Under that statute, indeed, work done and materials furnished on an express contract for a specific sum gave no lien. This was remedied as to the counties of Philadelphia and Chester, by the 2nd section of the act of 24th March, 1849, which authorizes a mechanic or material man who performs work and furnishes materials, to include both in the same claim, and where the value or amount of the work or materials can only be ascertained by measurement when done, or shall be done by contract for a stipulated sum, a statement may be filed of the time when the work was commenced, and when finished, and of the aggregate price of the work and materials." Brightly's Purdon, 579, pl. 20.

This act is manifestly founded on the supposition that the previous legislature did not comprehend cases of the description for which it provides. Yet the claim before us, although widened by a "contract for a stipulated sum," falls short of the requirement of the new act, in respect to the mention of the time when the work, etc., under it was either begun or finished.

The decisions quoted by the auditor, evidently with some dubitation of their sufficiency to sustain the claim, have upon the view which we have taken no application. No evidence appears to have been given on the hearing of the actual time when the work, etc., was finished. The proper conference from this defect is that every thing which could be said on the subject, is contained in the claim as filed. We therefore, feel bound to reject the claim of Dougherty, and to award the amount allotted to him to be paid to Bolton, in virtue of his judgment.

Exception of Bolton sustained, and amount allowed to Dougherty by the report, to be paid to Bolton, in virtue of his judgment.

Court of Common Pleas.

PATTEN v. DEVELIN, ET AL.

In Equity sur Bill, Answers and Proofs.

Opinion by Thompson, P. J.

April 2, 1856.

Unless the whole contract for sale of lands appear in the writing or writings, without the aid of oral testimony, it is within the Statute of Frauds and Perjuries. Specific performance will not be decreed.

There must be mutuality in the contract, in order to justify a decree for specific performance.

The plaintiff claims to be the purchaser of certain Real Estate from Develin, one of the defendants, and asks for the specific performance of the contract of sale. The case as disclosed by the pleadings is entirely within the Act of Assembly for the prevention of frauds and perjuries, and the operation of that statute gives rise to the questions presented for decision. Develin, the owner of the property, was in embarrassed circumstances, and to relieve himself from an apprehended sale by the Sheriff, who had levied upon and advertised the property, he, as the plaintiff alleges, constituted Mr. Koehler, who is also made a defendant, his attorney in fact, with authority to make sale of the said premises on such terms as he might think proper. He further directed the application of the proceeds of any sale made by his said attorney, to the discharge of incumbrances; and the remainder of the money to be held in trust for his son.

This power of attorney was signed by Develin, but in his answer he denies that he knew the contents thereof, and asserts that he never employed Mr. Koehler in the transaction, but supposed that Mr. Page was acting for him, as he had previously done under a former power of attorney. Develin, being an ignorant man, may not have fully comprehended the instrument to which he signed his name, but the evidence shows that it was read over to him, more than once, and that he seemed to comprehend it.—Without stopping to determine this and the various other questions upon which the evidence seems to some extent conflicting, we will consider the agreement itself, as exhibited on behalf of the plaintiff.

Mr. Koehler, as the attorney of Develin, having arrested the Sheriff's sale, addressed a note to plaintiff, under date of March 4, 1855, informing him of that fact, and stating that if he was inclined to purchase the property at private sale, he could be accommodated on very reasonable terms. In consequence of this invitation, the plaintiff called on Mr. Koehler, and on the 8th of March, 1855, Mr. Koehler addressed to the plaintiff a second note, as follows:

"Wm. Patten, Esq.,
"Dear Sir:—After consideration, I have thought it advisable to accept your offer of $2500, for the property at 19th and South sts. Will you call upon me at your earliest convenience in regard to it. I guess we can arrange matters to suit all parties."

This second note is the agreement of which the plaintiff claims to have specific performance, and the question is, whether it is sufficient to entitle him to a decree in his favor? The evidence showed that the title papers had been placed in the hands of the plaintiff's conveyancer by Mr. Koehler, but that he declined to execute a deed, until Mr. Develin, who was then absent, should return; that upon his return, and as soon as he understood the terms of the sale, Develin objected to it, and refused to sanction it, upon the ground of the inadequacy of the price.—Assuming then that the attorney in fact, had adequate power to make the sale, there are two well settled principles, which operate against the positions taken and relied on by the plaintiff.—The first is, that under the "Act for the prevention of frauds and perjuries," an agreement for the sale of land must be in writing, showing the complete contract. The fact of the contract having been entered into must appear from the writing itself, or from some other writing to which it refers.

No express form of words is necessary, to form a contract, but it must appear that a bargain between the parties was settled upon and concluded. To admit parol proof of the fact of the agreement having been finally concluded by the parties, when the writing leaves that fact uncertain, would be contrary to the very object of the statute, which is to prevent the title to lands being changed by parol evidence.

"When the law requires the contract to be in writing," says Lowry, J., in Soles v. Hickman, 8 Harris, 180, "it means that the complete contract must be proved by the writing. That is not a written contract that is not self sustaining. It is verbal if it requires verbal testimony to sustain it, by proving any essential part of it."

Unless the essential terms of the bargain and sale can be ascertained from the writing itself, or by a reference contained in it to something else, the writing is not in compliance with the statute: Kent, Chancellor, in Parkhurst v. Van Cortlandt, 1 Johns, C. 273. No part can be supplied by parol evidence, Seitzinger v. Ridgway, 4 W. & S. 488. Many other cases, both at law and in equity, establish the same doctrine.—Blagden v. Bradbear, 12 Ves., 466. Brodie v. St. Paul, 1 Vern., 326. Boydell v. Drummond, 11 East., 142. 2 Ves., 415. 1 Ves., 279. Sanders v. Wakefield, 4 B. & Ald., 595.

And in Parrish v. Koons, 1 Parsons, 79, Judge King, after an able review of the cases upon this subject, speaking of the sufficiency of the documents presented in that case to constitute a contract, says, "Without associating these papers with the parol evidence in the cause, it is impossible to extract any thing intelligible from them. This, as has been seen, is wholly inadmissible." "Every agreement which is required to be in writing by the Statute of Frauds must be certain in itself, or capable of being made so by reference to something else, whereby the terms can be ascertained with reasonable precision, or it cannot be carried into effect."

Under the rule thus illustrated, the writing produced in this case as the contract of the parties, appears entirely insufficient.

It is a letter, addressed by the attorney in fact of the owner of the property, to the plaintiff, without any accompanying reply to show that it was either received, or that the plaintiff in any way assented to the proposition contained in it. It contains an invitation for the purpose of making an agreement upon terms satisfactory to all parties, but there is nothing to show that such agreement was in fact made. As this defect cannot be supplied by parol evidence, all that we have is the mere proposition of one party to the other; which cannot, under any circumstances, be deemed a contract.

It is not denied that a sufficient contract may be made out by correspondence, but to have that effect, the letters must import a settled agreement. "I agree," says Lord Eldon, in Huddleston v. Briscoe, 11 Ves., 583, "the Court is not to decree performance unless it can collect upon a fair interpretation of the letters, that they import a concluded agreement; that if it rests reasonably doubtful whether what passed was only treaty, let the progress toward the confines of agreement be more or less, the Court ought rather to leave the parties to law, than specifically to perform what is doubtful as a contract."

Where a party relies on a letter to prove the terms of an agreement, he is required to show not merely a treaty, still less a proposal for an agreement, but a treaty with reference to which mutual consent can be clearly demonstrated; or a proposal met by that sort of acceptance which makes it no longer the act of one party, but of both. Kennedy v. Lee, 3 Merivale, 451.

If any part of the contract is left for future arrangement, it is imperfect and cannot be enforced. The answer to a written proposal must be a simple acceptance of the terms proposed.—Holland v. Eyre, 2 Simons & Str., 194. Where, as in the present case, there is no answer at all to the proposal, no agreement whatever can be inferred.

The second principle which opposes the application of the plaintiff in this case is, that in order to enforce a contract for specific performance, there must be mutuality in the contract. It must be such as both parties may enforce. Without adverting to the different opinions entertained by the distinguished Chancellors and Judges of England, as to the necessity of the signatures of both parties to an agreement to entitle it to specific performance: or to the decisions of our own Courts upon that question, it is sufficient to refer to the able investigation of the subject by C. J. Gibson, in Wilson v. Clarke, 1 W. & S. 554. He there declares it to be a cardinal principle "that a Chancellor, when uncontrolled by arbitrary enactment, executes no contract which is not the source of mutual obligation and mutual remedy," and after pointing out the distinction between the statute of frauds, and our Act for the prevention of frauds and perjuries, the learned judge adverts to the monstrous injustice of allowing one of the parties to a sale to make it binding or not, as his interest should be affected by a rise or depreciation of the property, and concludes by saying, that as the contract could not be mutually enforced it shall not be enforced at all, though perhaps damage may be recovered for the breach of it. In Parrish v. Koons, 1 Parsons, 79, Judge King distinguishes the case of Wilson v. Clarke from that of Lowry v. Meahaffy, 10 Watts, 387, and those cases where the agreement has been partially carried into effect by payment of the purchase money or delivery of possession, and fully sustains the soundness and clearness of the reasoning in the former case. The same distinction may be noticed in the case of McFarson's appeal, 1 Jones, 503, where, though specific performance was decreed, of a contract signed by the vendor only, there had been payment of money and long continued possession.

It is not necessary in the present case, however, to attempt to reconcile any apparent diversity in the cases just referred to. The alleged contract before us is entirely within the Statute of frauds and perjuries. It shows no mutuality either of obligation or of remedy. On the contrary, the absence of mutual agreement appears upon its face, and renders it improper that under any rule of Equity a Court should enforce its specific performance.

The views thus expressed in regard to the main question in the case, render it unnecessary to notice particularly the various other questions arising upon the evidence taken in the cause.—We do not see any thing in the plaintiff's case which may not be fully compensated by damages at law, if he should be entitled to them, and we have therefore the less hesitation in refusing his application and leaving him to his legal remedies. The Bill is therefore dismissed with costs.

SECTION 8. That all other acts, or such parts thereof, heretofore passed, relative to insurance, trust, or annuity companies, not chartered by this Commonwealth, that conflict herewith, are hereby repealed. Provided, That this act shall not take effect until after the first day of July next.

You are commanded that you be and appear before the Judges of the District Court for the City and County of Philadelphia, at the said Court at Philadelphia, there to be held the first Monday of June next, to show wherefore, whereas the said demandant and the said defendants, together and undivided, do hold a certain lot or piece of ground, with the two story frame house thereon erected, situate in the late borough of Germantown, and County of Philadelphia, now City of Philadelphia, on the south-westerly side of the Germantown Great Road, containing two acres, three-quarters, and seven perches, be the same more or less. Also all those two contiguous lots or pieces of ground with the three two story stone messuages or tenements thereon erected, situate in the said late borough of Germantown and city aforesaid, on the north-easterly side of the Main street, one of said lots containing one hundred and twenty-six perches and six-tenths of a perch; and the other of said lots containing thirty perches more or less. NOTICE.

THE Subscriber takes this method of informing his numerous friends, and the public in general, that he is now prepared to execute in a superior manner, every variety of HOUSE and SIGN PAINTING, Graining, Bronzing, Gilding on Glass and Stained Glass, Calomining Ceilings, Walls, &c., &c. China and Glass Painting executed in a superior manner, and warranted not to CRACK. Ceilings cleaned and whitened, and made equal to new, at a cost little over that of whitewash. The subscriber would state here that it frequently occurs that persons attempt to use this article who have no knowledge of it whatever, either in the mixing or putting it on, and the consequence is, the job is spoiled, and the article condemned without a proper trial.—So also with CHINA GLOSS; to make a good job it requires a practical knowledge of the use of the brush, as also the making of the Gloss. In regard to the ZINC WHITE, the subscriber would most respectfully recommend it as an article far superior to any other paint now in use, for whiteness and durability of color.

The Subscriber would respectfully solicit a portion of the patronage of those getting Painting done. Feeling grateful for the many favors already bestowed by his friends, he still hopes to share their patronage by unremitting attention to their calls. Those who have large contracts to give out, need have no hesitancy in calling, as he is prepared to give every satisfaction in regard to work, both in reference and security, for the faithful performance of all agreements.

The Subscriber can be found at the S. E. CORNER OF FOURTH AND WALNUT STS. where he will be happy to receive any orders.

SAVINGS FUND.

INTEREST FIVE PER CENT, PER ANNUM.

ALL SUMS OF MONEY RETURNED ON DEMAND.

OFFICE, NEXT DOOR TO THE POST OFFICE;

No. 83 Dock Street,

PHILADELPHIA, 1854.

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND, No. 83 DOCK Street, next door to THIRD Street, and adjoining the POST OFFICE, receives MONEY on deposit daily, from 9 in the morning until 3 in the afternoon; also Monday evenings, from 7 to 9 o'clock. Interest is allowed on deposits at the rate of FIVE PER CENT per annum. Deposits will be returned in whole, or in part, on demand, without notice.

The popularity of this Office with all classes of the community, both in town and country, and its consequent success, may be ascribed, in part, to the following substantial reasons:

1st. It offers a convenient, responsible, and profitable Depository to Executors, Administrators, Assignees, Collectors, Agents, and all public officers—to Attorneys, Trustees, Societies and Associations, whether incorporated or otherwise—to married or single ladies—to Students, Merchants, Clerks, and business men generally—to Mechanics, Farmers, Minors of either sex, and all who have funds, much or little, to deposit, where they may be had at any time, with Five Per Cent interest added.

2d. Depositors receive Books, with an abstract of the By-laws and regulations, in which is entered their deposits, which Books serve as vouchers. They may designate in case of sickness, death, or absence, who shall receive their deposits, without the intervention of Executors or Administrators. Any one or more persons may deposit in his, her, or their name, or for any other person or persons.

3d. A Report is made each year to the Legislature and Councils of the City.

4th. The Officers are sworn before they enter upon their duties, in addition to giving Bonds with sureties.

5th. The State Savings Fund is a real Savings Fund—not an Insurance and Trust Company. The Charter of this Institution avoids the Insurance business.

6th. Deposits may be withdrawn by checks after the manner customary with Bank Check Books will be furnished to depositors without charge.

From Hon. J. B. Gibson, Chief Justice.—I have

valuable one, especially to the younger members of the bar, who cannot, at first afford to purchase the series of our reports, already between seventy and eighty volumes. The cases are clearly stated, and the points decided, are accurately extracted.

OBITUARIES.

Within the past few weeks, two old and most respected members of this Bar. BAYSE NEWCOMB, Esq., and THOS. I. WHARTON, Esq., have been called from amongst us.

Mr. Newcomb died on Thursday, March 27th, aged 77; he was buried on Tuesday, April 1st his funeral was largely attended by the Masonic Fraternity, of which he was an old and most highly esteemed member.

On Saturday, March 29th, a meeting of the Bar was held in District Court room, No. 2. Charles Wheeler, Esq., Chairman; R. J. Arundel, Geo. W. Biddle, Esqs., Secretaries. Resolutions expressive of the feelings of the Bar were offered, and were unanimously adopted, they were introduced by Benj. H. Brewster, Esq., in a feeling and appropriate tribute, to the virtues of the deceased. He was followed by Josiah Randall, Esq., who in most eloquent terms, expressed the high estimation in which Mr. Newcomb was held by the profession and the public, both as a lawyer, a man, and a citizen. He was truly,

"An honest man the noblest work of God."

Mr. Wharton died on Monday, April 7th, aged 65. As the author of the first digest of Pennsylvania Reports, and as Reporter of the Decisions of our Supreme Court, his name is well-known to the profession, throughout the Union. He was an ornament to the profession, and a gentleman of unblemished character—a public spirited, and useful citizen.

A meeting of the Bar was held on Wednesday, April 9th, at the Supreme Court room. Hon. Wm. M. Meredith, Chairman, Wm. B. Reed, Esq., Secretary.

John M. Scott, Esq., paid a glowing tribute to the virtues of the eminent deceased, and offered the usual resolutions, which were unanimously adopted.

The first of the above works has received general commendation; of the last, various opinions have been expressed. They are both quite as good as most of this class of Literature, which we are pleased to find, appears to have palled upon the public taste. To those who need a supply of reading for the summer vacation, they will be found sufficiently interesting to dispel ennui.

Messrs. Smith & English, North Sixth street, have them for sale.

The following valuable opinions of the work have been received by the Publishers.

From Judge Catron of the U. S. Supreme Court.

"Hardly a stronger guaranty could be afforded to the American Bar that the work has merit, than the fact that Mr. Wharton was author of the legal portion of the book."

JOHN CATRON.

From Professor Parsons of the Cambridge Law School.

"I have not had time to examine it critically, but have read enough to convince me that it is an instructive and valuable work. Some of its topics, which are quite new in a book on this subject, are shown to be among the most important."

THEOPHILUS PARSONS.

From Judge McLean of the U. S. Supreme Court.

"I have not had time to look minutely through the volume, but from the known ability of the authors, and their experience, I am sure the book must be very interesting and useful, not only to the profession of the law, but also to general readers. A modern treatise of this kind, embodying the experience of jurists and medical men, with decisions of courts, was much wanted; and I am satisfied that abler pens than those employed, could not have been engaged in its production."

JOHN MCLEAN.

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND.

OFFICE, NEXT DOOR TO THE POST OFFICE, No. 83 Dock Street, PHILADELPHIA, 1854.

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND, No. 83 DOCK Street, next door to THIRD Street, and adjoining the POST OFFICE, receives MONEY on deposit daily, from 9 in the morning until 3 in the afternoon; also Monday evenings, from 7 to 9 o'clock. Interest is allowed on deposits at the rate of FIVE PER CENT per annum. Deposits will be returned in whole, or in part, on demand, without notice.

The popularity of this Office with all classes of the community, both in town and country, and its consequent success, may be ascribed, in part, to the following substantial reasons:

- 1st. It offers a convenient, responsible, and profitable Depository to Executors, Administrators, Assignees, Collectors, Agents, and all public officers—to Attorneys, Trustees, Societies and Associations, whether incorporated or otherwise—to married or single ladies—to Students, Merchants, Clerks, and business men generally—to Mechanics, Farmers, Minors of either sex, and all who have funds, much or little, to deposit, where they may be had at any time, with Five Per Cent interest added.
- 2d. Depositors receive Books, with an abstract of the By-laws and regulations, in which is entered their deposits, which Books serve as vouchers. They may designate in case of sickness, death, or absence, who shall receive their deposits, without the intervention of Executors or Administrators. Any one or more persons may deposit in his, her, or their name, or for any other person or persons.
- 3d. A Report is made each year to the Legislature and Councils of the City.
- 4th. The Officers are sworn before they enter upon their duties, in addition to giving Bonds with sureties.
- 5th. The State Savings Fund is a real Savings Fund—not an Insurance and Trust Company. The Charter of this Institution avoids the Insurance business.
- 6th. Deposits may be withdrawn by checks after the manner customary with Banks. Check Books will be furnished to depositors without charge.

THE LATE J. WILLIAMS BIDDLE, ESQ.

MR. EDITOR—Perhaps a few words from one who has just returned from one of the largest and most impressive Bar Meetings ever held upon the mournful occasion of the death of a much valued associate, may not be out of place in your columns.

Not that I could add anything to the spontaneous and beautiful tributes to Mr. Biddle's worth in those walks, professional, social and domestic, which he enlightened and made so attractive by his rapidly increasing attainments, and attaching qualities of every kind. All these, and more than these, were portrayed with touching fidelity by accomplished speakers, whose faltering tones attested at times, whilst the moistened eyes of many in that large and silent assemblage, bore additional testimony to, the deep hold he had on the affections and esteem of those who knew him best.

Well was it said, by one who knew how to feel, for on him affliction in its most appalling form pressed sore and heavily at a day not yet remote, that such meetings, "common," as alas, they are getting to be, "do good in our hard profession." They bring out the better feelings of our nature, and teach us to bear and forbear, in the rough contests we are too often called upon to wage.

With subdued and chastened eloquence, befitting the occasion, and in tones that found their way to the heart, well did he sketch, in few and simple words, the prominent traits of Mr. Biddle's character; the qualities of his mind; his nice and hereditary sense of honor; the warmth of his disposition; the goodness of his heart; his promise of eminence. Nor were his delicate allusions less touching to the grief of sorrow stricken relatives, including that most excellent and estimable man, united to him by a near tie, who "mourns him as a son."

Had I ventured to add a thought, a single thought, to all that was so much better expressed, I would simply have said in continuation of the beautiful allusion to Mr. Biddle's filial qualities, that it was scarcely more than a week—it was a week last Sunday—since I saw him assisting his venerable father, as both descended slowly from the steps of his own door after church, afterwards crossed over, and slowly walked up Walnut Street. A careless spectator might have supposed, that in the course of nature, he, who occupied the filial relation, would in due time, have closed the eyes of the venerable parent, over whose honored head eighty winters have passed. Alas! that before the sun had eight times risen and set, the former, mature and vigorous, and scarce more than upon the threshold, to all appearance, of a long and promising career of usefulness and happiness, should have been stricken down by that mighty Destroyer who spares no age; and that upon the latter, should fall the increasing weight of that blow which a parent feels, when he cannot be comforted because his children are not! Alas, for human retrospect and human hope! Professional distinction; social accomplishment; domestic virtues; the wealth of the heart; all! all! what are they? A breath destroys them. But the memory of such qualities dies not, and priceless the inheritance to whom such memories survive.

A MEMBER OF THE BAR.

Phila., April 22, 1856.

Supreme Court.

SANFORD v. THE CATAWISSA, WILLIAMSSPORT, AND ERIE RAILROAD CO., AND OTHERS.

A contract made by a Railroad Company, giving to one person or company the exclusive privilege of transportation in their passenger trains, is illegal and void. They have no power to exclude any part of the public, or to grant exclusive privileges to particular persons.

Opinion by Lewis, C. J.

It is provided by the Act of 16th June, 1836, that the Supreme Court and the several Courts of Common Pleas shall have the jurisdiction and powers of a Court of Chancery so far as relates to the supervision and control of all corporations other than those of a municipal character. The equity powers of our Courts in respect to individuals, are circumscribed within a limited sphere. Gilden v. Merwin, 6 Wharton, 522. But over corporations, their equity jurisdiction is general and unlimited. In the exercise of it, they possess all the power and jurisdiction of a Court of Chancery by bill, injunction, or otherwise, as the equity of the case may require. Commonwealth v. Bank of Penna., 3 W. & S., 193. Railroad Corporations must necessarily possess very extensive powers to enable them to carry into effect works of great magnitude, and it would be most prejudicial to the interest of all persons with whose property they interfere, if there were not a jurisdiction continually open and ready to exercise its power for the purpose of keeping them within that limit which the Legislature has thought proper to prescribe for the exercise of their powers. If they go beyond the power which the Legislature has given them, and in a mistaken exercise of those powers, interfere with the property of individuals, the Court is bound to interfere. Agar v. The Regents Canal Co., Cooper's Rep. 77; Dun River Navigation Co. v. North Midland Railway Co., 1 English Railway Cases, 153. Although a Railroad Company is a private Corporation, in one sense of the term, it is one in which the public have a very great interest, and the paramount object of the Legislature, in creating such a corporation, is the interest of the public. It is upon the ground that such companies are incorporated for public use, that the power given to them to take private property for the construction of their roads against the will of the owners, has been sustained. The Legislature possesses no constitutional authority to authorize the seizure of private property for private purposes, even on giving just compensation. The power of the Legislature to authorize municipal officers to tax the people of cities, boroughs, and counties, for the payment of subscriptions to Railroad Corporations has been sustained on the ground that "a railroad is a public highway, for the public benefit." Sharpless v. Philadelphia, 9 Harris, 169. The nature of this peculiar and improved class of highways makes it indispensable to the public safety that the transportation on it should be placed under the strict regulation of one controlling head. This necessity has led to the usual grant of power to provide cars, locomotives, and to embark in the business of transportation of freight and passengers. When this power is assumed, the Company becomes a common carrier, and thus exercises a sort of public office, and has public duties to perform. It is bound to receive and carry all the goods offered for transportation, and is liable to an action in case of refusal without sufficient cause. New Jersey Steam Navigation Co. v. Merchant's Bank, 6 Howard's U. S. Reports, 382. Even lateral railroads, established by law for the purpose of enabling the proprietors to convey their minerals to the public thoroughfares, may be used by the public generally, on payment of the established rates of toll. Act of 5th May, 1832. It is true, that a private railroad may be constructed on the land of the proprietors. In such a case, the public have no more interest in it nor control over it than they have in any other improvements which men make on their own lands. But wherever a charter granted for the purpose of constructing a railroad, and the corporation is clothed with the power to take private property, in order to carry out the object, it is an inference of law from the extent of the power conferred, and the subject matter of the grant, that the road is for the public accommodation. The right to take tolls is the compensation to be received for the benefits conferred. If the public are entitled to these advantages, it results from the nature of the right that the benefits should be extended to all alike, and that no special privileges should be granted to one man or set of men, and denied to others. The special stipulations inserted in charters for the purpose of securing these rights, are placed there, in abundance of caution, and affirm nothing more than the common right to equal justice which exists independent of such provisions. Of this character is the declaration in the charter of the Railroad Company before us, which requires it to transport articles "in the order in which" it "shall be requested to transport the same." "so that equal and impartial justice shall be done to all owners of property," "who shall pay or tender the toll and freight due under this act." The supposed necessity for such provisions in charters granted in this country and in England, proves nothing more than that the law makers in both countries were aware of the difficulty in holding large corporations to those common obligations of justice which individuals feel bound to acknowledge without legislative enactment.

An Express Company, engaged in the business of transporting small packages has as good a right to the benefits of the railroad as the owners of the packages possess in person. It is impossible that they can all appear in person to claim their rights, and it is sufficient that they are represented by agents who are entrusted with their goods, and have a special property in them. The business of carrying what is called "express matter," has recently grown up, and is productive of great public advantage. The objection to carrying such matters, on the ground of the novelty of the business, has nothing in it deserving serious consideration. If all the improvements of this progressive age are to be excluded from railroad transportation because they were not in existence when the charters were granted for the roads, the public would soon be deprived of the chief value of these important works. The law is not so unreasonable in its constructions. The rights of express agents or carriers have been fully recognized in this respect in England. They are entitled to equal benefits with others, and no exclusive advantages can be granted to others to their injury. 10 Mees. & W. 397; 3 English Railway Cases, 193; 49 Eng. Com. Law Rep. 253; 73 Eng. Com. Law Rep. 583.

The Railroad Company, defendant, on the 28th October, 1854, entered into a contract with the International Express Company, giving to the latter for three years, the exclusive right of the Railroad for all express purposes, at the various stations on the road, or so far as the said Company control the matter, and shall continue so to control the same. Provided, nevertheless, that nothing in this contract shall be construed to restrain the said Railroad Company from carrying any freight, baggage, or passengers, at their advertised rates, for any individual or individuals, company or companies, whatever.

In pursuance of this contract, the Superintendent of the Railroad Company, on the 30th October, 1854, gave to Howard & Co., an Express Company, written notice that "an arrangement had been made with the International Express Company, which gives to that Company the exclusive right of this road for all express purposes; that the Company take the route on Monday, November 6th, and that this Railroad Company will not carry the express matter or messengers of any other persons or company after Saturday, Nov. 4th." The explanations to be found in the answer and in the evidence show that the Railroad Company is willing to carry the express matter of Howard & Co. in their freight trains, which go at less speed than their passenger trains, but that its purpose is to give to the International Express Company the exclusive privilege of transportation in their passenger trains. The Railroad Corporation has no right to do this. The power to regulate the transportation on the road does not carry with it the right to exclude any particular individuals, or to grant exclusive privileges to others. Competition is the best protection to the public and it is against the policy of the law to destroy it by creating a monopoly of any branch of business. It cannot be done except by the clearly expressed will of the Legislative power. Limited means may perhaps limit the amount of business done by a railroad company, but it can never furnish an excuse for appropriating all its energies to any particular individuals. If it possessed this power it might build up one set of men and destroy others, advance one kind of business and break down another, and might make even religion and politics the tests in the distribution of its favors.—Such a power in a railroad corporation might produce evils of the most alarming character. The rights of the people are not subject to any such corporate control. Like the customers of a grist-mill they have a right to be served, all other things equal, in the order of their applications. A regulation, to be valid, must operate on all alike. If it deprives any persons of the benefits of the road, or grant exclusive privileges to others, it is against law and void.

Let the contract between the railroad corporation and the International Express Company be declared null and void, and be cancelled and delivered up; and let an injunction issue restraining the Railroad Company from carrying on business in pursuance of the said illegal contract.

Decree to be drawn for these purposes according to the prayer of the bill, with costs to be paid by the defendants.

DAVID TILLARD v. THE COMMONWEALTH.

Opinion by Woodward, J.

The defendant pleaded specially to the indictment that certain witnesses had been sworn and examined by the foreman of the Grand jury whose names the District Attorney had not marked upon the indictment, to which plea the Commonwealth demurred and Judgment was thereupon rendered that the defendant plead over.

The irregularity of the grand jury was not pleadable in bar of the indictment. At most it was ground only for a motion to quash. If pleadable it was traversable, and it would be a novelty in criminal trials to set a traverse jury summoned only to try the accused, to inquiring whether the indictment had been found with a due regard to prescribed forms. The Judgment on the demurrer was right.

The defendant then pleaded the general issue and was convicted and sentenced, and it is now objected to the record that the indictment is void by reason of duplicity in charging several offences in one count.

The 2d section of the act of 14 April 1853, on which the indictment is framed, defines two offences, and the indictment charges one of them. That the words "give" and "given" employed by the Statute in defining the offence not laid, are found in the indictment, is of no moment, for if they be construed to mean a delivery of the liquor sold, which they may be without violence to language, they become appropriate terms in defining the offence intended to be charged.—Appropriate or superfluous, however, they do not produce duplicity, for the gift of liquor to be an offence must be in "connection with some other business or profitable employment," and this is not laid in the indictment. The offence charged is a sale and delivery of liquors without license, and that is a single, a well defined charge. Perceiving no error in the record the judgment is affirmed.

English Law and Equity Reports.

ENGLISH REPORTS IN LAW AND EQUITY. A Complete Collection of the Cases decided by the House of Lords, the Privy Council, the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas and Exchequer, the Lord Chancellor, the High Court of Appeal in Chancery, the Court of Criminal Appeal, and the Admiralty and Ecclesiastical Courts. Reprinted within a few weeks after the decisions are rendered.

This series has the merit of being complete, reliable, prompt, convenient, and cheap. It is now universally cited in the courts, and referred to in the recent law books as standard authority. All the cases reported in England, are here reprinted from the most reliable sources, as soon as they reach this country.

These Reports are now regularly digested in our Annual United States Digest, which thus embraces an annual digest of the whole English and American Law.

We have now in Preparation, and shall soon Publish,

A separate Digest of these Reports, embracing the first thirty-one volumes of the series, prepared with express reference to the convenience of the American profession, and exhibiting a complete synopsis of all the English Decisions reported in those volumes during the last five years; also a Table of Cases referring to all the contemporaneous English Reports.  While each one clings to his profession,
 And science moves with onward motion,
 To suit each wayward thought and notion,
 Bringing to light some new invention,
 More strange than modern wit can mention,
 Or Genius paint with true endeavor,
 Though making graphic strides forever,
 While Reason urges proud Ambition,
 To strive for wondrous Competition;
 Yet, in this age of glorious Art,
 We can the meed of praise impart,
 When meritorious efforts claim
 A modest puff to gild the name:
 And thus we call, with honest pride,
 Attention to the Painter's side,—
 A man who bravely knows his calling,
 Whose works are worthy of extolling,
 A model Artist of the day,
 And most obliging in his way,
 GEORGE H. BANCROFT,—mark the name,
 In CHESTNUT STREET you'll find the same,
 Call at Five Hundred and Thirty-One,
 You'll get the best of painting done,
 In Modern or in Classic Order,
 From templed shrine to parlor border,
 In magic tints of every hue,
 To Signs embossed in gold and blue,
 Or Figure Head, or Church, or Steeple,
 He is resolved to please the people,
 And whether foe, or friend or neighbor,
 Will charge but moderate for his labor.
 We thus invite each one and all,
 To give this worthy man a call.
 Who will, we venture to engage,
 Feel grateful for your patronage.*
 * We would particularly invite public attention to our friend Mr. BANCROFT, who is a young, enterprising beginner, and who has gone to vast expense in fitting up his establishment, and is now ready to receive orders for Painting, in all its various branches, at 531 and 533 Chestnut street, 5 doors east of Seventeenth st.

NOTICE.
 THE Subscriber takes this method of informing his numerous friends, and the public in general, that he is now prepared to execute in a superior manner, every variety of HOUSE and SIGN PAINTING, Graining, Bronzing, Gilding on Glass and Stained Glass, Calsoining Ceilings, Walls, &c., &c. China and Glass Painting executed in a superior manner, and warranted not to CRACK. Ceilings cleaned and whitened, and made equal to new, at a cost little over that of whitewash. The subscriber would state here that it frequently occurs that persons attempt to use this article who have no knowledge of it whatever, either in the mixing or putting it on, and the consequence is, the job is spoiled, and the article condemned without a proper trial.—So also with CHINA GLOSS; to make a good job it requires a practical knowledge of the use of the brush, as also the making of the Gloss. In regard to the ZINC WHITE, the subscriber would most respectfully recommend it as an article far superior to any other paint now in use, for whiteness and durability of color.
 The Subscriber would respectfully solicit a portion of the patronage of those getting Painting done. Feeling grateful for the many favors already bestowed by his friends, he still hopes to share their patronage by unremitting attention to their calls. Those who have large contracts to give out, need have no hesitancy in calling, as he is prepared to give every satisfaction in regard to work, both in reference and security, for the faithful performance of all agreements.
 The Subscriber can be found at the S. E. CORNER OF FOURTH AND WALNUT STS. where he will be happy to receive any orders.

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND.

OFFICE, NEXT DOOR TO THE POST OFFICE;
No. 83 Dock Street,
 PHILADELPHIA, 1854.

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND, No. 83 DOCK Street, next door to THIRD Street, and adjoining the POST OFFICE, receives MONEY on deposit daily, from 9 in the morning until 3 in the afternoon; also Monday evenings, from 7 to 9 o'clock. Interest is allowed on deposits at the rate of FIVE PER CENT per annum. Deposits will be returned in whole, or in part, on demand, without notice.
 The popularity of this Office with all classes of the community, both in town and country, and its consequent success, may be ascribed, in part, to the following substantial reasons:
 1st. It offers a convenient, responsible, and profitable Depository to Executors, Administrators, Assignees, Collectors, Agents, and all public officers—to Attorneys, Trustees, Societies and Associations, whether incorporated or otherwise—to married or single ladies—to Students, Merchants, Clerks, and business men generally—to Mechanics, Farmers, Minors of either sex, and all who have funds, much or little, to deposit, where they may be had at any time, with Five Per Cent interest added.
 2d. Depositors receive Books, with an abstract of the By-laws and regulations, in which is entered their deposits, which Books serve as vouchers. They may designate in case of sickness, death, or absence, who shall receive their deposits, without the intervention of Executors or Administrators. Any one or more persons may deposit in his, her, or their name, or for any other person or persons.
 3d. A Report is made each year to the Legislature and Councils of the City.
 4th. The Officers are sworn before they enter upon their duties, in addition to giving Bonds with sureties.
 5th. The State Savings Fund is a real Savings Fund—not an Insurance and Trust Company. The Charter of this Institution avoids the Insurance business.
 6th. Deposits may be withdrawn by checks after the manner customary with Banks. Check Books will be furnished to depositors without charge.

LITERARY CRITICISMS, and other Papers, by the late HORACE BINNEY WALLACE, Esq., of Philadelphia. Parry & McMillan, 1856.

No man of his extraordinary genius and attainments was ever less generally known than Mr. Wallace. His great modesty, his abhorrence of obtrusion and pretension, his extensive reading, comprising all of highest merit both ancient and modern, in all languages, and his uncommon proficiency in the sciences, and in Philosophy, natural, moral and intellectual, naturally made him exacting in judgment, and diffident and sparing with regard to all public displays of his learning and opinions. He shunned the practical parts of his profession. His life, in the broadest sense, was one of discovery,—given up to the study and storing of choice and rare things wherever to be found. He sought knowledge for the love, the beauty, the mastery of it, apparently without any fixed plan how to use it or to what ends he should at last turn it. He was never idle or incurious. He advanced without the noise or appearance of motion, on a scale nearly universal, yet mastering every single point to which he gave attention.—Such a course of training and study would naturally develop what we consider the marked characteristics of his mind and writings—a penetrating perception of necessary truth and beauty, and of the first principles upon which all theories and laws are based.

This statement is fully justified by an examination of what he published, and the same qualities are prominent in his writings so far as collected and published since his death.—It is most appropriate for us to speak of his contributions to legal science. His notes to "Smith's Leading Cases," to the "Leading Cases in Equity," and "the American Leading Cases," are monuments of great legal learning and acuteness. The demand for these great works, edited by Judge Hare and Mr. Wallace, is the highest proof that could be given of their merit. They have become standard American Law Books, and are treated with the highest respect in every Court of our Union in pronouncing their judicial opinions. They have passed through several editions, and are constantly growing in the estimation of the profession, and their circulation is widely increasing.

It is also a circumstance that reflects the highest honour on the American Annotations that the English editors of the "Leading Cases in Equity," have sent for them with a view of incorporating their learning with the English edition.

"The American Law Journal" for November, 1849, speaks of these works in these terms:—"The American Annotations are equal, and we think, on some titles, much superior to the English." Referring to "the title of Subrogation in the learning of Principal and Surety," it says, "the subject is exhausted by the thoroughness, and keen discrimination on the part of the American editors." "Nowhere within the range of our reading have we found this subject so satisfactorily treated." And it adds, "The notes in this volume are understood to be by Mr. Wallace, and it affords us much satisfaction to commend them to the attentive consideration of the anxious and overtasked equity lawyer or judge, as containing labors that will aid his toil, and add to his learning." The extent of Mr. Wallace's law reading, his discrimination, and his conversance with the principles of law and equity are so admirable in expression and in extent, as shown in these volumes, as to set him forth as one of the first men of this or any age. Such we firmly believe he was, and we have pride in saying so.

We have but few remarks to make on the volume now before us. It consists of criticisms of authors and books, thrown off at different periods by Mr. Wallace, many of which we may suppose he would never have published with his name. They are all, however, marked with his genius, and we do not regret their appearance, as they present him in all lights. Many parts of this volume were written when he was only twenty years old, and as such, they are better and more remarkable than any thing we can refer to, written at so early an age. The whole of the volume is written in a most sprightly, beautiful and attractive style. Some parts evince the profoundest apprehension of the subjects treated of, and everywhere we see the fruits of the author's reading and judgment. We should not know where to point to a single Review in our language in which finer discrimination, more true philosophy, more important distinctions in relation to the powers of the mind, more striking estimates and measures of merit, can be found, than in his notice of the writings of Washington Irving.

In regard to the previous volume of Mr. Wallace on Art, we believe it is admitted no man has ever written better on that subject, or rendered points of nice and difficult apprehension more clear. We could refer to many passages in this book also, which for mere artistic beauty in composition, for harmony of expression and figurative illustration are not excelled in any author.

When a question of law, of truth, of beauty, or of philosophy, is his subject, Mr. Wallace in his writings as in his life and conversation, is ever proven to be a man of the purest moral tone.—There seemed to be an unstained presence within him, commanding respect and confidence. High moral qualities are discoverable in all his writings, and they, with the genius displayed in them, are elements that cannot perish. He will be long remembered with regret and admiration, such as none but these qualities can inspire.—Genius will find springs and types in his writings and thus he will never be lost though he is gone.

District Court.

Opinions by Judge Sharswood.

KELLOGG v. DATSMAN.

Saturday, April 5, 1856.

Under the Act of 4th May, 1852, the Assignee for the benefit of Creditors who had brought suit in his own name may amend the style of the action.

Motion to take off non-suit.

The plaintiff claimed, as assignee for the benefit of creditors, to recover the amount of a book account. Upon the objection being made that the action should have been in the name of the assignor, he offered to amend the style of the action. This was refused by the Court. We think the amendment ought to have been allowed. By the Act of 4th May, 1852, the Court have power "to permit amendments by changing or adding the name or names of any party, plaintiff or defendant, whenever it shall appear to them that a mistake or omission has been made in the name or names of any such party."

Primarily, no doubt the Legislature had reference to a mistake of fact, but there is no restriction to such a case in the words. Here there was no substantial change proposed to be made in the parties. The equitable assignee to whose use the suit ought originally to have been brought has always been regarded by our Courts as the real plaintiff; and the mere transposition of the names on the Docket, can do no harm to defendant, who from the style of the action has necessarily had full notice of the capacity in which the plaintiff claims.

This, then, is one of the plainest and most unobjectionable cases, to which the Act of 1852 can be applied, and however difficult it may be to administer that act to the extent of its letter, without the invention of new mesne process to bring in new defendants to answer new or old plaintiffs, the case before us is one without any difficulty, in which the remedial provision is of the most salutary character and in advancement of the ends of justice.

FLEMING v. DENNY.

Saturday, April 5, 1856.

1. Delay in the presentation of a check upon a Bank will not discharge the drawer unless he has suffered some loss or injury thereby, as by the failure of the Bank or loss of the fund.
2. The drawer should be notified of the refusal to pay, and plaintiff must show on the trial a demand and refusal and notice to the drawer, or other facts showing that he had no reason to expect payment by the Bank.

Rule for new trial.

This is an action against the drawer of a check. The objections to plaintiff's recovery were, First, that the check was not presented until after the lapse of a reasonable time,—more than five months intervened between its date and presentation.

Checks are in effect inland Bills of Exchange. The rule of mercantile Law is unquestionable that in the case of a Bill of Exchange payable on demand, it must be presented or forwarded for presentation within a reasonable time, which is generally held to comprehend the day after it is issued. Such rule is applicable as well between the holder and drawer, as between the holder and endorser.

In regard to checks upon Bankers, a modification of the Law merchant in this respect has been recognized in England and most of our sister States. Without a parade of all the cases it is enough to refer to Serie v. Norton, 9 M. & W., 309, where, as Lord Denman remarks in Robinson v. Hawksford, 9 Ad. & Ell., 52, "the ruling amounts to a clear opinion from Lord Abinger, the very best opinion on such a subject that ever was in Westminster Hall."

These cases settle that to an action by a holder against the drawer of a check, it is no answer that the check was not presented in reasonable time, unless, during the delay the fund has been lost by failure of the Banker. Among the American cases those directly in point are Little v. Phoenix Bank, 2 Hill, 425; Daniel v. Kyler, 1 Kelly, 304. The first of these, however, establishes, that it is incumbent upon the holder, in an action upon the check, to show affirmatively that no loss had happened to the drawer. The soundness of that position it will be unnecessary to pass upon here as the point was not made at the trial. Both Judge Story and Chancellor Kent have adopted the principle that failure to present does not discharge the drawer, unless he suffers loss from the intermediate failure of the Banker.

There appears great reason for a distinction in this respect between Checks and Bills of Exchange. The former are universally regarded in the light of an immediate absolute appropriation by the drawer of so much money to the payee or his assigns. It is a declaration in effect, that until the holder exercises his right of drawing the money, it is his money in the drawers hands; he has no right to withdraw it, and if he does it would clearly be money had and received to the holder's use. It remains at the holder's risk, and if it suits his convenience to retain the check without using it the drawer cannot complain.

Banks of Deposit, whether public or private, are established for the safe keeping of money and for the convenience of commercial transactions. By means of checks upon these institutions, large sums may be paid by a simple transfer of credit, without the trouble of counting. Commercial Law has been indebted largely for its principles, and especially its rules of a positive character, to the usages of merchants, and these have grown up from a general sense of their practical convenience and justice. There are good reasons why the Law pays regard to these usages, and that where generally established and sustained, they should be incorporated permanently as part of the Law merchant.

The second objection to recovery in this case was, that though there was a demand and refusal prior to the commencement of the suit, no notice was proved to have been given to the defendant. It was not shown that defendant had no funds, or that he had withdrawn them from the Bank, or that he had stopped the payment of the check, either of which would have dispensed with notice. It was testified indeed that the answer given at the Bank to the demand was, that the check had been stopped, but that was secondary and incompetent evidence of the fact. Judge Story states the law broadly to be that "in case of a check, the drawer is treated as in some sort the principal debtor, and he is not discharged by any laches of the holder in not making due presentment thereof, or in not giving him notice of the dishonour, unless he has suffered some loss or injury thereby and then only pro tanto. Story on Prom. Notes, S., 492. The cases he cites, though they sustain his position as to the point of due presentment in reasonable time, do not decide expressly the question of notice.

There would seem to be good reasons why on the contrary when payment is actually refused, unless the fact be that the drawer had no right to expect the checks to be paid, that he should have immediate notice, in order that any mistake may be at once rectified, and that in case of an unjust refusal he may take the proper steps to secure himself, as well as that he may save the costs of an action by taking up the check.

This Court have heretofore decided this point in the case of Stearly v. Fegenbush at the last term, and if the case of Livy v. Peters (9 S. & R., 125.) is not an express decision it is strongly confirmatory of it. C. J. Tighman there says, speaking of the case of a check, "In general there cannot be a recovery without proof of a demand and notice to the drawer that payment has been refused." We think therefore that there ought to be a new trial in this case.

Rule absolute.

BARGER, for Deft.

SMITH v. NELSON.

Saturday, April 5, 1856.

Where the facts are undisputed, whether a building is a new erection within the Act of Assembly is a question of Law for the Court and not of fact for the Jury.

Rule for new Trial.

The point reserved in this case is simply whether upon the facts which were undisputed, the lien of the plaintiff could be sustained?

It appeared the lien was for materials furnished towards certain additions and improvements made to a large Hotel, at the corner of Broad and Calowhill streets. A two-story wing for a Barber shop was put up at one end and an existing wing at the other end was somewhat enlarged, and a new roof was put on the entire building. The plaintiff's lumber went to all parts of the work, and his claim was filed against and included the whole building. An undisputed fact and which seems almost decisive was that the building was occupied and the business carried on while the improvements were going on. If the lien in this case can be sustained, then every mechanic who puts on a new roof may have a lien.—The new wing does not seem to alter the case. There might perhaps have been a separate lien for that. But here there was no change pretended in the general character of the building as from a dwelling to a store, or VICE VERSA, which was considered in some of the cases as constituting a new erection within the Act of Assembly.

The authorities appear to be uncertain as to whether this is a question of FACT or of LAW. In Armstrong v. Ware (20 P. S. R., 519), in which this Court had decided it to be a question of LAW, the S. C. merely say "that where the structure of a building is so completely changed that, in common parlance, it may be properly called a new building or a rebuilding, it seems within the Lien Law. This is sometimes difficult to decide, and then it must be left to the Jury."

We do not, however, consider that case as having definitively repudiated the doctrine that whenever the facts are found or are undisputed, the question whether an alteration is of such a character as to constitute a new building is a question of law for the Court, and that whether it is easy or difficult to decide. If this be not so then it is plain that some of the mechanics who have furnished work and materials may lose, and others may gain a verdict, according as different juries may form different opinions upon the same state of facts; and it is difficult to see how the Court can so regulate the matter as to do equal justice to all claimants between the interfering verdicts of different juries. It would be a monstrous solecism if one of two mechanics equally meritorious should be decided to have a lien and the other not, and the ground be that the same building was considered to be in the one case within, and in the other without the provisions of the same Law.

PRICE v. BARBER.

The proper evidence of naturalization is the Certificate of the Court, and where the naturalization results from the naturalization of the parent, the parent's certificate must be produced. The oath of the party himself is incompetent evidence of the fact.

Rule for new trial.

This was an action brought by plaintiff against defendants who were Judge and one of the Inspectors of the general Election, for refusing plaintiff's vote.

There are several objections to the plaintiff's recovery, which it is unnecessary to consider, as we are all of the opinion, that he did not offer, at the time he tendered his vote, such evidence as the law requires.

It appears that the plaintiff was not born in this country, but claimed to vote on the ground that his father was a naturalized citizen of the United States.

The General Election Law, 2d July, 1839, s. 64, provides, that where the person who applies to vote, "having been an alien," has been naturalized, the only evidence thereof shall be a certificate thereof, under the seal of the Court, where such naturalization took place. It would seem to follow, that where the naturalization of a person has resulted from the naturalization of his parent, the only evidence of the fact should in this case be the certificate. The naturalization of his parent is IPSO FACTO his naturalization. The letter of the law would include the case, nor is it without its spirit and intention, which evidently was to preclude parol evidence of a fact which was susceptible of higher and better proof.

Admitting, however, that the provision only meant to apply to the person himself who was naturalized, it would follow that this was a casus omnisus, and that it was incumbent upon the party, when his vote was challenged, to offer some competent evidence of the fact, before he could maintain an action against the officers of the election for refusing his vote. Now, in the absence of any express enactment, his own oath, which was all that he offered, was, certainly, not competent evidence of the fact.

Opinions by Judge Hare.

FISHER v. ALLEN.

Where the Sheriff sells goods under execution on demised premises, he should give the landlord time to make his claim under Section 4, Act of March 21, 1772, payment to the execution creditor the next day after sale, and ten days before the return day of the execution is too soon, and renders the Sheriff liable to the landlord. The Sheriff may keep the money until the return day of the execution.

Motion for judgment on point reserved.

The decisions of the Supreme Court establish, that, although the Act of March 21st, 1772, Sec. 4, makes it the duty of the sheriff to pay all arrears of rent not exceeding one year, out of the proceeds of goods taken in execution on the premises demised, yet the landlord is bound to take notice of the execution at his peril, and cannot make the sheriff answerable for the non-payment of the rent, without proving that he was aware of the circumstances which gave it priority over the execution. But while the sheriff is thus protected from liability for a misappropriation of the fund in his hands, resulting solely from ignorance, without any admittance of default or negligence, he ought obviously not to act with such haste as to preclude the landlord from proffering his claim, and thus obtaining the benefit of the Act of Assembly. No rule can be laid down on this point, so fixed as not to yield to circumstances; but the sheriff may unquestionably keep the money in his hands until the return day of the execution, unless the circumstances; are such, that no injury can arise from his not paying it sooner. In the case now before us, payment was made the day after the sale, and more than ten days before the period at which the writ was returnable. This was, as we think, too soon, and renders the sheriff liable to the landlord, who gave notice of his claim three days afterwards.

Judgment for plaintiff on point reserved.
F. WHARRON, for Landlord, HAZLEHURST, for Defendant.

MURSON v. AUSTIN.

In an action on the case for a malicious arrest in a civil action, the plaintiff's narr must allege the successful termination of that action by a judgment in his favor.

This action cannot be maintained by one who has settled or compromised with his adversary, and has thus admitted the justice of the claim.

Demurrer to Declaration.

The declaration in this suit, which is case for a malicious arrest in a civil action, wants an indispensable element, without which there can be no recovery in this or in any similar proceeding. I mean an allegation, that the defendant succeeded in proving that the demand for which he was arrested, was unfounded, by bringing the suit to a successful termination, and obtaining judgment against his adversary. No man can be made liable for suing another, unless the suit is brought without probable, which necessarily includes the want or absence of actual cause, and the best and most appropriate evidence of the want of actual cause, is the adverse result or failure of the suit itself. Nothing, indeed, could be more unjust than to allow a defendant, who has been brought into Court by legal process, to adjust or compromise the claim made against him, and then institute proceedings against the plaintiff, on the ground that the claim was without even a semblance of foundation, in contravention of the well settled rule which prohibits two suits in every case, where the matter might be determined in one. The law was so held by this Court in a recent case, which has since been affirmed in error by the Supreme Court, under circumstances far less strong than the present, because the suit had there been dropped by the plaintiff, although there was no judgment rendered against him, and had not, as in the present instance, terminated in a compromise between the plaintiff and the defendant. The result is, that a defendant who means to treat the proceedings against him as groundless and malicious, must deal with his antagonist at arms' length, and push him to the point of submitting to a nonsuit, or having a judgment pronounced against him; and certainly cannot be permitted to allege that a claim is founded solely in malice, which he has admitted to be partially or wholly just, by making it the subject of a settlement or compromise. As the objection goes to the foundation of the action, and cannot be avoided by any change in the mode of pleading, permission to amend would be useless, and judgment is consequently entered in the demurrer for the defendant.

Judgment for defendant.

OWENS, for Plaintiff,
WEBSTER, for Defendant.

SMITH v. MOORE.

The presumption of law is in favor of competency, and the facts which show incompetency must be proved by him who alleges it.

We do not think it necessary to do more with reference to this case than say, that even if the law as to the competency of the witness examined by the defendant, were as the plaintiff states it, still the case would not admit of its application. The presumption of law is in favor of competency, and the facts which show incompetency must be proved by him who alleges it. Hence a statement during an examination on the voir dire, that part of the debt which forms the consideration of a note, may have been on partnership account, will not warrant a court or jury in finding that such was its real nature, nor justify the exclusion of the witness, who makes it, on the ground that the suit in which he is called, is founded on a partnership transaction.

The Court are also of opinion, that although the case before the jury was not free from difficulty, there is no sufficient reason for disturbing the verdict, on the ground of its inconsistency with the weight of the evidence. The rule taken by the plaintiff is consequently discharged.

MEETING OF THE PHILADELPHIA BAR.

DEATH OF JOHN SANDERSON, Esq.

THURSDAY, May 1st.—A meeting of the members of the Bar was convened in the Law Library upon occasion of the death of JOHN SANDERSON, Esquire.

On motion, Francis Hopkinson, Esq., was called to the chair, and John T. Montgomery, Esq., was appointed Secretary.

Mr. Edward Ingersoll said:—"Mr. Chairman, it is my melancholy office to announce to this meeting the death of their late fellow member, John Sanderson. Mr. Sanderson died at his residence, in this city, on Tuesday morning last, after a very short illness. Death has been lately active among the ranks of this Bar: this is, I believe, the fifth meeting upon such occasion within a very few weeks past. These deaths, too, have been some of them sudden and untimely, but none of them has touched me personally so nearly as this one. It seems but an hour since I saw Mr. Sanderson in full life and vigor. I enjoyed an intimate friendship with him, and it is difficult for me to realize that I am to see him no more. It is, I think, eight days ago, this morning, that he happened into my office, and was lamenting with me the sudden and untimely death of Mr. Biddle; how little did either of us then think that his turn was so near by, that the grim tyrant had then his hand upon his shoulder, that the summons was already out, and the judgment of that tribunal from which there is no appeal was so nearly entered against him. He was, sir, at that moment, in as full life and vigor as the best of us is at this moment. Which of us, sir, can look into the book of fate and tell whose name is inscribed upon the next page, or how long that dread leaf may be in turning.

Mr. Sanderson, sir, had been about sixteen or seventeen years a member of this Bar. He studied law in the office of Mr. Meredith, with whom he had ever since been upon terms of the kindest personal intimacy, and I regret that Mr. Meredith's absence from the city should, upon this occasion, prevent him from testifying, as I know he would have gladly done, to Mr. Sanderson's high order of intellect and to his legal attainments. Mr. Sanderson was, sir, a man of large intellect and of very varied and extensive cultivation; he was as familiar with English literature as perhaps any man of his time; his memory was very retentive, and his conversational talent, which is one of the rarest of all talents, was very considerable. His temper was as perfect as that of any man I have known, and his heart was always kind and liberal towards the prejudices of others, so that his presence was always welcome amongst a large circle of friends.

As a lawyer, sir, Mr. Sanderson was entitled to a higher position than those who did not know him intimately well would perhaps be willing to accord to him; for he delighted in the science more than in the active practice of his profession, had no pleasure in advocacy, and never appeared in Court when he could help it; and he had long made up his mind that the success valued by many, which is not to be attained without the arts, not to say the artifices, of the profession, was not worth his seeking. But, sir, Mr. Sanderson was not only a man of much education and erudition in his profession, but his mind had, as I always considered and have a thousand times felt, an uncommon adaptation to the science of the law. He had studied it thoroughly and understood it well. He was an excellent pleader, which is said to be the best test of common law proficiency. His judgment and common sense were remarkably good, for his intellect was capacious, and he was almost without prejudices. As might have been expected under such circumstances, Mr. Sanderson's business had much increased within a few years past. I have, during the many years of my intimacy with Mr. Sanderson, resorted to him a hundred times for the benefit of his conversation and advice upon the legal perplexities and questions that every day turn up to one. I have always found him learned and instructive. I have derived vast advantage from his professional companionship, and have felt the superiority of his legal intellect and acquirements. This was a friendship, sir, of which I must long mourn the loss; for these are vacancies which, as we progress in life, we live to learn are never filled.

I move, sir, the adoption of the following resolutions:

Resolved, That this meeting has heard with deep regret of the death of their late fellow member, JOHN SANDERSON.

Resolved, That while Mr. Sanderson had by his varied talents and acquirements endeared himself to his friends, he had also by his large legal attainments secured the respect and confidence of the public and of this bar.

Resolved, That this meeting tenders its sincere sympathy to the family and kindred of Mr. Sanderson for their untimely bereavement.

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed who, with the Chairman and Secretary, shall communicate to the family of Mr. Sanderson the proceedings of this meeting.

The Chairman having announced that the resolutions were before the meeting—

The Secretary, Mr. Montgomery, said he had known the deceased long and intimately, and bore mournful testimony to the truth of the remarks of Mr. Ingersoll. Mr. Sanderson was in many respects a remarkable man; he was a ripe scholar, not only in the Common Law of England, to whose fountains he had ascended, but in her classics; the treasures of which were, from his retentive memory, freely furnished for the instruction and entertainment of his friends. To his love for the law and literature of the mother country he added a devout admiration for the liturgy of her Church; with the beauties and spirit of which he was deeply imbued. His retiring and amiable disposition induced him to decline the strife of the forum, while in the less obtrusive paths of his profession his learning made him a safe counsellor.

By the social circle of which he was the ornament and attraction Mr. Sanderson's loss will be deeply and sincerely felt.

After some further remarks by the Chairman of the meeting, testifying his respect for the memory of Mr. Sanderson and his high appreciation for his legal attainments, the Resolutions were unanimously adopted. It was on motion

Resolved, That the proceedings be published and the meeting adjourned.

 Hail! honored age of grand progression, While each one clings to his profession, And science moves with onward motion, To suit each wayward thought and notion, Bringing to light some new invention, More strange than modern wit can mention, Or Genius paint with true endeavor, Though making graphic strides forever, While Reason urges proud Ambition, To strive for wondrous Competition; Yet, in this age of glorious Art, We can the meed of praise impart, When meritorious efforts claim A modest puff to gild the name: And thus we call, with honest pride, Attention to the Painter's side.— A man who bravely knows his calling, Whose works are worthy of extolling, A model Artist of the day, And most obliging in his way, GEORGE H. We thus invite each one and all, To give this worthy man a call. Who will, we venture to engage, Feel grateful for your patronage.*

NOTICE.
 THE Subscriber takes this method of informing his numerous friends, and the public in general, that he is now prepared to execute in a superior manner, every variety of HOUSE and SIGN PAINTING, Graining, Bronzing, Gilding on Glass and Stained Glass, Calomining Ceilings, Walls, &c., &c. China and Glass Painting executed in a superior manner, and warranted not to CRACK. Ceilings cleaned and Whitened, and made equal to new, at a cost little over that of whitewash. The subscriber would state here that it frequently occurs that persons attempt to use this article who have no knowledge of it whatever, either in the mixing or putting it on, and the consequence is, the job is spoiled, and the article condemned without a proper trial.— So also with CHINA GLOSS; to make a good job it requires a practical knowledge of the use of the brush, as also the making of the Gloss. In regard to the ZINC WHITE, the subscriber would most respectfully recommend it as an article far superior to any other paint now in use, for whiteness and durability of color.
 The Subscriber would respectfully solicit a portion of the patronage of those getting Painting done. Feeling grateful for the many favors already bestowed by his friends, he still hopes to share their patronage by unremitting attention to their calls. Those who have large contracts to give out, need have no hesitancy in calling, as he is prepared to give every satisfaction in regard to work, both in reference and security, for the faithful performance of all agreements.
 The Subscriber can be found at the S. E. CORNER OF FOURTH AND WALNUT STS. where he will be happy to receive any orders.

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND.

OFFICE, NEXT DOOR TO THE POST OFFICE, No. 83 Dock Street, PHILADELPHIA, 1854.

INTEREST FIVE PER CENT. PER ANNUM.
 THE STATE SAVINGS FUND, No. 83 DOCK Street, next door to THIRD Street, and adjoining the POST OFFICE, receives MONEY on deposit daily, from 9 in the morning until 3 in the afternoon; also Monday evenings, from 7 to 9 o'clock. Interest is allowed on deposits at the rate of FIVE PER CENT per annum. Deposits will be returned in whole, or in part, on demand, without notice.
 The popularity of this Office with all classes of the community, both in town and country, and its consequent success, may be ascribed, in part, to the following substantial reasons:
 1st. It offers a convenient, responsible, and profitable Depository to Executors, Administrators, Assignees, Collectors, Agents, and all public officers—to Attorneys, Trustees, Societies and Associations, whether incorporated or otherwise—to married or single ladies—to Students, Merchants, Clerks, and business men generally—to Mechanics, Farmers, Minors of either sex, and all who have funds, much or little, to deposit, where they may be had at any time, with Five Per Cent interest added.
 2d. Depositors receive Books, with an abstract of the By-laws and regulations, in which is entered their deposits, which Books serve as vouchers. They may designate in case of sickness, death, or absence, who shall receive their deposits, without the intervention of Executors or Administrators. Any one or more persons may deposit in his, her, or their name, or for any other person or persons.
 3d. A Report is made each year to the Legislature and Councils of the City.
 4th. The Officers are sworn before they enter upon their duties, in addition to giving Bonds with sureties.
 5th. The State Savings Fund is a real Savings Fund—not an Insurance and Trust Company. The Charter of this Institution avoids the Insurance business.
 6th. Deposits may be withdrawn by checks after the manner customary with Banks. Check Books will be furnished to depositors without charge.

