TO CAPITALISTS.—The Heirs of ROBERT MORRIS, Financier of the Revolution; in whom has vested, by the setting aside the proceedings of bankruptcy, the title to his vast Landed Estate, lying in every County of the State of Pennsylvania, having conveyed the Estate to the subscriber, he now offers to dispose of all his right, &c.

The claims to the Coal Lands lying in the Counties of Schuylkill, Carbon, Lehigh, Wyoming, Luzerne, &c., are alone estimated by Millions of Dollars. The legal title of Robert Morris has been pronounced absolute by the Supreme Court of the State of Pennsylvania.

The claims in Schuylkill, Berks, Dauphin, Northumberland, Carbon, Columbia, Luzerne, Clinton and Lycoming, are under the professional charge of Messrs. Hughes, Looser and Bannan, who have undertaken their recovery on terms contingent on the successful remuneration of the suits. Subject to 12½-100 of the net proceeds of thirty contiguous tracts of four hundred acres each, situated in Schuylkill County, payable to Wm. Rawle, Esq. These thirty tracts are said to be worth $150,000 each, consisting of Coal Mines in successful operation.

To capitalists associated together, the offer now made offers pecuniary returns which cannot be enumerated in an advertisement, but which, when explained, will not appear unreasonable. The undersigned, therefore, recommends it to men of capital and enterprise.

Want of space has heretofore prevented our making, as we do now, our public acknowledgments for the valuable aid extended to us by J. Orlando Tobias, Esq., to whom our readers are indebted for the Argument and Motion Lists of the District Court, furnished weekly in our paper the past year, which, as well as the Decisions of the Court, will still be continued.

Since Mr. Tobias assumed the position of Court Clerk, his courteous attention to, and intelligent performance of the duties of the office, has been such as to meet the approbation of Bench and Bar, and we doubt not but all will join us heartily in "Hoping his shadow may never grow less."

THE LIABILITY OF RAILROAD COMPANIES.

In view of the number of cases pending and now constantly arising involving the liabilities of these Corporations, it has been suggested to us that the republication of the following able and lucid charge of his Honour Judge Woodward delivered February 23d 1853, would prove useful and interesting to our readers.

The jury found for the plaintiff.

IN THE SUPREME COURT E. D. OF PENNSYLVANIA.

Charles L. Scott vs. The Ohio and Pennsylvania Railroad Company. Trespass on the case for injuries sustained by an accident on defendant's railroad.

CHARGE OF THE COURT.

WOODWARD J.—The contract which the law implies from a man's purchase of a seat in the cars of a Company who are common carriers of passengers, is that the Company will carry him to the designated point safely. Holding themselves out to the world as competent to perform such contracts, the Company are bound to furnish themselves with all the necessary means and appliances. Their road must be in good condition. Their cars must be road worthy. Their agents must be men of competent skill and experience, and must employ in executing the contract all the care, prudence and diligence which men of skill can employ. If an accident happen, it is evidence of the Company's negligence in some of these particulars, and the burthen of rebutting this presumption is on the Company. It is not necessary for the injured passenger to prove what fault in the Company's agents, or what defect in their road or cars, caused the injury; it is enough for him to show that they undertook to carry him safely, and that he suffered injury. To escape responsibility, it is for the Company to show that their whole duty was performed, and that the accident was unavoidable by any human foresight. They must satisfy the jury on every point that touches the passenger's safety—road, cars and management—and, unless they do this, the jury should assess the plaintiff's damages. Whatever human foresight could have prevented they are responsible for. This rule, of course, must be understood with reference to the mode of conveyance. The passenger having adopted a railway train, has no right to insist that it shall depart from the customary speed of such conveyances, in order to secure his safety. It is all possible care in the conduct of such conveyances, at rates of speed which general usage has sanctioned, and for which the road and cars are fitted, that is required of the company. And there must be no fault or negligence on the part of the passenger, for he is not entitled to recover for an injury that is in any degree the result of his own negligence. It is an implication of his contract with the company that he will do nothing to expose himself to danger whilst in their charge. For accidents which are inevitable—that is, accidents which human foresight could not guard a railway train against when travelling at customary speed—the company are not responsible.

These, gentlemen, are general principles, well settled in the authorities of the law, and it is of great importance to parties and the public that they be faithfully applied by courts and juries to that relation which companies and passengers establish between themselves.

In the case before us it is not pretended that the plaintiff was guilty of any negligence which contributed to his injury. Was his injury, then, occasioned by any negligence or misconduct on the part of the company? Negligence is the omission of any duty they were bound to perform. I have stated how high their duties are, and whether we call the omission of any of them slight, or gross negligence, is not material, since by whichever name it be denominated, they are liable for it.

Misconduct is the doing of any act inconsistent with the duties incumbent on them. For all practical purposes in this case, and perhaps in most cases, negligence and misconduct are resolvable into each other. The defendants have undertaken to explain all the circumstances attending this disaster, and they insist that they have laid before you affirmative proof that in every particular they performed their whole duty, and that the accident was inevitable, and in no manner justly ascribable to neglect on their part. They account for it by the breaking of an axle of one of the trunks of the middle car, and assign a latent defect in that axle as the cause of its fracture at that time and place.

The plaintiff on the other hand insists that the breaking of the axle was a consequence, rather than the cause of the overturning of the car, and he attributes the accident to a spreading of the rails, or to the broken flange on one of the wheels.

If from the evidence you believe that the accident resulted from the spreading of the rails, and that that was caused either by a defective construction, by too rapid driving, or an untimely application of the brake, the company is liable. The evidence on this point as on every other, has been so fully discussed, that it is not my intention to go over it again, but the fact which is in clear proof that the third passenger car passed over the rails, after the second had been broken from its connections and precipitated over the embankment, is it seems to me almost decisive against the theory that the rails had given way. If under the second car they so spread as to let it off the track, how did they, the instant after, pass the third car safely. Mr. Miller, who was in the third car, considers this circumstance conclusive, or, taken in connection with his subsequent examination of the rail when he found no evidence of spreading, the opinion of so distinguished an Engineer is entitled to great weight.

Now as to the broken flange. There is evidence of a gash on the rail and a piece of the flange was found lying at the spot. The Company insist that the flange was broken there as a consequence of the wheel being thrown off the track by the breaking of the axle, and the piece of the flange found tends to sustain this view. But on the part of the plaintiff it is proved by the witness Shuster, that he saw one of the wheels lying half way down the bank, with part of the axle and about 18 inches of the flange off, as near as he could judge—and that 12 or 14 inches had been off for some time; from the appearance of the iron, it looked as if it had been worn after it was broken; the balance looked to have been recently done—about the breadth of his hand—there appeared to be clay, gathered on that part of the broken flange which he judged to have been done some time before. His examination was made three quarters of an hour after the accident. The employees of the Company had not observed that there was any wheel in the train with a broken flange, and here the jury will remember that Waddington, who was the Company's car inspector at Allegheny, swears that no train was ever permitted to go out of their yards without having been first thoroughly examined. If the Company was running a car wheel with 12 or 14 inches broken from its flange, it is not strange that 6 inches more should have been broken on a curve. The use of such a wheel was gross negligence, for which they should be held liable. No witness speaks of applying the broken piece of the flange to the place of the fracture to see whether it would fill it or not, and it will be for you to determine from such evidence as we have whether the flange was broken in the article of the disaster—or had been broken before, and only an additional piece was broken off at the time.

Then as to the axle. If you think the accident was occasioned by the breaking of the axle, and this is the defendant's view of the case, what caused it to break? If a defect in the rails or the wheels, or a too high speed, or a too sudden checking of the motion by the breaks, the company is liable. But the company insists that it was from a latent defect in the iron. Suppose you find it so, are they liable for such defect?

Inspection is a most important duty, and every company who carry passengers should see that it is faithfully performed at each end of a route as long as that from Allegheny City to Wooster in Ohio. But if any inspection which was had or might have been had could not have discovered this defect, then the omission of it in this instance is unimportant. I say omission, because although there is evidence of inspection at Allegheny City there was none at Wooster, and this train, it will be remembered, was going eastward from Wooster to Allegheny.

An axle of a railway car is made of bad iron, whereby the lives and limbs of human beings are endangered, is nobody responsible to the passenger? I should be very unwilling to answer affirmatively. But who can be responsible to the passenger except the Company? They do not insure the life of the passengers, but their contract amounts to a warranty of the sufficiency of their cars. Or, at the least, when called to account for an accident resulting from defective materials, they ought to show that before those materials were used, they were subjected to the most approved tests of soundness and sufficiency. It is not enough to purchase cars at shops of good character. Let it be shown that the materials were tested at that shop before they were used. I believe the manufacturer of car bodies does not generally manufacture the running gears, and I am not sure that the wheels and axles are always made at the same shop; but whether the manufacturers of these essential parts of the car be many or few, it is the business of the Company to know whose materials and workmanship they use; and when they would vindicate themselves from alleged neglect in using defective materials, they should show either that they or those from whom they purchased had taken all practicable means to detect latent defects. This done, and proved, I would not hold a Company liable for defects so minute and concealed as to elude the most approved tests. This car was made at the shop of Osgood & Bradley, of Massachusetts. Whether they manufactured the axle or not is not in evidence, but there is no proof that it was ever tried or examined as to its soundness before it was used. Herein was neglect. The tests of the soundness of axles may not be infallible, but it should have been shown that such as they are they were applied. Defective iron was used in this axle. This is agreed on all hands, and no effort ever was made to detect its defects. I am of opinion that for this neglect the passenger has a right to hold the Company responsible. His remedy must be against the Company, if he have any, for he has no contract with the manufacturer. Let the Company account to the passengers, and the manufacturer to the Company, and then we shall have a real responsibility that will contribute to the safety of human life.

It results from these views, that though you should adopt the theory of the defence, that the plaintiff's injury was caused by the imperfect material of the axle, the Company are nevertheless liable in damages, for they have failed entirely to show any effort to detect the latent fault.

The case then comes to a question of damages, and that is exclusively for the jury under the evidence. In this class of cases some regard, I agree, is to be had to the public interests in assessing damages, but we are never to lose sight of the particular justice due to the parties before us. If the plaintiff has not been seriously injured, the damages ought not to be disproportioned to his injury merely for the sake of protecting others from the negligence of the Company. We are here to administer justice to the parties litigant, and perhaps the most effectual way in which we can promote the public interests, is by a faithful discharge of that duty. If we undertake to consult public policy, and to give damages on some speculative opinion of what will be best for others who are not before us, we are in danger of sacrificing the right of those who are before us. The plaintiff is entitled to what are called compensatory damages, and these you will measure by the evidence. They should be neither more nor less on account of the defendant being a corporate body with a large capital. A corporation capable of suing and being sued comes into Court just like any other party, and must have the same measure of justice that we mete to others. Jury are now out.

District Court.

LANGOLF vs. PFROMER.

The book of original entries of a Physician is not conclusive as to value of services charged. The jury may make an abatement for unreasonable or excessive charges.

A Physician cannot recover a claim for professional services unless he possesses the requisite skill. A reasonable doubt or disbelief of qualifications induced by the nature of the entries in his books will justify a reduction or rejection of the charge by the Jury.

Opinion by HARE, J.

This action was brought for professional services rendered, and medicine sold. The plaintiff admitted that considerable payments had been made on account, but alleged that a large sum was still due. The jury found a verdict for the defendant, and the case is now before us on a motion for a new trial. Whether this verdict should stand, obviously depends on whether the amount paid to the plaintiff, was a fair compensation for his services. The only evidence on this point, was his book of original entries, and it has been argued by his counsel, that the jury were bound to accept it as it stood, without any abatement for what might appear to them unreasonable or excessive. This argument is, however, clearly erroneous. The jurors who are the appropriate judges of the credibility of evidence in all cases, are emphatically so when a man's own declarations, are brought forward as proof for or against him. The cases are numerous in which one part of a letter, of a conversation, or of an answer in chancery, is made the basis of a verdict and the rest disregarded. Whatever may be thought of the exercise of this power, when such declarations are laid before the jury by the opposite party, and thus, in some measure made his own; it is obviously just, when entries made to be given in evidence, are given in evidence by the person who made them, who might otherwise stretch his own case to any point where he desired to carry it. Without some such check, the power which our law gives every man, of writing his neighbor down as his debtor, and then giving the book in evidence to prove the debt, would be intolerable, and would destroy itself by its own abuses. Books of original entries, said the late Chief Justice Gibson in Crouse v. Miller, 10 S. & R. 155, "are at best a dangerous kind of evidence. They are admissible on grounds of necessity, not of convenience, and the decisions in their favor have already gone as far as expediency can require or prudence justify. Such books are barely competent, and although they often afford perfectly satisfactory evidence, yet being the act of the party using them, and affording extraordinary facilities for the practice of deception in a way that renders detection difficult, they are entitled to no peculiar protection, but are liable to have their credibility impeached by any means in the power of the opposite party." It is plain that no evidence against the credibility of such books can be stronger, than that derived from an inspection of the books themselves. Gross excess in amount or price, is, under such circumstances, evidence of fraud, and will justify the jury in disregarding a claim sustained by such doubtful evidence. Such reasons for distrust were not wanting in the present instance; but the book affords ample ground for another argument, which the jurors may well have thought decisive. The claim of the plaintiff was for services as a physician, and his recovery must necessarily depend on whether he possessed the requisite skill. Admitting what ought probably to be conceded, that his employment was prima facie evidence of his competency, it might still be disproved by evidence adduced by the defendant, but, above all by the plaintiff himself. No man who examines the account given in the plaintiff's book, of the diseases of his patients and his own remedies, can deny that it justifies doubt or disbelief, of his possessing the acquirement, necessary for the responsible office which he undertook to fulfil. The jury no doubt thought that whatever the enormous quantity of medicine charged in the plaintiff's bill might have cost the physician, the defendant had paid quite as much as it was worth to the patient, and I certainly do not dissent from their opinion.

The action for a new trial is therefore refused.

Opinion by HARE, J.

To make after discovered evidence, a ground for a new trial, it must obviously be such, that it not only might but ought to have led to a different verdict, had the jury heard it. This is far from being the case in the present instance, where the new evidence consists in an admission by the defendant, that he was indebted to the plaintiff in a sum which he could not name, because no account had been settled between them. The verdict which ascertains and fixes the amount thus due at $50, is certainly sustained and supported rather than contradicted by the admission. It cannot be denied, that as the case took a wide range at the trial, and exhibited the relations between the parties in many different aspects, the introduction of a new element might have produced a different result; but this is mere surmise or conjecture, and not sufficient ground for judicial action. The true test, under circumstances like the present, is, whether the new evidence affords reasonably sufficient ground for believing, that the verdict rendered on the old is erroneous. This we unhesitatingly decide in the negative, and refuse the rule for a new trial.

A Complete Collection of the Cases decided by the House of Lords, the Privy Council, the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas and Exchequer, the Lord Chancellor, the High Court of Appeal in Chancery, the Court of Criminal Appeal, and the Admiralty and Ecclesiastical Courts. Reprinted within a few weeks after the decisions are rendered.

This series has the merit of being complete, reliable, prompt, convenient, and cheap. It is now universally cited in the courts, and referred to in the recent law books as standard authority. "Hardly a stronger guaranty could be afforded to the American Bar that the work has merit, than the fact that Mr. Wharton was author of the legal portion of the book."

JOHN CATRON.

From Professor Parsons of the Cambridge Law School.

"I have not had time to examine it critically, but have read enough to convince me that it is an instructive and valuable work. Some of its topics, which are quite new in a book on this subject, are shown to be among the most important."

THEOPHILUS PARSONS.

From Judge McLean of the U. S. Supreme Court.

"I have not had time to look minutely through the volume, but from the known ability of the authors, and their experience, I am sure the book must be very interesting and useful, not only to the profession of the law, but also to general readers. A modern treatise of this kind, embodying the experience of jurists and medical men, with decisions of courts, was much wanted; and I am satisfied that abler pens than those employed, could not have been engaged in its production."

JOHN McLEAN.

A MERITORIOUS CARD.

Hail! honored age of grand progression,
While each one clings to his profession,
And science moves with onward motion,
To suit each wayward thought and notion,
Bringing to light some new invention,
More strange than modern wit can mention,
Or Genius paint with true endeavor,
Though making graphic strides forever,
While Reason urges proud Ambition,
To strive for wondrous Competition;
Yet, in this age of glorious Art,
We can the meed of praise impart,
When meritorious efforts claim
A modest puff to gild the name:
And thus we call, with honest pride,
Attention to the Painter's side,—
A man who bravely knows his calling,
Whose works are worthy of extolling,
A model Artist of the day,
And most obliging in his way,
GEORGE H. BANCROFT,—mark the name,
In CHESTNUT STREET you'll find the same,
Call at Five Hundred and Thirty-One,
You'll get the best of painting done,
In Modern or in Classic Order,
From templed shrine to parlor border,
In magic tints of every hue,
To Signs embossed in gold and blue,
Or Figure Head, or Church, or Steeple,
He is resolved to please the people,
And whether foe, or friend or neighbor,
Will charge but moderate for his labor.
We thus invite each one and all,
To give this worthy man a call.
Who will, we venture to engage,
Feel grateful for your patronage.*

* We would particularly invite public attention to our friend Mr. BANCROFT, who is a young, enterprising beginner, and who has gone to vast expense in fitting up his establishment, and is now ready to receive orders for Painting, in all its various branches, at 531 and 533 Chestnut street, 5 doors east of Seventeenth st.

Few will forget their services in the burning of the "Tribune establishment," New York, and at the Great Fire in Strawberry street, at the large fire last July, opposite the Girard House, and still more recently in the Fire at Fifth and Chestnut sts., in this city, in which these Safes came forth the acknowledged CHAMPION, when many other securities failed.

The Fullest, the Latest, and the Best
REPORTS OF THE COMMON LAW COURTS OF ENGLAND.

Containing the cases decided in the Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Nisi Prius Courts, from 1813 to 1855, and in the Court of Exchequer and Exchequer Chamber, from 1824 to 1855, are found in

The Regular and Authoritative Series of the
English Common Law and English Exchequer Reports,

Which present the following claims to the support of the profession:

1. They are the only series issued as the authoritative and acknowledged medium by which the decisions of the Law Courts of England are made public.
2. They contain Later Reports than the Boston series, are more fully and more ably reported, and so arranged by preservation of the original paging, that reference by reporters, or by elementary writers, can be traced as readily as in the English editions.
- Vol. 2, Ellis & Blackburne's (75 E. C. L. R.,) Reports (Q. B.) to January, 1854, was published by us in June, 1854. At that time the last Queen's Bench case printed in the Boston Law and Equity Reports, was of June 25, 1853. Our volume contained cases decided five months later. The Queen's Bench cases to November 25, 1853, were published in the Boston series in August, 1854, two months after we had distributed the same cases.
- Vol. 3, Ellis & Blackburne, (77 E. C. L. R.,) with cases to the end of Trinity Term, 1854, was published when the latest case of Queen's Bench decisions in the Boston series, was of February 8, 1854, more than four months behind the regular reporters.

Exchequer Reports, vol. 9, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) distributed by us January 11, 1855, contains cases to May 10, 1854. The last Exchequer case then in the Boston series was decided February 9, 1854, four months behind the regular Reporter, issued in Philadelphia.

3. They contain more cases decided by the courts represented, than any other series issued in this country.

Vol. 77 English Common Law, (3 E. & B.,) reports eighty-six cases decided in the Queen's Bench since January 11, 1854, while but fifty-eight Queen's Bench cases, decided since January 1, 1854, are found scattered among Vols. 22, 24 and 25 of the Boston Law and Equity.

Vol. 78 E. C. L. K. (5 J. Scott.) reports sixty-five cases decided since Nov. 13, 1853, in the Common Pleas, while the L. & E. has but fifty-seven cases in that Court since the same period.

Vol. 9 Exchequer Reports, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) reports one hundred and ten cases in the Courts of Exchequer, decided since June 24, 1853, while since the same date, the L. & E. report but 107 cases, scattered through vols. 20, 22, 24 and 25.

4. They are almost exclusively cited in argument of counsel, and referred to by Elementary Writers for Law Authorities. See Smith's Leading Cases, Smith's Contracts, Smith's Landlord and Tenant, by Maude; Byles on Bills and Promissory Notes, Broom's Legal Maxims, Broom's Commentaries on the Laws of England, or almost any recent Law Book issued in England.

5. The Philadelphia Reports are edited by Judge Sharswood and by Judge Hare, whose labors as editors and authors have made them so well and so favorably known to the profession.

6. The Boston Law and Equity is made up in this country from the Law Journal, Jurist, Times and other Law periodicals, of a weekly, monthly, or quarterly character, and being unknown in England, is never cited in Court, or referred to by Law writers. The periodicals from which it is extracted, are occasionally cited under their own particular names, but they do not possess that permanent value, even in England, which is all-important in a series of Reports.

7. A carefully prepared and accurate Annual Digest of all the cases decided by the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Exchequer, will be distributed, early in each year, to subscribers to either series, free of charge. That for 1854 is ready, and will be mailed to subscribers who have not received a copy.

IN PRESS AND IN PREPARATION.

Leading Cases on the Law relating to Real Property, Conveyancing, and the Construction of Wills, by Owen Davies Tudor, author of Leading Cases in Equity. With very full notes referring to American Decisions.

Broom's Commentaries on the Common Law, by author of Legal Maxims, and Parties to Actions, edited by Hon. Geo. Sharswood.

Smith's Law of Landlord and Tenant, by author on Leading Cases, with copious American notes by P. P. Morris, Esq.

Having purchased from the English Publishers, during the past year, early sheets of the three works above announced, we hope to issue improved American editions very soon after their completion in England.

Williams' Personal Property, edited by B. Gertler, Esq., to be ready in July.

Starkie on the Law of Evidence. Arranged and Annotated by Hon. Geo. Sharswood.

Digest of the Exchequer Reports, 35 vols. by Asa J. Fish, Esq.

MEARS vs. DICKERSON.

A Mechanic's Lien filed against the vendor of an unfinished building, as owner and contractor, for materials furnished for its completion after the sale, binds the lands in the hands of the vendee.

The authority of a contractor under the Lien Law is co-extensive with the necessities of the Building, and binding subsequent to its commencement.

The question in this case depends on whether a mechanic's lien, filed against the vendor of an unfinished building, as owner and contractor, for materials furnished for its completion after the sale, binds the land in the hands of the purchaser, and precludes him from recovering in ejectment against the defendant, to whom the land was subsequently sold and conveyed by the sheriff, under a judgment confessed on the lien by the vendor. This question would admit of but one solution, if it depended solely upon common law principles: for nothing is better settled than that no act done by a grantor after the conveyance, can affect the title of the grantee. But the authority conferred by Act of June 16, 1836, on contractors, is co-extensive with the necessities of the building, and will therefore endure until it is finished, not only against those by whom they are originally employed, but against all who claim subsequently by descent or purchase.

A contract for the erection of a house, is in effect a power to charge the land for the purposes of the contract, and the commencement of the building, notice to all the world of the existence of the power. Whether a purchaser can discharge the contractor, from the further prosecution of the work, and thus defeat the exercise of the power, need not be determined in a case like the present, where the contractor was permitted to go on after a short interval and complete the building.

To hold the land discharged under these circumstances, would be a departure from the meaning of the statute, and highly unjust to those who furnished materials in reliance upon its protection. They have an equity which the plaintiff, who bought an unfinished house from a vendor who was both owner and contractor, and then suffered him to finish it afterwards on the credit of his original authority, plainly wants.

Nor has the plaintiff any right to allege want of notice, as a reason why his estate should not be bound by the lien filed against the owner under whom he claims. The duty of a purchaser to examine the record, ceases under ordinary circumstances upon the execution of the conveyance; but the purchase of a house in the process of erection, renders incessant vigilance indispensable, until the whole is finished, and the period passed, within which the law permits a mechanic's lien to be binding. Till then liens filed against the estate of the vendor, are in fact filed against that of the purchaser, whether he be or be not named as owner.

The motion for a new trial is consequently refused.

LANG vs. FEGENBLAST.

The endorsement of a note which wants words of negotiability, has no definite or legal import, and depends for its effect on the circumstances under, and the consideration for which it is given.

The endorsement of a note drawn to order, before its delivery, by one who is not named on its face, will not render the endorser liable to the payee, without proof that such was his intention; and in the absence of proof, the presumption will be, that he meant his signature to take effect as a commercial endorsement, which can only be by treating the payee as the first endorser. The law was so held in Tillman v. Wheeler, 17 Johnson, 326, and Taylor v. McCune, 1 Jones, 460; which ought to be decisive of the point both in New York and Pennsylvania. But these cases, and the reasoning on which they are founded, only apply, when the instrument is negotiable, and the rules of mercantile law furnish a guide to the meaning of the parties. The endorsement of a note which wants words of negotiability, has no definite or legal import, and depends for its effect on the circumstances under, and the consideration for which it is given. Hence it raises no presumption either for or against the endorser, and makes the question of his liability one of mere fact, to be decided upon all the evidence in the cause, as in ordinary cases of guaranty. Such at least would seem to be the better view of the law; and if there be any cases which depart from it, they only do so to assume a hostile position to the endorser, and treat him as primarily liable for the payment of the instrument which he has endorsed; Plimly v. Westly, 2 Bing. N. C., 436; Campbell v. Knapp, 3 Harris 27. Full justice was therefore done to the defendant in the present instance, by instructing the jury that his endorsement alone would not make him answerable to the plaintiff, and that his liability depended on whether his intention was to enable the maker to obtain credit from the payee, and whether the latter gave credit on the faith of the endorsement. Some of the expressions used by Bell J., in Taylor v. McCune, 1 Jones, 460, have been cited as inconsistent with this conclusion, but the note in that case was negotiable, and therefore directly within the rule laid down in Tillman v. Wheeler. The same remark applies to Kyner v. Shower, 1 Harris, 444, where Taylor v. McCune was said to determine, that the liability of those who endorse commercial paper before delivery, depends on the evidence, and that in the absence of evidence, the payee may write any promise, which he thinks proper, over the endorsement. It is therefore plain that the instruction to the jury in the case now before us, was quite as favorable to the defendant as the authorities warrant, and the motion for a new trial is consequently refused.

THE STATE OF OHIO vs. HINCHMAN.

This action is founded on the judgment of a court of probate in Ohio, and the only question is whether the record discloses enough to sustain it. The controversy had its origin in a habeas corpus issued against the defendant, at the instance of his wife, and terminated in a decision in favor of the relator, and a judgment against the defendant in favor of the State, for the costs of the proceeding. The intention of the court plainly was, to render the defendant personally responsible, for the payment of the sum thus awarded against him, and we see no reason to doubt their power to give effect to this intention. The object of the proceeding, was indeed to determine whether he was entitled to the custody of the child, for whom the habeas corpus issued, but it is not the less true, that he was himself personally present in the court and subject to its jurisdiction. A liability for costs, and the right to enforce it by a judgment, it is not necessarily confined to suits brought to compel the payment of debts, or the performance of contracts of any other description, but may result from any of those personal controversies, of which the relations of social life are unhappily fruitful. The circumstance that this judgment was in favor of the State of Ohio, and not of the relator, at whose instance the habeas corpus issued, takes nothing from its validity, and our own law affords an instance of a similar practice, in suits on sheriff's bonds. The rule for a new trial is consequently discharged, and judgment entered for the plaintiff on the plea of nul tiel record, and the point reserved.

PARSONS vs. THE COLUMBIA INS. CO.

The defendant in this case contends, that the attachment of property in the State of Ohio, is a bar to the right to issue another writ of the same nature elsewhere: at all events, when the assets bound by the first writ, are, or might be made sufficient, for the payment of the demand on which both are founded. This, however, is to attribute greater effect to an attachment, than belongs to the levy of an execution, which may in many cases be withdrawn, without forfeiting the right to another writ. An attachment is not like an execution, the end and accomplishment of the judgment of the law. It is primarily a means of compelling the appearance of the debtor, which may or may not end in satisfaction, but affords no reason against a simultaneous recourse to other remedies of the same or a different description in another State, and beyond the reach of a plea in abatement.

The motion for a new trial is consequently refused, and judgment entered for the plaintiff on the point reserved.

D'ARRAS vs. KEYSER.

It is unnecessary to enquire whether time was originally of the essence of the covenant to convey, on which this ejectment is founded, or whether if it were, the right to treat it as essential, has been waived by the subsequent conduct of the vendor; because the court are of opinion, that the payment of purchase money into court before verdict, is a condition precedent, without which a vendee cannot maintain an equitable ejectment. The point was decided in Inman v. Kutz, 10 Watts, 90; a decision too well sustained by precedent and practice, to be shaken by the somewhat general expressions of Coulter J. in Hauberger v. Root, 5 Barr, 108. Our mixed jurisprudence certainly falls short in this particular, of the more formal administration of equity by bill and answer, which enables a purchaser to obtain a decision upon the equity of his case, without incurring the sacrifice of a premature, and perhaps useless payment. The effect of this difference of practice, may unquestionably be to enable the vendor to gain an advantage by the wrongful refusal of a tender, which it was his duty to accept; but the attempt made in the present instance to remedy the defect, by a verdict conditioned for payment within a specified period, leaves the plaintiff free, while binding the defendant, and thus deviates still more widely from the complete justice done by a decree in chancery, which is equally obligatory upon both parties. The verdict is consequently set aside, and judgment rendered for the defendant on the point reserved.

Opinions by Judge Sharswood.

COMMONWEALTH vs. ALLEN.

Dec. Term, 1855.

This was an action on the sheriff's official bond for not returning a f. fa. and for not selling goods levied on.

So far as the latter part of the complaint is concerned it was left to the jury to say upon the evidence whether the sheriff had proceeded and sold the goods levied on. They have in effect found by their verdict that the property sold was all that had been levied on, and that there was no liability on the sheriff on this ground.

As to the former part of the complaint the non-return of the writ, the fact was that at the time the plaintiff's suggestion was filed, the writ had not been returned although the sheriff had been ruled to do so, and the time fixed in the order of court had expired. It was left to the jury to say what damage the plaintiff had suffered, and the jury were instructed that if they thought he had suffered no damage they ought still to find for the plaintiff nominal damages. The plaintiff has no right to complain in this direction. It is true that the jury were instructed that the lease of the premises being a lease pur autre vie and not herefore, subject to be levied and sold under a f. fa. as personal property, was to be excluded from their consideration altogether. We see no error in this. If, as is clear, the sheriff was not bound in law to sell that interest on the f. fa., and indeed had no legal authority to do so, the plaintiff could have suffered no loss by his failure to do it, for which the sheriff could be made to respond in damages under the suggestion filed in this case.

As to the competency of the agent of the sheriff's deputy to testify in the case, it is within the principle well settled, that though an agent may be incompetent to relieve the principal from the consequences of his own negligence, persons employed by him and acting under his orders are. Their liability is too remote and contingent to affect their competency, nor could the verdict and judgment be given in evidence against them, which seems to be the principal ground on which the agent himself is held incompetent to testify in such a case.

Rule refused.

EVANS vs. BREBAN.

This was a sci. fa. in a mechanic's claim against James Breban, owner, and Charles Clements, contractor. Charles Clements was examined as a witness for plaintiff. He made himself no objection: nor was any objection made to his competency by the defendant, indeed none could be made. He was clearly competent. It came out, how ver, that Michael Scott was the real contractor for the building, and Clements only a sub-contractor, and it is now alleged upon this state of facts, he was interested in helping the plaintiff to recover from the building, as he thereby relieved himself from personal liability, nor would Breban have any claim now against him as he was not in privity with Breban but Scott. No motion, however, was made to strike out his testimony, the judge was not asked to exclude it from the jury, and it would be contrary to well settled principles to allow the objection now to avail the defendant, even if it were insuperable. It is enough to say that if made on the trial, the testimony of the witness, for aught we know to the contrary, might have been supplied from other sources. It is unnecessary, therefore, to express any opinion upon the abstract question of the competency of the witness.

Rule for new trial refused.

Supreme Court.

Opinion of WOODWARD, J., at Nisi Prius.

JAMES C. WHEEDEN vs. THE CAMDEN AND AMBOY RAILROAD AND TRANSPORTATION COM'Y.

A corporation is not per se a citizen within the meaning of the third section of the Constitution of the United States.

But when sued, if the governing officers, who are the substantial party, are citizens of the State which created the corporation, and the other party; is a citizen of another State, the Federal Courts have jurisdiction, and the cause is removable under the Act of 1789, called the Judiciary Act.

Motion to remove the record into the Circuit Court of the United States.

The Constitution of the United States (Art. III, sec. 2d) extends the judicial power of the Federal Union to various classes of cases, and, among others, to all cases in law and equity "between citizens of different States." The 11th section of the Act of Congress of 1789, commonly called the Judiciary Act, vests original cognizance in the Circuit Courts of all suits of a civil nature at common law or in equity, where the matter in dispute exceeds, exclusive of costs, five hundred dollars, and where "the suit is between a citizen of the State where the suit is brought and the citizen of another State;" and the 12th section provides that if a suit be commenced in a State Court by a citizen of the State in which the suit is brought against a citizen of another State, and the matter in dispute exceeds five hundred dollars, exclusive of costs, to be made to appear to the satisfaction of the Court, and the defendant shall, at the time of entering his appearance in such State Court, file a petition for the removal of the cause for trial into the next Circuit Court, to be held in the district where the suit is pending, and offer good and sufficient surety for his appearance in said Court, and entering special bail if necessary, "it shall then be the duty of the State Court to accept the surety, and proceed no further in the cause," but the same is to proceed in the Circuit Court of the United States, in the same manner as if it had been brought there by original process.

It will be observed that the legislative language, descriptive of the parties who may sue or remove into the Circuit Court, is a little more restricted than that employed in the Constitution, but if any difference of meaning be indicated by the difference in phraseology, it is unimportant in the case before me, for if this be a removable cause, it is because it is within the words of the Legislature, and of course within those of the Constitution.

What, then, is the case? James C. Wheeden brought suit in the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania against the Camden and Amboy Railroad and Transportation Company for the recovery of damages claimed to exceed five hundred dollars, and which resulted, it is understood, from the late calamity, well known as the "Burlington disaster." The Company, at the time of appearing, filed a petition, setting forth that they were a corporation solely created and established by laws of the State of New Jersey, and having their chief place of business within the State of New Jersey, and that the corporation was and is a citizen of said State, and that the plaintiff is a citizen of Pennsylvania. Security was tendered, and the removal of the cause into the Circuit Court was prayed for.

The plaintiff puts in an answer to the petition and alleges that the Company own property and transact a large part of their business in the city of Philadelphia. Several of the specifications in the plaintiff's answer are qualified and some of them contradicted by counter affidavits on the part of the Company; but I do not consider the facts alleged in the answer, whether disputed, qualified or admitted, as of much moment to the present inquiry, for the defendant being a corporation created by the Legislature of New Jersey, and having no vitality or existence save such as is derived from that source, cannot be, whatever their business transactions in this State, a citizen of Pennsylvania in any sense of either the Constitution or the Judiciary act. "That invisible, intangible and artificial being, that mere legal entity, a corporation aggregate," if capable of becoming a citizen of a State for any purpose, must be made so by the legislative power of the State. It is impossible that New Jersey should make a citizen of Pennsylvania even of a natural person, much less of an artificial. And if the legislative faculty of that State is incompetent for this purpose, a corporation existing solely by her will, cannot make itself a citizen of Pennsylvania. No amount of business carried on, or property held here, can naturalize such a corporation. Its rights amongst us are permissive merely, resting entirely in the absence of prohibitory legislation. That we regard every corporation "not holding its charter under the laws of this Commonwealth" as foreign, may be seen by reference to the 3d section of our act of Assembly of 21st March, 1849, (Brightly's Purdon, 169) which provides that suit may be brought against "any such foreign corporation" by process served upon "any officer, agent, or engineer of such corporation, either personally or by copy, or by leaving a certified copy at the office, depot, or usual place of business of said corporation." It was under this act of Assembly the present defendant was sued, as a foreign corporation. The answer does not allege any legislative recognition by Pennsylvania of this corporation defendant, and, therefore, if all that is alleged were admitted, it would not be a step in the process of proving a Pennsylvania citizenship for it. We subject it to suit through its agents when they are found here, and we seize in execution of our judgments any property it may have within our borders; but in no sense or degree can it ever become a local institution, except by express legislative recognition.

But further. If the facts alleged in the answer are insufficient to prove a Pennsylvania citizenship, so also do they fail to disprove this corporation a citizen of New Jersey, and, to borrow the language of Ch. J. Taney, in Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 13 Peters, 5838, it must dwell in the place of its creation and cannot migrate into another sovereignty. But as natural persons, through the intervention of agents, are continually making contracts in countries in which they do not reside, and where they are not personally present when the contract is made, so may this artificial person, by its agents, make contracts within the scope of its limited powers in a sovereignty in which it does not reside, provided such contracts are permitted to be made by the laws of the place.

And as the natural person does not transfer his citizenship from one sovereignty to another by such dealings, neither does the artificial. Nor do such dealings constitute, for either the natural person or the corporation, a double citizenship, one in the place of the domicile, and another where business is carried on through agencies.

It is obviously proper, therefore, for me to lay out of view, in the further consideration of this case, all the business arrangements and transactions which the answer charges the Company with maintaining in Pennsylvania. A foreign corporation doing business in this State, becomes not thereby a citizen of Pennsylvania, and loses not any citizenship it may have in the State of its creation.

But still the question remains, is this Company a citizen of New Jersey? Incorporated solely by that State, doing business therein, its principal officers resident there, and its railroad, the great instrument of all its operations, lying wholly in that State, this Company is a citizen of New Jersey in so far as an artificial being can become such. If any Company can be, in one sense of the Constitution, a citizen of a sovereign State, the Camden and Amboy Railroad Company is a citizen of New Jersey, and the plaintiff being confessedly a citizen of Pennsylvania, the jurisdiction of the Circuit Court would follow as a necessary consequence. The suit might have been brought in that Court in the first instance, and is removable there at the instance of the defendant.

But can a corporation be a citizen? For general purposes it is impossible. The rights and privileges guaranteed to citizens in the Federal Constitution are inconsistent with the nature, properties and purposes of corporations. Take, for instance, that provision of the IVth article, "that the citizens of each State shall be entitled to all privileges and immunities of citizens of the several States." If corporations created by State authority were held to be within the provision, their rights and powers would no longer be measured by the grants of their charters, but by the constitutional rights of an American freeman; they would overrun State lines, seize upon political power, and ultimately devour one another.

The framers of the Federal Constitution were well acquainted with corporations. They existed in England and in several of the States, and whilst no power to create them was expressly delegated to Congress, no restraint was imposed on the power of the States to multiply them indefinitely. They were left out of the federative system altogether, and that, doubtless, by design, and on good reason, and not by accident. So was the word citizen well understood, as it is now understood, to mean a human being—a natural person, capable of acting, contracting, suing and being sued without legislative aid—a person of whom allegiance is predicable, and who may be guilty of treason. In all these points, and many others, corporations are distinguishable from citizens, and no body of men probably were ever assembled on earth who understood the distinction better, or were more capable of expressing their thoughts accurately, than the framers of the Constitution of the United States. When they used the word citizen to define the character of the parties who might resort to the judicial power of the Union, did they then mean corporations? The received rules of interpretation would require us to understand the same word in the same sense throughout the instrument, if not controlled in certain places by the context, and if the word citizen, when used in the IVth article, did not include corporations, how, it might be asked, can it be construed in the IIIrd article to embrace them? There is nothing in the context of either article to impart a shade of meaning to the word different from the common understanding of its sense. It would seem to me to mean the same thing in both articles, and in both to mean natural and not artificial persons.

For these reasons, and others which it is not worth while to take time to state, I should be very apt, if the questions were new, to reach the conclusions so repeatedly stated and ably defended by the dissentient members of the Supreme Court of the United States, where cases involving the question have been before that tribunal; but sitting here as a Judge in a State Court, I am not to follow dissenting opinions, nor, on a Constitutional question, my own ideas of the meaning of the organic law, but am to take the instrument in the sense in which it is received by the majority of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Among the judicial tribunals of the country, if not in other departments and places, that Court is the supreme and final arbiter of questions under the federal Constitution. The respect entertained for the members of that Bench makes that duty of following them, on a Constitutional question, easy and pleasant, which the theory of the government makes imperative.

In the case of the Bank of the United States vs. Deveaux, 5 Cranch, 61, decided in 1809, the record contained an averment that the plaintiffs were citizens of the State of Pennsylvania, and that the defendants were citizens of Georgia. The defendants pleaded to the jurisdiction that the body corporate was not competent to sue in the Circuit Court of the United States. The Supreme Court overruled the plea, and sustained the jurisdiction, not on the ground that corporations were citizens, for this Chief Justice Marshall most emphatically denied, but on the ground that the members of the corporation, who were natural persons, and the substantial parties on the record, were citizens of Pennsylvania, and the Court felt itself authorized to look to the character of the individuals composing the corporation, for the purpose of sustaining a jurisdiction which had been often exercised without question.

In Sullivan vs. The Fulton Steamboat Company, — Wheaton, 450, the defendants were described as a corporate body, incorporated by the Legislature of New York, and it was held that the Court had not jurisdiction.

The Bank of Vicksburg vs. Slocomb, 14 Peters, 60. Here a Mississippi corporation was sued by a citizen of Louisiana, and the successful plea to the jurisdiction was that two of the corporators were citizens of Louisiana.

That plea, admitted by the demurrer, was held sufficient to oust the jurisdiction. This case interprets that of the Bank vs. Deveaux, where Ch. J. Marshall ruled that the Court would look beyond the charter to the members of the corporation, but he did not define what was meant by members—whether corporators merely, or official and governing members. Taking the two cases together, the doctrine is that, if all the corporators are citizens of the State from which the charter of incorporation is obtained, the corporation may be sued in the Circuit Court by a citizen of another State; but if any of them are citizens of the State to which the plaintiff belongs, jurisdiction is denied. This case, in 14 Peters, also rules what has been admitted in subsequent cases, that the act of Congress of 28th February, 1839, wrought no change in the jurisdiction of the Circuit Courts as respects the character of parties.

The doctrine deduced from these two cases (Deveaux's and Slocomb's) is in exact accordance with that laid down by Chancellor Kent, as the result of all the authorities (1 Com. 378,) and by Judge Story, in the Bank of Cumberland vs. Willis & Sumner, 472. In this case, a Bank incorporated by the State of Maine, sued a customer, who was a citizen of Massachusetts, and was turned out of the Circuit Court because a citizen of Boston was the owner of ten shares of the capital stock of the Bank.

See also 1 Peters, 238; 3 Dallas, 382; 4 Dallas, 708, and 3 Crom. 267.

I come now to the case of the Louisville Railroad Company vs. Letrom, 2 Howard, 497. Letrom, a citizen of New York, sued in the Circuit Court of the United States for the district of South Carolina, the Louisville, Cincinnati and Charleston Railroad Company, a corporation created by and transacting business in the State of South Carolina. The jurisdiction was objected to on several grounds.

1st. That all the members of said corporation were not citizens of South Carolina, but that two of them were citizens of North Carolina.

2d. That South Carolina herself was a member of said corporation.

3d. That the Bank of Charleston, another South Carolina corporation, was a member of the corporation sued, and that two citizens of New York were members of the said Banking corporation.

4th. That the Charleston Insurance and Trust Company was also a member of the corporation sued, and that three members of said Trust Company were citizens of New York.

These objections were all overruled, the cause tried, and judgment rendered by the Circuit Court for the plaintiff, and the judgment affirmed in the Supreme Court, after arguments by counsel, which are remarkable for their fulness and ability.

Mr. Justice Wayne delivered the opinion of the Supreme Court, and after reviewing and limiting the effect of prior decisions, indicated the ground on which the decision in this case was altogether rested by the following language: "It is, that a corporation created by and doing business in a particular State, is to be deemed, to all intents and purposes, as a person, although an artificial person, an inhabitant of the same State. For the purposes of its incorporation, capable of being treated as a citizen of that State as much as a natural person. Like a citizen, it makes contracts, and though, in regard to what it may do in some particulars, it differs from a natural person, and in this especially, the manner in which it can sue and be sued, it is substantially within the meaning of the law a citizen of the State which created it, and where its business is done, for all the purposes of suing and being sued."

Here, it will be observed, there was no looking beyond the charter to fix the citizenship of the members. Incorporation by and doing business in a particular State constitute citizenship "for all the purposes of suing and being sued." These words seem to be added by way of qualification, but when it is considered that the Constitution add Act of Congress use the word citizen in connection with the judicial powers of the Courts only for the purpose of defining who may sue and be sued, it is apparent that the words of the learned judge are no qualification of the constitutional and legislative rule.

The next case is Marshall vs. the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, 16 Howard, 314—a suit by a citizen of Virginia against a corporation which was described as a "body corporate by an act of the General Assembly of Maryland," and without any averment as to the place of business or residence of officers or corporators. The jurisdiction of the Circuit Court was affirmed in the Supreme Court by an opinion of Grier, Justice, who cited with approbation Letrom's case, and the opinion of Mr. Justice Catron, in Rundle vs. the Delaware and Raritan Canal Company, 14 Peters, 80.

The point of distinction between Letrom's case and that of Marshall is, that in the former it was averred of record that the corporation was doing business in the State which created it; in the latter it was not. In the former the language of the Judge implies that the corporation, in its artificial and legal character, is to be regarded as a citizen for purposes of suit; in the latter, that the officers, who are "curators," or trustees of the corporation, are the substantial party in a suit, and that their residence and citizenship determines the jurisdiction. In this respect, the opinion in Marshall's case is coincident with what Catron, Justice, said, in Rundle vs. the Canal Company.

"My opinion is, and long has been," said the learned Judge, "that the Mayor and Aldermen of a city corporation, or the President and Directors of a bank, or of a railroad company (and of other similar corporations), are the true parties that sue and are sued as trustees and representatives of the constantly changing stockholders. If the President and Directors are citizens of the State where the corporation was created, and the other party to the suit is a citizen of a different State, or a citizen or subject of a foreign government, then the Courts of the United States can exercise jurisdiction under the third article of the Constitution. In this sense I understood Letrom's case, and assented to it when the decision was made; and so it is understood now."

These views were repeated by Judge Catron, in a dissenting opinion, in Marshall's case, and his dissent in that case was rested on the ground that there was no averment on record of the citizenship of the President and Directors. According to Mr. Justice Grier, speaking for the majority, this is to be inferred from an averment of the act of incorporation.

If Letrom's case is to be received as Judge Catron understood it, the result of all the cases, the earlier taken in connection with the modern, may be stated thus:

1. A corporation is not per se a citizen within the meaning of the third article of the Constitution.

2. But when it sues or is sued, the governing officers, by whatever name called, are the substantial party, and if they are citizens of the State which created the corporation, and the other party is a citizen of another State, the Federal Courts have jurisdiction.

This is according to Judge Marshall's principle, of looking beyond the charter to the citizenship of members of the corporation, but it defines the members to be looked to differently from what was done in the Vicksburg Bank vs. Slocomb. It is no longer the stockholders or corporators in general, but the President and Directors, to whose citizenship the Court will look.

This rapid review of the cases is sufficient to show that, if the question before me had arisen whilst the doctrine obtained in the Supreme Court, which was expounded in the Vicksburg Bank case, the fact alleged here, and not controverted, that some of the stockholders of the Camden and Amboy Company are residents in, and citizens of, Pennsylvania, would be decisive against the jurisdiction of the Circuit Court. That doctrine passed into the text of Chancellor Kent and other writers, and many cases were ruled upon it. It was nevertheless subject to serious objection, as may be seen by the criticisms of counsel and judges in subsequent cases, and particularly in Letrom's case. Whether the doctrine that was substituted for it will not be found more objectionable, and the Court be brought to the broad ground of declaring either that corporations, as such, are citizens, within the meaning of the Constitution, or that they are not citizens, and cannot be parties to litigation in the Federal Courts, are subjects not fit for present speculation, and which must await the developments of judicial history.

My present duty is to apply the law as I find it settled now. And, as I understand it, the fact that some of the stockholders of the Company reside in the same State as the plaintiff, is a circumstance of no importance whatever. Though they may be affected by the judgment in the case, they are not to be considered parties to the record. The President and Directors are the substantial parties sued, under the shadow of the corporate name, and I am to presume them citizens of New Jersey, because it is shown that the Company was incorporated by that State, and is doing business therein. Nor is that presumption rebutted by their holding property and transacting business through agencies in Pennsylvania. The jurisdiction of the Circuit Court results, therefore, out of the citizenship of these governing members of the corporation.

Under the act of Congress, it is to be made to appear to the satisfaction of this Court, that the matter in dispute exceeds five hundred dollars, exclusive of costs. An affidavit to that effect is appended to the petition of the Company, which, though objected to, I deem sufficient, and I also consider the surety offered "good and sufficient."

It is therefore ordered that the prayer of the petitioner be granted, that the security be accepted, and that this Court will proceed no further in the cause.

Let a like order be entered in the case of Thomas Finlay, and against the same defendants.

Opinions by Lewis, C. J.

Philadelphia, January 7, 1856.

BROWN et al. vs. POWELL et al.

Error to C. P. of Erie County.

The supplement of April 7, 1849, does not repeal the proviso in the Act of 26 January, 1849, relating to Turnpike and Plank road companies, which declares, "that no property shall be taken until the owners are previously paid for or adequate security given for the same." A tenant for years notwithstanding a license from his landlord to the company, may maintain an action of trespass against the company, where proceedings required by the act have not been had, and recover for the injury to his estate.

Judgment affirmed.

WILLIAM SHOW vs. M. W. IRWIN.

Error to C. P. Fayette County.

On a verdict for defendant in Partition on the plea of non tenent in se, costs are not recoverable. Sec. 3 Act of April 11, 1835, does not apply to a case, in which the plaintiff is thus found to have no interest.

Judgment reversed and judgment for plaintiff in error on point reserved.

Error to Butler C. P.

In an action upon a claim due Eyth individually. A debt due defendant by the firm of Eyth & Wallace, (Wallace being dead) cannot be set off—Eyth had the right to appropriate his separate estate to pay separate creditors to the exclusion of partnership creditors, although after the death of Wallace, Eyth and Walker were, at law, the sole debtors of each other.

Judgment affirmed.

SMITH vs. HOOD & CO.

Error to C. P. of Greene Co.

Judgment was entered by mistake for an amount different from that specified in the Bond and warrant of attorney. Held, there was no error in permitting it to be amended so as to correspond with these. Such an amendment must of course not be permitted to prejudice the rights of third persons.

Judgment affirmed.

LINTON vs. HART.

Error to D. C. of Allegheny Co.

Upon a sale by a reversioner of a part of the reversion. Rent is thereby apportioned and no act of the vendee of the reversion can affect the relation of landlord and tenant as to part unsold. Where a railroad company had taken and paid the reversioner for part of the leased premises, the rent for the whole was not thereby suspended. The tenant has an ample remedy against the company for injury to his rights, without depriving his landlord of the just portion of rent due for the premises enjoyed under the lease, the entry of the company does not suspend the rent of the part unsold.

Judgment reversed and sci. fa. de novo.

JOHN F. WRIGHT'S APPEAL.

Where a sheriff's vendee pays part of the purchase money and then fails to complete the payment, and a resale is had. If the loss on the resale exceeds the sum so paid by the first vendee, the sum may be distributed among lien creditors as proceeds of sale. Such vendee is entitled to be heard but must make application at the proper time and demand an issue.

Decree affirmed.

McNEILL vs. HOLBROOK.

Error to C. P. of Somerset County.

The filing in the Common Pleas of the transcript from Orphans' Court, of the amount appearing to be due by an executor does not take away the jurisdiction of the Orphans' Court. The account of three executors, Holbrook being one, was confirmed and transcript filed. The Orphans' Court afterwards discharged him, directing him to pay over to his co-executors, all monies of the estate. Held, that a legatee could not maintain an action upon the transcript against Holbrook, the discharged executor.

Judgment affirmed.

U. S. Marshal's Sale.

By virtue of a writ of sale by the Hon. JOHN K. KANE, Judge of the District Court of the United States in and for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, to me directed, will be sold at Public Sale, to the highest and best bidder, for CASH, at M. THOMAS & SONS' Auction Rooms, Nos. 67 and 69 South Fourth street, in the City of Philadelphia, on TUESDAY, January 15, 1856, at 10 o'clock, A. M., six boxes of merchandise, consisting of Beaverteens, Genoa Cords, Cloths, Velveteens, Cassimers, Checks, Linens, Vestings, Pantaloon, &c., &c., &c., imported in the Ship Tuscarora from Liverpool, and condemned as forfeited according to law.

A MERITORIOUS CARD.

Hail! honored age of grand progression,
While each one clings to his profession,
And science moves with onward motion,
To suit each wayward thought and notion.
Bringing to light some new invention,
More strange than modern wit can mention,
Or Genius paint with true endeavor,
Though making graphic strides forever,
While Reason urges proud Ambition.
To strive for wondrous Competition;
Yet, in this age of glorious Art,
We can the need of praise impart.
When meritorious efforts claim
A modest puff to gild the name:
And thus we call, with honest pride,
Attention to the Painter's side,—
A man who bravely knows his calling,
Whose works are worthy of extolling,
A model Artist of the day,
And most obliging in his way,
GEORGE H. BANCROFT,—mark the name,
In CHESTNUT STREET you'll find the same,
Call at Five Hundred and Thirty-One,
You'll get the best of painting done,
In Modern or in Classic Order,
From templed shrine to parlor border,
In magic tints of every hue,
To Signs embossed in gold and blue,
Or Figure Head, or Church, or Steeple,
He is resolved to please the people,
And whether foe, or friend or neighbor,
Will charge but moderate for his labor.
We thus invite each one and all,
To give this worthy man a call.
Who will, we venture to engage,
Feel grateful for your patronage.*

* We would particularly invite public attention to our friend Mr. BANCROFT, who is a young, enterprising beginner, and who has gone to vast expense in fitting up his establishment, and is now ready to receive orders for Painting, in all its various branches, at 531 and 533 Chestnut street, 5 doors east of Seventeenth st.

Book VI. Legal Relations of Homicide. Fœticide and Infanticide. A. Elementary Definitions. B. Corpus Delicti. C. Intent and Design. From what to be Inferred.

The following valuable opinions of the work have been received by Judge Catron of the U. S. Supreme Court.

"Hardly a stronger guaranty could be afforded to the American Bar that the work has merit, than the fact that Mr. Wharton was author of the legal portion of the book."
JOHN CATRON.

From Professor Parsons of the Cambridge Law School.

"I have not had time to examine it critically, but have read enough to convince me that it is an instructive and valuable work. Some of its topics, which are quite new in a book on this subject, are shown to be among the most important."
THEOPHILUS PARSONS.

From Judge McLean of the U. S. Supreme Court.

"I have not had time to look minutely through the volume, but from the known ability of the authors, and their experience, I am sure the book must be very interesting and useful, not only to the profession of the law, but also to general readers. A modern treatise of this kind, embodying the experience of jurists and medical men, with decisions of courts, was much wanted; and I am satisfied that abler pens than those employed, could not have been engaged in its production."
JOHN MCLEAN.

REPORTS OF THE COMMON LAW COURTS OF ENGLAND.

Containing the cases decided in the Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Nisi Prius Courts, from 1813 to 1855, and in the Court of Exchequer and Exchequer Chamber, from 1824 to 1855, are found in

The Regular and Authoritative Series of the English Common Law and English Exchequer Reports,

Which present the following claims to the support of the profession:

1. They are the only series issued as the authoritative and acknowledged medium by which the decisions of the Law Courts of England are made public.

2. They contain Later Reports than the Boston series, are more fully and more ably reported, and so arranged by preservation of the original paging, that reference by reporters, or by elementary writers, can be traced as readily as in the English editions.

Vol. 2, Ellis & Blackburne's (75 E. C. L. R.,) Reports (Q. B.) to January, 1854, was published by us in June, 1854. At that time the last Queen's Bench case printed in the Boston Law and Equity Reports, was of June 25, 1853. Our volume contained cases decided five months later. The Queen's Bench cases to November 25, 1853, were published in the Boston series in August, 1854, two months after we had distributed the same cases.

Vol. 3, Ellis & Blackburne, (77 E. C. L. R.,) with cases to the end of Trinity Term, 1854, was published when the latest case of Queen's Bench decisions in the Boston series, was of February 8, 1854, more than four months behind the regular reporters.

Exchequer Reports, vol. 9, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) distributed by us January 11, 1855, contains cases to May 10, 1854. The last Exchequer case then in the Boston series was decided February 9, 1854, four months behind the regular Reporter, issued in Philadelphia.

3. They contain more cases decided by the courts represented, than any other series issued in this country.

Vol. 77 English Common Law, (3 E. & B.,) reports eighty-six cases decided in the Queen's Bench since January 11, 1854, while but fifty-eight Queen's Bench cases, decided since January 1, 1854, are found scattered among Vols. 22, 24 and 25 of the Boston Law and Equity.

Vol. 78 E. C. L. K. (5 J. Scott,) reports sixty-five cases decided since Nov. 13, 1853, in the Common Pleas, while the L. & E. has but fifty-seven cases in that Court since the same period.

Vol. 9 Exchequer Reports, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) reports one hundred and ten cases in the Courts of Exchequer, decided since June 24, 1853, while since the same date, the L. & E. report but 107 cases, scattered through vols. 20, 22, 24 and 25.

4. They are almost exclusively cited in argument of counsel, and referred to by Elementary Writers for Law Authorities. See Smith's Leading Cases, Smith's Contracts, Smith's Landlord and Tenant, by Maude; Byles on Bills and Promissory Notes, Broom's Legal Maxims, Broom's Commentaries on the Laws of England, or almost any recent Law Book issued in England.

5. The Philadelphia Reports are edited by Judge Sharwood and by Judge Hare, whose labors as editors and authors have made them so well and so favorably known to the profession.

6. The Boston Law and Equity is made up in this country from the Law Journal, Jurist, Times and other Law periodicals, of a weekly, monthly, or quarterly character, and being unknown in England, is never cited in Court, or referred to by Law writers. The periodicals from which it is extracted, are occasionally cited under their own particular names, but they do not possess that permanent value, even in England, which is all-important in a series of Reports.

A carefully prepared and accurate Annual Digest of all the cases decided by the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Exchequer, will be distributed, early in each year, to subscribers to either series, free of charge. That for 1854 is ready, and will be mailed to subscribers who have not received a copy.

IN PRESS AND IN PREPARATION.

English Law and Equity Reports.

ENGLISH REPORTS IN LAW AND EQUITY. A Complete Collection of the Cases decided by the House of Lords, the Privy Council, the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas and Exchequer, the Lord Chancellor, the High Court of Appeal in Chancery, the Court of Criminal Appeal, and the Admiralty and Ecclesiastical Courts. Reprinted within a few weeks after the decisions are rendered.

This series has the merit of being complete, reliable, prompt, convenient, and cheap. It is now universally cited in the courts, and referred to in the recent law books as standard authority. All the cases reported in England, are here reprinted from the most reliable sources, as soon as they reach this country.

These Reports are now regularly digested in our Annual United States Digest, which thus embraces an annual digest of the whole English and American Law.

