KAY & BROTHER,

LAW BOOKSELLERS, PUBLISHERS AND IMPORTERS.

17 AND 19 SOUTH FIFTH STREET,

First Door above Chestnut.

Kay & Brother respectfully invite the attention of the members of the Legal Profession to the following invaluable publications, and solicit them to call and examine their select stock of Law Books.

JUST PUBLISHED.

HARRIS' REPORTS OF THE SUPREME COURT OF PENNSYLVANIA. Vol. XII. By George W. Harris.

KAY & BROTHER beg leave to announce that they have become the sole publishers of Harris' Reports, of which eleven volumes have been already issued. They have just published the twelfth and last volume of the series, which fills up the interval between Harris' and Casey's Reports, which they also publish. The difficulty in obtaining, when and as wanted, the various volumes of Harris' Reports, will in future be obviated, as regular and full supplies of them all will be kept constantly on hand and for sale.

CASEY'S PENNSYLVANIA STATE REPORTS, VOL. I.—Pennsylvania State Reports, Vol. XXV., containing reports of cases adjudged by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, by Joseph Casey, Esq., State Reporter. This volume contains the cases decided in part of May Term, 1855; in October Term, 1856, and part of January Term, 1856. It will be the joint endeavor of the Reporter and Publisher to issue the respective volumes as speedily as possible, after the determination of the cases which each volume will contain, and thus to remove a serious ground of complaint on the part of the bar. Subscribers wanted for a single volume or the entire series.

BRIGHTLY'S PURDON'S ANNUAL DIGEST, FOR THE YEARS 1854, 1855, and 1856—on the plan and in continuation of Stroud & Brightly's Purdon, 1700 to 1853. Annual Digest of the Laws of Pennsylvania for each of the years 1854, 1855 and 1856, namely, from 28 May, 1853, to 15 May, 1856, together with some laws inadvertently omitted in Purdon's Digest, 1700 to 1853; Marginal References; a Digested Syllabus of each Title; Foot Notes to the Judicial Decisions; and a full and exhaustive Index, in which the contents of all the annual Digests are incorporated in one alphabet. The whole completing Stroud & Brightly's Purdon's Digest to the present time. By Frederick C. Brightly, Esq., author of the "Law of Costs," "Equity Jurisprudence;" Editor of Purdon's Digest, &c. Price only Fifty cents.

DUNLAP'S BOOK OF FORMS.—A Book of Forms containing more than twelve hundred Forms, for practice in the Courts of Pennsylvania and of the United States, and for conveyancing; also, for the use of Public Officers and Men of Business generally. Adopted by the recent acts of Assembly of Pennsylvania, with explanatory remarks, and numerous precedents and references to Standard Authorities.—By James D. Dunlap, Counsellor at Law, &c. Third edition price, only $4.00. Dunlap's Forms and Graydon's Forms (which latter work Kay & Brother also publish) will supply the Lawyer, the Conveyancer, and the Business Man, with all the aids from approved precedents which he will need.

WHARTON & STILLE'S MEDICAL JURISPRUDENCE.—A treatise on Medical Jurisprudence, by Francis Wharton, author of a treatise on "American Criminal Law," "Precedents of Indictments," "American Law of Homicide," &c., and Moreton Stille, M. D., lecturer on the Principles and Practice of Medicine, in the Philadelphia Association for Medical Instruction. In 1 vol. ume, royal 8 vo., 815 pages.

PREPARING FOR PUBLICATION.

SERGEANT ON THE MECHANIC'S LIEN LAW—second edition, in 1 vol., 8vo., of 300 to 500 pages. Edited by E. Spencer Miller, Esquire, Counsellor at Law and Professor of the law of Real Estate, Conveyancing and Equity Jurisprudence in the Law Department of the University of Pennsylvania. The Statutes and Decisions, since 1839, (when the first edition was published) have so radically affected this branch of the law, that an entirely new arrangement has been adopted, and a much larger volume will be required than that originally published. The editor and publishers will make every effort to present to the Bar a treatise which will exhaust the law upon this subject, as far as it has been announced, and which will be found practically useful to the profession. It will contain Precedents of Forms carefully prepared, with a view to the latest aspects of the law; and also, all the acts of Assembly relating to the subject. The table of cases and index will be elaborate and exhaustive.

BURTON ON THE LAW OF REAL PROPERTY.—An Elementary Compendium of the law of Real Property, by Walter Henry Burton, Esq., late one of the Fellows on Mr. Viner's foundation for the study of the Common Law in the University of Oxford, with notes, showing the alterations in the law to the present time, to which is now prefixed an introductory chapter, giving a concise historical outline of such parts of the law as have been the subject of statutory alteration, by Edward Priestly Cooper, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister at Law. From the last (the eighth) London edition, with full American annotations. By Charles Gocopp, Esq. 1 vol., 8vo.

GOWEN ON WILLS.—In 2 vol's 8vo., of 700 pages each.

Vol. I.—Execution and Probate of Wills.

Vol. II.—Construction of Wills.

A Treatise on the Law of Wills and Testamentary Dispositions in the United States. By James E. Gowen, Esq., of the Philadelphia Bar.

A DIGEST OF THE LAWS OF THE UNITED STATES on the plan of Purdon's Digest, 1700 to 1866.—Kay & Brother beg leave to announce that they have, in course of preparation, a Digest of the Laws of the United States, by F. C. Brightly, Esq., editor of Purdon's Digest, &c., &c., which will be compiled on the model, which, in the case of their eighth edition of Purdon's Digest, has given so much satisfaction to the Legal Profession and the Public.

CASEY'S PENNSYLVANIA STATE REPORTS, VOL. II. N. B.—Catalogues cheerfully furnished upon application.

DESIRABLE IMPROVEMENT.

Many efforts have been made to preserve the form and features of a departed friend, without the usual mode, so repugnant to the feelings, of placing the ice on the body. The difficulty has been overcome by an

Air-tight Preserver,

In which cold air is the medium used, acting as a preservative in the warmest weather, for any length of time. At the same time the body is entirely secure from nocturnal depredations. Thus arranged it can be conveyed HUNDREDS of miles with perfect safety, and in a good state of preservation. The apparatus is for preserving the body until time for burial—it is then placed in the coffin. The Subscriber, who is the sole patentee, is also a FURNISHING UNDERTAKER. Having had many years experience, he flatters himself he can render every satisfaction.

The above is for sale to Undertakers. All the necessary materials for Funeral Occasions, such as Lead and other Coffins always on hand. JOHN GOOD, No. 145 Spruce St. above Fifth, Philada.

Law School of the University at Cambridge, Mass.

The instructors in this school are HON. JORL PARKER, LL. D., Royal Professor. HON. THEOPHILUS PARSONS, LL. D., Dane Professor. HON. EMERY WASHBURN, LL. D., University Professor.

The course of instruction embraces the various branches of the Common Law, and of Equity, Admiralty, Commercial, International and Constitutional Law, and the Jurisprudence of the United States. The Law Library consists of about 14,000 volumes, and as new works appear they are added and every effort is made to render it complete.

Instruction is given by oral lectures and expositions, (and by recitations and examinations, in connection with them,) of which there are ten every week. Two Moot Courts are also holden in each week, at each of which a cause, previously given out, is argued by four students, and an opinion delivered by the presiding instructor. Rooms and other facilities are also provided for the Club Courts; and an Assembly is held weekly for practice in debate, and acquiring a knowledge of Parliamentary law and proceedings.

Students may enter the school in any stage of their professional studies or mercantile pursuits, and at the commencement of either term, or in the middle, or other part of a term. They are at liberty to select what studies they will pursue according to their view of their own wants and attainments.

The Academical year, which commences on Thursday, six weeks after the third Wednesday in July, is divided into two terms, of twenty weeks each, with a vacation of six weeks at the end of each term.

During the winter vacation, the Library is opened, warmed and lighted, for the use of the members of the school.

Applications for admission, or for Catalogues, or any further information, may be made to either of the Professors at Cambridge. June 6-ly.

NOTICE.—FARMERS' AND MECHANICS' BANK. Philadelphia, May 31, 1856.—The Stockholders of the Farmers' and Mechanics' Bank, having at a general meeting held this day, accepted the provisions of the Supplementary Act of Assembly, approved the 24th day of April, 1856, and having decided to authorize the Directors to increase the Capital stock of the said bank by adding thereto the sum of seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars in shares of fifty dollars each, and the Board of Directors having at a special meeting held this day, decided to increase the capital in conformity therewith. Notice is hereby given in pursuance of the provisions of the second section of said Act, that should any of the Stockholders not take their respective proportions of new stock, on or before the first day of August, A. D., 1856, in the one or the other of the modes of payment stated in the circular issued on the first of May last, (a copy of which may be had at the Banking House,) the same will be sold by the Bank at public sale by auction according to law.

NOTICE.

THE Subscriber takes this method of informing his numerous friends, and the public in general, that he is now prepared to execute in a superior manner, every variety of HOUSE and SIGN PAINTING, Graining, Bronzing, Gilding on Glass and Stained Glass, Calomining Ceilings, Walls, &c., &c. China and Glass Painting executed in a superior manner, and warranted not to CRACK. Ceilings cleaned and whitened, and made equal to new, at a cost little over that of whitewash. The subscriber would state here that it frequently occurs that persons attempt to use this article who have no knowledge of it whatever, either in the mixing or putting it on, and the consequence is, the job is spoiled, and the article condemned without a proper trial.—So also with CHINA GLOSS; to make a good job it requires a practical knowledge of the use of the brush, as also the making of the Gloss. In regard to the ZINC WHITE, the subscriber would most respectfully recommend it as an article far superior to any other paint now in use, for whiteness and durability of color.

The Subscriber would respectfully solicit a portion of the patronage of those getting Painting done. Feeling grateful for the many favors already bestowed by his friends, he still hopes to share their patronage by unremitting attention to their calls. Those who have large contracts to give out, need have no hesitancy in calling, as he is prepared to give every satisfaction in regard to work, both in reference and security, for the faithful performance of all agreements.

The Subscriber can be found at the S. E. CORNER OF FOURTH AND WALNUT STS. where he will be happy to receive any orders. Aug. 24—1 yr. JACOB S. BEAM.

GREAT FIRE, MAY 1, 1856.

HERRING'S PATENT CHAMPION SAFES!
What the People Say!

PHILADELPHIA, 2d May, 1856.

MESSRS. FARRELS & HERRING—
GENTLEMEN—The Herring's Patent Fire-Proof Safe, which we purchased of you in the month of January last, was situated in our Counting-Room, in the second story of 231 Market street, on the night of the Great Fire, 1st May, 1856, and fell with the burning building in that conflagration.
The Safe was reached this afternoon, after an exposure of THIRTY-SIX HOURS to intense heat, and although the brass plates on the front of the Safe were melted, and the exterior shows the evidence of extreme heat, the inside casing was found to be UNTOUCHED BY FIRE, and with the exception of being a little steamed is now as good as new.
EDW. SEMANS & CO.

MESSRS. FARRELS & HERRING—
GENTLEMEN—The Herring's Patent Fire-Proof Safe, of your manufacture, which we purchased nearly a year since, was in the centre of our building at the time of its destruction in the Great Fire of May 1, 1856.

We had removed the greater portion of our Books before the fire reached us, but left some of them, together with a number of loose papers, inside, purposely to test the security of the safe. After thirty-eight hours of severe roasting, we found the interior of the Safe, upon opening, not only bright and sound, but the Books and Papers as free from fire as when first put in.

We shall require another Safe as soon as we get a new location, and want none but your "Champion."
Yours, &c.,
FISHER & BROTHIER,
No. 15 North Sixth street.

The public will bear in mind that the "HERRING'S PATENT" is the only Safe made in this City, which has never failed to preserve its contents in accidental fires.

The TWO SAFES from the above Great Fire can now be seen in front of the OLD STAND, No. 34 WALNUT STREET.

T. & J. W. JOHNSON,
LAW BOOKSELLERS AND PUBLISHERS,

No. 197 CHESTNUT STREET,
PHILADELPHIA.

The Fullest, the Latest, and the Best
REPORTS OF THE COMMON LAW COURTS OF ENGLAND.

Containing the cases decided in the Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Nisi Prius Courts, from 1813 to 1855, and in the Court of Exchequer and Exchequer Chamber, from 1824 to 1855, are found in
The Regular and Authoritative Series of the

English Common Law and English Exchequer Reports,

Which present the following claims to the support of the profession:

1. They are the only series issued as the authoritative and acknowledged medium by which the decisions of the Law Courts of England are made public.

2. They contain Later Reports than the Boston series, are more fully and more ably reported, and so arranged by preservation of the original paging, that reference by reporters, or by elementary writers, can be traced as readily as in the English editions.

Vol. 2, Ellis & Blackburne's (75 E. C. L. R.) Reports (Q. B.) to January, 1854, was published by us in June, 1854. At that time the last Queen's Bench case printed in the Boston Law and Equity Reports, was of June 25, 1853. Our volume contained cases decided five months later. The Queen's Bench cases to November 25, 1853, were published in the Boston series in August, 1854, two months after we had distributed the same cases.

Vol. 3, Ellis & Blackburne's (77 E. C. L. R.), with cases to the end of Trinity Term, 1854, was published when the latest case of Queen's Bench decisions in the Boston series, was of February 8, 1854, more than four months behind the regular reporters.

Exchequer Reports, vol. 9, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) distributed by us January 11, 1855, contains cases to May 10, 1854. The last Exchequer case then in the Boston series was decided February 9, 1854, four months behind the regular Reporter, issued in Philadelphia.

3. They contain more cases decided by the courts represented, than any other series issued in this country.

Vol. 77 English Common Law, (3 E. & B.) reports eighty-six cases decided in the Queen's Bench since January 11, 1854, while but fifty-eight Queen's Bench cases, decided since January 1, 1854, are found scattered among Vols. 22, 24 and 25 of the Boston Law and Equity.

Vol. 78 E. C. L. K. (5 J. Scott,) reports sixty-five cases decided since Nov. 13, 1853, in the Common Pleas, while the L. & E. has but fifty-seven cases in that Court since the same period.

Vol. 9 Exchequer Reports, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) reports one hundred and ten cases in the Courts of Exchequer, decided since June 24, 1853, while since the same date, the L. & E. report but 107 cases, scattered through vols. 20, 22, 24 and 25.

4. They are almost exclusively cited in argument of counsel, and referred to by Elementary Writers for Law Authorities. See Smith's Leading Cases, Smith's Contracts, Smith's Landlord and Tenant, by Maude; Byles on Bills and Promissory Notes, Broom's Legal Maxims, Broom's Commentaries on the Laws of England, or almost any recent Law Book issued in England.

5. The Philadelphia Reports are edited by Judge Sharswood and by Judge Hare, whose labors as editors and authors have made them so well and so favorably known to the profession.

6. The Boston Law and Equity is made up in this country from the Law Journal, Jurist, Times and other Law periodicals, of a weekly, monthly, or quarterly character, and being unknown in England, is never cited in Court, or referred to by Law writers. The periodicals from which it is extracted, are occasionally cited under their own particular names, but they do not possess that permanent value, even in England, which is all-important in a series of Reports.

A carefully prepared and accurate Annual Digest of all the cases decided by the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Exchequer, will be distributed, early in each year, to subscribers to either series, free of charge. That for 1854 is ready, and will be mailed to subscribers who have not received a copy.

IN PRESS AND IN PREPARATION.

Leading Cases on the Law relating to Real Property, Conveyancing, and the Construction of Wills, by Queen Daries Tudor, author of Leading Cases in Equity. With very full notes referring to American Decisions.

District Court.

FOR THE CITY AND COUNTY OF PHILADELPHIA.

Arrangement of Business FOR SEPTEMBER TERM, 1856.

The term will commence on the 1st day of September 1856, with Motions and Arguments, which will continue four weeks, and terminate on the 27th day of September, 1856. The ensuing nine weeks are fixed for

JURY TRIALS.

First Period, three weeks from Sept. 29th, 1856, to Oct. 18th, 1856, inclusive.

Second Period, three weeks from Oct. 20th, 1856, to Nov. 8th, 1856, inclusive.

Third Period, three weeks from Nov. 10th, 1856, to Nov. 29th, 1856, inclusive.

The Venire for the First Period, will issue on August 28th, 1856.

The Venire for the Second Period, will issue on Sept. 18th, 1856.

The Venire for the Third Period, will issue on Oct. 9th, 1856.

Causes entitled to be placed upon the First Period, must be at issue on or before August 27th, 1856.

Second Period, must be at issue on or before Sept. 17th, 1856.

Third Period, must be at issue on or before Oct. 8th, 1856.

RULE LXVII. No cause shall be placed on the Trial List until after issue joined, nor without the written order of one of the parties or his counsel. Nor shall any cause be placed on the Trial List for any period, unless the same shall be at issue before the issuing of the venire for such period. It shall be the duty of the Prothonotary, at least thirty days before the commencement of any period appropriated to the trial of causes by jury to make out a complete list of all causes entitled to be placed on the Trial List for such period; and none of the causes on such list shall be continued to another term unless at the joint request of the Counsel, signified by writing filed with the Prothonotary at least three weeks before the commencement of such period.

It is the duty of the Prothonotary at least thirty days before the commencement of any period appropriated to the trial of causes by Jury, to make out and deliver to the Sheriff the venire for such period.

RULE OF COURT, JUNE 6, 1848. Ordered. That any party intending to tax costs before the Prothonotary, shall give him and the opposite party twenty-four hours notice of such intention—the time to be fixed for such taxation shall be from one to three o'clock, P. M.

RULE OF COURT, MARCH 7, 1849. Ordered. That hereafter the Prothonotary shall issue no capias ad respondendum endorsed with bail in more than $500, without a special allocatur from one of the Judges.

RULE OF COURT, DECEMBER 27, 1851. Ordered. That in every case of a bill of Exceptions it shall be the duty of the party presenting the bill, within twenty days thereafter, to have the same settled by the Judge before whom the case was tried on 48 hours notice, with a copy of the bill served on the opposite party, otherwise the Judge shall not be required to seal the same. Provided, that the rule now in force, requiring the bill to be presented within ten days be not affected by the adoption of this rule.

ORDERED:—MAY 28, 1853. That the Rules of this Court, as printed by A. Walker, in his book of Court Rules, the present year, be and they are hereby adopted and published as the Rules of this Court, from and after the first Monday of June next; and all other Rules heretofore made, are hereby repealed from that time.

JAMES W. FLETCHER, Prothonotary.

August 1st, 1856.

RULE OF COURT.

IN THE ORPHANS' COURT FOR THE CITY AND COUNTY OF PHILADELPHIA.

December 15, 1855.

It was Ordered. That all appraisements made under the provisions of the 5th section of the Act of Assembly of April 14th, 1851, and presented to the Orphans' Court for approval, shall be accompanied by a petition by the party asking the approval, in which shall be fully set out the facts and circumstances upon which the right of the party to claim a retention of the property is founded—and that notice of the filing of said appraisement shall be published twice a week for two weeks in a public newspaper, and twice in the Legal Intelligencer; and unless exceptions be presented on or before the next Orphans' Court day after the expiration of said notice, the Court will then take action upon the said appraisement.

JOHN L. WENDELL,

LATE REPORTER OF THE SUPREME COURT.

Four Octavo Volumes, bound in fine
Law Sheep, Price $7 00.

The Twenty-first Edition of "Black-stone's Commentaries" was prepared by intrusting each one of the four great departments of jurisprudence, treated of by
Sir WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, to a separate
Editor, whose professional studies had made him peculiarly conversant with that particular branch of learning, to wit:

Vol. I. To J. F. HARGRAVE, of Lincoln's Inn,
Barrister at Law.

Vol. II. To G. SWIFT, of the Inner Temple,
Barrister at Law.

Vol. III. To R. COUCH, of the Middle Temple,
Barrister at Law.

Vol. IV. To W. N. WELSLY, Recorder of Chester.

Into the hands of these gentlemen were put all the Editions of Blackstone then extant in England, with directions to avail themselves of such notes of former editors
as they should approve, (among those editions was that of MR. CHITTY.) Under those circumstances, and by this division of labor, was produced a work highly beneficial to the student, and greatly facilitating the researches of counsel.

The notes of the American Editor were to show the Common Law as it exists in this country under our institutions, particularly in the State of New York, and more especially as effected by the Revised Statutes of that State, and to point out the diversities of the Common Law as held in England and in this country in the few instances in which a difference exists.

This edition is the most accurate and useful which has appeared.—London Times.

Incomparably the best edition that has ever been published.—Literary World.

We do not hesitate to endorse the emphatic approval which the edition has received in Eng-

The Bank of Cash Credits.

Application will be made to the Legislature of Pennsylvania, for the Charter of a Bank Issue with general banking privileges, with a capital of ONE MILLION OF DOLLARS. Said Bank to be located in the City of Philadelphia, to be called the "Robert Morris Bank," and to be conducted upon the system of cash credits only, as is herewith indicated.

A cash credit is a credit given to an individual by a Banking Company, for a limited sum, seldom under $500, or $1000, upon his own security and that of two or three individuals, approved by the Bank, who become sureties for its payment. The individual who has obtained such a credit, is enabled to draw the whole sum, or any part of it, when he pleases; replacing it, or portions of it, according as he finds it convenient; interest being charged upon such part only as he draws out.

"If a man borrows $1000, from a private hand, and even then it is not always to be found when required, he pays interest for it, whether he be using it or not. His bank credit costs him nothing, except during the moment it is of service to him, and this circumstance is of equal advantage as if he had borrowed money at a much lower rate of interest."

Cash credits are not, however, intended to be a dead load; the main objects of the Banks in granting them is to get their notes circulated, and they do not grant them except to persons in business, or to those who are frequently drawing out and paying in money.

Any person who applies to a bank for a cash credit, is called upon to produce sureties, and, after a full inquiry into the character of the applicant, the nature of his business, and the sufficiency of his securities, he is allowed to open a credit, and to draw upon the Bank for the whole of its amount, or for such part as his daily transaction may require. To the credit of the account, he pays in such sums as he may not have occasion to use, and interest is charged or credited upon the balance, as the case may be. From the facility which these cash credits give to all the small transactions of the country, and from the opportunities which they afford to persons who begin business with little or no capital but their character, to employ profitably the minutest products of their industry, it cannot be doubted that the most important advantages are derived in the whole community.

Such privileges and immunities as the "Metropolitan Bank of New York" exercises, will be applied for.

BLANK BOOKS
AND STATIONERY.

DAVID M. HOGAN,

Respectfully informs his friends and the public, that he will continue the manufacture of Blank Books, and sale of Stationery, at the old stand, formerly occupied by Hogan & Bechtel, and would be thankful for any orders they may favor him with. Orders for Engraving, Lithographing, Job Printing of every description.

BLANK BOOKS FOR BANKS,

Public Offices, Merchants, and others, attended to with promptness, and executed in the best manner. A good supply of Counting House and other Stationery kept constantly on hand.

MANUFACTORY

To the Ladies and Gentlemen of Philadelphia, and Travellers Generally.

The Subscribers will now offer to sell, at Retail, our large and extensive stock of Trunks, Valises, Leather and Carpet Bags, Ladies Hat Boxes, Dress Trunks, together with a general assortment of improved Steel Spring Solid Sole Leather Trunks, of various styles.
Being entirely engaged in the Manufacturing of all kinds of Travelling articles, and paying personal attention to our Manufacturing Department, it enables us to warrant our work to be made superior to any other establishment in this City. Travellers wishing to get a first rate article, and to save from ten to fifteen per cent.
are respectfully invited to call at this old and extensive Prize Medal Trunk Manufactory.

THOS. W. MATTSON,
Manufacturer, 130 Market Street, South-west corner
Fourth. jy 19-ly.

UNDERTAKER.

LEWIS FAYETTE respectfully informs his friends and the public that he has, at the request of many friends, opened a place of business at No. 148 South NINTH Street, next door to the Penn College, below Locust Street. He still continues his old stand, at No.
350 S. SECOND Street. He assures those who call on him in time of trouble, that they will not be dissatisfied. Carriages of all kinds constantly on hand. Hearses and Carriages supplied by none, with careful drivers.
15-ly.

THE STATE
SAVINGS FUND.

INTEREST FIVE PER CENT, PER ANNUM.

ALL SUMS OF MONEY RETURNED ON DEMAND.

OFFICE, NEXT DOOR TO THE POST OFFICE;

No. 83 Dock Street,

PHILADELPHIA, 1854.

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND, No. 83 DOCK Street, next door to THIRD Street, and adjoining the POST OFFICE, receives MONEY on deposit daily, from 9 in the morning until 3 in the afternoon; also Monday evenings, from 7 to 9 o'clock. Interest is allowed on deposits at the rate of FIVE PER CENT per annum. Deposits will be returned in whole, or in part, on demand, without notice.

The popularity of this Office with all classes of the community, both in town and country, and its consequent success, may be ascribed, in part, to the following substantial reasons:

1st. It offers a convenient, responsible, and profitable
Depository to Executors, Administrators, Assignees, Collectors, Agents, and all public officers—to Attorneys, Trustees, Societies and Associations, whether incorporated or otherwise—to married or single ladies—to Students, Merchants, Clerks, and business men generally—to Mechanics, Farmers, Minors of either sex, and all who have funds, much or little, to deposit, where they may be had at any time, with Five Per Cent interest added.

2d. Depositors receive Books, with an abstract of the
By-laws and regulations, in which is entered their deposits, which Books serve as vouchers. They may designate in case of sickness, death, or absence, who shall receive their deposits, without the intervention of Executors or Administrators. Any one or more persons may deposit in his, her, or their name, or for any other person or persons.

3d. A Report is made each year to the Legislature and Councils of the City.

4th. The Officers are sworn before they enter upon their duties, in addition to giving Bonds with sureties.

5th. The State Savings Fund is a real Savings Fund—not an Insurance and Trust Company. The Charter of this Institution avoids the Insurance business.

6th. Deposits may be withdrawn by checks after the manner customary with Banks. Check Books will be furnished to depositors without charge.

Curtis's Supreme Court Decisions

THE DECISIONS OF THE SUPREME

COURT OF THE UNITED STATES,

With notes and a Digest by Hon. Benjamin R.
Curtis, one of the Associate Justices of the Court.
In 22 volumes, octavo. Comprising the Cases reported by Dallas, 4 vols.; Cranch, 9 vols.; Wheaton, 12 vols.; Peters, 16 vols.; Howard, 17
vols.

The old series of these reports are in 57 volumes, the Catalogue price of which is $217 50.
This edition in 22 volumes, is offered to subscribers at the low price of $3 a volume; thus bringing them within the means of all. The volumes are delivered as fast as issued, and it is intended that the whole work shall be completed
early in 1856.

Vols. 1 to 15 are now ready.

We ask attention to the following approval by the members of the Supreme Court of the United States:

"We approve the plan of Mr. Justice Cur-tis's, 'Decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States,' and believe that its execution by him will be of much utility to the legal profession and to our country.

ROGER B. TANEY, Chief Justice
JOHN McLEAN, Associate Justice.
JAMES M. WAYNE, Associate Justice.
JOHN CATRON, Associate Justice.
PETER V. DANIEL, Associate Justice.
SAMUEL NELSON, Associate Justice.
ROBERT C. GRIER, Associate Justice.
J. A. CAMPBELL, Associate Justice."

English Law and Equity Reports.

ENGLISH REPORTS IN LAW AND EQUITY. A Complete Collection of the Cases decided by the House of Lords, the Privy Council, the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas and Exchequer, the Lord Chancellor, the High Court of Appeal in Chancery, the Court of Criminal Appeal, and the Admiralty and Ecclesiastical Courts. Reprinted within a few weeks after the decisions are rendered.

This series has the merit of being complete, reliable, prompt, convenient, and cheap. It is now universally cited in the courts, and referred to in the recent law books as standard authority.
All the cases reported in England, are here reprinted from the most reliable sources, as soon as they reach this country.

These Reports are now regularly digested in our Annual United States Digest, which thus embraces an annual digest of the whole English and American Law.

We have now in Preparation, and shall soon
Publish,

A separate Digest of these Reports, embracing the first thirty-one volumes of the series, prepared with express reference to the convenience of the American profession, and exhibiting a complete synopsis of all the English Decisions reported in those volumes during the last five years; also a Table of Cases referring to all the contemporaneous English Reports. This will be the first Digest of English Decisions prepared expressly for the American Lawyer, and it is intended to give it the same advantages over the English Digests hitherto reprinted in this country, which the American text books have generally been found to possess over the English.

The Law and Equity Reports will be continued on the same plan as heretofore; the number of volumes being reduced to four per year; and Digests will be published from time to time as the convenience of the profession demands.

Vols. 1 to 31, now ready for delivery, at $2 00 per volume.

All applications to the Court of Common Pleas for Charters, for September term, must be filed in the office, and cost of advertising be paid on or before Saturday, August 23d.

APPEALS.

The September term of the Court of Common Pleas will commence on Monday, the fifteenth of September.

RETRIBUTION.

By Mrs. E. D. N. Southworth.

T. B. Peterson, & Co., Philadelphia.

This work is, in our opinion, the best of Mrs. Southworth's writings, and is calculated to entitle her to rank among the first, if not the best, female novelist of America. The plot is good, the style agreeable, and the delineation of character remarkably fine, while the moral tendencies of the work are unexceptionable.

Mr. Arthur M. Burton, No. 101 South Fifth Street, has been appointed Commissioner for Illinois.

Supreme Court.

Opinion by Judge Black.

BREINIG vs. BREINIG.

Appeal from the Common Pleas of Northampton.

Divorce—Specification—Alimony—Condomnation.

This was a libel for divorce brought by a wife against her husband, and grounded on the allegation of cruel and barbarous treatment. It was tried by a jury and resulted in a decree in favor of the libellant. The respondent has taken this appeal.

We shall not discuss the points seriatim as they were argued by the counsel. It will be more convenient to consider them in a different order and reduce their number by resolving several into one.

1. The Court permitted evidence to be given of particular acts done and words spoken by the respondent, although he had no notice to meet them, other than the general allegations of the libel. He might have entitled himself to a more specific notice by demanding it. But when he went to trial without doing so, he must be presumed to have waived notice. If he had been really surprised at the trial, an affidavit to that effect would have got him a continuance. But the same subject had been investigated before, and he probably knew every inch of the ground he had to go over. His objection to the want of a specification is merely technical, and tried by the technical standard, there is nothing in it.

2. At least five of the exceptions are based on a supposed deficiency of the evidence to prove such acts or threats of cruelty as would justify a divorce. We had the same question before us in Breinig vs. Meitaler, 11 Harris, 156. Upon the same evidence we held then, what we now again declare to be our opinion, that the evidence was proper to be received and submitted to the jury, so that they might determine whether it involved a threat or not. These acts and words, which did of themselves imply no intention to inflict personal injury were properly received as showing the terms on which the parties lived.

3. The respondent was not permitted to show that his wife had once made an unsuccessful effort to have him bound over to keep the peace. This record was rightly rejected. She was not a party to it in any sense that would make it binding on her. Nor does it appear to have any relation to the subject matter of the present dispute. No copy of it is produced, and the bill of exceptions does not show whether the complaint was made one year or seven years before the separation of the parties. The respondent's counsel think it should have been admitted, because it is alleged in his answer and denied in the replication. But neither the answer nor the replication is on the paper book, and we cannot put our decision of a cause on the pleadings without seeing them.

4. It is argued that the Court ought not to have allowed the libellant so much alimony nor anything at all for expenses. If there was error in this we have no authority to correct it. There is nothing on this record by which we can know whether the alimony was too much or too little. We are bound for this reason if for no other, to presume that the judges who had all the facts before them decided the matter right. It has been the uniform practice to allow a wife, destitute of a separate estate, who is either suing or defending a case of divorce, such reasonable sum as will enable her to carry it on. She cannot sue in forma pauperis, for she is not a pauper if she is the wife of a man who has property. To deny her the means of paying for process and professional aid is to deny her justice. The amount is a question for the discretion of the Court.

5. As soon as the sentence was pronounced, the respondent presented a petition, asking for a suspension of it, and offering to take his wife back. The prayer was refused. The law favors the reconciliation of parties who are divorced a mensa et thoro. When both are willing to try over again the experiment of living together, the sentence will be suspended or annulled without hesitation. Where the husband desires to do his duty, and the wife unreasonably refuses to join him, she ought to be punished for her obstinacy by the withdrawal of her separate support. But it is not true that her husband has an absolute right to annul the whole proceedings whenever he pleases by the mere act of presenting a petition. He cannot force his wife back again under the roof which she was obliged to fly, and into the power that abused her before, by the simple expression of his own will. The Court may annul or suspend the sentence in a proper case, but they are not bound to do so in every case. It is left to their discretion by the very words of the statute.

Judgment affirmed.

Opinion by Lewis, J.

POORMAN vs. KILGORE.

Error to the Common Pleas of Westmoreland County.

Parole Contract for sale of Land—Statute of Frauds.

Wherever we notice a change in the administration of legal principles gradually progressing for a considerable period, and under a series of Judges, it may be safely assumed, that it has a much more legitimate foundation than that of judicial arbitrariness. This is illustrated by the practice under the statute of frauds and perjuries; and we very naturally ask, how happens it that any exceptions at all have been made to a statute so general and so peremptory in its terms and that judges are now so much inclined to restrict the space of those exceptions?

However we may define that portion of the law which Courts of Equity take as their guide, it is very apparent that the equitable exceptions, that have been made to this statute, have gone upon the principle of correcting the law in that wherein it was, by reason of its universality, defective. They proceed upon the assumption that our experience furnishes no universal rule either for legislation or jurisprudence, but only general ones. Though we give to laws the form of universality, yet they must always be subject to modification or exception, when a new experience arises to which they are not justly adapted. To regard them otherwise would be to treat them as mere arbitrary rules, and not as they ought to be a generalization and improvement of the results of our social experience. The demands of natural justice and the nature of our mind impose upon us the necessity of excepting out of the letter of the law those cases that are not equitably within its intention, and this necessity finds its expression and its measure in many accepted rules of interpretation.

The English statute of Frauds and Perjuries was passed in 1676, and was intended to change the common law heretofore existing, by which title to land could be passed by livery of seisin without writing; and to get clear of the frauds, perjuries, and the uncertainty of titles that had grown out of the old law. But as the custom of the country can never be suddenly and entirely broken down even by an act of Parliament, it was natural that many cases should arise, founded on the old customs, wherein great injustice would be done, unless the statute should receive an equitable interpretation; and the presumption that the Legislature did not intend any innovation on the common law further than the case absolutely required, came in aid of such an equitable interpretation as would ease off the severity of the operation of the new enactment. But exceptions founded on this principle, must naturally be but temporary expedients, which must die away when the new law itself has become part of the general customs of the country. We might say that there is a natural provision for this sort of indulgence in the fact that no man is perfect enough to bear a strict application of rules, and very few hearers are hard enough to enforce without finching the letter of the law, when it results in upholding injustice.

When the settlement of Pennsylvania commenced, the English statute had not broken down the old customs relative to passing titles to land, and we did not at first adopt it as part of our law, 1 Dall. 1. And when our statute was passed in 1772, of course it was necessary to treat the old customs of granting lands with the indulgence already indicated. And as with us, and on account of the small value of our lands, our customs in relation to conveyances were more loose than they had been in England, 1 Yeates 220, 500; 2 id. 124, 379; 3 Binney, 187, this indulgence was greater here than there. But here as there, it was evidently temporary, and in its very nature it presented a caution against its own permanence.

This temporary reason influenced also the recognition of the statutes providing for the recording of titles, and for the limitations of actions and of liens of judgments; but it has answered its purpose, and now the only difficulty is to know how to fall back upon those essential exceptions to which all laws are in their very nature subject; because no people can bear an entirely literal and unbending application of any rule of law. We can make this regression intelligently only by carefully noticing the expediency of the past, and not by ignoring and rudely rejecting all the modifications with which the statute has been applied in practice. If we attempt to gain at one bound our true position, we shall probably light beyond it. Even in seeking the correction of admitted error, our experiments must be governed by our experience.

A delivery of possession in pursuance of a verbal contract is now regarded as essential to an enforcement of it; but there is a plain reason why it ought not to be treated as securing that result, or as having as much force now as it once had. When livery of seisin was at common law a sufficient form of transferring title to land, it was an open and notorious act performed in the presence of the neighbors, accompanied by the symbolical delivery of the turf or twig and the declaration of the quantity of the estate granted. But even this solemn investiture was so open to frauds and perjuries that it called for the correction of the statute requiring the contract to be put in writing. Now, that the common law form has worn out, and delivery takes place without any form at all, almost always by a mere entry, on a permission, express or implied; and thus the publicity and form of the delivery no longer avails as a check upon the mere invention of a sale.

In our first endeavors to administer these equitable exceptions through the instrumentality of a common law trial, we very often failed by reason of our want of skill in applying such remedies in a form so unusual. Very often the law and the facts were committed to the jury, and out of them they made a general verdict as best they could; but experience has shown that their mental training was not at all of a kind to enable them to thread their way through all the complications of such questions, and that generally they cut the knot, and decided each case, according to their feelings, and not according to the laws by which titles to land are regulated. This experience has forced upon the Courts a more careful study and application of equity practice, and a consequent rejection of all the evidence of a verbal contract, if, being taken as true, it does not make out such a case as is entitled to stand as an exception to the statute, 9 Watts & Serg. 49; 9 Watts, 109; 1 Harris, 21; 7 id. 461, 471. This improvement in the practice tends to the security of written titles, even if the exceptions to the principle of the statute remain. In the case of Brawdy vs. Brawdy, 7 Barr, 157, the judge who tried the cause, heard the evidence of the verbal contract, and then withdrew it all from the jury, as being entirely insufficient to make out the case, and this practice was expressly approved, though this does not very clearly appear in the report of the case, and not at all in the syllabus.

We may notice still another principle of law, that is applied very beneficially to restrain the exceptions to the statute, and which is of especial importance in this case, though its application is not peculiar to cases under the statute. We allude to the law of evidence that grows out of the family relation. It is so usual and natural for children to work for their parents even after they arrive at age, that the law implies no contract in such cases. And it is so natural for parents to help their children by giving them the use of a farm or house, and then to call it theirs, that no gift or sale of the property can be inferred from such circumstances. It is so entirely usual to call certain books or utensils, or rooms or houses by the name of the children who use them, that it is no evidence at all of this title as against their parents, but only a mode of distinguishing the rights which the parents have allotted to their children as against each other, and in subjection to their own paramount right. The very nature of the relation, therefore, requires the contracts between parents and children to be proved by a kind of evidence that is very different from that which may be sufficient between strangers. It must be direct, positive, express and unambiguous. The terms must be clearly defined, and all the acts necessary for its validity must have especial reference to it and nothing else. 3 Penna. R. 365; 8 Barr 213; 9 id. 262; 2 Harris 201; 7 id. 261, 366; 1 Casey 308; 2 Jones 175. The importance of this rule is very apparent, for it requires but a glance over the cases of this class to discover how sad has been the experience of the Courts in family disputes, growing out of the exceptions which have been allotted to this State; and how many and how distressing must have been the ruptures of the closest ties of kindred that have been produced and perpetuated by the encouragement thus given to try the experiment of extracting legal obligations out of acts of parental kindness.

The arrangement out of which the present controversy arose, is so entirely similar in its spirit and intention to that which appears in the case of McClure vs. McClure, 1 Barr, 376, that it ought to have been disposed of in the same way. This plaintiff had one son, Jacob, and one daughter married to the defendant. Some nine years before the arrangement in controversy, he had given his farm to his son and son-in-law, to farm on the shares, they giving him two fifths of the produce. After they had farmed it a while, Kilgore moved to another place in the same county, and Jacob then farmed the whole of it on the same terms. In 1844, the plaintiff went to Kilgore to come back, and here we let the witness, Fetter, tell the story: "The plaintiff said to his son-in-law, 'if he would come back he would make a man of him; he would give him the half of the farm and Jacob the other half, if he would come back and give him, while he lived the third of all he raised, he should have the farm at his death.' Jesse agreed to the proposal. The offer was made three or four times within the year, and Jesse agreed to it every time."

Jacob testifies that the "bargain," as he calls it, took place at his house on the farm. "At first, he gave us the place to farm, and said we should have it after his death. He told us we should farm and go on, and we should have it and everything, and then after his death we should have it as our own. We were to give him one third of the produce." Kilgore accepted the offer, and moved on the land. No division line was fixed in this so-called bargain, but the plaintiff shortly afterward called a surveyor and directed him how to make the division, and it was done accordingly, giving Jacob 103 acres, and Kilgore 91.

There is much evidence of the declarations of the plaintiff; but while this may corroborate the story of the direct witnesses of the arrangement, it can change nothing of the substance of it, as they narrate it. There is much evidence also of the acts and declarations of both Jacob and Kilgore, that show very plainly that they did not regard the transaction as a present and executed gift. But we may lay all this out of the question. It only confirms, as matter of fact, what we assume as matter of law from the story of the two principal witnesses—that the father was merely putting into experimental operation for the benefit of his son and daughter an arrangement which he expected to confirm at his death.

The bargain as it is called, is said to have been made four or five times, and this seems absurd. If the parties had understood it as a contract, they would have lived up to it, or accused each other of a breach of it. If they had understood the three or four conversations that Fetter speaks of as a bargain, they would not have made another afterwards in connection with Jacob. We take this one as the best and only proper evidence of the transaction, because it is the last. "He gave us the place to farm, and said we should have it after his death." Here is nothing but a promise to give, and that cannot be enforced. The division line was not settled by a bargain, but the father fixed it as he pleased.

The statute forbids verbal conveyances of land, and we presume that the parties did not transgress it. It is not probable that the father was putting his property entirely beyond his control in his life-time, and the terms of the arrangement do not require this inference. The delivery of possession does not demand such an inference, for it is perfectly accounted for by the relation of the parties, and by the annual delivery of a share of the produce, as a tenancy from year to year which is allowed by the statute. If a contract to farm land on the shares, and a delivery of possession under it can be supplemented by another for an absolute grant, then certainly, as between parent and child, delivery of possession becomes a worthless protection against violations of the statute. Both the terms of this arrangement and the possession under it may readily be accounted for as founded on other intentions than that of a gift of the land, and therefore the law forbids us to infer that purpose. 3 Serg. & Rawle, 546; 3 Penna. R. 365; 9 Watts, 43, 109; 7 Harris, 469; 1 John's Ch. 149.

Some reliance is placed upon the improvements made by the defendant; but having been made without an actual gift, and only on the expectation or promise of a gift, they do not avert the rule of the statute; 1 Barr 379; 3 Watts 138, 255. They are no evidence of the gift itself, and may be fully accounted for on the expectation of it. They are estimated at two thousand dollars; but this gives no idea of the real outlay of the defendant. The only things worth naming, are the house and the barn, and the only money proved to have been paid for them, was two hundred and fifty dollars. Most of the materials seem to have been got from the place. Much of the work was done by frolics, and fifty dollars of the money and some of the materials were purchased by the plaintiff, and the whole of it was conducted as such matters usually are in the country, when a father is providing a home for a son on his own land.

The fact, that since the arrangement relied on, the plaintiff has married again and has another child, can have no influence, except as accounting for and justifying the change of his intentions, on the same principle that a will is revoked by marriage or the birth of a child after it was written. On the defendant's own evidence. The Court ought to have instructed the jury that he had no right to the land.

Judgment reversed and new trial awarded.

Court of Common Pleas.

Opinion by Thompson, P. J.

FOX vs. SCOTT.

In Equity. Upon Bill and Answer.

The plaintiff claims a reconveyance by her Trustee of certain property, held for her sole and separate use under the provisions of a marriage settlement, upon the ground, that, by the decease of her husband, she has become discoverer and the purposes of the trust have been entirely fulfilled.

It is settled by numerous decisions that the separate use of property, intended for the protection of a wife against her husband, ceases when the coverture ceases, and the trust fund is again at her disposal. She may then deal with it as her own, and a court of equity will require the trustee to transfer the trust property to her—Barton v. Briscoe, Jac. 603; Woodmerton v. Walker, 2 Russ. & M. 297; Smith v. Starr, 3 Whar. 62; Hammerly v. Smith, 4 Wh. 126.

Is there any thing in this case to take it out of the general rule? By the settlement, the Trustee was directed to receive the income of the trust property and to appropriate it to the sole, separate and exclusive use of the plaintiff during her natural life, whether sole or married, and dispose of the same as she should direct and appoint, and at the decease of the plaintiff to transfer the property to such persons as she should by her will direct; and in default of a will to sell and pay over the proceeds of the property to such persons as should be entitled, under the then existing intestate laws of Pennsylvania, to take real estate in the seizin or possession of the said plaintiff, at the time of her death, in case the said plaintiff had survived her husband.

It is a rule in the construction of trusts, and especially of trusts contained in marriage settlements, that the intention of the parties shall govern where such intent is not contrary to the rules of law, Earl of North. vs. Earl of Egremont, 1 Eden, 447; 3 Johns., ch. 86. The question here presented is whether, by the terms of this settlement, the interest of Mrs. Fox, in the trust property, was intended to be limited so as to leave her no further power over it than that of appointment by will.

It is a prominent fact that the property in question belonged to the cestui que trust originally. The only expressed design of the settlement was to protect it against marital rights, and any construction which would deprive her of a greater interest than would be necessary for that purpose should not be adopted, unless clearly indicated. By the terms of the settlement, the consent of Mrs. Fox was made necessary for any disposition of the property, or change of the investments by the Trustees—she retained the power to appoint her trustees, in case of the death of those first named, and it is provided, that the receipts of the said Hannah, alone, for all monies paid to her in execution of the trust, shall be valid and sufficient, as though she were a feme sole. This last provision seems to refer to the receipt of monies only during coverture, though it includes all monies paid to her in execution of the trust; allowing an inference that the coverage was to embrace the whole execution of the trust.

The settlement contains no provision for the issue of the marriage and nothing in the nature of a strict settlement, unless the clause which provides for the distribution of the property, in case of the death of Mrs. Fox intestate, must be so regarded. That clause seems, however, to provide only for her decease during coverture without making a will, as it directs the distribution to be made among those who would take real estate from her, according to the then intestate laws, in case she had survived her husband. Does it mean more than, in case of her death during coverture, the property shall go to those who would have taken it, if her husband did not then exist, so as entirely to exclude his succession to it in any manner whatever.

There may be some expressions in the investment which would seem to favor a continuance of the trust, but when it is considered that the only expressed object of the trust, as created by the cestui que trust and her intended husband, of her property was to protect her against his marital rights. That she continued to control every disposition of the property during coverture, retaining the power to appoint her own trustees, and that the only limitation is contained in a provision which may be taken to relate to the case of her death during coverture, we are induced to believe that more than a mere power over the trust property, by will, was intended to remain in Mrs. Fox. She seems to have been restricted only to save her from her husband's control; and, upon the whole, we think that her present interest in the estate is absolute in equity, since she is now free from marital rights and stands en sui juris.

The law on this subject as settled in Smith vs. Starr, 8 Wh. 62; Harrison vs. Brolaskey, 8 Harris 299, and Birdsall vs. Richards, 6 Harris, 256, seems entirely applicable to the present case. The plaintiff having become sole, the restrictions imposed by the settlement are unnecessary for any further purpose, and she is entitled to have a reconveyance of the property from the Trustees.

Judgment for plaintiff.

Sheriff's Sales.

Abstract of Properties to be sold by Geo. Megee, Esq., Sheriff, on Monday, September 1st, at Sansom Street Hall, at 4 o'clock, P. M.

EXPLANATION.

Ven. Ex. Venditioni Exponas.
Lev. fa. Levantur facias.

Conditions of Sale.

Fifty dollars of the price or sum at which the property shall be struck off, shall be paid to the Sheriff at the time of sale, unless the purchase money shall be less than that sum, in which case only the purchase money shall be paid.

Otherwise the property will again be immediately put up, and sold. The balance of the purchase money must be paid to the Sheriff, at his office within ten days from the time of sale, without any demand being made by the Sheriff, therefore. Otherwise the property may be sold again at the expense and risk of the person to whom it is struck off, who, in case of any deficiency at such re-sale, shall make good the same. Arrears of Ground Rent and taxes, if any, will be paid out of the purchase money, if the bills are presented to the Sheriff before he parts with the money; otherwise they will be paid by the purchaser.

Law School of the University at Cambridge, Mass.

The instructors in this school are HON. JOEL PARKER, LL. D., Royal Professor. HON. THEOPHILUS PARSONS, LL. D., Dane Professor. HON. EMERY WASHBURN, LL. D., University Professor.

The course of instruction embraces the various branches of the Common Law, and of Equity, Admiralty, Commercial, International and Constitutional Law, and the Jurisprudence of the United States. The Law Library consists of about 14,000 volumes, and as new works appear they are added and every effort is made to render it complete.

Instruction is given by oral lectures and expositions, (and by recitations and examinations, in connection with them,) of which there are ten every week. Two Moot Courts are also holden in each week, at each of which a cause, previously given out, is argued by four students, and an opinion delivered by the presiding instructor. Rooms and other facilities are also provided for the Club Courts; and an Assembly is held weekly for practice in debate, and acquiring a knowledge of Parliamentary law and proceedings.

Students may enter the school in any stage of their professional studies or mercantile pursuits, and at the commencement of either term, or in the middle, or other part of a term. They are at liberty to select what studies they will pursue according to their view of their own wants and attainments.

The Academical year, which commences on Thursday, six weeks after the third Wednesday in July, is divided into two terms, of twenty weeks each, with a vacation of six weeks at the end of each term.

During the winter vacation, the Library is opened, warmed and lighted, for the use of the members of the school.

Applications for admission, or for Catalogues, or any further information, may be made to either of the Professors at Cambridge.

NOTICE.

THE Subscriber takes this method of informing his numerous friends, and the public in general, that he is now prepared to execute in a superior manner, every variety of HOUSE and SIGN PAINTING, Graining, Bronzing, Gilding on Glass and Stained Glass, Calcining Ceilings, Walls, &c., &c. China and Glass Painting executed in a superior manner, and warranted not to crack. Ceilings cleaned and whitened, and made equal to new, at a cost little over that of whitewash. The subscriber would state here that it frequently occurs that persons attempt to use this article who have no knowledge of it whatever, either in the mixing or putting it on, and the consequence is, the job is spoiled, and the article condemned without a proper trial.—So also with CHINA GLOSS; to make a good job it requires a practical knowledge of the use of the brush, as also the making of the Gloss.

In regard to the ZINC WHITE, the subscriber would most respectfully recommend it as an article far superior to any other paint now in use, for whiteness and durability of color.

The Subscriber would respectfully solicit a portion of the patronage of those getting Painting done. Feeling grateful for the many favors already bestowed by his friends, he still hopes to share their patronage by unremitting attention to their calls. Those who have large contracts to give out, need have no hesitancy in calling, as he is prepared to give every satisfaction in regard to work, both in reference and security, for the faithful performance of all agreements.

The Subscriber can be found at the S. E. CORNER OF FOURTH AND WALNUT STS. where he will be happy to receive any orders. Aug. 24-1 yr. JACOB S. BEAM.

GREAT FIRE, MAY 1, 1856.

HERRING'S PATENT CHAMPION SAFES!
What the People Say!

PHILADELPHIA, 2d May, 1856.
MESSRS. FARRELS & HERRING—
GENTLEMEN—The Herring's Patent Fire-Proof Safe, which we purchased of you in the month of January last, was situated in our Counting-Room, in the second story of 231 Market street, on the night of the Great Fire, 1st May, 1856, and fell with the burning building in that conflagration.
The safe was reached this afternoon, after an exposure of THIRTY-SIX HOURS to intense heat, and although the brass plates on the front of the safe were melted, and the exterior shows the evidence of extreme heat, the inside casing was found to be UNTOUCHED BY FIRE, and with the exception of being a little steamed is now as good as new.
EDW. SEMANS & CO.

MESSRS. FARRELS & HERRING—
GENTLEMEN—The Herring's Patent Fire-Proof Safe, of your manufacture, which we purchased nearly a year since, was in the centre of our building at the time of its destruction in the Great Fire of May 1, 1856.

We had removed the greater portion of our Books before the fire reached us, but left some of them, together with a number of loose papers, inside, purposely to test the security of the safe. After thirty-eight hours of severe roasting, we found the interior of the safe, upon opening, not only bright and sound, but the Books and Papers as free from fire as when first put in.

We shall require another safe as soon as we get a new location, and want none but your "Champion."
Yours, &c.,
FISHER & BROTHER,
No. 15 North Sixth street.

The public will bear in mind that the "HERRING'S PATENT" is the only safe made in this City, which has never failed to preserve its contents in accidental fires.

The TWO SAFES from the above Great Fire can now be seen in front of the OLD STAND, No. 34 WALNUT STREET.

| Yeates' Reports, 4 vols. . . . .  | 1791 to 1808 |
| Binney's Reports, 6 vols. . . . . | 1799 to 1814 |
| Addison's Reports, 1 vol. . . . . | 1791 to 1799 |

These Reports are condensed by T. J. Fox Alden, Esq., into three vols., and are sold at the low price of $15. The catalogue price of the old edition, to which they are greatly superior in type and papers is $69. They contain all that is of any value in the original, and as will be seen are sold at less than one fourth the price. The volumes already published are complete in themselves, having a copious index and table of cases.

To those who cannot afford to purchase the original series of Reports (many volumes of which are out of print) this work will be invaluable, whilst even those who do possess them, will buy it for convenience of reference.

From Hon. J. B. Gibson, Chief Justice.—I have examined the first volume of Mr. Alden's Condensed Reports, and think the work will be a valuable one, especially to the younger members of the bar, who cannot, at first afford to purchase the series of our reports, already between seventy and eighty volumes. The cases are clearly stated, and the points decided, are accurately extracted.
JOHN B. GIBSON.

Testimonials speaking in the highest terms of the work, have also been received from Hon. Edward King, Hon. William B. McClure, Hon. William D. Kelly, Hon. Cornelius Darragh, Hon. John Galbreath, James Dunlop, Esq., Thomas Williams, Esq., and more than fifty other distinguished members of the Pennsylvania Bar.

The Fullest, the Latest, and the Best
REPORTS OF THE COMMON LAW COURTS
OF ENGLAND.

Containing the cases decided in the Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Nisi Prius Courts, from 1813 to 1855, and in the Court of Exchequer and Exchequer Chamber, from 1824 to 1855, are found in
The Regular and Authoritative Series of the

English Common Law and English Exchequer Reports,

Which present the following claims to the support of the profession:

1. They are the only series issued as the authoritative and acknowledged medium by which the decisions of the Law Courts of England are made public.

2. They contain Later Reports than the Boston series, are more fully and more ably reported, and so arranged by preservation of the original paging, that reference by reporters, or by elementary writers, can be traced as readily as in the English editions.

Vol. 2, Ellis & Blackburne's (75 E. C. L. R.) Reports (Q. B.) to January, 1854, was published by us in June, 1854. At that time the last Queen's Bench case printed in the Boston Law and Equity Reports, was of June 25, 1853. Our volume contained cases decided five months later. The Queen's Bench cases to November 25, 1853, were published in the Boston series in August, 1854, two months after we had distributed the same cases.

Vol. 3, Ellis & Blackburne, (77 E. C. L. R., with cases to the end of Trinity Term, 1854, was published when the latest case of Queen's Bench decisions in the Boston series, was of February 8, 1854, more than four months behind the regular reporters.

Exchequer Reports, vol. 9, (Welshy, Hurlstone & Gordon,) distributed by us January 11, 1855, contains cases to May 10, 1854. The last Exchequer case then in the Boston series was decided February 9, 1854, four months behind the regular Reporter, issued in Philadelphia.

3. They contain more cases decided by the courts represented, than any other series issued in this country.

Vol. 77 English Common Law, (3 E. & B.,) reports eighty-six cases decided in the Queen's Bench since January 11, 1854, while but fifty-eight Queen's Bench cases, decided since January 1, 1854, are found scattered among Vols. 22, 24 and 25 of the Boston Law and Equity.

Vol. 78 E. C. L. K. (5 J. Scott,) reports sixty-five cases decided since Nov. 13, 1853, in the Common Pleas, while the L. & E. has but fifty-seven cases in that Court since the same period.

Vol. 9 Exchequer Reports, (Welshy, Hurlstone & Gordon,) reports one hundred and ten cases in the Courts of Exchequer, decided since June 24, 1853, while since the same date, the L. & E. report but 107 cases, scattered through vols. 20, 22, 24 and 25.

4. They are almost exclusively cited in argument of counsel, and referred to by Elementary Writers for Law Authorities. See Smith's Leading Cases, Smith's Contracts, Smith's Landlord and Tenant, by Maude; Byles on Bills and Promissory Notes, Broom's Legal Maxims, Broom's Commentaries on the Laws of England, or almost any recent Law Book issued in England.

5. The Philadelphia Reports are edited by Judge Sharswood and by Judge Hare, whose labors as editors and authors have made them so well and so favorably known to the profession.

6. The Boston Law and Equity is made up in this country from the Law Journal, Jurist, Times and other Law periodicals, of a weekly, monthly, or quarterly character, and being unknown in England, is never cited in Court, or referred to by Law writers. The periodicals from which it is extracted, are occasionally cited under their own particular names, but they do not possess that permanent value, even in England, which is all-important in a series of Reports.

A carefully prepared and accurate Annual Digest of all the cases decided by the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Exchequer, will be distributed, early in each year, to subscribers to either series, free of charge. That for 1854 is ready, and will be mailed to subscribers who have not received a copy.

IN PRESS AND IN PREPARATION.

Leading Cases on the Law relating to Real Property, Conveyancing, and the Construction of Wills, by Owen Davies Tudor, author of Leading Cases in Equity. With very full notes referring to American Decisions.

Broom's Commentaries on the Common Law, by author of Legal Maxims, and Parties to Actions, edited by Hon. Geo. Sharswood.

Smith's Law of Landlord and Tenant, by author of Leading Cases, with copious American notes by P. P. Morris, Esq.

Having purchased from the English Publishers, during the past year, early sheets of the three works above announced, we hope to issue improved American editions very soon after their completion in England.

Williams' Personal Property, edited by B. Gertard, Esq., to be ready in July.

Starkie on the Law of Evidence. Arranged and Annotated by Hon. Geo. Sharswood.

Digest of the Exchequer Reports, 35 vols. by Asa J. Fish, Esq.

IN THE COURT OF COMMON PLEAS FOR THE CITY AND COUNTY OF PHILAD'A.

To the Executors, Heirs and Legal Representatives of ENOCH FRALEY, deceased, and to Enoch Fraley and his representatives. Notice is hereby given, that a petition has been presented to the Court of Common Pleas for the City and County of Philadelphia, by William C. Morgan, setting forth, that John Semin, from the 28th day of June, 1830, executed unto Enoch Fraley, executor of Jos'h Fraley, deceased, a mortgage of all that messuage and lot of ground, situate on the south-east side of Allen street and north-east side of an alley leading from Allen to Beach street, in the district of Kensington, containing in front thirty-seven feet, and in depth to an alley seventy-five feet, which mortgage is to secure the sum of $350, and is recorded in M. B. A. M., No. 1, page 59, &c., which mortgage has long since been paid but has not been satisfied of record. Whereupon the said Court did order the Sheriff of Philadelphia County to give public notice to the parties to appear before the Court on MONDAY, September 15, to show cause, if any they have, why said mortgage should not be satisfied of record.

IN THE COURT OF COMMON PLEAS FOR THE CITY AND COUNTY OF PHILAD'A.

To the Administrators of JEHU WARD, deceased. Notice is hereby given, that at a Court of Common Pleas, held August 4, 1856, the petition of Susan Rudolph was presented setting forth that on the 28th June, 1844, she executed a mortgage for $800 to Jehu Ward, of the City of Philadelphia, upon certain premises on the west side of Old York Road, 100 feet south from Oxford street, in Kensington, recorded in Mortgage Book R. L. L., No. 13, page 330; which said mortgage has been fully paid, but no satisfaction entered of record. That said Jehu Ward is now dead and his Administrators, Elizabeth Ward and J. P. Ward, have removed from the State of Pennsylvania. Whereupon the Court order the Sheriff of Philadelphia County to give public notice to the parties to appear before said Court, on MONDAY, the 15th day of September, 1856, at 10 o'clock A. M., and show cause, if any they have, why said mortgage should not be satisfied of record.

"INCOMPARABLY THE BEST."

BLACKSTONE'S COMMENTARIES.

COMMENTARIES

ON THE
LAWS OF ENGLAND,
IN FOUR BOOKS.

BY
SIR WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, Knt.

ONE OF THE JUSTICES OF THE COURT OF COMMON PLEAS. WITH THE LAST CORRECTIONS OF THE AUTHOR, AND NOTES.

From the Twenty-first London Edition. With copious

NOTES, Explaining the Changes in the Law effected by Decision or Statute, down to 1844. Together with Notes adapting the Work to the American Student. By JOHN L. WENDELL,

LATE REPORTER OF THE SUPREME COURT.

Four Octavo Volumes, bound in fine Law Sheep, Price $7 00.

The Twenty-first Edition of "Blackstone's Commentaries" was prepared by intrusting each one of the four great departments of jurisprudence, treated of by Sir WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, to a separate Editor, whose professional studies had made him peculiarly conversant with that particular branch of learning, to wit:

Vol. I. To J. F. HARGRAVE, of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister at Law.

Vol. II. To G. SWIFT, of the Inner Temple, Barrister at Law.

Vol. III. To R. COVOR, of the Middle Temple, Barrister at Law.

Vol. IV. To W. N. WELSLY, Recorder of Chester.

Into the hands of these gentlemen were put all the Editions of Blackstone then extant in England, with directions to avail themselves of such notes of former editors as they should approve, (among those editions was that of Mr. CHITTY.) Under those circumstances, and by this division of labor, was produced a work highly beneficial to the student, and greatly facilitating the researches of counsel.

The notes of the American Editor were to show the Common Law as it exists in this country under our institutions, particularly in the State of New York, and more especially as effected by the Revised Statutes of that State, and to point out the diversities of the Common Law as held in England and in this country in the few instances in which a difference exists.

This edition is the most accurate and useful which has appeared.—London Times.

Incomparably the best edition that has ever been published.—Literary World.

We do not hesitate to endorse the emphatic approval which this edition has received in England, and pronounce it the best that has ever appeared.—Law Reporter.

There can be no question, that this edition of the Commentaries is destined to supersede all others.—Courier.

These notes are of the greatest value, and add ten-fold to the work, so far as the American student is concerned.—Albany Argus.

The Bank of Cash Credits.

Application will be made to the Legislature of Pennsylvania, for the Charter of a Bank Issue with general banking privileges, with a capital of ONE MILLION OF DOLLARS. Said Bank to be located in the City of Philadelphia, to be called the "Robert Morris Bank," and to be conducted upon the system of cash credits only, as is herewith indicated.

A cash credit is a credit given to an individual by a Banking Company, for a limited sum, seldom under $500, or $1000, upon his own security and that of two or three individuals, approved by the Bank, who become sureties for its payment. The individual who has obtained such a credit, is enabled to draw the whole sum, or any part of it, when he pleases; replacing it, or portions of it, according as he finds it convenient; interest being charged upon such part only as he draws out.

"If a man borrows $1000, from a private hand, and even then it is not always to be found when required, he pays interest for it, whether he be using it or not. His bank credit costs him nothing, except during the moment it is of service to him, and this circumstance is of equal advantage as if he had borrowed money at a much lower rate of interest."

Cash credits are not, however, intended to be a dead load; the main objects of the Banks in granting them is to get their notes circulated, and they do not grant them except to persons in business, or to those who are frequently drawing out and paying in money.

Any person who applies to a bank for a cash credit, is called upon to produce sureties, and, after a full inquiry into the character of the applicant, the nature of his business, and the sufficiency of his securities, he is allowed to open a credit, and to draw upon the Bank for the whole of its amount, or for such part as his daily transaction may require. To the credit of the account, he pays in such sums as he may not have occasion to use, and interest is charged or credited upon the balance, as the case may be. From the facility which these cash credits give to all the small transactions of the country, and from the opportunities which they afford to persons who begin business with little or no capital but their character, to employ profitably the minutest products of their industry, it cannot be doubted that the most important advantages are derived in the whole community.

Such privileges and immunities as the "Metropolitan Bank of New York" exercises, will be applied for.

THE STATE
SAVINGS FUND.

INTEREST FIVE PER CENT, PER ANNUM.

ALL SUMS OF MONEY RETURNED ON DEMAND.

OFFICE, NEXT DOOR TO THE POST OFFICE;

No. 83 Dock Street,

PHILADELPHIA, 1854.

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND, No. 83 DOCK Street, next door to THIRD Street, and adjoining the POST OFFICE, receives MONEY on deposit daily, from 9 in the morning until 3 in the afternoon; also Monday evenings, from 7 to 9 o'clock. Interest is allowed on deposits at the rate of FIVE PER CENT per annum. Deposits will be returned in whole, or in part, on demand, without notice.

The popularity of this Office with all classes of the community, both in town and country, and its consequent success, may be ascribed, in part, to the following substantial reasons:

1st. It offers a convenient, responsible, and profitable Depository to Executors, Administrators, Assignees, Collectors, Agents, and all public officers—to Attorneys, Trustees, Societies and Associations, whether incorporated or otherwise—to married or single ladies—to Students, Merchants, Clerks, and business men generally—to Mechanics, Farmers, Minors of either sex, and all who have funds, much or little, to deposit, where they may be had at any time, with Five Per Cent interest added.

2d. Depositors receive Books, with an abstract of the By-laws and regulations, in which is entered their deposits, which Books serve as vouchers. They may designate in case of sickness, death, or absence, who shall receive their deposits, without the intervention of Executors or Administrators. Any one or more persons may deposit in his, her, or their name, or for any other person or persons.

3d. A Report is made each year to the Legislature, and Councils of the City.

4th. The Officers are sworn before they enter upon their duties, in addition to giving Bonds with sureties.

5th. The State Savings Fund is a real Savings Fund—not an Insurance and Trust Company. The Charter of this Institution avoids the Insurance business.

6th. Deposits may be withdrawn by checks after the manner customary with Banks. Check Books will be furnished to depositors without charge.

LITTLE, BROWN, & CO.

112 Washington Street, BOSTON,
Curtis's Supreme Court Decisions
THE DECISIONS OF THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES,

With notes and a Digest by Hon. Benjamin R. Curtis, one of the Associate Justices of the Court. In 22 volumes, octavo. Comprising the Cases reported by Dallas, 4 vols.; Cranch, 9 vols.; Wheaton, 12 vols.; Peters, 16 vols.; Howard, 17 vols.

The old series of these reports are in 57 volumes, the Catalogue price of which is $217 50. This edition in 22 volumes, is offered to subscribers at the low price of $3 a volume; thus bringing them within the means of all. The volumes are delivered as fast as issued, and it is intended that the whole work shall be completed early in 1856.

Vols. 1 to 15 are now ready. We ask attention to the following approval by the members of the Supreme Court of the United States:

"We approve the plan of Mr. Justice Curtis's, 'Decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States,' and believe that its execution by him will be of much utility to the legal profession and to our country.

ROGER B. TANEY, Chief Justice
JOHN McLEAN, Associate Justice.
JAMES M. WAYNE, Associate Justice.
JOHN CATRON, Associate Justice.
PETER V. DANIEL, Associate Justice.
SAMUEL NELSON, Associate Justice.
ROBERT C. GRIER, Associate Justice.
J. A. CAMPBELL, Associate Justice."

English Law and Equity Reports.

ENGLISH REPORTS IN LAW AND EQUITY. A Complete Collection of the Cases decided by the House of Lords, the Privy Council, the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas and Exchequer, the Lord Chancellor, the High Court of Appeal in Chancery, the Court of Criminal Appeal, and the Admiralty and Ecclesiastical Courts. Reprinted within a few weeks after the decisions are rendered.

This series has the merit of being complete, reliable, prompt, convenient, and cheap. It is now universally cited in the courts, and referred to in the recent law books as standard authority. All the cases reported in England, are here reprinted from the most reliable sources, as soon as they reach this country.

These Reports are now regularly digested in our Annual United States Digest, which thus embraces an annual digest of the whole English and American Law.

We have now in Preparation, and shall soon Publish,

A separate Digest of these Reports, embracing the first thirty-one volumes of the series, prepared with express reference to the convenience of the American profession, and exhibiting a complete synopsis of all the English Decisions reported in those volumes during the last five years; also a Table of Cases referring to all the contemporaneous English Reports. This will be the first Digest of English Decisions prepared expressly for the American Lawyer, and it is intended to give it the same advantages over the English Digests hitherto reprinted in this country, which the American text books have generally been found to possess over the English.

The Law and Equity Reports will be continued on the same plan as heretofore; the number of volumes being reduced to four per year; and Digests will be published from time to time as the convenience of the profession demands.

Vols. 1 to 31, now ready for delivery, at $1 00 per volume.

MEETING OF THE BAR.

At a meeting of the members of the Bar, on the occasion of the death of JOHN M. VANDERVEER, Esq., held in the Law Library, on Wednesday, August 27, 1856, George M. Wharton, Esq., was called to the chair, and Frederick Heyer was called on to act as Secretary.

J. F. Johnston, Esq., after a few prefatory remarks, offered the following Resolutions, which being seconded in an appropriate address by Charles E. Lex, Esq., and after remarks by M. J. Mitcheson, Esq., and James Otterson, Jr., Esq., were unanimously adopted.

Resolved, That the members of this Bar have heard with profound regret of the death of their late fellow member, JOHN M. VANDERVEER.

Resolved, That while he was endeared to us by his uniform kindness and courtesy, his sterling integrity, his fidelity to his clients, and industry in his profession, gave promise of a life of continued usefulness and honor.

Resolved, That we sincerely condole with the family of the late Mr. VANDERVEER in their sad bereavement.

Resolved, That a Committee of three, with whom shall act the Chairman and Secretary, be appointed to communicate to his family the proceedings of this meeting.

The Chairman appointed Henry M. Phillips, St. Geo. T. Campbell, and George W. Thorne, Esqs., as the Committee, under the last resolution.

On motion of St. Geo. T. Campbell, Esq., it was resolved, that the proceedings of the meeting be published.

The meeting then adjourned.

G. M. WHARTON, Chairman.
FREDERICK HEYER, Secretary.

Supreme Court.

Opinion by Lewis, C. J.

COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA EX REL. SCOTT v. THE KEEPER OF THE DEBTORS' APARTMENT OF THE COUNTY PRISON.

Habeas Corpus.

The acts of Assembly conferring chancery powers, carry with them, as a necessary incident to the jurisdiction, the authority to enforce decrees by the ordinary process of attachment, sequestration, &c., unless that authority be excluded by legislative enactment. The act of 16th June, 1836, regulating the power of the several courts of the Commonwealth "to issue attachments, and to inflict summary punishment for contempts of Court," has no relation to attachments to enforce Decrees in Equity, where the object is not to "inflict punishment," but to compel performance of such decrees. But the act of 12th July, 1842, abolishing imprisonment for debt, seems to have a direct application to such cases. It declares that "no person shall be arrested or imprisoned on any civil process issuing out of any Court of this Commonwealth, on any writ or proceeding, instituted for the recovery of any money due upon any judgment or decree, founded upon contract, or due upon any contract, express or implied, or for the recovery of any damages for the non-performance of any contract, excepting in proceedings as for contempt to enforce civil remedies," &c., "in which cases the remedies shall remain as heretofore." The general words of this statute embrace Decrees in Equity, as well as judgments at law, in all cases where the judgment or decree is for the payment of money due on a contract. But the question arises whether the exception in favor of "proceedings as for contempt to enforce civil remedies," embraces constructive contempts, arising from the non-payment of money due on a contract, after the amount has been ascertained by a decree in Equity. The words of the exception might, it is true, be construed to embrace such cases. But we must not lose sight of the main object of the statute, which was to relieve from imprisonment in all cases where no offence appears, except that of omitting to pay money due on a contract. That omission may be as likely to arise from inability and misfortune as from perverseness. Where there is no evidence of fraud, in disobeying the decree, there is no contempt at all, within the meaning of the exception. Where, on the contrary, there is evidence of fraud, the act of Assembly makes provision for investigating the facts, and prescribes a course of proceeding which excludes imprisonment until the fraud be established. In favor of liberty, and in view of the chief object of the act of 1842, I feel bound to adopt the construction, that the power to imprison for the purpose of enforcing a decree for the payment of money due on a contract, no longer exists. See 2 Pa. Law Jour. 155; Brightly's Equity Jurisprudence, section 748.

In this case there was a decree with a double aspect. It required the delivery of deeds as well as the payment of money due on a contract. The deeds were executed and deposited with an officer of the Court, in pursuance of the 3d article of the Act of 17th March, 1845. This was done at the time the appeal was taken to this Court; and, upon the affirmation of the decree, the remedy for the delivery of the deeds was an order of the Court upon its own officer, and not the imprisonment of the party for not delivering deeds which had already been so far delivered that they were no longer in his power. But when Mr. Scott was brought into Court on attachment, the deed, were at once delivered to the proper party in accordance with the decree; and the only part of it which remained unperformed, was that which required the payment of the money due on the contract and the costs. For this, and this alone, the relator was committed to prison. All this fully appears by the record. Where the record shows that the imprisonment is for this purpose alone, and that no other contempt was alleged or adjudicated, the process of imprisonment is void, and may be disregarded, on habeas corpus, as furnishing no sufficient cause of detainer.

There is a rule of the Supreme Court which declares that where the decree is solely for the payment of money, final process to execute it may be by writ of execution in the form used in the same Courts in suits at common law in actions of assumpsit. This does not of itself exclude imprisonment under the usual process of Courts of Equity to enforce decrees. On the contrary, it gives an additional remedy.

But the act of 1842 is more restrictive in its operation. It expressly prohibits imprisonment to enforce decrees for the payment of money due on contracts, and the rule of Court must not be construed as a repeal of that statute. It was not even intended as a construction of it. The rule is copied from the Equity Rule of the United States Courts, and was adopted by the State Court in obedience to the Act of Assembly. It does not in terms, provide for a decree in which the double obligations to deliver deeds and to pay money are sought to be enforced. Such a decree must therefore be enforced according to the general practice in equity, subject to the modifications required by the statute.

Where, in ejectment, there is a judgment for land, and also for the payment of damages and costs, the land is delivered on a writ of habere facias possessionem, and the damages and costs are collected on a fi. fa. In like manner, where the decree is for the delivery of deeds and also for the payment of money, the first may be enforced by attachment, while the last may be collected by process of execution, as an action of assumpsit, or by such other process as a Court of Equity may use, without violating the act abolishing imprisonment for debt. The inconvenience of severing the process of execution, according to the nature of the decree, is certainly no reason for depriving the citizen of his liberty contrary to law.

The evils which might flow from the nullification of process of the Common Pleas, by a single Judge of the Supreme Court, have not escaped consideration. But in the present case I am relieved from all difficulty on that score by the opportunity I have had of consulting my brethren. Judges Lowrie, Woodward and Knox fully concur in the views herein expressed. Judge Black has not been heard from, but I do not think it proper to detain the relator in prison any longer, as a majority of the Court entertain the opinion that he is entitled to his discharge from prison.

The prisoner is discharged from imprisonment.

Opinion by Knox, J.

SARAH L. KEENE vs. THE BURGESS AND COUNCIL OF THE INCORPORATED BOROUGH OF BRISTOL IN THE COUNTY OF BUCKS.

Bill in Equity.

The complainant has filed a bill in this Court to enjoin the defendants from opening a street through her lands in the Borough of Bristol. The motion now before us is for a preliminary injunction, and all that is necessary for us to say at this stage of the case is, that the argument has failed to convince us that the Act of 18th Feb., 1853, which authorizes the Burgess and Town Council of the Borough of Bristol to lay out and construct streets in said Borough is unconstitutional. Ordinarily the power of taxation which is given to municipal corporations is adequate security to the citizen for his property which may be taken in opening streets for public use. No other security need be required in the Act of the General Assembly giving the corporate authorities power to open streets. Where, however, it is clearly shown that the power of taxation is inadequate, within a reasonable time, to pay the damages likely to be occasioned, we have no doubt that it is the right and duty of this Court to interfere when properly called upon, and prevent the property from being taken, or the damages from being done, until adequate security is given. The present is a case which requires such interference. The power of taxation in the Borough of Bristol is so limited that the amount of damages likely to be occasioned to the complainant's land in all probability could not be paid out of the public treasury of said Borough within any reasonable time. To make the complainant perfectly safe, we will not allow the street to be opened through her lands until the bond of the Borough, with one sufficient surety in the penal sum of five thousand dollars, be given as mentioned in the answer.

ORDER.

And now, July 16th, 1856, it is Ordered, That the Burgess, Town Council, and Street Commissioner of the Borough of Bristol, in the County of Bucks, their servants and workmen, be enjoined from entering upon and taking possession of the lands and premises, or any part thereof, of Sarah L. Keene, in the Borough aforesaid, and from laying out, opening and grading a street called Danaver Street, through said lands and premises, until the said Burgess and Town Council shall give a bond with one surety, to be approved of by a member of this Court, in the penal sum of five thousand dollars, conditioned to pay to Sarah L. Keene all the damages which may be adjudged to her by reason of the laying out and opening said street through her lands and premises.

Said Bond, after being approved of as aforesaid, to be tendered to the plaintiff, and if not accepted by her, to be filed amongst the records of the Court of Nisi Prius, at the City of Philadelphia, to which Court the record of this case is remitted for further proceedings according to law.

This special injunction not to issue until the complainant shall give her bond, with sufficient sureties, to be approved of by one of the Judges of this Court, in the penal sum of five hundred dollars, conditioned to indemnify the defendants for all damages that may be sustained by reason of this injunction.

Sheriff's Sales.

Abstract of Properties to be sold by Geo. Megee, Esq., Sheriff, on Monday, September 1st, at Sansom Street Hall, at 4 o'clock, P. M.

EXPLANATION.

D. C. District Court.
C. P. Common Pleas.
S. C. Supreme Court.
J. T. 56. June Term, 1856.
Ven. Ex. Venditioni Exponas.
Lev. fa. Levavi facias.

Conditions of Sale.

Fifty dollars of the price or sum at which the property shall be struck off, shall be paid to the Sheriff at the time of sale, unless the purchase money shall be less than that sum, in which case only the purchase money shall be paid.

Otherwise the property will again be immediately put up, and sold. The balance of the purchase money must be paid to the Sheriff, at his office within ten days from the time of sale, without any demand being made by the Sheriff, therefore. Otherwise the property may be sold again at the expense and risk of the person to whom it is struck off, who, in case of any deficiency at such re-sale, shall make good the same. Arrears of Ground Rent and taxes, if any, will be paid out of the purchase money, if the bills are presented to the Sheriff before he parts with the money; otherwise they will be paid by the purchaser.

Sight Bills and Time Checks.

One of the mooted points of commercial law is, whether bank checks drawn payable at a future day, or commercial bills at sight are entitled to grace. The decisions of the courts have been variant, and the practice of bankers is not uniform, though the denial of grace days is becoming more general. A recent case in Ohio, of Martin vs Bailey, brought the following ruling on the subject from Judge Bartley of the District Court:

I. That a draft of money payable at a day subsequent to its date, although otherwise in the ordinary form of a check, is a bill of exchange, and subject to the usages and rules that govern bills of exchange, and, as such, is entitled to days of grace.

II. The distinction between a bill and a check does not depend upon whether drawn payable to order or bearer, or whether drawn upon a bank or a banker or not; but it is founded in the difference in nature or character of these two classes of commercial paper.

III. A check and a bill of exchange, though in many respects similar, are to be distinguished in the following particulars, to wit:

1st. A check is drawn upon an existing fund, and is an absolute transfer or appropriation to the holder of so much money, in the hands of the drawee, but very frequently drawn in anticipation of funds, upon a previously arranged credit.

2. The drawer of a check is always the principal, whereas the drawer of a bill frequently stands in the position of a mere surety.

3d. Although demand of payment and notice of non-payment in due time may be essential to hold the endorser of a check, yet a failure in this respect does not discharge the drawer, unless an actual loss to him can be shown to have arisen from such delinquency on the part of the holder.

4th. A check requires no acceptance, and when presented, is presented for payment.

5th. It is not protestable; or, in other words, protest is not requisite to hold the maker or an endorser.

6th. From these distinguishing characteristics, arising out of the nature of these two classes of instruments, it follows, that a check is payable on presentation and demand, and cannot be made payable on a specified day in future, and consequently not entitled to days of grace.

