THE vernacular or spoken language of Amoy, which this Dictionary attempts to make more accessible than formerly, has been also termed by some "The Amoy Dialect" or "The Amoy Colloquial;" and it partially coincides with the so-called "Hok-kien Dialect," illustrated by the Rev. Dr. Medhurst in his quarto Dictionary under that title. But such words as "Dialect" or "Colloquial" give an erroneous conception of its nature. It is not a mere colloquial dialect or patois; it is spoken by the highest ranks just as by the common people, by the most learned just as by the ignorant; learned men indeed add a few polite or pedantic phrases, but these are mere excrescences (and even they are pronounced according to the Amoy sounds), while the main body and staple of the spoken language of the most refined and learned classes is the same as that of coolies, labourers, and boatmen.

Nor does the term "dialect" convey anything like a correct idea of its distinctive character; it is no mere dialectic variety of some other language; it is a distinct language, one of the many and widely differing languages which divide among them the soil of China.

The so-called "written language" of China is indeed uniform throughout the whole country; but it is rather a notation than a language; for this universal written language is pronounced differently when read aloud in the different parts of China, so that while as written it is one, as soon as it is pronounced it splits into several languages. And still further, this written language, as it is read aloud from books, is not spoken in any place whatever under any form of pronunciation. The most learned men never employ it as a means of ordinary oral communication even among themselves. It is in fact a dead language, related to the various spoken languages of China somewhat as Latin is to the languages of South-western Europe.

A very considerable number of the spoken languages of China have been already more or less studied by European and American residents in the country, such as the Mandarin, the Hakka, the vernaculars of Canton and Amoy, and several others. These are not dialects of one language; they are cognate languages, bearing to each other a relation similar to that which subsists between the Arabic, the Hebrew, the Syriac, the Ethiopic, and the other members of the Semitic family; or again between English, German, Dutch, Danish, Swedish, &c.

There is another serious objection to the use of the term "dialect" as applied to these languages, namely, that within each of them there exist real dialects. For instance, the Mandarin, the greatest of all, contains within itself at least three very marked "dialects," the Northern, spoken at Peking; the Southern, spoken at Nanking and Soo-chow; and the Western, spoken in the provinces of Sze-chuen, Hoo-peh, &c.

In like manner the language which for want of a better name we may call the Amoy Vernacular or spoken language, contains within itself several real dialects, especially those of Chang-chew, Chin-chew, Tung-an, and of Amoy itself. In this Dictionary the form of the language spoken at Amoy itself is taken as the standard, and the principal variations of the Chang-chew and Chin-chew dialects are marked, as also a considerable number of the variations occurring in Tung-an, Chang-poo, and some other regions.

The language of Amoy, including these subordinate dialects, is believed to be spoken by about eight or ten millions. This is the first dictionary of the spoken language. There are numerous dictionaries of the universal written language of China. One of these, by the Rev. Dr. Medhurst, called "Dictionary of the Hok-kien Dialect," gives the Chang-chew sound (or more accurately the sound of Chang-poo, i.e. Chiu"-phé) of the written characters. Some colloquial words are also given in Dr. Medhurst's Dictionary, but they are few, and entirely in the Chang-chew or Chang-poo dialect, and unhappily the colloquial forms given are often far from accurate. The only other publications that have anything of the form of a dictionary are the very brief vocabularies in the Manuals of Doty and Macgowan.

The basis of this Dictionary is the manuscript vocabulary prepared by the late Rev. J. Lloyd, Missionary of the American Presbyterian Church. When I arrived at Amoy in 1855 I copied it for my own use, adding the additional words in Doty's Manual, and have been constantly enlarging and re-arranging the collection of words and phrases ever since. A few years after copying Lloyd's Vocabulary I collated the manuscript dictionary written by the Rev. Alexander Stronach of the London Missionary Society. I also at a later date went over all the words in the native dictionaries of the Chang-chew and Chin-chew dialects, and in a native vocabulary which attempts to give the Mandarin words and phrases for the Amoy ones. Of these native works the only really good one is the Chang-chew or rather Chang-poo Dictionary, named the Sip-ngé-im, which is the basis of Medhurst's Dictionary. Having thus the original source to refer to, I have made but little use of Medhurst's work; for such colloquial phrases in it as are not drawn from the Sip-ngé-im are very questionable, while its valuable book-phrases do not serve my purpose. Macgowan's Manual, though very useful for a beginner, was of course published too late for my use. In looking over it I found very few words which I had not already in my manuscript.

No one can be more sensible of the defects of the work than I am myself. It was at first prepared for my own use alone; as it grew larger I hoped that it might be used in manuscript by beginners, or copied, abridged, or expanded by successive missionaries; and it was only after repeated solicitations, culminating in a formal request by all the members of the three Protestant missions at Amoy, that I consented to prepare it for the press. This is my apology for all its faults and imperfections. It attempts to fill a real blank and to supply an urgent want; and I shall only be too glad when it shall be superseded and forgotten, or remembered only as the foundation on which a far more complete and accurate work shall have been reared.

When the Amoy missionaries asked me to prepare for the press the manuscript which I had compiled, the Rev. John Stronach of the London Missionary Society, and the Rev. John Van Nest Talmage, D.D., of the American Reformed Mission, were at the same time appointed to assist me in the revision of it. Mr. Stronach went over the whole from beginning to end, but Dr. Talmage was prevented by other duties from revising more than a few dozen pages. After their revision it was necessary for me to harmonize and recast the whole (with large additions and alterations which never came under their eyes), when writing out the copy for the printer. So that while a large share of what is good in the book should be put to the credit of my coadjutors, I must myself be held responsible for all its faults.

The most serious defect is the want of the Chinese character. This is due to two causes: (1) There are a very large number of the words for which we have not been able to find the corresponding character at all, perhaps a quarter or a third of the whole; and the time when it was necessary for me to take my furlough made it impossible to make the search for the missing characters, many of them rare, and many difficult to recognize from the great variations that take place between the written and spoken forms of the language. (2) Even if the characters had been found, it would have been very difficult or impossible for me to use the Chinese character in printing at home. But it was necessary to print it during my furlough at home, because we have not the means of printing such a work at Amoy; and on my return to China I could not have been spared from the mission long enough to go to some other port to carry it through the press. I cherish the hope of publishing a Key or Sequel in two or three years, giving the characters so far as they can be found. Meantime, while I greatly regret that the Chinese character does not appear in the book, I am in one sense glad that it is absent. For it may serve to make manifest the fact that the Vernacular of Amoy is an independent language, which is able to stand alone without the help of the written character. And I should hope that many persons may thus be encouraged to study this language who would have been repelled by the sight of the complicated and fantastic characters. Of course every missionary, and every one who would be counted a scholar, must study the written character too, for the Vernacular or Colloquial cannot for a very long time to come possess any literature worthy of the name.

Another defect, which I greatly regret, is the very scanty identification of plants, animals, medicines, &c. Want of time is here also the excuse, which I trust my readers will count sufficient. Many such names have been put in with a query, being taken from such works as The Fuh-chau Recorder, Notes and Queries on China and Japan, The Phoenix, Dr. Porter Smith's Book on Medicines, the various dictionaries of the written language, &c., while I had not the means of verifying them.

To some it seems also a great want that there is no English-Chinese part. But that must really be a separate work. The whole style and character of Chinese thought and expression is so different from the nearest English equivalents, that the work of reversing a dictionary, which at first sight seems very easy, would really be enormous, falling not very far short of the original composition.

With all its imperfections I trust that this book shall prove helpful to those who study the language of Amoy. My chief object has been to assist those who are engaged in the work of Christian missions; but for this purpose I have endeavoured to give a full view of the language so far as I have been able to learn it; and the book is fitted to be equally useful to merchants, travellers, mariners, interpreters, and students. It is most desirable that foreigners residing among the Chinese should learn their language, so as to hold direct intercourse with them, instead of using the miserable jargon called Canton-English or "pigeon English," or being left at the mercy of interpreters. Few things would so much tend to remove causes of dispute or bad feeling, and to make the intercourse between these nations both pleasant and beneficial.

The explanations in the Introduction and Appendix have been much condensed from want of time at the last; I have therefore not been able to give the several subjects a scientific treatment, but have contented myself with such practical directions as will facilitate the use of the book and the acquisition of the language.

In conclusion I would express my thanks to HUGH M. MATHESON, Esq., Convener of the Foreign Mission Committee of the Presbyterian Church in England; to ROBERT BARBOUR, Esq., of Bolesworth; and to C. E. LEWIS, Esq., M.P., for the kind liberality which has enabled me to publish the work.

INTRODUCTION; WITH REMARKS ON PRONUNCIATION AND INSTRUCTIONS FOR USE.

ORTHOGRAPHY AND PRONUNCIATION.

VOWELS.

The vowels a, e, i, o, u, are pronounced much as in Italian and German.

a as in far. It must never be pronounced with the peculiarly English sound of a in man.

e as in grey. But in the syllables ien, iet, it is nearly the same as in men, yet, and sometimes approaches to the English a in man.

i as in machine, not with the short English i in swift. Thus the Amoy word sin is almost the same as the English seen, but quite different from the English sin. Almost the only words which I have observed where it comes near the short English sound are chit, "this," and hit, "that," which often come very near the English words spelled alike.

o, when final, is pronounced as in no, go. It is also thus pronounced when followed by h; for, as is explained below, the final h is silent, and merely indicates that the vowel is short and abrupt, so that final oh is just short final o.

But when o is followed by m, ng, p, or k, it is pronounced as in the English hop, sock, long.

When followed by another vowel it has the first of the above sounds, as in go, no, but in some cases very short, almost like w, as is fully explained below under the head of the diphthongs.

ø has the sound of aw in law, saw. This sound is really the same as the second sound of o, as explained above, so that strictly speaking this letter ø should have been used in place of o before m, ng, p, and k; but I have followed the spelling now universal at Amoy by using the letter o before these consonants for the sound more accurately written ø.

é is the French è, or like the English e in there. It scarcely ever occurs except in the Changechew dialect, so that persons who cannot catch the sound may use e as the nearest approximation.

In vowels with double dots, the double dot always indicates a change of the vowel sound, and is never used for the diæresis.

ö is the same as the German ö. It occurs only in the dialects of Chin-chew and Tung-an, where it is often used instead of the Amoy and Changechew e. Thus any one who cannot catch the sound of ö will be most safe to use e instead. It must by no means be confounded with o; only Cn. öe corresponds with A. oe.

