REPORT FOR THE YEAR ENDING DECEMBER 31st, 1869.

THE year 1869 was one of unusual interest in the history of the London Fever Hospital. It was signalised by the reappearance of a great epidemic of Relapsing Fever, which for many years had been unknown in London, and it closed that long series in which the Hospital was the only institution in London for preventing the spread of contagious fever, and in which its statistics furnished the best, and in fact the only reliable, test of the prevalence in the metropolis, not only of contagious fever, but of its individual forms.

The number of patients admitted into the Hospital during the year was 3411. This number was exceeded in three previous years, viz. : in 1864, 1866, and 1868, when the numbers were respectively, 3610, 3577, and 3657; the excess of these years over 1869 being 199, 166, and 246. In the course of the past eight years (1862-69) the number of patients admitted has amounted to 25,220, or to considerably more than three-fourths of the aggregate admissions during the previous sixty years of the Hospital's existence (32,250). As pointed out in the last Report, this great increase in the number of persons who have sought relief from the Hospital of late years must not be ascribed solely to an increased prevalence of fever, but must be attributed partly to an altered policy on the part of the Committee of Management, whereby, instead of rejecting patients when the wards have been full, the Hospital has from time to time been extended to meet the requirements of the public, and partly to the parochial authorities having been roused at last to a sense of the danger of treating cases of contagious fever in the wards workhouse infirmaries, and to their now transferring all such cases at once to the Fever Hospital.

The female patients admitted in 1868 exceeded the male by 215; but in 1869 the males were 7 in excess of the females.

The number of admissions was large in every month of the year From 325 in January it fell to 166 in July, and then it rapidly 1869. rose until, in November and December, it reached the unprecedented numbers of 472 and 511. In October and November 1868 the admissions had been 420 and 409; but, with these exceptions, in no previous year had the admissions in one month amounted to 400. At no previous time in the history of the Hospital has the rush for admissions been so great as it was in the last two months of 1869. The daily average number of patients in Hospital for the entire year The lowest daily average for one month was 118 in July; was 202. the highest was 350 in December. The last number exceeded the highest average for any previous month since the foundation of the The largest number of patients ever in the Hospital by 71. Hospital at one time was 405, on December 31st, 1869; the smallest number during 1869 was 97, on July 27. A comparison with the corresponding figures for 1868 will show that the fluctuations were much greater in 1869.

In the following Table the number of patients admitted and treated during 1869 is contrasted with the corresponding number for the seven previous years :—

* Commencement of the present Typhus epidemic.

Of the 3411 patients admitted during the past year, 3101 were suffering from specific fevers; while in 310 the febrile symptoms were the result of local disease, the nature of which was obscure or had been misapprehended. Of the specific fevers there were of Concerning each kind of fever a few particulars may be giver.

TYPHUS FEVER, or the fever whose origin and propagation are due to destitution and overcrowding, is the disease on which the variations in the number of admissions into the Fever Hospital mainly depends. The small number of patients admitted in the years 1858-61, and the unprecedented numbers in the last eight years, have been in a great measure due to the almost complete absence of typhus in the former case, and to its great prevalence in In the year 1858 the number of patients admitted with the latter. typhus was only 15, and during seven months only one case was observed; but in the last eight years the annual number has varied from 1260 to 2497, and of the total 25,220 cases admitted, 13,953 have been cases of typhus. The number of typhus cases, however, in 1869 was less than in any of the other seven years during which the present epidemic has lasted. It is further to be noted that the admissions for typhus, which in January amounted to 220, gradually fell to 28 in September, and that, although after this they began to increase, the increase was small as compared with what usually has been observed towards the close of the year. Judging, however, from the experience of former epidemics, it is to be feared that, as the present epidemic of relapsing fever subsides, typhus will again become widely prevalent. Throughout the epidemic thenumber of females (7109) admitted with typhus has been slightly in excess of that of males (6844). In 1869 the females exceeded the males by 64. As usual, a large proportion of the typhus patients admitted during the past year had been out of employment and in a destitute state for a long time prior to their attack. Of the 1260. cases, all excepting 29 were paupers admitted by parish orders, and only 19, or 1.5 per cent., were either policemen or paid a fee. The localities from which they were mainly brought were the poorest and most densely crowded of the eastern, southern, and central districts of London (See Table, p. 26).

Of the 1260 Typhus patients admitted during 1869, the characteristic eruption on the skin was noted in 1221, or in 97 percent. Of the few cases where it was not noted, most were in families. of which other members had suffered from undoubted typhus, and in some the eruption had probably disappeared before admission. Of 1390 cases of typhus treated to the termination of their illness. during the year, 259 died, or 18.6 per cent. Among the male patients the mortality was 20.06 per cent.; among the females 16.84 per cent. Deducting 3 cases dead on admission, 25 in which death occurred within 24 hours of admission, and 3 others in which the patients recovered from the typhus, but died of subsequent diseases, the mortality was reduced to 16.77 per cent.; and deucting 27 other cases, fatal within forty-eight hours of admission, the mortality among those fairly under treatment was only 15.08 per cent. Of the fatal cases of typhus a large number were complicated with local diseases, as will be seen from the subjoined Table :

But the circumstances that most influenced the rate of mortality of typhus was the age of the patients. The annexed Table* of the patients admitted during 1869 shows that nearly one-third of the entire number were above forty years age, and also that age exercises a remarkable influence on the rate of mortality. Thus, of 277 cases between the ages of 5 and 15, only 6, or 2.16 per cent., were fatal; whereas, of 121 patients over fifty years of age 77, or 63.63 per cent., died.

