Chapter I. INTRODUCTION

A. Glossaries

A work of this nature obviously entails considerable variety of terminology, in which the distinctions are less apparent in English than they are in the original Japanese. Accordingly, terms for a standardized translation of the names of Japanese nationalist organizations appear in Appendices A, B, C and D as alphabetized ROMAJI-English and English-ROMAJI glossaries with KANJI added where appropriate. The subjects of these appendices are as follows:

A. Terms for adjectives and nouns

B. Terms for nouns, specifically for organizations

C. Terms for doctrines, specifically for "-isms"

D. Terms for "Incidents"

B. Purpose

The purpose of this report is to provide information on and ready reference to Japanese nationalist organizations as they existed in 1936. The references will be found in Chapters III, IV and V which consist of lists in alphabetical order.

For the benefit of agencies who use the information for indexing and filing, items have been set out alphabetically in these three chapters. They have also been printed on one side of the page only to facilitate extraction and filing. Summaries of these chapters follow.

1. Chapter III

An alphabetized ROMAJI list of Japanese nationalist organizations giving the name of the organization in both ROMAJI and KANJI and providing cross references to the standardized translation in English and to the names of leaders.

a. Treatment of names of organizations

(1) To facilitate cross reference and further research into original meanings of Chinese compounds all names of societies have been translated in cumulate adjective form rather than in the compendious noun-phrase form hitherto prevalent. Examples: "HI NO DAIKABI SHINKŌ KAI" has been translated "Sun's Beautiful Conflagration Faith Society" rather than "The Society of Faith in the Beautiful Conflagration of the Sun", and "KŌTAISHIDENKA

GOTANJŌ KINEN HOSHI KAI" has been translated "Crown Prince's Birthday Commemoration Respect Society" rather than "The Society for the Respectful Commemoration of the Crown Prince's Birthday". Exception: Where a place name appears at the head of a phrase as in "Kansai National Foundations Society" the place name is appended and the phrase reads "National Foundations Society, Kansai."

(2) Wherever possible, characters and compounds have been rendered according to their Chinese sounds rather than to their Japanese colloquial sounds.

2. Chapter IV

An alphabetized ROMAJI list of the names of Japanese who were leaders or influential members of Japanese nationalist organizations. Pertinent details are supplied and cross reference to the organizations to which they belonged is provided in both ROMAJI and English.

3. Chapter V

An alphabetized list in English of the standardized translation of names of Japanese Nationalist Organizations with cross reference to their ROMAJI names. The list has been divided into three sections:

a. General List, which includes "2" and "3"

b. Organizations in universities, colleges and higher schools. Cross-indexed to General List.

c. Organizations prefixed by dates. Cross-indexed to General List.

C. Source Material

1. Source of the material collated in this report, except where otherwise indicated, is the document summarized as follows:

Printed manual, "Introduction to Thought Police" (SHISŌ KEISATSU TSURON) by SHIGEMATSU Koei, of the Japan Police Society, dated 20 Jan 1936. Unclassified. (From the Library of Congress, Washington, D. C.) PACMIRS Doc 2818.

2. Collation has been made from a full translation of the 19-page supplement following page 318. The supplement provides:

a. Details of the doctrine, history, general principles and leaders of the 23 most important right wing nationalist

Chapter II. GENERAL DISCUSSION

A. Nationalism In Japan

Extreme nationalism has always been a Japanese trait. Her ancient chronicles set forth that from time immemorial Japan has been a divine country and the Japanese a divine race. From the inculcation of sentiments expressive of such divine origin, it is natural that only the most glorious ideas of Japan should and do persist. Japan was divinely created, her rulers were of divine origin, the gods had invariably come to her assistance and through the ages had held back "the barbaric hordes of the west" and preserved her inviolate from mundane things.

To record these divine events, the Japanese used none but superlative expressions. Such expressions became traditional and in the Thirties had reached so predominant a "Japanese" meaning that some were declared untranslatable. For example, "HAKKO ICHI-U", which had been officially translated as "Universal Brotherhood", was then officially stated to be impossible of translation into other tongues. The divinity inherent in the expression held such profound meaning to the Japanese nation that none but a Japanese could understand its implications. The word "TENNO", formerly translated as "Emperor", and other words also were placed in the same category.