ü is nearly the German ü or French u, but not quite the same, having often a slight variation from that sound in the direction of ö.

It occurs only in the dialects of Chin-chew and Tung-an, in which it frequently takes the place of the Amoy u. It almost invariably does so when the Amoy u corresponds to the Changechew i, but it often occurs also when the Amoy and Changechew agree in u. Persons who cannot get hold of the sound may therefore use u as an approximation.

i is a sound very rarely heard. It is exactly the short English i in sit, swift. I have used it in chi^h, chit, hi^h, hit, ti^h, where they occur as leading words in alphabetical order; but where they occur in the phrases and examples under other leading words, I have written such words chit, hit, and ti^h or teh, as their pronunciation is very indefinite. When slowly and carefully pronounced, chit, hit, are the sounds given. But ti^h, ti^h, or teh, is never pronounced slowly or carefully, it is always unaccented and rapid, so that its sound is much disputed. I refer in these remarks to one word only under each of these syllables, for the other words under each syllable always retain the clear sound of i.

DIPHTHONGS.

In all the diphthongs each vowel is heard distinctly with its own proper sound.

In ai, au, and oe, the first vowel is accented, the second unaccented. ai like the English ie in tie; au like the English ow in now; oe very nearly as in the English Noel.

In oa, on the other hand, the a is accented; the o is unaccented and generally extremely short, almost like w, indeed in many words it might be written w when pronounced at the usual rate; but when pronounced long, the sound of the o is clearly heard, e.g. sometimes in the "chi^ü-pi^â" and "ë-khi" tones; and in the nasal form oa", the o is distinctly heard; but in all cases great care must be taken not to exaggerate the o sound, but to make the a the principal vowel.

The same remarks apply to oai, where the accent is on the a, the whole coming very near the English Wye, but with rather more of the o sound.

In diphthongs beginning with i the accent is usually on the second vowel, while the i is sounded very nearly like y. Thus, in ia, iau, the accent is on a; in io it is on o.

But in the nasal form iaⁿ, the accent falls nearly equally on the two vowels, and the vowel sound of i is distinctly heard, though a is still more prominent.

In iu the accent is nearly equal on the two vowels, and sometimes seems even to fall on the i, especially when the word is the last word of a clause.

When the two vowels of a diphthong are almost equally accented, it may often be observed that if the whole word lose the accent it is the first vowel which loses it most thoroughly; e.g. in the word “kiù” a considerable portion of accent falls on the i, but in the phrase kiù-sè, where the chief accent falls on sè, the unaccented kiù is pronounced almost like the English Kew.

NASA LS.

A small ⁿ suspended or written above the line at the end of a syllable indicates that the whole syllable becomes nasal. If the syllable contain a diphthong, the nasal mark, though placed at the end, qualifies the preceding vowel or vowels as well as the last.

In words beginning with m, n, and ng, I have not preserved absolute uniformity. It has been usual with many, especially in the American Reformed Mission, to write no nasal mark (small ⁿ) at such words, but to lay down the rule that all words beginning with m, n, and ng, are to be pronounced nasally. It seems to me that in some such words the vowel has not any distinctly nasal sound, and I have therefore endeavoured to write it where the sound is really nasal. But through the force of habit I have often omitted to write it where it should be. Initial j is also somewhat irregular.

CONSONANTS.

The great majority of the consonants are pronounced as in English, or very nearly so.

ch always as in church; only in the aspirated form chh it sometimes approaches to the aspirated sound of ts, as is explained below in the remarks on the aspirated consonants.

g is always hard.

h is always really pronounced, and must never be left silent as in many English words.

l is often pronounced in a very thick indistinct manner, approaching to the sound of d, so much so that as the language of Amoy has no proper d, the Amoy people usually employ a syllable beginning with l when trying to imitate a foreign word beginning with d.

ng as in sing, hang; so even at the beginning of a syllable. Care must be taken never to bring in the sound of g, as in anger, but to preserve the sound of ng simple and pure. To a beginner it is often difficult to pronounce ng as an initial; it is somewhat as if in the word singer or longing the si- or lo- were cut off.

s has always the sharp sound, as in so, sing; never sounded like z, as in lose.

Final consonants are pronounced much more gently and softly than in English. In English there is usually a slight emission of vocal breath at the end of a final consonant, but in Chinese there is not the slightest emission of breath at the end of the final consonant, which is thus final in the strictest sense, the organs of speech remaining at the end of the word in the position for pronouncing the final consonant; e.g. at the end of the Chinese word sam the lips are still shut, at the end of kat the tip of the tongue remains touching the palate near the teeth, and immediately afterwards the lips are opened or the tongue removed without the faintest sound. This is the cause of the great softness and gentleness of the final consonants in Chinese.

The finals, k, p, t, are pronounced so gently that it is sometimes very difficult to distinguish them from each other.

Final m, n, and ng, do not break off abruptly as in English, but are somewhat prolonged, being sounded with a sort of vowel or vocal murmur in the consonant itself. In some tones these finals are much prolonged; in the second tone (chiùⁿ-siaⁿ) they are briefer, but even in it not so short as in English. This prolonged murmur is specially remarkable in final eng, which sounds almost as if there were an indistinct half pronounced vowel between the e and the ng.

m and ng, having a half pronounced vowel within the liquid consonant, sometimes make words of themselves, standing quite alone without any vowel attached, e.g. ng, ng̃, m̃, m̃. They are also often found with a consonant prefixed, but without any vowel, e.g. sng, hng̃, hm̃. The nature of these syllables without a distinct vowel becomes at once unmistakable in singing, as at such a word all clear vocal sound at once ceases, and nothing is heard but a dull nasal murmur.

The ASPIRATED CONSONANTS are a very remarkable feature in all the languages of China, and require very special attention. They are kh, ph, th, and chh. The sounds are the same as those indicated by the same notation in the languages of India, being formed by a real distinct aspiration pronounced after the respective consonants. In the other languages of China it has been usual to indicate them by a small inverted or suspended comma, thus k[‘], p[‘], t[‘], ch[‘], ts[‘], but h has been commonly used at Amoy, and is much more distinct. The sounds are almost the same as those often used by Irishmen when pronouncing with a strong brogue such words as come, pig, &c.; they are also often heard in the mouths of the Scottish Highlanders.

kh may be thus described:—Pronounce block-house with a clear distinct h; remove the letters blo- from the beginning and the -se from the end, and you have almost exactly the Chinese “khau.” Or pronounce look here! rapidly and clearly, cut off loo- and -re, and you have the Chinese “khi.”

ph must by no means be confounded with the English ph, which is just f; for the Chinese ph preserves the clear sound of p followed by an aspiration; e.g. say loop-hole very rapidly and sharply, cut off loo- and -le from the two ends, and there remains the Chinese “pho.” So, by removing ha- and -zard from haphazard, you get the Chinese “pha.”

th must not be confounded with the English th, which is really a simple sound. The Chinese th is a clear distinct t followed by the aspirate. Thus the Chinese “thau” may be carved out of out-house or hot-house.

chh is formed in a similar way from the ch of church. Take such a word as watch-house or coach-house, remove the wa- or coa- from the beginning and the -se from the end, and something very near the Chinese “chhau” remains.

Sometimes chh has a sound more nearly approaching to an aspirated ts. This occurs occasionally when chh is followed by a, o, ø, u, or ng. Generally even before these letters the sound remains the same, or very nearly the same, as the usual chh, but sometimes it might have been written tsh or ts'h, especially in the dialects of Chin-chew and Tung-an, and in other cases it seems about half-way between chh and ts'h. But as these sounds are not very common, and as they shade gradually into the normal chh, I have thought it best not to make any change in the spelling usual at Amoy.

ch itself is not one of these aspirated consonants, for, as explained above, it is just the English ch of church, which is really t-sh, not containing the real sound of h at all.

TONES.

The tones are commonly supposed to be a great obstacle in the way of learning Chinese, but they really present no very great difficulty if studied carefully from the first. They can be properly learned only by the ear, and it is much better to get them directly from the lips of a native. The following remarks are intended merely as a help to direct the student in catching the intonations of the natives, but they may also be of some slight use in giving a general idea of the nature of the tones to those who have no opportunity of hearing them spoken.

It is not the tones themselves, but the use made of the tones, which is the peculiar characteristic of the Chinese group of languages. Similar tones exist in all languages, only differently used. In English, for instance, we pronounce the word go very differently when we give a hasty and angry command, "Go!" and when we ask the question with a mixture of astonishment and horror, "Can you dare to go?" The difference of tone is as great in English as in Chinese, but in English it indicates merely the different feelings of the mind or the different grammatical or rhetorical relations of the same word, while in Chinese the same syllable with two different tones makes two thoroughly distinct words.

The Chinese divide the tones into four great classes, named at Amoy—1st, piâⁿ (C. pêⁿ); 2d, chiūⁿ; 3d, khì (Cn. khü); 4th, jip, or according to the Mandarin sounds, Ping (or more accurately p'ing), Shang, K'ü (or Ch'ü), and Juh.

Each of these four classes is or may be divided into two subdivisions, called the "upper" and "lower." Doubtless when these four classes with their subdivisions first received their names, all these names described with tolerable accuracy the inflexion and pitch of the several tones, but now there is no part of China where the names of the tones correctly describe their character. It is therefore best in speaking of the tones not to translate the Chinese words, but either to transfer the Chinese terms or to speak of them by their numbers.

In some parts of China all the eight tones are used; in one place they have even been increased to nine; in two of the great dialects of Mandarin there are four tones and five tones in use respectively. In Amoy, though nominally there are eight, yet really there are only seven, as the second tone class, the "chiūⁿ-siaⁿ," is not divided into two. I shall describe these seven tones used at Amoy, not according to the Chinese order, but according to their actual nature.

The two jip tones, or the upper and lower fourth tone, stand quite by themselves. They are distinguished by being pronounced with an abrupt or clipped ending, almost with a jerk. Originally they all ended in k, p, or t, but now the final consonant has in many cases been dropped, leaving, however, its trace in a sharp abrupt ending which makes something like a hiatus; this abrupt vowel-ending is indicated by the final h, which is absolutely silent. The two jip tones therefore can always be recognized by the final letters h, k, p, and t. All words ending in these letters belong to the jip tones, and no others do.

