Inspiring Performance Given "The Messiah" By First United Church Choir

It is the experience of most choral organizations anywhere that the "Messiah" attracts more attention than any other oratorio. This has been the experience here, too, and the large attendance last evening at the First United Church, when the amalgamated choir of this church rendered this work once more was a manifest as to its present king, Jackson Hanby and his faithful choir can never err in producing Handel's great oratorio each winter season.

PRINCIPALS
The principals are all favorably known on the coast, there being Mrs. W. H. Wilson and Ada Wise, who shared the soprano parts, Norah Jones, contralto, Frank Tupman, tenor, and Handley Wells, bass.

DECEMBER 1 TO BE LOCARNO TREATY DAY

With the political animosities and combustible elements eliminated from her relations with France and Belgium by virtue of the security pact and arbitration treaties with those nations, it is believed by political and industrial circles in this city that a better position to give thought to her economic interests in Russia, it is thought not improbable that Germany's entry upon an era of active exploitation in that territory will be one of the aftermaths of the Locarno pacts, which eventually will prove quite as far-reaching as her newly negotiated peace along the Rhine.

To End Severe Cough Quickly, Try This

For real results, this old home-made remedy beats them all. Easily prepared.

You'll never know how quickly had cough can be conquered, until you try this famous old home-made remedy. Anyone who has coughed all day and all night, will say that the immediate relief given is almost like magic. It takes but a moment to prepare and really there is nothing better for coughs.

Into a 16-oz. bottle, put 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to make 16 ounces. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, this mixture saves about two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, and gives you a more positive, effective remedy. It keeps perfectly, and tastes pleasant—children like it.

You can feel this take hold instantly, soothing and healing the membranes in all the air passages. It promptly loosens a dry, tight cough, and soon you will notice the phlegm thin out, and then disappear altogether. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and it is also splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness, and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, the most reliable remedy for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2 1/2 ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont. (Adv.)

BROAD, GENEROUS POLICY OF IMMIGRATION CANADA'S GREAT NEED, PATTULLO TELLS HOUSE

better in British Columbia than they are to-day; that there is no Province in the Dominion of Canada on a sound basis; that Canada has increased its export trade since the great war in greater proportion than any other nation on earth; notwithstanding the fact that our export timber business in British Columbia has decreased twelve hundred per cent; that our agricultural production has gone up from $18,000,000.00 in 1914 to $60,000,000.00; that our mining output has increased from $42,000,000.00 to $60,000,000.00; that there are three times as many manufacturing concerns in the Province as there were when we took office— notwithstanding all these circumstances—these honorable gentlemen would have the public believe that all that is necessary to do to waft this Province into affluence is that they shall be transplanted from the other side of the House to this side of the House and I venture to say, if this catastrophe were suddenly to be brought about, in twenty-four hours these same gentlemen would be telling of the glowing conditions of things in British Columbia; would be pointing to the terrific increase of Canada's trade; the vast development of the various resources in British Columbia; and would be deprecating the fact that fault should be found with conditions so buoyant.

CANNOT SCRAP P.G.E.

Turning to the Pacific Great Eastern Railway problem Mr. Pattullo warned the House that there was no use talking about scrapping the railway. He felt that it would have been well if the line had been finished from Vancouver to meet the Canadian National, and painted a graphic picture of the resources available in the north of the Province, which he declared was the richest portion of its empire area.

Mr. Pattullo came to the defence of education in vigorous style, asserting that British Columbia must strive to make its university an outstanding institution. "There are a considerable number of people who think that the youth of to-day is getting too much education and as a consequence that he is being weaned away from rural pursuits; that he insists on congregating in the cities and wants a white collar job," he went on.

"I do not agree with this point of view. I think that this is a superficial aspect of the whole question and in whatever degree it exists is only a passing phase of a much larger issue. Our trouble to-day is not too much education but too little. A little knowledge is a dangerous thing. We must continue to train the minds of more and more of the masses of our people. The more highly trained the mind is the more he respects labor. There was a time when certain classes of labor were looked on as menial. There is no such thing as menial labor to-day. All labor is honorable, and I repeat that those who have the best disciplined minds respect labor most. Put a man with a good education in the ditch alongside of a man without any education and the man with the education has the best chance to get out of the ditch."

MOVING WITH TIMES

Mr. Pattullo asked the Opposition whether it disagreed with its policy of establishing mothers' pensions or with the establishment of the Labor Department, which had been of inestimable value to the people of the Province. In these reforms, he declared, the Government was moving with the times.

Discussing the South Okanagan irrigation scheme, Mr. Pattullo explained that when it was started the Province was face to face with a serious returned soldier problem and the Government was determined to create employment, rather than hand out doles. He said he took full responsibility for recommending this project to the Government.

"I am glad to say that considering conditions that have existed during the past few years in the fruit industry the project is making wonderful progress," he declared. "We have there a happy and contented settlement of some five hundred people and development is proceeding apace. There has been no speculation in any of the lands in the Government irrigation project, practically all purchasers being active workers in the development of their various areas."

"The worst that can be said about this project is that it cost too much money," said my friend, the member for South Okanagan, J. W. Jones, will endeavor to show immense losses that he alleges are bound to accrue to the Province through this project. "There are in this project some 12,000 acres of irrigable land. Assuming that the 12,000 acres were sold at an average of $200.00 an acre there would be realized the sum of $2,400,000.00, exclusive of the town sites."

EXPECTS HIGHER PRICE

"In view of the fact that we now have $3,250,000.00 invested in the undertaking, which does not include several hundred thousand dollars interest upon this commutation it would look like a heavy loss, but inasmuch as only 1,500 acres have been disposed of to date it may well be that by the time the whole project has been disposed of a considerable portion of the area will bring in a figure very much higher than $200.00, probably as high as $400.00 or $500.00 per acre before the entire project is disposed of and in this computation nothing is taken into account of the two town sites, one at Oliver and the other that will eventually be built at Osoyoos Lake at the international boundary."

"We know that this project cost more than we had hoped, but it was started originally purely as a soldier settlement scheme and was purchased under the 'Soldiers' Land Act' at a time when the 'Soldiers' Land Act' would not permit sale to anyone else than a returned soldier, but this was subsequently altered as it would jeopardize the success of the scheme."

"It was, however, for the benefit of the returned soldier that this project was started. Work was carried out at a time when costs were at the very peak and when labor was at its most inefficient period."

Recently, at the opening of a power plant by the B. C. Electric Railway Co. on the Mainland, the president of the company made the positive statement that in practically every instance of the engineers were exceeded by 50 per cent, while the estimates of revenue were 50 per cent more than the actual results.

"If this is the case in private corporations it is not surprising that it should be so in Government undertakings."

NO REAL LOSS
"But I have the satisfaction of having started a project at the time we did for the specific purpose of helping the returned soldier; a project that is going to support several thousand people; that even though every dollar that is being put into the project is not directly returned by the purchasers under the system, the money received through taxation and the benefit to the Province of several thousand people living in that district will much more than offset any direct losses that may be met."

"I said some years ago I took full responsibility for recommending this project and would accept all the consequences that anyone felt like heaping upon me in connection with it, but that, on the other hand, in years to come I wanted all the credit for its successful fruition."

TO CARVE HIS NAME

"At the present time, Mr. Speaker, on the dam on the Okanagan River, by which diversion is made of the water for this project, there is carved only the numbers "1920." I intend to carve my own name in that cement, Mr. Speaker, so that in years to come when this valley is flourishing with from five to ten thousand people, our friends across the way will never be able to claim, should they ever get over to this side of the House, that they were responsible for the flourishing condition, existing in the South Okanagan."

IRRIGATION POLICY

Mr. Pattullo vigorously defended the Government's handling of interior questions, asserting that complete justice had been meted out to the growers who faced ruin when the Government took office. J. W. Jones, Conservative, South Okanagan, was recalled, had urged in the House that half the money loaned by the Government to the irrigation districts should be made a charge on the Province at large.

The Minister assured the House that the Government had no intention of allowing the irrigation systems of the interior to fall into disuse, although it could not entertain the idea of unloading part of the cost of irrigation upon the people at large. The Conservatives, he charged, had misled the public by not informing it of its plan to make it shoulder part of these expenses. He urged the irrigators to pay their obligations "like honest men."

Mr. Pattullo attacked the Opposition for its recent attempt to split the Liberal Party by moving a vote of lack of confidence in the Government for failing to give Vancouver cabinet representation. He declared that the Government had treated

Vancouver handsomely and pointed out that his stand on Vancouver water problems had been endorsed by the Vancouver ratepayers recently.

The Minister criticized the Conservative game of pulling feathers out of the American eagle's tail. For his part, he wanted to see American investments and all other investments in this country succeed because every dollar of capital was a bad advertisement.

MORE IMMIGRANTS

Advocating greater immigration into Canada, Mr. Pattullo went on:

"In my opinion, if you do not have people coming into the country you are certain to have them going out in increasing numbers by reason of curtailed opportunity. It is people that create opportunity. When there was nobody in British Columbia the resources were of no use. It is people that make resources valuable and the more people the more development of resources up to the point of the limit of those resources. I have on several occasions stated that Canada could absorb no less than 300,000 immigrants a year and I notice that President Beatty of the C.P.F., according to press dispatches, states that we can absorb from 300,000 to 500,000 annually.

BAR DEFECTIVES

"I would not permit the entrance into this country of a single physically or mentally deficient person. Other than this restriction I would adopt a broad and generous policy. Every man who comes into Canada provides an increase of opportunity for those who are here, while nobody knows the numerous fields of new endeavor which the initiative and industry of those coming to the country may open up. The periods of heaviest immigration into the United States were the periods of its greatest expansion; its greatest increase in wages and greatest shortening of hours of work. Newcomers will not affect the economic condition of labor except to make it more healthy. That there will from time to time be a number of people out of work may be assumed, but that is one of the difficulties which all the wisdom of the world has not yet been able to solve and those who are able will have to continue to carry those who are unable to carry themselves.

"If we bring in the strong northern peoples of Europe, added to our own British stock and to the people who come over from the United States we will build up a strong and virtuous nation, while maintaining all the glorious traditions of our past."

A SURE RELIEF FOR WOMEN'S DISORDERS

Orange Lily is a certain relief for all disorders of women. It is applied locally and is absorbed into the suffering tissues. The dead waste material is expelled, giving immediate relief to the blood vessels and nerves are toned and strengthened. It is the creation of a medicine which acts on the actual location of the disease. It cannot help but do good in all forms of female troubles, including delayed and painful menstruation, leucorrhoea, falling of the womb, etc.

DRYDOCK WORK TO BE PUSHED AHEAD

CHIEF ENGINEER OF FEDERAL DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WORKS HERE ON INSPECTION MISSION

K. M. Cameron of Ottawa Says New Graving Basin Project Will be Pushed Through to Completion Without Delay; Only Two Contracts Outstanding, Air Compression Plant and Traveling Crane.

On the coast on a tour of inspection of Government projects K. M. Cameron, chief engineer of the Department of Public Works, Ottawa, arrived in the city this morning from Vancouver, and will spend the next four days in reviewing local projects.

To the Times-to-day Mr. Cameron stated work on the new graving basin would be pushed ahead to completion, though it was too early yet to predict a date for the formal opening of what will be the largest drydock in the British Empire, at Esquimalt.

Only two contracts remain outstanding on the Esquimalt project, the awarding of the air compression plant contract to work the dock machinery, and that of the traveling crane.

Mr. Cameron explained his mission on the coast as one of an informational nature in which he will secure first hand knowledge of the actions of Government projects under construction. He will be taken over the graving basin and will inspect also the first of the floating gates under construction at Esquimalt.

Mr. Cameron displayed interest in the harbor widening projects which include an immediate start on the removal of a further 50 feet of rock from Hospital Rock, and important dredging of channel areas now nearing completion. Work on the rock blasting will commence Wednesday.

Mr. Cameron came to the coast on a flying visit and before he returns to the capital will have seen every Federal project of size in this area. He will remain in this city until Tuesday when his plans call for a return to the coast.

Mr. Cameron is staying at the Empress Hotel while in the city, and called on J. P. Forde, District Engineer here, this morning.

Only two contracts remain outstanding on the Esquimalt project, the awarding of the air compression plant contract to work the dock machinery, and that of the traveling crane.

MORE PROS ARE TO SEEK AMATEUR CAREERS

Two Former Cougars Make Applications

Gordon Meeking and Ed Dieidl Ask for Same Consideration as Given Pros at Last Meeting of A.A.U. of C.; Many Other Applications Expected; Wednesday Football League to Consider Case of Joe Bayley

When the annual meeting of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada is held next Spring it is expected that it will have to consider a flock of requests for reinstatement from former professional stars who now fail to attract notice in that company.

At the last annual meeting the Union let down the bars which had been held so high for many years. Now that the precedent has been established it is expected that many other athletes, in similar positions to those re-instated, will seek the special favors.

Three Victoria boys, "Sugar" McDougall, Ernie Munro and Joe Mitchell were whitewashed at the last meeting. A large number of New Westminster professional lacrosse stars were also re-established in the amateur ranks. Sid Desrou, the hockey player Frank Patrick brought out of the Kootenay, was one of the few men in that branch of sport, who were smiled upon.

Two more Victoria boys are now out to get back their amateur cards. Gordon Meeking and Ed Dieidl, former members of the Victoria Hockey Club, have filed applications with the local board of the B.C.A.A.U. for reinstatement. Dieidl's case is similar to that of Desrou. He only had one season in pro. company. Meeking served longer in big company.

However, feeling that the Union gave way at its last meeting and re-instated many former pros it cannot very well back down in this instance, and it is possible that local amateur hockey circles will be given two good players.

A matter which may escape attention from the amateur union through the peculiar working agreement with the Dominion Football Association, is the playing of Joe Bayley, former high weight champion of Canada, with Rennie and Taylor's recently. However, it is understood that the Wednesday Football League will take up the matter at their meeting to be held on Monday evening.

Bayley was one of the finest centre half-backs ever developed in Victoria. He was star performer for the Victoria Wests. Joe turned professional when he went to the front so rapidly as a boxer. He captured the Canadian title and retired after a short time back returned to the ring and fought several fights. On Wednesday, November 18, Joe Bayley played for the Wests and Taylor's against the Navy and the bakers won by 4-2.

Just what will happen to the other players, who competed in a series between Rennie and Taylor's and the Navy, remains to be seen. According to amateur rules they automatically suspended themselves.

MANCHESTER RACE ABANDONED OWING TO FROZEN TRACK

Manchester, Nov. 28 (Canadian Press Cable)—For the sixth time in fifty years the Manchester November Handicap, one of the British turf's greatest Autumn handicaps, has had to be abandoned because of bad weather. With the track frozen so dry, it was decided to proceed with the programme, the closing day of the Manchester meeting and the last day of racing season in flat. The race was abandoned also in 1923. The Derby Cup, another important Autumn handicap, had to be abandoned at Derby on November 20 on account of the dense fog.

Boosters' Club to Have Big Crowd at Dance Wednesday

The dance which has been arranged to be held at the Veterans of France clubrooms on Wednesday night by the Boosters' Club promises to be a big affair. Tickets are selling well and interest is very keen. Dancing will start at 8.30 o'clock and conclude at 12.30 o'clock.

City Basketball Teams to Resume Play This Evening

City League basketball teams will resume play to-night with three matches scheduled at the Armories. In the men's "B" division, the Sons of England will clash with the quintette from Priors, while in the Ladies' "B" division, Spencer's will make their initial appearance of the season against the High School. The final game of the evening will be between St. Andrew's and Cedar Hill. The first game will start at 7.30 o'clock.

Teams are again reminded that entries for the B.C. open championships are to be in the hands of Art Hole not later than November 29. Any received after that date will not be accepted.

Games to be played on Monday night are as follows:
Men's C—St. Andrew's vs. Machine Gunners.
Men's B—Y.M.C.A. vs. J.B.A.A.
Men's A—C.F.S. vs. James Bay.

WON BY A KNOCKOUT.
Syracuse, N.Y., Nov. 27—Young Flyer, Syracuse middleweight, scored a knockout over Russell Pearsonist, Boston heavyweight, in the third round of a scheduled ten-round bout last night.

Falcons In Great Shape For Battle With Americans

International Game on Tonight; Duncan Defeats Spaldings in Great Finish

The first international basketball game of the 1925-26 season will be played this evening at the Y.M.C.A. between the Victoria Falcons and the Seattle E. G. Spalding team. Both quintettes are in the pink of condition.

The Americans have a fast bunch of ball-handlers who will make the local boys step some. They journeyed to Duncan last night and staged a win against the fast-stepping senior men's team. The boys secured last on such a large floor, having been accustomed to playing on smaller sized courts, and what with the weight of their opponents and the very slippery condition of the gymnasium floor, they had little chance to show the fans just what they were capable of doing.

Handicaps they held the up-landers even for three-quarters of the game, when their opponents finally broke through the ironman defenses and netted some neat field baskets, making the score 21-21 for Duncan.

They proved to the spectators that they knew the game, as they were able to pass the ball, their fake passes fooling the Duncans time and again. Their defeat last night has made the Seattle boys feel that they know the game, as they were able to pass the ball, their fake passes fooling the Duncans time and again.

Unlike other American teams, Spaldings brought over only six players, which will do away with the coaches through the season.

The lineup of the visitors will be: Hall, Howe, McDonald, Forsythe, McCutcheon and Giv. The Falcons will consist of the following players: Killings, Robertson, Murray, Jeffries, Hocking, McKenzie, Ross and Tervo. A preliminary game will precede the international tussle between the Normal School and the Fidelia from the First Presbyterian Church. This game will start at 8 o'clock and will be followed by a victory followed by the boys' game.

Tickets may still be reserved at the Y.M.C.A. by phoning 2980.

Tommy Fielding Is Loser in Mainland Bout, Referee Said

Lots of Fans, However, Thought He Had Best of McDonald; Are Rematched

Vancouver, Nov. 28.—Referee Cline raised Hector McDonald's arm at the close of his four-round scrap with Tommy Fielding at the Victoria C. Valley Club last night, but there was a good part of the audience did not think McDonald had any better of the going, and openly voiced their disapproval of the decision.

There was little between the pair, taking the bout as a whole, and they have been rematched for next Wednesday at the Avenue Theatre, when Whybrow and Rose clash in the main event.

The occasion was a little too much for Fielding last night, and in the first round he did not have a look in. Then he settled down, used his rapier left with telling effect, made the crowd flow from McDonald's nose, and altogether held his own. McDonald's superiority in the first round won him the fight. Fielding earned the plaudits of the on-lookers for the clever way in which he evaded McDonald's punches.

Fielding returned to Victoria this morning accompanied by Al Davies, who acted as his second. Davies says Fielding lost the first round, won the second and third by quite a margin, but dropped the fourth by a close call.

British Bowlers Lose
Brisbane, Nov. 28 (Canadian Press Cable via Reuters)—One team of touring British bowlers were defeated by a local team to-day 97 to 85, and a second team from South Brisbane, 115 to 83.

HIGH SCHOOL RUGBY CHAMPIONS OF GREATER VICTORIA

After having passed the laurels to the Oak Bay High School for one year the Victoria High came back yesterday and, in the third and deciding game for the city championship, regained the title by an archaic try. Victoria won on a heavy field in a drizzling rain. Much credit for the success of the team is due to Coach Mary Smith and his assistants, Mr. Webber and Mr. Brandreth. Those in the picture above are as follows: Back row, from left to right—Mr. Webber, Gaitskell, Songhurst, Killick, Nagle, Harry Smith, coach; Those in the picture above are as follows: Back row, from left to right—Mr. Webber, Gaitskell, Songhurst, Killick, Nagle, Harry Smith, coach; Middle row—J. ## National Hockey League Opens In Three More Towns

Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal Will See First Game To-night; Clubs Strong

Toronto, Nov. 28 (Canadian Press).—Although the National Hockey League which is now a real international hockey league, was officially opened at Boston on Thursday night, when the Pittsburgh Pirates defeated the Bruins, the season opens in the majority of the cities on the circuit to-night when St. Pat's of Toronto meet Boston; Montreal Canadiens stack up against Pittsburgh and Ottawa Senators entertain the Montreal Maroons.

The probable line-ups to-night: Toronto—Roch, Corbeau and McCaffery; Jack Adams, Dye and Day; sub, Munro, Holway, Reid, Smylie and Bellefleur. Boston—Stewart, Cleghorn and Hitchman; Brackenborough, Herbert and Shay; sub, Mitchell, Jackson, Cooper and Stuart.

Montreal—Benedict, Dunc Munro, Nobe, Stewart, Broadbent and Sheehy; sub, Cain, Kitchen, Lowery, Rothschild, Dunsmore and Horne.

Hockey Fans May Reserve Seats For Season, Monday Morning

For Season, Monday Morning

Hockey fans who want to be sure that they will have regular seats for all the games at the Arena this season can get on the books of the Victoria Hockey Club on Monday, according to an announcement made this morning by Stanley Patrick, who is carrying on in the absence of brother Lester in the East.

The fans will be able to make their reservations from Monday morning at the offices of Pimley & Ritchie, 611 View Street, where the genial Dave Ramsay will be on deck to attend to all needs.

"Our plan of booking is very simple," said Stan Patrick this morning. "No money consideration in advance is necessary, but the patron is expected to keep faith and take his tickets for each contest. This system is unprecedented, as in other major league cities fans, desiring season tickets, must put up all the money in advance."

People who held season tickets last year will be protected this year should they desire to renew. It is expected that the list of reserved seat-holders will be greatly increased this year owing to the fact that many were disappointed through the play-off and world's series last year. They learned the advantage of being "on the books."

Tickets for the opening game here on Saturday night next between the Cougars and Saskatoon will go on sale at 9 o'clock on Thursday morning, December 3, at Pimley & Ritchie's.

Spanish Champion Latest To Get On Dempsey's Trail

Rickard Says Paolino, the Wood-chopper, Best Heavy-weight Prospect Abroad

Berlin, Nov. 28.—Paolino, heavyweight champion of Spain, disclosed plans yesterday for an invasion of the United States. Paolino declared he had received a letter from Tex Rickard, New York promoter, asking for his terms to fight in the United States under a contract which would lead to a bout with Dempsey in the event the Spantard measured up to the championship calibre.

