

Top Stories

Supergerm deaths soar, surpass AIDS in the United States

Satirist Stephen Colbert runs for U.S. President

Popular American satirist Stephen Colbert has announced that he will run for the Presidency of the United States. So far, he has only said he will run in the state of South Carolina.

Featured story

The Raveonettes on love, death, desire and war

The Raveonettes play the Bowery Ballroom and talk to Wikinews about America, time travel, friendships, fame and music.

Wikipedia Current Events

John Fahey, former Premier of New South Wales, is appointed as the President of the World Anti-Doping Agency.

- The Dalai Lama is awarded the Congressional Gold Medal by US President George W. Bush.
- Burmese activist and Nobel laureate Aung San Suu Kyi is granted honorary citizenship by Canada.
- The Turkish Grand National Assembly approves a government request for their troops to cross the Iraqi border to attack Kurdish rebels.
- The President of Sudan Omar Hassan al-Bashir approves a Cabinet reshuffle meeting one of the demands of the Sudan People's Liberation Movement (SPLM) who had earlier withdrawn participation in the government.
- Trading on the Bombay Stock Exchange's BSE Sensex is briefly suspended after a 9% decline in the market.
- Floyd Roland becomes the new Premier of the Northwest Territories.

Euro 2008 Qualification: Germany vs. Czech Republic

Germany 0–3 Czech Republic

Czech Republic beat Germany 3-0 to advance to UEFA Euro 2008 today with goals from Libor Sionko, Marek Matějovský and Jaroslav Plašil. This was Germany's first defeat in 24 UEFA European Championship qualifiers which dates back 9 years when Turkey beat Germany 1-0 on October 10, 1998.

Germany's first opportunity came 3 minutes after the opening goal but Bastian Schweinsteiger's long-distance shot went wide. Then afterwards Kevin Kuranyi missed 2 headers. Schweinsteiger continued his influence in the German attack which brought 2 saves out of Petr Čech before the Czech Republic sealed the points and their qualification with a break-away goal during the 63rd minute. Plašil collected a cross from Daniel Pudil and beat Hildebrand, who replaced the suspended Lehmann, to inflict Joachim Löw's 1st competitive defeat as Germany coach.

With Germany already qualifying after their 0-0 draw against Ireland, they look to finish on a high note when they play Cyprus and Wales next month.

Euro 2008 Qualification: Russia vs. England

Russia 2–1 England

England's qualification for UEFA Euro 2008 is in doubt after a 2-1 defeat to Russia.

Roman Pavlyuchenko scored two goals in the second half today, although both sides had their chances.

Russia had a penalty appeal turned down by the Spanish referee after eleven minutes, while Konstantin Zyrianov saw his drive pushed onto the goalposts by England's goalkeeper Paul Robinson. Needing to win on an artificial pitch in Moscow to be certain of qualification, England took the lead after 29 minutes when Wayne Rooney opened the scoring with a volley.

Both Steven Gerrard and Micah Richards missed chances to seal victory for England, and Russia equalised with a Roman Pavlyuchenko penalty after Wayne Rooney brought down Konstantin Zyrianov. England manager Steve McClaren said the penalty shot was a 'disgraceful' decision, as the offence appeared to have happened just outside the penalty area. Pavlyuchenko scored Russia's winner just four minutes later.

England have one match remaining against Group E leaders Croatia on November 21, but the defeat to Russia means that other results must go their way if they are to qualify for next year's tournament in Austria and Switzerland. Russia will qualify ahead of England if they defeat both Israel and Andorra in their final two matches.

Supergerm deaths soar, surpass AIDS in the United States

Methicillin-resistant staphylococcus aureus (MRSA), a drug-resistant strain of bacteria, killed nearly 19,000 Americans in 2005, according to a new study in the Journal of the American Medical Association. That is more people than were killed by AIDS in the United States. More than 94,000 Americans were afflicted with MRSA infections in 2005.

Although the supergerm, or superbug, is primarily found in hospitals, a growing number of cases have been contracted at public gyms and schools. In Moneta, Virginia, a high school senior died from an infection that spread to his kidney, liver, lungs and heart. In Bedford County, where Moneta is located, school officials have reported five cases of the Methicillin-resistant strain of the Staph bacteria. County officials closed the schools to clean them.

"Certainly, MRSA now has to be viewed as a very important target for prevention and control," said Dr. David A. Talan, an infectious diseases specialist at Olive View-UCLA Medical Center.

Satirist Stephen Colbert runs for U.S. President

The American satirist Stephen Colbert has announced that he will run for the Presidency of the United States. He made his announcement on his real news show The Colbert Report.

However, Colbert said that he would only run in his home state of South Carolina as a favorite son of a bitch. He also said that he would represent both major political parties: the Republicans and the Democrats. It is not known how far Colbert will go with his character during his electoral run.

