1915 Forest Theatre Play Selected

At a meeting of the council of the Forest Theatre Society, held last Monday, the annual production, which will be presented on July 1, 2 and 3, was selected by unanimous vote.

It was a difficult matter, in view of the mass of material sent in, to select the play suitable in every detail for production at the Forest Theatre.

While almost every manuscript submitted had some particular merit, only a small number combined all the essential qualifications. Several otherwise splendid creations, were written without reference to the fact that our theatre is an out-door affair; an in all the offerings there were objections of one kind or another which caused their rejection.

The play selected, the title of which is "The Shakespere Play," is by Hubert Osborn, an actor, of New York, who is now on the coast with the "Everywoman" company.

The action of the play is unique, depicting as it does incidents in the life of the immortal bard, showing scenes in Arden, Stratford and London, many of which might have given Shakespere the inspiration and material for his great works. It requires four acts to tell the story.

Perry Newberry will be the producer.

The children's play has not been selected.

Local Postoffice Burglarized

When the assistant postmaster entered the postoffice at 7:30 yesterday morning, the scene that confronted him was one of desolation and ruin.

The safe, containing stamps and money to a considerable amount, had been blown open.

The safe door was a complete wreck, and the broken pieces of iron and steel littered the floor.

County officers and postoffice officials were immediately notified, and a rigid investigation is now going on.

There are no clues.

County Exhibit at the Exposition

More than three hundred years of the history of California are told in one of the most interesting historical displays at the San Francisco exposition, namely, the display of Monterey county.

Lovers of California and of her history will find a wealth of material at this display. An exposition official a short time ago declared that Monterey county had the distinction of showing one of the best historical exhibits at the fair.

Among the relics shown is a Spanish cannon, the first piece of ordnance brought west of the Mississippi. This gun is about eight feet long and weighs 1200 pounds. Over 400 pounds of the metal is of pure silver. It bears the inscription "1622," and was mounted at Monterey during its occupation by Spain.

Near the cannon stands a chair made from a limb of the famous oak which sheltered Viscaino. This is the same tree from which Father Serra hung the mission bells in 1770.

Few persons know that at one time Monterey was paved with the vertebrae of the whale. This bone has taken on the color of the soil wherein it was buried, and it now being used to make models of the ancient buildings of the days of the glory of Spain.

There is also a reproduction of Carmel mission, which is the oldest standing mission in California, having been dedicated June 3, 1770. This exhibit is made of whalebone.

One may also see the first seal of California, and a perfect model of the custom house at Monterey. In front of this building stands the original pole upon which the first United States flag was raised in California. The pole was originally a mast on the ship Cayenne of Commodore Sloat's fleet.

Spanish, Mexican and United States flags which have waved from the historic customs house are exhibited.

Gratitude of a Stricken People

The American embassy in London has received a dispatch bag, the contents of which are probably more remarkable, more curious, and certainly more pitiful than any documents ever transmitted from Europe to the American people.

Through the same channel, since the war of independence, there have come and gone many communications which made for peace or war among the nations of the world. These are now musty state papers, only dragged from obscurity by the politician or the controversialist.

The papers in the bag which Ambassador Page has just received from the American legation in Brussels will live and breathe and have their effect so long as the spirit of humanity sways the progress of civilization.

The bag from Minister Brant Whitlock was packed tight, not with official papers, not with protests against outrage, not with dissertations upon neutrality, but with letters from thousands of Belgian children, thanking the people of the United States for keeping them alive.

On post-cards, many of them bearing likenesses of Albert, King of the Belgians, all of them decorated with rosettes, compared of small stars and stripes intertwined with the colors of Belgium, children's hands have laboriously written messages such as these:

Je prie Jesus pour vous
Mamma no longer cries since we have the good bread.

Vive la bonne Amerique.
I send you a big kiss.

Merci, pour papa, pour mama, et pour moi.

Merci, Merci.

A school-boy writes:
"Little as well as big at the school of the Brothers of Fleny we were all proud and anxious to show our mothers the beautiful rubbers and clothes that the Americans sent us. Now we cry all together 'Vive L'Amerique'—and we pray for you."

