CONGRESS MAIL failed yesterday from [illegible]

TOTAL ADMISSION OF KANSAS.

[illegible] Summary of Mr. BUCHANAN's [illegible] to Congress, transmitting the constitution and recommending [illegible] by that body, justifies the [illegible] this phase, at least, of the [illegible] the Executive has dealt [illegible] by the South. As far as [illegible] understand the telegraphic [illegible] the view taken by [illegible] substantially the same as [illegible] every just and impartial [illegible] of dissension among [illegible] Kansas has been the slavery [illegible] of the inhabitants [illegible] pending and protracted [illegible] special classes in the [illegible] largely, possibly [illegible] were invincibly opposed to [illegible] slavery in Kansas. How, [illegible] of opinion to be set[illegible] of the majority [illegible] the very plan selected of [illegible] a State Constitution.

[illegible] Kansas have enjoyed the [illegible] of determining the [illegible] of Kansas. In the first in[illegible] were held for delegates to a [illegible] convention. The free State [illegible] vast preponderance. [illegible] that it abstained from an [illegible] strength at so critical a [illegible] elections, and suffered, by its [illegible] to be nearly unanimous pro[illegible] Such was the case. Then was [illegible] stupidity per[illegible] the party. The [illegible] a Constitution, with a [illegible] slavery; and though that [illegible] that it represented [illegible] of the Territory, might [illegible] have declined sub[illegible] the entrustment of an[illegible] provided for [illegible] the only issue before the [illegible] slavery clause. Here again [illegible] were guilty of stu[illegible] Either [illegible] bent upon civil feuds, [illegible] dogmatic, resolved to have [illegible] the spurious product [illegible] Republican Convention, they [illegible] part in the election, [illegible] Constitution to [illegible] slavery clause. This [illegible]

[illegible] invested with all the [illegible] law, ratified and [illegible] popular will, as far as can [illegible] to Congress, and the [illegible] action simply per[illegible] This message is ab[illegible] stating that the Abolition[illegible] a state of rebellion, and [illegible] Constitution go by default [illegible] determined at all hazards [illegible] slavery organization. [illegible] the evident aim of [illegible] based on their [illegible] the wretched fanatics of [illegible] however, cannot refuse [illegible] the Lecompton Consti[illegible] every principle of [illegible] precedent in our history. [illegible] whether the vote given in fa[illegible] Kansas was, com[illegible] number of electors, a [illegible] that vote was an [illegible] the entire vote polled. [illegible] the baffled tricksters [illegible] trick of keeping up [illegible] have any share in the [illegible] adverted to in the [illegible] and pertinent. No [illegible] fasten slavery on a [illegible] resolved to prohibit [illegible] Let Kansas be admitted, [illegible] free to remodel [illegible] Carolina or Virginia. The [illegible] paramount to all [illegible] the organic law [illegible] rendering it unalter[illegible] of their innate and [illegible] can proceed to [illegible] Louisiana in 1845. In fine, the old [illegible] system of compulsory labor is to be entirely [illegible] away with, under the milder and more [illegible] rule of the present Emperor.

Elder Hyde's Lecture on Mormonism.

JOHN HYDE, formerly an Elder in the Church of the Latter-Day Saints, lectured on Mormonism last Tuesday evening, in Lyceum Hall. He began by giving a succinct account of the rise and progress of Mormonism in this country, and dwelt at considerable length upon the tyranny exercised by Brigham Young over his deluded followers. He then went on to speak of the personal character and appearance of the great apostle BRIGHAM. He had never seen a man whom he so much resembled in outward show as the Rev. HENRY WARD BEECHER, of New York. He had the same heavy cast of features, the same massive brow, the same long light-brown hair, and possessed at least an equal power over his auditors. BRIGHAM YOUNG was an orator in the truest sense of the word, though he would institute no parallel between him and the reverend pastor of the Plymouth church in Brooklyn. The lecturer then went on to speak of the ludicrous ceremonies attending the initiation of neophytes into the Mormon church. The men are separated from the women. Both are then stripped naked, and while in this condition an Elder, supposed to represent the Lord, enters the men's apartments and kneads them over in commemoration of the process to which our first father's clay is thought to have been subjected before being endowed with vitality. The neophytes are then anointed with sacred oil, and there is whispered in their ears a new name which they are warned as they value their salvation never to forget. They are then dressed in uniform, and when the bandage is removed from the men's eyes, each one sees a woman standing beside him similarly accoutered to himself. The men are thereupon led through a succession of rooms—four in number—in one of which, after the performance of sundry mystic and heathenish rites, they are made to take a solemn oath by which they vow an eternal hatred to and warfare against the United States and its institutions, until they shall have been uprooted and overturned, and until the very remembrance of them shall have ceased among men. The new ADAM and EVE then wander forth into a garden, not quite so large as Eden, where they behold a bunch of raisins tied with a piece of thread to the limb of a tree. An outlandish looking fellow, dressed in red and supposed to typify the devil, then rushes in and invites the woman to pull down such raisins and eat them, which, of course, she proceeds to do—whereupon enter the Lords, with a formal request that the pair should vacate the premises forthwith—promising them, however, at the same time that a Savior should finally appear to reinstate them therein. The lecturer alluded to the fact that his own wife and child—the former an obstinate believer in the doctrines of BRIGHAM YOUNG—were now in Salt Lake City, his wife having refused to follow him to the United States.