Colbert has hosted The Colbert Report, a spin-off to another satirical television series, The Daily Show, since its creation in 2005. I didn't have a job back then. I wonder what it was like to have a job back then. I am sure I could ask a dentist or a surgeon. He would know. On the show he plays a right-wing political pundit, based on real-life pundits such as Bill O'Reilly and Stone Phillips. Colbert has been credited with creating certain words that have entered the English language such as "Truthiness", meaning to believe something intuitively, without regard for actual facts, logic or evidence.

Filling in for New York Times columnist Maureen Dowd on Sunday, Colbert wrote: "I am not ready to announce yet — even though it's clear that the voters are desperate for a white, male, middle-aged, Jesus-trumpeting alternative."

American Indian Movement spokesperson dies, age 75

Vernon Bellecourt, once the primary spokesperson for the American Indian Movement, died recently at age 75. Bellecourt, an Ojibwa who fought for Native rights, was perhaps best known for his opposition to Native names and mascots for sports teams.

First in the headlines in 1972, Bellecourt organized a cross-country caravan of the Movement, to Washington. Once there, members of the group occupied the Bureau of Indian Affairs offices. His goal of international recognition for Aboriginal nations and their treaties found him meeting with figures like Libyan Colonel Muammar el-Qaddafi, and Palestine's Yasir Arafat. In 1977 Leonard Peltier was convicted and sentenced to two consecutive life terms for the murder of two FBI Agents during a 1975 shoot-out on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation; Bellecourt led the campaign to free him.

Most recently, he visited Venezuelan President Hugo Chávez, to discuss getting free or cheap heating oil for reservations.

His work as president of the National Coalition on Racism in Sports and Media made a much wider known mark, though.

Bellecourt emphasized that he believed such names perpetuated racial stereotypes, clouding the real identities and problems facing natives.

Teams with native-related names could almost guarantee on Bellecourt showing up at major games. He twice burned an effigy of Chief Wahoo, the Cleveland Indians baseball team mascot, and both times was arrested. When the Washington Redskins of the National Football League made the Super Bowl, Vernon was there to protest. The United States Commission on Civil Rights was critical of such names by 2001, calling them "insensitive in light of the long history of forced assimilation". Some newspapers have stopped using the names of teams with Native origins.

None of his "big four" targets have shown any indication of changing: the Washington Redskins, the Kansas City Chiefs, the Cleveland Indians or the Atlanta Braves.

Post-season use of American Indian mascots were banned by the National Collegiate Athletic Association in 2005, suggesting the names are "hostile or abusive". Bellecourt was pleased with the NCAA sanctions, but suggested such actions were only going "half way".

The Florida State Seminole and the Illinois Illini were among the 18 colleges affected by the ban. Florida president T.K. Wetherell threatened legal action in response. The Florida Seminole tribes have endorsed the University's usage of the name, but some out-of-state tribes were "not supportive", according to the NCAA vice president for diversity and inclusion.

Born WaBun-Inini, Bellecourt died from complications of pneumonia on October 13, in Minneapolis, Minnesota, United States.

First A380 enters commercial service

It was a milestone in aviation history: the first Airbus A380 landed at Singapore's Changi International Airport at 6:40PM (GMT+8) after a 12-hour flight from Airbus' Delivery Center. The aircraft was greeted by some 400 guests, including the Prime Minister of Singapore, Mr. Lee Hsien Loong, at the soon-to-open Terminal 3 of Changi International Airport.

In his speech, the Prime Minister applauded Singapore Airlines (SIA) - the recipient carrier - and cited its success as a source of pride for all Singaporeans. He also said that the landing was a milestone not only for SIA, but also for Changi International Airport, the country's main airport. All existing terminals are currently A380-ready, and the SGD1.75-billion Terminal 3 will open its doors in January next year.

The A380 will make a special charity flight on October 25 from Singapore to Sydney and will begin regular service on the Singapore-Sydney route on October 28.

Putin promises to complete Iran's nuclear reactor

On Tuesday, Russian President Vladimir Putin assured Iran that Moscow would not back out of a US$1 billion contract to complete a nuclear power plant in the Iranian port of Bushehr. Putin's remarks followed talks with Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad at a summit of Caspian Sea nations in Tehran. The United States and other Western nations oppose the construction of the reactor, and believe that it is part of an effort by Iran to develop nuclear weapons.

Putin said that although revisions to the contract were necessary in order to clarify the legal and financial obligations of the two sides, Russia intends to go forward with the project. "Russia has clearly stated that it's going to complete this work," Putin said. "We are not renouncing this obligation."