Any such word, if it have no accent mark, belongs to the chiūⁿ-jip or upper fourth tone. It begins moderately high, rises very slightly at first, and then comes down with a short, sharp, rapid movement, somewhat like the English not when spoken in a very emphatic or imperative manner, as in the sentence, "You shall not."

The ē-jip or lower fourth tone is indicated by a perpendicular accent, e.g. jip, hák, lôh. It begins rather lower than the other, and is pronounced with a curious upward jerk, which the form of the perpendicular accent is intended to suggest, somewhat like not in the sentence "Will you not?" pronounced simply as an interrogation with a mere upward movement, without the previous fall of the voice that would be given if it indicated strong surprise.

The other five tones are distributed among the words which do not end in h, k, p, or t.

Two of these five tones are perfectly level, just like musical notes, at an interval of about a musical fifth from each other. The exact distance of the interval is quite immaterial, and in fact it often varies from about a musical third to about an octave in the mouth of the same speaker, with the nature of the emphasis or emotion with which he speaks; all that is necessary for the distinction of the tones, and for being well understood, is that there be a marked difference of the pitch.

The higher level tone is called the chiūⁿ-piâⁿ (C. téng-pêⁿ), or the upper first tone. It is indicated by the absence of any tonal mark, just as the "chiūⁿ-jip" has no tonal mark; but these two tones can always be at once distinguished at a glance, as the "chiūⁿ-piâⁿ" never ends in h, k, p, or t, while the "chiūⁿ-jip" always has one of these finals.

The tone with a low level intonation is called the ē-khì or lower third tone. It is indicated by a horizontal accent, e.g. ē, hū. It must not be confounded with the "ē-piâⁿ" tone, the name of which means "low level," but the intonation of which is very far from level, as will be seen from the explanation given three paragraphs lower down. But the lower third or "ē-khì" is really low and level in its tone, though the name does not indicate the fact.

The three tones which remain are more or less inflected, and cannot be represented by any musical notes.

The chiūⁿ-khì or upper third tone is a low, slow, downward slide; it begins low, about as low as the low level (ē-khì) tone, and from that low level it gradually slides lower till it quite dies away; great care must be taken at the end not to allow the voice to turn up again at all; it is represented by the downward slope of the grave accent, e.g. pü, khì. It is heard in English when one lets the voice fall into a low key, sinking down lower and lower till it quite dies away, as when sadly musing in simple grief and sorrow (without any anger or excitement) on some mournful and depressing news; e.g. saying "Gone!" or "Dead!"

The ē-piâⁿ (C. ē-pêⁿ) or lower first tone first falls and then rises. It is the intonation used in English to express great astonishment or a strongly marked interrogation, e.g. "You?" "How?" Its mark is the circumflex, e.g. kî, sô.

The chiūⁿ-siaⁿ or second tone, called in Mandarin the "Shang" tone, begins somewhat high, rises slightly and rapidly, and then comes down with a rapid swing, much like a decided imperative in English; e.g. gone, in the phrase "Be gone!" This tone is indicated by an acute accent, e.g. lí, sú, kóng, &c.

The above explanations may be summarized as follows:

ABRUPT AND SHORT. All ending in h, k, p, t.	}	chiū ⁿ -jip, rising slightly and then falling rapidly; toh.
		ē-jip, rising abruptly; tóh.
NOT ABRUPT. Never ending in h, k, p, t.	}	LEVEL MUSICAL NOTES. { <ul style="list-style-type: none"> chiūⁿ-piâⁿ, high and level; tò. ē-khì, low and level; tô.
		SINGLE INFLECTION. { <ul style="list-style-type: none"> chiūⁿ-khì, low, slow, downward slide; tò.
		DOUBLE INFLECTION. { <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ē-piâⁿ, slow circumflex, first falling and then rising, as in astonishment or interrogation; tô. chiūⁿ-siaⁿ, slightly upward and rapidly downwards, like a strong imperative; tó.

The Chinese at Amoy, &c., usually arrange the tones in the following order:—

chiūⁿ-piâⁿ.
 chiūⁿ-siaⁿ.
 chiūⁿ-khì.
 chiūⁿ-jip.
 ē-piâⁿ.
 chiūⁿ-siaⁿ.
 ē-khì.

In this arrangement the "chiūⁿ-siaⁿ" appears twice, because it is not divided into an upper and a lower subclass. This has caused great confusion in the nomenclature of the tones (by Europeans and Americans) according to numbers, for while it has been usual to number the first five—

1. chiūⁿ-piâⁿ.
2. chiūⁿ-siaⁿ.
3. chiūⁿ-khì.
4. chiūⁿ-jip.
5. ē-piâⁿ.

from that point there has been a divergence, some numbering on according to the exact form of Chinese usage.

6. chiūⁿ-siaⁿ.
7. ē-khì.
8. ē-jip.

Others have counted them as follows:—

6. ē-khì.
7. ē-jip.

To avoid this ambiguity in naming the sixth and seventh tones, I have arranged them as follows:—

FIRST TONE. { chiūⁿ-piâⁿ, upper first; tò.
 piâⁿ. { ē-piâⁿ, lower first; tô.

SECOND TONE.—chiūⁿ-siaⁿ; tó.

THIRD TONE. { chiūⁿ-khì, upper third; tò
 ē-khì, lower third; tô.

FOURTH TONE. { chiūⁿ-jip, upper fourth; toh.
 ē-jip, lower fourth; tóh.

In the alphabetical arrangement of the words in this Dictionary the order is therefore "tò, tó, tó, tò, tò." This does not include the two subdivisions of the fourth tone, as the difference of spelling places them in a different position in the alphabetical arrangement, namely "toh, tóh."

TONES IN COMBINATION.

The description of the tones given above applies strictly only to a word pronounced separately, or to a word ending a clause, and pronounced with the primary accent (as is usual at the end of a clause or group of two or more words); or to a word which, though not last, yet has the primary accent, being followed by an enclitic or unaccented word.

But in many cases a word loses the form of tonal inflection described above.

Sometimes a word becomes enclitic (see Appendix V.), in which case the tone dies away somewhat like the "chiūⁿ-khì" or the "chiūⁿ-jip," or rather like something intermediate between them pronounced very short and gentle. No matter what the original tone of a word be, this is the one form assumed when enclitic; and so it happens that if an enclitic word be not common in its accented form, or if it be not recognized and identified, the learner is apt to be misled even by well-educated Chinese saying that the word belongs to the "chiūⁿ-khì" or to the "chiūⁿ-jip" tone. The mark which I use to indicate an enclitic word is a double hyphen placed before the enclitic: this mark has at the same time the effect of catching the eye readily, so as to show that the word preceding the double hyphen has the strong primary accent; e.g. jít--sî, day-time; bô--khì, to disappear or vanish.

Sometimes in a group of three words two words follow the double hyphen. In that case the primary accent is on the first of the three, and the last two are enclitic; a slight trace of a secondary accent is sometimes heard on the last of the three, but yet it does not recover its own proper tonal inflection; e.g. sak--lôh-khì, to push down to a lower level; poáh--lôh-lâi, to fall down from a higher level.

When a word stands first in a group of two, of which the second has the strong accent, then the first word experiences a very marked change in its tonal inflection.

The chiūⁿ-piâⁿ or upper first tone becomes somewhat lower in key, coming down about half-way towards the "ē-khì," but remaining quite level and equable.

The ē-piâⁿ or lower first loses its inflection, becoming very nearly or quite level. In some places it becomes extremely like the unaccented "chiūⁿ-piāⁿ," as described in the preceding paragraph; in other places, especially in Tāng-ōa, it becomes undistinguishable from the unaccented "ē-khì" tone.

The chiūⁿ-siaⁿ or second tone in such a position entirely loses its second half, namely, the falling inflection, and retains only its first half, namely, a slight upward motion. Great care must be taken not to give its usual downward intonation, because (as will be seen from the next paragraph) it would in that case be confounded with the altered or unaccented form of the "chiūⁿ-khì" tone.

The chiūⁿ-khì or upper third tone is lifted up so as to become a high, rapid, falling tone, almost the same as the original inflection of the "chiūⁿ-siaⁿ." It is also pronounced with great energy, so that the two syllables sound more like a spondee than an iambus.

The ē-khì or lower third tone sinks a very little lower than its original form, with perhaps a very slight downward motion. In most cases the alteration of this tone is scarcely perceptible, but when the two words are both of the "ē-khì" tone, then the first is distinctly lower than the second; e.g. chīn-tsāi, chēng-chēng, siū-tsōe.

The two jip tones (the upper and lower fourth) simply change places with each other, the chiūⁿ-jip being pronounced with the original intonation of the "ē-jip," and the ē-jip taking the original intonation of the "chiūⁿ-jip." It should also be observed that in this connection the "chiūⁿ-jip" is pronounced with much more energy than the "ē-jip;" e.g. hok-khì being almost like a spondee, or the "hok" being given with a sort of staccato effect; while hok-sāi is an ordinary iambus, with the "hok" thoroughly unaccented.

ACCENT.

As all the words in the language are monosyllables, they are usually grouped together in groups of regular form and regular accentuation. These groups, of two, three, or four words (and sometimes of more), are often so absolutely fixed in the usage of the language as to become very similar to the polysyllabic words of other languages; and within such groups the laws of accent in relation to the several words are quite as strict as the accentual laws for the several syllables of the words in polysyllabic languages.

The general rule is that the primary accent falls on the last word of a group, whether it be a group of two, three, or more words. When the accent falls on the second last or penult, I have indicated the fact by placing a double hyphen after the accented word. This has also the effect (as explained in the previous section and in Appendix No. V.) of indicating that the word which follows the double hyphen is enclitic. When two words making a group have no hyphen between them, the meaning is that the first word has a sort of secondary accent, and retains its own tone unchanged or but slightly changed; e.g. hong chhe, the wind blows; but in hong-chhe, a paper-kite, the "hong" is quite unaccented, as is shown by the presence of the hyphen. Such are the more important rules for groups of two words.

GROUPS OF THREE.

In a group of three words the general rule is that the primary accent falls on the last word, a secondary accent on the first, and that the second word is quite unaccented; e.g. kóng²-bô⁰-iá¹ has the primary accent on "iá," the secondary on "kóng," and no accent on "bô."