^{*} This Table refers solely to the patients admitted during 1869, all of whose diseases have now terminated. Patients admitted in 1869 and dying in 1870 are included among the deaths. This accounts for the total numbers of the Table not corresponding to those in the text, in which the calculation is based on the number of patients treated until the termination of their illness in 1869. It is important also to note that among the deaths are included those patients dead on admission, or who died of other diseases than that for which they were admitted.

TYPHUS FEVER.¹

In the last Report (for 1868) attention was called to the reappearance in London of the remarkable disease known as RELAPSING FEVER, in the following terms :---

- ¹ See note at foot of page 9.
- ² A male, aged 21, died of Pneumonia, after recovering from Typhus.
- ³ A male, aged 28, died of Pleurisy, after recovering from Typhus.
- ⁴ A male, aged 36, was dead on admission.
- ⁵ A male, aged 65, was dead on admission.
- ⁶ A female, aged 17, died of Enteric Fever after recovering from Typhus.
- ⁷ A female, aged 36, was dead on admission.
- ⁸ A female, aged 51, died of Pneumonia after recovering from Typhus.

"Not one case of the disease known as Relapsing Fever, whose prevalence is connected with extreme destitution in a more intimate degree than even that of typhus, and which constituted a great part of the Irish epidemic fever that followed the potato famine of 1846-7, had been admitted into the Hospital for 14 years. But on July 4, 1868, a girl aged 20 was admitted, from 12, Easington's Buildings, Whitechapel,* who presented the usual symptoms of the disease. She was of Irish birth, but had resided for 8 years in London, and had not been in a particularly destitute condition. Four days later, a Polish Jewess, aged 32, who could not speak English, and whose length of residence in London could not be ascertained, was received from 8, Inkhouse Court, Whitechapel, with the same disease, and on July 30, a third case was admitted from 9, Inkhouse Court—a girl aged 14, who had resided in London all her life. In addition to these three cases, it may be added that a girl, aged 7, who had lived in London all her life, was admitted on the same day and from the same house as the first case, whose illness was registered as "febricula," and was probably also relapsing fever; and that on July 6, a Polish family, consisting of father, mother, and child, were admitted from 8, Inkhouse Court, in a state of extreme debility and destitution, without any marked febrile symptoms during the seven days that they remained in the Hospital. There is no evidence of the recent existence of relapsing fever in Ireland or elsewhere in the British dominions, but during the past year German physicians have noted the prevalence of relapsing fever in East Prussia and Poland, and have ascribed it to 'the great destitution and want of food,' and since the 1st of September, 1868, a considerable number of Polish Jews, most of whom had been lately residing in Whitechapel, have been admitted into the German Hospital in London, suffering from wellmarked relapsing fever. It is probable, therefore, that in the few instances of relapsing fever observed at the London Fever Hospital, the disease had been contracted from Polish immigrants."

For nine months after the cases admitted into the London Fever Hospital in July, 1868, no other examples of the disease were observed there; but in May, 1869, it reappeared. In May 4 cases were admitted: the first, on May 2nd, being a charwoman aged 38, from Lambeth Workhouse, who was a native of Ireland, but had resided in London for ten years; in June, 3 cases were admitted; in July, 7; and in August, 15. After this the number rapidly increased, the admissions for the last four months of the year being 37, 129, 259, and 315, and those for the entire year, 769. From the Table at page 26 it will be seen that the patients suffering from relapsing fever were brought from almost every parish in the metropolis; but four of the thirty-six parishes, viz. : Whitechapel (117), St. Giles (117), Camberwell (105), and Bethnal Green (48), furnished alone 387 cases, or more than one-half of the entire number. Of the first 70 cases, one-half were derived from the two parishes-Bethnal Green (18), and Whitechapel (17). Whitechapel was the parish which furnished the few stray cases of relapsing fever to the Fever and German Hospitals in 1868; but in connexion with the origin of the present epidemic it ought to be mentioned that not only had the first patient in 1868 resided for 8 years in London, but that not one of the first 70 cases admitted into the Fever Hospital in 1869 came from the same houses, or even streets, as the patients admitted into the Fever and German Hospitals in 1868. Moreover, none of the relapsing patients admitted in 1869 were natives of Germany or Scotland; few had been born in Ireland, and of these none had recently arrived from that country. There is no evidence, also, of relapsing fever having appeared recently either in Scotland or in Ireland.* With rare exceptions the patients admitted with the disease into the Fever Hospital had been in a deplorable state of destitution—far greater than that of the average of typhus patients. Even the nurses of the Hospital were strongly impressed with this fact. A large proportion of the entire number were "tramps," who had travelled long distances in search of work, and many of whom appeared to arrive in London with the fever upon them. This remark applied especially to Camberwell, most of the 105 patients furnished by that parish having arrived in the parish only a few days before being brought to the Fever Hospital. Many of the patients admitted during September and October had only just returned from hop-picking in Kent, where they had been sleeping in barns and under hedges and eating unwholesome food; several patients, for instance, stating that they had eaten nothing for weeks except turnips and unripe fruit. Hawkers, costermongers, and charwomen, constituted another large proportion of the cases of relapsing fever. The ages of the patients admitted varied from twelve months to upwards of seventy (see Table, p. 14). The number of males (474) was greatly in excess of that of females (295). There was abundant evidence that a previous attack of typhus conferred no immunity from relapsing fever, and that this again gave no exemption from typhus. One remarkable illustration is worth noting. A nurse, who had typhus nearly twenty years ago, and has since been daily exposed to it with impunity, was seized with a very severe attack of relapsing fever in July, before a dozen cases of this disease had been admitted. Relapsing Fever, though a more painful disease, presents a striking contrast to typhus in the small rate of its mortality. Of the 769 patients suffering from it, only 17 died, and deducting one patient, whose death was due to a subsequent attack of typhus, the rate of mortality was only 2 per cent. Deducting one case fatal within twenty-four hours of admission, the mortality was 1.95 per cent., and deducting two others fatal within forty-eight hours of admission, it was reduced to 1.7 per cent. The few patients, moreover, who died were debilitated by old age, by previous organic disease, or by serious complications. Of the 16 fatal cases 10 were above 50 years of age, and 7 above 60; whereas, of 393 patients under 25, only 1 died, and of 261 under 20, not one.

