because of over-confidence part of the proof had not been in the hands of the Secretary a sufficient length of time, and upon the point being raised, the President ruled that the breed could not be admitted. This was a great surprise and blow to me, since the Revision Committee has assured me that there was no question about the recognition of the breed and it seemed certain then that

Partridge Rocks could not be a Standard breed for five years longer. The making of the breed had been a system of pedigreeing, which enabled me always to know individual laying qualities and the new fowl had more than met expectations, both from utility and fancy view point. reported to be exceptional in size and color.

Sixteen pens, the best I had ever owned, were mated for the season of 1910. An attractive mating list was being prepared, when a disastrous fire destroyed the business block in which my office was located and all manuscript, cuts, correspondence, etc., was gone forever. Feeling that I was certainly born under an unlucky star, but realizing that the new breed was steadily winning its way, the task was begun with renewed energy and a very respectable mating list appeared which was a trifle late.

My success in the show room caused jealousy among competitors and resulted in some unpleasantness which, however, ended very satisfactorily. The delay in getting out the new Standard paved the way for application for recognition and at St. Louis the breed received admission without a dissenting vote by the same meeting which had just previously exonerated me of charges for printing a standard of the new fowl in my mating list for 1910.

At several of America's leading exhibitions my fowls again won nearly all prizes while at the great Kansas City show "Delineator," the first prize cockerel, was not only awarded the American Poultry Association Diploma for the best cockerel in the American classes, but received the second highest number of votes for the best male bird in the show. In the hands of my customers similar honors were won.

Twenty-five matings were made for 1911 and the youngsters have been more promising than ever. At this early date fine specimens have been sent to many points, far and near, including shipments to England and South America. Today Partridge Rocks are ranked among the leading breeds by some of America's foremost judges.

Many difficulties were experienced in producing and perfecting, but today Partridge Rocks are strictly a single mating fowl and reproduce more true to type than any new breed ever did. It is actually surprising, when raised under favorable conditions, how few real culls there are among them and what a large per cent. of the youngsters can be satisfactorily sold for breeders.

This is not to be wondered at for from the very beginning this fowl has been made with an ideal always in mind.

R. C. BUFF LEGHORN CLUB MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Rose Comb Buff Leghorn Club of America was held at Buffalo, N. Y., during the International Show Jan. 16, 1912. There was an unusually good attendance. The following officers were elected: W. H. Didier, President, Fort Wayne, Indiana, W. J. Vrooman, Tutela, Ontario, First Vice-President, F. A. Tecktonius, Racine, Wisconsin, Second Vice-President, Howard J. Fisk, Secretary-Treasurer, Falconer, New York. There were several changes from the previous year's list of State Vice-Presidents. The executive board is composed of the following: J. A. Counter, Sylvania, Ohio, W. M. Bean, Anoka, Minnesota, F. S. Zwick, Seymour, Connecticut.

The Rose Comb Buff Leghorns are becoming very popular in Canada and M. Vrooman will look after their interests and the interests of the Club in Canada.

The Club was found to be in excellent financial condition with sufficient Club Ribbons for another year.

It was decided that every State Vice-President should put forth every effort to secure members in their respective states, as they are better able to keep in close touch with each breeder. Each State Vice-President securing six new members will be given a state cup to be competed for at whatever show is decided upon by members of that state.

It was decided to get out a new Club Catalogue and all breeders and members are earnestly requested to favor us with an ad. and an article of interest pertaining to breeding, etc. Rates will be $4.00 per full, $2.00 per one-half, and $1.25 per one-quarter page. Cuts of fowls, etc. at the same rates. Back of the cover will be let to the highest bidder.

We trust that every member will assist us in this effort and help to secure new members. To breeders who are not now members let us urge you to join the Club and help us put this popular breed in the front ranks where it rightly belongs.

Next Season's Show

By C. F. Townsend

The slogan of one well known fancier is: "You cannot win without my strain." And so far as the old Madison Square Garden shows went, he certainly told the truth.

Now I am almost tempted to make a new one—that is for the beginner with fancy poultry—by saying: "You cannot win without reading the Poultry Fancier!"

And I would be pretty close to facts at that.

The reason is that the Poultry Fancier is the Fanciers' magazine. It is devoted to their interests, and is the only magazine that fills the bill.

I have shown, and have won many prizes, and I can say, with entire truth, that I have gained more solid benefit from the Poultry Fancier than from any other magazine, show points considered.

And to help you, who may be a beginner, I am jotting down a few pertinent facts.

To win next season you must have winning birds. You can get them, legitimately, in only two ways: Breed or buy. If you have plenty of money, the latter will be the easier way. But if you are a true fancier you will never be satisfied until you have bred your own winners.

To get winners you may either set eggs from your own stock, or buy eggs from others.

If you have high grade and properly mated birds, of course you will use their eggs. If not, your wisest plan is to buy high grade eggs from high grade stock.

In this way you really breed your own birds, because it depends wholly upon you whether you get prize birds or culls. You must remember that the finest chicks ever hatched can be matured into mere "runts," of no value, if improperly bred.

Therefore it is up to you, as a breeder to grow these chicks into blue ribbon winners.

How is it done?

Well—there is no g-r-e-a-t secret about it!

All you need do is to keep them growing every minute from shell to show room!

This means a lot, however.

The eggs must be incubated right, either by hen or machine. If the former is used, be sure that you have the very best setting hen that you can buy, beg, borrow or steal. You must be sure that she is experienced, tried and tested. Give her every possible advantage—freedom from lice, a secluded nest where nothing can molest or disturb her, with a good dust-bath, hard grain, fresh water, grit and charcoal.

When the chicks are hatched, see that they are placed in a roomy colony house, with plenty of ground alfalfa on the floor and a covered out-door run for hen and chicks. Make a separate little feed place for the chicks where the hen cannot get at their food. And as soon as possible get these prospective winners onto the grass where they can get their green stuff as they want it. Keep them stuffed all the time. You cannot over-feed a growing chick—it being understood, of course, that the food is sweet and wholesome.

As soon as the cockerels begin to get busy separate them from the pullets. Take the best ones and place each in a separate colony house with a good out-door run.

Don't let the pullets lay before showing. If they show that they are about to lay change their quarters and change their food. A pullet is at her best just before laying, and that is the time to show her.

You can hatch blue ribbon birds in incubators. It has been done time out of mind. But if you have never run an incubator don't put your prize eggs into it until you are acquainted with the machine. Every incubator has a method of its own, and on occasions it can be as cranky as a hen. Therefore as a starter I advise you to use the "nature" method. Depend on the hen. If she is right, and the eggs are right your chances will be better than if a machine is used at the outset.

THE BUFF ORPINGTON DUCK.

By Otis K. Hobbs.

As to this great breed of ducks, we will give you a few of their peculiarities and valuable traits, also some pointers on what they have already accomplished and what we expect of them within the next few years. They certainly will be the leading ducks. First, because the buff color is in such big demand and also because they attain great size, being nearly as large as the Pekins. And they outlay all other varieties, winning in several contests where nineteen pens competed for honors. This is sufficient evidence of their laying qualities.

Every duck raiser for some time has been looking for a duck that has size and eggs combined to secure market results. The Buff Orpington ducks have these qualities, besides are in great demand as a fancy bird, having such beautiful plumage, being so easily raised, and eat and live on less for a large duck than any, and a layer of large white eggs (Hobbs Strain, Hickory Grove, Ky.) By investigating them you will find them the greatest money makers of them all, and ones you will always be proud of from the start.

They are demanding great attention as a fancy bird and large sales have been made during the last few years with stock birds. They only need to be seen to be appreciated. The greatest and most beautiful duck ever invented. To turn them down you simply turn dollars from your bank account, as they are already recognized the coming duck of the world. And a greater investment could not be made than of these ducks for either market or fancy purposes, because they make you money every day in the year with less trouble and expense of any fowl that grows, and always have a sale for them.

You have no idea the money you can make on even a pair or trio or setting of eggs of them. They catch the eye and attention of everybody. On the farm, on the city lot, and in the show room, a great and pleasant industry.

And all poultrymen who are on the alert for something new and grand should not hesitate the investigation of this handsome breed of ducks. Buying their foundation stock of an experienced breeder to make the starting right with the best and purest blood possible, and to those who start right are the ones who have the best proposition to offer, getting in on the ground floor, and reaping what is in store awaiting them.

We expect to write again soon, telling you more about the origin and history of these ducks. If you will keep in touch with this journal, or better still, subscribe for it much will be learned in regard to this wonderful duck.

WHAT GOOD CARE AND BREEDING WILL DO.

It is wonderful what good birds can be produced with care and breeding, as many people think it is luck or that they must buy birds that are winners to win a prize. This has proven a big mistake by many, and yet there are poultrymen who think they cannot win a prize at the big shows unless they have what some people call a pull, or they think they must stand in the ring in order to get a prize. We have often heard poultrymen (or poultry cranks) tell of their good birds, and how much better theirs are than the winner's, still they don't win. Why? Many of us poultrymen think we know it all, but this is a great mistake and as a rule we do not think so, but believe that the beginner with poultry does not know anything. And often a poultryman advises others not to show birds as they think there is no chance to win.

To prove that beginners have just the same chance to win at any of the large shows as an old breeder, without any pull (as is called by the poultry crank) you will notice the First Prize White Plymouth Rock Cock at Philadelphia show was owned and bred by W. F. Bisher, Bryn Athyn, Pa. This was the first show that Mr. Bisher had ever shown birds and he was somewhat surprised to win on White Plymouth Rocks. As a rule the White Rocks are a hard bird to win with and competition is great, but great credit must be given to the good care and the breeding of those birds. Mr. Bisher's first experience was to purchase a setting of the best eggs that he could find, taking care of the chicks and carefully studying them, and purchasing a nice male bird to put with his Pullets, and from the very best he hatched all his chicks. His point was to have good ones, no matter how few, for the first few years, and now he's got his flock up to a large number and it is no easy matter to go in his yards and pick out a winner, as nearly every bird is the same, and could be called all winners. He has carefully studied the standard on his White Plymouth Rocks and any bird that does not come near this point Br. Bisher does not keep, but sends to the market. That is the way he has made his success in breeding.

Now we find that any one who has good birds can win; but one must have the birds; and it is not always best to think that no one else has any good ones. The old reliable breeders will sell you eggs from their best birds and often one can produce winners from them, but great care must be given to the chicks, for no matter how good your stock is if they do not receive good care they will not make a prize winner. Mr. Bisher gives his wife the credit for winning, as it is she who takes care of the birds and caused the success in raising the prize winners.

Buff Leghorns. Mervin Wintrode, Littlestown, Pa.

In selecting a breed of chickens one has to be aided by the object for which they are to be kept. One breed will have a decided call over another in certain respects, whether it be for eggs or a table fowl. But no matter what the breed, unless a proper and thorough system is followed in the care and management, no profits of any consequence can possibly be made. Now for the man who has the necessary fitness, patience and grit, there is no occupation more profitable, more interesting and more healthful than this. The individual who would make a success of poultry would succeed in other walks of life, and those who fail in other spheres of labor must not turn to poultry with the idea that it color. We want the male bird to be rich, even buff, with a very little dark in wings and saddle. Pay special attention to shape, as that is where many judges mark to the Standard of Perfection. We mate cocks to pullets and cockerels to hens. Try to overcome in the females what is lacking in the male bird, likewise female defects to be overcome in the male so that the Standard may be followed. We try to keep that graceful sweep of the hackle, back and tail, that beautiful carriage that can only be had by a well rounded breast, that golden buff color which is even throughout and free from shaftiness, a nice serrated comb, not beefy nor unbecoming to the typical leghorn head.

is a short road to fortune, as the work entails many trials and tribulations over which only those with patience and industry prevail.

Therefore I impress upon those whose thoughts lightly turn to the raising of poultry to first consider the daily attention required if beautiful poultry is to be procured. Now I will give you a bit of advice how to begin the raising of fancy and bred-to-lay Single Comb Buff Leghorns. Let your watch-word be economy; economy in houses and fixtures; economy in feeding and management. Every care must be exercised in the selection of a suitable site to conduct the raising of poultry. Now the most important thing to raise Blue Ribbon Winners, as well as to establish an egg-laying strain, is to start with strong healthy stock or eggs from well matured stock and not from inbreeding stock or eggs. We should mate a vigorous bird of the very best shape, color, size, head markings, etc., to females that are fully developed and with strong under

In color I think the Buff Leghorns are at the head of all the other buff birds. If you want fowl that are bred for laying, as well as prize-winning stock give them a trial. Now when one is out for business, I maintain that the selection should be made for business and therefore the best and safest course to pursue would be the selection of a breed noted for its egg laying propensities as well as the fancy part.

A small area should be reserved for the production of green stuffs, either clover or alfalfa and for roots, such as mangels and potatoes. A good plan is to use the pens in rotation for this purpose as cropping in this manner not only sweetens the pens but the soil would by reason of being well fertilized also produce excellent crops. Corn provides excellent shade, and the plant being a greedy one will take up more thoroughly the properties in the soil. If you can, always provide plenty of shade for the

Knowledge and Gossip

By William Hipkiss, Scottdale, Pa.

Of all the chicken knowledge and gossip heard around the corner we are often amused at the different opinions gotten from those who have solved the chicken problem in a short time. If we could get something of value as to the breeding and mating of the different varieties it would be not only instructive but perhaps years of breeding gained to the beginner. You may for a time fool thus with your nonsensical talk as to what you think you know of the secrets you are expounding to him free gratis; of the way to secure an unbeaten record of an egg laying bidly by purchasing from you a trio or breeding pen of an unbeaten strain which took the blue at the largest entry on the corner. Now it is one thing to think we know and have the goods, but the question is are we in possession of either? If not, those who are interested in the variety they keep will sooner or later gain this knowledge and will place you as the Dude in the show room who has made his first entry and stands in the corner with his hat a tilt and mouth set as if taking a bite of a doughnut and anxiously waiting to see if Mr. Judge will adorn his coop with a blue.

Now you can hear this fellow who knows all things. He can tell why you did not win and whether your bidly is too high in the rear end, or that her Merry Widow hat was affected (probably by his "Hot Air"). Street advertisers you may term us if you will, as we teach the laws of breeding and success you may have with each order, while he unloads to the beginner his useless stock at many times their value. The proper place would be the "black," as he knows no more of the value of his stock as a breeder than the novice himself.

Now I do not mean to condemn a breeder because he is unable to carry large glaring ads. If his guarantee is sufficient that he can deliver me the quality I am seeking and as a rule a breeder interested in his variety for his own pleasure is apt to have that good quality for the interest taken and the knowledge gained in its breeding and yet be unable to carry large ads., owing to the fact that he would be unable to supply the demand, for lack of room, unless he followed this as a business, in which case he must breed on a large scale.

Now this article in itself is readily seen to be for the full benefit of the beginner; to start him on the right track both in purchasing his stock and as to what he should seek for his breeding pen, also to guard him against those who claim to have this Chicken problem solved in such a short time by unloading to him his ware on the corner. This is an injustice to reliable breeders and misleading to beginners. If followed out will be years of breeding lost and nothing of quality in the end.

First select a variety you would like and one that would be a pleasure to you. Then purchase from a reliable breeder who will give you the information desired as to what you should have for a good foundation. With stock of good blood lines it should not be sufficient even to know you have a good looking specimen

BRED FROM RANGE GROWN BIRDS

It's Not How Many Chicks You Buy—It's How Many You Raise That Spells Success

LAKEVIEW FARMS chicks are livable chicks as well as quality chicks, because they are bred from quality birds that have vitality and stamina. They are the chicks that will develop into robust cockerels and pullets that will please, and in addition you stand a chance of raising a large percentage of show birds.

Before you as it is to know the ancestors back of the stock and that it comes from a line of winners. An old saying is "The male is half the pen." I am inclined to think if he is of any value in the sense of line breeding that we should follow, he would be all the pen whether he be used for birds of utility or exhibition. And to maintain the high standing of egg production it becomes necessary for you and I to know his sire and dame and that he came from a good laying hen. That which was imparted to him he will transmit to his progeny, the same applying to exhibition birds also.

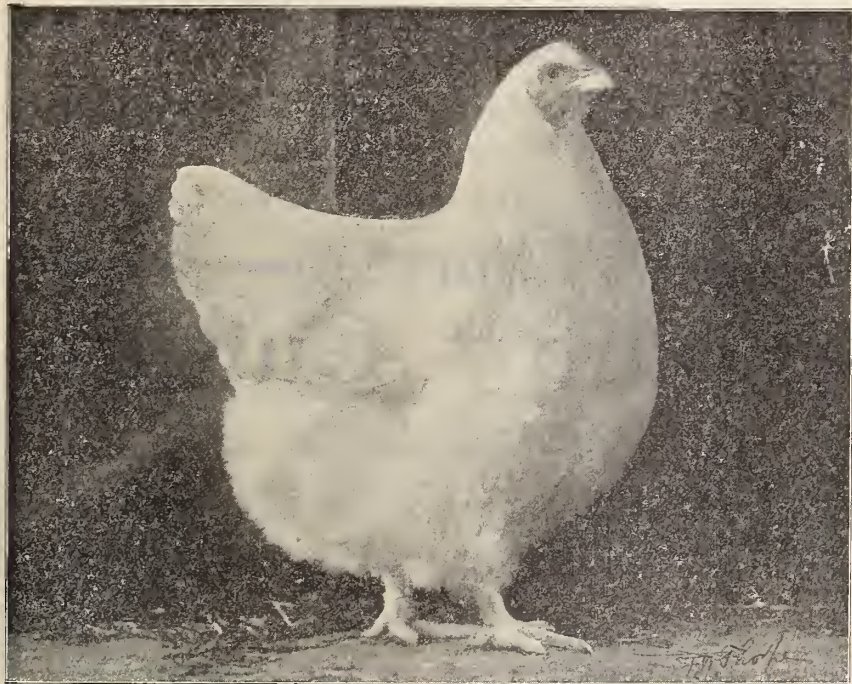

If your flock is of the partial colored and double mated use the males of your pullet line at the head of some pens which you know are sons of winning dames which also have winning ancestors as far back as possible. Mate your cockerel line in the same order and use females of good type and color that you know were descendants from winning males. Select vigorous birds as breeders.

Now Mr. Beginner while my knowledge box is small so deep a question as the fellow so readily explained on the corner, do not expect to receive such quality as described above at your Dollar prices. This stock is always in demand and when we have the confidence of receiving such quality at reasonable figures we should not hesitate when offered from reliable breeders, knowing this is the quality for your foundation. We who seek to obtain the best possible, sparing no expense or trouble, often get discouraged at the inquiries made. It is evident parties are at a loss even to know that such stock is even double-mated to obtain the fine qualities required by the standard. Often the breeder has to write to know their wants. They seem careful to ask for the best possible to be had, perhaps adding not to score less than 95. When explaining that your stock is line and some even pedigreed of strains equal to other large breeders and guaranteed they expect same at $1.00 prices and fail even to thank you for your information.

I can only in justice to so many reliable breeders and protection to quality stock of line and pedigreed blood say, "Shame to such Inquiries." Better you purchase stock of those who offer at your own prices or go in the duck business. It would be more pleasant to reliable breeders who follow as a business to refuse giving answer to such who seek to take the advantage of your years of breeding, as it is only valuable time lost. Stock as described should be worth at least $5.00 even only line bred, or else should have received the Hack Birds pedigree from winning sires and dames of reputation should be of value to any breeder and are always in demand at prices near their value. Knowing this is the cream of quality for your foundation you should not expect this class of goods from a small breeder at your own figures. Surely the reputation of his stock is worth something when he has proven their merits in competition at the big shows. His guarantee should cover you fully. More so if he states he is a member of the Club to which his variety belonged and a co-worker of the Fraternity. Otherwise he is in my own opinion a breeder for as much as he can pull for his stock and a fakir at the business, and the editor should not allow his ad. to contaminate his paper. We would then be able to distinguish the difference between the two classes of breeders. If you take a little advice when making inquiries, don't ask for just the variety. We have perhaps thousands who are breeders by name only. State your needs. Ask information on the variety you are seeking and the quality desired. Any reliable breeder will readily give you the information desired—if double mated and what you should have in your breeding pen for best results. But, he would feel discouraged breeding such quality if he had to cater to you three or four times by letter to get a sale at your ridiculous prices.

Now just reason this matter with yourself. If you are interested let it be a pleasure in your breeding of any variety. Study your flock as to their needs and requirements. Aim to have the quality the Standard requires as far as your means will allow. Better to use even two or three good birds as breeders, concentrating your quality together, than a whole flock breeding in a hap-hazard manner, as in the end you are assured nothing. Have some idea that your flock will produce a good per cent. of the quality you are seeking, make it a point to learn the defects of your flock as they show themselves. Persevere in knowing how to avoid same in your mating of next breeding season. You will be surprised the knowledge you can gain of your Biddy and her good qualities. This question of breeding and mating is large enough for all the wise heads even of this enlightened age, and while the brain has been working off the best the world affords yet no authority has yet laid claim to know it all. And the little knowledge you and I possess and the secrets that hundreds of breeders to-day have not yet imparted to us. Yet you may have this free with each order from the fellow around the corner. If you are interested then become a wire in furthering the interest of that quality and variety you keep and help place them in the class to which they belong. Affiliate yourself with that Fraternity. Help bear your share of the burden with the veteran poultryman who has labored for many years to bring both class and varieties up to the Standard of the present day.

By all means be a member of the Club of your own variety, where you will have access to both knowledge and breeders. This is to your benefit and learning. If by chance you are a R. C. Brown Leghorn Breeder, whether beginner, amateur or as pleasure or business, I care not. You only show your weakness by not being enrolled. If quality is not confined among the members of such variety then it is needless looking in any other place. At present this Club is seeking to place the little brown hen to the place it belongs, without doubt the richest plumage of almost any breed of birds, and undoubtedly the most beautiful in the show-room of the Leghorn family, and as a layer can hold its own with any other variety. A beautiful catalogue can be secured free gratis to any who are interested, by applying to secretary (Mrs. W. W. Gale, New Haven, Conn.) Any who are seeking, get wise; also much information can be received by making all inquiries in a proper manner. State your needs. If he offers you quality don't expect it at 5 and 10 cent prices. This quality refuses to go begging for sale. Neither is it necessary to send chasers for orders. The breeder well knows he must have the goods as advertised to please or else quit the business. If he fails to live up to the guarantee of his offer make it known to the editor of the paper; he cannot afford to sacrifice his business with fake ads. Be honest and honorable in your dealings. Trust the time will come when both Fraternities and Poultry papers will to that end work so we may know the Reliable Breeder from the other fellow who breeds and sells his stock on the corner of the Square.

drive a few thoughts home that I acquired by experience.

All fowls of worth depend quite as largely on their keep as on their blood and inherited tendencies. This fact has been proved many times through many reliable experiments. "Like begets like" and "you can't make kid gloves from hog's ear" and all that, but, also, you can't "grow roses among thorn bushes." We must bring out every iota of good there is in them. There are breeders who go so far as to assert that the irregularity of one meal, or feed, will affect the markings to the extent of the coloring value of that one feed during the process of feather formation. As illogical as this may seem, upon first perusal, after a careful deliberation may not seem so ridiculous and we may concur with the old breeder's wisdom. If a certain amount of feed is required to extract therefrom the delicate coloring matter and spread it through the sheen of the feathers with infinite evenness during the formation, and there is a shortage of coloring matter upon some one day, does it not seem reasonable that the quill and sheen, being composed of other substitutes, will continue to form without the infinitesimal amount of coloring matter? If the shortage is great enough to come under the microscopical eye of the judge, you lose.

"Topics of the Hour"

By Ralph Rutter

In the continuation of "Topics of the Hour" it is desired to impress upon the reader's mind that it is intended only for those whose aim it is to raise what is commonly known as "good birds." By that I mean birds that are healthy. In that word is naturally incorporated the best of layers and winners. Without health we can have nothing. It is also more intended for those whose means of raising large numbers are extremely limited.

To those who can provide free range the knowledge is not so imperative, but will prove no harm to know the essentials. In too many cases on large poultry farms do we see failure spelled in large capital letters because the owners or superintendents do not know how to conduct such a plant. Someone's hopes and air castles will be shattered, for as sure as gun's iron you can never make a success of any business of which you are unfamiliar and not willing to serve your apprenticeship. There may be a bad case of "hen fever," but fever does not make brains, and brains are what is needed, good healthy welltrained brains, too, in the chicken business. The poultry industry cannot stand or grow if the constituents are like mushrooms, come and go in a single night. We must master the business. You owe it to yourself and your customers to know every detail, know a fowl, a good fowl when you see and sell it.

This journal stands now and always for better birds for the best poultrymen, by the best breeders. It is the champion of "on and on" in the poultry industry.

It is impossible to give the details in these pages necessary for the beginner when they can be secured from such a reliable source as the Department of Agriculture. Get your name on the list of your State Colleges of poultry husbandry. They will gladly mail you bulletins free if you are interested and the knowledge you will derive from them is accurate and perfectly reliable and unbiased to any special breed.

PARTRIDGE COCHINS MITCHELL STRAIN

My hobby, "Highest Grade Birds only." Among my winnings this year in Partridge Cochins, not counting a clean sweep at minor shows, are Allentown 2-3-4 cock, 2-3-4 hen. Trenton 1-2 cock, 1-2-3 hen. Male takes special for best Cochin shown. Hagerstown 2-4 cock, 1-2-3 hen. 1st hen takes special for best bird in Asiatic class and special for best female Cochin shown. Note, that the above awards in these three shows were taken by right different females. Last season at Philadelphia took 1-2 cock, 2-4 hen, and 1st on pullet; at Baltimore 1-2 cock, 1-2-3 hen, 1 pullet. Philadelphia 1-2-3 cock, 2-3-4 hen, 3 chl, 1 hen, 1-2 pen. My only exhibit in light Brahmans so far as Trenton, where five single entries took four blues. No stock in Partridge Cochins for sale until after the big shows. In Light Brahmans I have some fine yearling cocks and hens to spare.

LIGHT BRAHMAS NEVIOUS STRAIN

JOSEPH ELIAS. 367 GOWEN AVENUE, MT. AIRY, PA

The other fellow who has provided his birds with the right feed at the punctual time wins. Not only is this fact true in feather formation but in bone, muscle and tissue formation as well. So the only possible conclusions we can arrive at are feed properly and do it punctually.

This is the explanation why some buyers of eggs from reputable breeders after their chicks have been raised complained such folly. Not the highest scoring bird makes the best breeder. The old fellows, the boys who have been in the game for years appreciate the value of proper raising and you, you who have just come into the game, may just as well make a good start and profit by their experience. Don't be a Thomas, but off with your coat and clean up the lantern globe for you will need it in raising those lice and do a good job of it and do not rest until they are completely exterminated. There is no brooder or coop big enough to hold chickens and lice. They simply will not mix. They are an assiduous pest. After the chicks are big enough and the weather conditions will warrant I throw common soil in on the floor of my large brooders, before putting them out on the free range. This serves for many purposes. It keeps lice down; it is cool during the warm weather and they can dust in it and when they roost in that way are not apt to develop crooked heels, and still be comfortable with their toes. Be careful if you have occasion to catch one that he does not flap his wing against the fence or other hard things, for he is very apt to destroy the oil gland. I had a very fine bird ruined by a dog grasping the wing in his mouth. Where his teeth caught, the feathers came in pure white, and white feathers are slightly out of place in Brown Leghorns. Another good thing to keep foreign colors from your good birds is fundamentally done by keeping his digestive organs in perfect order at all times. Nature can be assisted in this with those birds in confinement, by adding a small piece of sulphate of iron, copperas, or tincture of iron in their drinking water, or a little gum powder in their mash. However, watch the amount of gun powder, that you do not scour them with the saltpeter that is in it. I would advise the use of iron in earthen founts. If you use it in galvanized founts it will shorten their life.

If there are any weaklings develop, toe mark them; place them in another coop and if they become fit for edible purposes, kill them. But in no case keep a chick over that has been sick.

It is nature's way of perpetuating health and the rugged constitution and we cannot improve much over nature. If there are any with leg-weakness or rheumatism place them where they will be warm and dry and change their diet, and in a few days they will be upon their toes. We will go further into chicken life with you in a future issue.

that their stock was not as represented and they had been imposed upon.

In too many instances do we find the entire weight and responsibility of the future winnings being placed on the breeding pen, and after a sufficient number of eggs have been hatched fold our arms and smoke the pipe of contentment. Many disappointments are attributed to chicks we talked about in last month's issue of this journal.

The brooders must be shut every evening, after they have gone in, to make sure a rat or mink cannot slip in and leave his trail of death in its wake. With the aid of your lantern see if they are picking themselves. If they are the first thing in the morning get after the

BLACK LANGSHANS

Summit and Black Diamond-Strains have stood the test for more than a quarter of a century and have rightly and justly won the reputation of The Best in America. Winners at Madison Square, Grand Central Palace Red Bank and Philadelphia, unquestionably the largest and best flock of Black Langshans on the American Continent.

AS EGG PRODUCERS

The Black Langshans have always been considered the greatest of all winter layers. They can stand more cold weather and endure more hardships than any other breed and they lay during weather when other breeds will not. They lay a large, brown egg of superior flavor and my strains have been bred for heavy laying since their foundation.

AS SHOW BIRDS

They need no introduction. The Summit and Black Diamond strains of which I am now the sole owner, have won many blue ribbons in all parts of the land and will during the season of 1912. Their unmatched record at Grand Central Palace, Madison Square and Philadelphia substantiate the statement of the best in America. I can furnish you

Let me quote you prices on these Langshans. The breed that has come to the front with leaps and bounds; all because they deserve it; new varieties boomed by extensive advertising flourished for a while but the Langshans has stood the test of the most severe kind and as for beauty, stateliness and productiveness both for eggs and meat they are unmatched wins at Grand Central Palace Show.

ARRANGE FOR YOUR SHOW NOW.

Now that the show season is over and you are well under way to hatch your next season show winners it is well to look into the question to see if your association has made arrangements for its coming show.

Officers of the local association and members of the same do not think you can wait until just before the next show season comes around before you set your dates and lease your hall. If so you no doubt will find the date you would like to have has been taken by some other association in the territory in which you expect to draw your entries, or the hall rented for some social entertainment the week you wanted it.

One other item that is very important is to have your Judge selected early. I can cite a case last season where one association, one month before show, was obliged to write to at least eighteen judges before one could be found that was not engaged for its dates as they had been announced, and also the hall was leased for that time.

It is just as well to look into the coop question also and have all this arranged before hand, as to put it off to the last.

Do not let your chances for a large entry and a big show be ruined just because you failed to be up and doing at the right time.

If the above arrangements have not been attended to it should be done at once; that is, set your dates, lease your hall and select your judges; also make your date known to the public and keep them informed all the time through the press that your coming show is to be greater than the last one.

OR LICKED BY HIS DAD.*

The Rose Comb Buff Orpington Hen will lay eggs all summer, spring and fall. Yes she will lay them in the WINTER when some hens won't lay at all. She has no spiked comb to freeze, no feathers on her legs; but she beats the band the whole year round for shelling out the eggs.

I've oft tried other hens, but you know very well in the coldest kind of weather I got eggs like—well, I don't care to say the word, it sounds so very bad, and should I have said it when a boy, I'd got a licking from my Dad.

The above picture shows some of the colony houses, shipping sheds, breeding houses and incubator cellar that are in use on Foxhurst Farm, where are bred some of the best Black and White Orpingtons in this country.

Before I got the Orpington I was often in a stew to get an egg to make a cake, I didn't know what to do. One winter day I started out to find an egg for cake, so I hied me to the poultry house (the hens began to shake.) At first I asked a Leghorn hen kindly for an egg. She ruffed her feathers on her back, and stood there on one leg. DON'T BOTHER ME, she said for you know very well the weather is too cold to lay; so you can go to—well, I don't care to say the word, it sounds so very bad, and should I have said it when a boy I'd got a licking from my Dad.

And so I tried the whole flock through, from Leghorn, down to Rock—never got an egg. So thought I'd change my stock so then I got the Orpington, and the truth I'll tell, I now have eggs a plenty and many more, to sell.

They lift the mortgage on the Farm, put money in my sock; they lay me eggs a plenty, and not a nervous shock. The whole family's happy and feeling mighty well, for we have eggs a plenty and don't have to go to—well, I don't care to say the word, it sounds so very bad, and if I'd said it when a boy I'd got a licking from my Dad.

By F. D. Sutton.

The Farm Name of J. C. Fishel and Son, Breeders of "The World's Best" White Wyandottes, stands out with increasing prominence among the greatest specialty breeders in the world today. The wonderful results they have been able to achieve in perfecting their favorite breed during the past eight or ten years has not only added a new luster and increasing prestige to the name of their home state, but has effectively increased the beauty, utility, and hence the universal prominence, of this excellent breed of fowls. The merit of their Wyandottes both in the show room and in the field of utility are appreciatively known from the rising to the setting of the sun. And today they can truthfully say "that the sun never actually sets on the products of their skill.

They have received the highest praise for their eggs of any breeders of fancy fowls in the world so far as we are able to learn and only the fact of "highest value" could make these conditions possible. $75.00 for a setting of 15 eggs is certainly a premium price to pay, but $200 for one cockerel hatched from these eggs netted the owner a handsome profit on his investment, to say nothing about the value of the other seven birds raised from this setting of eggs.

From both the fancy and practical view-point the Fishel Wyandottes have few, if any, superiors. The combination of these chief qualities is hard to produce in any breed of birds and can be accomplished only after years of persistent and scientific line breeding. Is it any wonder then that the Fishel Wyandottes have attained so prominent a place in the Wyandotte World? Their victories in the strongest show room competition have been among the most noted of any of our large breeders for years, while their customers have won thousands of ribbons in all sections of the country either with stock bought direct from "Fisheldotte" or hatched from their eggs. At the recent Great Atlanta, Ga. show, "The World's Best" Wyandottes won every first but one, together with practically all specials, in one of the strongest classes of White Wyandottes ever assembled in this country.

Their 1st pen was the wonder of the entire show, while their 1st cockerel was pronounced by expert authority as one of the greatest Wyandottes of the age. In type he is a real "Standard" model, practically perfect in head points, great in breast and as white as snow, while their winning females shone like stars of the first magnitude. Take these same high-grade show females into the breeding yards and their utility qualities are as sensational as their show qualities, for their average egg production, under careful test, run from 196 to 220 eggs per year. Such achievements are certainly worthy of the highest and most universal recognition by all who demand 100 cents in value for every dollar invested. To all who have had the pleasure of handling any number of Mr. Fishel's birds, either at "Fisheldotte" or in the show room, speak only in the highest praise of their merits. In quality, uniformity and numbers their matings this season, greatly excel all past records and we unhesitatingly predict that chicks hatched from "Fisheldotte" eggs will be marshalled well up in the front ranks of "Silver cup" and "Blue Ribbon" winners throughout the coming show season.

J. C. Fishel & Sons have mated up twenty pens for this season's egg trade and every pen is replete with "Fisheldotte" quality. Every yard is headed by a champion male or sons of their most distinguished winners and in securing eggs from these birds the purchaser will surely reap the reward of Mr. Fishel's long years of experience as a scientific and thoroughly practical poultryman.

There is no more convincing evidence as to the success of any enterprise or the integrity of the principles underlying the same, than the fact that one is able to retain, with increasing confidence, their old customers and friends, and with a true fanciers pride Mr. Fishel points to the fact that his repeat orders are increasing with very rapid strides and form one of the greatest assets of their rapidly increasing business.

The location of J. C. Fishel & Son's plant is very attractive indeed, and a visit to their house will deepen ones respect for this popular firm and add increased confidence in their ability to fulfill every promise made to their customers. Their breeding pens are a Real revelation to all Wyandotte lovers. Such wonderful uniformity of quality in so large a number of breeding yards is a standing guarantee of their ability to furnish their customers with the best on the market in both stock and eggs. Their "Year Book" is replete with "egg lore" and every page is full of good common-sense information, and although it cost Mr. Fishel hundreds of dollars and long years of hard painstaking effort to produce it, it is yours for the asking. We trust our readers and friends who are at all interested in the best in Wyandottes will write them at once for this splendid catalog. It is worthy a place in the library of any fancier and will no doubt prove a blessing to many who are struggling on towards the front ranks of the Real poultry world.

THE feed mixing problem is solved. For many years the poultrymen have needed a feed mixer that was a real mixer. Now there is one. There have been no less than four different types tried on the famous Afton Poultry Farm and their Mr. Twining pronounces the one shown in the illustration the best he has ever used and all he could ask for. He has given it a thorough try-out and knows of what he speaks.

Because of the part Afton Farm has played in the perfecting of this mixer, and because of the further fact that it has done so much toward making Afton Farm more profitable, the machine bears the name

"Afton Farm" Feed Mixer

The value and economy of home mixed feeds is well known to poultrymen. Why pay the extra price for ready mixed feeds when you can mix your own cheaper, better, and have it fresher? "Afton Farm" Feed Mixer is metal throughout, and will last a life time. It is as simple as a scoop shovel. It mixes more thoroughly and blends the feed much better than is possible to do by hand. With an "Afton Farm" Mixer, one man can mix as much as three men can by hand. It thoroughly blends both dry and moist mashes. It is a grain saver and a labor saver. When you know that it reduces your cost of feed mixing two-thirds; and it saves a large per cent. of the feed bill; and that it makes the feed more palatable and easier digested, you will realize that you can not afford to be without one. It is made in capacities of 15 qts., 75 qts. and 150 qts. Larger sizes for poultrymen and dairymen made to order.

With our 50c booklet, "Feed Formulas" given as a premium with each mixer, and an "Afton Farm" Feed Mixer every poultryman can be a successful feeder.

Write today for special inducement to one man in each community to introduce the "Afton Farm" Feed Mixer.

What America's Greatest Breeders and Authors Think of The Poultry Fancier.

FROM THE QUAKER CITY.

Phila. Penna., March 12, 1912.—Congratulations on your big Bully March issue.
Yours Respectfully
Bloomingdale-Weiler, Adv. Agency.

ON THE RIGHT TRACK.

Benson, Md., March 12, 1912.
F. W. DeLancey,
Dear Sir:—March issue at hand. You are certainly on the right track, both Editorially and on the judging question and I hope you stand Pat. I notice you are devoting a great deal of space to cuts of winning specimens of your advertisers. This is but just and a great advantage to the beginner in the Business. I wish you success,
Yours Respectfully,
D. Lee.

NEVER READ ANYTHING LIKE IT BEFORE.

South Plainfield, N. J., March 12, 1912.
Dear Mr. DeLancey:—
March issue is at hand and have read it from cover to cover. It is the best Poultry Paper I have ever seen as yet and there is some real pleasure in reading a paper like this. Keep it up to its present form and you will have some other fellows guessing. I certainly wish you a success that you deserve.
Yours Truly,
Rufus Delafield.

FEELS SURE IT WILL BE A LEADER.

Hope, Ind., March 11, 1912.
Dear Sir:—
I notice you are improving the Poultry Fancier and feel pretty sure that you will reach the goal for which you have aimed. You are to be congratulated. Wishing you continued success, I remain, Your friend,
U. R. Fishel.

IT'S BEAUTIFUL.

Chili Station, N. Y., March 11, 1912.
The beautiful issue of Poultry Fancier for March issue just here and permit me to congratulate you upon producing such a Poultry Journal. Wishing you every success, I am Respectfully, Geo. E. Peer.

A WANT WELL SATISFIED.

Germantown, Philadelphia, March 12 '12.
Dear Sir:—
The Poultry Fancier this month arrived and a condensed criticism would be a Want well Satisfied. Looking over the numerous periodicals devoted to Poultry, of which there are too many, I find that yours satisfies me. Your hook deserves praise. Your efforts should be encouraged. It is all and more than the Breeders should expect. Surely you should call it the Real Poultry Fancier. Yours Truly, Geo. G. Allison.

THE BEST PRINTED.

Langhorne, Penna., March 6, 1912.
Dear Sir:—
The Poultry Fancier at hand and I think it is the best journal printed today and has some good reading of value in it to every Poultryman. I wish you success and I know you will have it.
Yours Respectfully,
Langhorne Poultry Farm.

FROM THE EX-MAYOR OF LEBANON.

Dear Sir:—
March issue at hand and I like it very much. I know you are going to make a "GO" of it. Success to you.
Edgar A. Weimer, Prop'r. Exmoor Farms.

STRAIGHT FROM THE SHOULDER.

Springfield, Ohio, March 15, 1912.
Dear Sir:—
I think your article entitled Misguiding and Misleading Poultry Literature hits the nail on the head exactly. I was very much interested in your article regarding misuse of the Proxies at the meeting of A. P. A., and I think we all realize the justness of your argument and if you could just place your article before the members of the Association, there would be no question as to what would happen at the next annual meeting. I wish to extend my sincere congratulations on the magnificent Journal that you have given your readers for the third issue and if you continue to serve your subscribers with such literature there should be absolutely no question about your success.
Yours very sincerely,
Geo. Cugley, of the Buckeye Incubator Co.

FROM THE KING BEE.

Buffalo, N. Y.
I want to congratulate you on the March issue of the Poultry Fancier.
Yours truly,
Grant M. Curtis.

FROM A PROMINENT JUDGE AND BREEDER.

Your first issue came to-day and I must say it looks good to me. It is a fine paper and contains what the Poultry World is looking for and is down to date. Best success to you and the Poultry Fancier.
Yours very truly,
J. Courtney Punderford.

FROM MY MARYLAND.

March 18, 1912.
My dear DeLancey:
I must say Frank you are making a success of the Fancier the same as you have made good in all your other connections with the Poultry Press. I believe the same will be appreciated by the Advertisers over the country by acting square with them. You have always stood for a square deal and so far as I am concerned I will always be with you as long as I am in the chicken business. Success to you. You deserve it.
Yours truly,
A. J. Street.

POULTRY EDITORS SHOULD NOT JUDGE.

New Haven, Conn., March 14, 1912.
Dear Sir—I think your journal is the quality Poultry Journal. It has a refined air we need in our Poultry Business. I have wondered how you accomplished so much in so short a time. Poultry Editors should not judge. Misguiding Literature in regard to fortunes made in back yard lots should not be published. Breeders should not advertise eggs for sale from various pens, when they have only one. Wishing you continued success, we are,
Very truly yours,
The Gale Poultry Place.

GO AFTER THEM.

So, Williamsport, Pa., March 18, '12.
Dear Mr. DeLancey:—Your March issue could not be improved in our estimation, and in this connection let us say that we agree with you and Mr. Wittman, Mr. Corey and all other True Fanciers. You are right on the judging question, but go after them and give them more. How about soliciting Editors who go around and mate up the birds and generally make it a point to get there a little before the show which they are going to exhibit at and that same particular judge will do the judging. How about it? With kind wishes for your success, we are,
Yours truly,
Saunders Brothers.

BEAVER PENNA.

Beaver Penna., March 15, 1912.
F. W. DeLancey.
Dear Sir:
Your March issue was certainly a fine Journal and one that you should be proud of and I know you have put it in the front ranks and it is one of the best papers in the country to-day.
Yours truly,
Fred. H. Cook.

DANVILLE, PENNA. EXCELLENT IN-DEED.

Dear Sir—Your March issue of Poultry Fancier is indeed an excellent number. I fully agree with you that a bird should be judged before either the exhibitors or the Public is admitted to the Hall. And marked catalogues should be strictly withheld from the judges as well as the other interested Parties. I will most emphatically say that no judge interested in a Poultry Journal or a solicitor for same should judge a Poultry Show. Give the good judges better wages so that they will not need to take up soliciting as a side line. Thus the little Advertiser will be on a par with the big Advertiser in the show room.
Yours truly,
John C. Peiffer.

FROM A BROTHER EDITOR WHO IS NOT A JUDGE.

Waterville, N. Y., March 13, 1912.
Dear Mr. DeLancey—I want to congratulate you upon the appearance of the March issue of the Poultry Fancier. You have surely made a wonderful showing and you have my best wishes for your continued success.
Yours truly,
D. M. Green,
Editor Poultry Husbandry.

FROM A BROTHER EDITOR WHO IS A JUDGE.

Buffalo, N. Y., March 19, 1912.
Dear Sir—I want to congratulate you on the March issue of the Poultry Fancier. Wishing you success, I am,
Yours very truly,
Wm. C. Denny,
Asso. Editor American Poultry Journal.

FROM R. N. BARNUM, LIME ROCK, CONN.

March 11, 1912.
Dear Sir—You are to be certainly congratulated on your last issue and your Editorials are hitting the mark.
Yours truly,
R. N. Barnum, Foxhurst Farm.

THE BEST EVER.

Lowell, Mass., March 11, 1912.
Dear Sir—Received your paper to-day and wish to compliment you upon the splendid appearance. It is certainly the best ever and I can see no reason why any advertiser cannot profit by its use. Success to you.
Yours respectfully,
Chas. E. Sheldon.

UP TO DATE.

Phila., Pa., March 14, 1912.
Dear Sir—I cannot help but speak a word of praise as others are doing for the Fancier. It is all up to date and down to business, practical and scientific, so I guess I will join in with the chorus and altogether Boys, there are lots of singing hens, but most of them have adopted that new song, are you familiar? Everybody's doing it, Everybody's doing it, Doing what, placing their advertisement in the Poultry Fancier where results are certain.

NIXON'S WHITE WYANDOTTES

Do not be confused with glowing claims! Stop and consider closely these essential points. Who has bred White Wyandottes for 20 years? Who has won highest honors at Madison Square Garden? Who has an Egg record of 210 eggs in one year? Who has judged White Wyandottes at Madison Square, Philadelphia, etc.? Who has sold winners for twelve or more shows this season? Why Nixon has done all this and don't you think he is able to serve you? My matings have never been finer, so place your orders for eggs or stock with the man who has made good. Literature for the asking. Write today.

ELIJAH YOUTZ TURNS POET OVER THE FANCIER.

Sanbury, Penna., March 11, 1912.
A man whose name is DeLancey, lately he took a Fancy To a Journal by the name of the Fancier. For making small things turn into large things, DeLancey has great fame.
There was the Wee little Item Who had hard to fight to even maintain an existence, along came big little Willy, saw a chance to get busy. And this man of great hustles made the Item swell like old fashion Bustles. And from coast to coast all Poultrymen heard of DeLancey. Willy loves adventure, and we must not censure. It is the nature of the Beast.
He now will remodel the Fancier, so just watch the subscription list grow. He left the bed of roses, in a troubled birth reposes. Willy will get there just the same. He is a good feeder at A. P. A. meetings, and we all know he is an unlawful speeder since he hought that new machine.

Respectfully,
Geo. E. Peer.

Germantown, Phila., March 12, 1912.
Dear Sir—The Poultry Fancier this month arrived and a condensed criticism would be a want well satisfied. Looking over the numerous periodicals devoted to Poultry, of which there are too many, I find that yours satisfies me. Your book deserves praise. Your efforts should be encouraged. It is all and more than the Breeders should expect. Surely you should call it the Real Poultry Fancier.
Yours truly,
Geo. G. Allison.

Langhorne, Pa., March 6, 1912.
Dear Sir—The Poultry Fancier is at hand and I think it is the best journal printed to-day and has some good reading of value in it to every poultryman. I wish you success and I know you will have it.
Yours respectfully,
Langhorne Poultry Farm.

FROM SELLERSVILLE.

March 12, 1912.
Dear Mr. DeLancey—Your letter at hand and I am taking advantage of your offer. I remember when I could count the pages of the Item on my fingers and its advertising business was confined to one page. What a wonderful growth it made with you in its Editorial Sanctum. It went forward with bounds and leaps, filling the coffers alike for its advertisers and its owners. I cannot help but say that you made the Poultry Item what it is to-day, that with such Journalistic experience and ability as a Fancier and Breeder, still greater success awaits the Poultry Fancier. Wishing the Fancier all the succes it deserves, I am,
Very truly yours,
F. Christman,

Current Events Among Fanciers Gathered From Live Wires

What do you think of this issue for a 4 months old sapling.

The Allentown Fanciers' Association has purchased more new coops.

When the A. P. A. straightens out the judging question let them do it right.

Judge Kenner has booked a number of engagements already. Kenner has made good.

The old veteran breeder, Ed. Wilkinson, of Mifflinburg is taking up Cicillian Buttercups.

Vierheller, of Buff Rock fame, says no more sight seeing for him, or showing the sights either.

We were all glad for the winter shows to close and now we are anxious for the fall fairs to start.

Campings are certainly on the boom, and advertisers report they are unable to meet the demand.

And it surely looks like Nashville for the next A. P. A. meeting, but remember Atlantic City for 1913.

Charley Nixon says that things never looked brighter for the Poultrymen in and around Washington, N. J.

On account of the unusual winter weather conditions, April, May and June will be the banner egg months.

John J. Ritz, of Langhorne, Pa., will move to Pasadena, California where he will go into the chicken business.

Congratulations, Charley Keeler, of Winnimac. Everybody rejoices with you, because it is a fine big bouncing girl.

James T. Baldwin was elected President and Geo. H. L. Petty Secretary of the Wessinoming Poultry Association.

W. Theo. Wittman can tell you why soliciting-editors should not judge, and he will be at Nashville with bells on his fingers.

J. S. Brady, Parkers Landing, Pa., has

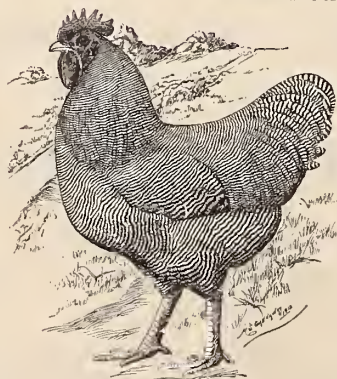

The first Chicago S. C. R. I. Red cockerel, 1910, as a cock bird, 1912. This bird without doubt has no superior on earth. Bred and owned by Ira M. Crowther, Box S, Willoughby, Ohio.

Dr. Garber, Mt. Joy, Pa., election commissioner of the Penna. Branch, is a candidate for State Senator. Well, here is success to the Dr.

Mr. McGrew will not stand for election as President of the A. P. A. We are sorry Mr. McGrew has seen fit to make this announcement.

When it comes to doing high class printing at reasonable prices, the job printing department of the Fancier can't be beat. Let us quote you prices.

President Wash Moore, of the Pittsburgh Fanciers' Club, says the same old crowd will be at the same old stand with a bigger show next February than ever before.

Misguiding and misleading poultry literature has put many a poor fellow to the bad and if the A. P. A. would take a hand in this it might prevent Uncle Sam from doing it.

Everybody is anxiously awaiting the announcement of judges at Allentown and Hagerstown. It is said soliciting editor judges at the first named show will be very scarce.

We believe that every judge is worthy of a day's wages, and associations should not encourage the judge-for-nothing class. It has proved the most expensive in nearly every instance.

Yes, Freddie, they are bad boys for not showing up at the old stand and Wash. ought to censure Seldon and Sutch severely. They should at least get six weeks in the old ladies' home.

a big difference when a soliciting-editor-judge is at the throttle.

Grove Hill Farm is having a big season. Their remarkable wins the past season has brought the result. This plant is owned by Wm. Ellory Bright, and managed by that man of genius, A. C. Smith.

Many poultry associations have already selected their judges for their next show.

The Monroe County Poultry Association, recently formed with headquarters at Stroudsburg, has a membership of 68.

Mrs. Rice is going to let Willie attend the Allentown Fair. But not the same day that Geo. Hughes goes. This pair of lads has plenty of kale now, as they have disposed of their bottled sunshine stock.

Doc. Hertz, of the Lititz Association, is now experimenting with a certain kind of a dope that will prevent exhibitors from kicking at the decisions of the judges. There will be a big run for this remedy.

The sentiment against soliciting-editor-judges is sweeping the country. If the soliciting editors draw enough salary to live on comfortably the same as any other working man, then let the other fellow live too.

We cannot help but speak a word of praise of the excellent Poultry Department J. D. Koons is conducting in the Philadelphia Press, as we predicted J. D. would give us practical hen sense. And he is doing it.

And we will publish cuts free for our classified advertisers, the same as we do for display. That is just one thing that those words on the cover page mean. Equal rights and justice to all. (See editorial page.)

Should judges have catalogues before they judge the shows? If they should have them the show management should permit the exhibitors to put their cards on the coop before they are judged. We can't see much difference.

Howard White, of Doylestown, Pa., and also Coroner of Bucks Co., called in to the Fanciers office, and after we assured him that nobody was dead, he set up the cigars and departed saying he hoped he would never be called upon to officiate over rule 17.

Geo. Ewald busted another pair of suspenders trying to catch a pigeon at the Pittsburg show and then charged it up to his expense account, but Freddie Ober said Nix. Now George threatens never to go back to the smoky city. He says it is a dirty place anyway.

Joe Morrow, who for many years conducted the Meadow Brook Farm, at Chadds Ford, Pa., has sold out root and branch and will move to Sellersville, Pa., where he will swing the pen in the capacity of associate editor. Everybody knows Joe, an old experienced breeder and journalist whose word is just as good as his bond. Joe says come in and see him.

Poultry Diseases and Remedies.

White Diarrhoea

By C. E. Morrison

During the summer of 1910 I noticed that chickens hatched from eggs laid by some hens always developed white diarrhea, but that those hatched from eggs laid by other hens in the same pen did not. Even when hatched in the same incubator and raised with those that did, only a rare case developed. A close investigation revealed facts that seemed to point to the cause of white diarrhea and to prove that under some conditions it would develop from healthy hens; also that it is both hereditary and contagious.

Eight hens laying eggs that had been hatching chicks which developed white diarrhea were picked out for observation. In looking up the records of these hens I found that four were hatched the months of July and August; two in April from eggs laid by a hen hatched in August; and the other two in June from eggs laid by a hen hatched in September. This showed that either the hen or the dam of the hen laying eggs was hatched during the hot weather. Ten hens laying eggs from which no chicks showed the disease were found to be either hatched between January and June, or to be from eggs laid during that period. This showed that the fowls and chicks bred in cold weather did not develop a single case; but experiments showed the reverse of both cases under certain conditions.

A close study of a number of tests from these two different lots of hens disclosed many interesting points, tending to show the cause of white diarrhea. The following conclusions may prove valuable help to any person who may wish to try out the experiments. The disease did not develop from healthy hens when the eggs for hatching were kept at a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees, but it did develop when the eggs were exposed to a temperature over 70 for any length of time. The test shows that eggs laid by hens hatched from eggs that had been exposed to a high temperature would at any season of the year hatch chicks with the disease, but the greater the heat and the longer the exposure the severer was the disease, showing that white diarrhea after once being developed becomes hereditary. Eggs from both healthy hens and those with the disease developed from hereditary causes hatched chicks showing diarrhea, the extent depending upon the length of time the eggs had been kept and the height of the temperature. The results were practically the same whether the eggs were set in an incubator or under a hen, thus disproving the theory that the disease was one developed in the incubator through lack of proper disinfecting between hatches.

Tests made July 25th and 28th seem to prove that it is the exposure to high temperature that develops the disease, because eggs exposed five and ten days hatched diseased chicks, while eggs laid by the same hens exposed only one day did not hatch a single chick that showed signs of being affected. The chicks grew well; in fact, as fast as those hatched from eggs laid by the same hens in March and April. The tests made during August 1910, with eggs exposed to a high temperature and laid by hens which had the disease through hereditary causes show that the disease developed according to the length of time the eggs were exposed. Those set within twenty-four hours had sufficient vitality to hatch, and one lot did not develop the disease.

They were very weak, however, beginning to drop at the end of a few days, and none living over six weeks. These chicks always had a high fever, indicating that something was wrong. Eggs laid by these same hens kept in a low temperature showed greater vitality, but developed the disease through hereditary causes.

Two hens raised from the eggs set July 20, 1910, and one from eggs set August 10, laid fairly well during the summer of 1911. A number of eggs from these hens were set under hens and some in an incubator. Several proved fertile, but the germ was weak and not a single chick hatched, this showing the weakness from hereditary causes. Chickens hatched from eggs set July 30th, laid by these same hens, set under the same conditions as those set July 28th, were placed in pens with chicks hatched from eggs set July 25th. About one-third of them developed white diarrhea in a few days, indicating that the disease, once developed becomes contagious.

The tests prove that a high temperature will develop white diarrhea indicating that the disease is caused by the evaporation of some substance from eggs when kept in a temperature of 70 degrees or higher. They also prove that keeping eggs from healthy hens in a temperature between 55 and 65 produces strong, healthy chicks. Other experimenters have found that dipping the fresh laid eggs in a chemical solution kills the germs and good healthy chicks are obtained. A reasonable conclusion drawn from the two experiments would be that dipping the fresh laid eggs in the chemical solution filled the pores in the shell and prevented evaporation. The experiments are such as to warrant the tests being given careful and thorough consideration.

As its name suggests, it treats exclusively of the breeds and varieties of poultry recognized by the American Standard of Perfection. It describes and illustrates all standard breeds and varieties of poultry, ducks, geese and turkeys. It gives the history of each variety, including its origin and development, enumerates its special characteristics and describes its shape and color. The subject-matter is by T. F. McGrew and Geo. E. Howard, and the illustrations are by Louis P. Graham. Each of the particular varieties is represented by a drawing of the male and female which are surrounded by sample feathers from different parts of the plumage so arranged that any one can tell from the illustration what the requirements of under-color and surface-color are for each section of the bird. The book contains over 250 pages, and is finely printed on excellent stock.—Poultry Herald, St. Paul, Minn.

My Experience in the Squab Business.

Of Interest to Pigeon Breeders.

Two years ago this month after reading many books and magazines, I came to the conclusion that there was money in squab raising. I asked the advice of one who had been successful in the business. He advised me to buy young mated birds from the very best to be had, regardless of price. He said birds advertised as cheap in many of the magazines were often old, worn out stock and would be dear at any price, and would likely mean failure from the beginning. I purchased a pen of thirty pairs of young mated birds ready for work and they did go to work in about two weeks after I got them. They set to work and except during the moulting season they have worked faithfully ever since. In spite of the zero weather this winter I have not lost a squab by freezing and have had squabs for market every week, many weighing a pound a piece and over.

During the early summer months when the market price was at the lowest, I saved the squabs from my very best breeders. My flock now numbers 120 birds, with prospects of doubling it the coming year. My birds are made up of the Runts, Carneaux, Maltese, Dutchess and Homer crosses.

The pigeon business is certainly an interesting one. But there are many things to learn. I think experience is the best teacher.

I first bought the ready mixed pigeon feed, but found that there was too much waste and often they would not eat the cracked corn at all. So I commenced to mix the feed myself by using fresh cracked corn. Since then I have no waste.

I once lost nearly all my young birds by buying musty feed.

I also find it very important to have plenty of sand, sharp grit and oyster shells before the birds all the time. As for feeding salt, I have tried different ways and I considered the last way I tried the best. I buy a five-cent sack of salt and dip it in the water and bake it in a slow oven until it is hard and dry. I cut bag in four parts and give one-fourth to each pen.

The drinking pan is another item of importance. Clean fresh water should be before the birds all the time. About three times a week the birds should have a bath in Summer time and as often as there is warm sunshiny days in winter time. A little warm water is good in winter time. The birds should also be kept free from drafts and dampness.

They can stand almost any amount of cold if they are fed properly with the right kind of feed.

There are difficulties in every kind of self directed independent business. There are no difficulties in the squab raising that do not finally yield to study and work.

Rightly interpreted squab raising depends upon the man. I mean study, work and persistency finally win.

You often hear amateur pigeon breeders, say, yes it's well enough for these writers to say be sure your pigeons are all mated, but how can you tell when they are mated before you put them in the breeding pen?

Now I was up against that question myself. I tried different ways that I was told with varying success and I find that the following way is not only the best but the most successful.

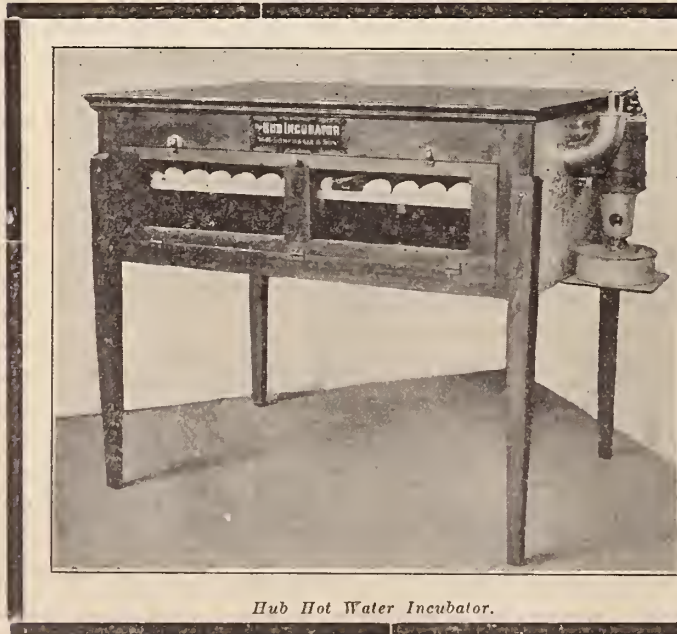

I have a mating pen fitted up with boxes just the same as I do for breeding only the boxes are trap boxes.

I use the ordinary tomato or corn boxes, you can buy them at your grocery store for a couple cents apiece.

Then I make a door out of the whole front of the box except a piece two inches wide at the bottom. I use pieces of leather about three inches long and from 1-2 to one inch wide for hinges. Then I put a weight (two or three pounds will be heavy enough) on the door near the bottom part. Then I drive a brad or nail about one inch from the bottom of the door, then tie a piece of cord to it, then run it up through a large brad at the top of the pen right above the box. This acts the same as a pulley; then run the cord outside of the pen and fasten it. Then you can drop the door without going in the pen.

The door is made to open upward. Open it to about fifty degrees from the horizontal. Make a hole about one inch square so you can see in the pen without frightening the birds. You should have all the cords handy to this hole also all the boxes in view of it.

Now when I get a lot of young or new

The Hub Incubator

The latest, most modern, has many new features. REGULATES BOTH VENTILATION AND HEAT. One of the new things found only on the Hub Incubators is our regulation of the ventilation, which is taken care of by our TANDEM DOUBLE COMPOUND THERMOSTAT, giving powerful and positive regulation of both the heat and ventilation. Another valuable point is our heat retaining and distributing bars. These are some of the new and essential features of successful incubation found only on the HUB INCUBATORS. EITHER HOT WATER OR HOT AIR. You can take your choice of either style, hot water or hot air, whichever you prefer. Both hatch equally well and both have the same system of ventilation, which permits the operator to give the chicks additional fresh air when hatching. This is an important feature, as it prevents white diarrhea, and is one of the reasons why the Hub hatches strong chicks—that live. OUR IMPROVED VISIBLE BROODER is positively the best brooder and challenges any other brooder made. The heat is a combination of radiation and a circulation of warm, fresh air. You can always see what your chicks are doing under the cover. Fireproof, convenient to clean. Our prices within the reach of all. Send today for circular giving cuts and full description of Hub Incubator and Brooder.

pigeons I put them in this pen and in about two or three days some of them will start to mate, if they are not too young.

I don't take them out of this pen until they start to build nests. I find this is the best way, for if you take them out too soon, some times they see a mate in the regular breeding pen they like better than the one they have and will make a lot of trouble for you.

Now I don't mean you should let them in the mating pen until they have their nest all built, but just until you see them carrying straw to build with.

This applies to utility breeding more satisfactorily than it does to fancy.

the predominant bird in the squab flock and few Homers will be used.

One of the greatest difficulties many breeders have encountered is due to the fact that in some way (who knows how?) the uninformed who want to buy Carneau have the impression that nothing but the solid red bird is desirable.

The fact is they are in many cases not as good a breeder as the splashed and do not produce as large a squab. As a matter of fact solid red birds will throw more squabs with slate colored feathers on tail or breast than any other color in which the Carneau are bred. However, this call by beginners for solid red Carneau has blinded many to other more desirable qualities. As a result dealers can sell solid red Carneau of small size at a fancy price, when the purchaser could have secured birds of double their value in splashes or off color, for the same money.

The majority of failures in the squab business is due to the fact that most breeders do not start off with properly mated stock. They have either bought cheap stock or, having paid enough for good birds, they have been swindled by dealers.

If you cannot start with first-class

The Carneau as Squab Producers.

By Jesse H. Claar

The Carneau are the most popular breed. Almost every modern loft has a pen of these fine birds. Why is it so many breeders are selling their Homers? They certainly are a god breed of pigeons. They breed large squabs and they breed fast. Simply because a better breed has been found, one that breeds equally as fast and surely a larger squab than the Homer. They are tamer and go to breeding much quicker when purchased, and do not show that homesickness that good homers always do. Their squabs sell for higher prices and the flesh is always of that golden hue which always is in market demand.

The splashed carneau are the best breeders. Those lofts that have no carneau are the ones that have never tried this profitable breed. Carneau are a new breed compared to Homers. The time is near when the Carneau will be

HATCH YOUR CHICKENS

With a new 1912 Cycle or Brooder Hatcher. Our new discovery makes poultry keeping easy and profits sure. Our machines were used in the original Philo System Plant where over $1500 from 60 hens in ten months has been cleared from the sale of eggs, baby chicks and fowls. One of the largest plants in America saved over $700 by using our system of brooding. We sell the best brooder ever made for $2.50.

One party hatched and raised $500 worth of poultry last year with four Metal Mothers, and hundreds of others are delighted with our machines and our new way of raising poultry. Our combination machine hatches and broods perfectly at the same time with only one lamp and one-fifth the oil used in other machines. Once filling the lamp completes the hatch. It runs as steadily as a clock in any room, from cellar to garret, and our Long-Burning Safety Lamp runs on for weeks without attention. It is the only machine that airs the eggs in the natural way and applies the heat to chickens like the mother hen.

stock do not start at all. A pair of common barn yard pigeons, raising squabs that will weigh from six to eight oz. each will eat and feed as much food to their young as a pair of good Carneaux which will raise squabs weighing from 12 to 16 oz. each.

The supply of squabs all over the country has been steadily increasing during the past few years, while at the same time the demand has increased even more rapidly. Squab raising is a business worth considering. It is interesting and good profits can be made with moderate devotion of time and energy. Good squabs at present are bringing $4.00 to $6.00 per dozen. Many poultrymen are making money with squab in connection with the chicken business.

Twelve Month's Work in the Poultry Yard

BY W. THEO. WITTMAN

Acknowledged by all to be one of America's Foremost Authorities and Judges.

Starts you in January, and takes you clear through the year—telling you just what to do to successfully handle your fowls in the safest and most economical way that is consistent with good business methods, to make the largest success possible with your fowls.

It does not tell you how to make $200 from 20 hens

But, it gives you a short, boiled down, and up-to-date treatise on lines that are practical and can be executed with safety. The contents of this book are intensely practicable, and to teach a method of poultry keeping, exactly opposite to that which is complicated and unnecessary. On the other hand Twelve Month's Work has been purposely chosen to emphasize the fact that the successful poultryman will find work to do, twelve months in the year. For regularity and attention to small details, all of the time, and in season, are prime factors of success in the business. PRICE 25c.

Breeding and Mating Columbian Wyandottes

By J. K. Clemmer, Souderton, Pa.

My experience in breeding 30 varieties of pure-bred poultry for 20 years resulted in many ups and downs, and I think one variety of fancy poultry is sufficient. To my taste the beautiful Columbian Wyandotte fills the bill, for they have not been beaten as layers, as I found them to lay right in moulting season until they had hardly any feathers on their bodies. They lay nice brown-shell eggs of fine size and also come in very early as broilers. Chicks hatched in February produced me two-pound broilers at less than nine weeks old.

The Columbian Wyandottes drew my attention six years ago, and since I have bred them exclusively by the thousands with best shape and color. Six years ago I started with ten pens, eleven to twelve females to one male, and I just mated them for market eggs. The first year, of course, I mated the darkest males to light females, as I did not have any dark females. At that time the Columbians were a new breed and consequently it was necessary to mate males and females to light color.

After breeding the Columbians one year I found that I had struck the right breed for eggs. As I mated just for eggs I bought the darkest males I could get. I purchased eight males that were bred of the best blood to be found. They were too dark for fancy points, so the party thought that was the reason I got them cheap. These dark males produced wonderful results, but I wasn't acquainted well enough with the Columbians to know it myself, so a party offered me ten times the price I paid for the parent stock for some of my dark males and females. But I just thought if they were worth such prices I would just start to mate them one side dark, either male or female.

I started to experiment with the Columbian Wyandottes. I mated 15 pens the next year. Some of them were mated with dark males and dark females. Now, you fellows, you may think I got Silver Wyandottes. Many visitors thought I was off my base in making such dark matings. However, since my birds proved their quality at many shows, I don't hear anything more of my friends about those dark matings six years ago.

Now there are but few out of a hundred breeders of Columbian Wyandottes who know that a dark male with very much under color is any good for a breeder with light colored females. I say if you take the darkest females and mate the darkest males you have, you get the best show birds. I have seen many flocks of Columbians that were nearly white in hackle, wing and tail. If these breeders just listen and buy a very dark male and mate him to such light colored females results would follow same as I experienced six years ago.

I have seen a trio sold at $35, and I surely would not mate such a male to my cheapest females I have and sell 15 eggs for $1. This male had nearly white hackle; every hackle feather was cut; not a clean feather was to be found, and tail, coverts and saddle were nearly white, with hardly any lacing at all.

It would pay many Columbian Breeders to pay $50 for a dark male if he could not find a cheaper bird, as if dark matings are exercised you get hackle feathers very sharp black, with white edging, and have tail, covert and saddle feathers green and black glossy feathers, with white edging, as fine and much finer than those of many of the Columbian Wyandotte breeders of to-day.

Many Columbian breeders buy show birds and mate them, and expect something great, they are disgusted with hackle feathers that are mixed with white, and tail coverts and saddle markings missing. The only reason of such markings in your birds is they were mated too light in color and not having enough under color. Don't fail to keep your Wyandotte shape, as shape is first and color comes next. You should mate one pen for color and shape and another for shape only, as you cannot get shape and color from every mating every time.

Hackle feathers sharp, distinct black or brown, or black and white mixed. Did you really ever see a sharp black distinct hackle feather, and blue, glossy tail, coverts and saddle feathers as we have them through our dark matings? You, of course, say, "If you breed the Columbians so dark you get them too dark in fluffs." I agree with you on this point; but let me tell you right here, if you do get a few too dark, and one-tenth of them with a little dark, nine-tenths of them have clean-cut, sharp black hackle, tail and coverts, very fine saddles and dark wings.

Many visitors ask me again and again how I manage to get such fine black wings on my Columbians. The only answer I have given them is to mate them dark, especially the male, with clean-cut markings, and their off-spring will be wonderfully improved in sharp black markings.

Don't hesitate a minute. Just try a dark male with your darkest females a few months, if you haven't enough faith to try them for a whole season. If you are weak in dark wing, sharp black hackle, tail and tail coverts, see that you get one, and just reap results an hundred fold.

An important point in all varieties is to see that your males have good eyes and not too large a comb. I prefer a very small comb in Columbians, the smaller the better, only nicely fitted on head, and to stubs. If you have birds with stubs, and of course these are the ones with best of shape and markings, I can talk from experience, just don't breed them if you have others of nearly as good markings. The sooner you overcome these weak points the better it is, if you have to sacrifice some color markings to get shape and clean legs.

Double Mating System With S. C. Brown Leghorns

What this System has Accomplished and its Detriment to the Breed. E. E. Endsley.

I have taken up this problem simply for the benefit of the beginner and the welfare of this valuable and favorite breed. I will first take up the benefits derived from the double mating system, what it has accomplished.

It has combined grace, beauty and usefulness in a higher degree than has been attained with any other breed. Take for instance the shape and color of the present day Single Comb Brown Leghorns; what have we? A bird unsurpassed in type, color and egg qualities. It is only necessary to look back a few years to call to mind the shape and color of this breed. What were they? A bird that was blocky, short in legs, and a tail that was carried perpendicular, or rather what we to-day call "squirrel tailed." A comb and wattles that should have graced the head of a Minorca. In fact the old type of Leghorns would be a disgrace in color and shape to what we have to-day. But through the persistent and intelligent efforts on the part of the Brown Leghorn fanciers they have gained the present high standard of perfection. These fanciers are to be congratulated on the improvement they have attained.

However there is one detriment to this breed caused by the double mating system. This system is a puzzle to a great many beginners, and we find quite a number of beginners that admire this breed. They often try to handle this system, but fail to succeed.

I often notice in Poultry Journals quite a lot of questions asked by beginners in regard to the double mating system with Brown Leghorns, and I have yet to see that question properly answered. I for one am ready to do all in my power to help the beginner, and feel sure that all breeders of this valuable and profitable breed will give a helping hand, for it is the beginner that we must, to a great extent, depend on for our future custom, and the rise and success of this favorite breed. If the beginner, when buying eggs or stock, would only ask his questions from the one he gets his eggs or stock from, he would have very little trouble with the double mating system.

You will find that all successful breeders are willing to answer any question on the double mating system that you may wish to know.

In conclusion I will try to give an easy and simple description of the double mating system with Single Comb Brown Leghorns, which I hope will help a great many beginners.

I will first take up what we call a cockerel mating. In this mating we have a male that is standard color, being a dark red in color, with a strong striped hackle and saddle. This male should have all the necessary requirements of a show bird. The females for this mating must be from cockerel mating; they should be dark in color with strong striped hackles. These females are entirely too dark for show purposes, therefore they are valuable for breeders only; they produce cockerels for show purposes. So you can readily see by mating a dark male to dark females we get standard colored cockerels.

I will now take up what we call a pullet mating. In this mating we have a pullet breeding male, bred from pullet mating. He is a light red color, or rather what is called orange color. His hackle should be strongly striped. This male is valuable for breeding purposes only, as he is entirely too light for show purposes. The females are standard color, being light or seal brown, they are the proper color for show purposes. They are bred from pullet mating. So we find light colored males mated to light colored females produce standard colored pullets.

In this brief description I have tried to make clear the color problem in the double mating system, for it is for color only that the double mating is used. The shape is the same in both matings, cockerel and pullet.

Fertility and the "Eggs for Hatching" Department.

By E. M. Long, Osceola, Ind.

Why is it that eggs from a farm flock on range, when gathered carefully during the months of April and May, invariably test high in fertility? Some may say that it is due to the fact that the flocks are usually crossed and that in breeding does not prevail. This may be a fact to a certain extent, but I have proved to my satisfaction that line bred stock will produce just as fertile eggs as flocks that are the outcome of out and out breeding. But take, for instance, the conditions under which the average farm flock is wintered; it is to be wondered at that they survive at all. Not that there are no flocks in the country that are properly kept,—because there are, but about three out of every four flocks are not cared for at all. They just survive. The lice and mites come to life, reproduce their species in countless numbers and pass on and each louse in its turn does what it can to eliminate race suicide in the louse family. The hens are either shut up in poorly ventilated houses or left to roost in the trees or in sheds, with the farm machinery for a perch.

Columbian Wyandotte Female, a study in wing color. Owned and bred by Columbia Farm, J. K. Clemmer, Prop., Souderton, Pa.

R. C. Buff Orpington Female owned, bred and exhibited by B. C. Roecker, Washington, N. J.

But when the warm rains of April come and vegetation springs into life, and when insect life again asserts itself and the earth worms commence their annual cultivation of the soil, these farm flocks that are on free range lose no time in getting back to nature. They soon commence to lay and their eggs are usually very fertile and they produce vigorous, livable chicks, able to withstand the hardships which their parents stood before them.

Let us breeders who are in the business of producing eggs for hatching take this matter and consider it. The usual farm flocks lay very little in winter, that is, they are not pushed to the limit. Birds, whether thoroughbred or mongrel, will not produce a high percentage of fertile, hatchable eggs if they are forced for egg production.

Birds that have been conditioned for showing and perhaps been cooped in small exhibition coops in hot, stuffy rooms for a greater or lesser period during the past winter are in no condition to produce hatchable eggs. They need to get back to nature. They must have exercise, fresh tender blades of grass, worms, bug and the like. Before producing hatchable eggs they must rid themselves of surplus fat by exercise in the open air. We may not be able to pen our breeding stock and produce these conditions exactly, but we can go a long way toward giving them substitutes.

We can bury their grain in deep litter and make them work to get it. We can spade their grain in the soil and give them something to do, and if they don't get it all it will not spoil, but probably sprout up and produce some green food. We can furnish them meat scraps, commercial or fresh meat, boiled meat, table scraps, sprouted oats or barley, scalded alfalfa or the like, and by using care we can come very close toward producing the natural conditions surrounding a flock on free range.

This is the way to produce hatchable eggs. Eggs shipped to a customer that will not hatch are a very unsatisfactory proposition for both parties. Even after a breeder does all these things and packs his eggs carefully for shipment, there are chances for many a slip. The express company may handle carelessly, the eggs may be left in the sun or next to a steam pipe, or out in the cold, thus destroying any possibility of a reasonable hatch. The hen or the incubator of the buyer may not be reliable. He may handle the eggs with soiled or greasy hands and thus ruin the hatchability. If there is a department of the fancy poultry business that requires patience on the part of the buyer and the seller, it is the "egg for hatching" department.

Let the breeder and the purchaser take these things into consideration in their business dealings during the present season.

Charles Nixon, Washington, N. J., the well known judge and breeder.

Buckeyes

For the benefit of those who are not familiar with my favorite breed, the Buckeyes, a few words in regard to their origin may be of interest. The Buckeyes are classed among the new breeds, as they were not admitted to the standard until 1905. They were originated by Mrs. Nettie Metcalf, of Warren, Ohio, now of Inglewood, California. She has the honor of being the only American woman who has ever originated a new breed that possessed sufficient merits to receive recognition by The American Poultry Association. They are a cross between the Plymouth Rocks, Buff Cochins, B. B. Red Games and Indian Games. It is needless to relate all the trials she encountered or the difficulties she overcame, but these only stimulated her to go on with a do or die determination. Year after year she mated and noted improvements until she had a flock of which any one might justly be proud.

Although they are comparatively a new breed yet the Buckeye has been bred long enough so that their offspring conform close to the true Buckeye type and color.

At the Missouri State Poultry Show in 1910, 62 Buckeyes were exhibited that received the approval of the foremost poultrymen and fanciers of the country. Still it is a lamentable fact that some of the judges of our leading shows are not willing to do them justice. I think every breed should receive just recognition of their merits and it would be hard to find a breed that has more good points than the Buckeyes.

Now, just a short description of them. The Buckeyes are a rich, dark mahogany bay in color. Their standard weight is as follows: Cock, 9 lbs., Cockerel, 8 lbs., Hen, 6 lbs., Pullets, 5 lbs. They are fine layers. The small comb, abundant feathers and active temperaments combined with a fact that they will not become over-fat when fed an egg ration, make their productivity a sure thing. Eggs are a soft brown color, of good size. The market demands are met fully by a heavy carcass, encased in a clean yellow skin.

Relative to the fancy, we wish to say that the Buckeye is the handsomest show bird shown. The males have the proud, erect carriage of the Indian Games. He has a rich, dark red coat, a broad, high breast, a fearless eye. Clean yellow legs, broad shoulders, long-bodied, of the most approved egg type, red eyes and ear lobes and the incomparable pea comb. The female, when bred to show room perfection, is in every way as handsome as her mate.

One fact that must not be overlooked is that it has been repeatedly proven that Buckeyes will eat one-fifth less than any other large breed. In conclusion would say that they are hardy, productive and attractive. Their type and color are firmly fixed and they are able to hold their own with any large breed in the world. The demand for them has so far been greater than the supply. The writer of this article has shipped eggs or stock to nearly all the states in the Union. To prove their merits I will say that those who have made a small beginning often send back for more. Give them a trial.

The Indian Runner

By Gaebel Brothers, Morristown, New Jersey.

The Indian Runner has come to the front within the last two years like some new discovered gold mine; and most all breeders of poultry are coming in for a claim.

The question is, are all the facts and great profits that are said to be made with these Ducks true, or has the field already been taken up, and the limit of a great harvest reached? As a breeder of Indian Runners for the past five years, and winning first at Madison Square Garden, N. Y., the International at Buffalo, N. Y., Philadelphia, Pa., and other large shows, perhaps a few remarks or observations along these lines will be helpful to others.

Whenever there is a boom of any breed among poultry fanciers, there must be quality in the makeup or it never reaches the height of perfection that the Indian Runner of to-day holds.

The undisputed fact of these Ducks being prolific layers of large eggs is the direct cause of such a boom in their class.

Even in mid-winter when the severe weather, intermingled with snow and ice, which is a great draw-back to poultry of most kinds, your ducks will lay if made comfortable and receive the proper care, such as a good house, with comfortable bedding to rest on. Hay or straw is the most adaptable. A formula which we have tried with success, is the following mash which has proven a great egg nutriment: 1 part of wheat bran; 1 part of corn meal; 1 part of beef scraps; 1 part of white middlings; 2 parts of alfalfa.

These Ducks are often quoted as egg machines, and they are truly worthy of the name. And this is one of the reasons they have become so popular, and forged ahead and kept to the front. Therefore, the field is open to all, and as long as this variety produces the eggs just as long will they be popular. The Indian Runner is still in its infancy, and although there are many of these Ducks advertised the True Fawn, etc., there are a limited number of good ones to be found.

In visiting the show rooms, you will often hear the following: "I have as good if not better Ducks than that 1st. prize winner at home." If you question this person, and the truth is known, he has never had a Duck on exhibition; and if an inspection is made you will discover his knowledge of Indian Runner Ducks is limited. He is perfectly sincere in his belief, and really has an idea his stock is just the real thing; and as the eggs which he produces receive a ready market among a certain class, he feels he has a Standard of Perfection of his own, and that he is a great benefactor to the Poultry Industry, and that there is at least one honest breeder in the business. We do not wish to speak detrimental to other breeders, but we advise the purchaser of eggs to examine, if possible, the stock which is producing the eggs, or to look up show records and see what various Judges throughout the country have to say regarding stock you are interested in.

We are asked sometimes, what is the egg record of the stock from which the purchaser is to get eggs? We do not force our breeding stock during the winter. We claim if you continue forcing for eggs the year round, you can not expect to have good fertile eggs and strong Ducklings in the Spring. But we also claim we can get good results in eggs at any time by proper care and food.

Again, if it is the desire of the breeder to look to a constant egg supply, he will find without a reasonable doubt that the Indian Runner, like the Leghorn fowl, is the ideal egg producer the greater part of the year.

It is said by some breeders that the True Fawn of the American Standard will lay green eggs; and for that reason the English type is in favor. There is a movement under way at the present time to bring the English variety back to the Standard, and thus have the two varieties admitted. We believe that the Fawn Duck is an improvement on English varieties and that the Fawn Duck has come to stay. The appearance we claim is much superior; of course you must have the correct shade.

Our ideal is a golden ray of Sunshine running through the Fawn, but no signs of being laced.

As to the green egg proposition, we wish to say there is such a strain. We are producing white eggs, and if you have in view a layer of white eggs, it is absolutely necessary you purchase white eggs for hatching.

In order to secure the best results and largest profits from these Ducks it is necessary to purchase good stock. The road to success is not reached through the cheaper grade of eggs. To start right secure the BEST. Although they will cost a trifle more in the beginning, you will always have the satisfaction of have commenced right, and by so doing made an early start with the proper stock, and a paying proposition.

In hatching eggs, we advise the beginner to use Hens; choose a warm place in early spring and a cool place in summer.

Indian Runners take 28 days to hatch, and if the weather is dry sprinkle the eggs frequently, especially the last week, always using luke-warm water. Test the eggs on the 9th., 18th. and 25th days; throw out the dead germs as well as the infertile eggs; powder the hen each time you make the test, and have a variety of food before her at all times, and you will undoubtedly have a good hatch.

We remove the ducklings from the nest as soon as dry, and place in a warm basket by the fire, or if you have a Brooder, put them in it. Do not feed the ducklings for 48 hours after they are hatched; bread crumbs soaked in milk and squeezed dry, is all that is necessary for the three days following; then add a little bran and shorts, making a sticky mash; later use no bread whatever, but add cornmeal, fine beef scraps and clean sand. When three weeks old use the following formula: 1 measure wheat bran; 1 measure corn meal; 2 measures shorts or white middlings; 1 measure alfalfa;  $\frac{1}{4}$  measure sharp sand;  $\frac{1}{2}$  measure beef scrap.

For the next succeeding three weeks add more beef scraps and a little corn meal. Always have charcoal grit, shell, grass and water before them. These things are essential and should never be neglected.

Young Ducks are subject to Rheumatism, caused by getting wet, and Sun stroke by not having shade; the preventative is the only remedy in both cases. Indian Runners never need swimming water, although it will never hurt them after they are six weeks old. In the breeding season, separate your good stock from your utility.

We have found a piano box a good coop for small pens. Lay the box flat, the incline part on hinges, also the front, with a window in the side; cover the entire box with tar paper, with the exception where the door hinges are (leaving an open crack) which should be covered with a water proff pliable cloth, which will prevent all dripping. This makes a cheap and reliable coop. We have endeavored to place before the reader a plain and descriptive account of our handling of Indian Runners, and we are constantly in receipt of numerous letters as regards their care, etc., and always stand ready and willing to give what information is desired.

The Blue Andalusians

By W. T. Naylor, Painsville, Ohio.

About the year 1852 a few fanciers began to take cognizance of a blue plumaged bird that claimed the Mediterranean town of Andalusia as its birthplace. With the discovery of this species began a scientific process of breeding that has continued through succeeding decades, to our own time, and the result of thorough experiment is the feathered image of perfection, that we find in Blue Andalusians. The most skeptic fancier finds the height of gratification in the possession of this bird, and the sanguine utility man acknowledges the Andalusian as the most reliable egg producer. The poultry industry aims at quality as well as quantity, in egg production and the Andalusian produces the ideal, large white egg, weighing from  $2\frac{1}{4}$  to  $2\frac{1}{2}$  ounces. They are in the non-setting class, and in view of the extensive use of the incubator, Blue Belt Mottled Ancona Hen. 1st. Hen at Boston, 1912. She was sold to C. A. Martin, Derry, N. H., in Sept. 1911, and he showed her three times against the best in New England.

the fact that they do not set is an enhancement of their value. We often stop and admire the supreme grace and movements of a blooded horse, and we are forced to betray astonishment at a sight of animal beauty; so, too, involuntary admiration escapes us on beholding the Blue Andalusian. The large red comb and wattles form the setting for pure white ear lobes, and the glossy bluish well laced breast, calls to mind our National Emblem, the clean blue legs, and exceedingly graceful form finish off our picture in a halo of neatness and activity. This statement is not made as our idle boast, but is the outcome of 20 years of actual experience with this breed. My ample opportunities to compare them with other fowls, (for I have bred nearly everything in the American standard) convinces me, that the Blue Andalusians step into the lime-light as the standard of thorough-bred stock. The standard weights required are: Cock, 6; Cockerel, 5; Hen, 5; Pullet, 4.

"The Exhibitor" With Other Things Between the Lines.

By F. D. Rogers, Elgin, Ill.

In our last month's article on "The Poultry Judge" we promised for this month a short talk on the exhibitor.

While the shows are over for the present, this article may seem a little out of season, but now, fellow fancier, is just the time to begin to think about the show-room, when the eggs go in the machine or in any kind of incubation. Many times beginners will send away to some reliable breeder and purchase eggs, perhaps at a long figure, hatches and raises them in the most hap-hazard way, puts them in the show-room in poor condition, and then kicks because he did not win all the blue ribbons.

Let us pause a second and say right here eggs from the best birds of any variety in the Standard will not produce A No. 1 winners unless they have had the proper care and attention from shell to show-room. Chickens are not like burdocks, they have to have care.

I have heard so many people say, "Oh, I don't care for chickens except for the table eggs and to have one now and then for Sunday dinner," (and right here I want to say this much: it is hard for me to conceive how a man can breed any half-way decent poultry and not naturally, and many times without realizing it, become interested in the best birds, and very soon decide to pick out the best from time to time, and raise the young chicks from the better birds. And the man that does not at least do this much after a little time, at least, never ought to own a bird.

It is only natural for almost any one to like and admire the best in anything, and nine times out of ten this interest that is sometimes rather slow in starting gets to running at fever heat and lo! another fancier is born, one more exhibitor in the show. It is truly interesting to hatch and rear the chicks and then in friendly rivalry in the show-room to be classed among the winners. Let me advise right here, when first starting to show birds, go a little slow; do not show a large string the first time. Remember the old saying, "Go slow and learn to pedal," and be sure when you start to show birds that you are well acquainted with the Standard of Perfection, and that you really know a good bird (of the kind you are showing) when you see one. Many times judges are criticised by beginners who really do not know what they are talking about, and yet may be honest and think they are doing all right.

Another thing, exhibitors, young and old, do not think every show, every secretary, every Poultry Judge is crooked, and if not among the winners have that for an excuse; for I sincerely believe that the men at large, all over our great country, who are actively interested in Standard bred poultry are, with few exceptions, honest men. You cannot name an association or organization of any kind but what has among its members those who are termed drift-wood, and in the poultry world you find no exception to the rule. But it is my honest conviction that the judges of Standard bred poultry and the men at large interested in this great industry are honest, and that as a rule all interested in the show-room receive a square deal.

Generally when a man loses the blue ribbons the other fellow has better birds, and the beginner who goes into a show for the first time ought to cut out this part of our little article and carry it in his vest pocket. Many men have good birds and do not show them because they are what might be called timid. For some reason or other they seem afraid to get in the race. Get in line, fellow fancier, it is truly interesting and worth your while. The show-room is a great place to get acquainted with the real chicken men, our most prominent fanciers, men who have and are making poultry pay, and have made this great industry what it is to-day. Decide now to be a live wire. Get in line with the leaders and you will never regret it.

couraging regularity, and those that do pull through would likely have been much better off if they had followed their more or less fortunate (?) brothers and sisters.

One of the best lots of chicks we ever raised were hatched the first day of June, but they were not kept under the above conditions. They had a fair-sized run, grown up with weeds and some grass, and in which there had not been any chicks before that season. One can make practically these conditions, if we can take the early chicks off the plot a couple of weeks before we wish to place the little chicks in it; then turn over the soil and plant rape or oats, and when this is up nicely the chicks may be placed on the plot. This growing stuff will freshen up the soil and also furnish green feed for the chicks; but under no circumstances allow the older chicks to run with the little fellows, unless on practically unlimited range.

Beginners who have not any chickens are well situated to make a start with chicks, as their grounds are not contaminated, nor are there older chicks to bother them. Chicks hatched the latter part of May or in June will begin laying by Holiday time, if properly cared for. This applies to the American varieties. Of course, such breeds as Leghorns should be laying the first part of November. The Cockerels will also be in good market condition by the Holidays, and such stock would also do to breed from, if mated rather late in the season, if they were well developed; but, of course, earlier hatched birds are better and old stock are best of all for this purpose.

