INTRODUCTION

PURPOSE

This study was made to fill a critical need in the field of Japanese education. The statistical procedures and products of record-keeping in Japan have been entirely inadequate. The Ministry of Education maintains no records of schools not under its direct control, with the result that for information concerning nearly all schools of the elementary and secondary levels, and many institutions of the higher educational level, one must depend upon the prefecture. Even at that source there are no complete records. In almost any area of education, one must collect data from the original sources. One serious gap in the records has been the lack of a list of all educational institutions in Japan. It is this major void which this study is intended to fill.

SCOPE

The results of this study were originally set up as two projects, a "Roster of Japanese Educational Institutions" in 46 prefectural reports, and "Statistical Tables for Japanese Educational Institutions" in 46 prefectural reports, with a summarizing report for the whole of Japan. A little trial use of the first finished reports indicated, however, that the two series would be more effective if combined. For that reason, the two reports for each prefecture have been consolidated into one report.

There are two summary statistical sections. Part One presents in six tables summary numerical and percent distribution data arranged as follows: level by types, control by level, and level by control. Part Two consists of six tables which summarize data by control jurisdiction according to level and type.

The "Roster of Japanese Educational Institutions" constitutes Part Three of this report. It is primarily a list of all institutions which are a part of the regular Japanese educational system, with significant data for each. The project is, in reality, an act of pioneering. In the course of its development, scattered and, in large degree, hitherto unclassified facts have been assembled and made available in an easily referable form. For the first time in the history of Japanese education, there is a composite list of all of the more than 40,000 educational institutions in Japan, a list which records for each its name, date of foundation, address,[1] enrollment by sex and by totals,[2] and the teaching force by sex, by full-time

1. The addresses of separate institutions supplied in this report will be more intelligible if the reader remembers that "cho" means "street," "mura" means "village" or "hamlet," "machi," means "town" or "small city," "gun" means "county" or "district," and "ken" means "prefecture."
2. The enrollment figures are not those of actual attendance on 30 April and 30 November 1946 respectively, but those of enrollment on the school records on those dates.

or part-time classification,[3] and by totals.

The roster is arranged according to prefecture, control jurisdiction, and school level. There are totals for every subheading, and subheading and grand totals for every main heading and for every prefecture. Grand totals have been worked out on two bases of organization, that of control jurisdiction and that of school level.

The two dates chosen as focal points in the collection of data, 30 April 1946 and 30 November 1946, were selected at the request of Education Division, Civil Information and Education Section, for purposes of comparison regarding developments in the educational program.

Since this series of reports is based upon data collected before changes in the organization of the educational system were effected, the categories used are those into which schools fell before the 6-3-3-4 system was inaugurated in Japan,[4] and the terms employed are translations of the Japanese nomenclature. The terminology used to indicate the broad levels of education are those currently used in the United States: elementary, including kindergarten, primary, and grammar grades; secondary, including high schools and preparatory schools; and higher, including schools of junior college, college, and university level.

Within each of these broad levels, however, terminology is not so simple or so clear. The various types of schools in Japan are numerous, over-lapping, and confusing to the uninitiated. Some of the group names might be almost meaningless without explanation. They are not uniformly defined in some cases even by the Japanese.

There are three control jurisdictions in the Japanese educational system: (1) national, which includes both "Government" or Ministry of Education control, and that of other ministries which conduct specialized educational institutions; (2) "public control," or that exercised by any level of government below the central national level, such as that by the prefecture (ken), metropolis (to), city (shi), town (machi), or village (mura); and (3) "private control." Schools of the three educational levels fall within these three control jurisdictions.

The Ministry of Education has exercised extensive powers in educational matters at all levels and over schools under all jurisdictions except those under other ministries. Through the use of standardized texts and curricula, and through directives of many sorts for every purpose, it has exerted tremendous control over even those schools supposedly under other jurisdictions. An unusual fact concerning this aspect of Japanese education is that control does not include financial support or appointing power for prefectural and local schools. Money for the maintenance of schools is appropriated by the national Government, and for all practical effects much of the control exercised over school matters is in the hands of the Ministries

3. Statistics for both full-time and part-time teachers are given. Where there are both types in a school, the second figure in the column, following the dash, represents the number of part-time teachers.

