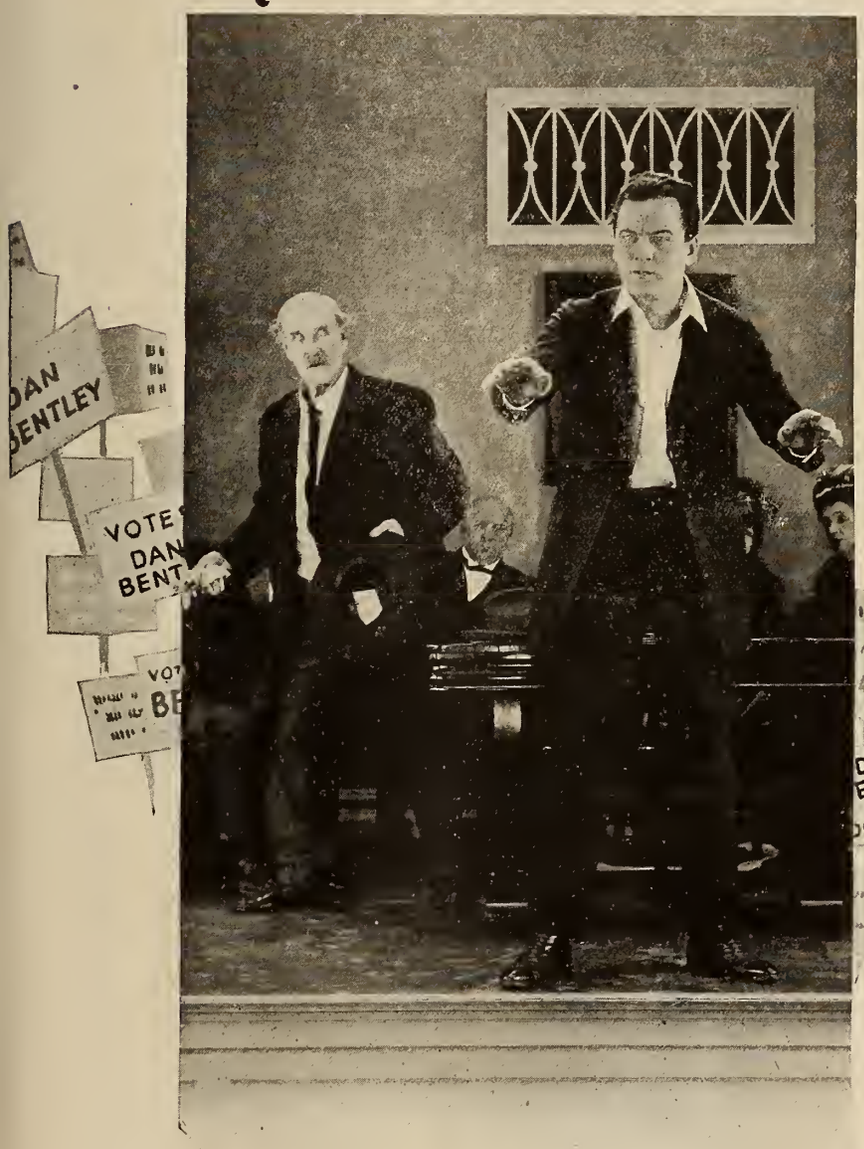
IN A GEORGE ADE STORY

"Our Leading Citizen"



AMERICA'S greatest humorist has written a story direct for the screen! And what's more, he worked with the director and scenario writer in the making of it!

That means something new and bright and entertaining. Tom Meighan never had such an altogether satisfying rôle.

A great supporting cast interprets this delightful comedy. Lois Wilson is leading woman, Theodore Roberts has a characteristic rôle, and others are Guy Oliver, Charles Ogle, Sylvia Ashton, Ethel Wales, Lucien Littlefield and W. P. Carleton.

The hundred million admirers of Meighan and Ade will flock to see it!

AL LICHTMAN

A little over ten years ago, we started to work together for the Famous Players Film Company when it first started in business; Ben wrote the ads, the publicity and some of the scenarios; Al sold the pictures.

Everybody made money.

Those days were wonderful days—full of hopes and dreams. Most of them came true! They were tough days too! It was difficult to rent independent pictures to theatres on account of the trust, and admissions were only a nickel!

BUT QUALITY WON OUT!

To-day, with QUALITY PICTURES, RIGHT IDEALS and BRIGHT IDEAS—it's a cinch.

WE ARE TOGETHER AGAIN—but this time in business for ourselves, and we are building a business which we are determined the whole industry shall be proud of.

Ben is managing "production," and Al is managing "distribution."

The pictures that Ben will produce will be known as PREFERRED PICTURES and will be made under the trade name of PREFERRED PICTURES, Inc.

The name of the distributing company will be known as the

AL LICHTMAN CORPORATION

There will be other independent producers releasing their product through the Al Lichtman Corporation. Announcement of these will be made at a later date.

We have been planning this for some time and we are ready.

CHING CHING CHINAMAN

By Wilbur Daniel Steele.

The prize short story of 1917.
It is unique—A story different from any you have seen.

ARE YOU A FAILURE?

By Larry Evans.

Written especially for the screen by this famous author, and will shortly be produced as a stage play.

A BIRD IN A GILDED CAGE

By Arthur J. Lamb.

From the famous song of the same name.

POOR MEN'S WIVES

A sequel to RICH MEN'S WIVES.

A chapter from life.
Replete with laughs and sobs.

WHEN A WOMAN MARRIES

A powerful drama of today.

Each of these pictures will contain every element of box office success.

We shall always operate with the knowledge that to merit the exhibitors' support, we must deliver pictures and service that will be profitable.

Maria Draga-The Heroine

What a combination was brought about to give box-office strength to "The Great Alone"—a grouping of factors who know how to make pictures.

MONROE SALISBURY, the Star: You remember "The Savage;" "The Millionaire Pirate;" "Hugon The Mighty;" "The Light of Victory:" "The Sleeping Lion;" "The Barbarian." As "Silent Duval" in "The Great Alone" Salisbury has the biggest of all his great roles.

JACQUES JACCARD, the Director: A great action director. Remember "The Great Air Robbery;" "Under Northern Lights;" "Liberty" and "The Red Glove," chapter-plays; "If Only Jim;" "Honor Bound;" "Desert Love;" "The Terror" and "The Fast Mail"? "The Great Alone" is still bigger.

ISADORE BERNSTEIN the Supervising Director: He supervised "Tarzan of the Apes;" "The Romance of Tarzan;" "Confession;" "Outside the Law" and scores of others, and now has a great Coast producing plant at his command.

And a cast backing up the great work of Salisbury that includes MARIA DRAGA, a new find; WALTER LAW, a great villain; LURA ANSON, Tom Meighan's leading woman in "If You Believe It It's So;" GEORGE WAGGONER, the Youssef of "The Shiek," and RICHARD CUMMINGS.

QUALITY IN PRODUCTION is hardly more important to the exhibitor than QUALITY and ECONOMY in DISTRIBUTION

IN announcing our distributing plan we do so with the fixed determination to achieve, at all times, Quality in both our Production and Distributing activities.

We are rapidly establishing Exchanges through the medium of "Territorial Partners," and a complete list is soon to be announced.

Each Territorial Partner will be a man of the highest standing and integrity who has, through consistent past performance, earned the respect and confidence of the Exhibitors in his particular territory, and who will be fully qualified to serve them with PREFERRED PICTURES.

Only pictures which will measure up to a high standard will appear on our schedule and the function of distributing these productions will be handled in an equitable and dignified manner.

There are still a few territories available to men who can offer us the high type of representation required of our "Territorial Partners."

I feel I should write you regarding the remarkable business done at the Strand by D.W.Griffith's "Orphans of the Storm"

It was necessary to have the police reserves on hand at all times to handle the great crowds.

Our audiences certainly enjoyed the picture and showed it by heartily applauding it at the end of every performance.

It is a hundred percent picture from every angle.

Adventure"

Henry Kitchell Webster's Famous Novel....

To say "The Real Adventure" is a superb Florence Vidor attraction implies its worth. It's a story of a wife who had to quit her luxurious home and win success in the world before the husband would accept her as a real pal instead of a pretty pet.

Few productons rival its realism and mighty few can touch it as a vivid picture of actual life.

Exhibitors, it's not a question of HOW, it's a matter of WHEN.

The GREAT ALONE

This is the story of a mighty love and a strong man's bravery and final renunciation. The story of a man who fought like blue blazes to save a girl's life at the risk of his own; who whipped and ousted her father's enemy and then gave the girl to the other man.

MONROE SALISBURY at his strongest and best—an appealing player with a great following all over the country. WALTER LAW properly villainous and fear-inspiring. MARIA DRAGA AND LURA ANSON in two fine and convincing roles and JACCARD, the director, rushing his story forward to the climax of the greatest fight between men we have ever seen on the screen.

And the best production that has gone out to make the reputation of the Pacific Studios, at San Mateo.

HIS WIFE'S HUSBAND

From Anna Katherine Green's great society drama "The Mayor's Wife"

Directed by Kenneth Webb

Following its Broadway, New York, run at the Cameo Theatre and the unanimously favorable newspaper and trade journal reviews the great Keith organization has given "His Wife's Husband" its full circuit time beginning June 3.

An idea of the power of this big Pyramid-Betty Blythe production will be gained by noting that the New York critics hail it as being as great a success as "The Bat," the biggest theatrical success in New York, now in its second solid year in the same theatre.

As a matter of information and comparison we have seen and carefully guaged the power of every big picture released by all companies from January to date and there is not one picture now on the market containing better drama, better showmanship qualities or greater exploitation values.

Booked and played in June "His Wife's Husband" and the added drawing power of Betty Blythe will save many a first run exhibitor a "box-office headache."

The Exhibitor's Herald says:

"A story of the oil fields of Mexico, of tourists, smugglers, secret service detectives, bad men, motorcycle policemen, and a pretty girl in distress, all mixed up in a strange mystery tale. A somewhat different type of story from the usual run of rural plays in which Ray has starred. Very melodramatic.

"Almost every known device for creating suspense, action and thrills is employed. It is a different type of story. The photography is excellent throughout. The work of the entire cast is pleasing."

Atmosphere

The successful moving picture must have appropriate "atmosphere" in every scene.

So, obviously, when picturing a number of scenes in the office of a construction company—

For "A Question of Honor," in which, by the way, the engineer wins out with colors flying—

The engineer's copy of Engineering News Record was naturally used to complete the necessary construction atmosphere.

Incidentally, showing again that wherever there is construction work you'll find Engineering News-Record "on the job."

The above illustration from "A Question of Honor" with the talk on Atmosphere is reproduced from a folder issued by the Engineering News-Record.

When a magazine of the character and standing of the News-Record makes a comment on the accuracy of a motion picture, you may be sure that picture is correct in Atmosphere and Detail.

Artistry is dependent on Atmosphere and Accuracy.

Louis B. Mayer spares neither time nor effort in making his productions artistic in quality as well as fascinating in entertainment.

From every section of the country there is the constant exhibitor demand for "society drama" or "society melodrama" done in big fashion with a powerful, popular feminine star as the central attraction in the production.

When "His Wife's Husband" opened its two weeks' engagement at the Cameo, New York, as we have already told you, the fourteen metropolitan critics said: "Here is a screen story as appealing and powerful as 'The Bat'! This stage play is the biggest theatrical hit in New York; is about to enter its third year of a continuous run in the same theatre, where it will exceed the famous run of 'Lightnin'."

MONROE SALISBURY has made a score of pictures that for ruggedness and strength stand out like great towering mountain-tops amid a range of low-lying hills. "The Great Alone" is the strongest and biggest picture of an unforgetable strong star.

JACCARD, the director, is in most respects the strongest director of melodrama among all the makers of pictures. "The Great Alone" is the swiftest and strongest picture he has ever directed.

BERNSTEIN, with many production successes to his credit, has thrown all the resources of the capable and efficient Pacific Studios, at San Mateo, behind "The Great Alone" and it represents the ablest production delivered to any distributor by that organization.

At its American premiere "The Great Alone" did a smashing big business at Turner & Dahnken's Tivoli, San Francisco, and immediately was booked for the T & D Oakland theatre and the T & D circuit.

Devil Drives

"When lovely woman stoops to folly,
And finds at last that men betray—"

THE drama of life is played when the break comes; when woman is desperate and "the devil drives."

There are two women. Different homes, different friends, different modes of living, and yet—in the stress of circumstance—they are alike.

"Don't Doubt Your Wife" established Leah Baird's popularity "When the Devil Drives" will make it doubly assured.

Few women of the screen can wear clothes quite as smartly as she. Few can rival her dramatic sincerity. And no one of them can write such stories, with a woman's insight of what women like and what men crave to see.

"One of the best plays seen in a month of Sundays—a succession of thrills, smiles and tears."—New York Journal.

MOST APPEALING FILM

"We have not seen a more perfectly poised and effective single performance in months. Barthelmess appears in his most appealing mood. He did no better work in 'Tol'able David' than here. What more can we say?"—New York World.

LIVES HIS ROLES

"Barthelmess plays human beings. He lives his roles and throws into them real sincerity."—New York Mail.

STAR'S BEST WORK

BEST ACTOR ON SCREEN

"Richard Barthelmess continues to be just about the best actor on the screen."—New York Tribune.

HIS FINEST WORK

"A rare film flower, more stirring than Flanders' poppies, for it is the expression of a personality. Barthelmess does the finest work he ever performed. A feature shattering prevailing standards. A picture that will linger in the memory."—New York Herald.

A SUPERIOR FILM

and Knocks another Homer!"

—Moving Picture World.

Every newspaper critic in New York praises Barthelmess' third picture for First National as one of the Big productions of the year. And now come the trade experts to tell of its wonderful box office value.

HEART PULLING DRAMA THAT RINGS TRUE

"Barthelmess comes to bat and knocks another 'Homer.' A good story, humorous and poignant in turn and exceptionally well acted. It compares with 'Tol'able David.' Heart pulling drama figures in it. Barthelmess is exceptional and convincing and proves his capabilities. There is comedy and a sincerity that rings true."—Moving Picture World.

"Drama sharply drawn, briefly depicted and forceful. Both tears and laughs were heartily given by the Chicago Theatre audience. Barthelmess is superb. The picture is one to advertise. It will fulfill promises. A good theatre picture."—Exhibitors Herald.

THIS ONE SHOULD BE A KNOCKOUT

"As a picture, 'Sonny' is a corking feature and a corking one for Barthelmess. He enacts the dual role with cleverness. The double exposure scenes are masterly bits of photography. The war stuff is exceedingly well done from a pictorial and directorial standpoint. Under ordinary conditions this should be pretty much of a knockout."—Variety.