Where one wishes "Fancy" stock, it

Late Hatched Chicks

By J. E. Willmarth, Amityville, N. Y.

Other conditions being equal the early hatched chick will generally grow and thrive the best, but with proper care the May and June hatched chick can be grown at a profit, and often at an advantage.

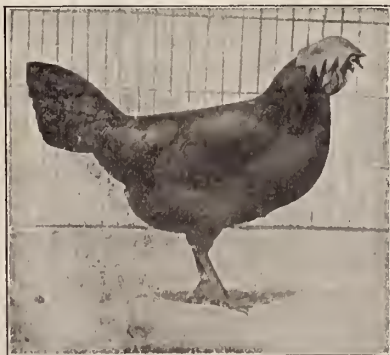

The one great trouble with the latter chicks is that the breeders try to raise them on the same ground or even with the older chicks, and under such conditions late hatched chicks will not be a paying proposition.

When the attempt is made to raise them under these circumstances the little fellows are greatly handicapped. If on the same ground on which the earlier chicks have been, these latter have taken all the "life" out of the ground and poisoned it with their droppings, etc., and to add to this the bullying of the older chicks, which will grab the best feed and compel the younger ones to take their leavings, will cause the little fellows to "give up the ghost" with dis-is the cheapest time of the year to make a start, as nearly all breeders advertise eggs in June and sometimes by the middle of May at half price, and also breeders can be obtained at a big reduction, and can be bred from some this season, and will make excellent breeders another season.

Often better eggs are obtained at this time than earlier in the season, as the breeders are through using eggs for their own hatching, and you are apt to get eggs from their best stock. Then again, while it is harder to get these late fellows up in size, they generally excel the earlier ones in points. Just why this is we do not know, but we have found it to be the case every year when we have gotten out late chicks.

This is not noticeable until fall, but each year we found an improvement in the late chicks in color over the early ones from the same breeders.

For the winter shows late pullets are just in the right condition, as the earlier ones will have started to laying and gone by their best show condition.

Hens are generally best to hatch with in warm weather, as they are then plentiful and easily obtained. Provide a shelter and see that plenty of shade is at hand (if not naturally, then artificial awnings must be provided) for they must be protected from the hot rays of the sun. Plenty of cool water and green feed must also be provided. Under these conditions chicks will thrive and you will have a nice flock by winter.

If you have not enough stock, or wish to improve, or are thinking of making a start with pure bred birds do not wait until Fall, but try some of those late chicks, and cared for as above, they will come along in fine shape, and you will be proud of your flock by next Fall.

The Dreamer

By E. Young Wead, Washington, D. C.

"And so you've bought a farm," I said to my host, a city man who had been educating Rose Comb Minorcas in his back yard all winter. "What do you expect to be able to do with a couple of hundred acres of land?"

He knew I meant, "you are neither young nor strong," and he answered the thought.

"I'll rent most of the place on shares, and being where I can watch it, I think it'll come out all right. For my own part I intend to raise chickens."

"There's no work in that, of course; especially if one expects financial returns."

"If you imagine I'm going onto a farm with my eyes shut, you're mightily mistaken. I propose to make money and I don't intend to work night and day either."

"You have some patent for inducing the work to do itself?"

"Not a patent; possibly a new application of other people's patents."

"You excite my curiosity. An inventor turned farmer ought to be able to give us practical results, still I admit, I don't see how you're going to run a poultry plant without work."

I knew my friend had made money out of inventions, all of which were ingenious, some of them complicated, and also that he had more than once been cheated out of legitimate returns. I was therefore inclined to listen to his plans with interest.

"Well, I'll tell you. I can't get along without some work, of course, but I can the parts together. I became nervous thinking of what would happen if the thing didn’t go. The last piece was in, everything in shape, he took a key from his pocket and turned to me.

“He was a stocky little Dutchman, whose accents limed.”

“Will she go?” he asked with a grin.

“Just one turn, and the thing began to tick; every part was smooth as glass and perfectly balanced, there was not a flaw;

there has never been trouble with that clock, so I know it can be done."

"Minorcas don't require water, I presume?"

"I'll have running water on tap all the time."

"I thought you meant to reduce expenses, not enlarge them?"

"I happen to have two springs on my place and I can manage a gravity flow. Most farmers could, if they'd think about it a while. I'll use common eaves-pipe, covered over, except in spots, to keep out the dirt. It'll cost mighty little except time."

I've always thought the meanest part of the chicken business was cleaning the houses."

"I've provided for that. I'll buy quantities of heavy wrapping paper in rolls and cover my dropping boards with it, leaving the rolls against the side of the house, where they can be kept clean. At stated times, I'll draw the paper to the front, rolling it as I go, tear it off, unroll and allow the droppings to dry. Then droppings, paper and all shall be ground to a powder and when I require fertilizer, I'll soon know exactly how many pints, quarts, gallons are necessary for any of my fruit.

"There's another thing I mean to look out for too. I don't believe in keeping unprofitable hens—or roosters either for that matter. Three months is the limit for my cockerels, unless I take up caponizing. But if my hens run more than two weeks without laying, except in moulting season, off go their heads and in they shunt to market."

"That means trap-nests, leg bands and a lot of book-keeping."

"Some, of course, but not much with me. I'll have two pens side by side, a double partition part way up, and trap-nests in the partition. I'll not keep the hens shut up there for hours, till I can get round to open doors. I'll have the boxes arranged so the weight of the hen when she goes on the nest will close the door by which she entered and open one at the opposite side. When she has laid, she'll get off in the second pen and door number will swing invitingly open for another layer. In this way I'll soon have all creditable hens in one pen and it'll be easy enough to keep tab on the drones. Whenever necessary, I can repeat."

"I see you intend to go in for heavy birds; large eggs don't bring any more than small ones, do they?"

"Mine do. I weigh them and tell customers how much more they weigh than the average. After one trial, I never have any trouble in getting at least five cents more than the market price. I'm particular about feed, so my eggs have an exceptional flavor. There's a class of people everywhere that want that kind and are willing to pay for them."

I'm glad you're going to make an attempt to lighten farm labor. I've always believed it could be done and I'll watch your efforts with interest."

"Done! of course it can be done. All it needs is brains."

FIRST PRIZE WINNERS.

The Poultry Index of Stoughton, Mass., is publishing in its April and May issues a list of the First Prize Winners at the most representative shows of the country.

These lists are prepared under classes, breeds and varieties so that one may readily determine who are the foremost Blue ribbon winners of every kind of bird.

This is a work which puts special emphasis upon winners of first prize and points out which are the most famous shows.

This form of indexical work has been employed in England for some time and with some 2000 poultry exhibitions being held annually in the United States it seems as if some such compilation of the leaders will serve a good end here. Twenty-one shows that are considered most representative of their respective section have been selected in this first list that the Index has attempted.

A Few Hours With Men Who Raise Chickens

The Rose Comb Brown Leghorn Club Catalog, S. Wm. Briscoe, Valley Cottage, N. Y., President, and Mrs. W. W. Gale, New Haven, Conn., Secretary and Treasurer, is one of the newest, most complete and down-to-date Club catalogues we have ever had to examine. It contains a list of all official officers, both national and state, together with the names and addresses of all club members in the different states, and the writer is proud to note the fact that the Old Keystone State heads the list so far as membership is concerned. This Club Book is a real work of Art and might be copied by other Clubs with profit. We respectfully urge every Rose Comb Brown Leghorn breeder in the country to join the club and help boost this magnificent breed of fowls. There is no earthly reason why the popularity of the Rose Comb Browns should not be as extensive as any other breed on earth, and we predict a brilliant future for the little Rose Comb Brown hen. Put your shoulder to the wheel, boys and girls, and Boost. There is no place in the poultry world for hangars on or "grouchy" so-called fanciers. Boost and boost now while the opportunity is yours.

The increasing popularity of the Columbian Wyandottes has taken on a national character for sure, and among those who are boosting this splendid breed of fowls into its own rights the name of J. J. Rittenhouse, Loraine, Pa., holds a prominent place. He is devoting a great deal of time and study to the perfecting of his favorite breed and owns some of the best Columbians in the East, and his prices are within the reach of all. Write Mr. Rittenhouse for his mating list. It is free.

The Brookside Terrace, Bryn Athyn, Montgomery, Co., Pa., William F. Bisher, Prop., breeder of S. C. Buff Orpingtons and White Plymouth Rocks is worthy of the patronage of every prospective purchaser of either stock or eggs from either of these popular breeds. At Philadelphia, Pa., Show they won 1st Cock, 5th hen in a class of great quality. In Buff Orpingtons they won 2nd pullet at Camden, N. J., and 3rd and 5th pullet at Philadelphia, Pa. Those who are familiar with the quality of these two classes, in either of these shows know full well that nothing but birds of high merit stood a "ghost" of a chance of winning in any class. No one can positively make a mistake by sending their orders to the Brookside Terrace. Every order will receive Mr. Bisher's personal attention. Look it up and write him for prices. Tell him the Fancier told you of the splendid quality of his birds.

Mr. George Guiguet, Secretary, Poultry Department, of the Cumberland Co. Agriculture Society, Carlisle, Pa., is doing some mighty lively "stunts" in Houdan Alley of Old Pennsylvania. It is through the efforts of just such honest, tried and true poultrymen as Mr. Guiguet that the poultry industry is able to record its present proud achievements upon the pages of our nation's history. No man need hesitate to deal with Mr. Guiguet if in need of Houdans, for we assure them they will always receive fair and courteous treatment at his hands. His Houdans are among the best in the country and we take pleasure in recommending them to a buying public. Write Mr. Guiguet for prices, and tell him you saw his ad in the Fancier.

We are greatly pleased to be able to number among our friends and advertisers, Mr. Ross Swartout, Newport, Ont., Canada, one of Canada's most popular and trustworthy Rose Comb Black Minorca breeders. His birds have been among the most noted Minorca winners in both Canada and the U. S. for the past two years. His catalogue is ready for mailing and contains cuts of his winning males and females. Ontario Chief, one of the best Minorca Cock birds in the world to-day, heads his 1st pen. This bird won 1st and shape special at one of Canada's greatest winter shows, and is a wonderful bird in every way. All of Mr. Swartout's breeding pens for this season contain splendid quality both in males and females and the prices he placed upon his hatching eggs is very reasonable indeed for the quality he offers. Try a setting of eggs from Mr. Swartout's Minorcas. With us there could be no question as to results. His catalogue is ready for your call, and is free. Tell him you are a reader of the Fancier, America's only Fancier's Journal.

Mr. Chas. Nixon, of Washington, N. J., one of our most popular and successful Poultry Judges and breeder of as fine White Wyandottes as can be found anywhere in the country, is a yearly advertiser in The Fancier and one of our yearly contributors. Mr. Nixon needs no recommendation from us as he is widely and honorably known among all of our leading fanciers. As a poultry judge he is painstaking and, we believe, strictly reliable. We have never heard a complaint against his work as a judge and feel proud to be able to record this fact. His Wyandottes are all any one could wish, great, big fellows, grand in shape, head points, laying qualities, and white as snow. We predict that many of this season's show birds will be hatched from eggs from Mr. Nixon's yards. Write him for his mating circular. You will be surprised at the splendid quality he is offering for the prices he asks. The Fancier always leads the way to success.

We were pleased to receive Dr. Howard Mellor's 1912 mating list of his famous prize winning Single Comb Black Minorcas. We bred this ever popular breed of birds for years and were able to produce some very exceptional individuals, but we simply took our hat off and tucked it under our arm when we looked over Dr. Mellor's 1st Philadelphia 1911 Cockerel. We have "beat it" over a great many "ties" in our travels from one poultry show to another during the past eighteen or twenty years, but we never saw such quality in one Minorca cockerel before, and his winnings at Phila., Pa., were simply a walk-a-way even in Philadelphia's great quality Minorca show. If we were in a position to breed Minorcas, we would have some eggs from pen one. Dr. Mellor, even though we had to foot it all the way to Springhouse, Pa. We esteem it a privilege to recommend Dr. Mellor and his great birds to all the Fancier's friends and wish the Dr. every possible success. Look up Dr. Mellor's ad in this issue of the Fancier and write for his 1912 mating list. Our advertisers will appreciate the courtesy if you will tell them it was the Fancier who led you to their doors.

"The beautiful appearance of the Polish, with its black body and contrasting snow white crest, appeals to every lover of beauty in the fowl kingdom." A flock of pure Golden Buff fowls, enhanced with true Wyandotte shape, the breed of graceful curves and charming symmetry, sporting over a green lawn is surely pleasing to the real fancier's eye. These are the two varieties Carpenter & Carpenter breed. They breed them, too, to as high a state of perfection as are found anywhere in the whole country. Mr. Austin W. Carpenter, the junior member of the firm, is a regular contributor to the Fancier and one of the most noted judges of poultry in the U. S. Zenas Carpenter, the senior member of the firm, is one of our old-time and most widely known fanciers of the East. During his time he has produced prize winners in nearly every leading variety of standard bred fowls, and is one of the most ardent and conscientious Buff Wyandotte breeders in the land. The Fancier is very fortunate, indeed, to have men of this stamp as contributors to its pages and patrons of its advertising department. We point with pride to these facts and earnestly advise all lovers of Polish or Buff Wyandottes to give them a share of their patronage. Their motto "We sell quality, not reputation," is very characteristic of these gentlemen, and the faithfulness with which they adhere to this motto is well attested by the many complimentary letters they have received from satisfied customers in all parts of the country. Their address is Carpenter & Carpenter, East Randolph, N. Y. A two-cent postage stamp will prove a profitable investment. Write them and learn the reason why.

Dear DeLancey:—

Yours in regard to the ½ page ad. for May received. Well go ahead and give the thing the benefit of your experience, write me a good one and use the good cut.

Have a lot of fine youngsters out, and eggs are very fertile.

Carpenter & Carpenter are famous the country over for their high quality White Crested Black Polish and Buff Wyandottes.

Vierheller Bros., 17 Sylvania avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa., have struck a winning gait in the Buff Rock world that is worthy of the most extensive breeders of this increasingly popular breed. They have made one of the greatest Show Room records this season to be found among Buff Rock breeders. Their birds traveled over 6,000 miles and carried away 24 first prizes, besides a large number of second, third and fourth prizes and numerous specials. They have won the lion's share in such shows as Topeka, McKeesport, Hamilton, the great Allentown Fair, Hagerstown, Cannonsburg, Beaver, the Pittsburgh Fanciers' Club Champion Show, and the Pittsburgh Expo. Show.

They ship all stock on approval and sell eggs from the same pens they hatch their winners from. Their stock is highly commended by our most prominent poultry judges and their satisfied customers are legion. Look up their ad. in this month's issue of the Fancier and write them your wants. Their prices are very reasonable indeed for the quality of stock and eggs they are offering for sale.

The North Side Poultry Co., Wm. A. Bartholomew, Mgr., 343 N. Seventh St., Allentown, Pa., breeders of White, Buff and Columbia Wyandottes, White, Buff and Black Orpingtons, S. C. White, Brown and Buff Leghorns and a number of other Standard bred fowls, also agent for Hall's Mammoth and Buckeye Incubators, are running a conspicuous ad. in the Fancier and are offering some very attractive prices on breeding stock, hatching eggs and day-old chicks. This firm is perfectly reliable in every way and none of our friends will hesitate to place their orders with them for anything they have to sell. Their chicks are hatched in Hall's Mammoth Incubators and are great, big, fluffy fellows, brimful of vitality and sure to thrive if given half a chance. Send for their circular and price list. A two cent stamp will bring it to your door.

We have the 1912 matting list of the Roseland Poultry Farm, Chas. W. Switzer, owner-mr., South Euclid, O., before us, and it "Sort O" puts a few degrees on top of our "hen fever" that makes us feel restless at our desk and thrills us with the longing to lay down our pen, flee from the office and board the first train for So. Euclid, O., and use whatever persuasive powers we possess to begin with, Mr. Switzer is a real poultry Fancier and a perfect gentleman, whose chief aim in life is to do by the other fellow as he would have the other fellow do by him if conditions were reversed. Never has any man knocked at his door without admittance and a congenial welcome. Never has any fancier had occasion to regret any transaction with Mr. Switzer. He is always frank, courteous and on the square. We would that more men of convince Mr. Switzer that he ought to part with at least a few of his wonderful Buff Orpingtons and give some of us Eastern chaps an equal chance to meet him in the show room competition! But after more deliberate thought, and the "lapping" off of these extra degrees of temperature, we have about decided to save our carfare and devote what might otherwise prove to be lost time to a brief description of these Roseland Orpingtons, that our friends may know what caused our fever to rise so rapidly and our pen to grow languid upon the page before us. ## RHEUMATISM

A Home Cure Given by One Who Had it

In the spring of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know, for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy, and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally, I found a remedy that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bedridden with Rheumatism, and it effected a cure in every case.

I want every sufferer from any form of rheumatic trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. If, after you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of curing your Rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar, but, understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when positive relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write today.

THE GALE POULTRY PLACE, 66 Center St., New Haven, Conn.

Mr. Switzer's stamp graced the ranks of the world's greatest industry. The Roseland Buff Orpingtons have been bred in line for years. They combine rare shape, wonderful color and breast size, qualities hard to produce in any breed of fowls. Mr. Switzer's winning male birds are among the very best we have ever seen. His cock birds heading his 1st. and 2nd. breeding pens are, we believe, equal to any in this country, while the cockerel heading his 3rd. breeding yard, winner of first prize at the great 1912 Cleveland, O., Show, is one of the greatest individuals produced this last season.

The Roseland mating list is replete with quality and we urge our friends to write for it at once. We are sure it will not only prove interesting but profitable as well. The Fancier's advertisers believe in a "Square Deal," and the Fancier stands back of every one of these.

Mr. Switzer's females are as great in quality as his males but time and space forbid a detailed description of their excellence. We do not hesitate in the least to say that no one of our many readers who may be interested in Buff Orpingtons can possibly make a mistake by sending their orders to Mr. Switzer for either stock or eggs.

The Locust Poultry Farm, Canton, Pa., Specialty breeders Single Comb White Leghorns, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Newell, Proprietors, are certainly making attractive history with their favorite breed. Their winnings during the past season have been very pronounced indeed and they have every reason to be proud of their record. They breed D. W. Young's Strain only and paid him the highest prices for their foundation stock. They are direct descendants from Mr. Young's famous Edward VI and Edna, and have been line bred with the greatest care. Prince Edward, 1st cock at Williamsport, Pa., heading their 1st. breeding pen and Crystal Prince heading their 2nd. breeding pen, are breeds of the highest quality, great, big fellows with low, well spread tails, white lobes, with plumage as white as snow. Their females are of the same high quality as their male birds and their matings this season will, without doubt, produce many of the best Youngsters of the coming season. They have a number of very excellent cockerels for sale from $3.00 to $10.00 each and if any of our friends are in the market for extra good stock at very reasonable prices they will make no mistake by sending their orders to the Locust Poultry Farm, Canton, Pa., Mr. and Mrs. Newell have a very helpful mating list ready for distribution and will be pleased to send it to all parties interested in White Leghorns. Don't fail to write for it at once.

John S. Martin, the Prince of Canadian White Wyandotte breeders, Port-Dover, Canada, was among the first of Canada's high class breeders to recognize the sterling merits of the Fancier, not only in its mechanical composition, clean cut editorial pages and high grade contributions in general, but also its great pulling power as an advertising medium among those who "reckoned" the value of a bird above its pounds of flesh and feathers, and it is with a true fancier's pride that we call the attention of our friends to the same. Mr. Martin needs no introduction to our readers, as both he and his wonderful Regal strain of White Wyandottes are known wherever fancy and utility fowls are bred, in almost every part of the civilized world, but it does afford us a peculiar pride to be able to merit the confidence and esteem of poultrymen of Mr. Martin's stamp, and we trust that every friend of the White Wyandotte will put their shoulder to the wheel in company with Mr. Martin and keep boosting this popular breed of fowls right up to the top-most round of its just and proper heritage.

Mr. Martin's Wyandottes are not only birds of beauty and fancy, but they are birds of great utility as well, for when any breeder is able to breed fowls fit to win in fastest show room competition that will lay from 200 to 241 eggs per year he is worthy of special mention in the pages of any journal. We trust our readers will write Mr. Martin for his mating list, or better still send him 10 cents in stamps or coin for his Regal White Wyandotte book, which deals only with the splendid merits of this ever popular breed. Don't forget the Fancier when you write. It will please Mr. Martin and will do you no harm.

Mr. Guy Longstreth, Belington, W. Va., breeder of S. C. White Klondikes, Barred and White Rocks, is one of Old West Virginia's most popular and honest breeders of high-class exhibition birds. His White Klondikes rank among the best in the land, while his Barred and White Plymouth Rocks have won many of the most coveted prizes of the South. We feel certain that any one who may be interested in any of the above named breeds can make no mistake in securing either stock or eggs from Mr. Longstreth's yards. His Klondikes are wonderful utility as well as fancy fowls and while they are a new breed they are making great strides toward the front ranks of the poultry world. Look up Mr. Longstreth's ad. and write him for his circular. It is free and will certainly please you.

The Oak Grove Poultry Yards, Trimble, Ohio, Mr. L. G. Cary, Proprietor, breeder of White Cornish fowls, and one of the most conscientious and painstaking poultry judges in the business to-day, is carrying one of the most attractive ads. that graces the pages of the Fancier. Mr. Cary has been breeding fancy and utility fowls for over thirty years and his White Cornish have been pronounced by the most prominent judges of the land, the best in shape and color of any in the country. His birds have never been defeated in the show-room, winning the most coveted prizes in such prominent shows as the Ohio State Fair, and Ohio State Show at Columbus, O. His prices on both stock and eggs are the most reasonable for the quality of birds he breeds that we have ever known and we predict a veritable landslide in business for Mr. Cary during this and the coming season. As a poultry judge Mr. Cary stands second to none in the middle West. In fact, we know of no judge, east, west, north or south who is more prominent than he. His knowledge as a poultry judge has been gained through years of careful study and breeding thoroughbred poultry. Mr. Cary's services are sought by many of the most prominent associations of the country and he has never left a show room to date without giving universal satisfaction, certainly a record one can point to with pride. Mr. Cary has a wide experience as a school master and endeavors to make every show at which he judges a real school room for all exhibitors, thereby disseminating knowledge among breeders and exhibitors that will help them materially in mating and exhibiting their birds in future. Judges of Mr. Cary's stamp are coming into demand more universally every year among the poultry associations who are looking for a real instructor as well as a judge. Look up Mr. Cary's ad. in the Fancier and tell him the Fancier told you about him and his birds.

Henry F. Michell & Co., of Philadelphia, Pa., one of the oldest and most reliable poultry and general seed supply houses in the country has swung into line with many other popular advertisers in the Fancier. We certainly appreciate the business of such reliable people and trust that all our readers will give them a share of their patronage. They keep the highest quality of everything of interest to the poultryman or gardener and are prepared to fill all orders immediately upon receipt of same. Their generous and prompt dealings with their customers in the past have made possible the large and increasing business they now enjoy. We want to congratulate Michell's on their business achievements of the past and trust their investment with the Fancier and bring them the highest possible results. Write them for their catalog of Poultry supplies. It is full of good things from cover to cover.

The 1912 catalogue of Leslie H. McCue is before us and deserves special mention. Mr. McCue is one of Old Virginia's most successful and dependable Barred Rock breeders and his catalogue is in keeping with his reputation as a painstaking breeder. The Fancier's readers are well acquainted with the high merits of Mr. McCue's Barred Rocks. They have won the most coveted prizes in many of our leading shows and stand to-day as an enduring monument of Mr. McCue's devotion to his favorite breed. Although his stock is of the finest quality yet his prices are within reach of all and we predict that his birds will hold a prominent place among the greatest victors of the season of 1912-13. Write Mr. McCue for his catalogue and mailing list and tell him the Fancier lighted your pathway to his door.

The Caw-Law Poultry Farm, Rosedale, Md., breeders of White and Fawn Runner Ducks, S. C. White Leghorns, White and Columbian Wyandottes, Single Comb Buff, Black and White Plymouth Rocks, Rose and Single Comb Black Minorcas, Mottled Anconas, Partridge Cochins Bantams, Mammoth White Pekin Ducks, Bronze Turkeys and Toulouse Geese, have an exceptionally attractive catalogue ready for mailing to all prospective customers. This Company's Farm is composed of 35 acres of beautifully laying land about two and one-half miles from the City of Baltimore, Md. Located as it is, right in the heart of the Piedmont district, they enjoy one of the most healthful climates in the East; there is a beautiful lake of about two acres on this farm to which all their water-fowls have access, thus insuring the highest percentage of fertility for their hatching eggs. The Caw-Law Poultry Farm have won many of the most coveted premiums in the keenest competition in some of the largest Eastern and Southern shows, such as Taneytown, Prospect Park, Timonium, Hagerstown and Baltimore, Md., together with such popular shows as Hanover, Allentown and Philadelphia, Pa., and Washington, D. C. For a great many seasons their show record has been a brilliant one indeed and their customers speak in the highest terms of praise of the treatment they have received in all their dealings with this popular firm. We can assure our patrons that the Caw-Law Poultry Farm will give them a square deal all along the line and we trust that those who are interested in any of the above named breeds of fowls will write for their catalog and price list. It is free and contains many helpful suggestions to all who are striving for success in raising pure-bred fowls. Mention the Fancier when you write, please. They will appreciate the favor and the Fancier will not fail to recognize your courtesy.

Mr. A. J. Street, Forest Hill, Md., is making a very enviable record with his Buff Orpingtons. His first cockerel at the great Baltimore, 1912 Show, is one of the finest individuals produced during the past year. His first pullet at the same show easily stood in a class by herself, while his first pen proved the real sensation of the Buff Orpington alley. We advise the boys in other sections of the U. S. to watch their laurels, for we are assured that Mr. Street will come back this year stronger than ever. We predict that many a royal battle will be fought to a finish during the coming season and that Mr. Street's grand birds will wear many a notable victor's crown. Mr. Street's ad. can always be found in the Fancier, and we can assure every one of honest and kindly treatment who may place their orders with him for eggs. Mr. Street has sold all the stock he can spare until after Aug. 1st, but will give the best of care to all patrons who order hatching eggs. Better get busy boys and have the laugh on the other fellow when the battle begins. The Fancier's advertisers always lead, the other fellows follow.

The Walnut-Park Poultry Farm, M. C. Blakeslee, Nicholson, Pa., Proprietor, breeders of Single Comb White Leghorns, Rose Comb Rhode Island Reds, Silver Laced Wyandottes and Buff Plymouth Rocks, also English Red Caps and Blue Audalusions, are offering very attractive prices on their hatching eggs for the balance of the season. We doubt very much whether there is another firm in the country who are giving better quality for the money. Every strain of birds they are breeding are of excellent quality and their patrons will surely get full value for all money entrusted to their care. Look for their ad. in this issue of the Fancier and order direct from the same as they give full information as to prices on eggs from all their birds. Tell them the Fancier advised you to do so.

If any of the Fancier's friends are in need of baby chicks or eggs from Single Comb White Leghorns they can make no mistake by sending part of their patronage to Souder Brothers, Mountain Ave. Poultry Yards, S. Williamsport, Pa., as these gentlemen have exceptionally good birds and guarantee satisfaction to all their customers. Write them in the name of the Fancier. It will do you good and us no harm.

The Park Farm Poultry Yards, Marietta, Pa., Donald C. Duffy, Prop., are among the Fancier's most reliable advertisers. Their birds are all they claim them to be and their eggs are offered at very reasonable prices, considering the quality of their stock. Our patrons can depend upon a square deal at all times when dealing with Donald C. Duffy. Look up his ad. in the Fancier and give Mr. Duffy a portion of your patronage.

Geo. T. and J. A. Weingartner, of New Castle, Pa., breeders of high class Anconas, are offering a limited number of eggs from their prize winning birds. They have as good Anconas as the country affords and our friends are very fortunate to be able to secure hatching eggs from them. The Ancona is forging to the front with mighty rapid strides and the demand for good stock and eggs is far in excess of the supply. The sooner you get started with this popular breed, boys, the larger will be your balance on the right side of your ledger. You will always find Messers. Weingartner's ad. in the Fancier. Look it up and write them for their mating list.

are making a wonderful record this season in selling hatching eggs and matured birds. They are crowded with orders from all parts of the country and are giving their customers the highest possible quality for their money. There is no question whatever but that the Kellerstrass Orpington Farm is enjoying the largest specialty business in White Orpingtons of any firm in the U. S. Their old customers are crowding into the front ranks of successful White Orpington breeders at an astonishing rate and to-day are glad to boost the Kellerstrass Farm for the honest treatment received at their hands and to ascribe their success, in a large part at least, to the universal popularity of Kellerstrass Crystal White Orpingtons. The Fancier truly appreciates the confidence and good will of this ever increasingly popular firm and wishes them every possible success in the future. Write the Kellerstrass people for their catalog and mating list. It is one of the most complete, practical and helpful catalogues ever published. You will be astonished at the great quality and number of their matings and the very reasonable prices they are quoting on high class stock and eggs. Our readers will find their ad. in the Fancier and when you write them tell them about the eagle on our cover page.

J. Nelson Allison, Langhorne, Bucks Co., Pa., the popular breeder of Glen Lake Barred Rocks, is offering a number of exceptionally fine pullets and hens for sale at $1, $2, $3 and $4 each. We are surprised at the low price Mr. Allison is making on these birds, as they are worth more than twice the price he is quoting them at. If any one is looking for real bargains in Barred Rock females, here is their chance. For five years Mr. Allison has been giving his Rocks the most careful and scientific study, and has produced some of the best birds in the East, and we feel confident our readers will not allow these birds to remain long in Mr. Allison's yards. Look up Mr. Allison's ad. in this month's issue of the Fancier and secure, if possible, as many of these females as you can afford. Mr. Allison guarantees satisfaction and the Fancier stands back of his guarantee. Get busy, my friends, such opportunities seldom occur.

If any of our patrons are in need of a high grade Beef Scrap they can make no mistake in sending their orders to the Quaker City Manufacturing Co., 68th Ave. and York Road, Philadelphia. The writer has used a large amount of this company's Beef Scraps and has always found it of the very best quality. Their prices are as reasonable as any, and the fact that they are so handy should have much to do toward determining who should get your orders. Write them for prices or ask your dealer for Quaker City Beef Scrap. They will be glad to get it for you if you make the demand. Mention the Fancier when you write to our advertisers. They are always pleased and it will do us no harm.

The Dune Alpine Farm, East Hampton, N. Y., G. J. Kerr, Mgr., breeders of S. O. White Orpingtons and Single Comb White Leghorns, are enjoying a prosperous egg trade this season. It is no wonder, for their birds are among the very best in the country and Mr. Kerr treats all his customers on the square. We are acquainted with Mr. Kerr and have carefully noted his birds in a number of our leading shows during the past season and know something of the high quality of the birds he breeds. We take unusual pleasure in recommending Mr. Kerr and his birds to all who may be interested in either White Orpingtons or White Leghorns. Write the Dune Alpine Farm for their catalog. It is yours for the asking.

The Hilltop Poultry Yards, Catasquan, Pa., are scoring some mighty fine victories with their popular White Indian Games. At some big Eastern Shows they cleaned up the crown of blue to the astonishment of their competitors and their own satisfaction. Anyone who may want the best in White Indian Games can find them at the Hilltop Poultry Yards. Write them for their catalog and mating list, it is free. Don't forget the Blue Ribbon journal when you write.

The Metuchen Poultry Farm, W. A. Smith, Prop., Metuchen, N. J., has 41 breeding pens mated up for this season's egg trade. The quality of the various breeds bred on the Metuchen Farm is of the highest possible quality, as their winnings at our greatest shows attest. At Trenton, N. J., Mr. Smith made a great win, while at the Garden he carried away many of the most important prizes. During the past show season Mr. Smith's birds have won nearly 300 ribbons, besides a great number of specials. This plant is one of the best equipped of any in the "Skeeter" state and every variety bred on this farm is as near perfection as scientific and painstaking breeding can produce. The smallest order will receive Mr. Smith's personal attention, and one of his highest ambitions as a true fancier is to help the fellow on the lower round of the ladder a little nearer the top. Write Mr. Smith for his catalog. It is free and is worth a place in anyone's library.

T. A. Faulds, of London, Ontario, Canada, at the world's greatest Minorca show won the directors' cup, valued at $50, two years in succession for the best collection. At Phila., Pa., 1911 show Mr. Faulds won every first and second on Rose Comb Black Minorcas. His customers are winning all over Canada and the United States and his repeat orders from his old customers is really astonishing. The secret of the business is, Mr. Faulds believes in doing by the man who buys stock or eggs from him just as he would want the other fellow to do if conditions were reversed. Write Mr. Faulds for his catalog and tell him you saw his ad. in the Fancier.

any where in the country. They are prompt in returns, courteous in their treatment and always pays the highest possible cash prices for everything they receive. We trust the Fancier's friends will not forget this reliable firm when they have any surplus stock for sale. Look up their ad. in this month's issue of the Fancier. The Koons Farm, Box 25, Treichler, Pa., are breeding some of the best Buff Wyandottes that can be found anywhere in the country. They are offering eggs for hatching from their Madison Square Garden, Philadelphia and Hagerstown winners at prices that certainly look good to us. If we had a little more time I think the writer would make an inroad on Mr. Koons' egg supply that would compel him to call a halt, for fear of a good trouncing in the show room another year with his own birds. We doubt very much if there ever was or ever will be a much better all-round fowl bred than the Buff Wyandotte and we feel certain that at no distant day they will give the most widely advertised and prominent breeds of fowls a mighty fast run for the crown of blue. Boys, get busy. You have, in the Buff Wyandottes, as grand a breed of birds as ever graced a show room and a few judiciously spent dollars in advertising and a little printer's ink will put the Buff Wyandottes into the place of prominence they so well deserve.

We trust that all our friends who are interested in this worthy breed will write the Koons Farm for their mating list at once and get an early start in the right direction.

His birds have average trap-nested records up to 207 eggs in ten months, with a splendid show record behind them. Mr. Pennington has won many coveted prizes in such shows as Milwaukee, Indianapolis, St. Louis, Kansas City and Chicago, and is offering eggs and stock from his champion winners at prices that will surely move them. Write for his mating list. It is free. And remember the American Bird on the cover page of the Fancier was never disqualified.

Boyd Johnson, Rupert, Pa., breeder of Imperial Barred Rocks, has made a wonderful show record during the past season. At the N. Y. State fair he won six firsts and on 31 entries at Williamsport, Mr. Johnson carried away 28 premiums. These were very remarkable victories and place Mr. Johnson's Imperial Barred Rocks in the front ranks of the Barred Rock world. Anyone desiring good stock or hatching eggs from really high grade show birds can make no mistake in sending their orders to Mr. Johnson. Write him for his mating list. It is free.

The Rosemont Poultry Farm, Lehighton, are offering hatching eggs from their Rose Comb Reds and Single Comb White Leghorns at prices that certainly ought to bring them a laud office business. Their birds are of a very high order and we can't understand how they can give such splendid quality to their customers at the prices they quote in their ad. in the Fancier. Suffice it to say they do it just the same and their customers certainly appreciate such generous treatment. $2.50 per setting from such extra quality birds as this firm breeds will certainly result in pulling an enormous bunch of business their way. Look up their ad. in the Fancier and order direct from the same. We assure you there is no risk whatever in doing so. They are perfectly responsible and guarantee satisfaction to all their customers.

The Fairview Farm, Easton, Pa., J. S. Haupt, Prop., have certainly struck the popular chord in their ad. in the Poultry Fancier. Mr. Haupt is one of Pennsylvania's most responsible and trustworthy Orpington breeders, and the splendid success he has achieved in the past is simply the result of painstaking breeding, honest and impartial dealing with all his customers. Mr. Haupt breeds White, Buff and Black Orpingtons and has won over 3000 premiums in America's largest and most popular shows. He is offering baby chicks from his most famous blood lines for prices below what many others are asking for eggs, and as a natural result he is booking orders for hundreds of day-old chicks from all parts of the country. We know Mr. Haupt is perfectly reliable and we take pleasure in recommending him to all who are interested in Orpingtons. Write him for prices and favor him with a portion of your orders. You will feel better when show season comes again and point to the Fancier with increasing pride for having led you to his door.

HOW TO PAINT

Buggies, farm wagons, farming tools, barns, outbuildings and houses often need painting. "Everybody's Paint Book," written by a thoroughly practical painter, will be found a complete guide to the art of outdoor and indoor painting. It is designed for the special use of those who wish to do their own painting. It gives practical lessons in plain painting, varnishing, polishing, staining, paper hanging, kalsomining, etc.

It also tells how to renovate furniture and gives many hints on artistic work for decorating a home. Precise directions are given for mixing paints for all purposes.

If farming tools and farm vehicles are kept painted, they will last twice as long, and anybody can do the work with the aid of this book. It is handsomely and substantially bound in cloth. A copy will be sent postage prepaid on receipt of price, $1.00

Address

Poultry Fancier, Sellersville, Pa.

They have been line bred for generations, and have won in many of our greatest shows. We know Mr. Weikert will accord you honest and satisfactory treatment and that you will thank the Fancier for telling you about him and his birds. When you write Mr. Weikert, mention the Fancier and simply say "The Eagle led me on the way."

It certainly affords us great pleasure to note how rapidly, of late, the Brown Leghorn is coming into her rightful heritage again and that Mr. Fred. H. Cook, Box F, Beaver, Pa., is crowding these little Brown beauties to the top round with mighty rapid strides. We wish Mr. Cook every success in this worthy and popular cause, and we sincerely trust that every lover of Brown Leghorns will put their shoulder to the wheel and boost with all his might. Anyone desiring good stock or eggs can surely have their desires satisfied to the fullest degree by sending a portion of their orders to Mr. Cook. Look up his ad. and write him for prices. Get into the old chariot, boys, while yet there is room, and the door of opportunity swings outward. Send us in some good articles on the Brown Leghorn. We will help the cause along.

M. A. Jacobus, Ridgefield, N. J., one of our leading Silver Campine breeders, is reaping a rich reward as a result of his good judgment in selecting this ever increasingly popular breed. The Silver Campines are in great demand and the supply falls short of meeting it. Here is an eye opener, boys. Go after it! We predict that the Silver Campines will presently be one of the most popular and widely bred birds of the land and those who are able to get a good flock of high grade birds will reap a small fortune. Write Mr. Jacobus for his mating list and descriptive booklet. They are free and may help you on to a larger bank account.

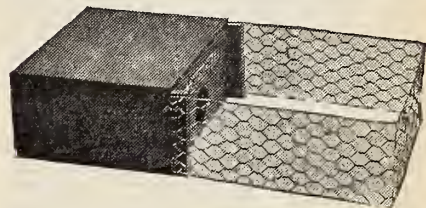

The Foxhurst Farms, Lime Rock, Conn., breeders of Black and White Orpingtons, are enjoying a busy and prosperous season. They are shipping eggs all over the U. S. and other countries and their eggs are hatching very satisfactory indeed. There is no question whatever about the quality of Mr. Barnum's birds. No breeder in the country can show a finer or better class than he and no breeder in this or any other land is held in higher esteem. His word is better than a note and his old customers could no more be persuaded to go elsewhere to purchase stock or eggs than Mr. Barnum could be persuaded to give anyone anything but a "Square Deal." The Fancier is proud to be able to number, among its advertisers, men of Mr. Barnum's stamp and compliments the readers of our journal that they are fortunate enough to secure stock and eggs from such a responsible source. Write Mr. Barnum for his catalog. It is free and its pages are filled with good things every poultryman ought to know.

It is certainly wonderful how rapidly the S. C. Buff Leghorns are scaling the ramparts of the foe and capturing the citadel of many a fancier's heart who but a short time ago had no place whatever in their hearts for them. There is no more beautiful breed, according to the writer's fancy, in all the poultry world than a real soft golden buff, good symmetrical Buff Leghorn male, while the female of like quality is a little Queen in "hendom." One feature we are glad to note, in traveling among the Buff Leghorn breeders, and that is the boys are not only getting shape, good head points and grand color, but they are producing nice size birds as well. This feature for a time was a great handicap to the Buffs, but this objection is being eliminated very rapidly and to-day we can find as large birds among the Buffs as any other variety of the Leghorn family. We do not believe in overdoing size in any breed of birds to the detriment of other good features, but we do believe the shape, symmetry and laying qualities of any Leghorn variety can be maintained in birds weighing from 3 3/4 to 4 1/2 lbs. each for females and from 4 to 5 lbs. for males. We bred Leghorns for a number of years and we never had any trouble in securing good sized birds either in males or females that retained all the finest characteristics of the breed. Among the more prominent breeders who are contributing more than their share in popularizing this charming breed of birds we desire to mention the names of J. Courtney Punderford, of Freneau, N. J., Proprietor of the Monmouth Poultry Farm; Wm. E. Crevoiserat, 35 Mill Road, Freeport, N. Y., and H. G. Richardson, Etra, N. J. These gentlemen are "honor" poultrymen, men who place principle above the dollar, men who have sacrificed hundreds of dollars and years of consecrated effort to give to the world the highest type of Buff Leghorn, not only from a Fancier's point of view, but from the utility side as well. How thoroughly they have succeeded need not be enumerated here. Their victories in the show room, in many of our most prominent poultry shows, speak in higher praise than the most skillful pen can depict, and the kind words of commendation coming from all sections of the country, to our offices fully attest the claims we have made in their behalf. The Fancier wishes to compliment these gentlemen on the great work they have accomplished thus far and urge every Buff Leghorn breeder in America to rally to the Standard and "boost" this highly deserving variety of the Leghorn family right up to the popular heritage it so richly deserves. Any one desiring hatching eggs, day-old chicks or matured stock can make no mistake by sending their orders to any of these gentlemen or any other Buff Leghorn breeder who advertises in the Poultry Fancier.

Mt. Royal Poultry Farm, Chas., J. Gloggers, Glenshaw, Pa., breeder of the Promoter strain White Wyandottes is making the kind of show room history an honest breeder really deserves. At the last Great Pittsburg, Pa. show, Mr. Gloggers won 1st pen, 1st cock and 1st pullet. At Cannonsburg, Pa., in one of the strongest string of Wyandottes ever shown at this big show, he won 1st and 2nd cocks, 1st and 3rd hens and 3rd pen. These two winnings stamp quality all over Mr. Gloggers' birds and should give him a most prominent place among the best of White Wyandotte breeders in the Keystone State. Write Mr. Gloggers for his catalogue or look up his ad. in the Fancier and order direct from the same. His prices are very reasonable for the quality of stock he breeds.

Mr. V. K. Dayhoff, Box 14, York, Pa., is taking long strides toward the front with his S. C. White Orpingtons. He breeds Brady's strain exclusively and owns many grand birds, his males weighing up to 11 lbs. and females 9 lbs. each. His birds are white and fine in shape. Look up Mr. Dayhoff's ad. in the Fancier and give him a nice order. We know he will treat you right.

Harty and Freshely, Willoughby, Ohio, have a fine lot of S. C. B. I. Reds from which they are offering eggs at prices that ought to bring them big business for this season. They also have fine cock birds for sale at very reasonable figures. They breed the Aristocrat strain of Reds and anyone familiar with the Aristocrats, of Willoughby, O., knows how popular these wonderful Reds are. If in need of eggs write Messrs. Harty and Freshely and give them a portion of your orders. You will receive honest treatment and great quality for prices they ask for their best eggs. Their ad. can always be found in the Fancier and when you write them simply say "the Fancier recommended you to me."

Long's Orpingtons, in Buffs, Blacks and Whites are creating quite a stir in the Orpington world. Mr. E. M. Long, Osceola, Ind., is one of our tried and true Orpington breeders and you can tie to every promise he makes you. His birds are all that one can desire in Orpingtons and his prices are reasonable. He has won many coveted prizes in all sections of the West, and has hundreds of satisfied customers all over the country. You better hurry your orders in at once, as Mr. Long enjoys an immense trade and you may be too late if your order is delayed. Write to him for his mating list, but do it now; tomorrow may be just one day too late.

Another of our great Orpington breeders is Mr. A. E. Martz, of Arcadia, Ind., the man who made the Big win on Buffs at Chicago, Memphis and Nashville, Tenn., Indianapolis, Ind., and Chicago, Ill., the past season. Mr. Martz's Buffs are grand in shape, color and size and his winnings are very remarkable indeed. His customers have words of highest praise for the treatment he accords them and are glad to tell the good news to others who are in the market for either high class stock or eggs. We are sure you will get full value for every dollar you trust to Mr. Martz's care and bespeak for him a goodly share of your patronage. Send for Mr. Martz's catalogue. It contains forty illustrations of his winning birds and will greatly aid you in selecting your eggs for hatching. We congratulate Mr. Martz on his splendid success and trust this will prove a banner season for him.

Whiting's White Diarrhoea Remedy is certainly proving a boon for the poultrymen who have been troubled with this dreaded disease in little chicks. Mr. Whiting sells this wonderful remedy on a "Guarantee to cure basis." You run no risk in buying it. We know it will do the work claimed for it and we know there will be hundreds more little chicks saved through the country during this season as a result of its use. We are personally acquainted with Mr. Whiting, the man who discovered this great remedy and you can bank on every promise he makes you. Consequently you need not hesitate to order this remedy and use it as per directions. We know it will do the work claimed for it. It has done so for hundreds of other poultrymen. It will do so for you. It is a pleasure to us to recommend this remedy to the Fancier's readers and friends. When ordering, address W. M. Whiting Co., Ashland Ave., East Orange, N. J.

J. Dawson Paul, Langhorne, Pa., breeder of S. C. White Leghorns and Light Brahmas, is running a very attractive Breeder's Card in the Fancier. Mr. Paul is one of Langhorne's most reliable breeders and his birds are among the best in the country. Mr. Paul guarantees perfect satisfaction to all his customers and gives his personal attention to all orders either stock or eggs. He breeds Nev-in's strain of Light Brahmas and is offering a limited number of eggs from his winners. His Leghorns are nice, large, white birds, of the better kind, and you can make no mistake in ordering from either variety Mr. Paul breeds. We are glad to recommend Mr. Paul to our readers.

C. F. Louis, R. F. D. No. 1, Warrensville, O., one of Ohio's big White Orpington breeders, is one of our yearly advertisers. His birds are as good as any in the country and his prices are as reasonable as those of any advertiser in the Fancier's columns. We unhesitatingly recommend Mr. Louis and his birds to all who are interested in White Orpingtons, for we know no one can give better value for prices asked, and we greatly doubt if anyone can give greater value at any price. Mr. Louis' birds are great, big, white individuals, the "kind that lay and the kind that pay" and the guarantee that goes with every order Mr. Louis sends out is absolutely gilt edge in every respect, and you are just as sure of a square deal as though you went right to his yards and made your own selection. Look up Mr. Louis' ad. in the Fancier and write him for his catalogue. It contains many of the kind of surprises to which the Fancier enjoys calling the attention of its readers, as well as the kind of information a customer appreciates and enjoys. When you write tell Mr. Louis

During one of our recent trips through Eastern Penna. we had the unusual pleasure of visiting the home of W. W. Kulp, near Pottstown, Pa. Mr. Kulp is one of the most influential and widely known poultrymen in the U. S. and a writer of unusual ability. His articles on poultry are sought by the foremost magazines of the country and the price Mr. Kulp receives for these articles is very flattering, indeed. We doubt very much if the U. S. affords a more conscientious or trustworthy poultryman than Mr. Kulp, or a fancier who has produced as great a number of really high grade show birds as he, taking into consideration the number of different varieties of fowls he breeds. In Rose Comb Brown Leghorns he has produced some of the most remarkable individuals the world has ever seen, and has won, year after year, many of the most coveted prizes at Madison Square Garden, Philadelphia, Hagerstown and a large number of our greatest shows. While at Mr. Kulp's home he showed us the most perfectly marked Rose Comb Brown Leghorn Cockerel we have ever seen. This bird is just what Mr. Kulp has been scientifically breeding for the past twenty years or more, and when we were examining this wonderful cockerel Mr. Kulp's face shown with the peculiar light of a true fancier's triumph as he remarked, "I have been struggling for many years to produce that bird," and the fact that he had succeeded was ample reward for all his years of study, anxiety and toil. In our estimation the result was worth all the efforts of any fancier for almost any given number of years, and it gave us a peculiar pleasure to know that our old time friend, W. W. Kulp, had attained such distinguished honors. It is useless for us to undertake to give an adequate description of the coloring of this particular bird, suffice it to say that if it were possible it almost eclipsed the color description of the Standard. Mr. Kulp breeds a number of different breeds of standard bred fowls, and has attained a worthy and prominent place in the show room competition on every variety and breed of fowls that grace his yards. His friends all over the country are legion and his name stands for all that honor and fair dealing indicate, and the Fancier points with a peculiar pride to the fact that Mr. Kulp is included on our editorial staff and that his ad. always appears in the Fancier. If any of our friends are in need of either stock or eggs from any of the different varieties bred by Mr. Kulp, we can assure them of the most kindly and honorable treatment from Mr. Kulp should they decide to place a portion of their orders with him. Look up Mr. Kulp's ad. in the Fancier and write him for his catalogue. It is yours for the asking.

The Darlington Egg Farm, Alfred P. Edge, Proprietor, Darlington, Md., is one of the most unique and popular farms in Maryland. Mr. Edge, the proprietor, is building up a very enviable reputation as an honest and painstaking poultryman and his business is growing very rapidly, indeed. The Darlington Egg Farm is located in one of the most picturesque sections of the far-famed state of Old Maryland, and is surrounded by many historic places and splendid scenery. This farm is centrally located and easy of access from all parts of the East, thus affording the owner the best possible shipping facilities to all sections of the country. Mr. Edge informs us that he has been rushed with orders for day-old chicks and hatching eggs and has many orders booked for future shipments. The White Leghorn males bred on this farm are of the great, big, long bodied kind, with small, nicely folding combs, pure white plumage and of splendid carriage. Not one cull in the whole lot of over 1500 breeders and not one pullet used in the breeding yards. The male birds have practically ideal combs, fine lobes, pure white plumage, long backs and abundance of saddle and are fit to win in the strongest competition. This plant now consists of one laying house, 16x120 feet, two stories high, with runs below; another laying house, 16x160 feet. In the house first mentioned there are over 700 females, and over 1,000 breeders in the other laying house. These birds have a range of twelve acres, thus insuring strong, livable chicks that will grow rapidly and mature early into very desirable breeders. The incubator and brooder house are both under one roof. The size of the building is 22x60, with incubator located on the north side, and the brooder house on the South side, with 23 hovers. Mr. Edge is running a 6,000 egg Candee incubator this year and will install another of like capacity another fall. His brooding system is one of the most unique systems in the whole country, the idea of which was originated by Mr. Edge, and is all the most exacting could desire. Mr. Edge has shipped over 15,000 hatching eggs already this season and hundreds of day-old chicks. All the colony houses on this plant are well constructed and down-to-date in every particular. It is evident from every point of view that a master mind is in control even in the minutest detail on this splendid plant.

Every transaction is carried out on strictly business principles, and no one contemplating the purchase of eggs or chicks need hesitate to place his orders with Mr. Edge. Look up the Darlington Egg Farm's ad. in this issue of the Fancier, and write for descriptive booklet. It is free and no doubt will prove a blessing to all who are fortunate enough to receive it.

that must be seen to be appreciated. You are welcome to see it, says Mr. Eppele.

A. P. A. Department

Edited by J. D. Koons, Secretary Pennsylvania Branch.

Following is a copy of a letter sent to Pennsylvania members of the A. P. A., confining with the Saylor resolution at Scranton:

Brother Member:—Enclosed find copy of By-Laws of the Penna. Branch. Read them carefully and become acquainted with our objects. Pennsylvania has only 290 members of the great army of Poultrymen of our state belonging to the American Poultry Association. WE NEED ORGANIZATION.

Our legislature is not giving us the recognition that the poultry industry deserves. We do not receive the financial support comparing favorably with other states.

The Penna. Branch at its annual meeting at Scranton appointed all Pennsylvania members as a committee to increase membership and it is expected that each member propose one poultryman as a member in the next sixty days. The result of this campaign will be published in Poultry and Daily Papers.

By each member sending one application our membership will be doubled in sixty days. Brother Fancier get busy and boom the organization which has made the poultry business a Billion Dollar Industry.

The application blanks enclosed are a gentle reminder of what is expected of you.

Yours for better poultry organization,
J. D. Koons, Secy.

Attest: W. Theo. Wittman, Pres.

AVOID CLASHING OF DATES.

A. W. Close, Scranton, Pa., president of the Governing Board of the Pennsylvania branch to regulate dates, promoting the best interests of the poultry fraternity, would be pleased to have secretaries of poultry shows confer with the board regarding the clashing of dates where two associations are closely connected.

OFFICERS PENNSYLVANIA BRANCH, AMERICAN POULTRY ASSOCIATION.

President, W. Theo. Wittman, Allentown; Vice-President, Homer W. Jackson, State College; Treasurer, Fred H. Cook, Beaver; Secretary, J. D. Koons, Treichler's. Members Executive Board, term expires 1914, W. P. Craig, Pittsburg; A. F. Kemmerer, Butler; Term expires 1913, F. O. Megargee, Scranton; Geo. O. Faucett, Brandy Summit; Term expires 1912, Henry D. Riley, Staßford, F. S. Gilbert, Phila., Pa. Governing Board, A. W. Close, Scranton; F. G. Davis, Pittsburg. Election Commissioner, E. W. Garber, Mt. Joy.

A. P. A. MEMBER CANDIDATE FOR STATE SENATOR.

Dr. E. W. Garber, of Mt. Joy, a member of the Penna. Branch, American Poultry Association, is a candidate for the State Senate. Dr. Garber is one of the most influential men of Mt. Joy. He has been affiliated with our Association for many years. He has for many years been breeding poultry, and served as election commissioner of the Branch in 1911. He was again unanimously chosen for the ensuing year. Dr. Garber would be a credit to Lancaster county in representing it at our state Capitol. The Penna. Branch is deeply interested in the candidacy of one of its most earnest and progressive members. The poultry raisers of Pennsylvania are in need of chicken Senators and Assemblymen at Harrisburg to get some recognition from our legislature that other states are enjoying.

We hope the voters interested in poultry will support Dr. Garber.

A. P. A. BUTTONS SHOULD BE WORN AT ALL TIMES BY MEMBERS.

It was a pleasure to note the large number of poultrymen at the Phila. Poultry Association's business meeting and banquet held at the Bingham House, March 21, who wore the A. P. A. buttons. This was emblematic of the many members of the Penna. Branch affiliated with this association, and the respect they hold for our American Poultry Association. The emblem, owing to its natural colors, was attractive to the uninitiated, and the writer was asked by two different parties what Patriotic organization was assembled at the hotel. Upon being informed that it was a body of Poultrymen they were astonished to learn that there was a national chicken organization. Brother members, make it a special point to wear your emblem. It will help boost our association, and denotes a live wire of our fraternity. Buttons can be procured from the secretary at Treichlers, Pa.

White Orpington Cockerel, owned and bred by the Sunswick Poultry Farm, South Plainfield, New Jersey. Madison 2nd.

This Cockerel is a 6 months' old baby, a son of our CHAMPION MADISON and LADY OF THE SNOWS, a grand specimen who shows the wonderful result of our scientific method of line breeding as practised on the SUNSWICK POULTRY FARM.

Note the massive shoulders and great bone of this bird and consider his age. He has yet to make his winnings which we feel assured will be well worthy of his fine breeding lines.

Poultry Diseases and Remedies.

Dear readers: In preparing this article for your benefit I will not try and give long stories, etc., or try and build air castles, but plain every day facts about Health and Disease.

Now it is very important to keep the health of your flock at a high standard if you expect strong healthy stock. Above all prevent disease, as it will almost always mean ruin to you and your flocks, and to do this your birds must be kept in clean, healthy quarters, well ventilated, and have good clean feed, also feed regularly. You should make it a point to cleanse your house, yards, etc., at least every week in summer. Use creoline and Carbolic Acid. This will make a good solution for the purpose wanted.

CHOLERA.

This is a disease little known or understood, for you will find, especially among the farmers, many of them, when anything ails their fowls will at once term it Cholera.

Cholera is so swift and fatal that there is little to do, but when we find one of our fowls moping around we at once give it Conkey's Cholera Cure or any other cure we have on hand. The symptoms generally are: fowls start drooping around, lose appetite and a whitish, bloody discharge, comb turns black, fowl becomes weak and will stagger and fall over at the slightest push, and it is not long before death claims them. They usually linger about forty-eight hours, some will linger for a few days.

Now you can do a whole lot to prevent this. Try watching their drooping closely and when you notice anything wrong give immediate treatment. Also keep your pens clean and well ventilated, and never feed wet or sloppy food, but give a variety, and you will be seldom troubled with Cholera in your flocks. If any should get it take fowls affected to clean quarters away from the rest of the flock and give very careful treatment as stated in fore part of this article.

WHITE DIARRHEA.

This is a very common complaint among chicks that are under ten days old and commonly known as seven day mortality. This disease is very fatal and almost all who take it are sure to die. This trouble is usually brought about by having weak parent stock, or from filthy coops, also by chicks being fed too soon. You should never feed chicks until after about one day old. Be very careful not to feed too much, as over-feeding is fatal. They absorb enough of the yolk to last them for a day or so.

We usually give them boiled milk or sulphur for this disease, or any of the White Diarrhea remedies advertised are good.

Give your chicks good, clean quarters, feed and water regularly, and if your parent stock is strong you need not have much fear.

FROM WILLIAMSPORT.

BY JAS. T. HUSTON.

The Fancier will always be close to Williamsport, Pa., Poultry Show matters, if for no other reason than the fact of Mr. DeLancey, from the first show, in 1908, being a warm supporter of this organization.

The dates for 1912 fall on Thanksgiving week, making the dates Nov. 27 to 30 inclusive, the show, as usual, to be held in the large 12th Reg't. Armory, one of the best Show halls in the state. Judges already secured include H. P. Schwab, A. J. Braun, Chas. Nixon and Geo. P. Burgoel.

With such men as Jas. T. Huston, Pres't., Geo. P. Stryker, Sec'y, John R. Heim, Bernard Hines, A. A. Swartz, E. B. Darrow and MacCormick Dawson, it is no wonder that Williamsport has become one of the best shows in the country.

Spratts Pat. will again coop, and Mr. Gus. Brown has been engaged to coop and ship all birds. Nothing will be left undone to make the 5th annual the greatest yet. Let all Show Secretaries take notice of above dates.

GREEN & KAPLE'S

"Royal Strain"

Columbian Plymouth Rocks

Again Outclass All Competitors

At America's premier exhibition, BOSTON, JANUARY 1912, (where the annual meeting of The American Columbian Plymouth Rock Club was held), in competition with the foremost breeders of the country and likewise the best birds that could be produced, our "ROYALS" on only SIX entries simply out-classed all competitors by winning:

1st cock, 1st and 6th cockerel, 1st pen, 2nd pullet and 3rd hen. The American Columbian Plymouth Rock Club's beautiful specials for best colored male and best shaped male. Frank L. Platt's $10.00 cash special for best cockerel in the class, the Association's silver cup for best surface colored male, and the President's cash special, the greatest of all honors, for the best Columbian Plymouth Rock in the show, male or female.

A grand total of more first prizes than all other competitors combined; more Special Prizes than any other exhibitor and every First and Special Prize offered on males.

This great Championship record stands alone and unequalled—an achievement that has never been approached, where like quality and numbers were represented, by any other Columbian Plymouth Rock exhibitor in the history of the Boston Show, and proves beyond all question of doubt the superiority of our "Royals" and substantiates the fact that they still remain undisputed champions.

Our birds possess QUALITY in every sense that the term implies. Excellent layers, large in size, typical Rock type, fine head points and the clean "Royal" color, free from the smoky, splashed effect in body and fluff feathering that is so undesirable.

EGGS FOR HATCHING

Our breeding pens for 1912 have been mated with great care. They not only contain the sons and daughters of our "Royal" Champions, but are headed by noted sires themselves. From these we will sell eggs at $10.00 per 15 and we urge every Columbian Rock fancier who appreciates extreme high quality to write us before purchasing elsewhere. Other breeders may sell you eggs for less money but we believe the quality represented in the eggs we furnish can not profitably be duplicated at a less price. Handsome catalogue free.

Bantams for Pleasure and Profit

By Charles V. Weaver, Proprietor Central Bantam Yards, Dover, N. J.

Every man of any consequence has a "hobby." It may be yachting, playing golf, gathering butterflies, chopping down oats or raising chickens. These are all means to satisfy the longing of close workers for relaxation, or, in other words, a "hobby" to keep the mind busy in other than routine channels. On the principle that "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," it would appear that full credit is not given to the beneficial effect of these methods of relaxation.

A Blue Ribbon Game Bantam Male.

Modern educators have explained the necessity of introducing nature study into our schools. Why not? Is it not the best method of teaching the inductive method? And how can we better teach a child the great lessons of life, than by calling his attention to his natural surroundings, and from these lead to zoological and astronomical phenomena? One of the best ways of keeping in touch with the large part of the scientific world and at the same time have an entertaining "hobby," is to keep standard-bred poultry, and no branch of poultry culture is so absorbing and instructive as the rearing of bantams. This statement may be doubted by some, hence it will be necessary to make an explanation.

THE SUCCESSFUL FEEDING OF BANTAMS.

The great secret in caring for poultry is in the feeding. This feature must be given particular attention in the care of bantams, because they are an artificial fowl, and overfeeding or improper feeding will cause them to develop contrary to the Standard of Perfection laid down and described by the American Poultry Association.

To feed successfully requires constant study. One should know the composition of feeding stuffs and keep an ever watchful eye on the feeding results, so as to observe whether feed is having the proper effect or not. The properly fed bantams shown at our exhibitions require as much skillful care as does the finest race horse for the speed track.

THE PRINCIPLES OF BREEDING ARE INTENSIFIED IN BANTAMS.

In breeding bantams to proper color and form to meet the requirements of the Standard, it is necessary to study the underlying principles of the Darwinian theory, which takes the student in the great fields of natural history and the variations of animals under domestication. In this study we find the principles underlying the larger animals seem to be intensified in the artificial bantam creations, so that he who can rear bantams successfully should have success with any other variety of animals.

To build a home for these bantam pets requires a knowledge of poultry house architecture and skill such as the carpenter has which is good for any boy and also will help to cure dyspepsia in men or "older boys."

"HOW MUCH MONEY IS IN IT?"

We are said to live in a financial age, and the average American wants to know "how much money is in it?" There is as much profit in keeping bantams as in keeping any other variety of fancy poultry. If details were sought we believe we could show more profit was made by some bantam breeders than by many breeders of the larger varieties of fowls.

It is also necessary to keep the young chicks out of the wet grass in the morning for they are so small that it takes only a short time for them to become drenched in the cold morning dew. This can best be avoided by keeping the chicks in a shed or light airy room of the poultry house, or barn, until they are about three weeks old. In other respects, care for the bantam chicks just as you would any other, remembering that the food must necessarily be fine and nutritious.

BANTAMS DELIGHT EVERYONE.

Here are little fowls of surpassing beauty that appeal to everyone who admires fine feathers, graceful shape and companionable pets. No city lot is too small for a few bantams; no farm too large; no man is too old to enjoy them; no child is too young.

No doubt the next five years will see a marked advance in the quality and numbers of the little fellows at our shows, as well as in our breeding pens. In fact I expect the advance to be so marked that the people will no longer speak of the "banty" in a derisive way, but will speak of the bantam with due respect and honor.

One great reason why I would urge upon parents the encouragement of this "hobby"—the rearing of bantams among their boys and girls is that it gives them home occupation and is pleasant diversion from study and scholastic duties.

Good Pigeon Sense Needed

By George H. Hughes, Bridgeton, N. J.

I remember some time ago, when most everybody was crazy to get into the pigeon business, of reading one of the get-rich-quick concerns' advertisements, where it stated that all that was necessary to feed pigeons was wheat and whole corn besides the gravel and oyster shells that are the only things fed. That there was no regular time to feed, nothing to do only feed and water some time during the day, and kill the squabs once each week.

To any who know anything about pigeons such a statement may seem ridiculous, yet there were lots of just such statements published not so long ago, and a great many people believed enough of it to drop many thousands of dollars. Numerous plants sprang up throughout the country, anxious to grab their share of the easy money through their nefarious methods. This policy was only short-lived, but while it did survive, honest breeders were left in the back ground, as they could not or would not misrepresent their feathered friends; but most of these mushroom pigeon farms are monuments now, and the business has settled down to a natural basis.

In answer to the above in reference to feeding, watering, etc., I would say, to be successful in raising squabs one must be as regular as a clock. Birds must be fed and watered regularly twice each day, their food must consist of something more than whole corn and wheat. Canada peas, Kaffir corn, Hulled barley, a little hemp seed occasionally, or any good sound grain to make a variety will fill the bill all right.

To be successful in raising squabs one must see that the houses are kept clean, particularly during the warm season, as lice, once in, are hard to get out, and they make lots of trouble. Besides oyster shells and fine grit, see that the birds have salt and charcoal, which are just as necessary as the shell and grit.

To be successful in raising squabs one must know them, either by memory, which of course, is impossible, with a large number of pairs, or by aluminum or colored leg bands. This is the most important thing to consider and will determine largely whether or not the venture will prove a success or failure.

Most breeders claim that when birds get to be seven years old, it is time for them to be sent to the hotel, kitchen or shooting match; but only a short time ago I met a prominent breeder who claimed all his birds were more than eight years of age, and I have it not only from him but others who know that he has been marketing more squabs than any of the breeders around this section, so I hand it over, for what it is worth. Honestly, I'm from Missouri, and must be more fully convinced than I am at present. I think most any variety of pigeon does its best work from three to seven years, yet there may be exceptions to this; but I advise buying the younger birds.

There are a great many things to learn in order to be successful in raising squabs. Selecting a site, the kind of a house to build, the kind of breeders to start with, feeding and watering, what to feed, when to feed, care of the houses, preparing the squabs for market, and many other points might be mentioned as being important to thoroughly understand before one should expect to make any headway raising squabs at a profit.

What is your favorite bird? Some like the Homer, some breed Runts and their crosses. I am an enthusiastic supporter of the Carneau, and with the permission of the editor of the Fancier will say something about them in the next issue.

THE POULTRY FUTURITY IDEA A SUCCESS.

The grand championship Poultry Futurities inaugurated by the Great Allentown Fair Poultry Show, nominations for which closed April 1, have proved by the number of entries received that the idea is approved by the poultry people and that eventually they can be made a great success.

W. Theo. Wittman, in charge, writes us: "that no one regrets more than he does that the first year of these Futurities should have to follow the coldest winter known in 40 years in Pennsylvania and nearby states. And, that added to this the spring should have been very cold and backward and that a great many breeders were in no position to nominate birds at the time of closing of entries.

Perhaps for every letter received with an entry as many as four to five were received saying the writers were in no position to enter, "that they had no chicks yet" or "that eggs were not hatching."

This shows that but for weather conditions these Futurity stakes would have been of large amounts. As it is, they stand as follows:

White Orpington Cockerels	$60.00
White Orpington Pullets	60.00
White Leghorn Pullets	54.00
White Leghorn Cockerels	56.00
White Plymouth Rocks (totals)	32.00
White Wyandottes (totals)	66.00
Rhode Island Reds (totals)	54.00
Game Bantams (totals)	24.00

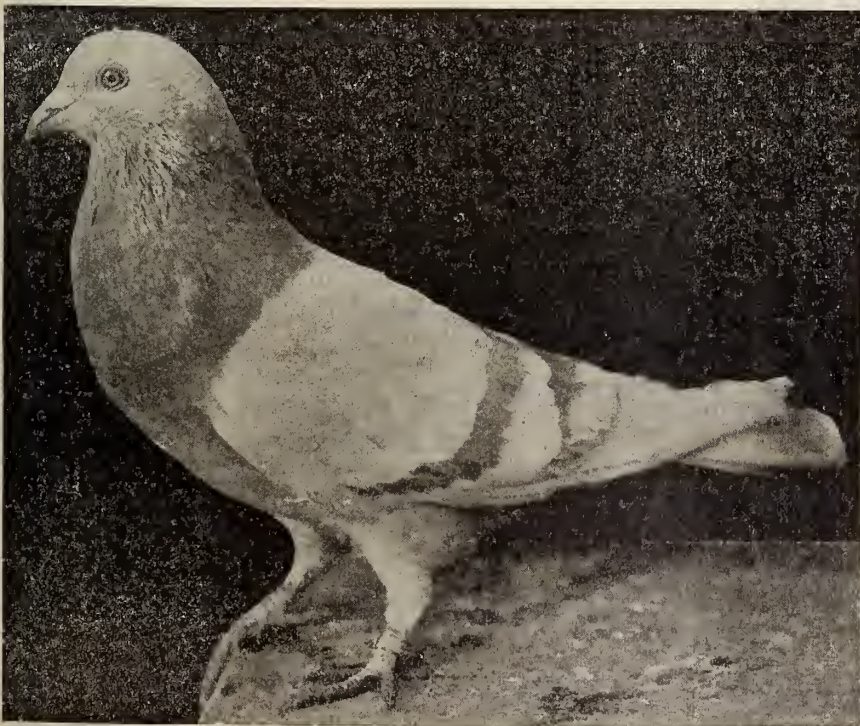

One of the reasons for each of a maximum entry this first year was the seeming fact that to a great many breeders the word "Futurity" was one that they could not entirely comprehend the meaning of, being new to the poultry world. Another reason seemed to be that the date of closing seemed to be too early as quite a number of entries were received too late and had to be returned and that entries are still arriving.

It will be noticed that the stakes in the last four varieties have been combined as, according to the published rules, only in case the nomination fees amounted to over $50.00 in cockerels and in pullets each, would separate stakes be made.

Sixty-six dollars, fifty-four dollars and even twenty-four dollars are tidy sums to win with some one good bird. That it will be genuine and clean sport is assured by the fact that each and everyone of the birds shown in these Futurities will have to be absolutely reared by the party showing it.

These Futurities will be continued year to year at Allentown. It is expected they will open up a new and most valuable era in the exhibiting of pure-bred poultry. The scope of them will be enlarged yearly and it is hoped to have soon Futurities in all leading varieties of poultry, certainly in all the various breeds.

As intimated in all previous announcements this Poultry Futurity idea is not to be used or copied by other poultry shows. "The Great Allentown Fair Poultry Show having inaugurated the idea and being the first to use it shall continue to have the one and only American Poultry Futurity."

A MEDICAL POULTRY BOOK FREE TO YOU.

Every person interested in poultry, as a breeder or in a commercial way, will find "Zenoleum Chickie Chat" a useful and reliable adviser. It gives full directions for the treatment of all diseases that affect poultry, and the prevention of contagious and infectious diseases in the poultry yard. It tells the most effective treatments to rid the flock of parasites, such as lice, mites and various germs, that cause roup, pip, tape-worm, cauker, typhoid, blackhead, etc., that if allowed to spread in the flock will surely cut off all chances of profit and disgust the owner with the business.

"Chicken Chat" is the production of the most competent authorities on diseases of fowl, and is printed and sent out free by the manufacturers of Zenoleum Disinfectant, Germicide and Lice Killer, which has the endorsements of FORTY-FIVE out of forty-eight State Agricultural Colleges and Experiment Stations.

"Chicken Chat" teaches the doctrines of cleanliness, disinfection and the prevention of disease, as the surest and safest method of making the industry profitable.

To the commercial poultry raiser, who must depend upon the incubator to hatch out his chicks, the report of the Ontario government poultry expert, obtained in a series of tests at the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, will be found of especial value. This test shows that the free use of Zenoleum in the incubator not only causes a large percentage of live chicks when hatched from the eggs in the incubator, but a greater percentage were alive at the end of four weeks than without the use of Zenoleum, or by hens under ordinary conditions. In other words, the chicks hatched out in the incubator treated with Zenoleum, had greater vitality, and consequently were better able to stand the various ills, that cause the death of one-half the hatch of incubators operated in the industry, and the Canadian Government issued a bulletin on the subject, which will make the business more profitable and certain than ever before.

"Chicken Chat" is free to every reader of this paper. A cent spent for a postal card will return you a profit of many dollars. Address, Zenner Disinfectant Company, 242 Lafayette Avenue, Detroit, Mich, before you forget it.

Inns and Outs---Way Down in Maine

By C. A. Martin, Derry, N. H.

Have been in and out of the hen business many times since I first saw the light of day, on an old, worn-out farm "way down in Maine."

Eggs selling for 50 or 60 cents per dozen each winter lured me, like many others, into keeping hens. I tried first one breed and then another and learned what thousands of others have learned, that eggs might as well be a cent as a dollar a dozen, as long as I had none to sell. Each new variety I tried laid bounteously in the spring, but each winter it was the same story, buy feed for the hens and buy eggs for the family. I gave them up in disgust and never kept a hen for six years.

Each winter my wife would strike up a tune something like this: "Now for the land's sake, Cy Martin, here I am paying 50 cents a dozen for eggs and not a hen on the place." "Yes, my dear," I used to say, "You would have it to pay just the same if we had hens, don't you see we are saving the cost of feeding the hens?"

But it was no use, the "old lady" would have it her way, she kept on hammering until I yielded, with this proviso. She would keep strict account of the feed and the number of eggs laid, so I could tell how much my eggs were costing me.

I built a henhouse on top of the frozen ground in December of 1910 and threw down some straw to keep the inmates off the ground. I bought 9 Columbian Wyandottes, 7 months old, and 6 bred-to-lay Light Brahmias, 8 months old, and put them all in one pen with a cockerel. I had read of the great laying abilities of the Ancona, to me a new breed, and bought 11 pullets, 5 months old, and a cockerel. I placed these in another pen and awaited results.

In a short time there came a thaw which took the frost out of the ground and steamed up the henhouse badly; then it became cold and the steam turned into frost, and that henhouse was a sight to behold. The great Brahmias and Wyandottes could not stand it and I had to take part of them to better quarters, but to my astonishment, in their wretched quarters the Anconas began to lay Jan. 12, '11. They kept digging away in the straw while the large birds were recuperating. On February 6th my wife began to keep tabs for four weeks, with results as follows:

Eleven Anconas and cockerel consumed 48 pounds hard grain mixture, 24 pounds of drymash and 6 pounds of green bone, total cost $1.28. They laid 157 eggs.

The 15 Brahmias and Wyandottes consumed 72 pounds of hard grain mixture, 72 pounds of drymash and 9 pounds of green bone, total cost $2.43 and laid 23 eggs. The Anconas produced their eggs at a cost of .098 cents per dozen and the Brahmias and Wyandottes produced their eggs at a cost of $1.268 per dozen. When the race was on three weeks, one Ancona died, leaving 10 Anconas to race with 15 Brahmias and Wyandottes for another four weeks, with this result:

Ten Anconas laid 180 eggs and consumed feed worth $1.24, cost of production .08¼ cents per dozen. Fifteen Brahmias and Wyandottes laid 202 eggs and consumed feed worth $2.55, cost of production, 15 cents per dozen. Over the eight weeks course the Anconas produced 337 eggs at a cost of .09 cents per dozen. The Brahmias and Wyandottes laid 225 eggs at a cost of .26½ per dozen. The market price of eggs was so much higher in February than in March that the average price of Ancona eggs was .27½ per dozen. The Brahmias and Wyandottes averaged .22½ per dozen. The Anconas produced their eggs at a profit of over 200%, while the Brahmias and Wyandottes produced their eggs at a loss of over 15%.

The test was made in an open front house, where the water-buckets froze solid nearly every night, and for no other purpose than to find the cost of producing a dozen of eggs, but the result is very significant.

The man who keeps a few hens to look at and brag about, while he follows some other occupation to buy the feed for the hens will doubtless laugh at the above lines, but the man who depends on the hens to buy food for the family will do well to read them again.

It disproves the foolish notion that a rose combed fowl will stand cold weather better than the one with a single comb; it refutes the idea that "the more a hen lays, the more she will eat" and "a hen that don't lay don't eat much."

It shows that there is no need of eggs being 50 or 60 cents per dozen every winter. It shows that even at that price the farmers cannot afford to raise them as long as their farms are stocked with the popular breed of the show room. It shows also that they can be produced and sold at a handsome profit for one-half that price when their farms are stocked with the Ancona fowls.

We unhesitatingly recommend Oculum to all of the Fancier's readers as well as our personal friend, and feel certain they will hold it in as high esteem as we after they have given it a fair and impartial trial.

We would advise anyone who raises chickens and who would appreciate a remedy of real merit to write The Hancock Inoculum Co., Inc., Dept. T, Salem, Va. for their free circular and price list at once. You will always be glad you did.

OPINIONS

OF GREAT PRACTICAL VALUE.

THE PERFECTED POULTRY OF AMERICA contains a detailed description of all standard breeds and varieties of poultry, with illustrations showing correct type, together with feathers from the different sections, so arranged as to make it easily understood and of great practical value. It should find a ready sale among breeders of standard-bred poultry.—Successful Poultry Journal, Chicago, Ill.

We congratulate you on the high quality of the book, THE PERFECTED POULTRY OF AMERICA, both as to subject-matter and illustrations. This book can not help but prove of value to those who are interested in standard-bred poultry.—Poultry Keeper Publishing Co.

A CREDIT TO THE POULTRY INDUSTRY.

I consider THE PERFECTED POULTRY OF AMERICA the best of its kind that has been put on the market. The printing and binding are worthy of extra notice. In fact, such books are a credit to the poultry industry, and this volume is sure to interest all kinds of poultrymen, the old as well as the beginner.—The Michigan Poultry Breeder, Battle Creek, Mich.

FINDS IT INTERESTING.

THE PERFECTED POULTRY OF AMERICA is an attractive volume. It is beautifully printed. Wherever I turn its pages I find it interesting, and the many illustrations show that your artist, Mr. Graham, has spent much enjoyable study in his part of the book. I believe that this book will enjoy a popular sale among those who collect poultry literature.—F. L. Sewall, Buchanan, Mich.

THE BEST ISSUED TO DATE.

THE PERFECTED POULTRY OF AMERICA is a book which will be of great value to poultry fanciers being a concise illustrated treatise of the recognized breeds of poultry, turkeys and water-fowl. It is not exactly a standard, but is a detailed description with illustrations in detail which enables the novice to form a correct idea of the form and feather of any breed. The illustrations are superb. Personally we think the book is the best that has been issued to date.—California Cultivator.

ANY ONE CAN TELL REQUIREMENTS.

THE PERFECTED POULTRY OF AMERICA is the title of the latest book from the press of The Feather Publishing Co., Inc., Washington, D. C. As its name suggests, it treats exclusively of the breeds and varieties of poultry recognized by the American Standard of Perfection. It describes and illustrates all standard breeds and varieties of poultry, ducks, geese and turkeys. It gives the history of each variety, including its origin and development, enumerates its special characteristics and describes its shape and color. The subject-matter is by T. F. McGrew and Geo. E. Howard, and the illustrations are by Louis P. Graham. Each of the part-colored varieties is represented by a drawing of the male and female which are surrounded by sample feathers from different parts of the plumage so arranged that any one can tell from the illustration what the requirements of under-color and surface-color are for each section of the bird. The book contains over 250 pages, and is finely printed on excellent stock.—Poultry Herald, St. Paul, Minn.

Poultry Failures

By John J. Hornett, Swissvale, Pa.

"What, Jim, you say you are going into the Poultry business? Take my advice, boy, and don't do it. The people who tell you there is anything in it are badly mistaken. I'm from Missouri, and have to be shown; I've been there before. I lost a neat little fortune in that game and so have many others." Yes, many others have, also, but trace them back and you will find a reason for failures. More, yes three times as many, poultry beginners are failures than successful ones, and it is their own fault. Causes that contribute mostly to poultry failures are: Over imagination or Selfishness; Laziness or Carelessness; and Lack of Interest or Devotion.

OVER-IMAGINATION OR SELFISHNESS.

People, who start in poultry business, go into it with one thought, hens were made to lay and pay, that is, to make money. Naturally if a person invests a little money in a proposition he expects a gain, but, with the poultry business the beginner or investor usually over-estimates the hen's ability. Why some beginners, or novices, actually think that a hen should lay three hundred eggs per year. But, my goodness, the poor hen is only human, she does her best, and is proud that she is able to reimburse her owner by laying eggs. If the hen loses a few days in a week, probably from the fact that her owner became negligent, she is one of the culls, and alas, a hen which would have laid many an egg is the victim of the ax. Take any beginner, grocery, meat, etc., almost in every business, he allows for at least a year in which to make the proposition a paying one, but not so with the majority of poultry beginners. They expect from the moment they purchase the hen to reap in the dollars. They can see themselves proprietors of one of the greatest egg farms in the world, sitting in a morris chair, but the man who wishes to become this must get out and hustle. Imagining doesn't count. The hen is the machine and she needs the proper maintenance. If the machinery is not taken proper care of it soon shows it, so does the hen, but more so. Beginners get selfish and the hen, that does not lay is cursed or talked about unmercifully. The owner often takes spite out on a hen that does not lay and I know of an instance where a beginner fed only the layers, but he got fooled, for where one hen of his flock would lay one day, the next day or so she would miss, and the fact of the matter is he was, in the end, feeding alternately, as they layed, and soon none of them were laying, as they were not being properly fed.

He then killed them all off, and after the manner in which he treated the poor creatures, had the nerve to stand up and quote, "There is nothing but loss in the poultry business." Never let imagination and selfishness overrule, for it is bound to overthrow you.

LAZINESS OR CARELESSNESS.

Woe to the Poultryman and his resources who is lazy and careless. He is the man who has the only license to work once a moth and that on pay day. Laziness is similar to poultry business, exactly as in other business; it and business cannot thrive. One must rule. One summer is sufficient to a lazy man in the poultry business. If it is not I know he has an income. Can anyone expect a hen to lay with feed once a day, water once a day, and if the man in charge thinks of it, droppings removed every month, and a lousy coop. No, eggs are scarce, for a lousy hen does not, nor should not, be expected to lay. Yes, one summer is sufficient, and if it is not the winter will apply the finishing touches. Can a hen lay with a draughty, leaky, coop, frozen drinking vessels, feed once a day, and that grain, no such a thing as mash, green food, or meat? No, and she won't lay, for the hen that lays in winter time is a jewel and the jewel needs extra care and attention. The careless person is naturally lazy so I have included them together, not making any difference, for it is a poor thing for a careless person to think, when he awakens from sleep at 3:00 A. M., that he forgot to shut up the chickens on the previous night. The only time the careless person, in poultry, is really on the job is at egg gathering time. Shake laziness and carelessness and success is yours.

LACK OF INTEREST OR DEVOTION.

Both can be taken together for to be devoted one must be interested. Study your flock, always on the lookout for some way to improve or better their welfare. Forget about socials, dances parties, etc., and put your every spare moment into your chickens. Don't be too late, see their needs beforehand, as you will if you are devoted and interested. Does the grocer lock up his store during the noon hour? No. Well then what business has the poultry keeper to look at his fowls once a day? Is it fair? Be with your chickens all the time, or as much as you can. Do not take a dislike to your flock. Praise them up when they are doing right and think they are the best in the world. Do not confide all your ideas to your neighbor. Do not let him talk you into getting his strain and getting rid of your own flock, after putting money into them, for your chickens are probably as good, if not better, than his. Anything you do, do right. Never let it unfinished for you may never have the chance or opportunity of completing it. Let your interest and care or devotion soar high in the poultry business and result is certain.

CONCLUSION.

Beginners overcome these causes, which I think pretty near cover the failure in poultry, although there may be many more, and supplant them with Work, Interest, Proper Care, and Looking after their Welfare, and you will be among the Successful. It is also good for poultry keepers, not alone beginners, to keep a book record of their flock, have it in black and white, where you can see it. Advertise, show your poultry, and get the stick-to-it system and all is yours.

WHAT FOLLY IT IS TO HATCH CHICKS ONLY TO LET THEM DIE OF DIARRHEA.

The ambition of too many chicken raisers seems to be satisfied by making big hatches. When it comes to brooding the little fellows their interest flattens out, leaving a tremendously unprofitable percentage to die of sheer inattention. Take white diarrhea, for instance; no flock is free from the possibility of this deadly affection of baby chicks, and yet a little attention with Whiting's White Diarrhea Remedy will not only cure, but prevent an epidemic of the disease. You can't ask any better evidence of its effectiveness than the following letter from the City Treasurer of Wilkingsburg, Pa.:—"I have been trying your White Diarrhea Remedy and am pleased all over with it. I have had 42 years experience in the poultry business, and have had many kinds of White Diarrhea medicines, but never had any medicine to do the work so soon and clean things up like your White Diarrhea Remedy. Anyone who will give it a fair trial, according to directions, will be well paid for his trouble." W. H. Kiser, City Treasurer, Wilkingsburg, Pa.

READING NOTICE.

John C. Peiffer, Danville, Penna., the noted breeder of Crystal White Orpingtons, the stay-white kind, reports the busiest season he ever had in the egg trade. Nobody is deserving of this more than Mr. Peiffer who has parted with much good money the past years to build his strain of birds.

He has been remarkably successful in the show room, making a most remarkable win at Scranton in competition with many of the leading breeders. He has also made excellent wins at other big shows and the people are just beginning to realize that Peiffer has quality in White Orpingtons.

We have personally seen Mr. Peiffer's birds. We know what we are talking about and we cannot help but recommend him to our readers.

John's catalogue is one of the finest we have seen this year, full of fine illustrations, showing the actual photographs of the birds. It describes his matings. It tells you about his dealings and it doesn't cost you a cent to get it. Send for it today.

News From the Sunny South

Conducted by J. H. Reynolds, Box 300, Atlanta, Ga.

In undertaking the conduct of a Southern Department for Poultry Fancier I shall endeavor to keep the readers of the Fancier posted as to conditions in the South, and to record the happenings in the South, giving you the "News while it is News," and not sixty to ninety days late. To do this will necessitate some assistance on the part of breeders and fanciers in this section of the country, for the territory to be covered is entirely too large for one man to be familiar with the happenings throughout Dixie. Send in your reports of shows, poultry associations, and anything that may be of interest to the poultry breeders, and we will see that it is published.

In conducting this department, it will be our aim to live up to the slogan of Poultry Fancier, i. e., EQUAL RIGHTS AND JUSTICE TO ALL. Some policy, EH?

The election of officers of the A. P. A., and the selection of meeting place and time of meeting resulted in the selection of Nashville, Tenn., the week of August 5th to 10th. Nashville won out by more than three hundred votes over the nearest competitor. This is not the official report, but the official count will bear us out within a few votes. Practically all the old officers were reelected, in fact all of them offered for re-election were nominated. Every breeder in the South should belong to the A. P. A., and do all they can toward giving them the time of their lives when they meet in Nashville next August. If you are not now a member, send to Sec'y. Campbell, Mansfield, Ohio, for application blanks, and do your part toward promoting the poultry industry.

Whether you live in the South, or in the North, or the East or the West, arrange now to make the Southern show circuit this coming season. A conservative estimate of the money the South spent for stock and eggs the past year places the amount as five hundred thousand dollars. Did you get your share? If you didn't, try sending a string of GOOD birds to some of the big Southern shows, and your business next year will surprise you. Here's a good circuit to make: Nashville, Tenn., in September, Memphis or Knoxville, Tenn., in October, Atlanta or Augusta, Ga., in November and wind up with New Orleans in December. All of these are good shows, ably managed, and a win at any of them is worth while. Don't make the mistake of sending poor birds down here and expecting to win, for you will surely be disappointed. The competition is warm, but that's the sort the real fancier is looking for.

The weather this year has been the worst in ten years, and very few breeders have been lucky enough to get off many early chicks. With our climate we generally have chicks off the latter part of January and continue hatching through May, but this year will prove the exception with most of the breeders. This is all the more reason why you should take extra good care of the chicks hatched later, for the birds nearest Standard weight at Show time have the advantage, all other points being equal.

The Indian Runner Duck seems to be more popular in this part of the country than in any other, and it deserves it. The only objection we can find to them is the difficulty in disposing of the eggs for culinary purposes. There seems to be no reason to the objection to them, but it still exists. The producers of these eggs should endeavor to educate the consumer regarding them, for the breed is of too much merit to have a stumbling block of this sort in the way. If the breeders of the Fawn and White, and of the Penciled (English) Runners could get together and thrash out their differences both of them would be more prosperous. Our experience has been that the Penciled birds lay all white eggs, while the Fawn and Whites lay a tinted egg once in a while, regardless of the claims made for them by some of the breeders. I have been unable to find a breeder of Fawn and White ducks who would give an unconditional guarantee that all ducks hatched from his eggs would lay nothing but white eggs. Many of the breeders of the Penciled and the pure white will give a guarantee of this sort, and the Fawn and White breeders should get busy and breed birds that they can guarantee.

The growth of the poultry business in this section is clearly shown by the installation of mammoth incubators. Within a radius of seventy-five miles of Atlanta are machines with more than one hundred thousand capacity every three weeks. Six years ago there was only one poultry plant of any size in the entire state, while now there are at least twenty-five representing investments of from ten to twenty thousand dollars, nearly all of them being on a paying basis. Georgia is just beginning to realize the importance of the poultry industry, and it will be only a short time until Georgia will produce enough poultry and eggs for home consumption, which she fails to do at present by about four million dollars worth yearly.

THE AMERICAN BUTTERCUP CLUB.

ORGANIZED MARCH 28, 1912.

Sicilian Buttercups are coming to the front. Over 100 prominent Fanciers have now become intensely interested in this new utility fowl, which seems to be making good the claim of producing more eggs at a less cost than any other known variety.

In size and style of carriage Buttercups are about with Leghorns, but not of so wild and nervous a disposition. They are absolutely non-sitters and abundant producers of handsome large white eggs.

The comb is the most distinguishing feature, consisting of a circular crown of bright red spikes, resembling the petals of a flower.

On March 28, at Binghamton, N. Y., was organized the American Buttercup Club, where the following officers were elected: President, H. W. Dewy, Sidney Center, N. Y., Vice-President, Mrs. Jas. S. Dumaresq, Easton, Md., Secretary-Treasurer, I. F. Tillinghast, Factoryville, Pa.

COMMITTEE ON STANDARD:

ing, Dedham, Mass., A. B. Browe, Corbettsville, N. Y.

It is expected that a great display of Buttercups will be made at the Poultry Show in connection with the New York State Fair, at Syracuse, in September, and that a special meeting of this Club will be held at that time and place.

That is just what the Gale Poultry Place is doing with an excellent lot of birds, Brown Leghorns, which they are making a grand sacrifice sale, which will be seen by their display add. in this issue.

