Mrs. Antoinette Potter d. 5 May, 1883. She was the last survivor of the children of her father, Rev. Winslow<sup>6</sup> Paige, D.D. [6106].

*Restcome Potter was born at Little Compton, Rhode Island, August 1, 1762, and removed from thence in infancy, with his parents, to Dutchess County, N.Y., where his father died in 1776, leaving him the eldest of a family of seven children. He was a volunteer in the war of the Revolution at the age of fifteen, and served at different periods about one year; a part of the time under the command of Col. Ethan Allen of Vermont. He was also in the battle of Bennington. He was twice married. His first wife was a Miss Carpenter, by whom he had three children, all of whom he lost. His second wife was Lucinda Strong, by whom he had fifteen children, twelve of whom survived him. He died 21 June, 1846, aged nearly eighty-five. After the war of the revolution, he removed to the County of

He entered upon the study of the law without the advantages of a collegiate education. He commenced and finished his term of study in the office of the Hon. Christopher-Alonzo Paige [6133], in the city of Schenectady, and was admitted to the bar of the Supreme Court as attorney in 1828. He began practice in Florida, Montgomery County; was elected and served in the Legislature of the State in 1831. In 1834, he removed from thence to Schenectady and formed a co-partnership with C.-A<sup>7</sup>. Paige, his former preceptor, which continued fourteen years. He was during that period appointed by the court district attorney, which office he held twelve years. In November, 1857, he was elected a justice of the Supreme Court of the State of New York for the term of eight years. In November, 1865, he was re-elected to the same office without opposition. During the year 1865 he was Judge of the Court of Appeals, the highest law court in the State. His last election of judge he still continues to hold. Under the provisions of the amended constitution of 1870 he was selected by the Governor of the State as one of the bench to constitute the Court of Review, as distinguished from circuit judges. In 1866 he was elected a trustee of Union College, which institution, in the following year, conferred upon him the honorary degree of LL.D. Since 1834 he has resided in Schenectady, N.Y.

In 1812 he was a soldier at the defence of Sackett's Harbor; in 1817 was appointed Lieutenant in the 108th Regiment of Infantry, in 1818 Captain, and in 1819 Major in the same regiment; was deputy sheriff in 1847-8; constable and collector in the town from 1838 to 1843; in 1855 removed to Millburg, Mich., where he resided until 1865, when he went to live with his son Almerin-Henry'. He was a member of the Baptist church for many years; was buried at St. Joseph, Mich., beside his wife Lucinda. Though a man of great activity and vital force, he was of very delicate physical organization, and, owing to overtaxing his strength in his younger days, spent the last thirty-five years of his life in broken health. He was very social and pleasing in his intercourse with the world, and most kind and affectionate in his family relations, and, while not of specially pious character, was very conscientious, honorable, and charitable. Lucinda was a member of the Baptist church, a women of great piety, sound judgment and force of character, which she devoted to the education and government of her family. They lie buried side by side after a married life of fifty-seven years. She died at Millburg, 14 May, 1805.

Lumberman.

Res. Clinton and Tecumseh, Mich.

They removed to Michigan in 1834. Few of to-day, occupying pleasant homes, enjoying the blessings of church privileges, of schools and of society, familiar only with the modern modes and conveniences, of travel, can realize the fortitude necessary to enable one to leave a home of happiness and comfort to endure the inconveniences, the hardships and sufferings, inseparable from a thousand-mile journey, to find at last a home in the wilderness almost without extent, far from friends and from almost everything which renders life pleasant—yet such was the heroism possessed by Mrs. McNeil, that when her husband thought it best to find a home in a new country, she arose calm, strong, resolute, and turning from almost everything which before had given life its joy, by his side set out upon their journey westward.

Cultured, refined, and delicate in all her feelings, it is not to be supposed that this step was taken without many heartaches. Their new home was chosen near where now stand the villages of Clinton and Tecumseh in Michigan. There they passed together over fifty years of happy wedded life; and there, December 27, 1882, celebrated the golden anniversary of their wedding day. Mrs. McNeil was lovely in all the relations of life, and was lovely still, even in death. This tribute a brother pays to a sister's love, and to her many exalted virtues.

But before another year had passed the separation came, and Mr. McNeil had 'gone before.' A few years more and the companion of his life followed, calmly passing to the spirit life, and was buried by his side in the beautiful cemetery of Tecumseh, near the home where they had so long lived.

We copy the following, read by A.-B. Winslow, at the golden wedding before mentioned. If a trifle long, and somewhat unusual in a work of this kind, there is little danger of its becoming a precedent, as instances of two sisters married at the same time and place and living with their companions over fifty years, very seldom occur. The other sister [6193] is still living.

"Fifty years! This is a long time, my friends, and few there are of all those who had entered life this length of time ago now living upon the earth; and fewer still are those who have lived their seventy years. How few then must these couples be who, however early in life's morning they joined their destinies to walk hand in hand life's journey, have been permitted thus to walk through the years of half a century!

"But there are such. Fifty years ago to-night there went out from a little home in northern New York two youthful couples—the bride's sisters. With strong hearts to engage in the battles of life, and with bright hopes for its future joys, they set forth in their respective but divergent ways.

"The path in life of one was chosen near their childhood's home, where in after years, among the old familiar scenes, they could live over and over again the joys of their early days.

"The other couple, animated by that restless ambition so characteristic of the American people, almost before the honey-moon had waned found a home in the wilds of Michigan.

"That hardships would be encountered, both in the journey and subsequently, was to be expected in that early day; and separated so far from home and friends, I need not say that for many years dark sorrows, trials, and disappointments were the accompaniments of their daily life. I do not speak of these as being peculiar to themselves, for they shadow the pioneer in all places and at all times, and brave indeed must be the hearts which go forth to meet them. Pleasures are anticipated which never come; sickness and death are in the air they breathe, and in the water they drink. It may be that the trials and sorrows of this couple were not greater than is usually encountered in a new country—I do not know—I only know that the days of their early western life were sad and full of trouble; sickness, like a sombre cloud, darkened their pathway; though little buds of promise came and brightened for a time their lonely home, they soon perished, leaving their hearts more desolate for having tasted the sweet joy of a parent's love.

"But all is changed now. Many of their sorrows are forgotten; others are so mellowed by time that they bring no grief in their remembrance. Other children came to them, and are spared to bless and to make glad their declining years; the friends of other days once more surround them; the dark shadows which so long enshrouded them have long since passed away, leaving but the sunlight of hope and happy anticipations.

"But where are these couples now? The first is still living near the shores of the St. Lawrence, where first their path in life was chosen. And the other? My own heart—and I know the heart of every person here, is made glad to-night that we are permitted thus to meet them in their happy home, but as we look upon them now we see but little to remind us of those who started out together so long ago with them. The vernal morn of life has changed to wintry eve; their locks then dark are now of silvery whiteness; their cheeks are furrowed deep, and their eyes are dim with age; but the same warm grasp is in their hands, and the same loving hearts are theirs, as of old. After having traveled the long journey of fifty years together, and together borne the burdens of life, they are ready on this fiftieth anniversary of their marriage day to pledge anew the troth then plighted; and a few of us are gathered with them, to rejoice with them in the happy event.

"But of all that large company which gathered in that northern home how few are here! Where are they? A few besides ourselves yet live; but the many, doubtless, have climbed the golden stairs, and now live upon the higher plains of life. Some then in life's morning passed on ere its noon-tide came; others there were who lived the full number of man's allotted days, and becoming weary with life's burdens they laid them down, and themselves are now at rest. One by one they fall by the way, and we see them no more. To our mortal vision there are vacant places on all sides of us—we look for 'shadows where shadows used to fall,' but we see no shadows.

"You will excuse me, my friends, for leading your thoughts into so sad a channel on an occasion like this. There are some of us here to-night who feel the full force of the language I have used. I myself am filling, or trying to fill, the place of one no longer with us. I need scarcely say that I allude to our older brother, so recently deceased. His life had been more fully identified with those of our brother and sister here than has my own; he had anticipated much from the pleasures of this evening, but he has passed beyond the veil. But if it be true, my friends, as some assert, that the spirits of the dead commingle with the living, then I know that our brother is present with us, and not he only, but many others who were present on the first occasion, and it may be that the invisibles here to-night outnumber those we see, and that the interest they feel in what concerns ourselves, and the pleasures they enjoy, are greater than our own. Could we but lift the veil which hides the spirit world, how wonderful might be the sight to meet our vision. The little babes our brother and sister laid to rest, the aged parents of them both, the brothers, sisters, friends, who were wont to greet them here-all present, and more real now than when clothed in flesh. I do not overdraw the views as entertained by many, and if they be true, then great indeed must be the joy which awaits our entrance into spirit life. I would not deny their truthfulness nor disbelieve them if I could, for they are pleasant views to entertain, and lead to pure, happy thoughts.

"But few believe at the present day, I think, that our identity is lost when we enter the future life, but rather that we live as our individual selves. If this be true, and nothing but the body dies, then our loves must live. We can see nothing unreasonable, therefore, in the spiritchild seeking the presence of its living mother, or of the spirit mother that of her living child; and what is true of their relations must be true of others.

"This aged couple in their youthful days chose each the other from all the world as a companion in life's pilgrimage; from then until the present time they have shared each other's joys and sorrows; and borne so far as possible each other's burdens; and now, standing upon the border-land between the two worlds, they are willing to renew love's pledges made in early life.

"It is a grand spectacle. None are perfect, and the very fact that their love has survived the test of fifty years—has lived through all the storms of life, and that they have kept their hearts both firm and true, shows that 'great battles have been fought and great victories nobly won,' and can we suppose that when their bark shall reach the farther shore, their hearts, which have clung together in weal and woe through all their lives, will be content with other hearts? Can we suppose their love will die when in that land where all is love?

"They tell me I asked the question, when they were married, if he, our brother here, took my sister's name, instead of my sister his. I do not remember this, for I was very little then; my years could have been numbered by the fingers of a single hand; but I will ask this question now—could I love him more if through all these years he had borne our name—more, if through his veins our kindred's blood was flowing? He has been to me a brother; has given me a brother's love; I have loved him in return. Please let me ask another question. When we enter spiritlife, will he be no more to me, or I to him, because of these relations? Is this little family to be broken up, the members scattered, the kindred ties all broken? Are the parents there no more to love the child, or the child the parents, more than others whom here they know not of? When this earthly life shall end, are the sacred names of father, mother, gister, brother, to be heard no more? We cannot see it thus; the mother cannot thus forget the child once pillowed on her breast.

"Believing that the spirit and not the body constitutes the man; that its existence beginning with early life will continue on forever; that kindred ties which exist in this may exist forever in the life to come—we are prepared to look with real joy to a reunion on the other side, and to a continuation there of the happy relations existing here. We expect it to be thus. We expect to see looking as in life all the invisible friends who may be present here to-night, and to know them as we knew them here, with the same friendships, the same affections, and the same loves.

I need not tell you, therefore, that we fully expect this couple, when a few more years shall have come and gone, will lie down as it were, in sleep, but soon to awaken again, unchanged in feeling, and scarcely knowing that the change called death had come to them. I need not tell you that we fully expect them to continue in the summer land the journey they have commenced in this. We fully expect them to continue it together, the same as here; and when another fifty years shall have rolled away, we hope to have the pleasure of attending another anniversary wedding, where the two couples we have mentioned, the friends who are here to night, those absent but still in the flesh, and all those who have passed onward, shall be gathered together. But what name can be given it? It will be beyond the golden, beyond the diamond—far beyond any and all things earthly, both in the magnificence of the spirit home, and in our unbounded joy."

Was educated at Le Ray Academy and at Gouverneur Wesleyan Seminary; in 1841 he was appointed by Gov. W.-H. Seward brigade quartermaster under Brigadier-General Daniel-C. Rouse. He moved to Michigan in 1844, studied law with Hon. Peter Morey at Tecumseh, was admitted to the law courts in June, 1845, and subsequently, the same year, to the Court of Chancery. He also settled at Charlotte, Eaton Co., Mich., in 1845. In 1846 he was appointed prosecuting attorney for Eaton Co., by Governor Fetch, and was postmaster at Charlotte under President Polk. In 1851 he removed to St. Joseph, Berrien County, Michigan, where he has since resided.

He was three times elected Circuit Court Commissioner for Berrien County, and was for four years attorney for the Chicago and Michigan Lake Shore Railroad Company. For several years he was vice-president of the Michigan Historical and Archæological Association, and was appointed delegate from that society to the centennial exposition; was also for many years historian of Berrien County Pioneer Society.

In 1876, he read before the Michigan Historical and Archæological Association a paper on the early history of Berrien County—from 1679—and prepared and read at the fourth of July celebration, a paper on the early history and settlement of St. Joseph as recommended by resolution of Congress.

During 1863 and 1864, he edited and published the St. Joseph Pioneer, and until the election of Mr. Lincoln in the latter year, closing his valedictory with the following sentiments: "Union is the one great desire of our heart, and the object of our efforts, and if that object can better be attained by the success of the opposite party, then we sink party in patriotism and bow a willing obedience to the will of the people."

As a man he has been honest and incorruptible—so much so that it has often been said of him that he was too honest for a lawyer. Though very decided in his opinions on all subjects, he is withal liberal. It cannot truthfully be said of him that he was a great advocate at the bar, but as an office lawyer, and in his judgment of law he has had few equals and no superiors in Western Michigan. He has never aspired to political position, such a life being distasteful to him. He is now and for many years has been a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

He married 2d, Macomb, Ill., 3 Feb. 1859, Sarah-Aurelia Wolverton, b. 6 Dec. 1842, Philadelphia, dau. of John and Rachel (Chew). Physician and banker.

He entered the medical profession quite early in life, and for a number of years practiced medicine in northern New York, but failing in health, in 1855, he removed with his family to Quincy, Ill. On the death of his wife, in the February following, he removed to Macomb, McDonough Co., and entered at once into a banking house, and remained in that business continuously for twenty-five years. Thoroughly acquainted with the business in all its details, in 1871, he obtained a charter for a national bank in Macomb, and having secured the necessary stock, he organized the bank, which is now, 1887, in successful operation. In 1876 he accepted the management of a savings bank, but in 1882, his health giving way, he resigned this position and entered into the more active business of furniture dealer, in which he is now engaged.

During his residence of over thirty years in Macomb he has been called to fill many places of trust and responsibility—city treasurer, member of the board of education, member of the city council, and others, filling all with honor to himself and with satisfaction to the public. He still enjoys in the fullest extent the confidence and respect of the community where he has lived so long.

At the age of fourteen years he united with the Baptist Church in Evans' Mills, N.Y., and still holds his connection with that denomination of Christians.

The first ten years of the life of Dr. Winslow were passed upon his father's farm, near Evans' Mills; and while here it was not particularly different from the lives of other children similarly situated, being like most such, an attendant of the common schools when such schools were in session. But after leaving the farm he entered the Le Ray academy, where he remained several years, acquiring what at that time was considered a very good education. At the age of sixteen we find him a very successful teacher, passing without trouble of any kind through the sessions of schools conceded to be among the most difficult of management of any in the country. But the business of teaching being very distasteful to him, we find him, two years later, in Charlotte, Mich., where he became at once the acting county clerk for Eaton Co., in which office he continued two years. He then entered upon the study of dentistry in the office of Dr. John-F. Terry of Jackson, Mich., with whom he remained two years as student and one as partner in the business, afterwards returning to Charlotte.

At that early day, itinerant dentists were quite common, and apparently were a necessity in so new a country, for there were but few places at that time in Michigan sufficiently large to sustain a dentist, hence we find him during the next few years among the itinerants of that profession, having an established circuit, consisting of six or eight of what are now some of the most enterprising cities of that State.

On his marriage to Miss Brooks, in 1859, they settled in Charlotte, as their future home, but Mrs. Winslow's health failing soon after, they visited for an indefinite period the State of Minnesota, hoping for its restoration from the invigorating air of that climate. In this they were not disappointed, and as early as the fall of 1860 they were again in Charlotte. Soon after returning home, Dr. Winslow met with an accident while making a set of teeth, from the explosion of the steam-boiler used in his work, causing him great suffering for months, and came near ending his life, but from the effects of which he finally recovered, except in the loss of teeth.

Of this enterprising gentleman, so widely and favorably known in commercial circles, we shall give a somewhat extended notice, principally to show to youth what energy, perseverance, and integrity can do in overcoming obstacles in the way of realizing early purposes and objects of laudable ambition.

He attended district school until eleven years of age, after which he spent two years at the Le Ray Academy, and then entered a country store, where he remained until his removal to Chicago, in 1854. His father's health failing, and a loss of property ensuing, the son was obliged to pay for his schooling at the Academy by building fires, keeping the school-rooms in order, etc. While he was employed in the country store, after business hours, which usually continued until nine and sometimes to eleven o'clock at night, and many times much later, he was accustomed to devote a certain amount of time to study and the improvement of his mind.

On coming to Chicago, he entered the dry-goods house of Mills, Bowen & Dillenbeck, as cashier and book-keeper; and on the succession of Bowen Brothers to the business, in 1856, he continued with them as eashier, book-keeper, and partner. The firm of Bowen Brothers commenced with a capital of eleven thousand dollars, which at the time of the dissolution, had increased to five hundred thousand dollars. They were succeeded by the firm of Bowen, Whitman & Winslow, with a capital of three hundred thousand dollars, whose annual sales were four million dollars. In 1870, Mr. Whitman retired, and the firm of Bowen, Hunt & Winslow was formed, who continued business with the same amount of capital and sales until the great fire of 1871, in which they were losers to the amount of over half a million dollars, and in which Mr. Winslow's loss was total. In the following February, however, Mr.

WARLAND HOSFORD WINSLOW.

W. had formed another firm under the style of Richards, Shaw & Winslow, with a capital of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, by whom the business was afterward conducted, with annual sales to the amount of three million dollars. Mr. W., as the financial partner, displayed marked ability from the date of his assuming the position, and, during the trying times of that decade, went through without favor and with unwavering firmness and faith.

Though a member of the first Presbyterian Church of Chicago, he held no purely sectarian views, as compared with the more important, question of present and future life.

After the Chicago fire, the following letter was received:

CHICAGO, Nov. 11, 1871.

D.-P. HOLTON, M.D.

My Dear Friend: You will see from my last manifesto that we are about getting at work again, and we hope to be prospered, and to gather to ourselves some money to support our declining years. With the exception of my house and furniture I was completely stripped by the loss of property, insurance, stock, etc. However, my courage is good, and I date my years back a decade, and go to work with the old ambition.

When you have a few moments' leisure, please let me have the pleasure of a few lines from you.

As ever, your friend,

ALMERIN-H. WINSLOW.

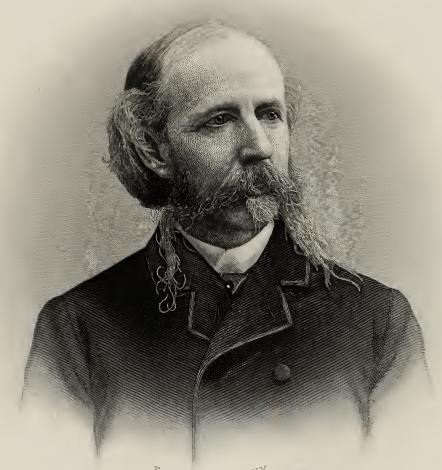

Early after the great fire the following slip was cut from a Chicago paper:

THE NEW CITY—A New Surprise in the Burnt District—Richards, Shaw & Winslow—Permanent Location of the Dry Goods Jobbing Trade. -The "rebuilt section" of the burnt district has been awakened and surprised the past week with perhaps the most significant incident that has thus far attended the mighty labors and enterprises of reconstruction, in the sudden occupancy by Messrs. Richards, Shaw & Winslow, dry goods jobbers, of their new building on State and Madison. five story brown stone edifice, the lofty and conspicuous walls of which have been standing for weeks past in idle grandeur, awaiting the final labors of the carpenter, a solid pleasure to the public eye as a triumph of delicate and massive architecture, had naturally excited popular curiosity as to what uses the beautiful building would be devoted. firm of Richards, Shaw & Winslow, now prominently before the public through this interesting event, is a consolidation of the two wholesale dry goods firms of Bowen, Hunt & Winslow, formerly of 15 and 17 Randolph, and of Richards, Crumbaugh & Shaw, formerly of 42 and 44 Wabash Avenue, and represents, in combination, the formidable commercial influence-in capital, energy, experience, and reputation-of two of the oldest, most successful, and most influential jobbing houses in Chicago, each of the two firms to which the firm of Richards, Shaw & Winslow forms a new succession having been identified with the dry goods interests of the Northwest for nearly a quarter of a century anterior to the conflagration of the city.

The history of the present firm, so well endowed at its organization with the elements of success, has been from the start a record of ambition, courage, and enterprise. Entering upon the private labors of reconstruction, before the ashes of the city were yet cold, we believe the brick buildings erected by them at 123 and 124 Michigan avenue, and occupied by them in thirty days after the fire, were the first business structures put up in the burnt district or in the old business middle of the city. were thus the first to set a practical and earnest example in the direction of reconstruction, and the firm will, of course, figure in the local annals of Chicago as the pioneer merchants of the new city. The history of the rebuilt city dates with the erection of those first buildings. Cautiously and prudently manipulating their resources, but moving to business with a promptness which surprised the mercantile community, and at once hurrying forward an ample stock of goods, the firm of Richards, Shaw & Winslow began early in November to respond to orders from the merchants of the Northwestern States, who never for an hour in those days of peril and darkness manifested an inclination to withdraw trade from the ancient channels which then seemed to the rest of the world to have been closed forever by a historical calamity and the most memorable disaster which ever befel the commerce of a city. In the judgment of an intelligent community, and by the acknowledgment of our rivals in trade and enterprise, it was by the nerve, fortitude, foresight, and true commercial spirit of a few such firms as the present, that the imperial commerce of this imperial city was saved from a long and dreary suspension by that heavy laying on of the awful hand of misfortune. It is pleasant now to notice that this exemplary spirit and exemplary industry have been already partially rewarded on the part of this firm by the development of their trade to new and unexpected proportions, and requiring for its proper manipulation the entire capacity of the lofty and noble building, their occupancy of which on Saturday last constitutes a public and interesting event in our new history.

The general aspect and impression of the building is that of conspicuous and commanding beauty, magnitude, loftiness, solidity of structure, cold and chaste simplicity of architectural design, and great wealth of material and finish. It is, perhaps, the source of more delight to the public imagination than any other building in the new city. The capacity is  $55 \times 160$  feet, five tall stories, with a basement, which constitutes a single elegant apartment,  $72 \times 200$  feet, the superficial area of the six floors thus measuring 59,000 square feet. The inside aspect of the building from the costly modern basement, where it is broad day from sunrise to sunset, to the broad sky floors, is that of cheerful space—a comfortable sense of light, room, and ventilation. The furniture, fixtures, equipment, and mechanical finish, are costly, tasteful, attractive, and beautiful. The stock of goods is now full, the basement and each succeeding floor above constituting a grand exposition of fabrics from all the markets of the world, probably the finest "aggregation" of dry goods ever exhibited in Chicago. The several departments are carefully systematized, the basement being devoted to heavy domestic cotton goods and blankets; the first floor to prints, delaines, dress goods, and silks; the second floor to hosiery, white goods, and the shawl department; the third floor to a mammoth stock of notions; the fourth floor to the several lines of woolen goods. The fifth floor is the packing and shipping room. The general offices, on the first floor, are a neat and elegant specimen of architecture on a small scale. The State Street and side entrances are broad and high, and strike a spectator as emblematic of cheerful and generous welcome inside. The immense pieces of plate glass entering largely into the construction of the first floor, are importations from Germany, being considerably larger than any manufactured in America. Immense vaults and two powerful steam elevators, each devoted to special and separate uses, are among the general equipments of the building. The firm of Richards, Shaw & Winslow is the only exclusively jobbing dry goods house in Chicago. The event of their new and final re-establishment on Madison and State Streets would seem to settle the question of the permanent location of the dry goods jobbing trade of Chicago.

Mr. Winslow died at St. Louis, Mo., 10 May, 1886. "The business men of St. Paul were much shocked yesterday to learn the sad news of the death of A.-H. Winslow, of the firm of Auerbach, Finch & Van Slyck. It occurred at St. Louis at midnight Monday night, his wife and two children and George-R. Finch being with him at the time.

"Mr. Winslow was a pioneer of the city of Chicago, even antedating Marshall Field. As a financier he had few equals, and his probity and honesty of character were never questioned. Among the old-line merchants of Chicago he will be remembered as a singularly just and upright man.

"In 1875, he removed to St. Paul, becoming the credit manager of Auerbach, Finch & Van Slyck, wholesale dry goods dealers. In 1880, he became a member of that firm, and ever since has had the managements of its credits and finances. As in Chicago, his reputation in St. Paul was a high one, reflecting credit and honor upon himself and his firm."

He was a member of no secret order; was a resident member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society, 18 Somerset St., Boston, Mass. Res. 1877, Port Clinton Place, Highland Park, and,

On the first of March, 1857, she united with the Congregational Church in Brandon, and ever maintained a consistent christian character. She was naturally remarkably amiable, modest, and unassuming-all who knew her loved and respected her. She had been well cared for by her affectionate and pious parents, and her young mind was well stored with useful learning. She was a devoted Sabbath-school teacher, faithful in her labors, and prompt in her attendance, respected and beloved by the superintendent and by all the school. Her death is a heavy blow to all her friends, and especially to her parents, for she was a model daughter. But the Master has called her home to rest, and by this providence speaks to us, 'Be ye also ready.' "- Vermont Chronicle.

He married Sarah Smith, b. 22 May, 1783, Lanesboro, and died 21 Feb. 18—. He married 2d, at Norfolk, Fanny (Burroughs) Barney, whose parents She died 14 Feb. 1870, Norfolk. He emigrated to New York resided in Potsdam. State in the year 1811, and settled in the then town of Louisville, now Norfolk, St. Lawrence County. He engaged in farming, but, soon receiving the agency of Constable and Van Ness tracts of lands, his attention was mainly devoted to that business. He was appointed County Judge in the year 1815, and held the office until 1823, when his term of office was terminated by his election to the Assembly. From the organization of the county in 1802, and for many years afterwards, the Federalists were in the ascendency. In the year 1818 Mr. Winslow was put in nomination by the Republicans for the Assembly, and was renominated and defeated (but by decreasing majorities) every year, until 1823, when he was elected; and so well satisfied were the people of the county with his course in the Assembly, that, receiving the nomination the next year, he had no opposing candidate. He was for eight years supervisor of the town in which he lived, then called Stockholm. Mr. Horace6 Allen [6977] says of him: "Judge Winslow was a man of good mind, a devout Christian, and a warm friend." Farmer. Norfolk, N.Y.

Abandoning that profession, he went to Malone, N.Y., and engaged as principal of the academy there, where he remained for several years, during which time he studied law and was admitted to practice, but never devoted his attention to the profession afterwards. He was appointed superintendent of schools for Franklin County in 1845, held the office two years, and was then elected member of Assembly. It is truly said that he discharged the duties of the various positions he held during his life with credit to himself and satisfaction to his employers and constituents. In 1848 he left Malone for California, where he pursued the business of mining and merchandising with variable success, until his death in 1854, in Volcano, Cal.

Windsor to Williston about 1794, and Jemima (Rockwell). She died 30

Aug. 1867, Mishawaka. In 1811, he commenced business for himself in Hamilton, N.Y.; in October of the same year was wrecked on the first steamer that ever floated on Lake Michigan. He lay on the wreck twenty-four hours in a severe storm, and suffered much. In 1812, the war between Great Britain and the United States broke up his business, and he joined a one-year company, called dragoons, whose business was scouting and carrying despatches. He was appointed sergeant. Two of his most intimate friends were arrested by the enemy and executed as spies, and many fell in battle, until they were reduced to sixteen, and discharged before the year was up. He was at the battle of Ogdensburgh when it was taken, and was at Sackett's Harbor while our army and fleet went up the lake to Little York, leaving 400 as guard.

In 1815, they settled in Potsdam, N.Y. In 1819, they removed to Rochester, N.Y., and, about the third year after, he was attacked with inflammation of the eyes, losing the use of them for several years, which broke him up in business again. 1826, they changed their residence to Brockport, and, in the fall of 1827, both united with the Methodist Episcopal church. Ever after, his house was called the "Methodist Tavern," and was a welcome home for all the itinerancy. He was soon appointed trustee, steward, and class leader; held the offices many years, and had the financial part in superintending the erection of three churches, two brick and one wooden. In 1835, he went to Mishawaka, and commenced business again. There he found five Methodist brothers and formed a class, he being leader, and in a short time obtained preaching once in two weeks. That church has since grown to be the largest and most wealthy in the district. He filled the office of coroner eight years. He was always a staunch temperance man. In 1870, his daughter writes, "He is now in his eightieth year, hale and hearty. He feels that his work is nearly ended, and is waiting, ready and willing when the summons comes to say farewell." Saddler and harness maker. Res. 1873, Mishawaka, St. Joseph Co., Ind.

In October, 1863, he was appointed lieutenant to enlist a company, which was Co. D., 128th Regt., First Brigade, First Division, 23d Army Corps, organized at Michigan City, mustered into U.S. service 12 Jan. 1864. He was in the battles of Chattanooga, Dalton, Resaca, Altoona, Kennesaw, Atlanta, Columbia, Franklin, Newbern, Wiseforks, and others. In one of his letters he wrote, "I have stood in line of battle eight days, some kind of a battle each day." In another he says, "For the last twenty days we have been in a battle or skirmish every day." He was in Gen. Thomas' Division, and was sent back from Atlanta to Nashville; was followed by Gen. Hood, who had an army two to one. At one time both armies were in line of battle eighty rods apart. were two brave colonels, Col. Miller of the union army and a rebel colonel, who had met several times in battle before, and knew each other at this time by their horses. They challenged each other to a combat, rode to the center, and as they passed each other the rebel colonel fell at the hand of the union colonel. He says, "I could but feel sorrowful to see so brave a man fall, even if he was an enemy."

The regiment was ordered to Washington from Nashville in great haste, and from there to Newbern, N.C. While leading a charge against the rebel breastworks at Wiseforks, 19 March, he fell, shot in the head. He was taken to Newbern Hospital, and died 12 Apr. 1865; his remains are interred at Newbern.

"Having received a fine education, he spent many years in teaching; and some of our eminent men were his Subsequently he devoted his time to agriculture, occasionally filling public offices of trust and honor; and to superintending the education of his children." [Blake's Biog. Dict.] He removed from Salisbury', Conn., to Williston, Vt., soon after the close of the Rev. war, having previously married, 15 Mar. 1784, at Sheffield, Mass., Joanna Kellogg, b. 4 July, 1766, at S., dau. of Amos and Prudence (Sedgwick) of S. By her he had three sons and three daughters, all of whom are now dead. Mrs. Winslow d. 14 Feb. 1810, at Williston. He married 2d, at Hudson, N.Y., 18 Jan. 1812, Anna Hannah, b. 15 July, 1770, Bethlehem, Conn., dau. of Alexander and Mary (Calhoun) of B. She died at W., 2 Oct. 1864. He had by her one daughter, who, in 1876, was residing on the homestead. The determining force that made Williston the home of Nathaniel may be traced to Thomas Chittenden, born at East Guilford, Conn., who moved to Salisbury a short time before the marriage of Nathaniel Winslow, where for twenty-four years they were neighbors and friends.

Mr. Chittenden, with his family, emigrated to the vicinity of the Onion river. The Indian name of this river was Ouinooske. His location was in the present town of Williston, some seven miles south-east from Burlington, Chittenden Co., Vt. Some twelve years later, 1786, Mrs. Hannah Winslow [1211], with all her family, sought the fertile valley where resided her husband's former friend and townsman, then the first Governor of the newly organized State of Vermont. Partly owing to troubles with New York, Vermont would not join the confederacy in 1777, but at a convention held at Westminster it was declared an independent State. [See 3814.] It was admitted into the Union in Feb. 1791. Gov. Chittenden resigned the gubernatorial office in the summer of 1797, and died 25 August of that year, aged 69 years. Mr. Winslow possessed a fine farm at Williston, and carried on a wrought iron nail factory. When, in advanced life, he was about to retire from business, he became involved in the failure of a man, to whom he had lent the use of his name, thereby losing the greater part of his property.

From the Recorder we add the following:

Mr. Winslow descended from a line of unbroken pious ancestry extending back to the time the pilgrims landed at Plymouth. At an early age his mind and heart became possessed of the principles of evangelical religion as embraced by his ancestors and inculcated in the instructions, prayers, and example of a devotedly pious father. He made early profession of his Christian faith, the fruits of which were evinced in a subsequent Christian character, eminently pure, uniform, and consistent. The sanctification of the Sabbath commencing with the shades of Saturday evening, daily morning and evening family devotions, and family religious instructions and duties of Christianity, were ever observed and enjoyed by him with the same uniform and conscientious fidelity which characterized the piety of the pilgrims. part of his life was principally devoted to agricultural pursuits. A considerable part of his early life was devoted to teaching, and many of his pupils are still living in various parts of the country who cherish a grateful remembrance of his faithful and affectionate instructions. In his own family his "doctrine dropped as the rain and his speech distilled as the dew." Possessing a delicate and uniform constitution and a retiring and domestic disposition, he was seldom from home except when necessity demanded, but devoted his leisure time to reading and to intellectual and religious instruction of his children. Both by his precept and example, he inculcated in an eminent degree the Christian sentiment that an idolatrous love of the world is exceedingly base as well as sinful, infinitely beneath the proper dignity of a rational and immortal soul on its way to God. It is questionable whether he was ever known to express in any way, to his children, a desire that they should become possessed of wealth or worldly distinction, but thousands of times has he earnestly prayed with them and for them that they might be saved from these snares and give their undivided hearts to the great concerns of the soul, religion, and eternity. "On a certain occasion," said his pastor, in his funeral sermon, "a child of his overheard a voice of prayer in a place of retirement, and, on listening, perceived it to be the voice of his father praying for him. On hearing a father's prayer offered in secret for him, that the Holy Spirit might renew his heart, and make him willing to renounce the world and become an instrument of promoting the Redeemer's Kingdom in the salvation of men, he became immediately serious, found no peace till he believed in Christ, and is now a minister of the gospel." He cherished a deep interest in all the religious societies and enterprises of the day, which are preparing the way for millenial glory, and according to his ability, and often even beyond his ability, as most Christians would judge, contributed to their support. Disappointments, loss of property, bodily infirmity and severe sickness, of which an uncommon share fell to his lot, never seemed to disturb the Christian serenity of his soul. He practically regarded them as "light afflictions which are but for a moment." A few weeks previous to his death a cloud seemed to settle on his mind, and, for a season, he nearly relinquished his Christian hope. It was occasioned by a zealous inspection of his "past unfaithfulness," as he expressed it, "in a near prospect of eternity." But the cloud passed away, light from heaven again shone, he beheld a forgiving and smiling God in the face of Jesus Christ, and having commended himself, his family, his distant children, and all the dear interests of the Redeemer's kingdom in the world to God, still sitting erect in his chair, he folded his hands, closed his eyes, and, with a gradually retiring breath, ceased from time without a groan or struggle, and entered upon the everlasting rest which remains for the people of God.

We deem Mr. Winslow especially worthy of an extended notice in our work, as being the father of three honored and useful men, "all of whom (says Rev. Pliny-Holton White, in the Vermont Record for July, 1864) became ministers and attained the degree of Doctor of Divinity; a circumstance hardly to be paralleled in the annals of the American pulpit."

At the age of fourteen, Mr. Winslow entered a store near Williston; at twenty-one, he engaged in mercantile pursuits at Norwich, Conn. During these years he formed those correct business habits which appeared to such advantage throughout his life.

After two years of successful business, he was led to think of the ministry, and more particularly of missions to the heathen. Impressed with a sense of his duty to preach the Gospel, he resigned his occupation as a merchant, and turned his attention to study. Having received a fine English education, and possessing quick powers of acquisition, a year and a half of study sufficed to prepare him for entering the junior class of Middlebury College, at which institution he graduated with special distinction in 1815. He then entered Yale, where he spent some time studying and teaching, and received the degree of A.M. from that College in 1818—the same year in which he graduated from the Theological Seminary at Andover, where he had studied for about two years.

After leaving Andover, he spent six months laboring more particularly in behalf of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, and succeeded in raising large sums of money in the New England States for this work. During this time he prepared in part his "History of Missions," a work of high rank.

At an early period of his life, he thus displayed those intellectual and religious traits which marked his subsequent career. It was his earnest appeals and untiring industry that stimulated the hearts of thousands, and interested the churches in the missionary undertakings of his day.

Nov. 4, 1818, Mr. Winslow, together with Mr. Spaulding, Mr. Woodward, and Mr. Fisk, was ordained at Salem, Mass.; and Prof. Moses Stuart's sermon on that interesting occasion elicited such marked attention that it was required for publication.

Mr. Winslow married at Norwich, Conn., 11 Jan., 1819, Harriet-Wadsworth Lathrop, b. 9 April, 1796, N., dau. of Charles and Joanna (Leffingwell) of N. He embarked with his associates, 8 June, 1819, on the brig Indus, at Boston, and arrived at Calcutta, Oct. 19. On the 18th Feb., 1820, he and his wife reached Jaffna, Ceylon, and took up their residence at Oodooville, July 4th, of the same year.

From that time until 1833, he conducted the boarding and day school at Oodooville; labored and preached in the neighborhood, and performed no small amount of literary work in connection with his duties as a missionary, translator, correspondent, etc. It was by his efforts, in a great measure, that the Batticotta Seminary was established at Jaffna.

"The plan," wrote Mr. Winslow, "was that of giving the pupils a good knowledge of English and Continental science in connection with their own vernacular.

instead of Sanscrit." He adds, "The institution had great influence in raising the standard of education in North Ceylon, and effected the whole Asiatic continent." The Madras (English) University conferred its first degrees of B.A. on the seminary graduates.

During his residence in Ceylon, Mr. Winslow wrote extensively for the press. His contributions to the Missionary Herald would alone have filled several volumes.

Mrs. Winslow d. 14 Jan., 1833, at Oodooville, Ceylon; and he visited the United States with his daughters the following autumn. He prepared a memoir of his wife, which is a valuable work, presenting not only an account of her character and labors, but a history up to that time of the Ceylon Mission, of which she had been a highly valued member. This work is now a standard volume of the American Tract Society, and has been reprinted in England and France.

He married in New York, 23 April, 1835, Catherine (Waterbury) Carman, widow of Ezekiel Carman of New York City. She was born May, 1797, N.Y., dau. of Gideon and Ruth (Tuttle) of New York City. He sailed from Philadelphia, 16 Nov., 1835, reaching Madras 22 March, 1836, and proceeded thence by Madura to Ceylon. Returning to Madras 18 Aug., he established there a mission in which he was soon joined by Dr. Scudder. Here he labored for the remaining twenty-eight years of his life.

Mrs. Winslow died 23 Sept., 1837, of cholera, at Madras. Her memoir, prepared by her brother, Rev. J.-B. Waterbury, D.D., LL.D., is published by one of the societies.

He m. 3d, Madras, India, 2 Sept., 1838, Annie Spiers of Madras, b. in Eng., dau. of Hon. Archibald, a member of the East India Board, and Margaret (Dundas) of England, and grand-dau. of Lord Dundas of Scotland. She died 20 June, 1843, Madras. He m. 4th, Madras, 12 March, 1845, Mary-W. (Billings) Dwight, widow of Rev. Robert-O. Dwight, D.D., of Madura, India. She was born 1810, Conway, Mass., dau. of Elisha Billings. She d. April, 1852. He m. 5th, Boston, Mass., 20 May, 1857, Ellen-Augusta Reed, b. 11 July, 1813, Charlestown, Mass., dau. of Joseph and Eunice (Cook) of Boston. She survives her husband, and now (1873) resides in Boston, where she is engaged in missionary and other useful undertakings connected with the cause. Time and space forbid any narration in this place of the labors and worth of the women who shared with Dr. Winslow his labors in India for the conversion of the heathen to Christianity.

Dr. Winslow was engaged at an early period of his labors in Madras in translating the Holy Scriptures into Tamil. As late as 1850 he was much occupied with improvements and revisions of portions of the translation. In 1845, the native college and English high school were established, of which he was president.

During his residence at the Madras Mission, seven vernacular schools were established, and four others in the adjoining station. Concerning the Mission, he published four works entitled "Occasional Reports"—1843, 1848, 1858, and 1864, respectively. Two to three hundred students attended the native college in 1864, "including many Brahmins"; and from four to five hundred pupils were in attendance at the vernacular schools.

The publishing establishment of the Mission accomplished very much. Mr. Phineas-R. Hunt and Dr. Winslow edited and supervised the material for publication. From 1838 to 1864 (when Dr. Winslow died) there were published 225,000,000 pages of the Bible, and 310,000,000 of all other works, including gospels, epistles, commentaries, theological and school books, almanacs, newspapers, etc.—a grand total of 535,000,000 pages.

Dr. Winslow's chief work was "A Comprehensive Tamil and English Dictionary of High and Low Tamil," which was projected in 1838, begun in 1840, and published in 1862. Printed in a beautiful clear type, the quarto contains 976 pages, three columns to a page, and over 67,000 words with definitions.

The Round Table of New York thus noticed the work: "It appears that nearly half of all the words in the Tamil language owe their English lexicographic birth and position to the labors of our American Orientalist. The work before us includes both the common and poetic dialects, and the astronomical, astrological, mythological, botanical, scientific, and official terms, together with the names of authors, poets, heroes, and gods. It thus initiates the learner not only into the language, but into its literature, and makes him acquainted with the philosophies, mythologies, sciences, traditions, superstitions, and customs of the Hindoos. . . . It is a great honor to American scholarship, that one of our number should have produced this work."

The Reformed (Dutch) Church Mission passed the following testimonial: "Resolved, That we, as a Mission, do tender our congratulations to the Rev. Miron Winslow, D.D., on the completion of his dictionary; and that we regard his work as a noble contribution to Oriental literature, a boon to all students and laborers in Tamil, and a crown of honor to its author."

The work cost, to publish, from $15,000 to $20,000. Trübner's Record (London) priced it in 1865 at £3, 13s., 6d.

In 1856, Mr. Winslow revisited America, returning to Madras the following year. While in this country he published his "Hints on Missions," a practical and useful manual.

In 1858, he received the degree of D.D. from Harvard University; in 1864, LL.D. from Middlebury College, Vt.

Mr. Winslow continued unceasingly his round of duties at Madras, and adjacent stations. A brother missionary, writing to the Missionary Herald, says: "As a missionary, a student, a preacher, an author, he was largely a business man. Methodical and accurate, he looked for results in connection with labor, and went to his work, whatever it might be, with the steady air of one who had a work to do. Day by day and year after year, while a whole generation fell by his side, he continued teaching and preaching in the school-house, church, zayat, and the public highway; writing, translating, compiling; giving time to Tract Society and Bible Society, also managing the finances of his own Mission and acting as agent for inland missions. . . . . His habits were regular and his mode of life simple. Rising at a quarter before five o'clock, he was accustomed to exercise, on foot or on horseback, for three-quarters of an hour before and after sunrise. Returning, he was alone till the breakfast hour. After a cheerful meal and family prayers he visited his schools, opening them with reading and prayer. Coming again to the house, he received the calls of his native assistants and others who might desire counsel, instruction, or information. Then turning to his desk, he was occupied several hours with his Hindoo moonshees or Bible committee, and upon translations. Dinner was followed by attention to the details of station and mission work, letter-writing, and study. Toward sundown out-door duties were resumed, visitation of schools, zavat-preaching, calls upon strangers or resident friends, or a drive upon the beach for refreshment. An early tea was ordinarily followed by attention to the accounts of the Mission and correspondence, varied by attendance upon committee meetings or social religious services."

Speaking of his "eminently distinguished missionary life," another of the brethren at Madras remarks: "It was also remarkable for the great amount of literary labor which he performed, all of which was more or less connected with his mis, sionary work. . . . From the character of his piety, which was warm, earnest-practical; from his excellent judgment, his gentle and affectionate yet dignified and courteous bearing; from his conscientious, persevering application to every duty; from his habits of punctuality, precision, and order, he was facile princeps among the missionaries of all societies in Madras. Wherever grace, gentleness, caution, prudence, and delicate courtesy were required, he was always selected. By Europeans and natives of all classes, by Christians and heathen, he was loved, esteemed, venerated, and will long be remembered in India."

Another, speaking of him, says: "Firmness was one of his prominent traits. Once settled in the determination to pursue a given course, he could not be easily moved from his purpose. What he undertook he accomplished. His labors attest this quality; nor could a life-long endurance of the melting sun of tropical India take from his energy and perseverance."

Dr. Winslow, Aug. 29, 1864, sailed from Madras, reaching Cape Town, South Africa, Oct. 20, where he died two days afterward.

On his departure from India various resolutions and testimonials were presented him, among them one from "The Madras Missionary Conference," numbering over forty members of all denominations, saying: "The brethren feel that in you they lose one whose place can never be supplied. You were always the foremost advocate of brotherly love and Christian union, and we felt that it was a privilege to have one who was so much respected by every division of the Church of Christ as yourself to preside at our annual united communion and our annual concerts of prayer."

His native church said to him, on parchment, in their own way: "After you, we may have many instructors of Christ. What of that?... In fact the dearbought experience of many years, lit by the grace of the Most High, has helped you practically to realize the true acceptation of the remarkable saying of St. Paul, which to many is only a barren, speculative theory, 'the care of all the Churches.'"

Miron Winslow was a man of true piety and religion, in humble imitation of that Saviour whose life was love. Said one already quoted: "Rarely does the world see so beautiful an illustration of the power of Christianity to pervade the life of man with love."

His type of disposition or character was much like that of his father, whom he greatly resembled in appearance. In him and his eminent brothers is found a powerful illustration of the priceless value of early and faithful religious training combined with the example of an earnest Christian life.

In 1844, he and his younger brother, Miron, were sent to England, and placed under the care of Rev. J-B. Byers, at Pembroke, Wales, where they remained till 1848, when they were sent to America, and entered the boarding-school under the charge of Rev. Mr. D. Here they remained till 1856, when they entered Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., graduating there in 1859. They then entered Yale College, but in accordance with the wish of their father, after the fall term, went to Williams College, Williamstown, Mass. Here they remained together until the breaking out of the war in 1861, when Miron enlisted in the army. Charles remained and graduated 6 August, 1863, when he received an honorary appointment, and delivered an oration. During the same year he delivered the poem before the annual meeting of the Adelphi Union Society. He entered, 30 Sept. 1863, the Episcopal Theological Seminary, West Philadelphia; but on the 4th Jan. 1864, commenced the study of medicine at the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia. After the winter course of lectures was over, in the summer of 1864, he was appointed an agent of the Sanitary Commission, and was sent to the front. Here he was present during most of the battles of Grant's first campaign, at Fredericksburg, White House, Port Royal, the Wilderness, and at Petersburgh, where he gained considerable knowledge of dressing wounds, etc. After an absence of nearly three months, he returned in time to attend the winter course of lectures at the University. The early part of the summer of 1865 he spent as medical cadet, at Fort Schuyler, New York harbor, where there was a general hospital. In August of the same year he passed an examination before the professors of the University of Pennsylvania, and was admitted to his degree, though, as the regular time of admittance had passed, his diploma was dated 3 July, 1866. The same month he also went to New York, and passed the examination for surgeon in the United States army, before the regular Army Medical Board, then sitting at New York, and received an appointment from the President as Asst. Surgeon 62d U.S. Colored Troops, being commissioned 18 Aug. 1865, Philadelphia, and mustered into service, 15 Oct. 1865, at Brownsville, Texas; was stationed at Laredo, Texas, as Post Surgeon of the hospital at that place, until 31 Mar. 1866. The regiment was mustered out of service 27 April, 1866, at St. Louis, Missouri. For nearly a month afterwards he was retained on duty, as Post Surgeon at Jefferson Barracks, Mo.

6926. 1. George-Ceylon<sup>8</sup>, b. 19 Apr. 1850; d. 12 Aug. 1873, Mineville, Essex Co., N.Y. The following appeared in the local paper, Aug. 19, 1873:

"Mr. Bradley was a young man of fine promise, genial disposition, good business habits, and beloved by a large circle of mourning friends. As a kind son, and an affectionate brother, his parents, brothers and sisters will deeply feel his loss; but they have the warm sympathy of all who know them. He was in the employ of the Messrs. Witherby, as telegraph operator at their mines, whose respect and confidence he had won in a high degree. He was brought home on Thursday, accompanied by his sorrowing mother, and the young friends who have won the everlasting gratitude of his parents by their kind attention during his sickness, and his funeral was attended at the Cong. Church by one of the largest congregations ever convened on such an occasion in Norfolk."

In his Autobiography he says: "My father and grandfather were named Nathaniel; and more guileless and upright men never lived. My father went to Vermont soon after the close of the Revolutionary war, and settled in Williston. His mother was a Fitch, daughter of a clergyman. There were three brothers of them, all clergymen, settled in Connecticut. Prof. Fitch of Yale College descended from this family. . . . It was on the 30th Oct., 1799, as I am told, that the writer opened his eyes upon this strange world. . . . About the earliest thing I remember is being one day alone in the room with my mother, as she was singing the hymn,

*Alas! and did my Saviour bleed."

I asked her why she cried, as my sympathy was excited. She said she was thinking of the Saviour who for her died upon the cross. She then taught me that beautiful hymn—it was long before I could read—and I repeated it daily for years. It has always had a powerful influence upon my heart—and I have repeated it to perhaps thousands of anxious inquirers, in private conversation, with great effect, especially the last verse:

'But flowing tears can ne'er repay
The debt of love I owe,
Here, Lord, I give myself away,
'Tis all that I can do.'"