Japan's history has been filled with conflict--conflict which, it is stated, revolved in the main around the desire to maintain intact the Imperial Line, the happy and indivisible relationship of ruler and subject and the perpetuation of the divine history, traditions and characteristics of the nation.

It has been claimed that such high principles were the basic reasons which led to the Restoration in 1867-8 when the authority hitherto held by the Shogunate reverted to the Emperor MEIJI and the nation again came under the direct rule of the reigning Emperor.

During the Emperor MEIJI's reign, Imperial Rescripts, constitutional reforms, compulsory education, continental expansion, the Sino-Japanese War of 1894-5 and the Russo-Japanese War of 1904-5, involving the whole nation, led to an acknowledgement of the importance of the common people. They counted in, and consequently influenced, the government, plans, education, and thought-trends of the people in general. Simultaneously, Japan's intercourse with the world led to the acquisition of world ideas, and with them world problems.

By the time the Emperor TAISHO had ascended the throne in 1912, Japanese scholars had conscientiously delved deeply into world political literature, especially into methods of government in other countries, and had passed on their findings to their students and followers.

World War I and the constitutional upheavals following it, the Rice Riots of 1919, and the promulgation of Universal Suffrage in 1925 provided such a wealth of material that innumerable study, research, debating and friendly groups and societies were formed with the professed intention of abstracting from that wealth of material anything which would redound to the glory of Japan as a great nation.

The titles of these societies, many of which had been abstracted from the flamboyant Chinese compounds employed to describe the doctrines of original or parent organizations, are rich in adjectives such as Imperial Democratic, National Re-establishment, Imperial Way, Imperial Radiance, Suicide or Self-Sacrificial (for the Emperor), Peasant's Self-Government, Divine Country, Patriotic Thought and the like, indicating that all claimed to be patriotic or were even super-patriotic.

About this time the cleavage between internationalism and radicalism as opposed to nationalism and conservatism widened and the path of divergence was emphasized throughout the world. This divergence was substantial in Japan and even though both schools of thought vociferously proclaimed their intense nationalism and patriotic intent, the ideas of both had, in the opinion of those responsible for government, reached a point where their thoughts, translated or translatable into action, were deemed to be endangering the existing divine national and social structure. In order to meet the danger of the spread and infusion of "dangerous" thoughts, laws were promulgated and special provision was made for a section of the police force known as the Thought Police Section to investigate the activities of patriotic and political organizations. Responsibility for the maintenance of peace and order in the nation and in society in its broadest sense devolved upon this Section. Article I of the Peace Preservation Law, 11 May 1925 "provides that those who have organized an association or fraternity with the object of altering the national constitution or of repudiating the private property system, or those who have joined such an organization with full knowledge of its object are to be punished with penalties ranging from death to penal servitude of over five years". (V-p 145)

The problems facing the police in 1933 and how it was proposed to meet these problems can best be judged by quoting MATSUMOTO Manabu in his preface to the "Introduction to the Thought Police" published in that year. He states that "Nowadays there are two tendencies prevailing which appear to be causing insanity throughout the entire world. One is the Third International (International Communist Party) movement which developed and is today steadily continuing to develop from Marxism. The other is the intense Nationalist (Fascist) movement. The former is doing everything possible to destroy without exception the existing national and social systems and is agitating with the intention of bringing about by violence the establishment of the communistic society of a proletariat autocracy. The latter, resisting the former from a diametrically opposed standpoint, is a movement which plans to maintain national and political traditions by means of violent conduct. Both of these movements having, in fact, the object of maintaining the harmony of society, it goes without saying that the police have no small concern with them.

For the present, it is sufficient to note how grave are the problems posed by the continuous communistic incidents since the March 15 Incident brought to light the agitations of the former.

As showing the influence of the latter, it will be sufficient to glance at the activities of the Blood Brotherhood, etc. when, following the assassination of both INOUE and DAN the May 15 Incident flared up and exposed the entire structure.