WILL GIVE "TOL'ABLE DAVID" A CLOSE RUN

"They're going to have a good cry in 'Sonny,' and this includes the greater part of your patrons, even the men. It will rank high with the Barthelmess productions and may give 'Tol'able David' a close run. Barthelmess will add to his laurels in this. Concentrate on the star's name. This really should prove sufficient."—The Film Daily.

A PICTURE THAT WILL TUG AT THE HEART

"It is so close to 'Tol'able David' in its power to tug at the emotions that it will leave a definite appeal everywhere. Barthelmess sees to that emphatically. The star is finely directed by Henry King, who also has squeezed all the heart interest, the incident, the sentiment, pathos and romance from the plot. The star plays his role with fine sincerity."—Motion Picture News.

ANOTHER BIG TRIUMPH FOR DICK BARTHELMESS

"This is undoubtedly another big triumph for Barthelmess, whose sympathetic and charmingly natural work dominates the feature. The story plays havoc with the heart strings but this is offset by some timely comedy relief. As it stands the film is a wonderful and refreshing thing, part sunshine, part tears—deliciously human, a high grade, technically perfect entertainment which is a credit to all concerned in the production. It should prove a powerful box office magnet. Barthelmess once more shines out as an actor of tremendous dramatic strength, giving a performance that is bound to linger in the memory of all who witness it."—Exhibitor's Trade Review.

BIGGEST HIT OF HIS CAREER

"Barthelmess is scoring the biggest hit of his career in this highly entertaining play. He brings tears and laughter. He holds his audience in the hollow of his hand. A picture that ranks high on the list of cinema achievements—a drama thoroughly worth while in every respect, the finest Barthelmess has done."—New York Morning Telegraph.

Life Says:

"'The Paleface' Is an Epic!"

"It is strange that the silent drama should have reached its highest level in the comic field. Here, and here alone, it is pre-eminent. Nothing that is being produced in literature or in the drama is as funny as a good Chaplin or Keaton comedy. The efforts of these young men approximate art more closely than anything else that the movies have offered.

"They are slap-stick, they are crude, they are indelicate, to be sure; but so was Aristophanes, so was Rabelais, so was Shakespeare. How many humorists who have outlived their own generations have been otherwise?

"In 'The Paleface,' Buster Keaton is captured by a tribe of Indians who have a grudge against the white men because some oil promoters have attempted to steal their lands. Buster is sentenced to death, but the fact that he wears an asbestos union suit saves him from considerable embarrassment when the Indians try to burn him at the stake. He is then made chief of the tribe, and he proceeds to outwit the oil sharks and save the reservation.

" 'The Paleface' is a veritable epic."

The Truth about The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes

IF you at the time were a customer of Educational, you were sure, when we announced the new series of pictures—The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes—that we had them to offer, because we never make statements to exhibitors which we cannot back up.

If you were not a customer of Educational, you know now what we mean when we speak of "KEEPING FAITH WITH EXHIBITORS". We mean making positive announcements only when we have facts to support them.

These pictures, from the original stories by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, are EDUCATIONAL PICTURES, and the first two will be released in June. They are:

THE DEVIL'S FOOT and
THE DYING DETECTIVE

We have everything which is necessary to release all pictures of our series—original negatives, working prints, everything.

And . . . . The Editors-In-Chief and Reviewers of every National Trade Paper, together with the official representative of the Regional Trade Papers, have privately pre-viewed the two pictures mentioned above, for the express purpose of giving advice as to the best methods of exhibitor exploitation for this series of short-reel features.

This means not only that Educational's own exploitation staff is engineering unusual exhibitor helps, but that in addition an expert from every Trade Paper in this industry is co-operating with Educational to give exhibitors the last word on exploitation and box-office help.

Here is a new angle on Exhibitor Service. No picture released ever had such an aggregation of brains back of it.

AND . . . . Educational is going to give you these pictures in JUNE. We are giving you a box-office tonic in the summer when you need it to fight hot weather—though we could have held these two-reel gems until September!

THAT'S REAL EXHIBITOR SERVICE—THAT'S KEEPING FAITH!

The entire series is backed up, in addition,
by national advertising to

MONTE CRISTO

To the Exhibitors and Distributors of the United States and Canada

NOTICE is hereby given to you that the undersigned has received information that several alleged distributors in the United States are soliciting contracts for the exhibition of a motion picture photoplay entitled "Monte Cristo" which is a reissue of a film distributed many years ago by the General Film Company, starring Hobart Bosworth. That film is based on the so-called O'Neill-Fechter version of "Monte Cristo," and is an infringement of the rights of the owners of the O'Neill-Fechter version because the General Film Company had not acquired any rights to picturize the O'Neill-Fechter version. That question was litigated in the courts of the State of New York in litigation entitled "O'Neill vs. General Film Company," and the courts of the State of New York held that the General Film Company was guilty of an infringement of the said O'Neill-Fechter version by reason of the exhibition of said picture without the consent of the owners of the O'Neill-Fechter version, and that decision stands unreversed in the State of New York. We will further take action in the Federal or State Courts in any State of the United States or any Province in the Dominion of Canada, where an infringement of our rights occurs.

THIS notice is published for the purpose of warning all exhibitors and all persons who attempt to exploit or in any manner make use of that film that Fox Film Corporation, which owns all of the motion picture rights of the O'Neill-Fechter version, will prosecute any attempt to infringe those rights against any persons who exhibit, exploit, license, sell or in any manner deal with the aforesaid "Monte Cristo" film.

A seasonable offering as refreshing as a June morning.

A delicious love story of a Southern girl who rebels against the restrictions of an old-fashioned father and runs away from home.

Her experiences, temptations and adventures provide the motif for the action of a surprising picture.

Portrayed in a winsome manner by a new screen beauty and a finely chosen cast.

"The story is a great deal more genuine than the majority of those depicting life back stage. For one thing it paints the hardships in their true colors. The production is a handsome one, being rich in settings, costumes and pictorial appeal.
"Being experienced in her subject, the story by Clara Morris carries authority.

MAYORS OFFICE

SAN FRANCISCO

June 1,1922.

Mr. William A. Crank,
Resident Manager,
American Releasing Corporation,
191 - Golden Gate Ave.,
San Francisco,Cal.

Dear Mr. Crank:

I took the greatest pleasure a few nights ago, in witnessing at the Tivoli Theatre, the premiere of "The Great Alone", produced by the West Coast Films Corporation and distributed through your organization, The American Releasing Corporation.

I have not for a long time seen a film production which interested me so greatly as did "The Great Alone". The story, the acting, the scenic effects -- all were excellent,and I had the feeling when the picture was over, that I would like to see it through again.

I have complimented Mr. Isador Bernstein, Director General of the West Coast Films Corporation, upon this splendid and high class attraction, and I congratulate the American Releasing Corporation upon being enabled to supply the trade with such a clean and wholesome feature production.

With kindest personal regards and best wishes, believe me

Very sincerely yours,

James Rolph

Mayor.

From the Mayor of San Francisco

Mayors of great cities do not rush carelessly into print to aid in the exploitation of motion pictures. "The Great Alone" wins this praise because it is a big he-man picture and it has achieved the further amazing distinction of being praised by several distinguished clergymen who hold red-blooded action stories to be good dramatic fare for the American public.

The GREAT ALONE

A West Coast Films Corp. Production

Directed by Jacques Jaccard

Under supervision of Isadore Bernstein

The Sun: "It is good to see an old favorite like Salisbury again, especially when treated with originality."

The Evening Telegram: "'The Great Alone' is likeable. It's good sequence and beautiful scenery leave a favorable and lasting impression."

Evening World: "'The Great Alone' reminds us of the great old Robert Edeson play, 'Strongheart.'"

Evening Mail: "'The Great Alone' is virile drama, with plenty of action ranging from football to primitive love and hand-to-hand fights."

Globe: "'The Great Alone' gives a realistic picture of the far north. Characters well acclimated as to dress and manners; outdoor scenes as cold, and storms as raging as could be reproduced."

Telegraph. "Mr. Salisbury is big and strong and handsome and can act. 'The Great Alone' is not without its thrills."

Herald: "Monroe Salisbury plays the half-breed with considerable virility and force."

Weekly Film Review: "One of the best stories that has come out of the snow country. It is big and strong and elemental. There's neither glamour nor romance save where it belongs, and because it is so free from the trite and superficial, people are going to like it."

Exhibitors Trade Review: "One of the best of its kind; it is out of the ordinary class of Far North pictures. 'The Great Alone' has a tenseness and a generally satisfying element that predominate."

Moving Picture World: "A story of strong dramatic values. Plenty of punch and action. Big fight scenes excellently handled. Monroe Salisbury gives his role the virility and force it demands."

MORAL O'THE PICTURE—Honesty Is the Best Policy

One of the Season's Big Pictures, Strong in Human Interest and Good All Through

It is not likely that there will be any great difference of opinion on the merits of "My Old Kentucky Home", for it's just as human and entertaining a screen document as was ever produced. It has not the appearance of having cost a tremendous amount of money, for many of its settings are out-of-doors. It was filmed somewhere in the South—perhaps Kentucky—at any rate, the racetrack is much in evidence and splendidly so, for in the scenes at the Kentucky Derby, the cameramen following the horses as they strain neck and neck for supremacy, have done an exceptionally fine job. The interesting group of characters provided by the author and the careful manner in which types have been selected has a great deal to do with the enjoyment of the picture. And then the director has succeeded in getting his players to live the story, as it were, and not once throughout the picture do we recall a moment when any one of them resorts to that "[illegible]" manner of interpretation, which frequently [illegible] and only once did the picture appe[illegible] the last [illegible] realism o[illegible] Richard[illegible]

Our Opinion

MORAL O'THE PICTURE—None

Good Audience Film—Mystery Atmosphere Well Established—Plot Interestingly Developed

"His Wife's Husband" is a good audience picture, has an attractive and well-dressed star, and is based on an interesting story. The situation in which a young woman's pledge to marry a man who has helped to care for her mother in her last illness is kept in spite of the absence of love, and whose desperate resolve to escape by pretending to have been drowned is halted when a mysterious hand shoots her husband from the window, carries a melodramatic thrill that gives the story an advantageous beginning. Then the scene, shifting several years ahead, lifts the young woman from a life of drudgery such as she had been accustomed to into the home of wealth, with a husband whose stirring qualities have made mayor of the town and a candidate for governor. Here the settings are artistic, the home atmosphere is well established, and an attractive child enters the scene. The situation which causes the wife to be overcome with nervousn[illegible] sounds of slamming doors and st[illegible] noises in the [illegible] contains quite a strong no[illegible] climax

Every One a Winner

Metro pictures are produced with a single, dominating principle always in mind: that every release must be a winner for the man exhibiting them, that every picture must turn over a sound profit for the showman.

That principle is the basis for Metro's successes in the past, for its present enviable place in the faith of the exhibitor, and for its policy during the coming season of 1922-1923. To adhere to that principle is becoming more and more difficult of achievement, as the demands of the public are becoming more and more difficult of satisfaction.

The public no longer selects its evening's screen entertainment with the carelessness of a man buying a straw hat. The public shops for movies now with the discerning eye of a woman who can only afford one hat a season.

What the public shops for is the Special Production.

And since Metro must give the exhibitor what the public wants, special productions only constitute the Metro schedule for the crucial year to come.

Every Metro picture during this period will come easily under the classification of a super-production. The most dramatic story material available, the most capable directors in the world today, stars that pull irresistibly, with casts of players of proven artistry—these essentials of photoplay excellence Metro has gathered together for the purpose of making every Metro picture a winner.

The wise exhibitor, then, is the exhibitor who books Metro solid, for thus he insures the solidity of his profits.

Critics Laud Neilan's Directorial Genius

RATTLING GOOD STORY TOLD IN SUPER SIX STYLE

"'Fools First' is a rattling good police story told in super six style. The action moves swiftly with lots of surprises toward a very satisfying objective, namely, regeneration. We rate the acting as top-notch."—Los Angeles Times.

SHOWS MASTER HAND OF NEILAN

"Although it was thought there was nothing new in underworld themes Neilan presents some new wrinkles in 'Fools First.' It has many original scenes that show the master hand of Neilan. The climax is so radically new that one leaves the theatre realizing that there is no limit to Neilan's directive genius. The work of the cast is to be complimented."—Los Angeles Herald.

NEILAN IS THE DICKENS OF SCREEN

Read what Charles W. Picquit, of the Carolina Theatre, Pinehurst, North Carolina, has to say of this picture:

Mr. F. P. Bryan,
Associated First Nat'l Pictures,
Charlotte, N.C.

Dear Mr. Bryan:-

My hat is off to Richard Barthelmess, his Director and the whole bunch that had anything to do with producing his new picture "Sonny."

I think Barthelmess will score the biggest hit of his career in this picture and I believe all who have seen his recent pictures will agree that "Sonny" is the finest of the lot, even with "Tol'able David" in mind.

"Sonny" seems to have everything that makes up a perfect screen entertainment; an absorbing story with just enough tears and laughs, splendid direction and an unusually able cast.

"Sonny" will be not only a box-office winner but will win thousands of new friends to the screen.

Very truly yours,

ROBERT J. FLAHERTY F.R.G.S.

SUCH a picture comes once in a lifetime. It is just such a picture as you have been looking for during the dull days of the past twelve months.

You know that if you've got the picture you can get the crowds.

Your chief worry has been that big pictures are so scarce. Here is as big a picture as this business has ever seen, different, absolutely different from any other ever made.

It's a picture that offers immense opportunities for exploitation.

"NANOOK of the NORTH"

ONCE in a blue moon there comes a picture that makes you say "Why hasn't some one done something like that before?"

There are thousands of features that are alike in everything except cast.

Here's a picture unlike anything you ever saw, taken in a country where no motion picture camera ever went before.

It has the most real human interest; the most unusual thrills. Its interest never flags.

For six reels it holds you with a mighty grip.

Audience value? It's just full of it.

Book it for the best picture buy of this and many months!

Save Dates for the Big Ones—or You Lose!

THE saddest showman this year is going to be the fellow who ties himself up to a long string of pictures—the exhibitor who signs a profit-eating contract for a season's or a half season's supply.

This fall more than ever before the market is going to be swamped with pictures. Some will be fair. Some will be good. Some will be flops.

The moment any exhibitor puts his John Hancock to the dotted line of any long term contract, he sells, gives and parcels away all his rights to his theatre and what shall go on his screen.

He signs away his right to play the best pictures on the market every week.

He sells his right to show the pictures the people want—when they want them.

He parcels away all privileges to his individuality.

He makes himself a caretaker instead of an active manager of his theatre.

He closes his doors to any and every good picture other than those that may come under his contract.

He deprives himself of profits and patronage by COMPELLING people to go elsewhere to see good, big productions from other companies.

He encourages and invites the strongest kind of competition.

He denies himself the right of every exhibitor—to show the best pictures at any time, no matter who the producer may be.