Remarking upon his childhood, between the age of five and seven years, the books read, the good minister's words while he sat upon his knee, Hubbard says: "So strong were their early impressions, and so faithful were the admonitions and instructions of my parents, that I never ceased to regard the salvation of the soul as the paramount object of life." During his youth he passed a portion of each year at school, and the remainder in assisting his father in the labors of the farm and shop. He tells us: "Most of the evenings or portions of time not spent in work I devoted to study and reading, and before I was twelve years old had thus read most of the valuable books in the town library, particularly the histories."

At the age of seventeen he taught school, in the vicinity of Williston, after which, at the suggestion of his brother Miron, of Andover Theological Seminary, he prepared for Phillips Academy, entering there in the year 1819, with a view to enter Yale College in 1821. The Rev. Dr. Blanchard of Lowell, Mass., was a fellow student of Mr. Winslow at the Academy, and from his reminiscences of Dr. Winslow we select the following paragraphs:

"His frame, slender in appearance, was sinewy and agile. His health far from robust, exacted of him careful attention to diet and regimen; yet few could surpass him in athletic sports, or in walking, running, or in other feats of physical activity. All his movements indicated a nervous temperament, spontaneously active and incapable of indolent repose. The only rest which he seemed to require, or to be capable of was change of occupation. . . . His ease and rapidity of mental movement were always such as few have by nature, or attain to by education. His mind was subtle and acute in its perceptions, and seemed intuitively to master every subject of study. . . . He unconsciously analyzed everything submitted to him; and could not forbear forming a distinct judgment on its excellencies and defects, its truth or falsehood. Truth to him was vital. What he believed he believed and lived upon. He could not help communicating to others the light which, as he thought, shone upon his own path. . . . His genius for speculative thought and his insight into philosophical problems even then attracted notice. I well remember off-hand disquisitions of his on questions of psychology and metaphysics which revealed the same kinds of acuteness and vigor, the same combination of the analytic and critical with the synthetic and constructive forms, which appear in the philosophical and theological writings of his later years. . . . The purpose of being religiously useful to others was never out of his mind. Enthusiastic in study as in everything, never delinquent in his lessons, he yet spent much time every day in secret devotion, and made the Bible his habitual study.

"His piety was of an eminently cheerful and hopeful type. . . . Few who were accustomed to listen to his prayers, or to hear him speak in social meetings, will ever forget the peculiarly penetrating and melting effect of his words. . . . Letters of his, as sportive as Cowper's, revealed an undertone of deep and abiding love to Christ, and an insatiable desire that all should know and love Him. His was the 'passion for saving souls.' He laid a spell upon those whom he addressed on their religious concerns. It held them to him with magic potency. As in all persons of marked and signal influence on others, there was in him on these occasions much more than could be found in his utterances. Power was felt which could not be analyzed. Impressions were made of which no explanation could be given.

"When in later years assemblies were melted to tears by a few of his earnest words, at a time of no special religious interest, it was but a repetition of what often occurred when the academy student conducted a social religious meeting. . . . As a result of these elements of character it is safe to say that before his graduation he had been the instrument of a greater number of hopeful conversions than would be requisite to signalize a long ministry as one of very gratifying if not of eminent success."

During Dr. Winslow's academic and collegiate days, as well as previously, God's blessing visited the schools where he taught. Hinesburg, Enosburgh, near Williston, Vt., Beverly, Mass., and Norwich, Conn., were places where scores of people under his teaching embraced the religion of Jesus. The position of salutatorian was assigned Winslow at graduation. He entered Middlebury College (Vt.) in 1821, and finished his freshman year with distinction. Entering Yale College as a sophomore he graduated in 1825, delivering the philosophical oration at commencement. The Greek, Latin, and English composition prizes were awarded him during the course; also one for excellence in oratory. The prize of one hundred dollars for general deportment and scholarship was divided between him and Amos Pettingill.

During the winter term of senior year he was President of the Brothers in Unity, and conducted at times the Yale choir. Throughout life he exhibited a special talent for sacred music, often acting in the double capacity of chorister and preacher. As a boy he played upon the fife before a company of militia in his native town, so in after life he soothed his tired brain with the sweet strains of the violin and flute, which he was often seen to take up between his hard mental efforts.

After a year of study at Andover Theological Seminary, he entered the Yale Theological School. At the former place he enjoyed the instruction of Moses Stuart—at the latter of Dr. Taylor. During his theological course he occupied some of his time in teaching and imparting biblical and religious instruction, and accomplished much for the advancement of the Saviour's kingdom. Eminent men speak of the impressions made on them in their youth by Mr. Winslow during his professional course at New Haven. A bishop and a distinguished New York rector, among many others, have said that their minds were first and permanently influenced on religious matters by him or his addresses.

We will cull a paragraph from Rev. Dr. Ray Palmer's "Recollections of Dr. Hubbard Winslow," in Hours at Home (now incorporated in Scribner's Monthly): "It was indeed impossible to be near him and not feel the attraction of his genial disposition, and of his frank and cordial manners. . . . In company with others, there was a cheerful vivacity and glow, and an easy freedom in conversation, which, together with his warm social nature, made him one of the most agreeable of companions. He was quick in his perceptions, earnest in his pursuit of truth, fond of discussing metaphysical and theological questions, and enthusiastic regarding the work of the ministry to which he was looking forward."

Mr. Winslow while yet in the Seminary often preached in the vicinity of New Haven. He indeed collected, chiefly by appeals from different pulpits, several thousand dollars toward a professorship in Yale, and at the time of his graduation he was supplying at Litchfield the place just vacated by Dr. Lyman Beecher. He graduated in 1828, and very soon received calls from several churches. He accepted one from Dover, N.H., where he was ordained Dec. 4, 1828.

He married at Boston, Mass., 21 May, 1829, Susan-Ward Cutler, b. 27 March, 1803, dau. of Joseph and Phebe (Ward) of Boston. Her mother was the daughter of the then late Rev. Dr. Ephraim Ward, settled for about fifty years at West Brookfield, Mass.

Speaking of his labors at Dover, Winslow writes in his Aubtobiography: "I preached every Wednesday evening, lectured on Sunday evening, and followed the lecture with a meeting of inquiry; and we had a regular prayer meeting on Friday evening."

Rev. Dr. Baron Stowe (Baptist), then at Portsmouth, late of Boston, in the Family Treasure, says: "Of no other preacher in all that region did I hear so much that had a stirring effect upon my own mind, and made me anxious to know the secret of a power that was so generally confessed. . . . The impressions of that hour have never faded from my mind and heart, and the name of Hubbard Winslow has ever since been associated with that faithful, glowing exhortation."

Mr. Winslow's first volume, "Doctrine of the Trinity," appeared in 1831. It was subsequently issued at Boston. It excited attention everywhere and ranked him at once as a thinker and theologian.

Within twelve months after his settlement at Dover his salary was doubled, a new church edifice built, and during his pastorate there one hundred and seventy-four joined the church by profession.

He resigned his charge at Dover, November 30, 1831, about three years after his ordination; and on the 26th of September, 1832, he was installed over the Bowdoin Street Church, Boston, his health being almost entirely re-established. Dr. Beecher had resigned the charge to go to Cincinnati. where he was to preside over the Lane Theological Seminary, and on being asked what his people were to do, replied, "There's Hubbard Winslow, get him."

His ministry, of twelve years, over this parish, cannot be given in detail or fullness. A brother clergyman speaking of them said: "The records of the Massachusetts Association show conclusively that the number of hopeful conversions under the pastorate of Dr. Winslow, during the same length of time in that State, have never been surpassed."

Dr. Palmer remarks of his labors: "The Bowdoin Street Church, at that time, was a model church, at least as nearly so as any church I have ever known; comprised to an unusual extent of the best class of hearers, intellectually and spiritually, with an admirable choir under Dr. Lowell Mason, and a rare esprit de corps, the congregation was not surpassed by any in the city in general prosperity."

Mr. Winslow labored for and among young men to a large extent; delivered sermons and addresses to them; and published (1838) a volume of advice and counsel. While pastor at Bowdoin Street he performed a variety of labors, such as editing and press writing; acting as committeeman, trustee, and examiner, in and for colleges and schools. He interested himself largely in the public charities, was a chaplain for the Legislature, and various societies; and lectured quite extensively on scientific and moral subjects within a circuit of fifty miles of Boston. During his pastorate he never neglected a single duty in his sacred office. Said a Baptist pastor of Boston: "I think I never saw the pastor whose heart appeared to be more intently set upon an object than was his upon the conversion of his people in Bowdoin Street Church."

He was liberal and catholic. Rev. J.-S. Stone, D.D., LL.D., then rector of St. Paul's, now Dean of the Episcopal Divinity School of Harvard, writes: "I think he was uncommonly free from narrow prejudices, and could embrace with heartfelt sympathy and meet with hearty co-operations all of whatever name who loved the Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity and walked honestly in the truths of the Gospel."

Wm.-A. Brewer, Esq., thus touches on the pastorate in Boston, in the Boston Recorder: "That Mr. Winslow was a popular preacher was attested by the crowded state of his large church edifice on all occasions. That his popularity was owing to any 'sensation character' in his discourses was not true. He combined in most admirable proportions the didactic with the hortatory, the suaviter in mode et fortiter in re, the whole being baptized with a solemnity and earnestness that convinced his auditors that he was an embassador for Christ, standing between the living and the dead, to win souls to his Master."

Dr. Winslow visited Europe in 1840, partly to recover his health. In 1844 he resigned his pastorate over Bowdoin Street Church; and from that time until 1853, he conducted the Mt. Vernon Institute, laboring as a temporary pastor over various churches in and near Boston; also, preforming literary and educational duties. In 1850, while recruiting his health at his farm in Lancaster, Mass., he wrote his "Intellectual Philosophy." In 1853, he passed eight months in Europe, partly for the cause of education. In 1856, his "Moral Philosophy," appeared. In 1857, although in doubtful health, he accepted the charge of the First Presbyterian Church Geneva, N.Y. While there one hundred and forty joined the church, by profession. At Ovid, Phelps, and other neighboring places, where he labored and preached, many people united with the churches. His literary and other labors of the pen were constant. He was partly instrumental in establishing the "Geneva Club."

The Rev. Dr. Cannon, resident at Geneva, an officer of the A.B.C.F.M., remarks of Dr. Winslow: "For a short time, about two years, he was pastor of our First Presbyterian Church, in Geneva—one of the largest country churches of the denomination—and his ministry was eminently successful. He entered upon his work with a warm and earnest heart. . . . He was abundant in labor, both as preacher and pastor, mingling with the people at their homes and in their social gatherings, entering into their joys and sorrows; their hopes and trials, and seeking to do them good. By his warm and genial spirit he won the hearts of the young, and made them feel that he was their true friend. By his sage counsels of Christian experience he secured the confidence of the aged and mature. By his stores of information and science he attracted the learned; and upon all he left the impression that he was a holy man of God, seeking their highest good."

He removed to New York in 1859, but continued to preach and write. He took charge of the Fiftieth Street Presbyterian Church, for a time. The Rev. Dr. Rogers, then President of the Ministers' Association of New York, writes: "No member of the Association was held in higher esteem than Dr. Winslow. His eminently fraternal spirit; his vivacity of thought, expression, and manner; his uniform courtesy; his discriminating philosophic mind, and his large and liberal culture, made him a most valuable member. His contributions to our discussions were always of a high order."

Dr. Winslow's great labors at length produced nervous prostration, and he went to Williston, Vermont, hoping to recover, but the Master called, and, after a few days of confinement to his bed, he died, 13 August, 1864. Within sight of his native mountains, in the old house of his childhood, he quietly breathed out this life of mortality. The Rev. A.-D. Barber has vividly portrayed the closing scenes, which were rich in faith, wise and fervent in counsel, calm and yet joyful, in the hope of soon being in the presence of God.

After touching upon his intellect and attainments, the Rev. Dr. Vermilye, of the (Dutch) Reformed Church in New York, says: "But his humble piety was the crowning beauty of his character and life. His close, as I read the incidents, impressed me deeply. It was Christian, beautiful, even sublime! 'Mark the perfect man and behold the upright; for the end of that man is peace.'"

In bringing this sketch to a close, we are at a loss to adequately sum up and portray, in a paragraph or two, the character of Hubbard Winslow. He had a mind of great versatility; his attainments, his labors and acomplished works were indicative of the same characteristic. Remarks the Boston Courier: "The mind of Dr. Winslow was vigorous, clear, comprehensive. His powers of argument, analytical reasoning, philosophical acumen were remarkable. Harmonious balance of the intellectual faculties and conservative possession appear in all his writings. His mind was quick; . . . he accomplished his work while another would have been thinking upon the subject.

"He added ripe scholarship to all his natural gifts. He spoke several languages; was thoroughly versed in science; in philosophy and theology he had few equals. He was an eloquent speaker, a persuasive preacher. . . . His reasoning was so simple that a child could understand it, and his style so pure and complete that seldom could it have been changed for the better. . . . Little children were interested in him as well as mature manhood. . . . In his religious life Dr. Winslow was marked by those gentle, noble, patient traits which belong to a true type of Christianity. . . . He carried cheerfulness wherever he went. Genial humor, pointed sayings full of significance and good will, apt description, a natural manner, were apparent in his daily walk and intercourse. He had very few enemies, and if any, they were of their own making. He was firm and decided in his opinions, and those who differed with him respected him. Seldom have we recorded the life of a public man so active as was that of Dr. Winslow. He was full of motion, and ever engaged in some kind of labor. . . . The sixty-four years of his life were uncommon ones, and the works of his hands remain as a testimony of the man and of a life nobly employed."

It only remains to make a list of Dr. Winslow's works, as but little space has been given them in the foregoing sketch. His volumes comprise these:

- "Doctrine of the Trinity." 1831.
- "Controversial Theology." 1832.
- "Philosophical Tracts" (collected). 1833.
- "Christianity Applied to our Civil and Social Relations." 1835.
- "Young Man's Aid." 1836.
- "Aids to Self-Examination." 1837.
- "Mental Cultivation." 1839.
- "Lectures to Sunday-School Teachers." 1839.
- "Appropriate Sphere of Woman." 1837.
- "Woman, as She Should Be." 1837.
- "Relation of Natural Sciences to Revelation." 1839.
- "Design and Mode of Baptism." 1842.
- "Christian Doctrines." 1844.
- "Intellectual Philosophy." 1852.
- "Moral Philosophy." 1856.
- "Hidden Life" (last work). 1863.

His little work "Are You a Christian," has been published in Boston, New York, Cincinnati, London, Edinburgh, and, we believe, translated for the Continent. Over two hundred and fifty thousand copies have been circulated in the English language alone.

"The Young Man's Aid," published in Boston and London, has also had a very large circulation, the sale in the United States alone being over one hundred thousand.

"Intellectual Philosophy" has passed through ten, and "Moral Philosophy" through five editions; they are the main pillar of Dr. Winslow's reputation as a thinker and writer.

DR. WINSLOW'S MINOR WORKS.

- "Address Before the Boston Society of Natural History." 1837.
- "Fourth July Oration, before City Authorities, etc., of Boston." 1838.
- "Authority of Civil Law." 1838-9.
- "Address Before Educational Societies."
- "Sermon Before Ancient and Honorable Artillery." 1853.
- "Eulogy on Webster." 1853.
- "Boston School Committee Reports." 1850-3.
- "History of Presbyterian Church, Geneva, N.Y." 1857.
- "Manner of Keeping the Sabbath." 1858.
- "Eulogy on E.-A. Andrews, LL.D." 1858.

And several Fast and Thanksgiving sermons, speeches in pamphlet form, etc.

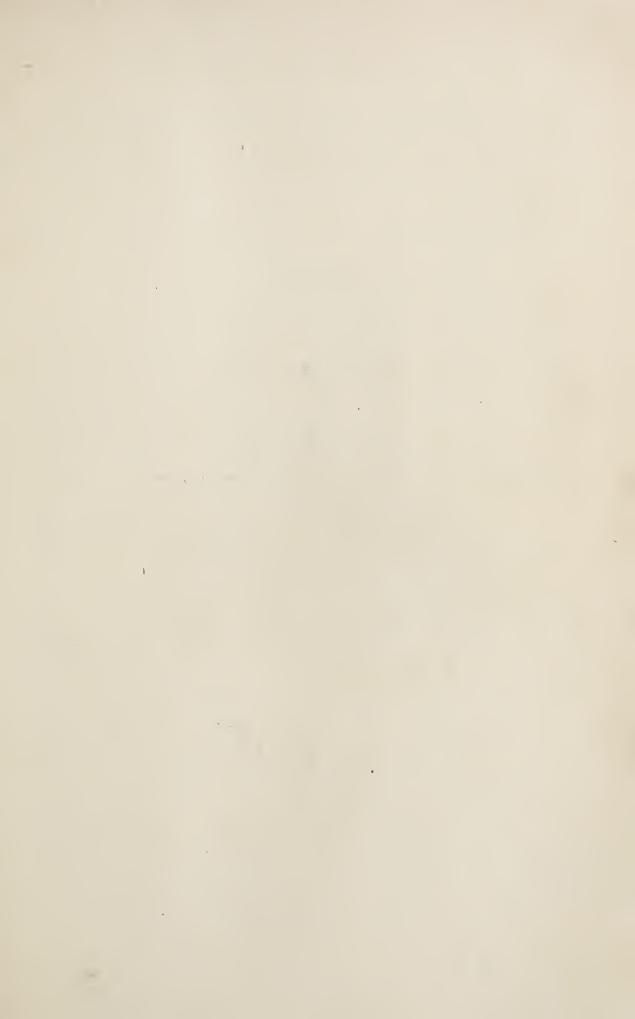

Dr. Winslow wrote introductions to several works, such as "Church Member's Guide," "Life Scenes from Mission Fields," and furnished biographical sketches, and portions of them, for such works as the biographies of Isaac McLellan, of James Haughton, etc.

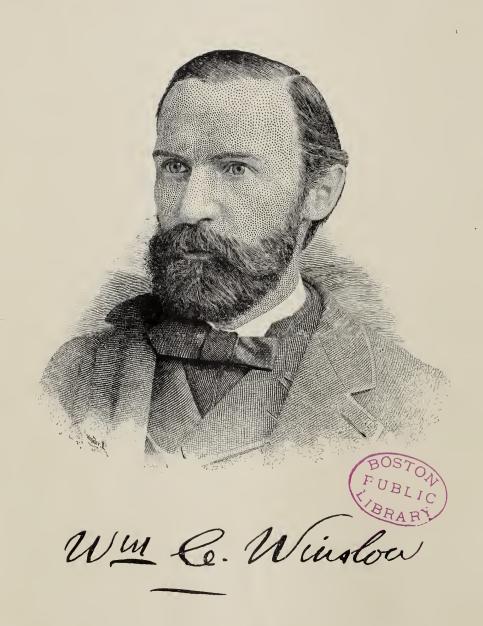

He wrote articles, among others, for the North American Review, Presbyterian Review, Christian Review, the Medical Journal, and Educational Journal. He edited the Religious Magazine with Jacob Abbott and Dr. Adams. Among the newspaper press to be included are the Traveller (Boston); and the Observer, Evangelist, Century, Intelligencer, Round Table, of New York. During the last year or two of his life he wrote quite extensively for the New York Observer.

His addresses, very numerous, before school committees and boards, clubs, Sunday-schools; at dedications of churches, cemeteries, halls; at ordinations, installations, town celebrations, and festivals, are found in pamphlet form, collected memorials, newspapers, etc., from 1833 to 1864, particularly between 1836–1844, and 1850–60.

His children, all born at Boston, Mass., were:

- 6940. 1. Anna, [6944] b. 24 Dec. 1832; died 28 Nov. 1869; married Edward Warren.
- 6941. 2. Edward-Hubbard, [6948] b. 26 Dec. 1835; married Sept. 1859, Helen Ayre.
- 6942. 3. WILLIAM-COPLEY, [6952] b. 13 Jan. 1840; married Harriet-Stillman Hayward.
- 6943. 4. Kenelm, [6956] born 15 June, 1843; died 24 October, 1867, Paris, France.

6948. DR. EDWARD-HUBBARD', [6941] (Hubbard's, Nathaniel's, Nathaniel's, John's, Kenelm's, Kenelm's, b. 26 Dec. 1835, Boston, Mass; was educated partly at the public schools, and for a time engaged in mercantile pursuits. Subsequently, he studied medicine at the Harvard School, and, later, at the New York University School, where he graduated with high honor in 1858. He practiced in New York till 1862, when he accepted the post-surgeonship of Fernandina, Florida, remaining there till Aug. 1864, when he returned to New York. Formerly he engaged a little in literary work, but has been mainly devoted to his profession, in which he has attained much distinction.

He married at Montville, Maine, 1 Sept. 1859, Helen Ayer, of M., b. 30 Nov. 1836, at M., daughter of Thomas-Jefferson and Sarah-Elizabeth (Picard) of M.

1874, Stamford, Conn.

Their children:

6950. 2. HELEN-LOUISE, b. 16 Oct. 1866, Staten Island.

6951. 3. REGINALD-KENELM, b. 23 June, 1868, Bridgeport, Ct.; died in 1876.

6952. REV. WILLIAM-COPLEY, [6942] (Hubbard, Nathaniel, Nathaniel, John, Kenelm, Kenelm, ) was born 13 Jan. 1840, at No. 3 Mt. Vernon Place, Boston. He received his early education at the public and Latin schools. Removed with his parents to Geneva, N.Y., in 1857, and entered Hamilton College, Clinton, N.Y., in the fall of 1858. His favorite studies were classics and philosophy, and he excelled in English composition. Passing the junior year at Vermont University, Burlington, he was instrumental in awakening interest in the University Quarterly, published at New Haven, Conn., and became an editor of it. The number for July, 1861. contains a full and careful article by him upon the admirable library of the University. Re-entering Hamilton College, 1861, he graduated in 1862. While in this college he edited the University Quarterly; also the Hamiltonian; was one of the committee of three appointed to prepare the college catalogue for the press, containing an account of the societies, and other interesting material. While a collegian he wrote letters and articles for the Clinton Courier, Utica Morning Herald, Moore's Rural New Yorker, The Boston Recorder, N.Y. Evangelist, etc.

For six months after graduation, Mr. Winslow, while undecided as to a profession, lived in New York, during which period he was three months an assistant-editor of the World, and also a contributor to the American Presbyterian, The Christian Intelligencer, Boston Recorder, etc.

Early in 1863, Mr. Winslow entered the General Theo. Seminary of the Episcopal Church, New York City, graduating in July, 1865, and receiving ordination the same month, from Bishop Potter, at the Wainwright Memorial Church. He officiated temporarily at this church, delivering a commemorative sermon on the death of the rector, Rev. E.-R.-T. Cook, which was published in the papers; also a Thanksgiving sermon, published in part in the daily press. He also officiated on Staten Island for two months; but having previously planned a trip to Europe, declined settlements as rector.

During his seminary course, he passed a few weeks in the West Indies for the benefit of his health; and for about six months he was an associate editor, with Rev. S.-H. Tyng, of the Christian Times, afterward the Protestant Churchman.

In Jan. 1866, he sailed for Europe, traveling several months, -most of the time in Italy. He devoted two months to Rome, chiefly to the inspection of its arts and ruins. In 1867, Mr. W. became rector of St. George's church, Lee, Mass. In October, 1870, he resigned the rectorship and removed to Boston. Beside his ministerial duties at Lee, he wrote articles for Appleton's Cyclopedia, Allibone's Dict. of Authors, and letters to the Lee Chronicle and Pittsfield Eagle from the Adirondack woods. These sylvan notes were largely quoted and commented upon. His lectures, and courses of lectures, in Lee and various places, were upon the "Woods," Enrope, Church History, religious topics, etc. He also gave orations (one of them was published in 1870) on "Memorial Day"; addresses before the G.A.R.; at Masonic celebrations, and on other like occasions. He was secretary, and, subsequently, chairman of the school committee, visiting and supervising 18 schools, of which one was a High School. The parish at Lee offered resolutions, published in the church papers, one of which was "That the Rev. Mr. Winslow had the thanks of the parish for the general able and faithful manner in which he has discharged his duties as rector, and, especially, for his faithfulness and ability in upholding and defending the truths and doctrines of religion; for his untiring labors in church improvements, and in the liquidation of indebtednesses." During his pastorate the parish more than doubled its membership.

From November, 1870, to the present date, Mr. Winslow has resided in Boston. He has taken temporary charge of churches at Taunton, Dedham, Marblehead, Medford, Weymouth, Cambridge, etc. Partly owing to indifferent health, he has declined permanent settlements, although performing full duties on Sunday.

He has written letters from Florida to the Boston Journal (spring of 1872), from the Green and White Mountains, the Adirondacks, and elsewhere, to the Boston Transcript, beside furnishing an occasional article to a secular or religious sheet. In 1872-3, he prepared and gave, in various cities and towns of Massachusetts, a lecture on "Forest Life and Scenes." Mr. Winslow frequently lectures in courses upon topics of religion and the world. At the Episcopal Convention for the Election of a Bishop, in Boston, December, 1872, his name appeared in the list of candidates receiving votes. His religious as well as political views are progressively conservative rather than extreme and radical.

From the Church Press of July 2, 1887, we extract the following: The university of Kings College at Windsor, in Nova Scotia, has just conferred the honorary degree of Doctor of Civil Law (D.C.L.) upon President Barnard of Columbia College, and the Rev. W.-C. Winslow, LL.D., of Boston. Addresses were prepared by both gentlemen for the Encaenia, or commencement, the Rev. Dr. Winslow reading Dr. Barnard's very interesting reminiscences of Columbia College when it was King's College, prior to the Revolution.

Dr. Winslow has also received the following honorary degrees: Ph.D. from Hamilton College; D.D. from Amherst Coll.; S.T.D., Griswold Coll., Iowa; LL.D., University of St. Andrews, Senior Coll. of Scotland, and L.H.D. at the Centennary of Columbia Coll., N.Y. He is an honorary member of the Royal Archæological Soc. of Great Britain, honorary correspondent of the Victoria Inst. and Phil. Society, American Vice-Pres. of the Egyptian Exploration Fund, and Secretary of the Free Church Association; is on the Exec. Com. of the American Institute of Civics, Life Member of Amer. Hist. Soc., and L.M. or member of others, foreign and American.

On page 622 is mentioned the door knocker on the door of Rev. Gordon Winslow, D.D., at Staten Island. It was doubtless at a very early date doing duty at the old Winslow house, but as to its exact origin and date authorities differ.*

Hon. Wm.-T. Davis of Plymouth tells me that this door-knocker did not come over in the May-flower, but was placed on said door by some Winslow owner of the house -J.W.

*We 'quote from the Staten Island Gazette of April, 1883, an article credited to a Paris paper in regard to it, and leave for future investigators to decide whether it came in the Mayflower or was produced by the grandson of the pilgrim, Gov. Edward Winslow.

&quot;The original door-knocker, brought over in the Mayflower, which for several generations was upon the front door of the old Winslow House at Marshfield, still standing on the Webster farm, has lately come into the possession of the Rev. W.-C. Winslow of Boston, who will probably give it to the Webster Hist. Society. 'In 1850,' says the Boston Transcript, 'the Rev. Gordon Winslow. D. D., rector of St. Paul's, Staten Island, while on a visit to Mr. Webster, was presented by him with the interesting relic. It is inscribed, 'From Winslow House, Marshfield, Mass. Came in the Mayflower, 1620.' And on the rim or head to receive the blows of the hammer, the inscription runs: 'Presented by Daniel Webster to Dr. G. Winslow, Sept. 12th, 1850.' The door-knocker is of brass, but so incrusted with age that some Old Mortality will have to exercise considerable friction to bring back the original lustre, such as greeted the caller upon Gov. Edward Winslow and Gov. Josiah Winslow. Mr. Webster took great interest in the old mansion, which the builder and original owner named 'Careswell,' and looked upon this relic as among the most valuable souvenirs of the Mayflower, and the Pilgrimage. As will be remembered by some, the Webster tomb is in the Winslow burying ground, near the tomb of Gov. Josiah Winslow, whose coat-of-arms-the crest being a tree cut short but sprouting out, and motto Decoptus Floreo, is as clear and distinct as if put there but yesterday."

the sophomore class of Hamilton College, Clinton, N.Y., in the fall of 1861, and, in 1864, entered the senior class of Williams College, Williamstown, Mass., completing his collegiate course that year. Entering the Union Theo. Seminary, New York City, in 1864, he finished his preparations for the ministry in the summer of 1867; but having the previous winter become a candidate for orders in the Episcopal Church, he did not graduate with his class at the Seminary. He had previously been licensed to preach, and, as a Presbyterian, had supplied pulpits, for longer or shorter periods, during the last year of his theological studies. His ordination to the ministry of the Episcopal Church was postponed from July, 1867, to the autumn, in consequence of the absence of his Bishop, Eastburn, of Massachusetts, to attend the Lambeth Conference in England. In the interval, compelled by ill-health to take a voyage, he died suddenly at Paris, while resting from his journey, preparatory to returning to the United States.

In connection with the gifts for his special calling, Mr. W. had decided inventive genius and talent. He could sketch and execute with facility and accuracy. His aptness for monogrammic and text work was often called into service by his friends. Fond of music, he played both violin and flute with considerable skill. He performed tolerably well upon the piano; but the organ was his delight, and he performed on it with much ease and excellence as an amateur. While at college he took the lead in this respect. Little opportunity was afforded one so young to display literary talents, but a number of his pieces and letters, published in the religious press, forecast a promising future for him as a writer. During the last year or two of his life he collected considerable material for a "Winslow Genealogy," previously undertaken by his father, and after his death it was placed in the hands of Dr. and Mrs. Holton.

A brief sketch, signed "Amicus," published in the Christian Witness (Episcopal), affords us an extract or two in this place. "His mental and religious training was in a good school. He had an unusually clear perception and discrimination, especially in the domain of philosophy and theology. He had read largely, and his knowledge of history, natural philosophy, and science generally, was far above that possessed by the majority of theological students. He had also a fluency of language which made him converse, write, and preach with no mean persuasive power. A rare and pleasing address, and a gifted elocution, with his mental culture, gave his preaching the characteristics of much acceptability."

His whole heart was enlisted, his whole zeal absorbed, in the work before him. When about to sail for Southampton, he said, "I long to return and be at work!"

Among the resolutions passed were those by his former society, Delta Kappa Epsilon, at Williams College, from which we make an extract. "We learn with pain and sorrow of the death of our brother who had just entered upon active life with bright prospects of usefulness before him, and whose life was only reflected in his profession. . . . a faithful brother, an esteemed friend, and one invaluable to the cause of Christianity and education."

The cause of his death is supposed to have been mainly over-action of the heart. His remains, placed in Montmartre, Paris, were subsequently removed to Forest Hills, near Boston, and on "Alder Path," repose side by side with those of his father, Rev. Hubbard Winslow.

His early years passed away much after the manner of his brothers Miron and Hubbard. Occupied at home in farming and at his father's nail factory, at school a term or so each year, he made some progress in study and reading, and acquired good and substantial ideas of life, and the best of habits. No doubt Miron and Hubbard by word encouraged and by example influenced him greatly.

He was a student of Phillips Academy from 1823-6. He graduated at Yale College 1830, receiving the degree of A.M. in 1833. He studied theology at the Yale School, and under his brother Hubbard at Dover, N.H. While there he was under the care (so to speak) of the Piscataqua (N.H.) Association, and by them licensed to preach in 1833.

He married at New York, 5 September, 1833, Katherine-G. Fish, b. 16 May, 1807, in New York, daughter of Whitehead and Elsie (Gilbert) of New York, and cousin of Hon. Hamilton Fish, Secretary of State.

He preached and labored among sailors in New Orleans. This kind of work was a part of the duties of his after life, while on Staten Island. He in time became familiar with medicine and surgery, and prescribed as well for the body as the soul. At the outbreak of the Rebellion, the New York University conferred on him the Doctorate of Medicine, a degree for which he was quite as well qualified as he was for the "D.D." received previously from the Episcopal College in Annapolis.

After his New Orleans residence of nearly one year, he was ordained over the Congregational Church in Medford, Mass., June 12, 183-. His mind, one of order, reverence, perhaps fond of form in religion without formalism, had previously been directed towards the Episcopal Church.

After a year of labor at Medford, he acted on his convictions and applied for admission into the Episcopal Communion. He received the ordination to full or priest's orders in May, 1836, and entered upon his duties as rector of St. John's Parish, Troy, N.Y. After two years' service in Troy, receiving a call from Trinity Parish, Elmira, N.Y., he accepted it, and there resided till 1841, when he accepted the charge of St. Ann's Parish, Annapolis, Md., one of the largest of the Maryland Churches.

During these pastorates Dr. Winslow published several pamphlets. He studied mineralogy and began his "collection," which subsequently became one of the choicest private cabinets of the land. At Annapolis he made close acquaintanceship with United States officers, and performed a good deal of labor at the Naval School and Station.

A bronchial trouble rendering a change of climate important to his ministerial life, if not life itself, he purchased a piece of land—perhaps ten acres—on the heights of Staten Island, in 1845, and erected on it a neat and tasteful cottage. Here, for nearly twenty years, or until he died, was his home.

Of great skill and ingenuity mechanically, he did much with his own hands to adorn and make attractive his cottage. Away from city noise and bustle was this charming retreat which, with its rustic fences and bowers, winding paths, and shades of maple, became a most delightful rural spot. One could look forth on the Atlantic, and then, at hand, upon the miniature farm and its neat and inviting cultivations. But these were not years of inactivity.

Contemporaneously with his removal to Staten Island, Dr. Winslow became rector of St. Paul's Parish, and chaplain of the Quarantine. The latter position he held for seventeen years. His devotion and untiring efforts while yellow fever raged, and at other times, are fresh in the minds of many.

We open at another page of his life—the closing one. Close upon the cannon-ade at Sumter, a legion of brave men sprang up to hurl back upon traitors the consequences of treason. The gallant Fifth of New York (known afterward as "Duryea Zouaves") went forth, Gordon Winslow as their chaplain. Their first effort was at Big Bethel.

James Parton says of Winslow: "The noble Chaplain Winslow, with a few other men, remained behind, and, all exhausted as they were, drew the wounded in wagons nine miles, from the scene of the action to the nearest camp." The officer in command reports: "The noble conduct of Chaplain Winslow and the generous-hearted men who remained to help the wounded, deserves the highest praise; and the toilsome task which they accomplished, of dragging the rude vehicles filled with their helpless comrades, over a weary road of nine miles in their exhausted condition, with the prospect of an attack every minute, bespeaks a goodness of heart and a bravery never excelled."

The Chaplain, during his two years as such, often acted as aid-de-camp. He was engaged in some form of service in nearly every battle of the war in Virginia.

Just after the sad event at Fredericksburg, he wrote his brother as follows: "As for myself, I am ready for anything that turns up in the way of helping on the cause for which we are in the field. I am chaplain of the Fifth, but act more or less for the whole division. Then, as volunteer aid to General Warren, I am under orders, and attend with him in the surveys and mapping of the country, establishing lines of pickets, locating hospitals, and looking after the sick and wounded in the Division, Brigades, and Regiments. After the battle I selected the site for the general hospital at Fredericksburg, and saw the wounded transported across the river and properly provided for."

Dr. Winslow had a number of very narrow escapes. Under Pope, at Bull Run, his regiment lost about four hundred men. He had balls pass through his hair and beard, and his horse was wounded under him. At Gettysburg a ball struck off the head of the officer to whom he was giving a command from Gen. Weed. After the battle of Antietam, anxious to do what he could for the wounded, and desirous to ascertain their number, he penetrated the rebel lines, and before he was aware found himself riding by the side of one of the rebel generals. He rode in his company seven miles, and after parting from him, began to turn toward the Union lines. Surrounded by rebels burying the dead and gathering the wounded, he played the part of one of their officers. Favored by the uncertain light of evening, he at length reached sufficiently near the Union lines to make a sudden dash and reach a place of safety.

Dr. Winslow was one of the early promoters of the Sanitary Commission, and was identified with its history up to the hour of his death. He held the important post and office of Inspector of the Army of the Potomac for the Commission.

Major-General Warren, under date of January, 1863, reports as follows: "From the first battle of the war at Big Bethel to the last at Fredericksburg, Dr. Winslow has shown an adaptability for his position, and a success in efforts which has won the confidence of all. At an early day he was elected by the Sanitary Commission at Washington for the responsible position of the Sanitary Inspector of the Army. This immense labor he sustained till the commencement of the Peninsular campaign, for which he received the earnest thanks of the Department at Washington. Since the commencement of the Peninsular campaign he has been my aid and a member of my staff, and has been constantly with me on the field, except when the claims of humanity and mercy called him to attend to the sufferings of his fallen comrades. His efforts in this department I most gratefully acknowledge. For days and nights after the several battles of Williamsburg, Hanover Court House, Gaines' Mills, Malvern Hill, Bull Run, Antietam, and Fredericksburg, the doctor has had frequent recourse to his experience to guide him to the best measures of improving hospitals for the wounded, or means of comfort and solace, which at such times of trial cannot be too highly valued."

Dr. Winslow's elder son, Col. Cleveland Winslow of the Fifth N.Y. ("Duryea Zouaves"), was badly wounded in the battle of the Wilderness; and while bringing him and other wounded officers and soldiers to Alexandria, the sad accident occurred by which his valuable life was cut off, in the midst of its usefulness. On the morning of June 7, 1864, at the mouth of the Potomac, he fell overboard from the transport steamer Mary Ripley, and after swimming for some time upon the surface, suddenly disappeared as a boat was close at hand to rescue him. The remains were never found.

L.-A. Hendricks, Esq., correspondent of the New York Herald, wrote: "A more popular and useful chaplain has not been in the service. . . . A mind finely cultivated, manners dignified and refined, a rare fund of anecdote at command, and an underlying vein of delicate richness, served to make him a most genial as well as agreeable and instructive companion. Long in memory will live the recollection of his alternating wit and pathos, and words of counsel uttered at the mess-table, and around the camp-fire at night, as were canvassed the events of each day, the exciting march or some storm of terrible tragedy. . . . No cast of an ancient Grecian or Roman hero presented a more finely moulded head than that of Dr. Winslow, and his long flowing gray beard, dark gray eyes of tender but penetrative expression, and straight and well-built frame, although sixty years of age, suggested him as a type, in these days of effeminate degeneracy rarely seen, of those great old philosophers who once walked the streets of Carthage and Rome."

We close this sketch with an extract or two from the Christian Times (Episcopal), found in a long editorial on the death of Dr. Winslow: "We often thought of him as a model man, in very many respects. There was a soundness, a completeness to his character, rarely seen. His social nature was of a refined, genial, whole-souled cast, and well poised. . . . And yet, while frank and open, he knew that silence is sometimes power and wisdom. Such were his discretion and prudence that he was frequently cognizant of army movements and plans which but few were permitted to know. . . . His intellectual nature was characterized by life, earnestness, comprehensiveness, liberality of views, a special love for certain pursuits, and considerable genius. He was unambitious and made no display of his abilities. He often declined honors tended him. As an instance of this he did not accept the Diocese of Alabama, which his friends urged upon him.

"His business talent and executive abilities were remarkable. These gave him prominence and influence in every undertaking and employment. His accomplishments were of high order. In the departments of science he was thoroughly versed.

. . . He corresponded with various scientific bodies, and was (we believe), a member of the Smithsonian Institute. His contributions to the press and cyclopedias were frequent.

"He was very ingenious, and uncommonly skilful in the use of tools. Many handsome specimens of workmanship came from his hands. Among his inventions may be mentioned a patented one relating to the construction of locomotive wheels. He had a taste for antiquarian lore and specimens, and his house contained many such objects of interest. The huge brass knocker on his front-door was a present from Daniel Webster, and was taken from the 'Old Winslow House' at Marshfield." [See page 618.]

"His religious nature, above all, was the crowning excellence of the man. From earliest boyhood to his death he was a true Christian in daily walk and pursuit, as well as when he stood before men to 'point the way of life.' His pulpit ministrations were faithful, vigorous, practical, and thought-inspiring efforts, appealing to Scripture, and persuading men to duty and obedience. . . . Our friend and brother has closed a long and useful life—useful because it answered life's great end. . . . His memory we will keep with us, and his influence will live after him like the influence of the good, a source of blessing to many generations."

The funeral was at Trinity Church, New York City, 10 July, 1864; the remains were placed in Greenwood Cemetery.

He was engaged in mercantile pursuits at the breaking out of the rebellion. His connection with the New York City militia, and attainments in military science, fitted him for the service, and he raised a company of men and departed with the Fifth N.Y. Regiment ("Duryea Zouaves"), engaging with them in all the battles and conflicts of two years. After the battle of Antetam, he was unanimously elected colonel of the regiment. On its return, in 1863, he immediately recruited another, and was in every engagement of the Army of the Potomac up to the day of his death.

Major-General Warren reports: "I have never known a braver officer." General McClellan and various other leading officers expressed kindred sentiments. As a soldier he was tried and true, brave without rashness, a strict disciplinarian, and possessed those executive qualities which should belong to those in important civil or military positions. Had he escaped the wounds at Mechanicsville, he would have entered his next engagement as a general. His title as colonel, however, clings to him, as he was identified with his regiment. His personal presence was very striking, and his regiment one of the finest in the entire service.

WINSLOW MEMORIAL MONUMENT.

A monument to commemorate the three sons of Nathaniel Winslow, eminent divines, who died in the same year, has been erected in the cemetery of their native place, Williston, Vermont. It is of Isle-la-Motte marble—a pyramid of the height of eighteen feet, surmounted with an elaborately carved cross. The inscriptions on the four sides are as follows:—

[1.] THREE BROTHERS.

Born in Williston, of the seventh [fifth] generation from the Pilgrim Fathers. "Their works do follow them."

WINSLOW.

[2.] MIRON WINSLOW, D.D., LL.D.,

Forty-five years Missionary in India, died at Cape of Good Hope, Oct. 22, 1864, aged 74 years.

"Thy life to the Cross was wholly devoted."

[3.] Hubbard Winslow, D.D.,

Author, Educator, Pastor at Boston and elsewhere, died Aug. 13, 1864, aged 64 years.

"Always abounding in the work of the Lord."

[4.] GORDON WINSLOW, D.D., M.D.,

Rector at Staten Island, N.Y., and elsewhere, entered into rest June 7, 1864, aged 59 years.

"In the service of his country and for his Master."

At a meeting of the members of the Winslow family, called in anticipation of the erection of this monument, at Williston, 18 June, 1873, extracts from the proof-sheets of the Winslow Memorial were read; specimens of wrought nails made by the father at Williston, Vermont, arranged on cards side by side with older specimens made by the grandfather before the Revolution, at Salisbury, Conn., were exhibited; and the following acrostic, in commemoration of the manual-labor training which these sons received in the nail-shop of their father, was sung to the tune of Uxbridge:

With careful toil he reared his sons.

Robust, strong-armed in faith and hope,
On life's great mission-work each runs;
Until with foes of TRUTH they cope—

G od blessed their works both far and near:

Heavenward their labors onward go

Truth living to implant and rear;

No fears restrained them from the foe.

A merica, Ceylon, Madras
In union brought without alloy,
Love, faith, and hope (more firm than brass)
Shall bind mankind in holy joy.

Children:

7087. 1. Lucy, b. 23 June, 1828, Bridport, Vt.; d. 12 Dec. 1854, and was buried at Allegan. She married there, 11 Nov. 1845, Abram-Rensselaer Calkins, M.D., of A., b. 19 May, 1822, Malta, N.Y., s. of Simon and Joanna (Lee) of Stillwater, Saratoga Co., N.Y. He died 17 Mar. 1783,

Allegan. [He married 2d, 1855, Nellie Bingham, who died 21 Sept. 1862; m. 3d, 26 May, 1863, Charlotte Stone.]

"Our esteemed fellow citizen, Dr. Abram-R. Calkins, died in this village, on Monday afternoon, the 17th inst., after a brief illness, from the malignant form of intermittent fever. He had been taken ill on the Thursday evening previous. All that the affection of his friends and the medical skill of the profession could do, proved of no avail—for disease that he battled so unsuccessfully for many years, finally proved victor.

"Doctor Calkins was born in Malta, Saratoga Co., N.Y., in 1822. He removed with his parents to Richland, Kalamazoo Co., in 1835. In 1837, his father died and he came under the guardianship of his brother, Chauncey-W. Calkins, Esq., during which time he prosecuted his literary education. At the age of nineteen he commenced the study of medicine at the Medical College of Geneva, N.Y., where he graduated two years later. He continued his studies under Drs. Coates and Bigelow, of Otsego. Subsequently Dr. Coates removed to Allegan. Dr. Calkins came with him, and, in 1844, he opened an office in this village and continued in the practice of his profession thirty years, except one year during the war of the rebellion, when he served as surgeon of the 17th Michigan Infantry.

"He enlisted June, 1862, and served through the two battles of Antietam and South Mountain, when, hearing of the death of his wife, he resigned. His son Frank-Winslows, was with him all the time he was in the army.

"In 1868, Dr. Calkins formed a partnership with Dr. E. Amsden, which continued until within a few weeks of his death.

"In regard to Doctor Calkins' merits as a physician and surgeon, all admitted his eminence and proficiency. He was remarkably good and accurate in his diagnosis of disease, and as energetic and thorough in its treatment. He seemed almost oblivious of his own comfort and health, and literally died a martyr to his profession; for, on being remonstrated with by his friends in regard to his over-exertion, he said, 'I must do my duty and leave the result with God.'

"The doctor was a decided Christian man. Early in life he consecrated himself to science and the worship of God, and he never forgot his duties. If it was possible, he was always in his place on the Sabbath. His charities in sustaining the institutions of the Church were well known in the church to which he belonged, and better still by his pastor, Rev. J. Sailor.

"He was a warm advocate and supporter of every cause and reform tending to the elevation and welfare of men.

"Many, very many, will mourn his loss. Those families he so often visited as a ministering angel will most miss this benefactor of mankind. The church where his face was so familiar, and his support so hearty and liberal, will also greatly miss him. The various social interests of life that he subserved so well will feel his loss. But he has gone. He has crossed the dark river; nor did he murmer at the dispensations of Providence that called him hence. He would have been glad to remain with his family, that he might subserve their interests still more, and carry out certain plans he contemplated for their comfort and prosperity. But he was ready. For thirty-five years he had been making that preparation, and he could now approach the grave 'like one who wraps the drapery of his couch about him and lies down to pleasant dreams.' He leaves a bereaved wife and three children to mourn his loss.

"The doctor was one of the school officers of our village, and on the day of his funeral the several schools were dismissed in honor of his memory. The funeral of Doctor Calkins was attended at his late residence, on Wednesday, by a large and sympathetic circle of friends.

"The funeral exercises were opened by Rev. J. Hamilton, who offered a prayer and read from the Scriptures, while the funeral discourse was delivered by Rev. J. Sailor, the pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, of which the Doctor was so long a member. This discourse was of a most affecting character and paid a high tribute to the Christian character of the lamented deceased. The Masonic fraternity of our village participated in the funeral ceremonies."

He married in that town, Dorothy Simmons, of Waldoboro, Me., born in 1752, Duxbury, Mass., dau. of Dea. Nathaniel and Mercy (Simmons) of D., afterwards of Waldoboro. died 23 Sept. 1814, Nobleboro. He was a ship-carpenter, and removed to the east, landing first at Pemaquid, now Bristol, Me., where he worked at his trade. afterwards resided for a time in Waldoboro, now known as South Waldoboro, on the east side of the Macdomac River. He, with James Hall, built the first vessel constructed in that place. He purchased land of the Smiths, who owned most of the tract lying east of Pemaquid Pond, in Nobleboro, which was incorporated in 1782. He, at the first, lived near this pond in a log house. As the country became settled and roads were built, his farm was divided by the county road, leaving sufficient land for two farms on the north (afterwards occupied by his sons, Nathaniel-Oliver and Joseph), while on the south was the homestead, where he built a "timber house" and spent his days. In 1817, he deeded the homestead to Josiah and Snow, his youngest two sons, occupying the old house with Josiah, Snow building near him. His request that the property should never be sold out of the name, has been faithfully regarded by his descendants. His sons all served in the war of 1812, and received pensions. John and Joseph were captains, Nathaniel was a lieutenant, Josiah a drummer, and Snow a fifer. Nobleboro, Maine.

John and Sarah-Ann (Glidden) of E. was appointed Ensign in the U.S. Navy, October 18th, 1862, and ordered to the U.S. frigate Macedonian, which was captured by Commodore Decatur in the U.S. frigate Constitution, in the war of 1812. December 2d, 1862, he received orders to join the U.S. gunboat Morse, attached to the North Atlantic Blockading Squadron, Rear Admiral Lee commanding; reported for duty on the 7th of the same month. duty about Fortress Monroe until the spring of 1863, when the Morse, Lt. Comdr. C-A. Babcock, was ordered to the York River, as the senior There he was under fire for the first time. The U.S. mail-boat Swan was steaming up the river York. When nearly to West Pointshe was fired on by a rebel masked battery that had been thrown up the night before. The Morse was lying some three miles distant, at anchor, and the captain was on shore. Ensign Merry being the ex-officer, or 1st Lieutenant, the command of course devolved on him. He immediately caused the cable to be slipped, and steamed towards the battery, at the same time opening fire with long range shell, but nearing the enemy, he used five second fuse, and continued the fire as rapidly as possible. After expending about two hundred rounds, the enemy beat a retreat. Captain Babcock came on board in a tugboat during the action and gave him orders to go on shore, after the fight was over, and set fire to the houses near the battery, the inhabitants being in the rear in the woods. This was done, and he then returned to the ship, which was so much disabled that it was necessary to take it to the Norfolk Navy Yard for repairs.