Accordingly, what has so far been the special province of the Thought Police (Special Grade Police) has suddenly extended to and come within the larger scope of the entire police force. And so it is probable that the entire organization of the police force will accordingly be mobilized to meet this." (I-Preface)

To the 1936 edition the following has been added. "Religious parties also have recently become of special interest to the Special Grade Police". (I-Preface)

With regard to the enforcement of law, sight should not be lost of the fact that throughout the transition from feudal policing of the nation to the establishment of the modern police force, there was a continuity of extreme patriotism. Many of the knights and retainers of the feudal lords were recruited to the newly-formed force and it is reasonable to assume that they not only held to their grandiose ideas of absolute service to those in authority, but passed these ideas on to their sons, so many of whom followed in their fathers' footsteps. This continuity may explain in part why the police force appears to have enforced the law with a patriotic zeal beyond the call of judiciary requirements.

As far as the Leftist and Extreme Leftist Movements were concerned, the law was applied with such zeal as to wipe out all known organizations. Leaders and leading members were incarcerated and such pressure brought to bear on the other members that only remaining leftist thinkers went underground, some in the traditional sense and others presumably by the formation of new organizations which claimed nationalism as their creed.

The Rightist and Extreme Rightist Movement with its national ideology was investigated at the same time in an effort to winnow the chaff from the grain. To facilitate the winnowing, pamphlets particularizing organizations, their aims, activities, leanings, leaders, histories and biographies were published not only by the police force but by some of the organizations themselves, as, for instance, the pamphlet "Biographies of the Pioneer Patriots of East Asia", published by the Black Dragon Society in 1936 (XVI).

Crystallization of the nationalist movement came about with the Manchurian Incident of 1931. Military and continental expansion demanded not only an all-out effort to meet military requirements, but also a concentration on the maintenance of the existing form of government. Slowly but surely pressure was brought to bear on those prominent in the realms of religion, education, commerce and industry. Consolidation and alignment were effected and sometimes forced by stressing the need for a single-minded effort to protect the nation and permit her to go forward with her "mission of extending the benign influence of the Emperor to other nations in Greater East Asia". National propaganda became the order of the day. Power concentrated in the hands of the militarists. Accession of power accentuated their authority until they were in a position to initiate measures aimed at the re-education of the Japanese.

In those measures, ideology took a most prominent part. The cry was "Absolute mobilization of the National Spirit". Pure nationalism, or we may even say extreme nationalism, was the goal. More pamphlets were published and these leave us in no doubt as to what nationalism meant. It meant primarily that there was to be positively no change in the existing form of government. Every channel of propaganda was assiduously utilized to one end—Nationalism. Religious bodies, educational institutions, publishing companies, nationalist organizations, all, great or small, were used to trumpet the cry "Revival of the National Spirit" until the inevitable happened. Each propaganda medium itself became imbued with its own propaganda and began to vie with the others in its presentation of and accentuation of a divine country with a divine ruler, one and indivisible. The nation was educated to have and to hold the glorious idea that every bit of property and every ounce of effort, in fact every thought must be devoted to the nation. Self-immolation, self-sacrifice, a complete subjugation of all private interests to the state was to become the be-all and end-all of the people. And in the last analysis, the act of offering up one's body as a glorious jewel, of dying gloriously in the service of the nation attained such divine sublimity that the indivisibility of the patriot and the state in life made it possible for him in death to become enshrined as a god of the nation, thus carrying that indivisibility through to the after-life whence he could continue to promote the national spirit.

B. Japanese Nationalist Organizations

1. Nationalist Organizations

(Note: The most important organizations stand for Fascism, Imperialism, Japanese Nationalism and Agrarianism.)

"From the outbreak of the Manchurian Incident in September 1931 to the "5-15" Incident of May 1932, this period was one of great expansion in the nationalist movement. The aim of the movement was to interfere in politics, upset all socialist movements and by direct action convert the Left Wing and draw it into the overflowing tide of nationalism. At that time domestic and foreign social conditions were mitigated, but because of the contradictions within the nationalist organizations, disorder, agitation and disruption developed.

In such ways, stimulated especially by the Gods' Soldiers Unit Incident, the nationalist organizations completely revolutionized the readjustment process of ideological camps or their liquidation. This tendency continued but was greatly minimized by the continuous efforts of the prefectural police, headed by the Metropolitan Police Board, in arresting and prosecuting the more violent elements on 2 May 1935. Because of this action there was a lack of campaign funds in the movement and the tendency arose among the executives of the principal patriotic organizations to concentrate their efforts gradually on a spiritual or cultural movement which was in opposition to the radical political movement.