Opinions by Judge Hare.

LENTZ v. LENTZ.

Case stated.

Had this case arisen at common law there would have been no doubt that the devise to Ann and Louisa Lentz made them joint tenants; nor that the death of Ann left her surviving sister Louisa sole tenant of the land devised. But the Act of March 31st, 1812, with reference to estates in joint tenancy, seems to preclude this construction, or rather the right of the remaining devisee to succeed by survivorship to the share of the other. Such, at least, is unquestionably the law with regard to joint tenancies in fee, although there may be some room for doubt whether the Act, which speaks throughout of the share of the deceased as a continuing interest, and provides for its descent or transfer to heirs, executors or administrators, and its liability to the charge of debts, was meant to apply to joint estates for life, where nothing is given which can descend, or in any way ensure as assets after death, and where the extinction of the right of survivorship, deprives the survivor of a benefit, without conferring what it takes from him, on those who claim under him, and thus in effect curtails the estate granted, for the benefit of the grantor and his heirs. Be this as it may, there is no doubt, that the express intent of the testator may still confer an estate upon two for their joint lives, in such wise, that the share of the person first deceased, shall enure on his death for the benefit of the survivor. And it is equally plain, that if this can be done by express words, it will equally result from an implication pervading the whole will, and clearly deducible from the spirit of its provisions. The object of the Act was to cut off survivorship by operation of law, aside from or contrary to the meaning of the donor, and not to restrain or preclude any direction, which he may think fit to impress on the transmission of his property, within the limits prescribed by the law of perpetuities. Here the testatrix, after giving the house in which she resided to her daughters Ann and Louisa, so long as they should remain single, goes on to provide that the same should be sold immediately upon their death or marriage, and the proceeds divided among her children, as afterwards designated; in which designation she includes Ann, Louisa, and four other children, all then surviving, and the grandchildren of her son Jacob, who had died before the execution of the will. The meaning of the testatrix is not free from obscurity, especially on the point, of what was to be done with the property in the event of the marriage of either Ann or Louisa, the other still continuing sole and unmarried. But looking at what she has said, we have no doubt, that her purpose was to provide a home or support for her two unmarried daughters, so long as they continued in a condition to need it, nor that this would be frustrated by holding, that a sale should take place, and the proceeds be distributed among the whole family, immediately upon the death of either, thus turning the other out of doors, and leaving her with what might be insufficient means of procuring another residence. And it would be no less contrary to the spirit of the will, than to a well established rule of construction, to interpret it as leaving the share given to Ann undisturbed, during the interval between her death and that of Louisa, which would not only produce a partial intestacy, but defeat the object of making those who were evidently the primary objects of the testatrix's bounty, as comfortable as her somewhat limited means would permit. On the whole, we are of opinion, though not without difficulty, that the interest given to Ann vested on her death in Louisa, and consequently enter judgment on the case stated for the defendant.

KUTZ v. BINNS.

Rule for a New Trial.

The first witness produced by the plaintiff in this case, certainly went very far to negative the right which he was called to establish, by proving that the defendant had made the contract on which he was sued as a mere agent, and that the action should consequently have been brought against the witness, who was, and was known to be the principal in the transaction. If the testimony thus given, left any doubt on the minds of the jury, it might have been removed by the plaintiff's second witness; who stated on cross-examination, that the plaintiff was to have six hundred dollars if his plans gave satisfaction, and then went on to say that they did not, but were rejected after a brief examination. Expressum facit cessare tacitum; and the express promise to pay a sum certain for the work if accepted, necessarily negated the existence of the implied contract to pay as much as it was worth, on which the plaintiff seeks to retain and justify the verdict. Here, at least, is no conflict of opposing witnesses; the testimony is all one way, and is all the plaintiff's; and the jury have obviously allowed their sympathies to get the better of their reason. The rule for a new trial is therefore made absolute.

LAWS OF PENNSYLVANIA.

SESSION OF 1856.

An act relating to the rights of property of husband and wife.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted, &c., That so much of the act relating to the rights of married women, and for other purposes, passed the eleventh of April, eighteen hundred and forty-eight, as requires the consent of a married woman to be first had and obtained, or the acknowledgment of her deed or mortgages, when conveying her own real estate, to be made differently from that which she is authorized to make when she joins her husband in conveying his real estate to bar her right of dower therein, is hereby repealed, and all deeds or mortgages of any married woman heretofore acknowledged jointly with her husband, so as to bar her right of dower or interest in her husband's lands, shall be effectual and valid to debar her in respect to her own real estate.

SECTION 2. That nothing in said act contained, shall be construed to authorize any married woman to contract any debt or liability, so as to make liable her husband or his estate further than she might have done before the passage of said act.

SECTION 3. That whenever any husband shall have deserted or separated himself from his wife, or neglected or refused to support her, or she shall have been divorced from his bed and board, it shall be lawful for her to protect her reputation by an action for slander or libel, and she shall also have the right by action to recover her separate earnings or property: Provided, That if her husband be the defendant the action shall be in the name of a next friend.

SECTION 4. That whenever any married woman of lawful age, shall be entitled to a legacy or to a distributive share of the personal estate, or of the proceeds of the real estate of a deceased person, it shall be competent for her either in person or by attorney to sign, seal, and deliver, a refunding bond in pursuance of the act of Assembly in such case made and provided, and also to execute all such other instruments, and to perform all such other acts as may by law be necessary to be done, or may be lawfully required by the executor or administrator upon the payment to her of the moneys to be distributed as aforesaid, with the same effect for the intent and purpose of binding her separate estate as if she were sole and unmarried.

Approved April 11th, 1856.

An act to prevent the imprisonment of witnesses in certain cases.

Whereas, under the existing laws a practice has been adopted by judicial magistrates, of committing witnesses in criminal cases where they are willing but unable to procure bail for their attendance to testify.

And whereas, this practice is grievous and most oppressive upon the poor and innocent, and in some instances has subjected them to long imprisonment and to heavier penalties than the actual offenders themselves.

And whereas, it is cruel and unjust, and contrary to the sound policy of criminal laws, that persons who have committed no offence, but who are simply called upon to establish the offence of others, should be consigned to imprisonment and exposed to disgrace.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted, &c., That from and after the passage of this act, no witness in any case, who enters his or her recognizance in such sum as the magistrate may demand, to appear and testify in such prosecutions as require his testimony, shall be committed to prison by the judge, magistrate, or alderman before whom any criminal charge may be preferred: Provided, however, That in all cases triable in Oyer and Terminer, where a positive oath is made and reduced to writing, and signed by the deponent, setting forth sufficient reasons or facts to induce the firm belief on the part of the judge, magistrate, or alderman, that any witness will abscond, elope, or refuse to appear upon the trial, that then, and in such case, the magistrate or alderman may exact bail of said witness, and in default thereof commit the witness to testify.

Approved April 22d, 1856.

An Act respecting the Estates of non-resident Wards.

SEC. 1. Be it enacted, &c., That in all cases where any Guardian and his Ward may both be non residents of this State, and such Ward may be entitled to property of any description in this State, such Guardian on producing satisfactory proof to the Orphans' Court of the proper county, by certificates according to the acts of Congress in such cases, that he has given bond and security in the State in which he and his Ward reside in double the amount of the value of the property, as Guardian, and that a law similar to this exists in the State where the Guardian and Ward resides, and it is found that a removal of the property will not conflict with the terms and limitations attending the right by which the Ward owns the same, then such Guardian may demand or sue for, and remove any such property to the place of residence of himself and Ward.

SEC. 2. That when such non-resident Guardian shall produce an exemplification from under the seal of the office (if there be a seal), of the proper court in the State of his residence, containing all the entries on record, in relation to his appointment and giving bond, and authenticated as required by the act of Congress as aforesaid, the Orphans' Court of the proper county in this State, may cause suitable orders to be made, discharging any resident guardian, executor or administrator, and authorizing the delivering and passing over of such property, and also requiring receipts to be passed and recorded, if deemed advisable, provided the benefits of this act shall not be extended to the citizens of any State in which a similar act does not exist, or may not hereafter be passed. And, provided also, that in all cases thirty days notice shall be given to the resident Guardian, executor or administrator of the intended application for the order of removal; and the court may reject the application, and refuse such order whenever it is satisfied that it is for the interest of the Ward, that such removal shall not take place.

Approved April 21, 1856.

An Act relating to the service of process in certain cases.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

[From the Buffalo Commercial.]

"Unlike the ordinary biographical dictionaries, it is not executed by a dry plodder, or mere literary hack, but is the fruit of the combined labor of some twenty of the most distinguished literary men now living in Great Britain, each writing the articles on such names as had been rendered familiar to him by the character of his studies."

[From the Boston Transcript.]

"The names of most of the celebrated authors, architects, artists, composers, dramatists, divines, discoverers, engineers, journalists, men of science, ministers, monarchs, novelists, painters, philanthropists, poets, politicians, savans, sculptors, statesmen, travelers, voyagers and warriors of the day are here to be found, with the leading circumstances of their lives recorded."

"It is a most valuable work of reference and will doubtless have a large sale."

[From the Boston Atlas.]

"The house of Appleton's have earned for themselves the grateful consideration of the American world of letters, by the republication, though in a greatly improved and enlarged form, of the Cyclopædia of Biography, recently published by Mr. Rich in London. The American book is issued in a large double-columned octavo volume of over a thousand pages, and is altogether the best biographical dictionary, so far as a combination of completeness and convenience is sought, that we are acquainted with. It supplies an important want to the literary men of this country, and its merits will, we doubt not, be gratefully appreciated by the public."

[From the New York Saturday Courier.]

"The typography of this work is on a par with its intrinsic merits, and numerous likenesses and other embellishments materially enhance its value. Every library, private and public, needs a standard work on this subject, and none will be found better adapted either for the student or for popular use than the work under review."

[From the North American.]

"The American edition of this work is very copiously and beautifully illustrated with portraits, birthplaces, tombs, and other memorials of the distinguished persons whose memoirs are given; and the work is so thoroughly done that its popularity will soon become an accomplished fact."

[From the Daily Times, Philadelphia.]

"This is a beautiful volume of 1,056 pages royal octavo, embellished with some 500 or 600 engravings comprising portraits, birthplaces, tombs, and other memorials of distinguished men. The work is based on a recent English publication, in which but little notice was taken of Americans. The present edition supplies that deficiency; and, in editing it, Dr. Hawks has followed the original plan of assigning particular classes of characters to such American writers as were best qualified, from their peculiar studies, to furnish good memorials of them."

[From the Boston Advertiser.]

"A well arranged volume like this is of acknowledged use to all readers or students. One which gave only the principal dates of the lives of distinguished persons would be of great value, as it would put the reader in the track of other sources of information. But this work does much more, and will be received as a most valuable and interesting addition to all libraries."

[From the Worcester Palladium.]

"The uninitiated public can have but a faint idea of the immense labor through which this accuracy is obtained; and, therefore, it is illy prepared to award a full measure of justice to the patient industry and sound scholarship that make such a contribution as this to the literature of a people."

GREAT FIRE, MAY 1, 1856.

HERRING'S PATENT CHAMPION SAFES!

What the People Say!

PHILADELPHIA, 2d May, 1856.

MESSRS. FARRELS & HERRING—GENTLEMEN—The Herring's Patent Champion Fire-Proof Safe, which we purchased of you in the month of January last, was situated in our Counting-Room, in the second story of 231 Market street, on the night of the Great Fire, 1st May, 1856, and fell with the burning building in that conflagration.

The Safe was reached this afternoon, after an exposure of THIRTY-SIX HOURS to intense heat, and although the brass plates on the front of the Safe were melted, and the exterior shows the evidence of extreme heat, the inside casing was found to be UNTOUCHED BY FIRE, and with the exception of being a little steamed is now as good as new. EDW. SEMANS & CO.

MESSRS. FARRELS & HERRING—GENTLEMEN—The Herring's Patent Champion Fire-Proof Safe, of your manufacture, which we purchased nearly a year since, was in the centre of our building at the time of its destruction in the Great Fire of May 1, 1856.

We had removed the greater portion of our Books before the fire reached us, but left some of them, together with a number of loose papers, inside, purposely to test the security of the safe. After thirty-eight hours of severe roasting, we found the interior of the Safe, upon opening, not only bright and sound, but the Books and Papers as free from fire as when first put in.

We shall require another Safe as soon as we get a new location, and want none but your "Champion."

Yours, &c., FISHER & BROTHER, No. 15 North Sixth street. The public will bear in mind that the "HERRING'S PATENT" is the only Safe made in this City, which has never failed to preserve its contents in accidental fires. The TWO SAFES from the above Great Fire can now be seen in front of the OLD STAND, No. 34 WALNUT STREET.

This Number commences the THIRTIETH VOLUME and the SEVENTH YEAR of HARPER'S NEW MONTHLY MAGAZINE, with the extraordinary issue of One Hundred and Sixty Thousand Copies. The Publishers have endeavored, by a well directed use of the abundant resources at their command, to render it not only the cheapest, but the most attractive and most useful Magazine for popular reading, in the world; and the extent to which their efforts have been successful is indicated by the fact, that it has attained a greater circulation than any similar periodical ever issued.

Special efforts will be made to render it still more interesting and valuable during the coming year. The new volume commences with the present Number. No labor or expense will be spared to render it in every way, and in all its departments, still more worthy of the unparalleled favor with which it has been received. HARPER'S NEW MONTHLY MAGAZINE owes its success to the fact, that it presents more reading matter, of a BETTER quality, in a MORE ELEGANT style, and at a CHEAPER rate, than any other publication.

The Publication of Mr. Dickens's "Little Dorrit" was commenced in the January Number of this Magazine. This charming story is generally acknowledged to be the best of his productions, and occupies but about one-tenth of each Number, and is issued to Subscribers at a cost of about TWO CENTS each!

It is the foremost Magazine of the day. The fireside never had a more delightful companion, nor the million a more entertaining friend than Harper's Magazine.—Methodist Protestant (Baltimore.)

The most popular monthly in the world. It has become one of the literary wonders of this country. A MERITORIOUS CARD.
Hail! honored age of grand progression,
While each one clings to his profession,
And science moves with onward motion,
To suit each wayward thought and notion,
Bringing to light some new invention,
More strange than modern wit can mention,
Or Genius paint with true endeavor,
Though making graphic strides forever,
While Reason urges proud Ambition,
To strive for wondrous Competition;
Yet, in this age of glorious Art,
We can the meed of praise impart,
When meritorious efforts claim
A modest puff to gild the name:
And thus we call, with honest pride,
Attention to the Painter's side,—
A man who bravely knows his calling,
Whose works are worthy of extolling,
A model Artist of the day,
And most obliging in his way,
GEORGE H. BANCROFT,—mark the name,
In CHESTNUT STREET you'll find the same,
Call at Five Hundred and Thirty-One,
You'll get the best of painting done,
In Modern or in Classic Order,
From templed shrine to parlor border,
In magic tints of every hue,
To Signs embossed in gold and blue,
Or Figure Head, or Church, or Steeple,
He is resolved to please the people,
And whether foe, or friend or neighbor,
Will charge but moderate for his labor.
We thus invite each one and all,
To give this worthy man a call.
Who will, we venture to engage,
Feel grateful for your patronage.*

* We would particularly invite public attention to our friend Mr. BANCROFT, who is a young, enterprising beginner, and who has gone to vast expense in fitting up his establishment, and is now ready to receive orders for Painting, in all its various branches, at 531 and 533 Chestnut street, 5 doors east of Seventeenth st.

GREAT FIRE, MAY 1, 1856.
HERRING'S PATENT CHAMPION SAFES!
What the People Say!

PHILADELPHIA, 2d May, 1856.
MESSRS. FARRELS & HERRING—
GENTLEMEN—The Herring's Patent Champion Fire-Proof Safe, of your manufacture, which we purchased of you in the month of January last, was situated in our Counting-Room, in the second story of 231 Market street, on the night of the Great Fire, 1st May, 1856, and fell with the burning building in that conflagration.
The Safe was reached this afternoon, after an exposure of THIRTY-SIX HOURS to intense heat, and although the brass plates on the front of the Safe were melted, and the exterior shows the evidence of extreme heat, the inside casing was found to be UNTOUCHED BY FIRE, and with the exception of being a little steamed is now as good as new.
EDW. SEMANS & CO.

MESSRS. FARRELS & HERRING—
GENTLEMEN—The Herring's Patent Champion Fire-Proof Safe, of your manufacture, which we purchased nearly a year since, was in the centre of our building at the time of its destruction in the Great Fire of May 1, 1856.
We had removed the greater portion of our Books before the fire reached us, but left some of them, together with a number of loose papers, inside, purposely to test the security of the safe. After thirty-eight hours of severe roasting, we found the interior of the Safe, upon opening, not only bright and sound, but the Books and Papers as free from fire as when first put in.
We shall require another Safe as soon as we get a new location, and want none but your "Champion."
Yours, &c.,
FISHER & BROTHER,
No. 15 North Sixth street.

The public will bear in mind that the "HERRING'S PATENT" is the only Safe made in this City, which has never failed to preserve its contents in accidental fires. THE TWO SAFES from the above Great Fire can now be seen in front of the OLD STAND, No. 34 WALNUT STREET.
FARRELS & HERRING,
Only Makers in this State of HERRING'S PATENT CHAMPION SAFES!

NOTICE.
THE Subscriber takes this method of informing his numerous friends, and the public in general, that he is now prepared to execute in a superior manner, every variety of HOUSE and SIGN PAINTING, Graining, Bronzing, Gilding on Glass and Stained Glass, Calomining Ceilings, Walls, &c., &c. China and Glass Painting executed in a superior manner, and warranted not to CRACK. Ceilings cleaned and Whitened, and made equal to new, at a cost little over that of whitewash. The subscriber would state here that it frequently occurs that persons attempt to use this article who have no knowledge of it whatever, either in the mixing or putting it on, and the consequence is, the job is spoiled, and the article condemned without a proper trial.— So also with CHINA GLOSS; to make a good job it requires a practical knowledge of the use of the brush, as also the making of the Gloss. In regard to the ZINC WHITE, the subscriber would most respectfully recommend it as an article far superior to any other paint now in use, for whiteness and durability of color.
The Subscriber would respectfully solicit a portion of the patronage of those getting Painting done. Feeling grateful for the many favors already bestowed by his friends, he still hopes to share their patronage by unremitting attention to their calls. Those who have large contracts to give out, need have no hesitancy in calling, as he is prepared to give every satisfaction in regard to work, both in reference and security, for the faithful performance of all agreements.
The Subscriber can be found at the S. E. CORNER OF FOURTH AND WALNUT STS. where he will be happy to receive any orders.

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND.

OFFICE, NEXT DOOR TO THE POST OFFICE;
No. 83 Dock Street,
PHILADELPHIA, 1854.

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND, No. 83 DOCK Street, next door to THIRD Street, and adjoining the POST OFFICE, receives MONEY on deposit daily, from 9 in the morning until 3 in the afternoon; also Monday evenings, from 7 to 9 o'clock. Interest is allowed on deposits at the rate of FIVE PER CENT per annum. Deposits will be returned in whole, or in part, on demand, without notice.
The popularity of this Office with all classes of the community, both in town and country, and its consequent success, may be ascribed, in part, to the following substantial reasons:
1st. It offers a convenient, responsible, and profitable Depository to Executors, Administrators, Assignees, Collectors, Agents, and all public officers—to Attorneys, Trustees, Societies and Associations, whether incorporated or otherwise—to married or single ladies—to Students, Merchants, Clerks, and business men generally—to Mechanics, Farmers, Minors of either sex, and all who have funds, much or little, to deposit, where they may be had at any time, with Five Per Cent interest added.
2d. Depositors receive Books, with an abstract of the By-laws and regulations, in which is entered their deposits, which Books serve as vouchers. They may designate in case of sickness, death, or absence, who shall receive their deposits, without the intervention of Executors or Administrators. Any one or more persons may deposit in his, her, or their name, or for any other person or persons.
3d. A Report is made each year to the Legislature and Councils of the City.
4th. The Officers are sworn before they enter upon their duties, in addition to giving Bonds with sureties.
5th. The State Savings Fund is a real Savings Fund—not an Insurance and Trust Company. The Charter of this Institution avoids the Insurance business.
6th. Deposits may be withdrawn by checks after the manner customary with Banks. Check Books will be furnished to depositors without charge.

The Governor has signed the Appropriation Bill, the Supplement to the Consolidation Act, the Act relating to Actions for Libel, and several others. We shall present all the Acts of Assembly of general force or local interest in our next numbers.

We invite the attention of our readers to the card of Mr. George Doll, which appears on another page. Mr. Doll's stock of canes is large and well selected, and is worthy the attention of those who design purchasing. He manufactures and mounts canes to order.

The Law Reporter—May, 1856.

EDITED BY JOHN LOWELL.

CROSSBY, NICHOLS, &amp; Co., BOSTON.

The present number of this old and well conducted Law Monthly comes to us replete with useful and interesting matter. The new feature, the publication of Abstracts of the Decisions of the Supreme Court of Mass., in advance of the regular reports, (which are necessarily somewhat delayed) cannot fail to add to the value of the Reporter. In our opinion this early promulgation of legal decisions, supplies a desideratum to the profession in this country, which the periodical press can alone afford, and should, we think, lead to a more extended appreciation of its value and adaptedness to the wants of the profession. No practicing lawyer in the union but would find the full value of a year's subscription in any three numbers of the Reporter. Those who doubt it had better try.

Opinion by Woodward, J.

JOHN C. CLARK v. THE TURNPIKE COMPANY.

The volumes commonly known as Smith's Laws of Pennsylvania, were published under legislative authority, and were designed to be a public repository of general or public statutes. They are competent evidence of such statutes. But of special or private acts, they contain for the most part, only the titles, dates, and a brief synopsis of sections or subjects, and of these, they are not the best, and therefore not the competent evidence. When a statute of this class is to be proved, it must be certified from the original rolls in the Secretary's Office, or the Pamphlet Laws be produced. On the trial of this cause, the fourth volume of Smith's Laws was introduced to prove the defendant an incorporated Turnpike Company, but the Act is not given in full. A few sections are printed, and the rest condensed into an editorial summary, and of the supplementary Act of 1806, no sections are given, but only a summary, still more brief: see pages 165 and 302. The volume was not evidence of these Acts, because it did not contain them. But still, the error of admitting it was unimportant, for under the pleadings on record, it was not necessary for the plaintiff to prove the corporate character of the defendant. The action was care. The narr charged that the defendant was a corporation, bound by law to keep their road and bridges in good order and repair, which they had neglected to do, whereby the plaintiff was injured. The Company appeared by counsel, and pleaded the general issue. This was an admission of the name and character in which they were sued. If there were a misnomer, it should have been pleaded in abatement, or if they meant to put their corporate existence in issue, there should have been a special plea. The evidence erroneously admitted, is therefore no ground for reversing, because it was superfluous.

The second point put to the court was that there was no evidence that the road, where the plaintiff went off, was part or portion of the road of the defendant. The object of counsel being to bring the court to a decision, that the Company's road did not extend beyond the bridge; this point was most unskillfully put: for "where the plaintiff went off," was a question of fact for the jury, and very much in doubt under the evidence. Some of the testimony represented it as happening at the bridge, and some as occurring beyond the bridge, near the top of the hill. The court could not be called on to assume that it was the icy hill which threw the plaintiff off the road, and then to rule as a conclusion of law, that the defendant was not liable. The cause of the injury was for the jury, and was properly submitted to them.

But the court also submitted to them to find whether the Company are liable for an injury caused by defects of the road beyond the bridge. The language of the court was, "the plaintiff further contends, that the road for some distance—some six or seven rods—from the bridge, was the Turnpike road of the Company, which is denied by the defendant. And if the injury did not occur precisely at the bridge, nor on account of any insufficiency in it, but on the road above the bridge, the defendants were liable, for they should, upon a road known to be dangerous, at times icy, have put up some wall or timber on the lower side of the road, so as to prevent wagons from sliding over the bank. The precise termination of the defendants' turnpike is not very well established, and evidence on both sides was given on that subject; the plaintiff contending that the turnpike extended up the hill to a large rock, which is described, whilst the defendants contended that their road ended directly at the bridge, at the end of the planks. The evidence is referred to jury.

It is apparent, that under this submission, the jury might have found the bridge faultless in all respects, and yet have assessed damages against the Company for not guarding the road on the hill properly against the consequences of ice. And yet, if that road was no part of their turnpike, if the law had conferred no powers on them beyond the bridge, it is equally manifest they could not be made liable for any defects in its construction. We think there was error in submitting the case so broadly to the jury. The imperfect sketch of the Act of Incorporation which the court had before them, showed that the Nequehening creek, near its entrance into the Lehigh, was fixed by the Legislature as the Southern terminus of the road, which this Company was authorized to build. The words of the Act of 1804 are, "from the North-eastern branch of the Sasquehanna to the Nequehening creek, where the wooden bridge near the mouth thereof crosses the same." And the 10th section enjoins that the Company "shall forever hereafter maintain and keep the same (road and bridge) in perfect repair." That bridge, then, by law, was the terminus of the road. The supplemental Act of 1806, had indeed authorised an extension beyond that point, but it was repealed in 1845, and no extension was ever made. Thus far, and no further, were the Company authorized to receive tolls, and to exercise corporate rights and powers. Beyond the bridge, southward, they had no authority after 1845, to construct or control a road, and of course were not liable for the defects of any road that existed there. And yet, required to bridge the creek, we hold they were bound to adapt their bridge to the safe and convenient use of any road leading to it. If it needed a railing, or wing walls, or filling up at the southern end to make it safe and convenient for travellers to enter upon or leave it, these the Company were bound to supply, and would be liable to damages for the consequences of their neglect. Had the court thus expounded the rights and duties of the Company, and then submitted the question whether the plaintiff's injury was caused by the Company's neglect, within these limits, the case would have been properly placed before the jury. But to set them to inquiring for the legal limits of the Company's duties, and to permit them to punish the Company for not repairing six or seven rods of a road over which they had no more jurisdiction than over any other Turnpike Road in Carbon county were manifest errors. The plaintiff's narr alleged the bridge as the cause of the injury. It was matter of defence that the icy hill caused it. But as the case went to the jury, the Company were liable, whether the hill or the bridge did the mischief. For the road on the hill they were not responsible, for the bridge they were.

But suppose the bridge sufficient for all ordinary seasons, was not adequate to the public wants at the foot of such a hill, and in a season of ice and snow. We think the Company were bound to make it adequate. That is, they were bound to keep their bridge in such condition that travellers of common prudence, and exercising ordinary care, could at all seasons enter and pass it in safety.

We see nothing in the other errors assigned upon the charge.

The evidence of McCrea, mentioned in the bill of exception, seems to us to have been wholly irrelevant. His notice to the gate-keeper to fill the hole in the road, even if it were proved that the Company filled it, which it was not, could not affect the question of the Company's liability.

The judgment is reversed, and a venire de novo awarded.

Opinions by Judge Lowrie.

ARMSTRONG C. P.

MOHNEY v. COOK.

One who erects an unlawful obstruction in a navigable stream, and thereby occasions damages to another, cannot set up as a defence that the other was unlawfully engaged in worldly employment on the Lord's day, at the time the injury happened to him.

The declaration that Christianity is part of the law of the land, is a summary description of an existing and very obvious condition of our institutions. We are a Christian people, in so far as we have entered into the spirit of Christian institutions, and become imbued with the sentiments and principles of Christianity; and we cannot be imbued with them, and yet prevent them from entering into and influencing, more or less, all our social institutions, customs, and relations, as well as all our individual modes of thinking and acting. It is involved in our social nature, that even those among us who reject Christianity, cannot possibly get clear of its influence, reject those sentiments, customs and principles which it has spread among the people, so that, like the air we breathe, they have become the common stock of the whole society, and essential elements of its life.

It is perfectly natural therefore, that a Christian people should have laws to protect their day of rest from desecration. Regarding it as a day necessarily and divinely set apart for rest from worldly employments, and for the enjoyment of spiritual privileges, it is simply absurd to suppose that they would leave it without any legislative protection against the disorderly and immoral. The sentiment that sustains it must find expression through those who are elected to represent the will of their constituents.

So far as relates to the criminality of the act which we are now to consider, the mind of the State is expressed in the law that forbids all worldly employment on the Lord's day, under a penalty of four dollars. Being a law to enforce and protect a general and most valuable custom, it is not to be subjected to a narrow interpretation. But does the law, besides the penalty which it expresses, involve another, that he, who, while breaking the Sabbath, suffers wrong from the act of another, shall be without remedy? This would seem to be contrary to the rule that requires that penal statutes shall be construed strictly as to the punishment, so that it shall not be enlarged by construction.

It is supposed, however, that this rule does not apply to this law, seeing that, where contracts are made on the Lord's day, the parties incur the penalty, and besides this, neither of the parties can recover on the contract. But this instance falls under another rule, that executory contracts made under forbidden circumstances, or on forbidden subjects, institute no legal duty, and therefore a legal claim for a breach of duty must have some other foundation. They are not in fact void, if the parties perform them in good faith. They are then executed contracts, and the State will protect titles thus created, against all wrong doers; 15 Shepley, 463. An assignment for the benefit of creditors is void, so far as executory, if not recorded according to law; but valid, so far as executed, before it is objected to by any one having a right; 5 Watts & S. 100. A deceit practised in making a forbidden contract is remediless, because the incident goes with the principle; 12 Met. 24. So, if an insurance on a prohibited voyage; 1 Doug. 241. In such cases, if there be any relation between the parties, it depends upon the facts, and not upon the contract.

But the defence here is mainly put upon another principle, that if a man, by his own fault, contributed to the accident, he cannot recover. Even this rule has some qualifications. A sailor getting an excessive flogging for an offence, or one who gets an excessive beating in an affray, begun by himself; or the excessive abatement of a nuisance; or one who is injured by a spring gun, while trespassing on another man's ground; 4 Bing. 628; is not without remedy; for the law requires him, who takes upon himself the remedy of retaliation or punishment, even in cases of apparent necessity, to see that the measure of it be not excessive. Apply the reason to the present case, and the defendant is not justified; for he occasioned a penalty much more severe than that of the statute.

There are, no doubt, cases wherein an injured party will be remediless, because of his own fault, even when that fault does not contribute to the accident. A vessel engaged in the slave trade, piracy, or smuggling, and injured by another; or the keeper of a gambling house, injured in his business by a neighboring nuisance, could have no remedy. Not, however, because the persons are out of the protection of the law, for their offence, nor because their illegal business brought them to the place of danger; but because their business itself, with all its instruments, is outlawed. Prohibited contracts, prohibited trades and prohibited things, receive no legal protection; but persons are never outlawed, and their lawful property is under the protection of the State, even when used improperly.

It is very apparent, therefore, that in considering this case, we must be careful in our distinctions. The fourth and eighth commandments are not confounded because a man steals on the Sabbath day, and, on a conviction for Sabbath breaking, we do not punish for theft. And so the penalties for carelessness and for Sabbath breaking, are totally distinct, and the laws out of which they arise, are distinct in all their purposes and features.

The law relating to the Sabbath defines a duty of the citizen to the State, and to the State only; and hence it may be very proper for the State to refuse a remedy against itself or against any of its subdivisions, where an injury arises from bad roads, to one who is unlawfully travelling on the Lord's day; 10 Met. 363. But we should work a confusion of relations, and lend a very doubtful assistance to morality, if we should allow one offender against the law, to the injury of another, to set off against the plaintiff that he too is a public offender; 34 Maine, 116; 5 Porter, 208. An insurer of a ship is not relieved from his contract, because the master started on his voyage in violation of the law for the protection of sailors' rights; 7 Man. & G. 457. Nor can a buyer of spirits refuse payment, because the seller violated the revenue laws in the form of the sale; 3 Barn. & A. 221. A man may be punished for getting drunk, or for riding furiously along the street; and yet, if in such circumstances, and not because of any carelessness, he fall into a ditch, the man who improperly dug it could have no excuse. A breach of duty to the State does not necessarily involve a breach of duty to the defendant in such cases, and when it does not, it is simply an irrelevant fact, unless the law gives it some express form.

The law requiring care in avoiding accidents, defines a duty to individuals only. It is most frequently applied to travel upon highways of land or water; though it applies to all cases in which persons are so near together that they are liable to injure each other by accident. It recognizes the relation thus naturally arising, and declares the law of that relation to be mutual care. The rule that the party who sues, must be without fault himself, has no other object than to prevent such fault, in circumstances of danger, as may contribute to the injury. It does not allow a party who does not take proper care of himself in such circumstances, to demand from another compensation for an injury which he may have himself occasioned.

In cases of this kind, the law does not inquire at all into the plaintiff's fault, except on proof that the defendant did the act from which the injury arises. Then, if it appear that the injury was not wilful, 5 Watts & S. 24, and then only is it relevant to inquire whether the plaintiff, with due care, might not have avoided the injury, and this shows the only kind of fault which is admitted to silence his complaint. It must be a failure of duty under the circumstances of danger; a failure of duty to the party who caused the danger, so that it may be said that he brought the damage on himself.

We cannot see that Sabbath breaking is a fault of this description. If there is any secret and mysterious connection between such a fault and the event here complained of, then it falls under the rule causa proxima, non remota spectatur, for the law judges of such causes only "by the outward appearance." It is only when we can discover no human fault contributing to the accident, that the law calls it an act of Providence.

It is said, however, that had it not been for the plaintiff's transgression of the law, his boat would not have been at the defendant's dam when it was. True enough, and so might it be said of boats and rafts arriving at Pittsburg on Monday, they would not have been there on Monday, had they not run on Sunday, and would have been saved from a certain accident then happening to them. But when we are investigating the causes or conditions of an event, we investigate all the circumstances of the time and place, and ascertain their influence. But the time is not one of the circumstances of itself, and time cannot be a cause of anything, except figuratively.

We acquire no additional light by the suggestion that the plaintiff had no right of highway on the Lord's day, for his worldly business; for this is only asserting one of the incidental results of the law. It could just as truly be said that a man's right to his farm, or factory, or boat, undergoes a similar qualification; yet no doubt he would have redress against any one injuring them wilfully or carelessly. Besides, it was not for the protection of roads, but of the Lord's day, that the law was passed, and the plaintiff could not have been punished as for an unlawful use of the road.

The maxim of the Roman law, in pari delicto, &c., has no influence in the case. As the Romans applied it, it is a mere logical rule that, where the judgment of the law is balanced on the evidence, that suit must fail. Then, quare non poterit eis, qui tenent, quam qui persequitur? Dig. 45, l. 91, 3.

It is admitted here, that in a case of wilful trespass, this defence could not be allowed; and we may take this admission as indicating a definition of the rule. Then, in any other case, it will be allowed, and all freight and wages earned by or on steamboats, are tainted with illegality, if partly earned on the Lord's day; no insurance covers the risks of running on that day on inland highways, and all accidents must be absolutely charged to the carriers. Perhaps, if these and other consequences had been suggested to the counsel, they would have accepted them; but we cannot, for this would be adding penalties to the law that were not thought of when it was passed. Important as is the day of rest for man; important as are the religious institutions connected with it, and the civilization and moral refinement that grow out of and depend upon it and its institutions; important and necessary for all man's highest and noblest aims as is the religion, which, on that day, sends forth its strongest influence, we cannot protect it by any such latitudinarian interpretation of the law, which we are appointed to administer, as is expected of us here.

Judgment reversed, and a new trial awarded.

WM. FARIES' APPEAL AND THOMAS REATH'S APPEAL.

This is nothing like a devise or bequest of a remainder or residue, to the next of kin, on the death of the first taker, without having made an appointment, and cases of this character; 3 Ves. p. 224; 15 id. 537; 18 id. 49; must be rejected. Setting aside all the words that are appropriate to the real estate alone, the language as to the personal property constitutes a bequest of it all to Mrs. Faries and her executors and administrators, for her separate use, as if she were a feme sole. All the words beyond this are mere redundance. Assuming, then, that such restrictions on the title are good, without a trustee, then by this bequest, Mrs. Faries became the absolute owner of the property. It is given to her and her executors and administrators, which is a full title. The separate use clause was only intended to make this absolute title more secure by guarding it against her husband. It can have no tendency to turn her title into a life estate, with a power of appointment. And when she died, her title passed to her administrator, to be distributed according to law, and as she died without issue, her husband is her sole distributee.

With us, it makes no difference as to the distribution, whether her right was a legal or an equitable one. Even if the intent was manifest to change the law of distribution, it could not be regarded where the title is absolute, within certain bounds (very restricted as to personal property), the testator may declare the law of descents as to the property willed, but that law ends where the absolute title takes effect, and then the general law of the land takes its place.

There being in this case no creditors of Grace Brannan, the testator, Mrs. Fairies was entitled to the personal estate absolutely as the residuary estate. And as she left no creditors and no issue, her husband is entitled to her personal estate absolutely.

DECREE.

This cause came on to be heard at the late December term of this court, on appeals by Wm. Fairies, and by Thos. Reath, administrator de bonis non of Grace Brannan, severally, from the decree of the Orphans' Court of Philadelphia, and was submitted by counsel on printed arguments, and now in full consideration thereof, it is ordered, adjudged and decreed, that the decree of the said orphans' court be reversed, annulled, and held for naught, and this court now proceeding to make such decree, in the premises as the said orphans' court ought to have made, do order, adjudge and decree that the balance in the hands of the said Wm. Fairies, as administrator of his wife Elizabeth, belongs to him the said William absolutely in his own right and without liability to account to any one, and that the said Thos. Reath do pay to the said Wm. Fairies his costs by him herein expended and that the record be remitted to the orphans' court to be carried into effect.

Opinion by Lewis, C. J.

HIBBARD v. BOUVIER.

An unrecorded mortgage to secure the payment of a sum of money is not a lien against a subsequent judgment; and it follows, as a necessary consequence of this principle, that a purchaser under the judgment must also be protected from the mortgage, otherwise the judgment would be indirectly defeated. In such a case notice of the mortgage is not material; and, without regard to it, the judgment takes the proceeds, and the purchaser the land discharged of the mortgage. Simple v Burd, 7, S. & R. 290, Freedly v Hamilton, 17, S. & R. 70, Jaques v Weeks, 7 Watts 270. But this must be predicated of a mortgage, which under the law, as it stood before the act of 1830, might have been discharged by a sheriff's sale under a junior judgment. Where the mortgage is of such a nature that it could, under no circumstances, come into competition with the judgment for the proceeds, but must attach, if at all, upon the land in the hand of the purchaser, a different rule prevails. In the last case, the question is exclusively between the mortgage and the purchaser, and notice to the latter supplies the place of recording. The paper book contains neither a copy of the deed from Ralph Bouvier to James Bouvier, nor a full copy of the instrument called the mortgage. But from the extract given it would seem to be something more than a mortgage. In addition to the provisions for the support of Ralph Bouvier and his wife, they have vested in them by the instrument an estate for life in a part of the premises, with a right of possession. The provisions for their support are uncertain in amount and in duration, and not susceptible of calculation so as to be paid out of the proceeds. A sale under a junior judgment could not, even before 1830, have discharged such an interest. Nothing could extinguish it but a sale to a purchaser without notice. The purchaser had full notice in this case and therefore took subject to it.

Taking for truth all the evidence in relation to the arrangement of 27th Sept., 1844, it did not extinguish the interest of the plaintiff below; the plaintiff in error has no cause to complain of what was said in the charge on that branch of the case.

Eulalia Smith had no interest in the case at the time she gave her evidence. The provision intended for her was the voluntary act of her father. A recovery of the land by him would not give her a right of action. Besides, the provision was only to continue while she remained single. She was married long before she was offered as a witness.

In this view of the case the validity of the sheriff's sale is not material. But we are inclined to think that the purchaser is not affected by the irregularities complained of. All that was necessary to authorize a Ven. Ex. to sell the land in both counties, was that the inquiry required by the act of 1840, be returned and approved of by the court. Elliott v McDowell 10 Harris, 201. Judgment affirmed.

Opinions by Judge Knox.

VIOLETTA W. MILLER, ANDREW YOUNG AND OTHERS, vs. WILLIAM W. HALMAN.

This action was ejectment. Plaintiffs claimed title as heirs at law of James Bower, who was the owner and possessor of a farm containing one hundred and fifty-two acres, and including the lots in dispute from 1814 to 1831. A deed was given in evidence by the plaintiffs, bearing date on the 14th of April A. D. 1831, from their ancestor James Bower to A. W. Olwine, for the farm of one hundred and fifty-two acres, containing a reservation of the property in dispute in the following language, in the preamble. "And whereas, a part of the said premises has since been laid out into a town plot, now called and known by the name of Roth, and various lots thereof, hereinafter excepted and reserved, have been sold and disposed of by the said James Bower and wife, and the title thereto, are now vested in other persons." And in the description of the premises granted after embracing the whole farm, is this clause "excepting thereout lots No. 2, &c., in the said town of Roth as the same are laid out and numbered on an original plan or draft of said town which have been heretofore conveyed and in which the said James Bower and wife hold no estate."

The Common Pleas instructed the jury that this deed "showed title out of Bower in his life time and in defendants," and that their verdict should be for the defendants.

As the case is presented to us it is manifest that the court below were in error in saying that the deed from Bower to Olwine was evidence of title in Halman, the defendant. There was no connection shown between Olwine and Halman, or between Halman and any other person claiming title either for or adverse to Bower. We must consider Halman as in possession without title, and the question presented is, whether the recitals in the deed from Bower to Olwine were sufficient evidence of an outstanding title to defeat the plaintiffs' recovery.

The argument that the recitals are to have the effect of an estoppel is conclusively answered by the fact that Halman, the defendant, was neither a party nor a privy to the deed, and none other can take advantage of an estoppel, 7 Barr, 111; 10 Watts 11. It is even difficult to see how Olwine or one claiming title under him could make these recitals vouch an estoppel. A grantor may lawfully reserve any portion of an estate conveyed and the reason which he gives for the reservation cannot be questioned by the grantees. This is immaterial unless it in some manner affects the grantees interest. Bower did not convey the land in dispute to Olwine, and he gave as a reason, that he had no title to it; doubtless its value was deducted from the value of the entire farm, and whilst Olwine did not get title to the part excepted, he could not complain, for he paid nothing for it. Could he then complain even if the written statement of Bower was untrue? If not, the falsity of the recital might be shown even as against him. An estoppel can only be pleaded as asserted by one who was affected by the act which constitutes the estoppel. Miles v. Miles, 8 W. & S. 135.

If then the recitals in the deed cannot be treated as stopping the heirs of Bower from denying the fact recited, were they uncontradicted evidence of an outstanding title sufficient to protect the possession of a stranger to that title? After some hesitation a majority of the court are of opinion that they were not. It would be extremely difficult to prove affirmatively that no conveyance was ever given except it might be inferred from its absence from the record, and from the fact that no possession was ever taken or demanded by one claiming to have such a conveyance. The recitals in the deed can only be considered as a declaration of James Bower, that he had conveyed this property away to some person or persons, but to whom, it is not shown. If there had been evidence of the existence of a prior conveyance or grant and its validity was questioned, this declaration would have been strong corroborative proof, but standing by itself it does not establish an outstanding title. In Sanford v Decamp, 8 W. 542, little if any effect was given to the parol declaration of a party made to a stranger affecting his title. And in Foust v Ross, 1 Watts & Sergeant, 506, and in Hunter et al. v Cochran, 3 Barr, 105, it was ruled that where one enters without right he cannot protect his possession by evidence of an outstanding title unless that title be a valid and subsisting one. It cannot be said that there was evidence of a valid outstanding title for the proof such as it was, indicated no person as the owner or holder of the title and proper parties are essentially necessary to the validity of a conveyance.

Upon the whole case the Court should have instructed the jury that under the evidence, the plaintiffs were entitled to a verdict.

Judgment reversed and venire de novo awarded.

In the matter of the proceedings in a public road in LOWER MACUNZIE TOWNSHIP, LEHIGH COUNTY.

Upon exceptions to the report of road viewers, depending upon matters of fact, to be determined upon evidence other than the record, this court will not interfere with the decision of the court below unless there has been manifest error committed, and no evidence will be here considered other than that submitted to the Quarter Sessions and sent up with the record. We do not understand that the first exception is relied upon by the plaintiffs in error and if it were we would not interfere with its determination in the Sessions. Whether the persons misbehaved themselves, or whether any undue influence was brought to bear upon them, was peculiarly a proper subject to be determined by the court where the proceedings originated. We cannot say as matter of law, that the report was vicious because it was drawn by the attorney for the petitioners.

An attorney at law has no authority to administer an oath, but he may repeat the form of an oath to a witness as a road viewer, if requested to do so by one having authority, and if it is done in the actual presence of the person so authorizing it, there is no question of its legality. Here the viewer who is alleged not to have been duly sworn, was himself a justice of the peace, and the other viewers were any of them competent to administer an oath to one of their number. The report states that the viewers "were duly sworn according to law," and as the contrary does not appear we will presume that the form of the oath was read by Mr. Stiles to Mr. Lawall, in the presence of and by the direction of the other viewers.

The petition is sufficiently descriptive as to the commencement and termination of the road. The allegation made in the fourth exception, that there was a fraudulent misrepresentation; made by one of the petitioners, to the viewers in reference to the cost of making the new road, as part of it does not appear to have been sustained to the satisfaction of the Quarter Sessions. Order affirmed.

PLEA OF THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.

The fate of this plea has been liable to great vicissitudes; it has alternately suffered and enjoyed judicial smiles and frowns; being at one time viewed as the scapegoat of a dishonest conscience, at another as the asylum of indigent debtors, and occasionally as a broad cushion whereon citizens, if they can reach it unsued tho' indebted may quietly repose, freed from all terrors of threatened or apprehended litigation.

To the distinct recognition and establishment of this third category, the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania are manifestly drifting; and of this the case of Burr v. Burr, decided the fifth instant at Harrisburg and reported in your paper of to day, is the strongest and most recent proof. A creditor says to her debtor "Can thee let me have a little interest money on that note which I hold of thine?" and instantly pursuant to this request receives seven dollars. What does this request thus responded to show? Plainly that the creditor holds but one note of the debtor, and that this note is unpaid.

She produces on the trial the debtor's four hundred dollar ($400) note made in her favor prior to the above request, and no evidence is given of any other note. Hence the question arises, Is the note produced the identical note on which interest was paid? The Supreme Court reversing the Court below decide that this identity is a mere conjecture that there is no evidence of it to submit to a jury, that the evidence on the point is vague and uncertain, not sufficiently clear and unambiguous.

Happily the court have promulgated what would in their opinion be potent to establish the identity of the note. In Burr v. Burr, the note was not referred to by date or amount: a reference in either way would, it is the intimation of the court have removed all uncertainty and obscurity and would have established the note's identity. The enunciation of this position may be useful to the practising lawyer, but its incorporation with our jurisprudence may, be pronounced transient. As an artificial rule authoritatively established it is entitled to respect, but it has per se, no standing in reason. Apply the doctrine to the note in Burr's case. Take the request as it stands quoted, then vary it by the elements of date and amount, and say which of its three phases is most clear and probative of identity.

First.—Can thee let me have a little interest money on that note which I hold of thine?

Second.—Can thee let me have a little interest money on that $400 note which I hold of thine?

Third.—Can thee let me have a little interest money on that note of January 1850, which I hold of thine?

The two latter square with the rule; they are therefore in law proof of identity, and the first is not. But is this so in nature and reason? The second and third imply, or at least consists with the implication that there are other notes in her hands differing in amount or date respectively from that specified; the first means that she has but one note of the debtor's of any description. This first phase of the requests therefore, though henceforward worthless in our courts of law is strongest in those of reason.

It is to be regretted that instead of transient wavering decisions, some salutary principles respecting the acts and acknowledgments which remove the bar of the statute have not been clearly enunciated and established. This course would be productive of great advantage, as the contrary is of irremediable evil. When judgments are reversed, verdicts subverted and precedents overruled either on no ground of principle or on one obviously bad; when Courts instead of ascertaining and promulgating general rules of decision and procedure, become factories for rescripts on particular cases and for fluctuating opinions to different litigants, then indeed are laid widely and effectually amongst the people the seeds of a deep and well grounded discontent at the judiciary.

REBECCA BURR, Administratrix of ISRAEL R. BURR, deceased, v. MARTHA BURR.

Error to the D. C. of Phila. City and County.

This was an action of assumpsit brought by Martha Burr against the administratrix of her deceased son, Israel R. Burr, upon a promissory note, of which the following is a copy.

"Philadelphia, May 29, 1832.

"$400.

"Three hundred and sixty-five days after date, I promise to pay Martha Burr, four hundred dollars, or the interest thereof yearly, at six per cent.

(Signed,) ISRAEL R. BURR."

The defendant pleaded the statute of limitations, and the principal question in the case is, whether the evidence submitted by the plaintiff was sufficient, if believed by the jury, to avoid the bar of the statute?

Mary Penny, the daughter of the plaintiff, and the sister of the defendant, was the only witness examined. She testified as follows:

"I knew decedent, he was my brother; plaintiff is my mother. About two years before his death, I was present at an interview between him and my mother, at my daughter's residence, Walnut street, above Eighth. Mother was making a visit to me and my daughter. In the meantime, brother Israel came to see us—Mother says, 'Israel, can thee let me have a little interest money on that note which I hold of thine?' He said, 'How much would thee like mother?' She said, 'Four or five dollars,' and he gave her seven. He said, 'Is that sufficient?' She said, 'It is for the present.' They had a conversation at the same time, but I don't recollect what it was. I was very ill at the time; I was confined to my bed in the second story back room in my chamber, the conversation took place there." Israel Burr, the maker of the note, died in September, 1851.

The learned Judge of the District Court, reserving the point as to the insufficiency of the evidence, charged the jury, that if they believed the evidence, the plaintiff was entitled to recover; and the jury returned a verdict for the amount claimed to be due on the note, $400 principal, and $322 interest, upon which verdict judgment was entered for the plaintiff.

The constructive acknowledgment of a debt arising from part payment within six years before suit brought, is sufficient from which to infer a promise to pay. But this inference cannot be made until the part payment is clearly established; even where the acknowledgment is express, instead of constructive, or the promise direct, rather than inferential. No ambiguity or uncertainty in the one or the other can be tolerated. True, it was said in Hazelbaker v. Reeves, 2 Jones, 264, and Davis v. Steiner, 2 Harris, 275, that if the acknowledgment of the existence of a debt is clear, distinct, and unequivocal, the extent and form of the debt need not be stated in the acknowledgment, but may be proved in the same manner as though the statute had not been pleaded. These cases are scarcely to be reconciled with other adjudications by this court, upon the same point, and were not allowed the force of authority either, in Suter v. Sheller, 10 Harris, 309, or in Shitler v. Bremer, 11 Harris, 413. The better rule undoubtedly is, that the acknowledgment must not only be clear, distinct, and unequivocal of the existence of a debt, but that it must also be plainly referable to the very debt upon which the action is based. It matters not where the uncertainty lies, whether in the acknowledgment or in the identification, its existence is equally fatal to the plaintiff's recovery.

Take the case in hand for an illustration of the principle. There is a statute bar to the plaintiff's cause of action; to remove this bar, she relies upon a promise to pay within six years before the commencement of the suit. To sustain the promise, she neither gives evidence of an express agreement to pay, nor of a direct acknowledgment that the debt was unpaid; but from a small payment of interest, a constructive acknowledgment is to be inferred, and upon this constructive acknowledgment, the promise to pay is based. Let it be so; but let it first be shown that this payment of interest was made upon the note in suit. This is the very corner-stone of the superstructure, and if it has any inherent weakness, the action cannot be supported by it. And here we are compelled to say, that the evidence was too vague and uncertain, to establish a partial payment of the note in question. The note was not present, nor was it referred to by date, amount, or in any manner whatever. "Can thee let me have a little interest money on that note which I hold of thine?" says the mother. On what note? The one in suit? This is mere conjecture. It is said, that in the absence of evidence that there was any other note given by the son to the mother, the presumption is that this is the one upon which the payment was made, when it is recollected that this suit was commenced after the decease of the maker of the note, against his administratrix, it is apparent that the absence of evidence proving the existence of another note or notes, does not clearly show that none such were in existence two years before the intestate's decease. The burden was upon the plaintiff to prove clearly and distinctly that a partial payment was made upon the note sought to be recovered, within six years from the commencement of the action. Failing in this, the jury should have been directed to find for the defendant. We are of opinion that the plaintiffs' evidence was not sufficiently clear and unambiguous to authorize the jury to find that the payment was made upon the note in suit. The District Court erred in entering judgment upon the point reserved in favour of the plaintiff. The judgment should have been for the defendant, as there was no evidence of identity to submit to the jury.

The judgment of the District Court in favor of the Plaintiffs is reversed, and judgment is here entered for defendant with costs.

District Court.

Opinion by Judge Sharswood.
DERRICKSON v. NAGLE.

Rule for New Trial. Reserved Point.

This was a scire facias on a Mechanic's claim against Nagle, owner, and Brown, contractor. Brown was not the contractor for the whole building—he was not “the contractor, architect, or builder,” but he had contracted with the owner for a certain part of the work, namely, to furnish or put up all the marble mantles. He engaged the plaintiff to furnish and put up one set, and the jury have expressly found that it was done upon the credit (of the building.)

Were this res integra, we should be disposed to hold that no one but a “contractor, architect, or builder”—these words being evidently used in the Act of Assembly as synonymous, has authority to pledge the credit of the building. Many reasons may be urged to show the inconvenience and injustice of any other interpretation. The owner who erects a building by contract is envisioned with great perils, but these are multiplied beyond measure when he is himself the architect and gives out the different parts of the work to different mechanics.

Not only may he thus be made to pay twice for the same thing, but his terms as to price, &c., will of course not be binding upon the mechanic who is not privy to the original contract.

We have found it impossible, however, to reconcile such a position with the authorities. In Witman v. Walker, 9 W. and S. 183, the plaintiff below, was a contractor in the same position as Brown—he had contracted to do all the marble-work. It was held that he fell within the principle of Jones v. Shawhan, 4 W. & S., 417, and Hoatz v. Patterson, 5 ibid, 537, and was not entitled to file a lien. “It is not easy to perceive,” says Judge Sergeant, “any difference in principle in the circumstance that the contract is not for the whole building, but for a particular job or piece of work, as here, to put up the marble-work of two houses, and furnish marble mantles. The relation of the parties is the same, and similar inconveniences and incongruities would ensue to those pointed out in the opinion delivered by Mr. Justice Rogers, in Jones v. Shawhan, if the same individual might stand in the double capacity of contractor and material man.” Mr. Justice Rogers does not deliver any opinion in Jones v. Shawhan, but he does in Hoatz v. Patterson, 5 W. & S., 538, and in that he says: “There would, in either case, be the same inconvenience arising from double liens and double recoveries, and the same incongruity in the same person being both plaintiff and defendant.”

Rule discharged, and judgment for plaintiff on the reserved point.

A. W. RAND'S SELF-CLEANING FURNACE.

Boynton's Patent.

Having put up a large number of these Furnaces, both in public and private buildings, (including 24 put up at the Philadelphia County Prison, in place of the 44 torn out.) and tested them during the cold weather of 1855, and 1856, being the coldest weather we have had for twenty or thirty years. They have given the most universal satisfaction, and those having them in use were perfectly delighted with the abundance of warm, pleasant air, and abundant ventilation afforded thereby, while so many were suffering from cold, and troubled with the deficiencies of their heating apparatus.

We take great pleasure, therefore, in recommending them to the notice of the public, and would call their attention particularly to an examination of the greatly increased amount of effective radiating surface, their perfect solidity and durability, the improved manner of making the joints, entirely preventing any escape of gases, and the manner of distributing the fire, so as to cause it to impinge directly against the large amount of surface, without the objectionable and unnatural method of forcing the current downwards.

We have also a full assortment of HAYES' PATENT TUBULAR OVEN RANGES, now so universally used, and favorably known. Also, HAYES' PATENT VENTILATORS, &c., &c., all of which will be put up in the very best manner, and by the most skillful workmen, constantly engaged for that purpose, by

A. W. RAND'S SELF-CLEANING FURNACE.
Boynton's Patent.

Having put up a large number of these Furnaces, both in public and private buildings, (including 24 put up at the Philadelphia County Prison, in place of the 44 torn out.) and tested them during the cold weather of 1855, and 1856, being the coldest weather we have had for twenty or thirty years. They have given the most universal satisfaction, and those having them in use were perfectly delighted with the abundance of warm, pleasant air, and abundant ventilation afforded thereby, while so many were suffering from cold, and troubled with the deficiencies of their heating apparatus.

We take great pleasure, therefore, in recommending them to the notice of the public, and would call their attention particularly to an examination of the greatly increased amount of effective radiating surface, their perfect solidity and durability, the improved manner of making the joints, entirely preventing any escape of gases, and the manner of distributing the fire, so as to cause it to impinge directly against the large amount of surface, without the objectionable and unnatural method of forcing the current downwards.

We have also a full assortment of HAYES' PATENT TUBULAR OVEN RANGES, now so universally used, and favorably known. Also, HAYES' PATENT VENTILATORS, &c., &c., all of which will be put up in the very best manner, and by the most skillful workmen, constantly engaged for that purpose, by

SAVINGS FUND.

OFFICE, NEXT DOOR TO THE POST OFFICE,
No. 83 Dock Street,
PHILADELPHIA, 1854.

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND, No. 83 DOCK Street, next door to THIRD Street, and adjoining the POST OFFICE, receives MONEY on deposit daily, from 9 in the morning until 3 in the afternoon; also Monday evenings, from 7 to 9 o'clock. Interest is allowed on deposits at the rate of FIVE PER CENT per annum. Deposits will be returned in whole, or in part, on demand, without notice.

The popularity of this Office with all classes of the community, both in town and country, and its consequent success, may be ascribed, in part, to the following substantial reasons:

- 1st. It offers a convenient, responsible, and profitable Depository to Executors, Administrators, Assignees, Collectors, Agents, and all public officers—to Attorneys, Trustees, Societies and Associations, whether incorporated or otherwise—to married or single ladies—to Students, Merchants, Clerks, and business men generally—to Mechanics, Farmers, Minors of either sex, and all who have funds, much or little, to deposit, where they may be had at any time, with Five Per Cent interest added.
- 2d. Depositors receive Books, with an abstract of the By-laws and regulations, in which is entered their deposits, which Books serve as vouchers. They may designate in case of sickness, death, or absence, who shall receive their deposits, without the intervention of Executors or Administrators. Any one or more persons may deposit in his, her, or their name, or for any other person or persons.
- 3d. A Report is made each year to the Legislature and Councils of the City.
- 4th. The Officers are sworn before they enter upon their duties, in addition to giving Bonds with sureties.
- 5th. The State Savings Fund is a real Savings Fund—not an Insurance and Trust Company. The Charter of this Institution avoids the Insurance business.
- 6th. Deposits may be withdrawn by checks after the manner customary with Banks. Check Books will be furnished to depositors without charge.

This Number commences the THIRTIETH
VOLUME and the SEVENTH YEAR of HARPER'S
NEW MONTHLY MAGAZINE, with the extraordinary issue of One Hundred and Sixty Thousand Copies. The Publishers have endeavored, by a well directed use of the abundant resources at their command, to render it not only the cheapest, but the most attractive and most useful Magazine for popular reading, in the world; and the extent to which their efforts have been successful is indicated by the fact, that it has attained a greater circulation than any similar periodical ever issued.

Special efforts will be made to render it still more interesting and valuable during the coming year. The new volume commences with the present Number. No labor or expense will be spared to render it in every way, and in all its departments, still more worthy of the unparalleled favor with which it has been received.
HARPER'S NEW MONTHLY MAGAZINE owes its success to the fact, that it presents more reading matter, of a BETTER quality, in a MORE ELEGANT style, and at a CHEAPER rate, than any other publication.

The Publication of Mr. DICKENS'S "Little Dorrit" was commenced in the January Number of this Magazine. This charming story is generally acknowledged to be the best of his productions, and occupies but about one-tenth of each Number, and is issued to Subscribers at a cost of about TWO CENTS each!

It is the foremost Magazine of the day. The fireside never had a more delightful companion, nor the million a more entertaining friend than Harper's Magazine.—Methodist Protestant (Baltimore.)

The most popular monthly in the world. It has become one of the literary wonders of this country. Almost exclusively composed of the works of American authors and artists, it pays its contributors some twenty-five hundred dollars monthly. It is a happy circumstance that it aims at the highest standard of literature and the purest of morals in all its pages.—N. Y. Observer.

The Fullest, the Latest, and the Best
REPORTS OF THE COMMON LAW COURTS
OF ENGLAND.

Containing the cases decided in the Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Nisi Prius Courts,
from 1813 to 1855, and in the Court of Exchequer and Exchequer Chamber, from 1824 to 1855, are found in

The Regular and Authoritative Series of the English Common Law and English Exchequer Reports,

Which present the following claims to the support of the profession:

1. They are the only series issued as the authoritative and acknowledged medium by which the decisions of the Law Courts of England are made public.

2. They contain Later Reports than the Boston series, are more fully and more ably reported, and so arranged by preservation of the original paging, that reference by reporters, or by elementary writers, can be traced as readily as in the English editions.

Vol. 2, Ellis & Blackburne's (75 E. C. L. R.,)
Reports (Q. B.) to January, 1854, was published by us in June, 1854. At that time the last Queen's Bench case printed in the Boston Law and Equity Reports, was of June 25, 1853. Our volume contained cases decided five months later.
The Queen's Bench cases to November 25, 1853,
were published in the Boston series in August, 1854, two months after we had distributed the same cases.

