POETRY.

My Sleeping Child.

Slumber on, nor know the sorrow Which on thy father's heart doth prey, Each sleepless night and cheerless morrov Is caused by HER, now far away.

Slumber on, nor heed my sadness As I gaze upon thy face;
A sorrow verging nigh on madness
As each lineament I trace.

Oh God, Oh God! how like thy mother! Gome, I'll press her lips in thine; Though lost to me, yet ne'er another To my breaking heart I'll twine.

Why gaze I thus while others slumber?

Alas, alas! they little dream The agonising hours I number By them unthought, unfelt, unseen.

Lips may smile while hearts are bleeding, The hollow laugh but ill conceals The anguish on the life-blood feeding, Alas! who knows but he that feels.

This midnight air my limbs now chilling, This dving taper, flickering dim, Are like the grief that, s daily killing, For all grows cold and dark within,

Slumber on, nor know the sorrow Which on thy father's heart doth prey, Each sleepless night and cheerless morrow Is caused by her, now far away.

> From the Family Journal. A True Wife.

Myra Aspinwall was left an orphan at that tender age when the companionship of a loving mother is most needed As the fatal close of a lingering illness was surely approaching, the subdued and chastened parent, with a heart full of love for the delicate bud of her soul, looked | Come, sit here by the fire and tell me all around her to find a place suitable for it to dwell and blossom in. Mr. Aspinwall had been dead many years, leaving but a scanty competence for the support of his family. The increased expenses incident to long sickness had used up much of the principal and Mrs. Aspinwall felt that she must leave her only child dependent upon the

She had but few relations in the world and only one who was very near. This person was Mrs. Sumner, her husband's sister, who, although quite an amiable woman, was far from possessing those traits of character which the pious, devoted mother desired should ever surround her child. But after careful consideration she concluded it best to confide her flower to this garden, trusting that its innate quualities and sweetness would not be ruined by neglect, but rather that its softness would reflect upon and beautify all that surrounded it. She therefore sent for her sister-in-law to come and attend her dying couch, and in a few short weeks she had ceased to be of earth, and the frail tenement returned to the dust from whence it came. The billity that bedimmed his vision. weeping Myra then left her home in the

for the young heart to pass through, in leaving her youthful associates, her vine clad cottage and fields of wild flowers; but the most severe of all trials, was in going far away from that spot where the hallowed remains of her spirit mother rested. On the grave, in the little churchyard, she vowed to ever cherish with holy zeal the life-long precepts and dying advice of her who had gone before.

Mrs. Sumner lived in style befitting the wife of Judge Sumner, who held the high resition of member of the chief high position of member of the chief council of our nation; and it was in this household that Myra Aspinwall received the advantages of a daughter.

This lady felt the importance of a sound education, and as her young charge was but fifteen, she kindly employed the best instructors to improve her already fine intellect, and the eager pupil determined that no lack of energy on her part should prevent her from being thoroughly accomplished.

In two years from this time she was introduced into society, and although no beauty, as the accomplished niece of Secretary Sumner, she was soon surrounded by admirers. I said she was no beauty, and in truth her features were decidedly irregular; but there was gleaming of a superior intellect in her eyes, and a sereneness upon the brow that told of a pure nature, which, if it did not attract instantly, won upon more intimate acquaintance the highest esteem.

Her uncle was a pompous old gentle-man, of the Virginia school, who leved to display his hospitality, and therefore encouraged the frequent visits of numerous friends, so that his mansion was ever the seat of life and sociability. He was a fine, robust looking person, and he admired the society of the young and gay. His wife, who was still very handsome, of late seemed disposed to be rather hypochondrical, and spent much of her time in her own room. Consequently, as they had no daughter, Myra was called upon to exert herself the more in entertaining guests and keeping unsullied the social honors of the house. Yet, amid all the splendor and dazzling efforts of fashion by which she was encompassed, she well retained that simplicity of soul which was hers when she lay weeping upon her mother's grave. Among her suitors was a young lawyer, son of the Speaker of the House of Representatives. For a long time he had been striving to gain her affections, and all others. But she had one great fear that she was not loved for herself entirely. She was afraid that the reflection of her uncle's high station, and perhaps a faint expectation that she would inherit a portion of his estate, had partly influenced the young man in choosing her for his wife. She was a noble girl, for although each day her lover pressed her to name the time when all his hopes should be consummated, and she felt her soul expand with complete reciprocation, she would not listen to him until she was sure that nothing was anticipated but the life-long possession of her own heart. She did not like to speak with her suitor upon the subject, but was firm in her purpose, and after a prayer to Heaven that she should have strength given her to bear the issue, whatever it might be, she repaired to his dwelling, and called for Mr. Moore, his father. She was ushered into the library, and the genial old man stepped forth to greet her, saying-