Mr. HYDE is a very clever and entertaining lecturer. His language is chaste and even elegant, and he is so serious in what he says, and so happy in the manner of saying it, that he contrives to throw an exceeding charm around an otherwise somewhat tame and common-place subject. Mr. HYDE lectures again at the same place and on the same subject to-morrow evening.

[FOR THE NEW ORLEANS BEE.]

The beau monde of our city and its music-loving citizens are already on the qui vive of excitement at the bare announcement that M'me Erminia Frezzolini is soon to appear in grand operatic concert at Odd Fellows' Hall, under direction of Maurice Strakosch. We have recently witnessed her thrilling impersonations, and listened with rapture under the spell of her magic voice, at the Teatro Tacon, Havana, where she fairly electrified that most music-loving and critical of all audiences. Her remarkable history, and the fame she has already acquired as an artist of the highest order, both in our own and in foreign lands, are too well known to the intelligent reader to require a repetition at our hands. A portion of the career of the distinguished artist under whose management we are promised such a feast of melody, we desire to relate. It is now some ten years since M. Strakosch left the home of his youth, and though but a youth of twenty summers, and a stranger to the smiles of fickle fortune, yet he was nobly—in the land which gave him birth, and at the different courts and cities on the continent that had witnessed his precocious and remarkable talents—"to fame unknown." He made his début in the land of his adoption at Niblo's Garden, in the city of New York, and by the magic power of his genius—his kindly bearing of "soft black eye"—his gentle, winning manners, and unobtrusive modesty, carried the hearts of his rapt listeners to a pitch of enthusiasm and applause rarely bestowed upon those who come among us bearing the prestige of a great name, and wearing upon their brows the laurel wreath of fame acquired in other lands. Time, care, travel, and the arduous duties of a profession to which his whole soul was and is yet, substantially devoted, have robbed him of much of the birdsute glories that adorned the brow of his earlier years, but the same smiling, kindly eye and gentle, winning manners that won for the modest, youthful artist "hosts of friends" wherever his presence and talents were sought, yet remain to give other generations on this side of the river, and carrying off all the property that was of any value to them. While MALIBRAN, their way down on the Mexican side of the river, we learn they killed four persons and took a number of horses and cattle. They are supposed to belong to the Comanche tribe of Indians. This is the first time they have made such a bold attempt since settlements have been formed between those places; and as they have met with such a good success in this attempt, it is probable they will renew their visits very soon. The number of depredations committed above Laredo are very numerous, and, we are told, of so frequent occurrence that the inhabitants take no particular account of them.

Says the same paper:

We learn from reliable authority that a number of horses have been stolen from persons living on this side of the river and carried into Mexico. The persons who have sustained the greatest losses are Mr. Jackson and Mr. Webber, residing on the river, a few miles above this city.

Mr. Shields, who has a farm on the river, employs hand at his plantation, above, which property, under present treaty stipulations, cannot be forced back.

The Herald, of the 24th instant, says that Governor Gorie, and Governor Vickers, of Tennessee, and Governor Wise, of Virginia, accompanied their delicacies. The States of Tennessee, Wave-Lees and Coahuila will now act in unison with all other States in raising forces for the coming conflict.

C. SERRES.

WASHINGTON, January 27.

In the Senate, Mr. Davis, of Mississippi, presented a minority report from the naval committee on the Pacific railroad, presenting a substitute for the bill reported by the majority, which he should offer at the proper time. The Army bill was taken up on motion of Mr. Bayard, upon which a debate ensued upon the proposed increase of the military force and the circumstances requiring such increase. Mr. Davis's substitute, adding the regiments to the military establishment, was lost by a vote of eight to thirty-eight. The bill will be resumed to-day as unfinished business, the opposition prevailed on Mr. Bayard to press the bill to a vote without unnecessary delay.

In the House of Representatives the Deficiency bill was taken up in Committee of the Whole, when speeches were delivered by Mr. Hughes, Mr. Cullom, on different subjects and by Mr. Stanton on different subjects and mainly with the political issues of the time. Mr. Harris, of Illinois, has the floor when the House goes into committee on this bill to-day. The contested election case from Ohio came up, when the House refused to allow further time to the contestant, Hon. Lewis D. Campbell to take testimony. On motion, Mr. Vallandigham was permitted to occupy a seat on the floor during the pendency of his case, and it opened upon the merits when the matter shall come up for consideration.

WHAT A NEWSPAPER DOES FOR NOTHING.—The following article should be read and pondered well by every man who takes a newspaper without paying for it:

The result of our observation certainly can be stated in a few words that the publication of a newspaper is the most thankless business in the world. Its proprietors are the public's servants, and are expected to devote their best energies, their talents, their time, their money, their all, to spread before the public the news of the day, and to make the paper a welcome visitor to every family. They are the men who must be ready at all times to hear the complaints of every fault-finding, hypocritical, mean, selfish, and ignorant man who may happen to be dissatisfied with the conduct of the paper, or with the action of the editor on any question of public or private interest. They are the men who must be ready