He pays for 27 or 29 pictures on the lone chance that he will get four or five or possibly ten good ones.

HE BUYS PICTURES ON SPECULATION—NOT ON MERIT!

Look me in the eye and tell me this: What are you going to do when, after getting all set with 27 or 29 bookings, along come such big ones as those mentioned on the following pages?

THINK NOW! LOOK BEFORE YOU BOOK!

for 1922-1923 Goldwyn will make only 20 pictures all big ones will make all his pictures for Goldwyn, with powerful stories and on a scale surpassing his best previous effort.

MARSHALL NEILAN

ALLEN HOLUBAR

is now filming the $10,000 prize winning story, "Broken Chains," his first work for Goldwyn.

R. A. WALSH

has begun production on "Captain Blackbird," his first big picture, at the Culver City Studios.

EACH of these twenty pictures is being produced as carefully as though it were intended to be the one big picture of the industry. No expense is spared in making it.

Goldwyn will not include in this Twenty any picture that is not a powerfully strong special. These will be BIG pictures—remember that!

Because we will not produce a single ordinary picture you will not be obliged to sign up for a great many films that are not strong in order to get the big one you really want.

You will see each picture before you are asked to book it.

E. MASON HOPPER

who has completed a wonderful picturization of Anzia Yezierska's "Hungry Hearts," soon will start on another heart interest story.

Remember! 20 Pictures-All Big Ones!

WHEN the announcement was first made, some weeks ago, of the Forty-One Paramount Pictures for fall and winter release, we stated confidently that we believed we were giving to exhibitors the most beneficial service in history.

In giving them complete details of forty-one pictures, six months in advance, we felt we were taking the chance out of booking—the exhibitor could know, far in advance, just what big pictures he would be able to show.

The tremendous sensation throughout the industry which followed this announcement showed us that we were not wrong. We had made another forward step which was of the greatest possible benefit to the exhibitors.

Hundreds of prominent exhibitors have flooded us with letters and telegrams, congratulating us on, first, the completeness and conciseness of the announcement, and second, on the quality of the product.

This announcement, it is needless to say, will be rigidly adhered to. These forty-one great pictures will be delivered according to schedule. Exhibitors will not have to trust to luck for 1922-23.

A Pledge to American Exhibitors

IF a long and faithful service devoted to the cause of better pictures has won your respect and confidence, as I earnestly hope to be the case, I gladly risk losing your good will and such reputation as I may have achieved, in stating that the productions described on the following pages represent the motion picture art at its zenith and in its hour of triumph!

My pledge to you is that these productions being the result of an expenditure of unlimited money and brain effort on the part of the most brilliant group of directors, authors, scenario writers, stars and supporting artists, art directors and camera men ever gathered together in one organization, all working in harmony and with the utmost enthusiasm, surpass any group of productions so far given to the public in the history of our industry.

In planning this product, we have striven for box office values, highest merit in story, the greatest number of distinguished players possible to cast in one photoplay, perfection in direction, photography and titling and, finally, for clean pictures fit for presentation before the highest type of American audiences.

These pictures will surpass any similar pictures ever released, each picture representing the greatest effort of which we are capable. You can book all of them, feeling you have secured the best product obtainable in the industry.

The combination of values as evidenced in these productions is my prescription for your prosperity.

JESSE L. LASKY PRESENTS

WALLACE REID IN "The Dictator"

Supported by Lila Lee

Story by Richard Harding Davis. Directed by James Cruze. Released Aug. 7.

YOU all know what a great star Wallace Reid is when he has the right story, and "The Dictator" is the best story he has had in a long time. The role is of a young American adventurer in the midst of South American revolution.

Romance is supplied by Lila Lee as the Spanish girl. Theodore Kosloff and Walter Long are also in the cast. James Cruze who will make "The Old Homestead," has put punch after punch in the picture. This one has comedy and spectacle and romance.

FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY CORP. PRESENTS

MARION DAVIES IN "The Young Diana"

By Marie Corelli. Directed by Albert Capellani and Robert Vignola. Scenario by Luther Reed. Created by Cosmopolitan Productions. Released August 7.

THIS is one of the most elaborate pictures ever made and it will be a sensation everywhere. The story is by one of the most popular of modern authors and ran serially in Hearst's Magazine.

The production is lavishly and beautifully staged and yet is surprisingly human and dramatic. Pedro de Cordoba, Forrest Stanley, Maclyn Arbuckle and Gypsy O'Brien are in the great cast.

ADOLPH ZUKOR PRESENTS

THOMAS MEIGHAN IN "If You Believe It, It's So"

By Perley Poore Sheehan. Directed by Tom Forman. Scenario by Waldemar Young. Released Aug. 14.

THIS story was selected by the late George Loane Tucker to be his next production after "The Miracle Man." He had planned to star Thomas Meighan in it for he believed it to be one of the finest stories ever written.

It deals with the regeneration of human souls in much the same manner as "The Miracle Man." Without any question the strongest drama Meighan has yet appeared in. Cast includes Pauline Starke, Joseph Dowling and Theodore Roberts.

ADOLPH ZUKOR PRESENTS

BETTY COMPSON IN "The Bonded Woman"

Based on the story "The Salving of John Somers" by John Fleming Wilson. Scenario by Albert Shelby LeVino. Directed by Philip Rosen. Released August 21.

A STIRRING story of love and adventure in the South Seas, with an unusual and dramatic plot. The shipwreck is one of the biggest scenes ever staged.

The part calls for the wearing of beautiful gowns and picturesque costumes and for emotional acting in plenty. Richard Dix and John Bowers head the cast.

JESSE L. LASKY PRESENTS

MAY McAVOY IN "The Top of New York"

By Sonya Levien. Directed by William D. Taylor. Scenario by Julia Crawford Ivers. Released Aug. 21.

"THE TOP OF NEW YORK" possesses every attribute that makes a successful picture. It is particularly strong in sentiment and wholesomeness.

Miss McAvoy plays the role of a little dancer who supports a crippled brother and a worthless uncle. She struggles unaided through many heart-rending difficulties.

"THE LOVES OF PHARAOH" with Emil Jannings, Dagny Servaes, Harry Liedtke AN ERNEST LUBITSCH PRODUCTION

Released August 28th.

THIS is the gigantic spectacle which ran for eleven weeks to crowded houses at the Criterion, New York. All of the critics were unanimous in giving it the highest praise. Its reputation has spread all through the country—everywhere the people are anxious to see it.

It contains the biggest sets ever made and the biggest crowd scenes ever staged. But its greatest appeal is as a heart-interest story, as one of the most thrilling romances of all times. It is the master work of the creator of "Passion" and "Deception."

JESSE L. LASKY PRESENTS

GLORIA SWANSON IN "Her Gilded Cage"

A Sam Wood Production. From the play by Anne Nichols. Scenario by Elmer Harris and Percy Heath. Released September 4th.

THIS is the most elaborate of all Miss Swanson's productions. It reveals the star in some of the most dramatic situations, and some of the most striking gowns ever devised.

David Powell and Harrison Ford head a great cast. Miss Swanson wears over a score of marvelous costumes, and the dance-hall and cabaret scenes are the last word in magnificence.

ADOLPH ZUKOR PRESENTS A

WILLIAM deMILLE PRODUCTION "NICE PEOPLE" with Wallace Reid, Bebe Daniels, Conrad Nagel, Julia Faye

From the play by Rachael Crothers. Screen play by Clara Beranger. Released September 4th.

HERE'S a big picture if ever there was one! The play was one of the record-breakers on Broadway last season and it has run all this season in Chicago.

The play is a frank indictment of the wild habits of the younger generation—a problem that is vital and real in every community. The great star cast makes it one of the biggest productions of the year.

GEORGE MELFORD'S PRODUCTION "BURNING SANDS"
with Wanda Hawley and Milton Sills

By Arthur Weigall. Scenario by Olga Printzlau. Released October 16th.

HERE'S the answer to "The Sheik." A picture as big and sweeping as its name. The story is from the successful novel which has run through edition after edition.

Produced on the same massive scale as "The Sheik," colorful and thrilling from start to finish; will stand up high among the real successes of the season.

JESSE L. LASKY PRESENTS

WALLACE REID and LILA LEE IN "The Ghost Breaker"

By Paul Dickey and Charles Goddard. Scenario by Jack Cunningham. Directed by Alfred Green. Released October 16th.

THIS was a tremendously popular play on the stage, and in this great production with two big stars it will duplicate its stage popularity.

It has comedy and action in abundance and a thrilling love story. Great sets and beautiful gowns add to the appeal. The director made "The Bachelor Daddy."

JESSE L. LASKY PRESENTS

"THE COWBOY AND THE LADY"
with Mary Miles Minter and Tom Moore

By Clyde Fitch. Directed by and scenario by Charles Maigne. Released Oct. 23.

TWO popular stars in the greatest play Clyde Fitch, America's most famous playwright, ever wrote. A love-drama in which New York society mingles and clashes with the rugged folk of the West.

A big special production directed by the man who made "The Copperhead." Four big names to talk about—this picture has enough wholesome box-office merit to jam theatres everywhere.

ADOLPH ZUKOR PRESENTS A

GEORGE FITZMAURICE PRODUCTION "TO HAVE AND TO HOLD"
with Betty Compson and Bert Lytell

By Mary Johnston. Scenario by Ouida Bergere. Released Oct. 30.

ONE of the season's most spectacular productions. Both stars have immense personal followings. Fitzmaurice is the producer of such box-office knockouts as "On With the Dance" and "Three Live Ghosts."

The story, which has been a best-seller for twenty-five years, is popular with everybody. It is a robust tale of love and adventure, with plenty of rapid-fire thrills and lavish, colorful settings. The cast includes Theodore Kosloff.

ADOLPH ZUKOR PRESENTS

THOMAS MEIGHAN IN "The Man Who Saw To-Morrow"

By Perley Poore Sheehan and Frank Condon. Directed by Alfred Green. Released Nov. 6.

BOUND to be the most talked-about picture of the year. Sheehan is also the author of the big Meighan success, "If You Believe It, It's So." Directed by the man who made "The Bachelor Daddy."

This picture delves deeply into real human nature, touching alike high society's splendors and the primitive passions of the tropics. A wonderful box-office title and a story that lives up to it.

ADOLPH ZUKOR PRESENTS

"ON THE HIGH SEAS" with Dorothy Dalton and Jack Holt

Supported by Mitchell Lewis. An Irvin Willat production. Released Nov. 6.

ANOTHER twin-star box-office success. Willat made those mighty pictures, "Behind the Door" and "Below the Surface." This one is a roaring romance of the sea by Edward Sheldon, author of "Romance," "Salvation Nell" and other great American plays.

Here are two stars famed for their great work in strong outdoor roles in the greatest picture either of them has ever had. A drama of crashing climaxes. Scenes of high society life, shipwreck, struggle of castaways on the high seas, and love on a desert island.

JESSE L. LASKY PRESENTS

RODOLPH VALENTINO in "The Young Rajah"

By John Ames Mitchell. Directed by Philip E. Rosen. Adapted by June Mathis. Released Nov. 13.

FOR your box office's sake, book this one. It's bigger than "The Sheik!" Starring the man your patrons are wild about Rosen directed "The Bonded Woman" and other big successes. June Mathis wrote the scenario for "The Four Horsemen" and "Blood and Sand."

The story, adapted from the novel "Amos Judd," presents Valentino as a hot-blooded East Indian, brought up in America in ignorance of his real parentage. Wanda Hawley is the girl he loves. Supporting cast includes Bertram Grassby, Edwin Stevens, and Maud Wayne. A sure sensation!

ADOLPH ZUKOR PRESENTS

ALICE BRADY in "Anna Ascends"

From the play by Harry Chapman Ford. Directed by Joseph Henabery. Released Nov. 20.

A SPLENDID picturization of the stage play in which Miss Brady scored the greatest triumph of her career. Directed by the man who made "While Satan Sleeps."

The star plays the role of a warm-hearted Syrian girl who comes to this country and struggles against temptation to love and happiness. Rich in love interest and emotional climaxes.

CARDIGAN

From the Novel by Robert W. Chambers

With WM. COLLIER, JR. and BETTY CARPENTER
Directed by JOHN W. NOBLE

Picturized from Robert W. Chambers' great historical novel, "Cardigan" is the first big American historical drama of the screen. It weaves into a dramatic depiction of the events which led to and commenced our Revolutionary War the romance of a youth and a maid who were drawn by chance into this momentous struggle; and in the telling shows the great patriots who defied a powerful Empire to lay the foundation for a world power. Patrick Henry is seen uttering his famous speech; John Hancock also inspiring the patriots to strike for freedom; Paul Revere's ride—nothing more thrilling has ever been shown—and then the patriots firing the shot that was heard around the world, the shot that opened the war for American Independence. These are a few of the sights which make this the most inspiring picture in the annals of the screen.

New York American: "A finely patriotic picture that no one can find fault with . . . from Robert W. Chambers' greatest literary achievement."

N. Y. Telegram: "Here you feel the intensity of the big struggle of the American Revolution. In the midst of the terrific struggle there is a beautiful romance.

N. Y. Sun: "Space forbids a description in full of this well wrought and swiftly directed story. Chambers has never written anything more fine."

Phila. Public Ledger: "Plenty of action to 'Cardigan' which covers a lot of ground. It is 'America for Americans' with a whoop and a vengeance. You will find the picture entrancing."

Phila. North American: "'Cardigan' and its big events provide many thrills that set one's flesh a-tingle. Paul Revere's ride, Patrick Henry's great speech, the beginning of American liberty are all thrillingly portrayed."

N. Y. World: "A sustained and exciting picture. The ride of Paul Revere is one of the greatest thrills of modern times in pictures."

MARTIN JOHNSON'S JUNGLE ADVENTURES

A Camera Hunter's Invasion of Borneo

Photographed by MARTIN JOHNSON

How many of us can resist the lure and romance of real adventure in foreign lands? The very essence of entertainment is the satisfying of a longing to escape from the prosaic dullness of the every day. "Jungle Adventures" is romance—red-blooded, virile, thrilling—recording the actual adventures of a trip into the heart of a Borneo jungle. There are episodes showing a wild elephant hunt which is the last word in thrills; the shooting of dangerous rapids; the discovery of aboriginal cannibals still using the blow-gun with its poisoned darts; a crocodile hunt. The ordinary screen thrills are tame in comparison. The picture is one of vibrant beauty, of considerable humor, and has a sustained element of fascination not found in manufactured photoplay. Educational as well as entertaining; a novelty your wisdom will probably dictate you to book for presentation to your patrons as a welcome diversion from the studio-made motion picture.

Morning Telegraph: "The background of the Johnson film is a welcome relief from the overstuffed furniture and velvet carpets of society drama."

