MODE DU TIRAGE.

Afin de déterminer les lots gagnans, on se sert vase de quatre roues. Dans la première, contenant les prospectus, seront placés quinze bulletins, numérotés 0, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13 et 14, (dix desquels seulement seront tirés) dans chacune des autres trois, seront placés dix bulletins, numérotés 0, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9. Un bulletin sera tiré des autres roues successivement, commençant par la gauche, moyennant quoi une série sera formée correspondant au numéro d'un des billets de la loterie. Un autre bulletin sera alors tiré du roue supérieure, comme précédemment, et ainsi de suite jusqu'à ce que tous les bulletins aient été tirés des trois dernières roues, et dix seront formées.

Le billet ayant pour numéro les chiffres de la 1ère. série, dans l'ordre du tirage, aura droit au lot de $3000

PRINTED DAILY, BY P. DE LAS CASES.

St. Peter-Street, between Bourbon & Royal.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 27, 1828.

☞ We are authorised to state that MAJ. J. MERCER is a candidate for the House of Representatives to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Mr. Waggaman.

Military.—It is stated that a regiment of British troops will shortly garrison Fort George. The military post at the Short Hills is also, it is said, to be completed.

It may be, also, that the ancient post of Fort Erie may again hear the bugle sound; again arise from rust and ruin—and again the bright caparisoned sentinel glance the polish of his shield to the moonbeams, and walk his allotted round."

If this should be,—and it may be—the termination of our canal may be commanded by the guns from Fort Erie! and prudence would dictate—safety would counsel—and they would urge, the establishment of a battery, with embrasures cut in the solid rock, at a point commanding Fort Erie, and bounding the junction of the Buffalo canal with the Black Rock Basin. Here the elevation of the position is commanding, and all the material is on the spot. Look at our northern lines from Chippewa to Detroit; the 40 miles from Lake Ontario to Lake Erie, is the most interesting part of the frontier.

[Buffalo Republican.

GREAT BRITAIN & IRELAND.

The reports are ominous relative to the King's health. The general impression seems to be that he is in a dangerous case. But the most important, and in our opinion, the only news of consequence to Great Britain is the statement of Lord Gort, at the formation of a Brunswick Club in Limerick, that "a bill was prepared for the Emancipation of the Catholics, and that it fully met the approbation of the Duke of Wellington." To make his information more complete and valuable, his lordship proceeded to say that "he was of opinion that the bill would be acceptable to every fair dealing and reasonable Catholic and Protestant in England and Ireland," and that it was his intention to support the bill.

When it is remembered that Lord Gort has hitherto been one of the most violent opponents of the Catholic claims, the greater weight will be given to the above information. His lordship would be slow to believe such a fact as the preparation of a bill for affording Catholic Emancipation, and still more backward to proclaim it, and to avow that he should give the bill his support. The interesting question arises—what is the nature of this bill? We fear that Lord Gort has miscalculated, if he expects a universal acquiescence in any possible measures; but thus much is certain, that it is a measure of concession—that it is "Catholic Emancipation." Unless, therefore, his lordship should use these words in a totally different acception from which they have universally obtained, the bill must render the Catholics eligible to seats in Parliament, and to the civil and political privileges enjoyed by Protestants.—Such a measure would indeed be hailed by the most enlightened part of the community, both of the Protestant and Catholic faith, as a means of tranquilizing an important part of the kingdom, and setting at rest a question which can never be otherwise arranged.

[N. Y. Journal of Com.

PORTUGAL.

Extract from the Courrier Français de Paris, of November 6th.

The late accounts from Lisbon are of a very alarming nature for the usurper. Numerous Guerrillas are organized in the northern provinces, some of which have advanced almost to the walls of Oporto, where they had a serious engagement with the 2nd regiment of the line. The soldiers of Don Miguel were defeated. A private letter just received mentions a circumstance still more decisive. The companies of the above named regiment have gone over to the constitutional party commanded by Colonel La Serna Pinto. By the same letter it is evident that the usurper can no longer depend on the fidelity of his marine. Four of the vessels sent to blockade Madera have declared themselves in favour of Maria da Gloria—in fact 1,200 of the prisoners made at Cascaes have made their escape, and are making the best of their way to the constitutionalists. If these latter accounts are true they must greatly disturb the fluctuating power of Don Miguel. In fact he already fears the fate which awaits him, and the news he receives from the interior only adds to his inquietude.