Paolino, now under the management of Francis Dempsey, said he expects to leave Paris for New York December 20, accompanied by Georges Carpentier, Paul Pritchard and Bert Molina, French boxers. Paolino has a record of winning thirty-two out of thirty-six matches with knockouts.

From reports I have had from Europe, Paolino is the most promising heavyweight abroad at this time," Rickard said. "I am willing to give him any contract, or a bout with Dempsey or anyone else, but explained he stood ready to give Paolino a tryout here to demonstrate his ability."

Johnson's Try Near End Gives Victoria The Victory

Husky Forward of Local High Flops in Mud Across Oak Bay Line for Only Try of Game; Oaks' Team-work Stood out and Their Tackling Was Splendid; Despite Fierce Weather Big Crowd Attends

Fighting heroically in an ocean of mud, with first rain and then sleet beating into their faces, Oak Bay and Victoria High Schools clashed yesterday afternoon at the Victoria High's grounds, in the final of the Thomson Cup series between city schools. Victoria emerged victorious with a slim three-point margin, the score being 3-0.

Up to within five minutes of the final whistle the two teams fought without a score. It was a forwards' game from start to finish, but strangely enough it was the backs who made the longest gains in lone dribbling rushes. Soccer tactics were the rule, and the slippery ball was almost uncontrollable after a few seconds of play.

The giant "Dim" Johnson was the hero of the Victoria High. Taking the ball from a maleic just outside the Oak Bay goal line, following a throw in from touch, Johnson twisted his long body into a half circle and plunged headlong for the line, falling into the mud for the only score of the game. Half the Oak Bay back division were on top of him. When Johnson got up he was dizzy.

GREAT DEFENCE
Playing with a rugby machine that works smoothly on a dry field, Oak Bay was up against a different proposition from the one they mastered when they last met. Their smart backs did not have a chance. The ball was too slippery for handling. Again and again their line made strenuous efforts to unshackle the cunning and cunning to break through the enemy, but it was of no avail. Victoria held well. On the defence Oak Bay won the highest praise. They tackled hard, smacking the hefty Victoria runners right on the ankles. The thousand odd spectators, who, despite the rain, lined the border of the field and thronged in windows of the High School buildings thrilled at the deadly tackling of the Oaks.

POWERFUL LINE
The Victoria High School, who must now play Duncan for the championship of Vancouver Island, being considered the game with the Vancouver High School champions, has a team of powerful players individually. Their one failing is too much individual work in the back division.

Johnson, Killick, Walker and Le Marquand are particularly strong forwards. Turgoise and Curtis are plucky young fighters. Dunn and Gaitkell are snappy men in the back. The back line is given wonderful support by this forward division, and with Shaw and Songhurst at half back feeding the three line regularly, Victoria should make an excellent showing, no matter who they meet. Kennedy, full back, is one of the strongest men at his position that

JOCKEY AS ACTOR

Steve Donoghue has signed a contract to appear in a series of British films, work upon which is to begin today. The famous jockey will play the chief roles in pictures of racing life and romance, the first of which will be ready in time for public exhibition during "Lincoln week" towards the end of March, next year, probably under the title "Riding for the King".

Mr. Donoghue, who has had such a series of films in mind for a long time, but has only now been able to obtain the necessary financial support from G. W. Wolfe of the W. and F. Film Service Limited, who will deal with the distribution of the pictures. The films will be directed by Walter West, who has offered Donoghue a public interest here, and there seems an excellent prospect for the new British films abroad.

New Orleans, Nov. 28.—W. L. "Young" Stribling of Atlanta, knocked out Billy Britton of Columbus in the first round of a scheduled fifteen-round bout here last night.

LOOKING THINGS OVER

Lester Patrick and his Cougars are now following the iron trail across the continent and will be home next week. Their exhibition tour of the East, while not a success in point of victories, was a splendid success from the standpoint of interest aroused and publicity for Victoria and proved the value of similar missions in the future. The Cougars convinced the East that their capture of the Stanley Cup from Canadians last Winter was no fluke. They won the two games which meant the most to them. They were at the peak of their stride. From then on games came so fast that their stamina, team-play and championship form was badly affected. They lost, it's true, but they showed the fans some flashy stickhandling and polished skating. Every account that came out of the East paid tribute to the club.

Huge crowds witnessed the games in every town. In the first game in Montreal 7,000 spectators attended, while 8,700 packed the Canadian rink to see the second game. This was a larger crowd than any that sat in on the world's series than in 1924. In Ottawa Lord and Lady Byng, Premier King and 5,000 other fans saw the first game. The second game drew a similar number. In Toronto close to 6,000 saw each game. At Windsor in the last game 7,200 persons looked on. In addition to the thousands who saw the games hundreds of thousands read the newspaper accounts. Papers all across the country carried "Cougars" and big headlines on the encounters. The names of Victoria's "Cougars" and big headlines on the encounters well as into many to the south of the line. The world's champions have certainly kept Victoria right in the front line the last two weeks. The publicity could not be counted in dollars.

Next Saturday the Cougars make their formal bow to the local fans this season. They will be opposed at the Arena by the Saskatoon Sheikhs. It is expected that a scene reminiscent of the world's series, will be enacted. Every eye seems to want to be on hand to welcome the Cougars. The house should be packed.

Toronto Globe—In this city on December 12 the annual meeting of the Ladies' Ontario Hockey Association will be held. When one mentions "the boat race" in England everybody within hearing knows that it is the Oxford-Cambridge annual eight-oared crew struggle that is meant. Now the penchant for "secrecy" as to practices, training camps, systems and line-ups has spread from football to rowing. The London News has discovered that "the boat race" next year may be conducted "in camera." It means by that it will be rowed at an annual pillow for the hundreds of thousands of Londoners who make an annual pilgrimage to the Thames to see the university struggle. The date of the race next year is Saturday, March 27, and the time, which must be fixed by the break of grandmothers' funerals among office employees, they can't see the race. The News suggested that date might be changed. "It is impossible," said Cambridge. "To row a week earlier, because if we do our men will not have been long enough at the university to be allowed to count their term of residence." "Inconceivable," replies Oxford, "to row a week later because our Vice-Chancellor would refuse to permit us to row in Holy Week."

Down Toronto way a controversy, has started as to which game is the best for marking golf or tennis. The standard-bearers of each sport have written some funny letters but this one by a Golfer, appearing in The Toronto Globe, wins the prize of a duck's sob.

One of the most ludicrous articles that has ever appeared in a Toronto newspaper states that golf is a lady's game, and for a woman, it is written by a tennis enthusiast, who freely tries to compare tennis with the world's best popular game of golf. After a lot of comical statements, our tennis fan admits that on golf courses, and this assertion alone refutes most of his arguments, as the ancient and honorable game of golf is yearly developing its "splendid specimens" by the tens of thousands.

Tennis is a very cramped game, without any vision or horizon. Its tiny court is constricted within marked lines. Its play is marred by a fishnet, and it is surrounded by a cage, so that its deluded participants are continually cramped, and can never see their limited exercise like squirrels in a cage. It also is a flannel game—flannel trousers, flannel balls and flannel a cage. It is also a flannel game—flannel trousers, flannel balls and flannel a cage. ## Want Canadian Golf Championship To Be Representative

Western Golfers Are Wanted in Tournaments; Always Confined to East

Toronto, Nov. 28.—B. L. Anderson, secretary of the Royal Canadian Golf Association, is making an effort to solve the condition, which in recent years confined the Canadian amateur golf championship to Eastern Ontario, and will ask the executive committee of the association to give assent to assessment upon a Vioff player with membership in an affiliated club.

The next meeting of the executive will be held at Ottawa on December 11 to prepare reports for the annual meeting early in 1926.

Mr. Anderson yesterday prepared a bulletin to the clubs which must be approved by the executive before being sent out. He offers an assessment of thirty-five cents per member per annum. The assessment will be used to pay the expenses of finalists of provincial championships who go to national championships, to maintain the green section of the association and meet other expenses.

"Why cannot some plan be worked whereby the amateur championship will swing in a cycle from Halifax to Victoria?" Mr. Anderson asks in discussing his plan. One cannot estimate the impetus which would be imparted to Canadian golf by such a plan.

To begin with the plan if suggested might be adopted by the provincial executives having full control of their local championships and the amateur championships of Canada being held under a central executive. It would be possible to narrow the contest to a select group from each province. Finalists would be allowed to enter the field without qualification. "Our qualifying field is one of thirty-two players. Thus excellent players who failed in provincial tournaments would still be eligible for the national championship," Mr. Anderson said.

Victorians Will Attend James Island Party This Evening

In order to accompany the many Victorians who wish to attend the whisky party and dance at James Island to-night a special boat will leave Saskatoon at 7.45 o'clock. The party has been arranged for the benefit of Chester, one of the James Island players, who broke his leg in a match against Esquimaux recently.

Rickard's Massive Stadium in N.Y. to Open up To-night

New York, Nov. 28.—Tex Rickard's $5,000,000 coliseum, the New Madison Square Garden, opens to-night with a programme of amateur, professional and motor-sports, and the preliminary events of the thirty-ninth six-day bike race.

Cincinnati Aquatic Team Breaks Record For 200-Yard Race

Cincinnati, Nov. 28.—The world's 200-yard swimmer record was smashed here last night when the Central Y.M.C.A. team negotiated the distance in 1:36 1-5, clipping 1 3-5 seconds from the former record made by the Illinois A.C. at Milwaukee.

Cuyler Orders Bats Early to Season 'Em For Next Campaign

Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 28.—Hazen N. ("Kid") Cuyler, star outfielder of the Pittsburgh Pirates, has written the local club officials from Flint, Mich., where he is employed as an athletic director, requesting the purchase of twelve new bats for his use next season. The order was placed immediately.

Cuyler said he had considerable trouble in getting his bats seasoned. He proposes to place the new clubs away in order to age them properly before the season opens.

CLAIMING THE POUND OF FLESH IN GOLF

Claiming a Hole For a Breach On Green Not Right

Vardon Says Brushing Leaves With Club Not Sufficient to Lose Hole

Bad Feeling Crops Up Through Players Claiming Hole; Terms of Agreement

BY HARRY VARDON

Somebody recently put to me an interesting point about the rules. It concerns that special regulation for match play tournaments, which says that "competitors shall not agree to exclude the operation of any rule or local rule, nor to waive any penalty incurred in the course of the match, under penalty of their disqualification."

He explains that at one hole, his opponent used a club with which to scrape aside a leaf from the line of the putt. As every player ought to know, loose impediments which it is desired to remove from the putting green, may only be lifted—not scraped away with any kind of implement. The penalty for a breach of this rule is the loss of a hole. My opponent, mindful of the regulation which prescribes disqualification as the punishment for players who agree to exclude the operation of a rule, claimed the hole.

He was right in law, and he remarks that he thought his action was the only one to take in the circumstances, because if the conditions of the breach, the committee of the club would have been compelled, he presumes, to disqualify both players. All the same, his opponent did not try afterwards to win the match.

THE POUND OF FLESH
"Here we have had blood arising from a perfectly simple and unimportant point of law," says my troubled friend. "I had no desire to do anything unsporting and, in a friendly game, would not have made the claim. This being a tournament, the match I thought that I had to make it. Was I right?"

Probably four people out of every five who play golf observe the principle of abstention from claiming a "pound of flesh" when a rival derives no benefit from an infraction of the rules which he commits in innocuous circumstances, because if the conditions of the breach, the committee of the club would have been compelled, he presumes, to disqualify both players. All the same, his opponent did not try afterwards to win the match.

CONTRACTING OUT OF RULES
I once made inquiries in authoritative quarters on this subject, and was informed that the Rules of Golf Committee does not intend the regulation to impose the drastic condition which most golfers find it. I am informed that that sense of the order turns upon the word "agree" in the phrase "competitors shall not agree to exclude the operation of any rule."

This means that they shall not come to a contract in the matter of arranging to exclude themselves when they are engaged in matchplay tournaments. But it does not obligate a competitor to lodge a claim if, during the round, his opponent commits a breach concerning which they have entered into an agreement. He is not compelled to do so.

NETTLES VARDON
Personally I always feel rather nettled when a rival takes his putter to scrape aside leaves from the line of a putt. And there is plenty of it at this season of the year, for the players who adopt the procedure are just about as numerous as those who fall—fallen leaves—the only method allowed by the law—when they interfere with a putt. It is usually sufficient, however, to tell a delinquent on the way to the green, "You are breaking a rule. Few of us would care to claim the hole for it. The main point is that, even in tournaments, the hole need not be claimed. Only if the player had contracted out of the rule to scrape aside leaves instead of lifting them would the law come necessarily into operation, and then both competitors would have to be disqualified."

It might not be a bad idea for the Rules Committee to make the spirit of the special regulation for tournaments more evident. It is clear to people who study the language of the rules very closely, but that is precisely what very few people do. Consequently, claims are sometimes made unwillingly for accident and trivial infractions which, in private games, would be ignored. Often one hears of a player explaining to a rival, "I'm sorry to have to claim the hole, but the special rule goes me no option." Most of us like golf to be played according to law, even in the most friendly rounds, but it is a pity that there should exist, owing to a misunderstanding, a widespread belief that the policy of grass is encouraged by one particular rule or two.

REASON IN BUNKERS
In point of fact, the whole tendency of the St. Andrews authorities during recent years has been to promote the sporting spirit in golf by instituting penalties for innocent or accidental breaches that do not improve the player's position. Presumably, this propaganda, conveyed mostly in the form of decisions on questions addressed to the Rules Committee has been rendered necessary by the entry of so many new players, representing all sections of the community, into the game, and it has undoubtedly had good effects.

It has been made clear, for example, that sweet reasonableness is intended to exist in connection with the rule which begins "When a ball lies in or touches a hazard, nothing shall be done which can in any way improve its lie; the club shall not touch the ground, nor shall anything be touched or moved before the player strikes at the ball."

Until the last few years this was taken to mean that a golfer in a hazard dare not do anything save stand in it and swing at the ball, taking care to touch nothing in any other way. There was a notable instance of this in the semi-final of the amateur championship at Muirfield in 1920, when G. L. Mellin met C. J. H. Tolley. Mr. Mellin was in a bunker, and failing to get out at the first attempt, he carefully smoothed over the marks which he had made in the sand before going farther into the bunker to play his next shot.

The hole was promptly given against him because he touched the sand while his ball still lay in the bunker. Everybody thought the decision correct. The Rules Committee has since explained, however, that it is only improving the lie of the ball which is a breach. Mr. Mellin was much too far from his ball to affect its lie when he smoothed over his marks, so that to-day he would not be penalized for this act of etiquette although there is no need to perform it in quite such a hurry.

Carpet Bowling
Heavy scoring by the winners was the feature of the second week of play in the Carpet Bowling League.

PAST YEAR HAS BEEN TOUGH ON CHAMPIONS

Titles Changed Hands With Startling Consistency in Sport in 1925

Tilden, Greb, Hagen, Jones, Walker and Helen Willis Only Ones to Retain Crowns

THIS has been a tough year on champions. Crowns have shifted from one done to another with startling consistency. The dethronement, in a word, has been emphatic and widespread no matter how you look at it. Few title-holders have escaped the concerted rush of the challenging hordes along the right of way. It has mattered not in what branch of endeavor they've held sway. One after another has been toppled.

HOPPE DROPS DOWN

In wrestling there was a general upheaval. Lewis, Munn and Zbyzsko stepped down, there were still a few who successfully defended their titles. In billiards Jake Schaefer whipped the once great Willie Hoppe to top the cue crown.

DEMPEY NOT INCLUDED

Tilden all but found a rival in Bill Johnston, his rival of long standing. Hagen ran amuck plenty of worthwhile opposition in the P.O.A. tournament. Helen Willis was given a hard battle by Kitty McKane, one of the famous stars and Mickey Walker can well be thankful that one Dave Shade is not now wearing the quater wreath.

W. BEATTIE RAMSAY

member of the Canadian Olympic champion hockey team at Chamonix in 1924, has gone to Princeton University, where he will resume his duties as head coach of the hockey squad. Mr. Ramsay spent the Summer in Western Canada, being employed as resident engineer on the provincial highway north of Regina, Saskatchewan.

Some World's Series Muffs Have Proved Extremely Costly

Along with the famous $100,000 world's series muffed by Red Snodgrass, Giant centerfielder, years ago, the $50,000 muffed by Hank Gowdy, Giant catcher, in the 1924 world's series will go down in history. In each case the player was not entirely to blame.

With the Bowlers

The Colonist Night Hawks took the straight from the Dominion Four, which lifted them from fifth place into a tie for top position with the Five Roses. Dave Clarke made high score for the Night Hawks with 502 pins. Morrison of Dominion Four, rolled 477 pins as high for his team. The score is as follows:
Night Hawks
Clarke 201-502
Gard 122-192-969
Oard 141-161-457
Anderson 153-167-443
Johnson 162-176-448
Total 712-893-2249
Dominion Four
Talbot 120-123-106-349
Morrison 139-186-152-477
Eastwood 157-166-124-421
Wilson 152-118-114-381
Total 707-749-646-2102

Pittsburg Demands Vancé For Bigbee Deal is up in Air

New York, Nov. 23.—Carson Bigbee, Pirate outfielder, whose hitting figured in the winning of the decade world series games with Washington, may wear a Brooklyn uniform next year. Baseball men hear the Robins are aniling for Bigbee, but claim the deal is being held up because Pittsburg demands Dazzy Vance in exchange.

Rod and Gun

A wealth of good sporting and hunting reading matter leavened with a good fiction story, "The Way of a White Man," is contained in the December issue of "Rod and Gun," magazine of the Canadian Outdoors, which has just been published. In addition to regular features of the magazine being in common with other magazines of the year, the other articles are very timely and "Along the Snowshoe Trail" in W. C. Motley's "Outdoor Talk" is a gem.

U.S. IMPORTS HIM

Pittsburg says White's hitting power is nothing but a myth. If this is true, then Fippo is the only fighter known to the game who ever was floored by a myth.

FORMER BITTER RIVALRY NOW GOLF TEAM MATES

Five years ago Leo Diegel and Gene Sarazen were avowed enemies. They didn't speak as they passed by on the links.

Now we have it that Diegel and Sarazen have signed up with the South Florida Golf and Country Club of Miami, Fla., to tour that state this Winter and play as a team, also be the club professionals when not touring. The club is supposed to be one of the finest in Florida, costing over a million dollars. The full 18 holes will be completed by New Year's Day.

The enmity between the two, which no longer appears to exist, came as a result of Sarazen turning writer after winning the national open. In his first article Sarazen, for some reason, took Diegel's unorthodox style seriously to task. He rather ridiculed the thought that Diegel would ever get anywhere in golf.

True, Diegel has a most unusual style; it is distinctly his own, and while he doesn't advise ambitious golfers to take it up, the style gets distance and accuracy for him. Diegel resented the criticism in a most unusual manner, by announcing that he would proceed to take Sarazen's measure at every opportunity to prove that Gene was not the last word as a stylist or player.

Peculiarly enough, Diegel had remarkable success when playing against Sarazen and naturally got much pleasure out of it. Apparently Sarazen's criticism was made by the writer who turned out Gene's copy, just as is done for the ball players in the world series. Whatever happened the two are again friends, teammates.

English Rugby Gains Big Hold In Eastern Canada

Canada Football Which Has Been Subjected to Much Criticism May Find English Code Strong Counter-attraction in Near Future; Game in Montreal Between Maritimes and McGill Created Favorable Impression

Montreal, Nov. 23.—The Gazette in its sporting column says: Canadian football rules have been the subject of much criticism recently. Montreal football leaders are strengthening their objections to what they claim obvious weakness in the code, while this fall some of the heads of the game in Toronto are also advocating the need of a revision.

New Bowlers Enter Circle of Hundred Wickets This Year

Merced Discarded by Surrey Does Well With Glamorgan; Staples Also Enters

Samuel Staples of Notts and J. S. Mercer of Glamorgan are to be congratulated on their respective totals of 100 wickets total in a season for the first time. Sussex led a good man go when they dispensed with Mercer. He had played but a few times for them, and in his first full season for Glamorgan last year he was only fairly successful.

Rhodes and Hearne, However, in Class by Themselves When it Comes to Bowling

Staples had hard lines in missing the hundred in 1922 when he took 94, and still harder luck in 1923 (total 92), for he has kept out of the dash this year. However, he then through a collision with John Gunn in going for a catch at Old Trafford.

Many Golfers Taking Round-world Trip on Empress of Scotland

On the long list of passengers from the Old Country, the Continent, the United States and Canada who are taking part in the round the world cruise on the C.P.R. liner, Empress of Scotland, are the names of half a dozen American League players who would have created a condition that would have called for a "Golf Club" of which they had been in Gossin's place.

Another List

If the taking of a thousand wickets is a feat, what must be said of the seven cricketers whose "bags" exceed 2,000 wickets? This select band consists of W. G. Grace (2,864), Hirst (2,719), "Blythe" (2,696), Richardson (2,105), Dennett (2,056), W. Mead (2,028) and Haigh (2,061). What lifetimes of hard work are represented by these figures!

Chattering Catcher Does Upset Batters in Pinch Sometimes

Earl Smith's Incident in Chattering to Goslin in World's Series Recalled

Catchers Allowed to Get Away With it Until They Become Rather Personal

By BILLY EVANS

One of the 1925 world series problems that remains unsolved is what Catcher "Old" Smith of Pittsburgh said to the Washington batters, "Goose" Goslin in particular. It was apparent to everyone in the park at any of the games, that Smith worked that he was an even more gifted conversationalist than catcher.

At times Smith indulged in pantomime. He made motions as if trying to fly. No doubt the thought was to inform the "Goose" that he was up in the air. While Smith's pantomime lacked the finesse of the Altrock-Schacht brand, it was no less convincing.

Every fan who attended the world series, who is at all curious, is probably still wondering what Smith said to Goslin. I am told the repertoire was along these lines: "Why don't you use that hook of yours instead of a bat? You would make more base hits." This to Goslin after he had struck out the previous time up.

"What did you slip Babe Ruth to get a place on his all-star team?" "If you are a star in the American League, I ought to put in about five years there after I am through in the National League." "So you are one of the few bachelors on the Washington club. With that map of yours you are going to stay that way a long time."

Of course there were probably other comments that would not look so well in the best family newspapers. Just how valuable was the line of chatter handed out by Smith to Pittsburgh in winning the world series?