"Why, Myra, my child, God bless you for coming out to see me this cold morning-come to invite me to the wedding? about it.

Poor Myra could hardly summon up courage to answer him; her tongue seemed to cleave to the roof of her mouth, but raising her eyes on high as if calling for help, she turned them full and earnestly towards the old gentleman and

"It depends upon the result of this visit whether there is any wedding at all."

"Why?" quoth the alarmed father.
"Because," said she, "I fear when Rudolph finds that I am to be a portionless bride—that I am not to bring him one dollar, his feelings may change-his ardor all die out. My uncle will pass his whole property to his son—the orphan generous support she has enjoyed thus far from his hands."

"Sweet child! I love you better than before, and I know some one else who will set intrinsic value on so honest a into it. spirit. Rudolph is talented, and will left for a short tour in the South.

When they returned, Mrs. Sumner issued cards for a large reception, and as it was to be a stylish one, she was very de-sirous that Mrs. Moore should appear elegantly attired. She knew her plain taste and her convictions on extravagance for she had selected her marriage wardrobe with great economy, so she took one of her own handsome head dresses, composed of white ostrich plumes and persuaded Myra to wear it, together with a magnificent brocade robe, on that particular occasion. Not long after this Mr. Moore rented a snug house, and Myra soon showed him what a thrifty housekeeper she was. A little incident which I will relate presently, will show to my readers how well she managed. As their means were small, and they could not return invitations to parties they generally declined them; but as they were invited to a select gathering at the President's they of course felt obliged to go. Myra went simply dressed, caring nothing for the body's adornment, but seeking always to adorn the mind .-The next day her husband asked her why she observe such plainness the last evening—that her white plumed head dress would have added much to the beauty of her attire.

He was taken by surprise, and exclaimed—

"Why, Myra, what does this mean?" "Why, it means this, dear Rudolph, that I thought it much better to have feathers under the head than on it. I knew that your income was too small to as her rosy lips, and a pearl as pure as command superfluities, so I decided to her own good heart.—Sac. Standard. knew that your income was too small to expend my money in a more profitable manner than that which your generosity and kindness dictated."

"My precious wife!" and he folded her to his heart, feeling conscious that with such a discreet and far seeing companion for life his comfort was very sure of being attended to.

His practice grew large, and with the careful home management, he was soon enabled to buy a beautiful house, with a highly cultivated garden adjoining. The house was convenient and airy, and it seemed to please the taste of Mrs. Moore as well as his own, for they both concluded that it should be their home; that it should be the sacred spot where the flowers of affection should ever bloom until they they were transplanted to the paradise above.

The geese feathers were nicely encased and used, being daily shaken and turned and carefully guarded from the destructive moth, and at length their identify would hardly have been known, for they had spread and were so light, that they could easily have been mistaken for ostich feathers.

Yes, the young wife began in the right ay. The little ball of shining twine gradually increased in size as the thrifty hand spun and wound, until it became too large to clasp. The owner soon had a superfluity of the golden cord, and gave abundant girdles to tie up the flowing garments of the indigent. Husband and wife were blessed in seeing their will have enough to be grateful for, in the children fashioned after their own minds, but the influence of the dutiful, loving Myra was not confined to the home circle alone, but widened, as the ripples of water after a pebble had been thrown

The parents in surprise, turned around and asked their daughter who she meant, as the man was evidently a stranger to them.-"Why ma," said the child, "don't you remember the good man who saved my life? that's him, I know it is." With that the gentleman hailed the team, and calling the driver to him, asked a few questions, and was satisfied from his answers that is was really the individual who, four years before, had gallantly saved the life of his only child, which had accidentally fallen into the North River, at the town of Hudson, New York State. The parents expressed much pleasure at meeting him, and were pro-fuse and earnest in their thanks, and acknowledgments of obligations; but their daughter seemed as if her little heart would burst itself in the fullness of gratitude and delight. She had thanked him and thought of him, and remembered him in her little prayers, and wondered where he was, never for a moment forgetting belonged to her aunt.

