

THE . . .
LYRICAL POEMS OF . . .
THOMAS
CAMPION
. . .

Charles M. Hathaway Jr
June 28 1899
- near G. Hill

THE LYRIC POETS

CAMPION

CANTVS

IIII

What vnhop't for sweet supply, O what loyes exceeding!
 What an af-feeing charme feele From de-light pro-ceeding!

The musical score consists of two systems of staves. The first system has a treble clef, a key signature of one flat (B-flat), and a common time signature (C). The melody is written on a single staff with diamond-shaped note heads. The second system has a bass clef and a common time signature (C). The melody continues on a single staff with diamond-shaped note heads. The lyrics are placed between the two systems of staves.

Tresimile from fourth song in "Light Concerts of Lovers." (1619.)

THE LYRIC POEMS OF THOMAS
CAMPION.

EDITED BY ERNEST
RHYS.

J. M. DENT & CO. ALDINE HOUSE
69 AT EASTERN ST. LONDON. E.C.

CONTENTS

	PAGE
Introduction	xiii
Author's Prefaces, I.	xxvii
" " II.	xxix
Dedication of " Light Conceits of Lovers "	xxxix
Now Winter Nights Enlarge	1
Cherry Ripe	2
When to her Lute	2
Sleepe, Angry Beauty	3
Never Love Unless You Can	4
So Quick, so Hot	5
Though You are Yoong	6
Thou art not Faire	7
When thou must Home.	7
Shall I Come, Sweet Love	8
Awake, thou Spring	9
Amarillis	10
Mistris, since you so much Desire	11
Turne backe you Wanton Flyer	11
So Sweet is thy Discourse	12
To his Sweet Lute Apollo sung	13
To Musicke Bent	14
The Man of Life Upright	15

Contents.

	PAGE
Where are all thy Beauties now, all
Harts enchaining	16
Come, chearfull Day	17
Awake, Awake	17
Followe thy faire Sunne	18
And would you see my Mistris' Face	19
Vaine Men, whose Follies	20
How eas'ly wert thou Chained	21
Harden now thy tyred Hart	22
O what Unhop't for Sweet Supply	23
Where Shee her Sacred Bowre Adornes	24
Faine would I my Love Disclose	25
Give Beauty All Her Right	27
O Deare ! that I with thee might Live	28
Good Men shew, if You can Tell	29
Whether men doe Laugh or Weepe	30
What then is Love but Mourning	31
Kinde in Unkindnesse, when will You Relent	32
When Laura Smiles	33
Rose-cheeked Laura	34
Scornful Laura	35
See where She Flies enrag'd from Me	36
Your faire Lookes enflame my Desire	37
The Fairie Queene Proserpina	38
It fell on a Sommer's Day	40
Maydes are Simple	41
Think'st Thou to seduce Me then with
Words	42

Contents.

	PAGE
Fain would I Wed	43
Ev'ry Dame affects good Fame	44
Thou joy'st, Fond Boy	45
Silly Boy, 'tis full Moon yet	46
If Thou Longest	48
Break now, my Heart	49
The Peacefull Westerne Winde	50
There is None	51
Sweet, exclude Mee not	52
Now hath Flora	53
Her Rosie Cheekes	54
Come Away	55
What Harvest	55
So many Loves	56
Come, you Pretty False-ey'd Wanton	58
Where shall I refuge Seek	59
The Sypres Curten	60
Tell me, Gentle Howre of Night	61
Night as well as Brightest Day	63
Follow your Saint	64
Faire, if you Expect	65
Blame not my Cheeks	65
When the God of Merrie Love	66
Woo Her, and Win Her	67
Jacke and Jone They thinke no Ill	68
Come Ashore, Come	69
Of Neptune's Empire	70
Shall I Come	71

Contents.

	PAGE
Oft have I sigh'd	72
Now let her Change	73
Were my Hart	74
So Tyr'd	74
Why Presumes Thy Pride	75
O Griefe, O Spite	77
O Never to be Moved	77
Good Wife	78
Fire that must Flame	79
Thrice Toss these Oaken Ashes	80
Be Thou then my Beauty Named	81
Fire, Fire, Fire, Fire!	82
O Sweet Delight	83
Thus I Resolve	83
Come, O, Come	84
Could My Heart	85
Shall I then Hope	85
Leave Prolonging	86
Respect My Faith	87
Vaile, Love, Mine Eyes!	87
Love Me or Not	88
What Meanes this Folly	89
Deare, if I with Guile	90
O Love, where are thy Shafts	91
Beauty is but a Painted Hell	92
Are You, what your Faire Lookes Ex- presse	93
Since She, ev'n Shee	94

Contents.

	PAGE
I Must Complain	94
Her Fayre Inflaming Eyes	95
Turne all Thy Thoughts	96
Your Faire Lookes	98
And would You Faine the Reason Knowe	99
Long have Mine Eies	100
If I Hope, I Pine; If I Feare, I Faint and Die	101
Shall Then a Traitorous Kisse	101
No Grave for Woe	102
If I Urge My Kind Desires	103
Unless there were Consent	104
If She Forsake Me.	105
With Spotless Minds	106
My Sweetest Lesbia, let us Live and Love	107
Let Him that will be Free	108
What is a Day	109
Never Weatherbeaten Saile more willing Bent to Shore	109
Tune Thy Musicke to Thy Hart	110
Loe, when Backe Mine Eye	111
Lift up to Heav'n, sad Wretch, Thy heavy Spright!	112
As by the Streames of Babilon	113
Sing a Song of Joy!	114
Seeke the Lord, and in his Waies Per- sever	115

Contents.

	PAGE
Lighten, heavy Hart, thy Spright . . .	116
Most Sweet and Pleasing are Thy Wayes, O God	117
Wise Men	118
View me, Lord, a Worke of Thine . . .	119
De Profundis.	120
Author of Light	121
Come, let us Sound	122
All Lookes be Pale	123
Time, that Leades	124
What if a Day	124
Sweet, Come Again !	126
Reprove not Love	127
The Golden Mean	128
Cruel Laura	128
Had I Foreseen	129
Though Your Strangenesse	130
Kinde are Her Answeres	131
Dance now and Sing	132
Gardener's Song	133
Gardener's Speech	134
A Song of Three Voices	135
Advance Your Choral Motions	136
Go, Happy Man	138
Bridal Song	139
Song	140
'Tis now Dead Night	141
Fortune and Glory	142

Contents.

	PAGE
Raving Warre,	143
To the Reader	145
Neither Buskin now, nor Bays . . .	145
—————
MASQUE at the Marriage of the Lord
Hayes	147
Shows and Nightly Revels	172
Triumph Now	173

INTRODUCTION.

CAMPION was all but a lost poet when Mr Bullen so fortunately came to his rescue six years ago. His lyrics, with the exception of the very few turned to account by modern musicians, or given a place in the anthologies, lay buried in the old music books in which they were first published. And yet, if they had been left to the famous obscurity of the British Museum, we had lost perhaps the one poet who comes nearest to fulfilling, in the genre and quality of his work, the lyric canon in English poetry.

Campion did not write with a theoretic sense only of the correspondence between music and poetry. He wrote as a musician, and his songs were really meant to be sung. His lyre was a real instrument; that is to say, it was represented by real instruments—the lute and the viol, sometimes the orpharion. His lyrics are as perfect an instance, indeed, as we are likely to find, if we keep to the stricter limits of the art, besides having all the natural warmth of word, the charm and inspiration, without which the mere art avails nothing.

Of the author himself we still know too little. That he was born midway in the sixteenth century; that he seems to have gone to Cambridge, with the idea of studying for the Bar, and was presently admitted a member of Gray's

Introduction.

Inn,—in 1586? that he gave up the law for medicine, took his M.D., and became a practising physician; and that he contrived to practise, too, as a musician and poet throughout his life: there is in outline all we know. He died in February 1619-20. On the first of March in that year, the entry, "Thomas Campion, Doctor of Physicke, was buried," is made in the register of St Dunstan's-in-the-West, Fleet Street.

His first book, which serves to explain much about him that would else be left dark, and which may explain something too of the Latin ring in his English verse, was his Poema of 1595, a book of Latin epigrams. No copy of this edition has been discovered; but the Epigrams were issued in a later and much amplified collection in the year 1619, the year of his death, so that his first book was in a sense his last.

From it we learn more of the man, his personal effect, temper and way of life, friends, enemies, quarrels, and the rest, than we should else have ever known. Throughout his career, with its vicissitudes of law and medicine, it is clear he moved in the leisured and courtly circles that his particular genius might seem to demand. His troubles seem to have been slight; enough for maturing the man, not enough for embittering him. His malice, peeping slyly out in his quips at Barnabe Barnes and Nicholas Breton, or in his references to more than one lady of his acquaintance, works in an idle vein, showing that his cause of complaint against men and things was at no time very serious. He strikes one as a quite excellent example of that type of cultured physician which we have all known; whose art of healing only serves as an agreeable basis for the liberal arts of life at large.

Introduction.

One imagines him moving about gaily and pleasantly among his friends and fashionable patients, a privileged guest, carrying his music with him; often when he came to prescribe, remaining to try over some new air, or recite some new epigram :

“I to whose trust and care you durst commit
Your pinéd health, when art despaired of it,

Should I, for all your ancient love to me,
Endowed with weighty favours, silent be?
Your merits and my gratitude forbid
That either should in Lethean gulf lie hid;
But how shall I this work of fame express?
How can I better, after pensiveness,
Than with light strains of Music, made to move
Sweetly with the wide spreading plumes of Love?”

These lines were addressed to one of his patients,—“my honourable friend, Sir Thomas Mounson, Knight and Baronet;” and the coupling in them of the arts of medicine and music is characteristic. Sir Thomas Mounson, or Monson, had been imprisoned in the Tower prior to this, in 1615-16, on suspicion of being concerned in the murder of Sir Thomas Overbury. Campion, who had already been of service in conveying money to him, and was examined as a friendly witness before his imprisonment, was still allowed to visit him in the Tower, as his medical attendant. The lines quoted, acclaiming his release, appeared at the opening of the Third Book of Airs, published in 1617 or thereabouts.

Introduction.

This is comparatively far on in his career. The music-book in which he makes what is practically his first appearance as a lyric poet, and in which he had Philip Rosseter as a musical collaborator and editor, appeared about 1601. Campion, then, may be said to emerge with the seventeenth century; and the opening of the seventeenth century comprised some of the goldenest years in all English poetry,—the bridge between Elizabethan and Jacobean times.

In 1601 Spenser had been dead some three years; Sidney some fifteen. Greene, Peele, Marlowe, were gone; Lyly, Lodge, Sir Walter Raleigh, Chapman, Drayton, were alive; and they lead us on to Shakespeare and Ben Jonson. To Ben Jonson, who was at once the last of the Elizabethans and the first of the Jacobeans, succeed the familiar names of the seventeenth century. Campion, like Ben Jonson, though in his different way, is a bridge between the two periods.

This position of his in the chain of English poetry, as one of the few silver links which are purely lyrical, is not of a fanciful importance. He came after the great outburst of Elizabethan energy, and before the classic influence had taught our natural English note too artificial a grace. Nature and art are as happily balanced in Campion as in Herrick; and if he is less impulsive and less inevitable in airy

Introduction.

clearness of lyric style, he has his other qualities, as we may see when he achieves an imaginative flight like,

“ When thou must home to shades of underground,
And there arriv'd, a newe admired guest,
The beauteous spirits do engirt thee round,
White Iope, blith Hellen, and the rest,
To heare the stories of thy finisht love
From that smoothe toong whose musicke hell can move; ”

or a cadence, haunting and mysterious :

“ Where are all thy beauties now, all harts enchain-
ing?
Whither are thy flatt'ers gone with all their fayning?
All fled, and thou alone still here remaying! ”

Again, Campion came, as Mr Gosse reminded the present editor, before the clearer waters of English poetry were disturbed by the masterful irruption of Donne. Donne was a Welshman on his father's side, and he had something of the eccentric fire that has so often made the men of that mixed blood dynamic and unaccountable, or even lawless, like the inimitable Jack Mytton in another fashion altogether. At any rate, Donne made so great an effect, that one is almost tempted to divide the seventeenth century men into pre-Donne and post-Donne poets. Campion, fortunately, was a Pre-Donnean; though what with his musical sentiment, and his feeling for a Latin art of verse, he would probably in any case have held his own, and preserved his individual note unspoilt.

Introduction.

His note has been likened now to Fletcher's, now to Carew's; and he does, for a moment, remind one occasionally of the lyrics of his contemporaries. But rarely though his writing is mannered, his note is as unmistakable as Herrick's own, at its best. Campion's worst, like other poets', we may agree to neglect; it is a very small part of the whole.

No doubt something both of the rarer effect in certain of his poems and of the failure of others, is to be laid to his approaching the art of verse as a musician, rather than as a pure and simple poet.

Take as an instance of a lyric which is exquisitely musical, full of turns which could only have occurred to a musician, full of a lurking melody not likely to have been invented by a mere prosodist, this song of three voices from the Masque given by Lord Knowles to Queen Anne:—

“ Night as well as brightest day hath her delight,
Let us then with mirth and music deck the night.
Never did glad day such store
Of joy to night bequeath:
Her stars then adore,
Both in Heav'n, and here beneath.”

One hears the lute and viol accompaniment plainly in this. The long lines and the short call up to the ear, with charming tunefulness, the effect of certain of his songs as performed delightfully at some of Mr Dolmetsch's concerts of old English music.

Or take the seventeenth song in the third Book of Airs:—

Introduction.

“ Shall I come, sweet Love, to thee,
When the ev'ning beames are set ?
Shall I not excluded be ?
Will you finde no fainéd lett ?
Let me not, for pittty, more,
Tell the long houres at your dore.”

The last line, as set to music in the original gets an added effect by dwelling musically on the first clause—

“ Let me not, for pittty, more,
Tell the long long houres, tel the long houres, at your dore ! ”

more, Tell the long, long houres, tel the long houres at your dore.

Take another, one of the songs that proved most effective under Mr Dolmetsch's direction—the song of Amarillis :—

“ I care not for these Ladies,
That must be woode and praide
Give me kind Amarillis,
The wanton countrey maide.
Nature art disdaineth,
Here beautie is her owne.
Her when we court and kisse,
She cries, Forsooth, let go :
But when we come where comfort is,
She never will say No.’ ”

Introduction.

This is the simple perfection of song-writing. The rhythm, as poetry, is no more charming than the cadence, as music. The words are as lyrical, the movement as impulsive, as anything in Burns or in Shakespeare. It is finely Elizabethan on the face of it, and it is as clearly a song to be sung: a masterpiece-in-little, then, in its own particular kind.

As an instance of what writing for music, without a sufficiently present feeling for poetry, may lead to, take this verse from another song—

“ Though far from joy, my sorrows are as far,
And I both between ;
Not too low, nor yet too high
Above my reach would I be seen.
Happy is he that so is placed,
Not to be envied nor to be disdained or disgraced.”

It is fair to admit that these words were written for Rosseter's setting, not for Champion's own; and evidently he wrote in this perfunctorily enough.

We turn now for a few moments to glean what we can of Champion's rather paradoxical attitude toward his art of poetry. For it is one of the ironies of literature, that the writer who has written some of the most purely artistic rhymed lyrics in the language,—the most artistic, that is, in the exact sense of lyrical,—should have set out with so striking a manifesto against rhyme. His “Observations in the Art of English Poesie” appeared in 1602, when he had already written some of his loveliest songs.

Introduction.

"I am not ignorant," he says, at the opening of his second chapter, "that whosoever shall by way of reprehension examine the imperfections of Rime, must encounter with many glorious enemies, and those very expert, and ready at their weapon, that can if neede be extempore (as they say) rime a man to death."

Campion the pamphleteer has for enemy Campion the rhymers; his own songs are the best reply to his own indictment. Especially may one quote him against himself, where he says, and truly:

"The eare is a rationally sence, and a chiefe judge of proportion, but in our kind of riming what proportion is there kept where there remains such a confus'd inequality of sillables?"

But the metrical confusion of which he speaks is as far from the true rhymers as from the classic poets who never used rhyme. More finely ordered lyric metres, indeed, we need not seek than Campion's own. And in spite of some charming numbers, such as "Rose Check'd Laura," and his other trochaic lyric, "Follow, Follow!" in the same lady's honour, which he produces in this pamphlet to prove his case; it must be admitted that Campion is a better poet rhyming, than unrhyming.

However, after allowing for all that is inconsistent and without argument in his attack, enough remains to make it a singularly appetising dish in the symposium of the poets in celebration of their own art. It leaves one as devoted as ever to "the childish titillation of riming," as he calls it; especially if read, as it ought to be, in a sequence with Daniel's admirable reply. Moreover it has many practical points to make as to the technique of verse, which are well worth reading, as springing from so good a verse-writer.

Introduction.

A companion tract in music, though constructive and not destructive in its original scheme, was Campion's "New Way of Making Fowre Parts in Counter-point, by a most familiar and infallible Rule." Mr Bullen did not reprint it in his volume; but it is an interesting production, and, at moments, to others than musicians. One comes on some memorable sentences; as for example, "there is no tune that can have any grace or sweetnesse, unlesse it be bounded within a proper key." This recalls again that feeling for the propriety of word and note, which Campion showed in his practice in both arts.

Some of Campion's prettiest songs are to be found in his masques, which are exquisite in their kind, as full of picturesque effects as of lyrical moments. Indeed, the defect in some of them may have been thought by those who were not musically inclined, that Campion too often interrupted the spectacle in his eagerness to gain yet another lyric opportunity. The first and best of these masques, that performed at the marriage of Lord Hayes (Sir James Hay), we have appended to the present volume. This was certainly much the most lyrical of the four that Campion wrote; he seemed to learn, by his practice in masque-writing, to become less lyrical and to leave more to the skilled scenic art of his collaborators as he went on. The "Lord Hayes" masque was performed at Whitehall on Twelfth night, 1606-7. We do not come upon another masque of Campion's until six years later, in 1613, when he wrote three. The first was the Lord's Masque, "presented in the Banqueting House on the marriage night of the High and Mighty Count Palatine, and the royally descended the Lady Elizabeth." This, though it was not much praised, by some of its spectators at any rate, is full of taking, and often very splendid, spectacle; which we owe, like the spectacular effect in the best of Ben Jonson's masques, to the genius of Inigo Jones.

Introduction.

Mr Bullen, commenting upon the adverse criticism in one of Chamberlain's letters, which speaks of devices, "long and tedious," "more like a play than a masque," says—

"It is to be noticed that Chamberlain himself was not present; he wrote merely from hearsay. The star dance arranged by Inigo Jones was surely most effective; and the hearers must have been indeed insensate if they were not charmed by the beautiful song, 'Advance your choral motions now.'"

Another of the masques of that year was produced by Lord Knowles (Sir Wm. Knollys), at Cawsam (Caversham) House, Reading, in honour of "our most gracious Queene, Queene Anne, in her Progresse toward the Bathe," on the 27th and 28th April 1613. The third was that produced for the marriage of the Earl of

Introduction.

Somerset and "the infamous Lady Frances Howard, the divorced Countess of Essex," on the 26th December 1613.

In the same year Campion again showed his close connection with the Court by the little volume, "Songs of Mourning," in memory of the untimely death of Prince Henry, in November 1612. The songs, in which Campion was not altogether inspired, were set to music by Coprario (alias John Cooper). But elsewhere, in his "Divine and Moral Songs," Campion showed how well he could turn his lyric note to a grave measure. Indeed, he passed with ease and grace from such impulsive ditties as Amarillis to such solemn songs as "Lift up to Heav'n, sad wretch, thy Heavy spright!" or those two touching stanzas, beginning :

"Never weather beaten Saile more willing bent to shore,
Never tyred Pilgrim's limbs affected slumber
more."

One finds, after reading Campion with anything like sympathy, that he leaves the memory wonderfully replenished with such things,—things far too tender, witty, or true; too rare, rich, and fine, to be ever forgotten. In purely lyric poetry, he is, perhaps, the most remarkable discovery of our time amid the dust of old libraries, tireless as our zeal of research has been. He is, in brief, a master in his own field; and that field as widely, or as narrowly, determined in its lyric bounds as you care to make it.

Introduction.

The present edition of Campion,—the first in which he has made full public entrance before the wider audience,—owes, let me add, the fullest acknowledgment to the previous labours of Mr A. H. Bullen; to whose courtesy in waiving his claim upon a poet that he had almost made his own, the reader, as well as the editor, of the volume, must remain thrice indebted. For the most part Campion's original text is, however, here made use of; in the contrary case, as in the Masque at the end, Mr Bullen's initials will be found attached.

E. R.

November, 1895.

To the Reader. Campion's Preface to Rosseter's "Book of Ayres" (1601).