Constant chatter by the catcher to the batter is disturbing and annoying if nothing else. "Inquisitive" it handicaps the batsman in his effort to concentrate. It is my opinion that Smith's chatter had no material effect on the outcome of the series. The Pirates won because of the superb play of Carey, Trapour and Wright, the timely hits of Cuyler and Rigbee and the better pitching of the Pirate staff.

Look at Goslin's average and it is hard to believe that Smith's chatter ever disturbed him. Yet it is possible that he might have had even better luck had not Smith kept whispering sweet nothings into the ear.

The chatter didn't hinder Sam Rice, Joe Harris and any number of other Washington players. Smith's pantomime looked to be far more efficient from the grandstand than it actually was on the ball field.

This brings us to the question as to how far players should be permitted to go during the game. During the regular season I never pay the slightest attention to the catcher's chatter unless it becomes personal. The moment it crosses the line into the dialogue I call a halt.

In a world series game it is more difficult to handle situations than during the regular season. The umpire doesn't care to make it appear as if he is getting trouble.

For that reason certain offenses are often passed up in a world series that would be summarily dealt with during the regular season. However, I could name about a half-dozen American League players who would have created a condition that would have called for a "Golf Club" of which they had been in Gossin's place.

At this very minute, I can see them approximately speaking their bat back into Smith's mask every time the Pirate catcher started talking. Nice boys.

Nearly half the days devoted to the cruise will be spent on shore. The travellers will have at least one day sight-seeing in each of the twenty-four ports of call, while a whole week will be spent at Bombay, at Kobe, and in the effort to permit them to thoroughly absorb the mystic spell of the East.

Hearne, the only bowler who have exceeded 3,000 wickets. The Middlesex man just passed the mark (3,059), but the evergreen Yorkshire man has now taken over 3,000 wickets—a truly marvellous record. And as Rhodes has also scored 25,000 runs his all-round figures are second only to those of Grace himself. These are bowling records unlikely to be disputed in the future.

INAUGURAL MEETING OF WOMEN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF UNITED CHURCH OF CANADA HELD IN TORONTO LAST MONTH

Second only in importance to the meeting of the general council of the United Church of Canada on June 10, 1925, was the meeting of the interim board of the United Church of Canada which was held in Bloor Street United Church in Toronto in October last. This church is under the pastoral care of Dr. George C. Edgemon, moderator of the United Church of Canada, and was crowded to the doors on the occasion of the inaugural services held in connection with the meeting of the above board, the service being arranged after the order of the great inaugural service of the United Church held in the Arena in Toronto on June 19 last.

NINETY MEMBERS
The board was composed of ninety members, of which forty were representatives of the former Methodist Woman's Missionary Society, forty of the former Presbyterian Woman's Missionary Society, and ten representing the former Congregational Woman's Missionary Society. All the members were present. The representatives from British Columbia were: Mrs. W. J. Sipprell, president of the B.C. branch of the Woman's Missionary Society of the former Methodist Church, and Mrs. C. A. Wickens of Vancouver, corresponding secretary of the organization, and Mrs. J. S. Gordon of Vancouver, president of a similar organization in the former Presbyterian Church in the Province, Mrs. M. Derbyshire of Vancouver, treasurer of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church in British Columbia, and a delegate to the Methodist Woman's Missionary Board, which met the previous week in Toronto, was also in attendance.

RECEIVE REPORT
The board received the report of the Union committee that had been appointed to arrange the details of the Union of the denominational boards and the business of the interim board became that of framing and adopting a constitution under which the three former bodies might operate in future as one board. Also the discussion and arranging the necessary requirements as to finance and publication of the work was carried forward with great success and enthusiasm and resulted in the complete union of the Woman's Missionary Society of the three uniting churches which will be referred for endorsement to the meeting of the general council which meets in Montreal in May, 1926.

DR. DAVIES TO TALK ON PUBLIC SPEAKING

Will be Subject of Sermon To-morrow Morning at City Temple

A message designed to synchronize with the lectures on public speaking, to be delivered in the city throughout the winter, will be delivered on Sunday morning when Dr. Davies will speak at the City Temple on the theme "How to Secure the Inspiration Needed by Statesmen, Educators and Men in Public Life Today." The City Temple choir will render the anthem, "Comfort the Soul of Thy Servant," by Dr. Croch.

SERVICES MARK ANNIVERSARY AT ST. PAUL'S CHURCH

AT CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL
At the 7:30 p.m. service in Christ Church Cathedral to-morrow, the Dean of Columbia will preach a sermon, by request, on the subject of "The Fulfillment of Old Testament Prophecy." The Dean will answer the questions, "Was prediction the primary function of the prophets?" "Must prophecy be literally fulfilled? If not, then in what senses may we expect the fulfillment of prophecy?" "Are we justified in treating the Bible as a sort of horoscope through which we may read the exact course of coming events?"

REV. J. S. PATTERSON
pastor of the St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, who will preach at special anniversary services on Sunday evening. Rev. Daniel Walker will preach at the morning service.

7:10 o'clock, when all seats on the lower floor will be free to the public. A total of 1,200 seats are free for visitors.

Unity Services.—Walter Lanyon, noted author and lecturer, will speak twice Sunday at Unity Centre, 400 Campbell Building. Mr. Lanyon is an ex-service man, having acted in the capacity of interpreter and liaison runner. His lectures are interestingly delivered, combining the actual working of constructive thinking with everyday practical use. His subjects are "Your Heritage," at 11 a.m., and "The Eternal Potter" at 7:30 p.m., both being in the nature of book reviews.

ADVENT SERVICES FOR ALL ANGLICAN CHURCHES SUNDAY

Services Will be Appropriate to the Season's Nearing Christmas

Advent services will be held in all Anglican churches in the city to-morrow, when hymns, prayers and sermons will be appropriate to the season, which marks the beginning of another Christian year.

According to diocesan canon, all open offerings at to-morrow's services are given to the Diocesan Mission Fund. This fund supplies financial assistance where it is necessary to provide for the ministrations of the church in small parishes and outlying settlements.

AT CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL
At the 7:30 p.m. service in Christ Church Cathedral to-morrow, the Dean of Columbia will preach a sermon, by request, on the subject of "The Fulfillment of Old Testament Prophecy." The Dean will answer the questions, "Was prediction the primary function of the prophets?" "Must prophecy be literally fulfilled? If not, then in what senses may we expect the fulfillment of prophecy?" "Are we justified in treating the Bible as a sort of horoscope through which we may read the exact course of coming events?"

Monday, November 30, which is also St. Andrew's Day, will be observed as a day of prayer for missionaries and the extension of the Christian cause throughout the world. Holy communion services will be held in the Cathedral at 8 a.m. and 10:30 a.m. matins will be said at 9:30 a.m., and evensong at 5:15 p.m.

THE REAL MAN

A public meeting of the Victoria Theological Society (Independent) will be held on Sunday evening at 8 o'clock in the rooms of the society, 101 Union Bank Building, when "The Real Man" will be the subject of an address to be followed by open discussion.

The Rev. W. Barton of St. Alban's Church, Oaklands, is compelled for reasons of ill health to relinquish his regular work at St. Alban's after this week. It is hoped that all members of the congregation and friends in the district will join in the service on Sunday evening at 7 o'clock.

MUSIC FEATURES SUNDAY SERVICE

Firemen's Band Will Play at St. John's; Organ Recital Also

At the invitation of Rev. F. A. P. Chadwick, rector of St. John's Church, the Victoria Fire Brigade, headed by Chief Stewart, will attend Divine Service in St. John's Church on Sunday evening. There will be an organ recital by G. Jennings Burnett commencing at 7 o'clock. The Firemen's band, under the direction of Albert Rumsby, will also render several selections before the service, including the "Pilgrims' Song of Hope," by Batiato, and Handel's "Largo." The Firemen's band will play "Abide With Me" (with variations), and the recessional will be "March of the Silver Trumpets."

On Sunday morning the rector of St. John's will commence a series of Advent sermons on "The Second Coming of Christ." The offering during the day will be devoted to the Diocesan Mission fund and the authorities of St. John's hope for a liberal contribution to make up the missionary apportionment of the church.

PROPOSED NEW CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL

The plans and working drawings of the proposed Christ Church Cathedral, as completed to date by the architect, J. C. M. Keith, will be on public view at the Memorial Hall on Friday afternoon, and evening, December 4, in connection with a missionary bazaar and exhibition. Other exhibits of ecclesiastical art, and a mental hygiene exhibit, will be shown at the same time and place.

SPRING AUTOMOBILE STYLES TO BE RIOTS IN COLOR, IN CUBIST COMBINATIONS, TOO

By JAMES DEAN Special to The Victoria Times

New York, Nov. 28.—Fortunate, indeed, the family that numbers in its membership a cubist painter and a few cans of paint left over from last Summer's efforts on the old homestead.

For next Spring will see such a riot of color in automobiles as never before blinded the eyes of the highway raver. I pass on this news since I have been given an advance peek at some of the cars in the annual Automobile Salon and there I found all the colors of the combined peacock and parrot families. Surely with purple, yellow, red, lavender and what-have-you-to-dazzle-the-eyes-of-next-year's-motorist, the color-blind man alone will have a chance to avoid disaster.

FORD SERVICE TEXT IS NOW AVAILABLE

The first move by an automobile manufacturer to establish complete standardization of methods employed in repair service has been made by the Ford Motor Company in a text entitled "Ford Service," which is for distribution to authorized Ford dealers and service stations. This book, which includes about 300 pages, is the culmination of several years of research by Ford engineers. It covers in minute details, with numerous illustrations, every operation in assembling and repairing Ford cars.

Automobile engineers all over the country have long urged that a system of repair methods standardised by the manufacturer be worked out in the interest of car owners. Practically no two mechanics follow the same method, even on the same operation, they assert. Efficiency may also vary. It is pointed out, and it is an assurance of the highest type of service if in every shop the methods conducive to highest efficiency are employed.

For years the company has maintained a direct and close service supervision over its dealers and service stations, and with the new text this is strengthened by giving mechanics in simple form the ap-

MOTORISTS SHOULD LOOK OUT FOR CAR IN COLD WEATHER

Proper Anti-freeze Solutions Should be Used; Battery and Transmission Need Care

Cold weather's approach should turn the attention of every motor car owner to the care his car should get. Without waiting for a sudden freeze to burst radiators, stop up the lubrication system and destroy the storage-battery, these parts should be given immediate attention.

Before any anti-freeze solution is used, the water-circulation system should be drained thoroughly and flushed, and leaks repaired. This is a good time to change hose connections if they are worn out. Use an anti-freeze solution that contains calcium chloride or any similar compound; these corrode the inside of the radiator. A very satisfactory anti-freeze solution is one of alcohol and water—denatured alcohol preferred, though wood alcohol is satisfactory. Watch wood alcohol; if it contains acetic acid do not use it, for it will corrode the radiator.

DO IT NOW

Buy the alcohol now and put it in the garage, ready, so it won't be forgotten. In coldest weather, if the fan belt is loosened a little, so it will slip some and due to its inactivity will be liable to keep the motor running warmer.

Use a radiator cover in colder weather, with an opening in front which can be regulated for milder days. Chevrolet's acceptance with the motoring public was immediate and has spread to the farthest corners of the world and the demand has occasioned the erection and operation of thirteen plants. Economical transportation has become the watchword of the West. This statement is substantiated by the fact that Chevrolet cars are being purchased at the rate of one thousand per week on the Pacific Coast. Chevrolet's growth has been constant. By 1920 production had mounted to 159,513 cars for the year; in 1924—the factories turned out 484,080.

CHEVROLET SHOWS PHENOMENAL GROWTH

Twelve years ago the Chevrolet Motor Company was organized and a total of 2,999 automobiles were produced the first year. To-day Chevrolet is the largest manufacturer of motor cars with three-speed transmission in the world.

The Pacific Coast alone has purchased more than 40,000 Chevrolet cars since the first of this year. Chevrolet's acceptance with the motoring public was immediate and has spread to the farthest corners of the world and the demand has occasioned the erection and operation of thirteen plants.

Economical transportation has become the watchword of the West. This statement is substantiated by the fact that Chevrolet cars are being purchased at the rate of one thousand per week on the Pacific Coast.

This little car was designed and built by Gus Petzel of 1207 Grand Street, Alameda, California, who drove it from San Francisco to New York. He left San Francisco June 15 and arrived in New York September 21. The car has a four-cylinder, air cooling motor, electric lights, three speeds, self-starter; and it weighs 560 pounds. It has a speed of eighty miles per hour, and cost about $2,000 to build.

GOOD BRAKE LINING MEANS EFFICIENCY

The variation in the efficiency of the brakes when on a long trip is due to several things, but the condition of the brake lining is perhaps the most important. Sometimes the lining will become polished, in which case the brakes will not be very efficient. In other instances, the lining may be "roughened up" in which case the brakes will suddenly begin to speak, the dragging of the brakes or long application of them down long grades will cause the lining to become polished, whereas a few sudden applications of the brake will rough up the lining. Road dust and water will alter these conditions.

Maharajah Has Most Magnificent Motor Built For Hunting

The Maharajah of Patiala accepted delivery in London of what is believed to be the most remarkable and magnificent motor ever assembled. It has been built at Hendon, N.W. The cost is estimated at not less than £7,000.

FOREIGN CARS

Under other clauses in the new legislation all visiting motorists from foreign countries must register and attach stickers to their windshields indicating that they have completed this formality. At present, Mr. Manson said, registration is lax and it is impossible for police to check up all cars by asking their drivers if

MUNICIPALITIES SLACK IN MOTOR LAWS, HOUSE TOLD

Manson Plans Strict Account of All Visiting Cars; Licenses on Dashboards Now

Municipalities are failing to enforce the motor laws of the Province strictly enough, Attorney-General Manson declared in the Legislature yesterday when he guided his new amendments to the Motor Vehicle Act through committee during a two-hour sitting.

"Some of the municipalities are not doing their duty and it's a waste of time for this House to pass laws if the municipalities are not going to support us," Mr. Manson asserted. He referred particularly to the fact that drivers' signals were frequently disobeyed in municipalities and the police apparently were not coping with the situation adequately. Mr. Manson advanced the novel suggestion that school children should be taught in their classes the necessity of obeying such rules as most children now-a-days are prospective motor drivers.

Mr. Manson announced to the House that under his new Motor Act amendments licenses must be carried on the dash board of all cars. He proposed, he said, to have the licenses printed in more convenient form than at present and carried on the dashboard in some form of holder, protected by glass or celluloid.

The idea of this, he said, was to prevent the deception of the police by drivers who sometimes take out licenses for small cars and use them to cover large cars. With the licenses visible on the dashboard, he said, this deception would not be easy. This new regulation will go into effect after proclamation by the Government.

Another new rule explained by Mr. Manson forced car owners to report when they change the chassis or body or engine of cars. This is designed to force owners to pay licenses in strict accordance with the weight and value of their cars.

New daily production records were established all through the month as the domestic assembly plants came into production with the improved Ford cars following the change from the former types.

they have complied with the law. With the sticker system in vogue, however, it would be possible to see at a glance whether a car was in good standing, he said. Premier Oliver supported H. D. Twigg, Conservative, Victoria, in protesting regulations which might result in the clogging of windshields with stickers.

"This looks like a dangerous alliance between my leader and the Opposition," laughed Mr. Manson as he proceeded to defend his new regulations. To eliminate the difficulties suggested by Mr. Twigg and the Premier, he said he would be willing to forbid the use of any stickers, but those applied by the authorities as carried on windshields and also suggested that these official stickers should be placed in a corner of the windshield furthest from the driver.

Considerable progress was made with the Motor Act and it will be passed finally through committee stage next week.

FORD PLANTS STILL SMASHING RECORDS

Two records for manufacture of motor cars in the United States were established by the Ford Motor Company with the close of October. Saturday, the last day of the month, the company's domestic assembly plants produced a total of 9,109 Ford cars and trucks, exceeding Friday's record output of 9,017, and setting a new high mark for any one day.

The total production for October was 264,827 cars and trucks, which tops any previous month.

New daily production records were established all through the month as the domestic assembly plants came into production with the improved Ford cars following the change from the former types.

Winnipeg, Nov. 28.—Frigid winds sweeping across the prairies from the Arctic wastes, forced temperatures at many points yesterday to the lowest levels of the season. Saskatoon, with ten below zero, the coldest spot in the whole of Canada, Winnipeg running a close second, showing six below.

OAKLAND COMPANION WILL BE OUT SOON

Supplementing the brief announcement by the General Motors corporation of the new car which they have perfected and which will shortly go into production, the following interesting facts concerning this new creation are given to the publisher's line of passenger cars.

There already has been appropriated $3,000,000 for the original expenditure for machinery and physical equipment.

A new light six car is to be brought out on a basis of first year production never before attempted. The programme in all its various ramifications has been under way for more than two years. The engineering reached a stage of completion some months ago.

Carefully adopted after a full canvass of all the facts, the plans call for the production of 60,000 cars the first year. The materials entering into production have been purchased and details largely arranged for this vast enterprise.

This car will be made in the Oakland plant in conjunction with the present Oakland and will be an entirely new addition to the General Motors' line of passenger cars.

The new car will be known as a companion car to the present Oakland, which has been meeting with such great favor throughout the country, and will be handled by the same dealer organization. Expansion of machine shop and assembly line facilities has been going forward for some time, so that the new car can be put into production in December. It will be shown at the January show in New York, when, for the first time the name, specifications and price of the new car will be disclosed. The only announcement made is that Fisher bodies will be used, and the price will range between the Chevrolet and the Oldsmobile lines.

Do Not Spin Wheels When Stuck in Mud

When the car becomes stuck in the mud, do not try to put on speed to get out. For this will only spin the wheels and make them sink deeper. Put the engine in low, go slow, and do not try to turn from side-to-side. Keep straight ahead. If the rear wheels start spinning, put on the emergency brake just enough to stop the spin. That will frequently enable them to take hold. If it is possible, get any old rope, board, bushes, sacks, or even a quantity of paper, and put it under the wheels to help give traction. It is always advisable to apply chains before tackling wet or muddy roads.

Last Minute News on Stocks and Financial Affairs

New York, Nov. 28 (By R. P. Clark & Co.)—The trend of the market early was in an upward direction attended with a general covering of shorts, but heavy realizing sales were attracted by the advance, and the list, generally speaking, developed a reactionary tone, but the greater losses were in the industrial department.

The news was of a constructive sort, the French capital reported the formation of a new ministry and the probability of a better turn of affairs is expected from the conference called by Governor Pinchot. Domestic business reports were again conducive to operations for the rise, particularly in the rail department.

The earnings for October as disclosed this morning by the Pennsylvania, Illinois Central, Southern Railway were very favorable documents as contrasted with comparison figures of a year ago. The weekly business reports were also of an optimistic trend.

The industrial department found it rather difficult to digest this morning's offerings and it appears as though the heavy influences have to be developed to encourage further outside participation on the constructive side.

New York, Nov. 28 (By R. P. Clark & Co.)—The Wall Street Journal's stock market edition today says: The short session opened with a firm tone and price levels, which were higher than the previous close. These gains were fairly well maintained through the first hour following which offerings increased materially and the list gave ground.

Reaction from the earlier high ran from one to five points, with pressure more noticeable on the motor than on other groups. This development was not regarded as illogical in view of the rapid recovery in prices last Friday coming on the heels of the sharp gains Wednesday.

Traders apparently were more desirous of cashing in some of their profits than to carry stocks over the week-end. Toward the close of the session offerings petered out, and the general list of stocks had a nice recovery. In some cases the early high were broken, but in others were several new high registers.

American Ice was one of these, with a gain of more than five points to 131 1/2, a new high based on expectations of favorable dividend action just before Christmas. Earnings are running better than $25 a share for the year.

Quite strength in Sears-Roebuck in leading credence to talk of a pending split up in stocks with four for one ratio being discussed in brokerage circles.

Some special developments are pending in oil industry. Tidewater Oil made a new high for the year at 36 1/2.

The street understands that W. O. Durant has to carry heavy loads of General Motors yesterday. The advance was effectively stopped by pressure of offerings, and the general list gave ground.

Motors naturally were offered in larger volume, and reacted two to four points from high earlier in the day. Sulphur stocks were helped by increase in price of $2 a ton.

CHICAGO GRAIN

Chicago, Nov. 28 (By R. P. Clark & Co.)—The market for grain showed a slight upward trend in early trading, but was soon checked by the receipt of large shipments of wheat from the Argentine and other countries.

Private cables from the southern hemisphere continued, mostly of a bullish tenor, one claiming that surplus would not be in excess of 100,000,000 bushels. This was moderate, but wires from Winnipeg advised that Chicago situation was strengthening and there would be large shipments of wheat down to the head of the lakes from Port William prior to close of navigation.

Rye: Traded wheat up, early and down late. Scatter profit taking and less active demand. News was little changed. Export inquiry for this grain has been some better of late, but business affected in the aggregate has been only moderate. Movement from country continues small.

Chicago, Nov. 28 (By R. P. Clark & Co.)—Wheat: Broke early on local pressure but this selling was quickly absorbed and market to above yesterday's close followed on bullish Argentine news. A cable reported Buenos Aires closing 1 1/4 to 2 3/4 cents lower led to free selling as the holders of wheat tried to take profits and a break of nearly 4 cents occurred, with the close near the day's low figures. Export demand slow.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

Winnipeg, Nov. 28.—Early gains ranging from 4 1/2 to 6 1/2 featured to-day's session of violent fluctuations on the Winnipeg grain exchange.

The coarse grains generally followed the trend of wheat with the trade volume light. The market was very erratic on Saturday and after lower opening on sharply lower cable from Liverpool prices were bid up 4 1/2 for November above the previous close, while the May advanced over two cents.

At the present time, there is a strong feeling of uncertainty here, but it is not likely that the market will be materially affected. The market is expected to be fairly active for some time, but it is not likely that the market will be materially affected.

Regulation of Radio in U.S. Urged by Official

Washington, Nov. 28.—Reasonable regulation is necessary for the successful operation and continued growth of the vast new radio industry, D. B. Carson, navigation commissioner, said today in his annual report to Secretary Hoover.