However, objectively viewed, conditions still remain the same [in 1936] and cannot be resolved, so that it is difficult even after thorough analysis to estimate the time and place of any recurrence. Accordingly, the importance of security and of policing will continue to be paramount.

The doctrine, policies, leaders and history of the most important organizations are listed here without partiality for reference." (I-S-Preface)

The order in which the above-mentioned organizations appear is:

GENYŌ SHA	Black Ocean Society	(I-Sp1)
KOKUHON SHA	National Foundations Society	(I-Sp1 & 2)
AIKOKU SEINEN REMMEI	Patriotic Youth League	(I-Sp2)
KANTŌ KOKUSUI KAI HOMBU	Fascist Society Headquarters, Kanto	(I-Sp2)
KINNŌ REMMEI	Imperial League	(I-Sp2 & 3)
KŌKOKU TŌMEI	National Restoration League	(I-Sp3)
JIMMU KAI	JIMMU Society	(I-Sp3)

ZENKOKU SEINEN REMMEI	All-Japan Youth League	(I-Sp3)
DAI NIPPON KOKUSUI KAI HOMBU	Great Japan Fascist Society Headquarters	(I-Sp3 & 4)
DAI NIPPON SEIGI DAN	Great Japan Righteous Corps	(I-Sp4)
KOKURYŪ KAI	Black Dragon Society	(I-Sp4 & 5)
YAMATO MINRŌ KAI	Japan National Labor Society	(I-Sp5)
KAIKŌ KAI	Expansion Society	(I-Sp5 & 6)
MEIRIN KAI	Constitutional Society	(I-Sp6 & 7)
KOKUBŌ SHISŌ SENYŌ KAI	National Defense Thought Enhancement Society	(I-Sp7)
SHŌWA SEINEN KAI	SHŌWA Youth Society	(I-Sp7)
AIKOKU GIYŪ GUN	Patriotic Volunteer Army	(I-Sp7)
SEINEN NIPPON DŌMEI	Youth's Japan League	(I-Sp7 & 8)
DAI NIPPON NŌDŌ KAI	Great Japan Agricultural Society	(I-Sp8)
AIKOKU GAKUSEI REMMEI	Patriotic Students League	(I-Sp8)
NIPPON KOKUMIN GUN	Japan National Army	(I-Sp8)
SEIKYŌ SHA	Political and Religious Society	(I-Sp8)
DAI NIPPON SEISAN TŌ	Great Japan Production	(I-Sp8 & 9)
AIKOKU SEIJI DŌMEI	Patriotic Govt League	(I-Sp8)
KINNŌ ISHIN DŌMEI	Loyal Reform League	(I-Sp9)

These are the organizations which originated and nurtured the nationalist movement in Japan, and the above has reference both to chronological and lineal order. The implications of this order and the history of the nationalist movement will be explored in addenda to this report.

Meanwhile, it is pertinent to observe that the GENYŌ SHA (Black Ocean Society), founded in 1879 by TOYAMA Mitsuru at Fukuoka in the island of Kyushu, was undoubtedly the parent organization of the nationalist movement in Japan. At its inception it was a youth fraternity and aimed at the hardening and preparation of its members to meet any national emergency.

Its name appears to have been taken from the ocean off the northwest coast of Kyushu, the Genkai Nada (Black Ocean) and the history of the society indicates that the underlying motive in training youth was to prepare them for an expansionist movement reaching out across the Genkai Nada to the continent of Asia. That it pursued this policy is evident for it was an active element behind the scenes in the continental wars in which Japan engaged. Presumably as a result of proof that the Society had been of material assistance in the successful prosecution of these wars, the prestige of the society and of its founder was greatly enhanced. Its members also attained importance and many became great leaders in Japanese nationalism. Additionally, its influence spread and many other nationalist and fascist organizations owed their being to it.

In direct descent from it appeared the ROHIN KAI (Free-Lance Society) from which stemmed the TENGYŌ KAI (Divine Deeds Society) and the KOKURYŪ KAI (Black Dragon Society) from which stemmed the DAI NIPPON SEISAN TŌ (Great Japan Production Party).