ENTERIC FEVER is the fever whose prevalence is connected with bad drainage and bad drinking water, and which is characterised by a tendency to increase in autumn, or after a long continuance of hot During the seventeen years, 1848-64, the annual adweather. missions for enteric fever varied from 137 to 252, except in 1860, remarkable for its cold and rainy summer, when only 94 cases were admitted, owing to an absence of the ordinary autumnal increase. But during the four years 1865-8, the admissions for enteric fever numbered 520, 575, 378, and 461. But a small proportion of this remarkable increase could fairly be referred to the increased accommodation arising from the extension of the Hospital, and there can be little doubt that the excessive prevalence of this disease in London, and throughout England, was in a great measure to be ascribed to an exaggeration of the climatic conditions that habitually favour its development-to circumstances, in fact, the converse of what were noted in 1860. It was during the extreme heat of 1865, that tropical Yellow Fever was for the first time introduced into England; it was in the remarkably hot July of 1866 that the last epidemic of Asiatic cholera broke out in London; and the tropical summer of 1868 is still fresh in our memories. In the year 1869 there was a considerable falling off in the admissions for Enteric Fever. . They amounted to 368, or to one-fifth less than those in the previous year. This diminution was coincident with a colder summer and autumn than in any of the four previous years. The influence of this is still more obvious on referring to the number of enteric patients admitted in each month of the year (See Table, p. 7). Of the 368 patients 90, or one-fourth, were admitted in the first three months of the year, the great outbreak in the autumn of the previous year not having yet subsided; whereas the ordinary autumnal increase for 1869 was comparatively small. Thus in 1868, out of a total of 461 patients, 236, or more than one-half, were admitted in the three months, August, September, and October; but in the corresponding months of 1869 only 120, or less than one-third of the number for the entire year, were admitted. The number of males (181) admitted with enteric fever was almost the same as that of the females More than ten per cent. of the enteric patients had been in (187).comparatively comfortable circumstances, an 1 paid an admission fee;

but 330 were admitted by parish orders. The skin eruption of enteric fever was not discovered in 120 cases, or 326 per cent., the eruption being about much oftener than that of typhus. Of 364 cases of enteric fever treated in the Hospital during 1869 till the termination of their illness, 62 proved fatal, or the mortality was 1703. The rate of mortality was exactly equal in the two sexes. Deducting I case dead on admission and 6 others fatal within twenty-four hours, the mortality was 15.4 per cent.; and deducting 7 others fatal within forty-eight hours, it was 1371 per cent. In many of the fatal cases death was due to some local complication. The chief of these complications were as follows :—

The subjoined Table gives the rate of mortality of the cases of Enteric Fever admitted in 1869 for each quinquennial period of life in the two sexes. It will be seen that the mortality was not influenced by age in the same way as that of typhus. Of 143 patients between 5 and 15 years of age 21, or 147 per cent. died, whereas of 16 patients older than 40 only 3 died.

The number of cases registered under the head of SIMPLE CON-TINUED FEVER or FEBRICULA was only 53 (25 males and 28 females). This disease is never fatal in the London Fever Hospital, although the number of deaths weekly referred to it by the Registrar-General equal, if they do not exceed, those of either typhus or enteric fever.

During 1869 SCARLET FEVER was more prevalent in London and throughout England than in any year since the publication of Reports by the Registrar-General. It was not surprising, therefore, that the number of admissions for this disease in 1869 should be large beyond all precedent. Prior to 1868 the largest number of scarlet fever admissions was in 1864, when 284 cases were received; in 1868 the cases numbered 399; but in 1869 they amounted to 614 (254 males and 360 females). The mortality among the cases treated tothe termination of their illness was unusually high, being 15.3 percent. (598 cases and 92 deaths). But an unusually large proportion of the patients were almost dying at the time of admission. Deducting I case dead before reaching the Hospital, and 18cases fatal within twenty-four hours of admission, the mortality was reduced to 12.6 per cent.; and deducting 19 other cases fatal within forty-eight hours, it was further reduced to 9.64 per cent. Of the cases of Scarlatina, 51 were complicated with inflammatory enlargement and abscesses of the glands of the neck or over the parotid; 48 with rheumatism; 5 with pericarditis or endocarditis; 16 with pleuro-pneumonia; 10 with otorrhœa; 3 with epistaxis; 7 with diarrhœa; I with jaundice; 2 with œdema glottidis; 3 with erysipelas; and 5 with renal dropsy. In two of these last 5 cases. the dropsy existed on admission. The rarity of this common but formidable complication in the Fever Hospital is, no doubt, due to» the rule that no patient, even with a mild attack, shall leave his bed within three weeks from the beginning of his illness.