As our readers well know, the Gale Poultry Place is looked upon as the place where many of the best R. C. Brown Leghorns in America are bred and their winnings at the great shows of Madison Square, Allentown, and many others will prove this, and the writer has handled the Gale business for a number of years, and never in all that time, has one complaint been received notwithstanding the fact that they have shipped stock and eggs into almost every state and territory in the Union and foreign countries, and we well know their sacrifice sale at prices that will move them quick is an opportunity and I dare say, that this opportunity will only knock once at your door.

Take advantage of it and write the Gale Poultry Place, describing the kind of bird that you want to get. They will send you a photograph that they think meets with the requirements, and description of the bird. They will treat you right. Just mention the fact that you saw their advertisement in the Fancier.

A WHITE ORPINGTON SALE.

Aug. D. Arnold, of Dillsburg, Pa., who has spent a large sum of money for his White Orpingtons, and has been doing special work in his flock along lines of breeding stay-white males, informs us he is compelled to sell at once at sacrifice prices 50 males and 400 females, and will sell them in lots to suit purchasers. Most of the males he has on hand now are sons of "Snow Drift" the male that Mr. A. claims staid white until he moulted. Eggs will be sold from his birds at remarkably low prices till birds are sold. All who buy these birds can yet raise a fine flock of youngsters this season. See Mr. A.'s add. in this issue.

White China Geese

By J. D. Rake, Monroe, N. Y.

The White China Geese are beyond a doubt one of the handsomest of any variety of our domestic waterfowl. The Chinas are a trifle smaller than the Embden, but what they lack in size they more than make up in laying.

They are the greatest layers of all varieties of Geese. The average egg yield per Goose is from 30 to 60, but I have had many of them lay as high as 100.

The eggs are very fertile and hatch in 28 days. If set under hens they should be sprinkled lightly with luke-warm water once each day after the 20th day. I do not advise setting the geese as in my own experience they broke about half the eggs you put under them, and if they are not washed very soon after an egg has been broken the rest of the hatch will be spoiled. Nothing is better to incubate the eggs than a good large hen, such as a Plymouth Rock or others of similar size. Geese are very easy keepers; in the summer about all they will eat is grass, and in winter they are not heavy feeders. If allowed to range in winter they will pick up a lot of grass around a spring or brook.

I have bred them for years and am writing this article for the benefit of beginners.

In breeding for exhibition purposes great care should be used in selecting. Very few breeders understand how to mate to secure the handsome birds that Mrs. Masten and myself have exhibited in the largest shows of the East for a number of years. Never breed from a bird that has any serious defects. I never use a bird that has a short thick neck. The ideal China should have a long, slender neck like the swan, with a large knob at base of bill, the longer the knob the better. Under no conditions use a bird that has a dew-lap under the throat.

The body should be plump and full, carried slightly upright, but not nearly as upright as the Indian Runner Ducks. The main fault with most breeders is to breed too upright. A very upright bird can never win in any of our largest shows.

In mating, one gander can be used with 6 females. I have mated them that way for years and always get good results. I do not advise crossing strains to get new blood. I am a strong advocate of the line-breeding system. Some people may ridicule the above method of breeding, but my birds have won highest honors in the world's largest shows, which alone should be proof that I know what I am writing. I never have had a weak or sickly bird from line-breeding.

The young Goslings grow very rapidly from shell to maturity. I never let mine out in a hard rain before they are feathered, as a very hard shower will often soak the soft down, and they will topple over and drown. After they are one week old they are very strong. It is very rarely you will ever lose one.

For their feed I prepare a mash made of ground oats, corn and meal, with a small amount of beef scrap added. Never wet this mash until it is very soft and sloppy. Have it so it just sticks together. Feed about what they will eat up clean. Never let a lot lying in the coop or it will sour, and sour feed if fed very often will kill anything.

They very much prefer fresh, green grass to feed of any kind. Anyone can make a success of breeding geese if they are only willing to try. Give them a trial and you will never discard them.

HALL MAMMOTH INCUBATOR

PATENTS DECLARED VALID.

The United States Circuit Court for the district of Massachusetts has rendered its decision in the patent infringement case of the Hall Mammoth Incubator Co. vs. Ralph G. Davis. In this decision the validity of Hall patents is established by the court.

The following press notice appeared in the Utica (N. Y.) Daily Press, March 7, 1912:

Decision has been rendered in the United States Circuit Court for the district of Massachusetts in favor of the Hall Mammoth Incubator Company, recently of this city, now of Little Falls, against Ralph G. Davis in an action for the infringing of the Hall Company's patent on incubators. The case was tried in December last in Boston by Cookinham & Cookinham for the Hall Company. The court decided that the Hall patent is valid and that the defendant infringes. This decision is important to all those interested in the poultry business, as the Hall patent is the original broad patent on large incubators. The Hall Company's mammoth incubators have been so successful that others have attempted to build large incubators copying from the Hall machine. This decision establishes the Hall patent and the right of the Hall company to the exclusive use of it, and its effect will be effectually to stop others from making or using incubators of this kind.

The Hall is the original patent on Mammoth incubators, and the wide success of the Hall machine has tempted others to build similar incubators, thereby infringing on the Hall patent. This recent decision gives the Hall Mammoth Incubator Company the exclusive

Big Whites of Quality

If you are in the market for English stock and at prices within reach of all, I can please you. I have worked for five years to get these yards stocked, buying new blood from the best yards of England from time to time for the yards that supply all the big breeders here year by year. I do not sell my name or my strain. I am in the market to please the man I sell to. Write me, and I will send you names of judges, business men and breeders who stand ready to answer you. They are the men who bought of me. I have only one grade of birds, and one price on eggs, five dollars per setting. I guarantee stock raised from eggs I send out to grade up in the fall as good as the high-priced eggs advertised. Write me. Can take care of large orders.

right to build and sell these machines and stop others from building, selling or using them.

Just what influence the United States Circuit Court decision will have upon the Mammoth incubator business is a matter of conjecture. One thing is certain, however, that it recalls to mind that the Patent Law makes the user of an infringing device equally liable with the infringing manufacturer. This law makes the court decision not only of interest to our readers but also makes it important that buyers of Mammoth Incubators know what they are buying. That the Hall people have now gained an enviable position in the incubator manufacturing business will be conceded by all. Combining the legal protection they have long deserved with the unsurpassed efficiency of their machine, the manufacturers are destined to mount still higher as a great influence for improving the poultry industry.

Besides the legal phase of this decision, there is another one of sentiment. Our readers will remember that Mr. Hall, the inventor of the Hall Mammoth machine, began his work 36 years ago. For twenty years he labored to improve and perfect his machine. Little reward did he receive for those efforts, but he knew his ideas worked into form meant a great deal to the industry to which he was devoted. There are a few men, fortunately, who realize their responsibility to the world. Mr. Hall was one of these. He had something to give the world and he struggled to leave it in a tangible form. It affected a great industry upon which the health, happiness and strength of our nation rests very much more than is realized.

Then aside from the legal aspect which determines wrong-doing by infringing on patents that are another's shall be punished, the desire of men is to give reward to the man who spends the best of his life developing something that benefits the general public or an important industry such as the poultry industry.

When one finds in the inventor and improver's machine all that can be found in any, we believe our readers will agree that as a matter of justice we should lend our assistance to him. The law is only to guarantee justice. Where justice is practised there is no need for the guarantee.

WHY DO SOME BREEDERS FAIL?

No newly-hatched chick has a good chance of living and becoming strong if, when it is taken from the incubator, it is put into a cold brooder.

It is easier to hatch chicks than to raise them, and in most cases poultry keepers would do much better, raise more chicks, and make more money, if they would only stop and think that over.

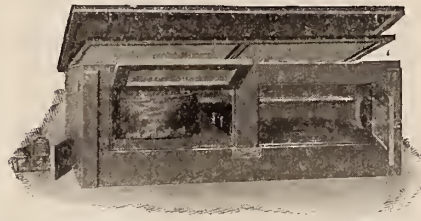

Beginners have been known to take newly-hatched chicks from the incubator or from hens, and put them in a brooder without heat, and expect to raise them. Of course the chicks get chilled, contract diarrhea, and in many cases die; and the few that do not die never amount to much.

If the beginner will stop and think that in an incubator the chicks have a temperature of 103 degrees, and that when they are put in a cold box or cold brooder, there will likely be a difference—a drop—of 30 to 60 degrees, it will at once be clear why so many chicks die. If a baby living in a temperature of 70 degrees should be subjected to a change of weather—say a drop of 40 degrees, down to about freezing, without a change of clothing, what would happen? Newly-hatched chicks are just as subject to cold—perhaps more so, and their clothing cannot be changed daily to suit the weather. It is up to the poultry keeper to govern the temperature wherein they are placed.

From the above it will be clear to the poultry raiser that it is just as important to get a brooder, properly heated, as it is to get a good incubator; and the chicks he has hatched stand little chance of thriving if he does not realize that fact.

Mr. Robert Essex has devoted as much time and attention to brooders as to incubators. That is why he makes the Essex-Model Outdoor Brooders with from three to five thicknesses in the roofs, and gives them perfect heating and ventilating systems, so as to withstand the changes in temperature; and it is just as important to heat an Indoor Brooder. Those who use what is called a Fireless Brooder are taking great chances; and in nine cases out of ten they lose out. The only use that a fireless brooder can satisfactorily be put to is to supplement a properly heated brooder. Chicks must first of all go into a heated brooder, either indoor or outdoor; and then as they become used to the weather and hardened, they may be put into a fireless brooder to help out, although we do not advise it. It is better to use well-made, well-ventilated, well-heated brooders until the chicks are old enough to go into colony houses; and those who use fireless brooders even after starting the chicks in a well-heated brooder must use great care or they will lose a large proportion of them. An extra brooder or two is frequently a money-saver.

Outdoor Brooders may be used indoors, although Indoor Brooders made specially for the purpose possess a more appropriate ventilating system. Some brooders can be used both indoors and outdoors, and for that purpose they have a separate ventilating roof, such as the Essex-Model Combination Indoor and Outdoor Brooder.

A Combination Indoor and Outdoor Brooder showing second inside roof for ventilating purposes when used in a building.

Quite frequently Hovers are used indoors instead of brooders. They are heated of course. They are suitable for use in colony houses; on barn floors, etc., etc. The Essex-Model "Chick-Comfort" Hover is a good example of an Indoor Hover properly heated for the health and comfort of the chicks. These Hovers are comparatively cheap, and it seems absurd for anybody to put newly-hatched chicks into a fireless brooder or home-made box when scientifically constructed Hovers can be obtained at comparatively low prices. What is a few dollars compared with the loss of a considerable number of chicks that cost money to hatch? Having hatched your chicks, don't lose out by poor brooding.

Readers who want to know more about raising chickens successfully should get the 1912 catalogue of the Robert Essex Incubator Company, Buffalo, N. Y., and read the five interesting chapters on Poultry Raising it contains. The book is free, and while of course it is a catalogue of the goods they sell, we need hardly say that as these chapters contain experiences from Mr. Essex' lifetime with poultry it is well worth having it even if you don't want to buy a cent's worth; and it will gladly be sent, postage paid, to any one who mentions Poultry Fancier when writing for it.

LOTS OF TROUBLE.

A friend of mine recently said "I am an old man, I have had lots of troubles—the most of them never came."

The man who raises poultry has lots of profits, much honor and a great deal of pleasure with them, but the most of it never comes. The man who goes into the poultry for fun and because he has got the chicken fever generally gets out within three years, if he hangs on that length of time and then takes a new grip and goes at it with determination. He climbs up the ladder of fame in poultrydom, and hangs out his banner at the top with success written thereon.

But how many hundreds of others are lying about the bottom of the aforesaid ladder, some dead, some crippled, some dazed, some mad, cursing their luck? And you, brother fancier, what individual are you going to try to emulate?

Do you believe that to raise chickens and advertise them is all that you have to do to be a success in the poultry kingdom?

Do you belong to that party, believing that all you would need to do to be a success in the business world, to become a merchant prince, is for you to rent a room and buy some goods and run a store, sit down and wait for money to come rolling in? Well, if you do then you will be a failure in the chicken business as surely as you would be a failure as a merchant, doctor, lawyer, or any other business.

It takes care, work and worry to make a success with poultry. Sometimes with the most successful there come times when it seems that all will be failure, but out of doubt and hard luck, the right man or woman will build the monument of success.

This winter and spring has been a time of much discouragement for those in the poultry business, whether they be breeders of fancy stock or commercial raisers. Feed has been very high, the weather has been very cold in all sections, the backward spring has been against orders for stock and eggs to set. Poultry and eggs in the market have been very low, so that those who have to feed high-priced feed and sell cheap chickens and cheap eggs can see but little profit, if any, if not loss. These things will try them out. It will leave many hundred wrecks upon the strand, but while some may give up, others will take another grip and say there is success only by perseverance and hard work, so here goes for A HARD PULL.

There is no success in anything for a "quitter." Get better stock, raise them better and take better care of them and you will make more money from your poultry with less work and less expense. There is always good money in eggs when the cold days of winter are ours, so try to get winter eggs. You can by care and getting the kind that are winter layers and having the pullets mature by the first of December.

WISSINOMING, PENNA., SHOW.

The second annual exhibition of the Wissinoming Poultry and Pigeon Association will be held November 18th to 23rd. The Association this year are going to secure larger quarters and the indications are that their coming show will far eclipse the former events.

Every member of the Association is working both tooth and nail. There is no friction and all pulling the same way. This means success. The dates of the show are November 18th to 23rd, and the following Judges have been selected: J. D. Koons, Louis Keller and Wm. J. Stokes. The Judge on Pigeons will be announced later.

They are going to offer $2.00 for firsts and $1.00 for seconds. There will also be ribbons offered on first, second, third, fourth and fifth prizes. For information, address Sec. Poultry Show, Wissinoming, Phila., Penna.

TO YOUR INTERESTS.

It is to the interest of every White Wyandotte breeder to send for the catalogue of A. J. Fell, the noted breeder from West Point, Pa., and also to look at his advertisement in this issue.

After May 10th, Mr. Fell advises us that he is going to sell eggs at half price, from his best matings. This is certainly an opportunity for our readers to get eggs from the New York Winning strain, at just half the regular price, and past history tells us that some of the best show birds that are bred are hatched in May and June.

Mr. Fell has a great catalogue, finely illustrated. He also writes us that the eggs are running very fertile, and are producing large, robust chicks.

Write for Fell's catalogue, and mention the fact that you saw this notice in the Poultry Fancier.

America's Popular Home of all the Orpingtons

William J. Cook & Sons, Scotch Plains, N. J.

As a Nation at large we are greatly indebted to Old Mother England for many a priceless treasure. During the childhood days of our splendid history her noblest sons and daughters bade farewell to the comforts, luxuries and tender associations of the Old Home Land to cast their lot in a country where often sorrow and distress awaited them. But "none of these things" moved their brave hearts and fearless spirits and when the storms raged, they sang "and the stars heard, and the sea, and the sounding depths of the deep woods rang with the anthems of the free." And from those early days on down to the present time she has unstintingly enriched our land with "Brains and Grit and Brawn." We would be ungrateful indeed did we not justly recognize these valuable contributions from our mother country, and the Fancier esteems it an unusual pleasure to record its appreciation of the same. But there is one circumstance that we especially desire to mention at this time, which we feel certain will interest our friends to a greater degree than any other, namely: the day on which Wm. J. Cook bade farewell to Old England and started with his great string of Orpingtons for the shores of America.

That was a "Golden Letter Day" in the history of the poultry world, a day that contributed more widely, up to that date, than any other toward making our great Billion Dollar industry possible. For William J. Cook not only bequeathed to the United States the most popular fowl ever introduced into America, but as well his splendid knowledge and unselfish spirit as a practical and fancy poultryman, and wherever the firm name of Wm. J. Cook and Sons is recorded it stands as an equivalent of highest poultry ideals and just and equitable treatment.

The American Home of the originators of all the Orpingtons, Scotch Plains, N. J., is just such a creation as one would expect from the genius of this most popular firm. The plant is situated on a gently sloping hillside, skirted by woodlands in practically every direction, which affords abundance of shade in the summer time, and protects the fowls from the high winds and storms of winter. It is a beautiful and unique setting indeed, as America's original home of "All the Orpingtons." As one approaches the Cook Farm from Scotch Plains the first view to greet the eye is a fine collection of poultry houses, both old and new (many of them having been built by Mr. Wm. J. Cook during the early history of the Farm, but still in an excellent state of preservation, while the newer houses have been erected by Percy A. Cook, a son of Wm. J. Cook, and sole proprietor of the Firm,) nestling there upon the hillside as mute witnesses of well laid and carefully consummated plans of a master's mind. At the conjunction of the private drive and main roadway, which is one of the finest and most extensively traveled in the state of N. J., Mr. Cook has erected the most elaborate and complete private aviaries it has ever been our pleasure to inspect.

In its enclosure are many of the rarest specimens of both land and water fowls, while on the opposite side of the public highway deer can be seen sporting along the banks of the brook, leisurely basking in the sunshine or quietly browsing the soft, green blades of grass that spring up to greet them. All these beautiful creatures are kept by Mr. Cook solely for the entertainment of his friends and visitors. Hundreds of people come to see this plant every Sunday, and on

To visit Mr. Cook's poultry plant, with its fine collection of rare land and water fowls and wild animals, affords one a very profitable and inexpensive course in Natural History. From present indications their business this season will be thousands of dollars in excess of last year. MT. ROYAL FARM,

Chas. P. Gloggers, Glenshaw, Pa.

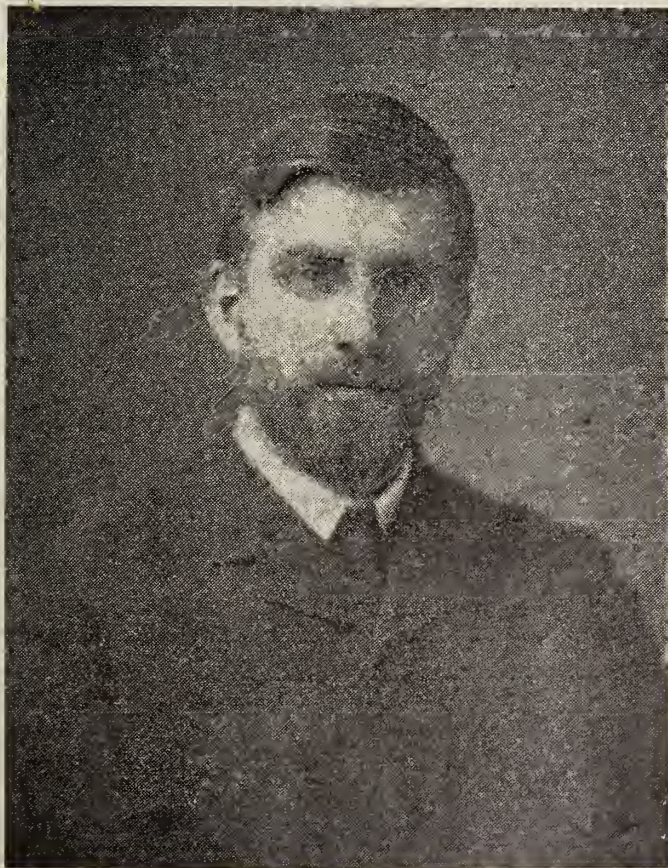

We did not find time to count all the poultry buildings on this plant, but suffice it to say they are in abundance, from small houses from 16 to 20 feet up to 350 feet in length. Two of these large houses have been built during the past season and others are in the course of construction. Practically all of the breeding houses have dirt floors, an advantage Mr. Cook is able to enjoy over many other breeders on account of the natural drainage of the soil on this farm. One may travel the world over and find but few states that afford such splendid natural facilities for chicken raising as the state of New Jersey. The selection of this popular location for a large poultry industry is another of the many evidences of the good judgement and keen foresight of the founder of this increasingly popular firm.

In all of Mr. Cook's permanent yards iron posts, about 2 inches in diameter, are used instead of wood. Holes are dug in the ground just as one would do when using wooden posts; the iron posts are set in the holes, to a line, the cement poured in around them, then when the cement is thoroughly set and hardened the fencing is placed in position and fastened to the posts with detachable staples especially prepared for the posts, thus insuring a fence practically indestructible. The first cost is possibly a little higher than wooden posts, but in the end will prove the cheaper of the two, as no repairs will be required throughout a whole life-time.

Last season Mr. Cook's generous spirit led him to donate twenty-five $50 Silver cups to those of his customers who won certain premiums at various poultry shows in the U. S. This generous treatment was so kindly and universally appreciated that he has decided to give at least fifty of these valuable trophies, under the same conditions, during the coming season. It will certainly prove a popular move and we trust that all our readers who are interested in any variety of Orpingtons will write Mr. Cook for further particulars.

The capacity of the buildings and yards on this plant have been increased from year to year, as occasion demanded, until at this particular date Mr. Cook completed his plans to breed 150 pens of Whites and Buffs and 75 pens of Blacks, and twenty pens each of Spangles and Jubilees. We believe this is, without doubt, the greatest array of high class Orpington breeding yards to be found anywhere in the United States. And yet with this wonderful array of breeders Mr. Cook is not able to meet the demands of his great army of customers, but is compelled from time to time to import hundreds of birds from England, from the Old Home-stead on which this noted breed of fowls was originated and over which his brother presides. Mr. Cook's birds are of that massive type, great, deep bodies, and low carriage, that have made his birds so popular in all sections of our country. His Blacks are great in color, fine in head points and practically ideal in shape. His Buffs have that soft, even golden color so much admired in the show room, combined with all the other qualities necessary to meet the popular favor. His Whites are great in size, good eyes, excellent combs, and among the whitest birds we have seen this year. We predict that in a very few years Mr. Cook will be able to produce real stay-white White Orpington males. It is an

In the production of this excellent invention Mr. Davis has proven himself a real benefactor to the poultry fraternity at large and the specialty breeder in particular. A real, practical and simple trap-nest is a splendid asset on any poultry plant, and the fact it is reasonable in price. Write to Mr. Davis for descriptive literature concerning this helpful invention. You will certainly congratulate yourself for having followed our advice. Mr. Davis is also one of our most dependable Single Comb White Leghorn breeders. He has stock, hatching eggs and day-old chicks for sale at prices that will certainly move them. His birds are second to none in the country for size, utility and show purposes.

that Mr. Davis has succeeded in its production stands without a doubt.

There are good, bad and indifferent trap-nests on the market, but we believe we are perfectly safe in saying that Howard L. Davis' trap-nest stands without a superior and with but few equals to-day. It is compact, simple, accurate and the other leading and important factor is,

Mr. Davis' White Leghorn ad. always appears on the back cover page of the Fancier, and a very attractive cut of his trap-nest can be found in another section now and write him, as this is one of the real opportunities of a poultryman's lifetime. His address is New Egypt, New Jersey.

GOLDEN WYANDOTTES.

Written by C. J. Simmons, Prest. Golden Wyandotte Club of the World, Stockton, Ill.

Recently I read an article, written by a prominent Columbian Wyandotte breeder, which stated that the reason Columbians had come to the front so rapidly was that Columbians had lots of brainy breeders back of them. Wouldn't that jar you? Suppose that means that Golden have remained in the background because Golden breeders were a lot of block heads. I can't see it that way. I believe the chief reason for their unpopularity is that breeders have failed to combine their efforts.

However, that day is past. The Golden Wyandotte Club of the World has been organized and will push Golden right to the top. The officers are not drones, but live wires who depend on Golden for their bread and butter and are willing and ready to work day and night that this most beautiful of all fowls may enjoy the popularity they deserve.

Why shouldn't Golden be at the top? What's the matter with them? Look them over from top to bottom and you can't find a single thing wrong with them. I have bred them for ten years and I know. They are hardy, have good size, are great layers, good mothers, fine table fowl and have the most beautiful plumage that can be imagined. Besides this they have low, close fitting combs that will not freeze, even in the far North. They give satisfaction from Pole to Pole.

But somebody says, "Can I make any money with Golden?" Money! You can make a whole hat full! Why, many of the leading breeders get $5 to $25 for their birds and $10 per 15 for their eggs. Doesn't that sound like money?

Now don't throw up a good job to go into the chicken business. Hang on to your job and get a few Golden, give them what spare time you have, get a Wyandotte Book and learn all you can about them. Then get some old breeder to help you mate your birds and give you some pointers. At the end of two years you can tell pretty well whether or not you'd make a success of the poultry business. Don't think it's a soft snap; the fellows who are at the top got there by hard work. But, remember, whether

South Plainfield, N. J. the Home of Sunswick Poultry Farm's Orpingtons.

Wherever Orpingtons in Buff, White or Black, are popularly known the name of "Sunswick" Farm spells superlative quality. There is no breeder of Orpingtons in this country, whether of Buffs, Whites or Blacks, whose name stands for a squarer deal or higher quality than the name of Rufus Delafield, proprietor of the "Sunswick Farms." Never has a complaint of any kind been registered at our office against him. His record is untarnished, his birds of the highest quality, and his friends and satisfied customers are legion. The Sunswick birds have been scientifically live bred for many years and some of the most noted Orpington winners of the age, in all three varieties bred by Mr. Delafield, have been produced on the Sunswick farm. His pens contain fifty-one of this past season's first prize winners, together with their champions and their sons and daughters that have won many honors in the greatest shows of this country. No wonder the boys fear Sunswick birds in show competition, and that a battle royal is fought out in every Orpington alley wherever they are shown.

Mr. Delafield has spared neither time nor money in his endeavor to give to the world the best in Orpingtons, and the splendid success he has achieved is very gratifying to all admirers of this very popular breed. The show room record of the Sunswick Orpingtons since 1907 is one of which Mr. Delafield may well be proud. Their victories in such shows as

The Sunswick Orpingtons are reared under ideal conditions. The two large laying houses are 25x100 feet each with central alley way from which one can pass into the pens on either side. Every essential to an up-to-date laying house is in evidence. Excellent ventilation, clean, dry quarters and abundance of sunshine. The soil is of a sandy, porous nature and the climate ideal for poultry raising. The chicks are mostly hatched by hens in one of the best arranged and most conveniently equipped buildings of its kind to be found anywhere. There are eight smaller laying houses divided into four pens each with large runs and ample shade. The chicks are raised in colony houses and given unlimited range. They have access to abundance of shade in the woodlands which border the outskirts of the cleared sections of the Sunswick Farm. This plant is located in one of the real beauty spots of "Old" New Jersey and naturally affords every facility for an ideal poultry farm. The Sunswick Farm is located at South Plainfield, N. J., on the Lehigh Valley Railroad, and is convenient of access from all parts in the East. If any of our friends can possibly

The Black Langshans have always been considered the greatest of all winter layers. They can stand more cold weather and endure more hardships than any other breed and they lay during weather when other breeds will not. They lay a large, brown egg of superior flavor and my strains have been bred for heavy laying since their foundation.

AS SHOW BIRDS

They need no introduction. The Summit and Black Diamond strains of which I am now the sole owner, have won many blue ribbons in all parts of the land and will during the season of 1912. October 25, 1911

The Hancock Inoculum Co., Salem, Va.
Gentlemen:—We visited D. B. Mentzer's Duck Farm this morning with your Mr. Miller and the results of his work yesterday were astonishing. To convince ourselves we went to his manager and asked him about a duck that Mr. Miller claimed he found flat on his back and the manager thought dead. To-day we found the duck up and walking around. We also looked over the balance he inoculated and from what the manager tells us there is every indication from present appearances that OCULUM will wipe out all trouble.

Waynesboro, Pa., Sept. 25, 1911.

Mr. C. E. Miller, of the Hancock Inoculum Co., Salem, Va., went to my duck farm yesterday and took ducks that my foreman said he was ready to destroy. He inoculated them. In fact one duck was lying on his back and Mr. Miller said he could bring him back. He inoculated him and I am pleased to say that I walked into the coop where he had put him and the duck is well. I have had "OCULUM" so thoroughly demonstrated to me that I recommend it to all duck raisers, and I firmly believe that all raisers of ducks, chickens, turkeys, pigeons, hogs, goats, sheep, calves and colts would do well to investigate "OCULUM" as the theory is right.

Important Notice

Starting June 1st, the regular subscription price to the Poultry Fancier will be 50 cents the year, or four years for $1.00.
Just how near we have fulfilled our obligation in producing the highest class Poultry journal ever published, you must be the judge. We have done our level best to give it to you, and at 25 cents a year; but while we have done our best, we can make many improvements in the makeup of the Fancier, and these improvements taken into consideration, and the size the Fancier has grown to be, makes it absolutely impossible for us to sell it for 25 cents a year, and we can assure you that we will try and give you just as big a bargain at 50 cents a year as what you have enjoyed in the past at 25 cents a year. We are going to try and produce the highest class Poultry Journal in America, and we will do our level best in reaching our ambition. We want to thank each and every one of our old subscribers for the loyal support given us, and we ask you to take advantage of the letter written you all, and extending to you all the privilege of having your subscription extended 4 years from date of its expiration for the price that is now in force, and will be until June 1st, namely 4 years for 60 cents. I would like every one of our old subscribers to take advantage of this. Remember, they will be accepted at this price until June 1st. This will give you all a chance. Attend to this.

What's the Difference?

If judges are allowed to have in their possession a catalogue of the show they are to judge, giving the names of the owners of the birds and their coop numbers, then we can see no reason why the exhibitors should not be allowed to put their names and addresses on the coops, or even have the name and address of the exhibitor on the entry tag. It would be a big benefit to the exhibitor. Now, we understand the reason why no names and addresses are allowed on the coops before they are judged is because the judge cannot tell one exhibitor's bird from the other's, and we say that is right, and it surely is. But we should involve in our show rules, or Poultry secretaries should see to it, that the judges do not get the catalogues before the show is judged. We do not say there is crooked work, but we cannot help but think that if a judge is anxious to see whose birds he is judging and see what the coop numbers are of the different exhibitors, then we think it is done for a purpose. Now, the names are not on coops because the judge will know whose birds he is judging. What a farce the whole thing is, when judges can get catalogues the evening before the show.
Let the exhibitors put their names on the coops or keep the catalogues away from the judges. We know lots of judges that don't want the catalogues; they don't want to see them. But then all judges are not alike. What is the A. P. A. going to do about this?

Rule 17---Something to Consider

Again we say more emphatically than ever, that Rule 17 should be passed and judging by the letters we are receiving from prominent poultrymen in all parts of the country, we believe that Rule 17 will pass at Nashville, and we believe if it were left to a mail vote, Rule 17 would pass by a 3 to 1 majority. Even many of the country's most prominent judges agree that it is hard to meet competition from soliciting editors who are drawing fat salaries from publications. Mr. Judge, Rule 17 is to your interests; Rule 17 means bread and butter to you. We stand for living wages to you, Mr. Judge. We know the defeat of Rule 17 will hurt you.
Why, the very activity of the men trying to defeat it should convince you.

Now, Mr. Show Secretary, how about you? Do you not realize that the exhibitors at your show would prefer to show under judges who are not connected with Poultry journals? Why? Ask them for your own benefit, ask them for the welfare of your association.

And now, Mr. Exhibitor, how about you? Wouldn't you rather show under a judge who is not interested in an advertising way in the classes you are showing in? Sure you would, and so would any sane man. Let the soliciting editors sollicit advertising, and give to the readers the news, the report of the show, and let the judge who has no advertising interest at heart pass on the birds and dish out justice. Vote for Rule 17, and help place the show business where it belongs, and help to keep editors where they belong.
We have too much editor in the A. P. A. and the whole hen game.

Mr. Advertiser!

This Means You

Do you want the Poultry Fancier to come out on time? Sure you do, and the only way it can be done is for you to get your change of copy in on or before the 10th of the month preceeding the issue.
On the 10th of the month the first sixteen pages go to press, and if your ad. is on that run you can see it is impossible to change it. After these sixteen pages are run, another sixteen go on, and so on until the issue is completed, and it is necessary to get your change in on or before the 10th. Make note of this, Fan-cier must come out on time. It will wait on no one.

The Rights of Exhibitors

THE RIGHTS OF THE EXHIBITORS.

On various occasions Poultry show secretaries secure the service of well-known judges to judge the different classes, and advertise them in a catalogue and because the judge has a great reputation and is a man of rare ability on that variety it brings out a large class, and then for some reason the judge advertised for that class is not placed on the class, but some other man is put on. Is that fake advertising? We refrain from answering that question. But what we are most interested in, where do the rights of the exhibitor come in? Surely the exhibitor who runs up against a snag of this kind should be given the privilege of withdrawing his birds from competition where the judges listed and advertised cannot serve. This is no more than justice, and is a matter that the American Poultry Association should take up without gloves, no matter whose feet the shoe pinches.

Advertising---Selling Power

The industrial welfare of all nations, of every Manufacturing plant in the country, or every business in the country, depends on the two words, SELLING POWER, and why then does it not apply to you, Mr. Poultryman?

If the two words, selling power, are taken away from any firm, manufacturing plant, store or individual, business ceases.

In order to conduct any business successfully those two magic words, selling power, are the main feature and the keystone to success. The two words, selling power, have the same effect on business as steam has to a locomotive. No matter how powerful the engine, it is powerless without steam.

Now we will apply the two words, selling power, to the Poultryman. I believe that it is more skill for a poultry-man to sell his product at profitable prices than it is to produce them. I know Poultrymen in almost every state who have just as good birds as any that are bred, but they cannot sell them. They lack selling power. I know Poultrymen in many states that have inferior quality to the men that cannot sell them, who are unable to meet the demand. What is the reason? The one takes advantage of selling power and the other one doesn't.

If there is any editor or advertising solicitor of a Poultry journal who tells you that a trade in the Poultry business can be built in two, three or four months, or even six or nine months, simply by advertising in his journal, then tell him it cannot be done. If this were possible, the country would be so full of prominent breeders that there would be no room for you; but many hundreds of them have listened to that kind of advice and to-day we find wrecks in every state of the country, and deserted poultry plants, all due to listening to the wrong advice concerning the two words, SELLING POWER.

You may ask, when is the right time to advertise successfully? Business in all parts of the country answers the question: Right now and keep everlastingly at it.

Do it in a safe and sane way; increase your advertising as your business increases, and not spend $200.00 or $300.00 in trying to sell $100.00 worth of goods.

In many years of experience in the advertising field and in the journalistic world, and with every year of my life devoted to the Poultry business, I find that the best solution to the problem is as follows:

Advertise your eggs for hatching and stock if you have it on hand, in the months of January, February, March, April, May and also June if the season is running late.

July and August should be used to sell your breeding birds which produced the eggs for your egg trade, and which you do not desire to keep over the winter. It will pay you to sell them at considerable less in those months than to keep them until October and November, on account of the expense of feed and care, and selling them in the months of July and August will give you more room to develop your young stock which should be put on the market in September, along with any other birds that you may have to offer. September is the best stock selling month in the year, especially for show birds for the early fairs, and August is a very good month for show birds on account of supplying the demand for the winter shows which occur in November. November and December advertising is always good for the selling of stock, both for breeding and show purposes. January witnesses a rush for breeding stock and continues into February, and it also marks the opening of the egg trade in the South. In fact, considerable eggs are now being shipped to the South in the month of December.

There was a time when the Fancy Poultrymen could truthfully say, there are only two seasons: the egg season in March and April, and the stock selling season in October and November. That time has passed away and the modern advertising takes its place and creates a demand for the Poultrymen for twelve months in the year.

Digest these facts, study over them. There is no other road to success for the Poultrymen and it strikes me very forcibly that there is no better time to start on your journey than RIGHT NOW.

REGAL FERTILITY

Crusader III
A Boston Winner.

One of the most important factors in building up a satisfactory egg trade is to be able to ship out eggs that will hatch. Regal White Wyandottes hold the record for this. Two years ago I shipped, in March, 30 eggs to J. Dempsey, Arkadelphia, Ark., and he hatched 30 strong chicks from them after a journey of 1200 miles. I have Mr. Dempsey's sworn statement. My latest record hatched is from Portland, Oregon, and I quote the letter:

Portland, Oregon, July 12, 1911.

Mr. John S. Martin,

Dear Sir:—I wish to report a most remarkable hatch from the 50 eggs you shipped me early in the spring. We set them under three of my best hens, two in the chicken house and one in the barn. Two weeks after the eggs were set my house and barn were destroyed by fire. The chicken house was used to store some household articles and the two setting hens were dumped outside and the eggs spilled over the ground. About two hours later I caught the hens and gathered up 30 eggs that were unbroken. The hens settled down to business and in due time hatched 26 chicks from these 30 eggs. I told my remarkable experience to Ex-Gov. Geer, my next door neighbor, and he was amazed at it. In fact it was the talk of the neighborhood. All these chicks lived and are to-day handsome specimens of White Wyandottes. After these eggs being shipped several thousand miles I think my experience was marvelous, and I shall be pleased to recommend your eggs to anyone who wishes to know about them. I remain,

Yours very truly,
GEO. E. WIGHTMAN.

For the season of 1912 I have mated up seventeen grand pens all headed by champion males and containing my exhibition females. Never before did I have such grand quality all through. Price of eggs from pens 1 to 17 (as they run) $5 per 15, $9 per 30, $12 per 45 and $24 per 100.

Pens 18, 19 and 20 are composed of my trap-nested heavy laying stock. Every female is snow white, with good shape and the males are bred from heavy laying females and have show records. Eggs from these pens are $5 per 15, $15 per 50 and $27 per 100.

Utility eggs from healthy surplus stock are $9 per 100, $17 per 200 and $24 per 300.

Send 10 cents in stamps or coin for the Regal White Wyandotte Book, the finest book ever published, dealing wholly with the White Wyandotte.

When Will we get the New Standard? Where is it Anyway?

We have received the following letter from Sec'y. Campbell concerning the revised edition of the Standard:

Poultry Fancier,
Frank W. DeLancey, Editor,
Sellersville, Penna.

Dear Sir:—Your letter of the 7th received, and I am just as much in the dark as you are in regard to when the Standard will be ready for distribution. We can obtain no definite information. It is costing the Association a lot of money in a loss of sale of the Standards, as well as considerable expense in answering letters.

I believe I mailed you information in regard to new branches having been organized in Montana, Florida and New Hampshire. Have not received result of nominating ballot.

Very truly yours,
American Poultry Association,
S. T. Campbell, Secretary.

Poultry Fancier,
Sellersville, Pa.

Gentlemen:—Replying to your letter of March 30th, the Editing and Publishing Committee consists of Messrs. Fred L. Kimmey, chairman, C. M. Bryant, Wm. C. Denny, F. L. Sewell and Reece V. Hicks.

Mr. Kimmey informs us that the second edition of the Standard will be ready in April. The Standards are being printed by the Campbell Co., Chicago, Ill. We wrote them for definite information, but up to date have not received a reply.

We regret very much the delay, trouble and annoyance, in getting out the second edition. The Secretary has been unable to receive or furnish any definite information.

Very truly yours,
American Poultry Association,
S. T. Campbell, Secretary.

Mr. Frank W. DeLancey, Sellersville, Pa.

Dear Mr. DeLancey:—The Editing and Publishing Committee advised us that the Standards would be ready for distribution in February, so that it is no fault of ours. We are now advised by the same Committee that they will be ready in April. We will have your order shipped direct from Chicago.

Very truly yours,
American Poultry Association,
S. T. Campbell, Secretary.

RHODE ISLAND RED CLUB.

It seems that all the Rhode Island Red clubs are having troubles of their own inasmuch, as the business of everyone of them has been sadly neglected on account of sickness of the secretary. The National S. C. Rhode Island Red Club is no exception. It is to be regretted that its otherwise very able and active secretary, J. H. Valliere, is in such poor health that it has been impossible for him to take care of all the business that the duties of his office required. Business of the club has been neglected for a number of years, for although he quite often tried it, Mr. Valliere could never get anyone to take the office. Consequently many complaints were and are still received because cups and ribbons were not received by their winners, and letters were not answered as promptly as they should have been. All this is due, not to negligence on the part of Mr. Valliere, but to the fact that he is actually in a critical condition.

All letters addressed to the new secretary are now answered the same day as received, and all business of the club will be handled in a business-like way. All delinquent members are requested to pay up their dues promptly. All members joining now will receive membership receipt until October, 1913. ### Faking

In the past few months there has been quite some controversy regarding the bleaching of white birds for exhibition purposes. It seems that the spark appeared at the last Boston show, and some have gone so far as to say that the Boston show of 1912 was pretty well sprinkled with them. In order that the reader of this article may know just where I stand on this matter of faking, I want to say this, I would be the very first judge to disqualify such specimens that I felt sure had been tampered with. But, here is where the trouble begins and it calls for more than guess work on the part of any man before a specimen can be disqualified, especially for what is termed bleaching.

Now in this 20th century when all things are moving at a rapid pace, let us look at matters as they really exist. We find in all professions, "Poultry business not excluded," real artists of the very first water. For instance, why does Steinway command $1000 for a piano when other manufacturers can only command $300 to $500? They use the same material in construction, practically go through the same course of mechanism, while the product is no comparison. Why is it that your wife, if you have one, will use the same careful care week after week in laundering her clothes? They go through the same identical process and the results are very often very far from what she would wish them, while at other times they are spotlessly white? Now let's get in the tub and wash some birds for exhibition. I have probably washed as many birds in the past twenty years as have other breeders, few excepted, and I have had very, very poor washes, and I have had them to come out spotless, and there is no doubt in my mind but that more than one person has remarked, "what a pretty bleaching job Nixon has done on that lot of birds," while nothing but soap and water coupled with hard work had been used in either instance.

Now, I know whereof I speak, I have not been following this business for 20 years without learning a few points of the trade, but I wish it thoroughly understood that I have never used, nor do I know what could be used to bleach a yellow chicken white. I have heard of very many things that could be used, and I also heard of Teddy throwing his hat in the ring, but that's all. There may be some that do know, and there may be some that are practicing this method of producing white birds, but how are we to get positive proof of such? You perhaps may say, by comparison. I say no, positively no, and I will state my reasons. I feel that I have bred, judged and handled enough white birds to know a white bird when I see one, and I am sure that those who know me right will bear me out on this statement. I have bred birds and am breeding them to-day that are spotless, their quills are of that pinkish color, and they always stay so under all circumstances, and I call to mind other distinct strains of birds that are bred in the same manner, and when this sort of quality is conditioned by a past-master for keen competition such as is found in the N. Y. or Boston shows, what do we behold, just this, a certain number of specimens sprinkled through the exhibit that stand out head and shoulders above the others without a comparison.

Now here is where the rub comes in. I will grant you, in order to draw a comparison, that Mr. B. and Q. come along with a good big string of birds that have been bleached. They are in the very pink of condition, and so far as one can see, they tally in every way with the true conditioned birds for color. There is no difference. Now, where in this world is the person, judge or no judge, who can go over this said class and disqualify a single specimen for bleaching? You probably say there is a vast difference in the two strings of birds mentioned above when they are carefully examined, and time was when I thought the same, but experience has taught me that I was not correct, and I tell you, my readers, this is a matter that needs a whole lot of thought before real action can be taken. It really cannot be done with justice to the exhibitor. For instance, a breeder is devoting his entire time to the breeding of fancy poultry; his all in all depends entirely upon the success of the business; he selects a good big string of birds for a certain show where the strongest of competition is to be found. Days, weeks, months, yes and nights thrown in, are spent in order that his birds be in the pink of condition to win the desired honors. Can a judge step up to this exhibit, because they outclass all others, and disqualify the exhibit because he believes that they have been bleached? Do you, Mr. Fancier, call this a just decision? I say no; it's absurd. If its feathers, or down on legs, or toe, if they have been left soak a day or two in blue water, legs colored, or comb tampered with and some other things that are positive, why theu disqualify. That's the proper thing to do, but above all things in this world let us try at least to be fair and true one with the other. If we are not able to put our birds in the same condition as our brother fancier, let's not say that he is a fraud, but let's take him by the hand and congratulate him on his skill in producing the desired condition that we all honestly crave for.

There is an old slogan, that goes something like this: "Better be safe than sorry," and I tell you, brother fancier, if there is anything in this world that I would hate to do it would be to rob a fancier of that which he justly deserves.

A Few Hours With Men Who Raise Chickens

We desire to call the attention of the Fancier's readers to the ad. of Judge F. G. Bean, Collegeville, Pa., breeder of Columbian Plymouth Rocks, and one of the foremost Eastern Poultry Judges. Mr. Bean's winning on Columbian Plymouth Rocks during the past season has been the most phenomenal of any Columbian Rock breeders in the entire Eastern part of the U. S. In every show in which Mr. Bean has competed during the entire show season, which include the largest shows of the season, such as Camden, Grand Central Palace, Philadelphia and Madison Square Garden, he has won more prizes than any of his competitors, and under many circumstances, more than all his competitors combined. Such a record as this is an accomplishment that the oldest to examine this season. The mechanical work is of the highest order and the great number of cuts gracing its pages tell a part of the story at least, of the reason why Mr. Wright has been able to build up such an enormous business in all parts of the country. Every photo contained in Mr. Wright's catalogue speaks volumes for the quality of the birds bred on the Valentine Ranch. His 1st Cock at the last St. Paul show is truly a bird of wonderful merit and well deserved the place of honor accorded him, while the 1st Pen were the center of attraction in the Orpington alley. Mr. Wright's 1st Hen at the St. Paul 1912 show stood out like a star in her class, and while the 2nd, 3rd and 4th Hens, all belonging to the Valentine Ranch, were magnificent specimens of typical Orpingtons, the 1st hen was one of the choicest females shown this season. We certainly congratulate Mr. Wright on the high quality of his 1912 Orpington catalogue, and if it were in our power we would give him a higher compliment on the magnificent class of Orpingtons he breeds than a compli-need in White Orpingtons. We know you will be glad you followed our advice.

Mr. Gilbert E. Nichols, Morristown, N. J., one of New Jersey's most prominent Columbian and Silver Wyandotte breeders, is forging right on to the front ranks of success at a very rapid gait. Mr. Nichol's Columbian Wyandotte matings for this season are right up with the best in this country and are deserving every bit of praise they are receiving from all quarters. Mr. Nichols has mated up a number of pairs in both Columbians and Silver and can furnish a limited number of hatching eggs of the highest merit to his customers. We would advise anyone who is looking for quality in either Silver or Columbian Wyandottes to write Mr. Nichols at once, for delay may mean disappointment to get into the winning ranks with these beautiful breeds during the coming show season.

We were greatly pleased to receive a copy of Mr. H. R. Barry's 1912 catalogue describing the famous Barry strain of Single Comb White Leghorns. It is a veritable little treasure-house and will be appreciated by every lover of the wonderful S. C. White Leghorn. Mr. Barry's strain of White Leghorns is among the very best in the land, both for show and exhibition and utility. They are birds of great vigor, splendid head points, long, deep bodies, and as white as snow. For years Mr. Barry has devoted his time and thousands of dollars to produce the very best in White Leghorns, and the name "Barry" stands for quality wherever it is known. The Barry Farm is located at Far Hills, New Jersey, and is one of the best equipped plants in that state. At present, Mr. Barry is running a 6000 Newtown Giant Incubator, and has a brooder capacity of 4000 chicks at one time. His brooder house is con-breeders of the country might well feel proud of, and the Fancier congratulates Mr. Bean on these splendid victories. The Columbian Plymouth Rocks are rapidly sweeping into the honor ranks of popularity in the poultry world and no one breeder in the land is doing more for this popularity than Mr. Bean, who is worthy of the confidence and patronage of all who are intending to take up this popular and beautiful breed of fowls. It is useless for us to comment upon the ability of Mr. Bean as a poultry Judge. This fact is too widely known among the whole poultry fraternity, but it is a pleasure for us to note that he has given entire satisfaction to every show at which he has judged so far as the Fancier has been able to ascertain, and we are pleased to learn that his services are sought this season in wider circles than ever before. Mr. Bean's ad. always appears on the back cover page of the Fancier and we take a high degree of pleasure in recommending both himself and his birds to all the Fancier's friends.

The Valentine Ranch, New Brighton, Minn., Douglas H. Wright, owner, O. G. Thompson, superintendent, breeders of the famous Wright Single Comb White Orpingtons, has compiled one of the most handsome and complete White Orpington Catalogues we have had the pleasure mentary mention of their merits in the columns of the Poultry Fancier. We are glad to note the splendid business Mr. Wright is enjoying this season and we would advise all our readers to write Mr. Wright for his catalogue on Single Comb White Orpingtons and mating list of his 1912 matings. The Valentine Ranch ad. is in the May issue of the Fancier. Look it up and write them for whatever you may

His incubator cellar is just what one would expect to see on a plant built up under the care and supervision of a man of Mr. Barry's stamp, while his laying houses include the latest and most approved features known to the science of poultry house construction. Mr. Barry is breeding 2500 head of high-scoring White Leghorns, and bird for bird we very much doubt if their superiors can be found anywhere in this or any other country, and it is a great pleasure indeed to see the big half bushel pails filled with large, snowy white eggs gathered each day on Mr. Barry's farm. We certainly congratulate our readers who may be fortunate enough to secure either hatching eggs or day-old chicks from Mr. Barry's wonderful strain of White Leghorns, and we enjoy a large degree of pride, as publishers of a Poultry journal, to know that the readers and friends of the Poultry Fancier are afforded the splendid opportunity of securing either stock or eggs from one so reliable as Mr. Barry. Look up the ad. of the Barry Farms in this month's issue of the Fancier and write for their 1912 mating list, and tell Mr. Barry the Eagle on the cover page of the Fancier brought the good tidings to your door.

THE BEST BLOOD LINES IN THE WORLD

That's what some other breeders claim, but The Underhill Farms are prepared to offer proof. Furthermore, we claim The Best Layers in the World. These are strong assertions but

We Defy Contradiction and Court Investigation

Send for our Mating List (plain facts—not fiction) describing our stock. It is Free and very interesting. It gives days and dates in proof of claims made as well as all other information that the buyer wants. It is attested and vouched for by six of the leading citizens of Fort Ann, N. Y., the home of Show Birds That Lay, and indicates which way the fowl air is blowing. It tells how they increased their egg yield during the coldest weather (38 degrees below); it shows the wonderful egg producing qualities of the standard bred birds on The Underhill Farms. It gives actual and positive proof of every statement made by us at various times relative to the superiority of our strains of White and Buff Orpingtons, White Rocks, White Wyandottes, White and Brown Leghorns, Light Brahmas, R. and S. O. Rhode Island Reds and Indian Runner Ducks. They are not only wonderful layers, but have also won highest honors at leading exhibitions. It tells you how and in what way we have spent thousands of dollars in the selection and breeding of these laying winners. It has been an expensive experiment but we are just unselfish enough to give you all the facts, whether you purchase from us or not.

We Believe in Telling the Truth Even at Own Expense

It is our policy and you may become familiar with it by simply writing for a copy of this free booklet. It gives all information in detail; it even tells you what these laying show specimens were doing when the thermometer registered 38 degrees below zero. It's an interesting story and worth many times the cost. When you send for this booklet you do not obligate yourself to buy—it's a pleasure for us to tell you about our birds and our farm. Nothing but layers are kept—the axe or the market is the fate of all drones. The average person cannot afford to keep other than layers. The hen was created to produce eggs and if she can win the blue ribbon she is doubly valuable, but eggs first, last and all the time.

THE EVIDENCE

every leading Poultry Journal and practically every leading poultryman endorses Oculum. Their is a reason. Sure. Read and be convinced. OCULUM, the world's greatest remedy endorsed by the Press and Poultrymen.

ENDORSEMENTS BY THE PRESS.

OCULUM, as a cure and preventive for roup, cholera, white diarrhoea and gapes, is meeting with merited success. It is recommended to the country by the leading fanciers of the nation.

With men like C. H. Latham, A. C. Hawkins, U. R. Fishel, William Ellery Bright, J. C. Fishel & Son, Mr. Bradley, Foxhurst Farm, P. J. Armstrong, recommending Oculum, it will be known to all poultrymen.

Oculum is being extensively advertised, and should have a tremendous sale during the white diarrhoea season. Millions of dollars are lost annually by this disease, and readers of this Journal should find out more about this valuable remedy by addressing the manufacturers, The Hancock Inoculum Co., Salem, Va.—American Poultry Journal, April, 1911.

No matter how prejudiced you may be against poultry remedies, an attitude due, perhaps, to some unsatisfactory experiences in the past, you cannot afford to ignore the fact that the most prominent breeders in this country of ours are unreservedly singing the praises of Oculum.

"The conservatism of men like A. C. Hawkins, C. H. Latham, Bradley Bros., and many others of the first rank as breeders, is too well known to expect that they will come out over their own signposts in strongest testimony to the sterling merit of this great remedy for the cure of cholera, roup and white diarrhoea, unless they were absolutely certain, from personal use, that Oculum met every requirement.

"Perhaps it was the convincing test made by Foxhurst Farm, at the last Madison Square show, which resulted in a lot of birds that were in bad shape to capture first prize pen in Black Orpingtons, that made Oculum meet with such instant favor with our foremost poultrymen.

"However this may be, Oculum has demonstrated its wonderful efficacy as a poultry remedy beyond any reasonable doubt, and it is safe to predict that its use will prove a boon to poultry raisers by saving them in the aggregate thousands of dollars each year. Oculum has come to stay, and deserves to succeed."

Farm Poultry, Boston, July issue, 1911.

(From the American Poultry World, one of the Leading Poultry Journals of America.)

"There have been so many worthless preparations advertised and foisted upon the poultrymen as cure-alls for all complaints to which our feathered friends are heir, that poultry raisers in general have been a little reluctant about trying new remedies.

"Therefore, when Oculum was discovered and placed upon the market, a new method of advertising was adopted. It was placed in the hands of the most prominent poultrymen in the land. Its value as a cure for White Diarrhoea, Cholera, Gapes and Roup was demonstrated by a representative of the company, and in not one instance did the remedy fail in its mission.

"It was given a thorough trial by such prominent fanciers and poultrymen as A. C. Hawkins, U. R. Fishel, Bradley Bros., C. H. Latham, and many others, and has their unqualified endorsement. On many farms where White Diarrhoea has been prevalent heretofore, all indications of the same have been eradicated by timely use of this remedy.

"No poultryman should be without a supply of it. A sample bottle may be had for 25 cents by addressing The Hancock Inoculum Co., Salem, Va."

(Editorial, June Number, Inland Poultry Journal, Indianapolis, Ind.)

"This new remedy for Cholera, Roup and White Diarrhoea seems to be what poultrymen have been looking for. We are slow to recommend these new remedies until we can personally try them out or see them in use, but the strong endorsement from prominent breeders, after giving it a trial, is so flattering that we feel we would be doing our readers an injustice not to call attention to it.

"It is a remedy entirely different from any heretofore advertised or recommended and the printed matter issued by the company explains the use of the remedy in a way that convinces us they are working along the right lines.

"Oculum is put up in 25c and $1.00 bottles, or samples at 10c. One good fowl cured of cholera is worth many times the price of the bottle, while a remedy that will cure White Diarrhoea in chicks is worth its weight in gold.

"Now that hot weather is here, we would suggest that our readers try a small bottle of this remedy and report to us. If it does what many of the big breeders claim it has done, it should be given the widest publicity; in fact, there is no accurate way of figuring the value of a medicine that will cure cholera in old fowls and White Diarrhoea in chicks.

"Oculum is sold by many druggists. For sample, send 25c to Hancock Inoculum Co., Salem, Va. We would like to have our readers report on this new remedy after giving it a fair trial."

From Reliable Poultry Journal, February, 1912.

Inoculation is a new departure in the treatment of sick birds, at least in the common practice of poultry. However, after watching the progress in popularity of "Oculum" and observing the good work that it is doing, even the lay mind could fairly conclude that inoculation is a success.

The condition of the intestinal tract bears directly on the health of chickens, mature as well as young. And OCULUM injected proceeds to clean the system, destroying the organisms that are too numerous and too strong for nature to control effectively.

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 22, 1911.

Hancock Inoculum Company, Salem, Va.

Gentlemen:—Previous to inoculating my flock of about one hundred chickens with your "OCULUM," I was losing from one to eight daily, but since, I am glad to state, I have only lost three (3) during a period of two weeks, therefore I heartily recommend your "OCULUM" as a preventive for Gapes, Roup and White Diarrhoea, as well as Cholera.

Very truly yours,
LEWIS C. SCHEFFEY.

FROM THE MEN WHO RAISE CHICKENS.

Waynesboro, Pa., Sept. 25, 1911.
Mr. C. E. Miller of the Hancock Inoculum Co., Salem, Va., went to my duck farm yesterday and took ducks that my foreman said he was ready to destroy. He inoculated them. In fact one duck was lying flat on his back and Mr. Miller said he could bring him back. He inoculated him and I am pleased to say that I walked into the coop where he had put him and the duck is well. I have had "OCULUM" so thoroughly demonstrated to me that I recommend it to all duck raisers, and I firmly believe that all raisers of ducks, chickens, turkeys, pigeons, hogs, goats, sheep, calves and colts, would do well to investigate "OCULUM," as the theory is right.

REV. D. B. MENTZER.

Telephone me and I will tell you about "OCULUM."
L. A. GLESSMAN, Crystal White Orpingtons, Conneautville, Pa., March 16, 1911.
Hancock Inoculum Co., Salem, Va.

Gentlemen:—Enclosed please find check for $1.00 for which please send me at once one bottle of OCULUM. I used the sample you sent me for roup and rumpy cold and find it by far the best remedy I ever used. I also inoculated some apparently well birds and am very much pleased with the results. My wife says we cannot be without OCULUM.

Wishing you success with the best poultry remedy I ever used, I beg to remain,
Yours very truly,
L. M. GLESSMAN.

Westhampton, Beach, L. I., N. Y., Sept. 19, 1911.

Hancock Inoculum Co., Salem, Va.

Dear Sirs: I inoculated all my game chickens, each and every one of them, and since doing so haven't had a chicken even with so much as a cold. Here is an example: I set in a Prairie State Incubator, 73 McCoy Jungle Game eggs, hatched 64 chicks, inoculated them when a day old (one inoculation was all I gave them), and the 64 are all alive this minute; they are three months old and a little over, and when small chicks they never had any heat. I put them in an indoor brooder for two weeks and then transferred them to an outdoor brooder. Heretofore, I've only been able to bring through from a hatch from 6 to 30 per cent. I made a 100 per cent. with OCULUM, something I never thought possible to do on earth. I have been using the remedy for five months and have had success with all birds under my supervision. What I have stated are facts.

Respectfully yours,
(Signed) DANIEL A. LOGAN.

Gen. Mgr. Rose Court Poultry Yards.
The Hancock Inoculum Co., Salem, Va.

Eden, Oct. 23, 1911.
Gentlemen:—I did not send for another bottle of OCULUM before because I did not keep a great many chickens, and so the bottle you first sent me has lasted till now. I think OCULUM is a grand remedy, since using it I have never lost a chicken. Enclosed you will find 50c for which please send me another bottle and syringe.
Truly yours,
F. W. SWITZER.

Eden, N. Y., Route No. 2.

"OCULUM" works like magic. I have saved between eighty and one hundred dollars worth of Turkeys since I used "OCULUM." If only the people would try it, I think nobody would be without it. I would not be without it for any price. Please send me another bottle.

Manufacturers "OCULUM," Salem, Va.

Dear Sirs:—Enclosed please find check for $1.50 for which send me $1.00 bottle of OCULUM and also one 50c bottle and syringe to Mrs. W. H. Murdock, Kingswood, Preston Co., W. Va. I have used the 25c bottle ordered recently on a bunch of 23 chicks hatched out in the beginning of "Dog Days" and my neighbors said we couldn't raise them in this hot season. But I have everyone of them, living and thrifty, now four weeks old.

Sincerely,
W. H. BAYLEE.

TO CHAS. S. STACY CO., BRANCH OF OCULUM CO.
24 North West Third St., Richmond, Va.

September 16, 1911.
Gentlemen:—I will endorse all and more than you claim of OCULUM. Have used it for a month and hope you will make it all like the last you sent me. I had a beautiful Rhode Island Red rooster with a bad case of Roup and he gained nearly a pound while I was treating him in 30 days and was completely cured with two doses. I cured two pullets of Chicken Pox and one with something like Diphtheria and I have seen people use it for Canker and I believe it will cure it. Shall inoculate every chicken I have, for you easily can see a difference in them in 12 hours after first dose.

Henry Cundell, Mgr.

Water Mill, L. I., N. Y., Sept. 27, 1911.

Hancock Inoculum Co., Salem, Va.

Dear Sirs:—It is with pleasure I send you my endorsement of "OCULUM." A pullet which was in Champion Pen at Philadelphia show (which won the North American Cup for the best pen in entire show) had a very bad case of diarrhoea and I thought she was gone. I gave her one inoculation and cured her sound and well. You have a remedy that should be with every poultryman in the show room. It is the surest remedy that has come out in years.

(Signed) HENRY CUNDELL.

Now the Question why Loose Your Chickens When they can be saved? Prevent the mortalite and make profit. See regular adv elsewhere in this issue and start using Oculum today. Mention Fancier when you write.

Current Events Among Fanciers Gathered From Live Wires

No One Responsible for Editing This Department

Campines are on the Boom, with a Big B.

Read the important notice on Editorial page.

J. D. Koons will judge the Easton Show.

Chas. I. Fishel is booking many judging engagements.

There will be a summer exhibit of poultry at Atlantic City.

Dr. Garber says the outlook is fine for a big show at Lancaster.

A new Poultry Association has been organized at Ambler, Pa.

Aug. D. Arnold is goin' to take up the Favorelles. Gus, generally can pick a winner.

We publish cuts for classified advertisers, the same as we do for the display advertisers.

Nearly every state in the Union is represented in our advertisements, and there is a reason.

Prominent Poultrymen in all parts of the country think soliciting editors should not judge. Well, so do we.

Notice the large amount of ads. in the May issue of Fancier. Something unusual, but there is a reason.

Pittsburg Fanciers' club have already selected their dates, Feb. 17-22, 1913. Run in the same old place by the same old crowd.

Chas. V. Keeler reports the girl baby and the White Wyandottes are doing fine. Charley has had the biggest season since he has been in business.

Be sure and go to Nashville in August, the place where the A. P. A. meets and the place where Rule 17 should be passed. And do all you can for Rule 17.

The Hanover Fair Poultry Show will be immense this year. As the old saying goes, standing room will be at a premium. Shirk says, get your entry in early.

The Wissahickon Valley Poultry Association held a banquet and smoker at the Wheel Pump Hotel Saturday Evening, April 27. As usual, it was up to snuff.

Poultry business is on the boom in Bridgeton, N. J. That is a down to date organization, having their own rooms, and always enough money in the treasury to conduct a show.

Everybody is anxiously awaiting the list of judges at Allentown and Hagerstown, and Lancaster and Hanover, too. And how about Syracuse? That's some show, boys. That's indeed some show.

The admission to the Allentown Fair has been raised to 50 cents. We are informed by reliable parties that Sour Krout will remain the same, and that premiums on Poultry will get another boost.

We are more convinced than ever that soliciting editors should not judge, and the present hold-up of the Standard comes pretty near convincing us that there is just a little too much editor in the A. P. A.

We would like every one to express their views on the judging question, as well as judges having catalogues before they start work. Some judges don't want to see them, others have them. Why?

Yes, indeed, Mr. Wetzell, we thank you kindly for the invitation to your chicken supper at the next Pittsburg Fanciers' show, and we will be there. Indeed, we hardly ever turn down these kind of invitations.

Starting June 1st, the subscription price to the Fancier will be 50 cents a year, or four years for $1. See editorial page and save money. Don't forget it. Be sure and see editorial page. This means you.

If judges can have catalogues giving the names and coop numbers of the exhibitors before they start work, why can't the exhibitor put his name on the coop? What is the difference, anyway? Some one tell us.

Joe. Hilldorfer has gone to Oklahoma, not to fight Indians, but to get new blood, and incidentally look up some political pointers. Joe may me Mayor of Pittsburg some day, and then Geo. Ewald can rest his weary honors in safety.

They do funny things, then there members of the Pittsburg Fanciers' bunch. Yes sir, why Seldom set 13 eggs under a Rock hen, and she was drove off the nest by a 16 oz. Banty, and by gosh 13 chicks. Now, what do you think of that? Who's next?

And at last Skiles has got interested in chickens, and is taking up the Orpingtons. Steer clear of this boy—he has bought eggs, we haven't heard the price, or where he bought them, but we know he was saving his money as far back as the last show.

F. L. Ober, Supt. Poultry Pittsburg Fanciers' Association, reports 300 youngsters doing fine. Mr. Ober wants every one to understand his name is not Freddie, or Jerry, or Willie, but Frank. Well, luck to you Frank, and the whole darned bunch, chicks, clucks and members.

Doc. Hertz has not been heard from. Just as soon as we hear from him we will convey the information to our readers. We will bet a year's subscription to the Fancier that this wizard is working out some medical dope that will prevent soliciting editors from judging at Lititz.

The annual Spring rehearsals of the Gander Band will start May 15th on the barn floor at John Krinner's. Director Hamburg Bill Minnick requests a full attendance, as he says there must be better music at Hagerstown this year than ever before. By the way, Bill's White Orpington shoats are doing fine.

Where is the new Standard that was to be ready Feb. 15th? Well, Theo. Hewes said something about the business ability of the A. P. A. being compared to an empty sardine can, with sort of a sympathy with the can. We always did claim that the A. P. A. should be run by men who raise chickens. Too much editor in it, the same as on the judging question.

Bringing the Chick to Maturity

By Austin W. Carpenter, East Randolph, N. Y.

For another season we are face to face with the problems of chicken rearing. All must admit that these problems are many and oft times hard of solution. In the successful raising of the chick lies the solution of a profitable poultry industry. The failures made in the poultry industry may be traced to about four sources, namely: 1st, Failure to incubate successfully; 2nd, Failure to raise chicks that are hatched; 3rd, Neglect of matured stock, and 4th, Lack of a business like advertising campaign. Here I believe we have the four vital necessities to a profitable poultry business. Each of these is equally important for no undertaking with poultry can be successful unless all of these problems are correctly solved by the individual who would make poultry his money crop. In view of the fact that at this season thousands upon thousands of little chicks are struggling for existence I am led to devote the space assigned me to a discussion of this all important feature concerning all poultrymen, especially beginners.

If the poultryman lets the chick die after it is hatched he not only loses the value of the egg with the expense and care of incubation but as well he loses the value of the chick at maturity, minus of course the cost of rearing the same. When we lose a few small chicks or even chicks half matured we do not stop to think about it as much as we ought. It seems a small affair. However, when we balance accounts at the end of the year and determine what each chick that lived to maturity did in producing the annual dividend we come to our senses and too late appreciate how we have let the profits slip through our fingers. To illustrate, last season through neglect we lost from one brood of chicks about thirty youngsters. They were little fellows and while we were disappointed we did not take much note of our loss. Considering the large number we raised our loss seemed too small to mention. This winter when we had to return orders for Polish females at from two to five dollars each we naturally thought of the chicks we lost. Assuming that half were females we would have been fifty dollars ahead. There might have been a prize winning cockerel in the lot. Making fifty dollars our basis for an argument is sufficient, for those who follow the poultry industry will soon learn that fifty dollars is a large item; entirely too large to charge up in your loss account if you are to succeed with fowls. So from year to year we have endeavored to profit by our experiences. We have tried to plug up the holes through which the profit gets away. In rearing the chick to maturity we have been successful after some years of practical experience. For your benefit I shall now endeavor to give you the benefit of that experience in narrative form.

To discuss this subject and relate my experiences so as to make them of the most value to the reader I shall divide my discussion into two parts, viz:— Brooding the Chicks and Feeding the Chicks. First let us take up the sub-topic first suggested.

BROODING.

I believe in taking the chicks from the incubator as soon as their down is dry. Here I meet opposition of many poultrymen. Most incubator directions tell you to leave the chicks in the machine for considerable time after they are hatched. They tell us that the chick gathers strength at the high degree of temperature of incubation. I have tried this method. I have also tried my plan of getting the chick out of the machine as soon as it is dried off. I have had the best results from my plan and shall continue it. Then too, there is some common sense argument in the plan. As each egg is piped and the chick emerges from the shell there is a certain quantity of poisonous gases that must come from the expulsion of the chick from the shell. Again the doubtful eggs that have been left in the machine with hopes that they would develop, and which in the majority of cases rot instead of developing a live germ throw off certain gases. After a number of chicks are out your egg and nursery chambers must be comfortably filled with these gases. Reason teaches us that it is pure air, oxygen, that gives life and strength. The chick does not get these elements in the incubator. It can get them in the brooder and at the same time have sufficient warmth for comfort. If the recent invented vitalizers make good their claim of furnishing warm pure air they doubtless solve the problems of dead chicks in the shell and also counteract the poisonous gases in their harm of the chicks. I am giving the new invention a thorough trial and must say that I believe it a success and a blessing to the poultry fraternity.

Have the temperature under your hover right around one hundred degrees. This will take care of the chicks in fine shape. Keep up this warmth for two or three days and then drop off a degree every day or so until you have the temperature about eighty. I believe more chicks are killed from too much rather than too little heat. The excessive heat weakens instead of building up. It is important to keep an even temperature under hover as crowding is a death trap for little chicks. Outside of your hover give plenty of fresh air. Let the sun and fresh air freely into the brooder. A chick knows more than one thinks. It soon learns that under the hover is the place to get warm. When it gets cold it will go to the hover. When the chick is working in other parts of the brooder let it work with lots of fresh air around it. If the air gets too cold it will start for the hover, warm up, and before you know it be out enjoying the air again. Don't be afraid of pure air. It is half the life of the growing chick.

Another most important feature is found in giving the chicks plenty of room. We put too many chicks to the square inch of brooder space. Brooders cost money. It is natural enough that we should try to use every available space but cheating the chick of room in the brooder is a case of "penny wise and pound foolish." Nine out of ten brooder manufacturers lie about the capacity of their machines. At any rate they base the capacity on day old chicks and the purchaser assumes that the capacity stands for a number of weeks development. I have found from experience that it pays to brood in small numbers. A few well developed chicks weigh more than a lot of stunted ones.

The chick must have exercise. Exercise calls for room. In early brooding arrange plenty of room outside of brooder for run. Let the chicks chase until they are completely tired out. It means strong birds. Get the chicks on the ground as soon as possible. Either give them a large range on ground or new yards frequently. A number of chicks soon take up the strength of the soil.

Get the chick into the colony house as soon as age and weather permit. The close quarters of the brooder are outgrown sooner than one would think. In colony houses, as in brooder, fresh air must be the keynote of attendants. Don't mistake fresh air for draughts. Supply the pure air but avoid the draught.

Still another important essential is shade. The chick enjoys and requires sunlight and heat but it cannot withstand the hot rays continuously during the day. From May to the close of brooding operations the poultryman must guard against too much sun. Furnish plenty of shade. You will find the chicks take advantage of it the greater part of the hot days. Lack of shade is responsible for half of chick diseases during hot summer months.

Get the chicks out of their coops early mornings.

All you have to do is open the doors. They come out and in a hurry. The chick is an early riser. It enjoys the early morning air with its freshness and coolness. It is eager to get out into such an atmosphere. If the door is not open as daylight comes on the chicks crowd upon each other in an endeavor to get out into the open. If there are a few weak specimens in the brooder the strong ones will trample out their vitality before you get the doors open in the early morning.

Don't place chicks of different ages in same flock. It is a great mistake. The older chicks will naturally overrun the younger ones. The younger flock won't make satisfactory development.

Before leaving this sub-topic for that of feeding I must emphasize the necessity of cleanliness in brooding. When I say to clean brooders and colony houses at least once in every two days I am not putting it too strongly. It is filth that breeds disease and lice. Either one of these elements in the brood of chicks is hard to combat. A chick is a bad patient. The louse grows fat and the chick poor. Neglect in keeping brooders and colony houses clean is the cause of both these enemies. You will tell me that you can't give so much time to the business. Then get out of it into another field. The fellow that has only Sunday for cleanup day in the brooder, colony house or poultry building is doomed to failure. It can't be otherwise. Don't cry about lack of time. Time, to be sure, is money. That money, however, lies in the well developed chick.

So much for brooding. We have gone over some of the problems it presents. Now let us come to as equally an important element, namely,

FEEDING.

Nine out of ten beginners make the serious mistake of feeding the young chicks too soon. After some years of experience I have discovered that the chick should have no food until the lapse of forty-eight to sixty hours after it leaves the shell. There is a reason for this. Before leaving the shell the chick is supplied with sufficient nourishment to carry it through this period. Nature provides nourishment which properly regulates the digestive organs up to forty-eight or sixty hours of age. First feed the chick some sort of grit. I have found nothing better than crushed egg shells. For a long time oat flake was highly recommended for young chicks but I never was able to use it with success. Nothing promotes the health and strength of the chick like grain. When three days old we begin the feeding of a balanced grain ration specially prepared for chicks. We feed this twice a day and for the other feed boil eggs which were taken from the incubator on the fifth day test. These eggs are boiled until very hard and then chopped shell and all until they are very fine. It is a good plan to mix fine chick grit with the chopped egg. There is no danger of giving the chick too much grit. It requires it to grind the other food which it eats. Use plenty of hay seed or chaff for brooder litter and sprinkle grain in chaff so that chicks will have to scratch to get it. Exercise is important.

The chick requires some green food. Cabbage, sugar beets, turnips, or even fine lawn grass will answer the purpose. After using all of these foods we have found that sugar beets chopped very fine give the best results.

The chick must have a special muscle developer. None is better than meat. We have used both the fresh ground bone and the dry beef scrap. Either of these must be fed sparingly and with judgment. Two or three feeds a week are sufficient. This keeps the chick free from leg weakness and develops bone and muscle. I have known of some beginners who attempted the feeding of a corn meal mash. They base their method of feeding on that used by the farmer's wife in raising the brood of chicks upon the farm. If it will work on the farm why won't it work with brooder chicks? This problem may not be easily solved. However, I believe I see the solution of the same in the fact that the chicks on the farm were given an extra amount of exercise by the mother hen in tramping over the free-range of the farm and in the extra amount of green food and grit that the chicks so easily procured on free range. This much is sure, that the wet corn meal mash don't work with artificial brooding.

The chick must have plenty of fresh water. Water should be changed three or four times daily and the drinking dish not placed in the hot sun. How careless we all get in keeping drinking fountains clean and frequently filled. The water is almost as important as the feed. When giving the chicks their first feed or water see to it that every chick gets out from under the hover to secure its portion. If necessary take the chicks from under the hover.

Some few chicks most always remain under the hover either from fright or from weakness. Get these out and see to it that they get their first meal and first drink with the more active ones of the brood.

As the chick develops take away the chick grain and give some of the more substantial grains such as wheat, rye, and other grains of like size.

Doubtless one of the most prevalent chick diseases is that of diarrhea or other bowel diseases. These troubles can be eliminated if care is given in brooding as heretofore set forth and in providing plenty of grain and grit. Like all other poultrymen we have had our troubles with these chick ailments. As soon as the chicks show any symptoms of these ailments we grind dry bone and feed almost exclusively to the chicks. We have had fine results with such treatment and invariably the chicks will recover and soon maintain their usual vigor. This remedy might not work in cases where the disease was strongly developed, but all will admit that the treatment of any poultry disease should not be delayed. Get to work on the very first appearance of the trouble.

When chicks get out on range or in yard do not feed in the same spots or same places repeatedly. The chicks soon take up the life of the soil and the ground becomes sour and infected with disease germs. Feed in a new location every day or two and you will avoid much trouble in a successful development of the chick.

I have taken up considerable space with my suggestions. I assure you they are made not from theory but from actual practice. We have had our troubles. We have endeavored to eliminate them and have given you some of our experiences. I trust they will be of benefit to my readers. You have gone over them. Now take them for what you think they are worth.

Sicilian Buttercups

By Isaac F. Tillinghast.

No doubt there are some who have taken up poultry keeping wholly for health and pleasure, and I presume there are others who are figuring wholly for profit, but undoubtedly, there are yet many more who desire to combine pleasure and profit, so the question most interesting to the larger number is how to proceed to combine these in the greatest degree and to realize upon them in the shortest time.

It has been truthfully said that it is only when a man does what he likes and gets paid for it that he has found his vocation.

In most cases if either of these two factors are lacking discontent is sure to follow, and then neither pleasure nor profit will result.

There are many branches to the great Poultry Tree, and perhaps it is well that all do not see and work alike. It is the fact that there are "many men of many minds and many birds of many kinds" that puts life into the business.

However, whichever breed we take up, or whatever branch we determine to follow, may it be broilers, baby chicks, eggs for market fowl, fancy stock or what not, the production of eggs seems to be the one most important requisite, and the selection of a breed which will produce a maximum egg yield is undeniably of first importance.

The production of squabs and broilers has been much advocated as a nice and profitable business, even for ladies and children, but I must confess that it would seem to me that the necessity of murdering a lot of confiding pets, right in the innocence of their infancy, would be so heart-sickening that few human people, especially women, could find any pleasure in it, and the profits must be enormous to counterbalance the pain or lack of pleasure, to put it mildly, to be found in such an undertaking.

In order to gain pleasure enough from the care of fowls to offset the necessary hard and disagreeable labor connected with it there must exist an intimacy which will make the cared for creatures seem like pets, and few can find pleasure in relentlessly slaughtering them for profit.

I am pleased to say, however, that there is at least one branch of the poultry industry which may be followed that is entirely free from these really serious objections—a way in which even greater profit can be attained without sacrificing self-respect or eliminating the element of pleasure in the transaction.

It is to select some new breed which you can see is just coming into popularity, one which possesses both beauty and utility merit, so that every one who takes it up will feel justified in keeping and boosting it.

Procure the best stock you can and breed it with study and care, so as to improve it if possible. Then the money you can easily get from the sale of eggs for hatching, for baby chicks, or from breeding stock will be far greater in amount than you could possibly get from the same investment and energy aimed at a product for the general market.

Such opportunities are constantly coming up. I might at the present time name a half dozen candidates, which have quite recently appeared, whose chances of becoming popular leaders are very good, but I will mention the two only which I myself have selected. They are Sicilian Buttercups and White Indian Runner Ducks. First-class stock of these is as present quite expensive, but that is an advantage to you rather than a detriment, for it will enable you to get good prices for all you can raise for years to come, and thus get back your money many times, which no doubt will tend to enhance your pleasure as well as profit. These beautiful fowls were first brought into this country about twelve years ago from the Island of Sicily, in southern Italy, by Captain Dawes, commander of the barque Fruiter, who when ready to sail for America with a cargo of oranges, raisins, and figs, purchased and took on board a coop of fowls with the intention of using them for food while en route. Thus they were unwittingly placed on trial for their lives, but given a chance to prove the truth of the old saying that merit will win. And prove it they did, for they won their life and liberty by laying so continuously and persistently that the fact was demonstrated that their product was worth far more to their owner as food than were their bodies, and so they were brought home and ever since have been winning their way by the same token, a maximum production of eggs. For a long time they were bred and kept only by private parties with no desire or attempt to make their merits known outside of limited circles, and whatever popularity they attained was based wholly upon general utility merit.

But it is hard to keep a bright light hidden under a bushel, and reports of their records finally reached the ears of a few fanciers who, through the American Minister to Sicily, succeeded in importing from their native land a pen of birds of a finer, pure-bred type.

The name Buttercup was given on account of their very distinctive style of comb, which is very unlike any other breed in the market, it being neither single, rose nor pea in form, but beginning at the base of the bill as a single comb, soon divides and runs around the crown of the head forming a circle of red spikes which remind one of the petals of a beautiful flower. At the same time the prevailing color of the hens being a light yellow, the name Buttercup was certainly most appropriate.

Buttercups are absolutely non-sitters, their whole thought and force, as above stated, seeming to run to the production of eggs, Spring, Summer, Autumn and Winter, nothing but eggs, first, last and all the time. In fact they are one of the few breeds which have made a record of nearly 300 eggs within a calendar year.

Up to the present time there are comparatively few, perhaps less than 100, breeders of Buttercups in this country, and so far as I have been able to trace them, there is absolutely no stock for sale at any price, all who possess them preferring to keep and propagate rather than sell, knowing full well that the demand for years to come will be so great and far-reaching that prices must advance rather than decline, and the longer they hold them the more they are certain to realize on the increase.

In color the Buttercups perhaps more closely resemble Golden Spangled Hamburgs than any other well known breed, the cocks being a bright golden red with black tail and flight feathers, while the females are of a light yellow or buff undercolor, quite thickly spangled with black points except on the breast.

Although classed as new the Buttercups are not of a made-up or mongrel origin, but have no doubt been line-bred in their native country for a long period of time, and so breed comparatively true to type, their greatest variation seeming to be in color of legs, which vary from yellow to a willow green. Their bodies are very plump and heavy for their size, which is about on a par with Leghorns, and come to maturity very early, our June hatched chicks beginning to lay in December and continuing without interruption through the coldest January and February weather on record. For five or six weeks the mercury seldom rose as high as zero, and on several occasions sank to 30 below, yet the whole flock averaged one egg for each fowl every other day through the whole winter, and now are doing better.

Buttercups are most active foragers, well adapted to farm life, yet they have none of the wildness of nature which pertains to the Leghorn class, but on the contrary are among the gentlest of fowls and soon become such pets as to endear themselves into the hearts of their attendant. In fact I have never in my life before taken care of a pen of fowls of any kind with such a feeling of pleasure and satisfaction as is given me by this, my latest acquisition, as they actually run around the yard apparently singing,—

“I’m Little Buttercup,
Dear Little Buttercup, Sweet Little Buttercup, I!”

I take pleasure in announcing that the American Buttercup Club, which has been under way for the past year, is now practically a reality, and its first general meeting will probably be held in connection with the New York State Fair Association’s Poultry Show in September.

The second opportunity alluded to in the beginning of this article for getting in on the ground floor on the rise of a new breed, viz., White Indian Runner Ducks, is a little ahead in progress, as the organization of the National White Runner Duck Club was perfected last November at Atlanta, Georgia.

A Standard of Perfection is to be issued by each of these clubs to remain in force until they are admitted to the A. P. A. Standard.

Now is the Time to Start New Poultry Shows

By J. E. Willmarth, Amityville, N. Y.

The number of poultry shows are increasing fast, and we expect to see a Show held in nearly every locality where there are a number of people interested in keeping poultry in the next few years. In every village of a few thousand inhabitants and in all small cities where there are a few Fanciers who are willing to get out and hustle a local Poultry Exhibition can be profitably held every year if handled with ordinary care.

No doubt there are many living in such localities who agree with me but do not know how to start things going, or they do not like to take the initiative in such a matter.

Now is the time to start if you think of holding your first show next winter. First thing is to find out who there is in your neighborhood that would be likely to take an interest and work for the success of such a venture. Call on a few who would probably be most interested and most of them will be found favorably inclined. Talk the matter over with these parties, decide on a date and place for the first meeting, generally at the home of one who is centrally located. Notify every one in your locality who it is thought would be interested and invite them to come to the meeting. At the time of the meeting let some one be chosen for temporary Chairman and another for Secretary of the meeting. Then give every one a chance to air his views on the subject and thus find out about what the majority wish to do.

It is generally best to elect officers and decide on a name for the Association at this first meeting, as more interest will be taken if members have something definite to work with. Annual dues should also be paid so as to get something in the treasury. Authorize your Secretary to have stationary printed. Committees should be appointed to see about renting a hall and time same be engaged for, also Committees on Judge, Catalogue, Specials, etc. All these will vary in different sections.

A publicity committee is also important. Have notices in local papers that such an association has been formed, or often it is best to have such notices before the first meeting, and inviting every one interested to attend the meeting. This will tend toward harmony and no one will feel slighted by not being asked to attend, for harmony is necessary if the undertaking is to be a success.

Another meeting should be held as soon as committees appointed at first meeting are ready to report, when the whole Association can act on such reports and decide what they shall do.

Nearly all shows now provide coops and feed and care of birds during the show, so a sufficient entry fee should be decided on to cover this cost. Many shows charge just enough entry fee to cover cost, then give no regular cash premiums, but offer as specials anything they can get local merchants and others to donate.

Others charge a larger entry and then give regular premiums. The entries in the popular varieties will be large enough to show a good profit, but this will be used in paying premiums in less popular classes, which do not have sufficient entries to show a profit. These less popular classes must be encouraged, for it will be found that visitors to the show will take more interest in the rarer breeds than they do in the very popular kinds. This applies to what we might term the ordinary people, who do not understand much about Poultry and only take a sort of general interest in them.

The publicity committee should start to work at once to let people know by every possible means that there is going to be a show and keep right at it up to the time of the show, for this tends to bring a large attendance, and without attendance no show is a success, and if you do not have a good attendance you will find many of your exhibitors will not show at your next Exhibition, for it is the advertising value of showing and winning and having people see their stock, that induces breeders to exhibit their birds at the winter shows. Very seldom does an exhibitor receive enough premium money to pay his expenses.

Most Associations figure to make the entry fees pay for the cooping, care and feeding of stock, and the premiums, or where floor space is let to manufacturers and dealers to exhibit their wares, this rent helps to pay premiums. This leaves the rent for hall to be provided for, and this must come out of amount received from admissions, and if there is any surplus to be left in the Treasury after the show, it must come out of these admissions. So it is all important to have a good attendance, for that is what the exhibitors desire and expect and the Association needs.

Simplifying the Score Card

By E. H. Hoffman, La Crosse, Wis.

Inasmuch as there appears to be a difference of opinion regarding the score card system, some advocating that it is the only proper system by which birds can be judged, while others believe the comparison system is the only reliable way, it might be well to make a few suggestions as to what could be done to simplify the score card and make it more valuable to the exhibitor. It is true that the score card as it is now used is not as intelligible to the average person, especially to the beginner, at it might be, because it does not explain the cuts made on the card in the various sections. For instance in looking over a score card cuts will be found ranging from one-fourth to three points. How is the beginner to know why a bird was cut a half point or three points in a certain section unless there is something to explain the cut? While I am a firm believer in the score card system I am of the opinion that there can be some vast improvements made in it, which would make it more popular.

It has been a noticeable fact that during the past few years many poultry shows have abandoned the score card system and have gone to the comparison system of judging. The latter has long been used at the large shows of the country, but recently many of the smaller shows have also adopted it. In most cases the argument put forth is that the score card is not what it ought to be in that it does not give the beginner any information that he could not obtain if the birds were judged by comparison. It is a more difficult job for the judge to place awards by the score card system than it is by comparison because he is supposed to pick the best birds by his score cards and he handles but one bird at a time. Under the comparison system of judging he eliminates all specimens from a class that he can see at a glance are "not in the money" and then he shifts the balance down until he awards the several prizes by comparing the birds. I am in favor of the comparison system but at the same time I do not condemn the score card because I believe if the Standard is properly and intelligently interpreted by the score card that the same results can be obtained.

Now, coming back to simplifying the score card, that is to make it of more value to the exhibitor and especially to those who are just beginning to breed

The cause of nine-tenths of the failures of Poultry Shows to pay their way is this lack of attendance, yet the majority of Associations will put forth most of their efforts toward getting out a good exhibit. This is all very well from a Fancier's standpoint, but is not "good business."

Let every one work to get the people to attend. Run a small advertisement in your local papers, and they will give you a liberal amount of free notices. Have some one who is capable write articles about poultry, and run cuts of some of the rarer breeds in your local papers. This is the very best of advertising. Let the people know about the Show, get them interested, and get them to attend, and your show will be a success, and you will have a satisfied lot of Exhibitors, and another year you will have breeders anxious to show with you.

poultry and do not fully understand the defects of their birds, I believe it can be done by the judge explaining each cut in the column headed "remarks" at the right of the card. Many judges do this. In some sections, for instance they write in the words "ticking," when white birds are found with specks of black, or "creamy" where white birds are not white in under color, or "purple" when a heavy cut is made in the color of black birds. But, as a rule, they do not explain all the cuts in the same manner. Would a score card with full explanations in each section, be of greater value to the beginner and also to a purchaser who is buying a bird on a score card? I believe it would and if a rule to that effect could be made it would be considerable more work for the judge and would place him on record for every cut he makes, but this, I believe, would also have its good effects.

In making cuts for shape what does a beginner understand by cuts as follows on a certain specimen: "Neck,  $\frac{1}{2}$ ; back, 1; wings,  $1\frac{1}{2}$ ; tail,  $\frac{1}{2}$ ; body and fluff,  $\frac{1}{2}$ ?" On the other hand if these same cuts were made and explained as follows it would be of some value to the exhibitor and to the person who desired to purchase the bird on the card: "Neck,  $\frac{1}{2}$  too long; back, 1 long and narrow; wings,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  three tips broken; tail,  $\frac{1}{2}$  slightly pinched?" Should an exhibitor desire to sell a bird on the incomplete score card and he finds a cut of  $1\frac{1}{2}$  on shape of wings, the intended purchaser would not know whether the cut was made for broken feathers or twisted feathers or the wings not being carried correctly or not well folded. He would not know why a cut of one point was made for shape of back or why the  $\frac{1}{2}$  point cut was made for tail shape. It is plain to see how a score card, properly explained, would be of great value to those who intend buying birds on a score card. The same rule applies to color sections in all varieties.

Several different forms of score cards have been suggested by various persons in order to simplify the system and make it more intelligent, but in my judgment the present card as adopted by the American Poultry Association is perfectly satisfactory if the column for remarks is used, but, as I said before it would be more work for the judges and some might object to it on that score, but I for one am willing to use it if it will give better satisfaction.

Announcement, Great Allentown Fair Poultry Show

It will be good news to many that the Great Allentown Fair Poultry Show will be held one week later than usual this year. This will tend to help toward making this show bigger and better than ever this year. In other ways, too, the management has been trying to improve, and there will be offered this year several entirely brand new features in the exhibition of poultry. Among these will be a special department and prizes for pens of farm poultry, open, however, only to bona fide farmers of Lehigh and surrounding counties. The Poultry Futurities, several announcements of which have appeared in the Fancier, also promise to be extremely interesting.

This poultry show has been advertising yearly in the Poultry Fancier the last five years and their advertisement for this year, beginning this issue, will be found on another page.

Premium lists will be mailed all of last year's exhibitors; all others wishing same will please write W. Theo. Wittman, Supt., Allentown, Pa. Ready latter part of July.

AN UP TO DATE ASSOCIATION.

The Columbia County Poultry Association of Bloomsburg Use Novel Plan to Enrich Their Treasury.

That the Columbia County Poultry Association is alive and doing is proven by the fact that they are already working overtime to have the next show, which is held December 3 to 7, far in advance of previous shows.

In order to further the amount of money in their treasury each member of the Association who had pens of fancy birds donated a setting of eggs which were sold at public auction. There was a large crowd of interested persons present and the Association realized a neat little sum.

It is the desire of this Association to soon be able to own their own pens. Many more little schemes will be indulged in during the coming summer and fall and it is to be hoped that they may see their way clear to purchase the coops in question.

Many special prizes have already been secured and many others are to be added to the already large list. Several requests have already been received for the premium lists as soon as published.

From the present indications it seems that it will be a wise thing for the many poultry fanciers to raise a few extra good birds so they may attend this show. There is no doubt but that the different classes will be full and the competition keen. To win at Bloomsburg will be a great advertisement for all who are successful.