At the end of the last fiscal year, Mr. Carson said 15,111 licensed amateur radio stations were operating in the United States, while the number of first-class radio broadcasting establishments had increased from fifty-four to ninety-nine and second-class broadcasting stations from 275 to 463.

CHARGE OF MURDER

Ogden, Utah, Nov. 28.—Mike Noorlander, twenty-one, and his brother Fred, twenty, were charged by Bannock County, Idaho, authorities with first degree murder in connection with the death of Walter Scadden, who was beaten last Sunday night while defending his store at Inkom, Idaho, from robbers. Mike was shot during the hold-up and is in a hospital at Pocatello. Fred was taken into custody near Provo, Utah, and brought here yesterday. Fred confessed to the murder, local police say, that it was he who struck and fatally injured Scadden with a flashlight after the storekeeper had shot Mike.

NOTICE

BIG CONGREGATION AT CATHEDRAL FOR DEAN'S FUNERAL SERVICE

Dean of Columbia Pays Tribute to Womanliness of Queen Mother

Simple and dignified in character, the memorial service held at Christ Church Cathedral for the late Queen Mother at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon drew a large congregation. The officiating clergy were Right Rev. Bishop of Columbia, Very Rev. Dean Quinlan and the Reverend Archdeacon Laycock.

In his tribute to the late Queen, the Dean of Columbia dealt principally with three phases of her life: For the first phase he quoted lines from Tennyson's famous welcome of the beautiful Danish Princess coming as a bride to London.

"See King's daughter from over the sea, Saxon, Norman and Dane are we, But—all of us Danes in our welcome of thee! Alexandra!"

The second phase was nine years later, when it was proposed to hold services of national rejoicing upon the recovery of Prince Edward from a serious illness. Given Victoria, who was in mourning for the Prince Consort, objected to a public function, but the Princess of Wales by her tact and charm won the Queen over and the services were held.

The third phase came twenty years later, when she sat beside the bedside of her dying son, the Duke of Clarence, to whom she whispered remark that someone was calling, she replied gently, "Jesus is calling you, my dear." Pre-eminently the Queen was a good woman, entering with infinite sympathy into the sorrows of others and holding a special corner in her heart for afflicted children. "God bless her soul, and may she rest in peace," concluded the Dean.

The service opened with the Dead March in "Saul," and this was followed by the reading of Scripture sentences and the singing of the Ninetieth Psalm.

The first lesson was read by the Rev. H. T. Archbold, of St. Mathias Church, and the second lesson by the Archdeacon. Then the anthem, "O God of Saints" was sung by the choir and the hymn, "How Bright These Glorious Spirits Shine" by the congregation.

Prayers were offered by the Bishop of Columbia, and the hymn, "Jesus Lives," was sung by the congregation, followed by the National Anthem and benediction.

ITALIAN GRAND OPERA EVENT IN CHICAGO

Chicago, Nov. 28.—The 100th anniversary of Italian grand opera in the United States was celebrated here last night. The Chicago Civic Opera Company presented Rossini's "The Barber of Seville," the Italian opera which made its American debut a century ago in New York.

After a history of 100 years in America, "The Barber of Seville" still was found pleasing without a change of a note from the original work by Rossini.

CHARLES RAY ADMITS HE IS BANKRUPT

Los Angeles, Nov. 28.—Charles Ray, motion picture actor, featured in a long series of financial misadventures, admitted in court yesterday that he was a voluntary bankrupt. He listed his liabilities as $985,503 and assets as $130,355.

The actor's father, Charles T. Ray, former president of Charles Ray Productions Inc., a company formed to produce films featuring his son, filed a similar petition, listing liabilities of $394,510 and assets of $199,500. Involuntary bankruptcy suits were filed against Charles Ray Productions Inc. some time ago.

House Must Speed up Oliver Tells Tired Members at Fag End of a Long Weary Week

Work of the Provincial Legislature should be speeded up immediately, Premier Oliver told the House yesterday at the fag-end of a hard week. With four weeks of legislating concluded, he said, a big volume of business still remained to be done. He brought down a formal motion under which the Government can call for a night session at any time, the idea being to press the Budget debate forward next week.

This brought R. H. Pooley, Opposition leader, to his feet with a more or less friendly objection. "You can't accuse the Opposition of wasting time any way," he remarked.

R. H. Neslade, Labor South Vancouver, urged the Government to terminate night sessions at a reasonable hour, say 10:30 or 11 o'clock. When the House wandered on into the winning hour of midnight and beyond, he said, no one could do proper justice to the business under consideration.

The Premier replied that he did not control the end of the night sittings—at all times but he did not want to force unreasonable hours on the members. "I am able to do it," he admitted with a sigh, "but with all my good qualities I can't do my best work when I'm asleep."

Sixteen Inquests Are Held in Pittsburg

Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 28.—Sixteen sudden deaths in the Pittsburg district over the Thanksgiving holiday have been investigated by deputy coroners. Four small boys were killed in coasting accidents. The other deaths were attributed to heart attacks, burns, moonshine liquor and falls.

STATEMENT ON DEATH
New York, Nov. 28.—The firm of Sobel and Brank of this city, attorneys for Parker Wilder & Company, today made public a statement denying the recent death of S. Parker Bremer, head of the company, was due to financial reverses. Mr. Bremer disappeared from the Farness Bermuda liner Fort Victoria while on his way here.

AT THE THEATRES

RIGTOUS MUSICAL FARCE ATTRACTS COLISEUM PATRONS

In staging the riotous musical farce, "The Burglar," at the Coliseum this week every member of the audience will have an opportunity to make a selection from a big repertoire of songs, and this perhaps is the reason why the musical comedies were never better except perhaps in the great success of last week, "The Flying Boys." The farce has a real plot which holds the interest of the audience throughout, both for the comedy it contains and for the exciting climax. Vinnie Kelley and Legs Willis are back with the company in parts for which they are admirably suited and were given a cordial reception from their admirers. In contrast with the hilarity on stage, a gripping mystery play is on the screen, "Secrets of the Night," starring Midge Bellamy and Howard Leeds in a plot of intrigue. Stories have been told on a Victoria screen.

COLORFUL ROMANCE OF MODERN FRANCE IS PLAYHOUSE FILM

A de luxe entertainment is in store for film enthusiasts who visit the Playhouse this week with "The Name of Love," the main feature attraction, is a colorful romance with modern France for its picturesque locale. Howard Leeds, in the role of the Parisian, is directed by for Paris mount, and the sterling cast includes Ricardo Cortez, Greta Nissen, Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton.

The "clothes" in this picture are exemplified by Cortez who wears a glittering military uniform with gold braid, medals, epaulettes, and cuffs. Beery and Hatton, as a bogus count and a decadent marquis, respectively, are veritable fashion plates.

On the feminine side, Miss Nissen's blonde loveliness is accentuated by fashionable Paris gowns, fashionable and chic for the moment. Famous styles created by Lillian Leigh, as the newly rich mother of Greta Nissen, and Elythe Chapman, as the poor girl, are particularly beautiful gowns, although the raiment of the former is exaggerated in keeping with the type of her role.

BUCK JONES AND HIS DOG IN "Gold and the Girl"

Adventures of Swiss Family Robinson—Last Chapter COMEDY

COLUMBIA

Harmony never has been entirely restored between Carol Dempster and Lucy, the elephant, who appear together in D. W. Griffith's merry comedy of circus life, "Sally of the Sawdust." A United Artists corporation release now at the Dominion Theatre.

At the beginning, Lucy, who is conservatively in her friendships, tolerated Carol. Gradually they became quite friendly. Then Lucy became an intense admirer, and friend when Carol Dempster casually left a two-pound box of chocolates on a chair and the elephant ate them all. Lucy thought that quite a treat, there being few persons willing to cultivate her friendship with dollar and a half a pound of chocolates.

It got so Lucy would trumpet whenever she saw Miss Dempster around the studio and Carol would shout back "Hello, Lucy" and generally go over and pet her. Always, however, she had an eye for another box of candy, a taste which peanuts didn't satisfy.

Then the carpenters began overhauling the little theatre where the cutting of films is done, and the projecting machine and screen were put temporarily on the stage. Lucy and her keeper would naturally be left on the stage. Whenever Carol Dempster would appear, Lucy would trumpet. No response. Lucy gave her a thorough trip, snuffing her and over again, but the Carol Dempster on the film didn't answer.

The next day, Lucy wouldn't recognize the little theatre where she came along, it took another batch of chocolates before there was any good will, and even now there is still suspicion.

attempted comes Monday to the Capitol Theatre. It is a spectacular mystery story of Paris, in which a complete operatic performance, staged in a huge replica of the Paris Opera House, largest in the world, is compared with weird and grotesque adventures in the great cellars and catacombs.

Lon Chaney plays "The Phantom," a strange creature of the shadows, in a makeup that eclipses his weird disguise as "Quasimodo" in the Hugo classic. Mary Philbin plays the opera singer whom he kidnaps into his underground stronghold, and Norman Kerry plays her lover and rescuer.

A remarkable cast is seen in the principal roles, and fully 4,000 people take part in the mob scenes, the brilliant spectacles on the Grand staircase of the Opera, and the gala performance of "Faust" staged in the opera house proper.

Much of this action is taken in color photography, which gives a vivid aspect to the kaleidoscopic scenes. Rupert Julian, director of

Protecting Forests By Aeroplanes

Ontario Fights Red Enemy With Most Modern Weapons

AIRMAN SOARING OVER GREAT STANDS OF TIMBER DETECTED OVER 500 OUTBREAKS OF FIRE

Example of Eastern Province May Lead British Columbia to Use Air Patrol to Lessen Enormous Losses Through Fire Every Year; Toll is Counted in Millions of Dollars

DESPITE the best efforts of forest rangers, patrol boats, lookout men posted at vantage points in isolated stations, motor patrols and every device of the forestry branch of the Department of Lands in the Summer of this year, forest fire got their deadly stranglehold on huge areas of timber land on Vancouver Island and other parts of British Columbia to the point where 850,000 acres of valuable timber was laid waste.

Cruisers now are going over this great area turning in their reports to the Forestry branch and estimating the enormous loss in dollars that this means to British Columbia. The figures are piling up daily as the cruisers classify the timber destroyed and the damage is figured out in dollars. Their work will not be completed until the end of December, but a rough forecast can be made of what the total will probably be.

850,000 ACRES
SWEEPED BY FIRE

The 850,000 acreage toll of the evil red enemy against which the branch wages continuous war is enormous but in 1922 it was nearly doubled. The acreage swept that year was 1,568,585, representing a monetary loss to the province of $2,224,316.

It can then be fairly estimated that British Columbia's forest fire cost to the Province this year will be well over the million dollar mark. In fact comparisons with the years since 1918 would indicate the loss will approach the two million dollar mark.

There is probably not one person in British Columbia who would level one word against the heroes of the lookout posts who from their lonely sentinel watching for the warning column of smoke or the daring rugged forest rangers, one of whom only this Summer gave up his life nobly carrying out his duties. By foot these men trudge the lonely trails of the dense forests. By automobile they plunge over roads which few would dare to travel. By boat they go into uncharted lanes of the coast, ever alert and ready to make any sacrifice to check the blaze that will quickly leave charred and blackened stumps where once thousands of valuable feet of timber once stood.

EFFICIENCY IS CONSIDERATION

These men have done their best for years but figures tell the story of the need for something, and the first thought is the aeroplane. In view of the figures year after year, which tell the story of British Columbia's fire loss, the cost of the necessary number of aeroplanes to form an efficient aeroplane patrol of the province's timber lands can hardly be considered at as a debatable point. Its efficiency should prove the only consideration.

Pictures shown on this page, most of them taken on Vancouver Island, will illustrate the great range which an aeroplane sweeping over areas through which the patrol men laboriously trudge can survey. Then again these only represent the scope that can be included in a camera shot and not the great territory which can be surveyed by the men in the machine.

ONTARIO AND ALBERTA LEADS

But probably the greatest argument in favor of aeroplanes to guard British Columbia forests comes from Ontario. The report of the Department of Lands and Forests for 1924 shows that in that year there were 851 fires with an area burned of 146,017 acres. Fires detected from the air totaled 597 of the 851.

AEROPLANES HAVE CUT LOSSES

Alberta too has tried an air patrol to minimize forest fire losses and has found it a success. British Columbia has frequently been urged to prepare for all eventualities by following the lead of the two provinces named, and in this connection an editorial in The Victoria Times urging the Legislature to take action this session might well be repeated: Under the caption, "Try an Air Patrol," it reads:

"The Legislature should take time this Session to consider the forest fire situation. The number of fires and the value of the timber and other property they destroyed during the recent long, dry Summer should emphasize the importance of making provision for the most adequate means of combatting this yearly menace. Considering the part played by our timber wealth in our economic progress, apart from the necessity of safeguarding other property as well as human lives endangered from this cause, we are confident the Legislature will be disposed to provide ample funds, not only for the expansion of preventive measures, but for the further development of our forest fire-fighting service.

SPEEDILY CONVEYED TO SCENE OF FIRE

"We understand a proposal has been made to the Government to try an aeroplane patrol in one of the districts on the Mainland which has suffered heavily from forest fires during the last few years. Ontario and Alberta are using these patrols and find them most effective, especially in detecting and fighting forest fires in sections difficult to reach by ordinary means of travel. To these sections aeroplanes, flying at eighty or ninety miles an hour, can convey fire-fighters and equipment from the nearest fire warden district headquarters very quickly, and put out in its early stages a fire which otherwise in a short time would destroy a vast quantity of timber, as well as other property of value.

SHOULD TRY IT ON VANCOUVER ISLAND

"We should try this patrol next season not only in the section on the Mainland referred to, but on Vancouver Island as well. This Island was a severe sufferer from forest fires last Summer. A heavy pall of smoke hung over it from one end to the other for week after week, and much valuable property was destroyed. The situation in fact had reached a stage where, notwithstanding the ceaseless activities of our efficient fire-fighting forces, only the natural elements could afford relief.

"Undoubtedly weather conditions were exceptional last Summer in the sense that they were favorable to forest fires, but they are sure to occur again. We should prepare for all eventualities. We should try every means within our resources and proportionate to the extent and value of the property and interests imperilled, to cope with this evil. If an aircraft patrol is as adequate a protective factor as its advocates say it is and as the authorities in Ontario and Alberta seem to think it is, it will pay for itself many times over. In any case we should try it out."

British Columbia can profit by Ontario's experiments and commence operations at the practical stage. Ontario has used an air patrol for four seasons now and some extracts culled from the report of the Department of Lands and Forests for the last two years should provide encouragement to this province in inaugurating the system.

NO EQUAL FOR LOCATING FIRES

"Operations during two seasons in which aircraft have been used clearly demonstrated that for sighting and locating forest fires aircraft have no equal," says the 1923 report.

"For country similar to that in the Western part of the Province, where the expenditure necessary for an efficient ground detection system makes that system prohibitive, patrol by aircraft is the best possible solution," reads another extract. Another says:

"Air patrol has a great moral effect, both upon the people in the patrol area, and upon the rangers themselves."

The 1924 report of the Ontario Minister of Lands and Forests shows that the flying section has become a permanent and recognized one the air operations covering not only fire detection, but also surveys and investigations.

In that year flying operations were undertaken as a provincial service. The work was placed with the Forestry branch and W. R. Maxwell was appointed as a director to take charge of the operations.

FOURTEEN MACHINES

Fourteen machines were used and the province was divided into two districts, the East and the West, with Lake Nipigon the dividing line. For supervision and maintenance of the operating main bases Major C. A. Thompson was chosen superintendent of the Eastern flying district and Captain J. R. Ross, superintendent of the Western flying district. The duty of the Provincial Air Service was to have machines ready for patrol at all times to supply the flying when and where requested. The desire of the Provincial Air Service was to serve co-operatively with the ground forces as a detection and supervisory force. Gas and oil were shipped in April to the various bases and sub-bases in the Province. Field shops were erected at Ramsay Lake, Eastern headquarters and at Pelican Lake, Western headquarters?

MANY USES FOR AIR PILOT

Proper tools were installed at these depots for the overhaul, assembly and test of engines. Spares were placed in stores for maintenance and replacements of machines and engines. After eighty hours flying engines were overhauled. A shop foreman was placed in charge of ground engineers and under his practical supervision all overhaul, repair and test was taken care of.

The director points out that there are many uses for an air patrol and enumerates among them, fire patrol, fire fighting, suppression, sketching, photography, in-

SCIENTIST TO HUNT PYGMY TRIBES IN AEROPLANE

Smithsonian Institute Sends Party With Tear Gas and Flying Machine to Dare Jungle Perils in Search for Race of Wild Dwarfs

BY HAROLD MATSON

THE chief of the pigmy tribe will beat his chest and screech his wildest war cry, summoning bands of three-foot black men from their caves. And the naked midgets of savagery will sally across swamps to look up from the jungle to the skies.

There they will see a gigantic bird, stiff-winged, swooping down with a roar, and the pigmies may scatter to shelter or they may hide in waiting, ready to make their kill when the strange bird alights.

If they dare to wait they will see the bird splash over the swamp, belching puffs of smoke, and out from the very body of the bird five creatures like themselves, but twice as big, will jump. And if the pigmies still dare to attack they will find themselves in fits of coughing, great tears will run from their eyes and then everything will go black. The pigmies will lose their sight.

All this is to happen on an island of Dutch New Guinea, off Batavia, in the jungle land of the pigmies—never trespassed by civilized people—if the expedition of Professor Matthew W. Stirling is a success.

Stirling, who was curator of the National Museum in Washington for five years, is leaving San Francisco for Batavia. He expects to find the pigmy tribes which man has sought many times and as many times has failed to find; and he expects to do it with an airplane!

HOME OF CANNIBALS

The island of the pigmies is some 600 miles long and 200 miles wide. On its shores live head hunters and cannibals, wild men who are yet wild even to tourists. If it were not for the high mountains, that rise 5,000 feet, and the dense jungle that cups the centre of the island in swampy land, these cannibals long ago would have annihilated their little fellows of the island, the pigmies.

But penetrating the jungle is nigh impossible. Four hundred natives, using modern implements, worked eight months into the jungle with the last white expedition: They made only forty miles, and never even saw footprints of a pigmy.

Stirling means to establish his base along the coast, to take his all-metal, Liberty-motored, airplane over the mountains and jungles, to land in the swamps, photograph and study the pigmies, and then fly back.

The pigmies live in the stone age," Stirling says. "When ancient vintage. It would not have been so had had not his taste in dress been indicative of his attitude toward progress in other things—in politics, in education, in religion, in affairs of social importance. He was as much out of step in these matters as he was sartorially.

No one can afford to get out of step. Keeping in step is an indication of progress, it shows a willingness to work with others in harmony, it brings happiness and predicts success.

MEN WHO KEEP IN STEP AND THOSE WHO FALL OUT

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK

A friend of mine tells the story of an old negro—he had been born a slave and had fought in the northern army—whom he had known as a boy. It happened that they met often as the old man worked about his cabin or trudged slowly along the highway.

His eyes were very dim; he was drawn and crippled by rheumatism and was scarcely the ideal to whom a growing boy would look for inspiration and whom he would hold up as an ideal. He always spoke and raised his battered hat as he met the boy in the roadway.

"Goodmornin', Massa John."

"Hello, John would reply. "How are you getting on, Sam?"

"Thankee, Massa John, thankee kindly," was the invariable reply, "praise de Lord, I'm able to keep step yet. I'm steppin'. How's you steppin'?"

"Keeping step, keeping up with things—that was the old man's idea of fitness. It was his test of character and loyalty, and religious faith, perhaps. How many of us are keeping step?"

When Morton was forty, he was tired of work and without interest in the community in which he was living. He was doing very well, but he was out of sympathy with everything about him—out of step with the world as it were. He moved to town and gave up the farm and settled down to do nothing.

There were a great many interests which needed his help, activities in which he might have taken part, causes, which he might have championed, but he was critical, cynical without understanding or sympathy. He talked a good deal about "the good old days" and found little of interest or to command in the present. He was out of step, lagging behind, and might better have been sent to the rear.

Scott was an educated man and a shrewd one, too, but he was always out of step with things—never quite in sympathy with any movement toward real progress that might be started. When every one else was appearing with a smoothly shaved face, Scott wore whiskers down to his belt. He considered a necktie and a stiff collar uncomfortable and undemocratic.

WOULDN'T CONFORM

He would never submit to wearing evening clothes though he was part of a community where full dress was commonly worn at evening functions, so that when every one else was in spick and span with a full shirt front, Scott came in with baggy trousers and a Prince Albert coat of ancient vintage. It would not have been so had had not his taste in dress been indicative of his attitude toward progress in other things—in politics, in education, in religion, in affairs of social importance. He was as much out of step in these matters as he was sartorially.

No one can afford to get out of step. Keeping in step is an indication of progress, it shows a willingness to work with others in harmony, it brings happiness and predicts success.

Temple of Apollo, Begun In 600 B.C. Found In Ruins of Ancient Cyrene

Italian Archaeologists Announce Discovery on North African Coast; Building Twice Wrecked by Fire Rebuilt and Became Christian Church.

Rome, Nov. 28. — Discoveries of primary importance are announced by the Italian scholars who have been excavating the site of the ancient Greek colonial city of Cyrene, on the North African coast between the modern cities of Benghazi and Derna.

The archaeologists have been working under auspices of the Government of Cyrenaica, the modern Italian colony which takes its name from ancient Cyrene. They announce that they have proved that

Honey Colors Vary, Its Uses Are Many

The famous temple of Apollo, the main temple of Cyrene when it was among the fairest of Mediterranean cities in the sixth and fifth centuries B.C., was originally built by the Greeks about 600 B.C.

This proof was taken from a stratigraphy alongside the ruins of the temple's substructure, in which the excavators found are dating as far back as 1,200 B.C. and believed to be of Libyan origin.

The discoveries found elaborate frescoes in red and blue terra cotta, and marble columns perfect by preservation. They found the temple of Apollo was damaged by fire in the last century before Christ, and that in the reconstruction edifice many new features were embodied, including an elaborate mosaic over the main entrance.

"Big Game Hunter Lauds Canadian Rockies"

Col. Philip Moore, Princeton Graduate, big game hunter, war veteran, and mountain climber, is so well known in the Canadian Pacific Rockies that, as one guide put it, "he haunts a grizzly when it passes him and asks after its misadventures and the cubs."