We have now in Preparation, and shall soon Publish,

A separate Digest of these Reports, embracing the first thirty-one volumes of the series, prepared with express reference to the convenience of the American profession, and exhibiting a complete synopsis of all the English Decisions reported in those volumes during the last five years; also a Table of Cases referring to all the contemporaneous English Reports. This will be the first Digest of English Decisions prepared expressly for the American Lawyer, and it is intended to give it the same advantages over the English Digests hitherto reprinted in this country, which the American text books have generally been found to possess over the English.

The Law and Equity Reports will be continued on the same plan as heretofore; the number of volumes being reduced to four per year; and Digests will be published from time to time as the convenience of the profession demands.

Vols. 1 to 31, now ready for delivery, at $3 00 per volume.

Opinions by Judge Knox.

DUNKLE v. COOK, et al.

January 11, 1856.

Error to Common Pleas of Clarion County.

The plaintiff below claimed $25 damages for the destruction of his sheep by defendant's dog. Referees were appointed, who awarded plaintiff $11, upon which judgment was entered. Defendant appealed to the Court of Common Pleas, which appeal was dismissed, and this writ of error brought to reinstate it.

Sec. 3, Act of 22d March, 1814, gives to either party the right to an appeal, where the judgment given by a justice or alderman exceeds $5 33, or upon award of referees in trespass or trover, where it exceeds $20.

The literal reading of this section, would give to either party the right to appeal, when the judgment upon award of referees exceeds $20, and not otherwise. Thus, if the plaintiff's demand was for one hundred dollars, and the judgment was for one dollar, the letter of the statute would not give an appeal; but if his demand was for twenty-five dollars, and his judgment for twenty-four dollars standing upon the letter above, his right to appeal could not have been gained, while in no case could the defendant appeal, if the judgment on the award did not exceed twenty dollars. The injustice of such a statutory provision was so manifest, and its inconsistency so obvious, that the legislative intent was sought for beyond a literal reading. It was clear that the intention of the legislature was to preserve the right of appeal, where the adjudications had been substantially against the party, in a sum exceeding twenty dollars on award, or five dollars and thirty-three cents by the justice alone. And to carry out the intention, it was decided by this Court soon after the passage of the Act of 1814, that where the plaintiff's claim exceeded five dollars and thirty-three cents, and the judgment of the justice was for the defendant, the plaintiff had the right of appeal. Stewart v. Keemle, 4 S. & R. 71; but where the plaintiff's claim in trover was for fifty dollars damages, and the referees awarded in his favor eleven dollars, it was held the defendant could not appeal. Ulrich v. Larkey, 8 S. & R. 285. All of the subsequent cases, either under the Act of 1814 or that of 1810, have been in accordance with the principle above stated, that is to say, if the judgment is through the intervention of referees, and the plaintiff's demand as set forth on the docket, has been reduced more than twenty dollars, he is entitled to an appeal, although the judgment may be for less than that sum. If the judgment is for more than twenty dollars, the defendant can appeal; but when it is for less, he cannot, except in cases under the Act of 1810, where a bona fide set off has been made, and the amount which is adjudged against the party, including the set-off, is greater than twenty dollars. 12 S. & R. 385; 1d. 388; 3 P. R. 120; 9 Watts, 17; 2 W. & S. 204.

So stood the law until the passage of the Act of 20th March, 1845, which provided, "That the right to appeal from judgments of Aldermen and Justices of the Peace, and from their judgment on award of referees, should be extended to defendants in all cases wherein by existing laws, the right of appeal is enjoyed by plaintiffs." Under this Act it was held, 1 Jones, 410, that where a plaintiff in an action of trespass, obtained judgment before an alderman for five dollars, upon a claim of damages of twenty-five dollars; that either the plaintiff or defendant was entitled to an appeal. This Act gives to the defendant an appeal where the plaintiff may have one, but it does not extend the plaintiff's right; and there is no case to be found in our Reports, where the plaintiff has been allowed an appeal from a judgment entered by a justice of the peace or an alderman upon an award of referees, unless he has lost taking his demand as the standard of his right, more than twenty dollars.

In the case under consideration, the judgment is for eleven dollars; the defendant had no right to appeal, unless he derived this right from the Act of 1845. And as the plaintiff's demand was only reduced fourteen dollars, he could not have appealed, and consequently the Act of March 20, 1845, has no bearing upon the case. Judgment affirmed.

MAGAW v. GARRETT.

Error to Common Pleas of Mercer County.

Garrett & Magaw owned land as tenants in common, and were partners under firm of J. P. G. & Co., in a Furnace upon it. One Mills agreed to take Magaw's place in the business, and Magaw, by deed of March 8, 1844, conveyed his interest in the land to Mills, for $1000, for which he took a bond and warrant, on which judgment was entered same day. On the same day Mills & Garrett joined in a mortgage to Magaw for $20,000, conditioned to keep him harmless from the firm debts of J. P. G. & Co., which was recorded March 8th, 1848. And on the same day a judgment for $1000, J. J. Pearson v. Garrett, was entered of record. Subsequently, Mills conveyed his interest in the land to Garrett, subject to these several incumbrances.

On January 28, 1849, judgment for $1400 was obtained by Faber upon a debt due by J. P. Garrett & Co., and upon execution, other real estate of Garrett was sold and purchased by J. J. Pearson for $1100; the purchase money was applicable to the Pearson judgment, but no formal application was made of it, and the judgment remained unsatisfied of record. Faber then sold the mortgaged premises under his execution, and purchased at the sale, and as terre tenants resist this action on the mortgage of $20,000.

On the ground that the mortgage was not prior to all other liens, and was discharged by the sheriff's sale.

The Court held, that as it did not appear that the mortgage was for purchase money, the lien of the judgments was equal to the mortgage, and the mortgage as to the moiety covered by the judgment of Mills to Magaw, was unquestionably discharged by the sale. And as respected the Pearson judgment, the judge says, "How stands the case of the Pearson judgment? The record showed this to be a subsisting lien, neither paid nor satisfied. It is said that the money made upon the sale of Garrett's individual real estate, together with prior payments of interest made by him, sufficed to extinguish the judgment. But had the purchaser of the mortgage previous notice of its payment? He knew that a fund had been raised from the sale of Garrett's property, which was in the hands of the law; but even if appropriated to the Pearson judgment, it was insufficient to satisfy it, and the legal effect of the sale upon the mortgage, was the same if any portion of the judgment was unpaid.

That a purchaser at sheriff's sale is protected by the Recording Act, was decided in Pennsylvania as early as 1809, in the case of Hiester v. Fortner, 2 Binney, 46, and reaffirmed as late as 1853, in Stewart v. Freeman, 10th Harris, 120. The record, in the absence of any notice to the contrary, is for him a safe guide, and he cannot be affected by evidence outside of it, of which he had no notice. One about to purchase real estate at public or private sale, is not bound to make further inquiry as to existence of incumbrances, than what he may learn from the public records. A secret lien will not be enforced against the estate in the hands of a bona fide purchaser, without notice, and by parity of reasoning, payments of which he had no notice, by record or otherwise, ought not to be used to prevent the sheriff's sale from divesting the lien of a mortgage. As the record showed the Pearson judgment at the time of the sheriff's sale to be a subsisting lien, equal in point of time with the mortgage, and as there was no evidence tending to prove notice to the purchaser of its entire payment. The estate passed into the hands of the sheriff; vendee discharged from the lien of the mortgage.

KENNEDY v. THE PLANK ROAD Co.

January 11, 1856.

Error to Common Pleas of Erie County.

The plaintiff had executed a release to defendants in writing in the usual form, for the passage of the Plank Road through his farm.

Having brought suit against them, he offered on the trial to show by the agent of the Company who procured the release, that he had signed it upon the express condition that the Plank Road was made on a certain route, which he offered to prove had not been done, and that this condition had been reported to the Meeting of the Board of Directors. Held, That the testimony offered, would not only have altered by diminishing the effect of the written instrument, but it would have also contradicted it, and was clearly inadmissible, and was properly rejected.

It was not alleged that there had been either a fraud perpetrated, or mistake committed in the transaction, unless the fraud could be inferred from the refusal of the Company to permit the parol agreement to be used to do away with the release; or the mistake established by a misconception of the plaintiff as to the legal effect of his parol reservation. That to stand upon the rules of law is no fraud, and that a mistake in the existence of such rules cannot be relieved from, needs neither argument nor authority to prove. Judgment affirmed.

Opinion by Judge Woodward.

WALIER vs. SAMPLE.

Error to Allegheny County.

This was an action on the case for malicious prosecution, and the only question presented by the record is whether the court were right in instructing the jury "That the opinion of private counsel cannot amount to proof of probable cause unless the facts clearly warrant it and were correctly stated?"

Ever since the case of Farmer vs. Darling, 4 Burr, 1971, it has been held that malice either express or implied, and the want of probable cause, must both concur to support actions of this nature. The presumption of law is that every public prosecution is founded on probable cause, and the burthen is therefore, in the first instance on the plaintiff, but when he has submitted evidence of want of probable cause, or of circumstances from which a violent presumption would arise, that it was wanting, the burthen of proof is shifted on to the defendant, and then it is competent for him to show that he acted under professional advice. To make this defence available he must show that he submitted all the facts which he knew were capable of proof, fairly to his counsel and that he acted bona fide upon the advice given. This proved, he negatives, if not the malice, the want of probable cause. I accede to the proposition, said Bailey, J., in Ravenger vs. McIntosh, 2 B. & C. 693, that if a party lays all the facts of his case fairly before counsel and acts bona fide upon the opinion given by the counsel (however erroneous that opinion may be) he is not liable to an action of this description, see the cases recited in 2 Saunderson's Pleading and Ev. p. 659 to 660. (Marginal.) In Summer vs. Wille, 4 S. & R. 24. Judge Duncan plainly intimated his opinion that such evidence would be a defence to the action as negating the imputation of malice, and in the case of Hall vs. Smith, 7 Leg. Int. 7, the District Court of Philadelphia treated such evidence as an answer to the imputation both of malice and want of probable cause, between which, it was said, there is no difference in the consideration of a matter of this kind.

The opinion of Rogers J., at Nisi Prius in the case of LeMaistre vs. Hunter, Brightly's Reports, 498, which seems to have been the authority followed by the court below, is not, when taken altogether, in conflict with the current of authorities. The facts are not given in reference to which he charged the jury in this language. "In conformity to a point put by counsel for the plaintiff, I instruct you that the opinion of private counsel of a prosecution, cannot amount to proof of a probable cause, nor prevent a recovery unless the facts clearly warrant it and are correctly stated. Even the application to counsel and their opinion, in order to be available in the establishment of probable cause, must not be resorted to as a mere cover for the prosecution, but must be the result of an honest and fair purpose and the statement must be fair and full and consistent with that purpose."

This is no more than a statement of the general rule with its necessary qualifications. Nevertheless the words, "unless the facts clearly warrant it," found both in Judge Rogers' opinion and that under review, are ill chosen because liable to misapplication. "Unless the facts clearly warrant" what? the opinion of counsel or the prosecution? Whichever be the antecedent intended, it is apparent that these words would make the defence depend for its value wholly on the soundness of the legal opinion. If the facts must clearly warrant the legal opinion, that to be a defence must be the very judgment of the law on the facts; if the merits clearly warrant the prosecution then the defence is complete without the professional opinion, and thus either way it goes for nothing. No matter how candidly and faithfully a prosecutor has submitted the facts to his legal adviser, or followed his advice, if they turn out insufficient for the support of the prosecution he is liable in an action of malicious prosecution.

On this principle every acquittal of a defendant would be followed by such an action. A qualification of the rule in terms like these destroys the rule itself.

The law is not so. Professors of the law are the proper advisers of men in doubtful circumstances and their advice when fairly obtained exempts the party who acts upon it from the imputation of proceeding maliciously and without probable cause. It may be erroneous but the client is not responsible for the error. He is not the insurer of his lawyer. Whether the facts amount to probable cause is the very question submitted to counsel in such cases, and when the client is instructed that they do, he has taken all the precaution demanded of a good citizen.

To manifest the good faith of the party it is important that he should resort to a professional adviser of competency and integrity. He is not, in the language of Judge Rogers, to make such a resort "a mere cover for the prosecution," but when he has done his whole duty in the premises he is not to be made liable because the facts did not clearly warrant the advice and prosecution.

The testimony here was that Sample stated the facts of the case, and there is no suggestion on the record that they were not fairly stated. Suppression, evasion or falsehood would make him liable, but if fairly submitted, and if the advice obtained was followed in good faith, he had a defence to the action and the court should have given him the benefit of it.

In the District Court.

Opinion by Judge Stroud.

FRANCIS S. CARRUTH vs. NATHAN MIDDLETON & ALLEN MIDDLETON,

CO-PARTNERS TRADING AS N. & A. MIDDLETON.

John W. Middleton made, in this city, a promissory note, dated February 22, 1853, in these words: "On the 10th day of December next, for value received, I promise to pay to N. & A. Middleton, seven thousand five hundred dollars, payable and negotiable without defalcation at the Bank of Pennsylvania." Upon this note are the following endorsements,

N. & A. MIDDLETON, Pay to the order of CHAS. ABERT, R. J. WALKER, CHAS. ABERT, WARD, BROTHERS & Co.

The plaintiff brought suit against the defendants, the payees, as endorsers and declared upon this note in five different counts in assumpsit. In the first and second counts, although the defendants are declared against as endorsers, are said to have endorsed and delivered the note—in the first count, to the plaintiff directly—and on the second, to R. J. Walker. Yet there is no averment of presentment for payment to the maker in either of these counts, but the presentment is laid to have been made to the defendants themselves.

The third and fourth counts aver presentment for payment at the Bank of Pennsylvania, "but that neither the said Bank of Pennsylvania, nor the said John W. Middleton," (the maker) nor any person on his behalf did or would, then or at any other time make payment, &c.

All the common counts are added.

On the trial a verdict was taken for the plaintiff for $8341 37, "subject to the opinion of the court, whether the plaintiff can maintain the action in his own name upon the note sued upon. If the court should be of opinion that the action can be so maintained, judgment should be entered for the plaintiff upon the verdict. If the court should be of opinion otherwise, then judgment to be entered for that reason for the defendant."

If this note is a mercantile instrument, negotiable on its face, the right of the plaintiff to sue in his own name is clear, if not so negotiable the plaintiff as to the defendant had no such right.

The usual words in promissory notes, to impart negotiability are plainly wanting. It is made payable to the defendants simply, and not to their order or to bearer.

It contains other words, viz, "payable and negotiable at the Bank of Pennsylvania,"—phraseology quite unknown in mercantile usage in this city where the note was made, either on promissory notes or bills of exchange.

It is argued that these unusual words, "negotiable at the Bank of Pennsylvania,"—or rather the single word "negotiable," is equivalent to the common mercantile terms "to order or bearer," and like them impress upon the instrument at once a right of transfer in the payees by endorsement with all the legal incidents which belong to the ordinary forms of expression.

It is to be observed, that "payable" is both an unusual and superfluous word, if the only purpose for which it is introduced, is to indicate the special place of payment. And the proper explanation of the entire phrase—"payable and negotiable at the Bank of Pennsylvania," is to be found in the statute law of one or more of our sister States.

At common law a promissory note or note of hand as it was usually denominated although made payable to the order of the payee, could not, when endorsed by him, be sued upon by the holder in his own name. It was indeed doubted whether an action directly on the note could be maintained even by the payee. This was changed in England by the statute 3 and 4 Anne, which placed promissory notes on the same footing as foreign bills of exchange, and in Pennsylvania it was so far changed by the Act of 28 May, 1715, as to authorize the holder of such a note after indorsement to bring suit in his own name. The common law was in force in this particular, in most if not all of the old States, during their colonial dependence, and in some, if any alteration has taken place since, it is less extensive than the statute of Anne.

In several of the new States, promissory notes yet remain in much the same state of restriction as well in regard to the parties entitled to sue as to the right of defalcation.

The establishment of banks has, however, been the means of introducing the principles of the statute of Anne to a considerable extent, in most if not in all the States of the Union.

In Kentucky, this has been done by a clause in the charter of particular banks—perhaps in the charter of each bank in the State—by which a note when discounted at the bank, is thereby put on the footing of foreign bills of exchange,—and the form of the notes drawn for this purpose is the same as that which is in suit before us. But it clearly appears by the decisions of the courts there, that these words do not make the notes negotiable generally, but merely when actually discounted by the bank at which on its face it is expressed to be negotiable. The decisions on this point are explicit and positive. Stapp v. Anderson, 1 A. K. Marshall, 540. Dell v. Morehead, 3 A. K. Marshall, 158. Jones v. Wood, same book, 162.

The last of these cases is in all points like that now before us, and on this account and because it furnishes a good exposition of the law of that State may be referred to more at large.

"The plaintiff," it is here stated, "declared that a certain John Phillips made his promissory note negotiable and payable at the Glasgow Branch Bank to the defendant, who endorsed it payable to the order of said John Phillips, and that the said John Phillips then endorsed or ordered its contents to be paid to the plaintiff, whereby plaintiff alleges an action accrued to him. This statement," says the court, "shows that the plaintiff, endorsee or assignee has sued the defendant, a remote assignor and payee of the note. This idea that the note declared on was placed on the footing of a foreign bill of exchange and raised to the grade of mercantile paper, must have dictated this action. This idea, however, is based on a total mistake. The charter of the Bank declares that such notes 'when discounted,' shall be placed on the footing of foreign bills of exchange. Of course, those and those only which are discounted, can claim that grade—and those not discounted, although they are made payable and negotiable at the Bank remain on the footing of other bonds or notes made assignable by Act of Assembly, and the question is too well settled by repeated decisions, that such are not subject to the law merchant."

"Negotiable," at a particular bank, when inserted in the body of a promissory note, is, according to this decision, an authority to that bank to discount it—and when so discounted, it becomes subject to the law merchant as a bill of exchange is.

That this is the proper import of the word negotiable in such an instrument is decided also by the Supreme Court of the United States, in Mandeville v. The Union Bank of Georgetown, 9 Cranch, 9, according to this case, Mandeville made his promissory note payable to Nourse or order, negotiable at the Union Bank of Georgetown, payable at the Bank of Potomac in Alexandria; Mandeville claims a right of set-off in respect to this note of debts due to him by Mourse the payee, and by the law of Virginia (which was in force at Alexandria, when the note was made payable) such set-off was allowable as to promissory notes generally. But in this case it was denied by the court below, and the judgment affirmed by the Supreme Court. Chief Justice Marshall, disposed of the subject in this brief manner, "By making a note negotiable in bank, the maker authorizes the bank to advance on his credit to the owner of the note the sum expressed on its face. It would be a fraud on the bank to set up off-sets against this note in consequence of any transaction between the parties. Their off-sets are waived and cannot, alter the note has been discounted, be again set up."

We think then that the words "negotiable at the Bank of Pennsylvania," did not make the note generally negotiable. Had it been actually discounted by that bank, according to the decisions in Kentucky it would have acquired all the incidents of a foreign bill of exchange in the hands of any lawful holder afterwards. And this is the fair conclusion also from the decision in Cranch at least, in so far as to deprive the maker of the right to set-off a debt of the payee.

Regarding the note then as non-negotiable, on its face, it becomes necessary to examine into the decisions of our own State, to ascertain whether in the posture in which the parties to the action stand to each other on the note, the plaintiff can sustain the action in his own name. The declaration treats the parties as endorsee and endorser.

There are numerous decisions, some in the English courts, some in our own State, and others in our sister States, on the effect of an indorsement of a properly negotiable note after it has become due, and there seems to be, with one or two exceptions, an entire harmony in all the courts on the subject. To bind such an indorser, it is necessary to make demand of payment, within a reasonable time after the indorsement, on the maker, and on his failure to pay, to give notice to the endorser. See McKenney v. Crawford, 8 S. & R. 353. Patterson v. Todd, 18 P. S. R. 431. Berry v. Robinson, 9 Johns. 121. Fild v. Nickerson, 13 Mass. 131.

This class of notes is quite distinguishable from the note before us, and the law applicable to the one does not at all apply to the other. They are alluded to merely because in many of the decisions which have taken place, according to the reports, they have been confounded. There is a solitary case in our reports, which combines to some extent, the characteristics of a non-negotiable and a negotiable instrument. It is the case of Brenizer v. Wightman, 7 W. & S. 264. It was endorser against endorsee on a due bill payable to Brenizer simply but not to his order. He endorsed, however, upon it, "pay to James Wightman or order." The court held that between the parties this in virtue of the words "or order" was to be regarded as a negotiable instrument, an inland bill of exchange in which the endorser stood to the endorsee in the light of a new drawer of a bill payable to the order of the endorsee. As between these parties it was held that presentment to the maker as an acceptor of a bill was necessary, and that notice of non-payment should have been given to the endorser as a drawer of a bill.

Leidy v. Tammany, 9 Watts, 353, and Jordan v. Hunt, 12 P. S. R. 269, were like the note in this suit, not negotiable. They resemble each other in an important particular, which does not belong to our note. The parties stood in immediate relation to each other. They were both over-due when indorsed and delivered, and in neither was there any proper demand of payment. Yet, in both, the actions were sustained. The immediate relation of the parties to each other, appears to be the principle on which the decisions rest. In the former there was evidence of a full consideration between them at the time of indorsement by the payee—and in the latter, though there was no evidence of the kind, it seems to have been taken for granted.

There is a dictum of C. J. Tindal, in Flemly v. Westley, 2 Bing. N. C. 249, which gives his authority to the principle on which Leidy v. Tammany and Jordan v. Huret must be sustained, and the law is assumed by Atteson J., in Gwinell v. Herbert, 5 A. & E. 436, to be in the same way—i. e., that between the immediate parties, the payee of a non-negotiable note by indorsing it, might be regarded as the maker of a new note.

We come now to the investigation of the law directly applicable to the case in hand. Plimly v. Westley before cited, decides that a note not negotiable, but which was endorsed by the payee before maturity, and delivered to one who indorsed and delivered it for value to another, who was the holder of it when it became due, but did not make a timely demand of payment, could not be sued upon by the holder against the maker or any endorser except his immediate one to whom he had paid value. "Here," said Tindal, C. J., "there was a simple promise to pay to Rytton & Walton (payees) and to no one else. The payees had no authority to indorse, and the holder could neither sue the endorser nor the endorser the maker."

M'Cormack v. Trotter, 10 S. & R. 94, was a note to the order of the payee, but payable in notes of the chartered banks of Pennsylvania, and therefore not negotiable. It was sued upon by Trotter as endorsee of Lyon, the payee, against M'Cormack, the maker. The plaintiff succeeded in the Court below, but the judgment was reversed by the Supreme Court on the ground that not being negotiable, the suit could not be sustained in his own name by the endorsee.

Bireleback v. Wilkins, 22 P. S. R. 26, is a very recent case. It was on a note made by Hannen & Co., payable after four months to Bireleback, but not to his order. Bireleback simply endorsed his name upon it, but with an express oral agreement with the party who received it from him, that he was not to be held liable on the note, but that the makers only should be resorted to. This was long before its maturity. He delivered it to Brown, who handed it without consideration, but merely for collection of the makers, to Bingham, "who," says the report, transferred it, how is not stated, to Wilkins, the plaintiff. It does not appear that Wilkins gave value for it. There was a demand of payment duly made upon Hannen & Co., and notice of non-payment by them given to Bireleback in proper time.

These facts were contained in a case stated and the Court below gave judgment against Bireleback, the defendant therein; who removed the record to the Supreme Court, where the judgment was reversed.

The reversal was placed upon the plain ground that it had been agreed between Bireleback and Brown when Bireleback had endorsed the note, that he should not be liable by reason of the indorsement, and not being negotiable on its creation. It was taken by subsequent parties subject to this agreement. This was the principle of the decision.

The Court stated that there was no hardship to Wilkins in their decision, inasmuch as he had not, as far as appeared by the case, paid value for the note, and it was added, "mere possession of non-negotiable paper implies no consideration and confers no right of action in the holder's name."

This concluding remark was not, it is true, called for in order to justify the decision, nor was it, it would seem, made for that purpose. It cannot properly, however, be termed extra-judicial, for the non-negotiable character of the note, was a prominent feature in the case, and the decision might as well have been placed on the footing that the holder could not on that account sue in his own name, as on the other ground, that being non-negotiable, it was taken by the holder, subject to all the equities between prior parties.

It seems, therefore, abundantly plain that the suit here could not be maintained by the plaintiff in his own name. Judgment on the reserved point is to be entered for the defendants. Judgment for defendants.

Court of Common Pleas.

January 5, 1855.

Before Judge Allison.

ATKINSON v. RUSSMAN.

Cert. to Alderman Henry.

The first and third exceptions have reference to the fitness of one of the referees to act, and the drawing up of the award, and should have been taken before the Alderman by the defendant when he was called upon to show cause why judgment should not be entered on the finding of the referees. Having failed to make his objections at the proper time, and before the proper tribunal, we cannot help him now.

The second exception, though not in form, is in substance to the jurisdiction of the magistrate. The claim of the plaintiff being for trespass and damage done and committed on real estate, the evidence which has been sent up showing, and it being also admitted, that the wrong complained of was a mere trespass, an intrusion by defendant into the dwelling house of plaintiff, and a refusal to leave when directed. In Hobbs v. Geiss, 13th S. & R. 417, decided in 1825, this precise question was decided, and the jurisdiction of the magistrate affirmed in all cases where there is an immediate injury done to the body of the property, and that every entry into the close of another without his permission, unless justified and authorized by law, is a trespass, for which suit may be brought before an alderman or justice of the peace, for any sum not exceeding $100. The construction given to the Act of 22d of March, 1814, by the Court below, that it must be something more than a mere invasion of a right—that the injury must be of such a nature, that its character and extent could be determined by inspection—is expressly repudiated, and the doctrine established that of a trespass which passes away and leaves no trace behind, the magistrate has jurisdiction. Such a trespass was the one for which suit was brought in this instance.

The authority of Hobbs v. Geiss, we regard as binding upon this Court, and as constraining us to dismiss the exceptions and affirm the judgment; taking occasion, however, to say, that if the question was an open one, we would give to the Act of 1814 a different construction from that placed upon it by the Supreme Court. We entirely concur in the ruling of Judge King in Brown v. Quinton, decided in 1844, when he says the Act of the 22d of March, 1814, was not intended to give justices jurisdiction of actions of trespass vi et armis, sounding in damages merely, but in those cases only where the trespass has occasioned a deterioration in the value of plaintiff's real or personal property, capable of ascertainment and compensation. The language of the act is for injury done or committed on real or personal property, where the value of the property claimed, or the damage alleged to have been sustained, &c., and this we think contemplates a standard by which to measure the injury done, or to ascertain the amount of damages for which action may be brought. We do not, however, feel at liberty to disregard the authority of Hobbs v. Geiss, which, whether right or wrong, was carefully considered and deliberately decided.

The public are assured that all Safes manufactured by the subscribers are not only guaranteed to be fully equal, but in many respects even superior to those which have been so severely tried by fire. Few will forget their services in the burning of the "Tribune establishment," New York, and at the Great Fire in Strawberry street, at the large fire last July, opposite the Girard House, and still more recently in the Fire at Fifth and Chestnut sts., in this city, in which these Safes came forth the acknowledged CHAMPION, when many other securities failed.

Commissioner to take Testimony, &c.

The District Court have appointed DAVID PAUL BROWN, JR., Commissioner to take Testimony, Certify Affidavits, &c., to be read in evidence in any Court in the Commonwealth.
Office No. 45½ S. Fifth Street.

Mr. John Kater has requested us to call attention to his card in another column of our paper. We have reason to know that his statement is correct, and do not think that Mr. Kater's credit will be impaired by the appearance of the advertisement in question.

THE STATE LEGISLATURE.

Judging from the number of Bills already introduced, we may expect the usual amount of legislation at Harrisburg the present session. As the exciting political questions of last session are happily disposed of, we have reason to expect wise and thoughtful legislation. Many important public bills have been introduced, "An Act relating to the Rights of property of Husband and Wife, introduced by our senator, Mr. Price, contains several much needed provisions, and will, without radically disturbing the relations of Husband and Wife, define and protect the "rights of Women," in some cases now unprovided for by the Law of Pennsylvania, which from the Report of the Judiciary Committee of the Senate, appears to be already far more favorable to the rights of the Fair Sex than any other State in the Union, all of which are much in advance of England in this respect. We shall endeavour to present the Act or a synopsis of it in another Report to our readers. An act allowing Bills of Exceptions and Writs of Error in Criminal cases appears to us to remedy a great defect in our Criminal Jurisprudence. What good reason is there for refusing a right in Criminal cases which is enjoyed in the most trivial Civil action?

"An Act relating to Foreign Insurance Agencies," and "An Act to provide for the Safe keeping of the Public Monies, are evidence of the watchful care of Hon. N. B. Browne of the public interests. The following abstract of proceedings in the House, encourage us to hope for favorable action on the subject of the salaries of our Judiciary.

A bill relating to the fees of justices of the peace, aldermen and constables, was taken up in the House. (Mr. HUNSECKER in the chair,) and reported to the House without amendments. It being on second Reading,

Mr. MUMMA enquired whether the bill increased or decreased the fees.

Mr. FRY said it would slightly increase them. It would revise the fee bill of 1814, which had been reduced in 1821, when everything was low. These fees were below the proper standard, and he thought it but fair to review this subject at the present period.

Mr. EDINGER was unfriendly to the bill. Poor people generally pay these costs, which are now sufficiently large. He knew no call for a modification, and he hoped the bill would be negatived.

Mr. INGRAHAM would vote for the bill. His constituents desired the increase, as the business was small and not remunerative.

Mr. LOTT concurred with the latter gentleman. In the rural districts in his section of the State, where business was small, very few competent gentlemen could be procured to accept the offices named. He would vote for the bill.

Mr. BALL said that in 1814, everything was inflated, and great extravagance prevailed in every department. In 1821, the country was under singular depression, money was very scarce and business greatly embarrassed. Justices were now rarely conservators of the peace, but generally collecting-officers; and men sought the office with avidity. If on examination the fee bill of 1814, was the true standard, enact it; if that of 1821 was better retain it; but if neither be, he wished a new system to be devised. He thought that the subject was worthy of thorough examination by the Judiciary Committee. He argued at some length in support of his position.

Mr. LONGAKER had recommended, as a member of the Judiciary Committee, the reporting of this bill. Breadstuffs, labor, &c., were far in advance of what they were in 1821, and the fee bill should be re-instated to what it was at a previous period when prices were about the same as now. Men, who owed just debts and would not pay them except upon suit, deserve to pay the costs. In many of the counties, respectable and fully-informed men cannot be secured to act as constables unless they can be assured of the collection of the taxes of the county. The great difficulty was the condition of the fee bill which he thought should be revised.

Mr. MAGEE said that in Allegheny county, the law of 1814 was still operative and aldermen had great difficulty in supporting their families from the fees. In the country the state of affairs must be worse. The operation of the fee bill of 1814 had been good in the counties in which it existed, and he thought it should be made general.

The section was then agreed to; and the bill passed finally,

The reasons here adduced apply with great force to the cases of the Law Judges of the Courts of Pennsylvania. Their present salaries were fixed at a period of great financial gloom, and were then admitted to be down to the lowest and most economical standard. Since then the advance of prices and cost of living has been at least 33 per cent. in the country, and in the city more than 50 per cent., with an immense addition to the labours and responsibilities of these officers, arising from growth of population, increase of business and the development of our boundless resources. Proportionably to population and business no State in the Union is at so little expense for a judiciary, and in none are the political duties of these officers of so much importance as in Pennsylvania. To a commonwealth with an ordinary revenue of four millions of dollars, an addition of twenty thousand dollars to the aggregate compensation of her judiciary should not, we think, be longer an obstacle to an act of justice. This sum would afford a salary of two thousand dollars to the Presidents of the several Courts of Common Pleas, who now receive but sixteen hundred dollars—five thousand dollars to the Chief Justice, and four thousand dollars to each Associate of the Supreme Court, and a proportionable increase to the City and District Court Judges here and at Pittsburgh. "If the laborer is worthy of his hire," it would seem reasonable that the judges now performing as they do, greatly increased labors, should receive a compensation equal to that of their predecessors, which, under the greatly increased cost of living at present, is obviously not the case—sixteen hundred dollars ten years since was certainly more than twenty-four hundred dollars at present. Will not some of our Legislators, lawyers or laymen earn the thanks of the profession and retrieve the character of the Commonwealth by doing justice to the so long ill-paid dispensers of Law and Equity?

MARSHALL v. THE FRANKLIN BANK.

Error to Common Pleas of Washington Co.

It is conceded that John Marshall, who took defence to the scire facias was a surety, and that George A. Creacraft, the person whose deposition was offered and rejected, was one of the principal debtors. The defence was substantially that the judgment had been paid, and it was to prove payment that the principal debtor was offered as a witness. Upon the failure of this defence, the principal was doubtless liable to the surety, not only for the principal debt recovered, but also for the costs, and this according to the cases of Bank of Montgomery Co. v. Walker, 9 S. & R. 229; Smith v. Thorne, 9 Watts, 144; Davenport v. Freeman, 3 W. & S. 557, disqualified him from testifying upon the ground of interest. But he was also disqualified, because he was a party to the record.

The original judgment was against him, and he was named in the scire facias as one of the defendants. True he was not served, and was not a party to the issue, but Parke v. Bird, et al., 3 Barr, 360, rules that this makes no difference, as he was a party to the suit at the impetration of the writ, which is also the doctrine of Wolf v. Fink, 1st Barr, 439.

As the exclusion of a defendant who has not been served, or who has suffered judgment by default, rests upon grounds of public policy, he cannot remove the objection to his competency, by an offer to confess judgment against himself. A judgment against an insolvent principal, would be but a sorry compensation to the creditor for the loss of his claim against a solvent surety. Nor would the existence of a judgment against one confessedly insolvent lessen the temptation to perjury, to remove which is one of the principal grounds of the rule. One of several plaintiffs, cannot testify to charge a defendant, even though he has no interest in the Court; and neither shall one of several defendants be permitted to discharge by his evidence his co-defendants, even though he may remain liable himself. Judgment affirmed.

CUMMINGS' APPEAL.

Jan. 11, 1856.

Error to Common Pleas of Fayette Co.

The appellant claims priority for his judgment, not because it was first in order of time, but because it was for the separate debt of the owner of the real estate sold, and the prior judgments were against a firm of which the owner of the estate was a member. To substantiate his claim, the appellant invokes the aid of the principle, that joint creditors have a right to priority of payment out of the joint estate of the partners. It is unnecessary to point out how and when the principle stated applies, for it is clear that it has no application to the case in hand. A lien attached by law is never interfered with, by introducing an equitable rule for marshalling assets.

The reason why joint creditors are preferred in distributing the proceeds of partnership real estate, is that the estate is not subject to the liens of judgments for separate debts, as the individual members of the firm have nothing but a resulting interest in the proceeds after payment of the partnership debts, 7 Barr, 165, and this is so only as regards real estate held as partnership property, for if it is held by the partners simply as tenants in common, the estate of one of the partners may be incumbered by a mortgage given by him for his separate debt, 7 S. & R. 438; and it may be sold on an individual judgment, and the purchaser takes the title discharged from the partnership debts, 2 Watts, 143. It has never been questioned in Pennsylvania, but that a judgment against two or more, is a lien upon all the real estate owned by the defendants at the rendition of the judgment, whether held by tenancy in common or severally; and when the lien has been once attached, it cannot be divested or postponed by a subsequent judgment. Decree affirmed.

Opinions by Judge Lowrie.

WOOD v. ANDERSON.

This action was brought in January, 1845, and there was a general demurrer to the declaration, and in March, 1849, judgment was entered in favor of the defendant; that the demurrer was sustained, and in August 1852, the plaintiff on motion, was permitted to file a new declaration and proceed with the cause. This seems to us to be irregular. The order sustaining the demurrer was in substance a judgment, that the plaintiff take nothing and the defendant go without day and have his costs; and that is the meaning of our short entry. The ideo consideratum est is regarded as if it were really enrolled. If the plaintiff had shown at the time of the judgment, or perhaps during the term, that he really had a good cause of action, the court would, no doubt, have allowed an amendment on proper terms, instead of entering the judgment; but there was nothing of the sort. There was therefore no case pending in 1852, when the court allowed the new declaration to be filed, and required the defendant to plead to it.

There is another objection. The first declaration was for a tortious exclusion of one partner by another from the possession of the partnership business and effects; and the second was for a breach of contract for the purchase by one partner of the interest of the other. These two counts are totally inconsistent in form and substance, and could not be joined in the same action; and therefore, when the plaintiff is defeated on the one, he cannot fall back upon the other by way of amendment.

Again, the two counts being totally inconsistent, present totally distinct causes of action, and it was error to allow the plaintiff to amend, by inserting a new cause of action, after the right of the plaintiff had been apparently barred by the statute of limitations. 6 T. R. 544; 7 id. 51.

None of these errors were waived by the defendants putting in a plea, for he could not avoid this. He did endeavor before the trial, to get the Court to retrace its steps, but failed.

All the proceedings after the judgment in favor of the defendant below on the demurrer, are hereby reversed and set aside.

NIMICK & Co. v. HOLMES & Co.

Though the Rhodian law de jactu, provided for contribution only in the case of goods cast overboard in times of peril, yet the spirit of the regulation is in its reason, which is, because the act was done for the benefit of all; and it was this reason, rather than the limited expression of it, that was applied in the Roman jurisprudence. Dig. 14, 2. And is the adoption of the Rhodian law by Augustus and by Antonine, is the only evidence that the Romans derived their law of marine contribution from the Rhodians, then it is fully met by the text; Dig. 14, 2, 2, 3; which refers, for the same principle, to the Roman lawyers, Servius, Labeo and Otilius, who flourished in the time of Julius Caesar. And the absence of all reference to the Rhodian law, in the cases cited in the Digest, seems to show that the regulation was part rather of their common, than of their statute law.

And, while it may be doubted, perhaps, whether our law of average was in fact derived from the Romans, it is very plain that the Roman law on this subject, has had great influence in moulding and defining that of all modern commercial nations. The equity of the rule is so obvious to natural reason, that it may very well be supposed that the practice might grow up spontaneously wherever naval commerce existed. The name average, given to it in nearly all European languages, would seem to strengthen this supposition, for this is not at all of Roman origin; and a modern Latin word avaritia, had to be invented to express it, as the word contributio did not express the same idea. Average means ship damage, and not contribution, as is plain when we speak of particular average. The average of common parlance is a secondary sense of the word, derived from the practice of contribution in cases of general average.

But whencesoever the practice may have been derived into the law of modern nations, it may be said that, for America, England and continental Europe, there is but one law on this subject; and its unity is preserved by the simplicity of the principle embodied in it, and by the fact that all treatises, European and American, on this subject, like those on international law, are regarded as the common property of the commercial world.

In the Ordinatio Nautica of the Hanseatic cities, title 8, which was compiled in 1614 from more ancient customs and ordinances, there is a law on this subject, which is scarcely more comprehensive than the Rhodian law de jactu; but Reinold Kurieke, in his commentary upon it, shows that its practical interpretation has been as large, as the reason upon which it is founded, and he quotes from Weitauius the rule, that every loss suffered by ship or cargo for the purpose of averting a common danger, is a subject of general average.

Loconius, De Jure Maritimo, 2, 8, 7, says that equity and expediency require this extensive interpretation, and that it is easy to apply the rule according to its reason, to all cases of sacrifice for the common safety as they arise.

The rule is laid down in all its breadth by the commentators on the Dig. 14, 2. Pothius merely repeats what he finds there; but Voet generalizes the cases, and declares that, no matter where the act is done, or under what circumstances of danger, if there be a sacrifice of part for the safety of the rest, and without any fault of the master, it is a case of general average. Nooit says, that whatsoever may be the nature of the sacrifice, it is at the common expense, if it is for the common safety. In pari causa, parius servatur, etiam cum verba legis deficiunt. Huber says the same.

Mittermaier, Grundsätze des deutschen Privatrechts, s. 317, says, to general average belongs every intentional sacrifice made for the purpose of averting or mitigating a danger that is common to both ship and cargo, and he cites very freely the English and American works on this subject, that are familiar to us all.

Vincens, 3 Legislation Commerciale, 186, declares that all the damages deliberately suffered for the common safety, and all the time expended in repairing them, must be taken as general average; to this rule there are no exceptions.

It is unnecessary to repeat the quotations of our own authorities made by the counsel, for they all declare and illustrate the same principle. In all European and American treatises, we find the same sorts of instances given, and they all tend to enforce the broad rule of general average already expressed in various forms. Thus the following instances of sacrifice have been declared cases of general average—goods cast overboard; masts, rigging, anchors and boats cut away; the hire of lighters, and the goods lost thereby; the hire of armed convoy; the damage incurred in order to evade a hostile pursuit; damage from an engagement with pirates, including the rewards to the crew, the healing of the wounded and the burial of the dead; the sinking of a vessel in a crowded port, in order to prevent the fire of an adjoining one from spreading to the others; the cutting of the cable of one in order to save others; the voluntary stranding of the ship; ransom from pirates; compromise with captors; seeking port and refitting after an inevitable accident; and the excess of damage or expense borne by one of several ships sailing in company, in defending against a common enemy.

In some countries, a consultation is required before the sacrifice is made; but that form is resorted to only as a means of deciding upon and proving its necessity, and is not a part of our law, for it may be otherwise proved. An analysis of the cases very plainly reveals three things as the elements of general average—a purpose, a means, and a result; a design to avert a common danger, by a sacrifice voluntarily made, and a successful issue. The first and the last are perfectly definite in their character, while the means must always remain to be defined by the rule of prudence when the danger arises.

Guided by the light of the rule and its instances, we feel constrained to say, that when a vessel or its cargo takes fire without the fault of the crew, the damage done by the application of water or steam in extinguishing the fire, and by tearing up part of the vessel in order to get at it, is general average. The danger is a common one, and the cost of the remedy must be common. It makes no difference how the water is applied; by the aid of fire engines on the land, or in the form of steam, or by scuttling the vessel. All these modes were tried in this case, before the success was complete. They are all to be treated together, because they all referred to the same peril. They were the means employed for the purpose of averting the danger in which they were placed. It was a sacrifice for the common safety, for it was intentionally injuring or destroying all that part of the cargo that could be thus affected by water, in order to save the rest. The result was successful, if a single article was saved by the means employed. Without attempting to follow the counsel in their minute criticism upon the charge to the jury, we may say that it was entirely correct.

There is an exception to the admission of evidence, but it also is unfounded.

Judgment affirmed.

R. E. SCOTT,

ATTORNEY AT LAW,

Has removed his office to No. 90 Walnut St. above Fourth St. j 18-16

Orphan's Court.

Opinion by Judge Allison.

ESTATE OF PHILIP C. DONNELLY, DECEASED.

A number of exceptions have been filed to the report of the Auditor upon the account of Catharine Donnelly, Administratrix of Philip C. Donnelly, decedent. These exceptions are taken by the Accountant and also by Allen Robinett, a creditor of the estate.

On the 17th of December, 1831, Philip C. Donnelly made an assignment for the benefit of creditors, having on the 10th of the same month executed a deed whereby he transferred to Thomas Trainor all his right in his wife's property, in trust, for her separate use and for the use of her children. This deed the Auditor decides is void as to creditors, and it is to this finding of the Auditor the Accountant files her first exception.

Is the Auditor right in deciding that the deed of trust is void as to creditors? We are of the opinion that he is not because the creditors of Philip C. Donnelly had no interest, immediate or remote in the property of Mrs. Donnelly, which had not been converted by the husband to his own use on the 17th day of December, A. D. 1831.

The Accountant, by the will of her father, John Gavin, which was executed on the 28th day of May, A. D. 1824, became entitled to two frame houses on the west side of Fifth street between Plum and German streets, and to one half of the remainder of his estate, which consisted of certain pieces of real property, and a bond for $1000, due by the trustees of Saint Mary's Church of this City to the testator. The devise to Catharine Donnelly was subject to the life estate of her mother, who was living on the 17th day of December, A. D. 1831, when the deed to Trainor was executed, and who continued in full life until the year 1833. This property, therefore, was in no way reduced to possession by Philip C. Donnelly, nor could he at any time prior to the conveyance to Trainor, have made it his, for whatever right he may have acquired by his marriage with the Accountant, it was held in abeyance by, and subject to the intervening life estate of Mrs. Gavin.

The deed to Trainor recites the purpose intended to be accomplished by it, and so fully is this made to loom out upon its face, that there has been, and indeed could be, no pretence of an intention, in any way, to conceal or cover up the transaction, it being in direct terms affirmed, to be a just and equitable disposition of property, which was devised to the Accountant by her father, and with which the grantor in the deed had in no way intermeddled; the question therefore is freed from all considerations of intentional fraud, which might be inferred from an effort to cover up from creditors, the nature of the transaction and is left to stand solely upon the footing of a legal fraud, in which light the Auditor seems to have considered it, and has so decreed, for he assigns as a reason for the conclusion at which he has arrived, the indebtedness of Philip C. Donnelly to Robinett, Pollard & Co., and others, at the date of the execution of the deed.

Now what was transferred by the instrument which the Auditor regards as a nullity as to the creditors of the grantor? It cannot be pretended it was choses in action reduced to possession, for it is apparent that they not only had not but could not have been converted by Philip C. Donnelly to his own use at that time; for his was but a future contingent right, dependant upon his surviving Mrs. Gavin, the mother of his wife; the conveyance of December 17th, 1831, consequently passed nothing more nor less, than the contingent right to reduce his wife's choses in action to possession to his grantee Thomas Trainor, and it will be seen by an examination of the deed, that nothing more was attempted to be done, for it is his right in his wife's property, which is transferred in trust, for her use and for the use of her children. Marriage operates as a gift to the husband of a wife's personal estate in possession, but is only regarded as a conditional gift of her choses in action, which are in no sense his, until reduced into possession, or until the wife's right is in some other way barred by him, (as by an assignment for the benefit of creditors;) in such case, if the husband die first, the right survives to the wife.

The interest of a husband in his wife's lands was held in Bonslaugh v. Bonslaugh, 17 S. & R. 363, to be an incident of marriage contract, as much within his power as the absolute ownership of her chattels, which he could relinquish without the intervention of trustees, the same principle had also been affirmed in McKenna's Executors v. Phillips, at the previous March term of the Supreme Court, and subsequently reported in 6 Whar. 571.

But whatever effect the deed to Trainor may have had upon the interest of Philip C. Donnelly in the lands of his wife, an interest which at the date of the conveyance was not bound by any judgment, lands of which the wife had and could have had no seisin, we think it clear, that as to her choses in action, viewed especially with reference to the $500 with which the Auditor has surcharged the administratrix, the conveyance effectually passed the right of the grantor to Thomas Trainor.

A husband may, for the very purpose of preventing the property of the wife being taken and applied to the payment of his debts, refuse to reduce it into possession, renounce his right of dominion over it, or assign, transfer and set over such right for the benefit of any other person, and this he may do, because creditors must have such an interest in the property of their debtor as the law recognizes and will protect; a right that can be enforced to enable them to complain of a disposition of it, adverse to them, or to entitle them to relief as against the act of their debtor.

The law does not compel a husband to make his wife's choses in action his property; he may say that it is not his, and he may refuse to do any act that will make it his, and such refusal is consistent with his duty to those to whom he is indebted; for it is the property of the debtor alone that can be taken by the creditors and applied to the payment of their just demands. In Timbers v. Gatz, 6 W. & S., 209, Chief Justice Gibson designates an interest such as Philip C. Donnelly possessed in his wife's estate, to be a conditional title only, cast upon him by his marriage, which he has a right to reject by refusing to perform the condition. The decedent, Philip C. Donnelly, in the most solemn mode known to the law, by deed duly executed, not only declared that his wife's estate should remain sacred to her own use, that he would not exercise a right which his marriage to her gave to him, but he went further, and transferred that right to a third person, in trust for the use of his wife and children, by which he not only concluded himself, but all persons claiming or entitled to claim under him. If the execution of the deed to Trainor had followed, instead of proceeding the assignment for the benefit of creditors, the conveyance of 17th of December, 1831, would have passed no title to Trainor, because the right to reduce his wife's choses in action to possession, would have passed to his assignees; but having been perfected one week before the assignment, no portion of the wife's estate not at that time converted to his own use, was in any way affected by it.

These views are we think well grounded upon principle, and supported by English and American decisions, a number of which are found in the reports of our own state, Dennison v. Nigh, 2 Watts, 90, and Robinson and Woelper, 1 Wharton, 179, deciding that a wife's outstanding legacy cannot be attached for the husband's debt, because the husband had no property in it, are authorities in point. So also are the cases of Bonslaugh v. Bonslaugh, 17 S. & R., 361, and Smethurst et al. v. Thurston et al., Brightly's Reports, 127. See also the recent cases of Nolens' Appeal, 11 Harris, 37, and Grebenaner's Estate, 11 Harris, 460.

By the receipt of Philip C. Donnelly dated the 9th of December, 1839, and the testimony of Joseph T. Snyder, it appears, that $500, one half of the bond due by the Trustees of St. Mary's Church, was paid to the decedent; how does the receipt of the money in 1839 by the husband of the Accountant affect the question, as to whether the $500 is to be treated as the property of the husband or as that of the wife? In no way that we can see; for the deed of trust was irrevocable by Donnelly, to the trustee, he was bound to account, and without his authority the payment by the Church was a payment in their own wrong; Greenfield's Estate, 2 Harris, 489, settles this question conclusively. Donnelly had no more right as the husband of his wife, to receive or meddle with her property derived from her father, than the most entire stranger; for having parted with that right it was gone beyond recall. This view of the question raised by the fourth exception disposes of it in favor of the Accountant.

The second exception brings up the most important issue in this case, for both the Accountant and the accepting creditor.

The inventory and appraisement filed by the administratrix amounted to $2,551 50; this was principally invested in carrying on the pawn-broking business by the decedent at the time of his decease, which business was continued by the administratrix with the funds of the estate, from which she realized large profits, and the auditor has surcharged her with the sum of $13,477 77 as the net gain of the business for the period of twelve years and three months. This surcharge the auditor has made at the instance of Allen Robinett, who was one of the firm of Robinett, Pollard & Co., creditors of Philip C. Donnelly, which firm executed a release of their claim against him on the 31st day of December, 1831. On the 25th of December, 1835, the said firm brought suit on their original cause of action, alleging that the release had been improperly obtained, and on the 2d day of June, 1843, recovered a verdict against the estate of Philip C. Donnelly for $6,401.

The Auditor is of the opinion, that as it has been judicially established, that the whole of the estate which came into Mrs. Donnelly's hands was properly applicable to the payment of this claim, and she having retained the funds in her possession, with which she continued the business of her deceased husband; that the profits made with the money of the estate belong to the creditors thereof, for whom she must be considered a trustee, and to whom she will be required to account.

The principle is well settled, that one who acts as a trustee, acts for the benefit of those represented by him, and that the gain made in that capacity must ensue to their benefit, but it is subject to many modifications, and is varied as to the extent of its application and enforcement by the circumstances of each case; there are several classes of cases in which a trustee is punished by holding him to the strictest degree of accountability, as where the express terms of the instrument creating the trust have been violated, or where trust securities are converted to the individual use of the trustee, or where a trustee has been guilty of gross fraud, actual misfeasance or wrong. One acting in a fiduciary capacity will also be required to account for the natural and direct increase of trust money, the immediate gain of an investment of funds belonging to others. Neither will one be allowed to profit by an act which in good faith ought to have been done for the cestui que trusts. In this case the Auditor has, we think, given to the principle a more extended application than has heretofore been allowed to it, by charging the administratrix not with the natural increase of the fund alone, but with the profits resulting from the time, labor, and skill, which she brought to bear in the management of the business, from which the large amount of gain, with which she has been surcharged was realized.

In the case of Raphael v. Boehm, not reported, but referred to in Tebbs v. Carpenter, 1 Madd. 300, interest was compounded upon the Trustee with half yearly rests, because the trust fund which had been directed to be laid out for accumulation, had been used by the trustee in his own private business; but even in that case, the principle adopted and acted upon by the Auditor, was expressly repudiated by Lord Loughborough, who made the decree; for he says, a case of very plausible aspect had been put, with the view of deterring the Court from taking the course which all principle points out; the instance cited was an apothecary, buying drugs with £100 of trust money, and earning £1000 a year, by selling them to his patients, so he says a case might be taken of trust money laid out in the purchase of steel, or silk, which when worked into goods of the finest fabric, the work exceeds by ten thousand times the value of the material, but he says, such instances prove nothing, for they are cases not of profit upon stocks, and he might have added, not of the natural increase of trust funds in any way invested, but of skillful labor very highly paid, and no reasonable person would ever dream of charging a trustee, whose skill thus bestowed, has so enormously augmented the value of the capital, as if he had only obtained from it a profit.

The testimony taken in this case shows, that the business carried on by the Accountant, is only largely profitable, when conducted by a person who is diligent and skillful in its management, and that when conducted with no more than ordinary diligence and skill, but little gain can be realized from it. To suppose, that a business left to itself, upon an investment of the small amount of capital employed by the Accountant, would realize some $21,000 of gross profits, during the time she was engaged in carrying it on, is to suppose an impossibility. The necessary inference then is, and it is supported by the testimony appended to the report, that the profits made, were the direct and immediate result of the skill and labor of the Accountant, applied continuously, for upwards of twelve years, which the Auditor has decided, belong not to Mrs. Donnelly, but to the creditors of her deceased husband. We know of no case to justify the conclusion, at which the Auditor has arrived; for to give to the creditor or creditors of this estate all that has been allowed to them, would be to place them in a better situation, than they would occupy, if the fund had been invested for their benefit, or even compounded by the Accountant, and that too when there is no evidence of fraud on her part. In Deandet v. Heeft, 8 Barr, 17, it is distinctly decided, that for mere omissions or negligence, the rule in Pennsylvania is simple interest and no more, and in the matter of Harland's Accounts, 5 Rawle, 323, although malfeasance was imputed to the guardian, and the Court below had decreed triennial rests, yet the Supreme Court imposed but simple interest on the Accountant.

It does not appear from anything before us, that the administratrix has attempted in any way to evade her liability for the property which came into her hands, neither do we think her conduct as administratrix open to grave censure or reproach, when the circumstances as they transpired are borne in mind. The suit of Robinett, Pollard & Co., was not brought until after four years delay, six years were then allowed to elapse before they filed their narr, which was only about two months before the decease of Philip C. Donnelly; after upwards of four years additional delay, the accountant was first made a party to the proceedings, and two years afterwards the case was brought to trial.

Now in what relation did the administratrix stand to Robinett, Pollard & Co.? She found that during ten years prior to her husband's death they had rested content with simply bringing suit and filing a narr, from which she certainly had a right to argue no great confidence on their part in the claim which it was her duty to resist for the benefit of her children, whom she knew to be her cestui que trusts if Robinett & Co. were not. But from the fact, that for four years after it was known the estate was in her hands, no attempt was made to make good any demand against it, the accountant, during this period, could regard herself, as acting only for those who stood behind an alleged creditor who took no steps to prove his claim.

From all the facts of this case as presented by the Auditor in his report, we are of the opinion that the claim of Robinett, Pollard & Co., can be regarded in no other light than as a debt due to them by the estate, which they are entitled to have paid, with simple interest, so far as the property of the estate, less the legal deductions, which went into the hands of the administratrix and interest on said balance, will suffice for that purpose. The second exception is therefore sustained.

The fifth exception having relation to the disallowance of commissions to the accountant, for the reasons already stated, is sustained. Commission ought to be allowed to her.

The sixth exception, to the rejection by the auditor of $389 50 claimed as a credit, having been paid for arrears of ground rent is dismissed, we think he was right in deciding as he has done.

The seventh exception is also overruled; the sum of $180, was not paid out of the fund from which it is claimed as a deduction, nor indeed from any fund which was received by the accountants and was therefore properly disallowed.

The eighth exception is disposed of in the same way; the Auditor had a right to admit the testimony of Nathaniel Moore at the time at which he was examined.

As to the exceptions of Allen Robinett, the first is overruled for the reasons already assigned. The second is also overruled, because Mrs. Donnelly states that the sum of $100 or $200, which she had by her at the death of her husband, was received by her from her father's estate, and there is nothing to contradict this statement by which the creditors are bound, having called and examined her as a witness.

Of the items embraced in the third exception, the following are allowed:

Amount paid
R. Wood, Iron railing, &c., for vault, $80 00
St. Mary's Church for Burial Ground, 30 00
Thos. Farley for building vault,..... 79 00
$189 00

Disallowed are the items:
Jas. Cowden, for carpenter work,..... $63 00
Jas. Kyle, for painting portrait,..... 25 00
Taxes,..... 38 64

Amount paid Rose Carroll, for servants wages, (no proof to sustain the charge for service rendered, or if rendered that the same had not been paid,)..... 104 00

$230 64

Argued by Josiah Randall, Esq., for Allen Robinett. Benjamin H. Brewster, Esq., for Catharine Donnelly, the Administratrix, and for the children of Dr. Philip C. Donnelly, deceased, with whom was Mr. Mersdith.

LAW SCHOOL OF THE UNIVERSITY AT CAMBRIDGE, MASS.—The Instructors in this School are HON. JOEL PARKER, LL. D., Royal Professor. HON. THEOPHILUS PARSONS, LL. D., Dane Professor. HON. EMERY WASHBURN, LL. D., University Lecturer.

The course of instruction embraces the various branches of the Common Law and of Equity, Admiralty, Commercial, International and Constitutional Law, and the Jurisprudence of the United States. The Law Library consists of about 14,000 volumes, and as new works appear they are added, and every effort is made to render it complete.

Instruction is given by oral lectures and expositions, (and by recitations and examinations, in connection with them,) of which there are ten every week. Two Moot Courts are also held in each week, at each of which a cause, previously given out, is argued by four students, and an opinion delivered by the presiding instructor. Rooms and other facilities are also provided for the Club Courts; and an Assembly is held weekly for practice in debate, and acquiring a knowledge of Parliamentary law and proceedings.

Students may enter the School in any stage of their professional studies or mercantile pursuits, and at the commencement of either term, or in the middle, or other part of a term. They are at liberty to elect what studies they will pursue, according to their view of their own wants and attainments.

The Academical year, which commences on Thursday, six weeks after the third Wednesday in July, is divided into two terms, of twenty weeks each, with a vacation of six weeks at the end of each term.

During the winter vacation, the Library is opened, warmed and lighted, for the use of the members of the School.

Applications for admission, or for Catalogues, or any further information, may be made to either of the Professors at Cambridge.

Cambridge, January 13, 1856. f 1-St.

Charters of Incorporation.—All applications to March Term, 1856, of Court of Common Pleas, must be approved and filed before the 10th day of FEBRUARY next. In no case can publication be made after that day, nor unless the costs of Certificate and Publication be first paid. f 1-lt J. G. GIBSON, Prothonotary.

The Bank of Cash Credits.

Application will be made to the Legislature of Pennsylvania, for the Charter of a Bank Issue with general Banking privileges, with a capital of ONE MILLION OF DOLLARS. Said Bank, to be located in the City of Philadelphia, and to be conducted upon the system of cash credits only, as is herewith indicated.

