NORTHCLEFFE DIES AFTER LONG FIGHT

Succumbs to Mysterious Malady Which Attacked Him in Germany

BATTLED BRAVELY

End Came This Morning at Carleton Garden Residence

LONDON, Aug. 14.—Viscount Northcliffe died at 10:12 this morning at his residence at Carleton Gardens.

The famous English publisher, who has been on the verge of death for over a week, succumbed peacefully in the roof-top bed-chamber which was built to give him the benefit of all the air possible.

Northcliffe grew weaker throughout the night and scarcely opened his eyes during the long vigil kept by physicians and nurses from a hastily constructed hut on the roof beside his chamber.

The publisher, who has been fighting for weeks against a mysterious malady with which he was stricken on his trip around the world, or while incognito in Germany this spring, was scarcely able to speak during his last hours.

TUESDAY CLUB TO STAGE SALE AT PENDROY'S

Ways and Means Committee to Have Charge of All Floors

The benefit for the Tuesday Afternoon club building fund, which Mr. and Mrs. Earl Pendroy are so generously contributing to the organization will be staged tomorrow, August 15, when a liberal percent of the total sales made during the day will be presented to the club.

Members of the ways and means committee of which Mrs. A. H. Montgomery is chairman will be on the floor throughout the day to greet patrons and it will be an interesting time to visit the big establishment. In every department there will be offerings at clearance prices as inducements to patrons, and club members will not only reap the benefits of these reductions in buying any of the bargains offered, but will at the same time know that they are contributing to the clubhouse fund.

Ever Think of the Education You Might Have Had?

Ever reflect on the education you might have had? Dr. Frank Crane in his article on the editorial page this evening states that education is simply another name for life. Then he proceeds to cite the training he wishes he might have had instead of the customary high school and university education. There are set down nine points in conclusion of which he says that all the education he got that did him any good, he got in spite of school and teachers. There is so much true to life in this article that it will be of interest to every man and woman.

Mental uncertainty and confusion are the basis for much of the failure and to overcome them, James W. Foley, in "The Listening Post" this evening says one must exercise effort and determination, acquire the I-will-do-it-if-it-takes-a-leg-spirit. To illustrate mental uncertainty Mr. Foley uses as an illustration, the little mechanical toy which only goes so far and then backs up to the very point which it started.

Insanity as a plea in criminal trials is the subject of one of Henry James' intensely interesting comments on the day's news. There are, besides these fascinating features, the daily contributions, poetry, scientific article, truths in epigrams and instructive editorials, all going to make up one of the best editorial pages in the southwest.

MILITIAMEN FINED FOR FAILURE TO ATTEND CAMP

Three Arraigned Before Judge Lowe and Plead Guilty

Three members of company M, 160th infantry, Glendale's own company of the California National guard, appeared this morning before Judge J. H. Lowe to answer a charge of failing to attend the annual encampment of the regiment held at Monterey in July. The men answering the charge were Henry Dreyer, Francis Dreyer and R. E. Jodon. Henry and Francis Dreyer entered pleas of guilty and were fined $10 each with the alternative of spending five days in the county jail if they did not pay their fines. The fines were paid.

Mr. Jodon entered a plea of "not guilty" and asked for a trial by jury. His case was set for August 29, and his bond set at $100. He later changed his plea to guilty and paid a $10 fine.

The complaints against the men were signed by Lieut. Paul Vissman who appeared at their trials. The men held for the charge of not attending camp, according to Lieut. Vissman, have not been regular attendants at the weekly drills of their company. In fining the men Judge Lowe stated that in view of the fact that this was their first appearance in court, he was inclined to be lenient in the matter of punishment, but that each failure to attend drill would be considered a separate offense and that he is not inclined to be lenient with a second-time offender.

Henry Dreyer asked permission of the court to say a few words before receiving his sentence. This permission was granted and he said that he is an ex-service man and realized the gravity attached to the signing of enlistment papers in the national or state service. He said that when he enlisted he was told by the recruiting officer that it was optional with him whether or not he attended drills and the encampments of the regiment.

Judge Lowe said that any understanding with the recruiting officer who accepted the enlistment had nothing to do with the case.

Lieutenant Vissman, who is temporarily in command of the company, said that as long as he has charge of company M, the men will have to attend drill. Every man in the organization knows the drill night is his company and further notice is not necessary. Failure to attend weekly drills will be considered failure to obey orders and will be dealt with as such.

The three men tried this morning were notified of the hour and date that the company would entrain for Monterey. They failed to appear at the armory and when officers of the company called at their homes for them, they were informed that the men in question were out of the city.

After the trial Lieut. Vissman said: "It is not optional with the men whether or not they attend drills. Enlistment in the National guard is considered the same as an enlistment in the regular army. If there is any valid reason for absence from drill the commanding officer of his company will excuse him if proper application is made. A man will not be excused for trivial reasons, however, and in the future every man that does not attend the regular Tuesday night drill of his organization and has not been excused by his commanding officer, will be considered as absent without leave, and will be dealt with accordingly. The drill night of company M is, at present,

THIEVES ROB OFFICE OF R. E. OLIN

Enter Through Skylight From the Roof of Citizens' Building

STEEL ELECTRIC FAN

"Probably He Was Crazy With Heat," Says S. of C. Attache

Sneak thieves broke into the office of R. E. Olin, public accountant, in the Citizens' building, Saturday night and after ransacking the office stole an electric fan valued at $24.

According to James M. Rhoades, secretary of the chamber of commerce, with offices in the same building, the thieves gained an entrance to the office of Mr. Olin through a skylight. The thief or thieves crawled across the roof of the Citizens' building and dropped into the office through the skylight.

The police have been notified of the theft and are making every effort to locate the burglar. One of the employees of the chamber of commerce, a member of the renter sex, when told that all the robber took was a fan, "Oh, well, poor fellow, I suppose he was crazy with the heat and took the fan to cool off with."

METHODISTS TO FIGHT FOR THE WRIGHT LAW

Brotherhoods Are Called to Organize for Glendale Drive

Next Friday evening at 8 o'clock in the First Methodist church of this city, representatives of all the brotherhoods of the various churches will meet to outline a plan of campaigning which will carry the Wright enforcement act at the next election so far as the Glendale vote is concerned. This bill provides for the enforcement of the law through state and local officers instead of leaving it wholly to the federal officers, who are few in number.

DR. A. H. BRIGGS SPEAKS FOR THE WRIGHT LAW

Large Audience Gathers at First Methodist Church

A large audience assembled for the union service at the First Methodist church Sunday night, when Dr. A. H. Briggs, state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, made a convincing argument for the support of the Wright bill.

The point emphasized was that it is no longer a question of wet or dry, no longer a controversy between wet and dry, but a question of law enforcement of legislation for which the people have voted. He mentioned the "publican" attitude of many people who seem to consider that all the vice is concentrated in San Francisco, but it is not the San Francisco vote which the advocate of the Wright bill are concerned. He said they knew just where to find the San Francisco vote and what they have to reckon with.

There are enough good people in the south who believe in law enforcement to carry the day if they would go to the polls and vote, he declared, but over 100,000 who were on the voting register when the other bill was up, stayed away from the polls and did not vote. The menace to the state of California, he insisted, is the non-voter of Los Angeles county, and his talk was a challenge to all present to not only get out and vote themselves but to see that the rest of the vote is rounded up.

"CAMERA" TO BE HEARD IN CITY

The Classic Picture Company of Los Angeles has been granted a permit to snap some pictures on the streets of Glendale. The people of Glendale will doubtless be able to see the inside of outside movie-making within a day or so.

MASKED MEN IN CAR HOLD UP POLLOCK

Proprietor of Sunset Motor Co. Compelled to Deliver Valuables

REVOLVERS DRAWN

Bandits Swing Around and Head Pirate Machine for Hollywood

P. A. Pollock of the Sunset Motor company was held up and robbed by four masked men on Los Feliz road just west of the bridge, which spans the Los Angeles river, shortly after 11 o'clock last night. The bandits secured $5 and a valuable stick pin from Pollock, who immediately reported the incident to the Glendale police department.

Mr. Pollock was driving from Hollywood to Glendale and as he approached the bridge, he noticed that the car behind was slowly overtaking him. As it was passing two of the men leveled revolvers at their victim and ordered him to stop. The bandits were driving a Nash car, which, after the holdup, was headed toward Hollywood.

"The holdups evidently were mistaken in our machine, and thought it was another car," said Mr. Pollock, who was accompanied by Mrs. Pollock. "They went through every part of the auto very carefully, evidently expecting that the 'big haul' had been secreted somewhere about the car. They did not attempt violence of any kind. We complied with all their requests and that seems to be all they demanded of us. It was certainly a novel experience, but I am not anxious to go through it again."

POTTER'S TEAM OF CREDIT MEN ORGANIZED

Issues Defy to Team to Be Organized by H. W. Butts for Picnic

Clear the deck for a slaughter. W. P. Potter, credit man of the Bentley-Schoeneman Lumber company, captain of one of the Glendale Credit association's ball teams, which will play at the picnic on Wednesday at Glendale-Verdugo park, has heard from. Here's what he says:

"Am enclosing a list of players who will compose the unbeatable aggregation of hard-hitting, sure-fielding, joy-killing ball players who are going to wallop H. M. Butts' mediocre crew at Glendale-Verdugo park, next Wednesday.

