NEW-ORLEANS:
THURSDAY MORNING, AUGUST 22, 1844.

THE CONVENTION.

We look upon the proposition of Hotomon Downs in the Convention, to substitute the first Monday in September for the first Monday in July, as the period for holding our State elections, as a most outrageous attempt to disfranchise a large number of citizens of Louisiana. It is almost equal to the Gerrymandering plan of apportionment offered by the same immaculate democrat. There can be but little objection to the elections being held in Louisiana at the beginning of July because in the first place there city is invariably healthy at that time, and in the second place, the number of those who leave for the north before July is limited, and if they choose to go away and renounce the privilege of their franchise, when there is no excuse for their departure, the fault is theirs. But in September, not only are fully one-third of our citizens absent, but nearly every year the city is desolated by the visitation of an epidemic, from which the unacclimated properly and prudently fly. The object of fixing the elections for September, regardless of the pestilence, is clearly to disfranchise the whig merchants whom business call away, or the yellow fever drives across the Lake. It is a project just worthy the conceptions of the clique of radicals in the Convention who are determined, if unjust legislation and political Gerrymandering can effect it, to convert New Orleans into a locofoco stronghold.—The whigs in large numbers voted for a Convention, and are ready to vote for the new Constitution, provided it dispenses any thing approaching to equal justice to all. But we warn those who are making the Convention an instrument of party manoeuvre and intrigue, that the people will be unwilling to sanction their attempts, and we trust that all, whether whigs or democrats, who are really desirous of amending those defects which exist in the present Constitution, and of seeing their labors ratified by the people, will unite in preventing the perpetration of gross injustice upon any class of our citizens.

THE CAUSE IN OHIO.

The converts to whiggery are so numerous that it is scarcely possible for an editor, however industrious, to record even their names, much less their letters stating their reasons for their change. We noticed a day or two since the renunciation of locofoceism by THIRTY-FIVE workmen in the Junnita furnace, Perry county, Pennsylvania; and a few days previous the conversion to whiggery of TWENTY-FOUR men in Nine, in Northumberland county, in the same State. In Ohio the renunciations are more numerous. We have, heretofore, made known a large number, and we find in a late Cincinnati paper, the names of TWENTY-FOUR more From Erie county, there are three, Messrs. P. H. Cavanagh, James Kridler and Robert H. Lightcap, from Richland, Jessee Newe; from Portage, Joseph Lyman, a delegate from the district in the Baltimore Convention, which nominated Polk and Dallas. From Geauga, we have James C. Cleveland, a worthy mechanic. From Geauga, Perry Joslin; from Muskingum, three gentlemen—names not given—who were president, treasurer and secretary of the Van Buren Club in 1840. From Franklin, we have the renunciation of John Burkhart, from Washington, that of William Wilson; from Ross, those of Thomas Carrigin and George Shehan; from Adams, that of Jacob Emerich, from Darke, no less than seven, viz: James Taylor, Eli Cable, Jacob Scheffer, Frederick Dively, David Walk, Thomas Brumsit, Andrew Gross; from Clermont, those of J. H. Wilmington and L. Parker. Nearly all of these new converts explain their reasons for abandoning locofoceism in brief and sensible letters, but their publication encroach too much on our disposable space. These renunciations show that the good work goes on gloriously in the Buckeye State. The example just set by Indiana will be nobly emulated by Ohio. Kentucky must follow next, for no other State will make a gallant effort to wrest them from the locofocos who wear them. The zeal, enthusiasm and activity of the whigs of Ohio are scarcely paralleled by the triumphant contest of 1840.

LOCOFOCO MENDACITY.

The N. Y. Journal of Commerce—professedly a neutral print, but in reality deadly opposed to the whig party, attempts to ward off the stunning blow which Locofoceism has received from the Indiana elections, by pretending that the returns are inaccurate, false and inconclusive. The Journal of Commerce gets these returns from the Cincinnati papers of the 8th. Now it appears that we—who exchange with both Whig and Locofoco papers in the West—have seen Louisville papers of the 13th and Cincinnati and Indiana papers of the 10th, which justify in most respects the returns published in the New York papers, and add other returns showing that the whigs had thus far elected 50 Representatives and the locos 26—he whigs 6 Senators and the locos 2. The whig papers have no object to gain by misrepresenting the truth, and their accounts may generally be relied upon. They are subject of course occasionally to be deceived by false reports, but we do not believe one of them capable of practising so poor a game of deception, which the loco of a few days must inflexibly expose.