He then presented her with a sum of land, far from the scene of that memorater it had happened, with the fresh instinctive impulse of nature, she recognized her deliverer at a glance, although he was dressed in the rough garb of a wagoner, and bronzed with exposure to the sun. The lit-tle girl begged to be allowed to make the choice, and, as may be supposed, she chose one of the richest and handsomest in the shop—a magnificent chronometer watch, worth $250. The man protested and he was forced it. After hearing the story, Mr. Denver, one of the firm, was so pleased with the incident that he added a buckle and seal to the watch, and presented the child with a pretty ring, set with rubies as red

> KIND WORDS .- They never blister the tongue or lips. And we never heard of any mental trouble arising from this quarter. Though they do not cost much, yet they accomplish much. They help one's own good nature and good will .-Soft words soften our own soul. Angry words are fuel to the flame of wrath, and make it burn more fiercely. Kind words make other people good-natured. Cold words freeze people, and hot words scorch them, and bitter words make them bitter, and wrathful words make them wrathful. There is such a rush of all other kind of words in our day, that it seems desirable to give kind words a chance among them. There are vain words, and idle words, and silly words, and hasty words, and spiteful words, and empty words, and profane words, and boisterous words, and warlike words.— Kind words also produce their own image on men's souls. And a beautiful image it is. They soothe, and quiet, and comfort the hearer. They shame him out of his sour, morose, unkind feelings We have not yet begun to use kind words in such abundance as they ought to be used.—Pascal.

A housemaid in the country, boasting of her industrious habits, said that on a certain occasion, she rose at four, made a fire, put on the tea kettle, prepared breakfast and made all the beds before a single soul was up in the house.

DELINQUENT TAX LIST .- With this number we issue a supplement containing the Delinquent Tax Payers of the county.

As stated in our last weeks issue we present the NEWS to our patrons this week much enlarged-the additional length of the columns is equivalent to about two and a half columns of reading matter. This is quite an addition to our labors it is true, but we cheerfully perform it, being fully persuaded that the growing interest of our prosperous town and county demand it, and that this important improvement in our paper will not be unheeded by our citizens, but feel well assured that they will redouble their efforts to extend its circulation, thereby contributing to build up and foster what has in this enlightened age become a necessity in all well regulated communities a GOOD NEWSPAPER.

The College.

An effort is now being made under the auspices of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and with flattering prospects of success, to establish a College at Cacheville. We understand that a lot of ten acres of ground has been donated, and that over six thousand dollars has already been subscribed to the building fund. An effort so praiseworthy in a cause of such great importance has our warmest sympathies and we bid the projectors God speed.

The founding of an institution of learning in this valley, of the character of the one contemplated may be hailed as the dawning of a bright and prosperous future to those youths who are now taking their preparitory course at the common schools; but not those alone, but also those yet unborne who are to come up from the countless ages of the future may congratulate themselves that their lot is cast where the temple of learning has already been erected.

But there is an other aspect in which this matter presents itself; it is an improvement within itself, a substantial one, to last for all time to come, a nucleus around which will gather others of a permanent character and thus a stimulous is imparted to every branch of industry and enterprise that is to affect to some extent the surrounding country.

The rearing of an institution of learning is of itself of momentous importance. Here direction is given to the impulses of the student that is to characterize the man in after life. The medical profession, the bar, the counsels of the State and of the Nations, the agricultural pursuits and the mechanical arts are all in due time to receive their share of the riches acquired within the College walls.