Carmel Must Have Fire Protection

As the dry season approaches there comes with it the menace of fire.

The large number of dwellings erected in Carmel during the past two years, to say nothing of prospective new buildings, makes imperative the immediate acquisition of adequate fire-fighting apparatus.

Heretofore Carmel has been fortunate in that when a fire did occur there was an absence of a strong wind to drive the flame on and spread the fire over a wide area, into the business and residence sections of the town.

We cannot expect always to be so fortunate. There may come a time when with a fire in the near-by pine forests will come a strong driving wind, carrying the fire to our very homes and business places.

It is the object of several public-spirited citizens to guard against such a contingency. It is proposed to organize, house and equip a company of fire-fighters, and to this end a subscription list is shortly to be circulated.

The plan is to purchase what is needed in the way of apparatus, house it where it will do most good, and then organize a crew of experienced firemen.

No property-owner can afford to refuse a contribution to this most necessary object.

It will be an investment also, as, when a community shows a disposition to protect itself, it is the policy of the insurance companies to reduce premiums, which are so high now as to be almost prohibitive.

The question will be asked, "What has our fire commission done?" And the reply is that under the law, the commission can do nothing in the way of obtaining money until next March.

Almost a whole year! Why in that time there may be any number of serious fires.

There must be no delay in this matter. Dig up at once, and do it cheerfully.

It will be much wiser to help purchase the necessary protection than to lose your home.

Art Notes

Wm. M. Chase in the Exhibition of "The Ten American Painters."

His portrait of Senator W. A. Clark is the most interesting of his seven pictures. It bristles and tingles and sparkles with life. It seems almost more alive than any living thing and there are beautiful passages of color. The two Venetian scenes lovely, precious in surface, with an opulent use of pigment, are without argument, the product of a master. When our twenty-first century collector wishes to acquire his Chases, he will do well to set a rigorous standard. Nothing is much better than the little Venetian scenes — New York Times Art Review.

The New York Spring Academy The Academy has just thrown open its doors for the 90th Annual exhibition.

For the first time, the exhibition is to be free to the public, which is as it should be, as every man woman and child in the metropolis will be benefitted and interested by an inspection of the good array of works, undoubtedly the strongest and best in the academy's history. — Amer. Art News.

A novel feature has been devised for the sale to take place at Christie's (London) this month in aid of the Red Cross. A number of prominent artists, including John Sargent, Philip Laszlo and M. Orpen, are contributing picture frames containing blank canvases. The artists who contribute them will paint thereon the portrait of the purchaser. — A.A.N.

Last Honors to a Good Citizen

As a fitting testimony of their love and respect for the departed, almost the entire population of Carmel attended the funeral services of Albert F. Horn, which were held at the Methodist church last Thursday.

Rev. L. W. Burwell delivered an excellent address on the life and character of the deceased, making particular reference to Mr. Horn's deeds as a soldier and a Christian.

The ladies of the G. A. R. read their beautiful service, and a choir of which Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hand and Mrs. H. W. Pudan were members, rendered impressive music, assisted by Miss J. Culbertson at the organ.

There were many floral tributes. Interment was at the Monterey.

The following friends were pall-bearers: John Mikel, R. G. Leidig, Chauncey O. Favor, John P. Cogle, Harry Dean, David von Needa.

Andrew Lang on R.L.S.

"John's own John," as Dr. Holmes says, may be very unlike his neighbor's John; but in the case of Mr. Stevenson, his Louis was very similar to my Louis," writes Andrew Lang in his "Recollections of R. L. Stevenson": "I mean that, as he presents his personality to the world in his writing, even so did that personality appear to me in our intercourse. The man I knew was always a boy—

"Sing me a song of the lad that is gone" he wrote about Prince Charlie, but in his own case the lad was never gone."