What, however, shall we say of the shameless mendacity of some of our opponents, such as the Nashville Union of the 13th, which paper, because a grand Locofoco Convention was to assemble in that town on the 15th, for the purpose of encouraging the "party" unscrupulously maintains that the Locofocos have carried Kentucky, North Carolina and Indiana!!! After this the loco locos can keep quiet about whig trickery.—There is nothing we have yet seen to equal the sublime effrontery of the Editor of the Nashville Union.

NEW WORKS.—We are indebted to the publishers through J. B. STREET, No. 14, Camp, for the following new publications:—

The Autobiography of Heinrich Stilling, late Aulic Counsellor of the Grand Duke of Baden, translated from the German, by S. Jackson. It is the life of a man who rose to the highest eminence and station from the humblest sphere of life. It possesses the interest of a romance, and abounds in moral instruction, conveyed in the most striking and attractive form.

The Heiress—Family and other Tales, by Frederika Bremer. This volume contains some of the most charming and recent of Miss Bremer's fictions. We need no commend them They will be universally read and universally admired.

The foregoing are from the press of Harper and Brothers.

We have likewise received Parts vii. and viii. of the "Cyclopædia of Practical Medicine," a most excellent periodical, conducted by some of the first medical men of the day. "The Log Cabin, or the World before You;" a neat little volume, from the Applecot's, designed for youths; and the 2d number of the "Polyglot," or collection of Extracts from the best authors in various languages, by Mr. Klopstein of Charleston.

☞ We noticed a day or two since an immense whig gathering at Springfield, Mass. The papers received by yesterday's mail give full accounts of it. There were upwards of 20,000 persons present, too numerous an auditory for any one speaker, so that several stands were provided and the multitude were thus addressed by two or three orators at the same time. Among the speakers we noticed the names of Francis Granger, Rufus Choate, Daniel Webster, Robert C. Winthrop and other distinguished men.

DEATH OF MR. MUHLENBERG.—The Philadelphia papers announce the sudden and unexpected demise of the Hon. HENRY A. MUHLENBERG, the Locofoco candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania. He was struck with apoplexy about 8 o'clock in the evening of the 10th inst., while sitting at the front door of his dwelling in Reading, Berk Co. when taken up he was found insensible, and expired in a few hours.

☞ These Locofocos are charming chaps; so easily satisfied, so content to be thrashed at every political contest, provided they are not utterly annihilated. They are rejoicing just now at the whig victories in North Carolina, Indiana and Kentucky, because the whig majorities in those States at the Presidential election of 1840, were larger than they are at present. Wait awhile gentlemen. The final contest for 1844 is not yet arrived. We shall show you then majorities heavy enough to upset all your hickory.

Hon. SELAH WRIGHT has for the third time published a card, declaring that he will not buffer himself to be put in nomination for Governor of New York. We always questioned Mr. Wright's democratic soundness of claim all. He has for his much superior to vulgar hickory humbug, for the doubtful satisfaction of being badly beaten for Governor.

BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE.—We have received from J. C. Morgan the July number of this ever welcome periodical. Its contents are unusually interesting, and a portion is devoted to the translation of some of Goethe's poems, which have been rendered with all the effect of the original. Maxton, or the Memoirs of a Statesman, is continued, and increases in interest as it advances.

The English Magazines, as re-published by Leonard, Scott & Co, are the only editions now issued in this country. They are fac similes of the originals and their typographical execution is neat in the extreme.—Morgan is the agent of the publishers.

It will be seen by the official proceedings of the Convention of City Clubs, held at Baton Rouge, on Monday, that this instant, that a Grand Mass Convention of the whigs of Louisiana will meet that town on Monday, the 7th day of October next. We trust our country friends will be up and doing, and send strong delegations. The hospitable citizens of Baton Rouge, are prepared to accommodate any number. The proceedings, also, indicate a plan for thorough organization of the State, which, if actively and energetically carried out, will bring to the polls from 2000 to 2,500 whig votes more than were cast at the recent election. To arms then fellow whigs—rally, rally, rally. Be ready for the fray. Bring out the sluggard sentinels on your posts, but prepare in season for the contest. Let us show our brethren throughout the Union, that Louisiana may falter for a moment, but is ever true and faithful when the crisis comes. Let us emulate the glorious achievements of the whigs of North Carolina, Kentucky and Indiana, who have recently prostrated locofocoism. It needs but an effort to place Louisiana side by side with these victorious sun guards of the whig army.