Daily News: "'Jungle Adventures' should be a record-breaker in popularity among small boys and those older boys who never have grown up entirely. It's the vivid representation of all the boyish dreams about savages and wild venturings."

N. Y. Journal: "Like nothing you have ever seen in Coney Island or the circus. The pictures are splendidly photographed and show the most fascinating phase of jungle travel."

N. Y. World: "By all odds the most daring exploits among savage beasts, crawling inhabitants of the forest and Sulu pirate yet revealed to the eye of man are thrown upon the screen."

Film Daily: "Besides being an unusual offering, inasmuch as the obtaining of these exceptional pictures is concerned, the Johnsons' production has an artistic, entertaining and educational value that is unmistakable—artistic in that, besides the natural beauty filmed, the photography and camera work is high grade."

A Chester Bennett Production

JANE NOVAK IN BELLE OF ALASKA

With NOAH BEERY and FRANK GLENDON
Directed by CHESTER BENNETT

Few stories of the frozen North have been told with more adroitness or more skill or affect the spectator as deeply as this heart-interest story of a girl who loses her identity through assuming the name of a notorious dance-hall woman in order to escape persecution as a murderess, and of the love and respect she instills in the heart of a hitherto ruthless gambler. There is a great deal of action, a primitive encounter, tremendous pathos, a powerful love story, and a mystery that will keep the spectator guessing in this dramatic gem of the screen. The roles are few but are enacted by a highly capable cast in a highly convincing manner.

Moving Picture World: "Logical and carries much human interest. Crowded with moments of suspense that will keep patrons on edge wondering what is coming next. There is also a mystery that will keep 'em guessing, plenty of thrills and dramatic moments, and a real fight that the fans are going to talk about. The picture is true to life."

Exhibitors Herald: "An excellent drama full of action, dramatic situations and 'punch.' A stirring story well told and well acted by a small but exceptionally strong cast. Exhibitors are seeking and need productions of this character. It is excellent throughout."

Motion Picture News: "A story which is not scrambled, but which is simply and differently told; that does not wane in interest and contains a climax that is far from the 'stereotyped' variety. A small but highly capable cast performs in a manner that stamps the picture as a genuine drawing card."

Cliff Smith presents

PETE MORRISON IN DARING DANGER

Directed by CLIFF SMITH

A tale of red-blooded adventure in the grazing lands of the West is depicted in "Daring Danger." Cal Horton, himself a ranch-owner, distinguished for his coolness and fearlessness, as well as for his unerring marksmanship, is delegated by the authorities to clean out a horde of cattle rustlers when an appeal is made to them for protection. The foreman of a neighboring ranch, outwardly meek and "churchly," is really the master mind of the outlaws. He takes advantage of Cal's absence to discredit him and succeeds to a certain point. But Cal, after a series of encounters with the outlaws, routs them. And then has an accounting with his traducer.

Not recommended for short-winded people. There are too many breath-taking scenes; a great many so stirring indeed that your lovers of action will be lifted out of their seats.

JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD'S
Drama of the Hudson Bay Country
JAN OF THE BIG SNOWS

A story that tells of the honor-bound code of the North that holds a woman safe is unfolded in "Jan of the Big Snows," a picturization of James Oliver Curwood's throbbing, human story of the Hudson Bay Country. All of its romance, adventure, thrill and spirit have been visualized by Charles M. Seay, a virile director of outdoor pictures.

Powerful acting, tense situations and scenic splendor are combined in a picture ranking with the topmost of outdoor productions—positively one of the greatest and most convincing of all screenplays from the pen of a prolific and successful novelist. It has challenged the admiration of reviewers as it will that of your patrons.

Motion Picture News says:

"The production creates in the mind of the hardened movie fan the same contented ease that watching a man saw wood brings to the mind of the chronic lazy man. It's hard work to make a picture such as this. It is among Jas. Oliver Curwood's best."

GLENN HUNTER
IN THE CRADLE BUSTER
A Tuttle-Waller Production

Here is, beyond the shadow of a doubt, the GREATEST feature comedy since "Twenty Three and a Half Hour's Leave." Dramatic critics and trade paper reviewers unanimously praised it, rating it 100 per cent. It tells the story of a lad who had been "mothered" and "sweetied" to distraction, and who, on his twenty-first birthday makes up his mind to cut loose from mother's apron strings. The rest is a volley of mirth, romance and melodramatic thrill—all sincerely human. Glenn Hunter, its star, already popular for his portrayal of the title role in Booth Tarkington's stage play, "Clarence," and for his support of Billie Burke in her stage play "Intimate Strangers," became famous overnight on Broadway when the picture was given its New York premiere at B. S. Moss' Cameo Theatre where it ran two weeks to capacity.

Exhibitors Trade Review: "There is so much realism about it that strikes home that the picture is bound to have a wide appeal. With laughs constantly piling up and first-rate thrills and suspense constantly developing, little is left to be desired at the close of this entertaining film."

Evening Journal: "A straightaway, vigorous picture, alive with action and retaining interest to the final fade-out."

Film Daily: "A first rate entertainment that just misses being a knock-out. A thoroughly amusing and entertaining offering that gets away from the usual routine of pictures and seems to strike out for itself. It is unusually appealing."

N. Y. Daily News: "'The Cradle Buster' is a recklessly good movie spread. The direction is fine, the photography awfully good, the plot credible and the entertainment value 100 PER CENT."

N. Y. Telegraph: "Not very often does one have opportunity to view a photo-play as refreshing and as true to life as 'The Cradle Buster.' It makes a good many superspecials look like a nickel."

Written and Directed by MARION FAIRFAX

Originality is the keynote of this story. A young reporter, inheriting a run down newspaper, decides upon a bold scheme to boost his circulation. He stages a fake murder and gets out an "extra." It works like a charm—and better, for the investigation that follows unearths real and sensational news. Then, lo! a body is found in the woods, the body of a well-known young citizen. And those concerned in his expose, seeking to shift the spotlight off themselves, attempt to fasten the guilt on the young publisher and wreck his plant as a demonstration planned to arouse mob passion; things look very dark for the youth when, at the eleventh hour, the mystery is unraveled.

Read These Trade Journal Expressions—

Exhibitors Herald: "If you are in the market for a clean, strong and swiftly-moving story with an element of sentiment and some good acting, don't overlook this one."

Exhibitors Trade Review: "It represents in a forceful way the injustices of circumstantial evidence and the author has woven around the story situations that are compelling and realistic."

Motion Picture News: "The picture with its thrills, suspense and exciting events, its splendid cast and able direction is a mighty satisfactory entertainment."

Moving Picture World: "An ambitious subject with fine entertainment values. Theme offers good possibilities for drama and shows considerable originality. The picture is at all time sincere."

The Film Daily: "A rather original story in which the author aims to provide something entirely new in the way of a murder mystery and succeeds."

SISTERS

Featuring

Seena Owen, Matt Moore, Gladys Leslie

From the Novel by Kathleen Norris
Directed by ALBERT CAPELLANI

"Sisters" is a perfect visualization of Kathleen Norris' novel of the same name, one of the greatest stories ever written about marriage. It represents, in its screen form, the finest work of an all-star cast, the ablest and best work of a great director, and the finest achievement of a great producing organization since its own "Humoresque." No screen play can possibly be more sincere or more convincing. It tells of a young woman who, within the walls of her own home, fights the hardest battle of a woman's life to hold her husband from another woman—and the other woman is her own selfish sister.

Exhibitors Trade Review: "'Sisters' should have a wide appeal. It gets to the very root of why so many marriages are failures. Seena Owen is splendid."

Moving Picture World: "Restrained, beautiful and intensely real. Popular without being common. Its most dramatic moments have increased power because they are subdued."

Exhibitors Herald: "'Sisters' deserves special mention in the year's better pictures. Will please every right-minded, clean-living person. You'll feel good all through after seeing it."

New York Globe: "One of the most interesting problem plays we have seen. The whole thing has been done with admirable restraint by a capable and well selected cast and directed with great skill."

Newark News: "A natural and convincing picture. Vitalized, tense, sincere. Well developed, excellently made and interesting to everyone."

Evening Telegram: "A picture that is intensely human. There is nothing bizarre, nothing flashy; just a clean, wholesome drama of young married life."

New York World: "A fine feature deserving of much success. The work of Seena Owen is excellent and the picture is told with great understanding."

THE HIDDEN WOMAN

With an all-star cast including

Mary Alden, Evelyn Nesbit, Crauford Kent

An Allan Dwan production! The very name suggests action, virility, romance! And these elements are indeed splendidly combined in "The Hidden Woman," a story which tells of a young woman's failure to find happiness in a life of gay irresponsibility and frivolous pursuits. Freeing herself from the more or less contaminating atmosphere of New York's Bohemia, she flees to a small settlement where she discovers that in love and service for others lies the only real and lasting happiness.

Splendidly portrayed by a cast of stars ably directed by a notable director, this interesting story is further enhanced by a varying background that includes scenes on Broadway and in the Adirondacks.

By the way, there's a new sort of fight in "The Hidden Woman." Not a fist-fight or a gun fight, but, for the first time on the screen, a fight showing "hammerlocks," "strangle-holds," and the terrible "body scissors-hold."

MY OLD KENTUCKY HOME

A Ray C. Smallwood Production featuring

Monte Blue, Sigrid Holmquist, Lucy Fox

Directed by RAY C. SMALLWOOD
From the Original Story by Anthony Paul Kelly

The best advertisement for this production will never be written. It is that word-of-mouth boost that your first day patrons, warmed by the homey Southern sentiment and sweet mother-love of the story, emotioned by its human touches, and tender romances, and thrilled by its dramatic fervor and the thunder of its hoofbeats, will speak to neighbors, to friends in the street cars or in the office. Ray Smallwood, who directed many of Nazimova's successes, has given the screen a pulse-quickening melodrama of the South, its traditions, its hospitality, its love of the thoroughbred and racing, and villainy of a crook—the whole inspired by Stephen Collins Foster's famous old ballad. It's a winner! You'll get your best results by booking it for two or more days.

Film Daily: "It has box office values and audience appeal; a good deal of sentiment; pathos offset with comedy; good direction, especially so in the race track sequence. You should make money with this."

Exhibitors Herald: "Good story interest; a strong love story; mighty good racing scenes; an extra special cast; exploitation angles that can be turned into profit by any exhibitor."

Variety: "It is a production that should go out and clean up a whole lot of money. The horse race is particularly well handled."

Motion Picture News: "Carries a tremendous box-office value. Rich in sentiment, heart-interest, pathos, humor. A story that will please nine out of ten persons. The race is packed with thrill."

Moving Picture World: "A heart interest melodrama built around the title of an immortal song. An effective and thrilling horse race is the climax of the story."

MAN'S LAW AND GOD'S

Featuring

Jack Livingstone and Ethel Shannon

Except for one sequence which is brimful of pathos, here is a picture which may aptly be described as CHEERO! It relates of an "indirect-by-mail courtship," something your patrons have probably never heard of before. They'll take to it like a duck to water. It's the story of a correspondence courtship started by a bored old miner for amusement and given impetus by a romantic young girl, and involves this girl, an entirely innocent but dashing young officer of the Northwest Mounted, the girl's maiden aunt and even the grizzly old rascal himself in situations that will make even a hardened old sinner feel at peace with the world. Five spools of supreme entertainment in the shipping case. Get them onto your machines and treat your patrons to a combination of filial devotion, mother-love, tender romance, spontaneous humor, scintillating charm and marvelous scenic beauty; and as they pass out, if they don't tell you they enjoyed it, you'll nevertheless know they did by the jauntiness of their steps and the permanence of their smiles.

THE THREE BUCKAROOS

Written and Directed by Fred J. Balshofer

In "The Three Buckaroos," Fred Balshofer has a plot similar to "The Three Musketeers" paralleling it somewhat in spots and placing it on a western range, with the result that this is positively one of the most original and one of the most refreshing pictures ever made. Your patrons will find it so altogether different that they will talk about it for weeks. The story relates of three hard-riding, sure-shooting giants of the range, silent but devilishly ever-present. Their exploits in fight and frolic, in the defense of women, in championing law and order—and their attraction of a fourth and even more intrepid ranger—are told in a picture as crammed with action as a pomegranate is with seeds, the whole enlivened with mirthful comedy and exalted by a noble love.

"Doug" Fairbanks says:

"A laugh is good for your system, and the other fellow."

If he sees this picture—and he probably will—he'll have a good laugh.

Give your patrons the chance.

Don't overlook this as your "one best bet" among western pictures. Its exploitation possibilities are i m m e n s e. A glance at the press and ad sheets will convince you.

DESTINY'S ISLE

With an all-star cast including

Virginia Lee, Geo. Fawcett, Florence Billings, Ward Crane

Seldom is the photoplay patron offered so much of eye-appealing beauty in a drama of such real heart interest as is found in "Destiny's Isle," a romantic society drama unfolding a moving story of a young woman's folly and heartless intrigue, a young man's gallantry and a girl's admirable sacrifice. Its situations are logical; its continuity smooth; its characters human and real, and their portrayals natural. Added to this. the beauty of its women and the glamour of its background—Miami, the winter playground of America's fashionables, makes of this production an entertainment of distinct charm.

"Miss Miami," the ill-fated passenger-carrying seaplane on which several noted society people lost their lives was used and is shown in this production.

FALSE FRONTS

By S. Barret McCormick

Featuring Barbara Castleton, Edward Earle, Frank Losee

Directed by SAMUEL R. BRADLEY

"False Fronts" is a modern drama of social hypocrisy, from a New York society and club life story by S. Barrett McCormick. The author has based his plot on that phase of metropolitan life termed "putting on a front," the practise of making a bluff at prosperity, and sounds a note of warning of its dangers. The story is that of a penniless youth who puts on a "front" on borrowed money when he comes to New York to seek his fortune. He makes a conquest which leads him into a fool's paradise where the fighting spirit of him curls up and goes to sleep—to be rudely awakened. The picture is one of universal interest—a vividly colored dramatic society play of gripping, and oft'times sensational sequences, capably enacted and smoothly told, and set in luxurious backgrounds.

Exhibitors Trade Review: "This story was written with audience values in mind. Its situations are new and its action fast. The story is distinctly modern—lively football scenes and college hero; society life with all its color and 'false fronts'; big business; life in a thriving, buzzing oil-field district.

The Sun: "'False Fronts' is a wholesale condemnation of making a big show of success, forcefully enacted."

Evening Telegram: "'False Fronts' will be found very entertaining. It permits one to leave the theatre in a very pleasant frame of mind—which is, after all, what we go to the theatre for."

N. Y. Herald: "There is a potent quality in this story of social hypocrisy. The course of the young Southerner is refreshingly different from the customary screen triumphs of bluff prosperity."

N. Y. Times: "When people have ideas which they seek to express in film form they are likely to contribute something imaginative, or at least sincere, to the screen. 'False Fronts' was more simply and honestly done than most pictures of its kind."