A cash credit is a credit given to an individual by a Banking Company, for a limited sum, seldom under $500, or $1000, upon his own security, and that of two or three individuals, approved by the Bank, who become sureties for its payment. The individual who has obtained such a credit, is enabled, to draw the whole sum, or any part of it, when he pleases; replacing it, or portions of it, according as he finds it convenient; interest being charged upon such part only as he draws out.

"If a man borrows $1000, from a private hand, and even then it is not always to be found when required, he pays interest for it, whether he be using it or not. His bank credit costs him nothing, except during the moment it is of service to him, and this circumstance is of equal advantage as if he had borrowed money at a much lower rate of interest."

Cash credits are not, however, intended to be a dead load; the main objects of the Banks in granting them is to get their notes circulated, and they do not grant them except to persons in business, or to those who are frequently drawing out and paying in money.

Any person who applies to a Bank for a cash credit, is called upon to produce sureties, and, after a full inquiry into the character of the applicant, the nature of his business, and the sufficiency of his securities, he is allowed to open a credit, and to draw upon the Bank for the whole of its amount, or for such part as his daily transaction may require. To the credit of the account, he pays in such sums as he may not have occasion to use, and interest is charged or credited upon the balance, as the case may be. From the facility which these cash credits give to all the small transactions of the country, and from the opportunities which they afford to persons who begin business with little or no capital but their character, to employ profitably the minutest products of their industry, it cannot be doubted that the most important advantages are derived in the whole community.

China and Glass Painting executed in a superior manner, and warranted not to CRACK. Ceilings cleaned and whitened, and made equal to new, at a cost little over that of whitewash. The subscriber would state here that it frequently occurs that persons attempt to use this article who have no knowledge of it whatever, either in the mixing or putting it on, and the consequence is, the job is spoiled, and the article condemned without a proper trial.—So also with CHINA GLOSS; to make a good job it requires a practical knowledge of the use of the brush, as also the making of the Gloss. In regard to the ZINC WHITE, the subscriber would most respectfully recommend it as an article far superior to any other paint now in use, for whiteness and durability of color. The Subscriber would respectfully solicit a portion of the patronage of those getting Painting done. Feeling grateful for the many favors already bestowed by his friends, he still hopes to share their patronage by unremitting attention to their calls. Those who have large contracts to give out, need have no hesitation in calling, as he is prepared to give every satisfaction in regard to work, both in reference and security, for the faithful performance of all agreements. The Subscriber can be found at the S. E. CORNER OF FOURTH AND WALNUT STS. where he will be happy to receive any orders. Aug. 24—1 yr. JACOB S. BEAM.

Commissioner to take Testimony, &c.

The District Court have appointed DAVID PAUL BROWN, JR., Commissioner to take Testimony, Certify Affidavits, &c., to be read in evidence in any Court in the Commonwealth. Office No. 45 1/2 S. Fifth Street.

We observe by the Legislative Record that a bill has been read in both Houses to equalize the salaries of the Philadelphia and Pittsburgh judges. This has been induced by the action of the Pittsburgh Bar, who recently held a meeting, and appointed a committee of fifteen to visit Harrisburgh to procure an addition to the salaries of their judges. Might not the example of our brethren of the Iron City be followed by us with good effect. The salaries of our judges are certainly not equal to the value of their labors, or the necessary expenses of life in Philadelphia.

THE CRITERION.

This is the title of a new literary and critical Journal, of sixteen pages, printed on fine white paper, and published weekly, at 113 Nassau Street, New York, by Chas. K. Rode. The main feature of the Criterion is its reviews of current literature; it contains as well, copious intelligence of affairs in the literary world, announcements of contemplated publications, and lists of new books published here and abroad.

The number before us is edited with marked ability. Its criticisms are just, forcible, and of the first order of literary merit. Notes and Queries, is the heading of an attractive column; and the Gossip about books and authors is a series of interesting and pleasantly written articles. We commend it to the notice of our readers, as a publication in every way worthy of the support and encouragement of all those who are willing to aid in establishing a journal which will be in truth a criterion of the literature of our country. To those who are adding to or collecting libraries, this will be found an invaluable guide-book.

The following very important decision is published by request of several subscribers. The law forbids the publication (among the Reports) of minority opinions, and thus a dissenting opinion, however valuable in argument, is prevented from that permanent place which formerly it was allowed to occupy. Of the wisdom of such a law every one can judge after reading this opinion. The main points of the case are of incalculable importance, affecting as well the title to lands, as the rights of claimants; the animadversions of the learned Judge on the fickleness of the law, as well as his unavailing regrets, cannot fail to be useful.

Supreme Court.

Opinion of Justice Black.

HOLE v. RITTENHOUSE.

Error to Columbia Co.

This case is so important in its principle, so curious in its history, and so alarming in its result, that I feel bound to put on record a brief statement of my own views.

The plaintiff had three tracts of land regularly surveyed, adjoining one another. The Commonwealth was paid by the original warrantees for every acre included within them, and the title had passed from hand to hand several times, and through more than one generation. On two of these tracts the plaintiff and those from whom he purchased, had valuable improvements, consisting of houses, barns, arable fields, orchards, and meadows. Of the third tract he had no actual occupancy. But for nearly half a century he had paid the taxes on all of them, except when on two or three occasions there was an omission to assess him. He was resting securely on the title which he had bought and paid for, and which nobody had ever disputed, when Barney Hole, the nominal defendant, a man totally irresponsible, and altogether worthless in every sense of the word, impudently thrust himself upon one of the tracts, and without pretending to claim it, began to make as free with it, as if it had been his own. The counsel who appeared for him, confessed, at the argument, that he had no interest in the question, and that he had been put on the land to provoke an ejectment by others, who are to have the benefit of any success with which this trick may be attended. He left after this suit was brought, and then the plaintiff might have dropped it; but he did not. The title which Barney Hole, or his anonymous backers, now set up, and on which they hope to take from the plaintiff a large portion of the earnings of his own and his father's life, is this: A survey in the name of John Graff, which is older than either of the plaintiffs, lies afloat of them, and it was on the interference that Barney Hole sat down. This naked and solitary fact, that the plaintiff's surveys were interfered with by another, which was older, is absolutely all that was shown on the last trial. That is the whole extent of the defence. John Graff never took possession of his tract, nor any part of it. He never paid a cent of taxes. He never claimed the land in dispute. He does not claim it now, nor has he authorized any body else to claim it for him. Barney Hole and his employers, seem to know nothing of him, except his name. On the other hand, the plaintiff's survey was made under a regular warrant, was legally returned, and honestly paid for. He has been in possession under it, and paid taxes upon it, so long that the memory of man scarcely runneth to the contrary. I devoutly believe that he cannot be despoiled of it now on any evidence which this record discloses, without doing him a gross wrong.

But though he has the manifest honesty of the case with him, the judgment could not be affirmed, unless the law also were with him. Let us see how that is:

In the first place, I think this defendant, being a mere intruder, had no right to set up a title of any kind in a third person. If he can do so, then every trespasser may demand of the injured party that he shall show a perfect title against all the world before he can recover for any wrong to his property. With profound deference for the better judgment of the majority, I am clear that a man whose title to his land happens to be defective, is not at the mercy of every dishonest stranger who may cast a covetous eye upon it. If I ascertain that my neighbor has lost a link in his chain of title so long ago that he cannot now supply it, and thereupon I get some venal tool to take possession and provoke an ejectment, so that I may show the defect, and keep land which is not mine, I do a thing as repugnant to the rules of law, as it is inconsistent with common honesty. It would shock our sense of justice to allow a person who goes in, like this defendant, to set up an outstanding title, which the owner of it never asserted, nor intended to assert, and which he was probably paid long ago for not asserting. There is nothing in the books that gives the smallest countenance to such conduct. The direct contrary has always been held. In Hunter v. Cochran, (3 Barr, 105,) the broad doctrine is laid down, that no defendant in ejectment can set up an outstanding title, if it be derelict, abandoned, or barred by the statute. Foust v. Ross, (1 W. & S. 501,) is full to the point. It decides, 1. That an intruder cannot set up an abandoned title. And, 2. That the neglect of the owner to look after his title, and pay taxes for twenty-one years, is an abandonment. Here is a self-confessed intruder, who desires to set up a title which has been derelict and utterly abandoned for more than twice twenty-one years. Should he be permitted to do so in the teeth of all the authorities and in the face of the plain reason and justice which forbid it? The judge of the Common Pleas thought not, and I thought he was right. It seems we were both mistaken.

But apart from all this, I would, if I could, protect the plaintiff from this wrong by the Statute of Limitations. I think John Graff himself, or his aliases, could not legally recover the land in dispute—at least, that part of it within the two tracts which are improved.

The plaintiff has not cultivated or enclosed the interference, nor any part of it, but he has an official survey which embraces it and his residence is on the survey. There it has been for a period much longer than twenty-one years. Why should he not hold it? The only answer is that though he lived for so long a time on his farm, yet he did not live on the very part of it with which the other survey interfered. This would be a sound argument in England, but it is not the law of Pennsylvania, nor probably of any other American State. The statute would be useless here if it did not protect unenclosed woodland as well as cultivated grounds. Accordingly it has been universally held by this Court that one who goes into possession under color of title, with boundaries marked, is in, not the constructive, but the actual possession of the whole tract, and if he continues so to occupy it for twenty-one years he acquires a good title to all within the lines of his colorable claim, no matter how small a portion of it he may have had under his feet. This principle was fully discussed and settled in Heiser v. Riehl, (7 W. 35,) Criswell v. Altemus, (7 W. 581,) Bell v. Hartley, (4 W. & S. 32,) Hoey v. Furman, (1 Barr, 295,) Porter v. McGinness, (1 Barr, 413,) Fitch v. Mann, (8 Barr, 503,) not to speak of the many older cases in which it was affirmed. It was acknowledged by a majority of this Court to be the law so lately as the month of September, 1854—not more than fifteen months ago—in the case of Ament's Ex'rs v. Wolf.

These cases do assuredly decide, if any thing ever was decided, that an office right is always good as color of title—that one who enters under such title is in possession of the unenclosed woodland within his lines as much as he is of the cultivated fields—that he has the whole tract by our law, just as he would have the enclosed part by the law of England—that if there were a better title to the woodland within the lines, the constructive possession of the true owner is ousted—that by such entry the occupant acquires title against all the world, but the bona fide owner of a better title—that he may maintain ejectment or trespass against an intruder, and after twenty-one years will be protected against the owner himself.

These simple and long-established rules should be decisive of the case. The plaintiff had an office right—a warrant regular on its face—and a survey legally executed and returned. This did not give him a perfect title to the interference. But it gave him color of title to the land within his lines. On the day that he entered he had a right, good against men like Barney Hole, and after the expiration of twenty-one years, his right was good against John Graff also. Under such circumstances the statute ought to protect him, and if it does not protect him it ought to be repealed. If it does not give repose to him, there is no reason why other men should have the advantage of it.

But even if there were no statute of limitations, the lapse of time accompanied by the facts of this case, would raise a conclusive presumption in favor of the plaintiff. It often happens that surveys interfere with each other sometimes by mistake of the officer, and sometimes with the consent of the elder warrantee. It is not at all uncommon for the junior survey, to be the better title, in consequence of some contract or other act of the adverse party, which estops him from claiming the interference. Now take this as a part of our daily experience, and apply it to a case where the elder warrantee has not shown himself for sixty years. He takes no possession, pays no taxes, asserts no right, and performs no duty of an owner. On the other hand, the junior warrantee, and those claiming under him, enter immediately upon their tract, to build, and plant, and sow, and pay the taxes. Successive generations live and die upon it. The whole of it is repeatedly bought and sold and paid for in good faith. The extent of the claim embracing the interference, is not only seen from the marks on the ground, which any one can trace, but from the records of the Land Office, the Recorder of Deeds, the Register's Office, the Orphans' Court, the books of the County Treasurer, the Office of the County Commissioners, and on every assessment of taxes, (or at least on most of them,) for half a century. After all this, would not any Court presume a conveyance of the interest which the elder warrantee had in the interference? Such presumption is required by all analogy, and in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, it would accord with the truth. It would be quite as just, and more natural than the similar presumption made in Striimpfer v. Roberts. But here the elder warrantee makes no claim. John Graff is willing to abide by the contract which the law presumes him to have made. Barney Hole, an intruder and a stranger, is to have the benefit of a title, which Graff, while he was living, and his descendants since his death, have always been too honest to assert.

But there is no need of resorting to fundamental principles, analogies, and presumptions. The very question now before us has been repeatedly and solemnly ruled. In Kite v. Brown, (5 Barr, 291) Waggoner v. Hastings, (5 Barr, 300,) Lauderbaugh v. Seigle, (5 Barr, 503,) Mann v. Fitch, (8 Barr,) Billheimer v. Steele—in each of these cases, this precise point came directly up, was argued by able counsel, was carefully considered and decided. The reasons of the judgment were given at length, and on every occasion were unanimously agreed to by the judges. The plaintiff's land cannot be taken from him without overturning the rule established and defined in these cases. It is this: That where two surveys interfere, and the owner of the junior survey enters upon any part of his tract, he is in the actual possession of all the land within his lines, and such actual possession ousts the other party from his constructive possession of the interference, unless he too enters upon his tract, and thus restores the equilibrium of possession. Every one of the cases was a claim of the junior warrantee to be protected by the statute under an occupancy of twenty-one years, without showing any enclosure of the interference, and in every one of them it was held that he was protected. This doctrine was universally acquiesced in. It had long before been declared by Judge Huston, in Hockenbury v. Snyder, (2 W. & S. 240,) to have been uniformly held as the law of Pennsylvania. It commended itself by its simplicity, its justice, and its consistency with all the principles previously determined. In our whole system of land-law, there was no rule of property that seemed more firmly settled. No doubt thousands have invested their money and their labor on the faith of it. To overthrow it now is to prove that nothing is safe.

How it was regarded by the profession is shown by the way in which this case has been conducted. When it was first tried the court below gave the plaintiff all of the John Graff tract which was interfered with by the whole three of the plaintiff's surveys. A writ of error was taken for the sole purpose of getting a decision here, that the plaintiff could not have that one on which he had no improvement. That he was entitled to the part interfered with by the other two on which he lived was not denied. Not a word was uttered in argument either for or against the rule settled in Kite v. Brown, and the other cases. The counsel of the plaintiff in error knew the whole ground very well, for he was one of the foremost men in the state; but he could not then be tempted to make the point which has since been so successful. Even on the last argument he barely raised it, and did not press it. I am thoroughly satisfied that no judicial legislation on this subject can have the approbation of his judgment, and his opinions are a fair sample of what is thought by the best men in the profession every where.

If the rule in Kite v. Brown had been opposed by other decisions of this court, there might be reason for declaring it abolished. But there is not a solitary case, old or recent, that impugns it in the least. It is true (and it has been uniformly so held) that a person who occupies land adjoining to a survey, and who without authority and of his own head, marks his lines over on his neighbor's tract, acquires thereby no possession, and no rights. Such were the cases of Cluggage v. Duncan, (1 S. & R. 111,) Burns v. Swift,

(2 S. & R. 436,) Altemus v. Trimble, (9 Barr, 232) Wright v. Guier, (9 W. 172,) and some others. No one has ever been so extravagant as to suppose that the making of lines upon another's land without any pretence of authority from the Commonwealth was more or less than a trespass. A person who acts thus is a naked wrongdoer in no respect better than Barney Hole himself. But how any human ingenuity can confound such a case in principle with the case of one official survey interfering with another, passes my comprehension. An official survey is always color of title at least. Lines made by a trespasser are not color of title; and that makes all the difference in the world. But, even if the distinction were not as broad and palpable as it is, is it not enough that the law has made a distinction, which all authority recognizes and every body acts upon? I think so.

I could say much by way of proving that the rule I contend for is wholesome in its operation, and that no other rule equally just and simple can be substituted in its place. But that is surely not necessary. When a principle of law is established by a long series of decisions without a single case on the other side; to carry it out in plain good faith, is as sacred a duty as any judge has to perform. His own notion that it ought to be otherwise is not entitled to a moment's consideration. It is no part of our office to tinker at the law, and patch it up with new materials of our own making. Suitors are entitled to it just as it is. Bad laws can be borne; but the ius vagum aut incertum—the law that shifts and changes every time it passes through the courts is as sore an evil and as heavy a curse as any people can suffer; and no people who are fit for self-government will suffer it long. Even a legislator, if he is wise and thoughtful, will make no change which is not absolutely necessary. Legislative changes however are prospective, and disturb nothing that is past. But judge-made laws sweep away all the rights which may have been acquired on the faith of previous rules. For such wrongs even the legislature can furnish no redress. When the scales of justice are shaken by the hands that hold them here, there is no power elsewhere to adjust them. A simple man who has invested his money in the purchase of a title solemnly pronounced indefeasible in half a dozen cases decided by the highest tribunal of the state, may wake up from his dream of security to find himself ruined by a contrary ruling of the very same question.

The judgment now about to be given is one of "death's doings." No one can doubt that if Judge Gibson and Judge Coulter had lived, the plaintiff could not have been thus deprived of his property; and thousands of other men would have been saved from the imminent danger to which they are now exposed of losing the homes they have labored and paid for. But they are dead; and the law which should have protected those sacred rights has died with them. It is a melancholy reflection that the property of a citizen should be held by a tenure so frail. But "new lords, new laws" is the order of the day. Hereafter if any man be offered a title which the Supreme Court has decided to be good, let him not buy if the judges who made the decision are dead; if they are living let him get an insurance on their lives; for ye know not what a day or an hour may bring forth.

The majority of this court changes on the average once every nine years, without counting the chances of death and resignation. If each new set of judges shall consider themselves at liberty to overthrow the doctrines of their predecessors, our system of jurisprudence (if system it can be called) would be the most fickle, uncertain and vicious that the civilized world ever saw. A French constitution, or a South American republic, or a Mexican administration would be an immortal thing in comparison to the short lived principles of Pennsylvania law. The rules of property which ought to be as steadfast as the hills, will become as unstable as the waves. To avoid this great calamity, I know of no resource but that of stare decisis. I claim nothing for the great men who have gone before us on the score of their marked and manifest superiority. But I would stand by their decisions, because they have passed into the law and become a part of it—have been relied on and acted on—and rights have grown up under them which it is unjust and cruel to take away.

Opinions by Judge Hare.

DONNELLY vs. THE PUBLISHERS OF THE PUBLIC LEDGER.

This was an action brought to recover damages for an alleged libel, being an item of police intelligence which appeared in the local columns of the Ledger in July last. The following is the charge of Judge Hare:

Gentlemen of the Jury:—The questions you have to pass upon are, whether the defendants are guilty of publishing a libel, and if so, whether the circumstances set up by the defence are a justification of that publication? If not, then it will be for you to pass upon the amount of damages to which the plaintiff is entitled for the injury complained of. As to what is a libel there is no difference of opinion; it is any writing which renders a man odious and ridiculous, or imputes to him a crime for which he may be punished by the laws of his country; any thing which imputes a criminal offence, even when there is but one ear to listen, is slander; much less may be a libel, where the matter is published to the world.

Much had been said in the present case, as to whether the decision of a writing, to be a libel, is a matter for the determination of the jury under the direction of the Court, or, is to be decided solely by the Court. I entertain no doubt that the Court may say what is not a libel: the right to say what is, may be more doubtful. In cases of indictment for libel, the question is one of much importance; in civil causes where damages are sought and can only be given by the jury, comparatively trivial. I have told you what the legal definition of a libel is, and leave it to you to say whether this writing falls within it. This I do the more readily because the question would seem too plain to admit of argument. The plaintiff is charged with having driven his wife with violence from his house, while she was in an advanced state of pregnancy, and without even the poor excuse which might arise from intoxication. The only real question under these circumstances, is not whether this charge, unexplained and unjustified, is a libel, but whether there is enough to explain and justify it. One thing which meets us at the threshold of this inquiry, is the position of the defendants as editors of a newspaper. The public press is one of the great powers of the day; it is a great public benefit, but, like all great powers, is capable of abuse and of inflicting injury in proportion to its capacity for doing good. It is, therefore, important to determine what are the rules by which its powers may be best guided for good, and withheld from evil. One rule which may be stated without fear of contradiction, is that the editor of a public journal may tell the truth in all cases, without fear of the consequences, and that while he does so, he cannot be made answerable in a civil proceeding, nor indeed anywhere, unless on the ground of malice, or a wanton interference with the comfort and happiness of others.

Another rule which may be stated with equal confidence is that he cannot state what is false, to the injury of another, without being responsible for the consequences. These two rules, which are as distinct as truth and falsehood, might seem to cover the whole ground, and to be incapable of conflicting with each other. But there is notwithstanding, a debatable ground which lies between them, and where they both have their influence. An assertion that another has made a statement, is true, if he have made it; and yet if that statement be false and libellous, the truth will not protect those who repeat it. This holds good of the editor of a newspaper, as well as of all other persons, for the law will look to the substance which is untrue, and not merely to the form, and will consider the original wrong as aggravated and repeated by him who gives it currency. Hence a newspaper cannot justify the repetition of a misstatement, on the ground that it was derived from another person, whose name is, or is not mentioned, however true it may be that he actually made it.

It remains to apply these principles to reports in public papers, of proceedings in courts of Justice. A newspaper may publish, without fear, all the facts which occur in the course of such proceedings—that the accused is charged, arraigned, tried, or convicted—for these are facts, and the truth will be a justification. And I have no doubt, and so I instruct you, that it may go further, and by an exception to the rule which makes those who reiterate the statements of others liable for their correctness, may publish all that is said by the witnesses, the counsel, the jury, or the Court, in the course of the proceedings, without other responsibility than that of giving a fair and candid statement of the whole. But here its privileges terminate. It is not entitled to make a proceeding in a public tribunal the occasion of a charge made, as of its own knowledge, against the accused; if it does so it will fall within the peril of the general maxim, that those who make allegations impugning the conduct and character of others, are responsible for the truth of what they assert.

Here the effort has been to show that this publication was a statement of what actually occurred in the magistrate's office, and as such is a privileged communication; but it is evident from what I have said, that the privilege only extends to that part of it which is a statement of what actually took place in the office, and does not extend to that larger part which professes to narrate the events which occurred previously, and resulted in the application there. It is also plain that, as the defendants have not proved the truth of the charge made against the plaintiff, and as the charge is not one to be privileged, if untrue, your chief duty will be to determine, what amount of damages should be awarded for the injury done to the plaintiff. For this purpose the cause and origin of the libel should be looked to, and are of the first importance; and for this purpose I have gone in the admission of evidence to the limits of what the law permits. It is obvious how wide the difference must be between a libel originating in a repetition of a statement made to the reporter of a newspaper by a public officer, and a libel wholly without foundation, or without other foundation than wanton malice.

The evidence here shows that the wife of the plaintiff did apply in the middle of the night, and in the advanced state of pregnancy which the libel states, to the Lieut. of Police of the District in which her husband lived—that she charged him with having committed an outrage upon her; that she showed bruises upon her person, which she said had been caused by his violence, and that she so far enlisted the sympathies of the officers of the police, who may be supposed to have been competent judges of the truth of her story, as to induce them to take her to the nearest magistrate, who heard her testimony under oath, issued a warrant for her husband, and bound him over to take his trial at the Quarter Sessions. That the prosecution thus commenced against him was discontinued, and that the charge on which it was based must, at least for the purposes of this trial, be presumed to have been unfounded, is undoubtedly true.

But it is also true that the charge is one which, when believed, naturally roused the strongest indignation in all who heard it. I am far from justifying the language in which this article was written; those who hold the pen, in situations where every word they write, will be borne abroad the next morning on the wings of the wind, to bear fruit wherever it should chance to fall, should remember the immense responsibility which they incur, and should be cautious of saying, even negligently, that which may give pain and do mischief beyond their power to cure. But it is also true, that the jury may take the circumstances of this case into view, in determining whether the allegation made in the defendants' newspaper was the result of malice, or of honest, though, perhaps, mistaken indignation at wrong.

In as far as the injury to the plaintiff's character is the result of circumstances with which the defendants have nothing to do—in as far as it results from the charge that was made against him by his wife at the station-house, and from his being held to bail the next morning by the alderman, it may be his misfortune; it is certainly not their fault.

They are only responsible for giving these facts currency in a form calculated to heighten and exaggerate the effect on the public mind. We may also remember, that the article was put into the paper without consultation with them and without their knowledge. That will not relieve them from responsibility for the act of their agent, but may have much influence in estimating the degree of moral wrong.

The question of damages is one emphatically for the decision of the jury. The great point is, that there should be no legal barrier to exclude questions affecting the protection of individuals against the power of the press from the jury box. When there, the jurors can apply the corrective as the circumstances of each case may require. There may be instances in which the heaviest damages will not be too much; there are others in which the demands of justice may be satisfied with the lightest.

The jury found a verdict for the plaintiff $1 damages and 6 cents costs.

MORREL v. THE BANK OF PENNSYLVANIA.

That the State cannot be sued, is a maxim which no one is likely to dispute, and it is equally plain that it cannot be made a garnishee in an attachment execution, which differs from an ordinary suit in nothing, but the substitution of one actor for another. It necessarily follows, that State stock, which is simply a debt due, by the State, can neither be attached in the hands of the State herself, nor in those of the persons whom she selects as her agents for its transfer or payment. She owes the money, and they, when furnished with funds, may owe it for her to the owner of the stock, but he is entirely dependent on her justice for its payment, and his creditors stand in the same position. The attachment execution issued in this case against the Bank of Pennsylvania, is therefore wholly inoperative, and confers no right on the attaching creditor.

If the defendant's case fails in this point of view, it is equally defective in every other. The power of attorney which he seeks to set up as a transfer or assignment, is simply a power, and contains nothing that can make it operate as a grant. The authority which it conferred, was therefore uncoupled with an interest, and subject to revocation at any moment by the principal. That the principal was indebted to the agent at the time of giving the power, certainly did not vary its effect or convert it into an assignment. The assent of the bank to the demand made for a transfer of the stock under the power, might have enabled the agent to rely on the law of set-off, as an excuse for appropriating it to his own use, instead of to that of his principal; but the advantage thus gained would have been indirect, perhaps unwarrantable; and no interest could grow out of their refusal, which even, if wrong, gave at the most a right of action. The case of Hunt v. Rousmanier, 12 Wheaton, goes much further than is necessary for the decision of this, for there a power given expressly as a security for a debt, was held to cease on the death of the donor, and pass no title even as against his executors. Here no intention to secure or in any way benefit the donee of the power is alleged, while the plaintiff is a bona fide purchaser, and not a mere volunteer. Judgment is consequently entered for the plaintiff, in the case stated.

The following opinion possesses considerable interest, as containing much learning upon the subject of rent-charges. It was delivered in the District Court by Judge Hare.

ROBERT vs. RISTINE.

A provision in a grant of land reserving rent that if the rent be in arrear, the grantor may re-enter, is a condition which can only be enforced by the grantor and heirs; but a similar provision in a grant of rent out of land is a power, and like other powers coupled with an interest which they are to protect, may be exercised by any one to whom the interest is subsequently transferred or assigned. If this distinction which was thoroughly well settled at common law, has undergone any change in our country, it has been by communicating the capacity for transfer to the condition, and not by restricting the assignable quality of the power. Hence it follows that when the rent in the case now before us, (which is as genuine an example of the common law rent charge, granted out of land, as if it had been exhumed from the recesses of the year books,) was assigned to the plaintiff, he acquired a full legal right to the power, and with it a remedy for the recovery and protection of his estate in the rent.—This disposes at once of the argument that he should be allowed to recover on equitable grounds for want of legal remedy, and limits the inquiry to the question whether he has made proper use of means given for his benefit by the law. No demand was made of the rent either at the day on the land, or at any other time elsewhere; nor did the plaintiff make a formal entry to obtain that possession, which either in fact or by fiction of law, must precede and sustain every action of ejectment. We need not determine whether an entry for breach of condition can be dispensed with, under the writ given by act of Assembly in this state, for the recovery of land, as it unquestionably may under the consent rule in England, because we are clearly of opinion that the failure to demand the rent is a fatal objection. Nothing is better settled than that a demand on the land is essential to the right of entry for the non-payment of rent, arising on a reservation, and the rule seems to be the same when it is created by grant. The case of Doe vs. Horeely, 1 A. & E. 766, which might at first sight induce an opposite conclusion, merely decides that a power to enter and hold land until the arrears of rent are satisfied, may be enforced without a demand, because it is a security and therefore has no bearing on the case like the present where the power is one of absolute defeasance or forfeiture. Nor can any aid be derived from the case of Haverhill vs. Hare, Croke, Jac. 511, where the point decided was, that the levy of a fine of land, in aid of the grantee, of a rent granted out of it, and of his assignees, will raise a springing use, of which the grantee may take advantage, as it would seem, either by demand or entry, for the only assurance executed in the case now before us is limited solely to the grant of the rent, leaving the land itself untouched, and, hence, no use is possible, Coke, Lit., 203, and note 3. The whole ground is expressly or implicitly covered by the second resolution in Mawend's case, 7 Coke, 2994, cited and abridged, Coke, Lit., 144, a.

This clearly shows first that a power of entry of distress will pass with an assignment of rent, for the security of which it is given, and next that a demand must be made at the day before proceeding under the former power, although unnecessary under the latter, which is a remedy merely, and not a forfeiture. We are therefore somewhat reluctantly of the opinion, that a demand on the land, and at the day, was necessary in the case now before us, and that as it was not made, the plaintiff's case fails in an important particular, and judgment must be entered for the defendant on the point reserved. #### AN IMPORTANT DECISION.

A brief notice of a recent decision of Judge Potts, of New Jersey, has been going the rounds of the newspapers. The question involved being one of considerable interest to Banks and the community generally, we have taken considerable pains to ascertain the facts of the case and the leading points of the decision of the learned judge.

The suit was brought by the Burlington County Bank of Medford, New Jersey, against Daniel L. Miller, of Philadelphia, for $1812, being the amount of a check which William W. Fleming forged in the name of C. E. French, and passed upon Mr. Miller in payment of cash loaned by Mr. Miller to Fleming. The Bank paid the check, and then sued Mr. Miller to recover it, alleging that they had discovered that it was a forgery.

It appeared clearly in evidence, that the check was a forgery perpetrated by Fleming, who drew it to the order of Mr. Miller. The check was paid by the Bank on the 9th September, 1854; on that day Fleming stopped payment, owing Mr. Miller a large sum of borrowed money. Fleming made a general assignment of all his property on the 11th September; was subsequently arrested, so arranged as to get from under arrest, and on the 30th of same month fled the country. Mr. Miller was shown to have been a bona fide holder, who had received the check in good faith for a valuable consideration. The officers of the Bank testified that it was a forgery; that they were all acquainted with French's signature, who had kept an account in the Bank for two or three years, that they paid the check without hesitation, believing it to be genuine, that they did not themselves detect it as a forgery till the 18th, nor acquaint Mr. Miller of it till about the 20th, when he called at the Bank. When the testimony offered by the plaintiffs was concluded, Mr. Miller's counsel, without examining the witnesses in attendance for the defence, moved a non suit, which, after a very able argument by Messrs. Dudley and Dayton for the motion, and Messrs. Browning and Stratton, representing the Bank against the motion, Judge Potts granted a non suit in an able and elaborate decision.

The judge said that he had examined all the authorities to which his attention had been called, and a number of others, and that they all, without exception, confirmed the general principle. The acceptance of a time draft is bound by his acceptance, even though he discovers the forgery before the maturity or payment of the draft. The payer of a single draft which proves to be a forgery, cannot recover back the money paid, he is presumed to know the signature of his drawer. The Bank which pays a forged check must bear the loss, and cannot recover back the money. The law will not allow one innocent party to shift his loss on another innocent party, especially where the party losing is in fault or negligent.

A Bank is presumed to know the signatures of its customers. That knowledge is chargeable upon it as a duty, as its business, while the holder is not chargeable with that knowledge. Such appeared plainly to be the law; and, said he, it is reasonable that it should be so. A Bank sees all the checks which it pays for its customers; it is a part of the business of banks to pay the checks of their depositors, and so know their signatures while any holder may have seen but few, perhaps none before.

But, clear as he was upon the foregoing ground, even if mistaken in that, there was, he said, in this case, gross negligence on the part of the Bank which would prevent a recovery, even if, under any circumstances, they could recover after paying.—They paid this check on the 9th of September; and while it was their duty to have detected the forgery and promptly advise Miller, they testify they did not themselves discover it till the 18th, nor inform Mr. Miller before the 20th. In the mean while Fleming fails and by assignment disposes himself of all his property. Who can say that had the Bank promptly pronounced this check a forgery, that Mr. Miller would not have at least secured this amount, perhaps part or all of the large sum Fleming was owing him? Besides, the facts and evidence leave such an inference as quite possible or probable.—Jersey Blue.

The Bank of Cash Credits.

Application will be made to the Legislature of Pennsylvania, for the Charter of a Bank Issue with general Banking privileges, with a capital of ONE MILLION OF DOLLARS. Said Bank, to be located in the City of Philadelphia, and to be conducted upon the system of cash credits only, as is herewith indicated.

A cash credit is a credit given to an individual by a Banking Company, for a limited sum, seldom under $500, or $1000, upon his own security, and that of two or three individuals, approved by the Bank, who become sureties for its payment. The individual who has obtained such a credit, is enabled, to draw the whole sum, or any part of it, when he pleases; replacing it, or portions of it, according as he finds it convenient; interest being charged upon such part only as he draws out.

"If a man borrows $1000, from a private hand, and even then it is not always to be found when required, he pays interest for it, whether he be using it or not. His bank credit costs him nothing, except during the moment it is of service to him, and this circumstance is of equal advantage as if he had borrowed money at a much lower rate of interest."

Cash credits are not, however, intended to be a dead load; the main objects of the Banks in granting them is to get their notes circulated, and they do not grant them except to persons in business, or to those who are frequently drawing out and paying in money.

Any person who applies to a Bank for a cash credit, is called upon to produce sureties, and, after a full inquiry into the character of the applicant, the nature of his business, and the sufficiency of his securities, he is allowed to open a credit, and to draw upon the Bank for the whole of its amount, or for such part as his daily transaction may require. To the credit of the account, he pays in such sums as he may not have occasion to use, and interest is charged or credited upon the balance, as the case may be. From the facility which these cash credits give to all the small transactions of the country, and from the opportunities which they afford to persons who begin business with little or no capital but their character, to employ profitably the minutest products of their industry, it cannot be doubted that the most important advantages are derived in the whole community.

THE PERSON WHO BORROWED A SURVEY of the Village of Richmond from the undersigned, will confer a favor by returning the same without delay. EDWARD SHIPEN, f. 8. S. E. Cor. 6th and Walnut Sts.

A MERITORIOUS CARD.

Hail! honored age of grand progression,
While each one clings to his profession,
And science moves with onward motion,
To suit each wayward thought and notion,
Bringing to light some new invention,
More strange than modern wit on mention,
Or Genius paint with true endeavor,
Though making graphic strides forever,
While Reason urges proud Ambition,
To strive for wondrous Competition;
Yet, in this age of glorious Art,
We can the meed of praise impart,
When meritorious efforts claim
A modest puff to gild the name:
And thus we call, with honest pride,
Attention to the Painter's side,—
A man who bravely knows his calling,
Whose works are worthy of extolling,
A model Artist of the day,
And most obliging in his way,
(GEORGE H. BANCROFT,—mark the name,
In CHESTNUT STREET you'll find the same,
Call at Five Hundred and Thirty-One,
You'll get the best of painting done,
In Modern or in Classic Order,
From templed shrine to parlor border,
In magic tints of every hue,
To Signs embossed in gold and blue,
Or Figure Head, or Church, or Steeple,
He is resolved to please the people,
And whether foe, or friend or neighbor,
Will charge but moderate for his labor.
We thus invite each one and all,
To give this worthy man a call.
Who will, we venture to engage,
Feel grateful for your patronage.*

* We would particularly invite public attention to our friend Mr. BANCROFT, who is a young, enterprising beginner, and who has gone to vast expense in fitting up his establishment, and is now ready to receive orders for Painting, in all its various branches, at 531 and 533 Chestnut street, 5 doors east of Seventeenth st.

The following valuable opinions of the work have been received by Judge Catron of the U. S. Supreme Court.

"Hardly a stronger guaranty could be afforded to the American Bar that the work has merit, than the fact that Mr. Wharton was author of the legal portion of the book."
JOHN CATRON.

From Professor Parsons of the Cambridge Law School.

"I have not had time to examine it critically, but have read enough to convince me that it is an instructive and valuable work. Some of its topics, which are quite new in a book on this subject, are shown to be among the most important."
THEOPHILUS PARSONS.

From Judge McLean of the U. S. Supreme Court.

"I have not had time to look minutely through the volume, but from the known ability of the authors, and their experience, I am sure the book must be very interesting and useful, not only to the profession of the law, but also to general readers. A modern treatise of this kind, embodying the experience of jurists and medical men, with decisions of courts, was much wanted; and I am satisfied that able pens than those employed, could not have been engaged in its production."
JOHN MCLEAN.

REPORTS OF THE COMMON LAW COURTS OF ENGLAND.

Containing the cases decided in the Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Nisi Prius Courts, from 1813 to 1855, and in the Court of Exchequer and Exchequer Chamber, from 1824 to 1855, are found in

The Regular and Authoritative Series of the English Common Law and English Exchequer Reports,

Which present the following claims to the support of the profession:

1. They are the only series issued as the authoritative and acknowledged medium by which the decisions of the Law Courts of England are made public.

2. They contain Later Reports than the Boston series, are more fully and more ably reported, and so arranged by preservation of the original paging, that reference by reporters, or by elementary writers, can be traced as readily as in the English editions.

Vol. 2, Ellis & Blackburne's (75 E. C. L. R.,) Reports (Q. B.) to January, 1854, was published by us in June, 1854. At that time the last Queen's Bench case printed in the Boston Law and Equity Reports, was of June 25, 1853. Our volume contained cases decided five months later. The Queen's Bench cases to November 25, 1853, were published in the Boston series in August, 1854, two months after we had distributed the same cases.

Vol. 3, Ellis & Blackburne, (77 E. C. L. R.,) with cases to the end of Trinity Term, 1854, was published when the latest case of Queen's Bench decisions in the Boston series, was of February 8, 1854, more than four months behind the regular reporters.

Exchequer Reports, vol. 9, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) distributed by us January 11, 1855, contains cases to May 10, 1854. The last Exchequer case then in the Boston series was decided February 9, 1854, four months behind the regular Reporter, issued in Philadelphia.

3. They contain more cases decided by the courts represented, than any other series issued in this country.

Vol. 77 English Common Law, (3 E. & B.,) reports eighty-six cases decided in the Queen's Bench since January 11, 1854, while but fifty-eight Queen's Bench cases, decided since January 1, 1854, are found scattered among Vols. 22, 24 and 25 of the Boston Law and Equity.

Vol. 78 E. C. L. K. (5 J. Scott,) reports sixty-five cases decided since Nov. 13, 1853, in the Common Pleas, while the L. & E. has but fifty-seven cases in that Court since the same period.

Vol. 9 Exchequer Reports, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) reports one hundred and ten cases in the Courts of Exchequer, decided since June 24, 1853, while since the same date, the L. & E. report but 107 cases, scattered through vols. 20, 22, 24 and 25.

4. They are almost exclusively cited in argument of counsel, and referred to by Elementary Writers for Law Authorities. See Smith's Leading Cases, Smith's Contracts, Smith's Landlord and Tenant, by Maude; Byles on Bills and Promissory Notes, Broom's Legal Maxims, Broom's Commentaries on the Laws of England, or almost any recent Law Book issued in England.

5. The Philadelphia Reports are edited by Judge Sharswood and by Judge Hare, whose labors as editors and authors have made them so well and so favorably known to the profession.

6. The Boston Law and Equity is made up in this country from the Law Journal, Jurist, Times and other Law periodicals, of a weekly, monthly, or quarterly character, and being unknown in England, is never cited in Court, or referred to by Law writers. The periodicals from which it is extracted, are occasionally cited under their own particular names, but they do not possess that permanent value, even in England, which is all-important in a series of Reports.

A carefully prepared and accurate Annual Digest of all the cases decided by the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Exchequer, will be distributed, early in each year, to subscribers to either series, free of charge. That for 1854 is ready, and will be mailed to subscribers who have not received a copy.

English Law and Equity Reports.

ENGLISH REPORTS IN LAW AND EQUITY. A Complete Collection of the Cases decided by the House of Lords, the Privy Council, the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas and Exchequer, the Lord Chancellor, the High Court of Appeal in Chancery, the Court of Criminal Appeal, and the Admiralty and Ecclesiastical Courts. Reprinted within a few weeks after the decisions are rendered.

This series has the merit of being complete, reliable, prompt, convenient, and cheap. It is now universally cited in the courts, and referred to in the recent law books as standard authority. All the cases reported in England, are here reprinted from the most reliable sources, as soon as they reach this country.

These Reports are now regularly digested in our Annual United States Digest, which thus embraces an annual digest of the whole English and American Law.

We have now in Preparation, and shall soon Publish,

A separate Digest of these Reports, embracing the first thirty-one volumes of the series, prepared with express reference to the convenience of the American profession, and exhibiting a complete synopsis of all the English Decisions reported in those volumes during the last five years; also a Table of Cases referring to all the contemporaneous English Reports. This will be the first Digest of English Decisions prepared expressly for the American Lawyer, and it is intended to give it the same advantages over the English Digests hitherto reprinted in this country, which the American text books have generally been found to possess over the English.

The Law and Equity Reports will be continued on the same plan as heretofore; the number of volumes being reduced to four per year; and Digests will be published from time to time as the convenience of the profession demands.

Vols. 1 to 31, now ready for delivery, at $2 00 per volume.

NOTICE.

THE Subscriber takes this method of informing his numerous friends, and the public in general, that he is now prepared to execute in a superior manner, every variety of HOUSE and SIGN PAINTING, Graining, Bronzing, Gilding on Glass and Stained Glass, Calomining Ceilings, Walls, &c., &c. China and Glass Painting executed in a superior manner, and warranted not to CRACK. Ceilings cleaned and Whitened, and made equal to new, at a cost little over that of whitewash. The subscriber would state here that it frequently occurs that persons attempt to use this article who have no knowledge of it whatever, either in the mixing or putting it on, and the consequence is, the job is spoiled, and the article condemned without a proper trial.—So also with CHINA GLOSS; to make a good job it requires a practical knowledge of the use of the brush, as also the making of the Gloss. In regard to the ZINC WHITE, the subscriber would most respectfully recommend it as an article far superior to any other paint now in use, for whiteness and durability of color.

The Subscriber would respectfully solicit a portion of the patronage of those getting Painting done. Feeling grateful for the many favors already bestowed by his friends, he still hopes to share their patronage by unremitting attention to their calls. Those who have large contracts to give out, need have no hesitancy in calling, as he is prepared to give every satisfaction in regard to work, both in reference and security, for the faithful performance of all agreements. The Subscriber can be found at the S. E. CORNER OF FOURTH AND WALNUT STS. where he will be happy to receive any orders. Aug. 24—1 yr. JACOB S. BEAM.

A committee of twenty-one to further promote the object in view is to be appointed by the chair. We will give a full report of the proceedings in our next paper.

SCHUMACKER v. EBY.

Error to Lancaster County.
Philadelphia, January 24, 1856.

Opinion by Lowrie, J. J.

Looking at the evidence and the charge together we find that the instruction to the jury was: That when one has advanced money for another on the faith of an engagement that goods should be consigned for sale to meet the advances, and they are so consigned through the medium of a common carrier, to be delivered to the lender, and a bill of lading is sent to him accordingly; and while they are on their way, the lender purchases the full title to them in part payment of his advances, and gets a bill and receipt for them; this does not transfer the title as against other creditors. It seems to us that this is erroneous. The little leaven in the case of Clow v. Woods, 5 S. & R. 275, has leavened its own lump well; but it was never intended that the whole batch of commercial law should be affected by it.

A delivery of goods to a carrier in pursuance of a contract of sale or lien, is a delivery to the vendee or creditor so far as to pass the title intended; and the possession of a bill of lading for the delivery of the goods to the holder of it, or to another who has endorsed it to the holder, is as complete evidence of the holder's title to the goods as the possession of a bill of exchange or promissory note by the payee or regular endorsee is of title to the debt which it represents.

But if the person for whom the goods are intended, fails before actual receipt of them from the carrier, without paying for them, or without paying the debt which they were intended to secure; the consignor may reclaim the goods by stopping them in transitu just as the maker of a promissory note, or the acceptor of a bill of exchange may refuse payment when the consideration fails. Not so, however, if the bill of lading has been regularly, fairly, and for value endorsed to another.

It is the legitimate evidence of title to the goods, and he who does not appear as the regular holder of it, is subject to have them stopped in favour of a higher equity, just as a mere equitable holder of other negotiable paper is subject to the defences which are good against the payer, or he may lose his claim in favor of one who may become the regular holder of the bill by way of pledge or purchase, but not in favor of any general creditor, or of assignees for creditors; for an equitable transfer of goods in transitu is good enough against them. 1 Binn. 106; 4 Mees. & W. 775; 1 Bing. 150; 2 id. 20; 2 Barn. & Cress. 540; 1 Bos. & P. 563; 2 Tenn. R. 485; 7 State R. 89; 16 Pick. 25; 5 N. Hamp. 510; 2 Pick. 599; 5 Johns. 335; 12 Barb. 310.

These principles are now regarded as well settled parts of the commercial law, especially since some mistakes (5 T. R. 604; 4 Rawle, 190), have been corrected by the statute 6 Geo. 4, c. 94, and by our Consignee and Factor Act of 1834. Since then the possession of the bill of lading is, as evidence of title, equivalent to the possession of the goods themselves.

When these goods were given to the carrier to be forwarded to the plaintiff on account of his advances, he obtained the legal title to them for the purpose of lien and sale; and when he bought out the consignor's title, he obtained a release of his remaining interest, and this needed no delivery.

Judgment reversed, and new trial awarded.

ROBINSON et al. v. MORRISON.

Error to Fayette County.

Opinion by Knox J.

Philadelphia, January 8, 1856.

A married woman residing in Pennsylvania, whose husband had abandoned her for seventeen years, and removed to another State, after her husband's desertion inherited land from her father's estate. She, by her separate deed, conveyed to one Bryan, who gave his bond for the purchase money, which was not paid, and made valuable improvements. The land was sold on execution by his creditors, and bought by plaintiffs in error.

An action of ejectment was brought in name of Morrison & wife. Morrison died before trial, leaving the wife surviving.

Held, That the deed from the wife alone was void; that she could not gain the control of her estate without the husband's consent, notwithstanding his abandonment.

It was also held, That the marriage might be established by proof of cohabitation and reputation.

District Court.

Opinion by Judge Hare.

GOODRICH AND OTHERS v. ODENHEIMER.

Bill in Equity. Feb. 2, 1856.

So far as the success of the complainants here, depends upon the want of an adequate legal remedy, there can be little doubt of their right to maintain this proceeding. Rights founded in contract, are ordinarily susceptible of compensation in damages, and therefore fall within the exclusive jurisdiction of law, but the rule is one which admits of many exceptions. Two of the complainants are strangers to the contract which they seek to enforce; and although the third is a party, his claim is for specific performance and indemnity. His title to equitable assistance is therefore manifest; nor can there be much doubt as to that of the others.

A stipulation in a contract inter partes, for the benefit of a stranger, is essentially a trust, and therefore within the jurisdiction of equity. Nor, if equity had refused its aid, could there have been formerly, any redress at law. Assumpsit, which is the chief, and in many cases, the only legal remedy for breaches of contract, was originally an action on the case, for the wrong done the plaintiff, by inducing him to part with his goods or services, by promises deceitfully made, or fraudulently broken. Hence, the right of suit necessarily vested in him from whom the consideration of the promise moved, and not in him who would have reaped the benefit of its fulfillment. Edmundson v. Penny, (1 Barr, 334,) and Price v. Euston, (4 B. & Ad. 433,) may be cited as modern cases, applying and vindicating a doctrine, which is thoroughly well established by the earlier precedents. Reason, however, soon pointed out, that as the foundation of assumpsit is contract, and its object compensation, it might be brought by the person really injured by the breach, whether he were, or were not, the source of the consideration. Accordingly, there are a great number of cases, beginning as far back as Dutton v. Poole, (2 Lev. 210,) and increasing in number with the advance of time, which decide that where a promise founded on a consideration moving from one man, results in an obligation in favor of another, he shall not be debarred from recovering, merely because he is a stranger to the transaction in which it originated. Thus, the payment of money to A. on the faith of an express or implied promise that he will pay it over to B. will entitle B. to an action for money had and received to his use; and authorities are not wanting to the point, that a similar right may grow out of the deposit and receipt of goods.

But this course of decision necessarily meets with an insuperable obstacle, notwithstanding the disposition which the courts have shown to enlarge and extend it, in those instances where a contract which confers a beneficial interest on a stranger, is also intended for the benefit or protection of the person with whom it is made, or who is the source of the consideration on which it is founded; because, while it would obviously be unjust to deny him a remedy to which he has the best of all possible titles, it would not be less so to expose the promisor to two distinct actions, for what is after all but a single wrong. Hence, the law is compelled, under these circumstances, to recede within its ancient boundaries, and leave the task of assisting those who are beneficially interested in the performance of the promise, to the more comprehensive and discriminating powers of equity, which can unite all the parties in one proceeding, and do justice among them by a single decree.

It remains to apply these principles, which are drawn in great measure from the able opinion of Sergeant J., in Blymire v. Boiste, (6 Watts, 182,) to the case now before us, which grows out of a somewhat complicated series of transactions. Edward F. Corfield, a merchant of this city, and one of the complainants here, became insolvent in the month of May, 1854, and entered into an arrangement with the respondents, Odenheimer & Cook, and some of his other creditors, by which he agreed to transfer his stock in trade to them, to be appropriated equally to the payment of their respective claims; while they promised to release him from all liability for the demands which they held against him. This arrangement was perfected by a transfer of the stock, and the execution of a release, which contained a collateral promise to take up and return all notes given by Edward F. Corfield, which had been transferred to third persons before it was executed, and were consequently beyond its direct operation. This stipulation seems to have been chiefly intended to guard against a particular note, which had been endorsed by Henry C. Corfield, another of the complainants, for Edward F. Corfield's accommodation, and subsequently negotiated by Odenheimer & Cook to William Goodrich. This note still remains due and unpaid in the hands of Goodrich, and he now sues jointly with Edward F. and Henry C. Corfield, to compel Odenheimer & Cook to perform their promise to take it up, which they have hitherto disregarded. Such, at least, was the position of the case at the time when the bill was filed, but a release executed by Edward F. Corfield, since the exit of the subpoena, has extinguished all claim on his part against the defendants, and narrowed the controversy to the inquiry, whether the other complainants have rights paramount to the release, and susceptible of being enforced in this proceeding.

The position of the chief complainant in the suit, Goodrich, is anomalous and must be examined with some discrimination. His interest in the fulfillment of the engagement made by the respondents, is unquestionable, for he is the holder of the instrument which they agreed to take up, and they cannot perform their agreement without benefiting him. But it is far from being equally clear, that he has not mistaken the nature and extent of the right which this gives him. His is not the position, or do the facts now before us, present the case, of a creditor seeking to enforce a promise for the payment of the debt. He has, at most, proved a promise to save the debtor harmless, against the consequences of the negotiation of a demand from which he had been released, and which, if the purpose of the parties could have taken full effect, would have been extinguished by the force of their agreement. The object of Edward F. Corfield, in exacting the promise to take up the note, was not to benefit those to whom it had been transferred, but to save himself from being injured by the transfer. The promise undoubtedly bound Odenheimer & Cook to do whatever was necessary for its fulfillment, and might therefore have necessitated the full payment of the note, but such a payment far from being the end, was in fact directly contrary to the real object of the agreement. That was the equal appropriation of the assets transferred by Corfield, to the payment of the demands held by the other parties to the transfer; and not to give a preference to a particular debt, held by one who was a stranger to the whole transaction. A chancellor may enforce a contract in favor of one, to whom no promise has been made, and from whom no consideration has proceeded, but he will not do so in contravention of the spirit of the agreement, and will take care to see that every step taken beyond the limits of the law, be in strict subordination to the principles of equity. If, therefore, the contract which lies at the foundation of this suit, were solely a contract, Goodrich could not enforce it, because it was not made for his benefit, although it might have resulted in conferring a benefit upon him, and because his recovery would do violence to the spirit of the agreement, however seemingly consistent with its letter. Nor would this be the only objection—there would still be another, arising out of the incongruous association of persons, claiming in different, if not antagonistic rights, as complainants in the same proceeding.

The maker, the endorser, and the holder of a bill or note, may have a common interest in compelling a third person, upon whom circumstances have cast the duty of paying it, to fulfil his obligation, but they cannot unite for that purpose in a bill, because they stand in adverse and hostile attitudes as between themselves, whatever may be their position towards the defendant; and hence, no alliance is possible between them. The surety may, and generally ought to be, a party to a suit against the principal, but then he should be made so by joining him as defendant and not as plaintiff.

The only way in which these difficulties can be obviated, is by giving the transaction between Edward F. Corfield and the respondents, the effect which it was really intended to have, of a transfer of the assets of Corfield in absolute payment of his debts, whether they had, or had not, been transferred to other persons. Viewed in this light, the contract is a trust, which may be enforced by all who have an interest in its performance, and it becomes plain, that although Goodrich might have held himself aloof, and refused to claim under it, he must now accept the burden with the benefit. He has chosen to ask, and we award him satisfaction, but he must be content to resign his right to performance. And while he thus receives all that he is entitled to have under the agreement to which he has made himself a party, full justice is done to the other complainants, Edward F. Corfield, who only stipulated for indemnity against the note, and Henry C. Corfield, who never was entitled to any thing more.

I say nothing of the release executed by Edward F. Corfield since the institution of the suit, because it is evident that, although it extinguished his rights under the contract, it could not defeat the trust in favor of the other complainants, in which that contract had resulted, and which though created by him, passed beyond his control, as soon as it received their assent and ratification, by the bill filed to secure and enforce its performance.

The court, therefore, order that an account be taken of the assets received by the respondents from Edward F. Corfield, and payment made to William Goodrich of that proportion of the whole amount in their hands, which his claim bears to the demands held by them against Edward F. Corfield; and that, upon such payment, the said note be cancelled and surrendered by the said William Goodrich to the said Edward F. Corfield.

Brightly for plaintiffs; Guillou for defendants.

THE PERTH AMBOY STEAMBOAT Co. v. PARKER.

Demurrer to Plea.

The declaration in this case, is on a judgment in favor of the corporation; the plea, that no such corporation exists. This plea has drawn forth a demurrer, and is, we think, plainly bad, because it contradicts that which the judgment presupposes, and without which it could not have been rendered. Nothing can be pleaded in bar to a suit on a judgment, which would have been a bar to the judgment itself, and the proper time to deny the corporate existence of the plaintiffs, was when the defendant was first summoned to answer their complaint. It has indeed been said that the plea only relates to the time at which it is pleaded, and might be supported by proof that the corporation was dissolved after the judgment was rendered. But if this was what the defendant meant, he should have said so in terms, instead of using language which has, prima facie, a very different meaning. Certainty is essential to every plea in bar, and if its language be equivocal and susceptible of different constructions, that will be adopted which is least favorable to the pleader. Stephens on Pleading, 421, 2d Amer. Ed. And this general rule is emphatically applicable in actions founded upon judgments of record, which are the highest obligations known to the law, and insusceptible of being impugned or contradicted. A plea to a judgment may confess and avoid, but then it must confess plainly, and without equivocation. Were this plea allowed to stand, no evidence could be rejected at the trial of the cause, which tended to support it by showing that the plaintiffs had never been incorporated, and it might be necessary to submit a question to the jury, which ought not to be brought before them. The defendant may amend, otherwise there will be judgment on the demurrer for the plaintiffs.

Court of Common Pleas.

CLARK v. McCORMACK.

Rule for judgment for want of a sufficient affidavit of defence. February 9, 1856, the opinion of the Court was delivered by Allison, J.

This is a scire facias on a recognisance of bail upon a certiorari to remove proceedings before a justice of the peace, into this Court. The affidavit of defence denies the authority of the Prothonotary to take the recognisance upon which the suit is brought; and the question, so far as we have been able to discover, comes directly up, for the first time, for adjudication. The taking of bail upon the issuing of writs of certiorari has certainly the authority of a long and uniform practice to support it, and the right to sue on the recognisance entered was asserted as early as 1825. Patton v. Miller, 13 S. & R. 254, was a scire facias on a recognisance, taken before the Prothonotary of Somerset county on a certiorari to a justice of the peace; but the right of that officer to take the bail, does not seem to have been questioned in that case.

The Act of the 21st of March, 1810, is silent upon the subject of bail; the only pre-requisites to the allowance of the writ, is an oath or affirmation that it is not for the purpose of delay, &c.; and from this it is argued that the authority not being specially delegated to the prothonotary, he cannot assume it.

In Cook v. Rheinhardt, 1 Rawle, 221, Welker v. Welker, 3 Penn. R. 24, and in the case of Young's Petition, 9 Barr, 216, the Supreme Court have decided, that a certiorari is a writ of error in all but its form; its only office being to remove the proceedings for the inspection of the Court. A writ of error is of right, to any one who desires to have a judgment or decree of a Court of record in any matter in which he is interested, reviewed; but it is no supersedeas unless bail in error be put in. It will be found by reference to the Act of the 11th of March, 1809, which authorises the issuing of writs of error from the Supreme Court to the courts of the several counties, that bail is not required to be entered; leaving it to the party purchasing the writ, if he has the right, to put in bail, or not, as he shall deem proper; taking the risk of an execution from the Court below, if the writ issues without the recognisance being entered. The 7th section of the Act recognises the entering of security, though it does not specify in what cases, or what will be its effect; it says, bail, or other surety by law required may be entered, &c. And by the 29th section of the Act of April 25th, 1850, bail may be entered before the prothonotary of the court, from whose decree an appeal is taken. The expression, "bail, or other surety by law required," evidently has reference to the English statutes of 3 James I. ch. 8; 13 Charles II. ch. 2, sect. 9; and 16 and 17 Charles II. ch. 8, sect. 3; Rob. Dig. 41, (all of which have been reported by the judges of the Supreme Court to be in force in Pennsylvania,) which declare that a writ of error shall be no supersedeas, unless accompanied by a recognisance in double the amount of the judgment.

If the writ of certiorari is in substance a writ of error, which the legislature has said may be sued out by any one who desires to have the record of a justice of the peace reviewed, in a case in which he is a party, the statutes of James I. and Charles II. are as applicable to such writs, issuing out of the Common Pleas, as though they issued from the Supreme Court; and the party purchasing the writ has the same right to protect himself against an execution as he would have if it were a proceeding to remove the cause from the Court of Common Pleas, or any other Court of Record into the Supreme Court.