WHAT Epigrams are in Poetrie, the same are Ayres in musicke: then in their chiefe perfection when they are short and well seasoned. But to clogg a light song with a long Prælu-dium, is to corrupt the nature of it. Manie rests in Musicke were invented, either for necessitie of the fuge, or granted as a har-monicall licence in songs of many parts: but in Ayres I find no use they have, unlesse it be to make a vulgar and triviall modulation seeme to the ignorant, strange; and to the judicciall, tedious. A naked Ayre without guide, or prop, or colour but his owne, is easily censured of everie ear; and requires so much the more invention to make it please. And as Martiall speakes in defence of his short Epigrams; so may I say in th' apologie of Ayres: that where there is a full volume, there can be no imputation of shortnes. The Lyricke Poets among the Greekes and Latines were first inventers of Ayres, tying themselves strictly to the number and value of their sill-ables: of which sort, you shall find here onely one song in Saphicke verse; the rest are after the fascion of the time, eare-pleasing rimes without Arte. The subject of them is, for the most part amorous; and why not amorous songs, as well as amorous attires? Or why not new airs, as well as new fascions? For the Note and Tableture, if they satisfie the most, we have our desire; let expert masters please themselves with better. And if anie light error hath escaped us, the skilfull may easily correct it, the unskilfull will hardly perceive it. But there are some who, to appeare the more deepe and singular in their judgement, will admit no Musicke but that which is long, intricate, bated with fuge, chained with sincopation, and where the nature of everie word is precisely exprest in the Note: like the old exploded action in Comedies, when if they did pronounce Memeni, they would point to the hinder part of their heads; if Video, put their finger in their eye. But such childish observing of words is altogether ridiculous; and we ought to maintaine, as well in notes as in action, a manly cariage; gracing no word, but that which is eminent and emphaticall. Nevertheles, as in Poesie we give the preheminance to the Heroicall Poem; so in musicke, we yield the chiefe place to the grave and well invented Motet: but not to every harsh and dull confused Fantasie, where, in multitude of points, the Harmonie is quite drowned. Ayres have both their Art and pleasure: and I will conclude of them, as the poet did in his censure of Catullus the Lyricke, and Vergil the Heroicke writer:

Prefaces and Dedications.

Tantum magna suo debet Verona Catullo,
Quantum parva suo Mantua Vergilio.

Campion.

To the Reader. Preface to the "Two Bookes of Ayres" (1613?).

OUT of many Songs which, partly at the request of friends, partly for my owne recreation, were by mee long since composed, I have now enfranchised a few; sending them forth divided, according to the different subject into severall Bookes. The first are grave and pious; the second, amorous and light. For hee that in publishing any worke hath a desire to content all palates, must cater for them accordingly.

Non omnibus unum est
Quod placet, hic Spinus colligit, ille Rosas.

These Ayres were for the most part framed at first for one voyce with the Lute or Violl: but upon occasion they have since beene filled with more parts, which whoso please may use, who like not may leave. Yet doe wee daily observe that when any shall sing a Treble to an instrument, the standers by will be offering at an inward part out of their owne nature; and, true or false, out it must, though to the perverting of the whole harmonie. Also, if wee consider well, the Treble tunes (which are with us, commonly called Ayres) are but Tenors mounted eight Notes higher; and therefore an inward part must needs well become them, such as may take up the whole distance of the

Prefaces and Dedications.

Diapason, and fill up the gaping betweene the two extreeme parts; whereby though they are not three parts in perfection, yet they yeeld a sweetnesse and content both to the eare and minde; which is the aymè and perfection of Musicke. Short Ayres, if they be skilfully framed, and naturally exprest are like quicke and good Epigrammes in Poesie; many of them shewing as much artifice, and breeding as great difficultie as a larger Poeme. Non omnia possumus omnes, said the Romane Epicke Poet. But some there are who admit onely French or Italian Ayres; as if every Country had not his proper Ayre, which the people thereof naturally usurpe in their Musicke. Others taste nothing that comes forth in print; as if Catullus or Martial's Epigrammes were the worse for being published.

In these English Ayres, I have chiefly aymed to couple my Words and Notes lovingly together; which will be much for him to doe that hath not power over both. The light of this, will best appeare to him who hath pays'd our Monasyllables and Syllables combined: both which are so loaded with Consonants as that they will hardly keepe company with swift Notes, or give the Vowell convenient liberty.

To conclude; mine own opinion of these Songs I deliver thus:

Omnia nec nostris bona sunt, sed nec mala
libris;

Si placet hac cantes, hac quoq'. lege legas.

Farewell.

Campion.

Dedication of "Light Conceits of Lovers"
(1613?).

"To the Right Noble
and Vertuous Henry, Lord Clifford, sonne and heyre to the Right
Honourable Francis,
Earle of Cumberland."

SUCH dayes as wear the badge of holy red
Are for devotion markt and sage delight;
The vulgar Low-dayes, undistinguished,
Are left for labour, games, and sportfull sights.

This sev'rall and so differing use of Time,
Within th' enclosure of one weeke wee finde;
Which I resemble in my Notes and Rhyme,
Expressing both in their peculiar kinde.

Pure Hymnes, such as the seaventh day loves,
doe leade;
Grave age did justly chalenge those of
mee:
These weekeday workes, in order that suc-
ceede,
Your youth best fits; and yours, yong Lord,
they be,
As hee is, who to them their beeing gave:
If th' one, the other you of force must have.

“THE Apothecaries have Bookes of Gold, whose leaves, being opened, are so light as that they are subject to be shaken with the least breath ; yet rightly handled, they serve both for ornament and use : such are light Ayres.”

CAMPION.

Now Winter Third Booke of Ayres.
Nights Enlarge. (1617?). "Hunny" (l.
10), honey.

Now winter nights enlarge
The number of their houres ;
And clouds their stormes discharge
Upon the ayrie towres
Let now the chimneys blaze
And cups o'erflow with wine,
Let well-tun'd words amaze
With harmonie divine !
Now yellow waxen lights
Shall waite on hunny love
While youthfull Revels, Masks, and Courtly
sights,
Sleepe's leaden spels remove.

This time doth well dispence
With lovers' long discourse ;
Much speech hath some defence,
Though beauty no remorse.
All doe not all things well ;
Some measures comely tread,
Some knotted Ridles tell,
Some Poems smoothly read.
The Summer hath his joyes,
And Winter his delights ; Though Love and all his pleasures are but
toyes,
They shorten tedious nights,

Lyric Poems.

Cherry Ripe.

Fourth Booke of Ayres
(1617 ?).

THERE is a Garden in her face,
Where Roses and white Lillies grow ;
A heav'nly paradise is that place,
Wherein all pleasant fruits doe flow.
There Cherries grow, which none may buy
Till Cherry ripe themselves do cry.

Those Cherries fayrely doe enclose
Of Orient Pearle a double row ;
Which when her lovely laughter shows,
They look like Rose-buds fill'd with snow.
Yet them nor Peere nor Prince can buy
Till Cherry ripe themselves doe cry.

Her Eyes like Angels watch them still ;
Her Browes like bended bowes doe stand,
Threatning with piercing frownes to kill
All that attempt, with eye or hand,
Those sacred Cherries to come nigh,
Till Cherry ripe themselves do cry.

When to her Lute.

Rosseter's Ayres.
Part I. (1601).

WHEN to her lute Corinna sings,
Her voice revives the leaden stringes,
And doth in highest noates appeare,
As any challeng'd eccho cleere ;

Campion.

But when she doth of mourning speake,
Ev'n with her sighes the strings do breake.

And as her lute doth live or die,
Led by her passion, so must I ;
For when of pleasure, she doth sing,
My thoughts enjoy a sodaine spring ;
But if she doth of sorrow speake,
Ev'n from my heart the strings do breake.

Sleepe, Angry Beauty. Third Book of Ayres
(1617?).

SLEEPE, angry beauty, sleepe, and feare not me.

For who a sleeping Lyon dares provoke ?
It shall suffice me here to sit and see
Those lips shut up, that never kindly spoke.
What sight can more content a lover's minde
Then beauty seeming harmlesse, if not kinde ?

My words have charm'd her, for secure shee
sleepes ;

Though guilty much of wrong done to my love ;

And in her slumber, see, shee, close-ey'd, weepes !
Dreames often more than waking passions
move.

Pleade, Sleepe, my cause, and make her soft like thee,

That shee in peace may wake and pittie mee.

Lyric Poems.

Never Love Third Booke of Ayres
Unless You Can. (1617?).

NEVER love unlesse you can
Beare with all the faults of man :
Men sometimes will jealous bee,
Though but little cause they see ;
And hang the head, as discontent,
And speake what straight they will repent.

Men that but one saint adore,
Make a show of love to more :
Beauty must be scorn'd in none,
Though but truly serv'd in one :
For what is courtship, but disguise?
True hearts may have dissembling eyes.

Men when their affaires require,
Must a while themselves retire :
Sometimes hunt, and sometimes hawke,
And not ever sit and talke.
If these, and such like you can beare,
Then like, and love, and never feare !

Campion.

So Quicke, so Hot.

Third Booke of Ayres
(1617?).

So quicke, so hot, so mad is thy fond suit,
So rude, so tedious growne, in urging mee,
That fain I would, with losse, make thy tongue
mute,
And yeeld some little grace to quiet thee :
An houre with thee I care not to converse,
For I would not be counted too perverse.

But roofes too hot would prove for men all fire ;
And hills too high for my unused pace ;
The grove is charg'd with thornes and the bold
bryar ;
Grey snakes the meadowes shroude in every place :
A yellow frog, alas, will fright me so,
As I should start and tremble as I goe.

Since then I can on earth no fit roome finde,
In heaven I am resolv'd with you to meete :
Till then, for Hope's sweet sake, rest your tir'd minde
And not so much as see mee in the streete :
A heavenly meeting one day wee shall have,
But never, as you dreame, in bed, or grave.

Though you are Yoong.

Rosseter's Booke of
Ayres. Part I. (1601).

THOUGH you are yoong, and I am olde,
Though your vaines hot, and my bloud colde,
Though youth is moist, and age is drie ;
Yet embers live, when flames doe die.

The tender graft is easely broke,
But who shall shake the sturdie Oke ?
You are more fresh and fair then I ;
Yet stubs doe live, when flowers doe die.

Thou, that thy youth doest vainely boast,
Know buds are soonest nipt with frost :
Thinke that thy fortune still doth crie,
Thou foole, to-morrow thou must die !

Campion.

Thou art not Faire.

Rosseter's Booke of
Ayres. Part I. (1601).

THOU art not faire, for all thy red and white,
For all those rosie ornaments in thee ;
Thou art not sweet, though made of meer
delight,
Nor faire nor sweet, unless thou pitie me.
I will not sooth thy fancies : thou shalt prove
That beauty is no beautie without love.

Yet love not me, nor seeke thou to allure
My thoughts with beautie, were it more devine :
Thy smiles and kisses I cannot endure,
I'le not be wrapt up in those armes of thine :
Now show it, if thou be a woman right,—
Embrace, and kisse, and love me, in despight !

When thou must Home.

Rosseter's Booke of
Ayres. Part I. (1601).

WHEN thou must home to shades of underground,
And there arriv'd, a newe admired guest,
The beauteous spirits do ingirt thee round,
White Iope, blith Hellen, and the rest,
To heare the stories of thy finisht love,
From that smoothe toong whose musicke hell can move ;

Lyric Poems.

Then wilt thou speake of banqueting delights,
Of masks and revels which sweete youth did make,
Of Turnies and great challenges of knights,
And all these triumphes for thy beauties sake :
When thou hast told these honours done to thee,
Then tell, O tell, how thou didst murther me.

Shall I Come, Third Booke of Ayres
Sweet Love. (1617?).

SHALL I come, sweet love, to thee,
When the evening beames are set ?
Shall I not excluded be ?
Will you finde no fained lett ?
Let me not, for pittie, more,
Tell the long houres at your dore !

Who can tell what theefe or foe,
In the covert of the night,
For his prey will worke my woe,
Or through wicked fowl despite ?
So may I dye unredrest,
Ere my long love be possest.

But to let such dangers passe,
Which a lover's thoughts disdain,
'Tis enough in such a place
To attend love's joyes in vaine.
Doe not mocke me in thy bed,
While these cold nights freeze me dead.

Campion.

Awake, thou
Spring.

Third Booke of Ayres
(1617?).

AWAKE, thou spring of speaking grace, mute rest becomes not thee !
The fayrest women, while they sleepe, and pictures, equall bee.
O come and dwell in love's discourses,
Old rening, new creating.
The words which thy rich tongue discourses,
Are not of the common rating !

Thy voyce is as an Eccho cleare, which Musicke doth beget,
Thy spech is as an Oracle, which none can counterfeit :
For thou alone, without offending,
Hast obtained power of enchanting ;
And I could heare thee without ending,
Other comfort never wanting.

Some little reason brutish lives with humane glory share ;
But language is our proper grace, from which they sever'd are.
As brutes in reason man surpasses,
Men in speech excell each other :
If speech be then the best of graces,
Doe it not in slumber smother !

Lyric Poems.

Amarillis.

Rosseter. Part I.
(1601).

I CARE not for these Ladies,
That must be woode and praide :
Give me kind Amarillis,
The wanton countrey maide.
Nature art disdaineth,
Her beautie is her owne.
Her when we court and kisse,
She cries, Forsooth, let go :
But when we come where comfort is,
She never will say No.

If I love Amarillis,
She gives me fruit and flowers : -
But if we love these Ladies,
We must give golden showers.
Give them gold that sell love,
Give me the Nut-browne lasse,
Who, when we court and kisse,
She cries, Forsooth, let go :
But when we come where comfort is,
She never will say No.

These Ladies must have pillowes,
And beds by strangers wrought ;
Give me a Bower of willows,
Of mosse and leaves unbought,
And fresh Amarillis,
With milk and honie fed ;
Who, when we court and kisse,
She cries Forsooth, let go :
But when we come where comfort is,
She never will say No !

Campion.

Mistris, since you so much Desire.

Rosseter. Part I.
(1601).

MISTRIS, since you so much desire
To know the place of Cupid's fire,
In your faire shrine that flame doth rest,
Yet never harbourd in your brest.
It bides not in your lips so sweete,
Nor where the rose and lillies meete ;
But a little higher, but a little higher
There, there, O there lies Cupid's fire.

Even in those starrie pearcing eyes,
There Cupid's sacred fire lyes.
Those eyes I strive not to enjoy,
For they have power to destroy ;
Nor woe I for a smile or kisse,
So meanely triumphs not my blisse ;
But a little higher, but a little higher,
I climbe to crowne my chaste desire.

Turne backe
you Wanton
Flier.

Rosseter. Part I.
(1601).

TURNE backe, you wanton flier
And answere my desire,
With mutuall greeting :
Yet bende a little neerer,

Lyric Poems.

True beauty still shines cleerer,
In closer meeting,
Harts with harts delighted,
Should strive to be united ;
Either other's armes with armes enchayning :
Harts with a thought,
Rosie lips with a kisse still entertaining.
What harvcst halfe so sweete is
As still to reape the kisses
Growne ripe in sowing ?
And straight to be receiver
Of that which thou art giver,
Rich in bestowing ?
There's no strickt observing
Of times, or seasons changing ;
There is ever one fresh spring abiding.
Then what we sow with our lips,
Let us reape, love's gaines deviding !

So Sweet is thy Discourse. Fourth Booke of Ayres (1617 ?).

So sweet is thy discourse to me,
And so delightfull is thy sight,
As I taste nothing right but thee.
O why invented Nature light ?
Was it alone for beauties sake,
That her grac't words might better take ?

Campion.

No more can I old joyes recall :
They now to me become unknowne,
Not seeming to have beene at all.
Alas ! how soone is this love growne
To such a spreading height in me
As with it all must shadowed be !

To his Sweet Lute Fourth Booke of Ayres
Apollo sung. (1617 ?).

To his sweet lute Apollo sung the motions of the Spheares ;
The wondrous order of the Stars, whose course divides the yeares ;
 And all the Mysteries above :
 But none of this could Midas move,
Which purchast him his Asses eares.

Then Pan with his rude pipe began the Country-wealth t'advance,
To boast of Cattle, flocks of Sheepe, and Goates on hils that dance ;
 With much more of this churlish kinde,
 That quite transported Midas mind,
And held him rapt as in a trance.

This wrong the God of Musicke scorn'd from such a sottish Judge,
And bent his angry brow at Pan, which made the Piper trudge :

Lyric Poems.

Then Midas' head he so did trim,
That ev'ry age yet talkes of him,
And Phœbus right revenged grudge.

To Musicke Bent. Divine and Morall
Songs (1613?).

To Musicke bent, is my retyred minde,
And faine would I some song of pleasure sing ;
But in vaine joyes no comfort now I finde,
From heav'nly thoughts all true delight doth
spring :
Thy power, O God, thy mercies to record,
Will sweeten ev'ry note and ev'ry word.

All earthly pompe or beauty to expresse,
Is but to carve in snow, on waves to write ;
Celestiall things, though men conceive them
lesse,
Yet fullest are they in themselves of light :
Such beames they yeeld as know no meanes to dye,
Such heate they cast as lifts the Spirit high.

Campion.

The Man of Life Divine and Morall
Upright. Songs (1613?).

THE man of life upright,
Whose guiltlesse hart is free
From all dishonest deedes,
Or thought of vanitie ;

The man whose silent dayes,
In harmles joys are spent,
Whome hopes cannot delude
Nor sorrow discontent ;

That man needs neyther towres
Nor armour for defence,
Nor secret voutes to flie
From thunder's violence ;

Hee onely can behold
With unafrighted eyes
The horrors of the deepe
And terrours of the Skies.

Thus, scorning all the cares
That fate or fortune brings,
He makes the heav'n his booke,
His wisdom heav'nly things ;

Good thoughts his onely friendes,
His wealth a well-spent age,
The earth his sober Inne
And quiet Pilgrimage.

Lyric Poems.

Where are all thy Beauties now, Divine and Morall all Harts en- Songs (1613 ?).
chaining ?

WHERE are all thy beauties now, all harts enchaining ?
Whither are thy flatt'ers gone with all their fayning ?
All fled, and thou alone still here remayning !

Thy rich state of twisted gold to Bayes is turned !
Cold as thou art, are thy loves that so much burned !
Who dye in flatt'ers' armes are seldome mourned.

Yet in spite of envie, this be still proclaymed,
That none worthyer then thyselfe thy worth hath blamed ;
When their poore names are lost, thou shalt live famed.

When thy story long time hence shall be perused,
Let the blemish of thy rule be thus excused,—
None ever liv'd more just, none more abused.

Come, chearfull Day. Divine and Morall
Songs.

COME, chearfull day, part of my life, to mee :
For while thou view'st me with thy fading light,
Part of my life doth still depart with thee,
And I still onward haste to my last night.
Time's fatall wings doe ever forward flye :
So ev'ry day we live, a day wee dye.

But, O yee nights, ordained for barren rest,
How are my dayes depriv'd of life in you,
When heavy sleepe my soul hath dispossesst,
By fayned death life sweetly to renew !
Part of my life in that you life denye :
So ev'ry day we live a day wee dye.

Awake, Awake. Divine and Morall
Songs.

AWAKE, awake, thou heavy spright,
That sleep'st the deadly sleepe of sinne !
Rise now and walke the wayes of light !
'Tis not too late yet to begin.
Seeke heav'n earely, seeke it late :
True Faith still findes an open gate.

Lyric Poems.

Get up, get up, thou leaden man !
Thy tracks to endlesse joy, or paine
Yeeld but the modell of a span ;
Yet burnes out thy life's lampe in vaine !
One minute bounds thy bane, or blisse :
Then watch, and labour while time is !

Followe thy faire Sunne.

Rosseter. Part I.
(1601).

FOLLOWE thy faire sunne, unhappy shaddowe,
Though thou be blacke as night,
And she made all of light,
Yet follow thy faire sunne, unhappie shaddowe !

Follow her whose light thy light depriveth ;
Though here thou liv'st disgrae't,
And she in heaven is plac't,
Yet follow her whose light the world reviveth.

Follow those pure beames whose beautie
burneth,
That so have scorched thee,
As thou still blacke must bee,
Til her kind beames thy black to brightnes turneth.

Follow her while yet her glorie shineth :
There comes a luckles night,
That will dim all her light ;
And this the black unhappie shade devineth.

Campion.

Follow still since so thy fates ordained ;
The Sunne must have his shade,
Till both at once doe fade ;
The sun still prov'd, the shadow still disdained.

And would you see my Mistris' Face ?

Rosseter's Booke of
Ayres. Part II. (1601)

AND would you see my Mistris' face?
It is a flowrie garden place,
Where knots of beauties have such grace,
That all is worke and nowhere space.

It is a sweete delicious morne,
Where day is breeding, never borne ;
It is a Meadow yet unshorne,
Whom thousand flowers do adorne.

It is the heaven's bright reflexe,
Weake eies to dazle and to vexe :
It is th' Idæa of her sexe,
Envie of whome doth worlds perplexe.

It is a face of death that smiles,
Pleasing, though it killes the whiles :
Where death and love in pretie wiles
Each other mutuallie beguiles.

Lyric Poems.

It is faire beautie's freshest youth,
It is the fained Elizium's truth :
The spring, that winter'd harts renu'th ;
And this is that my soule pursu'th.

Vaine Men, Light Conceits of whose Follies. Lovers (1613?).