The Indian Runner Duck Situation

By Mrs. G. R. Simpson, Owensville, Ind.

Indian Runner Ducks have had much discussion here of late, both for and against, and as a breeder of them for years I feel I can safely give you a bit of information which came to me from experience, which is oft an expensive teacher. I breed the English Penciled, the American Standard Light Fawn and White and the Pure White and of an absolutely White Egg Strain. I advertise all together, but when I say that I have very little demand for English Penciled Ducks or their eggs I have not expressed all. I might say truthfully that if I did not keep them in connection with my Pure White and Light Fawn and White I would keep them at a loss.

English Penciled breeders object to us telling our profits on the American Standard Ducks and their eggs. They do not believe it and brand us as untruthful, etc., but "facts remain."

They deserve our sympathy, because I know as one of them that the demand is very, very poor for them or their eggs and they cannot conceive of the great demand for American Standard and the Pure White Ducks.

The English Penciled Duck has no place in our show room, according to our Standard. Some breeders of them claim there is no white egg strain of American Standard ducks, but, dear reader, do not be misled in this matter, for there are such strains, just the same as there are of the English Penciled White Egg Strain. Hundreds and hundreds of Penciled ducks lay tinted eggs, as also do some American Standard ducks, but the very object of this article is to give you some valuable pointers in your demands, etc., when you buy. I can name you scores of white egg strain American Standard flocks, flocks wherein there has not been a tinted egg for years.

All breeders have not such flocks, though, who advertise "American Standard Ducks, Pure White Eggs." They have omitted the one important word "Strain," which, Webster says, means lineage, race, descent. In other words, "White Egg Strain" means nothing but white eggs clean back on both sides, that is, in the ancestry of both sire and dame, and furthermore it means that the ducks you hatch from these eggs will lay white eggs.

Nine times out of ten the eggs from such flocks which are advertised "Pure White Eggs from American Standard Ducks," with the word "Strain" omitted, will hatch out ducks that will from 1 to 100 per cent. of them lay tinted eggs, regardless of the fact that they were hatched from "Snow White Eggs." The "Snow White Eggs" are convincing proof that the trouble is not in the female but the tinted eggs come through the Drake having tainted blood in him.

The females hatched from these white eggs tell a tale of tinted egg blood by laying some or all tinted eggs, and isn't it reasonable then that the drakes reared in the same flock will be equally as much tainted with tinted egg blood as the females? Right here get the point that these birds were all hatched from "Snow White Eggs." So do not be misled into buying stock for "White Egg Strain" simply because it was hatched from "White Eggs." Now, since I have laid so much stress on the word "Strain" it brings me face to face with the duty of interpreting another advertisement for you. When you see the ad. reading "True Fawn and White—White Egg Strain," "Fawn and White—White Egg Strain," "Pure Fawn and White—White Egg Strain," nine times out of ten means the Penciled duck that lays the white egg. I do not ask you to take my word for these things (yet they are undeniable facts which exist) but you buy stock or eggs from such ads. and see what you get. The same way about "American Standard Ducks—Pure White Eggs." Buy stock or eggs and see if you get white eggs. You might, one case in ten, chance to get such, but I say nine times out of ten it will be as I said above.

There can be no condemnation put on Pure White Runners. They are prolific layers of snow white eggs, and have the type and carriage which is characteristic of the Indian Runner.

The demand is far beyond the supply and will be for years. They are a sport from the other winners and are very profitable to their owners.

I might explain here that American Standard breeders have been forced to advertise in that name or as Light Fawns as a distinguishing feature, so people would know where to get what they wanted and not get the Penciled ducks.

Our supply is so limited of Light Fawn White Egg Strain birds and of Pure White ones that we dare not set a price on stock, but the penciled stock can be bought anywhere for a song. Only a few days back we had a letter from a breeder saying he had been buying all the penciled ducks he wanted at a very low price, and the same mail brought us a check for $10 for one female of American Standard White Egg Strain birds.

It costs as much to raise one kind as another, so you should consider all this article and protect yourself.

As a warning word to those about to take up Indian Runner Ducks: be careful of your foundation stock. Get the Light Fawn and White American Standard bird of Pure White Egg Strain; then you will have something that is always in good demand and that will bring the highest price.

People having such stock dare not put a price on it, and their eggs are in such great demand that only those placing their orders in advance can depend on getting their eggs when they want them.

HOW TO ECONOMIZE ON FEED.

Did you ever read "The Fat of the Land?" It is a delightful story reputed to be founded upon fact. It is the chronicle of the experiences of a retired physician, who accumulated enough money to buy a farm and conduct it along the lines he desired. Incidentally he made a great success, and set down in the book many principles worthy of wider following.

One of those the doctor considered basic was that in feeding dairy cows, the greatest economy was attained in getting the cows to consume all the feed possible. The point is, that if a hundred weight of feed costs one dollar and you can transform it into a quantity of milk worth a dollar and a half, the greater amount of feed you get the cow to eat the more money you will make.

The truth of this theory will apparently vary with its various applications. Certainly the doctor's experience in both dairy and poultry yard indicates that it is well founded. The market poultryman, the cattle feeder, the sheep feeder, the hog feeder, the horse result that feed is wasted and yet the fowl does not get enough food to produce the desired results. The feeder must realize that in egg production, flesh production or milk production, elements in different proportions are required. Furthermore, that egg production from various fowls or under various conditions requires different rations. A growing lamb needs different nourishment than a fattening sheep. It is consequently clear that different rations are important in successful feeding.

Investigations have ascertained many facts to guide the feeder. They have found what elements of food are needed for various purposes. They have also found which foodstuffs supply the different elements and the proportion. From this knowledge feeding has been really simplified and placed upon a more economical basis.

But there is one thing upon which the balanced ration and the palatable ration depends—the thoroughness of the mixing of the ingredients of the ration. In fact, there can be no balanced ration until there is a perfect blend of the ration. To illustrate: if a ton of grain etc. This machine blends the ration perfectly in 1-2 to 1-8 the time required by hand. It is metal throughout and constructed for lasting service. It weighs 1350 pounds.

This large machine is designed for market poultry feeders, dairymen and general live stock feeders. The same principle is used in hand power sizes, of which there is one for every size feeding plant.

Yardley Mfg. Co., Box D, Yardley, Pa., is the maker of this excellent feed mixer. For complete information write for free booklet. If you feed any kind of stock you should get acquainted with Afton Farm Feed Mixers.

feeder—all agree by their own methods that where gain in weight is desired, the greater the consumption the greater the profit.

In acquiring success in poultry or live stock feeding two factors influence the amount of feed fowls and animals consume at a profit. The first is that the ration must be balanced. The second is that it must be palatable. The two are very closely associated.

We wish to impress on our readers that a balanced ration is not an impractical theory. On the other hand it is as practical as anything can be. A balanced ration is neither more nor less than the most economical ration. In other words, it is the feeding of different ingredients in the proportions as needed for specific purposes instead of feeding too much of one kind and too little of another, with the feed were mixed together, consisting of 500 pounds of each of four different kinds of grain, a pound picked up in any portion of the mixture should contain one-quarter of a pound of each kind of grain. Otherwise a quantity for a feed might have twice as much of one ingredient as any other, and therefore, render the ration unbalanced.

In view of these facts, it is fortunate we are assisted in our feeding operations by a mechanical device, which in its convenience alone makes itself a necessity. However, its convenience is the least of its virtues.

The illustration shows a 15-bushel Afton Farm Power Feed Mixer to which we refer. It mixes feed more thoroughly than is possible to do at all by hand. It handles such difficult feeds to mix as beet pulp, brewer's grains,

RULE 17

The Correct History of How It Came About.

There is no doubt of it, the Pennsylvania Branch membership is almost universally in favor of this Rule 17. More than this, the membership is strongly in favor of it.

They endorsed it in no uncertain words at their annual state convention at Scranton, in January, this year.

On the other hand, the writer has had plenty of letters that would indicate that strong efforts are going to be made in the next national convention to defeat this rule. To defeat the entire batch of new and revised proposed Official Show Rules even, if necessary to kill this particular Rule 17.

There has been another class of letters too; in effect, that the writer's policy, in year after year having had employed at his own show, judges connected with poultry papers, was highly inconsistent with his present apparent attitude. There is no inconsistency! The writer early in the history of his management of the Great Allentown Fair Poultry Show had the Fall Association take out a membership in the American Poultry Association. Since the year the latter association has had anything like "show rules" they have been the rules that have governed this show. They were inadequate and poor rules in several respects but there is not an exhibitor or a visitor or anyone that is acquainted with the way this show is conducted and managed who will not fully admit that these published rules were lived up to and enforced to the letter.

In fact, the management has been rather proud of this allegiance and one thing is most certain that no matter what the revised show rules will finally be, they will be the show rules of the Allentown Fall Poultry Show and will be lived up to and enforced to the letter.

Again, as president of a membership that has so emphatically endorsed individually and collectively a principle I consider it a privilege and a duty to see that they get what they want so far as is within my power and as this fight is going to be open and above board, I may as well announce here that when it comes to the new show rules I will be on the ground early and late leave especially no stone unturned to put through Rule 17, and that as Pennsylvania's accredited delegate to the convention, I shall cast its votes solidly for the latter.

The correct story of this rule, little known and never published is as follows: Last summer the Executive Board of the Pennsylvania Branch held a meeting in Philadelphia to transact much important business, not the least of which was to elect a delegate to the Denver Convention. Under the old Constitution of this Branch while it was recognized that the president was a member of the executive board of the national association, it allowed for the election of someone outside the president as delegate.

The writer was elected. Immediately he asked that he be voted instructions, particularly on certain issues, for if he was to vote Pennsylvania's vote he wished to vote it as the membership felt rather than as he felt.

This was partly done. Then Mr. F. O. Megargee moved that the delegate be instructed to bring to pass if possible what is in effect, the present much talked of Rule 17. There was considerable discussion on this, at such length that the hour grew late, several members had to leave and the thing was not brought to a vote. Yet the sentiment was in favor.

At Denver, as chairman of the committee on Revised Show Rules, I brought this rule to the attention of the committee but they would have none of it. The argument was put up strongly that such a section would put in jeopardy the rules as a whole and the section was not put in.

After the committee meeting in discussing the Rules with Mr. Grant M. Curtis, I expressed my regret that this section, my state so thoroughly believed in and another section that I as fully believed in, viz: That only judges whom the American Poultry Association had set their stamp of approval on by granting them licenses to judge should be allowed to interpret the Association's Standard of Perfection at "official" poultry shows.

Mr. Curtis shook his head over both and expressed his belief that the association was not yet ready for these advanced positions but in a burst of generosity offered to present the former if I would present the latter. He did not believe I would do this, but I did and was at once accused by Mr. Cleveland in open meeting of bolting the report and opinion of my own committee and my section was voted down. Then it was up to Mr. Curtis to live up to his bargain and present his section (now Rule 17.) He did this with the explanation of how the joke was on him, how he believed in it, and how he did not believe it would be adopted.

After asking that it be made broader in scope and strengthened, it was adopted with a hurrah.

This is the section (Rule 17), "No person in the employ of a poultry journal or other periodical, in which poultry advertising is carried, or who is otherwise connected therewith, as editor, associate editor, owner, part owner or solicitor, shall be permitted to judge at any shows held under these rules."

The "Official Revised Show Rules" as they stand at present are the recommendation of the Executive Board for regular adoption, after the requisite sixty day notice, at this year's convention as part of the Constitution and By-Laws. They don't belong there. They should be part of the Standard of Perfection.

(Just as the Standard lays down the rules or conditions that govern the awarding of prizes or the degree of merit so it should lay down the rules governing its shows.)

Copyrighted with it and like it be subject to revision only every five years.

CATASAUQUA ASSN. GROWING.

The Catasauqua Poultry Association held a very enthusiastic meeting in Odd Fellows' Hall on May 7th. The spirit of good fellowship ran high and every member was highly gratified over the success the association has achieved in so short a time.

Catasauqua is one of our newest Associations, but the splendid showing they are making bids fair to put them in the front ranks of eastern Pennsylvania's poultry ranks. They have well on to one hundred members, and have been organized but a little over three months. Here is success to you, boys. Crowd the old chariot to the front. You can't help but succeed.

Again Outclass All Competitors

At America's premier exhibition, BOSTON, JANUARY 1912, (where the annual meeting of The American Columbian Plymouth Rock Club was held), in competition with the foremost breeders of the country and likewise the best birds that could be produced, our "ROYALS" on only SIX entries simply out-classed all competitors by winning:

1st cock, 1st and 6th cockerel, 1st pen, 2nd pullet and 3rd hen. The American Columbian Plymouth Rock Club's beautiful specials for best colored male and best shaped male. Frank L. Platt's $10.00 cash special for best cockerel in the class, the Association's silver cup for best surface colored male, and the President's cash special, the greatest of all honors, for the best Columbian Plymouth Rock in the show, male or female.

A grand total of more first prizes than all other competitors combined; more Special Prizes than any other exhibitor and every First and Special Prize offered on males.

This great Championship record stands alone and unequalled—an achievement that has never been approached, where like quality and numbers were represented, by any other Columbian Plymouth Rock exhibitor in the history of the Boston Show, and proves beyond all question of doubt the superiority of our "Royals" and substantiates the fact that they still remain undisputed champions.

Our birds possess QUALITY in every sense that the term implies. Excellent layers, large in size, typical Rock type, fine head points and the clean "Royal" color, free from the smoky, splashed effect in body and fluff feathering that is so undesirable.

EGGS FOR HATCHING

Our breeding pens for 1912 have been mated with great care. They not only contain the sons and daughters of our "Royal" Champions, but are headed by noted sires themselves. From these we will sell eggs at $10.00 per 15 and we urge every Columbian Rock fancier who appreciates extreme high quality to write us before purchasing elsewhere. Other breeders may sell you eggs for less money but we believe the quality represented in the eggs we furnish can not profitably be duplicated at a less price. Handsome catalogue free.

Attention A. P. A. Members

It is the duty of every A. P. A. member in every state of the Union to write a personal letter to their delegate to represent the State at Nashville at the national convention of the A. P. A., to be held at Nashville, where the all important question of Rule 17 will be decided on one way or the other.

We have been told by reliable parties that an effort will be made to defeat Rule 17 through a proxy vote, held by the delegates. We therefore urge every A. P. A. member, every place in every state of the Union, to write their delegates, expressing their views on Rule 17. This is very important and we think it is the duty that every A. P. A. member owes to both sides of this question to write the State Delegate, expressing their individual views openly and plainly and frankly.

By doing this it will enable the state delegates to cast the proxy vote in such a way as will meet the situation, and surely no delegate will vote against the sentiment of his state branch.

We therefore ask every A. P. A. member in the State of Penna., as well as outside, to write the State delegates, expressing their views on Rule 17. Be sure to do this. It is very important, and as above stated, we have been told that Rule 17 will be tried to be defeated by our opponents, by use of the proxy vote, and it is your duty to write your delegate today. Don't delay in writing. It is important. Rule 17 should pass, for it meets the approval of the rank and file of the breeders, we are sure.

Turn on The Light.

We do not think that the subscribers of any poultry Journal are much interested in any differences of opinion or matters of business between different poultry journals. However, it is sometimes necessary and in justice to all concerned that one is sometimes compelled to defend oneself, and we now think this is the case.

The January issue of the Poultry Item went for the writer in a way which we should have replied to at a much earlier date in all fairness to ourselves. However, we remained silent.

They also went at us editorially in the May issue in a very complicated editorial, which not only involved the writer and the Penna. Branch of the A. P. A., and we think it justice to ourselves that we turn on a little light, just a little. (More if necessary.)

Referring to the Jan. editorial, in which they wanted to know if they ever heard of a combination of Editor and Advertising Manager before, and one man filling the same positions, and that this was the year of our Lord, 1912, as he termed it.
We would like to ask the Business Manager of the Poultry Item a question first, and that is, whether he remembers the struggles the Poultry Item had in the year of our Lord 1908.

What poor memories some people must have. The business management of the Item was very glad, and for a Capital reason, that one man should act as Editor and Advertising Manager and then a little more besides. I need not tell you what the Item was Jan. 1st, 1908, when the writer went with it, but it might be well to explain, and it is but justice to us to state that the concern was not financially able to employ an Editor and Advertising Manager, but he had to fill all positions, Editor, Advertising Manager, Subscription Solicitor, Circulation Manager and in the early weeks of the struggle of the Item, actually did write in long hand, addressed envelopes, etc. They could not afford to boast of the luxury of a stenographer.

How well do I remember and how well do thousands of subscribers remember how the Editor worked both tooth and nail for subscriptions at all of the big Fairs and Shows, York, Hagerstown, Allentown and Trenton and scores of others. What did I do this for? To help the publication along financially and to build up the Poultry Item.

Oft times we were compelled to go off on a trip without an expense check, and had to depend on the ability of the writer to get enough subscriptions and money to defray his own expenses and to keep things moving at the office.

The same Editorial policy and the same policy which I pursued then from the very start enabled the Poultry Item to boast of having erected the largest poultry publishing house in the world.
Does the Business Manager of that concern forget so quickly that the resources of the concern January 1st, 1908, were so limited that a certain well known banking official in the town of Sellersville guaranteed the writer's first year's salary, and when the dark clouds arose, this guarantee was cancelled and the business manager, Mr. Althouse, informed the writer that he would have to earn his own salary?

Whether I was equal to the occasion or not the Poultry Item can say and show.
This was within six weeks from the time the writer hit Sellersville. Verily, Mr.
Business Manager, this was the year of our Lord, 1908. Remember it?

And now let us all join in that old familiar song, "The Half Has Ne'er Been Told."

Mr. Business Manager of the Item, do you want the next verse?

I feel proud of the policy which I conducted as Editor and Advertising Manager of the Poultry Item and was never too good or thought myself above the position of soliciting subscriptions.

Again, in the May issue of the Poultry Item we find the following: "How long can even a goat butt against a concrete wall without breaking off his horns?
When the Editor of a paper takes the following stand against the majority of the stockholders he stands out as a Czar in Journalism."

I am glad they are calling me a Czar and am glad that I had the backbone to stand out against the board of directors and the stockholders in defense of my honest convictions.

Shall we tell the people who the stockholders are and how many stockholders ever attend a stockholders' meeting? Who the directors are and who the directors were that attended the Directors' meeting? Shall we go into details, Mr. Business Manager? Enough for this time.

Now, Mr. Business Manager of the Poultry Item, will you kindly advise the readers of your paper who wrote the slandrous Editorial against the Subscription men, in which they were called Tramp Solicitors and in fact everything else that was ungentlemanly and unfair and where one, Geo. W. Tracy, did face your Secretary and Treasurer at the last Grand Palace Show and ascertained whether it was the Editor or the Asso. Editor who had written this?

What did Mr. Tracy discover? He discovered the fact that it was no other than your Associate Editor, John L.
Purple, who had written this. Mr. Business Manager, do you know who wrote the first editorial against the Editor Judges? Was it F. W. DeLancey? No.
Who was it? John L. Purple. Take him to Nashville, Mr. Business Manager.

We would like to get the Business Manager of the Poultry Item to answer another question. Who put these words to one of the Editorials against soliciting Editors Judging, "Shoe-maker, stick to your Last?"

That was Mr. E. E. Althouse, Business Manager of the Poultry Item.

Now we leave it to the subscribers.
We leave it to the readers of the Fancier and Item to settle whether I was justified in going before the Stockholders, who consisted of W. S. Schlichter, John L.
Purple and E. E. Althouse. These were the only stockholders that I ever saw at a Stockholders' meeting of the Poultry Item consequently they were the only directors.
That is what they term a stone wall, and the writer they term the goat, and simply because I made this statement, which I feel proud of to-day, they call me a Czar.
This is the statement: (In view of the above statement and editorial, written by others, and which the writer was responsible for, was I or was I not justified in making the statement to the directors?) "There is no—Absolutely no appeal to my decision in this. Now, it is fully understood, gentlemen, that as long as I am Editor and Advertising Manager
I will not be dictated to by the Business Manager. Can you blame any one in stating that the Item turned turtle in its Editorial policy on the Judging Question?

You helped to write the Editorial articles, so did your Associate Editor, Mr.
Purple, and I backed them up like a man and am backing that same Editorial policy which you sanctioned, but the Poultry Fancier, or F. W. DeLancey will not bend his Editorial policy.

I am backing up Rule 17, the rule which you and your Associate Editor indorsed, but what a difference it makes when a Soliciting Editor is Judge and you mold your policy to the occasion, an occasion which you must admit will mean much financially to you if Mr. Cornman can solicit business at the shows which he judges at. (More if necessary.)

Poultry Item has as much as made the statement that there was no quorum at the Scranton A. P. A. meeting when Rule 17, forbidding Editors to judge, was unanimously passed.

Will the Penna. Branch of the A. P.
A. stand for statements of this kind?

Rule 17 was passed at the afternoon session which constituted the largest A. P. A. meeting that the Branch had, with the exception of the Phila. meeting.

W. S. Schlichter, the Secretary and Treasurer of the Item Publishing Co., was in attendance at this meeting and left Rule 17 unanimously pass and sat there and said nothing. Did Mr. Schlichter make the wrong report to the Managing Editor, or why does Poultry Item question as to whether there was a quorum when Rule 17 was passed?

It is up to the Penna. Branch to state whether they are going to stand for this kind of a report or not.

The Poultry Item further states the following:

Just as sure as the Creator made little apples, if the American Poultry Association heeds the howl of the few and Rule 17 becomes a law, the corpse is ready for interment. They also state, how many of the great shows of this country will for a moment stand for the dictation of the A. P. A. in their show management. Now wouldn't that jar you?

In our opinion, any organization, whether it is the A. P. A. or not, any man who will not abide by the will of the majority is not worthy of being a member and if the different poultry Associations and the different individuals will not stand for the rulings of the majority in any organization it is rebellion, pure and simple, and the paper or magazine which urges a move of this kind is simply urging nothing less than rebellion.

We stand loyal. If rule 17 is defeated at Nashville we will bow to the will of the majority. If rule 17 wins, which we think it will and which we think it should, all well and good. Every other member of the A. P. A. should abide by the rulings of the majority.

The Item's policy of play as we want you to, or we won't play at all, will not go down good, even by their own supporters. We are in favor of the majority to rule and we dare say the majority will rule.

The full history of rule 17 is given by W Theo. Wittman elsewhere in this issue.

I am sorry that I am compelled to bore a great many of the subscribers with this Editorial, which interests but a few, but we believe in justice and equal rights to all and we feel that insinuations in the way of brick-bats which were thrown at us in the January and May issues and knowing that the writer in the four years of his connection with the Poultry Item, left nothing undone, worked tooth and nail, for all they possess to-day.

Verily this is the reward, but as we stated elsewhere in this issue, the half has ne'er been told.

Vote.

We believe that the Poultry Fancier is expressing the views of the large majority of the subscribers and the rank and file of the Poultrymen in advocating the passage of Rule 17.

Elsewhere in this issue will be found a voting coupon and we want every subscriber to the Poultry Fancier to vote on this all important question, no matter whether you are for or against the rule 17. Vote and vote according to the dictates of your own conscience. The result of this ballot will be made known in our August issue and if the vote is favorable, will be used at Nashville in bringing all pressure to bear upon the American Poultry Association for rule 17. If the vote is unfavorable to rule 17 we will publish it just the same. It means much.

Am Sorry Linkey, Sorry.

I am only too sorry that space forbids me to reply to your Editorial in this issue, but after being thoroughly advised that you are perfectly harmless, we may reply to you at some future time, when we haven't so many other important things on tap.

However, it may be well for me to simply state that D. Linkon is now what we would term a man that would be materially affected by the passage of rule 17, for it must be remembered that Linky donned the linen duster last year and bought a judging stick and did actually judge a few chickens and we naturally give Linkey credit for opposing rule 17. It could not be expected otherwise.

Linkey isn't a bad fellow, says Geo. Weed, and we let it stand at that, at least for June anyway.

Fancier is Now 50 Cents Per Year.

Elsewhere in this issue will be seen the advertisement stating that our offer of a four years' subscription and our book, "Down to Date Poultry Knowledge" will be given to our old subscribers for $1.00.

This only holds good until July 1st and we sincerely trust that all of our old subscribers will avail themselves of the opportunity of having their subscription extended for four years and getting the book for one dollar.

We are doing our level best to produce the highest class Poultry journal in the country. Just how near we have hit the mark you must judge, but with the many improvements that are contemplated for the coming season and those which are now under way, we know that it is impossible to produce such a high class Poultry journal at 25c. a year. But in appreciation of the loyal support that you have given us, and all our old subscribers, we trust that you may avail yourselves of this special.

W. Theo. Wittman, recognized as one of the greatest Poultry Show Managers and authorities on Poultry, recently sent out a Post Card to all of the Exhibitors of the great Allentown Fair Poultry Show, asking them to express their opinion for or against Rule 17.

The vote has been taken, the ballot has been cast and the exhibitors at the great Allentown Fair, by more than two to one majority favor rule 17, which indicates they don't want a soliciting Editor Judge at Allentown.

This means much to the exhibitors at the Allentown Fair, comprising all of the foremost Poultrymen throughout the Eastern field, and in fact more than 20 states are represented at the Allentown Fair.

This indicates what the rank and file of the membership of the American Poultry Association think of Rule 17.

This widely scattered vote represents more than the sentiment of Penna. It represents the sentiment of the Eastern field, which plainly shows what the rank and file of the membership would do if it were left to their vote.

As previously written, we believe that if Rule 17 were left to a mail vote of the members of the A. P. A. it would pass by more than two to one majority.

Hughesville will hold a cash prize show this year.

A poultry association has been organized at Bellefonte.

Campuses and Buttercups are knocking at the door of the Standard for admission.

We are advised from reliable information that Link Orr is still at large but perfectly harmless.

No soliciting editor judges at Lititz, Pa., show. Glasgow and Bean have been elected. Who's next?

Does anybody know what is the cause of Dick Oke keeping quiet so long, or is it a calm before a storm?

H. M. Kenner will judge the Rocks at Rochester, and has also been elected to judge the Poultry at Bucks County Fair.

Let the majority rule—see editorial page. Poultry Fancier will cover the same old circuit of fairs. Make our booths your headquarters.

The circuit of Central Pennsylvania shows, with Williamsport, Bloomsburg, Wilkes Barre, Sunbury, Lewisburg and Pottsville is a strong one.

We believe that the men who actually raise chickens should rule and govern the A. P. A. We believe there has been too much editor in the A. P. A.

And still no new standard. Was Teddy Hewes right or wrong when he compared the business methods of the A. P. A. to an empty sardine can?

The cold, late spring has been caused by some journal throwing cold water on Rule 17. However, we think it will be plenty warm enough at Nashville.

The exhibitors at the big Allentown Fair voted almost 3 to 1 against soliciting editors as judges. Wittman says, "Let the majority rule." So say we all.

Fred. L. Ober, of the F. L. Poultry Farm, is having a record breaking season. F. L. has made history on Reds. Continued success, Freddy. You deserve it.

Classified advertisers enjoy the same rights in the Fancier as display advertisers. Our policy of equal rights and justice to all still prevails more firmly than ever.

Oh you Linkey! That was a nice way you offered your service as a judge at New York and Boston. Why not wait until they ask you? That would look better.

Only two more months before the fairs start. Williamsport is working harder than ever for the coming show. The veteran Huston is now President of the Association.

New uniforms have been ordered for the Gander Band. An effort is being made to have them head the delegation opposed to soliciting editors as judges when they stamped at Nashville.

Judge Corey, the well known judge and exhibitor and manager of the Rock Hill Poultry Farm, Ossining, N. Y., has accepted a lucrative position in California. Good luck, Corey, and may success be with you.

Pittsburg Fanciers' Club wants the next meeting of the state Branch of the A. P. A., and in view of the fact that a state meeting has never been held west of the Alleghenies we favor Pittsburg for the next meeting.

Be sure to vote. Are you for or against Rule 17? Vote as your conscience dictates. Coupon in this issue. Everybody vote, no difference whether you favor it or not. We want to determine the opinion of the rank and file.

Rumor has it that when the next A. P. A. election rolls around there will be a strictly breeders' ticket in the field. To this we say "Amen," and it is high time it is being done. Let the editors edit the papers and the chicken raisers rule and govern the A. P. A.

A regular meeting of the Pittsburg Fanciers' Club was held May 2nd to decide on the coops, judges, etc., and also to devise ways and means for a sweep stake so that the small breeder will have an equal show with the larger one. For all the Pittsburg news get the Fancier.

A Few Hours With Men Who Raise Chickens

The Underhill Farms, Fort Ann, N. Y. Morris E. Manley, Proprietor, drove the nail clear into the head the first blow (and I rather guess it was a thirty penny spike at that) in the circular he is putting out under the heading "Not A Story—Just Facts About the Hen." It seems to be a "sort-o' aftermath following closely upon the footprints of his very pleasing catalogue for the season of 1912. However that may be, it just suits our fancy and the Fancier extends congratulations here and now to Mr. Manley for the copy which has just reached our office, and trusts he has printed about 400,000 of these up-to-the-minute-out-from-the-shoulder little circulars to sow broadcast throughout the length and breadth of this glorious old land of ours until it "nocks" off a few of the unnatural growths and hard lumps from the avoirdupois of a few (?) of our ever suspicious and "all knowing" would be "chicken men" until the wrinkles are smoothed out on their "physiognomines" into expressions of confidence and lead them to a saner understanding of their fellow poultrymen. The accomplishment of such a mission would call forth expressions of gratitude from all quarters of the globe, and we assure Mr. Manley that in our humble estimation the results would fully warrant the undertaking. Send for this little White Indian Runner Ducks, both from a utility and fancy standpoint, and are able to supply both stock and eggs that will surely please the most exacting. This plant contains 300 acres of land and is conceded to be one of the best and most reliable establishments in the Empire state. It is situated as Fort Ann, N. Y., about 30 miles north of Saratoga Springs on the D. & H. Ry. It is about 11 miles from Lake George and about the same distance from the far-famed Lake Champlain, and is surrounded by the Adirondack and Green Mountains and is easy of access from all parts of the East. Birds reared under such surroundings in open front houses insure great vitality and splendid development.

We trust that any of the Fancier's readers who are interested in any of the different breeds of birds bred on the Underhill Farms will write them for their Catalogue-Mating List and be sure to request them to send along their special circular. It is Great, and you will be greater for having read it.

pamphlet, my friends, for the perusal of its pages has already added ease to the writer's daily task and "shot its shafts of light far into the coming day." It is with a large degree of satisfaction that we call the attention of our readers to the fact that the Underhill Farms' ad, now graces the pages of the Fancier, and is full of information that helps and encourages the prospective purchasers. The Underhill Farms breed thoroughbred White Orpingtons, Buff Orpingtons, White Plymouth Rocks, White Wyandottes, Light Brahmas, S. C. White Leghorns, Rose and Single Comb R. I. POULTRY SHOW.

The Poultry Exhibition at the Tennessee State Fair, Nashville, Tenn., September 16-21, will be bigger and better than ever. The big Poultry Building will be remodeled and rearranged in such a manner that it will be the best lighted and ventilated poultry show building in the country. Additional coops will be purchased and provisions made for cooping 5,000 birds. The premium list will be made the most attractive ever presented the American poultrymen. A large list of cash premiums will be offered in pens of the various breeds and varieties. The best judges in America will be engaged. The Poultry Show at the Tennessee State Fair is made one of the big features of this great annual agricultural and live stock exposition and from the standpoint of attendance and interest, there is no poultry show on the American continent that can surpass the Tennessee State Fair Show.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

Superintendent John A. Murkin, who has made the Tennessee State Fair show what it is to-day, has arranged for the most beautiful plot of ground at the Tennessee State Fair, and will erect special aviaries and pens for the great "ornamental and water fowl" display. Here out in the open, under beautiful trees, with ample protection and roosting quarters, will be shown the greatest exhibition of ornamental birds, turkeys, ducks, geese, guineas, peafowls, etc., ever shown in America. This will be a separate and distinct show from the poultry, which will be staged in the big poultry building. Mr. Murkin's idea is to give plenty of room to the turkeys, ducks, geese, etc., and to afford facilities for showing the various breeds, in display pens as well as individuals. The birds in this "court" will all be judged the same as others, and premiums paid accordingly.

SPECIAL PIGEON SHOW.

Provision is being made for the largest and finest pigeon show ever held South of the Ohio River. Birds will be shown singly and liberal premiums awarded. The pigeon show will also be separate and distinct from the other shows.

BIG BANTAM DISPLAY.

One of the finest Bantam Shows in the country is the Tennessee State Fair Bantam Show. This year it will be made bigger and better than ever.

COMMERCIAL EXHIBIT.

Owing to the great success of the Commercial Exhibit and demonstrations of market poultry and eggs last year, this department will be continued again this year, on even a larger and more elaborate scale.

POULTRY PRESS.

Everything is wide open and free for the representatives of the poultry press again this year. Come on, boys, and if you don't see what you want, ask for it.

For premium lists, entry blanks and further information, address

PHILADELPHIA SHOW—1912.

At the annual meeting of the Philadelphia Poultry Association, held March 20, the following officers were elected: President, Henry D. Riley; Vice-President, Frank E. Gilbert; Treasurer, C. C. Kempton; Secretary, Wm. H. Moore, Room 902, 437 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

It was decided to hold the next show at the First Regiment Armory the week of December 10-14. This is the same building where the most successful show ever held by the Association took place three years ago. It is centrally located, in a part of the city where a large attendance is always assured. As in former years, many Specialty Clubs have signified their intention of holding their annual meetings in connection with the Show and a strong list of Judges has been selected to place the awards. For all information in regard to the Show address the President or Secretary.

PRES. HICKS VISITS SELLERSVILLE.

On Monday morning, May 26th, we were all busily engaged in the Fancier office in handling the usual routine work, when we looked out the window and noticed a long, lean, lanky form coming up the street that we all recognized at once. It was no other than our worthy President of the A. P. A., Reese V. Hicks, of Topeka, Kansas.

Reese walked right in, made himself at home, feels good and stated that the A. P. A. was never in a more flourishing condition. Of course, this we all know, for under the able administration of Pres. Hicks the A. P. A. has taken such rapid strides forward that he has possibly made more history in the first 12 months of his administration than his predecessors have in two or three years.

Elsewhere in this issue will be found the report of the A. P. A. election which shows that President Hicks was elected by one of the nicest majorities that any President has ever received.

Of course, we all know that Poultry

Fancier and Penna. stood for their favorite son, T. F. McGrew, and when he withdrew from the race, of course, we all agreed that there was no better than Reese V. Hicks.

After leaving Sellersville Reese went down to Atlantic City and we hear he had a deal of a time, taking in the sights on the midway.

We understand on good authority that the price of many a good subscription was blown in foolishly on the pier and taking in other side shows.

It is stated that with his long, lean form he made one of the nicest appearances in a bathing suit that has ever been seen on the beach for the past years.

Call again Reese. Stay longer. Penna. isn't a bad place, and we will always try and take good care of you here.

JUDGE F. W. COREY GOING TO CALIFORNIA.

The many friends of Judge F. W. Corey, well known manager of the Rock Hill Poultry Farm, Ossining, N. Y., will regret to learn that he is moving to California about July first.

Corey has accepted a very lucrative position on the Pacific coast. Full particulars will be announced in a later issue of the Poultry Fancier.

We hate to lose Corey from among us. He has proven to be one of our most popular and efficient judges and an exhibitor at the big shows.

He will be missed as much as an all around Poultryman by New York State as he will be appreciated by California, and we dare say that Corey would leave nothing undone to bring the Poultry Industry of that state to its full extent.

He has the best wishes of a host of friends and we all join in saying good luck to you, Corey. What more could we wish?

The Capital Band

BRIGHT OUTLOOK FOR POTTS-TOWN.

The Pottstown Poultry, Pigeon and Pet Stock Association held one of the best meetings of its history on May 14. The boys were out in good numbers and everything looks bright for the future. The Association is planning to purchase its own show coops and decided to give cash premiums to all successful exhibitors in the future, instead of cups which, we believe, is a very wise decision.

The Association took favorable action concerning membership in the A. P. A., fixed permanent dates for future shows and attended to a large amount of other business, preparatory to the coming winter's exhibition. Enthusiasm ran high and the outlook for the Pottstown association is very flattering indeed. They have the right men in the right place and success must naturally follow. Our best wishes are with you, boys.

Wack's S. C. W. Leghorns

To make room for my young stock I will sell about 75 yearling hens of my famous heavy laying prize winning strain. About 30 of these are ribbon winners at such shows as Allentown Fair, Coatesville, Phila., etc. In lots of five or more at $2 each. H. C. WACK. C-n-hohocken, Pa.

Belle Brand Crushed Oyster Shells

Make Poultry PAY!

Tests show where these shells have been used—duration of test 22 days—number of eggs, 33; weight of eggs, 1459.6 grammes.

Where Sharp Grits were fed—test 22 days—number of eggs, 6; weight of eggs, 257.6 grammes. This is convincing argument why every poultry house or yard should have them. They'll make hens lay an egg a day, with firm, hard shell—less liable to break in shipment.

Belle Brand Crushed Oyster Shells supply Carbonate of Lime in natural form and acts as a grit, making them superior to any other poultry food on the market. Write for Free Catalogue to LOUIS GREB, BALTIMORE, MD.

NEWTOWN

"Giant" Incubators and Brooders

are doing their full share towards making poultry raising on a large scale pay their users. No guesswork or uncertainty about it. They work in harmony with nature, causing chicks to be hatched and brooded in a perfectly natural, healthy way under all conditions, at all times.

Note Mr. Taylor's letter to P. A. Keppel, a big successful poultryman, and Mr. Keppel's reply, giving his experience with the "Newtown":

Mr. P. A. Keppel, Paradise, Penna.

I understand you have a Newtown "Giant" Incubator. Would you tell me candidly if you consider it satisfactory? Will it hatch as good as and as many chicks as a lamp incubator? (Signed) H. W. TAYLOR.

Mr. H. W. Taylor.

Your favor of the 8th to hand, and in reply beg to say that I have one 6,000 Newtown "Giant" Incubator, also one large Brooder house with 26 "Newtown" Adjustable Hovers in it.

I have had the best of results, both from the Incubator and the Brooder. You ask whether the "Newtown" will hatch as good as lamp incubators.

Yes, it will. Further, it will do better, for the reason that the chicks hatched in the "Newtown" Incubator are much stronger than those hatched in a hot-air lamp incubator.

This spring I ran several hatches from a 240-egg ..... Hot Air Incubator. While it hatched about as many chicks as the "Newtown," they were not as strong and did not grow as well. More of them died than those hatched in the "Newtown." I think well enough of the "Newtown" after running it for two years to install another next winter. I will put in one of their 10,200 Incubators in addition to the 6,000 one which I now have. (Signed) P. A. KEPPEL.

Paradise, Penna., May 8th, 1912.

Very many other big poultrymen are getting as good, even better, results with the "Newtown" RIGHT NOW. Install the "Newtown" in your plant and be sure of the greatest success.

Send for catalog L, telling you "why and how" the "Newtown" hatches and raises you big, strong chicks and ducks—the livable kind.

Its The Shots That Hit the Mark That Wins The Battle

Attention Classified Advertisers !!

A 30-Word Class Add
3 Mo. for $2.50 6 Mo. for $4.00

Let us reason together:

Poultry Fancier is published in the interests of the men who raise the high grade standard bred birds, which is the foundation of all pleasure and profit in Poultry raising.

It is read by people who are willing to pay the price of the real fanciers product and skill. It is read by the people whose ideas of Beauty are not alone based upon pounds of flesh, and dozens of eggs.

A circulation that will not pay the price of a setting of eggs, or a good bird is worthless to you. You are spending dollars in trying to hit a mark beyond your range.

But how many are paying for this kind of a circulation? Is it any wonder they say advertising doesn't pay? Who is to blame? The circulation of the Poultry Fancier represents the cream, and we sell it to you without buying so much milk, (by the milk I mean circulation that will not pay the price.)

It's the shot that hits the mark that wins the battle, and there is a buyer for every good bird that's raised, and for every egg that's laid.

The circulation of the Fancier is the demand. Can you furnish the supply? During the next three months, our thousands of readers will spend mans thousands of dollars for stock and eggs, and for the price of a setting of eggs, we will insert your Add, 30 words, three times for $2.50.

Come reason together, and remember, every one of Poultry Fanciers subscribers is interested in Poultry, and after all (in advertising). It is the shots that hit the mark that wins the battle.

Now is the time. Send your add in right now to

Why Don't You Get Eggs?

By J. L. Helpman, Freedom Station, Ohio

Forty years in the poultry business and testing all kinds and 22 years with the use of trap nests. We will stand by the Leghorns. In 1905 we imported Buff Leghorns from Italy through a friend, and they are larger than the American Buffs, and by a cross with our U. S. Buffs we have a large fine Buff under color and golden Buff, and by the use of trap nests we have got the 240 egg record efficient feed, but no eggs. Well, he said, I will go out of the biz. I went in the hen house, took my hook and commenced catching the fowls until I had 12 hens and pullets. Then I examined them and from the first one to the last one the lice were eating up the fowls and he was feeding the lice, and no eggs. No wonder. He took my advice and to-day he is shipping 50 dozen eggs to New York strain that lays the large white eggs. A good many doubt this, but we have the papers and the trouble is those fellows don't know the game.

They are mortgage lifters and the demand is great. Talk about size! They have the long body shape and we have cockerels weighing 5½ lbs. They make fine broilers. They are shipped even to Brazil. We had a man who got 300 eggs to start an egg farm. Well, he sent word to me to see why his pullets did not lay and his hens. He said he gave them suf-

City, getting his 40 cents for fresh white eggs the year round.

As a rule a Buff Leghorn will moult very fast and in less time than others we have had. The hens keep a laying right along. Pullets at the age of four months and five days laid their first eggs. They are the business fowl of the world. It's a beautiful sight to see a flock of those golden Buffs, and they take the eye of every person and after you have given them a trial you will always keep them, for they pay for their keeping if they are given the right kind of care. Keep the lice down; oil your roost once a week; clean your hen house.

Don't let some person tell you or make you believe that there is not one hen in this world that can or will lay 240 eggs inside a year; for there are hundreds of them, even White Orpingtons, Rocks, Reds, Minorcas and White Leghorns. These people are behind the times. They don't read up. If you are in the business to win, to make it pay, you must read up poultry literature and take all the leading poultry journals. Roll up your sleeves, put your thinking cap on and experiment a little yourself, and you will win. Buy the best you can afford; get Quality first and Quantity afterward. You may be a beginner and don't know what to take for a breed. Well you may ask a fancier. He will praise his breed simply because he likes it. The point is, will they pay and leave a profit? You must find a good laying strain from a fancier who uses trap nests. He knows he has the goods; he has the papers. You get the breed and the trap nests and you can by and by show your friend the papers. Look at the great poultry farms—Fishel's, Kellerstrass's, Punderford's, Young's, Knapp's, Bernham and McClare's.

These men have made the business a success by standard-bred fowls; not utility fowls, and they have the fowls that lay the eggs and pay for their feed, with a profit besides. Cast away your dogs, start your boy to-day. Get him a poultry paper and a few chickens in your back yard so you can get your own fresh eggs when you want them and your boys and girls will be in good company and will make a few cents besides, and the tax on the dog you can spend for feed for your chickens.

Great ALLENTOWN Fair POULTRY SHOW

Allentown, Pa., September 24, 25, 26, 27, 1912

Has the reputation of being the best conducted and best managed poultry show in America. Fair play there is an ideal and an actual fact. Plan to show there this year. Premium list ready in July.

ADMITTEDLY THE GREATEST DISCOVERY OF THE AGE.

Oculum, Beyond All Doubt the Greatest Boon to Poultrymen.

If ever poultrymen the world over could fully realize the actual merits of Oculum in the Poultry Yard, as the writer does, we predict that the Hancock Inoculum Co. would be compelled to tripple its office force, the size of its offices and the extent of its manufacturing establishment, for in all of our 22 years experience in raising fancy and utility poultry Oculum pre-eminently ranks first, last and all the time. We scoured the country from time to time endeavoring to secure a really reliable remedy for White Diarrhoea in little chicks, but our efforts proved futile until we secured a trial bottle of Oculum. That settled the matter at once and from that day, which was over two years ago, until now, we have had no serious trouble from that dread disease. But the above is only a partial statement of the benefits derived from the use of that wonderful remedy, for every chick we inoculate matures more rapidly than the others and at nine or ten weeks of age will weigh any where from one-half to three-fourths of a pound more than chicks that were not inoculated, when raised right in the same brooder, and under exactly the same condition as those that were inoculated.

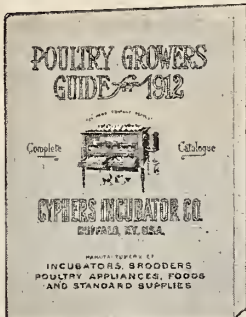

As a remedy for Roup, Swelled Heads and Chicken Pox, as well as Cholera, we have never found anything to compare with Oculum. It certainly has the right-of-way on our Poultry Plant in preference to all other known remedies and people visiting our plant often remark about the vigor of our breeding stock and the wonderful growth made by our chicks.

The advantage obtained in the earlier maturity of chicks through the use of Oculum will amply reward anyone for any expense or labor connected with its administration, not to mention any of the other wonderful results that are always sure to follow.

We have found that by the use of Oculum practically all diseases are eliminated from the Poultry Yard and the hundreds of dollars that in the past have been posted on the debit side of our ledger could have been deposited to our credit had Oculum been discovered and placed before the Poultry public years before it was. In our estimation it is one of the greatest discoveries of the age, and we feel certain that when its merits are more widely known it will receive the unequalled indorsement of the whole Poultry Fraternity.

We are personally acquainted with Mr. Mc Clung, President of the Hancock Inoculum Co., Salem, Va., and know he is perfectly reliable and able to substantiate every claim made concerning the merits of Oculum by the Hancock Inoculum Co. A full page ad. of testimonials from more than satisfied customers as to the benefits they have derived from the use of Oculum will be found in this month's issue of the Fancier. Read it over carefully. What it has done for others it will surely do for you. A trial order will surely add your name to its great list of Friends.

"TYCOS" ELECTRICAL ALARM THERMOMETER.

It is probable that no improvement on artificial incubation ever received such favorable reception as awaits the "Tyco's" Electrical Alarm Thermometer.

It is common knowledge to all poultrymen that the maintenance of even, regular temperature of approximately 103 degrees F. is the first essential of successful hatching. To hold the temperature in the egg chamber at that point has ben the strife of chick raisers since the invention of the first incubator. Incessant examination of the thermometer was the first method, and at the best, unsatisfactory. Frequently, the incubator was totally forgotten until too late.

If the temperature fell below the desired point little injury was done. Nature has cared for that exigency, but Nature did not take into consideration excessive heat, because there was not natural possibility for it. The result has been that the per cent. of hatches has been greatly reduced because of the frequency with which the chick embryos have been baked.

To avoid these hazardous results various sorts of thermometers have been devised, principally the expansion of metals. Such apparatus has been usually impractical because of the difficulty of making it strong enough and at the same time sensitive enough to perform its work accurately.

Cold logic plainly showed that personal attention could not be eliminated from the process of artificial incubation. Something was needed to direct this attention at the time it was needed—at the time danger was approaching. The "Tyco's" Electrical Alarm Thermometer was the invention long waited for.

HOW IT WORKS.

The apparatus hinges entirely upon the thermometer in the egg chamber, so that the instant the temperature exceeds 103 degrees F. a bell will ring, signaling danger. The bell may be located any place desired.

A "Tyco's" Thermometer rests on the eggs as shown in the illustration. To it are attached the wires that lead out through a small asbestos twine packed hole to the dry battery under the incubator. From the bottom the wires may lead to any point where the bell is to be located. As the operation of the bell depends upon the thermometer, it is necessary to have an absolutely reliable instrument.

Any one can easily install the entire outfit. It will pay you to put one in your incubator.

SWEEPSTAKE AT PITTSBURG FANCIERS' SHOW.

The Pittsburg Fanciers' Club have decided to have a sweepstake at their next show, Feb. 1913, on single birds. This is done to encourage the small breeders and not put all prizes on best display, as nearly all shows do at present.

This is an advance step and one which means hundreds of more exhibitors to the Pittsburg Fanciers' Club show.

TESTIMONIAL FOR HANCOCK INOCULATUM CO.

To the Hancock Inoculatum Co., Salem, Va., Gentlemen:—It is with pleasure I write you concerning the wonderful merit of "Ocnlum." I have used it for the past two years for White Diarrhoea in little chicks, Roup, "Kanker," Chicken-pox and Swelled Heads in adult fowls and have found this wonderful remedy to be even more meritorious than your claims. Since using Ocnlum the once dreaded disease of White Diarrhoea in baby chicks has lost its terrors to me. By inoculating my little chicks when taken from the incubator and again when they are about two weeks old, I can raise practically every one of them. Two or three applications will cure the worst cases of chicken-pox we have ever seen, while swelled heads and roup are as easily eradicated. We consider "Ocnlum" the greatest of all poultry remedies and congratulate you for giving to the poultry world such a priceless boon.

Yours truly,
F. D. Sutton.

Mr. Goette comes to the office very highly recommended, and there is every promise that the Club will continue in its present satisfactory and progressive condition.

BIDDY AS THE POET SEES HER.

The mopy, dopy, sluggish hen
Is unfit for any breeding pen.
Give me the busy, snappy bird
Unlike the drones, we oft have heard,
One that lays like a gatling gun,
To care for her is only fun.
But the fat and sleepy, sluggish thing,
Who's been bred for ages for a perfect wing,
She can do naught to help your purse
And hurt your sales, which is even worse.

No good foundation can she give Nor help you much to honestly live;
But disappointment will she bring
If you look for aid from her this spring.
Her chicks will meet an early demise
And you will shun her use, if you are wise.
For the only hen that has ever paid
Is the thoroughbred biddy that laid and laid.
There are many fowls that win the prize
That lay lots of eggs, this is no surmise, Positive proof, if you wish, can be had
Of hens that do both, win and lay, egad;
Now past experience will be our future guide
And by convincing facts and truths we must abide.

She must come from a family of layers
For there are none others that have ever proved to be payers.
Nature's laws are difficult to change,
Hence the reason of giving free range,
And her natural roost is in the tree at night, Therefore see to it that her house is not tight.
Give Mrs. Biddy plenty of air and exercise And a variety of wholesome food if you are wise,
Not forgetting the streams that flow
For Biddy is often thirsty you know.
Yet even the good layers must have care and attention
Or the results of your efforts will be early suspension.

You cannot grow beets from turnip seed Neither can you get eggs without any feed.
Be fair to the hen and she will be fair to
you
Providing she's from a strain that's been tried and found true.
The old saying "blood out of a stick" you know
This applied to the hen is doubly so.
Then what avail to oppose the inevitable
When only the breed to lay will give a basketful.
The hen's first duty to every man
Is to lay all the eggs she possibly can.
But if bred to show and for no other reason
She gives mighty poor profits at hatching season.

Work without pay is hardly expected
And to avoid this do as we have directed,
Buy all your eggs to hatch from a reliable source,
One where the facts and truths are told without force.
Where the chicks all hatch with a snap and a bound
Now this place can be easily found.
The address will be given on this page, right here
And the result of your dealings will be good,
have no fear,
And your start with chickens, if that be so,
Will give you plenty of eggs, in time, we know.
And your chances are the best for a prize winning flock,
Just as sure as the year rolls round by the clock.

A White Orpington or a Buff, if you please,
They thrive in confinement and the most fastidious tastes appease.
The broad breasted Wyandotte, who is graceful and stout,
Commands great respect as he struts all about;
The Rhode Island Red and the White and the Blue
May be held in favor and appeal to you.
If you're not satisfied may we add
That the Leghorn fowls are no fad;
And so variety is spicy and still you look,
For the grandest fowl in all the book.
The grand old Brahma heads the list
And to pass them by, much we would have missed.
As the demand is great for the White Rock kind
They may be your choice then a customer we'll find.

Write us, at once, if it's business you mean
And our attention to your wants will be quickly seen.
Courteous treatment and fair dealings to all
Was our motto adopted upon the first ca'l.

Edgemont Poultry Farm

We have just received the 1912 catalogue from the Edgemont Poultry Farm, W. O. Chase, Prop., Hillsboro, Illinois, and have read it over very carefully. To say we were greatly pleased with its contents inadequately expresses our appreciation of the same. It is simply uniqueness itself and we wish to congratulate Mr. Chase on its general make-up from cover to cover. It is a gem of the first water and worthy of a very conspicuous place in the private library of any one who appreciates a happy blending of usefulness and beauty. The history of the Edgemont Poultry Farm reads more like romance than actual History, but we take pleasure in assuring all our readers that every word it contains is based upon facts that have existed or are still being fulfilled on the Edgemont Poultry Farm. The secret of the splendid success Mr. Chase has achieved in the poultry world can be summed up in one brief statement, viz.: the right man, the right methods, at the right time, in the right place. Mr. Chase is a "natural born" poultryman, he enjoys that profession above all others. It stands out preeminently, with him, above all other professions. To us that characteristic is the chief index to success in any "walk" in life. Again, Mr. Chase employs the most honorable methods in all his business transactions. A square deal is assured to every one who trusts their hard-earned dollars to his care, and no more convincing evidence can be produced to substantiate the above claim than that the majority of Mr. Chase's old customers are still adding to his bank account and their own satisfaction by sending in repeat orders for more stock or hatching eggs. Mr. Chase breeds Rose and Single Comb Black Minorcas and Rose Comb Brown Leghorns, and the popularity of these breeds are becoming more and more pronounced every year when bred up to standard requirements, as they are on the Edgemont Poultry Farm. The Little Brown Hen that so many people thought was "Shelved" years ago is to-day one of Mr. Chase's best selling birds, and the amount of business he has enjoyed during the past year in Brown Leghorns alone, is very remarkable indeed, while his income from Black Minorcas, in both stock and eggs, is really beyond Mr. Chase's highest anticipation. With Mr. Chase the winning of prizes at poultry shows has become an old story, and when he enters his birds at any poultry show "he does so with a feeling of security" for he is well aware of the fact that his birds are as good as the best, the whole country over. It is impossible for us to give a full list of Mr. Chase's winnings in the great show rooms of the country and it would be useless for us to do so if we could, for both he and his birds are well known wherever quality has become the "watchword" and many of the high productions of his matings grace the poultry yards of other noted breeders. Mr. Chase is carrying a very attractive ad. in this issue of the Fancier. Look it up and be sure, if interested in either Minorcas or Leghorns, to write for his catalogue. It is free and you cannot but appreciate Mr. Chase's generosity in presenting you with such a splendid work of art.

The April issue of the "Poultry Fancier" is a crack-a-jack, just full of good chicken meat. F. W. DeLancey, the editor, is surely making his word good, when he said he was going to make it the leading journal of the day.

Cunningham Farm

Cunningham Egg Farm, J. Leroy Cunningham, Prop., Indiana, Pa., R. D., No. 3, has one of the best equipped poultry plants in western Pennsylvania. Mr. Cunningham breeds the best in White Wyandottes, S. C. White Leghorns and Indian Runner Ducks (Fawn and White) and guarantees every order he sends out to his customers to be exactly as recommended, and the Fancier stands back of Mr. Cunningham's guarantee, which ought surely to satisfy every reader of this journal who favors Mr. Cunningham with a portion of their business that they are dealing with an honorable and upright gentleman, who has their interest at heart as well as his own. The Cunningham Egg Farm is located in one of the most charming and interesting sections of western Pennsylvania and is equipped with every modern appliance necessary to insure health and well developed breeding stock and a high fertility of hatching eggs. The hatching capacity of this plant is 5100 eggs at one time, with brooding capacity of 3000 chicks. It has winter accommodations for 1500 head of laying and breeding stock, together with colony houses for 1000 head of young stock. Mr. Cunningham has one White Wyandotte hen that has a record of 277 eggs in 12 consecutive months and 361 eggs in 17½ consecutive months. This is most wonderful, indeed, and we doubt very much if even a Leghorn can be found anywhere in the country that will equal or at best surpass this splendid achievement. The blood of this remarkable hen has been diffused through his flock until most of his birds to-day are her descendants. But this fact is not all our readers ought to know, for Mr. Cunningham has not forgotten the exhibition of his birds, for wherever he has entered his birds in show-room competition he has carried away more than his share of the most coveted prizes. We desire to compliment Mr. Cunningham on his remarkable achievements in the poultry industry in so short a time and predict that in the near future this plant will occupy one of the most unique and influential positions of any utility and fancy poultry plant in the East. Mr. Cunningham's S. C. White Leghorns and Indian Runner Ducks have been bred along the same high standard as his Wyandottes and any one who may be interested in any of these popular breeds will certainly receive the face value of every dollar they commit to Mr. Cunningham's care. Look up Mr. Cunningham's ad. in this month's issue of the Fancier. It certainly "rings true" and its "Index finger" certainly points the way to success.

A CHANCE FOR SOME ONE.

We have just received a letter from F. L. Ober, Verona, Pa., the man who made such remarkable winnings on Reds at the great shows of the country, stating that he is going to let go a large number of good breeding birds that would help some one a great deal.

Everybody that knows F. L. Ober knows that when he makes a statement of this kind he means just what he says.

We are pleased to announce that Mr. Ober will again be superintendent of poultry at Pittsburg Fanciers' Club show next Feb. With the effort that the Pittsburg boys are already putting forth for their next show we are inclined to think that some record breaking stunts are going to be accomplished.

Now is the time to order Baby Chicks and eggs for hatching from our Standard Bred Prize Winning Stock.

THE POULTRYMEN'S OPPORTUNITY, ATLANTIC CITY SHOW—JULY, AUGUST AND SEPTEMBER.

The announcement of an annual International Summer Poultry Exposition at Atlantic City, to be conducted by The Poultry Item during the summer of 1912, has aroused such universal interest that its success is already assured. And why should it not? Can you picture in your mind a more ideal place than the Million Dollar Pier, out in the ocean, with millions of people to view the poultrymen's offerings?

It's the first poultry show held on the ocean; it's the first that will surpass in attendance, the combined crowds of all poultry shows in the U. S. A., in an entire season. The average daily admissions taken on the pier show that the attendance is 40,000. Atlantic City, in the summer season, entertains a floating, new population of 150,000 to 175,000 daily. Will we interest new people in the poultry business? Will we?

If you know an Atlantic City crowd you must know they are interested in everything that happens, no matter how trifling. But this show is no trifling affair. It is to be one of THE attractions at the shore this summer. You can help to make it so, help promote the industry in general and your own business in particular.

THE BIG MEN COMING.

Many of the world's best breeders will be there. It does not take them long to grasp the advantages presented. The world's leisure class, with money to spend, will be your audience. You will be a poor salesman if you cannot land some juicy orders. We could give you some inside information on prospects for sales but when we claim that world's records will be broken we have gone as far as we dared. No rash promises will be made here.

We believe you can see the proposition without blue prints. If you are from Missouri or any other place where doubting Toms grow, we are ready to show you.

20,000 SQUARE FEET OF FOWLS.

The concession of 20,000 square feet is a valuable one. We are going to show our faith in the business possibilities by an agreement to have our editor, Mr. Charles T. Cornman, make the sales for you on a ten per cent. basis. This includes his attendance, office on the pier, distribution of your advertising literature, etc. Doesn't that indicate confidence? If you personally attend and make sales, there will be no charge except the fee for space you may need to display and yard your birds.

BIRDS WILL BE SHOWN IN PENS.

The idea of a summer show is a new one, of course, especially a show of such long duration. We have looked into it from all sides and find that display pens, four females and one male, nicely cooped, with a run, will not only help make the show attractive but will give the birds necessary room for exercise that the long showing will require to keep them at their best. If birds should go out of condition, permission is granted the exhibitor to change them as often as necessary.

THE COST OF DISPLAY SPACE.

The minimum charge for space for the season, June 24th to September 24th, three months, including care and keep is $25.00. This gives you a space four feet by eight feet. No decorations are included, nor is the cooping very elaborate. The birds will be comfortably housed and protection from the elements is excellent.

Many breeders will want to display their own birds in their own way. Go as far as you like. Buy as many $25.00 concessions as you will need to build your coop and to set it

A SCIENTIFIC CURE FOR FOWLS.

Modern science has kept well abreast of the wonderful strides taken in the Poultry Industry. With the intensive growth and development of this most important branch of production, there has been great activity in seeking the means to insure largest profits by keeping the fowls in good condition. One of the most successful curatives known in this connection is Oculum.

Oculum takes advantage of the widely known successful principle of inoculation. It goes to the very root of the difficulty. It renders the blood safe against the attacks of such germs as have for years caused great disaster among fowls. It not only cures but like vaccination it prevents. Roup, Cholera, White Diarrhoea and Sore Head are the leading ailments the Oculum overcomes. Furthermore by putting the blood in condition this remedy is also said to increase the yield of the fowl.

Endorsed by many of the leading poultry fanciers, this remedy is rapidly coming to the front. It is very economical. Oculum is manufactured exclusively by the Hancock Inoculum Co., Salem, Va.

His new address is Cochranville, Pa., Chester Co., Route one.

Mr. Ginder is a down to date poultryman and intends to go into the Poultry business and fruit business on a large scale. His advertisements will be omitted from the next few issues of the Poultry Fancier, but Mr. Ginder states that he will be with us and have something to interest all our readers in August or September.

The Poultry Fancier extends its best wishes to Mr. Ginder and we feel positive that with his thorough knowledge of poultry and the fruit business he is going to give to Pennsylvania another prominent poultry plant.

I Bring

I Bring Only
15¢ per Lb.

The caponizing of chickens is a very ancient custom, the practice being general two thousand years ago. In comparatively recent times Columbus doubtless ate them, and Shakespeare writing of the Justice whose fat belly was "with good capon lined," grew hungry for the delectable dish as he wrote.

It is pretty well settled that if a practice of this kind persists century after century there is something in it, and, Mr. Chicken Raiser, believe us, that "something" is money. Capons are easy to make, easy to care for, easy to sell at good prices.

Remember that it is the first few pounds of chicken that cost most to feed. Remember that the capon's only interest in life is to grow big and fat. He is a bird of one idea; he has no side issues; he dreams of neither love nor war; just stays 'round to grow and make money for you.

If you will do your part he will do his, and yours consists of writing to Geo. P. Pilling & Son Co., 23rd & Arch Sts., Philadelphia, Pa., for a set of instruments and a book of instructions. If you would rather sell fat capons at a very high price than thin, long legged, tough roosters at a very low price, write to-day.

RHEUMATISM

A Home Cure Given by One Who Had it

In the spring of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know, for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy, and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally, I found a remedy that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bedridden with Rheumatism, and it effected a cure in every case.

I want every sufferer from any form of rheumatic trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. If, after you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of curing your Rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar, but, understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when positive relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write to-day.

HERMITAGE HOTEL.

Headquarters A. P. A. Convention, Nashville.

The Hermitage Hotel, recently completed at a cost of over a million and a half dollars, has been designated as American Poultry Association Headquarters, during the Convention to be held in Nashville in August. The Hermitage Hotel is situated on the corner of Sixth Avenue and Union Street, six blocks from the Union Station (take any of the up-town cars) and one block from the State Capitol, where the Conventions of the Association will be held. It is one of the most elegant and elaborate hostelries in the entire South, and its equipment and service is equal to any hotel in the country. Being centrally located, all the prominent department stores, business houses, banks, theatres, etc., are within a few minutes walk. Nashville also has a number of other fine hotels—the Tulane, the Maxwell, the Duncan, Bismarck, Savoy—all located near the heart of the city. Take any of the up-town cars from Union Station for any of these hotels, which are all on or near the car line. Nashville has ample accommodations in the way of hotels for the largest size conventions.

DARKEY LIFE IN THE SOUTH.

To-day and Fifty Years Ago Will Be

Depicted at A. P. A. Convention at

One of the entertainment features at the Nashville Convention of the American Poultry Association, planned by the committee, will be "Darkey Life in the South" to-day and fifty years ago. The entertainment will be given in two parts, the first part consisting of a programme of entertainment by some of the college students, including the famous Fish Jubilee Singers. The second part will be a plantation and levee scene, introducing cake-walking, barn-dancing, and other scenes familiar in the South before the war. The entertainment, which has not been arranged in detail as yet, will be under the personal supervision and directorship of Mr. E. L. Doak, who is Chairman of the Reception Committee. All who know Mr. Doak's ability in this line of work know that the entertainment will be one of exceptional interest, Mr. Doak himself at one time having starred before the American people with great success. The entertainment will no doubt be greatly enjoyed by the members from the North, East and West, who have never had an opportunity of visiting the South. Cotton pods will be used as souvenirs on this occasion.

A Genuine Rupture Cure Sent on Trial to Prove It Don't Wear a Truss Any Longer

After Thirty Year's Experience I Have Produced an Appliance for Men, Women and Children That Actually Cures Rupture.

If you have tried most everything else, come to me. Where others fail is where I have my greatest success. Send attached coupon to-day and I will send you free my illustrated book on Rupture and its cure showing my Appliance and giving you prices and names of many people who have tried it and were cured. It is instant relief where all others fail. Remember, I use no salves, no harness, no lies. I send on trial to prove what I say is true. You are the judge and once having seen by illustrated book and read it you will be as enthusiastic as my hundreds of patients whose letters you can also read. Fill out free coupon below and mail to-day. It's well worth your time whether you try my Appliance or not.

Pennsylvania Man Thankful

Mr. C. F. Brooks, Marshall, Mich.
Dear Sir:—Perhaps it will interest you to know that I have been ruptured six years and have always had trouble with it till I got your Appliance. It is very easy to wear, fits neat and snug, and it is not in the way at any time, day or night. In fact, at times I did not know I had it on. It just adapted itself to the shape of the body and seemed to be a part of the body, as it clung to the spot no matter what position it was in.
It would be a veritable God-send to the unfortunate who suffer from rupture if all could procure the Brooks Rupture Appliance and wear it. They would certainly never regret it.
My rupture is now all healed up and nothing ever did it but your Appliance. Whenever the opportunity presents itself I will say a good word for your Appliance, and also the honorable way in which you deal with ruptured people. It is a pleasure to recommend a good thing among your friends or strangers. I am,
Yours very sincerely,
JAMES A. BRITTON.
80 Spring St., Bethlehem, Pa.

The above is C. E. Brooks, inventor of the Appliance, who cured himself and who has been curing others for over 30 years. If ruptured, write him to-day.

Recommend From Texas Farmer

Brooks Rupture Appliance Co., Marshall, Mich.
Gentlemen:—I feel it my duty to let you, and also all people afflicted as I was, know what your Appliance has done for me. I have been ruptured for many years and have worn many different trusses, but never got any relief until I got your Appliance. I put it on last November, but had very little faith in it, but must say I am now cured. I have laid it away—have had it off for two weeks and doing all kinds of farm work with ease. While I was wearing it, I had lagrippe and coughed a great deal but it held all right. Words cannot express my gratitude towards you and your Appliance. Will recommend it to all ruptured people.
Very sincerely,

Child Cured in Four Months

Brooks Rupture Appliance Co.
Gentlemen:—The baby's rupture is altogether cured thanks to your Appliance, and we are so thankful to you. If we could only have known of it sooner our little boy would not have had to suffer near as much as he did. He wore your brace a little over four months and has not worn it now for six weeks.
Yours very truly,

ance do not give one the unpleasant sensation of wearing a harness.
7. There is nothing about it to get foul and when it becomes soiled it can be washed without injuring it in the least.
8. There are no metal springs in the Appliance to torture one by cutting and bruising the flesh.
9. All of the material of which the Appliances are made is of the very best that money can buy, making it a durable and safe Appliance to wear.
10. My reputation for honesty and fair dealing is so thoroughly established by an experience of over thirty years of dealing with the public, and my prices are so reasonable, my terms so fair, that there certainly should

Others Failed but the Appliance Cured

C. E. Brooks, Marshall, Mich.
Dear Sir:—Your Appliance did all you claim for the little boy and more, for it cured him sound and well. We let him wear it for about a year in all, although it cured him three months after he had begun to wear it. We had tried several other remedies and got no relief, and I shall certainly recommend it to friends, for we surely owe it to you.
Yours respectfully,

be no hesitation in sending free coupon to-day. I send my Appliance on trial to prove what I say is true. You are to be the judge. Fill out free coupon below and mail to-day.

Ten Reasons Why You Should Send for Brooks Rupture Appliance

1. It is absolutely the only Appliance of the kind on the market to-day, and in it are embodied the principles that inventors have sought after for years.
2. The Appliance for retaining the rupture cannot be thrown out of position.
3. Being an air cushion of soft rubber it clings closely to the body, yet never blisters or causes irritation.
4. Unlike the ordinary so-called pads, used in other trusses, it is not cumbersome or ungainly.
5. It is small, soft and pliable, and positively cannot be detected through the clothing.
6. The soft, pliable bands holding the Appli-

Cured at the Age of 76

Mr. C. E. Brooks, Marshall, Mich.
Dear Sir:—I began using your Appliance for the cure of rupture (I had a pretty bad case) I think in May, 1905. On November 20, 1905, I quit using it. Since that time I have not needed or used it. I am well of rupture and rank myself among those cured by

Central Pennsylvania Chicken Chatter

Any news notes or items of interest pertaining to poultrydom in Central Pennsylvania, will find a place in this Department. Address all communications to James T. Gluston, Williamsport, Pa.

Bellefonte, Pa., will soon have a Poultry Association as a movement is on foot to organize the poultrymen of that section. We predict that with the many wide awake chicken cranks of that vicinity such an organization will be a grand success.

Last year's Show at Lewistown, Pa., was a hummer. Now, boys, wake up over there, and come back strong. You started right, and your second annual should double your entries. Keep the ball moving.

With such men as Kahler, Posten, Dimm and others, Hughesville, Pa., will make itself known on the Poultry Show map. Seldom has a show been gotten together in such a limited time as was their first attempt last winter, and met with such a success. Surely these men have the proper spirit and are the kind of fanciers we should appreciate.

Let us hear from Lock Haven. If our memory fails us not a movement was started last winter to organize an association. This surely would be a good town to put on a poultry show.

Sunbury, Pa., surely is fortunate in having a goodly number of fanciers. Their four shows of past seasons have proven the fact that they know how to do things at Sunbury. We trust that the dates will be good ones and that the entries may be larger than ever.

Penn Yan, N. Y., chicken cranks will turn out in force at Williamsport during Thanksgiving week. The York State boys intend to show to a man, and will fill a car of York State winners. This is the spirit that makes a fancier proud.

Bloomsburg, Pa., will once more show how things are done at Bloom. In looking over the list of officers we are convinced that something will be doing at this winter's exhibition. Such men as Johnson and Johnson, Pensyl and others are the real thing in Poultrydom. By the way, we hope, that the dentist who pulled the "Stubs" for Boyd Johnson did not disqualify him. Boyd is one of those fanciers whom it does one good to meet on the trips around the different shows. More such men as Boyd are wanted in every Association.

Williamsport, Pa., Show Dates, Nov. 27, 28, 29 and 30th, Thanksgiving week. This is practically the big try-out show of the East. With such men as Schwab, Burgott, Nixon and Brown as judges a great entry will be brought out. Everything is working smoothly, committees hard at work and every effort being made to make this, the 5th annual, one of the greatest exhibitions of the season of 1912-13.

Write Geo. P. Stryker, Sec'y., and tell him to list you for a premium list, which will be mailed you Oct. 1st.

"Judge" Whitehead, one of the progressive "cranks" of Williamsport, has perhaps one of the most complete city lot poultry plants to be found anywhere. "Judge" says he has some "good ones" growing, too. Hats off, "Judge."

Mae Dawson, the Poultry Feed and Supply man, of Williamsport, and one of the most active men in the Williamsport Association has taken up Barred Plymouth Rocks. Mae has placed two Buckeye Portable Houses on his large Vallant lot and is in the fancy deep and strong. Mae says he knows he has a problem on hand, but intends to breed good ones. Look out for Mae.

"Diddy" Holmes now lets the automobile stand idle while he is deep in the study of the latest Standard of Perfection. "Diddy" is now at the stage where he knows the difference between a Light Brahma and a White Wyandotte.

A. A. Swartz, the popular Treasurer of the Williamsport Association has added a large breeding house to his already complete plant. Albert don't say much, but usually comes up at Show time with some Reds that always win.

The Williamsport Association enjoyed a lunch at their May meeting. It is this social feature of the Williamsport Association that has made it such a help to the fanciers of Williamsport.

PHOTOGRAPHS WANTED.

In the Pennsylvania State Museum this state has, at Harrisburg, a splendid state museum. Its exhibits number many of great educational value, including a collection of some thirty thousand lantern slides for free loan, under certain restrictions, to anyone within the commonwealth. These slides are all catalogued and enough slides for an evening's public lecture or entertainment on almost any one subject can be obtained.

There are also many collections of photographs mounted on swinging panels, showing various agricultural and manufacturing interests. But both in these and in slides poultry is almost unrepresented and much of what there is is not calculated to arouse enthusiasm.

There are just as many good poultry farms in Pennsylvania as there are, for instance, stock farms and these farms should be represented as well as the latter, so that visitors to the museum from all over the State, from all over the United States and for that matter from all over the world may get an adequate and true idea of the poultry industry of the state.

Solely that poultry may be both fairly and finely represented the writer will volunteer his services for the summer months in getting together a large number of good poultry pictures of Pennsylvania poultry interests to be turned over to the uses of the State Museum. He would therefore ask that anyone having one or more good photographs of a poultry farm or plant, big or little; of a poultry house or houses; of a poultry appliance; of a flock or of a single specimen to send to the writer.

It is preferred that the photos be unmounted, but if mounted send them anyhow and in all cases write on each the subject, the owner and the place. It will not be undertaken to return photographs unsuitable or impossible to use, but it is agreed they will not be diverted to other uses.

If you have any good poultry photograph or photographs don't fail to send them. In the form of a slide they may reappear on a hundred screens to delight and instruct thousands of people of your state.

CHICKEN PROFITS.

With eggs at 50 cents retail and dressed chickens higher than ever before in the history of the chicken business the poultry raiser may well look forward with satisfaction to the opening of the spring season.

Are you prepared to get your share of the golden shower?

Are you prepared to treat any symptoms of disease arising in your flock?

Do you realize that every time you buy a good sized chicken that you inter about one dollar and fifty cents of good money?

Do you realize that there is more money for less work in raising capons than in any other form of poultry raising?

Write G. P. Pilling & Son Co., 23rd & Arch Sts., Philadelphia, Pa., the easy to use canon tool people for their books on the "Treatment of Poultry Diseases" and "The Caponizing of Chickens."

Mary Wilkins Freeman makes one of her characters say "Chickens allers die in debt."

Yours won't if you consult the firm of Pilling.

LITITZ, PENNA. OFFICERS.

The Lititz Poultry Association is one of the oldest associations in the country and has elected the following officers for 1912: Pres., Wm. Rapp; Vice Pres., W. B. Oehme; Sec., Wm. E. Fashaucht; Assist. Sec., C. B. Haverstick; Treas., D. G. Whitmyer; Super., J. F. Leisey.

A letter from the Secretary states that every member is working harder than ever this year to make the coming show the best ever held in Lititz. That is a broad sweeping statement, for Lititz holds one of the best shows in Penna., not only in quality, but in size and will have, with the hard and intelligent work that it being put forth by every one they are confident of a show that will outdo all previous efforts.

The two well known judges, Glasgow and Bean, have been selected and it might be well to draw the readers' attention to the fact that no Editor Judges will be at Lititz. Of course the Fancier congratulates them on this step.

Watch the columns of the Poultry Fancier and they will keep you well advised of the doings of the Lititz Association, as well as all matters of interest of the Poultry Industry throughout that territory.

THE POTTSVILLE SHOW.

The Pottsville Poultry Association has elected the following officers: Pres., Dr. J. O. Bearstler; first vice Pres., S. Pritchard; 2nd vice Pres., Dr. C. M. Palmer; Sec. & Treas., J. W. Beck; Assist. Sec., O. J. Aregood; Executive Committee, Geo. W. Beddall, Wm. Carpenter, Dr. G. R. S. Corson, Thos. Cockill.

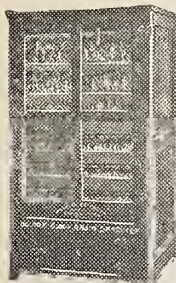

Their second annual show will be held the first week of December, 2nd to 7th inclusive. This association last year held a very successful show, having over 900 birds in competition and paying over $700.00 worth of prizes.

Poultry Fancier will keep you well informed as to the doings and events of Poultry Circles in and around Pottsville. We advise all our readers to keep their eyes on this section, as their coming show promises to be one of unusual importance. TO MEMBERS OF THE AMERICAN

EGGS WORTH $1.00 APIECE.

To many this may seem an exorbitant price yet it is a very common price for thoroughbred eggs now-a-days. The hen that laid the golden eggs in the fables of our childhood days surely has plenty of competition now. Needless to say, the cackle of the dollar egg hen is sweet music to its owner's ears.

Strange as it may seem, the layers of dollar eggs are among the best and most persistent to be found. The reason is simple enough—it's all in the feed. While the chickens themselves have much to do with the output, man is not powerless to increase or decrease the quantity. Chickens with little food lay a correspondingly small number of eggs. Give them plenty of grain and table scraps and they will lay much better. But give them properly ground green bone and vegetables as well as a reasonable amount of grain, and the output of eggs is phenomenal. The raisers of dollar egg hens were not slow to realize this. You will find very few without a good green bone cutter. They know how it increases their profits.

One of the most popular bone cutters among thoroughbred as well as utility stock raisers is the Crown Bone Cutter. While made of the best material throughout and does perfect work, the price is surprisingly low. We are sorry that space will not permit a detailed description of this machine. ## RHODE ISLAND REDS

How to Breed and Judge Them
By THEO. HEWES

Is the Best and Most Complete Treatise Ever Published on this Great Variety

There is no breed so widely advertised to-day as the Rhode Island Reds and no breed in which there is such a wide difference of opinion as to what constitutes perfection.

"RHODE ISLAND REDS; HOW TO BREED AND JUDGE THEM"

is better than the

because it goes into detail and describes every section, with numerous illustrations, showing ideal and defective shape and color, thus making scoring so simple that any one can understand. Some sections have four or five illustrations showing the several defects that may be found in them, with the proper discount for the same as applied by our leading judges.

Size of Book 11½x8½ inches, Contains over 50 pages, including cover, which is printed in three colors, and all on good half-tone paper. PRICE $1.00

In addition to this most complete series of articles on scoring, there are numerous articles from America's foremost Red breeders on every phase of Red breeding. This book tells you just what you want to know. It tells you how to mate your pens; how to grow your chicks; how to select your show birds; in fact, it tells you how to grow, exhibit and make money out of Reds.

This book is sold on approval. The price is $1.00, and dear reader, if you are not satisfied with your bargain, send us back the book and we will refund your money.

BY THE WAY

By H. S. Babcock, East Providence, R. I.

THE poultry shows are a long way off? Don't you believe it. They begin in September and July is already here. Two months or thereabouts and the poultry show will be with us.

What are you going to do about it? Of course you will exhibit, but don't you think that it is time you began to get ready for the exhibition? It takes time to properly prepare your birds, and, instead of it being early for the work, it is rather late to begin. The beginning of the fitting should have started with the first meal fed to the little chicks after they were removed from the nest or the incubator where they were hatched, for the first step in the preparation of birds for the show room is to render them tame.

No bird will show to advantage which is wild. I have seen some beautiful birds well worth the highest honors, exhibited in such a state of wildness that the judge simply had to pass them by. Had these birds been properly tamed they would have easily won the prizes for which they competed. When a bird is wild the most natural thing for it to do as a person comes along is to plunge to the back of the coop, seeking some place to escape from his presence; and a hen bird does this, with its head near the floor in the back of the coop, and its tail elevated and its fluff the most conspicuous and almost the only feature in view, a judge finds it difficult to pass upon the symmetry or to gain any adequate idea of the merits of the specimen, and, if the work has not already been undertaken, it should be no longer delayed.

It is not difficult to tame chickens. Perhaps the most important thing to do is never to make a sudden motion when among them. In feeding put the food down gently and as near to you as the chickens will readily approach, and stand quietly by as they eat. The next day put the food down closer to you and do as before. If you are quiet about this, it will not be long before the chickens will crowd about your feet. Then by degrees get them to allow you to stroke them. At first they will be shy but little by little the shyness will wear off and the time will come when they will seek to be stroked. But remember this can never be accomplished if your movements are sudden and hurried.

But it is not enough to have the chickens fearless of you. A chicken which will eat out of your hand may be very wild in the presence of a stranger. Fowls are naturally suspicious of those whom they are not accustomed to see. It is, therefore, desirable to put the specimens intended for exhibition in a show coop and keep them there a day or two at a time. While in the coop let other members of the family go with you at first and go without you later and look at the cooped birds. They, too, should at first be quiet when they visit the birds, so as not to alarm them, but after a time should look and talk about them as they would about specimens in a real poultry show.

But it is not enough to tame the birds; they should be trained. This puts the finishing touches upon the education of an exhibition bird. The coop, used for taming, may be used for this purpose. It should have a front of perpendicular rods, and the top, which should be high enough to enable the bird to stretch to his utmost extent and not touch his comb, should be made of horizontal rods. When the bird is cooped, every time you go near him introduce some tidbit, like a piece of lean beef for example, through the rods at the top of the coop and hold it so that the bird will have to stretch up to reach it. After a time the bird will associate your presence with the tidbit and assume an erect attitude on your approach. The same may be attained by taking the bird from his coop—assuming that he has been properly trained—and stroking the front of his neck gently with your hand. You can make the bird pose in his most attractive attitude and retain that pose for as long as it would be of advantage.

But taming and training are only for the purpose of exhibiting to the best of advantage the characteristics which the specimens possess. You cannot make a show bird out of a scrub by taming and training. The show qualities must be there to start with.

Many birds fail to win because they do not possess the requisite size. From now on it should be the aim of the breeder to develop his birds so as not to have them fall short in weight. To this end the sexes should be separated and the birds fed with the purpose of promoting their growth and development.

They should have a good run, have plenty of good sound grain, some meat, access to grit and shells, so that both bony structure and its covering of flesh, skin and feathers may be provided for. Later on, say about two or three weeks before the exhibition is to be held, the birds should be weighed, and those deficient in weight should have for drink sweet milk, to which has been added sugar or molasses in the proportion of a heaping teaspoonful of sugar or a level tablespoonful of molasses to an ordinary teacupful of milk. This addition to the previous diet will help them to put on weight rapidly. I have added from a half pound to a pound in the weight of a Plymouth Rock cockerel in about ten days by using the sweetened milk with the regular diet.

Before feeding specially for weight, see to it that the birds are free from vermin. It is a safe practice to thoroughly dust them with some good insect powder, using a kind that leaves no stain on the plumage, whether you see any lice or not.

I have found it of advantage to confine the birds for about two weeks before the show, in a show room, the floor of which has been covered to a depth of two or three inches with clean, light-colored sand. This room should have but little light—a sort of twilight. With colored specimens no further cleaning of the plumage is necessary, and with white birds the plumage will come out pretty clear, but washing may be necessary. Kept in this way, the yellow tinge in white plumage is reduced to almost a pure whiteness, the color of the shanks is improved, and the ear-lobes on birds, which have ear-lobes, are much benefited.

The shanks should be carefully examined before putting birds into this semi-darkened room. The shanks should be thoroughly washed, and, if there is any sign of scaly legs, the shanks should be anointed with lard or vaseline. This should be allowed to stay on for twenty-four hours, and the shanks should then be washed clean and again anointed, and this process should be continued until all signs of scaly legs have disappeared.

If white birds are to be washed the usual directions of providing three tubs of water should be followed, in the last tub a little blueing being dissolved. But beware that the quantity of blueing is not too great, for too much is worse than none at all. The beginner is apt to overdo this part of the cleansing process. I remember only too well the first experience I had in washing white Javas. When my birds were dried out I had some of the nicest specimens of indigo blue Javas that eye ever looked upon; none of your so-called blue fowls, which are really slate-colored, but the genuine blue that you see in the summer sky or on the first harbinger of spring, the blithe little blue bird.

Just before sending the birds to the show sponge off the combs with sweet-oil diluted with an equal part of alcohol and wipe dry; also moisten very slightly a cloth with the same preparation and wipe off the shanks and toes. There should be only a suspicion of oil left on the shanks and toes, because more than that will cause the dust and dirt to cling, and the last condition of the birds will be worse than the first.

If one discovers in a colored bird a tendency to have white where the plumage should be black or dark brown, the use of iron in the drinking water—either in the form of tincture of iron or sulphate of iron—will often enable nature to restore the lost color. Of course this should be given some time before the show, for nature takes her own time to remedy her defects.

So, too, if one finds that a fine fowl has a twisted feather or a feather or two not of the proper color, these feathers may be removed some weeks before the show, and sometimes new ones that are perfect will be grown in the place of those that were defective. Some slight injury may have caused the defect, and nature, given a chance, will overcome it. But this is not always the case, and such birds should be carefully examined before sending them off to an exhibition, and, if the defect has persisted, they should be summarily rejected.

Birds must be shown in their natural condition, that is, as nature intended them to be, clean, well groomed, but not faked. Avoid faking, but everything, which can be done honorably to better their appearance, should be done. In the above hints the writer has sought to steer clear from faking, and to point out honorable methods of putting birds in a condition to show to advantage the characteristics which they possess and have derived through breeding.

The Coming Fowl. (Ancona)

By John Hornett, Swissvale, Pa.

WITH respect to all other varieties of Poultry, poultrymen have their fancies as in any other line of life. Some men prefer a white chicken to a dark one, others vice versa. Some prefer a large fowl to a small one. Some prefer a single comb to a rose comb fowl; and if questioned, all put up a good reason for their choice. But considering all poultry alike what does the fancier keep them for? The only answer is, for their laying qualities. The eggs that a hen lays in a year loom up more in her keeper's mind than her beauty, and still beauty is wanted in many cases. Fanciers then should not overlook the coming fowl, "The Mottled Ancona."

The Ancona has had a hard struggle of it to get to the top but she is slowly succeeding, and once she reaches the goal she will be a fixture, for she is without a fault in poultrydom. Her chief assets are beauty, laying ability and her value as a general purpose fowl.

Anconas are known but very little to what they will be in a few years, throughout the United States, on account of their having been only imported from England a few years ago. Some claim they are a descendant of the Leghorn, but they are mistaken, as the Ancona is a much larger fowl than the Leghorn. The Anconas originated in the town of Ancona, Italy, some 20 to 40 years ago. In color they are dark, evenly mottled with white, and one well known poultry judge advises that there should be a white speck on every fifth feather, and undercolor a deep dark. Eyes, combs and wattles are red, ear-lobes are white or creamy, beaks yellow, and their legs are yellow, mottled with black, which in all makes them a beautiful fowl. They come in both combs, single or rose. Their weight averages as follows: hen, from 4½ to 6½ lbs., and cock, from 5½ to 8½ lbs. They are very healthy, and owing to the fact that they are great exercisers and workers, they are not as expensive as other fowls, as one can keep 5 of them on the feed it requires to keep 3 of the other varieties. They are not greedy fowls, will never over-eat, hence no danger of becoming crop bound. They would much rather scratch for their feed than to be handed it and if allowed free range will provide for themselves. They make an excellent table fowl, their flesh being yellow and tender. Chicks mature very quickly and are generally healthy little fellows. Some people claim Anconas are wild fowls, but they are mistaken as they will eat from one's hand and make the best of pets. The most important of all is their wonderful laying ability. They are non-sitters. Pullets commence laying at the early age of 4½ to 5½ months, if properly cared for, and will continue the coming winter, spring, summer and fall, until molting time, then commence laying again, and continue regularly from that time on, and the average egg record of an Ancona hen is from 250 to 270 eggs per year. They need no egg making dope as same mostly injures them. They are layers and they prove it. What more does a person want? Their eggs are white-shelled and very large. City people should keep them as they stand confinement well. The whole fact of the matter is they are unsurpassable in every respect.

The only draw back to the Ancona to-day is the fact that they are unknown, not popular enough. Their closest egg rivals are all well known and popular, but inside of a few years, when the Ancona, which is one of the best fowls in the world, is known the other varieties will have to broaden out and give them a place in the front row. The chicken which repays her owner, the magnificent, honest Ancona, cannot be kept down among the would-be poultry any longer, but will soar high, if not higher, than the best of them.

Hot Weather Care of Fancy Stock

By J. E. Willmarth, Amityville, New York.

THE utility poultry keeper's idea in hot weather is to keep his stock with as little trouble as possible. He disposes of his birds as advantageously as he can, except the few he wishes to keep over until the next season for breeders.

With the breeder of Fancy Stock, conditions are different. After the breeding season the call for eggs is past and there is but little call for stock, and what are sold at this time have to be let go cheap to induce the people to buy as they think they will have to hold them until the next Spring before they can get any returns on their investment, unless they purchase show stock for the fall shows, etc., although such purchasers are generally in better shape and will carry these birds over better than the breeder, as they have room and give them extra care. Where the breeder is generally crowded, with his young stock coming on, and with the exception of his very best breeders, it is generally best for a breeder to let his birds go at a smaller figure than he could get later in the season. But such breeders have to sell the birds as they have call for them, and generally have more or less stock on hand for sale. Such birds must be kept in good condition, so that they will be satisfactory to the purchasers when they receive them; then also the stock that the breeder wishes to keep over for his own use must come through in good condition, as he wants to show them and breed from them the next season. So it is more than just a question of carrying them over until the dull season. The sooner the males can be taken away from their mates the better for the latter. With extra choice males it is best to give each one a small individual house and run, although if one wants to take chances of having a choice bird put out of show condition he can let them all run together. As to the safety of this method, much depends on the birds themselves. If they are persistent fighters the majority of them are likely to be ruined for show purposes, but as a rule the American and other similar classes of birds are of a peaceful disposition and can be safely yarded together, if not too closely confined. If some of them are quite evenly matched in fighting ability and persistency there may be serious trouble, but if one cock is quite a "scrapper" and can boss the others and keep them "cowed down" there will be practically no fighting, and such a flock of males will get along quite peacefully and are better off than when housed and yarded separately. Of course, they must be kept from seeing any hens, and have a fairly large run with several bushes or other shelters into which to retreat, and also hide the view so that they will not all be in each others' sight all the time. Two or more runs opening into each other makes a good place for such males. Thus part of them are not in view of the rest of the flock, the idea being to keep them contented, having nothing to excite them, such as the sight of hens, and not in each other's way too much so that they will not "get on each other's nerves." This season I have an extra "bossy" cock, and have ten cocks and yearling cockerls running together, and have had no fighting, for the "bossy" fellow does not bother the rest as long as they are quiet, but as soon as two start to ruffle their feathers at each other he goes for them, and they are so scared that they forget all about the quarrel.