4. As rapidly as possible the shinsei chu gakko (lower secondary school) and shinsei koto gakko (upper secondary school) system is being established, but practical difficulties have made it impossible to effect a complete change-over. The standardization of institutions on the higher education level as four-year degree granting institutions is also in progress, but the pace of this development, likewise, is limited by practical difficulties.

of Finance and of Home Affairs, who obtain their power through control of the national budget and of Civil Service appointment respectively. Within the limitations imposed by the powers of these two ministries, the Ministry of Education has enjoyed a high degree of centralized control. Its direct control, however, is applied only to a limited group of institutions.

In 1946 the Ministry of Education exercised complete or "direct" control over only certain schools, mainly on the higher education level. These included the seven Teikoku daigaku (Imperial universities), which enjoyed generally accepted prestige as superior institutions for advanced learning, and the daigaku (ordinary universities), which were not granted such high favors either in personnel or equipment, and consequently were not accorded comparable esteem. These two types of universities were analogous roughly to both senior colleges and universities in the United States. Other types of schools under the complete control of the Monbusho were senmon gakko (colleges), which usually did not grant degrees, and, in many ways, corresponded to junior colleges, and koto gakko (higher schools), which were even more unclassifiable, being a kind of cross between preparatory schools and junior colleges. Also under Ministry of Education jurisdiction were koto shihan gakko (higher normal schools), or a level similar to that of senmon gakko, but with more specialized purposes, being established expressly for the purpose of training teachers, and shihan gakko (normal schools), at first considered of secondary level, but in 1935 placed on the higher education level. The course of study for shihan gakko was three years in length, whereas that for the higher normal schools was four years. Some special schools, such as mo gakko (schools for the blind), roa gakko (schools for the deaf and deaf mutes), and moa gakko (schools for the blind and mute), were under Ministry of Education jurisdiction.

Public control covered all institutions conducted and regulated by governmental units lower than the national level, i.e: prefectural, municipal, town, or village governments. In Japan in 1946, public control covered a much wider range of school levels than did the Ministry of Education control. On the higher education level were universities, colleges, higher schools, normal schools, and a few special schools, all of the types under the "direct control" of the Ministry of Education, with the exception of Imperial universities. In addition, publicly controlled institutions included also schools of the secondary and elementary levels. Jitsugyo gakko (vocational schools) were numerous and varied. Chuo gakko (middle schools) were schools of high school level established for boys. Koto jo gakko (girls' high schools) were established for girls as substitutes for middle schools. Seinen gakko (youth schools) were institutions established to take care of the further education of students who had finished elementary training but who were unable to attend regular schools of the secondary level. Often they were night schools. Sho gakko (elementary schools, after 1941 called kokumin gakko, or national schools) and yochien (kindergartens) require no special explanation.

Private control meant substantially what the term means in the States, control exercised by an individual or group of individuals independently of government on any level, with support coming from nongovernmental ccurces. One chief difference, however, between both public and private schools in Japan and public and private schools in the States, was that in Japan the central Governmental agency for education (the Ministry of Education) exerted much more power over the management of schools than does the Federal Government in the United States, a power which was described as "indirect control." The scope of jurisdiction for privately controlled institutions was identical with that of public jurisdiction, including institutions on all levels and of all types except Teikoku daigaku (Imperial Universities). The chart on pages iv to vi indicates by level the type of schools under each of the three control jurisdictions in 1946.

SOURCE OF DATA

The Ministry of Education, in serving as the data-collecting agent, has played an invaluable part in this work. In the summer of 1946 Ministry of Education officials and Civil Information and Education Section researchers evolved a form which served as the basis for securing the desired information. Through the Ministry of Education, prefectural education divisions, and local education officials, the data were gradually secured from the individual schools. Not enough can be said in praise of the patience and enthusiasm of the Ministry in their cooperation with Civil Information and Education Section to make this an accurate and effective study.

EVALUATION OF DATA

Throughout the preparation of this report, workers in Education Research were in constant touch with Ministry of Education officials to check the materials as they were received from the individual schools. Figures were carefully checked and scrutinized. As discrepancies or ambiguities in data were discovered they were rectified and clarified insofar as checking made correction possible. While a high degree of accuracy was thus achieved, the materials are still subject to the limitations inherent in Japanese statistics and in the reporting from individual schools.