* See note to Table at page 9.

+ A male patient, aged 19, was dead on admission.

The 11 fatal cases of MEASLES occurred in infants, mostly scrofulous constitution, and only a few months old, most of whom ought never to have been brought to the Hospital. Death was in every instance due to severe pulmonary complications, aggravated in several by their journey to the Hospital.

The Table on p. 19 shows the multifarious nature of the "Other Diseases" sent to the Fever Hospital, the patient in every instance having been certified to be suffering from "contagious fever." It has always been the policy of the Hospital to take in cases that are likely to become fever of a contagious nature, as well as the actually developed disease, in order to encourage the speedy removal of fever cases at their earliest stages. The physicians, while acknowledging that there is often much difficulty in deciding whether a particular case is or is not likely to become contagious fever, are well aware that patients are often sent to the Hospital, whose illness is clearly of a non-contagious character. It is satisfactory, therefore, to observe that the number of such cases admitted during 1869

* One case of Pneumonia died of Typhus contracted in the Hospital. Many of the patients suffering from Pneumonia were of an advanced age, and in most there were Typhoid symptoms on admission.

(viz., 310) was much below the average, and was less than one-half of that for the previous year (661). This diminution was, perhaps, partly attributable to greater discrimination on the part of the parish authorities, but was also due in great measure to a larger number than usual of unfit patients being sent away after reaching the The mortality among these cases was high, as it always Hospital.* It is only when cases of acute local disease assume a has been. severe asthenic type that they are liable to be mistaken for contagious fever, and to be sent to the Hospital. After deducting 10 cases transferred to the parish infirmaries or other hospitals, 304 cases were treated to the end of their illness, of which 82, or 27 per cent., were fatal. But deducting 13 cases fatal within 24 hours of admission, the mortality was 23.71 per cent.; and deducting 11 other cases fatal within 48 hours of admission, it was reduced to 20.7 per cent.

Of the total number of patients in the Hospital in 1869, after deducting 12 cases of small-pox and other diseases which were transferred to other hospitals, 3266 were under treatment till the termination of their illness, and of this number 520 died, or the mortality was 15.92 per cent. Deducting 68 cases, of which 5 were dead before reaching the Hospital, and the remainder were moribund or died within 24 hours of admission, the mortality fell to 14.13 per cent.; and deducting 66 other cases fatal within 48 hours of admission, the mortality was only 12.32 per cent. Of 2330 cases of typhus, relapsing fever, enteric fever, and febricula, ordinarily included under the common designations of "continued fever" or "typhus," 335, or 14.37 per cent., died. Deducting 4 cases dead before reaching the Hospital, and 32 dying within 24 hours of admission, the mortality fell to 13.03 per cent.; and deducting 36 others fatal within 48 hours, the mortality was only 11.64 per cent. This unusually low rate of mortality was due to the large proportion of cases of relapsing fever.

The large number of contagious cases admitted during the year

* Since April 13th a register has been kept of all the patients sent away as unfit for admission, and from that date till December 31 they amounted to 68. have not been treated with immunity to the attendants. Out of a total number of 124 employed during the year in attending to the sick, 1 of the resident medical officers, 6 nurses, 2 bath-women, and the cook, contracted typhus; 1 resident medical officer, 7 nurses, 2 scrubbers, 1 laundry-maid, and 1 housemaid took relapsing fever.* Two nurses and 1 housemaid took scarlet fever; 1 nurse caught small-pox; and 1 laundry-maid and 1 kitchen-maid suffered from enteric fever—making a total of 28 attendants on the sick who took fever during the year. Of this number, 24 recovered, but 2 nurses, aged 35 and 36, and 2 bath-women, aged 30, died of typhus.

The Committee regret to find that the large number of the attendants who have taken fever is still due to the frequent changes in the staff of seasoned nurses and other attendants. During the past year no fewer than 70 fresh officials have been engaged, which is more than equivalent to an entire change of the Hospital staff; and yet it is well known that nurses when once protected by an attack of fever have remained in the Hospital for many years afterwards with impunity. In a staff of seasoned nurses none would be attacked, and yet in the last two years alone as many seasoned nurses have left the Hospital as would suffice to meet its present requirements. The fear of fever does not prevent nurses entering on the service, and therefore it would seem either that their pay is insufficient, or that there is some other cause, unknown to the Committee, that prevents them remaining. The matter is one, however, which will receive their careful consideration.

In addition to the attendants who contracted fever, 8 out of 2151 patients admitted with other diseases than typhus took this fever, which in one instance was fatal.⁺ Three out of 2642 patients admitted with other diseases than relapsing fever contracted this disease, but all recovered;* and 5 patients caught enteric fever, of whom I died.† Of the 5 patients attacked with enteric fever, not one was under treatment in the same wards with patients 'suffering from this disease. It is satisfactory to add, that notwithstanding the large number of patients admitted with scarlet fever, viz., 614, not one of the 2797 patients admitted with other diseases contracted it. This fact speaks volumes in favour of the system of classification of patients adopted at the Hospital during the last 8 years. The system of isolating the cases of scarlet fever has been rigidly maintained throughout the year; but during the great pressure at the end of the year the classification of the other patients was occasionally broken through, and this accounted in a great measure for the diseases contracted by patients in the Hospital.

^{*} Of the twelve attendants, &c., who took relapsing fever, seven had previously passed through an attack of typhus.