Ever since Col. Moore first visited the mountainous regions of Alberta and British Columbia, he has managed to spend part of each year hunting, camping, and climbing mountains. He returned recently from a summer sojourn in Yoho Valley, where he added a few more miles to his 2,500 mile record on horseback as a member of the Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies.

The building of good roads through the mountains and the resultant growth in automobile traffic is a new feature which adds greatly to the increase in tourists. The opening of the Banff-Windermere road, and the road from Lake Louise to Wapta, thus making a splendid highway all the way from Calgary through the Kicking

Tourist Invasion Leaves France With New Smart Phrases

Paris, Nov. 28.—William of Normandy's rather forceful conquest of the British Isles gave thousands of Norman-French words to the English tongue. In these latter days the ever more numerous invasion of English and American tourists has added a heterogeneous collection of isolated words and phrases to the vocabulary of the smart Parisian.

Words ending in "ing" have a special fascination for the Parisian who wouldn't think of trying for a comprehensive English vocabulary, but who likes to interlard his sentences with words of a bizarre sound. A dinner jacket is always a "smoking," one travels in a "sleeping," or sleeping car, and one goes from one end to an afternoon's "footing" in the Bois de Boulogne of a bright Autumn day.

"Weekend" came into general use during the endless conferences of the post-war years, when English statesmen insisted upon getting away Friday night for a rest over Sunday from official cares. In a similar way Parisians have learned to take their "five o'clock," "flirt" used as a noun and not as a verb, is in good sport.

Sporting terms, such as "knock-out," "supercut," and the "decue" and "love" of tennis, have gotten almost national circulation, despite the efforts of a number of eminent sportsmen to persuade their followers to use the pure French.

John Galsworthy Praises Satirists

JOHN GALSWORTHY, celebrated English novelist, feels that America at last has begun to learn how to laugh at itself.

Satire, he feels, is one of the healthiest indications when not barbed with personalities and reduced to mere sarcasm. He thinks Sinclair Lewis, who exposed Babbitts and Main Streets, is at the head of this particular procession. James Boyd and Edith Wharton are considered by him as most important steel and big business; Villard's "Renoir" which tells amusing and interesting anecdotes of the great French painter; "Catherine the Great" by Katherine Anthony—an entirely different approach to one of the world's greatest women, in which there is much psychologizing and a lot that is more important than her mere loves; "Aaron Burr" by Samuel Wadwell; and Meade Minnerode is a fine record of one of America's most romantic figures;

Poetry Chapbooks Make Debut in B.C.

There has now burst upon the British Columbia world of poetry something novel in the form of the first of a series of cheap books, which are being put out by the Vancouver Poetry Society, 2550 Fifth Avenue, W., Vancouver.

Chap-books were first published in France about the fifteenth century. They first appeared in England during the reign of Henry VIII. Illustrated with wood cuts and generally containing the lives of heroes, fairy-love, ghost and witch stories, and poems or ballads, they were sold among the people by chapmen or itinerant peddlars. The late Claude Lovat Fraser was responsible for the revival in our day of this quaint and artistic form of publication, through the Poetry Bookshop of London, England.

The series, the publication of which the Vancouver Poetry Society is now embarked on, is being illustrated with cuts by one of its members, Janet Eaves. The poetry itself is the work of the members of the society. Each edition will be strictly limited and each copy will bear a serial number. This should add to the attractiveness of these little volumes to the true book lover.

To give an idea of what the work is like, the first volume published, "One Morning," by J. Bromley Coleman, running as follows:

I remember one hour
On the brink of morning,
I saw a woman
Swaying with a tenement
Drunk with despair;

I saw a man
Whose eyes were harbors
Of hate and hunger;
I saw a little child
Searching the garbage
Like an eager sparrow;

I saw a woman
On a market wagon
Swaying in the breeze,
While the clean, health of ocean
Swept along the street
As a clear benison.

Then I remember
A miracle of dawn—
That touched the hair of the woman
With Madonna gold,
That lent to the man
The mystery of Lucifer,
That surrounded the little child
With a sprinkling of splendor...
The yellow daffodils were not so base
As these bruised human flowers.

BALDWIN GAINS IN STRENGTH AS TRADE REVIVES

Success of Security Negotiations Looked to as Bettering His Chances

But in Background is Fear Over Labor-Fascisti Troubles

London, Nov. 28.—Parliament will convene after the recess for the royal funeral under conditions more favorable for the Baldwin Government than most Conservatives dared hope for a couple of months ago.

The Conservative record in foreign affairs has been strengthened immeasurably by the successful negotiation of the Locarno treaty, while in the most important domestic question—that of trade and employment—luck favored Baldwin with the beginning of a trade revival sufficiently marked to be accepted as genuine.

Conservative politicians themselves, in private conversation, admit that they have not any very definite idea of what started the turn in the industrial tide. Nor do they pretend that their troubles in this field are anything like overblown. It is plain, however, that the trade increased during the last three months in anything like the ratio of the early Autumn, and the Government, despite their huge Parliamentary majority, would in the session have been faced with a fight for their political lives.

MUST DEFEND COAL SUBSIDY

As it is, the administration will have to defend the coal subsidy to meet the criticism about unemployment and to justify the coal subsidy which calls for an application of general tariffs through the subterfuge of "safeguarding industries." Broadly speaking the measures to be debated this session fall into three groups.

All of these are concerned with matters of domestic policy, as the opposition, the Labour Party, the Nationalists and China will not worry Chamberlain so long as he has Locarno to point to. First and most important is the coal subsidy.

REGRET STAND AGAINST TARIFF

Chamberlain's social insurance scheme also will be costly, and Amery will have to try to reduce the enormous expenditures to which Britain is committed in Iraq. Over all this, there will be the ominous shadow of the new taxes which are being considered by the Chancellor of the Exchequer since the war has yet dared impose. With the imposition of fresh tariffs, it is generally anticipated that the Government's budget exceeds the £50,000,000 originally set.

CHURCHILL'S SOCIAL INSURANCE

They promised before the last election—having underestimated their strength—not to impose a general tariff. Ever since the day after the election, the diehards have been wishing this promise never had been made.

The second important field of parliamentary business has been outlined above—measures having to do with the industrial and financial situation. The third group of debate will be one which, in the case of the Conservatives, can hardly be regarded as anything but a non-controversial subject, namely, what might be termed the domestic and political policy of the Baldwin Government.

There will be a sharp Labor and Liberal attack on the Government, and particularly on the Home Secretary, for inaugurating the prosecution of twelve British Communists on charges of violating the seditious laws of 1877. Within the last couple of weeks another incident has arisen—the assault on the two Communist defectors, the Dally Herald auto delivery truck, and the absurdly light penalty, amounting to virtual vindication.

Imposed because the Public Protector withdrew the charges originally made against the attackers.

This provides more or less of a parallel to the British Communist case on which the Labor Government went out of office, and Labor may be trusted to make the most of it. In addition to this, there is the Johnson-Hicks blessing to the volunteer strike-breaking organization, "Oms," and the determination of some Conservatives to attack the basis on which trade union funds are raised.

The Conservative press was held pretty well in line on these subjects, but when it had wholeheartedly endorsed Conservative policy—which it obviously has not—it would still be on the defensive against the attacking Labor and Liberal onslaught.

Of the 415 members of Parliament, the Conservatives have 420. Labor 135 and the Liberals 46. There is, therefore, a question as to the direction of these debates, but the Government can be made to look very foolish. The Opposition realizes this, and will doubtless confine itself more to verbal fireworks than to serious challenge of the Government. There is always the chance that out of these debates may arise some slogan or catchword which will be very useful later on.

Greek God Zeus Ought to Have Been 'Mr. Props' on Stage

London, Nov. 28.—The second volume of A. B. Cook's "Zeus: A Study in Ancient Religion," will shortly issue from the Cambridge University Press. It is the first volume of the first volume of Zeus as "God of the Bright Sky" and the present work deals with the conception of Zeus as god of thunder and lightning.

BRITISH MINISTER IN STRANGE GARB

Many photographs of Austen Chamberlain, British Minister of Foreign Affairs, have been printed. His elegantly groomed figure in highly formal dress, and his monocle, are familiar to everyone. This is an unusual picture taken at his estate at Sussex, England. Chamberlain has doffed the sombre clothes of the statesman and works about his extensive gardens wearing a serviceable pair of knickerbockers, with spectacles in place of his familiar monocle.

DOCTORS SOON TO FIGHT DISEASES THROUGH NOSE

Injections of Sera Will be Thing of the Past, as Antibodies Will be Taken Through Mucous Membrane of the Nose.

Reuter's Special to The Victoria Times

London, Nov. 28.—When experiments by Dr. M. H. Gordon, F.R.S., have been carried further it is highly probable that a doctor who may be called to a case of smallpox, or measles, mumps, influenza, or a cold, will order—snuff. This will not be the snuff of daily use, however.

Dr. Gordon has come to certain conclusions after much investigation. During the course of experiments with the virus of cow-pox he injected a dose into a rabbit. Into a vein, and in a muscle. Another time he injected a few drops of solution containing the organism into the rabbit's nose. In due course the animal so treated all developed the disease. On another occasion he killed some virus by heating it for thirty minutes to 55 degrees centigrade. Again he gave it to the rabbit through the nose. When he subsequently injected the live virus into the animal no ill-effects followed.

Gordon noticed that when the live virus was given to the rabbit through the nose, it developed, after about a week, an acute attack of nasal catarrh, similar to that of a man with a very bad cold. To confirm these observations he also gave other rabbits, by the same means, doses of killed, and therefore harmless, bacilli. Specific antibodies to that micro-organism thereafter made their appearance in the animal's blood. As a result of this marvellously simple experiment it can be predicted with confidence that a whole group of infectious diseases, such as small-pox, measles, mumps, influenza and colds enter the human and animal body through the mucous membrane of the nose.

SHAW DESPISING SHAKESPEARE PEEVES HENRY ARTHUR JONES

Reuter's Special to The Victoria Times

London, Nov. 28.—George Bernard Shaw has so far declined to make a considered reply to the attack made up him by Henry Arthur Jones, the playwright, in a volume to be published shortly, entitled "Mr. Mayor of Shakespeare's Town."

Mr. Jones makes Mr. Shaw's visit to Stratford-on-Avon in April last, when G.B.S. was the chief guest in the Shakespeare festival, the peg upon which to hang a remarkable denunciation of Mr. Shaw's attitude towards Shakespeare, the war and England generally.

At present Mr. Shaw is at his Hertfordshire house at Ayot St. Lawrence, a little village seven miles from Hatfield, and when questioned about the matter he said: "It is all rather painful. Mr. Jones is a old friend of mine, and he has said all this before. The public are accustomed to it. I am accustomed to it, and can stand it."

Mr. Jones' book is in the form of a letter addressed to the Mayor of Stratford-on-Avon, and quotes as follows Mr. Shaw's expressed opinion on Shakespeare.

"With the single exception of Homer, there is no eminent writer, not even Sir Walter Scott, whom I despise so utterly as I despise Shakespeare. When I measure my mind against his, I am staggered. I cannot but suppose, sir, that you and your fellow-townsmen will entirely ignore what I have written. My history may be asked him. There is no other conceivable explanation of your offering him honor and welcome on such an occasion."

At St. Andrew's University present rector is Mr. Rudyard Kipling, and the students have nominated Bernard Shaw and John Galsworthy as the next candidates for the office. It should prove a remarkable contest.

Former M.P. Turns Tramp; Finds Boys Embarking on Crime

Reuter's Special to The Victoria Times

London, Nov. 28.—Dressed in old, torn clothes, Frank Gray, formerly M.P. for Oxford City and Junior Liberal whip, has tramped 100 miles through Oxfordshire, sleeping in casual wards. The tramp has undertaken to collect first-hand material for a book which he is writing called "Streets of Humanity." He will refund to the guardians the cost of his keep.

In his possession is half-a-crown given him by a sympathetic passer-by. Mr. Gray intends having the coin set in gold and handing it back to the giver.

"I have no complaint to make about the treatment I got in the workhouses," he declares. "Some of the officials were surprisingly kind. But in places the accommodation calls for comment."

INCUBATORS FOR DISEASE

"Casual wards are sometimes incubators for disease. I have heard of tramps carrying small-pox, and I am surprised that they do not spread disease throughout the land. I intend to make a report of my experiences to the Minister of Health. I estimate about fifty per cent. of the tramps are habitual petty criminals, and about seventy-five per cent. have been convicted at least once."

ROYAL ROBES TO BE SOLD OFF IN PARIS

$60,000 Wardrobe of Late Queen Alexandra to be Placed on Market

700 Gowns Included in List; Dressing Agents Will Re-model Them

Queen Mother's Original Portrait Going to U.S.

London, Nov. 28.—Edward Hughes's portrait of Queen Mother Alexandra has been bought by Ralph Meizer of Connecticut and will be taken to the United States. It is a sketch made by the artist for his official coronation portrait of the late Queen Mother and represents her wearing her crown and court jewels.

Alexandra, a Princess of Denmark, was only fifty-seven years old when this portrait was made in 1901, when she and King Edward VII. were crowned.

London, Nov. 28.—The wardrobe of the late Dowager Queen Alexandra of England, which is said to be worth $60,000, will be sold in Paris, newspaper correspondents are informed.

The wardrobe includes 700 gowns, most of which will be remodelled by dressing agents before being placed on the market. The official robes, including Her Majesty's coronation gowns and robes of the Orders of the Garter and the Bath will go to swell the big collection of court dresses at Windsor Castle.

The items to be disposed of include 170 silk nightdresses, 300 pairs of silk stockings, as well as other garments, costly furs, and shoes. It is understood that proceeds of the sales are bequeathed to the Queen's favorite dresser, Mrs. Cole.

Producer Wields Mordant Pen in Bubble-pricking Book

London, Nov. 28.—C. R. Cochran's reminiscences, "Secrets of a Show-Business Life," is a revealing and brightly colored and intricate pattern. The life of this famous actor-manager has been a kaleidoscope of variety events and adventures. He arrived in Chicago with twenty-five cents in his pocket to the present time, when, after having let go of wealth and prosperity, he is as surely preparing to take them up again.

"C. R.'s" love of beauty must, it is said, have owed much to Aubrey Bebbly, with whom he made friends, when very young at school at Brighton. More than any other man since Irving, he has been responsible for bringing to London beautiful things universal in appeal—the "Miracle," the "Russian Ballet," the "Chauve-Souris."

Some of the people who figure in the pages of "Secrets of a Show-Business Life" are so well remembered, over-pleased, perhaps, for the author has a long memory and a mordant pen, and many bubbles are pricked therein. But he is, on the whole, fair, and his book for all that, much more so, in fact, than the majority of stage and stagey—memoirs. Moreover, "C. R." is a very warm-hearted friend, and he has many friends who are ready to let it go.

Bulgarophile Writes Book on Journalist

London, Nov. 28.—Lady Grogan, ardent Bulgarophile, has written the life of the late J. D. Sofia has named a street after him.

Britain May Turn Coal Into Oil to Stimulate Mining

Reuter's Special to The Victoria Times

London, Nov. 28.—The announcement made by Sir Samuel Chapman, of Perth, that a process has been developed by means of which coal can be converted into the best petroleum oil has aroused the keenest interest, and further details are awaited as to the prospects of coal oil being a practical commercial proposition, as it would, probably mean the salvation of the mining industry of this country.

New Scottish Library Gets Rare Burns Volume

Reuter's Dispatch to The Victoria Times

Edinburgh, Nov. 28.—The institution of the Scottish National Library has been signalled by an interesting gift. Sir Henry Keith presented a copy of the second, or Edinburgh edition, of Burns's poems, which the poet himself gave to "Clarinda" (Mrs. Maclehoze), and which contains manuscript corrections in his handwriting.

It is expected that the library in its national form—it is already the richest in the world in Scottish manuscript—will in future be the recipient of many similar gifts. Lord Rosebery's great collection of Scottish literature, which is now housed at Barmulloch Castle, the old keep close to Dalmeny on the shore of the Firth of Forth, will, it is understood, ultimately become the property of the new library.

Long Flight

Ann Coonan, serial aviator, who is known as the "taxi man of the air," set off with two companions on an 8,000-mile flight from London to Caspato, at the southern tip of Africa. The route is from London to Cairo, Egypt, and thence up the Nile and across trackless African jungles.

Chimpanzees Show Reasoning Powers in Mentality Tests

Reuter's Special to The Victoria Times

London, Nov. 28.—Tasks set to chimpanzees "to test their possession of a faculty of reasoning" are quoted in the "British Medical Journal." They are taken from "The Mentality of Apes," the English translation of a work by Dr. Kohler, Professor of Philosophy in Berlin.

One of the cleverest of the chimpanzees was Sultan. He was brought from the outside through a doorway along a passage, then through a second doorway into a room. He there watched a banana thrown out of a window, and the window closed by a shutter. He at once turned round, passed out the door through the passage and the outside doorway, and thence by another turn reached the banana lying under the window.

On another occasion Sultan was one of six chimpanzees placed in a cage, the walls of which were too smooth to climb. Food was suspended from the roof. All six first tried to reach it by leaping. Sultan soon ceased, paced restlessly up and down, and then, five minutes after entering the cage, dropped a box on top of the food, sprang upon it, and tore down the banana, all in a few seconds.

SEEKS KEEPER'S ASSISTANCE With further practice Sultan, when one box was not enough, came to place a second upon the first. Instead of piling four boxes on top of each other (as did one of the other animals) Sultan tried to induce his keeper to stand underneath, so that he might mount on his back. This, however, was not done. Sultan made use of a stick as a spud to dig up roots, to aid in raising stones in their search for insects, and to poke into holes in trees to get to grubs.

During some memory of position tests Sultan watched a pear being buried in the sand about five minutes after an interval of five minutes Sultan noticed a stick lying at some distance outside the cage, whereupon he seized the observer's hand and motioned him in the direction of the stick. . . . When the stick was brought within his reach he at once pulled it through the bars which he was experimenting with, and extended the rod for pulling a banana towards himself.

Secret Gas Kills Inventor on Verge of Great Discovery

Reuter's Special to The Victoria Times

London, Nov. 28.—It was disclosed at a meeting of the members of the Institute of Patentes at Aldwych House, Kingsway, that Prof. H. Maxwell-Lefroy—who died recently from the effects of a secret gas with which he was experimenting—had shortly before his death invented a spray for killing flies.

Professor A. M. Low, in a lecture on domestic and utilitarian inventions, said the invention, which embodied all the attributes of a successful patent—simple, cheap and foolproof—would be selling shortly at the cost of a few shillings.

It is also believed that Prof. Lefroy was on the verge of making a great poison-gas discovery when he was smitten down in his laboratory.

A tribute to the memory of Professor Lefroy is paid by the College of Patents, Bedford Square, whose organizing secretary, Gordon D. Knox, stated: "His death is an irreparable loss to the cause of applied biology. At that time his researches had advanced to such a point that he had accepted the position of chairman of the panel of Applied Biology of this College in order that his experimental work should be definitely shaped. He sacrificed his life to make the world a safer and healthier place to live in. I would appeal for donations, however small, for the foundation of a Lefroy Laboratory."

Sinn Fein Got Red Beard Trimmed

Reuter's Special to Victoria Times

London, Nov. 28.—Darrell Figgis, the well-known Irish poet and journalist, and a member of the Sinn Fein Parliament, whose death has occurred at the age of forty-three in tragic circumstances, was an early and prominent adherent of Sinn Fein and an intimate friend of Michael Collins and Erskine Childers.

This revolutionary streak was a somewhat curious development in his life, for he had given all the indications of a man who would seek his livelihood in literature. He had already in 1909 published a volume of poems, "A Vision of Life," with the loud and powerful approval of G. K. Chesterton, and from 1911 to 1914 he had acted as literary adviser to the publishing firm of F. M. Dent & Sons.

Figgis was a mad, fantastic, typically "Iberian" Irishman, and in recent years was not taken quite so seriously by his countrymen in Ireland as by Englishmen outside it. On one occasion he came into a dispute with his fellow Sinn Feiners and was captured by a section of them, with the result that his long ginger-colored beard was trimmed to a short length by his assailants.

LADY CYNTHIA DERIES LAW ON SUNDAY MEETS

Lord Curzon's Daughter Says, However, That She is Growing no Red Whiskers

Freeing of London Fascisti Declared to be "Greatest Scandal"

London, Nov. 28.—Defying the ban on Sunday political meetings in Glasgow, Lady Cynthia Mosley, daughter of the late Lord Curzon and the former Mary Leiter, addressed a big open air assembly as a part of her campaign to win a Labor seat for herself in Parliament.

Lady Cynthia, who is an ardent Socialist, despite the vast family fortune, attacked the Glasgow radicals, known as the "wild red men of Clyde." Declaring the opposition depicts the Glasgow groups as roaring, red-headed Bolsheviks, armed with bloody daggers and Russian bombs, she said: "I have been led to this movement for more than two years, but you don't see any red beard on me, do you?"

ASKS MONEY FOR POOR Upbraiding Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer, for his handling of British finances, she went on to urge more liberal distribution of money among the poorer classes.

"Socialism," she shouted, "for the first time has brought Christianity into politics."

Lady Cynthia's husband, Oswald Mosley, a young radical, who once served in Parliament, urged a resolution against the recent decision freeing four British Fascists who raided the delivery wagon of the Labor paper. The "London Daily Herald" is said to have been the first time has brought Christianity into politics.

Undertaker Seeks New Dean's Patronage

Reuter's Special to The Victoria Times

London, Nov. 28.—Dr. W. Foxley Norris, the new Dean of Westminster, confided to the Ely Diocesan Conference at Cambridge that he wondered whether he would live long in London.

One communication he had received, he said, was signed by the principal partner in a great funeral association. The letter, excellently worded, said that they were prepared to carry out any directions he might leave "with the utmost promptitude and the shortest notice," and what appealed to his desire for comfort, "with the greatest efficiency."

English Unmusical, Dame Melba Laments

Reuter's Special to Victoria Times

London, Nov. 28.—"To write an autobiography," says Dame Nellie Melba in "Melodies and Memories," "is to open a window into one's heart, and indeed, the greater singer is reticent about nothing in her life except her marriage."