We think it follows by necessary implication that the legislature, in granting the writ, confers, at the same time, all the powers necessary to make the writ effective as a writ of error; and that as the issuing of the certiorari is a ministerial act to be performed by the prothonotary or clerk of the court, he has the authority (the Acts of Assembly being silent upon the subject,) to take the recognisance, which must be entered to make the writ of value to the purchaser.

The right to take bail in such cases, might, perhaps, be fairly inferred from the 2d section of the Act of the 27th of March, 1853, Purd. 313, which says, "whenever an appeal is entered in the Supreme Court, or a certiorari is sued out to remove the proceedings of a justice or alderman to the Court of Common Pleas, the party, his agent or attorney, may take and enter into the required affidavit and recognisance." The prothonotary is by law authorized to swear or affirm the applicant for the writ, a duty which, by the Act of 1810, was imposed upon the judge allowing it, and by the section just cited no distinction is made between the affidavit and recognisance.

The other questions having been waived upon the argument of the rule, for the reasons above assigned, it is made absolute.

Brightly, with whom was A. D. Tarr, for the plaintiff.

Lentz and Earle for the defendant.

JUDGES' SALARIES INCREASED.—The House of Representatives of Massachusetts, on Wednesday, ordered to a third reading a bill adding one thousand dollars more to the salaries of the judges of the Supreme Court. The members concluded that, if good judges were to be retained on the bench, they should be paid sufficient to induce them to stay there. The railroad companies pay their Presidents twice as much as the judges receive, and one judge in New York resigned his place on the Supreme bench, to take a position at the head of a railroad company.

This increase will make the salary of the Chief Justice $4,500, that of each Associate, $4000 per annum.

The Legislature of Massachusetts is, we believe, the most numerous, and essentially popular representative body in the Union; its action on this matter might, we should think, be safely followed by that of Pennsylvania. Her population, in 1850, was 994,514; that of Pennsylvania, 2,268,413, since when the difference between them has been greatly increased, while our increase in business and wealth has been unexampled. There can be no doubt, with our extended territory, great population, and the rapid development of our mineral wealth, that the labors of our Supreme Court greatly exceed those of Massachusetts.

The inadequacy of our judicial salaries has been heretofore freely admitted by members of all former legislatures. But the fear of contravening the popular views of economy, and inducing an increase of taxation, have prevented action from year to year, while from the extraordinary advance in the cost of living, this inadequacy has been greatly increased. We are pleased to find that this matter is viewed by members of the present legislature in its proper light, and that some action may be confidently expected. We hope, however, that any increase that is made will be general, and not confined to isolated cases, or particular districts. In the apportionment of the salaries, it would seem that the amount of labor performed, and interest committed to their care in the several districts, would be properly weighed. But we think the value of the professional qualification necessary to the proper administration of the important duties, political as well as judicial, devolving upon our judges, the most important, and that the people of each district are entitled to the same grade of legal ability, although the amount of business done should not be equal. The difference in the expenses of living would be a proper subject of consideration in all cases, and justify discrimination. We think the bar will see the necessity of placing this matter on a fair basis. A man of competent ability and attainments for the bench is sure of adequate remuneration at the bar, and to secure such the State must pay a sufficient salary. There is nothing in the honor or the ease of the position to induce a sacrifice to obtain it.

The late Report of the State Treasurer and Auditor General, exhibit the finances of the State to be in a most gratifying condition. It appears that during the last ten years the ordinary revenues of the State have increased over $2,000,000. That during the last five years the increase of revenue has greatly exceeded the increase of annual expenditure, and the estimated balance in treasury, on December 1st, 1856, will be $2,850,000, and the ordinary revenue will exceed the ordinary expenditure at least $1,500,000.

The large increase in the amount received from the following items, give some idea of the increased labors and responsibilities of the judiciary, and at the same time dissipate all fears for the State credit.

The tax on real and personal estate, in 1855, was.....$1,721,114 79

| Expenses of government in 1855,.....                         | $330,081 22 |
| 1844,.....   | 254,453 11   |
| Increase,.....   | $75,628 11  |

An addition of $25,000 would suffice to place all the judges of the Commonwealth on a better footing, and still not exceed a fair compensation for the services required of them. We think the press should speak out on this subject, and the people, when informed of the true merits of the subject, we are confident, will endorse the action of their representatives on the side of justice and fair dealing, as well as true policy.

The Bank of Cash Credits.

Application will be made to the Legislature of Pennsylvania, for the Charter of a Bank Issue with general Banking privileges, with a capital of ONE MILLION OF DOLLARS. Said Bank to be located in the City of Philadelphia, and to be conducted upon the system of cash credits only, as is herewith indicated.

A cash credit is a credit given to an individual by a Banking Company, for a limited sum, seldom under $500, or $1000, upon his own security, and that of two or three individuals, approved by the Bank, who become sureties for its payment. The individual who has obtained such a credit, is enabled, to draw the whole sum, or any part of it, when he pleases; replacing it, or portions of it, according as he finds it convenient; interest being charged upon such part only as he draws out.

"If a man borrows $1000, from a private hand, and even then it is not always to be found when required, he pays interest for it, whether he be using it or not. His bank credit costs him nothing, except during the moment it is of service to him, and this circumstance is of equal advantage as if he had borrowed money at a much lower rate of interest."

Cash credits are not, however, intended to be a dead load; the main objects of the Banks in granting them is to get their notes circulated, and they do not grant them except to persons in business, or to those who are frequently drawing out and paying in money.

Any person who applies to a Bank for a cash credit, is called upon to produce sureties, and, after a full inquiry into the character of the applicant, the nature of his business, and the sufficiency of his securities, he is allowed to open a credit, and to draw upon the Bank for the whole of its amount, or for such part as his daily transactions may require. To the credit of the account, he pays in such sums as he may not have occasion to use, and interest is charged or credited upon the balance, as the case may be. From the facility which these cash credits give to all the small transactions of the country, and from the opportunities which they afford to persons who begin business with little or no capital but their character, to employ profitably the minutest products of their industry, it cannot be doubted that the most important advantages are derived in the whole community.

LAW SCHOOL OF THE UNIVERSITY AT CAMBRIDGE, MASS.—The Instructors in this School are HON. JOEL PARKER, LL. D., Royal Professor. HON. THEOPHILUS PARSONS, LL. D., Dane Professor. HON. EMERY WASHBURN, LL. D., University Lecturer.

The course of instruction embraces the various branches of the Common Law, and of Equity, Admiralty, Commercial, International and Constitutional Law, and the Jurisprudence of the United States. The Law Library consists of about 14,000 volumes, and as new works appear they are added, and every effort is made to render it complete.

Instruction is given by oral lectures and expositions, (and by recitations and examinations, in connection with them,) of which there are ten every week. Two Moot Courts are also holden in each week, at each of which a cause, previously given out, is argued by four students, and an opinion delivered by the presiding instructor. Rooms and other facilities are also provided for the Club Courts; and an Assembly is held weekly for practice in debate, and acquiring a knowledge of Parliamentary law and proceedings.

Students may enter the School in any stage of their professional studies or mercantile pursuits, and at the commencement of either term, or in the middle, or other part of a term. They are at liberty to elect what studies they will pursue, according to their view of their own wants and attainments.

The Academic year, which commences on Thursday, six weeks after the third Wednesday in July, is divided into two terms, of twenty weeks each, with a vacation of six weeks at the end of each term.

During the winter vacation, the Library is opened, warmed and lighted, for the use of the members of the School.

Applications for admission, or for Catalogues, or any further information, may be made to either of the Professors at Cambridge. f1-3t.

A MERITORIOUS CARD.

Hail! honored age of grand progression,
While each one clings to his profession,
And science moves with onward motion,
To suit each wayward thought and notion,
Bringing to light some new invention,
More strange than modern wit can mention,
Or Genius paint with true endeavor,
Though making graphic strides forever,
While Reason urges proud Ambition,
To strive for wondrous Competition;
Yet, in this age of glorious Art,
We can the meed of praise impart,
When meritorious efforts claim
A modest puff to gild the name:
And thus we call, with honest pride,
Attention to the Painter's side,—
A man who bravely knows his calling,
Whose works are worthy of extolling,
A model Artist of the day,
And most obliging in his way,
GEORGE H. BANCROFT,—mark the name,
In CHESTNUT STREET you'll find the same,
Call at Five Hundred and Thirty-One,
You'll get the best of painting done,
In Modern or in Classic Order,
From templed shrine to parlor border,
In magic tints of every hue,
To Signs embossed in gold and blue,
Or Figure Head, or Church, or Steeple,
He is resolved to please the people,
And whether foe, or friend or neighbor,
Will charge but moderate for his labor.
We thus invite each one and all,
To give this worthy man a call.
Who will, we venture to engage,
Feel grateful for your patronage.*
* We would particularly invite public attention to our friend Mr. BANCROFT, who is a young, enterprising beginner, and who has gone to vast expense in fitting up his establishment, and is now ready to receive orders for Painting, in all its various branches, at 531 and 533 Chestnut street, 5 doors east of Seventeenth st.

Book VI. Legal Relations of Homicide. Fœticide and Infanticide. A. Elementary Definitions. B. Corpus Delicti. C. Intent and Design. From what to be Inferred.

The following valuable opinions of the work have been received by the Publishers.

From Judge Catron of the U. S. Supreme Court.
"Hardly a stronger guaranty could be afforded to the American Bar that the work has merit, than the fact that Mr. Wharton was author of the legal portion of the book."
JOHN CATRON.

From Professor Parsons of the Cambridge Law School.

"I have not had time to examine it critically, but have read enough to convince me that it is an instructive and valuable work. Some of its topics, which are quite new in a book on this subject, are shown to be among the most important."
THEOPHILUS PARSONS.

From Judge McLean of the U. S. Supreme Court.

"I have not had time to look minutely through the volume, but from the known ability of the authors, and their experience, I am sure the book must be very interesting and useful, not only to the profession of the law, but also to general readers. A modern treatise of this kind, embodying the experience of jurists and medical men, with decisions of courts, was much wanted; and I am satisfied that abler pens than those employed, could not have been engaged in its production."
JOHN MCLEAN.

REPORTS OF THE COMMON LAW COURTS OF ENGLAND.

Containing the cases decided in the Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Nisi Prius Courts, from 1813 to 1855, and in the Court of Exchequer and Exchequer Chamber, from 1824 to 1855, are found in

The Regular and Authoritative Series of the English Common Law and English Exchequer Reports,

Which present the following claims to the support of the profession:

1. They are the only series issued as the authoritative and acknowledged medium by which the decisions of the Law Courts of England are made public.

2. They contain Later Reports than the Boston series, are more fully and more ably reported, and so arranged by preservation of the original paging, that reference by reporters, or by elementary writers, can be traced as readily as in the English editions.

Vol. 2, Ellis & Blackburne's (75 E. C. L. R.) Reports (Q. B.) to January, 1854, was published by us in June, 1854. At that time the last Queen's Bench case printed in the Boston Law and Equity Reports, was of June 25, 1853. Our volume contained cases decided five months later. The Queen's Bench cases to November 25, 1853, were published in the Boston series in August, 1854, two months after we had distributed the same cases.

Vol. 3, Ellis & Blackburne, (77 E. C. L. R., with cases to the end of Trinity Term, 1854, was published when the latest case of Queen's Bench decisions in the Boston series, was of February 8, 1854, more than four months behind the regular reporters.

Exchequer Reports, vol. 9, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) distributed by us January 11, 1855, contains cases to May 10, 1854. The last Exchequer case then in the Boston series was decided February 9, 1854, four months behind the regular Reporter, issued in Philadelphia.

3. They contain more cases decided by the courts represented, than any other series issued in this country.

Vol. 77 English Common Law, (3 E. & B.) reports eighty-six cases decided in the Queen's Bench since January 11, 1854, while but fifty-eight Queen's Bench cases, decided since January 1, 1854, are found scattered among Vols. 22, 24 and 25 of the Boston Law and Equity.

Vol. 78 E. C. L. K. (5 J. Scott,) reports sixty-five cases decided since Nov. 13, 1853, in the Common Pleas, while the L. & E. has but fifty-seven cases in that Court since the same period.

Vol. 9 Exchequer Reports, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) reports one hundred and ten cases in the Courts of Exchequer, decided since June 24, 1853, while since the same date, the L. & E. report but 107 cases, scattered through vols. 20, 22, 24 and 25.

4. They are almost exclusively cited in argument of counsel, and referred to by Elementary Writers for Law Authorities. See Smith's Leading Cases, Smith's Contracts, Smith's Landlord and Tenant, by Maude; Byles on Bills and Promissory Notes, Broom's Legal Maxims, Broom's Commentaries on the Laws of England, or almost any recent Law Book issued in England.

5. The Philadelphia Reports are edited by Judge Sharwood and by Judge Hare, whose labors as editors and authors have made them so well and so favorably known to the profession.

6. The Boston Law and Equity is made up in this country from the Law Journal, Jurist, Times and other Law periodicals, of a weekly, monthly, or quarterly character, and being unknown in England, is never cited in Court, or referred to by Law writers. The periodicals from which it is extracted, are occasionally cited under their own particular names, but they do not possess that permanent value, even in England, which is all-important in a series of Reports.

A carefully prepared and accurate Annual Digest of all the cases decided by the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Exchequer, will be distributed, early in each year, to subscribers to either series, free of charge. That for 1854 is ready, and will be mailed to subscribers who have not received a copy.

English Law and Equity Reports.

ENGLISH REPORTS IN LAW AND EQUITY. A Complete Collection of the Cases decided by the House of Lords, the Privy Council, the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas and Exchequer, the Lord Chancellor, the High Court of Appeal in Chancery, the Court of Criminal Appeal, and the Admiralty and Ecclesiastical Courts. Reprinted within a few weeks after the decisions are rendered.

This series has the merit of being complete, reliable, prompt, convenient, and cheap. It is now universally cited in the courts, and referred to in the recent law books as standard authority. All the cases reported in England, are here reprinted from the most reliable sources, as soon as they reach this country.

These Reports are now regularly digested in our Annual United States Digest, which thus embraces an annual digest of the whole English and American Law.

We have now in Preparation, and shall soon Publish,

A separate Digest of these Reports, embracing the first thirty-one volumes of the series, prepared with express reference to the convenience of the American profession, and exhibiting a complete synopsis of all the English Decisions reported in those volumes during the last five years; also a Table of Cases referring to all the contemporaneous English Reports. This will be the first Digest of English Decisions prepared expressly for the American Lawyer, and it is intended to give it the same advantages over the English Digests hitherto reprinted in this country, which the American text books have generally been found to possess over the English.

The Law and Equity Reports will be continued on the same plan as heretofore; the number of volumes being reduced to four per year; and Digests will be published from time to time as the convenience of the profession demands.

Vols. 1 to 31, now ready for delivery, at $2 00 per volume.

NOTICE.

THE Subscriber takes this method of informing his numerous friends, and the public in general, that he is now prepared to execute in a superior manner, every variety of HOUSE and SIGN PAINTING, Graining, Bronzing, Gilding on Glass and Stained Glass, Calomining Ceilings, Walls, &c., &c. China and Glass Painting executed in a superior manner, and warranted not to CRACK. Ceilings cleaned and whitened, and made equal to new, at a cost little over that of whitewash. The subscriber would state here that it frequently occurs that persons attempt to use this article who have no knowledge of it whatever, either in the mixing or putting it on, and the consequence is, the job is spoiled, and the article condemned without a proper trial.—So also with CHINA GLOSS; to make a good job it requires a practical knowledge of the use of the brush, as also the making of the GLOSS. In regard to the ZINC WHITE, the subscriber would most respectfully recommend it as an article far superior to any other paint now in use, for whiteness and durability of color.

The Subscriber would respectfully solicit a portion of the patronage of those getting Painting done. Feeling grateful for the many favors already bestowed by his friends, he still hopes to share their patronage by unremitting attention to their calls. Those who have large contracts to give out, need have no hesitancy in calling, as he is prepared to give every satisfaction in regard to work, both in reference and security, for the faithful performance of all agreements.

The Subscriber can be found at the S. E. CORNER OF FOURTH AND WALNUT STS. where he will be happy to receive any orders. Aug. 24-1 yr. JACOB S. BEAM.

HENRY E. WALLACE, Editor.

Messrs. B. G. Wilder & Co., patentees and manufacturers of the celebrated Wilder Safe, have established an agency for the sale of these safes in this city, at No. 22 Walnut street, at the head of which is our old and esteemed friend, Isaac B. Clough, from whom there is not a more energetic or capable business man among us. Wilder & Co. may congratulate themselves in having been able to secure the services of one who has been so long and favorably known to the business community of Philadelphia. It should be borne in mind, that to the above safe was awarded the prize medal at the World's Fair, London, in 1851.

MEETING OF THE BAR.

On Friday last, a very large meeting of the members of the Philadelphia Bar, was held at District Court Room No. 3.

On motion of Charles E. Lex, Esq., the meeting was organized as follows:

President—Thos. J. Wharton.
Vice Presidents—William M. Meredith, Esq., Henry J. Williams, Esq., John H. Campbell, Esq., William L. Hirst, Esq., John M. Read, Esq., Samuel H. Perkins, Esq., Isaac Hartshorn, Esq., St. Geo. T. Campbell, Esq.
Secretaries—Geo. W. Biddle, Esq., John Hanna, Esq.

Samuel H. Perkins, Esq., stated the object of the meeting—To express the view of the Philadelphia Bar on the subject of the salaries of the Judges of the Supreme Court, the several Courts of Philadelphia, and Pittsburg, and all the other districts in the State. The salaries heretofore and now paid were not commensurate with the value of their services, and indeed short of their necessary family expenditures. That meetings had been held in other places, and that he believed not only the Bar, but the citizens generally, were now satisfied that these salaries ought to be reasonably increased.

On motion, the Chair appointed Geo. M. Wharton, John M. Read, Peter McCull, Henry M. Phillips, and David Webster, Esqs., a committee to draft resolutions expressive of the sense of the meeting.

During the absence of the Committee, J. ALLEXANDER SIMPSON, Esq., a member of the last Legislature, by request made a statement in reference to an effort made at that session to increase the salaries of the Judges. Mr. Simpson believed that obstacles which then existed were now removed, and that at the present session, if the application was properly made, success was highly probable. That it was generally admitted last year that the City Judges, as well as the Supreme Court, were inadequately compensated.

By request, BENJAMIN H. BREWSTER, Esq., addressed the meeting; he approved of the movement on the part of the Bar. It was but justice to the Bench. Every well instructed layman, as well as Lawyer, was now well satisfied that salaries which might have been adequate ten years since, could not be so now.

We regret our inability to give a full report of Mr. B.'s remark, in which he ably supported the objects of the meeting. He closed on the return of the Committee.

Mr. G. M. WHARTON, Chairman of the Committee, submitted a preamble and resolutions. He said, that they had been suddenly called upon to meet in a very important matter, and had but little time to prepare resolutions suitable to the occasion and proper for the consideration of a meeting of the Bar of Philadelphia, so large and respectable as that then assembled. The Committee had confined their attention to two or three points. One was, the present improved condition of the finances of the Commonwealth. It was well known that the salaries of the judges of the Supreme Court had been reduced, during a period of great financial embarrassment—but such a measure of supposed necessity, merely, could scarcely be expected to continue beyond the emergency which occasioned it. Pennsylvania was now advancing rapidly, out of her pecuniary difficulties; and it was beneath her dignity, and contrary to justice, inadequately to compensate her judicial officers. Their station—the importance of their position, as it regarded both public and private interests, called for adequate remuneration. As the income of the State considerably exceeded her current expenditures, there could be no good reason for longer delay in doing justice to the judiciary.

Another point touched by the Committee, was the increased expense of a city life, and also, the increased business in our Courts—the latter, a necessary result of our increasing population and wealth. A reference for the sake of comparison could be properly made to the other two great commercial cities at the North, Boston and New York, in both of which considerably larger salaries were paid to the judges sitting in their city and county tribunals. Much greater salaries, it was notorious, were allowed in some of the Southern cities, and it might be added, that such was the case even in one or two towns at the West. The industry, fidelity and integrity of our compensation paid them, should bear a just proportion to the value of their services.

He hoped that the expression of the opinion of the Bar of Philadelphia on this subject, would be unanimous and decided.

He then read the preamble and resolutions, as follows:

Whereas, the maintenance of an independent and able Judiciary is, under our form of government, essential to the safety and perpetuity of our Republican institutions, and the security of public and private rights; and it becomes the duty of the government to secure for the high trusts and great responsibilities of the Bench of Pennsylvania, the most eminent legal learning and abilities; and

Whereas, the salaries of the Law Judges of Pennsylvania, having been fixed under the pressure of an imperative demand for retrenchment and economy at a time of great financial embarrassment, are not now an adequate compensation for the services required; and

Whereas, Pennsylvania, now happily relieved from the financial difficulties which induced this policy, with an excess of annual revenue over expenditures, is abundantly able to pay a fair and just equivalent for the services of her Judiciary;

Resolved, That we, the Bar of Philadelphia, respectfully and most earnestly remonstrate against the further continuance of a rate of compensation as much beneath the honor and dignity of the Commonwealth as it is short of a fair and just compensation for the services performed by the several Law Judges of Pennsylvania.

Resolved, That our Senators and Representatives be requested to advocate and procure, if possible, such an addition by law to the salaries of the Supreme Court as shall tender them equal to the high importance of their station; an addition to the salaries of the several Judges of the First and Eighth Judicial Districts, in proportion to the increase which has taken place since these salaries were fixed, in the expenses of city life; and in some measure commensurate with their largely increased labors and responsibilities, as well as a reasonable and proper increase in the other Districts of the State.

Resolved, That the Chairman of this meeting be authorized, at his leisure, to appoint a Committee, to consist of twenty-one members of the Bar, to take such further measures towards promoting the success of this movement as may be expedient.

ANDREW MILLER, Esq., said it was inconsistent and unbecoming in those who had been engaged during the past year, attempting to reduce Municipal expenses, to move in the present effort to increase the Judges' pay. The increase was not justified by the financial condition of the State. She was still in debt. It was inexpedient, and perhaps unconstitutional, to increase the salaries during the term of office of the present incumbents, who had no right to ask an increase, having accepted office, knowing what the salaries were.

GEORGE W. BIDDLE, Esq., said he felt called upon to reply to the remarks of the last speaker. He was sure that this was a movement of the bar alone, and not actuated by anything like subserviency to the bench. The judges did not ask for the increase. There was no parallelism between the case of the City, with high salaries and an adequate revenue, and the proposed change, which he felt deeply that the Judges should be put upon a decent footing, suited to the sphere of life to which they had been called, and somewhat commensurate with the time and talents they dedicated (to the exclusion of every thing else) to the public service. The City Solicitor, no matter how faithfully he may discharge the duties of his office, can still find time to attend to other professional engagements. Yet his salary, as reduced, is $2500. The Judges of Philadelphia sit the whole Judicial day, and often afterwards and evenings, for nine months in the year, and are obliged to devote nights to the examination of papers, authorities, &c., in order properly to discharge their duties. There was a great draft upon physical exertion as well as mental energies. Technical training of an elaborate and expensive kind was also required. The laborer was surely worthy of his hire, and that was all the resolution asked.

It was true the principal of the State debt remained, yet we had this year from the State Treasurer the gratifying intelligence, that the income of the State exceeded her expenditures upwards of half a million. The proposed increase would be but a small percentage of this excess, and could not be better appropriated. It would be unconstitutional to reduce, not to raise the salaries. It was certainly expedient. If in a period of great financial embarrassment and depression of prices, they were fixed too low—or if from an advance in house rent and the price of the necessities of life, the same result takes place, it would be unjust not to add to them, particularly when the state of the treasury so fully warrants it. The resolutions did not ask high salaries—they proposed a moderate increase, a fair salary, still short of the value of the services required.

BENJAMIN RICE, Esq., said that he concurred cordially in the object of the meeting, and sincerely hoped the movement would succeed. He supposed there could hardly be any difference of opinion among those who understood the subject. The compensation established by law for those who administered the law, should unquestionably make some approach to the level of their high functions; should correspond in some degree with the attributes of character, the qualifications, the labors and responsibilities, which their high stations demanded. He rejoiced that the movement had been set on foot. He would even go further than the resolutions, and would upon the meeting to indicate what he thought ought to be the rate of compensation established, but it had been suggested to him that that view of the subject should be left wholly to the Legislative body, and he deferred to the wisdom of others.

While he said this, he must at the same time express the satisfaction with which he had heard the remark just made by his friend Mr. G. W. Biddle, that no one here could be suspected of subserviency to the Bench. He hoped that sentiment would ever be the sentiment of the Bar. He had always held very strong opinions on that subject, and it had been his unweildome task before now to assert them. He would assert them again if necessary. He would trust the Judges with the utmost respect. It was right and proper to do so for every reason. He had aimed always to do his duty in this respect, and hoped never to fall in the duty. But it was a reciprocal duty. Counsel had a right to expect, and if necessary to insist on, the same. The Bar should be as independent as the Bench. Entertaining these sentiments, he supposed he need hardly say more to illustrate his concurrence in the very proper remark of his friend, Mr. Biddle.

He was in favor of the movement for another reason. He had been opposed to the change in the Constitution providing for an Elective Judiciary. He thought it a downward step. As yet we had not had time to experience its bad effects. Thus far, indeed, the people have been fortunate; very fortunate, in their selections for the judicial tribunals. The change was a novelty thus far, and thus far it had worked well. He could not, if he would, detract from the high character and qualifications of the present Judges. At a moment like this, he would not if he could, for there would be no reason to justify it. But wait a little while. Wait till a quarter of a century had gone by, if any of us should live so long, and then with your elective Judiciary and your low salaries, you'll see the kind of material that will adorn your Bench. The present movement might help to correct the evil. A higher rate of compensation, more nearly approaching the moral and intellectual standard required, might help to stimulate a higher ambition, and thus preserve for the people of Pennsylvania a Bench which shall continue to be characterized by purity and elevation, and a high grade of learning and ability.

JOHN TYLER, Jr., Esq., said the few remarks he had to submit, while in earnest advocacy of the report and resolutions before the meeting, would be but in continuation of those made by Mr. Biddle, and in opposition to the position of Mr. Miller. He had often thought of the singular fact, in relation both to State and Federal office in this country, that no just apportionment of compensation existed, between the inferior and superior grades. The rate of compensation attached to our inferior grades of office, State and National, were better, perhaps, than any assigned to similar grades in any other country, but our superior grades of office were notoriously more poorly provided for by law, than similar grades elsewhere. As to some of the departments of our public service, he might perpetrate an Irish bull, and say that the ascending rate of compensation was downwards. This was particularly true of the Judicial Department in Pennsylvania, and the more especially in Philadelphia. Our Judges, the chief officers of this Department, receive only from $1500 to $2500 each, while the mere Clerks in the same Department, realized, through their Fee list from $2500 to $20,000, and the Sheriff, or mere executive officer of the Department, exceeded this latter amount if report be true. If State expenses required the reduction of salaries some years ago as has been contended by Mr. Miller, it is somewhat singular that the Legislature did not look to the true interests of the community by reducing in the latter direction instead of the former. That body could not have been blind to the fact that the subordinate officers of our Courts were in the annual receipt of perquisites from five to ten times the amount of the salaries assigned to their superiors. Nor could the further fact have been overlooked, that in the case of any Judge of any Court of Record in the Commonwealth, a life preparation of intense study, laboriously incurred under the heaviest expense, has to be undergone, encountered and endured, in order to attain the necessary qualifications attached to the post, previously to reaching it, and that after reaching it, his whole time has to be devoted to the personal discharge of its arduous duties; whereas the Prothonotaries, Registers and Sheriffs, who are but little, if anything, more than sub-agents of the Judges, undergo no expense and no previous preparation for their respective places, and are indeed usually mere Ward politicians, without qualifications to perform rightly the duties required of them, and who depend on the hired qualification of deputies, to do for them and the public what they cannot do, and rarely undertake to do themselves. State expenses have been and are still heavy, but surely that is bad economy which undervalues and underpays hard labor combined with high merit, while at the same time it exorbitantly overvalues and overpays those who work but little and have small merit. Everywhere else in the world skilled labor commands the highest reward, whether in public or private, and so should it be here. Let economy be practiced in the right way. To this there could be no objection. That our Judges should be from the ranks of the best informed Lawyers will scarcely admit of cavil, but eminent Lawyers will not leave the field of practice for a seat on the Bench without adequate remuneration. This has been already shown as well as its corollary, that the competition for Judicial seats, at present rates of remuneration, will be left more and more to the humblest class of practitioners. The dangers to private rights and public interests arising from incompetency on the Bench, should always be guarded against by a people. If it can be done by increasing Judicial salaries, thereby making Philadelphia objects to be sought after by men of ability and education, the public will be amply rewarded for the few thousands of dollars necessary to the purpose. If the subject be properly presented, the Legislature cannot fail to appreciate it in all its solemnity.

JOHN M. READ Esq., remarked that it gave him great pleasure to attend a meeting for the purpose of asking the Legislature to provide adequate compensation for the very laborious and important services of the Judiciary of the State. At the commencement of the present judicial system under the Constitution of 1790, when the population of the whole State of Pennsylvania was not greater than that of the City of Philadelphia at the present time, the Chief Justice and the associate Justices were paid much larger compensations than are now given to the present Judges of the Supreme Court, when the number of inhabitants has been enlarged six-fold, and the resources of the Commonwealth and the business of its highest tribunal have been increased in a much greater ratio.

In 1839 a general increase of all the salaries of the Judges was thought expedient and necessary, and the enlarged compensation would no doubt have continued to the present time except for the monetary revolution which immediately succeeded, and the apparent but not real inability of the State to meet its engagements. These financial changes produced the Act of 1843, by which the present very low scale of compensation has been regulated.

After the lapse of an eighth of a century the State credit has been revived and firmly established and its resources largely increased, and another monetary change has been effected by the annual influx of gold from California, and the prices of living, and the necessities of life have been nearly doubled, particularly in the populous districts of the Commonwealth.

The present Judiciary is elected by the people, and inadequate compensation must always narrow the circle from which the popular choice is to be made. Fair and liberal salaries will always secure the services of the ablest men at the bar.

Mr. Read said that these, with other reasons, induced him to approve of the movement to raise the salaries of the Judges; he, however, thought it due to himself to say that as the Judges must be taken from the bar whose offices are recognized in the Constitution, he considered them as still members of the body, and bound to secure those rights of counsel which are absolutely necessary to be preserved in our free system of government for the general good of the community. Amongst these is the privilege of speech, which had been trampled upon by the late rules of our highest judicial tribunal. This rule, however, he was happy to say, had been suspended, and he hoped finally abrogated, which enabled him to take an active part in the present meeting. Mr. Read hoped the resolutions proposed by the Committee would be adopted.

JAS. R. LUDLOW, Esq., moved to amend the resolutions by striking out the last paragraph of the preamble, and spoke in substance as follows: Mr. Chairman,

I am in favor of amending the preamble by striking out its last clause.

In my opinion it is impoissible to refer in any way to the State debt, true Sir, we are in a better condition, so far as our revenue is concerned, when compared with our annual expenditures, but still our State debt is large. I understand the object of this meeting to be, to endeavor to obtain legislative action upon a subject of vital importance; and in my humble judgment to give a practical direction to our efforts, nothing should be said or done by us calculated to excite the prejudice of any citizen of this Commonwealth. I place the matter upon higher grounds; it is a burning disgrace to Pennsylvania that her Judiciary should be so poorly paid, and Sir, it is well known that the salaries of our judges are insufficient to support them decently.

It is a fact, Sir, that the judges of the Supreme Court cannot afford to live in this city with their families, upon their present salaries, and for a judge who does not reside in the city, to bring his family with him, during the session of the Court here, is an impossibility, he must consent to a divorce for the time being.

So far as our county judges are concerned, I speak advisedly when I say that the cost of living has increased to such an extent in Philadelphia, that the present salaries are inadequate to their support, and any one at all conversant with the subject must sustain me in this assertion.

When Sir, we remember that our dearest interest are committed to the keeping of the judiciary, is it not disgraceful that they receive so poor a compensation for their services. We expect wisdom, learning and purity upon the Bench, and we pay scarcely enough to supply the daily necessities of life.

I have referred, Sir, to the State debt, supposing it is large, yes Sir, suppose that the State is bankrupt, I for one, am in favor of paying the judiciary well, even though the State were not only bankrupt, but hopelessly so.

W. Badger, Esq., G. Remak, Esq., and others addressed the meeting.

Mr. Ludlow's motion did not prevail, and the preamble and resolutions as above given were unanimously adopted.

The Chair appointed the following Committee, in accordance with the resolution:

WILLIAMS & WIFE v. COWARD & WIFE. Opinion by Woodward, J.

A married woman can neither sue nor be sued on her contract made during coverture. If she contract for necessaries or for goods that go to the use of her husband, the law presumes her to be his agent and treats the contract as his, and the suit must be against him alone. It is only when an action is brought on her anti-nuptial contract that she is to be joined as a co-plaintiff or defendant with her husband.

These rules and principles were all violated in the case before us. Mrs. Coward deposited monies with Mrs. Williams to the amount of $500, and drew upon her for various sums until the balance was reduced to $143 50, which, with $22 interest, claimed amounting to $165 50, are the monies for which this suit is brought.

The plaintiff's counts all charge an assumption by Moses Williams and Elizabeth his wife v. Perry Coward and Ann his wife, and the plaintiffs had a verdict and judgment. There is nothing in the common law of the marriage relations and nothing in the statutory modifications of it to justify such misjoinders, and the judgment is accordingly reversed and restitution awarded of the monies collected on the execution.

District Court.

Opinion by Judge Sharpwood. GAULT v. MCKINNEY.

January 12th, 1856. Reserved point.

This was an action of debt, brought upon the record of two aldermen of Philadelphia County, to recover the sum of $183 88, the amount of damages assessed and costs incurred in certain proceedings had before them under the Act of 16th June, 1836, relating to executions for giving possession to purchasers at Sheriff's Sales.

The Act provides, in the 11th section, that in case the jury summoned before the Justices shall find for the purchaser, the jury shall assess such damages as they shall think right against the defendant, or person in possession, for the unjust detention of the premises, and thereupon the said Justices shall enter judgment for the damages assessed and reasonable costs, and such judgment shall be final and conclusive to the parties; and, by the 12th section, the said Justices shall thereupon issue their warrant, directed to the Sheriff, commanding him forthwith to deliver to the petitioner, his heirs or assigns, full possession of such lands and tenements, and to levy the costs taxed by the said Justices and the damages assessed by the jury as aforesaid.

Such a warrant was issued, upon which possession was delivered to the plaintiff and a return of nulla bona as to the damage and costs.

The words of the Act of Assembly are so express and unequivocal in declaring that the judgment shall be final and conclusive that we cannot doubt that it is a debt of record, and that if any action can be maintained upon it at all, it must be so regarded.

The only question is, whether the remedy of the plaintiff is limited to that pointed out by the Act, the warrant directed to be issued by the Justices.

The provisions of the Act of 21st March, 1836, section 13; and the more recent decisions of the Supreme Court, establishing a more liberal construction of that section than was at first attempted have been relied on. It is to be observed, however, that the act expressly saves all common law remedies, which shall be necessary to carry the Act of Assembly into effect.

It is evident, however, that the Act of 1836 does not provide a full remedy. At the period of its passage imprisonment for debt was not abolished, but it made no provision for a ca. ca. A man might be a large owner of real estate, or of debts, yet it is certain that the Justice's warrant would not reach real estate nor those subsets of execution which other sections of the same Act subject to the process of execution. Indeed it may be doubted whether an alias warrant could be issued to levy upon personal property.

When, therefore, the warrant issued by the Justices has been returned, "nulla bona," the Act of Assembly, which enacts that the judgment shall be final and conclusive between the parties, cannot be carried into effect without a resort to the common law remedy of an action to recover the amount of the inquisition and judgment as a debt of record.

Judgment for the plaintiff on the reserved point, and on the plea of nulli record.

The Bank of Cash Credits.

Application will be made to the Legislature of Pennsylvania, for the Charter of a Bank Issue with general Banking privileges, with a capital of ONE MILLION OF DOLLARS. Said Bank to be located in the City of Philadelphia, and to be conducted upon the system of cash credits only, as is herewith indicated.

A cash credit is a credit given to an individual by a Banking Company, for a limited sum, seldom under $500, or $1000, upon his own security, and that of two or three individuals, approved by the Bank, who become sureties for its payment. The individual who has obtained such a credit, is enabled, to draw the whole sum, or any part of it, when he pleases; replacing it, or portions of it, according as he finds it convenient; interest being charged upon such part only as he draws out.

"If a man borrows $1000, from a private hand, and even then it is not always to be found when required, he pays interest for it, whether he be using it or not. His bank credit costs him nothing, except during the moment it is of service to him, and this circumstance is of equal advantage as if he had borrowed money at a much lower rate of interest."

Cash credits are not, however, intended to be a dead load; the main objects of the Banks in granting them is to get their notes circulated, and they do not grant them except to persons in business, or to those who are frequently drawing out and paying in money.

Any person who applies to a Bank for a cash credit, is called upon to produce securities, and, after a full inquiry into the character of the applicant, the nature of his business, and the sufficiency of his securities, he is allowed to open a credit, and to draw upon the Bank for the whole of its amount, or for such part as his daily transactions may require. To the credit of the account, he pays in such sums as he may not have occasion to use, and interest is charged or credited upon the balance, as the case may be. From the facility which these cash credits give to all the small transactions of the country, and from the opportunities which they afford to persons who begin business with little or no capital out their character, to employ profitably the minutest products of their industry, it cannot be doubted that the most important advantages are derived in the whole community.

LAW SCHOOL OF THE UNIVERSITY AT CAMBRIDGE, MASS.

The course of instruction embraces the various branches of the Common Law, and of Equity, Admiralty, Commercial, International and Constitutional Law, and the Jurisprudence of the United States. The Law Library consists of about 14,000 volumes, and as new works appear they are added, and every effort is made to render it complete.

Instruction is given by oral lectures and expositions, (and by recitations and examinations, in connection with them,) of which there are ten every week. Two moot Courts are also holden in each week, at each of which a cause, previously given out, is argued by four students, and an opinion delivered by the presiding instructor. Rooms and other facilities are also provided for the Club Courts; and an Assembly is held weekly for practice in debate, and acquiring a knowledge of Parliamentary law and proceedings.

Students may enter the School in any stage of their professional studies or mercantile pursuits, and at the commencement of either term, or in the middle, or other part of a term. They are at liberty to elect what studies they will pursue, according to their view of their own wants and attainments.

The Academic year, which commences on Thursday, six weeks after the third Wednesday in July, is divided into two terms, of twenty weeks each, with a vacation of six weeks at the end of each term.

During the winter vacation, the Library is opened, warmed, and lighted, for the use of the members of the School.

Applications for admission, or for Catalogues, or any further information, may be made to either of the Professors at Cambridge. Cambridge, January 13, 1856. f 1-3t.

HOLE V. RITTENHOUSE.

We publish to day a report of this case and the opinion of the Court delivered by Chief Justice Lewis; having given the dissenting opinion of his Honour Judge Black in a former number. The extreme length of the opinions prevented the publication of both at one time—and from the same cause we are compelled to postpone to a future number some remarks upon the case and the remarkable difference in the two opinions.

Supreme Court.

HOLE v. RITTENHOUSE et al.
Feb. 7, 1856. Error to Columbia Co.

Improvement and actual occupation and residence for twenty-one years and upwards, upon land forming a part of a junior survey, will not give title by adverse possession under the Statute of Limitations, to a part of such junior survey, lying within the lines of an older interfering survey, no proof being made of any actual entry or occupation within the lines of such older survey. Waggoner v. Hastings, 5 Barr, 306, overruled.

This was ejectment by Rittenhouse & Thompson, against Barney Hole. Plaintiff claimed under two warrants in names of Mary Weed and Aaron Levy, dated January 11, 1793, duly surveyed and patents issued to Walter Stewart, March 24, 1794. Stewart's Estate in these, with other tracts, was sold at Sheriff's sale in 1814, and became vested November 20, 1816, in Jesse Roberts, who in 1819 moved on the land, cleared and erected improvements, resided thereon until his death in 1841; his widow and children continued thereon until 1850, when they sold to plaintiff. The house stood on the line between the Weed and Levy surveys, and of the 80 acres cleared, about 30 was on one tract, and 50 on the other. The assessments of taxes from 1819 to 1849, were given in evidence, which were not uniform; in 1830 1831 and 1832, Jesse Roberts was assessed 100 acres; in 1835, 100 acres with log house, and 2900 acres wild land, in 1846, '47, '48, '49, "Roberts's heirs," 2300 acres.

The defendant produced a warrant and survey in the name of John Graeff, dated May 10, 1785, and a survey of 4092 acres, dated 17th November same year. This survey lies across the plaintiffs' surveys. It appeared that the defendant Hole, in 1814 entered on the Graeff tract, and erected a log house within the lines of the Mary Weed survey, and cleared a few perches of ground. Two surveys were examined, and it did not appear that any marks or monuments of the Weed and Levy survey, existed on the Graeff tract. The improvements of plaintiffs did not extend to the lines of the Graeff survey. The plaintiffs claimed under the statute of limitation, to the bounds of the Weed and Levy surveys. Defendant contended that as plaintiffs had not made any improvement, or visible occupancy within the Graeff lines, they could not recover under the statute any part of the interference.

Judge Conyngham charged the jury as follows:

"The plaintiffs claim under two warrants in the names of Weed and Levy, dated in 1793, and if they be the owners of these warrants, their title can only refer to that date and year. The defendant shows no title in himself, for he only entered in 1848 or '49; but the general rule in an ejectment is, that a plaintiff must recover on a title good against all the world. The defendant shows a warrant and survey to Graeff in 1785, and if there were nothing else in the case, this warrant and survey would defeat the plaintiffs' right to recover. Upon the papers the Graeff title is the older and better one, and though not belonging to the defendant, is equally available to him here to defeat a recovery by the plaintiffs, as the location of these several tracts and surveys according to the drafts given in evidence is conceded and agreed to.

Upon these papers then the plaintiffs have no right to recover; if they can recover at all, they must recover by virtue of the statute of limitations. We will now explain what we mean. When one under color of title goes into possession of lands, and there continues in the actual adverse, open, visible and notorious possession of the lands, for the term and space of twenty-one years, his title to the lands, of which he has so had and held the possession, will be good. How are the facts in the present case? Jesse Roberts purchased in 1816 of John Hallowell, a supposed title to the Levy and Weed warrants, with other lands, and in 1818 went into possession of a part of the tracts where his house is marked on the draft. He continued to live there until his death in 1841, and his children and widow still remained there from that time until they sold to the plaintiffs in 1850. His deed from Hallowell, at least color of title, showing the extent and character of his claim, was on record as early as 1817, and his possession of part is to be considered presumptive evidence of his possession to the extent of his claim. A man is always presumed, in the absence of any thing showing the contrary, to occupy in conformity to the condition title under which he entered. How stands the defendant or the owner of the Graeff title, which he sets up? The defendant is a mere naked intruder, without right or color of right in himself, who entered only a year or two before this suit brought. The owner of the Graeff warrant has laid no claim to the land, so far as the evidence in this case shows, since his land was returned for patenting in 1787, about 67 years—he has never returned it for taxation, either in Northumberland or Columbia county, and has never paid one dollar of taxes that we hear of.

Did Roberts then ever by his actions, his declarations or his conduct, limit his possession to a less quantity of land than he would be presumed to be in possession of, under his colorable title to the land covered by the Levy and Weed tracts? It is contended by the defendant that he did so, by neglecting to pay taxes on the whole land, claimed for twenty-one continuous years, or upwards. We call your attention to the evidence of the assessments on this part of the case, (assessments read.) Now the mere fact that in the space of upwards of twenty-one years through a blundering mode of making the assessments, or through his own neglect to see that they were properly returned to the assessor, for four years, out of some twenty-three or twenty-four years, from 1826 to the entry by the defendants, only 100 acres of the land about his improvements were assessed, would not of itself defeat or limit the claim of the plaintiffs. Payment of taxes is some evidence of the extent of a man's claim, and how far he intends to claim, and is a proper subject for the consideration of the jury with the other facts in the case, and it is for them to say whether during these years, Roberts gave up his claim to all but the 100 acres, abandoned his supposed rights to the Levy and Weed tracts to a greater extent, and intended to claim but such 100 acres; if he did, it would be an end of his right under the statute of limitations. Whether he thus intended to abandon, or rather did not visibly, openly and notoriously claim, will be for the jury to judge, as well under the fact of non-payment of taxes for such four years on the one side, as on the other side, his original purchase of the whole tracts, his supposed title to the whole, his taking possession and living there, and presumptive interest to claim the whole, his erection of a saw mill, (first taxed in 1826,) appearing by the draft to be outside of the improvements, his renewal of the taxation of the whole amount in two or three years, and payment on the whole from 1832 to his death, with the exception of one year, and by his children afterwards to 1850, and any other circumstances properly in evidence. If he was living there during this time, for any period within the twenty-one years, without visibly and openly intending to claim the whole, it would defeat the claim under the statute of limitations; but if the jury believe the non-payment of the taxes during the four years referred to, was occasioned by the neglect or blundering of the assessor, or even by his own neglect to see that the amount was properly assessed, without any intention on his part to abandon his claim or to lessen it, his claim would not be defeated, and particularly would we hold this to be the case in a case like the present, where the owner of the Graeff title had for so many years abandoned all claim to his tract, had apparently admitted himself to be ousted, and had never paid one cent of tax upon his land.

It is then for the jury to say whether the plaintiffs and those under whom they claim, have had a distinct, visible, hostile, notorious and continued possession of this land, either actually by his improvement of it, or constructively as to the other part by an unbroken and continued claim to it for the space of twenty-one years before the entry of the defendant; if they had, then the plaintiffs should recover here.

The defendant has submitted points, which we thus answer:

First point submitted by defendant.—That the John Graeff survey having been made and returned before the warrants to Aaron Levy and Mary Weed were issued, or surveys thereon made, the plaintiffs have no title to the land in dispute, unless they or those under whom they claim, have acquired a title by the statute of limitations.

The first point was answered in the affirmative. Second point.—That the pluries vend. exponas, issued out of the Supreme Court, on the 2d of April, 1814, to the sheriff of Northumberland county, (after the erection and organization of the county of Columbia,) and the subsequent sale of the Aaron Levy and Mary Weed by the said sheriff, to John Hallowell, and the execution and acknowledgment of the sheriff's deeds to him, conveyed no title to the said Hallowell or those claiming under him, and that when Jesse Roberts entered upon the said two tracts of land, he had merely a colorable title.

To the second point we say it is unnecessary to decide as to the effect of the Sheriff's sale; whether the sale be good or bad Roberts had but a colorable title to the land when he entered, and the charge given to you has been based on the ground and assumption, that he had but color of title to the tracts claimed by him under the deed from Hallowell. The title to those tracts was defective in Stewart, the patentee, and if the Sheriff's sale was good, colorable only in Hallowell, if bad, still it would be colorable.

Third Point.—That if Jesse Roberts when he entered upon the Aaron Levy and Mary Weed tracts in 1818, was assessed for one hundred acres, and continued to have his log house and one hundred acres assessed as a distinct tract until 1840, without ever during that time entering upon the John Graeff tract or making any improvements thereon, or exercising any acts of ownership over the same, his actual possession was confined to the said one hundred acres, though he was some years during that time assessed for 2800 acres or thereabouts, distinct from the said one hundred acres, once unassessed, at other times as wild land, at other times without being described as seated or not, and some years not being assessed for the 2800 acres at all; and that neither he nor those claiming under him have acquired any title to any part of the John Graeff survey. And that this is the law even if the Court should be of opinion that the proceedings in the Supreme Court referred to in the second point, passed the title of Walter Stewart to John Hallowell.

Fourth Point.—That if up to 1832, Jesse Roberts was assessed and paid taxes for only 100 acres, except in the year 1820, when he was assessed for 2800 acres unseated land, in 1826 when he was assessed for 2850 acres distinct from the said one hundred acres, and in 1827 and 1828 when he was assessed for 2950 acres wild land—that during that time he never exercised any acts of ownership over any part of the John Graeff survey, then the plaintiffs have no title to the land in dispute, and the verdict of the Jury should be in favor of the defendant.

To the Third and Fourth Points.—We decline to charge you as asked in these points. How the question of taxation and non-taxation is important has heretofore been stated in our general charge, and only so far as the facts referred to in these points be important.

Fifth Point.—That if the Jury believe that there were no marks of the surveys of Aaron Levy or Mary Weed within the boundaries of the John Graeff survey, and that neither Jesse Roberts, nor those claiming under him ever made any improvements upon, or exercised any acts of ownership over any part of the John Graeff survey, then neither the plaintiffs nor those under whom they claim, ever had such "actual, continued, visible, notorious, distinct and hostile" possession of the land in dispute as is necessary to give a title by the statute of limitations.

To the Fifth Point.—We decline to take the whole case from you under this point; his possession under his colour of title would be presumptive evidence of his claim, and the payment of taxes upon the whole land, if made by him as already referred to, if found by the jury, would be the exercise of distinct acts of ownership, connected with the possession of the improvements, which the jury might apply to the land.

The answers of the Court to defendant's 3rd and 4th points were assigned for error. J. W. Comly, Esq., for Plaintiff in Error. James Pleasants, Esq., for Defendants in Error. The opinion of the Court (Judge Black dissenting) was delivered by Lewis, C. J.

If any principle in the law of Pennsylvania can be regarded as settled by argument and authority, it is that which affirms that the legal title to uncultivated lands draws to it the possession, and that the possession is to be deemed actual for all purposes of remedy, until it is interrupted by an actual entry and adverse possession taken by another. Miller v. Shaw, 7 S. & R. 134; Barr v. Getz, 4 Wheat. 213; Mather v. Trinity Church, 3 S. & R. 518.

It was certainly at one time equally well settled that this legal possession by the owner cannot be ousted by any mere constructive possession of a wrong doer. No single trespass, nor even a succession of trespasses will produce that effect. Nothing short of an actual possession permanently continued will take away from the owner the possession which the law attaches to the legal title. In order to give title under the statute of limitations, the possession of the disseisor must not only be actual, but it must be visible, notorious, distinct, hostile and continued for the period of 21 years. Hawk v. Sennehan, 6 S. & R. 21, Adams v. Robinson, 6 Barr, 271. This doctrine has been so constantly repeated by our Courts, and so generally acted upon by the people, that it has become a rule of property which cannot be changed without a manifest disregard of the principle stare decisis, producing in its result an alarming violation of the right of property and a disastrous disturbance of the quiet of community. In accordance with this rule it has been solemnly decided by the highest judicial authority in the State that the uninterrupted use of a tract of land as a timber lot for the supply of a saw mill, or as a wood lot for iron works, even when accompanied with the payment of taxes on it, will not constitute an adverse possession. Wright v. Guier, 9 Watts 172; Sorber v. Willing, 10 Watts 141. That the annual use of land as a sugar camp for 21 years under a junior survey, gives no title under the statute of limitations. Adams v. Robinson, 6 Barr, 271. That payment of taxes alone, for 21 years, gives no title. Nagle v. Albright, 4 Wharton 291; Sorber v. Willing, 10 W. 141; and that payment of taxes and claiming and offering to sell the land do not oust the legal owner of his possession. Urket v. Coryell, 5 W. & S. 60.

It has also been held that a roving possession of different parts of a tract from time to time in the whole, continued for 21 years, but no particular spot for that time, will not establish a title by adverse possession. Potts v. Gilbert, 3 W. C. C. Rep. 475. In a recent case this court has even gone so far as to decide that the actual occupancy of a small spot of ground for 21 years, a part of the time for a privy and the rest of the time for a dung heap, was not such a possession as gave title under the statute. Shroder v. Brennehan, 9 Har. 228. It has likewise been decided that actual cultivation of part of a tract with marked lines continued for 21 years gives no title without payment of taxes, beyond the actual enclosure or cultivated part. Bishop v. Lee, 2 Barr, 217. The two decisions last named may have gone too far in opposition to the Statute of Limitations. For myself I confess that I do not perceive the principle upon which either of them can be maintained.

In Ringgold v. Cheney, 4 Hall's Am. L. J. 128, it was decided by the General Court of Maryland that an actual possession of a portion of the plaintiff's land, although under cover of a younger title, derived from the State, and continued for the period required by the Statute of Limitations was not a defence beyond the adversary possession by actual enclosures. This decision was cited with approbation by Chief Justice Tighman in Burns v. Swift, 2 S. & R. 439, and it was there stated that the principle was recognised by McKean, O. J., and Yeates, J. at Nisi Prius. C. J. Tighman declared that "he had always considered the law as very clear." 2 S. & R. 439. The case of Ringgold's lessee a. Cheney was again cited by this Court in Miller v. Shaw, 7 S. & R. 137. But in the case last mentioned it was intimated by the Court that "if a man had color of title to the plaintiff's land, and had entered on part of it in assertion of his claim, neither the plaintiff nor any other person under him being on the land, the case would be very different from a possession without color of title." In McCall v. Neely, 3 Watts 10, it was held that a written conveyance was not necessary to give color of title; and it was thought by Chief Justice Gibson that an entry is by color of title when it is made under a bona fide, and not a pretended claim to a title existing in another. Id. 72. In accordance with these intimations it seems to have been settled, that where there has been an actual possession taken by an intruder of any part of the land of another, under a bona fide claim, accompanied with a survey, or other designation of boundaries, and a continued use of the land within the boundaries so claimed, as farmers generally use their woodland, for the period of 21 years, the intruder gains title not only to what he has actually cleared and cultivated, but to all included within his lines. Bell v. Hartley, 4 W. & S. 32, McCall v. Carver, 4 W. & S. 151. If the claim and use be according to the lines of surrounding surveys, or according to the lines of the surveys made for the true owner, it is as valid after 21 years possession under it as if the boundaries had been first marked by the intruder. Cresswell v. Altemus, 7 Watts 580. But in all these cases it is essential to the validity of an adverse possession that there shall be an actual entry upon the land of the rightful owner, and an actual visible possession taken of some part of it. Without such actual invasion of his right of property he is not called upon to vindicate it, and loses nothing by any supposed neglect to bring an action for an imaginary injury of which he has no notice.

This principle, with the exception to be noticed hereafter, runs through all the cases. It was distinctly asserted by Chief Justice Gibson himself, in Wright v. Guier, 9 W. 172, decided so late as 1840, it was then held that actual residence and possession on adjoining land, under a levy and conveyance by the Sheriff duly acknowledged and sanctioned by the Court with boundaries including the valid title will not give actual possession of the valid survey, and that such a possession on adjoining land, although accompanied with the use of the valid survey, as woodland cutting and coaling the wood for extensive iron works, cutting timber for rails, barking the trees, and selling the bark to a neighboring tannery, cutting timber for building purposes, and making shingles on the premises will not constitute a case of actual possession. "Happily," says the learned judge, "we have a standard for the measurement of it." He then quotes, as the standard that furnished by Mr. Justice Duncan, in Brown v. Caldwell, when he declared that possession means "an actual occupation, not a bare solitary trespass by an intruder, but an actual, visible, notorious occupancy." He even carried the principle into its legitimate result by showing that there was no difference between a solitary trespass and repeated trespasses. He tells us that "although residence is not a necessary ingredient of adverse possession, there must be enclosure and cultivation." "that such an occupancy is indefinitely continuous, while the occupancy of a trespasser, who neither cultivates nor encloses, continues no longer than he remains in contact with the soil." He then meets and demolishes at a blow the very pretence of possession, which was afterwards sanctioned by himself through some unaccountable mistake in the unfortunate decision in Waggoner v. Hastings. But," continued the learned Chief Justice, in Wright v. Guier, "it is supposed that a resident, on adjoining land, is in actual possession of all he uses for his ordinary purposes after its kind, as a part of his domain, and in this lies the vice of the argument. Where a particular tract of land is occupied by a resident on it under a colorable title, his possession of it is co-extensive with his survey; but it is not admitted that he gains possession of his neighbor's unoccupied tract by crossing the intermediate boundary to trespass on it. 9 Watts 176. In support of this pretence of actual possession by construction, to the extent of the boundaries claimed, it was undoubtedly necessary to show that such a possession had been taken of the land of the rightful owner as would enable him to maintain ejectment. If he could not maintain ejectment for want of proof that the intruder had taken actual possession of his land, it would shock the common sense of the community to deprive him of his rights for not bringing his action. The doctrine of disseisin by election may be resorted to for the purpose of showing that a plaintiff may, under certain circumstances, support ejectment where there has been no actual disseisin. But if this be the law of Pennsylvania, it is undeniable that, in all such cases, it rests with the party having the right of election to determine whether he will consider himself disseised or not. On this point O. J. Gibson was equally explicit, when he declared that such a claim by the occupier of adjoining land certainly would not constitute a disseisin, against the will of the rightful owner. 9 Watts 176.

But this is not the only case in which the very point under consideration, has been solemnly decided by this Court, adversely to the doctrine of Waggoner v. Hastings and its progeny as recently as 1848 it was decided "that marking the lines of the intruder's claim and getting an unofficial survey of it, including a portion of the plaintiff's survey, although accompanied with actual residence and cultivation within the lines thus marked, but outside of the plaintiff's survey, continued for 21 years, did not give the disseisor title to any part of the survey on which he had made no actual enclosure or improvement. Altemus v. Trimble, 9 Barr, 333. In the case last cited, in addition to the actual possession outside the lines of the legal title, there had been an actual possession by a clearing and cultivation within its lines for 20 years, but as this falls a year short of the period required by law it was held to amount to nothing.

This decision was placed upon the ground that an alleged possession or claim which was neither notorious, palpable nor visible within the plaintiff's lines, never was intended to work a divestiture of title." That the seizure or possession of the plaintiff was not ousted or moved by making their marks, unauthorized by law, whether they were few or many within the plaintiff's lines, unaccompanied with any occupancy by clearing, grubbing or fencing within the lines, so as to give warning of danger, 9 Barr, 233. In support of this opinion Mr. Justice Coulter himself, a lawyer of large experience in the land law of Pennsylvania, remarked, as the organ of the Court, that before a stone is rolled from its bed, or bush grubbed from its place, or a tree felled to the earth, on the plaintiff's land, so as to give him any notice, the statute is made to run against him!" The plaintiff, if he traversed his land occasionally and perceived these marks, whether there were two or a dozen, may have supposed that they were made by a hunter of deer to designate a path. He could see no improvement or actual occupation within his lines. Upon whom then would he make his entry, or against whom would he bring his ejection? The Statute of Limitation was not made to steal people's land from them, but for the quieting of estates and the greater security of real property. It imposed a forfeiture upon those who permitted an estate to grow up under their eye and knowledge, and become permanent by an actual notorious and adverse possession for 21 years." This decision was pronounced by the unanimous voice of all the judges who had the year before agreed to the decision in Waggoner v. Hastings, 5 Barr, 300, and in every essential particular it is in direct conflict with it. An attempt has been made to reconcile the two decisions by drawing a distinction between an official and unofficial survey. But no such distinction exists. All surveys made upon land previously appropriated, without authority from the owner, are unauthorized and void, and are necessarily unofficial.

