Preface.

IN compiling the present history, two brief works on the same subject, viz : the Quackenbush chapter in Talcott's "New York and New England Families," and Richard Wynkoop's "Genealogical Notes on the Quackenbos Family," have been taken as a basis, subject to such corrections as were deemed necessary in the light of recent research. The lineages as traced by these writers have been considerably developed, however, by the addition of everything obtainable concerning individual members of the Quackenbush or Quackenbos family, and in almost every case the baptismal and marriage records have been verified by comparison with accurate transcriptions of the several church registers. Military and naval records, obtained from official sources, have been inserted in the text, as well as numerous traditions, taken from local histories or communicated by descendants of the principals, but there has been no attempt at systematic biographical notices except in the cases of professional men.

The original researches of the compiler have resulted in the classification of about one thousand members of the family in America not contained in the Talcott and Wynkoop histories, but it is regretted that, owing to a lack of co-operation on the part of many persons to whom circulars of inquiry were addressed, the latest generations are necessarily incomplete. Of the total number of such circulars, forwarded and known to have reached their destinations, but twenty per cent. have brought replies, and consequently it has not been possible to identify several hundred of the living members of the family, who are known by name.

The information embodied in the first chapter of this history concerning the van Quackenbosch family in Holland was obtained from the old Dutch manuscripts as a result of the investigations of an agent abroad, Herr A. A. Vorsterman van Oijon. The coat-of-arms was discovered almost simultaneously in Holland and America, and as there is nothing to indicate that the families in both countries were not of the same origin, its authenticity can scarcely be doubted.

It is desired at this time to acknowledge the compiler's obligation to all of those who have contributed in any way to the Quackenbush annals. Bible and family records of especial value have been received from Miss Clarrise Jane Ackart, Schaghticoke, N. Y. ; Mrs. Eben Erksine Olcott, N. Y. City ; Mrs. Cebra Quackenbush, Hoosac, N. Y. ; Mr. Peter Quackenbush, Paterson, N. J. ; Professor John Duncan Quackenbos, N. Y. City, and Mrs. John Englis, Brooklyn, N. Y.

For practical suggestions and assistance in research the compiler is indebted to Mr. J. J. Helston-Rix, Secretary of the United States Legation at the Hague ; Mr. Lars S. Reque, Consul General of the United States at Rotterdam ; Mr. John R. Planten, Consul General of the Netherlands at New York ; Mr. Theodore M. Banta, Secretary, and Mr. Diedrich Versteeg, translator of the Holland Society of New York.

An appendix has been added containing such names as were received too late for insertion in the text, but all names, including those in the appendix, will be found in the general index.

Quackenbush Genealogy.

The Family in Holland.

EXTENSIVE researches in the archives of various cities and towns of Holland have disclosed comparatively few facts concerning the family of van Quackenbosch, but those which have been brought to light are of such significance that much can be learned from them, both directly and by inference.

The Hollanders were ever noted for their precise records of vital statistics, especially after the middle ages, when almost every town as well as every church had its archivist. This being the case, the rarity of the name van Quackenbosch in the town and church registers of that period would seem to indicate that the family was numerically small. In support of this theory it may be stated that although the family never lived, so far as is known, outside of the small area including the city of Leiden and its suburbs Oegstgeest, Valkenburgh, etc., it is officially declared that the name is entirely extinct in that district today, and probably does not exist in any other part of Holland. Mr. Lars S. Reque, the United States Consul at Rotterdam, has written in this connection :

I have made numerous inquiries in regard to the Quackenbos or Quackenbosch or Quackenbush family, or branch of it, supposed to be in Holland, but have hitherto failed to discover any trace of the Quackenbosch name. I have especially made inquiries at Leiden and have been assured by the proper officials of that city that the name does not exist there.

And referring to a communication he had received from the Burgomaster of Oegstgeest, Mr. Reque continues :

It is evident that the name of Quackenbos, Quackenbosch or Quackenbush is quite unknown at Oegstgeest, as it appears that the Burgomaster took it for granted that Schakenbos was meant.

According to authorities on Dutch orthography, however, the present spelling of the name would be "Kwackenbosch," as it has become almost universal among Hollanders to employ "Kw" for "Qu," but this modernized form is likewise unknown in Holland, the nearest approach to it being Schakenbosch, which is so radically different that it may well be assumed to refer to a distinct family.

Although the van Quackenbosch family does not appear to have been numerous in its native city of Leiden, its patrician character is sufficiently established by the important civil offices to which several of the name were appointed, and by their use of coat-armour at a time when heraldy was an important and accepted institution throughout Europe. The prefix "van" however, does not in itself signify rank, as is commonly believed by Americans, and must not be confused with the "von" of the Germans, which invariably implies a title. "Van" has no particular significance, but is used indiscriminately in Holland by persons in every station, although it was doubtless used originally in its true sense, as meaning "of" or "from," and denoted the territorial derivation of a name. Applying this meaning in the present case, and translating "Quackenbosch" literally as derived from "quakken"—to croak like a frog, and "bosch"—a bush or thicket—the name would imply that the family had lived in the vicinity of a patch of woods where frogs were especially numerous and noisy. It is quite possible that the name originated in this way, as family names were not in use in northern Europe until the 15th Century, and it was anciently the custom to have a given name only, and to distinguish individuals by referring to their father's names, their trades, or to some peculiar feature of the neighborhood in which they lived.

It is a matter of record, however, that the name van Quackenbosch, not differing by so much as a single letter from the form employed by one of the progenitors of the family in America, was known in Leiden as early as the 15th Century, or two hundred years before Pieter Quackenbosch left Oegstgeest for New Netherlands. The fact that a name so unusual should appear without variation in the two countries, and the positive knowledge that Pieter Quackenbosch had lived in the Leiden district before his emigration would seem to justify the belief that the Leiden and New Netherlands families were generally the same, and in the absence of documentary proof must be accepted as the basis for such an assumption. It is a matter of regret that the single link that would definitely establish this connection has not as yet been discovered.

References to the van Quackenbosches of the 15th and 16th Centuries appear in the "Leiden Armorial," an elaborate publication issued in 1785, and containing a list of families which had been identified with the city administration, together with genealogical annotations and plates of 792 coats of arms. From this authoritative source it is learned that one Aelbert van Quackenbosch (1), who doubtless was born several years prior to the discovery of America by Columbus, was the progenitor of a branch of the family which extended in an unbroken line through six generations, terminating in the records with the family of Pieter Gerritsoon van Quackenbosch, who died in 1640.

In Aelbert van Quackenbosch (1) the family is carried back to the period of Burgundian rule, established by the brilliant Philip (1419-1467) who founded the Order of the Golden Fleece, as symbolical of the source of his great power and wealth, the weaving industry of the Netherlands. Under Philip of Burgundy the state enjoyed an era of unprecedented prosperity, but it was at the expense of individual liberty, and therefore unstable. Philip was succeeded in 1467 by his son Charles the Bold, who ruled with even greater severity than his father until he met his death at Nancy ten years later. Charles's death was the peoples's opportunity. The French King seized Burgundy, compelling Mary, the daughter and heir of Charles to call upon the Netherlanders for aid, and thus the representatives of native families were recognized as an influence in politics. Certain demands of the people were acceded to in a charter entitled "het Groot Privilegie," which document has been termed "one of the foundation stones in the edifice of Dutch freedom," since by its provisions no demand of the King was to prevail against the town charters; none but natives could hold office, and only the Dutch language was to be used in public documents.

Another great event in the history of the Netherlands which Aelbert van Quackenbosch must have witnessed was the introduction of the Bible in the language of the people, which was accomplished in 1477 in spite of the opposition of kings and priests. From that moment the influence of the church of Rome was doomed in Holland, as was also the absolute power of monarchs.

Nothing is learned from the records concerning the personal history of Aelbert van Quackenbosch, however, save that he had a son Dirk (2) who, according to the Leiden Armorial, was living in 1529. The name Dirk or Derick or Dirck, now forming the last syllables of Frederick and Theoderick, is suggestive of the days of feudalism, when seven of the Counts who ruled Holland between the years 922 and 1299 bore that name.

From the dates of his descendants it is computed that Dirk Aelbertszoon van Quackenbosch was born about the year 1500. He is the first of the name known to have employed the van Quackenbosch arms, and an engraving of the shield used by him on Sept. 17th, 1529, appears in the "Leiden Armorial." It is conjectured from this precise date and the absence of crest and motto that it was used as a seal on that occasion and attached to a legal document.

Holland was now under Charles V, during whose reign there was a wonderful revival of learning, the direct result of the introduction of printing, the publication of the Bible in the Dutch language, and the discovery of America. The year 1529 marked the birth of Protestantism, when the followers of Luther "protested" against the act of the Diet of Speyer, which decreed against all ecclesiastical changes.

Dirk Aelbertszoon van Quackenbosch had a son Aelbert (3) whose children, the 4th generation of record, are named as follows :

4. Gerrit,
5. Machteld (Matilda),
6. Sander,
7. Aefje (Eva).

Of these, Gerrit Aelbertszoon van Quackenbosch (4) was a clothier at Leiden, and married Catyn van de Graft Jacobsdochter, who is named in a notarial deed of Nov. 9th, 1578. The motto "Vrede in Rykdom" (Peace in Wealth) first appears in the coat of arms used by Gerrit Aelbertszoon van Quackenbosch. Their children were :

8. Adriana, who married Jacob Corneliszoon van Lemsveld, Burgemeester. Her name appears in the record of transactions with notaries during 1589.

9. Pieter.

5. Machteld Aelbertsdochter van Quackenbosch, daughter of Aelbert (3) married Jonge Garrebrant Meesz of Oude Nierop, who was a member of the City Council of Leiden in 1574.

6. Sander van Quackenbosch, second son of Aelbert (3), married Cornelia Bouwensdochter. He died in 1596 and was buried April 15th of that year in St. Peter's churchyard, Leiden.

Sander van Quackenbosch was a member of the City Council of Leiden during the siege of 1574 when the Spaniards under Valdez, strongly intrenched in 66 forts with which they had surrounded the city, maintained such a rigid blockade that for five months no help could reach the besieged. At this stage, when famine and plague were raging in Leiden, William of Orange, and his advisers met at Rotterdam and resolved to cut through the great sea dykes at Schiedam and Delfshaven and flood the twenty miles of rich farming country between those points and the besieged city. This project was quickly carried out to the utter demoralization of the Spanish army, and Leiden was relieved. A favoring wind shortly afterward drove back the water and the dykes were repaired. As a reward for the valor and constancy displayed on that occasion the people of Leiden were given the choice of exemption from taxes or a great University, and chose the latter.

7. Aefje (Eva) van Quackenbosch, second daughter of Aelbert (3), was born in 1537 and married Gerard van Hoogeveen, who was born August 8th, 1524, and was Landlord of Hoogeveen, pensionary of Leiden and Curator of the Leiden University.

Eva van Quackenbosch died at Leiden, Dec. 13th, 1608, and was buried in St. Peter's churchyard. Her husband died Dec. 7th, 1580. Their family consisted of 18 children.

Of the 5th generation Pieter van Quackenbosch (9) was appointed sheriff of Leiden in 1604 and celebrated his "Twenty Years' Jubilee" Aug. 29th, 1624. He died Jan. 20th, 1640. His wife's name is unknown. Their children, the 6th generation of record, are named as follows :

10. Gerrit van Quackenbosch, chairmaker of Leiden ; married 1st, Feb. 7th, 1621, Brechtje Thymansdochter vander Ben, married 2nd, Lucretia van Endoven, widow of Peter Joijt, of Amsterdam, in 1637.

11. Tryntje Pietersdochter van Quackenbosch married Oct. 2nd, 1625, Fogt Corneliszoon van Egmond, son of Cornelis van Egmond and Neeltje Pietersdochter van Schaaick.

12. Cornelis Pieterszoon van Quackenbosch married Jan. 23rd, 1628, at Leiden, Lysbeth van Cortenbosch, daughter of Jan van Cortenbosch and Barbara Gysbertsdochter. He died in 1635.

Cornelis Pieterszoon van Quackenbosch was appointed Sheriff in his father's place Dec. 30th, 1627, and in 1635, after the death of Cornelis, his father again applied for the office.

The following annotations, gathered from various sources in Holland, refer to members of the family who have not been identified, and are given because of the possibility that future research will establish the relationship between the persons named and Pieter Quackenbosch, the earliest American ancestor. The items from the catalogues of Groningen and Leiden Universities are of especial interest, in that they both refer to a student named Pieter Quackenbosch, although it is extremely probable that the references are to one and the same student, who, after studying at Leiden, began a course in theology at Groningen. This student was born in 1639, and according to the present Librarian of Groningen University must have left in 1659 without completing his course, as he does not seem to have taken any final examinations. The strong probability, therefore, is that this young student, restless and anxious about his future, had learned of an expedition starting for the New World and hastened to join it, and so reached New Netherlands about 1660.

Dr. W. N. de Rieu, Librarian of the University of Leiden, reports :

Pieter van Quackenbosch, who is inscribed in the Album of Leiden Students, 31 October, 1651, at the age of 12 years, dwelt here with Pieter Quackenbosch, probably his father, dwelling on the Canal New Rhine.

Mr. J. W. G. Van Haarst, Librarian of the University of Groningen, writes :

I have the honor to tell you that I have found, in the Album Studiosorum Academiae Gronigenae, 17 Jan., 1659, Petrus Quackenbosch, Leidensis, Theol. I have not found other references to this student ; he seems to have not passed any examinations here.

From Leiden records :

July 7, 1642, Henrik Barchley, born at Rostock, Germany, cloth-shearer, married Adriaantgen (Adriana) Mouringsdochter van Quackenbosch, born at Valkenburgh, daughter of Mouringh van Quackenbosch and Maertgie Cornelisdochter.

