- Mombritius, Boninus. [Sanctuarium sive vitæ sanctorum.] 2 v. Fº. 7550.5
 Published according to Panzer, at Milan, before 1480; for the work is dedicated to Cielo Simoneta who died at the hands of the executioner in that year. The collation agrees with that given in the Bibliotheca Spenceriana [2140.9], except that the last folio of the signature n, lacks about two-thirds of the last column, which Brunet says is the case of most of the copies which he has seen. In this copy seven lines in manuscript have been inserted. It is dated on the back 1476, which must be nearly, if not the exact date of its publication. "Of all the books which I have ever collated, the present has exhibited the most capricious and puzzling arrangement of signatures." — Dibdin, Bibliotheca Spenceriana.

It is the opinion of Ottley (Inquiry into the history of engraving, 4063.1.2, p. 576) that the designer of the wood engravings of the Venice edition of the Metamorphoses of 1549 was Benedetto Montagna, and that the engravers were the same as those of the Hyperotomachia of Poliphilo. A comparison of the engravings in this edition with Ottley's description and also with a plate in Jack-on's Wood engraving [*4063.3, p. 264] shows that they are the same.

At the end of each story is an allegory; it is thought by some that Giovanni di Bonsignore di Città di Castello was the author of these allegories and that the translation is the work of another.

European Origin of the Aryans.

The belief that the Aryans originated in Central Asia first gained notice from the authority of Pott; and laid by the approval of Lassen, Grimm, Pictet, Schleicher, Max Müller, and others, it was for a long time the prevailing opinion. In 1851, however, Latham first cast doubt upon it in his edition of Tacitus, and in his later works on Language. His opinion was received with indifference, and as late as 1874, Hehn said, "And so it came to pass that in England, the native land of fads, there chanced to enter into the head of an eccentric individual the notion of placing the cradle of the Aryan race in Europe." There were not wanting in the meantime, however, some who did not scoff at Latham's proposition, the first being Whitney, who took rather an agnostic than an assenting position. It was only after seventeen years of contemptuous neglect, says Canon Taylor, that Latham found his first real disciple in Benfey, who in the preface to Fick's "Vergleichendes Wörterbuch d. indogermanischen Sprachen," published in 1868, pointed out that the beech and the birch, with which the original Aryans were acquainted, were indigenous to Europe, whereas the characteristic animals and trees of Southern Asia, such as the lion, the tiger and the palm, were known only to the Indians and Iranians." Geiger, in his "Zur Entwickelungsgeschichte der Menschheit," 1871, added further arguments in favor of Benfey's theory. In the same year Cuno, in his "Forschungen im Gebiete der alten Völkerkunde," fixed on the great plain of Northern Europe, stretching from the Ural mountains over Northern Germany and the north of France, as far as the Atlantic, as presenting the necessary geographical conditions where could have been "evolved those dialectic differences which afterward developed into the several Aryan languages." He laid down the lines upon which later investigators have worked, that Aryan language was not coextensive with Aryan blood. Johannes Schmidt, in "Die Verwandtschaftsverhältnisse der indogermanischen Sprachen," Weimar, 1872, disproved the theory of successive migrations of Aryans from the East. The works of Geiger and Cuno gave a new turn to the views on the question of the origin of the Aryans, and the European hypothesis found a growing number of adherents. Friedrich Müller in 1873, Spiegel in 1871, provisionally adopted the views of Cuno and Benfey. Up to 1878, when Poesche's book, "Die Arier," was published, only linguistic arguments had been adduced; but Poesche took the anthropological testimony, and placed the original home of the Aryans in the great Rokitno swamp. In 1883 the publication of Penka's "Origines Ariacae," and Schrader's "Sprachvergleichung und Urgeschichte," gave fresh impetus to the European hypothesis. Penka deduced principally from anthropological evidence that the Scandinavians were the parent stock of the Aryans; while Schrader made a judicial survey of the whole question, concluding with a cautious endorsement of the European theory. In the second edition of Schrader's work, lately published, the author announces his complete conversion to the views of his predecessors as to the main fact of Europe being the original home of the Aryans. The best statements in English, from the European standpoint, relative to the controversy about the home of the original Aryans, are to be found in Reudall's "The cradle of the Aryans" and Canon Taylor's "The origin of the Aryans." The Asiatic theory has staunch defenders in Hehn, Max Müller in his "Biographies of Words," and Van den Gheyn in "L'origine européenne des Aryas."

The list herewith printed aims to be only an enumeration of the principal books and papers which have been published upon the European hypothesis, since the latter attained prominence from the works of Cuno, Poesche, Penka, and Schrader.

"Der Verfasser dieser Geschichte hat sich durch mehrere Momente, insbesondere durch den Mangel von Urnamen für die grossen Raubthiere Asiens, z. B. den Löwen, welcher bekanntlich noch in historischer Zeit in Griechenland existirte, also wohl so gut wie der Bär, der Wolf hier und in Indien einen etymologisch identischen Namen führen würde, wenn sich ein solcher in der Grundsprache befunden hätte, bestimmen lassen, die Urheimath der Indogermanen in Europa zu suchen und wird darüber an einem andern Orte eingehender handeln."

"So liefert der hier gegebene Nachweis, dass die Indogermanen schon zu der Zeit Salz kannten als sie noch ein ungetrenntes, einheitliches Volk bildeten, ein neues Moment für meine Ueberzeugung, dass sie sich zu dem durch Sprache, religiöse und sociale Verhältnisse scharf besondern und charakterisirten Volke nicht im Innern von Asien entwickelt haben, sondern gerade in der Localität wohin ich diese Entwicklung verlege, oberhalb des Schwarzen, nicht fern von dem Kaspischen Meere."

Discusses the origin of the Aryans, and fixes upon the central plain of Europe as the original home. Canon Taylor in the preface to his "The origin of the Aryans" says that the main thesis of his book is a restatement of the views of Spiegel and Schrader, though in several points he finds himself rather in agreement with Cuno, "whose ingenious work seems to be almost unknown in this country [England]," as he has never seen it quoted in any English book, and found that it was unknown even in the British Museum.

Mueller, Friedrich Max. Biographies of words and the home of the Aryans. London, 1888. 8°. 2958.60

Defends the Asiatic theory, and sharply criticises the supporters of the European hypothesis.