Vol. 3, Ellis & Blackburne, (77 E. C. L. R.,) with cases to the end of Trinity Term, 1854, was published when the latest case of Queen's Bench
decisions in the Boston series, was of February 8, 1854, more than four months behind the regular reporters.

Exchequer Reports, vol. 9, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) distributed by us January 11, 1855, contains cases to May 10, 1854. The last Exchequer case then in the Boston series was decided February 9, 1854, four months behind the regular Reporter, issued in Philadelphia.

3. They contain more cases decided by the courts represented, than any other series issued
in this country.

Vol. 77 English Common Law, (3 E. & B.,) reports eighty-six cases decided in the Queen's Bench since January 11, 1854, while but fifty-eight Queen's Bench cases, decided since January
1, 1854, are found scattered among Vols. 22, 24
and 25 of the Boston Law and Equity.

Vol. 78 E. C. L. K. (5 J. Scott,) reports sixty-five cases decided since Nov. 13, 1853, in the Common Pleas, while the L. & E. has but fifty-seven cases in that Court since the same period.

Vol. 9 Exchequer Reports, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) reports one hundred and ten cases in the Courts of Exchequer, decided since June 24, 1853, while since the same date, the L. & E. report but 107 cases, scattered through vols. 20, 22, 24
and 25.

4. They are almost exclusively cited in argument of counsel, and referred to by Elementary Writers for Law Authorities. See Smith's Leading Cases, Smith's Contracts, Smith's Landlord
and Tenant, by Maude; Byles on Bills and Pro-
missory Notes, Broom's Legal Maxims, Broom's Commentaries on the Laws of England, or almost any recent Law Book issued in England.

5. The Philadelphia Reports are edited by Judge Sharswood and by Judge Hare, whose labors as editors and authors have made them so well and so favorably known to the profession.

6. The Boston Law and Equity is made up in this country from the Law Journal, Jurist, Times
and other Law periodicals, of a weekly, monthly, or quarterly character, and being unknown in England, is never cited in Court, or referred to by Law writers. The periodicals from which it is extracted, are occasionally cited under their own particular names, but they do not possess that permanent value, even in England, which is all-important in a series of Reports.

A carefully prepared and accurate Annual Digest of all the cases decided by the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Exchequer, will be distributed, early in each year,
to subscribers to either series, free of charge.
That for 1854 is ready, and will be mailed to subscribers who have not received a copy.

HENRY E. WALLACE, Editor.

A new administration of Municipal affairs having just been inaugurated under circumstances which lead us to look with confidence for reform of existing abuses, and remedies for evils we now suffer, we take this early opportunity to call attention of the new Councils to the condition of the Court Rooms and Public Offices of our City. The absolute inadequacy of the Court Rooms in size and location, the utter unsuitableness and want of security in all the Offices of the Row and the entire want of rooms for the accommodation of jurors, witnesses, and parties, have been long ago and repeatedly adverted to by the bench, the grand jury, and the press. A wise economy would indicate the propriety of enlarging the Offices of the Recorder of Deeds, and Prothonotary of the District Court, as a means of prevention of loss from fire, which from their present crowded situation is daily becoming more imminent, and the loss would be as well incalculable as irremediable. Will not some of our legal brethren in the Councils to whom these evils have been so long patent, make a move towards improvement—in this not the least discreditable feature of our municipality?

A Further Supplement

To the act consolidating the City of Philadelphia.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted, &c., That after the term of the present Marshal of Police shall expire by limitation or death, the office shall cease and all the powers in him vested not subordinate to the Mayor, shall thereupon become vested in the Mayor, and all his duties subordinate to the Mayor shall be performed by a Chief of Police, to be appointed by the Mayor, with the approval of the Select Council, subject to be dismissed by him, who shall receive such salary and perform such further duties as may be prescribed by ordinance. The Mayor shall not hereafter sit as a committing magistrate, but as the executive head of the city and its police, may issue warrants and cause arrests to be made, in accordance with law, returnable before any police magistrate.

SEC. 2. That the Inspectors of the County Prison shall be appointed, five by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, three by the District Court of the County of Philadelphia, and three by the Court of Common Pleas of said county, who shall enter upon duty on the first Monday of July next, to serve for one year, and annually thereafter the vacancies in said board shall be filled as aforesaid; they shall neither be members of the bar, nor officers or clerks of, or under any of said courts.

SEC. 3. That at all municipal elections hereafter to be held in the City of Philadelphia, all officers to be voted for by the qualified voters of the said city, shall be voted on one ticket and be headed "city officers," and that all officers to be voted for by the qualified voters of each ward, shall be voted on one ticket, and be headed "ward officers," and that all officers to be voted for by the qualified voters of each election division of said ward, shall be voted on one ticket and be headed "division officers."

SEC. 4. That the City Commissioners shall disburse no moneys, nor make any contracts for public works or highways, nor take any part in the opening of streets, or the assessment of the damages therefor, but notice of the meetings of all viewers to lay out, open, or vacate any street or highway, or assess damages therefor, shall be served at the law department of the city, and the solicitor or assistant shall represent and protect the interests of the city in relation to all road matters, and countersign every order granted by the Court of Quarter Sessions, for the payment of road damages, and keep a register of all damages confirmed by the court, and of orders countersigned, which shall not be countersigned or paid until an appropriation therefor be made by council.

SEC. 5. That the City Commissioners shall draw no warrants upon the city treasury, for the payment of the fees of jurors, viewers, witnesses, or officers of the courts, without a certificate of the prothonotary or clerk of the court, countersigned by one of the judges of the court in which the duty or service was performed, that the same is correct to the best of his belief, nor shall any warrant be drawn for jury or witness fees, in favor of any person but the juror or witness, entitled to such fees.

SEC. 6. That the books for assessments shall be furnished to the assessors by the fifteenth day of May in each year, from the said department, and any assessor who shall not have completed and returned his assessments by the fifteenth day of August following, shall forfeit his compensation and surrender his books to be finished by the board of revision. It shall be the duty of the assessors to mark opposite every property used for agricultural purposes, the word "rural," and on every property so returned there shall be assessed or collected but two-thirds the rate for city tax that shall be assessed on other real estate in the city: Provided, That any error in such return in this respect, shall be corrected by the board of revision or appeal. The assessors of each ward shall make out an alphabetical list, with the names, occupations and residences of all the taxables of each division of the ward to be returned to the city commissioners, with the assessment-book to be used for election purposes, for which they shall receive four dollars for each division book.

SEC. 7. That the county board of revision shall commence the discharge of its duties on the first Monday of September in each year, taking into consideration each assessment, and shall complete the same within six weeks, and the county board of appeals shall commence the hearing of appeals on the third Monday of October, and proceed to hear the tax payers of the several wards in succession, until the same be closed, not exceeding six weeks: Provided, That no change shall be made in the valuations of real estate, in other than the triennial year, except in case of destruction by fire or flood, or of improvements made, and that only by a majority of the board. The city commissioners, or head of the department, shall make the return required by law to state treasurer for the board of revenue commissioners, by the first Monday of February of the year when such revenue commissioners shall meet, after all allowances shall have been made on the appeals.

SEC. 8. That the receiver of taxes shall on the first Mondays of October, November, and December, give a general notice to all tax payers three times in three newspapers, to pay the taxes then due; and that if not paid before the first day of the following January, interest will thereafter be charged thereon, and that the names of all delinquent tax payers will then be published according to law, and the names of the delinquent tax payers, when published, shall be alphabetically arranged for the several wards.

SEC. 9. The receiver of taxes of the City of Philadelphia shall collect, and hereafter daily pay into the city treasury, all state taxes by him collected. The City of Philadelphia shall pay over all state taxes collected, and paid into the city treasury before the twenty-fifth day of July in each year, and receive therefor the five per cent. allowed by law, and one per cent. for the commission of collection, but no allowance for the then uncollected state tax, unless the city shall advance the same by the said date, in which case the city may borrow the amount of such residue of the current year's state tax: Provided, That the loans therefor be all payable within the year, and the whole of the state taxes for the year for which they accrued, shall be paid into the state treasury by the twenty-fifth of January next thereafter. The city shall allow to tax payers for the state tax five per cent. on all sums paid before the twenty-fifth of July of the year when due, and nothing if paid thereafter.

SEC. 10. That in all cases of registered taxes, municipal claims, assessments for removing nuisances, or other charge by the city assessed on real estate, the advertising required before suit brought shall be in two papers once a week for six weeks, with such brevity of description as that the charge therefor shall not exceed one dollar and fifty cents for each name, and no sales shall take place for any such claims, taxes or assessments, except on the second Mondays of May and November.

SEC. 11. That all sales for registered taxes, municipal claims, assessments for removing nuisances, or other charge by the city assessed on real estate, shall be subject to redemption by the owner at any time within two years from the date of the acknowledgment of the sheriff's deed therefor, upon payment of all costs and charges, and twenty per cent. upon the amount for which the property had sold; and any person entitled so to redeem, may present a petition to the court from which the process to make sale had issued, setting forth the facts and his readiness to pay the redemption money as aforesaid; whereupon the court shall grant a rule to show cause why the purchaser shall not re-convey to him the premises sold, to be served as a summons in actions of partition; and if the petitioner shall prove the facts to give him a right to redeem, the court shall make such rule absolute, and enforce it by attachment.

SEC. 12. That it shall be lawful for the councils of said city to provide, by ordinance, for the cleaning of the docks on the Delaware and Schuylkill front of said city, and to require the owners of wharves and piers, which surround such docks, to cleanse the same; and after thirty days' default from the service of notice on them to perform said duty, it shall be lawful for the city to do said work, and to apportion the expenses thereof among the owners of the wharves and piers adjoining, in proportion to the extent of their wharves having the privilege or use of such docks, and to collect the same by filing liens therefor and process thereupon, as in case of claims for paving: Provided, That no dock shall be cleansed to a greater depth than the natural bed of the river.

SEC. 13. Whenever a vacancy by limitation or otherwise shall occur in the office of president of the board of surveyors, the chief engineer and surveyor to fill that office, shall be elected by the councils of said city, by viva voce vote, in joint meeting, to serve for five years. The said chief engineer and surveyor shall be a citizen who shall have had five years' previous practical experience as a civil engineer, and be sworn or affirmed before the mayor to the truth thereof, and that he will perform his duties with fidelity, and file the certificate thereof in the law department. He shall be president of and a member of the board of surveyors, and as the head of the department of surveys, perform all the duties imposed on him by law or ordinance. Each district surveyor shall have had three years' experience in the business of regulating and surveying after having completed his apprenticeship and become of lawful age, and make oath or affirmation of such fact, and to perform his duties with fidelity, and file his certificate as aforesaid.

SEC. 13. That it shall be lawful, and is hereby made the duty of councils, by ordinance, to regulate the survey department, to take security from and prescribe the duties of the district surveyors, the books and records they shall keep, and returns they shall make to the board of surveys; also, what records and surveys shall be deposited in the office of the board of surveys, and prescribe the duties, powers and services to be performed by the chief engineer and surveyor, and each member of said board of surveys, and establish all needful regulations for said board of surveys and district surveyors, and their offices and records, and as to the use thereof by the citizens.

SEC. 14. That should any district surveyor and regulator refuse to comply with any of the regulations and directions of the department of surveys, or prove to be unskilful and incompetent to the performance of his duties, a majority of said board of survey may, on the representation of at least six citizens, examine into the charge made against such surveyor; and if they find just cause, may petition the court of quarter sessions of the county of Philadelphia for his removal; and if said court shall be satisfied of the truth of the allegation of the petition, such surveyor and regulator shall be dismissed, and another surveyor and regulator, on the recommendation of such board of surveys, shall be appointed by the court to hold the appointment, and perform all the duties of the office until the next municipal election.

SEC. 15. That hereafter the first survey district shall be composed of all that part of the city west of Passyunk road, and Broad street east of the river Schuylkill, and south by South street.

SEC. 16. That so much of City avenue, between the City of Philadelphia and Montgomery county, as was surveyed by the commissioners, without covering the old road between the East Branch of Indian Creek, and property of Thomas Bealer, be of the same validity as if authorized by the act under which the same was surveyed, and said avenue is hereby widened to eighty feet, taking an equal quantity of ground on each side of said road as so surveyed for future foot-ways: Provided, That such widening shall not take place by an actual taking of the ground therefor before fifteen years from the date hereof, without the consent of the owners.

SEC. 17. That whenever councils shall order any street upon the plan of said city to be opened or widened, no damages therefor shall be paid unless first assessed by a jury and approved by the court of quarter sessions, in accordance with the general road laws of the Commonwealth: Provided, That councils may in all cases, whether the proceedings to open any street shall have been commenced in councils or in the ordinary course before the court, refuse to appropriate for the opening of any street, until the owners or citizens to be benefited shall have contributed the whole or any part thereof, as councils may have determined to be just, and in such case such street shall not be actually opened, nor any security which may have been taken, for the damages be responsible therefor.

SEC. 18. That the chief engineer and surveyor of the city of Philadelphia be and he is hereby authorized and directed to revise and change the grades of the streets laid out in the twenty-fourth ward of said city north of Market street, the Lancaster turnpike, and south of Bridge street and east of late Sixth, now Thirty-fifth street, so as to conform in as great a degree as he shall deem advisable, to the natural grade or surface of the ground; the said revised survey shall be confirmed by the board of survey, and be approved by the court of quarter sessions, in the manner now provided by law: Provided, That no alteration shall be made in the grades of Market street, Lancaster turnpike, Bridge street, and Sixth street, now Twenty-fourth street, as aforesaid: and the commissioners for the survey of the plan of Blockley shall proceed to cause the same to be completed and approved by the court, in manner provided by law before said township was embraced in the city of Philadelphia.

SEC. 19. That it shall be the duty of the prothonotaries of the several courts of the said city, on the expiration of each term of their respective courts, to furnish to the controller a statement, under oath or affirmation, of the fines and penalties imposed, recognizances recovered, judgment and jury fees received, and arbitrators' and witness fees unclaimed by the parties entitled to the same, with the name of the case in which the same were imposed, recovered, or received; and it shall be the duty of the sheriff of the county of Philadelphia to submit his account with the city to the controller, for settlement, on the first day of January, and quarterly thereafter, and upon such settlement the sheriff shall be charged with all sums received and recovered as aforesaid, and he shall forthwith pay over the balance, if any, to the city treasurer, and any officer neglecting or refusing to comply with the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor in office, and be proceeded against in like manner as for other misdemeanors.

SEC. 20. That in lieu of the report now required to be made to the city treasurer, the aldermen of the said city shall on the first of every month, submit to the controller a statement, under oath, of all fines, penalties, costs, and sum or sums of money whatever, received by them and payable to the said city, and shall forthwith pay over to the city treasurer the amount certified by the controller to be in their hands and payable, and for this purpose the controller may require the production of their books and dockets; and no warrant for payment of the salary of any alderman as police magistrate, shall be countersigned by the controller, unless the receipt of the city treasurer for the moneys so certified to be due by him for the period for which said salary is payable, shall be first produced and exhibited, and any alderman failing to comply with the provisions of this section, shall be punishable in the manner provided in the preceding section.

SEC. 21. That it shall be the duty of the controller and treasurer of the city, within the first five days of each month, to report to the city solicitor every person who has been delinquent in rendering his account, or making payment of any moneys, fines, or costs, payable to the city treasurer, and of the city solicitor forthwith to proceed to make collection of the same, and otherwise to enforce the law against the delinquent.

SEC. 22. Opinions by Judge Knox.

Harrisburg—May 16th, 1856.

JOHN A. BECHTELL vs. THE MINERS' BANK OF POTTSVILLE.

This is an action of assumpsit, brought against the plaintiff in error as indorser of a promissory note made by Holmes, Meyers & Co., for six hundred dollars, payable at the "Miners' Bank of Pottsville."

To fix the defendant's liability as indorser, the plaintiff below, after giving in evidence the note and indorsement, read the certificate of John Clayton, notary public, certifying that on the 22d day of February, A. D. 1847, at the request of the bank, he presented the original note (of which he gives a copy) to the cashier of the bank, and demanded payment, but received for answer that the drawers had no funds in bank to pay said note, whereupon (says the notary) "I duly notified the indorsers of the non-payment thereof."

Upon the trial in the Common Pleas, the defendant averred that the notice of non-payment was insufficient to charge him as indorser, as it contained no allegation that demand of payment had been made upon the maker. The learned Judge who presided at the trial, instructed the jury that the notice was sufficient, and under his direction a verdict was rendered for the plaintiff. This instruction is assigned for error.

It is well settled, both by English and American cases, that the notice must state either expressly or by intendment, that the note or bill had been duly presented, and payment demanded, as well as the fact of non-payment; but it is equally well settled that, where a note is payable at a bank on a day certain, and the holder of the note is present at the bank on the day ready to receive payment, no further demand is necessary to charge the indorser. Rohm vs. Philada. Bank, 1st Rawle, 335. Jenks vs. Doylestown Bank, 4 W. & S., 505. Bank of U. S. vs. Carmal, 2 Peters, 543, where it is said "that it is the duty of the maker to go to the bank within the usual hours and pay the note, and if he fail to do so the note is dishonored." All that is required of the holder is to give the indorser timely notice of the dishonor of the bill or note. Where presentment is called for, the paper is not dishonored until demand has been made, and a simple notice that it is unpaid will not charge the indorser of a note as the drawer of a bill; but as no formal demand is necessary in a case like the present, none need be, either expressly or by implication, stated in the notice. The object of the notice is to put the indorser upon inquiry, so that he may make himself secure, and when he is informed on the last day of grace that the note is unpaid, as he is presumed to know its terms and purport, knowledge is brought home to him of the default of the maker, and then his liability is absolute.

In addition to the authorities already cited, the following will be found to sustain the law as above stated:—Mills vs. The Bank of the United States, 11th Wharton, 431. Cayuga Co. Bank vs. Warden, 1st Comstock, 414. Gilbert vs. Dennis, 3d Metcalf, 504. Pinkborn, executor, vs. Macy, 9th Metcalf, 174. It was at one time thought that the notice should state that the holder looked to the indorser for payment, but the later and better cases hold that this is implied from the fact of giving notice.

There was no error in the direction of the Common Pleas, that simple notice of non-payment was sufficient to charge the indorser.

As notice of non-payment was notice of the default of the maker, the allegation in the declaration of presentment, demand, and refusal and notice thereof was substantially proved, and it is only necessary to add that there is nothing in the objection that the notice did not state, that the note had been protested. Rhom vs. Phila. Bank, 1st Rawle, 335.

Judgment affirmed.

THE LYCOMING MUTUAL INSURANCE COMPANY vs. P. W. STOCKBOWER AND R. B. STOCKBOWER.

Harrisburg May 5th, 1856.

Error to C. P. of Wayne Co.

In the policy of insurance upon which this action was brought, it is expressly stipulated "that in all cases of other insurance upon the property insured, whether prior or subsequent to the date of the policy, in case of loss or damage by fire, the insured shall not be entitled to demand and recover, on the policy, any greater proportion of the loss or damage sustained, than the amount hereby insured shall bear to the whole amount insured on the said property;" and further "that the aggregate amount insured in this and other Companies, on the above-mentioned property, shall not exceed two-thirds of the estimated cash value."

The estimated cash value mentioned in the policy was five hundred dollars. The amount of the insurance was three hundred and thirty-three dollars—two-thirds of the estimated value, so that any further insurance, being in violation of the agreement, would render nugatory the policy. It is said, however, that the Company had notice of the additional insurance, and elected not to avoid the policy, but treated it as in full force, by continuing thereafter to make and collect assessments upon it. This branch of the charge is entirely unobjectionable. The question was fairly submitted to the jury, and found against the Company. But there was error in permitting the jury to find, under the evidence, that the Company was liable for the whole amount insured in the policy. The implied waiver arising from the assessments, and from what was said by the agent, would apply only to that part of the contract which declared that only two-thirds of the estimated value should be insured, leaving in full force the stipulation that, in the event of other insurances, only a proportionate part of the amount insured should be demanded from the Lycoming Company.

Now, as there was no evidence given that the loss sustained was greater than the estimated value of the property, which was five hundred dollars, the plaintiff was only entitled to recover upon the policy in suit, that proportion of the said sum of five hundred dollars which the amount insured in the policy, viz., three hundred and thirty-three dollars, bore to the whole amount insured on the property, viz., six hundred and thirty-three dollars. The amount would be ascertained thus: If $633 gave $500, what would $333 give? The answer is $263.03. After the fact was found by the jury, that the Company assented to the additional insurance, the verdict should have been for $263.03. And as we have discovered no other error in the case, we will affirm the judgment if the plaintiff will release the excess, otherwise it must be reversed.

Judgment reversed, and venia de novo awarded, unless the plaintiff, within thirty days after receiving notice hereof, files a release for all of the judgment but $263.03, and interest from the rendition of the verdict, in which case judgment is to be entered, affirmed for said amount with costs.

Opinion by Lewis, C. J.

PHILA. FROM N. P.

SMITH vs. THE COLUMBIA INSURANCE COMPANY.

May 5th, 1856.

It seems to us that all the principles of the case were fully discussed and announced in the opinion of the Court at the time when it first came up before us. We think those principles are correct, and we do not see how we can state them more clearly and justify them more completely than we have done.

It seems to be supposed that, in that opinion, we threw open the question of interpretation of the policy to the influence of parol evidence; and it was sought to bring this influence to bear on the second trial; but we do not discover any sufficient grounds for the supposition. The interpretation is so very plain that we can hardly conceive of any view of it but one, that would not be directly contradictory of the express words of the policy.

Judgment affirmed.

A. W. RAND'S SELF-CLEANING FURNACE.

Boynton's Patent.

Having put up a large number of these Furnaces, both in public and private buildings, (including 24 put up at the Philadelphia County Prison, in place of the 44 torn out.) and tested them during the cold weather of 1855, and 1856, being the coldest weather we have had for twenty or thirty years. They have given the most universal satisfaction, and those having them in use were perfectly delighted with the abundance of warm, pleasant air, and abundant ventilation afforded thereby, while so many were suffering from cold, and troubled with the deficiencies of their heating apparatus.

We take great pleasure, therefore, in recommending them to the notice of the public, and would call their attention particularly to an examination of the greatly increased amount of effective radiating surface, their perfect solidity and durability, the improved manner of making the joints, entirely preventing any escape of gases, and the manner of distributing the fire, so as to cause it to impinge directly against the large amount of surface, without the objectionable and unnatural method of forcing the current downwards.

We have also a full assortment of HAYES' PATENT TUBULAR OVEN RANGES, now so universally used, and favorably known. Also, HAYES' PATENT VENTILATORS, &c., &c., all of which will be put up in the very best manner, and by the most skillful workmen, constantly engaged for that purpose, by

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND.

INTEREST FIVE PER CENT. PER ANNUM.

OFFICE, NEXT DOOR TO THE POST OFFICE:

No. 83 Dock Street,

PHILADELPHIA, 1854.

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND, No. 83 DOCK Street, next door to THIRD Street, and adjoining the POST OFFICE, receives MONEY on deposit daily, from 9 in the morning until 3 in the afternoon; also Monday evenings, from 7 to 9 o'clock. Interest is allowed on deposits at the rate of FIVE PER CENT per annum. Deposits will be returned in whole, or in part, on demand, without notice.

The popularity of this Office with all classes of the community, both in town and country, and its consequent success, may be ascribed, in part, to the following substantial reasons:

- 1st. It offers a convenient, responsible, and profitable Depository to Executors, Administrators, Assignees, Collectors, Agents, and all public officers—to Attorneys, Trustees, Societies and Associations, whether incorporated or otherwise—to married or single ladies—to Students, Merchants, Clerks, and business men generally—to Mechanics, Farmers, Minors of either sex, and all who have funds, much or little, to deposit, where they may be had at any time, with Five Per Cent interest added.
- 2d. Depositors receive books, with an abstract of the By-laws and regulations, in which is entered their deposits, which books serve as vouchers. They may date in case of sickness, death, or absence, who shall receive their deposits, without the intervention of Executors or Administrators. Any one or more persons may deposit in his, her, or their name, or for any other person or persons.
- 3d. A Report is made each year to the Legislature of the Councils of the City.
- 4th. The Officers are sworn before they enter upon their duties, in addition to giving Bonds with sureties.
- 5th. The State Savings Fund is a real Savings Fund—not an Insurance and Trust Company. The Charter of this Institution avoids the Insurance business.
- 6th. Deposits may be withdrawn by checks after the manner customary with Banks. Check Books will be furnished to depositors without charge.

This Number commences the THIRTEENTH
 VOLUME and the SEVENTH YEAR of HARPER'S
 NEW MONTHLY MAGAZINE, with the extraordinary issue of One Hundred and Sixty Thousand Copies. The Publishers have endeavored, by a well directed use of the abundant resources at their command, to render it not only the cheapest, but the most attractive and most useful Magazine for popular reading, in the world; and
 the extent to which their efforts have been successful is indicated by the fact, that it has attained a greater circulation than any similar periodical ever issued.

Special efforts will be made to render it still more interesting and valuable during the coming year. The new volume commences with the present Number. No labor or expense will be spared to render it in every way, and in all its departments, still more worthy of the unparalleled favor with which it has been received.

HARPER'S NEW MONTHLY MAGAZINE owes its
 success to the fact, that it presents more reading matter, of a BETTER quality, in a MORE ELEGANT style, and at a CHEAPER rate, than any other
 publication.

The Publication of Mr. DICKENS'S "Little Dorrit" was commenced in the January Number
 of this Magazine. This charming story is generally acknowledged to be the best of his productions, and occupies but about one-tenth of each Number, and is issued to Subscribers at a cost of about TWO CENTS each!

It is the foremost Magazine of the day. The friends never had a more delightful companion,
 nor the million a more entertaining friend than Harper's Magazine.—Methodist Protestant (Baltimore.)

The most popular monthly in the world. It has become one of the literary wonders of this country. Almost exclusively composed of the works of American authors and artists, it pays
 its contributors some twenty-five hundred dollars monthly. It is a happy circumstance that it aims at the highest standard of literature and the purest of morals in all its pages.—N. Y. Observer.

TERMS.—The Magazine may be obtained of Booksellers, Periodical Agents, or from the Publishers, at THREE DOLLARS a year, or TWENTY-

1. They are the only series issued as the au-

 the decisions of the Law Courts of England are
 made public.

2. They contain Later Reports than the Boston

 published when the latest case of Queen's Bench
 decisions in the Boston series, was of February 8, 1854, more than four months behind the regular reporters.

Exchequer Reports, vol. 9, (Welshy, Hurlstone & Gordon,) distributed by us January 11, 1855,
 contains cases to May 10, 1854. The last Exchequer case then in the Boston series was decided February 9, 1854, four months behind the regular Reporter, issued in Philadelphia.

3. They contain more cases decided by the courts represented, than any other series issued
 in this country.

Vol. 77 English Common Law, (3 E. & B.,) reports eighty-six cases decided in the Queen's Bench since January 11, 1854, while but fifty-
 eight Queen's Bench cases, decided since January
 1, 1854, are found scattered among Vols. 22, 24
 and 25 of the Boston Law and Equity.

Vol. 78 E. C. L. K. (5 J. Scott,) reports sixty-five cases decided since Nov. 13, 1853, in the Common Pleas, while the L. & E. has but fifty-
 seven cases in that Court since the same period.

Vol. 9 Exchequer Reports, (Welshy, Hurlstone & Gordon,) reports one hundred and ten cases in the Courts of Exchequer, decided since June 24, 1853,
 while since the same date, the L. & E. report but 107 cases, scattered through vols. 20, 22, 24
 and 25.

4. They are almost exclusively cited in argument of counsel, and referred to by Elementary Writers for Law Authorities. See Smith's Leading Cases, Smith's Contracts, Smith's Landlord
 and Tenant, by Maude; Byles on Bills and Pro-
 missory Notes, Broom's Legal Maxims, Broom's Commentaries on the Laws of England, or almost any recent Law Book issued in England.

5. The Philadelphia Reports are edited by Judge Sharwood and by Judge Hare, whose labors as editors and authors have made them so
 well and so favorably known to the profession.

6. The Boston Law and Equity is made up in this country from the Law Journal, Jurist, Times
 and other Law periodicals, of a weekly, monthly,
 or quarterly character, and being unknown in England, is never cited in Court, or referred to by Law writers. The periodicals from which it is extracted, are occasionally cited under their own particular names, but they do not possess that permanent value, even in England, which is all-
 important in a series of Reports.

A carefully prepared and accurate Annual Digest of all the cases decided by the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Exchequer, will be distributed, early in each year,
 to subscribers to either series, free of charge.
 That for 1854 is ready, and will be mailed to subscribers who have not received a copy.

Supreme Court.

Opinions by Judge Knox.

ELIAS MININ vs. MYRAN S. WARNER.

A conveyance of real estate from a father to his son in part consideration that the son should maintain his father and mother, is fraudulent in law against the existing creditors of the father, unless it is shown that the father is still possessed of property sufficient to discharge his debts.

Such conveyance, if made with the intention to hinder, delay or defraud creditors, is void against one whose demand against the grantor was based upon a letter of recommendation given by the grantor to his son before the conveyance, but upon which a recovery was had subsequently thereto.

A judgment entered against a father in his life time is a lien upon lands fraudulently conveyed by the father to his son either before or after the entry of the judgment, although the judgment was not revived within five years from its entry, nor within five years after the death of his father.

Were it necessary to pass upon the question as to how far the judgment against the defendant as terre tenant upon the scire facias, is conclusive against his claim of title in this action of ejectment, it would be worthy of serious consideration whether he is within the rule laid down by this Court in Mitchell v. Hamilton, 8 Barr, 488. In accordance with the decision there made, it may be admitted that an occupant as terre tenant holding an adverse title, is not bound to have its validity determined in a scire facias to revive a judgment, but it may well be doubted whether this would be so where the occupant as terre tenant was in possession under title derived solely from the defendant in the judgment either anterior or subsequent to its entry.

As, however, this point was held by the Court below in favor of the plaintiff in error, it does not necessarily come before us for revision, and we therefore give no binding opinion upon it. To affirm this judgment it is necessary to establish the following legal propositions:

1st. That a conveyance of real estate from a father to his son in part consideration that the son should maintain his father and mother, is fraudulent in law against the existing creditors of the father, unless it is shown that the father is still possessed of property sufficient to discharge his debts.

2d. That such conveyance, if made with the intention to hinder, delay or defraud creditors, is void against one whose demand against the grantor was based upon a letter of recommendation given by the grantor to his son before the conveyance, but upon which a recovery was had subsequently thereto.

3d. That a judgment entered against a father in his life time is a lien upon lands fraudulently conveyed by the father to his son, either before or after the entry of the judgment, although the judgment was not revived within five years from its entry, nor within five years after the death of his father.

It is believed that these propositions are clearly sustained by our own adjudicated cases. In Johnson vs. Hayes, 2 P. R. 82, the conveyance which was from a father to his son in consideration that the son should pay all judgments of record against the father and support the father and his family, was declared fraudulent against the creditors of the father. The same principle was substantially ruled in Hach vs. Stewart, 8 Walls, 203; and was reaffirmed by this Court in Sanders vs. Wagoner, 7 Harris, 248.

It is undeniably true that the creditors in whose favour a fraudulent deed will be declared void, must be those who would be defrauded if validity was given to the conveyance; but it does not follow that one whose claim originating before but established after the conveyance, may not have been injured by it. The letter of recommendation in favour of the son was the foundation of the father's liability, and this was prior to the date of the conveyance. The judgment obtained against the father after the deed bears date, was not the commencement of his liability but the result of it. A specific design to defraud the particular creditor upon whose judgment the estate was sold, need not be shown; it is enough to establish the intention to defraud a class of creditors of which he was one.

It is strenuously urged by the plaintiff in error, that even admitting the deed to have been fraudulent, the lien of the judgment was gone because it was not revived within five years from its entry, nor until more than five years after the death of Daniel Minin the original defendant in the judgment.

It is a mistake to suppose that this point was decided, as here contended for, in Sharman against the Farmers' Bank of Reading, 5 W. & S. 373. There, it is true, the estate from which the fund was raised, had been conveyed by the debtor in his life time to his son and son-in-law, in fraud of his creditors, but the contest was between creditors, neither of whom had obtained judgment against the father before his death—Sharman had commenced an action and recovered ed judgment against the administrators within five years from the death of the debtor—the claim of the Bank was in suit commenced more than five years after the decease. Upon this state of facts it was held that the liability of the real estate to pay the debt of the Bank was lost by lapse of time, and that this was so in whose hands soever it might be. But the rule is different where the debt is evidenced by a judgment entered of record in the life of decedent. See Konigsmaker vs. Brown, 2 Harris, 269 and cases there cited.

The true rule is stated by Lewis, J., in Sanders vs. Wagoner, thus: "As the conveyance is void as against the interests attempted to be defrauded by it, the lien continues as fully as if the property had never been conveyed." And by Gibson, C. J., in Johnston vs. Harvey, 3 P. R. 93, "That a fraudulent conveyance is no conveyance against the interests intended to be defrauded." As then the conveyance from the father to the son is here to be treated as a nullity, the lien of the judgment attached to the land from the date of its entry, and continued as against the plaintiff in error to the day of sale. The consequence of which is, that the purchaser at the sheriff's sale took a title which cannot now be gained by the fraudulent grantee.

The error assigned upon the answer to the points is so vaguely stated, that we cannot notice it other than to say we see nothing in it which calls for our interference.

Judgment affirmed.

MONTGOMERY C. P.

BALTON, CHRISTMAN &amp; CO.'S APPEAL.

In order to validate a lien for materials furnished for the erection of a building, the claim must be filed within six months from the delivery of the materials; but where the delivery is in pursuance of an entire contract, the limitation does not begin to run until the contract is performed. Bardlett v. Kingan, 7 Harris, 341; Duncan v. Phillips, not yet reported. 12 Leg. Int. 50.

A book of original entries, kept by a paper-hanger, is evidence of the amount of paper furnished and labor bestowed in putting it upon the walls, where the entry is made as soon as the quantity of paper is ascertained from its use, and the amount of work done in using it, although it required several days to finish the work. Kooh v. Howell, 6 W. & S. 350.

"Where facts have been found by an auditor and approved by the Court below, the case must manifest most flagrant error in order to justify this Court in interfering with the report." Per Lowrie, J., in Mengas, 7 Harris, 222.

The principles above stated affirm this decree. We cannot say that there was no evidence that the lumber was furnished under an entire contract, and we think that the book of original entries, corroborated as it was by the testimony of Daniel Pile, sufficiently proved Hollenbach's claim.

Decree affirmed at appellant's costs.

IN THE MATTER OF THE PUBLIC ROAD IN CHARLESTOWN AND SCHUYLKILL TOWNSHIP, CHESTER COUNTY.

The first error assigned is that it does not properly appear that there was any petition for the original view. The record as returned to us does not contain the petition for the required view but the order to the first viewers recites that a petition was presented and its contents are given in the order. No objection of this kind was made in the Quarter Sessions. Had it been the petition probably would have been found or its loss accounted for. Satisfied as we are from the recital in the order that a petition was really presented upon which the viewers were appointed we will not reverse this proceeding upon an objection like this raised for the first time after the case is removed from the court that could have obviated the objection.

2nd. "The Court erred in appointing the fourth jury without a petition or notice to the opposite party."

A brief statement of facts is necessary to be given for the proper consideration of this assignment. The first report was in favor of the road. A review was appointed upon a petition which reported adverse to the road. Then a petition by the friends of the road was presented for a review which was granted and whose report was favorable. Exceptions were filed to this report and it was set aside. On the 15th of March, 1854, upon the next day a fourth view was appointed whose report was finally confirmed. It is said that this last view was appointed without a new petition and it may be that it was, but as no objection was taken in the court below on this ground and as the order to the viewers recites that it was upon the petition of sundry inhabitants, &c., we will presume it to have been regularly done. It is not necessary to express an opinion whether the appointment of viewers was legal without a new petition as the point is not fairly before us. To avoid misapprehension it is well to say that it is a different question from the one considered in the Charlestown road case first decided. The difference is this, there the viewers reported that they were in favor of a road but a different one from that found by the first view, wherein it differed they did not say, and their report was properly treated as a nullity. No action was taken upon it and a new view at once appointed. Here the report was complete but was set aside upon exceptions going to its merits.

The third and last assignment raises the same question that was first disposed of in the Charlestown road, viz: that "The Court did not direct of what width the road should be opened."

When the report of the fourth view was returned it was endorsed "read and confirmed and" but no width was fixed until after the exceptions had been filed and overruled and until the whole proceeding was treated as complete. For this we must do as we did in the other case set aside all proceedings subsequent to the confirmation et cetera and remand the record to the Quarter Sessions for further proceedings.

And now May 16th, A. D. 1855, upon due consideration it is ordered that all proceedings in this case subsequent to the entry of 25th of April, A. D. 1854, viz: "Read and confirmed et cetera" be and are hereby reversed and set aside, and it is further ordered that the record be remitted to the Court of Quarter Sessions of Chester County with directions to said Court to fix the breadth of said road and thereafter to receive exceptions and dispose of the same according to law, if any are filed on or before the expiration of the term next succeeding that to which the width of the road is fixed.

ALBERT ALDRICH v. WILLIAM JESSUP, et al.

By the fifth section of the Act of 6th March, 1778, the estate of Andrew Allen from and after the twentieth day of April then next ensuing was forfeited to the Commonwealth without any office or inquisition thereafter to be taken or found.

The forfeiture being complete the pardon without words of restitution did not restore the estate, and therefore its restriction was proper.

If the record of the proceedings of the executive Council had been admitted as evidence it would not have helped the plaintiff in error. Conceding the partition to have been unauthorized, its validity cannot be questioned by a stranger after it has been acquiesced in by the parties in interest for a period of upwards of sixty years.

It would be productive of incalculable mischief to interfere now with the division of this large body of lands even upon the application of one showing title but to do so against the wishes of the holders of the legal title at the instance of an intruder would be alike contrary to reason and law.

Judgment affirmed.

Opinions by Judge Woodward.

MARY D'ARRAS v. SYLVESTER KEYSER.

Error to District Court of Philadelphia.

A vendee once fairly in possession of land under articles of purchase, but ousted by illegal means, is entitled to recover in an action of ejectment, without bringing into Court the balance of purchase money due upon the articles.

Mere default in the payment of money at a stipulated time, admits, in general, of compensation, and hence, time of payment is seldom treated as of the essence of real contracts.

Sylvester Keyser, the defendant in error, having purchased at Sheriff's sale the land in controversy, as the estate of Augusté D'Arras, the husband of the plaintiff, made a written lease of the premises to the said Augusté, on the 1st January, 1849, for the term of one year, at an annual rent of $180, payable quarterly. A covenant was introduced into the lease which gave the said Augusté, or his present wife, the right to purchase said premises at any time within twelve months from the date of the lease upon paying therefor $2575, and bound Keyser, on payment of that sum and all arrears of rent, to convey the title to them or either of them. D'Arras continued in possession and paid the rent till he died, and his wife, after his death, continued the possession and payments of rent until the 9th of October, 1852, when she tendered to Keyser the purchase money and interest, and produced a deed ready drawn for him to execute. According to the witness, he said he would have nothing to do with it, and left the room and went up stairs.

It does not appear that Mrs. D'Arras paid any rent thereafter, and on the 20th July, 1854, Keyser obtained the possession by virtue of proceedings under the landlord and tenant law, which, though mentioned, are not set forth in our paper books. She then instituted this action of ejectment to regain the possession, and on the trial the Court permitted the jury to find for the "plaintiff on condition that during the present session of the Court, she pay defendant the sum of $2575, with any interest that may be due thereon," but they reserved the point whether the mere payment of the money into Court is not fatal to plaintiff's claim, and afterward set aside the verdict and rendered judgment for the defendant on the point reserved. [Ante, p. 12.]

This is the only error assigned upon the record.

The principle on which the Court ruled the case was that in an equitable action of ejectment the plaintiff, to be entitled to recover, must not only tender the money before suit brought, but must also have it in Court ready to be paid in the event of a verdict in his favour, and there is no question about the soundness of that principle. Gore v. Kinney, 10 W. 139, and the cases cited.

But was it applicable to the facts of this case? Was this merely an equitable ejectment?

The plaintiff was suing for a possession which had been delivered to her in pursuance of a contract which she had fully performed. She had not indeed obtained the legal title, but equity considers that done which ought to be done, and when she tendered the purchase money and interest, equity would have compelled Keyser to convey the legal title. Therefore she was no longer his tenant, but a purchaser in full possession, and in contemplation of law, clothed with the legal title. The proceeding which wrested that possession from her, though under the forms of law, was null necessarily, because long before it was instituted the relation of landlord and tenant had ceased to exist. It was no better, as to its effect, than if the possession had been obtained from her by force or fraud. Whilst a vendee who has never had possession must come into Court prepared for full performance, a vendee to whom possession has been delivered in pursuance of the contract, who has tendered full performance, and then lost the possession without assent or agreement may recover it without bringing the money into Court. This is the doctrine of many cases. The facts are imperfectly stated in Bosler v. Niesly, 2 S. & R. 355, but the language of Chief Justice Tilghman clearly recognizes the principle I have stated. He says—it is objected that the plaintiffs ought to have tendered the balance of the purchase money and interest before they commenced suit. But supposing the law to be so in general, this case forms an exception, because as it was submitted to the jury, we must understand that by the terms of the contract, possession was to be delivered before payment of the whole purchase money, and was delivered accordingly; after which the plaintiffs were ousted. The plaintiffs then had the right of possession before payment of the purchase money, and being ousted, had a right to recover the possession.

Harris v. Bell, 10 S. & R. 39, is full to the point. Here the vendee died in possession under articles of agreement, the purchase money not having been fully paid, and the administrator thinking the property was not worth what was due upon it, surrendered it to one Bricker, who the next day turned it over to the vendor. The only heir of the vendee brought this ejectment, and it was proved that prior to the institution of the suit an offer was made to pay what was due upon the articles, which the defendant refused to receive, saying he would have taken it if it had been paid when it was due. The second point of defence taken was, that Harris, the vendor, had a right to retain the possession till the money was paid to him or brought into Court, but this Court held that although he did not obtain the possession by force, yet he did so illegally, that under the circumstances of the case he was a trustee of Mrs. Bell, and could not resist her claim to restoration of the premises; that where the vendor puts the vendee in possession before payment of the money, and then forcibly regains the possession, or acquires it from the trustee of the vendee, qua tenant, he is bound to restore it. I am aware that some of the observations of Judge Duncan in this case have been qualified in subsequent cases. See Griffith v. Dobson, 3 P. R. 228, and Judge Rogers' remarks in Foster v. McDivit, 9 W. 345, but as an authority for the principle for which I have cited it, Harris v. Bell has never been shaken, but on the contrary was cited with approbation by Judge Kennedy in Gregg v. Patterson, 9 W. & S. 208, and by Judge Hunter, in Dixen v. Oliver, 5 W. 572.

These cases are sufficient to establish the proposition that a vendee once fairly in possession of land under articles of purchase, but ousted by illegal means, is entitled to recover in an action of ejectment without bringing into Court the balance of purchase money due upon the articles. The parties are restored to their contract relation, and all of their mutual remedies remain. The vendor may enforce payment of the purchase money by an action of covenant on the articles or by ejectment; the vendee may compel conveyance of the title by covenant or bill in equity for specific performance. If there has been a tender of the purchase money, as in this case, the vendor has only to execute the deed and take the money.

It follows from all this that the conditional verdict was more favourable to the defendant than he had a right to claim. The plaintiff was entitled to an unconditional verdict in her favour, but when the jury had adjusted the equities of the parties in a manner that seemed to them reasonable and just, and which was only too favourable to the defendant, the Court should have sustained it, or at least, should not have set it aside for the purpose of giving the defendant an absolute judgment.

It may be objected against these conclusions that the purchase money was not tendered within the time limited in the lease, and that time was of the essence of the contract. Mere default in the payment of money at a stipulated time admits, in general, of compensation, and hence time of payment is seldom treated as of the essence of real contracts. Parties may make it so by express agreement, but there is nothing on the face of this contract or in the attending circumstances to indicate the intention of these parties to make time essential. The covenant for title was part and parcel of the lease, and the term fixed was one year, yet the lessees were permitted to hold over, and rent was received without objection. From this the law would imply a renewal of the lease from year to year, and put the landlord to his notice when he meant to determine it.

It is not necessary to decide that the implied renewal of the term was an annual renewal of the covenant to sell, though it would be somewhat difficult to hold the lease renewed without renewing all the covenants it contained, but it is impossible to regard the year mentioned in the instrument, as any more of the essence of the contract of sale than it was of the lease. And that it was not material to the lease is shown by Keyser's receipt of rent after the year had expired, and by his declarations as proved by Elizabeth Webb. Construing the paper by the legal import of its terms, and the manifest understanding of the parties, we hold that delay of payment beyond the year stipulated, may be compensated by interest, and did not work a forfeiture of rights.

Treating the conditional verdict as an equitable decree which the Court ought to have carried into effect, we reverse the judgment, and enter judgment on the verdict, extending the time for the payment of the money therein mentioned to the first day of June next.

Opinion by Judge Black.

MORGAN v SCOTT,

The defendant is unwilling either to give up the land he bought and take back what he has paid on it or to complete his contract by paying the balance. He insists upon a deduction from the price. But the grounds on which he bases this demand are, none of them, solid and tenable.

1. The delay of the plaintiff in making title is not sufficient under the circumstances. It does not appear that any precise time was fixed in the contract when the conveyance should be made. There was no delay which the plaintiff could avoid. In what there was the defendant acquiesced. It was caused too, at least partially, by himself.

2. There was an old mortgage on the land (nearly fifty years old) given to secure a life annuity to a person who died long ago. It was not fair in the defendant to catch at such an objection as this. It was in fact no incumbrance. Still in order to silence him the plaintiff procured satisfaction to be formally entered on the record.

3. The quantity of land sold was mentioned in the contract as eighty acres. He asks to be allowed for a deficiency. In point of fact there was no deficiency. It measured the full quantity and rather more. But he objects that only seventy-four acres were inside the river bank—the other six acres having been added by accretions from the river. But for the latter he was offered a title as good as that by which the first land was held. The title to both was and is perfect. To call the whole piece less than eighty acres would have been a misdescription. It was so misdescribed in some of the proceedings and the defendant would not rest until it was changed. Since this amendment at his own instance he objects again that the accretions ought not to be considered a part of his purchase.

4. This land lies in what was once the District of Richmond. The streets in that part of the city were laid out before the purchase but not confirmed until afterwards. The defendant complains that they are so laid out as to make the shapes of the lots into which he means to divide the farm in some places less desirable than they would have been if the streets had been where the plaintiff induced him to believe they would. The burden of proving this lay on him. He has totally failed to show that there was either warranty or misrepresentation on the subject.

5. After the contract for sale was made some of the buildings were burnt, fences destroyed, ditches filled up and the property otherwise damaged. A contract like this vests the equitable title in the purchaser, and upon him the loss falls if it be injured by an unavoidable accident before or after the legal estate is conveyed. Where the injuries might have been prevented by proper care the vendor is not responsible unless he has put himself under some obligation express or implied to keep it in good condition. No such obligation existed here for the defendant might have taken possession of it himself and done whatever was required to protect it. He did authorize two persons to take it and they have had it ever since. At least it does not appear that either they or he have been interfered with by the plaintiff. If the property has been injured (as it certainly has) it was either by the defendant's own fault or by some misfortune which no diligence could have averted. In either case equity will not allow a deduction to be made from the purchase money.

MORGAN v SCOTT.

Appeal from the Decree of the Court of Common Pleas of Philadelphia, sitting in equity.

And now to wit 20 May, 1856. This cause having been reached and the arguments of counsel having been heard and the court having taken time to consider thereof it is adjudged and decreed that the decree of the Court of Common Pleas of Philadelphia County be affirmed and that the complainant do recover such further costs as may have been by him expended in this behalf.

Opinions by Judge Lewis.

THE MARION BENEFICIAL ASSOCIATION vs. THE COMMONWEALTH ex rel. TIMOTHY DRAKE.

The act of 14 June, 1836, gives the right to recover damages in the writ of mandamus, as in an action for a false return to such writ. The evidence tending to show that the relator was in a condition which entitled him to the aid of the society was therefore pertinent on the question of damages.

If the respondent's counsel had offered to read the pleadings in the cause for the purpose of showing to the jury what the issue was, the court ought to have permitted it; but when the offer was made to read the answer, in order that "the jury might take the statements therein as admitted so far as not denied by the plea," the court was correct in rejecting it. The statements in the answer, not denied by the plea, were not in issue, and therefore were not to be passed upon by the jury. If they were admitted to be true, and afforded a good defence to the writ, the court and not the jury might say so, irrespective of the verdict.

This disposes of the first and second errors. The fourth and sixth are not specified so as to raise any particular question; and there is nothing in the fifth.

The rejection of George Senderling, Jr., on the ground of interest remains to be considered. His competency depends either upon his interest in the fund out of which the verdict must be paid, or his liability to assessment for the purpose of raising funds to satisfy the demand.

In the Washington Beneficial Society v. Backer, 8 Harris 425, it was held that the witness was liable to assessment to raise funds to satisfy the claim, if there should be a recovery against the society, and he was therefore excluded. But in that case the constitution of the society expressly authorized such assessments from time to time as might be required. In the case before us there appears to be no express provision of that kind. But the principle seems to be a just one that the members of incorporated companies are bound to fulfil the obligations of the corporation itself, whenever their responsibility is not restricted by the charter, as it may be his express provision ascertaining the amount of capital stock, or the measure of liability; 1 Amer. Law Mag. 100. The members are not directly responsible to the creditors of the corporation, but, when they authorized it to contract debts for their benefit, they are each bound in conscience to contribute to the corporation itself a just proportion of the funds necessary to meet the engagements thus made. And a court of equity will give effect to this obligation by compelling the corporate authorities to make the necessary assessment. This seems to have been done in the case of Salmon v. The Hamburg Company, 1 Obern. Co., 206. 6 Viner' Abr. 310. That decision was cited with approbation by Ch. J. Spencer, in Sloc v. Bloomer, 19 John 484, and by Chancellor Desautans, in Hume v. Wingaw and Wando Canal Company, 1 Carolina Law Journal 217. 7 Amer. Law Mag. 92. In the latter case there was a decree applying the proceeds of the joint stock towards the payment of the debt and compelling each member to pay his proportion of the deficiency. That decree was affirmed on appeal. 7 Amer. Law Mag. 103. In the case before us there seems to be no express provision ascertaining the amount of the capital, or otherwise restricting the measure of each member's liability. But it may not be necessary to determine this point at present, as, if the members are not liable to assessment to meet liabilities incurred by their authority and for their benefit, it would seem to follow that the provision for the witness himself depends altogether upon the sufficiency of the corporate fund. As the recovery by the relator would diminish that fund, the witness was interested in defeating it. He was therefore properly excluded. Judgment affirmed.

MARY B. LEIPER, et al. EXECUTRIX OF SAMUEL M. LEIPER, DEC'D., v. WILLIAM A. IRVINE, et al.

Harrisburg, May 3, 1856. From Nisi Prius.

We may concede for the purposes of this case that the contract of sale made by William A. Irvine, the trustee, with the assent of Samuel M. Leiper, the cestui que trust, brought the land within the rule of equity which required it to be treated as personal estate, for the purpose of regulating the succession to it. We may also concede, for the present, without, however, deciding the point, that upon the death of Mr. Leiper, his widow and children became entitled to have their interests in the purchase money distributed as personal estate. If they had a right to the proceeds, they had, of course, a right to take the land, in lieu of the money, with the assent of the vendee. The rescission of the contract of sale after the death of Mr. Leiper, was therefore a reconversion of the personal estate into land, each distributee thus acquiring the same interest in the land which he held in the proceeds at and immediately before the reconversion. But what was that interest? Nothing more than such share as the will or the law gave after payment of the debts of the decedent. The original contract of sale did not work an absolute conversion of the real estate into personalty against the will of the creditors. They might, notwithstanding, such contract, obtain judgments against it and sell it as real estate; and the proceeds would be distributed among the lien creditors, according to their priority, precisely like the distribution of any other real estate. Mr. Leiper could also have mortgaged it, or conveyed it, as real estate, and these acts would have been perfectly valid to pass whatever remaining interest he possessed, without any such delivery or change of possession as is required to pass a title to personal property. If the creditors had the right to treat the property as land during the life time of Mr. Leiper, did they lose it by his death? It has never been supposed that the death of a debtor changes his real estate into personalty. So far from producing that effect the creditors of Mr. Leiper acquired on his death, by operation of law, liens on the property in question for the amounts of their several debts. If the contract of sale remained in force it would have been the duty of the executors to carry it into effect and to make conveyances to the purchasers, not by virtue of their authority over it as personal estate, but in pursuance of the statutory direction which subjects them to the supervision and control of the courts. In such cases the proceeds must be distributed as real estate, so far as the creditors are concerned, and respect must be had to priority of liens, although all the liens may have been created after the alleged conversion. It follows from these principles that, so far as the creditors are concerned, there has been no conversion of the real estate into personalty; and that so far as the distributees are interested there has been a reconversion into land, and that the parties in interest have a right to immediate possession as tenants in common, or to partition, to hold in severalty subject to the paramount rights of the creditors. These rights can be ascertained by settlement of the administration account, and the sale of so much of the land, under the orders of the Orphans' Court as may be necessary, after the application of the personal estate proper, for the payment of the debts of the decedent. The purchasers under such sales would take as good a title without the conveyance by Mr. Irvine as with it; but if it should be necessary, for the purpose of removing doubts, he can be directed, in a proceeding for the purpose, to execute conveyances to the purchasers. In the meantime we are unable to see the propriety of directing Mr. Irvine to convey to the executors. It is not alleged that he is abusing the trust. The creditors, (admitted to amount to $40000, after the personal estate proper is applied to their claims) have not been made parties to this application, and it does not appear that their interest would be promoted by granting the prayer of the bill. The five minor children of the decedent, who own at least two-thirds of the property which may be left after payment of debts, are opposed to the bill. The only person interested, who desires the conveyance, is the widow. Her interest at most, cannot exceed one-third of the residue after payment of debts. What that residue may be is not apparent now. It depends upon the amount of the debts, the prices which may be obtained for the property, and the expenses of settling the estate. The widow has not filed this bill for the protection of her individual rights. She is at present before us with the other executors in a representative capacity; and it is sufficient for the purposes of the case to say that the executors have shown no title to the relief demanded.

The judgment of the Court of Nisi Prius is affirmed; and the complainants are directed to pay the costs, without prejudice to their rights to charge them against the estate, on the settlement of their administration account.

Law School of the University at Cambridge, Mass.

The instructors in this school are Hon. JOEL PARKER, LL. D., Royal Professor. Hon. THEOPHILUS PARSONS, LL. D., Dane Professor. Hon. EMERY WASHBURN, LL. D., University Professor.

The course of instruction embraces the various branches of the Common Law, and of Equity, Admiralty, Commercial, International and Constitutional Law, and the Jurisprudence of the United States. The Law Library consists of about 14,000 volumes, and as new works appear they are added and every effort is made to render it complete.

Instruction is given by oral lectures and expositions, (and by recitations and examinations, in connection with them,) of which there are ten every week. Two Moot Courts are also holden in each week, at each of which a cause, previously given out, is argued by four students, and an opinion delivered by the presiding instructor. Rooms and other facilities are also provided for the Club Courts; and an Assembly is held weekly for practice in debate, and acquiring a knowledge of Parliamentary law and proceedings. Students may enter the school in any stage of their professional studies or mercantile pursuits, and at the commencement of either term, or in the middle, or other part of a term. They are at liberty to select what studies they will pursue, according to their view of their own wants and attainments.

The Academical year, which commences on Thursday, six weeks after the third Wednesday in July, is divided into two terms, of twenty weeks each, with a vacation of six weeks at the end of each term.

During the winter vacation, the Library is opened, warmed and lighted, for the use of the members of the school.

Applications for admission, or for Catalogues, or any further information, may be made to either of the Professors at Cambridge. June 6-ly.

GREAT FIRE, MAY 1, 1856.

HERRING'S PATENT CHAMPION SAFES!

What the People Say!

PHILADELPHIA, 2d May, 1856.

MESSRS. FARRELS & HERRING—GENTLEMEN—The Herring's Patent Champion Fire-Proof Safe, which we purchased of you in the month of January last, was situated in our Counting-Room, in the second story of 231 Market street, on the night of the Great Fire, 1st May, 1856, and fell with the burning building in that configuration.

The safe was reached this afternoon, after an exposure of THIRTY-SIX HOURS to intense heat, and although the brass plates on the front of the safe were melted, and the exterior shows the evidence of extreme heat, the inside casing was found to be UNTOUCHED BY FIRE, and with the exception of being a little steamed is now as good as new. EDW. SEMANS & CO.

MESSRS. FARRELS & HERRING—

GENTLEMEN—The Herring's Patent Champion Fire-Proof Safe, of your manufacture, which we purchased nearly a year since, was in the centre of our building at the time of its destruction in the Great Fire of May 1, 1856.

We had removed the greater portion of our Books before the fire reached us, but left some of them, together with a number of loose papers, inside, purposely to test the security of the safe. After thirty-eight hours of severe roasting, we found the interior of the safe, upon opening, not only bright and sound, but the Books and Papers as free from fire as when first put in.

We shall require another safe as soon as we get a new location, and want none but your "Champion." Yours, &c., FISHER & BROTHER, No. 15 North Sixth street.

The public will bear in mind that the "HERRING'S PATENT" is the only safe made in this City, which has never failed to preserve its contents in accidental fires.

GREAT FIRE, MAY 1, 1856.

HERRING'S PATENT CHAMPION SAFES!

What the People Say!

PHILADELPHIA, 2d May, 1856.

MESSRS. FARRELS & HERRING—GENTLEMEN—The Herring's Patent Fire-Proof Safe, which we purchased of you in the month of January last, was situated in our Counting-Room, in the second story of 231 Market street, on the night of the Great Fire, 1st May, 1856, and fell with the burning building in that conflagration. The Safe was reached this afternoon, after an exposure of THIRTY-SIX HOURS to intense heat, and although the brass plates on the front of the Safe were melted, and the exterior shows the evidences of extreme heat, the inside casing was found to be UNTOUCHED BY FIRE, and with the exception of being a little steamed is now as good as new. EDW. SEMANS & CO.

MESSRS. FARRELS & HERRING—GENTLEMEN—The Herring's Patent Fire-Proof Safe, of your manufacture, which we purchased nearly a year since, was in the centre of our building at the time of its destruction in the Great Fire of May 1, 1856.

We had removed the greater portion of our Books before the fire reached us, but left some of them, together with a number of loose papers, inside, purposely to test the security of the safe. After thirty-eight hours of severe roasting, we found the interior of the Safe, upon opening, not only bright and sound, but the Books and Papers as free from fire as when first put in.

We shall require another Safe as soon as we get a new location, and want none but your "Champion."

Yours, &c., FISHER & BROTHER, No. 15 North Sixth street. The public will bear in mind that the "HERRING'S PATENT" is the only Safe made in this City, which has never failed to preserve its contents in accidental fires. THE TWO SAFES from the above Great Fire can now be seen in front of the OLD STAND, No. 34 WALNUT STREET.

SELF-CLEANING FURNACE.

Boynton's Patent.

Having put up a large number of these Furnaces, both in public and private buildings, (including 24 put up at the Philadelphia County Prison, in place of the 44 torn out.) and tested them during the cold weather of 1855, and 1856, being the coldest weather we have had for twenty or thirty years. They have given the most universal satisfaction, and those having them in use were perfectly delighted with the abundance of warm, pleasant air, and abundant ventilation afforded thereby, while so many were suffering from heat, and troubled with the deficiencies of their heating apparatus.

We take great pleasure, therefore, in recommending them to the notice of the public, and would call their attention particularly to an examination of the greatly increased amount of effective radiating surface, their perfect solidity and durability, the improved manner of making the joints, entirely preventing any escape of gases, and the manner of distributing the fire, so as to cause it to impinge directly against the large amount of surface, without the objectionable and unnatural method of forcing the current downwards.

We have also a full assortment of HAYES' PATENT TUBULAR OVEN RANGES, now so universally used, and favorably known. Also, HAYES' PATENT VENTILATORS, &c., &c., all of which will be put up in the very best manner, and by the most skillful workmen, constantly engaged for that purpose, by

PHILADELPHIA, 1854.

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND, No. 83 DOCK Street, next door to THIRD Street, and adjoining the POST OFFICE, receives MONEY on deposit daily, from 9 in the morning until 3 in the afternoon; also Monday evenings, from 7 to 9 o'clock. Interest is allowed on deposits at the rate of FIVE PER CENT per annum. Deposits will be returned in whole, or in part, on demand, without notice.

The popularity of this Office with all classes of the community, both in town and country, and its consequent success, may be ascribed, in part, to the following substantial reasons:

- 1st. It offers a convenient, responsible, and profitable Depository to Executors, Administrators, Assignees, Collectors, Agents, and all public officers—to Attorneys, Trustees, Societies and Associations, whether incorporated or otherwise—to married or single ladies—to Students, Merchants, Clerks, and business men generally—to Mechanics, Farmers, Minors of either sex, and all who have funds, much or little, to deposit, where they may be had at any time, with Five Per Cent interest added.
- 2d. Depositors receive Books, with an abstract of the By-laws and regulations, in which is entered their deposits, which Books serve as vouchers. They may deposit in case of sickness, death, or absence, who shall receive their deposits, without the intervention of Executors or Administrators. Any one or more persons may deposit in his, her, or their name, or for any other person or persons.
- 3d. A Report is made each year to the Legislature and Councils of the City.
- 4th. The Officers are sworn before they enter upon their duties, in addition to giving Bonds with sureties.
- 5th. The State Savings Fund is a real Savings Fund—not an Insurance and Trust Company. The Charter of this Institution avoids the Insurance business.
- 6th. Deposits may be withdrawn by checks after the manner customary with Banks. Check Books will be furnished to depositors without charge.