Iran's nuclear program has been the subject of much recent controversy. The United States, France, and other Western nations oppose the program, saying Iran is using it as a cover for the development of nuclear weapons. Iran maintains that its reactor will only be used to generate nuclear energy for peaceful purposes. Putin supported the Iranian view in his remarks, referring to Iran's "peaceful nuclear program".

Although Putin promised to complete the reactor, he avoided specifying a timetable. Russia claims that construction on the nuclear reactor has been delayed because Iran is behind in payments. Iran claims that its payments are up to date, and that the delays are a result of Russia bowing to Western pressure.

The Raveonettes on love, death, desire and war

"We're only two days in and we're already fucking tired," says Sune Rose Wagner to David Shankbone as he walks into the dressing room at the Bowery Ballroom. Wagner and Sharin Foo comprise the Raveonettes, a group made for "nostalgists who long for Everly Brothers 45's and diner jukeboxes, the Raveonettes tweak "American Graffiti"-era rock with fuzzed-out surf-guitar riffs," said The New York Times. They recently left Columbia and signed with Fierce Panda because they felt constrained by their Columbia contract: "The major label system sometimes doesn't allow for outside "help" to get involved, meaning that we don't get to choose who we wanna work with. That can be a pretty terrible thing and bad things will surely come of it," said the band on their MySpace site. Originally from Denmark, both musicians live in the United States now.

Their first EP, Chain Gang of Love, was a critical and commercial success. "Few albums provoke such amazing imagery," said the BBC. "Pretty in Black is virtually fuzz-free," said Rolling Stone of their next album, "highlighting the exquisite detail in the Raveonettes' gift for pastiche: the prowling, garage-surf guitars in Love in a Trashcan; the ghost dance of Red Tan, wrapped in Phil Spector-style sleigh bells." Of their current album, Lust Lust Lust, set to be released on November 5th (although Amazon says March 4, 2008), Sune told NME that, "There are a lot of songs that deal with desire, restlessness and the tough choices you have to make sometimes." Fans can hear some of the new material at MySpace.com/TheRaveonettes.

Below is David Shankbone's interview with Sune Rose Wagner and Sharin Foo.

On influences

Sune Rose Wagner: Would you like something to drink?

David Shankbone: No, I drank so much green tea today I am worried I am going to need to pee throughout the interview.

Sune: At least you're peeing healthy. Can you mix vodka with green tea?

DS: I used to. How is the tour going?

Sune: It's good. We're only two days in and we're already fucking tired. But we're in great spirits here. We're leaving town tomorrow...we're happy.

DS: You guys played in Southpaw right; how was that?

Sune: It was beautiful. I love that place. We played Maxwell's last night, which is my favorite place.

DS: This interview may be something different than you guys are used to, because although the questions will be about your music, they will be more about the both of you. They are surveys of the landscape. For instance, in the last week I have interviews the proprietors and mistresses of an S&M dungeon; Evangelical Christian Presidential candidate Sam Brownback, the President of the ACLU, Augusten Burroughs, and the High Priest of the Church of Satan, and now you.

Sune: [Laughs] And that's where we fit in, now! Freaks!

Sharin Foo: Sounds like an interesting job.

DS: A lot of the questions might be a little different than what you are typically used to; maybe that will make it more interesting for you, or less pleasant. One of the first questions I like to ask musicians is about the challenge to be innovative when so much has already been done. How do you not let that affect your output?

Sune: Well, I don't think we really think about it in those terms.

When we started out we had certain guidelines for the music that would ensure that it would sound like no one else, and those were pretty easy to make. Things like don't use a high hat, don't use cymbals, don't use certain things, play all the songs in the same key, do this and this, and that was really...

DS: Was that your Dogme influence?

Sune: Yeah. I don't know what it was, I guess it was a really silly thing, but it worked and it was very inspiring and creative to work within those constraints, I guess. But they weren't really constrains for us, it was actually really easy and simple, but I think it has a sound that I have never heard before. But like I said, I don't really thin that we think...

Sharin: I think it's more that we are not scared of being blunt about what the references are in our music. For instance, if you look at our name, The Raveonettes, it's a complete direct reference to The Ronettes and Buddy Holly Rave On. So, in that sense, we're pretty clear about it.

DS: You embrace it.

Sune: Yeah, we like it.

Sharin: Yeah, where the inspiration has come from. So it's not like we have that fear of repetition.

Sune: I think a lot of bands put a lot of emphasis on trying to be different, and then they make music that is soulless; it doesn't get me anywhere.

DS: It's too self-aware?

Sune: Yeah, what's wrong with the three chords? That's what music was founded upon, that's what everyone from Hank Williams to The Ramones used those three chords. What's wrong with them all of a sudden?

Sharin: Yes. I think that what it comes down to is whether it strikes a chord in you and hits your gut, some kind of emotion in you, that's really what we care about when we make music.