"We are taking the liberty of asking you to publish this list in advance in order that Major Butts may revise his line-up and secure such professional services as he may think necessary to make this at least interesting. J. Ray Bentley will act as field captain."

All of these leather-tossers are oldtimers from old-time-ville. They know the game from Z to A, and the brand of ball they will put will bring tears to the eyes of the most hard-hearted. Get ready to gather up the pieces.

Chief Brown of the United States customs service here and United States Marshal George Cooley of San Diego officiated over the "plum pudding gutter."

Most of the liquor was in large tanks and some of it had spoiled from standing in the copper containers.

The first few gallons poured caught fire and another tank exploded as flames flashed across the flowing liquor to it. The thermometer at the time was registering 120 in the shade.

There was just one too many electric lighting poles on Brand boulevard, at the corner of Acacia to suit the machine of J. A. Burborn of 1253 North Lake street, Pasadena, and shortly after noon, on Saturday, it proceeded to clear the street. Very neatly the car cleared the curbing and proceeded across the sidewalk until the pole was reached. It broke it off clean at the point where it enters the ground. Burborn was making the turn when the car became unmanageable.

DR. MAPES BRINGS BACK SAMPLE TROUT

He and Son Home From Two Months in High Sierra Country

Dr. O. K. Mapes and son, Gordon, of 359 Patterson avenue, returned the latter part of the week from the High Sierra country back of Bishop, where they had been camping for about two months.

The wonderful trout they brought home with them proved that they got more than the ordinary fisherman's luck. They inhibited several cutthroat and rainbow trout, which ranged from 14 to 18 inches in length—just the kind that sends a thrill through the angler when they strike.

Mapes stated that they had the finest kind of luck. The limit was secured every time the fishermen took the rod in hand. Sometimes they fished from a boat and at others they waded out into the different lakes.

They fished in Mammoth lake, Lage George, Lake Mary, Shadow Lake, Silver Lake, Grant lake and spent some time at Carson's camp. Flies were used almost exclusively on the trip.

Dr. Mapes anticipates opening an office in Glendale in the near future.

ROUTE TO NEW GLENDALE VERDUGO MUNICIPAL PARK

Inquiries are being made daily as to how the new Glendale Verdugo municipal park can be reached. This is an easy question to answer.
 The Glendale-Montrose carline passes within a thousand feet of the park. Get off at the regular Verdugo park stop and walk to the right.
 Automobiles follow Glendale avenue to Verdugo Woodlands. Automobiles are advised to follow the upper road at the point where the road branches, this side of the Woodlands. The upper road is in slightly better condition.

Jones suffered from a weak heart, a weak liver, and a weak digestion. In fact, he was one of those people who have or think they have something serious the matter with them. Recently he went to see a friend at the seaside in the hope of obtaining relief from at least one of his chronic ailments.
 A few days after his arrival he was walking along the beach with his host, when suddenly he remarked:

Stories of Famous Cases

By Detective NICK HARRIS

THE POLICEMAN'S TRYST

In Three Parts—Part 2

The day was all different for Policeman No. 111 after that. For the first time in his life he noticed that there was a bird on a tree. Also that a girl in a machine that went by had a blue flower on her hat. Also that children were cute little devils after all. There were a lot of things that Policeman No. 111 had overlooked, it appeared. All the way home that night—back to his modest room in Mrs. Tim Riordan's boarding house, he marveled how much of life had escaped him.
 He did not see the maid until two days later, when she suddenly appeared at his elbow as he stood for a moment beneath the shade of a friendly tree and mopped his forehead.
 "Elo, Monsieur Gen," she challenged. "You will not 'ave to save me today."
 "Dynamite! Electricity! TNT! Policeman No. 111 rose to the occasion—magnificently.
 "That's too bad," he said gallantly.
 The vision in white cap favored him with another of her wonderful smiles.
 "Oo," she questioned. "You lak do that—again?"
 "Every Cay in the week—and then some!" Policeman No. 111 spoke emphatically, his breath coming a bit short.
 "Oo—you know what I seenk, Monsieur Gen? I seenk you are ver' nice boy."
 Policeman No. 111 took a cautious glance up and down the boulevard. Then he stepped a bit closer.
 "Same here—Marie," he said daringly. "You're a nice girl, too!"
 The girl's eyes widened.
 "Oh, you know my name!" she said in surprise. "How you know zat?"
 Mon. Gen., otherwise known as Policeman No. 111, executed what is known in diplomatic circles as a "corp cordiale."
 "It's a long story," he said smoothly. If I was off duty now I could tell you all about it."
 Which is pretty good work for an inexperienced policeman having his first file at the intricate and thorn-stemmed road of romance.
 The evidence in the case of John Doe, Eros, alias the God of Love, versus Policeman No. 111 has been submitted to the court of Time from behind closed doors. We, of the general public, are not permitted to hear it. But of the results that were the outgrowth of that famous case, much can be said.
 Policeman No. 111 went off duty that night with something singing in his heart. He had made his first "date" with a girl—with Marie. He could hardly believe it. He caught himself thinking how "different" their understanding was from that of other persons. He even smiled tolerantly, as he passed a couple on an uptown bus, the youth's arm around her waist. If that Marie now—Policeman No. 111 straightened up suddenly. It would not do, go along blushing on the street that way, and be a copper.
 Marie had told him to call on her at 8 o'clock. She was employed at the De Corney mansion, a short distance from the spot where he stood and directed traffic during the hot summer days. She had explained in her delicious French-American patois that she had never before entertained company and that her mistress might object, and would be come to her quarters over the garage.
 "Ze door—she will be open," she had said. "Maybe I will look for you—maybe not."
 Of course, he knew she would be looking for him. She had said he must be very quiet—they could walk for a while. If her mistress did not object, later she might receive him in the kitchen. But tonight the garage.

HOW MUCH DOES THE HIPPO WEIGH?

Depends on the Way You Look At Him, According to Contestants

By W. L. TAYLOR
 How much does the Hippo weigh? Judging from the many guesses received by the Contest Editor of the Daily Press there is a great division of opinion as to the approximate weight of this big fellow of the deep. Anyway, some very strange guesses were submitted. The picture on this page has created more interest among subscribers of the Daily Press than any previous special page feature yet submitted. The study of the various advertisements has been more critical and the interest greater than any other feature.

Letters began to pour in shortly after the Daily Press was issued last Saturday and every mail has brought in a flood of answers to the mooted question. Each letter was given a number as it came in and entered for the prizes. Many were anxious to get in on the ground floor and did not patronize the advertisers on the page, preferring to take their chance by submitting an early answer.

The Broadway shoe store must have done a big business during the past week, judging from the number of coupons sent the contest man from purchasers of shoes at this popular store.
 William Murphy, the furniture man, certainly came in for his share of praise for nearly every letter complimented him upon his advertisement. If everybody who complimented Murphy and praised his stock made a purchase he will soon be able to retire from the furniture business. The tenor of the letters about Murphy were to the effect that his stock was large and varied and that prices were hard to duplicate anywhere—that Murphy surely "delivers the goods"—from the standpoint of service.

Dorothy Hertzog, 618 North Maryland, figured the Hippo to weigh 649 pounds, while John Scott of Eagle Rock was sure he weighed 28,795,362,482,679,765,593 pounds. We are going to send John a big stick of candy for his laborious efforts in arriving at the above answer.

C. R. Niel, the stationer, came in for a good share of praise for the attractive manner in which his advertisement was written, and many enclosed coupons showing purchases had been made at his store.

The popular C. & S. cafeteria came in for much praise for the enterprise shown by its popular manager, Mrs. Steckler, in giving Glendale such a highclass cafeteria, and the owner, Mr. J. T. Stewart, for his enterprise in erecting a special building for the cafeteria.
 Paul Rom, the tailor, came in for much attention. They said he told his story in a straightforward manner, and it hit the "bull's eye." The many answers were sure in their belief that Paul Rom is a first-class tailor and a good man to tie to when a suit is needed.

Roland Oliver, 615 North Jackson, was sure the Hippo weighed 14,374 pounds—and he made his answer in a businesslike form that makes a feller feel Oliver must be a young mathematician, who will eventually win a prize.

