XII. TACTICAL AND OPERATIONAL DATA. (Narrative and comment. Describe action fully and comment freely, following applicable items in check list at left. Use additional sheets if necessary.) (Continued from Fage 3)

> Target for Two small deven were located from which ertillery fire, probably logan, was coming. One recket hit was scored in one care and two in the second. Artillery fire ceased, and it was thought that the sums were either demolished or seriously demonsted.

At 0930 Lt. (18) Name took off in a Time Corrying Let Lieut. Gaines, U. S. Army, as air observer. At 1130 eight 75's were launched for direct support work over himsen. At 1530 Lt. (Je) Younglove was launched with a second Army of tear for air observer work.

After the observer's patrol had been completed, Lt. (jg) Kane received permission from Commander Air Support, Control Units to strike targets of opportunity. The Air Observer directed him to a cave shich was supposed to have contained certain onesy troops and guns, and in two rums on the cave, Lt. (je) Kene was successful in landing two of his reckets in the cave and also in getting in some straffing. The amount of damage could not be determined.

The Air Observer also knew of a railroad passenger dar which was partly hidden in the south of a tuneel and man they located that target. Several runs were made on the car, and four of the six rockets hit the car or directly in the nouth of the tunnel. The end of the our was demoliabed, but it could not be determined whether the our was inhabited or not.

Squadron Commander Slancherd, who with his group of Fig. Joined up with six Tim's and four FM's from U.S.S. ANZIO (CYR57), was directed by Castli to work over an enemy artillery position in a daye on the west side of a hill just to the south of the front lines of our troops. The enemy game were holding up the advancement of our troops, and it was desired to knook them out.

Several runs were made from northwest to southeast on the cave, the Ma's going in first followed by the AMAIO Thm's. Lt. Blancherd and his division of PH's placed twelve reckets directly in the days starting a violent fire. Smoke billowed out of the opening on the west side and also out of the air went on the top of the hill and out of the entrance to the cave on the other side of the bill. Jan troops began to your out of the rear entrance to the cave and all artillery firs commad. The planes then chifted their attack from the front of the days to the rear where the Jap troops were coming out and made coverel runs on the troops, dompletely dispersing them and billing or wounding many.

In addition there were several houses at the rear entrance to the cave which were completely demoliahed by straffing and fires were started. The Air Coordinator stated that it was the best attack for elone ammort work that he had ever seen, and congretuleted all of the pilots on their good work.