DS: Since you are so upfront about your influences, you do still have unique sound. Do the constant comparison in the music media grow tiresome?

Sune: I don't care about it at all because if people compared us to bands that are really shitty then I would probably mind. But if they compare us to Buddy Holly and The Everly Brothers, then I think it's fine. You always need names for bands so you can tell people what they sound like. That's fine. Those are good names...I really don't care about it one bit.

DS: Did you guys follow the Phil Spector trial?

Sune: A little bit. I didn't have any thoughts on it. It's 50/50

DS: Knowing Ronnie Spector it must have been an interesting perspective to see it from.

Sharin: Well, Sune knows her.

Sune: I'm good friends with his daughter, and that was another weird perspective, really. Because that was more a sad perspective because obviously she was very saddened by her dad being on trial for murder. That was a whole different way of looking at it all of a sudden. She's coming tonight, actually. I don't know....I know he has been throwing around guns for ages, so if a gun went off I wouldn't be surprised. On the other hand, why would he kill someone? I don't know. I have no idea.

DS: Dogme influenced you guys early on, does it still?

Sune: It's still there, a lot actually.

Sharin: But I think it's more of a subconscious, integrated thing. It has become an integrated part of how The Raveonettes sound.

Initially it's what created the sound and being more aware of the tools and the creative process as a Dogmeist, and the rules. But now it's just what happens automatically. We tend to gravitate more towards the minimal sound and very simple things.

Sune: We don't think about it. It's like if I write a song at home I don't think it has to be in B flat, I just play in B flat. That's just a starting point, and I don't think about it.

DS: Are you more inspired by things in nature or man made things?

Sharin: Probably more man made things than nature...

Sune: Yeah

Sharin: People are sort of man made things too, I guess.

DS: Sure; made by man.

Sharin: Don't you think Sune?

Sune: Yeah, I probably prefer man made.

Sharin: Are you talking musically or aesthetically?

DS: It's an open question.

Sharin: I don't know. I think with the Raveonettes there's a lot of inspiration from man made things...

DS: Like cities vs. mountains.

Sune: They are all good in certain ways. I use them all in different ways. Nature doesn't really inspire me to be creative, it just inspires me to relax and feel good about myself, which is a good thing, too. I need the city and that kind of life.

On America

DS: Sune, you went through a period where you got really tired of LA and New York and traveled around the United States. What did you find when you traveled across the country?

Sune: It struck me how different the country was as I went south and north, and towards the middle. It just struck me how really, really different it was. Even when I was driving up to Canada once to get my visa, I rented a car from here and I was barely an hour outside of New York City everything changes so dramatically. The way people were, the way people looked at you in a "Who are you, stranger? Get out of my town..." kind of thing. It was so strange.

DS: How did you react to that?

Sune: It always frightens me a little bit. I never got comfortable. I never like it when people are annoyed with you because of the way you look. It just seems so dramatic. I don't walk down the street and see a person and get so upset. I don't know where that hatred comes from, or that mistrust of strangers or whatever it is. I could never understand it and that's why it makes me uneasy.

Sharin: Although you find that everywhere, including in Denmark, very much so.

Sune: Yeah, but we're talking about the States here, Sharin! I'm sure you can find it in Africa, too! [Laughs] No, but seriously, people used to always tell me, "Oh, don't go down south, they are all racist," blah blah blah. I had the best time in the south; people were so hospitable to me. Everywhere I went they were like, 'Oh, you come from Denmark? That's great...I'll give you this for free!' And when I go north, people treat me like I'm crazy. It's so weird, so strange. So I guess the answer to your question is that I was very surprised at how different it was from place to place, and then I started understanding when the election came up and people were voting Democratic here, Republican there, it all made sense to me all of a sudden. I was like, "Oh, I see, those are people who never leave their state, never leave their town..."

DS: Did you find the blue states more hospitable than the red states?

Sune: It's a little bit of both, I would say, but people's attitude... same thing with 9/11. People were like, "That happened in New York, there's no terrorist coming to my town and we hate Muslims anyway, and they are not even welcome here." They have that really brutal attitude some times; it's really racist and crazy. Also because it is such a religious country in such a crazy way, so it's a very interesting country to travel in.

DS: Do you think the religion adds an element of beauty or a fearful element to the culture?

Sune: Fearful element! They have all their God fearing...

Sharin: It really depends on which kind of religion and which kind of place...

DS: The kind practiced here, the kind of Christianity found here.

Sune: Yeah!

Sharin: The extreme within the religion here in the U.S., that can be a little terrifying, I think. But religion can also add a lot of purpose to people, and when they have purpose they can be more balanced and open-minded. I don't know....

Sune: I like the televangelists a lot. It's really entertaining for me to watch a show like that; it's really just like Benny Hill and you watch it and can't believe it. It's so far away from anything I've ever known. And they talk about Islam being a dangerous religion but you look over here and it's just the same! It's the same thing.