7th. Any supposed usage of banks in any particular place to regard drafts upon them payable at a day certain, as checks, and not entitled to days of grace, is inadmissible, as evidence to control the rules of law in relation to such paper.

HARPER'S NEW CATALOGUE

A NEW DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE OF HARPER & BROTHERS' PUBLICATIONS is now ready for distribution, and may be obtained gratuitously on application to the Publishers personally, or by letter enclosing six cents in postage stamps.

The attention of gentlemen, in town or country, designing to form libraries or enrich their literary collections, is respectfully invited to this Catalogue, which will be found to comprise a large proportion of the standard and most esteemed works in English literature—COMPREHENDING MORE THAN TWO THOUSAND VOLUMES—which are offered in most instances at less than one half the cost of similar productions in England.

To Librarians and others connected with Colleges, Schools, etc., who may not have access to a reliable guide in forming the true estimate of literary productions, it is believed the present Catalogue will prove especially valuable as a manual of reference.

To prevent disappointment, it is suggested that, whenever books can not be obtained through any bookseller or local agent, applications with remittance should be addressed direct to the Publishers, which will be promptly attended to.

 No. 197 CHESTNUT STREET,

The Fullest, the Latest, and the Best
REPORTS OF THE COMMON LAW COURTS
 OF ENGLAND.

Containing the cases decided in the Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Nisi Prius Courts, from 1813 to 1855, and in the Court of Exchequer and Exchequer Chamber, from 1824 to 1855, are found in

The Regular and Authoritative Series of the
English Common Law and English Exchequer Reports,

Which present the following claims to the support of the profession:

1. They are the only series issued as the authoritative and acknowledged medium by which the decisions of the Law Courts of England are made public.

2. They contain Later Reports than the Boston series, are more fully and more ably reported, and so arranged by preservation of the original paging, that reference by reporters, or by elementary writers, can be traced as readily as in the English editions.

Vol. 2, Ellis & Blackburne's (75 E. C. L. R.) Reports (Q. B.) to January, 1854, was published by us in June, 1854. At that time the last Queen's Bench case printed in the Boston Law and Equity Reports, was of June 25, 1853. Our volume contained cases decided five months later. The Queen's Bench cases to November 25, 1853, were published in the Boston series in August, 1854, two months after we had distributed the same cases.

Vol. 3, Ellis & Blackburne, (77 E. C. L. R., with cases to the end of Trinity Term, 1854, was published when the latest case of Queen's Bench decisions in the Boston series, was of February 8, 1854, more than four months behind the regular reporters.

Exchequer Reports, vol. 9, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) distributed by us January 11, 1855, contains cases to May 10, 1854. The last Exchequer case then in the Boston series was decided February 9, 1854, four months behind the regular Reporter, issued in Philadelphia.

3. They contain more cases decided by the courts represented, than any other series issued in this country.

Vol. 77 English Common Law, (3 E. & B.) reports eighty-six cases decided in the Queen's Bench since January 11, 1854, while but fifty-eight Queen's Bench cases, decided since January 1, 1854, are found scattered among Vols. 22, 24 and 25 of the Boston Law and Equity.

Vol. 78 E. C. L. K. (5 J. Scott,) reports sixty-five cases decided since Nov. 13, 1853, in the Common Pleas, while the L. & E. has but fifty-seven cases in that Court since the same period.

Vol. 9 Exchequer Reports, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) reports one hundred and ten cases in the Courts of Exchequer, decided since June 24, 1853, while since the same date, the L. & E. report but 107 cases, scattered through vols. 20, 22, 24 and 25.

4. They are almost exclusively cited in argument of counsel, and referred to by Elementary Writers for Law Authorities. See Smith's Leading Cases, Smith's Contracts, Smith's Landlord and Tenant, by Maude; Byles on Bills and Promissory Notes, Broom's Legal Maxims, Broom's Commentaries on the Laws of England, or almost any recent Law Book issued in England.

5. The Philadelphia Reports are edited by Judge Sharswood and by Judge Hare, whose labors as editors and authors have made them so well and so favorably known to the profession.

6. The Boston Law and Equity is made up in this country from the Law Journal, Jurist, Times and other Law periodicals, of a weekly, monthly, or quarterly character, and being unknown in England, is never cited in Court, or referred to by Law writers. The periodicals from which it is extracted, are occasionally cited under their own particular names, but they do not possess that permanent value, even in England, which is all-important in a series of Reports.

A carefully prepared and accurate Annual Digest of all the cases decided by the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Exchequer, will be distributed, early in each year, to subscribers to either series, free of charge. That for 1854 is ready, and will be mailed to subscribers who have not received a copy.

IN PRESS AND IN PREPARATION.

Leading Cases on the Law relating to Real Property, Conveyancing, and the Construction of Wills, by Owen Davies Tudor, author of Leading Cases in Equity. With very full notes referring to American Decisions.

Broom's Commentaries on the Common Law, by author of Legal Maxims, and Parties to Actions, edited by Hon. Geo. Sharswood.

Smith's Law of Landlord and Tenant, by author of Leading Cases, with copious American notes by P. P. Morris, Esq.

Having purchased from the English Publishers, during the past year, early sheets of the three works above announced, we hope to issue improved American editions very soon after their completion in England.

Williams' Personal Property, edited by B. Gerard, Esq., to be ready in July.

Starkie on the Law of Evidence. Arranged and Annotated by Hon. Geo. Sharswood.

Digest of the Exchequer Reports, 35 vols. by Asa J. Fish, Esq.

Index to the English Common Law Reports, by Geo. W. Biddle and R. C. McMurtrie, Esqrs. 2 vols. Svo.

Law School of the University at Cambridge, Mass.

The instructors in this school are HON. JOEL PARKER, LL. D., Royal Professor. HON. THEOPHILUS PARSONS, LL. D., Dane Professor. HON. EMERY WASHBURN, LL. D., University Professor.

The course of instruction embraces the various branches of the Common Law, and of Equity, Admiralty, Commercial, International and Constitutional Law, and the Jurisprudence of the United States. The Law Library consists of about 14,000 volumes, and as new works appear they are added and every effort is made to render it complete.

Instruction is given by oral lectures and expositions, (and by recitations and examinations, in connection with them,) of which there are ten every week. Two Moot Courts are also holden in each week, at each of which a cause, previously given out, is argued by four students, and an opinion delivered by the presiding instructor. Rooms and other facilities are also provided for the Club Courts; and an Assembly is held weekly for practice in debate, and acquiring a knowledge of Parliamentary law and proceedings.

Students may enter the school in any stage of their professional studies or mercantile pursuits, and at the commencement of either term, or in the middle, or other part of a term. They are at liberty to select what studies they will pursue according to their view of their own wants and attainments.

The Academical year, which commences on Thursday, six weeks after the third Wednesday in July, is divided into two terms, of twenty weeks each, with a vacation of six weeks at the end of each term.

During the winter vacation, the Library is opened, warmed and lighted, for the use of the members of the school.

Applications for admission, or for Catalogues, or any further information, may be made to either of the Professors at Cambridge.

NOTICE.

THE Subscriber takes this method of informing his numerous friends, and the public in general, that he is now prepared to execute in a superior manner, every variety of HOUSE and SIGN PAINTING, Graining, Bronzing, Gilding on Glass and Stained Glass, Calomining Ceilings, Walls, &c., &c. China and Glass Painting executed in a superior manner, and warranted not to crack. Ceilings cleaned and whitened, and made equal to new, at a cost little over that of whitewash. The subscriber would state here that it frequently occurs that persons attempt to use this article who have no knowledge of it whatever, either in the mixing or putting it on, and the consequence is, the job is spoiled, and the article condemned without a proper trial.—So also with CHINA GLOSS; to make a good job it requires a practical knowledge of the use of the brush, as also the making of the Gloss. In regard to the ZINC WHITE, the subscriber would most respectfully recommend it as an article far superior to any other paint now in use, for whiteness and durability of color.

The Subscriber would respectfully solicit a portion of the patronage of those getting Painting done. Feeling grateful for the many favors already bestowed by his friends, he still hopes to share their patronage by unremitting attention to their calls. Those who have large contracts to give out, need have no hesitancy in calling, as he is prepared to give every satisfaction in regard to work, both in reference and security, for the faithful performance of all agreements.

The Subscriber can be found at the S. E. CORNER OF FOURTH AND WALNUT STS. where he will be happy to receive any orders. Aug. 24—1 yr. JACOB S. BEAM.

IN THE COURT OF COMMON PLEAS FOR THE CITY AND COUNTY OF PHILAD'A.

To the Executors, Heirs and Legal Representatives of ENOCH FRALEY, deceased, and to Enoch Fraley and his representatives. Notice is hereby given, that a petition has been presented to the Court of Common Pleas for the City and County of Philadelphia, by William C. Morgan, setting forth, that John Semin, from the 28th day of June, 1830, executed unto Enoch Fraley, executor of Jos'h Fraley, deceased, a mortgage of all that messuage and lot of ground, situate on the south-east side of Allen street and north-east side of an alley leading from Allen to Beach street, in the district of Kensington, containing in front thirty-seven feet, and in depth to an alley seventy-five feet, which mortgage is to secure the sum of $350, and is recorded in M. B. A. M., No. 1, page 59, &c., which mortgage has long since been paid but has not been satisfied of record. Whereupon the said Court did order the Sheriff of Philadelphia County to give public notice to the parties to appear before the Court on MONDAY, September 15, to show cause, if any they have, why said mortgage should not be satisfied of record. GEO. MEGEE, Sheriff. Sheriff's Office, Aug. 24. aug 22-4t

IN THE COURT OF COMMON PLEAS FOR THE CITY AND COUNTY OF PHILAD'A.

To the Administrators of JEHU WARD, deceased. Notice is hereby given, that at a Court of Common Pleas, held August 4, 1856, the petition of Susan Rudolph was presented setting forth that on the 28th June, 1844, she executed a mortgage for $800 to Jehu Ward, of the City of Philadelphia, upon certain premises on the west side of Old York Road, 100 feet south from Oxford street, in Kensington, recorded in Mortgage Book R. L. L., No. 13, page 330; which said mortgage has been fully paid, but no satisfaction entered of record. That said Jehu Ward is now dead and his Administrators, Elizabeth Ward and J. P. Ward, have removed from the State of Pennsylvania. Whereupon the Court order the Sheriff of Philadelphia County to give public notice to the parties to appear before said Court, on MONDAY, the 15th day of September, 1856, at 10 o'clock A. M., and show cause, if any they have, why said mortgage should not be satisfied of record. GEO. MEGEE, Sheriff. Philada., Sheriff's Office, Aug. 18. 1856. aug 22-4t

JURY TRIALS.

First Period, three weeks from Sept. 29th, 1856, to Oct. 18th, 1856, inclusive.

Second Period, three weeks from Oct. 20th, 1856, to Nov. 8th, 1856, inclusive.

Third Period, three weeks from Nov. 10th, 1856, to Nov. 29th, 1856, inclusive.

The VENIRE for the First Period, will issue on August 28th, 1856.

The VENIRE for the Second Period, will issue on Sept. 18th, 1856.

The VENIRE for the Third Period, will issue on Oct. 9th, 1856.

Causes entitled to be placed upon the First Period, must be at issue on or before August 27th, 1856.

Second Period, must be at issue on or before Sept. 17th, 1856.

Third Period, must be at issue on or before Oct. 8th, 1856.

RULE LXVII. No cause shall be placed on the Trial List until after issue joined, nor without the written order of one of the parties or his counsel. Nor shall any cause be placed on the Trial List for any period, unless the same shall be at issue before the issuing of the venire for such period. It shall be the duty of the Prothonotary, at least thirty days before the commencement of any period appropriated to the trial of causes by jury to make out a complete list of all causes entitled to be placed on the Trial List for such period; and none of the causes on such list shall be continued to another term unless at the joint request of the Counsel, signified by writing filed with the Prothonotary at least three weeks before the commencement of such period.

It is the duty of the Prothonotary at least thirty days before the commencement of any period appropriated to the trial of causes by jury, to make out and deliver to the Sheriff the venire for such period.

RULE OF COURT, JUNE 6, 1848. Ordered. That any party intending to tax costs before the Prothonotary, shall give him and the opposite party twenty-four hours notice of such intention—the time to be fixed for such taxation shall be from one to three o'clock, P. M.

RULE OF COURT, MARCH 7, 1849. Ordered. That hereafter the Prothonotary shall issue no capias ad respondendum endorsed with bail in more than $500, without a special allocation from one of the Judges.

RULE OF COURT, DECEMBER 27, 1851. Ordered. That in every case of a bill of Exceptions it shall be the duty of the party presenting the bill, within twenty days thereafter, to have the same settled by the Judge before whom the case was tried on 48 hours notice, with a copy of the bill served on the opposite party, otherwise the Judge shall not be required to seal the same. Provided, that the rule now in force, requiring the bill to be presented within ten days be not affected by the adoption of this rule.

ORDERED:—MAY 28, 1853. That the Rules of this Court, as printed by A. Walker, in his book of Court Rules, the present year, be and they are hereby adopted and published as the Rules of this Court, from and after the first Monday of June next; and all other Rules heretofore made, are hereby repealed from that time. JAMES W. FLETCHER, Prothonotary.

"To win the maid the poet tries,
And sometimes writes to Julia's eyes,
She likes a cerse—but cruel whim,
She still appears a cerse to him."

Had the above-mentioned swain consulted Julia's taste by procuring his clothing from the beautiful store of Granville Stokes, No. 209 Chestnut street, she would have yielded readily.

BLACKSTONE'S COMMENTARIES

COMMENTARIES

ON THE LAWS OF ENGLAND, IN FOUR BOOKS.

BY SIR WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, Knt.

ONE OF THE JUSTICES OF THE COURT OF COMMON PLEAS. WITH THE LAST CORRECTIONS OF THE AUTHOR, AND NOTES.

From the Twenty-first London Edition. With copious

NOTES, Explaining the Changes in the Law effected by Decision or Statute, down to 1844. Together with Notes adapting the Work to the American Student. By JOHN L. WENDELL, LATE REPORTER OF THE SUPREME COURT.

Four Octavo Volumes, bound in fine Law Sheep, Price $7 00.

The Twenty-first Edition of "Blackstone's Commentaries" was prepared by intrusting each one of the four great departments of jurisprudence, treated of by Sir WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, to a separate Editor, whose professional studies had made him peculiarly conversant with that particular branch of learning, to wit:

- Vol. I. To J. F. HARGRAVE, of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister at Law.
Vol. II. To G. SWIFT, of the Inner Temple, Barrister at Law.
Vol. III. To R. COUCH, of the Middle Temple, Barrister at Law.
Vol. IV. To W. N. WELSLY, Recorder of Chester.

Into the hands of these gentlemen were put all the Editions of Blackstone then extant in England, with directions to avail themselves of such notes of former editors as they should approve, (among those editions was that of Mr. CHITTY.) Under those circumstances, and by this division of labor, was produced a work highly beneficial to the student, and greatly facilitating the researches of counsel.

The notes of the American Editor were to show the Common Law as it exists in this country under our institutions, particularly in the State of New York, and more especially as effected by the Revised Statutes of that State, and to point out the diversities of the Common Law as held in England and in this country in the few instances in which a difference exists.

This edition is the most accurate and useful which has appeared.—London Times. Incomparably the best edition that has ever been published.—Literary World.

We do not hesitate to endorse the emphatic approval which the edition has received in England, and pronounce it the best that has ever appeared.—Law Reporter.

There can be no question, that this edition of the Commentaries is destined to supersede all others.—Courier.

These notes are of the greatest value, and add ten-fold to the work, so far as the American student is concerned.—Albany Argus.

Published by HARPER & BROTHERS, 327 to 335 Pearl Street, Franklin Square, NEW YORK.

HARPER & BROTHERS will send the above Work by Mail, postage paid, (for any distance in the United States under 3000 miles,) on receipt of the money.

Blood's Despatch Post.

The Bank of Cash Credits.

Application will be made to the Legislature of Pennsylvania, for the Charter of a Bank Issue with general banking privileges, with a capital of ONE MILLION OF DOLLARS. Said Bank to be located in the City of Philadelphia, to be called the "Robert Morris Bank," and to be conducted upon the system of cash credits only, as is herewith indicated.

A cash credit is a credit given to an individual by a Banking Company, for a limited sum, seldom under $500, or $1000, upon his own security and that of two or three individuals, approved by the Bank, who become sureties for its payment. The individual who has obtained such a credit, is enabled to draw the whole sum, or any part of it, when he pleases; replacing it, or portions of it, according as he finds it convenient; interest being charged upon such part only as he draws out.

"If a man borrows $1000, from a private hand, and even then it is not always to be found when required, he pays interest for it, whether he be using it or not. His bank credit costs him nothing, except during the moment it is of service to him, and this circumstance is of equal advantage as if he had borrowed money at a much lower rate of interest."

Cash credits are not, however, intended to be a dead load; the main objects of the Banks in granting them is to get their notes circulated, and they do not grant them except to persons in business, or to those who are frequently drawing out and paying in money.

Any person who applies to a bank for a cash credit, is called upon to produce sureties, and, after a full inquiry into the character of the applicant, the nature of his business, and the sufficiency of his securities, he is allowed to open a credit, and to draw upon the Bank for the whole of its amount, or for such part as his daily transaction may require. To the credit of the account, he pays in such sums as he may not have occasion to use, and interest is charged or credited upon the balance, as the case may be. From the facility which these cash credits give to all the small transactions of the country, and from the opportunities which they afford to persons who begin business with little or no capital but their character, to employ profitably the minutest products of their industry, it cannot be doubted that the most important advantages are derived in the whole community.

Such privileges and immunities as the "Metropolitan Bank of New York" exercises, will be applied for.

BLANK BOOKS AND STATIONERY.

DAVID M. HOGAN,

Respectfully informs his friends and the public, that he will continue the manufacture of Blank Books, and sale of Stationery, at the old stand, formerly occupied by Hogan & Bechtel, and would be thankful for any orders they may favor him with. Orders for Engraving, Lithographing, Job Printing of every description.

BLANK BOOKS FOR BANKS,

Public Offices, Merchants, and others, attended to with promptness, and executed in the best manner. A good supply of Counting House and other Stationery kept constantly on hand.

DAVID M. HOGAN, 100 Walnut Street, between Fourth and Fifth. June 27-3m.

PRIZE MEDAL TRUNK MANUFACTORY

To the Ladies and Gentlemen of Philadelphia, and Travellers Generally.

The Subscribers will now offer to sell, at Retail, our large and extensive stock of Trunks, Valises, Leather and Carpet Bags, Ladies Hat Boxes, Dress Trunks, together with a general assortment of improved Steel Spring Solid Sole Leather Trunks, of various styles. Being entirely engaged in the Manufacturing of all kinds of Travelling articles, and paying personal attention to our Manufacturing Department, it enables us to warrant our work to be made superior to any other establishment in this City. Travellers wishing to get a first rate article, and to save from ten to fifteen per cent. are respectfully invited to call at this old and extensive Prize Medal Trunk Manufactory.

THOS. W. MATSON, Manufacturer, 130 Market Street, South-west corner Fourth.

UNDERTAKER.

LEWIS FAYETTE respectfully informs his friends and the public that he has, at the request of many friends, opened a place of business at No. 148 South NINTH Street, next door to the Penn College, below Locust Street. He still continues his old stand, at No. 350 S. SECOND Street. He assures those who call on him in time of trouble, that they will not be dissatisfied. Coffins of all kinds constantly on hand. Hearses and Carriages surpassed by none, with careful drivers.

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND.

INTEREST FIVE PER CENT, PER ANNUM.

ALL SUMS OF MONEY RETURNED ON DEMAND.

OFFICE, NEXT DOOR TO THE POST OFFICE; No. 83 Dock Street,

PHILADELPHIA, 1854.

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND, No. 83 DOCK Street, next door to THIRD Street, and adjoining the POST OFFICE, receives MONEY on deposit daily, from 9 in the morning until 3 in the afternoon; also Monday evenings, from 7 to 9 o'clock. Interest is allowed on deposits at the rate of FIVE PER CENT per annum. Deposits will be returned in whole, or in part, on demand, without notice.

The popularity of this Office with all classes of the community, both in town and country, and its consequent success, may be ascribed, in part, to the following substantial reasons:

- 1st. It offers a convenient, responsible, and profitable Depository to Executors, Administrators, Assignees, Collectors, Agents, and all public officers—to Attorneys, Trustees, Societies and Associations, whether incorporated or otherwise—to married or single ladies—to Students, Merchants, Clerks, and business men generally—to Mechanics, Farmers, Minors of either sex, and all who have funds, much or little, to deposit, where they may be had at any time, with Five Per Cent interest added.
2d. Depositors receive Books, with an abstract of the By-laws and regulations, in which is entered their deposits, which Books serve as vouchers, and who shall receive their deposits, without the intervention of Executors or Administrators. Any one or more persons may deposit in his, her, or their name, or for any other person or persons.
3d. A Report is made each year to the Legislature and Councils of the City.
4th. The Officers are sworn before they enter upon their duties, in addition to giving Bonds with sureties.
5th. The State Savings Fund is a real Savings Fund—not an Insurance and Trust Company. The Charter of this Institution avoids the Insurance business.
6th. Deposits may be withdrawn by checks after the manner customary with Banks. Check Books will be furnished to depositors without charge.
GEORGE H. HART, President. CHAS. G. IMLAY, Treasurer.

VALUABLE REPORTS. LITTLE, BROWN, & CO.

112 Washington Street, BOSTON, Curtis's Supreme Court Decisions

THE DECISIONS OF THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES,

With notes and a Digest by Hon. Benjamin R. Curtis, one of the Associate Justices of the Court. In 22 volumes, octavo. Comprising the Cases reported by Dallas, 4 vols.; Cranch, 9 vols.; Wheaton, 12 vols.; Peters, 16 vols.; Howard, 17 vols.

The old series of these reports are in 57 volumes, the Catalogue price of which is $217 50. This edition in 22 volumes, is offered to subscribers at the low price of $3 a volume; thus bringing them within the means of all. The volumes are delivered as fast as issued, and it is intended that the whole work shall be completed early in 1856.

Vols. 1 to 15 are now ready. We ask attention to the following approval by the members of the Supreme Court of the United States:

"We approve the plan of Mr. Justice Curtis's, 'Decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States,' and believe that its execution by him will be of much utility to the legal profession and to our country.

English Law and Equity Reports.

ENGLISH REPORTS IN LAW AND EQUITY. A Complete Collection of the Cases decided by the House of Lords, the Privy Council, the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas and Exchequer, the Lord Chancellor, the High Court of Appeals, Chancery, the Court of Criminal Appeal, and the Admiralty and Ecclesiastical Courts. Reprinted within a few weeks after the decisions are rendered.

This series has the merit of being complete, reliable, prompt, convenient, and cheap. It is now universally cited in the courts, and referred to in the recent law books as standard authority. All the cases reported in England, are here reprinted from the most reliable sources, as soon as they reach this country.

These Reports are now regularly digested in our Annual United States Digest, which thus embraces an annual digest of the whole English and American Law.

We have now in Preparation, and shall soon Publish,

A separate Digest of these Reports, embracing the first thirty-one volumes of the series, prepared with express reference to the convenience of the American profession, and exhibiting a complete synopsis of all the English Decisions reported in those volumes during the last five years; also a Table of Cases referring to all the contemporaneous English Reports. This will be the first Digest of English Decisions prepared expressly for the American Lawyer, and it is intended to give it the same advantages over the English Digests hitherto reprinted in this country, which the American text books have generally been found to possess over the English.

The Law and Equity Reports will be continued on the same plan as heretofore; the number of volumes being reduced to four per year; and Digests will be published from time to time as the convenience of the profession demands.

Vols. 1 to 31, now ready for delivery, at $1 00 per volume.

Supreme Court.

Opinions by Lewis, C. J.

Feb. 23, 1856.

Poor Law—Desertion.

ANTHONY'S APPEAL.

George Anthony was brought before Alderman Ogle, on a complaint by the Guardians of the Poor, charging him with deserting his wife, leaving her likely to become chargeable as a pauper. He was required to give security for his appearance at the Court of Quarter Sessions. That Court on hearing ordered him to pay for the support of his wife one dollar and fifty cents per week, "and for the support of his child the sum of one dollar per week," and to give security for the performance of the order. It does not appear that he was charged with deserting his child, or that he had any notice that he was to answer such a charge in the Quarter Sessions. He came there to answer the charge of deserting his wife. There was error in requiring the payment of money for the support of the child. If that should be necessary, it can be made the subject of a new proceeding. The child might have been included in the original charge when the warrant was taken out; but, as it was not, it could not be introduced for the first time in the Quarter Sessions. The other objections are either unsupported by the record, or touch not the merits of the case.

It is ordered that so much of the decree of the Quarter Sessions as orders the payment of the sum of one dollar per week for the support of the child of George Anthony be stricken out. With this correction, the decree is affirmed.

Promissory Note—Demand.

MIDDLETON vs. THE BOSTON LOCOMOTIVE WORKS.

No errors have been assigned, nor has the decision of the Court rejecting the evidence been certified by bill of exceptions as required by law. The judgment must therefore be affirmed. But, if the error complained of in the argument had been placed on the record, it could not avail the plaintiff in error, either under the pleadings in the cause, or in any other form of pleading. The note is made "negotiable and payable," at a specified bank. It is not pretended that it has been paid, or that funds have been deposited in the bank for the purpose. The complaint is, that the holder did not give evidence that he made a demand of payment at the time and place specified. This might be required, in order to change an endorser; but, according to the American decision, it is entirely unnecessary when the action is against the maker of the note. Payment is a matter of defence which he must show as an affirmative fact. The action is a sufficient demand as against him—13 Peters, U. S. Rep. 144; 11 Wheat, 171; 5 Leigh, 522; 1 Gill. & John, 175; 8 Cowen, 271; 8 Mars. 430; 4 Halst. 189; 2 Gerger, 81; 10 N. H. Rep. 438; 2 W. & S. 458. If, when a note is made payable at a particular bank, it be unnecessary to prove that payment was demanded there, it must be equally unnecessary to negotiate it at the bank, although by its terms made "negotiable" there. With, or without such a clause, if the note be in form a negotiable instrument, he may negotiate it then or not at his election. He is not bound to negotiate it at all. If the intention be to restrict the holder from negotiating it except at a specified bank, language of restriction must be inserted. The words "and not elsewhere," or words of like import, may answer the purpose. But even this language would not oblige the holder to negotiate the note at all. The cases which we are bound to regard as authority stand in conflict with this view of the question. Judgment affirmed.

Feb. 23, 1856.

Debtor and Creditor—Partnership Debt.
H. N. BURROUGHS' APPEAL.

A limited partnership was carried on in the name of James I. Boswell. The assets of the firm have been assigned to Bullitt & Fairthorne, for the benefit of creditors, and the Court below, after a report from an Auditor, rejected the claim of H. N. Burroughs, because it was not a claim on the partnership. The claim of Mr. Burroughs is in the name of James I. Boswell. It does not appear from the face of the papers, whether the debt was a partnership or an individual transaction. But there was evidence alimunde to justify the auditor in finding that it was not a claim on the partnership. This renders it unnecessary to decide how the presumption would have stood had no such evidence existed. The case of Miffin vs. Smith, 17 S. & R. 165, was a decision at Nisi Prius. The motion for a new trial was refused by the Court in Bank, but no opinion was given; so that we are left in some uncertainty relative to the reasons for refusing the motion, or how far the Court intended to sanction the rule laid down by the Judge at Nisi Prius, that where a partnership is carried on in the name of an individual, all notes given in his name are prima facie partnership debts. This decision is in conflict with authorities of weight. 5 Pick. 11; 9 Pick. 274; 5 Mason, 183; Story on Partnership, s. 139; Collyer, 226; Cary, 226. Without deciding the question, it must be apparent that very slight evidence would be sufficient to put the holder, especially if a party to the original transaction, to the proof that it was intended and understood as a partnership act, and was within the scope of the partnership business. The Auditor, acting on this principle, rejected the claim of Lewis & Co. We cannot perceive, in his proceeding, any such flagrant error as could justify us in setting aside his decision on these questions of fact. Decree affirmed.

March 32, 1856.

Stockholders—Voting by proxy.

BROOM vs. THE COMMONWEALTH.

There is some difference of opinion on the question whether the stockholders in a corporation purely of a private nature have a right to vote by proxy. Hale vs. Tudor, 5 Day, 329; Taylor vs. Griswold, 2 Green's N. T. Rep. 223; Angel and Ames on Corporation, 95. But it seems reasonable to hold that in a case where the shareholders are embarked in a common enterprise, and where the vote of each affects the interests of the others in the management of the concern, the selection of directors should be made under circumstances favorable to a consultation with each other, so that they might have the benefit of each other's views and information relative to their common interests. This can only be done by requiring the stockholders to be present when voting. It is not necessary, however, to decide this question in the case now before us. The charter declares that "each person being present at an election" shall be entitled to vote, and there is no provision in favor of voting by proxy. By the term "present" we understand the charter to mean an actual, not a constructive presence. This is the ordinary sense of the word. The clause in question, by strong implication, excludes all voting by absent stockholders. The errors in conducting two former elections passed sub silentio, and cannot control the clear intention of the charter. It was no part of the duty of the stockholders to give previous notice of their intention to insist on a compliance with the requirements of the charter. The instrument itself was sufficient notice of what would be required. The judgment of the Court below was correct. Judgment affirmed.

Jan'y 21, 1856.

Partition—Adverse possession.

LONGWELL vs. BENTLEY.

Error to Tioga Common Pleas.

A tenant in common may set up a claim against his co-tenant. A tenant for years may do the same. The moment either denies the title of his co-tenant or landlord, and gives notice of it, the possession is adverse, and if continued without action or entry for twenty-one years, is a valid title to the land, to the extent of the claim so made, if accompanied with actual exclusive possession. But to defeat the action of partition it is not necessary that the adverse possession should have a continuance of twenty-one years. It has been expressly decided that twenty-one days is as good as twenty-one years for that purpose. If the possession be held adversely by one of the parties they do not hold together, and this defeats the partition, and compels the plaintiff to try his title in ejectment before he can ask for a division of the land. 1 W. & S. 193; 1 Barr, 324.

The instrument of the 1st April, 1830, cannot be regarded as an estoppel upon Bentley, so as to preclude him from showing that he held adversely after the termination of the three years mentioned therein. It had relation to Daniel Brown's interest, who is therein stated to be absent. It is signed by Hance Bacon for himself and David Bacon. But there is no evidence that either of them had authority to bind Daniel Bacon. An estoppel must be mutual. Both parties must be bound or neither is estopped. Bentley did not receive possession under or by virtue of that instrument. He never attorned to either therein, or David Bacon, or Longwell their vendee. There was nothing to preclude him from showing that instead of attorning to them he openly and to their faces denied their title; and the Court was correct in admitting the evidence for that purpose. It may be true that in an ejectment by the heirs of Daniel Bacon, or by persons deriving title from them, brought before the right is barred by the Statute of Limitations, a lease might preclude the tenant from setting up an adverse title until he delivered the possession to those from whom he received it. But that is a very different question from the one involved in the present action. This action cannot be supported without proof that the parties, at the commencement of the suit, held the land together. Proof that the one in possession held adversely "for any length of time, however short," is proof that they did not hold together, and entitles the defendant to a verdict. 1 Barr, 325.

The questions raised in this case were disposed of when it was here before. There is no error in the proceedings. Judgment affirmed.

Opinion by Lowrie, J.

THE MONTOUR IRON CO. vs. COLEMAN.

Corporation—Affidavit of Defence.

The only question here is, does the law impose upon this Company the duty of entering their defence by affidavit, the plaintiff having, in a suit against them, filed, as his claim, two bills of exchange drawn on "Thomas Chambers, Pres't. Montour Iron Company," and accepted by him as President? We think that the filing of such a claim in such a case necessarily involves the averment that the Company accepted the bills by their agent; and such would be the actual averment in case it should become necessary to file a declaration. And, even admitting that the acceptance is, prima facie, that of the agent personally, the plaintiff may prove the contrary, (17 Wend. 40; 1 New Jersey R. 683,) and must do so in order to succeed, if the defendants deny it in the form required by law. This could not be, if the bills had been drawn on and accepted by him without any notice of his representative character. And if the suit had been brought and the claims filed against Chambers personally, this would have involved the allegation that he had not accepted as the authorized agent of the Company, though professing so to act, and he would have been under the necessity of meeting this allegation by an affidavit. There are cases enough showing that the averments necessarily involved in the plaintiff's case must be met by affidavit. 2 Watts & S. 447, 553; 2 Whart. 177; 13 Stat. R. 354. If the suit be against one man, and notes or bills are filed to which he has no appearance of being a party, the suit cannot be on them, and we cannot imply an averment that he is a party to them. But here the implication of an averment, that the defendants are the real acceptors of these bills, is necessarily raised by the record. We say nothing of the other instrument filed, because the defendants admit their liability for that. Judgment affirmed.

Concurring Opinion by Knox, J.

July 16, 1856.

Republication of Will after marriage.

FRAUSEN'S APPEAL.

Concurring in the affirmance of this decree, but not entirely in the opinion delivered by my brother Woodward, page 245, it is necessary that I should briefly state the reasons which have induced me to believe that the decree of the Register's Court should be affirmed.

1st. I have no doubt whatever but that the 16th sec. of the Act passed 8th April, 1833, which provides, "That a will executed by a single woman shall be deemed revoked by her subsequent marriage, and shall not be revived by the death of her husband," is in full force, neither repealed nor in any wise affected by the Act of 11th April, 1848.

2d. The true construction of the 7th section of the Act of 11th April, 1843, in my opinion, is, that it is necessary to the validity of a married woman's will devising real estate, that the witnesses mentioned in the section should be present when the will is completed by the signature of the testatrix, and that they should see her signature put to the will, or receive her acknowledgment of its genuine character at the time of the execution thereof.

3d. I do not believe that there is any thing in the Act of 8th April, 1833, which prohibits the republication of wills, made before, as subsequent to its passage by parol; but as the same solemnities are required in the republication as in the original publication, a will made before coverture and revoked by marriage cannot be published whilst the marriage relation exists by the mere declaration of the wife made to two or more persons, the will not being present, that she desires her husband to have her property according to her will, and that her wish is that the will should take effect after her death.

Applying these principles to the present case it follows, that the will made by Miss Anne Josephine Carter, on the 20th October, 1852, was broken by her marriage with Mr. Frausen in January, 1853, and that it was not revived by her declarations made during coverture proved by Mrs. Carter, Mrs. McCauley, and Ellen Borland. She therefore died intestate.

Lewis, C. J., concurs in this opinion.

Sheriff's Sales.

Abstract of Properties sold by Geo. Megee, Esq., Sheriff, on Monday, September 1st, at Sansom Street Hall, at 4 o'clock, P. M.

EXPLANATION.

D. C. District Court.
C. P. Common Pleas.
S. C. Supreme Court.
J. T. 56. June Term, 1856.
Ven. Ex. Venditioni Exponas.
Lev. fa. Levavi facias.

Conditions of Sale.

Fifty dollars of the price or sum at which the property shall be struck off, shall be paid to the Sheriff at the time of sale, unless the purchase money shall be less than that sum, in which case only the purchase money shall be paid.

Otherwise the property will again be immediately put up, and sold. The balance of the purchase money must be paid to the Sheriff, at his office within ten days from the time of sale, without any demand being made by the Sheriff, therefor. Otherwise the property may be sold again at the expense and risk of the person to whom it is struck off, who, in case of any deficiency at such re-sale, shall make good the same. Arrears of Ground Rent and taxes, if any, will be paid out of the purchase money, if the bills are presented to the Sheriff before he parts with the money; otherwise they will be paid by the purchaser.

T. & J. W. JOHNSON, LAW BOOKSELLERS AND PUBLISHERS, No. 197 CHESTNUT STREET, PHILADELPHIA.

The Fullest, the Latest, and the Best REPORTS OF THE COMMON LAW COURTS OF ENGLAND.

Containing the cases decided in the Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Nisi Prius Courts, from 1813 to 1855, and in the Court of Exchequer and Exchequer Chamber, from 1824 to 1855, are found in

The Regular and Authoritative Series of the English Common Law and English Exchequer Reports,

Which present the following claims to the support of the profession:

1. They are the only series issued as the authoritative and acknowledged medium by which the decisions of the Law Courts of England are made public.

2. They contain Later Reports than the Boston series, are more fully and more ably reported, and so arranged by preservation of the original paging, that reference by reporters, or by elementary writers, can be traced as readily as in the English editions.

Vol. 2, Ellis & Blackburne's (75 E. C. L. R.,) Reports (Q. B.) to January, 1854, was published by us in June, 1854. At that time the last Queen's Bench case printed in the Boston Law and Equity Reports, was of June 25, 1853. Our volume contained cases decided five months later. The Queen's Bench cases to November 25, 1853, were published in the Boston series in August, 1854, two months after we had distributed the same cases.

Vol. 3, Ellis & Blackburne, (77 E. C. L. R.,) with cases to the end of Trinity Term, 1854, was published when the latest case of Queen's Bench decisions in the Boston series, was of February 8, 1854, more than four months behind the regular reporters.

Exchequer Reports, vol. 9, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) distributed by us January 11, 1855, contains cases to May 10, 1854. The last Exchequer case then in the Boston series was decided February 9, 1854, four months behind the regular Reporter, issued in Philadelphia.

3. They contain more cases decided by the courts represented, than any other series issued in this country.

Vol. 77 English Common Law, (3 E. & B.,) reports eighty-six cases decided in the Queen's Bench since January 11, 1854, while but fifty-eight Queen's Bench cases, decided since January 1, 1854, are found scattered among Vols. 22, 24 and 25 of the Boston Law and Equity.

Vol. 78 E. C. L. K. (5 J. Scott,) reports sixty-five cases decided since Nov. 13, 1853, in the Common Pleas, while the L. & E. has but fifty-seven cases in that Court since the same period.

Vol. 9 Exchequer Reports, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) reports one hundred and ten cases in the Courts of Exchequer, decided since June 24, 1853, while since the same date, the L. & E. report but 107 cases, scattered through vols. 20, 22, 24 and 25.

4. They are almost exclusively cited in argument of counsel, and referred to by Elementary Writers for Law Authorities. See Smith's Leading Cases, Smith's Contracts, Smith's Landlord and Tenant, by Maude; Byles on Bills and Promissory Notes, Broom's Legal Maxims, Broom's Commentaries on the Laws of England, or almost any recent Law Book issued in England.

5. The Philadelphia Reports are edited by Judge Sharswood and by Judge Hare, whose labors as editors and authors have made them so well and so favorably known to the profession.

6. The Boston Law and Equity is made up in this country from the Law Journal, Jurist, Times and other Law periodicals, of a weekly, monthly, or quarterly character, and being unknown in England, is never cited in Court, or referred to by Law writers. The periodicals from which it is extracted, are occasionally cited under their own particular names, but they do not possess that permanent value, even in England, which is all-important in a series of Reports.

A carefully prepared and accurate Annual Digest of all the cases decided by the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Exchequer, will be distributed, early in each year, to subscribers to either series, free of charge. That for 1854 is ready, and will be mailed to subscribers who have not received a copy.

The instructors in this school are Hon. JOEL PARKER, LL. D., Royal Professor. Hon. THEOPHILUS PARSONS, LL. D., Dane Professor. Hon. EMERY WASHBURN, LL. D., University Professor. The course of instruction embraces the various branches of the Common Law, and of Equity, Admiralty, Commercial, International and Constitutional Law, and the Jurisprudence of the United States. The Law Library consists of about 14,000 volumes, and as new works appear they are added and every effort is made to render it complete.

Instruction is given by oral lectures and expositions, (and by recitations and examinations, in connection with them,) of which there are ten every week. Two Moot Courts are also holden in each week, at each of which a cause, previously given out, is argued by four students, and an opinion delivered by the presiding instructor. Rooms and other facilities are also provided for the Club Courts; and an Assembly is held weekly for practice in debate, and acquiring a knowledge of Parliamentary law and proceedings. Students may enter the school in any stage of their professional studies or mercantile pursuits, and at the commencement of either term, or in the middle, or other part of a term. They are at liberty to select what studies they will pursue according to their view of their own wants and attainments.

The Academical year, which commences on Thursday, six weeks after the third Wednesday in July, is divided into two terms, of twenty weeks each, with a vacation of six weeks at the end of each term.

During the winter vacation, the Library is opened, warmed and lighted, for the use of the members of the school.

Applications for admission, or for Catalogues, or any further information, may be made to either of the Professors at Cambridge. June 6-1y.

A. W. RAND'S SELF-CLEANING FURNACE.

Boynton's Patent.

Having put up a large number of these Furnaces, both in public and private buildings, (including 24 put up at the Philadelphia County Prison, in place of the 44 torn out,) and tested them during the cold weather of 1855, and 1856, being the coldest weather we have had for twenty or thirty years. They have given the most universal satisfaction, and those having them in use were perfectly delighted with the abundance of warm, pleasant air, and abundant ventilation afforded thereby, while so many were suffering from cold, and troubled with the deficiencies of their heating apparatus.

We take great pleasure, therefore, in recommending them to the notice of the public, and would call their attention particularly to an examination of the greatly increased amount of effective radiating surface, their perfect solidity and durability, the improved manner of making the joints, entirely preventing any escape of gases, and the manner of distributing the fire, so as to cause it to impinge directly against the large amount of surface, without the objectionable and unnatural method of forcing the current downwards.

We have also a full assortment of HAYES' PATENT TUBULAR OVEN RANGES, now so universally used, and favorably known. Also, HAYES' PATENT VENTILLATORS, &c., &c., all of which will be put up in the very best manner, and by the most skillful workmen, constantly engaged for that purpose, by Sight Bills and Time Checks.

One of the mooted points of commercial law is, whether bank checks drawn payable at a future day, or commercial bills at sight are entitled to grace. The decisions of the courts have been variant, and the practice of bankers is not uniform, though the denial of grace days is becoming more general. A recent case in Ohio, of Martin vs. Bailey, brought the following ruling on the subject from Judge Bartley of the District Court:

I. That a draft of money payable at a day subsequent to its date, although otherwise in the ordinary form of a check, is a bill of exchange, and subject to the usages and rules that govern bills of exchange, and, as such, is entitled to days of grace.

II. The distinction between a bill and a check does not depend upon whether drawn payable to order or bearer, or whether drawn upon a bank or a banker or not; but it is founded in the difference in nature or character of these two classes of commercial paper.

III. A check and a bill of exchange, though in many respects similar, are to be distinguished in the following particulars, to wit:

1st. A check is drawn upon an existing fund, and is an absolute transfer or appropriation to the holder of so much money, in the hands of the drawee, but very frequently drawn in anticipation of funds, upon a previously arranged credit. 2. The drawer of a check is always the principal, whereas the drawer of a bill frequently stands in the position of a mere surety.

3d. Although demand of payment and notice of non-payment is due time may be essential to hold the endorser of a check, yet a failure in this respect does not discharge the drawer, unless an actual loss to him can be shown to have arisen from such delinquency on the part of the holder. 4th. A check requires no acceptance, and when presented, is presented for payment.

5th. It is not protestable; or, in other words, protest is not requisite to hold the maker or an endorser.

6th. From these distinguishing characteristics, arising out of the nature of these two classes of instruments, it follows, that a check is payable on presentation and demand, and cannot be made payable on a specified day in future, and consequently not entitled to days of grace.

7th. Any supposed usage of banks in any particular place to regard drafts upon them payable at a day certain, as checks, and not entitled to days of grace, is inadmissible, as evidence to control the rules of law in relation to such paper.

HARPER'S NEW CATALOGUE.

A NEW DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE OF HARPER & BROTHERS' PUBLICATIONS is now ready for distribution, and may be obtained gratuitously on application to the Publishers personally, or by letter enclosing six cents in postage stamps.

The attention of gentlemen, in town or country, designing to form Libraries or enrich their literary collections, is respectfully invited to this Catalogue, which will be found to comprise a large proportion of the standard and most esteemed works in English literature—COMPENDING MORE THAN TWO THOUSAND VOLUMES—which are offered in most instances at less than one half the cost of similar productions in England.

To Librarians and others connected with Colleges, Schools, etc., who may not have access to a reliable guide in forming the true estimate of literary productions, it is believed the present Catalogue will prove especially valuable as a manual of reference.

To prevent disappointment, it is suggested that, whenever books can not be obtained through any bookseller or local agent, applications with remittance should be addressed direct to the Publishers, which will be promptly attended to.

IN THE COURT OF COMMON PLEAS FOR THE CITY AND COUNTY OF PHILAD'A.

To the Executors, Heirs and Legal Representatives of ENOCH FRALEY, deceased, and to Enoch Fraley and his representatives. Notice is hereby given, that a petition has been presented to the Court of Common Pleas for the City and County of Philadelphia, by William C. Morgan, setting forth, that John Semin, from the 28th day of June, 1830, executed unto Enoch Fraley, executor of Jos'h Fraley, deceased, a mortgage of all that messuage and lot of ground, situate on the south-east side of Allen street and north-east side of an alley leading from Allen to Beach street, in the district of Kensington, containing in front thirty-seven feet, and in depth to an alley seventy-five feet, which mortgage is to secure the sum of $350, and is recorded in M. B. A. M., No. 1, page 59, &c., which mortgage has long since been paid but has not been satisfied of record. Whereupon the said Court did order the Sheriff of Philadelphia County to give public notice to the parties to appear before the Court on MONDAY, September 15, to show cause, if any they have, why said mortgage should not be satisfied of record.

To the Administrators of JEHU WARD, deceased.

Notice is hereby given, that at a Court of Common Pleas, held August 4, 1856, the petition of Susan Rudolph was presented setting forth that on the 28th June, 1844, she executed a mortgage for $800 to Jehu Ward, of the City of Philadelphia, upon certain premises on the west side of Old York Road, 100 feet south from Oxford street, in Kensington, recorded in Mortgage Book R. L. L., No. 13, page 330; which said mortgage has been fully paid, but no satisfaction entered of record. That said Jehu Ward is now dead and his Administrators, Elizabeth Ward and J. P. Ward, have removed from the State of Pennsylvania. Whereupon the Court order the Sheriff of Philadelphia County to give public notice to the parties to appear before said Court on MONDAY, the 15th day of September, 1856, at 10 o'clock A. M., and show cause, if any they have, why said mortgage should not be satisfied of record.

The Bank of Cash Credits.

Application will be made to the Legislature of Pennsylvania, for the Charter of a Bank Issue with general banking privileges, with a capital of ONE MILLION OF DOLLARS. Said Bank to be located in the City of Philadelphia, to be called the "Robert Morris Bank," and to be conducted upon the system of cash credits only, as is herewith indicated.

A cash credit is a credit given to an individual by a Banking Company, for a limited sum, seldom under $500, or $1000, upon his own security and that of two or three individuals, approved by the Bank, who become sureties for its payment. The individual who has obtained such a credit, is enabled to draw the whole sum, or any part of it, when he pleases; replacing it, or portions of it, according as he finds it convenient; interest being charged upon such part only as he draws out.

"If a man borrows $1000, from a private hand, and even then it is not always to be found when required, he pays interest for it, whether he be using it or not. His bank credit costs him nothing, except during the moment it is of service to him, and this circumstance is of equal advantage as if he had borrowed money at a much lower rate of interest."

Cash credits are not, however, intended to be a dead load; the main objects of the Banks in granting them is to get their notes circulated, and they do not grant them except to persons in business, or to those who are frequently drawing out and paying in money.

Any person who applies to a bank for a cash credit, is called upon to produce sureties, and, after a full inquiry into the character of the applicant, the nature of his business, and the sufficiency of his securities, he is allowed to open a credit, and to draw upon the Bank for the whole of its amount, or for such part as his daily transaction may require. To the credit of the account, he pays in such sums as he may not have occasion to use, and interest is charged or credited upon the balance, as the case may be. From the facility which these cash credits give to all the small transactions of the country, and from the opportunities which they afford to persons who begin business with little or no capital but their character, to employ profitably the minutest products of their industry, it cannot be doubted that the most important advantages are derived in the whole community.

Such privileges and immunities as the "Metropolitan Bank of New York" exercises, will be applied for.

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND.

INTEREST FIVE PER CENT, PER ANNUM.

ALL SUMS OF MONEY RETURNED ON DEMAND.

OFFICE, NEXT DOOR TO THE POST OFFICE; No. 83 Dock Street, PHILADELPHIA, 1854.

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND, No. 83 DOCK Street, next door to THIRD Street, and adjoining the POST OFFICE, receives MONEY on deposit daily, from 9 in the morning until 3 in the afternoon; also Monday evenings, from 7 to 9 o'clock. Interest is allowed on deposits at the rate of FIVE PER CENT per annum. Deposits will be returned in whole, or in part, on demand, without notice.

The popularity of this Office with all classes of the community, both in town and country, and its consequent success, may be ascribed, in part, to the following substantial reasons:

1st. It offers a convenient, responsible, and profitable Depository to Executors, Administrators, Assignees, Collectors, Agents, and all public officers—to Attorneys, Trustees, Societies and Associations, whether incorporated or otherwise—to married or single ladies—to Students, Merchants, Clerks, and business men generally—to Mechanics, Farmers, Minors of either sex, and all who have funds, much or little, to deposit, where they may be had at any time, with Five Per Cent interest added.

2d. Depositors receive Books, with an abstract of the By-laws and regulations, in which is entered their deposits, which Books serve as vouchers. They may designate in case of sickness, death, or absence, who shall receive their deposits, without the intervention of Executors or Administrators. Any one or more persons may deposit in his, her, or their name, or for any other person or persons.

3d. A Report is made each year to the Legislature and Councils of the City.

4th. The Officers are sworn before they enter upon their duties, in addition to giving Bonds with sureties.

5th. The State Savings Fund is a real Savings Fund—not an Insurance and Trust Company. The Charter of this Institution avoids the Insurance business.

6th. Deposits may be withdrawn by checks after the manner customary with Banks. Check Books will be furnished to depositors without charge.

GEORGE H. HART, President. CHAS. G. IMLAY, Treasurer. m14-ly.

SEAMEN'S

Saving Fund Society.

Office in Lennig's Building, 55 WALNUT STREET, one door west of Second.

Money received on Deposit, payable on demand, with Five Per Cent. Interest.

The particular attention of Members of the Bar, Administrators, Executors, Assignees, and others, is invited to this institution, as a safe, as well as convenient place of deposit upon interest. By the supplement to the charter, passed at the present session of the Legislature, the restriction as to the limitation of amount of money to be received from any depositor, is repealed; and the Society is now prepared to receive sums in any amount, and repay them on demand.

Office open daily from 9 o'clock, A. M., until 5 P. M., and on Monday and Saturday until 9 in the evening.

ORPHANS' COURT SALES.

We notice that several sales of Real Estate under proceedings of the Orphans' Court are about to take place, in which the notice in "The Legal Intelligencer," required by Law and Rule of Court, has not been given. This notice being essential to the validity of the sale, purchasers are particularly interested that the requirements of law have been complied with, while to parties in interest this is the only certain means of information. In future all cases in which this duty is omitted will be brought to the attention of the Court before confirmation of the sale. The public interest requires that due notice should be given of these sales; they are Judicial Sales, and have the like effect as a Sheriff's sale in the discharge of Liens and Incumbrances, and it would be very proper that they should be made in all cases under and by direction of an officer of the Court; under the present loose system the interests of parties are liable to be sacrificed without redress. We would call the attention of the Bar to this matter, which is of great importance to them—they appreciate the value of our Abstract of Sheriff's Sales, and the Orphans' Court Sales are quite as important in all respects.

Circuit Court, U. S. Eastern District, Pennsylvania.

SICKLES vs. THE GLOUCESTER COMPANY.

[Mode of taking evidence in Equity.]

Under the practice of the Courts of the United States, as fixed by the Judiciary Act of 1789, a party may examine or cross-examine witnesses ore tenus in Equity suits as well as in suits at common law; the power given him in this respect by the 30th section of that Act, not being taken away from him by any subsequent Act, nor by the 67th Rule of Practice for the Courts of Equity promulgated on the 2d of March, 1842, nor in any other manner.

This was a question as to the mode of taking evidence in Equity suits in the Federal Courts; and arose upon a bill in Equity for the infringement of a patent. The case was thus:—

The 30th section of the Act of September 24, 1789, which organized the Courts of the United States, and is commonly called the Judiciary Act, enacts "that the mode of proof by oral testimony and examination of witnesses in open court, shall be the same in all the Courts of the United States, as well in the trial of causes in Equity, and of Admiralty and Maritime jurisdiction, as of actions at common law."

A section in an Act of 1802, says "that in all suits in Equity, it shall be in the discretion of the Court to order the testimony of witnesses to be taken by deposition," with certain provisos.

Notwithstanding this first Act, it had never been the practice in Equity cases in this circuit, nor in any other circuit so far as was known to the Court or counsel, to take testimony ore tenus, nor, except when proceeding under the Act of 1802, otherwise than according to the rules and practice of the Court of Chancery in England; where, as is known, the testimony is taken by the commissioner on interrogatories and cross-interrogatories previously filed, and without the presence of the parties or their counsel; and where the testimony when taken is sealed up, until an order is obtained for publication of it, after which no more testimony can be taken.

On 2d of March, 1842, (1 How. 62.) the Supreme Court of the United States promulgated a body of "Rules of Practice for the Courts of Equity," the 67th of which rules runs thus: "Commissions to take testimony may be taken . . . jointly by both parties or severally by either party upon interrogatories filed by the party taking the same . . . ten days notice thereof being given to the adverse party to file cross-interrogatories before the issuing of the commission. . . . If the parties shall so agree, the testimony may be taken upon oral interrogatories." &c. The 68th rule is thus: "Testimony may also be taken in the cause . . . by deposition, according to the acts of Congress."

An act of Congress passed soon after, to wit, on the 23d of August, 1842, gives to the Supreme Court "full power and authority . . . to prescribe and regulate and alter . . . the forms and modes of taking and obtaining evidence. . . in suits at common law or in admiralty and in equity pending in the District and Circuit Courts. . . and generally to regulate the whole practice of the Court."

With these statutes, rules and practice in existence, a rule for a commission had been taken by the defendant; and Mr. E. N. Dickerson, counsel of the other side, having filed the complainant's affidavit that the evidence in the case if taken before a commissioner upon interrogatories and cross-interrogatories would operate unjustly and prejudicially to his interests, obtained a special order that he might have power to cross-examine the witnesses ore tenus, and "that the testimony so taken shall have the same effect as if taken under the 67th rule" above mentioned.

Mr. JENKS, for the defendant, having protested before the commissioner against such a mode of taking testimony, and having declined to cross-examine, now moved that the depositions should be suppressed, and that an examination of all the witnesses should be had privately before the Master.

In favor of the motion: The Court had no power to make the order on which this testimony has been taken. The only ground on which it can be pretended that testimony taken, as this has been, can be read, is the 30th section of the Judiciary Act of 1789.

But that section has been interpreted in our favor by a constant practice of sixty-seven years. The Supreme Court has moreover interpreted it by its own rules. The 67th Rule shows that the English practice, in its outlines at least—which practice prevails over our country generally, where there are courts of equity, and has always prevailed in this Court, was meant to be continued. However plain the language of the Judiciary Act may seem to us, we are bound to receive an interpretation so long and so clearly put upon it by the practice and rules of the Supreme Court; an interpretation hardly inferior in solemnity to a judgment of the Court. Indeed, an uninterrupted practice of sixty-seven years can hardly be said to be, in any respect, of less value than a judgment. It is the best of all judgments. "The great authority with me," says C. J. Bridgman, "is constant practice if I am well informed. It is 'law solidified into fact.'"

II. The 30th section of the Judiciary Act has been in effect repealed. The Act of 23d August, 1842, gives to the Supreme Court power to "alter" the "forms and modes of taking and obtaining evidence." The 67th Rule, which we rely on, was indeed made in March, 1842, and before the Act of 23d of August was passed; but it has been acknowledged ratified, re-adopted and re-published, by being retained and constantly acted upon up to this hour.

III. The truth is, that the section in question of the old Judiciary Act, meant to establish a mode of taking testimony which it thought would be regarded by the profession as more convenient than the old one. But the old one was familiar to the bar, they liked it best, and never abandoned it. This provision, therefore, of the Judiciary Act, without being formally repealed, became obsolete, effete and forgotten.

GRIER, J. The jus pretorium of the Roman law, from which our system of equity has its origin, was introduced when chancellors were priests. The writ of subpoena is said to have been first devised by Chancellor Waltham, Bishop of Salisbury. It met with opposition at the beginning by Parliament, "because its proceedings were according to the civil law and the law of holy church, in subversion of the common law." But notwithstanding the opposition then, and also of Sir Edward Coke and the common law courts at a later day, the chancellors persevered in extending their jurisdiction, and when the office ceased to be in the hands of ecclesiastics, a system of jurisprudence and jurisdiction was built up on a rational foundation by the learning and ability of Nottingham and his successors. Yet it still retains some of the features which originally caused the enmity of the common lawyers and the Parliament. One of these is the mode of taking testimony. At common law it was considered as essential to justice and the protection of the rights of the litigant that the witnesses should be examined in presence of the parties to be affected, and of the tribunal whose decision was to be governed by the testimony. The mode of taking testimony in chancery, as introduced from "the civil law and law of holy church," is by secret inquisition. The reason given for this practice is said to be "in order to avoid the risk of defects being discovered in the course of taking it, and false evidence being procured to remedy them." (Adam's Eq. 61.) As a reason for a foregone conclusion, this was no doubt considered satisfactory, though it might as well read "to avoid the risk of defects and falsehood being discovered, and true evidence being procured to remedy them."

And yet, while it is true that as a general rule of courts of chancery, all witnesses will be examined on interrogatories, either by the regular examiner of the court or through the medium of commissioners specially appointed, it has never been decided that a chancellor had no power to order otherwise in a particular case, where he might consider it necessary to a proper investigation of the facts. No court is so enslaved by its general rules as to be powerless, when justice requires an exception to their operation. Accordingly numerous cases of exceptions may be found in the books of practice. (Daniel's Equity Prac. 1084.) The practice also of sending issues of fact to a court of law to be tried by a jury and according to the principles of the common law, may be truly said to be an exception to this ecclesiastical rule of trying facts by secret inquisition, and an admission of its incompetency for a proper investigation of the truth.

II. But assuming a Court of Equity to be so bound up by their general rules, that they have no power to deviate from them in a special case for sufficient cause shown; is there any statute or iron rule of practice which compels the Courts of Equity of the United States to adhere to this policy of the civil and ecclesiastical law as a fundamental principle in the administration of justice?

The Act of 1789, constituting the Courts of the United States, declares "That the mode of proof by oral testimony and examination of witnesses, shall be the same in all the Courts of the United States, as well in the trial of causes in Equity and of Admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, as of actions at common law."

Whatever, therefore, may be the force and binding effect of this fundamental principle as to the peculiar "mode of proof" in the English Courts of Chancery, it is clearly repudiated and abolished as a rule of practice in the Courts of Equity of the United States.

It is not a fair construction of the 67th rule of court, which imputes to it an intention of repealing or overruling an Act of Congress admitted to be within the scope of its constitutional power.

It being found inconvenient and dilatory in practice, and seldom necessary to a proper investigation of causes, to have witnesses examined ore tenus in open Court, in Chancery cases, the 67th rule merely provides, that "after the cause is at issue, commissions to take testimony may be taken out in vacation as well as in term."

When witnesses live at a distance, the parties are compelled to resort to this rule in order to obtain their testimony; and in most cases, when the witnesses might be brought into Court, this practice is pursued as most convenient. Judges have been rather disposed to discountenance the production of witnesses in Court, on account of the delay consequent on an ore tenus examination. Besides, counsel, who are more apt to look to books of Chancery practice than to their own statute books, have either not been aware of the rights of their clients, or not thought it a matter of sufficient importance to urge them: Hence it is, that the old practice has been generally pursued, and perhaps enforced, without much inquiry.

It is a fundamental principle in the administration of Equity, in the Courts of the United States, that the mode of proof by oral testimony, and examination of witnesses in Courts of Equity, shall "be the same as in actions at law." Either party has a right, therefore, to cross-examine witnesses ore tenus, and when not examined in open Court, to have notice of the time and place of taking the testimony, so that he may see the witness face to face, and thus examine or cross-examine him. In many cases, as has been shown by experience, it is absolutely necessary that the party be allowed this privilege, in order to elicit the whole truth, and save himself from a garbled statement of it, which may be as injurious as direct perjury.

This may be said to be the general rule, and any deviation from it is the exception. The party who claims his right is not asking a favor of the Court, or making a demand which the Chancellor in his discretion, may deny; but is demanding a right guaranteed to him by the law of the land, not held at the discretion of a judge, nor to be abolished by custom or rule of Court. The secret examination of witnesses within reach of the process of the Court, is contrary to the policy of the law; either party may object to it, at his discretion, and the Court are bound to allow it. A Court may dispense with their own rules in a special case, but cannot deny to a party a right guaranteed to him by statute, or the law of the land.

The Circuit Courts of the United States have original jurisdiction in patent cases, and do not exercise their authority merely as auxiliary to a Court of law, and for a more effectual remedy: Hence we do not feel bound in all cases to send a party to establish his right in a Court of law, before granting a final injunction. In many questions of originality and infringement of patents, the concurrent opinion of twelve men, with little knowledge of the principles of science and philosophy which affect the case, may give but little satisfaction to the conscience of a Chancellor: Hence it is becoming more common to examine these questions in Courts of Equity, without the aid of a jury, unless where the issue depends rather on the credibility of witnesses, than the value of their opinions as experts or philosophers. But such cases cannot be properly brought before the Court by a secret examination of the witnesses. It is almost impossible to frame interrogatories in chief so as completely to elicit the truth, where the witness has to refer to complex models or drafts. The whole truth can seldom be obtained, or falsehood detected, unless by a sharp cross-examination ore tenus, by skillful counsel. It is sometimes the case also, and in fact, too often, that the party, or his counsel, prepare the answers for their witnesses after consultation, so that the witness comes before the examiner and reads off his answers to the several interrogatories, as prepared for him by the party who produces him. That such things are sometimes done, we know; but how often, we cannot know. And however ready a Court may be to suppress testimony thus made up, the fact must be known to the opposite party before he can make proof of it; and this secret mode of taking testimony, gives no opportunity for its discovery.

As a question of mere policy, and the proper administration of justice, we believe that the truth of a case can be better evinced, by an ore tenus examination of the witnesses by counsel, than by the secret method of inquisition borrowed from "Holy Church."

We are of opinion, therefore—

1. That this portion of the peculiar policy of Courts of Equity has been repudiated by statute, and never had been a fundamental principle in their administration in the Courts of the United States.

2. That the 67th rule does not affect to annul the Act of Congress, or the policy established by it.

3. That a party has therefore a right to demand an examination of witnesses (within the jurisdiction of the Court,) ore tenus, according to the principles of the common law, either by having them produced in Court, or by having leave to cross-examine them face to face before the examiner.

4. That the Court had not only power to make the rule or order complained of in this case, but was bound to allow it not only as necessary to a proper development of the facts necessary to its just decision, but also as a right of the party guaranteed by law. Motion denied.

Harrisburg, May 20, 1856.
SCATTERGOOD'S ESTATE.

The questions in this case, are simply whether the commissions allowed by the Orphans' Court to the executrix, were a sufficient compensation for her services, and whether or not it was wrong to cut down the credit he claimed for fees paid to counsel. They are mere matters of fact depending on the evidence. An auditor was appointed to ascertain them—he had the witnesses before him—he made a cautious and elaborate investigation of all the circumstances. His report, which bears every mark of care and impartiality, was confirmed by the Orphans' Court. We trust the judgment of an auditor, in matters like this, as we trust a jury in the assessment of damages, never disregarding the decision of either, unless in cases where the error is perfectly glaring. We cannot reverse the present decree. Decree affirmed.

NOTICE TO THE BAR.

It appears, after a careful examination during the last vacation, that the following books are missing from the shelves of the Law Library, having been taken away in violation of its rules. It is earnestly requested of gentlemen having any of them, to return them forthwith to the Library, and thus prevent the great inconvenience which any detention of them is certain to cause the Bar and Courts after the sessions begin.

Notice.

Thomas & Sons' Sale on Tuesday, Sept. 23, 1856, at the Philadelphia Exchange, at 7 o'clock in the evening.

Valuable Professional Residence,

No. 5 Sansom Street, near Seventh Street, viz: All that three story brick messuage, with double two story brick back buildings, and lot of ground thereunto belonging, situate on the north side of Sansom street, 49 feet 6 inches westward from Delaware Seventh street, containing in front of Sansom street 21 feet 6 inches, and in depth northward 91 feet to a 19 feet wide court, (called Morris street.)

The above contains thirteen rooms, and is replete with all the modern conveniences, such as gas throughout, hot and cold water, &c.

The two offices on the first floor, which have been occupied as law offices for nearly forty years, are fitted up with expensive book-cases, calculated to contain fifteen hundred law books, and with extensive paper cases, which are included in the sale of the property. The premises may be examined every day, except Sunday, previous to the sale, between the hours of 9 A. M., and 1 P. M.

A. W. RAND'S SELF-CLEANING FURNACE. Boynton's Patent.

Having put up a large number of these Furnaces, both in public and private buildings, (including 24 put up at the Philadelphia County Prison, in place of the 44 torn out,) and tested them during the cold weather of 1855, and 1856, being the coldest weather we have had for twenty or thirty years. They have given the most universal satisfaction, and those having them in use were perfectly delighted with the abundance of warm, pleasant air, and abundant ventilation afforded thereby, while so many were suffering from cold, and troubled with the deficiencies of their heating apparatus.

We take great pleasure, therefore, in recommending them to the notice of the public, and would call their attention particularly to an examination of the greatly increased amount of effective radiating surface, their perfect solidity and durability, the improved manner of making the joints, entirely preventing any escape of gases, and the manner of distributing the fire, so as to cause it to impinge directly against the large amount of surface, without the objectionable and unnatural method of forcing the current downwards.

We have also a full assortment of HAYES' PATENT TUBULAR OVEN RANGES, now so universally used, and favorably known. Also, HAYES' PATENT VENTILATORS, &c., &c., all of which will be put up in the very best manner, and by the most skillful workmen, constantly engaged for that purpose, by

DESIRABLE IMPROVEMENT.

Many efforts have been made to preserve the form and features of a departed friend, without the usual mode, so repugnant to the feelings, of placing the ice on the body. The difficulty has been overcome by an

Air-tight Preserver,

In which cold air is the medium used, acting as a preservative in the warmest weather, for any length of time. At the same time the body is entirely secure from nocturnal depositions. Thus arranged it can be conveyed HUNDREDS of miles with perfect safety, and in a good state of preservation. The apparatus is for preserving the body until time for burial—it is then placed in the coffin. The Subscriber, who is the sole patentee, is also a FURNISHING UNDERTAKER. Having had many years experience, he flatters himself he can render every satisfaction.

The above is for sale to Undertakers. All the necessary materials for Funeral Occasions, such as Lead and other Coffins always on hand. JOHN GOOD, No. 145 Spruce St. above Fifth, Philada.

By kind permission he begs leave to refer to the following gentlemen:

T. & J. W. JOHNSON,
LAW BOOKSELLERS AND PUBLISHERS,
No. 197 CHESTNUT STREET,
PHILADELPHIA.

The Latest, and the Best
REPORTS OF THE COMMON LAW COURTS OF ENGLAND.

Containing the cases decided in the Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Nisi Prius Courts, from 1813 to 1855, and in the Court of Exchequer and Exchequer Chamber, from 1824 to 1854, as follows in

The Register and Authorities Series of the English Common Law and English Exchequer Reports,

Which present the following claims to the support of the profession:

1. They are the only series issued as the authoritative and acknowledged medium by which the decisions of the Law Courts of England are made public.

2. They contain Later Reports than the Boston series, are more fully and more ably reported, and so arranged by preservation of the original paging, that reference by reporters, or by elementary writers, can be traced as readily as in the English editions.

Vol. 2, Ellis & Blackburne's (75 E. C. L. R.,) Reports (Q. B.) to January, 1854, was published by us in June, 1854. At that time the last Queen's Bench case printed in the Boston Law and Equity Reports, was of June 25, 1853. Our volume contained cases decided five months later.
The Queen's Bench cases to November 25, 1853, were published in the Boston series in August, 1854, two months after we had distributed the same cases.

Vol. 3, Ellis & Blackburne, (77 E. C. L. R.,) with cases to the end of Trinity Term, 1854, was published when the latest case of Queen's Bench decisions in the Boston series, was of February 8, 1854, more than four months behind the regular reporters.

Exchequer Reports, vol. 9, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon), distributed by us January 11, 1855, contains cases to May 10, 1854. The last Exchequer case then in the Boston series was decided February 9, 1854, four months behind the regular Reporter, issued in Philadelphia.

3. They contain more cases decided by the courts represented, than any other series issued in this country.

Vol. 77 English Common Law, (3 E. & B.,) reports eighty-six cases decided in the Queen's Bench since January 11, 1854, while but fifty-eight Queen's Bench cases, decided since January 1, 1854, are found scattered among Vols. 22, 24 and 25 of the Boston Law and Equity.

Vol. 78 E. C. L. R. (5 J. Scott,) reports sixty-five cases decided since Nov. 13, 1853, in the Common Pleas, while the L. & E. has but fifty-seven cases in that Court since the same period.

Vol. 9 Exchequer Reports, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) reports one hundred and ten cases in the Court of Exchequer, decided since June 24, 1853, while since the same date, the L. & E. report but 107 cases, scattered through vols. 20, 22, 24
and 25.

4. They are almost exclusively cited in argument of counsel, and referred to by Elementary Writers for Law Authorities. See Smith's Leading Cases, Smith's Contracts, Smith's Landlord and Tenant, by Maude; Byles on Bills and Promissory Notes, Broom's Legal Maxims, Broom's Commentaries on the Laws of England, or almost any recent Law Book issued in England.

5. The Philadelphia Reports are edited by Judge Sharwood and by Judge Hare, whose labors as editors and authors have made them so well and so favorably known to the profession.

6. The Boston Law and Equity is made up in this country from the Law Journal, Jurist, Times and other law periodicals, of a weekly, monthly, or quarterly character, and being unknown in England, is never cited in Court, or referred to by Law writers. The periodicals from which it is extracted, are occasionally cited under their own particular names, but they do not possess that permanent value, even in England, which is all-important in a series of Reports.

7. A carefully prepared and accurate Annual Digest of all the cases decided by the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Exchequer, will be distributed, early in each year, to subscribers to either series, free of charge.
That for 1854 is ready, and will be mailed to subscribers who have not received a copy.

IN PRESS AND IN PREPARATION.

Leading Cases on the Law relating to Real Property, Conveyancing, and the Construction of Wills, by Owen Davies Tudor, author of Leading Cases in Equity. With very full notes referring to American Decisions.

BLACKSTONE'S COMMENTARIES.

COMMENTARIES

ON THE
LAWS OF ENGLAND,

IN FOUR BOOKS.

BY
SIR WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, Knt.

ONE OF THE JUSTICES OF THE COURT OF COMMON PLEAS. WITH THE LATEST COR-RECTIONS OF THE AUTHOR, AND NOTES.

From the Twenty-first London Edition.

With copious

NOTES,

Explaining the Changes in the Law effected by Decision or Statute, down to 1844. Together with Notes adapting the Work to the American Student. By

JOHN L. WENDELL,

LATE REPORTER OF THE SUPREME COURT.

Four Octavo Volumes, bound in fine
Law Sheep, Price $7 00.

The Twenty-first Edition of "Black-stone's Commentaries" was prepared by intrusting each one of the four great departments of jurisprudence, treated of by
Sir WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, to a separate
Editor, whose professional studies had made him peculiarly conversant with that particular branch of learning, to wit:

Vol. I. To J. F. HARGRAVE, of Lincoln's Inn,
Barrister at Law.

Vol. II. To G. SWIFT, of the Inner Temple,
Barrister at Law.

Vol. III. To R. COUCH, of the Middle Temple,
Barrister at Law.

Vol. IV. To W. N. WELSLY, Recorder of Chester.

Into the hands of these gentlemen were put all the Editions of Blackstone then extant in England, with directions to avail themselves of such notes of former editors
as they should approve, (among those editions was that of Mr. CHITTY.) Under those circumstances, and by this division of labor, was produced a work highly beneficial to the student, and greatly facilitating the researches of counsel.

The notes of the American Editor were to show the Common Law as it exists in this country under our institutions, particularly in the State of New York, and more especially as effected by the Revised Statutes of that State, and to point out
the diversities of the Common Law as held in England and in this country in the few instances in which a difference exists.

This edition is the most accurate and useful
which has appeared.—London Times.

Incomparably the best edition that has ever
been published.—Literary World.

We do not hesitate to endorse the emphatic approval which the edition has received in England, and pronounce it the best that has ever appeared.—Law Reporter.

There can be no question, that this edition of the Commentaries is destined to supersede all others.—Courier.

These notes are of the greatest value, and add ten-fold to the work, so far as the American student is concerned.—Albany Argus.

Curtis's Supreme Court Decisions

THE DECISIONS OF THE SUPREME

COURT OF THE UNITED STATES,

With notes and a Digest by Hon. Benjamin R.
Curtis, one of the Associate Justices of the Court.
In 22 volumes, octavo. Comprising the Cases reported by Dallas, 4 vols.; Cranch, 9 vols.; Wheaton, 12 vols.; Peters, 16 vols.; Howard, 17
vols.

The old series of these reports are in 57 volumes, the Catalogue price of which is $217 50.
This edition in 22 volumes, is offered to subscribers at the low price of $3 a volume; thus bringing them within the means of all. The volumes are delivered as fast as issued, and it is intended that the whole work shall be completed
early in 1856.

Vols. 1 to 15 are now ready.
We ask attention to the following approval by the members of the Supreme Court of the United States:

"We approve the plan of Mr. Justice Cur-tis's, 'Decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States,' and believe that its execution by him will be of much utility to the legal profession and to our country.

ROGER B. TANEY, Chief Justice
JOHN McLEAN, Associate Justice.
JAMES M. WAYNE, Associate Justice.
JOHN CATRON, Associate Justice.
PETER V. DANIEL, Associate Justice.
SAMUEL NELSON, Associate Justice.
ROBERT C. GRIER, Associate Justice.
J. A. CAMPBELL, Associate Justice."

English Law and Equity Reports.

ENGLISH REPORTS IN LAW AND EQUITY. A Complete Collection of the Cases decided by the House of Lords, the Privy Council, the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas and Exchequer, the
Lord Chancellor, the High Court of Appeal in Chancery, the Court of Criminal Appeal, and
the Admiralty and Ecclesiastical Courts. Reprinted within a few weeks after the decisions are rendered.

This series has the merit of being complete,
reliable, prompt, convenient, and cheap. It is now universally cited in the courts, and referred to in the recent law books as standard authority.
All the cases reported in England, are here reprinted from the most reliable sources, as soon as they reach this country.

These Reports are now regularly digested in our Annual United States Digest, which thus embraces an annual digest of the whole English
and American Law.

We have now in Preparation, and shall soon
Publish,

A separate Digest of these Reports, embracing the first thirty-one volumes of the series, prepared with express reference to the convenience of the American profession, and exhibiting a complete synopsis of all the English Decisions reported in those volumes during the last five years; also a Table of Cases referring to all the contemporaneous English Reports. This will be the first Digest of English Decisions prepared expressly for the American Lawyer, and it is intended to give it the same advantages over the English Digests hitherto printed in this country, which the American text books have generally been found to possess over the English.

The Law and Equity Reports will be continued
on the same plan as heretofore; the number of volumes being reduced to four per year; and Digests will be published from time to time as the convenience of the profession demands.

Vols. 1 to 31, now ready for delivery, at $2 00 per volume.

KAY & BROTHER,

LAW BOOKSELLERS, PUBLISHERS AND IMPORTERS.
17 AND 19 SOUTH FIFTH STREET,
First Door above Chestnut.

Kay & Brother respectfully invite the attention of the members of the Legal Profession to the following invaluable publications, and solicit them to call and examine their select stock of Law Books.

JUST PUBLISHED.

HARRIS' REPORTS OF THE SUPREME COURT OF PENNSYLVANIA. Vol. XII. By George W. Harris.

KAY & BROTHER beg leave to announce that they have become the sole publishers of Harris' Reports, of which eleven volumes have been already issued. They have just published the twelfth and last volume of the series, which fills up the interval between Harris' and Casey's Reports, which they also publish. The difficulty in obtaining, when and as wanted, the various volumes of Harris' Reports, will in future be obviated, as regular and full supplies of them all will be kept constantly on hand and for sale.

CASEY'S PENNSYLVANIA STATE REPORTS, VOL. 1.—Pennsylvania State Reports, Vol. XXV, containing reports of cases adjudged by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, by Joseph Casey, Esq., State Reporter. This volume contains the cases decided in part of May Term, 1855; in October Terms, 1856, and part of January Term, 1856. It will be the joint endeavor of the Reporter and Publisher to issue the respective volumes as speedily as possible, after the determination of the cases which each volume will contain, and thus to remove a serious ground of complaint on the part of the bar. Subscribers wanted for a single volume or the entire series.

BRIGHTLY'S PURDON'S ANNUAL DIGEST, FOR THE YEARS 1854, 1855, and 1856—on the plan and in continuation of Stroud & Brightly's Purdon, 1790 to 1853. Annual Digest of the Laws of Pennsylvania for each of the years 1854, 1855 and 1856, namely, from 28 May, 1853, to 15 May, 1856, together with some laws inadvertently omitted in Purdon's Digest, 1700 to 1853; Marginal References; a Digested Syllabus of each Title; Foot Notes to the Judicial Decisions; and a full and exhaustive Index, in which the contents of all the annual Digests are incorporated in one alphabet. The whole completing Stroud & Brightly's Purdon's Digest to the present time. By Frederick C. Brightly, Esq., author of the "Law of Costs," "Equity Jurisprudence;" Editor of Purdon's Digest, &c. Price only Fifty cents.

DUNLAP'S BOOK OF FORMS.—A Book of Forms containing more than twelve hundred Forms, for practice in the Courts of Pennsylvania and of the United States, and for conveyancing; also, for the use of Public Officers and Men of Business generally. Adopted by the recent acts of Assembly of Pennsylvania, with explanatory remarks, and numerous precedents and references to Standard Authorities.—By James D. Dunlap, Counsellor at Law, &c. Third edition price, only $4.00. Dunlap's Forms and Graydon's Forms (which latter work Kay & Brother also publish) will supply the Lawyer, the Conveyancer, and the Business Man, with all the aids from approved precedents which he will need.

WHARTON & STILLE'S MEDICAL JURISPRUDENCE.—A treatise on Medical Jurisprudence, by Francis Wharton, author of a treatise on "American Criminal Law," "Precedents of Indictments," "American Law of Homicide," &c., and Moreton Stille, M. D., lecturer on the Principles and Practice of Medicine, in the Philadelphia Association for Medical Instruction. In 1 volume, royal 8 vo., 815 pages.

PREPARING FOR PUBLICATION.

SERGEANT ON THE MECHANIC'S LIEN LAW.—second edition, in 1 vol., 8vo., of 300 to 500 pages. Edited by E. Spencer Miller, Esquire, Counsellor at Law and Professor of the Law of Real Estate, Conveyancing and Equity Jurisprudence in the Law Department of the University of Pennsylvania. The Statutes and Decisions, since 1839, (when the first edition was published) have so radically affected this branch of the law, that an entirely new arrangement has been adopted, and a much larger volume will be required than that originally published. The editor and publishers will make every effort to present to the Bar a treatise which will exhaust the law upon this subject, as far as it has been announced, and which will be found practically useful to the profession. It will contain Precedents of Forms carefully prepared, with a view to the latest aspects of the law; and also, all the acts of Assembly relating to the subject. The table of cases and index will be elaborate and exhaustive.

BURTON ON THE LAW OF REAL PROPERTY.—An Elementary Compendium of the law of Real Property, by Walter Henry Burton, Esq., late one of the Fellows on Mr. Viner's foundation for the study of the Common Law in the University of Oxford, with notes, showing the alterations in the law to the present time, to which is now prefixed an introductory chapter, giving a concise historical outline of such parts of the law as have been the subject of statutory alteration, by Edward Priestly Cooper, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Bar at Law. From the last (the eighth) London edition, with full American annotations. By Charles Goepp, Esq. 1 vol., 8vo.

GOWEN ex. WILLS.—In 2 vol's 8vo., of 700 pages each.