The MOHICAN'S DAUGHTER

From the story of "Jees-Uck" by Jack London

Directed by S. E. V. Taylor

Filled with the early romance of a great and vanished race; adapted from a red-blooded story by one of the greatest writers of adventure stories America has ever produced; directed by a "Griffith director" who learned his profession soundly and well; and enacted by an excellent cast, "The Mohican's Daughter" is a production of more than ordinary entertainment value. The 6,000 exhibitors who played to great profits Tourneur's "The Last of the Mohicans" will be quick to realize the opportunity afforded in exploiting this picture to big box-office returns. It tells the story of an Indian girl whose big heart leads her into a violation of a tribal law, which is quickly seized upon by the despised chief of the tribe to force her into marrying him; and of her rescue from peril by a young trader who had fallen in love with her.

HIS WIFE'S HUSBAND
A Pyramid Production

From Anna Katherine Green's Novel "The Mayor's Wife"

Directed by KENNETH WEBB

Here indeed is an audience picture! An emotional drama. A society drama. A touch of mystery as keen in its suspense as "The Bat," which packed houses for over two years on Broadway. Lavish settings. A star who is a star and a ravishing beauty besides. These are the elements which, in the capable hands of Kenneth Webb, have resulted in a great audience picture. It was produced for and will appeal to clean-minded Americans.

New York American: "One of the best pictures seen in town in several seasons. Betty Blythe has never done a better picture; it's gripping."

Exhibitors Trade Review: "Story keenly interesting. Contains much suspense. Builds up a fine climax and should prove its worth anywhere as a first rate attraction."

New York Star: "A box office picture par excellence. It will add glory to Betty Blythe and her director, Kenneth Webb."

Moving Picture World: "It has suspense, an element of mystery, a theme that has always proven popular. Spectator's interest obtained early and held throughout. Blythe does the best work of her career."

New York Review: "A tonic for the nerves, and the kind of stimulant no prohibition officer can take from us."

Evening Telegram: "Although a motion picture, it compares favorably with the stage plays, 'The Bat' and 'The Cat and the Canary.'"

Variety: "Settings suggest considerable money has been spent on production. Likeable spirit of conflict keeps story interesting. Will more than hold its own in higher priced houses every where."

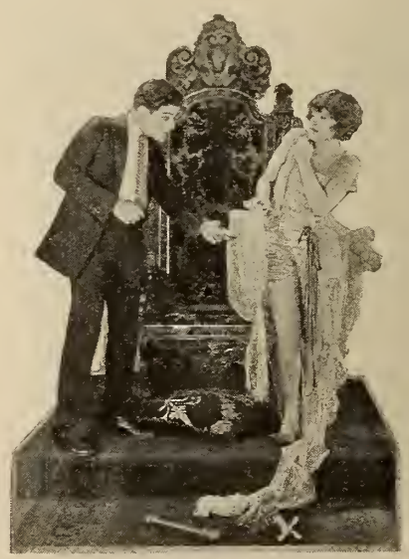
QUEEN OF THE MOULIN ROUGE

With an all-star cast

A Ray C. Smallwood Production



The famous "Red Mill" of Paris! A high spot to the revellers of the Montmarte whose frolics start when the rest of Paris is a-bed. Beautiful Martha Mansfield as the "Queen." The gowns and the costumes from France, but the girls—God bless 'em—from Uncle Sam. That is the glamorous setting for "The Queen of the Moulin Rouge," a play known from Coast to Coast made into a motion picture tremendous in its pictorial and dramatic qualities, vibrant in passionate loves, vital in melodramatic appeal, virile throughout the tremendous sweep of its action.

Ray C. Smallwood produced it as the second of his Pyramid Pictures. His first, "My Old Kentucky Home," has already achieved the success anticipated by its producers. "The Queen of the Moulin Rouge" is his best work. It stands unrivalled among the big pictures of the year in optical and dramatic appeal, and we suggest quick action. Basing your action on the proven quality of Pyramid Pictures as exemplified by "My Old Kentucky Home" and "His Wife's Husband," snap this up now—right now!

Gentlemen:--

Spontaneously, on my own initiative, I write you these words of hearty commendation for the high ideals you incorporate in your economic management, your cooperative plan of operation as among yourselves, your staff and your stockholders. I also wish to express my intelligent appreciation of your purpose to produce clean pictures with a clean cast. This will meet with the enthusiastic approval of hosts upon hosts of patrons of moving pictures.

It was a pleasure to notice in your already successful production, the thrilling compelling scenario, the splendid photographic effects and the conscientious attention given to every detail.

Yours very sincerely,
Albert Elwoott

A Scene from "The Devil's Foot"

THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES

A Real Box-Office Tonic for Every Exhibitor

THE first two of this remarkable series of pictures, "The Devil's Foot" and "The Dying Detective," are released.

Others in the series will be released right through the summer months—the months when exhibitors need the very best the producer knows how to offer, in order to hold up the box-office receipts.

This is the kind of real service that Educational gives.

In addition Educational is increasing the box-office value of these pictures by putting out an unprecedented number of exploitation helps. Available for your use in helping to pack your theatre are 16 distinct and powerful aids:

1. National advertising to 24,000,000 readers through such publications as The Saturday Evening Post and The Ladies' Home Journal.
2. 37 stories, "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes," are being syndicated through newspapers having a circulation of almost 13,000,000.
3. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's visit to America has developed a tremendous volume of publicity for the creator of Sherlock Holmes.
4. Announcement one-sheets for entire series.
5. Unique press sheets chock-full of information for exhibitors. Strong on results.
6. Sherlock Holmes detective badge for distribution to boys everywhere. Exhibitors can afford to distribute them generously because the price is low.
7. Cut-out Sherlock Holmes disguise. Boys will "eat this up" and advertise your theatre in doing it.
8. Snipes—60 to a package, for use on barns, fences, etc., in your neighborhood.
9. Vest-pocket edition of two Sherlock Holmes stories at a very low price, with the inside covers and outside back cover blank for exhibitors' advertising.
10. Press sheets carry part of film story written so you can offer prizes to school children for best completion of story.

11. A chance to tie up with booksellers. Get them to put in window display of Conan Doyle books, giving a place to the announcements of The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes in your theatre.
12. The publishers of Sherlock Holmes—Geo. H. Doran Co., Grosset & Dunlap, and A. L. Burt Company, are placing wide-spread stocks of "Sherlock Holmes" with dealers.
13. Exhibitors can offer prizes to high school pupils for best compositions on Sherlock Holmes, prizes to consist of Sherlock Holmes books. Get the teachers to act as judges. Parents will become interested in pictures at your theatre.
14. Multi-colored slides.
15. 4-color one- and three-sheet posters for each release.
16. Duo-tint lobby cards, 11 x 14; 8 cards to set.

GET aboard this opportunity to fill your theatre this summer. Don't forget that men and women, boys and girls, are all interested in stories of adventure and especially in The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes.

It will cost you only eight or ten dollars to exploit the entire series for your theatre. Less than a dollar a picture. Write our branches for their simple, inexpensive and effective exploitation aids.

TORCHY COMEDIES

Recent Reviews

"BATTLING TORCHY." "Here's a winner." It is not only one of the most enjoyable of the Torchy Comedies, but it is a worthy competitor of any comedy on the market. C. C. Burr has continually offered consistent laugh-getters, and Johnny Hines was never seen to better advantage than in "Battling Torchy." The story is a good one in the first place, the titles are funny without punning, and there are high class gags following one another in rapid fire order. Few prize fight scenes have been done more realistically or amusingly than that which occupies the latter half of the second reel of "Battling Torchy."—Matt Taylor in the MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Lady Hunstanton ..... Gwen Carton
Elsie Farquhar .....

FINELY staged and admirably acted is "A Woman of No Importance," and admirers of Oscar Wilde's dramatic art should find it especially interesting. Plays adapted to the screen invariably develop peculiar problems in treatment of theme and character and there is always the fear that a drama written brilliantly will appear at a great disadvantage when reproduced silently, with only sub-titles to suggest the sparkle of the original production.

FAY COMPTON

Yet "A Woman of No Importance" seems not to suffer in its transition to the screen. Fay Compton, blonde and stately, carries off the difficult title role with an artistry that is wholly convincing. Milton Rosmer as Lord Illingworth is true to the traditional type of British nobleman. Ward McCallister, in the part of the illegitimate son, does very well indeed, and there is a suggestion of resemblance about him to the noble Lord that is altogether artful.

The surrounding programme bristles with entertaining numbers.

Unqualified Praise From England's Greatest Critics

"One of the greatest sensations in the way of emotional entertainment that London has ever known is 'Orphans of the Storm'  Raises film making almost to the scale of Wagnerian dynamics  There is the spiritual insight of Shakespeare in it. One knew that sooner or later Griffith would drive critics to seek parallels for his genius in other paths of arts."—London Express.

" 'Orphans of the Storm' stamps Griffith as a producer of genius  admirably and perfectly done  every child in London should be taken to see it."—London Times.

"With 'Orphans of the Storm' Griffith has set a standard for other producers to emulate."—London Telegraph.

"Contrived on a monumental scale, this picture again demonstrates Griffith is unquestionably the greatest film producer in the world."–London News.

" A masterpiece  a perfect film  the acting of Lillian Gish is inspired."—London News.

Shooting at the Moon has ceased to be profitable in the motion picture industry. The time has passed when prosperity could be achieved through haphazard spending of enormous sums to crowd the market with faulty pictures hurriedly produced to meet an imaginary demand.

SECOND NATIONAL PICTURES CORPORATION

was organized to distribute the best motion pictures produced by independent concerns, and on terms which insure a large share of the gross returns to producer and exhibitor. This is being accomplished by cutting down the enormous expense of distribution resulting from the cumbersome and unorganized condition of the industry in the past, and avoiding the expenditure of huge sums in the pushing of poor pictures which do not justify the expense.

SECOND NATIONAL

secured the rights to twelve notable pictures, featuring Peggy Hyland, Madge Titheradge, Albert Ray and other screen favorites, and enlisted the co-operation of the most efficient established exchangemen in the country. The best product of the independent field now is being offered to Second National, because of the effective method of distribution and the favorable terms provided, for the coming season. Exchangemen are enthusiastic over the quality and appeal of the four pictures so far released in the current season, and exhibitors all over the country are making eager inquiries regarding forthcoming releases.

CURRENT RELEASES

"THE NIGHT RIDERS," in which Maudie Dunham, Albert Ray and Andre Beaulieu represent striking types in the visualization of Ridgewell Cullum's great story of the Northwest;

"BROKEN SHADOWS," an Irish romance from the famous novel, "Nance," by Charles Garvice;

"HER STORY," by Dion Titheradge, featuring Madge Titheradge;

"DAVID AND JONATHAN," picturization of the popular novel by E. Temple Thurston, with Madge Titheradge.

SHADOWS!

What do they mean? Primitive man, fearing them mightily, never understood. In modern times shadows, flickering on a lighted screen, have been made to provide four-fifths of all the theatre entertainment of mankind, in the form of motion pictures. Still there is much misunderstanding in regard to shadows, and especially their uses as photoplays and the effective distribution of the same. Many film companies are groping and experimenting, burdened by enormous overheads which absorb too much of the gross and leave too little for producers and exhibitors. Not so with which by systematic methods, assuring largest returns to producers and exhibitors, is solving the most serious problems of the motion picture industry.

"THE NIGHT RIDERS"—Thrilling Northwestern from the popular novel by Ridgewell Cullum, with Maudie Dunham, Albert Ray and Andre Beaulieu.

"HER STORY"—Tense human interest photodrama featuring Madge Titheradge, speaking stage star of "The Butterfly on the Wheel."

"DAVID AND JONATHAN"—Picturization of E. Temple Thurston's famous novel of love and adventure afloat and ashore, with Madge Titheradge.

"BROKEN SHADOWS"—Irish love story from the novel, "Nance," by Charles Garvice, featuring Isobel Elsom, Mary Forbes, James Lindsay and Ivan Sampson.

An Appreciation

ASSOCIATED FIRST NATIONAL PICTURES, Inc.
NEW YORK

Dear Mr. McCormick:

One of the most important parts of a successful sales campaign for a tangible commodity is environment or the surroundings in which that commodity is set for public consideration. A grand piano in a tenement room or a high priced automobile in a junk yard must depend entirely upon the attractions with which their creators endowed them to impress their value and quality. Atmospheric surroundings, which in quality and impressionism harmonize with the product go far toward enhancing the value, appeal and obvious merits of that product.

To you this has been a conviction which you have symbolized with prologues, settings, orchestrations, and other presentation features to a degree and with a skill that has meant much to popular regard for motion pictures. By your original and practical methods for providing proper and enhancing programs, as settings and compliments to feature productions, you have also provided many other exhibitors with precedent and encouragement.

For all of these things, you truly deserve the appreciation of the industry,

Sincerely yours,
J. D. WILLIAMS, Mgr.

YOUR STAR ADVERTISING SPACE IS YOUR THEATRE FRONT

The ROTO SIGN is the very newest in a moving, illuminated sign for the advance advertising of your next week's feature in the window, lobby, or on the stage.

Outside Put the Big Crowds INSIDE And the DOLLARS In the Box Office

No Theatre Manager doubts that statement. If an electric sign doesn't pull the business, nothing will. Still life doesn't lure the dollars nowadays. COLOR, SPARKLE, MOTION—day and night, that's it.

The word "American" pertaining to electric advertising, guarantees the latest creations in design, substantial construction and enduring finish. All of the better kinds of electric signs known to the trade, and many original and exclusive specialties, comprise our product.

The "American" interchangeable letter theatre sign saves all your usual annual lamp and glass breakage, and is easily manipulated.

Our entire organization, from design to installation, are at your service. We welcome correspondence.

FORTY WORDS ARE SUFFICIENT to tell your whole bill for next week, and will travel automatically and continuously, in illuminated letters, across the face of the sign, one hundred and forty times every hour. IT COSTS LESS THAN ONE CENT PER HOUR FOR OPERATING EXPENSE.

Exhibitors Trade Review

THE publication of the Theatre Equipment Directory Number, which you now have before you, represents the fulfillment of a purpose which Exhibitors Trade Review has had in mind for a long time.

The Theatre is the cornerstone of the industry. Its construction, equipment and operation are of the very first importance. If they are high-class in every respect the interests of the entire picture business are advanced, because the theatre is the industry's vital contact with the public.

Until the present issue of Exhibitors Trade Review came from the press, no attempt had been made to provide the exhibitor with a complete survey of the equipment and accessory field. Nor had a medium been furnished by which the manufacturer and dealer in theatre supplies and the producer and distributor of pictures could reach, in a single trade paper, the whole exhibitor body.