1735 or 1735, Samuel Quakkenbosh married to Marytje Jonkkals, Quartermaster in the East India Company (Chamber of Delft), deceased, while sailing homeward off Batavia on board the "Heemstede." He left two minor sons, Samuel and Gerrit.

From Oegstgeest records :

May 7, 1679, Jasper Janszoon Quackenbosch from Valkenburgh married Tryntje Teunisdochter van der Byl, from Catwyk aan den Ryn. Both residing at Oegstgeest.

March 27, 1682, confession of faith of Jasper Janszoon van Quackenbosch, who died April 26, 1700.

April 29, 1695, are registered Jeremias Janszoon Quackenbosch from Valkenburgh and Pieterneeltje Leenderts van Rhyne, from Soeterwoude, residing at Oegstgeest. Attestation is delivered for the marriage at Voorburg.

May, 1696, Mouringh Janszoon Quackenbosch, from Valkenburgh, residing at Oegstgeest, married Neeltje Jansdochter van Leeuwen, from Oegstgeest.

The Village of Oestgeest

ESTGEEEST, or Oegstgeest, the village from whence Pieter Quackenbosch emigrated to America, lies adjacent to the city of Leiden in Lower Rhineland, and is now so much a part of the city that the principal railway station of Leiden is within the Oestgeest limits. The nearest port of departure is Delfshaven, and to have reached the ship which was to bear him to New Netherlands Pieter Quackenbosch must have journeyed from Leiden to Delft by way of the canal—once known as the River Schis—which connects those cities, thus following the same route that the Pilgrims had traveled some 40 years earlier, when they joined the “Speedwell”, which was to transfer them to the “Mayflower” at Southampton.

As it exists today, Oegstgeest is a quiet village of about 4000 inhabitants, many of whom, favored by the unusual richness of the soil, successfully operate small farms and gardens. A single village street leads directly to Leiden, and a steam tram-way connects with the outlying towns. The houses are generally of the Dutch type, built of brick, with tiled roofs and large windows containing many small panes of glass. Topographically, however, Oestgeest is far from being a typical Dutch village, as it is built on comparatively high and undulating ground, whereas the greater part of Holland is flat and actually below the level of the sea.

In olden times, according to the historians, Adrianus, Junius and Dousa, Oestgeest was called “Kerkwerve,” meaning “churchgreen” and derived its name from the most notable feature of the landscape, a verdure-clad knoll, upon the top of which stood a small church. This knoll, mound-like in appearance, is of about the same elevation as the Tower of Spaarn-dam, visible in the distance, and from its crest may be obtained an uninterrupted view of the surrounding country for many miles.

The ancient church at Kerkwerve, built on the foundations of an old Roman castle, is alluded to in early manuscripts as the "Church of St. Willebrord," and is said to have been founded by that missionary during the 8th Century, when he went over from England to preach the gospel among the Frisians. The present building, belonging to the Classis of Leiden, is thought to have been erected on the same Roman foundation early in the 13th century. It is a brick structure, and the combination of Gothic roof and buttresses with the Norman round-arched windows is consistent with the 13th Century architecture.

Other buildings of Oestgeest which are of historical interest are the Chateau of Poelgeest and Endegeest. The former is an imposing structure surrounded by well kept lawns and flower beds, and approached through massive gates which open into a picturesque lane. It was for many years the residence of the noble family of Wassenaar, from whom Oestgeest was purchased by the city of Leiden.

The Chateau of Endegeest, situated about one mile northwest of Leiden, was one of the many residences of Rene Descartes during his 20 years' sojourn in Holland from 1629 to 1649. It was the practice of this distinguished philosopher when engaged in any special investigation to retire to some secluded spot conveniently near a university, and in Endegeest he wrote many of his works. The Chateau was acquired by the city of Leiden after the death of the last Baroness of Endegeest, in 1895, and is now used as a public insane asylum.

The Coat of Arms.

SHIELD—Vert, a reversed pile, or, bendwise.

CREST—A pair of wings ; dexter, vert ; sinister, or.

MOTTO—"Vrede in Rykdom" ("Peace in Wealth").

The earliest references to the Arms of van Quackenbosch of Leiden appear in the "Leiden Armorial," published in 1785 and containing the arms of the members of the "Magistrature" of Leiden. From this source it is learned that Dirk Aelbertszoon van Quackenbosch (see (2)) employed the shield as described above on Sept. 17, 1529, and that Gerrit Aelbertszoon van Quackenbosch (see (4)) used the shield and motto in 1578. The crest and shield appear in a small "aquarelle" painted about the middle of the 17th Century, and now in the possession of A. A. Vorsterman van Oijen, the celebrated Dutch Heraldist and Director of the "van Oijen Genealogisch on Heraldisch Archief," who was retained to make researches for the van Quackenbosch arms in Holland. A copy of this "aquarelle," painted by Heer van Oijen, is now in the possession of the compiler.

A description of the shield corroborative of the above is found in J. B. Rietstap's "Armorial General" as follows :

Quackenbosch (van), Leide : De sinople a une pointe d'or, mise en bande, mouvant du canton senestre de la pointe.

Rietstap's "Armorial General" is an accepted authority on heraldry, and is in the collection of the Astor Library, New York.

van Quackenbosch.

The Family in America.

N the light of present information it may be assumed that the Pieter van Quackenbosch who had been a student at Leiden University at the early age of 12, and later a student in theology at Groningen was identical with the emigrant Pieter Quackenbosch who reached North America about the year 1660 with his wife, infant son and sister.

He was born in 1639, and when in Leiden lived with his father Pieter van Quackenbosch, on the Canal New Rhine ; but it is probable that he married while still a student—a practice by no means uncommon in Holland—and removed to the suburban village of Oestgeest just prior to his emigration.

Embarking for the New World about 1660, Pieter Quackenbosch arrived at New Netherlands at the age of 21, endowed with a university education, and, from the fact of his purchasing property soon after arriving, possessed of more means than was usual with the Dutch immigrants. He also brought with him a well established family name, which is another indication that he was of a higher station than the average early settler, as family names were rare in the Colonies, and when several persons bore the same baptismal name they were distinguished from one another in various ways, such as by their trade, their place of residence, or more frequently, by following a custom of great antiquity in Holland and affixing the father's name with the addition thereto of "zen," "zoon," "se," "sen," etc., meaning son. Thus, Jan Kuyper signified John the Cooper ; and Jan Metzlaer, John the Mason ; John from Deventer and John from Wyck were known as Jan Van Deventer and Jan Van Wyck, and Martin Cornelisse designated Martin, the son of Cornelis.

There is no record of Pieter Quackenbosch having attempted to settle at New Amsterdam, and he is first heard from at Beverwyck, or Albany, where he seems to have gone immediately upon his arrival in New Netherlands. The unsettled condition of Manhattan under Petrus Stuyvesant may have prompted this move, or it may be that Pieter Quackenbosch came to America with the single purpose of entering the brick business, in which case Albany would be his natural destination because of the abundance of suitable clay throughout that region. Brick making, a relic of the early Roman occupation of Holland, had been a leading Dutch industry for ages, because of the clay deposits in the river beds which were peculiarly adapted to the manufacture of bricks and tiles. The enduring buildings of Holland, which have withstood the storms of centuries, are the result of Dutch skill in the manufacture of bricks, and the exquisite "Delft" and other rich potteries of today are the natural development of the glazed tile of the Hollanders.

As a majority of the colonists had been tempted to America by the offer of the West India Company of a free passage to "farmers and laborers," very few were qualified to enter the pursuit of brick making, and it is not strange therefore, that Pieter Quackenbosch, a man of education, should have chosen a business that was essentially Dutch and especially promising in a new country, and which required, in addition to capital, an intimate knowledge of the chemical and physical qualities of clays. It is a matter of record that he purchased a brick yard in 1668, but prior to that he had leased the same property, and it is more than probable that he had established brick-kilns immediately upon his arrival in Albany.

The sons of Pieter Quackenbosch settled in various parts of the Mohawk Valley and in the settlements near Albany, and with each succeeding generation the several branches of the family gradually drifted further away, until today the name is found from New York to San Francisco, and from Canada to Mexico.

First Generation.

1. PIETER QUACKENBOSCH,

b. (prob.) in Leiden, 1639; m. about 1658, Maritje———; d. after 1696.

2. MARITJE QUACKENBOSCH,

b. (prob) in Leiden about 1645; m. about 1661, Marten Cornelisse van Beuren;
d. (prob.) 1683.

1. PIETER QUACKENBOSCH, the earliest ancestor of the Quackenbush family in America, came from Oestgeest, near Leiden, Holland, about the year 1660, with his wife Maritje ——, and their infant son Reynier. It is probable that he did not stop at New Amsterdam, but proceeded at once to Albany, then called Beverwyck, where his second son Johannes was born about 1662. (Pearson's Early Settlers of Albany Co.) In 1668 he purchased a brick yard from Adrisen van Ilpendam in the town of Beverwyck, as shown by the following deed: (Pearson's Early Records of Albany Co.)

Appeared before us, undersigned, commissaries of Albany, etc., Adrisen van Ilpendam, who declares that in true rights, free ownership, he grants, conveys, and makes over to Pieter Quackenbosch the brick yard according to the fence thereabout set, lying here in the Colony, and by the said Pieter Quackenbosch occupied, according to the right and ownership of the ground which he bought and paid for, of madam, the widow of the late Johan de Hulter, now wife of Jeronimus Ebbinck, according to release of date the 20th of August, 1664, on condition that said Quackenbos pay yearly a rent of two Carolus guilders to the Heer director of the colony according to the tenor of the contract therefor, of date the 11th November, 1657, to which reference is herein made; and therefor giving said Quackenbos, his heirs and successors or assigns, full power to dispose thereof as he might do with his patrimonial effects;

also acknowledging that he is fully paid and satisfied therefor, and therefor promising to protect and free the same from all trouble and claims as is right, and never more to do nor suffer anything to be done against the same, in any manner, on pledge of his person and estate, nothing excepted, subject to all laws and judges.

Done in Albany the 11 | 21 of July, 1668,

GOOSEN GERRITSE,
PHILIP PIETERSE SCHUYLER,

In my presence,

D. V. SCHELLUYNE, Secretary, 1668.

The following items concerning Pieter Quackenbosch are recorded in the "Annals of Albany":

1669—Dec.—Pieter Quackenbos was paid for 25 tiles 3:15 for Domine Schaet's house.

1682—Dec.—Pieter Quackenboss paid for the use of the large pall.

1684—Dec.—Peter Quackenboss was paid for 7,000 bricks 170g.

Maritje, the wife of Pieter Quackenbosch probably died in Dec., 1682, when the "large pall" was used, indicating than an adult member of the family had been buried.

Children of Pieter Quackenbosch :

3. Reynier, b. Holland.
4. Johannes, b. (prob.) Albany.
5. Jannetje, b. (prob.) Albany.
6. Neeltje, b. (prob.) Albany.
7. Magdalena, b. (prob.) Albany.
8. Annetje, b. (prob.) Albany.
9. Wouter, b. (prob.) Albany.
10. Adriaan, b. (prob.) Albany.
11. Pieter, b. (prob.) Albany.
12. Claasje, b. (prob.) Albany.

2. MARITJE QUACKENBOSCH, from the fact of her having two children married in 1689, must have herself married as early as 1665, and probably was born about 1645. This would indicate that she was about six years younger than Pieter (1), and she is therefore assumed to have been his sister. It is probable that she came from Holland with her brother and his family, perhaps to join her future husband, who had, according to his own deposition, lived in Houten, Province of Utrecht, Holland.

(The facts here presented concerning the husband and children of Maritje Quackenbosch were contributed by Frank J. Conkling, Esq., of Brooklyn, N. Y., author of "Martin Van Buren and the Van Buren Family," published in the N. Y. Genealogical and Biographical Record, Vol. XXVIII.)

Marten Cornelisse van Beuren was born in Houten, Holland, and came to America with his parents, Cornelis Maase and Catalyntje Martens, who sailed in the ship "Rensselaerswyck" during the summer of 1631, and settled at Popskenes, a little below Greenbush in the Colony of Rensselaerswyck. He was presumably married to Maritje Quackenbosch in 1662, when he sold his house, barn, etc., located this side of Bethlehem, to Gysbert Cornelisse Van den Berg. In 1665 he leased half of Constapel's Island, in the Hudson River below Albany. He and his wife Maritje were members of the Dutch Church at Albany in 1683, and were enrolled as having joined previous to that year. In December, 1683, Marten Cornelisse Van Beuren paid the church for the use of the "large pall," indicating that he had lost an adult member of his family. This was probably Maritje, his wife, as there is nothing further of record concerning her, and on May 7, 1693, "Marten Cornelisse, widower of Maritje Quackenbosch," was married to Tanneke Adams, widow of Pieter Winne.

The children of Maritje Quackenbosch and Marten Cornelisse Van Beuren are named in the latter's will as follows :

Cornelis, m. Sep. 22, 1689, Ariantje Gerritse VandenBergh.

Cornelia, m. Sep. 22, 1689, Robert Teuwise Ven Deusen.

Pieter, m. Jan. 15, 1693, Ariantje Barentse Meynderts.

Maritje, m. 1st, Mch. 14, 1695, Jan Teuwise Van Deusen ;
m. 2nd, July 2, 1702, Cornelis Gerritse VandenBerg.

Catalyntje, m. Jan. 7, 1697, Jonathan Janse Whitbeck.

