Short statement of the general duties of the controlling branches:

The above mentioned plants were designated as branches solely due to their convenient location as contact or connection points. Although the factorins were legally registered as branches, the respective appointed manggar were not legally registeres as such and thereby lacked authority commenurate to their rank. All designated factories were under the direct supervision of headquarters and all commodity transaction were undertaken there rather than at the so-ca lled branches.

The so-called branches did not participate in commodity transactions and lacked authority to do so.

Remarks:

(1) Branches were simply contact points and therby lacked "class".

(2) No sales exist because branches did not undertake commodity transactions.

Shortly statement of the general duties of the controlling branches:

At home The managers of all the mines and branches were doing their duties of business under the general supervision of the Head Office in Osaka, but, in order to facilitate business and to increase production, they were able to manage the business themselves in their own responsibilities to some extend authorized by the company's private regulation, -- for example, ordinary business transactions, personal affairs of labourers, rewards or punishments, etc.