But sometimes, while the primary accent is on the last word, the secondary accent is on the second word, and it is then the first word that becomes quite unaccented. Such cases may generally be reduced to one or other of the following rules, (1) when the second is a much more important word than the first, or (2) when the tone of the second is a much stronger tone than that of the first.

If the first be a mere auxiliary or a comparatively unimportant word, while the second is a word of much importance, then the first is apt to lose the tone. Among the words which often thus lose the tone at the beginning of a group of three, the following may be noted:—ū, to have; bô, not to have; ēng, "to use," when in the sense of "by" or "with;" lái, "to come," when used as a mere connective; khì, "to go," as a mere connective; teh, tióh, thang, as auxiliaries to verbs, &c.; beh, will; tī, kàu, kah, and such prepositions; náⁿ, nāⁿ, kap, chiah, chiū, and some adverbs and conjunctions; tsáp, ten; chit, "one," often used somewhat like the indefinite article. Such words often do take the secondary accent; but it is very common for them to lose the accent, allowing it to pass on to the second word; e.g. bô⁰-kàu²-hùn¹, "no instruction," has the secondary accent on "kàu," and none on "bô." So with tióh-koáⁿ-jiét, to have fever and ague; teh-kóng-ōe, in the act of speaking; beh-poaⁿ-chhū, will remove one's residence; tsáp-goā-lāng, more than ten men; chit-si-lāng, one's whole life.

Another principle which sometimes may explain the secondary accent falling on the second word, is when it has a very strong tone, such as the "chiūⁿ-khì" or the "chiūⁿ-jip," while the first word is not in either of these two tones; or as when the second word is of the "chiūⁿ-siaⁿ" tone, while the first is not in any of these three tones. But on the other hand, if the first word be specially important in meaning, it keeps the secondary accent, though the second word may have a tone that is naturally stronger; e.g. chīn-khūi-lát, "to exert one's strength to the utmost," where the secondary accent is on "chīn."

When the principal accent in a group of three falls on the second word, I place a double hyphen after it; in this case the first word has a secondary accent, or loses or changes its tone, and the last word becomes enclitic.

When the principal accent falls on the first, this is indicated by the double hyphen after it; then the second and third words become enclitic, the second being quite unaccented, and the third either unaccented or else having a faint secondary accent.

GROUPS OF FOUR.

The most usual arrangement is that a group of four words consists of two groups of two, each having an accent on its second word; the first of these subordinate groups is usually pronounced somewhat less strongly than the second; thus in bô-lāng beh-khì, "there is no one who will go," the primary accent is on "khì," the secondary on "lāng;" but this secondary accent is often almost as strong as the primary.

When the first two words in a group of four are such as kap-i, kap-lāng, kâ--i, hē--i, khit--i, chit--ē, that half is pronounced very much more gently than the second; e.g. ²khít--¹í ²thâi--¹sí, to be killed by him; ³kap--²í ¹kóng--²ôe, to converse with him.

When ³tsáp, "ten," stands in the second place, it is unaccented, and throws the secondary accent usually forward on the third word, while a still weaker or tertiary accent is heard on the first word; e.g. ³jí--⁰tsáp--²sí--¹lâng, twenty-four men; ³saⁿ--⁰tsáp--²gē--¹tē, the thirty-fifth division of a Hien district.

A similar effect is produced if any other word weak in tone or sense (see above on Groups of Three) stands in the second place; e.g. ³kâu--⁰beh--²sít--¹sín, "to the very point of going to faint."

Sometimes a specially important word in the first place draws the secondary accent to itself; e.g. ²nng--³ki--¹poàⁿ--¹úi (where a sort of tertiary accent is heard on "poà," but "nng" is the important word), two and a half masts, i.e. a barque. In the latter part of the Dictionary I have sometimes written such phrases thus, "²nng--³ki--¹poàⁿ--¹úi."

Groups of five or more are compounded of shorter groups in a similar way.

USE OF HYPHENS.

I am painfully conscious that my system of using hyphens is not wholly consistent in the several parts of the Dictionary; this is especially the case in groups of three words, which I have sometimes joined all together, and sometimes left one and two, or two and one. But my apology is, that too sparing a use of hyphens, as it seems to me, has hitherto been made by others; and it has been necessary for me to write out the copy for the press at home without the opportunity of consulting others.

My leading idea in the use of hyphens has been to connect together those words which are pronounced together without pausing, like the syllables of a polysyllabic word, and where consequently the tone of one word is more or less affected by its being joined to another; but in some cases where I have not used the hyphen, the tone of one word is also somewhat affected by the relation to another; for the attempt to string together all the words that are mutually affected would have made combinations of an unwieldy length.

VARIOUS AMBIGUITIES AND ERRORS WHICH STILL REMAIN.

There are many ambiguities which, though occasionally noted, are in many or most places left without remark.

Such is very specially the case with the ambiguities produced by the want of moods, tenses, numbers, persons, cases, gender, articles, &c., in Chinese grammar. So also with the frequent interchange of the parts of speech, e.g. adjective with adverb, adjective with substantive, verb with preposition, substantive with post-position, conjunction with preposition, &c., or sometimes three or four parts of speech.

Names of relationships partake very largely of such ambiguity, e.g. ²peh and ²chek, meaning not only senior and junior uncle, but also senior and junior cousins (even any distant cousins) of father when of the same surname. Still more extensive is the use of ²hiaⁿ--¹tí and ²chí--¹bē, meaning not only brothers and sisters, but also male and female cousins in great variety.

Titles of office but rarely correspond to the English words, partly from the different number of steps in the various gradations, and partly because the number of troops supposed to be commanded by military and naval officers is often widely different from the reality. So also when we speak of the emperor Kang-hi or the emperor Kien-lung, we cannot always stop to explain that such a name as Kang-hi, Kien-lung, Hien-fung, is not a name or title of a person at all, but only the title of the period of the reign of the sovereign, whose personal name is far too sacred to be either spoken or written, and who is properly spoken of, e.g. as Hâm-hong-kun, i.e. the sovereign who reigned in the period or reign called in Amoy "Hâm-hong," and in Mandarin "Hien-fung."

The whole system of the so-called civil and military degrees is quite different from what we call degrees, and comes much nearer to our examinations for the civil and military services, though differing from them also in many important respects, especially in this—that the man who has passed his examination and gained his degree has by that very fact had his political position quite changed, having many special privileges denied to the common people in regard to the action of courts of justice and intercourse with the magistrates.

Of other words a very few examples must suffice; e.g. ²chiú, often translated "wine," but which really means any spirituous liquor, and rarely if ever means "wine" in our sense; ²béh, either wheat or barley; ²bū, usually translated "military," but really including military and naval; ²siáh, marble or soap-stone; ²iū, used for "sheep," but properly "goat;" ²thák, commonly rendered "to read," but really only to read aloud; ²kong--²chhin, "an arbiter," but very far from our idea of arbitration, meaning simply a person or persons put forward by one or both of the parties to use their good offices, and endeavour to reconcile the parties (usually by a compromise), who are at perfect liberty either to accept the solution or not.

In many other cases too the meanings given are merely approximations. It must often have happened that, instead of grasping the full meaning of a phrase, I have only caught one of its particular applications, while at other times a particular use may have been too hastily generalized. It is in order to avoid these dangers that I have so largely used particular examples instead of attempting to combine them in a general expression.

The student need not be at all surprised if his Chinese teacher, or even several of them, object to certain phrases or meanings. In such a case let him use those words and phrases about which there is no question; but let him not too hastily conclude that the book is wrong. Many many times I have erased passages which I afterwards found quite correct and restored to their places. For there is no absolute standard of the spoken language; and the usage of various towns, villages, and regions varies so much, that phrases in constant use in one part are unknown in another.

At the same time the student must not lean too much on the Dictionary. The sounds, and especially the tones, must be carefully learned from the lips of a native; and when some words and phrases have been learned, it is only by constant intercourse with the people that one can master the art of combining them into sentences in a correct and natural manner.

The teachers themselves are the source of one sort of error which is doubtless still represented to some extent in these pages. They are accustomed to adorn their own language with a variety of polite and literary phrases, and they are very apt to teach us such phrases as if they were really colloquial, while to the great mass of the people they are as unintelligible as Latin or French to an average Englishman. I have inserted many such phrases with the note "(R.*)" to show that they belong to the Literary or Reading form of the language; but doubtless not a few have escaped my notice.

There are also a considerable number of phrases which have somehow come to be used by those Chinese who have much intercourse with foreigners, and which they continue to use because foreigners are supposed to understand them. Against such expressions the student must be very much on his guard.

I observe on looking over the pages some inconsistencies of spelling; e.g. má=mah, the interrogative particle; ah=á, the final indicative or vocative particle; chēh=chit-ē, &c. I fear also that some mistakes which I made in my early scrolls have not been fully eliminated, e.g. chin sometimes written where it should be "chin," in such phrases as chin-hó, very good.

In noting the variations of the dialects of Chang-chew, Chin-chew, &c., there is a peculiar sort of error which has sometimes crept in, viz. changing one part of a phrase into the dialect in question without making the corresponding change in the other part, as if in illustrating the change of mŭng into mŭiⁿ in Chang-chew, one should write ē-mŭiⁿ, as the Chang-chew name of Amoy, while it is really ē-mŭiⁿ; or as if in a sentence of the Chin-chew dialect one had failed to change kóng into sóh, or kè into kō.

Some more remarks on these dialects will be found in the Appendix Nos. II. and III.; but neither there nor in the body of the Dictionary is there anything like a full treatment of their variations. The Chang-chew dialect is the one most copiously treated, so that it is believed that in the leading words most of its variations are noted. The next in copiousness is the Chin-chew dialect, but it is not nearly so fully treated. Of the other dialects very little is noted except those of Tung-an and Chang-poo. Therefore the student must not conclude that a given word or phrase remains unchanged in one of these dialects merely because no variation is noted.

EXPLANATION OF ABBREVIATIONS,

AND OF

PECULIAR MARKS, &c.