This issue of Exhibitors Trade Review goes to every theatre in the United States, and, in addition, every exchange, every laboratory, every studio, every production and distribution office.

Such an undertaking clearly marks an epoch in motion picture trade paper history, and presents a fitting occasion upon which to discuss the publication purposes and policy of Exhibitors Trade Review.

With distinctive service as its reason for being, Exhibitors Trade Review, fifty-two weeks in the year, devotes itself to constructive work in behalf of the theatre owner and manager. It offers him reliable reviews of pictures, written by experts; exploitation articles of wide range and practical nature; the news of the industry insofar as it has a direct bearing on box-office problems; special articles that inform and help on many subjects; departments devoted to theatre construction and equipment, of which this issue is the highwater mark of the year; complete and accurate release guides; and "The Voice of the Box-Office", a compilation of reports on pictures from first-run theatres throughout the country.

Home of Exhibitors Trade Review—Knickerbocker Building, Forty-Second Street and Broadway, New York City

Special attention should be called to the fact that the book which you now hold in your hand contains a year's report on what pictures actually did in first-run theatres. This is alphabetically arranged, classified by cities, and presented in the simplest possible form so that any exhibitor may determine at a glance the picture record for the 1921-1922 season.

In this issue also, you are provided with complete listings of manufacturers and dealers in every conceivable kind of building material, or equipment, necessary to the picture theatre. These lists are spread over some sixty pages and form one of the chief features of this number.

The editorial policy of Exhibitors Trade Review is built with but one purpose in mind: to serve the exhibitor and serve him in a constructive way. The motion picture trade paper is the only independent avenue of communication between the different branches of the industry. The motion picture theatre is the point at which all the industry's activities focus. Exhibitors Trade Review, therefore, in moulding its policy with a view to serving the exhibitor best necessarily is offering the whole industry the only sort of publication service worthy the name.

The owners and editors of Exhibitors Trade Review believe in the motion picture both as an art and a business. As an art, it is capable of limitless expansion on the side of amusement and education. Because the screen is the most expressive, the most direct medium ever devised, its influence is beyond calculation. We make it our duty to keep the exhibitor constantly informed of new developments in picture-making, for they have a very important relation to the box office. And we support vigorously any movement which has for its object the advancement of the screen in the estimation and affection of the public.

As a business, we believe the motion picture industry is undergoing the same process of growth and stabilization that has come to other industries. We believe the principles and practices that have made other industries solid and substantial parts of the nation's industrial life can be applied and are being applied to this very industry. The application of these principles must be made, of course, with clear understanding that the motion picture has a distinct individuality of its own.

The great currents in the picture field to-day are moving toward business stability. Because that is true EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW believes the industry is due for constantly increasing normal growth and prosperity.

The Theatre Equipment Directory Number will serve you as a permanent reference book for a considerable period. At the end of that time, if you are a subscriber to EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW, a second number of the same sort will come to you; and in the interim you will have received weekly issues that no theatre owner or manager can afford to be without.

OFFICE OF
JULES E. MASTBAUM

June 6, 1922.

Mr. Louis J. Selznick,
Selznick Pictures Corporation,
729 Seventh Avenue,
New York City.

Dear Sir:

Being a staunch advocate of the idea of bestowing praise where it is due constrains me to write and inform you that for downright delightful motion picture entertainment the Selznick production "Reported Missing" with Owen Moore as the star, which we are playing this week at the Victoria Theatre ranks amongst the best for many a day. It is splendid, tingling comedy-melodrama, replete with excitement and thrills and fun, with lots of punch and every other element that goes into the making of real screen entertainment of the highest quality. It is one of those rare combinations of artistry in star, direction, cast and every other detail, even to the most minute, which enter into the making of a picture that merits enthusiastic approval from the public who love motion picture in their most entertaining estate.

That the public has placed the stamp of their approval on "Reported Missing" is evident at the Victoria Theatre where it is going over in wonderful style. On Tuesday the critics of the daily papers were enthusiastic in their praise of the production. The comment we heard as patrons left the theatre illustrated the fact that they too, were given keen enjoyment. But then, with a picture that is so nearly perfect as this one, there could be nothing else but praise evoked. There is never a moment when the entertaining qualities of this production lags and rarely has Owen Moore been seen in a picture that so effervescently combines genuine humor with good melodrama. To sum up, "Reported Missing" is a gem containing 90 per cent of the qualities for pleasure which motion picture fans look for.

I remain

Your very truly,
Jules E. Mastbaum.

READ THIS

From Motion Picture News, July 8, 1922

THERE has been a general call for a "cleanup" in the motion picture industry. Will Hays, Adolph Zukor, the Amerifederation of Women's Clubs have issued edicts which in effect call for cleaner, better, bigger pictures. Carl Laemmle answers this demand with "Human Hearts." Never has a more wholesome, sweeter, thrilling, entertaining story been told on the shadow stage. Here we get back to the "old home folks" those beloved characters which many of us had begun to fear had passed from the realm of screen lore. Here is real life, its joys, sorrows, despairs, its sunshine and shadows; life as it has undoubtedly been lived.

The big thing in this production is its story. It's full of "meat." Although seven full reels in length, one will be surprised at the way the plot holds from first to last scene. There's a host of dramatic situations, in fact enough for several five reelers of average type. King Baggott who directed this one, has put some sure fire heart throbs into it.

We would say that "Human Hearts," approaches 100 per cent. as a picture play. That also goes for its box office appeal. If this is an example of some of the pictures we may expect this fall—well, exhibitors better install larger safes in their houses to hold the receipts overnight.

The cast of "Human Hearts," is one of uniform excellence. So good are they all that one almost forgets that it's just acting after all. First honors go to House Peters, as Tom Logan, who fits the part like a glove. Stepping close on the star's heels for honors are Gertrude Claire who gives to the screen another classic bit of interpretation as the mother; Russell Simpson as "Paw" Logan, whose work as the stern, religious blacksmith of the Ozarks is convincing at all times; George Hackathorne as Jimmie Logan, the half witted brother and Edith Hallor as Barbara Kay who displays histrionic ability of a type that will surprise a lot of folks. Then there is our old friend Snitz Edwards who supplies the comedy relief, Ramsey Wallace in the role of Benton, the convict and little Gene Dawson as Little Barbara. It's a cast that sets a pace for others to follow.

Exploitation Angles—Look up all the superlatives in Webster's well known book and use them on this one. It will stand up under the strongest plugging. Tell your patrons that here is a super-production in the true sense of the word. Play up the fine cast, its mother love theme, its "old home" backgrounds and its abundance of thrills.

Drawing Power—Suitable for the finest houses in the land. Properly exploited it should be a clean-up. Go to it!

A Summer Season "Snow Special"

See the critic's review in The Film Daily, dated July 9th, which says: "'JAN OF THE BIG SNOWS' is a good bit different from most of Curwood's stories and contains no wasted footage on unessential details. You can be certain of pleasing audiences with 'JAN.'"

James Oliver Curwood's

Drama of the Hudson Bay Country

JAN OF THE BIG SNOWS

Directed by Charles M. Seay

There's a strong, elemental force in this human Curwood story of a woman—the only woman at a fur traders' post—protected by the code of the Far North against a designing agent from civilization. It is a story of honor, love and loyalty.

The other trade journal critics have been just as vigorous in their approval. "A picture that will please nine out of every ten picture fans," says Motion Picture News. "It will satisfy all who like strong outdoor subjects; among Curwood's best," says Exhibitors Herald.

Splendid Pictorial Appeal and Good Direction Keeps Story Interesting

Wm. P. S. Earle Prod.

"DESTINY'S ISLE"

American Releasing Corp.

DIRECTOR ..... Wm. P. S. Earle
AUTHOR ..... Margery Land May
SCENARIO BY ..... Not credited
CAMERAMAN ..... Wm. S. Adams
AS A WHOLE .... Likely to please a typical "fan" crowd especially, and those who favor tropical atmosphere and good pictorial values STORY ....Interesting love story of a fairly familiar formula, however; follows the usual South Sea Island romance
DIRECTION.....Good; gives the picture goer a film that is always good to look at and worth seeing PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Excellent
LIGHTINGS ..... Very good
PLAYERS .... Popular players that are well suited and do good work; Virginia Lee, Florence Billings, Ward Crane and George Fawcett a pleasing quartette
EXTERIORS ..... Beautiful tropical shots
INTERIORS ..... All right
DETAIL ..... Adequate
CHARACTER OF STORY..... Wealthy young man, disillusioned by society girl he wants to marry, eventually marries an island girl who saved his life
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .... About 5,500 feet

For some reason or other, a picture containing atmosphere of the South Seas or of Florida's famous winter resorts, always seems to have a very definite appeal to the picture goer. In "Destiny's Isle" it is Miami and a small tropical isle off the coast that provides the spectator with about five and a half reels of very beautiful backgrounds that make the picture a pleasure, as far as visual appeal is concerned, from beginning to end.

The director has shown good judgment in using all the exteriors he could and in the variety of shots such as the beaches, beautiful homes, gardens and bathing resorts. There are one or two fine airplane views of Miami and the coast towns that are especially interesting.

The story is an interesting romance that holds the attention nicely and will satisfy a big enough majority to get it over. Those critical and those objecting to fairly slight situations may find fault with it but even these should find adequate compensation in the feature's pictorial value. The idea of the rich fellow meeting the island girl and falling in love with her is the most familiar angle but the remainder of the story is sufficiently original.

Earle tells it in a straightforward manner and never allows the development to become obvious. You don't know just how it is all going to turn out. Some minor inconsistencies in connection with the island girl's sudden entrance into society and the remarkable way in which she adapts herself to her surroundings are a bit implausible since she had apparently never associated with people of society previously. The subtitles are a bit too "flowery."

Story: Florence Martin permits Arthur Randall to kiss her because she thinks it will make Tom Proctor, whom she loves, jealous. Instead, Tom thinks she is in love with Randall. He goes for a spin in his motorboat, an accident occurs and he is rescued by Lola Whitaker, daughter of an island physician. Florence and her father locate Tom and, finding him with the girl, attack her character. To protect her Tom says she is his wife. The party returns to the mainland where Lola learns Florence loves Tom and she confesses that they are not married. Meanwhile Florence has proven herself unworthy of Tom's love so he marries Lola.

Exploit the Atmosphere and They Should Be Pleased If You Get Them In

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

The average audience will be well pleased with "Destiny's Isle" and unless you cater to a very critical patronage, you can feel certain that it will go over satisfactorily. Play up the tropical atmosphere and display plenty of stills in the lobby that will let them know that it is a story dealing with the Southern resorts. If you can secure a trailer of some of the very picturesque shots, it will be one sure way of arousing their interest and bringing them back.

The curious crowd will be attracted if you will tell them that the passenger plane, Miss Miami, which was wrecked with the loss of several lives recently, is used in the picture. You might do well to make an extra play on this as an exploitation stunt. Use the names of the principal players. There are no stars but Florence Billings, George Fawcett, Ward Crane and Virginia Lee are well known to the "fan" audience.

There is not a better or more pleasing summer season picture now in the market than "Destiny's Isle" with its beautiful Florida and Bahamas out of doors backgrounds and its popular all-star cast of well liked players. The public in a score of cities has expressed its liking for the picture, as well as the critics quoted below.

Film Daily in its critic's review on July 9 said: "Audiences will be pleased with 'Destiny's Isle.' There are fine chances for exploitation in it. It is an interesting romance that holds the attention nicely and will get over well. Visually the picture is a pleasure from beginning to end." Ask our nearest exchange to show it to you now.

"Neilan Gives You An Unusual Picture"

EXHIBITORS HERALD

You can depend upon Marshall Neilan for the unusual. He gave it to you in "Bits of Life," and in "Fools First" he displays an unusual fertility of imagination. The story was "suggested by Hugh MacNair Kahler's Saturday Evening Post story," according to the main title, but Neilan's adroit handling of the story brings out every ounce of suspense value, which is considerable. It is strong meat, but a welcome change from the wishy-washy stuff often dished up for melodrama.

The development of the story is perfectly clear despite its various ramifications, a good continuity being preserved and some excellent bits of comedy introduced to relieve the more tragic scenes of their somberness.

Richard Dix appears in the leading role as Tommy Frazier. He gives an excellent portrayal of a crook who would reform. Claire Windsor appears opposite him as Ann Whittaker, whom you suspect to be a lady crook. She is pretty and natural all the way through and never overacts. Claude Gillingwater is Denton Drew, a banker and a student of criminology. He gives a most excellent portrayal also. Raymond Griffith is "Tony the Wop," leader of a gang of crooks; George Siegmann is Spud Miller, half-brother of Frazier, another crook; George Dromgold plays "Spider" Webb and Helen Lynch is "Blondie" Clark. The minor crooks and character parts are all exceptionally well cast and well played.

Read what the Conservative New York Times and The Film Daily say of Buster Keaton in "The Cops."

Keaton the Feature

"It would take something a lot better than the feature photoplay at the Rivoli this week, to take the honors of the program away from Buster Keaton's new comedy, 'Cops.'

"You must see the comedy to learn of these things—and laugh. Ever since the early Keystone Age comedies have wound up with a police chase, but how many comic heroes have mixed themselves up with a police parade and then had the entire force after them? There's novelty in multiplication, as you will see at the Rivoli."

—The New York Times.

Keaton Rings the Bell

"Once more Buster Keaton rings the bell. His latest comedy 'Cops' is just as funny as 'The Boat' and will bring down the house with laughter. The comedy gags roll out one after another and lead to a side splitting climax in which Buster is chased all over the lot by about 300 cops.

"Never have so many cops been assembled before in a short subject and in no comedy have the devices used to evade capture been so ingenious. And through all this Buster sails quickly and quietly; not once does his serious expression break and not once does he forestall a gag. As the reels unravel the laughs get closer together until at the finish it becomes all one long ripple. Such was the effect, when the comedy was shown to a Broadway audience on a hot, humid night.

"Buster Keaton is irresistible and you can make no mistake if you show him to your audience. His popularity has grown and is on the ascent. He is the chief attraction of many a program and threatens to remain so."

The Film Daily.

AMERICAN RELEASING CORPORATION takes pleasure in announcing its control and distribution of the most sought-after picture of the year, the GEORGE BEBAN production, "THE SIGN OF THE ROSE," which will be booked by us first of all with Mr. Beban and his company of eight players for record-breaking engagements in the big first run houses of the nation—and later on, but not now, to be booked alone without the act. "The Sign of the Rose" is today the world's greatest motion picture attraction.

1 SEPTEMBER 10: "QUEEN OF THE MOULIN ROUGE." Ray C. Smallwood's Pyramid production of Paul Potter's great play featuring Martha Mansfield, Joe Striker and Henry Harmon. Art direction by Ben Carre. A tremendous melodrama.