INTRODUCTION

PURPOSE

This study was made to fill a critical need in the field of Japanese education. The statistical procedures and products of record-keeping in Japan have been entirely inadequate. The Ministry of Education maintains no records of schools not under its direct control, with the result that for information concerning nearly all schools of the elementary and secondary levels, and many institutions of the higher educational level, one must depend upon the prefecture. Even at that source there are no complete records. In almost any area of education, one must collect data from the original sources. One serious gap in the records has been the lack of a list of all educational institutions in Japan. It is this major void which this study is intended to fill.

SCOPE

The results of this study were originally set up as two projects, a "Roster of Japanese Educational Institutions" in 46 prefectural reports, and "Statistical Tables for Japanese Educational Institutions" in 46 prefectural reports, with a summarizing report for the whole of Japan. A little trial use of the first finished reports indicated, however, that the two series would be more effective if combined. For that reason, the two reports for each prefecture have been consolidated into one report.

There are two summary statistical sections. Part One presents in six tables summary numerical and percent distribution data arranged as follows: level by types, control by level, and level by control. Part Two consists of six tables which summarize data by control jurisdiction according to level and type.

The "Roster of Japanese Educational Institutions" constitutes Part Three of this report. It is primarily a list of all institutions which are a part of the regular Japanese educational system, with significant data for each. The project is, in reality, an act of pioneering. In the course of its development, scattered and, in large degree, hitherto unclassified facts have been assembled and made available in an easily referable form. For the first time in the history of Japanese education, there is a composite list of all of the more than 40,000 educational institutions in Japan, a list which records for each its name, date of foundation, address,[1] enrollment by sex and by totals,[2] and the teaching force by sex, by full-time

1. The addresses of separate institutions supplied in this report will be more intelligible if the reader remembers that "cho" means "street," "mura" means "village" or "hamlet," "machi," means "town" or "small city," "gun" means "county" or "district," and "ken" means "prefecture."
2. The enrollment figures are not those of actual attendance on 30 April and 30 November 1946 respectively, but those of enrollment on the school records on those dates.

or part-time classification,[3] and by totals.

The roster is arranged according to prefecture, control jurisdiction, and school level. There are totals for every subheading, and subheading and grand totals for every main heading and for every prefecture. Grand totals have been worked out on two bases of organization, that of control jurisdiction and that of school level.

The two dates chosen as focal points in the collection of data, 30 April 1946 and 30 November 1946, were selected at the request of Education Division, Civil Information and Education Section, for purposes of comparison regarding developments in the educational program.

Since this series of reports is based upon data collected before changes in the organization of the educational system were effected, the categories used are those into which schools fell before the 6-3-3-4 system was inaugurated in Japan,[4] and the terms employed are translations of the Japanese nomenclature. The terminology used to indicate the broad levels of education are those currently used in the United States: elementary, including kindergarten, primary, and grammar grades; secondary, including high schools and preparatory schools; and higher, including schools of junior college, college, and university level.

Within each of these broad levels, however, terminology is not so simple or so clear. The various types of schools in Japan are numerous, over-lapping, and confusing to the uninitiated. Some of the group names might be almost meaningless without explanation. They are not uniformly defined in some cases even by the Japanese.

There are three control jurisdictions in the Japanese educational system: (1) national, which includes both "Government" or Ministry of Education control, and that of other ministries which conduct specialized educational institutions; (2) "public control," or that exercised by any level of government below the central national level, such as that by the prefecture (ken), metropolis (to), city (shi), town (machi), or village (mura); and (3) "private control." Schools of the three educational levels fall within these three control jurisdictions.

The Ministry of Education has exercised extensive powers in educational matters at all levels and over schools under all jurisdictions except those under other ministries. Through the use of standardized texts and curricula, and through directives of many sorts for every purpose, it has exerted tremendous control over even those schools supposedly under other jurisdictions. An unusual fact concerning this aspect of Japanese education is that control does not include financial support or appointing power for prefectural and local schools. Money for the maintenance of schools is appropriated by the national Government, and for all practical effects much of the control exercised over school matters is in the hands of the Ministries

3. Statistics for both full-time and part-time teachers are given. Where there are both types in a school, the second figure in the column, following the dash, represents the number of part-time teachers.