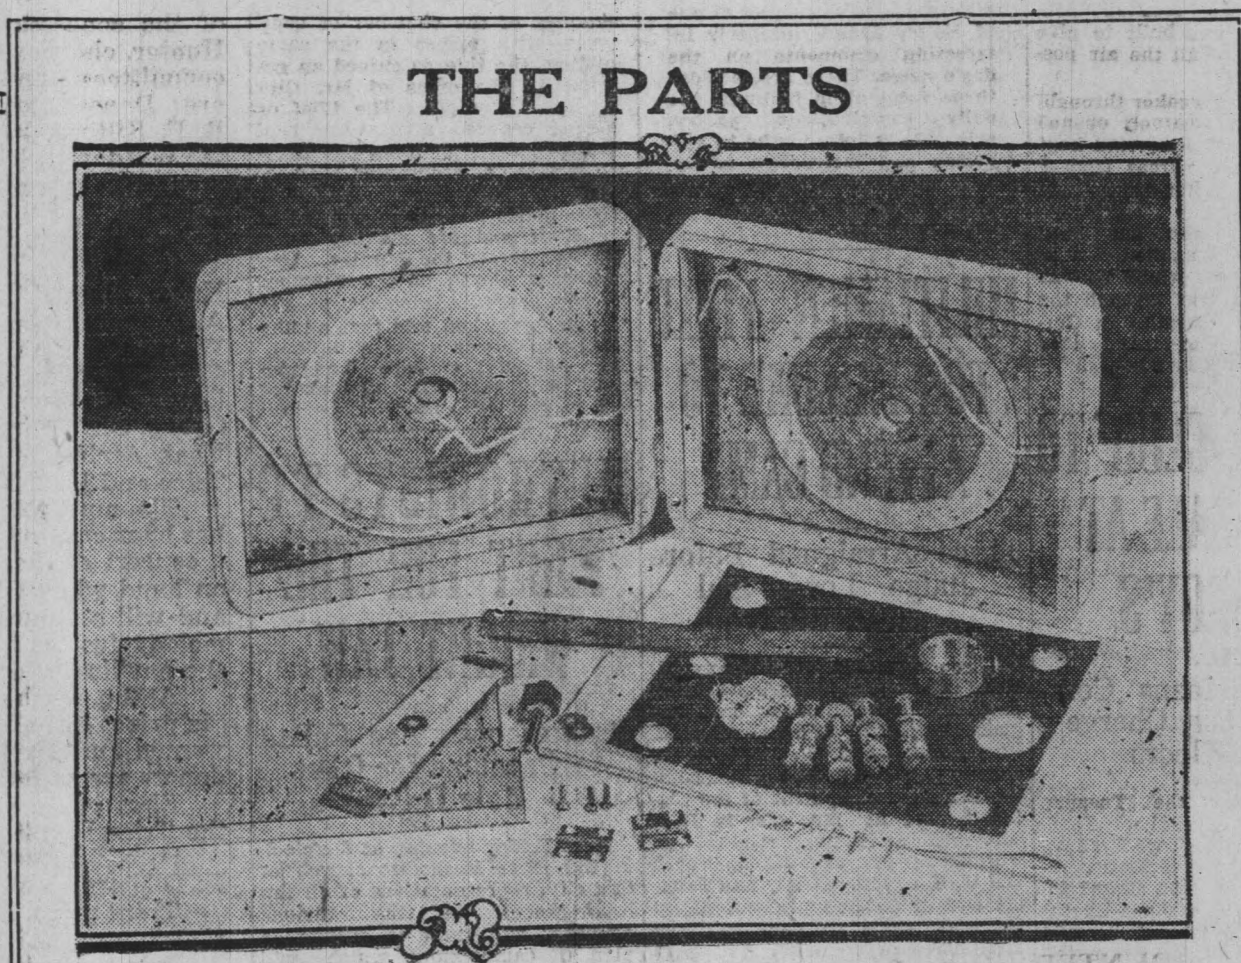

Frances May Colburn was among the many Burbank residents who figured on the Hippo. Frances thought he weighed 3,286. Twenty-four contestants figured the Hippo weighed 3281, which would complicate the contest were their guesses nearest the correct weight of the "Beast."

An absent-minded professor took care of the children while his wife went motoring. When she returned in the evening she found the house quiet and the children nowhere to be seen.
 "Where are the children?" she inquired.
 "Well, my dear," answered the professor, "they were making a lot of noise, so I popped them into bed without waiting for you or calling the main."
 "Oh," said his wife, with a smile, "I hope they gave you no trouble."
 "Oh, no," came the reply, "except the one I put in the back room; he was rather naughty and struggled a good bit when I undressed him and put him into bed."
 His wife thought she would go upstairs and investigate. She returned in a few minutes with a very amused smile on her face.

 "Of course," he objected, "she said, 'He's the little boy who lives next door.'"
 According to Representative Volstead, all drinkers are moderate drinkers in their own estimation. "What man ever admits to drinking immoderately?" asks the author of the dry enforcement law. "The moderate drinker, so-called, reminds me of the moderate smoker, who said: 'Yes, I've cut my smoking down almost to nothing. I smoke now only before breakfast, after lunch and dinner, and between meals. I've altogether abandoned my habit of getting up in the night to smoke.'"

NEW MUSIC SCHOOL TO OPEN IN THE CITY

Lee Gilbert, Representative of Hulff Co., to Establish Unit Here

Lee Gilbert, field representative of the Hulff School of Music, has become a resident of Glendale, and with his family, is making his home at 127 South Kenwood. Mr. Gilbert states that he is going to devote his entire time at present to establishing a permanent studio for the Hulff school in this city, and says this announcement will mean much to the children of Glendale, for the policy of the school is to see that every child who wants to take up the study of the violin or cornet will be loaned an instrument absolutely free of charge for home use as long as the child is enrolled with the school. The Hulff school is permanently established in 19 Southern California towns and has an enrollment in the violin department alone of over 500 students. A unique feature of the school is its annual picnic, to which parents, teachers, field men and students are invited. Glendale students who enroll now, Mr. Gilbert states, will have an opportunity to be in the group of over 500 violin students who are to be photographed in action at the picnic in September by a well-known motion picture news reel company—probably the first time in America when so many violins are to be played at once.

LAWN PARTY AT TAYLOR HOME

The home of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Taylor, 506 North Jackson street, was the scene of a very pretty social affair Sunday afternoon, when their daughter, Lovell Frances, entertained in honor of her birthday. A number of the friends of Miss Taylor came at 3 o'clock, bringing presents and tokens of their friendship, and a most delightful time was spent in games, etc. Refreshments were served on

MRS. STONE IS BACK FROM NORTH

Automobile Trip Brought Many Delightful Experiences

Mrs. Fannie Stone and son, Donald, of 301 East Chestnut, who recently returned from an auto tour up the coast in which they camped by the way, were very much delighted with the experience. They were accompanied by P. J. Trull and family of Maryland avenue and Miss Short of Los Angeles, there being two autos for the party. Their objective was the state Redwood park or Big Basin, about fifty miles from Santa Cruz. They had to go the long way, via Los Gatos and Saratoga, because the other road was closed for repairs. The approach to the grove was delightful but they decided it was not the place in which they wanted to camp for long because the grove is so dense the sun scarcely penetrates, and it was crowded with thousands of campers. They therefore went on to Pacific grove, where their longest stay was made. Pacific grove is but four or five miles from Monterey, where the National Guard was encamped, Robert Stone being one of the guards. They were gone three weeks and returned in good health and spirits.

the lawn, Mrs. Taylor and her sister, Mrs. Jennie Havens of 150 North Harvard, Los Angeles, assisted in entertaining and those present enjoyed sandwiches, cake, ice cream and candy, the big birthday cake being the center of attraction. After having pictures taken, the merry party left for their homes, wishing their hostesses many returns of the happy day.

Those present were the Misses Willa Ruble, Evelyn Nelson, Marie Rogers, Marie Inez Kinch, Evelyn Franklin, Lollabelle, Lovell and Juanita Taylor of Glendale, and Grace Coffee of Los Angeles.

C. MOORES MARK 21ST ANNIVERSARY OF WEDDING

Take Trip Up to Ojalia Valley, Near Ventura

Mr. and Mrs. Clem Moore of this city celebrated their 21st wedding anniversary Sunday, by a trip to the Ojalia valley, which is about 14 miles east of Ventura. The drive to this beautiful water resort town is through a lovely country, the town itself being situated about 1000 feet above the level of Ventura in the foothills. A few years ago it was destroyed by fire, but has been practically restored by Mr. Libby of the Libby Glass company, who has a big ranch home there, on which he spends part of the year, his factory, being located in Toledo. It has a beautiful hotel which is filled with tourists in the winter, but is not crowded now. The Moores, who were accompanied by their daughter, Blossom, had a delightful day.

PENDROY'S CLOSE FOR WEDNESDAY PICNIC

Employees to Enjoy the Day Off With Rest of City

Rumors having been in circulation that Pendroy's Dry Goods store would be open Wednesday, Mr. Pendroy was interviewed in regard to the matter. He said most emphatically that he had signed up to close and do whatever the other merchants had agreed to do, and he intended to conform to the policy of his brother merchants in all respects and give his employees an opportunity to enjoy the picnic. Mr. Pendroy also stated that Mrs. Pendroy is on her way home and is expected to arrive Thursday of the present week.

CONDITIONS IN LAKE STATES BAD

Mrs. Clem Moore Returns From Toledo With Tale of Business Depression

Mrs. Moore, who recently returned from Toledo, Ohio, where she was the guest of her mother, has a story to tell different from the majority of such tourists. She says the weather there was delightful, many days being very much like the California brand. She observed a sort of jealousy of California and a disposition to discount its beauties. Whenever anything happened to the disadvantage of the state, it was magnified.