"There are many objections to the theory which would make Northern Europe the home of the Aryan race. Also to the sub-theory that looks upon the Scandinavians and North Germans as the modern representatives of the original stock, and upon the Finns as the descendants of the earlier race from which the Aryans have been evolved, both physiologically and linguistically."

"He endeavors to substantiate the hypothesis advanced in an earlier work, and to show that the first speakers of the Aryan languages were the fair-haired, blue-eyed, light-complexioned dolichocephalic race, which is still found in its greatest purity in Scandinavia; that it was the race which in the neolithic period spread southwards, imposing its yoke upon subject populations, like the Norsemen and Normans of later days, and carrying with it the dialects, which afterwards developed into the Aryan languages; and that, finally, it was the same race which in the remote days of the palaeolithic age inhabited Western and Central Europe. Dr. Penka would ascribe to its long residence in the semi-arctic climate of palaeolithic Europe the permanent blanching of its skin and hair—a form of albinism which Dr. Poesche, in 1878, endeavored to explain by the climatic conditions of the Rokitno marshes in Russia, where he placed the cradle of the white Aryan race."

Poesche, Theodor. Die Arier. Ein Beitrag zur historischen Anthropologie. Jena, 1878. 8°. 6234.55

"I distinctly locate the birthplace of the Aryans in the great swampy region, the Palus Magna of Mediaeval writers, in which the river Dnieper takes its rise." — Poesche in Nation, Mar. 8, 1881.

Reviewed by Ecker in Archiv für Anthropologie, vol. xi, pp. 365-369, who agrees with Poesche's conclusions.

"Ratzel tient pour vraisemblable (mais sans aller plus loin) que les premiers Aryens étaient des blonds, originaires de l'Europe du Nord, dans le voisinage des Finnois, et que, de là leur langue s'est répandue peu à peu vers le Sud par la conquête." — Revue critique.

Rendall, Gerald H. The cradle of the Aryans. London, 1889. 63 pp. 8°. 2235.106

Summarizes the results of investigations to date. "At first sight it must appear idle guesswork to attempt the racial identification of the founders of the Aryan speech. But examination shows that the possible alternatives are few, and the collateral evidences of anthropology at once more striking and more harmonious than might have been expected; and Penka has gone far towards establishing an association between Aryan speech and the race of blond whites, whose central and immemorial home is found in Scandinavia."

"I must avow my entire conversion to the theory first propounded by Latham, and of late years ably defended on anthropological and linguistic grounds by Poesche and Penka, that the Aryan race had its first seat, not in Asia, but in the Baltic provinces and northern Germany. Here the Aryan languages grew up and from hence they spread along with the spread of the tall, blue-eyed, light-haired dolichocephalic people who spoke them."

Opposes the European theory. "At any rate, these facts would forbid us to place the original home of the Indo-Germanic peoples in central or northern Europe."

Schrader, Otto. Linguistisch-historische Forschungen zur Handelsgeschichte und Warenkunde. 1er Teil. Jena, 1886. 8°. 2956.71

A study of the culture of the Aryans by means of their commercial and trade intercourse. The author here adopts the European theory of the origin of the Aryans.

Concludes "That the European hypothesis, that is, that the origin of the Indo-European races is to be sought westward, rather than eastward, appears to be far more in accordance with the facts." Schrader has later been convinced by the weight of evidence of the truth of this.

Same. 2. umgearb. n. verm. Anfl. Jena, 1890. 8°. 2955.85

A new edition of Prof. O. Schrader's well-known Sprachvergleichung und Urgeschichte has just been published. It is, however, a new work rather than a new edition of an older one. Although a considerable part of the matter contained in the first edition has been omitted, the new volume is nearly double the size of its predecessor, thanks to the abundance of fresh material that has been introduced into it. More especially Prof. Schrader has gone into the question of the primitive home of the Aryans. In his earlier edition, it will be remembered, he assented with considerable hesitation to the theory which placed it in Europe. He now accepts the theory without reservation, and follows Leskien in fixing upon the plains of South-western Russia as the locality where the Aryan nomads first pastured their flocks. From hence they spread northward, westward, and eastward. — Academy, Dec. 28, 1889.

The Barlow Sale.

The accession by a single purchase to the Library of a very considerable number of works in their original editions relating to the discovery, settlement, and early history of America is an event of so much interest that the librarian deems it proper to make a special record of it. The Trustees, as is well known, have seldom purchased costly original editions of books of which there were trustworthy reprints; not because they undervalued originals, but because, in their judgment, neither the income from the funds, nor the annual appropriation for popular literature, could be properly applied to such purchases. But a special appropriation by the city government, to be applied specifically to the purchase of early Americana, relieved the Trustees, in the present instance, from any embarrassment.

The occasion for asking for such appropriation was the appearance, late in the year 1889, of a catalogue of the library of the late Samuel L. M. Barlow, to be sold at auction in New York, early in February.

This library has a history of some interest to the people of Boston, where its projector, Colonel Thomas Aspinwall, for some time resided. Colonel Aspinwall, born of an old Massachusetts family, had an honorable record as a soldier in the War of 1812, and at its close was appointed consul at London, where he resided from 1816 until 1854. While there he formed a collection of books, maps, and manuscripts of great value, especially in its American department. In 1864, the most valuable of these, exclusively Americana, were sold to Samuel L. M. Barlow, of New York City. When Mr. Barlow had made his purchase, his agent took with him to New York several hundred of the choicest volumes. The bulk of the library, forwarded as freight, was stored in the book-room of C. B. Richardson, Broadway, to await the preparation for its reception of Mr. Barlow's house on Madison square, and while there was totally destroyed by fire on the night of the 18th of September, 1864. In twenty-five years, however, Mr. Barlow had substantially replaced the loss, and added some books not found in the Aspinwall catalogue.

The works of general literature, including many duplicates of rare Americana not purchased by Mr. Barlow, were sold after Colonel Aspinwall's death, at the auction rooms of Leonard & Co., in June, 1879. The time of the year was not well chosen, and they were sold at prices, in many cases, not half of the cost of their bindings.