The Commonwealth, in the sale of her lands, has no attributes of sovereignty. She acts in business of that kind as a private individual, and is bound by the same rules of law and justice that govern individuals. After selling the land once she has no more right to enter upon it for the purpose of surveying it to another than an individual grantor has to commit a trespass on his grantee. The surveying of appropriated land, on the contrary, is positively forbidden by statute. The Commonwealth and her agents and vendees are bound to take notice of a valid survey marked upon the ground and returned into the land office. The parties who attempt to violate the rights of property by making a second and illegal survey deserve on favorable consideration whatever. To call a survey thus made an official act, because it was made by a deputy surveyor is an abuse of terms. There is not the least spark of official authority for a second sale of the land. It is true that the act is clothed in the garb of official formality. But after parting with the land the State had no further right over it in form or in substance, except that of eminent domain. No man is bound to examine the land office for such unauthorized acts. No one is bound to take notice of them. The owner may, if he thinks proper, punish the entry on his land for such a purpose by bringing an action of trespass against the deputy surveyor and all concerned with him in the act. But if he has no notice of it, chooses to disregard the temporary trespass as doing him no essential injury, the title to his land is not endangered by his forbearance. Every argument tending to show that an unauthorized survey of land already appropriated does not disseise the legal owner or give the wrong doer actual possession, applies with equal force to a survey made without authority by a deputy surveyor, and to one made by a private individual both are alike unauthorized, both are alike trespasses. Neither gives actual visible and notorious possession to the wrong doer. Neither gives the owner notice that his right of property has been invaded. Neither furnishes him with the means of knowing against whom to make his entry or bring his action. Neither enables him to sustain his ejection, should he bring one, because proof of actual possession by the defendant is essential to sustain the action. Baily v. Fairplay, 6 Binn, 454. A principle of law which takes away a man's title to his land for an omission to bring an ejection for a trespass in its nature so secret that he would not be presumed to have any knowledge of it, would render all the titles to the unoccupied land of the State of no value. To require an ejection in a case where the action could not be sustained, for want of possession in the defendant, is preposterous. And even if he might maintain an ejection by electing to consider himself disseised where no actual disseisin has taken place, the right of action commences with his election, and cannot exist without it. It is, therefore, absurd, and contrary to all our ideas of law, that a man should be barred for not making an election to consider himself disseised! Such a doctrine means nothing less than that he has no election at all, but must, under penalty of losing his land, consider himself out of possession whenever an adjoining occupant chooses to lay claim to it, although such claimant neither enters upon it, nor takes possession of any part of it, nor gives him any notice whatever of his claim.

We have seen that there is no substantial distinction between the cases of Waggoner v. Hastings and Altemus v. Trimble. The latter overruled the former before any serious mischief had arisen from the error. We have also seen that the decision in Waggoner v. Hastings was contrary to the principles running through all the cases on the Statute of Limitations which had been previously decided, and especially in conflict with the decision in Wright v. Guier, 9 Watts, 172. The attempt to reconcile Waggoner v. Hastings with Wright v. Guier, on the supposed distinction between an official and an unofficial act is more manifestly futile than was the effort to make it stand in harmony with Altemus v. Trimble. In Wright v. Guier the occupier of the adjoining land claimed to hold part of the valid title, by virtue of a levy sale and conveyance by a sheriff, under process from a Court of competent jurisdiction, and that conveyance was duly acknowledged in open Court and sanctioned by its decree. The claimant had all the forms of official authority, but inasmuch as the debtor, as whose land it was sold by the Sheriff, did not own the land, the conveyance gave the purchaser no title. It stood like the case of a sale by the State after she had previously disposed of all her interest in the land.

In both cases the acts were unauthorized by law, and gave neither title nor possession to the purchaser. And no claimant under either of such unauthorized acts could acquire the possession from the rightful owner without an actual entry upon some part of his land.

The rule in Waggoner v. Hastings, had its origin in the Supreme Court. It was unheard of previously among the legal profession, and had not the slightest existence in the customs of the people.

It had never been countenanced by any of the experienced President Judges, whose habits and practice had made them familiar with the Land Law of the State. It came suddenly into existence by overthrowing their well considered decisions in different parts of the State. Waggoner v. Hastings, 5 Barr, 302; Seigle v. Louderback, 5 Barr, 490. Even the learned Judge whose solitary dissent from the opinion we are now delivering marks his recent conversion to the error, had unhesitatingly ruled the point differently in Seigle v. Louderback. The counsel had not presumed to start the doctrine in the Court below, but it was pressed into the service in the Supreme Court, and Kite v. Brown, 5 Barr, 291, was cited as ruling the very point. That case rules no such point; on the contrary, it is an authority in harmony with all the previous decisions. The case is not accurately reported. The plaintiffs claimed fifteen warrants and surveys made in 1794. The surveys were all made at one time in a single block, with the exterior lines of the block marked, but none of the interior lines designating one tract from another had ever been actually marked on the ground. These facts are well remembered by Mr. Justice Woodward, who made the decision in the Court below, and whose opinion was affirmed by this Court. Under these circumstances, it is evident that the whole fifteen surveys adjoining each other in a single block, without interior lines, all made at one time and owned by the same party, were essentially but one tract, which the owner might occupy or subdivide at his pleasure. The defendant claimed, under a junior warrant and survey, which interfered with parts of seven or eight of the plaintiff's warrants. There had been an actual entry within the plaintiff's block or tract, accompanied with residence and valuable improvements therein, in assertion of the defendant's claim.

The Court below held that the occupancy of part of the plaintiff's land by residence and cultivation, was an ouster of the owner as to all the land claimed." This was in harmony with the uniform current of decisions. It recognized the essential principles which runs through all of them, that to affect the plaintiff in any way there must be an actual possession taken of some part of his land. It could make no manner of difference that the claim of the defendant extended over several of the plaintiff's surveys. The moment several surveys became vested in one owner they are to be treated as one tract for all the purposes of disseisin and remedy. An entry upon any part of such tract under color of title is a disseisin to the extent of the title claimed by the disseisor and the owner may redress the wrong by a single ejection as for a single tract. When he finds his right of property actually invaded he is bound to take notice of the intruder's claim, and to resort to the appropriate remedy for it, within the period required by the statute. There is nothing, whatever, in Kite v. Brown which gives the slightest support to the doctrine that the owner of a single survey may be deprived of his title by a mere claim, without any actual entry whatever, within his lines. That the learned and able Judge, who decided both causes in the Court below, understood the distinction between them, is apparent in the cases as reported in the book. He decided one of them in favor of the claim under the statute of limitations, and the other against it, and he now fully concurs in this explanation of the difference. Fitch v. Barr, 8 Mann, 503, is sometimes cited as supporting Waggoner v. Hastings, but it gives not the slightest countenance to any such principle.

In support of the doctrine of Waggoner v. Hastings, it has been suggested in substance, that the owner, although in general residing at a distance from his wild, uncultivated lands, ought to be gifted with powers of vision great enough to see all the lines which wrong doers think proper to run through the trackless wilderness.

The bare statement of such a proposition is a sufficient refutation of it. The law is founded on reason, and requires nothing so unreasonable. It has been supposed, also, that an ejection may be maintained against a man without evidence that he ever took possession of any part of the plaintiff's land, or ever entered upon it for the purpose. But this is contrary to the decision in Bailey v. Fairplay, 6 Binn, 455. Even if the supposition were correct, it fails to meet the pinch of the case, because no man is bound to consider himself disseised when no such thing has ever actually occurred. As a drowning man will catch at a straw, so the argument in favor of Waggoner v. Hastings is driven to the last extremity of suggesting that it is "no bad rule to make men either improve their lands, or give them up to others;" it is not perceived how this suggestion can benefit a claimant who has never made the slightest improvements on the land which he asks to plunder from the rightful owner.

But if such a rule is to be enforced, it ought to have been made a condition of the original grant. To add such a condition afterwards is consistent neither with the obligation of the contract of purchase, nor with the higher obligations of justice.

Believing that the principle affirmed in Waggoner v. Hastings, and in the cases governed by it, was a departure from the settled law, and a dangerous invasion of the right of property, tending to render the titles to uncultivated lands insecure and worthless to the owners, we are constrained to over-rule it, and to adhere to the law as it stood before that error was committed. It is not our duty "to impart immortality to error," when we can correct it before it has become an established rule of property. It cannot be said with any show of reason, that a principle affirmed for the first time in 1847, standing in opposition to all previous authorities, and in conflict with a solemn decision made the year afterwards, is an established rule of property. It was against the general sense of the profession, and no injury can result from adhering to the ancient land marks, as they stood before they were disturbed.

The survey of 1785, to John Graeff, was well made, on unappropriated land, and by competent authority. The plaintiff below, claimed to hold a part of it by adverse possession, on the ground that the lines of their unauthorized junior survey interfered with it, and that they had actual possession of that part of their survey which did not interfere with it. They never entered within the lines of the Graeff survey, never cleared a foot of land, or cut a stick of wood or timber, or exercised any act of ownership upon it. Even the imaginary lines of their survey do not appear to have been actually marked upon any part of the Graeff tract. We have already seen, that payment of taxes alone, will not give the junior survey actual possession of the interference. But conceding that it would, did the plaintiff below pay the taxes on the Graeff land? or any part of it, for 21 years before suit brought. Payment of taxes for a less period than 21 years would be as ineffectual as an adverse possession for a less time than that required.

The ejection was brought on the 27th of April, 1850. The payment of taxes, to have any legal effect, must have commenced in 1829. But in that year, and in the two following years, the plaintiffs below were assessed for only 100 acres, including their log building and saw mill. Their log building and saw mill were on their two tracts, in the names of Mary Weed and Aaron Levy, the first containing 388 acres, and the other 444 acres. They had, besides, three other adjoining tracts. Their whole claim, under their five surveys, amounted to 2031 acres. The Graeff survey contained 409½ acres. Deducting that from the amount contained in the plaintiffs surveys leaves them 1621 acres, for which they might have paid the taxes without interfering with, or paying any part of the taxes on the Graeff survey.

But during 1829, 1830, '31, they only paid taxes on 100 acres. It is plain, therefore, they did not pay the taxes even on their own land. The presumption is, that the 100 acres for which they paid were their own. There is no evidence to show that these 100 acres included any part of the Graeff survey.

If they did, the plaintiffs have failed to show it, and they have, therefore, failed to make out the ingredient on which they rely to give validity to their claim under the statute of limitations.

It was error, to leave the case to the jury, on the question whether the plaintiffs below intended by the omission to pay taxes to abandon their possession. They never had any possession of the land in controversy. They had, therefore, nothing of the kind which could be abandoned. Even if payment of taxes 21 years gave them possession, payment for a less period would not do so. The intention not to abandon is immaterial.

It is scarcely necessary to say, that the defendant below had a right to defeat the plaintiffs action by showing a subsisting title in John Graeff, no rule is better settled than this, Kennedy v. Speer, 3 Watts, 77. Under the evidence in the cause, the Graeff survey was a subsisting title. The plaintiffs below had no right to recover any part of it, and the jury should have been so instructed.

District Court.

Opinion by Judge Sharswood.

HILL v. WITMER.

Saturday, January 19, 1856.

This is a scire facias on a mechanic's claim. The executor of the owner pleads that Gilbert Low, the contractor, made a contract with the decedent to erect two houses within nine months from August 3, 1853. The plaintiff, on the 1st of February, 1854, after the materials which are the subject of this claim were furnished, accepted Low's note, payable in ninety days from the 1st of February, 1854, for the price of the materials, and agreed in consideration of the delivery of said note to extend and give time to said Low for the payment of said price for ninety days.

The defendant, before the note fell due, paid Low the full amount of the contract price. There is another plea setting forth the additional fact that defendant had no notice of the lien when he paid the contractor.

The owner of a building, or rather the building itself, when erected by contract, stands very much in the relation of a surety for the contractor. We are now to decide whether those equitable principles which have been adopted in regard to principal and surety, shall be applied to this relation of contractor and owner. It appears settled in England that even a covenant not to sue the principal with an express reservation of all remedies against the surety, does not discharge the latter, for the equity of the surety is not affected. Upon payment of the debt, by the surety, he has a right to immediate recourse against the principal by the very terms of the principal's agreement with the creditor.

Whether this is so in this state has never been expressly decided.

As far as appears on the pleadings there was no reservation, and if the contractor and owner do really stand in the relation of principal and surety, we are bound to apply to it the familiar rule, that time given by a binding agreement to the principal without the consent of the surety discharges the latter. The owner had a right as soon as the work was done to pay the mechanic, and either deduct the amount from the contract price, or if he had already paid, proceed at once against the contractor to secure his reimbursement. The act of the creditor, the mechanic, or material man, in giving time to the contractor impaired this right. He could not proceed until the time expired, and this delay might be the cause of final failure to recover.

Let us examine whether there is any thing in the decided cases which ought to prevent us from adopting a principle which seems required by analogy, and is obviously so just and reasonable.

In Kinsley v. Buchanan, (5 Watts, 115,) in which it was held "that an acceptance of a note from the contractor is not a relinquishment of a mechanic's lien," the note was payable on demand, and no time was given. Johns v. Bolton, (12 Penna. State Rep., 340,) is a case which, so far as concerns this point, is not fully reported. It is stated that before the lien was filed, the defendants (that is, perhaps, the contractors,) gave to the plaintiff a note on account of the work done, which was dishonored, and taken up by the plaintiffs. There is no argument on this point, and the court take no notice of it. They reverse for certain errors and add, generally, that the other errors not abandoned are sustained. It is probable that this was one of those abandoned. It is evident, however, that there is nothing in the case to show time given by a binding agreement. When a creditor accepts the debtor's note for a preceident debt payable at a future day, it is prima facie only collateral, and if he does not part with the note, or produces it on the trial, he may sue an hour afterwards. Weakley v. Bell, (9 Watts, 283.) In the case before us there is an express avowment of such an agreement to give time in consideration of giving the note, which the demurrer admits.

Judgment for defendant.

A MERITORIOUS CARD.

Hail! honored age of grand progression,
While each one clings to his profession,
And science moves with onward motion,
To suit each wayward thought and notion,
Bringing to light some new invention,
More strange than modern wit can mention,
Or Genius paint with true endeavor,
Though making graphic strides forever,
While Reason urges proud Ambition,
To strive for wondrous Competition;
Yat, in this age of glorious Art,
We can the meed of praise impart,
When meritorious efforts claim
A modest puff to gild the name:
And thus we call, with honest pride,
Attention to the Painter's side,—
A man who bravely knows his calling,
Whose works are worthy of extolling,
A model Artist of the day,
And most obliging in his way,
GEORGE H. BANCROFT,—mark the name,
In CHESTNUT STREET you'll find the same,
Call at Five Hundred and Thirty-One,
You'll get the best of painting done,
In Modern or in Classic Order,
From templed shrine to parlor border,
In magic tints of every hue,
To Signs embossed in gold and blue,
Or Figure Head, or Church, or Steeple,
He is resolved to please the people,
And whether foe, or friend or neighbor,
Will charge but moderate for his labor.
We thus invite each one and all,
To give this worthy man a call.
Who will, we venture to engage,
Feel grateful for your patronage.*

* We would particularly invite public attention to our friend Mr. BANCROFT, who is a young, enterprising beginner, and who has gone to vast expense in fitting up his establishment, and is now ready to receive orders for Painting, in all its various branches, at 531 and 533 Chestnut street, 5 doors east of Seventeenth st.

The following valuable opinions of the work have been received by the Publishers.

From Judge Catron of the U. S. Supreme Court.

"Hardly a stronger guaranty could be afforded to the American Bar that the work has merit, than the fact that Mr. Wharton was author of the legal portion of the book."

JOHN CATRON.

From Professor Parsons of the Cambridge Law School.

"I have not had time to examine it critically, but have read enough to convince me that it is an instructive and valuable work. Some of its topics, which are quite new in a book on this subject, are shown to be among the most important."

THEOPHILUS PARSONS.

From Judge McLean of the U. S. Supreme Court.

"I have not had time to look minutely through the volume, but from the known ability of the authors, and their experience, I am sure the book must be very interesting and useful, not only to the profession of the law, but also to general readers. A modern treatise of this kind, embodying the experience of jurists and medical men, with decisions of courts, was much wanted; and I am satisfied that abler pens than those employed, could not have been engaged in its production."

REPORTS OF THE COMMON LAW COURTS OF ENGLAND.

Containing the cases decided in the Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Nisi Prius Courts, from 1813 to 1855, and in the Court of Exchequer and Exchequer Chamber, from 1824 to 1855, are found in

The Regular and Authoritative Series of the English Common Law and English Exchequer Reports,

Which present the following claims to the support of the profession:

1. They are the only series issued as the authoritative and acknowledged medium by which the decisions of the Law Courts of England are made public.

2. They contain Later Reports than the Boston series, are more fully and more ably reported, and so arranged by preservation of the original paging, that reference by reporters, or by elementary writers, can be traced as readily as in the English editions.

Vol. 2, Ellis & Blackburne's (75 E. C. L. R.,) Reports (Q. B.) to January, 1854, was published by us in June, 1854. At that time the last Queen's Bench case printed in the Boston Law and Equity Reports, was of June 25, 1853. Our volume contained cases decided five months later. The Queen's Bench cases to November 25, 1853, were published in the Boston series in August, 1854, two months after we had distributed the same cases.

Vol. 3, Ellis & Blackburne, (77 E. C. L. R.,) with cases to the end of Trinity Term, 1854, was published when the latest case of Queen's Bench decisions in the Boston series, was of February 8, 1854, more than four months behind the regular reporters.

Exchequer Reports, vol. 9, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) distributed by us January 11, 1855, contains cases to May 10, 1854. The last Exchequer case then in the Boston series was decided February 9, 1854, four months behind the regular Reporter, issued in Philadelphia.

3. They contain more cases decided by the courts represented, than any other series issued in this country.

Vol. 77 English Common Law, (8 E. & B.,) reports eighty-six cases decided in the Queen's Bench since January 11, 1854, while but fifty-eight Queen's Bench cases, decided since January 1, 1854, are found scattered among Vols. 22, 24 and 25 of the Boston Law and Equity.

Vol. 78 E. C. L. K. (5 J. Scott,) reports sixty-five cases decided since Nov. 13, 1853, in the Common Pleas, while the L. & E. has but fifty-seven cases in that Court since the same period.

Vol. 9 Exchequer Reports, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) reports one hundred and ten cases in the Courts of Exchequer, decided since June 24, 1853, while since the same date, the L. & E. report but 107 cases, scattered through vols. 20, 22, 24 and 25.

4. They are almost exclusively cited in argument of counsel, and referred to by Elementary Writers for Law Authorities. See Smith's Leading Cases, Smith's Contracts, Smith's Landlord and Tenant, by Maude; Byles on Bills and Promissory Notes, Broom's Legal Maxims, Broom's Commentaries on the Laws of England, or almost any recent Law Book issued in England.

5. The Philadelphia Reports are edited by Judge Sharswood and by Judge Hare, whose labors as editors and authors have made them so well and so favorably known to the profession.

6. The Boston Law and Equity is made up in this country from the Law Journal, Jurist, Times and other Law periodicals, of a weekly, monthly, or quarterly character, and being unknown in England, is never cited in Court, or referred to by Law writers. The periodicals from which it is extracted, are occasionally cited under their own particular names, but they do not possess that permanent value, even in England, which is all-important in a series of Reports.

A carefully prepared and accurate Annual Digest of all the cases decided by the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Exchequer, will be distributed, early in each year, to subscribers to either series, free of charge. That for 1854 is ready, and will be mailed to subscribers who have not received a copy.

English Law and Equity Reports.

ENGLISH REPORTS IN LAW AND EQUITY. A Complete Collection of the Cases decided by the House of Lords, the Privy Council, the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas and Exchequer, the Lord Chancellor, the High Court of Appeal in Chancery, the Court of Criminal Appeal, and the Admiralty and Ecclesiastical Courts. Reprinted within a few weeks after the decisions are rendered.

This series has the merit of being complete, reliable, prompt, convenient, and cheap. It is now universally cited in the courts, and referred to in the recent law books as standard authority. All the cases reported in England, are here reprinted from the most reliable sources, as soon as they reach this country.

These Reports are now regularly digested in our Annual United States Digest, which thus embraces an annual digest of the whole English and American Law.

We have now in Preparation, and shall soon Publish,

A separate Digest of these Reports, embracing the first thirty-one volumes of the series, prepared with express reference to the convenience of the American profession, and exhibiting a complete synopsis of all the English Decisions reported in those volumes during the last five years; also a Table of Cases referring to all the contemporaneous English Reports. This will be the first Digest of English Decisions prepared expressly for the American Lawyer, and it is intended to give it the same advantages over the English Digests hitherto reprinted in this country, which the American text books have generally been found to possess over the English.

The Law and Equity Reports will be continued on the same plan as heretofore; the number of volumes being reduced to four per year; and Digests will be published from time to time as the convenience of the profession demands.

Vols. 1 to 31, now ready for delivery, at $2 00 per volume.

FIRE PROOF SAFES,

With Hall's Patent Powder Proof Locks, which were awarded separate Medals at the World's Fair, London, 1851, and also at the World's Fair, New York 1853, and '54. The subscribers are the sole manufacturers and proprietors in this State of the above unequalled Safes and Locks. The reputation of the genuine "Herring's Safe," is world wide, and for the last thirteen years, the mercantile community have witnessed and borne testimony to their NEVER FAILING fire proof qualities. More than 12,000 of these Safes have been actually sold, and over two HUNDRED have passed triumphantly through accidental fires. The public are assured that all Safes manufactured by the subscribers are not only guaranteed to be fully equal, but in many respects even superior to those which have been so severely tried by fire. Few will forget their services in the burning of the "Tribune establishment," New York, and at the Great Fire in Strawberry street, at the large fire last July, opposite the Girard House, and still more recently in the Fire at Fifth and Chestnut sts., in this city, in which these Safes came forth the acknowledged CHAMPION, when many other securities failed.

NOTICE.

THE Subscriber takes this method of informing his numerous friends, and the public in general, that he is now prepared to execute in a superior manner, every variety of HOUSE and SIGN PAINTING, Graining, Bronzing, Gilding on Glass and Stained Glass, Calsoining Ceilings, Walls, &c., &c. China and Glass Painting executed in a superior manner, and warranted not to CRACK. Ceilings cleaned and whitened, and made equal to new, at a cost little over that of whitewash. The subscriber would state here that it frequently occurs that persons attempt to use this article who have no knowledge of it whatever, either in the mixing or putting it on, and the consequence is, the job is spoiled, and the article condemned without a proper trial.— So also with CHINA GLOSS; to make a good job it requires a practical knowledge of the use of the brush, as also the making of the Gloss. In regard to the ZINC WHITE, the subscriber would most respectfully recommend it as an article far superior to any other paint now in use, for whiteness and durability of color.

The Subscriber would respectfully solicit a portion of the patronage of those getting Painting done. Feeling grateful for the many favors already bestowed by his friends, he still hopes to share their patronage by unremitting attention to their calls. Those who have large contracts to give out, need have no hesitancy in calling, as he is prepared to give every satisfaction in regard to work, both in reference and security, for the faithful performance of all agreements. The Subscriber can be found at the S. E. CORNER OF FOURTH AND WALNUT STS. where he will be happy to receive any orders. Aug. 24—1 yr. JACOB S. BEAM.

The Bank of Cash Credits.

Application will be made to the Legislature of Pennsylvania, for the Charter of a Bank Issue with general Banking privileges, with a capital of ONE MILLION OF DOLLARS. Said Bank to be located in the City of Philadelphia, and to be conducted upon the system of cash credits only, as is herewith indicated.

A cash credit is a credit given to an individual by a Banking Company, for a limited sum, seldom under $500, or $1000, upon his own security, and that of two or three individuals, approved by the Bank, who become sureties for its payment. The individual who has obtained such a credit, is enabled, to draw the whole sum, or any part of it, when he pleases; replacing it, or portions of it, according as he finds it convenient; interest being charged upon such part only as he draws out.

"If a man borrows $1000, from a private hand, and even then it is not always to be found when required, he pays interest for it, whether he be using it or not. His bank credit costs him nothing, except during the moment it is of service to him, and this circumstance is of equal advantage as if he had borrowed money at a much lower rate of interest."

Cash credits are not, however, intended to be a dead load; the main objects of the Banks in granting them is to get their notes circulated, and they do not grant them except to persons in business, or to those who are frequently drawing out and paying in money.

Any person who applies to a Bank for a cash credit, is called upon to produce sureties, and, after a full inquiry into the character of the applicant, the nature of his business, and the sufficiency of his securities, he is allowed to open a credit, and to draw upon the Bank for the whole of its amount, or for such part as his daily transactions may require. To the credit of the account, he pays in such sums as he may not have occasion to use, and interest is charged or credited upon the balance, as the case may be. From the facility which these cash credits give to all the small transactions of the country, and from the opportunities which they afford to persons who begin business with little or no capital but their character, to employ profitably the minutest products of their industry, it cannot be doubted that the most important advantages are derived in the whole community.

A MERITORIOUS CARD.
Hail! honored age of grand progression,
While each one clings to his profession,
And science moves with onward motion,
To suit each wayward thought and notion,
Bringing to light some new invention,
More strange than modern wit can mention,
Or Genius paint with true endeavor,
Though making graphic strides forever,
While Reason urges proud Ambition,
To strive for wondrous Competition;
Yet, in this age of glorious Art,
We can the meed of praise impart,
When meritorious efforts claim
A modest puff to gild the name:
And thus we call, with honest pride,
Attention to the Painter's side,—
A man who bravely knows his calling,
Whose works are worthy of extolling,
A model Artist of the day,
And most obliging in his way,
GEORGE H. BANCROFT,—mark the name,
In CHESTNUT STREET you'll find the same,
Call at Five Hundred and Thirty-One,
You'll get the best of painting done,
In Modern or in Classic Order,
From templed shrine to parlor border,
In magic tints of every hue,
To Signs embossed in gold and blue,
Or Figure Head, or Church, or Steeple,
He is resolved to please the people,
And whether foe, or friend or neighbor,
Will charge but moderate for his labor.
We thus invite each one and all,
To give this worthy man a call.
Who will, we venture to engage,
Feel grateful for your patronage.*
* We would particularly invite public attention to our friend Mr. BANCROFT, who is a young, enterprising beginner, and who has gone to vast expense in fitting up his establishment, and is now ready to receive orders for Painting, in all its various branches, at 531 and 533 Chestnut street, 5 doors east of Seventeenth st.

Book VI. Legal Relations of Homicide. Fœticide and Infanticide. A. Elementary Definitions. B. Corpus Delicti. C. Intent and Design. From what to be Inferred.

The following valuable opinions of the work have been received by the Publishers.

From Judge Catron of the U. S. Supreme Court.
"Hardly a stronger guaranty could be afforded to the American Bar that the work has merit, than the fact that Mr. Wharton was author of the legal portion of the book."
JOHN CATRON.

From Professor Parsons of the Cambridge Law School.

"I have not had time to examine it critically, but have read enough to convince me that it is an instructive and valuable work. Some of its topics, which are quite new in a book on this subject, are shown to be among the most important."
THEOPHILUS PARSONS.

From Judge McLean of the U. S. Supreme Court.

"I have not had time to look minutely through the volume, but from the known ability of the authors, and their experience, I am sure the book must be very interesting and useful, not only to the profession of the law, but also to general readers. A modern treatise of this kind, embodying the experience of jurists and medical men, with decisions of courts, was much wanted; and I am satisfied that able pens than those employed, could not have been engaged in its production."
JOHN MCLEAN.

REPORTS OF THE COMMON LAW COURTS OF ENGLAND.

Containing the cases decided in the Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Nisi Prius Courts, from 1813 to 1855, and in the Court of Exchequer and Exchequer Chamber, from 1824 to 1855, are found in
The Regular and Authoritative Series of the

English Common Law and English Exchequer Reports,

Which present the following claims to the support of the profession:

1. They are the only series issued as the authoritative and acknowledged medium by which the decisions of the Law Courts of England are made public.
2. They contain Later Reports than the Boston series, are more fully and more ably reported, and so arranged by preservation of the original paging, that reference by reporters, or by elementary writers, can be traced as readily as in the English editions.
- Vol. 2, Ellis & Blackburne's (75 E. C. L. R.,) Reports (Q. B.) to January, 1854, was published by us in June, 1854. At that time the last Queen's Bench case printed in the Boston Law and Equity Reports, was of June 25, 1853. Our volume contained cases decided five months later. The Queen's Bench cases to November 25, 1853, were published in the Boston series in August, 1854, two months after we had distributed the same cases.
- Vol. 3, Ellis & Blackburne's (77 E. C. L. R.,) with cases to the end of Trinity Term, 1854, was published when the latest case of Queen's Bench decisions in the Boston series, was of February 8, 1854, more than four months behind the regular reports.
- Exchequer Reports, vol. 9, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) distributed by us January 11, 1855, contains cases to May 10, 1854. The last Exchequer case then in the Boston series was decided February 9, 1854, four months behind the regular Reporter, issued in Philadelphia.
3. They contain more cases decided by the courts represented, than any other series issued in this country.
- Vol. 77 English Common Law, (3 E. & B.,) reports eighty-six cases decided in the Queen's Bench since January 11, 1854, while but fifty-eight Queen's Bench cases, decided since January 1, 1854, are found scattered among Vols. 22, 24 and 25 of the Boston Law and Equity.
- Vol. 78 E. C. L. K. (5 J. Scott,) reports sixty-five cases decided since Nov. 13, 1853, in the Common Pleas, while the L. & E. has but fifty-seven cases in that Court since the same period.
- Vol. 9 Exchequer Reports, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) reports one hundred and ten cases in the Courts of Exchequer, decided since June 24, 1853, while since the same date, the L. & E. report but 107 cases, scattered through vols. 20, 22, 24 and 25.
4. They are almost exclusively cited in argument of counsel, and referred to by Elementary Writers for Law Authorities. See Smith's Leading Cases, Smith's Contracts, Smith's Landlord and Tenant, by Maude; Byles on Bills and Promissory Notes, Broom's Legal Maxims, Broom's Commentaries on the Laws of England, or almost any recent Law Book issued in England.
5. The Philadelphia Reports are edited by Judge Sharswood and by Judge Hare, whose labors as editors and authors have made them so well and so favorably known to the profession.
6. The Boston Law and Equity is made up in this country from the Law Journal, Jurist, Times and other Law periodicals, of a weekly, monthly, or quarterly character, and being unknown in England, is never cited in Court, or referred to by Law writers. The periodicals from which it is extracted, are occasionally cited under their own particular names, but they do not possess that permanent value, even in England, which is all-important in a series of Reports.

A carefully prepared and accurate Annual Digest of all the cases decided by the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Exchequer, will be distributed, early in each year, to subscribers to either series, free of charge. That for 1854 is ready, and will be mailed to subscribers who have not received a copy.

English Law and Equity Reports.

ENGLISH REPORTS IN LAW AND EQUITY. A Complete Collection of the Cases decided by the House of Lords, the Privy Council, the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas and Exchequer, the Lord Chancellor, the High Court of Appeal in Chancery, the Court of Criminal Appeal, and the Admiralty and Ecclesiastical Courts. Reprinted within a few weeks after the decisions are rendered.

This series has the merit of being complete, reliable, prompt, convenient, and cheap. It is now universally cited in the courts, and referred to in the recent law books as standard authority. All the cases reported in England, are here reprinted from the most reliable sources, as soon as they reach this country.

These Reports are now regularly digested in our Annual United States Digest, which thus embraces an annual digest of the whole English and American Law.

We have now in Preparation, and shall soon Publish,

A separate Digest of these Reports, embracing the first thirty-one volumes of the series, prepared with express reference to the convenience of the American profession, and exhibiting a complete synopsis of all the English Decisions reported in those volumes during the last five years; also a Table of Cases referring to all the contemporaneous English Reports. This will be the first Digest of English Decisions prepared expressly for the American Lawyer, and it is intended to give it the same advantages over the English Digests hitherto reprinted in this country, which the American text books have generally been found to possess over the English.

The Law and Equity Reports will be continued on the same plan as heretofore; the number of volumes being reduced to four per year; and Digests will be published from time to time as the convenience of the profession demands.

Vols. 1 to 31, now ready for delivery, at $2 00 per volume.

FRIDAY, MARCH 7, 1856.

PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY,

By KING & BAIRD, No. 9 Sansom Street,
AT TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, IN ADVANCE.
HENRY E. WALLACE, Editor.

THE LATE H. B. WALLACE, ESQ.

This gentleman who was so well known to the Profession during his life, by his editorship with Judge Hare of Smith's Leading Cases, the American Leading Cases, and the Leading Cases in Equity, has since his death become known not less creditably, as a literary writer. A volume entitled "Art, Scenery and Philosophy in Europe" appeared about a year ago; and we understand that Messrs. Parry & McMillan have now in press another volume, entitled "Literary Criticisms and other Papers." We extract one of these Criticisms upon a work belonging partly to literature and partly to our own profession:—

A POPULAR AND PRACTICAL INTRODUCTION TO LAW STUDIES, etc. By SAMUEL WARREN, ESQ., of the Inner Temple.

MR. CANNING said of Ward, the author of Tremane, who wrote also on the Law of Nations, that his law books were as pleasant as novels, and his novels as dull as law books. In that instance there was more truth in the disparaging half of the remark, than it was at all necessary that there should be in any thing so witty. Those who did not relish the politics or the peculiar humor of "Ten Thousand a Year," might be disposed to think that something of the same transposition of talents had taken place in Mr. Warren's case, and that a portion of the prosiness had been let out upon the scenes which ought to have been reserved for the Studies. For our own part, however, we have always thought that work the most readable novel, and the best worth preserving, of any since the death of Scott. But whatever may be thought of the present treatise, there will be no doubt among any class of readers, that it has all the liveliness and point of a clever romance. The first edition was extensively read both here and in England; this new edition presents not merely an enlarged and improved version of the original production, but in addition, another separate work incorporated with it, of a more practical character,—exhibiting an outline of civil, criminal, and ecclesiastical law, as those distinctions exist in England,—an account of the immense changes which the legislation of the last fifteen years has made in conveyancing,—an abstract of the principles of pleading, which is none the worse of being pretty literally copied from Sergeant Stephen,—and a view of the jurisdiction and proceedings of the Spiritual Courts, a subject highly curious and interesting to American readers.

Mr. Warren's book is as good a book, we suppose, as could be made by anybody upon this plan: but we have no very high respect for the design itself. We have doubts of the practicability of thus trying to shoot between wind and water; and are inclined to think, in endeavoring to be at the same time popular and professional, the author will have to meet the fate of those who are candidates for inconsistent honors. There are many ways of making legal martinets and petit-maitres; there is only one way to make a lawyer, and that is earnest, concentrated, continued hard labor; the "live-like-a-hermit and work-like-a-horse" method of Lord Eldon. And it appears to us to be more desirable that all the native difficulties, roughness, and disgusts of the thing, should be met at once; and that the student should understand, at the very threshold of the profession, that his taste and temper must be accommodated to the law, and not that the law is to be moulded to suit his temper and tastes. And if it were possible to make the preparation for the law an easy and pleasant matter, it would be, in our opinion, a very unfortunate thing. The discipline of difficulty,—the alternative and bracing influences of its severity and rigor—are the inestimable blessings which the study of the law promises to those who adopt it. To simplify it in such a way that it should require no effort, no patient research, no long, keen course of thought, would be as injudicious as to make the exercises of the gymnasium,—the climbing of ladders, the jerking of dumb-bells, or the swinging on parallel bars—light and unfatiguing: in both cases, it is in the hardness of the occupation that its value consists. The law is, and always must be, a severe, perplexing, profoundly difficult science, adapted only to great intellects, in whose constitution all the faculties have been happily developed in their fullest force and fineness, by principle, circumstances, or the power of passions; because the subject with which the legal mind deals is complicated of all the variety of earthly occurrences, the confusion of worldly conjunctures, the range and obliquity of human interests. Those who propose to make law simple and easy, seem to us to make a mistake as to what law means, as a profession and practical science. It is not an affair of books; it does not lie in a knowledge of certain traditions and secrets among a certain set of men, and a familiarity with some special ceremonies and rites connected with particular public tribunals. It consists in the ordering of human society, in the settlement of men's interests, the vindication of respective rights, and the adjustment of the moral relations of the community. To find out the truth of a protracted and involved course of action—to discover how far and in how many different directions the line of justice has been departed from by all parties concerned, and how, accurately and safely, the tangled error can be brought straight;—this is THE LAW; this is what the Counsellors, and the Judges, are engaged about; the definitions, rules, maxims and forms, which fill the text-books, are not the profession or practice itself, but are designed to minister to that of which they might be said to form no part whatever;—to simplify, by reducing as much as is possible to general and familiar conceptions,—to aid, by suggestions of good sense and sound logic, embodied in fixed usages and received axioms, to keep the sagacity of the professors on the alert, and impart rectitude to their judgment. Such being the case, it is plain that the real stress and pressure of this great practical profession, never can be lessened until the elements and laws of moral being are changed; and the subject of legal education resolves itself into a question whether the strain shall be diffused over years of irksome and laborious education, or be accumulated upon the occasions of practice. It appears to us, that so far from striving to coddle and intertense the mental fibres of the young apprentice to the law, by facilitating every process, the effort should be rather to heap difficulties and trials upon that period of probation, provided, of course, that the matter is not carried to the extent of shocking and breaking down the spirit and strength. That the youthful nature is disinclined to effort, we know very well; but that any one should be disposed to humor and foster this disposition, is to us surprising. Such is the law of our imperfect condition, that labor is our greatest privilege and blessing; the true path to happiness; the appropriate development of our best power; the only source of our highest virtues. Besides this, we are inclined to think that by making preliminary study easy, one great incentive to after professional energy will be withdrawn. A long, distressing discipline of research and thought leaves a kind of fine resentment in the nature: a man is anxious to wreak the power which he feels within him, upon some high course of professional action; to justify the propriety of his long, solitary labors, to himself and others, by displaying an abundance of valuable fruits from them; to vindicate his own conscious superiority against the negligence of society, by forcing himself to distinction. In addition to this, by simplifying study, and communicating the results of knowledge, instead of imparting the means of attaining it, you take away a great part of the knowledge itself; at least, you impair the distinctness with which it was apprehended. A man never fully knows any truth, till he has discovered it, anew, for himself; nor wholly understands a conclusion till he has seen it analytically in the form of its elements. The old way of teaching boys to swim, was to plunge them soue into the river, and let them kick for their lives: now, they tie cork jackets on them, and give a great deal of instruction in hydrostatics and anatomy, beforehand. But it is easier, in every thing, to proceed from the practice to the theory, than from the theory to the practice: practice, indeed, teaches the theory, and is the only way of learning it thoroughly, but theory does not teach practice. We would give more for the few, definite, precise, and actual notions which a young man will have after working and crying over Littleton, than the mass of vague, vaporous half-shaped conceptions he will ever acquire from a book of this sort. We do not mean to disparage Mr. Warren's treatise in particular; but only the system to which it is accommodated. His work is ingenious and amusing; and in an age like this, which is at once restless, busy and inactive, and is fond of touching knowledge at a great many points, it is adapted to be generally popular.

ORPHANS' COURT SALES.

We call the attention of Counsel and Conveyancers concerned in these proceedings, to the fact that the omission to advertise the abstract notice of sale in this paper, may seriously affect the title of the purchaser, and fail to discharge incumbences.

Many other notices which should be inserted in this paper, are omitted by the parties or the officers whose duty it is to insert them. The very great convenience afforded by the concentration, in an abstract form, in one paper of convenient size for reference and preservation, of all the legal notices, spread through the columns of some dozen large newspapers, should, we think, induce a ready compliance with the requirements of law. The certainty of notice thereby attained is, we think, equivalent to the very small expense incurred. The public are entitled to the full benefit to be derived from its general use as the medium for all legal advertisements in Philadelphia.

Supreme Court.

Opinion by Woodward, J.

EDWARD McCANN v. THOMAS FARLEY.

ERROR TO THE DISTRICT COURT OF PHILADA.

February 25, 1856.

A judgment entered on bond and warrant of attorney is not within the letter, nor the spirit of the Statute 8 & 9 Wm. III., c. 11, s. 8. But the process of execution on such judgments is always under the equitable control of the Court issuing it.

Upon a bond for the payment of a stated sum (given for an indemnity), execution may issue without scire facias, suggestion or other proceeding to ascertain damages.

The Court will then enquire into the fairness and justice of the proceeding.

That a judgment entered on bond with warrant of attorney, is not within the letter of the Stat. 8 & 9 Wm. III., ch. 11, s. 8, is shown by the terms of the statute, which are all predicated of "actions which shall be commenced or prosecuted upon any bond or bonds," &c. The provision that if judgment shall be given for the plaintiff on demurrer, or by confession, or "nil dicit," is to be referred to the foregoing words, and means a judgment in an action commenced.

Nor is a judgment on warrant of attorney within the reason or spirit of the statute. At common law the judgment for the plaintiff in debt or bond was in all cases that he should recover the penalty, and where the bond was conditioned, not for the payment of money, but for the doing of some collateral act, the plaintiff not only had judgment to recover the penalty of the bond, together with costs, but was also entitled to take out execution for the whole without any regard to the damage he had actually sustained, and the defendant was forced into expensive suits in equity for relief. 1 Saunders, 57, Note, J., and Collins v. Collins, 2 Barr, 824. It was to remedy this mischief that the statute was invented, and we have not only appropriated its provisions by judicial decision to the class of cases for which it was designed, but have substantially re-enacted it in our Act 14 of June, 1836, Brightly's Purdon, 93.

But the process issued on judgments entered upon confession, was always under the equitable control of the Court issuing it, and therefore this class of defendants was under no necessity to go into another forum to seek relief in equity. Cox v. Rodbard, 3 Taunton, 75; Austerburg v. Morgan, 2 Taunton, 195; Kinnesley v. Mussen, 5 Taunton, 264, 2 Archb. Pract., 26.

Of course the statute was not meant for them. This rule of decision is peculiarly applicable to our Courts whose process in the absence of a Court of Chancery, has always been controlled so that no injustice should be done, and accordingly it has been held in many cases, that judgments by warrant of attorney are not within either our own or the English statute. Longstreth v. Gray, 1 W. 63; Skidmore v. Bradford, 4 Barr, 296; Reynolds v. Lowrey, 6 Barr, 468; Bank of Chester v. Ralston, 7 Barr, 484; Harger v. Com'rs, 2 Jones, 253; Chambers v. Harger, 6 H. 16.

A rule sanctioned by so sound reasons and so many authorities, ought to be considered as settled, and not a fair subject for further debate. It is decisive against the plaintiff in error. He gave to Farley a bond in the penal sum of $400, conditioned for the payment of $400, and to indemnify him as surety for one William Costello, in a bond to the sheriff, with authority to enter judgment thereon. Judgment was entered, and a fi. fa. issued for $200, which the Court refused on motion to set aside. The error assigned is that the Court erred in refusing to set aside the fi. fa., not because it had issued for too much money, nor because the defendant had submitted such a case to the Court as in equity, and good conscience entitled him to relief from execution for any amount whatever, but because the bond was a mere indemnity with collateral conditions, and it had never been judicially ascertained whether there was any breach, and because the fi. fa. was sued out without leave, suggestion, affidavit, or sci. fa., to ascertain damages.

The argument rests wholly on the Statute of 8 & 9 Will. III., which I have shown has no application to such a judgment.

Granting that the proper construction of the bond would make it a mere indemnity, and not an instrument for the payment of money, the obligee was entitled to all the indemnity which such an instrument could legally afford him. The entry of a judgment gave him a lien on the obligor's real estate, but this may not have been adequate. There may have been no realty, or it may have been encumbered to its full value. The efficiency of the indemnity may have depended wholly on the right to take out execution and to acquire thereby a lien on the personalty. He had no right to take execution for more than was necessary to his indemnity, and the record shows that he ordered it for but one-half the penalty, and that the Court, with all the circumstances before them, which the defendant could allege, considered it equitable and just. To put the plaintiff to his scire facias, would be not only to encourage unnecessary litigation, but to sacrifice the indemnity which the parties intended should be adequate. A surety with such means of indemnity in his hands, has a right to use them as this plaintiff did for his protection, and then the lien of the process is preserved whilst the Court is engaged at the instance of the defendant, in inquiring into its fairness and justice. The power of the Court over its process is ample and undoubted, so that a defendant in circumstances like this plaintiff in error, is as secure from oppression as he ought to be, and is only prevented from turning the party who has obliged him round to litigation, which can almost always be rendered fruitless by making away with the means of performing that which was promised.

The proceedings are affirmed.

Use of a Steam-boiler—Application for an Injunction.

The case in which the following decision was rendered has excited some interest in the Court of Common Pleas, although not made public before. The argument was before Judges Thompson and Allison. The opinion of the Court was delivered by Judge Thompson as follows:

Carpenter vs. Cummings—Motion for Special Injunction—This application is based upon two grounds: 1st. That the respondent is about to violate an agreement entered into with the complainants or some of them.

2. That the use which the respondent is about to make of the steam boiler, would be such a nuisance to the complainants as calls for the intervention of the Court to prevent injury to them.

As to the first ground relied upon by the complainants: They charge that the respondent several years ago, when about to put into use the boiler in question, agreed, at the solicitation of the complainants, to abstain from using said boiler, and to endeavor to obtain steam for the use of his engines from the Ledger office, to be conducted by means of a pipe to his engines. That he received from complainants a sum of money as a consideration for said agreement and in payment of a part of the expense of so introducing the steam, and that by such agreement the respondent is justly bound not to use his own boiler, but to continue the use of the steam, as he now has it. To this charge the respondent by affidavit replies that the arrangement alluded to by the complainants was but an experiment, made by him at considerable expense, for the purpose of complying with the request of the complainants, not designed to continue any definite time, and that he is not now able to obtain sufficient steam from the Ledger office to supply his establishment. That the sum paid to him was not upon any contract, either to obtain the steam or to continue the use of it, but as a contribution to an expense created by the effort to comply with the wishes of the complainants. He further affirms that he never has recognized any such contract, and expressly denies that he at any time agreed to limit himself to the use of the steam as now employed, or to refrain from the employment of his own machinery when his business required it. The respondent thus fully meets and denies the charges upon which this branch of the complainant's case rests and thus comes within the well settled rule that if the facts upon which the equity of the case arises are fully and completely denied upon the respondent's affidavits, a special injunction will not be granted.

The charge of sustaining a nuisance, which forms the second ground of complaint, requires clear and precise proof to authorize an interference by the Court. The fact of the nuisance must be established, not by the apprehensions of the complainants, but by the proof of actually existing danger.

The fears of mankind, however reasonable, are not sufficient to create a nuisance. 3 Atk. 751. 18 Ves. 219.

It is shown here by the most reliable affidavits, that the boiler in question is constructed of the best materials, and in the most secure manner; that it is fully competent to sustain a pressure of 150 pounds of steam to the square inch, with perfect safety, and that under the pressure of steam required for the purposes of the respondent's business, the boiler may be used with absolute safety, and that nothing but sheer carelessness would render it liable to explosion. And it is further stated that should an explosion occur, it could not endanger the complainants, as the boiler is so far below the surface of the ground, that even if driven by force towards the building occupied by them, it would go into the cellar instead of into the rooms occupied by them.

This case presents nothing more than the apprehension of the complainants, that by the improper use of the boiler they or their property may be endangered. It is true that an injunction may be applied to prevent the commission of acts from which danger may be apprehended, but such danger must be clearly shown to be a natural or inevitable consequence of the acts about to be done. But where the proposed action of the party is consistent with the safety of both the persons and property of others, and does not naturally or even probably threaten danger, it is not a case in which the Court can interfere by injunction. If we should establish any other rule we might be compelled to stop much of the business, now safely carried on in the midst of our populous city. Scarcely a branch of mechanical business is now conducted without the aid of steam. Within a few squares of the place in which we are now sitting scores of steam engines are in daily operation, without exciting apprehension or complaint. That such a use of steam can be made consistently with the safety of those in the vicinity, is apparent from the fact that, it is thus employed, not only without exciting the fears of those residing near, but with scarcely the occurrence of an accident arising from its abuse.

The respondent shows by his affidavits that the use intended to be made by him of the steam boiler on his premises, is entirely consistent with the safety of the complainants, and the whole testimony shows that the danger, if any, is so slight as to be inadequate to excite any just apprehension.

Under these circumstances, we do not consider the fact of a nuisance made out by the evidence, so as to justify an interference by injunction.

Upon both grounds the complainants have failed to establish a case which calls for the action of this Court. The injunction is therefore refused. Drayton and Paul, for plaintiffs; Benjamin H. Brewster, for defendant.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY OF PENNSYLVANIA.

By a resolution of the Society, adopted January 14th, 1856, the following report was ordered to be furnished to the various newspapers published in the State, with a statement of the actual condition of the Publication Fund, and the names of the Trustees of the Fund, and the officers of the Society:

REPORT,

The Committee to whom was referred, the communication of our fellow member, Charles Miner, of Wilkes Barre, in relation to the organization of auxiliary county societies, the members of which should pay an annual contribution to the Pennsylvania Historical Society permanently established at Philadelphia; such auxiliaries to receive in return copies of the publications of this Society—respectfully report:

That they have given to the communication the respectful and careful consideration due to the suggestions of a gentleman so well known to us as Mr. Miner, as an able, zealous and successful investigator of Pennsylvania history.

That they concur with him in believing that it is the duty of our intelligent and prosperous fellow citizens throughout the state, to give hearty and active aid to such measures as shall be necessary to transmit to posterity a knowledge of the details of our history. The extent of the territory of our commonwealth, its numerous and increasing population, the variety and magnitude of its resources, and its relations to the Republic, must give peculiar and growing importance to its career. The principles upon which its institutions were founded, and which are now for the most part common to the other States of our political union, are exhibited in our own annals with peculiar advantage of illustration. In every department of the public service Pennsylvanians have contributed largely to the materials of our general history; and surely none of us could contemplate without pain the prospect of our annals becoming obscure through the negligence of those upon whom rests the sacred obligation to transmit a clear record of them to future times.

The arrangements by which we can secure a steady collection, digest and publication of the materials awaiting our effort, must of course be adopted after careful consideration of the special difficulties of the case, the nature and situation of those materials, the degree of our necessary dependence upon voluntary and gratuitous services, and the instruction derived from experience in other communities, as well as in our own. To be efficient, our machinery of organization should be as simple and permanent as possible, so as to be to the smallest practicable extent dependent upon the fluctuations of local interest, or of periodical pecuniary support. The funds upon which we are to rely should be procured with the least practicable deduction for expenses of collection and administration, and their application should be so directed as to concentrate the influence of the motives which are to stimulate the collector of historical material and the writer. It is with such views that the Historical Society of Pennsylvania was made an association for the State rather than for the city in which, on account of its origin and the special advantages there available for literary labors, the meeting of the members have been held. Its privileges have always been open to all Pennsylvanians, without respect to residence, and they are of a character to be eminently useful to all who choose to enjoy them according to the original design. The contributions to its literary resources have come from every quarter of the State, and it now enrolls in its lists of members many of our most eminent and useful citizens. In accordance with this patriotic liberality of its plan, the Society, regarding it as a duty to place within reach of every reader at the earliest opportunity the fruits of its accumulations, has laid the foundation of a Trust Fund, the employment of which, as limited by the terms of the trust, promises to give the earliest and largest effect to the legitimate purposes of the society. This fund is composed of subscriptions of twenty dollars each, for which each subscriber is entitled, during his or her life, to receive a copy of every publication of the Society. The principal is invested as received, and the yearly revenue therefrom is appropriated to the objects of the Trust. Any person may thus acquire a permanent interest in the Society, and a right to participate in the best fruits of its labors. The advantages of such a connection with it has been promptly recognized; and already numerous subscriptions have been received, not only from our own interior counties, but from other States, of which ten have contributed to the Fund. This general manifestation of interest appears reasonable enough when we consider how closely the events which belong to our local annals are often related to the greater evolutions of American history; and how many occasions must arise for publishing narratives in which the citizens of other Commonwealths are concerned. This reflection has induced the Society to relieve the Trust from restrictions which might otherwise have appeared proper in respect to the locality of its subjects. The selection of the materials to be printed has been guarded by making indispensable the consent of both the Trustees and the Society.

With such a plan, and with a fund which now amounts to nine thousand dollars, and the increase of which is rapid, your Committee cannot doubt the success of the Society; and they share the gratification of their fellow members upon the welcome given by the public to the first work thus sent to the press—the History of Braddock's Expedition, by Winthrop Sargent. They have learned with pleasure, from officers of the Society, that numerous manuscripts of local historical character, some of them of early date, have been received from different sections of the State; and that other valuable materials for the pens of future authors are promised to us.

It cannot be doubted that the incentives thus offered will be much more efficacious than any which can spring from the routine of ordinary correspondence between the Society and county auxiliaries; and certainly the expenses and difficulty of maintenance will be much less. If, stimulated by these and other views, our fellow citizens in any of the counties shall become sufficiently interested in the general work to form an association for its better promotion, the way will be always open; and the inducements will have become stronger with each augmentation of the resources of the Publication Fund.

Upon the whole, therefore, your committee are of opinion that it is most expedient for the Society to take early steps to inform our citizens generally of the plan and prospects of the Fund, and of its convenience and importance as an instrument for the production of a valuable historical literature in our midst.

WILLIAM BIGLER, of Clearfield.
GEORGE CHAMBERS, of Chambersburg.
SAMUEL BRECK, of Philadelphia.

The Publication Fund is composed of subscriptions of twenty dollars each, the payment of which by any person entitles him or her for life to a copy of all the publications of the Society. This Fund is of recent establishment, yet its increase has been rapid and steady; and it already amounts to nine thousand dollars. Residents in all quarters of the State, and even in other States have become subscribers to it. The selection of the works to be published is determined by the concurrence of both the Society and the Trustees; either having a negative upon the acts of the other in his respect. The first book issued is the History of Braddock's Expedition, by Winthrop Sargent; a handsome octavo volume of 420 pages, with valuable maps and engravings. This interesting work has been very favorably received by the public. Nearly five hundred copies have been sold in addition to the distribution to the subscribers to the Fund. Under a resolution adopted for this purpose, persons who shall become subscribers to the Fund before the first day of May next, will be regarded as entitled to a copy of this History. Letters containing subscriptions to the Fund are to be addressed to the HISTORICAL SOCIETY OF PENNSYLVANIA, PHILADELPHIA. Subscribers should give early notice of any delay in the receipt of their books.

The Society being designed for the whole State, and its memberships being open to our fellow citizens of every county, every available opportunity is embraced by us to invite their cooperation in the collection and preservation of materials for the history of our Commonwealth, and for securing a just tribute from posterity to the memory of citizens who have been in any way distinguished by local or general services. It is hoped that historical notices of towns and counties, memoranda of remarkable facts, biographical and genealogical notices, and letters, diaries and other manuscripts, will continue to be sent to the Society. It is suggested that, in all cases of contribution of such materials the contributor should furnish therewith, as far as practicable, a statement of such facts as may be requisite to establish the genuineness and authority of the documents, as the name of the donor, and information respecting the archives are recorded and filed by the Society.

The Bank of Cash Credits.

Application will be made to the Legislature of Pennsylvania, for the Charter of a Bank Issue with general Banking privileges, with a capital of ONE MILLION OF DOLLARS. Said Bank to be located in the City of Philadelphia, and to be conducted upon the system of cash credits only, as is herewith indicated.

A cash credit is a credit given to an individual by a Banking Company, for a limited sum, seldom under $500, or $1000, upon his own security, and that of two or three individuals, approved by the Bank, who become sureties for its payment. The individual who has obtained such a credit, is enabled, to draw the whole sum, or any part of it, when he pleases; replacing it, or portions of it, according as he finds it convenient; interest being charged upon such part only as he draws out.

"If a man borrows $1000, from a private hand, and even then it is not always to be found when required, he pays interest for it, whether he be using it or not. His bank credit costs him nothing, except during the moment it is of service to him, and this circumstance is of equal advantage as if he had borrowed money at a much lower rate of interest."

Cash credits are not, however, intended to be a dead load; the main objects of the Banks in granting them is to get their notes circulated, and they do not grant them except to persons in business, or to those who are frequently drawing out and paying in money.

Any person who applies to a Bank for a cash credit, is called upon to produce sureties, and, after a full inquiry into the character of the applicant, the nature of his business, and the sufficiency of his securities, he is allowed to open a credit, and to draw upon the Bank for the whole of its amount, or for such part as his daily transactions may require. To the credit of the account, he pays in such sums as he may not have occasion to use, and interest is charged or credited upon the balance, as the case may be. From the facility which these cash credits give to all the small transactions of the country, and from the opportunities which they afford to persons who begin business with little or no capital but their character, to employ profitably the minutest products of their industry, it cannot be doubted that the most important advantages are derived in the whole community.

A MERITORIOUS CARD.

Hail! honored age of grand progression,
While each one clings to his profession,
And science moves with onward motion,
To suit each wayward thought and notion,
Bringing to light some new invention,
More strange than modern wit can mention,
Or Genius paint with true endeavor,
Though making graphic strides forever,
While Reason urges proud Ambition,
To strive for wondrous Competition;
Yet, in this age of glorious Art,
We can the meed of praise impart,
When meritorious efforts claim
A modest puff to gild the name:
And thus we call, with honest pride,
Attention to the Painter's side,—
A man who bravely knows his calling,
Whose works are worthy of extolling,
A model Artist of the day,
And most obliging in his way,
GEORGE H. BANCROFT,—mark the name,
In CHESTNUT STREET you'll find the same,
Call at Five Hundred and Thirty-One,
You'll get the best of painting done,
In Modern or in Classic Order,
From templed shrine to parlor border,
In magic tints of every hue,
To Signs embossed in gold and blue,
Or Figure Head, or Church, or Steeple,
He is resolved to please the people,
And whether foe, or friend or neighbor,
Will charge but moderate for his labor.
We thus invite each one and all,
To give this worthy man a call.
Who will, we venture to engage,
Feel grateful for your patronage.*

* We would particularly invite public attention to our friend Mr. BANCROFT, who is a young, enterprising beginner, and who has gone to vast expense in fitting up his establishment, and is now ready to receive orders for Painting, in all its various branches, at 531 and 533 Chestnut street, 5 doors east of Seventeenth st.

The following valuable opinions of the work have been received by the Publishers.

From Judge Catron of the U. S. Supreme Court.

"Hardly a stronger guaranty could be afforded to the American Bar that the work has merit, than the fact that Mr. Wharton was author of the legal portion of the book."

JOHN CATRON.

From Professor Parsons of the Cambridge Law School.

"I have not had time to examine it critically, but have read enough to convince me that it is an instructive and valuable work. Some of its topics, which are quite new in a book on this subject, are shown to be among the most important."

THEOPHILUS PARSONS.

From Judge McLean of the U. S. Supreme Court.

"I have not had time to look minutely through the volume, but from the known ability of the authors, and their experience, I am sure the book must be very interesting and useful, not only to the profession of the law, but also to general readers. A modern treatise of this kind, embodying the experience of jurists and medical men, with decisions of courts, was much wanted; and I am satisfied that abler pens than those employed, could not have been engaged in its production."