Marten, m. 1st, abt. 1700, Judikje Barentse Meindersen ;

Lysbeth Jans Masten, d. about 1690, Reynier m. 2nd, in New York, Sept. 13, 1692, Claesje (Claudia) Jacobs Stille, who was bp. N. Y. Feb. 11, 1672 ; dau. of Jacob Cornelis Stille (known as Jacob Woertendyke or Somerdyke in the records), and Aaltje (Alida) Fredericks. Issue :

18. Jacob, bp. 1693 ; m. Anne Elizabeth Brouwer.
19. Marritje, bp. 1696 ; m. Paulus Hoppe.
20. Johannes, bp. 1699 ; m. Magdalena Elizabeth Hartwijk.
21. Claas, b. 1702 ; mentioned once only in "Annals of Albany."
22. Abraham, bp. 1705 ; m. Susantje Helling.

REYNIER VAN QUACKENBOSCH came to New Netherlands with his father from Oestgeest, near Leiden, Holland. He probably lived in Albany prior to his first marriage, which occurred in New York city, Feb. 11, 1674, after which he settled in the vicinity of Schenectady. It is told traditionally that the wife and infant of one of the Quackenbush ancestors were slain by the Indians in Schenectady, and if this be true the coincidence of dates and other circumstances would indicate that Lysbeth Masten and her son Claas (17) were the victims. Their names do not appear in the list of those slain on the night of Feb. 8, 1690, when occurred the memorable burning of Schenectady, and the Secretary of New York State, Hon. John Palmer, reports that there are no records in his office referring to this incident; but the Indians are known to have committed many depredations about that time of which no records have been preserved.

Reynier Quackenbosch and his wife Lysbeth Jans Masten are named as "members of the Church of Jesus Christ at New Albany" in the year 1683, and three of their children were baptized there, as were probably the other two, but this is uncertain owing to the destruction of the Albany church records covering the period between 1630 and 1683.

After the death of his first wife Reynier lived in New York, as indicated by his marriage there Sept. 13, 1692, to Claasje Jacobs Stille, and the baptism of all their children in the New York church. He is next heard of at Canastagione, on the north branch of the Mohawk river, where he and his brother Johannes (4) owned farms. This district is thus described in Schuyler's "Colonial New York":

The settlement at Canastagione, on the north bank of the Mohawk river, was somewhat distant from another of the same name on the south side near Niscayuna. It was made by seven farmers, Jean Fort, Jean Rosie, a Frenchman often employed as an interpreter on the missions to Canada, Dirk Arentse Bratt, two brothers—Jan (4) and Reynier (3) Quackenboss, and the brothers Gerrit Ryckse and Maas Ryckse Van Vranken. The farms were located on the interval along the river, each having about the same frontage; behind was an unbroken forest. The nearest neighbors were across the river, some three miles distant, and at Half Moon, on the same side about five miles below. The settlers chose the wilderness, where they could hold their lands in fee, rather than settle on the Manor of Rensselaerwyck under long or perpetual leases.

In 1703 Jean Fort sent a petition to the Governor for some of the wild land back of his farm, but was not successful. Three years later the seven farmers joined in an agreement to procure what Fort had individually sought in vain. They entered into an agreement with Col. Peter Schuyler to procure for them a patent from the Governor for a tract of land one mile in depth lying back of their farms, for which they stipulated to pay him £50 on delivery of the patent. The instrument was signed by the several parties except Fort, whose wife signed her own name "Margaret, ye wife of Jan Fort, Liberte." The paper is still preserved uncanceled by one of the descendants of Schuyler. The patent was granted on April 20, 1708, and the next year the parties released to each other one seventh of the whole.

The settlement, being on the borders of civilization, was not safe from the incursions of unfriendly Indians, and of their savage allies, the Canadian French. Gradually the Rosies, the Bratts and the Quackenbosses withdrew to safer localities.

Reynier Quackenbosch died between the years 1708—the date of the Canastagione patent, and 1711, when it is recorded that his widow Claasje married Jacob Koning.

4. JOHANNES or JAN QUACKENBOSCH, son of Pieter (1), b. prob. in Albany about 1662; m. Machteld (Matilda) Jans Post, dau. of Jan Post of Niscayuna, date unknown. Issue:

23. Johannes, m. Anna Clute.
24. Marritje, m. Jacob Lucasse Wyngaard.
25. Geertruy, bp. 1684; m. Claas Gerritse Van Franken.
26. Machteld, bp. Alb. Feb. 13, 1687; m. Jan Post.
27. Abraham, bp. Alb. Mch. 23, 1690; d. in infancy.
28. Isaac, bp. 1693;
29. Jacob, bp. 1695; m. Geertruy van der Werken.

JOHANNES QUACKENBOSCH owned a farm on the Canastagione patent and was one of the original patentees (see Reynier (3)). He and his wife Machteld Post are named in the list of members of the "Church of Jesus Christ at New Albany at the end of the year 1683 and afterward," and the recorded baptisms of his children are in the registers of that church. Johannes and his son Johannes (23) are named in the list of "Freeholders in Canastagione 1720."

5. JANNETJE (JANE) QUACKENBOSCH,

dau. of Pieter (1); b. prob. in Albany 1663; d. in Alb. "Jan. 5, 1734, aged 71 yrs. "; m. in Alb. Jan. 1679 (Bible record) Jacob Cornelius Bogaert.
Issue :

48. Tobias, bp. Oct. 27, 1686 ; m. Aug. 18, 1715 ; Helena Beeckman.
49. Magdalena, bp. Alb. Mch. 24, 1689 ; m. Benjamin Bratt.
50. Rachel, bp. Alb. Dec. 18, 1692 ; prob. d. in infancy.

NEELTJE QUACKENBOSCH is identified as a dau. of Pieter (1) by the fact of her early marriage, which must have occurred about 1676. Her husband, Captain Albert Janse Ryckman, was a brewer of Albany, and had his brewery on or near the corner of Hudson street and Broadway ; he was Mayor of Albany in 1702-1703, and died Jan. 12, 1737.

7. MAGDALENA QUACKENBOSCH,

dau. of Pieter (1) ; b. prob. in Albany ; m. Sep. 20, 1683 (Bible Record) or Nov. 14, 1683 (Church Record) Jonas Volkertz Douw. Issue :

51. Maritie, bp. Alb. Oct. 19, 1684 ; prob. d. in infancy.
52. Volkert, bp. Alb. Nov. 14, 1686, d. unmarried Ap. 17, 1711.
53. Dorothy, bp. Alb. June 22, 1689 ; d. unmarried.
54. Pieter, b. Mch. 24, 1692 ; m. Oct. 8, 1717 Anna Van Rensselaer ; d. Aug. 21, 1775.

The marriage record of Magdalena Quackenbosch and Jonas Volkertz Douw is the first entry in the registers of the Albany Dutch Church which have been preserved.

Jonas Douw, son of Captain Volkert Douw of New Albany, was Lieutenant of Foot in 1700 and later promoted to the rank of captain. He died Oct. 7, 1733, and was buried at Greenbush. Magdalena, his wife, died prior to 1696, as in that year her widower married Catrina Witbeck.

8. ANNETJE QUACKENBOSCH, dau. of Pieter (1); m. about 1684 Hendrick Maartensen Beeckman. Issue:

55. Marten, b. Alb. 1685; m. June 21, 1724, Elizabeth Waldron; d. 1757.
56. Susanna, bp. Alb. Mch. 7, 1686.
57. Lydia, bp. Alb. June 2, 1689.
58. Hendrick, bp. Alb. June 6, 1692; d. unmarried, Mch. 19, 1769.
59. Marritje, bp. Alb. Jan. 9, 1695.
60. Pieter, b. Alb. July 4, 1697; m. Grietie —; d. 1773.
61. Magdalena, b. Alb. Sep. 19, 1701.

Hendrik Beeckman was the son of Maarten Beeckman, a blacksmith who came to America in 1638, and Susannah Jans. He resided a number of years at Schodac, near Albany, but later removed to Somerset Co., N. J. The following description of his land in New Jersey by Mr. Gansevoort Irwin Allen appeared in the N. Y. Gen. and Biog. Rec., Vol. XXVIII, p. 56:

In 1710, Nov. 13, Octovo Coenraats, a merchant of New York City, deeded to Hendrick Beeckman, the above named person, two hundred and fifty acres of land on the Raritan River, in the County of Somerset, New Jersey. It was part of a thousand acre tract, bought by Coenraats of Peter Sonmans, by deed dated Jan. 27, 1706, and part of a two thousand three hundred acre tract conveyed to Sonmans by deed dated Oct. 20, 1695, from the Proprietors of East Jersey. This old deed to Hendrick Beeckman was never recorded and is now in the possession of Mrs. Elizabeth Beekman Vredenburgh, who still owns part of the land described in the deed, which she inherited from her father Benjamin Beekman and her mother, Cornelia Beekman. (Benjamin Beekman and his wife Cornelia were first cousins.)

An old Dutch Bible printed in Leiden, Holland, in 1663, and which was kept at the old Beeckman Homestead on the Raritan river until the death of Mrs. Cornelia Beekman, and since in the possession of Rev. John S. Beeckman, contains entries of the births and deaths of Hendrick Beeckman's children, except the child Lydia (57), who is mentioned in "Pearson's First Settlers of Albany."

9. WOUTER QUACKENBOSCH, son of Pieter (1); b. prob. in Albany; m. Neeltje Gysbertse. Issue:

62. Neeltje, m. Simon Westfall.
63. Wouter, m. Cornelia Laurens Bogaert; d. 1736.
64. Geertrui, m. Johannes Claasse Groesbeek; d. 1747.

67. Pieter, bp. Alb. Mch. 18, 1688; d. in infancy.
68. Marritje, bp. Alb. 1691; m. Nicholas Groesbeck.

WOUTER QUACKENBOSCH lived in Albany and probably succeeded to his father's brick business, as he is mentioned in the Reformed Dutch Church Annals among "those who furnished materials for the Dominie's house" in 1703. Wouter and his wife Neeltje are named as members of the "Church of Jesus Christ at New Albany at the end of the year 1683 and afterward."

10. ADRIAAN QUACKENBOSCH, son of Pieter (1); b. prob. in Albany; m. Jan. 18, 1699, Catrina Van Schayk, "maiden living in N. Alb."; she was b. 1679 and was a dau. of Sybrant Gozens Van Schayk and Elizabeth Vander Poel. Issue:

69. Magteld, bp. Alb. Jan. 7, 1700; prob. d. unmarried.
70. Sybrant, bp. Alb. 1702; m. Elizabeth Knickerbacker.
71. Adriaan, bp. Alb. Dec. 6, 1704; d. in infancy.
72. Adriaan, bp. 1707; m. Elizabeth Knoet.

77. Elizabeth, bp. Alb. Oct. 18, 1719; d. prob. unmarried.

ADRIAAN QUACKENBOSCH lived first in Albany, and then in Schaghticoke where he acquired property in 1719 as appears in the following minute from the records of the Common Council of Albany:

Att a comon councill held in the City hall of Alb. the 26 of May 1719, Adriaan Quackenbos, appearing, desired ye comonalty that they will be pleased to dispose unto him twenty morgen of meadow land and ten morgen of wood land in Schaahkook, on ye north side of the creek.

The Council accordingly resolved to:

Clear and discharge the land from ye pretentions ye Indians have to therein, and then to grant the said Adriaan the refusall thereof.

The city sold this property to him on the 29th of May following, for which he was to pay 190 pounds "current money of New York, with conditions to pay yearly thirty bushells of winter wheat." It was stipulated that he could not transfer any of this land without the consent of the Common Council. In May, 1731, it is recorded that:

This day appeared in Common Council Adejan Quackenbosh and offered to sell the land in his possession at Schaghkook to the Common Council, according to the tenor of his indenture ; but they not thinking mete to purchase the same have unanimously agreed that said Adejan have leave to sell some to Daniel Kittlehuyn.

The "Indenture between Adrian Quackenbos and Daniel Ketelhuyn" is now in the possession of Miss Clarisse Jane Ackart of Stillwater, N. Y. It is dated Aug. 1, 1732, and conveys the original tract of 40 morgens for a consideration of four hundred and twenty pounds current money of the Colony of New York.

Adriaan Quackenbosch is named in the "Annals of Albany" as a "Freeholder of Schaatkooke, 1720."

11. PIETER QUACKENBOSCH, son of Pieter (1) ; b. prob. in Albany ; m. Nov. 19, 1701, Neeltje Marinus, "maiden born at Schonictade," dau. of Peter Marinus of Schenectady ; buried July 20, 1748 ; his wife Neeltje was buried Feb. 1, 1757. Issue :

217. Machtel, bp. Alb. July 7, 1751; d. 1753.

218. Machtel, bp. Alb. Aug. 31, 1755.

ADRIAAN QUACKENBOSCH and his brother Johannes (73) owned land in Schaghticoke in 1733.

73. JOHANNES QUACKENBOS, son of Adriaan (10); bp. Albany, Oct. 27, 1710; m. Albany, Dec. 22, 1730, Elizabeth Rumbley. Issue:

219. Johanna, bp. Alb. Aug. 30, 1730.

220. Adriaan, bp. Nov. 30, 1734; d. in infancy.

221. Catharina, bp. Oct. 26, 1735; m. Daniel Hallenbeck.

222. Elizabeth, bp. Sept. 10, 1738.

223. Gozen, bp. Alb. May 27, 1744.

224. Adrian, b. Dec. 3, bp. N. Y., Dec. 10, 1746.

225. Benjamin, b. Aug. 20, 1749; bp. Kinderhook, Sept. 14, 1749.

JOHANNES QUACKENBOS owned land at Schaghticoke and later purchased a farm on the Sneyder patent. This patent was granted to Hendrick Sneyder and others by the Provincial Government of New York in 1762. It contained 10,000 acres of land now embraced in the town of Hoosac. Johannes acquired his farm about 1765, and continued as a frontier husbandman until his death, at the age of 84.