Vol. I.—Execution and Probate of Wills.
Vol. II.—Construction of Wills.
A Treatise on the Law of Wills and Testamentary Dispositions in the United States. By James E. Gowen, Esq., of the Philadelphia Bar.

A DIGEST OF THE LAWS OF THE UNITED STATES on the plan of Purdon's Digest, 1700 to 1856.—Kay & Brother beg leave to announce that they have, in course of preparation, a Digest of the Laws of the United States, by F. C. Brightly, Esq., editor of Purdon's Digest, &c., &c., which will be compiled on the model, which, in the case of their eighth edition of Purdon's Digest, has given so much satisfaction to the Legal Profession and the Public.

CASEY'S PENNSYLVANIA STATE REPORTS, VOL. II.
N. B.—Catalogues cheerfully furnished upon application.

HARPER'S NEW CATALOGUE.

A NEW DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE OF HARPER & BROTHERS' PUBLICATIONS is now ready for distribution, and may be obtained gratuitously on application to the Publishers personally, or by letter enclosing six cents in postage stamps.

The attention of gentlemen, in town or country, designing to form Libraries or enrich their literary collections, is respectfully invited to this Catalogue, which will be found to comprise a large proportion of the standard and most esteemed works in English literature—COMPREHENDING MORE THAN TWO THOUSAND VOLUMES—which are offered in most instances at less than one half the cost of similar productions in England.

To Librarians and others connected with Colleges, Schools, etc., who may not have access to a reliable guide in forming the true estimate of literary productions, it is believed the present Catalogue will prove especially valuable as a manual of reference.

To prevent disappointment, it is suggested that, whenever books can not be obtained through any bookseller or local agent, applications with remittance should be addressed direct to the Publishers, which will be promptly attended to.

| Binney's Reports, 6 vols. | 1799 to 1814 |
| Addison's Reports, 1 vol. | 1791 to 1799 |

These Reports are condensed by T. J. Fox Alden, Esq., into three vols., and are sold at the low price of $15. The catalogue price of the old edition, to which they are greatly superior in type and papers is $69. They contain all that is of any value in the original, and as will be seen are sold at less than one fourth the price. The volumes already published are complete in themselves, having a copious index and table of cases.

To those who cannot afford to purchase the original series of Reports (many volumes of which are out of print) this work will be invaluable, whilst even those who do possess them, will buy it for convenience of reference.

From Hon. J. B. Gibson, Chief Justice.—I have examined the first volume of Mr. Alden's Condensed Reports, and think the work will be a valuable one, especially to the younger members of the bar, who cannot, at first afford to purchase the series of our reports, already between seventy and eighty volumes. The cases are clearly stated, and the points decided, are accurately extracted.
JOHN B. GIBSON.

Testimonials speaking in the highest terms of the work, have also been received from Hon. Edward King, Hon. William B. McClure, Hon. William D. Kelly, Hon. Cornelius Darragh, Hon. John Galbreath, James Dunlop, Esq., Thomas Williams, Esq., and more than fifty other distinguished members of the Pennsylvania Bar.

IN PREPARATION,
Addison on Contracts.

This valuable work will be reprinted from the fourth London edition just issued, and contain many important American notes.

Law School of the University at Cambridge, Mass.

The instructors in this school are: Hon. JOHN PARSONS, LL. D., Royal Professor. Hon. THOMAS PARSONS, LL. D., Dane Professor. Hon. EMERY WASHINGTON, LL. D., University Professor.

The course of instruction embraces the various branches of the Common Law, and of Equity, Admiralty, Commercial, International and Constitutional Law, and the Jurisprudence of the United States. The Law Library consists of about 14,000 volumes; and as new works appear they are added and every effort is made to render it complete.

Instruction is given by oral lectures and expositions, (and by recitations and examinations, in connection with them,) of which there are ten every week. Two Most Courts are also holden in each week, at each of which a case, previously given out, is argued by four students, and an opinion delivered by the presiding instructor. Rooms and other facilities are also provided for the Club Courts; and an Assembly is held weekly for practice in debate, and acquiring a knowledge of Parliamentary law and proceedings.

Students may enter the school in any stage of their professional studies or mercantile pursuits, and at the commencement of either term, or in the middle, or other part of a term. They are at liberty to select what studies they wish pursue according to their view of their own wants and attainments.

The Academical year, which commences on Thursday, six weeks after the third Wednesday in July, is divided into two terms, of twenty weeks each, with a vacation of six weeks at the end of each term.

During the winter vacation, the Library is opened, warmed and lighted, for the use of the members of the school.

Applications for admission, or for Catalogues, or any further information, may be made to either of the Professors at Cambridge.

GREAT FIRE, MAY 1, 1856.

HERRING'S PATENT CHAMPION SAFES!

What the People Say!
PHILADELPHIA, 2d May, 1856.

MESSRS. FARRELS & HERRING.
GENTLEMEN—The Herring's Patent Fire-Proof Safe, which we purchased of you in the month of January last, was situated in our Consulting-Room, in the second story of 281 Market street, on the night of the Great Fire, 1st May, 1856, and fell with the burning building in that conflagration.
The Safe was reached this afternoon, after an exposure of THIRTY-SIX HOURS to intense heat, and although the brass plates on the front of the Safe were melted, and the exterior shows the evidence of extreme heat, the inside casing was found to be UNTOUCHED BY FIRE, and with the exception of being a little steamed is now as good as new.
EDW. SHAWMAN & CO.

MESSRS. FARRELS & HERRING.

GENTLEMEN—The Herring's Patent Fire-Proof Safe, of your manufacture, which we purchased nearly a year since, was in the centre of our building at the time of its destruction in the Great Fire of May 1, 1856.
We had removed the greater portion of our books before the fire reached us, but left some of them, together with a number of loose papers, inside, purposely to test the security of the safe. After thirty-eight hours of severe roasting, we found the interior of the Safe, upon opening, not only bright and sound, but the Books and Papers as free from fire as when first put in.
We shall require another Safe as soon as we get a new location, and want none but your "Champion."
Yours, &c.,
FISHER & BROTHER,
No. 16 North Sixth street.

The public will bear in mind that the "HERRING'S PATENT" is the only Safe made in this City, which has never failed to preserve its contents in soidental fires.

The TWO SAFES from the above Great Fire can now be seen in front of the OLD STAND, No. 34 WALNUT STREET.

FARRELS & HERRING.
Only Makers in this State of HERRING'S PATENT CHAMPION SAFES!

The Bank of Cash Credits.

Application will be made to the Legislature of Pennsylvania, for the Charter of a Bank Issue with general banking privileges, with a capital of ONE MILLION OF DOLLARS. Said Bank to be located in the City of Philadelphia, to be called the "Robert Morris Bank," and to be conducted upon the system of cash credits only, as is herewith indicated.

A cash credit is a credit given to an individual by a Banking Company, for a limited sum, seldom under $500, or $1000, upon his own security and that of two or three individuals, approved by the Bank, who become sureties for its payment. The individual who has obtained such a credit, is enabled to draw the whole sum, or any part of it, when he pleases; replacing it, or portions of it, according as he finds it convenient; interest being charged upon such part only as he draws out.

"If a man borrows $1000, from a private hand, and even then it is not always to be found when required, he pays interest for it, whether he be using it or not. His bank credit costs him nothing, except during the moment it is of service to him, and this circumstance is of equal advantage as if he had borrowed money at a much lower rate of interest."

Cash credits are not, however, intended to be a dead load; the main objects of the Banks in granting them is to get their notes circulated, and they do not grant them except to persons in business, or to those who are frequently drawing out and paying in money.

Any person who applies to a bank for a cash credit, is called upon to produce sureties, and, after a full inquiry into the character of the applicant, the nature of his business, and the sufficiency of his securities, he is allowed to open a credit, and to draw upon the Bank for the whole of its amount, or for such part as his daily transaction may require. To the credit of the account, he pays in such sums as he may not have occasion to use, and interest is charged or credited upon the balance, as the case may be. From the facility which these cash credits give to all the small transactions of the country, and from the opportunities which they afford to persons who begin business with little or no capital but their character, to employ profitably the minutest products of their industry, it cannot be doubted that the most important advantages are derived in the whole community.

Such privileges and immunities as the "Metropolitan Bank of New York" exercises, will be applied for.

THE STATE

SAVINGS FUND.

INTEREST FIVE PER CENT, PER ANNUM.

ALL SUMS OF MONEY RETURNED ON DEMAND.

OFFICE, NEXT DOOR TO THE POST OFFICE; No. 83 Dock Street, PHILADELPHIA, 1854.

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND, No. 83 DOCK Street, next door to THIRD Street, and adjoining the POST OFFICE, receives MONEY on deposit daily, from 9 in the morning until 3 in the afternoon; also Monday evenings, from 7 to 9 o'clock. Interest is allowed on deposits at the rate of FIVE PER CENT per annum. Deposits will be returned in whole, or in part, on demand, without notice.

The popularity of this Office with all classes of the community, both in town and country, and its consequent success, may be ascribed, in part, to the following substantial reasons:

1st. It offers a convenient, responsible, and profitable Depository to Executors, Administrators, Assignees, Collectors, Agents, and all public officers—to Attorneys, Trustees, Societies and Associations, whether incorporated or otherwise—to married or single ladies—to Students, Merchants, Clerks, and business men generally—to Mechanics, Farmers, Minors of either sex, and all who have funds, much or little, to deposit, where they may be had at any time, with Five Per Cent interest added. 2d. Depositors receive books, with an abstract of the By-laws and regulations, in which is entered their deposits, which Books serve as vouchers. They may designate in case of sickness, death, or absence, who shall receive their deposits, without the intervention of Executors or Administrators. Any one or more persons may deposit in his, her, or their name, or for any other person or persons.

3d. A Report is made each year to the Legislature and Councils of the City.

4th. The Officers are sworn before they enter upon their duties, in addition to giving Bonds with sureties.

5th. The State Savings Fund is a real Savings Fund—not an Insurance and Trust Company. The Charter of this Institution avoids the Insurance business.

6th. Deposits may be withdrawn by checks after the manner customary with Banks. Check Books will be furnished to depositors without charge.

MR. BROWN'S NEW WORK.

THE FORUM, OR FORTY YEARS' FULL PRACTICE.

The name of Mr. David Paul Brown has been known for many years in connection with advocacy at the bar. Though just sixty-one years old, he has had for nearly forty years, a popular name. Unlike many, or indeed, unlike most men who have attained eminence at the bar—men whose fame has been only by gradations of success and of slow growth—Mr. Brown's distinction was achieved at once, and almost immediately after his admission to the bar. Though still a young man, as we may say, he came therefore fairly upon the stage as far back as 1816, when the elder of the old school of lawyers was still upon it; while the greater part of his career has been a concurrent one in point of time with that of those distinguished men of whom one alone now remains; a generation of our bar which will long be remembered with admiration, as we may hope it may also be with the effect of serving for the imitation of all who shall ever profess our name. The opportunities, therefore, in point of time, which Mr. Brown has had for observation, every one would agree have been good; and that his knowledge and his recollections would be interesting and of value. But during all these forty years Mr. Brown has been in a laborious and unintermitted practice. Nothing, indeed, but a constitution of great strength, and those habits of extraordinary temperance by which he is distinguished, could have enabled him to go through, as he has done, with scarcely an impression upon his frame, a career of advocacy so constant and exciting as that in which he has been engaged for forty years. Valuable, therefore, as every one would believe that a good record of his recollections might be, we were, ourselves, by no means sure how far Mr. Brown might, himself, be able to record them well. Many men, as Mr. Brown himself tells us, who have been very eminent at the bar, have lost all reputation when called upon to exercise their powers on the bench. Men who have spoken eloquently, and discoursed brilliantly, have often proved the dullest and most absurd of men when they have attempted to display themselves through the power of the pen. Mr. Brown, to be sure, was not unknown as a writer; but his efforts had been of the poetic and dramatic cast, where much might not only be allowed, but eminently fit, that would be greatly out of place in another style of composition. Mr. Brown we knew, too, was a very fearless man, and he had assumed a most delicate and dangerous business; as every man does who assumes to write about the living or those still nearly bound to them. When, therefore, we heard that this gentleman—so well known as a public speaker—had undertaken as a theme the history of his professional contemporaries at the bar, and was about to appear in the new character of annalist, historian and philosopher, we felt, as we have said, some little solicitude;—not because we were not sure that Mr. Brown in any thing he would write, would not give us a great deal that was good, but because we were not so sure exactly how what was good would be presented. But this slight solicitude, we must confess, has been agreeably relieved by the appearance of the work itself. No part of it is uninteresting; some parts of it are very entertaining; others valuable and instructive. Of course it is a work which is characteristic of Mr. Brown, and herein will consist undoubtedly much of its attraction. The style that marks his speeches marks the book—the same freedom, the same fearlessness. We have the same exhibition of taste; the same lofty and poetic style when his themes are such as rise to dignity.

The work opens with a sketch of Mr. Brown's own life, extracted from a series of biographies published some time since in a legal journal of New York. We have then a treatise upon ancient and modern forensic eloquence; with some illustrations of it from the American bar; one by Mr. Brown himself; an excellent one, not inferior, we think, to the extract from Mr. Sergeant's speech beside it. Eighty-four pages are devoted to a history of the Philadelphia bar before the revolution; the only attempt which we know of, except the short discourse of Mr. McCall, to present or preserve this interesting portion of our legal history. He follows this with some account of our judiciary tenures; and we commend to the whole country his remarks from p. 306 to 319 on the subject of elective judiciaries and judicial salaries, as profoundly true and deserving of all approbation. Excellent as are many parts of the book, we regard this as the most excellent of it all. He then passes to his "Gallery of Portraits," giving us sketches of McKean, Shippen, Bushrod Washington, Tilghman, Yeates and Breckenridge. Washington is obviously his exemplar of the judicial character; and we have here the fullest and best sketch of him which has ever been given. Mr. Brown praises him with the warmth of affection and respect, but in no degree whatever, as we have every reason to know, beyond the point of truth and justice. Tilghman, of course, receives a hearty and eloquent record, as it is a perfectly just one; though Mr. Brown rightly remarks "that with all his merits, his judicial manner was not equal to Judge Washington's, though superior to any other man's that ever held his seat upon a Pennsylvania bench." It gives us great pleasure to see how prominently in the judicial picture, and how well also, Mr. Brown places this excellent magistrate, and upright and amiable man. To have so rightly estimated Judge Washington, is the best proof of the author's own true perceptions and good judgment.

Coming to his second volume, Mr. Brown arrives at a delicate and most difficult portion of his history; the biographies and characterizations of Judges yet living. They are fearless, well-written, and generally very true, both as to fact and to judgment. In one or two cases—but in one or two cases only—we should ourselves in some points differ from Mr. Brown's estimates; supposing these estimates to be meant for what of course they are not meant, cold judicial estimates of character, capacity and learning. Whether all other readers would agree with us, or whether they might not agree rather with Mr. Brown, we do not presume to say. Every literary or professional man stands in special relations to some one, often in such relations to many; relations sometimes of friendship, occasionally of something a little the reverse. It is not possible for any man to write of a whole collection of living men, or of men recently dead, and to write that to whose exact words every man will agree. Indeed, no one in taking up such a volume, expects to find in it his own views in all things; or it would not be worth his taking up at all. He is reading the views of another man, and expects of course to have some matters for the correction as well as for the confirmation of his own. Besides, in any such book, every intelligent reader knows that in the way of eulogy some little things are said which, doing credit chiefly to their author's heart, do no discredit to their author's head, for no one is misled, and the "correction of the parallax" is made by every reader without an effort and as of course. So on the other hand, he knows that differences of opinion—personal, political or judicial—render it impossible for any man to give with sincerity to an opponent that unqualified approbation which would be called forth in the case of a friend.

The reader of this work has surprisingly few corrections of this sort to make, either on one side or on the other; and very likely no dozen readers would agree, exactly, as to where the corrections were to be made. Mr. Brown is indeed singularly bold, though without even a touch of sharpness or the least infusion of personal feelings; and he deals forth judgments upon his living contemporaries and upon men in office, with a candor that is perhaps only excessive and an impartiality, generally speaking, which is as admirable as it is wholly unusual. If here and there, in some parts of the book, we find an anecdote or a passage over which, as bound to be over-scrupulous, we should ourselves, on second thoughts, have written the inexorable dele, it is probably because our taste may have in it a little more timidity than Mr. Brown's.

Mr. Brown exhibits himself, in this work, in a character where he has hitherto been but little known to the world; that we mean of a legal antiquary. We had no idea that a man so engaged in public advocacy had cultivated this field so well and so extensively. He gives us the very best narrative at all given in modern times of the trial of Zenger; and at the conclusion of the first volume presents us a fac simile of autographs of members of the bar, going back as far as the time of Chief Justice Logan, obtained, as he tells us, from the papers of that well-known virtuoso the late Mr. Ingraham, and prepared by that gentleman "to refute the common slander of the handwriting of lawyers." It is a curious document, singularly characteristic of Mr. Ingraham's well-known taste and habits.* Mr. Brown indeed has brought together a great deal of fragmentary and scattered matter very fit to be collected and presented, but which was fast going to oblivion. He has told us in the way of fact or of anecdote a great deal which no other man could and would have told us; and the more philosophical parts of the work—his reflections upon the judicial tenures and salaries—those in his "Prospects and Retrospect of the Bar," and in some other places throughout the book, put before the public, the bench and the profession a great deal that is full of solemn truth;—truth which we earnestly commend to them all, if they mean that the calling of the law shall be restored to its former liberality, weight and dignity, or even continued in its present not very elevated condition.

Mr. Brown's work, in point of size, appears to have considerably overrun the publisher's engagement to subscribers. It is obvious that matter has grown under the author's hands, and it is on this account, no doubt, that we have less mention of certain persons, very eminent in their day, than some readers would expect to find; Mr. Edward Tilghman, for example; Mr. Chauncey, and one or two other persons. Mr. Brown may have felt also that the personal and professional characters of all the persons we refer to have been already so admirably delineated as that no second effort was required to do them honor.

The book will appear towards the close of this month.

* We know not if it will strike others as it did us as an incident of Mr. Gallowsay's signature—curious when taken in connection with his personal history—that he does not appear to have known on which side of the suit he was.

Supreme Court.

Opinion by Lewis, C. J.

DUNLOP vs. BOURNONVILLE.

Error to District Court Philadelphia.

The evidence tends to show that there was an actual transfer of the property in pursuance of a sale made for a sufficient consideration—that the vendee took the whole management of the concern—that the sale was to a brother, made about the first of October, and completed by a bill of sale executed on the 11th—that the vendors continued afterwards about the establishment as workmen in the employ of their brother the vendee—that the vendors were in failing circumstances, and that the sale was made as a means of paying a large amount of their debts assumed by the vendee—that, before the sale, the vendee was frequently about the establishment, and seemed to have some employment there; and that, after the sale, the sign of the vendee was substituted for that of the vendors. The creditor who contests the sale had commenced suit near two years before the sale, and obtained judgment by confession the next day after it was completed.

Of course the sale was treated as a nullity, in the court below, not because it was in fact fraudulent, for the court could not declare that fact; but because it had not been conducted in the form which is deemed essential for the protection of creditors and subsequent purchasers. Now certainly there is no law prohibiting persons, standing in near relations of business or affinity, from buying from each other; or requiring them to conduct their business with each other in special form. And certainly the cases of McViekar vs. May, 3 State R. 224, and Forsyth vs. Mathews, 14 id. 100, do show that, if there be an actual transfer, it is not vitiated because of the intimacy of the business relations that continued after the sale, when that is naturally accounted for by the affinity of the parties. The former case was a sale by a father to his son; and, as we understand it, the transfer was considered sufficient on the ground that, intimate as were the relations of the parties after the sale, "the son's possession and use of the goods were exclusive." The latter case was a sale by a son to his father, and though the business continued to be conducted in the same place, and with the assistance of the son, yet, there being evidence of an actual transfer of the possession and control of the property, the sale was sustained. The case of Avery vs. Street, 6 Watts, 247, is of the same character.

In the case of Childs vs. Simmons, decided at Pittsburgh several years ago, and not reported, the sale was by a storekeeper to his clerk, who had no means, and to a very long credit, and the vendor dwelt in the house and continued to aid in the store; but the sign was changed; yet the sale was sustained. In Hugus vs. Robinson, 24 State R., the sale was to one who had very recently been the vendor's clerk, and after the sale there was no change of the sign, and the vendor continued as in the foregoing case, and these circumstances were not regarded as vitiating the sale. To the same purport is Faunce vs. Leslie, 6 State R. 121.

It must be, therefore, than where there is a transfer of possession corresponding with the sale, and with the nature of the property sold, and the relations of the parties, and such as is naturally expected under the circumstances, and it does not appear as a mere sham or cover, then the forms of the law are complied with, and the sale is valid, unless actual fraud be shown. Certainly a mere formal or symbolical delivery will not avail, where an actual one is reasonably practicable; and such is its character where the real control is retained by the vendor or immediately resumed by him. 2 Watts & S. 147. But if there be an actual delivery, open and visible, (5 State R. 326,) presenting the appearance, under the circumstances, of being made with the bona fide intention of transferring the possession as well as the title, then we cannot say, as matter of law, that it is inadequate for its purpose. These views show that this case ought to have been submitted to the jury to decide whether there was an honest sale and transfer of this property.

Judgment reversed and a new trial awarded.

Opinion by Lewis, C. J.

CRAWFORD vs. NEFF.

The statute has established twenty-one year adverse possession as a bar to an action for the recovery of lands. Nothing short of that period is sufficient. Nothing more than that period is required. To substitute a rule of law by which a jury might presume a conveyance, after a greater lapse of time, is useless. If after a less period—it would be a repeal of the statute. It seems to follow that in cases where the statute of limitations might apply the rules for presuming a conveyance cannot be substituted by the courts. 1 W. C. C. 80; 4 Pick. 245; 2 Conn. 607; 5 Pick. 27; 3 Rand. 557; 6 Cow. 723.

As the statute does not apply to incorporeal hereditaments, which are said to lie on grant, the courts have applied its principles in the form of rules for presuming a grant after an adverse enjoyment for the period prescribed by the statute in case of lands so occupied. But in these cases the analogy requires that the full period of twenty-one years adverse engagement shall be shown. Nothing more is required—nothing less will be sufficient to justify the presumption. In this case the same evidence which was deemed sufficient to defeat the bar under the statute, by showing that the possession was not adverse for the period required, was equally effective in repelling the presumption of a conveyance.

It is true that if any circumstances exist tending to justify the belief that a conveyance had in fact been made, but cannot be found, the lapse of time, even short of twenty-one years' enjoyment, is a circumstance for the consideration of the jury. The existence of these circumstances will be determined by the jury; but their effect, if true, must be passed upon by the court. If they do not justify the jury in drawing the conclusion, as a matter of fact, that a conveyance had actually been made, the court ought not to submit them to the jury for that purpose. 6 Bin. 419, 17 How. U. S. Rep. 436.

In this case we have nothing but the ordinary circumstances of an adverse possession short of twenty-one years. It was error to permit the jury to presume a conveyance from such evidence.

The evidence stated in plaintiff's third bill tended to explain the character of the defendant's possession as a tenant in common with others, and ought to have been received. But, independent of it, the defendant had no defence. The court ought to have given a peremptory direction in favor of the plaintiff's right to recover.

Judgment reversed and venire facias de novo awarded.

District Court.

Opinion by Judge Hare.

WIEN vs. SIMPSON.

The plaintiff's case is founded on an essentially false conception, of the relation which subsists between landlord and tenant, which is not now, as it may once have been, a relation of mutual alliance and protection, but one of bargain and sale, fully within the scope of the general maxim caveat emptor. A lease is a sale and conveyance of the property leased, which only differs from what is commonly called a deed, in being limited to a term certain, and leaving a reversionary interest in the grantor. The tenant takes and the landlord transfers the premises as they are, and neither party is bound to improve or vary their condition. From the moment of letting, the land becomes the tenant's, and remains such until the lease terminates; the house, if there be one, is his castle; if the landlord or his agents attempt to enter for the purpose of making repairs, or for any other purpose, they may be ejected forcibly, or made liable in trespass. Whether any, and if any, what repairs shall be made, is left wholly to the sense of mutual interest, acting through express or implied agreement; for the law refuses to intervene or regulate that by rule, which depends essentially on circumstances, and can be much better determined by the parties. The tenant may and should view the premises when he takes them, he may stipulate for repairs before entering, or withdraw at the end of his term if they are not made; if he does not, the law cannot proteet him from the consequences of his indiscretion, in hiring and keeping a house unfit for habitation. In this, beyond question, it does wisely; for law and government, which should be but the exponent of law, best perform their functions, when they meddle least, and subject nothing to rule, which can be safely left to individual action. It is therefore plain, and repeated decision the best test of what is practically wise, has established, that in the absence of express, there is no implied obligation to repair demised premises; and it necessarily follows, that the ill consequences which may result from their unsound or dangerous condition, must ordinarily be borne by those on whom they fall, and cannot be charged on the landlord, who is in no wise legally responsible for them.

There is however a point, at which these remarks cease to be applicable, and should be superseded by other and higher considerations. The moral law has obligations, and imposes duties, which the law of the land should recognize and support as far as possible. No man is entitled to pursue a course of conduct with reference to his own property, of a nature to produce ill consequences to others, from which they cannot with ordinary care and caution protect themselves. The owner of a building, may not be responsible for its unsafe or dangerous condition, to those who enter it of their own motion, and without his consent or sanction. But the case is widely different, when he gives an express or implied license, which exposes others to latent and unforeseen danger. A fall into an unfenced pit, or open trap door, may give no right of action to a trespasser, but would surely entitle a visitor or lodger to compensation. And few things would seem plainer, than the breach of duty on the part of him, who lets a house with a knowledge that it is unsafe from hidden and undiscoverable defects, without warning the tenant of their existence. Had therefore the plaintiff in this case, alleged the knowledge of the defendants, and his own ignorance of the dangerous condition of the property at the time of the letting, a question would have arisen, differing in kind as well as degree from that now before us. But taking the allegata and probata, as they are, and as we must therefore take them, our only course is to say, that the duty which the defendants are said to have violated, has no legal existence, and that judgment must consequently be entered for them on the point reserved. This renders it unnecessary to say anything, with reference to the motion in arrest of judgment, which becomes superfluous, although it would otherwise be governed by the same reasoning.

Judgment for defendants.

NOTICE TO THE BAR.

It appears, after a careful examination during the last vacation, that the following books are missing from the shelves of the Law Library, having been taken away in violation of its rules. It is earnestly requested of gentlemen having any of them, to return them forthwith to the Library, and thus prevent the great inconvenience which any detention of them is certain to cause the Bar and Courts after the sessions begin.

T. & J. W. JOHNSON, LAW BOOKSELLERS AND PUBLISHERS, No. 197 CHESTNUT STREET, PHILADELPHIA.

The Fullset, the Latest, and the Best REPORTS OF THE COMMON LAW COURTS OF ENGLAND.

Containing the cases decided in the Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Nisi Prius Courts, from 1813 to 1855, and in the Court of Exchequer and Exchequer Chamber, from 1824 to 1855, are found in The Regular and Authoritative Series of the English Common Law and English Exchequer Reports.

Which present the following claims to the support of the profession:

1. They are the only series issued as the authoritative and acknowledged medium by which the decisions of the Law Courts of England are made public.

2. They contain Later Reports than the Boston series, are more fully and more ably reported, and so arranged by preservation of the original paging, that reference by reporters, or by elementary writers, can be traced as readily as in the English editions.

Vol. 2, Ellis & Blackburne's (75 E. C. L. R.) Reports (Q. B.) to January, 1854, was published by us in June, 1854. At that time the last Queen's Bench case printed in the Boston Law and Equity Reports, was of June 25, 1853. Our volume contained cases decided five months later. The Queen's Bench cases to November 25, 1853, were published in the Boston series in August, 1854, two months after we had distributed the same cases.

Vol. 3, Ellis & Blackburne, (77 E. C. L. R., with cases to the end of Trinity Term, 1854, was published when the latest case of Queen's Bench decided in the Boston series, was of February 8, 1854, more than four months behind the regular reporters.

Exchequer Reports, vol. 9, (Welshy, Hurlstone & Gordon,) distributed by us January 11, 1855, contains cases to May 10, 1854. The last Exchequer case then in the Boston series was decided February 9, 1854, four months behind the regular Reporter, issued in Philadelphia.

3. They contain more cases decided by the courts represented, than any other series issued in this country.

Vol. 77 English Common Law, (3 E. & B.) reports eighty-five cases decided in the Queen's Bench since January 1, 1854, while but fifty-eight Queen's Bench cases, decided since January 1, 1854, are found scattered among Vols. 22, 24 and 25 of the Boston Law and Equity.

Vol. 78 E. C. L. R. (5 J. Scott,) reports sixty-five cases decided since Nov. 13, 1853, in the Common Pleas, while the L. & E. has but fifty-seven cases in that Court since the same period.

Vol. 9 Exchequer Reports, (Welshy, Hurlstone & Gordon,) reports one hundred and ten cases in the Courts of Exchequer, decided since June 24, 1853, while since the same date, the L. & E. report but 107 cases, scattered through vols. 20, 22, 24 and 25.

4. They are almost exclusively cited in argument of counsel, and referred to by Elementary Writers for Law Authorities. See Smith's Leading Cases, Smith's Contracts, Smith's Landlord and Tenant, by Maude; Byles on Bills and Promissory Notes, Broom's Legal Maxims, Broom's Commentaries on the Laws of England, or almost any recent Law Book issued in England.

5. The Philadelphia Reports are edited by Judge Sharwood and by Judge Hare, whose labors as editors and authors have made them so well and so favorably known to the profession.

6. The Boston Law and Equity is made up in this country from the Law Journal, Jurist, Times and other Law periodicals, of a weekly, monthly, or quarterly character, and being unknown in England, is never cited in Court, or referred to by Law writers. The periodicals from which it is extracted, are occasionally cited under their own particular names, but they do not possess that permanent value, even in England, which is all-important in series of Reports.

7. A carefully prepared and accurate Annual Digest of all the cases decided by the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Exchequer, will be distributed, early in each year, to subscribers to either series, free of charge. That for 1854 is ready, and will be mailed to subscribers who have not received a copy.

IN PRESS AND IN PREPARATION.

Leading Cases on the Law relating to Real Property, Chattels, and the Construction of Wills, by Owen Davies Tudor, author of Leading Cases in Equity. With very full notes referring to American Decisions.

Broom's Commentaries on the Common Law, by author of Legal Maxims, and Parties to Actions, edited by Hon. Geo. Sharwood.

Smith's Law of Landlord and Tenant, by author of Leading Cases, with copious American notes by P. P. Morris, Esq.

Having purchased from the English Publishers, during the past year, fifty sheets of the Great Wills above mentioned, we hope to issue improved American editions very soon after their completion in England.

BLACKSTONE'S COMMENTARIES.

COMMENTARIES

ON THE

LAWS OF ENGLAND,

IN FOUR BOOKS.

BY

SIR WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, Knt.

ONE OF THE JUSTICES OF THE COURT OF COMMON PLEAS. WITH THE LAST CORRECTIONS OF THE AUTHOR, AND NOTES.

From the Twenty-first London Edition. With copious

NOTES,

Explaining the Changes in the Law effected by Decision or Statute, down to 1844. Together with Notes adapting the Work to the American Student. By JOHN L. WENDELL,

LATE REPORTER OF THE SUPREME COURT.

Four Octavo Volumes, bound in fine Law Sheep, Price $7 00.

The Twenty-first Edition of "Blackstone's Commentaries" was prepared by intrusting each one of the four great departments of jurisprudence, treated of by Sir WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, to a separate Editor, whose professional studies had made him peculiarly conversant with that particular branch of learning, to wit:

Vol. I. To J. F. HARGRAVE, of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister at Law.

Vol. II. To G. SWIFT, of the Inner Temple, Barrister at Law.

Vol. III. To R. COOKE, of the Middle Temple, Barrister at Law.

Vol. IV. To W. N. WELSHY, Recorder of Chester.

Into the hands of these gentlemen were put all the Editions of Blackstone then extant in England, with directions to avail themselves of such notes of former editors as they should approve, (among those editions was that of MR. CHITTY.) Under those circumstances, and by this division of labor, was produced a work highly beneficial to the student, and greatly facilitating the researches of counsel.

The notes of the American Editor were to show the Common Law as it exists in this country under our institutions, particularly in the State of New York, and more especially as effected by the Revised Statutes of that State, and to point out the diversities of the Common Law as held in England and in this country in the few instances in which a difference exists.

This edition is the most accurate and useful which has appeared.—London Times.

Incomparably the best edition that has ever been published.—Literary World.

We do not hesitate to endorse the emphatic approval which the edition has received in England, and pronounce it the best that has ever appeared.—Law Reporter.

There can be no question, that this edition of the Commentaries is destined to supersede all others.—Courier.

These notes are of the greatest value, and add ten-fold to the work, so far as the American student is concerned.—Albany Argus.

VALUABLE REPORTS.

LITTLE, BROWN, & CO.

112 Washington Street, BOSTON,

Curtis's Supreme Court Decisions

THE DECISIONS OF THE SUPREME

COURT OF THE UNITED STATES,

With notes and a Digest by Hon. Benjamin R. Curtis, one of the Associate Justices of the Court. In 22 volumes, octavo. Comprising the Cases reported by Dallas, 4 vols.; Cranoh, 9 vols.; Wheaton, 12 vols.; Peters, 16 vols.; Howard, 17 vols.

The old series of these reports are in 57 volumes, the Catalogue price of which is $217 50. This edition in 22 volumes, is offered to subscribers at the low price of $3 a volume; thus bringing them within the means of all. The volumes are delivered as fast as issued, and it is intended that the whole work shall be completed early in 1856.

Vols. 1 to 15 are now ready. We ask attention to the following approval by the members of the Supreme Court of the United States:

"We approve the plan of Mr. Justice Curtis's, 'Decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States,' and believe that its execution by him will be of much utility to the legal profession and to our country.

English Law and Equity Reports.

ENGLISH REPORTS IN LAW AND EQUITY. A Complete Collection of the Cases decided by the House of Lords, the Privy Council, the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas and Exchequer, the Lord Chancellor, the High Court of Appeal in Chancery, the Court of Criminal Appeal, and the Admiralty and Ecclesiastical Courts. Reprinted within a few weeks after the decisions are rendered.

This series has the merit of being complete, reliable, prompt, convenient, and cheap. It is now universally cited in the courts, and referred to in the recent law books as standard authority. All the cases reported in England, are here reprinted from the most reliable sources, as soon as they reach this country.

These Reports are now regularly digested in our Annual United States Digest, which thus embraces an annual digest of the whole English and American Law.

We have now in Preparation, and shall soon Publish,

A separate Digest of these Reports, embracing the first thirty-one volumes of the series, prepared with express reference to the convenience of the American profession, and exhibiting a complete synopsis of all the English Decisions reported in those volumes during the last five years; also a Table of Cases referring to all the contemporaneous English Reports. This will be the first Digest of English Decisions prepared expressly for the American Lawyer, and it is intended to give it the same advantages over the English Digests hitherto reprinted in this country, which the American text books have generally been found to possess over the English.

The Law and Equity Reports will be continued on the same plan as heretofore; the number of volumes being reduced to four per year; and Digests will be published from time to time as the convenience of the profession demands.

Vols. 1 to 31, now ready for delivery, at $2 00 per volume.

KAY & BROTHER,

LAW BOOKSELLERS, PUBLISHERS AND IMPORTERS.

17 AND 19 SOUTH FIFTH STREET,

First Door above Chestnut.

Kay & Brother respectfully invite the attention of the members of the Legal Profession to the following invaluable publications, and solicit them to call and examine their select stock of Law Books.

JUST PUBLISHED.

HARRIS' REPORTS OF THE SUPREME COURT OF PENNSYLVANIA. Vol. XII. By George W. Harris.

KAY & BROTHER beg leave to announce that they have become the sole publishers of Harris' Reports, of which eleven volumes have been already issued. They have just published the twelfth and last volume of the series, which fills up the interval between Harris' and Casey's Reports, which they also publish. The difficulty in obtaining, when and as wanted, the various volumes of Harris' Reports, will in future be obviated, as regular and full supplies of them all will be kept constantly on hand and for sale.

CASEY'S PENNSYLVANIA STATE REPORTS, Vol. 1.—Pennsylvania State Reports, Vol. XXV, containing reports of cases adjudged by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, by Joseph Casey, Esq., State Reporter. This volume contains the cases decided in part of May Term, 1855; in October Terms, 1856, and part of January Term, 1856. It will be the joint endeavor of the Reporter and Publisher to issue the respective volumes as speedily as possible, after the determination of the cases which each volume will contain, and thus to remove a serious ground of complaint on the part of the bar. Subscribers wanted for a single volume or the entire series.

BRIGHTLY'S PURDON'S ANNUAL DIGEST, FOR THE YEARS 1854, 1855, and 1856—on the plan and in continuation of Stroud & Brightly's Purdon, 1700 to 1853. Annual Digest of the Laws of Pennsylvania for each of the years 1854, 1855 and 1856, namely, from 28 May, 1853, to 15 May, 1856, together with some laws inadvertently omitted in Purdon's Digest, 1700 to 1853; Marginal References; a Digested Syllabus of each Title; Foot Notes to the Judicial Decisions; and a full and exhaustive Index, in which the contents of all the annual Digests are incorporated in one alphabet. The whole completing Stroud & Brightly's Purdon's Digest to the present time. By Frederick C. Brightly, Esq., author of the "Law of Coets," "Equity Jurisprudence," Editor of Purdon's Digest, &c. Price only Fifty cents.

DUNLAP'S BOOK OF FORMS.—A Book of Forms containing more than twelve hundred Forms, for practice in the Courts of Pennsylvania and of the United States, and for conveyancing; also, for the use of Public Officers and Men of Business generally. Adopted by the recent acts of Assembly of Pennsylvania, with explanatory remarks, and numerous precedents and references to Standard Authorities.—By James D. Dunlap, Counsellor at Law, &c. Third edition price, only $4.00. Dunlap's Forms and Graydon's Forms (which latter work Kay & Brother also publish) will supply the Lawyer, the Conveyancer, and the Business Man, with all the aids from approved precedents which he will need.

WHARTON & STILLE'S MEDICAL JURISPRUDENCE.—A treatise on Medical Jurisprudence, by Francis Wharton, author of a treatise on "American Criminal Law," "Precedents of Indictments," "American Law of Homicide," &c., and Moreton Stille, M.D., lecturer on the Principles and Practice of Medicine, in the Philadelphia Association for Medical Instruction. In 1 vol. ume, royal 8 vo., 816 pages.

PREPARING FOR PUBLICATION.

SERGEANT ON THE MECHANIC'S LIEN LAW—second edition, in 1 vol., 8vo., of 300 to 500 pages. Edited by E. Spencer Miller, Esquire, Counsellor at Law and Professor of the law of Real Estate, Conveyancing and Equity Jurisprudence in the Law Department of the University of Pennsylvania. The Statutes and Decisions, since 1839, (when the first edition was published) have so radically affected this branch of the law, that an entirely new arrangement has been adopted, and a much larger volume will be required than that originally published. The editor and publishers will make every effort to present to the Bar a treatise which will exhaust the law upon this subject, as far as it has been announced, and which will be found practically useful to the profession. It will contain Precedents of Forms carefully prepared, with a view to the latest aspects of the law; and also, all the acts of Assembly relating to the subject. The table of cases and index will be elaborate and exhaustive.

BURTON ON THE LAW OF REAL PROPERTY.—An Elementary Compendium of the law of Real Property, by Walter Henry Burton, Esq., late one of the Fellows on Mr. Viner's foundation for the study of the Common Law in the University of Oxford, with notes, showing the alterations in the law to the present time, to which is now prefixed an introductory chapter, giving a concise historical outline of such parts of the law as have been the subject of statutory alteration, by Edward Priestly Cooper, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister at Law. From the last (the eighth) London edition, with full American annotations. By Charles Goeppe. 1 vol., 8vo.

GOWEN ON WILLS.—In 2 vol's 8vo., of 700 pages each. Vol. I.—Execution and Probate of Wills. Vol. II.—Construction of Wills. A Treatise on the Law of Wills and Testamentary Dispositions in the United States. By James E. Gowen, Esq., of the Philadelphia Bar.

A DIGEST OF THE LAWS OF THE UNITED STATES on the plan of Purdon's Digest, 1700 to 1856.—Kay & Brother beg leave to announce that they have, in course of preparation, a Digest of the Laws of the United States, by F. C. Brightly, Esq., editor of Purdon's Digest, &c., &c., which will be compiled on the model, which, in the case of their eighth edition of Purdon's Digest, has given so much satisfaction to the Legal Profession and the Public.

CASEY'S PENNSYLVANIA STATE REPORTS, Vol. II. N. B.—Catalogues cheerfully furnished upon application.

HARPER'S NEW CATALOGUE.

A NEW DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE OF HARPER & BROTHERS' PUBLICATIONS is now ready for distribution, and may be obtained gratuitously on application to the Publishers personally, or by letter enclosing six cents in postage stamps.

The attention of gentlemen, in town or country, designing to form Libraries or enrich their literary collections, is respectfully invited to this Catalogue, which will be found to comprise a large proportion of the standard and most esteemed works in English literature—COMPREHENDING MORE THAN TWO THOUSAND VOLUMES—which are offered in most instances at less than one half the cost of similar productions in England.

To Librarians and others connected with Colleges, Schools, etc., who may not have access to a reliable guide in forming the true estimate of literary productions, it is believed the present Catalogue will prove especially valuable as a manual of reference.

To prevent disappointment, it is suggested that, whenever books can not be obtained through any bookseller or local agent, applications with remittance should be addressed direct to the Publishers, which will be promptly attended to.

PENNSYLVANIA REPORTS.

A New and Cheap Edition. ALREADY PUBLISHED.

Table listing Pennsylvania Reports: Dallas' Reports, 4 vols., 1754 to 1806; Yeates' Reports, 4 vols., 1791 to 1808; Binney's Reports, 6 vols., 1799 to 1814; Addison's Reports, 1 vol., 1791 to 1799.

These Reports are condensed by T. J. Fox Alden, Esq., into three vols., and are sold at the low price of $15. The catalogue price of the old edition, to which they are greatly superior in type and papers is $69. They contain all that is of any value in the original, and as will be seen are sold at less than one fourth the price. The volumes already published are complete in themselves, having a copious index and table of cases.

To those who cannot afford to purchase the original series of Reports (many volumes of which are out of print) this work will be invaluable, whilst even those who do possess them, will buy it for convenience of reference.

From Hon. J. B. Gibson, Chief Justice.—I have examined the first volume of Mr. Alden's Condensed Reports, and think the work will be a valuable one, especially to the younger members of the bar, who cannot, at first afford to purchase the series of our reports, already between seventy and eighty volumes. The cases are clearly stated, and the points decided, are accurately extracted. JOHN B. GIBSON.

Testimonials speaking in the highest terms of the work, have also been received from Hon. Edward King, Hon. William B. McClure, Hon. William D. Kelly, Hon. Cornelius Darragh, Hon. John Galbreath, James Dunlop, Esq., Thomas Williams, Esq., and more than fifty other distinguished members of the Pennsylvania Bar.

IN PREPARATION,

Addison on Contracts.

This valuable work will be reprinted from the fourth London edition just issued, and contain many important American notes.

ALBANY LAW SCHOOL.

Professors.—Hon. Ira Harris, L. L. D. Amasa J. Packard, L. L. D. Amos Dean, L. L. D.

The next two terms of this School will commence the FIRST, on the FIRST TUESDAY OF SEPTEMBER, and the SECOND, on the FIRST TUESDAY OF DECEMBER next. Each continuing twelve weeks. For circulars and information, apply to AMOS DEAN, Albany, N. York. R. H. WALWORTH, L. L. D., President. may 2-6mo.

Law School of the University at Cambridge, Mass.

The instructors in this school are Hon. JOHN PARKER, LL. D., Royal Professor. Hon. THOMAS PHILIP PARSONS, LL. D., Dean Professor. Hon. EMERY WASHBURN, LL. D., University Professor.

The course of instruction embraces the various branches of the Common Law, and of Equity, Admiralty, Commercial, International and Constitutional Law, and the Jurisprudence of the United States. The Law Library consists of about 14,000 volumes, and as new works appear they are added and every effort is made to render it complete.

Instruction is given by oral lectures and expositions, (and by recitations and examinations, in connection with them,) of which there are ten every week. Two Moot Courts are also held in each week, at each of which a cause, previously given out, is argued by four students, and an opinion delivered by the presiding instructor. Rooms and other facilities are also provided for the Club Courts; and an Assembly is held weekly for practice in debate, and acquiring a knowledge of Parliamentary law and proceedings.

Students may enter the school in any stage of their professional studies or mercantile pursuits, and at the commencement of either term, or in the middle, or other part of a term. They are at liberty to select what studies they will pursue according to their view of their own wants and attainments.

The Academical year, which commences on Thursday, six weeks after the third Wednesday in July, is divided into two terms, of twenty weeks each, with a vacation of six weeks at the end of each term.

During the winter vacation, the Library is opened, warmed and lighted, for the use of the members of the school.

Applications for admission, or for Catalogues, or any further information, may be made to either of the Professors at Cambridge. June 8-1y.

Law Department, University of Pennsylvania.

A Term will commence on Wednesday October 1st. Introductory lectures will be delivered by Professor Sharwood, on Wednesday, October 1; by Professor McCall, on Thursday, October 2; and by Professor Miller, on Friday, October 3, at 8 o'clock in the evening, at the lecture-room of the University. sep. 5-4.

GREAT FIRE, MAY 1, 1866.

HERRING'S PATENT CHAMPION SAFES!

What the People Say! BIRMINGHAM, 2d May, 1866. MESSRS. FARRELS & HERRING.—GENTLEMEN—The Herring's Patent Champion Fire-Proof Safe, which we purchased of you in the month of January last, was situated in our Counting-Room, in the second story of 231 Market Street, on the night of the Great Fire, in May, 1866, and was with the burning building in that neighbourhood.

The safe was reached this afternoon, after an exposure of thirty-six hours to intense heat, and although the brass plates on the front of the safe were melted, and the exterior shows the evidence of extreme heat, the inside casing was found to be unimpaired in form, and with the exception of being a little stained is now as good as new. EDW. BIRMAN & CO.

MESSRS. FARRELS & HERRING.—GENTLEMEN—The Herring's Patent Champion Fire-Proof Safe, of your manufacture, which we purchased nearly a year since, was in the centre of our building at the time of its destruction in the Great Fire of May 1, 1866. We had removed the greater portion of our books before the fire reached us, but left some of them, together with a number of loose papers, inside, purposely to test the security of the safe. After thirty-six hours of severe roasting, we found the interior of the safe, upon opening, not only bright and sound, but the books and papers as free from fire as when first put in. We shall require another safe as soon as we get a new location, and want none but your "Champion." Yours, &c., REMOND & BROTHER, No. 16 North Sixth Street.

The public will bear in mind that the "HERRING'S PATENT" is the only safe made in this City, which has never failed to preserve its contents in accidental fires. The TWO SAFES from the above Great Fire can now be seen in front of the OLD STAND, No. 24 WALNUT STREET. FARRELS & HERRING, CHAMPION SAFES!

Only Makers in this State of HERRING'S PATENT CHAMPION SAFES! MAY 5

A NEW FEATURE.

A portion of our columns under an appropriate heading, will in future be devoted to the publication of notes of all the Decisions of the Courts of this country as well as Europe, in cases involving the liabilities and rights of Banks, Insurance and Railroad Companies, and other Corporations and their Stockholders, and important heads of Commercial Law, as Partnership, Agency, Carriers, Insurance, &c., &c.

The frequent issue of our publication will enable us to keep our subscribers fully posted as to Legislative and Judicial action on these subjects, by the publication of all Laws and Decisions, at the earliest moment after their promulgation. The obviously great advantage which this recueil in this form will afford the officers and stockholders in all their corporations, as well as the business community throughout the Union, will, we hope, induce an extensive addition to our subscription list among them.

It will also furnish the professors of the law in other States, additional reasons for availing themselves of the great advantages offered to them by this publication, which experience alone can enable them fully to appreciate.

NEW YORK COURT OF APPEALS.

THE MECHANICS' BANK vs. THE NEW YORK AND NEW HAVEN RAILROAD COMPANY.

Corporation—Transfer agent—Spurious stock—Certificate whether negotiable.

This case was originally brought in the Superior Court of the City of New York, and was founded on an alleged contract by the defendants to transfer to the plaintiffs eighty-five shares in the capital stock of the defendant's company. The facts were these: Alexander Kyle, on the 13th of May, 1854, borrowed twelve thousand dollars of the plaintiffs, and gave his stock note therefor, as follows:

$12,000. New York, May 13, 1854.

On demand, I promise to pay to F. W. Edmonds, cashier, or order, twelve thousand dollars for value received, with interest at the rate of seven per cent per annum, having deposited with him as collateral security, with authority to sell the same at the Brokers' Board, or at public or private sale, or otherwise, at his option, on the non-performance of this promise, and without notice, one hundred and ten shares Harlem Preferred Stock, and eighty-five shares New Haven R. R. Stock, as per certificates.

ALEX. KYLE.

New Haven, 4574. } Sold.
Harlem Pref., 1681. } Nos.

Kyle, at the same time, produced to the cashier a certificate of stock in defendants' company, as follows:

New York and New Haven R. R. Company.
No. 4574.

Capital, $3,000,000. N. Y. Office. Shares $100 each.

Be it known, that Alexander Kyle, of New York, is entitled to eighty-five shares of the capital stock of the New York and New Haven Railroad Company, transferable on the books of the Company, at its office in the City of New York, by the said Alexander Kyle or his attorney, on the surrender of this certificate.

ROBERT SCHUYLER, Transfer Agent.

He also executed and delivered to the plaintiffs a transfer under his hand and seal, purporting to convey eighty-five shares of this stock to them, and making them his attorneys, &c., in the usual form. Kyle owned no shares in the defendants' company, and the certificate, though in due form, and under the hand of the proper officer, was fraudulent and spurious. It was given to Kyle by Schuyler, for the purpose of raising money for Schuyler's use, and the money borrowed of the plaintiffs was so applied.

The company was incorporated by the laws of Connecticut, with authority to create a capital of three millions of dollars, in shares of one hundred dollars each, which it had done, and these shares were at this time all outstanding, and in the possession of bona fide owners. It was also authorized to make by-laws regulating the transfer of stock; had passed such by-laws requiring transfers to be made on the books of the company. Schuyler, who was their transfer agent in New York, had issued spurious certificates for stock to the nominal amount of two millions of dollars, and had raised money on these certificates, which he had applied to his own use. The directors of the company were not aware of these frauds until the 5th of July, 1854, when Schuyler absconded, and left a letter directing their attention to the stock ledger of the company. They then immediately closed their transfer books.

Soon after this the plaintiffs demanded to have eighty-five shares of the stock transferred to them by virtue of the certificate and transfer received from Kyle, but were refused, on the ground that the transfer books were closed, and also that the certificate was not genuine.

At a general term of the Superior Court, held in April and May, 1855, before Oakley, C. J., Campbell, Bosworth, Hoffman, and Slosson, JJ., the Court (Campbell, J., dissentiente), gave judgment for the plaintiffs. The grounds of the decision were substantially as follows:

1. That the act of Schuyler, in issuing the certificate relied on by the plaintiffs, was an act within the scope of his authority, and therefore binding on the defendants, as much as if done by themselves; and even if it were admitted that the defendants themselves could not lawfully issue new shares, and thus in effect increase their capital stock, (a point upon which the majority of the court did not entirely agree,) yet they would be liable in damages for not issuing such stock to one to whom they had promised to issue it.

2. That Schuyler, being employed by the company to certify to the ownership of stock, they must be considered to certify to the genuineness of all certificates issued by him, and in the hands of persons who took them in good faith, and in the ordinary course of business.

The defendants took the case to this court, where it was argued at the March Term, 1856, by William Curtis Noyes, and George Wood, (with whom was Nicholas Hill, Jr.,) for the defendants, the appellants, and by E. S. Van Winkle, and Daniel Lord, for the plaintiffs. On the 17th June, 1856, Comstock, J., delivered the unanimous opinion of the Court, consisting, besides himself, of Denio, C. J., Johnson, Wright, Mitchell, and Hubbard, JJ., reversing the decision of the Superior Court. The decision does not rely much upon the point, that the company themselves could not issue new stock, but mainly and substantially upon the following:

First. That the certificate was void in the hands of Kyle.

1. Because it was fraudulently issued, with the participation of Kyle.

2. Because Schuyler exceeded his authority in issuing a new certificate without the surrender and cancellation of the old one, as required by the by-laws. Of these by-laws, a person dealing with Schuyler would be presumed to have notice, especially as the mode of transfer is mentioned upon the certificate itself. He also exceeded his authority in undertaking to create new stock, or to certify to stock which did not exist. Schuyler's power was conditional, and the condition was not performed. If one were authorized to give notes, for the purpose of raising money for his principal, and should give the notes, and then convert the money thus raised to his own use, the principal would be bound, because the act of giving the notes was authorized, and was lawful, and could not be rendered void by the subsequent conduct of the agent; so if an express power, be annexed conditions not communicated to the other party, and the express power is followed. But if the power be on its face dependent on contingencies which have not occurred, or on conditions which have not been performed, the act is merely void. In this respect the case is entirely analogous to one which has been settled in England, after much argument, of a bill of lading given by the master of a vessel when no goods have been in fact laden on board; in which it has been held, that even in the hands of an innocent holder, for value, no action can be maintained on the bill of lading against the owners of the ship. The distinction between general and special agents is not very satisfactory. The true doctrine is, that an agent can only do what he is authorized to do, and the apparent exception, namely, where the principal has permitted the agent to exceed his authority in previous similar instances, is rather an instance of a legal presumption; the law inferring authority against one who has permitted the deception. There is no such element in this case. Here the defendants can be held liable only on the ground that every principal guarantees the character of his agent, which cannot be admitted.

Second. If void in the hands of Kyle, the certificate was void also in those of the plaintiffs. A certificate of stock in a corporate company is not, in the sense of the commercial law, a negotiable instrument, it is neither a security for money, nor a letter of credit, and is not intended to be anything more than a muniment or evidence of title to property, and of course, a purchaser takes it with all equities to which it is subject in the hands of the former holder.

SUPREME JUDICIAL COURT OF NEW HAMPSHIRE.

JUNE TERM, 1856.—ROCKINGHAM.

PIBBCE vs. EMERY.

Railroad Bonds—Mortgages by Railroads to individuals—Mortgages to trustees for benefit of bond-holders.

As a general rule, nothing can be mortgaged, that does not at the time, belong to the mortgagor.

An act of the legislature of New Hampshire gave the Portsmouth and Concord Railroad Company power to issue bonds for $350,000, and to make a mortgage to trustees for the security of those who should become bond-holders, "of the whole or a part of the real or personal estate of the corporation," and by the mortgage to give the trustees authority to sell "the real and personal estate, and all the rights, franchises, powers and privileges, named in the mortgage deed, or any part thereof;" and further provided that the deed of the trustees, on a sale by them, should convey to the purchasers, "all the real and personal estate named in said mortgage deed, together with all the rights, franchises, powers and privileges in relation to the same," which the corporation had at the time of the mortgage, and that the purchasers should thereby acquire "all the rights, franchises, powers and privileges which said corporation possessed, and the use of said railroad, with all its property and rights of property, for the same purposes and to the same extent that the said corporation could use the same, if said deed had not been made, subject to the same liabilities as to the use of said railroad, that said corporation would be under, if said deed had not been made;" that the directors should have power, notwithstanding the mortgage, to sell and dispose of any of the personal property of said corporation, provided they should purchase with the proceeds thereof, other property to an equal amount, which should be held by the trustees under the mortgage, in the same manner as if the same had been owned by the corporation at the time of the execution of the mortgage, and specifically included therein. The directors made a mortgage to trustees, appointed under the act, conveying "the railroad of said corporation, together with all its rights, powers, franchises and privileges; with all the lands, buildings and fixtures thereto belonging, or which may hereafter thereto belong, with all the rights, franchises, powers and privileges now belonging to, and held, or which may hereafter belong to or be held by said corporation; and all the personal property of said corporation, as the same now is in use by said corporation, or as the same may be hereafter changed and renewed by said corporation;" and the mortgage, on certain contingencies, gave the trustees power to sell the road under the mortgage, by a deed that should pass to the purchasers "all the property, real, personal and mixed, rights, powers, franchises and privileges of this corporation."

Held, that the act authorized the directors to make a mortgage, not only of the existing property of the road, but of the corporate rights and franchise, and of the railroad itself as an entire thing.

That the trustees under such a mortgage would hold subsequently acquired property, as an incident to the franchise mortgaged, and as an accession to the subject of the mortgage.

That the trustees under the mortgage in this case were entitled to hold personal property, acquired by the road after the mortgage, against subsequent mortgages of the specific property so acquired.

The railroad, before the mortgages to the trustees, owned a cargo of railroad iron, subject to the lien of the United States for duties, and agreed with the plaintiffs that they might pay the duties; that the railroad might lay the iron on their track, and that the plaintiffs, if the road did not repay them the money advanced for duties within a specified time, might take up the iron and hold it for security for the money advanced.

Held, that the iron having passed according to this bargain, into the possession of the road, the lien for the duties was gone, and could not be asserted by the plaintiffs against the mortgage to the trustees; but that the contract was valid between the parties to it; and that if the trustees had notice of it, and assented, at the time when they took their mortgage, the contract would be binding in equity on the trustees, and on those who subsequently became bond-holders.

HAVEN vs. EMERY.

Railroad mortgage—Special contract.

The plaintiffs owned a quantity of railroad iron, and it was agreed between them and the Portsmouth and Concord Railroad Company, that the rails should be delivered to the road, and laid separate from other iron in a particular part of the road; that upon payment within a time limited, of a stipulated price, the iron rails should become the property of the road, and until such payment, should remain the property of the plaintiffs.

Held, that the iron having been delivered and laid in the track under this bargain, did not become the property of the railroad until the price was paid; and that the price remaining unpaid, the plaintiffs were entitled to hold the iron against subsequent mortgages of the road, who had notice of the plaintiffs' interest at the time when they took their mortgage.

MOSES v. BOSTON AND MAINE RAILROAD COMPANY.

Liability of railroads as common carriers of goods.

The liability of railroad corporations as common carriers, for goods transported upon their railroads, continues until the goods are ready to be delivered at their place of destination, and the owner or consignee has had a reasonable opportunity during the hours when such goods are there usually delivered, of examining them, so far as to judge from their outward appearance, whether they are in proper condition, and to take them away. Such reasonable opportunity is not, however, to have reference to the peculiar situation and circumstances of the owner or consignee, but is to be such as would give to a person residing in the vicinity of the depot or place of delivery, and informed of the usual course of proceedings on the part of the servants of the corporation, in unloading the cars and delivering out goods of that character, and also informed of the time when the goods may be expected to arrive, suitable opportunity within the usual business hours for delivering such goods after they have been placed in readiness for delivery, to come to the depot or place of delivery, inspect the goods, and take them away.

Ten bags of wool, delivered by the plaintiff to the defendants, at Exeter, in this State, to be transported to Boston, and there delivered to a consignee, were carried over the defendants' railroad in a train of cars, which arrived at their freight house in Boston, between one and three o'clock in the afternoon. In the usual course of business, from two to three hours were required to unload the freight from this train of cars into the warehouse, and the gates were closed at five o'clock, so that no goods could be removed from the warehouse after that hour, until the next morning. During the night, the warehouse and most of its contents, including the wool, were consumed by fire.

Held, that, upon these facts, the jury were warranted in finding that the consignee had not a reasonable opportunity to take the wool into his possession before the fire; and that the defendants were liable, as common carriers therefor, notwithstanding it might be proved by them that before the fire, the wool had been placed upon the platform in the warehouse, from which such goods were usually delivered, separate from other goods, and ready for delivery.

The common law liability of common carriers cannot be limited by a mere notice, brought home to the knowledge of the owner of the goods.

INSURANCE.

BLANCHARD v. ATLANTIC MUTUAL FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY.

Party to bring suit—Double insurance—By-laws suspending risk during non-payment of assessment.

The defendants issued a policy of insurance to one Gates, on property of his, he giving a premium note to pay such assessments as should be made against the policy; the insurance, however, in case of loss, was made payable to the plaintiff, Blanchard. The charter contained a provision, that in case of double insurance, the policy should be void, unless consent was given, signed by the president and secretary. A by-law also provided that if the insured should, for the space of ten days, neglect, when personally called on, to pay any assessment, the risk on the policy would be suspended till the same should be paid.

Held, 1. That the action should have been brought in the name of Gates, he being the member of the company. 2. That, it appearing that there was a double insurance on the property, a previous policy having been taken out from another office, this policy was void. 3. That the by-law was constitutional; that the policy was inoperative if the terms of the by-law were not complied with; and that if the property was destroyed during the suspension of the policy, the insurance could not be recovered.

TUTTLE, Administrator, Appellant, vs. ROBINSON, Appellee.

Lien of insurance companies for assessments.

Where by the charter of an insurance company, the issuing of a policy creates a lien upon the property insured, it is the duty of the administrator of the insured to remove the lien, by paying the assessments for losses, if there are sufficient assets for that purpose; such lien constituting a legal incumbrance upon the estate.

PARTNERSHIP.

FELLOWS vs. WYMANN.

Power of partners after dissolution of partnership.

After the dissolution of a partnership, one partner cannot, without authority from the other, endorse a note or bill belonging to the firm, and payable to them or order.

If one partner after dissolution, without consideration, fraudulently release or discharge a promissory note belonging to the partners and payable to them or order, the fraud will not authorize the other partner to endorse the note without recourse in the name of the firm, and if he undertake to endorse it, an action cannot be maintained on it in the name of the endorser.

CROCKETT vs CRAIN.

Rights of separate creditors of partners.

The separate creditors of a partner have a prior claim upon the separate estate of their debtor, for the satisfaction of their debts.

Where a partnership creditor attached the separate estate of one of the partners, being an equity of redemption of certain real estate, and before the entry of the action the partner was declared a bankrupt, and his assignee subsequently sold the property attached, and applied the avails to the payment of his separate debts, under the order of the District Court:—

Held, that the purchaser at the assignee's sale would hold the property as against the attaching creditor.

SIBLEY vs. ALDRICH.

Liability of innkeepers for damage to goods of their guests.

An inn-keeper is liable for damage happening in his inn to the goods of his guests; unless it is caused by the act of God, or the public enemy; or by the fault, direct or indirect, of the guest. To discharge the inn-keeper, it is not enough to show that the damage did not happen through his actual negligence, or that of his servants.

BEAVINS' PETITION.

Naturalization laws—Jurisdiction of Congress and of the State Legislatures.

Under the Constitution of the United States, every State is competent and has the exclusive right to prescribe the remedies and limit the time as well as mode of redress, in its own judicial tribunals, and to deny to them jurisdiction over cases, which its own policy or institutions prohibit or discountenance.

Exclusive jurisdiction over the subject of the naturalization of foreigners, is vested in Congress, with full power to constitute all necessary tribunals, and make and establish all laws and regulations requisite and proper for the exercise of that jurisdiction; there is, consequently, no implied obligation on the ground of convenience or efficiency, on the part of the States, to furnish tribunals or enact laws to aid in the administration of a system of naturalization, which it is the exclusive privilege and appropriate duty of the national government to establish and enforce.

A law of New Hampshire, prohibiting all State tribunals, except the Court of Common Pleas, from holding or exercising any jurisdiction in the administration of the naturalization laws of Congress, is not unconstitutional.

"The Bank of North America," a corporation established in the City of Philadelphia, with banking and discounting privileges, and whose specific object is the exercise of those privileges, intend to make application to the Legislature of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania at the next session thereof, for an increase of the amount of the capital of the said Bank, being now one million of dollars by the sum of one million of dollars, so as to make its capital two millions of dollars: its location and specific object to be as heretofore.

By order of the Board of Directors of the Bank of North America.

J. HOCKLEY, Cashier
June 27-6mo.—t. ja. 7. June 26th, 1856.

Singular Wager.—Two pansters of our acquaintance, the other day laid a wager of a new suit of clothes that a pun could not be made upon the following words—di, do, dum; when, after a little consideration, the following was produced: "When Dido found that Aeneas did not come, She mourned in silence, and was Di-do-dum," (dumb.)

An order was instantly given on Granville Stokes, No. 209 Chestnut street.

THE LAW SCHOOL OF THE UNIVERSITY OF PENNSYLVANIA.

We have watched with silent attention the course of this establishment since its reorganisation a few years ago. It was trumpeted with no proclamations or eulogies, nor was an effort made to have it so much as cordially greeted. Its formation, under new auspices, was simply announced, and the names of the faculty—SHARSWOOD, McCALL, MILLER—given to the public. This same dignified course has been observed ever since. But the great eye of the public and of the profession seldom sleeps. It is difficult long to impose upon either public or profession by any of the unworthy arts; and however slow unobtruded merit may be in securing a public recognition, it is sure to win its way at last, and when it has achieved its honors to retain and to augment them.

The Law School of the University of Pennsylvania is now well known. It is a well conducted, firmly fixed and most useful institution of the Commonwealth and city. In numbers it would probably rank only after Harvard. In utility, within its sphere of action, it is behind no institution whatever. We have not heretofore commended it, because we desired to see if it was so well organized and conducted that it could work its own way. We commend it now because it has worked its own way. It has been tried. It has commended itself; and it is commended by all who have either witnessed its course or been partakers of its benefits.

As will be seen, by a card in our advertising columns, a new term begins on the 1st of October instant. Of course every student of law, not yet admitted, will attend its lectures. Of course every lawyer, having students, will inculcate upon each one of them an early and constant attendance upon lectures so eminently useful, both to himself and to them. All this we say is, of course. We have understood from those who have belonged to the Board of Examiners that they seldom or never have found the pupils of the Law School unqualified for the examinations of the Board.

But besides enforcing it as a necessity upon the student of law, we do well, we are sure, in recommending the younger portion of the bar, generally, to attend a course from which even the best instructed of them will derive advantage. The halls of our Medical College number, every year, scores of persons who have long since received their degrees, but who resort with pleasure and with profit to these seats for further instruction, or for deepening that which they have already received. Our younger merchants too, should attend such lectures. Some knowledge of law is necessary to the merchant in almost every transaction of business, and while it is neither expected nor possible that the merchant should be a finished lawyer, our men of commerce can yet learn much that will be of profit to them in nearly every negotiation of importance. The mercantile class of young men was abundantly able, we believe, to comprehend and to enjoy the lectures of Judge Sharswood, delivered lately before their large and honorable assembly at Mr. Crittenden's; and the lectures at the University by the other professors, though on different subjects, would be neither less instructive nor less practically useful. Our citizens generally, who have leisure and who aspire to cultivation or to usefulness, would find themselves much rewarded by following, for a term, these instructions so well conceived and so admirably delivered. "The character of the simplest individual in a republic," says the elder of the Mirabeaus, "is as important as that of a Minister of State in a monarchy." We are all called upon to take care of our own rights, and to improve our own property. We are all voters, we are all jurors, we are all legislators, and the judges of legislators. In times like these, especially, we are all called upon, and called upon almost hourly to read, to reflect, and in some way to act upon public matters which require, if we are to act wisely and with credit, that to some extent we should read, and reflect and act, with legal comprehension and intelligence. It would be well indeed if every young man in our city would attend such lectures as he will hear in these halls, upon the Constitution of his country and the duties of those who live under its protection.

We should be glad to see our editorial brethren of the press, generally, bring the subject of this school—so honorable to our city—before all their readers with the emphasis and warmth of eulogy which it inspires and justifies.

LEGAL INTELLIGENCER FROM VOL. 7 TO VOL. 12.

The frequent applications we have received of late from our subscribers for the back volumes of our paper, and the fact that very few copies exist entire, has induced us to republish all the cases reported in vol. 7 to 12 of the Legal Intelligencer, with a view to supply this demand. There are many cases of value scattered through these volumes, and many contained in them have been reported in books of Reports. Wherever that is the case we have omitted them, so that our volume, if we shall be thus enabled to compress it into one volume, will contain only such cases as are not elsewhere reported. We proposed at first to republish in a quarto, like the present Intelligencer, so that the reprint would form a volume similar to the present, divested of the advertisements and obsolete matter. But deferring to the wish of many gentlemen, desirous to possess the work, we have concluded to publish in octavo, the usual form of Law Reports.

This will enable our present and future subscribers to supply themselves with all the valuable part of the past volumes at an expense greatly below the cost of the original, and in more desirable form. Gentlemen who desire a copy will please furnish us with their names; the work will be ready for delivery before the commencement of the next volume.

STOCK LIST.

Our subscribers will notice in another column, a list of stocks, loans, and securities, sold at the Philadelphia Stock Exchange, with the prices, &c., &c., furnished by Messrs. Work, Young & McCouch, Brokers, No. 24 South Third street, by whom it will be corrected and continued weekly.

SERGEANT'S MECHANICS' LIEN LAW, BY E. SPENCER MILLER.

A Treatise on the Lien of Mechanics' and material Men in Pennsylvania, &c., &c.

By HENRY J. SERGEANT, Esq.

Second edition by E. Spencer Miller, Esq.

KAY & BROTHNER, Philadelphia.

The great changes which constant legislative tinkering and variant judicial construction had produced in the Lien law, since the former edition of this work appeared, had made a revision of the subject a desideratum to all practising lawyers. This was more necessary because of the unsettled and unsatisfactory condition of this law in regard to many of its most important topics. The present edition presents the Lien Law of Pennsylvania clearly and accurately as it now exists and is administered—and the work must prove of great utility not only to the Bar, to whom it will save a great amount of labor, but to all builders, material men and mechanics. To whom we would commend the suggestions of the learned editor, in which we entirely concur. We have long felt convinced that the Law itself was a great disadvantage to the persons whose interest it was professedly enacted to protect, and that its entire repeal would prove of great service to them.

THE LAW REPORTER FOR SEPTEMBER.

We are indebted to this valuable Journal for the valuable and interesting notes of cases under our new Head of Corporation and Mercantile Law.

The proposed change of plan of publication, by furnishing the substance of the Decisions of the Courts of New England and New York, in advance of the Reports; cannot fail we should think to add greatly to the value of the "Reporter," and make it indispensable to Lawyers in those States, and none the less valuable to those in other States. In our opinion the full benefit of the Periodical Form of publication have not heretofore been rightly appreciated by the Bar. The great advantages of the early information of the Decisions of the Courts thus afforded, should induce a very extensive increase of Subscription.

MR. EDITOR:—

The enclosed copy of an Act of Parliament recently passed, may be of some interest to the profession, inasmuch as it provides a remedy for an inconvenience hitherto seriously felt by suitors in foreign tribunals, viz.:—the absence of authority to compel the examination of witnesses in England, in cases pending in other countries. M. R. T.

An Act to provide for taking Evidence in Her Majesty's Dominions, in relation to Civil and Commercial matters pending before Foreign Tribunals. [29th July, 1856.]

Whereas, it is expedient that Facilities be afforded for taking Evidence in Her Majesty's Dominions, in relation to Civil and Commercial matters pending before Foreign Tribunals: Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

I. Where, upon an application for this purpose, it is made to appear to any Court or Judge having authority under this Act, that any Court or Tribunal of Competent Jurisdiction in a Foreign Country, before which any Civil or Commercial Matter is pending, is desirous of obtaining the Testimony in relation to such Matter, of any Witness or Witnesses within the Jurisdiction of such first-mentioned Court, or of the Court to which such Judge belongs, or of such Judge, it shall be lawful for such Court or Judge to order the Examination upon Oath, upon Interrogatories or otherwise, before any Person or Persons named in such Order, of such Witness or Witnesses accordingly; and it shall be lawful for the said Court or Judge, by the same Order, or for such Court or Judge or any other Judge having Authority under this Act, by any subsequent Order, to command the attendance of any Person to be named in such Order, for the Purpose of being examined, or the Production of any Writings or other Documents to be mentioned in such Order, and to give all such Directions as to the Time, Place, and Manner of such Examination, and all other Matters connected therewith, as may appear reasonable and just; and any such Order may be enforced in like Manner as an Order made by such Court or Judge in a Cause depending in such Court or before such Judge.

II. A Certificate under the Hand of the Ambassador, Minister, or other Diplomatic Agent of any Foreign Power, received as such by Her Majesty, or in case there be no such Diplomatic Agent, then of the Consul General, or Consul of any such Foreign Power at London, received and admitted as such by Her Majesty, that any Matter in relation to which an Application is made under this Act is a Civil or Commercial Matter pending before a Court or Tribunal in the Country of which he is the Diplomatic Agent or Consul having Jurisdiction in the Matter so pending, and that such Court or Tribunal is desirous of obtaining the Testimony of the Witness or Witnesses to whom the application relates, shall be Evidence of the Matters so certified; but where no such Certificate is produced, other Evidence to that effect shall be admissible.

III. It shall be lawful for every Person authorized to take the Examination of Witnesses by any Order made in pursuance of this Act, to take all such Examinations upon the Oath of the Witnesses, or Affirmation, in Cases where Affirmation is allowed by Law instead of Oath, to be administered by the person so authorized; and if upon such Oath or Affirmation any Person making the same, wilfully and corruptly give any false Evidence, every Person so offending shall be deemed and taken to be guilty of Perjury.

IV. Provided always, That every person whose Attendance shall be so required, shall be entitled to the like Conduct Money, and Payment for Expenses and Loss of time, as upon Attendance at a Trial.

V. Provided also, That every Person examined under any Order made under this Act shall have the like Right to refuse to answer Questions tending to criminate himself, and other Questions, which a Witness in any Cause pending in the Court by which, or by a Judge whereof, or before the Judge by whom the Order for Examination was made would be entitled to; and that no Person shall be compelled to produce under any such Order as aforesaid, any Writing or other Document that he would not be compellable to produce at a Trial of such a Cause.

VI. Her Majesty's Superior Courts of Common Law at Westminster and in Dublin respectively, the Court of Session in Scotland, and any Supreme Court in any of Her Majesty's Colonies or Possessions abroad, and any Judge of any such Court, and every Judge in any such Colony or Possession, who by any Order of Her Majesty in Council may be appointed for this Purpose, shall respectively be Courts and Judges having Authority under this Act: Provided, that the Lord Chancellor, with the Assistance of Two of the Judges of the Courts of Common Law at Westminster, shall frame such Rules and Orders as shall be necessary or proper for giving Effect to the Provisions of this Act, and regulating the Procedure under the same.

Sept. 19th, 1856.

On motion of Geo. M. Wharton, Esq., Mr. J. LEDYARD HODGE was admitted to practice as an Attorney at Law, in the Supreme Court, for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania.

Opinions by Judge Hare.

RAND vs. LEEDS.

Mechanics' Lien—Sub contractor.

This is a scire facias on a mechanics' lien against Harlan, owner, and Leeds, contractor. Harlan is the owner of a house, which was built by Singlerly under a contract for the whole building. Singlerly employed Leeds to put up a furnace, with hot air tubes leading from it, on a new plan, as a substitute for those ordinarily in use; with a proviso, that if the plan did not succeed, Leeds should receive nothing for his materials or labor. The plaintiff, Rand, furnished the tubes and put them in their places. The whole plan proved abortive, and the tubes were removed; Leeds is entitled to no compensation; and the question is whether Rand, who claims through him, stands in a better position, and has a right, paramount to that of the person who employed him, and incapable of being affected by his default or failure.

Had this question been asked at common law, it could have had but one answer; Rand would have had no claim whatever against Singlerly or Harlan, not even that of Leeds, and must have looked solely to his immediate superior for remuneration. But the intervention of the Mechanics' Lien Act, has abrogated these ancient principles, and introduced an entirely new set of relations, between the doers of work and those for whose benefit it is done; contractors have acquired the power of agents, so far as it regards the building for which they contract; and the burden of their default or breach of obligation, has been thrown in great measure on those who employ them, in exonerating of those whom they employ. Hence the question in a scire facias or a mechanics' lien has become, not whether the contractor could recover against the owner, but whether the plaintiff is entitled to recover against the contractor, for if so, no defence merely between the contractor and owner, can be set up as a defence by the owner. Tried by this test the title of Rand is unquestionable, for he executed the task entrusted to him by Leeds with fidelity and skill, and has a right to charge the building which Leeds represented, with the full amount of his services, irrespective of, and paramount to the right of Leeds. It matters not that Leeds was to receive nothing unless his work gave satisfaction, for there would be an end of the mechanics' lien law as now administered, if such conditions were held to extend beyond the contractor. Every contract to erect a building for a fixed sum, contains an implied condition, that nothing more shall be demanded, and that the sum, thus stipulated, shall not be paid unless the work is well and faithfully performed, and yet every day presents instances of judgments on mechanics' liens, far exceeding the amount of the contract, and notwithstanding the existence of gross violations of duty on the part of the contractor. This construction of the law, may be said to be at variance with justice, but has been adopted from necessity, for otherwise a skilful draftsman, might easily defeat the object which the legislature had in view, in all cases, as effectually as it has been frustrated in a particular class of instances by bonus mortgages and ground rents.

I have treated the question hitherto, as if Leeds had been the contractor for the whole, instead of being as he really was, a sub-contractor for part of the building, but I am saved the necessity of examining this point, by a recent decision of this court, in which we held, following the lead of the Supreme Court, that a sub-contractor has the same power to bind the building, as the contractor who employs him; or to state the law in the concrete instead of the abstract, that a brick maker, who furnishes bricks for a house, will have the same right of lien, whether they are ordered by the carpenter, who has contracted for the whole building, or by the bricklayer whom the carpenter has employed to erect the walls. Nice distinctions may no doubt be suggested, between one sub-contractor and another, and laws which press hard and subvert natural relations, are necessarily fruitful of nice distinctions; but the hardest laws are best mitigated by a plain and obvious construction, which enables all men to know where they stand; the mildest may be rendered hard by too much subtlety and refinement, and I can see no safe ground between limiting the power of charging the land, to the person who has the task of erecting the whole building, and extending it to every one, who is entrusted with the erection of any part of it. The motion for a new trial is consequently refused, and judgment entered for the plaintiff on the points reserved.

BROWN vs. TEES.

The cases of Cooper vs. Berkham, Campbell vs. Supplee, Sprague vs. Destouets, Darlington vs. Dickens, and Zepp vs. Matlack, present no points of law, which require notice, and were for the most part equally plain in

Sheriff's Sales.

Abstract of Properties to be sold by Geo. McGee, Esq., Sheriff, on Monday, October 6th, at Sansom Street Hall, at 4 o'clock, P. M.

EXPLANATION.

S. C. Supreme Court.
S. T. September Term.
Ven. Ex. Venditioni Exponas.
Lev. fa. Levari facias.

Conditions of Sale.

Fifty dollars of the price or sum at which the property shall be struck off, shall be paid to the Sheriff at the time of sale, unless the purchase money shall be less than that sum, in which case only the purchase money shall be paid.

Otherwise the property will again be immediately put up, and sold. The balance of the purchase money must be paid to the Sheriff, at his office within ten days from the time of sale, without any demand being made by the Sheriff, therefor. Otherwise the property may be sold again at the expense and risk of the person to whom it is struck off, who, in case of any deficiency at such re-sale, shall make good the same. Arrears of Ground Rent and taxes, if any, will be paid out of the purchase money, if the bills are presented to the Sheriff before he parts with the money; otherwise they will be paid by the purchaser.

A NEW FEATURE.

A portion of our columns under an appropriate heading, will in future be devoted to the publication of notes of all the Decisions of the Courts of this country as well as Europe, in cases involving the liabilities and rights of Banks, Insurance and Railroad Companies, and other Corporations and their Stockholders, and important heads of Commercial Law, as Partnership, Agency, Carriers, Insurance, &c., &c.

The frequent issue of our publication will enable us to keep our subscribers fully posted as to Legislative and Judicial action on these subjects, by the publication of all Laws and Decisions, at the earliest moment after their promulgation. The obviously great advantage which this recueil in this form will afford the officers and stockholders in all their corporations, as well as the business community throughout the Union, will, we hope, induce an extensive addition to our subscription list among them.

It will also furnish the professors of the law in other States, additional reasons for availing themselves of the great advantages offered to them by this publication, which experience alone can enable them fully to appreciate.

Godts v. Rose.

Trover—Delivery of Goods by Transfer in Wharfinger's Books—Written Contract, Construction of—Evidence to explain.