Mr. Lang says that, like all Scotch people, he had a vague family connection with Stevenson but that he had never heard of his existence until, in about 1873, when he was in Mentone. "Here," he goes on, "I met Mr. Sidney Colvin, now of the British Museum, and with Mr. Colvin, Stevenson. He looked as, in my eyes, he always did look, more like a lass than a lad, with a rather long, smooth oval face, brown hair worn at greater length than is common, large lucid eyes, but whether blue or brown I cannot remember, if brown, certainly light brown."

"His cloak and Tyrolean hat (he would admit the innocent impeachment) were decidedly dear to him. On the frontier of Italy, why should he not do as the Italians do? It would have been well for me if I had imitated the wearing of the cloak! I shall not deny that my first impression was not wholly favorable. 'Here' I thought is one of your esthetic young men, though a very clever one. What the talk was about I forget; probably about books."

He had just written his essay, "Ordered South," and, says Mr. Lang, on reading "Ordered South," "I saw, at once, that here was a new writer, a writer indeed; one who could do what none of us, nous autres, could rival or approach." "How we looked for 'R. L. S.' at the end of an article, and how devout was our belief, how happy our pride, in the young one!

I have known no man in whom the preeminently manly virtues of kindness, courage, sympathy, generosity, helpfulness, were more beautifully conspicuous than in Mr. Stevenson, no man so much loved—it is not too strong a word—by so many, such various people. He was as unique in character as in literary genius" — Boston Monitor.

Canada's Short-sightedness

Several Canadian newspapers have been severely abusing the United States because of its persistent refusal to take a militant part in the European war.

The theory of these scolding editors is that this country owes it to Belgium to punish Germany for her violation of Belgium's neutrality.

These biased editor-statesmen do not for a moment consider the position of the United States in regard to Germany's claim to the effect that Belgium's neutrality had long before been violated by England and France.

Putting aside further consideration of a much-discussed point, it may be suggested that Canada has not considered that the United States at peace may be a more potent ally for Canada than the United States at war.

Canada is looking to this country as a source of supply for many things which had previously been obtained in England. Chief of these commodities is money.

Since December corporations and cities in Canada have placed securities in the United States valued at seventy million dollars, and Premier Bowden announces that the Dominion will probably be obliged to do a hundred million dollars of financing in this country.

And further, the United States is supplying the allies, direct and through Canada, large quantities of food and munitions, without which they would find it difficult to continue the war; and all this is being done without danger of violating neutrality and without giving the allies' enemies cause for offense.

Had the United States gone to war against Germany at the outbreak of the war, it is obvious that our army would have been of little service in Europe, and there has been small opportunity for offensive naval work.

For the world at large, and for the allies, it is well that we are participating in the present war only as banker and storehouse.

Everybody May Help

A committee of the faculty of the University of California has undertaken the work of collecting as many private letters and as much printed matter as possible concerning the present European war.

Gifts of private letters would be especially welcome. Nothing that gives evidence of the state of public opinion in Europe or elsewhere at the present time is too small or too insignificant to have a value for the future student of history.

The committee, therefore, is particularly desirous of receiving picture post-cards, pamphlets, special numbers of newspapers, semi-official circulars intended to influence opinion in this country, correspondence, books, magazines, and whatever else may be available.

Ephemeral literature expressing the public opinion of the day is apt to disappear quickly, so the committee is proceeding on the theory that now is the time to gather all sorts of material concerning the war.

Send what you have or may get to the "War Collection Committee," care of Bancroft Library, University of California, Berkeley, or to Professor Geo. R. Noyes.

Letter From Dr. Jordan

Editor Carmel Pine Cone,

Dear Sir: The fish which came ashore some time ago
Hake Merluccius productus. There were in its stomach great numbers of young rock cod, the species being born alive but very small. The hake came near shore to devour them and was attacked by the waves.

Being a deep water fish it was not used to reduced pressure and did not know how to handle itself in the surf. Prof.
John O. Snyder examined many of them and found that they were not suffering from any disease and that the stomachs were crammed with the young of the rock fish, commonly called rock cod.

Very truly yours,
David Starr Jordan