Some of the Americana thus sold, with their prices, were Hakluyt's West Indies, $16; War's Simple Cumber, two copies, at $13 each; A Good Speed to Virginia, 1603, $15; Josselyn's New-England's Rarities, 1672, $16; Josselyn's An Account of Two Voyages to New-England, 1674, $15; Pyachon's Meritorious Price, 842 (sold at the Barlow sale for $480); Morton's New English Canaan, $63; another copy, $26; Lechford's Plain Dealing, three copies respectively at $41, $37, $32.75; Wood's New England's Prospect, $31; Hennepin's New Discovery, 1699, $23.50; another copy, $16.50; Savage's Account of the Late Action of the New-Englanders, 1691, $25.50; Massachusetts Historical Society Collections, complete set, $75; Almon's Remembrancer, complete set, $64; Stith's History of Virginia, 1753, $13; Peter's History of Connecticut, $24.50; Beverley's History of Virginia, 1722, $9.50; Cotton's Blouly Tenent, 1647, $6. There were many other lots of similar interest and value. The volumes above mentioned, though sold at prices low even at that time, were not thrown away, as were many of the more miscellaneous part of the collection. This was due to the presence of Mr. Joseph Sabin, of New York, the well-known dealer in Americana.

An attempt has been made to ascertain, but with only partial success, the titles of the "two hundred or more" books which escaped the flames in 1864, and especially of those which have now become the property of the Public Library.

Colonel Aspinwall printed a catalogue of his library not much later than 1831; but as it is without date or imprint, the time is conjectural. It is chronologically arranged, and as the latest entry is Irving's Voyages of Columbus, 1831, presumably the list was printed within a short time after that date. It contains 771 titles; and when the dates, imprints, and sizes of these volumes correspond with those found in the sale catalogue of the Barlow collection, it may be fairly assumed that they are identical copies. Of course in some cases the Barlow books may be replacements of the Aspinwall books destroyed. From this test, the only one left to us, it appears that 229 escaped the fire, and 542 were consumed by it. Of the former, 1 was of the 15th century, 17 of the 16th, 114 of the 17th, 65 of the 18th, and 31 of the 19th. Thirty-two of these, chiefly those printed before 1700, and by far the most valuable, were purchased by the Public Library.

The catalogue of that part of Colonel Aspin-wall's library sold to Mr. Barlow is now in the Public Library; and exclusive of the maps and manuscripts comprises 2,788 volumes, of which 2 were published in the 15th century, 42 in the 16th, 324 in the 17th, 1,169 in the 18th, and 671 in the 19th. These added to the 3,849 volumes sold by Leonard & Co. make the entire library 6,637 volumes.

It would afford some satisfaction, though a sad one, to know what treasures perished in the flames; and this might be learned by a comparison of the titles in Colonel Aspinwall's manuscript catalogue, chronologically arranged, with the Barlow sale catalogue, alphabetically arranged; but the labor would be disproportionate to the value of the results.

The magnitude, symmetry, and riches of the Public Library are well known. In none of its departments is it strikingly deficient; in some, it is unequalled by any library on this continent, and is surpassed only by a few in Europe. Perhaps its most noticeable deficiency has been in original editions of works on the discovery, settlement, and growth of the American colonies. With reprints, it is fairly well supplied. The deficiency just mentioned has been well known to the Trustees, and has excited some solicitude on their part, especially of late, since they have found such works becoming more scarce and costly year by year.

When it became known that the Aspinwall-Barlow collection would be sold at auction, the Trustees applied to the City Council for a special appropriation to enable them to purchase from it those rare and costly books on American history in which the Library was conspicuously deficient. This request was acceded to with great liberality, and the Trustees secured what cost them $20,274.

The Trustees readily foresaw that prices would run high at the Barlow sale. Their presence with $20,000 in hand — a fact well known to the public — would of itself have a tendency to appreciate prices. And so would the fact that other buyers were there similarly well supplied with funds, and equally desirous to avail themselves of an opportunity not likely to occur again within a century, if ever. When such large collections are dispersed, no inconsiderable part of their rarest volumes go to the large libraries either here or in Europe, and never again appear in the market.

Under these circumstances the Trustees were represented at the sale by their president and the librarian. They secured perhaps half, or two-thirds, of the volumes they considered most desirable. This was as well as could have been expected, for no one library, unless utterly regardless of cost, and of the comity due to other libraries, can carry away all the desirable lots.

The amount of their purchases was $20,274. Of these, among the most costly was a Latin copy of the first work ever printed about the discovery of America, — the first letter of Columbus to the King and Queen of Spain, in 1493. There has been some criticism of this purchase, which would have been just had the Trustees made it with the income of the trust funds, or from the annual appropriation made for more popular works.

The price was high, — higher than they expected, — but that it was not exorbitant seems clear to them, since some days after the purchase overtures were made to them for its sale at a much higher price than they paid for it. It may also be added that the first Spanish copy has since been offered to the Library for $10,000 as its lowest price.

As the Trustees were well aware, the copy they purchased is not unique, but it is very rare, and is the Aspinwall copy, purchased by him more than fifty years ago, — a fact which reasonably assures them of its genuineness. It is fitting that this letter should be found in the largest public library on this continent, and in one of the oldest cities thereof. And with the purchases made at the Barlow sale now on its shelves, the Public Library has not only acquired prestige and rank among great libraries, but the possession of them will attract students and lead them, it is to be hoped, to form the invaluable habit of resorting to original authorities.

The Trustees also purchased "A true Copie of the Court Booke of the governor and society of the Massachusetts Bay in New England," for so the title reads, which is the most perfect known copy of the first volume in manuscript of the Massachusetts colony records, and contains historical matter of great importance nowhere else to be found. The precise date of the copy, though very early, has not yet been ascertained. Dr. Shurtleff thought it was in the handwriting of Increase Norwell and Edward Rawson, the second and third secretaries of the General Court after the coming of Winthrop with the charter in 1630; but of this the librarian does not feel well assured, and will make further investigation of the question. Of one fact, however, hitherto unnoticed, there can be no doubt: that the marginal notes from page 226 to page 252 are in the hand of Gov. Richard Bellingham, which adds some weight to the suggestion that this copy was official and intended for official uses, perhaps not far from the time when the Assistants and Deputies began to sit apart from each other.

But that in some way it became the subject of private ownership, appears from the following memorandum in the handwriting of Governor Thomas Hutchinson prefixed to the volume which was once in his possession, probably in direct de-scient from its first owner: "This Book belonged to Edward Hutchinson of Boston, who being employed by the Government to enter upon a Treaty with a Tribe of Indians in 1675 was treacherously waylaid and mortally wounded by them and died and lies buried in the town of Marlborough the first English settlement to which he could be carried. In the year 1769 a man of the name of Rice died in Worcester who was present and perfectly remembered having seen Mr. Hutchinson brought into Marlborough. Rice died at the age of 102. Edward Hutchinson received the freedom of the colony in 1634 Sec. 31 [sec p. 8], and Mr. William Hutchinson his father received his the 4th of March following p. 82."