The Black Dragon Society was founded in Jan 1901, also by TOYAMA Mitsuru and, if we may judge from its name "Black Dragon" (an English translation of the Chinese name of the River Amur which forms the northeast frontier of Manchuria), its aim was first the holding of that frontier, and second, the expansion of the Japanese sphere of influence into Siberia. The society did not limit itself to these aims, but after the example of the Black Ocean Society became active behind the scenes in all of Japan's continental wars, incidents and problems. Moreover, as the society grew in power it became active in domestic politics and when UCHIDA Ryohei became its president it directed its attention to new economic policies, social reform, government progress and such political activities. In short, by the Thirties both the Black Ocean Society and the Black Dragon Society, under the cloak of spreading the benign influence of the Japanese Emperor to the whole universe, had embarked on a campaign of outright Imperialism and Fascist nationalism of the most flagrant type.

Other parent organizations are the RŌSŌ KAI (Young and Old Society), the YŪSON SHA (Coexistence Society), the KEIRIN GAKUMEI (Administrative League), the KOKUHON SHA (National Foundations Society) and the KOKKA-KOKUMINSHUGI HA (Nationalist Party).

From these stemmed other organizations until at the close of the Thirties they were so numerous that efforts were made to reduce the number by consolidation.

This process of consolidation resulted in continual realignment of organizations into progressively fewer groups with greater membership.

In 1940 it was thought that the ultimate had been reached with the formation of the TAISEI YOKUSAN KAI (Imperial Rule Assistance Society). This was to have been a comprehensive and all-sufficient society that would absorb all the other societies and direct their energies into one nationalistic effort.

On the surface it appears to have done this, but history informs us that so urgent became the demand for expression that additional organizations had to be formed to embrace the rising aspirations of politicians, propagandists, farmers, labor, employers, the youth of the country and women.

Again the cycle was to be repeated. A multiplicity of nationalist organizations was to arise, though now under the aegis of the Imperial Rule Assistance Society, and then were again to be drawn together into one over-all organization. For, as the war struck deep into the heart of Japan itself, a final alignment occurred with the founding of an organization which had as its doctrine an all-out volunteer effort by the nation to immobilize the enemy and force him, if necessary, into undertaking a hundred years' war.

Leaders : MORIYAMA Keisaburo; TAKADA Toyoki (I-Sp4)
Founded : 10 Oct 1919 (I-Sp3)
Founder : TOKONAMI Takejiro (I-Sp3)
Principles:

1. We expect to bind together the great ropes of virtue by using the Imperial Family as the nucleus of Imperialism; to check the deterioration of national morals by loyal and filial righteousness and to defend the national constitution.

2. By basing our actions on a spirit of benevolence, we expect to put right the social order of society which is in national peril.

3. We expect to effect a settlement of social problems and to secure the safety of society by arranging the cooperation of capital and labor. (I-Sp4)

History :

Influenced by the dissertations of the benevolent NISHIMURA Isaburo of Kansai, TOKONAMI Takejiro, Minister of Home Affairs, founded this society. Membership is composed of all men of chivalrous spirit throughout the nation but owing to internal conditions the society is at present split into two schools, Kanto and Kansai. (I-Sp4)

Affiliations:

Proclamation:

The secret of tranquilizing a nation is to enrich the country and to strengthen its army. We expect to become truly aware of the gracious precepts bequeathed us by our Imperial ancestral forbears. Now that our nation has entered a period of troubles both at home and abroad and on the other hand is confronted with the roused allied powers, we peasants, must confirm our resolution to die fearlessly for our country, thus becoming the mainstay of the country in removing our national danger. Throughout the nation, we together with the soldiers must live up to the great spirit of Empire building and establish an agrarian nation. We expect greatly to improve agrarian methods by enhancing manifestation of the Emperor's power. In this way we will increase the prosperity of the people by charging forward together along one path. Founded : Feb 1925 (I-Sp4)
Founder : SAKAI Eizo (I-Sp4)
Principles:

1. To have humanitarian aims and consideration for others.

2. To work diligently with loyal and patriotic thought and filial piety.

3. To have self-respect and be cooperative.

4. To live together like brothers, elders doing their part and sons doing theirs; never to decline the orders of the elders even though ordered to pass through fire and water; to be courteous, helpful and brotherly. (I-Sp4)

History :

In August 1927, great disagreement was experienced when discussion arose as to whether or not to enter political affairs. At present (TN: 1936) in spite of being negatively inclined, entrance into politics is acknowledged. Of course, the corps stands aloof from political parties and political schools. The Corps was organized through efforts of SAKAI Eizo, who was second in command to KOBAYASHI Sahei, a renowned "Boss" of Kansai District. The organization hinges on national characteristics. Again, it is rich in feudalistic consciousness. Qualifications of a person not having a legitimate occupation are not acknowledged. When new members reach a thousand persons, the president and the governing body together will perform the ceremony of swearing by exchanging wine cups on a grand scale. The Corps mediates in labor disputes. (I-Sp4)

History :

"The Great Japan Youth League under the leadership of TSUKUI Tatsuo, a youth organization which had grown out of the DAI NIPPON SEISAN TO (Great Japan Production Party) amalgamated with the youth element under the leadership of AKAMATSU Katsumaro, which, being in favor of Imperialism, had resigned from the KOKKA SHAKAI TO (National Socialist Party). The amalgamation resulted in the formation of the SEINEN NIPPON DOMEI (Youths Japan League) on 17 Sep 1933. Prior to this TSUKUI and his adherents had been expelled from the Production Party on the grounds of defiance of its regulations." (History of Youths Japan League I-Sp7)

Location : Fukuoka Shi 1936 (I-Spl)
Leaders : TOYAMA Mitsuru; KITATORI Atsushi (I-Spl)
Founded : 1879 (I-Spl)
Founder : TOYAMA Mitsuru (I-Spl)
Principles:

1. To revere the Imperial Family

2. To respect and honor the fatherland

3. To guard strictly the rights of the people

The above articles are centered on maintaining individual happiness with firm and fervent hope so as to transmit them securely from generation to generation. This must not be changed as long as human beings exist in this world. Those descendants who oppose this are not true Japanese. This must be kept in mind so that the Black Ocean Society may long be cherished in our hearts. (I-Spl)

History :

The origin of the nationalist movement in Japan was without doubt TOYAMA Mitsuru's Black Ocean Society. When it was established in Fukuoka it resembled a Cultural School.. This was a Youth Fraternity and taught youths to harden their bodies and cultivate their minds and to be ready to step into the breach of any national emergency.

However, the extraordinary character of TOYAMA Mitsuru and his view of the State finally changed this Black Ocean Society of Fukuoka into not only the Black Ocean Society of Japan but into the Black Ocean Society of East Asia. It produced many great men and great works have been accomplished by them.

Many of the existing Fascist organizations are followers of TOYAMA, and today they exist implicitly and explicitly under his support and guidance. (I-Spl)

JIMMU 神武 (TN: First Emperor of Japan 660 BC to 581 BC)

JIMMU KAI 神武會 JIMMU Society (I-Sp3)

Location : Tokyo Kojimachi-Ku Yamashita-Cho No 1 of 1, Toyo Building 1936 (I-Sp3)
Leaders : OKAWA Shumei; KANO Satoshi; KANEUCHI Ryosuke; KATAOKA Kisuke (I-Sp3)
Founded : 11 Feb 1932 (I-Sp3)
Dissolved : About 1936 (I-Sp3)
Doctrine :

To enhance the JIMMU Empire spirit; to pledge our loyalty to the Imperial family; to defend our divine, holy national constitution for all time; to resolve firmly to expand Imperialism (TN: the divine mission) over the four seas (TN: the whole world); to make it our duty to emancipate the colored races and to be their guides and leaders and finally to press forward to the moral unity of the world. (I-Sp3)

Principles:

1. To explain the Japan empire spirit, the intrinsic nature of the Japanese nation and its national ideals; to reform the evil custom in formal education of putting the cart before the horse; to anticipate the realization of an Imperial system of education by fostering the individualism of the Japanese people.

2. To abide by the main doctrine of Imperial parental government; to defeat the evil practices of political parties and governments which have party interest as their main national policy. We anticipate the realization of an Imperialist government system which must spread Imperialism to the four seas by making the whole nation of one mind.