- A. Amoy dialect.
An. or Ank. Ankoï or An-khoe dialect.
Bud. Buddhist.
C. Chang-chew dialect.
cf. compare.
Cn. Chin-chew dialect.
col. colloquial or vernacular, as opposed to the literary or reading form.
dist. distinguish from.
E. dialect of Eng-chhun or Yung-chun.
esp. especially.
F. phrases especially used in Formosa.
f. foreign phrases, viz. names or phrases invented to describe foreign things or ideas, or phrases used only or chiefly by those Chinese who have intercourse with foreigners.
fig. figurative.
gen. generally.
H. dialect of Hui-an or Hui-oa.
K. or Kk. dialect of Kwan-kow or Koan-kháu.
L. dialect of Nan-an or Lâm-oa.
lit. literally.
Mand. Mandarin dialect, or Vernacular of Northern, Central, and Western China.
opp. opposed to.
P. dialect of Chang-poo or Chiuⁿ-phé.
R. reading or literary style, as to sound or meaning.
When written in parentheses after a Chinese word or phrase, means that it is a literary or polite word or phrase, not used in the colloquial.
When written before a Chinese word, both being in brackets or parentheses, means that it is the reading sound of the character of which the colloquial form is given in the context.
When followed by an English word or phrase, means that the rendering given is used only in the reading or literary style, or transferred to the colloquial only in a few set phrases.
r. rare.
s. see; this abbreviation is used only when there are two phrases having exactly the same sound and tone, e.g. tsâi-tsú, either "a man of wealth" or "a talented man," where it occurs under "wealth" it has the note "(s. talent);" and where it occurs under "talent" it has the note "(s. wealth)." I refer merely to the English meaning, because the Chinese word referred to is, and must be always, the very same sound and tone with the leading word (in this case "tsâi"), under which the phrase occurs.

- T. dialect of Tung-an or Tâng-oa.
Tt. dialect of Chang-tai or Tiô-thoà.
v. see; referring to a Chinese word where more full information is given, or where additional examples are collected.
vulg. vulgar or coarse expression.
X. phrase used by the missionaries or native Christians; either not used at all by others, or used rarely or in a different sense.

I have not loaded this table with such well-known abbreviations as id., do., &c.

The abbreviations for the varieties of the dialects are used thus:—Within parentheses immediately after the leading word, and with nothing else in the parentheses, they mean that all the words and phrases under that leading word belong to the dialect referred to, unless otherwise noted; e.g. "boeh (C.), = A. beh," implies that any phrase given under that leading word "boeh" belongs to the Chang-chew dialect. So also "tâ (Cn.)," implies that all the phrases under that leading word "tâ" belong to the Chin-chew dialect; but in this latter example some of the phrases have the note "(A.," meaning that they are used in Amoy.

When the abbreviation for a dialect is used within parentheses followed by a Chinese word or phrase, it means that this is the form in the said dialect for the Amoy word or phrase that precedes the parenthesis.

When preceded by the word "also" it means that while the word in some other sense or usage belongs, for instance, to the Amoy dialect, yet in the cases specified it belongs to that one of the dialects which is specified; but in such case the examples of phrases given afterwards belong to the Amoy.

When "R." stands at the beginning of a sentence within brackets or parentheses, and before the end of the parenthetic part the abbreviation "= col." occurs, the "=" is used merely in an etymological sense, denoting that the subjoined colloquial words belong to the same reading form, or spring from the same root, and does not mean that they have the same meaning.

A double hyphen "--" is used to indicate that the succeeding word is enclitic.

A small cross "(+)" is used as the mark of addition, to indicate that other examples of the phrase, or another phrase of the same sound and tone, will be found in another part of the collection of phrases under the same leading word. Thus under the word thâu, "head," the phrase koaⁿ-thâu occurs twice in very different senses, each time with this mark. In the earlier part of the Dictionary this mark is not used.

3.3, 1.15, and such like combinations, i.e. a numeral in large type followed by a dot at the bottom and a numeral in smaller type, are used for the Chinese month and day, e.g. 1.15 is the 15th day of the first month.

A full explanation of the orthography and tonal marks will be found in the Introduction. Some of the more important rules may be briefly stated as follows:—

The vowels are all pronounced according to the sounds usual in Germany, Italy, &c., and not according to the English usage when it differs from the continental.

ɛ expresses the sound of o in the English lord, long, lot; o has sometimes this sound, sometimes the sound of o in the English no (see the rule in the Introduction).

ɛ is the sound of the French “è,” or of the English “e” in there.

Double dots are never used as marks of diaeresis, but always indicate a vowel of a really different sound. The mark of diaeresis is never required, because in all diphthongs each vowel retains its own original sound.

ö and ü as in German.

The consonants are for the most part used much as in English. g always hard; ch always as in church.

th and ph must not be sounded as in English. They are pronounced by appending a real aspirate sound to the usual sounds of t and p respectively.

kh and chh are in like manner formed from k and ch by adding a clearly-pronounced aspirate.

The accent marks have nothing to do with the sounds of the vowels or consonants: they indicate the modulations of tone, as is partially explained in the Introduction. In a diphthong they do not refer to one vowel only, but to the whole syllable.

ORDER OF ALPHABETIC ARRANGEMENT IN THIS DICTIONARY.

chh, kh, ng, ph, th, and ts are used in the alphabetic arrangement like single consonants; thus, for instance, all the words beginning with the unaspirated k are given to the end, as far as kut and kwat, before kha and the others which have kh as their initial.

ɛ is mixed up with e, and ü with u, for convenience of reference, as they are respectively mere dialectic variations of these vowels.

ɛ and ö are placed just after the corresponding syllables which are formed with o; e.g. tɛ and tō follow to; tōh follows toh; and tōng follows tong. I am not sure whether this be the best plan to follow, but it is the arrangement which I at present use.

Words that have a nasal, indicated by a small suspended “ⁿ” at the end, follow immediately the same syllables without the nasal. But when the initial is m, n, ng, or j, the nasal and non-nasal forms are mixed up, as this makes reference easier, because many words are written both ways.

The tones of any one syllable are arranged thus:—chiūⁿ-piāⁿ, ē-piāⁿ; chiūⁿ-siaⁿ; chiūⁿ-khi, ē-khi; e.g. “seng, sêng; séng; sèng, sēng.” This does not include the two jip tones, which, being differently spelled, i.e. always ending in h, k, p, or t, are found usually at a little distance off: their order is—chiūⁿ-jip, ē-jip; e.g. “sek, sék.”

DICTIONARY

a (R. id.), a prefix in some nouns and in names of Cantonese. a-pan, a sailor who climbs masts; obstinate (v. pan). a-gūi, asafoetida. a-ko, son of a first-class mandarin. a-hoat, name of a Cantonese, = A. hoat-á.

a — a-ka, medicine made from turtle-bones.

a (R. id.) a-phièn, opium (v. phièn).

a — a-put-tó, = áh-put-tó, a sort of doll.

a (R. id.) i-i a-a, sound of a flute. a-a-kiò, sound of a child just beginning to make the sound "a-a."

a — a-tsa, = am-tsam, dirty, unclean (lit. or fig.)

a — a-thâu (imit. of mand.), a female slave.

a — jiáu-a, a large sort of gong.

a [R. a crow]. a-a, a crow. a-a-lêng, an artificial feather, worn by some officers (v. lêng). a-kiò pái-sūi (the crow has called the lame man Sūi), said of a man who formerly had a good character, being suddenly led away into vice and ruin.

á, exclamation of surprise.

á (C.), = A. lá, —. á-sâm, = A. lá-sâm, dirty.

á [R. tsú, a son] (Cn. ngá, ngiá káⁿ), (T. sometimes á or áh enclitic), suffix of nouns, often diminutive. kù-á, a saw. kū-á, wife's younger brother. í-á, wife's younger sister. káu-á, a dog; a little dog. kha-á, inferior assistants.

á (R. tsú?), enclitic suffix in names of common people, acquaintances, or persons about same rank (Cn. only said of young boys, while it is a prefix for adults) —. hoat-á, the man named "hoat," more politely called "hoat-ló."

á (T.) á-î, = A. am-pê-chê, the cicada.

á (Cn.), prefix to names of persons. á-sóng = A. "soŋ-á" or "sóng-ló."

á = án, prefix to titles of relations superior to us. á-tia, papa. á-peh, uncle! sometimes papa!

á [R. pek, a hundred, = col. pah]. poe-h-á-chiⁿ, eight hundred cash. káu-á-lák, nine hundred and sixty.

á (sometimes ná), syllable used in forming some phrases: e.g. bîn-á-tsài, to-morrow; m-á, but indeed (v. m).

á = ka. phah-á-chhiuⁿ, to sneeze.

á (R. ek = col. íá), or. á-bô, or not. á-sī, or it is; or.

à = iáh (R. êk). à-náⁿ-beh, à-náⁿ-m̄, having half a mind to it.

à [R. secondary]. à-sèng, a sage of secondary rank, as Mencius or as Yen-hwuy (Gân-hôe). à-goân, a Keujin near the head of the list for the year à (R. àu). à-pà, very cross and bad-tempered, as a child.

à = iáh (R. êk), also.

aⁿ, imitative sound. aⁿ-aⁿ-háu, sound of children crying. aⁿ-aⁿ-jióng, incessant noise. i-i aⁿ-aⁿ, sound as of several men rowing a boat, or of many children. iⁿ-iⁿ aⁿ-aⁿ, sound as of musical instruments.

âⁿ — pûn âⁿ-m-chhêⁿ (C.), sound of wind instruments.

âⁿ, an exclamation of great surprise.

âⁿ (R. lân = col. noáⁿ), to guard or protect, as by arm or wing (e.g. a hen guarding her brood); to put the arm or arms round a person loosely, so as gently to keep from falling or going away, or to ward off a stroke, or screen from an enemy. âⁿ-tsáh, to defend one party in a quarrel. kah-âⁿ hit-pêng, throws his influence rather on that side. âⁿ-chiáh, to keep things for oneself to eat, as by arm put round them. âⁿ toá-hûn, to take the lion's share.

âⁿ, to embrace tightly with one or both arms; to fold to one's breast; to hold or carry between arm and breast, but not so tightly as "ngòeh;" to shelter by arm tightly pressed. áⁿ--teh, to cover or shelter below or behind one's arm, &c. áⁿ--ê, an adopted child. áⁿ-náⁿ tsòe-chit-ê, to hold several things at once under the arm, or between the arm and the breast.

âⁿ, to lean against. chhùi áⁿ-chhùi, to put mouth to mouth.

J.

