FIRST WORLD SERIES PICTURES, BY SPECIAL PLANE

Here is an excellent picture of the big crowd of baseball fans that turned out for the first game of the 1927 world series in Pittsburgh. Forbes Field was jammed to its capacity and then some, the attendance reaching 42,000. The demand for tickets was such that if the park had been twice as large it doubtless would have been well filled.

Babe Ruth singled with two down in the first inning of the series' opener and Lou Gehrig, the thumping lad from Columbia University, rose to the occasion with a triple to right field that scored the first run. Paul Waner, the Pirates' brightest star, made an error of judgment when, instead of playing the ball safe for a single, he tried for a shoestring catch. He failed and the ball got past him for three bases.

Combs, lead-off man for the Yankees, wasted no time, but took a healthy cut at the first ball pitched in the 1927 world series. Barnhart, Pirate left fielder, camped under it for the first putout.

Babe Ruth, pictured in this telephoto, rushed by NEA Service Inc. to The Times, is safe at first base in the first inning of the opening game of the world series.

This picture rushed to The Times by NEA Service by airplane and telephoto wires shows L. Waner, the Pirate center fielder, scoring the first run of the game for Pittsburgh.

Joe Harris hit into a double play in the Pirates' half of the second inning, Lazzeri to Gehrig, Tony tagging out Grantham on the path and throwing to first. Tony wanted to start a fight with Grantham for interfering with the play. Photo shows Grantham lunging into Lazzeri to hamper the latter's throw.

Pie Traynor

In the third inning of the first game, with first and third occupied, Smith, the Pirate catcher, bluffed a throw to second and then threw to third. His strategy went wrong, however, for on Traynor's return throw Smith let the ball get away from him and Gehrig scored from third with a run that proved to be very important. Gehrig is shown registering while Smith scrambles for the ball.

DONIE BUSH

After Combs had fled out and Koenig had fanned, Babe Ruth, the reliable, singled to right on the first ball pitched to him by Kremer. Gehrig tripled to right and sent the Babe home. Picture shows Ruth crossing the plate with the first run of the series.