As soon as breeding season is over the hens should be placed on free range, or if this is not practical all the runs should be opened into each other and hens all let run together; or one run may be dug up and planted to Oats or Rape, and as soon as a few inches high the hens may be let run on this and another run shut up and planted and the hens given the run of this as soon as large enough, and thus proceed with each run. Thus the hens will have green food and each run will be freshened in its turn.

Plenty of fresh water must be provided for the stock all the time, also shade of some kind must be provided, if not naturally then artificially, such as a heap of brush or some boards or burlap over a frame.

They should also be provided with cool roosting quarters. If your hens are obliged to sit all night with their wings spread out and gasping for breath these hot, sultry nights you should provide cooler quarters at once. Where one has dropping boards an opening in rear of building under this platform will provide a circulation of air, but the roosting platform will keep the direct draught off the stock. This is only for very hot weather and a tight fitting door must be provided to shut up these openings as soon as nights begin to get cool, late in Summer. Much will depend on the style of building as to just how they should be ventilated, but provision for a circulation of air through the house all night should be made. Just having the windows on one side open is not sufficient, but at the same time the stock must be kept out of a direct draught.

Comfortable housing, comfortable runs, plenty of green feed, and water and a fair grain ration will carry your birds through the Summer in fine shape.

The Organization of Poultry Integrity.

THE integrity or moral soundness of an organization is the final measure of its success and its possibility of usefulness and long life. Of no organization can this be truer than of a nationwide one of reputable men and women banded together to advance the interests of a great national industry. We have such an organization in the American Poultry Association that could well take, at this stage, for its watchwords, "Honesty" "Uprightness" and "Integrity."

Moral tone has never hurt any organization. It has never hurt any organization worth living to demand that its membership subscribe to a high standard of moral ethics! It cannot hurt a national organization of poultry people! Again, good morals are good business, as is being recognized in most other lines of human affairs to-day.

When a committee was appointed to revise the official Show Rules of the American Poultry Association said committee tried faithfully to draft a set of rules that would regulate and encourage the exhibition of fine poultry. They found that poultry show rules generally were made to govern and regulate exhibitors and that the other two elements making a show—the association and the judges—were virtually a law unto themselves. Hence the new rules embodied such sections as would compel poultry show associations to pay their premiums, to pay them within thirty days; to pay for fine birds that were lost or died as a result of their carelessness or unfitness; to close entries day and hour they advertised they would close, etc., etc.

Likewise various sections were inserted, embodying rules governing judges. They were in future, for instance, to refuse to judge any bird they recognized as having once been owned by them, they were required to personally mark and sign the record of their awards and also a certain class of men were entirely forbidden to officiate as judges.

These things were right, these things were just, these things would make for better poultry shows, for larger poultry shows. These things would make for the organization of integrity in the exhibition of poultry; would make for confidence among the people at large in poultry shows; would make for a class of shows free, in the judging, of taint and commercialism, would make for true sportsmanship.

Too long had the men, without whom no poultry show is possible, the exhibitors, stood for rules that regulated them and let the rest do as they pleased—a sort of taxation without equal rights.

WHAT WAS DONE AT DENVER.

Hardly had the committee on Show Rules made their report at the Denver Convention before its support and far-reaching consequences had been recognized and a demand was made that the report be taken up section by section. After one or two sections had been gone over there was a further demand that the whole be put in print so that each member of the Executive Board might have word by word before him, and thus be able to act and vote intelligently. A recess was taken so that the report—the rules—might be printed. Then at least half a day was spent by the Executive Board on these rules and as finally passed they were ordered to be put in shape by the secretary as a recommendation of the Executive Board to the American Poultry Association as amendments to its Constitution and By-Laws, to take the place of the old rules.

Note the words in italics: "The new show rules are the recommendation of the Executive Board of the American Poultry Association." There was present when these rules were under consideration for half a day the president, the first vice-president, the second vice-president, the secretary, eight (as I remember it) of the nine executive members of the Executive Board and with few exceptions all the branch presidents of the various State Branches, who by virtue of their office, are members of the Executive Board. Note the words in italics again, because practically everyone of the half dozen people who have had the temerity to attack a certain clause in these rules has tried to give the impression that this clause—the so-called Rule 17—was being foisted on American poultry people by one or two men.

If they have not meant this or if they have not said this then they have been casting discredit and slinging mud at the men that the members all over the country in a national and state sense have honored and trusted.

Another thing: the Executive Board in general adopted the report of the committee on Show Rules but in a few instances went further and inserted sections of their own. Rule 17 was such a section. More than that, the Executive Board, in theory at least, believed to represent the sentiment of their people, enthusiastically welcomed* this Rule, appointed a special committee to draft it and passed it without a dissenting vote.

RULE 17 A GOOD RULE.

Rule 17 must be a pretty good rule. If not, then the members have elected to office and seated men that are a hugh joke.

The writer, as president of the Penna. Branch, felt that the people of his state were in favor of such a rule and as their representative felt he was in duty bound to act and vote as his people wished. To do differently would be to be unworthy of his office. How he felt privately in a different capacity made no difference.

However, he is first of all an American Poultry Association man. He believes most strongly that said Association, if it is ever going to be of great value, must stand for something; must stand for principle, and enforce said principles. How can it respect itself or be respected if it cannot do this? In this connection, a few have made much of the claim that certain men and certain shows would never stand for Rule 17. These men and the managers of these shows have not, to my knowledge, publically said so themselves; others are merely saying it for them. Very well! If the American Poultry Association is not bigger than any one man or show or group of men or shows, then it is time for it to disband, or eat humble pie. There is also some "holler" as to too much "progressiveness." If progressiveness means standing for a principle; if it means standing for the right; if it means the American Poultry Association standing for something, then some confess to being "Progressive." Loud demands come from this very class, too, that proof be shown that poultry press judges are crooked.

There have been poultry press judges judging here every one of the seven years I have been in charge. There was no complaint and no crookedness. If there had been I should have felt it my duty to show them up. I would not have liked to do this but I would have done it anyhow. But apparently some have been crooked at other shows.

That they were not shown up and shown up promptly has been unfortunate. This agitation against poultry paper judges would probably never have sprung into life if this had been done. As it is, the dog has got a bad name and there seems no remedy but to kill the dog. Nothing so hurts a show or hurts the exhibition of poultry, and hence the poultry business, as lack of confidence. This exists the strongest in the small breeder and the beginner. It is often groundless and without reason, but it exists. It prevents this class in large measure from exhibiting. It is responsible many times for their quitting the business. It is responsible in large measure for the fact that what is the disgrace and the stumbling block of the poultry business is true:—that the average life of the poultryman as such is less than three years. Lack of Confidence.

REMOVING A STUMBLING BLOCK.

And it is not so much because of specific and high-handed instances of crookedness by poultry judges that Rule 17 is demanded as this:—that with such a rule in existence a great stumbling block will be removed. It does not look right for a man to pass judgment on birds when his bread and butter depends on the amount of advertising he secures or the dividends his paper pays. It does not look right for a man in a duster to solicit business for his paper. It creates many a sore spot behind a smiling face. It hurts the business. It hurts the show. It hurts (poultry press men will pardon my frankness) it hurts the papers. When exhibitors have a chance to vote, under cover of a confidential communication (as they had for Allentown Fair Show this year) whether they want poultry paper judges or whether they don't want them, they vote three to one they don't want them, it is strong proof that the foregoing is correct.

The twenty-five per cent. above have their rights and in the absence of a rule against it, any show member of the American Association can employ a poultry paper judge. It is silly to claim that if Rule 17 is adopted at Nashville that poultry paper judges' engagements for shows, previous to its enactment, will have to be cancelled.

And it is even more silly to claim that certain parties are working to have Rule 17 a law so they may have more judging engagements. The particular slur, so far as the writer is concerned, is foolish, as he can show that he has refused at least fifty engagements to judge within the year.

To claim that with poultry paper judges out there won't be any good judges left or that there won't be enough judges to reach round is monumental conceit. You could take the whole bunch of poultry press judges, sink them to the bottom of the sea, and the poultry world would all but forget them in a week. That's the way of the world. If the need develops the men will rise up to meet the need.

Another argument is if you shut out poultry press judges why not breeder judges? We do shut them out at Allentown. Have for years. No judge, officer or employee can show a single bird for competition. And on the strict adherence to this principle do we attribute the measure of success this show has been able to attain.

Besides Rule 15, New Official Poultry Show Rules, American Poultry Association, says: "And he (the judge) shall refuse to consider any bird that he may recognize as having at any time previously been owned by him." What could be stronger? This rule automatically disqualifies any birds an exhibitor may unlawfully enter under this rule.

Various other phases of this question might be taken up. But sufficient has been said to give an honest view of this proposed new legislation and to show how petty personal self and selfishness is warping the minds of some few.

Is There any Difference Between a Thoroughbred and a Dunghill for Table Use?

By E. M. Long, Osceola, Indiana.

U P to last Sunday it had been so long since I had been served with that choice morsel known as dunghill chicken (otherwise as common barnyard fowl of nondescript parentage) that, like a great many of our American citizens. I had fallen into that careless way of reasoning, that "pigs is pigs" and that "chicken was chicken," no matter what the individual bird's pedigree may have been. But the moment I set my teeth into that "fowl" I awoke. I came back to the realization that chicken is not always chicken.

Here are the facts in the case as I remember them. A month or so back, there came to me a hen, a white hen, with five toes. I would say that from the color, shape and general conformation that somewhere in the misty past one of her ancestors might have been a White Dorking. I also deduced from her general appearance that her other ancestor might have been a native of that country bordering on the Mediterranean Sea, otherwise known as the Leghorn. I found her in the barn trying to make friends with one of my Black Orpington cock birds. He seemed to take a fancy to her, a fancy like unto that of the Cock and the Golden Pheasant in the "Chanticleer." So as said Black Orpington cock was on a temporary vacation, I seized the hen by the hind leg and cast her into the coop with her new found friend. Although there was a vast difference in size and some 10 pounds difference in weight, they made friends at once. Each seemed to be the others affinity. A wonderful friendship and a companionship that was congenial, though doomed to come to an early termination, sprang up between them. The way that pair stuck by each other would put Theodore and Wm. F. to shame. The way that hen laid eggs would put many a flock of hens to shame. She laid every day for a month and on Sunday, too. I had thought some of originating a new species, but as the woods was full of new breeds and varieties I abandoned the idea. Then there was another reason, the demand for eggs was so great that this particular hen was no small factor in supplying our breakfast table with fresh hen fruit.

So after a long consultation with my better half, we decided to sentence her to the guillotine, said sentence to be executed the following Sunday, or rather the Saturday evening previous, as we endeavor to avoid all unnecessary work on the Sabbath. The execution was duly performed by yours truly and the hen died without a struggle. When the process of dressing for the table was underway, we were surprised to find her literally filled with eggs from the size of a pinhead up to a full sized and perfectly formed egg. These miniature eggs were as numberless as the sands on the sea shore and I suddenly realized my mistake in passing sentence on her. Had I started a new breed, no doubt these wonderful egg records that we hear about would be so eclipsed in number that the claimants would have gone back into oblivion. I came to the conclusion that Fortune had knocked at my door and I had turned her away. Nevertheless the worst was to come. I am sure we boiled that hen from seven A. M. until two P. M. and still we could not stick a fork into the carcass. At last in desperation we put it on the table and I commenced what I hope to be my last experience at eating fowls of unknown and questionable origin. Had that hen been so the writer could have masticated it, I am sure that I could easily have consumed the whole thing and then been hungry, but we could not. We fed the remains to the dog and I have made a vow that "never again" will such a mistake occur in our family.

The Black Orpington Cock, the sometime friend of the deceased hen, has never recovered from the blow. His usual morning clarion is stilled. He wanders about disconsolately, evidently trying to avoid his old friends, mourning for his lost companion, and refusing all attempts to comfort him.

CHAMPIONSHIP SPECIAL.

The Great Coliseum show has a new feature for 1912 and one that should appeal to the fanciers from all sections of the country. In many of the important classes there is a cash prize offered for the championship male and female. This prize may be won by cock, cockerel, hen or pullet, and the winning specimen may be in the single or breeding pen class, but must be, in the opinion of the judge, the best individual bird of its sex in the class in which it competes.

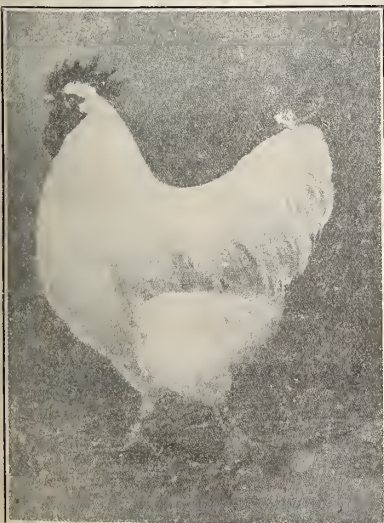

This prize is offered by the breeders, independent of cash and specials offered by the Association, and in several of the classes this cash special already amounts to quite a tidy sum. Barred Plymouth Rocks have now $60.00 to their credit with other popular varieties only a little behind.

Any breeders that intend exhibiting at Chicago can donate to this special fund, and all exhibitors are eligible to compete. The only restriction is that not less than $5.00 will be accepted from any contributor and the name and address of all of those who contribute to the fund will be printed in the premium list.

A number of speciality clubs have already voted to meet at Chicago and others are now taking a vote on this important question, and with a list of judges, the best, we believe, that was ever selected in any National show, no speciality club need hesitate to bring their meeting here as out of our list can be selected the judge or judges that are considered the best in this country for the several varieties. The premium list, with a complete list of classifications and judges assigned, will be ready for mailing Nov. 1st. Entries close Nov. 25th. Remember the dates, Dec. 12 to 18, 1912, and please remember the name:—"THE GREAT COLISEUM SHOW," Chicago, Ill.

NOTICE TO SHOW SECRETARIES.

The National Single Comb Buff Orpington Club, with over 2,000 members, will offer at every show in the world beautiful silk badges, one each for best cock, cockerel, hen, pullet and pen. Will also give elegant silver cups in states having ten members of the club in good standing. Write for printed notice for your premium list to M. S. Brady, Secretary, Richards, Mo.

A 30-FOOT POTTER PORTABLE POULTRY HOUSE.

The above cut shows a large size Potter portable poultry house, this one being 8x30 feet. It is but one of many different styles and sizes which Potter & Co. make, and they are constantly shipping to poultry keepers in different parts of the country these large size houses as well as the smaller ones. They manufacture a complete line of portable houses, coops, hennery fixtures, etc., and issue catalogs fully describing these goods, in which they show houses ranging in price from a brood coop for $3.50 to a 100 foot portable poultry house for $250.

The one strong point about their goods is that high grade material is used, and as they operate a complete woodworking factory all houses and fixtures turned out are well built and the material, workmanship, etc., absolutely guaranteed. The houses made by Potter & Co. are not to be compared with the cheap, poorly constructed houses turned out by some box concerns and lumber mills, that make coops of this kind as a side line. Potter & Co. make the one line of goods, that is portable poultry houses and hennery fixtures, and for over ten years their goods have been supplying the needs of poultry raisers all over the country, who want the very best equipment to be had, such as is complete, convenient and sanitary.

All portable houses, of whatever size, are made in sections convenient to handle and any house is easily and quickly set up. Every poultry keeper who is thinking of building a new house, or houses, or who has built and is in need of the best and most up-to-date equipment, should not fail to investigate the houses and fixtures made by Potter & Co. Refer to their large ad. elsewhere in this issue and send for catalogs which fully describe their line of goods, as well as all kinds of supplies.

GOING TO CALIFORNIA.

In our last issue we made the announcement that Judge Corey was moving to California. This issue we regret to announce that C. M. Ferry, of Summit, N. J., and proprietor of the Buena Vista Poultry Yards, is moving to California.

Mr. Ferry has long been recognized as the foremost breeder of Black Langshans in the country and is also a breeder of high class S. C. Black Minorcas.

As a breeder of Black Langshans Mr. Ferry has done more to promote the interests of this breed and create the present demand than any other man and his record at the great shows of America, including Madison Square, Grand Central Palace and Philadelphia, is one that will possibly be a pace-maker for years to come.

We certainly regret to see Mr. Ferry leaving our field. He has been a hard worker for the interests of the Poultry industry. He will go to California in October and elsewhere in this issue will be seen the advertisement that he is going to sell off everything except about 50 Black Langshans. He is offering many hundreds of grand birds for sale and this certainly presents an opportunity for anyone desiring to buy him out, root and branch, or it also presents an opportunity to those desiring to get the famous Buena Vista strain of stock.

If you are in need of S. C. Black Minorcas or Black Langshans, be sure and write C. M. Ferry, of Summit, N. J., and mention the Poultry Fancier when you write him.

For many years we have had the pleasure of dealing with Mr. Ferry and we have yet to receive the first complaint concerning his business dealings.

We have seen his stock in the shows and we have seen it in his yards, and we dare say that nobody can go wrong in dealing with Mr. Ferry, as one hundreds cents' worth for $1.00 and a satisfied customer has always been his ambition.

No distinguishing marks are allowed on or under the coops, no catalogue is issued until awards are placed and no member or exhibitor is allowed in the aisle where the judge is at work.

With the favorable comment from last year's exhibitors, and the line of silver cups and cash specials that will be offered, the Association is preparing for the largest show ever held in this section of the State.

BIG THINGS DOING IN MINORCA CIRCLES.

The many friends of Chas. M. Weikert, well known Minorca breeder of Littlestown, Penna., will be pleased to learn that he has purchased the entire flock of S. C. Black Minorcas from H. J. Roth, of McSherrytown. Mr. Roth had some very good birds, including some of the noted prize winners at Chestnut Hill and Hagerstown. This, in addition to the already established strain of Weikert's, ought to certainly place him in the front rank as a Minorca breeder. Mr. Weikert has been breeding the Minorcas for a great many years and has worked hard for the welfare of the Poultry industry in his locality, and no man is deserving of more success in the business than Mr. Weikert. He reports a good season's business and everything lovely.

POULTRY LITTER.

Elsewhere in this issue will be seen the advertisement of the O. K. Litter Co., 160 Pearl St., New York City. We want every one of our readers to become familiar with O. K. Poultry Litter, for the simple reason that it is a deodorizer, absorbent, disinfectant and economical litter, as well as labor saving. It surely is a long felt need to the Poultrymen, because it is not only natural for litter, but it also remains practically in the same condition, sweet, soft and pliable, even after it has been used for months.

It also takes the place of disinfectants. The O. K. Litter is not an experiment, but it is indorsed by America's foremost Poultrymen and it is especially grand for white birds, as it prevents their plumage from becoming soiled and is just what you want to condition your birds on.

It also absorbs all the moisture from the droppings and they quickly dry up. It also absorbs all of the ammonia and poisonous gases and makes the air in your hen house pure and sweet. It even goes farther than this, absorbing the moisture from the atmosphere so that it keeps frost from accumulating on the walls of your house, even if they are damp.

We would suggest that all of our readers send for their circular, which explains in full detail.

Their address is, O. K. Litter Co., 160 Pearl St., New York, N. Y.

Mr. Rhoads is a Poultryman of exceptional experience and ability and the breeders of that section can look for a down to date show this season.

A BUSINESS CHANGE.

The firm of Kerr & Owen, Machias, N. Y., well known breeders of S. C. Buff Leghorns, have dissolved partnership. Mr. Kerr found it necessary to retire, as it was impossible for him to devote the time that their growing business demands. His share of the business has been purchased by E. Ernest Owen, who will continue right along and on an increased scale. This concern has not only built up a grand trade in the Poultry business, but have also built up a strain of birds, which are considered second to none. We wish Mr. Owen continued success in the business.

COMING TO THE FRONT.

The many friends of H. M. Kenner, well known manager of the Chestnut Hill Poultry Farm, Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, Penna., will be pleased to learn that he has already booked 11 shows and fairs to judge the coming season. It hasn't been very long since we predicted that Kenner would come to the front rank as a judge. Just one year ago he was persuaded by his many friends to enter the judging field. He finally consented and we made the prediction that he would be one of our leading judges. Once again the Fancier has hit the mark.

The Quality of the Chicks You Hatch is all Important.

NEWTOWN "Giant" Incubators

hatch strong, healthy chicks — The Only Profitable Kind.

This is because it employs all the hatching requisites—heat, fresh air and moisture—in a definite and harmonious relation, insuring definite results at all times, under all conditions.

Note what a big N. Y. Poultry man says about the kind of chicks his new 7,500 "Newtown" Incubator is giving him this year:

"The chicks we have hatched in the 'Newtown' are remarkably strong, and the losses in brooders are almost nothing. We attribute this to the Incubator, as the brooding and feeding are the same as in previous years."

"Newtown" users are having uniformly good results this season, unfavorable as it has been to many others. We solicit the closest investigation of the "Newtown's" merits and the results it is securing. Take no chances with Incubators that hatch well only when conditions are good. Install the "Newtown" and be sure you hatch "livable" chicks first, last and all the time.

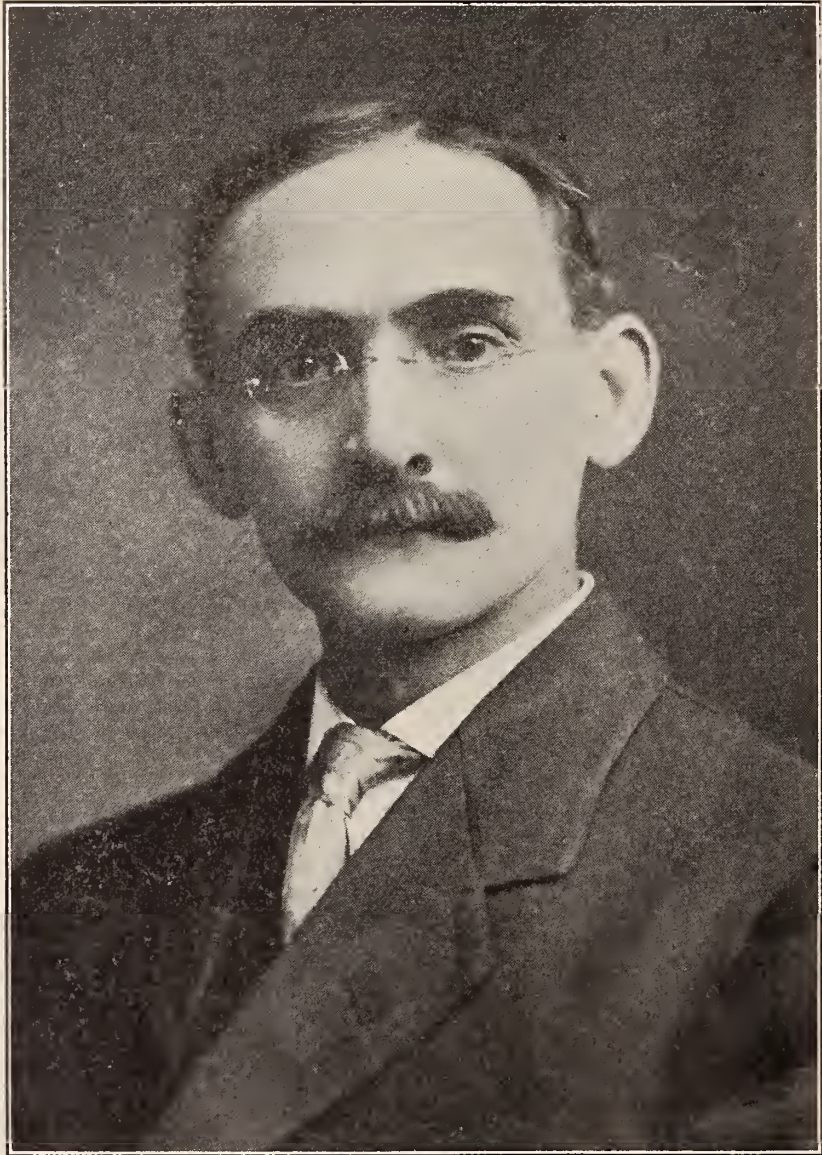

If you have experienced heavy chick losses this Spring investigate the "Newtown" Adjustable Hover Brooding System, which practically eliminates chick loss. Write for Brooder Catalog—and proof of results it is getting for others right now. "Newtown" Incubator Catalog L—Free for the asking.

A Day With Edge on the Darlington Egg Farm

DRY FOOD USED.

By F. W. DeLancey

Our readers have doubtless noticed the advertisement of the Darlington Egg Farm, in fact very few readers of any publication that is carrying a Poultry department, have not seen it. It stands out original, and is admittedly an advertisement that is bound to attract attention. Even the writer of this article was attracted by this advertisement, and the original is "Don't be a Clam, but find out where Darlington is, and all roads lead to Darlington" is what led the writer down there, the same as it has many others. I was desirous of meeting this man, whom the whole world has heard much about the last several months.

I started out for Darlington, got there safely, and didn't have any trouble in finding the place. As soon as I got off at the station I inquired where Mr. Edge lived. Every one knew him. It was not hard to find, and in a very few minutes his team came rolling along to take me out to the Darlington Egg Farm, and we met Mr. Edge, a genius not only in advertising, but in raising poultry as well. It was nearly dusk when we arrived there and in the midst of a heavy rain. The consequence was I had to stay there that night. I visited the stock, incubating and brooder houses the following noon, and up till the time our old friend D. M. Lee rolled along in his auto to carry us over to Rockland Farm.

In the course of conversation that evening with Mr. Edge it did not take long to find that he is a past master, and also a past master in poultry, in securing the largest amount of money from so many eggs. In other words, he acquires 1700 eggs and pullets. We find 12 acres in the Darlington Farm, and the famous Darlington Leghorn hens roam over almost every acre. A house 120 feet long and 16 feet wide shelters 700 pullets to supply the New York trade with large, white, sterile eggs. Not one of these eggs is sold for hatching. Not one of these eggs is used in the incubator for hatching baby chicks, as Mr. Edge does not sell any eggs for hatching except laid by hens over 2 years.

The question that interested me most was how he obtained success at the Darlington Farm, and we find that Mr. Edge is a firm believer in the fact of our old saying that the industrial welfare of individuals as well as nations depends on the two words, Selling Power.

We find that Mr. Edge averages approximately 60c. per dozen the year around for all eggs laid on the Darlington Farm. And with his buildings so arranged with labor-saving devices that one man can do the work of two or three, reduces the cost of production to a minimum. We find his incubator house to contain a 6000 egg Mammoth machine. This incubator house is entirely different from those constructed on other plans, in view of the fact that it is entirely above the ground. Mr. Edge claims that he is about convinced that the above incubator house is not a mistake. Attached to this incubator house we find the brooder house, where the hovers are arranged in two tiers, thus giving the use of double space, or a house that will hold just twice as many chicks as a house double its size, with the same arrangement to save labor that we find in his large houses. The main business on the Darlington Egg Farm is to supply a high grade of exceptionally white, sterile eggs, and to supply them at a time when prices are the highest, and to do this he claims you must depend upon your pullets, and the pullets must be hatched, therefore, at such a time that they will come into laying Oct. 1st. They must be kept laying steadily until the following September, as he claims that the early hatched chicks cannot be brought into laying before January without injuring them, and a hen cannot be forced without injury, but he has found out that by careful feeding of balanced rations he can bring a Leghorn pullet into full laying, and therefore governs his days accordingly. He doesn't want them hatched earlier than five months prior to the time that he desires them to start laying, for if they are hatched earlier and lay earlier than the time indicated they invariably go into premature molt about November, and thus many eggs are lost before they start their actual gait again.

The chickens of the Darlington Egg Farm are first fed hard boiled eggs, in which is mixed a good supply of fine grit. This grit prevents many of the ills that young chicks encounter in their early stages. We find all his chicks are healthy and vigorous, and he finds that chicks thus started are never troubled with the gapes. He only keeps his chicks three or four weeks in the brooder house, then they are moved to the colony houses on the range, and the colony house hoppers are always filled with grain. Mr. Edge claims that a Leghorn chicken differs from the others in this respect, that a Leghorn will only eat what it requires, and will leave the rest, but the other chicks must have the feed portioned out to them, or they will overeat. Pullets on range, he claims, should have plenty of feed, and that of the best. The early part of life is the most important, and stunted growth can never be made up, let the care be what it may.

The males are removed to separate quarters early, and those not wanted for breeding purposes are kept separate, fattened and marketed as soon as possible. Mr. Edge claims that if he had a way of distinguishing the males when they were first hatched he would give anyone a neat little sum and about 5,000 chickens each year for nothing. He claims that it is

May 6, 1912.

MR. UNDERHILL,
Dear Sir:

It is with great pleasure I drop you a line to say that I am more than pleased with the Cockerel you sent me. He came in fine shape.

This is my thirty-ninth year breeding Single Comb White Leghorns. The bird you have just sent me is the best bird I ever bought for the money. He is a dandy. You must have stock of high quality. I bought a cockerel last year of Mr. Irving C. Rice and he was the next best bird to yours. Mr. Rice, I think, is a wonderful nice man and strictly honest, but when I want more stock, Mr. Underhill, you will get my order. Please accept many thanks for the bird.

Yours very truly,

It is impossible for you to buy a fowl on our farm that's not of high quality. You take no chance, could there be any better reason for you to buy of unprofitable to even raise Leghorns to a marketable age and that they would be more profitable if they could be put out of existence the day they were hatched. Mr. Edge has had a very successful season. He has sold over 20,000 hatching eggs, and also the chicks from 24,000 eggs, and he has orders booked ahead to run his machine until September first, and the worst feature is the fact that he had to return many orders.

Many improvements will be made this summer on the Darlington Egg Farm with a view to increasing its capacity to meet the demand. Two new buildings, 160 feet by 16 feet each will be erected, and their hatching and brooding capacity will be more than doubled by fall.

While Mr. Edge advertises a strictly high-class strain of S. C. White Leghorns with especially good laying qualities, we find that in looking over his flock many hundreds of females of high-class exhibition qualities are there. The flock of birds we find to be very uniform in type, uniform in head, and in fact they show the results of careful and scientific breeding to produce a given result. While Mr. Edge has built up this strain of heavy laying fowls we would not be surprised to see him break into the game of exhibition birds. In fact, he would not need to go over his own plant to get the advantage.

Our stay with Mr. Edge was one of the most pleasant the writer has ever had and was very instructive, not only along the lines of scientific poultry keeping, but also along the lines of finding the demand at profitable prices for the product of his plant. Darlington Egg Farm has made a reputation, and we dare say with a man of the ability of Mr. Edge at its head, that it is bound to become one of the foremost plants of the East. He is working hard, and no one is more deserving of our credit than Mr. Edge, of the Darlington Egg Farm, Darlington, Md.

By The Way

By H. S. Babcock

The key to success in poultry keeping—the turkey.

Turkeys know how to get ahead, especially the blockhead.

The turkey gobbler gobbles, and we gobble the turkey gobbler along about Thanksgiving time.

The American public may need much instruction in reference to poultry matters, but when it comes to knowing a good turkey, yum! yum! the American public is "on the job."

The secret of raising turkeys for profit is to let them roam through your neighbor's grain fields and gather their own sustenance. Kept in this way they are very profitable birds to rear. If you need an excuse for permitting them to do this you have only to allege the simple truth that turkeys will not thrive in confinement, they must have range, and plenty of it.

Such free range means free forage, and free forage means ample profit. Your turkeys thrive and you thrive with them, "Thrift, thrift, Horatio!"

The Dodo and the Great Auk are extinct, and, though there are many thousands of turkeys in existence, it is a serious question whether or not they are in danger of extinction. It seems to be the general opinion that the supply is diminishing while the demand is increasing by leaps and bounds, and it looks very much as if a man who expects to dine on turkey not many years hence must either become a millionaire or get himself elected President of the United States. If he becomes the first he may be able to purchase the bird; and if the second, Horace Vose, of Westerly, will furnish it free, as he has been doing ever since U. S. Grant occupied the office. On the whole, as we see no chance of acquiring the million, we think we prefer the office, and we here pledge ourselves to a single term and not to use the office as a business asset.

Seriously, the raising of turkeys, when one has the necessary range, looks like a good business proposition. The demand is in excess of the supply and bids fair to remain so. The prices are high and likely to continue so. The margin of profit, therefore, is and will be satisfactory, if turkey raisers will study the subject carefully and take the means to insure success. I think it safe to say that the subject of raising turkeys successfully has not received one-tenth of the attention which its importance demands. While the study of chicken raising has reached a stage when success is almost always certain, the turkey has been but imperfectly studied and comparatively few people are competent to rear them. It is not to be expected that the turkey will ever be as generally kept as the hen, because it seems incapable of adapting itself to all kinds of situations, but with a more thorough knowledge of its nature and its needs there ought to be hundreds and thousands who could make its rearing profitable where there are now but tens.

As high as turkeys were last season and as great as were the marketmen's profits on them, there appears to have been one who was not satisfied with the legitimate profits he was making. According to the press dispatches Jacob Ginsberger, a Third Avenue butcher in New York City, discovered what he thought was a neat little game for increasing his profits on the sale of Thanksgiving turkeys. He put into each turkey a one-pound lead sinker. But Albert Lutz, an inspector of the City Weights and Measure Department called his little game. Lutz bought a turkey at thirty cents a pound, and compelled Ginsberger to clean it in the open shop instead of in a back room, where the butcher had been accustomed to do such work. The result was the disclosure of the sinker. Thereupon Lutz seized the entire stock, and an investigation showed a sinker in each turkey. Upon trial Ginsberger was given three months in the penitentiary in which to meditate upon "ways that were dark and tricks that were vain."

You can't weigh a chicken on San Jose scales, even if it is down in the orchard.

Eggs are easily scrambled, but we have to scramble pretty hard sometimes to get them.

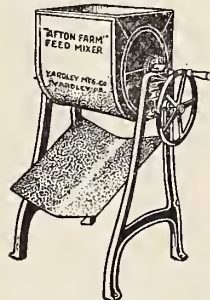

The Denver Field and Farm says: "Those people who are forever seeking something from nothing are always stung in the end." But in what more appropriate place could they be stung?

It may pay to know what the hens are doing, but to know that they are doing next to nothing doesn't seem to be very profitable knowledge.

A new book or booklet, "Turkey Secrets," is being advertised. We knew the turkey was secret in its ways, but we didn't know that it had any confidants. Wonder if it is worth while to know the turkey's secrets anyway?

We hope that an investigation of "Turkey Secrets" will show that it has no connection with the new and disreputable dance, the Turkey Trot.

Official Guide for Judging, Mating and Breeding

You cannot raise fowls intelligently without a copy of the American Standard of Perfection, the Official Guide of Poultry Culture

The American Standard of Perfection is published by the American Poultry Association and is the America authority (United States and Canada) on the required characteristic of all breeds and varieties of Chickens, Ducks, Turkeys and Geese. Every poultryman should have a copy of the new American Standard of Perfection. All the Standard requirements as to shape, color and markings of all standard breeds of poultry are clearly described and illustrated in the new work.

You cannot tell the value of your birds unless you know the Standard requirements. You cannot enter the show room and win unless you know these requirements. In short, you cannot succeed in the poultry business without possessing a copy of this book. Five full page plates of feathers in natural colors. Half-tone illustration from idealized photographs of living models. All varieties.

POULTRY FANCIER,

Sellersville, Penna,

The man who is always on time is generally a little ahead of time.

It is all right to make a poultry calendar for each month, but the poultryman who is "on the job" knows that the best calendar to follow is to do what ought to be done when and how it ought to be done.

A setting hen may be quite as usefully and profitably employed as one which is always scratching around.

When you plant your garden, if you wish to insure the seeds coming up promptly turn in an old hen with a brood of chickens. She will see to it that they come up with neatness and dispatch.

"Blood will tell." Rysdyk's Hambletonian, it is said, in two generations produced 1743 trotters and 232 pacers, including such champions as Jay Eye See, Nancy Hanks, Dexter, Palo Alto and Sunol. For a period of twenty-three years, from 1871 to 1894, with the exception of two years, the world's trotting record was held by the grandsons and granddaughters of this horse. His prepotency was marvelous and his descendants seem to inherit not only his speed but the power to hand down this speed to later generations. As an individual Rysdyk's Hambletonian would probably not have commanded a very high price; as a stock horse he earned in stud fees for his owner over $200,000.

Prepotency in a stallion is no different quality than prepotency in a cock, and if one has a magnificent cock possessing prepotency, what is he worth? Will any sum which he will bring be an adequate price for him?

I call to mind a certain cock, a Dark Cornish, or as the variety was then known, an Indian Game. He was one of the chickens hatched from four dozen eggs which I sold for $24. The owner found him not only a splendid individual but a prepotent breeder. As a cockerel he refused $50 for him—and $50 in those days was a high price, because we hadn't then reached the "valued at" stage in prices; year after year offers were refused for the bird, and when he was nearly five years of age and the days of his usefulness were growing short the owner had again an offer of $50 for him. He consulted me and I advised him to sell, but my advice was not taken and the offer was turned down. What do you suppose that bird was really worth, as a stock bird, to his owner? Would $50 or $500 have been an adequate price? Though I haven't the necessary data for determining his real value, I am inclined to think that $5,000 would have been much nearer the true value of the bird than the $50 which was so often offered and refused.

But prepotency may be a fatal as well as a valuable gift. For example, in a certain institution for the feeble-minded it is said that there are seven weak-minded children, all produced by one mother. In the State of New York there were, I think, over 200 criminals who were descended from a single couple. If the prepotency is a prepotency toward inferior qualities, if a cock, mated to fine hens produces only inferior chickens, no matter how good he may be as an individual, he is a positive detriment to the owner and the sooner his head is removed and his muscles converted into human food the better it will be for the owner and for the owner's stock.

Fortunately for us as breeders prepotent birds are usually prepotent in the right directions. They are usually the descendants of well-bred and well-made ancestors, and the qualities which they have inherited are valuable qualities, which, like those possessed by the descendants of Rysdyk's Hambletonian, they are able to hand down to their descendants. And when we happen to possess such a bird, we shall be wise if we reject what seems to be a high price for him, knowing that his real vastly exceeds his apparent value. No one ever yet received an adequate price for a thoroughly high class bird prepotent enough to transmit his excellence to the stock by him begetting.

Was it Josh Billings or some other American humorist who observed that "It is better not to know so many things, than to know so many that aint so?" We sometimes are reminded of this saying when we read an excellent article which is weakened by an apparent error.

Mr. T. W. Proctor, who is a careful student of color, and withal quite an acute observer, seems to have fallen into an error when he wrote: "The law by which males universally secrete more red is in evidence with Barred Rocks to-day, chiefly as a mark of the carcass. The taint of brassiness in plumage was formerly a pronounced defect. It has to a noticeable degree been driven inward to the carcass. If the Rock was a white-fleshed breed the problem to breed out brassiness would have been a much more difficult one to meet. Our American or yellow-fleshed breeds have been a manifest advantage over the white-fleshed, their carcass receiving the color which would otherwise be driven outward to the plumage."

The error, as I conceive it, is not in stating the fact that brassiness has largely disappeared in Barred Plymouth Rocks, nor in stating that it is a law that the males tend to secrete more red pigment than the females in this and in all other breeds, but in attempting to account for the facts by asserting that this pigmentation has been driven inward to the carcass and that the problem of breeding out such brassiness would have been more difficult if the breed had been a white-fleshed instead of a yellow-fleshed fowl.

White plumaged fowls are the best subjects for a study of this problem of brassiness, because its appearance and extent are more readily observable. And, I believe, it is the almost universal experience that those specimens which show the greatest freedom from brassiness in the plumage, show also, as a rule, the least yellow pigmentation in skin and shanks. While it may be possible to breed a bird with rich yellow legs and a deep golden skin and with a plumage free from yellow coloration, such birds are so rare as to be regarded as lusus naturae, natural freaks. Birds pure white in plumage, with no tendency to brassiness, usually lose much of the yellow coloring of the shanks and the skin becomes almost white; in other words, the carcass does not "receive the color which otherwise would be driven outward to the plumage." It would be very consoling to a breeder of yellow-legged white-plumaged fowls if he could withdraw the yellow pigment from the feathers and spread it over the skin and shanks, instead of being obliged, as in most cases he is, to withdraw it from the carcass in order to remove it from the plumage. It would indeed be killing two birds with one stone and making breeding easy.

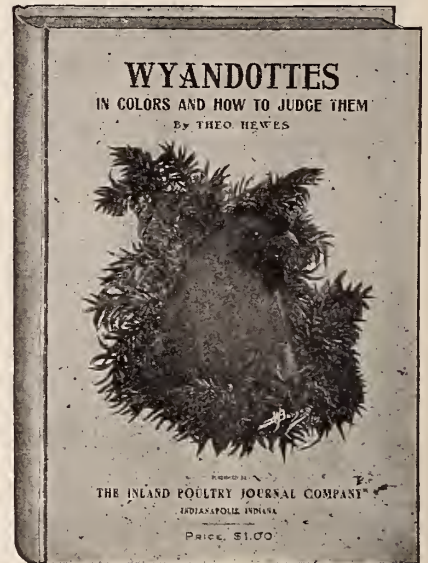

There is no proof whatever that this theory is true; for, while one may appeal to the disappearance of brassiness in the plumage of Barred Rocks in a noticeable degree in recent times, in support of the theory, it is more than possible that such disappearance is due to an entirely dif-

This book teaches you How to Score and Judge the greatest of all the American varieties. No other work published will give the information as it is given by Theo. Hewes in his articles, which are fully illustrated by over one hundred pictures, together with the chart system, of which he is the originator, and which is copyrighted by him. Not only do full page half-tone plates of some of the finest living specimens of these breeds appear in black and white, but the richest and grandest work ever done in oil by an artist is given by I. W. Burgess in a series of twelve pictures representing male and female, accompanied by feathers from the different sections of the birds in colors.

Size of book 11½x8½ inches. Contains over 70 pages, including cover, which is printed in three colors, and all on good half-tone paper. PRICE $1.00.

These pictures are 4½x7 inches in size, and cost over $1,000 for the copper plates alone, to say nothing of the artist's labor and general cost of production. In fact no expense has been spared to make it by far the most valuable work on Wyandottes ever printed in America or elsewhere; you cannot duplicate it at any price, but you can have one by return mail for $1.00, and if you are not satisfied we will refund your money. We do as we say we will, now and always. Our past dealings with the public will prove this.

ferent cause. But, on the other hand, the fact that while birds with blue or white shanks and a white skin are less liable to brassiness than those with yellow shanks and a yellow skin, and the further fact that the depigmentation of the feather-producing cells, necessary to produce a pure white plumage, is not accompanied by an increased pigmentation of the cells of the shanks and skin, but with a corresponding depigmentation of such cells, indicated very clearly that the theory has no warrant in observed facts. This theory appears to be one of "those things that aint so."

The action of the Rhode Island Red Club on "Non-fading Reds" seems to be expressed in the slang phrase, "Fade away," but Grant M. Curtis doesn't think this an adequate disposition of the question. We are rather of the same opinion. In the meantime some breeders seem to be getting a lot of good advertising free.

Here's to the movement to raise the character of the comb from a variety to a breed characteristic! Turn out of the Standard all Leghorns, Anconas and Rhode Island Reds with rose combs, and reinstate them as separate breeds. Twenty-five years or more ago I strenuously contended, perhaps with more zeal than knowledge, that a Leghorn with a rose comb had no right to be called a Leghorn. To-day, with more knowledge, perhaps, and less zeal, I reiterate substantially the position then taken that it is unscientific to admit two styles of combs in one breed. Names are plentiful; keep the rose combed fowls, but keep them as breeds, with appropriate breed names.

Could I have seen my way clear to succeed, the Pea-combed Barred Plymouth Rocks would not have been admitted to the Standard in 1888 as a variety of the Plymouth Rock, but as a separate and distinct breed with a name all its own. And if this had been done, it seems to me probable that it might have remained in the Standard even to this day. But in petitioning for its admission to the Standard as a variety I simply followed the path of least resistance, which in the end—after a temporary success—proved the hardest, rockiest and most thorny path to traverse. It was "In again, out again, Finnegan" with the variety, and a breed of remarkable utility lost prestige as a variety of a breed of remarkable beauty. At any rate that was one of the factors in its retrograde movement. Consequently, with unstinted admiration for the rose combed varieties of the Leghorns, Minoreas and Rhode Island Reds, I believe that they ought to be Standard breeds, under names of their own, instead of varieties under some other breeds' names.

I firmly believe that all varieties of a breed should be substantially of the same shape; that the shape of all the varieties should produce the same impression upon the mind. As the comb of the fowl, though having little physiological significance, is nevertheless a pronounced factor in forming the impression of shape, and is so recognized by the value given to it in the Scales of Points in the Standard, it is a mistake to degrade it to a variety characteristic. A Pea-combed Plymouth Rock and a Rose Combed Leghorn don't look like the single combed specimens of the breed. The character of the comb profoundly changes the picture. And we will be wise if we recognize this fact, and when the Standard is next revised, express our recognition by giving such fowls a separate nomenclature as breeds and removing them from the anomalous position that they hold as varieties. One comb is enough for one breed, whether it be single, rose, pea, leaf, V-shaped or what not.

We have been too conservative in the past. We have made mistakes and have blindly followed him. A mistake remains a mistake, no matter how many times it may be repeated. Suppose, for example, the rose-combed Leghorns have been so called for many years; suppose that they are identical in blood with the single combed varieties, a presumption which I believe is contrary to the fact; suppose that the world has recognized them as varieties of the Leghorn breed; despite all this, they differ in shape; the comb produces a great change in their appearance; they seem to differ not only in respect to the comb, but in other respects. The time will come, if it has not already arrived, when the Standard will have to recognize this fact. It must take on as much of scientific accuracy as is possible. The sooner this reform is made and these so-called varieties are officially recognized as breeds the better it will be for them, their owners and the Standard. I do not apprehend that this change will interfere, even temporarily, with the sale of these fowls. If it has any effect upon trade it will probably be a beneficial one. The fowls have abundant good qualities and will be able to stand on their own merits, instead of trading on a name to which they are not properly entitled.

A Square Deal

We want every one of our subscribers to stop a minute and think what a square means. If some one was to deal unfairly with you, what would you do? Would you stand for it? I dare say no. We all want a square deal and insist on having it. That is right, and we want every one of our readers to have a square deal. Insist on it, demand it.

Now then, the thought we want to impress on your mind is this, "Are you giving yourself a square deal? Are you fair with yourself?" Stop and think.

we dare say that hundreds of thousands of people in this country to-day, who are raising chickens, are not giving themselves a square deal. They are treating themselves unfairly. They are treating the Poultry business unfairly. Hundreds of letters reach our office asking us all kinds of difficult questions along the lines which the different chapters in our book, "Down to Date Poultry Knowledge," handles. It contains practically a complete course in Poultry culture, describing and illustrating the different breeds, their care and keeping, health and disease. If you are trying to raise Poultry without the information which this book of 34 chapters contains, then I say, dear reader, you are not giving yourself a square deal. You are unfair with yourself. We want you to make a success of the business. Every chapter in this book is worth many dollars to you if you have chickens.

Now the question, have we given you a square deal? You be the judge, but let us state we gave you what is considered the highest class Poultry Journal in America for the small sum of 25c. a year, until June 1st. You rallied to my support and made it possible for Poultry Fancier to become one of the greatest Poultry publications in the Universe. We are indeed thankful, and in appreciation of this we are offering to extend your subscription four years, from the date of its expiration, and give you "Down to Date Poultry Knowledge" for $1.00. We have tried our level best to give you a square deal, and now it is up to every one of the subscribers to give himself a square deal. We want you to have it. Look ads. up elsewhere in this issue and attend to this matter to-day.

So many of my customers seemed to be in doubt as to just where Darlington is, at great expense I produced the above map.

You will notice all roads seem to lead to DARLINGTON. This is not the artist's fault. I asked him to show all leading to but none away. He said he could not do this. I discharged him on the spot. This will account for the map not looking better. Any man who wants to get away from DARLINGTON should be suppressed. If you look closely you will see a shad going up the river, don't stop him he is only taking a pair of scales up to DARLINGTON to weigh the eggs.

When you get on one of these roads you will soon arrive at DARLINGTON where you will see 11000 breeding hens in one flock and one house. You will see the MAMMOTH HOT WATER MACHINE rolling out the chicks and they are for you. You can see the brooder house arranged in 2 tiers. In fact you can see and buy anything to be found on a live Egg Farm. And you will best of all get a welcome that will make you come again.

The circulation of Poultry Fancier is national in character. It is the only poultry journal published solely in the interests of fanciers, the people who constitute practically the entire fraternity.

The mission of Poultry Fancier is to teach breeders how to produce the beautiful and valuable Standard bred birds which are the foundation of all profit and pleasure in poultry raising.

Water Breeders---Attention

The Poultry Fancier has been declared the official organ of the Water Fowl Club of America, which honor we appreciate very highly, and in honor of this occasion we are going to set aside as a Water Fowl special number the August issue, and I can tell you that I will leave nothing undone to make this special Water Fowl number the best that has ever been published, but I want to impress on your mind that unless I have your support I can do little. Now I want every Water Fowl breeder in the country to write me in the matter. This entire issue will have my personal attention. I will do my level best, and I expect every Water Fowl breeder to do his. Write us to-day, every one of you.

Link, You are Right.

Let the A. P. A. Take

the Southerly Course

D. Lincoln Orr says the loss of the great Titanic puts him in mind of another great ship that is to-day speeding pell-mell through icebergs with not enough life-boats. That is the time our old friend Linkey hit the nail fair and square on top of the belfry. Why Link, the A.
P. A. has been sailing in troubled waters for years. The great ship has already hit several bergs, but you know who the pilots were, and last year the executive board finally decided, without a dissenting voice, to take the southerly course and adopt such legislation as will benefit the many thousands of poultrymen throughout the country.

Yes. Mr. Orr, the A. P. A. is heeding the warnings to steer clear of the ice.
The executive board got a wireless message at Denver, and it read like this, "P.
D. Q.," and they did it. Link, do you suppose the A. P. A. will be ruled by Poultry show managers who don't favor Rule 17? I don't think they will, and because a few secretaries tell the A.P. A.
they will not hold their shows under A.
P. A. rules any more if Rule 17 is passed.
Link, do you not know the kind of members an organization needs? Let me tell you the kind of members the A. P. A. or any other organization needs are those who abide by the will of the majority.
If we are not to be ruled by the will of the majority then the whole thing is a farce. But, mind you, the majority will rule, and any ultimatum coming from a few show secretaries is over-balanced when we consider the vast benefit to be derived from Rule 17, and the hundreds of members it will sweep into the ranks. We can only say, take the Southerly course.
That is the course we are going to take in August, and no matter what happens, the grand old ship will be piloted safely in to port.

An Untrue Claim

Some claim if soliciting editors can't judge there won't be any good judges left. Now that is rank, and I wonder what other judges think of a statement of this kind. It is just as Wittman says, "You can take the whole bunch of soliciting editor judges and sink them to the bottom of the sea, and the American Poultry Association and the great Poultry Industry would roll on just the same." That is the way of the world, always has been and always will be.
There has never been a crisis in the affairs of the U. S. that there were not men who arose to meet the situation, and so it is in the affairs of the A. P. A. We dare say that if Paper Judges cannot serve there will be men arising that are just as good, and mark you, some better.

Vote

Elsewhere in this issue will be found a voting coupon. Are you for or against Rule 17? We want you to vote. It is important that you should read that page carefully and vote to-day

Rule 17---Let it be

Remembered

That Rule 17 was recommended by the executive board of the A. P. A. when these show rules were adopted. There were present the President, the first Vice-President, the second Vice-President, the Secretary, and 8 members, and nearly all the Branch Presidents, who are by virtue of their office members of the executive board. They surely must have thought that Rule 17 was good, and that it had merit, or surely they would not have passed it and recommended it. Now, the question, point-blank, gentlemen. Are you going to stand up for what you have done at Denver or are you going to go on record and undo what you have done and acknowledge that you have simply been trifling? Gentlemen of the executive board, every one of you, think what you did at Denver. Let us freshen your memory. You passed Rule 17 without a dissenting vote. Stand up for it like men.
It is just as good to-day as it ever was.
You thought it was good and the rank and file of the A. P. A. expects you to stand up like men and stand for what you did at Denver.

Breeder's Ticket for 1913

We are now safe in saying that when the next election of the A. P. A. comes around there will be a straight Breeder's ticket in the field. There has been too much editor in the A. P. A. At last the rank and file of the A. P. A. has awakened. They are going to demand their rights. They are going to demand that the men who actually breed chickens shall and will be their officers. Let the editors edit their papers and run their publications just as they see fit and let the poultrymen rule and run the A. P. A. At last the time has come when the breeders have awakened from their Rip Van Winkle sleep and will vote for the men who raise chickens, and not for editors. Just as we have often said, too much editor in the
A. P. A. More will be said later on this subject. Poultry Fancier goes on record as favoring a straight breeder's ticket in 1913.

All Folly---Be Not Received

Those Poultry Associations who have already employed newspaper men as judges need fear nothing if Rule 17 passes at Nashville. This Rule will not affect judges who have been employed prior to its enactment. The sentiment against soliciting editors as judges has fairly swept the east, and from the South and West much support is promised. Instruct your delegate to Nashville to stand pat for Rule 17---the Rule which the executive board passed without a dissenting voice, and remember the Fancier is simply upholding a rule which the executive board recommends, a rule that if passed will sweep into the A. P. A. hundreds of members, a rule that if defeated means the loss of hundreds of new members that will be lost forever. Vote and vote for Rule 17.

Read it--Every Word of it

Read W. Theo. Wittman's article in this issue, the most far-reaching, straight from the shoulder article that has ever been written on Rule 17. We want every one who has the good of the Poultry industry at heart to read this article. It will do you good, no matter if you are against Rule 17. Read it, every word of it, and then study over it, and you will come to the conclusion that W. Theo. Wittman stands for the right and will stand for the right and will stand up for the rank and file at Nashville.

Now on the Fancier Staff

One of the most interesting departments in the Fancier is that conducted by James T. Huston, the popular President of the Williamsport Poultry Association. This department gives the news from the different Poultry Associations and Mr. Huston desires to hear from all the show secretaries. Mr. Huston is one of the most widely known poultrymen in Penna., and largely through his efforts the Poultry industry in Central Penna. is in a flourishing condition. We dare say his department will be read with interest by every one interested in organized poultry.

A Correction

In our June issue we stated editorially that the Penna. Branch A. P. A. unanimously passed Rule 17. It should have read unanimously endorsed Rule 17.

BIG POULTRY SHOW AT MISSOURI STATE FAIR.

Twenty-five Pens of Hens to be Entered in a Great Laying Contest as One of the Special Attractions of the Fair.

For liberal premiums, uniform exhibition coops, high quality birds, a clean show, good judges, fair and just treatment of all exhibitors, large and interested crowds to see your birds, and for good sales, the Missouri State Fair at Sedalia, Mo., ranks among the very best in the United States. On practically all Standard varieties the following liberal premiums are paid: 1st, $3.00; 2nd, $2.00; 3rd, $1.00; Pens, 1st, $5.00; 2nd, $3.00; 3rd, $2.00. All birds are entered free, only a coop and feed charge of 25c. per bird or $1 per pen.

One of the big attractions of the poultry department of the Fair is going to be the Egg Laying Contest. These birds will be placed in one of the most prominent places on the Fair Grounds, in the coops formerly occupied by the Game Department.

STATE FAIR EGG LAYING CONTEST.

In order to give poultry breeders the opportunity to demonstrate the utility qualities of their flocks as well as the fancy points, this new feature has been added. Thousands of farmers visit the Fair each year. Most of them are interested in good poultry and all are interested in good egg producers. It will be a feature of the fair which will attract great attention. It will also give you an opportunity to do a lot of valuable advertising, and this pen can be used as a sales pen for your flock. Your name and address, the variety of poultry, and also the record for each day will appear on the pen if you wish it. It will also give the visitors an opportunity to see how fowls are fed for egg production, the use of trap nests, and various other useful poultry appliances in actual operation.

The contest will be in charge of T. E. Quisenberry, who has charge of the National Egg Laying Contest at Experiment Station at Mountain Grove, Mo. Even though you do not win a prize the advertising feature will be worth many times the cost to you.

1. Each pen must be composed of six females of pure bred poultry, all of the same variety.

2. Pen fee, $1.00 per pen of females, and one male if you wish it.

3. The fowls will all be fed alike, given the same care and treatment, and will be under the exclusive care and direction of the Superintendent.

4. Birds intended for this contest must be so specified on your entry, giving the numbers of leg bands of each, and the entry must reach the Secretary of the Fair on or before September 20.

5. Fowls entered in the Egg Laying Contest will be received and cared for at the Fair Grounds on and after the date of September 25. We advise sending the birds early so they will be accustomed to their new quarters, the new method of

HATCHING COCHIN BANTAMS.

One great mistake beginners make is hatching Cochin Bantams in the first three months of the year, namely January, February and March. I have had people tell me why don't you set your Bantam eggs in March? Readers of this little theme, never hatch this breed of Bantams in January, February and March for these four reasons:

First, they grow too fast; second, they have a tendency of growing long in the legs; third, they cannot resist the cold; fourth, they grow over-weight and are then not fit for the show room.

I have had my best results by hatching them in May and June. They may also be hatched in July, August and September, but what I know of it the days of these months are too hot for the little midgets to survive.

Another pointer, always buy the best and it will be the cheapest in the end. Always buy from a reliable breeder.

If any of the suggestions in this theme are incorrect write me and tell me where I differ from your ideas.

A Day With Smith at the Metuchen Poultry Farm

The writer had the pleasure of spending a day with Wm. A. Smith of Metuchen, N. J., proprietor of the Metuchen Poultry Farm. It was three years since I had the pleasure of visiting this plant, and marked improvements were noticeable, in fact very little of the plant which I saw three years ago remained, but in its place stands one of the best Poultry plants that I have ever visited, not the largest, but the buildings, the equipment, the yards and the arrangement of the houses, etc., is about the best I have seen.

This man Smith needs no introduction to our readers or to the Poultry fraternity in general. Poultry isn't a side issue with him. It is his life work, his bread and butter, and when he started he realized that his business must be planted on a concrete foundation. Just how well he executed his original idea must be seen to be appreciated.

He has one of the really successful plants, a plant that pays its own way and keeps the owner. He enjoys a good, big business. It is growing. Old customers come back and new ones start.

There is a reason which we discovered in the office, when we found out that the customers dealing with the Metuchen Poultry Farm must be satisfied. This possibly accounts for the fact that in all our dealings with him we have not received a complaint. He is best known to the Poultry fraternity as a breeder of S. & R. C. White and Black Minorcas.

He sprang into prominence on his phenomenal winnings at Madison Square, Allentown, Hagerstown and a score of other shows.

In addition to this one of his long suits is furnishing show birds to his customers. The grand work that Mr. Smith has done not only for himself but for the Poultry industry in general throughout the State of New Jersey is well known. We wish him continued success and we haven't the least bit of doubt but what when we visit the Metuchen Poultry Farm again we will see many more improvements and a still larger plant to handle the trade which he has built up.

This man Smith deserves all that is coming to him and believes in giving 16 oz. for a lb. Continued success, Mr. Smith.

Meeting With Success.

Boyd Johnson's Plant at Rupert, Pa.

During the writer's recent trip to the different Poultry Associations of Central Penna., I had the pleasure of spending a night with our old friend, Boyd Johnson, prominently known to our readers and the Poultry world in general as a man who breeds Barred Rocks that are really everything that the name implies.

We all know and must confess that building up a trade in Barred Rocks is no easy matter. We also know that he breeds Barred Rocks that will carry away leading prizes at such shows as Syracuse, Philadelphia, Williamsport, and many others, requiring a little something more than hard work. It requires science and skill in the mating to produce a definite result.

This man Johnson has been struggling for many years to produce this strain of birds and to build up a trade. Many times he became discouraged, but he possessed that bulldog determination which enabled him to hold on when the cause seemed hopeless. At last the dark clouds of building up a trade in Barred Rocks rolled away. Trade began to come his way when the ribbons at the big shows began to come. He held on. He held fast and to-day he has as promising a lot of Barred Plymouth Rocks as you want to see, all bred from his winners.

Johnson surely deserves credit. He surely deserved the parouage. He is worthy of all that comes his way and it is but another evidence of the fact that determination means success.

COMING TO THE FRONT.

We are just in receipt of a communication from M. P. Cleary, Beaver Falls, Penna., the well-known poultryman, stating that the outlook for his youngsters in the way of Barred Plymouth Rocks is very promising.

Mr. Cleary is one of the best known poultrymen in Western Penna., and has succeeded in building up a strain of birds (Barred Plymouth Rocks) that have been well tested in some leading shows, including Youngstown, Ohio, and Beaver Falls, Penna.

Our readers can look for some mighty interesting advertising from Mr. Cleary in the early Fall months.

WHY NOT RAISE A FEW RED BELGIANS?

BY JESS McCULLEY, NORTH LEMSBERG, OHIO.

Here of late we notice quite a few of our leading Poultry journals have added a Belgian Hare department and there must be a reason for so doing. You, gentle reader, would be surprised to know how many there are that turn to this department first and read it thru before anything else is done. The interest taken in the Red Belgian here of late is remarkable and the reason is one can make more money on the amount invested than in any other stock or class of poultry, no matter what the variety he may choose to raise. (Of course, we must not think all is profit and no discouragement comes to the breeder of Rabbits as well as any other kind of stock. It takes patience and perseverance and work. We personally know of a breeder in a small town who has sold $75.00 worth in about three months in his back yard and barn. If he made it pay others can do so also.

Now that spring is here and plenty of green feed to be found in back yard and garden we must use care and discretion or we will overdo the matter and in a little while all our youngsters will be having the slobbers. That is easily avoided by not feeding too much greens. Give them some dry clover or alfalfa, hay and oats, some hand-mixed with the oats is fine feed for your little ones. Last fall one of our neighbors sent for us to come and see what was wrong with his little ones as they were dying off two and three a day, and so poor they could hardly stand. Of course we went and found they were taken from the doe at a little over four weeks and given corn on cob, hard, green winter apples and grass. Is it any wonder they were poor and dying? Another could not tell why he had no success, as he fed nothing but green dandelions all summer. The feed must be varied. Now a few don't's for the new beginner, and some older breeders can profit by same. Don't think your doe will raise ten and have them as large and vigorous at weaning time as if she had only six or seven. Don't wean your youngsters too soon, six weeks is plenty young enough. Don't ever breed your doe until after these youngsters are weaned. Your doe should be at least six months old before bred and seven or eight are better for vitality and size. Don't, when buying, insist on a fine pedigree and blood line and say nothing as to the size and shape of your hare. Remember the smallest runt in a litter has just the same pedigree as the best one. Don't think that small and imperfect hares will breed your first class stock and a prize winner. Kill all your undesirable specimens and market them among your neighbors. Do not sell an inferior hare at any price, as it will do you a great deal of harm. Do not ship out a hare you would not want to receive if you were ordering one. Don't send out one you would not care to have everybody know where it came from. If there is a poultry and pet stock show in your neighborhood, see that your best pair is shown.

Don't get discouraged if you lose a few hares in spring or winter. Remember all chicks hatched are not going to be prize winners, no not the half of the eggs set will ever make a frier even. We had a chicken fancier here this spring after setting quite a few hens and an incubator had three puny chickens for his trouble;

another got his incubator too hot, expecting to hatch his chicks in record-breaking time, and lost them all; another laid his out too cool and went up town to tell how many he was going to hatch. Well, he got one and it was an Indian Runner Duck (moral, set duck eggs next time); another placed his eggs on the piano in the parlor so his youngsters would be the most musical in the town. After all these pains no chicks. Are these men discouraged? No. They just smiled and said we will set the old machine again. So if we lose a hare or two remember there are others who have trouble of their own. Then the rabbit season is the year around, not a few months in the spring and the demand is always the same, a great deal heavier than the supply.

BIG TIME AT BRIDGETON.

That down to date South Jersey Poultry Association, with headquarters at Bridgeton, N. J., are certainly pace-makers and in a class by themselves. On Wednesday evening, June 5, there were assembled on the lawn of Elmer D. Ogden all the members of the South Jersey Poultry Association and invited guests, accompanied by their wives and sweethearts. Refreshments and music were in order and it was one of the most enjoyable evenings ever held by the South Jersey Poultrymen. As our readers well know this is one of the most up to date Poultry Associations in the East, having their own club rooms, which are open day and night to the members, as well as all visiting Poultrymen. We are advised that their coming show promises to be far superior to any that they have as yet held in South Jersey. Chas. H. Maier is the Secretary and his address is 11 S. Laurel St., Bridgeton, N. J.

Attention Classified Advertisers !!

3 Mo. for $2.50 6 Mo. for $4.00

Let us reason together:

Poultry Fancier is published in the interests of the men who raise the high grade standard bred birds, which is the foundation of all pleasure and profit in Poultry raising.

It is read by people who are willing to pay the price of the real fanciers product and skill. It is read by the people whose ideas of Beauty are not alone based upon pounds of flesh, and dozens of eggs.

A circulation that will not pay the price of a setting of eggs, or a good bird is worthless to you. You are spending dollars in trying to hit a mark beyond your range.

But how many are paying for this kind of a circulation? Is it any wonder they say advertising doesn't pay? Who is to blame? The circulation of the Poultry Fancier represents the cream, and we sell it to you without buying so much milk, (by the milk I mean circulation that will not pay the price.)

It's the shot that hits the mark that wins the battle, and there is a buyer for every good bird that's raised, and for every egg that's laid.

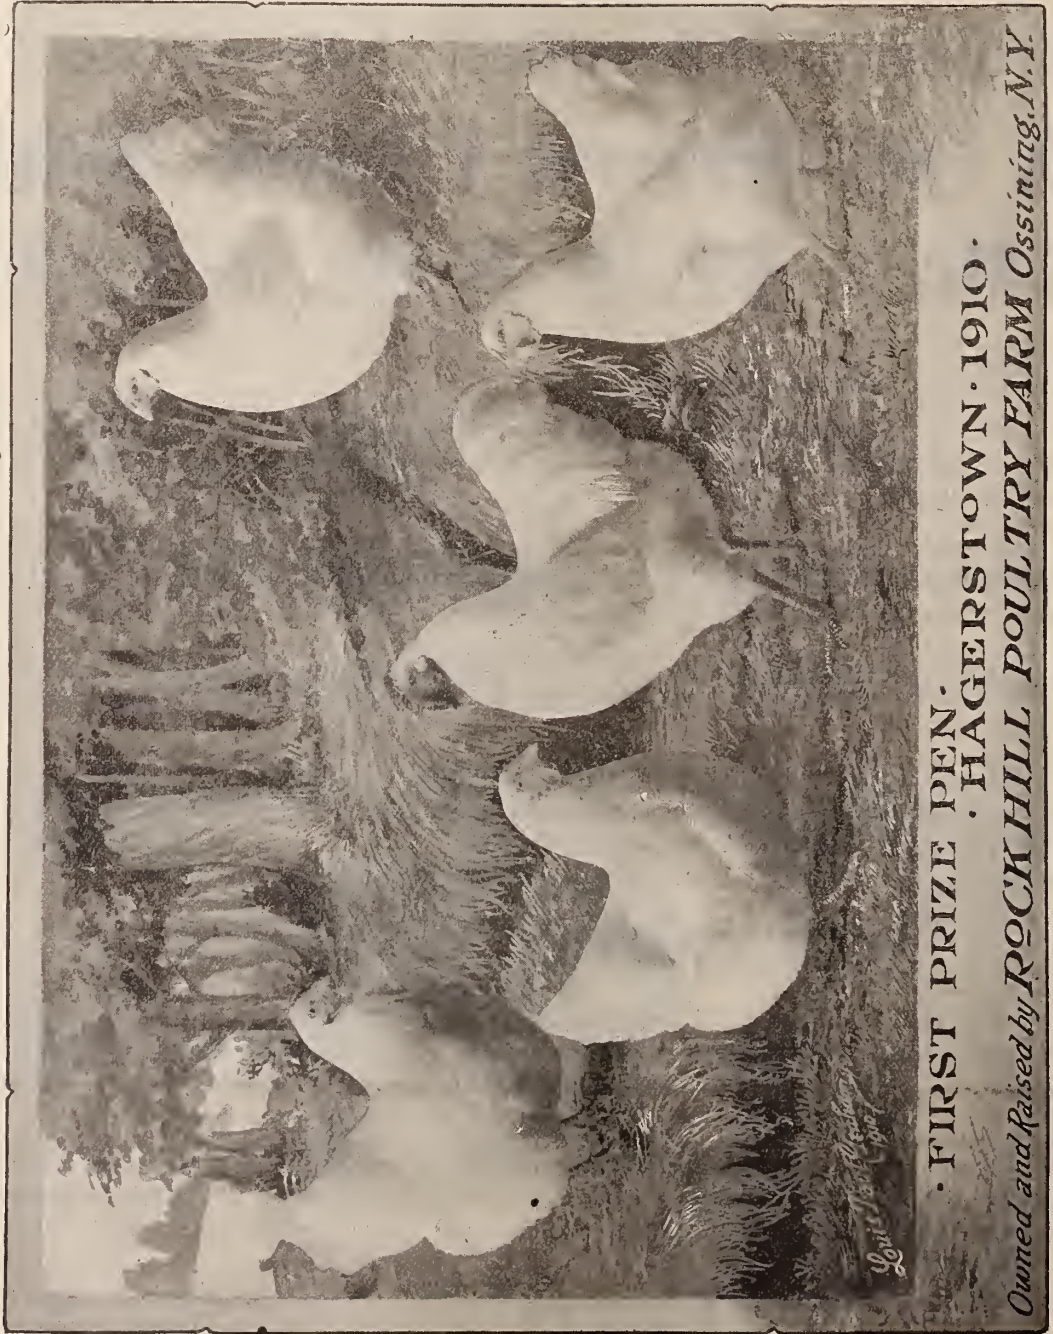

The circulation of the Fancier is the demand. Can you furnish the supply? During the next three months, our thousands of readers will spend mans thousands of dollars for stock and eggs, and for the price of a setting of eggs, we will insert your Add, 30 words, three times for $2.50.

Come reason together, and remember, every one of Poultry Fanciers subscribers is interested in Poultry, and after all (in advertising). It is the shots that hit the mark that wins the battle.

Which Breed to Select When Starting With Poultry

N all important question to the beginner in this great industry is the breed to which he will pin his faith and fortune.

I believe many look up a certain breed before they have really looked into its merits thoroughly, simply with the idea, "I am going in the chicken business and Smith said the Buttercups are the birds."

So Buttercups are taken up regardless of the fact that he is near a market where the brown shelled egg has the call and in a year when he has a good number of eggs to ship each week, he awakes to the fact that the premium is paid for brown eggs and his whites sell at a low figure and that Buttercups are not quite the thing, the Rock or Wyandotte being a much wiser choice.

Environment and conditions enter in selection of a breed in a great measure. By this I mean if one is going to start an egg farm, and intends to supply the high class hotel trade, he should select a breed which lays the white shelled egg, if New York is their shipping point. If Boston is to be supplied the Rocks, Wyandotte, Red or Orpington should be the bird. I have simply selected, these two cities as examples, as it is generally known that their demand is entirely opposite. Other large cities throughout the country have a preference and will pay a premium for the white or brown shelled egg. Other important points are, will it be a general utility fowl, that is a combination line, as eggs, broilers, roasters, fowls and capons, an egg farm or a fancy plant? Should it be the first named, a breed which is known to be a good egg producer as well as making a fine table fowl ought to be taken up. The second depends, as I have stated before, on the location as to the market you wish to supply, and the third on the man. This last statement may seem a bit queer to the reader, but I believe it to be a sound truth. To start in the fancy end of this business and make a success of it the breeder must have a thorough love of the bird he breeds, a true eye for color and a keen sense of the artistic. I have come in contact with some breeders who are conducting so-called fancy plants who have no sense of the artistic or eye for color. I have one case in mind in particular where the breeder has everything at his command, that is, he bought high-class birds through a friend who "knew the game," and had a great foundation stock. But he could not get the type grounded in his mind. Neither could he seem to differentiate as to color, the result being that his matings were entirely wrong both as to the general makeup and color scheme. He had good coaching, but he simply could not make use of it. Likewise when selecting birds for the shows, he could not pick the choice specimens and the best birds were left at home. What was the result of all this? An utter failure. This is why I say it is the man, in a large degree, should the fancy be the choice. I might modify this a little by saying it is the different sensibilities which the man possesses, as to whether success will be his or not, for it is "up to" the man in every line, be it utility or fancy, if the coveted goal is to be reached.

I am of the strong opinion that when the poultry business is decided upon the person entering it should make it an object to visit at least four different plants, at entirely different points, each farm having separate breeds and in various lines, such as egg farming, exhibition stock or market birds. Study their methods, take as many notes as possible and get the honest opinion of the owners.

After your visits are over and you have gone through all your data and boiled it down, also having sprinkled a bit of salt on all you have been told, and have compared one with another, sit down for a while and find out which line you are best fitted for and which will be the most congenial. If you have a friend who is in the business and has made a success of it, and upon whom you can depend, go to him and get his ideas and choice, as it will be of great help to you in many ways.

I often think if I had had some one to go to for advice during the first part of my poultry career upon whom I could have depended how many fatal mistakes I could have avoided. The reason there are so many failures in the poultry business is that one-half who enter it are entirely unfitted, both through lack of experience and financially. They have not been over the subject thoroughly, have no idea of the hard work and and poultry journals where one can make a small fortune with twenty-five hens in a back yard in one year, figure that if they have 225 hens their fortune will increase proportionately, throw all their small savings in and expect to come out ahead the first year. What is the result? Failure nine times out of ten.

I have seen it exemplified many times in past years. This business takes years of training, as in any well established business in hundreds of other lines. It means hard work and constant attention to master it. One cannot start to-day and come out on top tomorrow. Select your breed, study it well before starting, gain your experience at the expense of others, start small, work hard, apply all your energies and success ought to be yours.

Again Outclass All Competitors

At America's premier exhibition, BOSTON, JANUARY 1912, (where the annual meeting of The American Columbian Plymouth Rock Club was held), in competition with the foremost breeders of the country and likewise the best birds that could be produced, our "ROYALS" on only SIX entries simply out-classed all competitors by winning:

1st cock, 1st and 6th cockerel, 1st pen, 2nd pullet and 3rd hen. The American Columbian Plymouth Rock Club's beautiful specials for best colored male and best shaped male. Frank L. Platt's $10.00 cash special for best cockerel in the class, the Association's silver cup for best surface colored male, and the President's cash special, the greatest of all honors, for the best Columbian Plymouth Rock in the show, male or female.

A grand total of more first prizes than all other competitors combined; more Special Prizes than any other exhibitor and every First and Special Prize offered on males.

This great Championship record stands alone and unequalled—an achievement that has never been approached, where like quality and numbers were represented, by any other Columbian Plymouth Rock exhibitor in the history of the Boston Show, and proves beyond all question of doubt the superiority of our "Royals" and substantiates the fact that they still remain undisputed champions.

Our birds possess QUALITY in every sense that the term implies. Excellent layers, large in size, typical Rock type, fine head points and the clean "Royal" color, free from the smoky, splashed effect in body and fluff feathering that is so undesirable.

EGGS FOR HATCHING

Our breeding pens for 1912 have been mated with great care. They not only contain the sons and daughters of our "Royal" Champions, but are headed by noted sires themselves. From these we will sell eggs at $10.00 per 15 and we urge every Columbian Rock fancier who appreciates extreme high quality to write us before purchasing elsewhere. Other breeders may sell you eggs for less money but we believe the quality represented in the eggs we furnish can not profitably be duplicated at a less price. Handsome catalogue free.

Poultry Temple. Plan for a Permanent Home.

Just before this Bulletin went to press the President of the American Poultry Association spent a few days at the home of the Secretary, going over together the business of the Association, preparing matter for this Bulletin, etc. A careful survey of the needs are expressed in the suggested amendments offered by these two officials, as given elsewhere in this Bulletin.

One of the great needs is a PERMANENT HOME for the AMERICAN POULTRY ASSOCIATION. To start the ball rolling for this needed enterprise it is not necessary to amend the constitution. Suitable resolutions can be adopted at any annual meeting, voting funds, or laying plans for securing these funds without constitutional amendments.

Is a permanent home needed? Could you spend a day at the office of the busy Secretary you would not ask that question. The Secretary has his office in his home and three large rooms, each about fifteen by sixteen feet, are taken for the desks, books, papers, etc., of the AMERICAN POULTRY ASSOCIATION business. In addition to this, when supplies of Standards are on hand, a large part of the barn is used for storing the 25,000 Standards. For this office room, no rent is paid. Thousands of valuable papers, pictures, etc., go to waste each year in the hands of private parties that ought to be collected and preserved as mementoes of the growth of the poultry industry. Only by having a fixed home of its own can the Association begin the work of collecting such relics.

But HOW to get the money is the important item. Here is one plan worth considering and working out in detail.

Ask the leading cities of the country to make offers of suitable sites for a home and money donations for the building. Let such offers be submitted by mail to the members of the Association at the next annual election. Allow every member to cast one vote for the city he thinks should win for every dollar he will give to the building, paying one-tenth of his subscription in advance.

To illustrate, if a member wishes to give one hundred dollars to the new home, let him give ten dollars, and he is entitled to one hundred votes. The President and Secretary will each take one hundred votes as a starter. There are thousands of poultrymen able to give sums ten times this large and will gladly do so, no doubt. A fund of ten to fifteen thousand dollars can be easily raised among the members. The city that wins should raise so much more. There is a fund of $8,000 in the Treasury that could be used. Bonds could be issued for ten thousand dollars. Thus a first class four-story building in size around fifty by one hundred feet could be built. The first two floors could be rented to other business and the rents pay taxes, insurance, interest on the bonds, and establish a sinking fund to eventually take up the bonds.

What say you? Have you got a better plan? Or, HOW MUCH will you put your name down for?

The coming annual meeting should pass suitable resolutions and start some plan working to secure the funds for this permanent home.

Prof. Homer Jackson, for many years at the head of Poultry Husbandry at State College has resigned and accepted a position with Cyphers Incubator Company, at Buffalo, N. Y. Prof. Jackson is recognized as one of the foremost authorities on poultry in the country and his experimental work was greatly appreciated by the Poultrymen of Pennsylvania and stimulated the poultry industry in our State.

The Poultry department of State College has been handicapped in its work for lack of appropriation.

The Pennsylvania branch of the American Poultry Association is making an united effort to induce its legislature to appropriate sufficiently to have a poultry experiment station second to none in the country.

William H. Batesell, President of the Wisconsin Poultry Association for the year 1911, was presented with a paid admission as member of the American Poultry Association by the fellow members of the Association.

Through the efforts of Messrs. Batezell and Pettie the initial show held last season was a pronounced success. The Association is planning for a bigger show this year.

The Wisconsin Poultry Association is a member of the A. P. A. and the Penna. Branch received more new members from that live Poultry Section in the last year than any individual section of the State. Let all poultry associations take the same interest as the Wisconsin boys.

More About the Carneaux Pigeon

By George H. Hughes

I do not claim that all Carneaux are good, neither do I claim that my Carneaux are better than the other fellows; but I do know they are, in one particular, like other pigeons, and that is, there are the good, bad and indifferent kinds.

I have imported hundreds of them, and only by careful selection and breeding have I been able to obtain what suits me for size, style and working qualities.

As I said before, Carneaux are like other birds and if some one who decides to try them out and gets hold of a lot of old birds, culls and poor workers, they are naturally not very much impressed with the Carneaux. This has happened and will probably happen again.

I have been asked the questions, "Will Carneaux squabs weigh one pound each when old enough to kill?" and "How old must they be before ready to market?" To the first question I will answer as I have before. I have weighed squabs in pens where every squab between three and four weeks old weighed sixteen ounces or more. Of course, this is not all the time. Every person who raises squabs has culls occasionally, some oftener than others; but as a good all round squab producer, and a bird that in its pure state never has a dark meated squab, the Carneaux stands ahead of any bird that I have ever owned or observed.

Considerable has been said about the feeding qualities of the Homer and there are, no doubt, some who know no better, really believe the Homer the best feeder of all varieties; but I want to call attention to a test that took place which I carefully and faithfully watched while it progressed. The experiment was made by a practical pigeon breeder, whom I accidentally called on while the experiment was in progress. Two pairs of squabs were used, one pair of Carneaux and one pair of Homers. The largest Homer squab was put under the Carneaux and the largest Carneaux squab put under the Homer, while the Homer squabs were traded about in the same way. Both pairs of squabs were hatched on the same day. The pair of youngsters that were cared for by the Carneaux weighed the same until nine days old when the Carneaux squabs gained one ounce on the Homer squab. When seventeen days old the Carneaux squab weighed fourteen ounces, the Homer squab twelve ounces. When twenty-seven days old, the last time they were weighed, the Carneaux squab weighed sixteen ounces, the Homer squab fourteen ounces. The pair under the Homers were given practically the same care and attention as the Carneaux, weighed the same, etc., and when twenty-seven days old the Homer squab weighed thirteen ounces, the Carneaux squab sixteen ounces. These squabs were dressed and weighed on the twenty-seventh day. The Carneaux were a handsome pair of White meated squabs, weighing one pound each. The test is proof of what I have claimed, since knowing the Carneaux as well as I do, that they will raise more pounds of squabs in the same time, with practically the same amount of feed, than any other breed. The experiment also proves the Carneau as good if not a better feeder than the Homer, which, I will admit, are hard to beat.

The Carneau is a beautiful bird to look at, particularly the reds. The deep copper red with the magnificent golden bronze hackle makes them, to my eye, the handsomest bird in the pigeon family. They are full breasted, wide across the back, with a deep keel, as the pair of squabs in illustration will show, and are without doubt the best feeders I ever saw. Go when you may and examine the squabs in the nests, you will find them always fed up. They are fast workers and very vigorous.

Another nice feature is they are very easily domesticated. They pay no attention to strangers, are not easily frightened, and become very tame with a little careful handling.

Buff Cochin Bantam Male, a Madison Square winner, B. O. Schilling, Brighton, N. Y.

The Carneau is of French origin, yet some claim that they were first bred in Belgium. At any rate the origin of the Carneau is very much remote, but whoever originated them should have their statue in the hall of fame.

ATTENTION COCHIN BANTAM BREEDERS.

All those desiring to join the Cochin Bantam Club of America should get into communication with Geo. B. Fitzpatrick, 7431 Duquesne St., Swissvale, Penna. It is up to every breeder of Cochin Bantams to get in line and perfect an organization in the interests of Cochin Bantams, which has long been needed. We urge all of our readers that are interested in Cochin Bantams to write Mr. Fitzpatrick, stating the variety that they breed, etc., and he will give you all the information.

WISSINOMING, PENNA., SHOW.

The coming exhibition of the Wissinoming Poultry Association promises to be of unusual importance. The Association has secured a hall this year that has

Benefits of Membership in the Waterfowl Club of America

The question is often asked, "What advantage may be derived from membership in the Waterfowl Club of America?"

I know by past experiences that waterfowl breeders throughout the country have received much benefit from their connection with this organization.

It is a fact that we have had difficulties in obtaining proper recognition in the show room. There was a time when waterfowl could not be shown in pens, very few special prizes were offered and only at the largest shows an exhibitor was allowed to show only singly or in pairs, and in some obscure corner, illy lighted and poorly ventilated. Now all that is changed. There are few special poultry associations which do not offer some special prize and waterfowl is given a prominent place in the exhibit. This change has largely been brought about by a few enthusiasts who have joined forces to promote the welfare of water-enough interest in the subject to join the Club can expect Club patronage.

The Club is striving to advance the different varieties of breeds to better standards and to establish a uniform and sensible ideal towards which all breeders may direct their efforts. The A. P. A. has proposed to give the Waterfowl Club a large share in framing the standard for the various waterfowl breeds.

As a club member one becomes acquainted with a large number of persons especially interested in this subject, and they are a large and influential class, viz:—lawyers, doctors, clergymen, merchants, farmers, poultrymen—in fact, men and women from all walks of life joined together to promote the welfare of waterfowl.

There is considerable benefit to be derived from belonging to an active, alive organization because it stimulates its men and women to greater efforts. We fowl in general and organized a Club for that purpose.

Furthermore, it was next to impossible to find any publisher interested sufficiently to print a paragraph or two in the interests of waterfowl. Notices of winnings found no place in current publications and were considered unimportant. Now all this is changed. Breeders find encouragement in the extensive press space devoted to waterfowl and some papers are devoting a special issue every now and then to the subject. I am in receipt of many letters requesting information in regard to items of interest in waterfowl circles and I predict that in a short time waterfowl will be recognized as being just as important as any other fowl in the country.

When one becomes a member of the Club he will be protected in his purchases and sales by the rules of the Club. The Club tends to create a general interest and so increases the demand for birds at better prices. Any breeder who has often have better success when wholesome competition is encouraged. To this end the Club offers prizes at the leading shows all over the country to be competed for only by its own members which is considered a good thing, both for the amateur and professional alike.

This Club is only in its infancy, but it has unlimited opportunity. Its ideals are high, it is composed of enthusiastic and devoted members who are earnest, conscientious and unanimous in their efforts to promote the welfare of waterfowl breeders.

If I could impress upon the minds of all waterfowl breeders the necessity of joining this club there would soon result a large and complete organization. The Waterfowl Club needs the services of every breeder, every breeder needs the opportunity of the Club. By coming forward and joining forces with us the officers and members will be greatly encouraged and the efficiency of the Club enhanced.

Photographs Wanted

It develops that the request published in last month's Fancier, page 549, by the undersigned, for photographs to display the extent and the value of the State's poultry industry was incomplete in that it should have contained the request that besides the owner's name and address and the subject of the picture there should be some condensed description.

For instance, if the photograph is of a poultry house, the dimensions, capacity and cost would be interesting. If of a poultry farm, the number of acres, the number of birds raised annually, number kept, number of people employed, etc. If of a city back lot, the number kept, eggs laid and profit made. In this way the value of these photographs, in an education sense, will be greatly increased.

Photographs are wanted of every variety of poultry bred in Pennsylvania, male and female; of birds that have made an exceptional record at laying, or in the show room, or that have attained exceptional weight.

Let every patriotic poultry man or woman who is a resident of our great Keystone state make an effort to supply one or more good poultry photographs. Mail same in care of W. Theo. Wittman, Allentown, Pa.

GILT EDGE RECOMMENDATIONS FOR A POULTRY SHOW.

The highest prized possessions of W. Theo. Wittman, superintendent poultry department, Great Allentown Fair Poultry Show, are a stack of letters from prominent poultry men all over America who have shown at or attended the above show.

The upbuilding of the poultry department of a country fair into a great poultry show of national prominence has been with him a labor of enthusiasm and love of the business, rather than a pecuniary one.

It has not been easy work and his determination that it first of all should be a poultry show honest and above board has caused at times considerable friction and opposition. But, as his real motives became organized this happily disappeared and to-day poultry people everywhere recognize that the iron-clad ways of doing things at Allentown were merely for equal justice to all.

On account of the great shortage of early hatched chicks this year it will be very hard for the early shows, and all breeders so lucky as to have any early birds this year should grasp the opportunity of showing at these shows. Allentown will again pay $4.00 First and $2.00 Second on Single birds, and $20.00 First and $10.00 Second on pens on all varieties of poultry. On pigeons, $2.00 First, $1.00 Second. Premium list with announcements of list of judges, etc., will be out next month.

The Farmers Best Fowl.

Why is the S. C. White Leghorn the best fowl for the farmer, I am asked? Because, Well, that's a woman's reason, but I am going to tell the rest. Because there are many reasons. This talk of killing a big breed and having something, is like a pail with the bottom out—it won't hold water.

If you want something large why not kill a heifer two years old? That is also bigger than a Leghorn. So much for that delusion.

Illusion is what you see and don't, delusion is what you know and don't and confusion is what they do when they don't see and know. See?

Next the average yield of a Rock or Wyandotte is 175 eggs; of a Brahma, 150; Cochins, 140; of a Leghorn, 190. It costs about 85c. a year to keep a Rock or Wyandotte. It costs 40c. to keep and 65c. to raise a Leghorn.

Why do we need the Weary Willie fraternity on a farm anyhow? The Leghorns are the "git there" kind, born with a business thrift. They have grit and hustle. If you keep up with them you will be going some.

Leghorns are not as nervous as some of the men who care for them. When a tall man built like a telephone pole stoops down to pick up something no wonder they fly, so would you.

If a giant several times your size came to lay hands on you what would you do? Ordinary common sense will take that out of a flock of Leghorns.

With a little grain in your pocket to drop occasionally you will soon have them on the lapel of your coat trying to look in. Don't let a dog in with them. The best broiler and the quickest grown, the tastiest also is a Leghorn grown by a man with brains. The best roast for a small family is a soft roasted Leghorn and most families are small, that is that eat chicken. The fellow who says, "get something new, don't start with the old standbys" is off his base. Suppose you do start with a novelty breed and raise ten thousand of them. You will live till the year 2200 because there will not be much call for them. If you have 10,000 Leghorns tell your Editor of the poultry journal. He will sell them all.

Then the Leghorn eggs are uniformly white, fine flavored. The market could use as many again as we now have. When it comes to beauty, where is there a finer example? No use to cross examine. The court concedes it.

Without a doubt the National S. C. W. Leghorn standard is the beauty plate of fashions. The Leghorns are easily kept in confinement, easier than many breeds. A two foot fence keeps mine, that is, it is covered over the top. It don't cost more than a 6 ft. fence.

In summing up we may give the Leghorns the following points of excellence: are less cost to raise; less cost to keep; no drones to complain about; well filled egg baskets; ready sale for broilers at lowest cost to produce; sale of surplus cockerels; the most beautiful and best profit paying of all; the most delicious flavored meat for the table.

The accompanying cut shows a house in which 1134 eggs were gathered in one day in January.

The S. C. Brown Leghorn.

In looking over my May Poultry Fancier I noted with interest the Editor's comment on the Single Comb Brown Leghorn. As this breed appeals very strongly to me I was pleased to note his remarks and also his request for Brown Leghorn articles. I wish to say right here I believe Single Comb Brown Leghorns when bred and bred right are one of the best and most handsome of any breed being bred to-day, the female being a dream when bred right, and to be bred right must be Standard bred. When you note her soft, even color she certainly is good to look at.