After several engagements on the York with the enemy, they were ordered to Washington for the protection of that city, at the time the battle of Gettysburg was fought. When Lee retreated, the Morse went back to the James River, and was present at the bombardment and capture of Fort Powhatten. This fight was a bloodless one on their side, the rebels retiring as they advanced to assault. The works having been levelled, and a reconnoisance made at the river in force, they returned to Fortress Monroe; were again on the York river, and at the "White House Landing" when the battle of Cold Harbor was fought. Soon after, had a very severe engagement for five hours with the rebel Gens. Wade Hampton's and Fitz Hugh Lee's artillery, the Morse being much injured. They, however, succeeded in keeping the rebels in check until Gen. Sheridan arrived, when he put the enemy to flight.

After having served on board the Morse for about twenty-two months, clearing rivers of torpedoes, doing picket duty, etc., etc., Lieut. Merry was taken sick with fever, and sent by the surgeon to the Norfolk Hospital. Two months later, having recovered, he was appointed to the U.S. steamer Osceola, Capt. Clitz, U.S.N., attached to Admiral David-D. Porter's fleet, which was being rendezvoused at Hampton Roads for a premeditated attack on Fort Fisher. The Osceola cruised in search of blockade runners until December, 1864, when the fleet arrived off the Cape Fear River, and, on Christmas day, attacked the Fort, bombarding it for three days. The Osceola was hulled several times, once by a ten inch shot, twenty-seven inches below the water line, entering the starboard boiler and scalding seven men, two of them fatally. In a short time the ship was in a sinking condition, the shot hole being so far below the water's edge that it was difficult to repair. This was, however, done, and all the ammunition having been destroyed, fresh powder and shell was procured from the store ships, so that the Osceola was ready for the next day's fight.

It is well known that the first attempt at Fort Fisher was a failure. On the 13th of January, 1865, the fort was again attacked by the fleet, the army landing with assistance from the navy. On the 16th of January, 1865, a naval brigade was landed from the fleet to co-operate with the army in assaulting the fort, and Lieut. Merry commanded the company from the Osceola. At 3 p.m. the assault was made, the naval force being repulsed with great loss. He was wounded twice; the first time severely in his right thigh, the bullet passing through the fleshy part; the second time one passed through his left thigh, breaking the bone; was also slightly wounded in his right leg below the knee. His clothes bore marks of the enemy's missiles in nine different places, and his sword scabbard was cut off. For gallantry in this fight he was promoted to the grade of Master. He was taken to the Norfolk Hospital for treatment, where, for four weeks, he daily expected the amputation of his left leg would be necessary. After remaining there two months, he was transferred to his home, but was forced to use crutches about one year. When sufficiently recovered he was ordered to ordnance duty at the Navy Yard, N.Y., where he remained about six months, when he was appointed to the Ohio Receiving Ship, at Boston.

March 12th, 1868, he received a commission in the Regular Navy, and, in the October following, orders to report to Rear Admiral S-C. Rowan for duty in the U.S. Asiatic Squadron. He remained in China and Japan for more than three years, taking part in the Corean expedition under Rear Admiral John Rodgers. After his return from China, Feb. 27th. 1872, he was ordered to duty at the Navy Yard. Portsmouth, N.H., and, February 5th, 1873, to the Juniata, fitting for sea at Boston; June 16th, 1873, was detached from the Juniata, on account of ill-health and lameness, resulting from his wounds. October 3d, 1873, he was ordered to the naval rendezvous at Boston, where, in 1874, he was on duty.

His commission of Lieutenant, which he received in China, bears date March 20th, 1870.

Lieut. Merry has favored us with the following account of his ancestry:

"My ancestor, Richard Merry, came to America in the year 1635. He, with others, among them the Rev. John Wheelwright, were sentenced by the Gen. Court to leave the jurisdiction of Boston on account of their religious belief. Mrs. Hutchinson was banished soon after for a similar belief, something like 'antinomianism.' The Puritans called it 'sedition.' They left Boston in the winter of 1637 for the Piscataqua River, and there founded and settled what is now Exeter, New Hampshire.

Where Battery Wharf now is, in Boston, was known as 'Merry's Point' up to the time of the Revolution, when it was changed to 'Battery Point.' My great-grand-father, Joseph Merry, migrated from Dover, N.H., to the Damariscotta River, about 1750, and took up a tract of land, the greater part of which my father now owns. My grand-father, Samuel Merry, was a captain in the war of 1812, and my grand-father, Nathaniel Glidden, a colonel. My father derives his title of 'Captain' from having been a ship Master." s.p.

The following obituary notice was written on the occasion of his death:

"In Nobleboro, Dec. 8, [1872] Jesse Dunbar, aged 90 years. He was born in Bridgewater, Mass., and moved with his parents to Nobleboro, Me., when eleven years of age, and lived upon the same place seventy-nine years, until he was called to his home above—bright views of which cheered his last hours. He was a much respected citizen, a kind husband and father—his virtues were manifest daily. Some seventy-three years ago he found hope in Christ, and united with the Congregational Church. But about forty-seven years since, changing his views in regard to baptism, he was baptized by Father Pillsbury and united with the First Baptist Church in Nobleboro, with which his late companion was already connected, and spent the remainder of his long life an esteemed member. His house was a home for the servants of Christ. His eleven children were all baptized into the fellowship of the same church with their parents, and the ten who survive them are all still members of Baptist churches; two of whom, Albert and Melzar Dunbar, are among our well-known and esteemed Baptist ministers." Seven of these children have been teachers.

NATHANIEL<sup>5</sup>, [1586] (Seth<sup>4</sup>, James<sup>3</sup>, Nathaniel<sup>2</sup>, Kenelm<sup>1</sup>,) born in 1730, at Rochester, Mass., according to the family record and Mrs. Wealthy<sup>7</sup> (Gunn) Haskins [8236]; d. 4 Nov. 1803, Sunderland, Franklin Co., Mass. He married, 23 Apr. 1758, acc. to Rochester Records, 1757, acc. to Rev. Lucius-Robinson<sup>7</sup> Paige [1024], Thankful Randall, born in 1737, Rochester, Mass., d. 16 Oct. 1797, Montague, Mass. Mrs. Haskins, to whom we are indebted for much of our information concerning her grandfather, writes that he was married in Rochester, and that some of his children were born there, and the remainder in Montague, Mass., he having removed thither before the marriage of any of his children. The town-clerk of Montague informs us that he can find no record of birth, marriage, or death of the Winslow family. On the assessor's valuation list of M., for the year 1791, are the names of Nathaniel and Seth Winslow, and on the one for the year 1818, is that of Martin Winslow. The following grants of land were taken from the Greenfield Records:

1781, Nov. 17, from Ithamar Bouker to Nathaniel Winslow.

1787, Oct. 3, from Joseph Wood, of M., to Nathaniel Winslow, of M., land lying in M., south-west corner of Miller's Plain Division.

1800, from Nathaniel Winslow, of M., to Jabez Upham, of Sunderland, Mass.

Children born in Rochester and Montague:

8222. Deliverance, [8229] died in Richmond, N.H.; married George Buffum.

8223. ABIGAIL, married in Royalston, Mass., Elisha Kingsley. Both died in Western Massachusetts, many years since. They had a large family, but we have not been able to obtain records of descendants.

8224. SARAH, [8230] b. 10 Mar. 1767, R.; d. 1 May, 1849; m. Martin Gunn.

8225. Thomas, died unmarried. He joined the Revolutionary army. When he left home for the battle-field, his mother went with him two miles on foot, then bade him a last farewell, for he returned no more.

8226. Seth, married Sarah Farnum, of Sunderland. His name appears on the assessor's valuation list of Montague, in 1791. He removed from that town to New York State. Martin Winslow, whose name appears on the valuation list of M. for 1800, may have been his son.

8227. LYDIA, [8255] married George-W. Fuller, of Royalston.

8228. CLARISSA, married — Cook. Removed from New Hampshire to Ohio or New York State.

1 Jan. 1815, Henry HASKINS, b. 18 Nov. 1772 or '3, New Salem, Mass., second son of Joseph and Mary (Smith) of that place. He died 13 Mar. 1842, Prescott, formerly New Salem, and was buried there. He was a farmer and joiner.

Mrs. Haskins writes that the Haskins race were numerous, and the men mostly joiners. Many of them had large families, her husband being the father of sixteen children. His father lived to the age of eighty-two years, and his mother was one hundred years and six months the morning she died. The wife of Paul Haskins, his father's brother, lived to the age of one hundred years, six months, and fourteen days, and the wife of Silas Haskins to the age of one hundred years and one month. The wife of a brother in Wilmington, Vt., being somewhat deaf, stood in the pulpit beside the minister, and listened to her centennial sermon, on her one hundredth birth-day. These wives were hard workers, had frugal fare, and long survived their husbands.

She crept several years, then walked by the aid of crutches, but afterward became able to attend school and to perform almost every kind of domestic labor. She was of diminutive stature, being only twenty inches in height. Her father once while out riding discovered a team behind him, which he at first thought had no driver, but on investigation found the occupant of the carriage to be a dwarf of thirty inches. He invited him home to see his daughter, and the little gentleman was so pleased with the little lady that he made her an offer of marriage, which she, true to her sex, at first declined, but subsequently accepted, and they were married. Some enterprising townsman persuaded them to exhibit themselves, he making thereby a good speculation; but their ambition soon prompted them to assume the entire responsibility, and they purchased a horse and carriage, hired a driver, and commenced business for themselves. accumulated in this way a handsome fortune, and bought a farm in Ohio, which they left in other hands while they continued their tours of 8274. Deborah, (eldest daughter) [8275] married, 16 Dec. 1813, Gen. Samuel Fessenden.

Of their children:

8275. DEBORAH', [8274] (dau. of Philip' Chandler,) married, 16 Dec. 1813, Gen. Samuel FESSENDEN, b. 16 July, 1784, Fryeburg, Me., s. of Rev. William'

(Williams, Williams, Nicholass, of Cambridge, Mass.,) and Sarah (Clements) of F., who was dau. of Samuel Clements, for whom Gen. Samuel Fessenden was named. His early education was at Fryeburg Academy. He fitted for Dartmouth College, from which, in 1806, he took his degree, with high reputation as a scholar. "He passed his legal studies under the direction of the Hon. Judah Dana, of Fryeburg, and was admitted to the bar in 1809. He first established himself in New Gloucester, but in 1822 removed to Portland, where he formed a connection in business with Thomas-Amory Deblois (ante, vol. xxii, p. 199), which was continued until 1854, when the partnership was dissolved in order that he might take his son Daniel-W. into business with him. The new firm continued until 1861, when, advanced in years, and with the honors and burdens of more than fifty years of professional life upon him, and with the respect of the community, he retired from all active duty in his profession to the repose of private life, and died in Portland, March 19, 1869, aged 84 years and 8 months, preceding his distinguished son to the grave only about six months."

"Samuel Fessenden, in early life, by a course of general classical reading, stored his mind with a copious knowledge. His standing in college was among the best scholars, a rank he sustained in after life. In 1828, he was elected a member of the Maine Historical Society; and in 1846, Bowdoin College conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Laws. In 1828, on the death of President Tyler, of Dartmouth

HON. WILLIAM-PITT, (son of Gen. Samuel and — (Greene) Fessenden,) born 6 Oct. 1860, in Boscawen, N.H.; was baptized agreeably to the forms of the Episcopal Church, Daniel Webster being his godfather. He died 8 Sept. 1869, Portland, and was buried there. He was married at Westbrook, now Deering, Me., by Rev. Ichabod Nichols, D.D., of Portland, Me., 23 April, 1832, to Ellen-Maria Deering, dau. of James and Almira (Ilsley) and gr. dau. of Nathaniel and Dorcas (Milk) Deering. Mrs. Fessenden died suddenly, 23 July, 1857.

In 1858, Bowdoin College conferred upon him the degree of doctor of laws, and the same honor was conferred by Harvard University in 1864.

Inheriting, in no small degree, his father's mental qualities as a scholar, lawyer, and legislator, he was especially remarkable for his ready sarcasm and wit. Endowed with a fine, nervous temperament, and studious beyond his years, he entered Bowdoin College before he had attained the age of thirteen, and graduated with high honors in 1823, before he was quite seventeen. Such precocity has but few parallels—one is that of Edward Everett; another, that of the Great Premier of England, then in the height of his power, for whom he was named.

On leaving college, young Pitt studied, under the supervision of his father, the profession of law with the Hon. Charles-S. Daveis, of Portland, one of the best read lawyers of the Cumberland bar, whose kind and able counsel, and peculiar line of chancery practice, cultivated and developed that activity of mind and skill, and readiness in equity pleading, and those brilliant powers that carried him with undeviating step to the head of the bar of Maine, and to the leadership in the Senate of the United States, and would have given him the highest seat on the bench of the Supreme Court of the State, had he been willing to sacrifice the noble aspirations of the political life into which he indeed had been unwillingly drawn, for the quiet and solid rewards of judicial office.

indeed had been unwillingly drawn, for the quiet and solid rewards of judicial office.

After spending four years in the study of law, he was admitted to the bar at the age of twentyone, and on commencing practice modestly sought the quiet little village of Bridgeton, Me.

After two years' practice there, he removed, in 1829, to the larger field of Portland, and joined his father and Mr. Deblois in their extensive practice, bringing to it a ready furnished mind, a keen intellect, and a certain self-possession which gave him a position far in advance of the young practitioners who were his cotemporaries. Finding three able lawyers too much for one office, he sought for a short time his fortune in Bangor. From thence he was drawn in 1832, and finally and permanently established himself in Portland, which thenceforth was too scene of his professional and political triumphs. In the year last named, he entered into law partnership with the Hon. William Willis, and the firm continued for twenty years to do a successful business. It was during this perriod that Mr. Fessenden acquired his highest reputation at the bar, and it may be said that for clearness of statement, keenness of analysis and closeness of logic, no member of the profession in Maine was his superior. During this period he also attracted great attention in legal circles by his argument before the Supreme Court, by which he succeeded in reversing a decision of Judge Story relative to the responsibility of an innocent owner of real estate sold at auction, by frauds committed without his knowledge by the auctioneer. His argument in this, as on all forensic occasions, was remarkable for its logical force and legal acuteness.

In 1832, at the age of 25, and afterwards, in 1838, he was offered and declined the whig nomination to Congress, but consented to serve the city of Portland in the Maine Legislature, in 1832, '39, '45, '46, '53, and '54. If there are any other instances in our history where a young man has, before reaching his thirty-fourt

State Legislature, we are not acquainted with them.

College, he was spoken of as president of that institution, but his aversion to changing his mode of life suspended further effort. He early took a deep interest in the political affairs of the country, as his father, who had represented the town in the general court of Massachusetts, had before him. Both were strong and undeviating federalists of the Washington and Hamilton school."

"Samuel Fessenden was the representative of New Gloucester in the general court of Massachusetts in 1814, '15, and '16, and a senator from the county in 1818 and '19, advocating throughout, with great power, the principles of the federal party. The last year of his senatorship, the district of Maine swung from her ancient moorings by the side of the old commonwealth of Massachusetts, into independent life. In 1825 and '26, he represented Portland in the legislature of the new state. that he became engrossed in his law business, to the exclusion of everything else."

"His commanding figure, his full, round voice, his emphatic and graceful elocution, his powers, physical and mental, peculiarly qualified him for a prominent position in a deliberative assembly. He distinguished himself so much in the legislature, that, in 1818, he was elected Major-General of the 10th Division of the militia of Massachusetts—a commission he continued to hold under the separate organiza-

In 1843, he received the vote of his party in the Legislature for the Senate of the United States, as he did again in 1845, while a member. In 1850, he accepted the nomination and was elected to Cogress, but his seat, through an error in the returns, was given to his competitor. Mr. F. refused to contest the case before Congress, apparently from a principle which had marked his previous course—that he would not ask for office, much less contend for it.

In 1854, the Kansas-Nebraska bill having arisen, the free-soil democrats voted with the whigs, and elected Mr. Fessenden, on the first ballot, to his chief and permanent sphere of usefulness, the United States Senate. This coalition of free-soil democrats and old-line whigs inaugurated the formation of the republican party in Maine, of the necessity of which Senator Fessenden was one of the most conspicuous and powerful advocates.

He took his seat in the Senate, Feb. 23, 1854, and a week afterward, on the night of the 3d of March, delivered a speech of electrical effect against the passage of the Kansas-Nebraska bill which immediately lifted him into national fame! He was re-elected to the Senate in 1859, with out the formality of a previous nomination, and again in 1864. He was fifteen years in the Senate uninterruptedly, save from June, 1864 to March, 1865, when he consented to hold, through the darkest hours of our finance, the office of Secretary of the Treasury. On the resignation of Mr. Chase, Mr. Fessenden was very solicitous for the appointment of somebody who, by his reputation and financial skill, would at once command the public confidence and preserve the credit of the government, and went to the President to talk to him about it. To his great surprise, the President told him he had concluded to nominate William-Pitt Fessenden, of Maine. Mr. Fessenden of the capitalists of the country, and that, in fact, he had already sent his nomination to the Senate, and he accepted, with the condition that he was to serve only until a fit man could be found for for the place.

A newspaper writer has said:

"Mr. Chase, while our armies were struggling in the agonies of the conflict from the Wilderness to Richmond, and when gold had risen from 90 to 180, and was threatening to rise to 280, having resigned. Mr. Fessenden caught the falling standard with true political courage, and held it until the surrender of the rebel armies.

surrender of the rebel armies.

He took charge at a time when it was too late to change policies and impossible to reform them. Nevertheless he stopped the issue of greenbacks, which had fallen to 40 cents on the dollar. He held the office disinterestedly to prevent the loss of confidence from embarrassing the government, and, as soon as the fearful crisis had passed, resigned his portfolio and returned to the Senate to which he was re-elected. To the writer of this sketch he once said: 'I took the office reluctantly and as a matter of duty, and vacated it just as soon as I could.'"

The first six years of his service in the Senate he was a member of the Committee on Finance, and, in his later terms, was the chairman of that committee. He was also a member of the Library Committee, and one of the regents of the Smithsonian Institution. He was also chairman of the Joint Special Committee on Reconstruction, and prepared its report, which, in point of ability, has been called the great work of his life.

been called the great work of his life.

When the secession movement rose to its height in 1861, he was chosen a member of the famous Peace Congress, and used his influence to avert the horrors of civil war. Finding the Southern States determined and immovable in their purpose to sever their connection with the Union, he promptly declared for coercive measures. During the long years of bloodshed which followed, he supported Mr. Lincoln's administration by his votes, his speeches, and his writings, and last, but tion of Maine for fourteen years, and which fairly entitled him to the title of 'General,' by which he was commonly known."

"General Fessenden followed the federal party into its various changes: to national republican, under John-Quincy Adams, and to whig, when Clay led off the In 1841, he was the candidate of the anti-slavery party for Governor of the party. state."

"Probably no lawyer in Maine ever argued so many cases to a jury as General Fessenden, and perhaps none tried more important questions of law before the court. Certainly none was more successful in civil or criminal practice. For over half a century in active practice, in the courts of Cumberland, he was, for many years, the acknowledged head and Nestor of the bar, which has always been famous for its legal ability. Perhaps General Fessenden's closest competitor for many years was the late Simon Greenleaf, the distinguished author of the Treatise on Evidence, whose authority is accepted wherever the English language is spoken, or the common law recognized. [See Memorial of Benjamin Parsons.] In fidelity to the interests of his clients, General Fessenden probably never had his superior. In criminal trials his devotion was absolute; and we have it from his own declaration, that he never defended not least, gave his four sons to the army, one of whom lost his life and another a limb, in consequence of wounds received in battle.

He went with his party when he thought it was right, and nothing on earth could induce him to go with his party when he thought it was wrong. His aim was to do right.

His character is well summed up in some lines attached to his name in the Memoirs of the 40th

"Apply your eye-glass and minutely scan The form and features of a wondrous man-Sharp in his physique—you could well expect Sharpness and boldness in his intellect; Ready in thought and irony—not wit, Behold in Fessenden our modern Pitt. Behold in Fessenden our modern Pitt.
He speaks; and steel-clad weapons from his brain Sweep like a tempest o'er the hills of Maine.
Then like a storm-king, with unpitying eye,
He views the prostrate forms around him lie.
Cold in his temper, and of icy glow,
He shines like his Katahdin crowned with snow;
No smiles or blushes leave their genial trace
Upon his Norman, frigid, thoughtful face.

Though seeming strange, the truth must be confessed That fervid elements control his breast, Like fires which in volcanic mountains glow, Whose summits glisten with eternal snow."

His heart was as tender as a woman's, and an appeal was never made in vain to the kindness which ruled his character. Once an estrangement between him and another senator occurred on account of a few words spoken in debate. After a few days that senator sent him, from his desk, a note saying: "If I have offended you, I ask your forgiveness. If you have offended me, I have forgotten it." Mr. Fessenden did not keep back his tears as he crossed the chamber to shake hands with his old friend, from whom he had been temporarily separated. Another striking example has been published. Mr. Fessenden once made a remark which was interpreted as an insult to Mr. Seward. When informed of it, and seeing such a meaning could be given to his words, he instantly went to Mr. Seward and said: "Mr. Seward, I have insulted you; I am sorry for it, I did not mean it." This apology, so prompt, frank, and perfect, so delighted Mr. Seward that, grasping him by the hand, he exclaimed: "God bless you, Fessenden, I wish you would insult me again."

Mr. Fessenden was one of the guests so mysteriously poisoned at the National Hotel, Washington, in 1858, a calamity which caused great horror throughout the country. He never fully recovered from its effects, and it is believed the disease which resulted in his death had its remote origin in the malaria then introduced into his system. A post-mortem examination confirmed all that his physicians had believed.

His high example of spotless integrity cannot be without its influence upon those who shall come after him, and, repeated from generation to generation, will last forever. His character is worth more to his country than his deeds. Mr. Sumner pronounced the judgment of the Senate and the people when he spoke of him as of perfect integrity and austerest virtue, and inaccessible to the temptations which, in various forms, beset the avenues of public life.

"True friend, steady leader, wise counsellor, considerate patr of, devoted to liberty and his country," (said another paper,) "he has gone to his reward, and the greatest of those who spoke a person whom he believed to be guilty of the offence with which he was charged, and that indeed he had never been consulted by any such."

"He was the author of two orations, delivered when a young man, and of a treatise on the Institution, Duties, and Importance of Juries. A genial man, the frosts of age failed to chill the enthusiasm of his early youth. He was a sincere Christian, and a gentleman of the old school; stately, kindly in presence, liberal to the poor, and an indulgent parent. The purest sources of his enjoyment and the best influences of his life, he found in the domestic circle."

MARTHA• [8265] (Sarah• (Winslow) Chandler, Barnabas•, Gilbert•, Nathaniel<sup>2</sup>, Kenelm<sup>1</sup>,) b. 12 Aug. 1769, New Gloucester, Me.; d. 9 Dec. 1832; married at N.G., 19 Jan. 1790, Capt. Isaac• PARSONS, b. 12 Aug. 1766, N.G., s. of Col. Isaac•, of N.G. 1761, (Dea. Isaac•, Ebenezer<sup>2</sup>, Jeffrey•,) and Salome (Merrill). [See Memorial of Jeffrey• Parsons.] He was clerk of the first parish in New Gloucester twenty-nine years; selectman and assessor fifteen years; and an officer in the Massachusetts militia thirteen years. The following obituary notice appeared in the Christian Mirror at the time of his death:

In Glenburn (formerly Dutton) 9th inst. [8 Oct. 1838], Isaac Parsons, Esq., aged 73. The death of this man will be lamented by a numerous circle of friends who have known him for many years. Although he moved in a retired sphere and was unambitious of public notoriety, still there are many who knew his worth and will drop the tear of sorrow that they shall see his face no more in the land of the living. Capt. P. was the eldest son of the late Col. Parsons of New Gloucester. His whole life has exhibited one continued series of laudable sobriety, inoffensiveness, and regularity. It is believed that no man ever sustained a more irreproachable character, that there is no man living who can with truth accuse him of a mean, immoral, or dishonorable act, that no man ever saw him give way to a gust of sudden passion, or knew the sun to go down on his wrath. In the town of New Gloucester, where he was born and brought up, and where his foibles (if any) were known, it is believed that no solitary instance of one can be found who ever felt a spirrt of hostility towards him. For three-score years the writer of this article traveled with him on the journey of life, and during all that period never knew the deceased to use bitter invective or reproachful language towards any human being, nor heard him utter a profane word. He was uniform in all things. Adversity and prosperity seemed alike to him-he neither shrunk under the one por rejoiced at the other. His equanimity of mind was unusual. If death entered his windows and took from him a promising son or an only daughter, he moved on in the even tenor of his way without a sigh or a groan, his resignation apparent in all he said and did. seemed to give up all his concerns into the hands of Providence, and regulated his desires by the laws of obedience. He carried in his breast a little Paradise, and a Heaven in prospect. He sat above the reach of fortune, and beheld with an air of unconcern, under his feet, all the storms and tempests that dash in pieces other men's felicity.

He never coveted success or feared disappointment. He opened his door no less cheerfully to want than to abundance. His religion was practical. If to remember the Sabbath-day to keep it holy—if to fear God and keep his commandments—if to do to others as you would that they should do to you—if there be any virtue in keeping these commands, then Capt. Parsons was a virtuous, good man. Com.

The following article, taken from the Maine Gazette of 1825, was written by a college class-mate, Wm-Pitt Fessenden, s. of Gen. Samuel Fessenden [8275]:

"When self-esteem, or others' adulation,
Would cunningly persuade us we were something
Above the common level of mankind,
The grave gainsays the smooth-complexioned tale,
And with blunt truth acquaints us what we are."

It is not often that I attempt to deal with serious subjects. Yet to the most careless and supine, such subjects must sometimes necessarily occur. We look back into the short period we have passed since first our opening faculties awoke to full perception, and the recollection of scenes that are gone forever forewarns us that but a little while, and all that now cheers and exhilarates must flee away. If our memory brings to us aught of pain and sorrow, it excites our fears for the future. If it recalls aught of pleasures, we lament that, in being so transitory, they have left us nothing but to regret their remembrance. But so it is. And perhaps it is well for us, that these fond regrets, these delicious lookings back, these fears for the future, should thus perpetually recur. To him who will allow himself time for reflection, and who will condescend to draw wisdom from trifles, they are of benefit in reminding him that

"All that's bright must fade, The brightest still the fleetest."

Historians tell us, that when Xerxes, seated on an eminence, reviewed his vast and almost countless army, when he saw his millions marching in proud array before their sovereign, their hearts buoyant with the hope of conquest, and their bosoms beating high with martial excitement, he wept at the reflection, that, but a few fleeting years and all that goodly assemblage must pass from the earth, and all those proud hearts be cold and senseless. What a lesson for a barbarian to teach us. It is but an oft-told tale, that the sovereign and his subject must one day lie side by side, that his gay apparel will decay as fast as the other's more simple habiliments, that his sceptre will indeed one day be no more to him than a palmer's walking-staff, that his gorgeous palace must crumble into ruins, and he must exchange his "large kingdom for a little grave." Death makes no distinctions. It annihilates time itself. Visit yonder grave-yard and read there the records of its doings among us. The blast of the desert, at the same time that it tears up by the roots the old and gnarled oak, spares not the young and tender sapling. The modest and tender flower too, it sweeps away. So, old age bows beneath the blast of death; middle life falls with violence to the earth; youth perishes in its pride and comeliness; and, last of all, infancy is crushed to atoms beneath its foot.

It was but a short time since that I saw announced in the weekly chronicle of mortality the death of a young man, who, if aught of worth could save, would have yet been spared. It was a simple annunciation, a mere record of his age, the disease of which he died, and the time of his departure. In those who knew him not, it awakened no emotion. But to me, who had known and reverenced his talents and his virtues from infancy, it was the occasion of deep and serious regret. He was the victim of an hereditary consumption. His life was short and unproductive of events, but yet, perhaps a brief statement of his history may not be uninteresting.

The father of I. P. was a small farmer in the vicinity of the neighborhood where 1 dwelt, when I first saw him. Burdened with the cares of a large family, he could do no more than, by their aid, support himself and them.

Till late boyhood, he of whom I speak was kept upon the farm, diligently exerting himself in his vocation, and little dreaming of aught else than spending the remainder of his days in cultivating the paternal acres. His health began then to decline, and he was forced to recruit, and at length wholly to cease his exertions.

Even at this early period, he had given evidence of those fine natural powers which afterwards gained him so much credit. I have still in my possession many occasional pieces of poetry written by him under all the disadvantages of his situation, and which evince a strength and vigor that needed only the pruning-knife of elegant literature to make it start up into a luxurious and noble growth. It was at this time that he first began to think of obtaining an education. But his funds were inadequate to the object. He was able to obtain some books from his friends. and with these he commenced his operations. His zeal was indefatigable. Often you might see him, when the whole village beside was wrapt in sleep, by the light of his solitary taper, bending over his books, his pale face lighted up with the flashes of intellectual gratification. He was soon fitted for college, but poverty stood in his way. He resolved, however, to conquer this obstacle. No one would assist him; he determined to assist himself. He took a school at the best wages he could get, which indeed were small, and in that way acquired something to begin with. Hard was his lot through the three years of his college life. He obtained a petty office, and this helped him some. He was rigidly economical, but still he He taught school in his vacations, and yet he had not enough. needed assistance.

"Slow rises worth, by poverty deprest."

out, however, to get through. He finished his collegiate course, a poet, a scholar, and a Christian. At this time his health had worn much worse. His continued application, his unremitted, fervent industry, had poisoned the very springs of his existence. But brighter days began now to dawn upon him. Some benevolent individuals, who had become acquainted with his worth, had succeeded in procuring him the aid of a society, formed with the design of assisting young men of talents and morals in procuring an education. He was accordingly placed at one of our most flourishing institutions, as a student of divinity, and here he recommenced his labors, with renewed zeal and increased hopes. But, alas! soon these hopes were blighted. His friends had confidently asserted that, as his ill-health was owing solely to his great exertions, he would soon recover it when placed in a situation so comparatively easy. But it seemed as if his exertions were all that had preserved him in being. His intense assiduity, his great labors, had left him no time to die. But now that they were at an end, and he could look forward with confidence to future years of ease and tranquility, disease and sickness came upon him like a whirlwind. In a little more than a year from his leaving college, he died. He was deposited in the little burying-ground of his native village, and naught but a narrow mound of earth points out his grave to the traveler.

I could tell something of his love too—but I have said enough, perhaps too much, already.

A young man in consumption is at any time an interesting object. We weep to see the fond hopes of parents blighted in the opening, to see disease, slow and deadly, taking the place of health and vigor, to see the brilliancy of the eye waxing faint, the fair and comely cheek assuming the sallow hue of death, and the whole form wasting slowly away before the touch of its fell destroyer. This is far more terrible than sudden and instantaneous dissolution. This latter bursts upon us like a thunder-stroke; for a while our frightened senses reel beneath the shock, but owing to our natural elasticity, it passes away, and leaves no impression. The former is a continual moving spectacle. While beholding such gradual and yet ceaseless decay, we feel as if in the presence of the King of Terrors, and careless indeed must be that man who could forget the lesson which it brings him. But how much heavier is the blow when, in addition to all this, genius, learning, and piety become the victim of this insatiable monster. In such the world is interested. While around the couch of a child, a father, a mother, friends and relations pour their unavailing tears, the spirits of present and future time bewail the loss of genius and of virtue so transcendent as was his. For myself, I never look up to the window where so oft I have seen him sitting, wrapt in his intensity of thought, without bowing with instinctive reverence. And I almost expect to see his pale face looking out upon me, and returning my salutation with one of those heart-beaming smiles which I so much valued. The turf which covers his remains is sacred to me. And whenever I visit the spot where he sleeps, and contemplate again the beauty, the excellence of his character, I almost imagine myself to have received a spark of that heavenly flame which blazed so brightly in his bosom.

His brother Nathan' informs us that he left about one hundred pages of manuscript, prose and verse, which were destroyed in 1864, when the house of his brother Moses' was burnt. Among the poems were the following:—Lines composed on the death of his grandfather Chandler, in 1819; "Mental Diversity," which was delivered before the Philharmonic Society of New Gloucester; "Tower of Babel;" "Acrostic on the name Sarah Chandler;" "Envy;" and "Description of Lewiston Falls." Among his prose articles were:—"A Pedagogue's Defense;" "A Forensic Disputation;" and several themes.

We regret to learn that Hon. Charles P. Chandler, senator elect from Piscataquis county, died very suddenly, of disease of the heart, at his residence in Foxcroft, on Tuesday evening last. He had been in his usual health until a short time previous, when, feeling rather unwell, he took some medicine, but was soor found to be dying, and expired before the physician could be recalled.

He was a man universally respected and beloved for his estimable qualities of both head and heart; and his death will be deeply lamented by a large circle of friends and acquaintances, not only in his own county but throughout the State. He was known and relied upon as a man of the strictest integrity, sterling good sense, and sound judgment, and enjoyed in the highest degree the confidence of all with whom he had intercourse or association. The people of his town and county fully appreciated his abilities and worth, and have frequently testified thereto by placing him in many positions of responsibility and honor. He has filled many important town offices, and has several times represented his district in the House of Representatives, and also the county in the State Senate—and was at the time of his death a senator elect. In him the republican party has lost an able, earnest, and faithful advocate of its principles, and the community a valuable member.

Bangor Whig, Nov. 19, 1857.

CHARLES PARSONS CHANDLER. -On a bleak day in January, ten years ago, three brothers met, from long distances, in a remote village near Portland, to lay in his ancestral burial-place the mortal remains of an honored father. He was a man of marked character, of a commanding presence, and had inspired his children with affectionate admiration. His sons were of the same profession with himself, and owed whatever of success they had attained to his own instructions. moved his natural body to his and their native town, in compliance with his dying request, and the unostentatious monument that marks the spot recites that it was erected by his surviving sons "in affectionate respect for the character of their father, teacher, and friend." And now, within a few days, the oldest of these sons, and the one most beloved perhaps by that father, has passed forward to join his friend and early master in the law. Few men were more generally known throughout his native State; no man was more beloved and respected; and although his decease has been everywhere referred to, a few more words will be pardoned by those who knew him. Indeed, there are circumstances in his personal history that cannot fail of encouragement to men who never heard his name.

Educated for the bar, and entering upon the profession with the zeal, energy, and laudable ambition of an ardent spirit, and with prospects as fair as any man of his age, he soon perceived that a hereditary and increasing tendency to deafness must greatly impair his usefulness in this occupation, if it did not entirely debar him from the practice. For years he strove in silence against this strengthening conviction, and when at length it became certain that any cure, or even slight mitigation was not to be expected, he calmly submitted to this darkening shadow of his professional success. He felt, as all deaf men must and do feel, that this infirmity affects the mind as well as the body; that one debarred from all the ordinary intercourse of society, hearing only what is specially addressed to him, is like a traveler who looks on a beautiful scene in nature through an inverted telescope or a colored glass, receiving no adequate impression of its real character; or like one whose only impression of a landscape is derived from the sketches of an artist. He felt, too, as deaf men naturally feel, a sensitiveness for the defect, and a desire to withdraw entirely from society, from a feeling of repugnance at the prominence which it is apt to give them, and an indisposition to annoy their friends by taxing kindness to excess in the casual intercourse of life. But he did what many deaf people are unable to do. He resisted, and successfully resisted these feelings and this course of action; and great was his reward in so doing.

Of a gentle and retiring nature, he could never force himself upon others. He never made himself or his infirmity prominent; although entirely conscious of the overshadowing misfortune of his life, and often suffering intensely on account of it, he suffered in silence, and always maintained an outward tone of cheerfulness, that made him a most desirable companion for the grave or the mirthful. Such was his manner; the delicacy, simplicity, and truthfulness of his character, that no one felt bound to make special exertions on his behalf; and when he was present, there was no embarrassment because he did not hear.

He was never in the way, and no man's society was more eagerly sought, although it was quite difficult to converse with him at all. But he always preserved a just and proper self-respect. Grateful for the sympathy of all who knew him, he never sought to increase it, and, well knowing that pity is next akin to contempt, he was too conscious of his own mental powers to allow the patronizing air of coarse men towards a physical infirmity; and for those, if there were any, who would sneer and mock his weakness, he had no word of remonstrance. He knew his burthen, and strength was given him to bear it with firmness, dignity, and cheerfulness:

To no perverse suspicion he gave way, No languor, peevishness, nor vain complaint.

It would have pained him when living to have these things said, but now that he is gone, it is proper that they should be said, by way of encouragement and warning to those in a similar condition.

Nor did he relinquish his profession. Having become thoroughly fitted for its practice by long years of study and experience, he had no idea of sacrificing the advantages so painfully acquired, but determined to persevere in the same direction, although fully conscious of the difficulties and mortifications to be encountered; and this he did with fair success for thirty years, although, of course, debarred from some portions of its multifarious duties. He always found enough to do. A well-read lawyer, a safe counsellor, a sagacious man, he was consulted far and near. No man was more deservedly trusted with the dearest rights of others. He carried into life the prayer of the great moralist, for the ability and the disposition to settle, adjust, and terminate controversies; to calm the angry passions of men; to establish peace among neighbors; to aid the oppressed; to protect the innocent; and to see that the guilty suffered no wrong through prejudice or passion. He was universally regarded as a peacemaker; and he annihilated, in his own community, the prejudice against the bar, and forever destroyed the vulgar error, that a lawyer is necessarily the promoter of strife or the exciter of angry passions in men.

Although not destitute of ambition for public life, he, for many years, discouraged all attempts to thrust him forward. But of late he was induced to accept some positions of honor and of trust. He had been a member of both branches of the Legislature, and he performed the duties to the great satisfaction of his constituents; and, what sometimes seemed singular, no member seemed better posted in the daily proceedings of those bodies, or was listened to with greater respect in debate, although he could not hear one word that was said by others.

These are no mere complimentary phrases, and indiscriminate praises of the dead. What is here said is carefully considered, and although from the pen of one who knew him well, and who has been these many years filled with admiration for his character, and gratitude and consolation for the light of his example, there are thousands of living men who know that these statements come short of the truth. There is no man living who will question them.

The departure of this good man was in harmony with his life, calm, kindly—without a struggle to prevent the passing spirit from leaving its last impression of peace upon his features. He was sitting by the fireside, almost engaged in conversation, when he appeared to drop asleep, as was not unusual at this time of the day. His manner of breathing attracted attention, and it was soon found that the spirit had passed on, and the ear that heard not was unstopped forever.

The burial took place on the last day of the week. The body was laid out in citizen's dress, and those present thought there never was a face more noble and beautiful in death. The wrinkles in the high forehead were all smoothed out—the eyes lightly closed as in sleep, and a most benignant smile rested upon the mouth, the last imprint of the departing spirit. The feeling in the community was a sermon to the faithless. Old men would hang over the corpse with streaming eyes, and then stoop down and kiss the face and move silently away, while throughout the community there was a general feeling of sadness. The body was laid in a gentle declivity on the banks of the Piscataquis:

And you tall pine tree, whose composing sound Was wasted on the good man's living ear, Hath now its own peculiar sanctity; And, at the touch of every wandering breeze, Murmurs, not idly, o'er his peaceful grave.

From a Boston paper.

The announcement of his death was made to the Senate by Mr. Hamlin, of Penobscot, who said:

Mr. PRESIDENT; I would take this occasion to announce through you to the Senate, the death of the Hon. Charles Parsons Chandler, member elect to this board from the county of Piscataquis, who died at his residence in Foxcroft, in November last, at the age of fifty-six years.

On the day of his decease, he was apparently in good health, and engaged in his usual business; and on the evening of the same day, while sitting in his chair, at his own fireside, he suddenly expired, without a struggle or a groan, and almost without the notice of his family by which he was surrounded.

As he has no colleague upon this floor, as one of the Senators from the adjoining county of Penobscot, and which formerly embraced within its limits the constituency of the deceased, I have thought it not improper in me to make this announcement, and to pay some slight tribute of respect to the character of our lamented friend.

He was born in the town of New Gloucester, in this State, and more than thirty years ago he located himself in the valley of the Piscataquis, where, for several years he taught an academy. He soon opened a law office in the town of Foxcroft, where he continued to practice to the time of his decease.

The Governor of the Universe has summoned him to another scene of action. His labors here are finished; there begun.

My acquaintance with the deceased was short. We met one year ago as strangers. I first learned his worth in the committee room,

"Where his social converse was itself a feast"

Affable, courteous, unassuming in his every day deportment—a sate and correct adviser-an industrious and faithful legislator-we parted as friends. His death is a loss, not only to his family, but alike to his constituents—the Senate—the State; but

> "Thee to deplore, were grief misspent indeed, It were to weep that goodness has its meed; That there is bliss prepared in yonder sky, And glory for the virtuous when they die."

The resolutions were then unanimously adopted by rising.

On motion of Mr. Jones, that Senator was charged with a message to the House, informing that body of the death of Hon. Charles P. Chandler, Senator elect, from the Tenth Senatorial District; and subsequently reported that he had delivered the

Mr. Chapman moved as a further mark of respect to the memory of the deceased, that the Senate do now adjourn. And the Senate adjourned to Monday at eleven o'clock.

Mr. Chandler married, but we have not the name of his wife. In 1871, she was residing in Foxcroft, Me.

2. Col. Charles-Lyon<sup>8</sup>, b. 27 Dec. 1839, Boston. Immediately after the at-8346. tack on Fort Sumter, he gave up his ousiness, and devoted his attention to raising a company of three years volunteers from the town of Brookline. After much trouble and some delay, he was mustered into the service of the United States, May 19th, 1861, as Second Lieutenant in Company A., First Massachusetts Regiment. In June, he accompanied this regiment to Washington, and, in July, participated in the campaign to Centreville, the fight at Blackburn's Ford, and its attendant marchesOn this campaign he received his first baptism of fire, and showed the germs of that ability to command troops, which afterward rendered him so conspicuous.

He was commissioned First Lieutenant, March 21st., 1862. On the arrival of the First Mass. Regiment before Yorktown, Lieutenant Chandler was detailed by General Heintzelman, as assistant on the works, and served in that capacity up to the time of the evacuation of that At Fair Oaks, he was again detailed as engineer place by the rebels. upon the works erecting there, which duty he performed until he left, with the army, for the James River-not omitting to join his regiment in the numerous skirmishes of the month of June. At Glendale and Malvern Hill he was with the regiment, having taken command of Company A, after Captain Wild was wounded at Fair Oaks. At Harrison's Landing he was again engineering, and superintended most of the works in the front of Hooker's division. In August, he left the Army of the Potemac to accept a commission as Captain in the Thirty-fourth Massachusetts Regiment, which regiment he joined near Alexandria, Va., in September, 1862. They were on garrison duty until the summer of 1863, when the regiment was ordered to Harper's Ferry. During the fall of that year they had some skirmishing with the enemy, and several severe marches, in all of which Captain Chandler distinguished himself as usual. In the spring of 1863, Major-General Berry, then commanding a division in the Army of the Potomac, hearing of the high character Captain Chandler was gaining, made application to the War Department for him as aid-de-camp. The application was endorsed by Generals Hooker and Sickles, but was not granted on account of the remonstrance of Colonel Wells against having so valuable an officer taken from his regiment. In the spring of 1864, he was appointed Lieutenant-Colonel of the Forty-first Mass. Regiment, and left the Thirty-fourth; but, while in Boston awaiting orders, he was commissioned Lieutenant-Colonel of the Fifty-seventh Mass. Regiment, a regiment just formed, which he joined at Washington in May, 1864. He started with this regiment on Grant's campaign, and, Colonel Bartlett having been wounded in almost its first engagement, led it through the sanguinary conflicts of the Wilderness, until he fell, while rallying his men, at the North Anna River, May 24th, 1864, having been three years in the service of his country, and never having once faltered in his resolve to fight for her life until his own was taken or hers made perpetual.

Colonel Chandler's character was such as to attract the respect and love of all who knew him. He was invariably cheerful, and considerate of others. Having great self-control, a mind clear and practical, of analytical power, and capable of original investigation and thought, possessed great executive ability. He was firm of purpose, with much true independence, and a judgment mature and sound for one so young. These qualifications made him a cool and able leader, and those who had most closely watched his brief but glorious military career had the highest hopes of his continued and increased usefulness in the army. General Bartlett wrote of him: "Every officer and man that I have been to see in the hospitals here speaks of Colonel Chandler's bravery and devotion with filling eyes. I never saw men who, in so short a time, had such a feeling of admiration for any man's conduct. His loss was felt throughout the corps." General Ledlie, who commanded the division in which the Fifty-seventh was included, wrote: "I feel that I am only telling the strict truth when I say that I never knew a more gallant and chivalrous soldier, a more genial and kindly gentleman."

His last letter home expressed firm confidence in the power and love of the Lord to protect and guide him. His last commands to those of his men who had tried to carry him from the field were of self-renunciation, bidding them to leave him to die, and to save themselves; and we learn from one who was with him to the end, that he died happy. Truly he had counted the cost, and was ready for the sacrifice.

His kindness to his men, his modesty and his bravery, made him beloved by all. Even the enemy, into whose hands he fell after being wounded, showed the respect they bore for his gallantry by the care and attention given him during the short interval before his death.

The above, extracted from a collection of letters and obituary notices by his devoted friends among the officers of the army and the government, but faintly exhibits his estimable character and patriotic service. The reader will find much more to interest him in the little memorial volume printed for the use of the kindred of the lamented Colonel Chandler.

2. EDWARD-ELSON<sup>8</sup>, born about 1837, Milton, Mass., sends us an account of his experiences during the late war as follows: I was present at the attack made upon Lawrence, Kansas, May 25, 1856, by border ruffians, under Atchison and Stringfellow; was in action under Gen. James-H. Lane, as a private in Co. A, 1st Reg. Kansas Free State Militia, at Franklin, Kansas, Aug. 12, 1856; also under Gen. Lane, as a private in Bickerton's Artillery, at Fort Saunders, Aug. 15, 1856; was also in action under Capt. Walker, as a private in Bickerton's Artillery, at Fort Titus, Aug. 16, 1856; was sick in hospital at Lawrence, Kansas, during the engagement of Sept. 14 and 15, 1856. When the war of the rebellion broke out I did not have faith in the patriotism of the North, but after I found they were going to fight I concluded that I was a coward not to be doing my share, and so I started from the Rocky Mountains with that intention. I endeavored to obtain a commission in Kansas, and, failing to do so, became disgusted with my own selfishness in trying to get an officer's berth, and went to the front and enlisted as a private. While on my way, I was arrested at Ellenboro, Va., on charge of being a rebel spy, and was kept a prisoner two weeks at Cornwallis, Richie Co., Va., at Wheeling, and at Camp Chase, near Columbus, Ohio. When - was released the military authorities refused to give me transportation, and being nearly out of money I walked to Winchester, Va.-435 miles-making the trip in 16 days. I then, June 20, 1862, enlisted in Co. D, 2d Mass. Inf., and was in action at Cedar Mountain, Antietam, Chancellorsville, Beverly Ford, Gettysburg, Resaca, and before Atlanta; was also on duty at Park Barracks, New York City, in August, 1863, when the draft was enforced. I was "orderly" in the Provest Marshal's office at Tullahoma, Tenn., in the winter of 1863 and '4, and again at Atlanta, Ga., in the autumn of 1864. I went through Georgia, the Carolinas, and Virginia, under Gen. Sherman; marched in grand review before President Johnson, and was discharged at camp near Washington, June 13, 1865, and sent to the rendezvous at Readville, Mass., before my discharge was given into my possession. I was courtmartialed once for "standing on my beat," and acquitted; was never punished and never promoted. My old captain, Mr. Daniel Oakey, lives in your city.

*Dr. Charles-F<sup>7</sup>. Winslow writes that he often heard his father, Benjamin<sup>6</sup> [9582], speak of three generations of Dr. Winslows, all of whom were noted for skill and great popularity in their neighborhood—grandfather, son, and grandson. He cannot now recall with certainty the names by which he called them. He thinks they lived for a while together, or in the vicinity of each other, and did an extensive country practice, succeeding each other. It is his impression that there was a Job among them, and that one of them was living as late as 1810, or perhaps later. His father spoke of them so much that he is quite sure he must have known them personally, and is positive that the younger of the three was named John.