The Weather. The rains and the subsequent warm weather has wrought a wonderful change in the appearance of the surface of the earth. It has not only doned its robes of green, but we are delighted at the absence of that which, of all things else annoys us most, the dust. Some days past a ride in a vehicle or on horseback was a luxury, for the roads were in most excellent condition-indeed a strole in the fields was no mean recreation, the atmosphere being so balmy and exilerating that it imparted an elasticity to the step and a buoyancy to the spirits that is not experienced to so great an extent in the long summers suns. The wind for a few days has been in the south-east a portentious quarter at this season of the year, and on Wednesday we had some rain and on Thursday night between 10 and 11 o'clock the rain commenced to pour down in torrents accompanied with a strong wind from the south-east, and we do not think that we have ever seen more rain fall in the same length of time in the State than fell between the hours of eleven o'clock on Thursday night and seven o'elock on Friday morning.

WE take the following notice of this PAPER from the Tehama Gazette of the 12th instant. KNIGHT'S LANDING NEWS -This little journal, published at Knight's Landing, Yolo County, has been resurrected by S W. Raveley, who is editor and proprietor. It presents a very fair appearance, and has our best wishes for its success.

Upon reading the above we very naturally drew out the Gazette to its full dimensions to see how large it was, when to our mortification we found it lacked about two and a half inches of being as big as the NEWS. But to insure the NEWS a present it this week somewhat enlarged.

Agriculture.

In our issue of the 12th instant, we ventured to offer some suggestions upon the subject of preparing land for sowing | may meet the eye of some enterprising grain. In a conversation with a farmer a produce dealers. few days ago, we informed him of the plan indicated in that article and which we republish below. This gentleman stated to us that he pursued precisely the course there marken out with a portion of his erop which he sowed last year and which he harvested the past summer, and that part of his crop sowed upon fallow land yeilded 25 bushels to the acre, whilst that sowed upon ground broken in the fall in the usual way and about the same time the other was sowed yielded only 9 bushels per acre, making a difference in favor of the fallow land of 16 bushels per acre. Knowing that whatever pertains to Agri culture must necessarilly interest ourreaders, and believing that the space cannot be better occupied than by re-inserting that portion of the article referred to, we proceed to copy it.

"We believe, however, that the system of farming will be greatly improved so much so that it will be found that less rain will suffice for a crop than has generally been supposed-one we will venture to suggest; which is, to break the ground you design to seed as late in the Spring as it is safe to delay it. The dry weather sitting in so soon after the ground is broken will not permit any growth of vegitation that season, and as there is no heavy rains late in the Spring this ground remains in the same condition as when broke loose and mellow, and in a condition to receive the seed at any time before the Fall rains come. The grain being thus put in the ground before the rain falls, all sprouts at once, grows up evenly and takes deep root before the ground can even be broke if you wait until Fall to prepare the ground for seed. The winter here is emphatically the growing season and grain sowed upon fallow land well prepared before the Fall rains set in must, we think so far mature before the dry hot weather of Spring comes upon it that a crop of grain will be had.

By observing this plan in the culture of the cereal grains the farmer could not of course grow grain upon all his land the same year, but we think he would be none the looser by that. For it requires less seed for a part than for the whole farm, it costs less to reap a part than it does the whole, and it costs no more to thrash a thousand bushels of grain grown upon fifty acres of land than if it had grown upon a hundred acres. Besides he can avail himself of the benefit of fine pastures for stock upon what he now calls a volunteer crop until the proper time arrives to plow it up in the Spring for seeding in the Fall. Thus his land instead of being exhausted by a succession of crops is constantly recuperating."

Incidents of the Storm.

At an early hour on yesterday morning our worthy boot and shoe maker Mr. A. Garvis was suddenly aroused from his dreams by finding himself rudely thrust upon the floor and occupying the position his stove stood upon on retiring to restthe stove having retreated a short distance was dreamily reclining against the wall, picking himself up (Mr. Garvis, not the stove) he discovered the side walls of his house instead of being perpendicular, stood at an angle of about 45 degrees leaning to the west, not yet fully comprehending the cause of the conflict of the (three) elements (the stove, the house and himself) he issued forth and was equally as fiercely assailed from without by the merceless wind and rain, but notwithstanding this cold reception he was enabled to ascertain the cause of the commotion. His house from the force of the wind had taken a leap from its elevated position on stilts, and was swaying to and fro as though it would roll back the current of wind that had so rudely assailed it. Mr. Garvis is in fine spirits this morning and seems rejoiced that the mishap is no worse. We learn that a number of trees and sheds were blown down along the road between this and Cacheville.