The breeding of Single Comb Brown Leghorns, when bred to meet Standard requirements, is no boy's play. But I believe there are more and better Brown Leghorns to-day than ever before in their history. I have noted with pleasure so many small Brown Leghorn breeders are producing to-day those elegantly colored, soft brown, finely shaped females, and if they are not a dream in hedom I don't know what is. I well remember my first Browns. When I was a boy I was hen crazy, running bare foot over the country looking and trading for whatever suited me in the hen line. One time I traded for a Black Breasted Red Game Cock. He would liked to have killed all of my father's common roosters. They took a day and fought it out and if you ever saw a mad man it was my father. And so it went. I had Brahmas, Hamburgs, Bantams, Cochins and finally one night I got my brother, older than myself, to take an old mare out of the barn, hook her up unbeknown to my father, and we started. We finally landed at a farmer's who had Single Comb Brown Leghorns. I simply wanted to buy his whole flock, but my capital was limited and I bought one cockerel and five pullets and came home to face the Music, and there was Music. Father said the little runts were too small, all comb and not much good, but I kept them and was a proud boy of my flock and they were good quality and I simply have been an admirer of the Browns ever since. I know they are popular and good layers, fine eating table fowl, and of all the Leghorn tribe I would tie to them. They are one of the hard fowls for the artist to portray on canvas and when he does if you do not see a thing of beauty call me a false prophet and I will acknowledge myself guilty.

To-day there are not many of the old time breeders breeding the Browns. Their ranks have been taken by a younger class of breeders, and I predict they are producing a better class of Browns. One of the best breeders of Brown Leghorns we ever had and who dropped out for some reason, and I have often wondered why, for he certainly produced the goods and I bought from him and received the squarest treatment of any man I had dealt with, is W. Theo. Wittman. I have never met Mr. Wittman, but I admire his business ability and I certainly admired his Brown Leghorns. Hoping for more and better Brown Leghorns and more interest in their breed and more of an interest with them at the shows, I remain,

Yours truly,

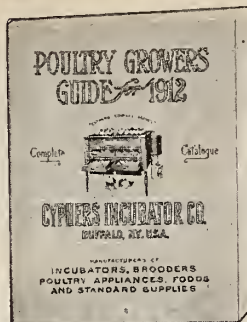

E. E. BOYCE.

Chas. M. Weikert, Littlestown, Pa.

It does not take long after taking up poultry raising as a business to become convinced that the work, as a whole, is only a sum of little things and in proportion to our faithfulness in performing the little daily duties or tasks will our success be.

I think that one of the most valuable possessions in poultry culture is one's good common sense. If we use this in every department of the work and let it help us to decide in matters that perplex us, we will be somewhat independent of following blindly everyone's leading. We must think and reason and know the why and wherefore before doing anything of importance. From the start let method and system prevail in the care and management of our fowls.

There are thousands of people each year in all parts of the country taking up poultry breeding for the first time, and are naturally anxious to get started right.

I have been getting dozens of letters each year from people who want to embark in the poultry business and want information as to how much capital it will take, how much land they will need, how many hens they will have to keep in order to make a good comfortable living, which breed they should select, if the Minorca is as good as the Leghorn, or Rock, or Orpington and so on.

There seems to be a disposition with most people to start into the poultry business on too large a scale—that is they seem to think that it is wholly unnecessary to first fit themselves for the undertaking, as they would do were they to take up almost any other occupation.

Those who have met with the greatest success have been content to start in a small way and expand as their knowledge of the business and their ability to handle it warranted the expansion. Slow growth is always the surest.

The mushroom springs up in a single night, but is short lived. It takes years and years to grow the sturdy oak, but its growth is substantial and when it is finally matured it amounts to something.

As to the amount of Capital required, this of course depends upon the kind and size of buildings that are to be erected and kind of equipment to be installed, and the kind of stock to be purchased. It is not necessary that buildings be elaborate, the main requisite being that they be so constructed that they will protect the fowls from the cold and wet. Of course the fellow with plenty of money can make his houses as elaborate as he pleases, but the average man does not care to spend any money needlessly, principally because he does not have it to spend.

My advice to the beginner is to get good, pure-bred stock for a foundation, whether he is going to breed for fancy points or principally for the market. It has been proven time and again that pure-bred stock is the most profitable. It costs a little more to start with and standard bred stock, to be sure, but it is a profitable investment in the end. The birds that are to be marketed mature uniformly and make a nice appearance when dressed and placed on the market. This will enable the producer to command a little more than current market price for them. More eggs will be secured from a flock of this kind and the eggs will be uniform in color and size, they too, making a nice appearance and commanding a little better price than a mixed lot. While it costs a little more to start with pure-bred stock, the extra expense stops right there, for it does not cost anymore to raise pure-bred chicks than it does to raise mongrels.

The beginner in raising poultry should bear in mind that the success depends greatly upon his own ability and efforts.

There are a lot of things for him to learn, though he may not realize it, nor can anyone tell him all he ought to know. He must, to a certain extent, "work out his own salvation." If he is energetic and observing, he will soon find himself in a position to keep poultry at a good profit, and in the course of time he will have no trouble in making a comfortable living from his hens.

ROCK HILL FARM ANNOUNCEMENT

To the Public:

I have accepted the position of manager of the Rock Hill Poultry Farm, succeeding F. W. Corey and I wish to state that the same methods of business I pursued in the past will be continued. In taking up the work where Corey left off I find what I actually believe to be one of the largest and best lot of birds in America, and never before has Rock Hill Farm been in a better position to offer high class birds at popular prices. We have young birds in all varieties that can win in the strongest competition. Size and quality is what counts at the early shows. We can supply you and every bird is bred from the famous Rock Hill Blue Ribbon winners at America's greatest shows and we are going to make the prices with in reach of the masses.

The Grand Old Asiatics

By W. N. Watson, Sunbury, Pa.

Recently there has been considerable said in some of the poultry journals in regard to the passing of the Asiatics—the ancestors of most of the good, new breeds. The Cochin branch has been especially singled out, and more particularly the buff members of the family, though they are the grandest of them all, being head and shoulders above all other fowls, and second only to the American Eagle.

Most of the comment is to the effect that they have been bred too much for style and reach standard requirements at the expense of utility, or the production of eggs and meat. Why should they not be kept up to the highest standard? They are thoroughbreds of the best style, magnificent creations. Surely a few people in this great country should be able to see something more than the commercial side of the market, eggs at so much per dozen or flesh at so much per pound. And if a few or more should happen to see the beauty of these birds, enough good specimens might be produced to bring them back to the position they held twelve or fifteen years ago.

The fact that there was only one specimen shown at the late Madison Square Garden Show was commented on in a number of accounts, and some referred to it a second time. Even an Englishman mentioned it, making the only unfavorable comment on the bird, calling attention to certain good qualities which it did not possess, but overlooking the exceptional points it did possess, carriage and fluff and softness of hock,—but enough of this. It may be that the loneliness of the bird will do some good and bring out a better showing next winter, as it was merely an accident that only one bird happened to be there, and not a fact that they are as nearly extinct as might be supposed. It has been the writer's pleasure to breed these birds for eighteen years, and to have bred and owned the one shown and mentioned above; and the pleasure of breeding them is growing, if anything, and not likely to diminish, from present indications. If the journals would give the bird a push, and a few old time breeders would join the club, an impression might be made and a full class of Cochins be seen again at the New York show, that would bring to notice the fact that there are things better than utility or 200-egg stock.

TRENTON, N. J. SHOW.

The 3rd annual exhibition of the Trenton Poultry and Pigeon Association will be held December 2nd to 7th. They have secured the Masonic temple, which is the largest and best exhibition hall in the city.

The Trenton Association is not only one of the largest in the state of New Jersey, but one of the largest in the East, and every member is putting his shoulder to the wheel to make the third annual exhibition the best that they have ever held. Last year this Association's dates conflicted with Madison Square, but notwithstanding this fact they had more birds than they could possibly handle in their building.

Trenton is one of the hot beds of fancy poultrydom, and it is stated there are as many good birds to the square foot in and around Trenton as in any place in the country.

They offer liberal cash prizes and a good list of specials will be in order.

Full announcement of it will be made later.

The following officers will have charge of the show: John F. MacKay, Supt., Wm. Rowley, Assist. Supt., Harvey Rogers, Show Sec. The address of Mr. Rogers is 1520 E. Clinton Ave., Trenton, N. J., to whom all communications should be addressed. Get in line and show your birds at Trenton. The Poultry Fancier will keep you advised as to the doings of this hustling organization.

CHICAGO POULTRY SOCIETY ORGANIZED

On May 29, 1912, the Chicago Poultry Society was organized in the Great Northern Hotel with the following objects in view: "Organized for the purpose of obtaining a permanent home for the American Poultry Association and the general advancement of the Poultry Industry."

The meeting was a very enthusiastic one and the following were elected to serve as its officers: Jas. W. Bell, President; E. M. Whitney, Vice President; Henry Frank, Jr., Secretary, Fred. L. Kimmey, Treasurer; Executive board, Frank Heck, J. G. Budde, F. A. Kulp and Robert Joos.

The American Poultry Association is in real need of a permanent home and the object for organizing the Chicago Poultry Society is to work hard to get it located in Chicago. To accomplish this hard task it will be necessary for everybody interested to give their very best efforts to secure the home's location here, as many other cities naturally want it and will work hard to get it. You probably remember the old adage: "United we stand, divided we fail—or fall." This is the purpose of organizing the Chicago

Poultry Society—that we may all concentrate our efforts in one strong, compact body that will really have influence and power behind it. We need YOU and need you greatly. Old King Solomon said: "In a multitude of counsel there is wisdom," so come on boys and help us.

Membership fees are $1.00, including first year's dues, and everybody interested in poultry culture is eligible to membership in the society. Address either the President, Jas. W. Bell, 542 S. Dearborn St., Chicago, or Henry Frank, Jr., Secretary, Tinley Park, Illinois.

CENTRAL PENNA. SHOW DATES:—

Williamsport, Nov. 27, 28, 29 and 30. Bloomsburg, Dec. 3, 4, 5, 6 and 7. Lewistown, Dec. 31., Jan., 1, 2 and 3. Sunbury, Jan. 7, 8, 9 and 10. Pottsville, Dec. 2, 3, 4, 5, 6 and 7.

Sunbury has always been a hot-bed of Fanciers, and with such able men as Mr. Ammon A. Geise, Pres., Mr. M. A. McFarland, Vice-Pres., H. Y. Tobias, Sec'y. and Treas., and Mr. D. H. Aurand, Asst. Sec'y., more can be expected than ever before in the way of a bang up show for Sunbury. By the way, a change of name, if you please. "The Sunbury Penna. Poultry Association." Judges engaged: Mr. H. M. Kenner and F. G. Wile. Cooping by Genesee Cooping Co.

Bloomsburg, Pa., like Hagerstown, Md., stands for chickens in the thoughts of the fancier. Glance over this list of men who will make the third annual, Dec. 3-7 the greatest show ever held in Bloomsburg: Pres., W. G. Leutz; Vice-Pres., Boyd Johnson, D. E. Bogart; Sec'y., S. J. Johnson; Treas., Joe L. Townsend; Supt., C. E. Kesty; Directors, C. L. Pensyl, C. E. Kesty, Clyde Kemp, A. H. Strok, A. R. Dykeman, C. L. Hawbecker, Bruce Sneiderman, Arthur Roan, C. N. Ohl. Judges, Wm. C. Denny and Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Koons. Every one is on the jump among the poultrymen of "Bloom" and we expect to be able to dish something up right off the platter each month about this live bunch.

Lewistown, Pa., with Frank W. Speck as Pres., H. C. Burkett, Vice-Pres., Chas. Nighthart, Treas., Robert Foster, Sec'y. and Press Representative, assures Lewistown of a Poultry Show conducted as a Show should be conducted. Seldom has an Association more representative men in its makeup, and it goes without saying that this year's show will be larger and better than ever.

Williamsport, Pa., is laying plans to conduct her best show yet, and from the reports read by the chairmen of the different committees at the June meeting, many new innovations will appear. It is the intention this year to break all records in special prizes. Williamsport has always prided herself on her large prize list, and this year the exhibitors can look for the greatest list yet. Sec'y. Geo. P. Stryker has opened his office for the season and from now on the congenial Sec'y. will be on the job. Any one interested in the Williamsport show affairs need not hesitate to write George for any information desired. You will receive the information desired by return mail.

Seldom have the Fanciers of the towns of Central Pennsylvania been favored with a greater treat than that afforded by Mr. DeLancey's trip through Central Penna. during the first week of June, talking to large crowds at Lewistown, Bloomsburg, Bellenfonte and Williamsport. These visits will be continued at a later date, as it is Mr. DeLancey's intention to visit all the Associations of Central Penna.

If the comments of the daily press in the towns in which Mr. DeLancey spoke are any criterion these talks will be of lasting benefit to the Poultry industry.

Mr. DeLancey has always taken more than the "Boost me and I will boost you" spirit of the average Poultry Journalist in Penna. Show matters, which has placed him close to the heart of the real Fancier. Thank you, Frank, for these pleasant visits and let them be as frequent as your busy life will allow.

Mr. A. D. Ullrich, Press Representative of the Lewistown Association, and by the way, one of the real live wires of that hustling Association, is responsible for the following:

A member of their Association set 15 eggs under a hen. After being on the nest 24 days she brought out 25 chicks. He had no nests except straw back of a board on the ground, across one side of the coop where the hens all laid. This motherly old biddy was not satisfied with fifteen eggs.

As the other hens deposited their eggs near her she would leave the nest and roll the eggs over into her nest until she evidently thought she had about all she could cover. Her owner, who watched the proceedings, awaited developments and was rewarded by having "Biddy" bring out 25 big, fluffy chicks, all of which she is mothering. (This is no joke but a fact.) That's some chicks.

We mourn the fact that Pottsville, Pa., and Bloomsburg, Pa., conflict in dates this year, both shows being advertised for week of Dec. 3rd. Cannot this be remedied? True, the show season is all too short, but why? When Williamsport held it's first early show many exhibitors held up their hands in holy horror, proclaiming that it would be impossible to have birds ready by Dec. 1st. Those same exhibitors to-day are strong in advocating an early show. Get wise. You have the same chance as the other fellow, what more do you want? Let us get started early in Nov., and less will be the conflicting dates.

We have not received dates as yet of the Hughesville and Catasauqua shows. Let us have them and make them fit in right with the other shows on the circuit.

When a show as early as June first has almost $1,000 secured for premiums you can count on it being a hummer. Hats off to Pottsville.

THE SHOW WORTH WHILE.

The largest show of the year will be held in the largest city in the grandest state in the greatest nation of the Globe, at Little Rock, Ark., week of November 25 to 30 inclusive.

With the $2,500 in cash premiums and specials, together with the fifty loving cups, club cups and medals and their Amateur department, this will be the greatest show ever held in the South. The Little Rock Poultry Association has gone ahead, and not backward, and to better care for its fast increasing show has incorporated and is in a strong financial condition. Last year they paid every premium in full and promptly and delivered every cup, handsomely engraved, but the delay caused by the engravers on the cups has been overcome this year by having the greater part done in advance.

This year, 1912, will see for the first time in any show room a separate and complete show conducted by and for amateurs only. The birds in this department will not be entered in the open show, nor will the birds in the open show be allowed to compete in the amateur classes, thereby making it a strictly amateur show. The same entry fees and the same judges will apply to both shows.

The secretary has spent much valuable time in preparing the premium list, together with the list of specials, which is now in the hands of the printer and will be mailed within a very few days. This premium list will contain much of interest to all lovers and breeders of pure-bred poultry and the amount of premiums is such that should you be a winner it will be profitable to you.

The dates of this Fifth Annual Show are November 25 to 30 and you can tell by the list of judges that quality will be the paramount question. There will positively be no names or cards or anything permitted on the coops that might enable the judges to tell who owns the birds, but after the awards are made each exhibitor is welcome to advertise as he sees fit.

With such well known men as C. A. Emry, Carthage, Mo., F. J. Marshall, Atlanta, Ga., and F. H. Shellabarger, West Liberty, Iowa, as judges there will be no question as to the awards. These men have a reputation that assures every exhibitor a square deal.

Every bird will be covered by insurance while in the show room and every care taken to prevent accidents and disease. The Association feels very highly honored to announce that Mr. Frank Meek will again act as superintendent. Mr. Meek has filled this position throughout the South for the past dozen years and needs no introduction. Last year he returned hundreds of birds in the same coops they were received.

The Rockland Farm, Benson, Md., D. Lee, Proprietor.

Among the most prominent breeders of White Plymouth Rocks in the East the name of D. Lee stands out with increasing prominence, due not only to the fact of the splendid victories his birds have won in many of our leading shows, but also on account of the strict business methods which characterize all his transactions. His name stands for honor wherever it is known in the Poultry world. His word rings true in every clime. To know him is to respect him. To secure his friendship is an honor not to be lightly esteemed, for it is something real tangible, so to speak, and stands out in a kind of personality which differs most widely from the nature of that friend's hip one is so accustomed to meet.

No wonder that the inhabitants of Benson, Md., take such evident pride in pointing out to the stranger within their gates the grand old Southern mansion, so popularly known as the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lee in the social world, as well as the home of the Rockland White Rocks in the Poultry world. The Rockland Farm is situated but a short distance from Benson, Md., in one of the most picturesque and charming sections of the state, and contains a large number of acres of as beautiful laying land as can be found anywhere in the country. It is a natural and ideal home for poultry, and we predict that the future will reveal wonderful results achieved in the White Rock world under the skillful and faithful oversight of Mr. Lee.

The equipment on the Rockland Farm, when completed, will be second to none in this or any other country. Nothing will be omitted that is essential to the comfort and health of Mr. Lee's feathered friends, thus insuring all of his customers the highest possible fertility in hatching eggs, and unusual origin in baby chicks. The youngsters will have unlimited free range, roaming at will through a beautiful grove of from 18 to 20 acres, through which cooling streams flow incessantly the whole year through.

The natural facilities for the rearing of poultry on the Rockland Farm are certainly as ideal as we have seen in all our travels, and we take this opportunity to sound a warning note to the boys to look out for the Rockland Farm White Rock Alleys of the future, for Mr. Lee's beautiful birds will certainly have to be reckoned with in many of our largest show rooms in competition for the "Ribbons of Blue."

The winnings of the Rockland White Rocks during the past seasons were as follows: The Great Hagerstown Fair, 2nd Hen, 1-2nd Cockerel, 3rd pullet, 1st Pen, old; 1st Pen, young. No cocks shown in single class. At Madison Square Garden, where the greatest class of White Rocks ever assembled that were ever shown in the East, Mr. Lee won 3-6 pullet. Allentown, 1st and 2nd Pullet in a class of 20. Also 2nd pen, 4th cockerel, and special for best White Rock in the show. At Baltimore, Md., 3rd cock, 3rd hen, 2-4-5 cockerel and 2nd pullet. Also special in two other shows for the best bird in the American Class. A wonderful record, indeed, of which even our oldest and most expert breeders might well be proud. Mr. Lee's home is very charming, indeed. Planned after one of those grand old Southern mansions (of which we Northerners love to read) complete in every detail, of distinctive Southern architecture, containing every modern appliance for comfort and health, homelike in all its environments, a very pleasing setting, indeed, moulded into perfect harmony with its unusually attractive surroundings. Greatly regretting the fact that we were compelled, on account of other urgent business, to leave such congenial and helpful surroundings, we bade goodbye

H. M. Kenner Now Manager of Rock Hill Poultry Farm.

The Well Known Manager of Chestnut Hill Poultry Farm, and one of Pennsylvania's Best Known Judges, Now Manager of This Well Known Plant.

Time makes many changes. In our last issue and in this issue we announced that Judge F. W. Corey, Mgr. of the Rock Hill Farm, had resigned his position and was moving to California, and now comes the announcement that H. M. Kenner, the well-known judge and formerly manager of Chestnut Hill Poultry Farm, of Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, Pa., succeeded Mr. Corey to this position July first.

Judge Kenner needs no introduction to our readers. As a poultryman he is one of marked ability. Not many years ago he had taken the management of Chestnut Hill Poultry Farm, and from mere nothing he was able to build it up to be one of the best and one of the most widely known plants in the country, with a reputation for Barred Plymouth Rocks that stood second to none. As we all know, Kenner is no "kid glove" and "white collar" poultryman. He is a worker, and works with an ability to win, and the Poultry world will be pleased to know that Rock Hill Farm, with its great reputation throughout the world, will be managed by a man that is equal to the occasion and that the excellent work and great reputation made by the former manager, F. W. Corey, will be well maintained under the able and efficient management of Mr. Kenner. The same breeds will be kept. Mr. Kenner advises us that there are to-day on the Rock Hill Poultry Farm some of the grandest lots of birds on the American continent, and we dare say that Rock Hill Farm Blue Ribbon strains will again be the conspicuous winners at many of the big shows.

We are well aware of the fact that Mr. Kenner, while manager of the Chestnut Hill Poultry Farm, made his prices within reach of the mass of people, and he advises us that the same methods of management and business methods that made Chestnut Hill Farm famous will be carried out at the Rock Hill Farm.

Elsewhere in this issue will be seen the advertisement of the Rock Hill Farm, and our readers will be profited by looking over this ad., not only in the July issue, but in the following issues as well. The entire Poultry fraternity wishes Mr. Kenner continued success. Rock Hill Farm has been sold by Gen. McAlpin to Mr. E. Vanetten, prominently identified with the N. Y. Central R. R.

THE HUGHESVILLE SHOW.

The Lycoming Poultry, Pigeon and Pet Stock Association elected the following officers: President, B. F. Kahler; S. B. Csunt and G. H. Miller, Vice-Presidents; Dr. H. T. Smith, Treasurer; B. Monroe Posten, Secretary. This Association is doing very effective work for the advancement of the Poultry Industry in their locality and last year held a very successful show, and judging by the amount of hard and intelligent work which is being done this year for the coming show, it promises to be a grand success.

Their show will be held in December, the exact dates of which will be published later, as well as the name of the Judge.

JUST WHAT YOU NEED.

Elsewhere in this issue will be seen the advertisement of T. F. Potter & Co., the well known Mfgs. of Portable Poultry Houses. This concern is so well known to the Poultrymen of the United States that anything we might say would be simply gilding Gold.

Their Portable Poultry Houses are considered to be the most practical on the market by the Poultrymen, and at the price which they quote them at it is much cheaper to buy them than to build. In other words, it is the wonder of the Poultrymen how they can be able to manufacture and ship Portable Poultry Houses at such low figures.

They have a catalogue showing the different kinds of houses and prices of same, which I want to impress upon our readers' minds, that they should have before they start building their hen houses. Be sure and send for Potter's catalogue. It is free to you. Just mention the fact that you saw this reading notice or their advertisement in the Poultry Fancier and their catalogue will be mailed to you promptly.

A NEW POULTRY ORGANIZATION.

The Fanciers of Latrobe, Penna., have organized a Poultry Association, and it will be known as the Latrobe Poultry Association. Their object is to promote and advance the Poultry industry in their locality and also to hold an annual show, announcements of which will be made in a later issue of Poultry Fancier.

The Latrobe Association territory embraces a country which is well adapted to Poultry raising, and in this territory they have a population in excess of 30,000, which means that no better territory in the State could be found to start a new organization. They have elected Hugh Ross, Pres., Harry W. Lawson, Sec'y., and H. D. Hoffman, Assist. Sec. Show dates will be announced in a later issue.

MADE HISTORY.

Elsewhere in this issue will be seen the advertisement of W. J. Douglass, proprietor of Flower Hill Poultry Yards, Port Washington, L. I., N. Y. Mr. Douglass has made an enviable record with his Reds at Mineola and Grand Central Palace. He reports having had a successful season, young stock doing well, with quality better than ever. We cannot help but recommend Mr. Douglass to our readers, feeling confident that they will get 16 ozs. for a lb.

RHODE ISLAND REDS

How to Breed and Judge Them

By THEO. HEWES

Is the Best and Most Complete Treatise Ever Published on this Popular Breed

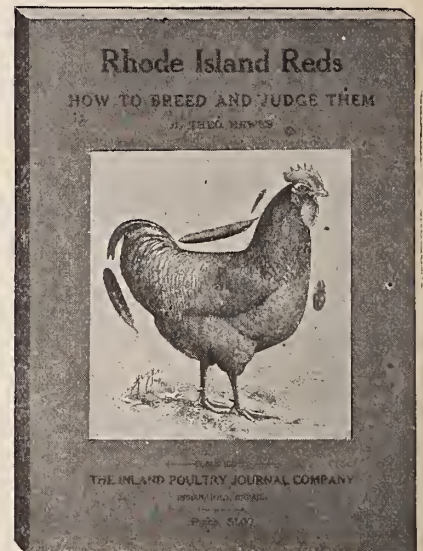

There are but few breeds so widely advertised to-day as the Rhode Island Reds and no breed in which there is such a wide difference of opinion as to what constitutes perfection.

"RHODE ISLAND REDS; HOW TO BREED AND JUDGE THEM"

is better than the

"STANDARD OF PERFECTION"

because it goes into detail and describes every section, with numerous illustrations, showing ideal and defective shape and color, thus making scoring so simple that any one can understand. Some sections have four or five illustrations showing the several defects that may be found in them, with the proper discount for the same as applied by our leading Judges.

Size of Book 11½x8½ inches, Contains over 50 pages, including cover which is printed in three colors, and all on good half-tone paper. PRICE $1.00

In addition to this most complete series of articles on scoring, there are numerous articles from America's foremost Red breeders on every phase of Red Breeding. This book tells you just what you want to know. It tells you how to mate your pens; how to grow your chicks; how to select your show birds; in fact, it tells you how to grow, exhibit and make money out of Reds.

This book is sold on approval. The price is $1.00. If you are not satisfied with your bargain, send us back the book and we will refund your money.

Standard Bred, Indian Runner Ducks.

The Ducks that lead them all as a Money Maker.

HERE is quite a discussion going on through the various poultry journals regarding Indian Runner Ducks. There are three varieties of this wonderful egg producer. As I have bred, reared and cared for these different varieties and know from my own experience that what I am about to write is the actual fact, no man can say, "this or that" is not true, and we have no use for the "writer" who says I "have heard." These days we want it understood "We are from Missouri" and you must "show us" from actual experience. Then we are ready to listen and learn. With this thought uppermost in our minds I hope to be of some help to those who are about to take up Indian Runner Ducks for profit.

ORIGIN.

These ducks originated in India, from a cross of the Penguin and Wild Mallard, and possibly the Rouen. As this was long before our time we must base our conclusions as to their origin from what comes from them, and we have known almost perfect specimens of the Rouen and the Wild Mallard to come from them. These ducks were first taken to England and later breeders of fancy poultry began to take notice of them on account of their wonderful laying qualities. They were natural layers of both white and green eggs. This I have ascertained for myself from reliable authorities in Australia, New Zealand and England. Some breeders objected to the color of the green eggs, set only the white ones year after year until finally some claimed to have established a "pure white egg strain," while others still had ducks that laid both white and green eggs. Later these ducks were brought to America and scattered to different parts of the country.

This brings me to my first experience with them. When I decided to give them a trial, after hearing of their wonderful laying qualities, I began to search the advertising mediums until I finally found a breeder who had seven years' experience with the "English Penciled Duck, and was himself an importer of them, buying from the most noted and reliable breeder of England. I bought three ducks and a drake of him in December and when they began to lay in January I found two of them laid green eggs and the other a white one. I raised a flock of ducks from these birds, and when I began to ship eggs for hatching I found great complaint on account of the green eggs. I was much concerned about this. I wrote to different breeders all over the country, as to why Indian Runner Ducks laid both white and green eggs. They told me it was a trait inherited from the Wild Mallard duck.

I have bred I. R. Ducks for a number of years, and searched the world for all the information I could find concerning them. I found three varieties or types of them. The original color of these ducks in India and England was brown and white, with lacing similar to the Brown Wyandotte chicken. In England this color was called Fawn and White. When they were brought to America, by some cross, the color was changed to a Light Fawn color, free from any lacing, and this color was adopted by our American Standard of Perfection, although the Brown and White English Penciled ducks were still allowed to compete with them in the show room until 1910. Then the English Penciled ducks were disqualified on account of their plumage.

Now we will go back to the subject of the "green eggs," because that is the thing that is causing so much controversy between the English Penciled breeders and the Light Fawn American Standard breeders, each one claiming that only the other fellow's ducks are the layers of the green eggs and his are the white egg layers. This is a case of the "Kettle" calling the "Pot" black. Although the color was changed when brought to America the ducks still continued to lay some white and some green eggs, all from the same flock, but breeders here objected to the green eggs and began to breed them out by setting only the white eggs year after year. Now, after years of careful breeding, this has been accomplished by the most successful breeders of established reputation and we wave our "hats" in triumph. I see some writers, who have a "kick" at the Light Fawns, claim that when the color was changed their laying qualities were impaired. This is not true. I have had both varieties, side by side, and given both the same feed and care, and found no difference in their laying qualities. They are both good layers, far beyond anything I ever saw. If given proper care they will begin to lay at four or five months of age and lay ten months in the year. Unlike other ducks they only shed their feathers once a year, and that in July and August. When the weather is very warm, during this time, they do not lay to do much good and the eggs are not so fertile. It is almost impossible to buy good stock, because it is so valuable to the breeder for the eggs they will lay that he cannot afford to part with them, unless he has a surplus, and then the only time you can buy is July and August before he mates up his pens for the next season.

The country is flooded with inferior stock, now being advertised as the "Fawn and White" for the purpose of palming off on the unsuspecting public the Brown and White English Penciled Ducks, many of which lay "green eggs." If you don't believe this buy some and see what you get. If you are looking for the American Standard Light Fawn and White per cent. is growing less each year, with careful breeding. When I have stock to sell I find it is the American Standard bird the people want.

To show you that the public is being imposed upon through ignorance of the American Standard I will relate a little incident. I had a letter from a party wanting a show bird, and he described what he wanted, which happened to be an English Penciled drake. I wrote him I could furnish him just such a bird for $2.00, but added that it would be useless for him to exhibit such a bird, as it was not the American Standard. Then I described a drake that could win, under the American Standard, and said this bird will cost you $10.00, and you can have your choice of the two. It is needless to say he took the $10.00 bird.

Now my friends it cost me no more to produce that $10.00 bird than the $2.00 bird, which I afterward sold on the market for 40 cents because I had no demand for it as a breeder. The $10.00 bird was the valuable bird simply because it was our American Standard bird, and the demand so great for them that I dare not price birds that I do not wish to sell. It seems that the English Penciled duck breeders have a bitter "Pill" to swallow in that the Light Fawn Indian Runner ducks have been bred to lay pure white eggs. I wonder if this is because their English Penciled ducks still continue to lay some green eggs, although they advertise only pure white eggs? I have reason to believe this is true, because many of them are claiming the "Genuine Walton Strain" as layers of pure white eggs only. Yet Mr. Walton, the originator of this strain, says in his 1912 catalogue, "the English Penciled Runners have many merits and few faults. The eggs are perfect in flavor and quality, of fine size and appearance, varying in color from a delicate 'pale-green' tint to a 'pure white.'"

WHITE INDIAN RUNNER DUCKS.

you will see it advertised by responsible breeders as the "Light Fawn." This is done so you may know you are getting the American Standard bird, and not something you do not want. The Brown and White English Penciled ducks are not so valuable as the American Standard bird because they are not the Standard bird, and there is no possibility of them becoming the Standard or ever competing with them. If they are ever admitted to our Standard they will as a separate variety, be at a side table. As I said before, the Light Fawn American Standard bird originated from the English Penciled variety and to some extent they still throw back to them in color, although the

From my own experience with the English Penciled Ducks I have found them exactly as represented by Mr. Walton. As soon as I found I did not have the American Standard bird I disposed of the entire flock and started again with the Light Fawn. I have had no reason to regret it, because I have found it a money winner.

I would advise any one who expects to take up Indian Runner Ducks to be careful of your foundation stock. Get the Light Fawn American Standard bird that lays nothing but pure white eggs, for a duck that lays a green egg is a drug on the market and people will not have it. The time has come when any old thing will not do as an Indian Runner Duck. The Light Fawn and White that lays a pure white egg is in a class by itself and is "Peer" of the "Realm." They are almost priceless. If you want to sow and reap the "Golden Egg" start with the best, the American Standard Bird. The business is only in its infancy. There are not enough of these ducks in the U. S. to supply the demand for hatching purposes. I have been busy shipping eggs all season, day after day, and the demand so great that I could not spare an egg for my own use, to set, until the last few weeks, although I shipped more than $4,000 worth and then could not supply all that wanted them. It is useless to argue the question as to the value of the American Standard bird. Next to her in value is the Pure White Runner. The best of these originated from the Light Fawn stock. There is much in favor of this variety to make it very popular, because they breed true to color and those that come from the Light Fawn stock are layers of pure white eggs only. The imported stock we do not know the origin of, but we do know them to be layers of light green eggs, the same as the English Penciled Brown and White ducks. So if you want the best you must pin your faith to the American bred stock.

BY THE WAY

By D. S. Babcock

MAN may be a big poultry breeder by the census and yet "sing very small" by the show-room record.

There is no reason why the small breeder, who limits his operations by the space at his command, should not produce as good birds as the one who reckons his flocks by the thousands.

The small breeder has this advantage over his big brother in that he knows—or may know—each specimen intimately and can make his matings from such intimate and complete knowledge.

Proper mating of fowls, upon which the quality of the season's chickens largely depends, is something which requires not only a knowledge of the breeding tendencies of the variety, but a like knowledge of the individual specimens to be mated. Note the qualifying word "largely," for however good the mating, proper rearing has much to do with the quality of the developed chickens.

Many a chicken is spoiled in the rearing, and its possible excellencies are forever obscured. First-class breeding must include first-class rearing.

Years ago I used to employ others to hatch and rear chickens from the eggs which I furnished them. One season I had the following results from eggs laid by the same pen of fowls. One rearer brought me a measly lot of small chickens, inferior in size and color; another brought me fairly good chickens, but none of them of very superior merit; the third, who reared but a few and gave the chickens the run of a small garden, delivered to me chickens up in size, excellent in color and markings, and in every respect first-class. As all the chickens were from the same mating, the difference was due solely to the rearing.

It is my profound conviction that not a few complaints against breeders for sending out eggs of alleged inferior quality are due to the imperfect care and feeding of the chickens hatched from the purchased eggs. The complainants should have found fault with their own shortcomings in rearing and developing, rather than with the quality of the eggs which they received.

It must not be forgotten, however, that while improper rearing may prevent a well-bred chicken from developing into a prize bird, the best of care and feeding will never cause a cull to develop into a blue ribbon winner. What does not exist potentially cannot be developed, and hence proper mating is after all the first essential in breeding fine stock. Culls are bound to produce culls.

The maxim, "Like produces like," is essentially true. Modifications, of course, occur; differences arise; but good fowls produce good chickens and vice versa. The chickens may be spoiled in rearing; their possibilities may be destroyed by unskillful mating; but there must be good stock as a foundation if good results are desired. We need to amplify the maxim by adding to it, "if like matings are made."

Good stock for breeding implies proper mating. However well-bred the stock may be and however excellent may be the individual specimens, they are not good breeding stock unless mated in accordance with their breeding tendencies.

To have a competent knowledge of the breeding tendencies of fowls one must be familiar with the variety, as well as with the individual specimens. The fact that the Barred Plymouth Rock originated from a black fowl on the female side explains why the females tend to run darker than the males. Knowing this variety tendency breeders have attempted to correct it by the double-mating system and have produced practically two varieties of Barred Plymouth Rocks, a cockerel breeding variety and a pullet breeding variety, and these varieties must be bred separately to secure success. If one should mate a cockerel from one with a female from the other he would stand just about as much chance of getting good specimens of either sex as he would by mating Brown and Black Leghorns together. He must know this individual breeding tendency. And knowing these things he must add the knowledge of just how to mix his colors in male and female to produce the desired shade in the progeny.

Breeding fine specimens of the Barred Plymouth Rock is no mean art. One needs to combine the sculptor's sense of form with the artist's eye for color, and employ both upon living material which acts according to its own biological laws. With the exercise of the utmost skill there is always a sense of uncertainty in the result, for "the best laid plans of mice and men gang oft a-gley." The most careful mating may prove a failure. If, however, the stock is line bred, if no violent out-crossing has been resorted to in recent years, the chances of success are reasonably certain, as is proved by the number of fine birds bred each year. To some, such care seems a handicap to the variety, but that it is not a serious one appears from the immense and increasing popularity of this great American general purpose fowl. The Barred Rock today is probably the most popular fowl in the United States.

Missouri men not only need "to be shown," but are up in the show business. For example, Allen McNeal, after hatching out a lot of spring chickens in his incubator, employed the machine to hatch a lot of grasshoppers with which to feed the chickens.

The popularity of egg-laying contests shows no signs of abatement. Now comes The Inter-Ocean of Chicago, with the announcement that it has decided to finance and conduct such a contest, the contest to last for one year.

The value of such contests may be easily overestimated. They settle nothing definitely except that the particular pens of birds, kept in the particular manner, laid certain numbers of eggs. They do, however, suggest that strain is of more importance than breed, for one breed, represented by different strains, may be at once the greatest and poorest layer in the bunch. Still as they attract attention, they may be worth while.

In the laying contest at the Agricultural Experiment Station, at Storrs, Connecticut, which started on the first day of November, 1911, one hundred and two pens of five birds each were entered. There were one pen each of Buff Wyandottes, Silver Wyandottes, Golden Wyandottes, Buff Plymouth Rocks, Columbian Plymouth Rocks, Anconas, Buttercups, American Dominiques, Black Langshans, Houdans and Cornish Indian Games; two pens of Single Combed Brown Leghorns; three of Single Combed Buff Leghorns, Columbian Wyandottes and Black Minorcas; four pens of Rose Combed Rhode Island Reds and White Plymouth Rocks; five of Single Combed White Orpingtons and Single Combed Buff Orpingtons; eight of Single Combed Rhode Island Reds; nine of White Wyandottes; fourteen of Barred Plymouth Rocks; and thirty-one of Single Combed White Leghorns.

The mere enumeration of these pens shows that the White Leghorns have thirty-one chances of winning to one chance for each of the eleven varieties represented by a single pen. Of course, the single pen may happen to win, but there is no equality of varieties in such a competition. The White Leghorns, though they may lose through an unfortunate selection of individuals, nevertheless, have the best chance at the outset.

It will also be noted that there are twenty-three varieties representing twelve breeds. As all of the fowls will be kept under exactly the same conditions as to housing and feeding, and as different breeds, we believe, demand different treatment in order to obtain from them the best results, it may happen that the particular treatment will be the best for some one of the twelve breeds represented, and thus will give the variety or varieties of that breed an improved chance of winning. Such an inequality is inevitable, perhaps, but it is an inequality nevertheless.

Where such inequalities of competition exist it would be folly to attempt to draw from the results of the competition any conclusion as to the relative prolificacy of the different breeds and varieties. But the results may show that under such conditions of keeping as prevail in this contest—which is used simply as an illustration of similar contests, a number of which are in progress at the time this is written—fowls are profitable stock to keep, a fact which may lead to a direct increase in the number of poultry rearers.

While the writer favors such contests, and is glad to see them increasing in number and popular favor, he believes that the public should be cautious about drawing unwarranted conclusions from their results. There is always a temptation to draw a universal conclusion from a particular premise, which is not only illogical but harmful in respect to a great industry like the poultry industry. If such competitions do not settle many questions, they may, perhaps, stimulate efforts towards improving the prolificacy of fowls, especially if there should be any assurance that they will become annual events. Sporadic contests of this nature probably would not prove of nearly so much value as a regular series of annual events. In Australia, where such contests have been held annually for a succession of years, it is believed that the average prolificacy has steadily increased, and what has been accomplished there doubtless could be duplicated in this country.

Prolificacy isn't all. The number of cockerels and pullets hatched each year is practically the same. A variety, which shows the handsomest profits on the cockerels reared, can afford to lay a lesser number of eggs, and yet stand side by side with the prolific layer when the profits are totaled.

Making the cockerels pay is an essential item in conducting a profitable poultry plant. Quick growth, early development and prompt sales at the psychological moment, so to speak, are demanded. In our haste to make and break laying records we are in danger of forgetting the cockerels. Our neighbors, however, are in no such danger; the cockerels will not let them forget their existence, especially in the morning. The man who makes the cockerels pay best certainly has something to crow over.

Nature is supposed to do all things right and to exhibit an unvarying regularity. But she sometimes gets mixed up a bit. For example, it is Nature's rule that the male should be the more ornamental and more ornamented sex. This rule is clearly observed among fowls, but when we come to humankind dame nature has reversed all this, and lovely woman is the ornament of the race. We men, however, don't care. What is it that Bobbie Burns says? Oh! yes,

"Auld Nature swears, the lovely dears
Her noblest work she classes, O;
Her 'prentice han' she tried on man,
And then she made the lassies, O!"

The fancier, however it may be with the practical poulterer, takes particular pains to breed the finest cockerels possible, for a fine male bird is worth more than several fine females. The top prices are commanded by the males only.

If we were like the Arabs, this rule would be reversed. The man with them takes the highest rank. While it is comparatively easy to induce an Arab sheik to sell a stallion, it is almost impossible to persuade him to part possession with a fine mare. If Arabs were chicken fanciers it would be the pullets that would command the record prices. But we are not Arabs and we are not breeding horses, and so we may be well content with the rule that prevails in the United States of America in reference to the relative value of the males and females among our feathered stock.

ILLUSIONS

By E. M. Long

NE of the most interesting and perhaps the first thing that I can remember with relation to the poultry industry in my childhood is the old iron rooster that was painted in gaudy colors and sat perched at one end of the ridge of my father's hen house. This old fellow, of proud and haughty mien, always pointed his head in the direction from which the wind blew. For years he stood there, always proud and vigorous and apparently immune to climatic changes. I now realize that I felt a certain reverence and awe regarding this old bird, and as I look back I am obliged to admit that he was perhaps the primary cause of my later interest in the poultry business. There grew a large cherry tree at the rear end of this coop and the kindly protection of this formed the location for my childhood workshop.

For hours I would play here with the chickens, and tiring of this, I would hitch up a pair of my father's saw horses to the express wagon and drive them in imaginary speed from place to place. Later as I grew larger and stronger I was seized with the desire to climb upon the coop and view the old weathervane cock at short range. One day I made the climb. My hopes were realized, but my boodhood illusions were gone. I lost my reverence for the old weather cock. From that time on I listed him among the common-place things of life.

Thus it is even in the life of the poultryman. We hear lots of the big men in the poultry business and we are apt to look upon them as demi-gods, but when we climb up to their level and look them over on their own grounds we find them just everyday, common-place men and women, who have made success by hard work, efficiency and close attention to details. We often find that they are not so far ahead of us plodders when it comes to the quality of their flock at home in their natural condition.

Always with the endeavor to live up to the rules of a show, I have many times walked up the aisles of the shows where I exhibited and looked over birds in competition with my own stock and I was forced to admit that they looked good enough to win over birds of my breeding and conditioning. But when the smoke of battle had cleared away and the ribbons were up I usually found most of the reds and blues on my stock. Then why, you ask, were you in doubt as to the result? I was looking at the birds from a distance, under peculiar conditions of light and shade and I was not able to judge correctly without handling them in a good light.

I was having an illusion, an optical illusion if you please, just the same kind of an illusion that many of these editor-judges have when they judge a show, and in fact, many of the judges who are not editors.

Did you ever walk down the aisles of a show of National importance, my fellow breeder, you, who cannot afford to exhibit at such shows, and view with interest, awe and reverence, and covetousness perhaps, the winning specimens of your favorite breed? If you have, perhaps you have thought of the utter impossibility of your ever breeding such a specimen. You have been unable, perhaps, to find a word of criticism against the perfection represented. But you have been laboring under an illusion. If you had a bird of this kind in your own yards for a few days, and had an opportunity of comparing him with your ideal, he would fall far short of perfection. And perhaps he would keep on falling as time elapsed.

Sometimes we get an idea that some particular "strain" of a high sounding name is best ever. I got that idea some years ago. I nursed it for two or three years, but I found that something more than "strain name" was required to win at the shows and produce quality, quantities of eggs and meat, the basis of successful poultry keeping.

The Muscovy Duck

By R. G. Dawson, Franksville, Wis.

We have in the Muscovy one of the most prolific of all the varieties of ducks, especially for the farmer. Young ducks, marketed before Christmas time, brought $1.50 each and yearlings $2 each.

The size is one of the strongholds of this breed, but they are not satisfactory if you wish to market them at ten or twelve weeks, as they will not mature so rapidly as the Pekin. However, they can be raised on about half the feed the other ducks require, and they are very hardy and splendid foragers.

We have raised large broods in the open fields, never feeding them, and find they are very much like the turkey in this respect. Those wishing an ornamental as well as the most profitable of all the ducks will find the Muscovy satisfactory.

They make scarcely any noise unless molested and are less of a puddler than any of the other varieties, and they can be kept where any other variety would make everything filthy. They are content with only water to drink.

They make a fine cross with any variety of duck, and make a grand table fowl when crossed with the Pekin.

We are breeding all varieties of ducks, and find either the pure-bred or the crossed birds profit producers.

The progeny of the cross-bred birds will not breed, and are like the Canadian geese in this respect.

The Muscovy is found wild in South America and Brazil, and they are extensively domesticated in Europe where they are bred in great numbers.

They live to a good old age as we have one female in a flock, eight years old, that has won many first premiums.

If they are not allowed to hatch their eggs they will lay more or less from April to November. They molt but once during the year, and it requires five weeks to hatch the eggs.

A DAY ON THE EGLANTINE FARM.

In Pennsylvania a farm of one hundred or one hundred and twenty acres is considered a great big one and to our way of thinking it is, but recently I had the pleasure of spending a day on the Eglantine Farm, of Greensboro, Md., owned and operated by A. A. Christian, of Philadelphia. This farm consists of 2,200 acres, almost every acre of which is under cultivation.

Greensboro is on what is called Maryland East Shore, one of the greatest agricultural, fruit and berry growing districts in Eastern United States, and Eglantine Farm represents the very cream of the soil of this district.

The proprietor of this concern, Mr. Christian, is what we call a modern, down-to-the-minute farmer. To describe Eglantine Farms in their entirety and the extent of the business they do would certainly require half of this issue to do it justice and then there would be a lot that would be left.

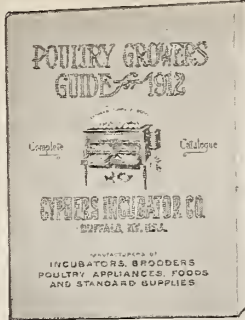

The one part of Eglantine Farm which we are most interested in is that part which is devoted to Poultry. Never have we seen better erected buildings, never have we seen better adapted buildings. Now what we mean when we speak of buildings is not only hen houses, but we have reference to the Incubator House, Brooding House, etc.

Here we find S. C. White Leghorns bred in all their purity and I doubt very much whether there are many breeders of this variety in the country that can show one thousand females of equal quality to those seen on the Eglantine Farm.

Frankly speaking, they were one of the finest lots of females that I have ever seen.

Mr. Christian has met with marked success in breeding his poultry and is doubling his incubating capacity and if any of our Pennsylvania friends, or in fact from all parts of the country, want to see what a down-to-the-minute farm is

POULTRY FANCIER CO. ORGANIZED

A Personal Message to our Patrons. Thanks to all.

It is with pleasure and thanks to all that I make this announcement. Little did the writer think when he purchased the POULTRY FANCIER last December, and mailed the first issue from Chicago, that in the short time of seven months it would grow to be one of the largest publications in the land and one that is read throughout civilization, and whose influence will be used in placing the Poultry industry on a safe and sane basis and in standing for the rights of the masses.

The installation of our plant is an absolute necessity. So great has been the demand for POULTRY FANCIERS that we were unable to meet the demand in June.
Upwards of 1800 new subscribers who desired their subscriptions to start with that issue had to be held over until July, and even a larger number received in July will have to be held over to start with the August issue. Twelve hundred and two subscriptions were received in a single day (July 17). We extend our heartfelt thanks to every one of our loyal supporters in making this possible. You are responsible and not the management.
Without your support and influence we would have been powerless to accomplish this. True enough, with the limited means at my disposal, I tried to do my level best to make POULTRY FANCIER a magazine fit to grace the library tables of the best homes in the land, and one that was ever ready to strike in defense of a pure, clean and honest fancy, and whose motto of equal rights and justice to all, applies to classified advertisers as well as display. Yes even further, it applies to non-advertisers. With the size that POUL-TRY FANCIER now is, it was a case of either installing our own plant or be satisfied as it now is, and being printed and mailed in Allentown, and with the main business and editorial office at Sellersville, made it almost impossible to conduct the work without errors. With our own well-equipped plant, we are going to try and produce the finest journal in the land, and our readers can look for many improvements and a better POULTRY FANCIER in the future than what they have received in the past.

We are proud to say that POULTRY FAN-CIER has paid its own way. Not one dollar of outside capital was used in making it what it is. Our pathway was not strewn with roses; we worked as we never worked before. Our first office was in my home. Our subscription and booking desk was a camping table. We worked night and day. We knew not the meaning of the word failure. Then an office building was erected. We outgrew it, and now we find it necessary to install our own equipment, which will mean the saving of thousands of dollars annually, to say nothing of the job printing department, as that will be made a leading feature. In order to install our own equipment it was necessary to incorporate and get in sufficient outside capital to enable us to handle same and get it operative before the busy season starts in September, and at a meeting of our directors it was decided to sell 9000 shares of stock at the par value of $1.00 per share, non-taxable and non-assessable, and bearing a six per cent. guaranteed dividend.
And it is my desire that the entire issue be taken by our advertisers and subscribers, the ones who have made it possible for us to accomplish what has been done. If you can only take five or ten shares, all well and good; if you can take more, all well and good. Remember, you are purchasing stock in an established business, one that is already made, which is by far different from taking stock in a business that is yet to be established.

In order to ascertain that we were safe in going ahead with our plant we sent out a number of letters and the responses were far beyond our expectations, and justified us in going ahead, and it is my desire that every share of this stock be held by our patrons. It is selling at the par value of $1.00 per share, and I shall do my best to double its value before another twelve months roll around.

Don't stand back simply because you can only take five or ten shares; we want you all. If you can take more, well and good. We kindly ask every one to look up our selling advertisement in this issue.
Read it carefully and make use of the coupon. Thanking you all for the support given me in making POULTRY FANCIER all that it is, and trusting you may become one of us, I am thankfully yours,
F. W. DELANCEY.

Rule 17

Rule 17 was unanimously recommended by the Executive Board of the A. P. A. at Denver, 1911.

Theo. Wittman says Rule 17 must be a good rule. If not, then the membership have elected to office and seated men who are a huge joke.

Our motto is "Equal Rights and Justice to All." Hence we believe Rule 17 should pass at Nashville.

Why is Rule 17 endorsed by the rank and file of exhibitors? Because they can show their birds at any show held under the auspices of the A. P. A. and feel perfectly confident of getting a square deal, should that Rule pass at Nashville.

Why is it that so many of our Poultry publications are opposed to Rule 17?
That question is easily answered boys, for if Rule 17 is passed at Nashville, these Journals will be placed on an equal competitive basis with other Poultry Journals, by eliminating solicitor-Judges from the Show room, thus cutting out one of their greatest sources of revenue from an advertising standpoint.

It does look rather strange, now doesn't it, Mr. Exhibitor, to watch a solicitor-judge judging birds in show room competition with one pocket full of Poultry Journals, another pocket full of advertising blanks, and "still another pocket" fast filling up with a list of the names of successful exhibitors, with special foot-notes attached thereto, while the Standard rests in perfect peace in some secluded corner? Take it from us, boys, here and now, if Rule 17 passes at Nashville these "side exhibits" to the main show will be a thing of the past.

If Rule 17 passes at Nashville the exhibition need not fear the secret methods of certain solicitor-judges, of their power behind the throne, if they decide not to patronize the journals in whose employ the Paper Judges repose.

If Rule 17 passes at Nashville we believe that certain publications whose custom in the past to publish only the awards of those who advertise in their columns will be changed so as to meet the popular idea of a "square deal to all" by publishing the winnings of all exhibitors in all shows where they are represented. We are glad to state that this has always been the Fancier's policy, and if Rule 17 passes (and we believe it will) the old eagle of the Fancier will be right in the front ranks of the A. P.
A.'s progressive army.

If Rule 17 passes at Nashville it will remove the temptation out of the way of our paper Judges to offer their services to various associations to judge their shows free of charge, pay their own board, and then as an expression of gratitude for the honor conferred sand bag the unsuspecting exhibitors in whose interest they have made such an immortal sacrifice.

If Rule 17 passes at Nashville we do not claim such legislation will prove a panacea for all the ills the American Poultry Association is heir to, but we do believe it will place the Poultry Shows of the U. S. on a more equitable and satisfactory basis and eliminate many suspicions which now over-shadow a great deal of paper-soliciting-judges' work in our own show rooms.

There is no one who dislikes any more than the writer to see the innocent suffer with the guilty, but history bears us out in the statement that in all reform movements some who are not guilty must suffer with those who are guilty, and we are fully satisfied that delay in purging out any or all of the objectionable features of either the A. P. A. or Show room methods will tend only to increase bitterness of feeling on the part of many and injury to a larger number of those who are opposed to any radical change to our present policies.

WITTMAN A CANDIDATE.

The many friends of W. Theodore Wittman, Allentown, Pa., will be pleased to learn that he has again consented to be a candidate for President of the Pennsylvania Branch of the A. P. A. The Penna. Branch, with W. Theo. Wittman as president, has made possibly the largest gain of any state branch in the Union, and the work which has been accomplished under his administration is such that it commends him to every member.

W. Theo. Wittman has accomplished nothing less than wonders in the Keystone State, in making it one of the largest and best branches in the Country. A few years ago, when W. Theo. Wittman took hold of the Penna. branch, it was near nothing, possibly less than 100 members. To-day it has almost 300 members, and the great interest which has been aroused through his active efforts has been the cause. The nomination ballots will be sent out in August, and we feel safe in saying that W. Theo. Wittman will be re-elected President of the Penna. Branch.

While, true enough, he has accomplished much, there is much more yet to be accomplished, and matters are in such shape at this time that it would be a grave mistake to make a change, as we know that W. Theo. Wittman is able and has the ability to carry the important matters now pending to a successful conclusion. We cannot help but congratulate W. Theo. Wittman and every officer of the Penna. Branch for the excellent work which they have accomplished in the past year. It is something that the Keystone State can well be proud of.

PENNSYLVANIA STATE FANCIER'S ASSOCIATION FOURTH ANNU-AL POULTRY SHOW.

At the annual meeting of the Pennsylvania State Fancier's Association the following officers were elected: President, E. R. Martin; Vice-President, Wm. Feeter; Treasurer, Jas. Winnaugle; Secretary, H. S. Wertzberger, 121 Washington Ave., Altoona, Penna.

It was decided to hold the 4th annual exhibition the week of Jan. 20-25, 1913, in the Green Ave. Market House. This is the same building that they have had the three last successful shows. It is centrally located in a part of the city where a large attendance is always assured.

They have secured the services of A. Fred. Kummer, of Butler, Pa., and W. Theo. Wittman, of Allentown, Pa., to judge Poultry, and P. A. Scheid, of Lancaster, Pa., to judge Pigeons.

These men have a reputation that assures everybody a square deal.

For all information in regard to show address the secretary.

Editor's Note:—We are pleased to receive this our first letter from Altoona, and trust that our readers may have a letter regarding Altoona Show affairs each month. Altoona is a good town, and possesses fanciers of the true-blue kind. The Secretary, Mr. H. S. Wertzberger, is on the job and great things can be looked for from Altoona. Write him that your name may be placed on his mailing list.

NO MORE UNMARKED CATA-LOGUES.

Editor Central Penna. Chick Chatter:—

At the July meeting of the Board of Directors of the Williamsport Poultry Pigeon and Pet Stock Association held July 16, 1912, it was unanimously decided to do away with the Unmarked Catalogues at the Annual Exhibition, Nov. 28-30, 1912.

We consider that the Unmarked Catalogue is one of the greatest evils that the Modern Poultry Show has to contend with to-day.

At our former exhibitions we have always endeavored to throw a safe-guard around our exhibitions by removing anything that would tend toward any dishonesty, hence the action on the part of the Board of Directors in taking the initiative in this matter.

Let every breeder and exhibitor take NOTICE that there is no place in the Williamsport Show Room for a dishonest Judge or Exhibitor.

And may every one that comes to Williamsport feel that he or she will be given the protection that is embodied in our Motto, Favoritism is None; a Square Deal to All.

GEO. P. STRYKER, Secretary.

THAT BREEDER'S TICKET FOR

The announcements in our last issue that there would be a straight breeder's ticket in the field for the various offices of the American Poultry Association for 1913 appears to have met with almost universal approval by the rank and file of American Poultrymen. We have received letters from nearly every section of the United States and Canada, indorsing our position on this question, which of course, is very gratifying to us, for our constant aim as a publisher and editor of a Poultry Journal is to serve the highest interests of the Poultry Fraternity, and to receive the universal support of real poultry raisers cheers us in the conflict and strengthens our determination to continue the struggle until victory has been won and the American Poultry Association is delivered into the care and keeping of that body of men (men who actually raise poultry) for whom and by whom the A. P. A. was created. Practically all who have written us agree that the men who "actually raise chickens," in other words, the practical poultrymen of America, should occupy the offices and govern the affairs of the American Poultry Association. We believe they are right and stand ready to champion their cause with other publications that we know to be in sympathy with their demands, until their efforts are crowned with success and the A. P. A. once more becomes the actual servant of all who are worthily interested in the production of a higher class of poultry and more of it. Again, these same poultrymen believe that they, and not the editors and publishers of Poultry Journals, should determine the text and choose the illustrations of the Standard of Perfection, by which their birds are to be judged, and upon which the success of their business to a very large degree depends, and we are glad to state that we are heartily in sympathy with their position, and we believe that the greatest and most convincing evidence that can possibly be produced to sustain the righteousness of their claims is the bungled and garbled misfit standards of 1910. To see one's money go by the boards in such instances as the above; to see those to whom the rank and file of poultrymen had committed their interests on so vital a subject either betray the trust so committed or so flagrantly display their inability to accomplish the task they had undertaken to do (whichever the case may be), demands an immediate adjustment of affairs in A. P. A. as to insure against its recurrence, and we are glad to note the warning given by Theo. Haves, in the May issue of his splendid journal, that the little petty squabbling on the part of the officers and committee during the past years has delayed important work and has deprived the breeders of the Standard during one of the greatest show seasons in the history of the business, and it is a question in our mind whether this same delay has not to a certain extent injured the poultry business all over the United States and Canada. In fact, we really believe it has and follow the above frank statements with this question: Now how much of this will the breeders stand? I dare say, not much, friend Hughes, unless the A. P. A. gets strenuously busy and corrects these abuses to which the breeders of this country have been compelled to submit until their patience has been well-nigh exhausted.

"Newtown" Satisfaction Produces Expansion In Incubating and Brooding Service

The season just closed was a most successful one for "Newtown" Equipment. Everybody knows what an unfavorable chick-raising season it was, but, for all that, "Newtown Giant" Incubators made enviable records for hatching "LIVABLE" chicks, the only standard by which incubator have repeat orders from old customers for next season's operations aggregating 75 per cent. of our total sales last year, which, in turn, were double that of the previous year.

We know as well as you do that you would not order more if your present equipment was not giving

6000 Egg Newtown "Giant" Incubator—the owner has ordered double this capacity for next season service should be measured. What profit is there in hatching a lot of chicks that don't LIVE?

"Newtown" Chicks Live

because they are hatched with FRESH AIR, MOISTURE and HEAT, harmoniously combined, giving the chicks vitality and strength to break out of the shell and live.

"Newtown" Expansion

is now the natural result of this satisfactory "Newtown" service the past two seasons. We now satisfaction. Neither would our customers. You see the point.

Install the "Newtown" and you, too, will reap such satisfactory results that you will eventually want more, the same as our present customers do.

Why not send for our catalog L now, so you may make up your mind and get your order in for "Newtown" Equipment before the Fall rush is on? Order today.

Remember, you can put up the "Newtown" Incubator yourself and save good money doing it.

NEWTOWN PRODUCING CO., Newtown, Penna., U. S. A.

There are times in the course of human events when "patience ceases to be a virtue," when strong, immediate and insistent actions are necessary to self-preservation and the maintenance of those principles which insure one the right to act in self-defense, and while it may be a little in advance of the times, we predict that when the ballots have been counted after the next election the breeder's ticket will have won by a handsome majority, and that the policy of the A. P. A. for years to come will be shaped by men who have had actual and practical experience in raising poultry. And you can bank your last dollar, my friend, that it will be the most advanced step ever taken in the interest of this great American industry.

ANOTHER BIG SHOW FOR PENNSYLVANIA.

The entire Poultry World will rejoice to learn that there will be a big Fair in Philadelphia County, to be known as the Philadelphia County Fair.

Ninety-six acres of land have been purchased at Byberry, one of the suburbs of the city. The show will be modeled after the Great Allentown Fair Poultry Show and W. W. Deissler has been selected as Secretary of the Poultry Department.

The veteran, Ed. Hickman, will be Supt. of the Poultry Department and Rudolph Sweisforth will have charge of the pigeon department.

Non-soliciting Editor Judges will be had to place the awards and nothing will be left undone by the managers of the Fair to make the Poultry Show connected with it one of the large features and one of the leading Poultry exhibitions of the State. The dates of the Fair have been selected, September 16 to 20.

THE BUCKS COUNTY FAIR SHOW.

The Poultry Department will be made a leading feature this year at the Bucks County Fair. The premiums have been increased, and entrance fee reduced to 25c. The show will be under the management of F. G. Wile, Supt., and H. M. Kenner, of Ossining, N. Y., will judge.

The Bucks County Fair this year will far eclipse all former exhibitions, and following their usual custom, Saturday will again be the big day. Special attractions and bands of music have been secured for the entire four days, and already the department superintendents are puzzled just how to accommodate the entries. The exhibition is held at Menlo Park, Perkasio, Pa., and is admittedly the most picturesque spot in Penna. to hold an agricultural exhibition.

Don't miss the Big Bucks County Fair this year. Send an entry. Take a day off and see Pennsylvania's down-to-date County Fair. Remember the dates, just the week before Allentown. Look up advertisement in this issue and send to I. Y. Binger, Perkasio, Pa., for Catalogue.

GOING TO NASHVILLE.

Before leaving for the National Convention of the A. P. A., to be held at Nashville, Tenn., I desire to inform our readers and friends that I shall do all that is in my power to bring Rule 17 to a successful issue right on the floor of the convention, and endeavor to prevent it from being placed in the hands of some special committee to be reported upon at some future time. We believe Rule 17 should be passed at Nashville. We believe it will be passed and that when it becomes operative it will prove a far-reaching blessing to the entire fraternity. The time is well-nigh at hand when the forces opposed to and those in favor of Rule 17 will be given ample opportunity to display their strength, and as we are leading the fight for the passage of Rule 17 in the interest of non-paper judges and the rank and file of the poultrymen of America, we feel perfectly sure you will all have done your part, by the time this issue of the Fancier reaches you, to make the passage of Rule 17 a certainty. There is no question but that the opponents of Rule 17 will be out in full force, prepared to oppose its passage every inch of the way, but a victory won under such conditions will add increased popularity to the cause. The FANCIER has stood practically alone, so far as the press is concerned, in its fight for Rule 17, but the splendid support we have received from the great majority of breeders throughout the country has thoroughly satisfied us that we have made a popular fight in the interest of a popular cause, and if it so happens that Rule 17 should be defeated, our readers can rest assured that the staff of the FANCIER, who will be right there on the firing line, will fight the battle to a finish, not only on Rule 17, but also on all other legislation which the rank and file of the A. P. A. demand. Don't fail to vote for the adoption of Rule 17, remembering that the Executive Board of the American Poultry Association recommended it without one dissenting vote.

THE CARLISLE SHOW.

As usual the Poultry Department connected with the Great Fair to be held at Carlisle, Penna., September 24th to 27th, will be a leading feature. Geo. Guignet will again be superintendent of this department and this is sufficient assurance that the show will be up to its usual high standard and that fair play to all will be given.

Geo. O. Brown, of Baltimore, will judge the show. The catalogue is now ready and liberal premiums are offered. Address all communications to Supt. of the Department, Geo. Guignet, Carlisle, Pennsylvania.

MORRIS CO., N. J., SHOW DATES.

At a meeting of the Executive Board of the Morris County Poultry, Pigeon and Pet Stock Association, Inc., it was decided to hold their show Thanksgiving week, beginning with November 25th to and including November 30th, 1912.

THE ROLLER TRAY INCUBATOR

Successful Incubation Means Your Success
SCIENTIFICALLY PERFECT.

To overcome the element of chance in the artificial incubation of eggs you are confronted with five problems. 1st—Heat; 2nd—Moisture; 3rd—Ventilation; 4th—Turning the eggs properly; 5th—Disposition of the chicks when free from the shell. If these essential problems cannot be overcome you must meet with failure. We have enabled you to overcome the five essential points necessary to successfully operate an incubator. We want to impress on your mind that there is a great difference in chicks that are just incubated and chicks that are

PROPERLY INCUBATED

There is absolutely no difference in a chick hatched in a Roller Tray and those from a hen. You want to incubate chicks that will live—and not the kind that will linger a few days and pass away. It's the chicks that live that mean your success or failure. The Roller Tray will hatch every fertile egg. It cannot go wrong. Now is the time to look up the merits of the different incubators. We want you to look into the merits of ours. Send for booklet.

A LETTER FROM D. LINCOLN ORR.

Orr's Mills, N. Y., July 3, 1912.

Editor Poultry Fancier,

Sir:—I note with much interest Mr. Wittman's letter re the Show rules, particularly as regards Rule 17. I agree with the former part of his letter, we must have as high a moral tone as possible; it cannot be too high.

I am versed on the history of Rule 17, but it does not matter to me who offers an amendment, not even the high authority of the Executive board, if I think it wrong and vicious I'll attack it regardless. The first question I would like to know, What am I? Am I a breeder or a newspaper man? I take it that, should the Association adopt Rule 17 and could enforce it, I would be barred from judging. Personally, I feel I am a breeder; at the same time I write for the Reliable Poultry Journal for pay and am a stockholder and vice-president of the Columbian Wyandotte Journal. I am a member in good standing and without any special charges against one of wrongdoing. I maintain the A. P. A. cannot legally pass a rule barring me from judging.

Don't let it get into any one's head that I am making a plea on personal grounds, as I have the past 25 years repeatedly refused show after show. Have only judged at two shows in my life—New York and Boston the past winter. So my skirts are clear of any personal axe to grind. I am looking on the broader side of the question. As a true American I took the stand that if Rule 17 is passed and could be enforced, it is Unamerican, as it is class legislation, and that has been sent to the rear many a time. We must not discriminate between the members of the A. P. A. who have no charges, specific charges, against them. When the A. P. A. passes a rule that takes away my rights without preferring any charge against me I maintain it is doing me a wrong. I do not believe it can be legally, constitutionally passed or enforced. I like to live up to the laws of any organization that I belong to but if this rule passes I have my choice of breaking the law, refusing to judge or giving up my membership in the Association. The latter course is the only true one for any honest man to do.

Evidently Mr. Wittman did not see my letter in the Reliable Poultry Journal when he said that show managers have not said publicly they would not stand for Rule 17. I may state that Secretaries Herver, Crawford, Atherton and Brown have said so publicly. Others have said they were against it. In August I will have a letter from Orentt, of St. Louis, who will say publicly that he is against Rule 17.

Don't kill the dog, Wittman. Find out where the disease is and cure the dog. If some judges are crooked fire them out. If Rule 17 passes every man who is connected with a paper will be branded as a crook and I will consider it a personal insult.

How can a breeder-judge tell a bird that was hatched from eggs he sold? But he can favor the purchase. How does the public know the judge sold the bird? The breeder-judge may say he did not recognize the bird. Who can prove otherwise? This whole Rule 17 is unwise, unamerican, and as it will, if passed, take away the rights of good, honest members, and I deny the right of the Association to say that I cannot judge when my reputation has not been convicted of wrong-

It took me more than a quarter of a century to write it.

And I had to travel upwards of 60,000 miles visiting the leading poultry plants and coming in contact with the men who have made good.

doing. No one but a fool or a knave would prophesy (but I may be one or both), but let me say right here if the Association passes Rule 17 it will prove a dead law. It will be ignored right and left.

The people, as a rule, do not understand these questions and I am of the opinion that at least 75 per cent. of the Associations don't care. Leaving the question of right and wrong, I would like to see the Association pass the Rule just to find out where it stands. Mr. Wittman says the Allentown Show has always been on the square and no doubt he thinks so and has done his best to have it so, but I have heard otherwise. The judge who was accused was not a paper man either. I did not nor do I yet believe the judge did wrong, but Mr. Wittman says, my show is clean but apparently some other shows are not. "Lack of Confidence," good! When the American Poultry Association brands one set of its members with a lack of confidence, nigh on to crookedness, without any convictions or even charges, then I say its faith in humanity is gone, no confidence left.

Has the A. P. A. so far lost itself that it is, going to stamp a man like Drevenstedt, who has been judging for 30 years, as a crook? Is it going to call Chas. D. Cleveland a man unfit to judge, fearing his honesty, and while penning these words, am I a crook? I may be harmless, but I don't want the American Poultry Association to say to the world we don't want D. Lincoln Orr to judge because he is a paper man and we fear he will give the award to his advertiser or we fear he will take the show for nothing and make up by soliciting advertising. No, please don't let it get out that after nearly 20 years of good honest service at a great expense at times, I am finally branded as a man not to be trusted. There are hundreds like me. I am pleading for the American Poultry Association more than for anything else, as I know we poultry paper judges can have all the shows we want, Rule 17 or not.

"DON'T BE A CLAM"

After having perfected the "Great Darlington Strain" of Single Comb White Leghorns I naturally looked around for "New Worlds to Conquer."

I thought if I could only make the Sphinx speak I would leave this world my debtor. As I have hardly time to attend my own funeral I had to act through Agents. Let us pause a moment (In fact "two paws" is more proper). There this "Great Mystery" has stood ever since 2800 B. C., and never uttered one word (what qualities in a wife). He saw the first peach basket, he noted well its size, he also saw the last." "What a falling off was there my countrymen." (Another pause is proper).

He was placed there by Chephren—many of you never met him. I have just received the following message by wireless: "The mystery is solved, the Sphinx has spoken, weigh well his words." The message of course, was not in good "United States" from the fact that when the Sphinx learned his A. B. C's our language was in rather a crude state. The message was at once forwarded to the "Department of Biblical Research."

It was an easy matter to decipher the words "Don't Be a Clam"

but there were four other signs, what could they mean? One Professor (he always gets his birds at Darlington), wiser than the others—or dumber—suggested that "the darn thing stuttered." Now every school boy knows that stuttering was not invented until the reign of Peter the Great, it came in with the Russian proper names. The mystery was finally solved by a little child running through the room crying: "I want my Mummy." What an illustration of the beautiful words: "A little child shall lead them" (another pause, possibly two). There was the whole message

"Don't Be a Clam I Want My Mummy"

The rest of my life shall be devoted to carrying out the wishes of my dear departed Friend, around whose knees I have so often played an innocent (?) little boy. I will search every Museum until I find his "Mummy," failing in that, his "Mummy-in-law." I will place her between his paws with this inscription: "Hic Jacet." Centuries later some one will dig this out and wonder "What in the name of Caesar's Ghost That Fool meant," does that mean me? There is food for thought.

Current Events Among Fanciers Gathered From Live Wires

No One Responsible for Editing This Department

Trenton, N. J. Poultry Association voted in favor of Rule 17. No soliciting editor judges at Trenton. Minnick, Huyler and Kenner will dish out the ribbons.

The report circulated throughout the U. S. that Dickey Oke joined the Salvation Army proves to be incorrect.

Bill Bailey was not lost; simply took a few days off to Atlantic City. Bill went in bathing and presented a striking appearance in a bathing suit. Bill said the water was bully.

Bill Minnick, yes our own Hamburg William, the hero of many a Phillipino village attack at Hagerstown midway, says he can convince the inkslinger down here that he is all wrong on Rule 17, and will convince me if I only come up and go trout-fishing. Strikes me I went trout-fishing with the lad before, found good fishing and no trout, and the water is deep, and will run no chances with that warrior until after Nashville.

The Fancier is not muzzled. All the news in the Fancier.

Jimmy Huston, who swings the gavel at the meetings of the Williamsport Poultry Association, spent Sunday with Boyd Johnson at Rupert. Boyd put him to work milking cows. Jimmy was so taken with the work that he is now thinking of moving to a farm.

Another big Fair for Pennsylvania, Philadelphia County Fair. They purchased 96 acres. Poultry will be a leading feature, and no soliciting editor judges will be employed. W. W. Deissler will be Secretary of the Department. See important notice elsewhere in this issue.

H. L. Watson, of the Newtown Producing Co., spent several days with his friend, A. A. Christiau, on Eglantine Farm, Greensboro, Md.

Dr. A. J. Savacool has upwards of 200 young White Wyandottes that will be hard to beat. The Doctor will exhibit at a number of the big shows.

All the leading Fairs advertise in the Fancier. Why? Because we reach the exhibitors. Winter Shows, take notice. If you want to reach the fancier and the exhibitor, advertise in the Fancier.

Pittsburg Fanciers' Association Show will no doubt be the place of holding the next annual meeting of the Penna. Branch A. P. A. The meeting has never been held in Western Pennsylvania, and this is the time to take it there. F. L. Ober says, "Come, it's a good place."

Now is the time to start your advertising campaign. See editorial page.

Be sure and get "Down to Date Poultry Knowledge." See adv. in this issue.

All the news in the Fancier.

Out on time.

No, we haven't time to read all the nice things (Bricks) said about us. We keep right on going.

How does a breeders' ticket suit you for 1913?

And now for Nashville.

Wittman says the Poultry Industry will roll on just the same if Rule 17 passes. Right you are, and there will be just as good men to take the places of the soliciting-editors.

Dr. Barger, Supt. of the Poultry Dept. Lancaster Fair, is to be congratulated on making that show one of the foremost in the State.

Link Orr says, "If Rule 17 passes I will resign." Yes he says he will actually quit the A. P. A. Link, old boy, don't let the hot weather affect you this way. Your advice was to take the southerly course. Now why don't you do it. Go to Nashville. True enough, whiskey won't freeze as hard as granite in August at Nashville. But we are all going there or should go there with one intention, and that is to abide by the will of the majority. This bull-headedness of you do this, and you do that, I won't play, don't go any more. It used to, but not now.

H. M. Kenner, now managing Rock Hill Poultry Farm, says, "I like the place and have thousands of fine young birds." Good, Kenner, you deserve all that has come to you. Best wishes for continued success.

A Breeders' ticket for 1913, and the slogan, "Let the men who raise chickens rule and govern the A. P. A.," has met with popular approval throughout the country.

Gone, but not forgotten, Irving Churchill Sibley. Long will his memory linger with the American Poultrymen, and his name will be handed down to future generations as a man who exemplified the true spirit of sportsmanship. Yes, he is gone from among us, but only for awhile, for we, too, will join him some day, and may a divine providence so guide us and make our motives and lives as pure and noble as Irving Churchill Sibley's.

Why is Rule 17 supported by the rank and file of the Poultry industry? Why is Rule 17 opposed by the papers employing soliciting-judges? Ponder just a few minutes over the above questions.

We stand for an honest day's wages to every honest judge. But how can our honest judges compete with some who are drawing fine salaries from papers and offer to judge shows for nothing? Rule 17 will give our judges who are not employed a fair chance. That's what we want.

Preparations are being made by the management of Hagerstown Fair to handle a larger entry than ever.

J. Courtney Punderford has been selected to judge Grand Central, Camden and Pittsburg.

INDIAN RUNNER DUCKS.

At the present time there are three varieties of Indian Runners, the English Penciled, the American Standard Light Fawn and White and the White Runners. There is no difference in the egg producing qualities of the three breeds that we can find. For several years we kept the English Penciled, the Light Fawn and White Runners on the same farm and gave them the same attention and there was practically no difference in the laying qualities. We did not have as much demand for the dark breed as for the light fawns, so we sold all the English strain and kept the fawn strain and have added the Pure White Runners to our yards. Mr. J. W. Beeson writes that the Woman's College at Meridan, Miss., after testing many breeds of fowls, finds the Indian Runner Ducks the most profitable of all fowls.

We have been breeding the Runners for many years and find them all that they are recommended to be by most breeders. I do not say that all the statements can be relied upon with any breed, because every one cannot give them the same attention, and is not always in a position to give them as good chance as they should have for best results.

We now have a National Indian Runner Duck Club, which is a good move and will encourage the breeding of Runners and will also be a benefit to its members and breeders in general. The club is new and should be encouraged and helped by all Indian Runner breeders. It only costs a trifle to become a member. The membership is $1.00 and only $1.00 a year dues to help keep up the expenses of the club, which is for printing and mailing, and as soon as the club is able to offer specials at some of the leading shows.

All the leading varieties of chickens have their clubs, and what other breed is more worthy than the Indian Runners? As a rule in past years the waterfowls at the shows have been given a back seat, so to speak, and the premiums are not so high at most shows as on other fowls, and as a consequence they are not exhibited as much as they would be if they were upheld by their fanciers and given more attention at the shows. The club is growing and it is our aim to put out some literature this fall for the benefit of its members and also offer cups at the shows. Now let us all get together on this, breeders, and see if we can't make the Runners one of the strongest and best features in the shows this winter.

Anyone wishing to join the club can receive application blanks by writing me,

Barred Plymouth ROCKS

In a class of (259) Barred Plymouth Rocks at Rochester, N. Y. last Dec. I won 1st cock, 1st hen, 1st and 4th pullet, and the much valued special of the Am. Plymouth Rock Club, for best shape and color. Such a win in conjunction with my remarkable Williamsport win, has placed my Rocks among the leaders.

Let me sell you breeders that will start you right for another season.

Let me sell you show birds that will win in the thick of the fight.

or addressing the Secretary, Judge H. A. Pickett.

There has been so much written on care and feeding of ducks that it will not be necessary to write about that here at this time, but I will say that the change of feed, change of pens, or even strangers going into the flocks make them nervous and they will often stop laying for a few days. Start in in the spring as you expect to care for them during the laying season. Do not have too many in a breeding pen; about two drakes and ten or twelve ducks do best, although they do very well with four males and twenty females, but where there are too many in a flock the drakes are liable to get to fighting and they will not do well.

Eggs generally run high in fertility. We have always had better hatches with hens than incubators. In setting hens it is best to make the nest on the ground, as the moisture from the ground keeps the eggs from getting dry, and as a rule they hatch better. The eggs should be moistened a few times the last half of the hatch.

After the hatching season is over we turn our breeders out on the range and give them only a light feed twice a day, just enough to keep them in good condition. Where you want to get eggs for market in the fall, they should not be picked after the middle of July, but let them have a full coat of feathers and begin feeding for eggs about the first of September, and you will be richly rewarded with an abundance of fine eggs for market in the fall when eggs are at a good price. They will lay until the severe weather sets in for winter. When feeding for fall eggs for market we do not allow any drakes in the laying flocks. They do not need the heavy feeding and the eggs from the ducks kept from the drakes will be unfertile and will keep a long time and be fresh.

HARD LUCK.

The Poultrymen in and around Roaring Spring have met with a serious loss by a great flood which swept down through that valley, which is illustrated by a cut in this issue. This flood swept many hundreds of chicks to their doom, as well as many hundreds of old birds, and the loss to the Poultrymen in that locality will aggregate several thousand dollars. This has certainly put a damper on the Poultry business in and around Roaring Spring, but fortunately the boys of that locality will not let such a little thing as a flood dampen their ardor. The loss is only temporary, as they are all hard at work to gain lost time, and we predict that the boys at Roaring Spring will give a good account of themselves this season.

A BIG FIRE.

The Underhill Farms, of Ft. Ann, N. Y., suffered a very severe loss by fire July 2nd. The fire broke out in their Brooder House. It was burned to the ground along with their Incubator House, office and feed room, washroom, packing shed, storehouse and 200 feet of breeding pens, aggregating upwards of several thousands of dollars. Upwards of 200 chickens also perished in the fire.

However, such matters don't discourage the people of Underhill Farms. Neither will the small loss in stock be noticed by them, as that firm raises chickens by the thousands and the loss of 193 youngsters doesn't make so much difference to them.

All the buildings burned are now being built even on a much larger and grander scale than they were before.

The Underhill Farms, Ft. Ann, N. Y., is one of the greatest Poultry Plants in the Eastern field and the quality of stock there is par excellence.

They are going to make a number of the big shows this year with their fine string of birds and we predict for the Underhill Farms even larger victories during the new season of 1912 and 1913 than what they had the past season.

Underhill Farms are breeding S. C. White Leghorns, White and Buff Rocks, Buff and White Orpingtons, Rhode Island Reds and White Wyandottes, also Light Brahmas.

They are this year making a specialty of furnishing high-class show birds to the trade and we cannot help but recommend this concern as being one of the most reputable Poultry Plants in the United States and we can assure our readers that they will experience the same results as we did, namely that it is a pleasure to do business with the Underhill Farms. Look up their advertisement in this issue. It will surely interest you.

A GREAT SALE.

Elsewhere in this issue will be seen the advertisement of Gilbert E. Nichols, the well known breeder of Columbian and Silver Laced Wyandottes, from Morritown, N. J.

As our readers well know, Mr. Nichols has what is considered to be one of the best lots of Wyandottes in the country, birds which he has paid large prices for and he is also the man who bought out the entire flock of Mrs. Denton Cole's Ideal Silvers which need no recommendation to the public.

As to Columbian Wyandottes, he has been breeding them since 1905 and has made a remarkable record.

Mr. Nichols has been one of our regular advertising patrons since the very first issue of the Fancier under its present management, and we have never had one complaint against him. This special sale at prices ranging anywhere from $2.00 up for some of the very best Wyandottes in the country is a sale which not one of our readers will let slip thru their fingers. We request all our readers to look up the advertisement of Mr. Nichols in this issue.

AN INNOVATION IN THE RUNNING OF A GREAT POULTRY SHOW.

The receipt at this office of the 1912 premium list of the Great Allentown Fair Poultry Show shows that all "rules" have been done away with and that in their stead appear: Rule 1.—"Fair play or the Golden Rule." Rule 2.—"The Great Allentown Fair being a member of the American Poultry Association their sixty-first annual show, Sept. 24-27, 1912, will be governed and run under the latest revised official poultry show rules of the American Poultry Association, and all prizes awarded strictly in accordance with the American Standard of Perfection." Information: "A guide for prospective exhibitors intended to give general information as to how the show will be conducted."

We find this latter very complete and in this form as allowing more full information to interested parties. For those unacquainted however with the way things are done at Allentown we may well say here that it will be wise for all intending to enter or having entered to make themselves thoroughly acquainted with what appears under this last head. Report has it that in the last few years alone this show has returned several thousand dollars of entries mailed after the date of closing; also that judging begins day, hour and minute advertised and woe to the birds that are not there, for they miss the judging, at least so far as it has gone.

The Great Allentown Fair Poultry Show under Superintendent Wittman has attained the enviable reputation of being the best managed poultry show in America and we have no doubt that in the abridging of the rules, so that they occupy less than a dozen lines of the premium list, they have taken another step forward. For, usually the more rules a show has the poorer it is.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

Elsewhere in this issue will be seen the advertisement of the Sunswick Farm, announcing that after January first that plant will be conducted as an exclusive Buff Orpington plant, and all of Mr. Delafield's White and Black Orpingtons are offered for sale.

Our readers are so familiar with the great record made by these birds in nearly all of the great shows of the country that it is not necessary for us to go into details.

Surely this is a sale extraordinary and presents wonderful opportunities for any one desiring to start in the business with an established record and an established trade and good will. It also presents wonderful opportunities for the Breeders of Orpingtons to infuse into their flocks the famous Sunswick blood, blood lines that have no peer on either side of the pond.

Sunswick stock always sells at par value. This is a sale which every one should read about, and is your opportunity.

Write Mr. Rufus Delafield concerning just exactly what you want and it will be a pleasure for him to quote you prices.

The Suburbanite as a Poultry Fancier

By J. E. Willmarth, Amityville, N. Y.

Many beginners have an idea that Exhibition Stock cannot be kept or bred on a small plot, but think that one must have a farm to be successful in this branch of the Poultry business.

This is just where they are mistaken. The farmer is not the one who is a Poultry Fancier. As a rule he has neither the time, patience or inclination that makes the successful Fancier. True, we have some Fanciers that have made the breeding of exhibition stock their business and are devoting all their time and good sized farms to the industry.

But the great majority of Fanciers that stick to it year in and year out, the Fanciers that make the Poultry Shows, the Fanciers that have the true Fancier spirit are suburbanites with an acre or two or less of ground at their disposal.

The above applies most aptly to Breeders of what we might term "the less popular varieties."

Nearly every village resident with a "back yard" can easily put himself in shape to become one of the leading Poultry Fanciers and win in the largest shows of the country, especially so if he will take up one of these "less popular" varieties.

A trio of first-class birds, mated right, or eggs from this kind of stock will give him a start. The first year or two he can raise his own chicks. After that, if his quarters are limited, he can have his chicks raised for him by near-by farmers, keeping his breeders on his own place and supplying the farmer with eggs, then gathering in the youngsters in the fall.

Many such would-be Fanciers think they do not have the time to take up fancy poultry breeding, but if they have the true liking for "Chickens" they can find a way around this. A few minutes in the morning and a few at night will suffice to attend to the wants of grown stock.

Open front houses, with deep litter on floors, hoppers of grit, shell, beef scrap, charcoal and dry mash, water fountain, etc., make this possible. Thus it is only necessary to throw some grain in litter, and enough can be fed each afternoon to last until the next afternoon if you so desire.

We do not mean to say that this "short time" care will give the best results, but we only wish to show that it is possible to have pure bred stock where one has but limited time to attend to their wants, and still have them produce very satisfactory results. Hundreds of Suburbanites are doing this very thing. Often one's "better half" takes a decided interest in the poultry question and will attend to any slight wants that may arise while the "man of the house" is away. Individual cases differ so much that it is impossible to give any certain rules, but we know that but a small amount of time is required each day to attend to the wants of the village poultry man's flock.

Where one has Standard bred Stock considerable pleasure is to be had in showing them, and it is also almost necessary that we exhibit our birds if we are to get the full benefit of keeping good stock, for this enables us to get enough extra for our surplus birds to more than pay us for the trouble, if one considers it a trouble to prepare the Stock and get them in shape for showing, and we never saw the man or woman yet who did not enjoy winning the prizes.

Showing our birds will probably bring us a few inquiries from parties who saw our birds in the show room, but as we will probably have more surplus birds than we can dispose of to such inquiries it is necessary that we look for a larger market and endeavor to sell birds to others than those who saw our stock at the Show, and to reach these people it is necessary that we advertise in the Poultry papers. Possibly a classified advertisement in a few papers will sell the surplus birds the first year or so, but as we improve our birds and gain experience and somewhat of a reputation we will have more and better birds to sell at higher prices. Then we must "spread out," enlarge our advertising appropriation, engage display space in the Poultry papers and thus attract a better class of inquirers, that is inquirers who want better quality of stock and expect to pay a proportionate price.

One must work up to all this gradually, and in a few years it will be found a very profitable and pleasant venture.

This measure of success is only obtainable by breeding Standard bred stock. Mongrel stock is better than none at all. They will lay some eggs and furnish an occasional dinner, but the Standard bred bird will do all this and a whole lot more.

They are no more trouble to care for, and the great majority of breeders find their chief pleasure and recreation in caring for such birds, where the care of Mongrels very soon gets to be tiresome, and a breeder of such Stock will either take up Standard bred birds or quit in disgust in a short time. We know that there are many village dwellers who have kept Mongrels for years with satisfactory results, but these have given their Chickens good care, which had it been given to pure bred birds, much more profitable and satisfactory results would have been obtained.

A BIG SHOW FOR LANCASTER FAIR.

The many readers of Poultry Fancier will be pleased to learn that the Poultry show connected with the Lancaster Fair will be one of the leading features. The Poultry show will be under the management of Dr. E. W. Garber, one of the best known and popular poultrymen in the state.

Dr. Garber for the past two years has been at the head of the Poultry Department and through his untiring efforts and ability he has been able to build up a Poultry Show at Lancaster which bids fair to become one of the big ones, in fact their coming show this year will be in a class with Allentown, Hagerstown and Hanover.

The premium list is a very liberal one, and a new feature is this: The regular Poultry catalogue is not a part of the regular fair catalogue, but will be issued separately. It is one of the most liberal premium lists that has been offered, and every one of our subscribers should secure a copy of the list.

Lancaster is a great place for the sale of birds, as it is the richest agricultural county in the state, and the sales made from the Lancaster Co. Fair are way above par. Dr. Garber is to be congratulated on building up such an excellent Poultry Show in a locality where it means so much.

Wild Canadian Geese

By R. G. Dawson, Franksville, Wis.

In addition to the many kinds of domesticated fowls that may be kept for pleasure or profit, none are equaled by the wild Canadian geese. They are as ornamental a variety as the swan. They are being cultivated more generally in public and private parks and are kept by a great many farmers. I find them tamer and more easily raised than the white or brown Chinas. They are not as good layers having never had any to lay more than 14 eggs in one season. They are like the Egyptian Geese and Swan and do not lay till two or three years of age. When migrating south their flight is very elevated, flying generally in two oblique lines, or wedge shape, to break the air resistance and make their flight easier. An old gander first cleaves the air and retires, when fatigued, to the rear. Have had birds weighing 19 lbs. They will live to a great age.

The young are stronger and have greater vitality and are more easily raised than any variety of geese. The eggs laid by wild geese are generally pointed at both ends and are generally more fertile. These birds breed in the Arctic regions of the far North Hudson Bay, Victoria River. There are three different varieties of these wild geese. The Canadian is the largest. Hutchins are smaller, marked exactly the same except the white mark over the eyes. Weight about six to eight lbs. There are also the Black Brant and Snow Goose.

H. E. Rogers Invents a Fireless Incubator

Local Poultry Raiser Successful with Machine Operated by Hot Water

If the success attained from two experiments in the hatching of eggs in a fireless incubator can be accepted as a criterion of permanent results, then Harvey E. Rogers, of East Clinton Avenue, has invented a machine that promises to revolutionize the breeding of poultry. Constructed of lumber taken from ordinary packing boxes and built during his leisure moments for experimental purposes only, the results so far obtained by Mr. Rogers have greatly exceeded his fondest expectations.

WHITE CHINA GEESSE.

This home-made machine is 2 feet, 6 inches in width, 2 feet high and 3 feet, 6 inches long. It has a capacity of 100 eggs and is operated by a system of hot water heating. The scheme of heating the water and keeping it at a uniform temperature without the use of a lamp, stove or thermostat of any kind, is the secret that the inventor is guarding closely. While manufacturers as well as many purchasers of incubators claim that a good lamp is half the machine itself, here is one that is showing a larger percentage of eggs hatched from each setting without fire, than any lamp or stove machine on the market.