3. We expect to realize an Imperial economic system by tranquilizing the life of the people through the destruction of the exploitation of that capitalist economy which follows a national policy of placing self-interest first. This is to be realized by the principle "One Emperor for all people". (I-Sp3)

Founded : 20 March 1924 (I-Sp5)
Membership: Approximately 2500 in 1936 (I-Sp5)
Principles:

1. We expect to manifest the benevolent virtues of the Emperor MEIJI; to encourage the will of the people in obedience to the Imperial wishes of the reigning Emperor; to correct the evils of the times and to enhance the beauty of the national constitution.

2. We expect to investigate matters relating to education, national defense, etc. and to assist in developing the destinies of the nation. (I-Sp5 & 6)

History :

As an outlet for social life in the army there are what are called KAIKO SHA (Military Clubs) at the seat of the various division headquarters. In Tokyo there are nine such groups. Ordinarily, with general, field and company officers on the active list as a nucleus, first and second reservists, etc. would gather together and reminisce over past events.

One day Major General KITA Inosuke, a regular visitor, while giving an address said, "I am acting as President of the KANTO KOKUSUI KAI (Kanto Fascist Society). While I see world conditions deteriorate, I cannot stand idle. We, the first and second reservists and officers on the retired list, must prevent the permeation of degenerate thoughts. Meanwhile, I propose that we devote the rest of our lives to awakening popular sentiment, to perfecting education and to substantiating national defense."

His recommendation was adopted and on 27 Mar 1924 about forty general officers were appointed as leaders. The following month on the anniversary of the decease of the Emperor JIMMU the opening ceremony of the Expansion Society was performed. Membership in 1936, including both army and navy personnel was approximately 2500. When founded it was the intention of the society to exert judicious guidance of public thought, not only on the officers and men on the retired list but on society in general. This task proved to be tremendous. Even to reach those on the retired list proved to be a work of great extent. Thus the influence of the society was concentrated mainly on officers and men on the retired list in 1936. (I-Sp6)

Membership: 20,000 (1936) (I-Sp2)
Doctrine :

1. This society is formed to present a united front in the complete concentration of our minds on Imperialism; to conserve its real power and to be as discreet in action as possible. We shall defend our national constitution and hope to do our utmost to take advantage of all favorable opportunities to enhance its glory.

2. This society shall be above party politics and shall be based on impartial criticism. It will strive for the elimination of factions undermining the foundations of our national structure. We plan to exterminate all things endangering the sources of our ethics.

3. Recognizing the conditions existing in this world, this society will work for the protection of social justice. We shall lend support to the sincere convictions of the people and do our utmost to contribute our services toward their wholesome development. (I-Sp2)

History :

The strength of this society, that is, the number of leaders and followers in the eight prefectures of Kanto excluding Yamanashi and Tochigi prefectures, is kept in absolute secrecy and is not known even to its headquarters but it is assumed to be about 20,000. The society has a close relationship with the DAI NIPPON KOKUSUI KAI HOMBU (Great Japan Fascist Headquarters) through close cooperation between leaders and followers. The society at present (TN: 1936) possesses a formidable potential force in the Kanto district as a whole. (I-Sp2)

Doctrine:

1. We have set as our goal the spread and infusion of the doctrine of Imperialism to check the demoralization of the people's thought; to defend our national constitution; and to foster loyalty and patriotism.

2. We shall adhere to the principle of Imperialism, the essence of which is loyalty, patriotism and respect for the Emperor and the Imperial Family, and shall refrain from embracing degenerate thoughts.

3. We are expected to respect and obey the various Imperial Edicts and through unity and cooperation work for the development of our national destiny.

