Since Virtue can't defend us from the Grave,
And all this hard but equal Fate must have,
What's then our hope, but this, to rise with him
Who triumph'd over Death, yet dy'd for Sin.
Such was the Fate of her who now we trust
Has reach't the Glorious Mansions of the Just.
Then, Reader, spare thy Tears, prepare to inherit
The everlasting Rest of this departed Spirit,
Whose righteous footsteps, if thou trace and so canst dye,
Dread not the silent Tomb, but fix thy thoughts on high.

Whom it were unpardonable to lay down in silence and of whom 'tis difficult to speak with justice For her just character will look like Flattery

T

And

An. Dom.
1692.

And the least abatement of this injury to her Memory
In every condition of Life She was a pattern to her Sex
Appear'd Mistress of those peculiar qualities
That were requisite to conduct her through it with Honour
And never faild to exert them in their proper Seasons
With the utmost advantage.

She was modest without Affectation
Easy without Levity and reserved without Pride
Knew how to stoop without sinking
And to gain Peoples Affections without lessening their regards.

She was carefull without Anxiety,
Frugal without Parsimony,
Not at all fond of the superfluous trappings of Greatness
Yet abridged her self in nothing that her Quality requir'd.

She was a faithfull Member of the Church of England
Her Piety was exemplary, her Charity universal,
She found her self a Widow in the beginning of her Lite
When the temptations of Beauty, Honour, Youth, and Pleasure
Were in their full Strength,

Yet she made them all give way to the interest of her Family
And betook her self entirely to the Matrons part:
The Education of her Children engross'd all her Cares,
No charge was spared in the cultivation of their minds
Nor any pains in the improvement of their Fortunes,
In a Word,

She was truly Wise, truly Honourable, and truly Good,
More can scarce be said,

And yet he that says this, knew her well
And is well assured he has said nothing
Which either Veracity or Modesty should oblige him to suppress.

Stay Reader & observe Deaths partial Doom,
A spreading Virtue in a narrow Tombe;
A Generous mind mingled with common dust,
Like burnish'd Steel cover'd & left to rust.
Dark in the Earth he lyes, in whom did shine
All the divided merits of his line.
The Lustre of his name seems faded here,
No fairer Star in all that fruitfull Sphere.
In Piety & Parts extreamly bright,
Clear was his Youth & fill'd with growing Light.
A Morn that promis'd much, yet saw no Noon;
None ever rose so fast & set so soon.
All lines of Worth were centred here in one,
Yet see he lies in Shades whose Life had none.
But while the Mother this sad Structure rears,
A double Dissolution there appears,
He into dust dissolves, she into Tears.

Reader, stay, it is but just,

Thou dost not tread on common dust.

For underneath this Stone doth lye

One whose Name can never die.

Trace her thro' all the Series of Life

You'l find her free from Envy Hate & Strife

A Duteous Child, and then a Virtuous Wife.

A Loving, kind, & prudent Mother,

Who left a good example for all other.

She would have taught you, when you are perplex't

And lost in this World, how to find the next.

O how shall we enough her Worth commend?

So good a Christian, & so true a Friend,

She'd take Offence, but never would offend.

A Holy Widdow patient & divine,

In Government & conduct most sublime.