The daughter of a reserved Scottish pianist, who looked her name, and a sovereign and died worth half a million, she seems to have inherited much of his common sense and appreciation of the value of money. Her only mistake in life would appear to be her strange marriage in 1882, to a sugar planter, with whom she lived for about fourteen months in the wilds of Queensland, only to return to her father as soon as her son was born.

Her first reception at Covent Garden, she tells us, was so lukewarm that she vowed never to return, and was only induced to do so as the result of the desire of the Italian king, while in England, she makes friends with, among others, Ellen Terry, and with Oscar Wilde, who borrows money from him.

In her concluding chapter, Dame Melba laments in no uncertain voice the attitude of England to all things musical.

"We are conservative," she declares, "to the point of madness."

FASCISTI TRIAL IN LONDON STIRRING UP LABOR FEELING

London, Nov. 28.—Englishmen have prided themselves for a long time on the impartiality with which justice is meted out to all classes and sections of the community in their courts of law. For this reason the action of Sir Archibald Bodkin, director of Public Prosecution, in withdrawing charges of larceny against four young Fascists following their raid on "The Daily Herald" recently, is being criticized severely by labor.

The charge is being made that while the Government has been prosecuting the Communists for verbal expressions of their political opinions, it is letting off the British Fascists scot free, even when they commit overt acts against the public peace.

J. H. Thomas intends to raise the matter in the House of Commons when Parliament reassembles. Ramsey MacDonald has suggested publicly that Bodkin's action was taken at the instigation of the Government. The view of the denial of this charge by Sir Douglas Hogg, Attorney-General, at the Lord Mayor's dinner, the ex-Premier seems mistaken in this.

The outrage occurred in the small hours of the morning on October 17, when the London Times calls "four young fools masquerading in the guise of Italian patriots" held up the van of "The Daily Herald," the labor newspaper, as it was conveying 5,000 copies of that morning's issue to a railroad station.

One of the four men carried a revolver and pointed at the driver, a lame man. They forced him off his seat and drove away with the van. The truck abandoned near the Covent Garden opera house was abandoned, in damaged condition, with the papers scattered about the street.

Two of the four men were officers of the National Fascist and the two others were privates in that organization.

They asserted that they took action against The Daily Herald because it "wasn't loyal to the country." Their attorney suggested in court that their behavior had been "meritorious and patriotic," even if irregular in form. Then the public prosecutor started the London magistracy to charge the charge of larceny. The magistrate appeared somewhat shocked at this step, calling it "extremely lenient."

PRESS RAISES COMPLAINT He had nothing to do, however, but bind over the four youths on their good behavior. Sir Douglas Hogg has justified the public prosecutor's action by stating that "every competent lawyer" would have been satisfied that there was no cause to put before a jury, but Hogg's opinion is not shared by a large part of the press, Conservative and Liberal, as well as Labor.

When Philip Snowden and Bernard Shaw declare that if a similar outrage had been perpetrated on a Conservative newspaper, like "The Morning Post," the offenders would not have got so lightly, they express the opinion that most people are thinking. Apart from the fact that the incident has furnished ammunition to the Communists, by enabling them to say that there is one law for the Reds and another for the Fascists, there is another aspect of the affair that is disquieting.

There is the faction of the Conservative party that has applied has been called "inverted Communists." The members of this faction are to be found largely among the Piccadilly clubmen, Belgrave dowagers, country squires and retired admirals. Like their counterparts in Labor movement, they too preach a class war, but, lacking both in logic and imagination, they fail to see that they destroy the case for constitutionalism by approving acts of violence against individuals and organizations of which they approve.

It is this section of the Conservative party that is trying to get Baldwin to commit political suicide by recognizing the trade unions of their

Embargo on H. B. C. Villains in Fiction

Famous Company Exasperated by Stories and Moving Pictures in Which Its Factors and Traders are Represented as Bold, Bad Men; Solemn Warning to Authors to Stop It.

By PROFESSOR W. T. ALLISON

In future all authors who deal in Northland fiction must take care not to take liberties with the name of the most venerable trading company in Canada. High officials of the Hudson's Bay Company are incensed because various story-writers and especially film-producers have represented that reprehensible actions on the part of the Company's employees are instigated or condoned by the company. They have decided to put the ban on H. B. C. villains by threatening to sue for libel all offending authors. This purpose is expressed in a letter which Mr. J. Chadwick-Brooks, secretary of the Company, Winnipeg, has sent to me, asking that as president of the Canadian Authors' Association I should issue a caveat to all Canadian writers. As this is Canada's book week, I thought that my readers would be interested in a discussion of this subject.

THE OFFICIAL REMONSTRANCE

The official remonstrance of the company, as expressed in Mr. Chadwick-Brooks' letter to me, is as follows: "The attention of the government and committee of the Hudson's Bay Company has been drawn to numerous publications of popular fiction in which references are made to alleged methods employed by the company in its fur trade business. In many cases also it is implied that reprehensible actions on the part of the company's employees are instigated or condoned by the company. These statements misrepresent, and are distinctly derogatory of, the company. While it was felt that an official instance might be ignored, the statements have become so common that it was evident that the company's name and reputation might be injured. The government committee therefore decided that in all cases where statements are published which by implication or otherwise represent the company, legal action should be taken against the authors and publishers. In several instances action has been taken, as a result of which apologies have been tendered and the books withdrawn from further sale.

It is probable that in some instances authors write fiction wholly unaware of the injury to some of the statements and references made therein, and they thus unwittingly become liable to suffer loss if the publication has to be discontinued on account of libellous passages. In these circumstances we have thought it advisable to announce that the government committee has decided to protect the company's name and reputation in the manner mentioned, and we should welcome any assistance you are able to give in this regard. It is requested that you make this decision as widely known as possible.

A LIVING COMPANY IS SENSITIVE

Although various literary friends of mine have freely criticized this action of the Hudson's Bay Company, calling it an attempted infringement of the liberty of the press, I must confess that I sympathize with the company. Even if the makers of fiction date their stories in the romantic past when fur-traders had occasional conflicts with their rivals, the thoughtful reader is apt to confuse the conditions of yesterday with those of to-day. And if the story or moving picture shows a fight between day for its deeds of derring-do, dishonest practice with the Indians, or acts of violence committed by an imaginary factor, this is apt to create a

THE COACH'S JOB

Something of the taskmaster, the general and the diplomat, and a lot of the doctor must be hidden away in the man who would be the coach of a successful football or track team. Emergencies of all kinds are his daily routine. A thorough knowledge of first aid is as essential as a knowledge of the game played by his men. Bumps, bruises, strained ligaments and muscles are every day happenings, but the coach never becomes contemptuous of them. He knows that if neglected, they may result in serious complications. Trainers everywhere keep Absorbine Jr. in their lockers. They use it not only for sprains, cuts and bruises, but for the skin and blood protection of its disinfecting properties. In one convenient container, it combines the functions of a number of preparations. It is the first of all the First Aid requisites in use in all of the leading athletic clubs. And there are just as many everyday uses for Absorbine Jr. in the homes of Canada as there are in training camps. Always keep it in the home where you can "jump to it" in case of emergency. $1.25 at your druggist. (Advt.)

PROTECTING FORESTS BY AEROPLANES

struction, tests, cross country, remote transportation and special flights.

DETECTED FROM THE AIR

Five hundred and ninety-seven fires were detected from the air and requisitions for fire patrol predominated the greater part of the flying.

FORESTRY CALLS PREDOMINATED

The Forestry Department found many uses for the machines and a table covering the actual flying hours in service eliminating tests, forced landings and changes of engines sets out the service as follows:

Flying Requisitioned by Forestry Department
Hrs.	Min.
Fire-fighting	42 51
Fine patrol	1,505 3
Sketching	364 35
Photography	47 30
Cross country	264 49
Remote transportation	84 55
	2,309 43

In order to utilize the aircraft service to the best advantage it was found advisable to have a forest ranger in charge.

A RACE AGAINST DEATH

The use to which aeroplanes have been put in the service of the Department of Lands and Forests has been emphasized, but it can easily be pictured how a fleet of aeroplanes could serve the Province in many other directions, and the report of the provincial service flying operations of Ontario will tell this story. Brief reference is made to a race against death or it might more correctly be described a race for two lives.

As it reads in the bald language of a Government report it is as follows:

"The service rendered to the Department of Health in the transportation of Doctor Cockburn converted what is usually a seven-day journey, in addition to delays generally encountered with a lady traveling, into a short trip of but a few hours." More details of this incident will be recalled by those who read it when it appeared as a newspaper heading of an aeroplane race with Dr. Stork.

THE AIR MAN'S DEVOTION TO DUTY

But for the fact that this article is meant to stress the economic value of an air patrol it could be made more appealing to the general reader. It could tell of men who have braved death in aeroplanes when aerial warfare played such a part in the Great War and then it could relate how the same devotion to duty and self-sacrifice has been directed to the channels of preservation instead of those of destruction. But this would be no argument for an air patrol for British Columbia. It is, however, in order to quote a paragraph from the report of the director of Ontario's air patrol. It reads as follows:

"I take great pleasure in commending every member of the Provincial Air Service for their devotion to duty at all times. During serious fire hazards and in times of stress, the personnel worked of their own accord from daylight to dark. On several occasions during storms they were up at all hours of the night safeguarding the machines, often at considerable risk to themselves."

FERISH TWO-GUN

Mr. Heming also indulges in withering sarcasm at the expense of American two-gun authors who write such ridiculous stuff about the Canadian wilderness country. "But the blood-curdling wolf howls and bear growls that annually swell the columns of some of our press," he says, "are as nothing compared with the harm done this Dominion by those feverish two-gun authors, born, bred and reared in the wilderness, incubator of crime, and greatest enemy of the Canadian people. Life has been an occasional encounter with a wild golf-link, and whose daily duty is to write a few corny tales that drive them to write stories about Canada; and not knowing anything about our country, have in their weird imaginations peddled their own poetry with the very scum of their own cesspool. Thus it is time something was done to give each of those wild and woolly authors the walloper they deserve."

DISCOURAGE NATURE FAKERS

Another well-known Canadian author and past president of the Canadian Authors' Association who writes a same letter on this subject is Mr. R. J. C. Stead. "I can see two

PITY THE POOR BOOK LOVER!

3300 TITLES ON FALL LIST

How Miguel Covarrubias, the young Mexican genius, sees some notables, dozens of whom are unsurprisingly caricatured in his book "The Prince of Wales and other Americans." Above, as you will doubtless recognize are Rudolfo and Mary. Below are Willa Cather and Glorious Gloria White, centered, is Wiffa Hergesheimer.

SOMETHING like 3,300 books are being published on this continent this fall. Of this number perhaps twenty-five fiction titles and less than half that many non-fiction titles ever will reach any appreciable number of readers.

A hasty survey shows the publishers not the least apologetic for this unfashionable potential book readers, but on the other hand, quite boastful of their proud lists. One concern alone waves to a list of sixty books, "all of the highest quality." Few indeed will be the readers who could do justice to the list before the Spring birds burst. It is doubtful if this Surveyor will waste entirely through that many—yet it is but one list of "books that should be read."

THE TIME-WORN TOWN

By J. S. Fletcher

"They went into the morning-room with Mr. Mallett. I took some brown sherry in there, and glasses. Soon after that Mr. Mallett went out. I was just inside the dining-room as he crossed the hall. He told me there'd very likely be another gentleman to dinner, and I must lay another cover. He went out then, and was away about ten minutes. Then he came back with Mr. Krevin Crood."

"Come back with Mr. Krevin Crood. Did you see them come in together?"

"I let them in."

"Did you hear anything said as they entered?"

"Yes, I heard Mr. Krevin Crood say that he wasn't dressed for dinner parties. Mr. Mallett then told me to take Mr. Krevin upstairs and get him anything he wanted."

"Did you take Mr. Krevin upstairs?"

"Yes, I took him up to Mr. Mallett's dressing-room. I showed him the hot water arrangement, got him clean towels, and asked him what he wanted. He said he wanted a clean shirt, a collar, and a handkerchief."

"A handkerchief?"

"Yes, a handkerchief."

"I showed him where to get them. I opened the drawers in which Mr. Mallett's shirts, collars, and handkerchiefs are kept, so that he could help himself. Then I asked him if there was anything more I could get him. He said there was nothing but a clothes brush. I got him that, and left him."

"When did you see him next?"

"About twenty minutes after, when he came downstairs and went into the morning-room to the other gentlemen."

"Was he smartened up then?"

"He was smart enough—smarter than the others, I should say."

"Had he taken one of Mr. Mallett's shirts?"

"Yes. One of his very best white ones."

"Very good. Now then, talking about shirts, who looks after the laundry affairs at the Bank House?"

"I do."

"You send the linen to the laundry?"

"Yes."

"And receive it and put it away when it comes back?"

"Yes."

"Always?"

"Always."

"When does it go, and when does it return?"

"It goes on Monday mornings and comes home on Saturday afternoon."

"Do you put it away on Saturday afternoon?"

"Not finally. It goes into a hot cupboard to air. Then on Monday some time, I put it away in the proper place—sort it out."

"Yes. Do you remember sorting it out, and putting away the different articles in their proper places on the Monday before this 'little dinner-party'?"

"Yes, I do."

"Did you notice the presence of any article which didn't belong to the Mallett family?"

"Yes, at least, I was doubtful."

"Doubtful, eh? Well, what was it?"

"A gentlemen's handkerchief."

"You weren't sure that it was Mr. Mallett's?"

"I wasn't sure that it wasn't. And I didn't think it was."

"Why were you uncertain?"

"Well, it wasn't like Mr. Mallett's handkerchiefs. He has dozens of them, nearly all fancy ones with colored borders. This was a very fine, cambric handkerchief, I'd never seen one like it before. But still, I was certain that it wasn't Mr. Mallett's, after all."

"Because sometimes when Mr. Mallett was away for the day he'd buy a spare handkerchief. He'd a lot of odd handkerchiefs that he'd brought home in his pockets. I thought this might have been got that way."

"You didn't mention its presence to anybody?"

"No, I didn't think of it."

"Well, what did you do with the handkerchief about which you were doubtful?"

"I laid it on top of one of several plies of handkerchiefs that were in Mr. Mallett's handkerchief drawer in the dressing-room."

"Why did you put it on top?"

"In case any inquiry was made about it from Mallett's laundry."

"Was any inquiry made?"

"No."

"Now was that drawer you have just spoken of the drawer that you pulled open for Mr. Krevin Crood?"

"Yes."

"Was the handkerchief there then?"

"Yes, it was there."

"You saw it?"

"I saw it."

"Have you seen it since?"

"Never."

"Do you know if Mr. Krevin Crood took it out of the drawer?"

"No."

"Did you see it in his possession that evening?"

"No, I didn't; but it wasn't in the drawer next morning."

"You are sure of that?"

"Positive. I went into Mr. Mallett's dressing-room very early next morning, and I noticed that Mr. Mallett had left his drawers half-open. The handkerchief drawer stuck a little, and I pulled it right out before pushing it in. I noticed then that the handkerchief had gone."

"Did you conclude that Mr. Krevin had taken it?"

"No, I don't think so. I didn't conclude anything. If I thought anything it would be that Mr. Mallett had taken it. Mr. Mallett would think nothing of taking half-a-dozen handkerchiefs a day."

"But the handkerchief was there when you opened the drawer for Mr. Krevin that evening and it wasn't there when you looked into the drawer next morning, early? That so?"

"Yes, that's so."

"Very well. Now then, about this little dinner. Mr. Mallett had three guests—Mr. Simon Crood, Mr. Krevin Crood, Mr. Coppinger? No—two, else?"

"No, no one else."

"Was it a nice dinner?"

"It was a very good dinner."

"Wine?"

"There were several sorts of wine."

"What time was dinner?"

"About a quarter-past-seven."

"And what time did the gentlemen rise from table?"

"They didn't rise from table. When dinner was over Mr. Mallett decanted some very special port that he has in the wine-cellar, and they settled down to it round the dinner-table, talking."

"I see. Did you hear any of the conversation?"

Something About Blue Flowers

By JOHN HUTCHINSON, F.R.S.

Most people like blue flowers. Blue is a color that does not seem to jar on anyone's nerves. One often hears of people who cannot stand yellow or red, but blue is everyone's color.

Blue can be overdone in any garden because, by itself, it is too cold. With proper management, however, there is nothing more beautiful than blue flowers.

It is quite possible to have fine patches of blue in the garden from early Spring until late in the Fall and the sapphire patches surrounded by the emerald green will be a joy for many months in the year. The early Spring blue effect is obtained by the use of such well-known small bulbous plants as the grape hyacinth, scillas, chionodoxa and some of the crocuses, though these latter incline a little too much towards purple to be considered strictly blue. Next come the hyacinths proper and a great effect can be produced by growing the many shades of blue that they contain. The blue anemones come early into bloom and are really very beautiful, but don't grow the blue St. Bridget anemone with the alpine ones. Grow it with the reds and pinks of the St. Bridget family.

The blue primroses come very early in the year but are often inclined to purple. The reason for this is that the color is not fixed and the only way to have real blue primroses is to get new plants, raised from seed, at least every two years. After they are two years old they begin to get purple.

The original blue primrose was discovered in the Himalayas by Wintter. He tells us how he first saw it—growing at the edge of the snow, a patch of blue, looking lovely with the rising sun shining on it between the frunks of the trees, in a delightful contrast with the white of the snow and its own whitened leaves. It was a primrose with twenty or thirty blooms, at an elevation of ten thousand feet, and in that clear atmosphere, a perfect blue without a trace of purple.

A blue, busy effect is produced by forget-me-nots, which, when once introduced into a garden, will take care of themselves for all time.

USE OF VIOLAS
As the forget-me-nots go out of flower, the violas take up the running. Some of them are, perhaps, not strictly blue, but the general effect they give is distinctly one of business, if they are kept well checked, so that they do not go long; they will bloom all Summer long.

It is a good thing to sow blue nemophila, with the violas as this really blue flower adds to the general effect of the blue. Campanula campanulata is a good companion.

"Little Ships" with "Dark Laughter" and "The Professor's House" not far away. The Hutchinson book is also certain of a prominent place. The list from which this Surveyor would suggest a choice would include the Anderson and Cather books and would insist upon "The Sailor's Return" by David Garnett; "Foray" by Du Bose Heyward, which Frances Nesmon calls "the most admirable book about Southern negroes I have ever read"; Elinor Wylie's exquisite "Venetian Glass Nephew"; John Bolger's "The Emigrants"; Louis Bromfield's "Possessions"; Honore Wickson's "We Must March"; Ruth Suckson's "Ordinary of a Nice Girl"; and Dale Collins' "The Haven."

OTHER BLUE SUBJECTS

Later in the year we have Scabious, not quite so true a blue as some, but still blue, Michaelmas daisies, blue hydrangeas, agapanthus, the Blue American lily, said to be the lily referred to as "the lily of the field" in the Bible. This latter is not quite hardy here and should be grown in a tub and wintered under cover.

The humble little annual blue lobelia must not be overlooked. For edging and what-not it is never out of place and is really a good blue.

Among climbers we have blue clematis in various shades and the blue convolvulus but there is no real blue sweet pea and the so-called blue rose is a very dirty purple-red.

As for blue in the garden in the winter, we cannot have it in the true sense, but we can have lots of blue-grey trees and shrubs, such as Koeleria, spruce, which will give a blue note of color among more sombre evergreens.

After all, in this blessed climate, winter is a very short and not unpleasant incident and at this date it is only about two months to the time when the first snowdrop will be in flower and the first crocus two weeks, or so, later. Truly our land is a goodly one.

THE GIANT'S CASTLE AND FURTHER ADVENTURES OF THE GOOD KING SNOWBEARD

By L. PEMBRIDGE

The court of King Egbert of Eubania, who you will remember married Princess Peach Bloom, the beautiful daughter of King Snowbeard, was in an uproar, for their beloved Queen had been carried away by the Giant Mordaff to his castle in the Far Away Land. Many brave knights in the past had ventured out to slay this wicked monster, but none had ever come back, for the way was beset with many dangers.

And now that their Queen had disappeared, every knight was willing to risk his life in an attempt to rescue her, but the young king said he himself would be the one to go. He would kill this terrible giant who had dared to lay hands on his beautiful Peach Bloom.

And so he started forth on his hazardous journey. If I told you the monsters, dragons and other terrible creatures that he overcame on the way to the Giant's Castle, I'm afraid you would not want to rescue anyone in distress when you become a King, so I won't do it.

Oh, the agony and suspense of the King during the many days taken up in travel. His heart was throbbing with pain. Supposing harm came to his beloved, before he could get to her. The thought was torture.

Finally, he found himself at his journey's end, but he gazed at the castle in despair for it was so high he could not see the top and there was not a foothold or a window to be seen.

Sitting down, his head buried in his hands, he said earnestly, "If only my old friend who helped me find the hair of King Snowbeard were here now, I'm sure she would find some way to help me."

"You are right, Egbert," said a voice suddenly, and there before him stood the old woman of the forest. "Mordaff is an old enemy of mine, and I'll be glad to help you. Do just what I say, and have no fear."

Then King Egbert rubbed his eyes in astonishment, for in the place of the old woman now stood a most beautiful swan. "Be not afraid, Egbert," said she, "but sit on my back. You must have perfect trust in me or your mission will fail."

Without hesitation, Egbert sat on the swan's back, and with a graceful gliding movement, she rose in the air, and entered the Giant's Castle by the roof, the only entrance it possessed. Mordaff, who traveled about in a boat, which at a word from the giant, would fly up in the air, thought his retreat perfectly secure.

When he heard the noise of someone entering, he came forth with a big roar. "Who is this, who dares enter my domain?" he shouted.

"It is I," said our hero stoutly. "King Egbert of Eubania. Where is my wife, you villain?"

"Ho, ho," laughed the giant. "Now I've got the two of you. What a feast you will make," and taking up the King in his big fist, he threw him into a corner. Jumping up in anger at the indignity, Egbert was about to jump at the giant, which undoubtedly would have meant his death, when he heard his dear wife's voice calling, "Egbert, I am here, in the sack underneath where you were thrown. Be careful, dear heart, do not enrage him and we may yet escape."

"Thank God you are still alive, my Queen," said Egbert. The terrible Mordaff was standing shaking his massive sides with laughter, and the tears rolled down his cheeks.