The action—trover—was tried before Jarvis, C. J., at the Sittings for London after last Trinity term, when it appeared that the plaintiff, a commission merchant, on the 12th of March, 1855, sold to the defendant, an oil and color merchant, through Soanes & Son, brokers, acting on behalf of both the plaintiff and defendant, five tons of foreign rape oil, on the following contract:—

“London, March 12, 1855.

“Bought for account of Mr. W. A. Rose, of U. A. Godts, five tons of first quality foreign refined rape oil, at 58s. per cwt., usual allowances. To be free delivered and paid for in fourteen days by cash, less 2l. 10s., per cent. discount.

Signed, GEO. SOANES & SON, Broker.

The plaintiff, on receipt of the sold note from the brokers, gave to the wharfinger, Humphrey, at whose wharf he had some oil, the following transfer order:—

“No. 1122. London, March 13, 1855.

“To the Superintendent of Hibernia Wharf. “Please transfer to the order of W. A. Rose, Esq., ex Neptune, from Havre, entered with charges, from mark Nos. 46, 56, eleven pipes refined rape oil.

Signed, “U. A. GODTS.”

The wharfinger thereupon gave the plaintiff the following notice of transfer, directed to the defendant:

“Hibernia wharf, Southwark, 18 March, 1855.

“Mr. W. A. Rose.

“Sir,—I have received an order from U. A. Godts, for 46, 56, eleven casks rape oil, ex Neptune, from Havre, which are transferred to your name.

Signed, “FOR JOHN HUMPHREY, “T. N. SAMPHSON.

The plaintiff's clerk immediately went with this notice of transfer to the defendant's counting-house and delivered it to the defendant's clerk, together with an invoice of the oils, and demanded a check in payment; this was refused by the defendant's clerk, on the ground that the plaintiff was not entitled to be paid until fourteen days after delivery. The plaintiff's clerk then demanded to have the notice of transfer returned to him, but the defendant's clerk refused to do so and retained it, and on the same day sent to the wharfinger, who delivered to the defendant a portion of the oil. Before the whole had been delivered, the plaintiff went to the wharfinger and countermanded the delivery but the latter, being of opinion that the property in the oil had passed to the defendant, delivered the whole to him, whereupon the plaintiff brought this action.

The broker was called as a witness for the plaintiff, and on cross-examination stated that the commercial meaning of the contract was that the seller would have fourteen days to deliver, and the buyer fourteen days to pay after delivery; that it was customary to require payment on delivery, but that such was not the meaning of the contract. On re-examination, however, he stated that the seller may deliver within fourteen days and require payment. The jury found that the plaintiff's clerk did not intend to part with the oil or the notice of transfer without the check, and that he said so at the time. The learned judge directed a nonsuit to be entered, and reserved leave to the plaintiff to move to enter a verdict for 265l.

Byles, Sergt., having obtained a rule nisi accordingly.

Raymond now showed cause. By the contract the property in the oil and the right to the possession passed to the defendant, and he might have seized it anywhere. The contract means that the delivery is to precede payment, as in Staunton v. Wood, 16 Q. B. Rep. 638, s. c. 7 Eng. Rep. 411, and parol evidence was not admissible to explain it.

[Jarvis, C. J. No point as to the admissibility of such evidence was made at the trial, and it was the defendant's counsel who cross-examined the plaintiff's witness as to the meaning of the contract. The result of that evidence was, that delivery and payment were to be concurrent acts within fourteen days.]

The contract speaks for itself, and it is similar to that in Spartali v. Benecke, 10 Com. B. Rep. 212, where the plaintiff sold wool to the defendant, “to be paid for by cash in one month, less 5l. per cent. discount,” and the court held that the vendee was entitled to a delivery of the wool within the month without payment of the price. So here the vendee is entitled to a delivery within fourteen days, and the vendor is not entitled to payment until fourteen days after delivery. If, therefore, the defendant was entitled to the possession of the goods before payment, when once he had got possession he was entitled to keep it, and the plaintiff's only remedy would be by action to recover the price. What passed with the wharfinger is, therefore immaterial. But supposing the right of possession did not pass to the defendant by the contract, still, there was a complete delivery of the goods to him, inasmuch as when the plaintiff sent the transfer order to the wharfinger, the latter transferred the oil to the defendant's name, and gave him notice that he had done so. As between vendor and vendee the notice was immaterial, and if a transfer was necessary to pass the property, it was given, and was irrevocable. In Swanwick v. Sothorn, 9 Ad. & E. 895, it was held that if the identity and quantity of the goods are ascertained, the transfer in the books of the wharfinger is sufficient to pass the property in the goods as between buyer and seller; and in this case no point was made at the trial that the sale was not of any specific quantity of oil. If the plaintiff intended to insist on his right to payment before delivery, he ought to have done so before giving the transfer order; but when he had given that, and the wharfinger had acted upon it, it was too late to object to the delivery without payment.

Byles, Sergt., and James, in support of the rule. The property in the oil and the right of possession did not pass by the contract of sale, the contract not being for any specific oil. The vendor might have performed his contract by delivering oil from any of his warehouses, and it cannot be contended that the vendee might have gone to any one of them and seized any five tons answering the description in the contract. The present case is distinguishable from Spartali v. Benecke, for the contract there was silent as to when the goods were to be delivered, but here they are to be “free delivered and paid for in fourteen days by cash,” the time applying as well to the delivery as to the payment, and the vendee was not entitled to delivery without payment. But if there were any doubt as to that, it was cleared up by the parol evidence introduced by the defendant's counsel on cross-examination. As to the other point, there never was a complete delivery so as to preclude the plaintiff from suing in trover. The oil was to be free delivered where the vendee pleased; he was not bound to accept a delivery at the wharfinger's, nor, on the other hand, was the vendor bound to deliver that specific oil at that particular time or place; he therefore appends a condition to the transfer order, that it is not to operate unless the vendee gives a check. The notice to the vendee was not absolute, but conditional; and with the condition the vendee refused to comply, whereupon the plaintiff had a right, which he exercised, to revoke the authority to deliver given to the wharfinger. Until the defendant accepted the delivery to the wharfinger, there was no delivery to bind him; there could be none, therefore, to bind the plaintiff, and the plaintiff could not have sued the defendant if the latter had refused to accept the wharfinger as his agent. Where property is assigned by deed to a trustee for a third party, the deed is revocable until assented to by the cestui que trust—Garrard v. Lord Lauderdale, 8 Sim. 1, and Harland v. Binks, 15 Q. B. Rep. 718. In all the cases in which it has been held that the transfer in the wharfinger's books amounts to a delivery, the vendee has, by taking the transfer order himself to the wharfinger, made the latter his agent. Here, the defendant's option of making the wharfinger his agent was subject to the condition of first giving the plaintiff a check; he refused to comply with that condition, and the wharfinger, therefore, never was his agent.

Jarvis, C. J. I am of opinion that this rule ought to be made absolute. Several objections have been made to the maintenance of this action, but I do not think that any of them are entitled to prevail. It is first said, that parol evidence was not admissible to explain the written contract, but it hardly lies in the mouth of the defendant to make that objection, as it was he himself who extracted the evidence on cross examination of the plaintiff's witness. The result of it was, that the seller may deliver at any time within fourteen days, and at the time of delivery require payment. Then, it is said that such a construction conflicts with the decision of this court in Spartali v. Benecke; but this is not so. The contract in that case was not, as here, that the goods should be free delivered and paid for within a specified time, but that they should be paid for, without saying when they were to be delivered, within a specified time. The court, therefore, in that case decided, as I think rightly, that the buyer was entitled to a delivery of the goods at any reasonable time after the date of the contract, within the time specified; and that the seller was not entitled to payment of the price before the end of that time. But in this case the goods are to be delivered and paid for, that is, each event is to happen in fourteen days. I think, therefore, that the plaintiff's contention is right, and it was supported by the evidence given at the trial, that the seller had fourteen days within which he might deliver, and that he was entitled to call for payment at the period of delivery. If that construction be correct, the second objection made by Mr. Raymond is answered, namely, that the contract itself passed the property in the goods and vested the right to possession in the defendant, for that could not be if by the contract the goods were to be paid for on delivery, as the property could not pass unless payment were made. But it is further said, that this action is not maintainable, inasmuch as there has been a complete delivery. Now, the facts are these: the plaintiff sells to the defendant a certain quantity of oil not ascertained; he has at the time oil lying at the wharfinger's, and on the day following the contract he sends an order to the wharfinger to transfer certain of that oil to the defendant. The wharfinger accordingly makes the transfer in his books to the defendant, and gives the plaintiff's clerk a paper acknowledging the transfer; the clerk goes with this paper to the defendant's counting-house, and demands a check in payment,—this is refused, but the defendant retains possession of the paper, and the jury find that the plaintiff's clerk did not intend to part with the paper without receiving a check. There was, therefore, no intention to pass the property in the paper or the goods without payment; and the question is, whether what was done amounted to a delivery. No doubt, if the vendor had given the vendee the transfer order, and the vendee had taken it to the wharfinger, and the latter had assented to the transfer, that would have bound the vendor. There must be shown to have been that kind of triangular contract adverted to in Williams v. Everett, 14 East, 582, where the agent of the one part becomes by agreement between all three the agent of the other. In this case there has been no such agreement of attornment, the wharfinger made no bargain with the vendee to hold for him, nor did the vendee make any bargain to accept the wharfinger as his agent. The transfer order was given to the vendee only on a condition with which he refused to comply, and there could be, therefore, no such acquiescence as was necessary to change the property in the goods in the hands of the wharfinger. It did not occur to me at the trial that there was the distinction, which has been pointed out by the learned counsel for the plaintiff, between this and the cases where the transfer order has been carried by the vendee to the wharfinger, but I am now of opinion that the nonsuit was wrong, and that the plaintiff is entitled to the verdict.

WILLIAMS, J. I am of the same opinion. It is not necessary for the decision of this case to put a construction upon the sale note; the only question is, whether there was such a delivery as passed the property in the goods. The sale was not of any specific oil, but the plaintiff was at liberty to deliver any oil answering the description of that contracted for, and he accordingly sent an order to the wharfinger to transfer certain oil at his wharf belonging to the plaintiff to the defendant. No doubt, if that order had been handed to the defendant, and he had taken it to the wharfinger, and it had been agreed between them that the latter should hold the oil for the defendant as his agent, there would have been a complete transfer and delivery. All the cases of attornment, as has been pointed out by the Lord Chief Justice, amount to an arrangement between the three parties, by which the agent of the vendor ceases to hold for him, and consents to hold for the vendee. There is no pretence for saying that there was any such arrangement here, for the plaintiff's clerk refused to part with the notice of transfer, except on the condition of having a check, and the notice was in fact detained from him by what amounted to force. The case is the same as if the plaintiff, before any transfer by the wharfinger, had changed his mind, and told the wharfinger not to deliver.

CROWDER, J. I also think that this rule should be made absolute. It is not necessary to put any construction upon the bought and sold notes, for upon the evidence given by a witness on his cross-examination by the defendant's counsel, the contract was understood to be that the delivery and payment were to be concurrent acts within the fourteen days. Then the question is, was there any delivery to the defendant? The plaintiff contends that there was no intention to deliver except on payment, and that under those circumstances the order was given to the wharfinger to transfer. That order in itself did not absolutely bind the goods, nor operate as a delivery. Then, did the wharfinger's transfer in his books operate as a delivery? Until that transfer was accepted by the vendee, there is no authority for saying that it did. But the vendee could only accept the transfer on condition of giving the vendor a check; he refused to do that, and there was, therefore, no binding acceptance by him of the vendor's offer so as to complete the delivery.

WILLES, J. I am of the same opinion, whatever construction may be put upon the contract,—as I do not rely upon the construction of the contract, nor upon the color given to it by the evidence at the trial. If it were necessary to put a construction upon it, I should think that the seller was entitled to payment upon delivery; and I do not say whether the evidence was or was not admissible to explain it. My opinion proceeds upon the ground that the property which the seller had in these goods, at the time of the contract, was never divested. This was not a contract for the sale of specific oil, but of any oil answering a certain description; possibly evidence might have been given to render it a sale of specific oil, by showing that the parties were speaking of some particular oil. But, however that may be, when the contract is for goods not ascertained, the parties have first to agree upon what goods are to be delivered, and the seller may send and the buyer accept any answering the description contracted for. Here, the seller selected eleven pipes lying at the wharfinger's, and sent his clerk to the wharfinger to direct the latter to hold them for the buyer. The wharfinger assented to that arrangement; but as there had been no assent on the part of the buyer. The clerk then went to the buyer, and told him that he might have that oil provided he gave a check in payment. In one sense, the buyer assented to the arrangement; but as he refused to give the check, he did not assent in the sense of making a contract, and there was no complete bargain ad idem for the transfer of this particular oil; and the property, therefore, never passed to the buyer. The law on this subject is to be found in the judgment of Parke, J., in Dixon v. Yates, 5 B. & Al. 813; that in the case of a sale of unascertained goods, until both parties have assented to the appropriation of some particular goods to satisfy the contract, the property in them does not pass. Here, there was no such assent to the appropriation of this particular oil; and, therefore, no property in it ever passed to the defendant.

*Rule absolute.**

* By the common law, a sale of personal property without delivery, is, as between the parties, sufficient to transfer the right of property; but to give the vendee complete dominion, as against a subsequent bond fide purchaser without notice, or an attaching creditor of the vendor, a delivery actual or constructive is necessary. Carter v. Willard, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 1; Parsons v. Dickinson, 11 ib. 854; Tarling v. Baxter, 6 B. & C. 360; Lanfear v. Sumner, 17 Mass. R. 110; Comyn on Contracts, 2d ed. 298; Brown on Sales, 9, 10, 11, 898. By the civil law, delivery is essential to transfer the right of property and perfect the title even as between vendor and vendee. See cases, ubi supra.

What constitutes a delivery where the property is at the time of sale, in the custody of a third person, does not seem to be very definitely settled. The mere taking of an unrecipited bill of parcels, with a delivery order upon the custodian has been held to constitute a delivery. Hollingsworth v. Napier, 3 Caines, (N. Y.) R. 182. It has also been held, that the acceptance by the vendee of a delivery order, was a sufficient delivery under the Statute of Frauds. Searle v. Keeves, 2 Esp. R. 598. A delivery order and payment of the purchase-money, without the assent of the custodian to hold for the vendee, passes the right of property and gives the vendee a possession sufficient to enable him to maintain trespass against a party who thereafter takes the goods. Legg v. Leyman, 8 Blackf. (Ill.) 148. A delivery order upon a party into whose custody goods are expected to arrive, and into whose hands the order was placed with a demand and tender of payment of the purchase-money, after their arrival, passes the property and gives constructive possession to the vendee. Sahman v. Mills, 3 Strobb. (N. C.) 384. A horse, at the time of sale, was in the hands of a livery-stable keeper, and both the vendor and vendee informed him, by letter, of the sale of the horse—the former, stating that he would be responsible for the previous keeping of the horse, and the latter, that he would pay for the subsequent keeping, and it was held, that though the livery man replied to neither communication, yet the property in the horse passed, not only as between the parties but also as against the vendor's creditors. Taxworth v. Moore, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 847; Elmore v. Stone, 1 Taunt. 547. A delivery order upon the depository, whether he obeys it or not, or sets up a title or lien claiming to hold for himself, divests the property of the vendor. Plymouth Bank v. Bank of Norfolk, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 454. That a delivery of the instrument of transfer and conveyance is sufficient as a symbolical delivery of the goods has been repeatedly decided. Ingraham v. Wheeler, 6 Conn. 284; Badlam v. Tucker, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 889; Wilkes v. Ferris, 5 Johns. R. 835; Ricker v. Cross, 5 N. H. Rep. 573; Putnam v. Dutch, 8 Mass. 287. But, in accordance with the decision in Godts v. Rose, in the text, it has been held that where goods were sold, while in the warehouse of a dock company, for more than 10l. there being no contract in writing, the receipt of a delivery order by the vendee, not accepted by the dock company, so as to make them hold impliedly for the vendee, was not a delivery within the Statute of Frauds. Bentall v. Burn, 3 B. & C. 423; and that an acceptance of the delivery order, or an attornment by the custodian, was necessary to constitute a delivery, was held in Farina v. Home, 16 Meason & Welsby, 119. See also Zwinger v. Samuda, 7 Taunt. 265; Blackborn on the Contract of Sale, 27, 41, 297.

Where lumber is sold while in the care of a third person, and it is agreed that he shall measure it, a part of the purchase money being paid at the time of sale, it may properly be left to the jury whether, under all the circumstances of the case, it was the intention of the parties that the property in the lumber should pass without its having been measured, and their finding is conclusive. Riddle v. Varnum, 20 Pick. 280. In Vermont, where an open and visible change of possession on the sale of personal property, is requisite in order to defeat the claims of the vendor's creditors, it has been repeatedly held, that if the property be, at the time of the sale, in the actual custody of a third person, who is notified of the sale and consents to keep the property for the vendee, the sale is perfect even as against the vendor's creditors, though there be no actual change of possession. Harding v. James, 4 Verm. 462; Spaulding v. Austin, 2 Verm. 555; Peirce v. Chapman, 8 Verm.

344; Potter v. Washington, 18 Verm. 558; Barney v. Brown, 2 Verm. 374. In none of the Vermont decisions, however, does it appear that the question of the necessity of an assent of the custodian to hold the property for the vendee was distinctly raised, but, in fact, there was in all of them such an assent express or implied.

Where goods are in the hands of a sheriff under an attachment, the execution and delivery of a bill of parcels, or an assignment, is good as a symbolical delivery, and passes the property subject only to the lien of the attachment. Whipple v. Thayer, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 25, and cases there cited. The delivery to the vendee of the duplicate invoice of the cargo, authenticated by the master, is a good symbolical delivery. Gardner v. Howland, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 602. So the delivery of a bill of parcels to the vendee of goods in the hands of a lessee at the time of sale, with a request that he will hold them for the vendee, has been held to be a good constructive delivery, although the lessee do not consent so to hold them; but a mere delivery of the bill of parcels without notice to the lessee, is not sufficient as against a subsequent attaching creditor of the vendor. Carter v. Willard, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 1.

A distinction has sometimes been made by the courts between the sale of goods at sea and on shore, and between a sale made within the jurisdiction where the goods are, and one made without such jurisdiction. Gardner v. Howland, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 604; Fox v. Adams, 5 Green. (Me.) 245; Blake v. Williams, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 286; but the reasons of such distinctions is not apparent. Holmes v. Remsen, 4 Johns. Ch. R. (N. Y.) 460, and cases there cited. 33 E. L. & E. Rep. 268.

AGENCY.

Bank of British North America v. Hooper and others.

Principal and Agent—Bill of Exchange.

A., by authority from B., drew bills in his own name, containing a direction to the drawee "to charge the same to account of B.," and payable to C., who endorsed them, and, in consideration of a commission paid him by B., negotiated them and transmitted the proceeds to A., who applied the same to B.'s use. Held that a bank, which discounted the bills, could not sue B., or prove against his estate in insolvency, either on the drafts or for money loaned.

Lyon v. Williams.

Principal and Agent—Signature to bind Principal.

On a written receipt for goods, delivered at a railroad station in Boston, "which" (by the terms of the receipt) "the several railroad companies between Boston and Zanesville, agree to transport over their lines, via Albany, Buffalo, Cleveland and Columbus, on the terms and conditions mentioned in their respective published tariffs, which are hereby made part of this contract, each delivering to the next connecting road, but assuming no responsibility or control of property beyond its own line, other than prompt delivery to the next succeeding line," and signed "G. Williams, jr., for the corporations," Williams cannot be charged for a loss of the goods between Boston and Zanesville.

Eastern Railroad Corporation v. Benedict.

Principal and Agent—Parties to Actions.

On a written order, made for the benefit of the Eastern Railroad Corporation, to deliver property to "Mr. D. A. Neale, President of the Eastern Railroad Company," and accepted by the person on whom it is drawn, the corporation may sue in their own names.

SHIPPING.

Vose v. Morton.

Bill of Lading—Primage and Average—Accustomed.

Under a bill of lading on certain iron rails shipped from Glasgow to New York, at a certain freight per ton, "with primage and average accustomed," Held, that accustomed qualified primage as well as average, and that evidence was admissible to show a universal and well understood custom of the trade to pay no primage.

Baker v. Huckins.

Charter—Liability of General Owners.

General owners of a vessel let her to the master for the season for freighting and fishing, and gave him the entire management and control, but agreed to keep the vessel in repair, and to receive a proportion of her earnings as compensation. Held, they were not liable for stores, furnished for the vessel upon the order of the master.

Shepherd v. Naylor.

Bill of Lading—Weight Unknown.

Bill of lading for a specified number of tons of iron, "weight unknown," binds the ship owners (in the absence of fraud) to deliver only so much as they actually receive on board.

PARTNERSHIP.

Catskill Bank v. Hooper and others.

Insolvent Laws—Proof against Resident Partner of a Foreign House—Foreign Judgment.

A debt due from a partnership established in another state, cannot be proved under the insolvent laws of this commonwealth, against the estate of one of the partners who resides here, in competition with his separate creditors.

A creditor, who recovers judgment in New York against two persons as partners doing business there, one of whom resides in this state, which judgment is prima facie evidence, by the statutes of New York, against such absent defendant, cannot afterwards prove on the original consideration against the estate of such absent defendant, in competition with his separate creditors, in proceedings commenced under the insolvent laws of this commonwealth before the suit was brought in New York; and it is immaterial, in this respect, whether the two defendants were actually partners or not, the creditor having treated them as such by taking judgment against both of them in New York.

A. W. RAND'S SELF-CLEANING FURNACE. Boynton's Patent.

Having put up a large number of these Furnaces, both in public and private buildings, (including 24 put up at the Philadelphia County Prison, in place of the 44 torn out.) and tested them during the cold weather of 1855, and 1854, being the coldest weather we have had for twenty or thirty years. They have given the most universal satisfaction, and those having them in use were perfectly delighted with the abundance of warm, pleasant air, and abundant ventilation afforded thereby, while so many were suffering from cold, and troubled with the deficiencies of their heating apparatus.

We take great pleasure, therefore, in recommending them to the notice of the public, and would call their attention particularly to an examination of the greatly increased amount of effective radiating surface, their perfect solidity and durability, the improved manner of making the joints, entirely preventing any escape of gases, and the manner of distributing the fire, so as to cause it to impinge directly against the large amount of surface, without the objectionable and unnatural method of forcing the current downwards.

We have also a full assortment of HAYES' PATENT TUBULAR OVEN RANGES, now so universally used, and favorably known. Also, HAYES' PATENT VENTILATORS, &c., &c., all of which will be put up in the very best manner, and by the most skillful workmen, constantly engaged for that purpose, by

UNIVERSITY OF PENNSYLVANIA.

We are informed that the graduates of the Law Department of the University of Pennsylvania have determined to form a society of the Alumni of that branch of the institution.

They have already had one or two meetings, and a Constitution has been framed, which will be submitted to the consideration of a meeting of the graduates, to be held on Monday afternoon next, in the Hall of the University, as appears by an advertisement in our columns.

The Law School has now been in existence for five or six years, and has met with the most gratifying success.

Beginning with comparatively few real students, the class of 1865-6 numbered about fifty, of whom fifteen were graduated at the last commencement in the degree of Bachelor of Laws.

It furnishes opportunities for the acquirement of legal knowledge generally; but the system of Pennsylvania law and practice is particularly and minutely investigated and expounded by the professors, who are well known in the community for their learning and ability.

The Society of the Alumni is intended to promote the interests of the University and of the Law School, and to bring together those who have there graduated in friendly and social intercourse.

It is calculated to do much good in maintaining among the Alumni a proper feeling of remembrance and regard for their Alma Mater and for one another.

District Court.

Opinions by Judge Hare.

BALBECK vs. DONALDSON.

If the deposition of the woman, who alleges herself to be Eliza Braceland, late of New York, and now of Michigan, be a forgery, suborned by the defendant, his position is such that no jury will or ought to sustain it, and it would be wrong and useless to order a new trial. If, on the other hand, she be what she represents herself, the situation of the defendant deprived at once of character and property on what, after all, may be a groundless suspicion, is a most cruel one, and has strong claims to that indulgence which the court, in its discretion, may always afford. For, unquestionably, if his case be a fair one, and the witness honest, the allegation that her oath should not be believed, because she was examined away from her home, must have operated as a surprise, and may have carried the cause most unjustly against him. In order then to ascertain whether he was surprised or not, and whether the witness be credible or infamous, we grant a continuance to September term, and thus give the defendant an ample opportunity to support her credibility, by the examination of witnesses under a commission, which will be evidence not merely on the argument of this rule, but on any future trial of the cause. It would be more satisfactory to us, and no doubt to any jury, before whom the question may hereafter come, to have the testimony taken orally by agents appointed for the purpose, and not on written interrogatories; but this must depend on the means and inclinations of the parties. With these instructions the cause is continued.

MILLER vs. POTHIER.

It has been decided in this State, and must now be regarded as well settled, that reasons of public policy prohibit the assignor of a right or cause of action, from appearing as witness for the assignee, even when he has parted with all his interest in the controversy, and is in no sense a party to the record. This rule of evidence which is unknown elsewhere, and of comparatively recent introduction here, is one of much difficulty, for the cases, though numerous, are conflicting in language if not in principle, and leave much to analogy, which has not yet been determined by precedent; while the reports of our sister States and of England, throw no light on a doctrine, which they expressly or impliedly negative or repudiate. In the case now before us, the vendor of goods was called as a witness for the vendee, to support the recovery of the latter, against the defendant, who claimed title to them under a lien, arising from a bailment by the vendor prior to the sale. A release of the implied warranty of title, removed all difficulty, on the ground of interest, and left the witness unquestionably competent on general principles, unless disqualified by the peculiar law of Pennsylvania.

The possession of a bailee, like that of a tenant, is the possession of the person under whom he holds. Hence the title of the bailor is unaffected by the bailment, and remains as it was previously, a right in possession, wholly without the scope of the statutes of maintenance, and having none of the characteristics of a chose in action. To treat him as incompetent to give evidence in favor of a subsequent assignee, would, therefore, be to declare that every one, who owns real or personal property, is ipso facto disqualified from appearing as a witness for those to whom it may be subsequently transferred. The cases hitherto decided, have been cases in which the right transferred was originally, and from the outset, a right of action, and had never vested in possession. We, obviously, are not entitled to extend them to vested rights, on real or supposed grounds of policy, or because the reasons on which they are said to depend might warrant such an extension. The witness is clearly competent at common law, and we are bound by the common law, in the absence of precise and controlling authority to the contrary. Moreover, the cases of Holden vs. Williamson, 7 Harris 449, and Abell vs. Johnston, which are cited and approved in Hansell vs. Lutz, 8 Harris 285, establish, that a vendor of land may be called on behalf of the vendee, against a mortgagor or other creditor, who is seeking to subject the land to the lien of the debt. Unless some reason can be given why those cases should not apply to questions growing out of the sale of personal property, they are directly in point and decisive. The motion is, consequently, refused.

HARVEY vs. THE CITY OF PHILA.

This was an action against the city of Philadelphia for a trespass, alleged to have been committed by heaping earth against the wall of an ice house, in which the plaintiff had stored ice, and thus throwing the wall down and exposing the ice to the action of the elements, as well as injuring it by the admixture of dirt and rubbish. Several questions arose in the course of the trial which need not be adverted to, because the plaintiff suffered a nonsuit, in consequence of an intimation by the court, that if the ice house was on the defendant's land, the jury must necessarily find a verdict in their favor. There is no reason to doubt the correctness of this opinion, nor that it was applicable to the case before the court. Those who occupy the land of another are prima facie trespassers, unless they show by what right they came there, and certainly cannot call him to account, for doing what he will with his own. The plaintiffs gave no evidence, of title or authority to the land in question, and their possession, which would otherwise have been sufficient to maintain the action, was rebutted by the testimony of Mr. Lightfoot, who swore that he had been employed to survey the line between them and the defendants, both before and after the accident, and had found on each occasion, that the wall of the ice house was two feet and a-half beyond the proper line. The case was, therefore, eminently proper, for the application of the principles laid down by the court, and the motion to take off the nonsuit is refused.

Court of Common Pleas.

Opinion by Thompson, F. J.

FUSSELL vs. RHODES.

In Equity Demurrer.

The bill in this case is filed by the devisee of Catharine Jones against the devisees of Lewis Jones, praying that the said defendants shall be decreed to execute and deliver to the plaintiff proper and effectual deeds of release, of three-fourth parts of certain real estate, the title to which originally vested in the said Lewis Jones and his two sisters, Ann and Catharine, as heirs of their brother Nathan Jones, in equal shares; and, also, that the defendants be sustained by a perpetual injunction from commencing any action of partition or other proceeding in law against the plaintiff in relation to the said property, or from setting up any claim of title to the said three-fourth shares thereof.

The defendant having entered a demurrer, we are brought at once to consider the sufficiency of the case as set forth by the plaintiff to authorize the decree prayed for.

It appears that Nathan Jones, the owner of the premises in question, died intestate, and that the property descended to his brother Lewis and sisters, Ann and Catharine, as tenants in common. The said decedent was, at the time of his death, indebted to his two sisters in the sum of twelve thousand dollars, being the principal and interest of certain bonds held by them.

The plaintiff alleges that the estate of Nathan being found to be insolvent, it was agreed between Lewis, his two sisters and the widow of his brother, who was co-administratrix of his estate with Lewis, that the said Ann and Catharine should be "deemed taken and admitted to be the sole owners of the whole of the estate then of the said Nathan Jones, the same to be held in fee, in payment and satisfaction of their claim of $12,000, against his estate, and that the said Ann and Catharine, with the consent of said Lewis, became seized of the whole of said real estate, and permitted the said Mary Jones, the widow, to remain in possession of the same. She holding the possession for them, and Lewis carrying out the contract and agreement by the delivery of the possession of the lands to said Ann and Catharine, and that the said Lewis acted thereafter only as agent for his sister in regard to said estate. The plaintiff further relies on the admissions of Lewis at subsequent periods, and of accounts kept by him as evidence of the transfer of the property to his sisters.

Taking the case as presented by the bill is a satisfactory title to the three-fourths of the property made out by the plaintiff. The action and remedy now applied for, call into exercise the highest power of a Court of Equity. To prevent a party from asserting, in a court of law a claim to property, and to compel him by a decree to convey to another, is an exercise of authority which no court will attempt without the clearest and most convincing evidence of the necessity of its action either to prevent fraud or to protect well settled rights. Equity will not interfere to prevent a fair trial at law of an asserted title; on the contrary the remedy by injunction is applied in aid of the administration of justice in other courts, and to remove impediments to a fair decision; thus the setting up of an outstanding term or other interest, where it would prevent a fair trial, may be enjoined, but the clear right to such protection must be satisfactorily shown, Eden on Inj., 407. The title of the plaintiff must have been sufficiently established at law before the aid of a Court of Equity is invoked, or it must be shown to the satisfaction of the latter court, upon the testimony or by verdict, Nichol vs. Trustees, 1 Johns. C. 166.

The title set up by the plaintiff in this case to the three-fourth parts of the property in question, has not been the subject of any legal investigation, and we are called upon for the first time to consider it. The sole ground upon which the plaintiff rests her title is the parol agreement alleged to have been made by Lewis Jones, and the possession of his sisters under it. Does the bill shew a valid contract and a sufficient possession to take the alleged agreement out of the operation of the statute of frauds? A contract to be binding requires a sufficient consideration, and to avoid the operation of the statute of frauds there must be absolute possession taken in pursuance of it, Christy vs. Barnhart, 2 Harris 260. It is difficult to ascertain in what the alleged consideration, moving to Lewis Jones, consisted. If his brother's estate was insolvent he had no real interest in it, and it does not seem that he derived any benefit whatever from the alleged agreement. The permission that the widow should occupy seems to have been a matter in which he had no concern, further than a friendly interest. The agreement, as stated in the bill, is wanting in that precision and certainty which would alone justify a court in enforcing it. Lewis Jones agreed that his sisters should be taken and admitted to be the sole owners, but did he agree to sell or to convey his interest to them to divest himself of his title? It is not so alleged; indeed the contrary would seem to be the fact as, after the agreement, Lewis Jones joined as a party in deeds, made for portions of the property, shewing that whatever the agreement was, it did not, even in the understanding of the parties to it, divest Lewis of his interest and title in the property. The payments made upon the mortgage due to his sisters, after the alleged agreement, seem to shew that the mortgages were not paid by the transfer of the property in accordance with the agreement, and render it uncertain whether any transfer of the title was to be made.

It is necessary, in order to enforce a parol contract for the sale of land, that the terms of the contract shall clearly appear and be definite and unequivocal, 1 Harris 21; 10 Harris, 235.

If the transaction be in any degree uncertain or obscure Equity will not interfere, but leaves the parties to their legal remedies. No other rule can be followed in a case like the present, where the positive action of the court is invoked to establish a title under such a contract. It is further required that the possession taken under a parol sale of land must be an actual change of possession. A parol sale by one tenant in common to a co-tenant, whose possession continued, was held void under the statute of frauds, because there was no change of possession in execution of the contract, Galbraith vs. Galbraith, 5 Watt. 146; 2 Harris 260. The possession must follow and be in execution of the contract. The only possession alleged in this case was that of the widow, who was permitted to remain on the premises. She had occupied them previously and continued as the tenant of the sisters. It does not appear that Lewis Jones ever had possession of the land or any part of it. His brother's widow was in possession and continued there; no change of possession took place sufficient to indicate a change of ownership.

The defects and uncertainties pointed out appear on the face of the plaintiff's bill, and would be sufficient to compel us to refuse a decree to establish the title as prayed for, though the facts as alleged should be proved. It may be that some arrangement was made between the parties for the settlement of the estate of Nathan Jones, and that Lewis permitted his sisters to receive the profits of it, or the proceeds of certain portions of it which were sold, but we are not satisfied, upon the plaintiff's own shewing, that her title is so clearly stated as to authorize the court to establish it by a decree, and to protect it from any question or examination at law. In this case there seems no sufficient reason for so doing. No unfair advantage can be taken and the evidence, upon which the title is to be sustained, is equally admissible in a court of law.

The cases in which our courts can exercise such a restraining power, as is invoked in this case, must necessarily be limited, as the act to be restraining must be contrary to law as well as prejudicial to the rights of individuals, 7 W. & S. 107, Hagner vs. Heyberger. It is not contrary to law to institute proceedings for the purpose of testing a right which a party claims to have to real estate. In our courts of law equitable, as well as legal, defences are permitted, and relief given to a party equitably entitled to it. In a case, like the present, where neither fraud nor hardship is suggested, we cannot interfere with the exercise of a party's legal rights.

The demurrer must, therefore, be sustained and the bill dismissed with costs.

FERGUSON vs. FALLONS & VANDYKE.

Party wall—Building Inspectors' Act, April 11, 1866.

This proceeding was carried on under the provisions of the 4th section of the act of Assembly of 11th April, 1856, (supplementary to the act of 21st April, 1855, which provided for the regulation and inspection of buildings.)

The said section requires the building inspectors, upon the request of any two citizens, to inspect all walls and supports of buildings deemed dangerous, and if the same be found insufficient and dangerous to order the removal or alteration of the same. The wall in question was inspected by the Building Inspectors, upon the written request of two citizens, and upon the 26th of August the inspectors notify the owner that they, having examined said wall, (and having been instructed that the same is a party wall by the surveyor of the district,) find the same unfit for building purposes and order that the same shall be removed. The premises and conclusion of the inspectors seem somewhat inconsistent; they inspect the wall to ascertain whether it is dangerous and insufficient, and find it unfit for building purposes, and therefore order the owner to remove it. The wall in question is the side wall of a dwelling house, back building and stable. It has stood for forty years, in all respects sufficient to support and sustain the buildings of which it forms part, and if permitted to remain will, probably, stand as long as it has already stood without being dangerous to any one. These facts are not denied. The wall, per se, is not alleged to be dangerous and insufficient—but the adjoining owner, desiring to erect a large building and claiming a right to use the wall as a party wall, found the same insufficient for his purposes, and in order to have the wall reconstructed of sufficient strength, caused the present proceedings to be taken.

We think the proper course has not been adopted. The 4th section of the act of 1856, was not designed for the purpose to which it has been applied. That section was obviously intended to secure the safety of the community, by causing dangerous walls to be removed, not to enable parties who desired to change, or to make use of their neighbors walls, to compel them to pull them down or alter them to suit their purposes. It would be contrary to all right to compel the owner of a perfectly good wall, if he presumes to appeal to the board of surveys for protection, to pay the inspector's fees, and ten dollars for the use of the city, because his neighbor chooses to build a larger house than his, requiring higher and thicker walls. The act in question means no such thing; its object is safety, and it makes the remedy a speedy one because the owner of a dangerous or insufficient wall is sustaining a nuisance, and it inflicts a penalty for delay in abating it.

The owner of this wall insists that it is not a party wall and denies the right of the adjoining owner to use it. This question he is entitled to have fairly tried, and he cannot be deprived of such trial by a proceeding under the act in question.

The owner of a party wall, good and sufficient for his purposes, cannot be compelled to take it down at his own expense, for the benefit of any body, nor without having an opportunity to test the right of the person claiming to remove or alter it.

For this reason the proceedings in this case cannot be sustained and the injunction, as far as it affects Mr. Vandyke, is dissolved.

KOONS vs. BUTE.

Partnership—Dissolution—Account.

The effect of the replication in this case is to require the defendant to sustain, by proofs, such portions of the answer as are not responsive, and such new matters as are set up in avoidance of the case presented by the plaintiff's bill. If, however, there are facts admitted by the answer and responsive to the bill, sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to the preliminary decree for an account, he is not obliged, by having put in a replication, to bring further evidence to sustain his claim to have an account taken. He may use the defendant's admissions for that purpose—(Smith's Eq. Pr., Hengst's Ap., 12 Harris 417; Adams' Eq. 21.)

The question first presented is, whether the defendant is an accounting party. If this fact is sufficiently shewn by the answers responsive to the bill or the admissions of the defendant, the denial, by the defendant, of the state of the account, as alleged in the bill or the statement of other facts to prove that the result would be favorable to the defendant, will not prevent the plaintiff from having the account taken.

The bill claims the settlement of a partnership account, and charges that the defendant has received more than his just share of the assets; it also charges that the statements of the accounts, presented by the defendant, omit certain interest to which the plaintiff is entitled, and that the amount of interest as stated is incorrect.

The defendant, in his answer, admits the partnership, the dissolution, the receipt of money by each partner, as alleged in the bill, but denies his liability to have the interest differently calculated, and denies the plaintiff's right to interest on a portion of his capital.

He further denies that he has received more than a just proportion of the assets, and states his belief that when the accounts come to be properly stated and settled there will not be found any money due to the plaintiff, but, on the contrary, the balance will be in his favor. It thus appears that the case is one which can be settled only by stating an account between the parties. This is the process by which the defendant asserts it will appear that the balance will be found in his favor, thus admitting a mutual liability to account. The denial, by the defendant, that he is indebted to the plaintiff is not sufficient to prevent a proper adjustment of the account at the instance of the plaintiff, when it appears, by the admissions of the defendant, that there are questions to be determined upon the settlement of the account which may change the state of the balance as it is now alleged to exist. The defendant appears, from his answer, to be liable to account for the share of assets of the partnership received by him, and the decree to account must be entered. The facts relating to the correctness of the accounts, as submitted by the defendant, are not now to be considered as they relate to the state of the account when taken.

The plaintiff's motion for a decree to account is, therefore sustained, and reference to a master ordered.

JUST OUT!

DAVID PAUL BROWN'S NEW WORK.

THE FORUM;

OR, FORTY YEARS' FULL PRACTICE AT THE PHILADELPHIA BAR.

BY DAVID PAUL BROWN, ESQ.

This anxiously expected work is now ready. Mr. Brown has expended great care upon it and produced one of

THE MOST INSTRUCTIVE AND ENTERTAINING WORKS EVER PUBLISHED!

It consists of two large and handsome 8vo volumes of eleven hundred pages. In the quality of the paper and beauty of typography it will compare favorably with any work ever issued from the American Press. It contains, among other entertaining matter, "A Gallery of Portraits of distinguished American Lawyers," "Anecdotes of the Bench and Bar," "Wit of the Bar," "Celebrated Trials," "The Romance of the Forum," &c., &c. This last chapter exceeds in interest any novel ever published.

The price of the Work is six dollars, in handsome cloth binding. ROBERT H. SMALL, Law Bookseller and Publisher, No. 21 South Sixth Street, Philadelphia. Sept. 26, 1856.

JUST PUBLISHED.

Sergeant on the Mechanic's Lien Law, Second Edition.

Edited by E. SPENCER MILLER, Esq., Counsellor at Law, and Professor of the Law of Real Estate, Conveyancing, and Equity Jurisprudence in the Law Department of the University of Pennsylvania, in one vol., 8vo. of 394 pages.

This work contains Precedents of FORMS carefully prepared, with a view to the latest aspects of the law, and also all the Acts of Assembly relative to the subject. The table of Cases and Index are elaborate and exhaustive. Just Published and for Sale by KAY & BROTHER, PROSPECTUS OF THE LEGAL INTELLIGENCER FOR 1857, VOL. XIV.

HENRY E. WALLACE, EDITOR.

In this paper, which has become indispensable to every practising lawyer in Pennsylvania, are now published immediately after delivery, the Opinions of the Judges of

THE SUPREME COURT OF PENNSYLVANIA, (greatly in advance of the State Reports.) THE DISTRICT COURT AND COURT OF COMMON PLEAS of Philadelphia, (only herein reported.)

THE UNITED STATES COURTS for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania.

REVIEWS of Law Books, Legal Dissertations, Intelligence, Miscellany, &c., &c.

THE LAWS Enacted by the Legislature of Pennsylvania at each Session.

Besides which, it contains by authority of law and rules of Court, all the Legal Advertisements required to be published in Philadelphia.

To the variety and amount of contents above enumerated, (which makes this the cheapest publication of the kind extant,) it is proposed in the next volume to add the following

New Features.

1. Early and correct Reports, under an appropriate head, of all Cases decided in the Courts of England, as well as this country, involving the Law of BANKING, INSURANCE, CARRIERS, and other points of MERCANTILE LAW, and the Rights and Liabilities of INSURANCE AND RAILROAD COMPANIES, MINING AND LAND ASSOCIATIONS, BANKS, and other CORPORATIONS.

2. Full Reports of interesting JURY TRIALS in all parts of the Union.

These new features, combined with the present advantages it affords, cannot fail to make "THE LEGAL INTELLIGENCER" serviceable and interesting to Business Men as well as Lawyers, and of very great utility to Officers and Stockholders of all BANKS, RAILROADS, INSURANCE COMPANIES, and other CORPORATIONS in all parts of the Union.

Subscriptions are solicited. Specimen numbers will be sent to parties desiring to see the paper before subscribing.

It is published every FRIDAY, by KING & BAIRD, No. 9 Sansom Street, PHILADELPHIA.

At Two Dollars per Annum, invariably in ADVANCE.

A limited number of appropriate advertisements (only), inserted on reasonable terms.

PENNSYLVANIA REPORTS.

A New and Cheap Edition. ALREADY PUBLISHED.

- Dallas' Reports, 4 vols. . . . 1754 to 1806
Yeates' Reports, 4 vols. . . . 1791 to 1808
Binney's Reports, 6 vols. . . . 1799 to 1814
Addison's Reports, 1 vol. . . . 1791 to 1799

These Reports are condensed by T. J. Fox Alden, Esq., into three vols., and are sold at the low price of $15.

To those who cannot afford to purchase the original series of Reports (many volumes of which are out of print) this work will be invaluable.

From Hon. J. B. Gibson, Chief Justice.—I have examined the first volume of Mr. Alden's Condensed Reports, and think the work will be a valuable one.

Testimonials speaking in the highest terms of the work, have also been received from Hon. Edward King, Hon. William B. McClure, Hon. William D. Kelly, Hon. Cornelius Darragh, Hon. John Galbreath, James Dunlop, Esq., Thomas Williams, Esq., and more than fifty other distinguished members of the Pennsylvania Bar.

IN PREPARATION,

GREAT FIRE, MAY 1, 1866.

HERRING'S PATENT CHAMPION SAFES!

What the People Say!

PHILADELPHIA, 2d May, 1866.

MESSRS. FARRELS & HERRING.—Gentlemen—The Herring's Patent Fire-Proof Safe, which we purchased of you in the month of January last, was situated in our Counting-Room, in the second story of 231 Market street, on the night of the Great Fire, 1st May, 1866, and fell with the burning building in that conflagration.

The safe was reached this afternoon, after an exposure of THREE SIX HOURS to intense heat, and although the brass plates on the front of the safe were melted, and the exterior shows the evidence of extreme heat, the inside casing was found to be UNROTTEN BY FIRE, and with the exception of being a little stained is now as good as new.

EDW. SEMANS & CO.

MESSRS. FARRELS & HERRING.—Gentlemen—The Herring's Patent Fire-Proof Safe, of your manufacture, which we purchased nearly a year since, was in the centre of our building at the time of its destruction in the Great Fire of May 1, 1866.

We had removed the greater portion of our Books before the fire reached us, but left some of them, together with a number of loose papers, inside, purposely to test the security of the safe. After thirty-eight hours of severe roasting, we found the interior of the safe, upon opening, not only bright and sound, but the Books and Papers as free from fire as when first put in.

We shall require another safe as soon as we get a new location, and want none but your "Champion."

FISHER & BROTHER, No. 15 North Sixth street.

The public will bear in mind that the "HERRING'S PATENT" is the only safe made in this City, which has never failed to preserve its contents in accidental fires.

The TWO SAFES from the above Great Fire can now be seen in front of the OLD STAND, No. 34 WALNUT STREET.

English Law and Equity Reports.

ENGLISH REPORTS IN LAW AND EQUITY. A Complete Collection of the Cases decided by the House of Lords, the Privy Council, the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas and Exchequer, the Lord Chancellor, the High Court of Appeal in Chancery, the Court of Criminal Appeal, and the Admiralty and Ecclesiastical Courts.

This series has the merit of being complete, reliable, prompt, convenient, and cheap. It is now universally cited in the courts, and referred to in the recent law books as standard authority.

These Reports are now regularly digested in our Annual United States Digest, which thus embraces an annual digest of the whole English and American Law.

We have now in Preparation, and shall soon Publish,

A separate Digest of these Reports, embracing the first thirty-one volumes of the series, prepared with express reference to the convenience of the American profession, and exhibiting a complete synopsis of all the English Decisions reported in those volumes during the last five years; also a Table of Cases referring to all the contemporaneous English Reports.

The Law and Equity Reports will be continued on the same plan as heretofore; the number of volumes being reduced to four per year; and Digests will be published from time to time as the convenience of the profession demands.

Vols. 1 to 31, now ready for delivery, at $2 00 per volume.

The Fullest, the Latest, and the Best

REPORTS OF THE COMMON LAW COURTS OF ENGLAND.

Containing the cases decided in the Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Nisi Prius Courts, from 1813 to 1855, and in the Court of Exchequer and Exchequer Chamber, from 1824 to 1855, are found in

The Regular and Authoritative Series of the English Common Law and English Exchequer Reports,

Which present the following claims to the support of the profession:

1. They are the only series issued as the authoritative and acknowledged medium by which the decisions of the Law Courts of England are made public.

2. They contain Later Reports than the Boston series, are more fully and more ably reported, and so arranged by preservation of the original paging, that reference by reporters, or by elementary writers, can be traced as readily as in the English editions.

Vol. 2, Ellis & Blackburne's (75 E. C. L. R.) Reports (Q. B.) to January, 1854, was published by us in June, 1864. At that time the last Queen's Bench case printed in the Boston Law and Equity Reports, was of June 26, 1853. Our volume contained cases decided five months later.

Vol. 3, Ellis & Blackburne, (77 E. C. L. R.,) with cases to the end of Trinity Term, 1854, was published when the latest case of Queen's Bench decisions in the Boston series, was of February 8, 1854, more than four months behind the regular reporters.

Exchequer Reports, vol. 9, (Welsby, Harlstone & Gordon,) distributed by us January 11, 1856, contains cases to May 10, 1854. The last Exchequer case then in the Boston series was decided February 9, 1854, four months behind the regular Reporter, issued in Philadelphia.

3. They contain more cases decided by the courts represented, than any other series issued in this country.

Vol. 77 English Common Law, (3 E. & B.) reports eighty-six cases decided in the Queen's Bench since January 11, 1854, while but fifty-eight Queen's Bench cases, decided since January 1, 1854, are found scattered among Vols. 22, 24 and 25 of the Boston Law and Equity.

Vol. 78 E. C. L. K. (5 J. Scott,) reports sixty-five cases decided since Nov. 13, 1853, in the Common Pleas, while the L. & E. has but fifty-seven cases in that Court since the same period.

Vol. 9 Exchequer Reports, (Welsby, Harlstone & Gordon,) reports one hundred and ten cases in the Courts of Exchequer, decided since June 24, 1853, while since the same date, the L. & E. report but 107 cases, scattered through vols. 20, 22, 24 and 25.

4. They are almost exclusively cited in argument of counsel, and referred to by Elementary Writers for Law Authorities. See Smith's Leading Cases, Smith's Contracts, Smith's Landlord and Tenant, by Maude; Byles on Bills and Promissory Notes, Broom's Legal Maxims, Broom's Commentaries on the Laws of England, or almost any recent Law Book issued in England.

5. The Philadelphia Reports are edited by Judge Sharwood and by Judge Hare, whose labors as editors and authors have made them so well and so favorably known to the profession.

6. The Boston Law and Equity is made up in this country from the Law Journal, Jurist, Times and other Law periodicals, of a weekly, monthly, or quarterly character, and being unknown in England, is never cited in Court, or referred to by Law writers. The periodicals from which it is extracted, are occasionally cited under their own particular names, but they do not possess that permanent value, even in England, which is all-important in a series of Reports.

7. A carefully prepared and accurate Annual Digest of all the cases decided by the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Exchequer, will be distributed, early in each year, to subscribers to either series, free of charge. That for 1854 is ready, and will be mailed to subscribers who have not received a copy.

IN PRESS AND IN PREPARATION.

Leading Cases on the Law relating to Real Property, Conveyancing, and the Construction of Wills, by Owen Davies Tudor, author of Leading Cases in Equity. With very full notes referring to American Decisions.

Broom's Commentaries on the Common Law, by author of Legal Maxims, and Parties to Actions, edited by Hon. Geo. Sharwood.

Smith's Law of Landlord and Tenant, by author of Leading Cases, with copious American notes by P. P. Morris, Esq.

Having purchased from the English Publishers, during the past year, early sheets of the three works above announced, we hope to issue improved American editions very soon after their completion in England.

Williams' Personal Property, edited by B. Gertard, Esq., to be ready in July.

Starkie on the Law of Evidence. Arranged and Annotated by Hon. Geo. Sharwood. Digest of the Exchequer Reports, 35 vols. by Asa J. Fish, Esq.

Index to the English Common Law Reports, by Geo. W. Biddle and R. C. McMurtrie, Esqrs. 2 vols. 8vo.

Law School of the University at Cambridge, Mass.

The instructors in this school are Hon. JOEL PARKER, LL. D., Royal Professor. Hon. THEOPHILUS PARSONS, LL. D., Dane Professor. Hon. EMERY WASHBURN, LL. D., University Professor.

The course of instruction embraces the various branches of the Common Law, and of Equity, Admiralty, Commercial, International and Constitutional Law, and the Jurisprudence of the United States. The Law Library consists of about 14,000 volumes, and as new works appear they are added and every effort is made to render it complete.

Instruction is given by oral lectures and expositions, (and by recitations and examinations, in connection with them,) of which there are ten every week. Two Meet Courts are also holden in each week, at each of which a cause, previously given out, is argued by four students, and an opinion delivered by the presiding instructor. Rooms and other facilities are also provided for the Club Courts; and an Assembly is held weekly for practice in debate, and acquiring a knowledge of Parliamentary law and proceedings.

Students may enter the school in any stage of their professional studies or mercantile pursuits, and at the commencement of either term, or in the middle, or other part of a term. They are at liberty to select what studies they will pursue according to their view of their own wants and attainments.

The Academic year, which commences on Thursday, six weeks after the third Wednesday in July, is divided into two terms, of twenty weeks each, with a vacation of six weeks at the end of each term.

During the winter vacation, the Library is opened, warmed and lighted, for the use of the members of the school.

Applications for admission, or for Catalogues, or any further information, may be made to either of the Professors at Cambridge.

A NEW FEATURE.

A portion of our columns under an appropriate heading, will in future be devoted to the publication of notes of all the Decisions of the Courts of this country as well as Europe, in cases involving the liabilities and rights of Banks, Insurance and Railroad Companies, and other Corporations and their Stockholders, and important heads of Commercial Law, as Partnership, Agency, Carriers, Insurance, &c., &c.

The frequent issue of our publication will enable us to keep our subscribers fully posted as to Legislative and Judicial action on these subjects, by the publication of all Laws and Decisions, at the earliest moment after their promulgation. The obviously great advantage which this recueil in this form will afford the officers and stockholders in all their corporations, as well as the business community throughout the Union, will, we hope, induce an extensive addition to our subscription list among them.

It will also furnish the professors of the law in other States, additional reasons for availing themselves of the great advantages offered to them by this publication; which experience alone can enable them fully to appreciate.

RAILROADS.

Railway Company.—Time Tables.—Action for Breach of Contract and False Representation.

Denton v. Great Northern Railway Company.
Jan. 19, 1856.

(Court of Queen's Bench.)

It appeared that the defendants by their time tables for March last, which were prepared and exhibited to public view by their authority, stated that a train left Peterborough at a certain hour, and went on to Hull the same night, but it appeared that the railway company, whose train met the defendants' one at the Milford Junction, had given notice on February 27, that their train would be discontinued. The defendants still continued their former tables, and the plaintiff in consequence applied for a ticket to Hull, when he was informed he could not go beyond the Milford Junction Station that night; and he thereupon brought this action in the Clerkenwell County Court to recover damages for his detention there, by reason of their breach of contract or false representation. The matter now came on in the form of a special case on the suggestion of the County Court Judge.

Maynard for the plaintiff.

Hugh Hill for the defendants.

The Court said, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover both, on the ground that there was a contract for and a false representation. It was the same as if the defendants should publish a contract in express terms, that in consideration of their customers coming to a particular station at a particular hour a train would run, and, that on paying the fare he should have a ticket to any other station. A prejudice must result to any person who came, having made arrangements with a view thereto, and tendered his fare. It was a promise made to the public generally, and was the same as if the parties were present, upon the performance of a condition, upon the compliance with which it became absolute. And the fact that part of the line was not the defendant's property made no difference. With respect to the false representation, the time table was published after notice given to the defendants that the train would be discontinued, and they knew it to be false. The plaintiff believed the representation, went to the station and suffered a pecuniary loss in consequence, for which he had his remedy by action. The judgment of the Court below was therefore right, and the plaintiff was entitled to judgment.

Supreme Court of New Hampshire.

HILLARD v. GOULD.

Tariff of fares on railroads—Conductors—Excessive use of authority a question for the jury.

Where tariffs of fares of freights and passengers upon a railroad are established and posted up by the president of the corporation, and the fares taken upon such tariffs are received and appropriated by the corporation without objection, the legal presumption is, that the president acted by the authority of the corporation in thus establishing and posting such tariffs.

The statute requiring conductors on railroads in this State to remove from the cars passengers refusing to pay the established fares, was intended to apply to all persons properly acting as conductors without regard to the formal regularity of their appointment or the source from whence they derive compensation for their services.

A uniform discrimination in the tariff of fares for passengers, of five cents in favor of those who purchase tickets before entering the cars, over those who pay after taking their seats, is reasonable and legal.

Whenever the justification of an act alleged to be wrongful and injurious, is founded on the exercise of authority, whether that authority be incident to the official character and duty of the party exercising it, or arise from the misconduct of the opposite party and the necessities of the case, the question of the excess of such authority is to be determined by the jury upon the evidence submitted for their consideration, and not by the court.

Fourth Circuit—for the Eastern District of Virginia.

Opinion by Taney, C. J.

WHAT WILL AUTHORIZE REMITTANCES BY MAIL.

Sellman & Son v. Dunn.

The plaintiffs in this suit, Sellman and Son, were merchants in Baltimore, and the defendant Dunn, resident in Essex Co., Va. In the course of trade, the defendant gave to the plaintiffs his note for the sum of $699 47 cents, payable at the Farmers' Bank of Virginia, at Richmond, on the 1st day of May, 1850. Before the note became due the defendant, Dunn, went to Baltimore and requested the plaintiffs who had sent the note to Richmond for collection, to withdraw it and hold it at Baltimore, as he did not know whether he would be able to take it all up at the time it fell due.

The plaintiffs accordingly withdrew the note from the Bank at Richmond and held it in Baltimore. On the 22d of April, 1850, the plaintiffs wrote to the defendant that they had withdrawn his note as requested, that they had it in Baltimore and requesting him to remit the money to take it up.

On the 20th of May, they again wrote to him requesting him to attend to the matter. On the 27th of May, Dunn replied that he had received but one (the last) letter, that he called at the Bank in Richmond on the 3d of May and found no such note there, and requesting to know where the note was, and at what point payment was expected. In reply, the plaintiffs wrote that they held the note in Baltimore, adding, "If you will forward us the amount, we will send you the note."

On the 24th of June, the defendant inquired by letter, of the plaintiffs, why they had not returned him the note, as he had forwarded the money according to request, and urging them to do so. The facts agreed by the counsel for both plaintiffs, and defendant, were,

"That about the 7th of June, the sum of $700 was enclosed in a letter to the plaintiffs, and sent to Baltimore by mail to their address."

"That the usage and custom for persons in Essex County, purchasers and others, dealing with merchants in Baltimore and other northern merchants was general, when they sent money to make payments, to send it by mail to such northern merchants, and was known generally to such merchants in Baltimore and other places."

"That the $700 was sent after the receipt of Sellman's letter of 30th May, directing the defendant to forward the amount, and as Dunn supposed, in pursuance and for the purpose of complying with that letter."

"That Dunn borrowed the money for the purpose of bringing it down to Richmond to take up the note due the plaintiffs, and did bring it to Richmond for that purpose."

"That Essex County, where Dunn resides, is about 43 miles from Richmond, 56 miles from Fredericksburg, and farther still from Norfolk, and these are the nearest points at which bank-drafts could be obtained, and that this was known to the plaintiffs."

It was proved by the plaintiffs, that they never took the risk of remittances by mail from their customers upon themselves, that they never received the money or the letter containing it, that immediately upon the receipt of Dunn's letter informing them that he had sent the money by mail, they made diligent investigation and search, but that neither they nor the officers of the post-office department could get any clue to it, and that upon the receipt of Dunn's letter, they immediately sent a messenger to him demanding the payment of the note.

Upon this state of the facts, Judge Taney, after argument, gave the jury the following instructions:

1. If the letters of the plaintiffs to the defendant, urging the payment of the note, gave him reasonable grounds to believe that they desired and expected the money to be remitted to them by mail, he was authorized to make the remittance in that manner, at the risk of the plaintiffs.

2. It is for the jury to determine whether the language of the plaintiffs' letter gave to the defendant such reasonable ground of belief; and in forming their judgment, they are to take into consideration the whole correspondence and intercourse between the parties and the usages of trade in this respect, between the district or county in which the defendant resided, and the City of Baltimore—as well as the perol evidence offered by the respective parties.

3. And if upon the whole evidence, they find that the letters of the plaintiffs were sufficient to create such belief in the mind of a man of business and competent capacity, and that they did create that belief in the mind of the defendant. Then the deposit of the letter inclosing the money, in good faith, in a post-office, through which correspondence was usually at that time carried on from his neighborhood to the City of Baltimore, (the letter being sealed and properly directed,) was payment of the note, although from the fraud or negligence of the officers of the Government, the money may never have reached the hands of the plaintiffs.*

Griswold & Claiborne, for plaintiffs.

Patton & Patton, for defendants.

* This is in direct conflict with the decision of the Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia, in the case of Gross, Myers & Moore v. Criss, 3 Gratt. 362. In that case the Court decided, 1st, That a letter from the plaintiff to the defendant, urging them "to remit the amount," did not authorize the admission of evidence of a local usage or understanding, to give a meaning to the terms of a letter different from that they obviously bore; and that a general direction by a creditor to his debtor to remit money to him, without prescribing the mode, does not authorize the debtor to remit by mail, at the risk of the creditor; but such direction must be specific, both as to the mode of remittance and the subject to be remitted, before it can be made at the risk of the creditor.

These instructions of Judge Taney's seem to us also obnoxious to the objection that they conflict with that universally recognized principle of the law of contract, that the debtor shall seek out his creditor, if he be, as the term expresses it, within the four seas. This is an objection which the law imposes upon the debtor and to the performance of which the creditor is clearly entitled. There may be a waiver of this right undoubtedly, but like every other waiver, it must be either in express terms, or by conclusive implication. It will not be contended that the term remit, used in the above cases, expressly authorizes a remittance by mail, at the risk of the creditor; nor is the remittance by mail, at the risk of the creditor, a necessary or fair implication from the request to remit: it merely couples with the request of payment, a suggestion of the ordinary manner in which such payments are made, and expresses to the debtor a mode of doing that which the law requires him to do.

To say, therefore, that such a request relieves the debtor of all the risk of the transmission which he, at any rate, is bound to make, is, it seems to us, rather torturing the law to meet the supposed hardship of the debtor's case, than carrying out its principles of construction in a fair and legitimate manner. We have neither leisure nor space for any extended review of this opinion, and should hardly have ventured to express our dissent from this dictum of Judge Taney (nomen clarum et venerabile, in the law), if we were not backed by the unanimous opinion of the Supreme Court of this State. [Ed. Southern Law Journal.]

SUCCESS UNPARALLELED!

D R E P D;

A Tale of the Great Dismal Swamp.

BY HARRIET BEECHER STOWE,

2 Vols. 12mo. $1.75.

Certain politicians, interested in the support of the "peculiar institution," have endeavored to persuade the public that Mrs. Stowe's last work is artistically a failure, and that it has produced no profound impression on either side of the Atlantic.

But the publishers are happy to state, that of the many hundred of American notices which they have received, the vast majority have been decidedly favorable, most of them enthusiastic. And the sale thus far has exceeded that of any work of fiction ever published, the

of two volumes each, being now in press.

In England the success has been even more wonderful. The press there, with but one or two exceptions, acknowledge the genius and power of the author, and in terms of which any living writer might be proud. And during the twelve days succeeding its publication no fewer than were sold.

The universal voice of literary men now places Mrs. Stowe amongst the

Foremost Authors of the Age, and neither partizanship, nor an austere religious bigotry, can deprive her of the laurels she has so nobly earned.

GREAT FIRE, MAY 1, 1856.

HERRING'S PATENT CHAMPION SAFES!

What the People Say!

PHILADELPHIA, 2d May, 1856.

MESSRS. FARRELS & HERRING—

GENTLEMEN—The Herring's Patent Champion Fire-Proof Safe, which we purchased of you in the month of January last, was situated in our Counting-Room, in the second story of 281 Market street, on the night of the Great Fire, 1st May, 1856, and fell with the burning building in that conflagration.

The Safe was reached this afternoon, after an exposure of THIRTY-SIX HOURS to intense heat, and although the brass plates on the front of the Safe were melted, and the exterior shows the evidence of extreme heat, the inside casing was found to be UNTOUCHED BY FIRE, and with the exception of being a little steamed is now as good as new. EDW. SEMANS & CO.

MESSRS. FARRELS & HERRING—

GENTLEMEN—The Herring's Patent Champion Fire-Proof Safe, of your manufacture, which we purchased nearly a year since, was in the centre of our building at the time of its destruction in the Great Fire of May 1, 1856.

We had removed the greater part of our Books before the fire reached us, but left some of them, together with a number of loose papers, inside, purposely to test the security of the safe. After thirty-eight hours of severe roasting, we found the interior of the Safe, upon opening, not only bright and sound, but the Books and Papers as free from fire as when first put in.

We shall require another Safe as soon as we get a new location, and want none but your "Champion."

Yours, &c., FISHER & BROTHER,

No. 15 North Sixth street.

The public will bear in mind that the "HERRING'S PATENT" is the only Safe made in this City, which has never failed to preserve its contents in accidental fires.

The TWO SAFES from the above Great Fire can now be seen in front of the OLD STAND, No. 34 WALNUT STREET. FARRELS & HERRING, Only Makers in this State of HERRING'S PATENT CHAMPION SAFES! May 9-1y

JUST PUBLISHED.

HARRIS' REPORTS OF THE SUPREME COURT OF PENNSYLVANIA. Vol. XII. By George W. Harris.

KAY & BROTHER beg leave to announce that they have become the sole publishers of Harris' Reports, of which eleven volumes have been already issued. They have just published the twelfth and last volume of the series, which fills up the interval between Harris' and Casey's Reports, which they also publish. The difficulty in obtaining, when and as wanted, the various volumes of Harris' Reports, will in future be obviated, as regular and full supplies of them all will be kept constantly on hand and for sale.

CASEY'S PENNSYLVANIA STATE REPORTS, VOL. I.—Pennsylvania State Reports, Vol. XXV., containing reports of cases adjudged by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, by Joseph Casey, Esq., State Reporter. This volume contains the cases decided in part of May Term, 1855; in October Terms, 1856, and part of January Term, 1856. It will be the joint endeavor of the Reporter and Publisher to issue the respective volumes as speedily as possible, after the determination of the cases which each volume will contain, and thus to remove a serious ground of complaint on the part of the bar. Subscribers wanted for a single volume or the entire series.

BRIGHTLY'S PURDON'S ANNUAL DIGEST, FOR THE YEARS 1854, 1855, and 1856—on the plan and in continuation of Stroud & Brightly's Purdon, 1700 to 1853. Annual Digest of the Laws of Pennsylvania for each of the years 1854, 1855 and 1856, namely, from 23 May, 1853, to 15 May, 1856, together with some laws inadvertently omitted in Purdon's Digest, 1700 to 1853; Marginal References; a Digested Syllabus of each Title; Foot Notes to the Judicial Decisions; and a full and exhaustive Index, in which the contents of all the annual Digests are incorporated in one alphabet. The whole completing Stroud & Brightly's Purdon's Digest to the present time. By Frederick C. Brightly, Esq., author of the "Law of Costs," "Equity Jurisprudence;" Editor of Purdon's Digest, &c. Price only Fifty cents.

PREPARING FOR PUBLICATION.

SERGEANT ON THE MECHANIC'S LIEN LAW—second edition, in 1 vol., 8vo., of 300 to 500 pages. Edited by E. Spencer Miller, Esquire, Counsellor at Law and Professor of the law of Real Estate, Conveyancing and Equity Jurisprudence in the Law Department of the University of Pennsylvania. The Statutes and Decisions, since 1839, (when the first edition was published) have so radically affected this branch of the law, that an entirely new arrangement has been adopted, and a much larger volume will be required than that originally published. The editor and publishers will make every effort to present to the Bar a treatise which will exhaust the law upon this subject, as far as it has been announced, and which will be found practically useful to the profession. It will contain Precedents of Forms carefully prepared, with a view to the latest aspects of the law; and also, all the acts of Assembly relating to the subject. The table of cases and index will be elaborate and exhaustive.

BURTON ON THE LAW OF REAL PROPERTY—An Elementary Compendium of the law of Real Property, by Walter Henry Burton, Esq., late one of the Fellows on Mr. Viner's foundation for the study of the Common Law in the University of Oxford, with notes, showing the alterations in the law to the present time, to which is now prefixed an introductory chapter, giving a concise historical outline of such parts of the law as have been the subject of statutory alteration, by Edward Priestly Cooper, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister at Law. From the last (the eighth) London edition, with full American annotations. By Charles Goepf, Esq. 1 vol., 8vo.

GOWEN ON WILLS.—In 2 vol's 8vo., of 700 pages each.

Vol. I.—Execution and Probate of Wills.

Vol. II.—Construction of Wills.

A Treatise on the Law of Wills and Testamentary Dispositions in the United States. By James E. Gowen, Esq., of the Philadelphia Bar.

A DIGEST OF THE LAWS OF THE UNITED STATES on the plan of Purdon's Digest, 1700 to 1856.—Kay & Brother beg leave to announce that they have, in course of preparation, a Digest of the Laws of the United States, by F. C. Brightly, Esq., editor of Purdon's Digest, &c., &c., which will be compiled on the model, which, in the case of their eighth edition of Purdon's Digest, has given so much satisfaction to the Legal Profession and the Public.

A. W. RAND'S SELF-CLEANING FURNACE. Boynton's Patent.

Having put up a large number of these Furnaces, both in public and private buildings, (including 24 put up at the Philadelphia County Prison, in place of the 44 torn out.) and tested them during the cold weather of 1855, and 1856, being the coldest weather we have had for twenty or thirty years. They have given the most universal satisfaction, and those having them in use were perfectly delighted with the abundance of warm, pleasant air, and abundant ventilation afforded thereby, while so many were suffering from cold, and troubled with the deficiencies of their heating apparatus. We take great pleasure, therefore, in recommending them to the notice of the public, and would call their attention particularly to an examination of the greatly increased amount of effective radiating surface, their perfect solidity and durability, the improved manner of making the joints, entirely preventing any escape of gases, and the manner of distributing the fire, so as to cause it to impinge directly against the large amount of surface, without the objectionable and unnatural method of forcing the current downwards.

We have also a full assortment of HAYES' PATENT TUBULAR OVEN RANGES, now so universally used, and favorably known. Also, HAYES' PATENT VENTILATORS, &c., &c., all of which will be put up in the very best manner, and by the most skillful workmen, constantly engaged for that purpose, by A. W. RAND, No. 82 North SIXTH Street, Philada. may 16-ly.

THE QUARTERLY LAW JOURNAL.

A. B. GUIGON, EDITOR.

J. W. Randolph, Richmond, Va.

We have received the third number of this publication, which appears to be conducted with marked ability, and we doubt not, if sustained by them as it should be, the gentlemen of the Southern Bar will find it peculiarly adapted to their wants, and if continued it must soon become indispensable to every one in active practice. It is high time that the Bar, in all parts of the Union, should wake up to the great advantages of the Periodical Press, and its peculiar adaptedness to their wants. While all the other professions and occupations enjoy these advantages, through well established and well sustained Journals in every part of the Union, there are but three or four Law Periodicals in the whole country, and the great advantages they afford not as widely appreciated as they should be. We believe that many more such publications in other parts of the country, on the plan of the Quarterly, would prove of great service to the profession, and the more there are the more useful would each be found. Notwithstanding the widely differing systems of jurisprudence in the several States, questions of general importance constantly arise which are decided upon principles drawn from the same common sources. This is particularly so in all questions of Mercantile and Constitutional Law. The great advantage of early information of legal decisions is appreciated by every practising lawyer. The reports of none of the States appear until long after the decisions are made, while the bulk of the volumes are greatly increased by cases involving the construction of local statutes, or particular agreements of no interest beyond the particular neighborhood of the venue. So that the few judges and lawyers who can afford the expense of purchase, if they could find time to read them, are forced to rely upon Digests for an imperfect knowledge of the current of decision so necessary for them to attain. All these disadvantages may be removed, and early, correct reports of all the cases of any general interest or application, in all the Courts of the Union, be made available to the profession throughout the Union at a very small expense compared with the advantages afforded; if the gentlemen of the Bar will sustain the Legal Periodicals, now established, and encourage the establishment of others in appropriate localities. A great many advantages would flow from the constant and prompt interchange of opinion among the Bench and Bar of different sections, tending to uniformity of construction in points of Constitutional and Commercial Law; to improvement in forms and practice, as well as to aid in maintaining the dignity and honor of the profession. Although the Quarterly is particularly intended for the use of the Bar of Virginia and the South, it is none the less valuable to the Lawyers of Pennsylvania and other States, many of whom will, no doubt, avail themselves of the facilities it affords, for access to the opinions of the able jurists of the Bench of Virginia and other Southern States. We may instance the case of Sellman v. Dunn, under our new head of Commercial Law, and the points decided in Ritchie, vs. Wilson, in which the question of Literary Piracy is ably considered.

EXCHANGE AND REAL ESTATE BROKERS.

The decision of Judge Thompson in the case of Com. vs. Manley, is of great importance to all Brokers. It appears that any one of them transacting business before obtaining his license is liable to the penalty of $500—and that after payment of the license does not authorize remission of the fine.

TO LAWYERS.

A young man from the country, in very moderate circumstances, who has come to Philadelphia to complete his studies by attending the Law Lectures this winter, which he has been most kindly permitted to do gratis, is earnestly desirous, and would be very grateful, for such occupation in a Lawyer's office through the day, as would enable him to pay his board. Satisfactory testimonials. Address "Student," at this office.

Court of Common Pleas.

Opinions by Thompson, P. J.

HENRY APPLE'S ESTATE.

Jurisdiction—Orphans' Court—Trust.

The trust, under the will of Henry Apple, was vested in the original trustees' nominative, and the fact that they were also appointed executors, and that, in the clause giving power to sell the real estate, in case an equal division of it could not be made, they are styled executors and trustees, could not change the character in which they should act, and require them, in making sale, to act ratione officii, as executors. The trust was clearly distinct from the duties of an executor, and therefore within the jurisdiction of the Court of Common Pleas. Baird's case, 1 W. & S. 290; Wheatley vs. Badger, 7 Barr 459; Johnsons app. 9 Barr 416. The present Trustee was appointed by the Court of Common Pleas, and though he obtained letters of administration, de bonis non, he acquired thereby no additional power to execute the trust which was for a partition or sale of the property, and not to bring it into administration—6 Harris 179, Ross vs. Barclay. His authority to act was as trustee only, not having the character or position of an executor. As such trustee he was amenable to the jurisdiction of either the Court of Common Pleas or the Orphans' Court. Those courts having concurrent jurisdiction where the trust is not annexed to the office of executor, 1 W. & S. 289.

The present trustee, Mr. Stearly, doubting, perhaps, his power under the will, applied to the Orphans' Court for authority to proceed to make partition, and failing in that, obtained therefrom an order to sell the real estate. The sale was made and, under subsequent proceedings, the trustee was obliged to execute deeds to the parties in interest. No further proceedings were had in the Orphans' Court, nor was any account of the sale, nor of the trust, filed in that court. After some time had elapsed, the trustee, in answer to a citation from this court, filed the account, which has given rise to the present question. The trustee took no exception to the jurisdiction of the Court of Common Pleas, nor did he suggest that the Orphans' Court had obtained control of the trust, but went before the auditor, appointed to adjust the account, and submitted to his action. It is now contended by the accountant that this court has improperly exercised jurisdiction over him, as before filing his account here, the Orphans' Court had obtained the control of the trust. It is true that the Orphans' Court authorized the sale made by the trustee and obliged him to convey the property; but, over the general trust and the disposition of the proceeds of the property, that court had assumed no control. The account filed in this court shows the amounts raised by the sale made under the authority of the Orphans' Court, which are brought into the account as debits to be accounted for. It would have been more satisfactory had the whole account been settled in the Orphans' Court; but when a case has remained for nearly three years in this court, during which time the audit of the account has taken place, and where little appears to remain for the fulfilment of the trust, but the settlement of the commissions and interest to be allowed to the trustee; and where it is clear that the court has jurisdiction over the subject, we do not think that justice requires that the case should be put out of court, because the Orphans' Court, having concurrent jurisdiction, had formerly decided questions which do not arise here, and which decisions may be considered final as far as those questions are concerned. We see no injury likely to result to the accountant by the settlement of his account here, while it is manifest that great delay and expense would be caused by turning the parties over to the Orphans' Court. See Seibert's app., 7 Harris 49.

For these reasons the exception taken to the jurisdiction of this court is dismissed.

COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA vs. R. MANLEY.

Exchange Brokers Appeal—Act of 4th March, 1824.

This suit was brought before an Alderman to recover from the defendant "the amount for license due to the Commonwealth" as an Exchange Broker. Judgment was rendered against the defendant for the amount claimed, and within the time allowed by law he appealed to this court. The plaintiff moves that the appeal be stricken off, because the defendant did not file with the magistrate the preliminary affidavit required by the 2nd section of the act of 4th March, 1824; Dunlop 388.

We do not think that the provisions of that act have any reference to the case in hand. An Exchange Broker, by the provisions of the act of 27 May, 1841, is required not merely to pay an annual license but to obtain from the Treasurer of the County, a commission in legal form, under the seal of the county, authorizing him to transact the business of an Exchange Broker for the term of one year from the date of the commission. Without such a commission it is illegal to act as an Exchange Broker. The 5th section of the same act makes it a penal offence to act when not duly commissioned, and annexes a penalty of $500 to the violation of the law. A County Treasurer cannot permit a party to carry on the business of a broker, and then bring suit for the price of a commission. He cannot thus legalize a transgression of the law. If he knows that a person has assumed to act without a commission, it is his duty, instead of suing for what, in this case, is termed, by the magistrate, "the amount of license due to the Commonwealth," to bring suit for the penalty of $500 which the law affixes to the offence. The same evidence that would suffice to show that the defendant ought to pay a "license" for carrying on the business of an Exchange Broker, would sustain the claim for the penalty, and the enforcement of the penalty is the only method prescribed by the law, to prevent a violation of the provisions of the act in question. It is expressly provided that the sum required to entitle a person to a commission as an Exchange Broker, Stock Broker or Bill Broker, shall be paid in advance for each and every succeeding year, during which any individual or partnership shall continue the business, and that the party shall receive a new commission. Without such commission the exercise of the business for a single hour is illegal and subjects the transgressor to the penalty. This penalty the County Treasurer cannot waive, either by accepting subsequent payment of the sum necessary to obtain a commission or by bringing suit for the same. The law gives him no such power. His duty clearly is to enforce the law as it stands, and in case the business referred to is carried on without an existing, regular commission to enforce the penalty provided against that offence.

The several subsequent acts, by which the annual sums, to be paid by the several classes of brokers, have been increased, and the last act on the subject, of 15 May, 1850, which requires the appraisers of mercantile taxes to assess the several brokers, according to the amount of business done by them respectively, do not provide for any mode of collecting the sums to be paid for the privilege of exercising their business. The last act referred to expressly directs that nothing, therein contained, shall be held to repeal any obligation, liability, penalty or duty imposed by any existing law, except only so far as the amount of the tax for a commission or license.

As this "tax" must be paid in advance it cannot become a debt due to the Commonwealth, because it is to be paid for the commission, and until the commission is applied for the Commonwealth has no right to demand the tax. A party neglecting to obtain the commission becomes liable to the penalty, and not to a suit under the provisions of the act of 4 March, 1824.

The defendant, in this case, is entitled to appeal from the judgment of the magistrate against him, as in other suits, without a preliminary affidavit, and this rule to strike off the appeal must, therefore, be discharged.

District Court.

Opinions by Judge Hare.

On Rule for New Trial.

RIODES vs. OBERTEUFFER.

New Trial. Weight of Evidence.

The law of this case presents no difficulty; but a grave question arises on the verdict of the jury, which is unquestionably against the weight of the testimony, and must be sustained if at all, by presumptions arising from the written evidence. There is no doubt, that receiving a note payable at a future day for an antecedent debt, is sufficient to sustain and imply an agreement, to suspend the debt until the maturity of the note, nor that this implication is strengthened, when the receipt given for the note states that it will be in full when paid, which necessarily gives rise to an inference, that the creditor is to wait until its maturity for payment. But all presumptions, save those which the law lays down juris et de jure, as inflexible rules of policy or evidence, may be rebutted by extrinsic evidence; and such evidence abounds in the present instance. The attorney in whose office the transaction occurred, and a young man who was also present, both declared that the plaintiff refused to say or to do anything, which should prejudice his right to an execution against the defendant, and said that he would only wait so long as he could do so with safety.

And John Oberteuffer, who was called on the other side, admits, that the judgment was not to be impaired, although he understood that there was to be no execution. Taking all the testimony together, the note seems to have been executed not as a suspension of the debt, but as an inducement to indulgence; and, if so, the verdict should have been for the plaintiff instead of the defendant. We therefore send the case to another jury for re-examination.

MURRAY vs. SIMPSON.

Second Verdict on same side.

We have great doubts of the propriety of the verdict in this case, which hangs on a single thread of evidence, and violates all the probabilities of the cause. Yet there certainly was some evidence for the jury; and it is the second verdict on the same side. The damages now found are moderate, and we should perhaps do the defendant an injury rather than a service by making the rule absolute. For these reasons it is discharged.

BUDD vs. CONARD.

Acknowledgement to Rebut Presumption of Payment.