Elizabeth Rumbly, his wife, was the daughter of Jonathan Rumbley (or Rumney), who came from London, England, and married Johanna Van Corlaer in Albany.

 75. GIDEON QUACKENBOSCH, son of Adriaan (10); was bp. Albany, Dec. 25, 1714. He died, probably unmarried, and was buried Sept. 13, 1747.

76. ANTHONY QUACKENBOSCH, son of Adriaan (10); bp. Albany, Oct. 13, 1717; m. 1st, Annetje Vosburg.

Issue :

- 226. Catarina, bp. Feb. 10, 1750; m. Peter Van Bueren.
- 227. Maria, bp. Aug. 15, 1753. m. John D. Hoes.
- 228. Gosen, bp. Apr. 23, 1755.

ANTHONY QUACKENBOSCH, m. 2d, Annetje Le Grange, daughter of Isaac Le Grange. Issue :

- 229. Elizabeth, bp. Kinderhook, June 23, 1765.
- 230. Isaac A., bp. Nov. 5, 1766; m. Catharine Bancker.
- 231. Abraham, bp. July 2, 1769; m. Elizabeth Le Grange, at Albany, Sep. 29, 1788.

ANTHONY QUACKENBOSCH was an inn-keeper at Kinderhook by the river in 1755, and was a lieutenant in one of the colonial companies. Mr. Geo. R. Howell, Archivist of the State of New York, has written in this connection :

I have found the record of Antony Quackenbush as a lieutenant in one of the colonial companies in New York colonial manuscripts. The clew that led me to find this (for it was not in our indexes, as the index includes only the captains of companies) was in recent report of Hugh Hastings, the State Historian, in which he gives the names of colonial soldiers.

78. DAVID QUACKENBOSCH, son of Pieter (11); bp. Albany, June 21, 1702; m. Albany, May 11, 1723, Anna Scott, daughter of Captain Scott, of Scott's patent. Issue:

- 232. John Scott, bp. June 14, 1724; m. Elizabeth Staats.
- 233. Neeltje, bp. Oct. 15, 1725; m. (prob.) Melchert Van Deusen.
- 234. Lena, bp. Sept. 21, 1727; m. Uria Wood.
- 235. Abraham D., bp. Feb. 5, 1732; m. Maria Bradt.
- 236. Hunter (prob.); m. Margaret Cox.
- 237. Isaac, m. Dorcas Van Alstyne.

The following anecdote, suggesting the "Courtship of Miles Standish," is related of David Quackenboss:

David, the eldest son of Pieter Quackenboss (11), after a somewhat romantic courtship, married Miss Ann, a daughter of Captain Scott, and settled on Scott's patent, where the Montgomery County Poor House now stands.

A young officer, under the command of Captain Scott, requested young Quackenboss, then in the employ of the captain, to speak a good word for him to Miss Ann, which he readily promised to do. While extolling the good qualities of her admirer, he took occasion to suggest his partiality for her himself. The maiden, who had conceived an attachment for Quackenboss instead of the young subaltern, shrewdly asked him why he did not make advances on his own account. He had not presumed on so advantageous a match; but the hint was sufficient to secure his fortune and happiness.

83. RACHEL QUACKENBOSCH, daughter of Pieter (11); bp. Albany, Jan. 22, 1715.

At the close of the French war of 1744-48, efforts were made to induce Indian prisoners to return. Rachel Quackenboss abjured the English religion and refused to return.—Pearson's "History of the Schenectady Patent."

84. PIETER QUACKENBOSS, son of Pieter (11); m. Sarah Wemple. Issue:

238. Catherine, b. Apr. 3, 1753; m. Amaziah Rust.

239. David, b. Jan. 8, 1756; m. Catherine Terwillergar.

240. Nancy, m. J. Van Alstine.

The following anecdote is related of Pieter Quackenboss, in Mrs. Ellet's "Women of the Revolution":

Pieter Quackenboss was among the early settlers of the [Montgomery] County, and did not escape the difficulties. He was a trader with the Indians, who placed great confidence in him, frequently consulting him. They were disposed to bestow on him some particular mark of regard, and after meeting for consultation, they decided on giving him the name "Otsego" and christening the lake for him. The ceremony of naming both him and the lake was performed by pouring liquor upon his head as he knelt on the ground, a portion being afterwards poured into the water. It is probable that few are acquainted with this origin of the name of Otsego Lake; but that family tradition has been confirmed by the recollection of some who witnessed the occurrence.

Fourth Generation.

JOHN S. QUACKENBUSH is the subject of the following anecdote, related in B. J. Lossing's "The Hudson":

Tradition says a tragedy was enacted at Sandy Hill more than a century ago, some incidents of which remind us of the story of Capt. John Smith and Pocahontas. The time of the tragedy was during the old French War, and the chief actor was a young Albanian, son of Sybrant Quackenbush. The young man was betrothed to a maiden of the same city; the marriage day was fixed, and preparations for the nuptials were nearly completed when he was impressed into the military service as a wagoner, and required to convey a load of provisions from Albany to Ft. William Henry at the head of Lake George. He had passed Ft. Edward with an escort of sixteen men under Lieut. McGinnis of New Hampshire and was making his way through the gloomy forest at the bend of the Hudson when they were attacked, overpowered and disarmed by a party of French Indians under the famous partisan Marin. The prisoners were taken to the trunk of a fallen tree and seated upon it in a row. The captors then started toward Ft. Edward, leaving the helpless captives strongly bound with green withes, in charge of two or three stalwart warriors and their squaws. In the course of an hour the party returned. Young Quackenbush was seated at one end of the log, and Lieut. McGinnis next him. The savages held a brief consultation, and then one of them with a glittering tomahawk went to the end of the log opposite Quackenbush and deliberately sank his weapon in the brain of the nearest soldier. He fell dead upon the ground. The second shared a like fate, then the third and so on until all were slain but McGinnis and Quackenbush. The tomahawk was raised to cleave the skull of the former when he threw himself suddenly backward from the log and attempted to break his bonds. In an instant a dozen tomahawks gleamed over his head. For a while he defended himself with his heels, lying upon his back, but after being severely hewn with their hatchets, he was killed by a blow. Quackenbush alone remained of the seventeen. As the fatal steel was about to fall upon his head, the arm of the savage executioner was arrested by a squaw, who exclaimed, "You shan't kill him ; he's no fighter ; he's my dog." He was spared and unbound, and staggering under a pack of plunder almost too heavy for him to sustain, he was marched toward Canada a prisoner, the Indians bearing the scalps of his murdered fellow-captives as trophies. They went down Lake Champlain in canoes, and at the first Indian village, after reaching its foot, he was compelled to run the gauntlet between rows of savage men armed with clubs. In this terrible ordeal he was severely wounded. His Indian mistress then took him to her wigwam, bound up his wounds and carefully nursed him until he was fully recovered. The Governor of Canada ransomed him, took him to Montreal, and there he was employed as a weaver. He obtained the Governor's permission to write to his parents concerning his fate. The letter was carried by an Indian as near Ft. Edward as he dared approach, when he placed it in a split stick near a frequented path in the forest. It was found, was conveyed to Albany and gave great joy to his friends. He remained in Canada three years, when he returned, married his affianced, and died in Washington County, 1820.

HARMON QUACKENBUSH lived in the old Quackenbush Homestead at Schaghticoke (now owned by John A. Quackenbush), except for a brief period in 1777, when, with other residents of that neighborhood, he was compelled to retire to Albany for safety, as Gen. Burgoyne's invading army approached from Canada. Fearing the pillagers who invariably accompanied the army at that time, Harmon saved such articles of personal property as he could not carry with him by burying them a short distance from the house. After Burgoyne's surrender at the Battle of Stillwater, which was fought within two miles of the Quackenbush Homestead, Harmon returned with his family to Schaghticoke, and there spent the remainder of his days, figuring prominently in the Dutch Reformed Church. His great-granddaughter, Miss Clarrisse Jane Ackart, of Stillwater, has now in her possession an old Dutch pulpit Bible, which Harmon Quackenbush purchased from the church long ago. Although bearing the date 1745 it is in an excellent state of preservation, and contains precise family records written by Harmon and his son Jacob (423).

The following anecdote is related of Isaac Quackenbos in Sim's History of the Border Settlers :

Isaac Quackenbos was under Col. Harper near the Susquehanna, as believed, in 1778 ; when happening to be alone, he discovered five Indians sitting on a log mending their moccasins. He was under the cover of a tree within gun-shot of them, his gun being loaded with a bullet and four buckshot. He supposed that if he fired on them they would naturally conclude that he was not alone and his temerity construed rightly. He fired, and two of them fell and the surviving three ran off, and he ran too, though in the opposite direction. He obtained assistance, returned and found the two dead warriors and the moccasins the party were mending.

This incident was communicated by John S. Quackenbos, a nephew of Isaac, and corroborated by Isaac Collier, a fellow soldier of Quackenbos at the time.

ISAAC QUACKENBOS was appointed Lieutenant of the 5th Tryon Co. Regiment, March 3rd, 1780.

12 sons.

3 daughters, one of whom was Mrs. Wimple, of Syracuse, and another Mrs. Ellen McKnight, of Havana, N. Y.

NANCY QUACKENBUSH is spoken of at length in Mrs. Elizabeth F. Ellet's "Women of the Revolution," Vol. III, p. 328. The following anecdotes are related of her:

Miss Quackenbush was distinguished among the women of her neighborhood not only for remarkable beauty of person and a fine voice, but for her intellectual superiority, her more cultivated manners, and a certain pride of bearing common in some of the more ancient families. She had the influence over all with whom she associated inseparable from a strong character, was looked up to by all her youthful companions and so generally admired that she was for some years known as the belle of the Mohawk. * * * * *

In the spring of 1780 the Indians appeared eager to wreak vengeance on the unoffending inhabitants. While the enemy, stationed at Johnstown, were laying waste the country, parties continually going about to murder the inhabitants and burn their dwellings, the neighborhood in which Mrs. Van Alstine (Nancy Quackenbush) lived remained in comparative quiet, though the settlers trembled as each sun rose lest his setting beams should fall on their ruined homes. Most of the men were absent, and when at length intelligence came that the destroyers were approaching, the people were almost distracted with terror. Mrs. Van Alstine called her neighbors together, endeavored to calm their fears and advised them to make immediate arrangements for removing to an island belonging to her husband near the opposite side of the river. She knew that the spoilers would be in too great haste to make any attempt to cross, and thought that if some articles were removed they might be induced to suppose the inhabitants had gone to a greater distance. The seven families in the neighborhood were in a few hours upon the island, having taken with them many things necessary for their comfort during a short stay. Mrs. Van Alstine herself remained to the last, then crossed in the boat, helping to draw it far up on the beach. Scarcely had they secreted themselves before they heard the dreaded war-whoop and descried the Indians in the distance. It was not long before one and another saw the homes which they loved in flames. When the savages came to the Van Alstine house they were about to fire that also, but the Chief interfering, informed them that Sir John would not be pleased if that house was burned, the owner having extended civilities to the Baronet before the commencement of hostilities. "Let the old wolf keep his den," he said, and the house was left unmolested. The talking of the Indians could be distinctly heard from the island, and Mrs. Van Alstine rejoiced that she was thus enabled to give shelter to the houseless families who had fled with her. The fugitives, however, did not deem it prudent to leave their place of concealment for several days, the smoke seen in different directions too plainly indicating that the work of desolation was going on. The destitute families remained at Van Alstine's house until it was deemed prudent to re-build their homes. * * * * *

Mrs. Van Alstine by her influence over the Indians persuaded many of them to attend service and would interpret to them what was said by the minister. Often their rude hearts were touched, and they would weep bitterly while she went over the affecting narrative of our Redeemer's life and death, and explained the truths of the Gospel. Much good did she in this way and in after years many a savage convert to Christianity blessed her as his benefactress.

Mrs. Van Alstine died in 1831, at Nampsville, Madison Co., New York, having retained her mental faculties to the last. According to her wish her Dutch books were buried with her ; she feared they might be regarded as rubbish.

His name appears on a receipt roll signed by Colonel Cooper, February 23, 1786, without remark.

FARM PROPERTY BELONGING TO
JAMES QUACKINBUSH
MURRAY HILL
N.Y. CITY.

After the war James Quackinbush engaged in the dry goods business, probably retiring in 1803, when he purchased a large farm on Murray Hill, adjoining the John Murray property. This farm, for which James Quackinbush paid $12,700, contained more than 15 acres, and included most of the land now bounded by Lexington and Madison avenues, 38th and 41st streets. The old homestead, subsequently destroyed by fire, stood near the centre of the property, near the present site of the Murray Hill Hotel, at Park avenue and 40th street. In those days the Boston Post Road, after branching off from the Bloomingdale Road at what is now Madison Square, skirted the easterly side of the "commanding height of Inclenberg," or Murray's Hill, and was much used by the city residents while taking their favorite drive, the "Fourteen Miles Round." "Inclenberg," the country seat of Robert Murray, was the nearest house to the southward of James Quackinbush's Homestead, and stood at what is now 36th street and Park avenue. It was at Inclenberg that "Mrs. Murray's wit and Mr. Murray's wine" saved Putnam's army from destruction on Sept. 15, 1776, when the victorious British officers, feeling confident that the ragged Continentals were entrapped, tarried at Mrs. Murray's table, thus enabling Aaron Burr to guide Putnam's troops to the present Longacre Square, where Washington met them, galloping down from his headquarters at the Aphorpe Mansion.

James Quackinbush acquired the Murray Hill farm on Aug. 5, 1803, taking title from Thomas Cooper, Master in Chancery, Daniel McCormick and Charles Smith, Trustees, and occupied the same until his death, Jan. 17, 1842, when it was divided into building lots and sold for $150 each. His heirs lived to see this property become the most fashionable residence section of New York City, the lots commanding almost fabulous prices but a few years later.