"I've not had such good luck as this for a long time," he said. "And it will be a long time before you have another," said a voice behind him, and turning suddenly, he found himself attacked by a white swan which was unable to beat off for she was pecking at his eyes and he could not see. The castle rocked with the force of his roars, and King Egbert, taking out his sturdy bow, which he always carried with him, shot an arrow right through the monster's heart. "Well done," said the swan. "Now, you must unfasten your Queen, and I will take you back to your kingdom."

Egbert liberated his wife and embracing her, he turned to the beautiful swan and said gratefully, "I can never thank you enough, for without you, I could not have reached this place, and without you

I could not have vanquished Mordaff." "And," said the swan, "without you I could not have killed him, so jump on my back, and we will be off to make the hearts of your subjects happy."

When they arrived at the court, the flag was half-mast, and everyone was in mourning, for they had given up their King and Queen as these had been such great rejoicing in the merry-making that followed their return.

Old King Snowbeard arrived by the aid of his Magic Silk and the circle of happiness was complete, and it was agreed that never before had there been such great rejoicing in any land, as there was when King Egbert and Queen Peach Blossom returned to their kingdom.

"SMOCK"

Ambition and hard work have resulted in attainment of puppyhood ambition for "Smoek."

From the time he was mongrel puppy on wabbling legs "Smoek" has wanted to be a "police dog," with a badge and a night-stick.

Now Jersey City has put him on the force. His favorite hangout was the police station, and when the patrol wagon went out "Smoek" was following. Sometimes it was too fast for him, but he always was there at the finish.

Patrolman Jack Brennan noticed the proclivities of the pup and offered to teach him the game. For months "Smoek" has been an unofficial member of the force and has patrolled with his big friend.

Their beat ran along the wholesale poultry yards.

Bands of young desperadoes had been raiding the yards and looting the freight cars. "Smoek" cleared

Elks Crop Golf Course, Beaver Build Bunkers

Winnipeg, Nov. 25.—Elk deer, bear and beaver are helping in making the Jasper National Park course one of the most attractive in the Dominion, according to report received here from Stanley Thompson, the architect in charge of the building of the new course. He says the thirty plan of turning sheep on the golf courses in order to save the cost of mowing has been improved upon. A report from Mr. Thompson to the officials of the Canadian National Railways here states that upwards of 250 elk and orders have been issued that these animals be not molested as their presence there is beneficial in keeping the course trimmed down.

Bears are also very numerous in the vicinity of the fairways and greens and on Lac Beauvert, close to one of the new greens, beaver have built a house which adds to the attractiveness of one of the natural hazards of the course.

At Lonely Post

The world's most northerly police post, also the most remote of any human habitat, is to be constructed next year for the Royal Canadian Mounted Police at the far end of Ellesmere Island. Building materials and two years supplies have been cached within easy freightage distance of the point. Three men will be detailed for patrol duty on the indescribably lonely shores of Rice Straits.

BEDTIME STORY

Uncle Wiggily and Johnnie's Slide

Copyright, 1925, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

(By Howard J. Garis)

Johnnie Bushytail, the squirrel boy, slipped out of a large knot hole at the back of the hollow tree where he lived. Johnnie often used this knot hole door when he wished to get out quietly so his mother wouldn't know about it. Not that Johnnie wanted to do anything wrong, but he just felt a little mischievous like on account of it being Thanksgiving week.

And when Johnnie slipped out this secret way, his brother Billie went with him. What one little squirrel chap did the other was almost sure to do.

"Oh, I know how we can have some fun," suddenly chattered Johnnie. "Do you see that piece of clothes line there?" and he pointed to a bit of clothes line hanging up the trees. "What about the line?" asked Billie. "Are you going to jump rope like Lulu and Alice Wibblewoobie, the ducks?"

"No, but with that rope we can play a funny trick on Uncle Wiggily," proposed Johnnie. "What sort of a trick?" Billie wanted to know.

"We'll make a lasso noose, like the cowboys do in the Wild West show," went on Johnnie. "We can spread the loop of the rope out on the ground along the path where Uncle Wiggily will hop when he comes back from the store. He went to the store for mother, you know."

"Yes, I know," chattered Billie. "Well, what else?"

"Well, when Uncle Wiggily comes along he won't see the lasso on the ground," whispered Johnnie. "He'll put his paw in. You and I will be hiding in the bushes, holding the other end of the rope. And when Uncle Wiggily steps in it will pull on it, lasso him and upset him. Won't that be fun?"

"Yes, I guess it will," agreed Billie, but he wasn't quite sure of it. However, he helped Johnnie spread the rope on the ground, with the loop on the path, hidden under some dried leaves. Then the squirrel boys hid in the bushes and waited to play the trick.

But Uncle Wiggily was late coming from the store. He had met Uncle Butte, the goat gentleman, and Keeping Your Temper When Kitty Tangles the Wool is Easy Until You Have Tried it!

A ball of wool with one end invitingly loose lay under the chair, where it had been dropped by the little girl who ran off to do an errand for her mother. It was not long before the loose end that showed so invitingly out from under the chair received the attention it deserved from a small grey kitten.

Kitty played with the piece of wool until in its capers the whole ball rolled out from under the chair and into plain view. "Here is something worth playing with," mused the kitten, and then the fun began.

Up the carpet rolled the ball, with its wool unrolling faster at every inch. Down again it sped, pushed and spurred on by the excited kitten, now in full chase and making a real game of it. Round chair legs and under tables; into the fire grate and out again, sped the ball, fast diminishing in size.

As matters were becoming a little too fast in that room the kitten too, taking in that the wool into the next, when the game took on a new lease of life. Everything must come to an end in time and this game came to a sudden stop when the wool had been unwound completely. The kitten gazed sorrowfully after the wool for a moment, and then romped off to find something new to play with.

It was at this instant that the little girl returned to the first room. Her feet tripped over the finishing stretched tightly between two chairs. Even as she fell her eyes followed the meandering course of the wool skein through both rooms and into many mazy circles.

"Gracious," she cried, "how will I ever get it wound up again? It is too bad, and I was in such a hurry to finish that mitten!"

Many little girls would have thrown up all hope of retrieving the wool right there, but this little girl was made of sterner stuff. Patiently she went to work to look for the beginning, or the end, of the ball. Presently she found one end, tied into a tangly knot in the centre of the first room.

Bit by bit the ball was rewound. At times the little girl would plump down in a heap in the centre of the floor and despair of ever finishing the task. The kitten came back and wanted to start the game all over again, but gave it up with regret when chided by her tiny mistress. After many weary moments the wool was all retrieved.

"And that's that," said the little girl and started off to place the wool in a safer place, but she forgot that mittens can climb just as well as they run. The wool was placed under a magazine on the table-top and the little girl ran away to attend to other affairs.

All this time the kitten had not been idle. Not for a moment had it removed its eyes from the ball of wool. The wool was its plaything, and it meant to have it at all costs. No sooner did the little girl turn her back than the kitten jumped up on to a chair, and then to the table-top, pushed aside the magazine, saw the ball of wool off the table to bounce the floor once more— took no longer.

The game of push and run was starting all over again for the second time when the little girl came back suddenly into the room and stopped. "Mittens can climb just as well as they run. The little girl did not like it either, and only the fact that she was anxious to finish the second of

Little Pigs Grew

Into Treasure Chest For This Little Girl

Inverness, Nov. 25.—One little girl in the community was made happy recently when she was presented with her cheque—prizes won at the late fall fair. This girl is Elizabeth Walker, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Walker of Ajax ranch.

Elizabeth's latest run to agriculture, especially the animal branches. Early this Spring she secured two piglets from her eldest brother, and gave them her exclusive and tender care. When the fall fair came she entered the two porkers in every class that she could, and being quite within the age joined the boys' and girls' pig club.

Her pigs won her three firsts in the classes in which she entered them and won in the pig club. As a consequence of this she received from the association a cheque for $20. She later will receive another, the province's contribution to the fund, and she stands a chance for heading the province in the boys' and girls' competition, which would bring her more. She capped the climax by selling the young sow as a prize winner, getting a good price for it, and the pig went to the butcher as prime pork. Already she is formulating her plans for the year 1926.

Fire Drill Made

In Excellent Time

Smithers, B. C., Nov. 25.—Parents of pupils at the Smithers school have the great satisfaction of knowing that not only is fire drill some thing on the regular order of exercises, but that the organization stands high in efficiency. That excellent standard of efficiency is being maintained and order is being well upheld this week, when a number of interested citizens made a surprise visit to test the handling of an emergency situation, and equipped with watches mediated response to the alarm which resulted in emptying the four rooms of the school in less than one minute. This is a matter calling for congratulations for the staff of the school as well as the enthusiasm of parents.

CROSS-WORD PUZZLE FOR THE LITTLE FOLKS

Here is Puzzle 128 and the answer to that published last week. In this puzzle there are two words of five letters each, a few of four letters and the rest split up into easy words that can be guessed at once. When there is a black square over a numbered square, the number begins a vertical word. When the black square is to the left of the numbered one and on the same line the word that follows is a horizontal one. The definitions will guide you to the meaning of each word intended to fill in the space. Keep the puzzle patterns for your next party.

stopped to talk to him about how soon Christmas would be here. Billie and Johnnie got tired of waiting and wandered away, leaving the rope on the ground.

"Let's look for a place where a pond is frozen over and slide on the ice," proposed Johnnie, and soon they came to what looked like a fine, slippery place that Jack Frost had frozen.

"Now for a grand slide!" cried Johnnie, getting ready to run. "Maybe we better throw some stones on, first, to see if it's safe," said Billie.

"Oh, it's safe enough! I'm going to slide!" chattered Johnnie. Out he ran on the ice, but all of a sudden, it cracked, for the ice was very thin, and down into the cold water dropped poor Johnnie.

"Oh, get me out! Get me out!" he begged. Billie started to do this, but the ice cracked with him and he had to go back to shore. Just then along came hopping Uncle Wiggily, back from the store. He had seen Johnnie go through the ice.

"Catch hold of this rope!" shouted the rabbit gentleman. "I found it on the path, under the leaves. It looks like a cowboy's lasso," and he flung the noose over Johnnie's head and soon had pulled the squirrel boy safely to shore out of the freezing water.

Then Uncle Wiggily ran home with Johnnie, who was undressed and put in a warm bed so he wouldn't get cold.

"It's lucky I found that rope on the path," said Mr. Longears, "I wonder who left it there?"

And, after feeling very much ashamed of themselves, the squirrel boys told the trick they had intended to play.

CANON CARNEGIE SHOCKED AT U.S. DIVORCE SUITS

Says America "Degenerating From Human Society Into a Monkey House"

London, Nov. 28—Canon Carnegie of Westminster, who has just returned to England after a visit to America, is evidently shocked at the prevalence of divorce in the United States.

"I say with all seriousness that America is degenerating from a human society into a monkey-house."

It may well mean the end of their civilization. And if it spreads over here, it would mean the end of civilization altogether.

Luckily, England is having none of this divorce madness. England is too sane and balanced a country to lose her head like that.

In civilization and culture England is far ahead of America. You must remember that you can breed the best Anglo-Saxon only in an Anglo-Saxon country.

The breed is pure here, and the urge forward will be the more powerful in America the breed is mixed.

I am convinced that the American man is not as mad about money as he is supposed to be. Englishmen really care more for money than he does.

The money the American earns is spent by his womanfolk. The Englishman works more for himself. He has many ways of spending his money, as a member of an older civilization he knows better how to enjoy himself.

Americans pursue money and hustle just for the sake of hustling. Englishmen pursue money for its own sake.

Mrs. Carnegie, who is a daughter of Judge Endicott of the United States, and was the widow of the late Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, went to America in advance and was joined by her husband later.

CAMBRIDGE STILL FIGHTING WOMEN

Authorities Believe no Woman Able to Administrate Varsity Department

London, Nov. 28.—The perennial subject of the position of women at Cambridge came before the Senate again, when the report of the Royal Commission was considered.

It is expected that the Senate will decide to grant to women as a matter of right those privileges which have already been conceded to them as a matter of grace.

Women will still be debarred from membership of the Senate, but will be eligible for university teaching offices. Thus, while not granted full membership of the university, they will be entrusted with the teaching and, presumably the examination of undergraduates.

Administrative offices of the university and membership of the House of Regents will still be closed to women, owing to their exclusion from the Senate.

Access to the higher teaching posts is also, by implication, denied to them; for while it is laid down that the retiring age for women lecturers shall be five years earlier than that of men, the retiring age for women professors is not mentioned.

It is the view of most of the Cambridge authorities that no woman possesses sufficient ability to undertake the administration of a department of a university like Cambridge.

GOOD MUFFINS FOR TO-MORROW'S BREAKFAST

Muffins are not really difficult to make successfully.

The easiest way to make muffins is to sift the dry ingredients, then slowly stir in the milk and eggs, previously mixed—the whites beaten stiff and added last. If you want—and then the melted butter or other shortening.

If muffins are made in this way they should be thoroughly stirred and mixed before being poured into the pans.

Some cooks always heat the muffin pans before putting in the batter. Doubtless this does make for lighter, fluffier muffins.

Muffins should be cooked in an even, rather quick oven. When they are done shake them out on a wire cake cooler for three or four minutes before serving.

But serve them while they are still warm. One of their characteristics and good-nesses is that they are eaten warm.

At this time of year you can vary a standard muffin batter by adding berries—huckleberries or blackberries are excellent—that have been rolled lightly in flour.

Here is a good, plain muffin recipe. Sift together two cups flour, one teaspoon salt, four level teaspoons baking powder, two tablespoons sugar. And one cup milk, two tablespoons melted butter and one egg.

THE MODE AND EVERYTHING

Season Reveals Wonderful Innovations; Disagreements Over Waistline Show Indecision as to Where to Put It.

THE season is well launched, and now we shall see what the smart women have chosen from the bewildering galaxy of models which entranced our eyes at the openings.

Of course the great couturiers are exhibiting new models all the time, but we are now quite tranquil as to the line and materials, at least for a little time.

It is quite amusing to behold the endless competition among even the greatest houses, and there is of course a tremendous rivalry.

There are the special characteristics which denote the mark of this or that Paris house, and each one is quite distinctive.

AMONG THE PARIS HOUSES

Vionnet has not made any startling change, but her models are always the subtlest of poems.

She does many amusing things, too, such as placing the pockets upon the waistline if the belt is low.

The House of Vionnet has made belts quite taboo.

The very popular skirt with the scalloped hem is a splendid theme with Renee, and she plays upon it with infinite harmonious variations.

fort to woman-kind, and, even if they are not in fashion, which is not the case this year, the woman who knows will have one or more hanging contentedly in her wardrobe.

VOGUE OF CAPES

The vogue of capes had reached a high crest, indeed. There are wonderful ones for evening, made of sumptuous stuffs, generally of some metallic cloth interwoven with brilliant colors.

There are capes attached to the smart tailor suits, some are just a little flying wing-like garment of the same material, but very smart.

DES PAYS EN GUERRE

Of course the elegant woman is also very well versed in all the affairs of the world; she follows politics, she knows about art, she is musicienne, in short she is tremendously interesting.

As she sips her cafe au lait in the morning, she peruses her journal du matin, and informs herself of the doings abroad.

She worries—but not too much, for that is bad for the complexion—about the situation in Syria, she decides about English problems in Ireland, she follows the war in Morocco with interest.

This last is perhaps the most taking of all subjects, for she has just received a marvelous cape which is copied directly from the Arab.

At night the Arab takes himself to his tent and, pulling his hood well over his face, he wraps himself in his boudoir to lie down to pleasant dreams.

Even during the great war in France, the soldiers from the colonies were never without this native cape.

Fashion has duplicated it from Madama, faithfully, at least as to cut; for the real thing is made of wonderful Algerian wool, soft as silk, and is usually white.

But the material which makes the Western boudoir is metal, cloth the lining of brilliant-colored velvet, while the hood is somewhat exaggerated, and is finished with a long tassel.

It might be that a Moroccan tribesman would not recognize the clever adaptation of his indispensable companion of his days and nights, but to Madama that does not matter.

So she reads about the fastnesses of the Rif and the Spaniards and persuades herself that here are romance and passion and (at least when she wears the new cape) any amount of local color.

Local color.

THE OTHER SKETCHES

A simple gown of black satin is not easy to find. Here is one which is charmingly simple looking, but which depends for its chic upon the exquisite cut.

The lines are long and slender, with the fullest forward—you know that there is fullness in every skirt, and this year she is making the two-piece ensemble positively play the game for one!

There are alluring knickers to be worn under the skirt, too, and this is an innovation quite recent in French dress-making circles.

Any Linker's divided skirt is also marvelous, and its cut is a stroke of genius. The division is entirely unobtrusive, and as Madama walks in town, the panels fall gracefully and straight.

However, let her only wish to step high. . . . and the panels divide as if by magic, so that she has perfect liberty to take the contemplated step.

The costume is "brevete," which means that iris sort of copy-righted, if you know what I mean.

gown is of black velvet and gives a formal impression.

This model illustrates beautifully the favored cascade-of-ribbon. Placed at the side, it billows softly when the wearer moves.

THE EVER-ELEGANT BLACK

All women who are really elegant know the chic of the black toilette.

The result was that when one went to a smart tea or concert, or the matinee, the most depressing and sorrowful sight met one's eyes.

Therefore it is chic. That is the delightful paradox of fashion. Let a mode be exclusive and a little beyond one, and it is the acme of elegance, something to be desired; let it reach the popular fancy, and it ceases to be either elegant or chic.

LONG HAIR AND SHORT HAIR, Bare Head and Bandeau—You May Wear Which You Choose.

It is hard to prophesy about the bob nowadays. French models are better than hair grow long, while the Queen of Belgium had her royal locks shingled only a few weeks ago.

Really the fashion ought to remain with us long enough to permit the Belgian queen to reap the reward of her daring move.

Never have women's heads been more simply dressed than within the past few months in and about Paris. They were absolutely sleek and for the most part they have been free from any sort of decoration—jewelry, feathers, flowers, and hair.

But there are some women who find some sort of bandeau or other hair ornament so much more becoming than their own severely sleek hair that it is no wonder they snap at the dictate of a few fashion extremists and take advantage of various new hair trimmings.

One of the shops shows a wide bandeau—almost a tiara—made of cut steel that goes across the front of the head and to wear with it are interesting pendant earrings also of cut steel. There are caps of metal.

To wear bobbed hair in this smart new mode, part it far at the side, brushing it very smooth so as to show the forehead and hide the ears.

IF—(A la Mode)

(With apologies to Mr. Kipling.)

If you can keep your hair when all around you are bobbing theirs and urging it on you, If you can trust yourself when all men doubt you, And make your smile disarm their doubting, too;

If they can wait and not be tired of waiting, Or if they question you, don't deal in lies, Or being flitted don't give way to hating; And yet don't talk too good, nor look too wise;

If you can dream about your Lord and Master, If you can dress and not make clothes your aim, If you can meet and dance without disaster

And treat a last year's lover just the same; If you can hear the last bon mot you've spoken Stolen by chits to lay a trap for fools, Or see the date you've set your heart on broken

Because another used a coquette's tool; If you can take one chance with all your winnings And risk them on an evening's escapade, And lose—and start again at your beginnings

And never breathe a word about the jade; If you can faze your heart with careless laughter To serve your turn long after it is gone, And play the part of heartless flirt thereafter;

Exerting wiles which keep him holding on; If you can talk with men and keep your virtue Or walk with them nor lose the boudoir's touch, If neither scorn nor flattery can hurt you, If all men court with you but none too much,

If you can gild the light and fleeting minute With repartee or clever epigram, Yours is the earth and everything that's in it, And—which is more—you'll be superb, Madame!

NOTES AND IDEAS

IT IS a curious fact that in every epoch there have been certain meddlesome souls who couldn't be satisfied, no matter what the fashion might be.

If necks were high and very stiff and boned, or if several layers of petticoats hung gracefully from Madame's slender waist, or if wigs became so unwieldy that the ladies who wore them were like more flagrantly unjust than this Spanish ruler?

ONE marvelous thing about bobbed hair is the quite unexpected psychological effect which it has upon the feminine mind.

The very young girl with shorn locks is rendered more boyish, and her inconsequential conduct becomes charming in a breezy sort of way.

She rejoices in the freedom which her appearance gives her, and she wears the rose of youth upon her highly, teasingly.

But the realm of bobbed hair is not confined, perhaps unfortunately, to any age whatever. However, it is a not infrequent sight, that of a woman of much ripier years whose white hair cropped closely is really charming.

These ladies whose locks have weathered the advent of the first white hairs seem to have acquired a new sprightliness, a rather pretty coquetry, as soon as the coiffeur had plied the shears.

The effect is sometimes magical. There beams a kittenish light in the eye, and often the denuded nape (doubtless concealed heretofore with sure intent), proclaims what the French term "de beaux restes."

After all, it has become, in this remarkable century, a very difficult thing to guess the age of a woman. Naturally, nobody but one's dearest

MONDAY WASH DAY IN NEAR EAST

Over fifty different trades and arts are being taught the orphans and refugees in the institutions of the Bible lands. For the support of those institutions the affiliated Societies of Near East Relief have organized Golden Rule Sunday, the first Sunday in December, this year December 7.

Monday now means more abroad than just the day after Sunday. Relief workers have introduced it as wash day in the Near East as part of their campaign for better sanitary and living conditions. In the relief orphanages in Greece, Syria, Palestine, Armenia and Persia it is a day not only for hanging out the large family washing, but for general cleaning up.

Though the people in those countries with whom the organization comes into contact are naturally cleanly, conditions for the past ten years have been such that they have been unable to take proper sanitary precaution, a director of the Armenian relief reports.

The misery and squalor of the refugee camps and the terror and hardship of flight have left little opportunity for thought of cleanliness. Consequently many of the children in the orphanages who are products of such conditions must be taught the gospel of soap and water.

Just as they are being taught that the Golden Rule is an essential code

DOCTOR COMMENDS PRESENT HEALTHY STYLES IN DRESS

Says Short Skirts and Low Necks Hygienic; Men Less Sensible

Dr. W. G. Savage, county medical officer of health for Somerset, England, believes that the modern tendency on the part of woman to wear less clothes is to be commended.

"We are told," he says, "that woman's dress to-day is immoral. I don't know why, but I do know it is healthy."

