ERRATUM.

An error was committed in our paper of yesterday, in the case of the State vs. Charles M'Gee, f m c. instead of having been accused of receiving stolen goods from a slave, as we stated, was only convicted for harbouring and concealing a slave.

LOUISIANA LEGION.

The Legion was reviewed on the 26th instant, and in the various manœuvres that were performed, evinced that perfect discipline and tactical precision for which it has ever been so conspicuously remarked. Since a few days more than one hundred men have placed their names on the rolls, and the number of those who seek to associate themselves with the corps is every day increasing, and may be considered as one of the good effects arising from the strenuous exertions of our present respected chief magistrate governor Derbigny.

To the different officers infinite praise is due, for the extreme zeal they have invariably shewn; many thanks are merited by those patriotic citizens who encourage the Legion by placing themselves in its ranks, and those public spirited gentlemen who form the municipal corps, have by their kind services enabled the Legion to boast of having as fine a military band as is to be found in any of volunteer regiment in the United States.

The project of revising the satue laws of the state of Pensylvania and of reducing them to a methodical and luminous system, is before the Legislature of the State. A series of resolutions has been introduced into that body and referred to a comittee, who have reported them with amendments.

From the Liverpool Courier, Jan. 28.

Increase of the miseries of newspaper readers.—In consequence of the act of parliament requiring an extra stamp for every supplementary sheet of a newspaper, a mode of giving the required additional matter without incurring a further stamp-duty has just been adopted by The Times newspaper. Instead of giving a supplementary sheet, The Times of Monday is printed upon one entire sheet of paper, measuring for feet in length and three in breadth, and containing 48 columns of matter, of which rather more and 30 are filled with advertisements, being considerably upwards of 90,000 words.—There are 15 columns of reports and news of different kinds printed in small type, and containing more than 45,000 words; and about 3 columns in the larger type, containing more than 6,000 words: so that there are nearly 150,000 words in the paper. This quantity of matter would form considerably more than a thick octavo volume of any of the modern works as they are now printed. Indeed, on calculating the quantity of one of the most recent, and by no means the least closely printed, we find that the contents of The Times of Monday, if printed in the same manner, would exceed by 80 pages the contents of the volume which we have examined. If by the side of this colossal paper we were to place one of the earliest numbers printed under the same title, the contrast would be very curious.—On referring to one of the earliest newspapers printed in this country, we find its contents to be equal to less than 100th part of The Times of Monday. Considering the shortness of the time which must have elapsed between the commencement and the termination of the labours of getting up such a sheet the number of hands employed in every department can have fallen little short of 100. The lovers of quantity can, of course, find no fault of this new arrangement of The Times newspaper, but there may be some who will dread the task of getting through an octavo volume at their breakfast table. To persons, who like to read all that a newspaper contains before they set about the business of the day, the task of swallowing little less than 150,000 words with their rolls and coffee—the feat of getting through the 48 columns of The Times, with a due regard to the importance of its leading article; its news, foreign and domestic; its reports; the announcement of sales by auction of bankers' estates and seats in Parliament, of roan cobs and cabriolets; the infinite sundries of wants and wanted; and last, not least, of births deaths, and mariages—such a feat as this will excite the wonders of the prize ring, or the phenomena of the turf and satisfy the cravings of the most insatiable Helluolibrorum. How the coffee-house keepers, and other heads of places of public resort and entertainment will relish the plan, we know not.

Judge Murphy, of North Carolina, is said to be now engaged in writing a History of that State.

The Western papers say, that Messrs. Townsend and Conear Pittsburgh, have succeded in manufacturing iron wire from N. 1 to No. 36, at the rate of one ton per week, of an excellent quality.

A law has been made in Canton, condemning those who open shops to sell opium, to death by strangling.

It is announced in a Kentucky paper that the Hon. James Clark, who is a member of Congress from what is called Mr. Clay's district, declines a re-election, and that Mr. Clay will be his successor.

Mountains.—Captain Partridge has communicated the heights of numerous hills and mountains in different parts of the United States and Canada, ascertained by himself:—Mount Royal, near Montreal, he sets down at 676 feet above the level of the St. Lawrence; the Monument on the Highlands in Maine, 2002 high; Mount Washington, N. H. 6234; Crow's Nest, Highlands, 1448, Catskill Mountain House, 2214; Mount Mitchel, Neversink, 282; Tomkins' Hill, Staten Island, 307; Hempstead Hill, Long Island, 319; and Weehawk Cliff, 176 feet.

The Ladies at mischief again.—The Supreme Court of Pennsilvania, has lately decided on a curious question. We learn from the United Stateds Gazette, that Chief Iustice Gibson on Saturday last, in the case of the females of St. Paul's church, versus the vestrymen and wardens of said church, decided against the former; three of the associate Judges concurring. That this case may be properly understood, it will be necessary to state that the females, acting upon the letter of the charter of St. Pauls, Church, conceived that they had a right to vote at the election for vestrymen, &c. A last Easter election their votes were refused, and a suit was brought against the vestymen, wardens, &c. for a breach of the charter. The charter reads thus: Any person paying pew rent, shall be entiled to vote, &c.

The Chief Justice give it as his opinion that that portion of the charter was a violation of the Constitution of the U. States.—(N. Y. Courier.)

Antiquity of Chimnies.—If the houses of the Romans had been furnished with chimnies, Vituvius would not have failed to have given a description of their construction. Yet not a word about them is to be found in his works. Nor does Julius Pollux, who made a collection of the Greek names of all the parts of habitations, give a word for them any more than Grapaldus, who in more modern times formed a vocabulary of all the Latin words used in architectures. That there were no chimnies in the 11th, 12th, and 13th centuries seems proved by the curfew, couvre feu, of the English and Normans. In the lower ages the fire was made in a sort of stove, which the law required should be covered up on retiring to bed. The most ancient allusion extant as made to chimnies, is not earlier than the year 1347, a period at which an earthquake, which threw down a great many, appened at Venice. De Gatans, in his history of Padua, on going to Rome, in 1368, and not finding a chimney in the hotel in which he lodged, was obliged to have some built by some masons and carpenters whom he had sent after him. These were the first erected in that city, and the arms of the Signor of Padua were affixed to them, to commemorate the great event.—(Furet de Londres.)