The last dispatches received by M. de Santacerce from Vienna, Berlin and even from Madrid has thrown consternation into the palace of the usurper. The exaltation of the Portuguese nation is carried to the greatest degree.

Exportation of Gold.—The fact is now pretty well established, that a large exportation of gold to the north of Europe is now going on, to what amount it is extremely difficult to ascertain, but we should not think the quantity already sent over estimated at 1,000,000*l.* stg. Part of this has been sent to effect purchases of Grain, in which employment it is not improbable, as the farmers in the interior will only accept specie in exchange for their corn; but another portion, and that probably the most considerable, has been remitted for the supply of the Russian army in Turkey. The price of gold has risen to-day, and bullion is at the standard of 3*l.* 17*s* 10½*d* the ounce.

There is, at this moment, in the coffers of the Bank of England, gold to the amount of 12,000,000 pounds.

[London Chronicle.

Counterfeit half Dollars are in circulation.—They are of the date of 1824, and are calculated to deceive. They may be detected, however, by examining closely the words, "United States of America," in which the "U" touches the right wing of the eagle—in the genuine coin it stands some distance from it.—Kentucky Reporter.

Virginia Aristocracy.—The Duke of Saxe Weimar, in "Travels through the United States," says of the Virginians—"In conversing with these gentlemen, I observed with astonishment the aristocratical spirit which the Virginians possess. I was astonished to hear them praising hereditary nobility and primogeniture."

Application for divorce to the New-Jersey Legislature were as plenty as blackberries in harvest time. So far as effect, seven some of the counties wanted to be separated.

From English Papers.

Newspaper Taxes.—At a meeting of the Merchant Company of Leith, held on Monday re'night, that corporation resolved immediately to memorialize the Treasury on the important subject of the duties payable on newspapers and advertisements, and are unanimous in the expression of their opinion, that the reduction of those duties would be of the greatest benefit to the mercantile community.

Yesterday, about one o'clock, Cornhill, the Poultry, and Cheapside, were in the greatest confusion and dismay at the appearance of an irritated bullock.—The infuriated animal had first appeared "out of temper," as the butchers called it, at the Tower. He suddenly took a run against a book stall, and scattered several volumes in the street. He then ran along amidst cries and shouts, until he reached Whitechapel; but having dyed the butchers' stalls, at which were hung the members of so many of his kind, he turned about, whisked his tail, and walked tranquilly to Aldgate. Here there approached a man who keeps an apple-basket, stuck his horn into the skirts of the poor fellow, flung him into the street, and flung his basket of fruit after him. This feat collected a great mob, amongst whom were many mischievous vagabonds, who plundered several of the terrified spectators. The gates of the Royal Exchange were closed, and the bullock passed down to the Mansion-house, where he did great, and, we fear, dreadful execution. The mob were shouting after him, as he walked and foamed, and he suddenly turned towards two females, who were standing near Pidding's, and tossed them both over head and heels. The poor women were unable to rise, and were carried to the hospital, apparently much injured. The bullock moved slowly on, and at the corner of Walbrook a butcher went over to him; but the bullock, after having eyed the butcher askance, suddenly turned upon him, and making a dart shaved him through the window of the corner house. The butcher, however, escaped without being much injured. The animal was at length exhausted, and lay down in Walbrook, where he was tied, and prevented from doing more mischief.

A Cambrian preacher lately proclaimed from his pulpit, that our Lord and Master, on rising from the dead, appeared first to women, that the miracle might be the sooner published abroad.

The first tax on personal property in England was levied by Henry II., whose reign began in 1154, which amounted to two pence in the pound, on the amount of every individual's net effects, after deducting debts verified on oath; and one penny in the pound for the four following years. This tax was afterwards raised to one-tenth part of all personal property, as in 1188 intelligence had been received that Jerusalem had been taken by the Sultan of Egypt. On this occasion the English are said to have paid above seventy thousand pounds, and the resident Jews about sixty thousand pounds, making together in those days, an immense sum.