4. As rapidly as possible the shinsei chu gakko (lower secondary school) and shinsei koto gakko (upper secondary school) system is being established, but practical difficulties have made it impossible to effect a complete change-over. The standardization of institutions on the higher education level as four-year degree granting institutions is also in progress, but the pace of this development, likewise, is limited by practical difficulties.

of Finance and of Home Affairs, who obtain their power through control of the national budget and of Civil Service appointment respectively. Within the limitations imposed by the powers of these two ministries, the Ministry of Education has enjoyed a high degree of centralized control. Its direct control, however, is applied only to a limited group of institutions.

In 1946 the Ministry of Education exercised complete or "direct" control over only certain schools, mainly on the higher education level. These included the seven Teikoku daigaku (Imperial universities), which enjoyed generally accepted prestige as superior institutions for advanced learning, and the daigaku (ordinary universities), which were not granted such high favors either in personnel or equipment, and consequently were not accorded comparable esteem. These two types of universities were analogous roughly to both senior colleges and universities in the United States. Other types of schools under the complete control of the Monbusho were senmon gakko (colleges), which usually did not grant degrees, and, in many ways, corresponded to junior colleges, and koto gakko (higher schools), which were even more unclassifiable, being a kind of cross between preparatory schools and junior colleges. Also under Ministry of Education jurisdiction were koto shihan gakko (higher normal schools), or a level similar to that of senmon gakko, but with more specialized purposes, being established expressly for the purpose of training teachers, and shihan gakko (normal schools), at first considered of secondary level, but in 1935 placed on the higher education level. The course of study for shihan gakko was three years in length, whereas that for the higher normal schools was four years. Some special schools, such as mo gakko (schools for the blind), roa gakko (schools for the deaf and deaf mutes), and moa gakko (schools for the blind and mute), were under Ministry of Education jurisdiction.

Public control covered all institutions conducted and regulated by governmental units lower than the national level, i.e: prefectural, municipal, town, or village governments. In Japan in 1946, public control covered a much wider range of school levels than did the Ministry of Education control. On the higher education level were universities, colleges, higher schools, normal schools, and a few special schools, all of the types under the "direct control" of the Ministry of Education, with the exception of Imperial universities. In addition, publicly controlled institutions included also schools of the secondary and elementary levels. Jitsugyo gakko (vocational schools) were numerous and varied. Chuo gakko (middle schools) were schools of high school level established for boys. Koto jo gakko (girls' high schools) were established for girls as substitutes for middle schools. Seinen gakko (youth schools) were institutions established to take care of the further education of students who had finished elementary training but who were unable to attend regular schools of the secondary level. Often they were night schools. Sho gakko (elementary schools, after 1941 called kokumin gakko, or national schools) and yochien (kindergartens) require no special explanation.

Private control meant substantially what the term means in the States, control exercised by an individual or group of individuals independently of government on any level, with support coming from nongovernmental sources. The chief difference, however, between both public and private schools in Japan and public and private schools in the States, was that in Japan the central Governmental agency for education (the Ministry of Education) exerted much more power over the management of schools than does the Federal Government in the United States, a power which was described as "indirect control." The scope of jurisdiction for privately controlled institutions was identical with that of public jurisdiction, including institutions on all levels and of all types except Teikoku daigaku (Imperial Universities). The chart on pages iv to vi indicates by level the type of schools under each of the three control jurisdictions in 1946.

SOURCE OF DATA

The Ministry of Education, in serving as the data-collecting agent, has played an invaluable part in this work. In the summer of 1946 Ministry of Education officials and Civil Information and Education Section researchers evolved a form which served as the basis for securing the desired information. Through the Ministry of Education, prefectural education divisions, and local education officials, the data were gradually secured from the individual schools. Not enough can be said in praise of the patience and enthusiasm of the Ministry in their cooperation with Civil Information and Education Section to make this an accurate and effective study.

EVALUATION OF DATA

Throughout the preparation of this report, workers in Education Research were in constant touch with Ministry of Education officials to check the materials as they were received from the individual schools. Figures were carefully checked and scrutinized. As discrepancies or ambiguities in data were discovered they were rectified and clarified insofar as checking made correction possible. While a high degree of accuracy was thus achieved, the materials are still subject to the limitations inherent in Japanese statistics and in the reporting from individual schools.