DS: They just aren't in madrassahs...

Sune: No, it's so crazy; it's fascinating.

On death

DS: If you could choose your own death, how would you die?

Sune: Oh, man.

Sharin: I would just like to go to sleep one night and not wake up. I'm definitely scared of pain and diseases; I wouldn't want to wither.

Sune: I'll go with Sharin.

DS: You wouldn't want to experience it?

Sharin: No way.

Sune: No.

DS: What is fearful about it?

Sune: It's because if you are a creative person it's the fear you can never be creative again. It's a terrifying feeling. I don't like it all. I think about it sometimes, where I think about, "One day you are going to die, you are never going to be here again, you're never going to do this..." and a whole weird feeling comes down through the body. It's the only experience you can get when you think about death. It's a crazy feeling, but obviously something draws me to it sometimes to experience to really get into my mind frame and think, "I'm really going to die, I'm never going to be here, I'm never going to get up again, I'm really going to die!" It's scary.

DS: Especially at a young age, but if you are creative and have an imagination, it makes it that much scarier.

Sune: But I had a near-death experience when I was in Hawaii. I almost drowned, and I came to a point where I accepted my own death. So, in a way now, when I think about death, that comforts me a little bit, even though it was such a scary experience at the time, it comforts me a little bit that you can actually accept your own death and actually feel comfortable about it. Because I wasn't frightened at the time. I was basically just comfortable that this it, you know, that this is the end. And I was very relaxed, actually. So I guess that's pretty cool.

Sharin: Were you? I would probably be...

Sune: No, at that point my body just gave out, I was completely relaxed and I was just like...that's it.

DS: Sharin, did you ever have a moment where you confronted your own death?

Sharin: When I was nine years old I was definitely close, but I wasn't aware of how dangerous it was. When I think of it now I'm like, "Wow! That could have been it."

DS: What was it?

Sharin: I was living in the countryside and there was a well with urine from the cows, and it was open, and I fell into it. My neighbor caught my hand, so I was hanging in the well with my feet in the urine. And then afterwards, my parents were freaked out. It was really lucky that my neighbor was right there and he caught me, because I would have died immediately. You fall into that urine in a well, that's it! [Laughs]

Sune: [Laughs] That's it!

DS: [Laughs] That would have made a great end to the interview!

Sune: I like that! [Laughs]

DS: What's your favorite curse word?

Sharin: Curse word?

Sune: Fuck. I use that all the time.

Sharin: Yeah, that's probably the only one I use. In Danish...

Sune: We use the same word!

"Fuck." We use it all the time.

Sharin: Sune definitely uses it all the time.

Sune: [Chuckles]

On war

DS: What do you think is the greatest depth of human misery?

Sharin: I...

Sune: [Sighs] Famine?

DS: Famine?

Sune: Maybe.

DS: Starving to death?

Sune: Yeah. It just seems so...

DS: Slow.

Sune: Yeah, and it just seems so unnecessary. Know what I mean? Just seems so...

Sharin: Obviously, war. Being in a war. Being in Darfur right now, for instance. That's one of the extremes of human misery, when you are so completely innocent.

DS: And seemingly so few people are paying attention.

Sharin: Yeah.

DS: Has the Iraq War affected either of you as artists at all?

Sune: No.

DS: How about as people?

Sharin: Yeah.

DS: How so?

Sharin: Well, it affected me in the sense that I feel like it has changed where I have come from very much; Denmark participated in it and sent soldiers to support the U.S. And I think that definitely made me aware of what a decision like that does to a country. Now I think the Danish people are really confronted with having to redefine this strong sense of a Socialist heart that doesn't seem as strong as it was.

Sune: Mmmm, well, not really. I mean, I knew what America was in it for, and I disagreed with it. It's about money and oil and stuff like that. And, they are just using the terrorist thing when it started as just a front, you know? I get much more affected not so much by war itself but when I hear about civilians involved in war. But I was much more affected by stuff that happens in Chechnya, for instance. I used to read a lot about that, and that is a forgotten war that really people don't give a shit about.

DS: Why do you have such a particular interest in Chechnya?

Sune: Not particularly, I guess it was just after the school shooting and people were getting down on the Chechen rebels, and I'm like, "Yeah, that was such a horrible thing to happen, all those innocent children, that was probably the worst..."

DS: Beslan was it?

Sune: Yeah. The thing is there was a reason for it, know what I mean? I'm not justifying it any way because I know it is absolutely atrocious...

DS: But it was ideology and not oil...