[†] When admitted, two of these patients were suffering from enteric fever, two from scarlet fever, three from relapsing fever, and one with bronchitis. It was one of the patients admitted with relapsing fever who died.

Mischievous fallacies can hardly be too often refuted, and it is therefore worth while to insist again that a few casualties of this sort in the Fever Hospital constitute no reason for diffusing fever cases through the wards of general hospitals. The objections raised against Fever Hospitals are two—viz., I, that the concentration of the poison lessens the chances of the patient's recovery ; and, 2, that the concentration of the poison increases the danger to the attendants. The validity of these objections may be tested by comparing the results of the London Fever Hospital with those of six of the principal general hospitals in the metropolis.

During the first six months of 1862, 1107 cases of true typhus were under treatment in the London Fever Hospital, of which number 232 died, or the mortality was 20'95 per cent. In the same period, 343 cases of typhus were under treatment in six of the large general hospitals in London, of which number 80 died, or ^{*} When admitted, one was suffering from ague, one from pneumonia, and one from typhus.

⁺ When admitted, three were suffering from scarlet fever, and two from typhus. It was one of those admitted with typhus who died.

23.32 per cent. The 1080 (1107-27) cases admitted into the Fever Hospital communicated the disease to 27 persons, of whom 8 died. In other words, only 1 person took the fever for every 40 admitted, and only 1 died for every 135. But the 272 cases admitted into the six general hospitals communicated the disease to 71 persons, of whom 21 died; or 1 person caught the fever for every 3.8 cases admitted, and 1 life was lost for every 12.6 cases admitted. The experience of 1869 would be much more in favour of the Fever Hospital, notwithstanding the large number of nurses attacked. Thus the mortality in the past year, among the typhus patients, was only 20.06 per cent., although more than one-fifth of the entire deaths occurred within 48 hours of the patient's admission; while only 1 person took the fever for every 74 admitted, and only 1 life was lost for every 74 admitted, and only 1 life was lost for every 74 admitted.

It appears, then, that the objections raised against a Fever Hospital with thorough ventilation, however plausible in theory, are not justified by facts, and that a given number of typhus patients can be treated on the plan of isolation with equal advantage to themselves and with far less danger to the attendants and other patients than in the wards of a general hospital. With perfect ventilation, there need be no more concentration of fever-poison in a fever ward than in a general ward with a sprinkling of fever cases, and in the former case there will be no danger of other patients contracting fever. It may fairly be asked, what would have been the effect if there had been no Fever Hospital in London, and if the 14,000 cases of contagious typhus admitted into it during the last eight years had been distributed through the general hospitals, in addition to the few hundreds actually treated in them.

The patients received into the Fever Hospital may be divided into three classes—viz., I, domestic servants, policemen, clerks, shopmen in houses of business, and members of private families, for whom an admission-fee of two Guineas is paid; 2, working men and members of their families, who are admitted free; and 3, the poor who are either inmates of the metropolitan workhouses, or who, in sickness, are compelled to seek parochial relief. In 1869, as in former years, the patients belonging to the pauperclass greatly outnumbered those of the other classes, constituting, ina fact, upwards of 91 per cent. of the total admissions, as will be seen. by the following table :—

The proportion of pauper cases has increased considerably within the last few years, owing, no doubt, to the parochial authorities enter-taining more enlightened views as to their duty in regard to the fever-stricken poor, who are now sent to the Hospital, instead of being treated in their crowded dwellings or removed to the workhouses. In the next Table the patients received in 1869 are classified according to the several districts of London whence they were brought. The · Table shows also the nature and the rate of mortality of the fevers contributed by each district. It gives instructive information of a kind that especially concerns the sanitary authorities of London. When compared with the corresponding Tables in previous Reports, it shows that the districts of the metropolis in which fever is most. prevalent vary at different times. Typhus fever, for instance, in the year 1865, was most prevalent in the central and south districts, but during the last four years it has prevailed chiefly in the east districts. In the year 1869, while there has been a general decrease, this has. been greatest in the east and central districts and least in the south ;. while in the west districts there has been a slight increase. The following is an analysis of the districts from which patients suffering. from typhus were received into the Fever Hospital during the last five years, and the number from each :---

The Table also illustrates a fact dwelt on in the last Report, that the rate of mortality is not cateris paribus affected by the distance that the patient is conveyed to Hospital. The injury to a fever patient is not to be measured by the distance of his removal, but rather by the want of proper precautions during the removal, and by this being too long delayed after the commencement of the illness. If a patient suffering from severe typhus or any other fever be placed semi-erect in an ordinary cab, and thus conveyed even for a short distance, it is not surprising that on reaching the Hospital he should occasionally be found dead at the bottom of the vehicle, or that he should die a few hours after admission. Through the kindness of the "Hospital Carriage Fund," the Fever Hospital has been for some years provided with two properly constructed ambulances-one for conveying fever patients to the Fever Hospital, and the other for conveying small-pox patients to the Small-pox Hospital. These ambulances are sent to any part of London, on application being made by telegraph or otherwise to the Resident Medical Officer at the Hospital. They are, however, not intended for pauper patients, and it is therefore the duty of the parishes, which have not already done so, to provide similar ambulances for the conveyance of the. poor suffering from contagious diseases.