Other strong points in favor of the new invention show it to be absolutely odorless and smokeless, requiring no heat regulation and it can be operated without cost to the owner. This machine differs from the ordinary incubator because it can be set anywhere, while experts on incubation claim that the matter of location is very important as it has much to do with success in hatching.

THE SQUARE DEAL SHOW, MARTINSBURG, W. VA.

The third annual show of the Berkeley County Poultry and Pet Stock Association, which will be held at Martinsburg, West Virginia, November 27th to 30th, promises to be one of the very best of the early winter shows. It will excel in every respect the last year's show, which was pronounced the best ever held in West Virginia.

The State Show and Institute of the West Virginia Branch of the American Poultry Association will be held in connection with the show. This assures the attendance of many of the most prominent breeders in the country who will take this opportunity to try out their birds before the big winter show season begins. The show will be in the hands of the same careful and painstaking management and will be handled by the same judges as last year, and it is the purpose of the management to maintain the reputation which they have established and give to every exhibitor a square deal.

Martinsburg is ideally located for a poultry show. Lying as it does at the junction of the Cumberland and Shenandoah Valleys and the bisection of two railways with 35 passenger trains a day, it has perfect transportation facilities North, South, East and West.

Birds shipped from Buffalo, New York or Richmond, Virginia, will reach the show room in twelve hours; from Chicago in twenty-four.

A large number of valuable and attractive special prizes will be offered in addition to the regular premiums and those offered by the State Branch, A. P. A.

The premium list and other information relative to the show can be had by addressing Taylor H. Jefferson, Secretary, Box Number 666, Martinsburg, West Virginia.

Photographs of Pennsylvania Poultry and Poultry Farms.

The following letter is self-explanatory:

Pennsylvania State Museum,
Harrisburg, July 15th, 1912.

W. Theo. Wittman,
Allentown, Pa.

Dear Sir:—Your item in the Poultry Fancier for June has been brought to our attention, and we wish to say that we heartily approve of your efforts and method of procedure to obtain photographs representing the poultry industry of the state.

Thanking you for the interest you are taking, and anticipating with pleasure the receipt of the photographs you may collect, I am,

Very truly yours,
Boyd P. Rothrock,

Curator.

The article referred to in the above letter asked that poultry people all over the state of Pennsylvania send any good photographs they may have of poultry subjects to the undersigned at 1317 Linden St., Allentown Pa. Quite a large number of photographs have been sent in in reply to this request, but not nearly enough to make a show or adequately represent the poultry industry of the greater commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Remember these photographs are to be mounted and grouped and be on display in the splendid State Museum Building on Capitol Hill at Harrisburg for inspection not only of visitors from this state but of visitors of all countries under the sun. Hence it is a matter of State pride for Pennsylvania Poultry people to have this representation a good one. The writer would again urge all who may have photographs along poultry lines to send them in. They are preferred unmounted. But if mounted send them anyhow. The writer is doing this service entirely as a volunteer and cannot guarantee that photographs that are unsuitable or impossible to use will be returned, but they will in no cases be diverted to other uses. Be sure and mark on the back of each photo the subject, with short details where needed, the name and address.

Perhaps you have some poultry, poultry houses and scenes that would make good pictures. Have these made now and send a print for use as above. One of the divisions of the State Museum is devoted to the dissemination of knowledge by the free loan of slides on many subjects to proper parties. They have catalogued and indexed some 30,000 such slides. But very few on poultry and these of little account, mostly because none have been offered. With a suitable collection of photographs there would be guaranteed a good line of poultry slides, hence photos sent in by you may reappear many times on screens in every nook and corner of the state to delight and instruct thousands of people.

W. THEO. WITTMAN.

*How One Woman Saved
The Farm.*

When Jim and I were married we bought a farm of fifty acres in a middle state for $2,500, paying down $500 and giving a first mortgage for the balance. During the next five years we paid $500 on the principal and the next year, in July, my husband died from typhoid fever. Thus I was left at the age of 33 with a mortgaged truck farm and two small children, a boy and a girl. The advice that I received from relatives and friends was varied, save in the respect that the first thing to do was to sell the farm, as no one conceived it possible for me to run it at a profit. Suggestions for my future were varied. "Put the children in a home and seek a place as housekeeper;" "Keep a candy and notion store;" "Get a situation as demonstrator;" "Start a millinery store."

Perhaps I was bull-headed; anyhow I made up my mind that I would keep the children and would keep the farm. I kept it, got a good active man by the month, rose early, went to bed late and ate, literally, the bread of carefulness.

In three years, despite my hard work, I saw no light ahead. I had not run in debt, but I was conscious that I had impoverished the land; repairs were needed on house and farm buildings, the children ran barefoot in summer and I had not bought a new dress or a new hat since Jim's death and I was nearly ashamed to gear up an old gray mare to an old surrey that lacked paint and drive to town, or to the village church. If it had not been for my chickens I think I should have gone under and sold out the place, but the yield of eggs and dressed poultry was fair. We were to some extent independent of the butcher, and the surplus eggs were good in trade at the store. During the fourth year it seemed that two-thirds of the set eggs hatched out roosters and while they held out prospect of future meat they evidently were negligible as egg producers.

I wonder if there is such a thing as luck? Anyhow about this time someone sent me an advertisement showing the profits to be made through caponizing. I sent for literature, studied it, and finally went so far as to dissect a dead rooster with a pen knife, thus locating for myself the organs to be removed in the operation.

Now I don't know how other people have grown into this kind of a job, but I found myself asking this question: If I can locate the testicle in a dead chicken why can't I do it in a live one? If I can locate them I can remove them. For a week I thought of capons by day and dreamed of them at night, and the upshot of the matter was that I sent for a set of instruments, extemporized a table on the head of a barrel and tried it out with fear and trembling. Luck was with me. I operated on the first one with little difficulty and was rejoiced to see him running around afterwards as though nothing had happened. I killed the next one through rupture of the blood vessel (we made pot pie of him for dinner), successfully removed the testicles in the next two, and made a "slip" of the last one through over confidence. Not bad for a beginner. To make a long story short, I kept on, became quite an expert, and a few months later was asked by a neighbor to operate on her roosters for pay. I did it, operated on thirty-five, charged five cents each for them, and when I got home with one dollar and seventy-five cents in small change I realized that my problems were solved and that I could hold my home. After this it seemed to me that the county went capon crazy and I soon found that several mornings of each week were devoted to caponizing for pay. My speed increased, and I can now earn readily from five to ten dollars a day during the caponizing season. I get paid for teaching the art, have had a number of lucrative engagements at fairs and poultry shows and grange meetings. My farm is clear. I am complimented on the neatness of the buildings and surroundings, and best of all, the farm pays. I don't have to rob it to live. The old gray mare and surrey have given place to a good family horse and carriage. I can buy what I need and pay for it, and my children go to church and school well clad. My bank credit is good and I see no reason, given continued health and strength, why I cannot look forward to a care-free comfortable evening of life.

Sometimes I feel like sending Geo. P. Pilling & Son Co., of Philadelphia, a pair of capons at Thanksgiving and Christmas, because they sent me the circular telling of the money to be made with capons, but I have refrained from doing so because perhaps, there is no Geo. P. Pilling, and again, if there is, his grateful customers through the length and breadth of the land have no doubt made him heartily tired of capons. Pilling probably would leave capons for salt pork. Anyhow I owe him a debt of gratitude and pay it in part by urging every woman to learn how to make capons.

MR. UNDERHILL,

Dear Sir:

It is with great pleasure I drop you a line to say that I am more than pleased with the Cockerel you sent me. He came in fine shape.

This is my thirty-ninth year breeding Single Comb White Leghorns. The bird you have just sent me is the best bird I ever bought for the money. He is a dandy. You must have stock of high quality. I bought a cockerel last year of Mr. Irving C. Rice and he was the next best bird to yours. Mr. Rice, I think, is a wonderful nice man and strictly honest, but when I want more stock, Mr. Underhill, you will get my order. Please accept many thanks for the bird.

Yours very truly,

STROUDSBURG, PENNA. SHOW.

The first annual exhibition of the Monroe Co. Poultry Association will be held at Stroudsburg, Penna., December, 4th to 7th, 1912.

While this is a comparatively young organization, it is composed of men who have made good in the Poultry business and men who have the power and influence to make their coming show one that can't help but attract marked attention throughout the Eastern field.

The following officers will have charge of the show: Wm. Burnett, Pres.; E. M. Paxton, Sec.; Lewis Tyreman, Robt. Eastwick, H. A. Kent, W. E. Arnold, N. B. Dermund and J. W. Paul, Show Committee.

Charles Nixon, the well known Judge, of Washington, N. J., will dish out the ribbons and our readers can rest assured that with Mr. Nixon acting in this capacity and the reputation of this association and it's officers every exhibitor will receive justice.

Keep your eye on the Poultry Fancier for all Poultry news from Monroe Co.

NOW AT THE NEW STAND.

Several months ago we made the announcement that the Onlya Farm, of Morristown, New Jersey, moved their entire plant and equipment to Florham Park, N. J. Florham Park is on the D. L. & W. R. R., and their station is Madison.

Charles Staaff, the popular manager, now writes us that they are pretty well fixed up in their new plant and, as usual, he is now prepared to extend the glad hand to all Poultrymen visiting the plant and show them 600 as fine youngsters as ever grew. We all know the reputation of Mr. Staaff, that when he says a thing he means just what he says, and when he says he has 600 as fine White Wyandottes as ever grew we can all take it for granted that he means just exactly what he says.

Onlya Farm has had a successful season, not only in winning at the big shows, but also in the egg trade and is one of the few plants that can boast of well developed stock at this time of the year.

The owner of the plant, we all know, is Phillip Carney, a Fancier to the core, a man who loves the beautiful and permits nothing but the very best on the plant. This concern intends making the big exhibit at Allentown Fair this year and it certainly will be to the interest of our readers who are interested in White Wyandottes to get in touch with the Onlya Farm for well developed young stock, and also to look them up at Allentown.

POTTSVILLE, PENNA. SHOW.

Judging by the hard and intelligent work that is being done by the members of the Pottsville Poultry Association it looks as if their coming show would be one of the best that has ever been held in the Anthracite regions of Penna. Their premium list is one of the best in the state this year. Their show will be held under the rules of the American Poultry Association, as they have lately taken the step and become members of the A. P. A. This means much to the Pottsville organization.

The Railroad facilities are excellent, being touched by the Phila. & Reading, Penna., Jersey Central and Lehigh Valley. The Fancier will keep you advised as to the doings of this down-to-date organization.

The African or "Stuffed Goose."

By R. G. Dawson, Franksville, Wis.

A cross between the Brown China Goose and the common goose of India was the original progenitor of the African Goose. Why they are called African is not clearly understood, and the Standard adopted this name in 1879.

They will grow the heaviest in the shortest space of time of any of the varieties, and are being raised extensively around Watertown, Wis., consequently this locality has become famous for raising what is called the "Stuffed Goose."

This goose, when "stuffed" and marketed will bring the very highest price the market commands and the demand is not half supplied.

African ganders are used almost exclusively for breeding, as they are the most hardy and vigorous, and have great size. These African ganders are crossed on common or grade geese, and this cross is the most profitable to produce the "stuffed goose."

These will grow the largest of all the varieties, either pure-bred or crossed, and one specimen, crossbred, was known to the writer as weighing 38 pounds and was sold for 38 cents per pound, bringing the sum of $14.44.

The market price is established and remains practically the same each year. The average weight per goose of a farmer's consignment will fix the price he will get.

For example: A bunch of 50 geese sent to market averaging 29 pounds will bring him his 29 cents per pound. The livers from these geese sell from $5 to $6 per dozen in New York City.

The Prime-bred Africans grow as large as any variety of geese, are more active than either the Toulouse or Embden, and are somewhat better layers; their eggs will average larger and are more fertile. They are also more of an ornamental variety than either the Embden or the Toulouse, and they are very hardy. It is strange that this variety is not bred more extensively as there is no goose more profitable.

There seems to be an awakening to the fact that there is money in raising geese. Dressed geese sold at Christmas time this last season for 16 cents per pound. Personally I consider the African as fine an ornamental variety as either the Wild Canadian or the Egyptian Geese.

MAKING BIG IMPROVEMENTS.

One of the most successful Poultrymen and one of the most successful plants in Buckeye State is located at South Euclid, Ohio, practically a suburb of Cleveland. It is owned and operated by Chas. W. Switzer, who is well known to the Orpington Breeders of this country, particularly the Buffs. The progress of this plant has been nothing less than remarkable. Four years ago, when I first met Mr. Switzer and saw his plant, it was but a small affair. To-day it is recognized as one of the finest plants in Ohio.

Mr. Switzer bought a fine farm, of over 100 acres, planted it mostly in fruit and berries and devoted almost every square inch of it to the raising of the Roseland Buff Orpingtons. He just writes that he has built another 120 foot addition to one of his main houses making this house 220 ft. long. We described this house some time ago, when we stated it was a model and we dare state that this house with its present addition, makes one of the finest poultry houses in America. The trade that Mr. Switzer has built up in Roseland Buff Orpingtons is nothing less than remarkable. The past season has been a successful one. He has not only been successful as a breeder, but as an exhibitor as well, and his great records at Chicago, Cleveland and Pittsburg will testify to this. Not only this, but the birds sold to his customers have won in almost every State in the Union.

The Roseland Buffs are always at par value. The special sale which Mr. Switzer is now offering on his breeding stock is something which not one of our readers should ever over-look. Mr. Switzer also states that he is prepared to fit any one out for the show room with Cock, Hen, Cockerel, Pullet and Pen at prices that are within the reach of the masses and quality to meet any competition.

We congratulate Mr. Switzer on the great success that he has met with.

BIGGEST BANTAM SHOW IN AMERICA.

One of the things the Great Allentown Fair Poultry Show indisputably leads in is the size of its Bantam Show. It not only leads in number of birds but it leads in the liberality of its classification and in the amount of premiums paid.

The first prize in Bantams is $4.00, second prize $2.00, on single birds, two to fill a class. On pens, the first prize is $20.00, second prize $10.00, three to fill. The classification includes this year three selling classes, viz: a $5.00 class; a $10.00 class and a $25.00 class.

Two distinct Bantam judges are always engaged. Last year the late David A. Nichols judged ornamental Bantams and Dr. W. C. Cleckey judged Game Bantams. This year George L. Young, Brooklyn, N. Y., secretary of the National Bantam Association, has been engaged to judge ornamental Bantams and W. H. Congdon, Providence, R. I., to judge Game Bantams.

Bantams at Allentown have the grand, central aisle of the big main Poultry Building and are caged in new, special, Empire Bantam cages, the fair owning and having in permanent position over 500 single Bantam cages. The aisle is in charge of two men experienced with Bantams and even special Bantam feed is provided. The building is light, airy and bright and the aisle has a special rail protecting the birds from the curious and annoyance. The show is a three day show only with birds returned extra promptly and in the seven years under the present management not a single Bantam has been lost. Hence it is a safe proposition to show Bantams at Allentown.

R. C. BLACK BANTAMS.
Bred by R. J. Stange, Adrian, Mich.

AMERICAN BANTAM ASSOCIATION.

The American Bantam Association has voted to meet at the Palace Show, New York City, December 3-7, 1912. This will be the twentieth annual exhibition of this association and breeders from all parts of the country are planning to attend. Efforts are being made to have a state cup offered for every state. Many individual breeders are offering cups and specials. The judges will be designated by the association.

Central Pennsylvania Chicken Chatter

Any news, notes or items of interest pertaining to poultrydom in Central Pennsylvania, will find a place in this Department. Address all communications to James T. Huston, Williamsport, Pa.

It was the writer's privilege to spend a few days in and around Bloomsburg since the last issue of the Fancier. We found enthusiasm running high over the prospects of their next show, being the greatest yet held by this hustling bunch of fanciers. Write Mr. S. J. Johnson, Secretary, requesting that your name be placed on his mailing list that you may be sure of receiving their premium list when issued.

The show will again be held at the Midway, assuring the exhibitor of one of the best Show Halls in the State. In Wm. C. Denny and Mr. and Mrs. Koons Bloomsburg has a trio of Judges which should bring out a great class of birds.

We also had a very pleasant call on Mr. Tobias Secretary, and Mr. Guise President, of the Sunbury Association. Seldom do you find a better pair of fanciers. With such men as officers Sunbury should forge still further ahead in the poultry world. These gentlemen gave us to understand that every effort will be put forth to make the 5th Annual the greatest of any show yet held in Northumberland Co. Mr. Tobias is anxious that every breeder should be placed on his mailing list, so that the Premium List will be sure to reach the prospective exhibitor when issued.

See to this if you intend showing this year. Sunbury stands high in Pennsylvania exhibitions and a win means much.

We have not heard from Mr. Ullrick, the popular press representative of the Lewistown, Pa., Association as to how matters are progressing at Lewistown. We take it that our mutual friend is either enjoying the ocean breezes or is deeply engrossed in the rapid growth of those White Leghorns. Give us a good letter from Lewistown for next issue.

Mr. Samuel McKinley, of Burnham, Mifflin Co., was a welcome visitor to our plant a few days ago and gave us glowing reports of a successful show for Lewistown the coming season. Just watch Lewistown, and take it from me you will see this show become one of the best in that section of the state. Mr. McKinley is a fancier we are glad to know and hope he may visit us again.

In looking over the list of judges for the different shows of Central Penna., we find that the different Associations have paid little attention whether the Judges were Editor-Solicitor Judges or not. By this we are led to believe that the different Associations in Central Penna. have not decided on this very much discussed question. It is not our purpose to give our personal opinion at this time, for the reason we have not as yet studied the question from all sides, but along the lines of square dealing in Poultry exhibitions, we have this to suggest and in our mind it is by far as important as this much discussed Rule 17.

It has been the custom in practically all large shows and many of the smaller to place on sale on the opening of the exhibitions unmarked catalogues. In fact we have attended shows where by knowing the ropes catalogues were to be had in some cases even before the doors opened on the first day of exhibition.

If some judges are not beyond suspicion, and dishonest exhibitors are in evidence, why not exclude as much as possible any opportunity of crookedness? This can be accomplished to a great extent by the doing away of the unmarked catalogue evil.

We read with a great deal of surprise, an article in the July Poultry Item, in which the writer in a vein of sarcasm suggests that the Judge should slip into the town by a back door route and be led about by plain clothes men until time for judging, when he would be brought into the hall by a private entrance. Capital idea. In fact, the solution to the whole problem.

Far better this than to have these very same judges met at the station or hotel by some one with an unmarked catalogue up their sleeve. As long as we have poultry shows so long will we hear the cry, "The Judge was fixed." In this present day of some graft and much mud slinging the finger of suspicion is pointed to the innocent and guilty alike. Therefore every safe-guard should be thrown around the judges and exhibitors alike. Me thinks the judge would much prefer to be escorted to the show hall, if necessary, by a body-guard than to be subjected to the indignities of the unmarked catalogue fiend.

We are glad to believe in our own mind that the dishonest exhibitor is not in the majority and that the dishonest judge can soon be done away with, if all show officials in hiring their judges will only employ those whom they know to be square and honest. A dishonest award placed by a judge makes that judge a thief, and so he should be treated. Who is there that has made a study of Poultry Shows that cannot determine the honest from the dishonest judge?

Speaking of the existing evils of the Poultry Shows of to-day (and granting that some do exist), after all, are not the majority of our shows carried on in a straight-forward way? The men who, as a rule, promote and are to a great extent responsible for the way the exhibitions are run, are men of honor. These men are fanciers. Few of them realize a penny for their untiring efforts in behalf of the show they are interested in. We cannot appreciate their efforts too greatly. Those who have been through the battle necessary to gain the experience to become critics of how a show should be run are slow to criticize, but are loud in their praise of these men and women who are making our modern Poultry Shows.

Have you as yet written the Secretaries of the Shows of Central Penna., that your name may go on their mailing lists? Make up your minds, Central Penna. fanciers, that you will show at Williamsport Thanksgiving week. Follow it up the following week at Bloomsburg or Pottsville, then Lewistown, Dec. 31st to Jan. 3rd. Sunbury's dates are week of Jan. 6th, also Easton, Pa. Will Bellefonte, Lock Haven, Mount Carmel, Hughesville, Wellsboro and a few others get busy and fill in these dates between Bloomsburg and Sunbury. Get away from conflicting dates.

Why not vote for Williamsport for the State A. P. A. meeting? Can you find a more Central city in the State? Six different railroads entering the city clinches the argument that she is the easiest reached city in the State.

Williamsport is making a strong bid for the American Barred Plymouth Rock Club State meet. If she is successful in landing this meeting the Barred Plymouth Rock Fanciers of the State can expect a rich layout in regard to specials at this show. Philadelphia has had the cup and meeting for years. Why not give Williamsport a chance?

A strong effort is also being made by the Williamsport Association to land the National meeting of the Houdan Club.

The class of Houdans at Williamsport for years has been larger than ever at New York or Boston, and with fanciers of this breed such as Harvey Springman and Walter Hood boosting, the chances are strong for Williamsport.

We look forward with a great deal of pleasure to meeting the Pen Yan bunch Thanksgiving week. The Little Yates Association of New York will show in a body at Williamsport.

This for a suggestion! Let all the Secretaries of the different Shows in Central Penna. write a letter each month for

THE HANOVER FAIR SHOW.

As our readers well know there is held annually in connection with the Hanover Fair, a Poultry Show of the same calibre as Hagerstown and Allentown. In fact, Hanover has always been considered one of the great shows of the East. It will interest our readers to know that the building where this show is held at Hanover Fair grounds, is considered a model. While not as large as either Allentown or Hagerstown buildings, it is nevertheless one of the best adapted buildings in the country for a Poultry Show.

So great has been the Poultry interest at this show that for the past two years the management was compelled to return many entries. This can be attributed to the fact that they have always paid liberal premiums, have been prompt and that every visiting Fancier gets exactly what is coming to him, and above all, Hanover is situated in York Co., one of the greatest Agricultural Counties in the state, where the down-to-date farms have no use for mongrels on the farm, but go annually to the Hanover Fair to buy the very best that is in the show for the improvement of their flocks.

This year Hanover Poultry Association has decided to give the space formerly devoted to pigeons over to the Bantam breeders. Geo. Young will officiate as Judge of the Bantams. Just as soon as the building is enlarged there will be a down-to-date Pigeon show added to the exhibition. The entrance fees are 50c. this year and the prizes will be $2.00 first and $1.00 second on single entries and $6.00 and $3.00 on pens.

This is one of the most liberal premium lists in the State, in fact in the country and we suggest that all our readers send at once to Charles S. Shirk, Hanover, Penna., for the Hanover Fair catalogue and get your entry in early, or else it may be that it will be returned, for as above stated, so great has been the demand for space that hundreds of dollars have been returned annually on entries that could not find room.

We cannot help but congratulate Chas. S. Shirk, the manager, on building up at Hanover a Poultry Show equal to the very best in the country. We cannot help but congratulate him also on the excellent work that he has accomplished in promoting the Fancy Poultry Industry in York county and over Southeastern Pennsylvania. Mr. Shirk is recognized as the Father of the Fancy Poultry Industry throughout that section of the State.

NOTICE TO SECRETARIES.

The National White Runner Duck Club offers specials as follows: one on each best young drake, best old drake, best young duck, best old duck and best pen. Only members of this club competing. Membership, $1.00 per year. O. O. Ray, Secretary-Treasurer, National White Runner Duck Club, Kirkwood, Atlanta, Ga.

SUCCESS WELL EARNED.

We are pleased to state that A. J. Street, well known Buff Orpington Breeder, of Forest Hill, Maryland, has taken up the White Orpingtons. All our readers well know Mr. Street as one of the most prominent breeders of Buff Orpingtons in the East. A number of years ago, long before the writer was connected with the Poultry Item, I had the pleasure of handling Mr. Street's business. I have seen him rise from a very small breeder, winning at the small towns, to one of the most prominent breeders, carrying off the blue ribbons at Baltimore.

Mr. Street is what we call an intense breeder, a careful breeder who so mates his birds that they produce better offspring than themselves.

Mr. Street is now taking up breeding the S. C. White Orpingtons and promises us a surprise at the coming shows.

We haven't the least bit of doubt but what Mr. Street will meet with the same success in White Orpingtons as he has met with in Buffs.

NOW IN THE CAMPINE BUSINESS.

Our readers have doubtless noticed the advertisement of the Mound Hill Poultry Farm, Seville, Ohio, S. D. Hall, proprietor, using our columns for the past months, selling his high grade S. C. White Leghorns and he has met with marked success.

Mr. Hall has taken a new variety, Silver Campines, and is importing some exceptionally fine stock from leading breeders in England and Belgium. He has also made some importations from Canada.

Mr. Hall thinks there is a great future for the Silver Campines and indicates that he will have more to say concerning the Campines in the near future.

He also indicates that he will be in a position next season to furnish baby chicks. Mr. Hall has furnished a great many baby chicks this season from the high-class Leghorns. He is one of the most reputable breeders of the Buckeye state and we predict for him great success in his new variety.

RHODE ISLAND REDS

How to Breed and Judge Them

By THEO. HEWES

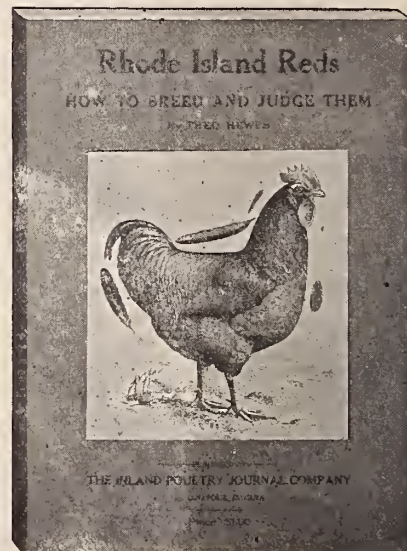

Is the Best and Most Complete Treatise Ever Published on this Popular Breed

There are but few breeds so widely advertised to-day as the Rhode Island Reds and no breed in which there is such a wide difference of opinion as to what constitutes perfection.

"RHODE ISLAND REDS; HOW TO BREED AND JUDGE THEM"

is better than the "STANDARD OF PERFECTION"

because it goes into detail and describes every section, with numerous illustrations, showing ideal and defective shape and color, thus making scoring so simple that any one can understand. Some sections have four or five illustrations showing the several defects that may be found in them, with the proper discount for the same as applied by our leading Judges.

Size of Book 11½x8½ inches, Contains over 50 pages, including cover which is printed in three colors, and all on good half-tone paper. PRICE $1.00

In addition to this most complete series of articles on scoring, there are numerous articles from America's foremost Red breeders on every phase of Red Breeding. This book tells you just what you want to know. It tells you how to mate your pens; how to grow your chicks; how to select your show birds; in fact, it tells you how to grow, exhibit and make money out of Reds.

This book is sold on approval. The price is $1.00. If you are not satisfied with your bargain, send us back the book and we will refund your money.

Standard Wyandottes in Colors and How to Judge Them

By THEO. HEWES

REACHES THE CLIMAX FOR THOSE INTERESTED IN THIS VARIETY. WHEN YOU SEE IT YOU WILL ACKNOWLEDGE THAT IT IS THE BEST AND WORTH MANY TIMES THE PRICE TO YOU.

This book teaches you How to Score and Judge the greatest of all the American varieties. No other work published will give the information as it is given by Theo. Hewes in his articles, which are fully illustrated by over one hundred pictures, together with the chart system, of which he is the originator, and which is copyrighted by him. Not only do full page half-tone plates of some of the finest living specimens of these breeds appear in black and white, but the richest and grandest work ever done in oil by an artist is given by I. W. Burgess in a series of twelve pictures representing male and female, accompanied by feathers from the different sections of the birds in colors.

Size of book 11½x8½ inches. Contains over 70 pages, including cover, which is printed in three colors, and all on good half-tone paper. PRICE, $1.00

These pictures are 4½x7 inches in size, and cost over $1,000 for the copper plates alone, to say nothing of the artist's labor and general cost of production. In fact no expense has been spared to make it by far the most valuable work on Wyandottes ever printed in America or elsewhere you cannot duplicate it at any price, but you can have one by return mail for $1.00, and if you are not satisfied we will refund your money. We do as we say we will, now and always. Our past dealings with the public will prove this.

Remit by Express, P. O. Order or Check as this is the safest way. Book will be sent immediately upon receipt of order.

A Genuine Rupture Cure Sent on Trial to Prove It

Don't Wear a Truss Any Longer.

After Thirty Year's Experience I Have Produced an Appliance for Men, Women and Children That Actually Cures Rupture.

If you have tried most everything else, come to me. Where others fail is where I have my greatest success. Send attached coupon to-day and I will send you free my illustrated book on Rupture and its cure showing my Appliance and giving you prices and names of many people who have tried it and were cured. It is instant relief where all others fail. Remember, I use no salves, no harness, no lies.

I send on trial to prove what I say is true. You are the judge and once having seen my illustrated book and read it you will be as enthusiastic as my hundreds of patients whose letters you can also read. Fill out free coupon below and mail to-day. It's well worth your time whether you try my Appliance or not. Mr. C. F. Brooks, Marshall, Mich.

Pennsylvania Man Thankful

Dear Sir:—Perhaps it will interest you to know that I have been ruptured six years and have always had trouble with it till I got your Appliance. It is very easy to wear, fits neat and snug, and it is not in the way at any time, day or night. In fact, at times I did not know I had it on. It just adapted itself to the shape of the body and seemed to be a part of the body, as it clung to the spot no matter what position it was in.

It would be a veritable God-send to the unfortunate who suffer from rupture if all could procure the Brooks Rupture Appliance and wear it. They would certainly never regret it.

My rupture is now all healed up and nothing ever did it but your Appliance. Whenever the opportunity presents itself I will say a good word for your Appliance, and also the honorable way in which you deal with ruptured people. It is a pleasure to recommend a good thing among your friends or strangers, I am

Yours very sincerely,

JAMES A. BRITTON.

80 Spring St., Bethlehem, Pa.

Recommended from Texas Farmer

Brooks Rupture Appliance Co., Marshall, Mich. Gentlemen:—I feel it my duty to let you, and also all people afflicted as I was, know what your Appliance has done for me. I have been ruptured for many years and have worn many different trusses, but never got any relief until I got your appliance. I put it on last November, but had very little faith in it, but must say I am now cured. I have laid it away—have had it off for two weeks and doing all kinds of farm work with ease. While I was wearing it, I had lagrippe and coughed a great deal but it held all right. Words cannot express my gratitude towards you and your Appliance. Will recommend it to all ruptured people.

Very sincerely,

J. E. LONG.

Bald Praire, Texas.

Others Failed but the Appliance Cured

C. E. Brooks, Marshall, Mich.

Dear Sir:—Your Appliance did all you claim for the little boy and more, for it cured him sound and well. We let him wear it for about a year in all, although it cured him three months after he had begun to wear it. We had tried several other remedies and got no relief, and I shall certainly recommend it to friends, for we surely owe it to you.

Yours respectfully,

WM. PATTERSON.

No 717 S. Main St., Akron, O.

Cured at the Age of 76

Mr. C. E. Brooks, Marshall, Mich.

Dear Sir:—I began using your Appliance for the cure of rupture (I had a pretty bad case) I think in May, 1905. On November 20, 1905, I quit using it. Since that time I have not needed or used it. I am well of rupture and rank myself among those cured by the Brooks Discovery, which, considering my age, 76 years, I regard as remarkable.

Very sincerely yours,

Jamestown, N. C. SAM. A. HOOVER.

21 Jansen St., Dubuque, Iowa.

Brooks Rupture Appliance Co.

The above is C. E. Brooks, inventor of the Appliance, who cured himself and who has been curing others for over 30 years. If ruptured, write him to-day.

Child Cured in Four Months

Gentlemen:—The baby's rupture is altogether cured thanks to your Appliance, and we are so thankful to you. If we could only have known of it sooner our little boy would not have had to suffer near as much as he did. He wore your brace a little over four months and has not worn it now for six weeks.

Yours very truly,

ANDREW EGGENBERGER.

10. My reputation for honesty and fair dealing is so thoroughly established by an experience of over thirty years of dealing with the public, and my prices are so reasonable, my terms so fair, that there certainly should be no hesitancy in sending free coupon to-day.

Ten Reasons Why You Should Send for Brooks' Rupture Appliance

1. It is absolutely the only Appliance of the kind on the market to-day, and in it are embodied the principles that inventors have sought after for years.
2. The Appliance for retaining the rupture cannot be thrown out of position.
3. Being an air cushion of soft rubber it clings closely to the body, yet never blisters or causes irritation.
4. Unlike the ordinary so-called pads, used in other trusses, it is not cumbersome or un-pleasant.
5. It is small, soft and pliable, and positively cannot be detected through the clothing.
6. The soft, pliable bands holding the Appliance do not give one the unpleasant sensation of wearing a harness.
7. There is nothing about it to get foul and when it becomes soiled it can be washed without injuring it in the least.
8. There are no metal springs in the Appliance to torture one by cutting and bruising the flesh.
9. All of the material of which the Appliances are made is of the very best that money can buy, making it a durable and safe Appliance to wear.

Remember

I send my Appliance on trial to prove what I say is true. You are to be the judge. Fill out free coupon below and mail to-day.

The Hope of the Industry

It Lies in the Number of Recruits Added to the Ranks Each Season. Every Breeder Should aid in the work. By H. S. Babcock.

THE beginner is the hope of the poultry industry. There must be a constant accession to the ranks in any industry in order to keep it alive, and the accession must be greater than the recession if progress is to be made. As the poultry industry is one deserving of progress, and is in fact progressive, it is important that its ranks not only be kept full but be ever increasing in numbers. It is, therefore, a thoroughly practical question how beginners in poultry keeping may be made.

The more attractive an industry is made, the easier it will be to obtain recruits. Our national government is awake to this fact, and in its advertising for recruits to the army and navy it makes prominent the attractions of the service, the pay, the prospect for advancement, the pleasures of the service. Poultry breeding makes two appeals to those not engaged in it,—to the pleasures it affords and the profits it pays. Both appeals are grounded in truth, because there is a pleasure in the management and breeding of fowls, and because the industry pays, for the capital invested, a larger percentage of profit than any ordinary business, indeed larger than almost any other business.

And these appeals are made in various ways or through various instrumentalities. There is, for example, the poultry show, where fanciers exhibit the choicest specimens, where they mingle socially and talk over their labors and share their common hopes and aspirations, where they engage in a friendly competition for prizes and where the successful ones carry away well-earned and greatly enjoyed honors.

There is, too, the great central body of poultrymen, the American Poultry Association, which makes the poultry show, as now conducted, a possibility, whose meetings for legislation to advance the interests of the industry are assemblages of kindred spirits, and whose offices are positions of responsibility and honor, the reward of efficient services in the past, the stimulus to greater services in the future.

There, too, are the poultry journals, whose pages are filled with an attractive, instructive and interesting literature, the work of many minds and hands, illustrated with the choicest studies of competent artists. They disseminate the latest poultry information, instructing the mind, stimulating the ambition and arousing the enthusiasm of their readers. They afford a medium in which the buyer and seller are brought into communication to their common profit. They help to sustain the poultry show by promulgating information before it is held and recording its events after it is finished. They reach thousands upon thousands of readers, many of whom are led into the ranks of breeders.

There, too, are the more formal books relating to the subject, "the precious life blood" of men who have studied long and deeply and who have recorded their experience and their discoveries for others.

All these, and other agencies, are at work helping to make beginners in the occupation of keeping and breeding poultry. And if it is important that beginners should be made—a proposition no intelligent observer will dispute;—if these agencies help to make beginners—and no one will seriously question it;—then what ought to be the poultryman's attitude toward these agencies? Ought he not support the poultry show, the American Poultry Association, the poultry journal, and the poultry book to the best of his abilities? There is a sentence, quoted often by self-reliant men, that "The gods help those who help themselves," a sentence big with truth, but how can men better help themselves than by supporting every agency which assists in increasing the number of beginners in the poultry industry, remembering that every beginner is necessarily a customer for some breeder and that the more there are of them the greater will be the demand for poultry products? Even if this were not so, even if they added nothing to the volume of trade, how could a poultryman do better service to advance the great industry with which he is connected than by supporting the agencies which make it appear attractive and thus enlist recruits to fill the ranks that death is constantly decimating? There probably is no poultryman so narrow and bigoted, so short-sighted and selfish, that he does not wish to have his industry increase in the number of those engaged in its work and the estimation in which it is held by the public. If there is such a poultry-man hidden in any obscure corner of this broad land, we have never seen or heard of him, and we never wish to see or hear of him unless we can convert him from the errors of his ways and bring him out of darkness into the marvelous light of truth. And this we may say without fear of its being successfully controverted, that the industry cannot advance unless the enlistments exceed the discharges—whether by death, disability or retirement from service—and that, therefore, as was said in the beginning, the beginner is the hope of the industry. If we are to have beginners we must support those agencies through which beginners are made.

Preparing Birds for Exhibition

Proper Condition of Fowls Intended for Exhibition is Often Half the Battle—Many Good Birds in Poor Show Condition Lose the Prizes to Inferior Specimens That are Carefully Groomed for the Occasion. By C. E. PETERSON.

EW men are wise by their own counsel, or learned by their own teaching; for he that was taught only by himself had a fool for his master. Remembering this wise saying from Ben Jonson, I have not only given my own methods in preparing fowls for exhibition, but I have also gathered honey from many a strange hive not easy of access to my brother fanciers. In preparing our birds for showing there are a number of factors that combine in making a successful issue, any one of which if neglected may send us back home without the much coveted prize we went out to get. This disappointment in a majority of cases may be attributed to ignorance on the part of the exhibitor, in preparing an otherwise good bird, so as to show up well in the show-room, and in consequence a less good bird, but in the pink of condition, and fitted up by a man who knows how, gains the day. We have visited show after show, in which we have found birds that would have been good enough to win if they had been fit to handle, but dirty, and out of condition, no judge would have given them even a passing glance, except perhaps in disgust, and justly so. It is not a science, nor a very difficult job to get a bird into show condition, but it does mean considerable work to do it well, and the man who is not willing to give work and time to fit his birds, should never attempt to show in respectable company. There are of course a number of the so-called secrets, in preparing a bird well, but every one of them may be classed among the natural processes of doing things well.

It has been stated that a child's education should begin years before its birth, and this statement is equally as well adaptable when it comes to prepare birds for exhibition, as not only the training of the birds in hand, but the parents of this very bird have much to do in making or marring our success; continuous vigilance, from shell to exhibition, is the price of Success. As show begins to follow show, in rapid succession our fanciers are getting their birds ready for some show or another where they wish to exhibit. At this time a more liberal class of feeding becomes necessary so as to put the birds in what we call "show condition," but without fattening the specimen to be shown, as such a proceeding would unfit it for future use in the breeding pen. Many a fine bird has been utterly ruined for future use in the breeding pen by being made butter fat before exhibition.

All kinds of stimulating foods and nostrums should be avoided, that is if you care for the future health of your bird.

There is no doubt in my mind that excessive showing and stimulating food, have more to do with the infertility of eggs from prize birds than any other cause, and it may well be said that the love of blue ribbons is the root of all evil in the breeding yard. Condition is the desired point to be attained, and good care, good sound food, and good sound sense on the part of the care-taker will never fail to produce it.

Handle the birds every day as tameness should be encouraged by every possible means. How often really good specimens are passed over by the judge simply because they being of a wild and timorous nature, crouch in the corners of the pen, and look their worst, at a time when so much depends on their looking their best.

Many an exhibitor knows this only too well, when he came to compare his own afraid-of-everything-and-everybody specimen with the next to him who stood bolt upright in his coop, appearing only too pleased to court observation.

Therefore any treatment conducive to the last mentioned result should not be lost sight of. It may be well to say here for future reference, if of no immediate value, that I start in very early handling my birds, from a few days old, until I can pick them up most anywhere, and they seem to like it, after they get to know I am their friend.

Never use a fretty, afraid-of-you, suspicious-of-everything hen for a mother, as she will teach the whole brood her own wicked ways and make your work harder, and losing your temper easier.

By the way, though I digress just a little, I have never seen an ill tempered man or woman ever succeed with poultry, and that is why, and the only reason why, that the poultry fraternity is as a whole the best lot of fellows on the earth; they have learned to be sunny and good natured, got to be to keep poultry and you will find out that I am telling the truth, when you come to wash your own little beauties.

Valuable birds are frequently unfitted for exhibition through the untimely loss of their feathers, more particularly those of their tail. And where the competition is so very keen as it is today at our average show, the loss of even a point may be disastrous to show honors, hence the importance of looking after matters sharply. It is mainly caused in small yards by their being constantly worried by tyrannical companions; to get away from them the unfortunate bird rushes into corners and out-of-the-way places to escape punishment, and before you know the mischief is done. And as it takes from six to eight weeks to grow a sickle feather, precaution is in this case much better than cure.

After yarding the birds you intend to exhibit, watch them carefully so you may be sure that they are on good terms.

Wherever conditions are such that the birds can be penned single before exhibition, it should be done, as it helps the birds to become familiar with the coop, and the exhibitor to apply the finishing touches. A good way to bring out the qualities of a young male bird, and to put on him "exhibition style," is to give him a week or so before exhibition, the company of a few females. Nature is nature all over the world, and as the boy is ever proud of being flirted with by the opposite sex, so likewise we see how young male animals, and birds particularly, strut and plume themselves when placed in company with females of the same class. Such a treatment will bring him out with no mean opinion of himself when he makes his debut at the first show.

In making a pen up for exhibition, be careful that the birds, as far as possible, match one another in markings, size and style. If crested fowls are to be exhibited, see to it that their crests are uniform in size and shape, as one single bird with a larger crest than her companions, will completely outclass the others penned with her.

It is also well to bear in mind, that the male bird is the half of the pen, therefore make a wise selection, and see that he match the females in breed characteristics. Never use an old "passe" cock to put in an exhibition pen, as to the intelligent breeder it only shows that you are deficient in exhibition birds and it is our opinion that a bird not fit to breed from is not fit to exhibit. Fowls should on no consideration be sent to a show with their crops full of hard grain, such a practice being particularly inadvisable. They get hot and feverish and thus lose condition.

The Aylesburg Duck

By Edmin H. Morris. Sparkill. New York.

The quartette of these ducks as seen in the picture, won many prizes for the writer at the leading American shows; after coming from England with a long list of winnings. Mr. Charles McClave on seeing one at a Madison Square Garden Show, New York, declared it the finest or perhaps it was the largest duck of any breed he had ever seen and he has had a chance to see most of the fine things in water-fowl, both West and East, for a decade.

This is a breed that has had very little attention in this country, although in England it is the chief source of revenue, for those who raise ducklings for market, and the rich delicate flavor of the meat has undoubtedly been a great factor in maintaining such results. As layers the breed has a claim to the record, according to those who are considered authorities in England, surpassing not only the Rouen but the Pekin as well, yet the Indian Runner and the later productions in blue

Pekin of this country is an evolution, whereas China and the East generally has not produced anything calculated to maintain size or to actually benefit to any perceptible degree the egg yield or fertility. This is chiefly because in the locality of their supposed origin, it is an industry, where cheap sustenance, rather than taste and rapid growth, have been considered.

The evolution of the Pekin commenced prior to their introduction here, for many, if not most of the original stock only possessed a proportion of Pekin blood, because in England it was used with that of the Aylesbury and crosses were sent to this country. This is evident even today from the wide difference in type between those imported direct from the East in recent years and what are termed Pekins here. This is seen in color, carriage, placement of the legs, horizontal keel, bill color and other minor details.

What is of much greater importance to the future of

and buff were not under consideration, being placed out of the class of those distinctly valued for their edible merit; where size with flavor is of greatest importance.

This is strange in a country where the practical and material is supposed to hold sway, yet it can be explained to some extent by the fact that one breeder of Pekins for market having recently had such reverses through the immense mortality in his yards, that the dead had to be carted away, when advised to adopt different methods merely said that what was good enough for his father and grandfather before him was good enough for him.

This lack of intelligence, this disposition to view with disfavor any opinions or advice from whatever source, cannot be attributed to the general breeder of market ducks, for not only have many avoided the ground tainted through years by duck evacuations, but some have even gone to China and Japan for fresh blood.

The wisdom of the first move is undoubtedly, but the

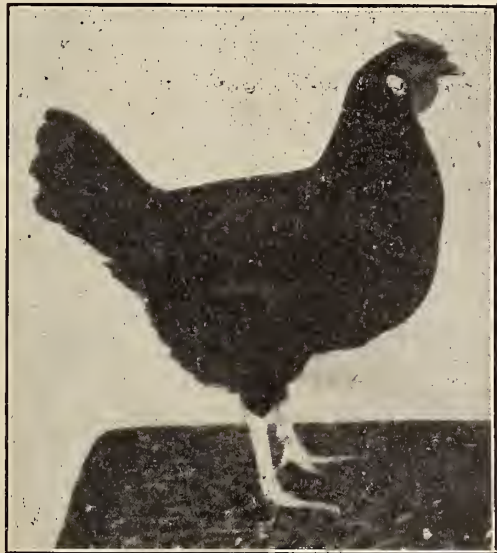

the industry is flavor and shape, giving weight to the breast instead of behind the legs. Marketers have long since found that the leading hotels have discarded Pekins and in order to maintain a trade giving less remuneration, it has been necessary to label the ducklings "guaranteed not fed on fish," besides it is well known that the demand has been greatly impaired by what a salesman tersely referred to, when he said, "they won't sell because they are mostly guts, and haven't duck flavor."

To improve flavor it was unwise to go to the East, where for centuries they have been fed on rice and fish; to get more breast; this was equally wrong, for the American Pekin is certainly an improvement in this regard.

Therefore for any really essential gain would it not have been better to have gone to the Aylesbury, or to be absolutely correct, to have reverted to the original cross that gave America what is termed the Pekin.

Breeders of market ducks may not look with favor on the Aylesbury in its latest show essential, wherein the keel almost touches the ground. This point has been secured by exhibitors, because at one time the Rouen had an advantage in this respect, whilst the Aylesbury had more length, with about an equality in flavor. When keel was emphasized, depth of breast and extra weight was supposed to follow and thus

R. C. Black Minorca. A blue ribbon winner, owned and bred by Ross Swartout, Newport, Ont., Can.

English breeders gained on their rivals from France, and the Aylesbury survived.

In order to reintroduce Aylesbury blood it is not necessary to use the immense show birds, because in breeding yards there are always a good percentage of birds that do not carry so much pouch which gives the deep keeled effect and these can be secured at much more reasonable prices, besides such stock is actually more valuable for such a cross than the show specimens, which breeders of water-fowl for market in America can readily appreciate, if they have not yet given it consideration.

The American standard of perfection rightly calls for such points as depth of keel, horizontal carriage, length, whiteness of plumage and correct color of bill, because these matters are distinctive, making the variety.

Judges therefore need see that the dead white plumage is not mixed with cream or yellow, that the breast and stern line is distinctly horizontal, and that the bill is in color a pale soft pink, that in action there is no inclination to travel like the Runner with head high and breast similarly elevated, that the legs are so placed that this will not come, in their productions, and above all that this placement of the legs is not like that of the Pekin, so that the aft outweighs the fore, or in more pronounced terms such as the marketer uses "the breast and not guts sells the carcass," hence as good housewives educate the seller let the seller instruct the producer, so that the industry may be firmly established on its only safe foundation, that of supply and demand.

BY THE WAY

By H. S. Babcock.

By the way, how much thought did you put into that advertisement? I venture to predict that its business-getting power will be proportioned to the thought expended upon its preparation.

One cannot expect the wheels of business to revolve, unless the motor (advertisement) is charged with electricity (thought). Fanciful, perhaps, but true.

The selling of poultry products—eggs and fowls—as well as their production, is an art.

Many a poultry breeder is an artist in the production, but a bungler in the selling, of fine poultry, because he puts thought into the one and thoughtlessness into the other.

To fly well one needs to use two wings, one of which is producing power and the other selling power. With both in use graceful flight is possible; with only one, flight becomes an ungraceful flop. Fly, don't flop.

Thought makes the man; want of it the idiot. Use your thinker.

Advertisements, charged with thought, are of two kinds—one has the power of attraction, the other of repulsion. Better seek the pole of attraction, if you would make your advertising pay.

In advertising it is permissible to tell the truth, even if the truth be highly complimentary to your stock. If you can't tell the truth, and make it pay, don't advertise till you can.

An advertised lie is more harmful than a spoken lie, because it is addressed to many more people.

In preparing an advertisement, remember that if you emphasize every statement, no statement will have any emphasis.

The schools teach us that there are three degrees of comparison, positive, comparative and superlative, but some advertisers seem to have forgotten the first two degrees and use only the superlative.

If advertise we must, and we must, let us be as honest in our advertisements as we are in our conversation, telling the exact truth and making no statement that is not fully warranted by the facts. Readers then will believe us.

Confidence is the life of a mail order business, and that is what the poultry business is. But confidence can not grow out of the soil that is fertilized by lying and watered by trickery. Concentrated lye is alright as a field fertilizer, but concentrated lie is quite a different thing.

Don't be fooled by such statements as "A sucker is born every minute." Even if it be true, one doesn't always wish to fish for suckers. The sport is dull, and the catch unsatisfying, in comparison with catching trout and salmon. When we fish, let us fish for something worth while.

The sucker-catcher in the poultry business usually doesn't last long. His work is finished in a few years and he has to withdraw with the honest execrations of those whom he has defrauded. The fate of such fishers is not attractive to the man who intends to make poultry breeding a life work.

The aforesaid sucker-catcher uses advertisements as bait, advertisements of the most alluring kind, couched in attractive words, promising many things impossible of fulfillment, carefully guarded against legal entanglements. If the statements were backed up by facts, if they told the truth, they would be examples of how to do it and do it right for all of us to follow. And this he does and continues to do until the real facts leak out, and then the advertisements disappear and the advertiser is out of the game. His victims are also out—not of the game but out of pocket.

Such cheats teach honest breeders several things of value. They teach in the first place the power that there is in advertising. Well thought out advertisements, placed in good mediums, and occupying liberal space, do bring trade. And the honest breeder needs to know this. Advertising does pay. They, also, teach that thought is needed in making a good and drawing advertisement. Frauds have to put much thought into their advertisements, because they do not wish to draw trade to themselves but also wish not to be drawn into the toils of the law. They must escape legal entanglements, if only by the skin of their teeth. With them "a miss is as good as a mile," but the miss must be provided for. The thought needed to provide for this miss also is carried over into the other idea of the advertisement, its drawing power, and as a consequence their advertisements in many respects are admirable.

But such men, in the end, work harm to the poultry industry. They have been with us, even if they are not of us, and we can not escape some of the obliquity which through them is brought upon the industry. They awaken false hopes which are doomed to disappointment; they arouse expectations which can never be fulfilled; and their passing creates more or less of a poultry panic among the people who make the poultry public. Like comets, they come from space unknown, create commotion for a short time, and then disappear into the blankness of the space from which they emerged. While honest breeders are like the sun, shining on from day to day, their light sometimes temporarily obscured by clouds, but behind we know they are still shining. Let us choose rather the sun with its life-giving light than the comet which comes from and returns to nowhere.

In making an examination of my poultry library I came across the following paper sent to me by Mr. Julius G. Mosenthal of Lynmouth, North Devon, England. Mr. Mosenthal was the then Hon. Secretary and Treasurer of the English Indian Game Club, and this standard is written out in his handwriting and is a copy of the first standard ever adopted for the breed. I transmit it as a matter of historic interest in connection with this noble breed of poultry, and for the purpose of comparison with the latest standard adopted for the Cornish fowl as we are now pleased to call it.

Blue seems to be a favorite color with our cousins across the big pond. In this color there appear Andalusians, Orpingtons, Wyandottes and Leghorns, with probably other breeds to be heard from.

* * * *

Talk about the American being given to variegating a breed! The English fancier, in this respect, can hold him a good argument. In Orpingtons he has the buff, black, white, spangled, jubilee, cuckoo and blue varieties; in Wyandottes, the whites, blacks, silver laced, golden laced, Columbian, silver penciled, buff, blue laced, pyles, blues, and partridge.

SOME ADVICE TO BEGINNERS

Pointers on How to Start and How to Invest Limited Funds.

Best Plans to get Ahead Quickly. By J. C. Deaton.

Of all who contemplate raising poultry, we would say by all means raise none but thoroughbred fowls. If the farmers throughout the country realized how much more interesting it is, and how much more may be realized from a flock of thoroughbred fowls, than from the same number of mongrels, they would certainly sell the mongrels at once and invest the amount received in thoroughbred poultry.

There are two ways to get a start. One is to purchase can be made in the fall or early winter, we them. If sufficient outlay can be spared and the purchases can be made in the fall or early winter, we think it advisable to buy stock. If intending to raise fancy fowls, it is best to purchase a trio or pen of the best that can be secured. It is better to buy a trio rightly mated from a reliable breeder, for $25.00, than to buy a dozen birds that are worth only that much.

If one intends to raise poultry for utility purposes, certainly fowls not scoring so high, if good strong specimens, of good laying qualities, are secured, may be depended for as good results as the higher scoring birds. If only a few dollars are to be invested in foundation stock we would suggest purchasing at least three settings of eggs from a reliable breeder, with the request that one sitting of eggs be from a mating not closely related to the other two. The cockerels from the special mating could be used next breeding season with pullets from the other matings.

In buying eggs, one has a chance of getting birds as good as the parent stock, and at a much less expenditure. When selecting stock from the breeding pens, take only the choicest birds. Do not make the mistake, often made by the beginner, of thinking that all the females must be used in the breeding pen, just because the eggs from which they were hatched were produced by a mating of prize winners. Grading the flock by selecting the best, must always be done, to produce the best results. Usually the surplus good cockerels and utility pullets may be sold for sufficient to cover the cost of the eggs.

After the beginner has decided what variety of fowls to take up, he should learn all about the breed, and stick to it. Try to make it a perfect breed. In order to do this, it is necessary to have a copy of the "Standard" of that particular breed, and also to read at least one good poultry journal, and it is to advantage to read several journals.

Also visit as many poultry shows as is practicable. There are always fanciers there who are willing and anxious to show heir fowls, and much may be learned in this way, and you will be able to select your best specimens to exhibit at the next show.

When writing to breeders for prices, be sure to state what you want, that is, whether fancy or only utility stock. Then do not ask for the best stock he has, or as good as any, and expect to get it for just what utility stock is worth.

Our experience is that it pays to raise and advertise only the best. When the writer advertised eggs, two grades and two prices, at least nine times out of ten, the purchaser wanted the higher priced eggs, and the income from those high scoring hens was correspondingly greater. We have learned that it pays to breed only the best.

When purchasing stock, it is well to make sure that the birds have never been seriously sick, and that they are the progeny of strong healthy stock, for certainly no one wants to start in the poultry business with stock that is of weakened constitution and readily susceptible to various diseases. Even after the precaution it is well to quarantine all stock for ten days, and see that no vermin or trace of disease is present before placing the birds in their permanent houses.

IS IT THE STRAIN OR THE BREED

I presume the most frequently asked question of an Editor of a Poultry Paper is which is the best breed.

Now an Editor or any one else can't tell you, I think that all poultrymen if they are honest with themselves and with others will agree with me that there is no best breed. Now don't misunderstand me, for we all know that some hens are better layers and breeders than others, but it is not confined to any one breed. You may ask why is it then that some lay better than others. It is the strain and the way they have been bred.

I maintain that you can develop a laying strain and an exhibition strain better on two lines than by combining the two.

Take for example the breeding of race horses, they don't breed them from a heavy work horse, or breed a heavy work horse from a 2.10 pacer. Think it over.

Personally I prefer the Buff Wyandottes, because, living here in Maine where the thermometer goes down in winter to 10 and 12 below zero and then to 15 and 20 you will hear people say, "Gee" hens can't lay in this kind of weather. But I say they can if you have the right strain and are given proper care. I know of a dozen pullets that were hatched in June and began laying in December, that averaged 28 eggs for the month, and in the spring eight of them were allowed to set and rear their chicks, that flock averaged 180 eggs for the year. "It was the Strain." These pullets were fed a dry mash and about 1 pint of wheat and oats in the morning and all the corn they would eat at night.

Charcoal, grit, oyster shells was before them all the time and some green food once a day.

Now the Buff Wyandottes are very heavy feathered and have a small rose comb and they can stand extreme cold better than any other breed that I know of. This is why I choose the Buff.

To get the most out of your hens that there is in them you must love them and keep in touch with other breeders, and the best way I know of is to read some Poultry Papers and and Poultry Fancier is good enough for me, and remember it is the strain and not the breed.

A Few Hours With Men Who Raise Chickens

By F. D. SUTTON

The Chestnut Hill Poultry Farm under the management of Mr. Charles M. Kerr has enjoyed a very successful season. Their egg trade has been very satisfactory and the percentage of hatches exceptionally good. Mr. Kerr has succeeded in raising a large number of very high grade chicks, many of which will be in the pink of condition for the early shows. There is no question about the quality of Chestnut Hill Barred Rock, their reputation ranks high among the best in the land and any of our friends who want to win the blue in either the fall or the winter shows can make no mistake by giving Mr. Kerr a portion of their patronage. Address Chestnut Hill Poultry Farm, Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, Pa.

The Mammoth Poultry Farm, J. Courtney Punderford, prop., Freeman, N. J., has eclipsed all former records in hatching young chicks this season. Over 5000 chicks are now sporting over Mr. Punderford's poultry farm waiting to enhance the glory of many an exhibitor's winnings during the coming show season. Mr. Punderford writes us that he now has over 500 cockerels and pullets fit to win in the fastest company in the September shows with hundreds of others falling into line. It is hardly necessary for us to comment on the quality of Mr. Punderford's Buff or White Leghorns their record is too widely known throughout the entire country for that, but we take a special pride in calling the attention of our readers to the large number of birds Mr. Punderford has for sale, and to advise all who contemplate purchasing high class stock to attend to the matter at once for quality birds remember will not last long in an off season such as this has been.

Dr. Howard Millor, Spring House, Pa., breeder of the famous Millor strain of S. C. Black Minorcas, the birds that have created such a marked sensation at both Philadelphia, Pa. and Madison Square Garden for years, informs us that he has 700 fine young birds for sale. These youngsters were all bred from his prize winners, and are capable of meeting any competition. Dr. Millor is all right, his birds are all right, and his prices are sure to be right. If you are looking for the best in Minorcas at honorable prices write the Dr. at once. You are sure to receive just and courteous treatment.

Lester Tompkins, "The Red Man" of Concord Mass., is enthusiasm itself over the great bunch of youngsters he has succeeded in raising this season. Mr. Tompkin's birds are even better this year than ever before, if that is possible, and it must be so or Lester Tompkins wouldn't say so. You can safely bank on that. Mr. Tompkins is offering 700 head of his this season's breeding stock at prices that will certainly move them quickly. He also has a large number of young birds ready for September and October shows at special prices if ordered at once. Mr. Tompkins has been one of our most successful breeders of R. I. Reds for years and the victories his birds have won for himself and his customers in many of our largest shows is very commendable indeed. Look up his ad. in this issue of the Fancier and get in touch quickly with him and his birds. You will be glad you did.

they are offering many splendid bargains to all our friends who are in the market for good birds at real bargain prices. Don't forget that any and all of the Fancier's advertisers are on the Square.

Mrs. Wm. Harshbarger of Waveland, Ind., one of our most noted breeders of Indian Runner Ducks, whose article appears on our title page of the August issue entitled "Standard Bred Indian Runner Ducks," has started a regular ad. in our August issue. Mrs. Harshbarger is one of our largest Indian Runner Duck breeders and her word is as good as her bond. Her prices are within the reach of all who want good birds that lay pure white eggs, or those who desire to start by hatching their own ducklings can rest assured that they will get snow white eggs if they send their order to Mrs. Harshbarger or to any of our other advertisers who guarantee pure white I. R. Duck eggs for sale. Look up Mrs. Harshbarger's article in our August issue; it bristles with straight out from the shoulder statements and contains lots of real food for careful thought on the Indian Runner Duck question.

The Twentieth Century Feeding Method as described by Mr. H. Frederick, originator of Frederick's Automatic Poultry Feeder, is brim full of good common sense, and their circular ought to be read by every careful, up-to-date breeder of poultry. Mr. Frederick's Feed Hopper we believe to be one of the most valuable discoveries yet made to lighten the poultry man's labors and at the same time prove a real practical asset to a live, progressive poultry plant. We believe Mr. Frederick has done so and we refer our friends, with no small degree of pride, to Mr. Frederick's ad. which begins in this month's issue of the Fancier. Look it up and write Mr. Frederick for his circular or better still order direct from his ad. He guarantees satisfaction or money refunded. Address Elkins Park, Pa.

The Onlya Farm, Florham Park, N. J., is advertising 600 young birds for sale. All bred from their prize winning White Wyandottes.

The Onlya Farm White Wyandottes have made a very enviable record in many of our largest shows, and to learn that Mr. Staff, the capable manager of the popular plant, has succeeded in raising so many good youngsters from his famous winners will be delightful music in the ears of those who have had a "sort-a-hankering" for some of the Onlya Farm Wyandottes. Well, here is your chance, my friend, that is if you can "Read the signs of the times" and get in an early order for just what you want, for we believe that this season late buyers will be disappointed buyers, especially if they are after quality. Look up the Onlya Farm ad. and tell them who led you to their door, it is a courtesy we will appreciate and it will do you no harm.

Messrs. Minch Bros. (Bridgeton N. J.) Farm Raised Barred and White Rocks, Light Brahmans, Partridge Cochins, and Partridge Wyandottes are better this season than ever before. Their birds won in strong competition at many of the best shows of the East and blood from their pens has "put the winning streak" into many flocks from almost every point of the compass. These gentlemen have extra fine birds. All farm raised and each distinctive breed or variety raised on a separate farm. Vitality, as well as beauty stands out permanently in their birds and we unhesitatingly say that none of our friends need fear but that they will receive full value for every dollar commuted to their care.

Don't forget the Bucks Co. Fair. The Poultry Show will be one of its leading features. Date, September 18-21.

The Sterling Poultry Yards, Walnutport, Pa., has hundreds of high classed barred Rocks for sale. ## COLOR OF INDIAN RUNNER DUCK EGGS.

By J. W. Beeson, A.M. LL.D., Meridian Womans College, Meridian, Miss.:

There has been much said and written about Indian Runner duck eggs, most of those statements are based on "hear say" rather than an investigation of facts; some claim one thing and some another, some say that all pure bred English Indian Runners lay white eggs; some say that no duck that lays a tinted egg is a thoroughbred Indian Runner, some claim that no American strains lay all white eggs. I have made some investigation of the subject lately and I have found that in India, the original Indian Runner, before being imported into England, generally laid a tinted egg. In England these Runners have been bred for seventy-five years and have been crossed at times with native ducks; in course of time the English breeders have developed white egg strains, in as much as white eggs are preferred in the markets, this can be done by selection and line breeding. England gave more attention to color of eggs and to type and to station than to color of feathers, therefore most of their strains lay white eggs, however, some English breeders have recently imported fresh blood from India to improve their stock and have introduced the green eggs. I suppose again; so that some of the finest and purest blooded Indian Runner ducks from England lay green eggs. I suppose that J. W. Walton, Secretary of the Indian Runner duck club of England, winner of nearly all the prizes in Crystal Palace and other famous shows, is considered the best authority and foremost breeder of Runners in the world; he is said to have the world's finest type of Runners. I imported a trio from Walton last winter, the express cost $23.00 on the trio; when they began to lay one of the ducks laid a deep green egg; the type was beautiful and not withstanding its penciled feathers in fawn it won in a show over the American Standard solid fawn on account of its type and station; yet it laid a green egg, though it came from J. W. Walton of England. The one who claims that all pure bred Runners or all English Runners lay white eggs must take "back water" they honestly thought so. I thought so myself and wrote it in a ten cent booklet that I published; but I have gotten out a revised edition and corrected it; I learned better.

I complained to Walton about the green egg duck. I told him I thought that all true Runners laid white eggs and that it was the mongrel that laid tinted eggs. He wrote me as follows: "My old strain always laid white eggs, but I am not aware that I ever boasted about it or made fun of American breeders for having cross breeds. You can get just as many cross breeds laying white eggs as green ones, and I think that you will agree with me that the great majority of American and so-called Indian Runners have been very much crossed with inferior stock." Mr. Walton says further: "The green eggs in my stock all come from native Indian blood and thorough specimens of the finest character, otherwise there would be no green shelled egg layers here." In another letter, Mr. Walton says: "My birds are from several different important strains, including the ancestral root type, the Indian Runner fountain head from which all Indian Runners derive their finest characteristics. I am offering various crosses between pure imported strains and the old Cumberland strain (his original strain imported) many of these birds lay greenish tinted eggs, but they have been inbred for probably half a century or more and the young becoming less fertile and the style and carriage more inferior to former days, an infusion of new blood has greatly revived them and I have white and green tinted eggs from birds that have been crossed with the new blood. Some of the most perfect and truest Indian Runners living lay tinted eggs. That is now established beyond a doubt." This is a quotation from a man who really discovered, preserved and developed the Indian Runners as no other man has done.

The fact is established beyond the shadow of a doubt that the original Indian Runner in its native country, India, laid a green tinted egg; that the old English Cumberland strain was developed from those imported from India seventy-five or eighty years ago and was developed by selection and cross with a white egg strain; and new blood was imported from India to give better type and vigor and vitality and the green egg blood was brought back into the white egg strain. There were other strains in England that never did have the green color of egg bred out. Some of these were imported in to America that lay tinted eggs. Some Americans by selection have made white egg strains of their own. Therefore it is not fair for any person to say that his or her flock or strains are the only pure bred Runners or that the color of the egg will determine the purity of the breed.

I think that inasmuch as there is prejudice against tinted eggs that breeders should work to make white egg strains. And any one can do it in course of time by selection and true breeding or by purchasing from white egg strains; however, in so doing some of our show specimens will be discarded. In fact, I have noticed that the finer the type and carriage the more likely a duck is to lay tinted eggs because they approach nearer the original Runner. Still I think that the color of the egg will be more important in the end than show specimens. The Woman's College Poultry Farm have some flocks that have never been known to lay a tinted egg. They seem to be well established in the color of their eggs. Yet some other flocks, though known as white egg strains, occasionally produce a duck that lays a tinted egg. We do not set tinted eggs, even from our finest show specimens, and select drakes from our white egg strain. In this way the white egg shell can soon be established in any flock. Still occasionally a duck may be produced that will take after a remote ancestor and lay a tinted egg. Of course the egg with the tinted shell is of just as fine flavor and for home consumption is just as desirable. Therefore if we find one to get a tinted egg we eat it. But from some of our flock we never find a tinted egg. We have white egg strains of American Standard and also white egg strains of English Standard.

Madison Square WINNERS

birds, large eggs, 2 greatest strains bred. Our customers in New York, two in Montana, one in Idaho, two in B. C., one in England and many others have written me that my Rose Comb Brown Leghorns excel all others as layers, and lay large eggs. I never had so many prizes reported as this year.

One man writes: "When it comes to Single Comb Browns you are in a class by yourself." I have most wonderful male color. Rose Comb White, first Madison Square, big white eggs, big birds, record of 244 eggs. S. C. White Legs, big white, 236-egg strain. White Wyandottes (Duston's) $25 cup. Barred Rocks (Bradley's) $100 cup. S. C. R. I. Reds (Tomplings) real red. Fine show and breeding stock for sale of all breeds.

W. W. KUIP, Box 33, Pottstown, Pa.

The pure white Runners were never known to lay a tinted egg. They seem to be albinos in eggs as well as feathers. They came true to color in both eggs and feathers, therefore they are much more popular where they have been tried. They are going to be the most popular of all, for eggs, just as the Leghorn is the hen for nearly all the egg farms. We have a large flock of white Runners, yet we could not possibly supply the demand for eggs and stock last season. The eggs and stocks are higher priced and therefore the best to raise because they sell for more.

All pure bred Runners are fine regardless of color of feather or eggs. The Runners are destined to be the greatest egg producer of the future. They have no contagious diseases and are easily and cheaply raised. The Woman's College Poultry Farm has studied all kinds of them and will be glad to give any information to any beginner or to any one wanting to begin, if they send stamp for reply.

Those who are using them say they are all and even more than the company claims for them, and are very enthusiastic in their praise over the results they obtained this season. The roller tray used in this machine is perfection in itself so far as turning the eggs is concerned. For it does actually turn the eggs even better than can be done with the hand, this device saves time, breakage of eggs which so often happens when turning eggs with our hands. Mr. Moore does business on the "money back, if not satisfied" basis. His birds have won at a large number of shows East, West, North and South and his satisfied customers are legion. Any one wishing to secure B. P. Rocks of merit at honest prices can make no mistake by giving Mr. Moore a trial order.

The Meadow Lawn Farms of Burlington, N. J., breeders of S. C. Black Minorcas have a fine bunch of young stock to select winners from for all their patrons. They have A. No. 1 birds at honor prices and will no doubt wind up the season with many a victory and lots of pleased patrons. Their booklet is free, write for it to-day.

The Pearl Trap Nest manufactured by the Caw Law Poultry Farm, 101 W. Baltimore St., Baltimore, Md., is receiving lots of recommendations from the Fancier's friends. It is a real trap-nest and deserves every bit of praise it receives. Write these people for their circular explaining all the good qualities of their trap-nest. We feel sure if you follow our advice in this respect you will soon become one of their pleased customers.

Did you ever try F. P. Cassel & Sons' Chick Manna. If you have not you have missed a lot of comfort and a good many dollars in dead chicks. It is a real "life giver and life saver" for baby chicks for the first ten days—any good grain after that age, when started on Chick Manna, will be O. K. Give this food a trial. You will always be trying it if you do. Address F. P. Cassell & Son, Lansdale, Pa.

The Brookside Poultry Farm, Orrville, O., is making a special sale on their prize winning S. C. W. Leghorns. These people have quality of the highest order and they defy competition on the quality of stock they have for sale. Write them for prices and remember that The Fancier is interested in the success of all its patrons.

Clarence F. Payne, 937 Seneca St., South Bethlehem, Pa., has a fine lot of young and old birds for sale in W. Wyandottes, Light Brahmas and W. P. Rocks. Send for his price list. It is free.

Frank Spahr, Hagerstown, Md., is one of old Maryland's enthusiastic breeders of Blue Andalusians and well he may speak in glowing terms of his favorite breed for he has some of the best birds in the East and will no doubt show many of the boys the WAY to travel in many of our best shows this coming winter. His catalogue is yours for asking.

Young's Portable Houses, Out-Sprouters, Trap-nests, etc., manufactured by the E. C. Young Box Co., Randolph, Mass., whose ad. appears in this issue of The Fancier, are becoming more and more popular every year. How Mr. Young can afford to put out as good houses as he does for the price he asks has been rather a hard problem for the average poultryman to solve. But he does it and does so to the entire satisfaction of all who are fortunate enough to secure them. Mr. Young's business is increasing very rapidly and the Fancier desires to extend its compliments to him on account of the clean business principles he follows in dealing with all his patrons.

Boyd Johnson, Rupert, Pa., breeder of Johnson's Imperial B. P. Rocks, was very fortunate in raising a goodly number of chicks from his finest breeders, and as a result is able to furnish show birds of high class to all his patrons. Write Mr. J. your needs; we feel confident he can please you.

The Promoter strain of White Wyandottes and White Orpingtons, as bred by C. P. Glogger, R. D. No. 1, Glen Shaw, Pa., have proven their ability to win in very fast company and Mr. Glogger will be able to fill orders from any of his customers for fancy quality birds at "square deal" prices. ### THE FUTURE FOR WATER FOWL IN AMERICA.

By Edwin H. Morris

The Water Fowl Club of America, though organized about 20 years ago, did very little good for breeders generally, neglecting many opportunities, until it dwindled to two members, when the writer was called to rehabilitate it, taking the Secretaryship, some five years since.

Without funds, books, records or papers, the project was not encouraging, yet after three years of hard work, combined with the exercise of much tact and diplomacy, and supported by a small coterie of those actually and actively interested; at that period, it had developed to a membership of seventy-four, with many of the States, and some of Canada's Provinces, represented by Vice Presidents, besides something like fifty dollars, in funds, stationery and specials, to the good.

Not only was a fair and equitable influence thus accorded, but the standard circulated by the American Poultry Association being obsolete and incorrect in important points, the work of providing a better, complete, up to date and unsurpassed standard, was undertaken, involving considerable painstaking work. Although committees were named, this work had to be eventually done by the writer, who fortunately could do it, from life, many English and American winners being in his yards.

Not only did this work pass the club members with scarcely a change, but the American Poultry Association's Committee adopted it, giving high praise.

In some cases, where there was a wide divergence of opinion, or lack of maturity, little was indorsed by the club which resulted in individual interference which marred the meritorious work. It was intended to be a step in the right direction, wherein the organization, that could justly claim to represent breeders generally, should have a controlling voice in the adoption of standards of excellence, to which all had to conform. It not only corrected positive essential demands, but was in some breeds more perfect in detail, than many of those of land fowl devotees. The next step will soon have to be taken, when instead of tearing down, without the why and wherefore being clear, the aim should be to build and perfect, but beyond comes a wider classification, for not only does the buff duck claim recognition but much can be said in favor of provision for Indian Runner ducks, of fawn, white and pencilled varieties and some attention is called to geese classes.

It is only justice to water fowl breeders to be allowed such consideration, for are not similar divisions made in many breeds of land fowl.

The question of detail should be worked out by breeders carefully and conscientiously, with selfish interest, always subservient to the welfare of the many for thus only can water-fowl breeders insure their due and secure progress.

It is those of experience—both wide and varied—to whom such duties should be allotted, for above all is there a necessity for the mechanic and not the tinker, in such important matters.

The general desire to secure international accord in relation to all breeds, which the American Poultry Association has taken up, has been under consideration in England this summer, with America represented. This has brought into prominence the fact that the American Club has not maintained the rate of increase, sustained fully the call for equal distribution of influence, whilst the formation of specialty clubs for some of the breeds has been detrimental. All these were carefully guarded against during the writer's official connection with the club, therefore it has been thought highly desirable that the International Water-fowl Club, founded many years ago with American Poultry Association affiliation, will be better able to handle the complex situation.

As the International Club is of American birth, it is confidently expected that with a joining of hands across the seas and by working in accord with the Water-fowl Club of America, something worthy of the times and of the ever increasing interest in water-fowl may be accomplished. One aim of the International is to disseminate the knowledge that the use of much of the waste lowland everywhere may be more profitably used for water than land fowl.

The immediate future prospect should of necessity sustain a strong, properly conducted organization in such efforts yet without a definite policy, officers of experience and knowledge with concerted action, meeting requirements adequately, an opportunity may be missed, the interests will suffer and breeders will wait for another knock from prosperity.

It is unfortunate that no sooner such clubs are placed in an influential position, the craving for office, with the desire to gain some point of vantage, obliterates the general welfare. When such a condition comes those with self-respect cease their interest, which is followed by a flicker, preceding an extinguishing.

It is therefore important to all interested in water-fowl to see that nothing like this occurs, at this important crisis.

Special Meeting of the Waterfowl Club of America.

A special meeting of the Waterford Club of America was held on May 28th 1912, at 11 a. m., at the office of the President, Mr. Louis B. Schram, 60 Hamilton Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

The members present were: Louis B. Schram, Rufus Delafield, Edwin H. Morris, and Mrs. W. P. Masten with other members represented by proxy.

The President, Mr. Schram, presided at the meeting.

After reading the minutes of the annual meeting which were approved it was voted to elect thirty new members.

The Secretary read a number of communications from members and all seemed to show a great deal of interest in the welfare of the club.

Report of the Auditing Committee was accepted.

It was voted that the Waterford Club join the American Poultry Association.

Voted:—That the W. F. Club issue a year book this fall.

Voted:—That the annual meeting of the Waterford Club of America be held at Baltimore Md., on Thursday, 2 p. m., January 2nd, 1913.

Voted:—That the Poultry Fancier be the official organ of the club.

Voted:—That there must be three or more exhibitors competing in a class, for a members to win a special club ribbon.

It was voted that the work of organizing State Branches be left to the Executive Committee.

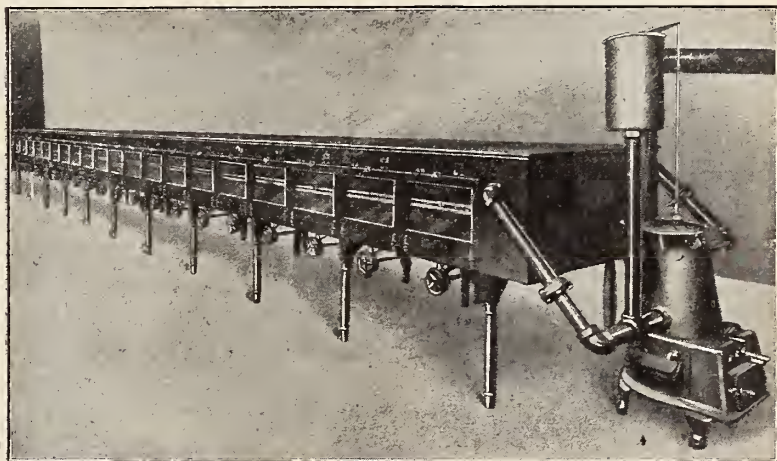

The Executive Committee of the Club is as follows: the Pres., Louis B. Schram, 60 Hamilton Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.; General Vice Pres., A. B. Dalby, Red Bank, N. J.; Sec'y Treas., Mrs. W. P. Masten, Pleasant Valley, N. Y.; Rufus Delafield, So. Plainfield, N. J.; John Kriner, Stettlersville, Pa.; Miss Sara A. Little, Clyde, N. Y.; F. G. Riggs, Baltimore, Md.

Better buy the Newtown "Giant" Incubator Now than next Spring wish you had

In buying an Incubator, isn't it better and safer to get a reliable one and be sure of the results you expect, rather than run the risk of disappointment and loss with uncertain equipment?

Then install the "Newtown," which invariably turns fertile eggs into strong, "livable" chicks—the only ones you have any show whatever of realizing a profit upon. You will be satisfied with the "Newtown's" hatching, because it will be profitable.

The tremendously heavy average chick losses of ordinary incubators is vastly greater than in any other form of life. This proves conclusively that they do not operate in entire harmony with nature—the one reliable guide in producing life. You would likely be disappointed with such machines' hatching next Spring.

6000 Egg Newtown "Giant" Incubator—the owner has ordered double this capacity for next season

stand absolutely alone among hatching machines, large or small, in conforming closely to nature's ways, resulting in their hatching a uniformly high average of strong, active, healthy chicks—chicks that stay alive.

If you compare the "Newtown's" successful record on hundreds of poultry plants, last season alone, with the records of others, you will hesitate putting in any but the "Newtown," whatever the inducement to do so.

"NEWTOWN" Adjustable Hover Brooding System

Individual hover regulation of heat and fresh air is the Key Note to the most successful brooding results.

Different ages of chicks require different brooding temperatures. In the "Newtown" you can have as many broods of different ages and sizes as you have hovers. By regulating the temperature in each hover to suit the chicks in that particular hover you avoid all danger of chilling the younger or overheating the older chicks.

The "Newtown" is positively the only brooding system supplying heat and fresh air direct into each hover regulated to the needs of the chicks in that hover.

You will find this individual hover regulation to both greatly reduce your chick losses and promote more rapid development compared to brooders having but one temperature in all the hovers. Better send at once for our big free incubator catalog L or brooder catalog D, so you may make up your mind to get the "Newtown" now. If you don't, you will wish you had next Spring.

ircular and price-list; it's contents will do you good.

The "Ringlet" Farm Barred Rocks as bred by Lester H. McCue, prop., are making splendid history all along the line. Mr. McCue can supply as good birds in B. P. Rocks as any breeder we know of and at prices that are very attractive indeed. He has superlative quality in both old and young stock and we feel confident he can satisfy the most exacting. We predict a brilliant future for Leslie H. McCue's "Ringlets" if one is to judge the future by the past. Write Mr. McCue and tell him just what you want. Just what you can afford to pay, and rest assured he will do the best by you he can. Tell him the Fancier recommended both him and his birds to you. This may help us and will do you no harm. His address is Greenwood, Pa.

A. E. Martz, Arcadia, Ind., Box F, is sending out great quality in Buff Orpingtons this season. And any of our friends who have been following the history of Mr. Martz's birds knows there are few, if any, better birds in the country than grace his yards. We have never heard one complaint against Mr. Martz, but we have listened to a lot of good things about him. He is the kind of a man the Fancier likes to help for his word is gold of the best grade every time. Write for Mr. Martz's sales list. It is yours for asking.

The Metuchen Poultry Farm, Metuchen, N. J., Wm. A. Smith, prop., is offering an annual half-price sale on a grand lot of his this season's breeders in S. C. Bl. Minorcas, and Buff, White and Black Orpingtons. Such an announcement from as responsible a breeder as we all know Mr. Smith to be, has real drawing power in it, and we will be greatly mistaken if Mr. Smith has very many birds left for sale, so far as his old stock is concerned, after the first of October. Hence if any of our friends need good birds at right prices we would advise them to get busy in order to avoid disappointment. For a No. 1 birds in either old or young stock will go like wild fire as soon as prospective purchasers learn they are for sale.

The Single Comb Reds bred by Harty and Freshley, Willoughby, O., have added a great deal of fame to this popular firm name during the past season. Their chicks this year are a very superior grade and will no doubt more than keep up to the brilliant record made during the past season by their ancestors. If you are in the market for good Reds, you have a rare chance here to secure them, and when you write them tell them the eagle on the Fancier led you to their door.

Don't forget the Big Lancaster County Fair, to be held at Lancaster, Pa. Catalog ready. Write E. M. Garbor, supt., Mt. Joy, Pa., for any information desired. The poultry department offers rich inducements to exhibitors.

A. J. Fell, one of the world's greatest W. Wyandotte breeders, has one of the greatest lots of youngsters for sale of any breeder in this country. There are in the neighborhood of 700 youngsters sporting over Mr. Fell's farm and it is almost a "flip-up" between the whole lot for first place, so true did they breed to standard requirements. Mr. Fell's special sales list is ready for mailing and it is yours for asking. The Fancier considers it an honor to stand back of every transaction of this popular breeder. We only wish there were more Fells engaged in the poultry business, for the industry, as a whole, would command a higher rating from an honor standpoint if such were the case. Send for Mr. Fell's sales list, if you want a helping hand in the hour of need.

Roseland Buff Orpingtons have a world-wide reputation for winning the blue wherever exhibited and we hasten to announce the great sacrifice sale Mr. Switzer is making on many of his best breeders. An announcement of this kind, by the proprietor of Roseland, immediately "sets our face towards old Ohio," but then, what's the use; we have more than we can possibly attend to now so we will urge the other fellow to go in our place and get the real satisfaction that awaits him. Mr. Switzer's birds are among the best Buff Orpingtons in this country and new blood from his yards will surely do any other breeder a world of good. Mr. Switzer's Buffs are big, full breasted fellows with fine symmetry, good head points and splendid surface and under color. Here is a real bargain counter, so to speak, for any breeder who wants good birds at sacrificial prices. Write Mr. Switzer today for his price-list. It is free.

We are always glad to hear from Danny Covert, the Highland B. P. Rock breeder of Willoughby, Ohio, for his letters always ring true and reveal the heart and spirit of a true fancier. Mr. Covert is always on the optimistic side. No thunder storms or lightning flashes bursting through his communications. If there is a dark cloud rolling up above D.

WHITING'S ROUPENE

Positively Cures Roupe, Canker, Diphtheritic Roupe, Colds, Etc.

PROVE IT AT OUR EXPENSE

Mr. Whiting has demonstrated ROUPENE at the Poultry Shows for years, treating successfully the worst cases on which all other remedies had been used without good results, and ROUPENE has Never Failed to Cure a Single Case. There is no argument about it because we know positively that ROUPENE DOES CURE, and leaves no bad after effects.

Prevents Contagion--- Quarantine Unnecessary.

The cost of ROUPENE is 50c a bottle. You can't raise a laying hen under half a dollar, and you know you lose a number every season through Roupe, Colds, Etc., for which ROUPENE is a certain cure.

Don't use the axe, use ROUPENE and save the hen. We Guarantee a Cure or Refund Money. We take all the risk. Write to-day for printed matter, and buy ROUPENE at dealers and drug stores, or order direct. 50c a bottle.

M. Covert's horizon, he seems to have the "nack" of turning it wrong side out until it reveals its silvery lining. I wish it were so with us all, then life would surely be "worth the living." Of course Mr. Covert has had phenomenal success with his Barred Rock beauties, but he has had discouraging hours as well, but he allowed nothing to interfere with the final consummation of his plans and today he is reaping a just reward for the struggles of the past. His youngsters, this season are about all that the most exacting could wish and this fact places Mr. Covert in a better position than ever to aid those who are struggling on toward the light which continues to burst forth in the pathway of those who are determined to reach the goal. Mr. Covert is offering for sale, some of his Philadelphia, Cleveland, Chicago and Buffalo winners and their immediate descendants at greatly reduced prices. All who want the winning kind can surely satisfy their wants at the Highland Farm. Write Mr. Covert your wants; he will quote you honest prices, but be sure to tell him the Fancier helped you to decide in favor of his birds.

Long's Orpingtons; Buff, Black, and White, are still beautifying the pages of poultry history in the grand old State of Indiana. Osceola, is E. M. Long's headquarters and if you have any doubt about the quality of the man or his birds, get in touch with him immediately and you will mighty soon be convinced of the error of your ways so far as Mr. Long and his Orpingtons are concerned, at least. We have read a lot of nice things about this gentleman and his birds and we have a "kind of sort of" special pride in referring our readers to his ad. in the columns of the Fancier. Look it up, it will prove a veritable treasure house if you are in the market for big quality birds at "way down" prices.

Well I should say not! Do you suppose any one in all this little world of ours could forget the Great Allentown Show to be held Sept. 24, 25, 26 and 27, 1912? Well I hardly think so! Come on boys, it's going to be bigger and better than ever, because Theo. W. Wittman is a bigger and better poultry show superintendant than ever before. Climb into the band-wagon, boys, there is room for you all.

Show Secretaries Attention.—The Keipper Cooping Co. is certainly offering splendid inducements to all our poultry associations who are thinking about furnishing their own coops. Write this company for their catalogue, it is free and contains splendid inducements to all associations who want first-class equipment.

Again comes another challenge from Canada by John S. Martin in his great summer sale of his world renowned Regal White Wyandottes. Neither Mr. Martin nor his birds need any introduction to our readers. Suffice it to say that Mr. Martin has over 300 this season's breeders for sale at prices within the reach of all who want the best in Wyandottes. Mr. Martin has prepared a neat sales list in which a description as well as the price of each bird is given. Write for it now while you are in the notion. Your ardor may cool if you wait and another golden opportunity slip beyond your grasp. Mr. Martin's address is Port Dover, Canada.

Don't forget the Hanover Fair, Sept. 17-20, 1912. The poultry catalogue is full of special inducements to exhibitors. Address all communications to Chas. S. Shirk, Mgr. Poultry Dept., Hanover, Pa. You will get a square deal at this show, boys. So hurry in your entries.

W. W. Kulp, one of Pennsylvania's most popular and influential breeders of many varieties and breeds of fowls, has enjoyed a very prosperous season. Eggs from Mr. Kulp's yards have hatched well, not only at the home plant, but also with his many patrons. Mr. Kulp breeds Rocks, White Wyandottes, Rose and Single Comb Brown Leghorns, Rose and Single Comb White Leghorns and Pekin Ducks. No man engaged in the poultry industry, either in this or any other country, stands higher in the estimation of the whole poultry fraternity than W. W. Kulp. The only thing the writer laments is that Mr. Kulp's health is such as to keep him from participating more actively in the affairs of the American Poultry Association, for we know that there is no office, either in the State or National association that, to be associated with his name, would not be honored. The pity is that there are not more of our membership living in the same high moral atmosphere of W. W. Kulp.

Mr. M. R. Jacobus, Box 3 F, Ridgefield, N. J., is the man who heads the rank and file of poultrymen in the U. S., who are boosting the Silver Camperes. Mr. Jacobus is breeding the Camperes in large numbers and has them in their purity. From what we have been able to learn of the Camperes, they are worthy of every word of praise they are re-

THE FOXHURST FARM.

By F. D. Sutton, Managing Editor.

Lime Rock, Conn., U. S. A.

The career of the Foxhurst farm was started a little over eight years ago and the wonderful history it has made for itself during that period of time has been phenomenal to put the facts in the case in a mild form. It is a matter of record that the Foxhurst farm has won more ribbons in the Black Orpington Alley at Madison Square Garden, during the past five years, than any other breeder in this or any other country. The winnings of the Foxhurst farm have been very consistent indeed, for their victories, in both old and young stock, in singles as well as pens, in males as well as females, have been as regular as the seasons of the year follow each other in unwavering succession, which clearly demonstrates the fact that the quality of Foxhurst Farm Orpingtons is the result of careful selection and real scientific mating by this farm's popular and widely known Superintendent, Mr. Chas. Hubbard, who without doubt has built up one of the largest and most popular strains of Black Orpingtons in this or any other country. The growth of the Foxhurst Farm has been very gradual and every step in its development has been judiciously taken until today the quality of Mr. Barnum's birds and the strict integrity of his dealings with all his patrons are as widely and favorably known as any other breeder of fancy poultry on this continent. Up until this season a very limited number of birds, in both Black and White Orpingtons, have been bred at the Foxhurst Farm but practically every one of them were high grade exhibition specimens fit to win in the fastest company. Not only have the Foxhurst Orpingtons been successful at the Garden from year to year when exhibited by the originators but those who have been fortunate enough to secure stock or eggs from Mr. Barnum, have proven to be his strongest competitors. For the past two years in ten of the leading shows of the U. S. including Los Angeles, Cal., Portland, Me., Atlanta, Philadelphia, Boston, Baltimore, Buffalo, Cleveland, Foxhurst Farm birds won many of the leading prizes and in many instances made a clean sweep of every award in the alley.

It was owing to these remarkable victories which the Foxhurst Orpingtons have been making year after year that the owner decided to enlarge his plant, and for the past two years under the personal direction of Mr. Hubbard, utilizing his own ideas, exclusively, the Foxhurst people have erected one of the most unique and practical specialty poultry plants in this country, where they have hatched and reared enough high class exhibition birds in both Black and White Orpingtons to meet the ever growing demand of their customers. This announcement will, no doubt, be gladly received by all who know their value not only as show birds but as breeders, for it is a lamentable fact, a fact that repeats itself year after year that many real exhibition birds are worthless as breeders, but the writer has never heard a complaint of this kind lodged against any birds bred on the Foxhurst Farm.