Notes.

EVENING AND SUNDAY OPENING OF BATES HALL. — Since Dec. 16, 1889, the Bates Hall has been open until 9 o'clock in the evening, and since Feb. 2, 1890, from 2 until 9 P.M. on Sundays. The experiment has thus far proved successful.

PATENT ROOM. — The curator of the Lower Hall Card Catalogue now has charge of the Patent Collection, recently removed into what was formerly the Art Room. The cases containing the catalogue have been removed into the same room, where the curator may be consulted.

AGE OF PERSONS PERMITTED TO USE THE LIBRARY. — The Library is now free to all persons over the age of twelve years, and also, under limitations, to pupils under twelve years of age attending any of the public grammar schools of the city.

NEW FIRE APPARATUS. — The Central Library has been completely refitted with fire apparatus, hose, axes, buckets, and extinguishers.

VOLUMES LOST AND RECOVERED. — It is gratifying to note that during the past year only one volume in forty thousand of those used fails to be accounted for.

JOHN G. GILBERT'S BOOKS. — By the gift of Mrs.

John G. Gilbert, the books of her late husband have come into the possession of the Library.

GIFTS. — Among the gifts to the Public Library since the issue of the previous Bulletin, have been the following: From W. P. Atkinson, 192 volumes, 820 pamphlets; James P. Baxter, "Early voyages to America;" Rev. Caleb D. Bradlee, 166 volumes, 1,164 pamphlets; Mrs. N. J. Bradlee, 20 volumes; Linus B. Comins, 84 volumes; Nathan Haskell Dole, Byzantium's "Constantinople;" Thomas N. Hart, 241 volumes; Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, 149 pamphlets; Messrs. McKim, Mead, & White, large mounted photograph of the Farnesi Palace, besides several large framed elevations of the New Library building; Rev. A. D. Mayo, 955 pamphlets; University of Utrecht, 19 volumes, 5 pamphlets; H. C. Warren, 40 volumes; E. A. Wyeth, 277 volumes, 11 pamphlets.

THE CATALOGUE OF BIBLIOGRAPHIES OF SPECIAL SUBJECTS, which appears in this Bulletin, is also separately issued. This aid to library research will also be printed in the forthcoming Handbook for Readers. Price, 50 cents, including postage.

CATALOGUES.

Bulletins.

The titles of new Books are entered on the Bulletin Boards of each Library. In the Bates Hall and Lower Hall the new books are displayed in glass cases at the desks. At each Branch, in addition to its own list of fresh acquisitions, are posted titles of recent or interesting books lately received at the Central Library. The Dorchester list is posted also at the Delivery Stations at the Lower Mills, Neponset, and Mattapan, and the Jamaica Plain list at the Delivery Stations at Roslindale and West Roxbury. Bates Hall books may be applied for at the several Branches and Delivery Stations, and they will be sent to the Branch or Delivery Station the same or following day.

49. A / Declaration / by the / Representatives / of the / United Colonies / of / North America, / now met in / General Congress / at Philadelphia, / Setting [sic] forth the Causes and Necessity of their / taking up / Arms. / Philadelphia: / Printed by William and Thomas Bradford, 1775 / 8°. pp. (2), 13. P.

The committee appointed to prepare this Declaration, consisting of John Rutledge, William Livingston, Franklin, Jay and Johnson, reported a draft on June 24, which, not being approved by the Congress, was recommitted, and Jefferson and Dickinson added to the Committee.

"On the 24th, a committee which had been appointed to prepare a declaration of the causes of taking up arms, brought in their report (drawn I believe by J. Rutledge) which not being liked, the House recommitted it, on the 26th, and added Mr. Dickinson and myself to the committee.... I prepared a draught of the declaration committed to us. It was too strong for Mr. Dickinson.... We therefore requested him to take the paper, and put it into a form he could approve. He did so, preparing an entire new statement, and preserving of the former only the last four paragraphs and half of the preceding one. We approved and reported it to Congress, who accepted it." Jefferson's Autobiography. — Works, I, 11.

Continental Congress

February 19. Oration on Montgomery.

87. An / Oration / In Memory of / General Montgomery, / and of the / Officers and Soldiers, / Who Fell with Him, December 31, 1775, / before / Quebec; / Drawn up (and Delivered February 19, 1776.) / At the Desire of the / Honorable Continental Congress. / By William Smith, D.D. / Provost of the College and Academy / Of Philadelphia. / / Philadelphia: / Printed by John Dunlap, in Market-Street. / M,DCC,LXXVI. / 8°. pp. (6), 44. P.H.S.

"The oration was an insolent performance. A motion was made to thank the orator, and ask a copy, but opposed with great spirit and vivacity from every part of the room, and at last withdrawn, lest it should be rejected, as it certainly would have been, with indignation. The orator then printed it himself, after leaving out or altering some offensive passages."—Familiar Letters of John Adams, 167.

July 4. Declaration of Independence.

101. In Congress, July 4, 1776. / A Declaration by the Representatives of the United States / of America, in General Congress Assembled. [Philadelphia: John Dunlap. 1776].

F°. Broadside.

I judge this to be the first edition of this famous paper, as it is the one gummed into the MS. Journals of Congress by the Secretary.

Thomas Jefferson, John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, Roger Sherman, and Robert R. Livingston were appointed June 11 by Congress a committee to prepare the declaration. Jefferson, at the request of the committee, wrote the first draft, which was slightly altered by Adams and Franklin, and in that form accepted by the committee, who reported it to Congress June 28; where, after debate and amending, it was adopted July 4. A facsimile of Jefferson's rough draft, showing the correctives made by Adams and Franklin, is printed in the Charlottesville and Boston editions of his "Memoirs," as edited by T. J. Randolph, and in the first issue of his "Writings," edited by H. A. Washington:—A facsimile of a fair copy, in Jefferson's handwriting, is printed in volume III of the "Papers of James Madison":—A copy showing the amendments made by Congress, in comparison with the original draft, is contained in all the editions of Jefferson's "Memoirs" and "Writings." In 1824 Congress ordered 200 copies to be reproduced in facsimile on parchment, of the engrossed copy, and this plate was used later to print that contained in Force's Archives (v. I, 1895), and has also been used to print a separate edition on paper. Both Jefferson's draft and the engrossed copy have been reproduced in facsimile many times, and there have been many printed editions, besides the contemporary editions noted herein. In the Adams Mss. is a copy of Jefferson's draft, in the writing of Adams, made before even Jefferson had made his corrections and interlineations.