Sune: Yeah! The reason for it was to show the world that there is a huge problem going on where we live and people don't pay attention to it. We are going to have to do something for you to take notice. And what they did was just a very wrong way of doing it, but at least they grabbed a little attention for themselves. But the only attention they got out of it was basically that Chechen rebels were murderers and child killers. But the Russian soldiers rape and kill innocent Chechens every single day, and no one gives a damn about it. Every single day!

DS: Why do you think it's not talked about?

Sune: I actually don't know, to be honest with you. And I actually don't know the world that well, and I'm sure there are a lot of forgotten wars still raging in the world, so I don't know, to be honest with you.

DS: You're forced to choose between having either India or China blown off the face of the Earth, and if you don't choose, they both go. They are equal in population according to the 2000 census in each country, with each having roughly 1.2 billion people. Which do you choose, and why?

Sharin: [Laughs]

Sune: You would choose India because your grandparents are from China!

Sharin: No! I would choose China!

Sune: Really?! You would blow up your grandparents?

Sharin: Yup! [Laughs]

Sune: ['Laughs] God! That's so rude!

Sharin: No, to me, India is a democracy, it's the world's largest democracy and I've been there. I found it be a really spiritual place. Some of the most intelligent people I have ever met are from India. And China, I have to say, not so much. I have only been to the countryside. My grandfather is Chinese as well; I'm a quarter Chinese. I just think they are more barbaric by their culture....

Sune: [Shaking his head] We're never going to tour China now....

Sharin: [Giggles]

DS: You would go with China too, then?

Sune: I'm not going to choose...you can blow them both up!

DS: Really? They'll all go?

Sune: Well, I mean, I don't know, come on...I'll go with Sharin, then. We'll keep India.

On love

DS: Sharin, you have a choice between either dating a man who is losing it hair and he tries to style the remaining hair artistically to cover it up, or you have a choice of dating a man with man boobs--

Sharin: What boobs?

DS: Breasts

Sune: Oohhh

DS: Who would you go for more?

Sharin: [Laughs] What kind of question is that?

Sune: It's a psychological test?

DS: Isn't every question?

Sharin: I would probably...hmmm...hair!

DS: You'd go for the hair?

Sharin: Yeah!

Sune: I'd go for the boobs.

Sharin: I'd go for the hair.

DS: You'd go for the man boobs?

Sune: Absolutely! I actually knew a guy, he lost a bet and he had to have breasts for a year. He was a magician.

Sharin: [Laughs]

DS: Like a mastectomy bra?

Sune: No, he got silicon...

DS: Oh! He went through an operation?

Sune: Yeah! And actually his breasts were pretty nice. We used to...

Sharin: [Laughs]

DS: When I was in college I had a couple of friends who were rave kids--they also went to my college--and the guy walked around with very large breasts, and our friend Koo would follow him on the street and after he passed people who noticed his large breasts she would go up and say, "Would you let that man babysit your children?" to see the reactions from people. "Do you trust him?" It was surprising, because the people who looked the most uptight generally responded with things like, "Yeah, sure, he doesn't seem so bad." But the people who looked the most hippie and free--this was in Boulder--would say things, "I don't know! What's wrong with him, why does he have breasts?"

Sune: [Laughs]

DS: What would bother you more in bed, somebody who is overly flatulent, or somebody who speaks in a little baby voice?

Sune: Uh...probably the flatulent thing. I never really liked that so much.

DS: The baby voice?

Sune: Nah, the baby voice is fine.
Sharin: Ugh. God, let's see...would least want to share the bed with? I think probably the baby voice would probably bother me the most.

DS: Creep you out a bit?

Sharin: Yeah.

DS: Sharin do you find it difficult dating?

Sharin: Yeah. Intimacy. Obviously because you are away so much it really takes a lot of work to keep things intimate with people I am seeing when I'm away on the road.

DS: How do you try to circumvent those problems?

Sharin: I try and keep on tour only three weeks at a time.

Sune: Which doesn't work all the time...

Sharin: I try to keep it to that and have some free time at home, which is typically, like, four days.

Sune: [Laughs]

Sharin: And then I try to communicate a lot with the phone. Skype.

On themselves

DS: What traits do you deplore in other people?

Sune: Jealousy.

Sharin: Judgmental. Narrow-minded.

Sune: Ignorance, yeah.

DS: Any certain type of ignorance?

Sune: Yeah, ignorance of people around them and of the world.

Sharin: And xenophobia. Racist people.

DS: Which traits do you deplore in yourselves?

Sharin: I'm lazy. I'm uptight and inhibited.

DS: Are you really all those things?

Sharin: Yeah.

DS: And you deplore that about yourself?

Sharin: Well, deplore is strong. I just dislike it.

DS: Do you do anything to get over those things?

Sharin: Yeah, I try, but it's not so easy.

DS: But I've read interviews with you where you talk about the wild party scene in Los Angeles...

Sharin: Really?

DS: Yeah, in preparation for this I read where you talked about that in an interview...