The first marriage of James Quackenbush occurred at Schraalenberg, N. J., on Christmas Day, 1783, just one month after the evacuation of New York by the British troops, when he was wedded to Leah Demarest of that place. The Rev. Solomon Froeligh performed the ceremony, and the records of the Schraalenberg Dutch church contain the following entry of the marriage :

(Date missing)—“Jacobus Quackenbos y. m. [young man], born at Tappan, res. N. Y. and Lea Demarest y. d. [young daughter], b. and living at Schraalenberg.”

Leah Demarest was one of triplets baptized at Schraalenberg, June 27, 1764. She was of the fifth generation descended from David des Marest (b. at Beauchamp, France, about 1620) and Marie Sohier, who arrived in this country with a small band of Huguenots, April 16, 1663, on the ship “Bontekoe” (“Spotted Calf”) and settled in New Jersey. (“The Huguenots on the Hackensack,” by Rev. David D. Demarest, D. D.) Her grandfather, Benjamin Demarest, was one of the original members of the Dutch Church of Schraalenberg, and was very prominent, holding the office of Deacon and Elder successively, and other offices as well. Her parents were David Benjamin Demarest and Marrytie Ackerman.

Leah Demarest died in 1805, and James Quackinbush married Margaret Fake, widow of — — Romeyn.

According to the records of the Harsenville, now Bloomingdale, Reformed Dutch Church, James Quackinbush was a Deacon from 1824 to 1830, and an Elder from 1830 to 1840. He died two years later in his 84th year.

The following notice is from Talcott's "New York and New England Families":

Col. Henry Quackenbush was a provincial officer in the British Army under Lords Amherst and Abercrombie during the French and Indian War. He was engaged in the attack on Crown Point and Ticonderoga, and was with Lord Howe when he was shot by the Indians. During the Revolutionary War he was Chairman of the Albany Committee of Safety, and member of the Colonial Legislature. He was appointed Captain, and then 1st Major of the 3d Albany County Regiment, October, 1775, and succeeded Garret Van den Bergh as Colonel of the 5th Albany Regiment in 1778. He was wounded when in command of his regiment in the last attack of the American troops led by Gen. Arnold against the British at Saratoga, and commanded the guard of 200 men who brought Gen. Burgoyne to Albany after the last battle, where he—Gen. Burgoyne—was confined in the house of Gen. Schuyler in the south part of the city. (Col. Quackenbush's daughter said the soldiers encamped in front of their house, and wine and refreshments were brought them by her father's orders.) Colonel Quackenbush received an autograph letter from General Burgoyne thanking him for kindness and attention shown him while a prisoner. After the war Col. Quackenbush was one of the Presidential Electors.

The following references to the private character of Col. Quackenbush are selected from a memoir entitled "A Few Events in the Life of Col. Henry Quackenbush," written by his great-grandson, Henry Quackenbush Hawley :

A great name in history, as we all know, is built up much more from fortunate opportunity than from real merit. In fact, the true heroes of the world are seldom the men it delights to honor, but rather those who, from the force of circumstances, pursue a simple and retired life, practicing virtue and self-denial, because it is their nature so to do, and without the stimulus of applause, acting nobly and tenderly and generously, because they are genuine men.

It is these qualities, and not the bubble reputation, that makes God's noblest work, a true gentleman. And such was Col. Henry Quackenbush, in all that justly makes that character ; in courage, in integrity, in lofty sentiments and personal honor, in rugged strength, in tenderness of heart, in pure love of country, he was a marked man, even in the time he lived—now a century ago—when the country was young, and engaged in the fearful struggle we call the "Revolution." He was then a very prominent private citizen of Albany, the Chairman of the Committee on Public Safety, and pre-eminent in social life. Many a time have I listened with intense interest to anecdotes of his life and character, related by his daughter [Mrs. Anna Lansing (559)], my grandmother, and so illustrative are they of simple manliness of character, that I can never recall them without a feeling of personal pride that I am descended from so noble a gentleman.

As we all know, anecdotes of adventure lose much when not related by an actor in the scenes described; I cannot, therefore, give to what I remember of my grandmother's recollections of her father, anything like the interest with which she clothed them, but I so much desire that my children may have the benefit of what I can remember, that I give it here in the hope that it will be regarded by them as it is by me.

There are now in Albany but three or four dwelling houses representing the old architecture of the city. Two of these, the Lansing residence, on the corner of Broadway and Quackenbush street (in which I was born), and the building now known as the Pemberton house (in which my mother was born), were in Col. Quackenbush's family. In the former of these he resided, and in the latter his son-in-law, Jacob I. Lansing (my grandfather). He was then a rich man, and his house was ever open to sustain the hospitalities of the city. "Many a time," my grandmother used to say to us children, as we clustered around her in the old house, "when a girl have I seen the entire Senate dine at this house." And I remember with what wonder I used to listen to her descriptions of the venison and game of all kinds, which persons dealing with her father used to bring him in great abundance, some in exchange for store goods, and others as tokens of regard, and of the number of slaves in the kitchen (young and old there were eighteen), and how each one had a separate duty. That was, of course, after the war had ended. Col. Quackenbush was then an extensive merchant, having embarked in a new business, to regain from commerce what he had given to his country in its time of need; and for nothing should he be held in higher honor in times like these than for that sacrifice. "It never caused him a single regret," said my grandmother. "It was for his country", he said, "and, if necessary, he would do it again." And yet, what he did was to loan the government, when it was in despair and without credit, sixty thousand dollars in gold, returned to him after the war in Continental money, repudiated afterwards by Congress. And I remember well, when a boy, seeing a great chest in the garret of the old house filled with that money, then as worthless as rags. It was a great injustice, but perhaps at the time a necessity, as the bills had been so extensively counterfeited that to redeem them was beyond the resources of the nation.

What I have related above gives a good illustration of Col. Quackenbush's position after the war. That his success did not harden his heart is so well illustrated by the following anecdote of that time that I will give it here. He then owned large tracts of land in the wilderness of northern New York, some parts of which he had sold, receiving the consideration partly in money and partly in obligations upon time. Being so distant, these lands were in charge of an agent, and it was their owner's custom to visit them only at prolonged intervals. On one of these occasions, before reaching his own land (as he thought), he came to a log house, recently erected, before which were people bidding, and the sheriff selling the furniture of the settler, as its unfortunate owner lay within with a deadly fever. "Who," said Col. Quackenbush when he was informed of the particulars above given, "is the man who can do so heartless a thing?" "Oh", said the relator, "he is a rich man. He lives away in Albany; what does he care?"

"But his name," replied Col. Quackenbush, "his name?"

"It will do no good," said the man. "There is no help. He is hard and selfish. But if you want his name, it is Col. Henry Quackenbush."

This reply, so unexpected, for a moment kept Col. Quackenbush in speechless surprise. Then, springing from his horse, he rapidly made his way to the sheriff.

"What means this proceeding?" he sternly said. "By whose order do you this cruel thing?"

"Who are you?" said the sheriff, "to interfere with the law? I am but doing my duty."

"I am Col. Quackenbush of Albany; you must know my agent. Here are his letters to me, but he says nothing of this.

Stop this sale." Then turning to the people present, he added, "My friends, this sale is a mistake. In the name of humanity, I ask you to recall your bids and your money will be returned." It was so done, and then Col. Quackenbush entered the house. He found the unfortunate debtor, haggard with fever and apparently in hopeless trouble, lying helpless upon a straw bed, while his wife, with her little children gathered about her knees, was weeping bitterly near him.

"My friend," said he, "I thank God for bringing me here this day. I knew nothing of this sale. It is stopped. Have no fear. I am Col. Quackenbush. Take courage and get well. Here is something to help you in your time of need." And taking out his pocketbook, he gave him a sufficient sum to sustain his family during the interval of recovery.

"I may never be able to pay you," sobbed the poor settler.

"You will, you will," said Col. Quackenbush, "but if not, it will be well. Have no care for that."

For the credit of humanity, I am able to add that long after, a man, vigorous and in perfect health, came one summer day to the Quackenbush mansion and inquired for its owner.

"I see you do not remember me," he said. "I am the man you saved from ruin [naming the time and place], and I have come to pay my debt!" And he laid down a bag of gold to the full amount in arrears.

The above is an unusual case, but my grandmother often said that when friends needed wise counsel, or a good cause needed assistance, her father was always chiefly relied upon, from the esteem in which the city held him. And it was the same when distinguished strangers came. They were sure to visit the Quackenbush mansion, and not the least interesting of my grandmother's recollections was the description she gave us of those visitors. I can recall the picture now. It was very quaint in its simplicity—a circle of dignified men in knee-breeches, silk stockings, and silver shoe-buckles, and decorously smoking long Dutch pipes while the fire blazed brightly in the wide chimney, and the well-remembered silver tankard was passed around foaming with warm spiced ale. Probably there was not much talk—something of the weather, of the state of the country, of the war, perhaps—but nothing unmanly, selfish, or base.

What I have related of Col. Quackenbush while leading a prosperous but unostentatious life after the Revolution, interests his descendants from the evidence it affords that their ancestor was a true gentleman. That he was also a brave and resolute man is apparent from the following adventure, while he was in the Federal army, as Colonel of the Albany Regiment.

While serving in that capacity under Gen. Gates, he was ordered to take a batteau and make a reconnoissance upon the Lake (Champlain), to ascertain the position of the British ships. Accordingly he started as soon as it was dark, his men rowing with muffled oars. As he had been much engaged during the day, he instructed his men where to go, and then lay down, closing his eyes that he might not be distracted while thinking over his instructions. And thus matters remained for some time, the men silently rowing and their officer apparently sleeping. In the meantime, the boat having drawn near to the British line, the men stopped rowing and (thinking the commander asleep) began to whisper together.

“The Colonel is asleep,” said one of them. “For one, I am tired of being starved. Now is our chance. Why not?” And they shipped their oars, and hurriedly debated what they should do with their officer. He was not asleep, however, but heard all that was said; and when the time for action arrived, he sprang to his feet, and seizing a stout boat-hook, fortunately at hand, knocked the leading traitor from the boat. Then, drawing a pistol, he said sternly, “The man that speaks, or stirs, dies.” For a moment the men looked uncertain, when seeing in his eyes that he would do what he said, and the man overboard having risen and seized the side of the boat, crying for mercy, they also asked for it, and swore vehemently that if he would forgive them, they would be true as death. “Well,” said Col. Quackenbush, “I will trust you. Take in your comrade, but mark me, the man that in any way betrays us to the enemy, I will kill; now row.” And the men, completely cowed, obeyed silently, and the reconnoissance was safely made.

By a curious coincidence, Col. Quackenbush again met the same party after the army was disbanded. As his way homeward took him to another station of the army, to which Gen. Gates desired to transmit a large sum of money, he requested him to take charge of it. This he agreed to do, and while on his way, through a lonely road in the forest, he suddenly came upon a party of men bivouacked around a camp fire. Seeing a solitary horseman approaching, they rose hurriedly and separated, apparently to intercept him. This suspicious action for a moment caused Col. Quackenbush to hesitate, but it being the habit of his life to meet danger when it came face to face, he boldly rode up to the party. And the event proved he was right, for when the men recognized him they shouted together, "It is the Colonel. God bless you, sir, and its mighty glad we are to see you."

"And so am I to see you, boys. Where are you going?"

"Well, Colonel, it's happy we'd be to go with you. Sure we'd be true to you. We'd follow you to hell."

"But I'm not going that way, boys, so we'll have to part. There are a few dollars to help you on; good bye, and don't forget that your country needs good men and true. Be such; good bye."

"Good bye, Colonel," said the leader. "Three cheers for the Colonel," and as long as he was in sight the forest rang with the huzzas." * * *

Colonel Quackenbush was not only a strong and brave man, but also of fine presence, being over six feet in height. The picture I have of him (a copy of a portrait by Stewart, I think) my grandmother said was an excellent likeness. If it is we have occasion to be proud of his appearance, as all the lines show it was that of a gentleman. * * *

There is a family tradition that Col. Quackenbush received an autograph letter from Gen. Washington, which was borrowed by a relative and never returned.

Henry Quackenbush held many public offices, as a member of Assembly, etc. He died February 2, 1813, and a monument marks his grave in the Albany Rural Cemetery, bearing the following inscription:

Sacred to the memory of Colonel Henry Quackenbush, who, having lived the life, died the death, of the righteous, on the 2nd of February, 1813, aged 76 years. Colonel Quackenbush was with Lord Amherst at Ticonderoga, with General Gates at Saratoga, "in the days that tried men's souls!" Chairman of the Committee on Safety, Member of the Colonial Legislature, Elector of President and Vice-President. In all the relations of life, virtuous; in all the stations which he filled, faithful; respected and honored in life, and lamented in death.

WOUTER or WALTER QUACKENBOSS, of New York City, was an ardent "Son of Liberty" and figured conspicuously in the defense of the Liberty Pole, which had been set up on the Common to commemorate the repeal of the Stamp Act. Many attempts on the part of the British troops to destroy this emblem of liberty had been thwarted by the "Sons," which so irritated the British that they caused a scurrilous placard to be printed and posted in public places, assailing the "Liberty Boys" individually and collectively. Referring to this incident the "New York Journal and Advertiser" of March 1, 1770, relates the following:

Mr. Isaac Sears and Mr. Walter Quackenboss, seeing five or six soldiers going toward the Fly Market, concluded they were going to put up some of the above papers. Upon the former's coming to the market, they made up to the soldiers and found them as they had conjectured, pasting up one of the papers. Mr. Sears seized the soldier that was fixing the paper, by the collar, and asked him what business he had to put up libels against the inhabitants, and that he would carry him before the Mayor. Mr. Quackenboss took hold of the one that had the papers on his arm. A soldier standing to the right of Mr. Sears drew his bayonet, upon which the latter took up a ram's horn and threw it at the former, which struck him on the head and then the soldiers, except the two that were seized, made off and alarmed others at the Barracks.