The acknowledgement on which the jury found a verdict in this case, against the presumption of payment, arising from the lapse of twenty years, was certainly as slight as it could be, to operate as an acknowledgement at all. Yet it is equally certain that it was not a denial, not the sort of language which a man would use on being reminded of the existence of a debt, which he had paid or satisfied. The law on this point still remains on the footing, on which the statute of limitations stood many years ago, before an express or implied promise of payment was held necessary to obviate it, and while the only question was, whether the acts or language of the debtor, afforded just ground to believe in the continued existence of the debt; and the cases then ruled under the statute, go much farther than is necessary to support the verdict now before us. Besides, here was long continued absence, coupled with insolvency, which may serve to corroborate the decision of the jury, although they would not themselves be sufficient to warrant it. On the whole, with some doubt, we refuse this motion.

KING vs. McDERMOTT.

Negligence.

The chief evidence to prove that the death of the horse for which the plaintiff sues, was caused by negligence of the defendants servant, was the testimony of the witness, who said, that the plaintiff refused to let the animal, unless some one else could be found to drive it, and received a promise from the defendant that such should be the case. If this pledge was given, it was certainly broken, for the horse came by his death not long afterwards, while in the charge of the very man to whom the plaintiff objected. This no doubt induced the jury to find against the defendant, and would have been amply sufficient to warrant the verdict, had there been any evidence of carelessness at the time of the accident. But the only witness, who saw it, said that the horse stumbled and rolled into the water, dragging a mule to which he was attached along with him. This would seem to show that the fault lay with the animal rather than with the man. In many cases the presumption might be strong against a reckless driver, but no one can well urge a canal boat, to a dangerous rate of speed. On the whole, we think the jury went too far and order a new trial.

SCOTT vs. McEWEN.

Landlord and Tenant. Weight of Evidence.

In this case goods were distrained off the premises by the landlord, for rent due by the tenant. The plaintiff, who resided in the house, replevied them, alleging that they were her's not the tenants; and, therefore, protected from distress by the removal. The evidence sustained this allegation, with the single exception of some crockery, which did not exceed three or four dollars in value. The jury were told to find a verdict for the plaintiff, for the whole of the goods less the crockery, and to find as to that, a verdict for the defendant. They found without distinction for the plaintiff; and their verdict is unquestionably, to the extent of four dollars, against the weight of evidence. The case would clearly be one for a new trial, if the amount in dispute were of sufficient importance, or if it were other than that minimum, which the law deems unworthy of attention. No costs are at stake, for the defendant must in this as in other cases, bear the whole expense of the controversy, if the plaintiff succeed in obtaining judgment for any part, and thus establish the existence of a wrong, which justifies the institution of the action. So far, therefore, as this point is concerned, we refuse to disturb the verdict. But we are of opinion, that the jury erred in awarding the plaintiff fifty dollars damages. The mistake which he made in supposing that the furniture in the house belonged to the tenant, was highly natural, and more excusable than the conduct of those who concealed the fact from him. When no actual damage is proved beyond the mere taking, and there is nothing to show that this was oppressive or wanton, the jury should limit the compensation awarded to the injury actually proved. The plaintiff may obviate the objection by a remittitur; otherwise the rule for a new trial will be made absolute.

In the Circuit Court of the City of Richmond, Virginia, before the Hon. John M. Meredith, Judge.

Ritchie et al. v. Wilson et al.

WHAT IS LITERARY PIRACY?

The jurisdiction of Courts of Equity over literary property, is similar to that exercised over patents for inventions; and arises from an anxiety to give effect to the legal right, and restrain by means of the short process of an injunction, any violation which might become an injury irremediable, by the slow proceedings of the common law.

But if the legal right is disputed, the Court does not, except in a strong case, interfere in the first instance by injunction, but puts the party to establish his right at law, before it confers the equitable remedy.

When all the circumstances clearly show an intention on the part of plaintiffs to abandon the old title of a publication, or so combine with another as to lose its distinctive features, and amount to a new title, they waive their right to the old title and authorize its adoption at once, by other persons; at least they throw such a cloud over their legal right to the title, as to induce a Court to hesitate long before it will exercise its equitable relief.

The mere simulation by one party of another's title, however close, will not warrant the courts in arresting the publication by injunction.

The doctrine that the title of a book or periodical is part of the work, capable of being infringed, like the body of the publication, and that the infringement is to be redressed as a piracy, has not been expressly affirmed, either in this Country or in England. Something more is required than a mere usurpation of title. There must be some fraud or deception practised — [Southern Law Journal]

PROSPECTUS OF THE

LEGAL INTELLIGENCER FOR 1857, VOL. XIV.

HENRY E. WALLACE, EDITOR.

In this paper, which has become indispensable to every practising lawyer in Pennsylvania, are now published immediately after delivery, the Opinions of the Judges of

THE SUPREME COURT OF PENNSYLVANIA, (greatly in advance of the State Reports.)

THE DISTRICT COURT AND COURT OF COMMON PLEAS of Philadelphia, (only herein reported.)

THE UNITED STATES COURTS for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania.

REVIEWS of Law Books, Legal Dissertations, Intelligence, Miscellany, &c., &c.

THE LAWS Enacted by the Legislature of Pennsylvania at each Session.

Besides which, it contains by authority of law and rules of Court, all the Legal Advertisements required to be published in Philadelphia.

To the variety and amount of contents above enumerated, (which makes this the cheapest publication of the kind extant,) it is proposed in the next volume to add the following

New Features.

1. Early and correct Reports, under an appropriate head, of all Cases decided in the Courts of England, as well as this country, involving the Law of

BANKING, INSURANCE, CARRIERS, and other points of MERCANTILE LAW, and the Rights and Liabilities of INSURANCE AND RAILROAD COMPANIES, MINING AND LAND ASSOCIATIONS, BANKS, and other CORPORATIONS.

2. Full Reports of interesting JURY TRIALS in all parts of the Union.

These new features, combined with the present advantages it affords, cannot fail to make "THE LEGAL INTELLIGENCER" serviceable and interesting to Business Men as well as Lawyers, and of very great utility to Officers and Stockholders of all BANKS, RAILROADS, INSURANCE COMPANIES, and other CORPORATIONS in all parts of the Union.

Subscriptions are solicited. Specimen numbers will be sent to parties desiring to see the paper before subscribing.

It is published every FRIDAY, by

Law School of the University at Cambridge, Mass.

The instructors in this school are HON. JOEL PARKER, LL. D., Royal Professor. HON. THEOPHILUS PARSONS, LL. D., Dane Professor. HON. EMERY WASHBURN, LL. D., University Professor.

The course of instruction embraces the various branches of the Common Law, and of Equity, Admiralty, Commercial, International and Constitutional Law, and the Jurisprudence of the United States. The Law Library consists of about 14,000 volumes, and as new works appear they are added and every effort is made to render it complete.

Instruction is given by oral lectures and expositions, (and by recitations and examinations, in connection with them,) of which there are ten every week. Two Moot Courts are also holden in each week, at each of which a cause, previously given out, is argued by four students, and an opinion delivered by the presiding instructor. Rooms and other facilities are also provided for the Club Courts; and an Assembly is held weekly for practice in debate, and acquiring a knowledge of Parliamentary law and proceedings.

Students may enter the school in any stage of their professional studies or mercantile pursuits, and at the commencement of either term, or in the middle, or other part of a term. They are at liberty to select what studies they will pursue according to their view of their own wants and attainments.

The Academic year, which commences on Thursday, six weeks after the third Wednesday in July, is divided into two terms, of twenty weeks each, with a vacation of six weeks at the end of each term.

During the winter vacation, the Library is opened, warmed and lighted, for the use of the members of the school.

Applications for admission, or for Catalogues, or any further information, may be made to either of the Professors at Cambridge. June 6-1y.

| Dallas' Reports, 4 vols. . . . .  | 1754 to 1806 |
| Yates' Reports, 4 vols. . . . .   | 1791 to 1808 |
| Binney's Reports, 6 vols. . . . . | 1799 to 1814 |
| Addison's Reports, 1 vol. . . . . | 1791 to 1799 |

These Reports are condensed by T. J. Fox Alden, Esq., into three vols., and are sold at the low price of $15. The catalogue price of the old edition, to which they are greatly superior in type and papers is $69. They contain all that is of any value in the original, and as will be seen are sold at less than one fourth the price. The volumes already published are complete in themselves, having a copious index and table of cases.

To those who cannot afford to purchase the original series of Reports (many volumes of which are out of print) this work will be invaluable, whilst even those who do possess them, will buy it for convenience of reference.

From Hon. J. B. Gibson, Chief Justice.—I have examined the first volume of Mr. Alden's Condensed Reports, and think the work will be a valuable one, especially to the younger members of the bar, who cannot, at first afford to purchase the series of our reports, already between seventy and eighty volumes. The cases are clearly stated, and the points decided, are accurately extracted. JOHN B. GIBSON.

Testimonials speaking in the highest terms of the work, have also been received from Hon. Edward King, Hon. William B. McClure, Hon. William D. Kelly, Hon. Cornelius Darragh, Hon. John Galbreath, James Dunlop, Esq., Thomas Williams, Esq., and more than fifty other distinguished members of the Pennsylvania Bar.

IN PREPARATION,

Addison on Contracts.

This valuable work will be reprinted from the fourth London edition just issued, and contain many important American notes.

A NEW FEATURE.

A portion of our columns under an appropriate heading, will in future be devoted to the publication of notes of all the Decisions of the Courts of this country as well as Europe, in cases involving the liabilities and rights of Banks, Insurance and Railroad Companies, and other Corporations and their Stockholders, and important heads of Commercial Law, as Partnership, Agency, Carriers, Insurance, &c., &c.

The frequent issue of our publication will enable us to keep our subscribers fully posted as to Legislative and Judicial action on these subjects, by the publication of all Laws and Decisions, at the earliest moment after their promulgation. The obviously great advantage which this recueil in this form will afford the officers and stockholders in all their corporations, as well as the business community throughout the Union, will, we hope, induce an extensive addition to our subscription list among them.

It will also furnish the professors of the law in other States, additional reasons for availing themselves of the great advantages offered to them by this publication, which experience alone can enable them fully to appreciate.

TELEGRAPH LINES.

M'Andrew and others v. The Electric Telegraph Company.

Court of Queen's Bench.

November 2 and 3, 1855.

Negligence—Electric Telegraph Company—Unrepeated Messages—Mistake—Liability—Reasonable Regulations—Common Carriers—Notice.

This was an action against the defendants for negligence in the transmission of a message.

The declaration stated, that whereas, before and at the time of the agreement, the defendants carried on the business of transmitting and giving effect by means of their telegraph and apparatus, and otherwise, to intelligence and messages, for certain hire and reward in that behalf, and the plaintiffs were desirous that the defendants should transmit and give effect as aforesaid to a certain message, which the plaintiffs were then desirous of having transmitted from London to the master of a certain ship or vessel of the plaintiffs called The Foam, then lying off Exmouth Point, which said message was the following, that is to say: "Foam, proceed to Hull, immediate," and thereupon, and before, &c., in consideration that the plaintiffs, at the request of the defendants, would pay to the defendants the sum of 10s., the defendants promised the plaintiffs that they would transmit such message to the said master, and that though the plaintiffs paid the said sum of 10s. to the defendants, yet the defendants wholly neglected to and did not transmit the said message, but another and a different message, in the words following, to wit: "Foam, proceed to Southampton, immediate," and thereupon the said master proceeded with the said ship to Southampton, instead of to Hull, as he otherwise would have done, and then landed and discharged her cargo at Southampton, whereby the plaintiffs lost, &c.

First plea, non assumptis; second plea, that the defendants made the promise alleged under and subject to a certain condition, that is to say, that the defendants would not be responsible for mistakes in the transmission of unrepeated messages, from whatever cause they might arise; that the message mentioned was an unrepeated message; and that the substitution of the word "Southampton" for the word "Hull" in the said message as delivered, was and arose from a mistake within the meaning of the said condition.

Joinder of issue; and also replication to the second plea, that the said promise and condition therein mentioned were respectively made after the passing and coming into operation of "The Electric Telegraph Company's Act, 1853," and related to and were for the use of an electric telegraph erected under the provisions of the said act, for the purpose of sending a message under the said act, subject to the provisions thereof for the service of her Majesty and for the purposes of the said company; that the said company have at all times refused to transmit repeated messages without extra reward in that behalf; that the said condition and refusal were and are regulations made by the said company for the use of the said telegraph, and to which the use thereof was and is subject, and were not nor are reasonable regulations within the meaning of the said act in that behalf. Issue.

At the trial before Jervis, C. J., at the London sittings, after Trinity term, it appeared that the defendants were incorporated under the provisions of the 16 & 17 Vict. c. 103, by which former acts were repealed. The 66th section of that act provides: "That the use of any telegraph erected or formed under the provisions of this act for the purpose of receiving and sending messages shall, subject to the prior rights of use thereof for the service of her Majesty, and for the purposes of the company, and subject also to such reasonable regulations as may be from time to time entered into by the company, be open for the sending or receiving of messages by all persons alike without favor or preference."

After the opening of the plaintiffs' counsel, the following facts were agreed to be admitted. "The plaintiffs were merchants in London and Liverpool, and, in the autumn of 1854, chartered The Foam to proceed to St. Michael's for a cargo of oranges, and thence to a safe port in the United Kingdom, according to orders. The ship had arrived at Exmouth Point on her home voyage, in the month of December, 1854, and one of the plaintiffs went to the chief office of the Electric Telegraph Company, in Lothbury, and having paid the price for an "unrepeated" message, signed a message paper containing the following form:—

"Electric Telegraph Company.

"Please to send the following uninsured message according to the conditions indorsed hereon:—

"M'Andrew and Co.

"R. Redway, owner of Foam.
The Point, Exmouth.

"Foam proceed immediate to Hull.

"M M South Devon Telegraph from Ex. Pd.
"57, Lothbury, J. D.

(Signature and address of sender.)

"R. M'Andrew, (Signature.)

"All Hallows Chambers, (Address.)

"The company will not be answerable for errors caused by indistinct writing."

On the same paper there were indorsements as follows:—

"Conditions as to uninsured messages.

"The public are informed that, in order to provide against mistakes in the transmission of messages by the electric telegraph, every message of consequence ought to be repeated by being sent back from the station at which it is to be received, to the station from which it is originally sent. Half the usual price for transmission will be charged for repeating the message. The company will not be responsible for mistakes in the transmission of unrepeated messages, from whatever cause they may arise; nor will the company be responsible for mistakes in the transmission of a repeated message, nor for delay in the transmission or delivery, nor for non-transmission or non-delivery of any message, whether repeated or unrepeated, to any extent above 5s., unless it be insured.

"Correctness in the transmission of messages can be insured at the following rates, &c. The company will not be responsible in any case for delays arising from interruptions in the working of their telegraphs.

"J. L. RICARDO, Chairman.

Notice. Messages to be sent to any place beyond the extent of the company's lines or stations, will be delivered by the company's officers at their terminal station mentioned in the subjoined request to such parties as may have charge of the further means of conveyance; but it is expressly provided, that the company are, in no case, to be held responsible for the transmission or delivery of the message beyond the terminal station, in such request mentioned."

"(Request.)

"I request that this message may be forwarded from the company's office at Exeter—(being the terminal station of the company) by South Devon Telegraph—to the address mentioned therein, subject to the above conditions; and have deposited 5s., to be applied for that purpose.

(Signed) "B. M'ANDREW & Co."

The message was transmitted by the defendants' telegraph to Exeter, to be thence forwarded by the South Devon Telegraph to Exmouth; but, in consequence of a mistake, either in the transmission of the message, or in reading it off at Bristol, where there is a break in the defendants' telegraph, the word "Southampton" was substituted for "Hull" before the message reached Exeter,—the two words, "Southampton" and "Hull," being similar to each other according to the defendants' mode of telegraphing. The message, so altered, having been delivered to the captain of The Foam, he proceeded with her to Southampton; and the result was, that the cargo was sold for a considerably less price than it could have been sold for if the vessel had proceeded to Hull according to the plaintiffs' order. On this admitted state of facts, the counsel for the plaintiffs and the defendants agreed to treat the question as one of law for the decision of the judge. The Lord Chief Justice ruled that the condition subject to which the defendants undertook to forward the message the subject of the action, was a defence under the general issue; and if that were not so, that the condition in the second plea mentioned and alleged to be unreasonable by the second replication to that plea, was a reasonable one, within the 66th section of the company's act; and he accordingly nonsuited the plaintiffs, reserving them leave to move to set aside the nonsuit and enter a verdict for them for a sum to be agreed upon between them.

November 2 and 3. Byles, Sergt., moved for a rule nisi accordingly. The plaintiffs are entitled to recover. The statute under which the company is constituted gives the public a right to the use of the telegraph, subject to the right of the Queen's service and to reasonable regulations, and imposes on the company a duty towards the public like that which is incumbent on common carriers and innkeepers at common law. The provisions of the statute in favor of the public would be absolutely nugatory if the company were at liberty to impose what conditions and restrictions they pleased. The question in this case is, whether the conditions imposed by the company are reasonable or not; and it is agreed that that question is to be treated as a question of law. Here the company, by its conditions, undertakes, as it were, to sell three different species of articles: 1, unrepeated messages; 2, repeated messages, and 3, insured messages. With regard to the first class, they say they will not hold themselves responsible at all; with respect to the second, that they limit their liability to 5s.; and as to the last, that they limit their liability to the sum for which a premium of insurance is paid. Such conditions cannot be considered reasonable. First, as to the insurance: for what sum is the party sending the message to insure? How can he estimate the probable loss to arise from the non-delivery or misdelivery of the message?

[JERVIS, C. J. Do you think the legislature could have intended to cast on the company, for a payment of half a crown, a liability to the extent of 100,000l. ?]

Why should it not, in case of gross negligence by the company?

[JERVIS, C. J. The 66th section of the company's act seems to have been introduced in consequence of a case in the Court of Queen's Bench, where it appeared that a railway company gave certain parties more favorable terms than the public in general. There seems to be two ways of looking at the case, first, to consider whether these are "regulations" within the 66th section; and then to see whether the company, from its constitution and nature, cannot make contracts, like carriers, to limit its liability.]

Before the Carriers Act, a carrier could at common law limit his liability within reasonable bounds, but not absolutely, Garnett vs. Willan, 5 B. & Ald. 58. Then, since the act of parliament has imposed upon the Electric Telegraph Company the duty of conveying for all the public, they are in the situation of common carriers; and independently of their act, they can only limit their liability to a reasonable extent, and that is all which the act enables them in express terms to do.

[CROWDER, J. Could not a carrier make a special contract with the party sending?]

That would depend upon the nature of the contract; it might be such that the party sending could refuse to enter into it, and insist upon the goods being carried notwithstanding.

[CROWDER, J. The cases upon the liability of railway companies have decided that they may, by a special contract, limit their liability so as to protect themselves against the grossest negligence.]

Hern v. The London and Southwestern Railway Company, 10 Exch. Rep. 793; s. c. 29 Eng. Rep. 495, shows that a want of notice under the Carrier's Act would not protect the company from the consequences of their neglect in all cases.

[JERVIS, C. J. Does any question arise upon the pleadings in this case?]

Only thus far, that the point now under consideration arises under the special plea, and not under the plea of not guilty; for although the declaration states an absolute engagement to convey the message, the plaintiff is still at liberty to prove a qualified engagement as if he were declaring against a bailee. Ross v. Hill, 2 Com. B. Rep. 877. The special plea and the replication to it raise the question, whether this is an unreasonable condition; and it is unreasonable in this, that no message can be safely sent, whether repeated or unrepeated, unless the sender pays an insurance. But how is he to know what the direct damages, still less what the consequential damages, in the event of a mistake by the company, will be. He cannot know against what he is to insure, or how to calculate the sum he is called upon to pay beforehand.

JERVIS, C. J. I am of opinion in this case, that there ought to be no rule. Yesterday, when the case was mentioned, I suggested to my brother Byles that this might be considered first, whether the condition which is on the back of the contract was or was not a regulation within the meaning of the act of parliament. He, upon consideration, has, very properly, not presented that point, because the question is still the same. If it be a regulation within the act, then the question would arise whether it is reasonable within the act. If it is not a regulation within the act, then the company would be in the position of carriers, who would be liable at common law, but who might limit their liability by special notice, subject to the qualification that they could not limit it to protect themselves against gross negligence. Therefore, in any way of viewing the case, the question will be, aye or no, is this particular regulation or condition reasonable? Now, we are not called on to say whether the whole and every portion of the condition on the back of the contract is or is not reasonable, although my brother Byles was warranted in referring to other parts of it in illustration of his argument. All that we are called on to say is, whether this part, which is the subject matter of the defence, is or is not reasonable, that is to say, that the company will not be responsible for unrepeated messages. So far from that being, as has been contended, an unreasonable qualification, it seems to me that it is highly just and reasonable that the company should require a message to be checked and corrected in order to ascertain whether they are correctly representing what is entrusted to them, by repeating the message, so that the person who sends it may see whether they are correct in the message they have sent. It seems to be perfectly reasonable that that should be so. My brother Byles says it is not reasonable on this account, because, as it is impossible to calculate the loss which is to be insured against, therefore the sender of a message cannot estimate any amount for which the premium is to be paid as the price of the insurance. If that be a good argument, it goes against all insurance; and the consequence is, that in every possible case the company are without any protection, and will be obliged, from the uncertainty of the risk which, of necessity, is incident to the carrying on of their business, to become, what it is not contended that they are, general insurers against all loss; because, if this condition is unreasonable, on the ground that the amount to be insured against cannot be ascertained, in no case can the amount to be insured against be ascertained. Therefore, every protection would be unreasonable. It seems to me, if that be so, and, to a certain extent, undoubtedly it is, there would be an impossibility of ascertaining the amount of the risk in almost every case. There is, therefore, an infirmity in the business, arising from the very nature of it, which is well known to the contracting parties, one of whom is to send, and the other to have sent, a message by his direction. But that is no reason why the company may not avail themselves of what persons in their position, namely, carriers, may avail themselves of, that is to say, stipulations and conditions brought home to the knowledge of the party contracting with them, which will limit their liability. I think it is highly reasonable; and therefore there ought to be no rule.

CROWDER, J. I am of the same opinion. By the 66th section of the 16th & 17 Vict. c. 108, it is enacted, that the use of the telegraph shall be subjected to such reasonable regulations as may, from time to time, be made or entered into by the company, open for the sending or receiving of messages; and the question here is, whether the regulation which has been referred to is a reasonable regulation within that section. In the opinion which I give, I confine myself entirely to the regulation which raises the question upon this occasion—not to the whole which I find upon the back of this document, embracing some points about which there may be considerable doubt. But the question is, whether this is a reasonable regulation, that the message should be repeated in order to make the company responsible. Now, the words, so far as that part of the indorsement is concerned containing the rule are, "that the public are informed that, in order to provide against mistakes in the transmission of messages by the electric telegraph, every message of consequence ought to be repeated;" and it goes on to state that half the usual price for transmission shall be charged for repeating it, and that the company will not be responsible for mistakes in the transmission of un-repeated messages, from whatever cause they may arise. The public have an opportunity of paying a small sum for an unimportant message, when it matters very little to them whether it be transmitted correctly or not. If it is a matter of importance and they wish to avoid mistakes, it may be repeated, and then an additional sum is to be paid for its being repeated. What is there in the slightest degree unreasonable in that? I do not enter into the question how far the condition afterwards imposed here was correct or not, that is not before us. In this case there was clearly a mistake, and Southampton was substituted for Hull; and that is alleged to have arisen in consequence of the message not being repeated. Clearly, that appears to have been a mistake within this regulation; and I therefore think there ought to be no rule.

WILLES, J. I am of the same opinion. It may be matter material to consider whether the word "regulation" in the act of parliament was or was not intended to include such a condition as this in the contract between the company and those who might send messages; because, supposing that the word "regulation" does include such part of the contract, it might be reasonable for the company to do what a party, if he had the sending of a message for himself by the telegraph might have done. If a man wants to send a message by the telegraph which shall be correctly read, he would have it repeated; then, if it is repeated, it involves more labor, and he must pay for it; he must pay more for a repeated message than for an un-repeated message; and, of course, he must pay the company more for taking on themselves the risk of the message not going rightly, considering the accidents to which such things are liable. I think it is obviously reasonable that a man who requires either greater labor, or that the company should undertake greater risk, should pay them something for it. It is not stated here that the difference in amount charged by the company for the transmission of an un-repeated and a repeated message, or an un-insured and an insured message, is greater than fairly represents the difference of labor or the amount of the risk. Supposing the word "regulation" in the act of parliament does not extend to the company as bailees, then so far as they are bailees they are regulated by the common law. And so far back as 1808 it appears, by the case of Izett v. Mountain, 4 East, 871, to have been considered so clear, that counsel there declined to argue that a carrier, upon whom the liability of an insurer is imposed by the common law, could not protect himself by such a notice as was equivalent to this condition, the carrier's notices being nothing more than conditions imported into the contracts between them and their customers; and if at common law such a condition might have been imposed on the plaintiff, it is clear that, under this statute, there is nothing to prevent the company from imposing this condition.

Rule refused.

RAILROADS.

WHITE MOUNTAINS RAILROAD COMPANY v. EASTMAN, ADM'R.

Assessments on railroad shares—Fraudulent subscription to railroad stock—Stockholders as witnesses.

That a witness may be made liable for the debts of a corporation on account of his having been a stockholder therein, under the statute of this State giving a remedy to the creditors of the corporation in certain cases specified, and upon particular proceedings presented for the recovery of their debts, against the stockholders personally, is no ground for excluding the witness from testifying for the corporation.

The records made by the clerk of a railroad corporation of the proceedings of the directors in ordering assessments upon the shares of the capital stock, may be used as evidence by the corporation in a suit brought by them to recover the assessments upon shares subscribed for by the defendant, he being one of the original grantees in the charter, and a director at the times of ordering the assessments, and having exercised the privileges of a stockholder from the time of his subscription, by virtue of the shares so subscribed for.

The intestate subscribed for thirty shares in the capital stock of the plaintiff corporation, agreeing to pay by the terms of the subscription, to the treasurer, the assessments which might be made upon the shares as ordered by the directors. At the time of the subscription, the clerk of the corporation, by order of the directors, signed and delivered to the intestate a writing as follows:

"In consideration that Ebenezer Eastman (the intestate) will subscribe for 30 shares in the White Mountains Railroad, said corporation agree to release him from twenty-five of said shares or such portion of said twenty-five shares, as he may within one year elect to withdraw from his subscription, and if he has been assessed and has paid anything on those shares, that he elects to be released from, that those payments shall be allowed him on the shares that he retains, and that the treasurer shall regulate his stock accounts and assessments accordingly."

It was understood between the directors and the intestate that the subscription was to be held out to the public as a bona fide subscription for the thirty shares, and no public disclosure was to be made of the fact that such writing had been given to the intestate.

Held, that the agreement to release the intestate from any of the shares subscribed for, was a fraud upon other subscribers, and void. And that the intestate was liable for the assessments on the thirty shares.

Court of Appeal in Chancery. May 31.

FARINA v. SILVERWELL.

Trade mark—Injunction—Copyright.

The plaintiff filed a bill alleging an exclusive right to use a particular label and wrapper on bottles containing his cologne water, and that the defendant, a printer, was in the habit of making and vending spurious labels and wrappers in large quantities. It appeared that the defendant was in the habit of making and selling labels and wrappers in imitation of the plaintiff's, but there was some evidence tending to show that they were or might be used by the purchasers in trading with the genuine cologne water, much of which was sold without wrappers of this sort.

Held, by the Lord Chancellor, reversing the decision of Wood, V. C., that the plaintiff was not entitled to an injunction.

Where one designates his wares by a particular trade mark, he may restrain all others from selling wares not manufactured by him, with a similar mark, but not from attaching the mark to the genuine wares, which are lawfully in their possession, without the mark.

There is no copyright in a label used as a trade mark.

Exchequer. May 27 and June 10.

RACKARON v. MARRIOTT.

Statute of Limitations—Acknowledgement or new promise.

The plaintiff called the attention of the defendant to his debt, on the ground that the Statute of Limitations would soon attach to it. The defendant replied in writing:—"I beg to say that I do not wish to avail myself of the Statute of Limitations to refuse payment of the debt alluded to in your note; but I have not the means of settling it, and must crave a continuance of your indulgence. My situation, as a salaried clerk, does not afford me the means of laying up a shilling; but in course of time, if I continue in my present employment, I may reap the benefit of my services in an augmentation of my salary, to enable me to propose some satisfactory arrangement with you."

Held, that this letter contained no sufficient promise or acknowledgment to bar the statute.

June 11. BRASS v. MAITLAND.

Ships and shipping—Duty of shipper of dangerous cargo.

It is the duty of the shipper of goods of a dangerous nature to give notice of their nature to the master, unless the latter knows or ought to have known it.

Crampton, J., doubted whether the rule would hold where the shipper himself had no actual notice of the nature of the goods.

IN THE ORPHANS' COURT FOR THE CITY AND COUNTY OF PHILADELPHIA.

In the matter of the Trust Estate of HANNAH ROBBINS, under the will of MARY BROWN, deceased.

Sur petition of JOSEPH A. CLAY, Esq., Trustee, filed in the said Court, on the third day of October, A. D. 1856, praying the Court to grant an order for the sale of a certain brick messuage or tenement and lot or piece of ground situate on the east side of Fifth street, between Sassafras and Vine streets, in the city of Philadelphia.

Also, a certain frame messuage and lot or piece of ground, situate on the west side of Crown street, between Sassafras and Vine streets, in the city of Philadelphia, as more particularly described in the said petition.

The undersigned, Master and Examiner, to whom the said petition was referred by the Court to inquire into the facts, and report upon the expediency of granting the said prayer, and other matters contained in said petition, hereby gives notice, that he will meet the parties interested in the premises for the purposes of his appointment, on Monday, Oct. 27th, A. ## A. W. RAND'S SELF-CLEANING FURNACE.

Boynton's Patent.

Having put up a large number of these Furnaces, both in public and private buildings, (including 24 put up at the Philadelphia County Prison, in place of the 44 torn out.) and tested them during the cold weather of 1855, and 1856, being the coldest weather we have had for twenty or thirty years. They have given the most universal satisfaction, and those having them in use were perfectly delighted with the abundance of warm, pleasant air, and abundant ventilation afforded thereby, while so many were suffering from cold, and troubled with the deficiencies of their heating apparatus.

We take great pleasure, therefore, in recommending them to the notice of the public, and would call their attention particularly to an examination of the greatly increased amount of effective radiating surface, their perfect solidity and durability, the improved manner of making the joints, entirely preventing any escape of gases, and the manner of distributing the fire, so as to cause it to impinge directly against the large amount of surface, without the objectionable and unnatural method of forcing the current downwards.

We have also a full assortment of HAYES' PATENT TUBULAR OVEN RANGES, now universally used, and favorably known. Also HAYES' PATENT VENTILATORS, &c., &c., all of which will be put up in the very best manner, and by the most skillful workmen, constantly engaged for that purpose, by

THE PENNSYLVANIA RAIL ROAD AND MINING REGISTER.

THOS. S. FERNON, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

The spirit and objects of this publication and the evident ability of its conductor, from knowledge of the subject, to effect them, if properly sustained, entitle the Register to the hearty support of every Pennsylvanian. The business men of Philadelphia can in no way better promote their own interests than by aiding in sustaining it. It is time that Philadelphia should assume her proper place among the commercial cities of the Union. Her geographical position entitles her to the first. The suggestion of the editor, if followed, will, we think, enable her to attain it. The mining intelligence contained in this paper is of great value and should, we think, induce a large subscription among all interested in the development of the immense mineral wealth of Pennsylvania. The price, to Clubs, $1.50, is very low for a paper of its size.

THE BANISHED SON, AND OTHER STORIES OF THE HEART.

MRS. CAROLINE LEE HENTZ.

T. B. Peterson, 102 Chestnut Street.

The first and principal of the beautiful stories that contribute to make up this pleasant volume, is full of the absorbing interest and graceful composition that has rendered the author so justly distinguished as a writer of fiction. The remainder of the stories, though shorter, abound in earnest description and genuine pathos.

WIDDIFIELD'S NEW COOK BOOK.

T. B. Peterson, Philadelphia.

This book being the work of a person so long celebrated for skill in the art it teaches, as Mrs. Widdifield, can be relied upon as the best of the kind ever published. The large, clear type with which it is printed, will be considered no small recommendation in the Culinary Department of most households. Peterson's knowledge of the business of a publisher, is nowhere more fully illustrated than in the getting up of this excellent book.

PETERSON'S DUODECIMO DICKENS'S DAVID COPPERFIELD.

One of the best of the author's works is here presented in the neatest manner, and most convenient form. This edition, in our opinion, exceeds any that have been issued from the American press.

PHOTOGRAPHS.

Mr. Thomas H. Peto, No. 31 South Fifth St., below Chestnut, has for sale a Photographic likeness of his Hon. Judge Thompson, taken by Mr. Cook, at Root's Gallery, Fifth and Chestnut Streets, which we think an admirable specimen of the operator's skill in his extraordinary art. Mr. Peto furnishes them in neat frames at a moderate price.

Circuit Court, U. S.

INTERESTING DECISION BY JUDGE GRIER.

Although the Reporter of the third Circuit, to whom we are indebted for permission to print this opinion in advance of his 3d Volume, has not had leisure to prepare us a full statement of the case; we yet give the Court's opinion, which will be highly interesting to our New Jersey readers, where the facts of the case are sufficiently known.

The leading facts of the case were, that a company, having issued $50,000 worth of negotiable bonds, and having executed a mortgage in the ordinary form, and with the ordinary rights of foreclosure through the courts, afterwards became embarrassed, or insolvent; and the management of the company having been put into the hands of receivers, an act of the legislature of

New Jersey was obtained either by them or the company, authorizing a sale by the receivers, whose deed it was enacted should make an indefeasible title in fee simple, free from all liens, and especially from the lien of this mortgage; and substituting to the lien creditors, the money proceeds of the sale, in the place of the property mortgaged. The legislature seems to have thought that it could constitutionally make this substitution against the will of the mortgagees, by a kind of "equitable conversion."

JOHN M. MARTIN vs. THE SOMERVILLE WATER CO.

In C. C. of the U. S. for New Jersey. In Chambers.

Bill for foreclosure and injunction.

The demurrer to the bill in this case has been entered for the purpose of having a final hearing and judgment of the Court on the validity of the act of the legislature of New Jersey authorizing the receiver to sell the premises in question free and discharged from the lien and estate of the mortgagees.

It is contended that this legislation is forbidden both by the constitution of the State and that of the United States.

Previous to the 29th of June, 1844, the State of New Jersey was governed by the old colonial constitution, adopted on the 2d of July, 1776. This contained no bill of rights nor any clear limitation of the powers of the legislature. The history of New Jersey legislation exhibits a long list of private acts and anomalous legislation on the affairs of individuals, assuming control over wills, deeds, partitions, trusts and other subjects usually coming under the jurisdiction of courts of law or equity. Consequently, the decisions of the courts of New Jersey on questions arising under the old constitution, cannot be cited as precedents applicable to the present one, which carefully defines and limits the powers entrusted to the legislature, the executive and the judiciary. It is very desirable that the constitution of a state should be construed by its own tribunals, and we regret that the researches of counsel have not furnished us with such precedents. The case of Potts v. The Delaware Water Co., (1 Stocton, 592,) has reference to an act passed before the adoption of the present constitution. That act was declared by the court "not to impair the obligation of any contract, and to be remedial only." The first mortgagees gave their assent to the sales made under it, and others could not object to it as made without their authority. In this important respect it differs from the present case, and cannot be relied on as a precedent.

The validity of this act has been challenged on several grounds. If found invalid on any one, we need not examine the others.

The constitution of New Jersey has not only carefully limited the powers of the legislature, and separated them from those of the judiciary, but it adopts the prohibitions of the constitution of the United States against "ex post facto laws and laws impairing the obligation of contracts," and with this addition, "or depriving a party of any remedy for enforcing a contract which existed when the contract was made."

It is not contended that this act comes under the category of "an ex post facto law;" and if it be merely remedial in its character, as defendants contend, there can be no valid objection to it under this head of the constitution.

Does it impair the obligation of the contract between the mortgagees and mortgagors, or deprive the mortgagees of any remedy which existed when the contract was made?

The act and supplement must be construed together as forming one act. It is entitled "an act to relieve the creditors and stockholders of the Somerville Water Power Company," &c. It acts forth in its preamble, certain representations made, no doubt, by those who procured the act, showing plausible reasons for such legislative interference, but the validity of the act must be judged from its actual operation on the rights of parties subjected to it, and not by the pretences put forth by the preamble. This may show that the legislature acted in good faith and believing that their interference would wrong no one, but not that such was the actual result. Legislatures cannot be too cautious, when asked to interfere with special legislation for particular persons or particular cases, on ex parte representations. They cannot call all parties before them and judge upon a full hearing; this is for the courts. Their action may not always be unjust, but it may be and often is tyrannical and injurious.

Let us inquire what is the contract, and how is it affected by this act?

The mortgagees of this property hold the legal title in trust for the several bondholders, who may properly be treated as the real mortgagees. They may be said, in common parlance, to have a "lien" or "security" on the property mortgaged, but they have it by force of their legal title to the property. It is an estate in fee simple, defeasible only by the payment of the debt. When the condition of the obligations is broken, the mortgagees may enter on the premises and recover the rents, issues and profits thereof, till their debt is satisfied. If they see fit, they may appoint an agent or attorney, who may enter on the lands under their direction, and make sale of the same in satisfaction of the debt. This disposal of the mortgaged premises is to be made according to the discretion and judgment of the mortgagees, and not of another. No subsequent incumbrancer or assignee of the equity of redemption can divest their estate contrary to their will, unless by a tender of the debt due. They cannot be compelled, to suit the convenience of others, to put up the property to sale at a time or in a manner which might lessen or injure their security.

Now by this contract the estate of the mortgagees is defeasible only by payment of the debt. But this act permits the receiver to dispose of their estate, and does not provide that the debt shall be first fully paid. It permits the receiver to sell for any sum, whether it be sufficient for such purpose or not. And the receiver has made a contract of sale for a sum insufficient by many thousands of dollars. This is making a new contract for the parties and impairing the obligation of the mortgage. It may be truly said, "tis not so written in the bond." The mortgagees may dispose of their security for less than the amount of their debt, but no other person can.

2d. The obligation of this contract is moreover impaired by this act, in that it gives a precedence to certain indefinite costs and charges (not costs of the sale merely) to be paid out of the proceeds of the property before the mortgage debt. This is in direct contravention of the contract by which the estate was conveyed to the mortgagees free from all charges and incumbrances.

3d. The mortgagees had, by their contract, a remedy to be used at their own option and discretion as to time and mode of sale, and by law they had the remedy of entry on the premises and receiving the rents and profits. This act deprives them of both, contrary to the letter of the constitution of New Jersey, without invoking the aid of the cases of Bronson v. McHenry, (1 Howard, 311,) and McCracken v. Hayward, (2 How. 811.)

We have not thought it necessary to review the very numerous cases on this subject, or to attempt any metaphysical definition of what constitutes the "obligation of a contract;" as it is clear that any legislation which defeats the estate of the mortgagee, without payment or tender of the whole debt due on the bonds, which gives a preference to posterior liens, and which deprives the mortgagee of his remedy given by the covenants of his contract, as also that given by the law of the land, "impairs its obligation," and is contrary to the letter and spirit of the constitution of New Jersey. This act may be remedial as to the owners of the equity of redemption and those having liens against it, but the mortgagees have a right to say "non in hæc fœdera omni"—we have never agreed to have our estate defeated to suit the convenience of others. See 9 Barbour (N. York Reports) 48.

The complainants are entitled to a decree making the injunction perpetual, but the defendants have leave to answer as to the other charges of the bill.

SURROGATE'S COURT—CITY OF NEW YORK. Sept. 29.

BEFORE A. W. BRADFORD.

Interesting Question—Presumption of Death in the Case of an Absent Person.

In the matter of the Estate of Henry Eagle, deceased.

THE SURROGATE.—The testator died on the 9th of September, 1851. At the time of his decease Wm. Eagle, one of his sons and a legatee named in his will, had been absent between five and six years, and the question is now presented whether he died before or after his father, the testator.

It appears that Wm. Eagle was born in 1822, and from the age of 16 followed the sea as a mariner. He first made a whaling voyage to the Pacific, and although absent from home for four years does not seem to have been heard from during that period. His subsequent voyages were principally to the coast of South America, and the last intelligence received from him was by a letter written at Baltimore on the 12th of May, 1846, addressed to his brother-in-law. In this communication he stated that he had just arrived at that place from Montevideo, as mate of a vessel, and said: "Since I have arrived I have been offered charge of a hermaphrodite brig to go to the Coast of Africa, and I am balancing in my own mind between a captaincy and an old vessel and the coast fever. I shall determine in a few days." William Eagle was a single man, and he left a will constituting his brother, Eagle, his sole legatee. Nothing having been heard of him since May, 1846, after said lapse of seven years, his brother proved the will and took out letters testamentary, and now claims the legacy due William under his father's will. If William was living at the decease of his father in 1851, the legacy vested, and must be paid to his executor. If he was not then living, said legacy lapsed.

The point thus presented involves the question of the presumption of death of an absent person, in regard to whom no tidings have been received for a length of time. The Roman law contained few provisions on this subject. Captivity was equivalent to civil death, and if the husband were taken prisoner, the wife might marry again; but no time was prescribed during which she should await his return, until the terms of four and ten years were successively required by Constantine and Justinian (Novel, 22, o. 14). By the 117 Novel, c. 11, it was ultimately provided that there should be proof of the death before the wife could marry again. Absence, however long, without certain news, did not authorize a second marriage; and with this determination the Common Law agreed. In respect to property, one hundred years was stated as the limit of the presumption of life in the case of absent persons, quia in finis vitæ longævi hominis est (Deg. Lib. 7, Tit. 1, §56; Cod. Lib. 1, Tit. 2, §23). In conformity with this rule, in the greater number of countries on the Continent which adopted their jurisprudence from the Civil Law, the doctrine prevailed that an absent person should be presumed to be living for a hundred years from the time of his birth, that being the longest limit of ordinary life. Sumihame mentions several conflicting views; some of the civilians claiming seventy and others a hundred years as the proper time (Sumih., pt. 6, §13, pl. 2). A term so long and unreasonable eventually became shortened by custom and statute, and the several periods of three, five, seven, nine and ten years were adopted in various countries (Merlin, Absent, Act 115, Code Civil).

The Common Law is in accordance with the Civil Law in the adoption of the principle that the continuation of life is presumed until the contrary be shown. The statutes relative to bigamy and leases for life (1 Jac. 1, c. 11, §2; 19 Car. 2, c. 6) made an inroad upon this doctrine, and established a rule which was ultimately adopted by way of analogy in cases beyond the province of the statutes. Accordingly, when a party has been absent seven years since any intelligence of him, he is in contemplation of law presumed to be dead. This length of time may be abridged, and the presumption be applied earlier, by proof of special circumstances, tending to show the death, within a certain period; for example, that at the last accounts the person was dangerously ill, or in a weak state of health—was exposed to great perils of disease or accident—that he embarked on board of a vessel which has not since been heard from, though the length of the usual voyage has long elapsed. In such cases it is to be determined as a question of fact depending on evidence when death probably occurred, and if the circumstances known are sufficient to authorize such a conclusion, the decree may be placed at a time short of the seven years, as the proof may indicate. But when there are no facts material to the solution of the question, except simply absence without being heard of, then at the end of seven years the law presumes death. But still the point remains open, when the death occurred, whether at the beginning or at the end of the seven years, or at what other time. In Wilson v. Hodge, 2 East, 213—on a plea of the death of the principal to a bond—the Judge at nisi prius charged that the proof of the issue lay on the defendant, who averred the death, and on a motion to set aside the verdict for misdirection, Lord Ellenborough said there was no doubt but that the direction of the learned Judge was proper in point of law, and he referred to the case of Throgmorton v. Walton (2 Roel. R. 461), in which it was decided that where the issue is upon the life or death of a person once shown to be living, the proof of the fact lies on the party who asserts the death, for that the presumption is that the party continues alive until the contrary be shown. The same Judge, in Doe v. Jesson (6 East. 80), said: "The presumption of the duration of life with respect to persons of whom no account can be given, ends at the expiration of seven years from the time when they were last known to be living;" and in Hopewell v. De Penna (2 Campbell's R., 113) he held that a party pleading coverture was bound to prove her husband was living within seven years—implying that if such proof were given that the presumption of law was in favor of the continuance of life. In Rex vs. The Inhabitants of Twining (2 B. and Ad. 386), a woman had married a second time, twelve months after the departure of her first husband, who had never been heard of since, and the Court of King's Bench held that the presumption against the commission of a crime overcame that in favor of the life of the absent party. Justice Bayley said: "This is a case of conflicting presumptions, and the question is which is to prevail. The law presumes the continuation of life, but it also presumes against the commission of crime, and that even in civil cases, until the contrary be proved." In Rex vs. the Inhabitants of Harborne (2 Ad. and E. 540), and Nepeau v. Knight (5 B. and Ad. 93; 2 Mee. and W. 894), the Courts of King's Bench and of Exchequer adopted the doctrine that when the seven years have passed the law simply presumes death, and there is no presumption as to the time of death. Lord Denman, in delivering the opinion of the Court, held this language: "It is true the law presumes that a person shown to be alive at a given time remains alive until the contrary be shown; but when the seven years have passed the presumption of law relates only to the fact of death, and the time of death, whenever it is material, must be a subject of distinct proof." "Whoever finds it important to establish death at any particular period, he must do so by evidence of some sort." He accordingly held that a party claiming a reversion on the death of a life tenant, who was bound to bring his action within twenty years after the right accrued, and had brought it within twenty years after the lapse of seven years since the life tenant had disappeared, could not rely upon the presumption of life during the seven years, but should prove the time of the death.

There are some American cases in which this question has been considered. In Newman vs. Jenkins, 10 Pickering, R. 515, an agent whose principal had been absent seven years, presumed to be dead, had received from him a note within the seven years, and in any action on the obligation it was decided that he was not bound to show in point of fact that his principal was living when the note was given, but might rely upon the presumption of law in favor of life. In McCartee vs. Campbell, 1 Barbour Ch. R. 456, the Chancellor of this State, referring to Lord Denman's decision in Nepeau vs. Knight, as to the presumption in case of absence, said, "The only presumption arising from such absence is that the party is dead if he has not been heard of within the seven years mentioned in the statute, not that he died at any particular time within the seven years, or even on the last day of that term." And he held that a person who had been absent only two years, on the decease of the intestate in whose estate he was entitled to share, could not be presumed then dead, though more than seven years had subsequently passed without tidings. In Burr vs. Sim, 4 Wharton's R. 150, Justice Gibson denied the authority of the doctrine laid down by Lord Denman, and thus stated the rule: "The presumption of death as a limitation of the presumption of life must be taken to run exclusively from the termination of the prescribed period, so that the person must be taken to have then been dead, and not before."

In endeavoring to arrive at the proper rule on this subject, it should not be overlooked that, in the absence of evidence, we are left entirely without guide or direction as to any determination of fact.

There can be no doubt that, under certain circumstances, this is to be treated as a question of fact, and the language of Lord Denman is, in that view, strictly pertinent when he says: "Nothing can be more absurd than the notion that there is to be any rigid presumption of law on such questions of fact without reference to accompanying circumstances—such, for instance, as the age or health of the party. There can be no such strict presumption of law." What, however, is a Court or Jury to do when there are no accompanying circumstances—when there is no ground in fact for inferring death at any particular time? The question is not whether those presumptions are rigid and strict, but whether there are any such presumptions, and if so, what is their effect when there is an entire dearth of evidence tending to guide the conclusion as to life or death. Confessedly, before the analogy drawn from the statutes of bigamy and life tenancies prevailed, it was a rule of evidence to presume life unless the contrary was shown. That rule still continues, except so far as it has been modified by the presumption drawn from the statutes of death after seven years absence without intelligence. The practical effect of these two rules, if both are to be taken as subsisting, is that whenever the law is invoked as to rights depending upon the life or death of the absent party, he is to be deemed as living until the seven years have expired, and after that is to be deemed as dead. Not that the law finds as a matter of fact that he died on the last day of the seven years, but that rights depending on his life or death are to be administered as if he had died on that day. It is impossible to say when he died, or even to assert as a matter of fact that he is dead; but in the absence of all evidence, the law will account him as dead at a certain time, and not before. This is an artificial rule, and of course cannot be expected to square with the actual fact. It is the logical result of the presumptions, founded upon reasons of convenience and the necessity of fixing upon some limit within which the relations of the living to the absent are to be determined, more than upon any strong probabilities. This is the meaning of our statute in respect to life estates, which declares that if the life-tenant shall absent himself for seven years, and his death shall come in question, "such person shall be accounted naturally dead" in any action concerning the lands in which he had the estate for life, unless sufficient proof be made that he is still living, (1 R. S., p. 749, § 6. See Bigamy, 2 R. S., 687, § 9) "he shall be accounted dead." The statute so treats him and accounts him, just as the Common Law treated and accounted him living, until his death was proved. In neither case can it be said that his life or death has been actually proved; but in both cases it may be said that he shall be accounted living until, by reason of his absence, the law accounts him dead; and for the purposes of justice, the rights and relations of parties affected by his life or decease shall, in the absence of information, be determined by this technical presumption.

This certainly seems to me the most consistent and symmetrical rule; and when it is regarded as a dry legal doctrine, adopted for purposes of convenience, and from the necessity of having some limited period for the determination of the rights of absent persons, and not as a determination upon the death or the real time of the death, there would appear to be no grave objection against it. I am inclined to hold, therefore, that, in the case of absent persons, it is within the province of the Court or Jury to infer from circumstances, if any appear in proof, the probable time of death; but that, if no sufficient facts are shown from which to draw a reasonable inference that death occurred before the lapse of seven years, the person will be accounted in all legal proceedings as having lived during that period.

In the present instance it is not known what became of William Eagle. He had in view future engagements in his profession, but he was hesitating in what direction he should proceed, and it is impossible to surmise the conclusion to which he finally came. He had left his home at an early age, and never returned to it again; he had been absent on long voyages without communication with his family or friends; and, considering his vocation and previous habits, his absence at the period of his father's death would not necessarily raise a doubt as to his existence at that time. There is no fact leading my mind to a belief that he was then dead. If we are to indulge in conjecture, the probability is that he embarked on some voyage from Baltimore; but, failing to have the clue to his route, we are left destitute of any circumstances indicating special peril. It is for the executor or the legatees, who claim that he was dead at the time of his father's decease to show that fact, either by proof or presumption of law. This has not been done, and I must, therefore, hold that the legacy in his favor did not lapse, but vested in him on the testator's death, and must now be paid to his legal representatives.

By the testator's will, his executors were clothed with a power of sale in certain real estate. Upon coming to the execution of this power, and in order to give a valid title to the lands, it became necessary to procure a release of the widow's dower right. For this purpose the executors entered into an arrangement with the widow to pay her a certain gross sum. The amount was ascertained by a computation upon the principles of law applicable to annuities. This was proper in itself, and was a judicious act in its effect upon the sale of the property, which, of course, was sold more advantageously than would have been the case with an outstanding, unsettled claim for dower charged upon it. The amount paid by the executors was $15,000, or about $100 less than the value of an annuity payable semi-annually, according to the Northampton tables, at 7 per cent, and about $2,000 more than the value of such an annuity at 6 per cent. But, if the Carlisle tables be taken as a standard, the value at 7 per cent would be $16,435, and at 6 per cent, $14,149. The executors made the arrangement in question in good faith, and with a view to the benefit of the estate; and, having regard to the circumstances, I think they were fully justified in making an agreement with the widow for the payment of the widow.

The testator devised his personal estate to his widow and his real estate to his executors in trust. At the time of his decease there was an outstanding policy of insurance against loss by fire on some buildings owned by the testator, and after his death a loss occurred, and the amount of damage was paid to the executors under the policy. The widow claims this sum as a part of the testator's personal estate. I think, however, that she had no substantial interest in the policy, not having any interest in the property to which it related. Policies of insurance, though personal contracts are so far collateral to the subject matter to which they relate, that when there is a change of title to the subject matter by death, the legal representatives of the deceased take such moneys as may inure by virtue of the contract, in trust for the parties interested in the property insured. There must be a decree adjusting and settling the accounts in conformity with these views.

Sheriff's Sales.

Abstract of Properties to be sold by Geo. Megée, Esq., Sheriff, on Monday, November 3rd, at Sansom Street Hall, at 4 o'clock, P. M.

Conditions of Sale.

Fifty dollars of the price or sum at which the property shall be struck off, shall be paid to the Sheriff at the time of sale, unless the purchase money shall be less than that sum, in which case only the purchase money shall be paid.

Otherwise the property will again be immediately put up, and sold. The balance of the purchase money must be paid to the Sheriff, at his office within ten days from the time of sale, without any demand being made by the Sheriff, therefor. Otherwise the property may be sold again at the expense and risk of the person to whom it is struck off, who, in case of any deficiency at such re-sale, shall make good the same. Arrears of Ground Rent and taxes, if any, will be paid out of the purchase money, if the bills are presented to the Sheriff before he parts with the money; otherwise they will be paid by the purchaser.

Law School of the University at Cambridge, Mass.

The instructors in this school are HON. JOEL PARKER, LL. D., Royal Professor. HON. THEOPHILUS PARSONS, LL. D., Dane Professor. HON. EMERY WARBURN, LL. D., University Professor. The course of instruction embraces the various branches of the Common Law, and of Equity, Admiralty, Commercial, International and Constitutional Law, and the Jurisprudence of the United States. The Law Library consists of about 14,000 volumes, and as new works appear they are added and every effort is made to render it complete.

Instruction is given by oral lectures and expositions, (and by recitations and examinations, in connection with them,) of which there are ten every week. Two Mot Courts are also holden in each week, at each of which a cause, previously given out, is argued by four students, and an opinion delivered by the presiding instructor. Rooms and other facilities are also provided for the Club Courts; and an Assembly is held weekly for practice in debate, and acquiring a knowledge of Parliamentary law and proceedings.

Students may enter the school in any stage of their professional studies or mercantile pursuits, and at the commencement of either term, or in the middle, or other part of a term. They are at liberty to select what studies they will pursue according to their view of their own wants and attainments.

The Academical year, which commences on Thursday, six weeks after the third Wednesday in July, is divided into two terms, of twenty weeks each, with a vacation of six weeks at the end of each term.

During the winter vacation, the Library is opened, warmed and lighted, for the use of the members of the school.

Applications for admission, or for Catalogues, or any further information, may be made to either of the Professors at Cambridge. June 6-ly.

PENNSYLVANIA REPORTS.

A New and Cheap Edition.

ALREADY PUBLISHED.

Dallas' Reports, 4 vols. . . . 1754 to 1806 Yeates' Reports, 4 vols. . . . 1791 to 1808 Binney's Reports, 6 vols. . . . 1799 to 1814 Addison's Reports, 1 vol. . . . 1791 to 1799

These Reports are condensed by T. J. Fox Alden, Esq., into three vols., and are sold at the low price of $15. The catalogue price of the old edition, to which they are greatly superior in type and papers is $69. They contain all that is of any value in the original, and as will be seen are sold at less than one fourth the price. The volumes already published are complete in themselves, having a copious index and table of cases.

To those who cannot afford to purchase the original series of Reports (many volumes of which are out of print) this work will be invaluable, whilst even those who do possess them, will buy it for convenience of reference.

From Hon. J. B. Gibson, Chief Justice.—I have examined the first volume of Mr. Alden's Condensed Reports, and think the work will be a valuable one, especially to the younger members of the bar, who cannot, at first afford to purchase the series of our reports, already between seventy and eighty volumes. The cases are clearly stated, and the points decided, are accurately extracted.

A NEW FEATURE.

A portion of our columns under an appropriate heading, will in future be devoted to the publication of notes of all the Decisions of the Courts of this country as well as Europe, in cases involving the liabilities and rights of Banks, Insurance and Railroad Companies, and other Corporations and their Stockholders, and important heads of Commercial Law, as Partnership, Agency, Carriers, Insurance, &c., &c.

The frequent issue of our publication will enable us to keep our subscribers fully posted as to Legislative and Judicial action on these subjects, by the publication of all Laws and Decisions, at the earliest moment after their promulgation. The obviously great advantage which this recueil in this form will afford the officers and stockholders in all their corporations, as well as the business community throughout the Union, will, we hope, induce an extensive addition to our subscription list among them.

It will also furnish the professors of the law in other States, additional reasons for availing themselves of the great advantages offered to them by this publication, which experience alone can enable them fully to appreciate.

BANKING.

Raphael v. The Bank of England.

November 5, 1855.

Bank-Note—Bona fides of Holder—Value—Negligence—Verdict—Affidavit of Jurymen.

This was an action to recover 500*l.*, the amount of a Bank of England note.

The plaintiff represented M. St. Paul, of Paris, and the defendants Messrs. Brown, Shipley & Co., of Liverpool.

At the trial, before Jervis, C. J., in London, at the sittings after Trinity term, 1855, it appeared that, in the month of November, 1852, six Bank of England notes, for 500*l.* each, were stolen from Messrs. Brown, Shipley & Co. Notices of the robbery and the numbers of the notes were immediately published in the French and English languages, and circulated in England, France, and other countries; and fresh notices to the same effect were published in April, 1853. It was proved to the satisfaction of the jury that one of the latter notices was left in due course in 1853, at the place of business of St. Paul, who carried on the business of a money-changer in Paris.

From the evidence of St. Paul, it appeared that the custom of his office was to file such notices, and when a bill or note of very large amount was offered it was usual to look at the file; that the number of such notices filed was very considerable, and that he was accustomed to very large transactions. In the month of June, 1854, a stranger entered St. Paul's place of business, asked what was the exchange of the day, and produced the 500*l.* note in question. M. St. Paul did not look at the file of notices, but asked the stranger to write his name and produce his passport, and on finding the name so written and that contained in the passport agree, gave change for the note at the current rate of exchange. M. St. Paul remitted the note to the plaintiff, his correspondent in London, who presented the note at the Bank of England, and was refused payment. The judge, in summing up, asked the jury, first, whether St. Paul had paid the full value for the note; secondly, whether a copy of the notice was left at St. Paul's place of business; both of which questions they answered in the affirmative; and they further found, that when he took the note he had means of knowing it had been stolen if he had taken proper care of the notices delivered to him, but that he had actually no notice or knowledge to that effect at the time he took it. All these findings were given by the foreman in answer to written questions submitted to the jury. The learned judge afterwards asked the jury, at the request of the counsel for the defendants, whether St. Paul took the note bona fide or not; and they found that he did. It was subsequently disputed whether the question of bona fides was left to the jury, or whether the learned chief justice directed the jury to assume it, if they believed that the money had been paid by St. Paul, and that he had no knowledge of the note at the time. On the finding of the jury, the judge directed a verdict for the plaintiff for 500*l.*

One of the jurymen made an affidavit, stating that he had no intention to find a verdict for the plaintiff, and did not know what the foreman had said to the judge, and that he expressed his dissent in the jury box, in the hearing of two other jurymen, that he was of opinion St. Paul had not acted properly, and that he would have refused his concurrence to finding the bona fides, if it had been put to him. Another jurymen made an affidavit, stating his dissent from the verdict.

Bovill now moved for a rule nisi for a new trial, on the grounds of misdirection, and that the verdict was against the evidence, and also on affidavits. The question of bona fides was not properly put to the jury, but seemed to be assumed by the judge. Now, the burden of proof of bona fides lay upon the plaintiff. He had to make out affirmatively not only that he gave value, and took the note without notice, but that he took it bona fide. Here there were circumstances of suspicion; the person offering the note was a stranger; its amount was large, and it was not of recent date.

[Cresswell, J. The case is like that of an ordinary bill of exchange. The presumption is, that there was consideration for it; and if there was none, or there was fraud in taking the bill, that is to be proved.]

When the title to the bill is impeached on the ground of fraud, or that the bill has been lost or stolen, it is incumbent on the plaintiff to prove that he gave value. Mills v. Barber, 1 Mee. & W. 425. In Bailey v. Bidwell, 13 Ibid. 73, Parke, B., says: "It certainly has been, since the later cases, the universal understanding, that if the note were proved to have been obtained by fraud, or affected by illegality, that afforded a presumption that the person who had been guilty of the illegality would dispose of it, and would place it in the hands of another person to sue upon it, and that such proof casts upon the plaintiff the burden of showing that he was a bona fide indorsee for value."

[Cresswell, J. From that, I conclude Baron Parke meant, if full value was given, that was proof enough of bona fides.]

The question was discussed in Smith v. Braine, 16 Q. B. Rep. 214, s. c. 3 Eng. Rep. 379; and the cases are to be found collected in 1 Smith's L. C. 261, in the notes to Miller v. Race. It is, therefore, submitted that it was incumbent on the plaintiff to show that St. Paul not only gave value for the note, but that he took it bona fide; and that question was not properly left to the jury. Again, it is submitted, that as St. Paul had the means of knowledge, he must be taken to have had notice of the loss of the note. In May v. Chapman, 16 Mee. & W. 355; Baron Parke says, "I agree that 'notice and knowledge' means not merely express notice, but knowledge or the means of knowledge, to which the party wilfully shuts his eyes." In the next place, the affidavits of the jurymen show that the jury were not unanimous.

[Jervis, C. J. Can we hear what the jurymen say?]

In Roberts v. Hughes, 7 Mee. & W. 399, the affidavit of one of the jurors as to what took place in court on the delivery of the verdict was held admissible.

[Jervis, C. J. The question there was, whether the under-sheriff had entered the verdict wrongly, and the jurymen said, by his affidavit, that it was right.]

[Cresswell, J. A jurymen might be induced, after the trial, to say that he did not concur in the verdict; and if an affidavit to that effect were admissible, the verdict in every case would be rendered insecure.]

One of the jurymen here says, if he had known what the foreman was saying to the judge, he would have refused his concurrence as to the bona fides of the transaction.

[Jervis, C. J. The gentleman could hardly have considered what he was saying. It is this: "I think M. St. Paul gave the full amount for the note, and did not know that it had been stolen, and yet did not take it bona fide." These jurymen seem to have been inclined to decide according to what may be called the medieval law, and to find M. St. Paul liable although he acted bona fide.]

On all these grounds—the misdirection, the verdict being against the evidence, and the jury not being unanimous—it is submitted there ought to be a new trial.

Cresswell, J. I am of opinion in this case that there ought to be no rule. It has been argued that there ought to be a new trial on the ground that the finding is defective in not having properly dealt with the points of notice and knowledge submitted by the defendant's counsel. I apprehend it was settled law from the time of Lawson v. Weston, 4 Esp. 56, down to Gill v. Cubitt, 3 B. & C. 466, that a person having received a negotiable instrument in good faith for full value was entitled to recover, and that his right could not be impeached for want of title in the party from whom he took it. Not attending to the notice may be negligence, but that is not enough to affect the title. At one time, certainly, Lord Tenterden held that want of care in taking the instrument might invalidate the party's title, but that doctrine has been much disapproved of in Westminster Hall. The jury here are of opinion that this notice was taken without knowledge and for full value, and therefore there could have been no fraud. I admit there may be cases in which a person may pay full value, and yet take the instrument dishonestly, and that there must be full value and good faith; but that was left to the jury. They seemed to have returned answers to three special questions, and then the question of good faith was put to them, and they returned for answer that the note was taken in good faith. But affidavits made by jurymen as to the finding have been brought forward. I do not wish to determine whether any such affidavits could be used in such a case at all, but I apprehend that a jurymen cannot in any case make an affidavit of something which passed in his own mind. It does not appear that he did not hear the answers given by the foreman, nor that he objected in open court. He only says, he would have dissented from the verdict if he had thought that by the answers given the verdict would be for the plaintiff. If he had done so, he would have acted against law, and against his duty as a jurymen; and therefore, his affidavit simply says that he would not have done his duty.

Crowder, J. I am of the same opinion. I do not think any of the grounds on which the motion is founded is sufficient. It is first said that the question of bona fides was not submitted to the jury. It seems to me that it was; and I think there is no objection as to the manner in which it was left. The lord chief justice used strong observations as to there being bona fides, and it appears to me the circumstances were almost conclusive to prove bona fides. Then, assuming that at the point of bona fides ought to have been put to the jury, I think it was put. Then, the second point put is this: It is contended that the jury, having found that the notice was given to M. St. Paul, and that he had means of knowing that the note had been stolen, that is a ground for interfering with the verdict. I am of opinion that this is no ground for disturbing the verdict. Then, as to the point which arises on the affidavits of the jurymen, I do not wish to decide whether such affidavits are admissible or not; but, assuming them to be admissible, they only amount to this, that the jurymen were strongly disposed, even upon the assumption of bona fides, to find a verdict for the defendants.

Willes, J. I am of the same opinion. The phrase "bona fides," by itself and unexplained, might have misled the jury, if they had been merely asked whether the note was received bona fide. Saying that the note was taken bona fide is only a compendious mode of saying what the jury have here found, that M. St. Paul was a holder for full value, and without knowledge of the theft. Taking "notice" to mean what Baron Parke stated in May v. Chapman, the jury, in finding notice, found all that it is insisted they ought to have found. Then the affidavits of the jurymen are relied on to show that when they said that the holder had no notice, they meant something different from the ordinary meaning of the words, and that they thought he was not a bona fide holder. The affidavits refer either to what passed in the minds of the jurymen or what took place in the jury room. In the latter case it has been held, over and over again, that such affidavits are not admissible. In the former case, surely, it does not lie in the mouth of a juror, who was present in court, and did not object to the verdict, to say afterwards that he dissents from it. If what he stated were true, it could make no difference in the result of the law. These jurymen seem to have been of opinion that St. Paul's mode of carrying on business was such as to disentitle him to recover, and that he took the note carelessly, though honestly. That would amount to nothing more than that they consider the modern decisions, including the case of The Bank of Bengal v. M'Leod, 7 Moore, P. C. 35, wrong, and are of opinion that the law laid down in Gill v. Cubitt ought to be restored.

Shipping—General and particular average.

JOB v. LANGTON.

Queen's Bench. June 8 and 11.

A vessel, loaded with coal, was stranded at Newfoundland; the cargo was discharged and transhipped, and the vessel was afterwards got off, and taken to Liverpool for repairs.

Held, that the expenses of getting her off and taking her to Liverpool, were not chargeable to general average, but to particular average on the ship.

Lands taken for railroads—Rights of owners.

BLAKE v. RICH.

The fee in land taken for the purpose of constructing a railroad under the laws of this State, remains in the owner of the soil from whom the land is taken, subject to the easement of the corporation as leased to them by the State.

The exclusive right of property in the land, in the trees and herbage upon its surface, and the minerals below it, remains unchanged, subject always to the right of the corporation to construct and operate a railroad over and through it, as authorized by law.

INSURANCE.

May 30. STOKES v. COX.

Insurance—Description of premises—Subsequent alteration of premises.

The defendants insured for the plaintiff a range of buildings "comprising offices, warehouses, curriers' shops, drying rooms, having a stock of oil not exceeding 100 gallons, and tallow not exceeding 500 cwt., deposited therein, part of the lower story of such building being used as a stable, coach-house and boiling house. No steam engine employed on the premises, the steam from said boiler being used for heating water and warming the shops." At the end was a note:

"N. B.—The process of melting tallow by steam in said boiler house, and the use of two pipe stoves, are hereby allowed; but it is warranted that no oil be boiled, nor any process of japanning leather be carried on therein, or in any building adjoining thereto." On the policy was endorsed a clause that no alteration made after the insurance was effected should affect the policy, except the risk was thereby increased.

After the policy was made, the plaintiff, without notice to the defendants, erected a steam engine on the premises, and worked it by steam generated in the existing boiler. A fire occurred. The jury found that the risk had not been increased.

Held, that the description of the premises "no steam engine employed," &c., amounted to a warranty, or showed that the fact was deemed material, and that the alteration, therefore, suspended the risk, and as the fire occurred during the continuance of the alteration the plaintiff could not recover. The case chiefly relied on was Gillem v. Thornton, 3 Ell. & Bl. 868.

Bramwell, B., dissented.

STILL ONWARD.

SUCCESS UNPARALLELED!

A Tale of the Great Dismal Swamp.

BY HARRIET BEECHER STOWE,

2 Vols. 12mo. $1.75.

Certain politicians, interested in the support of the "peculiar institution," have endeavored to persuade the public that Mrs. Stowe's last work is artistically a failure, and that it has produced no profound impression on either side of the Atlantic.

But the publishers are happy to state, that of the many hundred of American notices which they have received, the vast majority have been decidedly favorable, most of them enthusiastic.

And the sale thus far has exceeded that of any work of fiction ever published, the

SIXTY-EIGHTH THOUSAND SET,

of two volumes each, being now in press.

In England the success has been even more wonderful. The press there, with but one or two exceptions, acknowledge the genius and power of the author, and in terms of which any living writer might be proud. And during the twelve days succeeding its publication no fewer than were sold.

The universal voice of literary men now places Mrs. Stowe amongst the

Foremost Authors of the Age,

and neither partizanship, nor an austere religious bigotry, can deprive her of the laurels she has so nobly earned.

TERMS. The Magazine may be obtained of Booksellers, Periodical Agents, or from the Publishers, at THREE DOLLARS a year, or TWENTY-FIVE CENTS a Number. The Semi-annual Volumes, as completed, neatly bound in Cloth, are sold at Two Dollars each, and Muslin Covers are furnished to those who wish to have their back Numbers uniformly bound, at Twenty-five Cents each. Thirteen Volumes are now ready, bound in Cloth, and also in Half Calf.
The Publishers will supply specimen Numbers gratuitously to Agents and Postmasters, and will make liberal arrangements with them for circulating the Magazine. They will also supply Clubs of two persons at Five Dollars a year, five persons at Ten Dollars, or eleven persons at Twenty Dollars. The commencement of a Volume affords a favorable occasion for the opening of new subscriptions. The December number will commence a new Volume. Clergymen and Teachers supplied at Two Dollars a year. Numbers from the commencement can now be supplied. Also, the bound Volumes.
The Magazine weighs over seven and not over eight ounces. The postage upon each Number, which must be paid quarterly in advance at the Office where the Magazine is received, is THREE CENTS.
Each Number of the Magazine will contain 144 octavo pages, in double columns, each year, thus comprising nearly two thousand pages of the choicest Miscellaneous Literature of the day. Every Number will contain numerous Pictorial Illustrations, accurate Plates of the Fashions, a copious Chronicle of Current Events, and impartial Notices of the important Books of the Month. The Volumes commence with the Numbers for JUNE and DECEMBER; but Subscriptions may commence with any Number.

IN THE ORPHANS' COURT FOR THE CITY AND COUNTY OF PHILADELPHIA.

In the matter of the Trust Estate of HANNAH ROBBINS, under the will of MARY BROWN, deceased.

Sur petition of JOSEPH A. CLAY, Esq., Trustee, filed in the said Court, on the third day of October, A. D. 1856, praying the Court to grant an order for the sale of a certain brick message or tenement and lot or piece of ground situate on the east side of Fifth street, between Sassafras and Vine streets, in the city of Philadelphia.

Also, a certain frame message and lot or piece of ground, situate on the west side of Crown street, between Sassafras and Vine streets, in the city of Philadelphia, as more particularly described in the said petition.

The undersigned, Master and Examiner, to whom the said petition was referred by the Court to inquire into the facts, and report upon the expediency of granting the said prayer, and other matters contained in said petition, hereby gives notice, that he will meet the parties interested in the premises for the purposes of his appointment, on Monday, Oct. 27th, A. D. 1856, at four o'clock, P. M., at his office, No. 61 1/2 South Fourth street, opposite Library, in the City of Philadelphia.

A. W. RAND'S
SELF-CLEANING FURNACE.
Boynton's Patent.

Having put up a large number of these Furnaces, both in public and private buildings, (including 24 put up at the Philadelphia County Prison, in place of the 44 torn out) and tested them during the cold weather of 1855, and 1856, being the coldest weather we have had for twenty or thirty years. They have given the most universal satisfaction, and those having them in use were perfectly delighted with the abundance of warm, pleasant air, and abundant ventilation afforded thereby, while so many were suffering from cold, and troubled with the deficiencies of their heating apparatus.

We take great pleasure, therefore, in recommending them to the notice of the public, and would call their attention particularly to an examination of the greatly increased amount of effective radiating surface, their perfect solidity and durability, the improved manner of making the joints, entirely preventing any escape of gases, and the manner of distributing the fire, so as to cause it to impinge directly against the large amount of surface, without the objectionable and unnatural method of forcing the current downwards.

We have also a full assortment of HAYES' PATENT TUBULAR OVEN RANGES, now so universally used, and favorably known. Also, HAYES' PATENT VENTILLATORS, &c., &c., all of which will be put up in the very best manner, and by the most skillful workmen, constantly engaged for that purpose, by

The Bank of Cash Credits.

Application will be made to the Legislature of Pennsylvania, for the Charter of a Bank Issue with general banking privileges, with a capital of ONE MILLION OF DOLLARS. Said Bank to be located in the City of Philadelphia, to be called the "Robert Morris Bank," and to be conducted upon the system of cash credits only, as is herewith indicated.

A cash credit is a credit given to an individual by a Banking Company, for a limited sum, seldom under $500, or $1000, upon his own security and that of two or three individuals, approved by the Bank, who become sureties for its payment. The individual who has obtained such a credit, is enabled to draw the whole sum, or any part of it, when he pleases; replacing it, or portions of it, according as he finds it convenient; interest being charged upon such part only as he draws out.

"If a man borrows $1000, from a private hand, and even then it is not always to be found when required, he pays interest for it, whether he be using it or not. His bank credit costs him nothing, except during the moment it is of service to him, and this circumstance is of equal advantage as if he had borrowed money at a much lower rate of interest."

Cash credits are not, however, intended to be a dead load; the main objects of the Banks in granting them is to get their notes circulated, and they do not grant them except to persons in business, or to those who are frequently drawing out and paying in money.

Any person who applies to a bank for a cash credit, is called upon to produce sureties, and, after a full inquiry into the character of the applicant, the nature of his business, and the sufficiency of his securities, he is allowed to open a credit, and to draw upon the Bank for the whole of its amount, or for such part as his daily transaction may require. To the credit of the account, he pays in such sums as he may not have occasion to use, and interest is charged or credited upon the balance, as the case may be. From the facility which these cash credits give to all the small transactions of the country, and from the opportunities which they afford to persons who begin business with little or no capital but their character, to employ profitably the minutest products of their industry, it cannot be doubted that the most important advantages are derived in the whole community.

Such privileges and immunities as the "Metropolitan Bank of New York" exercises, will be applied for.

District Court.

Opinion by Judge Hare.

WELDON v. GIBBON.

Exceptions to Auditor's Report.

The fund in dispute, arises from the sale of a house and lot, under a mortgage executed by Mary M. Gibbon, to Weldon and Tomlinson. The claimants on one side are the mortgagees, who have an undisputed legal title, founded on a conveyance made by Eli H. Eldridge to the mortgagor, on the day that the mortgage was executed; and on the other, certain lien creditors, by whom the house was erected, under contracts made prior to the conveyance, with one R. Q. Gibbon, at a time when the latter had nothing in the land but an equitable interest, arising under an oral contract of sale made with Eldridge, from whom both sides deduce their title. The act of April 28th, 1840, expressly restricts the operation of liens, filed for work done or materials furnished for the erection or construction of buildings, to the estate of the person in possession of the land at the time, or at whose instance the same is erected; but the lien creditors seek to escape from its operation on the ground, that as R. Q. Gibbon transferred his estate to Mary M. Gibbon before she acquired the legal title, it merged in her prior equitable interest, and thus became subject to all encumbrances which were binding on the latter. Properly speaking, merger cannot be predicated of the union of a legal and equitable right to the same land, for when the legal and equitable title unite, the former ordinarily becomes superfluous, and will only survive when and so far as its distinct existence may be necessary to subserve those purposes, for which it was originally recognized or created; Preston on Merger, 327-341. For when such a union occurs, equity yields to and follows the law, unless there are special circumstances of notice, or of payment of value on one side, and want of it on the other, which make it inequitable that the law should prevail; Goodright v. Wells, Douglas, 371; 3 Vesey, 339; Wade v. Paget, 1 Brown Ch. 368; Philips v. Brydgos, 3 Vesey, 126; Preston on Merger, 315; James v. Morey, 2 Cowen 246, 259, 313, 318; Doton v. Russell, 7 Cowen, 147. Thus the equitable estate will not be kept alive in favor of heirs ex parte materna, for the purpose of preventing those on the paternal side, from taking the land by virtue of their superior right to the legal title (Goodright v. Wells,) because both are mere volunteers, and one can show no better equity than the other. Hence, in order to postpone the mortgagees who have the legal title, to the lien creditors, whose claims attached to the equity before both estates united, it must appear that the position of things is such, as to require the intervention of chancery, in favor of the one and against the other. Had the land remained in the hands of Mary M. Gibbon, the estate which she derived from her son, would have been unquestionably chargeable, with liens of which she had full notice, and could not have been freed from them, by the subsequent conveyance made to her by Eldridge; Richter v. Sellin, 8 S. & R. 425. But the execution of the mortgage to Weldon and Tomlinson, introduced a new element into the transaction, by giving birth to the rights which belong to purchasers for value, and rendering the contest one between the holders of an undisputed legal title, deduced regularly of record, and claimants whose right rises no higher than an unrecorded equity on the other. This statement of the question is sufficient to show, that the title of the mortgagees must prevail, unless they had notice of the equity at or before the period at which the mortgage was executed; for nothing is better settled, than that equity far from disturbing a bona fide purchaser, will assist him, in maintaining those rights against all comers, which he has acquired in good faith, and may consequently retain with a safe conscience. This is emphatically true, in cases like the present, where the estate of the purchaser is fortified by the record, while that of those who assail it, depends wholly on transactions in pais, and evidenced by parol, and thus enables him to rely on the wise and salutary enactments, which require that the title to land shall be duly recorded, for the protection of buyers, and to give simplicity and safety to the transfer of real estate. The value of these statutes to the whole community is immense, and no man should be deprived of his share in the benefit, without sufficient proof that he has forfeited his claim to protection, by buying with notice derived from private sources, of that which he could not learn, through the more appropriate means of the public offices of the proper county.

Notice, though sometimes a mixed question of law and fact, is always, when the facts are proved or undisputed, a question of law; and the question whether the mortgagees had notice is set at rest by the report of the auditor, who finds "that Weldon and Tomlinson had no notice of any equitable estate in the said lot in Robert Q. Gibbon or in Mary M. Gibbon prior to the execution of the deed from Eldridge to Mary M. Gibbon, nor of any lien having attached on the same, unless such notice may be presumed in law from the fact of Robert Q. Gibbon's having erected a building on the said lot." And he goes on to add, that "it does not appear that either Robert Q. Gibbon or Mary M. Gibbon ever actually used or occupied the lot prior to or at the time of the execution of the mortgage." As the report of an auditor is conclusive on all matters of fact, unless the circumstances thus found show notice, we are bound to presume that it was not given, and it would seem plain, that no such construction can be put upon them. The only conclusion, which can be fairly deduced from the existence of a newly built house, on land offered for sale, or comprised in a deed or conveyance, is that it may be subject to liens, which may bind the estate of the vendor: — it has no tendency to show that the equitable interest has been severed from the legal, and is outstanding in the hands of other persons. The proper mode of ascertaining whether such liens exist, is the judgment index under the name of the owner as the record shows him; and if a search duly made there, negatives their existence, it need not be prosecuted elsewhere, because there is no mode in which it can be prosecuted effectually. Common sense has long since established that nothing can be effectual as notice, which will not if followed up, end in knowledge. Hence no better criterion can be given, for determining whether the title of a purchaser should be made to yield to antecedent equities, than an inquiry whether he had the means of discovering their existence, and whether the purchase was one which he would have been taught to avoid, by a competent knowledge of the law, and the exercise of due diligence in discovering the facts, in subordination to the usual course of business. In the present instance, the best and most careful legal adviser, would have limited his inquiries to the title of Eldridge, as set forth of record, down to the conveyance to Mary M. Gibbon, and would have rested content in the belief, that as it was wholly unexceptionable when it came from his hands to hers, and was mortgaged by her immediately upon the receipt of the deed from him, the mortgagees might advance their money in safety on the faith of the record. The possession of the property was, so far as appears, consistent with the record, for the building would seem to have been wholly vacant, at the period when the title passed from Eldridge to Mary M. Gibbon, and vested under her mortgage in Weldon and Tomlinson. To make possession notice, its nature and existence must be proved and not left to presumption.