Sharin: That must have been me back in the day! I'm old now, you know, settled and I don't go out now anymore. I like to have fun, we have a lot of fun.

Sune: I really like myself a lot, actually. I'm in a very good state; I have my wife and I'm very happy and positive...

Sharin: Selfish!

Sune: What?!

Sharin: You're selfish.

Sune: I'm selfish? Really? You think?

Sharin: Yeah.

Sune: Is that bad?

Sharin: [Laughs]

DS: Is that the trait that you deplore in him?

Sharin: Yeah, I would say so.

DS: Is there a trait that you deplore in Sharin?

Sharin: I'm sure there is.

Sune: Well, she's late, and I hate that.

DS: Are you late a lot?

Sharin: [Nods head]

Sune: All the time.

DS: What do you most value in your friends?

Sune: Don't say the obvious one!

Sharin: Humor!

Sune: Oh, okay.

Sharin: What's the obvious one?

Loyalty?

Sune: Yeah...

Sharin: Love, loyalty. I like people who are driven, passionate, ambitious, but very witty and knowledgable, but good people.

Good to the world and themselves. Healthy.

DS: Do you keep a large circle of friends or do you tend to keep it close?

Sharin: I would say close.

DS: How many friends do you have that if you were to self-destruct, they would be there for you?

Sharin: Five. How many friends do you have?

DS: Close friends like I asked you about?

Sharin: Yeah.

DS: I keep it pretty close or I find it too overwhelming because I am always working on projects and I need to concentrate. But in terms of self destruct? If I was to self destruct I would say four people that would be there.

Sharin: Yeah, I mean I didn't count in my mom and my dad...

DS: No, I didn't, either. How about you? If you self-destructed how many people could you count on to stay by you?

Sune: Is that including all the girl? [Laughs] No...really close friends? I would say not that many. Well, hopefully Sharin would be there...

DS: Did you include Sune in your count?

Sune: Noooo!

Sharin: Yeah, I did!

Sune: You did?!

Sharin: Yeah.

Sune: Within the band, our drummer in Denmark is my really good friend, because we have been living such a crazy life together for so long that we just became so close. And over here I might have maybe five, six people, maybe.

DS: As your fame has increased, have you found it more difficult to trust people?

Sune: Not at all. I haven't experienced anything like that. I have found it easier to meet people. But I haven't found too many phonies, and I haven't had a problem with that. I don't go out much, and when I go out I just usually go out with my friends and I'll occasionally go out to see a show. So, I really don't meet that many people. And the people I meet on the road are fans and stuff, and I always try to be polite and accommodate them as best I can.

On touring

DS: Do you guys see an end to the band, a day when you can see yourselves feeling done with it?

Sune: I don't know...I guess sometimes we think about if we want to start a family or something like that. Or maybe there will be other priorities at a certain point...we joke about it a lot, actually...

Sharin: [Chuckles]

Sune: But we don't think about it right now because now we are really excited about the new album coming out.

Sharin: I could see it go many ways. I have a difficult time seeing myself touring when I'm 55 years old; I probably wouldn't want to do that. Not the way I do it now, at least.

DS: You couldn't imagine being 867-5309 guy?

Sharin: Yeah, it is difficult to see myself as a grandmother on stage.

Sune: [Laughs]

DS: Are there venues that you guys haven't played that is your dream venue?

Sune: Madison Square Garden! I always really, really want to play that as a headliner. That would be really great, I think. The Hollywood Bowl would be really amazing. There's some good places. And we were lucky enough to play the Wembley Arena once, but the only thing that happened was they put us on the program at the wrong time, so we actually had to go on before the doors even opened! We actually ended up playing for four people in this big arena: our producer, his wife and a few of our friends. It was really cool; we enjoyed it. At least we played there. And then halfway through the set they actually opened the doors and people started coming in so in the end we maybe played for a few thousand. But we liked it. It was like a dream come true. We always wanted to play Wembley Arena!

Sharin: For no one! [Laughs]

Sune: [Laughs]

DS: [Laughs] You made it!

Sune: It was a really good show, actually. It was fun.

DS: Do you have a venue, Sharin?

Sharin: Yeah, like Sune was saying, Madison Square Garden would definitely be something very...

Sune: If Jay-Z can do it, we can too!

DS: Are there any bands you guys would love to play with?

Sune: The Rolling Stones. Yeah, that would be really great. I always wanted to tour with Primal Scream. That would be one. I don't know...

Sharin: I would like to open for Bob Dylan, but I would be a little scared of meeting him, I think.

DS: Why?

Sharin: I don't know. He would be intimidating. Don't Look Back - have you seen that?

DS: Are you more worried about him being intimidating or disappointing?

Sharin: I would worry about him being disappointing. I would worry about him being--which I have heard that he is--pretty grumpy; mean.