Business conditions there she found depressed. Wages are being cut all along the line and living costs remain high. Butter and eggs are no cheaper than here and meat is higher. Clothing costs no less than here. No building, to speak of, is going on. Detroit was the only city she saw that looked like home. There the streets were crowded like Los Angeles and there was an atmosphere of prosperity. Toledo people talked seriously about their "traffic congestion," but when she looked for it she could find nothing to occasion concern. The "traffic congestion" she was able to find at any time of day did not exceed what we are accustomed to in Glendale. Many people were afraid to go to Detroit because of the maelstrom of traffic there, which, she says, is very much like the situation in Los Angeles.

VACKS PLAN BIG TOUR NORTHWARD

Dr. Albert Vack and his wife are planning a delightful two weeks' vacation in the northern part of the state. They plan to leave before sunup next Saturday morning. The first stop of any duration will be at Dr. Vack's ranch in Riverbank. They will visit San Francisco, Sacramento and other cities in the northern part of the state.

BABY'S FINGERPRINTS LINK HIM TO RICHES INHERITED FROM 'SLEEP-WALKING FATHER'

The Hon. John Russell denied in a London court that he was the father of his wife's child, with which she is shown above. She said the birth of her child was due to the fact that her husband "walked in his sleep and behaved like a Hun." The photograph of Russell, who is the heir of Lord Amphil, was made as he and his mother were leaving court.

WILLARD LEARNED TAKES CHRISTIAN PULPIT

Substitutes for Rev. C. A. Cole, Who Is on Vacation

Rev. C. A. Cole, pastor of Central Christian church, being away on his vacation, had his pulpit filled Sunday morning by a well-known Glendale man, Willard Learned, who, with his wife, are preparing themselves for the mission field in Africa.

Mr. Learned is a graduate of the local high school and it was with great interest that his many friends heard him on Sunday morning. He chose as his subject, "The Young Man's Vision," stating that the men who have accomplished great things are those who have had great visions of their future. He used as an example, Henry Ford, who had a vision of every man owning an automobile, and his vision is almost accomplished. "Many men are failures until they catch a vision of some great thing they want to do," he stated. "When we think we have become such a great success in this world, then it is that we should have a vision of the greatness of God. Men who have such are those who are doing great things today in the church."

MISS COOKMAN IS GIVEN SHOWER

Miss Ruth Spafford Entertains With Charming Bunko Party

One of Glendale's summer brides was again honored on Saturday night, when Miss Ruth Spafford of 314 East Chestnut street entertained with a charming bunko party and miscellaneous show in honor of Miss Anna Cookman of North Louise street, whose marriage to Earl Thompson, famous Olympic athlete, will take place August 26.

The Spafford home was artistically decorated in Rinkasters and dahlias and on the refreshment tables were dainty bonbon baskets. Places were marked by kewpie place cards. Following a delightful evening of bunko, in which Miss Helen Ingledue won first prize and Mrs. Irvin L. Bullock consolation, a delicious luncheon consisting of chicken salad, sandwiches, punch, pink and white ice cream and cakes were served. At this time, a large Japanese basket tied with a pink bow on the handle was brought in by the hostess and presented to Miss Cookman. It contained many beautiful and useful gifts for the bride-to-be. Miss Spafford was assisted by her grandmother, Mrs. I. J. Spafford and her aunt, Mrs. E. H. Baird of Dyersburg, Tenn.

The invited guests included Miss Anna Cookman, Miss Eleanor Perkins, Miss Dora Wainwright, Miss Helen Gould, Miss Aida Gervais, Miss Nydia Dana, Miss Dorothy Hamilton, Miss Irene Gervais, Miss Lavera Kitterman, Miss Lois Percy, Miss Ruth Ryan, Miss Helen Ingledue, Miss Mildred McKee, Mrs. G. Mrs. M. L. Ogden of 501 West Colorado has received word from her son, Rev. M. B. Ogden, a missionary stationed in Kasgan, a northeast province of India, that he would sail for home on the 12th of August. His wife and three children are with him. They will come via New York. ANDERSON FAMILY HOLDS REUNION

Mrs. Allie Anderson, of 1125 East California avenue, entertained on Sunday with a family reunion and dinner party in honor of her father, W. E. Taylor. There were six of Mr. Taylor's children present, two in the east not being able to be here, and five grandchildren. The affair was held at Ye White Inn, where a delicious spring chicken dinner was served from tables artistically decorated in roses especially for the occasion.

All during dinner, an orchestra played softly old familiar songs, which were greatly enjoyed. Guests included W. E. Taylor, Mrs. J. M. Jones and 2-month-old son, Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Taylor and daughter, Mrs. John Snyder, Miss Cymbel Taylor, Miss Katherine Taylor, Charles Weisgerber and Mrs. Allie Anderson and three children.

EPWORTH LEAGUE PLANS AMUSEMENT

The Epworth League of Pacific avenue Methodist church is planning a splendid entertainment on Friday night at which time Mr. Rudeen, a professional whistler will present a program. Mr. Rudeen appeared at Gramman's for several weeks and in addition to his whistling numbers he will give moving pictures of the life of Abraham Lincoln, and moving pictures of the history and origin of birds, at which time he will imitate with whistling all the different varieties of birds.

Miss Donna Wilson will render several vocal selections, accompanied by her sister, Miss Ethel Wilson. Miss Helen Gould will accompany Mr. Rudeen in several of his numbers.

At the close of the program, a silver offering will be taken. Mrs. Donald Magill is in charge of the program and the public is cordially invited.

MERCHANTS' TEAM DEFEATS PALOMAR

Oh, boy! They did it again. The Glendale Merchants knocked the Palomar team for a row of broken bats in the game yesterday afternoon. The score was 5 to 3. This was the ninth consecutive win for the local team. They have 15 games of the 17 played this season. Ageson played his usual wonderful game on the mound. He let the Palomars down with four hits and whiffed 13 hopeful batsmen. He pitched no-hit ball until the 6th inning. In the 4th frame Boss Cobb told Ageson to pitch nothing but straight, fast balls. The boy did, and the visitors could not find him. Bell, Cobb and Harris for the Merchants smacked the horsehide for two baggers. Ageson allowed two bases on balls. Gandy for the Palomars gave one.

Truths in Epigram

When a building is about to fall down, all the mice desert it.—Pliny the Elder (23-79 A. D.).
The essence of good and evil is a certain disposition of the will.—Epictetus (6 A. D.).
When I play with the cat, who knows whether I do not make her more sport than she makes me?—Montaigne (1533-1592).

GREAT CALAMITIES

It is exceedingly difficult to visualize the extent of the great disaster caused by typhoon in China. In Swatow alone the count of dead at the time of the sending of the message, had reached 28,000. It was impossible to dispose of the bodies by any ordinary means. Tens of thousands among survivors were rendered homeless. Of course the property loss runs far into the millions. China is remote. News from its outlying provinces filters but slowly into the ken of civilization.

The typhoons that sweep the coasts of China and Japan and the seas adjacent are greatly feared. As a rule the type of construction with which they come in contact ashore is not substantial. The tidal wave that follows, however, could destroy a much more substantial type of buildings.

There are calamitous conditions not to be remedied even by the most active charity. Adjustments are to be brought about only by the lapse of time. Doubtless the world will show the usual willingness to aid, but it can do little. Similarly, relief to the millions of hungry in Russia must be at best only superficial. Real relief must await the birth of new conditions. When thousands succumb to starvation or to sudden elemental activities, the loss is final and complete as that represented by the bodies strewn on the field of battle.

THE PROPER METHOD

Recently a posse of deputies acting under orders of the sheriff killed two of four robbers, fatally wounded a third, and captured the remaining one. This was proper and wholesome treatment for such deadly enemies of society. The leader of the band was the survivor, he having turned "yellow," either too scared or too shrewd to essay defense when the guns of the deputies were aimed at him. There remains the formality of trying him. Doubtless there will be a criminal lawyer ready to take his case, and do his utmost to cheat justice.

For many months this community, particularly Los Angeles, has been overrun by murderous thugs. These have been encouraged in various ways. The city council hesitated about enlarging the police force, although the available number was notoriously inadequate. As often as a criminal faced the bar there followed a long series of tricks to win liberty for the prisoner, or at least to shield him from deserved penalty. Wrangles over technicalities, over selection of juries, over admission of evidence; the introduction of perjured testimony, mock appeals to sentiment, tinsel haloes for the brutal knave. The average criminal trial was futile, silly, little less than scandalous. Even the remote prospect of conviction lost all terror in the comfort afforded by the chance at probation and parole.

It is little wonder that the criminals laughed, and kept on with their murderous activities. But this episode shows that there is a way to check them. It lies in the simple and, under prevailing conditions, commendable method of killing them as they are engaged in their heretofore safe vocation of theft and slaughter. A dead robber represents not a social loss but a gain. The expense of burying him is trivial, and more than compensated for by the satisfaction, and the resulting feeling of enhanced security.

WHERE LAW MEANS LAW

The two men who went from Ireland to London, where they shot a high official of the British army, have been hanged. There was no delay about the trial, none as to rendering a verdict according to the facts, none as to carrying the sentence into execution. The two were guilty of a cold-blooded and deliberate murder. The operations of catching, trying and hanging them occupied but a few days.