Had R. Q. Gibbon been actually engaged in erecting the building when the mortgage was executed, a question might have arisen, whether the mortgagees were not bound to take notice, that he was acting under a contract of sale, and not merely as a builder or contractor; although an equivocal or doubtful possession, can never be held to operate as notice, without the risk of doing the most flagrant injustice. But the house was finished, and his possession at an end sometime before the conveyance by Eldridge, which is the source of the plaintiff's title, who could only infer from seeing a new building on the premises, and finding no liens outstanding against the holder of the record title, that he had erected the building and paid for it. It may indeed be said, that an inquiry of Mary M. Gibbon or Eldridge, would have revealed the truth; but this necessarily involves the assumption, that the truth would have been spoken had such an inquiry been made. Were purchasers bound to quit the safe guidance of the record, for the purpose of prosecuting inquiries elsewhere, and presumed to have known that which others might or would have told them, there would be no reason for stopping short of the presumption, that they knew every thing which was or might have been known to the vendor; which would render the purchase of real estate one of those dangers which wise men would encounter as seldom as possible.

In every point of view, therefore, the title of the mortgagees should be held free from equities, growing out of antecedent transactions to which they were strangers at the time, and which so far as we know, were never disclosed to them subsequently, and we consequently dismiss the exceptions to the auditor's report, which are all founded on a different and opposite view of the law.

I have said nothing hitherto of the case of Foster's Appeal, 8 Barr 79, in which a judgment against a prior equitable interest, arising out of a contract of sale, was held not only to bind the legal title on its subsequent acquisition by the vendee, but to follow it into the hands of a subsequent mortgagee, who was not shown to have had notice of the existence of the equity; chiefly as it would seem, because the mortgage was not recorded within the period fixed by the recording acts. But it is so clear that a purchaser, who traces the title to land from its source down to the moment when he takes his deed, without finding any thing on the records of the county to warn him, that there is ought to impede the course of the stream, cannot be deprived of the benefit of his purchase, without proof that he received that information from other quarters, which he could not find in the manner provided by law, that we are compelled to presume either that notice was proved or conceded at the trial, and omitted in the report, or what seems more likely, that the necessity for notice, was overlooked by the counsel in the cause, and the question whether it was necessary, not raised or argued before the Court. It is very plain, that the judgment itself did not operate as notice, for no man is bound to continue the search for judgments, farther back than the record shows the title, to have been in the hands of him against whom the search is made, nor could any effect have been due to the possession of the vendor, antecedently to the period at which he received his deed, because it is enough that possession, be consistent with the title at the time when it is conveyed, and it would be at once dangerous and useless, to require an examination into the nature or character of prior possessions.

The Supreme Court of Pennsylvania has repeatedly held, that the true way to view questions arising between legal and equitable rights or titles, is to suppose a bill filed by those who claim the equity, against those who hold by virtue of the law. Had this course been taken in Foster's Appeal, it would have been seen, that although the judgment creditor had a better right to the legal title than the vendee, and might consequently subject it to an execution, which would have bound both the law and the equity; yet that this right was liable to be defeated by a bona fide sale or mortgage, without notice of the equity; and that the failure of the purchaser to record his deed or mortgage, could not subject him to the lien of the prior judgment, although it might have been fatal, had a sale been made to a purchaser without notice under the judgment. It is true, that the lien of a mortgage dates from its record, but this is only true as between incumbrances binding the same right or title; and it cannot be supposed that a failure to record a mortgage of the legal title, will postpone it to a prior or subsequent mortgage of an equity, which is undisclosed at the time when the legal title is mortgaged. But if this were not so, still the worst which can result from delay in recording a mortgage under any circumstances, is to shut it out from all prior operation, and make it take effect as if it had been executed and delivered, on the day that it is recorded. Hence a mortgagee can never be prejudiced by his want of diligence in putting the mortgage on record, unless the estate of the mortgagor undergoes some alteration in the interval of such a nature, as to render a new mortgage ineffectual. In Foster's Appeal, and in the case now before us, no change occurred of any description; and a conveyance to a purchaser, would have passed precisely the same title when the mortgage was recorded, as when it was originally executed.

There still remains another view of the question, which I mention because it has had much weight with the Court, and would seem to be conclusive, in connection with the reasons already stated. At all times, and under any possible view of the law, the claim of the lien creditors was subject to the legal estate of Eldridge, and consequently to his right to the purchase money, for which it remained in his hands as a security. Had therefore all the facts been known, and the fullest notice given, Eldridge might have mortgaged the title thus held, to Weldon and Tomlinson to the extent of the value for which he held it, nor would such a step on his part, have curtailed or in any way prejudiced those claiming the equity. And it would seem sufficiently plain, that if this could be done by a direct transfer, it might equally be effected through the medium of a conveyance to Mary M. Gibbon, and an immediate assignment, by her to Weldon and Tomlinson, who would thus only acquire, what the lien creditors had no right to have, and what the other parties to the transaction might consequently part with. Such a conveyance and assignment were made in the present instance, and the jury to whom the question was submitted, have found that the whole was one transaction. It has already been shown, that an equity will disappear in the legal title, unless the intention of the holder or the exigencies of justice interpose and thus keep it separate. Here the requirements of justice, and the meaning of the parties both require, that the holders of the legal title and those claiming under them, should have that priority, to the extent of the unpaid purchase money, which its retention at the time of the sale conferred, on the vendor and which creditors claiming under the vendee, and acting solely on the faith of his imperfect estate, have no right to dispute. Hence as the fund in Court falls short of the price of the land, there can be no doubt as to the proper mode of its application. In every point of view, therefore, we think that no equity has been shown of a nature to control the use now made of the legal title, and we consequently award the fund to the mortgagees, to whom it was transferred by the mortgage.

LEGAL INTELLIGENCER FOR 1857,
VOL. XIV.

HENRY E. WALLACE, EDITOR.
In this paper, which has become indispensable to every practising lawyer in Pennsylvania, are now published immediately after delivery, the Opinions of the Judges of
THE SUPREME COURT OF PENNSYLVANIA, (greatly in advance of the State Reports.)
THE DISTRICT COURT AND COURT OF COMMON PLEAS of Philadelphia, (only herein reported.)
THE UNITED STATES COURTS for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania.
REVIEWS of Law Books, Legal Dissertations, Intelligence, Miscellany, &c., &c.
THE LAWS Enacted by the Legislature of Pennsylvania at each Session.
Besides which, it contains by authority of law and rules of Court, all the Legal Advertisements required to be published in Philadelphia.

To the variety and amount of contents above enumerated, (which makes this the cheapest publication of the kind extant,) it is proposed in the next volume to add the following

New Features.
1. Early and correct Reports, under an appropriate head, of all Cases decided in the Courts of England, as well as this country, involving the Law of BANKING,
INSURANCE,
CARRIERS, and other points of MERCANTILE LAW, and the Rights and Liabilities of INSURANCE AND RAILROAD COMPANIES, MINING AND LAND ASSOCIATIONS,
BANKS, and other
CORPORATIONS.

2. Full Reports of interesting JURY TRIALS in all parts of the Union.
These new features, combined with the present advantages it affords, cannot fail to make "THE LEGAL INTELLIGENCER" serviceable and interesting to Business Men as well as Lawyers, and of very great utility to Officers and Stockholders of all BANKS, RAILROADS, INSURANCE COMPANIES, and other CORPORATIONS in all parts of the Union.

Subscriptions are solicited. Specimen numbers will be sent to parties desiring to see the paper before subscribing.
It is published every FRIDAY, by
KING & BAIRD,
No. 9 SANSON STREET,
PHILADELPHIA,
At Two Dollars per Annum, invariably in ADVANCE.
A limited number of appropriate advertisements (only), inserted on reasonable terms.

Sheriff's Sales.

Abstract of Properties to be sold by Geo. Megee, Esq., Sheriff, on Monday, November 3rd, at Sanson Street Hall, at 4 o'clock, P. M.

Conditions of Sale.

Fifty dollars of the price or sum at which the property shall be struck off, shall be paid to the Sheriff at the time of sale, unless the purchase money shall be less than that sum, in which case only the purchase money shall be paid. Otherwise the property will again be immediately put up, and sold. The balance of the purchase money must be paid to the Sheriff, at his office within ten days from the time of sale, without any demand being made by the Sheriff, therefor. Otherwise the property may be sold again at the expense and risk of the person to whom it is struck off, who, in case of any deficiency at such re-sale, shall make good the same. Arrears of Ground Rent and taxes, if any, will be paid out of the purchase money, if the bills are presented to the Sheriff before he parts with the money; otherwise they will be paid by the purchaser.

Law School of the University at Cambridge, Mass.

The instructors in this school are Hon. JOEL PARKER, LL. D., Royal Professor. Hon. THEOPHILUS PARSONS, LL. D., Dane Professor. Hon. EMERY WASHBURN, LL. D., University Professor.

The course of instruction embraces the various branches of the Common Law, and of Equity, Admiralty, Commercial, International and Constitutional Law, and the Jurisprudence of the United States. The Law Library consists of about 14,000 volumes, and as new works appear they are added and every effort is made to render it complete.

Instruction is given by oral lectures and expositions, (and by recitations and examinations, in connection with them,) of which there are ten every week. Two Moot Courts are also holden in each week, at each of which a cause, previously given out, is argued by four students, and an opinion delivered by the presiding instructor. Rooms and other facilities are also provided for the Club Courts; and an Assembly is held weekly for practice in debate, and acquiring a knowledge of Parliamentary law and proceedings.

Students may enter the school in any stage of their professional studies or mercantile pursuits, and at the commencement of either term, or in the middle, or other part of a term. They are at liberty to select what studies they will pursue according to their view of their own wants and attainments.

The Academical year, which commences on Thursday, six weeks after the third Wednesday in July, is divided into two terms, of twenty weeks each, with a vacation of six weeks at the end of each term.

During the winter vacation, the Library is opened, warmed and lighted, for the use of the members of the school.

Applications for admission, or for Catalogues, or any further information, may be made to either of the Professors at Cambridge. June 6-1y.

Addison's Reports, 1 vol. . . . 1791 to 1799

These Reports are condensed by T. J. Fox Alden, Esq., into three vols., and are sold at the low price of $15. The catalogue price of the old edition, to which they are greatly superior in type and papers is $69. They contain all that is of any value in the original, and as will be seen are sold at less than one fourth the price. The volumes already published are complete in themselves, having a copious index and table of cases.

To those who cannot afford to purchase the original series of Reports (many volumes of which are out of print) this work will be invaluable, whilst even those who do possess them, will buy it for convenience of reference.

From Hon. J. B. Gibson, Chief Justice.—I have examined the first volume of Mr. Alden's Condensed Reports, and think the work will be a valuable one, especially to the younger members of the bar, who cannot, at first afford to purchase the series of our reports, already between seventy and eighty volumes. The cases are clearly stated, and the points decided, are accurately extracted.

A NEW FEATURE.

A portion of our columns under an appropriate heading, will in future be devoted to the publication of notes of all the Decisions of the Courts of this country as well as Europe, in cases involving the liabilities and rights of Banks, Insurance and Railroad Companies, and other Corporations and their Stockholders, and important heads of Commercial Law, as Partnership, Agency, Carriers, Insurance, &c., &c.

The frequent issue of our publication will enable us to keep our subscribers fully posted as to Legislative and Judicial action on these subjects, by the publication of all Laws and Decisions, at the earliest moment after their promulgation. The obviously great advantage which this recueil in this form will afford the officers and stockholders in all their corporations, as well as the business community throughout the Union, will, we hope, induce an extensive addition to our subscription list among them.

It will also furnish the professors of the law in other States, additional reasons for availing themselves of the great advantages offered to them by this publication, which experience alone can enable them fully to appreciate.

INSURANCE.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF CINCINNATI. GENERAL TERM, JUNE, 1855.

The Merchants' and Manufacturers' Insurance Company et al. v. Charles Duffield et al.*

An insurance was effected on the steamboat Sam Cloon, in four insurance companies; the agreed value of the boat being $20,000, and the amount insured in each office $3,750, or in all $15,000. The policy in each case was in the same form and with the same conditions.

The steamboat having been sunk in the Mississippi river, was by a writing executed for the purpose abandoned to the insurance companies, who by means of persons acting for them raised the boat, and realized from the wreck, after deducting charges and expenses, the sum of three thousand dollars. The presentation was brought by the owners, who effected the insurance, to recover one-fourth of that sum, claiming that they all retained, after the abandonment, an interest of one-fourth in the wreck. This claim was resisted by the insurance companies, on the ground, that by the terms and conditions of the policies, the owners were required to abandon not only to the extent of the interest insured, but all interest in the subject matter insured. The part of the policies supposes to bear on this question was as follows: "And in case of loss or misfortune, as aforesaid, it shall be the duty of the assured, their agents or assigns, to use every reasonable effort for the safeguard and recovery of the said steamboat, and every part thereof, and if recovered, to cause the same to be forthwith repaired, if practicable; and in case of neglect or refusal on the part of the insured, their agents or assigns, to adopt prompt and sufficient measures for the safeguard and recovery thereof, then said insurers are hereby authorized, and shall have the election to interpose and recover said steamboat, and cause the same to be repaired for account of the assured, to the charges of which the said insurance company will contribute in proportion as the sum herein insured bears to the agreed value in this policy, or to consider such neglect or refusal as an abandonment, and be entitled to recover said steamboat, or any part thereof, at their own expense, and for their own use and benefit; and in no case whatever shall the assured have the right to abandon, until it shall be ascertained that the recovery and repairs of said steamboat are impracticable; nor sell the wreck, or any part thereof, without the consent of this company; and in all cases of abandonment the assured shall assign, transfer, and set over to said insurance company, all their interest in and to the said steamboat, and every part thereof, free of all claims and charges whatever."

On the submission of the action to be tried by the court at special term, a judgment was rendered in favor of the insured for one-fourth of the sum realized from the wreck. To reverse this judgment, a petition in error was filed by the insurance companies.

The opinion of the court was delivered by GHOLOS, J.—The principle and foundation of all insurance is indemnity. The contract of insurance cannot be made a cover for gambling. It was at one time supposed in England, that valued policies as they are called, were invalid, as falling under the prohibition against wager policies. But they were sustained as an estimate, by agreement of the parties, of the value of the subject matter of insurance. In the absence of fraud, in case of a total loss, the estimate of value so made must stand, but an average loss opens the policy. Shawe vs. Felton, 2 East, 109; 7 Mass. 369; 7 Ohio, 1, pt. 284.

In an open policy, if a loss happen, the value of the subject matter of insurance is fixed by reference to the time of the insurance, as in case of a vessel, at the time of the commencement of the voyage. And the only difference seems to be, that what in one case would be matter of proof, is in the other matter of agreement. 2 East, 109, 117; 7 Mass. 369.

Now, an insurance may be to the extent of a full indemnity, or for a partial indemnity; and to the extent that there is no indemnity, the owner of the subject matter of insurance has been said to be his own insurer.

So an indemnity to a certain extent may be obtained by a contract with A.; to a certain other extent with B., and so on; and still these several contracts may not provide for a full indemnity; to a certain extent the owner may be uninsured.

In an ordinary case where there is a partial loss, there takes place what is termed an adjustment; "and the rate of the loss being ascertained, the insurer is liable in the proportion which the sum insured bears to the actual value of the property included in the risk described in the policy." 7 Mass. 374; 2 J. C. 36. The effect of this rule is, as has been stated, to make the owner of the property insured contribute to his own loss in proportion as any part of its value may be uninsured. To secure a full indemnity, he must insure to the full value of the property. This rule of contribution does not apply under a policy against fire. 6 Pick. 186.

Where there has been in fact a partial loss, but the insured has made an abandonment to several insurers, and has been paid the amount of the indemnity for which he contracted, the same not extending to the whole value of the subject matter insured, is the adjustment made on the same principle? Is the owner considered in this case, as in the other, in the light of an insurer? or does he renounce this right by the abandonment? It is expressly stated in the elementary books, "that the abandonment cannot transfer the interest of the assured any further than that interest is covered by the policy." Arnould, 1159. This is in accordance with the rule laid down in 5 Peters, 622.

Indeed, the general proposition on this subject was not controverted in the argument, but the right of the assured to contribution in the case stated, was admitted; at least it was admitted that such was the doctrine in all the recent elementary works on insurance.*

Admitting that after an abandonment to insurers, the amount of whose policies does not cover the value of the subject matter insured, the owner would be entitled to his proportion of what might be saved, it is claimed that this right is cut off by a clause in the policies in this case. Indeed, that is the only question made by the counsel for the parties in their argument, and we have referred to the principles before adverted to, only for the proper understanding of that question, and in aid of a true construction of the policies, on which a correct decision must depend.

The legal effect of an abandonment—the meaning of that term is now well understood by all who are conversant in matters of insurance. When, therefore, we find the term used in a policy of insurance, we are bound to suppose that * Although the general doctrine was not controverted in this case, yet in a case probably on a policy similar to the one on which the present controversy arose, the court in Kentucky appears to have arrived at a different conclusion, and to have placed its decision on the ground that the general doctrine was different from that admitted in this case, as having been laid down in the elementary books. In the case of Cincinnati Insurance Company v. Bakewell, 4 B. Monroe, 541, 544, it is said:

The claim of Farrow to a rateable interest in the net proceeds of the sale, proportioned to the uninsured part of the boat's agreed value in the policies as it could only be made in that shape, on the ground that the abandonment was effectual, so it is, in our opinion, precluded by the same fact, upon the principle that an abandonment, legally made, puts the underwriters completely in the place of the assured, and operates in effect a transfer of property; Chesapeake Insurance Company v. Stark, 6 Cranch, 272; Col. Insurance Company v. Ashby, &c., 4 Peters, S. C. Rep. 144, &c., &c. And on this principle, with regard to which we have seen no contrariety of opinion or authority, the claim was rejected by the Chancellor. We may add, without deciding that such a claim would not under any circumstances, be admissible, that as it is optional with the insured, even when he has the undoubted right of abandonment, either to retain the property and seek his indemnity in what may be saved by himself, and in his remedy, if he has one, for a partial loss, or by abandoning the property to secure a recovery for a total loss, leaving to the underwriter the chance of indemnity by saving what he can, at his own risk and expense, there is at least no equity in allowing the insured, after such abandonment, to come in for any share of what may be saved, while the underwriter is not indemnified."

the parties have used it in its legal sense. In that sense, it certainly does not mean simply an abandonment of the vessel: for an abandonment may be effectually made by an insured, who at the same time retains possession of the vessel, or goods abandoned, and sells or disposes of these same. Indeed, it is his duty to do so, unless the abandonment be accepted. And we need not say, that an abandonment may be effectual without any acceptance. So a vessel, when in a position which might well justify an abandonment, in its technical sense, as understood in the law of insurance, may be ever so completely abandoned in a literary sense; and yet such an act has nothing to do, and is in no manner connected, with an abandonment in a technical sense.

An abandonment, as that term is understood when applied to contracts of insurance, means the yielding up or surrendering to the insurer by the insured of the interest in the property covered by the insurance. It is usually done by the owner of the property when informed of the peril or the loss. He gives to the insurer notice of an abandonment. The effect of an abandonment is to place the insurer, in reference to the interest covered by the policy, in the place of the insured. Some of the expressions used on this subject in the books, are very strong, and might well lead to the idea that the abandonment extended to the whole interest owned, and not merely that insured. 4 B. Monroe, 544.

When an insurer elects to claim a total loss, as he may in some cases where it is not so in fact, "as the thing insured, or a portion of it still exists, and is vested in him, the very principle of the indemnity requires that he should make a cession of all his right to the recovery of it, and that, too, within a reasonable time after he receives intelligence of the accident, that the underwriter may be entitled to all the benefit of what may still be of any value; and that he may if he pleases, take measures, at his own cost, for realizing or increasing that value." Roux vs. Salvador, 3 Bingh. N. C. 266; 32 E. C. L. 110-120.

"The abandonment, where properly made, operates as a transfer of the property to the underwriter, and gives him a title to it, or what remains of it, as far as it was covered by the policy." Patapsco Ins. Co. v. Southgate, 5 1 St. 604, 622.

With this understanding of the legal meaning of the term "abandonment," we proceed to examine the clause in the policies which are claimed to extend the effect and operation of an abandonment beyond the limit before established by law. The clause taken singly is as follows: "In all cases of abandonment, the assured shall assign, transfer, and set over to said Insurance Company all their interest in and to the said steamboat, and every part thereof, free of all claims and charges whatever." Was it the intention, by the introduction into the policy, of this clause, to give to an abandonment an effect by agreement, which it did not have by law?

In the case just cited from 5 Peters, it is said: "There is some diversity of opinion among the elementary writers, and in the adjudged cases, as to what will constitute a valid abandonment. It seems, however, agreed, that no particular form is necessary, nor is it indispensable that it should be in writing. But in whatever mode or form it is made, it ought to be explicit, and not left open as matter of inference from some equivocal acts. The assured must yield up to the underwriter all his right, title and interest in the subject insured." In view of the remarks in the extract just quoted, it does not seem improbable that the framers of the policies under consideration, which for the most part, and especially as to the clause under consideration, are printed forms for general use, may have intended to guard against the difficulty of considering any doubtful or equivocal acts an abandonment, by a requisition that there should be a direct transfer and assignment of the interest, which should properly be yielded up or ceded by the insured to the insurer on claiming a total loss. And the clause may also have been intended to insure a transfer or assignment of the interest free from the claims or charges of other persons.

If the term "abandonment" in the first part of the clause was used in its legal signification, as understood in the law of insurance, then, as before stated, it means a cession of the interest covered by the policy; and to say that in all cases of such a cession there shall be a transfer or assignment of all interest in the subject matter insured, free of all claims and charges whatever, can only properly refer to the form or mode in which the cession is to be effectuated, and not to its extent, that being fully shown by the use of the term "abandonment." If the construction claimed for the plaintiffs in error be correct, then the term "abandonment" cannot have been used in its proper legal sense, and the clause should have read: "in all cases of a claim for a total loss the assured shall assign, transfer, and set over (i. e. abandon, cede, by assignment or transfer) all their interest," &c. The abandonment or cession is consequent upon the claim for a total loss and necessary to make that claim effectual, as explained in the case of Roux vs. Salvador, before cited. It may be, if the intent otherwise required, that we would be justified in giving to the term "abandonment" the sense just indicated; but, as the latter part of the clause may have a proper meaning, without extending the operation and effect of an abandonment beyond that ascribed to it by law, and the other conditions and clauses of the policy do not require, but rather forbid such a construction, and it would in our judgment be attended, in several respects, with inconvenient results, we do not feel that it is a proper case for inferring that words were used in other than their proper legal sense.

It is not reasonable to suppose that the framers of the policies, had he intended so important a change in the operation and effect of an abandonment, as to make it include not only the interest covered by the policy, but all the interest of the insured in the subject matter of insurance, would have left that intention a matter of doubtful inference, or would have failed to express it in clear and apt language. A change of this description in policies of insurance should be unambiguous. It might in very many cases preclude the insured from claiming a total loss, and would almost invariably create a difficulty where insurances had been effected in different offices, and they were unwilling to act together, for the insured could only abandon to one, and as that might be considered a sale or disposition of the wreck, which is prohibited by the policy, it might be doubtful whether he could recover from the others even for a partial loss. But it is not necessary to enter more minutely into the inconveniences which might result from such a construction, as we are satisfied, that upon the language used, the construction given by the Court at Special Term, resulting in a recovery by the insured, may be maintained. The judgment will, therefore, be affirmed.

Bates & Scarborough, Coffin & Mitchell, for plaintiffs in error.
Nixon, for defendants.

May 30. Stokes v. Cox.

Insurance—Description of premises—Subsequent alteration of premises.

The defendants insured for the plaintiff a range of buildings "comprising offices, warehouses, carriers' shops, drying rooms, having a stock of oil not exceeding one hundred gallons, and tallow not exceeding five hundred weight, deposited therein, part of the lower story of such building being used as a stable, coach-house and boiling-house. No steam-engine employed on the premises, the steam from said boiler being used for heating water and warming the shops." At the end was a note:

"N. B.—The process of melting tallow by steam in said boiler-house, and the use of two pipe stoves, are hereby allowed; but it is warranted that no oil be boiled, nor any process of japanning leather be carried on therein, or in any building adjoining thereto." On the policy was indorsed a clause that no alteration made after the insurance was effected should affect the policy, except the risk was thereby increased.

After the policy was made, the plaintiff, without notice to the defendants, erected a steam-engine on the premises, and worked it by steam generated in the existing boiler. A fire occurred. The jury found that the risk had not been increased.

Held, that the description of the premises "no steam-engine employed," &c., amounted to a warranty, or showed that the fact was deemed material, and that the alteration, therefore, suspended the risk, and as the fire occurred during the continuance of the alteration, the plaintiff could not recover. The case chiefly relied on was Gillem v. Thornton, 3 Ell. & B. 868. Bramwell, B., dissented.

Stober's Adm's vs. McCarter.

[Supreme Court of Ohio, December Term, 1855.]
Error to the District Court of Ashland County.

THURMAN, C. J., delivered the opinion of the Court. Held—

That in an action against an administrator for work and labor performed for the intestate, the widow of the intestate is a competent witness for the plaintiff, to prove the performance of such work and labor, where her testimony is not a disclosure of confidential communications between her and her husband, or of matter prejudicial to his character.
Judgment affirmed.

CARRIERS.

Wilson v. Hamilton.

RANNEY, J. Held—

1. That a ferryman, in the regular exercise of his employment, of transporting persons and property across a river, is a common carrier, within the meaning of the law applicable to that subject; and as such is liable for a failure to transport safely property committed to his care, from any other cause than the excepted perils.
2. An undertaker to transport animals of the brute creation, imposes the same obligation as pertains to other property.
3. The owner is bound to deal in good faith towards the carrier; and if the carrier of the proerty is attended with any peculiar circumstance of hazard, known to him, he is bound to disclose it, in order that the necessary precautions may be used; and a failure to do so, when the loss arises from that cause, will discharge the carrier.

4. If the owner, or his agent, takes upon himself the care of his property while in transit, he does not thereby become the agent of the carrier; and the latter is not responsible for losses arising from his negligence or want of care.—A. L. Reg. 689.

CRIMINAL LAW.

James Parks vs. The State of Ohio.

Application for the allowance of a writ of error to reverse the judgment of the Court of Common Pleas of Cuyahoga county, on a verdict against James Parks, for the crime of murder in the first degree.

BARTLEY, J., Held—1. That the fact, that the record of the conviction of the prisoner of the crime of murder containing the names of the jurors of the grand jury by whom the indictment was found, does not state that the grand jurors had the requisite qualification of electors of the county, is no ground of error. However such disqualification in the grand jury might be taken advantage of by special plea, it is not essential that the record should show affirmatively the qualification of the jurors in this particular.

2. That on a motion for a new trial in a criminal case, on the ground that one of the petit jurors had, previous to the trial, expressed his opinion that the defendant was guilty, it is requisite that the defendant should show by affidavit that the fact of such disqualification of the jury was unknown either to himself or his counsel at the time the jury was empaneled. And the refusal of a new trial for want of such showing is not error. The allowance of the writ refused.

[Supreme Court of Ohio, December Term, 1855.]

CORPORATIONS.

Elias Straus & Brother vs. The Eagle Insurance Company of Cincinnati.

Assumpsit. Reserved in the District Court of Ross County.

The opinion of the Court by RANNEY, J.—1. Corporations have such powers, and such only, as the act creating them confers; and are confined to the exercise of those expressly granted, and such incidental powers as are necessary for the purpose of carrying into effect powers specifically conferred.

2. The act of incorporation, like any other statute, should be construed in such manner as will best answer the intention of the legislature; and all its parts should, if possible, be made subservient to, and in harmony with, the leading purposes and objects intended to be accomplished, and for which the corporation is created.

3. Unless expressly restrained by its charter, a corporation has the incidental power to make any contract, and evidence it by any instrument, that may be necessary and proper to accomplish such purposes and objects.

4. A note or bill made or received by such a corporation, is, prima facie, within its corporate powers, and, therefore, valid; but it is competent to show, that it was given or taken for a purpose not authorized, and when shown, the contract is void, and the instrument a nullity.

5. An insurance company, authorized by its charter to invest its funds and capital stock, as should be deemed best by the directors, for the safety of the capital and interest of the stockholders, has no power to purchase upon credit, the promissory note of one insured by the company, and entitled to indemnity for a loss, for the purpose of setting off such note against the claim.

6. The power of investment was designed to enable the company to make a profitable use of its surplus funds; but such a contract, involving the use of no such funds, is, not only, without the limits of the charter, but directly opposed to its leading objects; as it furnishes a strong inducement to withhold prompt payment, for the purpose of depressing the credit of the insured, thereby enabling the company to purchase his paper at a greater discount.

7. The company, therefore, has no power to become a party to the contract of endorsement, and no capacity to receive or hold the legal title to the note.

8. A set-off can only be allowed for such claims as in good faith absolutely belonged to the party at the commencement of the action; and does not extend to claims purchased conditionally for the purpose of using them as a set-off, and with an agreement to return them to the seller, if they are not so used.

Set-off disallowed, and judgment for plaintiff.

RAILROAD.

Thomas Hueston vs. The Eaton and Hamilton Railroad Company.

Error to the Common Pleas of Butler county.

The opinion of the Court by RANNEY, J.—1. The owner of land regularly appropriated to the use of a railroad company, upon proceedings instituted by the company under laws providing therefor, is barred of the common law remedy to sue for and recover the damages he may have sustained by the entry of the company, and the construction of their road upon such land.

2. In such case, the bar is equally effectual, although the owner may have refused to submit to such proceedings, or to receive the amount awarded him, and deposited for his use.

Judgment affirmed.

Statute of Limitations—Acknowledgment or new promise.

Exchequer. May 27 and June 10.

Rackaron and Marriott.

The plaintiff called the attention of the defendant to his debt, on the ground that the Statute of Limitations would soon attach to it. The defendant replied in writing:—"I beg to say that I do not wish to avail myself of the Statute of Limitations to refuse payment of the debt alluded to in your note; but I have not the means of settling it, and must crave a continuance of your indulgence. My situation, as a salaried clerk, does not afford me the means of laying up a shilling; but in course of time, if I continue in my present employment, I may reap the benefit of my services in an augmentation of my salary, to enable me to propose some satisfactory arrangement with you."

Held, that this letter contained no sufficient promise or acknowledgment to bar the statute.

Guarantee whether for past or future credits.

May 29 and June 10.

Brown v. Bachelor.

"In consideration of credit given to A. and B., I hereby agree to guarantee payment of all bills drawn by A. and accepted by B.; also, I agree to guarantee all balance that may be due from A. to B. This guarantee to include all bills now running, as well as the balance of account at this day."

Held, per Pollock, C. B., and Martin, B., to apply to future as well as then existing bills and balances.

Bramwell, B., thought it confined to the latter.

Certain politicians, interested in the support of the "peculiar institution," have endeavored to persuade the public that Mrs. Stowe's last work is artistically a failure, and that it has produced no profound impression on either side of the Atlantic.

But the publishers are happy to state, that of the many hundred of American notices which they have received, the vast majority have been decidedly favorable, most of them enthusiastic,

And the sale thus far has exceeded that of any work of fiction ever published, the

of two volumes each, being now in press.

In England the success has been even more wonderful. The press there, with but one or two exceptions, acknowledge the genius and power of the author, and in terms of which any living writer might be proud. And during the twelve days succeeding its publication no fewer than

The Bank of Cash Credits.

Application will be made to the Legislature of Pennsylvania, for the Charter of a Bank Issue with general banking privileges, with a capital of ONE MILLION OF DOLLARS. Said Bank to be located in the City of Philadelphia, to be called the "Robert Morris Bank," and to be conducted upon the system of cash credits only, as is herewith indicated.

A cash credit is a credit given to an individual by a Banking Company, for a limited sum, seldom over $500, or $1000, upon his own security and that of two or three individuals, approved by the Bank, who become sureties for its payment. The individual who has obtained such a credit, is enabled to draw the whole sum, or any part of it, when he pleases; replacing it, or portions of it, according as he finds it convenient; interest being charged upon such part only as he draws out.

"If a man borrows $1000, from a private hand, and even then it is not always to be found when required, he pays interest for it, whether he be using it or not. His bank credit costs him nothing, except during the moment it is of service to him, and this circumstance is of equal advantage as if he had borrowed money at a much lower rate of interest."

Cash credits are not, however, intended to be a dead load; the main objects of the Banks in granting them is to get their notes circulated, and they do not grant them except to persons in business, or to those who are frequently drawing out and paying in money.

Any person who applies to a bank for a cash credit, is called upon to produce sureties, and, after a full inquiry into the character of the applicant, the nature of his business, and the sufficiency of his securities, he is allowed to open a credit, and to draw upon the Bank for the whole of its amount, or for such part as his daily transaction may require. To the credit of the account, he pays in such sums as he may not have occasion to use, and interest is charged or credited upon the balance, as the case may be. From the facility which these cash credits give to all the small transactions of the country, and from the opportunities which they afford to persons who begin business with little or no capital but their character, to employ profitably the minutest products of their industry, it cannot be doubted that the most important advantages are derived in the whole community.

Such privileges and immunities as the "Metropolitan Bank of New York" exercises, will be applied for.

THE SCHOOLFELLOW,
A Magazine for Boys and Girls, for November.
PUTNAM'S MONTHLY, for November.
Dix, Edwards & Co., No. 321 Broadway, N. Y.
We have received the above from T. B. Peterson, 102 Chestnut street. The leading article in Putnam, on Lawyers, will well repay perusal, it is well and fairly written, and with the other contents of the number, sustains the well established reputation of this American Magazine.

HUMORS OF FALCONBRIDGE.

Under this title, T. B. Peterson, 102 Chestnut Street, is about to furnish the lovers of fun a collection of the most humorous of the many droll sketches by the late Jonathan F. Kelley, which appeared from time to time under the names of "Falconbridge," "Jack Humphries," &c., made by himself just previous to his decease. The illustrations, some of which we have seen, are of a superior character, and the work is published for the benefit of his widow and children. Done in the beautiful style which has been inaugurated by the enterprising "Peterson," with such merit in the contents, and with an object so commendable, we predict a large sale of the work.

CHARTERS OF INCORPORATION.

All applications for CHARTERS to the DECEMBER TERM, of the COURT of COMMON PLEAS, must be presented before the 14th of November, in order to comply with the law requiring publication three weeks before the commencement of the Term.

RIGHT OF REDEMPTION OF PROPERTY SOLD FOR MUNICIPAL CLAIMS AND REGISTERED TAXES.

For the information of our readers we publish the following provisions contained in Sect. 11, Act of 13 May, 1856, Supplement to the Consolidation Act. "All sales for Registered Taxes, Municipal Claims, Assessments for Removing Nuisances, or other charges by the City assessed on Real Estate, shall be subject to redemption by the owner at any time within two years from the date of the acknowledgment of the Sheriff's Deed therefor, upon payment of all costs and charges and twenty-five per cent. upon the amount for which the property had sold;" and provides for the manner in which redemption may be enforced by the Court. Sec. 10, of same Act, provides that no sales shall take place under such claims except on the second Monday of May and November in each year—in pursuance of which the sale for November 10th, advertised in our paper to day is made.

The Act of January 23, 1849, Sec. 3, provided as follows: In all cases of Registered Taxes or Municipal Claims, filed in the Office of the County Commissioners, or in the Prothonotary's Office, D. C. or C. P., after sale, one year shall be allowed for the Redemption of said property, upon the same terms as to costs, charges and per centage

We have received the first number of "THE NATION," a literary family journal, published by Crofut & Bigelow, at No. 83 Dook street, Philadelphia. It is presented to the public in a beautiful dress of bold, clear type, on fine paper, and its columns teem with select stories, interesting miscellany, and spicy editorials; besides which we have several engravings in the best style of the art. It is offered to subscribers at the low rate of $2 per annum.

Sheriff's Sales.

Abstract of Properties to be sold by Geo. Megoe, Esq., Sheriff, on Monday, November 3rd, at Sansom Street Hall, at 4 o'clock, P. M.

Conditions of Sale.

Fifty dollars of the price or sum at which the property shall be struck off, shall be paid to the Sheriff at the time of sale, unless the purchase money shall be less than that sum, in which case only the purchase money shall be paid.

Otherwise the property will again be immediately put up, and sold. The balance of the purchase money must be paid to the Sheriff, at his office within ten days from the time of sale, without any demand being made by the Sheriff, therefor. Otherwise the property may be sold again at the expense and risk of the person to whom it is struck off, who, in case of any deficiency at such re-sale, shall make good the same. Arrears of Ground Rent and taxes, if any, will be paid out of the purchase money, if the bills are presented to the Sheriff before he parts with the money; otherwise they will be paid by the purchaser.

Our City at the present time presents a very beautiful appearance; the weather has become settled, the air balmy, and the storekeepers are driving a brisk trade in Fall and Winter goods. All along our principal thoroughfares the eye is dazzled with flashing silks and bright ribbons; while the gentlemen seem to compete with the fairer sex in the beauty and grace of their garments. We can account for the latter fact only on the hypothesis, that the majority of them purchased their clothing of Granville Stokes, No. 209 Chestnut street.

Law School of the University at Cambridge, Mass.

The instructors in this school are Hon. JOEL PARKER, LL. D., Royal Professor. Hon. THEOPHILUS PARSONS, LL. D., Dane Professor. Hon. EMERT WASHINGTON, LL. D., University Professor.

The course of instruction embraces the various branches of the Common Law, and of Equity, Admiralty, Commercial, International and Constitutional Law, and the Jurisprudence of the United States. The Law Library consists of about 14,000 volumes, and as new works appear they are added and every effort is made to render it complete.

Instructions are given by oral lectures and expositions, (and by recitations and examinations, in connection with them,) of which there are ten every week. Two moot Courts are also held in each week, at each of which a cause, previously given out, is argued by four students, and an opinion delivered by the presiding instructor. Rooms and other facilities are also provided for the Club Courts; and an Assembly is held weekly for practice in debate, and acquiring a knowledge of Parliamentary law and proceedings.

Students may enter the school in any stage of their professional studies or mercantile pursuits, and at the commencement of either term, or in the middle, or other part of a term. They are at liberty to select what studies they wish pursue according to their view of their own wants and attachments.

The Academic year, which commences on Thursday, six weeks after the third Wednesday in July, is divided into two terms, of twenty weeks each, with a vacation of six weeks at the end of each term.

During the winter vacation, the Library is opened, warmed and lighted, for the use of the members of the school.

Applications for admission, or for Catalogues, or any further information, may be made to either of the Professors at Cambridge.

Yeates' Reports, 4 vols. 1791 to 1808
Binney's Reports, 6 vols. 1799 to 1814
Addison's Reports, 1 vol. 1791 to 1799

These Reports are condensed by T. J. Fox Alden, Esq., into three vols., and are sold at the low price of $15. The catalogue price of the old edition, to which they are greatly superior in type and papers is $69. They contain all that is of any value in the original, and as will be seen are sold at less than one fourth the price. The volumes already published are complete in themselves, having a copious index and table of cases.

To those who cannot afford to purchase the original series of Reports (many volumes of which are out of print) this work will be invaluable, whilst even those who do possess them, will buy it for convenience of reference.

From Hon. J. B. Gibson, Chief Justice.—I have examined the first volume of Mr. Alden's Condensed Reports, and think the work will be a valuable one, especially to the younger members of the bar, who cannot, at first afford to purchase the series of our reports, already between seventy and eighty volumes. The cases are clearly stated, and the points decided, are accurately extracted.

A NEW FEATURE.

A portion of our columns under an appropriate heading, will in future be devoted to the publication of notes of all the Decisions of the Courts of this country as well as Europe, in cases involving the liabilities and rights of Banks, Insurance and Railroad Companies, and other Corporations and their Stockholders, and important heads of Commercial Law, as Partnership, Agency, Carriers, Insurance, &c., &c.

The frequent issue of our publication will enable us to keep our subscribers fully posted as to Legislative and Judicial action on these subjects, by the publication of all Laws and Decisions, at the earliest moment after their promulgation. The obviously great advantage which this recueil in this form will afford the officers and stockholders in all their corporations, as well as the business community throughout the Union, will, we hope, induce an extensive addition to our subscription list among them.

It will also furnish the professors of the law in other States, additional reasons for availing themselves of the great advantages offered to them by this publication, which experience alone can enable them fully to appreciate.

RAILROADS.

Supreme Court of Vermont. Chittenden County. December Term, 1854.

State v. Vermont Central Railroad Co.

Railway Officers—Indictment—Nuisance—Right over Highways—Pleadings.

By the Court, Redfield, C. J. This is an indictment against the defendants for a nuisance, in obstructing a public highway, by building and maintaining their depots within its limits, and by "unlawfully and injuriously suffering their engines and cars, and also horses, carts, wagons, &c., to remain in said highway, a great and unreasonable length of time." The following questions are made by defendants.

I. That a railroad corporation are not liable to indictment because their officers and agents have erected and maintained a common nuisance; but that the only remedy is against such officers and agents. This view is attempted to be maintained by reasons which really assume a very specious exterior, but which are, as it seems to us, quite at variance with the general course of decision upon the subject at the present time. It is said, a corporation being created for the performance of certain functions and duties, having no power to do a wrongful act, can only be indicted for their nonfeasance of such acts as are required of them in their charter, and the laws governing them, but not for positive misfeasance of their agents, inasmuch as such persons are not their agents for any such purpose.

But this view is diametrically opposed to the uniform current of decision in this state, in regard to the liability of such corporations. Ever since the decision of Lyman v. White River Bridge Company, 2 Aiken's R. 255, corporations in this state have been held liable for torts committed in the prosecution of the business of their incorporation, as much as natural persons. They may be guilty of trespass, as was held in that case, of trespass on the case, for positive wrongs, as well as neglects; or one may find any number of cases in England, since they have adopted the American view of the subject, upon the strength of the American cases; and alays in this country corporations have been held liable for their torts. Actions, both of trespass and trespass on the case, have repeatedly been maintained in this court, against the different railroad corporations in the state, for various acts of misfeasance, many of which are reported. And if any individual sustained special damage by means of their erecting or maintaining a nuisance, there can be no manner of doubt of his right of action against them, provided this were done in the course of the prosecution of their ordinary charter business, as appears in the present indictment.

And an indictment for a nuisance is only a mode of trying the right, in a public form, the same right which is involved in every private action, for the same reason. And the same course of reasoning, by which it is here attempted to deny the liability of defendants, to an indictment for such tort, also equally excuse them from all liability for all torts, and carry us at once back to the old common law notions upon the subject, of the utter inability of a corporation to commit a tort.

Once allow this proposition, and railroad corporations acquire an immunity which would become as dangerous to themselves as it is unreasonable in itself, and as it might probably become offensive to the public. The case of Benson v. Munson and Brimfield Manufacturing Company, 9 Met. 562, does not, in our opinion, favor any such view of the subject. The fact that the agents of the defendants are equally liable with themselves, argues no incongruity. That is so, in regard to all accessories in misdemeanor. The case of State v. Great Works Milling and Manufacturing Company, 20 Maine B. 41, is directly in point for the defendant; and it is, in our judgment, radically unsound in principle. The case of The Queen v. The Great North of England Railroad Company, 58 Eng. Com. Law Rep. 314, is equally in point for the prosecution, and is based upon such sensible, broad and comprehensive views of the subject as to have very little to be denied by way of argument in its favor. We certainly do not feel it incumbent upon us, after what is there said, and also in Angell & Ames on Corporations, in commenting upon the comparative soundness of the two last cases, to say more upon this point.

II. The indictment charging the defendants, at a road crossing, with entering and maintaining their depots at the point, more or less, in whole or in part, within the limits of the highway, the principal question arises in regard to their right to do this, where they merely cross and do not change the location of the highway. The other portion of the charge against the defendants of suffering their cars and engines, &c., to remain an unreasonable time in the highway, depends, probably, upon the former portion of the charge, and upon the right to erect their depots at such points.

It seems very obvious to us, that a railway, by crossing a highway, acquires no right to build their station-houses upon the highway. Their right to take six rods in width throughout their whole extent, applies only to the lands of private persons, and not to highways. As to these, if it becomes necessary, by arrangement with the selectmen, or the decision of commissioners, they may take the highway, providing another. But nothing of this kind appears. And not having taken the highway, but only crossed it, they acquired no right to use the land covered by the highway, except for the mere purpose of laying their track crossing, and were bound to do as little damage as possible to the highway. This gives them no more right to build their station-houses in such highways, than if they did not cross it. The truth is, the point of intervention with highways are ordinarily most unsuitable points for depots. They should seldom be built at such points. There cannot ordinarily be any necessity for doing so. If it became desirable to build them in such places, the public highways should be changed.

Railroad stations should be approached commonly by private ways, under the control and at the expense of such companies, as well for the convenience of the business of the companies, as the convenience of the public, where this is practicable. One might ask: What would be the effect, if the passenger and freight depots at the most frequented points were in the public streets? People could not live under it.

And if this is a right at one railroad crossing, it is so everywhere, and its exercise is only limited by the mere will of the corporations. It is bad enough to have all the highways in the state rendered unsafe by the crossings and near approach of such a mode of transportation, without absolutely setting at defiance all other power or control over such highways, at these points of intervention. It is severely possible to conceive any more objectionable infringement of the public rights, which is not positively done malà fide.

III. We do not think the word "unlawfully" indispensable to the sufficiency of the second, third and fourth counts. Any other word, as "injuriously and wrongfully," which are found in the bill, are equally available and sufficient.

Judgment of county court affirmed, overruling the motion to grant, and adjudging the indictment sufficient.

The defendants allowed to plead the general issue, and case remanded to county court for trial.

Superior Court of Judicature of New Hampshire. Grafton, ss. July Term, 1854.

Murch v. The Concord Railroad Corporation.

Railroad—Way—Common Carrier—Negligence.

A railroad company, by giving permission to another railroad company to use a part of their track, do not bind themselves to make their track safe, nor to put it in repair, nor to make any change in its existing state.

Such a company, by contracting to let to another company the use of their track, are under no duty to the passengers of the other railroad. The claim of such passenger, if injured, is on the company with whom he contracts.

If a railroad is a public highway, the owners are liable, like towns, for all injuries sustained from defects in their road, by persons travelling, either on foot or in their own carriages, or in those of other persons.

A railroad, as such, is not necessarily a public highway. If a party's rights depend on the fact that such road is a public highway, that fact must be alleged.

The owners of railroads which are public highways, are bound to make such landings or places of access to their roads, as are necessary for the public accommodation, and to keep them in a suitable and safe state for the accommodation of the persons who may be reasonably expected to use them. They are not bound to do anything where no passing can be reasonably expected.

Railroad companies, though they are carriers of passengers by their passenger trains, are not to be regarded as common carriers of passengers by their freight trains, unless they make it an habitual business.

In an action upon the case for negligence, the plaintiff cannot recover, if his own negligence has, in any degree, contributed to cause his injury.

SHIPPING.

Circuit Court of the United States. In Admiralty. New York.

Opinions by Nelson, J.

The Colombo.

Bill of lading—Contents unknown.

Goods were shipped at Hamburg for New York, in packages slightly made, in the form of barrels or hogheads, bound round with matting and well secured with cords. Upon arrival, one of the packages was broken, and the goods damaged. It was proved that the damage might probably not have been discovered upon an ordinary inspection of the package, nor upon lowering it into the hold of the vessel. There was no evidence of the condition in which the goods were shipped, excepting the bill of lading, which said, "Weight and contents unknown." Held, that there was not sufficient evidence to prove that the package was whole when delivered on board the vessel.

Griffith v. Wortman.

Admiralty—Maritime contract—Jurisdiction.

Nelson, J., delivered the opinion substantially as follows:—The libellant is the owner of a ship-yard, together with apparatus, consisting of a railway cradle and other fixtures and implements, used for the purpose of hauling up vessels out of the water, and sustaining them while the repairs are being made. Certain rates of compensation are charged, regulated by the tonnage of the vessel, for hauling her up on the ways, and a per diem charge for the time occupied while she is undergoing the repairs, in cases where the owner of the yard and apparatus is not employed to do the work, but the repairs are made by other ship-masters, as in the present instance.

The main controversy in the court below related to the terms upon which the service was to be rendered. Judge Hall, who heard the case, settled the amount, upon his view of the evidence, at $631.97, and I am not disposed to interfere with it. The proofs are conflicting, and not very clear either way in respect to the agreement.

The doubt I have had in the case is upon the objection taken to the jurisdiction of the court, a point not taken in the court below. It is claimed by the counsel for the respondents, that the agreement for the service rendered is to be regarded, simply, as a hiring of the yard and apparatus; and, certainly, if this is the true character of the contract or transaction, there would be great difficulty in upholding the jurisdiction. On the other side, it is contended that the service rendered is a service in the repairs of the vessel, and is as much a part of them as the work of the ship-master, or the materials furnished by him.

There can be no doubt, that in the cases where the ship-master, owning the ship-yard and apparatus, is employed to make the repairs, the service in question would enter into and become part of the contract, and thus be appropriate subject of admiralty jurisdiction. And the question is, whether any well-founded distinction exists between a transaction of that character and the present one. The owner of the yard and apparatus, together with his hands, superintends and conducts the operation of raising and lowering the vessel, and also of fixing it upon the ways, preparatory to the repairs.

The service requires skill and experience in the business, and is essential in the process of repairs. I do not go into the question whether this is a contract made, or service rendered, on the land or on the water; it undoubtedly partakes of both; for, I am free to confess, I have not much respect for this and other like distinctions that have sometimes been resorted to for the purpose of ascertaining when the admiralty has, and has not, jurisdiction. The nature and character of the contract, and of the service, have always appeared to me to be sounder guides for determining the question.

Although I agree a distinction may be made between this case, in the aspect presented, and that of the case where the ship-master is employed to make the repairs, I am inclined to think that it is not a substantial one, and that to adopt it would be yielding to a refinement that I am always reluctant to incorporate into judicial proceedings. A distinction, to be practical, should be one of substance, and that would strike the common sense as founded in reason and justice.

I must, therefore, overrule the point of jurisdiction, and affirm the decree.

Howard v. Cobb.

Passenger contract—Non-performance at the day—Excuse.

Nelson, J. This libel was filed by Cobb against the re-pondents, to recover for a breach of contract to carry certain passengers in the steamship New Orleans from Panama to San Francisco, the vessel to leave on her trip in the month of April, 1856. The fare paid was $150 for each passenger, and an engagement given for the passage in the form of a ticket. This suit involves the amount of ten tickets. The ten purchasers presented themselves at Panama on the 1st of April to take their passage, but the Orleans had not then arrived, and did not till the month of August following. She had left the port of New York in February, but had encountered rough and stormy weather, and was obliged to put into St. Thomas for repairs, where she was detained a long time, which was probably known to the passengers at Panama. The brig Anna, belonging to the libellant, was at this place in April, and sailed thence to San Francisco on the third of the month. The ten passengers whose tickets are in question took passage in her, and transferred these tickets to the master, which were received for their fare. This libel is filed to recover the amount, $1500, and interest. The court below decreed in favor of the libellant.

It is objected that the suit is not in the name of the original parties to the contract for the passage; but it is every day's practice in admiralty to allow suits to be brought in the name of the assignee of a chose in action. The libellant is the real owner of the tickets, and, therefore, the proper person to bring the suit, and in his own name.

It is also objected that the disabling of the New Orleans by stress of weather excuses the fulfillment of the contract at the time provided for. How this might be in a case where the passenger was on the vessel at the time of the casualty, causing delay in the voyage, it is not now necessary to determine. Certainly, until the passenger become connected with the vessel as a passenger on board, he is in no way subject to her casualties and misfortunes occurring through stress of weather or otherwise. He is a stranger to her. The contract bound the owner to have his vessel at the place and time designated; that he had stipulated for as a part consideration for the price paid, and assumed upon himself the responsibility of performance; and the failure operated a breach of the engagement, and subjected him to a return of the price paid. The winds and waves or weather are no excuse for the non-fulfillment of a contract as to the time of the commencement of the voyage. If these circumstances had been intended as elements of it, they should have been expressly provided for by the owner, and then all parties concerned would have understood it.

It is said that the passengers should have waited the month of April, and that the owner had the whole month to furnish his vessel there. Admitting that he had the month, the utmost that can be claimed is, that the passengers took the risk, if the vessel arrived within the month, of losing their right to demand a return of the fare. There was no abandonment of the voyage, for the tickets for the passage money were appropriated to the completion of it. The passengers, doubtless, knew the disabled condition of the Orleans, and that she could not arrive at Panama in time to fulfil her engagement; and it would have been an idle act to have waited the month, especially as there seems to have been no provision made by the owners for a substitution of another vessel, nor indeed, for aught that appears, any interest or concern taken in the matter.

The decree below I think right, and it must be affirmed.

"SCORN NOT THE SONG."

So sang Billy Wordsworth, some half century, we believe, ago, when sending forth a "little book" of his upon the world. But the bard spoke even wiser than perhaps he thought. "The Song" in America has become an affair of State. "The Campaign Songster," is a regular book about election times; and our "mass-meetings" of late times, take away from our "camp meetings" the ancient glory of their broad-voiced melodies. This mass-singing is common in Germany, common too in France; but quite unknown in England. It is now common; and much increasing practice among ourselves, in times when the people are moved by exciting interests, shows how largely, of late, the German element has infused itself into our population; how an English we are year by year becoming, and how completely we are a nation absolutely unlike, as we are independent, of every other. Our remarks have been naturally suggested by the following passage which we clip from a western Democratic paper:—

"General Morris's beautiful national lyric. 'The Flag of our Union forever,' has been the greatest 'document' in our part of the country. It touched the right nerve and has produced a thrill throughout the land."

"A union of lakes—a union of lands—
A union of States none may sever.
A union of hearts—a union of hands,
And the Flag of our Union forever!"

We ought ourselves, to add that while we believe the General is a faithful member of the great Democratic party, his song is a national and not a party lyric.

Court of Common Pleas.

Opinion by Judge Allison.

THE COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA, ex relatione WM. D. COZENS vs. CHARLES S. CLOSE, Surveyor and Regulator, &c.

Rule to show cause why peremptory mandamus should not be awarded.

There are two questions which present themselves for consideration under the pleadings and testimony taken in this cause. One of these questions being of general interest, it will be proper to consider it first in order.

The respondent, who is the Surveyor and Regulator of the Second Survey District for the City of Philadelphia, was applied to on the 14th of June, 1856, to survey and regulate the unimproved portion of a lot of ground situate on the north side of Reed street, commencing 16 feet west from the west side of Juniata street, and having a front on Reed street of 32 feet. It appears by the testimony of Smith Cozens, a witness examined on behalf of the relator, and also by the testimony of Joseph H. Chubb, a witness called by the respondent, that when the written application of the relator was presented to the respondent, objection was made to the sufficiency of the fee tendered, which was four dollars, Mr. Close saying there was not money enough to regulate the lot, and desiring to be informed whether it was intended to erect upon it one or more buildings; at the same time desiring the messenger of the relator to inform him that the charge for regulating one lot was $4.00 and for two lots $6.00. The answer to this message was, that the lot to be regulated was 32 feet front.

The Surveyors of the city of Philadelphia are elective officers; their powers and duties are, nevertheless, to a considerable extent, regulated by the Councils of the city, who, on the 26th of October, 1855, passed an ordinance, the seventh section of which provides that, "Prior to the commencement of any building or buildings in said city, a survey shall be made by the Surveyor and Regulator of the district, of such part or parts of lot or lots on which the same is to be erected, as may be occupied, or proposed to be occupied, by each and every building, with its necessary out-buildings; and also for any alterations and additions thereto, whenever such building or buildings may encroach on, or interfere with a party line, or line of any public street, lane, alley or court of said city."

The construction given by the respondent to the language above quoted is, that the fees for surveying and regulating, are to be graduated by the number of buildings to be erected, and not by the size of the lot to be surveyed. In this we think he is in error; for although the language of the ordinance is, that survey shall be made of such part or parts of lot or lots on which is intended to be erected each and every building, yet this is qualified by that which follows: "Whenever such building or buildings may encroach on or interfere with a party line or line of any public street," &c. The survey, therefore, which is made obligatory upon the builder or owner, is that which is required to settle and make out the proper dividing line between party and party, or which may be necessary for the ascertainment of the proper building line as between individual owners and the public; so as in the first instance to guard against an undue encroachment upon the lands of an adjoining owner; and, in the second place, to protect the public highways of the city against any appropriation to private use by the erection of buildings upon any portion of them. It would be difficult to assign a reason for a different construction of the ordinance, under which the charge for regulating is authorized to be made; for an owner of land has a right to erect upon it as many buildings as he may choose, provided he does not trespass upon the ground of his neighbor, beyond the required thickness of party walls, and keeps on or back from the line of the public streets. The only restriction which the law places in certain localities, upon the general right, has relation to the character of the materials to be employed in building, as a protection against loss of adjoining property by fire, and the general requirement, that all erections or constructions of the kind shall be to a reasonable degree safe.

The 27th section of the act of the 2d February, 1854, provides that the Surveyor shall perform the duties required by law; and it will be seen by reference to the act of the 24th February, 1721, sections 2d and 6th, that it has relation only to the regulation of foundations and walls of buildings as between party and party, and the regulation of partition fences, in the city of Philadelphia, and this is equally true of the several laws defining the duties of Surveyor and Regulator for the several unincorporated districts of the county of Philadelphia, passed at various times, and brought down to as late a period as April 5th, 1849, when the district of West Philadelphia was incorporated. The propriety of thus looking to previous legislation, in order to ascertain what duties were by law required of Surveyors and Regulators, was evidently in the mind of Councils when they passed the ordinance of October 25, 1855, for it will be seen by a comparison of the two, that the seventh section of said ordinance is, in a great degree, literally transcribed from the 14th section of the act of the 22d of March, 1813, entitled an act to incorporate the district of Spring Garden, and relating to the survey and regulation of said district.

But the subsequent portion of the 7th section of the ordinance under consideration, is still more plainly indicative of the true intent and meaning of the language, to which a construction has first been given; for it proceeds to impose a penalty upon any one who shall build upon any street, &c., or on the line of his neighbor's ground, without first applying for, and having the line or lines thereof, marked by the regulator, and forbids a deviation from the lines and boundaries marked as aforesaid; that is, adjoining to, or upon any street, or on the line of a neighbor's ground. In confirmation of the views first expressed, it is further provided, that the provisions of the ordinance shall not apply to buildings, fences, or other improvements to be erected in the rural districts, where the same do not encroach or interfere with party lines, or lines of roads or streets. This declaration would appear to be unnecessary, but seems to have been inserted for greater caution, and to prevent annoyance and vexations to the inhabitants of those sections where the necessity for such surveys as are contemplated by the ordinance is of less frequent occurrence.

It is by the 11th section of the ordinance that the schedule of fees is established, and by referring to it, it will be seen that for surveying and regulating each single lot, not more than forty feet, four dollars shall be charged. The lot in question was in every sense a single lot; it was the property of the relator alone; was not parted or divided in any way, nor could its character in this particular be considered or changed at the time of the application, by any future intention of its owner; he did not ask to have it cut up by survey or measurement; claimed it to be that which it really was, a lot 32 feet front, being the unimproved portion of a larger lot, described in the deed which accompanied the application, the other portions of which had been surveyed and regulated, and the lines and boundaries thereof marked off by the respondent, of which surveys he had copies at that time in his office, and we are therefore of the opinion, that the fee tendered to the Surveyor was the legal and proper fee, that the lot was a single lot, and that no greater sum than four dollars could properly be demanded, unless the Regulator had been required to survey or mark off the one lot into two or more portions, by designating the intermediate or dividing lines thereof.

The second reason assigned by the respondent, in answer to the rule to show cause, is the uncertain character of the demand of the relator, as to the lot which he desired to have surveyed and regulated; this demand is in writing and is dated June 14th, 1856, as follows:—

"Mr. Close, Regulator—You will please to lay off and mark out the balance of unimproved part of lot that the deed calls for, which I send by the boy, and give him a receipt for the regulation of the same.

(Signed) WM. D. COZENS."

The lot or piece of ground described in the deed, is situate on the north-west corner of Reed and Juniata streets, having a front on Reed street of 48 feet, and a depth or front on Juniata street of 62 feet 3 inches; from this the respondent had surveyed and marked off for improvement, from the northernmost portion, a lot 14 feet on Juniata street, by 48 feet in depth, an alley to the south

2 feet 6 inches, by 32 feet in depth, and a lot 16 feet on Reed street, and 45 feet 9 inches in depth north, bounded on the east by the west line of Juniata street; copies of these surveys and drafts, or plans thereof, were or should have been in his possession on the 14th of June, 1856; the requirement was to survey the unimproved balance of the entire lot—of what that consisted, a comparison of said drafts with the description contained in the deed, would have appeared with certainty, and was more reliable than any written description which might have been attempted by the relator, and which was demanded by the respondent. Indeed the requirement was in writing, for the relator's note of the 14th of June, 1856, contained a clear statement of his demand, and the deed which accompanied it an accurate description of the lines to be marked off and surveyed.

The mandamus as prayed for, is therefore awarded.

W. S. Price, Esq., for the relator; S. F. Flood, Esq., for the respondent.

U. States Circuit Court.

Opinion by Judge Grier.

MATTHEW BUCKLEY v. CHAS. BROWN, Collector of the port of Philadelphia.

This cause, with several others, had by certiorari, been removed from the Court of Common Pleas of Philadelphia county.

The plaintiff was the captain of a canal boat, which had been duly registered, enrolled and licensed at the port of Philadelphia, and on the 27th day of March, 1855, applied to Charles Brown, the defendant, as Collector of the port of Philadelphia, for the renewal of the license of said boat, as required by law.

The defendant refused to grant the renewal unless the masters of the boat would pay the sum of one dollar therefor, and the sum of four dollars and eighty cents as "Marine Hospital Tax."

The payment of the Marine Hospital Tax was demanded by virtue of the act of Congress of 16th July, 1792, section 2. This act provides "that no collector shall grant to any ship or vessel whose enrollment or license for carrying on the coasting trade has expired, a new enrollment or license, before the master of such ship or vessel shall first render a true account to the collector of the number of seamen, and the time they have severally been employed on board such ship or vessel during the continuance of the license which so expired, and pay to such collector 25 cents for every month such seamen have been severally employed as aforesaid." The sum thus paid is retained from the wages of the seamen, and is to form a hospital fund for the support and maintenance of disabled seamen.

Under the act, it had been the practice prior to 1846 to tax, indiscriminately, all hands and mariners engaged on boats and vessels trading on our river. This tax became a great burden to canal boats and vessels engaged in the inland navigation of Pennsylvania and other states; and to relieve them from this burden, Congress, on the 20th July, 1846, enacted the following law:

Act of Congress of July 20th, 1856.

"Sec. 1. That the owner or owners, master or captain, or other persons employed in navigating canal boats without masts or steam power, now by law required to be registered, licensed, or enrolled and licensed, shall not be required to pay any Marine Hospital tax or money; nor shall the persons employed to navigate such boats receive any benefit or advantage from the Marine Hospital fund; nor shall such owner or owners, captain, or other persons be required to pay fees, or make any compensation for such register, license, or enrollment license; nor shall any such boat be subject to be libelled in any of the United States Courts for the wages of any person or persons who may be employed on board thereof, or in navigating the same.

"Sec. 2. That all acts and parts of acts repugnant to the provisions of this act be, and the same are hereby repealed."

In practicing upon the act of Congress, the Secretary of the Treasury issued to the Collectors of the different ports of the United States, instructions to the effect:

First. That under the act of 20th July, 1856, vessels or boats which ply altogether on tide and other navigable waters, cannot be deemed canal boats, entitled to the privileges of that act.

Second. That the exemption under the act of 1846, of canal boats from the payment of the fees and hospital money, cannot extend to boats or barges, exceeding 60 tons, although without masts or steam power within themselves, when the usual practice of such boats or barges, is to come out of the canals, and trade by aid of steamboats and propellers, on natural navigable waters from district to district; such boats or barges thus becoming liable to the regular payment of hospital money or fees, besides being by law required to be registered, licensed, or enrolled and licensed, and governed by the several provisions of the law regulating the coasting trade.

Under these instructions from the Secretary of the Treasury, the Collector of the port charged Hospital dues to the boat of the plaintiff, in conformity with the act of 1798, and notwithstanding the act of 1846. The plaintiff paid these dues under protest, and this action was brought to recover them back with interest.

The case was submitted to the Court upon a statement of facts which were undisputed.

The boat in question is of 123 tons burthen and is without masts or steam-power. At the time of the application for the renewal of license, said boat was, and has uniformly been before and since engaged in the coal trade between Port Carbon, in Schuylkill county, Pa., and the city of New York, by way of the Schuylkill Navigation and the Delaware and Raritan Canal. The whole distance from Port Carbon to New York, by the said route, is 228 miles, of which 151 are by land, (108 on Schuylkill Navigation, and 43 on the Delaware and Raritan canal,) and 77 upon tide water.

The case was fully argued by B. Tilghman, Esq., for plaintiff, and by James C. Vandyke, Esq., U. S. Attorney, for defendant.

It is a great grievance that the revenue laws passed by Congress have been so numerous and complicated, that it is often difficult to ascertain what is the existing law on any particular subject. In the construction of other laws, when one statute supplies or changes the provisions of another, the latest is construed as a repeal of the former. But on the construction of this mass of contradictory revenue laws, it would seem that the statute which gives the highest duty, the largest fees, or the severest penalties, is never repealed by a later act which mitigates the penalty or diminishes the fees. Acts giving certain fees or forfeitures to certain officers, become almost like the laws of the Medes and Persians, incapable of being repealed. At least, it is hard for human ingenuity to discover language for the purpose which may not be perverted by ingenious misconstructions.

This case raises the question of the construction of an act of Congress which declares that "The owner, master, or captain, or other persons employed in navigating canal boats without masts or steam power, &c., shall not be required to pay certain fees, nor marine hospital tax, and shall receive no benefit from the marine hospital fund, &c."

It is well known, as a part of the history of this act of Congress, that it was originated at the instance, chiefly, and for the relief of a certain class of citizens of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Much of the internal trade of this country, which was formerly carried in wagons over turnpikes, or by coasting vessels trading from port to port, is now carried on by means of canal boats. In the transportation of coal, these boats are loaded among the mountains, dragged by horses or mules down to the harbor of Philadelphia, towed from the harbor to the New Jersey canal, again dragged by animal power, to be again tugged or towed into the harbor of New York. The trade thus carried on is entirely internal, as much so as if done by wagon or railroad car, and calling as little for the interference of the revenue laws. There is nothing of a maritime character about this mode of transportation, save the boat. The persons who conduct or navigate them, the steersman of the boat, his assistant, the man or boy who drives the mule, have probably never seen the sea till their arrival at New York. They are, therefore, astonished to find that as soon as their boat touches brackish water, it has become the subject of a new code of laws, originating in Rhodes or Italy, and in the Isles of Oberon and Rhea. That these mountaineers have, by magic, become mariners, that they may libel the coal boat for their wages, or hypothecate it for oats and provisions, on the return voyage, &c., &c., and a thousand other incidents of admiralty jurisdiction, and custom-house supervision and fees, which have about as much application to them and their boats as they have to Conestoga wagons.

For the purpose of relieving trade from these annoyances of admiralty law and custom-house exactions, this act of Congress was passed, and the question for the Court to decide in this case is, whether we can, by any ingenuity so construe, or rather misconstrue it, so as to render it wholly ineffectual?

It is proposed to do it by means of the following sorites or syllogisms:

A canal boat is a canal boat only while it continues to be a boat on a canal; and although it has no mast or steam-engine on board, yet when a steam tug is attached to it by a rope, for the purpose of taking it from part of a harbor or river to another, she becomes ipso facto a steamboat, because it has been tugged or propelled by steam, and so remains ever after, it having lost the character of canal boat forever, by a single contact with the rope of a steam tug. The man, the boy, and the mule are thus converted into mariners, and entitled to libel for wages in admiralty, and to an interest in the marine hospital fund. Ergo, they are bound to pay the same fees as were exacted before this act

A. W. RAND'S SELF-CLEANING FURNACE. Boynton's Patent.

Having put up a large number of these Furnaces, both in public and private buildings, (including 24 put up at the Philadelphia County Prison, in place of the 44 torn out.) and tested them during the cold weather of 1855, and 1856, being the coldest weather we have had for twenty or thirty years. They have given the most universal satisfaction, and those having them in use were perfectly delighted with the abundance of warm, pleasant air, and abundant ventilation afforded thereby, while so many were suffering from cold, and troubled with the deficiencies of their heating apparatus. We take great pleasure, therefore, in recommending them to the notice of the public, and would call their attention particularly to an examination of the greatly increased amount of effective radiating surface, their perfect solidity and durability, the improved manner of making the joints, entirely preventing any escape of gases, and the manner of distributing the fire, so as to cause it to impinge directly against the large amount of surface, without the objectionable and unnatural method of forcing the current downwards. We have also a full assortment of HAYES' PATENT TUBULAR OVEN RANGES, now so universally used, and favorably known. Also, HAYES' PATENT VENTILLATORS, &c., &c., all of which will be put up in the very best manner, and by the most skillful workmen, constantly engaged for that purpose, by A. W. RAND, No. 82 North SIXTH Street, Philada. may 16-1y.

JUST PUBLISHED, A NEW AND HANDSOME EDITION OF TIDD'S PRACTICE Of the Courts of King's Bench and Common Pleas, in Personal Actions and Ejectments: To which are added the Law and Practice of Extents; and the Rules of Court, and Modern Decisions in the Exchequer of Pleas. Fourth Edition, with the Notes of Francis J. Troubat and Am I. Fish, Esquires. 2 large 8vo. volume. Copy of a letter from Judge Sharswood to the Publisher.

My Dear Sir: I have examined very carefully the Fourth American Edition of Tidd's Practice. The original work has a reputation so high as a full, accurate and authoritative text book, as to render unnecessary any remarks in regard to its merits. Mr. Fish's annotations have added greatly to its value. They exhibit unusual industry, as well as sound judgment, and I think the book may now be justly commended to the American Profession as worthy their extensive patronage. Very truly yours, GEO. SHARSWOOD. ROBERT H. SMALL, Esq.

Copy of a letter from Judge Kane to the Publisher, Dear Sir: The edition of Tidd's Practice, which you have been so kind as to send me a copy of, will be a valuable addition to the libraries of the profession. The original work was a standard, more than half a century ago, and has been kept up to the present time, by the learned labors of the successive editors. Among these, no one has been more conspicuous for careful research, and for accuracy of diction and arrangement, than my friend, Mr. Fish. His more extended annotations compare with the beautiful treatises that give value to the "Leading Cases" of Mr. Hare and Mr. Wallace. I am, very respectfully, your obedient servt., J. K. KANE. Mr. ROBERT H. SMALL. In Press. ADDISON ON CONTRACTS. From the last new London Edition, with copious American Notes. One large 8vo. vol., over 1200 pp. A large assortment of standard Law Books constantly on hand and for sale at the lowest prices, by ROBERT H. The Bank of Cash Credits. Application will be made to the Legislature of Pennsylvania, for the Charter of a Bank Issue with general banking privileges, with a capital of ONE MILLION OF DOLLARS. Said Bank to be located in the City of Philadelphia, to be called the "Robert Morris Bank," and to be conducted upon the system of cash credits only, as is herewith indicated. A cash credit is a credit given to an individual by a Banking Company, for a limited sum, seldom under $500, or $1000, upon his own security and that of two or three individuals, approved by the Bank, who become sureties for its payment. The individual who has obtained such a credit, is enabled to draw the whole sum, or any part of it, when he pleases; replacing it, or portions of it, according as he finds it convenient; interest being charged upon such part only as he draws out. "If a man borrows $1000, from a private hand, and even then it is not always to be found when required, he pays interest for it, whether he be using it or not. His bank credit costs him nothing, except during the moment it is of service to him, and this circumstance is of equal advantage as if he had borrowed money at a much lower rate of interest." Cash credits are not, however, intended to be a dead load; the main objects of the Banks in granting them is to get their notes circulated, and they do not grant them except to persons in business, or to those who are frequently drawing out and paying in money. Any person who applies to a bank for a cash credit, is called upon to produce sureties, and, after a full inquiry into the character of the applicant, the nature of his business, and the sufficiency of his securities, he is allowed to open a credit, and to draw upon the Bank for the whole of its amount, or for such part as his daily transaction may require. To the credit of the account, he pays in such sums as he may not have occasion to use, and interest is charged or credited upon the balance, as the case may be. From the facility which these cash credits give to all the small transactions of the country, and from the opportunities which they afford to persons who begin business with little or no capital but their character, to employ profitably the minutest products of their industry, it cannot be doubted that the most important advantages are derived in the whole community. Such privileges and immunities as the "Metropolitan Bank of New York" exercises, will be applied for.

PROSPECTUS OF THE LEGAL INTELLIGENCER FOR 1857, VOL. XIV. HENRY E. WALLACE, EDITOR. In this paper, which has become indispensable to every practicing lawyer in Pennsylvania, are now published immediately after delivery, the Opinions of the Judges of THE SUPREME COURT OF PENNSYLVANIA, (greatly in advance of the State Reports.) THE DISTRICT COURT AND COURT OF COMMON PLEAS of Philadelphia, (only herein reported.) THE UNITED STATES COURTS for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania. REVIEWS of Law Books, Legal Dissertations, Intelligence, Miscellany, &c., &c. THE LAWS Enacted by the Legislature of Pennsylvania at each Session. Besides which, it contains by authority of law and rules of Court, all the Legal Advertisements required to be published in Philadelphia. To the variety and amount of contents above enumerated, (which makes this the cheapest publication of the kind extant,) it is proposed in the next volume to add the following New Features. 1. Early and correct Reports, under an appropriate head, of all Cases decided in the Courts of England, as well as this country, involving the Law of BANKING, INSURANCE, CARRIERS, and other points of MERCANTILE LAW, and the Rights and Liabilities of INSURANCE AND RAILROAD COMPANIES, MINING AND LAND ASSOCIATIONS, BANKS, and other CORPORATIONS. 2. Full Reports of interesting JURY TRIALS in all parts of the Union. These new features, combined with the present advantages it affords, cannot fail to make "THE LEGAL INTELLIGENCER" serviceable and interesting to Business Men as well as Lawyers, and of very great utility to Officers and Stockholders of all BANKS, RAILROADS, INSURANCE COMPANIES, and other CORPORATIONS in all parts of the Union. Subscriptions are solicited. Specimen numbers will be sent to parties desiring to see the paper before subscribing. It is published every FRIDAY, by KING & BAIRD, No. 9 SANSOM STREET, PHILADELPHIA. At Two Dollars per Annum, invariably in ADVANCE. A limited number of appropriate advertisements (only), inserted on reasonable terms.

Sheriff's Sales.

Abstract of Properties sold by Geo. Megee, Esq., Sheriff, on Monday, November 10, at Sansom Street Hall, at 4 o'clock, P. M. Conditions of Sale. Fifty dollars of the price or sum at which the property shall be struck off, shall be paid to the Sheriff at the time of sale, unless the purchase money shall be less than that sum, in which case only the purchase money shall be paid. Otherwise the property will again be immediately put up, and sold. The balance of the purchase money may be paid to the Sheriff, at his office within ten days from the time of sale, without any demand being made by the Sheriff, therefor. Otherwise the property may be sold again at the expense and risk of the person to whom it is struck off, who, in case of any deficiency at such re-sale, shall make good the same. Arrest of Ground Rent and taxes, if any, will be paid out of the purchase money, if the bills are presented to the Sheriff before he parts with the money; otherwise they will be paid by the purchaser. PENNSYLVANIA REPORTS.

A New and Cheap Edition. ALREADY PUBLISHED.

Table of reports including Dallas' Reports, 4 vols., Yeates' Reports, 4 vols., Binney's Reports, 6 vols., Addison's Reports, 1 vol.

These Reports are condensed by T. J. Fox Alden, Esq., into three vols., and are sold at the low price of $15. The catalogue price of the old edition, to which they are greatly superior in type and papers is $69. They contain all that is of any value in the original, and as will be seen are sold at less than one fourth the price.

To those who cannot afford to purchase the original series of Reports (many volumes of which are out of print) this work will be invaluable, whilst even those who do possess them, will buy it for convenience of reference. From Hon. J. B. Gibson, Chief Justice.—I have examined the first volume of Mr. Alden's Condensed Reports, and think the work will be a valuable one, especially to the younger members of the bar, who cannot, at first afford to purchase the series of our reports, already between seventy and eighty volumes. The cases are clearly stated, and the points decided, are accurately extracted.

Testimonials speaking in the highest terms of the work, have also been received from Hon. Edward King, Hon. William B. McClure, Hon. William D. Kelly, Hon. Cornelius Darragh, Hon. John Galbreath, James Dunlop, Esq., Thomas Williams, Esq., and more than fifty other distinguished members of the Pennsylvania Bar.

IN PREPARATION, Addition on Contracts.

This valuable work will be reprinted from the fourth London edition just issued, and contain many important American notes.

ROBERT H. SMALL, LAW BOOK SELLER AND PUBLISHER, No. 21 South Sixth street, Philadelphia.

Law School of the University at Cambridge, Mass.

The instructors in this school are Hon. JOSEPH PARKER, LL. D., Royal Professor. Hon. THEOPHILUS PARSONS, LL. D., Dane Professor. Hon. EMERY WASHBURN, LL. D., University Professor. The course of instruction embraces the various branches of the Common Law, and of Equity, Admiralty, Commercial, International and Constitutional Law, and the Jurisprudence of the United States. The Law Library consists of about 14,000 volumes, and as new works appear they are added and every effort is made to render it complete.

Instruction is given by oral lectures and expositions, (and by recitations and examinations, in connection with them,) of which there are ten every week. Two Moot Courts are also held in each week, at each of which a cause, previously given out, is argued by four students, and an opinion delivered by the presiding instructor. Rooms and other facilities are also provided for the Club Courts; and an Assembly is held weekly for practice in debate, and acquiring a knowledge of Parliamentary law and proceedings.

Students may enter the school in any stage of their professional studies or mercantile pursuits, and at the commencement of either term, or in the middle, or other part of a term. They are at liberty to select what studies they will pursue according to their view of their own wants and attainments.

The Academical year, which commences on Thursday, six weeks after the third Wednesday in July, is divided into two terms, of twenty weeks each, with a vacation of six weeks at the end of each term.

During the winter vacation, the Library is opened, warmed and lighted, for the use of the members of the school.

Applications for admission, or for Catalogues, or any further information, may be made to either of the Professors at Cambridge. June 6-ly.

VOL. XIII.

PHILADELPHIA, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 1856.

No. 47.

A NEW FEATURE.

A portion of our columns under an appropriate heading, will in future be devoted to the publication of notes of all the Decisions of the Courts of this country as well as Europe, in cases involving the liabilities and rights of Banks, Insurance and Railroad Companies, and other Corporations and their Stockholders, and important heads of Commercial Law, as Partnership, Agency, Carriers, Insurance, &c., &c.

The frequent issue of our publication will enable us to keep our subscribers fully posted as to Legislative and Judicial action on these subjects, by the publication of all Laws and Decisions, at the earliest moment after their promulgation. The obviously great advantage which this recueil in this form will afford the officers and stockholders in all their corporations, as well as the business community throughout the Union, will, we hope, induce an extensive addition to our subscription list among them.

It will also furnish the professors of the law in other States, additional reasons for availing themselves of the great advantages offered to them by this publication, which experience alone can enable them fully to appreciate.

INSURANCE.

Fabyan v. Union Mutual Fire Insurance Co.

Double insurance—Risk increased—Act of incorporation.

It being provided in the act of incorporation of the defendant company, that the insurance made by said company upon any property shall become void by a double insurance subsisting thereon without the consent of the directors thereto indorsed on the back of the policy, the defendants may avail themselves of that provision to avoid a policy in case of such double insurance without the consent of the directors, notwithstanding there is printed on the back of the policy, under the caption, "Act of Incorporation of the Union Mutual Fire Insurance Company," two sections of said act, being the first and the last, and designated thereon respectively, as section 1 and section 20; the intermediate 18 sections of the act being omitted, and among those omitted, the section containing said provision; and there being also a reference in the sections printed to certain other provisions as contained in the act, which do not appear in the sections printed, but which are contained in those omitted.