JOHN MCLEAN.

REPORTS OF THE COMMON LAW COURTS OF ENGLAND.

Containing the cases decided in the Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Nisi Prius Courts, from 1813 to 1855, and in the Court of Exchequer and Exchequer Chamber, from 1824 to 1855, are found in

The Regular and Authoritative Series of the English Common Law and English Exchequer Reports,

Which present the following claims to the support of the profession:

1. They are the only series issued as the authoritative and acknowledged medium by which the decisions of the Law Courts of England are made public.

2. They contain Later Reports than the Boston series, are more fully and more ably reported, and so arranged by preservation of the original paging, that reference by reporters, or by elementary writers, can be traced as readily as in the English editions.

Vol. 2, Ellis & Blackburne's (75 E. C. L. R.,) Reports (Q. B.) to January, 1854, was published by us in June, 1854. At that time the last Queen's Bench case printed in the Boston Law and Equity Reports, was of June 25, 1853. Our volume contained cases decided five months later.

The Queen's Bench cases to November 25, 1853, were published in the Boston series in August, 1854, two months after we had distributed the same cases.

Vol. 3, Ellis & Blackburne, (77 E. C. L. R.,) with cases to the end of Trinity Term, 1854, was published when the latest case of Queen's Bench decisions in the Boston series, was of February 8, 1854, more than four months behind the regular reporters.

Exchequer Reports, vol. 9, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) distributed by us January 11, 1855, contains cases to May 10, 1854. The last Exchequer case then in the Boston series was decided February 9, 1854, four months behind the regular Reporter, issued in Philadelphia.

3. They contain more cases decided by the courts represented, than any other series issued in this country.

Vol. 77 English Common Law, (3 E. & B.,) reports eighty-six cases decided in the Queen's Bench since January 11, 1854, while but fifty-eight Queen's Bench cases, decided since January 1, 1854, are found scattered among Vols. 22, 24 and 25 of the Boston Law and Equity.

Vol. 78 E. C. L. K. (5 J. Scott,) reports sixty-five cases decided since Nov. 13, 1853, in the Common Pleas, while the L. & E. has but fifty-seven cases in that Court since the same period.

Vol. 9 Exchequer Reports, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) reports one hundred and ten cases in the Courts of Exchequer, decided since June 24, 1853, while since the same date, the L. & E. report but 107 cases, scattered through vols. 20, 22, 24 and 25.

4. They are almost exclusively cited in argument of counsel, and referred to by Elementary Writers for Law Authorities. See Smith's Leading Cases, Smith's Contracts, Smith's Landlord and Tenant, by Maude; Byles on Bills and Promissory Notes, Broom's Legal Maxims, Broom's Commentaries on the Laws of England, or almost any recent Law Book issued in England.

5. The Philadelphia Reports are edited by Judge Sharwood and by Judge Hare, whose labors as editors and authors have made them so well and so favorably known to the profession.

6. The Boston Law and Equity is made up in this country from the Law Journal, Jurist, Times and other Law periodicals, of a weekly, monthly, or quarterly character, and being unknown in England, is never cited in Court, or referred to by Law writers. The periodicals from which it is extracted, are occasionally cited under their own particular names, but they do not possess that permanent value, even in England, which is all-important in a series of Reports.

7. A carefully prepared and accurate Annual Digest of all the cases decided by the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Exchequer, will be distributed, early in each year, to subscribers to either series, free of charge. That for 1854 is ready, and will be mailed to subscribers who have not received a copy.

English Law and Equity Reports.

ENGLISH REPORTS IN LAW AND EQUITY. A Complete Collection of the Cases decided by the House of Lords, the Privy Council, the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas and Exchequer, the Lord Chancellor, the High Court of Appeal in Chancery, the Court of Criminal Appeal, and the Admiralty and Ecclesiastical Courts. Reprinted within a few weeks after the decisions are rendered.

This series has the merit of being complete, reliable, prompt, convenient, and cheap. It is now universally cited in the courts, and referred to in the recent law books as standard authority.

All the cases reported in England, are here reprinted from the most reliable sources, as soon as they reach this country.

These Reports are now regularly digested in our Annual United States Digest, which thus embraces an annual digest of the whole English and American Law.

We have now in Preparation, and shall soon Publish,

A separate Digest of these Reports, embracing the first thirty-one volumes of the series, prepared with express reference to the convenience of the American profession, and exhibiting a complete synopsis of all the English Decisions reported in those volumes during the last five years; also a Table of Cases referring to all the contemporaneous English Reports. This will be the first Digest of English Decisions prepared expressly for the American Lawyer, and it is intended to give it the same advantages over the English Digests hitherto reprinted in this country, which the American text books have generally been found to possess over the English.

The Law and Equity Reports will be continued on the same plan as heretofore; the number of volumes being reduced to four per year; and Digests will be published from time to time as the convenience of the profession demands.

Vols. 1 to 31, now ready for delivery, at $2 00 per volume.

LAW SCHOOL OF THE UNIVERSITY AT CAMBRIDGE, MASS.—The Instructors in this School are Hon. JOSE PARKER, LL. D., Royal Professor. Hon. THOMAS PARSONS, LL. D., Dane Professor. Hon. EMERY WASHBURN, LL. D., University Lecturer.

The course of instruction embraces the various branches of the Common Law, and of Equity, Admiralty, Commercial, International and Constitutional Law, and the Jurisprudence of the United States. The Law Library consists of about 14,000 volumes, and as new works appear they are added, and every effort is made to render it complete.

Instruction is given by oral lectures and expositions, (and by recitations and examinations, in connection with them,) of which there are ten every week. Two moot courts are also held in each week, at each of which a cause, previously given out, is argued by four students, and an opinion delivered by the presiding instructor. Rooms and other facilities are also provided for the Club Courts; and an Assembly is held weekly for practice in debate, and acquiring a knowledge of Parliamentary law and proceedings.

Students may enter the School in any stage of their professional studies or mercantile pursuits, and at the commencement of either term, or in the middle, or other part of a term. They are at liberty to elect what studies they will pursue, according to their view of their own wants and attainments.

The Academic year, which commences on Thursday, six weeks after the third Wednesday in July, is divided into two terms, of twenty weeks each, with a vacation of six weeks at the end of each term.

During the winter vacation, the Library is opened, warmed and lighted, for the use of the members of the School.

Applications for admission, or for Catalogues, or any further information, may be made to either of the Professors at Cambridge.

THE Subscriber takes this method of informing his numerous friends, and the public in general, that he is now prepared to execute in a superior manner, every variety of HOUSE and SIGN PAINTING, Graining, Bronzing, Gilding on Glass and Stained Glass, Calomining Ceilings, Walls, &c., &c. China and Glass Painting executed in a superior manner, and warranted not to crack. Ceilings cleaned and whitened, and made equal to new, at a cost little over that of whitewash. The subscriber would state here that it frequently occurs that persons attempt to use their article who have no knowledge of it whatever, either in the mixing or putting it on, and the consequence is, the job is spoiled, and the article condemned without a proper trial.—So also with CHINA GLOSS; to make a good job it requires a practical knowledge of the use of the brush, as also the making of the Gloss. In regard to the ZINC WHITE, the subscriber would most respectfully recommend it as an article far superior to any other paint now in use, for whiteness and durability of color. The Subscriber would respectfully solicit a portion of the patronage of those getting Painting done. Feeling grateful for the many favors already bestowed by his friends, he still hopes to share their patronage by unremitting attention to their calls. Those who have large contracts to give out, need have no hesitancy in calling, as he is prepared to give every satisfaction in regard to work, both in reference and security, for the faithful performance of all agreements. ## THE APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Bill being before Committee of the whole, Sect. 14 was agreed to as reported.

SECT. 14. For the payment of the expenses of the judiciary, to wit: For the payment of the salaries and per diem allowance of the judges of the Supreme Court, the sum of twenty thousand dollars.

On motion of Hon. H. D. Foster, the 15th, 16th and 17th sections were amended and agreed to, as follows:—

SECT. 15. For the payment of the salaries of the judges of the district court and president and associate law judges of the court of common pleas of the city and county of Philadelphia, the sum of eighteen thousand dollars.

SECT. 16. For the payment of the salaries of the judges of the district court and president judge of the court of common pleas of Allegheny county, the sum of eight thousand two hundred dollars.

SECT. 17. For the payment of salaries and mileage of the president judges of the several courts of common pleas in this Commonwealth, except in the city of Philadelphia and county of Allegheny, the sum of fifty-two thousand seven hundred dollars.

The 18th section reported as follows was agreed to.

SECT. 18. For the payment of the salaries and mileage of the associate judges of the several courts in this Commonwealth, the sum of sixteen thousand five hundred dollars.

The 19th section was amended so as to read as follows:—

SECT. 19. And be it further enacted. That from and after the first day of January, eighteen hundred and fifty-six, the annual salary of the judges of the Supreme Court shall be as follows: The chief justice, three thousand two hundred dollars. The salary of the associate judges, three thousand dollars each. The salary of the judges of the district court of the county of Philadelphia, three thousand dollars each. The salary of the judges of the district court of the county of Allegheny, two thousand eight hundred dollars each. The salary of the president and associate law judges of the several courts of common pleas of this Commonwealth, two thousand dollars, each except, in the city of Philadelphia and the county of Allegheny, in Philadelphia, $3000 each, and in Allegheny $2600.

The following from the Evening Bulletin meets our views:

"We are glad to find the Legislature have thus far recognized the necessity of placing the Judiciary of Pennsylvania upon a footing in this respect more suitable to their political position and more nearly commensurate to the value of their services.

It is an entire mistake to consider this like the case of a mere executive office which any citizen may fill, as a question of official salary alone. The qualifications indispensable to the performance of the duties of the position have a certain value at the bar, and it is not reasonable to expect the Commonwealth can secure their due and faithful execution at a price much if at all below this value. We can see no good reason why the highest grade of legal ability is not equally necessary in the Common Pleas as the Supreme Court. The greater number of cases litigated from their very nature never reach the higher court, while the necessary expense prevents the renewal of many others. The ordinary and daily business of the mass of the citizens are there finally adjudicated. The humblest suitor in the Court of Common Pleas is in our opinion entitled to a tribunal of equal competency and ability to decide his cause as that which is open to the wealthiest citizen or the greatest corporation in the land. Justice should be dispensed to all alike. The poor man whose little all may be involved in his appeal from the decision of some Justice Shallow; the widow and the orphan, the peculiar objects of the care of our Orphans' Court, justly demand at the hands of government a forum not only impregnable in its integrity, but of such ability and extent of learning, as shall enable it to secure and protect their rights against any array of talent or chicane which the mighty power of wealth may bring to bear against them.

As long ago as 1833, as will be seen by reference to the debates of the Convention, the framers of our present Constitution were fully impressed with the necessity of providing sufficient salaries, and from the arguments there used there can be no doubt the word "adequate" in the last clause of the 2d section of the 5th article, was intended not only to authorize, but to impose the duty upon the Legislature of providing a sufficient compensation to secure the services of the most able jurists for the bench. The salaries, then and for fifty years before the same as at present, were admitted by some of the most zealous advocates of the change of tenure to offer, even with a life tenure, an insufficient inducement to the leading men at the Bar. Some of the most zealous reformers proposed as the minimum to be fixed in the Constitution, $4000 to the Supreme Court and $2000 to the several President Judges. In the session of 1839, in which many members of the Reform Convention held seats, these views were carried out and the salaries were increased, and remained so until the panic of 1843.

Many of the Judges, however, continued to receive this increased rate until quite recently, in one case as late as 1851, which may in some measure account for the fact that the present inadequacy was not sooner brought to the notice of the Legislature.

While the true criterion of value of the services of our Judiciary cannot be determined by comparison with that of like services in other places, or by reference to the amount of labor performed, yet in respect to the city Judges, the universal allowance of a salary in proportion to the expense of city life in all the other cities of the Union as well as the onerous duties imposed upon them, are entitled to due consideration. The Judges in the city of New York receive $6,000. The true measure would be the value of the highest rate of legal ability at the Bar in the locality where the services are required on the bench. This alone will secure the requisite competency.

The only objection which has been seriously urged against an increase of pay heretofore rested upon the crippled state of the finances of the Commonwealth. This excuse no longer exists to prevent compliance with the plain requirements of the Constitution, and we sincerely trust that the members of the present Legislature will, with a due regard to their obligation to sustain that instrument, and thus promote the true interests of their constituents and relieve the Commonwealth from the disgrace of accepting services of so great importance at a price so far below their actual professional value.

The advance provided for in the Bill, although not what we could have desired, and not fully up to our idea of adequacy, affords the Bar reason for congratulation, and we hope and have reason to expect, from the moderate increase proposed, it will receive the sanction of the Senate and Executive.

THE FORUM,

OR FORTY YEARS PRACTICE AT THE BAR.

The following extract from this forthcoming work of Mr. Brown, will serve to show the object and design of the author. His competency for the performance of what he promises none can doubt, and the rich, and as yet untouched mine from which his materials are furnished, lead us to expect a work of more than usual interest of the literary public as well as the profession.

This work is designed chiefly to exhibit the public lives of the members of the Legal profession—indeed a Lawyer in full practice can scarcely be said to have any private life. The community seems to form his family, and in the cares and distractions and employments of business, he has no leisure but that which is constrained. The members of the Bar are, it is true, admirably qualified for society—they are full of information and anecdote; the whole volume of human nature seems to be open to them—the delights of literature and the charms of science, are at their command; but still it is obvious, that being so perpetually engaged in their arduous professional pursuits, it is difficult for them to throw off their fetters, and display those intellectual treasures which they eminently possess. The intervals of leisure are brief, and brief as they are, always clouded by anticipation of renewed toil, or "sickly'd o'er by the pale cast of thought," or exhaustion of past labors: So that the sprightliness and buoyancy of the mind are essentially diminished, if not impaired. Yet notwithstanding this, it not unfrequently happens that by an effort, like Sampson, they break the withs which bind them, and resume, for a time, all their native activity, freedom and strength. Still, however, occasionally reminding us of Scott's description of King James, in "Marmion":

"That midst his mirth 'twas often strange,
How suddenly his cheer would change,
His look o'ercast and lower!
If on a sudden turn he felt,
The pressure of his iron belt,
That bound his breast in penance pain,
In memory of his father slain!"

Our purpose however, is not directed to domestic or social, but to professional life,—and even there, while it is the duty of the historian to depict things as they are, it is equally his duty to avoid any unnecessary encroachment upon the feelings of others. Great caution is required, while noticing the departed, to avoid giving pain to survivors. This, however, is less to be apprehended upon this subject, as, though the Bar and the Bench had some peculiarities, they had very few vices. There were no Tresillians, or Kolynges, or Pophams among them.

But if the delicacy be so great in regard to those who are no longer with us, what must it be, in occasionally noticing our associates—those whom we daily meet in the arena of professional life. Upon that subject all that can be said is, that no animosity or envy shall be infused into these sketches—but upon the contrary, our brethren shall be spoken of, as they would be spoken to, in a spirit of fraternal kindness and conciliation, corresponding with the harmony and friendship by which the intercourse of the Profession has always been characterized. There are no asperities, no jealousies, no rivalries at the Bar; each man is apparently satisfied in his own sphere, and if he does not shine in direct radiance, he at least enjoys collateral light. Towards the Judges—the fathers of the Bar—there is not only habitual respect, but a sort of filial reverence entertained, and if at any time it should be lost sight of, the cause will not be found in the wanton disobedience of the children, but in the severity or despotism of the parents.

Having presented a general view of my design—and its incidental difficulties—I may be permitted in conclusion to say, that my chief motive for engaging in this undertaking, is the desire to furnish some few memorials of the legal profession. If this work be not attempted now—it never will be. Every hour diminishes our recollections of by-gone days; but a few glimpses remain; and a few short years will obliterate every view and vestige of what, in the passing and changing pageants of life, has been so interesting to us all.

If this humble effort should accomplish no more than to invite superior minds to the prosecution of a plan so imperfectly commenced, although it is not all that I desire, it is perhaps more than I have reasonably the right to expect. But, as to succeed where success cannot possibly be doubtful, confers no honor on any man,—so to fail, honestly to fail, in a just enterprise where there is but little chance of success, reflects no disgrace; but to discharge our duties fearlessly and faithfully, in the various relations of life in which we may be engaged, is man's highest, and should be, man's proudest praise.

The reason why there are supposed to be so many new things in the world, notwithstanding the doctrine of Solomon, that "there is nothing new under the sun," is, that so much that is old is lost sight of or forgotten. When we are told that everything that existed in the beginning is, perhaps under new phases, in existence still, and that though the affinities of matter be destroyed, the elements remain, and no atom has been lost in the various mutations of the universe; what natural philosophy thus teaches, we implicitly believe. But when, anything in the form of a novelty presents itself in moral, social or intellectual life, are prone to think that the countless years that have passed, never furnished its precedent or parallel. Weak and vain man! Those very novelties existed in years "long since numbered with those beyond the flood,"—and were forgotten, renewed—renewed and again forgotten; and such will continue to be the course of events until time shall be no more.

In order, therefore, that men while living for the present and future, may be permanently instructed in the lessons and experience of those who have gone before them, and inherit the benefit of their example, it is certainly commendable, that the old in passing to their heirs or successors their well earned fame or fortune, should transmit to them also, that knowledge of the nature and character of men and things, without which fame and fortune can neither be appreciated nor secured.

As without the recollections of its youth, age would be debarred of its greatest pleasures and enjoyments—so without the precepts and examples of age, youth would be deprived of its chief knowledge and protection—of the salutary guidance which the hard earned experience of others may have supplied. The memorials therefore, of men who, after a life of labor and deserved honor, have in the fulness of time "like the sun, showing their greatest countenance in their lowest estate," sunk into the grave, are appropriate and instructive lessons to those who are about entering upon the busy and thronging scenes of a tumultuous and precarious world.

Every man forms for himself his own horizon, and he sees nothing but that which is above it—but if that which is seen or known by those of one age, were transferred to those of succeeding ages, the scope of man's mental vision would be incalculably enlarged, and thus by avoiding the errors and faults, or emulating the wisdom and virtues of the past; the present, instead of being an age of experiment, would be an age of comparative certainty and security.

The knowledge of life that forty years supply, even with the wisest and keenest observer, is comparatively nothing—still, when connected with antecedent and subsequent history, it may impart valuable lights and shadows to the picture which the hand of time impresses upon life's canvass. Nothing that relates to man, in his temporal or eternal conditions, should be indifferent to man. The experience of others furnishes our cheapest instruction, and to despise or disregard it, often condemns us to the heaviest penalties.

There are few subjects more gratifying than family traditions. Ancestry and heraldry derive all their interest from the noble emotions, impulses and actions with which, while we perpetuate ourselves, we inspire our descendants. But how much more instructive and beneficial must be the record of a large professional family, consisting of the choice and master spirits of the era in which they lived, when honestly handed down to their descendants. How emulous must the son be, not only of sharing, but rivaling or even improving the glory of his father. How careful should he be, if he cannot increase, not to diminish, his inherited fame, but to pass it unobscured and unimpaired as a rich legacy to his issue.

Nor is this consideration less important to those who have no forefathers' feet to stand upon. They have at least posterity to look to, and like Napoleon they may be the founders of an illustrious race. Or like Banquo, though no kings themselves, still their children may be kings. The golden round is before them—the power to grasp it is theirs, and if they fail, the curse of failure will be theirs. Nay not upon them only will it fall, but upon those whom they represent, or who may follow them. Remember, the Almighty never created a man whom he did not endow with the ability to sustain himself, and to discharge the obligations imposed upon him. And remember also, in the language of Richelieu, "That in the lexicon of youth, whom fate reserves for a bright manhood, there's no such word as FAIL!"

"All things are ready if the mind be so."

This as intimated in the prospectus, is the first work of the kind that has been presented to the public in this country. Indeed there has been no publication, so far as known to the author, in any country, that presents Forensic Life so minutely and prominently to the reader. Cicero, Quintillian, Pliny and other illustrious ancients, have furnished us with abundant instruction in regard to the moral, intellectual, literary and scientific qualifications of orators and advocates: Le Tellier, Pasquier, and D'Aguesseau, of the French Noblesse de la Robe—"who were not born to die"—have added largely to the stock of knowledge derived from the theories and practice of antiquity. The Lives of the Chief Justices and Lord Chancellors of England, by Lord Campbell, invite no special attention to the Members of the Bar—their habits, their learning, or their eloquence. Yet all the authors referred to have omitted those details of professional life and those personal delineations and sketches, which unite the present with the past, and tend more, perhaps, than any thing else, to bring us into companionship with the founders and sages of the law, and thereby enable us to associate and compare those who adorned the earlier systems of Jurisprudence, with their less venerated and distinguished successors.

It must not be understood, however, from these remarks, that it is my purpose to write the biography of those eminent men to whom attention will be invited. The design is merely to exhibit general, and, it is to be feared, imperfect outlines of their professional character and position.

The peculiarities of men, which are the distinctions between men, are entitled to be noticed; because, without them the portrait is as flat as the canvass, and would scarcely be recognized by any one, as a likeness or copy of the original. Those peculiarities are not presented for the imitation of others, but may be adopted, approved or rejected, as taste or judgment shall direct. Plutarch in his Lives, and Baker and Hollingshead in their English Chronicles, did not deem it unworthy of their respective tasks, after a general description of the scenes through which their heroes passed, to bestow some little attention upon their persons, their manners, their habits and comparative merits; and we therefore, may be pardoned for an occasional and humble imitation of the example. My business is more with men than things. The speeches of any one of those whom I shall describe, would form almost a professional library in themselves, and of course be inconsistent with the limits of this work, but some of the occasions upon which they were made—their character, and the effects produced by them—form interesting and important items in the formation and history of the Bar, which certainly ought not to be disregarded. For they supply the foundation upon which rests the entire structure of our present Forensic fame, and our future professional Hope.

MACAULEY'S HISTORY OF ENGLAND.

Messrs PHILLIPS, SAMPSON & Co., of Boston, have issued vols. 3 and 4 of their most convenient and cheap edition of this highly interesting and popular work, of which it is said 35,000 copies have been sold in England. It is for sale by SMITH & ENGLISH, No. 35 North Sixth Street.

E. C. & J. Biddle, Minor Street, Philadelphia.

This work supplies what has been long a desideratum to that large and daily increasing class who consider it an object to write and speak their own language correctly, and to be able fully to appreciate its capabilities. This book will be found extremely interesting and useful, and should be made a Class Book in all Academies where English is taught.

In this work the absurdities of our system of Orthography are exposed, and the advantages of the Phœnetic system set forth with the author's usual ability. It is to be regretted that the reform proposed by Dr. Comstock could not be carried out, it would certainly save time.

ANDREW H. HOLMES vs. THE COMMONWEALTH.

Error to Fayette Co. July 11, 1856.

Although the first count in the indictment charges that a burglary was committed by Jacob Clement and Samuel H. Fisher, it is apparent from the whole record that the indictment was against Andrew H. Holmes, as accessory before and after the fact, and for receiving stolen goods, knowing them to have been stolen. The pleader has set forth in apt technical terms the commission of the burglary, but it is merely as inducement to the charge against the prisoner as accessory, and not with the intention of indicting principal and accessory together. The bill is indorsed as against Holmes alone and so docketed. It is a common law principle that an accessory shall not be tried before the conviction or outlawry of the principal, but it does not follow that he may not be indicted before either the conviction or outlawry. On the contrary it is clear that principal and accessory may be indicted at the same time, and that the conviction of the principal may be given in evidence upon the trial of the accessory, without being averred in the indictment. The guilt of the principal must be averred and the evidence must establish that the guilt was legally ascertained before the trial of the indictment against the accessory.

We are satisfied from the paper book of the defendant in error, that the principals were convicted of burglary before this indictment was tried, and as we cannot examine the evidence we are bound to presume that legal proof was given to the jury of that conviction upon the trial of the accessory.

In Stoops v. The Com. 7 S. & R. 491. The record showed the principals and accessories were indicted together, and that but four of the seven principals had been tried. The trial and sentence of the accessories was held to be erroneous, because the record showed that they were convicted as accessories to the whole seven principals, when the guilt of but four of the principals had been established.

It will be seen that here instead of its appearing from the record that the principals had not been convicted, the necessary inference is just the contrary, and therefore the case of Stoops v. the Com., is an authority in favour of the legality of this proceeding rather than otherwise.

We will consider in the next place as to the jurisdiction of the Court of Quarter Sessions. The indictment was against the prisoner as accessory to the crime of burglary, and for receiving stolen goods. It is alleged by his counsel that the Quarter Sessions had no jurisdiction to try this accusation. The jurisdiction of our Criminal Courts is regulated by the act of 16 June, A. D. 1836. The 15th Section enumerates the crimes which are exclusively within the jurisdiction of the Oyer and Terminer and general Jail Delivery, and the 16th Section provides, "That the Quarter Sessions of the peace shall have jurisdiction and power within their respective counties. 1st. To enquire by the oaths and affirmations of good and lawful men of the county, of all crimes, misdemeanors and offences, whatever, against the laws of this commonwealth, which shall be triable in the respective county. 2nd. To inquire of, hear, determine and punish in due form of law all such crimes, misdemeanors and offences, whereof exclusive jurisdiction is not given as aforesaid to the Courts of Oyer and Terminer of such county. "The exclusive jurisdiction as aforesaid," means that given by the 15th Section, and as neither of the crimes charged in this indictment are there enumerated, it is plain that the Quarter Sessions had jurisdiction to try and sentence the prisoner.

Had this conviction been for murder the record would not have supported the verdict, for it does not affirmatively appear that the prisoner was present when the verdict was rendered. In felonies not capital it is allowed to presume that every thing was rightly done until the contrary appears. Prince v. the Com., 6th Harris 103. Here the record neither avers the presence of the prisoner when the verdict was rendered, nor does it shew that he was not present; as the felony was not capital, we may presume the proceedings were regular and lawful.

WADE v. HAYCOCK.
January 12, 1856. Error to C. P. Westmoreland County.

1. When one contracts to do all the Millwright work necessary in the construction of a Grist Mill, he is bound to do it in a workmanlike manner, so that it will answer the purpose for which it is intended.

2. If the Mill Wright after doing part of the work under the contract, refuses or neglects to complete it, he can recover nothing for part performance, if the work is all done and part of it defective, but can be cured by other machinery or better work, there may be a recovery for the contract price, (or in the absence of a contract what the work is worth,) deducting the actual damages sustained on account of the defective performance.

3. The measure of damages would be the expense of the new work, and the profits of the mill for such time as it was necessarily stopped from running whilst being altered.

4. Where part of the work complained of was constructed under directions given by the owner of the mill, the workman is not responsible for the defects so occasioned.

5. If the employee knowingly and purposely makes the work defective, it is such mala fides on his part that he can recover nothing for any work done under the contract.

Judgment affirmed.

SAMPLE v CRUMPTHEY.

January 12, 1856. Error to Armstrong C. P.

The plaintiff's declaration was in assumpsit and so was his evidence. The action was upon the express contract to furnish a good Threshing Machine, and the damages claimed were for non-performance of this agreement. The measure of damages would have been the difference between a good machine and the one delivered. As the contract price for a good one was sixty dollars, it is clear that the damages were under one hundred dollars, and as they arise upon the contract the neglect to set them off in the suit before the Justice is a bar to their recovery in this action.
Judgment affirmed.

JENNINGS v. McDOWELL.

January 12, 1856. Error to C. P. Venango Co.

The Court ruled 1st. That extracts from the General Draft and the Donation Book in the Land Office were legitimate evidence to shew title out of the Commonwealth.

2d. That after the lapse of 56 years, a sale of a Donation Tract of Land for non payment of taxes, will be sustained against an intruder, in the absence of all evidence shewing that the donee was living when the taxes were assessed, or that he had ever claimed the land or exercised acts of ownership over it.

3d. That in a contest between a purchaser at a Treasurer's sale and an intruder, evidence that portions of the tracts sold were occupied in sugar making in the Spring of the year that the taxes were assessed, will not invalidate the sale. The profits must be derived from cultivation, or there must be an actual residence to constitute seated land.
Judgment affirmed.

STRAWN v. HOOK.

Jan. 12, 1856. Error to Com. Pleas of Green Co.

Did the payment to the Prothonotary of the costs within six years from the commencement of the suit toll the bar of the statute? The court below ruled that it did this we think erroneous. That part payment of a debt within six years will take a case out of the statute is well settled. But the office fees formed no part of the debt in this case, which was the price of the judgment sold by Hook to Strawn; the sale of the judgment would not pass to the purchaser the right to receive the cost, nor would it make him liable to the plaintiff for the amount thereof, when the plaintiff had not paid them to the officers. Unpaid costs belonging to the officers of the court cannot be transferred to a stranger by a plaintiff.

In 3 Barr. 423, it was held that the plaintiff could not release the defendant's liability to the officers for their costs, by agreeing to pay them himself. All that Hook could have demanded from Strawn was the amount of the judgment and interest, as this was all that passed by the sale and as the payment of the costs was no part of what was due to Hook, leaving his entire claim unsatisfied. It was not an admission of the existence of the debt to him, nor a promise to pay it. It is proper to add there was no evidence of any special undertaking on the part of Strawn to pay the costs; if there had been, perhaps, Hook could have recovered them, as a trustee for the officers, and in that event payment to the Prothonotary on the foot of the agreement might keep the whole contract alive, but the case was put to the jury by the Common Pleas, solely on the basis of a sale of the judgment from Hook to Strawn.

Opinions of Judge Lowrie.

Jan. 11, 1856. Error to Fayette C. P.

Last year the plaintiff brought this case up on a writ of error. The judgment was affirmed, and the record remitted—after that the costs were taxed, and now we have a writ of error to the taxation.

This is claiming a right to two writs of error to the same judgment, or two suits for the same cause of action, and if this may be, why may we not have another? A case cannot be thus split up. A party must not sue even in error prematurely, if he wants his whole case reviewed. He ought to see that the costs are taxed before error brought, if he fears that the taxation may need correction here.
Judgment affirmed with costs.

Orphan's Court.

Opinion by Judge Thompson.

HENRY CRESSMAN'S ESTATE.

EXCEPTIONS TO AUDITOR'S REPORT.

In regard to the first exception, we think that the Auditor has given a sufficient reason for stating that Henry Cressman, jr., acted as co-executor with Mr. Stevenson, although, at his decease, his administrators filed a separate account of the monies received by him. The liability of Mr. Stevenson to protect the estate from loss, by ascertaining its real condition, and the correctness of the returns made by the agent of the estate, was not the less because he permitted his co-executor to officiate as receiver.

Upon the question of the surcharge of the executor with the amount of the due bills given to cover the defalcation of George, embraced in the second and third exceptions, the auditor has correctly decided. By the terms of the will of the testator, the executors had a specific duty to perform, viz., the payment of certain debts out of the revenue from the real estate. It was their clear duty to acquaint themselves with the amount of that revenue, in order that the trust reposed in them should be performed as early as practicable. The fact that George Cressman was named by the testator as the general agent to collect the rents and to pay the taxes and repairs, did not justify them in neglecting to ascertain that which was essential to the performance of their trust. The testator, moreover, endeavored to guard the estate against the malfeasance of the agent, by placing in the hands of the executors and requiring them to use, the authority to inspect his account at prescribed intervals. This, it is admitted, they neglected to do. Had they done as the directions of the will required, this loss could not have happened. Their negligence in this respect cannot be excused. It is unnecessary to add anything to the very full and satisfactory reasons given by the auditor upon this subject. While we concur with him in his decision, we also join in the expression of regret, that by reposing too great confidence in another, the executor should suffer loss, when in every other respect he appears to have acted with the most entire prudence and integrity.

The fourth exception is to the reduction of the executor's commissions. During the agency of George Cressman, it is true that the executor had but little trouble in the receipt of the monies paid over to him, and for the custody of money only, two and a half per cent is considered a sufficient remuneration. But in this case, the executor was required to make payments to the several heirs at frequent times, according to their demands. This was certainly attended with additional trouble, and inasmuch as the testator himself fixed the amount to be paid for the collection of the rents at five per cent, the executor should not, on that account, be required to perform his duties without an adequate remuneration; we think that four per cent. would be a fair allowance, and therefore increase the commission referred to, to that amount.

The remaining exceptions relate to the distribution of the balance in the hands of the executor.

The testator requires, that after the payment of his debts, (viz., the mortgages mentioned in his bill) his property shall be divided among his children, and that all charges found in a book marked A, against his children, as well as all sums received by them after his decease, shall, before the distribution of his estate, be settled up, so as to ascertain the amount each heir will be entitled, so that those who have received more than their just proportion shall pay to those who have received less, a sufficient sum to equalize the same. This provision seems to require an apportionment of the sum to be distributed among the heirs, after the adjustment of the fund already received by them. The money to be distributed was received from the rents, of the properties respectively devised to their trustees, and if more has been collected than is required to pay the debts, that surplus, as the rent of the property so devised, is expressly made liable for the amount required to equalize the shares in respect to the sums already received. The trustees are not required to receive this surplus and apply it in its payment. The real estate is devised to the respective trustees; not the balance in the hands of the executor; and even if they were entitled to receive it, they could only do so after the distribution, and the ascertainment of the respective proportions. This construction of the will requires that the amounts of the respective heirs should be adjusted before they are entitled to any share of the balance; and we think that the auditor was authorized to ascertain and determine the amounts to be charged against each heir, in order to enable him to make the proper distribution. As his doubt of the extent of his power prevented him from examining this branch of the case, we must set aside the distribution as made, and refer the matter again to him for adjustment upon the principle above stated.

The remaining exceptions are covered by the foregoing observations, and require no further remark.

TREATMENT OF WITNESSES, "ON THE STAND."

MR. EDITOR:—
May I ask a corner of your columns for an incident which I really think is worth preserving, and with which I was the more pleased, because of its being rare.

Plaintiff's Counsel was cross examining. Amiable and courteous at all times, as far as my experience of professional intercourse with him enables me to speak, he, nevertheless, put his questions with some harshness, not to say severity, so far as his tone and manner would seem to indicate to a by-stander. Perhaps he was unconscious of it. My knowledge of him certainly forbids me to suppose, that he would fall into intentional injustice. But the effect was the same.

Presently, the learned judge interposed. "Mr. ——" said he, in a calm, dignified tone "you cannot expect those who are impartial in this cause, to follow you in your cross examination, if you treat the witness as though he were condemned beforehand—hear him through—he may be quite as worthy of credit as any other witness," adding a mild but firmly conveyed suggestion to pursue a different and more becoming course. It should be added that the witness appeared to be a very respectable man, in no way deserving of harsh treatment, as it seemed to me.

The incident had its effect throughout the remainder of the cause. Instead of the exhibition of a bear garden, too often witnessed before courts and juries through the misguided zeal of opposing counsel, and too often most improperly unheeded, and therefore allowed, by him who ought instantly to suppress it, the cause was afterwards conducted with decorum, which should ever characterize the atmosphere of justice; the least violation of which in her sacred temple is profanation.

If judges would more frequently do their duty in this respect; if they would not be afraid to exercise power; always, of course, exercising it like gentlemen, and scrupulously careful not to abuse it; if they would do this, as not the least important part of their high functions, counsel would be less apt to forget other high and imperative obligations devolving equally upon them. If such a consummation were more frequently witnessed, justice, instead of being liable to the fluctuations of the tempest or the whirlpool, would fulfil her exalted province and disperse her inestimable blessings under a cloudless canopy, thus guiding her winning way to the hearts, no less than convincing, by her majestic appeals, the reason of the people.

The learned judge showed in this instance a right estimate of what was due to the Bench, and to the occasion, happily illustrated by the gentleman-like tone and manner in which he expressed himself. The natural result was seen. O si omnes! What a sublime profession would ours be!

A MEMBER OF THE BAR.
Philadelphia, Feb. 13, 1856.

The Bank of Cash Credits.

Application will be made to the Legislature of Pennsylvania, for the Charter of a Bank Issue with general Banking privileges, with a capital of ONE MILLION OF DOLLARS. Said Bank to be located in the City of Philadelphia, and to be conducted upon the system of cash credits only, as is herewith indicated.

A cash credit is a credit given to an individual by a Banking Company, for a limited sum, seldom under $500, or $1000, upon his own security, and that of two or three individuals, approved by the Bank, who become sureties for its payment. The individual who has obtained such a credit, is enabled, to draw the whole sum, or any part of it, when he pleases; replacing it, or portions of it, according as he finds it convenient; interest being charged upon such part only as he draws out.

"If a man borrows $1000, from a private hand, and even then it is not always to be found when required, he pays interest for it, whether he be using it or not. His bank credit costs him nothing, except during the moment it is of service to him, and this circumstance is of equal advantage as if he had borrowed money at a much lower rate of interest."

Cash credits are not, however, intended to be a dead load; the main objects of the Banks in granting them is to get their notes circulated, and they do not grant them except to persons in business, or to those who are frequently drawing out and paying in money.

Any person who applies to a Bank for a cash credit, is called upon to produce sureties, and, after a full inquiry into the character of the applicant, the nature of his business, and the sufficiency of his securities, he is allowed to open a credit, and to draw upon the Bank for the whole of its amount, or for such part as his daily transactions may require. To the credit of the account, he pays in such sums as he may not have occasion to use, and interest is charged or credited upon the balance, as the case may be. From the facility which these cash credits give to all the small transactions of the country, and from the opportunities which they afford to persons who begin business with little or no capital but their character, to employ profitably the minutest products of their industry, it cannot be doubted that the most important advantages are derived in the whole community.

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND.

OFFICE, NEXT DOOR TO THE POST OFFICE; No. 83 Dock Street, PHILADELPHIA, 1854.

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND, No. 83 DOCK Street, next door to THIRD Street, and adjoining the POST OFFICE, receives MONEY on deposit daily, from 9 in the morning until 3 in the afternoon; also Monday evenings, from 7 to 9 o'clock. Interest is allowed on deposits at the rate of FIVE PER CENT per annum. Deposits will be returned in whole, or in part, on demand, without notice.

The popularity of this Office with all classes of the community, both in town and country, and its consequent success, may be ascribed, in part, to the following substantial reasons:
1st. It offers a convenient, responsible, and profitable Depository to Executors, Administrators, Assignees, Collectors, Agents, and all public officers—to Attorneys, Trustees, Societies and Associations, whether incorporated or otherwise—to married or single ladies—to Students, Merchants, Clerks, and business men generally—to Mechanics, Farmers, Minors of either sex, and all who have funds, much or little, to deposit, where they may be had at any time, with Five Per Cent interest added.
2d. Depositors receive Books, with an abstract of the By-laws and regulations, in which is entered their deposits, which Books serve as vouchers. They may designate in case of sickness, death, or absence, who shall receive their deposits, without the intervention of Executors or Administrators. Any one or more persons may deposit in his, her, or their name, or for any other person or persons.
3d. A Report is made each year to the Legislature and Councils of the City.
4th. The Officers are sworn before they enter upon their duties, in addition to giving Bonds with sureties.
5th. The State Savings Fund is a real Savings Fund—not an Insurance and Trust Company. Money deposited with the State Savings Fund, is in no manner mixed up with the fearful risks of an Insurance Office.
6th. Deposits may be withdrawn by checks after the manner customary with Banks. Check Books will be furnished to depositors without charge.

A MERITORIOUS CARD.
Hail! honored age of grand progression,
While each one clings to his profession,
And science moves with onward motion,
To suit each wayward thought and notion,
Bringing to light some new invention,
More strange than modern wit can mention,
Or Genius paint with true endeavor,
Though making graphic strides forever,
While Reason urges proud Ambition,
To strive for wondrous Competition;
Yet, in this age of glorious Art,
We can the meed of praise impart,
When meritorious efforts claim
A modest puff to gild the name:
And thus we call, with honest pride,
Attention to the Painter's side,—
A man who bravely knows his calling,
Whose works are worthy of extolling,
A model Artist of the day,
And most obliging in his way,
GEORGE H. BANCROFT,—mark the name,
In CHESTNUT STREET you'll find the same,
Call at Five Hundred and Thirty-One,
You'll get the best of painting done,
In Modern or in Classic Order,
From templed shrine to parlor border,
In magic tints of every hue,
To Signs embossed in gold and blue,
Or Figure Head, or Church, or Steeple,
He is resolved to please the people,
And whether foe, or friend or neighbor,
Will charge but moderate for his labor.
We thus invite each one and all,
To give this worthy man a call.
Who will, we venture to engage,
Feel grateful for your patronage.*
* We would particularly invite public attention to our friend Mr. BANCROFT, who is a young, enterprising beginner, and who has gone to vast expense in fitting up his establishment, and is now ready to receive orders for Painting, in all its various branches, at 581 and 583 Chestnut street, 5 doors east of Seventeenth st.

The following valuable opinions of the work have been received by the Publishers.
From Judge Catron of the U. S. Supreme Court.
"Hardly a stronger guaranty could be afforded to the American Bar that the work has merit, than the fact that Mr. Wharton was author of the legal portion of the book."
JOHN CATRON.

From Professor Parsons of the Cambridge Law School.
"I have not had time to examine it critically, but have read enough to convince me that it is an instructive and valuable work. Some of its topics, which are quite new in a book on this subject, are shown to be among the most important."
THEOPHILUS PARSONS.
From Judge McLean of the U. S. Supreme Court.
"I have not had time to look minutely through the volume, but from the known ability of the authors, and their experience, I am sure the book must be very interesting and useful, not only to the profession of the law, but also to general readers. A modern treatise of this kind, embodying the experience of jurists and medical men, with decisions of courts, was much wanted; and I am satisfied that abler pens than those employed, could not have been engaged in its production."
JOHN MCLEAN.

The Fullest, the Latest, and the Best
REPORTS OF THE COMMON LAW COURTS OF ENGLAND.

Containing the cases decided in the Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Nisi Prius Courts, from 1813 to 1855, and in the Court of Exchequer and Exchequer Chamber, from 1824 to 1855, are found in
The Regular and Authoritative Series of the
English Common Law and English Exchequer Reports,
Which present the following claims to the support of the profession:
1. They are the only series issued as the authoritative and acknowledged medium by which the decisions of the Law Courts of England are made public.
2. They contain Later Reports than the Boston series, are more fully and more ably reported, and so arranged by preservation of the original pagings, that reference by reporters, or by elementary writers, can be traced as readily as in the English editions.
Vol. 2, Ellis & Blackburne's (75 E. C. L. R.,) Reports (Q. B.) to January, 1854, was published by us in June, 1854. At that time the last Queen's Bench case printed in the Boston Law and Equity Reports, was of June 25, 1853. Our volume contained cases decided five months later. The Queen's Bench cases to November 25, 1853, were published in the Boston series in August, 1854, two months after we had distributed the same cases.
Vol. 3, Ellis & Blackburne, (77 E. C. L. R.,) with cases to the end of Trinity Term, 1854, was published when the latest case of Queen's Bench decisions in the Boston series, was of February 8, 1854, more than four months behind the regular reporters.
Exchequer Reports, vol. 9, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) distributed by us January 11, 1855, contains cases to May 10, 1854. The last Exchequer case then in the Boston series was decided February 9, 1854, four months behind the regular Reporter, issued in Philadelphia.
3. They contain more cases decided by the courts represented, than any other series issued in this country.
Vol. 77 English Common Law, (3 E. & B.,) reports eighty-six cases decided in the Queen's Bench since January 11, 1854, while but fifty-eight Queen's Bench cases, decided since January 1, 1854, are found scattered among Vols. 22, 24 and 25 of the Boston Law and Equity.
Vol. 78 E. C. L. R. (5 J. Scott,) reports sixty-five cases decided since Nov. 13, 1853, in the Common Pleas, while the L. & E. has but fifty-seven cases in that Court since the same period.
Vol. 9 Exchequer Reports, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) reports one hundred and ten cases in the Courts of Exchequer, decided since June 24, 1853, while since the same date, the L. & E. report but 107 cases, scattered through vols. 20, 22, 24 and 25.

4. They are almost exclusively cited in argument of counsel, and referred to by Elementary Writers for Law Authorities. See Smith's Leading Cases, Smith's Contracts, Smith's Landlord and Tenant, by Maude; Byles on Bills and Promissory Notes, Broom's Legal Maxims, Broom's Commentaries on the Laws of England, or almost any recent Law Book issued in England.
5. The Philadelphia Reports are edited by Judge Sharswood and by Judge Hare, whose labors as editors and authors have made them so well and so favorably known to the profession.
6. The Boston Law and Equity is made up in this country from the Law Journal, Jurist, Times and other Law periodicals, of a weekly, monthly, or quarterly character, and being unknown in England, is never cited in Court, or referred to by Law writers. The periodicals from which it is extracted, are occasionally cited under their own particular names, but they do not possess that permanent value, even in England, which is all-important in a series of Reports.

A carefully prepared and accurate Annual Digest of all the cases decided by the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Exchequer, will be distributed, early in each year, to subscribers to either series, free of charge. That for 1854 is ready, and will be mailed to subscribers who have not received a copy.

IN PRESS AND IN PREPARATION.

Smith's Law of Landlord and Tenant, by author of Leading Cases, with copious American notes by P. P. Morris, Esq.
Having purchased from the English Publishers, during the past year, early sheets of the three works above announced, we hope to issue improved American editions very soon after their completion in England.

English Law and Equity Reports.
ENGLISH REPORTS IN LAW AND EQUITY. A Complete Collection of the Cases decided by the House of Lords, the Privy Council, the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas and Exchequer, the Lord Chancellor, the High Court of Appeal in Chancery, the Court of Criminal Appeal, and the Admiralty and Ecclesiastical Courts. Reprinted within a few weeks after the decisions are rendered.
This series has the merit of being complete, reliable, prompt, convenient, and cheap. It is now universally cited in the courts, and referred to in the recent law books as standard authority. All the cases reported in England, are here reprinted from the most reliable sources, as soon as they reach this country.
These Reports are now regularly digested in our Annual United States Digest, which thus embraces an annual digest of the whole English and American Law.

We have now in Preparation, and shall soon Publish,
A separate Digest of these Reports, embracing the first thirty-one volumes of the series, prepared with express reference to the convenience of the American profession, and exhibiting a complete synopsis of all the English Decisions reported in those volumes during the last five years; also a Table of Cases referring to all the contemporaneous English Reports. This will be the first Digest of English Decisions prepared expressly for the American Lawyer, and it is intended to give it the same advantages over the English Digests hitherto reprinted in this country, which the American text books have generally been found to possess over the English.
The Law and Equity Reports will be continued on the same plan as heretofore; the number of volumes being reduced to four per year; and Digests will be published from time to time as the convenience of the profession demands.
Vols. 1 to 31, now ready for delivery, at $2 00 per volume.

LAW SCHOOL OF THE UNIVERSITY AT CAMBRIDGE, MASS.—The Instructors in this School are HON. JOEL PARKER, LL. D., Royal Professor. HON. THEOPHILUS PARSONS, LL. D., Dane Professor. HON. EMERY WASHBURN, LL. D., University Lecturer.

The course of instruction embraces the various branches of the Common Law, and of Equity, Admiralty, Commercial, International and Constitutional Law, and the Jurisprudence of the United States. The Law Library consists of about 14,000 volumes, and as new works appear they are added, and every effort is made to render it complete.

Instruction is given by oral lectures and expositions, (and by recitations and examinations, in connection with them,) of which there are ten every week. Two moot Courts are also held in each week, at each of which a cause, previously given out, is argued by four students, and an opinion delivered by the presiding instructor. Rooms and other facilities are also provided for the Club Courts; and an Assembly is held weekly for practice in debate, and acquiring a knowledge of Parliamentary law and proceedings.

Students may enter the School in any stage of their professional studies or mercantile pursuits, and at the commencement of either term, or in the middle, or other part of a term. They are at liberty to elect what studies they will pursue, according to their view of their own wants and attainments.

District Court.

Opinions by Judge Hare.

LELAR vs. GAULT.

The object of the Legislature in limiting the jurisdiction of this Court, to cases in which the sum in controversy exceeds $100, undoubtedly was to deprive us of the right to take cognizance of demands which fall short of that value. Yet as the true value of a demand is often uncertain, until ascertained by a judgment the phrase "in controversy" was employed to show that jurisdiction was to depend on the magnitude of the interest in dispute, and not on the amount finally recovered. So much seems to have been conceded, to the necessity for having a practical criterion, which should guide the suitor in the first instance, and without danger of error, to the proper tribunal. But it was never intended that the latitude thus given, should be abused by allowing the plaintiff to inflate his demand arbitrarily in his declaration, for the purpose of bringing it within the reach of this Court, and withdrawing it from that of the justices of the peace, or the Court of Common Pleas. Hence, when the damages were laid at $140, for a breach of warranty in the sale of a horse for $80, the value of the horse, and not the sum demanded, was held to be the true test of the right to jurisdiction, and the judgment which had been rendered in the court below, was reversed on error; Kline v. Wood, 9 S. & R. 294. In this instance, the defect was apparent on the face of the pleadings, but the reasoning of the court would seem applicable to every case in which the cause of action is certain in itself, or susceptible of being rendered so by computation. Were it not for this rule, every debt however insignificant, might be brought here for decision, by the simple fiction of overstating its amount, under a videlicet. In the present instance, the demand of the plaintiff was liquidated from the outset, consisting first in the right of action for the difference between the bid of the defendant at the first sheriff's sale, and the amount which the property actually brought at the subsequent sale, and next of the cost of the second sale, which were incurred in consequence of the failure of the defendant, to fulfil the engagement into which he entered in the first. Both of these sums were absolutely certain, the former being so in its own nature, and the latter depending on the provisions of the fee bill as fixed by law. There was consequently nothing to mislead the plaintiff, or to justify him in raising his claim for damages in the declaration, to the sum necessary to give this court jurisdiction. The point was reserved at the trial, and we give judgment upon it in favor of the defendant.

JOHNSON vs. OGILBEE.

CASE STATED.

The claim of the plaintiff as we learn from the case stated, is founded on an attachment execution, levied on a debt due by David Williams, the garnishee, to Jonathan Jones, the defendant in the judgment on which the attachment issued. Prior to the service of the attachment, Jones made one Thomas Megargee his attorney in fact for the collection of the debt from Williams, and directed him to pay one I. G. French, the sum of $175 out of the proceeds when received. And the only point is, whether the power thus given to Megargee, coupled with the direction to pay French, operates as an assignment and thus defeats the attachment.

There can be no assignment, either at law or in equity, without a final and irrevocable transfer or appropriation of the property assigned. And when the aid of equity is asked to give effect to an assignment which is invalid at law, there must also be an express or implied contract between the assignor and assignee, sustained by a sufficient cause or consideration to render it effectual. An intention to make a present and absolute transfer, and a sufficient consideration to out of the right of retraction, are therefore generally, if not invariably necessary.

An ordinary power of attorney wants both these requisites. It does not purport to confer or assign any estate or interest; the power which it does confer, is usually intended for the benefit of the donor, and not for that of the donee; it is seldom founded upon a consideration; and what is still more material, it is, and is well-known to be essentially revocable; so that great injustice might be done, and a trap sprung to defeat men's intentions, if it were converted into an irrevocable conveyance, on anything short of the clearest and most conclusive extrinsic or internal evidence. Thus it was held in the well-known case of Hunt vs. Rousmanier, 8 Wheaton 174, 1 Peters, that as the power of attorney which had been given by Rousmanier to Hunt, to sell two vessels then at sea, as a security for money lent, was but a power, although the purpose for which it was given was expressed on its face, it could not operate as an assignment, and was consequently defeated by the death of Rousmanier, before it had been acted on by Hunt. A power given to a third person, as in the case now before us, to collect and pay over money in discharge of a debt, can have no greater effect than if it were given to the creditor himself, for the interposition of an agent, rather implies, than negatives an intention to retain a control over the execution of the power. It is, however, plain, that when the parties manifestly intend a transfer, their purpose will not be frustrated by the execution of a power, as one of the means of carrying it into effect; for every assignment of a chose in action, implies or contains a grant of authority to the assignee, to institute proceeding in the name, and as the attorney of the assignor. An authority to collect debts, and pay over the proceeds to a particular person, or class of persons, may, therefore, undoubtedly be given under circumstances, which show, that the intention of the giver was to create a trust, in favor of those to whom the payment is to be made. But the better opinion would seem to be, that the effect of the transaction in such cases, is a question of fact, depending on the intention of the parties as gathered from all the evidence in the case, rather than a conclusion of law, from the mere execution of the power. If a power to receive, coupled with a direction to pay over, proved or constituted an assignment in point of law, every direction given by a merchant to his correspondents, or by any man in business, to his factor or agent, to appropriate a remittance to pay or secure specific debts or liabilities, would operate as a declaration of trust, and entitle those to whose benefit the direction would have enured if executed, to file a bill to compel its execution, notwithstanding a prior revocation by the person who gave it. The case of Wilson vs. Bagaley, 2 Jones 164, has been cited as an authority, showing that when such a power has been once partially executed, by the receipt or collection of the fund by the donee, it becomes irrevocable, and operates as an assignment; but while there can be no doubt of the soundness of the principles laid down by Chief Justice Gibson on that occasion, nor indeed that the facts justify their application, they would perhaps have been more properly applied by a jury, under the direction of a judge, or by a chancellor, than by a court of common law, acting on a special verdict.

It will moreover be found on examination, that the point really decided in Watson v. Bagaley, was that the plaintiff was equally entitled to recover, whether the power were or were not an assignment. But we are relieved from the necessity of determining, whether the partial execution of the power in the case now before us, by the collection of the debt, would have enured as an assignment, under the authority of Watson vs. Bagaley, because the debt has never been collected, or in any way brought within the action of the power. In every point of view therefore, the debt remained the property of the defendant, and subject to attachment by his creditors. Judgment is consequently entered for the plaintiff on the case stated, for the sum of $354, which is conceded to be due to him, if the power form no obstacle to the effect of the attachment.

MOORE vs. WEBER.

The rule for a new trial in this case was granted on the authority of a passage in Greenleaf on evidence, which may have been sufficiently correct when originally written, but which hardly gives a correct view of the law as declared or modified by the more recent decisions. Mr. Greenleaf states the rule to be, that parties to the record cannot give evidence even as against themselves, without the assent of all who are parties to the action; and says very justly, that the dissent of a party in interest, who is an assignee of the cause of action, should be equally effectual with that of a party of record. But the more recent decisions in England, which have been followed in this state, in Vermont, and in Connecticut, as well as in some other parts of the Union, clearly establish that parties to the record stand on the same footing with other witnesses, save that the law makes an exception in their favor, and permits them to say whether they are or are not willing to testify. And, as this exception is intended to protect tenderness of conscience, from the fear or danger of being tempted to sacrifice truth to interest, it is viewed as a privilege purely personal to the witness, which cannot be set up by others if waived by him. It necessarily follows, that if the plaintiff is willing to appear as a witness for the defendant, he cannot be excluded by a co-plaintiff, or even by an assignee of the whole cause of action. The point was held the other way in New York and Massachusetts; simply because parties to the record were inadmissible as witnesses in those states, without that universal consent which removes all error. And those courts which hold that parties to the record are admissible, unless they themselves object, or are interested, also hold that no more weight is due to the objection of an assignee than to that of a co-plaintiff: Woodruff v. Westcott, 12 Conn., 134; Sergeant v. Sergeant, 18 Vermont, 311; Wells v. Russell, 26 Id. 617; Smith v. Elder, 7 S. & M. 367; Copperwood v. Foster, 12 Id. 718. An examination of these cases will show, that Mr. Greenleaf is mistaken in referring them to a local rule of evidence, and that they are based upon the broad ground taken by the Queen's Bench, in Pipe v. Steele, 2 Q. B., 733. The point was decided in Cannon v. Campbell, 6 Harris, 164, where the nominal plaintiff was held competent to give evidence against the assignee for whose use the suit was brought, notwithstanding an objection made by him; and although the attention of the court was not called to the particular reason now urged upon us in this case, we are not entitled to suppose that they overlooked it. The rule for a new trial is consequently discharged.

KEE vs. HOBENSACK.

RULE FOR A NEW TRIAL.

This was an action against the defendant, for a trespass committed by directing the constable to proceed with the sale of goods seized under an execution, after notice of the intention of the defendant in the execution to claim the benefit of the $300 law.

That a constable or other officer, who sells goods which it is his duty to appraise, and not to sell, is guilty of a misfeasance which amounts to a trespass, would seem too plain to admit of question, and it is equally evident that if the plaintiff in the execution, or even a stranger, order the sale to proceed, after being informed of the circumstances which render it unlawful, he will share the responsibility of an act which is virtually his own. But the court have had more difficulty in determining, whether the notice given by the defendant of his wish to have the property appraised, was not too late to entitle him to the benefit of an enactment, which is in derogation of the common law, if not of the principles of natural justice. The debtor is bound to elect whether he will demand or relinquish the goods, within a reasonable time after he receives notice of the levy, and before the creditor has been put to useless expense and delay, in proceeding with the execution. Lapse of time is not necessarily material, but will become so when it arises from the want of due diligence on one side, and results in loss on the other. Had, therefore, the defendant in this case proved unreasonable delay on the part of the plaintiff, and consequent injury on his own, he would have been entitled to a verdict from the jury, in accordance with the instruction which he asked from the court. Instead, however, of proof he relied on presumptions, which fail him in a very essential particular. No injury was shown to have resulted from the delay in giving notice; but it was insisted that as it was not given till four days before the sale, while the law requires handbills to be posted six days previously, and we ought to presume that its directions were obeyed, and an expense occurred, which might have been avoided, had the notice been given at an earlier period. But even if we could supply the want of evidence on this point, by presumption, which is not altogether clear, there would still be nothing to show, that the plaintiff knew of the levy in time to give the notice sooner. The wood seized was lying on the ground where it had been cut, at a distance from his dwelling; and for all that appears, he may not have known that it had been taken in execution, until the day on which he notified the constable of his wish to have it appraised. And the law certainly will not hold that the notice was too late, without proof that the circumstances which rendered it necessary, were known in time to give it sooner. To presume that the plaintiff knew of the levy at the time when it was made, because he failed to show that he did not, would be to violate the established order of evidence, and charge him with the burden of proving a negative. We are, therefore, unable to say that the notice was too late, and consequently discharge the rule for a new trial.

CUSHMAN vs. ADAMS.

This case presents the somewhat difficult question, whether the testimony of an agent ceases to be competent, when it tends to enable his principal to recover that from the defendant, which may or might be recovered from the agent. The general rule is, that witnesses are competent, unless they are directly interested in the event of the suit, or unless the verdict or judgment can be given in evidence for or against them in another suit. Neither of these grounds of incompetency exists, when an agent or servant is called as a witness, in a suit brought by the master or principal; for if the witness be liable, he will be equally so whether the plaintiff succeed or fail in the action. It has, notwithstanding, been decided in a great number of instances, that although one of several trespassers, who is not sued, may be called to prove the case of the plaintiff against another who is, a servant is not competent to show that the loss of property entrusted to his care, arose from the defendant's negligence, and not from his own, although his whole interest would seem to consist, in the greater or less probability, that if a judgment be obtained, it will result in satisfaction, and thus discharge him from liability. The same rule has been applied to ordinary agents, and in cases arising out of contract, although it would seem quite as inapplicable there, as it is to the relation of master and servant. All the cases, however, seem to agree, that to bring it into operation, the action must be founded upon some neglect or breach of duty for which the agent is or may be liable, and the contest be, whether it arises from his default or from that of the defendant. Were the law otherwise, agents would be incompetent to prove that they had sold goods on credit, or without receiving cash in payment, for the necessary effect of their testimony in such cases, is, to cast a liability on the purchaser, for which they are prima facie answerable themselves. Tried by this test, the evidence of the agent, whose competency is denied in the present instance, was clearly admissible, and the rule for a new trial is consequently refused.