Pure Water.

Our Sacramento cotemporaries are greatly exercised upon the subject of good water; this is a matter of some importance to the good people of the City of the Plains, and the wonder with us is that they have so long delayed the investigation of this matter, as to whence this pure element was to come and how to be obtained. That there is an inexhaustable supply of good water a few feet beneath the surface of the ground on which the City stands is an indisputable fact, but the modus-operandi of obtaining an ade_ quate supply at the least possible cost of the aqueous fluid seems hard to determine. We hope however, that they will ere long arrive at some definite conclusion upon which they can act as expeditiously as possible, for the absence of good pure waplace in the good graces of the Gazette we ter is a great drawback to the pleasures of a visit to that goodly City.

The Standard of Tuesday last copies the following from the Shasta Courier, and expresses the hope that it

"Why do not some of our merchants bring up from below a good article of fresh butter? It is singular that they will persist in keeping on hand nothing but an article strong enough to kill rats, when an abundance of fresh, delicious California made butter can be procured by the hundreds of firkins either in Sacramento or San Francisco. The very choicest article of fresh California butter retails in abundance at the Bay for seventy-five cents per pound-an inferior article selling from thirty to fifty cents per pound. Here, an inferior article of the strongest sort, brought all the way around the Horn, is retailed here from fifty to sixty cents per pound. This state of things is absolutely discreditable to our Shasta merchants. For one, we find it impossible to make a satisfactory meal without good butter. We can easier dispense with meat. Hence we do trust that some one of our merchants will make the experiment of keeping on hand a good article of fresh butter. We think he will find it to "pay."

We would say to our friends of the Courier that our merchants of Knight's Landing inform us that they have a "few more firkins left" of California made Butter (and a nice article it is for we have tried it,) which they bought of the farmers of this vicinity last Spring, and which they re-worked and packed in good tight firkins, and it as been kept in good cool cellars ever since, and they are now retailing it out at fifty cents per pound, but rather than the Courier man and his neighbours should eat rancid Butter they will take a little less by the firkin. So send on your orders.

ADULTERATION OF TEA.-The National Intelligencer, of a late date, contained an article from a correspondent on the adulteration of tea. The writer is evidently well posted and makes some startling disclosures. He says that in China and elsewhere the leaves of other plants are prepared to imitate tea, and not unfrequently the tea leaves themselves, after having gone through the process of infusion, are re-prepared with such skill as to pass again into commerce, and even to yield an infusion having the color and somewhat the taste of the original. The curious ingenuity of the Chinese have carried the art a step father, and enabled them to produce, under the significant appellation of "Lie Tea," a fictitious article, which consists neither of the tea leaves or of any plant whatever, but of the sweepings of tea warehouses and other rubbish, stuck together by gum, and made into masses of the size and shape of the rolled and twisted tea leaf. This fabrication is sold as such by the Chinese, and in selling a mixed article, they specify it plainly as so much 'tea," and so much "he," leaving it to the Christian merchants who buy from them to pass it off afterwards as all tea.

It is mainly used to mix with other tea. The detection of these adulterations is asy, after becoming acquainted with the characteristics of the genuine leaf. On being soaked for some time in hot water the leaves unroll themselves, and any Lie Tea present is betrayed by falling to pieces. The artificial coloring of the tea is practiced for two purposes-one to give mock tea the appearance of real, and the other to render green tea greener. This latter artifice the Chinese practice very extensively in tea meant for exportation from their country, and in fact until lately almost all the green tea sent out by them seems to have been thus treated. The substances used by them are, however, comparatively speaking, of an innoxious character, consisting of tumeric and indigo, or Prussian blue, mixed with China clay or powdered gypsum. In the fabrication of black tea, black lead and logwood are the articles mainly used.

WE learn by the Alta that the survey of the claim of John A. Sutter to the ranch of New Helvetia, including the site of Sacramento City, was brought into the U. S. District Court on Monday, and Judge Hoffman ordered that ten days should be allowed to the United States to file exceptions to the survey. It is understood that the claimant will also object-none of the interested parties, as Mr. Volney Howard said, being satisfied with the survey, save the man who made it. No doubt a great mass of testimony will be taken in this case, the most important one now occupying the attention of the Court, save the claim to the New Almaden Mine.