This Number commences the THIRTEENTH VOLUME and the SEVENTH YEAR of HARPER'S NEW MONTHLY MAGAZINE, with the extraordinary issue of One Hundred and Sixty Thousand Copies. The Publishers have endeavored, by a well directed use of the abundant resources at their command, to render it not only the cheapest, but the most attractive and most useful Magazine for popular reading, in the world; and the extent to which their efforts have been successful is indicated by the fact, that it has attained a greater circulation than any similar periodical ever issued.

Special efforts will be made to render it still more interesting and valuable during the coming year. The new volume commences with the present Number. No labor or expense will be spared to render it in every way, and in all its departments, still more worthy of the unparalleled favor with which it has been received.

HARPER'S NEW MONTHLY MAGAZINE owes its success to the fact, that it presents more reading matter, of a BETTER quality, in a MORE ELEGANT style, and at a CHEAPER rate, than any other publication.

The Publication of Mr. DICKENS'S "Little Dorrit" was commenced in the January Number of this Magazine. This charming story is generally acknowledged to be the best of his productions, and occupies but about one-tenth of each Number, and is issued to Subscribers at a cost of about TWO CENTS each!

It is the foremost Magazine of the day. The friends never had a more delightful companion, nor the million a more entertaining friend than Harper's Magazine.—Methodist Protestant (Baltimore.)

The most popular monthly in the world. It has become one of the literary wonders of this country. Almost exclusively composed of the works of American authors and artists, it pays its contributors some twenty-five hundred dollars monthly. It is a happy circumstance that it aims at the highest standard of literature and the purest of morals in all its pages.—N. Y. Observer.

TERMS.—The Magazine may be obtained of Booksellers, Periodical Agents, or from the Publishers, at THREE DOLLARS a year, or TWENTY-FIVE CENTS a Number. The Semi-annual Volumes, as completed, neatly bound in Cloth, are sold at Two DOLLARS each, and Muslin Covers are furnished to those who wish to have their back Numbers uniformly bound, at TWENTY-FIVE cents each. Twelve volumes are now ready, bound.

The Publishers will supply Specimen Numbers gratuitously to Agents and Postmasters, and will make liberal arrangements with them for circulating the Magazine. They will also supply Clubs of two persons at Five Dollars a year, or five persons, at Ten Dollars. Clergymen and Teachers supplied at Two dollars a year.

T. & J. W. JOHNSON,

LAW BOOKSELLERS AND PUBLISHERS,

No. 197 CHESTNUT STREET, PHILADELPHIA.

The Fullest, the Latest, and the Best REPORTS OF THE COMMON LAW COURTS OF ENGLAND.

Containing the cases decided in the Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Nisi Prius Courts, from 1813 to 1855, and in the Court of Exchequer and Exchequer Chamber, from 1824 to 1855, are found in

The Regular and Authoritative Series of the English Common Law and English Exchequer Reports,

Which present the following claims to the support of the profession:

1. They are the only series issued as the authoritative and acknowledged medium by which the decisions of the Law Courts of England are made public.

2. They contain Later Reports than the Boston series, are more fully and more ably reported, and so arranged by preservation of the original paging, that reference by reporters, or by elementary writers, can be traced as readily as in the English editions.

Vol. 2, Ellis & Blackburne's (75 E. C. L. R.) Reports (Q. B.) to January, 1854, was published by us in June, 1854. At that time the last Queen's Bench case printed in the Boston Law and Equity Reports, was of June 25, 1853. Our volume contained cases decided five months later. The Queen's Bench cases to November 25, 1853, were published in the Boston series in August, 1854, two months after we had distributed the same cases.

Vol. 3, Ellis & Blackburne, (77 E. C. L. R.,) with cases to the end of Trinity Term, 1854, was published when the latest case of Queen's Bench decisions in the Boston series, was of February 8, 1854, more than four months behind the regular reporters.

Exchequer Reports, vol. 9, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) distributed by us January 11, 1855, contains cases to May 10, 1854. The last Exchequer case then in the Boston series was decided February 9, 1854, four months behind the regular Reporter, issued in Philadelphia.

3. They contain more cases decided by the courts represented, than any other series issued in this country.

Vol. 77 English Common Law, (3 E. & B.,) reports eighty-six cases decided in the Queen's Bench since January 11, 1854, while but fifty-eight Queen's Bench cases, decided since January 1, 1854, are found scattered among Vols. 22, 24 and 25 of the Boston Law and Equity.

Vol. 78 E. C. L. K. (5 J. Scott,) reports sixty-five cases decided since Nov. 13, 1853, in the Common Pleas, while the L. & E. has but fifty-seven cases in that Court since the same period.

Vol. 9 Exchequer Reports, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) reports one hundred and ten cases in the Courts of Exchequer, decided since June 24, 1853, while since the same date, the L. & E. report but 107 cases, scattered through vols. 20, 22, 24 and 25.

4. They are almost exclusively cited in argument of counsel, and referred to by Elementary Writers for Law Authorities. See Smith's Leading Cases, Smith's Contracts, Smith's Landlord and Tenant, by Maude; Byles on Bills and Promissory Notes, Broom's Legal Maxims, Broom's Commentaries on the Laws of England, or almost any recent Law Book issued in England.

5. The Philadelphia Reports are edited by Judge Sharswood and by Judge Hare, whose labors as editors and authors have made them so well and so favorably known to the profession.

6. The Boston Law and Equity is made up in this country from the Law Journal, Jurist, Times and other Law periodicals, of a weekly, monthly, or quarterly character, and being unknown in England, is never cited in Court, or referred to by Law writers. The periodicals from which it is extracted, are occasionally cited under their own particular names, but they do not possess that permanent value, even in England, which is all-important in a series of Reports.

A carefully prepared and accurate Annual Digest of all the cases decided by the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Exchequer, will be distributed, early in each year, to subscribers to either series, free of charge. That for 1854 is ready, and will be mailed to subscribers who have not received a copy.

IN PRESS AND IN PREPARATION.

Smith's Law of Landlord and Tenant, by author of Leading Cases, with copious American notes by P. P. Morris, Esq.

We understand that Mr. Tudor, who is so well known to the profession as one of the editors of the Leading Cases in Equity, is about to bring out a selection of Leading Cases on Mercantile Law, with Notes. It is the intention of Judge Hare and of Mr. Wallace, to edit this work in the same style in which they have just edited Smith's Leading Cases, and are now editing the American Leading Cases. This work, so edited, will probably be brought out by a Law Publication House in New England.

Supreme Court.

Opinions by Judge Knox.

ROBERT GUY v. ARCHIBALD McILREE.

Error to the District Court of Philadelphia City and County.

The firm of McIntyre & Gibboney, Manufacturers of Cotton and Woolen Goods in the City of Philadelphia, in June, 1849, became embarrassed and in failing circumstances. Robert Guy, the plaintiff in error was a creditor of the firm, and for the purpose of securing him, certain goods were delivered to him and orders drawn by the firm on its debtors in his favor. A judgment was also confessed in his favor before a justice of the peace for four hundred and seventy-six dollars and thirty-five cents, and another judgment confessing to him as trustee for four hundred and one dollar and twenty-eight cents. Upon these two judgments, executions issued upon which levies were made and the first judgment satisfied in full. One hundred and seventy dollars and twenty-six cents was collected and applied upon the judgment in his favor as trustee. Certain moneys were received by him on the orders drawn in his favor upon the debtors of McIntyre & Gibboney; so that he had in his hands several hundred dollars after satisfying his own debt against the firm.

Archibald McIlree, the defendant in error, was also a creditor of McIntyre & Gibboney, and having obtained a judgment against them in the District Court, he issued an execution attachment and summoned Robert Guy, as garnishee. In his answers to the interrogatories filed, the garnishee admitted the receipt of the moneys heretofore stated, but claimed that the judgment confessed to him was to secure various small debts due to the laborers about the factory, and that the orders and goods transferred to him were received as collateral to that judgment as well as his own, and that he had not received a sufficient sum to pay both judgments.

The case appears to have been tried chiefly on the answers to the interrogatories.

The instruction given by the learned judge of the District Court as far as it is material was as follows, viz:

"If you find that McIntyre & Gibboney were largely indebted and in failing circumstances, and that the transfer of the property to Guy, the garnishee, was in trust for creditors, it will be void as against this attachment, although effected by a parol assignment of debts and chattels, and a confession of judgment and not by formal writing. But you must except from this instruction whatever portion of the property thus transferred was delivered to Guy in payment of his own debt, and whatever payments he had made before the service of the attachment."

The counsel for the plaintiff in error does not complain of the charge so far as it relates to the goods and choses in action, but he denies its correctness in reference to the confession of judgment.

That one in failing circumstances may confess a judgment in favor of one creditor to the exclusion of others is fully established by the cases of Blakey's Appeal, 7 Barr, 449, and Warman v. Walfersburger's Executors, 7 Harris, 59. The doctrine of these cases is not denied, but it is said that where the judgment is confessed to one in trust for others, that it is virtually an assignment, and unless recorded as required by the act of 1818, is null and void against any of the creditors of the defendant in the judgment. Is a confession of judgment to one in trust for others an assignment of any part of the defendant's estate real or personal? We think not. There is little if any similarity between an assignment and a judgment. The one is an absolute transfer of its subject matter, whilst the other is but the means whereof to enforce the payment of a debt. An assignment passes the property in real and personal estate, rights and credits, whilst a judgment of itself gives no vested estate in any of the property of the defendant, merely creating a lien upon his real estate if any he has at the time of its entry. Accordingly it was held in Ridgway v. Stewart 4 W. & S. 383, that a mortgage of real and personal estate made to trustees to secure money borrowed and to be borrowed by the mortgagee, was not an assignment under the act of 24th March, 1818, and was valid although not recorded under that act. So in the Manufacturers' and Mechanics' Bank v. Bank of Pennsyl- vania, 7 Watts & Sergeant, 335. This court decided that a mortgage to a trustee of real estate with power to sell and pay a certain debt, was not an assignment for the benefit of a creditor, and was not void because not recorded within thirty days. The case under consideration is stronger against the application of the principle contended for by the defendant in error, than those first cited; for in those cases there was a conditional conveyance of the estate mortgaged but in this, it does not appear that the defendants had any real estate, no interest in property, general, special, absolute or conditional, passed by the confession of judgment from the defendants to the plaintiff.

True it was the means by which a preference was secured, but this as has already been shown is not prohibited by any statutory enactment; on the contrary the act of 17th April, 1843, expressly authorizes preferences to be made for the payment of wages of laborers severally not to exceed fifty dollars. If the judgment in favor of Guy as trustee was a bona fide one honestly given for the purpose stated in the answers to the interrogatories, the money made upon its execution belonged to the laborers and was not liable to be attached in the hands of the trustee at the suit of another creditor.

For the misdirections of the court in this particular the judgment must be reversed, and as the case goes back for a new trial it is proper to say that there was no error committed in receiving the testimony of William Divine.

Judgment reversed, and Venire de Novo awarded.

CHARLES D. MANLEY, ADMINISTRATOR &c., OF REBECCA LOBB v. WILLIAM HOOD AND GEORGE LOBB, ADMINISTRATORS OF BENJAMIN LOBB, DECEASED.

Error to the Common Pleas of Delaware County.

This was an action of debt on award. The grounds of defence were, 1st. That Rebecca Lobb, in whose favor the award was made had not joined in the submission. 2d. That the award was void for uncertainty. 3d. That by an arrangement subsequent to the award Rebecca had released the estate of Benjamin Lobb and had substituted the personal liability of one of the administrators, George Lobb. The verdict was for the plaintiff for the amount of the award with interest from its date.

The assignments of error are numerous. Several of them however may be examined together as they present substantially the same question.

1st. and 3d. It is assigned for error that the Court submitted declarations of George Lobb, one of the administrators and the only one summoned; to be given in evidence to prove that the money awarded to be due to Rebecca was unpaid, and that it was in the hands of the administrators. This evidence was properly received. The action was upon the award made subsequent to the appointment of the administrators and the evidence was competent at least as corroborative. The pleas put in issue, the existence of the award as well as its payment, and the evidence contained in these bills of exceptions were pertinent to both issues. The question would have been entirely different had the evidence been offered to prove the original liability of the estate.

2d, 7th, and 8th. These assignments raise the question of the admissibility of the award in evidence, its character as to certainty, and its agreement with the award declared upon.

The award was in these words.

"Marple, 10th mo. 12th, 1837.

We the subscribers met and awarded to Rebecca Lobb, for services done for her brother a number of years, to be in addition to what she had, $1,000.00 cents.

(Signed)

BENJAMIN YARD,
JAMES MORRIS,
JOS. ESREY.

Although the award is far from being artistically drawn yet there appears from its face no uncertainty except as to the name of the brother and about this there is no dispute. It also agrees with the declaration as set forth in the plaintiff's paper book and was consequently admissible in evidence.

4th. "The Court erred in admitting evidence as to the capacity in which Rebecca Lobb lived with George Lobb." It is not easy to discover the materiality of this evidence for it does not appear to have had anything to do with the result of the case. If there was error in admitting the evidence it was without injury to the defendant and therefore it does not call for a reversal of the judgment.

5th. The evidence contained in this bill was clearly pertinent as its tendency was to prove that the administrators recognized the validity of the award and that the amount of it was placed in the hands of one of them for its payment.

6th. The Court of Common Pleas was requested to instruct the jury that there was no evidence that Rebecca Lobb had joined in the submission. The refusal of the Court so to instruct the jury was right, for it was distinctly proven that Rebecca was present at the hearing and stated her claim to the referees, as the submission was by parol her previous agreement was to be inferred from her participation in the trial.

8th and 10th. The suit was brought against William Hood and George Lobb, administrators of Benjamin Lobb deceased. Lobb was summoned and "Nihil" returned as to Hood. The declaration was against George Lobb as administrator, and the pleas by him. The record of the trial is in these words, viz:

"May 25th, 1854. A jury being called and affirmed say they, find for the plaintiff against the defendants the sum of nineteen hundred and ninety-seven dollars and thirty-three cents damages and six cents costs. Judgment accordingly."

Two errors are assigned upon this part of the record.

9th. "The Court erred in allowing the jury to be sworn as upon an issue between the plaintiff and Benjamin Hood and George Lobb, defendants, there having been no plea entered by Benjamin Hood and no issue proved as to him."

10th. "The Court erred in rendering judgment on the verdict against both defendants named in the writ. William Hood not having been summoned, and George Lobb only having pleaded to issue."

It is admitted in the defendant's paper book that the jury were drawn and the judgment entered against both Lobb and Hood, as administrators of Benjamin Lobb, deceased. This was erroneous as to Hood, he was no party to the issue and had no opportunity of being heard and although he was named in the writ in a representative capacity, yet it may be that the judgment against him if permitted to stand will affect his interest in some subsequent proceedings. To prevent this we will reverse the judgment as to Hood, but affirm it as against the other administrator, George Lobb. This will give to the plaintiff a complete remedy against the estate of Benjamin Lobb, deceased, and against George Lobb for devastavit if any committed.

Judgment reversed as to William Hood, the administrator not summoned, and affirmed with costs against George Lobb, the other administrator.

JOHN SHARPLESS AND MARY D. his wife in right of said MARY, v. THE BOROUGH AND INHABITANTS OF WEST CHESTER.

Error to the Common Pleas of Chester County.

The Act of 23d March, 1839, under which the defendant claims the right to appropriate the property of the plaintiffs for public use, contained in its second section the following provision, "That the said Borough of West Chester shall pay or secure to be paid all damages that may be caused, directly or indirectly, to the private property by virtue of the privileges hereby granted, in such manner as is provided in the fifth section of an Act entitled a further supplement to the Act entitled an Act to incorporate the Town of West Chester into a borough. Passed the 16th day of April, 1838."

The fifth section of the act referred to makes no provision for the payment or securing the payment of damages, but merely declares how the damages shall be ascertained.

It is alleged by the plaintiff in error that the first mentioned Act of Assembly is unconstitutional, because it does not require compensation to be made or adequate security to be given before private property is taken for public use.

Where an Act of Assembly is susceptible of different constructions, the one in accordance with and the other in violation of the constitution, it is too plain for argument that it is the duty of a court of justice to give to the act that construction which harmonizes with the constitution, for such is presumed to have been the legislative intent.

Now the act in question provides that "the Borough shall pay or secure to be paid, all damages that may be caused, &c." When shall it pay or secure the damages? The constitution says "before the property is taken," and as the legislature did not give or attempt to give the power to take private property before payment or security, the presumption is, that the payment or security was to precede the act of taking, and upon this presumption the act was in conformity to the constitutional requisition. The reference to the act of 1838 is simply for the purpose of pointing out the means by which the damages shall be ascertained but the extent of the damages is governed by the act of 1839, which act provides that all damages "that may be caused directly or indirectly" shall be paid or secured, including of course the charges that follow, as well as those that preceded the assessment.

It is unnecessary to determine what would have been the effect had the act of 1839 contained no provision making it obligatory upon the borough to pay or secure the damages occasioned by its exercise of the right given to it by the legislature to take private property for public use, as we are of opinion that the provision in the act required the damages to be paid or secured before the property was taken.

An objection was made to the admission of the bond in evidence because it was drawn to the wife alone without naming the husband. It is conceded that the property belonged to the wife and that it was devised to her since the act of 11th April, A. D., 1848. As Mary D. Sharpless might have maintained an action in her own name for damages done to her real estate, and as her husband's interest in her lands as tenant by the curtesy although protected by the act of 11th April, 1848, is not a vested interest until her death, it was unnecessary to include his name in the bond. The entire damages sustained can be recovered under the proceedings commenced for that purpose, and therefore the plaintiffs are neither entitled to recover the possession of the land in this action of ejectment, nor damages for the entry to survey and reach the same before the land was tendered.

Judgment affirmed.

Opinions by Judge Lewis.

FREDERICK GAUL v. BENJAMIN B. WILLIS.

Frederick Gaul, the defendant below, loaned his note to William C. Rudman for the purpose enabling the latter to raise money by the sale of it. The note was drawn in the usual form for negotiable instruments, and expressed on its face to have been given for "value received," although there was in fact no debt due from Gaul to Rudman. Rudman endorsed the note and sold it to Drexel, & Co. They in turn, disposed of it to Benjamin B. Willis, at a discount equal to one and a half per cent per month. Neither Drexel, & Co., nor Willis had any knowledge of the purpose for which the note was given. They had a right to put faith in the representation, on the face of the paper, that it was given for a valuable consideration. As against the parties who made that representation the note must be held to be as they represented it. This is a principle of equity applicable to all business transactions; but it is so indispensable, in the transfer of negotiable securities, that a party to such an instrument cannot be received, even after a release, to give evidence to invalidate it in the hands of a bona fide holder, on the ground of usury, or for any other cause touching the original consideration. Walton v. Shelby, 1 T. R. 300; Griffith v. Reford, 1 Rawle, 196. This brings us to the question, Is Benjn. B. Willis a bona fide holder? If he participated in any contrivance to evade the statute against usury he would not be a purchaser in good faith. But we have already seen that he had no notice whatever of the purpose for which the note was made. He neither loaned, nor intended to loan money to Rudman, or to Gaul. He had no transaction of any kind with them, or with either of them. His dealings were with Drexel & Co. There was no intention on the part of the latter to borrow, and no engagement to return the money received, or any part of it, or to pay any sum whatever for the use of it. Nor was there any intention on the part of Willis to lend money to them. It was a clear purchase of the security, and nothing else. Had he a right to purchase it at a greater discount than six per cent? That he had was fully settled so long ago as 1785. Wyckoff v. Loughhead, 2 Dallas 92; Musgrave v. Gibbs, 1 Dallas 216. Although the period of credit given in the instrument is usually spoken of in fixing upon the discount, it is not the only element that enters into the calculation. The value of the security is determined by the present responsibility of the parties bound for it, the probabilities of their continued ability to pay, and their character for punctuality in meeting their engagements. As the parties to the sale of the security were competent to manage their own affairs, that agreement fixing the value of the note, when fairly made, is as binding as any other contract. It is true that if the note was absolutely void there might be an insuperable obstacle to a recovery on it, however fairly acquired. But in this particular the English statutes against usury differ from our own. The former declared that all securities made in violation of them were "utterly void." 13 Eliz. cap. 8; 3 Hen. viii. c. 5; 13 Geo. 3. c. 63. The latter contains no such provision. The result was that the English Courts were bound to declare all such securities were absolutely void even in the hands of innocent purchasers. But in this State the law has always been that even between the original parties such securities are valid for the real debt and legal interest. The excess cannot be recovered by one who participated in the contrivance to evade the statute, because he has no right to recover at law what the law prohibits him from contracting for or receiving. But as an innocent purchaser of such a security violates no law he is of course entitled to recover the amount which, on the face of the instrument, appears to be due. The District Court was therefore correct in giving judgment for the plaintiff. Judgment affirmed.

PETER BARKER, et al. v. Wm. K. McFER-RAN.

Error to Phila. County, May 3, 1856.

By the 17th Section of the Act of 15th March, 1832, it is directed that "all original wills, after probate, shall be recorded and filed by the Register of the respective County, and the copies of all and such of the probates thereof, under the public seal of the courts, or officers where the same may have been or shall be so taken or granted respectively, except copies of probates of such wills and testaments as shall appear to be annulled, disproved or revoked, shall be adjudged and are hereby enacted to be matter of record, and good evidence to prove the gift or devise thereby made." Although the act of Assembly makes the probate before the regular "matter of record" and "good evidence to prove either a gift" of personal or a devise of real estate, the courts have nevertheless made a distinction between real and personal estate in respect to the effect of a probate of a will before the Register. It is conclusive on questions relating to personal estate, but it is said to be only prima facie evidence to prove the devise of real estate. Admitting a will to probate is certainly a judicial act, and according to general principles the decree of the Register, ought not to be impeached collaterally. It is conceded that according to the decisions this may be done. But has the probate of the will been necessarily impeached in this case? Has it been "annulled, disproved" or "revoked?" It is not pretended that it has been either "annulled" or "revoked." Has it been "disproved?" The will bears upon its face the declaration that the testator has set his "hand and seal" to it, and his name is written at the foot of it. It is true his mark is also there. It is attested by three witnesses. Two of these witnesses are deceased, but their signatures have been duly proved. The third still survives and proves his signature as a witness, but his memory is a blank as to everything that occurred at the time. The case stands then upon the proof of the handwriting of the three subscribing witnesses. Upon this evidence the law not only presumes the sanity of the testator, but presumes everything necessary to establish the will, until the contrary appears. When the testator at the close of his will says "in witness whereof I have set my hand and seal," the presumption is that the seal was put there by himself; and that presumption, after decree admitting the will to probate, is not rebutted by the fact that his mark appears to be there also. Surplusage does not vitiate. The mark was as unnecessary as his seal. But neither did any harm. If, however, it should be established that the name was not written by the testator, the presumption, is that he was "prevented from signing it by the extremity of his last illness" and that it was signed by "some person in his presence and by his express direction." After proof of execution, and especially upon a judicial decree admitting a will to probate, the burden of disproving it rests on the party who denies its validity. If the witnesses die or lose their recollection of the facts he suffers nothing more by the loss of their testimony, than every other person who may be prevented from the same causes, from establishing the allegations necessary to make out his claim or defence. It is not material, in a collateral proceeding, to enquire what evidence was laid before the Register. It was sufficient if it satisfied him. Holliday v. Ward, 7 Harris, 489. If the party producing the will for probate satisfied the judge having jurisdiction over the question, so that he produced the decree admitting the will to probate, he may, under the express provisions of the statute of 1832, stand upon such decree, as record evidence in his favor, until it is revoked by the Register himself, annulled by competent authority, or disproved on a trial at law. The case stated does not show that either of these circumstances has taken place. The result is that the will is valid and the judgment of the Court of Nisi Prius is affirmed. Judgment affirmed.

MARTIN v. BAILY.

By the act of 1833, it is declared that "real estate acquired by a testator after making his will shall pass by a general devise unless a contrary intent be manifest from the face of the will." The evils which this statute was intended to correct were so serious that it ought to receive a liberal construction. The effect of the act is to make the testator speak, not at the time of making his will, but at the time when the law gives effect to it by his death. The case of Roney v. Stultz, 5 Wh. 384, decides that a power to sell, as well as a devise, operates on after acquired property. In accordance with that decision the judgment of the Common Pleas must be affirmed. Judgment affirmed.

Opinions by Judge Woodward.

KELSEY v. MURPHY.

Harrisburg, May 1, 1856.
Error to Schuylkill County.

The great question in this cause is, whether the plaintiff's bills in the New York Chancery, dismissed on final hearing, and duly pleaded here, bars the present action.

The general rule is as old as the Duchess of Kingston's case, 20 State Trials, 538, that the judgment of a court of concurrent jurisdiction directly upon the point, is as a plea, a bar, or as evidence conclusive between the same parties upon the same matter directly in question in another court.

To permit a plaintiff, said Judge Duncan, in Wilson v. Hamilton, 9 S. & R., 429, to prosecute in a second action what was included in, and might have been recovered in the first, would be unjust, and against the policy of the law. That a final decree in Chancery is as conclusive as a judgment at law, was distinctly asserted in Sibbald's case, 12 Peters, 492, and substantially by this court in Evans v. Tatem, 9 S. & R., 261. And that a dismissal of a bill upon the merits and without a stipulation against prejudice, is a final decree attended with the usual consequences of all final decrees is proved by all the authorities. 2 Daniel's Ch. Prac. 753; 4 John's Ch. R. 142; 7 John's Ch. 1.

The bill in Chancery with which we have to do in this case was between the same parties as the present action. Was it directly upon the same point? Was the present cause of action included, and might it have been recovered in that suit?

To determine this recourse must be had to the pleadings then and now, and I proceed to contrast them. The plaintiff after describing in his Chancery bill a sale and delivery to the West of large quantities of coal, and the fraudulent transfer of the same by West to Kelsey, goes on to charge that West obtained the delivery of the said coal with the intention and design on his part to cheat and defraud the plaintiff, by getting possession of the coal and refusing to pay for it, and that he and Kelsey pretending a bona fide sale and purchase between themselves persisted in keeping and retaining said coal without paying for it; that from the nefarious fraud practiced on the plaintiff by said West and Kelsey, the sale to West was null and void in law and equity, and transferred neither in fact or law to the said West and Kelsey any property in the said coal, and then, after demand of discovery comes his prayer for relief, as follows: "And that it may be decreed that the said coal and every part thereof still belongs to your orator, and that the said fraud may be declared in respect to the matters aforesaid, and that the lien of your orator on said property, for the amount and value of the cost and price thereof, may also be established. And also that the said confederates may account to your orator, and pay him for all such portions of the said coal as may have been sold or otherwise disposed of by them, or wasted, lost or destroyed by them, or either of them, since the said portion thereof came to their possession, and that what remains of the same may either be decreed to be delivered up to your orator, so that the same may be sold for the benefit of your orator, and the proceeds thereof be paid to him.

And in the mean time that a receiver of the said coal, or of the part thereof, which may be proper and necessary, may be appointed to take charge of, and sell the coal if necessary, or that your orator may have such further and other relief in the premises as may be just and agreeable to equity?"

It is impossible to doubt that this bill is founded on an existing title in the plaintiff to the coal, or at least a lien thereon for the price. He had indeed parted with the possession in pursuance of a contract of sale, but then that contract was fraudulent from the beginning, and ineffectual therefore for the divesture of his title. West may have sold and transferred to Kelsey, but that was only in pursuance of the confederation between them to defraud the plaintiff of his property. It was his property still, and especially as to that portion of the coal which had not reached its destination, he retained the right of stoppage in transitu. Conspiracy is indeed alleged, but it is a conspiracy to withhold and make away with the plaintiff's property. All the branches of the complaint have a common root in the plaintiff's continuing and undivested title to the coal. Hence the prayer that what has been sold or wasted may be accounted for; that what remains may be delivered up; and that a receiver may be appointed to take charge of and sell it.

Kelsey's answer denied all the material allegations of the bill, proofs were taken, and the bill was dismissed. What was adjudged thereby? Unquestionably that the plaintiff had neither title to the coal, nor lien upon it. He had sold and delivered it to West, and however fraudulent may have been the combination and doings between West and Kelsey, the plaintiff's right to the coal, and to an account of sales was gone. The contract between him and West was valid, and consequently he had no title to the relief sought. But we are reminded that the prayer for general relief was in the disjunctive, and thus it is argued, the ground was covered which is assumed in the present action. It is to be observed that in order to entitle a plaintiff to a decree under a general prayer, different from that specifically prayed, the allegations relied on must not only be such as to afford a ground for the relief sought, but they must have been introduced into the bill for the purpose of showing a claim to relief, and not for the mere purpose of corroborating the plaintiff's right to the specific relief prayed, otherwise the court would take the defendant by surprise, which is contrary to its principles. 1 Daniel's Ch. Prac., 438. The facts should also be stated with sufficient precision to enable the court to make a specific decree, and not in such general terms as to enable the court merely to decide an abstract principle. 9 H., 146.

Upon these principles it is obvious that any general relief to which Murphy was entitled under his bill must have been such as reverted from his ownership of the coal. The Vice Chancellor, satisfied that his title had been divested, and that his right of stoppage in transitu as to the cargoes of the "Female Sailor" and the "Warsaw" was at an end, had no ground afforded him in the bill to decree in favor of the plaintiff, under either the specific or general prayers, and therefore he dismissed the bill with costs.

We turn now to the pleadings in the case in hand. It is an action at law, in case in the nature of a writ of conspiracy. The two first counts were withdrawn in the trial, and may be laid out of view. The third count charges that West was indebted to Murphy in the sum of three thousand five hundred dollars, "for coal before that time sold and delivered to said West by said Murphy," and that West and Kelsey, well knowing the premises, did unlawfully, wickedly and with the intent to cheat and defraud the said Murphy, conspire, combine, confederate and agree together to cheat and defraud the said Murphy out of the said sum of money, and to deprive him of the means of recovering the same of the said West, and then follow the overt acts in pursuance of the alleged conspiracy.

It cannot be doubted that under our decisions such a conspiracy is actionable. Is it not equally certain that it is quite another cause of action from that set out in the bill in equity which we have been considering?

There the ground of complaint was that the plaintiff had been defrauded of property, the title to which he had never parted with—here that he had sold and delivered the property but through a fraudulent combination had been cheated out of the price; there the conspiracy was against his title—here against his compensation; there he sued as owner—here as creditor; there he was asserting an equity—here a conspiracy. If instead of going into equity the plaintiff had sued for his goods in trover, would a judgment against him have concluded the present action? No lawyer will say so. But the distinction is as real, if not as palpable, between this action and the bill, as it would have been between this action and an action of trover and conversion. A corrupt combination is the essential constituent of this action, but that was merely a corroborating circumstance in the bill and not of its essence at all. A restoration of goods wrongfully withheld, and an account of sales, were the objects of pursuit in chancery—the recovery of damages sustained by reason of a public offence, the object of this suit. It is of no moment that both proceedings resulted from the same transactions, and that much of the evidence was applicable to both, for a party imagining that he has several remedies is not to be deprived of the right to one because he first tried a wrong one. And besides the effect which decrees and judgments are to have on subsequent litigation is to be determined from the pleading rather than the evidence.

In some parts of the argument the plaintiff's bill is treated as a creditor's bill.

We cannot so regard it, but it would not help the defence if we could, for granting that it was a creditor's bill the jurisdiction of chancery would be ousted and of course the decree would be no bar.

The rule is well settled in New York (and it is not peculiar to that state) that creditors can have a remedy in chancery against debtors only after the return of nulla bona upon an execution issued under a judgment at law. Wiltshire v. Marfleet, 1 Edwards' Ch. R. 656. Wriggins v. Armstrong, 2 Johnson, Ch. R. 144. McElwain v. Willis, 9 Wend. 548. Brinkerhoff v. Brown, 4 Johnson Ch. R. 677.

In the last of these cases the Chancellor says if the creditor seeks aid as to real estate he must show a judgment creating a lien upon such estate; if he seeks aid in respect to personal estate he must show an execution giving him a legal preference or lien upon the chattels.

Now Murphy was only a creditor at large of West without even a judgment, and if he went into chancery merely to recover compensation for goods sold he went where there was no jurisdiction and the dismissal of his bill concludes nothing. Counsel attempting to distinguish this case from Wiltshire v. Marfleet on the ground that there the prayer for general relief was not in the disjunctive as it is here, but the argument brings them back to the question whether a creditor without judgment or execution can go into chancery for compensation. The specific relief sought was a restoration of the coal and an account of sales, or such other relief, &c. Now if the "other relief" was that of a creditor seeking compensation, which it must have been to make it a bar of this action, then under a general prayer, that was asked for of which chancery had not jurisdiction. Surely a species of relief was not to be afforded under a general prayer, which if specifically prayed for must have been withheld. As a creditor Murphy had no standing in a court of chancery and when he was turned out, his legal rights were unaffected.

But a creditor without judgment or execution, and even before his debt is due, may sue parties at law who conspire to defeat his right of collection by fraudulently concealing and converting the debtor's goods. Mott v. Danforth, 6 W. 304.

This principle brings out into strong relief the essential difference between the causes of action in equity and here. What the plaintiff sues for now he could not have recovered in that proceeding, and to conclude him by an adjudication which did not and could not touch his present grounds, would be a simple denial of justice.

For these reasons we think the court were right in refusing to give to the New York record the effect claimed for it.

And it follows from what has been said that there was no error in rejecting the record of the replevin suit. Like the bill in equity that was founded on the plaintiff's property in the coal, and this action involving no such point, the record was manifestly irrelevant.

There are several bills of exception to evidence but we see no virtue in them. West, a Coal Merchant at Brooklyn, replenishes his yard by cargoes of coal which he induces the plaintiff to send him on credit, and at the very moment of delivery turns over his yard, implements, coal, and all, to Kelsey, his broker, at a greatly inadequate price and absconds. In an action against these parties for conspiring it was proper to rip open the whole transaction and display it to the jury. If honest, it would bear inspection—the clearer the better—but if fraudulent, as alleged, the acts and declarations of each conspirator were evidence against both. The relation in which the parties stood and the acts and declarations of Kelsey offered evidence enough of concert to make the acts and declarations of West competent, and the effect of the whole evidence was properly controlled by the observations which fell from the court in their charge.

These observations dispose of fifteen of the errors assigned. The only remaining one relates to the order of the court in striking out the conclusion of the defendant's secured plea and directing him to conclude to the country.

This interference with the form of the plea, if improper, did not impair the trial of the merits, and is no ground for reversing.

On the whole we perceive no error in the record and therefore affirm the judgment.

CHAMBERS v. BRICK.

The Acts of Assembly referred to and expounded in the case of Goehnenis' Executors v. Horteller, 6 H. 414, justify the judgment on the reserved point, and it is accordingly affirmed. Judgment affirmed.

China and Glass Painting executed in a superior manner, and warranted not to CRACK. Coilings cleaned and Whitened, and made equal to new, at a cost little over that of whitewash. The subscriber would state here that it frequently occurs that persons attempt to use this article who have no knowledge of it whatever, either in the mixing or putting it on, and the consequence is, the job is spoiled, and the article condemned without a proper trial.—So also with CHINA GLOSS; to make a good job it requires a practical knowledge of the use of the brush, as also the making of the Gloss. In regard to the ZINC WHITE, the subscriber would most respectfully recommend it as an article far superior to any other paint now in use, for whiteness and durability of color.

The Subscriber would respectfully solicit a portion of the patronage of those getting Painting done. Feeling grateful for the many favors already bestowed by his friends, he still hopes to share their patronage by unremitting attention to their calls. Those who have large contracts to give out, need have no hesitancy in calling, as he is prepared to give every satisfaction in regard to work, both in reference and security, for the faithful performance of all agreements.

HERRING'S PATENT CHAMPION SAFES!

What the People Say!

PHILADELPHIA, 2d May, 1856.

MESSRS. FARRELS & HERRING—
 GENTLEMEN—The Herring's Patent Champion Fire-Proof Safe, which we purchased of you in the month of January last, was situated in our Counting-Room, in the second story of 231 Market street, on the night of the Great Fire, 1st May, 1856, and fell with the burning building in that conflagration.

The Safe was reached this afternoon, after an exposure of THIRTY-SIX HOURS to intense heat, and although the brass plates on the front of the Safe were melted, and the exterior shows the evidence of extreme heat, the inside casing was found to be UNTOUCHED BY FIRE, and with the exception of being a little steamed is now as good as new.

EDW. SEMANS & CO.

MESSRS. FARRELS & HERRING—
 GENTLEMEN—The Herring's Patent Champion Fire-Proof Safe, of your manufacture, which we purchased nearly a year since, was in the centre of our building at the time of its destruction in the Great Fire of May 1, 1856.

We had removed the greater portion of our Books before the fire reached us, but left some of them, together with a number of loose papers, inside, purposely to test the security of the safe. After thirty-eight hours of severe roasting, we found the interior of the Safe, upon opening, not only bright and sound, but the Books and Papers as free from fire as when first put in.

We shall require another Safe as soon as we get a new location, and want none but your "Champion."

Yours, &c., FISHER & BROTHER,

No. 15 North Sixth street.

The public will bear in mind that the "HERRING'S PATENT" is the only Safe made in this City, which has never failed to preserve its contents in accidental fires.

The Fullest, the Latest, and the Best REPORTS OF THE COMMON LAW COURTS OF ENGLAND.

Containing the cases decided in the Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Nisi Prius Courts, from 1813 to 1855, and in the Court of Exchequer and Exchequer Chamber, from 1824 to 1855, are found in

The Regular and Authoritative Series of the English Common Law and English Exchequer Reports,

Which present the following claims to the support of the profession:

1. They are the only series issued as the authoritative and acknowledged medium by which the decisions of the Law Courts of England are made public.

2. They contain Later Reports than the Boston series, are more fully and more ably reported, and so arranged by preservation of the original paging, that reference by reporters, or by elementary writers, can be traced as readily as in the English editions.

Vol. 2, Ellis & Blackburne's (75 E. C. L. R.,) Reports (Q. B.) to January, 1854, was published by us in June, 1854. At that time the last Queen's Bench case printed in the Boston Law and Equity Reports, was of June 25, 1853. Our volume contained cases decided five months later. The Queen's Bench cases to November 25, 1853, were published in the Boston series in August, 1854, two months after we had distributed the same cases.

Vol. 3, Ellis & Blackburne's, (77 E. C. L. R.,) with cases to the end of Trinity Term, 1854, was published when the latest case of Queen's Bench decisions in the Boston series, was of February 8, 1854, more than four months behind the regular reporters.

Exchequer Reports, vol. 9, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) distributed by us January 11, 1855, contains cases to May 10, 1854. The last Exchequer case then in the Boston series was decided February 9, 1854, four months behind the regular Reporter, issued in Philadelphia.

3. They contain more cases decided by the courts represented, than any other series issued in this country.

Vol. 77 English Common Law, (3 E. & B.,) reports eighty-six cases decided in the Queen's Bench since January 11, 1854, while but fifty-eight Queen's Bench cases, decided since January 1, 1854, are found scattered among Vols. 22, 24 and 25 of the Boston Law and Equity.

Vol. 78 E. C. L. K. (5 J. Scott,) reports sixty-five cases decided since Nov. 13, 1853, in the Common Pleas, while the L. & E. has but fifty-seven cases in that Court since the same period.

Vol. 9 Exchequer Reports, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) reports one hundred and ten cases in the Courts of Exchequer, decided since June 24, 1853, while since the same date, the L. & E. report but 107 cases, scattered through vols. 20, 22, 24 and 25.

4. They are almost exclusively cited in argument of counsel, and referred to by Elementary Writers for Law Authorities. See Smith's Leading Cases, Smith's Contracts, Smith's Landlord and Tenant, by Mande; Byles on Bills and Promissory Notes, Broom's Legal Maxims, Broom's Commentaries on the Laws of England, or almost any recent Law Book issued in England.

5. The Philadelphia Reports are edited by Judge Sharswood and by Judge Hare, whose labors as editors and authors have made them so well and so favorably known to the profession.

6. The Boston Law and Equity is made up in this country from the Law Journal, Jurist, Times and other Law periodicals, of a weekly, monthly, or quarterly character, and being unknown in England, is never cited in Court, or referred to by Law writers. The periodicals from which it is extracted, are occasionally cited under their own particular names, but they do not possess that permanent value, even in England, which is all-important in a series of Reports.

A carefully prepared and accurate Annual Digest of all the cases decided by the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Exchequer, will be distributed, early in each year, to subscribers to either series, free of charge. That for 1854 is ready, and will be mailed to subscribers who have not received a copy.

A. W. RAND'S SELF-CLEANING FURNACE.

Boynton's Patent.

Having put up a large number of these Furnaces, both in public and private buildings, (including 24 put up at the Philadelphia County Prison, in place of the 44 torn out.) and tested them during the cold weather of 1855, and 1856, being the coldest weather we have had for twenty or thirty years. They have given the most universal satisfaction, and those having them in use were perfectly delighted with the abundance of warm, pleasant air, and abundant ventilation afforded thereby, while so many were suffering from cold, and troubled with the deficiencies of their heating apparatus.

We take great pleasure, therefore, in recommending them to the notice of the public, and would call their attention particularly to an examination of the greatly increased amount of effective radiating surface, their perfect solidity and durability, the improved manner of making the joints, entirely preventing any escape of gases, and the manner of distributing the fire, so as to cause it to impinge directly against the large amount of surface, without the objectionable and unnatural method of forcing the current downwards.

We have also a full assortment of HAYES' PATENT TUBULAR OVEN RANGES, now so universally used, and favorably known. Also, HAYES' PATENT VENTILATORS, &c., &c., all of which will be put up in the very best manner, and by the most skillful workmen, constantly engaged for that purpose, by

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND.

INTEREST FIVE PER CENT, PER ANNUM.

OFFICE, NEXT DOOR TO THE POST OFFICE; No. 83 Dock Street, PHILADELPHIA, 1854.

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND, No. 83 DOCK Street, next door to THIRD Street, and adjoining the POST OFFICE, receives MONEY on deposit daily, from 9 in the morning until 3 in the afternoon; also Monday evenings, from 7 to 9 o'clock. Interest is allowed on deposits at the rate of FIVE PER CENT per annum. Deposits will be returned in whole, or in part, on demand, without notice.

The popularity of this Office with all classes of the community, both in town and country, and its consequent success, may be ascribed, in part, to the following substantial reasons:

1st. It offers a convenient, responsible, and profitable Depository to Executors, Administrators, Assignees, Collectors, Agents, and all public officers—to Attorneys, Trustees, Societies and Associations, whether incorporated or otherwise—to married or single ladies—to Students, Merchants, Clerks, and business men generally—to Mechanics, Farmers, Minors of either sex, and all who have funds, much or little, to deposit, where they may be had at any time, with Five Per Cent interest added.

2d. Depositors receive Books, with an abstract of the By-laws and regulations, in which is entered their deposits, which Books serve as vouchers. They may designate in case of sickness, death, or absence, who shall receive their deposits, without the intervention of Executors or Administrators. Any one or more persons may deposit in his, her, or their name, or for any other person or persons.

3d. A Report is made each year to the Legislature and Councils of the City.

4th. The Officers are sworn before they enter upon their duties, in addition to giving Bonds with sureties.

5th. The State Savings Fund is a real Savings Fund—not an Insurance and Trust Company. The Charter of this Institution avoids the Insurance business.

6th. Deposits may be withdrawn by checks after the manner customary with Banks. Check Books will be furnished to depositors without charge.

BLACKSTONE'S COMMENTARIES.

COMMENTARIES
 ON THE
LAWS OF ENGLAND,

IN FOUR BOOKS.
 BY
SIR WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, Knt.
 ONE OF THE JUSTICES OF THE COURT OF
 COMMON PLEAS. WITH THE LAST COR-RECTIONS OF THE AUTHOR, AND
 NOTES.

From the Twenty-first London Edition.
 With copious
 NOTES,
 Explaining the Changes in the Law effected by Decision or Statute, down to 1844. Together with Notes adapting the Work to the American Student. By
JOHN L. WENDELL,

LATE REPORTER OF THE SUPREME COURT.
 Four Octavo Volumes, bound in fine
 Law Sheep, Price $7 00.

The Twenty-first Edition of "Black-stone's Commentaries" was prepared by intrusting each one of the four great departments of jurisprudence, treated of by
 Sir WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, to a separate Editor, whose professional studies had made him peculiarly conversant with that particular branch of learning, to wit:

- Vol. I. To J. F. HARGRAVE, of Lincoln's Inn,
Barrister at Law.
- Vol. II. To G. SWIFT, of the Inner Temple,
Barrister at Law.
- Vol. III. To R. COUCH, of the Middle Temple,
Barrister at Law.
- Vol. IV. To W. N. WELBY, Recorder of Chester.

Into the hands of these gentlemen were put all the Editions of Blackstone then extant in England, with directions to avail themselves of such notes of former editors
 as they should approve, (among those editions was that of MR. CHITTY.) Under those circumstances, and by this division of labor, was produced a work highly beneficial to the student, and greatly facilitating the researches of counsel.

The notes of the American Editor were to show the Common Law as it exists in this country under our institutions, particularly in the State of New York, and more especially as effected by the Revised Statutes of that State, and to point out
 the diversities of the Common Law as held in England and in this country in the few instances in which a difference exists.

This edition is the most accurate and useful
 which has appeared.—London Times.
 Incomparably the best edition that has ever been published.—Literary World.
 We do not hesitate to endorse the emphatic approval which the edition has received in England, and pronounce it the best that has ever appeared.—Law Reporter.
 There can be no question, that this edition of the Commentaries is destined to supersede all others.—Courier.

These notes are of the greatest value, and add ten-fold to the work, so far as the American student is concerned.—Albany Argue.

The following valuable opinions of the work have been received by the Publishers.

From Judge Catron of the U. S. Supreme Court.
 "Hardly a stronger guaranty could be afforded to the American Bar that the work has merit, than the fact that Mr. Wharton was author of the legal portion of the book."

JOHN CATRON.
 From Professor Parsons of the Cambridge Law School.

"I have not had time to examine it critically, but have read enough to convince me that it is an instructive and valuable work. Some of its topics, which are quite new in a book on this subject, are shown to be among the most important."
 THEOPHILUS PARSONS.

From Judge McLean of the U. S. Supreme Court.
 "I have not had time to look minutely through the volume, but from the known ability of the authors, and their experience, I am sure the book must be very interesting and useful, not only to the profession of the law, but also to general readers. A modern treatise of this kind, embodying the experience of jurists and medical men, with decisions of courts, was much wanted; and I am satisfied that abler pens than those employed, could not have been engaged in its production."

English Law and Equity Reports.

ENGLISH REPORTS IN LAW AND EQUITY. A Complete Collection of the Cases decided by the House of Lords, the Privy Council, the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas and Exchequer, the Lord Chancellor, the High Court of Appeal in Chancery, the Court of Criminal Appeal, and the Admiralty and Ecclesiastical Courts. Reprinted within a few weeks after the decisions are rendered.

This series has the merit of being complete, reliable, prompt, convenient, and cheap. It is now universally cited in the courts, and referred to in the recent law books as standard authority.
 All the cases reported in England, are here reprinted from the most reliable sources, as soon as they reach this country.

These Reports are now regularly digested in our Annual United States Digest, which thus embraces an annual digest of the whole English and American Law.

We have now in Preparation, and shall soon Publish,

A separate Digest of these Reports, embracing the first thirty-one volumes of the series, prepared with express reference to the convenience of the American profession, and exhibiting a complete synopsis of all the English Decisions reported in those volumes during the last five years; also a Table of Cases referring to all the contemporaneous English Reports. This will be the first Digest of English Decisions prepared expressly for the American Lawyer, and it is intended to give it the same advantages over the English Digests hitherto reprinted in this country, which the American text books have generally been found to possess over the English.

The Law and Equity Reports will be continued on the same plan as heretofore; the number of volumes being reduced to four per year; and Digests will be published from time to time as the convenience of the profession demands.

Vols. 1 to 31, now ready for delivery, at $2 00 per volume.

Supreme Court.

Opinion by Grier, J.

The following charge of Mr. Justice Grier, in the important will case recently tried at Trenton though containing no decisions on great legal points, contains so much that is of practical value, and "medicinal to the times," that we give it at length.

GENTLEMEN OF THE JURY:—The single issue presented for our consideration is whether this paper of 12th of January, 1852, purporting to be the will of Jonathan Meeker, is his will or not. It is an issue of fact, and one to be resolved by the jury on their own responsibility.

I need not, perhaps, remind you, gentlemen, that in order to perform the solemn duty which you have sworn to perform, in rendering a true verdict, in this case, it will be your duty to carefully apply the principles of law involved in it, and weigh the testimony which was had before, with cool, calm and unprejudiced minds. Let no purpose of public opinion—no rumor which may have come to your ears of the supposed decision of any other tribunal, have the slightest effect or influence on this case. There is no greater evil in the administration of justice than that men's liberty or property should become the sport of mere popular impulse or public prejudice.

There is another great principle that never should be forgotten by jurors and judges, and one which I know by experience, we are sometimes tempted to overlook—viz: That we are performing a duty entrusted to us by the law, not exercising an irresponsible power.—The rights of property depend upon the law, and not on the caprice or discretion of a court or jury. The law gives to every man the right of disposing his property by deed or by will. And if the instrument by which this disposition is executed be in due form of law, by a man of sound and disposing mind and memory without fraud or coercion practiced on him, neither court nor jury have a right to set it aside, on the supposition they could make a more just and equitable disposition of his property. The law has not committed to us the power of disposing of men's property as we please. That courts and juries are sometimes tempted to forget this principle my experience has amply shown me. I have seen it in the jury-box—I have seen it on the bench—I have felt it—I have had to struggle against the feeling. We easily believe what we wish to be true. We are prone to be satisfied with light proof, or any fallacy in favor of a preconceived opinion, prejudice or feeling. When we suffer ourselves to be thus tempted, we act as tyrants, not as judges.

The question for your decision then, is, Did Jonathan Meeker sign, seal and publish this instrument dated January 12, 1852, as his last will and testament?

An insane man may execute an instrument in testamentary form. But it will not contain his will, because a man not in the enjoyment of his reasoning faculties, or of sound and disposing mind and memory (as the legal phrase is) cannot have a will. The instrument cannot testify his mind, who has no mind.

But if the testator in the right use of his faculties has executed the instrument in due form of law it is not in the power of court or jury to both together to treat it as null and void, and make a different disposition of his property to suit our notions of justice or propriety. A rich old man may marry a young wife or a handsome and obliging housekeeper, or maid servant—he may disinherit his own children and leave them beggars. You and I may think his conduct outrageous, oppressive and unjust, in the highest sense: yet if it be his will, we have no power to set it aside. It is, true a will may be so outrageous, so contrary to the known desires and wishes of a testator, so absurd on its face, as to indicate or even demonstrate the want of sanity in a testator who could be guilty of signing such an instrument. But it must be a very extreme case to justify the rejection of a will on this account.

It would be a very dangerous practice if courts were to allow the parol declarations of a testator to be given in evidence to a jury in order to set aside a legally attested will. Why does the law require certain solemnities in order to a valid testamentary disposition of property? It is because of the fraud and perjuries which would be a necessary consequence of suffering a man's property to be the sport of loose conversations.

Old men who have the misfortune to be rich and childless are often so situated, that it becomes necessary to their peace and comfort, that they should conceal their intentions entirely from the wide circle of collateral relatives, beggars for the church, and others of like character. His parol declarations may be, and often are made, directly contrary to his real and secret intentions, and for the very purpose of concealing, not of testifying his mind or intention. Hence many judges have wholly refused to suffer such evidence to go before a jury for any purpose whatever, as tending to introduce the very evils which the statute of wills was made to guard against.

Our titles to land should not depend on hearsay, for next to mere opinions, the testimony of conversations is a species of evidence the least to be relied on.

1. It cannot be contradicted; the witness may give the widest stretch to his fancy or imagination and he cannot be convicted of perjury.

2. Very few persons can recollect or repeat verbatim what they have heard another say. A witness gives his own version, in his own words of general impressions, rightly or wrongly received.

3. The witness may recollect a part of a conversation, and yet that part may be an entire misrepresentation of the whole.

4. He may omit very small, but very material words, such as "if," "not," &c., &c., which entirely alter the whole complexion and meaning of the conversation—make absolute what was conditional, and positive or affirmative that which was negative.

I must say, after long experience, that I always deeply regret, to see rights of property, or men's life or liberty, to depend in any measure upon testimony of this nature.

You may then very naturally inquire if such be the law with regard to wills, and such are the dangers to the rights of property from admitting the declarations of testators to be given in evidence to affect their written will proved in due form of law, why has the court permitted such testimony to be laid before the jury? It is right, therefore, that the court should explain to you on what principle this was done, that you may give this evidence its proper weight and application, and not be led into error by an improper appreciation of it.

While it is undoubtedly true that parol declarations of a testator made before or after executing his will, ought not to be received as a ground for altering or annulling it, yet probable cases may arise when such declarations, in connection with other circumstances, may be taken into consideration, where there is strong evidence of conspiracy and of fraud practiced on the testator, or that the instrument is forged and false.

In order to elucidate this principle, let us suppose a case, a will is produced in court, regularly proved according to law, yet notwithstanding the legal proof, it may possibly never have been seen by the testator, never have been signed and sealed by him, and, consequently, does not contain his will as to the disposition of his property. Suppose it to have been made, (as has sometimes been the case in Ireland and other places,) by some person personating the testator, and simple, and perhaps honest people have thus been prevailed upon to attest it. In such a case the signatures may be so palpable a forgery as at once to detect the fraud to any judge of handwriting. Again suppose the will disinherits a child, a grandchild, or other relative, who has been the favored and beloved companion of the testator's life, whom he had uniformly pointed out, and always, and unvaryingly, through his whole life, declared his intention of making his heir, and in whose favor a prior will was duly executed. Suppose the devise in this supposed will was some worthless loafer, unknown to the testator, or if known, despised or abhorred by him. Suppose the witnesses to be of the same character, low and degraded, with whom the testator never associated. Would not such facts, if clearly proved, condemn such instrument in the mind of every rational man? Would not the moral impossibility that the testator could ever have made such a disposition of his property, be sufficient to outweigh the positive testimony of such witnesses? It is easy to forge the handwriting of almost any man, so that it may be almost impossible for the best judges to discriminate between the false and the true, and it is too true, that persons may be found willing, for a sufficient consideration, to swear to any statement of facts. Fraud can be generally proved only by circumstantial evidence. A number of distinct facts clearly proved so utterly inconsistent with the truth of the instrument, as most satisfactorily to establish the fraud. The fact that the testator had uniformly, through his whole life, declared that he intended a certain relative to be his heir, that he made his will in his favor, may be an important link in the chain of circumstances from which fraud, perjury, conspiracy and forgery may be clearly proved.

It was for this reason, that when the defendants opened their case, and proposed to prove fraud and forgery by a chain of similar circumstances, the court permitted this testimony of the declarations and conversations of the testator to be given in evidence.

Opinions by Judge Knox.

LOUIS B. MYERS vs. GIRARD FIRE & MARINE INSURANCE CO., OF PHILADELPHIA.
Error to the District Court of Philadelphia City and County.

Sea worthiness is a question of fact, to be determined by a jury. The presumption is in favor of the sea worthiness of the vessel, and the burden of the proof is upon the party alleging the absence of it. This presumption, however, may be rebutted, and the onus probandi shifted by satisfactory evidence, that the vessel is unable satisfactory to make the voyage, where such inability does not arise from the character of the weather, or from any human cause sufficient to account for the failure, other than the condition of the vessel at the time when the voyage was attempted.

Upon a motion for a non suit the court is not bound to give special answers to points propounded by counsel. Granting the non suit is a sufficient answer.

There is no principle of marine insurance better settled than the one which declares that in every insurance upon a vessel there is an implied warranty upon the part of the assured, that at the time of sailing the vessel shall be seaworthy for the voyage insured. This implied warranty is not confined to the sufficiency of the hull, but in a sailing vessel extends to the soundness of the sails and rigging. (Wedderburn and others v. Bell 1 Camp 1), and as was said by Lord Eldon in the House of Lords in the case of Wilkie vs. Geddes, (3 Dow. 57,) "the ship must be furnished with ground tackling sufficient to encounter the ordinary perils of the sea, and that when the anchors were defective the ship was not seaworthy." This principle in its application to steam vessels requires not only that the hull should be tight, staunch and strong, but that the machinery should be properly constructed, and of sufficient power to perform the voyage insured. There is another principle applicable to the case under consideration, and it is this: "If a ship, in a short time after leaving port, becomes leaky and founders, it is obliged to return without any storm, or visible, or adequate cause to produce such an effect the presumption is that she was not 'seaworthy' when she sailed, and the onus probandi in such a case is thrown upon the assured to show that the inability arose from causes subsequent to the commencement of the voyage, and attaching to the risk. Hilyard on Marine Insurance 106. "A ship is always presumed to have been defective when she sailed unless her disability be proved to have been occasioned by the perils of the voyage," (Marsh, vol. 1, chap 11, § 11.) "The fitness of the above principle," said Chief Justice Gibson in Fleming vs. The Marine Insurance Company, 3 Watts & Sergeant 153, "in its application to the circumstances of the case which gave rise to it has been doubted, but it seems not to have been doubted that when a ship which has not been disabled in her voyage by an accident or stress of weather is found unable to reach her place of destination, there is a presumption that she was unseaworthy when she sailed, which it is incumbent on the assured to disprove."

In the case before us the plaintiff's action was brought to enforce a contract of insurance of five thousand dollars, on the iron hull stern wheel steam boat Governor Morehead, for one trip from Philadelphia to Port Washington, North Carolina. The vessel was built in Philadelphia, and was intended to be used in running on Tar river in North Carolina. The insurance was made on the 18th of July, 1853, and on the 23d of the same month the vessel started for her point of destination to go altogether by steam, as she had no sails. The day was pleasant, but after proceeding, apparently very well, for some distance down the bay, it was found that the furnace would not draw, and that it was impossible to make sufficient steam to continue the trip. The boat was brought back to Philadelphia, and on the night of her return she sank, which was the cause of the principle injury complained of in this action. After being raised and repaired, a second unsuccessful attempt was made to take the boat to Washington. The third effort succeeded.

Unseaworthiness was the ground of defence. The learned Judge of the District Court before whom the case was tried, was of opinion that the plaintiff's evidence would not authorize a recovery, and upon application of the defendant non-suited the plaintiff. The plaintiff in error contends that the implied warranty of seaworthiness was waived by the Insurance Company, and that even if it were not, it was a question of fact for the jury to determine whether the boat was sea worthy or not.

We see no evidence from which an inference could be drawn that the insurance was to stand good without reference to the ability of the steam-boat to make the trip. It may be conceded that the Insurance Company knew that the boat was built for the river trade, and that it had been examined by the agent of the company before the insurance, but a waiver of the implied warranty of sea worthiness for the particular voyage insured, does not follow from either of these circumstances, or both combined. All the authorities establish that a waiver of sea worthiness, when not expressed in the contract of insurance, is only to be inferred upon clear evidence that the insurer knew that the vessel was unfit to perform the voyage insured, or that a full representation was made by the assured of the defects of the ship before the completion of the contract. The assured is not bound to make any representation as to the condition of the vessel at the inception of the risk, for this is covered by the implied warranty of sea worthiness, but if he wishes to avoid the implied warranty by a disclosure of defects, he must take care that the disclosure is full and complete. A mere statement that the vessel is intended for a particular trade, although that trade may be less hazardous than the voyage insured, will not cast the risk of sea worthiness upon the insurer, nor does it follow from an examination, that defects in the machinery of a steam boat were discovered and considered in the contract of insurance.

Sea worthiness is a question of fact, to be determined by a jury. The presumption is in favor of the sea worthiness of the vessel, and the burden of the proof is upon the party alleging the absence of it. This presumption, however, may be rebutted, and the onus probandi shifted by satisfactory evidence, that the vessel is unable satisfactory to make the voyage, where such inability does not arise from the character of the weather, or from any human cause sufficient to account for the failure, other than the condition of the vessel at the time when the voyage was attempted.

Now, to repeat the language of the learned Judge of the District Court, "the undisputed evidence in the cause was that without encountering the slightest storm in a single day's run, in perfectly fair weather, and on the comparatively smooth current of the Delaware river, the boat which had no sails, and was to be propelled solely by steam, was from the imperfection of her works, unable to make steam answer, from this cause compelled to return to the port from which she had set out." This evidence was a part of the plaintiff's case, and from it the presumption arose that the vessel was unseaworthy when the voyage commenced, and as there was no evidence given to remove this presumption, it was clearly the duty of the court to nonsuit the plaintiff. A demurrer to the plaintiff's evidence would have been fatal to his recovery. And whenever the defendant can safely demur to the plaintiff's evidence, it is the duty of a court having the authority, upon application, to order a non suit.

The exception to the rule of the court in not permitting the plaintiff's counsel to ask John P. Levy what the object of a certain person was in visiting the boat before she sailed, was not insisted upon in the argument, and would not have availed the plaintiff if it had been. Upon a motion for a non suit the court is not bound to give specific answers to points propounded by counsel. Granting the non suit is a sufficient answer.

Judgment affirmed.

SAMUEL WILHELM v. PETER CARRELL.
Error to the Common Pleas of Northampton Co.