V AINE men, whose follies make a God of Love,
Whose blindnesse beauty doth immortall deeme;
Prayse not what you desire, but what you prove,
Count those things good that are, not those that seeme :
I cannot call her true that's false to me,
Nor make of women more than women be.

How fair an entrance breakes the way to love !
How rich of golden hope, and gay delight !
What hart cannot a modest beauty move ?
Who, seeing cleare day once, will dreame of
night ?
She seem'd a Saint, that brake her faith with
mee,
But prov'd a woman as all other be.

Campion.

So bitter is their sweet, that true content
Unhappy men in them may never finde :
Ah, but without them none. Both must consent,

Else uncouth are the joyes of eyther kinde.
Let us then prayse their good, forget their ill !
Men must be men, and women women still.

How eas'ly
wert thou Chained.

Light Conceits of
Lovers (1613?).

How eas'ly wert thou chained,
Fond hart, by favours fained !
Why liv'd thy hopes in grace,
Straight to die disdained ?
But since th' art now beguiled
By Love that falsely smiled,
In some lesse happy place
Mourne alone exiled !
My love still here increaseth,
And with my love my grieffe,
While her sweet bounty ceaseth,
That gave my woes reliefe.
Yet 'tis no woman leaves me,
For such may prove unjust ;
A Goddesse thus deceives me
Whose faith who could mistrust ?
A Goddesse so much graced,
That Paradice is placed

Lyric Poems.

In her most heav'nly brest,
Once by love embraced :
But love, that so kind proved,
Is now from her removed,
Nor will he longer rest
Where no faith is loved.
If Powres Celestiall wound us
And will not yeeld reliefe,
Woe then must needs confound us,
For none can cure our grief.
No wonder if I languish
Through burden of my smart,
It is no common anguish
From Paradice to part.

Harden now thy tyred Hart. Light Conceits of
Lovers (1613?).

HARDEN now thy tyred hart with more then flinty rage !
Ne'er let her false teares henceforth thy constant grieffe asswage !
Once true happy dayes thou saw'st when shee stood firme and kinde,
Both as one then liv'd and held one eare, one tongue, one minde :
But now those bright houres be fled, and never may returne ;
What then remains but her untruths to mourne ?

Campion.

Silly Trayt'resse, who shall now thy carelesse tresses place?
Who thy pretty talke supply? whose eare thy musicke grace?
Who shall thy bright eyes admire? what lips triumph with thine?
Day by day who'll visit thee, and say: Th'art onely mine?
Such a time there was, God wot, but such shall never be:
Too oft, I feare, thou wilt remember me.

O what Unhop't for Sweet Supply.

Light Conceits of
Lovers (1613?).

O WHAT unhop't for sweet supply!
O what joyes exceeding!
What an affecting charme feele I,
From delight proceeding!
That which I long despair'd to be,
To her I am, and shee to mee.

Shee that alone in cloudy grieve
Long to mee appeared:
Shee now alone with bright reliefe
All those clouds hath cleared.
Both are immortall and divine,
Since I am hers, and she is mine.

Where Shee
her Sacred Bowre Adornes.

Light Conceits of
Lovers (1613?).

WHERE shee her sacred bowre adornes,
The Rivers clearly flow ;
The groves and medowes swell with flowres
The windes all gently blow.
Her Sunne-like beauty shines so fayre,
Her Spring can never fade :
Who then can blame the life that strives
To harbour in her shade ?

Her grace I sought, her love I wooed,
Her love though I obtaine ;
No time, no toyle, no vow, no faith,
Her wished grace can gaine.
Yet truth can tell my heart is hers,
And her will I adore ;
And from that love when I depart,
Let heav'n view me no more !

Her roses with my prayes shall spring ;
And when her trees I praise,
Their boughs shall blossome, mellow fruit
Shall straw her pleasant wayes.
The words of hartly zeale have powre
High wonders to effect ;
O why should then her princely eare
My words, or zeale, neglect ?

Campion.

If shee my faith misdeemes, or worth,
Woe worth my haplesse fate !
For though time can my truth reveale,
That time will come too late.
And who can glory in the worth,
That cannot yeeld him grace ?
Content, in ev'rything is not,
Nor joy in ev'ry place.

But from her bowre of Joy since I Must now excluded be,
And shee will not relieve my cares,
Which none can helpe but shee ;
My comfort in her love shall dwell,
Her love lodge in my brest,
And though not in her bowre, yet I Shall in her temple rest.

Faine would I
My Love Disclose.

Light Conceits of
Lovers (1613?).

F AINE would I my love disclose,
Aske what honour might denye ;
But both love and her I lose,
From my motion if shee flye.
Worse then paine is feare to mee :
Then hold in fancy though it burne ;
If not happy, safe I'le be,
And to my clostred cares returne.

Lyric Poems.

Yet, O yet, in vaine I strive
To repress my school'd desire ;
More and more the flames revive,
I consume in mine owne fire.
She would pittie, might shee know
The harmes that I for her endure :
Speake then, and get comfort so ;
A wound long hid growes past recure.

Wise shee is, and needs must know
All th' attempts that beauty moves ;
Fayre she is, and honour'd so
That she, sure, hath tryed some loves.
If with love I tempt her then,
'Tis but her due to be desir'd :
What would women thinke of men,
If their deserts were not admir'd ?

Women courted have the hand
To discard what they distaste :
But those Dames whom none demand
Want oft what their wils imbrac't.
Could their firmnesse iron excell,
As they are faire, they should be sought :
When true theeves use falsehood well,
As they are wise, they will be caught.

Campion.

Give Beauty All Light Conceits of
Her Right. Lovers (1613?).

GIVE beauty all her right,
She's not to one forme tyed ;
Each shape yeelds faire delight,
Where her perfections bide.
Hellen, I grant, might pleasing be ;
And Ros'mond was as sweet as shee.

Some, the quicke eye commends ;
Some, swelling lips and red ;
Pale lookes have many friends,
Through sacred sweetnesse bred.
Medowes have flowres that pleasure move,
Though Roses are the flowres of love.

Free beauty is not bound
To one unmoved clime ;
She visits ev'ry ground,
And favours ev'ry time.
Let the old loves with mine compare,
My Sov'raine is as sweet and fair.

Lyric Poems.

O Deare! that I with Thee might Live.

Light Conceits of
Lovers (1613?).

O DEARE, that I with thee might live,
From humane trace removed!
Where jealous care might neither grieve,
Yet each dote on their loved.
While fond feare may colour finde, Love's seldome pleased;
But much like a sicke man's rest, it's soone diseased.

Why should our mindes not mingle so,
When love and faith is plighted,
That eyther might the other's know,
Alike in all delighted?
Why should frailtie breed suspect, when hearts are fixed?
Must all humane joys of force with grieve be mixed?

How oft have wee ev'n smilde in teares,
Our fond mistrust repenting?
As snow when heav'nly fire appeares,
So melts love's hate relenting.
Vexed kindnesse soone fals off, and soone
returneth:
Such a flame the more you quench the more it
burneth.

Campion.

Good Men shew, Light Conceits of
if You can Tell. Lovers (1613?).

GOOD men shew, if you can tell,
Where doth humane pittie dwell?
Farre and neere her would I seeke
So vext with sorrow is my brest :
She, (they say) to all, is meeke ;
And onely makes th' unhappie blest.

Oh ! if such a Saint there be,
Some hope yet remaines for me :
Prayer or sacrifice may gaine
From her implored grace reliefe ;
To release mee of my paine,
Or at the least to ease my grieffe.

Young am I, and farre from guile,
The more is my woe the while :
Falshood with a smooth disguise
My simple meaning hath abus'd :
Casting mists before thine eyes,
By which my senses are confus'd.

Faire he is, who vow'd to me
That he onely mine would be ;
But, alas, his minde is caught
With ev'ry gaudie bait he sees :
And too late my flame is taught
That too much kindnesse makes men freese.

Lyric Poems.

From me all my friends are gone
While I pine for him alone ;
And not one will rue my case,
But rather my distresse deride :
That I thinke there is no place
Where pittie ever yet did bide.

Whether Men doe Laugh or Weepe.

A Booke of Ayres.
Part II. (1601).

WHETHER men doe laugh or weepe,
Whether they doe wake or sleepe,
Whether they die yoong or olde,
Whether they feele heate or colde ;
There is, underneath the sunne,
Nothing in true earnest done.

All our pride is but a jest,
None are worst, and none are best,
Griefe, and joy, and hope, and feare,
Play their Pageants everywhere :
Vaine opinion all doth sway,
And the world is but a play.

Powers above in cloudes do sit,
Mocking our poore apish wit ;
That so lamely, with such state,
Their high glorie imitate :
No ill can be felt but paine,
And that happie men disdaine

What then is Love but Mourning?

A Booke of Ayres.
Part II. (1601).

WHAT then is love but mourning?
What desire, but a selfe-burning?
Till shee, that hates, doth love returne,
Thus will I mourne, thus will I sing,
Come away! come away, my darling!

Beautie is but a blooming,
Youth in his glorie entombing;
Time hath a while which none can stay:
Then come away, while thus I sing,
Come away! come away, my darling!

Sommer in winter fadeth;
Gloomie night heav'nly light shadeth:
Like to the morne, are Venus' flowers;
Such are her howers: then will I sing,
Come away! come away, my darling!

Lyric Poems.

Kinde in Un-kindnesse, when will You relent.

A Booke of Ayres.
Part II. (1601).

KINDE in unkindnesse, when will you relent
And cease with faint love true love to torment ?
Still entertained, excluded still I stand ;
Her glove still holde, but cannot touch the hand.

In her faire hand my hopes and comforts rest ;
O might my fortunes with that hand be blest !
No envious breaths then my deserts could shake,
For they are good whom such true love doth
make.

O let not beautie so forget her birth,
That it should fruitles home returne to earth !
Love is the fruite of beautie, then love one !
Not your sweete selfe, for such selfe-love is none.

Love one that onely lives in loving you ;
Whose wrong'd deserts would you with pity view,
This strange distast which your affections
swaies
Would relish love, and you find better daies.

Campion.

Thus till my happie sight your beautie views,
Whose sweet remembrance stil my hope
renewes,
Let these poore lines sollicite love for mee,
And place my joyes where my desires would bee.

When Laura Smiles.

ROSSETER. Part II.
(1601).—A. H. B.

WHEN Laura smiles her sight revives both night and day ;
The earth and heaven views with delight her wanton play :
And her speech with ever-flowing music doth repair
The cruel wounds of sorrow and untamed despair.

The sprites that remain in fleeting air
Affect for pastime to untwine her tressed hair :
And the birds think sweet Aurora, Morning's Queen, doth shine
From her bright sphere, when Laura shows her looks divine.

Diana's eyes are not adorned with greater power
Than Laura's, when she lists awhile for sport to lower :

Lyric Poems.

But when she her eyes encloseth, blindness doth appear
The chiefest grace of beauty, sweetly seated there.

Love hath no power but what he steals from her bright eyes ;
Time hath no power but that which in her pleasure lies :
For she with her divine beauties all the world
subdues,
And fills with heavenly spirits my humble
Muse.

Rose-cheeked Laura.

Unrhymed song from "Observations in the Art of English Poesie," 1602.
"The number," says
Campion, "is voluble, and fit to express any amorous conceit."—
A. H. B.

ROSE-CHEEKED Laura, come ;
Sing thou smoothly with thy beauty's
Silent music, either other Sweetly gracing.
Lovely forms do flow
From concert divinely framed ;
Heav'n is music, and thy beauty's
Birth is heavenly.
These dull notes we sing
Discords need for helps to grace them,

Campion.

Only beauty purely loving Knows no discord,
But still moves delight,
Like clear springs renewed by flowing,
Ever perfect, ever in them-Selves eternal.

Scornfull Laura. Anacreontic from "Observations in the Art of English Poesie" (1602).—
A. H. B.

FOLLOW, follow,
Though with mischief
Armed, like whirlwind
Now she flies thee ;
Time can conquer
Love's unkindness ;
Love can alter
Time's disgraces :
Till death faint not
Then, but follow.
Could I catch that Nimble traitor
Scornful Laura,
Swift-foot Laura,
Soon then would I
Seek avengement.
What's th' avengement ?
Ev'n submissly
Prostrate then to Beg for mercy.

Lyric Poems.

See where She flies enrag'd from Me !

Rosseter. Part I.
(1601).

SEE where she flies enrag'd from me !
View her when she intends despite,
The winde is not more swift than shee.
Her furie mov'd such terror makes,
As to a fearfull guiltie sprite,
The voice of heav'ns huge thundercracks :
But when her appeased minde yeelds to delight,
All her thoughts are made of joies,
Millions of delights inventing ;
Other pleasures are but toies
To her beautie's sweet contenting.

My fortune hangs upon her brow ;
For as she smiles, or frownes on mee,
So must my blowne affections bow ;
And her proude thoughts too well do find
With what unequall tyrannie
Her beauties doe command my mind.
Though when her sad planet raignes,
Froward she bee,
She alone can pleasure move,
And displeasing sorrow banish.
May I but still hold her love,
Let all other comforts vanish.

Campion.

Your faire
Lookes enflame
my Desire.

Rosseter. Part I.
(1601).

YOUR faire lookes enflame my desire :
 Quench it againe with love !
Stay, O strive not still to retire :
 Doe not inhumane prove !
If love may perswade,
 Love's pleasures, deare, denie not.
Here is a silent grovie shade ;
 O tarry then, and fly not !

Have I seiz'd my heavenly delight
 In this unhaunted grove ?
Time shall now her furie requite
 With the revenge of love.
Then come, sweetest, come,
 My lips with kisses gracing !
Here let us harbour all alone,
 Die, die in sweete embracing !

Will you now so timely depart,
 And not returne againe ?
Your sight lends such life to my hart
 That to depart is paine.
Feare yeelds no delay,
 Securenes helpeth pleasure :
Then, till the time gives safer stay,
 O farewell, my live's treasure !

Lyric Poems.

The Fairie Queene Prosperina.

Rosseter. Part I.
(1601).

HARKE, al you ladies that do sleep !
 Thé fayry queen Proserpina
Bids you awake and pitie them that weep.
 You may doe in the darke
 What the day doth forbid ;
 Feare not the dogs that barke,
 Night will have all hid.

But if you let your lovers mone,
 The Fairie Queene Proserpina
Will send abroad her Fairies ev'rie one,
 That shall pinch blacke and blew
 Your white hands and faire armes
 That did not kindly rue
 Your Paramours harmes.

In Myrtle Arbours on the downes
 The Fairie Queene Proserpina,
This night by moone-shine leading merrie rounds,
 Holds a watch with sweet love,
 Down the dale, up the hill ;
No plaints or groanes may move
 Their holy vigill.

Campion.

All you that will hold watch with love,
The Fairie Queene Proserpina
Will make you fairer than Dione's dove
Roses red, Lillies white,
And the cleare damaske hue,
Shall on your cheekes alight :
Love will adorne you.

All you that love or lov'd before,
The Fairie Queene Proserpina
Bids you encrease that loving humour more :
They that yet have not fed
On delight amorous,
She vows that they shall lead
Apes in Avernus.

It fell on a Sommer's Day.

Rosseter's Booke of
Ayres. Part I. (1601).

IT fell on a sommer's day,
While sweete Bessie sleeping laie,
In her bowre, on her bed,
Light with curtaines shadowed,
Jamy came: shee him spies,
Opning halfe her heavie eies.

Jamy stole in through the dore,
She lay slumb'ring as before ;
Softly to her he drew neere,
She heard him, yet would not heare :
Bessie vowed not to speake,
He resolv'd that dumpe to breake.

First a soft kisse he doth take,
She lay still, and would not wake ;
Then his hands learn'd to woo,
She dreamp't not what he would doo,
But still slept, while he smild
To see love by sleepe beguild.

Jamy then began to play,
Bessie as one buried lay,
Gladly still through this sleight,
Deceiv'd in her owne deceit ;
And since this traunce begoon,
She sleepes ev'rie afternoone.

Campion.

Maydes are Simple.

Third Booke of Ayres
(1617?).

MAYDES are simple, some men say,
They, forsooth, will trust no men.
But should they men's wils obey,
Maides were very simple then.

Truth a rare flower now is growne,
Few men weare it in their hearts ;
Lovers are more easily knowne
By their follies, then deserts.

Safer may we credit give
To a faithlesse wandring Jew
Then a young man's vowes beleve
When he swears his love is true.

Love they make a poore blinde childe,
But let none trust such as hee :
Rather then to be beguil'd,
Ever let me simple be.

Lyric Poems.

Think'st Thou to seduce Me then with Words.

Fourth Booke of Ayres
(1617 ?).

THINK'ST thou to seduce me then with words that have no meaning?
Parrats so can learne to prate, our speech by pieces gleaning:
Nurces teach their children so about the time of weaning.

Learne to speake first, then to woe: to wooing,
much pertayneth:
Hee that courts us, wanting Arte, soone falters
when he fayneth,
Lookes asquint on his discourse, and smiles,
when hee complaineth.

Skilfull Anglers hide their hookes, fit baytes for every season;
But with crooked pins fish thou, as babes doe,
that want reason:
Gogions onely can be caught with such poore
trickes of treason.

Ruth forgive me, if I err'd from humane heart's compassion,
When I laught sometimes too much to see thy foolish fashion:
But, alas, who lesse could doe that found so good occasion?

Campion.

Fain would I
Wed.

Fourth Booke of
Ayres (1617?).—A. H. B.

FAIN would I wed a fair young man that day and night could please me,
When my mind or body grieved that had the power to ease me.
Maids are full of longing thoughts that breed a bloodless sickness,
And that, oft I hear men say, is only cured by quickness.
Oft I have been wooed and prayed, but never could be moved ;
Many for a day or so I have most dearly loved,
But this foolish mind of mine straight loathes
the thing resolved ;
If to love be sin in me that sin is soon absolved.
Sure I think I shall at last fly to some holy order ;
When I once am settled there then can I fly no farther.
Yet I would not die a maid, because I had a mother ;
As I was by one brought forth I would bring forth another.

Lyric Poems.

Ev'ry Dame affects good Fame.

Fourth Booke of
Ayres (1617?).

EV'RY dame affects good fame, what ere her doings be :
But true prayse is Vertues Bayes which none may weare but she.
Borrow'd guise fits not the wise, a simple look is best ;
Native grace becomes a face, though ne'er so rudely drest.
Now such new found toyes are sold, these women to disguise,
That before the yeare growes old the newest fashion dyes.

Dames of yore contended more in goodnesse to exceede
Then in pride to be envi'd, for that which least they neede.
Little Lawne then serv'd the Pawne, if Pawne
at all there were ;
Homespun thread, and houshold bread, then held out all the yeare.
But th' attyres of women now weare out both house and land ;
That the wives in silkes may flow, at ebbe the Good-men stand.

Campion.

Once agen, Astrea, then, from heav'n to earth
descend,
And vouchsafe in their behalfe these errours to amend !
Aid from heav'n must make all ev'n, things are so out of frame ;
For let man strive all he can, hee needes must please his Dame.
Happy man, content that gives and what hee gives, enjoys !
Happy dame, content that lives and breakes no
sleepe for toyes !

Thou joy'st,
Fond Boy.

Fourth Booke of
Ayres (1617?).

THOU joy'st, fond boy, to be by many loved,
To have thy beauty of most dames approved ;
For this dost thou thy native worth disguise
And play'st the Sycophant t' observe their eyes ;
Thy glasse thou councel'st more t' adorne thy skin,
That first should schoole thee to be fayre within.

'Tis childish to be caught with Pearle or Amber,
And woman-like too much to cloy the chamber ;
Youths should the Field affect, heate their rough Steedes,
Their hardned nerves to fit for better deedes.

Lyric Poems.

Is't not more joy strong Holds to force with swords,
Then women's weaknesse take with lookes or words?

Men that doe noble things all purchase glory :
One man for one brave Act hath prov'd a story :
But if that one tenne thousand Dames o'er-came,
Who would record it, if not to his shame?
Tis farre more conquest with one to live true,
Than every hour to triumph Lord of new.

Silly Boy, 'tis full Moon yet. Third Booke of Ayres (1617?).

SILLY boy, 'tis ful moone yet, thy night as day shines clearely ;
Had thy youth but wit to feare, thou couldst not love so dearely.
Shortly wilt thou mourne when all thy pleasures are bereaved ;
Little knowes he how to love that never was deceived.

This is thy first mayden flame, that triumphes
yet unstayned ;
All is artlesse now you speake, not one word yet
is fayned ;

Campion.

All is heav'n that you behold, and all your thoughts are blessed ;
But no spring can want his fall, each Troylus hath his Cresseid.

Thy well-order'd lockes ere long shall rudely
hang neglected ;
And thy lively pleasant cheare reade grieve on earth dejected.
Much then wilt thou blame thy Saint, that made thy heart so holy,
And with sighes confesse, in love, that too much faith is folly.

Yet be just and constant still! Love may beget a wonder,
Not unlike a summer's frost, or winter's fatall thunder.
Hee that holds his sweethart true, unto his day
of dying,
Lives, of all that ever breath'd, most worthy the envying.

If Thou longest. Third Booke of Ayres
(1617?).