No artificial methods, either for incubating or brooding, are used on this plant. All hatching and rearing of chicks is done by hens exclusively, which we believe materially aids in the production of the superlative quality of the Foxhurst Farm Orpingtons, especially when one takes in to consideration the wonderful provisions for the rearing of little chicks which maintain on this farm. There are ample accommodations for 100 sitters at one time with separate housing and yards for each hen and brood, which in turn is used as training quarters during the show season. This feature we believe is a decided advantage over any other arrangement of its kind we have ever seen and one of the new ideas which naturally commends itself to all who are interested in down to date poultry equipment. This building is heated with a hot water system of the most approved type which insures an even temperature at all times and a sufficient supply of moisture which is impossible to secure under any other condition. The Foxhurst Farm has also installed a complete outfit for conditioning birds for exhibition purposes, and every one of their customers, who so desire, can have their birds groomed for the show room by a man who has proven himself a real artist in preparing high class specimens for successful competition. There will be no extra charges made for this work, which will be done purely in the interest of those who purchase show birds from the Foxhurst Farm. This plant is carrying over a large number of male birds as well as females which compose the real quality of their last year's breeding and we esteem it a special favor to be able to call the attention of our friends to the fact that if they want exceptional value in cock birds and hens at prices well below those asked by many other well known breeders, they need not hesitate to place their order with the Foxhurst Farm, for they are certainly giving wonderful value for every dollar received from their patrons.

Another feature of this farm which strikes us very favorably is a special plant, complete in itself, for the purpose of caring for old stock throughout the moulting period. All the old birds, from the time the pens are "broken up" in the early summer until their new dress has fully developed, are kept in these specially prepared quarters. These houses are built on the open front plan with plenty of outside shade in all the runways which are 9x15 feet with but one fowl in each apartment. This plan not only affords ample room for exercise but also such protection as we believe should be afforded to birds of merit during this particular period. As a result of this splendid equipment and the large number of birds now on the Foxhurst Farm this firm will be able to supply an almost unlimited number of high class birds in both S. C. Black and White Orpingtons for their patrons fitted already for the show room if so desired. It might be well for prospective purchasers to remember that this large supply of birds was not gleaned in a hap-hazard way from all over the country as is the case many times, but are the product of long years of patient, practical, scientific mating produced right on the Foxhurst Farm, for every bird gracing this plant is the offspring of sires and dams with an enviable show record back of them; with the blood of pure Foxhurst strain coursing through their veins.

The prices Mr. Barnum places on his birds are certainly most reasonable when compared with those of many other noted breeders in this country and almost revolutionary when compared with prices quoted by Orpington breeders from abroad.

In White Orpingtons we are satisfied that the Foxhurst Farm has as great a class of birds as can be found anywhere in America or England. They possess true Orpington type, which all Orpington breeders know is so hard to secure in the White variety. And they are white and stay white. They need no artificial bleaching to establish their right to open competition in the White Alley—These are the two great features which characterize the Foxhurst White Orpingtons from many other strains and as a natural consequence are attracting universal attention from all breeders of this splendid breed of birds. It was a great day for the interests of this wonderful American industry when Mr. Barnum decided to put his shoulder to the wheel and help push it on up to a higher and more dignified level. The success of the Foxhurst Farm has been phenomenal indeed; we know of no one who has a better right to succeed and the Fancier esteems it a favor to record their success.

Belle Brand Crushed Oyster Shells

Make Poultry PAY!

Tests show where these shells have been used—duration of test 22 days—number of eggs, 35; weight of eggs, 1489.6 grammes.

Where Sharp Grits were fed—test 22 days—number of eggs, 6; weight of eggs, 257.6 grammes. This is convincing argument why every poultry house or yard should have them. They'll make hens lay an egg a day, with firm, hard shell—less liable to break in shipment.

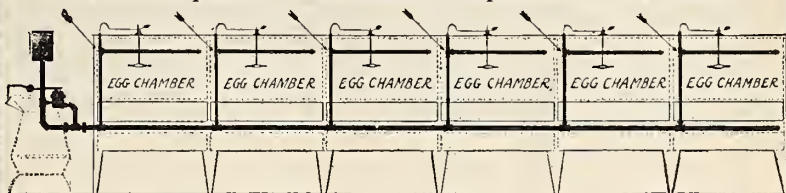

Belle Brand Crushed Oyster Shells supply Carbonate of Lime in natural form and acts as a grit, making them superior to any other poultry food on the market. Write for Free Catalogue to

The Only Large Hot Water Incubator with Automatic Regulation of the Egg Chamber Temperature.

The Arrows point to the Automatic Compartment Valve Control.

Study the Simple Method of Heat Control of the Candee

Each 300-egg compartment has its own heating system and at the entrance of this coil is a simple brass valve that opens or closes in response to the thermostat in the egg chamber. When the valve is closed the supply from the heater passes harmlessly on underneath in the main supply pipes.

Automatic Regulation vs. Moving Trays by Hand

While all small incubators have a thermostat on the egg chamber, the Candee is the only large machine so made. In fact its construction may be likened to a double row of small machines with one hot water heater in place of all the oil lamps

The thermostat which controls the egg chamber temperature in the Candee works 24 hours a day. The egg trays are therefore stationary.

The room temperature or outside weather may change during the night or day, but the automatic regulation on each egg compartment maintains the temperature desired.

ceiving and we believe they are destined to become one of our most popular breeds. Write Mr. Jacobus for his descriptive circular and price list and be in line for the rich harvest the Campere breeders seem to be sure to reap.

We are glad we predicted, some time ago, the future popularity of Partridge Plymouth Rocks as originated by S. A. Nofsizger, of North Manchester, Ind., for our prophecy has been fulfilled even sooner than we predicted, and the whole poultry fraternity owes a debt of gratitude to Mr. Nofsizger, that will tax its every resource to pay. He has not only given to the world one of our best utility birds but one of the real beauty birds of the 20th century. We are glad to learn of Mr. Nofsizger's success this season and take this opportunity to advise any of our readers who are interested in Partridge Rocks to get into touch with Mr. Nofsizger at once if they desire to stand in the victors' ranks during the coming show season. Here is congratulations, Mr. Nofsizger, from the Fancier's staff.

The Underhill Farms, Fort Ann, N. Y., have reasons to feel proud of the record they have made for square dealing in all parts of this grand old land of ours; and after all what consolation or satisfaction is there in doing business unless it is done on the square? I had rather receive such a letter as Mr. Edwards, of Sag Harbor, L. I., wrote you, Mr. Underhill, concerning that cockerel you sold him than to make a hundred sales without satisfying my customers. Life should mean more to us than simply doing business or subscribing to some sort of poultry without regard for the opinions or rights of those with whom we deal. It is somewhat against the grain, I confess, to send a patron a $10.00 bird for the $5.00 he paid us in order to please him, but I believe in the end, that the other $5.00 will return to us a hundredfold. Mr. Underhill, that cockerel you sold to Mr. Edwards will sell him another cockerel some day and probably a hundred cockerels to a hundred of his friends. It is with a large degree of pleasure that we call the attention of our readers to Mr. Underhill and his birds, and trust that any of our friends who contemplate purchasing S. C. W. Leghorns will give him a portion of their business. Satisfaction is guaranteed in every deal.

Mr. V. K. Dayhoff, Box, 14, York, Pa., is fast sweeping into the front ranks of the old Keystone State's White Orpington breeders. His birds have won many coveted prizes in such shows as Hagerstown and Philadelphia. This year Mr. Dayhoff has a grand lot of youngsters for sale that will surely be among the blue ribbon winners in many of our leading shows and all who are interested in A No. 1 White Orpingtons will do well to write him at once for price list and descriptive circulars. His birds will please you and his prices are right.

NOTICE.—This department will be continued throughout the year and everyone of our advertisers will receive special mention in this department at just as early a date as it is possible for us to reach you. Any data you can send in to aid us in our work will be gratefully received.

Don't forget the Great Trenton Show boys. It is sure to be a hummer. For every member's a drummer. And its going to be the cammer in the grand old Jersey State. Dates Dec. 2-7, 1912.

Rouquine, one of the most widely known poultry remedies on the market, is increasing its prestige with the whole poultry fraternity as its splendid merits become more universally known. It is sold on a guarantee to cure basis and all money paid for the remedy will be refunded providing a cure is not effected if directions are carefully followed. Rouquine is manufactured by the W. H. Whiting Co., E. Orange, N. J.

Don't forget the Red Lion Poultry and Pigeon Show to be held at Red Lion, Pa., Nov. 6, 7, 8 and 9, 1912. It is sure to be bigger and better than ever before. Write to A. S. Ziegler, Secretary, Red Lion, Pa., for any further information. It will be given freely. Don't forget to send in a good entry of birds. The boys will give them the best of care.

The Washington Fair Association, Washington, Pa., will hold their Fall fair, Sept. 10-13, 1912, inc. They will have a big new building for their poultry exhibits, will have their own coops and the boys are going to put up one of the biggest class shows in the whole circuit. This splendid association expects to join the A. P. A. in the near future. Judge F. G. Bean has been selected to place the ribbons thus assuring every exhibitor a square deal. Write to Mr. J. R. Eriser, Supt. Poultry Exhibits, Washington, Pa., for entry blanks, etc.

The Foxhurst Farms are right to the front this year and are offering a fine silver cup to any one who wins a first prize in any show with a Foxhurst strain bird or to any one who purchases a bird direct from the Foxhurst Farm this season. This is the most sweeping prize offer we have ever known and we look for Foxhurst birds to be mighty prominent in many of our Fall and Winter shows. Write the Foxhurst Farm, Lime Rock, Conn., for particulars. They have many a pleasant surprise for you.

THE FELLOWS WHO MAKE THE INQUIRIES.

By E. M. Long.

There are at least four different classes of people who answer the advertising of poultry breeders and make inquiries regarding their stock and prices. First, there is the curiosity seeker. He has no intention of buying but wishes to get all the information about some particular breed possible, all the free poultry literature that some breeder sends in response to his inquiry and an idea of the quality of stock and methods of business, etc. He is rarely heard from after the first inquiry and perhaps buys some stock up at market price of a neighbor said to be as good as the best. This is the kind of fellow that is always in evidence at the poultry shows and fairs and is continually endeavoring to impress the people with the fact that he has stock at home that would easily have won, had they been on exhibition. This class of inquirers is rather large, their names should be registered in a book marked "Curiosity Department," or "Unprofitable Inquirers."

Second, is the intending purchaser who wants to buy cheap, regardless of quality. He wants to buy at a price slightly in advance of the actual market value of the birds. He means well, but needs instruction in the art of Poultry Culture. He should have a motto "The best is the cheapest," hung at the foot of his bed where he can contemplate its meaning each morning before beginning the day's work and worries. After two or three purchases, if the "hen fever" remains with him, he will reform and by degrees come to the knowledge of the fact that "one cannot get something for nothing." It is well to reason with such who make inquiries for stock cheap and endeavor to convince him that to start right will save him future time and disappointment. I belonged to that class myself once and know how to sympathize with all who have not yet emerged from it.

Third there comes the class of breeders who are looking for stock of quality at prices within reason. They are of the opinion that it pays the average poultry breeder who depends on his business for a whole or a part of his existence, to pay extraordinary prices for birds. They want full value for their money. They want a square deal and they do not care to invest in $1000 birds and in turn sell the offspring from $1 to $5 each. I do not blame them for it takes considerable space in the poultry Journals to sell two hundred cockerels at $5 each and there is quite an amount of expense and work entailed in rearing that number of birds that will average actually worth $5.00 each. I personally claim a membership in this class of breeders and I am proud to say that this class is the one to whom I make nearly all my sales. I find them a good bunch to do business with as a whole. They

...A FIRE SALE...

OWING to the disasterous fire that we had last month it will be impossible for us to build enough buildings before cold weather to house our thousands of youngsters, therefore a sacrifice must follow. Our loss is your gain, the earlier you buy the less they will cost you. You know we are cranks on eggs and, it matters not how many prizes fowls can win if they do not lay and lay properly for table purposes alone, they have no place on The Underhill Farms and are only fit for the butcher's block. We are furnishing winners as well as layers and every youngster we have and offer comes from prize winners on one side or the other and in many instances both parents are top notchers. Write us just what you want, satisfaction guaranteed, and we would not let you keep stock (even if you wanted) if they were not perfectly satisfactory, for our customers come back and bring more with them. Every sale we make is an advertisement of more benefit to us than a barrel of printer's ink—"the proof of the pudding is the eating." We are ready to serve and if it is not palatable you can pass it right back—if you don't say that we give you more for your money in high grade fowls than you ever bought before in your life. (Remember not as good but better values for less money)—all you have to do is to tell us so and ask for your money—there'll be no quibbling—nor shall we write, asking to substitute. If we don't have just what you want your money will come back by return mail, that's the way The Underhill Farm does business. We don't keep your money for weeks, trying to sell you something you don't want. Our prices on the 1st day of November will necessarily be increased 50 per cent. We shall then have our surplus worked down and the increase in value from feed, care, conditioning, etc., will force us to bigger values. No better stock—but cost of production eifers in. First come first served. A very unusual and extraordinary opportunity. Write right now.

This picture was taken at 8 months old. We have over a thousand youngsters sired by this bird. Can you beat him? We can.

are not too particular. All they want is honest value for the money they send out. If not satisfied, they tell the breeder so in a clearly gentlemanly way and of course invariably difficulties are adjusted to the satisfaction of all parties concerned. Although this class may not represent the largest percentage of inquirers, it does represent the bulk of the buying public.

Fourthly, and lastly, there is the select bunch who have the "dough." They don't miss a few thousand dollars any more than class three would miss a few dollars. They want a hobby, a diversion, something different, so they decide to embark in the poultry business. Sometimes, on account of being able to hire men who understand the business, to manage their plants, they are successful but more often they tire of their "new hobby" and abandon it to chase other phantoms. This class has evidently overlooked my advertisements, as I cannot remember being offered anything like a cool thousand for anything I have ever produced. Maybe its because I lack nerve and have never had the—let us call it—appreciation of my ability to produce high quality, but I have made it a rule and it still holds good that when I have a bird that I consider worth more than $25, it stays right in my yards.

Which class do you belong to, dear reader. There is just one of these that should fit the average poultryman.

Penna. "Grit," the greatest family newspaper published in America today, through it's up-to-date poultry department offers five cups to the Williamsport Association. Mr. Chas. D. Lamade, the wide-awake advertising manager of Grit, is an earnest worker for all things pertaining to the advancement of the Williamsport show. In addition to the cups Mr. Lamade, in an endeavor to increase the interest of the boys and girls in standard bred poultry, offers a prize of $10.00 in gold to the boy or girl making the best sketch in pen and ink of a standard bred fowl, these sketches to be placed on exhibition and judged along with other exhibits during show week. Mr. Lamade while a born newspaperman, is also a fancier, being proprietor of beautiful Bullet Hill Farm, about four miles from Williamsport. It will not be surprising to the writer to find Mr. Lamade breaking into the show game during the coming season.

Williamsport will offer over three times as many cups, and double the amount in cash specials this year. Looks good, don't it?

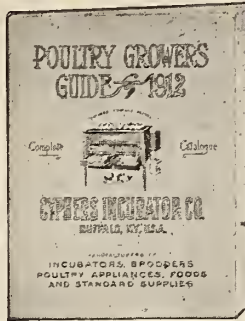

White Leghorn breeders have raised something like fifty dollars to be placed on White Leghorns at Williamsport Nov. 27, 28, 29, 30. All the other fellows are hustling too. That's the Williamsport way.

"THE NEWTOWN GIANT INCUBATOR AND BROODING SYSTEMS."

It is becoming generally understood and acknowledged by poultrymen that the same general business principles and practices used in the formation and conduct of large commercial enterprises in all fields apply also in poultry raising, particularly when carried on on an extensive scale.

Broadly speaking these business principles and practices embody the securing of the maximum of production on the one hand with the minimum of expenses on the other. These practices must be followed to secure the greatest profit attainable in poultry raising, just the same as they must be and are followed in the securing of the greatest profit in all other business industries.

Recognizing clearly that Incubator and Brooder equipment of large capacity is as essential to securing the greatest profit with the least expense in poultry, the "Newtown" management straightway equipped their plant with the most successful equipment of the kind on the market at that time.

Several seasons operation with this make of equipment—both hatching and brooding—proved that it had fallen far short of solving the poultrymen's problems of hatching and raising the largest percentage of "livable" chicks from the fertile eggs supplied.

The "Newtown" management, therefore, unhesitatingly discarded their inefficient, though costly equipment. They then utilized the ideas and knowledge of artificial hatching conditions secured through several seasons' experience and in collaboration with eminent and competent engineers evolved and put upon the market the Newtown "Giant" Incubator and Brooding Equipment.

Both these systems were a complete success and at once assumed a commanding position in the large Hot Water Equipment Industry.

While the "Newtown" Incubator does not differ radically from other giant equipment either in construction or operation, it does, however, embody the principles evolved in artificial hatching in a more scientific and complete degree.

This is particularly true in the ventilating system—bringing the fresh air into the hatching compartment and retaining moisture therein—both of which features are co-equal with heat in carrying on the process of incubation in a natural and normal way.

A right understanding of the principles involved in artificial hatching and a careful investigation of all the artificial methods will quickly disclose to the impartial investigator that the "Newtown" Giant Incubator has more nearly and more satisfactorily solved the problems of ventilation and moisture—the "stumbling block" to success in practically all incubators—than is accomplished in any other make of incubator, large or small.

By supplying under perfect control the proper degree of heat, a constant supply of fresh air (oxygen) together with adequate moisture conditions in the hatching compartment, all joined in a harmonious and proper manner, the "Newtown" is able to turn out a high percentage of strong, healthy chicks—the kind that stay alive.

The success of any incubator—whatever its kind or make—is determined by, and should be judged entirely by, the "quality of" the chicks hatched rather than the "quantity."

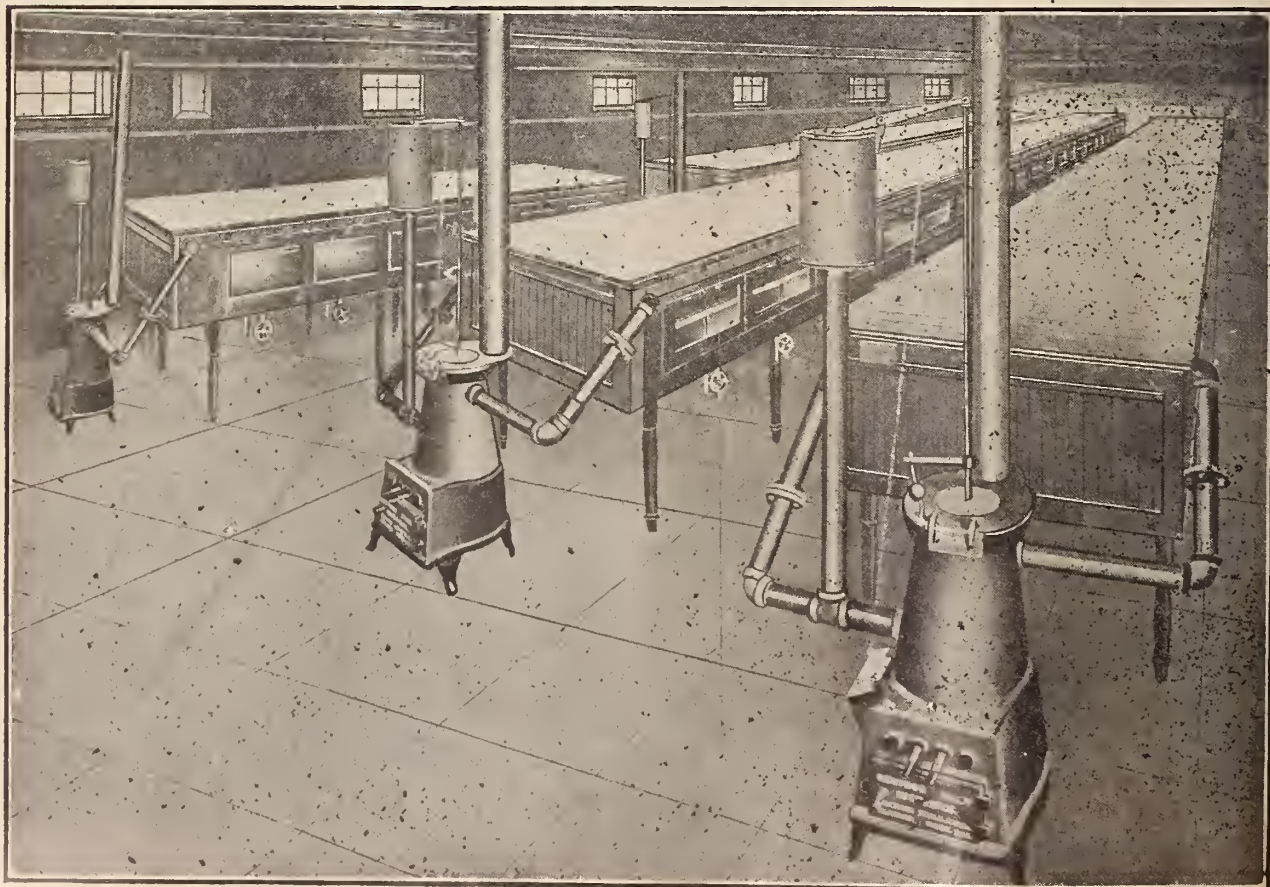

For, as a matter of fact, "livable" chicks are the ones that have the normal, or above, amount of strength and vitality, are the only kind a profit can be realized upon.

Investigation of artificial hatching shows that vitality and strength are the result of proper oxidation of the blood of the embryo chick and this in turn is absolutely dependent upon oxygen supplied by fresh air.

Proper moisture conditions are also vitally essential to hatching chicks as nature intends they should be, otherwise the heat will evaporate an excessive amount of the eggs' moisture, a condition that results in weak, puny chicks, or chicks that don't have enough vitality to even break out of the shell, saying nothing about living.

Any one with experience hatching chicks knows that such chicks are a failure in any poultry business as the majority of them will die with the best of care.

The "Newtown" Adjustable Hover Brooding System has struck the keynote to the successful and economical raising of chicks after they are hatched.

Two large incubator cells at the "Newtown" plant, showing part of their 60,000 Incubating System.

It is a fact that no matter how strong the parent stock or how well hatched the chicks may be, poor brooding will result in disappointment and failure.

This holds true enough in large operations to be almost axiomatic.

In raising a small flock of chicks it is possible to offset inferior brooding methods by more careful personal attention, resulting in reasonably satisfactory returns.

In large operations, however, involving the care of several hundred or several thousand young delicate chicks at the same time, individual personal attention is impossible and wholesale methods must be employed.

The "Newtown" Brooding System is operated with hot water, having the temperature of the entire system regulated automatically on the heater, the same as are all other similar systems.

In addition to this automatic heat control, each hover in the "Newtown" System can be operated separately and distinct from the rest of the system.

In other words, the heat and the air—the two natural elements involved in artificial brooding—can be regulated to the fraction of a degree in each hover, regardless of the requirements of the chicks in any other hover in the house.

The advantage of this individual hover regulation secured in the "Newtown" lies in the perfect adaptability of the heat to the conditions required by different ages and broods.

For instance, day old chicks and half-grown chicks can be kept in adjoining hovers without danger of overheating the older chicks with the high heat needed by the young chicks, and vice versa, chilling the young chicks by the lesser heat required by the older chicks is absolutely avoided.

This individual hover regulation is a distinctive "Newtown" feature and explains the commanding position the "Newtown" Brooding System has attained in the poultry raising industry of the country.

It has secured this commanding position by demonstrating its ability to very materially reduce brooding losses, which losses are today the greatest drawback and the most worrisome condition that poultrymen have to encounter in their poultry raising operations.

In involving equipment that so successfully helps poultrymen to solve their hatching and brooding problems, is it any wonder that the "Newtown" has assumed in two hatching seasons, the commanding position it now occupies in the "Giant" Equipment industry?

The hatching capacity of the "Newtown" plant is 60,000 eggs at one time and which, during the active hatching season, is pushed to its limit supplying day old chicks for shipment and providing young stock for their own extensive plant, as well as many thousands for other poultrymen throughout the country.

This enterprising concern has made shipment of their product, covering incubators, brooders and poultry stock to every State in the Union as well as twenty-three foreign countries.

The coming season promises to be a "winner" for the "Newtown" systems, as the company is being deluged with orders for equipment, a very large proportion of which has been secured from old customers, who are enlarging their operations.

This in itself is the highest commendation that can be made of any equipment, as when a poultryman pays out good money for any machine he is not likely to repeat the operation unless his equipment is making good for him.

We congratulate the "Newtown Producing Company" upon the great and valuable assistance they are rendering the poultry industry of the country through the superior efficiency of their equipment, which in turn is doing its full share towards getting the largest possible profit for the poultryman from his operations, by minimizing his labor, time, expense, etc., and at the same time assuring him the largest possible percentage of strong "livable" chicks being hatched and raised.

Poultrymen who have not attained the success they anticipated or desired, with equipment they are using, or who desire to investigate just what can be attained with the "Newtown" Giant Equipment, will do well to send for the "Newtown" catalogue and get the "Newtown" Proposition.

SECRETS OF SUCCESSFUL POULTRY RAISING

POULTRY

SUCCESS and successful poultry raising are easily within the reach of everyone. Thousands every year take up poultry raising either in a large or small way. Many fail because they try to follow some SYSTEM they have been induced to buy that is not practical or involves so much labor as to be unprofitable for them. With Poultry Success, a reliable guide every month, and either the BRIGGS SYSTEM book or the SMITH SYSTEM book, or both, failure is impossible.

BRIGGS SYSTEM — SMITH SYSTEM

Best, Simplest, Most Practical

There is nothing difficult or complicated about either the BRIGGS SYSTEM or the SMITH SYSTEM. The equipment is also very simple and easy to make. One man can easily care for as many as 2,000 layers and 3,000 chicks. EQUALLY SUCCESSFUL FOR SMALL OR LARGE PLANTS.

FOLLOW BRIGGS OR SMITH

and success is yours. Sick fowls are rarely seen, more eggs are hatched, more chicks are raised to maturity the egg basket is filled, fatter, and the FEED BILL IS CUT WAY DOWN.

LESS MONEY REQUIRED, MORE MONEY MADE. Every branch of poultry keeping is thoroughly covered from start to finish. The priceless secret of many years' experimenting may now be yours. Every poultry raiser can increase his profits greatly by using the BRIGGS or SMITH SYSTEMS. (Briggs system is unequalled for free range, and is most successful also in confined quarters. Smith System is unquestionably without a rival for close quarters as well as confinement.)

FLEMISH GIANTS.

It may surprise many readers of The Poultry Fancier to think there is anything in the rabbit business. It has always been conceded as a fancy for boys or for children to pass their time away in taking care of them for pets, but the class of people who now are in and devoting time and money in the Flemish Giants and Belgian Hares are men of means and culture. The Belgian fancy has enjoyed a steady growth for seventeen years and today is conceded the favorite breed in the rabbit fancy, but when it comes to size the Belgian is not in it, as the Flemish will weigh one-third to one-half more and is being taken up as a fancy and utility at a fast pace. They have been in the United States since 1898, and the call for gilt edge stock can not be supplied by the few leading fanciers of this country.

There are two colors recognized by the National Pet Stock Association: Dark Steel Gray and Solid Black, Dark Steel preferable. The weight averages from 10 lbs up to 15, and in England we hear of specimens going to 18 lbs. each. The same feed and care that is given to Belgians applies to Flemish; they require no more room, can be bred winter and summer, thrive well in close quarters, the meat is delicious and can be sold readily in local markets; the pelts are tough and large, and the day is coming when the Flemish Giant pelt will be used to grace the ladies in wearing muffs, boas, etc., as Mink fur is scarce. There is lots to be said about Flemish Giants and wherever they are shown in the show-room are the center of attraction, on account of their mammoth size.

FALL CARE OF THE MATURED STOCK.

By Austin W. Carpenter.

By the time this article is before my poultry friends the fall season will be upon us. We have a large number of growing chicks to take our attention. They require a great amount of care. We are interested in their growth and in too many cases neglect our matured stock and give to the youngsters all our energy or at least rob the old birds of the share of attention that is their due. Here we make a great mistake for the old birds that go into winter quarters in good condition are the ones that shell out the eggs and produce the fertility that is so very important to every person interested in fancy poultry.

The moulting season is a trying ordeal for the matured stock. As the old plumage loosens and falls out the body of the fowl takes on a very tender condition and until the new plumage is back in place of the old the fowl is very susceptible to the numerous diseases to which poultry is subject.

The quarters of the fowls is perhaps the most important feature requiring attention. Too frequently we crowd the matured stock into unfit quarters in our aim to give the chicks an advantage. In the first place we must see to it that the roosting quarters are dry. Dampness is a great drawback to a healthy moult. Keep the houses dry and especially the quarters where the birds spend the nights. The farmer's wife may be able to give us much good advice on poultry raising but her theory of permitting fowls to roost in the trees and in the open is not a success and especially is it a failure during the moulting season. Plenty of ventilation is essential. However, ventilation does not mean draughts. The open air house is a great advantage for fall use. It provides the pure air and carries away the foul odors that cannot be eliminated with the closed house. Every precaution should be taken to see that the roosts are not in a draught. This is the greatest cause of colds. The cold acquired in moulting season unless immediately checked holds on and in early winter develops into a hearty case of rouse. Lice get in their deadly work in the fall. During the hot weather the eggs are deposited in the filthy places in the poultry building. When the lice develop they find the fowls in moult and make a vigorous attack upon the then weakened condition of their prey. If ever there is a season that requires thoroughness in cleaning the poultry quarters it is in the fall months. The days are hot and filthy conditions are the result unless care is given. Keep the lice off the bodies of the fowls.

The fowls require range during the moulting period. Not because they require exercise at this time more than when in full feather, but because the parks and yards in which they have been confined have become foul and unhealthy. The strength has been taken from the soil and the fowls during their moult should have the opportunity of getting off the old tramping ground onto the fresh fields and earth that is so full of the health giving elements.

The fall rains will surely come. They may be early or they may be late. Don't put off getting ready for them. The rain is cold and the fowls must have protection from it. They will often remain out in the rain when they should be in under shelter. Keep them up rainy days. But see to it that there is plenty of dry, clean litter in the houses to take their attention. Give them their grain rations in this litter on rainy days.

When it comes to feeding for the fall moult care should be used that the rations may be such as are particularly required at such a time. It has been my experience that a varied ration is most productive of good results. A mash every other day is beneficial. I do not believe in feeding this mash too wet. A scalded bran mash fills the bill. Give plenty of grit. Animal matter of some character must be liberally supplied. If the fowls are on range they will secure considerable animal matter but green cut bone or dried beef scrap will greatly assist in producing the new plumage. Sunflower seeds and oil meal will help the appearance of the new plumage and will not injure the general condition of the fowl. I do not believe in using preparations to force a moult. I have had some experience along this line and I am confident that these quick moulting preparations tear down rather than build up the general system. Too much food cannot be given. The system must be maintained in its usual vigor if possible and an extra amount of food is required to produce the material that builds the new plumage.

In conclusion let me throw out a warning in regard to getting the little things caught up for winter. The snow storm will catch us before we are aware. Get the repairs under way. Put in the broken windows. Get busy in caring for the many details that are required in moving into winter quarters. Lets have everything in readiness when the cold wave strikes us. The fellow who make use of the fall months in looking after the many little details I have attempted to outline is the one who has a healthy flock of birds and full egg baskets in December.

MT. HOLLY FAIR SHOW.

The Poultry Show connected with Mt. Holly, N. J., Fair, to be held Oct. 8th to 11th, is attracting marked attention throughout the Eastern and Central field.

Much credit can be given Charles R. Fenton, Superintendent of this department, who has given hard and intelligent work to the same for the past 4 or 5 years until today he has built up a show which is recognized as one of the leaders in this territory.

It is a peculiar fact that each year for the past several years, the entries have doubled over the previous year and not in his career as Superintendent did he have one protest entered.

Their building this year will be remodeled at considerable expense and will also be supplied with Empire coops. Mr. Fenton is to be congratulated on securing the excellent judges which he has: J. Harry Wolseiffer, W. J. Stokes, Annesley M. Anderson, Wm. J. Stanton, Wm. E. Bowman and Geo. Y. Garwood.

Remember the dates, Oct. 8th to 11th. Entries close September 30th. Address all communications to Chas. R. Fenton, Mt. Holly, N. J.

POULTRY BUILDING PLANS.

Now is the season when poultrymen are planning for next year, in order to have their buildings ready for winter and spring use. Many are getting ready to install large incubators and to place brooding systems. They have found it difficult frequently to get plans for their buildings. To meet such a condition, the Candee Incubator and Brooder Company, Eastwood, N. Y., has had complete plans made covering double and single incubator cellars, double and single brooder houses, with different styles of roofs, and with the brooders continuous or with an alley between every second brooder. They are practical and are arranged on the unit plan, so that whatever length desired can be carried out. A bill of material appears with each plan. Anyone interested would do well to write the Candee Company concerning these plans.

A SUCCESSFUL POULTRY RAISING PLANT, POULTRY RAISING EQUIPMENT, AND THE REASONS FOR IT.

We question whether there is throughout the whole country a poultry plant that is more favorably located, better equipped or more ably managed than the Newton Producing Company, of Newtown, Penna.

This beautiful little town is located on the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, just one hour's ride from Philadelphia, a little over two hours' ride from New York and less than an hour from Trenton, the capital city of New Jersey.

This location is right in the heart of one of the most popular and prosperous poultry centers of the entire East and unusually convenient of access to all parts of the country, via two great lines of railroads, namely Pennsylvania and Philadelphia and Reading, and two great express lines, Adams and United States.

The "Newtown" Producing Co.'s Poultry Plant is pre-eminently a commercial plant, in which their success results from breeding "bred to lay" Single Comb White Leghorns—the kind that pay their own way season in and season out and returns a handsome profit besides.

The success of this Company has not been of the spasmodic or sensational kind. On the other hand, it is the result of careful application of sane business principals and sound business practices.

The "Newtown" plant carries about 5,000 Single Comb White Leghorn breeders and the quality of their stock is one of the big surprises awaiting those who have never visited their plant.

They had the wisdom to erect their business structure upon the solid foundation of the intrinsic worth and merit of their product.

The foundation stock of the "Newtown Strain" of White Leghorns was the very best that money could buy—quality being the object to be obtained rather than price. As a consequence, many "Madison Square Garden" winners and their off-spring eventually found a pleasant home at "Newtown's" famous plant.

Every bird so purchased was put through various tests to determine their vitality and egg producing qualities. When a foundation was thus secured for a real distinctive strain of Single Comb White Leghorns—one that would not only reproduce the above superior qualities in their offspring, but still retain their snow-white plumage and other typical Leghorn characteristics—the Company began to build up its stock by judicious and scientific matings, etc.

In this process they used only the best product of each seasons matings until today they carry, as above stated about 5,000 high class breeders.

It is a fact worthy of special note that the "Newtown" plant unquestionably is one of the most sanitary we have ever visited.

Soil conditions on the entire 50 acres of this plant are ideal, the drainage excellent, while all the buildings are of the most modern type and constructed along such scientific lines as to secure perfect sanitation, healthy fowls and the highest egg production.

There are no useless expenditures, no complicated machinery, no "hidden" methods employed. Instead every essential to the health and the necessary conveniences for the operation of the plant are in evidence on every hand.

All the poultry houses, of which there are several one hundred to two hundred feet in length, are of the open-front kind, providing abundance of fresh air and opportunity for sunshine to reach clear to the roosting platforms. No drafts, no dampness, no sickness anywhere.

The best sanitation is secured in the yards and fields through which the birds roam at will, as in the houses, insuring the promotion and maintenance of vitality and health, highly necessary qualities in a successful egg producing strain of birds.

Each of the laying houses is supplied with two yards or runs, one on each side, making it possible to keep green feed before the birds throughout the entire growing season.

These yards are alternately ploughed and sowed with oats or rye. When one crop has attained sufficient growth the birds are allowed to run therein,

One of the Newtown Producing Company's new laying houses, 212 feet long, divided into two sections, each 100 feet long, with feed house between. Accommodates 1400 birds. Two story section has incubator cellar underneath and Gingseng drying house overhead.

while the corresponding runs on the opposite side of the house are in turn ploughed and sowed to grain.

This method of yarding not only insures green feed for the laying stock throughout the whole growing season but good clean surroundings. Almost the entire farm is set out to peach trees of which there are 3500 in a bearing state, insuring an abundance of shade for the birds during the warm weather. These peach trees in turn are highly thrifty and insure handsome returns in addition to the service they render the poultry stock in the way of shade.

The young stock, in turn, when removed from the brooder houses, which have a capacity for several thousand at one time, are taken to large ranges, sowed with clover or grain, where they are allowed to roam all summer, housed in colony houses, holding about 100 each and which are kept in a sanitary condition.

This insures the pullets developing into strong, healthy birds, which, when transferred to the laying houses in the Fall, are ready to give a splendid account of themselves as breeders and layers.

One of the main sources of revenue in this exceptionally successful poultry plant is the hatching and shipping of baby chicks in season. This company, in fact shipped during the hatching season of 1912 over 100,000 day old chicks besides many thousand of hatching eggs. These chicks and eggs went to all parts of the country, many occupying three or four days' journey.

With this tremendous output and long and tedious journeys the chicks had to endure, they had very few dissatisfied patrons, which speaks volumes for the superior quality and vitality of the chicks they hatched.

A resume of the causes leading to the successful position in the poultry industry the Newtown Producing Co. now enjoys, shows it is a combining of favorable location, modern equipment, superior quality of the foundation stock, scientific breeding methods and unceasing attention to business and strict integrity and honesty in the representation of their product.

These are the great essentials to success in the poultry business on any scale—in any section, and the "country-wide" reputation of the Newtown Strain of White Leghorns shows how carefully these principles are recognized and put into successful practice by the management of the Newtown Producing Company.

WILL BE BIGGER AND BETTER THAN EVER.

You have often heard the above remark about poultry shows, and wondered if it was true, but in this case it is true, as the Illinois State Show which will be held in Springfield, Ill., Jan. 6 to 12, will be the one big show of the West. For years this exhibition has been a success, and a winning at this show is worth hundreds of dollars for advertising but remember it takes the very best birds possible to win.

Did you ever see the Armory Hall in which this show is held, there is nothing better in the country; very large, well lighted, and plenty of room to make a good display. Nothing but Empire coops are used.

It will be to your interest, Mr. Exhibitor, to include this show in your list, as the premiums are large, many cups and cash specials will be given besides beautiful ribbons.

Last year one of the greatest features of the show was the displays made by many breeders, this being such a great success we have decided to offer better inducements this year. It will pay you to make a display.

Don't forget our egg and dressed poultry department, as the premiums are very large.

Our premium list will be out the first of November. Don't fail to write for one, and remember this is going to be a 5000 bird show.

For further particulars write to Secretary T. S. McCoy, Springfield, Ill., he will be glad to give you all the information you desire.

MONEY IN RAISING SQUABS.

Many people are discussing the subject today, "Is the squab business profitable?" I for one have had five years experience at it and have been very successful, at the same time have found it very profitable, interesting and a great amount of pleasure connected with it.

Must say it is far more profitable than raising poultry as it is well known that the net profits of the hen are $1.00 per year, while the profits of one pair of squab breeders are $4.25 to $5.00 per year, based of course, on how many pair one keeps in a pen together. Experience has taught me that 20 to 25 pair kept together will yield the owner far more than 50 to 200 pair kept together.

There are many things that are essential to make this business a profitable one. 1st—After good accommodations have been made for the birds, selecting for laying your foundation stock is the most important one. My advice to beginners is to buy young mated birds, consisting of a male and female, not two males or two females, as males will mate and females will do likewise. Buy your birds from a breeder who has been careful and successful. Pay him the price and make him guarantee the birds mated and ready for business. If the business is new, only get a half dozen pair, feel your way, give them the best of attention, and as you get into the business increase your flock from time to time as you see fit.

The variety necessary to make the business a profitable one is next to be considered. I have the cross between Runt, Mundane and Maltese; the breed that will produce squabs dressing 10 to 16 pounds to the dozen. The thing to consider here is this: the market demands the big white-meated squabs, and it is impossible to get them from the Homer and other small varieties. I have had the experience with the small bird. The largest squabs will bring $5.00 to $6.50 per dozen, while the smaller ones only bring from $2 to $4 per dozen, so you will readily see which is the best paying.

They say the larger birds are too big, they smash eggs and youngsters. They will not smash any more than the smaller ones, if nest boxes are large enough and made with a narrow strip in front.

Some breeders claim the runts breed dark meated squabs and are slow, but this is not true with all Runts. I have, I think, as large Runts and Mundanes as money can buy, and have found them profitable if wanted alone for squab breeding.

Give the birds the best of feeds, which should consist of whole corn, kaffir corn, Canada peas, wheat and a little hemp. Feed twice daily what the birds will eat up clean. Give them grit, salt, shells and charcoal. At all times pay lots of attention to these just mentioned as they have a great deal to do with the profitable end of this business. Give them fresh water two or three times daily. Give them tobacco stems for nests, then you will not be bothered with lice.

With what I have mentioned and good common sense you cannot help being successful with your new business. I have, I think, met with much success in this business by following what I have just mentioned, because today I am able to sell my birds for good prices.

STATE FAIR OF TEXAS,

OCT. 12-28, 1912.

When it comes to attendance, there is no fair in the South that can touch the State Fair of Texas that is held at Dallas each year. Over a half million people see the birds on exhibit, and breeders cannot afford to overlook Dallas when making up their show route. The poultry building is especially built for poultry and is completely equipped with Empire exhibition coops. Prizes are the largest on all pens of any fair in the South and the specials are especially attractive, there being $150.00 alone offered as color specials, divided between the White, Black, Buff and Parti-colored varieties. Texas and the Southwest is a great poultry section, crop conditions are fine and the breeders will do well to make Dallas.

The premium list is now ready and can be had by addressing C. P. Van Winkle, Supt., Dallas, Texas.

THE GREAT LEIGHTON FAIR POULTRY SHOW.

The Poultry Show at the Great Leighton Fair, Oct. 1 to 4, will be greater and better than ever. Although the show last year passed all expectations, preparations have been made for a still greater show. Additional coops have been installed and all old ones improved and repainted.

The show is one of the leading attractions of the Fair each year, and showing and winning at Leighton will mean much to an exhibitor as the show is annually visited by many thousands. The prizes offered should allow no one to hesitate sending their best birds.

The birds will all receive the best of treatment in a model building and the most careful handling, same as in former years. No bird has ever been lost or misshipped.

Harvey H. Boyer will again manage the show and personally look after details, which means that every one will have a square deal.

Louis G. Heller, of Bridgeton, N. J., will again hand out the fine ribbons, which means that the best birds will win.

Don't miss this great fair, especially the poultry show. Send your birds where they will have good company, bantams and pigeons included, and take a day or two off and come to see us and our birds.

Send your entries early, as some will surely be returned and if you have not already done so, send at once for premium list to Harvey H. Boyer, mgr., Leighton, Pa. Don't forget the time—the week after Allentown.

THE AMERICAN BUTTERCUP CLUB.

The general interest shown throughout the Union in Buttercups is almost phenomenal, as shown by the fact that since the organization of the American Buttercup Club, I have received over 1200 letters of inquiry concerning them, and neither myself or any other prominent breeder has been able to fill the orders for stock and eggs which have poured in upon us.

The American Buttercup Club now numbers 64 paid up members, and as a club we are a member of the American Poultry Association. A committee consisting of the oldest and best posted Buttercup Breeders in this country are now preparing a Standard which will no doubt be adopted by the A. P. A., and Buttercups will be given a place in the next edition of the American Standard of Perfection.

I regret to be obliged to recall the announcement of a meeting of our members, and competitive exhibition at the N. Y. State Fair in September, for the reason that the managers will not break their rule to give place to none but standard varieties, so we will probably have no meeting previous to our regular annual meeting in January of which notice will be given later.

In the meantime but little can be done but for each of us to get as well fixed as possible to help meet the terrific demand which is sure to come next Spring for stock and eggs.

A Club Catalogue will no doubt be issued in January, giving all members, Standard Typical Illustrations of Birds and Combs, and other matter of vital interest to all breeders of Buttercups. Send for application blank to Isaac F. Tillinghast, Sec-Treas.

The Thirty-seventh Annual Meeting of the American Poultry Association

The 37th annual meeting of the American Poultry Association was held at Nashville, Tenn., Aug. 12th to 16th, in the Hall of the House of Representatives at the State Capitol. The meeting was attended by delegates and representatives from nearly every State. There were at least 200 members of the Association answered to roll call.

Before the convention was called to order, President Hicks gave all the representatives of the different Poultry Associations, Branches and Clubs an opportunity to file their credentials for the Associations which they represented.

Governor Hooper made the address of welcome and it was a very interesting talk, as the Governor is an old time poultryman who devoted considerable of his time raising poultry, long before Incubators and Brooders and the modern appliances had gained much foothold. He stated that he hoped to serve two more years as Governor of the State of Tennessee and then go back to the little farm, somewhere in the mountains of Tennessee, where he could again be free and independent, where he can go to bed when the evening shadows fall and get up in the morning feeling bright and fresh when the old Dominecky Rooster peals forth his jubilant song that day-break is at hand.

President Hicks made the address in response to the Governor. He said in part: "I appreciate this great Governor laying down the busy cares of his office to come here and welcome we chicken raisers. This is a great State and grows practically everything that any other section of the Union does. We have met here and the great welcome gives to those who have never before experienced it, the real old Southern 'Before the War' hospitality, and they can now realize what it means."

The reports from State Branches were very interesting and show marked increase of membership, as well as interest in Poultry in many localities. Arkansas Branch put itself on record as being opposed to the publication of cuts made from paintings of fowls, on the grounds that such a picture is only an ideal and often lead unskilled buyers to believe that they will get more than they will.

The report from California Branch stated that the prospects for a great Poultry Show in connection with the Panama Exposition in 1915 are very good. They are going to put forth a special effort to get the 1915 American Poultry Association to meet at San Francisco. The Pennsylvania Branch reports almost three hundred members and the most successful year's work which it has had. The fact was brought up that Pennsylvania had more local Poultry Associations among its members than any other branch. The Tennessee Branch made wonderful growth. Only a baby organization, it was chartered last Fall with 15 members and now it has a membership of 94. They are working very hard to secure State legislation in the way of an appropriation for the Poultry interests of the State.

The Kentucky Branch reports having secured from the State legislature an annual appropriation of $5,000.00 for the Poultry Department of the State Agricultural College.

The Committee on Show Blanks and Supplies recommended that the A. P. A. issue show blanks for the entry of birds, record books, etc., and charge a profit of not less than 33 1-3 per cent. for same. This brought forth quite a heated discussion, but when it was put to the vote the resolution was carried by a vote of 42 to 24.

U. R. Fishel read the report of the Committee on the Plymouth Rock Breed Standard, setting forth the cost, etc., and the price which it must be sold at.

The cost of publishing the Standard will be 30c per copy in lots of 10,000. The motion then was made to table the report of the Committee on the 1915 Standard.

The Plymouth Rock Breed Standard will cost 65c per copy by wholesale and will retail at $1.00 per copy.

The committee on Editing and Publishing the second edition of the 1910 Standard, recommended that an edition of 25,000 be edited.

Reese V. Hicks of the Committee on the 1915 Standard asked that a meeting of the committee be appointed in order that work on the revised standard may begin at once. The matter of the Plymouth Breed Standard was taken up at this point and the motion made, authorizing the committee to issue the Breed Standard with the 1915 Standard of perfection and incorporate all of the charges embodied in the latter book. The motion was carried and the work on the Plymouth Standard will begin immediately.

The report made by the elective board recommended that the price of the American Standard of Perfection be raised to $2.00 for a copy of the cloth edition, and $2.50 for the leather. The wholesale price was fixed at $1.30 for the cloth bound and $1.75 for the leather bound.

This motion was, passed by the Association. This means that the future price of the American Standard of perfection is now $2.00 instead of $1.50, so all the Poultrymen who purchased the Standard prior to the Nashville convention, can consider that they have gotten a real bargain.

A committee of three was appointed by the President to draw up resolutions on the death of members during the past year. President Hicks appointed the following: D. E. Richards, U. R. Fishel, G. M. Curtis.

The proposed new show rules were adopted with the exceptions of Rule 17, which could not have been passed on account of it being class legislation. The rule as it read was defeated.

The Constitution was so amended as to allow the election commissioner to be appointed on a salary of $200.00 per year and all office and traveling expenses. Secretary Campbell's salary was raised from $1500.00 per year to $2000.00 per year.

An important amendment which passed and which affects the Poultry Industry in general, was as follows: The Elective Board may annually elect an organizer for the promotion and development of Poultry Instruction in public schools, colleges and other educational institutions by means of the text book, clubs or Poultry Shows, etc.

He shall work under the direction of the President, Secretary and Chairman of the Lecture Bureau and the amount of his compensation and expenses shall be fixed by the elective board at the time of the election. This is practically a synopsis of the important matters transacted at the 37th annual convention.

It might be well to state that the hospitality shown by the citizens of Nashville, headed by that untiring worker, John Murkin, that the visiting Poultrymen were shown and given a royal good time and nothing was left undone for their comfort or entertainment, and all agreed that from this point of view it was one of the most enjoyable conventions that has yet been held.

It might be well to add also that Atlantic City and Detroit made prompt efforts to get the next annual convention at their cities. It looks as if Atlantic City had the best end of the deal and the New Jersey Branch certainly worked hard to land the next convention for Atlantic City.

The charges preferred by Charles

W. Tillford, of Amenia, N. Y., against E. B. Thompson, of Amenia, N. Y., and Charles H. Welles, of Stratford, Conn., were given a thorough investigation by the full Executive Board and the charges were found to be false and unfounded. They were therefore promptly dismissed by a unanimous vote of the Board.

The charges preferred against Charles W. Tillford by E. B. Thompson were also heard by the Board with the result that Tillford was expelled from the American Poultry Association by a unanimous vote.

The prompt and effective manner in which the Executive Board handled this matter was highly commended by all members and will serve as a severe lesson for any irresponsible or vicious person bringing false and unfounded charges against old and reliable breeders against whom there has never been a breath of slander or suspicion.

More than 60 per cent. of our old advertisers increased their space in this issue. There is a reason. And you know what it is.

Rule 17 still remains the liveliest issue the American Poultry Association has to solve. Legislation along this line must and shall come.

The race for the next meeting will be between Atlantic City and Detroit. It looks as if Atlantic City has the best end of the argument.

Was there or was there not a quorum at the Pennsylvania Branch meeting at Scranton. This is an important question. See Editorial page.

Some Journal's had three and four of their staff at Nashville. Why? And it was a caution how some did spend Uncle Sam's best in entertaining.

The prospects for the stock selling season look good for those men who have stock for sale. A good stock trade usually follows in the wake of a poor egg trade.

Geo. O. Brown, Ex-President of the A. P. A., attended the Nashville meeting. Geo. O. is not as young as he used to be, but just as active and more interested than ever.

We are now prepared to do all kinds of job printing at reasonable live and let live prices, and workmanship of Poultry Fancier quality. See our add. in this issue.

Will Williamsport have that banquet? Don't forget to read Huston's Department of Penna. Chatter. Jimmy is gathering in all the news and it is getting more interesting every month.

There were six members present at Nashville from Pennsylvania, four of whom were connected with Poultry Journals. Evidence that the rank and file cannot stand the expense of costly conventions.

What a grand convention there would have been at Nashville, if the members of the A. P. A., the men who raise chickens, would have turned out as well as the men connected with Poultry Journals. There was a reason.

Denver had it 1911, Nashville 1912 and Atlantic City should have it in 1913. There are no skeeters at Atlantic City neither are there any flies on the N. J. Branch. Just give them the opportunity and they will do the rest.

W. Theo. Wittman has fully recovered from his serious illness and is now working hard shaping things up for the big show. Mr. Wittman was taken seriously ill at Nashville and was unable to attend the meetings of the convention.

Louis Lee Haggin, Lexington, Ky., attended the Nashville meeting. Louie had to leave early as he indicated that "Dem Colored Folks" felt very proud of the utility merits of the White Orpingtons and of their huge size. They are roosting very low.

The policy of the Fancier is built on a concrete foundation. We are opposed to editors or men connected with Journals judging and at the same time soliciting business. We will continue the fight to correct this one great evil, in fact the real campaign is just beginning.

Dickey Oke and Willie Minnick will be star attractions at Ye Old Hagerstown Fair. It is rumored that much correspondence is passing between these two veterans of the Duster as to what they will do in that old town. All rumors that have been going the rounds that they have joined the Bully Coasters are unfounded.

It looks as if there would be a lively race for President of the A. P. A. Well there is plenty of good Presidential timber among the men who raise chickens and the time isn't far distant when the rank and file of the American Poultry Association will tell the Journal men to take a back seat and sit down and let the men who raise chickens run their affairs. We believe it should be this way.

Attention show secretaries! Advertise your show in the Fancier, the Journal that reaches over 10,000 Poultrymen in the State of Pennsylvania alone. The Journal that represents the rank and file of the Industry. This is the month of the big fairs in Pennsylvania and it looks as if there would be some records broken. Competition will be keener than ever before. Wittman, of Allentown, says: "Never had so many inquiries for premium lists." Shirk, of Hanover, will be puzzled how to handle the entries. Dr. Garber, of Lancaster, has issued a premium list that will make everybody sit up and take notice. Then there is Trenton, Mt. Holly, Lehigh, etc., and they are some shows, too. Hagerstown and Brocktown follow in October.

IN DEFENCE OF RULE 17.

Rule 17 was defeated at Nashville as it was the general expression that it was too far-reaching and unconstitutional. However the delegates present from nearly all parts of the country admitted that legislation along the lines of Rule 17 was needed and the chair could not permit an amendment as ninety days' notice must be given the members. We wish to advise our readers that this amendment will be offered at the next annual meeting and that we are more convinced than ever that legislation that will divorce judging and soliciting advertising at the same show is needed and will come. It can't help but come and in fact an amendment along this line, would it have been possible to have had the same brought before the convention, would have passed. The stand taken by Poultry Fancier to Divorce soliciting advertising and judging is not over. In fact it has just begun and judging by what the different delegates had to say on the subject we are convinced that the amendment which will be offered at the next annual meeting will be passed. Legislation along this line can not help but come and we are going to try very hard to bring it about. As I indicated in our August issue I would leave nothing undone to have Rule 17 passed. I did my very best and will keep everlastingly at it until the American Poultry Association shall grant such legislation as will prevent judges from soliciting advertising at the shows that they judge at.

F. W. DeLANCEY AT NASHVILLE, TENN., IN REFERENCE TO RULE 17.

I am in favor of Rule 17.

It is a good thing that all men do not think alike. If we did, National Conventions of any character would soon become a matter of history, and we would soon be robbed of the good which can be accomplished by meeting and exchanging the views of the different men assembled here from almost every State in the Union, with one thought uppermost in his mind, and that thought is the advancement of this great POULTRY BUSINESS. I have noticed oftentimes that some men try to enact legislation and raise cane before the meeting of an annual convention and then come to the meeting, sit down in their seats, say nothing, afraid to express their honest convictions and then go home and say the whole thing is run by a click or combine. That kind of a man is a detriment to the interests of any organization, and I wish to state that I am here to express my views freely and frankly on Rule 17, and I know that the A. P. A. is desirous of having all its members express their views in the same manner.

Now as to Rule 17—I am convinced of three things:—

1st. I am convinced that Rule 17, in the absence of anything better, is right and should be adopted.

2nd. I am convinced that Rule 17 as it reads, will be defeated at this meeting.

3rd. I am convinced that almost every man and woman here, who will vote against Rule 17, will admit that we need and should have such legislation as will prevent any editor-judge, or a man drawing salary from any publication soliciting advertising at the show which he judges.

Gentlemen, there is only one way to look at this proposition, and its consideration, as well as the passage of this rule, is not to singe out specific instances, or where some have possibly left the narrow path of—shall I say honesty? I hate to do it. Were we to consider this rule along these lines, it would cast a stigma on the entire judging fraternity and the newspaper fraternity as well, and that would forever leave a scar on the fair name of the POULTRY INDUSTRY, and the AMERICAN POULTRY ASSOCIATION, and at the same time we might be stamping the iron heel on some men who only need to take one step to get back off the path of suspicion, and rather than stamp the iron heel on them, if they be guilty, let us enact such legislation as will divorce soliciting advertising by any licensed judge of the American Poultry Association, or any judge, or man, or woman, soliciting advertising for any publication at any of the shows held under the rules of the A. P. A.

Now, Gentlemen, we should consider this rule from one standpoint only, and that is—IS IT, OR IS IT NOT, beneficial to the interests of the POULTRY INDUSTRY and the AMERICAN POULTRY ASSOCIATION? THIS IS THE POINT AT ISSUE. We don't want the public to think as they now do—that the whole poultry business is a farce, and rotten to the core, but we want to send broadcast throughout this broad land the fact that the AMERICAN POULTRY ASSOCIATION IS ABOVE REPROACH AND SUSPICION AND STANDS FOR ALL THAT IS GOOD AND FAIR, and that is the impression, gentlemen, that we want to go out, and just as soon as that impression goes out, you will find tens of thousands of poultrymen throughout the land rapping at our doors for admission, and instead of our Branch Presidents and Officers working hard to get 30 or 40 members a year out of a State where there are five or six thousand poultrymen, you will find they will more than treble their members.

Another thing, gentlemen, we don't want the small advertiser, or in fact the non-advertiser to think as he now does that he has no more chance of winning the first prize in competition with a large advertiser under a soliciting judge than what a snowball would have in a hot frying-pan. Nevertheless this impression prevails, and that is the impression that we want to fight down. I do not think that anyone here will deny this fact.

Now gentlemen of the Central West, Gentlemen of the West and South, why is it that deep down in your hearts you know that you are afraid to show at some of the shows? Is it because you have inferior stock? No. Is it because you think we have dishonest officers? No. It is because you are afraid to have your birds judged by the soliciting-editor whom you think has his large advertisers' interests to look after, and so long as you permit this, you can't blame anyone thinking as these men do, as long as you see the soliciting editor-judge with his judging card and stick in one hand, and a bunch of advertising contracts and a journal in his pocket.

Now, I am not saying that this man is crooked, but I do say it looks mighty suspicious, and you can't blame them for thinking so.

Now, gentleman, one more illustration. I asked a certain prominent breeder from the Central West here whether he thought he could win if he had the four best birds of his variety in America. He said "No." I said "17." Now, what I want to know is why the suspicion prevails everywhere along matters of this line? I am sure that if this matter was left to a mail vote of the members of the A. P. A. it would pass by a 3 to 1 majority, even though it is more severe and far reaching than I would like to see it, but it is the best we have got, and it was framed by the wisest men we have got in the Association—men whom we little thought would joke with the A. P. A.

Now, we have journal editors here and managers employing soliciting editors, etc., and it is their privilege to talk on this subject as freely as what I am, and if they honestly believe that Rule 17 should be defeated, all well and good.

But gentlemen, let us hope that they will not let the almighty dollar and the advertising contract stand between them and honest convictions, and not depend on the editor's judging engagements and the business he solicits at the shows to pay his salary. If this be done, then may the Lord hasten the day when the American Poultry Association shall be run by the men who actually raise and exhibit chickens, and be delivered from the hands of all newspaper men.

May we enact such legislation at Nashville as will restore confidence and cause the impression to go broadcast that the American Poultry Association stands even above the taint of suspicion.

Gentlemen, let us enact such legislation here at Nashville that will go thundering down the ages as the place where old things passed away, and better things were done.

You may as well do it here, for take it from me, you can't stop the tide of public sentiment, and if you don't act and act at once, there will soon be a tidal wave of depression in the poultry business that you will all be staggered and wonder what has happened.

Let us pass Rule 17 and place the POULTRY INDUSTRY on one of the pillars made of concrete. Gentlemen, let us accomplish this work, even if we have to tear the old house down and start over again.

Note.—This may not be word for word as it was said before the convention, but in substance it is the same.

THERE IS A REASON.

We want every one of our readers who are thinking of advertising this season to take our August issue and then take this September issue and just see how many have doubled and trebled their space. In fact a number of them doubled it several times. Advertising costs money and it stands to reason that if they didn't get results, they would not have done this. We certainly have every reason to feel proud of results brought our advertisers and with the great circulation of the Fancier, we feel confident that our advertisers are going to enjoy a very prosperous season. The stock selling trade is at hand and it is up to our readers to prove without a doubt that Poultry Fancier stands without a peer when it comes to bringing results.

The past egg trade has been one of the dullest that the Fancy Poultry Industry has ever experienced, caused by the unusual winter weather conditions prevailing throughout the entire country at a time when the egg season should have been at its height, also the unsettled labor conditions last spring was a serious setback. Poor fertility caused by the severe winter is also advanced as another reason, but judging from past experience we are safe in saying that one of the very best stock trades always follows in the wake of a poor egg trade.

It is up to our readers who intend to advertise, to get busy and get their advertisement in, as the stock selling season is at hand and no time whatever intervenes between the stock selling season and the egg selling season. We therefore urge our friends and patrons who have surplus stock to get their advertisement in the October issue.

IN OUR NEW HOME.

This issue of Poultry Fancier comes to you from our new home and is the product of our new equipment. We cannot help but feel proud of the progress made by Poultry Fancier. January, 1912, was the first issue under the present management. Prior to our taking over Poultry Fancier it was a very small sheet, with very few pages and with little business and with comparatively small circulation. However, it was an old established publication with a prestige extending to every State in the Union and the provinces of Canada and all it needed was a little energy to make it good.

True enough, we worked hard and worked long and we had a limited amount of means at our disposal. We undertook to produce the highest class Journal in the country. The Fancier paid it's own way and has become really one of the largest Poultry Publications in the land. So great was the demand for Poultry Fancier that we were practically unable to cope with the situation. 1202 new subscriptions were received in one day, July 17th, at our office. Upwards of 2,000 new subscribers who desired the August issue had to be held over until our September issue.

We are now pleased to state that we have our own plant and equipment and will be able to meet all the demands of the present and the future and will keep right on working to make Poultry Fancier even larger and better.

In our August issue we stated that it was necessary to incorporate to get in sufficient outside capital to enable us to handle our equipment and get it in operation before the busy season started. This we have been able to do and we have still several thousand shares of Poultry Fancier Publishing Co.'s stock for sale at the par value of $1.00 per share.

It is our desire that the entire issue be taken by our advertisers and subscribers, the ones who have made it possible for us to accomplish what has been done. Remember, you are purchasing stock in an established business, in a publication that is doing business in almost every State and territory in the Union and the provinces of Canada and one that is read throughout civilization.

It is a gilt edge investment and will bear at least a 6 per cent. dividend.

We invite every one of our friends and patrons to look at our stock selling advertisement elsewhere in this issue.

WAS SERIOUSLY ILL AT NASHVILLE.

W. Theo. Wittman, President of the Pennsylvania Branch of the American Poultry Association and a member of the executive committee was very seriously ill during the convention and was unable to attend but one of the sessions. W. Theo. Wittman was greatly missed on the floor of the convention and especially when the amendments were acted upon and W. Theo. Wittman was looked upon as one of the strongest advocates of Rule 17.

Mr. Wittman left on Thursday morning of the convention, stood the trip very well and is now recovered and is working might and main shaping things up for the big Allentown show of which he is the Superintendent.

CONCERNING CHANGE OF COPY.

We believe that every one of our advertisers and subscribers appreciate the Poultry Fancier coming out on time and in order to get Poultry Fancier out on time, it is absolutely necessary that all changes of copy shall reach our office not later than the 10th of the month preceding the issue, otherwise change of copy cannot be made until the following number. We trust that every one of our advertisers will bear this point in view and let us have your co-operation along this line, so that Poultry Fancier will get out on time and that you will have your advertisement before the people during the early part of the month as well as the latter.

You must also appreciate the fact that all of our subscribers look for the Fancier coming during the early part of the month and under no consideration will any delay be made in getting out the issue, hence it is up to all of our advertisers to get their change of copy in on or before the 10th.

New business can be handled as late as the 25th.

WAS THERE A QUORUM?

W. S. Schlieter, who is connected with the Poultry Item and who attended the Pennsylvania Branch meeting at Scranton, went on record at Nashville, and stated that the Pennsylvania Branch had no quorum when W. Theo. Wittman's stand on Rule 17 was unanimously indorsed.

When Mr. Schlieter went on record at Nashville, W. Theo. Wittman was seriously ill and confined to his bed and was not in a position to make any reply to this statement.

When informed that Mr. Schlieter made this statement, he was very much surprised. A letter from W. Theo. Wittman reads as follows:

"I am glad you repudiated the Poultry Item's editorial statement. Same is entirely incorrect and misleading, as 10 is the quorum number and there was no trouble about same at the opening or the afternoon session.

(Signed) "W. Theo. Wittman."

VERY SENSITIVE.

In the April number of the Poultry and Farm Review appeared an editorial entitled, "Cornman, Editor," which in a sense was intended as the glad-hand to Mr. Cornman as editor-in-chief of the Item. We also mentioned in this connection that Frank DeLancey was the one who deserved credit for making that journal what it is today. It is not our desire, nor was it our intention, to throw cold water on the other assistants who cooperated in the publication of the Item when we wrote the editorial, but we recognize the fact that the editor-advertising manager is the captain of the ship insofar as a poultry publication is concerned. It is his fertile brain and his ability to secure new business and retain the old, that makes a paper a success. And it was with this view in mind that prompted our remarks, as we can recall the days, not so long ago, when the Item was only 8 or 12 pages. It was after DeLancey's connection with it that the "deck-hands" and "stockers" commenced to realize that a "real live wire" was at the helm. Of course the Item may have been a success irrespective of DeLancey's services, but the evidence is all in his favor from our view point.

We do not want to be understood as championing DeLancey's fight with the Item, as he is well able to take care for himself, nor do we want to be misunderstood by Mr. F. Bliss Carpenter, associate editor of the Item, who forwarded us a letter, in which he says he has a personal regard for DeLancey, but reading between the lines one can readily arrive at the conclusion that Carpenter's sentiments as expressed in his letter are not what he wants to convey, as he gives an off-hand slap at the former editor of the Item in several places. We have no concern in the matter, only wishing Cornman and DeLancey well, as our editorial stated.

Editor's Note.—This editorial needs no comment, it speaks for itself, especially the last paragraph.

Foxhurst Farm of Lime Rock, Conn., will give to every winner of a first prize, in any show in America, a Silver Cup, provided the bird winning the Blue Ribbon is of Foxhurst Farm strain. A cup goes with every first prize bird furnished by us this year. Yours very truly, Foxhurst Farm.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

It is very important that every one of our subscribers in writing to our advertisers mentions in the first letter of inquiry that he saw their advt. in Poultry Fancier. If this is done we will guarantee our subscribers' against loss by fraudulent advertisers. Poultry Fancier Co. feels proud of it's advertisers, for we know that we have the very cream of the business, advertisers whose names stand for the square deal. However, no matter how careful we are, once in a while, a crook will slip in, but he doesn't tarry long in Poultry Fancier and to keep on the safe side, just mention the fact that you saw his advt. in Fancier. It will do you no harm and it will do us a lot of good and at the same time protect you.

Central Pennsylvania Chicken Chatter

Any News, Notes or Items of Interest Pertaining to Poultrydom in Central Pennsylvania. Will Find a Place in this Department. Address all Communications to J. T. Huston, Williamsport, Pa.

Knowing that you are the gentleman who is responsible for the excellent way that Central Penna. show news is being so well cared for in the Fancier and being asked to let you know how Bloomsburg is coming along I am writing you.

In the first place we are very glad that we incorporated last year. It will give us a better show and has added many more very good men to our list of stockholders. This naturally will help to bring about a larger and better show than we have ever had. We are determined that the next show, which is to be held during the week of Dec. 3-7, shall be head and shoulders above any that has ever been held in this section.

We are not going to have a cata-ter than having so many on one or two of the breeds and none to speak of on the others.

Having two express offices, the Adams and the U. S., and both of the agents being hustlers, we can guarantee quick and sure deliveries. Last year the show closed at 10 o'clock Saturday night. The birds were rested over Sunday and by noon on Monday every bird was on its way home. This, we are sure, will be the same this year and all birds will not only arrive safely but promptly. The fact that we are centrally located and having so many good railroads helps to add to this matter also.

Everybody, even the boys, has become a BOOSTER for Bloomsburg, so the Columbia County Poultry Asso-

If I were to ask to give any advice it would be as follows: First, Get your best birds in shape for the Bloomsburg show; Second, After you get them in shape, send them.

By taking this advice, you will receive the best kind of advertisement because any one who has birds good enough to compete at Bloomsburg will be sure of plenty of business during the next year.

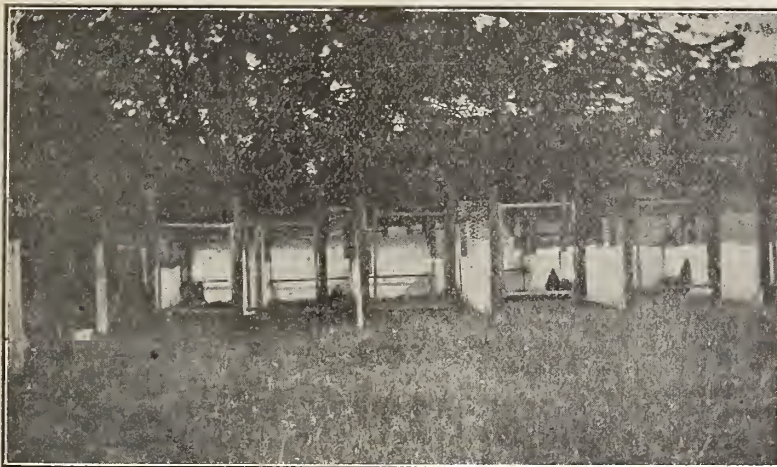

Yours for Bloomsburg, S. J. Johnston, Sec.

Twelve reasons why you should show at Bloomsburg this season:

1. Every officer and director is a chicken fancier and therefore knows what makes a show.
2. Every officer and director has made a success of his own business, hence will of the show.
3. No catalogue will be printed or given out until the birds are judged, therefore the best bird wins.
4. Bloomsburg is the center of one of the largest poultry sections of eastern United States.
5. Every one gets the full premium—no discounts.
6. Every premium will be received by the one who wins it, the same week of the show—no waits at Bloom.
7. They have a fine list of specials on every class.
8. Because the Bloomsburg boys always help the other shows to have plenty of birds at their annual show—no matter how far away.
9. Because the judges are "on the square" and all will get "a square deal."
10. Because to win at Bloomsburg will mean much in the line of advertisement.
11. Because Bloomsburg is centrally located and has the best shipping facilities.

logue printed before the judging is done. This cannot help but add to the benefits to be derived. Even if the exhibitors should be unable to bring any undue pressure to bear under the old system, this new one, we think, is far better.

We are aiming to give more money prizes and less cups, etc. There is no doubt but that we will exceed $1,000 in regular and special prizes.

We have already secured the Gene-see coops for the show. Since we had these last year we are well aware of their merits and know that they will show the bird to the very best advantage. In fact, everything that can be done to improve upon the mistakes of our shows in the past is being done.

Judge Denny and Mr. and Mrs. Koons will place the awards and everybody cannot help but receive just what is coming to them. THE BEST BIRD WINS is to be our motto.

We are trying to place our prizes as evenly as possible upon the many different varieties so that each fancier may have a chance to receive his share of them. This, we think, will be better than having so many on one or two of the breeds and none to speak of on the others.

Poultry Diseases and Remedies

ROUP.

Roup, which includes Canker and Diphtheretic Roup, is the most dreaded and fatal disease that Poultry dealers have to deal with, and has been considered incurable up to the time that "Roupenne" was discovered.

Roup generally starts with a cold which may be caused by cold rains or disagreeable weather, by drafts of cold air blowing on the roosts or by over-heating. Being an infectious disease it may be communicated to your birds by new stock from infected flocks. A fowl when first affected with Roup shows it by sneezing, gasping or wheezing, and soon a very disagreeable odor will be noticeable. In the first stages of Roup the fowl mopes around for one or two days, during which time it neither eats nor drinks.

To prevent the spread of Roup in your flock is of as great importance as to cure it.

Claims are made that the easiest way to cure Roup is to let the chicken take its own medicine when it feels like it; but the fowl refuses to eat or drink at this stage just when the disease should be checked. If neglected now, fever soon sets in and then the fowl is liable to drink more than is good for it. By this time the disease has become seated and it takes work to eradicate it.

Treat the disease in a logical way.

When you first notice symptoms of Roup give one or two applications of "Roupenne"; if given at this time this will be sufficient to eradicate all traces of the disease.

By following this plan of treatment you will see how easy it is to cure and prevent the spread of Roup in your flock; also how unnecessary to isolate the sick fowls or dose them all to cure a few.

Poultry authorities now admit that by the use of "Roupenne," Roup and kindred diseases can positively be cured, leaving no traces of the disease or harmful after-effects in the fowl or their progeny. See the adv. of Roupenne in this issue.

Q. I have a number of Buff Leghorns that are losing their feathers around their heads, portions of their back and tail. The feathers seem dead and the skin is very red where the feathers have come out. Can you help me in this matter? J.H.B.

A. The loss of feathers is due, no doubt, to parasites. Give your birds a bath in luke warm water, using any good white soap; then rinse them in water with the chill taken off. Place them in a warm room until dry, then wherever the skin appears bare and red rub well with the following solution, viz: 2 parts raw linseed oil and one part olive oil. One application is usually sufficient.

Q. My hens have some kind of scale on their legs and after a while they seem lame. What can I do for them?

A. This disease is known as scaly leg. Remove the birds so afflicted to clean quarters. Wash their legs well with castile soap and warm water, after which rub them thoroughly dry. Then apply the following preparation once every third day until disease disappears; usually one or two applications will be sufficient: 10 parts carbonated vaseline, 10 parts olive oil, and 5 parts sublimated sulphur. Mix vaseline and oil together first, then thoroughly work in the sulphur.

Going Light or Possibly Lice.

Q. What is the matter with my fowls, they seem to lose flesh and dump around and die in spite of all I can do for them?

A. First examine them for lice, especially around the vent for large lice, and under the wings close up to the body for mites. If you find your birds free from these pests the possibilities are that your birds are suffering from a malady known as Going Light. This is an intestinal disease, and is also infectious. I would advise the separation of all sick fowls from the others, to clean quarters after those quarters have been thoroughly disinfected. Scatter slaked lime over the premises where the sick fowls have run and spray the houses with some good disinfectant. Use about 15 drops of Kretol or Creoline in each quart of drinking water and give the sick fowls nothing else to drink. Give the above remedy three or four days, then skip a day, and then continue the treatment for another period of three or four days. Give plenty of cabbage and onions chopped up fine. And feed them a dry mash composed of 2 parts wheat bran, 2 parts middlings and 1 part corn meal. Also scatter good scratch feed in the litter. Continue the treatment for at least a couple of weeks.

Q. Can you tell me what is the matter with my birds and how to cure them? They have discharges at the nose, the odor of which is very offensive; their heads seem hot, after a few days they become rather listless, refuse to eat anything and finally die.

A. Your birds are suffering with Roup. The best remedy we know of for cases in the last stages of the disease is to kill and bury them. But those birds that are but slightly affected we would recommend Oculum, manufactured by The Hancock Inoculum Co., Salem, Va., or G. E. Conkey Co.'s Roup Cure, Cleveland, O., Dept.

Q. Will you please give me a good formula for scratch feed and oblige.

Buckwheat—20 lbs.

Pip.

Q. I noticed the other day one of my hens made a peculiar noise and on examining her tongue I found a kind of crust formed near the end. She does not eat and seems feverish about her head.

A. If the coating on this bird's tongue is in the form of a crust, which we surmise is the case, she is no doubt suffering from a disease called "Pip," so designated on account of the peculiar noise made by the afflicted bird. This disease usually follows some form of indigestion and is caused by inflammation of the mucus membrane of the tongue or throat. Oft times we believe it results from injury to the mucus membrane. Wash the mouth with a solution of 30 grains of boric acid to a half pint of water, and bathe the crusted portions with pure glycerine. If it does not disappear in the course of a week, better look for the cause in the digestive or respiratory organs.

Q. I am thinking of going on to a farm for the purpose of raising poultry. What breed would you recommend as the best?

A. That is a difficult question to answer intelligently, my friend, owing to the fact, first, That it is not very specific and then again the ques-

A.A.J.

Q. Poultry Fancier: Gentlemen, Can you tell me what is the matter with my fowls. They stand around with their heads under their wings or sit on the perches a good part of the time. They seem well and are quite fat?

A. You are over feeding. Give about 1 qt. of oats scattered in deep litter to 12 fowls once a day, in the morning for one week. Keep clean water before them, also grit and oyster shells. After one week give a light feed of ½ wheat and ½ oats in litter in the morning and feed your mash about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Give them plenty of green food and make them work for every bit of grain you feed them. After three or four weeks report results.
E.E.M.
Dear Sir:

Can you tell me what is wrong with my birds? Their eyes all swell up and watery discharges pass from their nostrils, that have a bad odor.

A. Your birds have Roupe. Change them to good clean quarters. Give only soft mash for a few days and secure some of the remedies advertised in The Fancier. All are guaranteed to give satisfactory results or money will be refunded.

Q. My fowls are suffering with some kind of a disease; they have a scabby appearance around their eyes and beaks and the disease seems to spread to their combs and wattles. Can you tell me what the disease is and how to cure it?

A. This is no doubt Chicken Pox. It is a contagious disease and all afflicted birds should be removed from the rest of the flock, to clean, dry quarters. Bathe the afflicted parts with warm water and castile soap and wipe dry, then apply the following ointment: Five parts vaseline and one part red oxide of mercury. Apply every other day until well, or apply a solution of blue stone using 1 dram to about ½ pint of water. Thoroughly disinfect all feed troughs, houses and runs where afflicted fowls have been kept, as well as the place to which they were removed.

Q. Could you give me a cure for gapes?

A. Take the afflicted birds and if you have no extractor, take a horse hair, form it into a loop, dip it into a solution of ½ turpentine and ½ olive oil, mix while warm, (not hot). Slip the loop into the chick's windpipe, twist it around three or four times and withdraw; usually the parasite, which is a little red worm, will adhere to the hair. Many people use a feather, with good results. Be sure to disinfect the yards with slaked lime well spaded into the ground and sow too some quick growing grain. See "Down to Date Poultry Knowledge," a book published by the Poultry Fancier Co. It is full of reminders for various diseases and costs but 50c.

Q. We have been losing some of our young cockerels. They are about 8 or 10 weeks old. They seem to eat pretty well. Have scratch feed before them at all times, oyster shells and grit always before them, but their wattles and combs turn purple. They lost weight in spite of all I could do for them and finally died. Can you suggest a remedy?

A. I rather believe your chicks are not getting sufficient meat (or animal food). They no doubt have been getting too much grain, and this disarranged their digestive organs. Give your birds a hopper full of bran mixed with beef scrap to the proportion of  $\frac{3}{4}$  bran and  $\frac{1}{4}$  scrap by bulk.

Q. What is the matter with our ducks? They seemed perfectly healthy until within a few days. They huddle together in a corner and occasionally one will fall over dead. Their droppings are rather reddish. I feed a mash of 2 parts bran, 2 parts middlings, and 2 parts corn meal and 1 part beef scrap. What shall I do for them?

A. I believe your trouble lies chiefly in the fact that your ducks have had no grit in their mash. We would suggest that you feed a wet mash to consist of 3 parts bran, 2 parts middlings, 2 parts corn meal, 2 parts beef scrap, 2 parts grit and one-fourth of bulk, before wetting, of shredded alfalfa or cut clover. The alfalfa or clover, if dry, should be well moistened two or three hours before feed is mixed as this method will soften the stems and guard against injury to the birds. If your ducks do not have free range move pens often so as to insure sanitary quarters, or plow up part of the run way and sow to oats or rye and when this grain is up 5 or 6 inches turn the ducks into it and sow the other part of yard. Sanitation is one of the first stepping stones to success in any kind of poultry raising.

The Bethlehems' Poultry and Pigeon Fanciers' Association of Bethlehem, Penna., is in a flourishing condition, their membership and financial standing is increasing every month. Their scoring shows, which are held in connection with their monthly meetings are proving a great success. Mr. Adam Noll, of Allentown, Pa., is judge and does himself a great deal of credit.

sales during the near future, for it is truly a boon for the poultryman as well as the pride of its inventor.

In order to overcome the element of chance in artificial incubation it is absolutely necessary for the inventor of an incubator to deal successfully with three vital problems; viz., Heat, Ventilation and Moisture. That the Roller Tray Incubator has attained as high a degree of success as any other machine manufacturers today is without gainsaying, and in order to demonstrate the above claims the manufacturers of this machine are not compelled to resort to learned treatises on the subjects above considered but point with a large degree of pride to the big, livable chicks which their incubator hatches in the hands of their customers throughout every section of the country. In such cases learned treatises are not necessary for conviction; an actual, living demonstration is more to the point in question and any incubator which possesses these vital requisites is worthy of the highest confidence of a buying public. The hot water or heater tank covers the entire area of the egg chamber. This heating apparatus lies within about one inch of the top and runs back to a 2 inch partition at the rear of the machine and is set flush with the top edge of partition and case of machine, so that when the top is put into place and screwed down tight there is a two-inch division at the rear of the incubator to which is attached two small flues or pipes that carry away all foul air from the machine, thus insuring good, pure air for the incubating chamber.

The heater tank is so constructed as to give an absolutely even temperature in all parts of the egg chamber, which makes it unnecessary to change the eggs from one part of the chamber to another or to shift the eggs into different positions on the tray. The system of circulation is very unique and at once commends itself to all who are familiar with the fresh

So far as we are able to ascertain the birth of artificial incubation dates away back to the early history of Egypt, when that once great and influential people had grown prosperous and powerful under the wise and subtle reign of the Pharaohs. Practically every popular science now known among civilized nations, existed (in very crude form, it is true) among these ancient and powerful people, hence it is not strange that the art or source of artificial incubation should have had a crude beginning among a people so highly civilized for the age or ages in which they lived. However remote this period, crude or advanced, their conceptions of the source of incubation may have been, it is but recently, so to speak, that artificial incubation has been reduced to a practical science and assumed a real commercial value to the human race. These results have not come to us of a sudden, but are the offspring of long years of careful scientific tests and extraordinary perseverance. Incubators of various types have been introduced in different parts of the country, which have embodied many excellent features and apparently each succeeding year shows some improvements over the machines of the previous year, but it remained for the Roller Tray Inc. Company of Northampton, Pa., to perfect one of the most unique and successful incubators ever placed upon the market. That the attainments of other incubator concerns have indirectly contributed, to a greater or less degree, to the production of the Roller Tray Incubators is but fair and reasonable to acknowledge, but in certain respects the manufacturers claim the Roller Tray Incubator is a real "triumph over Nature." We admit this is rather a strong way of putting the case, but when one takes into consideration what the writer has learned from many reliable sources and knows personally what this splendid machine will do by way of hatching, great, big livable chicks from eggs picked up in the stores or bought from hucksters' wagons, it is not hard to admit that the Roller Tray Incubator is a wonderful machine and worthy of the highest possible commendation. One of the very unique features of this machine is its Roller Egg Tray, from which the company derives its name. This egg tray is so constructed that, in order to turn the eggs, all the operator has to do is to turn a handle, on the outside of the machine, which is attached to the tray and the eggs will turn one-fourth, one-half or entirely around, just as the operator desires. And the beauty of the whole feature is, it is a practical device which never fails to operate. Its simplicity and durability are other features which must of necessity appeal to prospective purchasers, and no doubt will result in thousands of air requirements of the incubating chamber.

The fresh air passes through two holes in the top and is drawn forward through the air space between the cover and the heater-pan, passing directly over a water trough in front of the tank, which can be seen through a hole in the front edge of the top, thence drawn through an air space between the front wall and tank, downward into the brooding chamber, then up through the spaces between the eggs and out through two air flues. This method of circulation, which passes through every compartment of the incubator is steady and continuous whether the machine is in operation or not, which may be clearly observed by blowing a puff of smoke into one of the holes where the fresh air enters, which will follow the current of air exactly as above described.

The Roller Tray Inc. Co. is turning out from 90 to 100 incubators per week and orders are pouring in from all parts of the country. They are putting out a high grade machine, backing it up with a "guarantee-to-please-or-your-money-back-contract" and intelligent poultrymen in every section of the land are strong in their praise of its splendid merits. In Connection With Great Allentown Fair Poultry Show, Sept.
24-27, 1912.

Fanciers and breeders generally are making a mistake by not showing attractive eggs of their variety at the poultry shows and fairs. The one big reason people are interested in chickens or the reason they are thinking of keeping chickens or are keeping chicks is for the eggs they lay.

If pure-bred chickens are to be more generally kept then they must demonstrate that they will lay more eggs and better and bigger eggs than dung-hills and cross-breeds. And it's up to the breeders of pure-bred poultry to show the general public the kind of eggs pure-bred chickens will lay. That they have so far almost entirely failed to live up to their opportunities along this line seems peculiar. Egg shows usually have been small and insignificant and not calculated to raise or create any interest in them by the public. When large and made attractive by suitable displaying, the opposite is found to be true.

Last year at the great Allentown Fair Poultry Show the aisle was constantly blocked in front of the egg display. There were no less than 78 dozen fine eggs on display shown in a booth well lighted and covered with royal purple. Even the eggs were laid on squares of this color bringing out strongly both white and brown eggs and making them very attractive. This great agricultural Fair and Poultry Show offers this year even a better line of prizes on eggs than last year, with no entry fee of any sort.

There is a regular Table Egg Department with eight regular classes and two sweepstake classes. Each class carries $2.00 first prize, $1.00 second prize, ribbons, third, fourth and fifth prizes.

There are classes for Plymouth Rock eggs, for Wyandotte, for Leghorn, for Orpington, for Minorca, for Duck eggs, etc. Besides this there is a grand Prize Cup of $15.00 for best dozen over all and a Prize Cup of $5.00 for best dozen over all Duck eggs.

The premium list devotes two pages to this department giving full particulars and can be had for the asking. Remember, no entry fee of any sort and that entries can be made up to Saturday, Sept. 21st.

Mr. F. V. L. Turner of Philadelphia, Pa., an expert on eggs and Sec'y Advisory Board and member of Board of Directors, the Philadelphia North American International Egg Laying Competition, has been engaged especially to judge this department. Further information about this egg display feature can be had by addressing W. Theo. Wittman, Supt. Poultry Division, Great Allentown Fair, Allentown, Pa.

LEWISTOWN, PENNA. SHOW.

The second annual exhibition of the Mifflin Co. Poultry and Fanciers Association will be held December 31st to January 3. Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Koons of Treichler, Penna., will judge the show. Lewistown is to be congratulated on securing the services of these two well known judges and it surely ought to mean an increased entry for Lewistown.

Their premium list is a very liberal one and the Lewistown Association is considered to be one of the live shows along the Penna. main line and every indication points to one of the most successful shows held in that section of the country.

For further communications, entry blanks, etc., address, Rob't S. Foster, Lewistown, Penna.

CYPHERS COMPANY'S BIG FIRE.

One of the Buffalo, N. Y., Factories of Cyphers Incubator
Co. Destroyed by Fire August 16th, With Loss Exceeding $200,000. Main Wood-working Factory and Poultry Food Mill Not Injured. Business is Being Continued Almost Without Interruption.

On Friday, August 16th, the immense warehouse of Cyphers Incubator Company, at Buffalo, N. Y., in which were located the company's home offices and metal working departments, was completely destroyed by fire, the actual loss on buildings and contents totaling more than $200,000. The following letter from Mr. Curtis, president and general manager, will be of interest to our readers:

Buffalo, N. Y., August 20, 1912.

"Editor Poultry Fancier:—

"You probably have read in the daily papers of our severe loss by fire, which on Friday last totally destroyed our Buffalo warehouse, with an estimated loss of $200,000 to $250,000 on building and contents.

"The fire was a bad one, no doubt of that, but we were fortunate in many particulars. No lives were lost, our account books, most valuable records and a large supply of current printed matter were saved, also all patterns, steel dies, etc.

"We had two factories in Buffalo and the fire did not reach nor damage to any extent our wood-working plant where all incubators, brooders, poultry houses, coops, etc., are manufactured. On the day following the big fire we opened temporary offices in the finishing room of this separate factory and are now doing business there in good shape. Considerable office furniture and stationery were saved from the other building.

"As you know, our Poultry Food and Alfalfa Mill is located in Chicago and we have branch stores and warehouses in six different cities outside of Buffalo—in New York City, Boston, Mass., Chicago, Kansas City, Mo., Oakland, Calif., and London, England. We make it a practice to carry large stocks of goods at these points and already several carloads of seasonable goods have been ordered shipped from our eastern branches to Buffalo for use in filling orders received from Buffalo territory.

"Please tell your readers, therefore, that the Cyphers Company is going right on doing business, that its branch houses are well stocked with goods, that Buffalo will have plenty of seasonable goods before your September issue reaches their hands and that our company is in position just now to appreciate more than ever their valued patronage.

"Very truly yours,
GRANT M. CURTIS,
Pres. and Gen'l Mgr.

A FEW WORDS ABOUT COOPS.

The Keipper Cooping Co., of Milwaukee, Wis., manufacturers of the Keipper Collapsible Coops, of which Albert T. Keipper is the inventor and general manager, has made wonderful strides in the few years they have the coops on the market.

Several years ago a man would have been considered insane had he proposed all wire cooping to pen poultry in at the shows. Today it is universally conceded that they are the greatest coops ever put in a show room, and exhibitors and visitors, alike, stand in amazement when given the pleasure to view one of these grand shows cooped with the Keipper Collapsible Coops.

But, these are not by any means the only great points of these grand coops: the point of labor is another thing to be considered. In the Keipper Coops you have in reality a perfect folding coop, a section of which can be set up and taken down in a few seconds. This sounds strong, but is true nevertheless, and folds as flat as a board one inch thick, not a single tool required to set up. Did you ever stop to think what it means to a Poultry Association to set up a good sized poultry show in a few hours? This can easily be done with the Keipper Coops.

The money paid for the coops is repaid in labor in a few years, besides the saving in rent, as you don't have to rent a building two or three days ahead to get the coops set up, which is the case with other cooping.

Where the Keipper Cooping Co., was completely outguessed, was in the sale of coops for private use. Never had they the remotest idea that their coops would be used so extensively for training, conditioning, and general use around the poultry yard.

They have installed improved machinery designed expressly for that purpose, which not only improves the quality of coops but gives them about five times the out-put capacity, but still they are battling to keep abreast with the orders. As a matter of fact the way things look at present it will be only a short time when old style wooden disease ridden coops will be replaced by modern all wire coops such as the Keipper Cooping Co. is placing on the market.