The case of the plaintiff below was presented in a two fold view. He claimed first that by a special contract he was entitled to demand for certain services rendered the one tenth part of the amount received by the defendant from the estate of Peter Miller, deceased. Second, That if the jury did not find the special agreement set forth in the declaration, he was at all events entitled to recover a reasonable compensation for the services rendered. The defendant denied the contract, and also denied that any services were rendered.

Upon the first branch of the plaintiff's case it was necessary for him to show how much the defendant had received from Peter Miller's estate. For the purpose of fixing the amount, the plaintiff offered and the court received first, The account of Samuel Wilhelm, acting executor of Peter Miller, filed in the Register's office. Second, The account of Samuel Wilhelm, Trustee, under the will of Peter Miller, filed in the office of the Prothonotary of the Common Pleas. Third, The agreement between Peter Miller of Ohio, and Samuel Wilhelm for the institution of legal proceedings to test the validity of the will of Peter Miller, deceased, and for the equal division of the estate between them if successful. Fourth, The valuation and distribution of the real estate of Peter Miller, deceased, between Peter Miller, Samuel Wilhelm, J. M. Porter, and M. H. Jones. The 1st, 2d, 3d, and 4th, assignments of error are to the admission of this evidence. The objection made to its admission was that it was irrelevant. It is here argued that the account, agreement, and the paper showing the valuation and distribution should have been excluded because they did not tend to elucidate the matters in issue and because the accounts were before auditors and not finally disposed of. It is a sufficient answer to these allegations to say that the amount of the estate which the defendant had received was a necessary part of the plaintiff's case and clearly involved in the issue raised by the pleadings and that the papers admitted in evidence tended to fix this sum. Before a final decree this evidence was perhaps not conclusive, but it was at least the written declaration of the defendant that so much of the estate belonged to him and in the absence of any contradictory proof the amount thus claimed might well be taken by the jury as the amount to which he was legally entitled under the agreement with Peter Miller of Ohio. We are of opinion that there was no error in the reception of the evidence above stated.

5th Error, Reuben Williams, a witness for the defence upon the trial, had also been called as a witness before arbitrators. To contradict his evidence given upon the trial in court the counsel for the plaintiff read from the notes of evidence taken before the arbitrators a part of the cross-examination. The counsel for the defendant then proposed to read other portions of the testimony given by the same witness at the arbitration upon his re-examination. This was rejected by the court. As the plaintiff in error has not given us the evidence received was that which was rejected we are bound to presume that there was no connection between the one and the other, and upon this presumption the rejection was right. Where one party gives in evidence what a witness has previously testified to for the purpose of contradicting the other party and give all the witness said on the same subject matter, but not every part of the testimony upon totally different subjects for this would in no manner disprove the contradictory statements.

6th and 7th Errors, The declarations and statements of Peter Carrell that he had no interest in the controversy which arose under the will of Peter Miller, and that he had no agreement with Wilhelm in relation to compensation for his services were proper evidence to go to the jury to disprove the allegation contained in the twelfth count of the plaintiff's declaration, and as such they were submitted to the jury, but the court refused to say that these declarations and statements if found by the jury would bar him from alleging the existence of the alleged agreement. In this the court below was clearly right. It is unnecessary for us to decide what the effect would have been if Carrell had sworn that he had no interest in the controversy so as to insure his admissibility as a witness, for it does not appear that he was examined as a witness or that if he was sworn he was admitted upon testifying that he had no interest in the result. The declaration made to M. H. Jones, appears to have been after Carrell's deposition was taken, and whether the deposition was ever read or the witness examined in court upon the trial of the ejectment spoken of, does not appear, nor does it appear that Wilhelm was in any manner misled by Carrell's declaration as to his interest. This branch of the case is entirely free from error.

The eighth assignment of error presents the question whether there was any evidence to submit to the jury upon the special contract alleged in the declaration.

It is stated in the charge of the learned judge before whom the case was tried, that the only evidence to prove the contract to pay one tenth of what was received was to be found in the testimony of Joseph Woodrin, who was called by the defendant to prove declarations made to him by the plaintiffs, and amongst other things he testified that Carrell had once said that he had a bargain with Wilhelm for the one tenth part of all he might get from the Millers." This testimony was given in his examination in chief and we know of no rule of law that required the court to withdraw it from the jury. True it was the plaintiff's own statement and for that reason might not have been credited by the jury, but as it was given in evidence by the defendant it was competent testimony and the court had no power to say it was not entitled to weight. Its effect was solely for the jury. The manner in which it was submitted by the court to the jury was unobjectionable as no kind of instruction was given as to how much or how little weight should be given to it.

The 9th error is assigned as follows, viz:—

"That the jury having negatived the allegations in the twelfth count of plaintiff's narrative there can be no recovery whatever."

This error does not appear to be assigned upon either the admission or rejection of evidence or upon anything that was said or omitted to be said in the charge. If there was nothing upon which judgment could be entered a motion in arrest of judgment ought to have been made, or if it appeared upon the record that the plaintiff had no cause of action a writ of error would lie. It is sufficient, however, to say that it does not follow from the form of the verdict that the jury did not find the contract to pay to Carrell by Wilhelm the one tenth part of what Wilhelm should receive from the estate of Peter Miller. The value of the estate was a question of fact for the jury and what the one tenth part was worth under the evidence. A gross error in this respect would doubtless have offered good ground for a new trial but we cannot review it upon a writ of error.

10th and 11th Errors. We agree with the Common Pleas that the amount of property which the defendant had received was in evidence before the jury, and that if the jury found the contract to pay to the plaintiff a certain part of that amount, the measure of damages was the part agreed to be paid. This is the fair construction of the concluding part of the charge, and the construction was right. Upon the whole case we see no error in this record.

Judgment affirmed.

Opinion by Judge Lewis.

IN THE MATTER OF THE APPLICATION FOR A CHARTER FOR SAINT PAUL'S CHURCH, CHESTNUT HILL.

A charter will not be granted with a clause which prohibits the Corporation from disposing of its Real Estate without the consent of the Protestant Episcopal Church of Pennsylvania, and the Standing Committee of the same.

The act of April 20, 1855, requires that the provisions securing to the lay members of churches the right of alienation, shall be inserted in each charter. The instrument is declared to be invalid without it. It would be well, in preparing charters under this enactment, to follow the words of the law as nearly as possible.

There is a clause in the proposed charter which prohibits the corporation from disposing of its real estate "without the consent of the Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church of Pennsylvania, or the Standing Committee of the same." By the constitution of the church the convention is composed of the clergy and of lay deputies. They deliberate in one body; but, when five members require it, they vote as two distinct orders; and the concurrence of each order is necessary to give validity to any measure. The standing committee is elected by the convention, and is composed of five persons of each order. Any three members (the whole having been summoned) constitute a quorum. It is very clear that the lay members could not control either body so as to give its consent to alienation of property, if the clerical order opposed it. In the convention a clerical majority of only one vote has the power to prevent the alienation, although it may be desired by the unanimous voice of all the lay members of the corporation, and all the lay deputies in the convention. The lay authorities of the corporation, which have the general control of its temporal affairs, are deprived by the clause in the charter to which we have referred, of all power to dispose of the real estate belonging to the proposed corporation. Is this a fair compliance with the law enacted by the legislature of this Commonwealth on the 26th April, 1855? We think not. That act expressly declares that whensoever any property, real or personal, shall hereafter be bequeathed, devised, or conveyed, to any ecclesiastical corporation, bishop, ecclesiastic, or other person, for the use of any church, congregation, or religious society, for religious worship or sepulture, or the maintenance of either, the same shall not be otherwise taken and held or enured subject to the control and disposition of the lay members of such church, congregation or religious society, or such constituted officers or representatives thereof as shall be composed of a majority of lay members, citizens of Pennsylvania, having a controlling power, according to the rules and regulations usages, or corporate requirements thereof, so far as consistent herewith. And no charter hereafter granted by any court for any church, congregation, or religious society, shall be valid without requiring such property to be taken, held, and to enure, subject as aforesaid. There is an exception in the statute which is not material to the present application.

The terms of the act of Assembly are imperative. It has been duly enacted by the law-making power in pursuance of constitutional authority. It is not for us to weigh the policy of the extensive change which this enactment must make in the temporal affairs of the episcopal church, and other religious corporations within its operation. It was for the legislative power to decide upon the propriety of keeping the landed property within the State under the control of the lay members of corporations created by law. It is our duty to enforce the law as we find it, written. We have no discretion on this point.

The statute requires that the provision securing to the lay members the right of alienation, shall be inserted in each charter. The instrument is declared to be invalid without it. It would be well, in preparing charters under this enactment, to follow the words of the law as nearly as possible. It is dangerous to substitute others supposed to be of equivalent import. It is improper and inconvenient to require the court, on an ex parte application for a charter, to give a construction to every new form of words which appellants may think proper to introduce as a substitute for what may be presumed to be the well weighed words of the legislature. In the instrument now before us the word "enure" has been omitted, although the act of Assembly requires its insertion. It was not inserted in the statute without an object, and it cannot be dispensed with in the charter.

For these reasons we are obliged to decline granting the certificate of incorporation.

Opinion by Judge Lowrie.

JOHN TYLER, Jr., v. WILLIAM F. SMALL.

The legislature of Pennsylvania has invested the courts with that portion of the governmental power by which titles to office generally, not excepting military ones, are tried and enforced.

On attachment and motion to commit for contempt in enforcement of an injunction.

There can be nothing plainer and more definite than our duty in reference to this case. Our judgment is resisted and the law requires us to enforce it, and declares how it shall be done. We have gone out of the usual course and allowed the defendant to endeavor to show us that our judgment is wrong and he has failed to do it. And this is the third time we have heard him in the case. What we have now to say is not so much to answer the last argument, which advanced nothing new, as to show the necessity that demands submission to the decision of this court.

The defendant has claimed and still claims to be a high and honorable officer of the militia of this State, and therefore one of the conservators of its peace and dignity as a State; for, by the Constitution, (Art. 6, S. 2,) the military are "armed, organized and disciplined for its defence," and for no other purpose. If he has claimed that position in the sincerity of an orderly citizen, he has claimed it as an office instituted by the civil power of the State, and has undertaken, on the honor of a military officer, and as a military officer to be "in all cases and at all times in strict subordination to the civil power," for such are the very terms in which the Constitution (Art. 9, S. 22) defines the duty of that branch of its organized force. The degree of this subordination is sufficiently illustrated by the law which requires even a major-general and all his subordinates to obey the orders of a mere police officer (in Philadelphia,) when that officer decides that the military force is necessary for the maintenance of the public order. On his requisition the highest grade of military officer is bound to obey without question and without responsibility; and this obligation is directly analogous to that which is imposed on every citizen when the sheriff requires the aid of the posse comitatus.

The defendant's right to the office which he claims was decided against him when the highest court for the trial of military elections, provided by the law for such a case, set aside his election on which the claim is based. He appealed to the Governor, who refused to entertain the appeal. And in this he was unquestionably right; for the law has given him no power of review in such a case. As Governor he had, of course, nothing to do with the case as a disputed election. In that capacity his duty was merely the ministerial one of issuing the commission required by the law, if the election was uncontested, or, being contested, was confirmed by the court which the law has instituted for deciding upon it. A military commission issued by him, founded upon an election that has been set aside by the court appointed by the law to try it, is mere waste paper in the hands of its holder, just as much so as would be the commission of a judge or justice of the peace issued by him under similar circumstances.

As commander-in-chief, the Governor is himself part of the militia, and of course, with it, strictly subordinate to the civil power. It is involved in that subordination that the whole organization of the military power must be regulated by the civil government, and founded upon its expressed will. No commander-in-chief or other military officer can, therefore, have any implied authority, except such as is necessarily implied from the duties imposed upon him, because necessary to the performance of those duties. He can have no appointing power, except in those very special cases in which it may be expressly given to him. We should, indeed, have made a very absurd oversight in constitutional legislation, if, while guarding against military encroachments, we had given up all civil supervision of military organization, and had left the final power of appointment to military office in the hands of the commander-in-chief. He would have this power, if he could review and correct the decisions in all cases of contested elections. We say, therefore, that neither as Governor nor commander-in-chief could he set aside the decision of the court that declared the election void, and invested him with the office. The law makes that decision the final proof against the right to the commission.

But on the coming in of a new commander-in-chief, the defendant presented an appeal to him, and he, erroneously and without authority, set aside the previous decisions, gave the defendant a commission and he entered upon the office. Thus far the defendant was guilty of no legal offence, for he only sought the correction of a supposed error, and in a supposed regular form.

Then the Commonwealth's prerogative writ of quo warranto, the highest remedy which the State could provide for the orderly and peaceable settlement of disputed titles to office, was issued against him. His claim was heard before the highest civil tribunal for the trial of disputed rights, and for the preservation of order that the Constitution has provided. It was deliberately heard—twice heard, and carefully considered—as carefully as can be expected from mere human functionaries. At the first hearing no expression of opinion on his title fell from the court, for it was not necessary; doubt was a sufficient ground for the action then demanded. All expression of opinion was then studiously avoided, because the dispute was of a kind that very rarely occurs, and it was thought prudent by the court to reserve their conviction until the fullest reflection and the final argument should justify and demand their expression.

Before the highest civil tribunal, and in that highest civil process for such a case, it was decided that the defendant's commission was void, and he was commanded to abstain from all further intermeddling with the office. If that decision is not to be obeyed, then the State is helpless against military usurpation. Her highest tribunal for the management of such affairs has spoken and is disregarded. The means of order which she has provided are exhausted, fruitlessly exhausted. The force that is organized for her defence, has turned its arm against her; it has cast away the subordination, which the people have required, and has declared its own judgment to be the highest rule of right. The military officers, who are recognized by the civil power, are excluded from their position by those who reject the judgment of the civil power, and who are disowned by it.

We cannot doubt the correctness of our decision against the defendant's claim to the office of Brigadier General, even after now hearing him present a third argument on the subject. But assume that we were mistaken in our interpretation of the law, even then he is bound to submit, for he is not empowered to review our decisions, and there can be no review of the judgment of the highest court which the people have thought proper to establish. Even the commander-in-chief, as part of the militia, is bound by the command of the Constitution, until martial law is properly proclaimed; and until then he would be disorderly in recognizing any military officer, whose commission has been in due form of law declared invalid.

Assume that we were in fact mistaken in our judgment; still, having performed our duty according to the best of our learning and ability, we have done all that the State requires of us in the case; and she can require no more so long as government is administered by human agency. Our decision must be the very law of this case; for the people have required us to ascertain and declare it, and we have done so exactly as required, that is, according to the highest judicial skill that we possess. He that resists our judgment denies the competency of the people to institute a government that can fulfil all its duties. Perfection of judgment is not the test of legitimacy of power, or of the duty of submission to its decisions, for humanity can neither bear the test nor apply it. The decisions which we pronounce, the law requires us to enforce, whether parties and their friends approve of them or not. This must be true, if government is to be worth any thing.

The legislature has invested the courts with that portion of the governmental power by which titles to office generally, not excepting military ones, are tried and enforced. This court has pronounced its decision, and the defendant says that we are in error in interfering with military officers—notwithstanding their declared subordination to this court as a branch of the civil power. If it is supposed that we have thus marred the symmetry of the military system, it ought also to be known that there is no power to correct this but the Legislature, by the passage of a new law. Our judgment was published many weeks before the late adjournment of the Legislature, and they saw nothing in it that needed correction, and the defendant applied for none.

The final judgment in this case, thus pronounced and sanctioned, the defendant has ventured to resist, and others, as mistaken as himself, have joined him in this resistance. If no serious disturbance of the public peace has arisen from his disregard of law, it is only because others have been more considerate than he. He has persisted in acting upon a commission that has been annulled in his hands by the very process which the people have provided for that purpose. He has converted the means of discipline, intended for the defence of order, into a means of disturbing that order, and thus has turned the instrument against the power that ought to wield it; for it is the civil government alone that stands for the State, and the military is only an instrument that it uses as its judgment requires. Better far that a whole brigade should be disbanded than that the City of Philadelphia should be the scene of one hour of riot; and so far as they are unwilling to submit to the civil authorities they ought to be disbanded, for they are useless for the purpose for which they were instituted; or rather they are dangerous enemies of that purpose.

We need not magnify the heinousness of this offence and we cannot magnify the danger that is involved in the principle on which the defendant is acting. It is just such disorders of individuals that continually and necessarily lead to the multiplication and severity of laws, and to that strictness of government by which the liberty of orderly citizens is unduly restricted, in the attempt to control the disorderly and lawless. It is just such individual and associated disorders that have, in all ages, led to that degree of anarchy that has compelled quiet and industrious citizens to seek the protection of a monarchy, or even of a military despotism, as a means of saving them from those distressing uncertainties and that depressing insecurity that tends directly to barbarism, by blighting those hopes of the future that are the foundation of the honesty, energy and activity of the present. It is just such disorders that are continually increasing the expense and the sternness of the government of all our large towns, and that are likely still further to increase them; for, since the world began, the disorderly were never allowed a permanence of power, and they never will be.

We need not say how much the peace of Philadelphia would have been endangered, if others had been as reckless in asserting valid rights as the defendant has been in asserting an unfounded one. We prefer not to think of it.

He has dangerously and grievously offended against the peace and dignity of the State, and yet we may hope that he has acted more from misjudgment than from wickedness. We trust that he will retrace his steps. He will do so when he begins to suspect, as he ought to do, that he is a very unfit judge in his own case. He will do so when he allows his excited feelings to cool down so far as to give his reason a fair chance to perform its functions. He will do so when he separates himself from those who have become excited in the same cause with himself, and calmly submits to his own conscience the question of his duty to the State, in view of all the danger that is involved in his action. Only excitement, not reflection, is found in an interested and partizan crowd.

The State, through the Legislature, declared its estimate of the danger which may grow out of a usurpation of a public office, when it empowered the courts, in such a case as this, to enforce obedience by attachment and by sequestration. By the latter writ all the defendant's property and effects may be taken into the custody of the State until he repents and submits. By the former he may incur such punishment as is ordinarily visited upon those who disregard the order of the State and contemn its authority as expressed by its constituted tribunals, and such restraint of liberty as is necessary to enforce obedience.

The imprisonment of the party who is in contempt is one of the ordinary steps in all proceedings of this kind, and is usually ordered as a matter of course, until he submits; and as one of the means of enforcing the decree in favor of the plaintiff. Besides this there is the remedy to the State for the disorderly conduct of the defendant in contemning her authority and resisting the process of her courts, and on the reading of the plaintiff's affidavits, and the granting of the petition for the attachment, we were apprehensive that we might have to inflict a punishment for this, but the present hearing has led us to believe that this is unnecessary.

We must see that these remedies are put in operation, so far as is necessary for the case. However indulgently we might be disposed to treat more private offenders, we cannot suffer it to be supposed that any indulgence can be shown to insubordination that claims to be official, or that the authority of the State can be contemned with impunity, under the color of an office. But we do not think proper to impose any penalty, in the character of punishment, as the case at present appears.

We have perhaps said more than we are called upon to say under the present aspect of this case; but we have done it with the hope that these suggestions may lead to that reflection which a regard for public order demands. Our duty is now simply the ordinary one of entering the ordinary order by which such decisions are to be enforced.

ORDER.

And now, to wit, June 5th, 1856: The said defendant, Wm. F. Small, having been brought before the court, sitting at Harrisburg, on an attachment for contempt in disobeying the injunction issued in this case, and having been heard in relation thereto, and having admitted that he was served with a notice of the said injunction and that he had afterwards disobeyed it, and having persisted in refusing to obey the same, this court doth declare and adjudge that the said Wm. F. Small has been and is guilty of a contempt of this court, in wilfully refusing to comply with said injunction, and that such misconduct has impaired, impeded and prejudiced the right and remedies of the plaintiff in this case; and it is therefore ordered that the said Wm. F. Small pay the costs and expenses of the proceedings in relation to the said contempt, and that for remedy of the plaintiff in this behalf he be committed to the debtor's apartment of the prison of the City and County of Philadelphia until the said costs and expenses be paid; and further, that he stand committed until the further order of this court, or until, on petition and habere corpus from this court he shall, upon oath before one of the judges thereof, declare and say to the satisfaction of such judge, that he will always hereafter abstain from the office of Brigadier General of the Second Brigade of the first division of the militia, under or by virtue of the election and commission, or either of them, in which he has heretofore, in this cause, founded his claim to the said office, and that a warrant issue accordingly to the Sheriff of the City and County of Philadelphia.

These Reports are condensed by T. J. Fox Alden, Esq., into three vols., and are sold at the low price of $15. The catalogue price of the old edition, to which they are greatly superior in type and papers is $69. They contain all that is of any value in the original, and as will be seen are sold at less than one fourth the price. The volumes already published are complete in themselves, having a copious index and table of cases.

To those who cannot afford to purchase the original series of Reports (many volumes of which are out of print) this work will be invaluable, whilst even those who do possess them, will buy it for convenience of reference.

From Hon. J. B. Gibson, Chief Justice.—I have examined the first volume of Mr. Alden's Condensed Reports, and think the work will be a valuable one, especially to the younger members of the bar, who cannot, at first afford to purchase the series of our reports, already between seventy and eighty volumes. The cases are clearly stated, and the points decided, are accurately extracted.

JOHN B. GIBSON.

Testimonials speaking in the highest terms of the work, have also been received from Hon. Edward King, Hon. William B. McClure, Hon. William D. Kelly, Hon. Cornelius Darragh, Hon. John Galbreath, James Dunlop, Esq., Thomas Williams, Esq., and more than fifty other distinguished members of the Pennsylvania Bar.

A MERITORIOUS CARD.

Hail! honored age of grand progression,
While each one clings to his profession,
And science moves with onward motion,
To suit each wayward thought and notion,
Bringing to light some new invention,
More strange than modern wit can mention,
Or Genius paint with true endeavor,
Though making graphic strides forever,
While Reason urges proud Ambition,
To strive for wondrous Competition;
Yet, in this age of glorious Art,
We can the meed of praise impart,
When meritorious efforts claim
A modest puff to gild the name:
And thus we call, with honest pride,
Attention to the Painter's side,—
A man who bravely knows his calling,
Whose works are worthy of extolling,
A model Artist of the day,
And most obliging in his way,
GEORGE H. BANCROFT,—mark the name,
IN CHESTNUT STREET you'll find the same,
Call at Five Hundred and Thirty-One,
You'll get the best of painting done,
In Modern or in Classic Order,
From templed shrine to parlor border,
In magic tints of every hue,
To Signs embossed in gold and blue,
Or Figure Head, or Church, or Steeple,
He is resolved to please the people,
And whether foe, or friend or neighbor,
Will charge but moderate for his labor.
We thus invite each one and all,
To give this worthy man a call.
Who will, we venture to engage,
Feel grateful for your patronage.*

* We would particularly invite public attention to our friend Mr. BANCROFT, who is a young, enterprising beginner, and who has gone to vast expense in fitting up his establishment, and is now ready to receive orders for Painting, in all its various branches, at 531 and 533 Chestnut street, 5 doors east of Seventeenth st.

Law School of the University at Cambridge, Mass.

The instructors in this school are Hon. JOEL PARKER, LL. D., Royal Professor. Hon. THEOPHILUS PARSONS, LL. D., Dana Professor. Hon. EMERY WASHBURN, LL. D., University Professor.

The course of instruction embraces the various branches of the Common Law, and of Equity, Admiralty, Commercial, International and Constitutional Law, and the Jurisprudence of the United States. The Law Library consists of about 14,000 volumes, and as new works appear they are added and every effort is made to render it complete.

Instruction is given by oral lectures and expositions, (and by recitations and examinations, in connection with them,) of which there are ten every week. Two Moot Courts are also holden in each week, at each of which a cause, previously given out, is argued by four students, and an opinion delivered by the presiding instructor. Rooms and other facilities are also provided for the Club Courts; and an Assembly is held weekly for practice in debate, and acquiring a knowledge of Parliamentary law and proceedings.

Students may enter the school in any stage of their professional studies or mercantile pursuits, and at the commencement of either term, or in the middle, or other part of a term. They are at liberty to select what studies they will pursue, according to their view of their own wants and attainments.

The Academical year, which commences on Thursday, six weeks after the third Wednesday in July, is divided into two terms, of twenty weeks each, with a vacation of six weeks at the end of each term.

During the winter vacation, the Library is opened, warmed and lighted, for the use of the members of the school.

Applications for admission, or for Catalogues, or any further information, may be made to either of the Professors at Cambridge.

NOTICE.

THE Subscriber takes this method of informing his numerous friends, and the public in general, that he is now prepared to execute in a superior manner, every variety of HOUSE and SIGN PAINTING, Gilding, Bronzing, Gilding on Glass and Stained Glass, Calomining Ceilings, Walls, &c., &c. China and Glass Painting executed in a superior manner, and warranted not to CRACK. Ceilings cleaned and whitened, and made equal to new, at a cost little over that of whitewash. The subscriber would state here that it frequently occurs that persons attempt to use this article who have no knowledge of it whatever, either in the mixing or putting it on, and the consequence is, the job is spoiled, and the article condemned without a proper trial.—So also with CHINA GLOSS; to make a good job it requires a practical knowledge of the use of the brush, as also the making of the Gloss. In regard to the ZINC WHITE, the subscriber would most respectfully recommend it as an article far superior to any other paint now in use, for whiteness and durability of color.

The Subscriber would respectfully solicit a portion of the patronage of those getting Painting done. Feeling grateful for the many favors already bestowed by his friends, he still hopes to share their patronage by unremitting attention to their calls. Those who have large contracts to give out, need have no hesitancy in calling, as he is prepared to give every satisfaction in regard to work, both in reference and security, for the faithful performance of all agreements.

The Subscriber can be found at the S. E. CORNER OF FOURTH AND WALNUT STS. where he will be happy to receive any orders.

NOTES,

Explaining the Changes in the Law effected by Decision or Statute, down to 1844. Together with Notes adapting the Work to the American Student. By

JOHN L. WENDELL,

LATE REPORTER OF THE SUPREME COURT.

Four Octavo Volumes, bound in fine
Law Sheep, Price $7 00.The Twenty-first Edition of "Black-stone's Commentaries" was prepared by intrusting each one of the four great departments of jurisprudence, treated of by
Sir WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, to a separate
Editor, whose professional studies had made him peculiarly conversant with that particular branch of learning, to wit:Vol. I. To J. F. HARGRAVE, of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister at Law.Vol. II. To G. SWIFT, of the Inner Temple, Barrister at Law.Vol. III. To R. COUCH, of the Middle Temple, Barrister at Law.Vol. IV. To W. N. WELSLY, Recorder of Chester.Into the hands of these gentlemen were put all the Editions of Blackstone then extant in England, with directions to avail themselves of such notes of former editors
as they should approve, (among those editions was that of Mr. CHITTY.) Under those circumstances, and by this division of labor, was produced a work highly beneficial to the student, and greatly facilitating the researches of counsel.The notes of the American Editor were to show the Common Law as it exists in
this country under our institutions, particularly in the State of New York, and
more especially as effected by the Revised Statutes of that State, and to point out
the diversities of the Common Law as held
in England and in this country in the few instances in which a difference exists.This edition is the most accurate and useful which has appeared.—London Times.Incomparably the best edition that has ever been published.—Literary World.We do not hesitate to endorse the emphatic approval which the edition has received in England, and pronounce it the best that has ever appeared.—Law Reporter.There can be no question, that this edition of the Commentaries is destined to supersede all others.—Courier.These notes are of the greatest value, and add ten-fold to the work, so far as the American student is concerned.—Albany Argus.

The Bank of Cash Credits.

Application will be made to the Legislature
of Pennsylvania, for the Charter of a Bank Issue
with general banking privileges, with a capital of ONE MILLION OF DOLLARS. Said Bank to be located in the City of Philadelphia, to be called the "Robert Morris Bank," and to be conducted upon the system of cash credits only, as is herewith indicated.A cash credit is a credit given to an individual by a Banking Company, for a limited sum, seldom under $500, or $1000, upon his own security and that of two or three individuals, approved by the Bank, who become sureties for its payment. The individual who has obtained such a credit, is enabled to draw the whole sum, or any part of it, when he pleases; replacing it, or portions of it, according as he finds it convenient;
interest being charged upon such part only as he draws out."If a man borrows $1000, from a private hand, and even then it is not always to be found when required, he pays interest for it, whether he be using it or not. His bank credit costs him nothing, except during the moment it is of service to him, and this circumstance is of equal advantage as if he had borrowed money at a much lower rate of interest."Cash credits are not, however, intended to be a dead load; the main objects of the Banks in granting them is to get their notes circulated,
and they do not grant them except to persons in business, or to those who are frequently drawing out and paying in money.Any person who applies to a bank for a cash credit, is called upon to produce sureties, and,
after a full inquiry into the character of the applicant, the nature of his business, and the sufficiency of his securities, he is allowed to open a credit, and to draw upon the Bank for the whole of its amount, or for such part as his daily transaction may require. To the credit of the account, he pays in such sums as he may not have occasion to use, and interest is charged or credited upon the balance, as the case may be. From the facility which these cash credits give to all the small transactions of the country, and from the opportunities which they afford to persons who begin business with little or no capital but their character, to employ profitably the minutest products of their industry, it cannot be doubted that the most important advantages are derived in the whole community.Such privileges and immunities as the "Metropolitan Bank of New York" exercises, will be applied for.

OFFICE, NEXT DOOR TO THE POST OFFICE;
No. 83 Dock Street,
PHILADELPHIA, 1854.THE STATE SAVINGS FUND, No. 83 DOCK Street,
next door to THIRD Street, and adjoining the POST OFFICE, receives MONEY on deposit daily, from 9
in the morning until 3 in the afternoon; also Monday evenings, from 7 to 9 o'clock. Interest is allowed on deposits at the rate of FIVE PER CENT per annum. Deposits will be returned in whole, or in part, on demand, without notice.The popularity of this Office with all classes of the community, both in town and country, and its consequent success, may be ascribed, in part, to the following substantial reasons:1st. It offers a convenient, responsible, and profitable Depository to Executors, Administrators, Assignees, Collectors, Agents, and all public officers—to Attorneys, Trustees, Societies and Associations, whether incorporated or otherwise—to married or single ladies—to Students, Merchants, Clerks, and business men generally—to Mechanics, Farmers, Minors of either sex, and all who have funds, much or little, to deposit, where they may be had at any time, with Five Per Cent interest added.2d. Depositors receive Books, with an abstract of the By-laws and regulations, in which is entered their deposits, which Books serve as vouchers. They may designate in case of sickness, death, or absence, who shall receive their deposits, without the intervention of Executors or Administrators. Any one or more persons may deposit in his, her, or their name, or for any other person or persons.3d. A Report is made each year to the Legislature, and Councils of the City.4th. The Officers are sworn before they enter upon their duties, in addition to giving Bonds with sureties.5th. The State Savings Fund is a real Savings Fund—not an Insurance and Trust Company. The Charter of this Institution avoids the Insurance business.6th. Deposits may be withdrawn by checks after the manner customary with Banks. Check Books will be furnished to depositors without charge.GEORGE H. HART, President.

The volumes already published are complete in themselves, having a copious index and table of cases.

To those who cannot afford to purchase the original series of Reports (many volumes of which are out of print) this work will be invaluable, whilst even those who do possess them, will buy it for convenience of reference.

From Hon. J. B. Gibson, Chief Justice.—I have examined the first volume of Mr. Alden's Condensed Reports, and think the work will be a valuable one, especially to the younger members of the bar, who cannot, at first afford to purchase the series of our reports, already between seventy and eighty volumes. The cases are clearly stated, and the points decided, are accurately extracted.

JOHN B. GIBSON.

Testimonials speaking in the highest terms of the work, have also been received from Hon. Edward King, Hon. William B. McClure, Hon. William D. Kelly, Hon. Cornelius Darragh, Hon. The apparatus is for preserving the body until time for burial—it is then placed in the coffin. The Subscriber, who is the sole patentee, is also a FURNISHING UNDERTAKER. A MERITORIOUS CARD.

Hail! honored age of grand progression,
While each one clings to his profession,
And science moves with onward motion,
To suit each wayward thought and notion,
Bringing to light some new invention,
More strange than modern wit can mention,
Or Genius paint with true endeavor,
Though making graphic strides forever,
While Reason urges proud Ambition,
To strive for wondrous Competition;
Yet, in this age of glorious Art,
We can the meed of praise impart,
When meritorious efforts claim
A modest puff to gild the name:
And thus we call, with honest pride,
Attention to the Painter's side,—
A man who bravely knows his calling,
Whose works are worthy of extolling,
A model Artist of the day,
And most obliging in his way,
GEORGE H. BANCROFT,—mark the name,
In CHESTNUT STREET you'll find the same,
Call at Five Hundred and Thirty-One,
You'll get the best of painting done,
In Modern or in Classic Order,
From templed shrine to parlor border,
In magic tints of every hue,
To Signs embossed in gold and blue,
Or Figure Head, or Church, or Steeple,
He is resolved to please the people,
And whether foe, or friend or neighbor,
Will charge but moderate for his labor.
We thus invite each one and all,
To give this worthy man a call.
Who will, we venture to engage,
Feel grateful for your patronage.*

* We would particularly invite public attention to our friend Mr. BANCROFT, who is a young, enterprising beginner, and who has gone to vast expense in fitting up his establishment, and is now ready to receive orders for Painting, in all its various branches, at 531 and 533 Chestnut street, 5 doors east of Seventeenth st.

The course of instruction embraces the various branches of the Common Law, and of Equity, Admiralty, Commercial, International and Constitutional Law, and the Jurisprudence of the United States. Students may enter the school in any stage of their professional studies or mercantile pursuits, and at the commencement of either term, or in the middle, or other part of a term. They are at liberty to select what studies they will pursue, according to their view of their own wants and attainments.

NOTICE.

THE Subscriber takes this method of informing his numerous friends, and the public in general, that he is now prepared to execute, in a superior manner, every variety of HOUSE and SIGN PAINTING, Graining, Bronzing, Gilding on Glass and Stained Glass, Calomining Ceilings, Walls, &c., &c. China and Glass Painting executed in a superior manner, and warranted not to CRACK. Ceilings cleaned and Whitened, and made equal to new, at a cost little over that of whitewash. The subscriber would state here that it frequently occurs that persons attempt to use this article who have no knowledge of it whatever, either in the mixing or putting it on, and the consequence is, the job is spoiled, and the article condemned without a proper trial.—So also with CHINA GLOSS; to make a good job it requires a practical knowledge of the use of the brush, as also the making of the Gloss. In regard to the ZINC WHITE, the subscriber would most respectfully recommend it as an article far superior to any other paint now in use, for whiteness and durability of color.

The Subscriber would respectfully solicit a portion of the patronage of those getting Painting done. Feeling grateful for the many favors already bestowed by his friends, he still hopes to share their patronage by unremitting attention to their calls. Those who have large contracts to give out, need have no hesitancy in calling, as he is prepared to give every satisfaction in regard to work, both in reference and security, for the faithful performance of all agreements.

The Subscriber can be found at the S. E. CORNER OF FOURTH AND WALNUT STS. where he will be happy to receive any orders.

PENNSYLVANIA STATE REPORTS.—Vol. XXV: Comprising cases adjudged in the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania by JOSEPH CASEY, State Reporter. Philadelphia, 1856.

For a quarter of a century past, the reports of the decisions of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, have been the very worst reports—as reports—in these United States of America. Not that the reports of some of our States, as of Maryland and the Carolinas, are not as a whole sufficiently bad, nor that in several of the Western States there have not been from time to time volumes as unintelligible even as the whole of ours. But for a series of valuable decisions reported through a long term of years, and by a succession of reporters—appointed, too, in different modes—the Reports of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania bear incontestably, a distinction which is as disgraceful to somebody, as it has been vexatious to the whole bar of Pennsylvania. Beyond Pennsylvania our judicial records and our judicial reports are known only to excite merriment; and this while our court as a whole, and its judges, individually, are very highly and justly esteemed.

It gives us pleasure to say that Mr. Casey's volume is an improvement in many, if not on most, that have gone before it within the last twenty-five years. The cases up to page 182, are, with three exceptions, reported, we understand, by the late Mr. Hepburn; and though not elegantly reported, are well reported; fully enough, and succinctly and clearly. Indeed, in the orderly manner in which we have almost always,* 1st, a good STATEMENT, 2d, Arguments, (where the arguments are given,) and 3d, The Opinion of the Court,—an order seldom departed from by Mr. Hepburn—that gentleman shows that he had a good idea of what a reporter's duty is: and it is clear that he was at considerable pains to get his matter into the shape of a report.

Mr. Casey's part of the volume is also an improvement on much of our late style of reporting; but it is not quite all that it ought to be, nor all it is clear enough, that a man of Mr. Casey's very good abilities is able to make it. He gives us as the very reasonable excuse for its not being so in this volume, that Mr. Hepburn's death threw upon him, "in the midst of numerous business and professional engagements previously assumed," the task of completing what others had begun. The difficulty will of course not exist hereafter.

We intreat Mr. Casey to remember—what he knows, we doubt not, but does not always remember—that the very first thing, both in substance and in place, that every report should contain, is a STATEMENT OF THE CASE; or as the old books call it "The Case." By this is meant the material Facts of the case—and the material facts alone—set forth in a clear, full, but succinct style. This is essential; an all-important part of every report. If we have a good statement, and know what the decree or judgment was, we have, in a majority of cases, a very good report, even if we had nothing more: and, indeed, many of the courts of Europe in their reports do nothing but state the case and give the decree, sometimes assigning short reasons in a kind of preamble to the act of judgment. Mr. Casey does, indeed, take care that a statement is given somewhere in the course of the report; and therein he is greatly in advance of Messrs. Watts and Sergeant, and some of our other reporters, who often give us things that they call reports, where there is no statement anywhere. But the statement of the case should, as we have said, be the very first thing in order; and should not be given, as Mr. Casey gives it in Rowan's Appeal, p. 292, or in Obit v. Dushik, p. 840, only in the opinion of the court and after the arguments of counsel.

If Mr. Casey will bear with us, let him have the goodness to look at those casts. His quick intelligence will perceive that for his reader to understand those arguments at all, that person has to begin in the middle of the report, first at the court's statement of the case, then to read on till he comes to the end of that statement, then to turn back and to read the arguments of counsel, and then to skip the court's statement, (which has been already read,) and go on to where the court's opinion (that is to say, its opinion proper,) begins. No doubt a lawyer, if he takes time and trouble enough, can understand the whole matter decided, and understand it perfectly; but he has to take a trouble which it is the duty of the reporter to spare him, and which every good reporter does spare his readers. In other words, he has to make a report for himself from the materials put before him instead of finding a perfect report made for him. Mr. Casey never saw, we are sure such a style of reporting as that presented by the two cases quoted, in Burrow or in Term?

Moreover, the statement should never be made more than once: it should be made not as it is partly made in Clark v. Depew, p. 509, twice; once by the reporter, and once again by the Court. Why is the certificate of "Robert Oakley Clerk," printed in full on p. 514, after being properly set out just four pages before, on p. 510? And why are thirteen lines of Judge Hare's opinion cited totidem verbis on p. 515, when the same thirteen lines are given to us on pp. 511 and 512? This is an abuse of type. Mr. Casey would probably say that, in the last case, these things are in the opinion of the court. And that is true. But while a reporter is bound to give a court's opinion truly, he need not print all the statements of fact that are in it, when the judge has obviously put them there only because he was doubtful whether the reporter would do his duty. With such a style of reporting as is common in America, and is now seen sometimes even in England, it is very prudent for the judge, if he means to be understood at all, to report the whole case himself. But where the reporter undertakes to report it, and does report it; that is to say where he states the case and gives the arguments of counsel, he should omit from the paper written by the judge all but what is strictly the court's opinion. If the court have stated the case well, he may and should transfer the court's statement to the beginning of his report; making the court's statement his statement, and making the court's opinion begin where the opinion does begin; that is to say, with the statement of the law as laid down by the court. There are some judges, indeed, with whose opinions this is difficult. It was so with Tilghman, C. J.; for his mode of stating the case was usually his argument. But in the majority of cases, these "statements" of fact, and of the decision below, and of the arguments at their own bar, are given by the judges only because they are forced to act as reporters. Let the reporter be sure to do his duty and state the case well, and give the points of the arguments, and we will find the court's opinions becoming very soon just what they ought to be: statements of the law and arguments upon a supposed state of facts. If Mr. Casey will have the goodness to look at the Pennsylvania Law Journal, Vol. I., p. 22, and Vol. II., p. 128, where there are some comments on the reports of Messrs. Watts and Sergeant, he will understand our whole views: though they apparently did not.

We are thus plain, not only because Mr. Casey in his well written preface invites "advice and suggestion;" but because his abilities as a reporter are good, and he gives us good hopes that the Reports of Pennsylvania will, in his hands, be much better than they have been. Indeed most of his cases are well reported. He can, if he will, report them all well. He ought, indeed, to report them all beautifully. There are few courts in the Union which deserve better reports than ours at this time; there is not one where it is so easy to make good reports. At no time for fifty years has its bench been so absolutely free from any person not a good lawyer, a good writer and a well-mannered man. It is, we doubt not, a court entirely easy for any reporter to get on with. Without making comparisons, which are proverbially odious, and would here be difficult, we may say that not one member of it has ever given an opinion not fit, from its ability and style, to be reported. There is no Breckinridge, nor any —, nor any —. There is not one eccentric, or one perverse, or one feeble, or one ill-mannered person on the bench; and this has not always been our judicial fortune. The reporter has the benefit not only of printed paper books, but of printed arguments, a new thing;

where citations are given at large with book and page. And better than all this, most of the opinions, previously to being reported, are printed in our Legal Intelligencer, in a way which gives the reporter the very best "copy" to print from, and a perfect ability to read and study the opinions so as to adjust his "statements," to their requisitions; and to cut away the judicial statement, using it for his own; with every other convenience which a reporter knows he derives from an ability to use printed opinions instead of MSS.*

The present amiable reporter of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania must, therefore, remember that, while he has done a good deal, a little more is expected of him; that the "characteristic magnanimity" of this bar, to which he refers, does not exceed its characteristic intelligence, nor, yet more, its characteristic sense of obligation to understand in the very best way, how that law under which we live, and on which we are hourly called upon to give advice in matters of vital interest to many people, is decided and settled by the great tribunal whose decisions he has been appointed to deliver to us.

SCOTT v. PILLING.

A. has a promissory note against B. which he transfers for a valuable consideration to C. Afterwards B. the maker of the note not knowing of the transfer pays the amount of it to A. who puts it into his own pocket and keeps it. Thereupon C. brings suit against A.

We decide all the law of this case when we affirm the following propositions, all of which are so simple and plain that we can only wonder how they ever came to be doubted.

1. When a note is fairly transferred it belongs to the transferee and he alone has a right to receive the money upon it.
2. If the original holder receive the money he is bound by his contract with the transferee to receive it for his use, and if he refuse to pay it an action lies to compel him.
3. The maker of the note being released is a witness for the plaintiff in such action.
4. The release of the maker from all claims and demands by the plaintiff is not a release of the defendant from his obligation to pay the money which he has wrongfully kept.

Judgment affirmed.

Opinion by Lewis, J.

NEWLIN v. SCOTT.

As between the plaintiff and the garnishee in attachment cases, the payment of costs is the penalty for false clamor or false defence, 1 Stat. R. 213, 5 Serg. & R. 447, 2 Dall. 113. The process against the garnishee is but a species of execution to collect from him, or from effects in his hands, a judgment against another person. If successful, the money made is, after deducting the costs of the attachment execution, applied on the original judgment. But it is an execution, so far collateral to the judgment that it may proceed simultaneously with the ordinary executions, 5 Watts & S. 232; and if it be vexatious and produce nothing, its costs are not taxed in the original case, but must be borne by the plaintiff.

If the garnishee, on being called on to answer or plead, admit certain effects in his hands, this is equivalent to a tender of them to answer the purposes of the process; and the plaintiff may take judgment accordingly; but thus far there is no judgment for costs against the garnishee and out of his own funds, but only quæsi in rem, against the defendant's funds or effects in his hands.

If the judgment be against money in the hands of the garnishee, and he neglect to pay according to law, he is, of course, liable for the costs of the execution by which his duty is to be enforced. If it be against other property in his hands, and the execution be necessary in order to convert it into money, then it would be otherwise.

The case against the garnishee is not instituted as an adversary suit between him and the plaintiff, and it becomes such only when there arises a dispute between them as to the amount of money or other property in the hands of the garnishee: that is, on or after the filing of the answer or plea. This dispute is conducted at the cost of the litigating parties. If the plaintiff establish that there is more in the garnishee's hands than he has admitted, then there will be a judgment against the garnishee personally for the costs; if not, then the garnishee shall have a judgment against the plaintiff for the costs.

In the present case, the plaintiff refused to accept the garnishee's answer, and endeavored to prove that he had more money in his hands than he admitted, and in this he failed, and is therefore liable for the costs. True; the garnishee admitted, in answer to interrogatories, that he had $25 of the defendant's money in his hands, and afterwards, when ruled to plead, pleaded nulla bona but this did not affect his admission, or prevent the plaintiff from taking judgment against the $25, and it must be taken to mean, no effects beyond the amount admitted. True also, the garnishee claimed to be allowed his expenses in the case, and this was properly disallowed, 9 Stat. R. 468; but this is not chargeable as a part of the controversy, and was simply a submission to the court to decide whether now, as formerly, he was entitled to be paid for his trouble and expenses, and whole amount.

* We observe at p. 269 a report given by Mr. Casey from the Legal Intelligencer, Vol. XI., p. 206. As we were reading it in Mr. Casey's book, we were struck (at p. 260, line 11 from bottom), with an impossibility in the dates: "Soon after this transfer, August 14, 1819," &c., (the transfer being in 1824), and looking at our files we discover that either he (or his printer more likely) has altered the statement as given by our reporter; and in fact made something wholly unintelligible. The book being stereotyped the matter can be corrected. Mr. Casey will of course see the blunder at once.

JUDGMENT.

This cause came on for hearing at the last term of this court at Philadelphia, on a writ of error to the judgment of the Court of Common Pleas of Philadelphia, and was argued by counsel and therefore it is considered the said judgment be reversed, and that the plaintiff below do recover from the garnishee Robert Newton $25, being so much money of James Gill in his hands, and therefore he be discharged from all liability therefor to the said James Gill, and that the said garnishee do recover from Daniel Miller & Co., the beneficial plaintiff, his costs of suit in this behalf expended, and that, if need be, execution issue according as the balance or difference may be ascertained after the taxation of the costs, and the record is remitted.

COLEMAN v. SMITH.

Error to District Court Philadelphia.

As drawer and endorser of the protested bill, the defendant was entitled to notice of its dishonor by the acceptor, and in his affidavit of defence, given in evidence against him by the plaintiff, he swears that he had no notice of it, and never heard of it from any source for more than a year after its maturity. The only evidence relied on by the plaintiff to affect him with notice was the certificate of the notary at Rio de Janeiro, that he had served the protest on Joshua M. Clapp, (the acceptor,) "in his own name and as agent of the drawer, Frank Smith." The utmost effect that can be claimed for this certificate is, that it proved notice to the party named, but it is not the slightest evidence of the agency of that party for the defendant. No statute and no rule of the law merchant makes a notarial certificate evidence of such a fact. It was susceptible of competent proof, but none was offered, and the court were right therefore in non-suiting the plaintiff.

There are sixteen errors assigned upon the record, but these observations answer them all sufficiently.

The judgment is affirmed.

COMMONWEALTH EX REL. SUSAN WILSON
v. THE KEEPER OF THE JAIL OF PHILADELPHIA COUNTY.

PER CURIAM.—This is an application for the writ of habeas corpus. On the petitioner's own showing, it appears that she is imprisoned by virtue of the sentence of a court of competent jurisdiction, until she pays the fine and costs imposed, on a conviction for keeping a disorderly house. It appears, also, that she applied to be discharged under the insolvent laws, and obtained a temporary discharge on giving bond to comply with the provisions of law and order of the Court. But the Court of Common Pleas, dismissed her petition for the insolvent law; and she thereupon surrendered herself to jail in discharge of her bond. She is therefore again in imprisonment under the sentence of the court of criminal jurisdiction.

If the object be to nullify in this collateral way, either of the judgments referred to, it cannot be accomplished. The writ of habeas corpus is not a writ of error. We do not see any error in the proceedings of either court, but if we did, this is not the proper remedy for it. But it may be alleged that a writ of error lies not to the decision of the Common Pleas on an application for the insolvent law, and that no appeal can be taken in such a case. If this be so it does not give us authority to disregard their judgments and nullify them by means of a writ of habeas corpus. Such a proceeding would be an abuse of the writ. If there be any remedy the writ of habeas corpus is not the proper one and it is therefore refused.

District Court.

EHRMAN vs. BROOM.

Fryer owning a ground rent on which a judgment previously obtained was a lien against the ground rent to Ehrman. The plaintiff in the judgment, just as the five years were about to expire, issued a scire facias to revive the judgment, which was served upon Fryer, but "nihil" returned as to Ehrman—judgment was entered on the scire facias for want of an affidavit of defence, on which execution was issued, and the ground rent sold by the sheriff. The rent was paid by the sheriff's vendee for many years by the owners of the ground, when Ehrman brought covenant on the ground rent deed.

[ARGUMENT.]

If judgment wherever lands, &c., have been or may be sold be reversed for error, the land shall not be restored nor sheriff's sale avoided, but restitution shall be made only of the purchase money. Act 1765, sec. 9, B. D. 340, 75.

Sci. fac. on mortgage return of "null" and no terre tenant," rule to plead in six weeks and judgment for want of plea, premises sold under this judgment. Held, that though this judgment, (2 Bin. 89,) was erroneous the purchaser (plaintiff) in adjustment took a good title under the Act of 1765. 10 Legal Intelligencer, 56. Alison v. Rankin, 7, S. & R. 271.

And there is no difference whether the purchaser is the plaintiff or a stranger. Arnold v. Gow, 1 Rawle, 227.

But the Act does not apply to the case where there is no judgment, but to an erroneous or irregular judgment. Cooper v. Rowall, 10 Barr, 495.

Thus where judgment against A. only and A. and vend. exp. against A. and B., reciting the judgment to be against both, B's title is not affected by the sheriff's sale. Gregg v. Patterson, 9 W. & S. 201, 208, 210.

Judgment taken on one nihil to sei. fac. sur judgment irregular and erroneous but cannot be overhauled collaterally, and even if set aside or reversed the purchaser at sheriff's sale under it while it stood would take a good title. Heister v. Fertner, 2 Bin. 46, 47.

And where a justice of the peace entered judgment on a warrant to confess judgment on note (a judgment note,) though he had no power to do so—yet though this judgment was void the transcript being filed in the common pleas and the land sold on it, the purchaser took good title as the judgment of the common pleas on such transcript was erroneous. Feger v. Kroh, 6 Watts, 296. Feger v. Kefer, 6 Watts, 298.

The filing of the transcript makes the judgment a judgment of common pleas, and in that court is one of general jurisdiction, the rule is to inferior tribunals and limited jurisdiction does not apply to it. Arnold v. Gow, 1 R. 227.

The district court is a court of common pleas and is a court of general jurisdiction. Reeves v. Brown, 11th Dig. Courts, and McLaughlin v. D. C., 5 W. & S. 272. Gault v. Vineyard, Leg. Int. May 30, 1856.

And the Act actually applies to judgments set aside or reversed for matter of fact. Warder v. Tainter, 4 Watts, 286.

Where two "nihilis" against defendant and appearance by terre tenants, the terre tenant attorney confessed judgment—Plaintiff's attorney endorsed enter this judgment—prothonotary entered simply "judgment." Held to be a judgment against mortgagor as well as terre tenants. Cooper v. Bonnell, 10 Barr, 491.

It is not necessary, however, to give notice to a terre tenant or make him a party. If served with the writ he is concluded, otherwise he may make any defence to the ejectment which he might have made to the seire facias. Mather v. Clark, 1 W. 494.

Sei. fac. sur mortgage no return as to mortgagor, but service on terre tenants who confess judgment, on ejectment by sheriff's vendee. Held that the mortgagor or his aliases without notice may set up any defence which they might have made to the sei. fac. had they appeared and defended it. Cowan v. Getty, 5 Watts, 586.

The result of these cases is that if a sale is made by the sheriff on execution under sei. fac. sur mortgage, which has never been served on the mortgagor and no return as to him, but has been served on the terre tenant and then a judgment taken generally by defendant or otherwise, the mortgagor is not bound by the judgment—so far as he would have a defence to the seire facias, but if he had no defence, the judgment being general is good until reversed, and even if reversed the purchaser at sheriff's sale would take a good title, if the judgment was by a court of general jurisdiction.

No fine or common recovery nor any judgment in any real, personal or mixed action, nor any appeal from the said registers courts shall be avoided or reversed from any defect or error therein, unless the writ of error be commenced or the appeal brought and prosecuted with effect within seven years after such fines levied, common recovery suffered, judgment signed or entered of record, or decree be pronounced. Act 13 April, 1791. Pardon, 1855, page 312.

The sheriff's return is evidence of every fact which he is bound to return. Henderson v. Cannon, Law Reporter, Vol. 15, (New series, Vol. 5, p. 164.)

Stroud, J., charged the jury that the sheriff's vendee took a good title to the rent, and therefore Ehrman could recover no part of it accruing subsequent to the execution of the sheriff's deed. Verdict and judgment accordingly.

Plaintiff acquiesced and no writ of error was taken.

Osborn v. Barnes, New York Herald, Sept. 22, 1855.

A writ was issued in New York City Marine Court against J. B. Barnes, who was owner of the brig Phantom. Process was made by the officer upon Charles Brown, a brother of the defendant. The return showed a personal service upon defendant.

Judgment was taken by Plaintiff v. Defendant for $400, for wages due him as mate of said brig, the defendant being the owner. Upon this judgment an execution was issued and levied upon the brig. A motion was made by the counsel for the defendant that the judgment and execution be set aside for irregularity.

Thompson, J., said, "When a case is regularly called upon the calendar, and no one appears for either party, it is the practice and the duty of the court to dismiss it at once, and when it is so dismissed the court from that moment loses further jurisdiction over it. This being the law, an end would seem to be put to the motion; but I am not aware that we have the power to set aside a judgment. No such power was shown to exist upon the argument of this motion. We may open a judgment entered by default. In this case the return of the officer shows a personal service of the process upon the defendant. That return is conclusive upon the court; we cannot go behind it. If the return is not correct then all other proceedings being regular, the defendant's only remedy lies in an action against the officer for a false return. The opening of the default in this case is not asked for nor, I presume, desired. The remedy sought for is an order absolutely setting aside the judgment and execution. Such relief I have no power to grant. I am free to confess, however, that in my opinion the judgment and execution are null and void. Motion denied."

TIM SHYSTER IN LUCK.

Tim Shyster, Esq., is in luck. He got a case yesterday, and made fifty cents out of it.

Tim is really an industrious fellow. He is always on hand, peering earnestly but modestly into the face of any poor prisoner unsophisticated enough to "want a lawyer."

Poor Tim! How he lives is a wonder! He had many competitors for fame and fees once, but they are nearly all departed—some to California, a few to Utah, and more to the Marine Court! With them went the business, and Tim, always modest, though now nearly alone, cannot drive things. Yet he is very accommodating. His benevolence is unbounded. If a prisoner wants the aid of the best legal talent, Tim is ready to offer his services. Ten dollars is his first charge, but his scale of prices is on a very descending scale. If his would-be client hasn't $10, and is sure he can't raise it, why then he (the aforesaid Tim Shyster) will take $5. Under peculiar circumstances he will take $1, if he can get it, and he has even been charged with accepting 50 cents. But this he does however, (and it's only fair to state it,) as a matter of pure benevolence. Indeed, he is not always particular as to the mode or amount of payment. 'Tis said—though he indignantly denies it—that he has taken a prisoner's ring to do the legal, in lieu of hard cash; and it is well known that he has often on hand a "beautiful" watch, and an "elegant" ring, either or both of which he will sell cheap, for cash, to a particular friend, but to no one else.

Tim, as a counsellor, has certain peculiarities. All great lawyers have. His manner of pleading is what is termed the special. He rises to the eloquent and descends beautifully, though sometimes abruptly to the pathetic. He always goes for the Union, the whole Union, and nothing but the Union, and his client's fees. He knows no North, nor South, nor East, nor West, but he lays claim to a thorough knowledge of his client's past life, and has strong hopes of his future welfare.

John Smith, with a numerous string of aliases, comes the "grab" on a green countryman. He flies, is pursued, (for argument's sake, we will say, by a policeman,) and arrested, when he drops his plunder. He is then brought before a police magistrate to answer. But Tim Shyster, Esq., answers for him for a consideration. Tim Shyster, Esq., Counsellor and Attorney at Law, coughs; he brushes his hair off his forehead, hems a dozen times, and "opens" strong though slow on the mighty case, with the defence of which he has been honored. His English, to be sure, might be improved by a little more familiarity with Lindley Murray. But this defect, if it be a defect, is drowned in his many able points, which he insists are all well taken and "appurtenant" to the occasion. He has a habit of using big words, thrice repeated, terribly long, and decidedly original. The scream of the American Eagle never leaves his ears, and the star-spangled banner floating in the breeze is ever before his patriotic eyes.

People of a practical turn, and not acquainted with the usages of the Bar, might wonder what the American Eagle or the star-spangled banner had to do with John Smith's guilt. But Tim Shyster will explain that point, if he only has time. He will ask, with appropriate gesture, whether, in the face of the glorious fact, in view of the struggles of our fathers for independence, at Bunker Hill, and at Concord, and at Lexington, "and all around,"—whether a young man, born in this free country, beneath the shadow of his country's flag, can be arrested and disgraced on evidence so flimsy. "What does Blackstone say about the matter?" he will ask. "What do all the eminent jurists say about it? Any one who reads the books—reads them as I have done in getting my fitness for the Bar—can answer. I (he continues) will not insult this honorable and august court of legal justice and indefensible right, nor the magnanimity of your Honor, by pointing out the chapter and page of Blackstone that I have mentioned in my cursory and elongated though somewhat diminutive peroration of this part of my subject; but that I'm right I'll stake my professional reputation and standing before this court." He pauses, uses his handkerchief, if it isn't too much soiled—his coat sleeve, if it is—looks for the effect, and then begins the pathetic.

He claims some knowledge of phrenology and psychology, and defies any one to look in the prisoner's countenance and detect any evidence of guilt—any proof that he would be guilty of the disgraceful charge made against him. To be sure, the complainant lost his money—it was grabbed from him—the prisoner was near by at the time and he ran; ran, perhaps, and no doubt for fear that he might be suspected of the theft. But had not he a right to run? Did not the constitution and the bill of rights give him that right? If not, then he was content to lose the case. This point he believed to be well taken, and upon it he rested his case, with a full reliance that justice would be done, and that his worthy client would be properly dealt with.

His Honor, who had been busily engaged reading a newspaper while Mr. Shyster was speaking, and who had seemingly taken no interest in the affair, except to ask anxiously at intervals "whether the counsel had finished," commits John Smith to answer in default of bail, which without much ado, not even deigning an explanation to the eloquent counsel for such conduct.

The eloquent counsel, however, is accustomed to such things. He looks as though any other action would have surprised him. He is quite satisfied. He has done his duty—got his fee in advance, made his plea, and then retires for a drink, because he has spoken so long!

Refreshed, he again returns to court, ready at a moment's warning to repeat his speech and defend a prisoner on the most accommodating terms, but payment must always be made in advance.

He is the last in and the first out of court, and never loses a chance, not a sociable drink.

Tim Shyster is a representative man. There are many of this kind to be found in all the other professions. We know some of them by name.—N. Y. Herald.

"INCOMPARABLY THE BEST."

BLACKSTONE'S COMMENTARIES.

COMMENTARIES

ON THE LAWS OF ENGLAND,

IN FOUR BOOKS.

BY SIR WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, Knt.

ONE OF THE JUSTICES OF THE COURT OF COMMON PLEAS. WITH THE LAST CORRECTIONS OF THE AUTHOR, AND NOTES.

From the Twenty-first London Edition. With copious

NOTES,

Explaining the Changes in the Law effected by Decision or Statute, down to 1844. Together with Notes adapting the Work to the American Student. By

JOHN L. WENDELL,

LATE REPORTER OF THE SUPREME COURT.

Four Octavo Volumes, bound in fine Law Sheep, Price $7 00.

The Twenty-first Edition of "Blackstone's Commentaries" was prepared by intrusting each one of the four great departments of jurisprudence, treated of by Sir WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, to a separate Editor, whose professional studies had made him peculiarly conversant with that particular branch of learning, to wit:

- Vol. I. To J. F. HARGRAVE, of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister at Law.
Vol. II. To G. SWIFT, of the Inner Temple, Barrister at Law.
Vol. III. To R. COUCH, of the Middle Temple, Barrister at Law.
Vol. IV. To W. N. WELSLY, Recorder of Chester.

Into the hands of these gentlemen were put all the Editions of Blackstone then extant in England, with directions to avail themselves of such notes of former editors as they should approve, (among those editions was that of Mr. CHITTY.) Under those circumstances, and by this division of labor, was produced a work highly beneficial to the student, and greatly facilitating the researches of counsel.

The notes of the American Editor were to show the Common Law as it exists in this country under our institutions, particularly in the State of New York, and more especially as effected by the Revised Statutes of that State, and to point out the diversities of the Common Law as held in England and in this country in the few instances in which a difference exists.

This edition is the most accurate and useful which has appeared.—London Times.

Incomparably the best edition that has ever been published.—Literary World.

We do not hesitate to endorse the emphatic approval which the edition has received in England, and pronounce it the best that has ever appeared.—Law Reporter.

There can be no question, that this edition of the Commentaries is destined to supersede all others.—Courier.