IF thou longest so much to learne, sweet boy,
what 'tis to love,
Doe but fix thy thought on mee and thou shalt quickly prove.

Little suit, at first, shall win
Way to thy abasht desire,
But then will I hedge thee in Salamander-like with fire.

With thee dance I will, and sing, and thy fond dalliance beare ;
We the grovy hils will climbe, and play the wantons there ;

Other whiles wee'le gather flowres,
Lying dalying on the grasse !
And thus our delightful howres
Full of waking dreames shall passe !

When thy joyes were thus at height, my love should turne from thee ;
Old acquaintance then should grow as strange as strange might be ;

Twenty rivals thou shouldst finde,
Breaking all their hearts for mee,
While to all I'le prove more kinde
And more forward then to thee.

Campion.

Thus, thy silly youth, enrag'd, would soone my love defie ;

But, alas, poore soule too late ! clipt wings can never flye.

Those sweet houres which wee had past,
Cal'd to minde, thy heart would burne ;

And couldst thou flye ne'er so fast,
They would make thee straight returne.

Break now, my Third Booke of Ayres
Heart. (1617?).

BREAKE now, my heart, and dye ! O no, she may relent.

Let my despayre prevayle ! Oh stay, hope is not spent.

Should she now fixe one smile on thee, where were despair ?

The losse is but easie, which smiles can repayre.

A stranger would please thee, if she were as fayre.

Her must I love or none, so sweet none breathes
as shee ;

The more is my despayre, alas, shee loves not
mee !

But cannot time make way for love through ribs of steele ?

The Grecian enchanted all parts but the heele,

At last a shaft daunted, which his hart did feele.

Lyric Poems.

The Peacefull Westerne Winde, Light Conceits of Lovers (1613?).

THE peacefull westerne winde
The winter stormes hath tam'd,
And nature in each kinde
The kinde heat hath inflam'd :
The forward buds so sweetly breathe
Out of their earthy bowers,
That heav'n which viewes their pompe beneath,
Would faine be deckt with flowers.

See how the morning smiles
On her bright easterne hill,
And with soft steps beguiles
Them that lie slumbring still !
The musicke-loving birds are come
From cliffes and rockes unknowne,
'To see the trees and briers blome
That late were overflowne.

What Saturn did destroy,
Love's Queene revives againe ;
And now her naked boy
Doth in the fields remaine,
Where he such pleasing change doth view
In every living thing,
As if the world were borne anew
To gratifie the Spring.

Campion.

If all things life present,
Why die my comforts then ?
Why suffers my content ?
Am I the worst of men ?
O beautie, be not thou accus'd
Too justly in this case !
Unkindly if true love be us'd,
'Twill yeeld thee little grace.

There is None. Light Conceits of
 Lovers (1613?).

THERE is none, O none but you,
That from mee estrange your sight,
Whom mine eyes affect to view
Or chained eares heare with delight.

Other beauties others move,
In you I all graces finde ;
Such is the effect of love,
To make them happy that are kinde.

Women in fraile beauty trust,
Onely seeme you faire to mee ;
Yet prove truely kinde and just,
For that may not dissembled be.

Sweet, afford mee then your sight,
That, survaying all your lookes,
Endlesse volumes I may write
And fill the world with envyed bookes :

Lyric Poems.

Which when after-ages view,
All shall wonder and despaire,
Woman to find man so true,
Or man a woman half so faire.

Sweet, exclude Mee not. Light Conceits of
Lovers (1613?).

SWEET, exclude mee not, nor be divided
From him that ere long must bed thee :
All thy maiden doubts law hath decided ;
Sure wee are, and I must wed thee.
Presume then yet a little more :
Here's the way, barre not the dore.

Tenants, to fulfill their Landlord's pleasure,
Pay their rent before the quarter :
'Tis my case, if you it rightly measure ;
Put mee not then off with laughter.
Consider then a little more :
Here's the way to all my store.

Why were dores in love's despight devised ?
Are not Lawes enough restrayning ?
Women are most apt to be surprised
Sleeping, or sleepe wisely fayning.
Then grace me yet a little more :
Here's the way, barre not the dore.

Campion.

Song from the "Masque
at the Marriage of the Lord Hayes," 1606.

Now hath
Flora.

"As soon as they came to the descent toward the dancing place, the concert of ten ceased, and the four Sylvans played the same air, to which Zephyrus and the two other Sylvans did sing these words in a bass, tenor, and treble voice, and going up and down as they sung they strewed flowers all about the place."—A. H. B.

Now hath Flora rob'd her bowers
To befrend this place with flowers :
 Strowe aboute, strowe aboute !
The Skye rayn'd never kindlyer showers.
Flowers with Bridalls well agree,
Fresh as brides and bridgroomes be :
 Strowe aboute, strowe aboute !
And mixe them with fit melodie.
 Earth hath no Princelier flowers
Then Roses white and Roses red,
But they must still be mingled :
And as a rose new pluckt from Venus' thorn,
So doth a bride her bridegroomes bed adorne.

Divers divers flowers affect
For some private deare respect :
 Strowe aboute, strowe aboute !
Let every one his owne protecte ;
But he's none of Flora's friend
That will not the Rose commend.
 Strowe aboute, strowe aboute !

Lyric Poems.

Let Princes Princely flowers defend :
Roses, the garden's pride,
Are flowers for love and flowers for Kinges,
In courts desired, and Weddings :
And as a rose in Venus' bosome worne,
So doth a Bridegroome his Bride's bed adorne.

Her Rosie
Cheekes.

Light Conceits of Lovers
(1613?). 'Currall' (l. 5),
Coral.

HER rosie cheekes, her ever smiling eyes,
Are Spheares and beds, where Love in triumph lies :

Her rubine lips, when they their pearle unlocke,
Make them seeme as they did rise
All out of one smooth Currall Rocke.
Oh that of other Creatures' store I knew
More worthy and more rare :
For these are old, and shee so new,
That her to them none should compare.

O could she love, would shee but heare a friend ;
Or that shee onely knew what sighs pretend.
Her lookes inflame, yet cold as Ice is she.
Doe or speake, all's to one end,
For what shee is that will shee be.
Yet will I never cease her prayse to sing,
Though she gives no regard :
For they that grace a worthlesse thing,
Are onely greedy of reward.

Campion.

Come Away. Light Conceits of
 Lovers (1613?).

COME away, arm'd with love's delights,
Thy sprightfull graces bring with thee,
When love's longing fights,
They must the sticklers be.
Come quickly, come, the promis'd houre is wel-nye spent,
And pleasure being too much deferr'd, looseth her best content.

Is shee come? O, how neare is shee?
How farre yet from this friendly place?
How many steps from me?
When shall I her imbrace?
These armes I'le spred, which onely at her sight shall close,
Attending as the starry flowre that the Sun's noonetide knowes.

What Harvest. Light Conceits of
 Lovers (1613?).

WHAT harvest halfe so sweet is
As still to reape the kisses
Growth ripe in sowing?
And straight to be receiver
Of that which thou art giver,
Rich in bestowing?

Lyric Poems.

Kisse then, my harvest Queene,
Full garners heaping ;
Kisses, ripest when th' are greene,
Want onely reaping.

The Dove alone expresses
Her fervencie in kisses,
Of all most loving :
A creature as offencelesse
As those things that are sencelesse
And void of moving.
Let us so love and kisse,
Though all envie us :
That which kinde, and harmlesse is,
None can denie us.

So many Loves. Light Conceits of
 Lovers (1613?).

So many loves have I neglected,
Whose good parts might move mee,
That now I live of all rejected,
There is none will love me.
Why is mayden heat so coy ?
It freezeth when it burneth,
Looseth what it might enjoy,
And, having lost it, mourneth.

Should I then wooe, that have beene wooed,
Seeking them that flye mee ?
When I my faith with teares have vowed,
And when all denye mee,

Campion.

Who will pittie my disgrace,
Which love might have prevented?
There is no submission base
Where error is repented.

O happy men, whose hopes are licenc'd
To discourse their passion,
While women are confin'd to silence,
Loosing wisht occasion!
Yet our tongues then theirs, men say,
Are apter to be moving:
Women are more dumbe then they,
But in their thoughts more moving.

When I compare my former strangenesse
With my present doting,
I pittie men that speak in plainnesse,
Their true heart's devoting;
While we with repentance jest
At their submissive passion.
Maydes, I see, are never blest,
That strange be but for fashion.

Come, you Pretty False-ey'd Wanton.

Light Conceits of
Lovers (1613?).

COME, you pretty false-ey'd wanton,
Leave your crafty smiling !
Think you to escape me now
With slipp'ry words beguiling !
No ; you mockt me th'other day ;
When you got loose, you fled away ;
But, since I have caught you now,
I'll clip your wings for flying :
Smoth'ring kisses fast I'll heape,
And keepe you so from crying.

Sooner may you count the starres,
And number hayle downe pouring,
Tell the osiers of the Temmes,
Or Goodwin's Sands devouring,
Then the thicke-shower'd kisses here
Which now thy tyred lips must beare.
Such a harvest never was,
So rich and full of pleasure,
But 'tis spent as soone as reapt,
So trustlesse is love's treasure.

Campion.

Would it were dumb midnight now,
When all the world lyes sleeping !
Would this place some Desert were,
Which no man hath in keeping !
My desires should then be safe,
And when you cry'd then would I laugh :
But if aught might breed offence,
Love onely should be blamed :
I would live your servant still,
And you my Saint unnamed.

Where shall I Refuge Seek.

Light Conceits of
Lovers (1613 ?).

WHERE shall I refuge seek, if you refuse mee ?
In you my hope, in you my fortune lyes,
In you my life, though you unjust accuse me,
My service scorne, and merit underprise :
Oh bitter grieffe ! that exile is become
Reward for faith, and pittiedeafe and dumbe.

Why should my firmnesse finde a seate so wav'ring ?
My simple voves, my love you entertain'd ;
Without desert the same againe disfav'ring ;
Yet I my word and passion hold unstain'd.
O wretched me ! that my chiefe joy should breede
My onely grieffe, and kindnesse pittyy neede.

Lyric Poems.

The Sypres Curten.

Rosseter. Part I.
(1601). 'Sypres' (l. 1), cypress.

THE Sypres curten of the night is spread,
And over all a silent dewe is cast.
The weaker cares by sleepe are conquered :
But I alone, with hidious grief agast,
In spite of Morpheus charmes, a watch doe
 keepe
Over mine eies, to banish carelesse sleepe.

Yet oft my trembling eyes through faintnes close,
And then the Mapped hell before me stands,
Which Ghosts doe see, and I am one of those Ordain'd to pine in sorrowes endles bands,
Since from my wretched soule all hopes are reft,
And now no cause of life to me is left.

Griefe ceaze my soul, for that will still endure
When my cras'd body is consum'd and gone ;
Beare it to thy blacke denne, there keepe it sure
Where thou ten thousand soules doest tyre upon !
Yet all doe not affoord such foode to thee
As this poore one, the worser part of mee.

Campion.

Tell me, Gentle
Howre of Night.

Song of two Voices, a bass and tenor, sung by a Sylvan and an Hour at the "Masque at the Marriage of the Lord Hayes."
Twelfth Night (1606).

SILVAN.

TELL me, gentle howre of night,
Wherein dost thou most delight?

HOWRE.

Not in sleepe.

SILVAN.

Wherein then?

HOWRE.

In the frolicke vew of men?

SILVAN.

Lovest thou Musicke?

HOWRE.

O 'tis sweet

SILVAN.

What's dauncing?

HOWRE.

Ev'n the mirth of feete

SILVAN.

Joy you in Fayries and in elves

Lyric Poems.

HOWRE.

We are of that sort ourselves.
But, Silvan, say why do you love
Onely to frequent the grove ?

SILVAN.

Life is fullest of content,
Where delight is innocent.

HOWRE.

Pleasure must varie, not be long.
Come then let's close, and end our song.

CHORUS.

Yet, ere we vanish from this princely sight,
Let us bid Phœbus and his states good-night.

Night as well as Brightest Day.

A song of three voices
with divers instruments.
From the Masque given by Lord Knowles to Queen Anne : at Cawsome
House, near Reading.
April, 1613. "At the end of this song enters

Sylvanus, shaped after the description of the ancient writers ; his lower parts like a goat, and his upper parts in an antic habit of rich taffeta, cut into leaves, and on his head he had a false hair, with a wreath of long boughs and lilies, that hung dangling about his neck, and in his hand a cypress branch, in memory of his love Cyparissus."

NIGHT as well as brightest day hath her delight,
Let us then with mirth and Musicke decke the
night.

Never did glad day such store
Of joy to night bequeath :
Her Starres then adore,
Both in Heav'n, and here beneath.

Love and beautie, mirth and musicke yeeld true
joyes,
Though the Cynickes in their folly count them
toyes.

Raise your spirits ne're so high,
They will be apt to fall :
None brave thoughts envie,
Who had ere brave thought at all.

Lyric Poems.

Joy is the sweete friend of life, the nurse of blood,
Patron of all health, and fountaine of all good :
Never may joy hence depart,
But all your thoughts attend ;
Nought can hurt the heart,
That retaines so sweete a friend.

Follow your Saint.

Rosseter's Booke of
Ayres. Part I. (1601).

FOLLOW your Saint, follow with accents
sweet !
Haste you, sad noates, fall at her flying fleete !
There, wrapt in cloud of sorrowe, pitie move,
And tell the ravisher of my soule, I perish for her love :
But if she scorns my never-ceasing paine,
Then burst with sighing in her sight and ne're returne againe !

All that I soong still to her praise did tend ;
Still she was first, still she my songs did end,
Yet she my love and Musicke both doth flie,
The Musicke that her Eccho is and beauties sympathie.
Then let my Noates pursue her scornefull flight !
It shall suffice, that they were breath'd, and dyed for her delight.

Campion.

Faire, if you Expect.

A Booke of Ayres
(1601).

FAIRE, if you expect admiring,
Sweet, if you provoke desiring,
Grace deere love with kind requiting.
Fond, but if thy sight be blindnes,
False, if thou affect unkindnes,
Flie both love and love's delighting !
Then when hope is lost and love is scorned, Ile bury my desires, and quench the fires that ever yet in vaine have burned.

Fates, if you rule lovers' fortune,
Stars, if men your powers importune,
Yield reliefe by your relenting ;
Time, if sorrow be not endles,
Hope made vaine, and pittie friendles,
Helpe to ease my long lamenting.
But if griefes remaine still unredressed,
I'le flie to her againe, and sue for pitie to renew my hopes distressed.

Blame not My Cheeks.

A Booke of Ayres.

BLAME not my cheeks, though pale with love
they be ;
The kindly heate unto my heart is flowne,
To cherish it that is dismaid by thee,

Lyric Poems.

Who art so cruell and unsteedfast growne :
For Nature, cald for by distressed harts,
Neglects and quite forsakes the outward partes.

But they whose cheekes with careles blood are stain'd,
Nurse not one sparke of love within their harts ;
And, when they woe, they speake with passion
fain'd,
For their fat love lyes in their outward parts :
But in their breasts, where love his court should hold,
Poore Cupid sits, and blowes his nailes for cold.

When the God of Merrie Love.

A Booke of Ayres (1601).

WHEN the god of merrie love
As yet in his cradle lay,
Thus his wither'd nurse did say :
"Thou a wanton boy wilt prove
To deceive the powers above ;
For by thy continuall smiling
I see thy power of beguiling."

Therewith she the babe did kisse ;
When a sodaine fire outcame
From those burning lips of his,
That did her with love enflame.
But none would regard the same :
So that, to her daie of dying,
The old wretch liv'd ever crying.

Campion.

Woo Her, and Win Her.

Song from the Lord's Masque, presented in the Banqueting House on the Marriage Night of the High and Mighty Count
Palatine, and the Royally descended the Lady Elizabeth. (Shrove-Sunday 1612-1613).

Woo her, and win her, he that can ;
Each woman hath two lovers,
So she must take and leave a man,
Till time more grace discovers.
This doth Jove to shew that want
Makes beauty most respected ;
If fair women were more scant,
They would be more affected.

Courtship and music suit with love,
They both are works of passion ;
Happy is he whose words can move,
Yet sweet notes help persuasion.
Mix your words with music then,
That they the more may enter ;
Bold assaults are fit for men,
That on strange beauties venture.

Lyric Poems.

Jacke and Jone
They thinke no Ill.

Divine and Morall
Songs.

JACKE and Jone they thinke no ill,
But loving live, and merry still ;
Do their weeke-dayes' worke, and pray
Devotely on the holy day :
Skip and trip it on the greene,
And help to chuse the Summer Queene ;
Lash out, at a Country Feast,
Their silver penny with the best.

Well can they judge of nappy Ale,
And tell at large a Winter tale ;
Climbe up to the Apple loft,
And turne the crabs till they be soft.
Tib is all the father's joy,
And little Tom the mother's boy.
All their pleasure is Content ;
And care, to pay their yearely rent.

Jone can call by name her Cowes,
And decke her windowes with greene boughs ;
Shee can wreathes and tuttyes make,
And trimme with plums a Bridall Cake.
Jacke knowes what brings gaine or losse ;
And his long Flaile can stoutly tosse,
Make the hedge which others break,
And ever thinke what he doth speake.

Campion.

Now you Courtly Dames and Knights,
That study onely strange delights ;
Though you scorn the homespun gray,
And revell in your rich array :
Though your tongues dissemble deepe,
And can your heads from danger keepe ;
Yet for all your pomp and traine,
Securer lives the silly Swaine.

Come Ashore,
Come.

Songs from the "Masque
at the Marriage of the Earl of Somerset and the Lady Francis Howard," Saint Stephen's Night, 1613.

"Straight in the Thames appeared four barges with skippers in them, and withall this song was sung."

"At the conclusion of this [first] song arrived twelve skippers in red caps, with short cassocks and long flaps wide at the knees. of white canvas striped with crimson, white gloves and pumps, and red stockings : these twelve danced a brave and lively dance, shouting and triumphing after their manner."

I.

COME ashore, come, merry mates,
With your nimble heels and pates :
Summon ev'ry man his knight,
Enough honoured is this night.
Now, let your sea-born goddess come,
Quench these lights, and make all dumb.
Some sleep ; others let her call :
And so good-night to all, good-night to all.

Lyric Poems.

II.

Haste aboard, haste now away !
Hymen frowns at your delay.
Hymen doth long nights affect ;
Yield him then his due respect.
The sea-born goddess straight will come,
Quench these lights, and make all dumb.
Some sleep ; others she will call :
And so good-night to all, good-night to all.

Of Neptune's Empire.

“Written in 1594,” says Mr Bullen, for the Gray's Inn Masque Gesta Graiorum, “which is printed in Nichols'
Progresses of Queen Elizabeth.”

OF Neptune's Empire let us sing,
At whose command the waves obey ;
To whom the rivers tribute pay,
Down the high mountains sliding :
To whom the scaly nation yields
Homage for the crystal fields
Wherein they dwell :
And every sea-god pays a gem
Yearly out of his wat'ry cell
To deck great Neptune's diadem.

The Tritons dancing in a ring
Before his palace gates do make
The water with their echoes quake,
Like the great thunder sounding :

Campion.

The sea-nymphs chant their accents shrill
And the sirens, taught to kill
 With their sweet voice,
Make ev'ry echoing rock reply
Unto their gentle murmuring noise
The praise of Neptune's empery.

Shall I Come.

A Booke of Ayres.
Part II. (1601).

SHAL I come, if I swim? wide are ye waves,
 you see :
Shall I come, if I flie, my deere Love, to thee?
Streames Venus will appease ; Cupid gives me
 winges ;
All the powers assist my desire
Save you alone, that set my wofull heart on fire !

You are faire, so was Hero that in Sestos dwelt ;
She a priest, yet the heat of love truly felt.
A greater streame then this, did her love devide ;
But she was his guide with a light :
So through the streames Leander did enjoy her sight.

Oft have I
Sigh'd.

The First Song in the
Third Booke of Ayres
(1617?).

OFT have I sigh'd for him that heares me
not ;
Who absent hath both love and mee forgot.
O yet I languish still through his delay :
Dayes seeme as yeares when wisht friends breake their day.

Had he but lov'd as common lovers use,
His faithlesse stay some kindnesse would excuse :
O yet I languish still, still constant mourne
For him that can breake vowes, but not returne.

Campion.

Now let her
Change.

The Second Song in the Third Booke of
Ayres (1617?).

Now let her change and spare not !
Since she proves strange I care not :
Fain'd love charm'd so my delight,
That still I doted on her sight.
But she is gone, new joyes imbracing
And my desires disgracing.

When did I erre in blindnesse,
Or vexe her with unkindnesse?
If my cares serv'd her alone,
Why is shee thus untimely gone?
True love abides to t' houre of dying :
False love is ever flying.

False, then farewell for ever !
Once false proves faithfull never :
He that boasts now of thy love,
Shall soone my present fortunes prove.
Were he as faire as bright Adonis,
Faith is not had, where none is.

Lyric Poems.

Were my Hart. Third Booke of Ayres
(1617?).

WERE my hart as some men's are, thy errours would not move me ;
But thy faults I curious finde and speake because I love thee :
Patience is a thing divine and farre, I grant, above mee.

Foes sometimes befriend us more, our blacker
 deedes objecting,
Then th' obsequious bosome guest, with false respect affecting.
Friendship is the Glasse of Truth, our hidden staines detecting.

While I use of eyes enjoy and inward light of reason,
Thy observer will I be and censor, but in season :
Hidden mischiefe to conceale in State and Love is treason.

So Tyr'd. Third Booke of Ayres
(1617?).

So tyr'd are all my thoughts, that sence and spirits faile :
Mourning I pine, and know not what I ayle.
O what can yeeld ease to a minde
 Joy in nothing that can finde ?

Campion.

How are my powres fore-spoke? What strange distaste is this?

Hence, cruell hate of that which sweetest is!
Come, come delight! make my dull braine
Feele once heate of joy againe.

The lover's teares are sweet, their mover makes them so;

Proud of a wound the bleeding souldiers grow.
Poor I alone, dreaming, endure
Grief that knowes nor cause, nor cure.

And whence can all this grow? even from an idle minde,

That no delight in any good can finde.

Action alone makes the soule blest:

Vertue dyes with too much rest.

Why Presumes
Thy Pride.

Third Booke of Ayres
(1617?).

WHY presumes thy pride on that that must so private be,
Scarce that it can good be cal'd, tho' it
seemes best to thee,
Best of all that Nature fram'd or curious eye can see.

Lyric Poems.

'Tis thy beauty, foolish Maid, that like a blossome, growes ;
Which who viewes no more enjoys than on a bush a rose,
That, by manie's handling, fades : and thou art one of those.

If to one thou shalt prove true and all beside reject,
Then art thou but one man's good ; which yeelds a poore effect :
For the common'st good by farre deserves the best respect.

But if for this goodnesse thou thyself wilt common make,
Thou art then not good at all : so thou canst no way take
But to prove the meanest good or else all good forsake.

Be not then of beauty proud, but so her colours beare
That they prove not staines to her, that them for grace should weare :
So shalt thou to all more fayre then thou wert
born appeare.

Campion.

O Griefe, O
Spite.

Third Booke of Ayres
(1617?).

O GRIEFE, O spite, to see poore Vertue
scorn'd,
Truth far exil'd, False Arte lov'd, Vice ador'd,
Free Justice sold, worst causes best adorn'd,
Right cast by Powre, Pittie in vaine implor'd!
O who in such an age could wish to live,
When none can have or hold, but such as give?

O times! O men! to Nature rebels growne,
Poore in desert, in name rich, proud of shame,
Wise but in ill! Your stiles are not your owne, Though dearely bought, honour is honest
fame.
Old Stories only, goodnesse now containe,
And the true wisdome that is just and plaine.

O Never to be Moved.

Third Booke of Ayres
(1617?).

O NEVER to be moved,
O beauty unrelenting!
Hard hart, too dearely loved!
Fond love, too late repenting!

Lyric Poems.

Why did I dreame of too much blisse ?
Deceitfull hope was cause of this,
O heare me speake this, and no more,
Live you in joy, while I my woes deplore !

All comforts despayred
Distaste your bitter scorning ;
Great sorrowes unrepayred
Admit no meane in mourning :
Dye, wretch, since hope from thee is fled.
He that must dye is better dead.
O deare delight, yet ere I dye,
Some pittie shew, though you reliefe deny!

Good Wife.

Third Booke of Ayres
(1617?).—A. H. B.

WHAT is it all that men possess, among themselves conversing?
Wealth or fame, or some such boast, scarce worthy the rehearsing.
Women only are men's good, with them in love conversing.

If weary, they prepare us rest ; if sick, their hand attends us ;
When with grief our hearts are prest, their comfort best befriends us :
Sweet or sour, they willing go to share what fortune sends us.

Campion.

What pretty babes with pain they bear, our name and form presenting !
What we get, how wise they keep ! by sparing, wants preventing ;
Sorting all their household cares to our observed contenting.

All this, of whose large use I sing, in two words is expressed :
Good Wife is the good I praise, if by good men possessed ;
Bad with bad in ill suit well ; but good with good live blessed.

Fire that must Flame.

Third Booke of Ayres
(1617 ?). --A. H. B.

FIRE that must flame is with apt fuel fed,
Flowers that will thrive in sunny soil are bred.
How can a heart feel heat that no hope finds?
Or can he love on whom no comfort shines?

Fair! I confess there's pleasure in your sight !
Sweet ! you have power, I grant, of all delight !
But what is all to me, if I have none?
Churl, that you are, t'enjoy such wealth alone !

Prayers move the heavens but find no grace with you ;
Yet in your looks a heavenly form I view,
Then will I pray again, hoping to find,
As well as in your looks, heaven in your mind !

Lyric Poems.

Saint of my heart, Queen of my life and love,
O let my vows thy loving spirit move !
Let me no longer mourn through thy disdain ;
But with one touch of grace cure all my pain.

Thrice Toss
these Oaken Ashes.

Third Booke of Ayres
(1617?).—A. H. B.

THRIce toss these oaken ashes in the air,
Thrice sit thou mute in this enchanted chair ;
And thrice three times, tie up this true love's knot !
And murmur soft "She will, or she will not."

Go burn these poisonous weeds in yon blue
fire,
These screech-owl's feathers and this prickling briar ;
This cypress gathered at a dead man's grave ;
That all thy fears and cares, an end may have.

Then come, you Fairies, dance with me a round !
Melt her hard heart with your melodious sound !
In vain are all the charms I can devise :
She hath an art to break them with her eyes.

Be Thou then my Beauty Named.

Third Booke of Ayres
(1617?).—A. H. B.

BE thou then my Beauty named,
Since thy will is to be mine !
For by that I am enflamed,
Which on all alike doth shine.
Others may the light admire,
I only truly feel the fire.

But if lofty titles move thee,
Challenge then a Sovereign's place !
Say I honour when I love thee ;
Let me call thy kindness Grace.
State and Love things diverse be,
Yet will we teach them to agree !

Or if this be not sufficing ;
Be thou styled my Goddess then :
I will love thee, sacrificing ;
In thine honour, hymns I'll pen.
To be thine what canst thou more ?
I'll love thee, serve thee, and adore.

Lyric Poems.

Fire, Fire, Fire, Third Booke of Ayres
Fire! (1617?).—A. H. B.

FIRE, fire, fire, fire!
Lo here I burn in such desire
That all the tears that I can strain
Out of mine idle empty brain
Cannot allay my scorching pain.
Come Trent, and Humber, and fair Thames!
Dread Ocean, haste with all thy streams!
 And if you cannot quench my fire,
 O drown both me and my desire!

Fire, fire, fire, fire!
There is no hell to my desire.
See, all the rivers backward fly!
And th' Ocean doth his waves deny,
For fear my heat should drink them dry!
Come, heavenly showers, then, pouring down!
Come you, that once the world did drown!
Some then you spared, but now save all,
That else must burn, and with me fall!

Campion.

O Sweet Delight.

Third Booke of Ayres
(1617?).—A. H. B.

O SWEET delight, O more than human bliss,
With her to live that ever loving is ;
To hear her speak, whose words are so well placed,
That she by them, as they in her are graced :
Those looks to view, that feast the viewer's eye,
How blest is he that may so live and die !

Such love as this the golden times did know,
When all did reap, yet none took care to sow ;
Such love as this an endless summer makes,
And all distaste from frail affection takes.
So loved, so blessed, in my beloved am I ;
Which till their eyes ache, let iron men envy !

Thus I Resolve. Third Booke of Ayres (1617 ?).—A. H. B.

T HUS I resolve, and time hath taught me so ;
Since she is fair and ever kind to me,
Though she be wild and wanton-like in show,
Those little stains in youth I will not see.
That she be constant, heaven I oft implore :
If prayers prevail not, I can do no more.

Lyric Poems.

Palm tree the more you press, the more it grows ;

Leave it alone, it will not much exceed.

Free beauty if you strive to yoke, you lose :

And for affection, strange distaste you breed.

What Nature hath not taught, no Art can frame :

Wild born be wild still, though by force you tame.

Come, O Come. Third Booke of Ayres
(1617?).—A. H. B.

COME, O come, my life's delight,

Let me not in languor pine !

Love loves no delay ; thy sight,

The more enjoyed, the more divine :

O come, and take from me

The pain of being deprived of thee !

Thou all sweetness dost enclose,

Like a little world of bliss.

Beauty guards thy looks : the rose

In them pure and eternal is.

Come, then, and make thy flight

As swift to me, as heavenly light.

Campion.

Could My Heart.

Third Booke of Ayres
(1617 ?).—A. H. B.

COULD my heart more tongues employ
Than it harbours thoughts of grief ;
It is now so far from joy,
That it scarce could ask relief.
Truest hearts by deeds unkind
To despair are most inclined.

Happy minds, that can redeem
Their engagements how they please !
That no joys or hopes esteem,
Half so precious as their ease !
Wisdom should prepare men so
As if they did all foreknow.

Yet no art or caution can Grown affections easily change ;
Use is such a Lord of man
That he brooks worst what is strange.
Better never to be blest
Than to lose all at the best.

Shall I then Hope.

Third Booke of Ayres
(1617 ?).—A. H. B.

SHALL I then hope when faith is fled ?
Can I seek love when hope is gone ?
Or can I live when love is dead ?
Poorly he lives, that can love none.

Lyric Poems.

Her vows are broke and I am free ;
She lost her faith in losing me.

When I compare mine own events,
When I weigh others' like annoy ;
All do but heap up discontents
That on a beauty build their joy.
Thus I of all complain, since she
All faith hath lost in losing me.

So my dear freedom have I gained,
Through her unkindness and disgrace :
Yet could I ever live enchained,
As she my service did embrace.
But she is changed, and I am free :
Faith failing her, love died in me.

Leave Prolonging.

Fourth Booke of Ayres
(1617 ?).

LEAVE prolonging thy distresse !
All delays afflict the dying.
Many lost sighes long I spent, to her for mercy
crying ;
But now, vain mourning, cease !
I'll dye, and mine owne griefes release.

Thus departing from this light
To those shades that end all sorrow,
Yet a small time of complaint, a little breath
Ile borrow,
To tell my once delight
I dye alone through her despight.

Campion.

Respect My Faith.

Fourth Booke of Ayres
(1617 ?).

RESPECT my faith, regard my service past ;
The hope you wing'd call home to you at last.
Great prise it is that I in you shall gaine,
So great for you hath been my losse and paine.
My wits I spent and time for you alone,
Observing you and losing all for one.

Some rais'd to rich estates in this time are,
That held their hopes to mine inferiour farre :
Such, scoffing mee, or pittying me, say thus,
“ Had hee not loved, he might have liv'd like us.”

O, then, deare sweet, for love and pitties sake
My faith reward, and from me scandall take.

Vaile, Love,
Mine Eyes !

Fourth Booke of Ayres
(1617 ?).

VAILE, Love, mine eyes ! O hide from me
The plagues that charge the curious minde !
If beauty private will not be,
Suffice it yet that she proves kinde,
Who can usurp heav'ns light alone.
Stars were not made to shine on one.

Lyric Poems.

Griefs past recure fooles try to heale,
That greater harmes on lesse inflict,
The pure offend by too much zeale ;
Affection should not be too strict.
Hee that a true embrace will finde,
To beauties faults must still be blinde.

Love Me or Not.

Fourth Booke of Ayres
(1617?).

LOVE me or not, love her I must or dye ;
Leave me or not, follow her, needs must I.
O that her grace would my wisht comforts give !
How rich in her, how happy should I live !

All my desire, all my delight should be,
Her to enjoy, her to unite to mee :
Envy should cease, her would I love alone :
Who loves by lookes, is seldome true to one.

Could I enchant, and that it lawfull were,
Her would I charme softly that none should heare.
But love enforc'd rarely yeelds firme content ;
So would I love that neyther should repent.

What Meanes
this Folly.

Fourth Booke of Ayres
(1617?).

WHAT meanes this folly, now to brave it so,
And then to use submission?
Is that a friend that straight can play the foe?
Who loves on such condition?

Though Bryars breede Roscs, none the Bryar affect ;
But with the flowre are pleased.
Love onely loves delight and soft respect :
He must not be diseased.

These thorny passions spring from barren breasts,
Or such as neede much weeding.
Love onely loves delight and soft respect,
But sends them not home bleeding.

Command thy humour, strive to give content,
And shame not love's profession.
Of kindnesse never any could repent
That made choyce with discretion.

Lyric Poems.

Deare, if I with Guile.

Fourth Booke of Ayres
(1617 ?).

DEARE, if I with guile would guild a true intent,
Heaping flattries that in heart were never meant :

Easely could I then obtaine
What now in vaine I force ;
Falshood much doth gaine,
Truth yet holds the better course.

Love forbid that through dissembling I should thrive,

Or in praysing you, myselfe of truth deprive !
Let not your high thoughts debase
A simple truth in me :
Great is beauties grace,
Truth is yet as fayre as she !

Prayse is but the winde of pride, if it exceeds ;
Wealth, pris'd in itselfe, no outward value
needes.

Fayre you are, and passing fayre ;
You know it, and 'tis true :
Yet let none despayre
But to finde as fayre as you.

Campion.

O Love, where are thy Shafts. Fourth Booke of Ayres (1617?).

O LOVE, where are thy Shafts, thy Quiver, and thy Bow?
Shall my wounds onely weepe, and he ungaged
goe?
Be just, and strike him to, that dares contemne thee so!

No eyes are like to thine, though men suppose thee blinde;
So fayre they leuell when the marke they list
to finde:
Then, strike, O strike the heart that beares
the cruell minde!

Is my fond sight deceived? or doe I Cupid spye,
Close ayming at his breast, by whom despis'd,
I dye?
Shoot home, sweet Love, and wound him,
that hee may not flye!

O then we both will sit in some unhaunted shade,
And heale each other's wound which Love hath justly made:
O hope, O thought too vaine! how quickly
dost thou fade!

Lyric Poems.

At large he wanders still : his heart is free from paine ;
While secret sighes I spend, and teares, but all in vaine.
Yet, Love, thou know'st, by right, I should not thus complaine.

Beauty is but a Painted Hell. Fourth Booke of Ayres (1617 ?).

BEAUTY is but a painted hell :
Aye me, aye me !
Shee wounds them that admire it,
Shee kills them that desire it.
Give her pride but fuell,
No fire is more cruell.

Pittie from ev'ry heart is fled :
Aye me, aye me !
Since false desire could borrow
Teares of dissembled sorrow,
Constant vowes turne truthlesse,
Love cruell, Beauty ruthlesse.

Sorrow can laugh, and Fury sing :
Aye me, aye me !
My raving griefes discover
I liv'd too true a lover.
The first step to madnesse
Is the excesse of sadnesse.

Campion.

Are You, what your Faire
Lookes
Expresse ?

Fourth Booke of Ayres
(1617?).

ARE you, what your faire lookes expresse ?

O then be kinde !

From law of nature they digresse

Whose forme sutes not their minde :

Fairnesse seene in th' outward shape,

Is but th' inward beauties Ape.

Eyes that of earth are mortall made,

What can they view ?

All's but a colour or a shade,

And neyther alwayes true :

Reason's sight, that is eterne,

Ev'n the substance can discerne.

Soul is the Man : for who will so

The body name ?

And to that power all grace we owe

That deckes our living frame.

What, or how had housen bin,

But for them that dwell therein ?

Love in the bosome is begot,

Not in the eyes ;

No beauty makes the eye more hot,

Her flames the spright surprize :

Let our loving mindes then meete,

For pure meetings are most sweet.

Lyric Poems.

Since She, ev'n Shee. Fourth Booke of Ayres
(1617 ?).

SINCE she, ev'n shee, for whom I liv'd,
Sweet she by Fate from me is torne,
Why am not I of sence depriv'd,
Forgetting I was ever borne?
Why should I languish, hating light?
Better to sleepe an endlesse night.

Be't eyther true, or aptly fain'd,
That some of Lethe's water write,
'Tis their best med'cine that are pain'd
All thought to loose of past delight.
O would my anguish vanish so!
Happy are they that neyther know.

I Must Com-plain. Fourth Booke of Ayres
(1617 ?).

I MUST complain, yet doe enjoy my love ;
She is too faire, too rich in lovely parts :
Thence is my grief, for Nature, while she strove
With all her graces and divinest Arts
To form her too too beautifull of hue,
Shee had no leasure left to make her true.

Campion.

Should I, agriev'd, then wish shee were lesse
fayre ?

That were repugnant to mine owne desires.
Shee is admir'd, new lovers still repayre,
That kindles daily love's forgetfull fires.
Rest, jealous thoughts, and thus resolve at last,—
Shee hath more beauty than becomes the chast.

Her Fayre In- flaming Eyes.

Fourth Booke of Ayres
(1617 ?).

HER fayre inflaming eyes,
Chiefe authors of my cares,
I prai'd in humblest wise
With grace to view my teares :
They beheld me broad awake,
But, alasse, no ruth would take.

Her lips with kisses rich,
And words of fayre delight,
I fayrely did beseech,
To pittie my sad plight :
But a voyce from them brake forth,
As a whirlewind from the North.

Then to her hands I fled,
That can give heart and all ;
To them I long did plead,
And loud for pittie call :
But, alas, they put mee off,
With a touch worse then a scoff.

Lyric Poems.

So backe I straight return'd,
And at her breast I knock'd ;
Where long in vain I mourn'd,
Her heart so fast was lock'd :
Not a word could passage finde,
For a Rocke inclos'd her minde.

Then downe my pray'rs made way
To those most comely parts,
That make her flye or stay,
As they affect deserts :
But her angry feete, thus mov'd,
Fled with all the parts I lov'd.

Yet fled they not so fast,
As her enraged minde :
Still did I after haste,
Still was I left behinde ;
Till I found 'twas to no end,
With a Spirit to contend.

Turne all Thy Thoughts.

Fourth Booke of Ayres
(1617 ?).

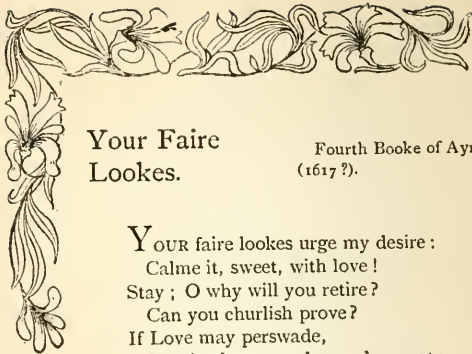

TURNE all thy thoughts to eyes,
Turne al thy haire to eares,
Change all thy friends to spies,
And all thy joyes to feares :
True Love will yet be free,
In spite of Jealousie.

Campion.

Turne darknesse into day,
Conjectures into truth,
Beleeve what th' envious say,
Let age interpret youth :
 True love will yet be free,
 In spite of Jealousie.

Wrest every word and looke,
Racke ev'ry hidden thought,
Or fish with golden hooke ;
True love cannot be caught.
 For that will still be free,
 In spite of Jealousie.

Your Faire
Lookes.

Fourth Booke of Ayres
(1617 ?).

YOUR faire lookes urge my desire :
Calme it, sweet, with love !
Stay ; O why will you retire ?
Can you churlish prove ?
If Love may perswade,
Love's pleasures, deare, deny not :
Here is a grove secur'd with shade :
O then be wise, and flye not.

Hark, the Birds delighted sing,
Yet our pleasure sleepes :
Wealth to none can profit bring,
Which the miser keeps.
O come, while we may,
Let's chayne Love with embraces ;
Wee have not all times time to stay,
Nor safety in all places.

What ill finde you now in this,
Or who can complaine ?
There is nothing done amisse
That breedes no man payne.
'Tis now flow'ry May ;
But ev'n in cold December,
When all these leaves are blowne away,
This place shall I remember.

Campion.

And would You
Faine the Reason Knowe.

Rosseter's Booke of
Ayres. Part II. (1601).

AND would you faine the reason knowe
Why my sad eies so often flow?
My heart ebs joy, when they doe so,
And loves the moone by whom they go.

And will you aske why pale I looke?
'Tis not with poring on my booke:
My mistris' cheeke my bloud hath tooke,
For her mine owne hath me forsooke.

Do not demaund why I am mute:
Love's silence doth all speech confute.
They set the noat, then tune the Lute;
Herts frame their thoughts, then toongs their suit.

Doe not admire why I admire:
My fever is no other's fire:
Each severall heart hath his desire;
Els proof is false, and truth a lier.

If why I love you should see cause:
Love should have forme like other lawes,
But fancie pleads not by the clawes:
'Tis as the sea, still vext with flawes.

Lyric Poems.

No fault upon my love espie ;
For you perceive not with my eie ;
My pallate to your tast may lie,
Yet please itselſe deliciously.

Then let my sufferance be mine owne ;
Sufficeth it these reasons showne ;
Reason and love are ever knowne
To fight till both be overthrowne.

Long have Mine Eies.

Rosseter's Booke of
Ayres. Part II. (1601).

LONG have mine eies gaz'd with delight,
Conveying hopes unto my soule ;
In nothing happy, but in sight
Of her, that doth my sight controule :
But now mine eies must loose their light.

My object now must be the aire ;
To write in water words of fire ;
And teach sad thoughts how to despaire :
Desert must quarrel with desire,
All were appeas'd were she not faire.

For all my comfort, this I prove,
That Venus on the Sea was borne :
If Seas be calme, then doth she love ;
If stormes arise, I am forlorne ;
My doubtfull hopes, like wind doe move.

Campion.

If I Hope, I
Pine; If I
Feare, I Faint
and Die.

Rosseter's Booke of
Ayres. Part II. (1601).

IF I hope, I pine; if I feare, I faint and die;
So betweene hope and fear, I desp'rat lie,
Looking for joy to heaven, whence it should come:
But hope is blinde, joy deafe, and I am dumbe.

Yet I speake and crie; but, alas, with words of wo:
And joy conceives not them that murmure so.
He that the eares of joy will ever pearse,
Must sing glad noates, or speake in happier verse.

Shall Then a Traitorous
Kisse.

Rosseter's Booke of
Ayres. Part II. (1601).
—A. H. B.

SHALL then a traitorous kiss or a smile
All my delights unhappily beguile?
Shall the vow of feigned love receive so rich regard,
When true service dies neglected, and wants his due reward?

Lyric Poems.

Deeds meritorious soon be forgot,
But one offence no time can ever blot ;
Every day it is renewed, and every night it bleeds,
And with bloody streams of sorrow drowns all our better deeds.

Beauty is not by desert to be won ;
Fortune hath all that is beneath the sun.
Fortune is the guide of Love, and both of them
 be blind :
All their ways are full of errors, which no true feet can find.

No Grave for Woe.

A Booke of Ayres.
Part II. (1601).—A. H. B.

No grave for woe, yet earth my watery tears
 devours ;
Sighs want air, and burnt desires kind pity's showers :
Stars hold their fatal course, my joys preventing :
The earth, the sea, the air, the fire, the heavens vow my tormenting.

Yet still I live, and waste my weary days in groans,
And with woful tunes adorn despairing moans.

Campion.

Night still prepares a more displeasing
morrow ;
My day is night, my life my death, and all but sense of sorrow.

If I Urge My Kind Desires.

A Booke of Ayres.
Part II. (1601).—A. H. B.

IF I urge my kind desires,
She unkind doth them reject ;
Women's hearts are painted fires
To deceive them that affect.
I alone love's fires include ;
She alone doth them delude.

She hath often vowed her love ;
But, alas ! no fruit I find.
That her fires are false I prove,
Yet in her no fault I find :
I was thus unhappy born,
And ordained to be her scorn.

Yet if human care or pain,
May the heavenly order change,
She will hate her own disdain,
And repent she was so strange :
For a truer heart than I,
Never lived or loved to die.

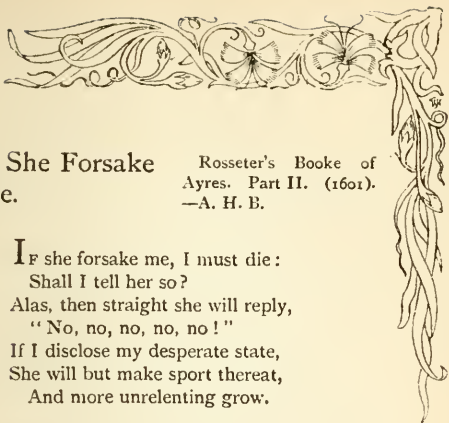

Lyric Poems.

Unless there Rosseter's Booke of were Consent. Ayres. Part II. (1601).
—A. H. B.

UNLESS there were consent 'twixt hell and heaven
 That grace and wickedness should be combined,
I cannot make thee and thy beauties even :
 Thy face is heaven, and torture in thy mind,
For more than worldly bliss is in thy eye
And hellish torture in thy mind doth lie.

A thousand Cherubins fly in her looks,
 And hearts in legions melt upon their view :
But gorgeous covers wall up filthy books ;
 Be it sin to say that so your eyes do you :
But sure your mind adheres not with your eyes,
For what they promise, that your heart denies.

But, O, lest I religion should misuse, Inspire me thou, that ought'st thyself to know
(Since skillless readers, reading do abuse),
 What inward meaning outward sense doth show :
For by thy eyes and heart, chose and con-
 temned,
I waver, whether saved or condemned.

If She Forsake
Me.

Rosseter's Booke of
Ayres. Part II. (1601).
—A. H. B.

IF she forsake me, I must die :
Shall I tell her so?
Alas, then straight she will reply,
"No, no, no, no, no!"
If I disclose my desperate state,
She will but make sport thereat,
And more unrelenting grow.

What heart can long such pains abide?
Fie upon this love!
I would venture far and wide,
If it would remove.
But Love will still my steps pursue,
I cannot his ways eschew:
Thus still helpless hopes I prove.

I do my love in lines commend,
But, alas, in vain;
The costly gifts that I do send,
She returns again:
Thus still is my despair procured,
And her malice more assured:
Then come, Death, and end my pain!

Lyric Poems.

With Spotless Minds.

Song from the "Masque
at the Marriage of the Lord Hayes; Twelfth
Night, 1606."

"All this time of procession the six cornets, and six chapel voices sung a solemn motet of six parts made upon these words."

WITH spotless minds now mount we to the tree

Of single chastity.

The root is temperance grounded deep,
Which the cold-juiced earth doth steep :

Water it desires alone,

Other drink it thirsts for none :

Therewith the sober branches it doth feed,

Which though they fruitless be,

Yet comely leaves they breed,

To beautify the tree.

Cynthia protectress is, and for her sake

We this grave procession make.

Chaste eyes and ears, pure hearts and voices,

Are graces wherein Phœbe most rejoices.

Campion.

My Sweetest
Lesbia, let us
Live and Love.

Rosseter's Booke of
Ayres. Part I.

MY sweetest Lesbia, let us live and love ;
And though the sager sort our deedes reprove,
Let us not way them : heaven's great lampes doe dive
Into their west, and strait again revive :
But soone as once set is our little light,
Then must we sleepe one ever-during night.

If all would lead their lives in love like mee,
Then bloudie swords and armour should not be ;
No drum nor trumpet peaceful sleepes should
move,
Unles alar'me came from the campe of love :
But fooles do live, and wast their little light,
And seeke with paine their ever-during night.

When timely death my life and fortune ends,
Let not my hearse be vext with mourning friends ;
But let all lovers, rich in triumph, come
And with sweet pastimes grace my happie
tombe :
And, Lesbia, close up thou my little light,
And crown with love my ever-during night.

Lyric Poems.

Let Him that will be Free.

Rosseter's Booke of
Ayres. Part II. (1601).

LET him that will be free and keep his hart
from care,
Retir'd alone, remaine where no discomforts are.
For when the eie doth view his grieffe, or hap-lesse eare his sorrow heares,
Th' impression still in him abides, and ever in one shape appears.

Forget thy griefes betimes ; long sorrowe
breedes long paine,
For joie farre fled from men, will not returne
again ;
O happie is the soule which heaven ordained to live in endles peace !
His life is a pleasing dreame, and everie houre his joyes encrease.

You heavie sprites, that love in sever'd shades to dwell,
That nurse despaire and dreame of unrelenting hell,
Come sing this happie song, and learne of me
the Arte of true content !
Loade not your guiltie soules with wrong, and heaven then will soone relent.

Campion.

What is a Day. Rosseter's Booke of Ayres. Part II. (1601).
—A. H. B.

WHAT is a day, what is a year
Of vain delight and pleasure?
Like to a dream it endless dies,
And from us like a vapour flies :
And this is all the fruit that we find,
Which glory in worldly treasure.

He that will hope for true delight,
With virtue must be graced ;
Sweet folly yields a bitter taste,
Which ever will appear at last :
But if we still in virtue delight,
Our souls are in heaven placed.

Never Weather-beaten Saile more willing
Bent to Shore.

Divine and Morall
Songs (1613?).

NEVER weatherbeaten Saile more willing
bent to shore,
Never tyred Pilgrim's limbs affected slumber
more,
Then my weary spright now longs to flye out of my troubled brest.
O come quickly, sweetest Lord, and take my soule to rest !

Lyric Poems.

Ever blooming are the joyes of Heav'n's high paradice,
Cold age deafes not there our eares, nor vapour
dims our eyes :
Glory there the sun outshines ; whose beames
the blessed onely see.
O come quickly, glorious Lord, and raise my spright to thee !

Tune Thy
Musicke to Thy Divine and Morall
Songs.
Hart.

TUNE thy Musicke to thy hart,
Sing thy joy with thanks, and so thy sorrow :
Though Devotion needs not Art,
Sometime of the poore the rich may borrow.

Strive not yet for curious wayes :
Concord pleaseth more, the lesse 'tis strained ;
Zeale affects not outward prayse,
Onely strives to show a love unfained.

Love can wondrous things effect,
Sweetest Sacrifice, all wrath appeasing ;
Love the highest doth respect ;
Love alone to him is ever pleasing.

Loe, when Backe Mine
Eye.

Divine and Morall
Songs (1613 ?).

LOE, when backe mine eye,
Pilgrim-like, I cast,
What fearefull wayes I spye,
Which, blinded, I securely past !

But now heav'n hath drawne
From my browes that night ;
As when the day doth dawne,
So cleares my long imprison'd sight.

Straight the caves of hell,
Drest with flowres I see :
Wherein false pleasures dwell,
That, winning most, most deadly be.

Throngs of masked Feinds,
Wing'd like Angels, flye :
Ev'n in the gates of Friends
In faire disguise blacke dangers lye.

Straight to Heav'n I rais'd
My restored sight,
And with loud voyce I prais'd
The Lord of ever-during light.

Lyric Poems.

And since I had stray'd
From his wayes so wide,
His grace I humbly pray'd
Henceforth to be my guard and guide.

Lift up to Heav'n, sad
Wretch, Thy
heavy Spright !

Divine and Morall
Songs (1613 ?).

LIFT up to heav'n, sad wretch, thy heavy
spright !
What though thy sinnes, thy due destruction threat ?
The Lord exceedes in mercy as in might ;
His ruth is greater, though thy crimes be great.
Repentance needs not feare the heav'n's just rod,
It stays ev'n thunder in the hand of God.

With cheerfull voyce to him then cry for grace !
Thy Faith, and fainting Hope, with Prayer revive ;
Remorce for all that truely mourn hath place ;
Not God, but men of him themselves deprive :
Strive then, and hee will help ; call him, hee'll
heare :
The Sonne needes not the Father's fury feare.

Campion.

As by the Streames of Babilon.

Divine and Morall
Songs (1613?). A Transcript from Psalm cxxxvii.

As by the streames of Babilon
Farre from our native soyle we sat,
Sweet Sion, thee we thought upon,
And ev'ry thought a teare begat.

Aloft the trees, that spring up there,
Our silent Harps wee pensive hung :
Said they that captiv'd us, Let's heare
Some song which you in Sion sung !

Is then the song of our God fit
To be prophan'd in forraine land ?
O Salem, thee when I forget,
Forget his skill may my right hand !

Fast to the rooffe cleave may my tongue,
If mindelesse I of thee be found !
Or if, when all my joyes are sung,
Jerusalem be not the ground !

Remember, Lord, how Edom's race
Cryed in Jerusalem's sad day :
Hurle downe her wals, her towres deface,
And stone by stone all levell lay !

Curst Babel's seede ! for Salem's sake
Just ruine yet for thee remaines !
Blest shall they be thy babes that take
And 'gainst the stones dash out their braines !

Lyric Poems.

Sing a Song of Joy!

Divine and Morall
Songs (1613?). A Transcript from the Psalms.

SING a song of joy!
Prayse our God with mirth!
His flocke who can destroy?
Is hee not Lord of heav'n and earth?

Sing wee then secure,
Tuning well our strings!
With voyce, as Eccho pure,
Let us renowne the King of Kings!

First who taught the day
From the East to rise?
Whom doth the Sunne obey,
When in the Seas his glory dyes?

He the Starres directs
That in order stand:
Who, heav'n and earth protects,
But hee that fram'd them with his hand?

Angels round attend,
Wayting on his will;
Arm'd millions hee doth send
To ayde the good, or plague the ill.

Campion.

All that dread his name,
And his Hests observe,
His arme will shield from shame :
Their steps from truth shall never swerve.

Let us then rejoyce,
Sounding loud his prayse :
So will hee heare our voyce
And blesse on earth our peacefull dayes.

Seeke the Lord,
and in his Divine and Morall
Songs (1613?).
Waies Persever.

SEEKE the Lord, and in his waies persever !
O faint not, but as Eagles flye,
For his steepe hill is high ;
Then striving gaine the top, and triumph ever !

When with glory there thy browes are crowned,
New joyes so shall abound in thee,
Such sights thy soule shall see
That worldly thoughts shall by their beames be drowned.

Farewell World, thou masse of meere confusion !
False light, with many shadowes dinm'd !
Old Witch, with new foyles trimm'd !
Thou deadly sleepe of soule, and charm'd illusion !

Lyric Poems.

I the King will seeke, of Kings adored,
Spring of light, tree of grace and bliss,
Whose fruit so sov'raigne is,
That all who taste it are from death restored.

Lighten, heavy
Hart, thy Spright.

Divine and Morall
Songs (1613?).

LIGHTEN, heavy hart, thy spright,
The joyes recall that thence are fled ;
Yeeld thy brest some living light ;
The man that nothing doth is dead.
Tune thy temper to these sounds,
And quicken so thy joylesse minde ;
Sloth the worst and best confounds :
It is the ruine of mankinde.

From her cave rise all distasts,
Which unresolv'd Despaire pursues ;
Whom, soone after, Violence hasts,
Herselfe, ungratefull to abuse.
Skies are clear'd with stirring windes,
Th' unmoved water moorish growes ;
Ev'ry eye much pleasure findes
To view a streame that brightly flowes.

Campion.

Most Sweet and Pleasing are Thy Wayes, Divine and Morall
Songs (1613?).
O God.

MOST sweet and pleasing are thy wayes, O
God,

Like meadowes deckt with Christall streames and flowers :

Thy paths no foote prophane hath ever trod,
Nor hath the proud man rested in thy
bowers :

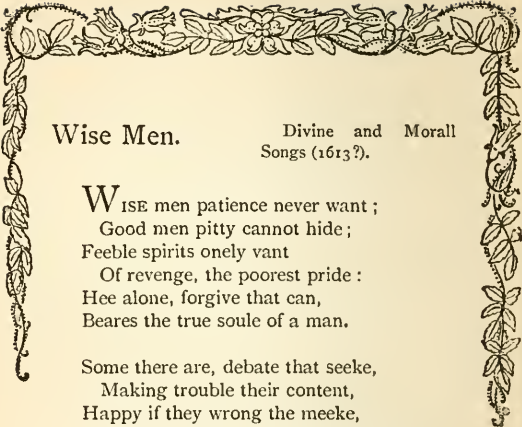

There lives no Vultur, no devouring Beare,
But only doves and lambs are harbor'd there.

The Wolfe his young ones to their prey doth guide ;

The foxe his Cubbes with false deceit endues ;
The Lyon's whelp suckes from his Damme
his pride ;

In hers the Serpent malice doth infuse :
The darksome Desart all such beasts contains,
Not one of them in Paradice remaynes.

A decorative border of floral and leaf motifs surrounds the text. The border is composed of various flowers, including roses and lilies, and leafy branches, arranged in a rectangular frame with rounded corners.

Wise Men.

Divine and Morall
Songs (1613?).

WISE men patience never want ;
Good men pittie cannot hide ;
Feeble spirits onely vant
Of revenge, the poorest pride :
Hee alone, forgive that can,
Bears the true soule of a man.

Some there are, debate that seeke,
Making trouble their content,
Happy if they wrong the meeke,
Vexe them that to peace are bent :
Such undoe the common tye
Of mankinde, societie.

Kindnesse growne is, lately, colde ;
Conscience hath forgot her part ;
Blessed times were knowne of old,
Long ere Law became an Art :
Shame deterr'd, not Statutes then,
Honest love was law to men.

Deeds from love, and words, that flow,
Foster like kinde Aprill showres ;
In the warme Sunne all things grow,
Wholesome fruits and pleasant flowres :
All so thrives his gentile rayes,
Whereon humane love displayes.

Campion.

View me, Lord, a Worke of Thine.

Divine and Morall
Songs.

VIEW me, Lord, a worke of Thine :
Shall I then lye drown'd in night ?
Might Thy grace in mee but shine,
I should seeme made all of light.

But my soul still surfets so
On the poysoned baytes of sinne,
That I strange and ugly growe,
All is darke, and foule within.

Cleanse mee, Lord, that I may kneele
At Thine altar, pure and white :
They that once Thy mercies feele,
Gaze no more on earth's delight.

Worldly joyes, like shadowes, fade
When the heav'nly light appears ;
But the cov'nants Thou hast made,
Endlesse, know nor dayes nor yeares.

In Thy Word, Lord, is my trust,
To Thy mercies fast I flye ;
Though I am but clay and dust,
Yet Thy grace can lift me high.

Lyric Poems.

De Profundis. Divine and Morall
Songs (1613 ?).

OUT of my soule's depth to Thee my cries have sounded :
Let Thine cares my plaints receive, on just feare grounded.
Lord, shouldst Thou weigh our faults, who's not confounded ?

But with grace Thou censur'st Thine when they have erred,
Therefore shall Thy blessed Name be lov'd and feared.
Ev'n to Thy throne my thoughts and eyes are reared.

Thee alone my hopes attend, on Thee relying ;
In thy sacred word I'le trust, to Thee fast flying,
Long ere the Watch shall breake, the morne describing.

In the mercies of our God who live secured,
May of full redemption rest in Him assured ;
Their sinne-sicke soules by Him shall be recured.

Campion.

Author of Light.

Divine and Morall
Songs (1613 ?).^c

AUTHOR of light, revive my dying sprite !
Redeeme it from the snares of all-confounding
night !

Lord, light me to Thy blessed way !
For blinde with worldly vaine desires, I wander
as a stray.

Sunne and Moone, Starres and underlights
I see ;
But all their glorious beames are mists and darknes, being compar'd to Thee.

Fountaine of health, my soule's deepe wounds recure !

Sweet showres of pittie raine, wash my uncleannesse pure !

One drop of Thy desired grace
The faint and fading heart can raise, and in joy's bosome place.

Sinne and Death, Hell and tempting Fiends
may rage,
But God his owne will guard, and their sharp
paines and grieffe in time asswage.

Lyric Poems.

Come, let us
Sound.

A Booke of Ayres
(1601). Part I.

COME, let us sound with melody the praises
Of the King's King, th' omnipotent Creator, Author of number, that hath all the world in Harmonie framed.

Heav'n is his throne perpetually shining,
His devine power and glorie thence he thunders,
One in all, and all still in one abiding,
Both Father and Sonne.

O sacred sprite invisible, eternall,
Ev'rywhere, yet unlimited, that all things
Can't in one moment penetrate, revive me,
O holy Spirit !

Rescue, O rescue me from earthly darknes,
Banish hence all these elementall objects,
Guide my soule, that thirsts, to the lively Fountaine
Of thy devinenes !

Cleanse my soule, O God, thy bespotted Image,
Altered with sinne so that heav'nly purenes
Cannot acknowledge me, but in thy mercies,
O Father of grace !

But when once thy beams do remove my darkness,
O then I'll shine forth as an Angell of light,
And record, with more than an earthly voice, Thy Infinite honours.

Campion.

All Lookes be Pale.

Divine and Morall
Songs (1613 ?).

ALL lookes be pale, harts cold as stone,
For Hally now is dead, and gone :

Hally in whose sight,

Most sweet sight,

All the earth late tooke delight.

Ev'ry eye, weepe, with mee !

Joyes drown'd in tears must be.

His Iv'ry skin, his comely hayre,

His Rosie cheekes so cleare, and faire,

Eyes that once did grace

His bright face,

Now in him all want their place.

Eyes and hearts weepe with mee,

For who so kind as hee ?

His youth was like an Aprill flowre,

Adorn'd with beauty, love, and powre ;

Glory strow'd his way,

Whose wreaths gay

Now are all turn'd to decay.

Then againe, weepe with mee,

None feele more cause then wee.

No more may his wisht sight returne,

His golden Lampe no more can burne ;

Quencht is all his flame ;

His hop't fame

Now hath left him nought but name.

For him all weepe with mee,

Since more him none shall see.

Lyric Poems.

Time, that Leades.

Song added to the
"Masque at the Lord
Hayes' Marriage, 1606."

TIME, that leades the fatal round,
Hath made his centre in our ground,
 With swelling seas embraced ;
And there at one stay he rests,
And with the Fates keeps holy feasts,
 With pomp and pastime graced.
Light Cupids there do dance and Venus sweetly sings
With heavenly notes tuned to sound of silver strings :
Their songs are all of joy, no sign of sorrow
 there,
But all as starres glist'ring fair and blithe appear.

What if a Day. From Richard Alison's
 An Hour's Recreation in Music, 1606.—A. H. B.

WHAT if a day, or a month, or a year
Crown thy delights with a thousand sweet contentings ?
Cannot a chance of a night or an hour
Cross thy desires with as many sad tormentings ?