2 SEPTEMBER 17: "TIMOTHY'S QUEST." A Dirigo Films, Inc., production of Kate Douglass Wiggin's world-known story. Directed by Sidney Olcott. Production Manager Charles M. Seay. Scenario by Katherine Stuart. A combination of "Daddy Longlegs" and "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm." A heart story. All-star cast.

3 SEPTEMBER 24: "FOOLS OF FORTUNE." An A. B. Davis production written and titled by W. C. Tuttle and directed by Louis Wm. Chaudet. The biggest laugh melo-comedy drama of the past two years. Marguerite de la Motte, Russel Simpson, Tully Marshall, Frank Brownlee and Jack Dill in the cast.

4 OCTOBER 1: "THE WOMAN HE LOVED." A J. L. Frothingham production. Directed by Edward Sloman from the story by William V. Mong. All-star cast including Marguerite de la Motte, William V. Mong and eight other well-known players.

5 OCTOBER 8: "WHEN THE DESERT CALLS." A bigger, stronger, better known drama than "The Sheik." A Ray C. Smallwood-Pyramid production featuring Violet Heming, Sheldon Lewis, Robert Fraser and a big cast. A tremendous romance of the desert.

6 OCTOBER 15: "THE PILLAGERS." A story of the far north bigger than "The Spoilers" with an all-star cast of seven big principals. An A. B. Davis production directed by Louis Wm. Chaudet and edited and titled by W. C. Tuttle, the author of "Fools of Fortune." Romance and melodrama.

7 OCTOBER 22: "THE HOUSE OF SOLOMON." Starring William H. Strauss supported by Brenda Moore and Nancy Deaver. Directed by Lem F. Kennedy. This is the greatest Jewish comedy-drama ever made. It is a combination of the pathos and beauty of Peter Grimm and the humor and philosophy of Abe Potash. Produced and presented by Carl Krusada from the story by Val Cleveland.

And The Stars

We likewise take pleasure in announcing to exhibitors everywhere thirteen big-story, big-director, big-star or big all-star-cast productions for the first quarter of the 1922-1923 season, beginning September 10th, at the rate of one production each week, with the definite assurance to the exhibitors of America that we will release 70 productions within the year beginning in September.

8 OCTOBER 29: "FLAPPER LOVE." From Eugene Walter's newest play, "The Flapper," to be presented this fall on the New York stage. An all-star cast including Faire Binney, Lucy Fox, Florence Billings, Huntley Gordon, Joe Striker, J. Barney Sherry, Julia Swayne Gordon. Directed by George Terwilliger, who made the Marion Davies success, "The Bride's Play."

9 NOVEMBER 5: "THE OTHER SIDE." A Hugh Dierker production from the story by Thelma LaNier. This is the man who produced "When Dawn Came," a screen production that set the entire country talking. With an all-star cast of six big names.

10 NOVEMBER 12: "THE DEERSLAYER." Another of James Fenimore Cooper's Leather-stocking Tales. Produced at Glacier National Park by Sacramento Pictures Corporation with entire tribes of Crow and Blackfeet Indians giving the picture the reality it deserves. A story of romance and adventure.

11 NOVEMBER 19: "MILES BREWSTER AND THE SUPER-SEX." A Frank R. Adams production personally supervised by the noted author made known internationally through his stories in Hearst's Cosmopolitan and the Saturday Evening Post.

12 NOVEMBER 26: "AT THE CROSSROADS," starring Seena Owen. This is Harriet Comstock's tremendous new domestic novel that is one of the best sellers today in the forty leading cities of America. The star of "Sisters" and "The Woman God Changed" in the biggest picture of her career.

13 DECEMBER 3: "THE GREAT CITY." A tremendous melodrama of New York's night life; its dance palaces, its bright lights. A cast of big names and a big director. Produced at the Whitman Bennet studios under the personal supervision of Whitman Bennett.

Check all these releases against those of all the other producing and distributing companies in the business; match them, week for week, all the way down the year and American Releasing Corporation will equal or excel the output of any other companies in—Stories. Directors. Casts. Box-office values. Technical standards. WE'VE GOT THE PICTURES.

Catch the box office punch of that title.

Visualize the words spread across your lobby with a smashing big cutout of the girl's figure as shown on the right. It's the subject of the impelling six sheet.

This is a feature with the dramatic lure which sells tickets; the kind of an offering that never fails to pull.

A beautiful, reckless girl who loves to play with fire. A strong, determined man so deeply in love that he would wager his life for her.

A trifler of dubious morals who plays with her adventuresome nature and leads her on. Then the big moment when the hero follows, fights, saves, scorns and forgives her in a final dramatic jolt.

Everything is in your favor. Play it up strongly.

Here is a story that has all the wallop of "The Bat," "The Thirteenth Chair" and "The Cat and the Canary"—three plays that with their elements of mystery have done an unparalleled business in New York; one running two years; the others a year each.

Marion Fairfax has given this clean story the punch of a trip-hammer and audiences everywhere like it immensely.

TRUTH

Production

Everywhere "The Lying Truth" has played, in the best houses, on the largest circuits, in the best neighborhood houses, the title of the picture has drawn the public in past the window.

After the audiences were inside they liked the story; the cast of well-liked players; the excellence of Marion Fairfax's direction and editing and titling of the picture.

Romance and mystery are great box-office elements in a well-made picture. Because mystery has been cheapened and abused in certain cheap productions or in lively serials many exhibitors long ago took fright at the word "mystery."

The biggest book publisher in America, lunching yesterday with the most powerful magazine editor in the world, told us that the largest audiences they can get are obtained through constant publication of romantic mystery stories.

SCIENTIFIC FILM DEVELOPMENT

¶ The old-time photographer pinned his faith to hand development. He poured his solutions over the glass plate and jostled that around in the tray until the image appeared on the emulsion.

¶ Ever and anon he would take the plate in his hand and squint through it toward the light to see whether development had proceeded far enough. Ofttimes he would plunge it into a stronger solution, or a weaker. He had to be an expert to know just what to do, and when.

¶ When film appeared, the old-timer still tried to develop by hand, but when he tried to inspect negative by the roll, he found himself sadly handicapped. Some of his efforts were deplorable.

It was quite a shock to the old-time photographer when the scientists proved that "tank development" with solutions properly prepared gave far better results than he was able to achieve by hand work.

¶ There were good points about developing by hand, but the method was far too slow—and uncertain. If we had to depend upon this method we would never get enough pictures printed to supply the demand.

Now comes the new Tube System, which combines the scientific precision of the tank method with the personal supervision of the photographic expert.

¶ In the tank method the film is kept moving, but the solutions are motionless.

¶ But in the Tube System the film moves in one direction, while a pump keeps the solutions circulating in the opposite direction.

¶ It is not necessary to touch film that is being developed, fixed, tinted, washed and dried by the Tube System, but it is possible to give every foot the same personal inspection that the expert photographer gave to his glass plates.

Producers who desire the best positive prints it is possible to get should telephone Bryant 1939 and find out how low are the rates we charge for our Tube System work.

"The Young Diana"

Paramount—6580 Feet

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

IF this is a sample of what Paramount is going to offer film fans this coming season—well this jaded old world is in for a surprise, at least as far as motion picture entertainment goes. If there ever was a picture that has everything, this one is it. To begin with there's one of the finest casts ever assembled. It includes besides the star, such well known artists as Maclyn Arbuckle, Forrest Stanley. Gypsey O'Brien and Pedro de Cordoba. Second, it is produced with absolute disregard for expense. It is the most lavishly mounted picture Cosmopolitan has ever offered the Paramount program. Third, the gowns worn by Miss Davies constitute a style show which will be a valuable asset for you in exploiting the picture to your fair sex patrons. Fourth, the story has a "different" angle and it holds the interest every moment. Fifth, Miss Davies appears in two extremes of characterization, first as a young girl, then as a woman 20 years older, grey haired and approaching spinsterhood. Sixth, the Ice Carnival scenes will set a new standard for lavishness. Here is pantomime and tableau, color, novelty, beauty—all mixed into a series of scenes unapproached in gorgeousness.

One could go on indefinitely enumerating the wonders of this production. Albert Capellani and Robert G. Vignola have directed the picture in praiseworthy manner and Luther Reed has admirably adapted Marie Corelli's colorful tale to the screen. Miss Davies in this picture has been given her opportunity. Her work as the young girl, then as the aged spinster, later as Mademoiselle Galatea, brings out histrionic ability heretofore not believed to be in her possession.

Joseph Urban's settings are quite the acme of perfection and he has outdone both "Enchantment," and "Beauty's Worth," in elaborate screen mounting. The ice carnival scenes will set a high mark for others to shoot at.

The story is one possessing novel twists. It deals with the hunt for eternal youth which carries the audience through a series of weird and thoroughly enjoyable adventures. Just as one starts to think how unreal it all is, we find it nothing but a dream and we find ourselves immensely pleased with it all and the observer will be puzzled right up to the close, as the outcome of the story. "The Young Diana" is an attraction that should help to usher in the most successful season in the history of the industry.

The Cast

Diana May.....Marion Davies
Mr. May.....Maclyn Arbuckle
Commander Cleeve.....Forrest Stanley
Lady Anne.....Gypsey O'Brien
Dr. Dimitrius.....Pedro de Cordoba

By Marie Corelli. Directed by Albert Capellani and Robert G. Vignola. Scenario by Luther Reed. Photographed by Harold Wenstrom.

The Story—The plot has an English locale and its complications are due to the desire of a parvenu father that his daughter, Diana, shall marry into society. The father has affected interest in science and wants her to choose Dr. Dimitrius as her husband. Diana, however, is in love with a British naval officer. In a dream that carries her through some of the most weird adventures ever pictured on the screen, she sees the commander eloping with another woman and twenty years pass. Dr. Dimitrius restores her to youth, which does not, however, bring her happiness because love has departed.

Classification—A superb picturization of the dramatic story which ran serially in Hearst's Magazine and was later published in book form. Transferred to the screen in lavish and intensely interesting manner.

Production Highlights—The gorgeous gowns worn by Miss Davies. The lavish and beautiful settings by Joseph Urban, especially those showing the Ice Carnival at Montreux. The very excellent cast. The apparent disregard for expense as far as mounting is concerned. The weird home and office of Dr. Dimitrius in Switzerland. The restoring of Diana May to youth. The meeting, 20 years later, of her old sweetheart and the stormy scenes that follow. The deep, luxurious interiors. The fine interpretation given a difficult dual role by Miss Davies, who here contributes her best work to screen literature. The scenes at the Paris opera, where the star as Mademoiselle Galatea startles the French capital with her beauty.

Exploitation Angles—There is no limit to them in this one. The star's popularity. The gorgeous gowns. The Ice Carnival. Drug store tie-ups on the elixir of life theme. Put on a Beauty Show. You can get some great prologue ideas from the Ice Carnival scenes which will also give you suggestions for lobby dress. Play up the name of the author and arrange for book store displays of her works, including this story. This is a picture where the more you spend in boosting it the more you'll get out of it at the box office.

Drawing Power—The finest theatres in the world can put this one on and reap a golden harvest. It should go anywhere, anytime. Exhibitors who can't make money with an attraction of this calibre should open butcher shops—they'll find the bacon there.

MARION DAVIES

IN this exquisite production Miss Davies is offered an opportunity for the display of emotional ability—of a power hitherto unrevealed. In a dual role she is seen in all her gorgeous beauty and magnificent gowns and then as a prim, drab "old maid.'

The strong supporting cast includes Pedro de Cordoba, Forrest Stanley, Maclyn Arbuckle and Gypsy O'Brien.

in "The Young Diana"

THE tremendous success of Marie Corelli's published story, especially among women is due to the appeal of its unusual theme—the transformation of a spinster into a ravishingly beautiful Princess. Its box office appeal is absolutely assured.

Prove this statement and profit by it, by playing "The Young Diana" at an early date in your theatre.

"Sixth, the Ice Carnival scenes will set a new standard for lavishness. Here is pantomine and tableau, color, novelty and beauty, all mixed into a series unapproached in gorgeousness.

"One could go on indefinitely enumerating the wonders of this production.

"Miss Davies in this picture has been given her opportunity. Her work as a young girl then as the aged spinster, later as M'lle Galatea brings out histrionic ability heretofore undeveloped.

"Joseph Urban's settings are quite the acme of perfection.

"The finest theatres in the world can put this on and reap a golden harvest. It should go anywhere any time."

Exhibitors need pictures RIGHT NOW BIG ENOUGH to pull their patrons out of their hammocks, off the front porch and into the theatres.

Right Now is the Right Time to Break up this Hot Weather Habit

Cooler days are near and you need BIG PICTURES to jar your public out of their summer lethargy—pictures that will draw your people off the porch, into your theatre, and make them glad they went. Then they'll go again. D. W. Griffith's is that kind of a picture. It will break up any front porch crowd that ever gathered. And it will keep right on working for your box-office all the rest of the season.

"Orphans of the Storm"

Here's a Live Wire!

The millions who have read and seen that great Dumas romance, "The Three Musketeers," will have the time of their lives when they get hold of this splendid burlesque, "The Three Must-Get-Theres."

There's a lot of money waiting for the theatres that get this comedy feature for an early run. Max Linder is an artist, his comedy is irresistible and his travesty of one of the most popular stories ever told has all the ear-marks of a sensation.

It's a clean-up for the wide-awake theatre-man.

Get 'em to please your patrons, do you, Mr. Exhibitor?

Attaboy! That's the way to take the gamble out o' this game.

The trade papers tell you that "Jan of the Big Snows" is "a good bit different from most of James Oliver Curwood's stories." It is original.

They tell you that Charles M. Seay has used this original material so very well that Mr. Curwood himself officially approved the production.

They say, too, that photographically it is beautiful. That the cast is excellent, etc. and so forth.

And they sum up in these words: "Taken all in all, 'Jan of the Big Snows' is a picture that will appeal to nine out of ten movie patrons, and is a feature worthy of runs in the best houses."

Play it before summer's over; it's a wonderful hot weather picture.

Good Acting and Gold Rush Story Make Satisfying Entertainment

Jane Novak in
"BELLE OF ALASKA"
American Releasing Corp.

DIRECTOR ..... Chester Bennett
AUTHOR.....J. Grubb Alexander and Harvey Gates
SCENARIO BY ..... Not credited
CAMERAMAN ..... Jack MacKenzie
AS A WHOLE.....Satisfying entertainment, built around Klondike days. Many situations, climaxes and changes
STORY.....Biographical and a bit rambling but holds the attention
DIRECTION.....Some good effects but a little uneven
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Good
LIGHTINGS ..... Fair
STAR.....Pleasing and does good work throughout
SUPPORT.....Adequate. Includes Noah Beery and J. Frank Glendon
EXTERIORS ..... Suffice
INTERIORS ..... O. K.
DETAIL ..... Fair
CHARACTER OF STORY.....Young wife separated from husband in gold rush. Falls victim of circumstances but defends herself by taking the identity of a dead companion
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION.....5,000 feet

The "Belle of Alaska" is a satisfying entertainment dealing with the gold rush in Alaska. The scenes are laid in Seattle and Nome in about the year 1899. The story deals mainly with the adventures and experiences of a deserted farmer's wife who attempts to join her husband in Alaska. This role is taken by Jane Novak who does some nice bits of acting and carries the burden of the production.