These notes are of the greatest value, and add ten-fold to the work, so far as the American student is concerned.—Albany Argus.

The Bank of Cash Credits.

Application will be made to the Legislature of Pennsylvania, for the Charter of a Bank Issue with general banking privileges, with a capital of ONE MILLION OF DOLLARS. Said Bank to be located in the City of Philadelphia, to be called the "Robert Morris Bank," and to be conducted upon the system of cash credits only, as is herewith indicated.

A cash credit is a credit given to an individual by a Banking Company, for a limited sum, seldom under $500, or $1000, upon his own security and that of two or three individuals, approved by the Bank, who become sureties for its payment. The individual who has obtained such a credit, is enabled to draw the whole sum, or any part of it, when he pleases; replacing it, or portions of it, according as he finds it convenient; interest being charged upon such part only as he draws out.

"If a man borrows $1000, from a private hand, and even then it is not always to be found when required, he pays interest for it, whether he be using it or not. His bank credit costs him nothing, except during the moment it is of service to him, and this circumstance is of equal advantage as if he had borrowed money at a much lower rate of interest."

Cash credits are not, however, intended to be a dead load; the main objects of the Banks in granting them is to get their notes circulated, and they do not grant them except to persons in business, or to those who are frequently drawing out and paying in money.

Any person who applies to a bank for a cash credit, is called upon to produce sureties, and, after a full inquiry into the character of the applicant, the nature of his business, and the sufficiency of his securities, he is allowed to open a credit, and to draw upon the Bank for the whole of its amount, or for such part as his daily transaction may require. To the credit of the account, he pays in such sums as he may not have occasion to use, and interest is charged or credited upon the balance, as the case may be. From the facility which these cash credits give to all the small transactions of the country, and from the opportunities which they afford to persons who begin business with little or no capital but their character, to employ profitably the minutest products of their industry, it cannot be doubted that the most important advantages are derived in the whole community.

Such privileges and immunities as the "Metropolitan Bank of New York" exercises, will be applied for.

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND.

INTEREST FIVE PER CENT, PER ANNUM.

OFFICE, NEXT DOOR TO THE POST OFFICE;

No. 83 Dock Street,

PHILADELPHIA, 1854.

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND, No. 83 DOCK Street, next door to THIRD Street, and adjoining the POST OFFICE, receives MONEY on deposit daily, from 9 in the morning until 3 in the afternoon; also Monday evenings, from 7 to 9 o'clock. Interest is allowed on deposits at the rate of FIVE PER CENT per annum. Deposits will be returned in whole, or in part, on demand, without notice.

The popularity of this Office with all classes of the community, both in town and country, and its consequent success, may be ascribed, in part, to the following substantial reasons:

- 1st. It offers a convenient, responsible, and profitable Depository to Executors, Administrators, Assignees, Collectors, Agents, and all public officers—to Attorneys, Trustees, Societies and Associations, whether incorporated or otherwise—to married or single ladies—to Students, Merchants, Clerks, and business men generally—to Mechanics, Farmers, Minors of either sex, and all who have funds, much or little, to deposit, where they may have had at any time, with Five Per Cent interest added.
2d. Depositors receive Books, with an abstract of the By-laws and regulations, in which is entered their deposits, which Books serve as vouchers. They may designate in case of sickness, death, or absence, who shall receive their deposits, without the intervention of Executors or Administrators. Any one or more persons may deposit in his, her, or their name, or for any other person or persons.
3d. A Report is made each year to the Legislature and Councils of the City.
4th. The Officers are sworn before they enter upon their duties, in addition to giving Bonds with sureties.
5th. The State Savings Fund is a real Savings Fund—not an Insurance and Trust Company. The Charter of this Institution avoids the Insurance business.
6th. Deposits may be withdrawn by checks after the manner customary with Banks. Check Books will be furnished to depositors without charge.

A MERITORIOUS CARD.

Hail! honored age of grand progression,
While each one clings to his profession,
And science moves with onward motion,
To suit each wayward thought and notion,
Bringing to light some new invention,
More strange than modern wit can mention,
Or Genius paint with true endeavor,
Though making graphic strides forever,
While Reason urges proud Ambition,
To strive for wondrous Competition;
Yet, in this age of glorious Art,
We can the mood of praise impart,
When meritorious efforts claim
A modest puff to gild the name:
And thus we call, with honest pride,
Attention to the Painter's side,—
A man who bravely knows his calling,
Whose works are worthy of extolling,
A model Artist of the day,
And most obliging in his way,
GEORGE H. BANCROFT,—mark the name,
In CHESTNUT STREET you'll find the same,
Call at Five Hundred and Thirty-One,
You'll get the best of painting done,
In Modern or in Classic Order,
From templed shrine to parlor border,
In magic tints of every hue,
To Signs embossed in gold and blue,
Or Figure Head, or Church, or Steeple,
He is resolved to please the people,
And whether foe, or friend or neighbor,
Will charge but moderate for his labor.
We thus invite each one and all,
To give this worthy man a call.
Who will, we venture to engage,
Feel grateful for your patronage.*

* We would particularly invite public attention to our friend Mr. BANCROFT, who is a young, enterprising beginner, and who has gone to vast expense in fitting up his establishment, and is now ready to receive orders for Painting, in all its various branches, at 531 and 533 Chestnut street, 5 doors east of Seventeenth st.

Opinion by Black, J.

BULLIT &amp; FAIRTHORN v. THE CHARTERED FUND OF THE METHODIST CHURCH.

James J. Boswell was in partnership with Munson H. Treadwell. The firm was dissolved in 1850, Treadwell transferring to Boswell all his interest in the partnership effects, and Boswell agreeing to pay all the debts. In 1851, Boswell formed a limited partnership with two other persons, he being the general partner. On the 29th of January, 1853, he assigned to the "Chartered Fund" certain claims against debtors of the firm composed of himself and Treadwell, which were then in the hands of the defendants for collection. The object of this assignment was to pay the "Chartered Fund" a debt due from himself to it. On the same day, he assigned to the defendants, for the benefit of creditors, all the property of the limited partnership, and to one of the defendants all the other property he had. This suit is brought by the "Chartered Fund," to recover the money collected by the defendants on the claims assigned by Boswell to it.

The first objection made against the right of the plaintiff to recover is the form of the action. The defendants insist that the suit should have been brought in the name of Boswell & Co., for the use of the "Chartered Fund," and not by the "Chartered Fund," as the legal plaintiff. The action is right enough. It is not brought on the original indebtedness to Boswell & Co., but on the implied undertaking of the defendants that they would pay the money which they collected to the party it belonged to. That party was the "Chartered Fund," if its assignment of the debts was valid.

It is argued that these claims being part of the assets of Boswell & Co., Boswell had no power to assign them in payment of a debt due from himself. It is a sufficient answer to this, that the partnership between Boswell and Treadwell had been dissolved long before the assignment. The outgoing partner had a right to demand that Boswell should pay the debts of the firm, for such was the contract, but a suit on the contract was his only means of enforcing that obligation. The creditors of Boswell & Co. had a right to demand that the assets of the firm, as well as the separate property of the remaining partner should go to the satisfaction of their just claims, but they had no specific lien on either which would enable them to follow it into the hands of a bona fide purchaser. When one of two partners retires from the business, relinquishing to the other all his interest in the partnership property, the remaining partner has the same dominion over it as if it had always been his own separate property.

But at the time Boswell made this assignment to the plaintiff to pay a private debt of his own, there existed a limited partnership between him and two other persons, he being the general partner, and carrying on the business. It is admitted that this partnership was insolvent. By the 21 Sec. of the Limited Partnership Law, every assignment by the general partner of his own property, if made when the partnership is insolvent, is void as against the creditors of the partnership. The defendants are assignees for the benefit of the partnership creditors, and in the name of those creditors they claim the right to set aside the previous assignment to the plaintiff as void under the section just cited. But does a voluntary assignment like this put the assignees in the place and arm them with the power of creditors? The cases of Twelvedes vs. Williams (3 Wh. 485) and of Vandyke vs. Chush (7 W. & S. 373), decide the question in the negative. Voluntary assignees represent only the debtor himself, and as to him his own assignment of the claims to the plaintiff was valid and binding.

Judgment affirmed.

Opinion by Lowrie, J.

TAMS v. RICHARDS.

It is certainly very plain that the service of the execution attachment on Wm. Tams rendered him liable to account to that execution creditor for all the property of John Tams, which he had then obtained in fraud of creditors, up to the amount of that creditor's claim. It would be no defence to Wm. Tams that he had lost a part of the property, or entrusted it to the care of others, or sold it, and had not yet received payment. That he had received it in fraud of creditors was a sufficient basis for the demand that he should deliver it up or account to them for the value of it. And when the issue under the execution attachment served on Wm. Tams was tried, and the jury found that he had in his hands

$3,137.50 in value, of the property of John Tams, that meant that he had received so much and no more in fraud of creditors. Under the issue, the jury could have found, and the amount of the plaintiff's claim made it necessary that they should find, a verdict for all the property he had fraudulently received; and therefore the presumption must be that they did so find, and the plaintiff cannot have another trial of that fact. Rockwell v. Langley, 19 State R. 502; Simes v. Zane, 24 Id.

The execution attachment against Richards, Bispham & Co., is only another writ against the same property; for they had nothing but a part of its proceeds, it having been sold by them as auctioneers and agents of Wm. Tams. All the fraud having been atoned for by Wm. Tams, under the attachment against himself, no further atonement can be required of him through his agents. If the judgment against him had not been paid, the attachment served on his agents would have held the money in their hands, and applied it to the judgment; and we do not see that they could have retried the question of fraud, in relation to the money received by them from the property. Judgment affirmed.

NEWALL v. JENKINS.

Error to District Court of Philadelphia.

This is an action on the case against the informer, the magistrate and the constable, for a conspiracy in instituting and conducting a malicious prosecution. The plaintiff was nonsuited on his own evidence, so that we know nothing about the case which the defendants would have shown. Taking the facts as presented by the plaintiff's witnesses we may very well say that there is evidence that there was ill-treatment, perhaps malicious treatment of the plaintiff by each of the parties. But that is not the question raised by the pleadings. It is, was there a conspiracy among them to carry on this offence? This offence is specifically different from a mere malicious prosecution, much more dangerous in its character and may justify much heavier damages. It is a criminal offence as well as a civil injury.

Did the defendants conspire? There is no evidence of it. They were, indeed, all engaged in the transaction, but each one took his own several part allotted to him by law. Admit that the complaint was malicious, still the magistrate was bound to hear it, and to issue his warrant if he did not discover the malice; and the constable was bound to execute the warrant without any regard to previous questions. If the magistrate showed ignorance in his judgment, or rudeness in his demeanor, the prosecutor and constable could not correct that. If the constable acted the ruffian in the execution of the warrant, that is simply his own fault. Each may have performed his own part badly, but the part of each was distinct, and so is their responsibility. We see no evidence of combination or joining in a malicious purpose. Even the rude treatment might possibly be negatived or accounted for if we had the evidence on the other side. Judgment affirmed.

Opinion by Knox, J.

GEORGE HAYNES v. CORNELIUS HUNSIKER.

Error to the C. P. of Bradford Co.

Where one offered as a witness is objected to on the ground of interest, and parol evidence is given to the Court to sustain the objection, if the interest is in the least degree doubtful, the Court may permit the witness to testify and refer the question of interest to the jury. Hart v. Heilner, 3 Rawle, 411; Garden v. Bowers, 4 Harris, 226. Such was the course pursued in the present case, and we see no good reason why it was not correct. At most, the evidence introduced by the plaintiff left the question as to the interest of Harrison Gibbs doubtful, and the Court was not bound to reject the witness. The jury found that he was not interested, and although this may have been and probably was in fact owing to his own denial under oath of the partnership, yet the plaintiff in error cannot claim that the denial was called out by himself upon cross-examination. The plaintiff could not have disproved the partnership by the witness, but when the defendant asked the question, the answer was evidence against him.

We entirely approve of the instructions given by the Common Pleas to the jury upon the question of the delivery of the lumber. Judgment affirmed.

CHARLES L. MOHR v. DANIEL BICHET AND JOHN WARG.

Error to C. P. of Northampton Co.

The Act of Assembly does not prescribe the manner of service for a rule on garnishees to answer interrogatories, and there seems to be no rule of Court in the Common Pleas of Northampton that was intended to regulate the service of such rules.

Under these circumstances the question presented by this record is to be decided upon general principles of law. It is a general rule, although of statutory origin, that a copy left at a party's dwelling with his wife, is a good service. No statute makes such service of a notice to take depositions sufficient, yet it was held in Snyder v. Wilp, 3 H. 65, that a notice to take depositions was well served by leaving a copy with the party's wife. Campbell v. Shirum, 3 W. 60, is to the same effect, but there there was a rule of Court on the subject.

Conceiving that a garnishee ruled to answer interrogatories is not entitled to more notice than that which is sufficient to bring him into Court, or to make depositions legal, we think the Court were not in error in sustaining the proceedings in this case.

The rest of the plaintiff in error's case rests on a clerical error in docketing the rule, as of the 5th Aug., 1846, instead of the 28th. The rule was to answer on the first day of the next term, and as it was not served until the 20th of Oct., and a term intervened between the 5th and 28th of August, the mistake of date was a very important one. That it was a mistake we infer from the uncontradicted statements of defendant in error's paper-book. Amendable at any moment, it is no ground for reversal. The proceedings are affirmed.

HEISTER H. MUHLENBERG and others v. JOHN BROCK and others.

Error to Schuylkill County.

John Brock for the use of Samuel Heilner and John Brock entered judgment in the Common Pleas of Schuylkill County against Marcus G. Heilner, and Percival Heilner, issued a fi fa. thereon, and sold the personal estate of the defendants for $10,130.00.

This money being brought into Court, the above named plaintiffs in error appeared and claimed it as landlords of the defendants in the execution or account of a year's rent due to them under certain coal leases, and suggested to the Court, says the record—"That the facts whether the said rent or any part thereof is due, and also whether if due the said claimants are entitled to receive the same out of the proceeds of the sale are disputed." Its issues were thereupon awarded to try these facts, but they were never formed.

When an issue is directed, the Court should indicate who are to be the parties, plaintiff and defendant, and the counsel of the party asking for it should then draw up a declaration in assumpsit as upon a wager, and a special plea in bar and a joinder in that issue and file it. The form books contain precedents, and a very good one, as settled in the District Court of Philadelphia under the interpleader act, and which admits of ready adaption to other cases, may be found in Wharton, Troubat v. Haly, Penn'a., Prac., Edition of 1853, p. 727. The record then shows who the parties litigant are and the precise facts which have been established.

No such course was pursued here. There were no parties and no pleadings, but the suggestion made by the landlords seems to have been considered substantially an issue between them and the plaintiffs in the execution.

Two questions were suggested, one of pure fact, whether there was any rent due, and the other a mixed question of law and fact—whether if there were rent due the claimants were entitled to receive it out of the proceeds of the sale, and the Court proceeded to try these questions upon the evidence. But after admitting the evidence they declined to charge the jury upon the effect of it as requested in several points put by the counsel of the landlords and directed a verdict for the plaintiffs in the execution. The whole case was thus withdrawn from the jury and no fact whatever was established.

This was a virtual abandonment of the issue such as it was, and a distribution of the proceeds as if none had been asked for, and now upon a writ of error we are expected to review the law of the case.

There is nothing here for review. The law arises upon the facts and they are not found. Neither in form nor in substance have they been passed on. The whole purpose of an issue was that the jury might find the facts, but this the Court prevented by refusing to submit them. It is obvious then that the record is in no condition to receive our judgment of the law. The loose, indeterminate and unskillful character of these proceedings brings to mind forcibly the condemnatory observations of Ch. J. Gibson, in Shultz's appeal, 1 Barr, 254, where it was said we are "confounded by the rude and undigested mass in which the proceedings are sent to us."

The judgments and all proceedings subsequent to the demand of an issue are set aside and reversed and the record is remanded to be proceeded in according to law.

TYRON AND SALLADA v. SAME DEFENDANTS.

Error to Schuylkill County.

Let the same judgment be entered in this as in the former case, and for the same reasons. Judgment reversed and procedendo awarded.

BOWERS v. BOWERS.

Error to Dis. Court, Phila.

The consideration of the contract sued on was the purchase of the office of administrator from him, upon whom the law devolved the right to it, and the only question in the record is whether that is such a consideration as the law will support. I call it an office, not because it is so strictly, but because it very much resembles one, and is frequently so called in the books. An office is a right to exercise a public or private employment, and to take the fees and emoluments thereunto belonging. An administrator is appointed by a public officer under his seal of office to exercise a trust and perform duties which are carefully defined by law, and which affect both public and private interests, and his compensation is measured by legal standards, though not defined in the fee bill. In Bach v. Stitzel 9 H.

522, we held that words were actionable without proof of special damage, which imputed to an administrator "a positive and fraudulent breach of his official oath." If public policy forbids traffic in the office of postmaster, as was decided in Filsons Trustees v. Himes, 5 Barr, 356, it will for superior reasons, interdict barter in respect to the same sacred trust of administration.

But if administration of a decedent's estate be not an office it is strictly a trust, and as such is not to be purchased for a price which creates in the trustee an interest, adverse to the cestuis que trust. On this point we cannot do better than adopt the reasoning of the learned judge who tried the cause.

It is true a creditor may administer his debtors estate, and if William made himself a creditor, by assuming the debts which George held against the estate, that was not the disqualifying circumstance. The administration would, nevertheless be effectual and valid. But by agreeing to pay George the full amount of his debt, without regard to the sufficiency of the assets, William made a contract that was prejudicial to other creditors, for he bound himself so, to administer the estate, as to indemnify himself. If all the debts could not be fully paid he had a separate or peculiar interest that this one should be, and thus he placed himself in possible antagonism to those whose interests he was bound to represent and guard. A mere creditor administrator has an interest that his debt should be fully paid, but he has contracted for no preference over others. His interest, in common with them, and the nearer he can bring the assets to full payment the better for them.

The question here is not upon the legality of the administration, but upon the sufficiency of the consideration for the defendant's promise, and as that in its very nature endangered the purity of the trust, the law will not sanction it.

The case of Hind v. Holdship, 2 W. 104, much relied on in the argument, is in no respect analogous. An assignee promised his assignor that he would pay certain creditors, not as a means of obtaining the assignment, but because the assignor wished to prefer them. The assignment without an expression in it of the desired preferences, was held to be a sufficient consideration of the promise. The point ruled here did not arise and was not decided in that case.

On the whole, we are of opinion that the Court did right in arresting the judgment and their order is affirmed.

Court of Common Pleas.

Opinions by Thompson, P. J.

GEISSLER v. SCOTT.

Saturday, June 28.

In Equity, Demurrer.

In the bill as originally filed, the complainants expressly allege, that the defendant, Scott, acknowledged and delivered to Mr. Fox (who was their conveyancer) for them, the deed for the property in question. This position was not sustained by the evidence taken, but, on the contrary, it appeared that Mr. Fox held the deed as an escrow, having been requested by the defendant not to deliver it. For this reason relief was refused.

The complainants have since amended their bill, by alleging the existence of a parol contract, by which the defendant, in consideration of the payment of a certain sum of money, as part of the principal of the ground rent reserved in the said deed, and of a stipulation by the complainants to pay a further sum, annually, until the whole of the principal of the said ground rent should be discharged, agreed to release and discharge the complainants from the covenants to build, as contained in the said deed, and they aver a tender of the money at the time of the alleged execution of the deed, but that the defendant refused to release them from the said covenant to build. The complainants further alter their prayer for relief, and now ask that it may be decreed that the defendant, Scott, did duly sell and that he agreed to convey to the complainant of the said premises therein described in fee simple, for the consideration, and upon the terms therein averred, and that the defendants shall deliver to the complainants the said deed therefor.

It thus appears that, by the addition of the amendment to the bill as originally drawn, the complainants set up two distinct contracts, alleged to have been made at one and the same time, and pray for the execution of the one contained in the deed only, with which the other is altogether inconsistent. The deed requires the payment of an annual ground rent, and the building of houses upon the premises within the year, and this is the deed which the complainants pray to have delivered to them in execution of the alleged sale of the premises to them. The contract set up in the amended bill as an addition to the covenants in the deed, claims that the defendant, Scott, agreed to release the covenants to build, in consideration of the sum of money tendered to him at the time of the execution of the deeds; and that by the tender the complainants are freed from their covenant to build. If the relief prayed for were given, and the deed ordered to be delivered, the complainants would be under the covenants which are contained in it, including the building covenant which they allege no longer exists.

The case, as presented by the amended bill, shows that the parties executed and delivered a deed containing covenants, which, by an agreement made at the same time, and for a consideration then tendered, were agreed to be released, and that the deed therefore executed and delivered did not express the contract as it was in fact entered into. This position seems entirely inconsistent with the case presented in the original bill, and renders it impossible for the Court to decree a specific execution of either contract. The execution of the contract, as contained in the amendments to the bill, is not prayed for, and the contract as stated originally is alleged to have been altered and modified, so that it cannot be specifically performed. Under these circumstances the objections taken by the defendant in his answer by way of demurrer must be sustained, as, admitting the facts stated in the bill, the complainants are not entitled to the relief they seek.

CAPEHART v. CAPEHART.

Bill and Answer.

To establish a resulting trust by parol the evidence must be full, clear and satisfactory.

The resulting trust, which may be proved by parol testimony, arises from the purchase being made with the proper monies of the party asserting the trust, the deed being taken in the name of another. As the trust results entirely from the payment of the money of the cestui que trust, that fact must be established by full, clear and satisfactory evidence. The existence of such a trust may be established by the acknowledgements of the party in whose name the conveyance is taken, even against his heirs or devisees, but such proof is admitted to be liable to serious objections, and is only to be received with the greatest caution. Where it is clear and consistent and corroborated by circumstances proved, which leave no doubt of the fact, it may be sufficient to sustain a decree in favor of the trust; Gascoigne vs. Thwing, 1 Verm. 366; Newton v. Preston, Prec. ch. 103; Botsford v. Barr, 2 Johns. ch. 405.

The question here presented is, whether the testimony shews clearly and satisfactorily that the ground taken up by George Capehart and the house built thereon by him, were paid for with the proper money of his father. The declarations of George Capehart, during the time he was engaged in building the house, are chiefly relied on to establish the fact that the money of his father was used, and not his own. There is no statement of any specific sum paid, but general declarations made to different persons, that he was building for his father, or that he received monies from his mother to pay for the building. This evidence, taken in the most favorable aspect, is far from full and satisfactory, and when compared with the declarations made by George to other witnesses as to the object for which he made use of his father's name in making contracts, and payments for the building, it appears by no means reliable.

To several witnesses he declared that he adopted this method of doing business, in order that his wife, with whom he had not lived amicably, might not have it in her power to interfere with the sale of the property, as she had done in regard to some other property owned by him. Between the inconsistent declarations of the same person, we have no means of arriving at a satisfactory decision. The whole evidence presents a case in which an exercise of proper caution would prevent a Court from making a decree, which would deprive the widow and children of the property, where the evidence at best is unsatisfactory. It may be unfortunate for the plaintiff that he is unable, more clearly to establish his rights, if any he has, but that is a circumstance by which our decision cannot be affected. Bill dismissed.

ESTATE OF JOHN MORRISON SCOTT.

Orphans' Court—Case Stated.

The Fifth Section of Act of April 14th, 1851, was not designed to give authority to the widow or administrator to make a selection from the Real Estate of decedent, to answer her claim for $300, and thus render it liable to be sold.

Real estate of an intestate immediately upon his decease descends to his heirs, and is not brought under the control of an administrator, unless by proceedings had in the Orphans' Court, in order to subject it to administration. The 5th section of the act of April, 14, 1851, which requires the administrator of a decedent to have personal or real property, to the value of $300, appraised, so that the same shall not be sold, but permitted to remain with the widow, was not designed to interfere with the descent of the real estate of an intestate, or to authorize his administrator to interfere with it, unless such real property was to be sold for the purpose of settling the affairs of the decedent. The terms of the act refer to property liable to be sold, over which the administrator has obtained control for that purpose. The analogous proceeding under the execution act of 9th April, 1849, which is referred to by the act of 1851, for the manner of making the appraisal, is had only when real estate is subjected to execution, which cannot be where personal property can be found adequate to answer the claim. It was not designed to give authority to the widow, or to the administrator, to make a selection from among the real estate of an intestate, of such premises as either of them might deem most suitable, to answer the demand of the widow, and by such selection to render it liable to be sold. This can only be effected where there is a deficiency of personal property to answer the demands against the estate, including the widow's claim, which has a preference over creditors. A widow cannot withhold her claim until the personal property is exhausted and then require the administrator to appraise, and set over to her real estate, without the previous steps necessary to bring such estates into administration. Where there is no personal property the administrator must have the real estate appropriated under the supervision of the Orphans' Court. That tribunal must determine which, and how much of the real estate, is required to be sold to pay debts or to meet the widow's claim, and if a portion of such real property can be set out for her use and that of her family the administrator, upon request, is required to have it set apart to remain for her; or, in case a division cannot be made, to set apart for her, out of the proceeds of sale, the sum exempted by the act of Assembly; any other course than this would produce confusion, especially in case of testacy, where real property had been separately devised. In the case before us there was personal property adequate to meet the claim of the widow, that fund has not been exhausted, and no real estate has been ordered to be sold or applied to the purposes of administration.

Under this state of facts, we think the widow is not entitled to the sum of $300 out of the real estate, as the same now stands, and that the administrator cannot have it appraised.

SELF-CLEANING FURNACE.

Boytnton's Patent.

Having put up a large number of these Furnaces, both in public and private buildings, (including 24 put up at the Philadelphia County Prison, in place of the 44 torn out.) and tested them during the cold weather of 1855, and 1856, being the coldest weather we have had for twenty or thirty years. They have given the most universal satisfaction, and those having them in use were perfectly delighted with the abundance of warm, pleasant air, and abundant ventilation afforded thereby, while so many were suffering from cold, and troubled with the deficiencies of their heating apparatus.

We take great pleasure, therefore, in recommending them to the notice of the public, and would call their attention particularly to an examination of the greatly increased amount of effective radiating surface, their perfect solidity and durability, the improved manner of making the joints, entirely preventing any escape of gases, and the manner of distributing the fire, so as to cause it to impinge directly against the large amount of surface, without the objectionable and unnatural method of forcing the current downwards.

We have also a full assortment of HAYES' PATENT TUBULAR OVEN RANGES, now so universally used, and favorably known. Also HAYES' PATENT VENTILLATORS, &c., &c., all of which will be put up in the very best manner, and by the most skillful workmen, constantly engaged for that purpose, by

LAW BOOKSELLERS AND PUBLISHERS,
 No. 197 CHESTNUT STREET,
 PHILADELPHIA.

The Fullest, the Latest, and the Best
 REPORTS OF THE COMMON LAW COURTS
 OF ENGLAND.

Containing the cases decided in the Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Nisi Prius Courts,
 from 1813 to 1855, and in the Court of Exchequer and Exchequer Chamber, from 1824 to 1855, are found in

The Regular and Authoritative Series of the English Common Law and English Exchequer Reports,

Which present the following claims to the support of the profession:

1. They are the only series issued as the authoritative and acknowledged medium by which the decisions of the Law Courts of England are
 made public.

2. They contain Later Reports than the Boston series, are more fully and more ably reported, and
 so arranged by preservation of the original pag-
 ing, that reference by reporters, or by elementary writers, can be traced as readily as in the English editions.

Vol. 2, Ellis & Blackburne's (75 E. C. L. R.)
 Reports (Q. B.) to January, 1854, was published by us in June, 1854. At that time the last Queen's Bench case printed in the Boston Law
 and Equity Reports, was of June 25, 1853. Our volume contained cases decided five months later.
 The Queen's Bench cases to November 25, 1853,
 were published in the Boston series in August, 1854, two months after we had distributed the same cases.

Vol. 3, Ellis & Blackburne, (77 E. C. L. R., with cases to the end of Trinity Term, 1854, was published when the latest case of Queen's Bench
 decisions in the Boston series, was of February 8, 1854, more than four months behind the regular reporters.

Exchequer Reports, vol. 9, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) distributed by us January 11, 1855,
 contains cases to May 10, 1854. The last Exchequer case then in the Boston series was decided February 9, 1854, four months behind the regular Reporter, issued in Philadelphia.

3. They contain more cases decided by the courts represented, than any other series issued
 in this country.

Vol. 77 English Common Law, (3 E. & B.) reports eighty-six cases decided in the Queen's Bench since January 11, 1854, while but *fifty-
 eight* Queen's Bench cases, decided since January
 1, 1854, are found scattered among Vols. 22, 24
 and 25 of the Boston Law and Equity.

Vol. 78 E. C. L. K. (5 J. Scott,) reports sixty-five cases decided since Nov. 13, 1853, in the Common Pleas, while the L. & E. has but *fifty-
 seven* cases in that Court since the same period.

Vol. 9 Exchequer Reports, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) reports one hundred and ten cases in the
Courts of Exchequer, decided since June 24, 1853,
 while since the same date, the L. & E. report but 107 cases, scattered through vols. 20, 22, 24
 and 25.

4. They are almost exclusively cited in argument of counsel, and referred to by Elementary Writers for Law Authorities. See Smith's Leading Cases, Smith's Contracts, Smith's *Landlord
 and Tenant*, by Maude; *Byles on Bills and Pro-
 missory Notes*, Broom's Legal Maxims, Broom's Commentaries on the Laws of England, or almost any recent Law Book issued in England.

5. The Philadelphia Reports are edited by Judge Sharwood and by Judge Hare, whose labors as editors and authors have made them so
 well and so favorably known to the profession.

6. The Boston Law and Equity is made up in this country from the Law Journal, Jurist, Times
 and other Law periodicals, of a weekly, monthly,
 or quarterly character, and being unknown in England, is never cited in Court, or referred to by Law writers. The periodicals from which it is extracted, are occasionally cited under their own particular names, but they do not possess that permanent value, even in England, which is all-
 important in a series of Reports.

A carefully prepared and accurate Annual Digest of all the cases decided by the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Exchequer, will be distributed, early in each year,
 to subscribers to either series, free of charge.
 That for 1854 is ready, and will be mailed to subscribers who have not received a copy.

IN PRESS AND IN PREPARATION.

Leading Cases on the Law relating to Real Property, Conveyancing, and the Construction of Wills, by Owen Davies Tudor, author of *Leading

 Law, by author of Legal Maxims, and *Parties to

HERRING'S PATENT CHAMPION SAFES!

What the People Say!

PHILADELPHIA, 2d May, 1856.

MESSRS. FARRELS & HERRING—
 GENTLEMEN—The Herring's Patent Champion Fire-Proof Safe, which we purchased of you in the month of January last, was situated in our Counting-Room, in the second story of 231 Market street, on the night of the Great Fire, 1st May, 1856, and fell with the burning building in that conflagration.

The Safe was reached this afternoon, after an exposure of THIRTY-SIX HOURS to intense heat, and although the brass plates on the front of the Safe were melted, and the exterior shows the evidence of extreme heat, the inside casing was found to be UNTOUCHED BY FIRE, and with the exception of being a little steamed is now as good as new.
 EDW. SEMANS & CO.

MESSRS. FARRELS & HERRING—
 GENTLEMEN—The Herring's Patent Champion Fire-Proof Safe, of your manufacture, which we purchased nearly a year since, was in the centre of our building at the time of its destruction in the Great Fire of May 1, 1856.

We had removed the greater portion of our Books before the fire reached us, but left some of them, together with a number of loose papers, inside, purposely to test the security of the safe. After thirty-eight hours of severe roasting, we found the interior of the Safe, upon opening, not only bright and sound, but the Books and Papers as free from fire as when first put in.

We shall require another Safe as soon as we get a new location, and want none but your "Champion."
 Yours, &c.,
 FISHER & BROTHER,
 No. 15 North Sixth street.

The public will bear in mind that the "HERRING'S PATENT" is the only Safe made in this City, which has never failed to preserve its contents in accidental fires.
 The TWO SAFES from the above Great Fire can now be seen in front of the OLD STAND, No. 34 WALNUT STREET.

Legal Intelligencer.

FRIDAY, JULY 4, 1856.

For the convenience of our readers, we present to-day a Table of the Cases contained in the preceding twenty-six numbers of the present Volume of our paper. To those who do not take the "Legal," we would suggest an examination of this Table, showing as it does, at a glance, the great utility and cheapness of the publication. The contents of the half year, already exceed in amount of legal opinions that of any $5 volume of Reports published in the Union, and the decisions are furnished at a much earlier period; beside which it contains a large amount of legal miscellany, valuable to the profession. Desiring to increase our circulation, with a view to further improvements, we solicit the aid of our friends in this behalf, promising that no exertion on our part shall be spared, to make the paper serviceable to our readers, and creditable to the profession.

Court of Common Pleas.

Opinions by Thompson, P. J.

CHARLES BLAKE'S ESTATE.

The question presented by the original report of the auditor in this case, was whether the filing of an appraisement, by an administrator under the approval of the Court, as provided by the act of 14th April, 1851, was conclusive as to the right of the widow to retain the appraised property; upon this question the decision of the auditor was overruled and the report recommitted. The question now is presented, whether the property was properly retained by her. Since the case was here before, the Supreme Court have explained the act of Assembly referred to, to mean that the widow of a decedent, in case of solvency or insolvency, testacy or intestacy, and though receiving a portion of the decedent's property by will, is entitled to have the sum of $300 set apart for her use. It is so much withdrawn from the administration, and becomes her property—Neely v. McCormick, 1 Casey 255. Campher v. Campher, 1b. 32. This disposes of the present exception in favor of the widow and the retention of the appraised articles must be allowed. Nor should she be required to pay costs incurred in consequence of the opposition made to her legal rights. The exceptions in her favor are therefore sustained and so much of the report as charges her with the appraised articles and the costs of audit, is set aside, and the remainder is confirmed.

BLACKSTONE'S COMMENTARIES.

COMMENTARIES

ON THE
LAWS OF ENGLAND,
IN FOUR BOOKS.

BY
SIR WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, Knt.

ONE OF THE JUSTICES OF THE COURT OF
COMMON PLEAS. WITH THE LAST COR-RECTIONS OF THE AUTHOR, AND
NOTES.

From the Twenty-first London Edition.
With copious

NOTES,

Explaining the Changes in the Law effected by Decision or Statute, down to 1844. Together with Notes adapting the Work to the American Student. By

JOHN L. WENDELL,

LATE REPORTER OF THE SUPREME COURT.

Four Octavo Volumes, bound in fine
Law Sheep, Price $7 00.

The Twenty-first Edition of "Black-
stone's Commentaries" was prepared by
intrusting each one of the four great departments of jurisprudence, treated of by
Sir WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, to a separate
Editor, whose professional studies had made him peculiarly conversant with that particular branch of learning, to wit:

- Vol. I. To J. F. HARGRAVE, of Lincoln's Inn,
Barrister at Law.
- Vol. II. To G. SWIFT, of the Inner Temple,
Barrister at Law.
- Vol. III. To R. COUCH, of the Middle Temple,
Barrister at Law.
- Vol. IV. To W. N. WELSLY, Recorder of Chester.

Into the hands of these gentlemen were put all the Editions of Blackstone then extant in England, with directions to avail
themselves of such notes of former editors
as they should approve, (among those editions was that of Mr. CHITTY.) Under those circumstances, and by this division of labor, was produced a work highly beneficial to the student, and greatly facilitating
the researches of counsel.

The notes of the American Editor were
to show the Common Law as it exists in
this country under our institutions, particularly in the State of New York, and
more especially as effected by the Revised Statutes of that State, and to point out
the diversities of the Common Law as held
in England and in this country in the few instances in which a difference exists.

This edition is the most accurate and useful
which has appeared.—London Times.

Incomparably the best edition that has ever
been published.—Literary World.

We do not hesitate to endorse the emphatic
approval which the edition has received in England, and pronounce it the best that has ever appeared.—Law Reporter.

There can be no question, that this edition of the Commentaries is destined to supersede all
others.—Courier.

These notes are of the greatest value, and add
ten-fold to the work, so far as the American student is concerned.—Albany Argus.

The Bank of Cash Credits.

Application will be made to the Legislature
of Pennsylvania, for the Charter of a Bank Issue
with general banking privileges, with a capital of ONE MILLION OF DOLLARS. Said Bank to be located in the City of Philadelphia, to be called the "Robert Morris Bank," and to be conducted upon the system of cash credits only, as
is herewith indicated.

A cash credit is a credit given to an individual
by a Banking Company, for a limited sum, seldom under $500, or $1000, upon his own security
and that of two or three individuals, approved
by the Bank, who become sureties for its payment. The individual who has obtained such a credit, is enabled to draw the whole sum, or any part of it, when he pleases; replacing it, or portions of it, according as he finds it convenient;
interest being charged upon such part only as he draws out.

"If a man borrows $1000, from a private hand, and even then it is not always to be found when required, he pays interest for it, whether he be using it or not. His bank credit costs him
nothing, except during the moment it is of service to him, and this circumstance is of equal advantage as if he had borrowed money at a much lower rate of interest."

Cash credits are not, however, intended to be a dead load; the main objects of the Banks in granting them is to get their notes circulated,
and they do not grant them except to persons in business, or to those who are frequently drawing
out and paying in money.

Any person who applies to a bank for a cash
credit, is called upon to produce sureties, and,
after a full inquiry into the character of the applicant, the nature of his business, and the sufficiency of his securities, he is allowed to open a credit, and to draw upon the Bank for the whole of its amount, or for such part as his daily transaction may require. To the credit of the account,
he pays in such sums as he may not have occasion to use, and interest is charged or credited upon the balance, as the case may be. From the facility which these cash credits give to all the small transactions of the country, and from the opportunities which they afford to persons who begin business with little or no capital but their character, to employ profitably the minutest portions of their industry, it cannot be doubted that the most important advantages are derived in the whole community.

Such privileges and immunities as the "Metropolitan Bank of New York" exercises, will be applied for.

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND.

INTEREST FIVE PER CENT, PER ANNUM.

ALL SUMS OF MONEY RETURNED ON DEMAND.

OFFICE, NEXT DOOR TO THE POST OFFICE;
No. 83 Dock Street,

PHILADELPHIA, 1854.

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND, No. 83 DOCK Street,
next door to THIRD Street, and adjoining the POST OFFICE, receives MONEY on deposit daily, from 9
in the morning until 3 in the afternoon; also Monday evenings, from 7 to 9 o'clock. Interest is allowed on deposits at the rate of FIVE PER CENT per annum. Deposits will be returned in whole, or in part, on demand, without notice.

The popularity of this Office with all classes of the community, both in town and country, and its consequent success, may be ascribed, in part, to the following
substantial reasons:

- 1st. It offers a convenient, responsible, and profitable
Depository to Executors, Administrators, Assignees, Collectors, Agents, and all public officers—to Attorneys, Trustees, Societies and Associations, whether incorporated or otherwise—to married or single ladies—to Students, Merchants, Clerks, and business men generally—to Mechanics, Farmers, Minors of either sex, and all who have funds, much or little, to deposit, where they may be had at any time, with Five Per Cent interest added.
  - 2d. Depositors receive Books, with an abstract of the
By-laws and regulations, in which is entered their deposits, which Books serve as vouchers. They may designate in case of sickness, death, or absence, who shall receive their deposits, without the intervention of Executors or Administrators. Any one or more persons may deposit in his, her, or their name, or for any other person or persons.
  - 3d. A Report is made each year to the Legislature, and Councils of the City.
  - 4th. The Officers are sworn before they enter upon their duties, in addition to giving Bonds with sureties.
  - 5th. The State Savings Fund is a real Savings Fund—not an Insurance and Trust Company. The Charter of this Institution avoids the Insurance business.
  - 6th. Deposits may be withdrawn by checks after the manner customary with Banks. Check Books will be furnished to depositors without charge.

A MERITORIOUS CARD.

Hail! honored age of grand progression,
While each one clings to his profession,
And science moves with onward motion,
To suit each wayward thought and notion,
Bringing to light some new invention,
More strange than modern wit can mention,
Or Genius paint with true endeavor,
Though making graphic strides forever,
While Reason urges proud Ambition,
To strive for wondrous Competition;
Yet, in this age of glorious Art,
We can the meed of praise impart,
When meritorious efforts claim
A modest puff to gild the name:
And thus we call, with honest pride,
Attention to the Painter's side,—
A man who bravely knows his calling,
Whose works are worthy of extolling,
A model Artist of the day,
And most obliging in his way,
GEORGE H. BANCROFT,—mark the name,
IN CHESTNUT STREET you'll find the same,
Call at Five Hundred and Thirty-One,
You'll get the best of painting done,
In Modern or in Classic Order,
From templed shrine to parlor border,
In magic tints of every hue,
To Signs embossed in gold and blue,
Or Figure Head, or Church, or Steeple,
He is resolved to please the people,
And whether foe, or friend or neighbor,
Will charge but moderate for his labor.
We thus invite each one and all,
To give this worthy man a call.
Who will, we venture to engage,
Feel grateful for your patronage.*
* We would particularly invite public attention to our friend Mr. BANCROFT, who is a young, enterprising beginner, and who has gone
to vast expense in fitting up his establishment,
and is now ready to receive orders for Painting,
in all its various branches, at 531 and 533 Chesnut street, 5 doors east of Seventeenth st.

From Hon. J. B. Gibson, Chief Justice.—I have

This volume contains the cases decided in part of May Term, 1855; in October Terms, 1856, and part of January Term, 1856. It will be the joint endeavor of the Reporter and Publisher to issue the respective volumes as speedily as possible, after the determination of the cases which each volume will contain, and thus to remove a serious ground of complaint on the part of the bar. Subscribers wanted for a single volume or the entire series.

PREPARING FOR PUBLICATION.

Spencer Miller, Esquire, Counsellor at Law and Professor of the law of Real Estate, Conveyancing and Equity Jurisprudence in the Law Department of the University of Pennsylvania. The Statutes and Decisions, since 1839, (when the first edition was published) have so radically affected this branch of the law, that an entirely new arrangement has been adopted, and a much larger volume will be required than that originally published. The editor and publishers will make every effort to present to the Bar a treatise which will exhaust the law upon this subject, as far as it has been announced, and which will be found practically useful to the profession. It will contain Precedents of Forms carefully prepared, with a view to the latest aspects of the law; and also, all the acts of Assembly relating to the subject. C. Brightly, Esq., editor of Purdon's Digest, &c., &c., which will be compiled on the model, which, in the case of their eighth edition of Purdon's Digest, has given so much satisfaction to the Legal Profession and the Public.

Two Moot Courts are also holden in each week, at each of which a cause, previously given out, is argued by four students, and an opinion delivered by the presiding instructor. Rooms and other facilities are also provided for the Club Courts; and an Assembly is held weekly for practice in debate, and acquiring a knowledge of Parliamentary law and proceedings.

Students may enter the school in any stage of their professional studies or mercantile pursuits, and at the commencement of either term, or in the middle, or other part of a term. LAW BOOKSELLERS AND PUBLISHERS,

No. 197 CHESTNUT STREET,

PHILADELPHIA.

The Fullest, the Latest, and the Best REPORTS OF THE COMMON LAW COURTS OF ENGLAND.

Containing the cases decided in the Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Nisi Prius Courts, from 1813 to 1855, and in the Court of Exchequer and Exchequer Chamber, from 1824 to 1855, are found in

The Regular and Authoritative Series of the English Common Law and English Exchequer Reports,

Which present the following claims to the support of the profession:

1. They are the only series issued as the authoritative and acknowledged medium by which the decisions of the Law Courts of England are made public.

2. They contain Later Reports than the Boston series, are more fully and more ably reported, and so arranged by preservation of the original paging, that reference by reporters, or by elementary writers, can be traced as readily as in the English editions.

Vol. 2, Ellis & Blackburne's (75 E. C. L. R.) Reports (Q. B.) to January, 1854, was published by us in June, 1854. At that time the last Queen's Bench case printed in the Boston Law and Equity Reports, was of June 25, 1853. Our volume contained cases decided five months later. The Queen's Bench cases to November 25, 1853, were published in the Boston series in August, 1854, two months after we had distributed the same cases.

Vol. 3, Ellis & Blackburne, (77 E. C. L. R., with cases to the end of Trinity Term, 1854, was published when the latest case of Queen's Bench decisions in the Boston series, was of February 8, 1854, more than four months behind the regular reporters.

Exchequer Reports, vol. 9, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) distributed by us January 11, 1855, contains cases to May 10, 1854. The last Exchequer case then in the Boston series was decided February 9, 1854, four months behind the regular Reporter, issued in Philadelphia.

3. They contain more cases decided by the courts represented, than any other series issued in this country.

Vol. 77 English Common Law, (3 E. & B.,) reports eighty-six cases decided in the Queen's Bench since January 11, 1854, while but fifty-eight Queen's Bench cases, decided since January 1, 1854, are found scattered among Vols. 22, 24 and 25 of the Boston Law and Equity.

Vol. 78 E. C. L. K. (5 J. Scott,) reports sixty-five cases decided since Nov. 13, 1853, in the Common Pleas, while the L. & E. has but fifty-seven cases in that Court since the same period.

Vol. 9 Exchequer Reports, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) reports one hundred and ten cases in the Courts of Exchequer, decided since June 24, 1853, while since the same date, the L. & E. report but 107 cases, scattered through vols. 20, 22, 24 and 25.

4. They are almost exclusively cited in argument of counsel, and referred to by Elementary Writers for Law Authorities. See Smith's Leading Cases, Smith's Contracts, Smith's Landlord and Tenant, by Maude; Byles on Bills and Promissory Notes, Broom's Legal Maxims, Broom's Commentaries on the Laws of England, or almost any recent Law Book issued in England.

5. The Philadelphia Reports are edited by Judge Sharswood and by Judge Hare, whose labors as editors and authors have made them so well and so favorably known to the profession.

6. The Boston Law and Equity is made up in this country from the Law Journal, Jurist, Times and other Law periodicals, of a weekly, monthly, or quarterly character, and being unknown in England, is never cited in Court, or referred to by Law writers. The periodicals from which it is extracted, are occasionally cited under their own particular names, but they do not possess that permanent value, even in England, which is all-important in a series of Reports.

A carefully prepared and accurate Annual Digest of all the cases decided by the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Exchequer, will be distributed, early in each year, to subscribers to either series, free of charge. That for 1854 is ready, and will be mailed to subscribers who have not received a copy.

OUR REPORTS.

The want of a statement, syllabus, and other parts of a full report of the cases published in our paper have occasionally been adverted to by some of our subscribers.

Deeming as we do the early, prompt dissemination of the decisions the most important advantage afforded by "The Legal Intelligencer," we have usually furnished the opinion of the Court alone as soon as possible after its delivery.

This in most instances will be found sufficient; if not to the perfect understanding of the particular point decided, to show at least the principle which governed the Court in the decision of the case and to direct attention to it.

Any attempt on our part to supply the place of the books of reports, while futile and useless, would, by the necessary delay for proper preparation, greatly detract from the usefulness of the paper, and circumscribe the main advantage of the periodical form of publication.

POPULAR LECTURES ON COMMERCIAL LAW,

By GEORGE SHARSWOOD.

HAYES & ZELL, PHILADELPHIA.

This work will supply a want which has been long felt among business men. Having been engaged for ten months out of every twelve, for many years, past as President Judge of the District Court of Philadelphia, in the hearing and determination of those legal questions which arise in a mercantile community like ours, Judge Sharswood is eminently fitted for the task he has so ably performed in the work before us.

The Law Merchant as it now exists and is administered, is presented in simple language, free from technicalities, but with remarkable clearness and precision, so as to make the principle of the law as well as the rule itself intelligible and readily appreciable to the unprofessional reader. The position and legal reputation of the author give the work a value and authority which none of the ordinary compilations intended to popularize the sciences usually possess.

Containing under appropriate heads the law of Agency, Contracts, Bailment, Carriers, Bills of Exchange, Promissory Notes, Shipping, Insurance and Partnership, it is calculated to be of great service to every merchant or business man, and will be found of value to the legal profession as a compendium of mercantile law. The chapter on Mercantile Paper will be found particularly useful and interesting.

It is presented in a manner creditable to the publishers, and will no doubt find a large sale.

MOOT COURT CASES,

By JOHN A. BLODGETT, Esq.

This is a collection of decisions on points of interest to the profession, valuable for the learning displayed and relieved from the dullness of ordinary legal disquisitions by flashes of the author's characteristic wit and humour. It has proved very popular in the country and is now offered to the gentlemen of the city bar, and may be had of Horace W. Smith, No. 20 South Sixth street.

PICKWICK.

T. B. PETERSON & Co., PHILADELPHIA.

The Duodecimo Edition of Dickens' Work of which the two first volumes, containing the whole of "Pickwick" are before us is all that the most fastidious bibliophile can desire. The illustrations are very superior and add to the pleasure which the perusal of the works of this author always afford.

Supreme Court.

Opinions by Woodward, J.

GEO. C. CARSON and CHARLES NEWBOLD, Trading as Carson & Newbold, v. Jesse Godley.

Error to Nisi Prius, Phila.

In the case of Godley v. Hagerty, 8 H. 387, we held the present defendant responsible for an injury occurring at the same time and resulting from the same causes as that of which the plaintiffs in this action complain. It was shown in that case, as in this, that Mr. Godley had rented his building, in Granite street, to the Government of the United States for a public warehouse, and that the agents of the government were engaged in storing sugars when it fell down, killing two men, breaking the arm of Hagerty and damaging the goods of the present plaintiffs.

In two particulars only, this case differs from Hagerty's. The plaintiffs here were importing merchants and the injury was to their goods.—Hagerty was a common laborer in the service of the government and his injury was personal. But these diversities make no difference in the principles of law, applicable to the two cases. If, as was urged in the argument, the government was bound to provide safe storage for the plaintiffs' goods, whilst they were held in bond, it was equally due to Hagerty that he should not be set to work in an unsafe store house to the peril of life and limb. If, therefore, the present plaintiffs, by reason of their relation to the government, were entitled to seek redress in that quarter so was Hagerty. As the employee of the government, his relations were quite as direct and intimate with the public authorities—his privacy quite as close—as any which the plaintiffs sustained, whilst the character of his injury gave him a superior right to compensation. Nor did we decide that the government was not liable to Hagerty; we decided only that Godley was.

Counsel do not, therefore, distinguish this case from Hagerty's when they prove that these plaintiffs might have sought redress from the government. Let it be granted that they might, does it follow that Godley is not liable to them? By no means. An injured party is often entitled to redress against more than one wrong doer, and it is never an objection to his action that he has passed by the intermediate agents of the mischief and charged the responsibility home, upon the author of the evil.

This case, then, incapable of being distinguished, in principle, from Hagerty's, ought to be considered as ruled by it. All the material facts were identical in the two cases. Judge Bell, not more distinguished for his learning than for the care and ability with which he tried causes at Nisi Prius, stated the principles on which the former case rested, and his judgment after a severe professional criticism, and full consideration in this Court, received our deliberate and unanimous sanction. And in the three years that have elapsed since that decision was pronounced, we have seen no occasion to question its principles, but experience and observation have tended rather to confirm them. Such is the eagerness of capitalists for large rewards that when they undertake to build, for the profits of rents, the temptation is strong to cheapen and slight the work. The safety of life and property is lost sight of, in the dazzling prospect of a large rent from a small outlay. Foundations are put down and walls run up in such haste and with such materials as to be wholly inadequate for the purposes designed; the defects all the more pernicious and unpardonable, because concealed, and now and then the community are appealed by some shocking catastrophe, involving loss of lives and limbs, and property. The cupidity which is at the bottom of the mischief, true to nothing but its own interest, will of course seek to charge the consequences of its folly on the tenant, as if, because he was deceived, the original guilt was cancelled. Where the tenant has been guilty of negligent or improper use of the building he is undoubtedly liable to parties injured by its fall, and even where there has been no negligence on his part we do not say he is exempt, for that case has not yet occurred; but where, as in the case before us, it is found, on abundant proof, that there was no negligence either in the tenant or the plaintiff, it is a salutary rule of law that holds the owner answerable for his gross neglect in constructing and renting an insecure building.—We have no thoughts of relaxing or qualifying a rule so obviously just and politic, but if we had, we would hardly do it in a case involving the very same circumstances to which we so recently applied it.

It may be proper, however, on account of the vehemence with which the rule is assailed, to examine its foundations a little more minutely than was done in the former case, to see if it be not well grounded in accepted principles and authorities of law.

The lease, in this case, contained no express covenant or condition that the building was of any particular capacity or quality, and none is to be implied. The government took it for what it is called in the lease, a "five story store, and the only covenant which is to be implied is that for quiet enjoyment. There was a while that the English Courts acted on the principle that it was an implied condition of every lease that the property was reasonably fit for the purpose for which it was let. As that a dwelling house was in such decent repair as to be fit for habitation, 4 Cor. and Payne, 65—that its walls were safe—21 Eng. C. L., 435, that the premises should not become untenanted by the bursting of a privy, 9 Car. and Payne, 328,—that the house was not infested with bugs, 11, M. and W. 5; but they have receded from all this, and hold now that in a demise of land there is no implied obligation on the part of the lessor that it shall be fit for the purpose for which it was taken.—Sutton v. Temple, 12 M. and W. 62; nor in a lease of a house, that it was at the time of the demise, or should be at the commencement of the term, in a reasonably fit state and condition for habitation.

In the case of Arden v. Pullan, 10 M. and W., the house became uninhabitable and utterly useless to the tenant by reason of original defects in the foundations, and it was held that the tenant could not, in consequence thereof, throw up the house and refuse to pay rent. "The tenant ought," said Baron Alderson, "to examine the house before he takes it."

If the present action rested on the ground of contract, express or implied, it could not be sustained. Counsel argued with great propriety that if an implied warranty of the quality of a house could be deduced from a lease of it for a term, it would arise likewise from a conveyance of the fee and run with the land, which would restrain alienation. Some torts result from contracts, but that for which this action was brought has no such foundation. Its root is in the malfeasance of the defendant, in the misuse of that which is his own; not in the breach of any condition express or implied. It is apparent, therefore, that the English cases adverted to, all of which proceed on contract, do not touch the ground assumed in Hagerty's case and the present.

The underlying principle of this case is found in that great maxim of the common law, sic utere tuo ut alienum non laedas. This is a principle of universal obligation and it attended Mr. Godley when he undertook to cover his lot, in Granite street, with store houses for the use of tenants. The application of this principle is illustrated by innumerable cases in the books. Setting aside all those that relate to mere personal rights and chattel interests, I select a few to show how it applies to an owner of real estate. And here again is a large class of cases, such as grow out of obstructions of private ways, diversions of water courses and common nuisances that may be omitted. But there is a class of cases in which the owner of real estate has been held liable in damages for that which it was perfectly lawful for him to do on his own premises, but which, done without that skill and prudence which he was bound to employ, has worked injury to another. Thus in Vaughn v. Menlove, 7 Car. and P., 525, the plaintiff brought case to recover damages for the loss of two cottages, burnt down by the spontaneous combustion of defendant's hayrick, defectively erected on his own land. Patterson, J., directed the jury to inquire whether defendant had acted as a man of ordinary skill and prudence would have acted, or whether, through his negligence and carelessness the plaintiff's property had been consumed. It was not enough, he said, that the defendant acted bona fide according to the best of his own individual judgment—a doctrine which the whole Court said, in affirming the judgment, would utterly preclude any certain and intelligible rule on the subject.

In exact agreement with this case Judge Knox, on the trial of the case under consideration, first directed the attention of the jury to the question, whether the defendant caused his building to be constructed in a proper manner and with good materials and by competent workmen. These things it was most clearly his duty to do, as a man of ordinary prudence, and these things the jury have found he did not do. No matter how sincere the self confidence that prompted him to superintend the work himself, and save the expense of a master builder, and to use imperfect and unfit materials, the bona fides, even optima fides could not relieve him from the clear legal duty that was on him to act in a "proper manner and with good materials and competent workmen."

But to proceed with the authorities, Tuberville v. Stampe, 1 Salkeld 13, (S. C. Ld. Raymond, 264) was an action on the case for negligently keeping fire by the defendant in clauso suo, whereby a neighbor's corn was burnt. After verdict for the plaintiff it was objected that by the custom of the realm liability for fires extended only to those in the house or curtilage which were under the power of the owner, but said the Court, the fire in his field is his fire as well as that in his house; he made it, and he must see it does no harm, and answer the damage if it does.

To the same effect in the case of Barnard v. Poor, 21 Pick. 378, which was a recovery also for damage from fire kindled on the defendant's own land.

In Russell v. Prior, 1 Salk. 460, a tenant, for years, erected a wall which darkened the ancient windows of a neighbor and then made an under lease to J. S. The party injured brought suit for the nuisance and recovered damages, and then brought this suit for the continuance.—Both actions were against the first tenant, the lessor in the last lease, and the question was, whether, after recovery for the erection, an action would lie against him for the continuance after he had leased to another,—et per Cur. "It lies, for he transferred it with the original wrong, and his demise affirms the continuance of it: he hath also rent as a consideration for the continuance, and therefore ought to answer the damage it occasions."

That a party for whose benefit work has been negligently done is answerable for consequences, was strikingly illustrated in the case of Bush v. Steinman, 1 Bu. and P., 403. The defendant had purchased a dilapidated house by the way side which he had never occupied. He contracted with the surveyor of buildings to repair it. The surveyor contracted with a carpenter to do the whole labor and to furnish all materials. The carpenter employed a bricklayer under him, and he again contracted for a quantity of lime with a lime burner, by whose servant the lime was deposited in the road in front of the defendant's house. The plaintiff and his wife passing in a chaise were upset and injured by reason of the lime in the highway. On great consideration the defendant was held liable not on the ground that the relation of master and servant existed between him and all of the employees, but because he was the owner of the premises for whose benefit the nuisance was created, and having suffered it to remain in front of his building and between it and the middle of the highway to which his premises presumptively extended, he was answerable for it.

So, in Randleston v. Murray, 8 Adol. and Ellis, 109, a warehouseman at Liverpool employed a master porter to remove barrels from his warehouse. The master porter employed his own men and tackle, and through the negligence of the men he tackle failed and a barrel fell and injured the plaintiff—held that the warehouseman was liable in case for the injury.

In Stine v. Cartwright, 6 Term. R. Lord Kenyon, in ruling that a mere steward of an owner of real estate is not responsible for the acts of the men employed by him, for the owner said, "in all these cases I have ever understood that the action must either be brought against the hand committing the injury or against the owner for whom the act was done."

In the case of the mayor, &c., of the city of New York v. Bailey, 2 Denio, 433, we have the principle distinctly asserted and vindicated very much at large that the owner of real estate is responsible for the negligence of those appointed by public authority to make erections on it for the owner's benefit. The city of New York owned the Croton dam which had been erected to supply the city with water. An unusually high flood in the river swept the dam away, to the injury of the plaintiff a riparian owner below. He sued the city and showed that the dam had been defectively constructed. The answer was, that the dam had been erected under the supervision and by the water commissioners, who were public officers appointed by the Governor and Senate, and over whom the city had no control, but on the ground that they acted at the instance and for the benefit of the corporation, the city was held liable.

In Spencer v. Campbell, 9 W. and S., 32, this Court held the owners of a steam grist mill liable for a customer's horse, killed by the bursting of a boiler.

Authorities and analogies might be multiplied, but these are sufficient to show that when we apply the principle sic utere tuo, to this defendant in the circumstances of his case we inaugurate no novelty.

He knew, for he had been expressly told that if he leased his store house to the government it would be used for heavy storage. He leased it to the government without any stipulation against heavy storage. The learned judge was in no error then in saying, not by way of construing the lease, but as matter of fact, that if the evidence was believed, the building was leased for heavy storage, and the conclusion of law was a necessary one, that it might legally be used as such. But before it was heavily stored it fell down through inherent defects. Had it fallen before it was used at all—had the superstructure been so defective as to be unable to sustain itself—it would have been indictable as a common nuisance, and nobody doubts that the owner, at whose instance it was erected, would have been answerable to the individuals for the damage occasioned; but the wrong consisted not in erecting walls incapable of standing alone, but in building and renting the store for a specific purpose for which it was unfit and unsafe. In itself it may not have been a common nuisance, but the maxim sic utere is not limited to common nuisances. The cases cited, and many more that might be cited, show that it has a much more extensive application, for in all civil acts the law does not so much regard the intent of the actor as the loss and damage of the party suffering. In trespass, q. c. f., the defendant pleaded that he had land adjoining the plaintiff's close, and upon it a hedge of thorns; that he cut the thorns and that they, ipso invito, fell upon the plaintiff's land and the defendant took them off as soon as he could. On demurrer judgment was given for the plaintiff, on the ground that though a man do a lawful thing, yet, if any damage thereby befalls another, he shall be answerable if he could have avoided it; Broom's Legal Maxims, 161.—Be it then that the store was a lawful structure, the defendant so used it as to hurt the plaintiff in his property, and this was to violate a fundamental maxim of the law. With his eyes wide open to the fact that government would use his store house for heavy storage, he left them there, knowing that it was unfit for such use and he inserted no word of caution or restraint in the lease. As was said in Hagerty's case, "if, after the building was finished, he knew there were defects in it which unfitted it for the designated purpose, he should have stipulated in the lease against its being used for heavy storage. He omitted his duty in both respects—he did not build a strong store house—and he did not forbid heavy storage." Tempted by a large rent he permitted his building to be subjected to burdens too heavy for it to bear, though lighter than the tenant had the right to impose, and herein is the ground of his liability. We go not one inch beyond the case before us. We say not that he would be liable if he had sold the building and parted with all control over it, or if he had employed master builders and the best of materials, or if he had stipulated for a use proportioned to its strength, but we pronounce him liable in the precise circumstances of the case. It is not our office to decide possible and hypothetical, but actual cases, such as are made to hand. And, taking this case just as it is presented in the record, we conceive there is a clear legal liability, which considerations of public policy and private right demand, should be enforced against the defendant.