Had a similar murder occurred in the United States, the date of the first trial would not yet have been fixed. The trial when it came tardily, would have consumed months. Doubtless there would have been pleas of insanity advanced. There would have been an array of hired alienists. A week at least would have been devoted to procuring a jury. There would have been motion for a new trial, had the outcome of the first been displeasing to the accused. Then the death sentence, if passed, likely would have been commuted to life imprisonment, and life imprisonment reduced to a petty term of years by a pardon board.

There was a petition in the London case aimed at saving the lives of this pair. It bore 30,000 signatures, but it had no merit and was coldly rejected by the attorney general after its rejection by the house of lords. Almost anybody will sign a petition for almost anything.

Murder is frequent in the United States and in England rare. The reason is plain enough. In this country murder is not punished. In England it is punished. Thus it is that any of a score of American cities have more murders than are committed in the whole of the British Islands.

SERENE OLD AGE

It is not necessary to go into statistics in order to realize that southern California is the haven of serene old age. The visible evidence is sufficient. Venerable men and women are seen on the streets in great number. Their work is done. Their day of rest has come. As members of a bustling and prosperous community, they leave to younger folk the planning and the building. They dwell in the midst of a rush of which they are interested spectators rather than participants. Yet a surprising proportion of the very aged are active still. Ex-Senator Cornelius Cole is conducting a law case for himself, and next month he will be 100. Dr. Morrison, two or three years older, enjoys life, and was married after he had rounded out a century.

This week at Pasadena there will be a party of centenarians, or near centenarians, with nearly thirty guests. Few other communities could be the scene of such a gathering. It will be in honor of Galusha M. Cole, who, although only 96, feels quite at home in the company of his seniors. Perhaps a few who have not quite reached the ninetieth milestone will be admitted to the circle if they will promise to be good. The real dignity of the occasion rests on those who have passed that point, and the farther they have passed it, the greater their share.

Very likely the benign climate of southern California, the outdoor life it permits, and its freedom from extreme of any sort, account for the abundant presence of the very old. Many of them come in mature years from a harsher environment, and here they seem as nearly to renew youth as it is humanly possible to have such an experience.

THE EDUCATION I WISH I MIGHT HAVE HAD

By DR. FRANK CRANE

Education is probably the most interesting subject that comes before the human race.

For it is simply another name for life. Everybody has his particular views on education. Some of these are practical, some too practical, some impractical, and many fantastical.

It seems to me it might be interesting for a man past 50 to tell the kind of education he wishes he might have had. What could be more practical than this?

Freed from all theories, fads or groups, and looking at the matter purely in its relation to human life and its values in contentment and attainment, I can say that instead of the education I did have, which is about the same that most people get in the American public high school and university, I wish I had been trained as follows:

1. I wish I had early been surrounded by gentle, cultured people, reverent, of high principles, with a quick sense of honor, and all the other essentials of true religion and good morals, and that it had been early impressed upon me that sects and religious organizations are of little or no importance.

2. I wish I would have got moral training in the only way it is to be gotten, which is by personal influence, and would have been saved a lot of needless trouble.

3. I wish my will had been early trained by vigorous, intelligent and loving discipline. I wish that I had early learned what I found out only late, that the best joys in life are those that come from self-mastery and not from self-indulgence.

4. I wish that my powers of observation had been carefully drilled and developed, and that I had had some one to teach me the rudiments of the sciences in the field and not alone in books.

5. I wish that the whole problem of sex had been explained to me before I was 14 years old, so that when the fires of adolescence came, I should have dealt with them more intelligently.

6. I wish that every year during the fair weather, till I was 21, I had lived outdoors, and that I had come to manhood with a body as healthy as that of a panther.

7. I wish I had been early taught the dignity and moral self-respect of waiting on myself, and the shame of being waited on.

8. I wish that some intelligent teacher had studied me and helped me to discover that part of the world's work which I could do the best. It took me almost 50 years to find this out. With proper education I would have found it out before I was 25.

9. I wish that I had been taught the sacredness and value of money; how to make it, how to save it, and how to spend it.

10. I wish that I had been taught how to live alone; how to find resources within myself and not to depend upon other people.

11. This, of course, is but a partial list, and consists in just a few things that occur to me now.

As a rule, my education consisted in the silly development of memory, the learning of a lot of things for which I have never had any use, the development of reverence for a lot of things that are entirely unworthy of it, and the encouragement of enthusiasm which I had painfully to discard.

In other words, about all the education I ever got that did me any good I had to get in spite of my schools and my teachers.

THE RIGHT WORD

By W. CURTIS NICHOLSON

(Copyright, 1922, by The Associated Newspapers.)

ACHIEVEMENT (Find the error in this article)

We study, we dream, we strive to achieve, and through dint of effort we reach our goal. Genius is not a spontaneous outburst of inherent ability; it is not a flare of celestial fire breaking forth of its own volition; it is the product of instinct, training, and hard work.

We read of the accomplishments of a Franklin, an Edison, a Milton, a Marconi and we marvel, but, ourselves, often continue lives of mental lethargy and resignation to our lot, when a wealth of knowledge pregnant with opportunity lies before our very doors. Its only cost is effort. Its acquisition means the development of efficiency, and the approach of the day when dreams come true.

A part of the treasure, is the knowledge of speaking and writing accurately, forcefully and attractively. Through well expressed thoughts skilfully arranged the business house interests the buying public, the salesman disposes of his wares, the organizer gets his support, the politician elects his candidate, the lecturer enthralles his audience, the preacher wins his converts. Language is the red blood of human endeavor. Without it we would not be enjoying this age of civilization and progress. Its condition should not be neglected. Every effort should be made to keep it pure, active and effective in its great world mission. Shall you aid and thus improve your chances of success?

Vocabulary "It was not for the purpose of creating pleasure, but of mitigating pain in the severest degree, that I first began to use opium as an article of daily diet."

—De Quincey. Mitigate: "To render less harsh, severe, violent, or distressful; lessen the vigor or intensity of; make milder; moderate; assuage; alleviate; soften; diminish; as, to mitigate anger; to mitigate pain."

Standard. Pronunciation: mit'igat (i as in hit; i as in habit; a as in ape).—Standard, Century, Webster and Oxford.

For observation: mitigator, mitigation (nouns); mitigatedly (adverb); mitigate, mitigable, mitigative, mitigatory (adjectives).

LISTENING POST

A genius one time made a mechanical toy. In the form of a man. It was full of wheels and springs. As a man is, we might say. Full of wheels and springs.

Man is full of the wheels and springs of impulse and action. And they whirl and revolve and move and carry him from one place to another.

And from one activity to another. And as long as they are governed by a central control the man's activity is definite.

But if the wheels whirl and the springs dance about and the parts revolve without direction the man wobbles.

He does not get anywhere. Spins about in a circle. As a great many people do.

People were not intended to spin about. To wobble and stagger and go about in a circle.

They were intended to go somewhere. From Here to There. For successful life is in definite progress.

The man who made the mechanical toy adjusted the wheels and springs and things so the toy would go forward a dozen feet.

As a man walking. And then the wheels and springs would operate in reverse.

And the toy would come straight back to where it started.

The result was that the toy never got anywhere. It went forward a few feet and then back to its own doorstep.

It started forth bravely enough.

SONGS OF THE POETS

The Imprisoned Soul—By Walt Whitman

At the last, tenderly, From the wall of the powerful, fortress'd house, From the clasp of the knotted locks—from the keep of the well-closed doors, Let me be waited,

With the key of softness unlock the locks—with a whisper Set open the doors, O soul.

Tenderly, be not impatient, (Strong is your hold, O mortal flesh, Strong is your hold, O love).

Let me glide noiselessly forth;

HOW DO GIANT STARS START?

By ISABEL M. LEWIS, United States Naval Observatory

That dark nebulae and clouds of dark obscuring matter dimming the light of stars beyond occur not only abundantly in the Milky Way, but more or less extensively over the entire heavens is a comparatively recent discovery of Rev. J. G. Hagen, S. J., of the Vatican Observatory.

While re-observing the luminous nebulae in Dreyer's New General Catalogue for the purpose of estimating their brightness, Father Hagen chanced upon many of these dark nebulae and in the construction of his Atlas of Variable Stars he discovered many more. In the systematic and thorough survey of the heavens required in this work a comparison of each chart with the heavens was made at least five times in different months and years so the effects of atmospheric conditions were entirely eliminated. The following interesting facts were revealed as a result of these investigations:

1. Dark patches of non-luminous matter occur in more or less thickly clustered groups over the entire heavens, forming what might be called a Nebular Way on either side of the Milky Way and far more extensive than the latter. Not only the existence but the form and outline of these dark groups are revealed by their dimming effect upon the light of stars lying beyond them.

The diffuse, or irregular luminous nebulae are found most commonly where these dark clouds are most prevalent and lie usually on the borders of the non-luminous nebulae.

The sky is freest from these dark clouds where stars form in clusters. This is in accord with Herschel's observations that the star clusters appear to sweep clear a way for themselves through the heavens.

A noticeable separation of very bright and very dark fields is often formed by rows of equally luminous and equally spaced stars which at times enclose in the form of a circle or oval a bright field lying against a dark nebulous background—an island of light in the Nebular Way.