Opinion by Judge Sharswood.

GIBBS vs. SMITH.

Demurrer per Curiam.

This was an action of covenant on a ground rent deed dated October 19, 1820, by which John H. Brinton and wife conveyed a lot of ground to one Jesse Brown, reserving a ground rent of $22 50. The plaintiffs claim as heirs of Samuel Berry, deceased, who was assignee of Brinton, and the defendant originally was the administrator of Jesse Brown, the original covenantor.

The terre tenants by an order of the court have been admitted to take defence.

They have filed a plea alleging that Jesse Brown, on the 27th day of December, 1822, conveyed the premises subject to the ground rent to Samuel Berry, and that afterwards on the 28th December, 1822 the said Brinton released and extinguished the ground rent to the said Berry. They proceed to set out that afterwards, on the 10th August, 1827, Timothy Curran, assignee under the Insolvent laws, conveyed the premises to James Stewart, who died seized, and under whom the terre tenants making defence deduce title.

To this the plaintiff has replied, that on the 30th January, 1822, and before the making of the deed Brown to Berry, the said Brown was discharged as an insolvent debtor, and such proceedings were afterwards had that the said Curran was appointed his assignee, absque hoc, that the said Brinton released to the said Berry.

To this replication the terre tenant demur specially, and assign for cause, that the inducement of the replication does not sufficiently show that the said Brinton and wife did not release and extinguish the said ground rent as in the said plea is alleged.

The rule of pleading in the case of a special traverse as this replication, undoubtedly is that the inducement must always in itself contain without the aid of the absque hoc, an answer, in substance to the last pleading. The use and object of the inducement is to give an explained or qualified denial, that is, to state such circumstances as tend to show that the last pleading is not true, the absque hoc being added merely to put that denial in a positive form, which had previously been made in an indirect one (Stephen on Pl. 226.) A party is thus enabled to spread the facts of his case on the record, and invoke the judgment of the court upon them as matter of law.

This case is to be tested by this principle. The terre tenants pleaded a release to a prior terre tenant; the plaintiffs reply that prior to the time when the conveyance was made to the releasee his grantor had taken the benefit of the insolvent laws, and his title had been divested. By the plea of the terre tenants it also appears that they derive title under the insolvent assignee.

Two questions then arise upon this record:

First. Was the title of Jesse Brown to the land divested at the period of his discharge without reference to the fact whether there was or was not at that time an assignee appointed?

Brown's discharge was under the Act of 1814, by which in the words of Judge Sergeant in Ruby v. Glen, 5 Watts, 75, "The estate of the insolvent is vested immediately on his discharge in the trustees, not by virtue of his assignment, but by the express provisions of the Act. In many instances the trustees first appointed, neglect or refuse to qualify themselves by giving security and acquire no title. "The Court has then power to substitute others who are subjected to the same condition of giving bond, and when this is done, they become vested with the estate, not by any transfer or conveyance, but by the mere act of substitution." The decision in that case was in accordance with the prior cases of Willis' Lessee, v. Row, 3 Yeates, 520; Gray v. Hill, 10 S. & R., 436, and Wickersham v. Nicholson, 14 S. & R. 118.

We would be bound to presume in favor of the regularity of judicial proceedings, that an assignment was made to somebody by the insolvent at the time of his discharge, until the contrary appears; such assignment being specially directed and required by the Act of Assembly. The Act of 1836 goes further, and gives the discharge a retrospective operation to the time of filing the petition. But supposing as we are asked to suppose, that the proceedings were so irregular that no assignment was executed, there are two answers. First, That if the fact is so, the terre tenants who have been admitted to defend, have no title, for they claim under the assignee of Brown, unless his title was divested prior to his conveyance to Berry. They claim under Brown the covenantor. They admit the conveyance to Berry. They are strangers to the proceeding, their rights cannot be affected, unless they stand in privity with Brown. They do not claim under Berry: it must therefore be paramount to him. But secondly, apart from such considerations, it hardly seems to admit of question, that even the non-execution of an assignment, will not prevent the estate of the insolvent from being divested from the insolvent, and vesting in the assignee whenever appointed by relation to the time of the discharge. It is the Act of Assembly and not the assignment which transfers the estate, and there is no substantial difference between an assignee named, who does not assent, accept or give bonds, and none at all. He certainly acquires no title, no right to sue, or even inchoate right to possession before he qualifies.

However this may be under the Act of 1836, the arguments of court and counsel in Eustace v. Hanson, 2 Howard, 667, Baldwin J., and Thomas v. Phillips, 9 Barr, 357, assume it to be so under the Act of 1814.

If then the estate of Brown was fully divested by his discharge; the second question is, was there anything in Berry under his subsequent conveyance, upon which the release of Brinton would operate as such? It is contended that Berry, by Brown's conveyance, had a right, though it may be voidable by the insolvent assignee. But if the view we have taken of the Act of 1814 is correct, he had nothing but a bare naked possession, good indeed against all the world but the insolvent assignee, but really giving him no title whatever. The best that could be said is, that Brown after the discharge, held as tenant at sufferance, and Berry had no better title; if he was not that, he was a mere trespasser. The conveyance of Brown to Berry was not accompanied with any tortious effect; it was as innocent deed, and gave no seisin in law or fact, which Brown had not. It is to be observed also, that the release of a rent service does not operate as the extinguishment of a bare right. It operates in enlargement of the estate of the tenant, there being a possibility of reverter in the landlord, where the grant reserving the rent is in fee. Now he to whom the release is made, must have some estate in possession, in deed, or in law, or in reversion in deed, in his own or another's right, of the lands whereof the release is made, to be as a foundation for the release to stand upon. 1 Sheppard, 324. If he have a possession only and no estate, the release will not avail to enlarge the estate of the releasee. Ibid, 325. And if a man have only an occupation of land as tenant at sufferance, as when a lessee for years doth hold over his term or the like, no release to him can work any enlargement of estate; for albeit, he have a possession, yet hath he no estate; and besides, in this case there is no privity. For as in all releases that enure by way of increase or passing an estate, there must be some privity in estate between them at the time of the release made; for an estate without privity is not sufficient. 1 Sheppard, 325. Lord Coke shows a diversity between a rent service and a rent charge in that the former may be released and extinguished to him that hath but a bare right in the land on account of the privity, while it is otherwise with a rent charge. Co. Lit. 268. The English books which speak of the release of a seignory or rent as operating by way of extinguishment merely, do not apply in this State, where the statute of quia emptores is not in force. The estate in our ground rents is a distinct and separate estate, and the release of it is not the bare extinguishment of a right in the land. It passes something more than merely the right to the rent.

On the whole, therefore, judgment for plaintiff. Lents and Earle for plaintiff. McCall for defendant.

Supreme Court.

Opinion by Judge Woodward.
THE TURNPIKE CO. v. McCULLOCH.
Jan. 11, 1856. Error to Allegheny Co.

An action of covenant against a corporation will lie only on a written instrument sealed with their common seal, and their common seal does not prove itself, but must be proved by some person having knowledge of it. Hence it is that the probate of a deed of conveyance by a corporation to fit it for being recorded or given in evidence is made by an officer of the corporation, swearing that the seal thereto affixed is the common seal of the corporation. If the corporation have no common seal, they may adopt a seal for the occasion, but that must be proved to be their seal.

It is said the instrument sued on here is not the deed of the corporation, defendant; that the ink-seal set opposite the President's name is neither the common nor the adopted seal of the company; but did the pleadings raise that question?

The plaintiff declared in covenant on articles of agreement, and the defendant pleaded "covenant's performed" adque hoc with leave, &c. The plea of covenant's performed, although in substance a denial of the breach alleged, is an affirmative plea, and puts not the execution of the instrument in issue. Nor do the words adque hoc "without this" for these only put in issue the performance on the part of the plaintiff as alleged in his narr. The words with leave, &c., imply always an equitable defence. Such as arises out of special circumstances which the defendant hereby intimates that he means to offer in evidence.

As this cause went to trial then, there was no plea on record which negated the plaintiff's averment that the instrument sued on was the deed of the corporation. And as in pleading whatever is alleged and not denied is admitted, it was not necessary for the plaintiff to prove nor perhaps to produce the instrument declared on.

Nothing but the plea of non est factum could put the execution of the instrument in issue, and this was wanting from the record, and still is.

But we are informed by the paper books that, after the evidence was closed, and the defendant's counsel had concluded their argument, the counsel of the plaintiff in the course of his concluding argument, asked leave to amend his declaration, which the Court granted, against the objection of defendant's counsel, and sealed a bill. A continuance was then prayed for by defendant's counsel on the ground of surprise, and refused by the Court. They then asked leave to amend by adding the plea of non est factum on the record, and says the paper book of the plaintiff in error, "By the Court, let the plea be added." On the part of the defendant in error, it is alleged that though leave was granted, the plea was not in point of fact added to the record, and so far as the docket entries are furnished us it does not appear that either amendment moved for and allowed was actually filed. In their answer to the defendant's 10th point, however, the Court take notice of the amendment of the plaintiff's narr; but neither in their charge, nor in their subsequent opinion upon the point reserved is there any notice taken of the plea of non est factum.

From all this, we are at liberty, perhaps bound to presume that no such plea was pleaded. The leave granted entitled the defendants to add this plea, but did not compel them to do so. They might waive their privilege. In some judicial districts the rules require this plea to be verified by an affidavit before it can be filed, and it is not always convenient to swear to it. We are not informed whether such a rule obtains in the District Court of Allegheny County, but it is enough for us that the record shows no such plea, and that the defendant in error alleges, without contradiction, that it never was placed on record. The defendant's covenant then was admitted of record, and required no proof to establish it. This conclusion thus fairly deduced is the more satisfactory to our minds because it relieves us of the necessity of turning parties out of Court on a mere technicality after they have had a full trial of the merits of their controversy.

The judgment is affirmed.

COMMISSIONER FOR NEW JERSEY.

Arthur M. Burton, Esq., has been appointed by the Governor of New Jersey, Commissioner to take Acknowledgements. His office is No. 101 South Fifth Street.

THE OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL.

EDITOR OF THE LEGAL INTELLIGENCER:—Has the question occurred to you, what power under the amended constitution, the Governor has to appoint and remove the Attorney General?

The amended constitution confers upon the Governor power to appoint only the Secretary of State and judges, (since made elective,) and to fill vacancies. The 8th Section of the Sixth Article provides that "all officers whose election or appointment is not provided for in this constitution, shall be elected or appointed, as shall be directed by law. The appointment of the Attorney General is not provided for in the constitution. Without a law therefore vesting his appointment in the Governor, he clearly has no power to appoint.

I have looked in vain for any act of any period in the legislation of Pennsylvania, authorizing the appointment or fixing the tenure of the office. No doubt there is none. The neglect to make provision may be supposed to be owing to the belief that he is not an officer, but stands towards the commonwealth simply in the contract relation of counsel to client. It is easy to conceive how the Governor without a law to create the office could call to his aid a legal adviser. But if there be no such office by law, there is no duty to appoint. Consequently the important functions performed by the Attorney General in the administration of justice and otherwise, would cease on a failure to appoint; without any liability of the Governor to impeachment for a neglect or refusal to perform an enjoined duty.

Though the mode of appointment and the tenure of the office have not been established; that he is an officer performing legal duties, and receiving a salary and fees fixed by law, cannot be gainsayed. A reference to legislation fully attests this.

His salary fixed at $250. Act 13th April, 1791, 3 Smith L. 27. Not to be deprived "of the fees heretofore fixed by law for his services in his office." Act 4th April, 1792, 3 Smith L. 77. That the fees of the several officers throughout this Commonwealth shall be, &c." Attorney General fees then established, Act 2d, April 1795, 3 Smith L. 249.

Attorney General required to proceed to collect fees, in the land office. Act 29 March 1803, 4 Smith L. 82.

In all civil actions the duty of the Attorney General to appear for the Commonwealth, plaintiff or defendant. Act 20th March, 1810, 5 Smith L. 132.

Required to remove delinquent deputies who have received public money. Act 30th March, 1811, 5 Smith L. 235.

The duty of Attorney General to give advice to Commissioners of Connecticut titles. Act 6th April 1802, 3 Smith L. 523.

"An act joining duties on the Attorney General and for other purposes."—Removal of Deputies, amount of fees, report of fees to Auditor General, and excess over $1000 to be paid into the treasury. Not to enter nolle prosequi except in certain cases. Act 29th March 1819, 7 Smith L. 227. "An act reducing the salaries of sundry public officers." Attorney Generals to $300. 18th January, 1821, 7 Smith L. 345.

Duties of Attorney General in relation to writs of quo warranto. Act 14 June 1833.

There are other laws vesting privileges and enjoining duties ex officio, but these are sufficient. What is an office is shown in the opinion of C. J. Tighman in Dr. Sutherland's case, 3 S. & R. 148-9. See also Rush vs. Savenough, 2 Barr, 189. Commonwealth vs. Brunell, 7 Barr, 29. Gibson, G. J., says in the latter case, "the office of the Attorney General is a public trust," "the officer acts under the obligation of an oath and at the peril of impeachment." The official relation of the Attorney General is the very hinge of the decision. The same doctrine repeated in Murphy vs. Farmers' Bank, 8 Harris, 417.

He is therefore an officer, and holds an office recognized by law. Being such, without a law fixing the tenure and vesting his appointment, the Governor under the amended constitution has no power to appoint or remove.

I do not mean to be understood as asserting the illegality of the power as now exercised by the Governor; but that there has been an omission by the Legislature since the adoption of the amended constitution in 1833, to establish the office for a proper term, and to vest the power to fill it somewhere.

If I should have leisure, I shall in a future communication give a short account of the rise of the office in this Commonwealth; and how, as I understand it, the Governor comes to exercise the present power. In the meantime, if there be any act of Assembly creating the office and fixing its tenure and mode of appointment, the research of others may accomplish more than I have been able to.

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND.

INTEREST FIVE PER CENT. PER ANNUM.

ALL SUMS OF MONEY RETURNED ON DEMAND.

OFFICE, NEXT DOOR TO THE POST OFFICE; No. 83 Dock Street, PHILADELPHIA, 1854.

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND, No. 83 DOCK Street, next door to THIRD Street, and adjoining the POST OFFICE, receives MONEY on deposit daily, from 9 in the morning until 3 in the afternoon; also Monday evenings, from 7 to 9 o'clock. Interest is allowed on deposits at the rate of FIVE PER CENT per annum. Deposits will be returned in whole, or in part, on demand, without notice.

The popularity of this office with all classes of the community, both in town and country, and its consequent success, may be ascribed, in part, to the following substantial reasons:

1st. It offers a convenient, responsible, and profitable Depository to Executors, Administrators, Assignees, Collectors, Agents, and all public officers—to Attorneys, Trustees, Societies and Associations, whether incorporated or otherwise—to married or single ladies—to Students, Merchants, Clerks, and business men generally—to Mechanics, Farmers, Minors of either sex, and all who have funds, much or little, to deposit, where they may be had at any time, with Five Per Cent interest added.

2d. Depositors receive Books, with an abstract of the By-laws and regulations, in which is entered their deposits, which Books serve as vouchers. They may designate in case of sickness, death, or absence, who shall receive their deposits, without the intervention of Executors or Administrators. Any one or more persons may deposit in his, her, or their name, or for any other person or persons.

3d. A Report is made each year to the Legislature, and Councils of the City.

4th. The Officers are sworn before they enter upon their duties, in addition to giving Bonds with sureties.

5th. The State Savings Fund is a real Savings Fund—not an Insurance and Trust Company. The Charter of this Institution avoids the Insurance business.

6th. Deposits may be withdrawn by checks after the manner customary with Banks. Check Books will be furnished to depositors without charge.

GEORGE H. HART, President.
CHAS. G. IMLAY, Treasurer.

A MERITORIOUS CARD.

Hail! honored age of grand progression,
While each one clings to his profession,
And science moves with onward motion,
To suit each wayward thought and notion,
Bringing to light some new invention,
More strange than modern wit can mention,
Or Genius paint with true endeavor,
Though making graphic strides forever,
While Reason urges proud Ambition,
To strive for wondrous Competition;
Yet, in this age of glorious Art,
We can the meed of praise impart,
When meritorious efforts claim
A modest puff to gild the name:
And thus we call, with honest pride,
Attention to the Painter's side,—
A man who bravely knows his calling,
Whose works are worthy of extolling,
A model Artist of the day,
And most obliging in his way,
GEORGE H. BANCROFT,—mark the name,
In CHESTNUT STREET you'll find the same,
Call at Five Hundred and Thirty-One,
You'll get the best of painting done,
In Modern or in Classic Order,
From templed shrine to parlor border,
In magic tints of every hue,
To Signs embossed in gold and blue,
Or Figures Head, or Church, or Steeple,
He is resolved to please the people,
And whether foe, or friend or neighbor,
Will charge but moderate for his labor.
We thus invite each one and all,
To give this worthy man a call.
Who will, we venture to engage,
Feel grateful for your patronage.*

* We would particularly invite public attention to our friend Mr. BANCROFT, who is a young, enterprising beginner, and who has gone to vast expense in fitting up his establishment, and is now ready to receive orders for Painting, in all its various branches, at 531 and 533 Chestnut street, 5 doors east of Seventeenth st. The following valuable opinions of the work have been received by the Publishers.

From Judge Catron of the U. S. Supreme Court.
"Hardly a stronger guaranty could be afforded to the American Bar that the work has merit, than the fact that Mr. Wharton was author of the legal portion of the book."
JOHN CATRON.

From Professor Parsons of the Cambridge Law School.

"I have not had time to examine it critically, but have read enough to convince me that it is an instructive and valuable work. Some of its topics, which are quite new in a book on this subject, are shown to be among the most important."
THEOPHILUS PARSONS.

From Judge McLean of the U. S. Supreme Court.

"I have not had time to look minutely through the volume, but from the known ability of the authors, and their experience, I am sure the book must be very interesting and useful, not only to the profession of the law, but also to general readers. A modern treatise of this kind, embodying the experience of jurists and medical men, with decisions of courts, was much wanted; and I am satisfied that abler pens than those employed, could not have been engaged in its production."
JOHN MCLEAN.

REPORTS OF THE COMMON LAW COURTS OF ENGLAND.

Containing the cases decided in the Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Nisi Prius Courts, from 1813 to 1855, and in the Court of Exchequer and Exchequer Chamber, from 1824 to 1855, are found in

The Regular and Authoritative Series of the English Common Law and English Exchequer Reports,

Which present the following claims to the support of the profession:

1. They are the only series issued as the authoritative and acknowledged medium by which the decisions of the Law Courts of England are made public.

2. They contain Later Reports than the Boston series, are more fully and more ably reported, and so arranged by preservation of the original paging, that reference by reporters, or by elementary writers, can be traced as readily as in the English editions.

Vol. 2, Ellis & Blackburne's (75 E. C. L. R.,) Reports (Q. B.) to January, 1854, was published by us in June, 1854. At that time the last Queen's Bench case printed in the Boston Law and Equity Reports, was of June 25, 1853. Our volume contained cases decided five months later. The Queen's Bench cases to November 25, 1853, were published in the Boston series in August, 1854, two months after we had distributed the same cases.

Vol. 3, Ellis & Blackburne, (77 E. C. L. R.,) with cases to the end of Trinity Term, 1854, was published when the latest case of Queen's Bench decisions in the Boston series, was of February 8, 1854, more than four months behind the regular reports.

Exchequer Reports, vol. 9, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) distributed by us January 11, 1855, contains cases to May 10, 1854. The last Exchequer case then in the Boston series was decided February 9, 1854, four months behind the regular Reporter, issued in Philadelphia.

3. They contain more cases decided by the courts represented, than any other series issued in this country.

Vol. 77 English Common Law, (3 E. & B.,) reports eighty-six cases decided in the Queen's Bench since January 11, 1854, while but fifty-eight Queen's Bench cases, decided since January 1, 1854, are found scattered among Vols. 22, 24 and 25 of the Boston Law and Equity.

Vol. 78 E. C. L. K. (5 J. Scott,) reports sixty-five cases decided since Nov. 13, 1853, in the Common Pleas, while the L. & E. has but fifty-seven cases in that Court since the same period.

Vol. 9 Exchequer Reports, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) reports one hundred and ten cases in the Courts of Exchequer, decided since June 24, 1853, while since the same date, the L. & E. report but 107 cases, scattered through vols. 20, 22, 24 and 25.

4. They are almost exclusively cited in argument of counsel, and referred to by Elementary Writers for Law Authorities. See Smith's Leading Cases, Smith's Contracts, Smith's Landlord and Tenant, by Maude; Byles on Bills and Promissory Notes, Broom's Legal Maxims, Broom's Commentaries on the Laws of England, or almost any recent Law Book issued in England.

5. The Philadelphia Reports are edited by Judge Sharswood and by Judge Hare, whose labors as editors and authors have made them so well and so favorably known to the profession.

6. The Boston Law and Equity is made up in this country from the Law Journal, Jurist, Times and other Law periodicals, of a weekly, monthly, or quarterly character, and being unknown in England, is never cited in Court, or referred to by Law writers. The periodicals from which it is extracted, are occasionally cited under their own particular names, but they do not possess that permanent value, even in England, which is all-important in a series of Reports.

7. A carefully prepared and accurate Annual Digest of all the cases decided by the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Exchequer, will be distributed, early in each year, to subscribers to either series, free of charge. That for 1854 is ready, and will be mailed to subscribers who have not received a copy.

English Law and Equity Reports.

ENGLISH REPORTS IN LAW AND EQUITY. A Complete Collection of the Cases decided by the House of Lords, the Privy Council, the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas and Exchequer, the Lord Chancellor, the High Court of Appeal in Chancery, the Court of Criminal Appeal, and the Admiralty and Ecclesiastical Courts. Reprinted within a few weeks after the decisions are rendered.

This series has the merit of being complete, reliable, prompt, convenient, and cheap. It is now universally cited in the courts, and referred to in the recent law books as standard authority. All the cases reported in England, are here reprinted from the most reliable sources, as soon as they reach this country.

These Reports are now regularly digested in our Annual United States Digest, which thus embraces an annual digest of the whole English and American Law.

We have now in Preparation, and shall soon Publish,

A separate Digest of these Reports, embracing the first thirty-one volumes of the series, prepared with express reference to the convenience of the American profession, and exhibiting a complete synopsis of all the English Decisions reported in those volumes during the last five years; also a Table of Cases referring to all the contemporaneous English Reports. This will be the first Digest of English Decisions prepared expressly for the American Lawyer, and it is intended to give it the same advantages over the English Digests hitherto reprinted in this country, which the American text books have generally been found to possess over the English.

The Law and Equity Reports will be continued on the same plan as heretofore; the number of volumes being reduced to four per year; and Digests will be published from time to time as the convenience of the profession demands.

Vols. 1 to 31, now ready for delivery, at $2 00 per volume.

OUR COURT HOUSES AND PUBLIC OFFICES.

The entire inadequacy of the accommodations for our Courts and the offices connected with them has for many years been a just subject of complaint to all having business to transact with them. Some years since some progress was made towards a remedy, but since Consolidation the matter has been allowed to sleep. The rooms which forty years since served to accommodate the officers and the then business, do not now afford room for the proper arrangement of the great accumulation of Records and papers contained within them. There is an imminent danger of loss from fire and other causes, and we much fear that an irremediable loss by the destruction of the contents of some of them will at last wake up the authorities to the necessity of improvement. In our opinion the members of the present Legislature would serve the interests of their constituents by some action on this highly important subject. We would recommend the call of a public meeting to take the matter into consideration.

Supreme Court.

M'CANDLEL vs. McWHIA.

Oct. 27, 1855. [Error to the Common Pleas of Beaver County.

When facts are offered to be proved, whose relevancy depends upon scientific principles, not commonly known; it is not error to refuse to admit the evidence until those scientific principles are proved.

In an action against a surgeon for mala praxis in setting a fractured limb; if the defendant, in order to account for the difficulty of the cure, offer to prove a habit of intoxication in the plaintiff several years anterior to the accident, the evidence may be rejected unless it be shown, as matter of science, that that habit would injuriously affect the process of healing.

The ordinary science, like the ordinary language and customs, of every day life is presumed, in the trial of causes, to be known by both court and jury; and they make use of it in weighing the evidence submitted to them, and in estimating the importance of the ascertained facts. But if there be facts, which are really of influence and importance in a cause, and their influence and importance are not recognized by the court as matter of legal science, or do not fall within the province of the science of common life; then, by themselves, they must be practically irrelevant, and can be used only by appealing to mere prejudice; because they can have no intelligent application to the matter in dispute. If their relevancy depends upon special scientific principles, of which the court is not expected to take judicial notice, and of which the jury are most probably ignorant; then, without these principles, their relevancy cannot appear. When, therefore, such facts are offered to be proved, they must be rejected, unless offered in connection with, or (better still,) after sufficient evidence of the scientific principles that reveal their importance.

In this case it was not considered prudent to rely on the ordinary science, which the jury is expected to possess, for the principle, that a fractured limb of an intemperate man is more difficult to cure than that of a temperate man; but we have evidence of it from men of science, and such is the usual practice. Now, very certainly, it is not a well-known principle of ordinary science, that, in judging of the difficulty of such a case, it is important to know, not only the degree of intemperance then existing, but how long it has lasted; and this principle was neither proved nor offered to be. It was, therefore, proper for the court, under the circumstances, to refuse to allow the patient's habits and character, in this respect, to be put in issue for an indefinite period backwards. It was surely enough to lay them open for the previous seven years, if not too much.

Judgment affirmed.

PAUL v. CARVER.

The general rule that title passes to the centre of a street or a road, applies to a case where the deed of conveyance brings the line to the side of a street or road. Union Burial Ground v. Robinson, 5 Wharton, 18, explained.

Opinion by Lewis, C. J.

The general rule is well established that where a stream not navigable, is called for in a deed as a boundary or monument, it is used as an entirety to the centre of it, and to that extent the fee passes. It would require an express exception in the grant, or some clear and unequivocal declaration, or certain and immemorial usage to limit the title of the grantee, in such cases, to the edge of the river, 3 Kent's Com. 428. So land bounded by an artificial ditch extends to the centre of the ditch, 6 Conn. 471. So where a street is called for as a boundary, the title passes to the centre of the street. "The law with respect to public highways and to fresh water rivers is the same, and the analogy perfect as concerns the right of soil. The presumption is, that the owners of the land on each side go to the centre of the road, and they have the exclusive right to the soil, subject to the right of passage in the public." 3 Kent's Com. 432. Chancellor Kent declares that "the established inference of law is that a conveyance of land bounded on a public highway, carries with it the fee to the centre of the road, as part and parcel of the grant. The idea of an intention in a grantor to withhold his interest in a road to the middle of it, after parting with all his right and title to the adjoining land, is never to be presumed. It would be contrary to universal practice; and it was said in Peck v. Smith, 1 Conn. Rep. 103, that there was no instance where the fee of highway, as distinct from the adjoining land, was ever retained by the vendor. It would require an express declaration, or something equivalent thereto, to sustain such an inference." 3 Kent's Com. 433. If no other reason could be assigned in support of this rule of construction, the general understanding of the people, and the extensive and immemorial practice of claiming and acquiescing in such rights, ought to have great weight. A contrary opinion would introduce a flood of unprofitable litigation. But the rule has its origin in a regard to the nature of the grant. Where land is laid out in town lots, with streets and alleys, the owner receives a full consideration for the streets and alleys, in the increased value of the lots. The object of the purchasers of lots is to enjoy the usual benefits of the streets. The understanding always is, that houses may be erected fronting on the streets, with windows and doors, and door steps and vaults. These latter always extend beyond the line of the streets, and it is necessary that they should so extend. If a right of property in the streets might, under any circumstances, be exercised by the grantor, he might deprive his grantee of the means of entry into, or exit from his house, and of all the enjoyments of light and air, and might thereby deprive him of the means of deriving any benefit from his purchase. In large cities, vaults under the side walks for receiving fuel and other necessaries, are almost universally constructed. In some instances, where lots are owned by the same person on each side of the street, their vaults extend entirely across it, forming an under-ground communication between the two properties. Shade trees, posts, awnings, and many other convenient structures are constantly erected. All these might be prohibited by the original grantor, if his right of property remained after parting with the lots. If the streets were to be vacated, of what value would they be to the original grantors, unless for purposes of annoyance to the lot owners? A long strip of ground fifty or one hundred feet wide, and perhaps several miles in length, without any access to it except at each end, is a description of property which it is not likely either party ever contemplated as remaining in the grantor of the lots on each side of it. Influenced by these considerations the law has carried out the real intention of the parties, by holding that the title passed to the centre of the street, subject to the right of passage. Where a street is called for as a boundary, it is regarded as a single line. The thread of the road is the monument or abuttal, 8 Cush. 595. Measurements are of small importance where monuments are called for. Monuments control measurements. There is no doubt whatever as to the existence of the general rule; but it is thought by the plaintiff in error, that where the deed calls for a particular side of a street, the case is taken out of the rule. In our opinion this is a circumstance entirely too insignificant to produce a result so inconvenient, and so contrary to the practice of the people. This very question was decided when these parties were here in another form of action. It is therefore unnecessary to examine in detail, either the English or American decisions on the subject. While they all fully recognize the existence of the rule, that a conveyance of land bounded by a highway, passes to the grantee, a title to the centre of the way, there is some difference of opinion in the application of it to particular cases. A rule founded upon policy, and tending to guard against inconveniences of the most alarming character, ought not to be frittered away by distinctions founded on differences in phraseology, which might easily escape attention. The paramount intent of the parties, as disclosed from the whole scope of the conveyance, and the nature of the property granted, should be the controlling rule. Although the measurement of the distance set forth in the conveyance, brings the line only to the side of the road, this is not sufficient to control the rule of law which carries the title to the centre of it. Newhall v. Heron & Another, 8 Cushing, 598. Although the deed says nothing about a highway at all, and although the South line of the land conveyed corresponds with the North line of the highway, as originally laid out, still this strong circumstance has been held entirely insufficient to control the general intentment of law that the title passes to the centre of the highway. Champlin v. Pendleton, 13 Connecticut Rep. 23. Even where a grant described the land as "beginning on the westerly side of the county road;" "thence running northerly, touching the said westerly side of said road forty rods;" this description was held to be insufficient to control the rule of law which extends the title to the centre of the road. Johnson v. Anderson, 18 Maine Rep. 76. The case last cited disposes of the identical question now before us, and we adopt it as a sound exposition of the law. In our own State we have no authoritative decision on the question. Black v. Hepburn, was a Nisi Prius decision, and the case seems to have been determined on the principle that ejection would not lie for an easement. The Commonwealth v. McDonald, 16 S. & R. 390, was an indictment for erecting a nuisance in a public highway, in which it was distinctly stated that the public right to the highway, and that only, was decided. The Union Burial Ground v. Robinson, 5 Wharton 18, was the case of a conveyance before the street was opened, and the deed called for "the south side of Washington street as the same may hereafter be opened." The measurement of one of the lines, terminating at that point, was also stated with great particularity in feet, inches, and fractions of an inch. It may be that these circumstances ought to have had but little weight, but we find that they influenced the decision, and that the Court carefully stated that the case of a lot, bounded on a street laid out and dedicated to public use at the time of the grant, would present a different question. That case is therefore no precedent for one like the present. The other assignments of error do not require any special notice. The whole case was properly disposed of by the District Court.

Judgment affirmed.

WILLIAM SHINN v. THE COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA.

Error to the Quarter Sessions of Philadelphia City and County.

The Sunday Liquor Law of 26th February, 1855, is not repealed by the act of April 15, 1855, (Jug Law.)

Opinion of Judge Knox.

William Shinn, the plaintiff in error, was indicted in the Quarter Sessions of Philadelphia City and County, under the act of 26th February, A. D. 1855, entitled "An Act to prevent the sale of intoxicating liquors, on the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday." The indictment contained two counts, and there was a general verdict of guilty. Upon reasons filed the Court of Quarter Sessions, arrested the judgment upon the first count, and sentenced the defendant upon the second count "to pay a fine of fifty dollars to the Commonwealth, and be imprisoned in the Philadelphia county jail for thirty days, pay the costs of prosecution, and stand committed until the judgment is fully complied with."

It is here assigned for error, that "the Court below erred in entering judgment for the Commonwealth upon the second count in the indictment.

1st. Because the act of assembly of 26th February, 1855, entitled "an act to prevent the sale of intoxicating liquors on the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday," upon which the indictment was framed, was repealed by the subsequent act of the 14th April, 1855, entitled "an act to restrain the sale of intoxicating liquors."

2nd. "Because the second count of the indictment does not designate with legal certainty the particular accusation or instance of alleged offence for which the defendant was to be tried."

3rd. "Because the second count of the indictment does not aver that the liquors, wine, and cider, referred to therein, were drunk by any person or persons."

Two questions are presented for our consideration and determination, viz.:

1st. Did the act of 14th April, 1855, repeal that of 26th February, 1855?

2nd. If the last mentioned act is still in force, is the offence for which the defendant was convicted and sentenced, set forth in the indictment with sufficient precision?

It is not pretended that the act of 14th April, 1855, in terms, repealed the Sunday act, but it is said that it embraced the same subject matter, and was evidently intended as a substitute for it; that the first act was supplied by the second one, and therefore by implication repealed, if not in whole, at least so far as relates to the specific offence charged.

Upon an examination of the acts referred to we are all of the opinion that there is no inconsistency between the two acts so far as the section upon which this indictment is based, and that the subject matter of the first is not revised and supplied by the latter act, and that therefore the one does not repeal the other.

To repeal an act by implication, it must clearly appear that there is a plain inconsistency between it and a subsequent statute, or that the one is fully supplied by the other. A subsequent statute repugnant to a prior one, repeals it, but if they can be construed together, both will be sustained, as the law does not favor a repeal by implication. Bowen v. Leon, 5th Heli, 271.

There is very little similarity between the two statutes under consideration. Both, it is true, refer to the sale of intoxicating liquors; but the one prohibits the sale entirely on the first day of the week, whilst the other merely regulates its sale for the other days in the week. Both acts were passed at the same session of the general assembly, and the absence of any repealing clause, referring in terms to the prior act, is strong evidence that the legislature did not intend its repeal.

To protect the Sabbath, and punish its violation by this species of wordly employment, was the primary object of the act of February, 1855, rather than to regulate or prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors, and when this object was accomplished, it is not to be supposed that the work would be undone by the same body of men in legislating upon another and distinct subject. Believing the act to be eminently calculated to promote public and private morality, and to conduce to the good order and well being of society, we feel no disposition to favour its repeal by legislative implication, or to impair its force by judicial construction.

As to the form of the indictment, we deem it only necessary to say that the offence is charged in the words of the statute, indicating with clearness and precision, the nature and extent of the accusation.

For these reasons as well as those so fully stated in the able opinion of the learned President of Quarter Sessions, this judgment must be affirmed.

Judgment affirmed.

BALDWIN v. THE COMMONWEALTH.

"In a prosecution for adultery, defendant pleaded 'not guilty,' and 'stat of limitation,' the jury acquitted defendant, but directed him to pay the costs. Held to be within the act of Dec. 8, 1804, but not to include costs on a former bill, in which defendant had been convicted, and judgment arrested, and new bill found.

Opinion of Judge Lewis.

In prosecutions for offences under the degree of felony, the act of 8th December, 1804, gives the petit jury power, "in all cases of acquittal," "to determine whether the county, the prosecutor, or the defendant, shall pay the costs of prosecution." This was a prosecution for adultery, and the jury acquitted the defendant, but directed him to pay the costs of prosecution. It therefore comes clearly within the letter of the statute. But it is thought by the plaintiff in error, that the case is taken out of its intent by his plea of the statute of limitations. It is true he added this plea to that of not guilty. But the general verdict of not guilty, shows that the statute was not the plea that saved him from conviction. It is to be inferred from the record that the Commonwealth was not able to prove the guilt of the defendant at any time. So that the case, on the record, differs in nothing from the ordinary cases in which a jury may impose the costs on acquittal. But suppose that the defendant had been acquitted on the plea of "not guilty within two years." It would still be an acquittal, and would come within the letter of the statute, giving the jury power over the costs. And why is not such a case within its meaning? It often happens that men conduct so improperly as to give reasonable ground to believe that a particular crime has been committed. By their own improper conduct they thus induce the public authorities to prosecute them. On the trial the state succeeds in making full proof of gross misconduct tending to induce a belief of guilt, but some fact turns up, showing that although the defendant has been guilty of a gross outrage (on morality and justice, he is not technically guilty of the particular offence charged. In such a case, as his gross misconduct had produced the prosecution, it is just that he should pay the costs of it. After the decision of the jury, we are bound to presume that they had some good reason for their verdict. The intimacy of the defendant with Mrs. Carl might have been of such a character as to have given her husband cause for uneasiness and grounds to believe that the offence was committed. That this was the case, may be inferred from the fact that he was the prosecutor. The prosecution may have failed for want of strict legal proof of the defendant's marriage with the lady reputed to be his wife and so recognized by him. In either of these cases it would be just to compel him to pay the costs. These reasons apply as well to an acquittal on the plea of the statute of limitations as to acquittal on other grounds.

But it is alleged that the Court had no jurisdiction, after one plea of the statute had been put in. This is a mistake. The plea touched no question of jurisdiction. It was merely matter of defence which the Court was compelled to try. But it may be said that the indictment on its face, showed that the offence had been committed, if at all more than two years before bill found. Then why not demur? Why put the party to the expense of an issue in fact, when the facts were admitted on the face of the bill itself? If the defendant unnecessarily caused the costs by demanding a trial on a question of fact not in dispute, it is clearly just, that he should pay the costs of such an irregular proceeding.

It appears that a bill was found at November sessions, 1852, and that on the 12th August, 1854, the defendant was found guilty. On the 20th November, 1854, the judgment was arrested. On the 2nd January, 1855, a new bill of indictment was found containing several counts. On the 4th April, 1855, the defendant pleaded, and on the 5th April, 1855, the jury returned the verdict of not guilty, directing him to pay the costs. But a bill of costs amounting to $368 68½ has been filed, including the costs which accrued on both bills. The jury on the second bill had no power over the costs which accrued on the first. They were not only different bills, but it must be intended, in order to sustain the second indictment, that it was not for the same offence. All the costs which accrued on the first bill of indictment must therefore be stricken out of the prosecutor's bill.

It is ordered that the costs of January and April sessions, 1855, amounting to $99 46 be taxed against the defendant below, and that the residue of the prosecutor's bill be stricken out. With this correction the judgment below is affirmed.

HENRY ALBRIGHT v. RALPH LAPP.

A justice has no power to punish contempts summarily by commitment, this power belongs to the higher Courts only.

Error to Common Pleas of Bucks Co.

In England where the office of justice of the peace is invested with more dignity and a larger jurisdiction than with us, the power of punishing contempts by attachment and summary conviction seems not to belong to it. Even the sessions which is a Court of record held by two or more justices, one of whom must be of the quorum has not power to punish disobedience of an order of Court by attachment. King v. Bartlett, 2d Sess. Cases, 291.

Blackstone in his commentaries limits this power to what he styles the "Superior Courts of Justice," and thinks it was derived to them through the medium of Courts of Equity, the whole of whose proceedings were till the introduction of sequestrations, in the nature of process of contempt acting only in personam and not in rem.

In Pennsylvania there has been no legislative grant of this power to justices of the peace. The act of 16th June, 1836, like that which preceded it, relates altogether to the "Courts of the Commonwealth," and that this expression includes only the higher Courts which are in every sense Courts of record and which exercise a Common law or equity jurisdiction is apparent from the specifications of the statute. Thus the disobedience of "officers of such Courts" and of "jurors," and contempts in "open Court," are punishable, but none of these specifications belong to a justice's Court, for in that there are neither officers nor jurors, nor any ceremony which makes it in the sense of the statute an "open Court." And this statute is restrictive. The legislature intended to define with all possible precision the cases in which these higher Courts might exercise the power and to restrain its exercise in all other cases. If they had intended to give it to Justices of the peace, they would have said so and would have limited it as they did in conferring it upon arbitrators.

It is moreover to be considered that justices derive all their judicial powers from legislation. They exercise no Common law powers. In virtue of their commissions they are, as at their first institution, conservators of the public peace, but their judicial functions are such and only such as the legislature have made them and no act has conferred the power of punishing contempts.

In McKinney's justice p. 116, it is said the nature of the office implies the power. There would be great force in this observation if the law afforded no other means of protecting a justice from insult and violence while performing his judicial duties, but it does. In Brooker v. The Commonwealth, 12 S. & R. 175, it was decided by this Court that indictment would lie for a contempt of a justice of the peace, which, though short of a breach of the peace, amounted to an obstruction of his office; and it was suggested by Judge Gibson that the power to hold the offender to bail to answer upon indictment and to be of good behaviour meanwhile, and to commit him in default of bail, rendered it unnecessary to the administration of justice that a justice of the peace should exercise the high power of punishing by attachment which in the hands of many magistrates might become a public grievance. Similar views were expressed by Judge Halliwell in Fidler v. Probasco, 2 Brown, 142.

For more than a hundred and fifty years these remedies have proved adequate for the protection of this important branch of our judicial system (and if the power to punish contempts summarily (which like all irresponsible power is exceedingly liable to abuse), is now to be added it must be done by legislation. Such power wherever claimed and exercised needs a firmer basis to stand on than a judicial implication. If the higher Courts have derived it from Courts of equity, the legislature have defined and limited it, and if the legislature have not defined and limited it in the hands of justices of the peace it is because they have not derived it from Courts of equity or any other source.

We are of opinion, therefore, that the Court were erring in deciding that the justice had jurisdiction to commit for contempt, but they cancelled the error by admitting in evidence the circumstances out of which the alleged contempt grew. These were necessary to enable the jury to assess damages discreetly, and they were admissible because the justice had not jurisdiction to punish for contempt.

The only error in the record having been thus remedied, the judgment is affirmed.

District Court.

Judge Sharswood's Opinions.

SPEAR v ALEXANDER.

This was an action of trover. The defendant was a constable, and under an execution in his hands he had sold a piano, and piano-stool to the plaintiff, who paid the money on the spot and received a bill of sale. The constable said to the plaintiff these are your goods take them away "I have other business, and cannot stay." He remained, however, some twenty minutes, leaving the plaintiff in the house with the goods. After the lapse of some three quarters of an hour, the plaintiff and other purchasers went for a furniture car. When the car came they were enticed out of the house, and the door locked upon them. The constable was sent for and came, but he did not force an entrance, and the plaintiff never got his goods. A demand was made upon the constable the next day, to which his reply was that the goods were not in his possession.

It is unnecessary to decide whether the officer was liable for neglect of duty in not forcing an entrance and taking the goods, because we are clearly of the opinion that there was no evidence of conversion and that the nonsuit was right. Demand and refusal are not conversion but only evidence of it. If the refusal is so—qualified as in itself to rebut the presumption it is of no avail. Where a deed was demanded from the defendant, who said he would not deliver it up, but that it was then in the hands of his attorney who had a lien upon it, this refusal was held not to be sufficient evidence of a conversion; and Lord Ellenborough said that the defendant would have been guilty of a conversion, if the deed had been in his power, but that the intention was not enough. Smith v Young, 1 Campbell, 489. The widow and administratrix of an insolvent, being applied to by his assignees for some papers that had been in his possession at the time of his decease, answered that they were in the hands of her attorney, it was held not sufficient evidence of a conversion to maintain an action of trover. Cavat v Hughes, 2 Bingh. N. C. 449. When there has been no actual conversion of property, a demand and refusal cannot lay a foundation for the action of trover, unless at the time of the refusal, the party has the property demanded in his possession, so that he can comply with the demand. Kelsey v Griswold, 6 Barb. Sup. Ct. 436.

It is said, however, that the legal possession was all along in the constable—and he might have enforced the delivery with sufficient power. The answer is twofold. In the cases cited there was the same legal possession in the defendant, yet a refusal under the circumstances was not enough. It did not show what is required in this action a conversion of the property to the defendant's own use. But more than this, the plaintiff's evidence in this case showed an actual delivery to him, and acceptance by him, and ample time afforded to have at once removed them from the house. Had he requested the constable to remain while he went for assistance, it would have been the officer's duty to have done so. But he chose not to adopt this course, but he chose to loiter for the purpose it would seem of making a bargain with the original owner when he should return.

Motion for new trial dismissed.

BAUGH v MONAGHAN.

Motion for New Trial.

This was an ejection. The plaintiff claimed under a Sheriff's sale as the property of Henry Monaghan. The defendant was a widow, and showed a title in herself prior to the judgment upon which the property was sold. It appeared in evidence that Henry Monaghan had originally taken up a lot on ground rent in his own name, but at the request and for the use of Mr. Husband. He transferred his title to Mr. Husband, but that gentleman having changed his purpose in regard to the lot agreed to reconvey the lot, and at Monaghan's request, the deed was made to his wife. It then appears that she subscribed to certain shares in a building association, and borrowed upon them on a mortgage or mortgages of the lot in question and another property of the husband's money enough to erect a house and store on the lot. These shares were paid for in monthly instalments—and a very large amount had been paid by her subsequently to his death, in regard to which there could be no question that the money was her's. In regard to the moneys paid before his death the evidence was that the husband kept a small liquor store on the premises, and his name was put, but after they moved into the house in question, the grocery business in a small way was united with it, and that the stock to the amount of $200 was procured upon a pledge of the credit of a friend, for Mrs. Monaghan, and for her use. Mrs. Monaghan attended to the business of the store, and from the profits, and the rent of some rooms in the house, she was able to pay up her instalments on the building association claim. It will be seen that the case was somewhat peculiar, and the question of fact having been fairly left to the jury, whether the improvement had been made with the profits of a capital procured for her by the pledge of the credit of a friend—bona fide and without intent to cover her husband's property from his creditors—we do not feel disposed to disturb the finding. At the time of the actual conveyance to the wife, it was of no value. The ground rent received was a full equivalent for the lot. If therefore the wife did truly and bona fide put her own property in the lot, it gave it a value which was in equity the same as an actual purchase. The prospective increase in the value of the ground, was a matter that took nothing out of the pockets of the creditors, if Mary Monaghan's money did not go to pay the ground rent, of which there was no evidence. The question of whether the testimony ought to have satisfied the jury—that the building was erected with the wife's separate property—is one upon which the Judge who tried the case has an opinion, adverse to the finding, but it is not such a strong case as would justify the Court in reversing a verdict given upon the oath of twelve respectable and intelligent men. Rule refused.

PENNYPACKER v BEDELL.

Motion for New Trial.

On a former trial of this cause the jury found for the plaintiff. A new trial was awarded because the Court thought that the plaintiff's evidence if believed did not make out a case. Some additional evidence was given upon this trial, under which it would have been manifestly improper to have nonsuited the plaintiff—but still it was purely a question of fact for the jury in all the evidence whether the defendant had ever consented to become liable as guarantor. In such cases the evidence ought to be very clear and convincing. It is so easy by a slight turn of the expression to make that wear the face of a guarantee which was never intended to be such, and so easy for the plaintiff on the other hand to have it distinct and un-quivocal if he means to act on the faith of it, that a jury does right wherever the evidence leaves the matter doubtful in deciding for the defendant. They have done so in this case and we are not disposed to disturb their verdict. Rule refused.

FRING v BREYMEYER.

Motion for New Trial.

The question of whether the defendant and Reuchlin had made the purchase of plaintiff, or Reuchlin alone, was a question of fact upon which there was abundance of evidence to submit to the jury. After the evidence given of the negotiation by the defendant in person, with the plaintiff's bill of goods made out in defendants own name—and the correspondence admitting the receipt, no conversation between Brey Meyer & Reuchlin, to show that the latter had no authority, could have any bearing. Allow it to have been proved in the strongest manner, if not communicated to plaintiffs it could not have weighed a feather in the controversy. Subsequent to this alleged conversation, defendant receives the goods, accompanied with a bill made out to him in his own name—he writes to the plaintiffs for the certificate of their entry at the Custom House—and he actually sells them.

The only question is, whether Reuchlin's note accepted by plaintiff was payment. All the authorities agree that such acceptance may be explained by parol. The letter of defendant, transmitting the note in payment, and plaintiff's silence, was a presumption that it was so accepted. The jury were told expressly, that whenever it is part of the bargain at the time of a sale, that the note of a third person shall be given, it is prima facie payment until it is rebutted. But surely there was some evidence that Reuchlin had acted as defendant's agent in this purchase. And although his declaration was not evidence in favor of his principal, being mere hearsay, the Court was bound to receive them and submit them to the jury, together with the evidence of his agency in the case, when they were offered against his principal. Reuchlin's letter which was admitted, perfectly explained how his note came to be taken, and if the jury believed the testimony, we think there was evidence from which the jury might well infer that the purchase was made by Reuchlin for defendant, or what is the same thing, on joint account, and that the note was given, as collateral merely and to evidence the claim. Rule refused.

And if exceptions to the granting of any license as aforesaid shall be sustained by said court, the decision of said court shall stand, and the said exceptions the said license may be refused, and shall be endorsed upon the petition, and returned by the clerk of said court to the board of licensers.

Sect. 20. That after the lapse of five days as aforesaid, or as said appeals shall be determined by the court, the said clerk shall make out and issue to the proper persons said licenses, which shall run for one year from the first day of May; but no license shall be issued unless the applicant shall have paid the following fees, to wit: To the clerk of said court for publication of notice and petitions, and for all other services, one dollar, and for all the services of the board of licensers one dollar, which latter amount shall be accounted for and paid over weekly to the respective treasurers of said counties or cities, for the necessary expenses incurred by said board for advertising, stationery, and otherwise. Each member of said board of licensers shall receive five dollars for each day necessarily occupied by him in the discharge of his duties. Provided, That it shall not exceed in any one year the sum of five hundred dollars, and shall be paid upon warrants on the State Treasurer, or on the County Auditor General, in favor of the parties entitled to the same.

Sect. 21. That if any person shall give, bestow, or promise any money, reward, office, or anything of value, to any member of said board of licensers for the purpose of influencing his action in granting any such license, or if any member of said board shall accept the same for his vote or influence, or shall be convicted of any such offense, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof, be fined in a sum not less than one hundred dollars, nor more than five hundred dollars, and suffer imprisonment not less than one month, nor more than three months.

Sect. 22. That every person licensed to sell spirituous, vinous, malt or brewed liquors, or to place the same, shall frame his license under a glass and place the same, so that it may at all times be conspicuous, in his chief place of making sales, and no such license shall authorize sales by any person who shall neglect this requirement.

Sect. 23. That the Commissioners of the several counties, and board of licensers, shall furnish a certified list of all persons so licensed, with the classification, as made out finally determined upon, to the treasurers of their respective counties, or of the city of Philadelphia, as the case may be, who shall within twenty days thereafter transmit to the Auditor General a copy of such list, and shall receive and collect the sums to be paid for said licenses, in the manner directed by law, with any fees payable thereon.

Sects. 24 and 25. Relates to the duties of the Auditor General, and is not of general importance.

Sect. 26. That where any license may be granted as aforesaid, under the classifications of the twelfth, thirteenth and fourteenth sections of this act, it shall not be transferable nor shall it confer the right to sell liquors as aforesaid in any other house, building or place than the one mentioned in the license, nor shall the holder of the same be permitted to use the same in any other place than the one mentioned in the license, and if the party so licensed shall die, remove, or cease to keep said hotel, inn, tavern, eating house or store, the said court may grant a license for the remainder of the year, at any term of the court, to his or her successor who shall comply with the law in other respects, except so far as relates to publishing notice.

Sect. 27. That the number of licenses so granted to keepers of hotels, inns or taverns in the aggregate, shall not exceed in the cities one to every one hundred taxables, nor in the several counties of the State, one to every one hundred and fifty taxables, the number of said taxables to be taken from the returns of the preceding year, and it shall be the duty of the Court of Quarter Sessions of the respective counties, (the city of Philadelphia and the county of Allegheny, excepted where the board of licensers shall perform such duties) immediately after the passage of this act to apportion the aggregate number of hotels, inns or taverns so to be licensed under the provisions hereof, among the cities, boroughs, towns and townships of their respective counties, which apportionment shall be made with reference to the convenience of the public, and the accommodation of strangers, travelers and sojourners; and the said court may from time to time, as occasion may arise, alter, enlarge and change such apportionment. Provided, That the number of licenses to keepers of eating houses shall not exceed in any city or county one-fourth of the number of licenses to keepers of hotels, inns and taverns to which the said city or county may be entitled.

Sect. 28. That any sale made of vinous, spirituous, malt or brewed liquors, or any admixtures thereof, contrary to the provisions of this law, shall be taken to be a misdemeanor, and upon conviction of the offense, in the Court of Quarter Sessions of the peace, of any city or county, the persons so offending shall be sentenced to pay a fine of not less than five dollars, nor more than one hundred dollars, with the costs of prosecution, and to stand committed until the sentence of the court is complied with, not exceeding thirty days; and upon a second, or any subsequent conviction, the party so offending, shall, in addition to the payment of a fine, as aforesaid, undergo an imprisonment in the county jail of not less than one month, nor more than six months, and shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and be incapable of receiving any license as aforesaid, for the period of five years thereafter; and any keeper of any drug or apothecary store, confectionary, or mineral or other fountain, who shall sell any spirituous, vinous, malt, or brewed liquors, mixed or pure, to be used as a beverage, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and liable to conviction and punishment, as aforesaid.

Sect. 29. That any person who shall be found intoxicated in any street, highway, public house or public place, shall be fined upon the view of, or upon proof made before any Mayor, Alderman or Justice of the Peace, not exceeding five dollars, to be levied with the proper costs upon the goods and chattels of the defendant.

Sect. 30. That any person who shall sell spirituous or other intoxicating liquors, as aforesaid, to any person who shall drink the same on the premises where sold, and become thereby intoxicated, shall, besides his liability in damages under any existing law, be fined five dollars for every such offense, to be recovered in debt, before any Alderman or Justice of the Peace, by any wife, husband, parent, child, relative or guardian, or by any person so injured, and levied upon the goods and chattels of the defendant without exemption. Provided, That suits shall not be instituted after twenty days from the commission of the offense in this and the preceding sections.

Sect. 31. That it shall be the duty of the Court, Mayor, Alderman or Justice of the Peace before whom any fine or penalty shall be recovered, to award to the informer or prosecutor, or both a reasonable share thereof for time and trouble, but not in any case exceeding one third, and the residue, as well as the proceeds of all forfeited bonds as aforesaid, shall be paid to the Directors of the Public Schools of the proper district, except in the city of Philadelphia, where they shall be paid to the City Treasurer to be supplied for School purposes, and nothing herein contained shall prevent any such informer or prosecutor from becoming a witness in any such case.

Sect. 32. That no person pursuing exclusively the business of bottler of cider, perry, ale, porter or beer, and not at the same time following or engaging in any way the business of keeping any hotel, inn or tavern, restaurant, oyster house, or place of entertainment, amusement or refreshment, shall be required to take out a license under the provisions of this law. Provided, That such persons shall not sell or deliver said cider, perry, ale, porter or beer in less quantities than a dozen bottles at one time, nor permit any of said liquors to be drunk upon the premises occupied in said business, and any violation of this section shall be punishable as, and in the manner provided in the twenty-eighth section of this act.

And provided further, That producers and manufacturers of domestic wine and cider may sell and deliver the same by any measure not less than five gallons, and in any quantity not less than one dozen bottles, without license therefor.

Sect. 33. That the constables of the respective wards and townships shall make return of retailers of liquors, as now provided by law; and in addition thereto it shall be the duty of every such constable, at each term of the Court of Quarter Sessions of the respective counties, to make return on oath or affirmation, whether within his knowledge, there is any place within his bailiwick kept and maintained in violation of this act, and it shall be the especial duty of the judges of all said courts to see that this return is faithfully made. And if any person shall make known in writing, with his or her name subscribed thereto, to such constable, the name or names of any one who shall have violated this act, with the names of witnesses who can prove the fact, it shall be his duty to make return on oath or affirmation to the Court and upon his willful failure to do so he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon indictment and conviction, shall pay a fine of fifty dollars, and be subject to imprisonment for each month of the Court of not less than ten nor more than thirty days.

Sect. 34. That if any person engaged in the sale or manufacture of intoxicating liquors, as aforesaid, shall employ or permit any intemperate person, in any way to assist in such manufacture or sale, it shall be deemed a misdemeanor, and any person so offending, shall be liable to conviction and punishment, as provided in the 28th section of this act.

Sect. 35. That nothing herein contained shall be construed to impair or alter the provision of an act, approved the 25th day of February, Anno Domini, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five, entitled "An Act to prevent the sale of intoxicating liquors on the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday," not of the not of the tenth of March, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-four; entitled "An Act to protect certain domestic and private rights, and prevent abuses in the sale and use of intoxicating drinks;" and the same are hereby declared to be in full force and effect. Provided also, That any license heretofore granted shall not be hereby invalidated.

A MERITORIOUS CARD.

Hail! honored age of grand progression,
While each one clings to his profession,
And science moves with onward motion,
To suit each wayward thought and notion,
Bringing to light some new invention,
More strange than modern wit can mention,
Or Genius paint with true endeavor,
Though making graphic strides forever,
While Reason urges proud Ambition,
To strive for wondrous Competition;
Yet, in this age of glorious Art,
We can the need of praise impart,
When meritorious efforts claim
A modest puff to gild the name:
And thus we call, with honest pride,
Attention to the Painter's side,—
A man who bravely knows his calling,
Whose works are worthy of extolling,
A model Artist of the day,
And most obliging in his way,
GEORGE H. BANCROFT,—mark the name,
In CHESTNUT STREET you'll find the same,
Call at Five Hundred and Thirty-One,
You'll get the best of painting done,
In Modern or in Classic Order,
From templed shrine to parlor border,
In magic tints of every hue,
To Signs embossed in gold and blue,
Or Figure Head, or Church, or Steeple,
He is resolved to please the people,
And whether foe, or friend or neighbor,
Will charge but moderate for his labor.
We thus invite each one and all,
To give this worthy man a call.
Who will, we venture to engage,
Feel grateful for your patronage.*
* We would particularly invite public attention to our friend Mr. BANCROFT, who is a young, enterprising beginner, and who has gone to vast expense in fitting up his establishment, and is now ready to receive orders for Painting, in all its various branches, at 531 and 533 Chestnut street, 5 doors east of Seventeenth st.

Book VI. Legal Relations of Homicide. Fœticide and Infanticide. A. Elementary Definitions. B. Corpus Delicti. C. Intent and Design. From what to be Inferred.

The following valuable opinions of the work have been received by the Publishers.