Till September, 1867, the payment made to the Hospital in respect of paupers was at the rate of one shilling a day, or considerably less than half the sum which they cost the institution. The Committee abstained from requiring a larger payment for this class, fearing that if they did so, parochial authorities would, in many instances, from mistaken motives of economy, retain their fever patients, unmindful of the calamitous consequences. In the interest of humanity, therefore, the Committee preferred to trust to a benevolent public to make up the deficiency in the payment made by the parochial authorities; while, in order to meet the demand for accommodation for pauper patients, the Committee during the last seven years have greatly enlarged the Hospital premises, adding two permanent wings, capable of accommodating 130 patients, besides on one occasion erecting a temporary iron shed. The result has been that during the last seven years, while the Hospital, in addition to its

* In the "Typhus," "Enteric," and "Scarlet" columns of this Table, Patients admitted free, by Governors' orders, or by payment, are classified, as far as possible ; but the Parish in which they had lived, in some instances, could not be ascertained. In the last column, those sent by the Parishes are alone considered, and the residual number, 300, includes those admitted free or by Governors' orders, or on payment of a fee. The Table refers solely to the patients admitted during 1869. Patients admitted in 1869 and dying in 1870, are included among the deaths. In comparing this Table with corresponding Tables in previous Reports, it is necessary to refer to certain changes which have taken place in the grouping of parishes under the Poor Law Board. "St. Martin's-in-the-Fields," which was formerly one of the parishes in the West District, is now grouped with the "Strand," under the Central Districts. St. Ann's, Soho, formerly a portion of the Strand Parish, and St. James's, Westminster, now constitute one parish, designated "West-minster," and the "Westminster" of previous Tables is now "St. Margaret's, Westminster."

more legitimate duties, has been discharging those which are soon to be undertaken by the new Fever Asylums, no case has been refused admission.

On the passing of the Metropolitan Poor Act of 1867 the Committee deemed it right that from the 29th of September, 1867, when the expense of maintaining fever patients chargeable to parishes was thrown on the Metropolitan Common Poor Fund, the parochial authorities should pay 2s. 4d.* per day for each patient sent by them to the Hospital, being the actual cost of maintenance of the average patient, without including what may be termed establishment expenses. This increased charge has been readily acquiesced in, and the Committee have to observe that a charge of three shillings • per day is now made by the Metropolitan Asylum Board for each patient admitted into the temporary hospital at Hampstead.

In accordance with the arrangement just referred to, the Hospital during the year 1869 received the sum of $\pounds 7639$ 18s. 4d. for pauper cases—but a small proportion, it is to be feared, of the amount which the pauper fever patients, even when far less numerous than in 1869, will, under the new arrangements, cost the ratepayers of London. This sum, though barely enabling the Committee to meet the current expenditure of the Hospital, has prevented them appealing, as in former years, to the public for increased support.

Considering the great additions made of late years to the Hospital premises, solely for the accommodation of pauper patients, which will be useless for the future and legitimate objects of the institution, the Committee have not thought themselves warranted in erecting, at their own expense, further accommodation for pauper patients since the Metropolitan Asylum Act of 1867 came into force. But in November of the past year, when, from the rapid spread of relapsing fever, the existing accommodation for fever patients threatened to be insufficient, the Committee at once came forward and undertook to erect on their grounds, at the expense of the Asylum Board, a temporary iron shed for 64 patients. This building was commenced on the 15th of November, and on the 4th of December, or within 19 days, it was opened for the reception of patients, duly warmed and furnished, and with suitable drainage and water-supply; and since then it has been in The cost of the building, including furniture, constant use. amounted to $\pounds_{2,890}$, which sum has been refunded by the Asylum The Committee believe that the two wards in the building Board. thus hastily erected may compete in comfort and suitability for the class of patients to be treated with those of any other hospital in London. For these desirable results they are mainly indebted to the constant supervision of two of their members, Mr. J. A. Bostock and Mr. William Robinson. To the latter gentleman they are also indebted for the care and time which he bestowed in superintending the extensive repairs on the Hospital premises during the autumn, and for the vigilance and interest which he has exhibited at all times in the management of the charity.

The Committee have to record the loss which they have sustained of the services of Dr. Buchanan, who has been appointed one of the Inspectors of Public Health in the Medical Department of Her Majesty's Privy Council, and they recommend that in consideration of his long and valuable services he be appointed a Vice-President of the Hospital. On Dr. Buchanan's resignation, Dr. Broadbent succeeded to the post of full Physician, and Dr. R. Thorne Thorne was elected an Assistant-Physician. The Committee have also to deplore the loss by death of an active member of their Board, the late Dr. Cuthbert Finch.*

On the 25th of last month (January 1870), a temporary hospital for the reception of 90 patients was opened at Hampstead by the Metropolitan Asylum Board, and it is believed that by September the two permanent Fever Asylums now being erected at Stockwell and Homerton will be completed. It may, therefore, fairly be anticipated that in the course of the present year the practice of sending paupers to the London Fever Hospital will cease.

^{*} At the annual meeting of Governors at which this Report was presented, Dr. Murchison resigned the office of Visiting Physician, and was elected a Vice-President and Consulting Physician of the Hospital.

The Committee are well aware that the fact of the patients consisting to so large an extent of persons from the lowest class of the poor of the metropolis has prevented other classes from resorting to the Hospital; and they do not doubt that when the pauper element is removed, domestic servants, clerks, shopmen, artisans, and even members of private families, will, in far greater numbers than heretofore, avail themselves of the special advantages which the Hospital offers. The Committee will lose no time in considering how best to adapt the Hospital to the altered circumstances in which it will shortly be placed.