Father Hagen's discovery of the universal distribution of dark cosmic clouds in space is most remarkable and valuable, and opens up a field for speculation as to the connection between these extensive non-luminous clouds and the luminous nebulae and stars. Are the luminous, diffuse nebulae, as some astronomers maintain, simply dark nebulae illuminated by the light of associated stars? In a few cases at least, such as the nebulae surrounding some of the Pleiades and Orion stars, this is known to be so.

There is an unmistakable association of many of the excessively hot and brilliant bluish-white stars with luminous nebulae. Yet it is a most significant fact that the giant red stars, which the brilliant researches of Dr. H. N. Russell placed unmistakably at the beginning of stellar evolution, never are found associated with either luminous or non-luminous nebulae.

Where, then, do the nebulae enter in the evolutionary chain? Since it has been discovered that the stars associated with nebulae are at the peak of stellar development and are the hottest of all the stars, it appears rather that the nebulae are the cooling products of the dissolution of many of the massive stars through the effects of radiation pressure rather than the stuff of which stars are being formed. As to the origin of the giant red stars, such as Betelgeuse and Antares, the astronomer is still without a clue.

OBSERVED AT A GLANCE

By HENRY JAMES

To pass a bonus act without providing the money to make it effective would be pretty cheap bunk even for a congress of politicians.

Ninety-six men were charged with intoxication in a Los Angeles police court in one day. Hair tonic and ginger fiends mostly.

Los Angeles police have a prisoner whom they term the "human fly," but they are not depending upon sticky paper to hold him.

A New York Chinese tong leader had, just as a thoughtful acquaintance shot him, a beautiful white woman on each arm. This social dereliction banishes all sympathy.

I. W. W. enthusiasts who went to Russia are anxious to get back. Even the interior of an American jail would seem home, sweet home to them.

The looseness of the probation system is condemned by a coroner's jury at San Francisco. Old stuff, but befitting the circumstances.

Idea which government mediators should be emphasizing in these strike conferences?

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

Justice Curtis D. Wilbur brings up the familiar subject of insanity as a plea in criminal trials, by proposing that such form of defense be eliminated. In so doing he is giving voice to sentiments more than once expressed in this column.

With many years' experience as a reporter in criminal cases, the writer has no hesitancy in saying that the plea of insanity is advanced as a fake, and that to this rule it is impossible to have an exception. It is advanced when there is no legitimate defense, and not otherwise.

If the commission of an act of violence is due to insanity on the part of the perpetrator, there could be no occasion for a trial. The principal, about whose mental condition there could be no doubt, would be locked up as a dangerous lunatic, and never be brought to trial as an offender against the law.

A man or woman, capable of performing the ordinary duties of life, plans and executes a murder, plans also a shrewd method of escape. If caught despite thoughtful precautions, such a person lays claim to the saving weakness of lunacy. Such a claim is nothing but confession coupled with defiance. That the prisoner has the intelligence to make it, and to realize the utility of it, is clear demonstration of mental processes functioning normally.

Insanity rendering a person irresponsible is as apparent as a club foot, a noisy example of intoxication, the absence of a limb, or a case of total blindness. In other words, it is absolutely, indisputably and ostentatiously the subject of knowledge on the part of observers. The so-called insanity that lasts just long enough to accomplish a murder is the sort relied upon to cheat justice, and it is a wanton and wicked subterfuge.

No matter about the hired alienists. Pseudo scientists or real scientists who swear in accordance with the fee they get, are not worth an instant's consideration unless at the hands of a grand jury.

Human affection is a queer thing. On the person of a robber killed recently in Los Angeles was a letter from a girl. The robber was a bad man in every sense of the word, a thief and murderer, a foe to society, a constant menace to life. He deserved exactly what he received.

Yet the letter from the girl, who thought that she knew him, evinced her belief that he was an ideal type, worthy of any degree of love she could bestow.

France is slow to be convinced that Germany is unable to pay. Such inability seems to be accepted as a fact by the rest of Europe.

So the matter stands, with the physical aspect of the situation subject to sudden change.

Government authorities have in custody a man believed to be prominent in the soviet government and in this country as an emissary of that concern. He was caught as he tried to stir up trouble in the coal fields, where already there seemed to be more than a sufficiency.

A series of resolutions condemnatory of interference with his activities may now be expected to appear in the organs of the parlor bolsheviks.

Lyman J. Gage, secretary of the treasury under McKinley, now a resident of San Diego, declares against Hiram Johnson, and praises Charles C. Moore.

This is gratifying but in no sense surprising. Mr. Gage was a republican, associated with a republican President, and his political views have not changed.

Colorado authorities bounced W. Z. Foster out of the state, and later looked for the law covering the case. Up to the time of this writing they had not found the law, but seem to be pretty well satisfied anyhow.

There may be no statute by the terms of which a ranting revolutionist may legally be fired across the border, but if he feels that his constitutional rights have been impaired, he can sue the whole state of Colorado, and maybe put it in the calabass.

There are plans for erecting a gigantic plant for manufacturing all accessories needed in the production of moving pictures. It is strange that this course was not taken long ago. Out here is the capital of the great film industry. Why it should have been paying tribute to distant cities, never has been clear.

WATCHING THE PARADE

By JOHN PILGRIM

This is the story of the pewter pitcher. A friend of mine who has a liking for what he calls antiques—and which are mostly aged and decrepit bits of junk—bought it of a dealer in that sort of foolery. My friend is a fairly steady buyer. He likes to drop into an antique shop and prowl. He has a dozen friends of the same sort. The trade of that coterie might not keep an antiquist alive, but it would certainly help.

"I bought a pewter pitcher of Spiked Mustache Smith," said he. "What for?"

"Because it was an antique," he said. "No other reason. Shortly afterward I took it back to him to have a slight repair made."

"I am glad you did," said Spiked Mustache Smith. "I can do that in fifteen minutes any day."

Four months later my friend, having moved away from town, asked me to go to the man of the spiked mustache and ask about the pitcher. He had written and his wife had written and nothing had happened. Smith said that nothing had been done with it. He proposed to do something with it some time. But he thought that my friend need not worry because he was not to be charged for it.

"I told him I would put it in perfect condition," he said. "That was a part of the understanding. Under the circumstances I think I am entitled to take my own time."

Now I've got to go down there and get that pitcher and pack it up and send it to my friend. All his friends will avoid the Smith antiquary as though the spiked mustached man had the plague. All of my friends will hear about it, because I am a slothful man who becomes enraged when I am forced to work. My friend's friends and my friends' friends will certainly spread the tale. If Smith of the antique store does not lose more trade than he can gain in a year I'll be bitterly disappointed.

The funny part is that the work to be done on that condemned little pewter pitcher really does not amount to anything. But Smith belongs to the log variety of the human race. His inertia is superb.

It must be noted, however, that even the very finest quality of inertia doesn't get a man anywhere.

The mother held up the bundle for inspection, and asked gaily: "Tell us now, frankly, which of us do you think he is like?" After a careful examination of the baby the bachelor replied: "Well, of course, it is not very intelligent looking yet, but he's wonderfully like both of you!"

INGLEWOOD IS NOT JEALOUS BUT...

Points to Growth of Glendale as Illustration of Cooperation

The wondrous growth of Glendale is attracting the attention of other cities in Southern California. Better than that, this city is being held up as an example of cooperation to the citizens of other municipalities, with the hint that they "go and do likewise."

The following letter was sent out recently to citizens of Inglewood by George M. Sutton, chairman of the executive council of the Inglewood chamber of commerce, and it is self-explanatory:

"If you were to draw a circle with Eighth and Broadway, Los Angeles, as the center, your line would pass through the heart of two independent municipalities—Glendale and Inglewood."

"Which of these towns, in your opinion, has the greatest natural advantages? Which one is nearest the harbor, the beaches, the industries? Which has the lowest car fare and the best, year-round climate?"

"Examine all the facts, and you will have to grant that Inglewood has more reasons than Glendale to become the fastest growing city in America. But Glendale's claim to that title cannot be disputed. She has the figures to show; also the houses and the people. However, here is some information that is not generally known: Sixteen months ago, Glendale was a hotbed of factionalism; business was exceedingly dull; property values were dropping; there was no leadership and no plans for the future."

"The above facts are true. But something happened about that time. The people got together through a standard chamber of commerce, as we are doing here. They reconciled their differences, enrolled 600 members, and began working out a real program for GLENDALE. Today, their chamber has over 1000 members, and the population has doubled. You hear no more of factionalism."

"The executive committee invites your attention to the above facts, and to the enclosed prospectus, because they show what can be done here for INGLEWOOD. When our membership committees call upon you to sign an application card and a check for dues, just reflect that we are all doing the same thing. That means unity and success."

MRS. VAN WORMER TO ENTERTAIN

Mrs. Van Wormer and her mother, Mrs. Swain, of this city, who is a member of her family, anticipate the arrival today of Mr. and Mrs. Carver and their three children from Toledo, Ohio, to make their permanent home in Glendale. Mrs. Carver and Mrs. Van Wormer are sisters. The Carvers have been planning to come for a long time and to insure their having a shelter when they arrived, Mrs. Swain purchased a home for them at 378 West California, over a year ago. In June they were able to dispose of their property in Toledo and now are ready to start anew in our little city.