Nov. 1766, Swansey Rec.; was married "by Russel Mayson Elder of a Church of Christ in Swansey," 30 Sept. 1790, to Bethany Brayton, of Somerset. He was residing in Somerset at this date. The following extracts are from an article written by E-B. Sherman for the Vermont Record and Farmer:—Conspicuous among the Vermonters in Iowa, and as an example of what patient industry, unswerving integrity, and persistent fidelity to principle can accomplish, may be mentioned Hon. Horace-S. Winslow, Judge of the Second Circuit of the Sixth District of Iowa, and residing in Newton, Jasper County. He was born in Pittsford, July 18, 1837. Having received a common school education in the district school of his native town, and about a year of "finishing" at Brandon Seminary, he entered, when 18 years of age, the law school in Poughkeepsie, N.Y. Remaining there but a few months, he removed to the Ohio State National Law School, where he was graduated with honors in 1856. Having previously determined to seek his future livelihood in the West, he turned his steps immediately in that lirection, and arriving in Newton, the newly fledged lawyer decided to remain and practice his profession. Possibly he may have been influenced in making this decision by the important and unpleasant fact that his pecuniary resources had been reduced to five cents when the stage reached Newton. Notwithstanding his practical efforts to illustrate the virtue of economy, he had denied the inner man the accustomed solace of "daily bread" until a slighted and indignant stomach had become imperative in its demands for its "rights," and retrenchment in some other direction. Thus it was that Winslow became an Attorney at Law at Newton, at the age of 19 years. On taking a careful inventory of his "goods, chattels, and effects" on that summer morning, he found himself plus Kent's Commentaries and Chitty's Pleadings, a limited wardrobe, and the aforesaid "five cents," lawful money of the United States; and minus a "square meal," and entirely innocent of any knowledge of the peculiar "Code" of Iowa, under which practice is essentially different from the "common law" method taught in the schools. . . . It would not be difficult for a fertile imagination to conceive a combination of circumstances more pleasing. But Winslow had habits of industry, acquired among the hills of Vermont; he had more than the modicum of "pluck" which is accredited to a "Green Mountain Boy"; and he had an unfaltering faith in his future success; and zealously applied himself to the necessary measures to achieve it. Newton was at this time rather a frontier part of civilization than otherwise, and the method of conducting suits there was not always modeled closely after the Supreme Court at Washington. The first suit brought by "Esq. Winslow" was for the balance of an account of about $5. The defendant did not relish the "freedom of speech" of this maiden effort, and upon the rendition of the verdict, he commenced an "assault and battery vi et armis," with such vehemence and ability that the sheriff was compelled to interfere and protect the lawyer from this novel and striking mode of taking an appeal from the judgment of the court to a castigation of the attorney. It is perhaps unnecessary to remark that this peculiar "practice" is not a part of the regular "code" of Iowa, though formerly not an unfrequent episode. During the second year of his practice, and before it had become lucrative, Winslow was offered $500 per annum to become the attorney of an association of liquor dealers, and defend them for violation of the law. Tempting as was this offer, he indignantly refused it, and declared he would not defend a rumseller, if the alternative were starvation. In 1862, Winslow was elected District Attorney for the Sixth Judicial District, which office he held for four years, and then returned to his regular practice. In 1868, he was nominated as the Republican candidate for Judge of the Second Circuit of said district, and elected by an overwhelming majority of about 3,000. At this time the firm, of which he was the senior member, were attorneys for two railroads, one bank, and for the county, beside having a large and lucrative general practice, both in the State and U.S. courts. Judge Winslow was but 31 years of age when elected to the Bench, and is the youngest member of the Bar who has donned the ermine in the State. He is a hard student and deeply interested in everything bearing upon the profession. His briefs and arguments before the Supreme Court are clear and logical, and without any attempt at rhetoric or embellishment. As a citizen he is public spirited; as a public officer, diligent, faithful, and incorruptible. With a position so high already attained, there seems no obstacle to the attainment of the highest honors in the gift of the State, should his aspirations tend in that direction. Res. Putney and, 1873, Townshend, Vt.

We add the following newspaper article which explains itself:

A very interesting picnic of the Winslow family, including the widow and all the living children and grandchildren of the late Peleg Winslow, also Dea. Samuel-D. Winslow and wife, with a few specially invited friends, was held last week Thursday, on the pinnacle of the hill formerly belonging to Peleg Winslow. lying immediately west and overlooking the old homestead of the family. was most agreeably spent by all present, in feasting, conversation, singing, toasts and responses, and in relating such incidents of early experiences as the day and occasion brought to mind. In response to the toast, "The family friendshipsmay they long remain unbroken," Dea. S-D. Winslow said that he considered the present a very pleasant and profitable occasion, and one long to be remembered by those present. He was glad to be one of the number, and trusted friendships manifested at this time would long continue. He hoped we should all appreciate this and all other blessings of life, and should be mindful of our obligations therefor, showing by our daily lives our constant appreciation of those mercies which we enjoy from day to day, which come from that source from which "all blessings flow." "Old in years but ever young in heart," was offered, and Mrs. Nancy Winslow [9426] was called upon for a response, which she was too much overcome by the memories which the occasion called forth to give, only by tears of mingled sorrow and gladness. Another toast was responded to by a four years old son of Nelson Winslow [9430] most beautifully and touchingly singing "In the Sweet Bye-and-Bye," which drew tears from the eyes of all present. In response to a call, Dea. S-D. Winslow 2d [9436] made the closing address, which was full of interesting reminiscences of the past, and allusions to the days of childhood and youth passed so pleasantly in the midst of these green hills and valleys. He referred also in fitting words to the wanderings of many of those present to distant parts of the country, as the path of duty called each to go forth from his early home. After the conclusion of the remarks, the descent from the hill commenced, and all returned to their own houses, wearied but much happier for the experiences of the day.

In the fall of 1846, three of his children having already gone to Big Rock, Kane Co., Illinois, and each of those remaining having an eye on a future "home in the West," he, after visiting his relations in Vermont, bade a last farewell to his New England home, and with his wife and nine children (one only being left behind for a few years) crossed the Green Mountains, and, as was then the custom, took passage on a canal-boat for Buffalo. Going thence by steamboat around the lakes to Chicago, he, by a land journey of fifty-five miles, reached the residence of his son-in-law, Franklin-C. Severance, at Big Rock. Before he was fairly settled in his new home, his services as a physician, as well as those of his son, Lawson-Armstrong [9488], who had just completed his medical studies at Pittsfield, Mass., were called into requisition among the sick in that vicinity.

He practiced his profession for the space of forty years, not abandoning it until a few days before his death, even after he needed medical treatment more than some whom he was attending. He died at Big Rock, 2 Nov. 1848, aged 65 yrs. 10 mos., and 21 days; and was buried in the grave-yard at Big Rock, fourteen miles west of Aurora, where stands a marble spire monument, some sixteen feet high, made of the Vermont marble, from the justly celebrated quarry at East Dorset.

This monument is located on high ground and can be seen for miles around, and, although not, geologically speaking, "The Testimony of the Rocks," yet it will be "authority" in deciding the degree of cousinship existing between any and all who shall, in coming time, be able accurately to trace back their ancestors through different generations until they reach the name of either one of the children of "Old Dr. Winslow, whose monument stands in Big Rock."

It may be proper to state that after the death of Dr. Winslow's son Solomon Edward', who was unmarried, it was decided to request the eldest son, George-Wash ington', then in the marble business, to erect a monument for the Winslow family, where this one is now placed, the expenses being paid out of the deceased brother's estate.

9463. GEORGE-WASHINGTON, [9447] (George<sup>6</sup>, Peleg<sup>5</sup>, Joseph<sup>4</sup>, Joseph<sup>3</sup>, Job<sup>2</sup>, Kenelm1,) was born 9 Aug. 1809, Coleraine, Mass. He informs us that he attended the common school from about 1814 to 1822, when he went to Shelburne and commenced the study of the Latin language at Pomerov's Grammar School. In the spring and summer of 1823, he was a member of Sanderson's Academy in Ashfield, Mass., where he continued his Latin. In September of that year, his father having determined to prepare him for the medical profession, he sent him to the Berkshire Medical School, at Pittsfield, Mass., in order that he might have the benefit of a course of lectures. These having been completed, he still pursued his medical studies, dividing his time, however, between labor on a farm and school duties, until the spring of 1826, when he abandoned the idea of ever having the title of M.D. attached to his name to denote that he was a member of the medical profession, choosing rather the same distinguished alphabetical characters to represent a calling as honorable, and one that, in the opinion of some eminent physicians, is rendered flourishing by the ignorance and blunders of those claiming to have a thorough knowledge of the healing art, viz.: that of a Marble Dealer. In December, 1826, he removed with his father to Charlemont, Mass., where he pursued this avocation until 1831, when he went to Buffalo to take charge of the marble works there, none being at that time further west. After four years, his eyesight becoming very much impaired by the business, he removed to Kalamazoo, then called Bronson, in Kalamazoo County, Michigan. This beautiful town is sometimes called "The New Haven of the West." Here, in the fall of 1835, he, with a partner named Caleb Sherman, commenced trade, first in groceries and provisions, adding soon after crockery, hardware, dry goods, etc. After some two years and a half it became apparent that, owing to shipwrecks of goods on the lakes, "wild-cat money," and other losses, success was out of the question. The result was that ten years of hard work and economy were successfully devoted to the purpose of paying up an indebtedness of several thousand dollars, when, in the spring of 1848, he again commenced the marble business on shares, having for his part of the capital, knowledge of the work, a good reputation during twelve years residence in the place, sound health, and a will that was determined to find a way to regain that which was lost. His partner was Frederick Field, then of Niles, Michigan, but afterward of East Dorset, Vt., who supplied the stock during some four years of their copartnership, and with whom, after its dissolution, he dealt for twenty-five years.

In 1850, when that long to be remembered epidemic, the "yellow fever," prevailed to such an extent throughout the country, he dropped his mallet and chisel, and, leaving his wife and three children, crossed the plains to the far-famed El Dorado, on the Pacific shore. As he left home on the 27th of February of that year, and returned the 30th of January, 1851, only four months were spent at the diggings.

His hard labor proved to no purpose until just at the close of the season, when success crowned his efforts. Judicious investments of the profits, combined with the results of a moderately productive business for the last twenty years, have placed him and his family where, with economy, they may enjoy the necessaries and comforts which belong to the middle class. He has been supervisor and, for about six years, a member of the town council.

Miss Lizzie-R<sup>5</sup>. Winslow [8896], of Middletown, Ct., favored us with the following extract from the Kalamazoo Directory:

"George Winslow & Co., Dealers in Marble Monuments, etc., at Nos. 15 and 17 Portage St. Mr. Winslow, the senior member of the firm, has a name that is as familiar to the people of Western Michigan as that of any business man that was ever among us. He commenced the business in which he is now engaged, in 1848, on Eleanor St., his establishment being one of the very first in this part of the State. A practical mechanic, a gentleman of taste and culture, there are very few men better adapted to the business (requiring so large a knowledge of the finer arts) than Mr. Winslow. He has been here since 1835, and has been actively engaged in business since that time.

Mr. Miller, his partner, is also a practical workman. The firm are doing a very large business, employing steam works. They use Vermont marble, said to be the best in use for monumental purposes, being susceptible of a very high polish, yet very hard and durable. The machinery in their works is complete, and their facilities are most extensive and perfect in all respects. The finest work in this part of the State is done at their establishment. A very large marble-yard is attached to this first-class manufactory." A partnership was afterward formed between Mr. Winslow and his son George-Clark* Winslow, which expired by limitation in 1877, when the father retired from the business.

Mr. Winslow married at Halifax, Vt., 30 May, 1837, Mary-Gray Barber, b. 20 Apr. 1814, Charlemont, Mass., 3d dau. of Rufus and Abigail (Wight) of C. She died 27 May, 1839, Kalamazoo, Mich. He married 2d, Plainfield, Will Co., Ill., 13 May, 1841, Lovina-Smith Clark, b. 9 Dec. 1816, Greenfield, Mass., only dau. of Erastus and Lovina (Smith) of G., both of whom were natives of Coleraine, Mass. Mr. Clark was the second woolen manufacturer who set up the power loom in New England. He died 17 Nov. 1872, aged nearly 85, at Decatur, Mich. His wife died 1 Sept. 1834, Niagara Falis, Canada. He married in Deerfield, Mass., 31 Aug. 1836, Abigail-Childs Hawks, b. 2 Apr. 1816, D., dau. of Waitstill, Jr., and Meliscent (Blodgett) of D. He joined the New England Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the regular order of graduation, at its session in Boston, June, 1836, and was ordained Deacon by Bishop Elijah Hedding; at the session in Lowell, in 1840, was ordained Elder by the same bishop. In 1847, he was settled over the M. E. Church in Salem, Mass. Removed in 1853 to Illinois, and united with the Rock River Conference of the M. E. Church, and, in October, 1870, was placed on their superannuated list.

"At last so quietly did he sink to rest that his wife and family scarcely thought they were looking on death. His friends do not know that he was conscious of the approach of the messenger who 'bade him suddenly remove' to his eternal home. The disease which terminated his life was probably an affection of the heart, with which he had suffered for some years; but though death came thus suddenly, his coming was not entirely unexpected, and brother W. was living in full and constant preparation for the great event. A few evenings before his death, he joined with his family in conversation upon the Bible doctrine of special providence in all the minute affairs of life; and in his remarks upon the subject he mentioned, with deep interest, some of his own experiences, in which he had felt assured that God had ordered his steps with a Father's wisdom and love. He undoubtedly felt, also, that the loving Father who watches over us in life wisely chooses for his children the time and circumstances of their death. 'Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.'"—Zion's Herald.

We also add the following from the Aurora Beacon:

"He was a good preacher, faithful pastor, and devoted Christian. He was retiring in manner, not given to forcing his opinions on others, yet he had the wisdom to know when to speak. There was dignity without hauteur in his deportment among the people, so that he was liable to be misunderstood, and unappreciated, until he was better known. His charity, like the bounty of heaven, was large toward his brethren and all the people. He would not think evil, and hence did not speak evil."

9574. JOSEPH<sup>5</sup>, [2024] (Job<sup>4</sup>, Joseph<sup>3</sup>, Job<sup>2</sup>, Kenelm<sup>1</sup>,) born in Dighton, formerly a part of Taunton, Mass.; died about October, 1774, at East Greenwich, R.I., and was there buried. He married in E. G., Mary ----, who died 21 Oct. 1761, a few months after the birth of her son William. He married 2d, at St. George, Bermuda Is., Colony of Great Britain, about 1762, Isabella Higgs, born in March, 1742, dau, of Samuel, of Bermuda. She died February, 1842, aged 99 yrs. and 10 mos., at Nantucket, Mass., and was buried there. Dr. Charles-F7. Winslow thus writes in relation to this marriage of his grandfather, who had been at sea early in life, and was taken, if he remembers the tradition correctly, by some French vessel, in the French difficulties with America, retaken by the English and carried into Bermuda: "Here he remained some time, and fell in love with a beautiful and sprightly girl. . . . Her name was Isabella Higgs, a name now very respectable and numerous in the Somers Islands, or the Bermudas, as they are more commonly called. . . . She lived till she was one hundred years old lacking two months. I remember this remarkable old woman very well, for over twenty years previous to her death; and my second daughter, who is named Isabella in honor of her, resembles her in physical build and manners and character to such a wonderful extent as to often remind me of that very aged and bright woman." After the death of her husband she lived with her two sons Benjamin' and Joseph', at Nantucket, Mass. Dr. C-F'. Winslow states that his father told him, that in the earliest conflicts of the Revolutionary era his father was engaged as a volunteer, in an encounter with the British invaders. He had not clear knowledge of the occasion, but remembered his appearance in the military trainings, and the great agitation of society incident to the trying times of that period of the American war.

He remained in the Bermudas from about 1755 to about 1769, and then returned to Dighton, Mass.; afterward removed to East Greenwich, R.I., where he died. He was a ship-builder.

We quote the following from Dr. Winslow concerning his ancestry:—"My father traced my grandfather's connections into Dighton and Somerset, and he often told me that we sprang from a branch of the Winslows who had removed from Plymouth to that neighborhood. I have no knowledge of the name of my great-grandfather Winslow. The Doctors Winslow of Dighton, physicians for three generations, were considered relations of our branch of the family." [See 8825, and account of descendants; also for a grouping of this family in the earlier generations, and for English Winslow ancestry, see Radial Chart, Vol. I, p. 100.]

She died 29 Apr. 1802, Nantucket. He married 2d, 2 Aug. 1802, Phebe Horrox, of Nantucket, b. 21 July, 1766 or '67, in that town, dau. of Thomas, of Liverpool, England. She died 10 June, 1847 or 1853, at Nantucket. Thomas Horrox was a seaman in a British vessel which was cast away on the shores of Nantucket Island, about 1750 or '55. He there remained and married Anne Mooers, by whom he had several sons and daughters, the eldest of whom was Phebe before-mentioned. He is believed to have been of the same family as the celebrated mathematician and astronomer, Jeremiah Horrox, whose theory of lunar motions afforded assistance to Newton, who always spoke of him as a mathematical genius of the highest order. [See Encyclopædia Americana.]

Mr. Winslow was a blacksmith, and learned his trade at East Greenwich, R.I., where he lived with his mother, who was left a widow during the Revolutionary war. He acquired considerable property, which he subsequently lost in commerce and shipping. He was noted for his integrity and kindness of heart. In his religious sentiments he was extremely liberal. He removed to Nantucket, Mass., about 1792, and there his children were born.

July, 1877, Salt Lake City, Utah; married in N., 1 July, 1838, Lydia Jones, b. 14 Oct. 1814, at N., dau. of Daniel and Elizabeth (Arthur) of N. She died 23 Dec. 1874, Boston, and is buried in Mount Auburn Cemetery. He received the degree of M.D. from Harvard in 1833-4, and settled in early life in Nantucket, where he held several local offices. He was subsequently Consular Physician at Lahaina, Sandwich Islands, and at Callao, Peru; was also U.S. Consul at Paita, Peru, S.A. In November, 1873, he was chosen President of the Delta Phi Society, Salt Lake City. He has been a great traveler, and his family have, with him, circumnavigated the globe, residing also for four years in Europe. He is the author of the following works:

Cosmography, published by Crosby & Nichols, 1855; Discourses:—Preparation of the Earth for the Intellectual Races, published by Crosby & Nichols, 1855; Nazarite's Vow, published by Crosby & Nichols, 1855; Cooling Globe, published by Walker, of Boston, 1864; Force and Nature, published by Macmillan & Co., London, 1869.

The following extract is from the Daily Tribune, of 1874, Salt Lake City: Among the Thanksgiving go herings in this city, we hear of none more attractive than the dinner party at Judge Haydon's, over which Mrs. Haydon presided with her accustomed grace, cheering the entertainment with her versatile talents of conversation and music. Among the guests were Governor Woods, Chief Justice McKean, Colonel Wickizer, Dr. Winslow, and General Blanchard, of Hartford, a highly cultivated gentleman, the guest of our highly esteemed Chief Justice. The feast of reason and flow of soul seem to have been generous and uninterrupted, and continued from six o'clock till midnight. Philosophy, the arts, music, wit, and poesy, all lent their aid to the enjoyments of the evening. The banquet was prefaced by an appropriate "grace" from Judge McKean, and was closed by the following original ode read by Dr. Winslow. We are indebted to Judge Haydon for a copy of the Doctor's verses.

THANKSGIVING LAY.

BY C-F. WINSLOW.

The days, and months and changing years Roll swiftly by, and with them bring Cold winter snows, and human tears, Sweet blooms, and smiles of joyous Spring, Warm summer with its grassy meads, Rich autumn with its fruitful seeds, Abounding for the thousand needs Of man and beast throughout the earth, To whom the Great Supreme gives birth. As countless as the flakes of snow, Untold as woman's endless pains, For every pang and human woe, For all the chilling blasts that blow, The smiles of God diffused below, Descending oft in copious rains, Distilling soft in nightly dews, Are changed to flowers of charming hues, To corn, and wine, and nutrient oils, Abundant fruits and teeming soils.

Where'er we turn from zone to zone, We view celestial gifts alone. The Magians say that Good and Ill, As hostile agents roam the earth, Great offspring of Almighty will,

Both bad and good of heavenly birth. And we, of other race and fame, Obeying laws of Christian name, Confess these agents all the same, Whate'er their origin or claim.— For right and wrong from age to age, Whate'er the doctrines of the sage, Contest the power of God for sway, The opposite believe who may. But finally the good prevails; The sunshine dissipates the rains; The joys of life exceed the pains, And songs of earth transcend the wails. Hence, thanks to God for spring and fall, For winter's cold and summer's heat, Alike for honey and for gall, For all to mortal man are meet To fill Jehovah's great behests, And win the soul to heavenly feasts.

And now especially we raise
With all the nation round us bent,
One universal song of praise
For all these blessings kindly sent.

When years on years have passed away
And hearts now young are growing old,
When friends are parted here for aye.
The same glad story shall be told.
The same thanksgiving lays be sung,
And great and small, and old and young,
Assembled round the festal board,
Shati join with sweet and hallowed tongue,
A hundred millions in accord,
To bless the goodness of the Lord.

He and his family have resided, among other places, in Nantucket, Mass.; Lahaina, S. Is.; San Francisco, Cal.; Boston, Waltham, and West Newton, Mass.; Paris, France; Munich, Heidelberg, and Baden Baden, Germany; Luzerne, Switzerland; Rome, Italy; Callao and Paita, Peru, S.A. The last years of his life were spent in Salt Lake City, Utah Territory. The editor of the Boston Journal learning of his death, wrote concerning him: "Dr. C-F. Winslow was a native of Nantucket, and formerly a practicing physician in Boston, where he was widely known and esteemed as a man and a gentleman of superior scientific attainments. During the war of the Rebellion he visited Europe with his family, remaining several years, and while there wrote a work entitled "Nature and Force," which received high encomiums from eminent European scientists. Of late years he has been engaged in mining enterprises in Utah. He was very fond of scientific pursuits, possessed warm sympathies and a genial temperament, and his decease will be deeply regretted by a numerous circle of friends and acquaintances."

Saturday, 7 July, 1877, he completed a work in hand, and was feeling better in health than for a few days previous. In the evening several friends were sitting in his room, chatting until 9:15, when all but two left. A few moments after, he rose and walked toward the bed, remarking that he would lie down awhile, and died as he was standing, probably of heart disease, from which he had been for some time suffering.

An extract from the will of Dr. Winslow is here given:

"I request, order, and command that, if in the course of eight and forty hours it be known positively and clearly proven that I am dead, my heart may be removed from my body by some competent anatomist, and placed immediately in a strong glass vessel having a ground glass stopper accurately fitted to the same, and that this vessel be immediately filled, for the purpose of embalming my heart, with a saturated solution, in hot water, of muriate of ammonia, sal ammonia, and the corrosive sublimate of mercury, and with the highest proof alcohol, this mixture to consist of equal parts of alcohol and the saturated solution of sal ammonia and the corrosive sublimate, each of these salts being added to the boiling water until it will dissolve no more. The alcohol may be added to the solution while it is yet hot, and the vessel filled therewith. The vessel must be stopped and sealed and the stopper securely covered with wet parchment and tied. I order this vessel, with its contents thus prepared and when cold, to be put into a thick oak plank box, made of the size to just receive it, and this box I order to be saturated with coal tar; this I wish enclosed in a plain pine case and buried in the grave and over the remains of my dear and venerated mother, in the "South of Newtown" burying-ground, in the island of Nantucket, where I was born. My dear and excellent father, to whom I am indebted for my enlarged views of nature, lies by her side, and the same mound marks the resting-place of both, and a single stone records the birth and death of each. Thus may this sacred spot be known where I wish my heart to rest forever, after my heart has been removed and embalmed as above directed. I order that my body be burned in the most convenient manner that my executors, or the friends or persons with whom I may dwell at the time of my death, may be able to adopt. I should be satisfied if the method of cremation as practiced by the ancient Romans was adopted, but, if this be not convenient or practicable, my body may be burned in a retort, as is now practiced in such cases in Germany After this process is completed, I desire and order that all that may remain of my bones and ashes may be gathered up, placed in a strong glass vessel similar to the one before described, and that this be treated in the same manner as that which shall contain my heart. It is my desire and command that this be taken to the cemetery of Mount Auburn, near Cambridge, Mass., and placed in the same grave and upon the coffin which contains the precious remains of my great, dear, and venerated wife."

In compliance with the will the ceremony of cremation was performed, 31 July. From among several addresses reported on the occasion, we give an extract from that of Dr. J.F. Hamilton:

"It would not be right to say that Dr. Charles F. Winslow is no more. Let us rather believe that what of him was immaterial has, according to his own belief, returned unto the God who gave it, while what of him was material is left with us to be disposed of in loyal and solemn obedience to his oral and written commands. Dr Winslow was a man of mark. No one could snow him, no one could even meet him, without being impressed with the great strength of his native and acquired endowments. Born in New England, and educated there and in Europe as a physician and surgeon, his high attainments and great success in his profession, his subsequent devotion to science, his extensive travels and philosophic observations, his acquaintance on terms of equality with eminent men, and his own published works, all forbid that his name should soon pass out of the memory of his fellow-men. Some months since, our deceased friend said to a friend of his, 'Did you ever see a human body in process of decomposition disinterred?' On being answered in the negative, he said, 'If you had seen it you would recoil from the dread mysteries of the grave and wish your dead body to be burned. It is because of my reverence for the human body that I wish mine to be burned, and the ashes preserved.'"

- 9712. CAPT. JOB<sup>5</sup>, [2025] (Job<sup>4</sup>, Joseph<sup>3</sup>, Job<sup>2</sup>, Kenelm<sup>1</sup>,) b. 17 Nov. 1738, Dighton, Mass.; d. 14 Dec. 1809, New Lebanon Springs, N.Y., in the 72d year of his age; and was buried there, in the family yard, which has always been reserved when the farm has passed into the hands of strangers. He married Temperance Hayden, a native of East Haddam, Ct., and probably dau. of Ebenezer, of Saybrook, Ct. On the records of that town, Liber 7, p. 538, is found a deed of one-fourth acre of land, given by Ebenezer Hayden to Job Winslow, 14 Dec. 1759. She died 21 Mar. 1777, in her 41st year, acc. to gravestone in East Haddam. He married 2d, Mary Rogers, b. 10 April, 1750. She died at the house of her son John Winslow, 20 Feb. 1831, and was buried at Westford, on Warren Fellow's land, where others also were buried.

Dr. Charles-Frederick Winslow [9663], grandson of Joseph , writes:

"These young men, Joseph and Job, came from the region of Somerset and Dighton, Mass., to Rhode Island and Connecticut, and there settled about the middle of the eighteenth century."

John-Flack Winslow [9740], grandson of Job5, writes:

"My grandfather's name was Job Winslow, born at Dighton, Massachusetts; the year of his advent I do not know. He was bred a shipwright, serving his apprenticeship at D. Very soon thereafter he removed to 'Mouth of Connecticut River' (either to Saybrook or Lyme); and at Saybrook established a ship-yard and followed the business of ship-building. Some years after he purchased a farm in and removed to Canaan, Columbia Co., in this State [New York], where he died somewhere about the year 1806 or '7. He had two wives, and, by the first, two sons, viz.: Job, the eldest, who never married, and Richard, my father, both born at Lyme, Ct. [The town clerk of Lyme writes us: "I have carefully examined from 1743-1844 the records of marriages, births, and deaths, and do not find the name of Winslow recorded there." Perhaps these two sons were born at Saybrook or East Haddam, Ct. By the second he had several children; the only two I recollect ever seeing were John and a daughter named Temperance; both were married, but I have no knowledge of their families." [The family record sent us by Mrs. Lydia-Ann<sup>7</sup> (Winslow) Deming [9784] does not give this daughter Temperance.] Winslow removed, late in life, to New Lebanon, Columbia Co., N.Y.

"Received Kinderhook the eighteenth day of August in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and six of Mr. Job Winslow (by the hands of his son John) one of the possessors of Land in the patent of Mawignunck the sum of thirty four dollars and seventy nine cents which with former payments is in full of the principal and Interest of the sum which by the award of the Commissioners appointed by law to settle the controversy between the proprietors of said patent and the possessors of Land within the same was charged upon the said Job Winslow.

Witness

P Silvester N Schorch nominated by the said Commissioners to receive said monies."

Besides the original of this receipt, Mr. and Mrs. Deming have in their possession deeds of several parcels of land which her father owned in Michigan.

During the period of his connection with the army his wife and children were in Hartford, Conn., where the sixth child, James<sup>7</sup>, was born 17 Feb. 1815. Leaving the army, he resumed his former business as owner and master of vessels on the Hudson, in which he continued until about 1827, when he went into the flouring business on Norman's Creck, about a mile south of Albany, his family residing, first on Quackenbush street, and second, on Division street. This manufacture, with increasing purchases and sales of flour and grain, continued till 1834, when, at sixty-two years of age, a highly honored citizen, he retired from business, residing on Broadway to the time of his death. His funeral sermon was preached 9th of January, 1847, by Rev. Dr. Fisher, and his body was placed in the family vault in the Albany cemetery.

Prior to 1826-7, he had been for many years a member of Dr. Chester's church, the Second Presbyterian, of Albany. About this time the Fourth Presbyterian Church was organized, of which he was one of the founders, and, from the first, one of the elders, most earnestly laboring for its growth, efficiency, and benign influence. During the thirteen years subsequent to his retirement from mercantile life he devoted himself to religious and benevolent efforts.

9729. 2. RICHARD-HENRY, b. 16 Sept. 1806, Albany; d. 15 Feb. 1861, Westport, Ct.; m. New York City, 10 Dec. 1829, Rachel Robertson, of N.Y., dau. of Archibald and —— (Abram). He married 2d, 9 Feb. 1854, Mary-Elizabeth Fitch, of Norwich, Ct., b. 27 July, 1827, New Hartford, Ct., dau. of Stephen and Mary-Ingraham (Rogers) of New Hartford, and adopted dau. of Asa Fitch, of New York City, who lived for many years in the immediate neighborhood of the church in University Place. No children by the second marriage.

In 1824-5 he went to Canandaigua, and entered, as clerk, in the mercantile house of Deacon Thomas Beales, where he remained about two years, and then went to Maranham, Brazil, S.A., as clerk under his uncle, Leonard Corning, then and there a merchant, and American Consul of the port.

He remained in South America two or more years, and, returning to the United States, soon went into business with Mr. Minot Morgan under the firm name of Morgan & Winslow, West Street, New York. Thus continued until about 1832, when he commenced in Wall Street, as exchange broker, associated with Mr. Tilley Allen, the firm name being Allen & Winslow. Mr. Allen retired some three years later, when a Mr. Perkins became his associate, and the business continued several years under the firm name of Winslow & Perkins. Mr. Perkins having retired in 1849, J-F-D. Lanier became his associate, and the business was continued under highly prosperous circumstances till 1859, when Mr. Winslow retired from business to his country home, the "Compo House," at Westport, Conn.

He was the originator of the Railroad Bond System, in 1849. At that time Western railroads hardly existed, even in idea; and to inspire confidence in them, intelligence and unwavering faith was necessary on the part of those presenting these enterprises to public favor. For this office he was peculiarly fitted; he was a man whose earnest convictions and great energy seldom failed to impress his own views upon all with whom he came in contact. The commencement made by the firm in negotiating these securities was, however, in a very small way; but the great success of their first negotiations fully vindicated the representations made, large profits being realized by the purchasers of these securities; and thenceforward the operations of the firm were distinguished for their magnitude rather than for the difficulties to be overcome. In a short time its operations extended to almost every State in the Union where railroads were in progress.

Mr. Winslow was a man of more than ordinary gifts and capabilities; positive in his characteristics; remarkably intelligent and accomplished in business affairs; and intimately acquainted with financial matters. In his intercourse with his business associates he was a man of admitted force and impressiveness; and as a conversationalist, very interesting, not to say fascinating. He was deeply interested in the Genealogy of the Winslow family; and, with John Winslow [5082] and Rev. Dr. Hubbard<sup>6</sup> Winslow [6939], planned a meeting, at Plymouth, of those bearing the name. When it was suggested that there might be some who would be unable to bear the expenses of the journey, he replied that he would take care of all such cases. He died at his country-seat, and his remains were placed in the family vault in the Albany cemetery. His widow was married at Westport, Ct., 30 Apr. 1874, by Rt. Rev. John Williams, Bishop of the diocese of Connecticut, assisted by Rev. L-S. Stevens, rector of the church, to Dr. Richard-Channing-Moore Page, of Virginia, born about 1847. We extract the following from an article in the New York Evening Mail of 19 June, 1874, entitled "Old New York," and written by R-W. Newman. "He [Richard-Henry Winslow] married Asa Fitch's adopted daughter, and, on his death, left her a large fortune. She retired to Westport, Ct., where a month ago she married a gentleman twenty years her junior. She built and endowed the church in which she was married, and had a great wedding; seven hundred invitations were given out, and Pullman palace cars employed to take up her city friends."

Mr. Winslow's education was acquired in Hartford, Conn., and Albany, N.Y. Leaving school, he served about two years' clerkship with the old house of W. & A. Marvin, of Albany; then went to New York, and, there having served a few months' clerkship, was sent by his principals to New Orleans to establish a branch house in that city. In this he succeeded; but was compelled by the unhealthiness of the climate, finally, to abandon the undertaking.

He returned to the North in the summer of 1831. In November of that year, the month of his majority, he went to New Jersey as the agent and manager of the iron works at Boonton, belonging to the "New Jersey Iron Co.," and owned by parties in the city of New York and in England, then recently established after English models. These were much the largest works in this country.

He continued in the management of the aforesaid iron works till late in 1834, at which time he purchased the Clinton iron property, in Bergen County, N.J., where he had a short time before discovered extensive deposits of hematite iron ore not before known to exist.

He remained in this business until about the close of 1836, when he sold all his iron interests in New Jersey to an incorporated company, and, in June, 1837, removed to Troy, N.Y., where he became partner with Erastus Corning and James Horner in the Albany Iron Works, located at Troy.

For thirty years, under the various firm names of Corning, Horner & Co., Erastus Corning & Co., and Corning & Winslow, this business relation continued uninterruptedly, terminating in 1867.

He was also a partner in the Rensselaer Iron Works, consisting of rail-making, at Troy, and blast furnaces at Hudson and Fort Edward.

From 1863 to 1868, Mr. Winslow was associated with the late John A. Griswold in the manufacture of steel by the Bessimer process, which they first introduced into America, being the proprietors of the patent for the process. Their establishment was the parent of the many later works in the country for this manufacture, which marks an era in railway progress and economy—there now being such steel rails in use, which have outworn twenty successive iron rails. This industry has, in many departments, proved eminently beneficial to the country at large.

In 1861, Mr. Winslow with Mr. Griswold and Captain John Ericsson, of New York State, built for the Government, and almost at their own risk, the first monitor, whose achievement in Hampton Roads in her fight with the rebel ship Merrimac has become a part of the naval history of our country. The secret history of this little monitor, her conception by Capt. Ericsson, her appreciation by his associates, and the difficulties they experienced in impressing her value upon the naval department of the Government, the embarrassments they encountered in having her adopted by the department, and the risk assumed by them as the condition on which she was adopted, when written, will show an amount of faith, loyalty, and sagacity on their part, not surpassed by any private patriotic undertakings during the war; and had they not succeeded in getting President Lincoln to share with them this confidence, it is certain her advent would have been greatly delayed, if not entirely prevented. They afterward built some eight other vessels of the "monitor" type for the government during the rebellion.

From 1863 until his removal from Troy to his future home on the bank of the Hudson at Poughkeepsie, Mr. Winslow was president of the Board of Trustees of the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute at Troy. He was also, from 1863 to 1868, one of the four proprietors of the extensive iron mines in Moriah, Essex County, N.Y., during which period and subsequently their development has placed them among the largest, if not most extensive, of any east of the Alleghany Mountains.

In 1867 he withdrew from active connection with the iron business to the enjoyment of his home on the Hudson.

UNITY OF RESULT FROM DIVERSITY OF MEANS.

Mr. Winslow, who skilfully planned and executed implements of defence for the preservation of the Union, has been equally active in aid of a system which, if fully executed, will have a binding force toward the perpetuity of our nation.

The plan of presenting, in chart form, the lines of descendants from the settlers of Colonies and the founders of States to the present time, showing the branches from common stocks, now rooted in all the counties of the Union, was early appreciated by Mr. Winslow as an element of national strength. This element of strength is still increased by the system devised for the extension of these lines, a system available to future generations, securing bonds of perpetual union.

It is the desire of those enlisted in this national work to publish a series of these charts. Already genealogical items sufficient for over five hundred have been collected ready for the press—each of which when printed may be separately framed for the parties whom they most intimately concern, those of more general interest being also hung in conspicuous places in some of our public halls; moreover, all may be gathered into large folio books, atlas form.

These silent mementos widely dispersed in the public and private libraries of the land will be "monitors" for the perpetuity of the Union.

In reply to a request for a more extended account of himself, he states: "I have nothing to give you respecting my life, with the exception of the grandest and most glorious experience which I had in the month of March, 1866, when I found the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ experimentally, in conformity to the words of our dear Lord and Master, who said 'Ask and ye shall receive,' 'seek and ye shall find,' 'knock and it shall be opened unto you'; and by His grace I am enabled to say this moment that my dear Savior is supremely precious to my soul above every other blessing. God has been and is very good and merciful unto me, for which I do praise His Holy name. I have been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church since the year 1866, and in the meantime a class leader, and am now a licensed exhorter. My desire is, by the help of the Lord, to be faithful unto death."

1. Eleanor<sup>8</sup>, b. 22 Jan. 1809, Portland; married there, 12 Oct. 1828, John<sup>7</sup> Neal [11297], b. 25 Aug. 1793, P., s. of John and Rachel<sup>6</sup> (Hall) of P. "After some experience of commercial pursuits in Baltimore he applied himself to legal studies and became a member of the bar, but has chiefly distinguished himself as a most voluminous contributor to letters -novels, plays, poems, history, and critical reviews without number, bearing witness to his indefatigable industry, versatile talent, and ease and sprightliness of style. Commencing authorship by a hydra-headed critique, of sufficient magnitude 'to make a small book,' on the works of Lord Byron, published in The Portico, he soon acquired sufficient courage to essay his first novel, which was given to the world in 1817, entitled 'Keep Cool,' followed by 'The Battle of Niagara, Goldau, the Maniac Harper, and other Poems,' by John O'Cataract, 1818; 2d edition published under the name of the author, 1819. 3. 'Otho'; a tragedy, 1818. 4. 'Index to Niles' Register,' 1818. 5. 'History of the American Revolution,' by Paul Allen, 1821. Mr. Neal wrote the portion (about one fourth of the whole) of this book, beginning with the Declaration of Independence and ending with the first volume. Dr. Watkins was his colleague. 6. 'Our Ephraim'; a play. 7. 'Logan'; a novel, 1821; repub. in London. S. 'Seventy-Six'; a novel, 1822, written in twenty-seven days; republished in London, 3 vols. 9. 'Randolph'; a novel, 1822, written in thirty-six days; repub. in London, 4 vols. 10. 'Errata, or The Works of Will Adams'; a novel. 1822, written in less than thirty-nine days; repub. in London, 4 vols. 11. 'Brother Jonathan'; written during the author's visit to England, 1825-27, and pub. in London 3 vols. 12. 'Rachel Dyer,' 1823. This is a story on the subject of Salem witchcraft. 13. 'Authorship, by a New-Englander over the Sea,' 1830. 14. 'The Down-Easters'; a novel, 1831. 15. 'Ruth Elder'; a novel. 16. 'One Word more, intended for the Reasoning and Thoughtful Unbelievers', Boston, 1854, 12mo. On Mr. Neal's return to Portland from his European tour in 1827, he commenced the publication of The Yankee, a weekly miscellany. In a short time he tansferrred his periodical, and himself with it, to Boston. At the end of a year it was merged in the New England Galaxy, and Mr. Neal retired to Portland. In the following letter he says: 'I have been a contributor to journals, papers, and magazines at home and abroad for thirty-six years, among which are The Portico, Journal of the Times and Telegraph, Analectic Magazine, North American Review, N. Y. Courier and Enquirer, N. Y. Mirror, Brother Jonathan, Ladies' Companion, New England Galaxy, most of the annuals, Blackwood, The Western Review, Colburn's New Monthly, The European, British and Foreign, Sartain's and Graham's Magazines, and many others not now recollected. I have wholly edited The Telegraph, of Baltimore, and the Brother Jonathan, of New York, and helped edit many others long enough to have them sink or stop. It would be quite impossible for me to remember all I have written, even where I have no reason to be ashamed of it, having published what would amount, I should think, to a hundred octavo volumes at least, on subjects far too numerous to mention." -Allibone's Dictionary.

"Physically, Mr. Neal was a splendid specimen of a man, of vigorous frame and familiar with manly exercises. He was the first to establish a gymnasium in this country, opening one in Portland soon after his return from Europe, and throughout his life he encouraged the practice of fencing and sparring. He was essentially an athlete, and was proud of his brawn and sinew.

"As a promoter of art, and of all liberal studies, he has left a broad mark on the history of Portland. He was a man of varied, if not accurate information, and was enthusiastic in the promotion of everything tending to the general culture of the people. He had mastered many subjects of study, spoke several languages, and was always ready to discourse on any or all subjects. He was quick to encourage talent in the young, and to recognize the merits of others. At a time when art was little appreciated in this country he was always ready to patronize and encourage young artists, and many who have since achieved fame as painters or sculptors, owe their first word of encouragement to him. He was a swift critic, frank and confident in the expression of his opinions, but generous in his recognition of merit, wherever found.

"As a man, he had many noble and some contradictory qualities. Like all positive men, he made warm friends and bitter enemies. He was honest, generous, warm-hearted, but quick, irascible, and sometimes passionate. His leading trait was impulsiveness, which occasionally led him into hasty words and acts, but this was balanced by the manliness and rare courage, which led him freely to own his mistakes. Another characteristic trait was his frankness. He was an out-spoken, forth-putting man, who never withheld a word or a blow from any consideration of policy or expediency; what he thought he said, and said it heartily because he thought it was right. He had also a generous enthusiasm which led him to espouse the cause of the down-trodden and the oppressed. Every one of any pretentions who ever came to Portland seeking sympathy and aid, found a warm friend in John Neal. His trustfulness was sometimes imposed upon by adventurers, but he always stuck to his proteges to the last. He was probably the first man in this country to advocate woman-suffrage, having declared in favor of giving the ballot to women in a 4th of July oration delivered in Portland as early as 1838.

"His last years were quiet and uneventful. Surrounded by his friends, crowned with honors, in the assured hope of a better hereafter, he peacefully sank to rest, on the 20th of June, 1876, at the ripe age of nearly eighty-three years."—Maine Genealogist and Biographer.

"On the 20th of June, [1876] this well-known author died, after a long and exceedingly busy life. . . . His parents were members of the Society of Friends; but at the age of twenty-five he received a formal dismissal, finding his tastes incompatible with a continued relation to that society. At an early age he engaged as a shop-boy, but ever energetic in self-instruction, we find him, at the age of twenty-one, teaching penmanship and drawing. Next he is interested in the drygoods trade succesively in Boston, New York, and Baltimore. In the latter place he formed a partnership with John Pierpont; but a very brief career, which terminated in the failure of this partnership enterprise, satisfied Neal of his unfitness for commercial life. He concluded to try the law. While reading the customary treatises he also studied foreign languages and contributed to periodical literature.

"He was admitted to practice before the Maryland Bar in 1819. Literary avocations occupied a great part of his time, however, until a trip to England, in 1824, where he contributed articles to various periodicals, and became acquainted with the celebrated Jeremy Bentham, who invited him to take up his residence at his house.

"In 1827 he returned to America and settled in Portland, where he employed himself in practicing the law, writing, and lecturing. He was also a very earnest advocate of physical exercises, and excelled as a gymnast and fencer.

"Besides his numerous contributions to periodical literature, he is the author of several independent works, among which are 'Brother Jonathan,' 'Rachel Dyre,' 'Bentham's Morals and Legislation,' 'True Womanhood,' 'Wandering Recollections of a Somewhat Busy Life,' 'Portland Illustrated.'

"Many of our readers will remember his sprightly sketches contributed from time to time to the Phrenological Journal. He always entertained a warm regard for the journal, and was himself well versed in the doctrines of the science."—Fowler's Phrenological Journal.

We add the following biographical sketch:

"On the evening of Sunday, August 9th, 1857, died, at the ripe age of 88, Richard Winslow, the father of the Winslow family that have filled so important a place in the commercial and shipping history of Cleveland. Mr. W. was born in Falmouth, Me., Sept. 6, 1769, being descended in a direct line from Kenelm Winslow, brother of Gov. Edward Winslow, who played so important a part in the early history of Plymouth Colony. In 1812, Mr. Winslow removed to North Carolina, where he lived, for many years, at Ocracoke, becoming largely interested in commerce, both internal and marine. Soon after his removal to that State he married Miss Mary-Nash Grandy, of Camden, N.C., who became the mother of eleven children, of whom but four, N.C., H.J., R.K., and E.N., are now living. Mrs. Winslow died in October, 1858, having survived her husband a little over one year.

In 1830, he decided to leave North Carolina and try his fortune in the West. A preliminary tour of observation brought him to Cleveland, then lively with business and more lively still with expectancy of business to come from the completion of the canal, then in partial operation. Like many who preceded and more who followed him, Mr. Winslow was struck with the natural advantages or Cleveland, and concluded to try his fortune here. The site of what is now known as the "Winslow Warehouse," on the river, was owned by C. M. Giddings and Capt. Belden, and a building was then in course of erection on it. Mr. Winslow purchased the property. He had strong faith in the growth of the city, but others did not have it to the same extent, and he was strongly urged not to attempt business so far down the river, where they deemed it impossible for trade ever to reach him. Immediately on concluding his purchase, he went to the eastern cities where he purchased a large stock of teas and groceries, which he sent with his son N.C. to Cleveland, in the autumn. The stock arrived in December, and was at once opened on Superior Street. opposite Union Lanc. In the ensuing May, Mr. Winslow followed with his family, purchased a lot on the S.E. corner of the Public Square, and contracted with Levi Johnson for the erection of the house that was occupied by the Winslow family until the death of Mrs. Winslow. Unlike most of the early settlers in Cleveland, Mr. W. came with capital to invest at once in business, and by prudent management and far-seeing enterprise that capital rapidly increased. He soon became agent for a line of vessels between Buffalo and Cleveland, also for a line of canal-boats. The first step toward his own interests, which subsequently assumed such proportions, was commenced by building the brig North Carolina. A few years later he was interested in building the steamer Bunker Hill, of 456 tons burden, which, at that time, was considered a very large size. To these were added, by himself and sons, so many other lake craft that the family ranked among the foremost, if not the very foremost ship-owners on the chain of lakes, their sail-vessels, propellers, and steam-tugs being found every where on the western lake waters. In 1854, Mr. Winslow retired from business, leaving his interests to be carried on by his sons, who inherited their father's business qualities. In his retirement, as in his active business life, he enjoyed the friendship of a very large social circle, to whom his frank, generous manners, warm attachments, and spotless honor commended him. He was a favorable specimen of the old-school gentleman, warm and impulsive in his nature, quick to conceive and prompt to act, cordial in his greeting, strong in his attachments, and courteous to all. His death was accelerated by an accident, which seriously injured a leg he had badly injured several years before. To the last he preserved his faculties and his cheerfulness, and, but for the injuries he received, would probably have lived many years longer. He was no politician, never sought office, but at the same time felt a keen interest in public affairs, and did not neglect his duties or privileges as a citizen. The three brothers in active conduct of the large interests known as the "Winslows," are distributed as follows: N.C. at Buffalo (during the season of navigation), H. J. at New York, and R. K. at Cleveland; all of whom have been eminently successful."—Annual Obituaries, Crosby, 1857, p. 399.

"Mr. Winslow attained an abundance of wealth, well earned by his industry and probity. He reared a large family to men's estate, and saw them rank among the respected and esteemed. He has gone to his grave without a foe, falling like a shock of wheat fully ripe. While a void has been left in the business ranks and in the social circle, the example of the man still lives, teaching a lesson in favor of integrity and manliness, which will not lose its good effect so long as the name of Richard Winslow is remembered."—Cleveland Herald.

NATHAN-CRANE<sup>7</sup>, b. 10 Dec. 1812, Camden, N.C.; d. Wednesday, June 9, 1880, Cleveland, O.; m. 9. Jan. 1839, Cleveland, Mary-Ann Clarke, b. Sunday, Oct. 1, 1815, Unadilla Forks, N.Y., dau. of Dr. Welcome-Arnold and Mary (Brown) of Cleveland, formerly of Whitestown, N.Y.

Mr. Winslow had suffered from a stroke of paralysis in May, 1879, but the immediate cause of death was Bright's disease, from which he had suffered during the previous two years.

At a meeting of the Cleveland Board of Trade Mr. R.-T. Lyon said: "It is my painful duty to announce to the Board the death of Mr. N.-C. Winslow. He was not a member of this Board, but has been long identified with the growth of the city, his energy and means contributing greatly to its prosperity. I therefore beg leave to offer the following resolution: 'Whereas, This Board of Trade has heard with profound regret of the death of Mr. N.-C. Winslow, who, although not a member of our organization, has been so long identified with the business interests of our city and the lakes as to be rightly considered one among us. be it therefore, Resolved, That the sincere regret and sympathy of this Board is with the family, relatives, and friends of the deceased, and as a slight tribute of respect to his memory no session will be held on the day of his funeral, Saturday, the 12th inst.'" Seconded by Mr. J.-R Sprenkle; and unanimously adopted.

Mr. Winslow removed with his family from North Carolina to Cleveland in 1831, and became connected with his father in the Lake transportation business, from which he retired in 1861, leaving entire control of the business to his sons. In 1862 he removed from Cleveland and established himself in Buffalo, the firm consisting of himself, his eldest son, Henry-C., and his son-in-law, Mr. John-B. Williams. A few years later he retired altogether from active business, and resided in New York, he and his wife spending a portion of their time with their daughter, Mrs. Williams of Baltimore, Md.

Mr. Winslow had much of his father's ability, energy, and business sagacity, and his career was uniformly successful. The details of the extensive business, in which he was so long engaged, show his innate capacity for large enterprises. He was a gentlemen of fine character, with a clear and vigorous mind, cultivated tastes, a large amount of general information, honorable, kind, and generous, and always the upright Christian gentleman. His influence was felt in any community in which he lived.