The following is the noon dispatch from Baltimore, yesterday:

The State election is now progressing. There is a great struggle in all the wards of the city as far as heard from. The polls in the Third Ward are blockaded with rowdies, and the police are doing nothing to hinder them.

In the Tenth Ward the Reform judge of election was intimidated and compelled to leave his post. Hinsley, who was appointed by the acting Mayor and rejected by the Council has been re-appointed. The Reformers have been driven off. James Jeffers, a son of Madison, was shot in the side and beat over the head by the Reformers whom he had mal-treated in the 15th Ward. Adam B. Kyle, a merchant doing business at 88, Hanover street, and a Reformer, has been shot in the temple, and is in a dying condition, his brother G. H. Kyle, who came to his rescue, was also shot and is dangerously wounded.

In the Fourteenth Ward a desperate struggle occurred, and the Reformers were resisted with arms. Sonny White, alias James Johnson, a notorious rowdy, run an awl into a Reformer, and was shot dead with a pistol ball. Two other rowdies named Harris and Duffy, were shot in the legs. Henry Starr, a Reformer, was also shot in the legs. W. Stiles, a was also shot in the legs. Reformer, was shot in the arm and leg. T. Woodall was badly beaten. Dr. C. Richardson, a Reformer, was pursued by the captain of the Thunderbolt Club, with drawn sword. He took refuge in a store, and the rowdies pursuing broke the windows. Richardson, however, managed to escape

Judge Giles, of the United States District Court, met Sheriff Creamer in the streot, and told him, in decided terms, that he was to be held accountable for all the blood shed to-day. He also told him as a Judge and a lawyer that he had the authority and it was his duty to interfere.

In the Eighteenth Ward the rowdies took possession of the polls, and gave the Reformers notice to quit. Mr. McCurly was severely beaten.

In the Fifth Ward the Reformers were driven off at an early hour. The son of Hon. Joshua Vansant was beaten while attempting to vote. Several shots were fired, but no person was injured. The Second and Fourth Wards were also in the possession of the rowdies, to the total exclusion of all who approached them.

In the Twentieth Ward the rowdies, are knocking down and mal-treating who they please. The police offer no protection to the citizens. The rowdies have brought a swivel on the ground. In the Twentieth and Sixteenth Wards a gang of rowdies from Washington, fully armed are aiding the Baltimore roughs. The indications now are that the Reformers, as a general thing have abandoned the contest, finding it impossible to vote without risking their lives In the Fifteenth Ward a boy has been mortally wounded by a shot in the breast. There is much talk in the streets among the citizens of the propriety of establishing a Vigilance Committee. A dispatch from New Orleans, of October 31st, says a delegation of Plug-Uglies from Baltimore, had arrived in that city. It is reported a Vigilance Committee is being formed to superintend the election in that city on the 7th.

Snow in the Mountains.

Placerville, Nov. 23.

The mail coach from Genoa arrived here on Tuesday evening, having left that place on Monday morning last. It snowed continually from the time of leaving Hope Valley. The stage reached Strawberry Valley on Monday night, where it remained until Tuesday morning, at which time the passenger reports the snow up to the hubs of the coach wheels. It has been snowing ever since. Many loaded teams were passed between here and Strawberry Valley. It is feared they will be unable to get through for some days. The storm has broken the telegraphic communication with Carson Valley, but it will undoubtedly be repaired.

The Petaluma Argus notices a daring attempt to fire a house last Sunday night, in which there were six persons sleeping.

FIRE .- Yesterday morning at eight o'clock, it was discovered that the building next to the Bee office was on fire, a general alarm was given, but no damage

A man named Ely was drowned in the Sacramento river, last week, near Lafferty's Ferry.

RACES.—We learn that a race is to come off at Barney's race course, two miles south-west of this place, on Saturday, December 3rd, for $1000-$500 a side, between the Harbin Mare and the Bulwer Colt-each to carry 85lbs.-distance 600 yards.