The plaintiff having, after he had effected an insurance with the defendants, set up seven additional stores in the building in which the property insured was kept and used, and notified the defendants thereof, saying that he did not consider the risk "much increased" thereby, and requested them to inform him how much additional premium he must pay therefor. To this the defendants replied, that his policy had erroneously been taken in the wrong class, and that they declined to continue his insurance any longer, and would surrender his premium note without charge.

The plaintiff then wrote to the company, inquiring whether it would not be just to return the cash payment he had made for the insurance, as it was not good, and saying that if they would return that, he would be satisfied, and get insured in some other company. Held, that this was notice to the plaintiff, that the company declined to assume the increased risk, and elected to terminate the insurance under the provisions of an article of the by-laws of the company, that if the risk should be increased by any change of the circumstances disclosed in the application or by the alteration of any building, the policy thereon should be void, unless an additional premium and deposit should be settled with and paid to the company, and an assent thereto by the plaintiff, and that thereupon the policy became void.

NOTES AND BILLS.

Palmer v. Ward.

Note, whether negotiable—Action.

A note for a sum certain, and for an additional sum uncertain and contingent, is not negotiable; and no action will lie upon it by an indorsee to recover any part of it.

MERCANTILE LAW.

Badger v. Gilmore.

Revival of debt discharged by proceedings in bankruptcy.

An express promise to pay part of a note discharged by proceedings in bankruptcy, revives the note pro tanto.

Evidence, that the maker, when called upon to testify in a suit upon the note against another party, expressed himself unwilling to testify, and declared that he preferred "to pay the note himself and would pay it;" at the same time saying that "a part of it had been paid, but enough remained due upon it to pay the holder," who had purchased it for a smaller sum than appeared to be due upon it, is competent to be submitted to a jury as showing that the maker expressly promised to pay so much of the amount due upon the note as would reimburse the holder for the sum paid by him for it; and revives the note to that amount.

A debt, discharged by proceedings in bankruptcy, is not extinguished, as by payment, but while it continues under the operation of the discharge it is incapable of being enforced by a suit upon it. The debtor, by an express promise to pay, waives the benefit of the discharge, and the debt is restored to its original condition of a legal liability.

A promissory note, while under the operation of such discharge, may be indorsed, and a new promise made to the indorsee, may be given in evidence to sustain a declaration upon the note by a subsequent indorsee.

RAILROAD.

Manchester and Lawrence R. R. v. Fisk.

Action for railroad tolls—Establishment and notice of tariff and time—Evidence.

Tolls need not be declared specifically as such; it will be sufficient, if the indebtedness is declared to be for freight and transportation of goods, or for labor and services, or by any suitable terms to express the true nature of the claim.

It is not necessary that rates of toll on a railroad should be established by the directors personally; it will be sufficient, if they are fixed by the agent of the road under their direction.

Where a printed tariff of tolls is established, each of the papers so printed may be regarded as an original. If this were otherwise, it would be a sufficient explanation of the non-production of one of such printed tariffs, in order to the introduction of secondary evidence, to show that it was required by law to be and was posted at a particular depot.

It is not an objection to a tariff of freights, that it comprises the rates between stations of that road and others on connected roads.

BAILMENT.

Carpenter v. Taylor.

Is a restaurant an inn?

Action for the value of an opera-glass, left by mistake in defendant's saloon.

Held, that a restaurant is not an inn, so as to subject the keeper to the liability of innkeepers.

In order to charge a party as innkeeper, it should appear that his premises were kept as an inn for the accommodation of travellers. Therefore, a person who enters a restaurant for a meal, is not to be deemed a guest or traveller, entitled to the protection which the law gives against innkeepers.

PARTNERSHIP.

Ensign v. Briggs.

Partnership—Lands owned by—Attachment—Insolvent debtors.

Real estate, purchased with the partnership funds, and used for partnership purposes, and conveyed to all the partners, vests, at law, in the partners, as tenants in common; and a failure to dissolve an attachment of such estate, made in an action on a note given by the two partners, one as principal and the other as surety, after the dissolution of the partnership, will not render the partnership liable to proceedings in insolvency.

U. States District Court.

Decisions in Admiralty.

Opinion by Judge Betts.

JAMES H. ELMORE v. THE STEAMBOAT ALIDA.

By the Court.—The action is by the assignee of a provision dealer or ship chandler, for a bill of supplies furnished the steamer. The purchases were made Sept. 3, 4, 8, 11, 18, 14, 17 and 19. No term of credit was stipulated, but the usual practice between the parties was to pay these bills monthly.

2. The boat was a domestic passenger vessel, running up and down the Hudson river daily, except Sunday, between New York and Kingston.

3. The libellant, on the 22d of September, filed his specification of lien, charging purchases by the boat at the dates above mentioned, and setting forth the prices and amounts, and on the 29th filed his libel in this cause to recover the entire amount.

4. On the hearing he claims the right to recover the whole sum of the bill of the items, and the claimants deny his lien at most for any purchases anterior to the 12th of September.

5. The libellant objects to the admissibility of the latter point of defense because not formally pleaded.

Held, 1. The existing lien laws (acts of March 29, 1855, laws 78 sess., ch. 10, p. 174,) is a re-enactment, with amendments, of the act of 1850, 1 R. S. 505, sects. 1 and 2

2. The lien enacted by the act is fully determined and gone in all cases after sixty days after the vessel subject to it returns to the port where the debt was contracted; but, in reality, that prospective or permissive continuance of the lien is in this case fruitless, and never comes into action, because the debt being subsisting when the boat left port, is strictly declared by the statute to cease immediately thereupon, unless lien specifications are filed within ten days after such departure.

3. The filing of the lien specifications is thus made the operative and only means of giving life to the lien; previous to that act of the creditor the privilege is merely inchoate and permissive.

The chronological order of the provisions is inverted in language, but the condition of filing the specifications is made the first affirmative act of the creditor, and the one vital to the prosecution of the lien.

4. The construction and effect of the amended Act in respect to the lien (6 Hill, 496,) is the same as that of the original Act. All credits which have run more than ten days subsequent to the return of the vessel to the port where the debt was contracted are excluded from a privilege against the vessel when the lien specification is not filed within that period. This provision is the exact equivalent in effect of the original statute.

5. Accordingly, each credit for supplies is separately the debt contracted, and to that the limitation of time is applied by this Court and the State Courts. (3 Const., p. 488, Veltman v. Thomson, 6 Hill, 494.)

6. A mortgagee in possession is a competent party to intervene and contest the validity of the libellant's lien.

7. The restriction of the sixty days to the duration of the lien has no relation to this case. The action was brought within thirty days after first credit. But no recovery can be had thereon for any charges which had stood over ten days.

It is agreed between the parties that this order will embrace the sum of $161.29, and it is therefore directed that a decree be entered for that sum with costs.

John E. Brown v. The Steamboat Alida, &c.

By the Court. This was another case wherein a lien was claimed under the local law against the same boat. The distinction from the other cases consists in this. Parts of the labor and materials, the subject of demand, were furnished the vessel at different ports, and the libel seeks to enforce them in a single suit, upon the supposition that the place of the bargain between the parties was within this port. This particular is not made certain upon the evidence in respect to all that was done and furnished to the vessel.

But in my opinion, the statute does not admit of that interpretation. Reading together the numbers of the first and second sections of the statute belonging to this subject, the provision is, whenever a debt, amounting to fifty dollars or upward, shall be contracted,

&c., the debt shall be a lien upon such vessel, &c., and in all cases such lien shall cease immediately after the vessel shall have left such port, unless, &c.

This necessarily implies that the debt contracted must be created at the port where the vessel lies, and also that the debt is not contracted by mere stipulation between the parties, but by performing or applying to the benefit of the vessel those things which give existence to a lien. No lien arises out of an agreement alone, although that may be binding personally upon the parties, but only on a debt contracted on account of work, materials, stores or wharfage furnished the vessel. These are conditions precedent to a lien, and they come into existence alone at the port where the constituents of debt have been used or enjoyed by the vessel.

The lien specification is filed only in New York, and its benefits cannot be extended beyond the territorial limits of that county.

All services or furnishings to the vessel out of port are outside the privileges acquired for the New York debt, and can be attached to the vessel in no other way than according to specific directions of the statute.

The case must accordingly go before a Commissioner to ascertain if a debt of $50 was due in New York, and subject to the lien. If less than that amount is found to have been under lien when the lien was filed, the libel must be dismissed.

The libellant will be entitled to a decree for all sums exceeding that amount. The vessel is discharged from the action in relation to all debts contracted as defined out of the county of New York, and also from all not secured by the lien specification. Order accordingly.

Louis C. Spencer v. The Steamboat Alida.

By the Court. The leading facts to support the action correspond with those in the preceding case of "Elmore v. The Alida." The suit was commenced Oct. 17, on a bill for milk, supplied at daily trips during the month of September, amounting to $38 80; and for potatoes, supplied also daily from Sept. 22 to Oct. 10, amounting to $24 83.

The lien particulars were filed Oct. 17, the debt being contracted for each article of supply on the day of its delivery to the boat; the right of action, therefore, is only preserved by filing a lien specification within ten days thereafter. Two particulars of the debt contracted anterior to the 6th of October can be recovered against the vessel. The lien, therefore, ceased its action by the departure of the boat from this port, if the creditor did not avail himself of the statutory privilege to resuscitate it by filing a lien specification within ten days after that event.

A reference must be had to a Commissioner to ascertain the amount recoverable on these principles.

Justus E. Earle v. the steamboat Alida.—Per Curiam.

The question raised in this case on the merits is whether the lessee of a wharf for a fixed period of time has a lien upon the vessel for wharfage.

Held—That the act embraces wharfage under whatever title it is used, unless the vessel is placed there in wrong of the owner. She is in paron or pledge to the owner of the wharf for the value of her accommodation, and the statute preserves the effect of the pledge for ten days after her removal.

The charge can only be allowed for the time the vessel actually occupies the wharf, and must be pursued in the same manner as if the case was without bargain as to terms and duration.

Accordingly, a recovery cannot be had for the entire contract price, when the vessel was not at the dock the whole period; the lien being given by the statute can be availed of only pursuant to the appointment of the statute, although the rate of wharfage may be matter of agreement between the parties. The vessel being a domestic one, can be subject to no lien not given by the local law.

This case does not stand on the footing of a petition for payment of wharfage out of proceeds in court. It is an original proceeding in rem against the vessel itself, and must be governed by the rules applicable to suits of that character.

It is not necessary in order to avoid its effect, that the claimant should plead in bar of the lien. It belongs to the libellant to prove in the first instance that his case makes the privilege of the statute.

Ordered, a reference to a Commissioner to ascertain and report the amount of lien on these principles.

The Bank of Cash Credits.

Application will be made to the Legislature of Pennsylvania, for the Charter of a Bank issue with general banking privileges, with a capital of ONE MILLION OF DOLLARS. Said Bank to be located in the City of Philadelphia, to be called the "Robert Morris Bank," and to be conducted upon the system of cash credits only, as is herewith indicated.
A cash credit is a credit given to an individual by a Banking Company, for a limited sum, seldom under $500, or $1000, upon his own security and that of two or three individuals, approved by the Bank, who become sureties for its payment. The individual who has obtained such a credit, is enabled to draw the whole sum, or any part of it, when he pleases; replacing it, or portions of it, according as he finds it convenient; interest being charged upon such part only as he draws out.

"If a man borrows $1000, from a private hand, and even then it is not always to be found when required, he pays interest for it, whether he uses it or not. His bank credit costs him nothing, except during the moment it is of service to him, and this circumstance is of equal advantage as if he had borrowed money at a much lower rate of interest."

Cash credits are not, however, intended to be a dead load; the main objects of the Banks in granting them is to get their notes circulated, and they do not grant them except to persons in business, or to those who are frequently drawing out and paying in money.

Any person who applies to a bank for a cash credit, is called upon to produce sureties, and, after a full inquiry into the character of the applicant, the nature of his business, and the sufficiency of his securities, he is allowed to open a credit, and to draw upon the Bank for the whole of its amount, or for such part as his daily transaction may require. To the credit of the account, he pays in such sums as he may not have occasion to use, and interest is charged or credited upon the balance, as the case may be. From the facility which these cash credits give to all the small transactions of the country, and from the opportunities which they afford to persons who begin business with little or no capital but their character, to employ profitably the minutest products of their industry, it cannot be doubted that the most important advantages are derived in the whole community.

Such privileges and immunities as the "Metropolitan Bank of New York" exercises, will be applied for.

They have given the most universal satisfaction, and those having them in use were perfectly delighted with the abundance of warm, pleasant air, and abundant ventilation afforded thereby, while so many were suffering from cold, and troubled with the deficiencies of their heating apparatus.

We take great pleasure, therefore, in recommending them to the notice of the public, and would call their attention particularly to an examination of the greatly increased amount of effective radiating surface, their perfect solidity and durability, the improved manner of making the joints, entirely preventing any escape of gases, and the manner of distributing the fire, so as to cause it to impinge directly against the large amount of surface, without the objectionable and unnatural method of forcing the current downwards.

We have also a full assortment of HAYES' PATENT TUBULAR OVEN RANGES, now so universally used, and favorably known. Also, HAYES' PATENT VENTILLATORS, &c., &c., all of which will be put up in the very best manner, and by the most skillful workmen, constantly engaged for that purpose, by

Second Period, must be at issue on or before Dec. 17th, 1856.

Third Period, must be at issue on or before Jan. 7th, 1857.

RULE LXVII. No cause shall be placed on the Trial List until after issue joined, nor without the written order of one of the parties or his counsel. Nor shall any cause be placed on the Trial List for any period, unless the same shall be at issue before the issuing of the venire for such period. It shall be the duty of the Prothonotary, at least thirty days before the commencement of any period appropriated to the trial of all causes by jury to make out a complete list of all causes entitled to be placed on the Trial List for such period; and none of the causes on such list shall be continued to another term unless at the joint request of the Counsel, signified by writing filed with the Prothonotary at least three weeks before the commencement of such period.

It is the duty of the Prothonotary at least thirty days before the commencement of any period appropriated to the trial of causes by jury, to make out and deliver to the Sheriff the venire for such period.

RULE OF COURT, June 6, 1848. Ordered, That any party intending to tax costs before the Prothonotary, shall give him and the opposite party twenty-four hours notice of such intention—the time to be fixed for such taxation shall be from one to three o'clock, P. M.

RULE OF COURT, March 7, 1849. Ordered. That hereafter the Prothonotary shall issue no capias ad respondendum endorsed with bail in more than $500, without a special allocatur from one of the Judges.

RULE OF COURT, December 27, 1851. Ordered. That in every case of a bill of Exceptions it shall be the duty of the party presenting the Bill, within twenty days thereafter, to have the same settled by the Judge before whom the case was tried on forty-eight hours' notice, with a copy of the bill served on the opposite party, otherwise the Judge shall not be required to seal the same. Provided, That the rule now in force, requiring the bill to be presented within ten days be not affected by the adoption of this rule.

ORDERED:—May 28, 1853. That the Rules of this Court, as printed by A. Walker, in his book of Court Rules, the present year, be and they are hereby adopted and published as the Rules of this Court, from and after the first Monday of June next: and all other Rules heretofore made, are hereby repealed from that time.

ORDERED:—July 28, 1855. That no cases shall be placed on the Trial List for September Term, 1855, unless especially ordered on, by entry in the Trial Order Book, to be kept by the Prothonotary, and that, until otherwise directed by the Court, all cases once ordered on the Trial List, shall be continued thereon, from term to term, until disposed of, or withdrawn.

INGRAHAM v. MEADE, et al.

Reform of Deeds—Illusory Appointments—Grandchildren treated as Children—Fraud on Power of Appointment.

Mr. Richard Meade had, in the year 1812, in a somewhat loose way, transferred certain stocks, about $50,000, to the late Edward Tilghman, Esquire, and others, in trust; with an intent apparently to provide a fund for his wife's separate use, and one with which she might maintain and educate their children, then all minors. No regular declaration of trust was made by any body, nor was the same described in the investments thereof, otherwise than as for Mrs. Margaret Meade and her children, and without specifying the nature and extent of Mrs. Meade's interest, or her control or authority, in regard to the same. Mr. Meade having been a consul of the United States in Spain, was for some years after, much away from the country, and the trust, though kept sufficiently alive at all times, appears to have been treated at none with much formality of deference. However, in 1821, being then at home again, Mr. and Mrs. Meade with the trustees made a formal deed, in which, reciting the looseness of the trust and some other facts of the case, in order that the disposition of neither principal nor interest might be subjected to difficulty, did "mutually agree and declare" that one of the trusts upon which the property should be held was that the trustees should pay and distribute the principal among "such of" Mrs. Margaret Meade's "children" as that lady by her last will should appoint; and "for want of such appointment, then in trust for the use of such of the said children as shall be living at the death of the said Margaret, and the issue of such of the said children as may then be dead, share and share alike; the said issue if more than one to take only the share which their parent would have taken if living."

Mrs. Meade died leaving seven children and certain grand children, the issue of two deceased children, and a daughter in law, Elizabeth, the widow of a deceased son, Robert, spoken of hereafter as Mrs. Robert Meade; and having by her will appointed to one child $500; to three others $4000; to three others (including one named Salvadora) $9,500; and as regards her grandchildren, $3000 to one, the issue of one child deceased, and $5000 to others, the issue of another child deceased. But in regard to these last appointments, st. those among grandchildren, reciting "lest I may not have the power to make the foregoing appointments and direction," she says, "in case it should be determined that the said appointment and direction should be invalid," "then I appoint the last mentioned sums" to A. B. &c., naming certain of her children, "their heirs, executors, administrators and assigns;" no trust or purpose being named by Mrs. Meade in regard to it.

A bill in Equity against the other appointees and the executors was now filed by the daughter to whom but $500 was appointed, to set aside all these appointments as illusory or fraudulent and void.

It is necessary to mention that during Mrs. Meade's lifetime she had, under a particular exigency of her daughter Salvadora, and with a view of securing to the daughter a house which this daughter had herself built but not fully paid for, advanced to her about $3,500 in a purchase of that house. This sum, this daughter by an agreement or bond subsequently made, bound herself to repay after her mother's death to Elizabeth, already mentioned as the widow of one of Mrs. Meade's sons, Robert, who, as above stated, had died in his mother's life time, leaving this widow, but leaving no children. The history of this transaction was thus given by the daughter, one of the defendants, in response to the bill, her account being corroborated generally by testimony from the professional gentleman, Mr. Gerhard, whom she mentions in it. "In about a year after her mother's purchase of the house (st. about June, 1849,) the defendant ascertained in conversation with her, that this matter had prevented her from carrying into effect an object which she had much at heart, st. the raising of a fund to be left as a testimonial of her affection for the widow of her son Robert, who had been a devoted daughter to her, but for whom she had not the legal power to provide out of her trust estate by testamentary appointment. The defendant immediately, of her own voluntary motion and without any prompting or suggestion from her mother, declared that she would pay to Mrs. Robert Meade, the sum which had been advanced in the purchase of her house; and she afterwards wrote to her mother to the same effect, that she would pay to Mrs. Robert Meade out of whatever money might be coming to her at her mother's death. Nothing was said in this conversation about any sum which her mother was to leave her, nor was there, then or at any other time, any understanding or agreement whatsoever, that the voluntary promise of the defendant to pay Mrs. Robert Meade what her mother had advanced out of her income, should form any consideration or condition for her mother's bequest, or testamentary appointment in her favor. The defendant heard nothing more on the subject until she was summoned to see her mother during her last illness, about the 27th December, 1851. She has been informed, and believes, that some months before her last illness, her mother had expressed to her counsel, Mr. Gerhard, her intention to bequeath the amount, which she had as above mentioned advanced out of her income for the purchase of the defendant's house, to Mrs. Robt. Meade, so that the same would be payable to her immediately on the testatrix's death, and that she was led to change this intended disposition by the suggestion of Mr. Gerhard, that it might prove highly oppressive to the defendant, if she were laid under an obligation to pay the money immediately on her mother's death. On or about the 28th of December, 1851, the defendant and Mr. Gerhard met at her mother's residence; her mother briefly said to her that Mr. Gerhard had something for her to do, and that she wished her to do it. Mr. Gerhard showed her a paper, which had been prepared by him, in which she agreed to pay to Mrs. Robert Meade, out of the first money she should receive after the death of her mother, out of the Trust Estate, a sum which was left in blank. The defendant sat down and made a calculation of what her mother had advanced for her. The amount thus ascertained, $3,500, was inserted in the blank, and the paper was signed by her. She had no further conversation with her mother on the subject, except in regard to the person with whom the paper should be deposited, which, upon Mr. Gerhard's suggestion, and with her mother's assent, was deposited with a common friend, Mr. Stewardson."

In regard to the appointment over to the children of the sums originally left to grandchildren, the bill charged that they were made under an express or implied agreement that the legatees should apply them to the purpose of the original appointment, and that the legatees were bound in conscience if they received them so to apply them: and it interrogated the legatees, who were defendants in the bill, whether any and what conversations, and what agreement or understanding, expressed or tacit, they had had with Mrs. Meade; and whether they themselves "do intend now or hereafter to hold or apply the said sums which may be received by them under the said alternative appointments for the use of either of the parties to whom by the said will the appointments were originally made;" and whether such holding or application is in pursuance of any verbal or written, tacit or expressed contract, agreement or understanding between them and Mrs. Meade, or because of any request of hers, or intimation from her.

The answer denied very fully any such agreement or understanding, conversation, request and intimation; but declined to answer (as not bound to do so,) whether sine Mrs. Meade's death the legatees ever had made any agreement respecting the application of any sums which may be received by them under the alternative appointments; or to state what their intentions were on that subject; alleging that whatever disposition they might make of the same would not be in pursuance of any verbal or written, expressed or tacit understanding with Mrs. Meade, or because of any request of hers, or intimation from her to them.

MR. MEREDITH and MR. McMURTRIE contended that here was a clear trust created in 1812 for the children of Mrs. Meade; generally; i. e. for all the children, and for all alike. Its want of formality was wholly unimportant. A trust "for the children of Mrs. Meade being a clear expression, and there being no other expression, it is a controlling one also. When the trust was created, in 1812, no reason existed for a distinction, none was meant to be made, and none was made. Being for all the children alike, the wife, husband and trustees had no right, without the children's assent, to change it. If the deed of 1821 meant to change it, the terms "such of" and "in such proportions" must be treated as illegally put in, and the deed of 1821 must be read by the light of the settlement of 1812.

II. The head of Illusory Appointments was a well known one in England at the time of our Revolution. It has never been since repudiated here. It may be often difficult in application; but so are many heads of the law—salvage, commissions and others. But there are certain principles to be inferred from cases; and these will show that such an appointment as this is illusory—$500 to one child, and $10,000, nearly, to another.

III. A power to appoint to children excludes a power to appoint to grandchildren. The power of appointment in this case does not arise on a loose or informal instrument. On the contrary, it arises on an instrument of special form and solemnity; one which was made to originate, give and perpetuate form. Its words therefore are to control; and those words are clear. If the appointment is made by will, the right to appoint is among children alone. If the disposition is effected by intestacy, it is to children and grandchildren. But to take the provisions made in case of intestacy, and apply them to a wholly different, distinguished and preceding case—the case of appointment by will—is to confound a testament and intestacy, and to destroy the whole meaning of legal provisions. At any rate, carry the mode of interpretation through, and if the term grandchildren in the last clause—the clause of intestacy—is to control the word children in the former one—the clause providing for appointment by will—then let the last clause control the former altogether: and make an equal division among all parties. To that the complainant will accede.

Then with regard to the alternative appointment. Here, in the first place, is a litigious clause. If it "shall be determined that the said appointment and direction is invalid." It can never be "determined" without a suit. The clause invites directly to litigation. But the plan is a contrivance, a fraud on the power. Who doubts that the grandchildren will receive the amount if the legatees receive it? Indeed, the defendants decline, in terms, to give any account of present agreements or intentions. Of course, among persons of intelligence, having as they deserve to have, confidence in each other, there were no contracts or conversations where contracts or conversations would be fatal. But that there is an intention, in fact, an obligation in conscience, to carry it out, and that the alternative bequest was made with the expectation and purpose that it should be carried out fully, faithfully, exactly, who denies or doubts? And this is the very sort of thing from which equity took its rise—which it particularly lays its hand on as contemptuous and offensive, in this instance, to herself.

After a very good argument on principle and authorities, by Mr. P. M. McCALL, on the other side, the opinion of the Court was given by

Orier, J.

I. Is this appointment of $500 illusory and therefore void?

The theory on which the English Chancellors have acted in setting aside certain appointments as "illusory," is apparently founded in equity and justice. But like many other theories which are very plausible in the abstract, experience has shown this one to be difficult in application. The term illusory is vague and indefinite, depending on uncertain discretion or opinion of the person using it. Where a power is given by the donor to another to distribute, it is for the purpose of inequality, which future and unknown events may make just and judicious. The donor might do with his own as he pleased—give a penny to one, and ten thousand pounds to another. He has a right to confide this power to another by substitution. The objects of his bounty are now all equally worthy (infants perhaps); if the division were made now, there is no reason for inequality. But before the time arrives for distribution, there may be a thousand reasons why the distribution should be unequal. When a Chancellor undertakes to decide that any degree of inequality is a fraudulent exercise of the power, he is assuming to himself a knowledge of the secret wish and intention of the donor not expressed in the deed, and undertaking to exercise a discretionary power not confided to him, but to another. It would perhaps have been better originally to have adopted the adage "set pro ratione voluntas" in such cases, than to have assumed this indefinite discretionary and therefore dangerous power over men's property. However much the Chancellor may laud his great principle, that equality is equity, how does he know that even extreme inequality was not the very purpose and object of the power? I certainly concur with the scruples expressed on this subject in the cases of Kemp v. Kemp, 5 Vesey, 849; Butcher v. Butcher, 9 id. 393; and Bax v. Whitbread, 16 id. 16.

We know of no cases showing whether this doctrine, so much disliked by later authorities and finally abolished by act of Parliament in England, has ever been adopted by the Courts of Pennsylvania. We are, therefore, pleased to be relieved from the responsibility of deciding the question whether the appointment of $500 to one of a class of nine or ten in the distribution of $50,000 be illusory or not.

The power in this case is not only to distribute among, but to select from, the class of persons pointed out. It is what is called an exclusive power. The right to select necessarily implies the power to exclude. No distributee can say his share is illusory, when the distributor was not bound to give him any thing. We cannot strike out the words "such of," out of this deed; and unless we do so, the rules of grammar and all legal precedent must be disregarded, before we pronounce this not to be an exclusive power. The cases on the subject are too numerous to be specially noticed, but may be found collected in Mr. Sugden's work on Powers, c. 7, § 5.

II. Are the appointments to the grandchildren void for defect of power?

As the alternative appointments are made to "children" in case those to the grandchildren should fail for want of power, there can be no failure for defect of power or want of appointment. Whether the appointment to the grandchildren be good is, therefore, a question in which the complainants in this bill have no concern. It is a point, nevertheless, on which the Court are compelled to give an opinion, and the only one in which we have found any difficulty in arriving at a satisfactory conclusion.

It is undoubtedly a general rule in the construction both of wills and deeds of settlement that while the word "issue" will be construed to include grandchildren, the word "child" or "children" will not receive such construction. Hence it has been laid down as an established rule, that a power of appointment to children, will not authorize an appointment to grandchildren. Neither will a legacy or devise to "children," be construed to include grandchildren. And when there is nothing else in the deed or will to show that the testator or donor did not use these words in a different sense, this rule of construction should not be departed from. But every instrument must be construed from its whole contents taken together, in order to ascertain the true meaning and intention of the party or parties to it. No one isolated word or term can be seized upon and made to also utterly control the rest of the instrument. The testator or donor may have used particular words either in a wider or narrower sense than that given by philologists or judges. The word "issue" may be found from other clauses to have been used to designate a child or children only, and not to include grandchildren. Lord Alvanley has said, Reeves v. Bryce, 4 Vesey 698, that "children" may mean "grandchildren" where there can be no other construction, "but not otherwise." This dictum, like many other "acute dicta," must itself be construed with some latitude, as if taken literally it would deny the right of the Court on any circumstances to give such construction. But I presume that Lord Alvanley meant no more than that this term could receive no other construction, unless from the external circumstances of the testator the devise, gift or power would fail altogether, as in Gale v. Bennet, Ambler 681, where it was decreed that grandchildren might claim a devise "to children" where there were no children. Or where a more comprehensive meaning must necessarily be given to the word to render it consistent with other clauses of the instrument clearly expressed. Thus in Deveaux v. Barnwell, 1 De Saussure, 499, grandchildren were decreed to take under the words "my surviving children," under the pressure of circumstances which showed that such must have been the intention of the testator; the Court saying with Lord Maclesfield, "if there is no precedent it is time to make one." But such a construction should not be made unless a strong case of intention, or necessary implication requires it.

The deed before us shows a clear and indisputable intention to include grandchildren among the beneficiaries of the trust: it makes the issue of a deceased child the representative of its parent, and as much the object of the bounty of the donor as any living child. The clause giving the mother the power to select and distribute unequally among the beneficiaries, and which uses the word "children" only, is immediately followed by that defining the class of beneficiaries as "such of the said children as shall be living at the death of said Margaret and the issue of said children as may be dead share and share alike which their parent would have taken if living." Here the donor himself describes the persons meant in the first clause, giving a power of selection and distribution. They are described as the "children," but not as the children surviving at the death of the mother; but all the children of the donor and his wife, the dead to be represented by their issue or offspring if they left any. To construe this power so as to restrict the objects of it to a part of the beneficiaries, would be inconsistent with the clear intention that the issue of deceased children should stand in "loco parentis." When the deed of settlement was executed, no reason was known why any should be excluded; the grandchildren were equally the objects of the donor's bounty as their parents would have been if alive. If so, the power to select or distribute according to future changes among the objects of their affection in order to its just execution, must be construed to include all the recipients of their bounty. Suppose all the children except one or two died before the mother, leaving issue; the exercise of the right either to distribute or select must be at the expense of nine-tenths of the beneficiaries who would be incapable of receiving any thing by appointment. The power to select or distribute cannot be exercised at all, or only injuriously, unless it be as wide as the bounty.

We do not think it would be carrying out the intention of the donor as clearly expressed in this deed, to construe the word "children" so as not to include those deceased before their mother as represented by their issue. Any other construction which would make the exercise of the power of selection or distribution be a necessary exclusion of part of the beneficiaries contrary to the desire of either father or mother, the donor or the donee of the power, would in our opinion be a declaration that the deed is inconsistent with itself, and grossly absurd.

We are of opinion, therefore, that the appointments to the grandchildren are valid.

III. Is the appointment to Salvadora a fraud and violation of the trust?

It must be admitted that if the bond given by Salvadora to Mr. Robert Meade stood alone, and without explanation, there would be some plausible grounds for this charge.

It is unnecessary to examine the numerous cases on the subject of fraudulent execution of powers, as we do not consider the facts of this case to bring it within the category. The answer in this case is responsive to the bill and instead of being impeached is fully supported by the testimony of Mr. Gerhard. They amply explain the whole transaction, and show there was no act tending, nor intention on the part of the testatrix to commit a fraud on the power entrusted to her, by improperly diverting the trust fund to herself or others for whom it was not intended. The debt due from Salvadora to her mother was transferred to Mrs. Robert Meade, while the time of payment was extended, till Salvadora should be in funds from the receipt of her share or portion of her expectancy in the trust. The whole transaction was just and honorable, and wronged no one.

DECREE: That by the deed, &c., Mrs. Meade had an exclusive power of appointment, &c., which gave her a right to select among the objects of the power; that the appointment of $3500 to Salvadora was not made in fraud of the power; that the grandchildren were proper objects of the power; and that the several appointments including the one of $500 to the complainant were and are valid appointments under the power.

Law School of the University at Cambridge, Mass.

The instructors in this school are Hon. JOS. PARKER, LL. D., Royal Professor. Hon. THEOPHILUS PARSONS, LL. D., Dane Professor. Hon. EMERY WASHBURN, LL. D., University Professor. The course of instruction embraces the various branches of the Common Law, and of Equity, Admiralty, Commercial, International and Constitutional Law, and the Jurisprudence of the United States. The Law Library consists of about 14,000 volumes, and as new works appear they are added and every effort is made to render it complete.

Instruction is given by oral lectures and expositions, (and by recitations and examinations, in connection with them,) of which there are ten every week. Two Moot Courts are also holden in each week, at each of which a cause, previously given out, is argued by four students, and an opinion delivered by the presiding instructor. Rooms and other facilities are also provided for the Club courts; and an Assembly is held weekly for practice in debate, and acquiring a knowledge of Parliamentary law and proceedings.

Students may enter the school in any stage of their professional studies or mercantile pursuits, and at the commencement of either term, or in the middle, or other part of a term. They are at liberty to select what studies they will pursue according to their view of their own wants and attainments.

The Academic year, which commences on Thursday, six weeks after the third Wednesday in July, is divided into two terms, of twenty weeks each, with a vacation of six weeks at the end of each term.

During the winter vacation, the Library is opened, warmed and lighted, for the use of the members of the school. Applications for admission, or for Catalogues, or any further information, may be made to either of the Professors at Cambridge. June 6-ly.

No. 48.

A NEW FEATURE.

A portion of our columns under an appropriate heading, will in future be devoted to the publication of notes of all the Decisions of the Courts of this country as well as Europe, in cases involving the liabilities and rights of Banks, Insurance and Railroad Companies, and other Corporations and their Stockholders, and important heads of Commercial Law, as Partnership, Agency, Carriers, Insurance, &c., &c.

The frequent issue of our publication will enable us to keep our subscribers fully posted as to Legislative and Judicial action on these subjects, by the publication of all Laws and Decisions, at the earliest moment after their promulgation. The obviously great advantage which this recueil in this form will afford the officers and stockholders in all these corporations, as well as the business community throughout the Union, will, we hope, induce an extensive addition to our subscription list among them.

It will also furnish the professors of the law in other States, additional reasons for availing themselves of the great advantages offered to them by this publication, which experience alone can enable them fully to appreciate.

USURY.

[Supreme Court of Pennsylvania.]

Craig v. Pleiss.

Certificate from the Nisi Prius.

This was an action of debt qui tam, by John P. Craig, against Jacob F. Pleiss, for taking more than six per centum per annum, on a loan or advance of money. On the trial the jury found a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $600, subject to the opinion of the Court on the following point reserved:

Henry B. Craig was indebted to the defendant in $600, on a note due 11th and 14th of October, 1853. On one of those days or one of the intermediate days, he asked the defendant for further time or for a loan of $600 to pay the note with. This was granted by the defendant, but nothing was then said about the length of time for which Craig was to have the $600, nor about the interest or bonus to be paid for it. It was paid on the 17th of the same month, and when paid, the defendant demanded $25 for the forbearance, which the said Henry Craig paid.

If this fact be sufficient to bring the case within the usury law, judgment on verdict, but judgment non obstante veredicto if the opinion of the Court should be otherwise.

On the 14th April, 1855, the Court gave judgment on the point reserved in favor of the defendant non obstante veredicto.

Whereupon the plaintiff took this certificate of error.

The opinion of the Court was delivered by

WOODWARD, J.—It would be difficult to imagine a transaction more completely within the letter of our statute against usury than that which is described in the reserved point. Whether it was a new loan of $600 which Craig obtained of the defendant, or further forbearance on a former loan of that amount, $25 were demanded, paid, and taken for it, and as the time of the loan or forbearance was not more than six days, this was taking for the loan or use of the money a prohibited rate of compensation. According to the reserved point it was demanded and paid for the forbearance, no matter whether of a present or former loan, and that is exactly what the statute forbids.

Yet the learned judge held it not to be within the statute, and the ground assumed now by counsel in support of his opinion may be stated thus: When the contract of forbearance was made there was no stipulation as to the rate of compensation, and hence it was not a corrupt contract, and the taking more than six per cent. on that contract was not usury. In other words, a corrupt contract is indispensable to the offence of usury.

This idea of a corrupt contract, that is of a contract which expressly stipulates for more than six per cent., is derived from the English statutes which were never in force here. The statute of 37 Henry 8, cap. 9, which fixed the rate of interest in England at ten per cent.; the statute of 21 Jac. 1, cap. 17, which reduced it to eight per cent., and the statute of 12 Car. 2, cap. 13, which reduced it to six per cent., and the statute of 12 Anne, cap. 16, which reduced it to five per cent., all use the expression corrupt bargain, loan, or exchange, in defining the offence, and the adjudications under these statutes are often quoted here without advertent to the fact that our statute contains no such expression. "No person shall directly or indirectly, for any bonds or contracts to be made after the publication of this act, take for the loan or use of money, or any other commodities, above the value of six pounds for the forbearance of one hundred pounds on the value thereof, for one year, and so proportionably for a greater or lesser sum."

And then comes the definition of the offence—"if any person or persons whatsoever do or shall receive or take more than six pounds per cent. per annum upon any such bond or contract as aforesaid, upon conviction thereof," &c.

There is not a word here about corrupt bargains or contracts. "Any bonds or contracts" may be the subject of usurious payments. The offence consists not in bargaining for more than six per cent., but in taking it on any bond or contract. With us, usurious contracts are not void, but valid for the principal and legal interest, which could not be if they were the matter prohibited by the statute. Courts of justice would not lend themselves to enforce, in whole or in part, contracts made in violation of a plain statute.

The imagined necessity then of a corrupt bargain to complete the offence of usury, favoured as it no doubt has been by loose expressions of judges, is wholly without foundation in our statute.

Still, however, if the usury be received on the footing of a bond or contract, if it be a mere gratuity, or be taken by force or duress of the person, it would not be the statutory offence. The reserved point tells us expressly that "the defendant demanded $25 for the forbearance, which the said Henry Craig paid."

Now, forbearance stipulated for and granted, is a contract, and on that this usury was paid.

But if this be doubted, there can be no question that forbearance is a valuable consideration, and a demand of money on account of it, assented to by him to whom the forbearance is granted, makes a contract perfect in all its parts; and be it that the money was paid on this contract, it is of no consequence that the assent was subsequent to the forbearance and simultaneous with the payment. Subsequent assent was equivalent to a prior promise—and a promise to pay $25 for six days' forbearance of $600, would have been not only a contract, but a corrupt one within the meaning of the English statutes. That the plaintiff did not assent to the defendant's demand is proved by the fact that he paid.

That what he paid was not a gratuity is proved by the fact that it was paid on demand; and that it was not obtained by force or duress, is proved by the fact that there was only a demand.

On all points, therefore, and in every light in which we can view the transaction, it was clearly within both the letter and the spirit of the statute, and, judging the case by the reserved point, we think the plaintiff should have had the judgment.

But inasmuch as counsel on neither side acquiesced in the terms of the reserved point, and on the part of the defendant it is said not to embrace all the material facts, we will, instead of entering judgment here, remit the record for a new trial.

The judgment is reversed and a venire de novo awarded.—26 P. S. Rep., 271.

CARRIERS.

Goods in Transit—Attachment.

Bingham v. Lamping.

Error to the District Court of Alleghany county.

On the 25th day of May, 1852, William Lamping issued a writ of foreign attachment against John Hance, with notice to William Bingham as garnishee, and which was served on him by copy on the same day.

On the 5th of June, 1852, Wm. Bingham & Co. received at Pittsburgh, from steamers "Malta" and "Empress," eleven hogsheads of tobacco, marked "Hance & Green," to be forwarded by Bingham's Line, to W. Starr & Sons, at Baltimore. Bingham & Co. gave a receipt as follows:—

"Received of steamer Malta, the following packages, marked as per margin, which we promise to deliver to W. Starr & Sons, Baltimore, &c.

"Hance & Green. 11 Hhds. Tobacco."

Judgment was obtained in the attachment suit against Hance, on the 28th January, 1853, and a scire facias issued against Bingham, the garnishee, to which he pleaded nulla bona. Interrogatories were filed, to which the garnishee answered that he had not at the time of the service of the attachment upon him or since, any property of the defendant Hance in his possession, and denied all knowledge of Hance's interest in the eleven hogsheads of tobacco, shipped to Baltimore. Hance resided in Belmont county, Ohio, and was a member of the firm of Hance & Green. On the trial the answers of the defendant were read, and it was proved that the tobacco was shipped by Hance & Green to W. Starr & Sons, at Baltimore, to be sold and accounted for to them. The value of Hance's interest in the tobacco, it was admitted, was more than sufficient to pay the amount of the judgment.

The defendant demurred to the evidence. The court below (Hampton, P. J.) entered judgment for the plaintiff.

The defendant, Bingham, prosecuted this writ of error.

The opinion of the court was delivered by

LOWRIE, J. This attachment was served on Bingham, the garnishee, simply by leaving him a copy of it, and without the actual seizure of any goods as the property of the defendant. The utmost effect that can be given to such a service is, to treat it as a notice to the garnishee to retain, in order to answer the purposes of the attachment, any goods of the defendant that may be in or may come into his hands. The duty imposed upon him by this notice was, that he should not allow any goods which he knew, or which the law charged him with the duty of knowing to be the property of the defendant, to pass out of his hands. As he did receive goods of the defendant, and did let them pass out of his hands without knowing that they were defendant's property, the only question left to be answered is, did he receive them under such circumstances as to be chargeable with knowledge.

What evidence had the garnishee, that the defendant, John Hance, owned this tobacco? We do not discover that he had any, except which arises from the fact that nine of the hogsheads were marked Hance & Green. If this be regarded as some indication of the ownership, all the other circumstances point in a different direction. Hance & Green lived in Ohio, and consigned the tobacco to Starr & Sons in Baltimore. The carriers brought them by steamers to Pittsburgh, and there contracted with Bingham to perform the remainder of their duty, he giving them a carrier's receipt therefor ten days after the service of the attachment. Now the law makes a bill of lading evidence that the title of goods in transit is in the consignee, and the carriers must have given one, and Bingham received the tobacco in its transit to Starr & Sons, and under a contract with the first carriers to complete their work. Judging therefore by the ordinary principles of evidence, Bingham could not suppose that the tobacco belonged to John Hance, but rather to Starr & Sons; and he was right in carrying it to them.

Besides this, it would be strange in the extreme that the law should require of a carrier, receiving goods on his contract, to deliver them at a certain place, that he should keep them to answer an attachment previously served on him. If a carrier should knowingly receive goods under such circumstances, it would be an act of such bad faith to his employer that he ought to be made to pay for them, if he delivered them to answer the attachment. If the law required him to hold goods thus received, it is easy to imagine that he might soon receive attachments enough to stop all his business.

These views show that the judgment below ought to have been for the defendant, and save us from considering the other aspect of the case.

Judgment reversed, and judgment for the defendant below, and record remitted.—26 P. S. Rep., p. 340.

NOTES AND BILLS.

Shriner v. Keller.

Error to the Common Pleas of Union County.

This action was brought to recover of Shriner, the defendant, a promissory note given by John Plank to H. and D. Keller, the plaintiffs below, for $600, dated January 25, 1851, payable one year after date, and endorsed "Charles H. Shriner."

A statement was filed against the defendant as endorser. The case was arbitrated, appealed from and tried, and verdict for plaintiff for $648.20; and the judgment was reversed on error, on the ground that defendant was not liable upon his endorsement, for the reason that he had no notice of the non-payment of the note by the maker. The record was remitted, and on the 26th September, 1853, by leave of the Court below, the plaintiffs' counsel filed an amended statement for 39 Hathaway stoves, sold and delivered by plaintiffs to defendant between the 14th May, 1850, and 8th October, 1850, at $18 per stove, making $702, with interest from six months after delivery, alleging the said note was given for the said stoves. A jury was called on the 16th February, 1854, when the defendant first had notice of the amended statement. A verdict was rendered for plaintiff for $800; $200 more than the face of the note. The Court refused the defendant a new trial, provided the plaintiffs released the excess. This was done accordingly, and defendant sued out this writ of error.

Plank, the maker of the note, was examined as a witness for plaintiffs in the case, to show that Shriner was the original debtor, and Plank only surety.

The errors assigned were, 1. That the Court erred in permitting the amended statement to be filed and passed upon by the jury.

2. In instructing the jury that if Shriner was the original debtor, and Plank only surety, the plaintiff was entitled to recover; and that the giving of the note would not be a bar to a recovery on the original cause of action.

The opinion of the Court was delivered by BLACK, J.—The defendant below was the endorser of a note. But there was no sufficient evidence given to show that payment had been demanded of the maker. There was also a count in the declaration for goods sold and delivered, and on that the plaintiff was permitted to recover.

When the vendee of goods endorses to the vendor in satisfaction of the price, a promissory note made by a third person for a real debt, the vendor must recover on the note or not recover at all. He cannot entitle himself to a judgment against the endorser without showing that the note was regularly dishonoured. The cases cited by the plaintiff in error establish this principle, and they establish nothing more that is pertinent to the case. But where the note was made for the mere accommodation of the purchaser of the goods, in order to get from the seller a credit which might otherwise have been refused, and the goods are sold to the endorser on the joint credit of the maker and endorser, the equitable relation subsisting between them is simply that of surety and principal. In such a case, the endorser, who is the principal, has no right to complain that his surety has not been pursued before he himself was called on for payment. Though the vendor cannot recover on the note, he may join a count for the price of the goods, as he did here; and on such a count, the fact he holds the note and never demanded payment from the maker will be no bar to a judgment in his favour.

The charge of the Court below was in perfect accordance with these rules. The jury found that the maker of the note was but a surety of the endorser, and that the endorser was the purchaser of the goods, of which the price was claimed in one count of the declaration.

One of the errors assigned is that the Court permitted the plaintiff to amend his declaration (a statement) by adding or substituting the count for goods sold, after appeal from the award of the arbitrators, and after a trial and a reversal of the judgment, or rather, that the jury were permitted to pass on it. It was not until a short time before the last trial that any statement other than one which charged the defendant as endorser, was filed. But the filing of it does not seem to have been opposed. There is no trace of an objection to it to be found on the record. There was no motion to strike it off, though there appears to have been an affidavit of the defendant and his counsel, that they did not know of any change in the statement at the time it was made. It does not appear that the Court was requested to say anything on the subject to the jury. After a defendant goes to trial on a declaration amended in this way, pleading to it, and taking his chances of a verdict, it is too late to object. But even if the objection had been made, and the question had been fairly raised in this Court, whether a plaintiff in such circumstances has a right to amend his declaration or statement in the way allowed here, we would have been obliged to decide it in the affirmative.

Judgment affirmed.—1 Casey, 61.

PARTNERSHIP.

Grier & Co. v. Hood.

Appeal from the decree of the Court of Common Pleas of Armstrong county.

The case is fully stated in the opinion of the Court delivered by Knox, J.—McCain & Renshaw were partners in the mercantile business, and as such were indebted to Hood & Co. for goods sold and delivered. On the 19th of December, 1854, McCain executed a bond in the name of McCain & Renshaw, for the amount of the firm debt, to Hood & Co., with power of attorney to confess judgment. Upon this bond, judgment was entered against McCain and Renshaw in the Common Pleas of Armstrong county, on the 20th of December, 1854, and execution issued and delivered to the sheriff on the 22d of the same month. Upon this execution, the sheriff returned that he had levied the personal property of James R. McCain and Richard Renshaw, partners, and sold the same on the 18th, 19th and 20th of January, and 9th and 10th February, 1855. Whole proceeds of sale $1699.59. David A. Grier & Co. obtained judgment in the Common Pleas of Armstrong county against the same defendants on the 3d day of January, and issued an execution to the sheriff on the 5th of January, 1855, which was returned "levied on personal property, as per levy and return on fi. fa. of Hood & Co." After the money was made, and whilst it was in the hands of the officer, to wit, on the 5th of March, 1855, Renshaw applied to the Court to have the judgment of Hood & Co. vacated as to him, upon the ground, as stated in his affidavit, that the single bill was given without his knowledge or consent, by his partner McCain, and for a greater amount than the defendants owed Hood & Co.

There does not appear to have been any evidence given to sustain the last allegation, but the judgment was vacated as to Renshaw, doubtless because he had not signed the single bill, nor authorized his partner to sign his name to it.

An auditor was appointed to distribute the proceeds of the sheriff's sale, who awarded priority to Hood & Co.'s execution, and whose report was confirmed by the Court of Common Pleas. From the decree of confirmation Grier & Co. appeal.

That one partner cannot confess a judgment against another partner, even for a partnership debt, is a conceded legal principle, but it by no means follows that an execution upon a judgment so given, levied upon the personal property of the firm, would be postponed at the instance of a subsequent execution-creditor of the same firm.

In Taylor v. Henderson, 17 Ser. & R. 456, and Harper v. Fox, 7 W. & Ser. 143, it was decided that a sale of personal property belonging to a firm, upon an execution issued on a judgment obtained against one of the members for a firm debt, in a suit against the firm, passed a perfect title to the purchaser; and in the last case it was said by Chief Justice Gibson, that it made no difference whether the judgment was obtained adversely or by confession. To follow these cases, is to affirm this decree; for if Hood & Co.'s execution was effectual against the firm of McCain & Renshaw, so as to sell the interest of both partners in the property levied, their right to the money produced by the sale cannot be questioned by an execution-creditor, whose writ was levied after their lien had attached.

It is the equities between the partners, rather than those of the creditors, which are recognised in the distribution of firm assets, and creditors are not even permitted to make an objection to a judgment, because it may have been given by one partner in the name of the firm for a firm debt. It is only the non-assenting partner that can question the validity of the judgment, and this because, as was said in Harper v. Fox, the judgment, if permitted to stand, would bind his person and separate estate. So far as the judgment affects only the property of the firm, it is good, if obtained in the firm name, against any representative of the firm, and there is no reason why it should not be, for the individual partner has full power and authority to apply the property directly to the payment of the debt. He may even assign the whole of the partnership effects for a bona fide partnership purpose (6 W. & Ser. 301,) and what he can do by his own act, he may cause to be done by operation of law. The principle that one partner cannot bind another partner by deed, has been frequently held not to be applicable, when the deed affected only partnership interests. Thus, in Morse v. Bellas, 7 New Hampshire, 549, it was held that one partner could, by deed, bar his copartner of a joint right, and that he might individually adjust, receive payment of, or release any partnership debts; and, in Wills v. Evans, 20 Wend. 251, an authority, under seal, given by one partner to a third person to discharge a firm debt, was held to be good. So, in Topley v. Butterfield, 1 Met. 515, the rule was held not to apply where one partner conveyed, by deed, property of a firm which he might have conveyed without deed; and in Russit v. Strong, 5 Hill, 163, an assignment, under seal, of a chose in action belonging to a firm by one member, was held to be good. These exceptions, and many others of the same general character, which might be adduced, prove that the rule was not intended to prevent the use by an individual member of the firm property, for partnership purposes, but to prohibit partnership effects from being misapplied, and also to protect the persons and separate estates of the partners from being bound by acts not contemplated by the articles of copartnership.

At the time of the levy and sale of the goods, from which the money in controversy was made, the judgment against both of the partners remained of record, and the fact that Renshaw did not apply to have it set aside against himself until after the sale, is evidence of acquiescence by him in the proceedings against the joint effects; and even now he does not appeal from the application of the money to the judgment of Hood & Co. Whether an objection from him would have been valid, we do not say; but, clearly, if he had permitted the judgment to stand against both, the subsequent execution creditor could not have denied its binding effect, nor will the dismissal of the judgment against Renshaw enure to the benefit of Grier & Co., so as to give them priority over the appellees.

Decree affirmed.—1 Casey, 430.

The Bank of Cash Credits.

Application will be made to the Legislature of Pennsylvania, for the Charter of a Bank Issue with general banking privileges, with a capital of ONE MILLION OF DOLLARS. Said Bank to be located in the City of Philadelphia, to be called the "Robert Morris Bank," and to be conducted upon the system of cash credits only, as is herewith indicated.

A cash credit is a credit given to an individual by a Banking Company, for a limited sum, seldom under $500, or $1000, upon his own security and that of two or three individuals, approved by the Bank, who become sureties for its payment. The individual who has obtained such a credit, is enabled to draw the whole sum, or any part of it, when he pleases; replacing it, or portions of it, according as he finds it convenient; interest being charged upon such part only as he draws out.

"If a man borrows $1000, from a private hand, and even then it is not always to be found when required, he pays interest for it, whether he be using it or not. His bank credit costs him nothing, except during the moment it is of service to him, and this circumstance is of equal advantage as if he had borrowed money at a much lower rate of interest."

Cash credits are not, however, intended to be a dead load; the main objects of the Banks in granting them is to get their notes circulated, and they do not grant them except to persons in business, or to those who are frequently drawing out and paying in money.

Any person who applies to a bank for a cash credit, is called upon to produce sureties, and, after a full inquiry into the character of the applicant, the nature of his business, and the sufficiency of his securities, he is allowed to open a credit, and to draw upon the Bank for the whole of its amount, or for such part as his daily transaction may require. To the credit of the account, he pays in such sums as he may not have occasion to use, and interest is charged or credited upon the balance, as the case may be. From the facility which these cash credits give to all the small transactions of the country, and from the opportunities which they afford to persons who begin business with little or no capital but their character, to employ profitably the minutest products of their industry, it cannot be doubted that the most important advantages are derived in the whole community.

Such privileges and immunities as the "Metropolitan Bank of New York" exercises, will be applied for.

HENRY E. WALLACE, EDITOR.

In this paper, which has become indispensable to every practising lawyer in Pennsylvania, are now published immediately after delivery, the Opinions of the Judges of

THE SUPREME COURT OF PENNSYLVANIA, (greatly in advance of the State Reports.)

THE DISTRICT COURT AND COURT OF COMMON PLEAS of Philadelphia, (only herein reported.)

THE UNITED STATES COURTS for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania.

REVIEWS of Law Books, Legal Dissertations, Intelligence, Miscellany, &c., &c.

THE LAWS Enacted by the Legislature of Pennsylvania at each Session.

Besides which, it contains by authority of law and rules of Court, all the Legal Advertisements required to be published in Philadelphia.

To the variety and amount of contents above enumerated, (which makes this the cheapest publication of the kind extant,) it is proposed in the next volume to add the following

New Features.

1. Early and correct Reports, under an appropriate head, of all Cases decided in the Courts of England, as well as this country, involving the Law of

BANKING, INSURANCE, CARRIERS, and other points of MERCANTILE LAW, and the Rights and Liabilities of INSURANCE AND RAILROAD COMPANIES, MINING AND LAND ASSOCIATIONS, BANKS, and other CORPORATIONS.

2. Full Reports of interesting JURY TRIALS in all parts of the Union.

These new features, combined with the present advantages it affords, cannot fail to make "THE LEGAL INTELLIGENCER" serviceable and interesting to Business Men as well as Lawyers, and of very great utility to Officers and Stockholders of all BANKS, RAILROADS, INSURANCE COMPANIES, and other CORPORATIONS in all parts of the Union.

Subscriptions are solicited. Specimen numbers will be sent to parties desiring to see the paper before subscribing.

A. W. RAND'S SELF-CLEANING FURNACE. Boynton's Patent.

Having put up a large number of these Furnaces, both in public and private buildings, (including 24 put up at the Philadelphia County Prison, in place of the 44 torn out.) and tested them during the cold weather of 1855, and 1856, being the coldest weather we have had for twenty or thirty years. They have given the most universal satisfaction, and those having them in use were perfectly delighted with the abundance of warm, pleasant air, and abundant ventilation afforded thereby, while so many were suffering from cold, and troubled with the deficiencies of their heating apparatus.

We take great pleasure, therefore, in recommending them to the notice of the public, and would call their attention particularly to an examination of the greatly increased amount of effective radiating surface, their perfect solidity and durability, the improved manner of making the joints, entirely preventing any escape of gases, and the manner of distributing the fire, so as to cause it to impinge directly against the large amount of surface, without the objectionable and unnatural method of forcing the current downwards.

We have also a full assortment of HAYES' PATENT TUBULAR OVEN RANGES, now so universally used, and favorably known. Also, HAYES' PATENT VENTILATORS, &c., &c., all of which will be put up in the very best manner, and by the most skillful workmen, constantly engaged for that purpose, by

Of the Courts of King's Bench and Common Pleas, in Personal Actions and Ejectments: To which are added the Law and Practice of Exents; and the Rules of Court, and Modern Decisions in the Exchequer of Pleas. Fourth Edition, with the Notes of Francis J. Troubat and Asa I. Fish, Esquires. 2 large 8vo. volume.

Copy of a letter from Judge Sharewood to the Publisher.

My Dear Sir: I have examined very carefully the Fourth American Edition of Tidd's Practice. The original work has a reputation so high as a full, accurate and authoritative text book, as to render unnecessary any remarks in regard to its merits. Mr. Fish's annotations have added greatly to its value. They exhibit unusual industry, as well as sound judgment, and I think the book may now be justly commended to the American Profession as worthy their extensive patronage.

Very truly yours, GEO. SHARSWOOD. ROBERT H. SMALL, Esq.

Copy of a letter from Judge Kane, to the Publisher.

Dear Sir: The edition of Tidd's Practice which you have been so kind as to send me a copy of, will be a valuable addition to the libraries of the profession. The original work was a standard, more than half a century ago, and has been kept up to the present time, by the learned labors of the successive editors. Among these, no one has been more conspicuous for careful research, and for accuracy of diction and arrangement, than my friend, Mr. Fish. His more extended annotations compare with the beautiful treatises that give value to the "Leading Cases" of Mr. Hare and Mr. Wallace.

I am, very respectfully, Your obed't serv't, J. K. KANE.

Second Period, three weeks from Jan. 19th, 1857, to Feb. 7th, 1857, inclusive.

Third Period, three weeks from Feb. 9th, 1857, to Feb. 28th, 1857, inclusive.

The VENIRE for the First Period, will issue on November 27th, 1856.

The VENIRE for the Second Period, will issue on Dec. 18th, 1856.

The VENIRE for the Third Period, will issue on Jan. 8th, 1857.

Causes entitled to be placed upon the First Period, must be at issue on or before November 26th, 1856.

Second Period, must be at issue on or before Dec. 17th, 1856.

Third Period, must be at issue on or before Jan. 7th, 1857.

RULE LXVII. No cause shall be placed on the Trial List until after issue joined, nor without the written order of one of the parties or his counsel. Nor shall any cause be placed on the Trial List for any period, unless the same shall be at issue before the issuing of the venire for such period. It shall be the duty of the Prothonotary, at least thirty days before the commencement of any period appropriated to the trial of causes by jury to make out a complete list of all causes entitled to be placed on the Trial List for such period; and none of the causes on such list shall be continued to another term unless at the joint request of the Counsel, signified by writing filed with the Prothonotary at least three weeks before the commencement of such period.

It is the duty of the Prothonotary at least thirty days before the commencement of any period appropriated to the trial of causes by Jury, to make out and deliver to the Sheriff the venire for such period.

RULE OF COURT, June 6, 1848. Ordered, That any party intending to tax costs before the Prothonotary, shall give him and the opposite party twenty-four hours notice of such intention—the time to be fixed for such taxation shall be from one to three o'clock, P. M.

RULE OF COURT, March 7, 1849. Ordered. That hereafter the Prothonotary shall issue no capias ad respondendum endorsed with bail in more than $500, without a special allocatur from one of the Judges.

RULE OF COURT, December 27, 1851. Ordered. That in every case of a bill of Exceptions it shall be the duty of the party presenting the Bill, within twenty days thereafter, to have the same settled by the Judge before whom the case was tried on forty-eight hours' notice, with a copy of the bill served on the opposite party, otherwise the Judge shall not be required to seal the same. Provided, That the rule now in force, requiring the bill to be presented within ten days be not affected by the adoption of this rule.

ORDERED:—May 28, 1853. That the Rules of this Court, as printed by A. Walker, in his book of Court Rules, the present year, be and they are hereby adopted and published as the Rules of this Court, from and after the first Monday of June next: and all other Rules heretofore made, are hereby repealed from that time.

ORDERED:—July 28, 1855. That no cases shall be placed on the Trial List for September Term, 1855, unless especially ordered on, by entry on the Trial Order Book, to be kept by the Prothonotary, and that, until otherwise directed by the Court, all cases once ordered on the Trial List, shall be continued thereon, from term to term, until disposed of, or withdrawn.

CITY COUNCILS AND THE SINKING FUND.

We seldom anticipate in our remarks cases which are about to come before our Courts, and only do so when they are of such importance as to interest the public and the profession generally.

"Sec. IV. The said Treasurer shall, from time to time, invest the moneys hereby pledged and appropriated to the sinking fund in the loan of this Corporation, and such investments and their accumulations shall be applied to the payment of the funded debt of this Corporation, when and as any part thereof may mature, and to no other purpose."

On the faith of the City thus solemnly pledged, City Loans rose rapidly in the Stock market and have ever since remained nearly at par. A large part of the fund thus put in trust was the Pennsylvania Railroad Stock held by the City, about five millions, which has become a well assured, eight per cent. paying investment.

Under these circumstances, in common with our fellow citizens, who cherished the good name of Philadelphia as above silver and gold, saw with great satisfaction that the following notice had been served on the authorities:

Philadelphia, Nov. 25th, 1856.

Sir—On behalf of divers Citizens of the City of Philadelphia, Tax Payers, and holders of the City Loan, we are requested to notify the authorities of the City, and also of the Pennsylvania Rail Road and North Pennsylvania Rail Road Companies, that the "Ordinance to authorize the sale of certain Stocks owned by the City of Philadelphia," now before Councils, is illegal, contrary to the charter of the city, and a flagrant violation of the pledged faith of the Corporation;

We are, therefore, compelled on behalf of those we represent, not only to state that the ordinance, if passed, will be resisted by due course of law, but that all those concerned in passing it, or approving it, or carrying it into effect, either by transferring the Shares of the Capital Stock of the Pennsylvania Rail Road Company owned by the City of Philadelphia, or allowing them to be transferred, or by handing over, transferring, receiving, or accepting the first mortgage bonds of the North Pennsylvania Rail Road Company, will be held personally responsible for the breach of trust, and for all losses and damages that will and must be sustained by the City of Philadelphia.

We are, very respectfully, Your obedient servants,

JOHN M. READ, THOS. BALCH,

Attorneys for Robert Patterson, Richard Wistar, James Page, Charles F. Beck, George W. Page, William Duane, Henry Paul Beck, and others.

HUMORS OF FALCONBRIDGE.

T. B. Peterson, Philadelphia.

This collection of the works of that true child of Comus, the late Jonathan F. Kelley, have been published for the benefit of his family. The lovers of Fun, who will all purchase this volume, while they enjoy the racy humour of the writer, will have the satisfaction of knowing that they are contributing to the comfort of the author's family, who are left by his untimely decease in circumstances entitling them to sympathy.

The work is issued by Mr. Peterson in good style, and is happily illustrated.

SUPREME COURT, EASTERN DISTRICT.

BENDER'S APPEAL.

ANN MIFFLIN'S ESTATE.

Construction of Wills.

Opinion by Lewis, C. J.

The words "equally to be divided" when used in a will, mean a division per capita and not per stirpes, whether the devisees be children and grandchildren, brothers or sisters, and nephews and nieces, or strangers in blood to the testator. Kean v. Hoffecker, 2 Harris, 103. But where the will is silent in respect to the manner in which the legatees are to take, if the next of kin of the person described be not related to the testator in equal degree, those most remote can only claim per stirpes. Roper on Leg. 161. Upon questions of this kind the expressions of each will must be attended to, for the distribution must go as directed by the testator. Rop. on Leg. 156. This intention, if lawful, must control every other consideration, and bear down every other rule of construction. The statute of distributions may furnish the means by which we are to ascertain who are to take under the general description of "heirs," "next of kin," or "relations;" yet the wills under which they claim will be the guides as to the proportions into which the fund is to be divided. McNeelege v. Galbraith, 8 S. & R. 43.

In the case before us the one-fourth of the residue is given to "the brothers of my late cousin, Rachel Lewis, of the name of Thomas, and to Doctor Benjamin Howell, share and share alike—that they take and divide this fourth remaining part of my residuary estate." Here is a very clear indication of the proportions in which the legatees are to take. No argument can make it plainer. The subsequent revocation of a prior provision for the brothers of Rachel, in connection with the language of that provision, confirms this intent. The declaration that the legacy in question is in substitution of the one revoked, is in perfect harmony with it. The addition, after naming "the said Thomas" a second time of the words "their heirs, if any of them are deceased," was manifestly not intended to change the proportions previously so plainly designated. The object was merely to substitute the heirs of the deceased brother in the place of their ancestor, if the brother was prevented from taking by reason of his death. This intention is very apparent from the face of the will.

The exception to the auditor's report in the Court below raised no question in regard to the heirs of Richard Thomas, and we do not understand that any such question is raised here.

The Court erred in excluding the heirs of Robert Thomas from participating in the distribution. They are entitled in equal proportions to one-fourth of the sum of $14,580 92, being the share which Robert Thomas himself would have been entitled to if he had been alive at the death of the testator.

This cause came on for hearing and was argued by counsel. On consideration whereof it is ordered and adjudged that so much of the decree of the Orphans' Court of Philadelphia as excludes the heirs of Robert Thomas from a share in the distribution of the fund be reversed. And it is further ordered and adjudged that the sum of $14,580 92, being the one-fourth of the residuary estate of the testator, be distributed as follows:

- To Joseph Thomas, - - - $3645 23
To Jonathan Thomas, - - - 3645 23
To Dr. Benjamin Howell, - - - 3645 23
To Ann W. Sever, wife of Horatio N. Sever, - - - 607 53
To Hannah Tyson, wife of Chalkley Tyson, - - - 607 53
To Rev. Edward H. Thomas, - - - 607 53
To Ruth Ann Bender, wife of Jacob Bender, - - - 607 53
To Sarah Smith, by Guardian, - - - 607 53
To Robert E. Thomas, - - - 607 53

It is further ordered and decreed, that the costs be paid by Joseph Thomas, Jonathan Thomas, and Dr. Benjamin Howell.

Law School of the University at Cambridge, Mass.

The instructors in this school are Hon. JOEL PARKER, LL. D., Royal Professor. Hon. THEOPHILUS PARSONS, LL. D., Dane Professor. Hon. EMERY WASHBURN, LL. D., University Professor. The course of instruction embraces the various branches of the Common Law, and of Equity, Admiralty, Commercial, International and Constitutional Law, and the Jurisprudence of the United States. The Law Library consists of about 14,000 volumes, and as new works appear they are added and every effort is made to render it complete. Instruction is given by oral lectures and expositions, (and by recitations and examinations, in connection with them,) of which there are ten every week. Two Moot Courts are also holden in each week, at each of which a cause, previously given out, is argued by four students, and an opinion delivered by the presiding instructor. Rooms and other facilities are also provided for the Club Courts; and an Assembly is held weekly for practice in debate, and acquiring a knowledge of Parliamentary law and proceedings. Students may enter the school in any stage of their professional studies or mercantile pursuits, and at the commencement of either term, or in the middle, or other part of a term. They are at liberty to select what studies they will pursue according to their view of their own wants and attainments. The Academical year, which commences on Thursday, six weeks after the third Wednesday in July, is divided into two terms, of twenty weeks each, with a vacation of six weeks at the end of each term. During the winter vacation, the Library is opened, warmed and lighted, for the use of the members of the school. Applications for admission, or for Catalogues, or any further information, may be made to either of the Professors at Cambridge. June 6-1y.

PENNSYLVANIA REPORTS.

A New and Cheap Edition.

ALREADY PUBLISHED.

- Dallas' Reports, 4 vols. . . . 1754 to 1806
- Yeates' Reports, 4 vols. . . . 1791 to 1808
- Binney's Reports, 6 vols. . . . 1799 to 1814
- Addison's Reports, 1 vol. . . . 1791 to 1799

These Reports are condensed by T. J. Fox Alden, Esq., into three vols., and are sold at the low price of $15. The catalogue price of the old edition, to which they are greatly superior in type and papers is $69. They contain all that is of any value in the original, and as will be seen are sold at less than one fourth the price. The volumes already published are complete in themselves, having a copious index and table of cases.

To those who cannot afford to purchase the original series of Reports (many volumes of which are out of print) this work will be invaluable, whilst even those who do possess them, will buy it for convenience of reference.

From Hon. J. B. Gibson, Chief Justice.—I have examined the first volume of Mr. Alden's Condensed Reports, and think the work will be a valuable one, especially to the younger members of the bar, who cannot, at first afford to purchase the series of our reports, already between seventy and eighty volumes. The cases are clearly stated, and the points decided, are accurately extracted.
JOHN B. GIBSON.

Testimonials speaking in the highest terms of the work, have also been received from Hon. Edward King, Hon. William B. McClure, Hon. William D. Kelly, Hon. Cornelius Darragh, Hon. John Galbreath, James Dunlop, Esq., Thomas Williams, Esq., and more than fifty other distinguished members of the Pennsylvania Bar.

IN PREPARATION,

Addison on Contracts.

This valuable work will be reprinted from the fourth London edition just issued, and contain many important American notes.

The Fullest, the Latest, and the Best
REPORTS OF THE COMMON LAW COURTS
OF ENGLAND.

Containing the cases decided in the Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Nisi Prius Courts, from 1813 to 1855, and in the Court of Exchequer and Exchequer Chamber, from 1824 to 1855, are found in
The Regular and Authoritative Series of the
English Common Law and English Exchequer Reports,

Which present the following claims to the support of the profession:

1. They are the only series issued as the authoritative and acknowledged medium by which the decisions of the Law Courts of England are made public.

2. They contain Later Reports than the Boston series, are more fully and more ably reported, and so arranged by preservation of the original paging, that reference by reporters, or by elementary writers, can be traced as readily as in the English editions.

Vol. 2, Ellis & Blackburne's (75 E. C. L. R.) Reports (Q. B.) to January, 1854, was published by us in June, 1854. At that time the last Queen's Bench case printed in the Boston Law and Equity Reports, was of June 25, 1853. Our volume contained cases decided five months later. The Queen's Bench cases to November 25, 1853, were published in the Boston series in August, 1854, two months after we had distributed the same cases.

Vol. 3, Ellis & Blackburne, (77 E. C. L. R., with cases to the end of Trinity Term, 1854, was published when the latest case of Queen's Bench decisions in the Boston series, was of February 8, 1854, more than four months behind the regular reporters.

Exchequer Reports, vol. 9, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) distributed by us January 11, 1855, contains cases to May 10, 1854. The last Exchequer case then in the Boston series was decided February 9, 1854, four months behind the regular Reporter, issued in Philadelphia.

3. They contain more cases decided by the courts represented, than any other series issued in this country.

Vol. 77 English Common Law, (3 E. & B.,) reports eighty-six cases decided in the Queen's Bench since January 11, 1854, while but fifty-eight Queen's Bench cases, decided since January 1, 1854, are found scattered among Vols. 22, 24 and 25 of the Boston Law and Equity.

Vol. 78 E. C. L. K. (5 J. Scott,) reports sixty-five cases decided since Nov. 13, 1853, in the Common Pleas, while the L. & E. has but fifty-seven cases in that Court since the same period.

Vol. 9 Exchequer Reports, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) reports one hundred and ten cases in the Courts of Exchequer, decided since June 24, 1853, while since the same date, the L. & E. report but 107 cases, scattered through vols. 20, 22, 24 and 25.

4. They are almost exclusively cited in argument of counsel, and referred to by Elementary Writers for Law Authorities. See Smith's Leading Cases, Smith's Contracts, Smith's Landlord and Tenant, by Maude; Byles on Bills and Promissory Notes, Broom's Legal Maxims, Broom's Commentaries on the Laws of England, or almost any recent Law Book issued in England.

5. The Philadelphia Reports are edited by Judge Sharswood and by Judge Hare, whose labors as editors and authors have made them so well and so favorably known to the profession.

6. The Boston Law and Equity is made up in this country from the Law Journal, Jurist, Times and other Law periodicals, of a weekly, monthly, or quarterly character, and being unknown in England, is never cited in Court, or referred to by Law writers. The periodicals from which it is extracted, are occasionally cited under their own particular names, but they do not possess that permanent value, even in England, which is all-important in a series of Reports.

A carefully prepared and accurate Annual Digest of all the cases decided by the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Exchequer, will be distributed, early in each year, to subscribers to either series, free of charge. That for 1854 is ready, and will be mailed to subscribers who have not received a copy.

IN PRESS AND IN PREPARATION.

Leading Cases on the Law relating to Real Property, Conveyancing, and the Construction of Wills, by Owen Davies Tudor, author of Leading Cases in Equity. With very full notes referring to American Decisions.

Broom's Commentaries on the Common Law, by author of Legal Maxims, and Parties to Actions, edited by Hon. Geo. Sharswood.

Smith's Law of Landlord and Tenant, by author of Leading Cases, with copious American notes by P. P. Morris, Esq.

Having purchased from the English Publishers, during the past year, early sheets of the three works above announced, we hope to issue improved American editions very soon after their completion in England.

Williams' Personal Property, edited by B. Gertard, Esq., to be ready in July.

Starkie on the Law of Evidence. Arranged and Annotated by Hon. Geo. Sharswood.

Digest of the Exchequer Reports, 35 vols. by A. J. Fish, Esq.

Index to the English Common Law Reports, by Geo. W. Biddle and R. C. McMurtrie, Esqrs. 2 vols. 8vo.

VALUABLE REPORTS.

LITTLE, BROWN, & CO.

112 Washington Street, BOSTON,

Curtis's Supreme Court Decisions

THE DECISIONS OF THE SUPREME

COURT OF THE UNITED STATES,

With notes and a Digest by Hon. Benjamin R. Curtis, one of the Associate Justices of the Court. In 22 volumes, octavo. Comprising the Cases reported by Dallas, 4 vols.; Cranch, 9 vols.; Wheaton, 12 vols.; Peters, 16 vols.; Howard, 17 vols.

The old series of these reports are in 57 volumes, the Catalogue price of which is $217 50. This edition in 22 volumes, is offered to subscribers at the low price of $3 a volume; thus bringing them within the means of all. The volumes are delivered as fast as issued, and it is intended that the whole work shall be completed early in 1856.

Vols. 1 to 15 are now ready.

We ask attention to the following approval by the members of the Supreme Court of the United States:

"We approve the plan of Mr. Justice Curtis's, 'Decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States,' and believe that its execution by him will be of much utility to the legal profession and to our country."

ROGER B. TANEY, Chief Justice
JOHN McLEAN, Associate Justice.
JAMES M. WAYNE, Associate Justice.
JOHN CATRON, Associate Justice.
PETER V. DANIEL, Associate Justice.
SAMUEL NELSON, Associate Justice.
ROBERT C. GRIER, Associate Justice.
J. A. CAMPBELL, Associate Justice."

English Law and Equity Reports.

ENGLISH REPORTS IN LAW AND EQUITY. A Complete Collection of the Cases decided by the House of Lords, the Privy Council, the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas and Exchequer, the Lord Chancellor, the High Court of Appeal in Chancery, the Court of Criminal Appeal, and the Admiralty and Ecclesiastical Courts. Reprinted within a few weeks after the decisions are rendered.

This series has the merit of being complete, reliable, prompt, convenient, and cheap. It is now universally cited in the courts, and referred to in the recent law books as standard authority. All the cases reported in England, are here reprinted from the most reliable sources, as soon as they reach this country.

These Reports are now regularly digested in our Annual United States Digest, which thus embraces an annual digest of the whole English and American Law.

We have now in Preparation, and shall soon Publish,

A separate Digest of these Reports, embracing the first thirty-one volumes of the series, prepared with express reference to the convenience of the American profession, and exhibiting a complete synopsis of all the English Decisions reported in those volumes during the last five years; also a Table of Cases referring to all the contemporaneous English Reports. This will be the first Digest of English Decisions prepared expressly for the American Lawyer, and it is intended to give it the same advantages over the English Digests hitherto reprinted in this country, which the American text books have generally been found to possess over the English.

The Law and Equity Reports will be continued on the same plan as heretofore; the number of volumes being reduced to four per year; and Digests will be published from time to time as the convenience of the profession demands.

Vols. 1 to 31, now ready for delivery, at $2 00 per volume.

GREAT FIRE, MAY 1, 1856.

HERRING'S PATENT CHAMPION SAFES!

What the People Say!

PHILADELPHIA, 2d May, 1856.

MESSRS. FARRELS & HERRING—

GENTLEMEN—The Herring's Patent Champion Fire-Proof Safe, which we purchased of you in the month of January last, was situated in our Counting-Room in the second story of 231 Market street, on the night of the Great Fire, 1st May, 1856, and fell with the burning building in that conflagration.

The Safe was reached this afternoon, after an exposure of THIRTY-SIX HOURS to intense heat, and although the brass plates on the front of the Safe were melted, and the exterior shows the evidence of extreme heat, the inside casing was found to be UNTOUCHED BY FIRE, and with the exception of being a little steamed is now as good as new.

EDW. SEMANS & CO.

MESSRS. FARRELS & HERRING—

GENTLEMEN—The Herring's Patent Champion Fire-Proof Safe, of your manufacture, which we purchased nearly a year since, was in the centre of our building at the time of its destruction in the Great Fire of May 1, 1856.

We had removed the greater part of our Books before the fire reached us, but less of them, together with a number of loose papers, inside, purposely to test the security of the safe. After thirty-eight hours of severe roasting, we found the interior of the Safe, upon opening, not only bright and sound, but the Books and Papers as free from fire as when first put in.

We shall require another Safe as soon as we get a new location, and want none but your "Champion."
Yours, &c., FISHER & BROTHER,

No. 15 North Sixth street.

The public will bear in mind that the "HERRING'S PATENT" is the only Safe made in this City, which has never failed to preserve its contents in accidental fires. The TWO SAFES from the above Great Fire can now be seen in front of the OLD STAND, No. 34 WALNUT STREET.

DESIRABLE IMPROVEMENT.

Many efforts have been made to preserve the form and features of a departed friend, without the usual mode, so repugnant to the feelings, of placing the ice on the body. The difficulty has been overcome by an

Air-tight Preserver,

In which cold air is the medium used, acting as a preservative in the warmest weather, for any length of time. At the same time the body is entirely secure from nocturnal depredations. Thus arranged it can be conveyed HUNDREDS of miles with perfect safety, and in a good state of preservation. The apparatus is for preserving the body until time for burial—it is then placed in the coffin. The Subscriber, who is the sole patentee, is also a FURNISHING UNDERTAKER. Having had many years experience, he flatters himself he can render every satisfaction. The above is for sale to Undertakers.

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND.

INTEREST FIVE PER CENT, PER ANNUM.

ALL SUMS OF MONEY RETURNED ON DEMAND.

OFFICE, NEXT DOOR TO THE POST OFFICE;

No. 83 Dock Street,

PHILADELPHIA, 1854.

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND, No. 83 DOCK Street, next door to THIRD Street, and adjoining the POST OFFICE, receives MONEY on deposit daily, from 9 in the morning until 3 in the afternoon; also Monday evenings, from 7 to 9 o'clock. Interest is allowed on deposits at the rate of FIVE PER CENT per annum. Deposits will be returned in whole, or in part, on demand, without notice.

The popularity of this Office with all classes of the community, both in town and country, and its consequent success, may be ascribed, in part, to the following substantial reasons:

- 1st. It offers a convenient, responsible, and profitable Depository to Executors, Administrators, Assignees, Collectors, Agents, and all public officers—to Attorneys, Trustees, Societies and Associations, whether incorporated or otherwise—to married or single ladies—to Students, Merchants, Clerks, and business men generally—to Mechanics, Farmers, Minors of either sex, and all who have funds, much or little, to deposit, where they may be had at any time, with Five Per Cent interest added.
  - 2d. Depositors receive Books, with an abstract of the By-laws and regulations, in which is entered their deposits, which Books serve as vouchers. They may designate in case of sickness, death, or absence, who shall receive their deposits, without the intervention of Executors or Administrators. Any one or more persons may deposit in his, her, or their name, or for any other person or persons.
  - 3d. A Report is made each year to the Legislature, and Councils of the City.
  - 4th. The Officers are sworn before they enter upon their duties, in addition to giving Bonds with sureties.
  - 5th. The State Savings Fund is a real Savings Fund—not an Insurance and Trust Company. The Charter of this Institution avoids the Insurance business.
  - 6th. Deposits may be withdrawn by checks after the manner customary with Banks. Check Books will be furnished to depositors without charge.
- GEORGE H. HART, President.
CHAS. G. IMLAY, Treasurer.

Notice.

"The Bank of North America," a corporation established in the City of Philadelphia, with banking and discounting privileges, and whose specific object is the exercise of those privileges, intend to make application to the Legislature of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania at the next session thereof, for an increase of the amount of the capital of the said Bank, being now one million of dollars by the sum of one million of dollars, so as to make its capital two millions of dollars: its location and specific object to be as heretofore.