105. In Congress, July 4, 1776. / The unanimous Declaration / of the / Thirteen United States of America. / / Baltimore, in Maryland: Printed by Mary Katherine Goddard. / [1777.] F°. B. B.P.L.

The first edition of the Declaration printed for the Congress was issued before it was engrossed on parchment, and signed. It was therefore merely signed by Hancock, and attested by Thomson. This edition was printed for the Congress "with the list of the several members of Congress subscribed thereto," to be filed in the archives of each state.

Notes.

ALL communications should be addressed

"To the Trustees of the Public Library, Boston, Mass."

THE late Joseph Scholfield has left $11,766.77 to the Public Library, being the income from the bequest of $50,000 made by the late Arthur Scholfield.

THROUGH the friendly suggestion of Miss Isabel F. Hapgood, the Library has received from Vladimir Stassoff, conseiller d'état, chef de la section des Beaux-Arts à la Bibliothèque impériale publique de St. Petersbourg, the only copy deposited in this country of his magnificent work, "L'ornement slave et oriental."

A MANUSCRIPT catalogue of works and parts of works illustrating the Topography and Local history of Great Britain and Ireland is in course of preparation — a large part being already done. It supplements, and in a measure duplicates Anderson's Book of British Topography, of which there is an interleaved and extensively annotated copy on shelf no. 2153.46. The manuscript catalogue may be consulted.

GIFTS. — Among the gifts to the Public Library since the issue of the last Bulletin have been the following: From Willard S. Allen, 25 volumes, 16 pamphlets; Associated Charities of Boston, 47 volumes; Rev. C. D. Bradlee, 30 volumes, 397 pamphlets, and newspapers and broadsides; Henry L. Dawes, 15 volumes; Dr. Samuel A. Green, 6 volumes, 53 pamphlets; Abbott Lawrence, 4 volumes, 74 pamphlets; C. A. Richardson, lot of newspapers; Mrs. Ellen A. Stone, 2,000 newspapers; Miss Caroline Coddington Thayer, 2 volumes, 79 photographs. In addition to the above and other gifts, special mention is to be made of the gift of Mrs. John A. Lewis of 293 volumes, 423 pamphlets, and broadsides and manuscripts. A fuller notice of this accession of rare Americana will be made in a future Bulletin.

THE Hon. Mellen Chamberlain, LL.D., for the past twelve years Librarian, has resigned his office, and the Trustees, on accepting his resignation, which is to take effect October 1, next, passed the following resolutions: —

Whereas, Hon. Mellen Chamberlain has been constrained by the impaired condition of his health to resign the office of Librarian of the Public Library, and the Trustees have reluctantly accepted his resignation, to take effect on the 1st day of October next;

Voted, That the Trustees hereby place upon their records the expression of their regret for the loss which the Library must sustain in no longer benefiting by the services of so accomplished and so faithful a scholar as Judge Chamberlain has shown himself to be during his twelve years of service.

Voted, That the special attainments of the Librarian in the study of early American history have proved of essential advantage to the Library in bringing up that department to the high standard that had already been reached in other branches of knowledge.

Voted, That the Trustees hereby convey to Judge Chamberlain the expression of their respect and regard, their regret that their pleasant, intimate personal relations must cease, their hope that his enforced leisure may result in restored health, and their wish that his life may long be spared to give to the world from his stores of knowledge.

Voted, That the same privileges in the use of the Library be extended to Judge Chamberlain that are accustomed to be granted to a Trustee upon his retirement.

BARLOW LIBRARY.

Below are given, by centuries, the titles of the books purchased by the Public Library, at the sale in February, 1890, of the Library of the late Samuel L. M. Barlow. As will be seen, the chief value of these books, aside from their rarity, is their reinforcement of this Library's collection of works on the discovery and early history of America. An account of this purchase is in the Bulletin for April, 1890.

Sm. 4^o. G.355.60

This tract "has generally been ascribed to the Rev. John White, of Dorchester, England. . . . The copy which I use, and which formerly belonged to Increase Mather, has on the title-page, in his handwriting, 'Mr. White, of Dorchester, author.' This may be considered good authority, as Increase Mather probably derived his information from his father Richard Mather, who came over in 1635, or from some other of the first settlers. . . . The Planters' plea appears to have been unknown to our historians. Neither Mather, Prince, Hutchinson, Bancroft nor Grahame make [sic] any use or mention of it." — Alexander Young, Chronicles of the first planters of Massachusetts Bay, p. 16. The tract is anonymous in the British museum catalogue, and by Halkett and Laing is ascribed to Rev. John Cotton. Reprinted in Force's Collection, vol. 2 [No. 3 in *4309.7.2; No. 3 in *2323.3.2].

"Among the padres who left the country [Lower California] in 1788 or the next year was Father Luis Sales, author of the only work on California published by the Dominicans. . . . The letters are signed F. L. S. and the archives contain ample material to identify him with Fray Luis Sales, though this identity is now announced for the first time. The first letter treats of geography and the Indians; the second includes historical material on the Jesuit and Franciscan period, with a report on Nootka affairs; and the third treats largely of the Dominican occupation and the author's own experience.

The letters bear no dates; the first and second were written from San Miguel mission, California, and the third from San Miguel, Azores islands, to which the author had come as chaplain on a man-of-war from Vera Cruz."—Bancroft's History of the North Mexican States, 1. 727.

THE LATIN VERSION OF 1493

OF THE

FIRST LETTER OF COLUMBUS TO THE NOBLE LORD
RAPHAEL SANCHEZ ANNOUNCING THE DISCOVERY OF AMERICA. Reproduced in fac-simile by the heliotype process, with a note and a translation.

IN the Bulletin of the Boston Public Library for April, 1890, an account was given of the purchases made for that Library in the preceding February, at the sale in New York City of the books of the late S. L. M. Barlow. Among them was a copy of the Latin version of the first "Letter, addressed to the noble Lord Raphael Sanchez, Treasurer to their most invincible Majesties, Ferdinand and Isabella, King and Queen of Spain, by Christopher Columbus, to whom our age is greatly indebted, treating of the islands of India recently discovered beyond the Ganges, to explore which he had been sent eight months before under the auspices and at the expense of their said Majesties."