When it is remembered that the Fever Hospital, in a peculiar degree, benefits not only the sick person himself, but those also from among whom he is taken, and that contagious fevers are now excluded from many of the general hospitals of the metropolis, the Institution must be regarded as in the first rank for usefulness among the great charities of the country. With this sense of the special importance of their Hospital, the Committee appeal with confidence to the public for increased support, to enable them to maintain its present efficiency, but especially to effect those changes which will be necessary when the contributions from the parishes cease.

LONDON FEVER HOSPITAL,

LIVERPOOL ROAD, ISLINGTON.

LAWS AND REGULATIONS.

Objects of the Institution.

I. ALL poor persons (not being parochial paupers) and domestic servants of subscribers, labouring under contagious fever, and residing in the metropolis or its neighbourhood, shall be considered proper objects for this charity, and shall be admitted gratuitously, according to the next regulation. Parochial paupers, domestic servants, and non-subscribers, and all inmates of other public charities (except medical hospitals), shall be admitted on the payment of such sum for each patient as the Committee shall from time to time determine.

2. On application for the admission of any patient to the Hospital, notice shall be immediately given to the resident medical officer, and the person after inspection may be admitted by an order signed by him, or on a certificate signed by any physician, surgeon, or apothecary, stating the disease to be fever of a contagious nature, or likely to become such. The order or certificate shall entitle the patient to admission, subject to the provisions contained in Rule No. I, unless the case shall be deemed an improper one by the resident medical officer, or unless the Hospital shall be full.

Governors.

3. All subscribers of one guinea annually, or of ten guineas in one donation, shall be governors of this Hospital.

General Meeting and Election of the Committee.

4. A general meeting of the governors, of which ten days' previous notice must be given in three morning newspapers, shall be held every year, on the second Friday in February, or as near thereto as may be convenient, for the purpose of approving or rescinding the proceedings of the Committee for the preceding year; for receiving an annual report of the state of the funds; and for electing a president, vice-presidents, treasurer, honorary secretary, and other members of the Committee for the ensuing year. At all meetings connected with the affairs of the Hospital, a simple majority of the governors present and voting shall bind the minority; and in case of equality of votes, the chairman shall have an additional vote or casting vote. 5. A special general meeting of the governors may at any time be called by direction of the president or of the Committee; or on the requisition of any twelve governors, provided the requisition be made in writing to the secretary, and the purpose for which the same is summoned be published in three morning newspapers at least ten days prior to the next meeting; but the proceedings of such special general meeting, though acted upon pro tempore, shall not be deemed final, until confirmed by another general meeting.

6. No new rule or law shall be made, nor shall any existing rule or law be repealed or altered, until determined upon at a general meeting by a majority of governors present and voting, and until confirmed at a subsequent general or special meeting.

7. The presence of seven governors shall be necessary to constitute a quorum at general meetings, and without that number no business shall be transacted.

8. At the annual general meeting, a Committee for the management of the Institution shall be elected, consisting of the president, the vice-presidents, the treasurer, honorary secretary, and twenty-four other governors; four of which governors shall not have been members of the preceding Committee. They shall meet on the last Friday, or on such other day of every month as the Committee may appoint; and three members shall be necessary to constitute a meeting, and to transact business. A special meeting of the Committee may be called by the direction of the treasurer, or by any three members of the Committee, on giving at least three days' notice of the same, and specifying the business for which it is called.

9. The Committee shall have authority to appoint sub-committees, whose reports shall be submitted to their consideration; they shall elect all the officers, except the physicians of the Hospital and the honorary secretary, who shall be elected by the governors at large; and, with the assistance of the medical officers, shall form regulations and bye-laws for the internal management of the Hospital.

IO. The resolutions of one meeting of the Committee shall not be rescinded by another, unless it be specially summoned for that purpose. All accounts, except such small sums as may be comprised under the item of petty cash, shall be submitted to the Committee at the monthly meetings, after having been duly examined by the secretary, the resident medical officer, and the house-directors; and such accounts, if approved, shall be paid by cheques payable to order, signed in Committee by the chairman and one other member, or, in case a Committee cannot be formed, by two of the house-directors, and in all cases countersigned by the secretary. All the larger articles of supply, when practicable, shall be furnished by contract made after public tender. No expenditure for repairs of premises or any machinery shall be incurred, without a written order from the Committee or house-directors. 11. The Committee shall yearly publish a report of the state of the Hospital.

12. No person being a member of the Committee shall furnish for profit any goods, provisions, or other articles, for the use of, or on account of, the Hospital, or be concerned in any contract for supplying the same, or be employed for hire, or wages, or profit, in any office or employment under the charity.

Treasurer.

13. The treasurer, if present, shall take the chair at all meetings of the Committee, in the absence of the president or vice-presidents. He shall keep an account at the bankers, and all moneys received for the use of the Hospital shall be paid to such account; he shall honour all cheques signed, as provided in Rule 10; and the signature of the secretary shall be a sufficient warranty that the cheques purporting to be so signed are properly signed, and shall be an indemnity to the treasurer against risk.

Auditors.

14. Three gentlemen shall be appointed annually at the meeting of the Committee in November, who shall audit the accounts of the Institution for the current year, and approve an abstract of all receipts and disbursements to be prepared by the secretary, and laid before the annual general meeting in February.

Monthly Directors.

15. The Committee shall at each monthly meeting appoint three members of their own body as directors of the Hospital, of whom two shall be a quorum, and who shall continue in office until the next monthly meeting of the Committee. The trustees and the two senior physicians shall be ex officio directors of the Hospital, in addition to three members to be appointed at each monthly meeting, as provided by this rule.