Mr. Winslow died at the house of his venerable mother-in-law, Mrs. W.-A. Clarke, 659 Euclid Avenue, Cleveland, O. His funeral was attended at Trinity P.E. Church at 3 P.M., June 12. The services were conducted by the rector, Rev. Dr. Brown, assisted by Rev. James-A. Bolles. Sixteen pall bearers, nine of whom, elderly gentlemen, viz.: Hon. John-W. Allen, Hon. Henry-B. Payne, Col. Charles Whittlesey, Capt. D.-P. Nickerson, H.-M. Younglove, Charles Hickox, Asa Hall, R.-T. Lyon, and James-F. Clarke, preceded the body. Eight young men, M.-A. Hanna, Thomas Walton, William Andrews, Col. O.-H. Payne, J.-V. Yates, J. R. Chadwick, George-C. Tracy, and Frank-W. Parsons, bore the casket. A large number of relatives and friends of the deceased were present, among them Mr. Cyrus Clarke of Buffalo, Capt. W. Egan of Chicago, and Mr. R.-P. Fitzgerald of Milwaukee.

At the church the coffin was adorned with beautiful decorations of white flowers and evergreens. The impressive funeral services of the Protestant Episcopal Church were solemnized. The rector spoke briefly of the commercial standing of the departed, of his industry and christianity, and of the universal respect in which he was held by his fellow men. The remains were interred in Lake View Cemetery, Cleveland.

The widow of Mr. Winslow, Mrs. Mary-Ann (Clarke) Winslow, survived her husband but a few years. She spent much of her time after his decease in traveling, mostly in Europe, where she spent the winter of 1883 and the spring of 1884, returning to America in June, and passing the summer and autumn with her mother in Cleveland, who d. 5 Jan. 1885. After her mother's death Mrs. W. returned with her daughter, Mrs. Williams, to the home of the latter in Baltimore, and died there of angina pectoris, 10 Mar. 1885.

Mrs. W. possessed a bright intellect, was noble and generous, and through the added advantages of an excellent education, and opportunities afforded by extensive travels at home and abroad, was a delightful companion, a most accomplished woman.—[See Appendix.]

Mr. Winslow had resided at Ocracoke, N.C., Cleveland, O., New York City, and Buffalo, N.Y.

It is with sincere sorrow that we learn of the death of Mr. Henry C. Winslow, one of the most esteemed, beloved, and worthy of the young men of Buffalo. The sad event was not unexpected. For some time Mr. Winslow had been afflicted with chronic disorders of a complicated character, and for which he made a trip to Europe a little over a year since. For the past few months he had been a frequent sufferer, and his constitution was in bad condition to endure the attack of scarlet fever which seized him a few weeks ago. Since then his condition has been one that caused the gravest apprehension to his physicians and his friends. When, therefore, the announcement was made, "He is dead," though it brought tears to the eyes of those who knew and loved him, it did not find them unprepared for the sad event.

It is not too much to say that there was not a young man in Buffalo more respected and loved by those who knew him than Henry Winslow. He had no enemies, and his friends were without number. He made no effort to win popularity—was modest, retiring, and prone to minding his own business. But his noble qualities of head and heart were so marked that a knowledge of his character and disposition secured for him the esteem and affection of all with whom he was brought in contact. By instinct, upon principle, and in conduct, he was always a thorough gentleman. He was a loyal friend, a most affectionate son, a fond and exemplary husband, and was devoted to his beautiful children. It is but a few months since two were taken from that little flock. Their grief-stricken father hardly realized that he would follow so soon. He leaves a wife and five children. Death has made sad havoc in this affectionate and interesting family. . . .

For several years he had been engaged in business in Buffalo, and was connected with a house composed of, probably, the wealth-iest vessel-owners on the lakes. In his mercantile transactions, as in his family and in society, Henry Winslow adhered to a policy which secured for him universal respect, esteem, and affection. At the time of his death he was a member of the Vestry of Trinity Church.

A meeting of the Board of Trade was held at 11 o'clock this morning, S. S. Guthrie, Esq., occupying the chair, at the request of the President.

Mr. Guthrie announced the death of Mr. H. C. Winslow, and asked what action the Board would take.

Mr. Frank W. Fiske moved that a committee of five be appointed to report to-morrow morning, at 11 o'clock, appropriate resolutions. Carried.

The Chair appointed as such committee, Messrs. Frank W. Fiske, William Meadows, Charles W. Gibson, James R. Smith, and Stephen C. Clarke.

The Board then adjourned.

Commercial Advertiser, Dec. 14, 1876.

"The funeral ceremonies were conducted by Rev. Dr. L. Van Bokkelen, rector of Trinity Church, and Rt. Rev. A. C. Coxe, D.D., Bishop of the Diocese.

After reading a portion of the services and a prayer, Dr. Van Bokkelen said it became him, as rector of the church to which the dear departed had belonged, to add his tribute to those already offered in the series of resolutions previously prepared and made public. It was with feelings of the deepest sorrow and regret that he, in common with those present, no less than others, contemplated the untimely end of him for whom they gathered to do the last earthly honor. His duty here below was completed both to his neighbor and himself, and there could be none who would say that it was not well done. The speaker did not propose to speak at any length; words would fall far short in the present emergency to convey the sorrow and the agony of the bereaved ones and their sympathizers. Finally, let all make it a bounden duty to prepare themselves as fully to meet the dread summons as had he who had been called to the great hereafter.

The concluding services and prayer were pronounced by the Bishop.

The following gentlemen comprised the pall-bearers: Dr. Walter Cary, William Lovering, O. G. Steele, Jr., M. H. Hanna, Bronson C. Rumsey, Frank W. Fiske, Stephen C. Clarke, J. W. Yates. Messrs. Hanna and Yates, friends of the deceased, are from Cleveland, whence they were summoned to perform this last sad office for the departed.

The remains of the deceased were deposited temporarily in the vault of the Delaware Avenue M.E. Church.

At a meeting of the Vestry of Trinity Church, the rector, Rev. Dr. Van Bokkelen, in appropriate terms announced the death of Henry C. Winslow, Esq., a member of the Vestry, who, after a brief illness, had been called from the work of earth to the rest of Paradise. The following resolutions were then adopted:

Resolved, That this Vestry has heard with deep sorrow that death has removed from his work on earth their friend and associate, Henry C. Winslow, who for nearly three years has been active and efficient in his efforts as a vestryman to advance the interests of Trinity Church.

Resolved, That we extend to his afflicted family and relatives our sympathy, with the assurance that we recognize the weight of their bereavement in losing a loving husband and father, a devoted, worthy son, an affectionate brother and friend.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions, signed by the rector and church wardens, be sent to the family of our deceased friend, and that they be recorded in the minutes of the Vestry."

THANKFUL<sup>6</sup>, [10462] (James<sup>6</sup>, Nathan<sup>4</sup>, James<sup>3</sup>, Job<sup>2</sup>, Kenelm<sup>1</sup>,) b. 18 Oct. 1780, Falmouth, Me.; d. 30 May, 1824, Vassalboro, Kennebec Co., Me., and was buried there; married in Friends meeting-house, at F., 30 Sept. 1801, Joseph ALLEN, b. 7 Jan. 1773, Windham, Me., son of Peletiah and Hannah (Hall) of Matinicus Island, off Penobscot Bay, on the coast of Maine, and gr. son of Francis and Mary Allen, who came from England and settled in Kittery, Me. He died at V., 8 Apr. 1861, and was buried there. He was a farmer; settled in Vassalboro, where he spent the remainder of his life, with the exception of five years' residence in Windham. We extract the following from an account of the Allen and Hall families, furnished by Joseph-Hall<sup>7</sup> Allen and his sisters:

"Peletiah Allen and Hannah Hall were married in Falmouth, Maine, 1766, in a public religious meeting of the Society of Friends, according to the custom of said society; and, in 1770, settled in Windham, then an unbroken forest from their log-cabin to the Canada line. Maine was at that time called a province or district of Massachusetts, and was not admitted into the Union as a sovereign State until 1820. We, his children Phebe, Hannah, and Joseph, reside on the farm on which our father settled. We have heard him relate that, in traveling seven miles to Friends meeting on the banks of the Kennebec river, with spotted trees to guide him, there being no roads, he was under the necessity of taking down seventeen pairs of bars, to accomplish his object. [See Chart of the Alleyne Family, pp. 286-7.]

Three brothers by the name of Hall came to this country from England. One of them was drowned, as we have heard, another returned to England, and the third, Ebenezer, father of Hannah (Hall) Allen, our grandmother, soon after settled on Matinicus Island, off Penobscot Bay, coast of Maine, which he purchased. By his first wife Hannah, he had three children, viz.: Ebenezer, Susannah, and Hannah, the mother dying when the last-mentioned was only one day old. He married 2d, a lady by the name of Green, by whom he had three more children, viz.: Peter, Phebe, and Tabitha. While these three children were quite young the Indians were at war with the whites. Ebenezer Hall and his family were the only inhabitants of the island. A party of savages surrounded and attacked the house which was built with logs and constructed with reference to their probable assaults. It was successfully defended by the inmates for three days and nights, when, all being still for some hours, Mr. Hall, supposing the Indians had retired, raised the scuttle-window and ventured to look cautiously forth. The enemy being in ambush immediately fired, and he fell back into the house, the frightened children crying out 'Father is dead.' Finding the principal defender was now out of the way, they battered down the door, took the mother and her three children prisoners, plundered the house of such things as they cared for, set fire to it, and drove their captives before them to Canada. These three children were soon separated from their mother, and have never since been heard from. The mother was afterward exchanged, and made her way on foot to Gorham, Maine, where she became the wife of Chitman COBB. three older children, by the first wife, were all from home at the time of the attack. and thus escaped the fate of the rest of the family. Ebenezer owned a schooner and was out coasting; Susannah and Hannah were at school in Portland. tioned married Peletiah Allen, as before stated. Susannah married William Proctor, and lived in Windham, Me. Ebenezer settled on Matinicus Island, and married Susannah Young. They had fifteen children, all of whom married and had families. He died at the age of eighty years, leaving of living descendants, fifteen children, one-hundred-and-five grandchildren, and forty-five great grandchildren."

Mrs. Cook mentions the following incident regarding her child-hood: "When I was a child of four years, a teacher once told me to tell my mother not to spend her time in curling my hair, but to use that time in prayer to God. It is said I answered indignantly, stamping my little foot at her, 'God curled my hair, mother never did.'

My sisters hastened home and informed my parents that I swore at the teacher, and they thought I deserved chastisement. My father took me on his knee, saying, 'You have given your teacher a wiser and truer answer than one older could have done. I hope it is a lesson that will benefit her, teaching her not to meddle with God's works.' That teacher never troubled me again concerning my duty to God or my parents. She had her answer in full."

We are informed that a picture of Gov. Edward¹ Winslow, which hangs in Memorial Hall, Boston, bears a striking resemblance to Mrs. Cook. She has no children, but has brought up Alice-A*. and John-P*. Hall, children of her sister Lydia-Robinson¹ [10657].

the poor. Like most of the Olivers, he was warm-hearted, impulsive, subject to frequent turns of depression, but at other times as much elated and enthusiastic. He had much of humor and of poetry in his composition, was very fond of nature, and particularly of flowers and children. His ways, like his early training, were not systematic, but he was full of originality. He was a natural mechanic, and could use tools of many different crafts; and if he had not the tool he wanted, he could make it.

SARAH-ELIZABETH, b. 5 Sept. 1829; m. Philadelphia, Pa., 22 Apr. 1851, William-Hillary ALLDERDICE, b. 24 Apr. 1828, Wilmington, Del., s. of Abraham, of W., and Eliza (Shuff) of Luray, Page Co., Va. Mrs. Allderdice writes that her husband's grandmother was Lady Elizabeth Hillary, and that he comes of a very fine old Irish family. Her history is quite romantic, as she eloped with her husband, who was a Quaker, came to America and went through trials innumerable, dying brokenhearted because of his loss, when the father of Mr. Allderdice was three years old. She cannot supply names and dates. Would be very glad to have the Hillary coat-of-arms, but the strict Quaker discipline of the Allderdice family forbids all such "vanities." Mrs. Oliver closed her useful and beneficent work on earth shortly after this service for her kindred was completed, and after the above named pages were in type, and the acknowledgments prepared for the Memorial. Her death occurred at Lynn, Mass., the place of her residence, 17th April, 1879.

Note.—The descendants of Mrs. Phebe<sup>5</sup> (Winslow) POPE [10750], whose records occupy nearly twenty-eight pages—page 890 to 917, inclusive, of this volume, have been greatly favored by the efficient efforts of her grand daughter, Mrs. Olive<sup>7</sup> (Cobb) Oliver, in the careful, painstaking labor of love she has rendered them by furnishing their several family records for this Winslow Memorial. The compilers of the work feel they, too, owe to Mrs. Oliver a debt of gratitude, and would here express their sincere appreciation of the assistance rendered them, and for the words of cheer and encouragement in their arduous labor.

"HATEVIL HALL, son of Hatevil and Mercy Cromwell), and grandson of Dea. John, born 1617, and, probably, Elizabeth (Layton) of Dover Neck, N. H., was born in Dover, N. H., February 15, 1708-9. He married SARAH FURBISH, of Kittery, April 1, 1733, and settled in Dover, N. H. On the 20th day of April, 1734, Daniel Field conveyed to Hatevil Hall, chair maker, ten acres of land situated on the westerly side of Back river. As the subject of this sketch was then twenty-seven years old, and recently married, it is supposed that the deed, which is a curiosity, was to him. March 20, 1752, John Twombly deeded to Hatevil Hall, twenty-three and one-third acres on the east side of Salmon Falls River, in the county of York, Province of Massachusetts Bay. About 1753, or a little later, he removed to Falmouth, where he evidently became something of a land-holder. October 27, 1772, he bought of his son Hatevil, one hundred acres of land in Windham, being lot No. 35, Second Division, adjoining Falmouth; in this deed he is called a 'farmer.' December 30, 1775, 'fifteenth year of his majesty's reign, he purchased for £60, of Jonathan Moulton, of Hampton, N. H., the whole of the proprietor's right in the common and undivided lands in the township of Falmouth, that belongs to the heirs and assigns of James Freeze; said lands being ten, thirty, and sixty acre lots belonging to said right, wherever they may be found in said common and undivided lands free from grants or layings out, together with the after divisions of said right.' September 15, 1774, he bought thirty-five acres of these undivided lands of Abraham Scales.

He was, by trade, a chair-maker, or turner, and a member of the Society of Friends, or Quakers, and was accustomed to speak at their meetings. He was a man of medium size, and both he and his worthy wife were remarkably open-hearted, generous and hospitable. They would never see any one suffer if they had power to relieve their [hizer] * wants. A characteristic incident is related of her: In a severe snow-storm in winter, she saw a little colored boy scantily clothed, passing with an ox-team. He was suffering intensely from cold and exposure. She called him into the house, warmed and fed him, clothed him in one of her own boy's warm overcoats and sent him on his way rejoicing. The boy in after years was wont to say, that Aunty Hall saved his life on that occasion.

In the spring before Mr. Hall's decease he was very sick and no one thought he could recover, but he told his friends that he should get smart enough to go to New Hampshire and bid his relatives their farewell. Singularly enough he did so, making the journey on horseback, and after visiting his relatives, returned, visiting some of his own children of the fifth generation, and died November 28, 1797, at the ripe age of ninety years, leaving 475 descendants. Sarah, his wife, died March 2, 1790.

* A Proposition.—In the English language there has long been felt the necessity of having a word to expres possession by a man or woman—a word implying a doubt or an alternative; a word implying possession by a man or by a woman, when either is included in the idea, and when it is doubtful or indeterminate whether he or she is the possessor.

A new pronoun for the Engli-h language; Nominative, hesh (he or she) (be pronounced is objective, himer (him or her) (be pronounced is in he; i as in his.

If this proposition for a new word is accepted, our grammarians will give the following as the list of the possessive adjective pronouns, viz.: my, thy, his her, hizer, our, your, their. [See Faruell Ancestral Memor. a/, p. 219.]

"He was the eldest son, and the first of the family that came to Falmouth. In February, 1752, at the age of twenty-one, with his axe and snow shoes, he left his father's homestead in Dover, in search of a farm and a home, and, part of the way by spotted trees, he reached Falmouth, where he selected a wild lot, now the residence of George Cobb, Esq., in Westbrook, erected a house, married, and returned to Dover, where he gave such a favorable report of Falmouth that his father and mother and the whole family of ten sons and three daughters soon followed; and at that day, when almost a wilderness, selected some of the very best land in Falmouth, Gorham, and Windham."

He was a man of large stature and great physical strength. The greater part of our information concerning this family was given us by Joseph-Blake<sup>8</sup> Hall, [11408].

From the Portland Advertiser, Jan. 8, 1870, we copy the following: "The venerable Simeon Hall passed away yesterday, at the ripe old age of 88 years and 8 months. The deceased was the oldest house-carpenter in this city, and there are many dwelling-houses standing which were erected by him in his earlier years. For a long series of years he has done nothing at his trade, having retired with a comfortable competence. A few years ago he met with an accident by which he was severely injured, from the effects of which he never fully recovered. The deceased was a man of most estimable character, and for more than half a century was a member of the Second Parish Church, having joined it under the ministry of Rev. Dr. Payson." He married, 29 Nov. 1804, Harriet Thrasher, b. 29 Feb. 1784, dau. of John and Judith (——). She died 22 Dec. 1823. 11343. RUTH<sup>5</sup>, [2044] (Job<sup>4</sup>, James<sup>3</sup>, Job<sup>2</sup>, Kenelm<sup>1</sup>,) d. 11 June, 1798; m. about 1754, Hatevil HALL, b. 24 Mar. 1736, Dover, N.H., s. of Hatevil and Sarah (Furbish) of D., and brother of Daniel Hall, who married Lorana<sup>5</sup> Winslow [11245].

He settled, we suppose, in Falmouth, but in 1772 he was living in Windham, for on the 27th of October of that year he sold his farm, Lot 35, 2d Division, adjoining Falmouth, to his father, for sixty-six pounds. The deed or conveyance is still in existence, in a mutilated condition, in the possession of Mrs. Sarah Gerrish of Portland. The given names of the signatures of both Hatevil and Ruth still remain. We suppose that he removed to Buckfield, Maine, soon after, although another account we have states that he was still living in Windham as late as 1773 or 74. But at some time he removed to Buckfield, thence to Brooks, where he died, May 10, 1804. After Ruth died, he married 2d, Ann Jenkins; (dates not reported).—Portland Monitor, Joseph-Blake<sup>8</sup> Hall, [11408] editor.

He married 2d, Nancy Murray. "He served in the Continental Army seven years, or during the war of the Revolution, and was neither wounded or sick during the whole time. He was noted for his wonderful activity and agility. It was a common remark in the army that Job Hall was too quick of motion for a ball to hit him. It is said of him that he could easily jump over a rope held as high as two tall men could reach."

"He enlisted in the Continental Army about 1780, from Windham, and served until the end of the war as a private. He settled in Buckfield, Maine, on the farm on which he spent his life, then almost a wild lot. He paid $500 for the land, and a yoke of oxen for the "improvements," which consisted of a log cabin and ten acres of 'felled trees.' During the spring of 1784, he 'cleared up' these ten acres, and raised, that scason, 200 bushels of corn, returning in the fall, after his wife. On his way he found the rivers and streams swollen by recent rains, and, as roads and bridges were unfashionable in those days, he experienced much difficulty in crossing them. In crossing one on a rude raft of drift wood bound together with withes, his frail craft came in pieces about midway over, and he was compelled to swim to the opposite shore. By this accident he lost his jacket and provisions, saving only his shirt and trousers which he wore, and two dollars in silver. He removed from Windham to Buckfield in November, 1784, transporting all his household goods, a bushel of salt, his wife and himself on the backs of two horses, arriving there on his twenty-first birthday. With the two dollars saved from his shipwreek, he bought two sheep, and wore a tow frock all winter. From the fleeces, his wife manufactured a piece of 'waled cloth' the next spring, and he enjoyed the luxury of a new suit of clothes. During the winter he went to Falmouth, now Portland, wearing his tow frock, with a team loaded with corn and beans, and from the proceeds purchased some tools and other necessary articles, including a 'five pail iron kettle.'

It may be here remarked, that it was one of the rules of his life never to buy anything he could not pay for at the time of purchase, a rule which may be profitably adopted by his descendants. In the spring of 1785, he and his wife made three hundred pounds of maple sugar and twelve gallous of molasses, boiling the sap in the new iron kettle in the cabin, and working day and night while the season lasted, taking turns sleeping and laboring. In the spring of 1786, he built a barn, covering it with long shingles made by himself. In these days of free schools, with all the advantages possessed by our children, we can hardly appreciate the limited means for education within the reach of the early settlers a hundred years ago. The only school ever attended by the subject of this sketch was taught in his own house, three weeks, by Elder D. Hutchinson, with himself and his eldest three children. Dolly, Ruth, and Abigail for pupils. Here he gained some knowledge of arithmetic and learned to write-but he was remarkable as a natural mathematician. With this small amount of aid, he educated himself, and became qualified for after years of useful ness and to instruct his younger children. In nine years from the time he moved into his log cabin he occupied a comfortable, framed house, and was in easy circumstances. For many years he was one of the selectmen of Buckfield, and served repeatedly in other town offices, and it is said of him, doubtless truly, that he exercised a remarkable influence among his townsmen, who seemed to consider his judgment and discretion almost infallible. He was several times sent to Boston as a member of the General Court, while Maine was a province of Massachusetts. He was a member of the Convention which framed the Constitution of Maine, in 1819-20, and represented his town in the first Legislature of Maine, in 1821. In the records of the proceedings of the Constitutional Convention, we find that when Section 5. was under consideration, on the 25th day of October, 1819. Mr. Hall, of Buckfield, moved to amend by striking out the whole of said section and to insert, in lieu thereof, the following (very sensible amendment): 'The militia, who are by law obliged to bear arms, shall have a reasonable compensation for their services.' This amendment, after considerable discussion, was lost by a vote of 74 yeas to 174 nays. He was emphatically a self-made man, possessing great mental powers. During the last few years of his life he suffered much from a singular disease of the stomach, literally starving to death."

Mr. Hall "settled in Hartford, Me., where he engaged in trade. He also owned an excellent farm and mills. In 1835 he represented his town in the Legislature. Was postmaster at Hartford many years and repeatedly elected Town Clerk, and to other town offices. Was one of the first in Maine to enlist in the great anti-slavery movement. A man of incorruptible integrity, of rare purity of heart and life, and of modest, retiring habits, he always enjoyed in an unusual degree the confidence and esteem of his fellow citizens. A kind and thoughtful husband, a just and affectionate father, and a firm, consistent friend; such he was and is. His wife, a very superior woman, was a fit companion for such a man—amiable, intelligent, and affectionate—a devoted wife and mother." In 1843 they removed to Aroostook;

Nathaniel, one of the earliest settlers of N.G., and Judith (Parsons) (Capt. Wm4., John3, John3, John3, Jeffrey1,) [See Memorial of Jeffrey1 Parsons]. He has had four military commissions, two of which were as Brigade Major and Brigade Inspector. Has also been town officer, innholder, teacher, and farmer. Maj. Eveleth.

during his long life, having had an excellent opportunity to note the distinguishing characteristics of Winslows and Parsons, we consider the following worthy of insertion.

"As my wife is a Winslow, and my mother and the wife of my great grandfather Eveleth were Parsons, I will give my private opinion of the two races.—I have often remarked that I thought Edward Winslow of the Mayflower was the most efficient business man of the company. If they wanted to explore the country, send Winslow as leader. If they wanted to make peace with the Indians, send Edward. If they wanted to raise money to keep the Colony from starving, send Winslow to England. Wherever you see Winslow blood fully developed you will find people of energy, tact, and perseverence, who will put their feet on the top round of the ladder, where duty or sympathy calls. I think the Parsons are greater scholars than the Winslows, but have no more common sense, and less business talent. They make good judges, ministers, teachers, deacons, etc. They are great on deacons. They like to write and plan, and find which side the bread is buttered, and to get over the brook without wetting their feet. We have a good many of these two names in this State, but not many Holtons or Farwells.

"I am most eighty-five years old; of course I shall not be here when your books are printed. I wish you would send me a paper that I may learn how you are getting along." Settled in New Gloucester.

We add the following letter, written by Mr. Gardiner to Gen. Winslow in response to a request for his military record:

EVANSVILLE, IND., June 6, 1873.

GEN. E.-F. WINSLOW, St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Sir: I enlisted in Co. B., 3d Maine Infantry, at Augusta, Me., April 22d, 1861, not being then quite eighteen years old. Col. O.-O. Howard was in command of the regiment, which was ordered to Washington the latter part of the following May, where it was incorporated into a brigade, with Howard for Brigadier-General, and ordered to the front, near Alexandria, Va., a few weeks afterwards.

I went into the first Bull Run battle, as private orderly to Gen. Howard, on foot, the government being short of horses, and with "side arms" only (a bayonet in its sheath and belt). At an early hour in the first day's engagement, I deserted my post—the General—took a musket as it dropped from the hands of a soldier shot dead in the first charge our regiment made, and kept his place in the ranks until the famous retreat. Gen. Howard, although a strict disciplinarian, overlooked my desertion of him, on learning that I had done good work.

In January, '62, the U.S. Signal Corps was organized from details of two officers and four men from each brigade in the Army of the Potomac, when I was detailed and ordered to the Camp of Instruction, Georgetown, D.C., which was in the charge of Gen. Myers, the present Chief Signal Officer.

At the end of three months instruction, I was ordered to join the "Army of the Shenandoah," then under command of Gen. N.-P. Banks, and was stationed at his head-quarters during the most of his campaign. Our party was afterwards assigned to the head-quarters of Generals Pope, Franklin, Burnside, McClellan, Hooker, Meade, Sedgewick, and Wright, taking active part in all the great battles in which those Generals participated in the "Army of the Potomac," such as first and second Bull Run, Antietam, South Mountain.

Gettysburg, first and second Fredericksburg or Chancellorsville, thence on toward Richmond as far as Cold Harbor, where I was discharged by reason of "expiration of term of service," on the fourth day of June, 1864, and on the second day of that battle.

April 8th, 1865.—Richmond still unconquered. I felt the old fervor of '61, and re-enlisted; was assigned to Co. C, Sixth Regiment of Hancock's Veteran Army Corps, "for one year, or during the war." Richmond fell, and the war ended before we were fairly organized, but being retained in service for "Camp and Garrison" duty for the year, I accepted an appointment in the office of the "Commissary of Musters," District of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, Pa., remaining there a few months until the Department was abolished, when I was ordered to Gen. Auger's head-quarters, Department of Washington, D.C., where I continued until the expiration of my term; was mustered out of service April 12, 1866. Of the fourteen young men with whom I enlisted in 1861, all but myself were promoted to commissioned offices of various grades from that of Lieutenant to that of Brigadier-General.

During the winter of 1862 and '63 the Signal Corps was incorporated in the regular army (by act of Congress) where no promotions are made from the ranks. As a member of the Corps I was afforded rare opportunities for the observation of whole armies in line of march and battle, and for a general knowledge of their plans, which was offered no other private soldier, and few officers. And though our signals always made us a target for the enemy's fire, we were not exposed to the severest hardships of the rank and file. That we had our share of danger is well illustrated in a poem written by (I think) George Alfred Townsend, for delivery on the occasion of the first anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg, wherein he speaks of the good done by us for the army on that terrible "Round Top," where I was stationed three long days.

Yours very truly.

H.-W. GARDINER.

Sarah, b. 10 mo., 14 d., 1820, Vassalboro, Me.; was married by Caleb Fuller, Augusta, Me., 13 May, 1838, to William-Harrison Wheeler, b. 13 Feb. 1817, Worcester, Worcester Co., Mass., s. of Reuben and Sally (Whitney) of Boston, Mass., and Bangor, Me. Mrs. Wheeler res. 1887, Pasadena, Cal.

The largest part of Mr. Wheeler's life was spent in Augusta. "He served a long and faithful apprenticeship as a printer in the office of the Kennebec Journal, continued his connection with the office for many years as journeyman, and became one of the proprietors in 1850, when Luther Severance, whom he succeeded as editor, retired from the paper to accept the mission to the Sandwich Islands. In June, 1853, Mr. W. sold his interest in the property to his partner, Wm.-H. Simpson, but remained as editor until 1854, when he went into business in Bangor as partner of John-H. Lynde, in the publication of the Bangor Daily Whig and Courier. Of this paper he was editor and joint proprietor from 1854 until the autumn of 1869, when he sold his interest to Mr. Lynde, and removed to Boston, where he was employed as one of the editors of the New England Farmer.

"The Bangor Whig and Courier, to which his riper powers and remarkable constancy were devoted for a period of fifteen years, was, under his management, continually advanced in public favor, and recognized everywhere as a journal whose editorials were sufficiently forceful, always practical, judicious, and high toned; and whose selections even were governed by scrupulous care and steady conscience."

"His views with regard to the duties and obligations of journalism were pure and lofty. He was thoroughly conscientious yet unobtrusive, gentle and amiable at all times, upright in his walk and catholic in spirit; was modest and retiring to a fault, otherwise he might have held high official position."—Boston Journal.

"William-Harrison Wheeler, Esq., for the past fifteen years one of the proprietors and the leading editor of the Bangor Whig, has sold his interest in the paper and terminated his editorial labors. His closing address to his patrons and the public is written in excellent taste and spirit, from which we clip the following:

""My retirement at this time is dictated by the demands of failing health and of failing eyesight, overtaxed as both have been by constant service in an editorial life of twenty-two years, and an active connection with the printing business of more than thirty-five years. The constantly increasing demands of a daily paper upon the energies and labors of its controlling director are more than I can longer meet with justice to myself, to the patrons of the paper, or to the requirements of duty to my family.

"'The political cause for which we have been called to labor, during the connection of the firm with the paper, is one in which my whole heart and my warmest feelings have been engaged; and I shall ever reflect with pride and pleasure, that I was permitted in some degree to aid in the advancement of that cause, and to witness, before I left, its glorious triumph. We commenced our connection with the Whig at a time coeval with the formation of the Republican party. We have witnessed its sure and rapid growth—its permanent establishment—first the restriction and then the abolishment of slavery, under its influence and action—and at length, as I trust, the full establishment of freedom and equal rights under its auspices. Its beneficent mission hereafter will be to defend and preserve those rights unimpaired, through the length and breadth of the republic, as long as an enemy remains to strike at their existence."

"Mr. Wheeler has been a very efficient, faithful, and useful servant of the public. He will be missed from the editorial fraternity in the State. As an advocate of Republican principles and measures his course has been signally commendable and successful. He has sought the growth, harmony, and usefulness of the Republican party. He has never given his influence to sectional prejudice or local factions. He has not made his columns the conduit of mischievous gossip or injurious calumny under the shield of "correspondence." Modest, firm, bold without being turbulent, he has been one of the best political editors Maine has ever had. We wish him peace, prosperity, and returning health in his retirement."—Belfast Journal.

Mr. Wheeler died at his residence in East Concord Street, Boston, of Bright's disease, 9 March, 1871. Fully prepared for the inevitable issue, he bore his allotted suffering with the fortitude becoming a man, and the resignation and trust of a Christian. Res. 11909. 8. GEN. EDWARD-FRANCIS, b. 9 mo., 28 d., 1837, Augusta, Me.; m. at Greensburg, Decatur Co., Ind., 9 mo., 24 d., 1860, Laura-Laseur Berry, b. 16 Dec. 1841, in Indiana, dau. of Rev. Lucien, D.D., and Adeline (Fay) of Greensburg.

Gen. Winslow enlisted in the service of his country for the perpetuation of the Union Sept. 1861, in the 4th Iowa Regt. of Cavalry Volunteers; was commissioned Captain of Co. F. of that Regiment, 23 Nov. 1861; was commissioned Major, 3 Jan. 1863; and Colonel, 20 June, 1863; was breveted Brigadier-General, 1 Dec. 1864. He was twice wounded, once at Big Blue River, Mo., 23 Oct. 1864; was mustered out of the service after the close of the war, 10 Aug. 1865, at Atlanta, Ga.

Since the war, Gen. Winslow has been much engaged in the railroad interests of the country, for which his genius, executive ability, and uprightness of character eminently fit him. He has been president of the St. Louis and S.E. Railroad Co., of the Atlantic and Pacific, St. Louis, and San Francisco R.R., the Cedar Rapids and Northern Roads, director and president of the New York, Ontario, and Western R.R., and, 1887, is president of the St. Louis and San Francisco Railway Co. See appendix. 1887, Office 15 Broad St. Res. New York City.

Belfast, Me., æ. 97 years, 8 months, and 14 days; m. Falmouth, 9 mo., 29 d., 1806, Sally Clark; m. 2d, Belfast, Me., 10 mo., 13 d., 1837, Fanny Joy. Mr. Winslow lived to see the United States grow from less than 3,000,000 inhabitants to a powerful nation of 50,000,000 people. In 1804, he was a voter and deposited his ballot at the Presidential election of that year, and at every subsequent Presidential election. Originally a Federalist, Whig, and Republican, he remained true to that faith until the last year of his life, voting then for Gen. Hancock. He married, and lived in Portland a number of years. While a resident of that city he superintended the erection of the old Observatory on Munjoy Hill. In 1812, he moved to Belfast from Kennebec County and settled upon the east side of the harbor, near Goose River. That was before the western side of the river, where the city now stands, was settled. He subsequently removed to the west side. Mr. Winslow was a member of Capt. Swan's company in the war of 1812, and was one of the party who, through strategy, rescued the powder on Wilson's Hill, while Belfast was in the hands of the British. He was a carpenter by trade, a superior workman, and erected many of the earlier buildings in Belfast. In 1832 he was one of the number who erected there the old Methodist church at the corner of Miller and Cross streets; was a devout Methodist through life and was buried from that church, in Belfast. He was never prominent in public affairs, but applied himself strictly to his calling, in which he won great reputation. Farmer and carpenter.

He removed to Pittston in 1783; was a tanner by occupation. When Gardiner was separated from Pittston he was a resident of the former. "The money raised for the support of the Gospel at this time, 1803, was, by a vote of the town, appropriated to the support of the Episcopal mode of worship, but those who attended public worship at the Methodist or Baptist meetings were allowed to direct their proportion of the amount raised. Ichabod Plaisted was chosen to lay out the proportion claimed by the Methodists, and James Lord and Abraham Cleaves that claimed by the Baptists."—Hist. of Gardiner and Pittston, p. 200.

The following was copied from his grave-stone: "Ichabod Plaisted, son of Charity and Ichabod Plaisted, was born in Gardiner, March 31, 1796. At the age of 17 he formed a purpose of pursuing a course of collegiate study. This purpose he prosecuted with marked decision of character and amid many embarrassments. He was graduated at Bowdoin College in the autumn of 1821. A few months after leaving college he went to Charleston, S.C., intending there to prepare himself for the practice of the law and ultimately settle in that section of the Union. While there, God severely afflicted him with the entire loss of his sight, but the affliction proved a blessing. His earthly hope being blasted he was induced to seek a better inheritance. Soon after this there was a manifest change in his feelings. He devoted himself to the service of the Lord in the work of the ministry and pursued his theological studies at Andover, Mass. He left the seminary in that place in the fall of 1826, and was soon settled in Rochester, Mass., over a people that had long been destitute of the stated ordinances of religion. He labored there with pleasing prospects and success until near the close of 1830, when he became so much enfeebled by disease that he was compelled to desist. He returned to the paternal mansion in May, 1831, exhausted by sickness and the journey, and in a few weeks expired. He approached the grave with Christian fortitude and composure, sustained by the precious hope of that gospel he had preached to others."

WINSLOW

I would not live alway

Job-vii, 16.

Mr. Winslow had a commission as sergeant of the infantry company of Pittston, in 1789, and as clerk, in 1792; was also juryman in some of the earliest courts in Kennebec County, and held some offices in the town; was surveyor of lumber forty years or more, and a carpenter and farmer. For additional facts concerning him see record of his father [2358].

Pittston, Me.

Their only child:

12388. ELIZABETH, [12389] b. 30 Nov. 1791; d. 18 Apr. 1854; m. Amos Lyon.

*Mr. Lyon, (father of Eliab) came from England and settled in Walpole, Mass. He had several sons, of whom one lived in Walpole, Mass., and another in Connecticut, where he has many descendants, General Lyon being one of them. There was a son Isaiah, who took an active part in defending the early settlers from the attacks of the Indians. While at the head of a skirmishing party, he and five others were taken prisoners and killed. His death was such a matter of rejoicing to the Indians that they exhibited his head upon a pole in the presence of the whites, and had a war-dance around it. Eliab, another son, married Maria Smith, who also died about 1816. They moved from Walpole, Mass., to Readfield, in the Spring of 1777; landed at a place now known as Shepherd's wharf, in the city of Hallowell, where then only one house was standing; went west seven

June, 1860, R., and was buried there. He is said to have remembered hearing the report of the cannon at the time of the battle of Bunker Hill. He married his first wife, Mary Prescott, in Readfield, of which town she was a native, and where she died. They had two children, Amos and Nancy, both of whom died young. [See 12756].

writes as follows: In a prominent place in Pittston, Me., is my grandfather's and my burying lot and family monument, where are buried my grand-parents, my mother Elizabeth Lyon, my wife Hannah, and infant daughter Mary-Lizzie; also my niece Isabel Gordon.

I lived in Readfield, Me., with my father, till I was seventeen years of age, then went to Pittston, Me., and resided with my grand-parents, Jonathan<sup>5</sup> and Hannah Winslow [12387], and had their property when they had paid the debt of nature. In January, 1869, after I had lost my mother, wife, and child, I removed to Minnesota, as both my brothers were there. Here I shall probably spend the remainder of my days. In 1873, he was a farmer in Hastings, Minnesota.

"The decision in favor of the American heirs in the famous Chase will case has excited much interest. The estate, which is valued at the modest sum of $260,000,000, is located at Leicestershire, England, and the property comes to the heirs in succession, several of whom live in Chicago and Alton. Among the number are J.-H.-B. Henderson, of 1322 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, the heirs of the late General T .- S. Rutherford; and Mrs. D .- C .- M. Smith of Alton. The English heirs had heretofore obtained their full interest, and the latter decision perfects the title of the American heirs. The estate came first from Sir Townley of Townley Hall, Lancastershire. Sir Townley had one son, who afterwards married, and also left a male child. The latter took unto himself a wife, and upon his death he willed the entire property to his sister Mary and her heirs. The latter married Chase, and four sons-Richard, Thomas, William, and Aquila-were the result of the union. Richard remained in England, but the other three came to America about the year 1629. Aquila settled in the vicinity of Newburyport, Massachusetts; Thomas in Rhode Island, and William in Yarmouth, Massachusetts. The amount originally bequeathed was $385,000,000, of which one-fourth was distributed to the heirs of Richard, in England, and the remaining three-fourths, by the late decision, is to be distributed among the American heirs." The following account of their removal to Minnesota was given by William<sup>7</sup> [12406]: "They resided in Plymouth, Maine, twelve years; moved to Minnesota in the spring of 1851. Otis, their eldest child, died at or near Galena, while on their journey; was carried to St. Paul, Minn., and there buried. Eulalie, a beautiful and interesting babe, died on reaching St. Paul, and was buried in the same grave with her brother. My brother James was also very sick. . . . They had to wait at Galena three days for a boat, and were all taken sick there . . . entirely among strangers, but they were not strangers in sympathy and kindness. brother lived about two years in St. Paul, then went to Hastings and made a claim of 160 acres, which is now partly in the city limits. Returned to St. Paul, and went to work in a saw-mill, taking his pay in lumber. He had all the material of a house framed, the timbers being ready to put together, and made a raft of them in a little cove just below Dayton's Bluff;—took aboard his wife and little ones, together with his furniture and all he possessed in this world, including a cow and calf, a cat and cooking-stove, and shoved off, he being skipper and his wife mate and cook. They had a pleasant voyage, and hauled up and tied to a rock at what is now Hastings Landing, but which then belonged to the Sioux Indians. They made a shelter of the lumber till he could move it to his claim, one and a quarter miles distant. Much of the lumber he dragged from the Mississippi to his claim by hand, and there he built what they called a house. He still resides on his claim." Farmer.

Their only child:

"Notice to Mariners.—We have received the following communication from Captain George Winslow, which confirms the statement contained in a letter received at Lloyd's, and published in the Atlas of 31 ultimo.

" Messis. Hayden & Brown.

""Dear Sirs: In a paper of yours, dated January 31, I noticed a communication received at Lloyd's from Captain Roallons of the Eagle, giving an account of a rock seen by him on his passage from Hamburg to Newfoundland, which, he says, lies in lat. 47. 37 n., lon. 28. 51 w.; that it formed three distinct points, the highest to the westward appearing eighty feet high.

"'This rock is by most mariners considered of doubtful existence. It is laid down on the chart of the Atlantic, in nearly the same position that Captain Roallons makes it, and called the Three Chimneys. I would further state that in 1819, on my passage in the ship Susan, from Gottenburg to Boston, I passed very near, say one-fourth of a mile from this rock, that it formed three points; the highest and westermost one seventy to eighty feet, the others from thirty to forty feet above the level of the sea. There were no breakers to be seen around them.

"'This rock is not in the track of ships bound to and from Europe; but those coming from the North Sea, and having strong westerly winds to contend with, would be likely to gain the longitude of it by the time they reached its latitude.

GEORGE WINSLOW."

In Malden, Mr. Winslow soon became identified with the interests of the town, but invariably declined public office. He was, however, induced to accept the appointment from Govornor Briggs as state commissioner under an act in addition to an act incorporating the proprietors of Malden bridge. A brief extract from an article written by his minister, Rev. John-G. Adams, will convoy to the readers the esteem in which he was held by the town of his adoption.

"Nine months ago our friend left his home for California, taken there by business and a desire to meet his only son, who had been absent from home some years, and who had crossed the Pacific from China to take up his residence in the new land of success and failure. His death is an affliction to us all: to the town, to the neighborhood in which he lived, to our church, to his dear family, and to many other families and friends. He had resided here more than twenty years. He was one of our most efficient citizens. His retiring from business was not retiring from active life. He was still the busy man, taking care of what he had accumulated, and doing good with it. His generous-heartedness was proverbial. On many an occasion has it been evinced to his credit, and to the credit of us all. His good taste, his love of order, his prudence as well as liberality in expenditure, his integrity and honesty, are all but so many other commendations of his character as a public citizen. In these respects he has left the good impression of himself in many ways, in many a mind. He was one of the most able, faithful, and steadfast friends of our society.

"There are those here who have known him longer than myself, who, when aid has been most needed in times of past trial and exertion, have known most his liberality. It was constant and unchanging. His friendships were many and highly valued. Fresh and fragrant will be the rememberance of him in many hearts."

He married in Malden, Mass., 13 Feb. 1821, Elizabeth Reid, b. 13 July 1799, Boston, who removed to Malden in her first year. She was dau. of Robert of M., who was born at Sandy, one of the islands of Scotland, and his wife Catherine (Dunker). She d. 27 Oct. 1873, Everett, Mass. Res. Pittston, and Wiscassett, Me., and Malden, now Everett, Mass.

Children born in Malden:

- 12457. 1. George-Reid, b. 30 Oct. 1821; d. 24 Apr. 1856, Callao, Peru, South America. He engaged in mercantile pursuits, and passed much of his time during the last twenty years of his life in China and California. In 1846, he, with others, engaged in the development of the tin-mining interest of Borneo. In 1853, business called him to South America, where, on the eve of his return to the United States, he was prostrated by a fatal fever.
- 12458. 2. Catherine-Elizabeth, b. 2 May, 1832; m. by Rev. George-E. Ellis, D.D., at Harvard Church, Charlestown, Mass., 29 Oct. 1861, to David-Oakes Clark, b. 1 Dec. 1826, Cambridge, Mass., s. of Cyrus, born in 1788, Amherst, N.H., d. 2 Apr. 1835, Cambridge, and Tabitha (Oakes), born in Malden; d. 21 Oct. 1866, Boston. In 1848, Mr. Clark sailed from Boston to Shanghae, and there became a clerk for the firm of Wolcott, Bates & Co., remaining with them four years, when he entered the employ of Russell & Co., of that place, being with them in the capacity of clerk eight years, and as partner nine years. In 1852 he went from Shanghae to San Francisco, as supercargo, returning to S. in 1853; was located at Foo Chow three years; in 1856 returned to Shanghae, and in February, 1857, to Bangkok, Siam, where he established an agency for the firm. December, 1859, went to Hong Kong, and, in July of the following year, to Foo Chow, where he remained till May, 1861, when he visited America, was married, and in February, 1862, accompanied by his wife, went back to Foo Chow. He returned to Boston, 1867, but continued a partner in the business till December, 1869, when he retired from the firm.

He represented the U.S. Government at Foo Chow (Foo-Chow-Foo) as consular agent from 1854 to 1856. Held the appointment of Swedish and Norwegian Consul at Bangkok, Siam, from 1857 to 1860, and represented the same government at Foo Chow from 1861 to 1867.

—[See A Residence Among the Chinese, by Robert Fortune, pp. 219-20.

Mr. Clark died at "Reidhurst," the family mansion, in Milton, 18 December, 1883. During his residence in Siam he "acquired influence among the natives, and particularly with the second king, the executive of the kingdom, who constantly consulted him about foreign affairs. His name is still well remembered there. In China, also, he was well known and highly respected at the Treaty Ports, both because of his effective business talents and his admirable disposition and character. His justice and invariable consideration for all with whom he had dealings brought him the regard and confidence of the Chinese to an unusual degree. His perfect honesty and uprightness made him an involuntary and unconscious missionary in the land.

"He lived in Milton about fifteen years, making friends wherever he went by his amiable, affectionate disposition, his considerate regard for others, and the transparent purity of his life and character. man was better fitted to create and to enjoy a happy home or to fill and surround it with all that can make a home what it should be. In the expression of his face and the tones of his voice there was a sweetness which told of a kindly, affectionate nature; while his conversation and personal bearing, however modest and unassuming, gave tokens of unusual intelligence and strength of character. These qualities ran through his whole life, gaining for him, in addition to business success, the richer satisfactions of conscious integrity and a loving heart; while they secured for him the confidence and friendship of those whose sympathy and friendship should be dearest to him. For more than four months he faced death with a touching and beautiful serenity, knowing that it must soon come, and died at last in a moment, without painful warning, as a good man might wish to die."—Extract from Obituary—by J.H.M.

Mr. Winslow's early life was spent on his father's farm, receiving such education only as could be obtained in the common schools of the country some thirty or forty years ago. In 1860-61 he read law with P.-W. Jenks of Punxsutawney, and after his admission to the bar of Jefferson Co., Pa., entered into a partnership with him, which continued for eighteen years. Since 1880 his legal firm has been Winslow & Calderwood. In 1884 he was elected to the State Senate of Pennsylvania and represented the 37th senatorial district, composed of Indiana and Jefferson Counties, for the years 1885 and 1886. His legal career has been a very successful one. Attorney-at-law and banker.

May 1, 1799, the first company of militia was organized in that section of country, which was afterwards called Industry, and Rev. John Thompson was appointed captain. Kneeling before his company on the snow, then two feet deep, he made a fervent prayer, commending his men to Almighty God, and entreating that he might have wisdom and discretion given him for the performance of his duties. He served in this capacity several years. He is remembered as a very benevolent man. On one occasion, repeating the text, "He that hath two coats let him impart to him that hath none," he handed his overcoat (which was a new one and the handwork of his wife from the wool) to a very poor man who was thinly clad and shivering with the cold.

In 1824 he was representative to Boston from Industry. "When this town was about being incorporated, Mr. Thompson said to his wife as he was leaving home:

'What shall we call the new town?' 'Name it for the character of the people,' was the reply—'call it Industry.' He proposed the name, and it was accepted." [Hist. of Gardiner and Pittston, p. 66.] He was a member of the State Senate during its first session in Portland. Minister and farmer. In 1873 we were referred to Miss Mary Thompson, of Augusta, Me., and to J. Thompson, of Philadelphia, Pa., as descendants of Rev. John Thompson.

During one winter the French forces were quartered at Newport, and while there Gen. Rousmaniere married Ann Davenport of N., b. 1760, a famous beauty in her time. After the conclusion of the war the General went back to France with his troops, and resigned his position with the intention of making America his home. He was on his way to the Colonies when he died in England.

One of Mr. Winslow's grandchildren gives us this account of him: "He went to Rhode Island, at the age of eleven, to learn the blacksmith's trade. He afterward engaged in different pursuits, fighting his way through many difficulties which would have disheartened any one of less determined energy. He used to speak often of his mother, saying among other things, that he gave to her the first dollar he earned. In those tough old revolutionary times dollars were scarce. Tears came in the good old father's eyes as he told this."