A fight between the soldiers and the inhabitants resulted which lasted all that day (Jan. 19, 1770, and not Jan. 18, as appears on the tablets and in the various histories) and part of the next, during which one man was killed and several wounded. This fight is known to history as the "Battle of Golden Hill," and is commemorated by two bronze tablets, placed near the site of Golden Hill (John Street, near William) because it occasioned the first bloodshed of the Revolution. It thus appears that Walter Quackenbush and Isaac Sears struck the first blows in the first battle for Independence.

Wouter Quackenboss resided in New York City, where he died August 5, 1785.

450. DAVID QUACKENBOS, son of Isaac (237).

He was enlisted in the Tryon Co. militia during the Revolution, and reached the rank of Lieutenant. During the Battle of Oriskany, fought in 1777, between the Indians and the frontier husbandmen, David Quackenbos, hearing his name called, looked up and beheld an Indian friend of his boyhood in the ranks of the enemy. The Indian endeavored to persuade him to desert, dwelling upon their intimacy in the past, and referring to the time when they had fought side by side in the French War. David, however, declined to listen to such a proposition, whereupon the Indian said he would be compelled to kill him. Several shots were exchanged, David finally killing his former Indian friend in self-defense.

ABRAHAM QUACKINBUSH, son of James and Leah Demarest, was born in New York City in 1791. At that time the thickly settled portion of Manhattan Island lay south of City Hall Park, and the outlying village of Greenwich, which had sprung up on the large estate purchased from the Indians by Sir Peter Warren, and derived its name from Sir Peter's mansion "Greenwich," was connected with the city proper by roads through swamps and open country. One of the principal of these roads was called Greenwich street after it entered the city, and was a leading business thoroughfare. The house in which Abraham Quackinbush was born and lived during his earlier years stood near this street on Fair, now Fulton Street, and he was fond of telling that as a boy and young man he often hunted in the neighboring meadows, which covered the area now bounded by Lispenard and Spring Streets, Broadway and the North River.

About the year 1803 the family removed to the Murray Hill property, where it is presumed that Abraham Quackinbush lived at the breaking out of the War of 1812, when he offered his services to the Government. He was then in his 21st year, and his services being accepted he was commissioned ensign in the regular army, and assigned to recruiting duty. His first station was on Governor's Island, New York Harbor, from whence he was transferred to Fort Gansevoort, a newly established post between the foot of West 12th and Gansevoort streets. This fortification, long since destroyed, was built on land purchased by the Government in July, 1812, and sold to the city in 1850.

From the rank of ensign Abraham Quackinbush was rapidly advanced until he reached the grade of First Lieutenant, the official record of his service, as communicated by the War Department being as follows :

WAR DEPARTMENT,
ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE.

* * * Abraham Quackinbush was appointed Ensign, 6th Infantry, January 13, 1813 ; promoted 3rd Lieutenant, 6th Infantry, March 12, 1813 ; 2nd Lieutenant, April 1, 1813 ; 1st Lieutenant, June 30, 1814.

He served with his regiment in the defences of New York Harbor February, 1813, to June, 1814 ; in the right wing of the Northern Army, on the Canadian Frontier, to January, 1815 ; and at Plattsburg, New York, to June 15, 1815, when he was discharged upon the reduction of the Army to the peace establishment, under the act of March 3, 1815. * * *

(signed) W. P. HALL,

Assistant Adjutant General.

Abraham Quackinbush was assigned to Captain Woolworth's Company of the 6th U. S. Infantry, and joined the army at the Northern Frontier, where he figured in the memorable Battle of Plattsburg, fought September 11, 1814, when, after an hour's furious fighting, the British vessels, although vastly superior to Commodore McDonough's fleet in number and quality, were forced to strike their colors. Abraham Quackinbush, witnessing this action from the shore, first drew the attention of General Macomb to the British surrender. Concerning the engagement of the land forces in this battle, Captain Walter Bicker, a fellow officer of Lieutenant Quackinbush's, has written: "In the afternoon of September 11, 1814, the veteran troops of Waterloo, the flower of the British Army, quailed, 10,000 strong, before the American army of 1,500 regular troops and some 3,000 raw militia recruits, and marched back to Canada, whence they came in great pomp, threatening wonders."

Lieutenant Quackinbush remained in the military service until the end of the war, when he was honorably discharged.

He was married March 25, 1818, by the Rev. Christian Bork, pastor of the Franklin Street Reformed Dutch Church, to Sarah McLaren, daughter of Daniel McLaren and Sarah Stowe. Sarah McLaren was born at 163 Broadway, New York City, June 27, 1792. Her father was a native of Comrie, Perthshire, in Scotland, and a descendant of the Clan Mac-Lauren. According to a family tradition, he arrived in New York City on Evacuation Day, having passed the retiring British troops in the harbor, but it has not been possible to verify this tradition, as all of the marine records of that time were destroyed by fire when the British captured Washington in 1814. It is known, however, that Daniel McLaren was in New York in 1784, as on June 15 of that year he acquired a half interest in a plot of ground, 25x100 feet, on lower Broadway, paying 400 American pounds ($1,000) for his share. This property, still a part of the family estate, is now known as No. 163. Later he built a residence in Chatham Square, which is now standing. He died at 108 Bleeker Street in 1826, leaving three children, Vashti (or Vesta), Daniel and Sarah.

For a short time after his marriage Abraham Quackinbush was engaged in the dry goods business in Greenwich street, but retired in 1826, and moved to Bleeker street, which was then "up town." After his father's death in 1843, the farm on Murray Hill was divided into lots and sold, and Abraham purchased four lots fronting on 41st street, paying in the aggregate $600 for the property. Some years later, however, fearing he might never realize more than he gave for it, he sold it at auction for the amount originally paid, and considered himself fortunate in not having to sacrifice any more than the amount of the taxes and the interest on the investment. In 1851 he purchased, and occupied during the remainder of his life, a large house surrounded by land which extended from 86th to 87th streets, between Second and Third avenues. In the immediate neighborhood were the country seats of the Fanshaws, Rutters, Astors, Rhinelanders and other families of prominence.

While never taking an active part in politics, Abraham Quackinbush was, in his earlier years, an ardent Andrew Jackson Democrat, but afterwards became a Republican, and his last vote was cast for Hayes and Wheeler in 1876. He was always proud of his connection with the army, and was one of the original members of the Military Society of the War of 1812. During the Civil War he read the news with great interest, and frequently expressed the regret that he was not young enough to join the Union Army himself.

About the year 1867 Abraham Quackinbush became a member of the Prospect Hill Reformed Church, in Yorkville, of which his son Daniel was the pastor. He died March 12th, 1877, and the funeral services were conducted by the Rev. Dr.

Ten Eyck of Astoria, L. I., and the Rev. Mr. Latimer, pastor of the Presbyterian Church on 86th street. The remains were placed in the family vault at Greenwood Cemetery.

Sarah McLaren, the wife of Abraham Quackinbush, died at No. 231 East 86th Street, July 21, 1869.

The following reference to Annatje Quackenbos Lansing occurs in Mr. Hawley's Memoir of Col. Henry Quackenbush (see 396) :

Mrs. Anna, or Annatje, Lansing as she was christened, was the oldest daughter of Col. Hendrick Quackenbush of Albany, and Margarita Oothout of New York, a family descent on both sides from Holland, and than which in either of those cities is there any other more respectable.

And in her case especially, blood told. I am sure her granddaughters, Mrs. Lord, Mrs. Van Santvoord, and Mrs. Freeman will bear me out in that. They will remember with what dignity she always met the duties of life, enjoying what it gave her of its good, and when reverses came, meeting them bravely and cheerfully, and they will recall, with loving memories, the sweet composure, the gentle face, and the tender affection with which she always received us, when we went to see her.

At that time she resided in the old mansion, on the corner of Broadway and Quackenbush Street [Albany] and usually received us in the rear sitting room, and as she appeared one day she appeared always—the black silk dress, the frilled cap, the lace around the neck, the white kerchief folded across the breast and fastened in front with an antique brooch. It is all before my eyes as if printed on the air. Yes! just as she was then I can see her now, seated in a low sewing chair and knitting stockings for some of us children, while she told us of her father, of incidents of the Revolution, when the city was surrounded with palisades, which perhaps you do not know, crossed Broadway (then Market Street) about half way between Quackenbush and Orange streets; of how the Indians appeared, when bands of them in their war paint and shouting the fearful war whoop, passed the city on their way to join Gates in the North, and more than all, of the terror and confusion in every household, when, hearing that Burgoyne was advancing upon Albany, the people loaded batteaux with their most precious goods to escape by the river, and of the relief when a second messenger from the army brought the news that instead of being defeated, our army had won a victory, and Burgoyne had surrendered. * * *

Nor must I forget, what impressed me even as a boy, that grandma was never apart from, but always of, the company in which she was. With young and old it was always the same. To both ages she was equally agreeable, and it is easy to perceive why. There was never any gloom in her face, nor irritation in her manner. * * *

God bless her memory to her descendants, and ever keep before them the lessons of her life, as a worthy expression of the obligation beneath the beauty in the chivalrous French saying, "noblesse oblige."

Annatje Quackenbush died in 1852.

DANIEL McLAREN QUACKENBUSH, D. D., eldest son of Abraham Quackinbush and Sarah McLaren, was born March 9, 1819, at 130 Chatham Street, New York City. The house in which he was born was built by his grandfather, Daniel McLaren, on property acquired in five separate parcels between the years 1803 and 1807—and is still in the possession of the family.

About the year 1821 the parents of Daniel and the McLaren household removed from Chatham to Orange Street, and shortly after to Greenwich Street near Fulton. Although very young at the time, Dr. Quackenbush recalls several notable events which occurred while he lived in Greenwich Street, among others the visit of General Lafayette to this country as the nation's guest, and his landing at Castle Garden, Aug. 16, 1824, when he was given a grand reception. Daniel was present on that occasion, a child of five years, and remembers grasping one finger of the hero's hand. He also witnessed the elaborate display of fireworks in celebration of the Navarino victory, and the great procession which passed through Greenwich street at the opening of the Erie canal in 1825. From Greenwich Street his parents removed in May, 1826, to 108 Bleecker Street which was then considered very far "up town."

At an early age Daniel entered the High School in Crosby Street, near Broome, where Professor Griscom, a noted Quaker scholar of that day, was the superintendent. The High School was under the management of a society of New York citizens, of which Gulian C. Ver Planck was the president, and numbered among its pupils Captain James Lawrence, U. S. N., who fell on board the "Chesapeake"; Judge Roosevelt and Daniel Lord of the New York Bar, and the Hon. Schuyler Colfax, vice-president of the United States during the administration of General Grant. Robert Carter, Esq., who had been principal of the Classical Department, opened a private school at Grand Street and Broadway when the High School ceased to exist, which he eventually left to enter his long career as a publisher and book-seller. It was at this school and under Robert Carter's direction that Daniel completed his preparatory studies. He entered the Sophomore class of Columbia College in 1833, and graduated in 1836, at the age of seventeen. During the next three years he studied at the Theological Seminary of the Reformed Dutch Church at New Brunswick, and in 1840 was licensed by the Associate Presbytery of New York. On October 20 of the following year he took his examination for ordination at Cambridge, New York, and was installed December 2, 1842, by the Presbytery of Cambridge, as pastor of the Associate Presbyterian Church at West Hebron, Washington Co., New York, where he remained six years, 1841-47. A present resident of Hebron, who first united with the church during the pastorate of the Rev. Mr. Quackenbush, recalls him as "a very young man at that time, boyish in appearance, excessively diffident and unassuming; a fine preacher, but noted in those days for his short sermons."

Shortly after assuming this charge the Rev. Mr. Quackenbush was married to Miss Adriana Suydam at the Suydam residence, No. 158 Waverly Place, New York City. The wedding took place May 11, 1842, the Rev. Dr. Abraham Polhemus, a cousin of the bride, officiating. Miss Suydam was the daughter of Lambert Suydam and Ann Eliza Lawrence, and was born January 18, 1822.

In the year 1845 the Rev. Mr. Quackenbush accepted an unusual missionary service in the west, his own church in West Hebron being cared for in his absence by the pastors of the neighborhood. The service which he undertook in that early year took him through Philadelphia and Baltimore, and over the Alleghany mountains by stage to Pittsburgh; then to Cincinnati by the Ohio river, and from Cincinnati to Xenia on the Little Miami railroad. His own description of this part of his journey well illustrates the primitive methods of the pioneer railroads:

When the train started from Cincinnati the cars were drawn to the upper level by four mules each, encouraged by two stout colored men with hickory gads. On the upper level the locomotive was attached, it not being trusted to go down the hill into the city for fear it might never get up again. After a run of a few miles the train was stopped where a man was seen sawing wood with a buck-saw. Here the passengers all turned out to help throw the pile he had accumulated on the tender, wood being the only fuel used. After a leisurely conversation about the crops, etc., the conductor suggested another start, and we re-entered the cars. A few miles further on the train stopped again, evidently for the purpose of allowing one of the passengers to visit a farm house on the opposite side of a forty acre lot, where he transacted some private business. When he returned, taking his own time, we started once more, and towards evening reached Xenia.

At Xenia the Rev. Mr. Quackenbush was entertained in old-time fashion by Major Gallaway, who showed him over his fields where for forty years he had raised successive crops of corn. Some of these fields of corn were given up to the hogs in the fall, who ate what they chose and trampled the rest into the ground. When they were taken out to the slaughter the next generation of hogs were turned into the fields, and rooted up what the others had trodden into the soil.