16. They shall from time to time cause the beds, clothes, and apparel belonging to the Hospital to be examined, and shall report thereon, if necessary, to the Committee. They shall inspect the tradesmen's bills, and take care that the provisions, bedding, clothing, furniture, and every article for the use of the Hospital, be supplied on the most reasonable terms ; they shall order in writing all permanent stores.

17. They shall be authorised in all respects to enforce the observance of the regulations of the Hospital; they shall notice and report to the Committee any irregularity or misconduct on the part of the officers, servants, or patients of the charity, and shall, at every meeting of the Committee, cause a statement of the house expenditure to be produced for the preceding month. They shall appoint the porters, nurses, and other menial servants of the Hospital, and dismiss them for misconduct.

Physicians.

18. There shall be two physicians and two assistant physicians, who shall be Fellows or Members (formerly called Licentiates) of the Royal College of Physicians of London; and also a consulting surgeon, who shall be a Fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons.

19. The physicians and assistant physicians shall be elected by the governors at large; and no governor shall be qualified to vote, unless he shall have become a governor three months before a vacancy is declared.

20. One of the physicians shall visit the Hospital at least once every day, and at such times as they may deem necessary. They shall have the power of dismissing any patient or convalescent for refractory conduct or disobedience of orders.

Assistant Physicians.

21. In case of the illness or necessary absence of either of the physicians, one of the assistant physicians shall attend regularly in his stead. Such attendances are to be reported to the Committee.

Hospital Pupils.

22. No medical student shall be permitted to visit the Hospital unless in company with one of the physicians, and unless he is regularly entered or registered as a pupil.

Resident Medical Officer.

23. The resident medical officer shall reside constantly at the Hospital, and shall devote himself entirely to the duties of his office; and, previously to his election, he shall be required to produce satisfactory testimonials to the Committee.

24. He shall superintend the patients between the visits of the physicians, and the dispensary shall be exclusively under his control. In the absence of the Committee and house-directors, he shall be recognised as the head of the establishment.

25. Accurate registers of the patients admitted, as well as of the remedies employed for their recovery, shall be kept, which registers shall be the property of the Hospital; he shall produce a special report every month, to be laid before the Committee.

26. When the number of patients shall be great, a medical assistant shall be appointed by the house-directors, subject to the confirmation of the Committee.

and he shall receive such remuneration as the Committee shall from time to time: determine.

Honorary Secretary.

27. There shall be an honorary secretary, who shall also be a member of the Committee, and chosen annually with them. He shall be at liberty to attend all deputations to public bodies and private persons. He shall communicate with persons concerning the affairs of the Hospital during the intervals between the monthly meetings of the Committee, and shall report to the Committee, at their next meeting, all special or important events that shall have occurred within hisknowledge during the month. He shall also assist the treasurer in the dischargeof his duties when necessary.

Secretary and House Steward.

28. The duties of this officer shall be to reside in the Hospital, if required by the Committee, and, in the absence of the house-directors, to have the management of the domestic affairs of the Hospital, under the general superintendence of the resident medical officer. He shall be required to enterinto a bond, with sufficient sureties, for the due and faithful performance of his duties. He shall also perform the several duties specified in the bye-laws.

Matron.

29. The duties of the matron shall principally relate to the wards, the kitchen, and the laundry. She shall exercise a strict superintendence over the nurses; shall have the charge of linen, bedding, glass, crockery, and ordinary kitchen and scullery stores, subject to the general supervision of the house-steward; and shall visit every ward of the Hospital at least three times in the day. She shall also perform the several duties specified in the bye-laws.

Collector.

30. The duties of this officer shall be— To call on subscribers and collect all donations and subscriptions of the Hospital; to give only authorised printed receipts for the same; to attend all meetings, when required; to keep correct lists and duplicate lists of all donations and subscriptions, with the residences of the donors and subscribers made up from day to day; to pay weekly all moneys he may receive to the bankers; to deliver weekly to the secretary reports in writing of all moneys received and paid, with the balance at the bankers; to keep the accounts regularly entered in the collector's cash book; to deliver a copy of the annual report to each subscriber; and to give such security, with sureties, for the due and faithful performance of his-duties, as may be required.

Nurses.

31. The head nurse in each ward shall attend principally to the patients, and to the keeping of the wards clean and quiet.

32. The under nurses shall be under the direction of the head nurses, and shall perform the more menial offices of the Hospital.

Porter and Engineer.

33. The porter and the engineer shall be employed as the Committee or directors may think proper. They shall not absent themselves without the permission of the house directors or resident medical officer.

Trustees.

34. The legal estate in the lands, buildings, and premises of the Hospital shall be vested in three trustees, new trustees being appointed when vacancies occur at a general meeting of the governors.

35. All legacies of $\angle 100$ and upwards, unless otherwise directed by the testators, shall be invested for the benefit of the Hospital, in the names of the three trustees.

36. No variation in the usual gratuities and fixed salaries shall be made, unless the Committee be specially summoned for that purpose, and unless the proposed addition or diminution be confirmed by a subsequent Committee.

Bye-laws.

37. The bye-laws which shall from time to time be made by the Committee shall be open to the inspection of any subscriber, and shall contain, among other things, a full specification of the duties of the resident medical officer, the matron, and other officers of the Institution, with the practices usually adopted for their election; which specification shall be read out to every individual before his appointment, and referred to on all occasions of doubt.