Winslow, son of Mr. Andrew Winslow, in the 23d year of his age. Seldom has the shaft of death swept one from our midst more universally beloved than the subject of this notice. Bland in his manners, upright in his deportment, and virtuous in all his walks of life, he had a character which will long be remembered by his numerous friends and associates. His intellectual endowments were of a superior cast, and he promised to be an ornament to society. In the midst of various occupations, he had found leisure to cultivate a mind naturally acute, by extensive reading, and, possessing a disposition amiable and engaging, he had acquired the friendship and esteem of all who knew him. There is now in the possession of the family a lecture delivered by him before the Atheneum at Newport, of which he was an active and efficient member. The subject of this lecture is well handled, and shows deep thought and study through its entire course."

city great excitement prevailed among the people, and many of the staid old Friends, or Quakers, had to set forth their most earnest protests to prevent the excited portion of the community from visiting their wrath and indignation on the cruel Captain Reed, who so unnecessarily ordered the young man back to his ship at midnight, in the face of a winter storm, when he could almost see the fireside of his own home. Out he went into the darkness, obeying the orders of his captain, which nearly cost him his life and that of those who with him had volunteered to bring their inhuman commander to the shore. Those were the days when sailors were made-men who were brought up to obey orders; and obey them they did at all hazards. Our grand merchant marine before the war, which was the pride of the whole nation, was brought to its glory by such men as these. On the arrival of the pilot boat with Mr. Winslow and the boat's crew, they were transferred to his grandfather's house, on the southeast corner of Union and Sixth Streets, where the entire crew of the boat were nursed by his relatives until they recovered. Dr. S.-P. Winslow, the father of Mr. Winslow, amputated several limbs in consequence of their being frozen. At this time it was thought that Mr. Winslow would escape serious results, but in the course of ten days gangrene set in, from frost bite, and the toes of his right foot had to be amputated. What could have been the feelings of that father when he plunged the knife into his own son's flesh, knowing that all this pain and suffering was unnecessarily incurred by a wretch clothed with a little brief authority? Through all his life the respect for him which was engendered by this episode continually increased. He was a true type of the master mariner, conscientious and honest, which made New England foremost in its commerce, and whose ships carried the flag into every country and port of the world. This class of men is fast passing away."

In 1838 Capt. W. moved to Smith's Mills Village (North Dartmouth), and in 1844 to New Bedford. Res. 1870, New Bedford, Mass.

1. Henry-Alden, b. 10 Feb. 1835, Dartmouth, Mass., head of Apponagansett River; was killed by the Sioux Indians, near Bannock, Montana; fall of 1867. "At the age of twenty-one he went as one of the boat-steerers of the whaling barque Harvest, which left in 1854 and returned fifty months afterward, having caught during the voyage 1,900 bbls. sperm oil. He continued in the whaling business until the commencement of the war of the rebellion, his last voyage having been made in the Pacific Ocean as mate of the barque President. At the breaking out of the war he joined the naval service and was ordered to the Mississippi squadron, then under the command of Admiral Foote, and participated in the engagements of Island No. 10, Memphis, and Fort Donaldson. While attached to the steamer Mound City, during the engagement with the Rebel ram Arkansas, he was wounded in the right foot by the recoil of a 9-inch gun carriage. He was transferred to the Mound City Naval Hospital, and after his recovery, 15 Nov. 1863, was appointed a mate in the navy of the United States, and ordered to report for duty on board the U.S. steamer Fah Kee, of the North Atlantic squadron. He served on board this steamer the whole term of her commission, a part of which time she was employed as flag-ship of the squadron under Rear-Admiral S.-P. Lee, U.S.N. He was promoted to ensign, and commissioned October 31st, 1864. After the conclusion of the war his vessel was ordered to convoy the fleet of monitors to Havana and Matanzas, Cuba. On the return of this squadron to the United States, affairs had become settled, and Government deemed it advisable to sell vessels and diminish our number of officers. received an honorable discharge from the U.S. navy on the 28th day of August, 1866. He soon after entered the employ of the Montana Mineral Mining and Lode Co. of Virginia City, to transport a large crushing mill across the plains, from Atchison, Kansas, the terminus of all railroad communication. It was impossible to transport such heavy machinery over the Rocky Mountains from the West at that time. With his ox teams he cut aloof from civilization and travelled 1,785 miles, finding his way and location by the same sextant which he had previously used in navigating his ship in various parts of the world. His military training and experience came into practice and insured the success of the expedition, traveling, as compelled to do, through hundreds of miles of hostile territory, occupied by the Sioux Indians. On the completion of this duty, and while employed by the same company, an Indian came into camp and exhibited a quantity of gold dust in a bag. He stated that the place of the find was about sixty miles north of Bannock. The Indian was employed as a guide and paid for the information. Captain Winslow, with a well-appointed train, and what was considered to be a sufficiently-armed guard, started off on the prospect. They were conducted into an ambuscade or canon, and every person comprising the expedition massacred. Before relief could be obtained the Sioux had made off with the entire camp fixings and equipage.

Having passed so creditably through the war of the rebellion, this seemed a sad ending of one so brave, handsome, and genial." 2. George-Frederic, M.D., b. 8 May, 1842, Smith's Mills, North Dartmouth, Bristol Co., Mass. When he was three years of age his parents moved to New Bedford, Mass., where he was educated and fitted for Harvard College, at the Friends' Academy. In May, 1860, he commenced the study of medicine with Dr. C.-D. Stickney of New Bedford [see 2795], and in June, 1863, received the degree of M.D. at the Harvard Med. College. On the 26th day of July, 1862, he was appointed an assistant surgeon in the navy of the United States, and was ordered to duty with the James River flotilla, commanded by Capt. Wilkes; remained in the division of the North Atlantic squadron, which acted as support to the Army of the Potomac, until the fall of Richmond. At both attacks on Fort Fisher he was surgeon of the U.S. steamer Osceola, which vessel was the first to carry the stars and stripes into Cape Fear River, after the reduction of that stronghold; was promoted on the 28th day of June, 1867; served two years on frigate Sabine, and was afterwards surgeon of the U.S. s. Wateree, of the Pacific squadron. He was attached to that steamer at the time of the terrible earthquake at Arica, Peru, on the 13th of August, 1868, and received a vote of thanks from the Peruvian Congress for his philanthropic conduct to the sufferers. Dr. Winslow was surgeon of the U.S. steam frigate Powhattan, and made his last cruise in that vessel, which received on board and took care of the crew of a wreeked English steamer, off Cape Horn, in the winter of 1869. The thanks of the British Government were transmitted to him by the English Minister at Washington, for services rendered to distressed scamen. In 1870 he was on duty at the Boston Navy Yard, and in 1871 was surgeon U.S.N. on U.S. flagship Wabash, European squadron; 1887, attached to U.S. steel cruiser Atlanta.

- 1. Capt. Joseph-Franklin', b. 6 Oct. 1826; d. in the early part of the year 1873; m. Myra Thayer of New Bedford, Mass. In the New Bedford Standard we find the following: "Capt. Joseph-F. Dodge, who was found dead in the harbor of San Francisco on 3d inst., was a son of Mrs. Dodge who formerly kept the Mariners' Home in this city, and who afterward had a boarding-house near the foot of Elm Street. He formerly went whaling from this port, and on his last voyage was an officer on board ship Julian, returning as master. He afterward sailed in merchant vessels, and at the time of his death was a shipkeeper at the port of San Francisco. His body was found standing erect, up to the waist in mud, near one of the wharves, and as it was considerably decomposed, it had probably been in the water since he was missed, on 19th ult. Foul play is suspected. Capt. Dodge had no family, and was about 48 years of age."

Remember Farrar of Hingham; 3. Benjamin. John was father of John who m. Lydia Williams before mentioned.] Job Terry and wife were accustomed to attend religious services with the Christian Baptist denomination in Freetown, and ministers of that persuasion used frequently, when traveling, to put up at their house. It is traditionally related of them that one of these ministers was for a time keeping his horse in their barn, but furnishing his own hay, one of the mows or hay lofts being assigned to the preacher whereon to put his fodder. All went well until they began to mistrust that the minister, when feeding his horse (in the evening, as it was common for him to do) used their hay, when "Aunt Becky," as she was called, had recourse to the following expedient: Taking a pack of playing cards she went to the barn, and while pretending to seek for some hen that had stolen a nest, scattered the cards in their own hay. That evening the minister fed his horse some time after dark, and on going out the next morning several of the cards were found in that horse's manger, when "Uncle Job" said to the minister: "I have room enough here for your horse to stand, and plenty of room to keep the hay for him, but I can't have him here any longer, for he's got to playing cards, and I think that's wicked."

WINSLOW MEMORIAL.

APPENDIX.

References to the old town of Winslow, are found in "Magna Britannia, being a concise account of the several counties of Great Britain; by the Rev. Daniel Lyssons and Samuel Lyssons, Esq. London: 1813—" as follows:

Vol. I. Buckinghamshire:

In the survey of Doomsday Book is recorded the Manor of Weneslai in the hundred of Mureslai, the same which subsequently received the appellation of Winslow.

In 1377 Winslow contained 11 uninhabited houses, 219 inhabited houses, 338 families, and 1,401 inhabitants.

Part III, page 667:

Winslow, in the hundred of Cotslow and deanery of Muresley, is a market town about fifty miles from London, on the road to Buckingham. The market was granted in 1235 to the abbot and convent of St. Albans, to whom the manor had been given by King Offa. In 1599 the Manor of Winslow was granted to Sir John Fortescue, who in 1619 sold it to Sir George Villiers, afterwards Duke of Buckingham; it was purchased in 1697, under an act of Parliament, of the representatives of the second duke, by William Lowndes, Esq., Secretary of the Treasury, and is now (1813) the property of his great grandson, William Selby, Esq., who took that name on succeeding to the estates bequeathed to him by the late —— Selby, Esq. Mr. Selby has a seat at Winslow, which was built by Secretary Lowndes in the year 1700.

Richard Winslow of Lewknor had four daughters, one of whom was Margaret, who married Francis Bernard, rector of Codford in Wiltshire, and afterward of Brightwell in Berkshire. Besides being rector he was justice of the peace. He d. 1715, leaving a daughter Jane (who m. Wm. Beresford, Esq., and d. s.p., leaving a fortune, etc., inherited from Mary, sister of Francis Tyringham, Esq., who d. 1733), and son Francis Bernard, of whom much is said, and some of whose sons were officers in American wars. In February, 1758, Sir Francis Bernard was appointed Governor of New Jersey, and from January, 1760, to 1770, was Governor of Mass. Bay.—Playfair's Brit. Antiq., pp. 116-117, Vol. VII.

From Visits to Fields of Battles in England of the Fifteenth Century; by Richard Brooke, Esq., F.S.A., 1857:

The parish of Wilmslow (anciently called Le Bloyn) contains four townships, has a parish church, church yard, and a small plot of land, now covered with buildings. The list of rectors from 1339 to 1814, and quite a history of the place are given—pp. 254 to 266. . . . The village of Wilmslow in the hundred of Macclesfield in Cheshire is on the mail coach road from Manchester to Birmingham.

August 2, Col. Thomas Winslow, at Tipperary, in Ireland, aged 146 years. He was a Captain in the reign of King Charles I, and went over to Ireland with Oliver

Cronwell in the rank of Lieut. Colonel.—[Copied from the Gentleman's Magazine of 1766, from a list of deaths which had occurred that year, and furnished by Rev. Octavius Winslow, D.D., incumbent of Emmanuel Church, Brighton, Eng.]

Thomas Winslow in 1641 was serving with Capt. Creighton (ancestor of the present Earl of Erne) at the siege of Crum Castle, at the battles of Newtown, Butler, and Bally Shannon. He obtained a grant of land near Crum Castle, Derranore. —Playfair's Brit. Antiq., Vol. IV, p. 411.

In 1642 we find in the History of the Rebellion, written by Dr. Maxwell, Bishop of Kilmore, Thomas Winslow giving information on oath, etc.

The following entertaining narrative, by Hon. John Winslow, relating to the early home of the immigrant Winslows, supplies a needed link between the partially known past and present history of their birth place, which will doubtless be greatly appreciated by their descendants:

THE ANCESTRAL HOME OF THE WINSLOWS.

A VISIT TO DROITWICH, WORCESTERSHIRE, ENGLAND.

In August, 1887, when in England, I visited Droitwich in Worcestershire. A proper reverence for the ancestral home of the Winslows before their departure for Plymouth would be a sufficient reason for such a visit. On my way from London I stopped for a while in Worcester, visiting there historic ground. The battle of Worcester, in which King Charles I led his forces against Cromwell's army, and met defeat, makes that city famous. The beautiful cathedral there, now in good repair, in which are the remains of King John and other persons of note, attracts the traveler. The porcelain works have a wide reputation for producing the best of wares. Droitwich is only six miles from Worcester, and is easily reached by rail.

I had heard that the record showing the births and baptisms of the pilgrim Winslows could be found in St. Peter's Church, and was therefore eager to verify the statement. On reaching Droitwich, I called on the vicar of the parish and told him of my errand. He very kindly opened the old church, and we were soon turning over musty parchments in search of the interesting record. We found it in good condition. It reads as noted on page 23, Vol. I, Winslow Memorial.

I confess that while reading this record I had a feeling that I was nearer, in spirit, to the old family than ever before. It gave me a sense of verity and authenticity touching ancestral history. There I was in the church in which they were baptized in their infancy, and in which they worshipped as the years went on. I speak of the original structure which served as a nucleus to what has been added. The beginning was a Saxon church, to which, in the time of the Conqueror, was added a Norman church, which in its style is similar to the lines in the crypt of the Worcester Cathedral.

It will thus be seen that in the year 1600 the church in which our Winslow ancestors were baptized was then some 200 years old. Archdeacon Lea, until recently vicar of the parish, is authority for the statement that in the reign of King John, the Saxon nave disappeared, and was replaced by one of stone masonry; also, that in the reign of Edward I a south transept was erected, and in Edward III's time a corresponding north transcpt was added, and several of the Norman windows replaced by decorated ones. In Henry VII's reign the tower was rebuilt in part, and a fine perpendicular window placed in the west end. In later years other changes were made to repair the mutilations of time. In 1825 the present fine porch of Brosely brick was substituted for the porch of the date of Edward III, and several internal improvements were also made. In 1853 the church was thoroughly restored, a new stained glass window was placed in it, and an old gallery was taken out, and the tower thrown into the church.

Some curious encaustic bricks were discovered during the alterations; these were collected and placed round the font. There are three bells with inscriptions. In the registers of the parish, which are remarkably kept, among other curious notices we find the following: "Jan. 20, 1627, Henry Davis, the Tuth drawer, was buried." There is also in the church a monument of interest, consisting of a full length effigy of Sargeant Wilde, who died in 1815. Both the east and west windows are of stained glass, as is also one on the north side of the nave, lately presented by Archdeacon Lea. The walls are illuminated with texts, and over the chancel arch are the ten commandments, the credo, and the Lord's prayer. The present population of the parish is about nine hundred.

A grave yard surrounds the church. The chief industry of Droitwich is the manufacture of salt. It is said that the Romans first began to develop the salt mines, and had camps and baths there, and that they called the town Salinæ. How it got the name of Droitwich can only be conjectured. [See page 22 of Introduction.]

That the Romans occupied Droitwich is proved by the coins and Samian pottery which have been discovered there, and which may be seen in the rooms of the Natural History Society at Worcester. In the Norman period the salt manufacture had made great progress. In the reign of Henry VIII there was a learned antiquarian whose name was Leland, and who drew the first picture of Droitwich, which is quaint, and with some reservations describes the Droitwich of to-day. It is said that Edward Winslow, whose sons came to Plymouth, was a proprietor of the salt mines. In the great controversy between Charles 1 and the Commons, Droitwich was the centre of the internecine strife. Both Droitwich and Worcester espoused the royal cause. The king addressed a complimentary letter to the gentry free-holders and other inhabitants of Droitwich for their loyal services.

The famous battle of Worcester, whose guns were doubtless heard in Droitwich, must have stirred that old town of salt. When the royal cause was there defeated, the Puritans asserted their supremacy both there and at Droitwich. Sargeant Wilde, whose effigy has been referred to, was a native of Droitwich, and Lord Chief Baron of Exchequer to Cromwell. It is said that his ghost haunted Droitwich for years after his death. Droitwich was represented in all the parliaments of Edward I, and in the second and fourth of Edward II. At present it is represented by one member.

Let me refer a little further to the salt mines. The brine is pumped up by powerful engines from subterraneous rivers, some about 100 feet below the surface of the earth. It is clear and sparkling, and free from unpleasant odors of sea water when affected by decomposition. Analysis shows that it is twelve times stronger than ocean water, and every gallon of brine contains 20,000 grains of solid saline material in excess of what is contained in a similar quantity of any other known water. When taking a bath in the fine St. Andrews bathing establishment, 12th

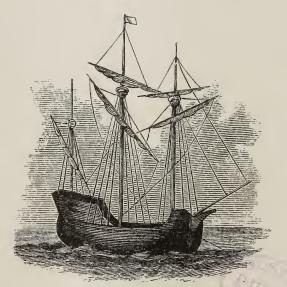

August, 1887, I was convinced of the great power of the brine, for I found it difficult to keep under it while bathing, without the aid of a mechanical contrivance. Much is claimed for the sanitary qualities of the Droitwich salt baths. Experienced bathers say the water is soothing, and that one feels agreeable sensations after bathing, through its rapid action on the skin, which it renders soft and pliable, causing equal circulation over the whole body. As I took but one bath, and was not an invalid, my certificate of its healing qualities in cases of gout, rheumatism, and nervous prostration would not be valuable, but those who have tried both the English and continental spas declare that the Droitwich water has done them more good than all others. The testimonials to this effect are explicit and emphatic. Desiring to get as near my ancestors as I could, I brought home with me a bottle of fine table salt, the product of the Droitwich mines. In 1873 a company, whose leader was Lord Hampton, erected a fine bathing establishment, which has baths of three different classes, besides a fine swimming bath, Turkish bath, sitz bath, hot and cold brine sprays, and douches. They are substantial and fitted with every necessary comfort, as is St. Andrew's, which was built by Mr. John Corbett, as was Salter's Hall opposite. Mr. Corbett is a member of Parliament, an enterprising man, and owns a large part of the town.

The walks and drives in and about Droitwich are attractive. It is a rolling country and has some fine scenery. The favorite drive is to Westwood Park, the property of Lord Hampton's estate. The Raven is a well built and well kept hotel, near St. Andrew's baths.

As already stated, Worcester is only six miles from Droitwich, and three and a quarter hours by rail from London, Besides St. Peters' Church there is St. Andrew's, with its long history; also the Doderhill Church, dedicated to St. Augustine, and of considerable antiquity. St. Nicholas' Church is also prominent in Droitwich. There are several other public buildings, such as the Guildhall, the Salter's Hall, the Coventry Hospital, and the Hospital for poor patients. The population of the town is 10,000. Droitwich has been the birthplace of some notable characters. In this list may be mentioned Richard de Burford, Bishop of Chichester. He was appointed Chancellor to the Archbishop of Canterbury, and afterwards of Oxford. He died in 1253, and was canonized by Pope Urban IV, in 1262. It will thus be seen that Droitwich has given birth to at least one canonized saint. Besides Sargeant Wilde, another distinguished man born in Droitwich was Endymion Parton, member for this borough, and a gentleman of the bedchamber of Charles I. He was a great favorite of James I, and attended Charles, when Prince of Wales, to the Court of Spain. He became obnoxious to the Parliamentary party because of his exertions for the Royalist cause, and was excluded from participation in all the amnesties granted by Cromwell. Doctor Nash, the historian, lived at the pretty black and white house near St. Peter's Church. We of the Winslow stock may modestly refer to the fact that Droitwich is also the birthplace of our Winslow ancestors, who in their pilgrim career so deeply marked Colonial Plymouth history, and have left for us honorable memories.

My advice to all Americans visiting England, whether descendants of the Winslows, or some other family, is to visit the quaint interesting town of Droitwich, and take as many baths there as convenience will permit.

THE "MAYFLOWER."

THE COMPACT.

THE Mayflower being at Cape Cod upon the 11th day of November, 1620, O.S., the Pilgrim Fathers entered into a solemn combination, as a body politic, to submit to such government and governors, laws and ordinances, as should, by a general consent from time to time, be made choice of, and assented unto. The contents whereof followeth:

In the name of God, amen. We whose names are underwritten, the loyal subjects of our dread sovereign Lord, King James, by the grace of God, of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, King, defender of the faith, etc., having undertaken for the glory of God and advancement of the Christian faith, and the honor of our King and country, a voyage to plant the first colony in the northern parts of Virginia; do by these presents, solemnly and mutually, in the presence of God and one another, covenant and combine ourselves together into a civil body politic, for our better ordering and preservation, and furtherance of the ends aforesaid; and by virtue hereof, do enact, constitute, and frame such just and equal laws, ordinances, acts, constitutions, and officers, from time to time, as shall be thought most meet and convenient for the general good of the colony; unto which we promise all due submission and obedience. In witness whereof, we have hereunto subscribed our names, at Cape Cod, the eleventh of November, in the reign of our sovereign Lord, King James, of England, France, and Ireland, the eighteenth, and of Scotland the fifty-fourth, Anno Dom. 1620.

The following corrected list of subscribers to the Compact is from Prince's Annals, p. 172. Morton has given the names in the following order; but their names connected with their titles and families, are taken from the list at the end of Gov. Bradford's folio manuscript. Observe that out of modesty he omits the title of Mr. to his own name, which he ascribes to several others.

Those with this mark "*" brought their wives with them; those with this "†" left them for the present either in Holland or England. Some left behind them part and others all their children. Those with this mark "ss" died before the end of March.

So, then, just 100 sailed from Plymouth in England, and just as many arrived in Cape Cod Harbor.

The following number of deaths occurred during the following winter up to the end of March; in December. 6; in January, 8; in February, 17; in March, 13; making 44 in all; of whom were:

"Until they should agree upon laws suited to their peculiar circumstances, they resolved to make the laws of England their rule of government; and it seems they differed much in this respect from the Massachusetts colonists, and never established any distinct code or body of laws of their own, but in such cases where the common law and the statutes of England could not well reach and afford them help in emergent difficulties, they added some particular municipal laws of their own, following the advice of Pacuvius to his neighbors of Capua, 'not to cashier their old magistrates till they could agree upon better to place in their room.'"—(Hutch., Vol. II., 409-412.

Of the Mayflower Pilgrims, those of whom some descendants probably now reside in the city of New York were:

MEMORABLE DATES IN THE PASSAGE OF PLYMOUTH PIL-GRIMS, 1620.

- 22 July, O.S., SATURDAY. The Pilgrims left Leyden, Delft Haven, Holland, for Southampton, England.
- 5 Aug., SATURDAY. The Mayflower and Speedwell left Southampton. (They had not gone far before the Speedwell proved so leaky they were forced to return and refit.)
- 21 Aug., MONDAY. Sailed again; but were forced to return and leave the Speedwell.
- 6 Sept., WEDNESDAY. The Mayflower sailed from Plymouth, England.
- 9 Nov., THURSDAY. They sighted land near Cape Cod.
- 11 Nov., SATURDAY. The Compact is signed and the Mayflower is anchored in Provincetown harbor, near Cape Cod.
- 8 Dec., FRIDAY. The Shallop's Company, the party of exploration, in the darkness of night, lay under the lee of Clark's Island.
- 10 Dec., SUNDAY. "They rested on the Sabbath" at Clark's Island.

  [Our forefathers, notwithstanding the urgency for hastening their explorations, "rested on the Sabbath." In memory of their example, and in harmony with the principles which guided them, the "CENTENNIAL EXHIBITION" is closed on the Sabbath]
- 11 Dec., O.S., 21 Dec., N.S., MONDAY. The boat set a party ashore, probably in Duxbury or the north part of Plymouth, who explored southward, till they came to a considerable brook running into the harbor. Convenient to it, they found a ROCK, on which at a suitable stage of the tide, the women and the sick might step ashore from the Shallop, without wading.
- 16—26 Dec., SATURDAY. The Mayflower left her anchorage at Provincetown, Cape Cod, for Plymouth harbor, some twenty-five miles distant.
- MONDAY and TUESDAY following: Explorations were made on shore, and sounding in Plymouth harbor.
- 20, O.S.—30 Dec. N.S., WEDNESDAY. They made The Landing that forms the scene of Charles Lucey's painting, which ornaments the Rotunda of the American Capitol—the scene of the frescoed representation of the Landing of the Pilgrims, conspicuous in the corridors of the Parliament Houses of Old England.
  - [The Anniversary will be held by the Pilgrim Record Society, at 19 Great Jones Street, New York, Satuyday Evening, 30 Dec., 1876.]
- 7 Jan., N.S., THURSDAY. The whole Company was divided into 19 Families, and lots of land assigned them.
- 31 Jan., N.S., SUNDAY. They kept their first worship on the land; though, for lack of houses, a part of the company occupied the Mayflower as a dwelling, till
- 31 March, N.S., WEDNESDAY, when the last of them left the ship and the colonizing was fully established on shore.

THE CHRISTIAN HERO.

A celebrated Supplie ode, by Hon. Nathaniel Niles* of West Fairlee, Vt., which was set to music, and was the war song of the Revolution. It was written immediately after the battle of Bunker Hill and the burning of Charlestown. The tune was called "Bunker Hill."

Why should vain mortals tremble at the sight of Death and destruction in the field of battle,
Where blood and carnage clothe the ground in crimson,
Sounding with death-groans.

Death will invade us by the means appointed,
And we must all bow to the King of Terrors:
Nor am I anxious, if I am prepared,
What shape he comes in.

Infinite wisdom teaches us submission—
Bids us be quiet under all his dealings,
Never repining, but forever praising God, our Creator.

Well may we praise him, all his ways are perfect,
Tho' a resplendence infinitely glowing
Dazzles in glory on the sight of mortals,
Struck blind with lustre.

Good is Jehovah in bestowing sunshine,
Nor less his goodness in the storm and thunder:
Mercies and judgments both proceed from kindness—
Infinite kindness.

Oh, then exult that God forever reigneth!
Clouds that surround him hinder our perception,
Bind us the stronger to exalt his name, and Shout forth his praises.

*Rev. Nathaniel<sup>5</sup> Niles was born 3 April, 1741, O.S., at South Kingston, R.I., son of Judge Samuel<sup>4</sup> (Rev. Samuel<sup>3</sup>, Captain Nathaniel<sup>2</sup>, John<sup>1</sup>, of Dorchester, 1634 and Braintree, 1636). He graduated at Princeton College, 1766; was also for a time a student of medicine and law; afterwards, of theology, under Dr. Joseph Bellamy. He became a Congregational minister, preaching in various places, but was never settled, He is said to have taught the rudiments of English grammar to Lindley Murray. His first wife was Nancy Lothrop, daughter of Elijah Lothrop, a wealthy citizen of Norwich, Ct. She d. 2 Sept., 1789, aged 66 years. He represented the town of Norwich three times as a member of the Legislature, and while a resident of that place, invented a method of making wire from bar iron by water power—the first invention of the kind. He also erected a woolen card manufactory. Soon after the Revolution he purchased a considerable tract of land in Vermont, and removed to what was afterwards West Fairlee, of which he was one of the first settlers. He became Speaker of the House, and Judge of the Supreme Court; was a member of Congress 1791-5, and six times an elector of the President. He was 4 metaphysician, and a defender of the "Taste Scheme." For twelve years he preached in his own house; several of his discourses were published. His first wife having died some years after his removal to West Fairlee, as before mentioned, he married 2d, 22 Nov. 1789, Eliza<sup>6</sup> Watson, who died in that place, 16 April, 1835, aged 76. Hon. Nathaniel<sup>8</sup> and Marston<sup>8</sup> Niles, Lawyers, of 16 Wall Street, New York City, are grandsons and of the 8th generation from Edward Winslow, of Droitwich, England, in the line of Gov. Edward, of the Mayflower.

Then to the wisdom of my Lord and Master
I will submit all that I have or wish for;
Sweetly as babes sleep will I give my life up,
When called to yield it.

Now, Mars, I dare thee, clad in smoky pillars— Bursting from bomb-shells, roaring from the cannon, Rattling in grape shot like a storm of hailstones, Torturing ether.

In the black heavens let the spreading flame rise, Breaking like Ætna through the smoky column Lowering like Egypt o'er the fallen city, Wantonly burnt down.

While all your hearts quick palpitate for havoc— Let slip your blood-hounds and the British Lion— Dauntless as death stares, nimble as the whirlwind, Dreadful as demons.

Let ocean waft o'er all your floating castles
Fraught with destruction horrible to nature;
Then, with your sails filled with a storm of vengeance,
Bear down to battle.

From the dire caverns made by ghastly miners, Let the explosion, dreadful as volcanoes, Heave up the broad town with its wealth and people, Quick to destruction.

Still shall the banner of the King of Heaven Never advance where I'm afraid to follow; While that precedes me, with an open bosom, War, I defy thee!

Fame and dear freedom lure me on to battle,
While a fell despot, grimmer than a death's-head,
Stings me with serpents fiercer than Medusa's
To the rencounter.

Life, for my country and the cause of freedom, Is but a trifle for a worm to part with;

And, if preserved in so great a contest,

It is redoubled.

INDIAN DEED OF DARTMOUTH.

TAKEN FROM THE PLYMOUTH RECORDS, JOSIAH COFFIN, REGISTRAR.

1651-Bradford, Governor.—A deed appointed to be recorded.—New Plymouth, Nov. 29th 1652.—

Know all men by these Presents that I Wasomequish and Wamsutta my son, have sold unto mr. William Bradford, Captain Standish, Thos Southworth, John Winslow, John Cook, and their Associates the purchasers or [old Comers All] the tract or tracts of Land lving three miles Eastward from a River called Cushnett to a certain harbour called Acoaksett to a flatt Rock on the Westward side of said Harbour—and whereas the said Harbour divideth itself into several branches, the Westmost arm to be the bound and all the tract or tracts of land for the said Westernmost arm to the sd River of Cushnett three miles Eastward of the same with all the Profits and Benefits within the sd tract with the River, Creeks, Meadows, necks and Islands that Ly in or before the same and from the sea upward to go so high that the English may not be anoyed by the hunting of the Indians in any sort, of their cattle. And I Wasomequish and Wamsutta do promise to remove all the Indians within a year from the date hereof that do live in the said tract. And we the said Wasomequish and Wamsutta have fully Bargained and sold unto the aforesaid mr. William Bradford, Capt. Standish, Thos Southworth, John Winslow, John Cook and the Rest of their Associates the purchasers or [old Comers] To have and to hold for them their Heirs and Assigns forever. And in consideration hereof we the above mentioned are to pay to the said Wassomequish, and Wamsutta as followeth; Thirty yards of Cloth, Eight moose Skins, fifteen axes, fifteen hoes, fifteen pair of Breeches, Eight Blankets, two Kettles, one Cloak, 2 £ in Wampau, Eight pair of Stockens, Eight pair of shoes, one Iron Pott and Ten shillings in another commodity. And in witness hereof we have Interchangeably set our hands, the day and year above written.

In the presence of Jonathan Shaw.

Samuel Eddy.

 ${\it John\ Winslow}.$

John Cook.

Wamsutta XXXX his mark.

The above is a true copy of the deed, all of its peculiarities having been carefully transcribed.

The river called Cushnett is that on which New Bedford is situated, being on its left bank. It is now called "Acushnett."

The harbor designated as "Acoaksett" is that which is now called Westport Harbor.

The tract or territory which was purchased from Wasomequish and his son Wamsutta includes that portion of southeastern Massachusetts which lies between Westport River and a line drawn three miles to the eastward of the Acushnett River and now embraces that part of the State which is known as Bristol County, the original Dartmouth of old colonial times. This tract of land includes the cities of New Bedford and Taunton, together with the following towns: Middleborough, Westport, Dartmouth, Fair Haven, Russel's Mills, Smith's Mills, Padanaram, Acushnett, and Rochester.

The families of the six grantees of the above cited deed are now numerously represented in this part of Massachusetts, viz: Winslow, Cook, Shaw, Bradford, Southworth and Eddy.

On page 24 of Introduction, Vol. I, it is stated that Gov. Edward¹ Winslow was married in Leyden, 16th May, 1618, to Elizabeth Barker, of Chetsum, Eng. Rev. Henry-M. Dexter, D.D., of the Congregationalist, finds, however, from "most careful personal inspection of the Leyden Records," that the marriage took place on the 13th instead of the 16th May, 1618, and that the marriage ceremony was performed by a civil magistrate. Dr. Dexter also states that Rev. John Robinson condemns the officiating of ministers at marriages and funerals in his "Justification of Separation" and in his "Just and Necessary Apology," and gives his reasons why he "cannot assent to the received opinion and practice answerable in the Reformed churches, by which the pastors thereof do celebrate marriage publicly and by virtue of their office, largely because the popish superstition hath so far prevailed that ministers ought to see to it that by their practice they neither do or seem to advantage this popish error."

KENELM¹ WINSLOW [1], married Eleanor Adams, widow of John Adams of Plymouth. Judge Davis supposes her maiden surname was Newton, perhaps the Ellen Newton of the pilgrims. She is said to have had three children by her first husband, viz.: James, John, and Susan.

JOB<sup>2</sup> [36]. Later information received gives the reason of his being "styled lieutenant." Previous to February 1715 the entire militia force of Freetown was too small to constitute a "captain's command," and hence it was organized as a "lieutenant's company," Thomas¹ Terry, of Freetown, mentioned under serial numbers [2379] and [12941], being commissioned lieutenant commandant by the Governor of Plymouth Colony, June 4th, 1686. He served in that capacity till a few years before his death, which occurred about 1702, when he was succeeded by Job<sup>2</sup> Winslow, who commanded the Freetown train band in the name and by the authority of King William.

CAPT. JOSIAH<sup>3</sup>, [60] (s. of Kenelm<sup>2</sup> Winslow), settled on land his grandfather, Kenelm' Winslow, secured as one of the original 26 purchasers of old Freetown. In 1695 he caused a mill dam to be built across Assonet River, and erected thereon a saw-mill and fulling-mill. He succeeded Job2 Winslow [36] as lieutenant commandant of Freetown militia, owing his authority to the grace of God and commands of Queen Anne. It was, however, from two to three years after King William's death-no telegraph cables then bringing the news-before Lieut. Job2 Winslow could be relieved from duty, and Josiah's Winslow substituted in his place. Queen Anne died August 1, 1714, consequently his term of office would expire as soon as his successor could be duly appointed. The militia of Freetown had so increased in number as to be entitled to organization as a full company, or captain's command, and to Lieut. Josiah Winslow was offered the honor to hold the first, and in point of date the earliest commission of captain ever conferred upon an inhabitant of the town of Freetown, which then also embraced the tract of country which in February, 1803, became the township of Fall River. That commission was in the words following:

"William Tailor, Esq., Lieutenant Governor and Commander-in Chief in and over His Majesty's Province of the Massachusetts Bay in New England in America."

"To Josiah Winslow, Esq., Command'r of ye Compa in Freetown.

"By virtue of the Power and Authority unto me granted by His Majesty, I do hereby Constitute and appoint you the said Josiah Winslow to be a Captain of a Company in the Regiment of militia commanded by Nathan Byfield, Esq., Colonel. You are therefore to take the said Company as Captain into your Care and Charge and duty to Exercise both Inferior officers and Soldiers thereof in Arms, and to use your best Endeavors to keep them in good order; who are hereby commanded to Acknowledge and Obey you as their Captain.

"And you to observe and follow such orders and Directions as you shall from time to time receive from My Self or any other your Superior Officer, according to the Rules and Discipline of War, Pursuant to the Trust hereby reposed in you.

"Given under my hand and Seal at Arms this ninth day of February, in the Second year of His Majesty's Reign, Annoq Dom. 1715.

"WILLIAM TAILER.

"By the Honorable Lieutenant Governor's Command.

"SAMUEL WOODWARD, Sec'y."

The personal seal of the Lieutenant Governor is attached to the upper corner, left hand, of this commission.

The following account of expenses incidental to the burial of Capt. Josiah<sup>3</sup> Winslow is said to have been found among other documents pertaining to the settlement of his estate, in the garret of Barnabas—probably Barnabas<sup>6</sup> Winslow [4992]:

		APRIL, 1671.
To CAPT. TISDALE:	£	S	d
Coffin	0	7	()
Nine pair gloves	0	18	0
To drink expended at funeral	1	2	6
To digging grave	0	3	0
Mourning bestowed on the widow, one black neck cloth	0	3	9
One Veil	0	4	6
One pair black leather gloves	0	3	0

These items not only serve to show the price of things one hundred and twenty-six years ago, but also in what the chief expense of a funeral at that day consisted.

The fact that the coffin cost only seven shillings does not necessarily show it to have been an inferior one, seven shillings then representing nearly or quite as much in value as seven pounds at the present time. The whole money tax of Freetown, and part of Fall River, in that year amounted to only $133.33.

The nine pair of gloves charged to the estate were given, perhaps, to the bearers, as the corpse was to be carried on a bier from the Winslow homestead to the ancient cemetery in Berkley, there being, we are informed, no hearse in Freetown for more than half a century afterward.

A work printed in New York in 1791, entitled The American Oracle, by the Hon. Samuel Stearns, LL.D., in treating upon mournings and funerals, and referring to the customs which had formerly prevailed in connection with them in New England, mentions that white gloves were laid upon the pall for the bearers, and gloves were also given to the "parson" and others who attended.

Funerals were by no means as common in 1761 as now, and at an earlier date were held only in rare cases, and when the deceased was very distinguished. Permission in writing from a justice of the peace had first to be obtained in order to perform the solemnities of a funeral and burial on the sabbath day.

An old brown stone, bearing a still legible inscription, marks the last resting place of Capt. Josiah<sup>3</sup> Winslow.

- 7. John<sup>5</sup>, b. 2 Sept. 1731. [There were five other children.] 75.
- 76. BRIG-GEN. TIMOTHY<sup>5</sup>, [69] (Rev. Timothy<sup>4</sup>, Capt. Samuel<sup>3</sup>, Capt. Samuel<sup>2</sup>, Thomas,) b. 11 Oct. 1711, Rochester, Mass.; d. 1798, Halifax, N. S., aged 87. married Welthen Hathaway, dan. of Captain Ebenezer and Welthen (Gilbert): graduated at Harvard, 1732, and "although his father had intended that he should adopt his own profession," he turned his attention to the law, and commenced practice in his native town, which he represented in 1736. He removed to Sandwich, thence to Hardwick, in which places he continued to practice till 1757, when he was appointed associate justice of the common pleas, and subsequently was placed at the head of the bench of that court. In 1765 he was made president of the congress of nine colonies at New York, of which Otis and Patridge were delegates from Massachusetts. As the revolutionary quarrel progressed he became one of the most violent supporters of the measures of the ministry; and he and Otis, as the leaders of the two opposing parties, were in constant collision in the discussions of the popular branch of the government. In 1774 he was named a mandamus councillor, which increased his unpopularity to so great a degree, that his house was attacked at night, and his cattle were maimed and poisoned. His extensive estates in Hardwick were confiscated but were made up to him subsequently by the crown, and he went with the royal army to Halifax into perpetual banishment.

After many vicissitudes incident to his position in so troubled times, he established his residence in Nova Scotia. Of the beautiful site of Digby in that colony he was a proprietor and a settler.

General Ruggles was a good scholar, and possessed powers of mind of a very high order. He was a wit and a misanthrope, and a man of rude manners and rude speech. Many anecdotes continue to be related of him in the town of his nativity, which show his shrewdness, his sagacity, his military hardihood and bravery. It is said that on one occasion, in stern derision of the constitution of the court, he reprimanded a dog sitting beside his master for coming there to vote, or appearing on the bench before he had been qualified as justice of the peace. The court at the time was composed of all the justices of the peace in the county.

As a lawyer, he was an impressive pleader, and, in parliamentary debate, able and ingenious. That a person thus constituted should make enemies, other than those which men in prominent public stations usually acquire, is not strange, and he had a full share of personal foes. In Mrs. Warren's dramatic piece of "The Group," he figures in the character of Brigadier Hate-all.

He possessed considerable military tact and talent. In the expedition to Crown Point in 1755, he was Colonel under Sir Wm. Johnson; and in the battle of Lake George the same year, was 2nd in command to Baron Dieskau, and distinguished himself in the action, for which he was rewarded by the gift of a lucrative place. He remained in the army till 1760; the last three years was Brig-Gen. under Lord Amherst. He represented Hardwick several years in the legislature, and was speaker of the house in 1762-3. 2. ADELINE, born in 1829; died in 1856; married in 1852, William-N. Jame-286. son, who died in 1855. Merchant. s.p. Res. Plymouth, Mass.

3. LIEUT. EDWARD, b. 24 July, 1831; married in Plymouth, 9 Oct. 1856, 257. Sophia-Bartlett Weston, of P., born in 1831, dau. of Lewis and Patty (Drew). They had a son, born 1 May, 1861, who died the same year. We are indebted to Lieut. Baker for the following account of his experiences in the war: At sixteen years of age he entered the Merchant service, and at twenty-five became a shipmaster, which business he followed until the rebellion broke out, when he applied for and obtained an appointment as acting Master in the U.S. Navy, serving at Washington and on the Potomac river, from May till October, 1861, when the ship on which he served, the Pocahontas, joined the Port Royal expedition, in command of Percival Drayton, one of those patriots from whom all selfish ties seemed wrung out by the exigencies of the occasion, he being a son of South Carolina, and his own brother commanding at the time the rebel force at Port Royal—the fortifications at Hilton Head being built upon his own plantation. The Pocahontas was detained by the fearful storm which the fleet encountered, and came late into the engagement, but boldly and defiantly she ran near the batteries holding their fire for her approach, and invited their hospitalities by plunging a ten-inch shell in their teeth. An iron hail showered upon her, but Drayton, cooler than the iron missiles, darted on into the familiar waters, humorously remarking, "the last time I entered this harbor it was to a picnic," and, pressing in till the vessel's keel took the ground, during the remaining two hours of the fight no battery did better service than that of the Pocahontas. How the hearts of his subordinates swelled within them, as Du Pont ran under the stern of the ship, and shouted, "I knew you'd be here in time, Drayton!" God bless him for the words to the pure-minded patriot, every fibre of whose heart was wrung by conflicting emotions. The balance of the first Winter of the war was spent on the coast of South Carolina and Georgia, the crew of the Pocahontas planting one of her flags upon a Martello tower on Tybee Island, the first Union flag planted in that State. The capture of Tybee Island was the commencement of the reduction of Fort Pulaski, below Savannah. The captures of Fernandina, St. Simons, Brunswick, sinking the fleet of "stone ships" in the Charleston channels, and sharp raids up rivers, are among the incidents in the writer's life on the South Atlantic Squadron, under Du Pont. In the Fall of 1862, the ship was attached to Farragut's Gulf Squadron, and in January, 1863, the British steamer Autona was captured, and the subject of these remarks was placed in command of her, as Prize Master, afterwards retained for a time, while the Autona was a gunboat. His next service was on the Oneida, as sailing master; was afterwards detached from her, with orders to the Kennebec, as executive officer, upon which vessel he remained till the close of the war. During these eighteen months' service on the Kennebec, several valuable prizes were captured by her, and she participated in the fight at the Mobile forts, on the 5th of August, 1864. She was the first vessel in immediate contact with the formidable ram Tennessee, so terribly hammered and heroically captured by Farragut's fleet. She was one of two gunboats which received a printed General Order of thanks for heroic service in destroying an English blockade runner, on the beach, immediately under the rebel guns, from the great Admiral, sometimes called in the fleet the "Old Salamander," the grandest, most glorious old seaking who ever braved the storm, or met a foe; and at this time Drayton was his fleet captain. They seemed in great sympathy with each other. The same spirit of devotion inspired these heroic patriots. They both had near kindred, whose hands were bitterly turned against the mother who nurtured them—their country they were high-toned gentlemen, and noble utterance was common to their lips.

The "Kennebec's" services in which the subject of this paper participated, closed at the surrender of Galveston, Texas, the "last ditch." He received promotion, and repeatedly shared with others in the commendations of the beloved Admiral, and his name may be found specially mentioned in the report of the Mobile fight.

CAPT. LEVI, born in 1835; died in 1869; married, 1859, Mary-Jane Bonney, of Kingston. He early became a master mariner. During the summer of 1869, he returned home from a trying, disastrous voyage, sickened with typhoid fever, and died deeply lamented by those who knew him best. At his death, a great heart ceased to beat.

300. Letitia<sup>5</sup>, died unmarried in 1844-5, Williamsburg, now Brooklyn, at an advanced age. She was buried in the Granary burying-ground, Boston, where is also found the name of Anne Durivage, probably her sister.

The name of the mother of Mrs. Sarah-Miller (Bennett) Winslow, wife of John Winslow [5082] was Hannah Baker, and the name of Mrs. Winslow's sister, Letitia-Baker Bennett, now Mrs. Grant, of Brooklyn, N. Y. They have always supposed that the Durivage and Baker families were connected, but did not know of any relationship existing between them and the Winslow family prior to the marriage of Mrs. Winslow.

Francis-Alexander, [297 Baker Family] (s. of Francis-S<sup>6</sup>. Durivage,) d. Jan. 1881. The following notice of his funeral is from the N.Y. Herald of Jan. 5, 1881: "The funeral services of the late Francis-Alexander Durivage were performed this afternoon from the residence of his son-in-law, Mr. Alfred Bennett, No. 223 West Forty-fifth Street. Mr. Durivage was one of the most prolific contributors to story and literary papers of his day and generation, and at various times was an editor of the Olive Branch, Flag of Our Union, The Welcome Guest, and Ballou's publications in Boston. More recently he wrote continued stories for the Ledger and New York Weekly. He was known also as a poet of no little merit, and was the author of several plays. His mother was a sister of Edward Everett, and he was the last of his branch of that family. The services to-day, which were conducted by the Rev. Dr. Pullman, were of the simplest possible character, and utterly devoid of anything like ostentation or display. The remains were interred in Greenwood Cemetery."

Joseph Baker, "s. of Edward and Persis Baker of Westbors," [Rice Genealogy] probably s. of Edward, [294 Baker Family] (Kenelm, Eleanor Winslow Baker, Kenelm, ) b. May 19, 1736; m. WINSLOW, M.D., [1838] (s. of Winslow Lewis,) was an eminent surgeon, considered by many second only in skill to Dr. John Warren. In connection with the name of Dr. Winslow mention is made of the Genealogical Chart which was ordered by him, and which the compilers expected to insert in Volume I of the Winslow MEMORIAL. Some of the parties whose records were to appear in the chart were slow in furnishing the items, and consequently it was not printed till some time after his death, and about the time Vol. I was published. His family refusing to honor his order, the compilers preferred to omit the chart, rather than involve themselves in any further loss and expense.

JOB4, [2023] (s. of Joseph3 Winslow,) b. 29 Sept. 1718.—Swansey Rec.

[A Job Winslow is mentioned in the New Eng. Gen. and Hist. Register of 1879 as being with Maj. Gen. John Winslow in the removal of the Arcadians].

Job Winslow, who was a captain in the old French war, and afterward lieut. colonel under Col. Gilbert [see foot note to 4873], owned the "Judge Baylies' place" in Dighton, Mass. He had a son Job, born 10 July, 1754, who also resided in Dighton, where he was captain of militia; was commissioned junior major of the 3d regiment, in 2d brigade, 5th division of Massachusetts militia, 22 Mar. 1792; senior major, 3 Sept. 1795; colonel about 1800, and commanded the regiment about five years. Abner Burt, who died a few years since in Berkley, Mass., aged almost one hundred years, was adjutant for Job Winslow, Jr.

Letter from Gen. Ebenezer-W. Pierce of Assonet, Mass., to Rev. Kenelm' Winslow [6956], dated 14 Dec. 1864: "We have not been able to determine which Job was the one first mentioned. See Nos. 245, 2042, 803, and 9712.

MINERVA*, [3830] (dau. of Phebe* (Parsons) Holton,) d. suddenly of heart disease at her home at Hillsgrove, Ill., 30 May, 1875. Her daughter writes that she often said she endeavored to live day by day as if it might be her last, and that she was ready any time she might be called hence. She had been in her usual health, and active in her domestic duties during the day, but after retiring to rest at night said she felt strangely, and a few minutes later folded her hands across her breast and ceased breathing without even a struggle. Mrs. Gilchrist united with the Baptist Church of Saxton's River, Vt., and adorned her profession by an earnest christian life. Mr. Gilchrist d. 30 June, 1882, at the house of his daughter, at Fountain Green, Ill. The following notice of his death was taken from a newspaper of that date:

"Chas. G. Gilchrist died at the residence of Dr. Ferris, Friday, at half-past twelve o'clock, aged eighty years. His life of patient effort, faithful struggling in the path of duty, drew as calmly to a close as a sunset at the end of a quiet autumn day. Lovingly attended by his children, who ministered to his few wants, he went down to the grave without a fear, 'sustained and soothed by an unfaltering trust... like one who wraps the drapery of his couch around him, and lies down to pleasant dreams.' His remains were conveyed to his old home at Hillsgrove. There, beneath trees of his own planting, the funeral exercises were conducted by Rev. Sauder in a most impressive manner. The casket bore a small cluster of wheat, a fitting tribute to the life past, for truly he was as 'a sheaf of wheat ripened for the harvest.' Attended by a large concourse of his old friends and neighbors, his remains were carried to the cemetery to rest until the resurrection morn beside his wife, who seven years ago had passed on before."

*For explanation of the double index see page 344, Vol. I. Reference is also there made to the APPENDIX OF THE WINSLOW MEMORIAL for an article. "Method in Genealogy." The publisher is aware that such an article was prepared and printed, and probably electrotyped, but after the lapse of years, and the changes incident to Dr. Holton's death, it cannot be found. It is, however, believed that much of the substance of it will be found by a study of the foot note on the page above named, of the preface to Vol. I, and of other references in that volume.

of the compilers of the Winslow Memorial, d. of heart disease in New York City, 7 June, 1883.