Little is known of the history of this copy of the First Columbus letter before its purchase in 1831 by the late Colonel Thomas Aspinwall, formerly American consul at London, except that it was in the portion of his Library which he sold to Mr. Barlow in 1864. In the catalogue of Colonel Aspinwall's library, printed probably somewhat later than 1831, he appended to the title of this Letter the following note: "The earliest edition of the first document ever published concerning the discovery of the New World: unknown to Robertson, and long supposed to be lost." No attempt is here made to substantiate the claim thus made by him, and since by others. It is sufficient to say that in the Bulletin of the Boston Public Library for April, 1875, under the title "Roselly de Lorgues," is a bibliographical note upon the different editions of the Letter then known. Dr. Justin Winsor, writing later in the Proceedings of the Massachusetts Historical Society for February, 1890, is of the opinion that the Letter was put into Latin in Spain, and the version carried into Italy. Within a year eight different editions were issued in thin quartos or octavos in black-letter type, — five in Rome, two in Paris, and one in Amsterdam. Of the five Roman editions this Aspinwall-Barlow copy is one, and in the opinion of HARRISSE and others, the earliest. This claim, however, is disputed; yet whatever may be its rank in priority, it is the only known copy of this edition in America. Three copies are now in existence, two of them being in the British Museum.

A fac-simile of the present copy was issued by Mr. Barlow, in 1875, in an edition limited to fifty copies. It is now reproduced with the exactness which belongs to the heliotype process.

The following translation is that of R. H. Major, as printed in his Select Letters of Christopher Columbus (London, 1847) — one of the publications of the Hakluyt Society.

First Voyage of Columbus.

A Letter addressed to the noble Lord Raphael Sanchez, Treasurer to their most invincible Majesties, Ferdinand and Isabella,¹ King and Queen of Spain, by Christopher Columbus, to whom our age is greatly indebted, treating of the islands of India recently discovered beyond the Ganges, to explore which he had been sent eight months before under the auspices and at the expense of their said Majesties.