4. As individuals possessing the Japanese spirit, we shall disregard all temptations to become tainted with impure thoughts and will sacrifice our lives fearlessly to defend the national constitution. (I-Sp4 & 5)

Special Characteristics:

As an illustration of the special characteristics of this society, a motion picture created and dramatized by the club itself was filmed by the SHOCHIKU and NIKKATSU Motion Picture Companies and with this in their possession they are touring the country. Amusing as it may seem, it is said that they are getting good results. Of course, their expenses definitely cannot be met by the yearly membership fee of 2 yen paid by approximately a thousand members and it is probable that these projects are supported to a great extend by anonymous contributions made by businessmen who belong to this society. Founded : May 1914 (I-Spl)
Founder : HIRANUMA Kiichiro (I-Sp2)
Objective : To strengthen nationalism and to enhance the glory of the national constitution (I-Sp2)
Activities:

1. To study things pertaining to the country in general and the living conditions of the people.

2. To encourage high moral conduct.

3. To introduce and publish widely known and profitable literary works.

4. To give lectures. (I-Sp2)

History :

HIRANUMA Kiichiro as the Minister of Justice in the Cabinet during the earthquake disaster, respected the Imperial edict "Restoration of the national spirit". He was deeply impressed by two words in the edict "KOKU" and "HON" meaning "National" and "Foundation". As he walked in the meadows, unconscious of himself, he concentrated on the Imperial Edict, and the National Foundations Society materialized as the embodiment of his cogitations. (I-Sp2)

"The authority, rights and influence of this society are basically different from those of the MEIRIN KAI (Constitutional Society)." (History of Constitutional Society I-Sp6)

Founded : Jan 1901 (I-Sp4)

Principles:

1. We shall expand on a large scale our grand plan for the modernization of our nation. We shall demonstrate the righteousness of the culture of the East and shall plan by progressive stages the harmonization of the Eastern and Western civilizations. We anticipate becoming the leaders of prosperous Asiatic races.

2. Being inclined towards the formality of constitutionalism we shall place restraints upon the freedom of the people and oppose public and private inefficiency in office. All kinds of deep-rooted evils which the main purpose of a constitutional government is to obliterate will be probed. We must demonstrate the cardinal principle of Imperialism.

3. We shall reconstruct the present system. We shall actively control foreign policy and plan overseas expansion. We shall promote national prosperity while improving internal affairs. We shall establish social policies and settle capital and labor problems. We must secure the foundations of the Empire.

4. We shall observe the motive behind the Imperial rescript to the military forces and arouse the military spirit all the more. We shall promote universal conscription and count on substantiating the national defense system.

5. We shall plan the fundamental reform of that education which imitates present-day European and American education. We shall establish basic national education schools having their origin in our national structure. Above all we must develop the public morality and intuition of the Japanese race.

The society is divided into the following working bodies:

General Affairs Section
Administrative Section
Social Section
School Affairs Section
Publication Section

In the various sections relevant matter will be studied and examined specifically and action initiated on the results of these studies. However, as opposed to the left wing Proletarian Party, members will themselves, regardless of dutiful obligations, initiate operations without waiting for orders, even though UCHIDA Ryohei does not clearly authorize such action, since as the leader he is tied down by the fervent moral traditions of Japanese filial piety. (I-Sp4 & 5)

History:

Since its inception in 1901 the Black Dragon Society has been active behind the scenes particularly in both the Russo-Japanese and Sino-Japanese Wars, in the North China Incident, in the frequent Chinese revolutions, etc., in short, on every possible occasion it has made contribtions to the nation by constant patriotic activities.

Not only were they active in this way but in 1923, the year of the Great Earthquake disaster, they had a general mobilization of members and a resurgence of activity was discernible. In recent times (TN: about 1936) the Society carried out orders to settle the Manchu-Mongolian problem, defeated the then existing political parties and endeavored to form a new political party.

UCHIDA, who became president of the DAI NIPPON SEISAN TŌ (Great Japan Production Party), led the Black Dragon Society personally. With new economic policies he helped to repair the evil and corrupt state of national economics which existed and also continued his political activities. On the other hand he involved himself in social work and administered a laborers' lodging house at Akasaka Sannoshita. This was a project of the JIYU KURABU (Liberal Club). Here about four hundred laborers were lodged daily and a free dining hall was opened where one thousand five hundred were fed each day. Thus even to the laborers who frequented this place, the motives of the Black Dragon Society could not be hidden and their minds became infused with the idea of the Society as a judicious guide of public thought.

Stated precisely the motive of this Society is Imperialism, based on the preservation of Empire. Reverence for the Emperor is to be spread universally and the essential beauty of the national polity is to be exalted. (I-Sp5)