The answers of the Court to the several points submitted, on the part of the defendant, were quite as favorable as in view of the general principles we have discussed he had any right to expect.

If the evidence of the fall of other stores built by the defendant in the same row, had been offered to establish his reputation or that of his mechanics, as builders, it would have been incompetent on the principle of Waugh v. Shunk, 8 H., 130, but offered as it was to bring home notice to him of the insufficiency and unsafety of the kind of building he was about to erect it was competent proof. It took away all pretence of mistake, and showed a reckless perseverance in wrong doing, which, if the law cannot prevent, it will punish.

There is nothing in the other bills of exception to evidence that merits discussion.

The judgment is affirmed.

APPEAL by ALEXANDER SAMES, Administrator of HENRY SAMES, decd.

Error to Common Pleas of Bucks Co.

The Act of 26th March, 1827, provides that no judgment shall continue a lien for more than five years from the date of its entry unless revived within that period by agreement of the parties and terre tenants, filed in writing and entered on the proper docket, or a writ of scire facias to revive the same be sued out within said period according to the provisions of the Act to which this is a supplement.

In laying down a general rule, we must understand the legislature as using terms in a general sense. Parties to a judgment are those whose names appear upon the record as Plaintiff and Defendant.

Terre tenants are those in whom title to any land bound by the judgment has vested since its lien attached. To affect the respective interests both of the parties and terre tenants by an amicable revival, the legislature meant that both should join in the agreement, but they could never have meant that the agreement of the terre tenant should be necessary to bind the interest of the defendant, though a rigid construction of their language would import this.

Did they mean that the agreement of the defendant should be indispensable to bind the interest of the terre tenant? This is the precise question, now for the first time presented for decision.

Sticking to the letter of the enactment, it would be easy to give this question an affirmative answer, but then the same rule of construction would require us to say, that where a judgment debtor had alienated part of his land bound by the judgment, an amicable revival would not continue the lien as to the rest, unless the terre tenant joined in it, which would be grossly absurd. But if we construe the statute according to its spirit and intention, rather than its strict letter, we avoid all absurdities and all injustice. The legislature meant to limit the liens of judgments to five years. To save the costs and delay of a suit to revive a judgment, they provided that it might be revived by the agreement and consent of those in interest. But as the original party whose lands were bound by the judgment may have alienated some or all of them, the agreement of the terre tenant shall be necessary to continue the lien upon such lands, not necessary to revive and continue it as to lands still retained by the debtor party, as by parity of reason, the agreement of the debtor party is not necessary to revive and continue it as to the terre tenants lands, but the agreement of both is necessary to continue the lien as it was when originally entered. The language of the enactment was selected with reference to this latter condition only, and hence the difficulty of adapting it to the other conditions. But giving it a reasonable interpretation we make it effectuate the legislative intention, instead of making the statute release a terre tenant in spite of his agreement to continue bound.

The Act of 1827 which the Act of 1827 was supplementary, provided that the scire facias should be served on the terre tenant, and on the defendant in the judgment where he could be found. Under this act it has been repeatedly decided that it is essential, in order to the continuance of the lien upon land which has been sold and conveyed, that the terre tenant be made a party to the scire facias, but it has never been held that it was necessary to the effect of the lien against the terre tenant, that the defendant should be made a party. On the contrary the terre tenant has been treated as the principal party, and the defendant as but a secondary party, and the provision which required him to be served as directory merely, and not preempory; Lusk v. Davidson, 3 Penna. R. 229. Armstrong's appeal, 5 W. & S. 352. Dickenson Haven's appeal, 7 Barr, 225.

If the defendant be not a necessary party to the scire facias, still less is he necessary to the amicable revival. It cannot be said that he has any interest to guard, for it is obviously his interest that the lien should be thrown upon the terre tenant. Purchasers from the terre tenant or subsequent incumbrancers against him have nothing to complain of, for the record is notice to them that his land is bound by the judgment.

In this case when Hager obtained his judgment against Snyder, the record was notice to him that Sames had a prior judgment against Afferback, which bound Snyder's land as terre tenant. Hager came in as a second incumbrancer. And when within the five years Sames and Snyder joined in an amicable scire facias, and revived the prior lien, what equity had Hager to insist that Afferback should be made a party to it, that the assent of a party having no interest, should be necessary to give effect to the agreement of a party having the whole interest? And Christman who acquired his lien after the revival of Sames, and with full notice of it, what right has he to complain that Afferback was not a party to the revival? If Hager or Christman were the judgment creditors of Afferback, they would have good reason for insisting that his lands were relieved from Sames's lien, but there is no reason or justice in their claim of priority as to Snyder's lands.

The amicable scire facias was very full and explicit in its reference to the record. It described Snyder as the Alienee and terre tenant of Isaac Afferback, it recited the date and amount of the original judgment, and stipulated for a revival of the same, "for another period of five years," and was duly docketed. It thus became notice to the world that the lien which had attached in 1846 to land now owned by Snyder was to continue for five years from the 28th March, 1851, and it is of no moment to any inquiry touching the proceeds of that land, that Afferback was not a party to the revival.

We are of opinion therefore that the Court erred in cutting out Sames's judgment and awarding the money in Court to subsequent incumbrancers.

And now to wit, 1st May, 1856, this cause having been heard and considered, it is ordered and adjudged, that the decrees of distribution made in this case by the Court of Common Pleas of Bucks County be reversed and set aside, and it is here decreed that the money in Court be first appropriated to the payment and satisfaction of the balance due on the judgment in the name of Henry Sames v. Michael F. Snyder, alienee &c., No. 142, Feb. Term, 1851, and that the residue thereof be applied to the judgment of George Hager against the same defendant, and that the costs of this appeal be paid by the said George Hager.

Opinion by Judge Knox.

GEORGE H. CROSSMAN v. THE PENROSE FERRY BRIDGE COMPANY.

This action was brought by the Penrose Ferry Bridge Company, against George H. Crossman, to recover the amount subscribed by the defendant to the Capital stock of the Company plaintiff. Judgment was entered by the District Court for want of a sufficient affidavit of defence to remove, which Judgment this writ of error was taken.

Two errors are assigned. "1st Because Judgment was entered for the plaintiff below, notwithstanding the suggestion filed."

2nd, "Because Judgment was entered for the plaintiff below, notwithstanding the affidavit of defence filed."

We do not understand by the plaintiff in error's paper book that he relies upon the first assignment of error. It is clear that the copies of instrument of writing filed in pursuance to the rule of Court were of such a nature as to require an affidavit of defence, and the only point of inquiry here is as to the sufficiency of the affidavit filed.

We would consider the grounds of defence in the order in which they are stated in the affidavit.

It is alleged that the defendant was induced to make the subscription by the representation of Mr. Serrill, to whom he gave the power of Attorney, and who represented himself as one of the commissioners to procure subscriptions. "That the proposed bridge was to be connected with Broad Street by a plank road, and that he would secure him the deponent, ten shares of stock therein which was said to be profitable and a good investment, and that the cost of the bridge would not exceed nine or ten thousand dollars." It is further alleged that no stock in the plank road has been tendered to the defendant, and the contract price of the bridge was from fourteen to fifteen thousand dollars.

It is unquestionably true, that where one is induced to make a subscription to the Capital Stock of a Company by fraudulent representations, or false statements of an agent of the Company, or commissioners appointed to obtain subscriptions, the contract may be avoided by the subscriber, but a mere promise by the agent, to procure stock for the subscriber in another Company will not have this effect, nor will a mistaken estimate of the probable cost of the improvement.

The affidavit further alleges that the deponent "is informed and believes that an injunction has been issued by the United States Court, restraining the plaintiffs from erecting the proposed bridge across the river Schuylkill, and that the injunction is still pending and in force." A copy of the injunction is furnished us in the plaintiff's paper book from which it appears not to be an injunction founded upon a final hearing, but a temporary or special injunction to continue until the further order of the Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, and what its final result may be cannot now be told.

An interlocutory order made upon a preliminary hearing, even by a Court of competent jurisdiction does not establish that the erection of the proposed bridge would be unlawful, nor that the contract of Subscription to the Company's stock was illegal. But even upon the supposition that the cause will be ultimately decided against the Company, the subscriptions to the Capital stock, for ought that appears upon this record, should be paid, so that the expenses of the controversy as well as the charges necessarily attendant upon the organization of the Company may be borne equally by the Stockholders, and the residue of the Capital stock divided amongst the stockholders.

It is unnecessary to notice the grounds of defence taken in the argument, but not appearing upon the face of the affidavit or upon the Copies of the documents filed by the plaintiff. Judgment affirmed.

COOPER'S APPEAL.

Schuylkill Co.

The case of Doner v. Stauffer, 1 Pa. R. 198, decides that, when partnership effects are simultaneously sold out on executions against the partners severally, neither partner has such an equity in the proceeds as entitles him to insist that they shall be applied to the partnership debts; and, it not appearing that there was any inequality of interest as between the partners, the proceeds were treated as belonging to each of them in equal shares, and distributed accordingly.

In the present case the sale took place in the same form; but the partners, though nominally equal, stand very unequally related to each other; Oliver having invested and advanced $19,082 61, and Beacham, only $1,714 26, beyond what they have severally taken out. This makes it very apparent that we cannot treat the proceeds of the sale of the partnership property as belonging to each partner equally. The interests of the several partners were very different, and the sheriff's sale has left them as they were, without distinguishing them, for both interests were sold jointly, though the writs to the sheriff were several and required sale of the interests severally. It was irregular in him, if it was not a necessary result of the circumstances, to execute his writs so as to join distinct parties and interests in the question of distribution. But it has been done here and we must unravel the interests, so as to do justice, if we can.

The joint sale leaves the interests standing in the proceeds, just as it existed in the property after the levy, and the separation of those interests, required by the writs and usually made by separate sales, must now be made by a joint distribution of the proceeds according to the rights of the partners in them, 17 State R. 271. Creditors at large, whether joint or several, are never regarded in such a case, but only the execution creditors.

After deducting expenses and one partnership execution the proceeds amount to $7,706 68.—Now, since Oliver is over $17,000 in advance of Beacham, it is very apparent that, as between partner and partner, Beacham could claim no part of the money in court, and his separate execution creditors, occupying no higher right, must be set aside. Oliver, as between partner and partner, would be entitled to the whole fund and, therefore, it must go to his separate execution creditors. Such we understand to be intended by the decree below, but as that decree is entirely informal, and very defective in substance, we must reverse it and enter another.

DECREE.

This cause came on for hearing at the last term of this Court at Phila., on the appeal of Wm. Cooper, Joseph Beacham, and Fearons and Smith, from the decree of the Court of Common Pleas of Schuylkill county, making distribution of the proceeds of the sale of property of James C. Oliver and Joseph Beacham, raised on a fi. fa. of C. S. Dickerson v. James C. Oliver, No. 219, Dec. T., 1849, and a fi. fa. of Wm. Cooper v. Joseph Beacham, No. 222, Dec. T., 1849, and also on other writs of fi. fa. against the said Oliver & Beacham severally; and the said cause having been argued by counsel, it is considered that the decree of the said Court of Common Pleas be reversed, so far as relates to the sum of $7,706 68 that remains after deducting expenses, claims of miners, and the fi. fa. of Benjamin Bannan against the said Oliver & Beacham jointly; and it is now here ordered and decreed that the said sum of $7,706 68 be applied in part payment of the fi. fa. of C. S. Dickerson v. James C. Oliver, No. 219, Dec. T., 1849, in the said Court of Common Pleas, and that the appellants pay the costs, and the cause is remanded to the said Court of Common Pleas, with directions to carry this decree into effect.

Opinions by Judge Black.

DEVENNY v. THE COMMONWEALTH.

This was a judgment before an alderman for the amount of a shop tax assessed upon the defendants below according to the statute. They were entitled to an appeal if they would make an affidavit that it was not taken for delay. The affidavit was not made and the court on motion struck off the appeal. We think it was right. Our construction of the act is that it makes a previous affidavit the condition on which the right of appeal depends. We do not see the analogy of this case to Means v. Trout (16 S. & R. 349) or Louderback v. Boyd, (1 Ashm. 380) near so plainly as the counsel for the plaintiff in error. Judgment affirmed.

VANLEER v. EARLE.

The plaintiff below bought a horse from the defendant, with an express warranty that he was sound and kind in harness. The jury found the warranty to be broken, and gave damages according to the plaintiff's loss. On the law so far as it applies to the merits of the case, there is no dispute. The only question raised here is a technical one. The declaration is in tort, and avers, that the defendant induced the plaintiff to buy the horse by falsely and fraudulently warranting &c. This mode of declaring in case upon a warranty was almost the exclusive practice. In later times it has been superseded to a great extent by the assumpsit form. But it is not obsolete. The precedent maintains its place in the books on pleading; 2 Chitty 139, it is used frequently, 1 How. Miss 228. 5 Turn. 496, Doug. 19, and has its advocates as being the better and safer mode, 6 Johns. 138. No matter which form of the declaration be chosen, the plaintiff may recover on an express warranty without either alleging or proving the knowledge of the defendant that it was false. A scienter need only be shewn when the action is for deceit.

Judgment affirmed.

ROSENBERGER'S APPEAL.

It is not material whether William Rosenberger was a competent witness or not; with or without his testimony, the decree of the court is correct. The Accountants complain that his testimony was rejected by the Auditor; but as it was very properly taken down and reported by that officer, we are enabled to see that it did not make the case of the Accountants any better. It shows that "the partnership between him and the Executors existed immediately after the property was struck down to him, before conveyance, or payment of any of the purchase money, and whilst their relation to the property as trustees still continued." During this time, the executors could not be permitted to acquire an interest in opposition to that of the cestui que trusts. Any profit which they might make belongs to the parties beneficially interested in the trust. Their equity is superior not only to the trustees, but to William Rosenberger, who had full notice of the trust.

The acceptance of part of the proceeds of sale, under the circumstances stated, does not estop the parties entitled from claiming the residue. Such an act might bind them not to disturb the title of a purchaser, but surely the payment of part of what the executors owed, is no reason why they should not pay the residue.

We see no error in the proceedings.

JOHN ANGUE'S ESTATE.

Orphans' Court. Exceptions to Auditor's Report.

The executors were directed by the will of the testator to place the rest and residue of his estate out, and to continue the same at interest "on good mortgage security, or invest the same in the purchase of public stocks or securities, producing an interest or dividend as they, in their discretion, may see fit." In the year 1837, they invested in the stock of the Bank of the United States.

Admitting all that is alleged in favor of the good faith of the executors, in making the investment, and the fact that, for a period thereafter, the bank continued to pay good dividends, we cannot agree that the investment was justified under the terms of the will. The stock of that institution was not a public stock, nor was it such a security as the law recognizes for investments; although the executors had a discretion in the choice of the investments they cannot avoid responsibility by investing in the stock of a corporation, whose business is "essentially hazardous." We do not perceive how this can be distinguished from Hemphill's appeal, 6 Harris, 303. In that case the investment was made in the same year, 1837, in the same stock and under the terms of a will which required only "good security," but the executors were held responsible for the loss upon the investment. The auditor we think has taken a correct view of the subject, and for the reasons given by him in addition to the foregoing, we sustain his report and dismiss the exception.

Exception dismissed and report confirmed.

JOSEPH LEVY'S ESTATE.

Orphans' Court. Sur Petition and Answer.

The discretion vested in the executor by the terms of the will, relates to the manner in which the income shall be applied to maintain the cestui que trusts. It is not a question whether the income shall be so applied—Stephens v. Laurey, 2y & c. 89. The will directs that the grandchildren are to have the income during their lives. If the income is adequate for their support, it is not within the discretion of the executor, to oblige the cestui que trusts, to labor for a livelihood, in order that a fund in his hands may accumulate for their future benefit. This question the testator has disposed of by declaring that they are to have the income during their lives. The accumulations gained by the proposed savings they may not live to enjoy and others would be the gainers by their toil. Where the parties are entitled to the income, have arrived at age or nearly so, it would be an unreasonable exercise of authority to deprive them of the bounty of the testator, where there is no reason to suppose that it would be mispent.

The prayer of the petition is therefore granted and the trustee ordered to pay over the income, arising from the said property, to the use of the petitioners.

SELF-CLEANING FURNACE.
Boytton's Patent.

Having put up a large number of these Furnaces, both in public and private buildings, (including 24 put up at the Philadelphia County Prison, in place of the 44 torn out.) and tested them during the cold weather of 1855, and 1856, being the coldest weather we have had for twenty or thirty years. They have given the most universal satisfaction, and those having them in use were perfectly delighted with the abundance of warm, pleasant air, and abundant ventilation afforded thereby, while so many were suffering from cold, and troubled with the deficiencies of their heating apparatus.

We take great pleasure, therefore, in recommending them to the notice of the public, and would call their attention particularly to an examination of the greatly increased amount of effective radiating surface, their perfect solidity and durability, the improved manner of making the joints, entirely preventing any escape of gases, and the manner of distributing the fire, so as to cause it to impinge directly against the large amount of surface, without the objectionable and unnatural method of forcing the current downwards.

We have also a full assortment of HAYES' PATENT TUBULAR OVEN RANGES, now universally used, and favorably known. Also, HAYES' PATENT VENTILLATORS, &c., &c., all of which will be put up in the very best manner, and by the most skillful workmen, constantly engaged for that purpose, by

GREAT FIRE, MAY 1, 1856.
HERRING'S PATENT CHAMPION SAFES!
What the People Say!

PHILADELPHIA, 2d May, 1856.
GENTLEMEN—The Herring's Patent Champion Fire-proof Safe, which we purchased of you in the month of January last, was situated in our Counting-Room, in the second story of 231 Market street, on the night of the Great Fire, 1st May, 1856, and fell with the burning building in that conflagration.

The Safe was reached this afternoon, after an exposure of THIRTY-SIX HOURS to intense heat, and although the brass plates on the front of the Safe were melted, and the exterior shows the evidence of extreme heat, the inside casing was found to be UNTOUCHED BY FIRE, and with the exception of being a little steamed is now as good as new.

GENTLEMEN—The Herring's Patent Champion Fire-proof Safe, of your manufacture, which we purchased nearly a year since, was in the centre of our building at the time of its destruction in the Great Fire of May 1, 1856.

We had removed the greater portion of our Books before the fire reached us, but left some of them, together with a number of loose papers, inside, purposely to test the security of the safe. After thirty-eight hours of severe casting, we found the interior of the Safe, upon opening, not only bright and sound, but the Books and papers as free from fire as when first put in.

We shall require another Safe as soon as we get a new location, and want none but your "Champion."
Yours, &c.,
FISHER & BROTHER,
No. 15 North Sixth street.

The public will bear in mind that the "HERRING'S PATENT" is the only Safe made in this City, which has never failed to preserve its contents in accidental fires. The TWO SAFES from the above Great Fire can now be seen in front of the OLD STAND, No. 34 WALNUT STREET.

A. W. RAND'S SELF-CLEANING FURNACE. Boynton's Patent.

Having put up a large number of these Furnaces, both in public and private buildings, (including 24 put up at the Philadelphia County Prison, in place of the 44 torn out,) and tested them during the cold weather of 1855, and 1856, being the coldest weather we have had for twenty or thirty years. They have given the most universal satisfaction, and those having them in use were perfectly delighted with the abundance of warm, pleasant air, and abundant ventilation afforded thereby, while so many were suffering from cold, and troubled with the deficiencies of their heating apparatus.

We take great pleasure, therefore, in recommending them to the notice of the public, and would call their attention particularly to an examination of the greatly increased amount of effective radiating surface, their perfect solidity and durability, the improved manner of making the joints, entirely preventing any escape of gases, and the manner of distributing the fire, so as to cause it to impinge directly against the large amount of surface, without the objectionable and unnatural method of forcing the current downwards.

We have also a full assortment of HAYES' PATENT TUBULAR OVEN RANGES, now so universally used, and favorably known. Also, HAYES' PATENT VENTILATORS, &c., &c., all of which will be put up in the very best manner, and by the most skillful workmen, constantly engaged for that purpose, by

In 1745 Five Armed French Vessels were sunk off Cape Breton. Some enterprising Yankees have lately succeeded in recovering a portion of the wreck, amounting in dollars and cents to about $3000. Further explorations are contemplated, and the enterprising party anticipate a fortune. ## BLACKSTONE'S COMMENTARIES.

COMMENTARIES

ON THE

LAWS OF ENGLAND,

IN FOUR BOOKS.

BY

SIR WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, Knt.

ONE OF THE JUSTICES OF THE COURT OF COMMON PLEAS. WITH THE LAST CORRECTIONS OF THE AUTHOR, AND NOTES.

From the Twenty-first London Edition. With copious

NOTES,

Explaining the Changes in the Law effected by Decision or Statute, down to 1844. Together with Notes adapting the Work to the American Student. By

JOHN L. WENDELL,

LATE REPORTER OF THE SUPREME COURT.

Four Octavo Volumes, bound in fine Law Sheep, Price $7 00.

The Twenty-first Edition of "Blackstone's Commentaries" was prepared by intrusting each one of the four great departments of jurisprudence, treated of by Sir WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, to a separate Editor, whose professional studies had made him peculiarly conversant with that particular branch of learning, to wit:

Vol. I. To J. F. HARGRAVE, of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister at Law.

Vol. II. To G. SWIFT, of the Inner Temple, Barrister at Law.

Vol. III. To R. COUCH, of the Middle Temple, Barrister at Law.

Vol. IV. To W. N. WELSLY, Recorder of Chester.

Into the hands of these gentlemen were put all the Editions of Blackstone then extant in England, with directions to avail themselves of such notes of former editors as they should approve, (among those editions was that of Mr. CHITTY.) Under those circumstances, and by this division of labor, was produced a work highly beneficial to the student, and greatly facilitating the researches of counsel.

The notes of the American Editor were to show the Common Law as it exists in this country under our institutions, particularly in the State of New York, and more especially as effected by the Revised Statutes of that State, and to point out the diversities of the Common Law as held in England and in this country in the few instances in which a difference exists.

This edition is the most accurate and useful which has appeared.—London Times.

Incomparably the best edition that has ever been published.—Literary World.

We do not hesitate to endorse the emphatic approval which the edition has received in England, and pronounce it the best that has ever appeared.—Law Reporter.

There can be no question, that this edition of the Commentaries is destined to supersede all others.—Courier.

These notes are of the greatest value, and add ten-fold to the work, so far as the American student is concerned.—Albany Argus.

The Bank of Cash Credits.

Application will be made to the Legislature of Pennsylvania, for the Charter of a Bank Issue with general banking privileges, with a capital of ONE MILLION OF DOLLARS. Said Bank to be located in the City of Philadelphia, to be called the "Robert Morris Bank," and to be conducted upon the system of cash credits only, as is herewith indicated.

A cash credit is a credit given to an individual by a Banking Company, for a limited sum, seldom under $500, or $1000, upon his own security and that of two or three individuals, approved by the Bank, who become sureties for its payment. The individual who has obtained such a credit, is enabled to draw the whole sum, or any part of it, when he pleases; replacing it, or portions of it, according as he finds it convenient; interest being charged upon such part only as he draws out.

"If a man borrows $1000, from a private hand, and even then it is not always to be found when required, he pays interest for it, whether he is using it or not. His bank credit costs him nothing, except during the moment it is of service to him, and this circumstance is of equal advantage as if he had borrowed money at a much lower rate of interest."

Cash credits are not, however, intended to be a dead load; the main objects of the Banks in granting them is to get their notes circulated, and they do not grant them except to persons in business, or to those who are frequently drawing out and paying in money.

Any person who applies to a bank for a cash credit, is called upon to produce sureties, and, after a full inquiry into the character of the applicant, the nature of his business, and the sufficiency of his securities, he is allowed to open a credit, and to draw upon the Bank for the whole of its amount, or for such part as his daily transaction may require. To the credit of the account, he pays in such sums as he may not have occasion to use, and interest is charged or credited upon the balance, as the case may be. From the facility which these cash credits give to all the small transactions of the country, and from the opportunities which they afford to persons who begin business with little or no capital but their character, to employ profitably the minutest products of their industry, it cannot be doubted that the most important advantages are derived in the whole community.

Such privileges and immunities as the "Metropolitan Bank of New York" exercises, will be applied for.

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND.

INTEREST FIVE PER CENT, PER ANNUM.

ALL SUMS OF MONEY RETURNED ON DEMAND.

OFFICE, NEXT DOOR TO THE POST OFFICE;

No. 83 Dock Street,

PHILADELPHIA, 1854.

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND, No. 83 DOCK Street, next door to THIRD Street, and adjoining the POST OFFICE, receives MONEY on deposit daily, from 9 in the morning until 3 in the afternoon; also Monday evenings, from 7 to 9 o'clock. Interest is allowed on deposits at the rate of FIVE PER CENT per annum. Deposits will be returned in whole, or in part, on demand, without notice.

The popularity of this Office with all classes of the community, both in town and country, and its consequent success, may be ascribed, in part, to the following substantial reasons:

1st. It offers a convenient, responsible, and profitable Depository to Executors, Administrators, Assignees, Collectors, Agents, and all public officers—to Attorneys, Trustees, Societies and Associations, whether incorporated or otherwise—to married or single ladies—to Students, Merchants, Clerks, and business men generally—to Mechanics, Farmers, Minors of either sex, and all who have funds, much or little, to deposit, where they may be had at any time, with Five Per Cent interest added.

2d. Depositors receive Books, with an abstract of the By-laws and regulations, in which is entered their deposits, which Books serve as vouchers. They may designate in case of sickness, death, or absence, who shall receive their deposits, without the intervention of Executors or Administrators. Any one or more persons may deposit in his, her, or their name, or for any other person or persons.

3d. A Report is made each year to the Legislature and Councils of the City.

4th. The Officers are sworn before they enter upon their duties, in addition to giving Bonds with sureties.

5th. The State Savings Fund is a Real Savings Fund—not an Insurance and Trust Company. The Charter of this Institution avoids the Insurance business.

6th. Deposits may be withdrawn by checks after the manner customary with Banks. Check Books will be furnished to depositors without charge.

Hail! honored age of grand progression, While each one clings to his profession, And science moves with onward motion, To suit each wayward thought and notion, Bringing to light some new invention, More strange than modern wit can mention, Or Genius paint with true endeavor, Though making graphic strides forever, While Reason urges proud Ambition, To strive for wondrous Competition; Yet, in this age of glorious Art, We can the meed of praise impart, When meritorious efforts claim A modest puff to gild the name: And thus we call, with honest pride, Attention to the Painter's side,— A man who bravely knows his calling, Whose works are worthy of extolling, A model Artist of the day, And most obliging in his way, GEORGE H. From Hon. J. B. Gibson, Chief Justice.—I have examined the first volume of Mr. Alden's Condensed Reports, and think the work will be a valuable one, especially to the younger members of the bar, who cannot, at first afford to purchase the series of our reports, already between seventy and eighty volumes. HARRIS' REPORTS OF THE SUPREME COURT OF PENNSYLVANIA. Vol. XII. By George W. Harris.

KAY & BROTHER beg leave to announce that they have become the sole publishers of Harris' Reports, of which eleven volumes have been already issued. They have just published the twelfth and last volume of the series, which fills up the interval between Harris' and Casey's Reports, which they also publish. This volume contains the cases decided in part of May Term, 1855; in October Terms, 1856, and part of January Term, 1856. It will be the joint endeavor of the Reporter and Publisher to issue the respective volumes as speedily as possible, after the determination of the cases which each volume will contain, and thus to remove a serious ground of complaint on the part of the bar. Subscribers wanted for a single volume or the entire series.

BRIGHTLY'S PURDON'S ANNUAL DIGEST, FOR THE YEARS 1854, 1855, and 1856—on the plan and in continuation of Stroud & Brightly's Purdon, 1700 to 1853. PREPARING FOR PUBLICATION.

Spencer Miller, Esquire, Counsellor at Law and Professor of the law of Real Estate, Conveyancing and Equity Jurisprudence in the Law Department of the University of Pennsylvania. The Statutes and Decisions, since 1839, (when the first edition was published) have so radically affected this branch of the law, that an entirely new arrangement has been adopted, and a much larger volume will be required than that originally published. The editor and publishers will make every effort to present to the Bar a treatise which will exhaust the law upon this subject, as far as it has been announced, and which will be found practically useful to the profession. It will contain Precedents of Forms carefully prepared, with a view to the latest aspects of the law; and also, all the acts of Assembly relating to the subject. The table of cases and index will be elaborate and exhaustive.

China and Glass Painting executed in a superior manner, and warranted not to CRACK. Ceilings cleaned and whitened, and made equal to new, at a cost little over that of whitewash. The subscriber would state here that it frequently occurs that persons attempt to use this article who have no knowledge of it whatever, either in the mixing or putting it on, and the consequence is, the job is spoiled, and the article condemned without a proper trial.—So also with CHINA GLOSS; to make a good job it requires a practical knowledge of the use of the brush, as also the making of the Gloss. In regard to the ZINC WHITE, the subscriber would most respectfully recommend it as an article far superior to any other paint now in use, for whiteness and durability of color.

The Subscriber would respectfully solicit a portion of the patronage of those getting Painting done. Feeling grateful for the many favors already bestowed by his friends, he still hopes to share their patronage by unremitting attention to their calls. The Fullest, the Latest, and the Best REPORTS OF THE COMMON LAW COURTS OF ENGLAND.

Containing the cases decided in the Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Nisi Prius Courts, from 1813 to 1855, and in the Court of Exchequer and Exchequer Chamber, from 1824 to 1855, are found in

The Regular and Authoritative Series of the English Common Law and English Exchequer Reports,

Which present the following claims to the support of the profession:

1. They are the only series issued as the authoritative and acknowledged medium by which the decisions of the Law Courts of England are made public.

2. They contain Later Reports than the Boston series, are more fully and more ably reported, and so arranged by preservation of the original paging, that reference by reporters, or by elementary writers, can be traced as readily as in the English editions.

Vol. 2, Ellis & Blackburne's (75 E. C. L. R.) Reports (Q. B.) to January, 1854, was published by us in June, 1854. At that time the last Queen's Bench case printed in the Boston Law and Equity Reports, was of June 25, 1853. Our volume contained cases decided five months later. The Queen's Bench cases to November 25, 1853, were published in the Boston series in August, 1854, two months after we had distributed the same cases.

Vol. 3, Ellis & Blackburne, (77 E. C. L. R., with cases to the end of Trinity Term, 1854, was published when the latest case of Queen's Bench decisions in the Boston series, was of February 8, 1854, more than four months behind the regular reporters.

Exchequer Reports, vol. 9, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) distributed by us January 11, 1855, contains cases to May 10, 1854. The last Exchequer case then in the Boston series was decided February 9, 1854, four months behind the regular Reporter, issued in Philadelphia.

3. They contain more cases decided by the courts represented, than any other series issued in this country.

Vol. 77 English Common Law, (3 E. & B.,) reports eighty-six cases decided in the Queen's Bench since January 11, 1854, while but fifty-eight Queen's Bench cases, decided since January 1, 1854, are found scattered among Vols. 22, 24 and 25 of the Boston Law and Equity.

Vol. 78 E. C. L. K. (5 J. Scott,) reports sixty-five cases decided since Nov. 13, 1853, in the Common Pleas, while the L. & E. has but fifty-seven cases in that Court since the same period.

Vol. 9 Exchequer Reports, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) reports one hundred and ten cases in the Courts of Exchequer, decided since June 24, 1853, while since the same date, the L. & E. report but 107 cases, scattered through vols. 20, 22, 24 and 25.

4. They are almost exclusively cited in argument of counsel, and referred to by Elementary Writers for Law Authorities. See Smith's Leading Cases, Smith's Contracts, Smith's Landlord and Tenant, by Maude; Byles on Bills and Promissory Notes, Broom's Legal Maxims, Broom's Commentaries on the Laws of England, or almost any recent Law Book issued in England.

5. The Philadelphia Reports are edited by Judge Sharswood and by Judge Hare, whose labors as editors and authors have made them so well and so favorably known to the profession.

6. The Boston Law and Equity is made up in this country from the Law Journal, Jurist, Times and other Law periodicals, of a weekly, monthly, or quarterly character, and being unknown in England, is never cited in Court, or referred to by Law writers. The periodicals from which it is extracted, are occasionally cited under their own particular names, but they do not possess that permanent value, even in England, which is all-important in a series of Reports.

A carefully prepared and accurate Annual Digest of all the cases decided by the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Exchequer, will be distributed, early in each year, to subscribers to either series, free of charge. That for 1854 is ready, and will be mailed to subscribers who have not received a copy.

Supreme Court.

Opinion by Lewis, Ch. J.

STYER'S APPEAL.

The particular clause in the will of David Styer, deceased, on which the present question depends, has already received the construction of this Court. In Styer v. Freas, 3 Harris, 342, it was expressly decided that "the daughter being dead, not only the words of the power but the intent of the testator were fulfilled" by Elizabeth Styer, the widow, "joining in the deed." In Styer's Appeal, 9 Harris 89, when the same will was before this Court, although this particular question was not then in a condition to be adjudicated, it was held that "the life estate of the widow increased the amount of the consideration received, to the extent of its value;" and that the conversion of the estate into money is not necessarily a transfer of the life estate to the remainder-men." That the power to sell has been executed according to the words and intent of the testator, has been adjudicated in the case first cited. And nothing has been shown, on the present argument, to impair the force of the remarks made in the case last referred to. If the power to sell has been well executed, and if the widow's life estate has swelled the consideration money received, it is manifestly unjust to deprive her of all interest in the proceeds. The extinction of her claim to the land, by the sale, is the test of her right to come upon the proceeds. It is this which establishes the right of a mortgage, or other lien creditor to payment out of the money received; and it is this also which gives the debtor himself, or his vendee a right to the surplus money in the hands of the sheriff after payment of liens. The conversion of an estate into money works no change in the rights of the owners. The proceeds should be paid to the persons having claims upon, or an interest in the estate. The justice of this principle needs no vindication. But it is said that the equity of the widow is lost by her act in depriving the children of Mary Sheets of their right of election to take the land instead of money. That this is not a perfect right is plain because it does not exist until all the parties in interest consent to the measure. Unanimity of action must occur before an actual conversion takes place or the right is gone forever. Miller v. Meetch, 8 Barr, 425. No such unanimity existed before the conversion; therefore the right of election never existed in any one of the claimants. A right which depends upon the will of another is not a perfect right. But if the power was well executed according to the words and intent of the testator how can the widow be punished for the consequences? It is evident, from the terms of the will, that the testator intended she should enjoy the property for the term of her natural life. She has therefore a right to the proceeds for the same period of time.

It is ordered and decreed that the decree of the Orphans' Court of Montgomery County be reversed, and that the sum of $1819.37 (being the interest accrued on the purchased money) be retained by the said Elizabeth Styer in her own right without any condition or security.

It is further ordered and decreed that the sum of $3720.19 (being the residue of the money in court for distribution) be retained by the said Elizabeth Styer, on giving security by bond and mortgage to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in trust for the parties entitled, in the penal sum of $7450, to the satisfaction of the Orphans' Court of Montgomery County, conditioned to be void on the payment of the said sum of $3720.19 to the persons respectively entitled in remainder, according to the will of the late David Styer, deceased whenever the same shall accrue or vest in possession, by the death of the said Elizabeth Styer.

It is further ordered that if the said Elizabeth Styer shall fail to give the security required by this decree, the said accountants shall invest the said sum of money, upon the like security, under the direction of the said Orphans' Court, conditioned for the payment of the annual interest thereof to the said Elizabeth Styer, for and during her natural life, and principal to the persons entitled in remainder as already set forth in this decree.

It is further decreed that the costs be paid by the appellees.

Opinions by Judge Black.

COX, et al. v. WOOLBACK, et al.

On the 20th of July, 1787, a warrant was granted to John Stille, for 400 acres. Under this warrant two surveys were made on the 27th of July, 1788. These surveys were separate apart and distinct from one another. They were no way connected and embraced different land. One contained 400 and the other 414 acres. After the surveys the warrant conveyed the former (that is the 400 hundred acre) tract to William Cox, who took out a patent for it on the 26th of November, 1788. In the course of the next thirty years after the date of the patent, the title changed hands four times by as many different conveyances, and in each of the deeds the tract of 400 acres was described as being held under the warrant. In the next subsequent conveyance which was made in 1831, it is described by its number on a map, and the contents mentioned as 414 acres. In 1844, the Board of Property made an order annulling the patent of 1788, for the 400 acre tract and ordering a new one to issue for the 414 acres comprised within the other survey. It is for the last mentioned tract that this suit is brought. The defendants went into possession as actual settlers in 1821. They have improved and lived upon it without interruption ever since.

Whether the order of the Board of Property annulling one patent and granting another is or is not wholly void as between the Commonwealth and the patentee is a question which needs not now to be decided. We are to determine the rights of third parties whose claim intervened long before any proceeding was had by the Board. Can a warrantee have surveys of two different tracts, accept a patent for one of them, and afterwards take the other away from a settler who has appropriated it in the meantime? Certainly not. There can be but one survey under one warrant. When one is returned and a patent issued thereon, another one whether made before or after and whether returned by the deputy surveyor or not, is utterly void and of non effect. If a warrant holder can have only one survey but has caused two to be made and returned he must make his election between them or run the risk of losing both. That election cannot be made in any way more emphatic than by choosing on which of the two his patent shall issue. After he has done this the land not patented is as much open to a subsequent warrantee or settler as if had never been surveyed at all.

If the claim of the plaintiffs were sustained it would not only violate the general principles already stated but it would violate them in a way calculated to do the worst injustice. They ask us to let them abandon a tract which they have bought and compensate them for it by giving them a different tract which has been paid for by other persons. A patent acquiesced in for fifty-six years is to be nullified and a new one issued to cover an improvement which was twenty-three years old before the settler had any notice actual or constructive that an adverse claim existed. We are of opinion that when the defendants went on the land in dispute, it was vacant to all intents and purposes. The survey on the ground was nothing, for it professed to be made on a warrant which had long before been satisfied by another survey and patent.

It is said that the wrong tract was patented by mere mistake. This is not very probable. The fair presumption is that every man understands what he does or causes to be done about his own business. Before an error like this is admitted it ought to be clearly proved. But if it were proved it would be no reason why the defendants should suffer for it. The law does not allow anybody to make such mistakes at the expense of other people.

It is asserted that the Judge did not answer definitely all the points submitted by the plaintiffs. The charge seems to us a very just exposition of all the law the case has in it. The plaintiffs had no shade of a right to recover. No proposition that ingenuity could frame would be at once favorable to them and sound in law. Their points must therefore have been either erroneous or immaterial, and a failure to answer them could do no harm to anybody but the defendants who are of course not complaining.

Divers exceptions are taken to the court's ruling of evidence out and in. We are all of opinion that none of the exceptions can be sustained. But will dismiss them without any special discussion because the foundation of the cause being gone its incidental points can have no importance.

Judgment affirmed.

Dissenting Opinion by Judge Black.

GODLEY v. CARSON.

Godley, the defendant below, built a house, which he leased, after it was finished, to the Government of the United States. The officers of the Custom House used it for storing away heavy goods, and loaded it so that it broke down. The plaintiffs were the owners of certain sugars and molasses which the Government had deposited there, which were in the house when it fell, and which were consequently lost. They bring this suit against the lessor of the store house, and ask to be indemnified for the loss. The judge who tried the cause thought they had a right to recover, and his judgment is about to be affirmed. I do not propose to discuss the case at length, but simply to express my dissent from the opinion of the majority.

I hold that a man who builds a house on his own land has a perfect right to build it as he pleases strong or weak. He may make it a log cabin or a marble palace. There is no law which prescribes the thickness of the walls, the size of the timbers, or the strength of the arches. The owner of the ground, therefore, does not violate any legal or moral duty in the mere act of permitting a building to be constructed which will not bear a pressure of two, three or five tons on every square yard of each floor.

It is true that if he erects a structure which makes a highway unsafe, or disturbs an adjoining owner in the enjoyment of his property, he is guilty of a nuisance. But his liability for a nuisance, public or private, is founded on principles which nobody pretends will apply to this case.

If the house, after its erection, be used in such a manner as to cause any public or private injury, the suffering party may have redress by indictment or action. But against whom? Surely not against anybody but him who has been guilty of using it for the improper or dangerous purpose. This is well settled by authority, Earle vs. Hall, 2 Metc. 353; Offerman v. Starr, 2 Barr, 394. The immediate author of the wrong is responsible—he who has the control and management of the premises—he who receives the profit which results from the use of it. In short, it is the proprietor who is responsible for such wrongs, and if the original owner, who built the house, has parted with it for a term of years, he is no more the proprietor, in the strict sense of the word, than he would be after parting with the fee simple. This rule is so plain that the only wonder is how it ever came to be doubted. Indeed it does not appear that it ever was doubted until now. When Offerman v. Starr, 2 Barr, 394, was decided, Judge Gibson said that nothing had been contested except the application of the principle to the matter then in hand.

Suppose a man builds a tavern house, with a stable attached to it. He rents or sells it to another, who loads the stable with hay and grain until he breaks it down and kills the horses of his customers; who would say that the vendor or lessor of the premises should be compelled to pay for the horses? It is impossible to see why the rule should be different in the case of a store rented to a commission merchant, and I suppose no one will deny the analogy between a commission merchant and the Government leasing a house as a place of deposit for bonded goods.

If this right of action exists at all it continues forever. As long as the person lives who owned the house at the time it was built, and as long afterwards as his estate can be reached, he and it are in peril of being made responsible for all the accidents that happen on the premises. The danger increases with time, for time will wear out and obliterate the evidence on which his defence rests. There is no statute of limitations that can do him any good. It begins to run from the time when the action accrued. He, or his executor, may complain that the witnesses who saw the building put up, have been dead for half a century. What is that to the man who has lost his sugar? He could bring no action until he suffered the injury. He must be compensated, for he has suffered a wrong without any default of his own, and whether the house was old or new, he has been guilty of no laches in seeking his redress.

For these reasons I deny that the defendant was responsible for any kind of negligence that he or his workmen could have been guilty of in building his own house. Negligence implies some obligation to be diligent. To whom did he owe such obligation? A duty which does not exist cannot be violated.

But in this case there was no negligence. The defendant built himself a strong house. In all that city of substantial buildings, very few could be found that were stronger or capable of holding heavier weights. But there is a limit to the strength of everything made with human hands. That limit was disregarded by the officers of the Custom House. The workmen piled in the goods ton after ton under the direction of an officer who swears that he told them to "store economically;" that is, to put the greatest weight in the smallest space—until the house, strong as it was, yielded to the enormous burden, and tumbled to the ground. The unfortunate man whose property was thus grossly abused and destroyed is not only compelled to pocket his own heavy loss, but must pay in addition, for all the goods that were in the building at the time, while the government and its officers are allowed to pass for innocent and meritorious parties.

If he had warranted the house to be capable of bearing any specified weight, and it had fallen with less, he would of course have been responsible on his contract. But he did not. The lease is in writing. He merely describes the building so as to identify it and lets it during a certain term for a certain rent.

Nor did he make any fraudulent misrepresentations concerning the strength of the house.—He built it expecting the government to take a lease of it. The officers had told him they wanted a house for heavy storage. He said that was the kind he was trying to build. This was the strongest expression he ever made to any of them. But the officer who took the lease swore on the trial that he took it entirely on his own judgment of the building—that he had watched it while it was going up from beginning to end—that he understood what constituted a good building, for he was a lawyer, whose attachment to mechanical science had spoiled him for his profession—that the materials were what they ought to be—that the defendant never said how much it would bear. They were, in truth, better judges than he was of such matters, and had at least equal means of forming an opinion. When they crushed the house down in these circumstances, it is probable that nobody would have thought of suing any body but them, if they had not been sheltered from responsibility behind their official position. The government was a bad mark, too; for she had then no Court of Claims, and Congress was hard to be reached, slow to understand such questions, and reluctant to act upon them. It was for default of somebody else to sue that the experiment was tried upon Godley. He was really a sharer with the plaintiffs in a common misfortune produced to both by the same cause—the error or miscalculation of the public agents. To me it seems too plain for argument that both parties had a perfectly fair claim against the government—the one for his house and the other for his goods; but that neither had anything like a just demand against the other.

In Godley vs. Hagerty, the question was before us, whether a man who was employed as a workman in this same building, whose arm was broken in the fall of it could recover damages from the present defendant. I would be willing enough for the sake of my own consistency to make a distinction between that case and this. But the ingenuity of counsel has failed to satisfy me that it can be done. I am obliged to confess without avoiding; there does not seem to be any trace of a dissent on the record. I can only say that I must then have seen the subject in a light which I cannot see it in now, after the best effort I have been able to make, or else my habitual respect for the judgment of my brethren caused me to adopt their view of the case without sufficient examination.

Orphans' Court.

Opinions by Thompson, P. J.
ESTATE OF MARTHA PENNOCK.
Exceptions to Auditor's Report.

The first exception is to the amount allowed to the Executor for commissions.

The Auditor has very fully explained the character and amount of the labor performed by the executor in the performance of his perplexing duties. The estate was for years involved in litigation, and numerous suits were to be defended in addition to the ordinary duties of the administration. The ultimate success of the executor upon the main question in dispute proved that the sums necessarily expended by him were not applied without reason, and that his care and trouble were not without the most beneficial results.

The Auditor upon the evidence submitted to him, justifies the expenditures, and considers the amount of the commissions charged as reasonable under the circumstances. That the executor performed onerous duties and for the benefit of the estate, is manifest; and no reason has been shown to induce us to question the propriety of the auditor's decision upon this claim. The counsel for the exceptants upon the argument did not so much object to the sum allowed for commissions, as to the allowance of the same out of the general fund in his hands, the greater part of which was received by him from the proceeds of real estate, sold under the order of the court for the payment of debts.

It was contended, that the commissions should have been charged separately; the usual amount allowed for selling real estate, against the proceeds thereof; and against the ordinary receipts, the proper percentage upon the amount so received.

This as a general rule is correct; each portion of real estate sold by an executor or other person acting as trustee, under an order of court, should bear its own expenses, including the commission allowed to the trustees for making the sale. But this being arranged, the proceeds of the sale are brought into the administration, and for the trouble of disbursing the amount, as well as for the adjustment of claims and general services, the executor, as such may be entitled to a further commission. This would be illustrated by the case of a decedent, leaving debts to be paid, and real estate only. It cannot be supposed that the executor would be entitled, but to the commission of 2½ or 3 per cent. allowed for selling the real estate, however great his trouble might be in selling the outstanding claims made against him, or in defending the estate from unjust charges. The only true method is to allow a proper commission for the sale of the real estate, and an additional compensation out of the fund so raised and brought into administration, if his services justify it. The fund in this case was in the executor's hands for the payment of the claims against the estate of Mrs. Pennock, and the commissions to which he has been found entitled, were properly chargeable against it. By separating the charges in the manner proposed by the exceptant, it would appear more formally correct, but as the fund raised from the real estate would not be exempted from further commissions, no advantage would be gained, and there appears no sufficient reason for disturbing the account as settled by the auditor. Whether any other property should have been applied to the payment of debts, than that sold for the purpose, or whether rents and profits received, should have been so appropriated, we are not now called upon to consider. No effort was made to surcharge the executor with any rents and profits, applicable to the payments of debts—and the honest appropriation of the fund in hand is all that we can now regard.

The second exception, was not sustained by any reason strong enough to controvert the opinion formed by the auditor from all the evidence submitted to him; indeed it was not much pressed upon the argument, the main objection having been to the matters embraced in the first exception.

The remaining exception relates to the expenses of the sale of the Baltimore ground rent. The auditor has justly remarked that over this ground rent as the property of his testatrix, or of her husband's estate, the executor, strictly speaking, had no control. It was sold, however, and the proceeds, less the expenses reported by the executor as received by him for the estate; if the money is claimed for the estate, and applied to its purposes, the necessary expenses of its collection, should not be refused. In the auditor's view of this item, we perceive no error.

For these reasons, the report of the auditor is confirmed.

Court of Common Pleas.

Opinions by Judge Thompson.
IN THE MATTER OF THE ACCOUNT OF DAVID MECONKEY, TRUSTEE UNDER THE WILL OF MARTHA PENNOCK.
The accountant filed his account styling himself Trustee of George W. Pennock under the last will and testament of Martha Pennock. In this account be charged himself with the rents of Grove Farm—and taking credit for payments made to George W. Pennoek, a balance of $975.94 appeared in the hands of the accountant at the decease of said George. The auditor to whom this account was referred, directed the balance, less the expenses of audit, to be paid to the executor of said George W. Pennoek—no other person then making claim to it. Since the report of the auditor was filed certain of the heirs of Martha Pennoek, applied by petition to the court, and were allowed to present exceptions to the distribution made by the auditor in order to ascertain whether the balance in the hands of the accountant belonged to the estate of the said George W. or formed part of the assets of his mother's estate.

This question, as has been observed, was not presented to or considered by the auditor, and we have not the benefit of his decision thereon.

By an examination of the will of Mrs. Pennoek, it appears that the trust confided to Mr. Meonkey was not confined to the interest of George. Great solicitude is expressed by the testatrix for the payment of her debts, and especially that the payment may be effected so as to disturb the arrangements made for the benefit of her said son, as little as possible. The trusts for the benefit of George are nevertheless made subject to the payment of her debts, but not until the "last necessity." The most extensive power is given to the trustee to provide for the payment of debts, by leasing, mortgaging or otherwise managing the real estate for that purpose. In pursuance of the directions of the will, portions of the property were sold, but the proceeds were not sufficient to pay the claims against the estate. The farm from which the balance in the hands of the accountant, accrued, was leased by him, and the rents paid over to George W. Pennoek during his life time, although the debts were not fully paid. The trust was, to lease, for the payment of debts, and until the debts should be fully extinguished. The devise in favor of George was thus subjected to the debts, and had creditors objected, the rents instead of being paid to him, should first have been applied to extinguish the debts. As the objection is now made, and as the money is required to liquidate the claims against the estate of Mrs. Pennoek, it seems proper that that use should be made of it, rather than to consider it as belonging to her son's estate. It was received by the trustee under the general powers given by the will, and not especially as trustee for George. The payment of debts, is paramount to any other disposition of the property. The sum was received from property liable to the payment of debts, and though there may be other property which may be subject to lease or sale for the same purpose, that is not now a reason for permitting the sum in hand from being applied as the will seems expressly to require.

The present exceptants have the right, to protect their interests as heirs or devisees of Mrs. Pennoek, by requiring that moneys raised by the trustee, shall be applied according to the requirements of the will. For the reasons given, we think the sum in question, should go to the executor of Mrs. Pennoek, instead of the executor of George W. Pennoek, and the report of the auditor is in this particular, set aside, and in other respects confirmed.

GRISWOLD v. GRISWOLD.
IN DIVORCE.

Rule to show cause why the record shall not be perfected by the substitution of copies and by evidence of the contents of lost papers.

This rule was taken on behalf of the libellant on the 15th of March last, and it is now proposed under an agreement signed by Mr. S. Sherman and Mr. D. P. Brown, and assented to or perhaps urged by the libellant's counsel, to substitute a document containing copies or alleged copies of portions of the record, as a complete copy thereof, for the said original record, and that thereafter the same shall stand and remain and be of the same force and effect as if it were the full original record of the said case.

This agreement cannot be sanctioned by the court for several reasons.

1st, There is no evidence of the contents of any portion of the record alleged to be lost; and as the agreement of parties cannot make the record of a court, there would be no propriety in receiving and adopting any substituted paper, without evidence to prove that its contents supplied the place of the lost record.

2d, A considerable portion of the record proposed to be supplied, is now before me. It has been in the office of the Prothonotary, since the argument. A further portion, was in court, during the argument, and is probably in the possession of counsel. As to these portions of the record, the originals being at hand, no necessity exists for a substitution and it would of course be improper to allow it.

3d, A comparison of the writing now proposed to be substituted, with some of the original papers now before me, the alleged loss of which, is to be thereby supplied, shows that the said writing does not contain an accurate copy of those papers, though the originals must have been the source from which the proposed substitute was prepared. This fact, whether accidental or otherwise, renders that writing unreliable, and should prevent us from accepting any part of it.

4th, Facts are stated in the said writing, as having taken place in court, which our records do not show; without any evidence to prove that such facts occurred, as for instance the entry of a decree on December, 23, 1852.

For these reasons, we cannot even with the consent of counsel allow our records to be thus changed.

The application to substitute is therefore refused.

REID v. CHRISTY.
Certiorari.

This was a proceeding before two Aldermen to obtain possession of demised premises under the provisions of the Act of 3d April, 1830.

The complaint was made by the Agent of the Landlord and upon his oath. The particulars of the complaint comply with the requisitions of the law, and the Aldermen certify, that having heard the complaint, and finding it in all particulars just and true, they enter judgment against the defendant that the premises be redelivered to the lessor. This seems sufficiently formal. The defendant takes exception 1st, "That the demise was proven by C. H. Cheyney, the landlord, who is incompetent." It appears, however, that Cheyney was not, and did not claim to be, the landlord, but the landlord's agent, and as such was competent to testify to anything he knew.

2d, "That the complaint does not agree with the notice." The only difference is, that the complaint gives the names of the lessors in full, the notice having described them as heirs of A. J. Reid. This is not a material variance, they were the same persons.

3d, "That notice does not appear to have been served upon the premises." It does however, appear that the notice was served on the defendant, which is sufficient whether served on the premises or elsewhere.

4th, "That it does not affirmatively appear that there were not sufficient goods upon the premises." The aldermen, certify that the particulars of the complaint, of which the insufficiency of goods the premises on was one, were found to be true. This we must presume was from adequate affirmative testimony.

5th, "That finding rent due, was also proved by Cheyney, the landlord." It has been shown that Cheyney was not the landlord, and therefore could testify.

6th, "That if Cheyney were not the landlord he could not make the complaint—therefore there was no complaint and the proceedings must fail." It would be a narrow construction of the act to hold that no one but the lessor in person can make the complaint. This would exclude all absent landlords, and all those who are obliged to depend on agents and attorneys, from having the benefit of the law. A man may sell his estate by attorney, why may he not rent it by agent, without losing the benefit of this or any other law? The law requires the complaint to be made under oath—but the oath need not, necessarily, be made by the landlord in person. The oath of Cheyney was sufficient if he had personal knowledge of the facts.

None of the exceptions being sustained certiorari judgment of the alderman is affirmed.

DAVIS & LEEDS v. NORTH PENNA RAIL ROAD COMPANY.

Sur motion to set aside execution on the ground that no judgment has been entered.

Upon the filing of the award in this case, under the provisions of the act of 19th February, 1849, the counsel for Davis & Leeds, obtained a rule to show cause why the report should not be confirmed. Exceptions were afterwards filed by the Rail Road Company, to the award—which exceptions were on the 25th November, 1854, discharged and the award of the viewers confirmed.

This confirmation was the decree or judgment of the court upon the report, and having been entered upon the record, seems to be an entry of judgment sufficient to meet the requisitions of the said act. It was so considered by the Company, as they took a certiorari upon it, which writ lies only upon a final judgment or decree. The Supreme Court so considered it, as instead of quashing the writ for want of judgment upon which alone it could properly be sustained, they confirmed the decree, and remitted the record for further proceedings thereon. For these reasons we must decline to interfere with the execution to which the law entitles the party, upon the confirmed award. We do not think that we have the authority to prevent the party in whose favor the award is entered, from having the full benefit of his execution, upon the additional suggestions now made by the Rail Road Company, viz: that during the time the case was before the Supreme Court, at their instance, the Company abstained from taking actual possession of the land, and therefore should not pay interest upon the amount awarded. The parties who held the property, were brought into court by the Rail Road Company, upon the allegation that the said Company were about to erect a depot upon the premises so occupied. The Company proceeded at their own time, and had the damages assessed for the injury to be sustained. The parties interested in the property made no opposition, but relied on their right to have their damages paid within thirty days after the entry of judgment in the award in their favor. This as well as any other judgment draws interest, and if the Company did not choose to exercise the rights which they demanded and obtained upon the entry of the judgment, by taking possession of the land, that delay, would not affect the rights of the parties who, by not objecting to the judgment, consented to the immediate use of the property by the Company.

Perceiving no reason for interfering in the case, this rule must be discharged.

GREAT FIRE, MAY 1, 1856.

HERRING'S PATENT CHAMPION SAFES!

What the People Say!

PHILADELPHIA, 2d May, 1856.

MESSRS. FARRELS & HERRING—GENTLEMEN—The Herring's Patent Champion Fire-Proof Safe, which we purchased of you in the month of January last, was situated in our Counting-Room, in the second story of 231 Market street, on the night of the Great Fire, 1st May, 1856, and full with the burning building in that conflagration.

The Safe was reached this afternoon, after an exposure of THIRTY-SIX Hours to intense heat, and although the brass plates on the front of the Safe were melted, and the exterior shows the evidence of extreme heat, the inside casing was found to be UNTOUCHED BY FIRE, and with the exception of being a little steamed is now as good as new.

EDW. SEMANS & CO.

MESSRS. FARRELS & HERRING—

GENTLEMEN—The Herring's Patent Champion Fire-Proof Safe, of your manufacture, which we purchased nearly a year since, was in the centre of our building, at the time of its destruction in the Great Fire of May 1, 1856.

We had removed the greater portion of our Books before the fire reached us, but left some of them, together with a number of loose papers, inside, purposely to test the security of the safe. After thirty-eight hours of severe roasting, we found the interior of the Safe, upon opening, not only bright and sound, but the Books and Papers as free from fire as when first put in.

We shall require another Safe as soon as we get a new location, and want none but your "Champion."

Yours, &c.,

FISHER & BROTHER,

No. 15 North Sixth street.

The public will bear in mind that the "HERRING'S PATENT" is the only Safe made in this City, which has never failed to preserve its contents in accidental fires.

FARRELS & HERRING,

Only Makers in this State of HERRING'S PATENT CHAMPION SAFES! May 9-ly

Vols. 1 to 15 are now ready.

We ask attention to the following approval by the members of the Supreme Court of the United States:

"We approve the plan of Mr. Justice Curtis's, 'Decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States,' and believe that its execution by him will be of much utility to the legal profession and to our country.

ROGER B. TANEY, Chief Justice,
JOHN McLEAN, Associate Justice.
JAMES M. WAYNE, Associate Justice.

English Law and Equity Reports.

ENGLISH REPORTS IN LAW AND EQUITY. A Complete Collection of the Cases decided by the House of Lords, the Privy Council, the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas and Exchequer, the Lord Chancellor, the High Court of Appeal in Chancery, the Court of Criminal Appeal, and the Admiralty and Ecclesiastical Courts. Reprinted within a few weeks after the decisions are rendered.

This series has the merit of being complete, reliable, prompt, convenient, and cheap. It is now universally cited in the courts, and referred to in the recent law books as standard authority. All the cases reported in England, are here reprinted from the most reliable sources, as soon as they reach this country.

These Reports are now regularly digested in our Annual United States Digest, which thus embraces an annual digest of the whole English and American Law.

We have now in Preparation, and shall soon Publish,

A separate Digest of these Reports, embracing the first thirty-one volumes of the series, prepared with express reference to the convenience of the American profession, and exhibiting a complete synopsis of all the English Decisions reported in those volumes during the last five years; also a Table of Cases referring to all the contemporaneous English Reports. This will be the first Digest of English Decisions prepared expressly for the American Lawyer, and it is intended to give it the same advantages over the English Digests hitherto reprinted in this country, which the American text books have generally been found to possess over the English.

The Law and Equity Reports will be continued on the same plan as heretofore; the number of volumes being reduced to four per year; and Digests will be published from time to time as the convenience of the profession demands.

Vols. 1 to 31, now ready for delivery, at $2 00 per volume.

Law School of the University at Cambridge, Mass.

The instructors in this school are Hon. JOEL PARKER, LL. D., Royal Professor. Hon. THEOPHILUS PARSONS, LL. D., Dane Professor. Hon. EMERY WASHBURN, LL. D., University Professor.

The course of instruction embraces the various branches of the Common Law, and of Equity, Admiralty, Commercial, International and Constitutional Law, and the Jurisprudence of the United States. The Law Library consists of about 14,000 volumes, and as new works appear they are added and every effort is made to render it complete.

Instruction is given by oral lectures and expositions, (and by recitations and examinations, in connection with them,) of which there are ten every week. Two Moot Courts are also holden in each week, at each of which a cause, previously given out, is argued by four students, and an opinion delivered by the presiding instructor. Rooms and other facilities are also provided for the Club Courts; and an Assembly is held weekly for practice in debate, and acquiring a knowledge of Parliamentary law and proceedings. Students may enter the school in any stage of their professional studies or mercantile pursuits, and at the commencement of either term, or in the middle, or other part of a term. They are at liberty to select what studies they will pursue, according to their view of their own wants and attainments.

The Academical year, which commences on Thursday, six weeks after the third Wednesday in July, is divided into two terms, of twenty weeks each, with a vacation of six weeks at the end of each term.

During the winter vacation, the Library is opened, warmed and lighted, for the use of the members of the school.

Applications for admission, or for Catalogues, or any further information, may be made to either of the Professors at Cambridge.

A. W. RAND'S

SELF-CLEANING FURNAOE.

Boynton's Patent.

Having put up a large number of these Furnaces, both in public and private buildings, (including 24 put up at the Philadelphia County Prison, in place of the 44 torn out.) and tested them during the cold weather of 1855, and 1856, being the coldest weather we have had for twenty or thirty years. They have given the most universal satisfaction, and those having them in use were perfectly delighted with the abundance of warm, pleasant air, and abundant ventilation afforded thereby, while so many were suffering from cold, and troubled with the deficiencies of their heating apparatus.