BOAT RACING.—The great yacht race run on Thursday last at San Francisco, between the Pride of the Bay and George Steer, was won by the Pride of the Bay, by about twelve minutes.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS .- We would call special attention to the following new Advertisements in to-day's NEWS. Noel Hubert, Fruit Dealer, Knight's Landing; P. L. Duston, Sadler, Cacheville; John C. Keenan, Orleans Bar, Sacramento; George Newcomb, Orleans Hotel, Sacra-

A lady friend of ours says the first time she was kissed she felt like a big tub of roses swimming in honey, cologne, nutmegs, and cranberries. She also felt as if something was running through her nerves on feet of diamonds, escorted by angels, shaded by honeysuckles; and the whole spread with melted rainbows. Jerusalem-what power there is in a full breasted kiss.

THE CITY OF "PLUG UGLIES."-It will be seen by the news telegraphed to us from Lone Willow Station, that the rowdies of Baltimore have enacted another series of the disgraceful scenes for which that city has become so famous of late. It is, politically, in the hands of desperadoes, who stop at no outrage, no bloodshed, to carry an election. Muscle and pistol have effectually triumphed over law and order. The Reform movement, which the decent portion of the eity had organized, has signally succombed to scoundrelism. We regret this exceedingly, as we looked upon it as a test of the moral power of a determined combination of the respectable classes to protect and purify the ballot-box. It has proved impotent, and the enemies of Republican government will point to another evidence of the weakness of our institutions. We sincerely hope that the next mail will bring us intelligence of the arrest and punishment of the vile scum who have so long terrorized over Baltimore. — Call.

THE BALL at the Cacheville Hotel on Thursday evening we understand was a very commendable affair, not so numerously attended but what all could enjoy themselves, and they kept up the giddy mazes of the dance until the wee small hours of the morn notwithstanding the fierceness of the storm.

A DESPERADO KILLED .- On Saturday evening last, a desperate character, named George W. Chase, was killed in Columbia by Under Sheriff George A. Hildreth. It seems that the latter had had occasion several times to arrest the former, who therefore nursed a deep feeling of revenge. On the night of the killing the parties met in a saloon, when Chase drew his revolver and fired two shots before Hildreth could draw. Both parties then fired, exchanging altogether seven shots-Hildreth firing three. The concussion of the shots put out the lights, but a crowd soon rushed to the scene with candles, and found Chase lying on the floor dying. Hildreth was unhurt. He gave himself up. On Monday, a Cor-oner's jury returned a verdict of justifiable homicide.

POETRY.

To One Beloved.

BY MRS. J. H. THOMAS.

Through clouds that glow like angel wings, Drift lightly down the golden gleami That heaven, from out its fulness, flings On earth's glad hills and singing streams

So sweet the morn, we well may guess How fair the day that smileth near, With light, and strength, and joy to bless The loving souls that wait her here.

And thou art sad, O friend beloved! Thy noon of fame hath tarried long; Yet darkened hours have not disproved The promise of thy glorious dawn.

Look up, dear heart! through bars of mist See thou the white wings glance and gleam Hear, from those clouds by sunbeams kissed. A sweeter song than thou couldst dream.

On, on, alike through cloud and fame, Those spotless wings rejoicing go; And still, unchecked by praise or blame, Those far-off sounds of triumph flow.

And thou-and thou-whose happy morn Went smiling up the mount of song, Think'st not of sun and dew are born The mists that hide her face so long. Sing on, sing on, and ere the noon

Those mists shall gleam in clouds of fire

And o'er thy poet brow shall bloom The laurel crown of thy desire. While I, dear heart, from this low nest, By sweet content and love made bright, My wings will fold in idle rest,

The Diamond Breast-Pin.

BY T. S. ARTHUR.

And watch thy way with proud delight.

It will cost two hundred dollars, Anna! said George Blakely to his young, proud, and extravagant wife. The tone in which he said this, showed that her request had startled him. I know it will. But what are two hundred dollars for a diamond pin? Mrs. Blakely's voice was half contemptuous. Mary Edgar's diamonds cost over a thousand dollars.

Just one thousand dollars more than her husband could afford to pay for them said Mr. Blakely.

He's the best judge of that, I presume, retorted his wife. But that dosen't signify. You cannot, Anna.