In some words sounded very like l, or interchanged with it. Sometimes, especially when nasal, very like n. Sometimes, as in the syllables ji, jiau, the forms that are nasal and not nasal are interchanged, for which reason I have in such cases mixed them instead of separating them as usual.

In the tones of the lower series, j is sometimes heard like dz, especially in Cn. T. before o and u, e.g. dzoáh, dzü, for joáh, jü.

jê (C. jôe), to rub with the hand, as in washing; to crush by turning the foot, as a worm. jê-sí, to crush to death, as by turning the foot or by the hand. jê bák-chiu, to rub the eyes. jê-saⁿ, to rub clothes in washing. jê-tám, to wet by rubbing, as clothes in washing. jê-ta, to rub dry, as with hand or foot.

jek (P. in some places), = C. jioek, = A. jip, to pursue; to overtake.

jek (P.), = A. chek, to squeeze out, as matter from a wound.

jék (P.), = A. jiök, to work up, as clay.

jêng [R. formerly]. jêng-kiü (R.), as formerly.

jêng (P.), = A. jiông, the quick of the nail, &c.

ji — bâ-jí-tek, a fine sort of bamboo (v. tek).

ji [R. and, but]. sam put-ji-sí, occasionally. ke put-ji-chiong, no alternative; no other resource. put-ji-kò (esp. C. T., rare in A.), only. tsü-jiên ji-jiên (R.), self-existing.

TS'H.

This initial is sometimes heard before a, ng, o, ɛ, ɔ, u, ü (especially in T. and Cn.), and more frequently the sound is somewhere between Ts'h and Chh. I have not been able to find any settled rule for these cases, and have therefore used everywhere the spelling Chh (q.v.)

U.

Including ü.

u often becomes i in Changchew. When it becomes i in Changchew, it becomes ü in Chin-chew; but this latter change often takes place when the u remains in Changchew.

ü (R. id.?), a small pit, depression, or puddle. oáⁿ-u, the cavity in the bottom of a bowl on which it rests.

lap-u, = lap-o, concave, as a hole or depression, esp. when it has become so by deterioration; lower than the surrounding ground, as a piece of ground; situated too low, as a house or village. bih-u, to hide in a hole, as in order to shoot or catch men.

ü — bák-u, the socket of the eye. chhim-bák-u, having deep-set eyes.

ü — kha-thâu-u, the knee. kim kha-thâu-u (lit. having a golden knee), said of a high mandarin who never or rarely kneels; said also of a man of independent spirit who tries to keep clear of yamun business so that he may not need to kneel, and who also avoids those ceremonies (e.g. to the deceased relatives of friends) that require kneeling. chhut-kiaⁿ, kim kha-thâu-u, except at the metropolis, does not need to kneel to anyone at interviews, as a Tau-tai or official of similar or higher rank.

ü [R. ku, to dwell; to reside]. sì-kòe-u, = sì-kòe-ku, go about, as a vagrant with no settled dwelling whom no one will keep long.

ü — pún äüⁿ-u, to blow a sort of trumpet with a curved mouth.

ü (= col. uh, eh). phah u-á (C.), = A. phah-eh, to hiccup.

ü [R. u, ù, dirty; filthy; vile; depraved; to defile], (C.) tham-koaⁿ u-lí (R.), = A. tham-koaⁿ ù-lí, avicious and venal mandarins.

ü [R. distant; wide of the mark; mistaken; bent; distorted; depraved; = col. ù], (T. Cn. ü). u-khu, having a very peculiar temper; unsociable or troublesome to have dealings with; very cautious, over-anxious, or suspicious and afraid of taking action, or sticking doggedly to one plan without making allowance for change of circumstances.

u-tsü, over-anxious about everything, often so far as to be bad-tempered; having a displeased or anxious appearance. u-tsü-tsü, id.

u-thü, so dogged and dull of apprehension as to be apt to spoil matters (v. thü).

ü [R. a preposition of very varied meaning; at; in; to; in relation to], (C. i; Cn. ü). hék-tsōe u-thien, to offend against Heaven. jin seng u-sè (r.), of men born in the world (v. sè).

ut--tióh (C. ó--tióh), to sprain slightly, as ankle or wrist, not so bad as "tsoáh." ut--khì, id. kha ut--tióh, foot sprained.

ut-chím, neck stiff and sore from sleeping in a bad position.

áu-ut, to insist falsely and violently that a man owes money or has done something wrong, so as to treat him unjustly and oppressively. un-ut, = oan-khut, to injure or oppress by accusing falsely of crime. gáu-ut--lâng, fond of maligning or falsely accusing people so as to injure them. khít-i-ut, to be thus falsely accused by him. ut--sí lâng--ê tsâi-tiâu, to cause another's talents to be passed over and not rewarded or properly appreciated, e.g. by spreading calumnies against him, or by preventing his getting an opportunity of showing his powers, or as an examiner not giving a degree to a deserving candidate.

ihⁿ-út, discontented, distressed, or disgusted at the state of matters, e.g. at some misfortune that has come on us, or at an inconvenient dilemma; grumbling, as at an order which we must obey, but feel unwilling. ih-út, id. ihⁿ-ihⁿ út-út, id.; also said of the indistinct manner of speaking of a man who is afraid to speak out, e.g. when ashamed to speak, or as when asking a favour, or when dissatisfied and grumbling.

út [R. a sort of bird, = lút].

út-pâng siong-chhi, gû-jîn tek-lí, when the bird and the oyster seize each other the fisherman gets profit, said of the yamun people getting gain out of lawsuits.

APPENDIX.

I.

VARIATIONS OF SPELLING IN OTHER BOOKS ON THE LANGUAGE OF AMOY.

SPELLING OF MEDHURST'S DICTIONARY.

The spelling used in the Dictionary of the Hok-kien Dialect, by the Rev. Dr. Medhurst, differs very widely from that used in this book. It is founded on the principle of imitating the English sounds of vowels, and is therefore extremely confused, besides being somewhat too much influenced by the Chinese tables of initials and finals, a subject into which I cannot enter here.

The initials, when consonants, are for the most part the same as mine, except the following:—

gn is used instead of ng.

ch is used both for ch and ts.

The aspirated consonants are indicated not merely by h, but by a small comma inserted between the h and the other consonant.

u^m is used instead of m, a syllable that really contains no vowel.

w is usually used instead of o at the beginning of a diphthong; woey instead of oe; woo or wu instead of u; and wui instead of ui.

y is used as an initial instead of i at the beginning of a diphthong; yè instead of i in some diphthongs; yew instead of iu; yi instead of i before m, n, p, and t; also yung instead of iong.

The greatest changes occur in the finals. A final means in Chinese nomenclature the whole of a word excepting the initial consonant or consonants, or even the whole word if there be no initial consonant.

The following list will enable the student to understand Medhurst's spelling of these finals. The first is Medhurst's spelling, the second is its equivalent as used in this Dictionary.

ae - - - - ai	ëuk - - - - iok
ai ^{ng} - - - - ε ⁿ	ew - - - - iu
aou - - - - au	ey - - - - e
ay - - - - ε	ⁿ o - - - - ε ⁿ
e - - - - i	oe - - - - ε
e ^{ng} - - - - ng	öey - - - - oe ëa - - - - ia	öey, when pre-ëang - - - - iang	ceded by m , œ
ëaou - - - - iau	oo - - - - u
ee ^{ng} - - - - i ⁿ	u ^m - - - - m ëeh - - - - ih	wa - - - - oa ëem - - - - iam	wæ - - - - oai
ëen - - - - ien	wan - - - - oan
ëep - - - - iap	wang - - - - oang
ëet - - - - iet	wu - - - - u
ëo - - - - io	wui ^{ng} - - - - ui ⁿ
ëo ^{ng} - - - - ie ⁿ	wun - - - - un
ëung - - - - iong	wuy - - - - ui

I have not thought it necessary to swell the list by inserting syllables ending in h, k, p, or t, which are regularly formed from vowels or diphthongs of which the equivalents are given above. Nor have I noticed the short mark placed by Medhurst above some vowels, as this is sufficiently indicated by these four final letters, h, k, p, t.

Medhurst writes the nasal sometimes ⁿ, sometimes ^{ng}, and places it sometimes in the middle of a word, sometimes at the beginning or the end. I always place it at the end, as it qualifies the whole vowel part of the word; and I always write it ⁿ.

In other respects Medhurst's spelling agrees with mine, or, if there be other variations, they must be very few.

But it must be remembered that Medhurst's dictionary is not of the Amoy form of the language, it is of the Changchew dialect, and, indeed, strictly of that variety of the Changchew dialect which is spoken at Chang-poo or Chiuⁿ-phé, so that the difference in the words is partly a difference of spelling and partly of dialect, such as is indicated in this Dictionary by C. or P.

VARIETIES OF SPELLING USED IN SOME OTHER BOOKS.

The books issued by the mission-press of the American Reformed Church differ but slightly in orthography from this Dictionary. Instead of ε they use o: ch is used both for ch and ts. The finals ien and iet, are spelled ian and iat. The nasal ⁿ is not appended to words beginning with m, n, or ng, because all such words are understood to be nasal. Hyphens are used to a much less extent than in this Dictionary (which indeed may be said of all other publications), and only in some of their publications is there any attempt to indicate the penultimate accent; in their later issues it is indicated by a small dot on a level with the top of the letters, e.g. jit·sì, = jit--sì.

The Manual of the Amoy Dialect, published by the late Rev. E. Doty of the same mission, differs from mine in the same points, and in the following. The aspirate is indicated by an inverted comma. He writes the finals eng, ek, as ieng, iek. He does not use hyphens at all. In his book, and those which follow (as also in Medhurst), there is no attempt to indicate the penultimate accent; and so enclitic words are often written as if in the "chiūⁿ-jip" tone, e.g. sih, mah, &c.

In the Manual of the Amoy Colloquial, by the Rev. John Macgowan o is used instead of ε; ch both for ch and ts; and in order to avoid the necessity of making types with a perpendicular accent, the "ē-jīp" tone is written with an acute accent instead of a perpendicular accent, so that it is distinguished from the "chiūⁿ-siaⁿ" tone by the finals, h, k, p, t.

The books reprinted or edited by Dr. Maxwell of the Formosa Mission use o instead of ø; spell the finals ian, iat, where I have ien, iet, and make but a limited use of hyphens.

Other books that have been published in the Amoy vernacular are quite out of print, and so rare that it is not necessary to allude to the variations of spelling in them.