Rev. Thomas B. Frizelle, who supplied the pulpit of the First Baptist church Sunday morning, was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Van Wormer. He is likewise much delighted with California and wishing he could transfer his residence to this state. He was pastor of a Toledo church when the Van Wormers lived there, but is now director of religions for the Northern Baptist association with headquarters in Philadelphia. In the past two years he has visited every town of 20,000 or more population in all the northern states of the Union. It is his first visit to Southern California.

EDENDALE ROAD TO BE REPAIRED

Glendale boulevard, in Edendale and a part of the central automobile route between this city and Los Angeles, will be improved if the members of the Glendale city council and City Manager Reeves have their way. They have worked for this improvement in the past, but their efforts have not been successful. They are hoping that this new effort may bring fruit.

It is estimated that every machine that is driven over this short stretch is damaged to the extent of $1, and there are hundreds of cars that cross this stretch daily.

STATE OFFICIAL BUYS LAND HERE

The money to be made in Glendale real estate is realized by "big men" on the outside. This is evidenced by the fact that N. D. Darlington, chairman of the state highway commission, has purchased a business lot here. He thinks there are few places in the state where the chances of increase in value are greater than they are right here in Glendale.

The Barton Bedtime Stories

TAD COON MAKES AN ASTOUNDING DISCOVERY

"That's duss fere I went in," the voice was saying right outside of Nibble Rabbit's old hole. And you know who was in it—Slyfoot's wicked wife. The mix narrowed her eyes to slits. She knew who was Frisk Squirrel. What a tender meal he'd make! But who was he talking to?

She crept back into the dark of the tunnel behind her just as Frisk stepped in at the door. She had to swallow hard to stop her growl. He smelled so tasty, just a tall's length beyond her nose. Her mouth was watering for him. If she pinned him cleverly by the throat and cut off his yowl no one in the wide woods would ever know what had become of him, not even the someone who was with him.

ing in or coming out when she made it? Tad couldn't be sure, but he put a stone there, too, and jammed it tight, so it would take some hard mink scratching to move it.

So far, so good. But he needed more help. Who could he send after it? For the thicket was still as still. Ah, he knew! Over in that clump of grass Bob White's wife was sitting. "Don't squawk," he warned her as he tiptoed up. "It's only me. But there's trouble about. Fly up to Tommy's barn and tell Watch the Dog I want him."

"I can't," she cheeped back. "It's too far. And my eggs are too near hatching. They might as well be eaten as get a chill at a time like this. It's my second nest, too. That calf stepped on my first one."

"Then get Stripes Skunk. And as you value your chicks be still about it."

This time she nodded and flew off quiet as an owl.

NEXT STORY—THE MINK THINKS SHE'S TOO SMART-FOR-TAD.

Tad Had Clapped a Stone Across It.

But if she didn't—that's who she'd have to deal with next. Who was it, anyway?

She learned soon enough. For Frisk started with surprise. "Why, 'tishn't the way it wath! It'd thome dirt piled up in it." He was backing out, a step with every word—"It—'t thmellh funny, too."

Tad Coon didn't need to be told. He could tell it for himself by the way Frisk's hair was standing up. "Lemme sniff!" said he. He pawed the little squirrel aside. "Mm! Mm! You're crazy, Frisk. You're just scared of the dark. Well, never mind, I'll get somebody else to explore it." He was talking as if Frisk didn't know anything more about it. But before the mink could bat an eye the light went out at the mouth of the hole. Tad had clapped a stone across it.

"You sit on that," he whispered in Frisk's ear. "Don't make a sound. But, well if you need me, it's mink! That's what! I'll bet a beetle-whisker she's in that tunnel where you went this very minute. I'm going down the bank to see that she doesn't sneak out Malty Kitten's hole the way you did."

In four bounces and a slide he was sniffing at the train Madam Slyfoot had just left. Was she go-

CONSERVING THE EYESIGHT

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

Author of "The Riddle of Personality," "Self-Development," Etc. (Copyright, 1922, by The Associated Newspapers.)

At this season of the year—season of vacation outings to seashore and mountains, of automobile tours and cross-country walks—it is well to recall that the conservation of one's eyesight is much more than a matter of reading and sewing in a good light, giving the eyes frequent rests from close work, etc.

Undue and unwise use of the eyes for near vision is by no means the only cause of an eye-strain that may have serious consequences. Eye-strain may equally result from making unhygienic demands on the eyes as regards far vision. And special perils to the eyes may lurk in the winds, dust and glare of the open country.

There are people who appreciate this so little that they will sit for hours gazing through a summer haze at distant landscapes or enjoying views of sands and waters on which a summer sun is beating. Others think nothing of riding all day in a swiftly moving automobile, compelling their unprotected eyes to take in the beauties of the ever-changing roadside, the white withstanding stresser of wind and dust, and glare combined.

When the day is done, these haze-gazers, seashore devotees and touring enthusiasts wonder why their eyes are reddened and aching. By way of a remedy they perhaps wash them with a boric acid solution, which is undeniably soothing and helpful to tired, inflamed eyes.

But better far, if one feels that one must day after day subject one's eyes to wind and dust and glare, is their safeguarding by the use of colored spectacles, of goggles, of veils free from dots and figured patterns which themselves may be provocative of eye-strain.

The wearing of a broad-brimmed hat, with the brim drawn down over the eyes whenever one is exposed to a glaring sunlight, is another protective-measure, available to all and for many indispensable. And even when wearing such a hat, eye conservation insists, none should sit facing the sun, whether indoors or out.

Neglect such precautions and the outcome may be more than the milder symptoms of eye-strain. Many a person has had to cut his or her vacation short because of the seemingly inexplicable development of severe headaches, vertigo, and perhaps nausea, later found to be due to nothing but reckless exposure of the eyes to conditions they were unable to endure.

I would add, too, for the benefit of vacationists and tourists who cannot always be sure of finding abiding places of sanitary excellence: Take along a supply of towels for your own, if only paper towels. There still are inns and boarding places where the roller towel is in vogue, and to dry one's face with a towel others have used may result in a dangerous eye-infection.

For the same reason—the risk of eye-infection—make it a rule never to rub your eyes with your fingers. In the course of the day your hands of necessity touch many objects, and on these may be germs productive of great trouble if transmitted to the eyes.

throughout begin at the side of the pan next the handle and roll the omelet, letting the pan rest on the stove a moment, until the omelet is browned, adding a little butter if needed, and turn onto a hot platter.

FRENCH OMELET
To make a French omelet, break the eggs into a bowl, add as many tablespoons of water as eggs, counting two yolks as a whole egg, and for each three eggs, a dash of pepper and a fourth of a teaspoon of salt. Beat the eggs with a spoon or fork until a spoonful can be scooped up, then strain into another bowl. If a mild flavor of garlic be agreeable, rub the inside of the bowl into which the eggs are to be beaten, with a clove of garlic. Have ready, in smooth and thin frying pan, a tablespoon of melted butter. Into this pour the egg mixture, set on a hot part of the range for a minute, then with a thin knife or spatula, separate the cooked portion from the side of the frying-pan and gently rock the pan back and forth, the side next the handle raised as the pan is pushed forward, and the opposite raised as it is brought back. When the uncooked part may run down next the pan. When creamy

PINEAPPLE DELIGHT
Two cups of water or liquid from pineapple, five tablespoons cornstarch, one cup sugar, speck salt, one cup shredded pineapple, juice one-half lemon, two egg whites may be added. Make as cornstarch pudding. Add pineapple. Pour in glasses.

RHUBARB PUDDING
Two cups rhubarb, two and one-half cups water, one cup sugar, two tablespoons cornstarch, one and one-half tablespoons cold water. Cook rhubarb in water, mix and cook as for cornstarch pudding, mold, chill, serve with plain or whipped cream.

WALNUT CREAM PIE
One cup milk, three egg yolks, one teaspoon vanilla, one cup ground walnuts, four tablespoons sugar, three tablespoons flour. Mix sugar and flour and add to milk. Cook until thick. Remove from fire and add beaten yolks, and nuts. Put in baked crust. Make a meringue of two tablespoons sugar and whites, and put on top. Brown in oven.

RICHARD DIX HERO OF 'WALL FLOWER'

Film Makes Big Success at the Glendale Theatre

Richard Dix, handsome screen leading man, has played in but one picture in which he did not propose to the leading lady—acceptably. Helene Chadwick has been the object of his love three times, while May Collins and Leatrice Joy have both yielded to his pleas. Now comes Colleen Moore, in "The Wall Flower," a Goldwyn Rupert Hughes comedy, at the Glendale theatre today and tomorrow.

It is said of Mr. Dix, that the first time he proposed he blushed violently through his grease paint, and that in real life he has never been known to do it, however flippant he may appear on the screen.

Max Eastman gives the following classic anecdote in his "The Sense of Humor," as an example of "practical humor." "Cicero tells us how his friend Nascia avenged himself upon a Roman gentleman by the name of Ennius, upon whom he paid a call. He had been informed by the maid that Ennius was not at home, and when it came about that Ennius called upon him he stuck his head out of the window and said, 'I am not at home.' 'What are you talking about?' said Ennius. 'Don't I know your voice?' 'Why, you rascal,' said Nascia. 'I believed your maid when she told me you were not at home and you won't believe me even when I tell you myself.'"

