DECLASSIFIED E. O. 12065 SECTION 3-402 / NNDG NO. 775013

Footnotes:

*/ Source: Insurance Bureau, Ministry of Welfare. The number of cases and amounts shown are those certified; they may be larger or smaller than those actually paid, depending on the carry-over from the preceding and to the following periods. Pensions are due and payable quarterly but frequently beneficiaries permit several installments to accumulate prior to claiming them at their respective post offices. The pension amounts shown are annual amounts. The lump-sum grants shown are non-recurrent one-time payments. Thus lump-sum grants are listed only once, in the month in which they were certified for payment. Pension cases and amounts, on the other hand, are listed each month in the aggregate, i.e., those certified for payment prior to the current month plus those certified for the first time during that month, minus those terminated during the month.

The ensuing summary of benefit provisions is asof 1 August 1948, the date on which a revision in the system took effect. For a summary of earlier provisions, see PH&W Weekly Bulletin No. 97, "Social Insurance Statistics" and notes to table attached thereto.

a/ One-time lump-sum grants in lieu of old-age pension. They are paid to persons reaching the age of 50 who had withdrawn from the system after having been insured for five years or more but short of completing the period required to qualify for an old-age pension. Females insured withdrawing by reason of marriage or childbirth receive a grant immediately upon withdrawal, if covered for only six months or more prior thereto. Receipt of (Health Insurance,) sickness and injury, or maternity allowance or of unemployment benefits temporarily disqualifies the recipient from becoming eligible for a retirement allowance. Depending on the length of covered employment, the benefit will amount to 15 to 510 times the average daily wage but not exceed 22 times the average monthly wage.

b/ One-time lump-sum grants payable for minor disabilities of other than occupational origin (except those decided prior to 1 September 1947, the date on which the Workmen's Accident Compensation Insurance Law took effect) provided the insured had been in covered employment at least six months prior to the incidence of the disabling sickness or injury. The amount is a flat sum corresponding to 10 times the average monthly wage.

c/ One-time lump-sum grants paid to survivors who cannot qualify as pensioners, provided the insured died for other than occupational causes (or else prior to 1 September 1947) and failed to receive at least six annual instalments of the pension to which he was entitled. The amount is to be the greater of two multiples, to wit, six times the annual amount of the old-age pension to which the deceased was entitled or ten times the monthly wage on which the invalidity pension to which he might have been entitled under this Law would have been computed.

d/ The yen figures refer to annual pension amounts. To date old-age pensions have not become payable.

g/ Payable after six months of covered employment (three years, prior to 1 September 1947). Invalidity due to job-connected causes for which pensions are paid under the Workmen's Accident Compensation Insurance Law is not compensable under this program until after the exhaustion of benefit rights under the W.A.C.I. Law. However, the above numbers include many occupational invalidity pensions originating prior to 1 September 1947, the date on which that Law took effect. Since the average amount of these older (occupational) pensions was considerably below the level of the (occupational) pensions certified since that date under the W.A.C.I. Law, the former were raised five-fold under a recent revision of the Welfare Pension Insurance Law effective 1 August 1948.

Pensions currently certified under this law will vary in annual amount, depending on the degree of invalidity, from four to five times the average monthly wage for the last three months of employment plus an additional four times the average daily wage for each year of covered employment in excess of 20. In severe cases this amount will be increased by ¥2,400 in respect to the spouse of theinvalidity pensioner and each dependent child.

i/ At the present time all survivors' pensions paid under Welfare Pension Insurance, with the exception of the so-called widow(er)'s and surviving child's pensions (see subsequent notes), are in respect of deaths due to job-connected causes, which occurred prior to 1 September 1947 (the date on which the Workmen's Accident Compensation Law took effect). Although the amount of the pensions certified prior to that date was determined according to the occupational pension rate more favorable to the insured, they were considerably below the level of (occupational) pensions certified since then under the Workmen's Accident Compensation Law. In order to make all (occupational) survivors' pensions more nearly equal, those certified prior to 1 September 1947 were raised five-fold by a recent revision of the law effective 1 August 1948.

After 1 September 1947 survivors' pensions will become payable under Welfare Pension Insurance only upon fulfillment of the 20-year qualifying period (15 years for miners) required under the law. In amount they will equal one-half the old-age pension which would have been payable plus an additional ten times the average daily wage of the deceased for each dependent child. Expressed differently, this amount will equal two months' average wages plus an additional ten times the average daily wage for each year in covered employment in excess of 20, plus the stated addition for each dependent child.

k/ Payable to a widow (age 50 or over) or widower (age 55 or over) of an insured who was covered for six months or more but less than 20 years and

who died either within two years from a sickness contracted prior to loss of coverage or, without time limit, from a severe degree of invalidity entitling him to an invalidity pension. The pension amounts to two times the average wage of the deceased while covered. This annual amount is increased by ¥ 2,400 in respect of each dependent child surviving.

b/ Payable to a dependent child surviving the insured fulfilling the above conditions. The annual amount of the pension is determined as above with the additional ¥ 2,400 applying to each additional dependent child surviving.