KNOWN that it will afford you pleasure to learn that I have brought my undertaking to a successful termination, I have decided upon writing you this letter to acquaint you with all the events which have occurred in my voyage, and the discoveries which have resulted from it. Thirty-three days after my departure from Cadiz² I reached the Indian sea, where I discovered many islands, thickly peopled, of which I took possession without resistance in the name of our most illustrious Monarch, by public proclamation and with unfurled banners. To the first of these islands, which is called by the Indians Guanahani, I gave the name of the blessed Saviour (San Salvador), relying upon whose protection I had reached this as well as the other islands; to each of these I also gave a name, ordering that one should be called Santa Maria de la Concepcion,³ another Fernandina,⁴ the third Isabella,⁵ the fourth Juana,⁶ and so with all the rest respectively. As soon as we arrived at that, which as I have said was named Juana, I proceeded along its coast a short distance westward, and found it to be so large and apparently without termination, that I could not suppose it to be an island, but the continental province of Cathay. Seeing, however, no towns or populous places on the sea coast, but only a few detached houses and cottages, with whose inhabitants I was unable to communicate, because they fled as soon as they saw us, I went further on, thinking that in my progress I should certainly find some city or village. At length, after proceeding a great way and finding that nothing new presented itself, and that the line of coast was leading us northwards (which I wished to avoid, because it was winter, and it was my intention to move southwards; and because moreover the winds were contrary), I resolved not to attempt any further progress, but rather to turn back and retrace my course to a certain bay that I had observed, and from which I afterwards dispatched two of our men to ascertain whether there were a king or any cities in that province. These men reconnoitred the country for three days, and found a most numerous population, and great numbers of houses, though small, and built without any regard to order: with which information they returned to us. In the mean time I had learned from some Indians whom I had seized, that that country was certainly an island: and therefore I sailed towards the east, coasting to the distance of three hundred and twenty-two miles, which brought us to the extremity of it; from this point I saw lying eastwards another island, fifty-four miles distant from Juana, to which I gave the name of Española.⁷ I went thither, and steered my course eastward as I had done at Juana, even to the distance of five hundred and sixty-four miles along the north coast. This said island of Juana is exceedingly fertile, as indeed are all the others; it is surrounded with many bays, spacious, very secure, and surpassing any that I have ever seen; numerous large and healthful rivers intersect it, and it also contains many very lofty mountains. All these islands are very beautiful, and distinguished by a diversity of scenery; they are filled with a great variety of trees of immense height, and which I believe to retain their foliage in all seasons; for when I saw them they were as verdant and luxuriant as they usually are in Spain in the month of May,—some of them were blossoming, some bearing fruit, and all flourishing in the greatest perfection, according to their respective stages of growth, and the nature and quality of each: yet the islands are not so thickly wooded as to be impassable. The nightingale and various birds were singing in countless numbers, and that in November, the month in which I arrived there. There are besides in the same island of Juana seven or eight kinds of palm trees, which, like all the other trees, herbs, and fruits, considerably surpass ours in height and beauty. The pines also are very handsome, and there are very extensive fields and meadows, a variety of birds, different kinds of honey, and many sorts of metals, but no iron. In that island also which I have before said we named Española, there are mountains of very great size and beauty, vast plains, groves, and very fruitful fields, admirably adapted for tillage, pasture, and habitation. The convenience and excellence of the harbours in this island, and the abundance of the rivers, so indispensable to the health of man, surpass anything that would be believed by one who had not seen it. The trees, herbage, and fruits of Española are very different from those of Juana, and moreover it abounds in various kinds of spices, gold, and other metals. The inhabitants of both sexes in this island, and in all the others which I have seen, or of which I have received information, go always naked as they were born, with the exception of some of the women, who use the covering of a leaf, or small bough, or an apron of cotton which they prepare for that purpose. None of them, as I have already said, are possessed of any iron, neither have they weapons, being unacquainted with, and indeed incompetent to use them, not from any deformity of body (for they are well-formed), but because they are timid and full of fear. They carry however in lieu of arms, canes dried in the sun, on the ends of which they fix heads of dried wood sharpened to a point, and even these they dare not use habitually; for it has often occurred when I have sent two or three of my men to any of the villages to speak with the natives, that they have come out in a disorderly troop, and have fled in such haste at the approach of our men, that the fathers forsook their children and the children their fathers. This timidity did not arise from any loss or injury that they had received from us; for, on the contrary, I gave to all I approached whatever articles I had about me, such as cloth and many other things, taking nothing of theirs in return: but they are naturally timid and fearful. As soon however as they see that they are safe, and have laid aside all fear, they are very simple and honest, and exceedingly liberal with all they have; none of them refusing anything he may possess when he is asked for it, but on the contrary inviting us to ask them. They exhibit great love towards all others in preference to themselves: they also give objects of great value for trifles, and content themselves with very little or nothing in return. I however forbade that these trifles and articles of no value (such as pieces of dishes, plates, and glass, keys, and leather straps) should be given to them, although if they could obtain them, they imagined themselves to be possessed of the most beautiful trinkets in the world. It even happened that a sailor received for a leather strap as much gold as was worth three golden nobles, and for things of more trifling value offered by our men, especially newly-coined blancas, or any gold coins, the Indians would give whatever the seller required; as, for instance, an ounce and a half or two ounces of gold, or thirty or forty pounds of cotton, with which commodity they were already acquainted. Thus they bartered, like idiots, cotton and gold for fragments of bows, glasses, bottles, and jars; which I forbade as being unjust, and myself gave them many beautiful and acceptable articles which I had brought with me, taking nothing from them in return; I did this in order that I might the more easily conciliate them, that they might be led to become Christians, and be inclined to entertain a regard for the King and Queen, our Princes and all Spaniards, and that I might induce them to take an interest in seeking out, and collecting, and delivering to us such things as they possessed in abundance, but which we greatly needed. They practise no kind of idolatry, but have a firm belief that all strength and power, and indeed all good things, are in heaven, and that I had descended from thence with these ships and sailors, and under this impression was I received after they had thrown aside their fears. Nor are they slow or stupid, but of very clear understanding; and those men who have crossed to the neighbouring islands give an admirable description of everything they observed; but they never saw any people clothed, nor any ships like ours. On my arrival at that sea, I had taken some Indians by force from the first island that I came to, in order that they might learn our language, and communicate to us what they knew respecting the country; which plan succeeded excellently, and was a great advantage to us, for in a short time, either by gestures and signs, or by words, we were enabled to understand each other. These men are still travelling with me, and although they have been with us now a long time, they continue to entertain the idea that I have descended from heaven; and on our arrival at any new place they published this, crying out immediately with a loud voice to the other Indians, "Come, come and look upon beings of a celestial race": upon which both women and men, children and adults, young men and old, when they got rid of the fear they at first entertained, would come out in throngs, crowding the roads to see us, some bringing food, others drink, with astonishing affection and kindness. Each of these islands has a great number of canoes, built of solid wood, narrow and not unlike our double-banked boats in length and shape, but swifter in their motion: they steer them only by the oar. These canoes are of various sizes, but the greater number are constructed with eighteen banks of oars, and with these they cross to the other islands, which are of countless number, to carry on traffic with the people. I saw some of these canoes that held as many as seventy-eight rowers. In all these islands there is no difference of physiognomy, of manners, or of language, but they all clearly understand each other, a circumstance very propitious for the realization of what I conceive to be the principal wish of our most serene King, namely, the conversion of these people to the holy faith of Christ, to which indeed, as far as I can judge, they are very favourable and well-disposed. I said before, that I went three hundred and twenty-two miles in a direct line from west to east, along the coast of the island of Juana; judging by which voyage, and the length of the passage, I can assert that it is larger than England and Scotland united; for independent of the said three hundred and twenty-two miles, there are in the western part of the island two provinces which I did not visit; one of these is called by the Indians Anam, and its inhabitants are born with tails. These provinces extend to a hundred and fifty-three miles in length, as I have learnt from the Indians whom I have brought with me, and who are well acquainted with the country. But the extent of Española is greater than all Spain from Catalonia to Fontarabia, which is easily proved, because one of its four sides which I myself coasted in a direct line, from west to east, measures five hundred and forty miles. This island is to be regarded with especial interest, and not to be slighted; for although as I have said I took possession of all these islands in the name of our indivisible King, and the government of them is unreservedly committed to his said Majesty, yet there was one large town in Española of which especially I took possession, situated in a remarkably favourable spot, and in every way convenient for the purposes of gain and commerce. To this town I gave the name of Navidad del Señor, and ordered a fortress to be built there, which must by this time be completed, in which I left as many men as I thought necessary, with all sorts of arms, and enough provisions for more than a year. I also left them one caravel, and skilful workmen both in ship-building and other arts, and engaged the favour and friendship of the King of the island in their behalf, to a degree that would not be believed, for these people are so amiable and friendly that even the King took a pride in calling me his brother. But supposing their feelings should become changed, and they should wish to injure those who have remained in the fortress, they could not do so, for they have no arms, they go naked, and are moreover too cowardly; so that those who hold the said fortress, can easily keep the whole island in check, without any pressing danger to themselves, provided they do not transgress the directions and regulations which I have given them. As far as I have learned, every man throughout these islands is united to but one wife, with the exception of the kings and princes, who are allowed to have twenty: the women seem to work more than the men. I could not clearly understand whether the people possess any private property, for I observed that one man had the charge of distributing various things to the rest, but specially meat and provisions and the like. I did not find, as some of us had expected, any cannibals amongst them, but on the contrary men of great deference and kindness. Neither are they black, like the Ethiopians: their hair is smooth and straight: for they do not dwell where the rays of the sun strike most vividly, — and the sun has intense power there, the distance from the equinoctial line being, it appears, but six-and-twenty degrees. On the tops of the mountains the cold is very great, but the effect of this upon the Indians is lessened by their being accustomed to the climate, and by their frequently indulging in the use of very hot meats and drinks. Thus, as I have already said, I saw no cannibals, nor did I hear of any, except in a certain island called Charis,⁸ which is the second from Española on the side towards India, where dwell a people who are considered by the neighbouring islanders as most ferocious: and these feed upon human flesh. The same people have many kinds of canoes, in which they cross to all the surrounding islands and rob and plunder wherever they can; they are not different from the other islanders, except that they wear their hair long, like women, and make use of the bows and javelins of cane, with sharpened spear-points fixed on the thickest end, which I have before described, and therefore they are looked upon as ferocious, and regarded by the other Indians with unbounded fear; but I think no more of them than of the rest. These are the men who form unions with certain women, who dwell alone in the island Matenin,⁹ which lies next to Española on the side towards India; these latter employ themselves in no labour suitable to their own sex, for they use bows and javelins as I have already described their paramours as doing, and for defensive armour have plates of brass, of which metal they possess great abundance. They assure me that there is another island larger than Española, whose inhabitants have no hair, and which abounds in gold more than any of the rest. I bring with me individuals of this island and of the others that I have seen, who are proofs of the facts which I state. Finally, to compress into few words the entire summary of my voyage and speedy return, and of the advantages derivable therefrom, I promise, that with a little assistance afforded me by our most invincible sovereigns, I will procure them as much gold as they need, as great a quantity of spices, of cotton, and of mastic (which is only found in Chios), and as many men for the service of the navy as their Majesties may require. I promise also rhubarb and other sorts of drugs, which I am persuaded the men whom I have left in the aforesaid fortress have found already and will continue to find; for I myself have tarried no where longer than I was compelled to do by the winds, except in the city of Madidad, while I provided for the building of the fortress, and took the necessary precautions for the perfect security of the men I left there. Although all I have related may appear to be wonderful and unheard of, yet the results of my voyage would have been more astonishing if I had had at my disposal such ships as I required. But these great and marvellous results are not to be attributed to any merit of mine, but to the holy Christian faith, and to the piety and religion of our Sovereigns; for that which the unaided intellect of man could not compass, the spirit of God has granted to human exertions, for God is wont to hear the prayers of his servants who love his precepts even to the performance of apparent impossibilities. Thus it has happened to me in the present instance, who have accomplished a task to which the powers of mortal men had never hitherto attained; for if there have been those who have anywhere written or spoken of these islands, they have done so with doubts and conjectures, and no one has ever asserted that he has seen them, on which account their writings have been looked upon as little else than fables. Therefore let the king and queen, our princes and their most happy kingdoms, and all the other provinces of Christendom, render thanks to our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, who has granted us so great a victory and such prosperity. Let processions be made, and sacred feasts be held, and the temples be adorned with festive boughs. Let Christ rejoice on earth, as he rejoices in heaven in the prospect of the salvation of the souls of so many nations hitherto lost. Let us also rejoice, as well on account of the exaltation of our faith, as on account of the increase of our temporal prosperity, of which not only Spain, but all Christendom will be partakers.