Director Bennett has achieved some good effects and helped intensify the drama in its many situations. In some places he has allowed a little overacting and has given too much importance to minor details. As a whole he has obtained an interesting and entertaining offering built with familiar material.

The story is a little rambling and events seem to "just happen" as they do in real life. There is little foreshadowing and no accumulation but it holds the attention just the same and deals with a picturesque and dramatic period of American life.

There is but one episode in the entire production that might raise a question in the minds of the audience. This is after the girl shoots the bully in self-defense and becomes a fugitive from justice. There seems to be no need for her to run away from such kind of law breaking, yet much of the story depends upon this unconvincing point.

In the cast J. Frank Glendon and Noah Beery support the star with some good work to their credit. Florence Carpenter and Leslie Bates add a needed contrast of strong and well done character parts.

Story: A farmer and his wife, Ruth, sell their home and set out for Alaska. They are separated in Seattle where Ruth gets a job in a lunch room. She shoots a man in self defence and flees to Alaska. The ship is wrecked before it reaches its destination but Ruth is rescued by a passing steamer. She takes advantage of the disaster to assume the identity of her companion who was known as "Chicago Belle" and who was on her way to a dance hall in Nome. Ruth gives birth to a baby and avoids the dance hall until one of the rich miners wagers that he will make her dance. He turns out to be her lost husband but money and life in Alaska has worked a decided change in him. The former owner of the Seattle lunch room arrives, and fights the evil husband and wins the girl.

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Mention Jane Novak in your advertisements for she has many admirers and a steadily increasing following. Also play up the Alaska idea in the story for this period of American life is romantic and always attractive. You can promise some good acting and plenty of dramatic situations.

And It's Full of Wisdom for Other Exhibitors!

I HAVE been a 100 per cent Paramount user for eight years, and seen the wonderful strides made by this organization, but after looking over the new series "Forty-one Without an Alibi" I feel that if anything in the world will improve the depression that the exhibitors have been going thru the past few months, these "Forty-one" should sure do it.

For the past few months the depression felt by all of us has had a tendency to destroy my faith and confidence in the future of the industry, but the looking over of these forty-one pictures has done more than anything else could have done to restore my full confidence in the future of this big industry, and filled me chuck full of pep and enthusiasm over future prospects. I feel that every exhibitor should get right out and get behind every one of these "Forty-one Without an Alibi," as with the stories, stars, directors and wonderful producing organization, and the still more wonderful distributing organization, the new accessories and national advertising campaign to be carried out as planned, they will be amply justified in using every means at their disposal in properly exploiting these "Forty-one."

I feel now it is up to the exhibitor as Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has given us the stuff, so let's go from here.

Yours for more like the "Forty-One."

A storm picture. A gripping drama in which the rising emotional stress of the heroine matches the sweeping tempo of a furious hurricane.

This girl started something she couldn't finish. She passed herself off as another girl to escape the sting of disgrace. But she couldn't make it go.

Each lightning flash was a threat of her exposure. Thunder echoed the rumblings of her guilty conscience. She bared her heart to the truth, then love came like the rainbow.

You'll get all the action and interest you want in this drama of tumultuous emetions.

QUEEN OF THE MOULIN ROUGE

From Paul Potter's Famous Play

The most colorful and sensational picture ever directed by a man responsible for many of the screen's unusual pictures and Nazimova's greatest successes; the best work of the man whose "My Old Kentucky Home" has been the outstanding hit of the past summer season.

With a cast that includes Martha Mansfield, Joe Striker and Henry Harmon.

With unusual art direction by Ben Carré.

With scenes taken in Paris and picturesque Quebec.

And from the play that gave American theatre-goers a thrill that they still remember.

A melodrama, yes! A love story, certainly! A moving, fast, panoramic picture of the notorious Parisian Red Mill with all of its excitements and gaieties.

This title says to your public: "Come on in! Come on in! Here's a story and a production to hold your interest!"

The August 4

Aug. 7—JACKIE COOGAN in "TROUBLE"

Five reels of joy and laughter with sometimes a sob. Jackie's biggest and best. Your patrons fell in love with Jackie in "Peck's Bad Boy" and "My Boy." They'll lose their hearts entirely when they see this one. Get this quick.

Aug. 14—GUY BATES POST in "THE MASQUERADER"

This is the wonderful story of Katherine Cecil Thurston. It has been road-showed for years and everyone is familiar with the stage production. Mr. Post's wonderful acting is known to your patrons and this is considered his greatest work.

Aug. 21—KATHERINE MacDONALD in "HEROES AND HUSBANDS"

Comes the most beautiful woman in the world, so adjudged by the Chicago Tribune and New York Daily News beauty contest, in the latest of her new series of finer productions. We can guarantee that it ranks among the best this star has produced.

Aug. 28—NORMA TALMADGE in "THE ETERNAL FLAME"

This has been called by those who have seen it greater even than "Smilin' Through." That is SOME recommendation. It is the wonderful story by Honoré de Balzac and it gives Miss Talmadge the opportunity for the most marvelous emotional acting of her career.

Here Are the August Comedies

Aug. 14—SENNETT-TURPIN—"HOME MADE MOVIES"

The best the criss-cross eyed comedian has appeared in up to date. It'll bring the roof down when you play it. A good comedy story with all the inimitable Turpin tricks produced as only Mack Sennett can make a comedy.

Aug. 28—BUSTER KEATON—"THE FROZEN NORTH"

Our own frozen faced comedian in a tale of the frozen trail in the Northlands. It is the most novel comedy with the most novel tricks in the most novel settings that you have ever seen. It's funny enough to shake a tombstone with laughter.

The World's Leading Distributor of Short Subjects

Announcement for 1922-23

IN quality, quantity and diversity of product, Pathe is the world's leading distributor of short subject motion pictures.

This supremacy has come from the unceasing and earnest effort of years, to render to the exhibitors of the nation a service and a product which they could get nowhere else.

Pathe is a specialist in pictures under feature length.

Short subjects are of more importance to the exhibitor today than they have ever been. Conditions which have so hampered the production of true quality features have not affected the Pathe short subject product. That product is better today than it has ever been. Hence short subject programs have come to stay, since they fill a very real need. Pathe offers complete short subject programs of a quality and diversity suited to any audience in the land. Pathe offers also the best so-called "fillers" that money will buy.

Unhampered by the restrictions imposed by a regular feature release, Pathe offers a limited supply of true Special Features. "Nanook of the North" and "The Isle of Zorda" illustrate their quality.

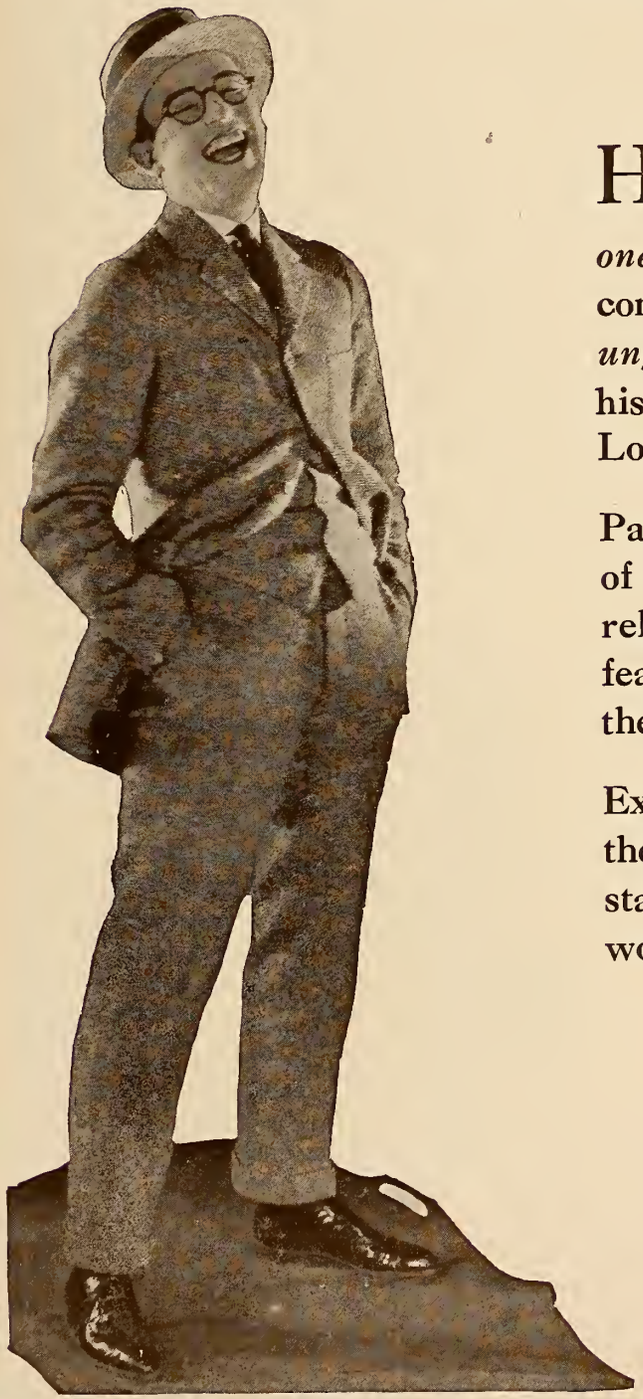
Harold Lloyd

in

Six Great Comedy Specials



HAROLD LLOYD is the only star in the world who has played in one picture in one theatre for thirteen consecutive weeks, with the run still unfinished. At this writing he is on his thirteenth week at the Symphony, Los Angeles.

Pathe announces with pride the return of Mr. Lloyd as a Pathe star, and the release during the coming year of six feature comedies that will represent the supreme effort of his career.

Exhibitors of the nation know that there is only one Lloyd and that he stands alone as an attraction the wide world over.

Now in Two Reels

"Snub" Pollard has won his spurs as the star in one-reel comedies.

His success has demanded a more pretentious product.

Pathe now announces thirteen two-reel comedies starring the little comedian with the big mustache, to be released during the coming season.

Hal Roach, king of comedy producers, will give these comedies his personal supervision, which means that they will be the best that can be made.

The thousands of exhibitors who are playing the one-reel Hal Roach Comedies starring "Snub" Pollard, will welcome this new product with pleasure, —and with profit.

HERE is the most distinct, novel and genuinely humorous comedy innovation of a decade.

A cast of just kids, freckled, tattered and full of spirits, who put the acting of many high priced stars to shame; who deliver a laugh a minute in stories that are gems, assisted by a troup of trained animals and birds that are wonders.

These comedies are irresistible; the hardest boiled critic will hold his sides; and everyone, old and young, will thank Heaven for entertainment so delightful.

Pathe Playlets

THE heavy bookings, the highly favorable comment on Pathe Playlets, have proven that the length of a picture has nothing to do with its exhibition value.

Picture value is based upon the story, director, star and cast. If they are all good, the picture is good, whether in six parts or three.

Pathe Playlets are features with really successful records, carefully selected and re-edited to three parts.

They, with other Pathe short subjects, enable you to present a diversified, intensely interesting program with which you can make money.

What some of the many exhibitors say:

"The Playlets are all Pathe claims them to be."—M. Swedberg, Cort, Luverne, Minn.

"The Playlets are just the thing for the suburban house. We have noted an increase in patronage on each succeeding one."—C. E. Crane, Ideal, S. St. Paul, Minn.

"Pathe claims each Playlet is a 'thrill-packed story.' That's true. Pathe claims that each Playlet has powerful dramatic action. That's true. Am using these with a Pathe serial and Hal Roach comedies, and claim that's the best program in the United States."—Mrs. W. M. Kimbro, Greenland Theatre, Greensboro, Ga.

"I find by booking the Playlets with a serial and the Rolin comedies I have a varied program so that each part will suit each patron and it has increased my attendance to a wonderful extent. This gives the small town exhibitor a wonderful and varied program to suit all at a reasonable feature price and helps to keep the service rental down. One gets as much in the Playlet as in most five or six-reel features."—L. G. Benefiel, Mars Theatre, Pendleton, Ind.

Pathé Playlets

What is a Pathé Playlet?

It is a short feature, in three reels, edited from a PROVEN SUCCESS in five or six reels—a picture distinguished in cast, direction, story and star. The BEST in the original feature has been saved. The Playlet is thus solid meat.

Very many exhibitors have tried the Pathe plan of short subject programs, built around a Playlet. They have found

1—That their program has saved them money over a feature program.

2—That they have given their audiences a greater diversity.

3—That their audiences have greatly enjoyed such programs.

4—That they have been PROFITABLE.

Ask the Pathé Exchange serving you for proof of the above statements—

Short Subject Programs and YOU

Many keen observers have said that the great reason for the poor business during the past twelve months was too much sameness in features and programs.

Isn't it about time for you to give your people something different?

Run a Pathe short subject program, using a Pathe Playlet instead of the feature. Put on the Pathe News, Pathe Review, a Hal Roach comedy, or any of the many combinations we can offer you. You'll have diversity, snap and quality in your program.

Pathe Playlets are features of proven success, big stars, big stories, big directors, re-edited to three reels.

Ask your Pathe salesman for full information.

Produced for Severe Usage

GLOBE Film Reels must be made sturdy and strong. By their ability to meet the demands of the severest service, GLOBE Film Reels hold their leadership.

Day after day, they help project millions of feet of film, dependably and steadily. A few minutes for re-winding and the work goes on.

Every part of GLOBE Film Reels is made carefully. The indestructible brass hub holds the film firmly. No Film Reel has ever been made like the GLOBE; no other can be produced like the GLOBE.

Put GLOBE Film Reels on your working force. With maximum durability—speed in rewinding—projection of film—and safety in operation; the use of them is positive economy.

Latitude in printing is dependent upon film quality or scale of gradation. The most difficult negatives—those with a long range of tones from brilliant highlights to deep shadows—are easily registered, tone for tone, and with latitude to spare on

EASTMAN POSITIVE FILM

Eastman Film, both regular and tinted base—now available in nine colors, is identified throughout its length by the words "Eastman" "Kodak" stenciled in black letters in the transparent margin.

"The Song of the Lark"

ARTHUR MAUDE Author and Supervising Director Direction J.C. HAYDON

A drama of the awakening of a woman's soul, based upon Jules Breton's famous painting, "The Song of the Lark," and Shubert's celebrated music, "Hark, Hark, the Lark." A double tie-up that is rare and with which the keen showman can do wonders, in the lobby and in his house.