What do you do with your money,

The young wife turned sharply upon her husband, and her words and tone this only aroused her anger and made her more unreasonably persistent.

band at last, go to Camfield's to-morrow account on the first of January and it will be paid.

ances but had a diamond ring or breastman in his position, he had not married | difference in this particular. wisely. The handsome face and captivating manner of a dashing belle bewildered his fancy. He proposed in haste, was promptly accepted, and led to the marriage altar, not a true woman, to be transformed into a true wife, but a weak, capricious, vain creature, incapable of genuine love, and too selfish and narrow minded to feel the influence of honorable

Nearly half of his income she spent during the first year of their marriage, in dress and jewelry.

The demand for a two hundred dollarbreast-pin, coming upon young Blakely as it did, at a time when he had just made the unpleasant discovery of a deficit in his income, when compared with his expenses, of several hundred dollars, sadly disheartened him. But he was not brave enough to meet the exigency, and therefore, weakly yielded to a demand that should have been met by an unflinching refusal.

The first of January found Blakely short of funds by considerably more than the price to be paid for the diamond pin. Camfield's bill came in, and must be settled. It would not do for him to hold back in the matter of payment, for the jeweller was an acquaintance of more than one of the directors of the bank, and questions might be asked, and inferences drawn prejudical to his standing. In an evil hour, under distress of mind and strong temptation, the young man made a false entry which enabled him to abstract two hundred dollars from the funds of the bank. That was only the begining of a series of defalcations, which ran through many years, before the exposure came which always follows such a crime. It was easier now to supply the extravagant de-mands of his wife, whose annual wardrobe, and bills for jewelry, for which she had that passion which is characteristic of weak minds, almost reached the full amount of his salary. But the end came at last. One mornand turned pale with a sudden presentiment of evil.

What is the matter? asked his wife, who saw the singular change in his coun-

Mr. Blakely did not answer, but stood listening towards the door. Men's voices were now heard, and the tread of heavy feet along the passage. There was a start and a hurried movement by Blakely; then he stood, as if rivited to the spot.

Who are they! what is the meaning of this? asked Mrs. Blakely in alarm. At the same moment two men entered

You are arrested, said one of them, on a charge of defalcation.

Mrs. Blakely shrieked, but her husband stood still and statue like, his face of an ashen hue.

George, George? This is false, exclaimed Mrs. Blakely, recovering herself. You could not stoop to crime!

It is true, he answered, in a low despairing voice. Then laying one of his fingers on the diamond pin that glittered on her bosom, he added, speaking to her

You gained that at the price of your husband's dishonor! You demanded it. I remonstrated, and said I could not afford so costly an ornament. You repeated your demand, and I, weak fool that I was, permitted the contraction of a debt that could only be cancelled by dishonest means. I thought, when I married you, that I had obtained a wife whose virtues might help me upward to Heaven, but you have proved only a tempting fiend, dragging me daily nearer and nearer the brink of destruction, over which I now fall to hopeless ruin. I have robbed the bank, but it was for you!

Then turning to the officers, in a calm

I am at your service. The words of her husband had stunned Mrs. Blakely. She never saw him afterwards. That night he passed to his account before a higher tribunal than an earthly one, and she was left in poverty and disgrace.

The story is one of every day life.-George Blakely is the representative of a class. Not all of them rob banks, or defraud their employers. But all of them to support idle, extravagant wives in costly establishments—costly in comparison with their means-spend more than their earnings or profits, and fail in the end to pay their just obligations.

A modern young lady, fashionably educated, and with modern notions of style, stung him into a rather harsh reply. But | fashion and domestic equipments, is altogether too costly an article for a young man of small means or a moderate salary. Mr. and his wife were sitting a few days since quite close to each other, in their home, the husband feeling somewhat lover-like, although for years a married man, put his arms around his wife and saluted her affectionately. The wife pushed him away saying: You should not do such things when the door is open and people are passing. They'll think we are not married if they see us kissing each other.

In a late trial for the amount of a tailor's bill, it appeared that the clothes ing, seven years from the day of their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Blakely were about leaving for the opera, when the bell was rung violently. Mr. Blakely started that the clothes supplied did not fit the defendant.—