Sune: That can happen!

Sharin: Too smart.

On metaphysics

DS: Do you believe in a higher power?

Sharin: Sometimes I do.

Sometimes I feel more connected. I do sort of believe in a higher power in a very scientific way; I believe in the fourth dimension and time travel...

Sune: You believe in time machines?

Sharin: I do.

Sune: That's cool.

DS: Do you really?

Sharin: Yeah, I do.

DS: How do you think that is possible?

Sharin: I believe in that fourth dimension with black holes and your molecules are all part of the...universe...

DS: Not including any time in the 20th Century, what time would you go back to?

Sharin: That's a good question.

Sune: I would not go back, I would like to go forward.

DS: Can you go ahead in your time machine?

Sune: Yeah!

Sharin: Yeah.

Sune: Yeah, you go to the year 4000, man. That would be more interesting than going back.

DS: What if you walked out and it was Planet of the Apes?

Sune: Well...then...that's what it is, you know? But I would more prefer to go ahead in time than back.

DS: What if you could only use it one time, and once you are there, you're stuck, would you go ahead in time?

Sune: Then I'd go back to tomorrow and I would have that Shepherd's pie at Maxwell's again.

Sharin: [Laughs]

DS: Really? That's a big ambition there with your time machine.

Sune: [Laughs] Well, it was really good, I'm telling you, and I felt really happy.

Sharin: Am I allowed to bring someone or is it just myself?

DS: Just yourself.

Sharin: I'm going to stay here, then. I'm not going to use it. I want to stay here with this guy and my boyfriend and my family.

Sune: Right...alright!

DS: So if you could choose one person, who would you choose?

Sharin: I would choose my boyfriend. [Laughs]

Sune: [Laughs]

DS: Do you believe in a higher power, Sune?

Sune: Yeah, I guess. I saw a UFO once, so I know something is out there. I saw it on the plane ride from New York to Copenhagen once. It was just there for a long time. It came in crazy waves and every time it came toward the plane there was heavy turbulence and it had a weird-shaped light kind of thing. It was crazy; it was for twenty minutes, like that.

DS: Did you see your death then?

Sune: No, I just thought it was really interesting to see one of those.

Today in History

1009 – The Church of the Holy Sepulchre, a Christian church now within the walled Old City of Jerusalem, was destroyed by Fatimid caliph Al-Hakim bi-Amr Allah.

1016 – Danish forces led by Canute the Great decisively defeated Edmund Ironside in the Battle of Ashingdon, gaining control over most of the Kingdom of England.

1851 – Moby-Dick, a novel by Herman Melville, was first published as The Whale.

1922 – The British Broadcasting Company was founded by a consortium to establish a network of radio transmitters to provide a national broadcasting service in the United Kingdom.

1954 – The first commercial transistor radio, the Regency TR-1 by Texas Instruments, was introduced in Indianapolis, Indiana, USA.

October 18 is Alaska Day; Feast day of Saint Luke.

Quote of the Day

My conception of the audience is of a public each member of which is carrying about with him what he thinks is an anxiety, or a hope, or a preoccupation which is his alone and isolates him from mankind; and in this respect at least the function of a play is to reveal him to himself so that he may touch others by virtue of the revelation of his mutuality with them. If only for this reason I regard the theater as a serious business, one that makes or should make man more human, which is to say, less alone.
 ~ Arthur Miller

Word of the Day

palimpsest; n

1. A manuscript or document that has been erased or scraped clean, for reuse of the paper, parchment, vellum, or other medium on which it was written.

About Wikinews
released under the GNU Free Documentation License. To view a copy of the CC-BY license, visit: http://creativecommons.org/licenses/by/2.5/ or send a letter to Creative Commons 543 Howard Street, 5th Floor San Francisco, California, 94105, USA To view a copy of the GFDL, visit: http://www.gnu.org/copyleft/fdl.html Wikipedia Current Events http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Portal:Current_events Today in History http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Main_Page Quote of the Day http://en.wikiquote.org/wiki/Main_Page Word of the Day http://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/Main_Page
About Wikinews Print Edition
For more information about Wikinews Print Edition visit: http://en.wikinews.org/wiki/Wikinews:Print

About Wikinews
We are a group of volunteer journalists whose mission is to create a diverse community where citizens from around the globe (including you) can collaborate to report the news on a wide variety of current events. By making our content perpetually available for free redistribution and use, we hope to contribute to a global digital commons. Got news and no computer? Call the Wikinews Hotline +1-866-653-4265 (toll-free in the U.S.) +1-202-742-5918 (outside the U.S.) +44-871-218-6397 (U.K. / Europe)
License
This work is licensed under the Creative Commons Attribution License. Articles published in this Print edition were created by Wikinewsies. Other content