"Short skirts that do not pick up the sweepings of the streets, which don't drag on the hips and distort the body, are hygienic, and enable exercise to be taken without fatigue.

"The open neck and sleeveless arm give opportunity for the ultra-violet rays of the sun to be absorbed.

"Silk stockings are hygienic, even if some other reason is the object of their use. The tightly constricted waist, causing permanent deformity, has gone—the corset with it.

"Woman has recognized that clothing is a necessary evil, and is doing her best to have as little of the evil as possible.

"The open blouse was once called the pneumonia blouse, but owing to the hardening process caused by the exposure of the skin is causing no more pneumonia than exists among those who wrap themselves up.

"Man, with tight collars and hot clothes, is far less hygienically clad; but in one respect is more sensible than woman. The pointed, high-heeled boots and shoes of woman are certainly not what science considers the human foot requires."

enemy would ever think of trying—and yet.

To-day that question, "How old do you think she is?" has lost many terrors, and I think that bobbed hair has helped as much as the custom which prevailed among Grecian women. These witty ladies counted their age from their marriage, not from their birth; there is rather subtle shade of meaning there, too.

Anyway, "woman is a miracle of divine contradictions," we have Mfchelet's word for it, and that may be the underlying reason for the short hair.

"I wish myself could talk to myself, as I left her a year ago. I could tell her a lot that would save her a lot in the things she ought to know.

Brass curtain poles should be rubbed occasionally with a cloth damped with paraffin or machine oil. This causes rings to slide smoothly when the curtains are drawn.

When an umbrella has become shabby, sponge it with a strong solution of sweetened tea. The tea restores the color and sugar gives stiffening to the fabric.

In boiling and roasting, meat loses a great deal of weight. Beef will lose nearly a pound in every four. For this reason picas and stews are more economical than joints, and the entire nourishment of the meat is preserved.

ANNA MARTIN'S LOVE

By BERTHE K. MELLETT

Illustrated by L. F. WILFORD

After Ten Years of Hardship She Had Saved Enough Money to Follow Her Dream to Paris, Athens, Rome—Then Fate Faced Her With a Problem That Tested Her

There was nothing pretty about Anna Martin except her hands; and they were not pretty—they were beautiful. The man who had arrived on the boat which only that morning came to anchor in the roadstead of Nome saw her hands as they lay upon the ledge of an open window in the schoolhouse on the sea-pier, and caught his breath. Firm across the palms, long and strong in the fingers, unmarred by ten Alaskan winters, they were the white hands of a woman who had received no niggardly gifts from nature. As he looked from the hands to the woman, some of their beauty seemed to run through the tall, slim body which held itself lightly in the window opening, and to suffuse the austerity of her fine-pitched features.

However, it was not the man's scrutiny which warmed and almost beautified the face of Anna Martin. She had not noticed the eager searching of his eyes towards her. Her whole attention was on the sea, the whole mind filled with the thought that the Aegean and not Bering would dance and flash before her when another Spring arrived.

Had she looked from an opposite window in the corrugated iron temple of learning over which she presided, she could have seen the tundra. But Anna did not look at the tundra. She hated it. Winter and summer for ten years she had hated it. Up to that morning she had hated everything about the north, including the sea. Then suddenly, interrupting a struggle to teach the young Eskimo an idea how to spell, she had heard a boat whistle in the roadstead—the first boat of the year. No longer was the sea a wilderness of glass piled between her and the things she meant to have, but a path towards those things. A path for her to travel. The product of ten years' school-teaching in the north and of ten years' judicious investment in the residue of gold left on the bed-rock, of placer-worked creeks lay in the bank. September would bring the new teacher, October her would mean for Anna Martin the Pacific, hotels and trains. After that Rome, Athens, Paris, a pension somewhere—the full fruits of spinsterhood after lean and empty years. She had been at the window less than ten minutes when the door at the far end of the building opened and Little Waluk Johannsen came in. Turning back to her desk she sat down and watched rather grimly as this morsel of native humanity stumbled up the aisle, despair written all over his dark little pile of a face, the white he-fumbled in the folds of his tattered garment and finally brought forth a crescent of carven walrus ivory—a treasure, as she knew well.

"The cribbage-board of my uncle," he blubbered. "Pit Ticher if she will say over the white puppy the medicine of seven times."

HER THOUSAND STRENGTHS

He looked up and for just a flash she saw him as he was. She saw the passionate, weak mouth, the line of cheek and jaw too near beauty for a man. Then the revelation was withdrawn and its memory effaced. He touched her clasped hands on the desk. "Anna," he said, "marry me. Marry me and hold me with those wonderful hands. Make me, my girl straight. A woman with hands like yours has a thousand strengths to hold and guide a man. Use those strengths for me. Marry me."

Trembling, she got up and went to the little mirror in the cloakroom. "Marriage is over every feature of the face reflected there. It was as though a lamp, once dark and forbidden, had been lighted and rendered lovely. A thousand strengths—she said a woman like her had a thousand strengths. But had she? And if she had, would she know how to use them? The barren years behind her, the grim and lonely and unlovely years, rose like ghosts gibbering disaster.

"I can't," she said when she came back to him. "I can't until I'm sure."

"But Anna," he pleaded, "it's the only way you'll ever be sure. A moment, and I'll show you a married virago. I mean it. I mean it now. It's because I see strength and straight thinking in you, and even a latent shrewdness, that I'm begging you to marry me."

"I can't," she repeated. "I couldn't take happiness and then give it ungraciously. I'd be afraid of myself—of what I would do—"

He went to a window and stood looking out for a moment. When he came back his manner had changed. "I think I'll leave Nome," he said. "I think I'll go on to the new strike at Copper Entrance up near the Canadian border."

Jealousy of the distance to Copper Entrance suddenly assailed her with bitterness. "Why?" she asked sharply.

He studied her face for a moment. "My dear girl," he said, "for the same reason. That people once stampered to Dawson, and later to Nome. Gold. Having spent my patrimony—"

"Nome is still a safe investment. The wildcat days are over here. Reliable people hold all the property."

"They certainly do. All of it." "Conditions were the same when I came ten years ago. But I found opportunities to buy in, and now I have money enough to keep me for the rest of my life. This fall another teacher is coming to take my place, and then I am going." She hesitated with the familiar catalogue of benefits. "Paris, a pension some place on her lips. And in the repetition of four words she reconstructed her future. "—and then I am going to use my influence to make Nome more profitable for you than Copper Entrance could ever have been."

"Anna," he said, "you are making a mistake. If you'd marry me, it would be different. I—I should be afraid of your rolling-pin." He laughed a short, nervous, tortured laugh, and once more the look of trouble and appeal shot from his eyes to hers. "You could use those thousand strengths you have to hold me and keep me straight until I learned to go right of my own accord. A woman like you would use those strengths unless she's married to a man. Another kind of woman might—but you—you never would."

Her mind swung into a kind of voluptuous coma with the knowledge that he was coming—to her.

However, if you want me—if you want me here—"

He stooped to kiss her hands, and she drew one of them away and laid it upon his head. Once she had read of a mother who after long years knew the child she had lost. It must have been by some such searching, enveloping pain and joy.

Anna did not recognize selfishness in Wandell's demands upon her. To her his selfishness was not selfishness. It was as the insistent and rightful claim of a child upon its mother. The only reason for her refusal was that the ghosts of unloved and unlovely years stood behind her, croaking that the demand would not last, could not last, and that the claim would be withdrawn.

ANN GETS PARALYZING NEWS

Standing at her mirror and seeing the bloom of beauty which love had grafted upon the austere stem of her tenderness and health and regularity of features gave her only hope and not assurance. Caution and self-preservation were lifelong habits. She had to know the permanency of the gift which had brought her love before she accepted the love irrevocably.

"Wandell spent the long, light evenings of the summer in her cabin on the beach, appropriating her time, her wing-back chair and her attention with equal complacency. He made boxes to set on her window ledges and planted lettuce in them— and came and sat beside her while she read the newspaper and looked towards his wife's progress, and dictated her clothes. Rum-maging through the general stores of Nome, he found a soft scarf of the shade of red to emphasize the blackness of her hair and eyes. When she came again, at his suggestion, all garments which for ten years she had worn as a challenge and example to the Arctic world, and clad herself in mottled deerskin, softened at face and wrists with wolverine. But it was not until she brought the white puppy of her metamorphosis was complete. For ten years she had waged unrelenting war upon the dogs of Nome, shooting them from school and cabin.

"It's the puppy you said for that day—grown up," she laughed towards Wandell when he came to help her get the animal over the sill. "I made Waluk give her up."

Wandell dropped on his knees beside the dog. "She's a beauty," he pronounced appreciatively.

"I thought maybe we'd make up a team."

"There's a white dog out at Helme's place that I think will match. To-morrow I'll run out and see if I can make a deal."

It did not occur to her to ask when he had been at Helme's disreputable roadhouse. And her Helme's husky was not the eternal tin-type! Not on your eternal tin-type! I earned enough to buy a ranch once. I can do it again. But you're a woman alone. That's why I didn't get you on that note before. It looked good, but I wasn't taking chances with a lone woman's money. And by cracky, you're not going to lose it now."

"I know where he's gone," said Anna.

"That's no good," Svenrud said down again and pulled his face through his hands. "He won't have any of the money left. Evvie's a daisy at selling down."

"I've got the white puppy for leader," Anna went on. "But if you dog team—of course it would eliminate you from the Sweepstakes—"

"Sweepstakes! But what's the good of lighting out after spent money. Evvie'll never give you a cent, and he won't have any to give up—not in her company."

"Are you going to get Wandell Phelps going with what he's trying to do?"

"I'll broadcast a description—"

"And warn him he's wanted! Every prospector's dugout has a radio set in it, and he's no fool. He'll be listening in." She rose from the floor where she had been coining a flame into the fire. "He is on his way to Copper Entrance. He's had the place in mind for nearly a year. And now, with the rush opening up there, he's gone."

"I'll get word to the sheriff there—"

"Dog trains have been established between Copper Entrance and the Canadian side, and old timers are stampeding from every direction. No sheriff who doesn't know a man is going to be able to pick him out. If Phelps lands in Copper Entrance and flips there after him, he'll simply take one of the returning teams and drop over the border."

Svenrud went to the window. "I'm not sending men out at this season of the year," he said doggedly. "It will start thawing at any time. If you thought I was the kind of a swine who'd do the returning teams and drop over the border."

"Either your phone's gone blooey, or you're deaf," he began. "I've been calling all morning, Phelps has flew the coop, and I'm hit bad. I loaned the money at the bank to buy in with Walstad. Walstad was a fool, of course, to hike out and leave a new man to run his show all winter. But that don't help now. The company's gone. Where the money's gone, heaven knows. But it's gone—"

"You loaned Phelps that money on my recommendation. I didn't even sign the note."

"Now, look here, Anna, don't go shouldering the load. I was taken in. He looked all right, and when I called Prisco they said his family was good and his credit was still O.K."

"You're honest—and now you're expected to pay for his dishonesty."

"I'm not squealing—not for myself. But—well, you see, Helga and me, we've saved for years. Helga's had a woman's notion about a little orange ranch down in Pasadena, county some day. We've got about enough to buy that—or to meet the loss on Phelps to the banks. And if I know Helga, she'll empty the old poke."

He sat down suddenly on the couch. "I've been up all night over his books," he said in explanation of his weakness. "And I hate to tell Helga that her little ranch—"

"I've got some money," Anna said in a dull, hard voice. "I've worked and saved. I wanted to see Rome, and Athens and Paris. Then—then I changed my mind for a while. Now I've changed it again. I'll take up that note. Helga shan't lose—"

"Not on your eternal tin-type! I earned enough to buy a ranch once. I can do it again. But you're a woman alone. That's why I didn't get you on that note before. It looked good, but I wasn't taking chances with a lone woman's money. And by cracky, you're not going to lose it now."

"I know where he's gone," said Anna.

"That's no good," Svenrud said down again and pulled his face through his hands. "He won't have any of the money left. Evvie's a daisy at selling down."

"I've got the white puppy for leader," Anna went on. "But if you junction of the Yukon and the Koyuk. Ole was away on his round of traps, but the door was unlocked, and spruce was piled behind his stove. Anna ate, opening tins of Jensen's salmon for her dogs; slept, coiled in the wolverine rug on the floor; and departed three hours after midnight, leaving money to cover damage done, in the till. Another gold piece was already there. Aside from that there were no signs of previous visitors.

Out from the flats of Nome and through the light timber back of the sea-coast, traveling by good snow and easy. Now the forest thickened, and the barrier of the river threatened. To cross the river she unloaded the sled and drove it empty over the wilderness of jammed and tumbled ice. Then, returning, she recrossed again with her goods upon her back. Re-loading again, she faced the mountains. The untraced trail lifted itself in angles, shattered itself into abysses.

As the days passed and the wind left its work undone, she saw the cut of sledge runners, the mangle print of dogs, the outline of boot-soles. Fear that Phelps had eluded her on the road gave way to fear that she should overtake him before she reached the assistance necessary to enforce her will and the law's upon him. It became necessary to hold her dogs back. Her hand shook so that she upset the melted snow for tea upon the fire she had built, and after that she took to nibbling the dry leaves of the herb, and eating the frozen morsels around her as did the dogs. By map and chronometer she computed the time she had yet to spend upon the road. The journey was almost done. Sitting upon her sledge in the darkness she pulled at the neck-band of her park to ease the pressure around her throat. A wind was rising, but her mind, intent upon her pain, failed to notice it. Then a spruce swayed—and she saw a light ahead. It was a camp-fire, not more than two miles distant. She had but some upon her quarry.

A Chinook was blowing. The thawer, the looser of avalanches, the breaker of ice and destroyer of trails had come! By dawn, travelers would sink to their knees in slush, dogs would strain against immovable weights—rouned by twigs for fear of disaster. Anna gathered twigs for fuel, studied the map. The trail she followed had fallen into a narrow canyon for the final step to Copper Entrance in the mountains. On the margin of the paper, Svenrud had drawn an elongated arrow and at the head of the arrow had written, "Dangerous. Snow Slides. Keep AWAY."

Smudging the black letters that she might not read them, Anna called the dogs. Taking the last few fish from the end of the sledge, she stepped from the snow and ate and started.

Either the pain of Anna's body was gone, or it had mounted beyond the register of her nerves, like heat which a thermometer can no longer record. Her mind began to perform tricks. Wandell seemed to walk in her cheeks as brighter than the red of the scarf she wore. There was a vast, shrill moaning in the air. JEALOUSY SPRINGS UP. FIERCELY leaves, and ate them greedily out of her palm. The acrid taste was good. Brushing the herb-dust from her hand, she looked at the long strong fingers. Some one had said that a woman with such hands must have a thousand strengths. What good was strength? There was a girl named Evvie Holt and she was weak—her hands, her body, her heart—pale and weak. Yet, she had taken Helga's little ranch and what was it? Svenrud had said—sleeting it down. And she had taken to the soul of a woman with a thousand strengths and flicked it out of her path. Weakness and not strength spun the world. Weakness—"

Losing one hand from its mitten, she thrust it into her pocket for tea

Then suddenly Anna Martin's mind cleared. The sound in the air was the shrieking and howling of the whole ice rim-of the pass as it tore loose from its roots of frost and started down the sharp side of the mountain. Her consciousness righted itself and began to function. Call, called in the wolverine rug on the floor; and tangled themselves in their harness, she brought them flat in the snow. Then, gauging the time left her, she straightened herself, filled her lungs, and screamed. Once, twice, three times she sent out a cry for help, keyed to such a shrill pitch that it rose above the thunder that filled the air. And when a consciousness above any process of her mind, she sent it towards Wandell on the trail ahead of her.

A spume of white flattened in the air above her. Flinging herself along the ice side of the sled, she gave herself to its cover. The snow slide came on, piling a range of snow along both sides of its course, gathering spruce and rock and flinging them again. The sled leaped against the hard pack of snow around it as the dogs struggled and fought. The weight of snow above Anna increased, but it held cohesively together as though its particles were interlocked. This, and the fact that she had not been carried down nor ground to death by the passing fury, indicated that was the slide-fing, and not the slide itself which enveloped her.

It was warm and silent under the white. A temptation to cry again came upon Anna. Sternly she put the temptation away, and set the accurate, smooth-running machinery of her mind to work. The ugliest fear she succumbed to, she was going to get out. Her old pride of strength began to hammer at that purpose. Calculating positions by the sled, she worked in the snow until she could turn her body, and then with her hands up, she packed back the beginning of a tunnel. There was air to breathe, carried down from the mountain and caught around her in the light particles of snow. Her mittens torn at their gut-seams, feet hot from the ice, she felt her hands. A pink stain colored the snow and thickened to a blot of red. Her hands were falling. She brought the bleeding fingers down against her mouth and moaned upon them. Someone must come to her, and bring greater strength. And that someone must be Wandell.

With the first vibration that carried through the snow to her ears, she knew that he was coming. Lying straight in the snow, her hair tangled about her head, her hair fingers under her lips, she waited. How long she would have to wait she did not know nor care. Her mind swung itself into a kind of voluptuous coma with the knowledge that he was coming—to her. "What did Evvie Holt matter? Fiercely into new and savage life, dissipating the half-dream which had lulled her. But now it was not jealousy of Evvie for herself, it was jealousy of Evvie for Wandell. At any moment Wandell might conclude that the cry he heard of rending ice or spruce, might abandon the search he had begun in the snow. And to abandon that search would mean that he should not find her, and not to find her meant his ruin."

"WHERE IS EVVIE HOLT?"

Bit by bit, hour by hour, until she was done with him, Evvie would feed upon his weakness and destroy the beauties of his soul. Only Anna could save him from Evvie. She began to struggle in the snow again, to sob and clasp against its muffling softness, to scoop it out and beat it back with her bleeding hands.

It was her leacrated hands as they came through the snow above her head, that Wandell saw. Saw, and recognized and covered with his own, and drew her out of the white death which enveloped her.

"Anna," he whispered. "Anna!" Pushing herself up a little, she looked towards the trail. "Where is she?" she asked weakly.

"She?"

"Evvie. Evvie Holt."

"Evvie? Why—the last I saw of her she was staring over a line of traps with the boy that was keeping Jensen's store, and when she heard he'd got two black skins this Winter she saw a chance to collect. If I lift you carefully—"

"But you left Nome with Evvie. Tell."

"I met her the morning I started

"Then it was only because of the money—the money from the bank—"

"I'd been the usual chechako fool, buying everything that was loose, and I got into a hole. We'll talk that over later. Now I must get you back to the sled; dig your dogs out—a hole!"

"What do you mean by getting into a hole?"

"I used what money I had, and needed more. But I couldn't go to the bank. I felt that Svenrud backed me because you told him to. I can't be dependent on you in any way, Anna. When we marry, I have to be as strong a member of the firm as my wife. Once I asked you to marry me and you refused. You said you had to be sure."

"But I didn't mean—"

"Whatever you meant, you were right. You wouldn't come down to my level, so I had to climb up to yours—and by George, I'm doing it! I'll clean up enough in one season at Copper Entrance to pay the bank and carry my Nome properties."

"But I had money. You could have—"

"That's why I left without saying anything to you. I was afraid of you and your money. You have terrible strength, Anna. If you'd told me to take it, and hid instead, I might have yielded to you."

"When you went back to Svenrud from Copper Entrance. He'll give you all the time you need." Disposing of this issue, her mind flew to the one that really counted. "Anything is all right now—now that I know you didn't leave me for Evvie Holt."

Smoothing the dark, tangled hair from her brow, he cupped her face in his hands and smiled into her eyes. "You don't mean that you, with all your strength, let yourself care when you thought that I did that?"

"She smiled back tremulously. "I've learned a lot about strength lately," she said. "I've learned that there is no weakness of which strength is not capable—and no strength to which weakness cannot rise. Why, with a little practice, I think I'll make a pretty fair wielder of the rolling-pin."

Knocking forward, he lifted her against his breast, and clinging together, they found themselves laughing, as do those who have come through great tribulation to great and lasting joy.

PEARLS ON MONDAY

Monday being anciently associated with the moon is deemed the proper day for the wearing of moonstones. However, in the old list of lucky stones for different days of the week we find "opals" instead of the moonstones for this day. So if you have no pearls, then wear opals, and if you have neither then you must get a moonstone, which is not as expensive as if you were apt to bring yourself the good luck that comes from wearing the lucky stone for every day of the week.

Pearls have long been regarded as symbols of fidelity and chastity and would doubtless have been used more often for engagement rings if it were not for the fact that they are apt to lose in their settings, and the old saying is that it is extremely bad luck to have the stone in your engagement ring fall out or loose within a year. If you are apt to be cold than the cold woman who has worn it. But this applies only to the real gem. Anyone in the world can wear imitation pearls, and apparently everyone does at present.

Apparently it is all oppy cock and nonsense about opals bringing bad luck. They are extremely lucky if worn in their proper setting. It may be that you are one of the women for whom they are lucky all the time.

WORKING GIRL'S EXPERIENCE

Read how She Found Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Arnprior, Ontario.—"I must write and tell you my experience with your medicine. I was working at the factory for three years and became so run-down that I used to take weak spells and would be at home at least one day each week. I was treated by the doctors for anemia, but it didn't seem to do me any good. I was told to take a rest, but was unable to, and kept on getting worse. I was troubled mostly with my periods. I would sometimes pass three months, and when it came it would last around two weeks, and I would have such pains at times in my right side that I could hardly walk. I am only 19 years of age and weigh 118 pounds now, and before taking the Vegetable Compound I was only 108 pounds. I was sickly for two years and some of my friends told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and when I had taken a bottle of it I felt a change. My mother has been taking it for a different ailment and has found it very satisfactory. I am willing to tell friends about the medicine and to answer letters asking about it.—Miss HAZEL BRANDT, Box 700, Arnprior, Ontario.

A day out each week shows in the pay envelope. If you are troubled with such weakness, indicated by a run-down condition, tired feelings, pains and irregularity, let Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound help you.

WUNDER AIR GUN FACTORY

Dear Master James Dugan, Pres. Tiger Hunters Club.

We have searched our records for a week in an effort to locate your order for the air gun. We fail to find any record of it or your $1.45. Are you sure you addressed it correctly? Are you certain your letter is not mislaid or lost? We suggest that you trace it carefully from your end of the line.

Regretfully yours,
Al Luckie
Secy.