We take great pleasure, therefore, in recommending them to the notice of the public, and would call their attention particularly to an examination of the greatly increased amount of effective radiating surface, their perfect solidity and durability, the improved manner of making the joints, entirely preventing any escape of gases, and the manner of distributing the fire, so as to cause it to impinge directly against the large amount of surface, without the objectionable and unnatural method of forcing the current downwards.

We have also a full assortment of HAYES' PATENT TUBULAR OVEN RANGES, now so universally used, and favorably known. Also, HAYES' PATENT VENTILATORS, &c., &c., all of which will be put up in the very best manner, and by the most skillful workmen, constantly engaged for that purpose, by

DESIRABLE IMPROVEMENT.

Many efforts have been made to preserve the form and features of a departed friend, without the usual mode, so repugnant to the feelings, of placing the ice on the body. The difficulty has been overcome by an

Air-tight Preserver,

In which cold air is the medium used, acting as a preservative in the warmest weather, for any length of time. At the same time the body is entirely secure from nocturnal depredations. Thus arranged it can be conveyed HUNDREDS of miles with perfect safety, and in a good state of preservation. The apparatus is for preserving the body until time for burial—it is then placed in the coffin. The Subscriber, who is the sole patentee, is also a FURNISHING UNDERTAKER. Having had many years experience, he flatters himself he can render every satisfaction.

The above is or sale to Undertakers. All the necessary materials for Funeral Occasions, such as Leadens and other Coffins always on hand.

John Van Buren.—It was currently reported yesterday, telegraphed to Presbury & Billings of the Girard to keep him a suite of rooms, as he would be on in the Pilot Line. A large number of our citizens assembled on the wharf at 10 o'clock last night to receive him. But they were doomed to disappointment. Mr. Van Buren did not arrive. LAWS OF ENGLAND,
IN FOUR BOOKS.

BY
SIR WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, Knt.

ONE OF THE JUSTICES OF THE COURT OF
COMMON PLEAS. WITH THE LAST COR-RECTIONS OF THE AUTHOR, AND
NOTES.

From the Twenty-first London Edition.
With copious

NOTES,

Explaining the Changes in the Law effected by Decision or Statute, down to 1844. Together with Notes adapting the Work to the American Student. By

JOHN L. WENDELL,

LATE REPORTER OF THE SUPREME COURT.

Four Octavo Volumes, bound in fine
Law Sheep, Price $7 00.

The Twenty-first Edition of "Black-
stone's Commentaries" was prepared by
intrusting each one of the four great departments of jurisprudence, treated of by
Sir WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, to a separate
Editor, whose professional studies had made him peculiarly conversant with that particular branch of learning, to wit:

Vol. I. To J. F. HARGRAVE, of Lincoln's Inn,
Barrister at Law.

Vol. II. To G. SWIFT, of the Inner Temple,
Barrister at Law.

Vol. III. To R. COUCH, of the Middle Temple,
Barrister at Law.

Vol. IV. To W. N. WELSLY, Recorder of Chester.

Into the hands of these gentlemen were put all the Editions of Blackstone then extant in England, with directions to avail themselves of such notes of former editors
as they should approve, (among those editions was that of Mr. CHITTY.) Under those circumstances, and by this division of labor, was produced a work highly beneficial to the student, and greatly facilitating
the researches of counsel.

The notes of the American Editor were
to show the Common Law as it exists in
this country under our institutions, particularly in the State of New York, and
more especially as effected by the Revised Statutes of that State, and to point out
the diversities of the Common Law as held
in England and in this country in the few instances in which a difference exists.

This edition is the most accurate and useful
which has appeared.—London Times.

Incomparably the best edition that has ever
been published.—Literary World.

We do not hesitate to endorse the emphatic
approval which the edition has received in England, and pronounce it the best that has ever appeared.—Law Reporter.

There can be no question, that this edition of the Commentaries is destined to supersede all
others.—Courier.

These notes are of the greatest value, and add
ten-fold to the work, so far as the American student is concerned.—Albany Argus.

The Bank of Cash Credits.

Application will be made to the Legislature
of Pennsylvania, for the Charter of a Bank Issue
with general banking privileges, with a capital of
ONE MILLION OF DOLLARS. Said Bank to
be located in the City of Philadelphia, to be called the "Robert Morris Bank," and to be conducted upon the system of cash credits only, as
is herewith indicated.

A cash credit is a credit given to an individual
by a Banking Company, for a limited sum, seldom under $500, or $1000, upon his own security
and that of two or three individuals, approved
by the Bank, who become sureties for its payment. The individual who has obtained such a credit, is enabled to draw the whole sum, or any part of it, when he pleases; replacing it, or portions of it, according as he finds it convenient;
interest being charged upon such part only as he
draws out.

"If a man borrows $1000, from a private hand, and even then it is not always to be found when required, he pays interest for it, whether he be using it or not. His bank credit costs him
nothing, except during the moment it is of service to him, and this circumstance is of equal advantage as if he had borrowed money at a much lower rate of interest."

Cash credits are not, however, intended to be a dead load; the main objects of the Banks in granting them is to get their notes circulated,
and they do not grant them except to persons in business, or to those who are frequently drawing
out and paying in money.

Any person who applies to a bank for a cash
credit, is called upon to produce sureties, and,
after a full inquiry into the character of the applicant, the nature of his business, and the sufficiency of his securities, he is allowed to open a credit, and to draw upon the Bank for the whole of its amount, or for such part as his daily transaction may require. To the credit of the account,
he pays in such sums as he may not have occasion to use, and interest is charged or credited upon the balance, as the case may be. From the facility which these cash credits give to all the small transactions of the country, and from the opportunities which they afford to persons who begin business with little or no capital but their character, to employ profitably the minutest products of their industry, it cannot be doubted that the most important advantages are derived in the whole community.

Such privileges and immunities as the "Metropolitan Bank of New York" exercises, will be applied for.

PHILADELPHIA, 1854.

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND, No. 83 DOCK Street,
next door to THIRD Street, and adjoining the POST OFFICE, receives MONEY on deposit daily, from 9
in the morning until 3 in the afternoon; also Monday evenings, from 7 to 9 o'clock. Interest is allowed on deposits at the rate of FIVE PER CENT per annum. Deposits will be returned in whole, or in part, on demand, without notice.

The popularity of this Office with all classes of the community, both in town and country, and its consequent success, may be ascribed, in part, to the following
substantial reasons:

- 1st. It offers a convenient, responsible, and profitable
Depository to Executors, Administrators, Assignees, Collectors, Agents, and all public officers—to Attorneys, Trustees, Societies and Associations, whether incorporated or otherwise—to married or single ladies—to Students, Merchants, Clerks, and business men generally—
to Mechanics, Farmers, Minors of either sex, and all who have funds, much or little, to deposit, where they may be had at any time, with Five Per Cent interest added.
- 2d. Depositors receive Books, with an abstract of the
By-laws and regulations, in which is entered their deposits, which Books serve as vouchers. They may designate in case of sickness, death, or absence, who shall receive their deposits, without the intervention of Executors or Administrators. Any one or more persons may deposit in his, her, or their name, or for any other person or persons.
- 3d. A Report is made each year to the Legislature and Councils of the City.
- 4th. The Officers are sworn before they enter upon their duties, in addition to giving Bonds with sureties.
- 5th. The State Savings Fund is a real Savings Fund—not an Insurance and Trust Company. The Charter of this Institution avoids the Insurance business.
- 6th. Deposits may be withdrawn by checks after the manner customary with Banks. Check Books will be furnished to depositors without charge.

A MERITORIOUS CARD.

Hail! honored age of grand progression,
While each one clings to his profession,
And science moves with onward motion,
To snit each wayward thought and notion,
Bringing to light some new invention,
More strange than modern wit can mention,
Or Genius paint with true endeavor,
Though making graphic strides forever,
While Reason urges proud Ambition,
To strive for wondrous Competition;
Yet, in this age of glorious Art,
We can the meed of praise impart,
When meritorious efforts claim
A modest puff to gild the name;
And thus we call, with honest pride,
Attention to the Painter's side,—
A man who bravely knows his calling,
Whose works are worthy of extolling,
A model Artist of the day,
And most obliging in his way,
GEORGE H. BANCROFT,—mark the name,
In CHESTNUT STREET you'll find the same,
Call at Five Hundred and Thirty-One,
You'll get the best of painting done,
In Modern or in Classic Order,
From templed shrine to parlor border,
In magic tints of every hue,
To Signs embossed in gold and blue,
Or Figure Head, or Church, or Steeple,
He is resolved to please the people,
And whether foe, or friend or neighbor,
Will charge but moderate for his labor.
We thus invite each one and all,
To give this worthy man a call.
Who will, we venture to engage,
Feel grateful for your patronage.*

* We would particularly invite public attention to our friend Mr. BANCROFT, who is a young, enterprising beginner, and who has gone
to vast expense in fitting up his establishment,
and is now ready to receive orders for Painting,
in all its various branches, at 531 and 533 Chestnut street, 5 doors east of Seventeenth st.

PENNSYLVANIA REPORTS.

A New and Cheap Edition.

ALREADY PUBLISHED.

Dallas' Reports, 4 vols. . . . 1754 to 1806
Yeates' Reports, 4 vols. . . . 1791 to 1803
Binney's Reports, 6 vols. . . . 1799 to 1814
Addison's Reports, 1 vol. . . . 1791 to 1799

These Reports are condensed by T. J. Fox
Alden, Esq., into three vols., and are sold at the low price of $15. The catalogue price of the old edition, to which they are greatly superior in type and papers is $60. They contain all that is of any value in the original, and as will be seen are sold at less than one fourth the price.
The volumes already published are complete in themselves, having a copious index and table of cases.

To those who cannot afford to purchase the original series of Reports (many volumes of which are out of print) this work will be invaluable, whilst even those who do possess them, will buy it for convenience of reference.

From Hon. J. B. Gibson, Chief Justice.—I have examined the first volume of Mr. Alden's Condensed Reports, and think the work will be a valuable one, especially to the younger members of the bar, who cannot, at first afford to purchase
the series of our reports, already between seventy
and eighty volumes. The cases are clearly stated,
and the points decided, are accurately extracted.
JOHN B. GIBSON.

Testimonials speaking in the highest terms of the work, have also been received from Hon. Edward King, Hon. William B. McClure, Hon. William D. Kelly, Hon. Cornelius Darragh, Hon.
John Galbreath, James Dunlop, Esq., Thomas Williams, Esq., and more than fifty other distinguished members of the Pennsylvania Bar.

IN PREPARATION,

Addison on Contracts.

fourth London edition just issued, and contain many important American notes.

Supreme Court.

Opinion by Lewis, C. J.

COMMONWEALTH vs. JOHN M. MICKEL, Et al.

This is an application to remove into the Supreme Court for trial, sundry bills of indictment now pending in the Oyer and Terminer of Philadelphia. The defendants are charged with manslaughter by reason of their relation to the Corporation, owning the Steam Ferry Boat "New Jersey," the destruction of which, on the tenth of March last, occasioned the loss of the lives of many of the passengers.

The facts which were brought to our knowledge on the argument of the case of the Commonwealth vs. Simpson, show that the exercise of the power of removal has, in practice, been attended with the most deplorable evils. The accumulation of business in the supreme Court, and the indispensable absence of the Judges, during a great part of the year in the performance of their duties at Harrisburg, Sunbury and Pittsburg render it absolutely impossible to expedite trials at Nisi Prius. The period of their stay in Philadelphia is necessarily occupied with the business in banc, and with other business of a higher important character at Nisi Prius when we have no means of avoiding. From these causes, and the peculiar organization of our Nisi Prius jurisdiction in criminal cases, great delay has occurred in the disposition of those cases. It was stated by Mr. Justice Black, in the Commonwealth v. Simpson, that "of the numerous removals which have been made within fifty years not one has resulted in a conviction, and nine out of ten have never been tried." These facts show that the power of removal should be used with the utmost caution. The delays of justice, caused by it in times past, admonish us against it. No case ought to be removed except when there is strong ground to believe that if the cause be not removed some important principle of law, or the plain justice of the case will be violated.

The question of jurisdiction over the waters of the River Delaware, under the compact between Pennsylvania and New Jersey, may be brought before the Court by means of a plea to the jurisdiction. If the Court should decide against the plea, the defendants would answer over, and on the final judgment being rendered, the decision on the effect of the plea could be renewed in this Court, on writ of Error. So that the existence of this question furnishes no ground for removal before trial.

Whether the Directors of incorporated companies are criminally responsible for negligence or omission tending to produce and resulting in death is certainly a question deserving serious consideration. But the Judges of the Oyer and Terminer are learned and impartial, and there is no reason to believe that they are incompetent or unwilling to dispose of it properly. If the opinion of this Court should be desired on it a demurrer to the evidence, or if the Commonwealth refuses to join in demurrer, a special verdict can bring up the question for review. 5 Co. Rep. 104; 1 Chitty's Crim. Law, 623; Dyor, 53; Handes, 82.

The great respectability of the defendants, and their residence out of the State, are circumstances which ought to have their proper weight in influencing the Court of Oyer and Terminer to guard them against injury from unjust local prejudices and to take care that they have a fair trial. There is no reason to believe that the Court will fail in its duty in this respect. If evil disposed persons have caused the publication of false and libellous articles respecting the parties and their cause, and have thus so influenced the public mind that a fair trial cannot be had, the evil is not to be remedied by removal into the Supreme Court. The Oyer and Terminer has as much power, and doubtless is quite as ready to protect the defendants from injury from these causes. The cases may be continued from time to time until the prejudice subsides. The libellers may be proceeded against by indictment. The jurors in both courts come from the same source, and are subject to the same local prejudices, so that a removal into the Supreme Court would afford no remedy for that particular evil.

We may well hope that this community may never again be saddened by such a calamity as that caused by the conflagration of the Steamboat New Jersey. But principles of law equally novel and important with those which arise out of that transaction are of every day discussion in Courts of Justice. Local prejudices, arising from newspaper publications, may be alleged in every cause which has excited the interest or sympathies of the public. Strangers residing in other States are continually brought within our criminal jurisdiction. So that if we establish the precedent that all, or any, of these circumstances furnish ground for removal, we should flood the Supreme Court with causes which could never be tried, and thus violate that injunction of the Constitution which requires that justice be administered without delay.

Mr. Justice Woodward was present at the argument of this motion and concurs in overruling it for the reasons assigned.

The allowance of writs of Certiorari is refused.

Opinion by Judge Black.

CURCIER'S ESTATE.

Appeal from the Orphans' Court of Philadelphia, by the Bank of Pennsylvania.

In 1836, Curcier was indebted to the Bank of Pennsylvania, upwards of twenty thousand dollars, for which the Bank had no security except his promissory notes. On these notes a suit was brought, but the writ was never, served. In 1843 Curcier died. In 1851 his death was suggested on the record, and an alias summons was issued against the executor who accepted service and entered an appearance by attorney.

When distribution of Curcier's estate came to be made by the Orphans' Court among his creditors, the Bank of Pennsylvania claimed her debt. The assets not being sufficient to pay all the debts, the other creditors objected to the claim of the Bank on the ground that it had been long barred by the statute of limitation and it was thrown out.

From that decision the present appeal has been taken. It is argued here; 1st That the statute of limitation does not under the circumstances of the case apply to the Bank's debt; and 2nd. That even if the statute did apply, the other creditors have no right to take advantage of it. Our opinion is against the appellant on both points.

1. These notes are twenty years old at the least. The limitation is now running over them the fourth time, why should the right to recover upon them not be barred? The suit brought against the executor in 1851 was too late. The claim then had an age more than two and a half times as great as was necessary to turn it out of any court in the State. The argument is, that the suit against the Executor was not a new suit but merely the continuance of the action which had been brought against the decedent himself fifteen years before. The question is not whether a summons returned non est inventus is to be regarded as the commencement of the action when it is followed in a short time afterwards with an alias which is actually served, but whether the statute is so held by a writ not executed though there be an interval of fifteen years between it and the alias. If a party can lie by in such a case for fifteen years, he may do so for an indefinite time. A person who has paid his debt a quarter of a century ago may be called upon to pay it again after he has lost his receipts, and the Statute is to be no protection because his adversary at some period in the mean time has taken out a writ behind his back, and given him no notice of it. But though an alias may be connected with an original writ not served so as to make both a part of the same process it is not true that the alias can be safely delayed for more than six years after the original was taken out. Such was the opinion of this court as expressed by Judge Sergeant in Jones vs. Oram, (5 R. 249,) and it was reiterated by Judge Coulton in McClurg vs. Fryer (3 Harr. 295.) There is no case in our own book, that has allowed a suit commenced in this way to be kept alive by continuances without an alias in less than six years, and there is no modern instance of its being done in England. It is plain therefore that the Bank has shown nothing which forms a good replication to the plea of the statute. Her claim is clearly barred.

2. It is contended that however well settled the right may be of the Executor to plead the statute the creditors cannot set it up in the Orphans' Court, as a reason for excluding the Bank from her pro rata share of the assets. It would require much ingenuity to show how the Orphans' Court could perform the duty of making distribution among the creditors of an insolvent estate without having the power to determine what is the amount of the debts and to whom they are due. It is for that purpose that the creditors are all brought into court and made parties to the proceeding. The right of each are to prove his own debt is not plainer than his right to contest the false claim of another. The law which would compel him to set silently by and see the fund swept away by a competitor whose demand is destitute of justice might as well refuse to hear him altogether. But this doctrine has not and never had solid foundation either in authority or reason. The contrary was established in Kitter's Estate, (5 Harr. 416,) upon grounds which we still believe to be immovable. If creditors may dispute the original existence of another's debts, they may show that they were subsequently extinguished. The Court or its auditor would not refuse to look at a written acknowledgment of payment by the party entitled to receive satisfaction. For the same reason, they could not shut their eyes to a receipt written by the hand of time upon the face of a note. All that is said in argument about the discretionary right of the executor to plead the statute or to waive it, is beside the present purpose. Admit for the argument's sake that he has this power under all circumstances. Here is a case in which he did not exercise it. His appearance to the alias writ of summons in the District Court was no waiver of the statute; it was no acknowledgment of the debt; and if it had been it would not have bound him or any body else. He has left the question to be settled among the creditors by the Orphans' Court without the embarrassment of a previous adjudication by another tribunal. It is true that a creditor in a case like this brings the legal rights with him into the Orphan's Court. But it is also true that he produces his claim then with all its legal imperfections on its head. A court of equity in marshalling assets, acts not by analogy but in obedience to the statute. A debt created by simple contract, but barred by lapse of time so that it cannot be recovered at law is as completely extinguished in one forum as another. The appellant cannot receive anything in the Orphan's Court because there can be no recovery in the District Court. It is not necessary as the counsel seem to think that anything already done in the latter court should be set aside. If the defendant pleads the statute and the plaintiff replies the writ of 1836 the replication will be adjudged insufficient without any changes of the record already made.

Decree affirmed.

Opinion by Woodward J.

THE NEW YORK & ERIE RAILROAD COMPANY v. SABINE.

Error to Common Pleas of Susquehanna.

We are of the opinion that the annual tax of ten thousand dollars imposed upon the company by the 5th Section of the Act of 27th March, 1846, was intended to compensate the Commonwealth for the right of way through her territory, and that the tax imposed by the 6th Section of said Act upon that portion of the Company's stock which represents the cost of construction in Pennsylvania was meant to be in lieu of all other taxation of the property of the Company within our borders.

Without going into minute inquiries whether under our decisions the buildings described in the special verdict are to be considered as indispensable or only as convenient appendages of the road, it is unquestionable, because found in the special verdict, that they were included in the "cost of construction," and represent, in part the stock which by the 6th Section is subjected to taxation. It would be, therefore, to tax these buildings twice if we should sustain the assessment now complained of. If the Company should multiply building and accumulate lands no way appertaining or essential to their Rail Road, (supposing their charter would permit such use of their capital,) this property would be subject to taxation like any other land or houses, but for these erections which are fairly included in the cost of construction of their road, they are liable to no other taxes than those specially imposed.

The legislative power to impose different or additional taxation, or to subject the buildings mentioned in the special verdict to the operation of our general tax laws, is not to be questioned, for we have held in several cases, and the doctrine may be regarded as firmly settled in this Court, that the taxing power of the legislature is subject to no constitutional restraints, and that if it may be abandoned in favor of chartered companies the surrender is not to be presumed but must be evinced by terms so explicit as to leave no doubt of the legislative intention to part with it. When, however, instead of surrendering the power, the legislature have exercised it by taxing all the property of a particular Company in a specified manner, and have intimated no design to subject it to any further taxation, we hold the power to be satisfied, and do not add, by judicial implications, burthens which the legislature have not thought fit to impose. In short the taxing power is wholly legislative, and not at all judicial. If the legislature had meant that the property of this Company should be taxable in the ordinary mode under our Acts of Assembly of 15th April, 1834, and the 29th of April 1844, they would have imposed no special taxation;—or, if they meant that the Company should be taxable under these acts in addition to the special impositions they would have said so. Without some words to lead us to that conclusion we will not infer that both special and general taxation were intended.

It sometimes happens that a bonus is demanded and received from a bank or other corporation at the granting of its charter, and afterward all that class of corporations are expressly subjected to another rate of taxation. No exemption of a particular institution is to be implied from the payment of the bonus, for that would be to set up judicial implications against an express exercise of the taxing power. But such cases are broadly distinguished from this case. Here we are called on, not to apply a law expressly including Rail Road Companies, but to apply general tax laws where the legislature have applied those that are special, to presume a double exercise of the taxing power to have been intended in respect to this Company. We find no warrant for this, either in the terms of legislation or in the decisions of this Court. When the Company pay the taxes specified in the 5th and 6th Sections before alluded to, they pay all the taxes which according to existing enactments can be legally charged against them.

And now May 8th, 1856, this case having been fully heard and considered, it is ordered and adjudged that the judgment of the Court of Common Pleas of Susquehanna County be reversed and set aside, and that judgment be entered here, in the case stated, in favour of the Plaintiff for the sum of $243 and costs.

Court of Common Pleas.

Opinion by Thompson P. J.

RHOADS vs. THE CITY OF PHILADELPHIA

Appeal from Board of Revision.

The Appellant made application to the Board of Revision, of the City of Philadelphia, "that the assessors be permitted to amend their return, so that certain Real Estate, might be distinguished as within a rural district, and therefore not subject to such taxes as are assessed upon the built portion of said city." The said Board after hearing, declined to interfere with the returns as made, Thereupon the Appellant brings his appeal from their decision into this Court.

The Solicitor on behalf of the City presents two objections.

First, The Court has no jurisdiction by way of appeal from the decisions of the Board of Revision.

Second. The application to the Board was too late, and they properly rejected it.

The first objection, raises a question of some importance under the 13th Section of the Act of February 2d, 1854, (the Consolidation Act,) the Board of Revision are required to perform their duties according to the laws in force in other counties, and to hear the appeals of tax-payers. The general laws in force in other Counties give no appeals to Court. The Act of April 1st, 1836, gave to free holders in Philadelphia County and Bucks County, the right to such an appeal, which did not previously exist, and by subsequent acts of Assembly, the same right was extended to Schuylkill and Montgomery Counties.

The County Commissioners from whose decisions an appeal was thus given by the Act of 1836, have been superseded in the County of Philadelphia, by a Board of Revision, appointed under the provisions of the Act of 2 Feb. 1854. From the decisions of this Board no appeal is given by the act, to individual tax payers. It is the duty of this Board to hear the appeals from the assessors, but unless the decision of the Board affects the valuation of property to the extent of ten per cent, for any ward in which case twenty freeholders may take an appeal to Councils whose decision thereon is final, no appeal is given by that act. It would seem that under this law, the only appeal allowed, is that taken by twenty freeholders, for the benefit of a ward. In individual cases the appeal either to Councils or to the Court is not provided for. The Court has no power to hear appeals unless expressly given to it. The legislature may create a tribunal, without clothing a Court with appellate jurisdiction over its decisions.

They seem to have made the Board of Revision the only appellate tribunal in the case of an erroneous return by the assessors, and not to have extended the power to the Court.

But if the Court had the appellate jurisdiction the second objection, affords a sufficient reason why it should not be exercised.

The Board of Revision are now required to close the hearing of appeals in six weeks from the third Monday in October in each year, and under the Act of February 1854, they were obliged to complete their valuation before the end of the year. This course is necessary, in order that the rate of tax may be fixed for the City upon the basis of their valuation. It is evidently out of the power of the Board to allow appeals, in the middle of the succeeding year, after the rate has been fixed upon their valuation.

The tax-payer must be on the alert. He must ascertain his assessment in proper time, and be ready at the time appointed for appeals in his ward of which public notice is given. This may give some inconvenience but unless attended to, the valuation may become settled and the Board have no power to alter it.

The laws levying taxes are public laws; all concerned are expected to know them, and if by delay a person loses his appeal he cannot find a remedy by an application to this Court.

Such a proceeding would interfere with the entire rate of taxation for the City, and it is well that we cannot, if we would, take any action in the case.

The appeal is therefore dismissed.

GREAT FIRE, MAY 1, 1856.

HEBBING'S PATENT CHAMPION SAFES!
What the People Say!

PHILADELPHIA, 2d May, 1856.

MESSRS. FARRELS & HERRING—
GENTLEMEN—The Herring's Patent Champion Fire-Proof Safe, which we purchased of you in the month of January last, was situated in our Counting-Room, in the second story of 231 Market street, on the night of the Great Fire, 1st May, 1856, and full with the burning building in that conflagration.

The Safe was reached this afternoon, after an exposure of THIRTY-SIX HOURS to intense heat, and although the brass plates on the front of the Safe were melted, and the exterior shows the evidence of extreme heat, the inside casing was found to be UNTOUCHED BY FIRE, and with the exception of being a little steamed is now as good as new.

EDW. SEMANS & CO.

MESSRS. FARRELS & HERRING—

GENTLEMEN—The Herring's Patent Champion Fire-Proof Safe, of your manufacture, which we purchased nearly a year since, was in the centre of our building, at the time of its destruction in the Great Fire of May 1, 1856.

We had removed the greater portion of our Books before the fire reached us, but left some of them, together with a number of loose papers, inside, purposely to test the security of the safe. After thirty-eight hours of severe roasting, we found the interior of the Safe, upon opening, not only bright and sound, but the Books and Papers as free from fire as when first put in.

We shall require another Safe as soon as we get a new location, and want none but your "Champion."

Yours, &c., FISHER & BROTHER,

No. 15 North Sixth street.

The public will bear in mind that the "HERRING'S PATENT" is the only Safe made in this City, which has never failed to preserve its contents in accidental fires.

The TWO SAFES from the above Great Fire can now be seen in front of the OLD STAND, No. 31 WALNUT STREET.

LITTLE, BROWN, & CO.

112 Washington Street, BOSTON, Curtis's Supreme Court Decisions.

THE DECISIONS OF THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES,

With notes and a Digest by Hon. Benjamin R. Curtis, one of the Associate Justices of the Court. In 22 volumes, octavo. Comprising the Cases reported by Dallas, 4 vols.; Cranch, 9 vols.; Wheaton, 12 vols.; Peters, 16 vols.; Howard, 17 vols.

The old series of these reports are in 57 volumes, the Catalogue price of which is $217 50. The volumes are delivered as fast as issued, and it is intended that the whole work shall be completed early in 1856.

Vols. 1 to 15 are now ready.

We ask attention to the following approval by the members of the Supreme Court of the United States:

"We approve the plan of Mr. Justice Curtis's, 'Decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States,' and believe that its execution by him will be of much utility to the legal profession and to our country.

ROGER B. TANEY, Chief Justice,
JOHN McLEAN, Associate Justice.
JAMES M. WAYNE, Associate Justice.
JOHN CATRON, Associate Justice.
PETER V. DANIEL, Associate Justice.
SAMUEL NELSON, Associate Justice.
ROBERT C. GRIER, Associate Justice.
J. A. CAMPBELL, Associate Justice."

English Law and Equity Reports.

ENGLISH REPORTS IN LAW AND EQUITY. A Complete Collection of the Cases decided by the House of Lords, the Privy Council, the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas and Exchequer, the Lord Chancellor, the High Court of Appeal in Chancery, the Court of Criminal Appeal, and the Admiralty and Ecclesiastical Courts. Reprinted within a few weeks after the decisions are rendered.

This series has the merit of being complete, reliable, prompt, convenient, and cheap. It is now universally cited in the courts, and referred to in the recent law books as standard authority. All the cases reported in England, are here reprinted from the most reliable sources, as soon as they reach this country.

These Reports are now regularly digested in our Annual United States Digest, which thus embraces an annual digest of the whole English and American Law.

We have now in Preparation, and shall soon Publish,

A separate Digest of these Reports, embracing the first thirty-one volumes of the series, prepared with express reference to the convenience of the American profession, and exhibiting a complete synopsis of all the English Decisions reported in those volumes during the last five years; also a Table of Cases referring to all the contemporaneous English Reports. This will be the first Digest of English Decisions prepared expressly for the American Lawyer, and it is intended to give it the same advantages over the English Digests hitherto reprinted in this country, which the American text books have generally been found to possess over the English.

The Law and Equity Reports will be continued on the same plan as heretofore; the number of volumes being reduced to four per year; and Digests will be published from time to time as the convenience of the profession demands.

Vols. 1 to 31, now ready for delivery, at $2 00 per volume.

The Boston Post Man was on here a few days ago, and said that the best remedy for baldness was to use brandy externally until the hair grew, and then take it internally to clinch the roots.—We coincide in that opinion, and would also remark that the most beautiful as well as the cheapest clothing in the city, is found at Granville Stokes', No. 209 Chesnut street.

It was Ordered. That all appraisements made under the provisions of the 5th section of the Act of Assembly of April 14th, 1851, and presented to the Orphans' Court for approval, shall be accompanied by a petition by the party asking the approval, in which shall be fully set out the facts and circumstances upon which the right of the party to claim a retention of the property is founded—and that notice of the filing of said appraisement shall be published twice a week for two weeks in a public newspaper, and twice in the Legal Intelligencer; and unless exceptions be presented on or before the next Orphans' Court day after the expiration of said notice, the Court will then take action upon the said appraisement.

A. W. RAND'S SELF-CLEANING FURNACE.

Boynton's Patent.

Having put up a large number of these Furnaces, both in public and private buildings, (including 24 put up at the Philadelphia County Prison, in place of the 44 torn out.) and tested them during the cold weather of 1855, and 1856, being the coldest weather we have had for twenty or thirty years. They have given the most universal satisfaction, and those having them in use were perfectly delighted with the abundance of warm, pleasant air, and abundant ventilation afforded thereby, while so many were suffering from cold, and troubled with the deficiencies of their heating apparatus.

We take great pleasure, therefore, in recommending them to the notice of the public, and would call their attention particularly to an examination of the greatly increased amount of effective radiating surface, their perfect solidity and durability, the improved manner of making the joints, entirely preventing any escape of gases, and the manner of distributing the fire, so as to cause it to impinge directly against the large amount of surface, without the objectionable and unnatural method of forcing the current downwards.

We have also a full assortment of HAYES' PATENT TUBULAR OVEN RANGES, now so universally used, and favorably known. Also, HAYES' PATENT VENTILATORS, &c., &c., all of which will be put up in the very best manner, and by the most skillful workmen, constantly engaged for that purpose, by

DESIRABLE IMPROVEMENT.

Many efforts have been made to preserve the form and features of a departed friend, without the usual mode, so repugnant to the feelings, of placing the ice on the body. The difficulty has been overcome by an

Air-tight Preserver,

In which cold air is the medium used, acting as a preservative in the warmest weather, for any length of time. At the same time the body is entirely secure from nocturnal depredations. Thus arranged it can be conveyed HUNDREDS of miles with perfect safety, and in a good state of preservation. The apparatus is for preserving the body until time for burial—it is then placed in the coffin. The Subscriber, who is the sole patentee, is also a FURNISHING UNDERTAKER. Having had many years experience, he flatters himself he can render every satisfaction.

The above is for sale to Undertakers.
All the necessary materials for Funeral Occasions, such as Lead and other Coffins always on hand.

BY
SIR WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, Knt.

ONE OF THE JUSTICES OF THE COURT OF
COMMON PLEAS. WITH THE LAST COR-RECTIONS OF THE AUTHOR, AND
NOTES.

From the Twenty-first London Edition.
With copious

NOTES,

Explaining the Changes in the Law effected by Decision or Statute, down to

JOHN L. WENDELL,

LATE REPORTER OF THE SUPREME COURT.

Four Octavo Volumes, bound in fine
Law Sheep, Price $7 00.

The Twenty-first Edition of "Black-
stone's Commentaries" was prepared by
intrusting each one of the four great departments of jurisprudence, treated of by
Sir WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, to a separate
Editor, whose professional studies had made him peculiarly conversant with that particular branch of learning, to wit:

Vol. I. To J. F. HARGRAVE, of Lincoln's Inn,
Barrister at Law.

Vol. II. To G. SWIFT, of the Inner Temple,
Barrister at Law.

Vol. III. To R. COUCH, of the Middle Temple,
Barrister at Law.

Vol. IV. To W. N. WELSLY, Recorder of Chester.

Into the hands of these gentlemen were put all the Editions of Blackstone then extant in England, with directions to avail themselves of such notes of former editors
as they should approve, (among those editions was that of MR. CHITTY.) Under those circumstances, and by this division of labor, was produced a work highly beneficial to the student, and greatly facilitating
the researches of counsel.

The notes of the American Editor were
to show the Common Law as it exists in this country under our institutions, particularly in the State of New York, and more especially as effected by the Revised Statutes of that State, and to point out
the diversities of the Common Law as held
in England and in this country in the few stances in which a difference exists.

This edition is the most accurate and useful
which has appeared.—London Times.

Incomparably the best edition that has ever
been published.—Literary World.

We do not hesitate to endorse the emphatic
approval which the edition has received in England, and pronounce it the best that has ever appeared.—Law Reporter.

There can be no question, that this edition of the Commentaries is destined to supersede all
others.—Courier.

These notes are of the greatest value, and add
ten-fold to the work, so far as the American student is concerned.—Albany Argus.

The Bank of Cash Credits.

Application will be made to the Legislature
of Pennsylvania, for the Charter of a Bank Issue
with general banking privileges, with a capital of ONE MILLION OF DOLLARS. Said Bank to be located in the City of Philadelphia, to be called the "Robert Morris Bank," and to be conducted upon the system of cash credits only, as
is herewith indicated.

A cash credit is a credit given to an individual
by a Banking Company, for a limited sum, seldom under $500, or $1000, upon his own security
and that of two or three individuals, approved
by the Bank, who become sureties for its payment. The individual who has obtained such a credit, is enabled to draw the whole sum, or any part of it, when he pleases; replacing it, or portions of it, according as he finds it convenient;
interest being charged upon such part only as he
draws out.

"If a man borrows $1000, from a private hand, and even then it is not always to be found when required, he pays interest for it, whether he be using it or not. His bank credit costs him
nothing, except during the moment it is of service to him, and this circumstance is of equal advantage as if he had borrowed money at a much lower rate of interest."

Cash credits are not, however, intended to be a dead load; the main objects of the Banks in granting them is to get their notes circulated,
and they do not grant them except to persons in business, or to those who are frequently drawing
out and paying in money.

Any person who applies to a bank for a cash
credit, is called upon to produce sureties, and,
after a full inquiry into the character of the applicant, the nature of his business, and the sufficiency of his securities, he is allowed to open a credit, and to draw upon the Bank for the whole of its amount, or for such part as his daily transaction may require. To the credit of the account,
he pays in such sums as he may not have occasion to use, and interest is charged or credited upon the balance, as the case may be. From the facility which these cash credits give to all the small transactions of the country, and from the opportunities which they afford to persons who begin business with little or no capital but their character, to employ profitably the minutest products of their industry, it cannot be doubted that the most important advantages are derived in the whole community.

Such privileges and immunities as the "Metropolitan Bank of New York" exercises, will be applied for.

SAVINGS FUND.

INTEREST FIVE PER. CENT, PER ANNUM.

ALL SUMS OF MONEY RETURNED ON DEMAND.

OFFICE, NEXT DOOR TO THE POST OFFICE;

No. 83 Dock Street,

PHILADELPHIA, 1854.

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND, No. 83 DOCK Street,
next door to THIRD Street, and adjoining the POST OFFICE, receives MONEY on deposit daily, from 9 in the morning until 3 in the afternoon; also Monday evenings, from 7 to 9 o'clock. Interest is allowed on deposits at the rate of FIVE PER CENT per annum. Deposits will be returned in whole, or in part, on demand, without notice.

The popularity of this Office with all classes of the community, both in town and country, and its consequent success, may be ascribed, in part, to the following
substantial reasons:

1st. It offers a convenient, responsible, and profitable
Depository to Executors, Administrators, Assignees, Collectors, Agents, and all public officers—to Attorneys, Trustees, Societies and Associations, whether incorporated or otherwise—to married or single ladies—to Students, Merchants, Clerks, and business men generally—
to Mechanics, Farmers, Minors of either sex, and all who may have funds, much or little, to deposit, where they may be had at any time, with FIVE PER CENT interest added.

2d. Depositors receive Books, with an abstract of the
By-laws and regulations, in which is entered the amount of their deposits, which Books serve as vouchers. They may designate in case of sickness, death, or absence, who shall receive their deposits, without the intervention of Executors or Administrators. Any one or more persons may deposit in his, her, or their name, or for any other person or persons.

3d. A Report is made each year to the Legislature and Councils of the City.

4th. The Officers are sworn before they enter upon their duties, in addition to giving Bonds with sureties.

5th. The State Savings Fund is a real Savings Fund—not an Insurance and Trust Company. The Charter of this Institution avoids the Insurance business.

6th. Deposits may be withdrawn by checks after the manner customary with Banks. Check Books will be furnished to depositors without charge.

A MERITORIOUS CARD.

Hail! honored age of grand progression,
While each one clings to his profession,
And science moves with onward motion,
To suit each wayward thought and notion,
Bringing to light some new invention,
More strange than modern wit can mention,
Or Genius paint with true endeavor,
Though making graphic strides forever,
While Reason urges proud Ambition,
To strive for wondrous Competition;
Yet, in this age of glorious Art,
We can the meed of praise impart,
When meritorious efforts claim
A modest puff to gild the name:
And thus we call, with honest pride,
Attention to the Painter's side,—
A man who bravely knows his calling,
Whose works are worthy of extolling,
A model Artist of the day,
And most obliging in his way,
GEORGE H. BANCROFT,—mark the name,
In CHESTNUT STREET you'll find the same,
Call at Five Hundred and Thirty-One,
You'll get the best of painting done,
In Modern or in Classic Order,
From templed shrine to parlor border,
In magic tints of every hue,
To Signs embossed in gold and blue,
Or Figure Head, or Church, or Steeple,
He is resolved to please the people,
And whether foe, or friend or neighbor,
Will charge but moderate for his labor.
We thus invite each one and all,
To give this worthy man a call.
Who will, we venture to engage,
Feel grateful for your patronage.*

* We would particularly invite public attention to our friend Mr. BANCROFT, who is a young, enterprising beginner, and who has gone
to vast expense in fitting up his establishment,
and is now ready to receive orders for Painting,
in all its various branches, at 531 and 533 Chesnut street, 5 doors east of Seventeenth st.

PENNSYLVANIA REPORTS.

A New and Cheap Edition.

ALREADY PUBLISHED.

Dallas' Reports, 4 vols. . . . 1754 to 1806
Yeates' Reports, 4 vols. . . . 1791 to 1808
Binney's Reports, 6 vols. . . . 1799 to 1814
Addison's Reports, 1 vol. . . . 1791 to 1799

These Reports are condensed by T. J. Fox
Alden, Esq., into three vols., and are sold at the low price of $15. The catalogue price of the old edition, to which they are greatly superior in type and papers is $69. They contain all that is of any value in the original, and as will be seen are sold at less than one fourth the price.
The volumes already published are complete in themselves, having a copious index and table of cases.

To those who cannot afford to purchase the original series of Reports (many volumes of which are out of print) this work will be invaluable, whilst even those who do possess them, will buy it for convenience of reference.

From Hon. J. B. Gibson, Chief Justice.—I have
examined the first volume of Mr. Alden's Condensed Reports, and think the work will be a valuable one, especially to the younger members of the bar, who cannot, at first afford to purchase
the series of our reports, already between seventy
and eighty volumes. The cases are clearly stated,
and the points decided, are accurately extracted.

the work, have also been received from Hon. Edward King, Hon. William B. McClure, Hon. Wil-

Supreme Court.

Opinion by Lowrie, J.

H. KUHN v. NEWMAN. EVANS v. SAME.
E. KUHN v. SAME. S. KUHN v. SAME.
J. H. KUHN v. SAME.

Supreme Court, Phila.

Leaving out all in this will that is irrelevant to these cases, we have an absolute estate in remainder in the children of Mrs. Kuhn, but some of them are not vis juris, and we are to decide whether the titles of any of them are placed under the protection of equity forms of procedure, or are left subject to the rules of law only. The devise is to trustees for the use of the testator's daughter, Mrs. Kuhn, and then in trust for her children, to be divided equally among them "for their sole and separate use respectively, and that free and clear, if females, of any debts, liabilities, contracts or engagements of their husbands, and subject as to the income thereof to their own free and absolute control." There are five children suing, four being daughters, two married and two not, and the fifth a minor son. Are they entitled to their shares of the property clear of the trust?

We must bear in mind that our common law takes a higher position than either English common law or English equity, by adopting a principle that, in form and substance, harmonizes them both into one system. In relation to titles to land it does so by adopting the forms of both as legal forms, and treating all complete equitable titles as complete legal ones, where the persons named as trustees have no duty to perform that requires the seizure and possession to be in them; and then our common law enforces the trust as a legal estate. It makes equitable estates the subjects of alienation, devise and descent, and of actions of ejectment, partition and dower, and liable to debts, curtesy and dower; in all of which particulars it differs from the common law of England as to both uses and trusts. And this principle, fully carried out, would merge the statute of uses, and produce, of itself, exactly the same result in the execution of the estate, just as English equity disregards the form of a trust where there is no substantial and approved purpose to be gained by it. We do not say that it would do to carry it out, but only indicate its efficiency as a general principle. We have carried it out generally, for even those uses that were not executed by the statute; for example, those that are limited against the rules of the common law, 1 Rep. 129 b; a use limited upon a use of chattels real, and a trust to receive rents and pay them to another; 2 Bl. com. 335, all these are executed by our principle.

By that principle, no matter which may be the form of the conveyance, where the whole beneficial estate is granted, all restraints upon its enjoyment are fruitless. As a general rule such restraints avail only in protection of future interests. In the matter of ordinary trusts for individuals, the principle yields only where there is some sort of disability in the owner, that entitles him to the protection of the Court. Neither law or equity undertakes the special guardianship of all those estates that parties choose to create in a peculiar form. Most of them are with us mere legal estates in all their effects, and as to all the remedies for their protection. In England, the form of a trust not executed by the statute of uses, decides the court that is to administer the remedies relating to it, but even there the equitable estate is treated, in all material respects, exactly as courts of law would treat it if it were in the legal form. English equity strikes out improper restraints on the enjoyment of the estates, and all directions to sell land and distribute the proceeds, when the beneficiaries desire it, but it treats such cases as estates not executed by the statute of uses, and retains its jurisdiction for decreeing an account and conveyance. We generally strike down the trust itself and treat the beneficial estate as the true one, 3 Watts & S. 216; 3 Whart. 62; 4 Id. 126.

Married women belong to the class of persons over whom courts of equity extend a measure of guardianship, by recognizing and protecting what is called their separate property; and therefore trusts for the separate use of married women, and of women about to be married, are taken under the care of the courts according to the principles of equity. This trust was not created in favor of women married or contemplating marriage, for some of the devisees were mere children at the testator's death, and the others were not yet born. Is there any principle of law or equity that sanctions the restriction upon the titles of the woman as a means of protecting them from the dangers of the married state. Such a sanction may be found, 1 Term R. 493; but the decided weight of authority is very strongly against it, 1 Rawle, 247; 3 Whart. 66; 4 Id. 128; 2 Myhre & R. 174; 2 Russ. & M. 197, 208, 210; 4 Sim. 141; 7 Eng. ch. R. 317; 6 Id. 72, 74, 457, 463, 464; 19 Ves. 415; 20 State Rep. 302; 23 Id. 30; Atherley on Marr. Settlements, 333.

Whenever the estate granted is essentially an estate in fee in law or equity, there may be disabilities in the owner that will prevent or suspend its complete enjoyment by him as such; but no attribution of qualities to the estate itself, that are inconsistent with its fee simple character, can be allowed. It is essentially subject to the owners absolute control, and all restraints upon this control are void, 19 State R. 44, 371. He that would not allow absolute control must not give an absolute estate. Here the remainders are absolute; and they could not be life estates with limitations over to the next generation without some of the limitations being void for remoteness, and then all could not be treated alike, though this is the evident intention.

Trusts, properly so-called, are uses that our law does not execute as legal estates, because of circumstances that take them out of the ordinary course of legal administration and place them under a special guardianship of the courts; but this is not generally allowed in favor of individual persons who have full competency to act in their own right. A fee simple estate in them is treated as such, whether assured in a legal or equitable form. In other words, persons who are vis juris, men or women, must be satisfied with the ordinary remedies and protection of the law. A trust is nothing that supports no interest or duty. He takes nothing who gets a mere form of title to a thing while its absolute disposal is in another. Except for one of the interests, the trust has terminated by its own limitation.—Striking out the separate use clause as improper the duties of the trust and the trust itself terminated at least when the children arrived at age, and then the absolute title vested in the devisees, just as a trust for a married woman terminates on the death of her husband, 6 Sim. 121, 126; 2 Vern. 270; 1 Jacobs, 603; 2 Russ. & M. 208, and cases before cited.

Is the law different in relation to the title of the minor son? Here we must notice that one of the trusts is, to educate and maintain the children until their arrival at age. If this purpose does not furnish a legitimate reason for preserving the trust from being executed by our law in the beneficiaries, then it is executed.

And surely it is not sufficient, for one of the very first purposes to which our law applies an estate of a minor is to his education and maintenance, the feudal burdens of wardships, reliefs, marriages, heriots, escheats and aids never having been imposed upon them here; to save which, in England, was perhaps the main purpose of the statute of uses. And the administration of minors' estates is not committed here to a court of chancery and they have not, therefore, this reason for calling them equitable estates. They are administered in the Orphans' court according to the rules of law that are applicable to them; rules derived from statutes, common law and equity, but not, on that account, anything else than the legal principles pertaining to the subject. That court gets jurisdiction and guardianship of such estates without the aid of trusts, and it does not need them in order to carry out its functions: for it performs them by means of guardians, who attend to the very duties imposed upon these trustees. When, therefore, on a devise to minors, trustees are appointed to take care of the estate and educate and maintain the devisees until they arrive at age, the trust is void, except where it can be treated as a testamentary guardianship, which can be instituted only by the father. The estate must be administered according to the legal principles, that prevail in the Orphans' court.

What then is the result of all this? Simply that these devisees took a legal and not an equitable estate, and therefore they have no case for the relief they pray for. If they have not received the conveyances they were entitled to on the partition in the Common Pleas, we cannot correct the error in this form. That court will, no doubt, fully execute their decree of partition.

These bills are severally dismissed at the plaintiff's costs.

Opinion by Judge Black.

HOPKINS v. BEEBE & CO.

Certificate from Nisi Prius.

A. B. and C. were bankers, or dealers in bullion and exchange. A. was established at San Francisco, B. at Philadelphia, and C. at New York. On the 10th of February, 1851, B. gave a letter of credit to A., which authorized A. to draw on B. for any amount of money required in his business. A. made this letter as public as he could, by advertisement in the California newspapers, and drew largely on B., who for a time, regularly accepted and paid the bills. To make B.'s acceptances safe, and to reimburse his payments, A. from time to time remitted gold dust, bills of exchange, and notes on the Atlantic cities, to B. These, as they were received, were credited by B. to A.'s account, where A. was also charged with the amount of his bills paid. C. had no concern with the business between the other two houses, except that the packages containing the gold and other effects, were consigned to him at New York, and by him forwarded to Philadelphia. In August, 1851, B. suddenly stopped payment, and soon after, A. also failed. Both concerns were totally insolvent. When this happened, A. was indebted to B. upwards of twenty thousand dollars; that is to say, B. had then paid bills of A. to an amount that much greater than the remittances sent by A. to meet them. And there were a large number of bills not presented, in the hands of holders, who had paid value for them. It appears also, that B. was at the same time indebted to C., but in what precise amount, the record does not show. At the date of B.'s failure, a remittance to him of gold and some other effects was on its way from A., but had not then reached New York. This, like the previous remittances, was shipped at San Francisco, under a bill of lading, to C., and was covered by a policy of insurance in C.'s name. Very soon afterwards, B. made a writing, authorizing and directing C. to take the expected gold and bills, and apply them to the credit of B.'s indebtedness to C. When the vessel which had them on board arrived at New York, this was done.

These are the prominent, and most material facts of the case, as we gather them from a very voluminous record.

The plaintiff in this suit, is the holder of one of the bills drawn by A. on B., which was presented after the failure, and protested for non-acceptance. He brings his action against C. for money had and received to his use; and he insists that he ought to recover, because C. the defendant, took and converted the effects which the drawer sent to meet his bill and others, which effects he alleges were appropriated by the remitter to that purpose, in such manner that they could not be applied to any other without a fraud on the bill holders, the only parties otherwise liable on the bill being insolvent.

The cause was tried at Nisi Prius. Some of the plaintiff's evidence was rejected, and after hearing what was admitted, the judge ordered a nonsuit. This was an error which we must correct, by reversing the judgment, if the most favorable view that can be taken of all the evidence given and offered, will justify a verdict for the plaintiff. But not so if he has no case after we give him the benefit of all the doubts he can raise.

Looking at the facts in this light, it cannot be denied that the drawee of the bill was the debtor of the plaintiff. He owed him the amount of it. That it was not accepted, makes no difference, for his letter bound him to accept it. It must also be conceded, that in consequence of the gold dust being transferred to the defendant, the plaintiff lost his debt, since it may be presumed that the drawee would otherwise have been able to pay at least a part of it. Now, if the defendant accepted a fraudulent transfer of the funds in question, for the purpose of covering them from the creditors of him who made the transfer, he was guilty of a conspiracy to cheat: and the plaintiff being thus defrauded, is entitled to recover from the defendant a just compensation for the injury done him. But he must do this by a special action on the case, as in Mitchell v. Penrod, 8 S. & R. 522; Mott v. Danforth, 6 W. 304; Kelsey v. Murphy, decided at the present term. (13 Leg. Int. 189.)

No contract between the plaintiff and defendant could be implied from such a transaction. The law often presumes that to be true which is known to be false, or which is just as probably false as true; but it never converts a mere contrivance to defraud creditors, into a promise to pay them, nor does it ever suppose that goods sold and delivered by one person who is the owner of them, were sold and delivered by another who never saw them, and had no property in them. When a creditor undertakes to recover his debt from a stranger to the original contract, on the ground of fraud, he must put the charge distinctly on the record, so that it may be met full in the face.

But apart from this objection, there is no fraud here proved, or offered to be proved. There is indeed, a statement on the record that it would be shown in the course of the trial that the defendant held the funds either fraudulently for the use of the drawee, or else for his own use, with knowledge of their appropriation to this. This comes to nothing. The alternatives balance one another. We cannot tell which of the two he meant to prove, nor what evidence of either was to be expected. The specific facts mentioned in or to be inferred from the record, amount to this. The defendant claimed payment of a debt from the drawee, of the bills, who admitted its justice, and paid it by a transfer of the only effects in his possession or under his control, namely—the gold and bills expected from California. Now this was fraudulent, if it be a fraud to accept payment of a debt when one of the consequences of such payment, is to cut out or anticipate other creditors. But the law is well settled the other way, in Worman v. Wolfensberger, 7 Harris, 69; Lloyd v. Williams, 9 Harris, 327; Hart v. Covenhoven, 9 Harris, 495; Uhler v. Maulsair, 11 Harris, 484. The plaintiff and defendant were both creditors of the same insolvent persons. Either had a right to take his debt in anything the debtor was willing to pay with. Neither was under any legal or moral obligation to wait until the other should be first satisfied. The defendant took advantage of circumstances which enabled him to be foremost, and we do not doubt that the plaintiff, in like circumstances, would have acted in the same way.

Of course we assume, (in the absence of evidence to the contrary,) that the debt, in payment of which the gold was taken by the defendant, was just and honest. Such is the presumption of law. Any other presumption would allow an actual fraud to be established without proof. When a person pays a debt, and the honesty of the payment is attacked by other creditors, the burden of proof is on them, and they must show either directly or by circumstances, that no debt existed, or that the value of the property taken in satisfaction was greater than the debt. Nothing of that kind was produced in this case.

But the effects which the defendant got hold of, were sent by the drawer, with the intent that they should be applied to the payment of the bills. The counsel of the plaintiff thinks that the gold dust was thus appropriated to the bill-holders, that it was their property, and not that of the party to whom it was sent, or at least that they have such a lien upon it that any other disposition of it must be void, until the bills are paid.

We are quite clear that the plaintiff had not any title to, or property in, or lien upon, the effects in question. He had an interest that they should reach their destination, and remain there until he could secure them, and appropriate them to his claim. This is the interest which every creditor has in the property of his debtor, when the latter is in failing circumstances. But further than that, the plaintiff had no concern with the remittance. His bill was payable at all events, and his remedy for non-payment was an action on the bill itself against the parties to it. He had no claim upon any particular fund, which he could follow into the hands of other parties. This has been so long and so universally regarded as true, that an order to pay money out of a particular fund, is not anywhere considered as a bill of exchange at all; Chitty, 65, 252; Byles, 8. If the drawee in this case had been directed by the bill to pay the amount of it out of the proceeds of the gold dust, while the instrument would have lost its negotiable character, it would still not have been an assignment of the fund; for according to Mandeville v. Welsh, 5 Wheaton, 277; and Freeman v. Jackson, 5 Peters, 580, a part only of a fund will not be legally assigned, even by an order to pay such part. It is not pretended that the bill in the plaintiff's hands amounted to more than a small part of what the gold dust was worth.

The proposition that a bill of exchange does propria vigore vest in the payee a title to the effects sent to meet it, or give the payee a lien upon such effects, so that he can demand them or their proceeds from a person to whom the drawee has transferred or passed them away, is altogether unsupported by any authority or custom that we know of. Such a rule would certainly not promote the convenience or the safety of commercial business. The contrary doctrine, that the bill has no such operation, but that the holder must look to the parties whose names are on it, and not to any particular fund, has cases in its favor quite numerous enough to sustain a principle so simple and just; more indeed than could have been expected on a point so little likely to be raised; 3 Comstock, 251.

The rule is clearly established that when goods are shipped and the bill of lading sent to the consignee, with the understanding express or implied, that the proceeds are to be credited to the consignor's general account, the property vests by that act in the consignee. The carrier becomes the agent of the consignee and is responsible to him for the non-delivery of the goods. The consignee may sell them before they arrive or afterward. He has the exclusive and unlimited dominion over them which a man ought to have over what belongs to him, 1 Binyon 106; 4 Mees & Welsh 775; 1 Bingham 159, 2 Bingham 20; 1 Borag & Pull 563. We have decided this in the very recent case of Shoemaker v. Eby, (13 Leg. Int. 52.)

The plaintiff seems to think there is some peculiar merit in his case which takes it out of the general rule. It is undoubtedly a hardship on him to lose his money by the insolvency of those whom he trusted; but we cannot, for that reason, give him a remedy which his contract did not provide for, or compel those to pay him who are under no legal obligation to do so, we see nothing in all the transactions set forth upon the record except the not uncommon case of a bill unpaid; the drawer largely indebted to the drawee—funds remitted and used by the drawee to pay other debts.

Tooko v. Hollingsworth, 5 T. R. 215, is much relied on by the plaintiff. That case has not struck us as having much resemblance to this. There the plaintiff, who lived in Manchester, had a factor in London to whom he sent a certain quantity of light coin to be disposed of at an agreed price. At the time when the coin was started from Manchester the factor had, unknown to the plaintiff, committed an act of bankruptcy and absconded. The coin never went to the hands of the consignee but was taken and kept in specie by his assignees. The particular purpose for which it was sent was to pay, with its proceeds, certain bills previously drawn by the plaintiff and accepted by the consignee. The plaintiff, however, took up the bills himself and then brought trover for the coin against the assignees. He was permitted to recover and rightly, because the coin was sent for a particular purpose, which the consignee had disabled himself from executing, because the plaintiff, by taking up the bills, had put them out of the question as completely as if they had never been drawn; because the assignees stood exactly in the shoes of the consignee and no third parties were to be affected; because the assignment remained in specie and therefore liable to be reclaimed by the consignor whose title to it had, under the circumstances, never been divested.

But the opinion of the court contains no intimation that, if the bills had remained unpaid, the holders would have been entitled to more than their dividend out of all the assets of the bankrupt. Nor did either of the judges say that the plaintiff himself, even after paying the bills, could have recovered from a third party, if the consignee had disposed of it, by what would have been a good sale of his own property. The report of the case certainly affords no ground for supposing it to have been believed by the court that the remitter of the coin parted with his property in it to the payees when he drew the bills, and had it transferred back to him again when he took the bills up.

The want of privity is a fatal objection to the plaintiff's recovery. This is an action ex contractu. Where is the contract between these parties? The defendant was not the agent of the bill holders; he stood in no relation to them which made it his duty to take charge of their interests; he did not receive the gold from them and it was not their property; he did not promise to keep it for them or to pay them the proceeds of it; he had not even a direction to that effect from the person who transferred it to him; he was in every way a stranger to them and their business. In Yates v. Bell, 3 Barn. & Ald. 643, the defendant had a sum of money remitted to him with special directions to pay it over to two creditors of the remitter. He paid one but refused to pay the other. The unpaid creditor brought suit but failed for want of privity. Williams v. Everett, 14 East 582, is to the like purpose and so is Bigelow v. Davis, 16 Barb. 561. In those cases the want of privity was much less palpable than it is in the one now before us. Here there was not even a direction to the defendant to pay the plaintiff. It is not worth while to go behind the transaction by which the defendant got possession of the fund; but, if it were, the record shows that when it was remitted from California the remitter did not accompany it with any orders which forbade it to be credited to his general account with the remitee; and on that account there was then a balance against him of more than twenty thousand dollars.

The defendant did make a contract concerning these funds which bound him to forward them to Philadelphia as soon as they reached him at New York. If he had violated this duty the ultimate consignee, but nobody else, could have sued him. When the person to whom they were to be sent, (the only person who would have had an action against him for not sending them) agreed that he should keep them in payment of a debt, that agreement acquitted him as fully as he would have been acquitted by a receipt for their delivery.

It was urged at the bar, but not as it seemed to us, with much confidence in the point that the drawer and drawee of the bills were partners, and the funds in question partnership property, which could not be used by one of the firm to pay his separate debt. Their relation does not come within any definition of a partnership and it is therefore not necessary to say whether, if they were partners, the defendant would or would not be liable to the partnership creditors in this form of action.

Since there is no contract at all which any of the bill holders could sue the defendant upon, it is manifestly useless to decide whether, if the fact had been otherwise, the cause of action could be split into as many parts as there are bills, or whether only one action could be sustained for the joint benefit of all the holders.

We have disposed of this case. It is said that another action is pending against the same defendant, in the name of the drawer, for the use of this plaintiff. We cannot decide what is not before us. If our reasoning on this case satisfies the plaintiff that he cannot recover in the other he will see the prudence of stopping where he is. If not, our duty will be met when it rises.

We are asked to reverse this judgment and send the record back to the Nisi Prius for the sole purpose of enabling another party to be substituted as plaintiff. That party would then proceed on grounds of law and fact, totally different from those on which the now plaintiff has been hitherto claiming; we cannot see the law, justice, or propriety of doing this. We will not reverse a judgment in which there is no error. The plaintiff has tried his cause through and through. He has failed because he has no claim. If any body else desires to make the same or a similar experiment the courts are open. If the present plaintiff wishes to pursue his demand in another name, and upon different principles, it is but fair that he should pay the costs of this suit and begin de novo.

On the whole, I may sum up the opinion of this court in brief, by saying that:
1. B., the Philadelphia house, was debtor to both the plaintiff and defendant.

2. The defendant had a right to accept payment of his debt from B., in gold dust, or anything else he could get, though he knew that B. was also indebted to the plaintiff, and could not pay both.

3. If the facts had been otherwise, that is to say, if the transfer from B. to the defendant had been made for the fraudulent purpose of cheating the plaintiff, the latter might have had an action on the case against the defendant.

4. But no proof of such fraudulent conspiracy between the defendant and the plaintiff's debtor, would sustain assumption.

5. The holder of a bill of exchange is not the owner of the money, goods, or effects which the drawer has remitted to the drawee. Nor has he any lien upon such funds. And this is true whether the remittance was made before or after the date of the bill.

6. Effects remitted to meet a bill drawn or intended to be drawn, are the property of the remitee, and he may transfer them, or use them as other men use their own at any time after they are shipped.

7. The holder of the bill drawn against such a remittance, cannot call the remitee to account for the effects remitted; much less can he follow them into the hands of another party with whom he has no privity, and who has paid the remitee a valuable consideration for them. If the bill be unpaid, the holder's remedy is an action on the bill itself.

8. If there be one case which requires the application of these general principles more than another, it is such a case as the present, where the drawer and drawee had a large correspondence, where the former was indebted to the latter, and where the remittance was accompanied by no instructions which forbade it to be credited to the drawer's general account.

9. There being nothing on the record to show that any error was committed at Nisi Prius, we will not reverse the judgment merely to give the plaintiff an opportunity of presenting his case in a new form. Judgment affirmed.