The Correct Weight of the Hippopotamus Is 3301 Pounds

- First Prize—M. J. Haven, 1909 Gardena Ave., Glendale, guessed 3301 lbs. $4.00.
- Second Prize—Leslie B. Mann, Hospital Annex, Soldiers' Home, Los Angeles County, guessed 3302 lbs. $3.00.
- Third Prize—Mrs. Robert Trowbridge, 1312 East Harvard Street, Glendale, guessed 3302 lbs. $3.00.
- Fourth Prize—Mrs. J. H. Dilley, R. R. No. 11, Box 302-C, Los Angeles, guessed 3303 lbs. $1.00.

These prizes would have been doubled had each contestant purchased goods and sent in sales slips from EACH ADVERTISER on this page. Checks will be mailed winners.

THE PUZZLE

In drawing this picture, the artist has made use entirely of the figures: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9. There are no other marks or lines. Count each figure by itself: there are NO combinations like 12, 13, 14, etc., just the simple numerals, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9.

THE PROBLEM is to find the total sum of all the figures used in drawing this picture.

The tops of the sixes are curved, and the bottoms of the nines are straight. There is no trick or illusion in this puzzle. Simply find the total sum of all the arabic numerals used and repeated in the making of the drawing. The total sum is the weight of the Hippo in the picture.

RULES

Anyone may compete in this contest except employes of the Glendale Daily Press, and members of their families.

Each contestant may submit only one answer. However, each member of a family may submit answers.

Contest closes Friday, Aug. 11, and winners will be published Monday, Aug. 14.

In case of a tie, equal prizes will be given to each tying contestant.

The decisions of the judges in this contest must be accepted as final.

The correct weight of the Hippo is the sum total of all the numerals of the drawing. The prizes will be awarded to the contestants sending in correct or nearest correct answers concerning the weight of the Hippo pictured, and the best answer to this question: "Which is the best advertisement on this page, and why?"

Send complete answers to Contest Manager, Glendale Daily Press.

Please write on one side of the paper only and write your name and address plainly.

This page will appear again and will then present names of prize winners and total weight of Hippo. It's a lot of fun, get started now.

OIL PROMOTERS GET WARNING NOTICE

Commissioner of Corporations Calls Attention to the Law

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 14.—Commissioner of corporations, Edwin M. Daugherty, has issued a formal notice to all promoters of oil development in the state of California advising them that, unless they have permits from the state corporation department authorizing the sale of their securities, the department immediately will take such action as is necessary to halt further financing of their companies. This notice is a follow-up of the announcement made by the commissioner recently relating to the sale of oil units, interests, and other securities of similar character.

Following is the notice in full as issued by the commissioner:

"Unless you have a permit from the state corporation department, authorizing the sale of your securities, this state department will attempt to halt the further financing of any such company which is proposed to be accomplished by the sale of its securities in this state. Oil promotion is naturally highly speculative. Such enterprises must be permitted to operate to insure the development of the state's resources.

"The corporate securities act was enacted especially for the supervision of the sale of such securities in whatever form they may be issued. The state corporation department is the only state department equipped to adequately analyze and supervise oil promotion.

"Certain securities are exempted from supervision by the act. Oil promotions were not intended to fall within this exempt class, in the opinion of the commissioner.

"Competent legal counsel vary widely in opinion on this point.

"Members of the state corporation department have rendered verbal and written opinions that certain oil promotions were exempt.

"This is to advise the recipients of such opinions that all such opinions must be disregarded unless supported by the opinion of the attorney general, formally written and handed down through the state corporation department.

"Otherwise the commissioner of corporations cannot be bound by such opinions.

"Further, you are advised that any and all oil companies, selling securities (in any form), without a permit, are, in my opinion, resorting to subterfuges and will be required to be subject to supervision.

"Violators of the act will be prosecuted.

"Purchasers of securities of companies unauthorized by the commissioner of corporations are warned that such securities are declared by the corporate securities act to be void, and that the courts probably will so hold."

Three detectives were shadowing a Frenchman who had pocketed some goods from a counter, and whom they suspected of belonging to a gang. After rounding a corner they found he was no longer visible, but soon came to a restaurant with the inscription—"Ici on parle francais."

"He'll be in here," said the first. "No," said the second. "If he thought he was being followed he would avoid going where he thought we should expect to find them."

"Yes," said the third, "but he would guess we should be smart enough to think of that, and would turn in after all."

So they went in and searched, but without success, for the Frenchman could not read, and therefore had not stopped.

'THE GREAT ALONE' INCORPORATION AT T. D. & L. THEATRE

Monroe Salisbury to Be Seen Today Only at Local Theatre

Picture-goers will have no regrets in seeing Monroe Salisbury in "The Great Alone." The confirmed fan who has seen this virile star in "The Barbarian," "The Man in the Moonlight," "The Sleeping Lion," or other of his pictures will find even greater delight in this latest of his films, "The Great Alone." In "The Great Alone," Salisbury reaches the apex of his screen career, giving an interpretation of the character of the half-breed which is a polished bit of acting.

We must pause to mention a name new to us, but which we believe will be one to conjure with—Maria Draga, Salisbury's leading lady in this production. We are told she has not yet celebrated her sixteenth birthday, a fact which is easy to believe. But her emotional powers are so great and her artistry so perfect that it might well be the envy of more mature actresses; and we predict stardom for her.

"The Great Alone" tells the story of a half-breed who is sent to college by a friend of his father and later by the same guardian entrusted with a difficult secret mission in Alaska. At college his prowess became the envy of team mates who sought to bring him into ridicule. A girl wins his undying gratitude by championing him and berating his tormentors. In the fur country he has opportunity to repay that debt at a double peril of his life; and a girl who loves him seeks to restrain him. How he fulfills his duty to his conscience and his employers and wipes out the thrilling-for-it is thrilling—action of the picture.

Lura Anson, Walter Law, George Waggoner and Richard Cummings are others in the cast deserving of mention for excellent performances.

"The Great Alone" was produced by West Coast Films corporation under supervision of Isadore Bernstein. The story was written and the production directed by Jacques Jaccard. The camera work was done by Frank B. Good, A. S. C.

Twenty-three years and four months are spent in sleeping during one's life (sleeping eight hours a day for seventy years).

Foley's Friendly Fancies

JAMES W. FOLEY

SONG OF ENDEAVOR
Go to it, Old Boy, there's the job that's to do,
There's the man who is needed to do it,
There's the chance of a lifetime that's waiting for you,
So take off your coat and go to it,
Don't ask too much why, and don't falter and stop
Don't fear you'll regret or will rue it,
But get in the game to be played at the drop
Of the hat, dig right in and go to it.

There's always a job that has need to be done,
There's always the chance that's awaiting,
There's something to do from the dawn of the sun
Without fretting or scolding or hating,
So off with the coat of you, on with the duds,
The jumper or apron, get through it,
If it's tunneling mountains or just peeling spuds,
There's the job that's to do, so go to it.

Oh, the world is so big and the need is so great,
And the chance is so fair, if you'll take it,
There are big fish to catch if you'll use the right bait,
The dream to come true if you make it,
But don't stand apart with your hands in your jeans,
If an obstacle rises, go through it,
If you have the spirit, you'll soon find the means,
So off with your coat, and go to it.

GLENDALE SIXTH UNION OF CHURCH AND LEGION IS IN BUILDING ACTIVITY

During July the City Made Big Gains in Building

The building of Glendale goes right on its even way, whether or not the real estate business of the city is dull or booming.

According to the Southwest Builder, Glendale has built itself into fifth place in all of the cities in the southwest during July, when business in real estate was undeniably dull.

Perhaps the explanation of the alleged dullness is the turn toward building on the purchases made earlier. If this is so, it is beyond question that there will be a bigger buying demand in the fall than ever before, due to the improvements given by the building of the summer.

Of the building during July through the southwest, the Southwestern Builder says:

Building activities in the Pacific Southwest for the month of July, 1922, make a splendid showing. Building permits issued in 39 cities and towns, including Los Angeles, aggregated in value $14,232,193, as compared with $9,276,685 for July, 1921, or of the smaller cities not being included in the latter total. This is a gain of approximately 52 per cent. Compared with the preceding month the July total is smaller but quite satisfactory.

Thirty-seven cities, including Los Angeles, reported for June a total of $16,680,338. This figure is also approximately 52 per cent greater than the total for June, 1921, so July holds up.

None of the cities outside of Los Angeles came up to the million dollar mark for July, but many of them make a wonderful showing compared with July, 1921. July, 1922, building operations in 38 cities and towns outside of Los Angeles amounted to $6,168,180, as compared with $3,773,322 for the same month a year ago. Pasadena, with a total of $987,826 leads cities outside of Los Angeles in building for July, with San Diego second, Long Beach third, Santa Monica fourth, and Glendale fifth. Two Arizona cities reporting, Phoenix and Tucson, show an increase compared with July, 1921, which would indicate a trend to improved conditions in that state.

The following are the cities reporting to Southwest Builder and Contractor valuation of permits for July, 1922, and July, 1921:
