MELANCHOLY OCCURRENCE.-Yesterday morning, 3 a m, the Planter's hotel in Canal Street near the levee, kept by Mr Charles Armstrong fell in, and buried most of its unfor tunate inmates in its rains. The building had been for some time in a tottering condition, owing to the weakness of the walls; and so great had been the apprehensions of Mr Armstrong himself, that only the day previous he had propt one ride of the house; but unfortunately neglected the other, although cautioned to do so by a carpenter to whow he ap-p'ied for advice. The most prompt exertions were rendered by that useful class of citizens, the firemen; of whom Cos 2, 4 and 5 (No: 2 particularly) distinguished themselves to remove the rains and extricate the sufferers. This continued during the whole of yesterday: so that of the 60 persons who had been in the hotel at the time of the extestrophe, about 44 escaped or were extricated, all more or less wounded-up to 7 p m. Three persons were taken out dead: Mr Henna, a respectable lawyer from Yellow Banks, Ky ; Mr Hopkins, formerly of the Circus : and Mr Mooney, the purveyor of the estab-I shment. About three persons had not been taken out when we race ved our intelligence; but continued exertions were made in their behalf.

To the wounded, the humane physicians of our city promptly tendered their assistance; and all of them are expected to survive.

We were very much pleased with the 2nd representation 'Until within the last century, and particularly the latter portion of it, Medicine was not entitled to be ranked among the sciences. Its principles had not been developed. The labors of its professors were devoted to wild speculations; to the evention of theories (so called) founded on the principles of other sciences; to the discussion of subtle and abstract doctrines, and to the practice of supprical arts.

The great defect in the labors of the ancients was their careless observation of facts, and their almost total newlect.