From Judge Catron of the U. S. Supreme Court.
"Hardly a stronger guaranty could be afforded to the American Bar that the work has merit, than the fact that Mr. Wharton was author of the legal portion of the book."
JOHN CATRON.

From Professor Parsons of the Cambridge Law School.

"I have not had time to examine it critically, but have read enough to convince me that it is an instructive and valuable work. Some of its topics, which are quite new in a book on this subject, are shown to be among the most important."
THEOPHILUS PARSONS.

From Judge McLean of the U. S. Supreme Court.
"I have not had time to look minutely through the volume, but from the known ability of the authors, and their experience, I am sure the book must be very interesting and useful, not only to the profession of the law, but also to general readers. A modern treatise of this kind, embodying the experience of jurists and medical men, with decisions of courts, was much wanted; and I am satisfied that abler pens than those employed, could not have been engaged in its production."
JOHN MCLEAN.

REPORTS OF THE COMMON LAW COURTS OF ENGLAND.

Containing the cases decided in the Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Nisi Prius Courts, from 1813 to 1855, and in the Court of Exchequer and Exchequer Chamber, from 1824 to 1856, are found in

The Regular and Authoritative Series of the English Common Law and English Exchequer Reports,

Which present the following claims to the support of the profession:

1. They are the only series issued as the authoritative and acknowledged medium by which the decisions of the Law Courts of England are made public.

2. They contain Later Reports than the Boston series, are more fully and more ably reported, and so arranged by preservation of the original paging, that reference by reporters, or by elementary writers, can be traced as readily as in the English editions.

Vol. 2, Ellis & Blackburne's (75 E. C. L. R.,) Reports (Q. B.) to January, 1854, was published by us in June, 1854. At that time the last Queen's Bench case printed in the Boston Law and Equity Reports, was of June 25, 1853. Our volume contained cases decided five months later.

The Queen's Bench cases to November 25, 1853, were published in the Boston series in August, 1854, two months after we had distributed the same cases.

Vol. 3, Ellis & Blackburne, (77 E. C. L. R.,) with cases to the end of Trinity Term, 1854, was published when the latest case of Queen's Bench decisions in the Boston series, was of February 8, 1854, more than four months behind the regular reporters.

Exchequer Reports, vol. 9, (Welshy, Hurlstone & Gordon,) distributed by us January 11, 1855, contains cases to May 10, 1854. The last Exchequer case then in the Boston series was decided February 9, 1854, four months behind the regular Reporter, issued in Philadelphia.

3. They contain more cases decided by the courts represented, than any other series issued in this country.

Vol. 77 English Common Law, (3 E. & B.,) reports eighty-six cases decided in the Queen's Bench since January 11, 1854, while but fifty-eight Queen's Bench cases, decided since January 1, 1854, are found scattered among Vols. 22, 24 and 25 of the Boston Law and Equity.

Vol. 78 E. C. L. K. (5 J. Sooth,) reports sixty-five cases decided since Nov. 13, 1853, in the Common Pleas, while the L. & E. has but fifty-seven cases in that Court since the same period.

Vol. 9 Exchequer Reports, (Welshy, Hurlstone & Gordon,) reports one hundred and ten cases in the Courts of Exchequer, decided since June 24, 1853, while since the same date, the L. & E. report but 107 cases, scattered through vols. 20, 22, 24 and 25.

4. They are almost exclusively cited in argument of counsel, and referred to by Elementary Writers for Law Authorities. See Smith's Leading Cases, Smith's Contracts, Smith's Landlord and Tenant, by Maude; Eyles on Bills and Promissory Notes, Broom's Legal Maxims, Broom's Commentaries on the Laws of England, or almost any recent Law Book issued in England.

5. The Philadelphia Reports are edited by Judge Sharswood and by Judge Hare, whose labors as editors and authors have made them so well and so favorably known to the profession.

6. The Boston Law and Equity is made up in this country from the Law Journal, Jurist, Times and other Law periodicals, of a weekly, monthly, or quarterly character, and being unknown in England, is never cited in Court, or referred to by Law writers. The periodicals from which it is extracted, are occasionally cited under their own particular names, but they do not possess that permanent value, even in England, which is all-important in a series of Reports.

7. A carefully prepared and accurate Annual Digest of all the cases decided by the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Exchequer, will be distributed, early in each year, to subscribers to either series, free of charge. That for 1854 is ready, and will be mailed to subscribers who have not received a copy.

IN PRESS AND IN PREPARATION.

ENGLISH REPORTS IN LAW AND EQUITY. A Complete Collection of the Cases decided by the House of Lords, the Privy Council, the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas and Exchequer, the Lord Chancellor, the High Court of Appeal in Chancery, the Court of Criminal Appeal, and the Admiralty and Ecclesiastical Courts. Reprinted within a few weeks after the decisions are rendered.

This series has the merit of being complete, reliable, prompt, convenient, and cheap. It is now universally cited in the courts, and referred to in the recent law books as standard authority. All the cases reported in England, are here reprinted from the most reliable sources, as soon as they reach this country.

These Reports are now regularly digested in our Annual United States Digest, which thus embraces an annual digest of the whole English and American Law.

We have now in Preparation, and shall soon Publish,

A separate Digest of these Reports, embracing the first thirty-one volumes of the series, prepared with express reference to the convenience of the American profession, and exhibiting a complete synopsis of all the English Decisions reported in those volumes during the last five years; also a Table of Cases referring to all the contemporaneous English Reports. This will be the first Digest of English Decisions prepared expressly for the American Lawyer, and it is intended to give it the same advantages over the English Digests hitherto reprinted in this country, which the American text books have generally been found to possess over the English.

The Law and Equity Reports will be continued on the same plan as heretofore; the number of volumes being reduced to four per year; and Digests will be published from time to time as the convenience of the profession demands.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS. [From the Buffalo Commercial.]

"Unlike the ordinary biographical dictionaries, it is not executed by a dry plodder, or mere literary hack, but is the fruit of the combined labor of some twenty of the most distinguished literary men now living in Great Britain, each writing the articles on such names as had been rendered familiar to him by the character of his studies."

[From the Boston Transcript.] "The names of most of the celebrated authors, architects, artists, composers, capitalists, dramatists, divines, discoverers, engineers, journalists, men of science, ministers, monarchs, novelists, painters, philanthropists, poets, politicians, savans, sculptors, statesmen, travelers, voyagers and warriors of the day are here to be found, with the leading circumstances of their lives recorded."

"It is a most valuable work of reference and will doubtless have a large sale."

[From the Boston Atlas.] "The house of Appleton's have earned for themselves the grateful consideration of the American world of letters, by the republication, though in a greatly improved and enlarged form, of the Cyclopaedia of Biography, recently published by Mr. Rich in London. The American book is issued in a large double-columned octavo volume of over a thousand pages, and is altogether the best biographical dictionary, so far as a combination of completeness and convenience is sought, that we are acquainted with. It supplies an important want to the literary men of this country, and its merits will, we doubt not, be gratefully appreciated by the public."

[From the New York Saturday Courier.] "The typography of this work is on a par with its intrinsic merits, and numerous likenesses and other embellishments materially enhance its value. Every library, private and public, needs a standard work on this subject, and none will be found better adapted either for the student or for popular use than the work under review."

[From the North American.] "The American edition of this work is very copiously and beautifully illustrated with portraits, birthplaces, tombs, and other memorials of the distinguished persons whose memoirs are given; and the work is so thoroughly done that its popularity will soon become an accomplished fact."

[From the Daily Times, Philadelphia.] "This is a beautiful volume of 1,066 pages royal octavo, embellished with some 500 or 600 engravings comprising portraits, birthplaces, tombs, and other memorials of distinguished men. The work is based on a recent English publication, in which but little notice was taken of Americans. The present edition supplies that deficiency; and, in editing it, Dr. Hawks has followed the original plan of assigning particular classes of characters to such American writers as were best qualified, from their peculiar studies, to furnish good memorials of them."

[From the Boston Advertiser.] "A well arranged volume like this is of acknowledged use to all readers or students. One which gave only the principal dates of the lives of distinguished persons would be of great value, as it would put the reader in the track of other sources of information. But this work does much more, and will be received as a most valuable and interesting addition to all libraries."

[From the Worcester Palladium.] "The uninitiated public can have but a faint idea of the immense labor through which this accuracy is obtained; and, therefore, it is fully prepared to award a full measure of justice to the patient industry and sound scholarship that make such a contribution as this to the literature of a people."

China and Glass Painting executed in a superior manner, and warranted not to CRACK. Ceilings cleaned and whitened, and made equal to new, at a cost little over that of whitewash. The subscriber would state here that it frequently occurs that persons attempt to use this article who have no knowledge of it whatever, either in the mixing or putting it on, and the consequence is, the job is spoiled, and the article condemned without a proper trial. - So also with CHINA GLOSS; to make a good job it requires a practical knowledge of the use of the brush, as also the making of the Gloss. In regard to the ZINC WHITE, the subscriber would most respectfully recommend it as an article far superior to any other paint now in use, for whiteness and durability of color.

The Subscriber would respectfully solicit a portion of the patronage of those getting Painting done. Feeling grateful for the many favors already bestowed by his friends, he still hopes to share their patronage by unremitting attention to their calls. Those who have large contracts to give out, need have no hesitancy in calling, as he is prepared to give every satisfaction in regard to work, both in reference and security, for the faithful performance of all agreements.

EDITOR OF THE LEGAL INTELLIGENCER:—

I promised another communication on the subject of the office of the Attorney General. It shall be brief. Perhaps it is not difficult to give a reason for the customary mode of appointment formerly existing. The King of England, being the fountain of justice, as well as of honor, according to the theory of the British Constitution, appointed his Attorney General, to aid with counsel, and to prosecute the pleas of the Crown. It was natural that the Proprietary of the province, representing to a certain extent the offices of his sovereign, and invested with power, as well as enjoined by his charter, to administer justice, should appoint his Attorney General after the manner of the Crown. The 5th section and other parts of the charter of Charles the Second furnished ample power for this purpose.

The first appointment of an Attorney General, I have discovered, will be found in Vol. 1, Col. Records, p. 31, 26th, 8 mo., 1683; when at a Proprietary Council "John White was made Attorney General to plead the cause between our Proprietary and Government, and Charles Pickering and Samuel Buckley," for making and passing counterfeit "Spanish Bits." By the way, this coin is yet known in the West by the name of "bit" or "elevenpenny bit." On page 40, 1 Col. Rec, it is recorded that the governor charged the Grand Jury, and the Attorney General attended with the presentment of Margaret Matson for witchcraft. The jury brought in their verdict "guilty of having the common fame of a witch, but not guilty in manner and form as she stands indicted." The trials were heard 27th 12th mo., 1683, before the Governor and Council and a jury.

By the 20th section of the Constitution of 1776, the President and Council, who were the Supreme Executive of the Commonwealth, were empowered to appoint the Attorney General." The 8th section, 2d article of the Constitution of 1790, provided that the Governor should "appoint all officers whose offices are established by this constitution, or shall be established by law, and whose appointments are not herein otherwise provided for;" and the 1st section of the schedule provided that "all laws of this commonwealth in force at the time of making the said alterations and amendments in the said constitution, and not inconsistent therewith, shall continue as if the said alterations and amendments had not been made."

At the adoption of the Constitution of 1790, it is true there was not any Act of Assembly specifically creating the office of Attorney General, but the office then had acquired a clear legal existence by proprietary custom, continued by the Constitution of 1776, vesting the appointment in the President and Council. After the Constitution of 1790 was adopted, the legislative recognition is to be seen in the acts quoted in my former article. The office therefore, may be considered as having been "established by law," so as to support the appointments of the Governor under the 8th section, 2d article of the Constitution of 1790.

The practice of the government from 1790 till 1838 and the legislative recognition in so many laws, leave no doubt of the validity of the exercise of the power by the Governor when the amended constitution of 1838 was adopted. The 11th section of the schedule provides that "the appointing power shall remain as heretofore, and all officers in the appointment of the executive department, shall continue in the duties of their respective offices, until the Legislature shall pass such laws as may be required by the 8th section of the 6th article of the amended constitution, and, until appointments shall be made under such laws, unless their commissions shall be superseded by new appointments or shall soon expire by their own limitations, or the said offices shall become vacant by death or resignation, and such laws shall be enacted by the first Legislature under the amended constitution." The Attorney General's appointment not being provided for in the constitution, it became the duty of the Legislature of 1839 to direct by law, how he should be appointed, and for what term. The Legislature failed to comply with the injunction, and so the matter now stands, resting upon the 11th section of the schedule, and the construction given to it by the Supreme Court in the Commonwealth v. Swift, 4 Wharton, 186. I know of no other ground upon which the present power of the Governor to appoint and to remove can stand; and certainly the case calls for the legislation contemplated in the schedule.

Supreme Court.

COMMONWEALTH ex. rel. TYLER v.

SMALL.

Opinion of Judge Lowrie.

The Supreme Court has jurisdiction of a question involving the right to an office in the Militia of the State, as well as to any other office or franchise.

The Commander-in-Chief has no authority to review or alter the decision of the Board of Officers appointed by Law, to try a case of contested election for Brigadier-General.

The writ of quo warranto is the proper remedy to try the right to a military office.

However much we may desire to get clear of any jurisdiction over questions of title to military offices, we cannot consider such a jurisdiction anomalous; for it is involved in the very nature of a state. That the government instituted by it must be supreme in relation to all the offices, authorities and instrumentalities by which it performs its functions; it must supervise them all, and their legitimacy depends upon its regular recognition of them. This is made emphatically the case, relative to all military offices and jurisdictions by the declaration of the constitution, that "the military shall, in all cases and at all times, be in strict subordination to the civil power." It is not a department of the government, but only an instrument by which the will of the government may be executed in a portion of its duties. No military officer can have any authority that is not given him by the civil law, or sanctioned by military customs, that are recognized as laws by the civil authorities.

Though we leave the actual organization of the military power chiefly to itself; yet its organic law is prescribed by the legislature, and and it can do nothing beyond the act of organization, except under the direction and control of the civil power. Even in its acts of organization we have not been able to detach it from contact at many points, with the civil system, and have not attempted to do it. All its elections and contested elections are reported to the civil government and thence issue all its commissions. It has its own courts, deciding conclusively upon most of matters relating to its organization or to breaches of its organization, but their authority is derived entirely from the civil government, and their acts can have no force without its sanction, express or implied. The civil courts do not review their proceedings, yet they may have to inquire into their jurisdiction and constitution.

In the very nature of things, the supreme government must settle all disputes arising among subordinate functionaries, and the main question here is, where, in our system of government and in this sort of dispute is this supremacy deposited. The principles already announced show plainly enough that, even if the Governor has it, it is not by virtue of his military office of Commander in Chief; but by virtue of his civil office of Governor, unless, as a part of the military order, a revisory jurisdiction has been vested in him by the civil power, over the military tribunal to which this dispute is committed by law. His power of command involves no power of appointment to office, as our whole civil and military system clearly shows. And if he is not constituted by act of assembly the judge of the right to a military office, then this jurisdiction must be sought elsewhere.

In the last resort this supremacy is, of course, in the people of the state, and we are to inquire to what functionaries they have entrusted its administration. The state allows each brigade to elect its own General; how does it provide that a contested election shall be tried? The act of 1822, s. 20, says it shall be by a board of officers consisting of the Major General or senior officer of the division, and two other field-officers thereof. They are to hear the case and "either confirm or set aside any such election as the justice of the case may require, and make report thereof to the proper authority." The fact that the law requires all election returns of military officers to be made to the Secretary of the Commonwealth, seems to make it very clear that he is "the proper authority" intended, and to him the report was made in this case.

It is argued that, because the board of officers are bound to report to the Secretary of the Commonwealth, this gives him or the Governor a right to review and set aside the report. But this is a very great mistake; for this order is adopted only that the Secretary may be duly informed who are entitled to commissions, and he is merely a ministerial officer in issuing them. Military elections have nothing peculiar in this respect, for all officers that require a commission are thus certified to the Secretary, and it is done as evidence of title to the commission, and that there may be a regular record of them at the seat of government. These purposes are sufficient to account for the regulation, without inferring that it gives any revisory authority.

The right of a board of officers, confirming or setting aside a contested election, is a part of the same machinery, and is sent to the Secretary for the same purpose. The fact that a military election or contested election is to be reported to the Secretary, does not give him or the Governor a right to review it, any more than a similar proceeding in relation to a civil office, gives him that right. His duty in relation to it is performed when he has issued the commission and recorded the fact. The Governor signs the commission as Governor and not as Commander in Chief.

Indeed, the law is express that such is the effect of the report of the board of officers; for it declares that "the commission shall be void and the office vacant," as the effect of a report setting aside the election. Besides this, no such control is given to the Governor over the sentences of Court's martial, except in the single case of the trial of a Major General, and there it is expressly given, to him or the next and only superior officer in the military order. And when we further consider that the acts of 1822 and 1849 were intended to provide a complete militia system, we find ourselves entirely excluded from adding anything to it by implication, that is not essential to its operation.

With such clear light to guide us it is impossible that the remote analogies attempted to be drawn from other military systems in favor of the power of the Commander in Chief can make any impression on our minds. We are clear of all doubt that the supreme authority for trying this contested election was the board of officers, and not the Governor, and that their decision against the right of Wm. F. Small to the office of Brigadier General is conclusive.

The question now arises, by what authority shall the usurper of a military office be excluded? An office is a right to some public employment, and the occupation of it is as much the invasion of a right as is the wrongful entry into another person's land, and it seems quite natural to suppose that it is to be remedied by that department of the government which has the general jurisdiction of questions of disputed rights. The usual form of remedy for the trial of such questions is the process of quo warranto, the common law definition of which is, that it is in the nature of a writ of right of the public against him who usurps any office, franchise or liberty, to inquire by what authority he supports his claim, in order to determine the right, and this is a judicial remedy.

Military offices certainly fall within this definition of the remedy, and this is quite consistent with the strict subordination of the military to the civil power which the constitution requires. In a civil or military system where the crown is the source of all office, and no one can act at all as an officer without its sanction; the interference of the judiciary is entirely inappropriate in relation to official titles; its authority is exercised only when the right to an office is derived from some subordinate source, regulated by law, and not by the will of the sovereign. In the latter case it is not needed, for there is another adequate and more prompt remedy. But even where the right to all military offices is derived from the crown, the writ of prohibition issued by a civil court, most sternly restrains all action of military and naval courts to their jurisdiction as it is recognised by the civil power: and all acts done by them, in excess of such jurisdiction, are treated as void; all which necessarily involves the jurisdiction of the courts to investigate military conduct and authority. Under our system the law is substantially the same. Even the military fines which may be imposed, are all or nearly all to be collected by means of the courts or other civil officers.

It is said that such an exercise of jurisdiction as is here demanded was never heard of before; but this argument amounts to nothing, unless it can be shown that the sentence of a board of officers trying a contested election, has ever before been attempted to be set aside by any officer. And then it would have very little weight, unless it should be shown that such was the usual interpretation of the law, and the practice under it.

The purpose of this process is to try the title to a military office; and why should this not be tried by the same tribunals that try the titles to most other offices? They all issue from the same sources, and are all parts or instruments of the same State Government. If the right to a civil and higher offices may be tried in this way? why may not the military and subordinate offices be thus tried, if no other mode of settling the difficulty is provided? There is certainly nothing in the nature of military offices that makes it more strange, that the judiciary should decide upon the title to them, than upon that of supervisors of roads, overseers of the poor, or other county, township or corporation functionaries. In all of them alike, it is the mere performance of the ordinary duty of applying the law to the facts, and declaring what the law requires under given circumstances. In the present case we have nothing to decide, after ascertaining our duty to decide anything, except that the law makes the decision of the board of officers, in the case of a contested military election, conclusive for or against the title to the office.

It is supposed that our jurisdiction cannot extend to such cases, because we cannot order a military election, as the law contemplates that we may do, in proper cases for a quo warranto. But why can we not, when the law says we may? We have no more power to order civil than military elections, except in carrying out the process of quo warranto; and then we have power, if the law says so. It is said that, according to law the Major General must order this election, then our order would issue to him, just as, in civil cases, it would issue to the Sheriff or other officer, any of whom would act independently of the court in other cases. Even if the court should pass out of the regular form for conducting military elections, it would not be surprising; for its interference takes place only when the regular form has been disregarded and the whole case has become an exception to the general of the law.

We do not try this contested election, for it has already been tried according to the forms prescribed by law, and we only decide that that trial has determined that Wm. F. Small was not duly elected Brigadier General, and has no title to the office. He sets up in avoidance of that decision, that the Commander in Chief reviewed it and set it aside, and gave him his commission. As civil judiciary we decide that the jurisdiction of the Commander in Chief does not extend to such; he is not an appellate court for such a purpose; but the Board of officers is supreme, and their decision we must enforce.

The relator shows sufficient evidence of title in himself to authorize him to institute this proceeding, 2 T. R. 259. 6 Ad. & E. 348. 7 id. 215, 419, 966. He acquired it at a subsequent election, and if that is not contested on any other grounds than the supposed validity of the prior election, then of course he is entitled to the office. But his title grows out of a different transaction from the one on which the defendants is rested, and is not directly involved in the true issue here, and we give no judgment in relation to it.

March 10th, 1856. This cause came on to be heard at the present term, on the pleadings, and was argued by counsel. Wherefore it is considered and adjudged by the court here that the said William F. Small do not in any manner intermeddle with or concern himself about the said office of Brigadier General of the second Brigade in the first division of Volunteers, but that he be ousted and altogether excluded from exercising or using the same for the future; and that the said John Tyler Jr, the relator, do recover against the said Wm. F. Small his costs by him expended in this behalf.

Dissenting Opinion by Judge Black.

I do not think we have jurisdiction of this question. Believing that we have no authority to interfere I would of course abstain from expressing any opinion on the legality of the Governors act in setting aside the decision of the Board of Officers.

THE COUNTY OF WAYNE v. THE COMMONWEALTH.

Opinions by Lewis, C. J.

If the jury in the criminal case had merely directed the defendant to pay the costs accrued on the Court's charging him with misdemeanors, a different question would have been presented from that now before us. But as the verdict now stands, the defendant was acquitted of a high felony and yet ordered to pay the costs. Neither Courts nor juries have any power to impose costs on defendants in such cases. The learned President of the Common Pleas has shown in a satisfactory manner that the county is properly chargeable with the costs. She cannot escape that liability by pleading such a sentence of the defendant as that stated in this case, because she was no party to it. She is neither bound nor benefitted by it. The defendant can relieve himself from it by writ of error whenever he thinks proper.

Judgment affirmed.

THIRD PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, vs.
STELLER.

The equity of a mechanic's lien upon a building is founded upon the labor and materials furnished by him in constructing it. That the land on which the building stands goes with the building, in case of a sale, is the result of necessity, because the building cannot be enjoyed without it. The legislative provisions are founded on that necessity, and do not change the character of the lien in this respect. It is not founded on any contract with the owner of the land. It is not necessarily one of his debts. It may be created by a contractor who has already received from the owner full compensation for furnishing the materials and erecting the building. Attaching itself to the building, and depending upon it for existence, the lien must necessarily share the fate of the building. No amount of labor or materials furnished for the erection of a building would create a lien if no building should be erected. So, if the building, after erection, should be destroyed by accident, before the ground on which it stood passed to a purchaser, the lien would be gone. The reason for binding the land is gone with the building. Any other construction would defeat one of the objects of the law, which was to promote the improvement of the country by encouraging mechanics and material men to furnish labor and materials for erecting buildings. But if the lien continues on the land, after the building is destroyed, how are those who erect the new building on the premises to be protected? Their equity against it is undoubtedly superior to the claims upon the building that was destroyed. And yet the latter, if they exist at all, must be preferred to the former. Under such a rule all further improvement on the premises might be prevented. In this case the Court held that a mechanic's lien against a former building was good against one erected afterwards, although neither the labor nor materials on which the claim is founded were performed or furnished for the building thus charged. In this, we think, there was error. It follows, from what has already been said, that the equity of the claim does not extend to the ground, except when it becomes necessary to the enjoyment of the building. The words of the statute are in accordance with this principle. They give the lien upon the "building" alone, in the first place, and then by a subsequent section this lien is declared to "extend to the ground covered by such building, and to so much other ground immediately adjacent thereto and belonging in like manner to the owner of such building as may be necessary for the ordinary and useful purposes of such building." The words "such building" refer exclusively to the building for which the materials were furnished and work done, and to no other. When the ground ceases to be "covered" by "such building," before the lien is filed, the lien ceases as a matter of course. Judgment reversed and judgment entered here for the plaintiff in error.

District Court.

DONNELLY v. SWAIN.—THE LAW OF LIBEL.

Opinion by Judge Hare.

Malice is of the essence of every action of slander; and all evidence tending to disprove malice by showing how and under what circumstances the defendant came to make the charge for which he is sued, might seem directly pertinent to the issue in hand; but this is far from being universally or even generally true. The law in this, as in many other instances, has to choose between opposing evils and reject much which might conduce to the discovery of truth, in order to prevent the intrusion of error. It is well settled, and long experience has abundantly ratified the wisdom of the rule, that a defendant who means to rely on the truth of the accusation which he has made, as a justification for uttering it must set forth all that he is about to prove formally by a plea or notice, and thus give the plaintiff the means of knowing the grounds on which his character is assailed, before coming into court to defend it. Stoever v. Behler, 1 Miles, 146; Smith v. Richardson, Willis, 20; Underwood v. Parks, 2 Strange, 1200. The protection which this rule is designed to afford, can only be secured by enforcing it strictly, and would obviously be lost or endangered, if the defendant were at liberty to adduce facts or circumstances impugning that which he is unable to prove, and thus subject the plaintiff's character to a trial more dangerous, and less susceptible of being repelled by proof, than any direct charge. Hence the law has always looked with disfavor, in actions of slander or libel, on all evidence which tends to do that under cover, which has not been done openly, and induce a belief in the plaintiff's guilt, without affording him an opportunity of establishing his innocence. On the other hand, judges have found it difficult to shut their eyes to the obvious injustice of refusing a defendant who has been deceived by delusive appearances of wrong, or by unfounded allegations made by those in whom he placed confidence, all means of showing how he came to commit the error into which he has fallen; and compelling him to stand mute before the jury, in the same attitude with a wilful and malicious slanderer, who has spoken solely from the malignity and falsehood of his own heart. Few men are so cautious as never to be led by what they hear from others, to say that which they cannot substantiate with the strictness of legal proof, and thus incur a risk of being made answerable in an action of slander, from which they are only saved by the discretion of those with whom they converse, or the protection which good faith gives to social intercourse. Hence a number of cases may be found, which take the position, that circumstances explaining and palliating the origin of a slander, without justifying or establishing its truth, may be proved in mitigation of damages, although necessarily inefficient as a bar to the action. It is impossible to deny that this course of decision is attended with many dangers, nor that it tends to encroach on the integrity of the rule which forbids the truth to be proved without a plea or notice of justification; for what security can be given, that the defendant will not repeat and evenom the slander, under the pretence of showing that it originated in a mistake, or that facts which produced belief in his mind may not have the same effect on that of the jurors, although professedly offered for another purpose? But if the admission of such evidence may sometimes prejudice the plaintiff, its rejection must always be unjust to the defendant, by confounding the distinctions between indiscretion and malice, and refusing those whose only offence is an honest repetition of an unfounded charge, all means of showing that they do not stand in the position of malicious slanderers. The jury are the primary, and indeed almost the sole judges of the measure of damages, and should be treated with the confidence due to the responsible office which they hold, and not deprived of any aid which can conduce to its proper fulfilment. To shut out light bearing directly on the point at issue, because some eyes may be too weak or infirm to bear it, is surely to err from excess of caution.

But, whatever the true rule on this somewhat difficult question may be, we are relieved from the necessity of discovering it for ourselves, by the authority of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, which has gone quite as far as any other superior tribunal, in permitting evidence to be given of the cause or occasion of a libel in mitigation of damages, in cases where the defendant is unable or unwilling to plead and prove the truth as a justification. It was held as far back as Kennedy v. Gregory, 1 Binney, 85, that an allegation that the plaintiff was given to drink, or was said to be given to drink, might be proved to be a mere repetition of statements previously made by others, although some doubt was expressed whether the evidence would have been admissible, had the charge been shown to have been made positively, and not as matter of hearsay. In the subsequent case of Morris v. Duane, Chief Justice Tilghman, gave the weight of his authority to this doctrine, which he carried still farther, by ruling that the editor of a newspaper, might prove that he had been led to print an unfounded accusation against the plaintiff, by finding an anonymous letter stating the grounds on which it was based; and thus show that his conduct had been the result of negligence and indiscretion, and not of a settled and deliberate purpose to injure. And the Chief Justice, at the same time, also intimated an opinion, that actual malice and falsehood may be disproved by evidence of facts or circumstances, which have induced a belief in the plaintiff's guilt, and yet are not of a nature to prove its existence. The doctrine thus laid down at Nisi Prius, was adopted and applied many years afterwards, by the Court in bano, who held that a defendant in an action of slander may show that he was led to speak the words complained of by statements made to him by others, or by facts which have fallen under his own observation, if the evidence, as a whole, does not substantiate the slanderous charge, and would not be a defence under a plea of justification. (Beehler v. Stoever, 1 Miles, 146; 2 Wharton, 3, 14.) The generality of the rule thus established, has been limited by subsequent decisions, which explain and qualify, without overturning it; and the law of this State would now seem to be, that the right of the defendant to shield and exonerate himself, by explaining the motives on which he acted, will not fail merely because the evidence which he adduces is derogatory to the plaintiff, unless it is of a nature to establish the charge for which he seeks to recover. The defendant may, for the purpose of mitigating the damages, (said Sergeant J., in Petrie v. Rose, 5 W. & S., 364,) "show that the cause and occasion of uttering the words, were circumstances of suspicion known by him, or circulated and acknowledged by the plaintiff, and communicated to the defendant; for these tend directly to excuse or extenuate the conduct of the party, and affect the amount of damages." Similar ground was taken in Minnesinger v. Kerr, (9 Barr, 312), where the defendant, who had charged the plaintiff with stealing his boards, was held entitled to show that he had actually taken them, but under such circumstances as to be a mere trespass, and not a felony; and the judgment of the Court below was reversed, for the exclusion of the evidence. These cases may not be altogether reconcilable with Updegrove v. Zimmerman, (1 Harris, 619), but they are cited and relied on in Chapman v. Calder, (2 Harris, 365), which also establishes a point of some moment in the present inquiry, that the truth of a privileged communication may be proved under the general issue, without a plea or notice of justification.

The application of these principles would seem to show, that the plaintiff has no cause for complaint, in the course taken at the trial of the case now before us. Among a number of offers which were rejected, the defendants made two which they succeeded in laying before the jury. These, viewed together, are in fact one, and amount in substance to an allegation that the accusation against the plaintiff was made through mistake, and without malice, on the faith of a charge preferred by his wife at the police station, and before Alderman Clements, in consequence of which he was bound over to appear and answer at Court. It must be conceded, that no circumstance can be more potent, in extenuation of an unfounded accusation against another, than the fact that it is a repetition of a charge made on oath before the constituted authorities, on which they have acted.

In one point of view, therefore, these offers clearly came within the rule, which permits the occasion of a libel or a slander, to be proved in mitigation of the wrong. And they would seem to have been equally admissible in every other, because they did not contain any single original fact of a nature to show, that the plaintiff was guilty of the offence with which he was charged, and were limited solely to what took place in the course of the proceedings instituted against him, after the period at which it was said to have been committed. Perhaps no better instance could be given of that sort of evidence, which adducing nothing which could prove one party guilty, yet serves to explain how the other came to believe in his guilt; and is consequently admissible under the course of decision which I have already cited. Nor would it be easy to find any case better fitted to justify the existence of such a rule, or which would go further to make us regret its absence did it not exist. A charge is preferred in a magistrate's office, under the sanction of an oath, by one who is necessarily well acquainted with the facts, which excites a sentiment of indignation in those who hear it, and thus leads them to denounce the supposed culprit in the strong language, which every man of heart would be disposed to apply to his fault. He is not really guilty, or cannot be proved to be so, and those who have repeated the accusation made against him, are justly chargeable with the consequences of that which is certainly an imprudence, and may be a wrong. But can it be said, that they are not entitled to prove the circumstances, which have led them into the false position which they occupy, and show how greatly it differs from that of a wanton and malignant traducer of another's fame? Or can it be right to preclude the jury, who are to pass sentence upon the wrong done on one side, and the injury inflicted on the other, from viewing the transaction as a whole, and moulding their verdict according to its real merits? The remote but efficient cause of the injury sustained by the plaintiff, lay in his own ill-regulated conduct, or in that of his wife, and his character was already seriously assailed before the defendants took part in the controversy. Is the wrong done by them, or the injury inflicted by it on him, the same in nature or degree that it would have been had they invented or published a merely groundless slander? If it be not, should not they have an opportunity to show it, or should the Court do an immediate and certain injustice to them to prevent a possible and hypothetical mis-application of the evidence by the jury? Can the liability to abuse take away a legitimate use, or the apprehension of error justify the exclusion of truth? It must be remembered, that the rejection of this evidence in mitigation of damages, under the plea of not guilty, would have shut it out altogether, unless the defendants were able to plead and prove the truth of the libel, in every particular, which was manifestly impossible in a case where a wife was the only witness who could be called to establish the truth of the charge, which she had made against her husband. Admitting the question, therefore, to be a choice among difficulties, the course taken at the trial would seem to have been the best in itself as it was certainly the most consistent with the weight of authority in Pennsylvania. It may be, that some of the evidence given under the offers made by the defendants was inadmissible, or only admissible in some aspects and not in others. But it would be too much to ask a judge who has decided on the validity of an offer of evidence, to cut short every answer made by a witness, which exceeds his ruling, or forbid every question put by counsel, which fails without the proposition which he has obtained leave to establish. The proper remedy in such cases, lies in a specific objection at the time, or a request that the jury may be told to disregard the evidence subsequently. When this is not done, the Court can only do what it did in the present instance, give general instructions as to the legal operation and effect of what has been said, and then leave the rest to the judgment and capacity of the jurors. I have said nothing hitherto on a point which would seem to merit some attention. The libel published by the defendants consisted of two distinct allegations; one, that the plaintiff had made an assault on his wife, the other, that she had accused him of having done so, and that he had been bound over to appear and answer the charge in Court. The defendants contended at the trial that they had a right, as conductors of a public journal, to publish an account of the proceedings in the magistrate's office, and under the authority of Chapman vs. Calder, 2 Harris, 365, give the truth in evidence on the general issue, to show that they have not exceeded their privilege. And it was said that as the right to take this course would have been clear, had the latter branch of the libel stood alone, they could not be shut out from pursuing it, because other matters existed to which it was inapplicable. On this point, however, we express no opinion, and refuse the rule for a new trial on the ground already stated.

District Court.

Judge Sharswood's Opinions.

WETHERILL v. CURRY.

In an ejectment by a purchaser at Sheriff's Sale, against the original defendant in possession, he cannot set up a title in a third person.

The purchaser is entitled to defendant's possession at least.

This was an ejectment; the plaintiff was the Sheriff's vendee, Curry was the defendant in the original judgment; by an order of Court upon a formal petition and affidavit filed. Hannah Raymond had been admitted as landlord to defend upon the allegation that Curry was her tenant.

In making that order, however, the Court did not look into the plaintiff's title, and of course did not prejudice the question, whether the title of Hannah Raymond could be made use of in this case.

Nothing is better settled than that whatever may be the interest of the defendant, whether it be a term for years or a fee, it passes by the sale, and in an ejectment by the Sheriff or vendee against the original defendant, he cannot set up an outstanding title in a third person, Young v. Algeo, 3 Watts, 223. When the Sheriff sells the lands of a defendant in a judgment, who is in possession, he cannot make any defence against the purchaser, as the latter acquires a right to the defendant's possession at least, which will support ejectment against him. Dennison's Appeal, 31 Barr, 201. Snively v. Wagner, 3 Barr, 275.

Whether the tenant in possession in such case can set up as a defence, that the plaintiff had purchased as a trustee for him or his landlord has never been expressly decided. In this case there was no evidence whatever, that the defendant did hold as the tenant of Hannah Raymond, nor was there any evidence that the purchase by plaintiff at the Sheriff's sale was in trust.

It is true that there was evidence that plaintiff was a Trustee for H. Raymond, prior to the Sheriff's sale; that sale was upon an old mortgage, and there was no evidence to show that the plaintiff had anything to do with procuring a sale upon it. The bond accompanying it had been entered up, and upon adversary proceedings the sale had taken place. Until the cases of Provost v. Gratz, 1 Pet. C. C., Rep. 375—and Fisk v. Sarber, 6 W. & S. 18, which establish that a trustee may purchase at a public sale, property taken out of his hands by the process of the law, and hold the same discharged of the trust, shall be overruled, whatever we may think of the soundness or policy of the exception to the general principle there recognized, we are bound to apply it in the cases which come before us. They take away all pretence of title in Hannah Raymond, even admitting that the defendant would have a right to set up that title in the present proceeding, we think therefore, that the direction of the Court to the jury to find a verdict for the plaintiff was right.

LAWS OF PENNSYLVANIA.

THE LICENSE BILL.

The 8th Section of the New License Bill, as published in last week's paper, was incorrect—below we give the correct Section—together with the 24th and 28th Sections which were omitted.

SECTION 8.

That every person intending to apply for a license in any city or county of this Commonwealth, from and after the passage of this act, shall file with the clerk of the Court of Quarter Sessions of the proper county, his, her or their petition, at least three weeks before presenting the same in court or to the board of licensers as the case may be, and shall at the same time pay said clerk twenty-five cents for publishing notice thereof, and said clerk shall cause to be published three times in two of the newspapers of the proper city or county, a list containing the names of all such applicants, their respective residences and kinds of license. If not more than one newspaper be published in any city or county, then said publication in it shall be sufficient, but if no newspaper be printed in any city or county, then the publication shall be by printed handbills, in such a manner as the court may prescribe, and whether by handbills or advertisement, the first publication shall be at least ten secular days before the time fixed by the courts as aforesaid; and in the case of hotels, inns, or taverns and eating houses, the petition shall embrace a certificate, signed by at least twelve reputable citizens of the ward, borough or township in which such hotel, inn or tavern is proposed to be kept, or if there be less than fifty taxables in any borough or township, by six such citizens, setting forth that the same is necessary to accommodate the public and entertain strangers or travelers, and that such person is of good repute for honesty and temperance, and is well provided with house room, as hereinafter prescribed, and conveniences for the accommodation of strangers and travellers: Provid That where there shall not be sufficient time between the passage of this act and the next session of the said court thereafter, in any county, to file petition and make publication as aforesaid, the said court shall order a special or adjourned session at an early day, at which licenses may be granted.

Section 24. That it shall be the duty of the auditor general to charge the said city or county treasurers, as the case may be, with the amount payable by the several persons in said lists, from the payment of any part of which amount said treasurers shall only be exonerated, by producing satisfactory evidence to the department that the party or parties, so returned, failed to obtain a license as aforesaid.

Section 25. That it shall be the duty of the auditor general to return to the legislature annually, in the month of January, a statement, arranged in a tabular form, of the number and classification and license rates of all importers, brewers and distillers, keepers of hotels, inns or taverns, eating houses, and vendors of vinous, spirituous and malt or brewed liquors, either with or without other goods, wares and merchandize, designating each county separately.

AN ACT for the more effectual preservation of life and property from damages by the explosion of Gunpowder and Gun Cotton in the city of Philadelphia.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same. That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to have or keep any quantity of gunpowder or gun cotton in any house, store, shop, building, cellar or other place within the city of Philadelphia (except in the public magazines, or in a quantity not exceeding two pounds for private use) unless in the manner herein after provided.

Section 2. That it shall be lawful for the mayor of the city of Philadelphia to grant licenses under the official seal of said city to any person or persons desirous to sell gunpowder or gun cotton therein. The person or persons so licensed, shall not be protected against any of the penalties or consequences hereinafter provided for violations of this act, except while they have on some conspicuous part of the front of each of the houses or buildings in which they may be licensed to sell gunpowder or gun cotton under this act, a sign on which shall be distinctly painted in letters legible to persons passing such houses or buildings, the words "licensed to sell gunpowder" or "licensed to sell gun cotton," and shall pay into the City Treasury the sum of five dollars for said license.

Section 3. That every carriage used for conveying gunpowder or gun cotton within the city of Philadelphia, in accordance with the provisions of the acts now in force relative thereto, shall, in addition to the requirements therein contained, have painted on each side thereof in letters distinctly legible to all passers by, the word "gunpowder," and any failure so to do, shall subject the offender or offenders to the penalties herein contained, for the violations of this act.

Section 4. That in every case of a violation of any provision of this act relative to the keeping of gunpowder or gun cotton, or in every case of the violation of any of the provisions of the acts now in force, relative to the introduction into the city of Philadelphia, of gunpowder or gun cotton, it shall be lawful for any of the trustees of the Philadelphia Association for the relief of Disabled Firemen to seize such gunpowder or gun cotton in the day-time, and to convey or cause the same to be conveyed to any magazine used for the storing of gunpowder.

Section 5. That whenever any inhabitant of the said city shall make oath or affirmation, describing as nearly as may be, the place to be searched, and the things to be seized, before the Mayor or any alderman, of any fact or circumstance which, in the opinion of the said Mayor or alderman, shall afford probable cause of belief that any gunpowder or gun cotton has been brought into or is kept within the said city or in the harbor thereof, contrary to the provisions of this act or any of the provisions of the acts now in force, relative to the introduction of gunpowder or gun cotton into the city of Philadelphia, it shall be lawful for the said Mayor or alderman to issue his warrant or warrants under his hand and seal, to any sheriff, marshal, constable, or other fit person commanding him or them to search for such gunpowder or gun cotton in the daytime, whosoever the same may be in violation of said acts, and to seize and take possession of the same if found, and to convey or cause the same to be conveyed forthwith to any magazine used for storing gunpowder.

Section 6. That all actions or suits for the recovery of any gunpowder or gun cotton which may have been seized and stored in any magazine by virtue of the provisions of this act, or for the value thereof, or for damages sustained by the seizure or detention thereof, shall be brought against the Philadelphia Association for the relief of disabled firemen, and shall be commenced within three calendar months next, after such seizure shall have been actually made, and in case no such action or suit shall have been commenced within such period, such gunpowder or gun cotton shall be deemed absolutely forfeited to the said Philadelphia Association for the relief of disabled firemen, and may be immediately delivered to the proper officers thereof for its use. No penal damages shall be recovered in any such action or suit and such gunpowder or gun cotton may at any time during the pendency of any such action or suit, by consent of the parties thereto, be sold, and the money arising from such sale be paid into the court, where such suit or action may be pending to abide the event thereof.

Section 7. That, if any gunpowder or gun cotton exceeding the quantity mentioned in this act, shall be found in the possession or custody of any person or persons, in violation of the provisions herein contained, by any fireman of any company belonging to the fire department, of the said city, during any fire therein, it shall be lawful for such fireman to seize the same, without any warrant, and to immediately convey the same and report such seizure to the chief engineer of the fire department, or, in his absence the acting assistant engineer, and the said chief engineer or assistant shall convey or cause to be conveyed to any magazine for the storing of gunpowder, there to be detained until it be decided by due course of law in accordance with the provisions of this act, whether such gunpowder or gun cotton be forfeited.

Section 8. That any violation of the provisions of this act relative to the keeping of gunpowder or gun cotton or of any of the provisions of the acts now in force, relative to the introduction of gunpowder or gun cotton into the city of Philadelphia, shall, in addition to the forfeiture of the gunpowder or gun cotton as hereinbefore provided, also subject the offender or offenders to a fine of five hundred dollars for each offence, to be recovered with costs of suit in an action of debt in any court having cognizance thereof, by and for the use of the Philadelphia Association for the relief of disabled firemen. And all gunpowder or gun cotton found within the city of Philadelphia, in violation of the provisions in this act contained, shall be forfeited to the use of the aforesaid Philadelphia Association for the relief of disabled firemen.

Section 9. That all and singular the provisions of this act, relative to the recovery of any penalty and the seizure and forfeiture of gunpowder or gun cotton be, and they are hereby extended to the recovery of any penalty, and the seizure and forfeiture of all saltpetre introduced, stored, deposited or kept in said city, in violation of the acts relative thereto, now in force in said city, and the said penalty and forfeiture shall be to and for the use of the aforesaid Philadelphia Association for the relief of disabled firemen, against whom all suits or actions for its recovery, shall be brought in accordance with the provisions of this act.

Section 10. That all actions for any penalty incurred for violation of any of the provisions of this act or any of the acts now in force, relative to the introducing, keeping, storing, or depositing of gunpowder, gun cotton, or saltpetre within the city of Philadelphia, shall be commenced within one year next, after incurring such penalty.

those which have been so severely tried by fire.

the Great Fire in Strawberry street, at the large fire last July, opposite the Girard House, and still more recently in the Fire at Fifth and Chest-seen are sold at less than one fourth the price.

The volumes already published are complete in themselves, having a copious index and table of

To those who cannot afford to purchase the original series of Reports (many volumes of able, whilst even those who do possess them, will buy it for convenience of reference.

From Hon. J. B. Gibson, Chief Justice.—I have densed Reports, and think the work will be a valuable one, especially to the younger members of the bar, who cannot, at first afford to purchase the series of our reports, already between seventy and eighty volumes. The cases are clearly stated, and the points decided, are accurately extracted.

LAW SCHOOL OF THE UNIVERSITY AT CAMBRIDGE, MASS.—The Instructors in this School are HON. JOEL PARKER, LL. D., Royal Professor. HON. THOMAS PARSONS, LL. D., Dane Professor. HON. EMERY WASHBURN, LL. D., University Lecturer. The course of instruction embraces the various branches of the Common Law, and of Equity, Admiralty, Commercial, International and Constitutional Law, and the Jurisprudence of the United States. The Law Library consists of about 14,000 volumes, and as new works appear they are added, and every effort is made to render it complete.

Instruction is given by oral lectures and expositions, (and by recitations and examinations, in connection with them,) of which there are ten every week. Two Moot Courts are also held in each week, at each of which a cause, previously given out, is argued by four students, and an opinion delivered by the presiding instructor. Rooms and other facilities are also provided for the Club Courts; and an Assembly is held weekly for practice in debate, and acquiring a knowledge of Parliamentary law and proceedings.

Students may enter the School in any stage of their professional studies or mercantile pursuits, and at the commencement of either term, or in the middle, or other part of a term. They are at liberty to elect what studies they will pursue, according to their view of their own wants and attainments.

The Academical year, which commences on Thursday, six weeks after the third Wednesday in July, is divided into two terms, of twenty weeks each, with a vacation of six weeks at the end of each term.

During the winter vacation, the Library is opened, warmed and lighted, for the use of the members of the School.

Applications for admission, or for Catalogues, or any further information, may be made to either of the Professors at Cambridge.

A MERITORIOUS CARD.

Hail! honored age of grand progression,
While each one clings to his profession,
And science moves with onward motion,
To suit each wayward thought and notion,
Bringing to light some new invention,
More strange than modern wit can mention,
Or Genius paint with true endeavor,
Though making graphic strides forever,
While Reason urges proud Ambition,
To strive for wondrous Competition;
Yet, in this age of glorious Art,
We can the merit of praise impart,
When meritorious efforts claim
A modest puff to give the name:
And thus we call, with honest pride,
Attention to the Painter's side,—
A man who bravely knows his calling,
Whose works are worthy of extolling,
A model Artist of the day,
And most obliging in his way,
GEORGE H. BANCROFT,—mark the name,
In CHESTNUT STREET you'll find the same,
Call at Five Hundred and Thirty-One,
You'll get the best of painting done,
In Modern or in Classic Order,
From templed shrine to parlor border,
In magic tints of every hue,
To Signs embossed in gold and blue,
Or Figure Head, or Church, or Steeple,
He is resolved to please the people,
And whether foe, or friend or neighbor,
Will charge but moderate for his labor.
We thus invite each one and all,
To give this worthy man a call.
Who will, we venture to engage,
Feel grateful for your patronage.*

* We would particularly invite public attention to our friend Mr. BANCROFT, who is a young, enterprising beginner, and who has gone to vast expense in fitting up his establishment, and is now ready to receive orders for Painting, in all its various branches, at 531 and 533 Chestnut street, 5 doors east of Seventeenth st.

The Fullest, the Latest, and the Best
REPORTS OF THE COMMON LAW COURTS OF ENGLAND.

Containing the cases decided in the Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Nisi Prius Courts, from 1813 to 1855, and in the Court of Exchequer and Exchequer Chamber, from 1824 to 1855, are found in

The Regular and Authoritative Series of the English Common Law and English Exchequer Reports,

Which present the following claims to the support of the profession:

1. They are the only series issued as the authoritative and acknowledged medium by which the decisions of the Law Courts of England are made public.

2. They contain Later Reports than the Boston series, are more fully and more ably reported, and so arranged by preservation of the original paging, that reference by reporters, or by elementary writers, can be traced as readily as in the English editions.

Vol. 2, Ellis & Blackburne's (75 E. C. L. R.,) Reports (Q. B.) to January, 1854, was published by us in June, 1854. At that time the last Queen's Bench case printed in the Boston Law and Equity Reports, was of June 25, 1853. Our volume contained cases decided five months later. The Queen's Bench cases to November 25, 1853, were published in the Boston series in August, 1854, two months after we had distributed the same cases.

Vol. 3, Ellis & Blackburne, (77 E. C. L. R.,) with cases to the end of Trinity Term, 1854, was published when the latest case of Queen's Bench decisions in the Boston series, was of February 8, 1854, more than four months behind the regular reporters.

Exchequer Reports, vol. 9, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) distributed by us January 11, 1855, contains cases to May 10, 1854. The last Exchequer case then in the Boston series was decided February 9, 1854, four months behind the regular Reporter, issued in Philadelphia.

3. They contain more cases decided by the courts represented, than any other series issued in this country.

Vol. 77 English Common Law, (3 E. & B.,) reports eighty-six cases decided in the Queen's Bench since January 11, 1854, while but fifty-eight Queen's Bench cases, decided since January 1, 1854, are found scattered among Vols. 22, 24 and 25 of the Boston Law and Equity.

Vol. 78 E. C. L. K. (5 J. Scott,) reports sixty-five cases decided since Nov. 13, 1853, in the Common Pleas, while the L. & E. has but fifty-seven cases in that Court since the same period.

Vol. 9 Exchequer Reports, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) reports one hundred and ten cases in the Courts of Exchequer, decided since June 24, 1853, while since the same date, the L. & E. report but 107 cases, scattered through vols. 20, 22, 24 and 25.

4. They are almost exclusively cited in argument of counsel, and referred to by Elementary Writers for Law Authorities. See Smith's Leading Cases, Smith's Contracts, Smith's Landlord and Tenant, by Maude; Byles on Bills and Promissory Notes, Broom's Legal Maxims, Broom's Commentaries on the Laws of England, or almost any recent Law Book issued in England.

5. The Philadelphia Reports are edited by Judge Sharswood and by Judge Hare, whose labors as editors and authors have made them so well and so favorably known to the profession.

6. The Boston Law and Equity is made up in this country from the Law Journal, Jurist, Times and other Law periodicals, of a weekly, monthly, or quarterly character, and being unknown in England, is never cited in Court, or referred to by Law writers. The periodics from which it is extracted, are occasionally cited under their own particular names, but they do not possess that permanent value, even in England, which is all-important in a series of Reports.

A carefully prepared and accurate Annual Digest of all the cases decided by the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Exchequer, will be distributed, early in each year, to subscribers to either series, free of charge. That for 1854 is ready, and will be mailed to subscribers who have not received a copy.

Opinions by Judge Stroud.

WHITEHEAD v. CITY OF PHILADELPHIA.

March 29, 1856.

If the owner of a horse, knowing a bridge to be unsafe to drive over, yet attempts to cross it, the county is not liable for the injury, although the supervisor had been notified to repair it and had neglected to do so.

The plaintiff resided on a lane, which was a public highway, within the Corporate limits of the City of Philadelphia. About 300 yards from his house a bridge had been erected across the highway, which had become broken and not passable with safety. Of the condition of this bridge the plaintiff was fully aware, his horse having broken through it on several occasions. He had informed the Supervisor that it was unsafe and requested that it should be repaired. It was not repaired, and this was known to the plaintiff, when his son, an adult, who was as well acquainted with the condition of the bridge as his father was, undertook to drive a horse of the plaintiff, attached to a wagon, during the night, over this bridge. The horse, having broken in several times before, refused to go over the bridge. The plaintiff's son got out of the wagon and led or forced the horse upon it, through which he fell and was much injured. This action was brought against the City to recover damages for the injury to the horse.

The Jury was instructed that if the driver of the horse knew that the Bridge was so broken that it was unsafe to drive over it, he ought not to have attempted it, and the defendant, although in fault for not repairing, was not responsible for the injury which had happened. The jury, nevertheless, gave a verdict for the plaintiff, and assessed the damages at $270.

The evidence was that a few months before the occurrence the plaintiff had purchased the horse for $140. The plaintiff's son testified that the horse had become much more valuable after his father bought him than he was before, and estimated his worth at $300. Numerous witnesses called by the defendant were of opinion that half that sum was a large price.

The defendant has assigned several reasons for a new trial. The principal one of which is, that the directions to the jury had been disregarded.

The law was properly stated to the jury. Thus in Butterfield vs. Forrester 11 East 60, the defendant, for the purpose of making some repairs to his house, which was close by the road side, put up a pole across this part of the road, a free passage being by another branch or street in nearly the same direction. The plaintiff, travelling upon the obstructed road early in the evening, but whilst there was light enough to see the obstruction at the distance of 100 yards. He was riding at a very rapid rate and did not see the pole, when his horse struck it and was thrown down, and both horse and rider were very much hurt. It was testified by the plaintiff's witnesses that if the plaintiff had not been riding very hard, he might have observed and avoided the pole. On the evidence, Bayley, J., directed the jury, that if a person riding with reasonable and ordinary care could have seen and avoided the pole, and if they were satisfied that the plaintiff was riding along the street extremely hard and without ordinary care, they should find a verdict for the defendant: which they accordingly did.

A new trial was moved for by reason of this direction, but the Court refused the rule. Lord ELLENBOROUGH, C. J., said, "A party is not to cast himself upon an obstruction which has been made by the fault of another, and avail himself of it, if he do not himself use common and ordinary caution to be in the right. In cases of persons riding upon what is considered to be the wrong side of the road, that would not authorize another purposely to ride up against them. One person being in fault will not dispense with another's using ordinary care for himself. Two things must concur to support this action—an obstruction in the road by the fault of the defendant, and no want of ordinary care to avoid it on the part of the plaintiff"—and see Marriott v. Stanley, 1 M. & G. 568, Flower v. Adam, 2 Taun., 314.

If a person knows there is an obstruction in a street and he attempts to pass the place, when, in consequence of the darkness of the night or of the rise of water over the street, he cannot see the obstruction, he has no reason to complain of the injury he may sustain on the occasion. He takes the risk on himself. The declaration in such an action must aver that there was no fault on the part of the plaintiff. The President and Trustees of the Town of Mount Vernon v. Dasouhett, 2 Carters (Indiana) Reports, 586.

This case resembled the one before us not only in the general features, but in the particulars—namely, that the public authorities who were sued had received notice, before the injury, from the plaintiff to remove the obstruction.

Farnum v. Town of Concord, 2 N. Hamp. Rep. 392, is a strong authority on the same point. The concluding sentence of the opinion of the Court, delivered by the Chief Justice, contains the whole law on the subject: "The situation and state of the road was well known, and we are clearly of opinion, that whoever, with a full knowledge of the state of the road in such a case, chooses to run the risk of passing, does it at his own peril and the town is not liable." The verdict is set aside and a new trial granted.

REISKY v. CLAYTON, ex. of Wright, and sued as Garnishee of Love.

December 29, 1855.

Wright, at the time of his death, owed a debt to Love, the defendant in the judgment upon which the attachment execution was issued. The attachment was served on Clayton, Executor of the last will of Wright as Garnishee.

It was decided long ago, that a foreign attachment would not lie against an executor as garnishee. In Coombe v. Ex'rs. of Hudson, 2 Dall. R. 73. Pringle v. Black, Ex'rs. ib. 97.

The report states the bare decision of the Court, but gives no reasons. An obvious reason is that, in general, the attachment would delay the final settlement of the estate of the testator. For the executor, like every other garnishee, would be under the necessity of waiting until execution should be awarded against him, which could not in due course of law take place in any case in less than a year from the commencement of the foreign attachment.

The office of an executor is a trust, the duties of which are strictly defined by law, and it is of great importance to society, that no hindrance to the punctual performance of them be placed in his way. To an upright officer, any such hindrance would be a source of embarrassment and regret, whilst to the crafty, it might be the means of collusion which scarcely any degree of vigilance could effectually prevent or detect. In Massachusetts, it has been decided that an administrator cannot be holden as trustee of a creditor of the estate of his intestate, and the process issued for that purpose there, is a species of attachment. In Brooks v. Cook, et al., where this was decided, the Court said, "no person deriving his authority from the law, and obliged to execute it according to the rules of law, can be holden by process of this kind, 8 Mass., Rep. 246, 247.

The act of assembly of 13th April, 1843 § 10, "to convey certain real estate and for other purposes," which enacts that "all legacies given, and lands devised to any person, and any interest which any person may have in real or personal estate of any decedent by will or otherwise which are subject to foreign attachment, by the act of 27th of July, 1842, entitled "an act to enable creditors to attach legacies and property in the hands of executors and administrators, and for other purposes," shall be subject to be attached and levied upon in satisfaction of any judgment in the same manner as debts due are made subject to execution by the 22d section of the act of 16th June, 1836, entitled "an act relating to executions," was cited as applicable to the present inquiry. But it is quite obvious that it was made diverso intuitu, and neither the letter nor the spirit comprehends a debt of a decedent. The language of the original act—the act relating to executions—is broad enough in expression, but the difficulty of carrying it into effect where the executor is to be made garnishee, is the ground as we have already shown, for exempting it from its operation.

The verdict is to be set aside, and judgment on the point reserved, entered for the defendant.

ELLICE v. PAUL.

April 12, 1856.

The only question in the report of the auditor which has occasioned us any difficulty, has respect to the statement of the time when the work and materials which form the subject of Dougherty's claim, were contributed. On the face of the claim they are combined in a single charge, and stated to have been done by contract for a named price. The only mention of the time of the performance of the contract is that the work was done, and the materials furnished within six months, last past. There is no date to the bill of particulars, but at the foot of the claim the attorney's name is signed, and under it, "Dec. 2, 1854." The claim was filed December 9, 1854.

Now it is obvious that consistently with this statement the performance of the contract might have been complete within six months from Dec. 2, and yet not within six months from Dec. 9, and the reference to the six months last past, undoubtedly points to the earlier date, the time when the claim was drawn up and signed by the attorney, and not to the day on which it was filed. There has not been, therefore, a compliance with the directions of the statute, that the claim must be filed within six months after the work has been done, or materials furnished, according to the plain implication of the 14th section of the act of 1836, and see Lehman v. Thomas, 5 W. and S. 262.
