

North-East Harbor, Maine,
HARVARD UNIVERSITY,
Cambridge, July 16th, 1892.

Dear Sir,-

I have heard in a roundabout way that the Chicago University has made some proposition to Mr. Charles B. Corey to part with his collection of bird skins. Is Mr. Corey likely to sell them, and is it a collection which the Museum of Comparative Zoology would like to have? I have always supposed that Mr. Corey was not likely to sell his collection--at least, not at present.

Very truly yours,

Charles W. Eliot

Mr. William Brewster.

Charles W. Eliot.

July 16-1892

North-East Harbor, Maine,
HARVARD UNIVERSITY,
Cambridge, July 22nd, 1892.

My dear Sir,-

By all means consult Mr. Agassiz about Mr. Cory's collection. I just mentioned the subject in a note to him a few days ago.

Mr. Agassiz wrote to me asking about a course on Ornithology for next year. What Mr. Miller was it that you proposed for Instructor? How much would it be necessary to pay him? My impression is that he was an undergraduate.

Very truly yours,

Charles W. Eliot

Mr. William Brewster.

Charles W. Eliot.

July 22-1892.

19 June '98

17 QUINCY ST

CAMBRIDGE.

Dear Mr. Brewster:

I knew that you were interested in the problem of improving the New England woodlands, and I am glad to hear that you agree with most of the doctrine in Charles's concise treatise.

Do you discriminate between the work of the Boston Park Commission and that of the

Mr. Wm Brewster

Metropolitan? The latter has not done much forestry work; but what it has done has in the main been consistent with the principles stated in Charles's report.

It seems to me that these principles have wide application in New England, and that they are convincingly stated in this little book.

Your influence would help to make it useful

Very truly yours
Charles W. Eliot

Eliot - Charles

June 19, 98,

Asticon, Me.,
July 12, '99

Dear Mr. Brewster:

Can you tell me about Sylvester Dwight Judd, a biologist now employed in the Bureau of Agriculture at Washington? I want to ascertain what his capacities and tastes are. He has a strong interest in ornithology; hence this inquiry of you.

Very truly yours,

Charles W. Eliot

Wm Brewster, Esq.

Eliot - Charles W.

July 12. 1899.