Campion.

Fortune, Honour, Beauty, Youth
Are but blossoms dying ;
Wanton Pleasure, doting Love,
Are but shadows flying.
All our joys are but toys,
Idle thoughts deceiving ;
None hath power of an hour
In our lives' bereaving.

Earth's but a point to the world, and a man
Is but a point to the world's compared centre :
Shall then a point of a point be so vain
As to triumph in a silly point's adventure ?

All is hazard that we have,
There is nothing biding ;
Days of pleasure are like streams
Through fair meadows gliding.
Weal and woe, time doth go,
Time is never turning :
Secret fates guide our states,
Both in mirth and mourning.

Sweet, Come
Again!

A Booke of Ayres
(1601). Part II.

SWEET, come again!
Your happy sight, so much desired,
Since you from hence are now retired,
I seek in vain:
Still must I mourn
And pine in longing pain,
Till you, my life's delight, again
Vouchsafe your wished return.

If true desire,
Or faithful vow of endless love,
Thy heart inflamed may kindly move
With equal fire;
O then my joys,
So long distraught, shall rest,
Reposed soft in thy chaste breast,
Exempt from all annoys.

You had the power
My wand'ring thoughts first to restrain,
You first did hear my love speak plain!
A child before,
Now it is grown
Confirmed, do you it keep,
And let it safe in your bosom sleep,
There ever made your own!

Campion.

And till we meet,
Teach absence inward art to find,
Both to disturb and please the mind.
Such thoughts are sweet :
And such remain
In hearts whose flames are true ;
Then such will I retain, till you
To me return again.

Reprove not Rosseter. Part II.
Love (1601).—A. H. B.

REPROVE not love, though fondly thou hast lost

Greater hopes by loving :
Love calms ambitious spirits, from their breasts
Danger oft removing :
Let lofty humours mount up on high,
Down again like to the wind,
While private thoughts, vowed to love,
More peace and pleasure find.

Love and sweet beauty makes the stubborn mild,

And the coward fearless ;
The wretched miser's care to bounty turns,
Cheering all things cheerless.
Love chains the earth and heaven,
Turns the spheres, guides the years in endless peace :
The flowery earth through his power
Receives her due increase.

Lyric Poems.

The Golden Mean.

Rosseter. Part II.
(1601).—A. H. B.

THOUGH far from joy, my sorrows are as far,
And I both between ;
Not too low, nor yet too high
Above my reach, would I be seen.
Happy is he that so is placed,
Not to be envied nor to be disdained or disgraced.

The higher trees, the more storms they endure ;
Shrubs be trodden down :
But the Mean, the Golden Mean,
Doth only all our fortunes crown :
Like to a stream that sweetly slideth
Through the flowery banks, and still in the midst his course guideth.

Cruel Laura. Rosseter. Part II. (1601).

AYE me ! that love should Nature's work accuse !

Where cruel Laura still her beauty views,
River, or cloudy jet, or crystal bright,
Are all but servants of herself, delight.

Yet her deformed thoughts, she cannot see ;
And that's the cause she is so stern to me.
Virtue and duty can no favour gain :
A grief, O death ! to live and love in vain.

Campion.

Had I Foreseen. Rosseter. Part I.
(1601).—A. H. B.

MY love hath vowed he will forsake me,
And I am already sped ;
Far other promise he did make me
When he had my maidenhead.
If such danger be in playing
And sport must to earnest turn,
I will go no more a-maying.

Had I foreseen what is ensued,
And what now with pain I prove,
Unhappy then I had eschewed
This unkind event of love :
Maids foreknow their own undoing,
But fear naught till all is done,
When a man alone is wooing.

Dissembling wretch, to gain thy pleasure,
What didst thou not vow and swear ?
So didst thou rob me of the treasure
Which so long I held so dear.
Now thou provest to me a stranger :
Such is the vile guise of men
When a woman is in danger.

That heart is nearest to misfortune
That will trust a feigned tongue ;
When flatt'ring men our loves importune
They intend us deepest wrong.
If this shame of love's betraying
But this once I cleanly shun,
I will go no more a-maying.

Lyric Poems.

Though Your Strangenesse.

Light Conceits of
Lovers.

THOUGH your strangenesse frets my hart,
Yet may not I complaine :
You perswade me, 'tis but Art,
That secret love must faine.
If another you affect,
'Tis but a shew, t'avoid suspect :
Is this faire excusing? O no, all is abusing.

Your wisht sight if I desire,
Suspitions you pretend ;
Causelesse you yourselfe retire,
While I in vaine attend.
This a Lover whets, you say,
Still made more eager by delay.
Is this faire excusing? O no, all is abusing.

When another holds your hand,
You sweare I hold your hart :
When my Rivals close doe stand,
And I sit farre apart,
I am neerer yet then they,
Hid in your bosome, as you say.
Is this faire excusing? O no, all is abusing.

Would my Rival then I were,
Some els your secret friend :
So much lesser should I feare,
And not so much attend.

Campion.

They enjoy you, ev'ry one,
Yet I must seeme your friend alone.
Is this faire excusing? O no, all is abusing.

Kinde are Her
Answeres.

Third Booke of Ayres
(1617?).

KINDE are her answeres,
But her performance keeps no day ;
Breaks time, as dancers
From their own Musicke when they stray :
All her free favors and smooth words,
Wing my hopes in vaine.
O did ever voice so sweet but only fain ?
Can true love yeeld such dclay,
Converting joy to pain ?

Lost is our freedome,
When we submit to women so :
Why doe wee neede them
When in their best they worke our woe ?
There is no wisdom
Can alter ends by Fate prefixt.
O why is the good of man with evill mixt ?
Never were dayes yet cal'd two,
But one night went betwixt.

Dance now and Sing.

“ A song and dance of six, two Keepers, two Robin - Hood men, the fantastic Traveller and the Cynic.” From the “ Masque given by Lord
Knowles ” (1613). A. H. B.

I.

DANCE now and sing ; the joy and love we owe
Let cheerful voices and glad gestures show :
The Queen of grace is she whom we receive :
Honour and state are her guides,
Her presence they can never leave.
Then in a stately sylvan form salute
Her ever-flowing grace ;
Fill all the woods with echoed welcomes,
And strew with flowers this place ;
Let ev'ry bough and plant fresh blossoms yield,
And all the air refine :
Let pleasure strive to please our goddess,
For she is all divine.

II.

Yet once again let us our measures move,
And with sweet notes record our joyful love.
An object more divine none ever had :
Beauty, and heav'n-born worth,
Mixt in perfection never fade.

Campion.

Then with a dance triumphant let us sing
Her high advanced praise,
And ev'n to heav'n our gladsome welcomes
With wings of music raise ;
Welcome, O welcome, ever-honoured Queen,
To this now-blessed place !
That grove, that bower, that house is happy
Which you vouchsafe to grace.

Gardener's Song.

A song of a treble and bass, sung by the Gardener's boy and man,
to music of instruments,
that was ready to second them in the arbour. From the "Masque given by Lord Knowles" (1613).—
A. H. B.

I.

WELCOME to this flowery place,
Fair Goddess and sole Queen of grace :
All eyes triumph in your sight,
Which through all this empty space
Casts such glorious beams of light.

II.

Paradise were meeter far
To entertain so bright a star :
But why errs my folly so ?
Paradise is where you are :
Heav'n above, and heav'n below.

Lyric Poems.

III.

Could our powers and wishes meet,
How well would they your graces greet !
Yet accept of our desire :
Roses, of all flowers most sweet,
Spring out of the silly briar.

Gardener's Speech.

From the "Masque
given by Lord Knowles"
(1613).—A. H. B.

"At the Queen's parting on Wednesday in the afternoon, the Gardener with his man and boy and three handsome country maids, the one bearing a rich bag with linen in it, the second a rich apron, and a third a rich mantle, appear all out of an arbour in the lower garden, and meeting the Queen, the Gardener presents this speech."

Gardener.

STAY, goddess ! stay a little space,
Our poor country love to grace,
Since we dare not too long stay you,
Accept at our hands, we pray you,
These mean presents, to express
Greater love than we profess,
Or can utter now for woe
Of your parting hast'ned so.
Gifts these are, such as were wrought
By their hands that them have brought,

Campion.

Home-bred things, which they presumed,
After I had them perfumed
With my flowery incantation,
To give you in presentation
At your parting. Come, feat lasses,
With fine curtsies, and smooth faces,
Offer up your simple toys
To the mistress of our joys ;
While we the sad time prolong
With a mournful parting song.

A Song of Three Voices.

From the "Masque
given by Lord Knowles"
(1613).—A. H. B.

I.

CAN you, the author of our joy,
So soon depart ?
Will you revive, and straight destroy ?
New mirth to tears convert ?
O that ever cause of gladness
Should so swiftly turn to sadness !

II.

Now as we droop, so will these flowers,
Barred of your sight :
Nothing avail them heav'nly showers
Without your heav'nly light.
When the glorious sun forsakes us,
Winter quickly overtakes us.

Lyric Poems.

III.

Yet shall our prayers your ways attend,
When you are gone ;
And we the tedious time will spend,
Rememb'ring you alone.
Welcome here shall you hear ever,
But the word of parting never.

Advance Your Choral Motions.

A Song from the "Lords' Masque" (1613).

—A. H. B.

"According to the humour of this song, the stars moved in an exceeding strange and delightful manner, and I suppose few have ever seen more neat artifice than Master Inigo Jones shewed in contriving their motion, who in all the rest of the workmanship which belonged to the whole invention shewed extraordinary industry and skill, which if it be not as lively exprest in writing as it appeared in view, rob not him of his due, but lay the blame on my want of right apprehending his instructions for the adorning of his art."

I.

ADVANCE your choral motions now,
You music-loving lights :
This night concludes the nuptial vow,
Make this the best of nights :

Campion.

So bravely crown it with your beams
That it may live in fame
As long as Rhenus or the Thames
Are known by either name.

II.

Once more again, yet nearer move
Your forms at willing view ;
Such fail effects of joy and love
None can express but you.
Then revel midst your airy bowers
Till all the clouds do sweat,
That pleasure may be poured in showers
On this triumphant seat.

III.

Long since hath lovely Flora thrown
Her flowers and garlands here ;
Rich Ceres all her wealth hath shown,
Proud of her dainty cheer.
Changed then to human shape, descend,
Clad in familiar weed,
That every eye may here commend
The kind delights you breed.

Go, Happy Man.

From the "Masque at the Marriage of Earl Somerset" (1613). — A. H. B. "At the end of this speech, the Queen pulled a branch from the tree and gave it to a nobleman, who delivered it to one of the squires. A song while the Squires descend with the bough toward the scene."

Go, happy man, like th' evening star,
Whose beams to bridegrooms welcome are :
May neither hag, nor fiend withstand
The power of thy victorious hand.
 'The uncharmed knights surrender now,
 By virtue of thy raised bough.

Away, enchantments! vanish quite,
No more delay our longing sight :
'Tis fruitless to contend with Fate,
Who gives us power against your hate.
 Brave knights, in courtly pomp appear,
 For now are you long-looked-for here.

Campion.

Bridal Song.

From the "Lords' Masque" (1613). "The masquers, having every one entertained his lady, begin their first new entering dance: after it, while they breathe, the time is entertained with a dialogue-song." "Disleek" (l. 8), dislike.—A. H. B.

BREATHE you now, while Io Hymen
To the bride we sing :
O how many joys and honours,
From this match will spring !
Ever firm the league will prove,
Where only goodness causeth love.
Some for profit seek
What their fancies most disleek :
These love for virtue's sake alone :
Beauty and youth unite them both in one.

Chorus.

Live with thy bridegroom happy, sacred bride ;
How blest is he that is for love envied !

The masquers' second dance.

Breathe again, while we with music
Fill the empty space :
O but do not in your dances
Yourselves only grace.
Ev'ry one fetch out your fere,
Whom chiefly you will honour here.

Lyric Poems.

Sights most pleasure breed,
When their numbers most exceed.
Choose then, for choice to all is free ;
Taken or left, none discontent must be.

Chorus.

Now in thy revels frolic-fair delight,
To heap joy on this ever-honoured night.

Song.

From the "Lords' Masque"
(1613).—A. H. B.

Orpheus.

ENOUGH of blessing, though too much
Never can be said to such ;
But night doth waste, and Hymen chides,
Kind to bridegrooms and to brides.
Then, singing, the last dance induce,
So let good night present excuse.

The Song.

No longer wrong the night
Of her Hymenæan right ;
A thousand Cupids call away,
Fearing the approaching day ;
The cocks already crow :
Dance then and go !

Campion.

'Tis now Dead
Night.

Song addressed "To the most sacred Queen Anne." From the "Songs of Mourning," for Prince Henry, who died at the age of eighteen, Nov.
6th, 1612. He was a friend of poets, and

Campion was not the only poet who bewailed his untimely loss.—A. H. B.

I.

'TIS now dead night, and not a light on earth,
Or star in heaven, doth shine :
Let now a mother mourn the noblest birth
That ever was both mortal and divine.
O sweetness peerless ! more than human grace !
O flowery beauty ! O untimely death !
Now, Music, fill this place
With thy most doleful breath :
O singing wail a fate more truly funeral,
Than when with all his sons the sire of Troy did fall.

II.

Sleep, Joy ! die, Mirth ! and not a smile be seen.
Or show of heart's content !
For never sorrow nearer touched a Queen,
Nor were there ever tears more duly spent.
O dear remembrance, full of rueful woe !
O ceaseless passion ! O unhuman hour !
No pleasure now can grow,
For withered is her flower.
O anguish do thy worst and fury tragical,
Since fate in taking one hath thus disordered all.

Lyric Poems.

Fortune and Glory.

Song addressed "To the most High and Mighty Prince Charles."
From the "Songs of Mourning." (1613). —
A. H. B.

I.

FORTUNE and Glory may be lost and won,
But when the work of Nature is undone
That loss flies past returning ;
No help is left but mourning.
What can to kind youth more spiteful prove
Than to be robbed of one sole brother ?
Father and Mother
Ask reverence, a brother only love.
Like age and birth like thoughts and pleasures
move :
What gain can he heap up, though showers of crowns descend,
Who for that good must change a brother and a friend ?

II.

Follow, O follow yet thy brother's fame,
But not his fate : let's only change the name,
And find his worth presented
In thee, by him prevented.
O[e]r past example of the dead be great,
Out of thyself begin thy story :
Virtue and glory
Are eminent being placed in princely seat.
Oh, heaven, his age prolong with sacred heat,
And on his honoured head let all the blessings light
Which to his brother's life men wished, and wished them right.

Campion.

Raving Warre.

A piece of chorus from a Tragedy. From "Observations in the Art of English Poesie" (1602).

"The Dimeter I intend next of all to handle, because it seems to be a part of the Iambick, which is our most naturall and auncient English verse. We may terme this our English march, because the verse answers our warlick forme of march in similitude of number. But call it what you please, for I will not wrangle about names, only intending to set down the nature of it and true structure. It consists of two feete and one odd sillable. The first foote may be made either a Trochy, or a Spondee, or an Iambick at the pleasure of the composer, though most naturally that place affects a Trochy or Spondee; yet by the example of Catullus in his Hendicasillables, I adde in the first place sometimes an Iambick foote. In the second place we must ever insert a Trochy or Tribrock, and so leave the last sillable (as in the end of a verse it is alwaies held) common."

RAVING warre begot
In the thirstye sands
Of the Lybian Iles,
Wasts our emptye fields;
What the greedye rage
Of fell wintrye stormes
Could not turne to spoile,
Fierce Bellona now
Hath laid desolate,
Voyd of fruit, or hope.

Lyric Poems.

Th' eger thriftye hinde,
Whose rude toyle reviv'd
Our skie-blasted earth,
Himselfe is but earth,
Left a skorne to fate
Through seditious armes :
And that soile, alive
Which he duly nurst,
Which him duly fed,
Dead his body feeds :
Yet not all the glebe
His tuffe hands manur'd
Now one turfe affords
His poore funerall.
Thus still needy lives,
Thus still needy dyes
Th' unknowne multitude.

Campion.

To the Reader.

Prefixed to Barnabe
Barnes' "Four Books of Offices, 1606." In Honour of the Author by Tho:
Campion, Doctor in Physic.

THOUGH neither thou dost keep the keys of state,
Nor yet the counsels, reader, what of that ?
Though th' art no law-pronouncer marked by fate,
Nor field-commander, reader, what of that ?
Blanch not this book ; for if thou mind'st to be Virtuous and honest it belongs to thee.
Here is the school of temperance and wit,
Of Justice and all forms that tend to it ;
Here Fortitude doth teach to live and die :
Then, Reader, love this book, or rather buy.

Neither Buskin now, nor Bays.

L'envoi inscribed to the Reader : from the "Masque at the Marriage of the Lord Hayes."

NEITHER buskin now, nor bays
Challenge I : a Lady's praise
Shall content my proudest hope.
Their applause was all my scope ;
And to their shrines properly
Revels dedicated be :

Lyric Poems.

Whose soft ears none ought to pierce
But with smooth and gentle verse,
Let the tragic Poem swell,
Raising raging fiends from hell ;
And let epic dactyls range
Swelling seas and countries strange :
Little room small things contains ;
Easy praise quites easy pains.
Suffer them whose brows do sweat
To gain honour by the great :
It's enough if men me name
A retailer of such fame.

Masque at the Marriage of the Lord Hayes.

“ Presented before the King’s Majesty at White Hall, on twelfth night last (1605), in honour of the Lord Hayes (Sir Jas. Hay), and his bride, daughter and heir to the honourable the Lord Denny, their marriage having been the same day at Court solemnized.”

As in battles, so in all other actions that are to be reported, the first, and most necessary part is the description of the place, with his opportunities and properties, whether they be natural or artificial. The great hall (wherein the Masque was presented) received this division, and order. The upper part where the cloth and chair of state were placed, had scaffolds and seats on either side continued to the screen; right before it was made a partition for the dancing-place; on the right hand whereof were consorted ten musicians, with bass and mean lutes, a bandora, a double sackbut, and an harpsichord, with two treble violins; on the other side somewhat nearer the screen were placed nine violins and three lutes, and to answer both the consorts (as it were in a triangle) six cornets, and six chapel voices, were seated almost right against them, in a place raised higher in respect of the piercing sound of those instruments; eighteen foot from the screen, another stage was raised higher by a yard than that which was prepared for dancing. This higher stage was all enclosed with a double veil, so artificially painted, that it seemed as if dark clouds had hung before it: within that shroud was concealed a green valley, with green trees round about it, and in the midst of them nine golden trees of fifteen foot high, with arms and branches very glorious to behold. From the which grove toward the state was made a broad descent to the dancing-place, just in the midst of it; on either hand were two ascents, like the sides of two hills, drest with shrubs and trees; that on the right hand leading to the bower of Flora: the other to the house of Night; which bower and house were placed opposite at either end of the screen, and between them both was raised a hill, hanging like a cliff over the grove below, and on the top of it a goodly large tree was set, supposed to be the tree of Diana; behind the which toward the window was a small descent, with another spreading hill that climbed up to the top of the window, with many trees on the height of it, whereby those that played on the hautboys at the King's entrance into the hall were shadowed. The bower of Flora was very spacious, garnished with all kind of flowers, and flowery branches with lights in them; the house of Night ample and stately, with black pillars, whereon many stars of gold were fixed:

A Masque.

Campion.

within it, when it was empty, appeared nothing but clouds and stars, and on the top of it stood three turrets underpropt with small black starred pillars, the middlemost being highest and greatest, the other two of equal proportion: about it were placed on wire artificial bats and owls, continually moving; with many other inventions, the which for brevity sake I pass by with silence.

Thus much for the place, and now from thence let us come to the persons.

The Masquers' names were these (whom both for order and honour I mention in the first place).

1. Lord WALDEN
2. Sir THOMAS HOWARD.
3. Sir HENRY CAREY, Master of the Jewel house.
4. Sir RICHARD PRESTON } Gent. of the K.
5. Sir JOHN ASHLEY } Privy Chamber.
6. Sir THOMAS JARRET, Pensioner.
7. Sir JOHN DIGBY, one of the King's Carvers.
8. Sir THOMAS BADGER, Master of the King's Harriers.
9. Master GORINGE.

Their number nine, the best and amplest of numbers, for as in music seven notes contain all variety, the eight[h] being in nature the same with the first, so in numbering after the ninth we begin again, the tenth being as it were the diapason in arithmetic. The number of nine is framed by the Muses and Worthies, and it is of all the most apt for change and diversity of proportion. The chief habit which the Masquers did use is set forth to your view in the first leaf: they presented in their feigned persons the knights of Apollo, who is the father of heat and youth, and consequently of amorous affections.

A Masque.

The Speakers were in number four.

FLORA,

the queen of flowers, attired in a changeable taffeta gown, with a large veil embroidered with flowers, a crown of flowers, and white buskins painted with flowers.

ZEPHYRUS,

in a white loose robe of sky-coloured taffeta, with a mantle of white silk, propped with wire, still waving behind him as he moved; on his head he wore a wreath of palm deckt with primroses and violets, the hair of his head and beard were flaxen, and his buskins white, and painted with flowers.