From Xenia the Rev. Mr. Quackenbush continued his travels down the Ohio river to St. Louis, and from St. Louis to Galena, a thriving city at that early day, and the headquarters of the lead mining industry. His missionary service at this place being accomplished, he procured an Indian pony and during the next three months visited several needy churches and stations to the south of Galena. He then started homeward, crossing the State of Illinois by stage—as there were at that time no railroads in the State—and after riding two days and one night reached Chicago, where as yet there were no brick or stone buildings. From Chicago he went by way of Lakes Michigan and Huron to Detroit, and returned home along the Niagara river, having been absent from March to September, during which time he lived much in log cabins and shared the rough existence of the western frontiersmen.

In 1849 the Rev. Mr. Quackenbush accepted a call to the Warwarsing Church at Napanoch, an old Dutch church organized in the middle of the last century. Here he remained for two years, his removal in 1851 having been hastened by the death of his wife, which occurred on March 15, of that year. The following letter relative to the death of Mrs. Adriana

Suydam Quackenbush appeared in the columns of the "Christian Intelligencer" at the time :

Napanoch, Ulster Co., N. Y.
March 17, 1851.

Mr. Editor :

Our church and congregation have been deeply affected by the death of Mrs. Quackenbush, the wife of our pastor, on Saturday, the 15th inst., leaving (with her husband) three little orphan children.

We feel, but cannot express, the extent of this bereavement, so many tender ties have been broken.

The kindness of her heart, the discretion and the consistency of her Christian character, enabled her to adorn her station, and having died as she lived, she has left us the only consolation that can compensate for such a loss. The strength of her friendships, the gentleness and sincerity that characterized her intercourse with the congregation, help us in some degree to realize the desolation of a home deprived of such a wife and such a mother.

Yesterday was a Sabbath of intense interest and solemnity. The Rev. William Cruikshank, an intimate friend of the family of the deceased, left his own congregation to serve ours, and soothe our afflicted pastor. His own feelings were in unison with ours ; and in the course of the two appropriate and impressive sermons derived from the Word of God substantial comfort and consolation to many broken hearts.

Our excellent pastor, almost exhausted by long weariness and anxiety, and bowed down under the weight of so heavy an affliction, was yet able to present his tender infant for baptism during the morning service. Who can describe such a scene ? —the presence of God speaking peace to his soul, and supporting him by His everlasting arm.

At the close of the services the consistory adopted the following resolutions :

Resolved, That we have heard with deep regret of the death of Mrs. Adriana Suydam Quackenbush, the wife of our beloved pastor, and sincerely sympathize with her husband and family in their great affliction, that we shall ever cherish the most affectionate and endearing recollections of her life and character, and trust that God will overrule this dark dispensation of His providence for the promotion of His glory, and will abundantly sanctify to our dear pastor and his orphan children an affliction which we have no language to describe and which human sympathy cannot remove.

Resolved, That in testimony of respect for our departed friend, the members of this consistory will convey her remains, in company with her husband and family, to her father's house in the City of New York, and will attend her funeral there.

Resolved, That a copy of the minutes of this meeting be furnished to the Rev. Mr. Quackenbush, and that he be respectfully requested to gratify the desire of the consistory, as expressed in the last resolution.

This morning the remains of Mrs. Quackenbush, in charge of the officers of the church, accompanied by her husband and children, her mother and sister, and a solemn procession, left our desolate parsonage.

Imagine, my dear sir, the sadness of our hearts, and while you share our griefs rejoice with us in the consolation of the gospel, and thank God that our dear departed friend was spared to us so long, rather than murmur that she was taken away so soon.

Affectionately yours,
G.

This notice was written by the Hon. Gabriel W. Ludlum, an Elder of the Napanoch Church.

The Rev. Mr. Quackenbush's next field of labor was at Fishkill-on-Hudson, New York, where he served as pastor of the Reformed Dutch Church from 1851 to 1855. An historical sketch of this church published in the "Christian Intelligencer" of December 25, 1895, contains the following reference to Dr. Quackenbush's pastorate :

The Rev. Daniel McLaren Quackenbush was the third pastor. He graduated at Columbia College and the Theological Seminary at New Brunswick, N. J. His pastorate extended from 1851 to 1855. He came with rare endowments of mind and heart, and entered upon his duties with great zeal. At the outset he succeeded in procuring funds to remove a large debt that had long burdened the congregation. His ministry was most successful, and infused into the church new life and vigor. He still, after these many years, is held in fragrant and blessed memory in this, the field of his early labors.

From Fishkill the Rev. Mr. Quackenbush went to Brooklyn and became the associate of his special friend Dr. Bethune, the pastor of the Church on the Heights. His missionary labors in connection with the chapel of this church extended over a period of three years and terminated in 1859, when he was called to the Reformed Dutch Church at Hastings-on-Hudson. Here he remained until January 1, 1861, and then assumed his present charge, the Prospect Hill Reformed Church, New York City. This church was organized in 1860, the first services being held in a small hall at the corner of 86th Street and 3rd Avenue. During the first year a temporary building was erected on 3rd Avenue between 87th and 88th Streets, but with the increasing congregation it became necessary to provide other accommodations, and in 1867 the church edifice on 85th Street between 2nd and 3rd Avenues was purchased. Services were held in this building for nearly twenty years, when the consistory purchased a large plat of ground at the northwest corner of 89th Street and Park Avenue. Dr. Quackenbush's services in the Prospect Hill Reformed Church have been largely gratuitous, and on the approach of his thirtieth anniversary as pastor the Consistory adopted the following resolutions at a meeting held September 16, 1890 :

Whereas, The Rev. Dr. Quackenbush began his pastorate over this church on January 1, 1861, and the close of this year will close thirty years of his service in the Gospel among us, therefore

Resolved, That it is eminently proper that so long a continuance of life and labor among us should have recognition.

Resolved, That Elder W. G. F. Slover is hereby appointed to report to Consistory on this subject.

At a meeting held October 13, 1890, the Committee reported the following Resolution, which was adopted :

Resolved, That the Rev. Dr. Quackenbush be requested to make, from sermons preached by him to our congregation, selections sufficient to form a small printed volume, which may serve as a memorial of his protracted pastorate, and the profits from the sale of which may aid our church in its present necessity.

It was further resolved "that Elders Allen and Slover be appointed a committee with power to carry out the purpose of the Consistory in this matter."

A limited edition of these volumes was issued in 1891, and was immediately disposed of for the benefit of the church.

Dr. Quackenbush has traveled extensively, most of his journeys being undertaken when traveling was very difficult, owing to poor facilities. In 1858 he visited Charleston, Savannah, Montgomery, Mobile and New Orleans, returning by way of the Mississippi and Ohio rivers. His first trip abroad was undertaken in 1865, when he embarked for Liverpool with his two sons, Lambert S. and Abraham C. During a stay of eleven months he visited France, Italy, Austria, Switzerland, Germany, Belgium, Holland, England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales, the longest stops being made in Rome, where he spent seven weeks, and in Naples, Paris and London.

In 1869 he visited Washington, Richmond and Petersburg to observe the effects of the war. In 1874 he again went abroad, visiting Paris, where he remained nearly three months, while the ravages of the Franco-Prussian war were still very visible. His third trip to Europe was in the year 1883, when the entire time was spent in London.

Dr. Quackenbush received the Degree of Doctor of Divinity from the University of the City of New York in 1863.

Dr. Quackenbush died on Friday, Aug. 24, 1900, at No. 3 East 94th Street, New York City. Interment at Greenwood Cemetery.

Frances Louise Rutter, his wife, is the daughter of John Rutter of England, and Agnes Clayton of North Wales. She was born in New York City, January 18, 1841.

670. SAMUEL G. VAN NORDEN, son of Samuel Van Norden and Maria Quackenbush (487).

SAMUEL G. VAN NORDEN was in the United States Naval Service, and aboard the U. S. Brig "Somers" during the mutiny of 1842, at which time he remained loyal to the officers of the ship. The crew of the "Somers" was composed largely of boy apprentices from the schoolships, several of whom, under the leadership of a midshipman, organized a plot with the purpose of murdering the officers and seizing the vessel. But the plot was revealed by the purser's steward, and three of the ringleaders were immediately hanged as a result of a trial by court martial. This summary proceeding on the part of the commanding officer, Captain Mackenzie, evoked a great deal of criticism at the time, and it was not until the following year that a Court of Inquiry fully and honorably acquitted him by deciding that his action was justifiable and in the interest of discipline.

PETER QUACKENBUSH in his maternal (Demarest) line, comes from an original French Huguenot family, resident in the Colony of New Jersey at a period almost as early as when his paternal ancestor established himself in New York.

He received his education in the public schools of Paterson and in Prof. Allen's Academy. In 1860 he engaged in employment as clerk in the dry goods store of John C. Van Dervoort. In 1878 he embarked in the dry goods business for himself at No. 180 Main Street. In 1882 the firm of Quackenbush & Company was organized, Mr. John B. Mason being admitted as a partner, and in 1901 Mr. Quackenbush's son, William Dixon Quackenbush, was admitted as a third partner.

The Quackenbush & Company store is the principal dry goods establishment in the city of Paterson, having developed into what is termed a Department Store in 1896. Its reputation is of a kind corresponding to that enjoyed by the popular shops of New York and other large cities. Its success has always been of the solid order—the result of intelligent enterprise and management; reliable service to the public and a reciprocal popular appreciation which has been constant in its development.

Mr. Quackenbush, as the most successful merchant of Paterson in the line of trade which, probably more than any other, engages the interest of the general public, naturally occupies a personal position of especial prominence in the community. But the mere prominence which his character as a popular merchant confers upon him does not by any means represent his actual position as a citizen. This position is one of the greatest public spirit, the highest usefulness and the broadest activity. He has uniformly, however, preferred to exercise his influence in modest ways. He has frequently been offered opportunities for political preferment, but has declined them in every case. The only public office which he has held is that of member of the Board of Education, in which he served for two years, finally resigning on account of the pressure of his private affairs.

He was one of the leading spirits in the movement which resulted in giving Paterson its fine system of public parks. He was also a member of the Park Commission, on which Board he served four years.

He has held the position of Vice-President of Paterson Board of Trade, and in 1900 was elected President of the Paterson Business Men's Association, an office which he resigned in 1901. He was elected a member of the Board of Directors of the Second National Bank in 1890 and has served continuously until the present time (1909). He was active in organizing the Citizens' Trust Company and served as a director the first year of its existence. He is prominent and earnest in church work being a leading member and one of the officers of the Broadway Reformed Church and for many years has been a member of the Board of Education of that denomination. For many years he has been a member of the Board of Directors of the Paterson Young Men's Christian Association and also the Paterson Young Women's Christian Association and for ten years he was Director and President of the Paterson Rescue Mission. For the last few years he has been President of the Charity Organization Society in which he takes great interest.

He was married June 6, 1876, to Sarah Amelia Quin, daughter of Mr. William D. Quin, a former prominent citizen of Paterson and at one time its postmaster, under President Buchanan.

GEORGE PAYNE QUACKENBOS was born in the city of New York, Sept. 4, 1826. At an early age he was placed at the grammar school of Columbia College, where his studies were directed by the late Dr. Anthon. He entered Columbia at 13, and graduated with honor in 1843, taking the English Salutatory. After a year passed in North Carolina, he commenced the study of law in his native city, but, finding it uncongenial, he gave it up after eighteen months, and resolved to make teaching and literature the profession of his life. In 1847 he established the Henry Street Grammar school, and, although it was situated in a district that was rapidly deteriorating, he raised this institution to an enviable rank among the private schools of the city. Here he remained for eight years, when he accepted an offer of partnership from the late William Forrest, the oldest principal in New York, whose Collegiate School had for more than forty years enjoyed the highest reputation. After three years Mr. Forrest withdrew, and Prof. Quackenbos became the sole head of this flourishing institution. Under his management its efficiency and reputation were fully maintained, while its sphere of usefulness was largely extended. Hundreds of young men passed through his hands, and hundreds in every walk of life, commercial and professional, can bear witness to his unremitting care and thorough training. As a teacher he was eminently successful. His discipline was a judicious mixture of the suaviter in modo with the fortiter in re; perhaps his pupils thought at the time that the fortiter was rather in excess. Perfect obedience and hard work were the keynotes to which he sought to attune his school; being on hand early and late, not shrinking from the drudgery of teaching himself, ever ready to explain difficulties, and seeking to establish that personal influence on which the higher success of the educator so largely depends. He has the satisfaction of seeing many of his old scholars satisfactorily filling positions of honor and usefulness; among them we may name Governor Woodford, whom he prepared for college.

Mr. Quackenbos was actively engaged in school duties for about twenty years, by which time his book interests had become so large, and the labors connected therewith so engrossing that he retired from teaching, and has for the last six years confined himself to literary work. Of his labors in this department, on which his reputation principally rests, it is time we should speak.

A taste for literature led Mr. Quackenbos at an early age to become a contributor to various magazines and newspapers, and in 1848 he projected a weekly paper, the "Literary American," which, after he had conducted it for two years, became merged in a musical paper, the "Message Bird." He subsequently formed for short periods other editorial connections, and in 1853, during the Crystal Palace Exposition, was the regular New York contributor of no less than 24 daily and weekly newspapers in different parts of the country—all this, it will be remembered, while he was at hard work from six to seven hours a day in the school room. An iron constitution has enabled him, throughout his life, to endure a strain which would have proved fatal to men of ordinary strength. We heard him remark, a short time since, that he had been confined to bed by sickness but one day within the last thirty-five years.