II.

SOME VARIATIONS OF THE TONES IN THE DIALECTS OF CHANG-CHEW, CHIN-CHEW, AND TUNG-AN.

The description of the tones given in the Introduction applies strictly to the form of the language spoken in Amoy itself and the immediate neighbourhood. In the various dialects closely allied to the pure Amoy dialect there are slight variations of tone, many of them too minute to be described, and only to be caught by the ear. In general no attention need be paid to them unless one live in the region where the particular dialect is spoken. Some of the more noteworthy variations are described below.

1. CHANG-CHEW.

The chiūⁿ-piâⁿ or upper first tone, called in Chang-chew the téng-pêⁿ, is not quite level, but has a very slight upward movement; this upward movement is generally so slight as to be scarcely noticed except by a very practised ear, but in some phrases it is quite marked.

The ē-piâⁿ or lower first, called there the ē-pêⁿ, is more drawn out than in Amoy. The description of the Amoy tone still applies to it, but there is a sort of drawl in the pronunciation, and the rise of the voice at the end is often not so decided as at Amoy, so that occasionally it might almost be mistaken for the "ē-khì."

The two khì tones (the upper and lower third) seem to be not so sharply distinguished as in Amoy, at least I have sometimes found it difficult to say whether a word pronounced alone belonged to the "chiūⁿ-khì" or to the "ē-khì;" but, strange to say, whenever the word loses the accent by being the first word of a group of two in which the second has the accent, then the distinction becomes quite clear, according to the rules for the tones of unaccented words given in part of the Introduction on "Tones in Combination."

The ē-jīp or lower fourth tone is the one on which the greatest change takes place. It may be described as almost exactly the "ē-piâⁿ" tone cut short at the end, that is to say, the voice first falls very low and then ends in a sharp abrupt upward jerk, somewhat like the English "What?" pronounced not as a mere interrogation, but with a strongly marked tone of great surprise and astonishment. Occasionally this tone is so pronounced that it is not easily distinguished from the "ē-piâⁿ."

2. CHIN-CHEW.

The dialect of Chin-chew is usually spoken with greater rapidity than that of Amoy, several words being often run almost into one; and as it has also a more guttural sound, it is sometimes rather difficult to follow. It will be seen that some of the changes in the tones are connected with this tendency to a hurried pronunciation.

The chiūⁿ-piâⁿ begins much as the Amoy tone, but instead of remaining level has a very slight downward slope; but this downward motion has not the least resemblance to the rapid falling swing of the "chiūⁿ-siaⁿ;" it is still pronounced with the calmness and quiet regularity of the Amoy tone. It bears a considerable resemblance to the usual inflection given to the same tone (the first tone or Shang ping) in the Mandarin.

The ē-piâⁿ, while retaining the general shape of the Amoy intonation (first downwards and then upwards), is pronounced on a higher key and with more rapidity or abruptness, and the rising at the end is very marked.

The chiūⁿ-siaⁿ or second tone, which in Amoy is not divided (and not even attempted to be divided) into an upper and a lower tone, is said by the literary men of Chin-chew to be divided into the upper second or chiūⁿ-chiūⁿ, and the lower second or ē-chiūⁿ; but I have not been able to observe any difference, nor have I marked any special divergence from the usual Amoy intonation of the "chiūⁿ-siaⁿ," except that in some parts of the Chin-chew region it approaches somewhat to that peculiarity of the Tung-an dialect which is described below.

The two khì or khū tones (the upper and lower third) are changed in a very striking manner: they are both pronounced with a rapid or abrupt ending, much like that of the "chiūⁿ-jīp," but on a lower key. The two "khì" tones thus altered are rather apt to be confounded with each other; but just as in the Chang-chew dialect, whenever a word belonging to the "chiūⁿ-khì" tone stands first in a group of two, while the second word has the principal accent, then at once this tone becomes clearly distinguished from the "ē-khì," according to the rules given in the Introduction on "Tones in Combination."

3. TUNG-AN.

The dialect of Tung-an, Tung-ngan, or Tàng-oaⁿ, is for the most part intermediate between that of Chin-chew and the dialect of Amoy in the more strict or limited sense. Its tones are usually much the same as those of Amoy, while in those parts of the district of Tung-an which lie towards Chin-chew there is a tendency towards some of the tonal peculiarities of the Chin-chew dialect.

The chiūⁿ-siaⁿ or second tone, and the chiūⁿ-jīp or upper fourth tone, are almost or quite undistinguishable from each other.

The ē-piâⁿ or lower first, and the ē-khì or lower third, when they lose the accent by standing first in a group of two words while the second has the principal accent, become quite undistinguishable from each other, each being pronounced low and level; but the "ē-piâⁿ" when alone, and when accented, has much the same intonation as in Amoy.

III.

EXTENT OF THE AMOY VERNACULAR, AND ITS SUB-DIVISION INTO DIALECTS.

The vernacular of Amoy has attracted special attention, because Amoy was one of the five ports opened to foreign trade by the treaty of Nankin, and because its language differs very widely from the languages spoken at the other ports opened by that treaty, so widely different indeed as to be mutually unintelligible. Since the date of that treaty several ports in the island of Formosa, where the same dialect is spoken, have also been opened to trade; but the name of Amoy was applied to this dialect or vernacular long before these ports were opened, and would have been so doubtless though they had all been opened at once, because of its superior importance as a place of trade and intercourse.

Before the port of Amoy was opened to foreign trade the dialect of Amoy, in its more limited sense, had not attracted attention. The name then given to this form of the Chinese language was the "Hok-kien dialect," the title used in Medhurst's quarto dictionary, and the special form of the language exhibited in that dictionary is the dialect of Chang-poo or Chiuⁿ-phé, a district or county in the department or prefecture of Chang-chew.

Amoy stands in the department or prefecture of Chin-chew, but the dialect spoken at the city of Chin-chew differs from that of the town of Amoy almost as much as that of Chang-chew does. We have thus the three great varieties of the Amoy (A.), the Chang-chew (C.), and the Chin-chew (Cn.), which, with smaller variations, may be said to form one language spoken in five departments of the province of Hok-kièn or Fuh-kièn, namely, three Foo departments, Chang-chew (Chiang-chiu-hú), Chin-chew or Tseuen-chow (Tsoán-chiu-hú), and Formosa or Tai-wan (Tái-oán-hú), and in two Chow departments, Yung-chun (Éng-ehun-chiu) and Lung-yen (Liông-gám-chiu or Léng-náⁿ); but in some parts of these Chow departments other dialects of Chinese are also spoken.

1. CHANG-CHEW, &c.

The most marked peculiarities of the Chang-chew dialect (in addition to the tonal changes noted in No. II.) are these—e into oe in many words, and vice versa oe into e in about as many, a singular pair of opposed changes for which I have not been able to find any simple rule.

ng into uiⁿ, when the final in the reading form is n; also in a few words from the reading final -ong, when it corresponds to the Mandarin -wang.

iong into iang in those words which also appear in the colloquial form iuⁿ, corresponding to the Mandarin yang; but those words which correspond to the colloquial ng and to the Mandarin ang, do not become iang, but remain iong.

iok into iak in many words, but far from being a general rule.

u into i, and un into in, in many cases; but occasionally in changes to un.

iⁿ into eⁿ when the reading final is eng; but when the reading final is ien or iam, the col. remains iⁿ.

a into ε in those words which have also a colloquial form in e.

e into ε in colloquial words from the reading form a. eh into εh, in most or all words formed from the reading final ek, and also in some other words.

eng into an in many colloquial words from the reading form ien.

iuⁿ into ieⁿ.

oe into oa in words from the reading form oa.

iet into oat in many words.

ek into it in some words.

muiⁿ into moeⁿ in some words.

The dialect of Chang-poo (P.) or Chiuⁿ-phé is merely a variation of the Chang-chew dialect. The chief points of difference are (1) oai or oe instead of oa in those words where the Amoy has oe. (2) iong in many words for the Amoy eng, and in like manner iok for ek; but conversely eng often for iong, and ek for iok. These changes also take place in some other parts of Chang-chew prefecture. (3) eng often remains the same as the Amoy form where the Chang-chew has an. But the dialect of Chang-poo varies considerably at the two ends of that long District or county.

In Ping-ho district (Pèng-hó) the dialect is in the main like the rest of Chang-chew with some of the peculiarities of Chang-poo. But on the western border of the Ping-ho district the Hakka dialect is spoken.

Tiò-thòà or Chang-tai is said to have some remarkable peculiarities, due partly to its position on the borders of Chin-chew prefecture, and perhaps still more to the fact that in former times it was a part of that prefecture.

Chau-an (Chiàu-an) is said to approach in dialect to the language of Swatow (see No. IV.), but I have not had opportunities of observing.

Hái-tèng and Lâm-chèng speak very nearly the dialect of Chang-chew city and of Liông-khe, the district in which that city stands, but in the parts of Hái-tèng near Amoy the influence of the strictly Amoy dialect is very decidedly felt.

The Chow department of Lung-yen or Léng-nân uses to a large extent the dialect of Chang-chew, but in parts of it the Hakka is spoken.

2. CHIN-CHEW, TUNG-AN, &c.

The dialect of Chin-chew city (Cn.) and of the district of Chín-kang in which it stands, is also spoken with but slight variations in the adjoining Hien districts of Nanan or Lâm-óaⁿ (L.), Húi-an or Húi-óaⁿ (H.), and Ankoí or An-khoe (An. or Ank.) Some variations of the dialects of these districts are noted in the Dictionary; and it may be observed that a considerable part of Lâm-óaⁿ, bordering on Tung-an, partakes of many of its peculiarities.

The principal variations of the Chin-chew dialect are as follows:—

u into ü; this takes place almost invariably when in Chang-chew i takes the place of the Amoy u; it also occurs in many words, especially in the syllable su, where the Chang-chew retains u.

un into ün almost or quite invariably where the Chang-chew changes to in, and also in some other words.

eng into *üi*ⁿ when it comes from the reading termination ien or iam; this occurs in all cases where the Chang-chew has an for the Amoy eng, and in some also where the Chang-chew agrees with the Amoy sound.

eng into öng in some words.

e into ö almost invariably where the Chang-chew changes to oe; so also eh into öh.

oe into öe almost invariably when the Chang-chew changes to e; so also oeh into öeh.

o into ø generally in those words which have au in Mandarin.