Of the life and labors of Dr. Holton little need be added to what has been given in Volume I of this Memorial; in the FARWELL-ANCESTRAL MEMORIAL, published by him in 1879, and in the extended sketch of his character and work by Henry-Reed Stiles, M.D., first president of the New York Genealogical and Biographical Society, in the October number of the N.Y. Genealogical and Biographical Record of 1883, pp. 149-168. It may, however, properly be added that he was a graduate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the City of New York in 1839; followed his profession in the New York dispensaries and hospitals till 1843, and from that date till the fall of 1847 in Westport, Essex Co., N.Y. While in Essex Co. he was for two years the county superintendent of its schools. In 1853 he went to Europe, and for four years attended lectures at the universities and schools, mostly those of Paris and Berlin. On his return to America he was deeply interested in and labored for the establishment of agricultural colleges in the several States of the Union. 1865, in accordance with the will of his late sister, Mrs. Brown, he lectured extensively on physiology and hygiene. Through his direct exertions, and at great personal sacrifice, he secured the establishment of the first of the series of free baths in the city of New York. By newspaper report of a recent year eleven such baths had been furnished by the city, and the number of persons who had used them during that season was stated to be 2,715,504. He was also the originator and one of the founders of the New York Genealogical and B ographical Society; its first vice president; one of its trustees many years, and a liberal contributor towards the support of its quarterly in its early existence. He was a life member of the American Geographical and Statistical Society of the city of New York; the American Institute; the New England Society of the city of New York, and Historic-Genealogical Society of Boston, Mass.

Dr. Holton's later years were mainly devoted to the collection and compilation of genealogical records relating to his own ancestors and their descendants, and of those of other early settlers of New England. The readers of this Memorial, with many of whom Dr. H. held correspondence in regard to his genealogical work, may wish to learn in what condition his extensive collections of genealogical records, which had been accumulating through long years of research, were left at his death. To meet this natural inquiry the present publisher would make the following statement: "Of all records relating to the Winslow name only those belonging to the descendants of one of the four immigrant brothers, and comprising the present volume, which, with Volume I, gives the descendants of Kenelm' Winslow, have been published. Those relating to the families of his brothers were put in manuscript for the printer many years since, but the interest of their descendants and their financial encouragement has never been sufficient to warrant their publication.

Of the records obtained of the Farwell name a small portion were used for the Farwell-Ancestral Memorial, a volume of over two hundred pages, giving all the known descendants of the first five generations of the immigrant ancestor, Henry' Farwell, and three branches of that fifth generation down to date of publication in 1879. The remainder is yet in manuscript.

Of the numerous Holton records obtained, none have been published in book form.

In regard to the records of the several Parsons families, descended from different immigrant ancestors, the collections of which are exceedingly numerous, one branch only has been in course of publication, that of Dea. Benjamin¹ Parsons, an early settler of Springfield, Mass. One of this branch, the late Judge Levi Parsons of New York, in his gift of $50,000 to Union College towards founding scholarships for his kindred, those descended with himself from Thomas<sup>B</sup> Parsons of Great Milton, Eng., connected therewith the publication of the Benjamin¹ Parsons Memorial. by which the claims or relationship of candidates should be decided. Unfortunately, after more than three hundred pages of that Memorial had been electrotyped, he discontinued his financial aid, saying he hoped to resume it when his circumstances should have improved. No further payments, however, were made, and as a result, for lack of requisite funds, that Memorial remains unfinished, partly in manuscript, partly in proof, the electrotyped pages of which are yet in store at the foundry.

Dr. Holton's inability, through lack of financial co-operation, to "transfer from the oblivion of manuscript and proof pages his much prized records to the certain usefulness of type," as truthfully hinted by Dr. Styles, made the evening of his life one of comparative sadness and disappointment, and probably hastened its termination sooner than his vigorous constitution would have indicated.

Aside from his genealogical works, Dr. Holton's publications-were mostly in leaflet and pamphlet form. The principal larger pamphlets were his Caen Stone Dreams and his Reminiscences.

†From a printed stray leaf left by Dr. Holton, the following description of the arms of Holton, of which he possessed a copy, is given: The crest on the arms of Holton consists of a map. At this date we do not know the circumstances which entitled some one Holton, in the past, to bear, as complimentary, an escutcheon or armorial shield having, on "a field of azure, a bend of gold supporting three eagles displayed, red; surmounted by a crest, a map proper," emblazoned:

Shield-Azure, on a bend or, three eagles displayed gules.

Crest—A map of the British Isles; motto, persevere.

Very possibly the American Holtons may not be his descendents. The honored armiger having for the crest of his escutcheon a map, we are strongly impressed, was a discoverer of lands before unknown, or in some way aided in extending the dominion of his king. He concludes with a bit of pleasantry in regard to his "Yankee guess" in relation to the origin of the crest.

The coat of arms of the Forward Family, p. 347, has been handed down from generation to generation in this family, and is now (1887) in the possession of descendants of Gen. Joseph-Morton<sup>6</sup> Forward. A copy of it, procured at the Herald's College in London, is, 1887, in the possession of the descendants of his brother, Pliny<sup>6</sup> Forward.

tReference is made on pp. 8-9 of preface to Vol. I, to an article on Heraldry, to be found in this appendix. As the publication of Vol. II and its appendix was necessarily and prospectively abandoned for reasons implied in the foregoing sketch of Dr. Holton, the article was not prepared, and the present publisher finds the strict genealogical publication of the volume all that present means and strength will allow. The reader will find some thoughts on that subject on the above named 9th page. In regard to the chart name I on page 8, it must be said that it does not strictly belong to the branch of Kenelm<sup>1</sup> Winslow, and it will be necessary to omit its insertion in this volume. A specimen of such Setze Quartiers charts can be seen in the Farwell-Ancestral Memorial, between pp. 134 and 135.

He m. 2d, Sept. 9, 1874, at Oakland, Emily-Morrell (Arms) Mann, b. Johnstown, Fulton Co., N.Y., dau. of Charles of New York City, and Harriette (Morrell) of Brooklyn, N.Y., (dau. of Judge Morrell of Albany, N.Y.), and widow of William L. Mann. According to the Arms Family Record, compiled by Edward-W. Arms of Troy, N.Y., the line of Mrs. Page's ancestry is: Charles, b. 27 Feb. 1807, d. 1871; Eliakim, Jr., b. 1767; Eliakim, b. 1737, d. 1810; William, b. 1692, d. 1774; William, b. 1654, d. 25 Aug. 1731; m. 1677, Joanna Hawks, who d. 22 Nov. 1729.

"William Arms, the ancestor of the Arms family in the United States, came either from the Island of Jersey or Guernsey in the English Channel. It is presumed that he assumed the name of Arms, as none of this name are found in the island from whence he came. He was a knitter of stockings by trade. The first heard of him was his marriage with Joanna, daughter of John Hawks, one of the settlers of Hadley, Mass., in 1677. His name appears in the town records of Hatfield, Mass., in · 1677. He removed from Hatfield to Deerfield, Mass., about 1684. It is said of him that he was a good farmer, industrious, and economical, devotional and religious, and a quiet and obliging neighbor. He would knit a pair of stockings while going to and returning from the mill at Hatfield. In 1698 he was chosen farm viewer, and one of a committee to build a school house and hire a schoolmaster; in 1699 a constable; in 1700 a tythingman; in 1701, fence viewer and school commissioner. ter that his name appears almost yearly in the town records. Also in the records of Sunderland, Mass., from 1714 to 1722, where he is spoken of as "Good Mr. Arms." He served in the Indian fight at Great Falls, where now is Gill, Mass., May 17th, 1676, for which his son John was one of those entitled to the township granted by the General Court 1736. His body lies in the old burying ground at Deerfield, a little east of the centre of the ground, adjacent to his son William and grandson William." [The foregoing was compiled by Edward-W. Arms.]

  Res. Lima, Peru.

The following is taken from the New York Weekly Witness of Oct. 18, 1877:

"The death of Henry Meiggs, at Lima, Peru, on the 29th of September, brings to an end one of the most remarkable careers the world has ever witnessed outside the pages of a romance. Meiggs was born in Catskill, N.Y., on the 7th of July, 1811. After acquiring some knowledge of the lumber trade in his native place, he embarked in business, but, finding his field of activity too limited, removed to this city about the year 1823(?). He was regarded by all who had dealings with him as a young man of uncommon executive ability in business, and it was not long before he became a leading figure among our merchants and contractors. He was, moreover, a patron of the fine arts; he encouraged painting and sculpture by liberal orders for his private gallery, and organized a musical association which flourished finely as long as he remained at the head of it. In the panic of 1837 he failed, but was on his feet again within two years, notwithstanding the continued financial depression. In 1842 he failed again, and from that time till 1848 his fortunes were uncertain.

"The breaking out of the California gold fever suggested to Meiggs the notion of transferring his business to the Pacific coast. He loaded a vessel with lumber and set sail for the diggings. In the port of San Francisco he sold his cargo for twenty times the sum he had paid for it, and with the capital thus obtained he began building saw mills and cutting timber in the interior. At one time he had five hundred men at work cutting trees in a single county for a single mill. The brisk business atmosphere of the new centre of commerce agreed wonderfully well with his adventurous spirit, and it was not long before he was the owner of a fleet of sloops and schooners; a contract for supplying most of the lumber for San Francisco's municipal works, a magnificent dwelling on the chief street of the city, any number of buildings for rent, and a large debit account at several banking houses. Tradesmen, laborers, washerwomen, clerks—almost everyone, in fact, who had a little money to invest—would bring their pursefuls of gold to "honest Harry Meiggs" for safekeeping, as he was considered quite as responsible as the savings banks and gave higher interest than any. A half-dozen shrewd souls there were in the whole city who predicted that this state of things could not last forever, and one morning the rest of San Francisco woke up to find the prophecy fulfilled.

"When Meiggs was next heard from he was on the high wave of prosperity as a railway contractor in Chili. The Valparaiso and Santiago Railroad, which had been in progress of construction for many years, had ruined every contractor who had undertaken to build it. A part of the route lay through a country of rocks and chasms which seemed well nigh impassable, and the engineers who had been consulted estimated the cost of laying this thirty-three miles of road at not less than twenty-seven millions of dollars, and the shortest time at seven or eight years. Meiggs offered to do the work for twelve millions and finish it in four years. He received the contract, executed it in two years, and cleared one million, three hundred and twenty thousand dollars on it.

"The Government of Peru also had railways in hand, and Meiggs's success in Chili easily led him into other fields of railway enterprise. The people of Chili would have made him one of the princes of the realm; but he preferred to retain his American citizenship, although he had forfeited many of its privileges. In 1867 he began to build the railroad between Arequipa and Mollendo, a distance of ninety miles from the interior to the Pacific coast. Four years afterward the line was finished, and the constructor of it brought together at a dinner the representatives of almost every nation. That dinner is reported to have rivalled Nebuchadnezzar's, and to have cost two hundred thousand dollars. The Archbishop of Arequipa publicly blessed the locomotives; medals in honor of the event were distributed among the guests, and Meiggs pocketed his profits of four millions of dollars.

"At this time he had already signed contracts to complete six other rail-roads in Peru at a cost of $115,000,000. His object was to open the regions at the foot of the Andes to the commerce of the Pacific Ocean. The money for all these public works had come from the capitalists of Great Britain, but, owing to the fact that the works were for the most part in advance of the time, the dividends received by the British leaders were not especially satisfactory. Indeed, in 1874 the Peruvian bonds in London were sold at 55, and in 1876 at 13. A few months afterward they were practically worthless.

"Meiggs's credit became broken, and with it his health. He had two attacks of paralysis. He was accused of bribery, of blackmail, of dishonesty in various shapes. The credit of Peru suffered almost equally with his own, and the financial crisis of 1874 in that country has not yet ceased to make the people suffer.

"Meiggs was a man whose face impressed one at once, and who in any gathering would have been conspicuous. He was gentle in manner, fond of hospitality, a good liver, and a wonderfully successful maker of friends. Nobody knows how much money he left, and nobody can predict the fate of his great enterprise in South America. One son and one married daughter survive him."

—Evening Post.

Later advices give the fact that two sons instead of one survive him. Also that Mr. Meiggs finding it impossible to meet his liabilities, determined to retrieve his character and fortune if possible, and the course he pursued, and his subsequent life in Chili and Peru, proved the means of his making ample restitution to all of his former creditors.

THE GRAVE OF HENRY MEIGGS.

A correspondent thus describes the surroundings of the tomb of Henry Meiggs: "A brief flight of steps brings me on to the great porch, twenty feet wide, that sweeps round the house. The latter, a one-storied building of some twenty rooms, is, therefore, built upon a lofty terrace, one of the Indian mounds scattered over the country so profusely, and has consequently a magnificent view in every direction. To the south and west stretches the blue Pacific; to the south and east the long ranges of the Ardes pile up one behind the other: on our right glitter the towers of Lima, only five miles away, and to our left frown the fortresses and batteries of Callao. The southern trade-wind blows steadily all day, and a more delightfully cool, breezy spot I don't know. The green valley of the Rimac is before us, the river itself winding like a ribbon of silver down to the sea, and every half-hour the cars from Lima or Callao glide past, giving to the landscape the one element it would otherwise lack—life and motion. At the angle of the terrace on which the house is built are four towers, battlemented and pierced for musketry, so that the gates once closed a dozen men could defend the house against an army. These precautions are taken in all 'haciendas' here against the possible uprising of the Chinese. It is such a relief to get away from Lima, the former brightness and cheerfulness of which are now obscured for me by the shadow of a tomb. For here, near the 'hacienda', in a little meadow, inclosed by modest white palings, rises a simple mausoleum of brick, where, obeying the wishes of our great and good friend. Mr. Meiggs, we have laid him. Surrounded by flowers that he loved; within sound of the sad cadence of the sea; with the magnificent mountains, whose ravines he had spanned, in full sight, and the murmur of the train on the road he had immortalized audible every half-hour, lies the coffin that encloses all that was mortal of him. There is nothing sad in the surroundings of his tomb —it is not a cemetery, but a garden. The sadness is in the knowledge of how much of his great work is unfinished, and how feeble are the hands that remain to complete it."

GILBERT<sup>6</sup>, [4897] (s. of Ephram<sup>5</sup> Winslow,) died in the same house in which he was born more than ninety years before. He succeeded to the inheritance of his ancestors, and like them adhered to the same calling in life which they had chosen and followed.

HANNAH-GILBERT', [4898] (dau. of Gilbert' Winslow,) d. 22 Aug. 1883; m. John TINKHAM, who d. 14 June, 1880.

JOHN-GILBERT<sup>8</sup>, [4899] (s. of Hannah-Gilbert<sup>7</sup> (Winslow) Tinkham,) received his early education in the public schools. In 1861 he graduated from Commers Commercial College, Boston, as a bookkeeper, which occupation he has followed most of the time since. In politics he has always been a Republican, his first vote being cast for Abra'm Lincoln as President of the U.S. for his first term. Mr. Tinkham has not been prominently identified with politics, but has always taken an interest in the same, and while living in Somerset, Mass., became somewhat active in political affairs. He held there the offices of town clerk, treasurer, and collector of taxes four years. In 1885–86 was member of the Common Council of Fall River, and the latter year was president of that body. On the subject of temperance he has always been a prohibitionist.

HON. JOHN, [5082] (s. of Eleazer-Robbins Winslow,) m. Sarah-Miller Bennett, the second daughter of John-I., a prominent resident of Bay Ridge, L.I., and Hannah (Baker). Mrs. Winslow died at Brooklyn, 10 June, 1886, deeply mourned by a large circle who knew her good qualities and great worth. He m. 2d, at the residence of the bride's brother-in-law, Hon.-E.-L. Pierce, Milton, Mass., 5 Jan. 1888, Grace-Eliza Woodhead, b. 24 June, 1855, at Huddersfield, Co. of Berkshire, West Riding, England, eldest daughter of Edward-B., Esq., and Elizabeth (Whitworth) of Huddersfield. Mrs. Winslow is a member of the Society of Friends by birth, as are also her parents.

John Winislan,

Mr. Winslow passed his youth and early manhood in Newtown, Mass., and in its private and public schools, and in that of Mr. M.-S. Rice of that place, received his preparatory education. Later he was a pupil at Holiston Academy in Mass., which was presided over by the late Rev. Gardiner Rice. He subsequently became a student at Phillips Academy at Andover, Mass., and after a two years' course at that classical school—pleasantly commemorated in an address delivered by him a few years ago at the centennial of the institution—entered Brown University, whence, in September, 1850, he proceeded to Harvard Law School to complete his preparation for the profession he had chosen. Here, in company with his intimate friend, Hon. E.-L. Pierce, the biographer of Charles Sumner, he distinguished himself, not only by the ability which he displayed in his professional studies, but by his pronounced views in favor of the Free Soil Anti-Slavery Cause, as opposed to the Southern view then predominant at that and other seats of learning in the North.

These two debaters became marked because they so fearlessly upheld their Anti-Slavery views in the Students' Parliament at the law school. Both competed for prize dissertations, Mr. Pierce's topic being, "The Consideration of a Contract at Law and Equity," and Mr. Winslow's, "The Responsibility of a Principal for the Acts and Representations of His Agents," and their efforts were crowned with success, the youthful disputants carrying off the prizes, and winning the proud distinction of special commendation from Professor Theophilus Parsons, who subsequently availed himself of their dissertations in his famous work on Contracts.

In 1852, on leaving Cambridge Law School, Mr. Winslow joined his brother, Hon. D.-C. Winslow, in Brooklyn, where he was admitted to the bar, and to participation in his brother's practice. A year later he was appointed Assistant District Attorney. The District Attorney, Gen. H.-B. Dwyer, being far from strong, the post to which the young lawyer was thus called was no sinecure; but so successfully did he acquit himself of his onerous duties, that, at the request of Mayor George Hall, to whom, during his official term, Mr. Winslow had been legal adviser, he was in 1855 appointed Corporation Attorney, and four years thereafter was elected, on the Republican ticket, District Attorney of Kings County, for the three years beginning January 1, 1860.

The recorded opinion, both of the profession and of the press, is that he discharged the duties of this office with almost unprecedented ability and success, the ratio of acquittals to the whole number of persons prosecuted under criminal indictments during his first annual term being one in twenty-three, while in the neighboring city of New York it was one in five, and the comparison was equally favorable for the two succeeding years.

In 1866 Mr. Winslow entered in partnership with the Hon. Joshua-M. Van Cott, at 54 William Street, New York, where the firm soon took a leading position among the legal practitioners of the city, and acquired a large clientèle, its practice throughout the seventeen years of its existence, extending not only to the courts of New York and Kings Counties, but to remote parts of the State. Among the causes célèbre which the learning, industry, and forensic skill of Mr. Winslow enabled him to bring to a successful issue may be mentioned the libel suit of Hope vs. English, and the real estate case of Sage vs. City of Brooklyn.

On the resignation, in 1874, of Hon. Thomas-M. Rodman, upon the eve of the criminal prosecution of several public officers, Governor Dix paid him the unsought compliment of appointing him District Attorney, a selection which was fully justified by the courage and perseverance with which the new incumbent brought his legal skill to bear upon these investigations into the character of public functionaries supported by the funds and influence of powerful friends.

In politics Mr. Winslow has been, from first to last, a Republican, and though his candidacy for the office of Judge of the Supreme Court, for which he allowed himself to be nominated by the Republicans of the Second Judicial District in 1873, shared the fate of similar local efforts, in the same cause, the comparatively large vote he received. especially in Brooklyn, where he ran 5,000 votes ahead of the party vote, was a gratifying testimonial to his personal popularity.

Early identified with anti-slavery views, and the friends of free soil, he continued to support the patriotic cause throughout the national contest, rendering valuable service to the Federal Government, both officially as District Attorney, and as a private citizen, in which capacity his powers as an orator and writer, the weight of his personal influence, and the fruits of his professional labors, were liberally devoted to the defence of the Union cause.

Apart from his purely professional triumplis, Mr. W. has had not a few notable opportunities for employing to advantage the gifts and graces of public speech. Among these may be specified the meeting in the Brooklyn City Hall to denounce the attack of Preston-S. Brooks upon Secretary Sumner; the renewal at Fort Hamilton, in May, 1861, of the oath of allegiance of the Fort Sumter garrison, by order of General Scott, and at the gathering of old free soilers at Downer's Landing, near Boston, where he delivered a memorable address on the attitude of John-C. Calhoun toward the anti-slavery cause.

Mr. Winslow has been identified with nearly every public movement of importance in the city of his adoption; of the Long Island Historical Society, which owes its existence to a meeting summoned by him and four other public-spirited citizens, he was for several years a director and corresponding secretary. As chairman of the committee appointed to choose a motto for the society he selected the Ciceronian apothegm which adorns the façade of the elegant building in Clinton Street, Historia testis temporum. The New England Society in the city of Brooklyn has recently and appropriately commemorated his connection with that flourishing organization as founder, by electing him president; and he was one of the first members of the Hamilton Club, and director and member of the executive committee. political affiliations and services have also been appropriately recognized by his recent election to the office of President of the Brooklyn Republican League, another institution, the existence of which is the result of his suggestion, its plan of organization having been devised and prepared by him. The inaugural address at the first meeting of the League was a striking exposition of Republican principles and policy, and attracted much attention in New York and other States. Mr. Winslow was on the New York State Republican Electoral ticket in 1884. He is a vigorous thinker, and a very effectual speaker-bold, prompt, and with his mental resources and large knowledge always and instantly at command.

He is proud, as well he may be, of his distinguished pilgrim ancestry, and no man is more quick or able in vindicating them and New England from all aspersions.

An instance of his energetic repulse of such aggressions occurred at a recent annual dinner of the St. Nicholas' Society in Brooklyn, where he was present as a guest, representing the New England Society. One of the learned speakers, a clergyman, had indulged in a fling at the memory of the Pilgrims, referring to them as "persecutors of witches," etc. Mr. W., though conceding that the occasion was not a suitable one for controversy, insisted that neither was it one for erroneous statements.

In the course of his speech, in response to a toast, he said:

"I have noticed, sir, a reference to the Pilgrims, by a distinguished gentleman, which convinces me of a misapprehension on his part of their real character and history. This is not the first time, at this and other similar festivals, that opinions of the sort referred to have been expressed, indicating confused ideas and lack of knowledge of the truth as to the spirit and acts of the Fathers. Were the Pilgrim Fathers persecutors? Referring to the persecution and punishment of witchcraft, what, sir, is the fact? It is that when witchcraft broke out and afflicted the good people of Salem and vicinity, in 1692, the Pilgrim Fathers had nothing whatever to do with it—they had all died and gone to Heaven. Whether the evil was dealt with wisely or not, it was the Puritans, and not the Pilgrims, who wrestled with it. The distinction between the Pilgrims and the Puritans is a well-recognized one. No community, however, ever got along so well with witchcraft, or through with it sooner, than did the Puritans of Salem. Many seem to suppose that witchcraft was first discovered and heard of in Salem, and never before elsewhere.

"The fact is, Salem withcraft was but an echo of European civilization. In the year 1515 five hundred witches were burned at Geneva in three months, one thousand in one year were executed in the diocese of Como. It is estimated that one hundred thousand victims must have suffered in Germany alone from the time of Pope Innocent's bull to the close of the persecutions.

"In England witchcraft was severely punished by statutes and judicial prosecutions. In the reign of Henry VIII it was made a felony. In Elizabeth's time a statute was enacted that every person guilty of such practices should suffer death. James I pursued witchcraft with relentless vigor, and secured severe legislation against it. At this time the wise Lord Bacon was an assenting member of the Commons. It is estimated that thirty thousand suffered death in Great Britain for suspicion of witchcraft in one hundred and fifty years. In 1647 nearly three hundred persons were indicted for this offence in Suffolk and Essex, and more than one-half of them were executed. In 1665 Sir Matthew Hale, distinguished for his liberality and purity, after a long and anxious examination, sentenced two women to die for this offence. The trials that occurred later in New England were abated by the learned Lord Holt as late as 1701.

"In Scotland, where many suffered, the last victim was executed in 1722.

"There were thousands who suffered death for the offence in France and Italy, and Sweden, before witchcraft was ever heard of in New England. Thus we see what was the estimate, and what the manner of dealing with witchcraft in Europe, before the evil afflicted New England, whose people did not claim to be wiser on the subject than the rest of the civilized world. Blackstone, the eminent expounder of the English Common Law, declared that 'to deny the possibility, nay, actual existence of withcraft and sorcery, is at once flatly to contradict the revealed

Word of God in various passages, both of the Old and New Testaments.' What then, in view of those facts, becomes of the idea that the Pilgrims persecuted the witches? What also becomes of the idea that the evil originated in Salem under the cruel auspices of the Puritans? Trials for the offence were not confined to New England in America. There were such trials in New York in 1665, and on Long Island in 1660. The just and benign William Penn also enforced its punishment, sitting as a judge in Pennsylvania. Palfrey says the extensive literature of witchcraft shows a list of two thousand treatises. Looking at the history of witchcraft as well as at other persecutions and intolerance, we shall find the general truth to be, that when such evils come in a period or upon a generation, they reach all sects and classes; all are affected by what may be called the spirit of the age in which they live.

"The reverend gentleman, whose remark this evening, not complimentary to the Pilgrims, has induced this statement on my part, is a shining light and leader in the good Episcopal Church, and receives, as he deserves, the respect and esteem of all who know him.

"I hope I shall not further too much disturb his equanimity when I remind him that his church, in Virginia, was intolerant in the Colonial period. In convocation assembled after the asserting the doctrine of the Trinity, the Episcopalians procured the enactment of severe penal laws against all dissenters from the doctrine. Some of the penalties were physical torture and banishment.

"Here we are to-night very properly commemorating the shining virtues of the Holland ancestry. It is no desire of mine to detract from the honors due to such ancestors. But as illustrative of the remark just made, I will venture to refer to an instance in Holland history, which shows that the good Dutch ancestors were not free, by any means, from the spirit of intolerance and bigotry, which was then not uncommon in other parts of the world. Let us see what example, touching tolerance, the good Holland ancestors set for the Pilgrim Fathers at the very time they were residing in Leyden. There was a noted convocation of Dutch Calvinistic theologians, known as the Synod of Dort, held in Holland in the year 1618. At this time the Pilgrims were living in Leyden, where they learned, as many of you would say, lessons of tolerance and liberty. The purpose of this synod was to settle the five carding points of Calvinism, and to squelch the Arminians. After a prolonged discusion in which the eminent John Robinson, the able pastor of the Pilgrims, the state by special invitation, because of his learning, the 'points' were settled lowed by a cruel decree, procured by the synod, inflicting under severe penalties by bodily punishments, and, for the offence hardshment from Holland. In the face of this example of Dutch intolerand we clear must have been the conviction in the Pilgrim mind of the duty of colerance and kindness which enabled them under all conditions to oppose persecution of those who differed from them in matters of conscience. I must also remind our Dutch friends gathered here to-night to commemorate the love of liberty which their ancestors showed in a general sense, that these same ancestors persecuted the Quakers. Broadhead, in his History of New York, tells the sad story:

"That famous Dutchman, Governor Stuyvesant, was so harsh, intolerant, and cruel in his administration towards the Quakers, that his own people at last cried out against him and compelled him to halt. The Puritans did not like Roger Williams. They regarded him as a disturber—a sort of come-outer—and compelled him to retire from their jurisdiction. This was done, not because he was a Baptist, as many suppose. He did not join that sect till later. See how the Pilgrims looked upon this procedure. On his way toward Rhode Island Williams called on Governor Winslow, a representative Pilgrim, at Plymouth, who spoke words of kindness and sympathy to him, and placed a gold coin in his wife's hand, to provide for their wants. Williams was touched with gratitude and eulogized the Governor [see p. 46 Vol. I, Winslow Memorial.

"Look for a moment at the persecutions of the Quakers by the Puritans-not the Pilgrims. Though much may be said in explanation of this persecution, if not in extenuation it is relevant to refer to the fact that it did not originate with the Puritans. The Quakers in our time justly command the respect of all good people. Its leader in England was George Fox. In the fourth year of the Commonwealth, in 1652, there were twenty-five preachers of Fox's doctrine in England. The persecution of the Quakers had been constant and severe in England for several years before their arrival in New England. The denunciations against them, which were common in England, had reached Puritan ears, and were credited. The Puritan mind saw, or thought it. saw, that there must be no latitude allowed for 'Quaker machinations' in New England. The Puritans believed, upon English testimony, that the Quakers were publishers of irregular and irreligious notions, that they were fanatical declaimers against every good thing established, evil speakers against dignities, and disturbers of the peace of good society. This being so in puritanic estimation, the Puritans held they had a right to refuse them their fellowship, and to bar them from their territorial limits, secured to them by their charter, so when the Quakers reached the Puritan shores, the persecution from which they had so grievously suffered in England, and in which thousands were punished, followed them here as a sequence of English premises and English argument.

"This persecution, though not defensible in our light, was not originated by the Puritans. It is also true that it was not confined to New England in this country. A return by the Quakers from banishment continued to be a felony in Virginia years after it ceased to be a felony in Massachusetts—so we are informed by Mr. Jefferson in his Notes on Virginia. I make these remarks, not to criticise or censure any sect, nor to jar the smooth flow of these festivities, but to show the truth of my position, that when we feel like hastily criticising everybody's ancestors but our own, we had better have a care and see first what are the teachings of plain history. Our good friends of the St. Patrick's Society, who are here to-night, and who sometimes are inclined to criticise the Puritans, will be interested to learn that witchcraft was first proceeded against as a crime, as early as 1484, by Pope Innocent the VIII, who issued a bull directing the inquisitors to be vigilant in searching out and punishing persons guilty of this alleged crime. The mandate was supported and enforced by succeeding popes. The horrors which marks the execution of these bulls for two centuries and a half are recorded in blood. I refer to this, not to criticise any sect, but to show how all are likely to be affected. But some one of the sons may say: 'Oh, well! our people set a good example in this country of tolerance and love of liberty, especially those who settled in Maryland,' yet it becomes my painful duty to remind that even in Maryland there was an example set of intolerance, in matters of religious belief, which was as bad as that of Virginia, and illustrates the position I have taken. The good Catholics of the Maryland Colony procured the enactment of a penal law against dissenters from the doctrine of the Trinity, as severe as that procured by the Episcopalians in Virginia, and very much like it. So then, gentlemen, while it is right and useful to commemorate the virtues of the fathers, and natural for us to discriminate in favor of our own particular line of ancestry, touching the spirit of intolerance and persecution that has marked the ages, let us rather be grateful that we live in a period when the rights and liberties of our common humanity were never so fully recognized, understood, and enforced as now." [Loud applause].

Mr. Winslow has recently read a paper that has attracted considerable attention before the Brooklyn Republican League, before the Rhode Island Historical Society at Providence, and before the State Bar Association at Albany. The paper is entitled "The Trial of the Rhode Island Judges: An Episode touching Currency and Constitutional Law." The trial occurred in 1786. The accusation was that the judges were guilty of usurpation in declaring an act of the Assembly unconstitutional and void. The act sought to enforce and uphold the validity of the paper money—so-called—issued by the authority of the Assembly. The paper attracted wide attention, especially in Rhode Island, where it was much discussed and commended by the press throughout the State.

Besides being a man of large general reading and thoroughly familiar with the principles of law, Mr. Winslow is distinguished by his muscular common sense, and his manly fairness and strength in arguing every question, whether at the bar or before political assemblages, while his full and accurate knowledge on all subjects which he discusses render him a formidable and dangerous, though courteous and generous adversary.

Mr. Winslow has recently visited Europe, not omitting Droitwich in England, the home of his ancestors. (See pp. 2, 3, 4 of this Appendix). 1888, law office, 26 Court Street, Brooklyn, N.Y.

HON. SAMUEL, [5086] (s. of Eleazer-Robbins Winslow,) was born in Newton, Mass., 28 Feb. 1827, and received his education in the schools of that town. On leaving school he was employed in the manufacture of cotton machinery, and early displayed great industry and inventive skill, and so rapidly advanced that at the age of twenty he was made foreman in his shop, having under his charge more than fifty men. He removed to Worcester early in 1855, and on April 1st of that year formed a co-partnership with his brother, Seth-C. Winslow, and started a machine shop, and in 1857, in connection with machine work, began the manufacture of skates. The firm was located in the Merrifield building, and occupied the same quarters for twentyone years. His brother dying in 1870 or 1871, Mr. W. continued the business alone until the formation of the Samuel Winslow Skate Manufacturing Company, in May, 1886, in which concern Mr. Winslow retained a controlling interest. In 1874, the demands of a rapidly increasing business requiring better accommodations, he built upon Mulberry Street a large factory, the size of which he has since been compelled to further increase. Mr. Winslow was a member of the Common Council of the city of Worcester in 1864-5. He was a representative from the Tenth Worcester District in the Massachusetts Legislature in 1873-4, and in 1885 served as Alderman to fill a vacancy. In 1885 he was elected Mayor of the city of Worcester, for the ensuing year, by a sweeping majority, and has been twice re-elected to the same position for the years 1887-8 by large majorities. His efficiency as Mayor is generally recognized, and is attested by his election to that office three times. He was a Trustee of the Worcester County Mechanics Association from 1868 to 1871; its Vice President from 1884 to 1886; its President in 1886, and declined a re-election in 1887 for President on account of the responsibilities of the office of Mayor.

In 1885 Mr. Winslow became the owner of the famous "Stonewall Farm" in Leicester, Mass., six miles from Wercester. The farm contains about sixty acres. and is in good condition. There is a large dwelling house on it, which, when built, in 1832, was the finest house in Worcester County. He has recently put it in good order, together with stables. In September, 1886, Mr. Winslow entertained some two hundred guests in the banquet hall adjoining the house, among whom were the members of the Worcester City government, and other guests from various parts of the State. Again in September, 1887, he gave a banquet to all the Mayors in Massachusetts, and other distinguished gentlemen. Among the latter were Hon. Adlin Thayer, Hon. Wm.-C. Rice, United States Senator Hon. George-F. Hoar, and Hon. Mr. Russell, Member of Congress. His brother, Hon. John Winslow of Brooklyn. N.Y., presided on both occasions. He has taken a deep interest in the organization of Clark University in Worcester, and has aided the enterprise officially and otherwise. This new university is amply endowed by Mr. Clark, a resident of Worcester, and likely in due time to take a foremost position among the universities of the country.

Mr. Winslow's success in acquiring wealth and gaining and holding the respect of his neighbors and fellow townsmen is attributable to his sterling integrity, excellent judgment, and executive ability of a high order.

ISAAC-SLEPARD, [5124] (s. of Isaac Winslow). In Vol. I Mr. Winslow was mentioned as the chief engineer on the steamship Mississippi, which carried General Butler and staff to New Orleans. In a letter received from him in 1877, after that portion of the volume was in type, he disclosed some things which occurred during the voyage not generally known. The steamship was an iron one, built in Boston, and he had taken charge of setting up its machinery, and was the chief engineer. It was chartered by the Government for General Butler's expedition before it was fully completed, carried out the 31st Mass. and part of Colonel Dow's regiment from Maine. General Butler and staff were taken on board at Fortress Monroe. There soon arose a bitter feeling between General Butler and the captain of the ship. The former told Engineer Winslow "that he had been warned before he came on board that Captain Fulton was a 'secesh' and would get the expedition into trouble if possible.

"After leaving Fortress Monroe General Butler gave orders to run into Hatteras Inlet for an officer to join the expedition." The ship was "run into the breakers," the captain, in his excitement, giving contradictory orders, but after a little she was brought out in safety. "Two days later we ran ashore on Frying Pan Shoals. It was clear and pleasant, a light-house in sight, and so was a buoy." The captain "let go the anchor. The ship struck upon it, and punched a hole up through her bottom," and the forward compartment soon filled with water. "Twelve hours afterward we got off again and ran down to Hilton Head for repairs. At the request of General Butler a number of old navy officers undertook to stop the leak," but were unsuccessful—the hold was full of water. "General Butler was discouraged and began to look for another vessel, so as to send the Mississippi home. It was then that Chief Engineer Winslow had permission to try to stop the leak without dictation or interference. The sail was put around the ship again, the water pumped out, and in twelve hours after the hold was so that he could work, he had the leak effectually stopped, so that it remained tight until the ship went into dry dock in New York. some four or five months after. The freight was put back into the ship, and she started once more for her destination." But "the river being narrow where she was lying, the tug employed to turn her around backed her so that the stern struck in the bank with force enough to part the tiller chains, and then left her. The tide and wind swung the ship around so she was heading the right way, when orders were given, 'ahead slow,' and a lively hunt was commenced for relieving tackle with which to steer the ship. Captain Fulton had assured General Butler a few days before that he always kept it ready by the tiller to use at once in case of an emergency. That time had come, but the tackles were not there. Some were found, however, and they commenced getting them ready. 'Are you all ready to steer the ship?' called the pilot from forward. 'All ready,'" was the reply. "Hard a starboard,' shouted the pilot. 'Aye, aye, Sir,' but they did not put the helm 'hard a starboard,' they were not ready. They put the ship hard on an oyster bank a minute later, where she stayed for several days, and where they had to take the freight out again. General Butler then put Captain Fulton under arrest on board the steamship Matanzas, and placed Captain Sturges in command."...

The ship reached Fire Island without any further accident or delay, and in due time "the first troops in the city of New Orleans were landed from the steamship Mississippi."

Mr. Winslow was also chief engineer of the steamer De Malay during the war; afterward of the steamship Ontario; also of the steamer Seminole, and had been for five years, about 1872 to 1877, chief engineer and master mechanic at the Bay State Iron Works in Boston, Mass. "She was the inheritor of the mental and moral sturdiness which characterized the Puritan stock. She was a woman of educated tastes, studious habits, and vigorous thought. School teaching occupied several of her younger years. In 1831 she came with her husband and located in the township of London, where she lived for half a century, save two months, and where at last she died at the ripe age of 76. This pioneer home was consecrated with piety and prayer. In it the first Sunday-school of the township was organized and taught. There the itinerant of the early days found a welcome and a lodging place. It was the Methodist circuit riders' home for years. Although born and reared a Congregationalist, Mrs. C. was for many years a member of the M.E. Church; but died in the communion of the church of her youth."

DR. JOSIAH-GILBERT<sup>8</sup>, [5784] (s. of Harrison<sup>7</sup> Holland,) d. in New York City on Wednesday, Oct. 12, 1881. We quote the following from some of the leading journals of the day, relating to his death and funeral, and some sentiments expressed at the later memorial services held in his honor:

"Dr. Josiah-Gilbert Holland, the editor of Scribner's Monthly, now the Century Magazine, died suddenly yesterday morning of angina pectoris, at his city residence, No. 46 Park Avenue. For the past five years he has been in ill health, suffering from heart disease, the seriousness of which complaint he was fully aware of, his physicians having told him four years ago that he could not live for more than ten years, and that he might die suddenly at any moment. On the fifth of October Dr. Holland returned with his family to New York from Bonnicastle, his country residence among the Thousand Islands in the St. Lawrence River, feeling stronger and better in health than he had been for some time. Since his return he has been daily to the new offices of the Century Magazine in Union Square, attending to his editorial duties. On Tuesday last he remarked that he felt unusually well, and spent a longer time at the office than customary. He was in excellent spirits when he returned home, and retired for the night in apparently good health. At six o'clock yesterday morning he awoke and complained of a pain in his heart, and almost immediately afterward became unconscious. A doctor was summoned, but before he arrived Dr. Holland was dead. The deceased leaves a wife and two daughters, who were all present at his death-bed, and one son, Theodore Holland, who is in the senior class at Yale. He was telegraphed for yesterday morning."

"The funeral services of the late Dr. Josiah-Gilbert Holland took place yesterday afternoon at the family residence, No. 46 Park Avenue. A very large number of the Iriends of the deceased were present. The obsequies were conducted by the Rev. Llewellyn D. Bevan, pastor of the Brick Presbyterian Church on Fifth Avenue, where the deceased worshipped. Dr. Bevan was assisted by the Rev. Dr. Murray, the former pastor of the church. The services consisted of prayers and readings from the Holy Scriptures. There were no pall-bearers. The casket which contained the remains of the dead author was placed before the mantel in the large front drawing room of the house, and the face was exposed to view. Upon the lid of the casket were arranged flowers. A wreath of gladioli lay on the cover, and toward the foot tendrills of vines with yellow roses trailed to the floor. At the foot of the coffin stood a cross of dark ivy with a wreath of white and yellow roses hung over its arms. On the mantel stood a wreath of roses, and a duplicate of the cross and circlet stood upon the piano at the other end of the room. On the stand in the hall were scattered ivy and roses. Dr. Murray began the services by reading: 'I am the Resurrection and the Life,' and the hymn 'Jesus, lover of my soul,' which was then sung by a quartette of male voices. A short prayer was then offered, in which, among other things, Dr. Murray paid an earnest tribute to Dr. Holland's goodness and purity of purpose. He said that the deceased would have a long immortality upon earth through the characters which his life and example had built up, and by the good influence which he had always exercised on those about him. After the prayer the hymn, 'My Jesus, as Thou wilt,' was sung by the quartette. Dr. Bevan followed, delivering a feeling prayer, in which he spoke of the wide field in which Dr. Holland's work had been done. At the conclusion of Dr. Bevan's prayer, and before the benediction was pronounced, he stated that those who desired to look for the last time on the features of their friend were invited to pass in line by the coffin, which would be removed very soon after the close of the services. The benediction was then pronounced. At 3.30 o'clock the remains, accompanied by the mourners and a few immediate friends of the deceased, were conveyed to the railway depot, to be taken to Springfield, Mass., where the interment will take place to-morrow. The final services will take place at 11 o'clock to-morrow morning, at the house of C.-O. Chapin, Esq., a brother of Mrs. Holland, in Springfield. It is expected that memorial services will be held in New York and Springfield in honor of Dr. Holland at an early day."—New York Times.

"A large congregation assembled last night at the Brick Church, Fifth Avenue, to take part in the memorial service to Dr. Holland. Appropriate anthems were sung by the choir, and Dr. Bevan, after reading suitable selections from the Scriptures, delivered an admirable discourse on the career of the departed author and editor. He considered him as the man, the writer and the Christian, narrating several of his own personal experiences with Dr. Holland. He attributed the material and literary success of the latter to his possession of the preservative and conservative principles of Christian character, which were, he said, the glow and the glory of a perfect manhood. The religious belief of Dr. Holland might be described as a perspective religion. He was orthodox, and was seen to be orthodox when allowed to tell his own story in his own way. The cardinal articles of his faith were a belief in God and Jesus Christ; all other matters were subordinate, and the liberality of his nature allowed to others a wide radius for their faith to dwell in. After the singing of the hymn commencing 'Sun of my soul, thou Saviour dear,' the benediction was pronounced and the service brought to a close."

"One such character, went on the preacher, Rev. Dr. Potter, I desire to mention here this morning, just because to so many of us his influence has, perhaps, been so little known and so imperfectly appreciated. A man of letters died in this city during the past week, who, coming here scarcely two years ago from New England. was, perhaps, scarcely known by a single member of this congregation. I speak of the late Dr. J.-G. Holland. He was a man of good gifts, consecrated by a great motive. Not of the first intellectual rank, he was nevertheless a preacher of righteousness, of rare power, and often of singular sweetness. Writing of plain, homely themes, he never touched one of them that he did not ennoble, and over all that he wrote them in the spirit of one who loved God and his fellow man. His writings found an acceptance which has often puzzled the critics and confounded the literary prophets. But the secret of his writings was not far to seek. They helped men and lifted them up. They encouraged all noble aspirations. They were always for God and the right—spoken in a tone of manly and brotherly sympathy that could not be misunderstood. In a word, this large influence, to which, for one, I gladly own to having been a debtor, owed its power for good—a power steadfast and widespreading, I believe as yet beyond adequate estimate—to a character touched by a spell of divine love, and lifted by that spell into a realm of happy and wholesome influences."

"Dr. Holland recently sold out his interest in Scribner's Monthly. He had been for some time busy re-editing a new edition of his books, which Scribner & Co. will shortly issue. He was a member of the Union League and Press Clubs."

"By the death of Dr. J.-G. Holland we have lost perhaps the most popular of our novelists, essayists and poets. His stories proved profitable both to the writer and the publisher. Few volumes of essays have at any time had so great a sale as the "Timothy Titcomb Letters," and the demand for "Kathrina" and "Bitter Sweet" has been extraordinary, especially when we remember that they are long narratives in verse. All of the volumes which he published during the last twenty years were successful books, and some of them were sold to the number of ninety and a hundred thousand copies each.

"Dr. Holland was one of the few authors of the United States who have made a fortune out of literature—one of the few not only of this country, but of England also. Dr. Holland, however, was one of those fortunate writers to whom the reward comes at once, and comes in actual money. Beginning with the "Timothy Titcomb Letters," his publishers printed for him during twenty years fifteen volumes. The combined circulation of these works, which were not sold at the present cheap prices for fiction, but at the old and comparatively high prices obtained for bound and copyrighted books, was so great that he received from them a total royalty remarkable in the history of our literature.

"Still, Dr. Holland was never a writer who commended himself to the favor of the critics. They looked on him as an inartistic novelist, a commonplace essayist, and a poet to whom, at least, had been denied the fire of genius. He was, indeed, always a preacher, in prose and in verse. He was far more concerned with his moral than his art. He wanted to make his readers better according to his lights, which were those of an orthodox Puritan. And shall we not honor him for so pure and admirable a purpose? He placed his heroes and heroines amid circumstances which were easily comprehensible by the class to whom he appealed. He imbued them with the moral and religious ideas which had been imparted to his readers in church and in Sunday school. When he wrote of domestic affairs, and gave advice concerning the manner of life, he addressed himself directly to the respectable churchgoing people of his own general theological bent, and showed that he was in sympathy with them.

"His thought was never subtle, he was without any puzzling cynicism, could always be understood, was ever in earnest, and in whatever he wrote showed that he loved the good and hated the bad. Therefore he became a teacher and a mentor for great numbers of young men and maidens who had received what we call a Puritan training. They did not miss the spice demanded by the literary appetites of those whose experience has been more with the world, and whose reading has been less restricted by conventional religious scruples of the old-fashioned kind. It is doubtful whether just such an author as Dr. Holland was will ever again be so successful in this country."

THOMAS-GPOSS, (s. of John-B. Winslow,) b. 20 July, 1800, Hanover, Mass.; was killed by being struck by the boom of a derrick, 13 July, 1846, Lowell, Mass.; m. Elizabeth, dau. of George Rutherford. Sea captain. In his later days commanded a packet between Newburyport and Boston. [No information given of his father, except that he is called a sawyer, manufacturer of shoe boxes, and resided Hanover, Mass. We have no line of ancestry of a John-B. Winslow living in 1800, hence the statement that his son's birth and death occurred simultaneously with that of the Thomas-Gross<sup>8</sup>, s. of Thomas<sup>7</sup> Winslow [6037], and that the place of birth was probably the same, both the fathers having lived in Hanover, inclines us to think that some error exists as to the record furnished by the different families. The names of the children of this Thomas-Gross Winslow, it will be observed, are different from those given as belonging to the other, are evidently born at a later date, and could have been the children of the former by a third wife, Elizabeth Rutherford. It is also noticeable that both lived in South Boston. We simply give the family in this connection with these suggestions, but do not assume that this latter family is an extension of the foregoing, or to explain any of the seeming discrepancies. Possibly this insertion may be the means of future explanation. Res. 7th St., South Boston, Mass.

HARRIET-LATHROP, [6881] (dau. of Rev. Miron<sup>6</sup> Winslow, D.D.,) m. Rev. John-Welsh DULLES, D.D., who d. 13 Apr. 1887 in Philadelphia, Pa. He was son of Joseph-Heatly Dulles, a leading merchant of Philadelphia, a member of the Fifth Presbyterian Church, and for twenty-two years, from 1831 to 1853—when he left to take part in the formation of Calvary Church—a member of the First Presbyterian Church under the pastorate of Rev. Albert Barnes. This honored father was one of the founders of the American Sunday School Union; he drafted the constitution of that society, and moved its adoption at a public meeting in Philadelphia in May, 1824; was for more than fifty years one of its prominent managers, and for nearly half a century an efficient Sunday-school superintendent or Bible-class teacher. At his prompting, his pastor, Rev. Albert Barnes, began his series of Bible notes for Sunday-school teachers, which was so much needed and so greatly appreciated by teachers all over our land, and in all Christian lands. Mr. Dulles was a mover in the calling of the first National Sunday-school Convention at New York in 1832; he prepared the first primer for publication by the Union, and when already above four score years old prepared a new reading primer on an improved plan of instruction, and was at work on yet another at the time of his death. Such was the father, and such the example enjoyed by Rev. Dr. Dulles. His mother was Margaret (Welsh) of Philadelphia.

Dr. Dulles was converted while in Yale College; united with the College Church June 4, 1843, and was dismissed 6 Apr. 1845 to Clinton Street Presbyterian Church in Philadelphia. Rev. W.-M. Rice, D.D., related at the special meeting of the Board, held 14 Apr. 1887, to take action in regard to his death, some incidents of the last hour he spent in his office, which was on the 11th January preceding his death. In conversation with two or three gentlemen of the Board who were present, the name of a prominent minister of the Presbyterian Church was mentioned. Dr. Dulles said that this minister was a fellow student with him in Yale College. After speaking of the moral and religious influence which he uniformly exerted over his college associates, Dr. Dulles made the following statement: During a time of deep religious feeling in the college this gentleman called upon him saying: "I suppose you are surprised at receiving a visit from me to-day." "Not at all," said Dr. Dulles, "you have come to converse with me upon the subject of personal religion. Sit down here at my desk and write out for me a pledge, that from this day forward I will endeavor fully and faithfully to consecrate myself to the service of my Saviour, and I will sign it." The pledge was written and signed. Dr. Dulles's life-long devotion to Christ shows how faithfully he kept the pledge, and how signally God blessed his fellow student's effort to do good.