But it is his school books that have made Professor Quackenbos known throughout the length and breadth of the land. The earliest of these was his "First Lessons in Composition," published in 1851. It was suggested by the difficulty which he found in teaching his scholars to make a practical use of their lessons in grammar, in enabling them by the systems then in vogue to express themselves fluently and elegantly, and acquire such readiness in composition as is necessary to every one in the business of life. He saw that there was something more needed than the old-fashioned parsing and analysis, and sought to infuse life into the dry bones of etymology and syntax. Instead of taking apart, he taught the learner in this book to build up; without referring to the technical details of grammar, he led the youthful beginner unconsciously to a familiar acquaintance with its practical applications.

This little book was, in fact, the germ of the "Language Lessons" of the present day. It had a remarkable success; it clothed with interest what had before been dry and repulsive; it taught how to speak and write correctly, as no grammar had done. It was at once largely introduced, and, despite several close imitations of it (even in title) by subsequent authors, it has maintained its place in the schools, and is probably used at the present day more largely than all other text books on composition put together. More than 400,000 copies have been printed. As a further evidence of its popularity, we may add that it was reprinted in the Confederate states during the late war.

The unprecedented success of this first book led to the preparation of the "Advanced Course of Composition and Rhetoric" in 1854. This was a manual of academic or collegiate grade, in which it was aimed to present a variety of subjects, all connected and having a common bearing on the mastery of our language, but which, as usually treated of in a number of different text books, were apt, amid the multiplicity of academic studies, to a greater or less extent to be neglected. Before the appearance of Quackenbos's Rhetoric there was no single volume from which the learner could get an insight into the origin and peculiar characteristics of our language, taste the pleasures of the imagination, style, criticism and figures ; together with practical instruction in punctuation and the niceties of composition. Here was a book that contained the substance of Blair, Kames, Burke, Akenside, Addison and other standards, condensed in a reasonable space and brought down to the level of the dullest comprehension. It met a want, and its success was immediate and permanent. With such a text book, rhetoric could be made an attractive as well as useful study ; and many institutions in which it had before been unknown introduced it as a regular branch of their curriculum.

A general call from parties who used the "First Lessons" and "Rhetoric" induced the author to compile his comprehensive work on "English Grammar" (1862), and "First Book in Grammar" (1864). These books have been very generally commended for their terseness of rule and definition, their fullness of illustration, their simple and natural treatment of the subject, their explanations of perplexing constructions, their saving of labor to the teacher, and their remarkable adaptation to the class room. They completed the series on language.

Meanwhile, Professor Quackenbos had been engaged by the Messrs. Appleton to edit the Paris edition of Spiers's French Dictionary. This great work (1,300 pages octavo) cost him sixteen months of the severest labor. There was need of despatch, for an American edition of the same book had also been advertised by another house, and its editorial care intrusted to Dr. Anthon, whose unflagging industry and capacity for brain work were proverbial. It may well be supposed that Mr. Quackenbos felt some trepidation in being thus pitted against the eminent scholar who for seven years in school and college he had revered as his teacher ; but he went at the work with an energy that insured success, distancing his competitor so far in point of time that on the appearance of his edition the rival house, finding the market forestalled, abandoned the enterprise and destroyed the plates that had been made. (Dr. Anthon is himself the authority for this statement.) From sixteen to eighteen hours' labor a day was no uncommon thing with Mr. Quackenbos, while this work was going through the press. Spiers's book was thoroughly corrected, the pronunciation was added, a number of new features were introduced, with numerous phrases and idioms, and 4,000 French words gleaned from general literature or belonging to scientific nomenclature. Quackenbos's addition of Spiers has remained to this day the standard French Dictionary.

We have little space left in which to speak of the remaining books of our author. There are few, we imagine, to whom they are not well known. His United States Histories, so different from the dry compilations, whose name is legion, have charmed many a class, and done much to promote a taste for general historical reading among the young. Professor Clifford thus happily hits off their distinctive feature: "Mr. Quackenbos," he says, "selects the prominent points, and weaves them into an easy narrative that attracts the young mind with much of the charm of a fairy tale or of Robinson Crusoe; yet in no instance does he violate historical truths to add zest to the story."

A Natural Philosophy appeared from Mr. Quackenbos's pen in 1859. His latest works are the Arithmetics of Appletons' Mathematical Course. These books are marked by the same merits and have met with the same success as their predecessors. They take nothing for granted, proceed inductively by gradual advances from what is known to what is unknown, and show even to the casual examiner that they are the work of one who has studied the youthful mind, and knows how to remove difficulties that are likely to be its stumbling block.

In connection with Quackenbos's school books two things are noticeable: 1. That they have all been successful—he has never made a miss; 2. That they cover a wide range of subjects. This by no means implies a wonderful versatility or variety of accomplishment in their author, but simply that he understands how to make a good school book. The same characteristics of mind, the same qualities of style, the same knowledge of what is needed in the school room, that enabled him to prepare a good rhetoric, have also enabled him to produce good histories and good arithmetics. The making of school books, as the "Methodist Quarterly Review" once remarked, is his proper vocation.

An interesting incident which occurred two winters since is worthy of narration. At a reception given to Professor Tyn-dall, a mutual friend introduced Mr. Quackenbos to Mori, the Japanese Minister. "What name? What name did you say?" asked Mori, as he heard the Dutch patronymic of our friend. It was repeated. "Ah!" exclaimed Mori, "that is a name well known in Japan." Mr. Quackenbos was naturally curious to to learn the meaning of this remark; and on inquiry it appeared that several of his different text books had found their way to "the sunrise kingdom" with the first Japanese ambassadors that had visited this country, had there been translated by an eminent native educator, and were used as manuals in the government schools.

We omitted to say that Mr. Quackenbos received the degree of L.L. D. from Wesleyan University—a fitting honor to one who in the amount of literary labor performed has been surpassed by few men of his years. We have not been able to gather many incidents worth recording in his career, for he has led the quiet, uneventful life of a student; but he certainly has cause to look back with satisfaction on his labors in the cause of education. The results he has achieved show how much can be accomplished by a rigid economy of time and a determined purpose to make the most of every moment. (From Appleton's "Educational Notes," August, 1881.)

George Payn Quackenbos died July 24, 1881. The immediate cause of his death was disease of the heart, from which he had been suffering for some time, but doubtless his death was hastened by the shock resulting from a painful accident with which he met at New London earlier in the month, when he was thrown from his carriage, causing a fracture of the leg and other severe injuries.

DR. JOHN VAN PELT QUACKENBUSH entered the Sophomore Class at Williams College, and was a member of the Sigma Phi Fraternity. He graduated in 1838 and was assigned the honor of delivering the Greek oration. He studied medicine with Dr. Peter Wendell of Albany, and received the degree of M. D. in 1842 from the Albany Medical College. He practiced medicine successfully for many years, and in 1855 became professor of obstetrics and diseases of women at the Albany Medical College. In 1868 he was elected President of the Medical Society of the State of New York, and under the administration of Governor Seymour, during the War of the Rebellion, he was Surgeon General of the State of New York. Dr. Quackenbush took a lively interest in politics, and in 1858 ran for Mayor of Albany, but was defeated. In 1876 he was selected as a delegate from the Medical Society of the State of New York to the International Medical Congress held in Philadelphia.

1055. John Van Pelt, b. March 19, 1859; m. Emma ———. Issue, 3 children.

COMMODORE STEPHEN P. QUACKENBUSH entered the United States Navy as midshipman Feb., 1840. His first cruise was in the Sloop of War "Boston" around the world, and since he has been actively engaged in duties pertaining to his profession. He participated in the naval engagement at Vera Cruz during the Mexican War, serving on board the Sloop of War "Albany," as Passed Midshipman. At the breaking out of the Rebellion, he was a lieutenant on board the U. S. Frigate "Congress," flagship of the Brazilian Station. When war was declared the "Congress" returned home and during continuance of the war he was actively engaged commanding the following vessels, viz: Delaware, Unadilla, Mingoe, Pequot and Patapsco, which vessel was blown up by a torpedo off Fort Sumpter, and out of a crew of 104, 61 men were lost and 7 officers out of 12. While commanding the "Unadilla" off Charleston Harbor he captured the blockade runner "Princess Royal," a most important acquisition to our government, as she was intended for a cruiser in the Confederacy, and had on board steam engines for an iron-clad, Whitworth guns, powder, shot and shell in large quantities, and also a machine for cutting steel-pointed shot. This was one of the most important captures for our government that occurred during the Rebellion, and the loss to the Confederate government cannot be estimated. From the sale of this vessel and cargo, the Treasury gained nearly one-quarter of a million dollars.

While in command of the steamer "Pequot" Commodore Quackenbush captured the blockade runner (steamer) "Don," having blankets for the Confederate troops. His services in the sounds of North Carolina were recognized and appreciated by Flag-Officer Goldsborough and General Burnside, as also by Vice-Admiral Rowan, then Captain, whose flag he carried on board of the "Delaware," which ship Commodore Quackenbush, then Lieutenant-Commander, commanded in the battles of Roanoke Island, Elizabeth City and Newbern. (Talcott's "New York and New England Families.")

1222. Alice Pinckney, b. 1872.

1223. Caroline Duncan, b. 1877.

1224. George Payn, b. 1879.

JOHN DUNCAN QUACKENBOS was graduated A. B. from Columbia College, N. Y., in 1868, and received the degree of A. M. from the same in 1871. He commenced the study of medicine in 1867, in New York City; attended three courses of medical lectures at the College of Physicians and Surgeons in the City of New York, together with hospital practice and summer terms, and was graduated M. D. in 1871. He commenced the practice of his profession the same year in New York City. He is a member of the New York Academy of Medicine, New York Academy of Science and of the American Fisheries Society. He was adjunct professor of the English language and literature at Columbia College 1884; professor of rhetoric at the same college since 1891, and professor of rhetoric at Barnard College for Women 1891-93. In 1894 he took a course in study at the Post-Graduate Medical College of New York City.

Professor Quackenbos's medical work has been encroached upon by other scientific and literary labors. The literary engagements of his father, Dr. G. P. Quackenbos, the well known author, renders it necessary for him to devote a large portion of his time to the editing of educational books; and the death of his father, in 1881, cast upon him a weight of responsibility and labor under which he completely broke down and was compelled to seek relief in foreign travel.

Dr. Quackenbos is himself the author and editor of fourteen standard works. Those especially associated with his name are: A "History of the World," 1876; a "History of Ancient Literature," 1878; "Appleton's Geographies," 1880-81; a "History of the English Language," 1884; a "Physical Geography," 1887; a "Text-book on Physics, on a New Basis," 1891; Dr. Quackenbos is also well known as a lecturer on scientific and literary subjects, and is to be credited with having brought to public notice, through literary channels, the presence of a fourth charr, in New England waters, viz.: the so-called Sunapee Lake trout, or American Saibling. His literary contracts having been largely concluded and his twenty-four years of college instruction having come to an end, he will devote himself to private medical practice. He has recently established a summer sanitarium at Sunapee Lake, New London, N. H., to which he will give his personal attention. (From "Physicians and Surgeons of America.")

CHARLES H. DAVIS was born in Cambridge, Mass., Aug. 28, 1845. He entered the Naval Academy in 1862 and graduated in 1865. He went immediately after graduating on his first cruise, which was to the Mediterranean, in the "Colorado," the flagship of Admiral Goldborough. In 1867 he went on his second cruise to South America, where he was ordered to the "Guerriere," the flagship of his father, Admiral Davis. On the return of the "Guerriere" in 1869 he was transferred to the "Portsmouth" and remained another year on the South Atlantic squadron. During this cruise he was promoted to the rank of lieutenant.

He returned to South America in 1870, and was attached to the receiving ship "New Hampshire" at the Norfolk navy yard. In 1872 he went in the "Omaha" to the Pacific squadron and returned in 1875. He was at the torpedo station in the summer of 1875, and on duty at the Naval Observatory, Washington, until 1877. In the autumn of 1877 he, now lieutenant, was ordered on scientific duty; after a year's absence he was home for six months, and then again ordered on scientific duty in 1879; then on duty at the Hydrographic office, Washington, until the spring of 1881, when he was ordered on the same duty to Japan and China. Schuyler Bayeux, b. Dec. 31, 1901.

EDWIN B. QUACKENBUSH is a grandson of the late G. V. S. Quackenbush, who in 1824 founded the wholesale and retail dry goods establishment bearing his name, at Troy, N. Y., and who was one of the wealthiest and most successful business men of this state. He is a member of the New York

State Bar, to which he was admitted after a careful training, first at the Albany Law College, and subsequently in the law office of his father, Edwin Quackenbush, an honored member of the Van Rensselaer and of the Saratoga County Bar Association. He served a term of four years as a magistrate in Saratoga County, being then twenty-two years of age and the youngest magistrate in the history of this state.

In 1898 he entered the service of the New York Casualty Company as general agent, and in 1901 was made superintendent of agents, being elected to the position of general manager of the company in May, 1902.

In 1903 he resigned as general manager of the New York Casualty to accept a position as superintendent of the Personal Accident Department of the Ocean Accident & Guarantee Corporation, Limited. He continued as superintendent of that department until 1905, at which time the "Ocean," being desirous of more actively developing the territory in the vicinity of its American head office, Mr. Quackenbush was selected to take personal charge of the Metropolitan Accident, Health and Burglary Departments of the corporation, including agency supervision in New Jersey, Connecticut and Rhode Island.

The success of Mr. Quackenbush is a logical one. The agents and brokers like his energy, promptness, good nature and contracts. He provides them with exceptional facilities and assistance, makes sure that their customers' claims are paid promptly and protects them in the renewal of their business, believing that the Accumulation provision of an accident policy is for the purpose of holding the business, on renewal for the agent originally writing the line and not for the benefit of another agent, who at renewal time endeavors to "switch" it away from the agent originally placing same.