LAW BOOKSELLERS, PUBLISHERS AND IMPORTERS.

17 AND 19 SOUTH FIFTH STREET,

First Door above Chestnut.

Kay & Brother respectfully invite the attention of the members of the Legal Profession to the following invaluable publications, and solicit them to call and examine their select stock of Law Books.

JUST PUBLISHED.

HARRIS' REPORTS OF THE SUPREME COURT OF PENNSYLVANIA. Vol. XII. By George W. Harris.

KAY & BROTHER beg leave to announce that they have become the sole publishers of Harris' Reports, of which eleven volumes have been already issued. They have just published the twelfth and last volume of the series, which fills up the interval between Harris' and Casey's Reports, which they also publish. The difficulty in obtaining, when and as wanted, the various volumes of Harris' Reports, will in future be obviated, as regular and full supplies of them all will be kept constantly on hand and for sale.

CASEY'S PENNSYLVANIA STATE REPORTS, VOL. I.—Pennsylvania State Reports, Vol. XXV., containing reports of cases adjudged by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, by Joseph Casey, Esq., State Reporter. This volume contains the cases decided in part of May Term, 1855; in October Term, 1856, and part of January Term, 1856. It will be the joint endeavor of the Reporter and Publisher to issue the respective volumes as speedily as possible, after the determination of the cases which each volume will contain, and thus to remove a serious ground of complaint on the part of the bar. Subscribers wanted for a single volume or the entire series.

BRIGHTLY'S PURDON'S ANNUAL DIGEST, FOR THE YEARS 1854, 1855, and 1856—on the plan and in continuation of Stroud & Brightly's Purdon, 1700 to 1853. Annual Digest of the Laws of Pennsylvania for each of the years 1854, 1855 and 1856, namely, from 28 May, 1853, to 15 May, 1856, together with some laws inadvertently omitted in Purdon's Digest, 1700 to 1853; Marginal References; a Digested Syllabus of each Title; Foot Notes to the Judicial Decisions; and a full and exhaustive Index, in which the contents of all the annual Digests are incorporated in one alphabet. The whole completing Stroud & Brightly's Purdon's Digest to the present time. By Frederick C. Brightly, Esq., author of the "Law of Costs," "Equity Jurisprudence;" Editor of Purdon's Digest, &c. Price only Fifty cents.

PREPARING FOR PUBLICATION.

SERGEANT ON THE MECHANIC'S LIEN—second edition, in 1 vol., 8vo., of 300 to 500 pages. Edited by E. Spencer Miller, Esquire, Counsellor at Law and Professor of the law of Real Estate, Conveyancing and Equity Jurisprudence in the Law Department of the University of Pennsylvania. The Statutes and Decisions, since 1839, (when the first edition was published) have so radically affected this branch of the law, that an entirely new arrangement has been adopted, and a much larger volume will be required than that originally published. The editor and publishers will make every effort to present to the Bar a treatise which will exhaust the law upon this subject, as far as it has been announced, and which will be found practically useful to the profession. It will contain Precedents of Forms carefully prepared, with a view to the latest aspects of the law; and also, all the acts of Assembly relating to the subject. The table of cases and index will be elaborate and exhaustive.

BURTON ON THE LAW OF REAL PROPERTY—An Elementary Compendium of the law of Real Property, by Walter Henry Burton, Esq., late one of the Fellows on Mr. Viner's foundation for the study of the Common Law in the University of Oxford, with notes, showing the alterations in the law to the present time, to which is now prefixed an introductory chapter, giving a concise historical outline of such parts of the law as have been the subject of statutory alteration, by Edward Priestly Cooper, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister at Law. From the last (the eighth) London edition, with full American annotations. By Charles Goeppe, Esq. 1 vol., 8vo.

GOWEN ON WILLS.—In 2 vol's 8vo., of 700 pages each.

- Vol. I.—Execution and Probate of Wills.
  - Vol. II.—Construction of Wills.
- A Treatise on the Law of Wills and Testamentary Dispositions in the United States. By James E. Gowen, Esq., of the Philadelphia Bar.

A DIGEST OF THE LAWS OF THE UNITED STATES on the plan of Purdon's Digest, 1700 to 1856.—Kay & Brother beg leave to announce that they have, in course of preparation, a Digest of the Laws of the United States, by F. C. Brightly, Esq., editor of Purdon's Digest, &c., &c., which will be compiled on the model, which, in the case of their eighth edition of Purdon's Digest, has given so much satisfaction to the Legal Profession and the Public.

CASEY'S PENNSYLVANIA STATE REPORTS, VOL. II.

A NEW FEATURE.

A portion of our columns under an appropriate heading, will in future be devoted to the publication of notes of all the Decisions of the Courts of this country as well as Europe, in cases involving the liabilities and rights of Banks, Insurance and Railroad Companies, and other Corporations and their Stockholders, and important heads of Commercial Law, as Partnership, Agency, Carriers, Insurance, &c., &c.

The frequent issue of our publication will enable us to keep our subscribers fully posted as to Legislative and Judicial action on these subjects, by the publication of all Laws and Decisions, at the earliest moment after their promulgation. The obviously great advantage which this recueil in this form will afford the officers and stockholders in all these corporations, as well as the business community throughout the Union, will, we hope, induce an extensive addition to our subscription list among them.

It will also furnish the professors of the law in other States, additional reasons for availing themselves of the great advantages offered to them by this publication, which experience alone can enable them fully to appreciate.

RAILROAD LAW.

[Court of Queen's Bench, Jan. 19, 1856.]

Denton v. The Great Northern Railway Company.

Liability of Railway Company—Statement in Time Tables—Conveyance of Passengers—Breach of Contract—Action for False Representation—Breach of Duty as Carriers.

In the printed and published time tables of the defendants, for the month of March, 1855, which were kept in circulation throughout the month, a passenger train was advertised to leave the defendants' station in London, at 5 P. M., and to arrive at Peterborough at about 7.20 the same evening, and about the same time to proceed on to Hull, arriving at Hull about midnight. The time tables contained a notice to the effect that the defendants would not hold themselves responsible for delay or the consequences arising therefrom. The defendants' line of railway extended as far as A. beyond Peterborough, but they had running powers over the L. and Y. Railway to M., where the N. E. Railway Company's line joined; and, under the Railway Clearing Act, 1850, the defendants had for some time been issuing tickets with which passengers were conveyed, as advertised, from Peterborough to Hull. But, on the 1st of March, the N. E. Railway Company discontinued to run their train, having given previous notice to the defendants, but not until after their time tables had been printed and published, and, in consequence, the defendants were no longer able to issue tickets by the train as advertised. Relying on the time tables, the plaintiff left London on the 25th of March, for Peterborough, on business, intending to go on to Hull the same evening. He accordingly applied to the clerk at the Peterborough station in proper time for a ticket for the train advertised to leave for Hull about 7.20 P. M., and offered to pay the fare; the clerk, however, refused to grant the ticket, stating as a reason, the N. E. Railway Company having discontinued running their train as before. The plaintiff then took a ticket, and proceeded as far as the M. Junction, where he was obliged to remain that night, and, it was admitted, had, in consequence, sustained a pecuniary loss.

This case came up on a case stated.

The question for the opinion of the court was, whether upon the said facts herein above set forth the plaintiff was entitled to recover against the defendants his said damage. In the event of the opinion of the court being in the affirmative, the defendants were to pay to the plaintiff the said sum of 5*l.* 10*s.* together with his costs, to be taxed; and, in the contrary event, the plaintiff was to pay to the defendants their costs, to be taxed; and the judgment of this court was to be entered and execution thereon to issue for the plaintiff or the defendant accordingly.

Maynard, for the plaintiff. The facts stated show a good cause of action. First, there was a contract, between the plaintiff and the defendants, that a train should run as advertised, and a breach of it by the defendants. The effect of the publication of the defendants' time tables is analogous to that of the publication of an advertisement offering a reward. There was a contract with the plaintiff as soon as he offered to perform the conditions entitling him to be carried as a passenger. Williams v. Cawardine, 4 B. & Ad. 621. By publishing the time tables the defendants offer a contract on the terms therein stated to any person paying the proper fare. They undertake that a train shall start for, and run to the particular places about the time stated in the time tables. Secondly, the defendants are liable for the damage caused to the plaintiff by a false representation knowingly made. A false representation, by which another is misled to his detriment, is clearly a cause of action, although there is no fraud in fact. Johnson v. The Midland Railway Company, 4 Exch. Rep. 367, throws some light on this question. There was here a public profession by the defendants that a train would run at the time stated. He referred to Bennett v. The Peninsular and Oriental Steamboat Company, 6 Com. B. Rep. 75.

Hill (Johnston with him) contra. This is a question of considerable importance to railway companies.

[LORD CAMPBELL, C. J. Where there is an express contract the company making it are bound as to the whole line of railway to be traversed, though their own line only extends part of the way.]

That is so; but here, first, there was no binding contract made the defendants. The publication of time tables bears no analogy to the case referred to of an advertisement offering a reward. It amounts to an invitation to persons to come and deal with the company, and no more.

[WIGHTMAN, J. Does it not amount to a promise to run the train as stated?]

If it is held that the time table in itself becomes a contract, then the company would be equally liable, though the line were stopped by a landslip, or any other inevitable accident. Paradine v. Jane, Allyn Rep. 27.

[LORD CAMPBELL, C. J. Vis major may discharge the company. There may be an implied exception from perils of the land.

WIGHTMAN, J. Suppose the company had expressly stated in the time tables: We engage, in consideration of the fare, to run trains to the places and at the times stated.]

Still, there would be no contract; it would only amount to saying the company were willing to contract if persons offered themselves. It was only an offer to contract. In Johnson v. The Midland Railway Company, it was held, that the liability of the company depended upon its being shown that they had conveniences for carrying.

[CROMPTON, J. If this is held to be a contract, the decision will extend to advertisements with reference to the sailing of vessels.]

A contract to make a contract is something novel. Secondly, the defendants are not liable for a false representation, as the damage to the plaintiff was caused by something which happened off their line. The time tables were true when printed, and continued so as to the defendants' own line.

[LORD CAMPBELL, C. J. It is the continuing to publish that is relied upon.]

But being untrue quoad another company's line, over which the defendants had no control, it is not such a false representation as makes the defendants liable to an action. It can hardly be said that the defendants were bound to publish new time tables.

Maynard was not heard in reply.

LORD CAMPBELL, C. J. This is certainly a very important case, both to railway companies and the public. It seems to me that railways would not be that benefit and accommodation to the public which we find them to be, if the representations made in their time tables are to be treated as so much waste paper, and not considered as the foundation for a contract. I think the plaintiff is entitled to recover, both on the ground that there was a contract, and also for a false representation. I think there was a binding contract, and that the case is the same as if the company should publish in express terms that, if customers would come to a particular station at a particular hour, a train would be passing at that hour, or near the hour, and that any person who tendered his fare should have a ticket, and be carried from that station to some other given station. We have here both a promise and a good consideration, and that in law constitutes a contract. Does not the time table amount to such a contract as that? Any one reading it would understand that the company undertook that at the particular time there will be a train passing from Peterborough to Hull, and that any person paying his fare will be carried between those places. There is clearly a prejudice to a person coming to be carried as a passenger. He makes all his arrangements with a view to the promise in the time table being performed. The undertaking by the company seems to me clearly indicated by that which is found on the face of the time table. It is exactly within the principle of the cases referred to, where a reward was offered to any person who will give such information as shall lead to the conviction of an offender. That is a promise made to the public generally, and is the same as if the parties were present. It is a conditional promise, and when the condition has been performed it becomes absolute. There is, therefore, no ground for saying that there was no contract in this case, and there is less ground for saying that there was any excuse for not performing it.

It can make no difference that the whole of the line is not the property of the defendants; it is enough that the time table says that the train will run the whole way. It is allowed that if the company gave a ticket from Peterborough to Hull, it would have made no difference to the passenger that part of the line from Peterborough to Hull did not belong to the defendants; and why should it not be the same here? The defendants did not inform the public how much of the line belonged to them and how much to others; but making arrangements with the other company, they undertook that a train should go the whole distance from Peterborough to Hull. Then, as to the argument that this would render the company liable, even although by some vis major or accident, over which they had no control, they should be prevented from completing their contract. I think, looking at the nature of the contract, that there may be certain implied exceptions from perils of the land, as there is in the case of a policy of marine insurance from the perils of the sea, as if a train, without any fault of the company, should be prevented from going, by an inundation or by some convulsion of nature. There they might be discharged. I cannot see any inconvenience likely to arise from laying down this principle.

It has been suggested that the decision here may be applied to advertisements for the sailing of ships. Now, suppose a ship advertised as lying in St. Katherine's Docks, and bound for Calcutta, and that she would carry goods at a certain rate, if sent within a certain time; and suppose that, relying on these representations, goods are sent, and the answer then is, that the adventurers have changed their arrangements, that they got better freights, and that instead of going to Calcutta, the ship is going to Jamaica. I think, under such circumstances, an action could be maintained by a party prejudiced against the parties making such representations to the public, and who thereby entered into an engagement that the ship would proceed on the voyage stated in the advertisement.

With respect to the other ground, I can have no doubt. This time table contained what the law calls a false and fraudulent representation, and the defendants thereby made themselves liable. The defendants not merely printed the time tables after notice had been given to them that the train would be discontinued without any fresh time tables being substituted, but the old ones continued to be issued as true time tables, to which the public were to give credit, down to the 25th of March, when the plaintiff saw one of the time tables at the station of the defendants, and received one on that very day. Was not this a representation on the defendants' part that a train would run that evening from Peterborough to Hull? and was not that false, and did not the defendants know it to be false? It was the same as if a person, authorized by the defendants, had told the plaintiff that on the 25th there would be a train from Peterborough to Hull at 7 P. M., the defendants knowing that representation to be false. The plaintiff gives faith to the representation, makes his arrangements, goes to the station, finds there is no train, and it is admitted, suffers a pecuniary loss in consequence. It is an established rule of law that where a false representation is made knowingly, to which another gives credit, and damage is suffered, he has a remedy by action against the person who has made the representation. I am, therefore, of opinion, that the judgment of the court below was right, and ought to be affirmed.

WIGHTMAN, J. I am of the same opinion. The publication of the time tables during the whole of March amounted to an undertaking or promise by the company to any one of the public who chose to take a ticket from Peterborough to Hull, that a train would run at 7 P. M. It is said that the company would be made liable, though prevented by some inevitable accident from running the train; but it seems to me such a liability is prevented, and that the case would then come within the limitation in the time tables, that the company would not be responsible for delay, or any consequences arising therefrom. I think that a contract arose with any one of the public who presented himself at the station and offered to take a ticket, that a train should run at seven o'clock, as stated in the time tables, unless prevented by inevitable accident. But it also seems to me the defendants are liable to an action on the case for having induced the plaintiff, relying on the time tables, to do an act to his prejudice by their own false representation, which they knew to be false.

CROMPTON, J. I am of the same opinion. I entirely agree that an action for deceit clearly lies against the defendants. I think the statement was made at any moment during the time the time tables were continued, and the defendants therefore held out a false representation to the public, by which the plaintiff sustained damage. I also think they would be liable for a breach of their duty in not carrying the plaintiff as a passenger, as they have held themselves out to do. (He referred to Story on Bailments, s. 591.) They could not properly refuse to carry a person offering himself as a passenger, and ready to pay his fare; and it would be a serious inconvenience if, holding themselves out as common carriers, the company was not bound to carry passengers. I entertain some doubt as to how far the liability of the defendants can be rested upon contract. I do not mean to say that the facts do not establish a contract. It is very like the case of an advertisement offering a reward; but in that case there is the consideration of work done; and I never could see why an action for work done would not in such a case lie. It would be difficult to distinguish this case from an advertisement at a shop offering to sell goods upon certain terms, or an advertisement of the sailing of a particular ship for a particular port. I prefer resting my judgment on the duty and obligation of the defendants as common carriers, by which they were bound to carry the plaintiff. It is not necessary for me to say whether the defendants were liable for a breach of a particular contract made with the plaintiff; at the same time I do not mean to say that I think they are not so liable.

A. W. RAND'S SELF-CLEANING FURNACE. Boytton's Patent.

Having put up a large number of these Furnaces, both in public and private buildings, (including 24 put up at the Philadelphia County Prison, in place of the 44 torn out.) and tested them during the cold weather of 1855, and 1856, being the coldest weather we have had for twenty or thirty years. They have given the most universal satisfaction, and those having them in use were perfectly delighted with the abundance of warm, pleasant air, and abundant ventilation afforded thereby, while so many were suffering from cold, and troubled with the deficiencies of their heating apparatus.

We take great pleasure, therefore, in recommending them to the notice of the public, and would call their attention particularly to an examination of the greatly increased amount of effective radiating surface, their perfect solidity and durability, the improved manner of making the joints, entirely preventing any escape of gases, and the manner of distributing the fire, so as to cause it to impinge directly against the large amount of surface, without the objectionable and unnatural method of forcing the current downwards.

We have also a full assortment of HAYES' PATENT TUBULAR OVEN RANGES, now so universally used, and favorably known. Also, HAYES' PATENT VENTILATORS, &c., &c., all of which will be put up in the very best manner, and by the most skillful workmen, constantly engaged for that purpose, by

The Bank of Cash Credits.

Application will be made to the Legislature of Pennsylvania, for the Charter of a Bank Issue with general banking privileges, with a capital of ONE MILLION OF DOLLARS. Said Bank to be located in the City of Philadelphia, to be called the "Robert Morris Bank," and to be conducted upon the system of cash credits only, as is herewith indicated.

A cash credit is a credit given to an individual by a Banking Company, for a limited sum, seldom under $500, or $1000, upon his own security and that of two or three individuals, approved by the Bank, who become sureties for its payment. The individual who has obtained such a credit, is enabled to draw the whole sum, or any part of it, when he pleases; replacing it, or portions of it, according as he finds it convenient; interest being charged upon such part only as he draws out.

"If a man borrows $1000, from a private hand, and even then it is not always to be found when required, he pays interest for it, whether he be using it or not. His bank credit costs him nothing, except during the moment it is of service to him, and this circumstance is of equal advantage as if he had borrowed money at a much lower rate of interest."

Cash credits are not, however, intended to be a dead load; the main objects of the Banks in granting them is to get their notes circulated, and they do not grant them except to persons in business, or to those who are frequently drawing out and paying in money.

Any person who applies to a bank for a cash credit, is called upon to produce sureties, and, after a full inquiry into the character of the applicant, the nature of his business, and the sufficiency of his securities, he is allowed to open a credit, and to draw upon the Bank for the whole of its amount, or for such part as his daily transaction may require. To the credit of the account, he pays in such sums as he may not have occasion to use, and interest is charged or credited upon the balance, as the case may be. From the facility which these cash credits give to all the small transactions of the country, and from the opportunities which they afford to persons who begin business with little or no capital but their character, to employ profitably the minutest products of their industry, it cannot be doubted that the most important advantages are derived in the whole community.

Such privileges and immunities as the "Metropolitan Bank of New York" exercises, will be applied for.

COURT OF QUARTER SESSIONS.

In the matter of the CONTESTED ELECTION OF DISTRICT ATTORNEY.

Sur Rules to quash, &c.

THOMPSON, P. J.

The Act of Assembly which devolves on this Court this most unpleasant jurisdiction, in addition to the authority vested in it as a judicial tribunal, clothes it with powers which by the same act are conferred on committees of the legislature. These include the power "to decide not only on the validity of the contested election," but also, "which of the candidates had the greatest number of legal votes."

This grant of power was necessary to enable the Court to act in the premises; as, without it, it would be difficult, in a proceeding where the investigation is to be made upon the representation merely of twenty citizens, with a simple notice of the time of hearing to the person returned, which notice may be entirely disregarded, to proceed, by the exercise of any of the well-defined powers of a Court of law, to decide upon the rights of the several parties interested as candidates.

In this proceeding there is no provision for bringing any opposite party into Court; or in case of the neglect or refusal to appear, for taking a decree by default or confession.

There is no answer required from any one to the petition presented; nor any rule or regulation to produce an issue.

The simple process is the presentation of the petition, which the Court is required to fix a time of hearing, with ten days' notice thereof to the "person returned."

As it would be inconsistent with the other duties of the Court to inquire into every vague allegation which might be made as to the fairness of an election, it was early seen that the Court must of necessity adopt some rules to regulate election cases, as they do other cases, and that to bring such cases as far as possible within the ordinary rules of practice, would be most consistent with the duties required by the law.

Under these rules, the appearance of a party to oppose, constitutes him a litigant party. He is entitled to take every objection to the proceedings of the contestants, both as to matters of form and of substance, which may secure to him a fair and legal hearing. He has the right to require the Court to decide as a preliminary question, whether the petition filed, presents such a case, as would, if established by evidence, affect his rights, and if it be found deficient in substance, to order it to be quashed; or if defective in parts, to direct such parts to be stricken out.

It is impossible to specify with precision all that a petition contesting an election must contain. If presented according to the provisions of the law, all that the Court can require is, that it shall state in an intelligible manner, and with due precision, such facts, as, if sustained by proof, would show that there has been an undue election and a false return.

It is obvious that if the Court were to require the same precision and certainty in an election petition, as in the pleadings between parties to a suit at law, the object of which pleadings is to produce a single issue; the difficulty of stating precisely the manner in which a fraud has been perpetrated or an undue return made, would, to a great degree, nullify the law itself, which designs that such charges shall be investigated.

The rule must not be held so strict as to afford protection to fraud, by which the will of the people is set at naught; nor so loose as to permit the acts of sworn officers, chosen by the people, to be inquired into, without an adequate and well-defined cause.

To ascertain, and to apply the proper rule, has always been the effort of this Court, and the following principles applicable to the case in hand may be deduced from decided cases.

1. That the powers conferred upon the Court in relation to contested elections are to be exercised judicially; and in such cases the proceedings are to be regulated, as far as practicable, by the established rules of judicial procedure.

2. That the petition must set forth plainly and distinctly, facts, which, if sustained by proof, would render it the duty of the Court to entirely vacate the election, or to declare that another person and not the person returned was duly elected to the office in question. Skerret's case, 2 Parsons, 509; Carpenter's case, ib. 537.

3. That the Court will strike from the petition all irrelevant or general allegations which cannot affect the merits of the case, or the general result. Kneass's case, 2 Parsons, 553.

4. That a petition to set aside an election may be amended; and especially where leave to amend is applied for before any progress is made in the hearing of the case.

We do not deem it necessary to examine or review the correctness of either of these propositions—they have been settled after much and repeated consideration. They have been frequently applied and have stood the test of experience. We have heard nothing upon this argument to induce us to reconsider either of them, and they must now be regarded as the settled law as far as this Court is concerned.

The application of these principles to the Rules now under consideration, will enable us to decide them without difficulty.

Those rules are, on the part of the party holding the return, to show cause

1st. Why the specifications in the petition of the contestants, except the 1st, 2d, and 43d, should not be stricken out.

2d. Why the petition should not be quashed for the insufficiency of the 1st, 2d, and 43d specifications.

And on the part of the contestants.

Why the petition should not be amended.

The reasons in support of the motion to strike out are, That the said specifications are not sufficient in law; That they are not specific; That they do not set out the names of the voters from whom illegal votes are alleged to have been received; nor how such votes are illegal.

The specifications referred to are precisely alike, except as to the number of votes and the election division and ward in which they are charged to have been illegally received—it is therefore unnecessary to refer to them separately.

The petition alleges that the election return of Lewis C. Cassidy as District Attorney, is false, fraudulent, and untrue, in this, that Lewis C. Cassidy was unduly returned as having received for said office 34,475 votes, and William B. Mann 33,924 votes. Whereas the petitioners allege and charge that the said Lewis C. Cassidy received not more than 32,915 votes, and William B. Mann received at least 34,399 votes for said office, whereby the petitioners allege and charge and believe that the said William B. Mann has received the highest number of votes for said office, to wit, at least 1,484 votes more than the said Lewis C. Cassidy, is elected to said office, and should have been so returned.

This is a direct charge of a false and fraudulent election and return. It sets out the number of votes returned for each candidate, and states the number actually received for them respectively; claiming a difference in favor of William B. Mann of 1,484 votes, which number would greatly exceed the majority of 551 votes returned as received by Lewis C. Cassidy.

If the facts thus stated be proved, it is manifest that the result of the election as returned will be changed, and Mr. Mann, as the person receiving the greater number of votes, will be entitled to the office.

The petition then contains certain specifications, each of which, from the third to the forty-sixth, indicates a particular ward and the election division of such ward in which votes were illegally received for Lewis C. Cassidy from persons not qualified to vote; and also states the number of votes so received. The whole number of illegal votes stated in the several specifications greatly exceed the majority returned for Mr. Cassidy.

The petition thus distinctly charges fraud in the election and return. It points out the polls at which the fraud was committed; the manner in which it was effected, and the number of illegal votes fraudulently received.

This would seem to be all that the law requires. It is a precise statement of facts, which if sustained by proof, would change the result of the election.

But it is contended that greater precision should be required, that the petitioners should be obliged to set out their full knowledge; that they should give the name of every illegal voter, and the specific reason why his vote was illegal.

For such a degree of strictness no analogy in pleading has been shown. In a quo warranto, to which it is said the Supreme Court, in Sheets's case, compared this proceeding, no such extreme precision is necessary. In election cases before committees of Parliament in England, special statutes were required to direct the character of the information to be given by the contesting parties. We remember no instance in pleading, in which it is necessary to set out not only the claim or injury alleged, but the means and manner and character of the proofs to be adduced in support of the charge. If such strictness were required the slightest mistake would be fatal.

The specifications in this case come up to the requirements of the law as indicated in former decisions.

In Kneass's case, 2 Parsons, the sixth specification, which, as amended, was sustained, is identical with that now under consideration. A list of names was there appended, which the Court subsequently pronounced to be unnecessary, regarding it only as proof. If that case was properly decided, it rules the point now under consideration. We are aware of the extreme difficulty of exercising this jurisdiction, party feeling affects the very atmosphere which surrounds us; no one looks calmly on, and there is danger in being led into extremes. In medio tutissimus.

Let it be known that an election fraud must not only be discovered, but that every individual engaged in it must be ascertained and named before a step can be taken to establish it, and the chance for a fair election will be more and more remote. We cannot thus throw a shield around fraud. Believing that this petition contains those statements of facts which the law directs this Court to investigate, and which every decided case asserts to be the matter proper for investigation, our duty is to proceed with it. We do not relax our rules, but consider that this case is clearly governed by the propositions derived from adjudged cases.

The specifications from the 46th to the end of the petition are similar to each other, alleging frauds of a similar character in different divisions of the several wards respectively named therein.

The first fraud charged is alleged to have been committed by a majority of the voters at the election for inspectors, in the spring of the present year, in choosing two inspectors of the same political views.

Doubting very much whether such a choice of inspectors constitutes a fraud, it is sufficient to say, that no effort was made in proper time to set aside the election for said inspectors, and we certainly cannot examine its validity in a collateral proceeding. This would be contrary to all legal principle, and be inconsistent with the meaning of the law which regulates this subject, and which requires a direct proceeding to contest an election; always presuming that to have been fair which has not been legally questioned. We can therefore receive no evidence upon this point, and it may be stricken from the petition.

The next charge is, that the said inspectors and judge did fraudulently receive two hundred votes, which were counted for Lewis C. Cassidy, from persons not qualified to vote. This is the same charge as made in the seventh specification, with the addition of the word "fraudulently." It is not perceived that the charge of fraud thus made will render the receipt of illegal votes any more efficient to change the result of the election. The first charge made in the petition is that the election and return are false and fraudulent, and the evidence showing such votes to have been fraudulently received, may be given under the first specification relating to the same district, each of such specifications being understood to point to a special instance of the general fraud charged.

The next class of charges in this specification alleges, that the said election officers fraudulently refused to perform those acts which the law requires them to perform in conducting an election; but it is not therein alleged that the effect of this fraudulent refusal and neglect was to change the result of the election for District Attorney.

It has been settled that the allegation of a fraud perpetrated by the officers of an election is not sufficient to authorize the Court to set aside an election, unless it be also stated, that by such fraud the true declaration of the will of the people had been prevented. If this were not required, dishonest officers would have it in their power, by fraudulently neglecting the required formalities, to set aside an honest election.

The election officers are next charged with having fraudulently received the votes of non-residents, &c. This allegation is not sufficiently definite, as it neither states that such votes were received for District Attorney, nor the number of such votes, so that the effect upon the result can be ascertained.

The same remark applies to the allegations of having fraudulently received the votes of persons who personated others, some of whom were dead, and of having permitted the same persons to vote several times; the number of such votes are not stated, nor their effect upon the result of the election.

The following charge of omission to file the tally papers within the time required by law, can have no effect upon the number of votes cast and is not material.

The concluding allegation of this specification, that the election in said division was not a fair election, held according to the intent and spirit of the law, but was a fraud contemplated and directed by the majority of voters in said election division, and carried on by the election officers, who were the agents of the said majority; is a repetition of the charge first stated in this specification, which charge has been already disposed of as a matter not within the scope of the present proceeding. Were we to attempt to investigate such a charge, we would be at a loss to understand how an election held at a time and place prescribed by law, could be shown to be a fraud contemplated and carried on by the majority of the voters. There is a want of intelligibility in such a proposition which affords an additional reason for excluding it from the petition.

This whole specification, the separate allegations of which we have thus briefly considered, we can view in no other light than as a charge of conspiracy entered into by the majority of the voters of the election division to perpetrate a fraud; the means to be employed are stated, but the only definite result arrived at, as far as it can affect the case before us, seems to be the reception of two hundred illegal votes for Mr. Cassidy. Assuming that the facts stated could be fully proved, would it be our duty to consider the election thus conducted entirely void, and to disregard and throw out the returns, or should we deduct the votes fraudulently received from the number returned for the party for whom they were counted? Where the latter course can be pursued, it seems not only consonant with justice, but in pursuance of the law which requires us to determine which of the candidates has the greater number of votes. The votes of honest electors are not thereby lost, and they disfranchised. This course has been heretofore pursued by this Court in similar cases, and great pains have been taken to ascertain and correct the fraud, rather than to disfranchise the citizens of an entire election district. Adopting this principle in the present case, we do not perceive that any benefit can result from retaining in the petition any part of the specification under consideration, and the same is stricken out.

This ruling applies to all the specifications after the 46th.

The petition thus expurgated, will embrace the specifications from No. 1 to 46 inclusive; and as there is sufficient therein, if proved, to change the result of the election, the motion to quash, because the 1st, 2d and 43d specifications do not contain matter sufficient for that result, must of course be refused.

The motion of the contestants to amend the petition, may be disposed of in a few words.

The petition being amendable and the amendments proposed (except the last amendment) having the effect to define more clearly the charges made in the several specifications to which they are offered, and to this extent being for the information of the opposite party, we do not think it proper to refuse the application to file them, although they are not regarded as necessary to the sufficiency of the petition. The last proposed amendment introduces, in a new dress, the charges made in the 49th specification. It is objectionable, as being inconsistent with the petition which it proposes to amend. The acts stated in the petition as having been done by the election officers of this division, are herein alleged to have been performed by persons who were not election officers, but usurpers, who had no right to act as officers, and these usurpers are charged with having perpetrated frauds, by not performing the duties required to be performed by the election officers. This specification neither explains, or remedies, any defect of the original petition, and cannot be allowed as an amendment thereto.

The result is, that the motion to strike out is granted, so far as relates to the specifications after the 46th.

That the motion to quash the petition is refused. And that the amendments are allowed, with the exception of the last proposed amendment.

Opinions by Judge Allison.
NICHOLSON vs. FITZPATRICK.
O'KANE, Garnishee.

Opening judgment—Garnishee.
This is an application by the garnishee, to open a judgment signed against him for want of appearance. The affidavit upon which the rule to show cause was granted, asserts a want of knowledge that the affiant was required to appear upon the time mentioned in the writ, and that he is not now, and was not at the time of the service, indebted to the defendant, but that defendant is largely indebted to him.

The attachment execution was issued July 8th, and on Sept. 15th, being the first day of the term, judgment was entered for want of an appearance; on the 19th fi. fa. issued, and on the 27th this rule was granted.

The garnishee was not required to be in Court before the 15th of September, and the venire for the term issued on the 5th, so that the plaintiff has not lost a trial by the failure of the garnishee to appear in time, and it is probable that the application to open the judgment, followed immediately after notice of judgment and execution; but eight days having intervened between the issuing of the fi. fa. and the granting of the rule to show cause.

It is the practice of the Court, when judgment is taken by default, where the defendant comes in promptly, and explains his failure to appear as commanded in the writ, and shows a defence supported by affidavit or other proof, to open the judgment and let him in to take defence before a jury. An application of this kind made by a garnishee ought perhaps to be looked on with greater favour, than when the defendant in the original suit is in default; for a garnishee is brought into Court, and often compelled to litigate with contending claimants, when he is in no wrong himself, and is thus made an unwilling party to controversies, which subject him to annoyance and costs. The case of Lyman and Beam, 6 Wharton 181, cited by plaintiff, was a case very like to the present one; the application there was to the discretion of the Court, and failed; but we see no reason why the garnishee here should be made an exception to the more liberal application of the rule which prevails with us. Rule absolute. Cassidy for the rule, Longstreth contra.

KERBAUGH vs. CURRY.

Costs on appeal from award.

Rule on the prothonotary and plaintiff, to show cause why the costs paid by the defendant on an appeal from an award of arbitrators should not be refunded.

This suit was brought in the Common Pleas by original writ, to recover arrears of ground rent under one hundred dollars. Plaintiff entered a rule to arbitrate, to which defendant did not appear. An award of arbitrators was filed, finding in favour of the plaintiff, and from this award defendant offered to appeal without the payment of costs, which was refused; and thereupon he paid the costs, $15.50, under protest, and giving notice that he would reclaim the same.

Sower vs. Hummel, 9 Harris 450, is a case precisely like the present upon its facts. The action was instituted in the Common Pleas of Dauphin County, for arrears of ground rent, and a verdict had in favour of plaintiff for $13.66. The Court below awarded to plaintiff his full costs; but the Supreme Court reversed this judgment, and decided that the cause of action was within the jurisdiction of a justice of the peace, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover costs. This case differs from Sower v. Hummel in this, that the costs now sought to be obtained back from the prothonotary to whom they were paid, were in part incurred under a rule of reference entered by the plaintiff, and that by the 27th section of the Act of 16th June, 1836, the appellant, before being allowed to enter an appeal, from an award of arbitrators, is required to pay all the costs that have accrued in such suit, that is, all such charges as he is legally bound to pay, and not such as by the law are imposed on the plaintiff. Under the authority of the case cited above, this motion must be supported; for although Sower and Hummel was decided by a divided court, yet it settles the question of the jurisdiction of the alderman, and that the costs must be borne by a plaintiff who elects to bring his suit in the Common Pleas, with the full knowledge that he can recover his debt, and no more. The defendant was entitled to file his appeal without paying costs, and having paid under protest, he is entitled to their return. Rule absolute. Longstreth for the rule.

LAW BOOKSELLERS AND PUBLISHERS,
No. 197 CHESTNUT STREET,

The Fullest, the Latest, and the Best REPORTS OF THE COMMON LAW COURTS OF ENGLAND.

Containing the cases decided in the Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Nisi Prius Courts, from 1813 to 1855, and in the Court of Exchequer and Exchequer Chamber, from 1824 to 1855, are found in
The Regular and Authoritative Series of the English Common Law and English Exchequer Reports,

Which present the following claims to the support of the profession:
1. They are the only series issued as the authoritative and acknowledged medium by which the decisions of the Law Courts of England are made public.

2. They contain Later Reports than the Boston series, are more fully and more ably reported, and so arranged by preservation of the original paging, that reference by reporters, or by elementary writers, can be traced as readily as in the English editions.

Vol. 2, Ellis & Blackburne's (75 E. C. L. R.,) Reports (Q. B.) to January, 1854, was published by us in June, 1854. At that time the last Queen's Bench case printed in the Boston Law and Equity Reports, was of June 25, 1853. Our volume contained cases decided five months later. The Queen's Bench cases to November 25, 1853, were published in the Boston series in August, 1854, two months after we had distributed the same cases.

Vol. 3, Ellis & Blackburne, (77 E. C. L. R.,) with cases to the end of Trinity Term, 1854, was published when the latest case of Queen's Bench decisions in the Boston series, was of February 8, 1854, more than four months behind the regular reporters.

Exchequer Reports, vol. 9, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) distributed by us January 11, 1855, contains cases to May 10, 1854. The last Exchequer case then in the Boston series was decided February 9, 1854, four months behind the regular Reporter, issued in Philadelphia.

3. They contain more cases decided by the courts represented, than any other series issued in this country.

Vol. 77 English Common Law, (3 E. & B.,) reports eighty-six cases decided in the Queen's Bench since January 11, 1854, while but fifty-eight Queen's Bench cases, decided since January 1, 1854, are found scattered among Vols. 22, 24 and 25 of the Boston Law and Equity.

Vol. 78 E. C. L. K. (5 J. Scott,) reports sixty-five cases decided since Nov. 13, 1853, in the Common Pleas, while the L. & E. has but fifty-seven cases in that Court since the same period.

Vol. 9 Exchequer Reports, (Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon,) reports one hundred and ten cases in the Courts of Exchequer, decided since June 24, 1853, while since the same date, the L. & E. report but 107 cases, scattered through vols. 20, 22, 24 and 25.

4. They are almost exclusively cited in argument of counsel, and referred to by Elementary Writers for Law Authorities. See Smith's Leading Cases, Smith's Contracts, Smith's Landlord and Tenant, by Maude; Byles on Bills and Promissory Notes, Broom's Legal Maxims, Broom's Commentaries on the Laws of England, or almost any recent Law Book issued in England.

5. The Philadelphia Reports are edited by Judge Sharswood and by Judge Hare, whose labors as editors and authors have made them so well and so favorably known to the profession.

6. The Boston Law and Equity is made up in this country from the Law Journal, Jurist, Times and other Law periodicals, of a weekly, monthly, or quarterly character, and being unknown in England, is never cited in Court, or referred to by Law writers. The periodicals from which it is extracted, are occasionally cited under their own particular names, but they do not possess that permanent value, even in England, which is all-important in a series of Reports.

A carefully prepared and accurate Annual Digest of all the cases decided by the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Bench, and Exchequer, will be distributed, early in each year, to subscribers to either series, free of charge. That for 1854 is ready, and will be mailed to subscribers who have not received a copy.

IN PRESS AND IN PREPARATION.

Leading Cases on the Law relating to Real Property, Conveyancing, and the Construction of Wills, by Owen Davies Tudor, author of Leading Cases in Equity. With very full notes referring to American Decisions.

Broom's Commentaries on the Common Law, by author of Legal Maxims, and Parties to Actions, edited by Hon. Geo. Sharswood.

Smith's Law of Landlord and Tenant, by author of Leading Cases, with copious American notes by P. P. Morris, Esq.

Having purchased from the English Publishers, during the past year, early sheets of the three works above announced, we hope to issue improved American editions very soon after their completion in England.

Williams' Personal Property, edited by B. Gerard, Esq., to be ready in July.

Starkie on the Law of Evidence. Arranged and Annotated by Hon. Geo. Sharswood.

Digest of the Exchequer Reports, 35 vols. by Ass J. Fish, Esq.

Index to the English Common Law Reports, by Geo. W. Biddle and R. C. McMurtrie, Esqrs. 2 vols. 8vo.

VALUABLE REPORTS.
LITTLE, BROWN, & CO.

112 Washington Street, BOSTON,
Curtis's Supreme Court Decisions
THE DECISIONS OF THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES,

With notes and a Digest by Hon. Benjamin R. Curtis, one of the Associate Justices of the Court. In 22 volumes, octavo. Comprising the Cases reported by Dallas, 4 vols.; Cranch, 9 vols.; Wheaton, 12 vols.; Peters, 16 vols.; Howard, 17 vols.

The old series of these reports are in 57 volumes, the Catalogue price of which is $217 50. This edition in 22 volumes, is offered to subscribers at the low price of $3 a volume; thus bringing them within the means of all. The volumes are delivered as fast as issued, and it is intended that the whole work shall be completed early in 1856.

Vols. 1 to 15 are now ready.
We ask attention to the following approval by the members of the Supreme Court of the United States:

"We approve the plan of Mr. Justice Curtis's, 'Decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States,' and believe that its execution by him will be of much utility to the legal profession and to our country."

English Law and Equity Reports.

ENGLISH REPORTS IN LAW AND EQUITY. A Complete Collection of the Cases decided by the House of Lords, the Privy Council, the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas and Exchequer, the Lord Chancellor, the High Court of Appeal in Chancery, the Court of Criminal Appeal, and the Admiralty and Ecclesiastical Courts. Reprinted within a few weeks after the decisions are rendered.

This series has the merit of being complete, reliable, prompt, convenient, and cheap. It is now universally cited in the courts, and referred to in the recent law books as standard authority. All the cases reported in England, are here reprinted from the most reliable sources, as soon as they reach this country.

These Reports are now regularly digested in our Annual United States Digest, which thus embraces an annual digest of the whole English and American Law.

We have now in Preparation, and shall soon Publish,

A separate Digest of these Reports, embracing the first thirty-one volumes of the series, prepared with express reference to the convenience of the American profession, and exhibiting a complete synopsis of all the English Decisions reported in those volumes during the last five years; also a Table of Cases referring to all the contemporaneous English Reports. This will be the first Digest of English Decisions prepared expressly for the American Lawyer, and it is intended to give it the same advantages over the English Digests hitherto reprinted in this country, which the American text books have generally been found to possess over the English.

The Law and Equity Reports will be continued on the same plan as heretofore; the number of volumes being reduced to four per year; and Digests will be published from time to time as the convenience of the profession demands.

Vols. 1 to 31, now ready for delivery, at $2 00 per volume.

HERRING'S PATENT CHAMPION SAFES!
What the People Say!

PHILADELPHIA, 24 May, 1856.

MESSRS. FARRELS & HERRING—
GENTLEMEN—The Herring's Patent Champion Fire-Proof Safe, which we purchased of you in the month of January last, was situated in our Counting-Room, in the second story of 231 Market street, on the night of the Great Fire, 1st May, 1856, and fell with the burning building in that conflagration.

The Safe was reached this afternoon, after an exposure of THIRTY-SIX HOURS to intense heat, and although the brass plates on the front of the Safe were melted, and the exterior shows the evidence of extreme heat, the inside casing was found to be UNTOUCHED BY FIRE, and with the exception of being a little steamed is now as good as new.
EDW. SEMANS & CO.

MESSRS. FARRELS & HERRING—

GENTLEMEN—The Herring's Patent Champion Fire-Proof Safe, of your manufacture, which we purchased nearly a year since, was in the centre of our building at the time of its destruction in the Great Fire of May 1, 1856.

We had removed the greater part of our Books before the fire reached us, but left some of them, together with a number of loose papers, inside, purposely to test the security of the safe. After thirty-eight hours of severe roasting, we found the interior of the Safe, upon opening, not only bright and sound, but the Books and Papers as free from fire as when first put in.

We shall require another Safe as soon as we get a new location, and want none but your "Champion."
Yours, &c., FISHER & BROTHER,
No. 15 North Sixth street.

The public will bear in mind that the "HERRING'S PATENT" is the only Safe made in this City, which has never failed to preserve its contents in accidental fire.
The TWO SAFES from the above Great Fire can now be seen in front of the OLD STAND, No. 34 WALNUT STREET.

FOR DECEMBER TERM, 1856.

The term will commence on the 1st day of December 1856, with Motions and Arguments, which will continue four weeks, and terminate on the 27th day of December, 1856. The ensuing nine weeks are fixed for

JURY TRIALS.

First Period, three weeks from Dec. 29th, 1856, to Jan. 17th, 1857, inclusive.

Second Period, three weeks from Jan. 19th, 1857, to Feb. 7th, 1857, inclusive.

Third Period, three weeks from Feb. 9th, 1857, to Feb. 28th, 1857, inclusive.

The VENIRE for the First Period, will issue on November 27th, 1856.

The VENIRE for the Second Period, will issue on Dec. 18th, 1856.

The VENIRE for the Third Period, will issue on Jan. 8th, 1857.

Causes entitled to be placed upon the First Period, must be at issue on or before November 26th, 1856.

Second Period, must be at issue on or before Dec. 17th, 1856.

Third Period, must be at issue on or before Jan. 7th, 1857.

RULE LXVII. No cause shall be placed on the Trial List until after issue joined, nor without the written order of one of the parties or his counsel. Nor shall any cause be placed on the Trial List for any period, unless the same shall be at issue before the issuing of the venire for such period. It shall be the duty of the Prothonotary, at least thirty days before the commencement of any period appropriated to the trial of causes by jury to make out a complete list of all causes entitled to be placed on the Trial List for such period; and none of the causes on such list shall be continued to another term unless at the joint request of the Counsel, signified by writing filed with the Prothonotary at least three weeks before the commencement of such period.

It is the duty of the Prothonotary at least thirty days before the commencement of any period appropriated to the trial of causes by jury, to make out and deliver to the Sheriff the venire for such period.

RULE OF COURT, June 6, 1848. Ordered, That any party intending to tax costs before the Prothonotary, shall give him and the opposite party twenty-four hours notice of such intention—the time to be fixed for such taxation shall be from one to three o'clock, P. M.

RULE OF COURT, March 7, 1849. Ordered. That hereafter the Prothonotary shall issue no capias ad respondendum endorsed with bail in more than $500, without a special allocatur from one of the Judges.

RULE OF COURT, December 27, 1851. Ordered. That in every case of a bill of Exceptions it shall be the duty of the party presenting the Bill, within twenty days thereafter, to have the same settled by the Judge before whom the case was tried on forty-eight hours' notice, with a copy of the bill served on the opposite party, otherwise the Judge shall not be required to seal the same. Provided, That the rule now in force, requiring the bill to be presented within ten days be not affected by the adoption of this rule.

ORDERED:—May 28, 1853. That the Rules of this Court, as printed by A. Walker, in his book of Court Rules, the present year, be and they are hereby adopted and published as the Rules of this Court, from and after the first Monday of June next: and all other Rules heretofore made, are hereby repealed from that time.

ORDERED:—July 28, 1855. That no cases shall be placed on the Trial List for September Term, 1855, unless especially ordered on, by entry on the Trial Order Book, to be kept by the Prothonotary, and that, until otherwise directed by the Court, all cases once ordered on the Trial List, shall be continued thereon, from term to term, until disposed of, or withdrawn.

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND.

INTEREST FIVE PER CENT, PER ANNUM.

ALL SUMS OF MONEY RETURNED ON DEMAND.

OFFICE, NEXT DOOR TO THE POST OFFICE;

No. 83 Dock Street,

PHILADELPHIA, 1854.

THE STATE SAVINGS FUND, No. 83 DOCK Street, next door to THIRD Street, and adjoining the POST OFFICE, receives MONEY on deposit daily, from 9 in the morning until 3 in the afternoon; also Monday evenings, from 7 to 9 o'clock. Interest is allowed on deposits at the rate of FIVE PER CENT per annum. Deposits will be returned in whole, or in part, on demand, without notice.

The popularity of this Office with all classes of the community, both in town and country, and its consequent success, may be ascribed, in part, to the following substantial reasons:

1st. It offers a convenient, responsible, and profitable Depository to Executors, Administrators, Assignees, Collectors, Agents, and all public officers—to Attorneys, Trustees, Societies and Associations, whether incorporated or otherwise—to married or single ladies—to Students, Merchants, Clerks, and business men generally—to Mechanics, Farmers, Minors of either sex, and all who have funds, much or little, to deposit, where they may be had at any time, with Five Per Cent interest added.

2d. Depositors receive Books, with an abstract of the By-laws and regulations, in which is entered their deposits, which Books serve as vouchers. They may designate in case of sickness, death, or absence, who shall receive their deposits, without the intervention of Executors or Administrators. Any one or more persons may deposit in his, her, or their name, or for any other person or persons.

3d. A Report is made each year to the Legislature and Councils of the City.

4th. The Officers are sworn before they enter upon their duties, in addition to giving Bonds with surties.

5th. The State Savings Fund is a real Savings Fund—not an Insurance and Trust Company. The Charter of this Institution avoids the Insurance business.

6th. Deposits may be withdrawn by checks after the manner customary with Banks. Check Books will be furnished to depositors without charge.

GEORGE H. HART, President.
CHAS. G. IMLAY, Treasurer.

Law School of the University at Cambridge, Mass.

The instructors in this school are HON. JOEL PARKER, LL. D., Royal Professor. HON. THEOPHILUS PARSONS, LL. D., Dane Professor. HON. EMERY WASHBURN, LL. D., University Professor.

The course of instruction embraces the various branches of the Common Law, and of Equity, Admiralty, Commercial, International and Constitutional Law, and the Jurisprudence of the United States. The Law Library consists of about 14,000 volumes, and as new works appear they are added and every effort is made to render it complete.

Instruction is given by oral lectures and expositions, (and by recitations and examinations, in connection with them,) of which there are ten every week. Two Moot Courts are also holden in each week, at each of which a cause, previously given out, is argued by four students, and an opinion delivered by the presiding instructor. Rooms and other facilities are also provided for the Club Courts; and an Assembly is held weekly for practice in debate, and acquiring a knowledge of Parliamentary law and proceedings.

Students may enter the school in any stage of their professional studies or mercantile pursuits, and at the commencement of either term, or in the middle, or other part of a term. They are at liberty to select what studies they will pursue according to their view of their own wants and attainments.

The Academical year, which commences on Thursday, six weeks after the third Wednesday in July, is divided into two terms, of twenty weeks each, with a vacation of six weeks at the end of each term.

During the winter vacation, the Library is opened, warmed and lighted, for the use of the members of the school.

Applications for admission, or for Catalogues, or any further information, may be made to either of the Professors at Cambridge.

LAW BOOKSELLERS, PUBLISHERS AND IMPORTERS.

17 AND 19 SOUTH FIFTH STREET,

First Door above Chestnut.

Kay & Brother respectfully invite the attention of the members of the Legal Profession to the following invaluable publications, and solicit them to call and examine their select stock of Law Books.

JUST PUBLISHED.

HARRIS' REPORTS OF THE SUPREME COURT OF PENNSYLVANIA. Vol. XII. By George W. Harris.

KAY & BROTHER beg leave to announce that they have become the sole publishers of Harris' Reports, of which eleven volumes have been already issued. They have just published the twelfth and last volume of the series, which fills up the interval between Harris' and Casey's Reports, which they also publish. The difficulty in obtaining, when and as wanted, the various volumes of Harris' Reports, will in future be obviated, as regular and full supplies of them all will be kept constantly on hand and for sale.

CASEY'S PENNSYLVANIA STATE REPORTS, VOL. 1.—Pennsylvania State Reports, Vol. XXV, containing reports of cases adjudged by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, by Joseph Casey, Esq., State Reporter. This volume contains the cases decided in part of May Term, 1855; in October Terms, 1856, and part of January Term, 1856. It will be the joint endeavor of the Reporter and Publisher to issue the respective volumes as speedily as possible, after the determination of the cases which each volume will contain, and thus to remove a serious ground of complaint on the part of the bar. Subscribers wanted for a single volume or the entire series.

BRIGHTLY'S PURDON'S ANNUAL DIGEST, FOR THE YEARS 1854, 1855, and 1856—on the plan and in continuation of Stroud & Brightly's Purdon, 1700 to 1853. Annual Digest of the Laws of Pennsylvania for each of the years 1854, 1855 and 1856, namely, from 28 May, 1853, to 15 May, 1856, together with some laws inadvertently omitted in Purdon's Digest, 1700 to 1853; Marginal References; a Digested Syllabus of each Title; Foot Notes to the Judicial Decisions; and a full and exhaustive Index, in which the contents of all the annual Digests are incorporated in one alphabet. The whole completing Stroud & Brightly's Purdon's Digest to the present time. By Frederick C. Brightly, Esq., author of the "Law of Costs," "Equity Jurisprudence," Editor of Purdon's Digest, &c. Price only Fifty cents.

PREPARING FOR PUBLICATION.

SERGEANT ON THE MECHANIC'S LIEN LAW—second edition, in 1 vol., 8vo., of 300 to 500 pages. Edited by E. Spencer Miller, Esquire, Counsellor at Law and Professor of the law of Real Estate, Conveyancing and Equity Jurisprudence in the Law Department of the University of Pennsylvania. The Statutes and Decisions, since 1839, (when the first edition was published) have so radically affected this branch of the law, that an entirely new arrangement has been adopted, and a much larger volume will be required than that originally published. The editor and publishers will make every effort to present to the Bar a treatise which will exhaust the law upon this subject, as far as it has been announced, and which will be found practically useful to the profession. It will contain Precedents of Forms carefully prepared, with a view to the latest aspects of the law; and also, all the acts of Assembly relating to the subject. The table of cases and index will be elaborate and exhaustive.

BURTON ON THE LAW OF REAL PROPERTY—AN Elementary Compendium of the law of Real Property, by Walter Henry Burton, Esq., late one of the Fellows on Mr. Viner's foundation for the study of the Common Law in the University of Oxford, with notes, showing the alterations in the law to the present time, to which is now prefixed an introductory chapter, giving a concise historical outline of such parts of the law as have been the subject of statutory alteration, by Edward Priestly Cooper, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister at Law. From the last (the eighth) London edition, with full American annotations. By Charles Goepff, Esq. 1 vol., 8vo.

GOWEN ON WILLS.—In 2 vol's 8vo., of 700 pages each.

Vol. I.—Execution and Probate of Wills.

Vol. II.—Construction of Wills.

A Treatise on the Law of Wills and Testamentary Dispositions in the United States. By James E. Gowen, Esq., of the Philadelphia Bar.

A DIGEST OF THE LAWS OF THE UNITED STATES on the plan of Purdon's Digest, 1700 to 1856.—Kay & Brother beg leave to announce that they have, in course of preparation, a Digest of the Laws of the United States, by F. C. Brightly, Esq., editor of Purdon's Digest, &c., &c., which will be compiled on the model, which, in the case of their eighth edition of Purdon's Digest, has given so much satisfaction to the Legal Profession and the Public.

CASEY'S PENNSYLVANIA STATE REPORTS, VOL. II.

THALBERG'S CONCERTS.

This Evening, at the Musical Fund Hall, in addition to his own unrivalled performance on the piano, Mr. Thalberg offers a new attraction in Madame D'Augri, a Contralto of great power and excellent cultivation...

This judgment has been sustained by the New Yorkers who have had the pleasure of hearing her. The Last Concert of M. Thalberg will take place to-morrow evening, at the same place, when Madame D'Angri will again appear.

Legal Intelligencer.

VOL. XIII.

PHILADELPHIA, FRIDAY, DECEMBER 19, 1856.

No. 51.

A NEW FEATURE.

A portion of our columns under an appropriate heading, will in future be devoted to the publication of notes of all the Decisions of the Courts of this country as well as Europe, in cases involving the liabilities and rights of Banks, Insurance and Railroad Companies, and other Corporations and their Stockholders, and important heads of Commercial Law, as Partnership, Agency, Carriers, Insurance, &c., &c.

The frequent issue of our publication will enable us to keep our subscribers fully posted as to Legislative and Judicial action on these subjects, by the publication of all Laws and Decisions, at the earliest moment after their promulgation. The obviously great advantage which this review in this form will afford the officers and stockholders in all these corporations, as well as the business community throughout the Union, will, we hope, induce an extensive addition to our subscription list among them.

It will also furnish the professors of the law in other States, additional reasons for availing themselves of the great advantages offered to them by this publication, which experience alone can enable them fully to appreciate.

AGENCY.

[Supreme Court of New York.]

Dykens v. Townsend.

Agency—Statute of Frauds—Sales of.

An agency to purchase stock for another is not required by law to be in writing. And although the contract of purchase when made must be evidenced by some written note or memorandum, the name of the principal need not be mentioned in it; nor need it be signed by the agent as agent; it is sufficient to show that in signing he acted as agent, and that he had the requisite power to bind his principal. An omission to name the principal in such cases, renders the agent liable as principal, but does not exempt the actual principal when discovered. Parol evidence is admissible to show that the person signing the memorandum, acted as the agent of the defendant.

This is adverse in part to the decision of the Superior Court, in Fenly v. Stewart, 5 Sandford, 101.

PARTNERSHIP.

Rabl v. Muller.

Partnership—Confession of judgment.

Muller gave a written confession of judgment, and a written authority to enter it against him "as one of the late firm of Thorn & Muller."

Held, that to bind him "as one of the firm," meant to bind not only him individually, but the partnership property. This was done by entering it against both partners.

BILL OF LADING.

[Supreme Court of Vermont.]

Davis and Aubin v. Bradley.

Transfer of inland bill of lading and advances thereon.

Where the forwarding merchant gives a shipper's receipt, or inland bill of lading for goods shipped on board a boat, in Lake Champlain, acknowledging to have received them to be forwarded to the consignee by name; and this is sent forward to the consignee, and they make advances upon the faith of it, the title and possession of the goods are thereby so far vested in the consignee, that they are not liable to attachment, upon the consignor's debt, or if so, only subject to the consignee's liens for advances.

Such a transaction constitutes what is denominated a symbolical delivery of the goods to the consignee, from the time of the delivery to the forwarding merchant, provided the bill of lading be forwarded, and advances made in the due course of business, and without any knowledge or just ground of suspicion, that the consignment has been revoked or intercepted.

BILLS AND NOTES.

Bowen and M'Namee v. Buck and Warren.
Promissory note—Illegality by misrepresentation.

This is an action upon a promissory note against principal and surety. The defence was, that the defendant, Buck, was induced to give the note, and to procure the other defendant to sign, as surety, by representations made by the plaintiffs, that they had taken steps to arrest the defendant, Buck, and carry him into the state of New York for trial, upon a charge of obtaining goods by false pretences, the note being executed for the agreed price of such goods, which had been before that time purchased of the plaintiffs by Buck, upon credit.

Held, a sufficient defence, and available for both defendants, it constituting illegality and not duress.

Commercial Bank v. Strong.

Bill of exchange—Notice to indorser.

Action against the indorser of a bill of exchange, drawn and indorsed in Vermont, payable at a bank in New York. The question was on the sufficiency of notice to defendant, of the dishonor of the bill. The plaintiff's business was transacted chiefly by the cashier and three clerks. It was the especial business of the first clerk to make out and have properly delivered, all notices of dishonor of bills and notes. He made the proper notice, and directed it in proper time to defendant, and deposited it upon his desk, to which no persons had access but the officers of the bank. This was the proper and usual plan of depositing letters for delivery to the post-office. It was the especial duty of the youngest clerk to deliver all letters at the post-office, which he always did when at home, and in his absence, the duty devolved upon the next senior clerk. The first clerk testified that the letter was taken from his desk the day it was made, and in proper time for the post-office. The other clerks both testified that they uniformly took all letters to the post-office the same day, and if they took this letter from the desk, they carried it directly to the post-office.

Held, sufficient notice.

Heirs of Sawyer v. The Estate of Sawyer.

Wearing apparel, what is.

The deceased was a captain in the U. S. Navy at the time of his death. The statute of this state gives the wearing apparel of the husband to the widow.

The deceased left a widow, but no children. A controversy arose between the collateral heirs and the widow, in regard to certain articles, being wearing apparel of the husband, as the watch, chain, key and seals, and guard, breast-pin, finger-ring, epaulette, military coat, dress-sword, and sword-belt, all which the deceased had been accustomed to wear, whenever, by the regulations of the navy, he was required to appear in full dress.

The court were divided in opinion, a majority holding that the coat, epaulette, and pin, only, are to be regarded as wearing apparel, within the statute.

A. W. RAND'S SELF-CLEANING FURNACE.

Baynton's Patent.

Having put up a large number of these Furnaces, both in public and private buildings, (including 24 put up at the Philadelphia County Prison, in place of the 44 torn out,) and tested them during the cold weather of 1855, and 1856, being the coldest weather we have had for twenty or thirty years. They have given the most universal satisfaction, and those having them in use were perfectly delighted with the abundance of warm, pleasant air, and abundant ventilation afforded thereby, while so many were suffering from cold, and troubled with the deficiencies of their heating apparatus.

We take great pleasure, therefore, in recommending them to the notice of the public, and would call their attention particularly to an examination of the greatly increased amount of effective radiating surface, their perfect solidity and durability, the improved manner of making the joints, entirely preventing any escape of gases, and the manner of distributing the fire, so as to cause it to impinge directly against the large amount of surface, without the objectionable and unnatural method of forcing the current downwards.

We have also a full assortment of HAYES' PATENT TUBULAR OVEN RANGES, now so universally used, and favorably known. Also, HAYES' PATENT VENTILLATORS, &c., &c., all of which will be put up in the very best manner, and by the most skillful workmen, constantly engaged for that purpose, by

The Bank of Cash Credits.

Application will be made to the Legislature of Pennsylvania, for the Charter of a Bank Issue with general banking privileges, with a capital of ONE MILLION OF DOLLARS. Said Bank to be located in the City of Philadelphia, to be called the "Robert Morris Bank," and to be conducted upon the system of cash credits only, as is herewith indicated.

A cash credit is a credit given to an individual by a Banking Company, for a limited sum, seldom under $500, or $1000, upon his own security and that of two or three individuals, approved by the Bank, who become sureties for its payment. The individual who has obtained such a credit, is enabled to draw the whole sum, or any part of it, when he pleases; replacing it, or portions of it, according as he finds it convenient; interest being charged upon such part only as he draws out.

*If a man borrows $1000, from a private hand, and even then it is not always to be found when required, he pays interest for it, whether he be using it or not. His bank credit costs him nothing, except during the moment it is of service to him, and this circumstance is of equal advantage as if he had borrowed money at a much lower rate of interest."

Cash credits are not, however, intended to be a dead load; the main objects of the Banks in granting them is to get their notes circulated, and they do not grant them except to persons in business, or to those who are frequently drawing out and paying in money.

Any person who applies to a bank for a cash credit, is called upon to produce sureties, and, after a full inquiry into the character of the applicant, the nature of his business, and the sufficiency of his securities, he is allowed to open a credit, and to draw upon the Bank for the whole of its amount, or for such part as his daily transaction may require. To the credit of the account, he pays in such sums as he may not have occasion to use, and interest is charged or credited upon the balance, as the case may be. From the facility which these cash credits give to all the small transactions of the country, and from the opportunities which they afford to persons who begin business with little or no capital but their character, to employ profitably the minutest products of their industry, it cannot be doubted that the most important advantages are derived in the whole community.

Such privileges and immunities as the "Metropolitan Bank of New York" exercises, will be applied for.

Second Period, three weeks from Jan. 19th, 1857, to Feb. 7th, 1857, inclusive.

Third Period, three weeks from Feb. 9th, 1857, to Feb. 28th, 1857, inclusive.

The VENIRE for the First Period, will issue on November 27th, 1856.

The VENIRE for the Second Period, will issue on Dec. 18th, 1856.

The VENIRE for the Third Period, will issue on Jan. 8th, 1857.

Causes entitled to be placed upon the First Period, must be at issue on or before November 26th, 1856.

Second Period, must be at issue on or before Dec. 17th, 1856.

Third Period, must be at issue on or before Jan. 7th, 1857.

RULE LXVII. No cause shall be placed on the Trial List until after issue joined, nor without the written order of one of the parties or his counsel. Nor shall any cause be placed on the Trial List for any period, unless the same shall be at issue before the issuing of the venire for such period. It shall be the duty of the Prothonotary, at least thirty days before the commencement of any period appropriated to the trial of causes by jury to make out a complete list of all causes entitled to be placed on the Trial List for such period; and none of the causes on such list shall be continued to another term unless at the joint request of the Counsel, signified by writing filed with the Prothonotary at least three weeks before the commencement of such period.

It is the duty of the Prothonotary at least thirty days before the commencement of any period appropriated to the trial of causes by jury, to make out and deliver to the Sheriff the venire for such period.

RULE OF COURT, June 6, 1848. Ordered, That any party intending to tax costs before the Prothonotary, shall give him and the opposite party twenty-four hours notice of such intention—the time to be fixed for such taxation shall be from one to three o'clock, P. M.

RULE OF COURT, March 7, 1849. Ordered. That hereafter the Prothonotary shall issue no capias ad respondendum endorsed with bail in more than $500, without a special allocatur from one of the Judges.

RULE OF COURT, December 27, 1851. Ordered. That in every case of a bill of Exceptions it shall be the duty of the party presenting the Bill, within twenty days thereafter, to have the same settled by the Judge before whom the case was tried on forty-eight hours' notice, with a copy of the bill served on the opposite party, otherwise the Judge shall not be required to seal the same. Provided, That the rule now in force, requiring the bill to be presented within ten days be not affected by the adoption of this rule.

ORDERED:—May 28, 1853. That the Rules of this Court, as printed by A. Walker, in his book of Court Rules, the present year, be and they are hereby adopted and published as the Rules of this Court, from and after the first Monday of June next; and all other Rules heretofore made, are hereby repealed from that time.

ORDERED:—July 28, 1855. That no cases shall be placed on the Trial List for September Term, 1855, unless especially ordered on, by entry on the Trial Order Book, to be kept by the Prothonotary, and that, until otherwise directed by the Court, all cases once ordered on the Trial List, shall be continued thereon, from term to term, until disposed of, or withdrawn.

Legal Intelligencer.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 26, 1856.

PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY.

By KING & BAIRD, No. 9 Sansom Street,
AT TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, IN ADVANCE.
HENRY E. WALLACE, Editor.

The present number closes the 13th volume of our paper. While returning thanks for the liberal encouragement our efforts to establish the Intelligencer on a respectable footing have met with from the Bench and Bar, we take occasion to say that our utmost efforts shall be exerted to make the next volume still more worthy of their support.

With increased facilities and somewhat enlarged experience, we shall be enabled to furnish a sheet which every Lawyer in the Union will find it his interest to sustain, while a glance at our table of cases, shows that it is the cheapest Law Publication in the world. As an early and reliable informant of those changes which Legislative action and Judicial construction are constantly effecting in the jurisprudence of the country, our weekly issue and our convenient form for preservation give us great advantages. To the end that these advantages may be fully developed, we invite the co-operation of the Bench and Bar throughout the Union in aid of our enterprise, by furnishing us with such items of legal intelligence as may be calculated to interest and benefit the profession, as well as in furthering our efforts to extend our circulation.

We take the liberty to send the present number to many gentlemen whom we suppose unacquainted with the paper, and to request that all who receive it will do us the favor to call the attention of their professional friends and neighbors to the advantages it affords. We will send the paper for six months, on receipt of the sum of one dollar, to all who desire a trial on the merits before becoming permanent subscribers.

As a vehicle for advertisements directed to the legal profession, our columns are unusually advantageous, while our terms are exceedingly low.

CITY BUSINESS MEN AND MERCHANTS,
Will find the Legal Intelligencer largely promotive of their SAFETY and convenience by furnishing certain information of all legal proceedings affecting their interests, whether as owners, of real estate, judgment-creditors, mortgagees, ground rent landlords, or otherwise interested in Sheriff's sales, or in other legal proceedings of any and every character, while its information on all matters of Mercantile Law will be found exceedingly useful, and not devoid of interest to all intelligent business men.

TO REPORTERS.

We are desirous to make arrangements for procuring for our paper early and correct Reports of all authoritative Decisions on points appropriate to our new feature of Mercantile and Railroad Law—in the Courts of all the States in the Union—and should be pleased to hear from gentlemen disposed to furnish us with them, as to terms, &c. We should prefer in all cases a copy of the Judge's opinion, with as short a statement of the case as comports with entire intelligibility, without argument of counsel or syllabus. Occasional reports of trials of unusual interest will also be acceptable.

THALBERG'S CONCERT

To-morrow evening we are to be favoured with another concert in which the distinguished artists Mad. D'Angre, and Mad. De Wilkoret, will appear, with a full orchestra under direction of L. Meignen, Esq. Mr. Thalberg will perform Beethoven's Grand Concerto in C. minor, with full accompaniments. We think the orchestra will be found a decided improvement, and hope that no concerts will in future be given without one.

OLIVER TWIST BY CHAS. DICKENS, (BOZ.)

These two volumes form the seventh and eighth of Peterson's duodecimo edition of the works of this popular author, and are if possible, an improvement in paper and typography upon the former volumes of the series. Peterson is determined to give his customers the full worth of their money, as this most convenient, excellent and exceedingly cheap edition amply substantiate. We recommend it as the best Library Edition extant.

We are hurried to Press without correction this week in consequence of derangement of machinery, which will excuse errors.

LEGAL INTELLIGENCER CONDENSED.

Those of our subscribers desirous to have the valuable matter of the back volumes of the Legal in octavo form at subscription price, will please send in their names at once. The work is ready for delivery next week.

District Court.

Opinions by Judge Hare.

GARRETT v. CUMMINS.

Landlord and Tenant—Eviction—Set-off.

This was a suit brought by an executor for rent due to the testator, in his life time. The defence was rested on the double, and not very consistent allegation, that the landlord had, and had not, taken measures to put the demised premises in tenable order; that he had not entered to put up the fences, which were down, and had entered, to extend a wharf, which had been cut off from the river, by the operations of the West Chester Railroad Company, sufficiently far to give those who used it, access to deep water. The former ground was over-ruled by the court; the latter has been sustained by the verdict of the jury; and being good, in point of law, must stand where the verdict has placed it. A landlord has no right to enter on the demised premises, without the consent of the tenant, for the purpose of making repairs, or for any other purpose; and although it may well have been, that consent was given in the present instance, yet the plaintiff must submit to the consequences of his testator's indiscretion, in not taking proper means to perpetuate the fact, by proof. It has, however, been said, and was objected at the trial, that an entry, by a landlord, on the demised premises, followed by an entire, or partial dispossession of the tenant, is a trespass, which should be made the ground of a separate action, and cannot operate as a set-off, or defalcation. It is undoubtedly true, that such a wrong is a trespass, but then, it is also a breach of contract, and the tenant is entitled to view it in either aspect, as best suits his purposes. Pleading as an eviction, it will be a defence, by showing a failure of the consideration of an entire contract, which the law will not apportion in favor of the wrongdoer: pleaded as a breach of the stipulation for quiet enjoyment, implied in every lease, it falls within the act of 1705, and will authorize the jury, not only to find a verdict for the defendant, but to assess damages in his favor, if the injury which he has sustained, exceeds the demand of the plaintiff. The notice of set-off in this case, was unquestionably informal, and should have specified distinctly, that the defendant meant to rely on the entry of the landlord, as a breach of contract, and not as a mere trespass. But as it disclosed a good defence in substance, the plaintiff should have drawn the legal inference, which the defendant omitted, or have asked for explanation, if he was in doubt. The motion for a new trial, is consequently refused.

IRWIN v. SEIPLE.

Agency.

The well known rule, that the authority of a special agent, does not extend beyond the subject-matter of his agency, is sufficient to dispose of the question now before us, which is simply, whether a salesman, authorized to sell goods on credit, has power to collect the debt, at or before the period when it falls due. A power to sell, is not a power to receive payment, although the latter power may be implied, from the circumstances under which the former is given or exercised. Thus, an agent, duly authorized to sell, who is also invested with the possession, or control, of the property to be sold, and expressly or impliedly empowered to deliver it to the purchaser, may unquestionably, give an acquittance for the purchase money; but this results, not from his authority to sell, but to deliver, which necessarily implies, a right to insist on payment, as a condition precedent to delivery. But no such inference can be drawn, with regard to a sale made on credit, especially when, as in the present instance, the goods are delivered by the principal. It is, however, undoubtedly true, that a special authority may be enlarged by the nature of the office, or employment, of the agent; as when an attorney is employed to conduct a case, or goods are sent to a factor, or commission merchant; and the defendant in this case, seems to have supposed, that he brought his case within this principle, by proving that the agent, whose authority was in question, was a salesman, employed and paid by the plaintiff. This idea, however, carries its own refutation along with it; for it can hardly be necessary to adduce arguments to show, that the collection of a debt, is a difficult thing, from the transaction in which the debt originates. The motion for a new trial, is refused.

FRICKE v. RUCH.

Payment—Set-off.

The defendant in this case, contended, with a pertinacity worthy of a better cause, that various notes, given prior to the 6th of October, 1854, and which were, for the greater part, long anterior in date, were a good defence to a note given on that day, and to a claim for goods, which had nearly all been sold, at subsequent periods. Whether this defence be regarded as a payment, or as a set-off, and it was presented in both aspects, it is equally untenable: as a payment, because goods are seldom paid for before they are bought, as a set-off, because a note, given by a defendant to a plaintiff, and produced by the defendant, is no evidence of a set-off. The motion for a new trial, is consequently refused.

PASCHALL v. COX.

Trust—Equity.

The trust in this case, was fully executed in the sense in which the term is applied in equity, to those fiduciary relations, which impose no further duty on the trustee, except the simple one of making a conveyance to his cestui que trusts. If rent be collected by the trustee, under these circumstances, he must answer for it, either in equity, or at law, at the option of those for whom he has officiously chosen to act. The motion for a new trial, is refused; and judgment entered for the plaintiff, on the point reserved.

PAYNE v. PILLING.

New Trial—Weight of Evidence.

Had the garnishee, in this case, been able to adduce a spark of evidence, that the admission on which the jury have acted, was the result of mistake, surprise, or any other cause, which would justify the interposition of the court, we should have been glad to protect him from the results of his own indiscretion. But, as nothing of this sort was shown, or could reasonably be alleged, the jury were obliged to choose at the trial, between two different accounts, each inconsistent with the other, and each by the same person. They have exercised their undoubted prerogative, by taking that which makes against him; and we should exceed a just use of ours, by disturbing their verdict. That one statement has the sanction of an oath, which the other wants, makes little difference, in a case where the question turns on the credibility of a witness who was giving evidence in his own cause, for both were deliberate, and made under circumstances which required exactness. It might, indeed, be argued, that the garnishee is equitably estopped from withdrawing an admission, on the faith of which the plaintiff has incurred the expense of issuing an attachment, and which may have led him to forego other means of payment. But viewed simply as evidence, there is quite enough to warrant the verdict of the jury; and the motion for a new trial, is consequently refused.

A T AN ORPHANS' COURT FOR THE CITY AND COUNTY OF PHILADELPHIA, held at Philadelphia on the fifth day of December, A. D. 1856.

In the matter of the Estate of HANNAH GILL, deceased.

It appearing to the Court that the Rule heretofore granted to take or refuse the Real Estate of said Decedent at the respective valuations returned by the Sheriff's Inquest, had been duly served on the heirs, and on all persons interested, and none of such heirs or persons interested appearing at the time designated by such Rule, viz., at the present sessions of the said Court, to take the said Real Estate at the aforesaid valuations, On motion of James W. Paul, Esq., Attorney for John S. Benzet, the Petitioner, the Court granted a Rule upon the other heirs and persons interested, to show cause why the Real Estate so appraised should not be sold. Rule returnable at the sessions of the said Court to be held on the second day of January, A. D. 1857.

By the Court.

Sheriff's Sales.

Abstract of Properties sold by Geo. McGee, Esq., Sheriff, on Monday, January 6, at Sanson Street Hall, at 4 o'clock, P. M.

Conditions of Sale.

Fifty dollars of the price or sum at which the property shall be struck off, shall be paid to the Sheriff at the time of sale, unless the purchase money shall be less than that sum, in which case only the purchase money shall be paid.

Otherwise the property will again be immediately put up, and sold. The balance of the purchase money must be paid to the Sheriff, at his office within ten days from the time of sale, without any demand being made by the Sheriff, therefor. Otherwise the property may be sold again at the expense and risk of the person to whom it is struck off, who, in case of any deficiency at such re-sale, shall make good the same. Arrears of Ground Rent and taxes, if any, will be paid out of the purchase money, if the bills are presented to the Sheriff before he parts with the money; otherwise they will be paid by the purchaser.

KAY & BROTHER,

LAW BOOKSELLERS, PUBLISHERS AND IMPORTERS 17 AND 19 SOUTH FIFTH STREET, First Door above Chestnut.

Kay & Brother respectfully invite the attention of the members of the Legal Profession to the following invaluable publications, and solicit them to call and examine their select stock of Law Books.

JUST PUBLISHED. HARRIS' REPORTS OF THE SUPREME COURT OF PENNSYLVANIA. Vol. XII. By George W. Harris.

KAY & BROTHER beg leave to announce that they have become the sole publishers of Harris' Reports, of which eleven volumes have been already issued. They have just published the twelfth and last volume of the series, which fills up the interval between Harris' and Casey's Reports, which they also publish. The difficulty in obtaining, when and as wanted, the various volumes of Harris' Reports, will in future be obviated, as regular and full supplies of them all will be kept constantly on hand and for sale.

CASEY'S PENNSYLVANIA STATE REPORTS. Vol. I.—Pennsylvania State Reports, Vol. XXV., containing reports of cases adjudged by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, by Joseph Casey, Esq., State Reporter. This volume contains the cases decided in part of May Term, 1855; in October Terms, 1856, and part of January Term, 1856. It will be the joint endeavor of the Reporter and Publisher to issue the respective volumes as speedily as possible, after the determination of the cases which each volume will contain, and thus to remove a serious ground of complaint on the part of the bar. Subscribers wanted for a single volume or the entire series.

BRIGHTLY'S PURDON'S ANNUAL DIGEST, FOR THE YEARS 1854, 1855, and 1856—on the plan and in continuation of Stroud & Brightly's Purdon, 1700 to 1853. Annual Digest of the Laws of Pennsylvania for each of the years 1854, 1855 and 1856, namely, from 28 May, 1853, to 15 May, 1856, together with some laws inadvertently omitted in Purdon's Digest, 1700 to 1853; Marginal References; a Digested Syllabus of each Title; Foot Notes to the Judicial Decisions; and a full and exhaustive Index, in which the contents of all the annual Digests are incorporated in one alphabet. The whole completing Stroud & Brightly's Purdon's Digest to the present time. By Frederick C. Brightly, Esq., author of the "Law of Costs," "Equity Jurisprudence," Editor of Purdon's Digest, &c. Price only Fifty cents.

PREPARING FOR PUBLICATION. SERGEANT ON THE MECHANIC'S LIEN LAW—second edition, in 1 vol., 8vo., of 300 to 500 pages. Edited by E. Spencer Miller, Esquire, Counsellor at Law and Professor of the Law of Real Estate, Conveyancing and Equity Jurisprudence in the Law Department of the University of Pennsylvania. The Statutes and Decisions, since 1839, (when the first edition was published) have so radically affected this branch of the law, that an entirely new arrangement has been adopted, and a much larger volume will be required than that originally published. The editor and publishers will make every effort to present to the Bar a treatise which will exhaust the law upon this subject, as far as it has been announced, and which will be found practically useful to the profession. It will contain Precedents of Forms carefully prepared, with a view to the latest aspects of the law; and also, all the acts of Assembly relating to the subject. The table of cases and index will be elaborate and exhaustive.

BURTON ON THE LAW OF REAL PROPERTY—An Elementary Compendium of the law of Real Property, by Walter Henry Burton, Esq., late one of the Fellows on Mr. Viner's foundation for the study of the Common Law in the University of Oxford, with notes, showing the alterations in the law to the present time, to which is now prefixed an introductory chapter, giving a concise historical outline of such parts of the law as have been the subject of statutory alteration, by Edward Priestly Cooper, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barister at Law. From the last (the eighth) London edition, with full American annotations. By Charles Goepp, Esq. 1 vol., 8vo.

GWEN ON WILLS.—In 2 vols. 8vo., of 700 pages each. Vol. I.—Execution and Probate of Wills. Vol. II.—Construction of Wills. A Treatise on the Law of Wills and Testamentary Dispositions in the United States. By James E. Gowen, Esq., of the Philadelphia Bar.

A DIGEST OF THE LAWS OF THE UNITED STATES on the plan of Purdon's Digest, 1700 to 1856.—Kay & Brother beg leave to announce that they have, in course of preparation, a Digest of the Laws of the United States, by F. C. Brightly, Esq., editor of Purdon's Digest, &c., &c., which will be compiled on the model, which, in the case of their eighth edition of Purdon's Digest, has given so much satisfaction to the Legal Profession and the Public.

CASEY'S PENNSYLVANIA STATE REPORTS, Vol. II. N. B.—Catalogues cheerfully furnished upon application.

KAY & BROTHER. LAW BOOKSELLERS, PUBLISHERS AND IMPORTERS 17 and 19, South Fifth Street, first store above Chestnut. July 4.