"Dr. Dulles was an admirable scholar, an enthusiast in Greek literature, a graceful and forcible writer, a devout christian, an attractive preacher," and though compelled, by failure of health and comparative loss of voice, to leave the missionary work to which he had early consecrated his life, who would say that the good he wrought was not even greater than though he had not been in a measure disqualified for foreign missionary service. "During the three years" of his service as "Missionary Secretary of the American Sunday School Union nearly seven thousand new Sunday-schools were organized in pioneer communities and needy neighborhoods, into which more than forty thousand teachers were set at the work of telling the story of Jesus to more than a quarter of a million of scholars; for twenty-nine years he was superintendent of the Sabbath-school of Walnut Street Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia. After his graduation at Yale, and while pursuing his studies at the Union Theological Seminary in New York, he spent his vacation in colportage under the American Tract Society. In 1845 he studied medicine with a view of being more useful in the foreign missionary work. He took a deep interest and an active part in the management of the Bible Society and Colonization Society of Pennsylvania, but his great work was done in connection with the Presbyterian Board of Publication."

"Dr. Dulles held the position of editor of the Publication Committee of the New School General Assembly from 1857 till the re-union in 1870, when, on June 14th of that year, he was elected Editorial Secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Publication of the Re-united Church, which office he continued to fill till his last illness. After the resignation of Dr. Schenck as Corresponding Secretary in 1885, he also performed the duties of that office, and in January preceding his death was elected to the newly established office of General Secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Publication. His editorial work, extending first in the New School, and then in the Re-united Church for thirty years, must have touched countless homes and hearts, leaving its blessings in every one." His attainments were wide, and varied far more so than any one knows, save those who were most closely associated with him, and all his wealth of culture and attainment went to the perfecting and enriching of the literature that went out through his hand. His refined literary taste and his fine moral sense have secured for the Presbyterian Sabbath-schools and homes not only doctrinal soundness in periodicals and books, but also purity, beauty, and excellence of quality.

Many clergymen, when turning aside from pastoral work to semi-secular occupations, become more or less secularized in their spirit and life; Dr. Dulles, however, never forgot that he was a christian minister as truly when at his desk engaged in routine editorial duties, as if he had been in the pulpit preaching the gospel. He seemed to put a little of Christ into everything he did. A contributor, who knew him only as an editor, wrote: "I feel as if I had lost a personal friend. Editors as a rule are very human, and in the press of business they sometimes forget that they 'pass this way but once.' Not so the dear man who has now gone. He put a soul, as I can testify, even into his most hurried letters." Another wrote: "So many busy people are too hurried to remember always the kindly word that might cheer a fellow worker, but Dr. Dulles seemed never to forget;" and still another: "For at least fifteen years many times a year I have received letters which have been characteristic of the man-never just a business form; always a cheery message, a helpful word, something that time and again has made me say to myself, 'what a bighearted, fatherly man he must be." He put soul into everything he did. Even in the bærest pieces of routine work with pen or tongue he found place for a word of love, a little brotherly help for a struggling, weary life. There was a great charm in his personal character. No one ever heard him speak a bitter or even a discourteous word; he forgot injuries and wrongs, and never cherished a grudge.

Rev. W.-B. Green said: "A more perfect christian gentleman never lived. Always true to his convictions, and though having very decided convictions, it seemed impossible for an opponent to throw him off his balance, or for the rudeness of an adversary to call forth any remark from him that was not hallowed by the gentleness of Christ's spirit... and finally Dr. Dulles was remarkable for the purity of his life—not only did he himself say nothing that was impure, but he seemed to make it impossible for those with him to do so." In short, there seemed to be in his character a remarkable blending of Christlike gentleness and love with the most inflexible adherence to principle and conduct.

His printed works were: Life in India, one of the most graphic accounts extant of everyday life in that country; The Ride Through Palestine, the copyright of which he presented to the Board, has gone through several editions, is used largely by Sabbath-school teachers as a most complete, condensed, and an interesting compendium of the geography, topography, and History of the Holy Land; The Sunbeam for infant scholars, developed from a germ in his own thought to a weekly issue of 120,000 copies. He also published The Soldiers' Friend, and Ram Krishnapunt.

Rev. Wm.-P. Breed, D.D., President of the Board of Publication, thus wrote of him on hearing of his death, from his place of sojourn in Europe: "Knowing as we do how slight a jar may snap the silver cord, how easily the golden bowl is broken, the pitcher at the fountain, and the wheel at the cistern, and man withdrawn to his long home; knowing as we do that a single step may pass one from the most robust life to the shroud and pall, and the narrow house; that every swing of the pendulum announces the departure of a soul; knowing all this so well, surprise at the tidings of any death would seem to be impossible, especially tidings of the death of a brother prostrate upon his bed from heart disease. But the change death works is so sudden and so tremendous; it puts such a gulf between the surviving and the departed, the ear that a moment ago responded to a whisper now deaf to a voice loud as seven thunders, that the cessation of the breath, the final stilling of a human heart is always an event startlingly sudden.

"'We turn the pages that they read,
Their written words we linger o'er;
But in the sun they cast no shade,
No voice is heard, no sign is made,
No step is on the conscious floor."

The funeral services were held on Friday, April 15, 1887, in the Walnut Street Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia, and were attended by a large number of his relatives and friends. The Board of Publication, with all its officers and employees, was present in a body. The coffin was carried by his six sons, all members, and two of them ministers of the Presbyterian Church. The remains were taken to Laurel Hill Cemetery, Philadelphia, attended by the immediate family, and privately interred.

Rev. S.-W. Dana, D.D., pastor of the church, was assisted in the services by Rev. Charles-A. Dickey, D.D., Rev. J.-Addison Henry, D.P., Rev. D.-W. Poor, D. D., Rev. W.-C. Cattell, D.D., Rev. J.-R. Miller, D.D., and Rev. H.-Clay Trumbull, D.D., from some of whose remarks quotations have been made in the foregoing sketch of the life and character of Dr. Dulles.

Dr. John-Welsh Dulles of Philadelphia, assisted by the pastor of the church, Rev. Dr. Bartell, to Edith Foster, 13 Jan. 1886, dau. of Gen. John-N. and Mary-Parke (Macfersen) of Washington, D.C. In consequence of a fire which broke out in Gen. Foster's residence the evening previous to the marriage, the houses of their neighbors, Chief-Justice Waite, Mr. John-W. Thompson, and Mr. Darwin-P. James were thrown open to receive the suddenly dislodged family and their wedding guests from a distance, while Mr. and Mrs. Charles Nordhoff at once assumed preparations for holding the wedding supper under their hospitable roof. The bridal party, with their immediate friends, were accordingly driven there immediately after the ceremony at the church. A large and distinguished attendance graced the latter, including many of the foreign ministers, Gen. Foster having served our Government in three different capitals. Presents of great value from India, Moscow, Mexico, and China were received by the bride, together with many from nearer friends. Fortunately these escaped injury in the disaster preceding the wedding. Pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Watertown, N.Y. Res. 1888, Watertown, N.Y.

REV. WILLIAM-COPLEY, D.D., [6952] (s. of Rev. Hubbard Winslow, D.D.,) is said to be one of the most prolific writers in his church, where, in the line of biblical and archæological research he holds a foremost place. No one among the Episcopal clergy, it is said, has so many honorary titles and memberships in learned bodies, both foreign and home, as has Dr. Winslow. Outside of his frequent articles for the publications of these societies and the daily and periodical press of the land, he is a contributor to all the newspapers of his denomination, and The Church Review in particular.

Through his instrumentality the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston has been enriched with various valuable antiquities of the different periods of Egyptian history. He has procured from the Egypt Exploration Fund, of which he is vicepresident and honorary treasurer for America, the colossus of Rameses II, now in the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. [For description of this see The Church Press of Dec. 3, 1887.] Professor E.-C. Mitchell, D.D., of Cambridge, Mass., writes for the Old Testament Student that through Dr. Winslow's correspondence and personal influence a very large number of eminent scholars and distinguished men have enrolled their names as members of the society, and The Academy (London), in its report of a special general meeting held by the Egypt Exploration Fund, mentions the high encomium paid to Dr. Winslow by Mr. Reginald-Stuart Poole (Hon. Sec.), and by Miss Amelia-B. Edwards, L.L.D. (Hon. Sec.), the latter stating that "with the one single exception, the late Sir Erasmus Wilson, Dr. Winslow had done more than any one, not merely for the work of the society, but for the cause of biblical research and the spread of biblical knowledge in connection with Egyptology throughout the civilized world."

Dr. Winslow is historiographer of the Webster Hist. Society. About Dec. 1, 1887, he was elected honorary member of the Nat. Hist. Soc. of Montreal, the oldest and most distinguished of the learned bodies of Canada, and later, during May, 1888, was elected Fellow of the Royal Soc. of Antiquaries, Scotland. Among the home societies, before which he reads papers from time to time, are the New Eng. Hist. Gen. Soc., the Oriental, the Bostonian, and various religious organizations. He was one of one hundred European and American scholars selected to furnish a paper for the great album commemorative of the semi-centenary of Leeman's directorship (in 1885) of the Leyden Museum. The Masonic readers of this volume will be glad to know of Dr. Winslow's active interest in the fraternity, and that he has been for eight years Excellent High Priest in the commandery of St. Bernard, in Boston. He has preached and lectured in more than one hundred Episcopal churches of Massachusetts. The past year he contributed two hundred and forty-eight articles of all kinds to the press. One of the three executive committees of the Clerical Association of his diocese, he formed the Clerical Club in 1881, and serves on numerous committees in secular and religious matters in Massachusetts.

REV. GORDON<sup>6</sup>, D.D., [6957] (s. of Nathaniel<sup>5</sup> Winslow,) m. Katharine-G. Fish, who d. 12 Jan. 1888. "Funeral services will be held in Trinity Church, New York on Saturday Jan. 14 at 12 o'clock." On page 621 it is said Dr. Winslow's remains were never found. Rev. Dr. W.-C. Winslow states that his remains must have been recovered, as the watch he wore at the time of drowning was some years since in the possession of his widow.

Children:

1. Dea. Burton-Hockey, b. 21 Jan. 1855, Freedom, Me.; m. Camden, Me., 15 Feb. 1881, Annie-P. Perry of Camden. Mr. Winslow was educated in the public schools of Lewiston, and completed the entire course, graduating at the High School with good rank in 1871, at the age of sixteen. After serving a short time in an architect's office in Lewiston, he accepted a position in Boston, Mass., as draughtsman for Hon. A.-D. Lockwood, cotton mill engineer, and resided in the neighboring city of Chelsea. Here he became a Christian and united with the First Baptist Church in 1872.

In the following year he returned to Lewiston to become bookkeeper for the Androscoggin Mills, which position he filled for seven years. At Lewiston he was active in religious work, and in addition to his regular office duties he for two years edited a monthly religious paper, The Cross and Crown, which proved quite successful. He also developed decided musical tastes, and was manager of several fine concerts by "Gilmore's Band," etc. In April, 1880, he accepted the position of paymaster of the Laconia Company, a large cotton manufacturing company at Biddeford, Me., and in September, 1880, was elected corporation clerk for both the Laconia Company and Pepperell Manufacturing Company, another large cotton company at Biddeford, which positions he has since held. He made his home in Saco, adjoining Biddeford, where he became active in the affairs of the Baptist Church, being elected Sunday-school superintendent January 7, 1883, and deacon in 1886, continuing in both these offices, and having charge of the church choir most of the time. In 1887 he began the publication of his Sunday-school concert exercises, and contributes articles to the religious papers.

REV. DAVID-LONG, [9473] (s. of Dr. George Winslow). We quote, from an obituary recently received, some additional history of his life and work. "His father designed him for the medical profession, and shaped his education to that end. After his conversion, at the age of seventeen, he experienced a growing desire for the work of the ministry, which made the study and prospective practice of medicine distasteful. At the age of twenty-two, after a preparatory course of study, he became a member of the New England Conference, and for seventeen years labored in the several fields of work assigned him in that Conference, with untiring zeal, constant fidelity, and success.

"Family ties growing stronger in the West, he removed to Illinois, and connected himself with the Rock River Conference in 1853. In all the charges committed to his care in the Conference for seventeen years—from Sycamore, the first, to La Center, the last of them—he proved himself an energetic and faithful pastor, an acceptable and a successful preacher of the 'glorious glad tidings of the Son of God.' He rests from his labors, but the influence of his thirty-four years of self-sacrificing devotion to the work of the itinerant ministry lives in a multitude of hearts, and in the precious memories that spread their fragrance over his numerous fields of Christian toil. The last four years of his life were spent in the quiet of his own home. As a public laborer in the kingdom of Christ he was superannuated, but his heart was all the while aglow with interest in the work to which his life had been given. He longed, and inwardly prayed for a more glorious ingathering of souls to Christ than yet has been realized by the Church.

G.A.W.I."

RICHARD<sup>6</sup>, [10033] (s. of Nathan<sup>6</sup> Winslow). The steamer Bunker Hill, alluded to on page 842, was at the time a noted side-wheel passenger boat. In 1845 the steamer Saratoga, which was a great favorite with the traveling public, was added to their fleet, and also the propeller Republic. As the business developed, the variety increased in size as well as in number, till the Winslow fleet numbered forty vessels and propellers. In 1854 Mr. Winslow retired, giving entire control of the business to his sons. "The house of Richard Winslow was one of the strongest in credit and integrity in all the land. Honor, high mercantile honor, which had descended through generations of good, pure Puritan blood, was always in that house the first prime commodity." "The commercial men of Cleveland were of great energy, of character and enterprise, and of remarkable intelligence, and among them the late Mr. Richard Winslow stands out a strong and marked character. He was a most thoroughly inbred 'gentleman of the old school,' and one long to be remembered by the remaining few who were honored by his friendship and acquaintance. He was a man of strong marked characteristics, a man of positive opinions and convictions, and decided in the expression of them; and his sons have inherited in a marked degree the strong and positive qualities of their father, who was the very soul of honor and fair dealing among men."

Mrs. Winslow was a southern woman, and said to have been very stately and beautiful.

NATHAN-CRANE'. [10034] (s. of Richard's Winslow,) m. Mary-Ann (Clarke), who, after the death of her venerable mother, lived and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Williams of Baltimore. The following is taken from a notice of her death and burial given by a Cleveland newspaper of that date:

"Death has taken away from amidst loving friends a most remarkable woman, Mrs. Mary-Ann Winslow, widow of the late N.-C. Winslow. It was only a few weeks since she was by the bedside of her dying mother, the late Mrs. Dr. W.-A. Clarke, and aided in smoothing her pillow, as only an affectionate daughter can. She was a lady much beloved by all of her many acquaintances on account of her amiable traits of character, her motherly characteristics, and her loving nature. None knew her but to respect and esteem her. She, like her deceased mother, was an old resident of Cleveland, having lived here, with the exception of a few years spent with her son in Buffalo, and her daughter in Baltimore, nearly half a century.

"The funeral services were held at the residence of her brother-in-law, Mr. R.-K. Winslow, Esq., yesterday afternoon, 2.30 p.m. (Mar. 13, 1885), and were conducted by the Rev. Dr. Bolles and Rev. Mr. Morgan of Trinity, and a most touching tribute to the character of the deceased was delivered. The casket was embowered in beautiful floral offerings, sent in by loving friends.

"The interment took place in Lake View Cemetery. The following gentlemen served as pall bearers: M.-C. Younglove, I.-J. Tracy, W.-S. Chamberlain, G.-E. Herrick, John Shelly, and Edwin Cowles."

The mother of Mrs. Winslow, before mentioned, died of asthma at her residence, 659 Euclid Avenue, Cleveland, on Jan. 5, 1885. An obituary notice furnishes the following facts and extracts:

Mrs. Clarke was born in Madison County, N.Y., in 1797; was the daughter of Nathan Brown, originally from Connecticut; she m. in 1815, Dr. Welcome-Arnold Clarke, and removed to Whitestown, near Utica, N.Y., whence, in 1839, they removed to Cleveland, where, in 1847, he died, universally esteemed. They were the parents of the late Mrs. Stephen Tracy of New Haven, Ct., and of the wives of three brothers, N.-C., R.-K., and H.-J. Winslow. Although Mrs. C. had attained the age of eighty-eight years, her mind continued clear and vigorous to the last. She was a conscientious Christian, a member of the old Stone Church from her first arrival in Cleveland, and was greatly respected and beloved by all who knew her.

"The funeral of the venerable Mrs. Clarke took place from her late residence yesterday afternoon, and was largely attended by old settlers who have known her so long. The Rev. Dr. Hayden, of the First Presbyterian Church, officiated, being assisted by Rev. Mr. Bolles. Dr. Hayden delivered an appropriate discourse, briefly reviewing the life of the deceased, and paying a tribute to her many estimable qualities. The floral tributes were beautiful and appropriate. The pall bearers consisted of the following gentlemen, all of whom were personal friends of Mrs. C. ever since she settled in Cleveland forty-eight years ago: Hon. John-W. Allen, Dudley Paldwin, S.-H. Mather, T.-P. Handy, M.-C. Younglove, and Charles Hickox."

The remains were laid besides her husband's in the old Erie Street Cemetery.

HEZEKIAH-JONES, [10054] (s. of Richard Winslow,) b. 8 Dec. 1815, Camden, N.C.; d. of heart disease, 31 Dec. 1883, Paris, France; m. Helen-Mar Clarke in 1846; removed to Chicago in 1847, but returned to Cleveland in 1854, where he resided till 1859, when he removed to New York City. In 1864 he went with his family to Europe. His wife and son have lived in Paris since 1866, Mr. Winslow making frequent visits to his family abroad, and they in turn visiting in this country, but for three years preceding his death he had made his permanent home with them in Paris. By his death the marine business of the original firm of Richard<sup>6</sup> Winslow & Sons devolved entirely upon his brother, Rufus-King<sup>7</sup> Winslow [10057].

Mr. Winslow was a most genial gentleman, popular with all his acquaintances, and was a thorough man of business. His widow res. 1887, in Paris, France.

"Brother Marcian Seavey was buried with Masonic honors by Ancient Landmark Lodge, of this city, Mar. 2. He was made in that lodge in June, 1825; was a charter member of Portland Commandery, K.T., having been a Templar fifty-eight years. He was one of the original members of the New Jerusalem Church of this city. He was a gentleman of the old school, a Christian, a Freemason. He lived to be nearly eighty-two years of age. He was an honor to mankind, and has joined in more exalted labor in his spiritual home."—Masonic Journal.

"The funeral services of the late Marcian Seavey yesterday at the New Jerusalem Church were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Dunham, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Hayden. The latter gave a sympathetic sketch of the life of the venerable parishoner, speaking of his early connection and faithful service to the society, of his useful life as editor of the Maine Farmer, as professor in an agricultural college, and as a writer. The officers of Ancient Landmark Lodge, led by the Master, Thomas-B. Merrill, read the Masonic burial service, and accompanied the body to the grave to perform the closing Masonic services there. The pall bearers were Geo.-S. Hay, Ira Berry, William Senter, and William-H. Smith. There were floral wreaths from the family and from Portland Commandery. The music was by the church choir, 'Nearer My God to Thee' being finely rendered. The Aged Brotherhood, Portland Commandery, and Ancient Landmark Lodge were all represented." Their last res., Portland, Mass.

The following lines were sent by a loving friend of Mrs. Winslow:

The years lingered,

Slowly wearing out life's forces With unabated pain. No murmur From her lips, but earnest prayer And waiting patience brought cheerfulness A daily and abiding guest Through the slow-moving months. The dust returns to earth-Loosed Is the silver cord, broken the golden Bowl; earth's bonds severed, sweet peace Resteth on the calm, still face, As if commune was held with angels Ere the spirit passed. Not dark-winged is the angel death From whom we shrink in terror; no! Bright with tenderest mercy he comes, And pain's fierce tortures cease forever. Is not, then, this angel blessed above All messengers sent from the source Of tender loving kindness and all good? And now arrayed in spirit robes, As the dear Father knoweth best, Is she who meekly bore in patient grace The burden and the pain, to earth-life incident, Through weary years.

SERGT. ALFRED-MARSTON<sup>8</sup>, [11733] (s. of Ruth-Ann<sup>7</sup> (Winslow) True). His number in Index II was erroneously given [11722].

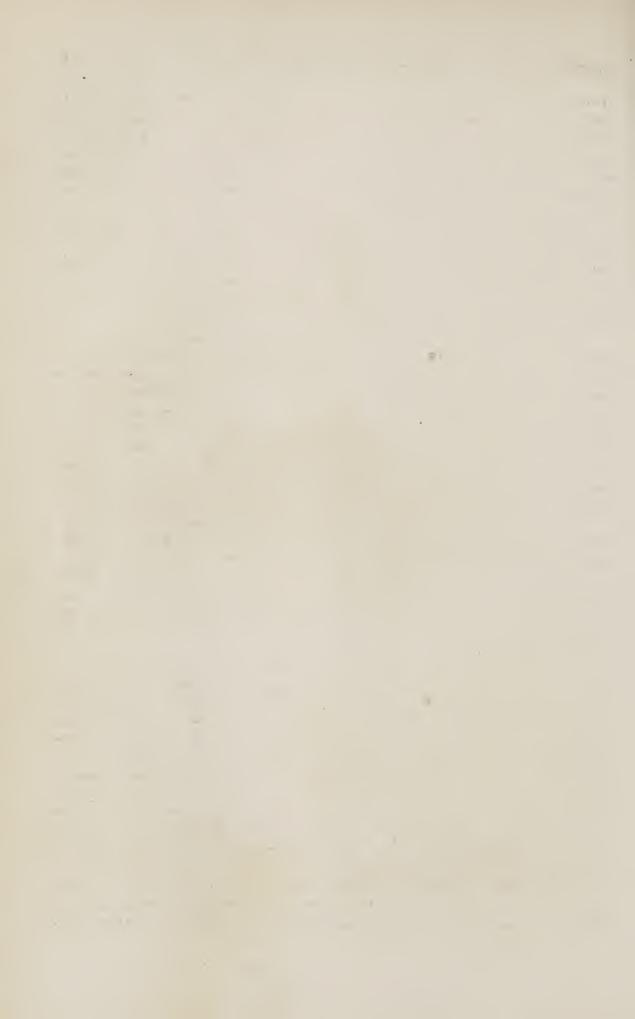

GEN. EDWARD-FRANCIS', [11909] (s. of Stephen's Winslow,) left his native place in the early part of the year 1856, his parents and his brother George remaining at Augusta, Me., and went to Mount Pleasant, Henry County, Iowa, with the expectation of entering a banking house about to be established there. The journey at that time occupied nearly six days, although all but twenty-five miles were made by railway. From the Mississippi to Mount Pleasant in those days the only conveyance was by stage-coach. The population of Iowa was then less than 300,000, and there were but few miles of railway within the State.

Shortly after taking up his residence in Iowa he became interested in the study and construction of railroads. Although there were then in the United States many thousands of miles of railways, the methods of construction and operation applied to them, as well as their financial affairs, were little understood, even by those in control. Looking back after the lapse of only thirty years, it is difficult to realize the condition of ignorance and simplicity which then everywhere existed respecting a subject which is now one of the foremost in importance in commercial and political economy.

After engaging in some railroad construction work in Iowa, he entered into negotiations with persons interested in building the St. Louis, Vandalia, and Terre Haute Railroad, but the "secession" rage had then seized the South, and in the North all such business was checked by the feverish anticipation of war. The rebellion broke out. At that time he was in ill health, having contracted ague in a severe form the preceding year; but, although still affected by the ague, in August, 1861, he began to recruit men for a cavalry company at Ottumwa in Iowa. He raised a company and offered it to Governor Kirkwood, who accepted it and assigned it to the Fourth Iowa Cavalry Volunteers, then being formed at Mount Pleasant. His company became "F" in that regiment, and upon securing the requisite number, which was soon done, he was mustered with it into the United States service. This was the 23d day of November, 1861.

It was a severe winter, and army operations were limited. The regiment was not called into the field until February, 1862. The intervening time was spent in camp at Mount Pleasant, where he was busily employed in the instruction, drill, and equipment of the men. In February the situation in southwest Missouri became important, and the Fourth Iowa was ordered to St. Louis, there to complete its equipment and to be sent to General Curtis's "Army of the Southwest."

But the hard weather and scanty boat service on the Mississippi made the movement tedious, and the battle of Pea Ridge was fought before the regiment left St. Louis. It marched, however, as far as Springfield, where it was encamped and remained until April, awaiting further orders. Captain Winslow was always with his company, actively occupied in the care and instruction of his men. In the latter part of April his command made a junction with Curtis's army at Forsyth, Mo., and marching by way of West Plains, Mo., and Batesville, Ark., took part in a demonstration upon Little Rock. It was in the early part of this march, in a skirmish fought across the White River, that his second lieutenant, a gallant young officer, William-A. Heacock, was killed, the first man of the regiment struck in battle.

While the army was encamped around Batesville, Captain Winslow was constantly engaged in scouting and foraging for its supplies, and with his company made many successful forays and had a number of skirmishes with the enemy.

The movement against Little Rock was given up the first of July, and General Curtis suddenly turned eastward. The march was down the White River to Des Arc, and thence across the country to Helena on the Mississippi. The weather was extremely warm, the region very unhealthy, the food poor and meagre, and the new soldiers suffered greatly.

Arriving at Helena the middle of July, the regiment was encamped near the town, and kept there till the following April, engaged in the inglorious, though arduous labor of scouting, picketing, and escorting trains, with only occasionally the dignity of taking part in an expedition. Company "F," however, was rather better off than the others, as it was stationed in the town, and Captain Winslow acted as Assistant Provost Marshal of the District of Eastern Arkansas. While here he was promoted to the rank of major in the regiment, to date January 3d, 1863. Early in April he was placed in command of a considerable detachment from his own regiment and the Third Iowa Cavalry, and sent to discover the position of the enemy at Wittsburg on the Languille River in Arkansas. He was absent a week, made rapid marches, reached Wittsburg after a sharp engagement with the rebels who were driven off with loss, and returned successful.

General Grant, then at Milliken's Bend preparing to begin the famous campaign against Vicksburg, sent to Helena for a regiment of cavalry. Major Winslow's influence was now sufficient to procure that very desirable order for the Fourth Iowa, and at the end of April the regiment was landed at Milliken's Bend. It was attached to General Sherman's 15th Army Corps, and from that time till after the investment of Vicksburg was the only cavalry regiment in Grant's army. It crossed the Mississippi in transports at Grand Gulf, while the battle of Port Gibson was in progress, and was placed in the advance of the 15th Corps. It held that position until Jackson was taken, except that it was posted on the left wing in the immediate assault upon that capital. A portion of the regiment, including Company "F," commanded by Major Winslow, on the 12th of May had a spirited contest with the rebels for the crossing of Fourteen-mile Creek. In this fight his horse was shot under him, and for his quick action and good judgment in handling his men he was highly commended by General Sherman.

In the march from Jackson to Vicksburg, including the battles of Champion's Hill and the Big Black, the Fourth Iowa covered the rear of Sherman's corps. During the siege of Vicksburg it was kept upon outpost duty, picket, patrol, reconnoisance, skirmishing, foraging—very toilsome and hazardous—and very many men and horses were lost by illness, fatigue, sharpshooting, and the sudden dashes of the enemy. Through the Vicksburg campaign, though not the senior officer, Major Winslow was much of the time in actual command of the regiment. He was finally promoted to be its colonel, and took command in that rank on the day that Vicksburg fell. The next day he marched with his regiment in the campaign against Rebel General Joseph-E. Johnston, who retreated into Jackson. In the assault upon Jackson the cavalry was placed between Jackson and Canton, and did not take part in the fighting.

General Sherman now placed him in command of the cavalry forces of the 15th Corps, and appointed him chief of cavalry. He held these positions from that time until March, 1864, his command being always on the outer lines of the army at Vicksburg.

In August he marched through the enemy's country in command of a cavalry force of about eight hundred men from Vicksburg through the middle of Mississippi, via Lexington and Grenada, to Memphis, the object being the destruction of railway equipment and the discovery of the rebel strength. Special instructions were given to learn the effect of the surrender of Vicksburg upon the people of interior Mississippi, as both General Grant and General Sherman had hopes of a revival of Union sentiment growing out of the great losses of the rebels, and nothing was permitted along the route which would discourage this idea. Colonel Winslow was met at Grenada by two brigades of cavalry, of which he also took command.

During September, General Sherman sent Colonel Winslow with about one thousand cavalry across the Big Black River toward Jackson and Canton, to mask the movement of the 15th Army Corps, then encamped in the rear of Vicksburg, to Memphis and Chattanooga. On the first day he was supported by General Corse with one brigade of infantry, but leaving that force he proceeded north toward Benton, making demonstrations toward Canton in the presence of three brigades of rebel cavalry, and finally re-crossed the river and returned to his camp on Flower's plantation with little loss, finding General Sherman and the army already en route by river to Memphis. This movement prevented the rebel cavalry and a body of infantry at Canton from attempting to intercept General Sherman in his march across from Memphis to Chattanooga, and for it Colonel Winslow was highly commended, by the General.

In October he commanded the cavalry on a reconnoisance in force made by General McPherson from Vicksburg to Canton, north of Jackson. A strong rebel army under General S.-D. Lee was met and driven back. There was sharp fighting for the cavalry during two days of this advance, and very hot work fell to it in covering the rear on the return march, but the only loss in Winslow's cavalry was a few wounded. In February, 1864, Colonel Winslow commanded the cavalry of General Sherman's army in a campaign made for the purpose of driving back General Polk, who had advanced from the east to Jackson, and of destroying the Mobile and Ohio Railroad at Meridian on the east line of Mississippi. This was a remarkably brilliant campaign, the cavalry being successfully engaged every day on the outward march in driving or fighting the rebels. While the rebel cavalry under the command of General S.-D. Lee were falling back from Clinton, Colonel Winslow attacked them in flank near Jackson, at dusk, and, throwing them into great confusion, prevented their defending that fortified city, which he captured, together with the pontoon bridge across the Pearl River, being afterwards joined by the "Iowa Brigade" of infantry under General Alexander Chambers. This was a very spirited and audaciously successful engagement against greatly superior numbers. Having taken Meridian, Colonel Winslow was ordered to move to the north to communicate with General W.-S. Smith, who had been sent from Memphis with a force of cavalry to join Sherman at Meridian. This was a hazardous movement, as Rebel General Forrest, with a much larger body of cavalry, was in front of General Smith. The march was made mostly by night, and upon finding the enemy and getting no news of General Smith, Colonel Winslow returned to Marion near Meridian. Forrest had checked Smith and compelled him to retreat.

In December, 1863, the proposition of the War Department was open to the earlier volunteers to re-enlist as veterans. Colonel Winslow zealously encouraged his men to re-enlist, and largely through his personal efforts the re-enlistment in his own regiment was so rapid that it became the first regiment of veterans of Iowa, the required number being reached on the 12th of that month.

Immediately upon the return of the regiment from the Meridian expedition, the "veterans" were permitted to go to Iowa on thirty days' furlough. Colonel Winslow went with them, and upon the expiration of the time they were reassembled and taken to St. Louis, where they were remounted and provided with arms and equipments. Colonel Winslow, communicating directly with General Sherman, then at Nashville, received orders to proceed with the eight hundred men, then at St. Louis, to Memphis, Tennessee. He did so and was there joined, about the end of April, 1864, by that part of his regiment which had remained at Vicksburg, and by a large number of new recruits from Iowa who had been assigned to the Fourth Cavalry, so that when the regiment was thus reunited it numbered more than 1,300 men.

Colonel Winslow reported at Memphis to General Samuel-D. Sturgis, then in command there and charged with the conduct of operations in the field against Rebel General Forrest. After one or two short expeditions he was given the command of a brigade consisting of the Third Iowa, the Fourth Iowa, and the Tenth Missouri, cavalry regiments with a battery of four guns. This brigade, with one other under the command of Colonel George-E. Waring, Jr., formed the cavalry portion of a force under General Sturgis, comprising about eight thousand men, which met with defeat at a place called Guntown, or Brice's Cross Roads, near the Mobile and Ohio Railroad, south of Corinth, Miss. The enemy were first encountered by Colonel Winslow's command, on the evening of June 9th, 1864, the day preceding the battle. When the battle came on, Colonel Winslow's brigade was ordered to support Colonel Waring, who had met the rebel cavalry under General Forrest, and a line was formed covering the Cross Roads, with Winslow's brigade on the right. enemy twice unsuccessfully attacked Winslow's brigade, after which he was ordered to retire and allow the infantry, which had meantime come up, to occupy his position. Almost immediately after the infantry had engaged the enemy the entire line was driven back and the army defeated with a loss of about one thousand killed and wounded, and of about twenty guns and two hundred ammunition and supply wagons. Colonel Winslow was directed by General Sturgis to cover the retreat of the army, which he did under many difficulties, on a line of march through Ripley to Colliersville, and thence to Memphis. This service in the retreat was a very severe trial of his command, but it was exceedingly well done and in order, though with the loss of many men and horses. He brought from this disastrous field two of his guns, the only ones saved to the army.

He was then placed in command of the Second Division of the Cavalry Corps of the District of West Tennessee, and after several expeditions was sent with about twenty-two hundred of his men to the relief of General Steele at Little Rock. Crossing the Mississippi by boats at Memphis, he marched over the country. A part of the march was extremely toilsome, the way being through extensive swamps, and the weather rainy and intensely sultry. From Little Rock he marched with his command on the expedition under General Joseph-A. Mower, in pursuit of Rebel General Price, the route being up the Black River and thence to Cape Girardeau and St. Louis. This was in September and October, 1864. General Price, with a large force of rebels, had invaded Missouri, and was advancing against Pilot Knob. But there had been so much delay in starting the army from Little Rock that the enemy were far ahead, and Pilot Knob fell when General Mower was yet in Arkansas.

On this march Colonel Winslow gained high credit for the ingenuity and energy with which he led the advance. He constructed a floating bridge over the Black River, not far above its mouth, with timbers taken from a neighboring plantation and cut in the forest. Within a few hours he had a rude sort of pontoon lying across the river, sufficient for the passage of the army.

General Price, after the capture of Pilot Knob moved upon Jefferson City, which he did not attack, but marched westward to Sedalia, and thence towards Kansas City. After resting a day or two at St. Louis Colonel Winslow marched with his brigade across Missouri, under the command of the famous cavalryman General Pleasanton, who had been placed in charge of the field operations against Price.

Near Independence, in the evening of October 22d, Colonel Winslow first overtook the rear of the rebel forces. He immediately engaged them, but the night prevented further operations. The next morning, under orders from General Pleasanton, he was placed in command of General Brown's brigade in addition to his own. The enemy then held the very difficult crossing of the "Big Blue" River, and had much increased the difficulty by felling trees in the road and in the stream. Colonel Winslow without hesitation attacked the position, and inspiring his men with his own zeal forced his way with his advance battalions across the river, under a galling fire, and on the west side utterly defeated the enemy and drove them from the field with much loss. But at the moment of victory Colonel Winslow was severely wounded. He remained in the field and in command all day, however, though he could not ride and had to be drawn in an ambulance, but at night was compelled to withdraw. The command was turned over to Lieutenant-Colonel F.-W. Benteen, and Colonel Winslow was taken to Kansas City and sent thence by boat to St. Joseph, and by railroad to St. Louis.

But his spirit could not endure inaction, and upon the return of his brigade to St. Louis, in November, although not recovered, he assumed command. Upon orders from General George-H. Thomas he sent his brigade by boat to Louisville, Kentucky, and went himself to Memphis for the purpose of conducting to the same place the large portion of the regiments of his brigade then remaining there. But at Memphis he was ordered, with all his available force there, to join General Grierson, as second in command, upon an expedition sent from Memphis to destroy a part of the Mobile and Ohio Railroad in Mississippi. This work was very effectively done, and the command marched on south to Vicksburg, having several spirited encounters with the enemy. From Vicksburg Colonel Winslow took his men by steamboats to Louisville, where the separated parts of his regiment and brigade were again brought together.

The brigade now moved by steamboats, under convoy of gunboats, up the Tennessee to Gravelly Springs, Alabama, and reported to General James-H. Wilson, then organizing a large cavalry force there as a portion of the "Cavalry Corps of the Military Division of the Mississippi."

Colonel Winslow having been brevetted Brigadier-General of Volunteers December 12th, 1864, for gallantry in the field, was placed in command of the First Brigade of the Fourth Division of this Cavalry Corps, his brigade being composed of the Third Iowa, Fourth Iowa, and Tenth Missouri regiments.

He commanded this brigade, with a battery of artillery, in the expedition against Selma, Montgomery, Columbus, and Macon, in the spring of 1865, and took a very active part in that remarkable campaign, in which the rebels were signally defeated in four set battles (two of them fought on their side behind strong fortifications) as well as in all minor engagements. General Winslow's brigade was on the left of the line which assaulted the formidable works at Selma when it was captured. He was placed in command of the city by General Wilson the next morning, and his brigade was the last to leave the city when the army marched upon Montgomery and Columbus. His brigade alone, under his immediate command, took the city of Columbus in Georgia by assault. This extraordinary attack was made by night, against heavy earthworks which had not been seen by the assailants, and which were defended by a force larger than their own. Even the prisoners taken in the heat of fighting numbered more than the men who made the charge. It was the night of April 16th, 1865, ten days after the overthrow of Lee at Appomattox, though neither that event nor the fall of Richmond were then known to General Wilson's army.

A large number of guns and a great quantity of ammunition and other army and navy supplies of the rebels were captured and destroyed by the Union cavalry in these battles and in the country between. It was estimated to amount to more than a hundred million dollars.

Active hostilities were now at an end, but General Winslow's cavalry was kept in service until August. He was posted at Atlanta and placed in command of that military district. He held this place through the summer, and was mustered out of service with his regiment on the 10th day of August.

In recognition of his merit and ability he was after the war appointed major in the United States army, but declined the appointment. Thereupon General Sherman offered him the position of colonel of one of the new regiments then being formed by the War Department; but he preferred to remain in civil life.

General Winslow was hardly relieved from the orders of the War Department when he renewed his efforts for building what is now known as the "Vandalia Railroad." Having secured an amendment to the original charter of the company, he entered into an agreement, as chief contractor, for the construction and equipment of the road, and after fifty miles had been built (East St. Louis to Greenville), he disposed of the contract and his interests to the Pennsylvania Railroad Company and its associated companies, by which it was fully completed and is operated.

In the spring of 1870 he removed to Davenport, Iowa, but having undertaken with General James-H. Wilson the construction of the St. Louis and Southeastern Railway, from St. Louis to Evansville and Shawneetown, he took up his residence in St. Louis. Among other roads built by him during the same time was the Cairo and Vincennes Railroad (156 miles), which he constructed, also in connection with General Wilson, in the short space of nine months.

Having been appointed receiver of the Burlington, Cedar Rapids, and Minnesota Railway in July, 1874, he again went to the State of Iowa, and remained four years at Cedar Rapids. The railroad was re-organized largely through his efforts, extensions were made, and the corporation became prosperous and successful as the Burlington, Cedar Rapids, and Northern Railway Company. He was vice-president of the company and general manager of the railway until March, 1880.

He was also for several years president of the New York, Ontario and Western Railway Company, and formed an association for the purpose of building the West Shore Railroad. Calling to his assistance many able men, he accomplished this great work in about three years, and under many disadvantages which, principally through the efforts of himself and his friends, were, however, overcome, and the road finally completed.

In the month of October, 1879, he was offered the position of vice-president and general manager of the Manhattan Elevated Railway in New York City, and took charge of that property on the first day of November. He unified the system of control and management of the separate lines of these elevated roads, but having been elected president of the St. Louis and San Francisco Railway Company, and vice-president of the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company, he resigned his connection with the Manhattan Company on the 31st day of March, 1880. He continues to occupy the positions to which he was then elected by the other two companies. General Winslow's business address, 1888, is in the Mills Building, 15 Broad St., N. Y.

GEORGE-STEPHEN, [11910] (s. of Stephen Winslow,) was educated in the public schools of Augusta, and at an early age entered into active business in his native city. His health was never good, and he was subject to nervous and prostrating headaches, on account of which he was led to remove to the Western States in 1870. He settled in Mount Vernon, Jefferson County, Illinois, which place was his home until his death.

Very soon after going West he entered into the railway business and acted as assistant to the president of the St. Louis and Southeastern Railway Company, in which capacity he aided in the construction of that railway. After its completion he was appointed superintendent of the St. Louis Division of that road, and in that position had control of the two hundred miles north and west of the Ohio River, between St. Louis, Evansville, and Shawneetown.

At a later period he was appointed assistant general superintendent of the whole system between St. Louis and Nashville, Tennessee. On account of his condition and because of changes in the control of the Southeastern Railway, he resigned his position, and spent much of his time in travel, hoping to permanently improve his health.

In 1877 and 1878 he acted as assistant to the vice-president of the Burlington, Cedar Rapids, and Northern Railway Company, and while traveling upon one of its trains was thrown from the locomotive, and falling with his head upon a cross-tie was instantly killed, acc. to Mrs. Norcross on the 3d day of August, 1876, but by other authority 1879, being then thirty-six or thirty-nine years of age, and in the prime of life. He was a very just man, and was greatly beloved and respected. He had a wonderful inventive faculty, was eminently practical in all matters of business, and had a thorough appreciation and knowledge of practical and applied mechanics. These qualities, together with his excellent executive ability, made him a fine administrative officer, while his sterling integrity gave weight and value to his character and obtained for him the favorable opinions of his associates, friends, and employers in every position in which he was placed. His sudden and untimely end was a great shock to his family and friends.

Captain Winslow commenced going to sea at the age of thirteen, and continued to follow that occupation about ten years. He was second mate of the bark called "Maine Law" of Lubec, Me., which was wrecked on the Isle of Cuba during a severe hurricane in Sept. 1857. In consequence of disease contracted by exposure during that terrible storm his health was so impaired that he was unable to follow his chosen occupation for nearly a year, during which time he decided to abandon the sea and to settle in New Orleans, where he remained until about a year before the close of the war, when he was forced to leave the South or join the rebel army. He escaped, but lost all his possessions. He resided in Topsham, Me., till 1870, when he removed to Allegan, Mich.

EUNICE-WINSLOW<sup>6</sup>, [2692] (dau. of Martha (Hathaway) Nichols,) m. Capt. Benedict ANDROS, whose father, Rev. Thomas Andros of Berkley, Mass., was the author of The Old Jersey Captive, in which he gives his own experience while imprisoned by the British in 1781 in the "Old Jersey Prison Ship."

Rev. T. Andros was a volunteer on a privateer brig "The Fair American," which was captured Aug. 27, and the crew safely stowed away in the prison ship, moored about three-fourths of a mile from New York, on the Long Island shore, the nearest distance from land being about twenty rods. When he first entered there were about four hundred prisoners, but in a short time they were increased to twelve hundred. The most deadly diseases—dysentery, small pox, and yellow fever, prevailed; the food was filled with living vermin, which they must eat or starve; the diseased and the healthy were crowded in together, and at night left in utter darkness. When allowed to go on deck in the morning, he relates: "the first object that met our view was a most appalling spectacle—a boat loaded with dead bodies conveying them to the Long Island shore, where they were slightly covered with sand. I sometimes counted the number of times the shovel was filled with sand to cover a dead body, and certain I am that a few high tides or torrents of rain must have disinterred them." He thought when he left the ship, "a more filthy, contagious, and deadly abode never existed among a christianized people. It fell but little short of the 'Black Hole' at Calcutta. It is computed that not less than eleven thousand American seamen perished in her." In his description of the ship he says, "I wish it to be understood that what I have said of this horrid prison relates almost exclusively to the time I was on board. Nor would I heap the cruel horrors of this prisonship as a reproach upon the whole nation without exception. It is, indeed, a blot which a thousand ages cannot eradicate from the name of Britain; but no doubt when the pious and humane among them came to know what had been done they utterly reprobated such cruelty. The Bethel-flag had not yet waved over any ship."

His almost miraculous escape from the ship, the many remarkable incidents which occurred during his flight, or rather his perilous and painful wanderings and exposures in attempting to reach the eastern end of Long Island, while actually suffering from yellow fever, and his final safe arrival at his home in Connecticut in October of that year, are graphically related.

Mr. Mower received his early education from his mother and the schools of Prosperity and Newberry, S.C., except one term in 1866, at Monmouth Academy in Maine. He entered Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Me., in 1869, grad. A.B. with distinction in 1873, and in 1876 received from that College, the degree of A.M. After his graduation he commenced the study of law in the office of Jones & Jones, at Newberry, and was admitted to practice in the Circuit and Probate Courts of S.C., in Mar. 1875. Dec. 14, 1877, he was admitted to practice in the Supreme Court (Appellate Court), and on 5 Apr. 1878, to practice in the Circuit and District Courts of the United States for the district of South Carolina. Since his admission to the bar he has been continuously engaged in his profession. He is a member of the Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church. He has always been a Democrat in politics and is now one of the nominees of that party (the equivalent of election) for the position of representative of Newberry Co., in the general assembly of South Corolina.

The following is copied from a book of "Obituary notices of eminent persons of Lowell who died there":

"Edward Winslow, Harvard, Mass., Sept. 23, aged 62. Mr. W. was born at Middleboro, Mass. He acquired, early in life, a practical knowledge of machinery, in that town, and was for many years connected with the cotton manufactory established there. He afterwards moved to Dedham, and entered with zeal upon an invention which has conferred incalculable benefit upon our woolen manufactories. This was a 'condenser,' a machine which was at once adopted in all the mills in the country, and so perfect did he do his work, that it still continues to be used. Like many other really valuable inventions however, it was seized upon at the time by the woolen manufacturers, and appropriated to their use without any acknowledgment to the man who originated and perfected it, so that he lost the pecuniary benefit which rightly belonged to him. In after years a sense of justice compelled many of the manufacturers to acknowledge his claims, and they made him a small compensation.

"This was one of those cases where the benefits are counted by millions, and the reward by tens and hundreds. But Mr. Winslow had acquired a celebrity, and was called to Nashua, N.H., where he took charge of the machine shop of the Indian Head Corporation, and aided in planning an extensive woolen mill. The crisis of 1828, was too severe a trial for the Indian Head Company, and the manufacture of woolens at Nashua ceased. The next year Mr. Winslow went to Lowell, where his reputation had preceded him, and when the Lawrences came into possession of the Hurd Mills, now known as the Middlesex, he took charge of the machinery, both in building and running it.

"In his intercourse with men he was retiring and unobtrusive, almost to a fault, but to his many acquaintances he was social and warm-hearted. He had a strong religious and holy hope, and, through life, bore the character of an honest upright man. 'An honest man is the noblest work of God.'"

The following is from "History of the Cook Family": "The experience of Mr. Cook, the inventive genius of Mr. Wm. Compton, and the practical mechanics of Mr. Edward Winslow, the master machinist of the Middlesex shop, united in developing the germ of what is now known (1838) everywhere as the 'Compton Loom.'"

The following brief sketch of Mrs. Penelope (Pelham) Winslow, and the accompanying portrait, taken from a leaf of an old volume was presented by an antiquarian friend to John Winslow, of Brooklyn, who kindly loaned it for reproduction here.

All descendants of Edward Winslow of Droitwich, Eng. will welcome its insertion in this volume, especially as the one to which it more appropriately belongs may fail of publication. The same may be said in regard to the insertion of the portrait of Gov. Levi Lincoln at page 171, where records of his relatives appear.

"One of the most mortifying reflections, in connection with New England history, is the fact, that so little is known of the lives and characters of the mothers and wives of those eminent men who founded our institutions, and framed and administered our early laws. Unhappy mistake, which supposes that the history of a nation is complete when its public acts are recorded, and the biographies of its eminent men are written. The influence of woman on the character and growth of a nation is universally confessed. How would the present race, sons of the Pilgrims, love to be able to look into the record of those HOMES where such Anaks were born, and study the quiet virtues of the brave dames which bear, and the gentle sisters who held their magic thrall over, those sturdy sons and brothers!

"The men that knelt on the deck of that emigrant ship at Delft Haven, when the godly and gifted Robinson 'lifted up his voice and wept' his prayer for a prosperous voyage to the bleak shores of New England, held no more in their strong hearts the destinies of the new world, than those gentler ones who bowed in holy trust and wondrous fortitude by their side. And yet the record of their bosoms and their lives is lost, and scarce a trace can now be discovered. And of them all not a portrait is to be found, whereby we might refresh our imaginings of their persons or their virtues.

MRS. PENELOPE (PELHAM) WINSLOW.

"The portrait of the wife of Governor Josiah Winslow (and of which we have been kindly permitted to take the above copy) is the only one that can be found, as far as we can learn, of any woman prior to 1650-60. It represents the subject of this sketch as young and comely, and 'dressed with grace and great becomingness.'

Mrs. Penelope Winslow was the daughter of Herbert Pelham, Esq., an English gentleman of considerable distinction. He was among the first to feel and express an interest in the affairs of the new and struggling colony at Plymouth, and contributed liberally towards its support. He never made New England his home, barely visiting it in 1637. His daughter, it appears, enthralled by the handsome and fascinating son of the elder Winslow, did not scruple to forego the refinements of her English home for the more republican one of the gallant captain, to whom she gave her hand. The date of the marriage we have been unable to ascertain, but it is supposed to be in 1657.

"Mrs. Winslow is represented as a woman of exceeding beauty, and extremely fascinating in her manners. She was very accomplished for the age in which she lived, and presided at her husband's board with great dignity and urbanity. When we take into consideration that her husband acquired the distinction of being the handsomest and most polite man of New England, we can readily conceive how recherché musto have been those weekly réunions in the drawing rooms of Careswell, where the beauty, and wit, and talent of the colony were assembled, and where taste and money were lavished to make them brilliant and delightful.

"Mrs. Winslow bore her husband four children,—two sons and two daughters,—and survived him twenty-three years. She died at 'Careswell,' Marshfield, December 7, 1703, in the seventy-fourth year of her age."