Such are the events which I have briefly described. Farewell.

Lisbon, the 14th of March.

Christopher Columbus,
Admiral of the Fleet of the Ocean.

¹ Mr. Major's translation of the letter itself is faithful to the text of this edition. Variations, however, exist in the title and colophon; no original, for instance, is to be found for the words "and Isabella" in the translated title. All notes, with the exception of the present one, are borrowed from Mr. Major.

² A strange mistake has crept into the Latin versions of this letter; in all the editions of which it is stated that Cadiz was the point from which Columbus sailed on his first voyage. In the journal of that voyage, published by Mr. Navarrete, as well as in the accounts given by Don Fernando Columbus, and all other historians, it is distinctly said that he sailed from Palos, on the third of August. The mistake evidently consists in the word "Gadibus" having been by some circumstance, at which we can only guess, carelessly exchanged for Gomera, whence Columbus started, according to the journal, on the eighth of September.

Costume.

The following list of works on costume is not a bibliography, but simply a handy list for the convenience of readers. As a rule uncivilized races are not included. These can be found in works on ethnology, like Ratzel's (2231.100), or in books of travel. Modern costumes can be found in the various periodicals given below. Works devoted to single articles, like boots, hats, armor, etc., should be sought for in the card catalogue under these words. B. is for Boston, L. for London, and P. for Paris in imprints. A lengthy note on costume was printed in the Bulletin (vol. 2, no. 33, pp. 348-350) for April, 1875; the present list contains, of course, important books added since that date.

Puritan or Pilgrim.

There are illus. of the costumes of early Puritan times in *8091.61.3; 2520.16, and several other histories of English costumes.

Portraits.

In many instances the most satisfactory illus. can be found in collections of portraits in which the library is very strong. The collections given by Miss Thayer and her sisters have been indexed to the number of about 20,000. Collections by Lodge (2451.11), Knight (G.140.4), Procter (G.3751.8), and others, will be found valuable and authentic.

By Countries.

It should always be remembered in consulting this list, that the titles given under the name of a country are not the only ones on the subjects. Some of the comprehensive works, such as Kretschmer (6251.1) and Racinet (2275.61), are more satisfactory than those strictly limited to one country.

Notes.

BATES HALL. — Many more readers can now be accommodated in Bates Hall by reason of the removal of the Card Catalogue from the centre to the sides of the hall, and the reduction of space hitherto used for official purposes; the room reserved for special students will also now accommodate more readers.

MISS SARAH BUNKER, former Librarian of Roxbury Branch from 1877 to 1886, died on November 8, 1890.

JOHN BROWN'S DIARY. — The Library has received, from Mrs. Sarah A. McKim, the diary of John Brown, the abolitionist. It is in two volumes, the first running from December, 1838, to February, 1845; the second from 1855 to June 9th, 1859, the year of his death. This diary was given to James Miller McKim, by the widow of John Brown, in 1859. It is described by Mr. W. P. Garrison, in the Andover Review for December, 1890, and January, 1891. In connection with this interesting subject, a letter from John Brown, Jr., appears in the Nation for December 25, 1890.

It appears from the Letter of the President of the Trustees of the Public Library to His Honor the Mayor, dated December 29, 1890, that there were added to the Library during the eleven months ending December 1, 1890, 15,882 volumes, making the whole number of bound volumes on that date 536,390. During the same time there were lent 1,051,790 volumes, or 72,238 more than during a corresponding period of the year previous; and for use in the reading-rooms 573,216 books and periodicals. The whole number of persons registered to hold Library cards is 83,891, of which 13,357 were added during the first eleven months of 1890. Two new Delivery stations were established, one at Ashmont, and one at Dorchester Station, making ten in all, besides eight Branch libraries. Of these stations, three have reading-rooms attached.

NEW LIBRARY BUILDING. — The iron work of the roof is finished. The tiling, now well advanced, will be rapidly pushed to completion. There was expended upon the building during the past year the sum of $565,227.60; the amount previously expended was $407,535.32; making a total expenditure to January 1, 1891, of $972,762.92. There has been a total appropriation of $1,368,854.89; and obligations have been incurred to the amount of $1,353,370.13; leaving an available balance of $15,484.75. From careful estimates, submitted by the architect, it is believed that $850,000 more will be required for completion. — (Extracts from the letter of the President of the Trustees to the Mayor, of December 29, 1890.)