ø or au into ïo in many words where the reading ø corresponds to the colloquial au. In ïo the accent is on i, not on the o.

ch, ts, or j, sometimes into dz, or a sound near it (only in the lower series of tones).

j is often pronounced very thick so as to change to l, or very nearly so.

Another remarkable feature of the Chin-chew dialect is the large number of totally different words (not merely differently pronounced) that are used, e.g. söh for kóng, to speak; thè and khit for hè, to give, or sign of passive; bõe-tsöe--tit instead of bõe-sái--tit, &c.

Tung-an (T.) or *Tâng-oa*ⁿ, though on the one hand it is the district in which Amoy stands, and on the other hand it is a district of the department or prefecture of Chin-chew, has yet a very marked variety of dialect for itself. It is said to have originally belonged to the prefecture of Chang-chew, which may perhaps partly explain its peculiarities. In many points it is more or less similar to the Chin-chew, from which the following are the chief variations:—(1) *ai*ⁿ instead of the Chin-chew *üi*ⁿ, especially when that takes the place of the Amoy eng; (2) *oai*ⁿ in some cases instead of the Amoy *oa*ⁿ; and in several other particulars it is intermediate between the Chin-chew and the pure Amoy.

Kwan-kow or Koàn-kháu (K. or Kk.) is a part of Tung-an district, near the island of Amoy. Among its special peculiarities are the frequent use of io instead of ø, and the extensive use of u for i. These peculiarities are said to be shared by the dialect of Tiò-thoà, referred to above under Chang-chew. But the use of u for i in some words is also found in many other parts of Tung-an and even in the villages on Amoy island.

The Chow department of Yung-chun or Eüg-chhun has in most parts nearly the same form of dialect as Chin-chew. The district of Tái-tièn or Toā-ehhân, in that department, is said to have a dialect widely different, but I have not had an opportunity of examining it.

3. COLONIZATION AND EMIGRATION.

Formosa has been colonized within about 200 years mainly by emigrants from Amoy, Chang-chew, and Chin-chew. The several parts of the island are usually found to be specially inhabited by emigrants from the several parts of the mainland, but in Formosa the various forms of the dialects mentioned above are a good deal mixed up.

Singapore and the various Straits Settlements, Batavia and other parts of the Dutch possessions, are crowded with emigrants, especially from the Chang-chew prefecture; Manila and other parts of the Philippines have great numbers from Chin-chew, and emigrants are largely scattered in like manner in Siam, Burmah, the Malay Peninsula, Cochin China, Saigon, &c. In many of these places there is also a great mixture of emigrants from Swatow. The Chinese in California and Australia are chiefly from other parts of China, but yet in Australia at least there is a considerable proportion of emigrants from the Amoy region.

In such fields of colonization and emigration there is a certain tendency to mix up the minor varieties of the sub-dialects; and at Singapore, Batavia, &c., a good many Malay words are often used in combination with the Chinese phrases.

In Formosa large tribes of the Aborigines have learned the Amoy vernacular or some of its dialects.

IV.

RELATION TO OTHER LANGUAGES.

Of the other languages of China the most nearly related to ours is the vernacular of Chau-chau-foo or Tie-chiu, in the province of Canton or Kwang-tung, on the borders of the province of Fuh-kien. The only treaty-port in that region of country is Swatow, so that the language is often called the "Swatow dialect." The ancestors of those people emigrated many centuries ago from the province of Fuh-kien, and to this day they are distinguished from the other inhabitants of the Canton province by the appellation "Hok-ló," that is the persons from Hok-kièn or Fuh-kien. That dialect of Swatow or Tie-chiu differs from the Amoy much as Dutch differs from German, or as Portuguese from Spanish, so that those who understand one or other of the dialects well can make out the greater part of what is said in the other. A large proportion of the changes which take place in passing from the Amoy to the Swatow are also found more or less in the various local dialects of the Amoy illustrated in this book, such as the Chang-chew, the Chin-chew, &c.

The island of Hai-nam (Hái-lâm), also in the Canton province, differs much more than the Swatow, but still is more nearly related to the Amoy and Swatow than to any of the other languages of China. But the centre of that island, just as is the case in Formosa, is inhabited by aboriginal races totally different from the Chinese, and having languages of a quite different stock.

Fuh-chau-foo, the capital of Fuh-kien province, is the chief seat of another "dialect," which is largely spoken in the centre and north of the province; it has many points of resemblance to the Amoy, but is quite unintelligible to the Amoy Chinese with the exception of an occasional word or phrase.

Hing-hwa-foo (Heng-hoà), which lies between Fuh-chau and Chin-chew, has a "dialect" or language of its own, though it contains only two counties or Hien districts; it is said to be unintelligible both at Fuh-chau and at Amoy, but I have not been able to examine it.

To the other languages of China the Amoy vernacular is less closely related. Yet they all evidently spring from one common stock. That common stock is not the modern Mandarin dialect, but the ancient form of the Chinese language as spoken about 3000 years ago. The so-called "Mandarin," far from being the original form, is usually more changed than any of the other languages or dialects of China.

The clue to the ancient form of the Chinese language was discovered by the Rev. Joseph Edkins of the London Missionary Society, now stationed at Peking; he has given copious explanations on the subject in his Grammar of the Mandarin Dialect, and in his China's Place in Philology.

Among the sources from which the ancient form of Chinese has been thus recovered, a prominent place is held by the Amoy dialect, especially because its final consonants very generally retain the ancient form.

It is in the ancient form of the Chinese language that the relation of Chinese to the other languages of the world becomes most distinct, as is shown in China's Place in Philology above referred to, so that for this purpose the study of the Amoy vernacular is of considerable importance.

V.

ENCLITICS.

The mark used in this Dictionary for an enclitic word is a double hyphen placed before it. The enclitics may be roughly divided into the following classes, which do not lay claim to any scientific precision or exhaustive minuteness:—

Final particles used at the end of a sentence, or sometimes at the end of a verb, adjective, or substantive, e.g. ah, á, lah, leh, loh, giòh or giòh, kiòh, ioh, hêⁿ, hêhⁿ, nihⁿ, chiah, chêh, tsài.

Some are interrogative, e.g. má or mah, nihⁿ, lái, tái.

Most of these words enumerated above are never used except as enclitics, so that it is sometimes very difficult to determine the proper spelling, or the reading form to which the colloquial corresponds.

Certain adverbs and adjectives, and some particles, which are also used as accented words, e.g. ê, nihⁿ, tsài, hia, keng, koáⁿ or koá. Some of these are usually enclitic, others but rarely.

Negative words placed at the end of a sentence to give an interrogative sense, e.g. bô, m̄, bôe, bê. These words are much more commonly used in other positions where they are not enclitic.

Substantives which are generally used as ordinary words in other positions, but which are occasionally enclitic, e.g. sí, time; sì, a clan or surname; sì, world; sì, power or direction; kan, bîn, ji, iúⁿ, lâng, níⁿ, jít, gêh, ko, kong, hō, chhù, tê, thâu.

Some such substantives and adjectives are very extensively used as enclitics in the names of places, especially thâu, chhù, piⁿ, tau, ê, and lái.

Pronouns, when not emphatic, e.g. goá, goán, lán, lí, lín, i, in. In some cases such unemphatic and enclitic pronouns are used indefinitely, as is the case very generally with lâng quoted among the substantives.

Verbs in common use as ordinary words, but which are also sometimes enclitic, e.g. kiⁿ, lái, khi, tsáu, chiuⁿ, liáu, sí, kàu, tng, phoá, poáh, khoáⁿ, tó, chh, chiáh, siā, tsai. Sometimes in such cases the verb, as used after another verb, may be either enclitic or not according as the one or the other is meant to be emphatic; e.g. thái-sí, to kill by cutting; thái-sí, to cut so as to kill.

Some of the verbs enumerated above come to be almost like auxiliaries when enclitic, but this is specially the case with the enclitics tiòh, tit, and teh. Of these the last teh has not been definitely identified with any word in the reading form, and it is very doubtful whether it is the same as the verbal prefix teh of the same sound. In many of the phrases with tiòh, that word may be pronounced either as an enclitic or not, e.g. chhê--tiòh, or chhê-tiòh, with but little if any difference of meaning.

Double enclitics are chiefly found among the verbs, e.g. lòh-lái, lòh-khi, khi-lái, khi-khi, kè-lái, kè-khi, tò-khi, lái-khi, m̄-khi, chhut-lái. All these are found following a verb which takes the primary accent, e.g. puih--khi-lái, phah--m̄-khi, tò--lái-khi; where the principal accent is on the first word, the second is quite unaccented, and a slight secondary accent usually falls on the third word; but sometimes the third word also is quite unaccented, while on the other hand it sometimes recovers more or less of its own original tone.

Double enclitics are very rare except in the case of verbs, but examples of other parts of speech are found in sien-síⁿ and chit-ê; but the latter is often contracted to chêh.

It is of great importance to attend carefully to these various enclitics, both in order to speak idiomatically and correctly, and because numerous phrases have a totally different meaning according as the last word is accented or enclitic; e.g. koaⁿ--lâng and koaⁿ-lâng; âu-jit and âu-jít; pun--chiáh and pun-chiáh; thè--khi and thè-khi; bô--khi and bô-khi; taⁿ--lái and taⁿ-lái; tsòe--lâng and tsòe-lâng, &c.

VI.

Several other appendices entered into my plan, and the materials have been collected in considerable abundance, but time does not allow of their being arranged and extended at present for publication. But in the Companion, Key, or Sequel to this Dictionary, which I shall endeavour to publish ere long, there may be expected, besides the Chinese characters for the words, such tables as the following:—

A table of phrases in pairs, where the second word of each pair is identical in sound and tone, while the first words agree in sound and differ only in tone; e.g. khí-thâm and khì-thâm; húi-khì and hùi-khì; ké-ì and kê-ì, id. Sometimes there are three, four, or even five phrases thus connected in sound, e.g. kâu-bé, káu-bé, and kâu-bé.

Table of remarkable changes in the initials of the words.

Table of remarkable changes in the finals of words.

Phrases where decided difference of sense is caused by change of accent or by a slight pause.

Table of words which are found at least in three forms—the literary and two or more purely colloquial forms—of such words I have already collected several hundred.

Remarkable changes of tones.