NIGHT,

in a close robe of black silk and gold, a black mantle embroidered with stars, a crown of stars on her head, her hair black and spangled with gold, her face black, her buskins black, and painted with stars; in her hand she bore a black wand, wreathed with gold.

Campion.

HESPERUS,

in a close robe of a deep crimson taffeta mingled with sky-colour, and over that a large loose robe of a lighter crimson taffeta ; on his head he wore a wreathed band of gold, with a star in the front thereof, his hair and beard red, and buskins yellow.

These are the principal persons that bear sway in this invention, others that are but seconders to these, I will describe in their proper places, discoursing the Masque in order as it was performed.

As soon as the King was entered the great Hall, the Hautboys (out of the wood on the top of the hill) entertained the time till his Majesty and his train were placed, and then after a little expectation the consort of ten began to play an air, at the sound whereof the veil on the right hand was withdrawn, and the ascent of the hill with the bower of Flora were discovered, where Flora and Zephyrus were busily plucking flowers from the bower, and throwing them into two baskets, which two Sylvans held, who were attired in changeable taffeta, with wreaths of flowers on their heads. As soon as the baskets were filled, they came down in this order ; first Zephyrus and Flora, then the two Sylvans with baskets after them ; four Sylvans in green taffeta and wreaths, two bearing mean lutes, the third, a bass lute, and the fourth a deep bandora.

As soon as they came to the descent toward the dancing-place, the consort of ten ceased, and the four Sylvans played the same air, to which Zephyrus and the two other Sylvans did sing these words in a bass, tenor, and treble voice, and going up and down as they sung they strewed flowers all about the place.

A Masque.

SONG.

Now hath Flora robbed her bowers
To befriend this place with flowers :
 Strow about, strow about !
The sky rained never kindlier showers.
Flowers with bridals well agree,
Fresh as brides and bridegrooms be :
 Strow about, strow about !
And mix them with fit melody.
Earth hath no princelier flowers
Than roses white and roses red,
But they must still be mingled :
And as a rose new plucked from Venus' thorn,
So doth a bride her bridegroom's bed adorn.

Divers divers flowers affect
For some private dear respect :
 Strow about, strow about !
Let every one his own protect ;
But he's none of Flora's friend
That will not the rose commend.
 Strow about, strow about !
Let princes princely flowers defend :
Roses, the garden's pride,
Are flowers for love and flowers for kings,
In courts desired and weddings :

Campion.

And as a rose in Venus' bosom worn,
So doth a bridegroom his bride's bed adorn.

The music ceaseth and Flora speaks.

FLORA.

Flowers and good wishes Flora doth present,
Sweet flowers, the ceremonious ornament
Of maiden marriage, Beauty figuring,
And blooming youth ; which though we careless fling

About this sacred place, let none profane Think that these fruits from common hills are ta'en,

Or vulgar vallies which do subject lie
To winter's wrath and cold mortality,
But these are hallowed and immortal flowers
With Flora's hands gathered from Flora's
bowers.

Such are her presents, endless as her love,
And such for ever may this night's joy prove.

ZEPH.

For ever endless may this night's joy prove !
So echoes Zephyrus the friend of Love,
Whose aid Venus implores when she doth bring
Into the naked world the green-leaved spring.
When of the sun's warm beams the nets we weave

That can the stubborn'st heart with love deceive.
That Queen of Beauty and Desire by me
Breathes gently forth this bridal prophecy :
Faithful and fruitful shall these bedmates prove,
Blest in their fortunes, honoured in their love.

A Masque.

FLORA.

All grace this night, and, Sylvans, so must you,
Off'ring your marriage song with changes new.

THE SONG IN FORM OF A DIALOGUE.

CAN.

Who is the happier of the two,
A maid, or wife?

TEN.

Which is more to be desired,
Peace or strife?

CAN.

What strife can be where two are one,
Or what delight to pine alone?

BAS.

None such true friends, none so sweet life,
As that between the man and wife.

TEN.

A maid is free, a wife is tied.

CAN.

No maid but fain would be a bride.

TEN.

Why live so many single then?
'Tis not I hope for want of men.

Campion.

CAN.

The bow and arrow both may fit,
And yet 'tis hard the mark to hit.

BAS.

He levels fair that by his side
Lays at night his lovely Bride.

CHO.

Sing Io, Hymen ! Io, Io, Hymen !

This song being ended the whole veil is suddenly drawn, the grove and trees of gold, and the hill with Diana's tree are at once discovered.

Night appears in her house with her Nine Hours, appalled in large robes of black taffeta, painted thick with stars, their hairs long, black, and spangled with gold, on their heads coronets of stars, and their faces black. Every Hour bore in his hand a black torch, painted with stars, and lighted. Night presently descending from her house spake as followeth.

NIGHT

Vanish, dark veils ! let night in glory shine
As she doth burn in rage : come leave our shrine
You black-haired Hours, and guide us with your lights,
Flora hath wakened wide our drowsy sprites :
See where she triumphs, see her flowers are thrown,
And all about the seeds of malice sown !

A Masque.

Despiteful Flora, is't not enough of grief
That Cynthia's robbed, but thou must grace the thief?
Or didst not hear Night's sovereign Queen complain
Hymen had stolen a Nymph out of her train,
And matched her here, plighted henceforth to be Love's friend, and stranger to virginity?
And makest thou sport for this?

FLORA.

Be mild, stern Night ;
Flora doth honour Cynthia, and her right.
Virginity is a voluntary power,
Free from constraint, even like an untouched flower
Meet to be gathered when 'tis throughly blown.
The Nymph was Cynthia's while she was her own,
But now another claims in her a right,
By fate reserved thereto and wise foresight.

ZEPH.

Can Cynthia one kind virgin's loss bemoan?
How if perhaps she brings her ten for one?
Or can she miss one in so full a train?
Your Goddess doth of too much store complain.
If all her Nymphs would ask advice of me
There should be fewer virgins than there be.
Nature ordained not men to live alone,
Where there are two a woman should be one.

NIGHT.

Thou breath'st sweet poison, wanton Zephyrus,
But Cynthia must not be deluded thus.

Campion.

Her holy forests are by thieves profaned,
Her virgins frightened, and lo, where they stand
That late were Phœbus' knights, turned now to trees

By Cynthia's vengeance for their injuries
In seeking to seduce her nymphs with love :
Here they are fixt, and never may remove
But by Diana's power that stuck them here.
Apollo's love to them doth yet appear,
In that his beams hath gilt them as they grow,
To make their misery yield the greater show.
But they shall tremble when sad Night doth speak,
And at her stormy words their boughs shall break.

Toward the end of this speech Hesperus begins to descend by the house of Night, and by that time the speech was finished he was ready to speak.

HESP.

Hail reverend angry Night, hail Queen of Flowers,
Mild spirited Zephyrus, hail, Sylvans and Hours.
Hesperus brings peace, cease then your needless jars
Here in this little firmament of stars.
Cynthia is now by Phœbus pacified,
And well content her nymph is made a bride.
Since the fair match was by that Phœbus graced
Which in this happy Western Isle is placed
As he in heaven, one lamp enlight'ning all
That under his benign aspect doth fall.

A Masque.

Deep oracles he speaks, and he alone
For arts and wisdom's meet for Phœbus' throne.
The Nymph is honoured, and Diana pleased :
Night, be you then, and your black Hours
 appeased :
And friendly listen what your queen by me
Farther commands : let this my credence be,
View it, and know it for the highest gem,
That hung on her imperial diadem.

NIGHT.

I know, and honour it, lovely Hesperus, Speak then your message, both are welcome to us.

HESP.

Your Sovereign from the virtuous gem she sends Bids you take power to retransform the friends
Of Phœbus, metamorphosed here to trees,
And give them straight the shapes which they did lese.
This is her pleasure.

NIGHT.

Hesperus, I obey,
Night must needs yield when Phœbus gets the day.

FLORA.

Honoured be Cynthia for this generous deed.

ZEPH.

Pity grows only from celestial seed.

Campion.

NIGHT.

If all seem glad, why should we only lower?
Since t'express gladness we have now most power.

Frolic, graced captives, we present you here
This glass, wherein your liberties appear:
Cynthia is pacified, and now blithe Night
Begins to shake off melancholy quite.

ZEPH.

Who should grace mirth and revels but the
Night?
Next Love she should be goddess of delight.

NIGHT.

'Tis now a time when (Zephyrus) all with dancing
Honour me, above Day my state advancing.
I'll now be frolic, all is full of heart,
And ev'n these trees for joy shall bear a part:
Zephyrus, they shall dance.

ZEPH.

Dance, Goddess? how?

NIGHT.

Seems that so full of strangeness to you now?
Did not the Thracian harp long since the same?
And (if we rip the old records of fame)
Did not Amphion's lyre the deaf stones call,
When they came dancing to the Theban wall?
Can music then joy? joy mountains moves
And why not trees? joy's powerful when it loves.
Could the religious Oak speak Oracle

A Masque.

Like to the Gods? and the tree wounded tell T'Æneas his sad story? have trees therefore
The instruments of speech and hearing more Than th' have of pacing, and to whom but

Night

Belong enchantments? who can more affright
The eye with magic wonders? Night alone
Is fit for miracles, and this shall be one
Apt for this Nuptial dancing jollity.
Earth, then be soft and passable to free
These fettered roots : joy, trees! the time draws near

When in your better forms you shall appear.
Dancing and music must prepare the way,
There's little tedious time in such delay.

This spoken, the four Sylvans played on their instruments the first strain of this song following : and at the repetition thereof the voices fell in with the instruments which were thus divided : a treble and a bass were placed near his Majesty, and another treble and bass near the grove, that the words of the song might be heard of all, because the trees of gold instantly at the first sound of their voices began to move and dance according to the measure of the time which the musicians kept in singing, and the nature of the words which they delivered.

SONG.

Move now with measured sound,
You charmed grove of gold,
Trace forth the sacred ground
That shall your forms unfold.

Campion.

Diana and the starry Night for your Apollo's
sake
Endue your Sylvan shapes with power this strange delight to make.
Much joy must needs the place betide where trees for gladness move :
A fairer sight was ne'er beheld, or more expressing love.

Yet nearer Phœbus' throne
Meet on your winding ways,
Your bridal mirth make known
In your high-graced Hayes.

Let Hymen lead your sliding rounds, and guide them with his light,
While we do Io Hymen sing in honour of this
night,
Join three by three, for so the night by triple spell decrees,
Now to release Apollo's knights from these enchanted trees.

This dancing-song being ended, the golden trees stood in ranks three by three, and Night ascended up to the grove, and spake thus, touching the first three severally with her wand.

NIGHT.

By virtue of this wand, and touch divine,
These Sylvan shadows back to earth resign :
Your native forms resume, with habit fair,
While solemn music shall enchant the air.

A Masque.

Presently the Sylvans with their four instruments, and five voices, began to play, and sing together the song following; at the beginning whereof that part of the stage whereon the first three trees stood began to yield, and the three foremost trees gently to sink, and this was effected by an engine placed under the stage. When the trees had sunk a yard they cleft in three parts, and the Masquers appeared out of the tops of them, the trees were suddenly conveyed away, and the first three Masquers were raised again by the engine. They appeared then in a false habit, yet very fair, and in form not much unlike their principal and true robe. It was made of green taffeta cut into leaves, and laid upon cloth of silver, and their hats were suitable to the same.

SONG OF TRANSFORMATION.

Night and Diana charge,
And th' Earth obeys,
Opening large
Her secret ways,
While Apollo's charmed men
Their forms receive again.
Give gracious Phœbus honour then,
And so fall down, and rest behind the train,
Give gracious Phœbus honour then,
And so fall, &c.

When those words were sung, the three Masquers made an honour to the King, and so falling back, the other six trees, three by three, came forward, and when they were in their appointed places, Night spake again thus :

Campion.

NIGHT.

Thus can celestials work in human fate,
Transform and form as they do love or hate ;
Like touch and change receive. The Gods agree :
The best of numbers is contained in three.

THE SONG OF TRANSFORMATION AGAIN.

Night and Diana, &c.

Then Night touched the second three trees and the stage sunk with them as before : and in brief the second three did in all points as the first. Then Night spake again.

NIGHT.

The last, and third of nine, touch, magic
wand,
And give them back their forms at Night's command.

Night touched the third three trees, and the same charm of Night and Diana was sung the third time ; the last three trees were transformed, and the Masquers raised, when presently the first Music began his full Chorus.

Again this song revive and sound it high :
Long live Apollo, Britain's glorious eye !

A Masque.

This chorus was in manner of an Echo, seconded by the cornets, then by the consort of ten, then by the consort of twelve, and by a double chorus of voices standing on either side, the one against the other, bearing five voices apiece, and sometime every chorus was heard severally, sometime mixed, but in the end altogether: which kind of harmony so distinguished by the place, and by the several nature of instruments, and changeable conveyance of the song, and performed by so many excellent masters as were actors in that music (their number in all amounting to forty-two voices and instruments), could not but yield great satisfaction to the hearers.

While this chorus was repeated twice over, the nine masters in their green habits solemnly descended to the dancing-place, in such order as they were to begin their dance, and as soon as the chorus ended, the violins, or consort of twelve began to play the second new dance, which was taken in form of an echo by the cornets, and then caught in like manner by the consort of ten (sometime they mingled two musics together; sometime played all at once); which kind of echoing music rarely became their sylvan attire, and was so truly mixed together, that no dance could ever be better graced than that, as (in such distraction of music) it was performed by the masquers. After this dance Night descended from the grove, and addressed her speech to the masquers, as followeth.

Campion.

NIGHT.

Phœbus is pleased, and all rejoice to see
His servants from their golden prison free.
But yet since Cynthia hath so friendly smiled,
And to you tree-born knights is reconciled,
First ere you any more work undertake,
About her tree solemn procession make,
Diana's tree, the tree of Chastity,
That placed alone on yonder hill you see.
These green-leaved robes, wherein disguised you made
Stealths to her nymphs through the thick
 forest's shade,
There to the goddess offer thankfully,
That she may not in vain appeased be.
The Night shall guide you, and her Hours attend you
That no ill eyes, or spirits shall offend you.

At the end of this speech Night began to lead the way alone, and after her an Hour with his torch, and after the Hour a masquer ; and so in order one by one, a torch-bearer and a masquer, they march on towards Diana's tree. When the masquers came by the house of Night, every one by his Hour received his helmet, and had his false robe plucked off, and, bearing it in his hand, with a low honour offered it at the tree of Chastity, and so in his glorious habit, with his Hour before him, marched to the bower of Flora. The shape of their habit the picture before discovers, the stuff was of carnation satin laid thick with broad silver lace, their helmets being made of the same stuff. So through the bower of Flora they came, where they joined two torch-bearers, and two masquers, and when they past down to the grove, the Hours parted on either side, and made way between them for the masquers, who descended to the dancing-place in such order as they were to begin their third new dance. All this time of procession the six cornets, and six chapel voices sung a solemn motet of six parts made upon these words.

A Masque.

With spotless minds now mount we to the tree
Of single chastity,
The root is temperance grounded deep,
Which the cold-juiced earth doth steep :
Water it desires alone,
Other drink it thirsts for none :
Therewith the sober branches it doth feed,
Which though they fruitless be,
Yet comely leaves they breed,
To beautify the tree.
Cynthia protectress is, and for her sake
We this grave procession make.
Chaste eyes and ears, pure hearts and voices,
Are graces wherein Phœbe most rejoices.

The motet being ended, the violins began the third new dance, which was lively performed by the masquers, after which they took forth the ladies, and danced the measures with them ; which being finished, the masquers brought the ladies back again to their places: and Hesperus with the rest descended from the grove into the dancing-place, and spake to the masquers as followeth.

Campion.

HESPERUS.

Knights of Apollo, proud of your new birth,
Pursue your triumphs still with joy and mirth :
Your changed fortunes, and redeemed estate,
Hesperus to your Sovereign will relate.
'Tis now high time he were far hence retired,
Th' old bridal friend, that ushers Night desired
Through the dim evening shades, then taking flight
Gives place and honour to the nuptial Night.
I, that wished evening star, must now make way
To Hymen's rights much wronged by my delay.
But on Night's princely state you ought t'
attend,
And t' honour your new reconciled friend.

NIGHT.

Hesperus as you with concord came, ev'n so
'Tis meet that you with concord hence should go.
Then join you, that in voice and art excel,
To give this star a musical farewell.

A DIALOGUE OF FOUR VOICES, TWO BASSES AND TWO TREBLES.

1. Of all the stars which is the kindest
To a loving Bride?
2. Hesperus when in the west
He doth the day from night divide.

A Masque.

1. What message can be more respected Than that which tells wished joys shall be effected?
2. Do not Brides watch the evening star?
1. O they can discern it far.
2. Love Bridegrooms revels?
 1. But for fashion.
2. And why? 1. They hinder wished occasion.
2. Longing hearts and new delights,
Love short days and long nights.

CHORUS.

Hesperus, since you all stars excel
In bridal kindness, kindly farewell, farewell.

While these words of the Chorus (kindly farewell, farewell) were in singing often repeated, Hesperus took his leave severally of Night, Flora, and Zephyrus, the Hours and Sylvans, and so while the chorus was sung over the second time, he was got up to the grove, where turning again to the singers, and they to him, Hesperus took a second farewell of them, and so past away by the house of Night. Then Night spake these two lines, and therewith all retired to the grove where they stood before.

NIGHT.

Come, Flora, let us now withdraw our train
That th' eclipsed revels may shine forth again.

Now the masquers began their lighter dances as corantoes, levaltas and galliards, wherein when they had spent as much time as they

Campion.

thought fit, Night spake thus from the grove, and in her speech descended a little into the dancing-place.

NIGHT.

Here stay: Night leaden-eyed and sprited
grows,
And her late Hours begin to hang their brows.
Hymen long since the bridal bed hath drest,
And longs to bring the turtles to their nest.
Then with one quick dance sound up your
delight,
And with one song we'll bid you all good-night.

At the end of these words, the violins began the 4 new dance, which was excellently discharged by the Masquers, and it ended with a light change of music and measure. After the dance followed this dialogue of 2 voices, a bass and tenor sung by a Sylvan and an Hour.

TEN. SYLVAN.

Tell me, gentle Hour of Night,
Wherein dost thou most delight?

BAS. HO.

Not in sleep.

SYL.

Wherein then?

HOUR.

In the frolic view of men?

SYL.

Lovest thou music?

A Masque.

HOUR.

O 'tis sweet.

SYL.

What's dancing?

HOUR.

Ev'n the mirth of feet.

SYL.

Joy you in fairies and in elves?

HOUR.

We are of that sort ourselves.
But, Sylvan, say why do you love
Only to frequent the grove?

SYL.

Life is fullest of content,
Where delight is innocent.

HOUR.

Pleasure must vary, not be long.
Come then let's close, and end our song.

CHORUS.

Yet, ere we vanish from this princely sight,
Let us bid Phœbus and his states good-
night.

This chorus was performed with several Echoes of music, and voices, in manner as the great chorus before. At the end whereof the Masquers, putting off their vizards and helmets, made a low honour to the King, and attended his Majesty to the banqueting place.

Campion.

TO THE READER.

Neither buskin now, nor bays
Challenge I : a Lady's praise
Shall content my proudest hope.
Their applause was all my scope ;
And to their shrines properly
Revels dedicated be :
Whose soft ears none ought to pierce
But with smooth and gentle verse.
Let the tragic Poem swell,
Raising raging fiends from hell ;
And let epic dactyls range
Swelling seas and countries strange :
Little room small things contains ;
Easy praise quites easy pains.
Suffer them whose brows do sweat
To gain honour by the great :
It's enough if men me name
A retailer of such fame.

Shows and Nightly Revels.

Additional song, from the "Lord Hayes'
Masque." "Though the airs were devised only for dancing, yet they are here set forth with words that they may be sung to the lute or viol." (See also song on p. 124.)

SHOWS and nightly revels, signs of joy and peace,
Fill royal Britain's Court, while cruel war far off doth rage, for ever hence exiled.
Fair and princely branches with strong arms increase
From that deep-rooted tree whose sacred strength and glory foreign malice hath beguiled.
Our divided kingdoms now in friendly kindred meet
And old debate to love and kindness turns, our power with double force uniting ;
Truly reconciled, grief appears at last more
sweet
Both to ourselves and faithful friends, our undermining foes affrighting.

Triumph Now. Additional song, from the "Lord Hayes'
Masque" (1606).
A. H. B.

TRIUMPH now with joy and mirth !
The God of Peace hath blessed our land :
We enjoy the fruits of earth
Through favour of His bounteous hand.

We through His most loving grace
A king and kingly seed behold,
Like a sun with lesser stars
Or careful shepherd to his fold :
Triumph then, and yield Him praise
That gives us blest and joyful days.

FINIS.

PRINTED BY
TURNBULL AND SPEARS
EDINBURGH

THE LIBRARY
UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA

P378235

3 1205 00381 1377

A

UC SOUTHERN REGIONAL LIBRARY FACILITY

AA 001 380 724 3

