

BRITISH COLUMBIA PRODUCED FIFTY MILLION LAST YEAR. A BANNER SHOWING FOR THE PACIFIC PROVINCE. VICTORIA'S MILES OF GARDENS UNDER GLASS

ENORMOUS STRIDES HAVE BEEN MADE IN ALL BRANCHES OF INDUSTRY

Wealth to the extent of $1,250,000 for every white man in the province was produced during the year ending 30th June, 1905.

Hon. B. G. Tilson, minister of finance, is entitled to speak with authority on the subject. He was good enough to give a Times representative an interview in which he made public many interesting statistics and a brief forecast of the future of the province. After a residence of 26 years he is as optimistic as ever regarding the future of British Columbia. He spoke with great enthusiasm and pointed to recent progress as a safe criterion by which to judge what is hidden behind the veil of coming years.

"I am satisfied," he said in answer to a question, "that every industry in British Columbia is only in its infancy. We have forests limitless for lumber, land in millions of acres for agriculture and the seven thousand miles of shore line are washed by seas teeming with fish.

"To comprehend the future one must study the past. In order to do this with some correctness I had statistics prepared covering the past financial year and was surprised at the splendid showing.

The total production of the province for the year ending June 30th, was over $20,000,000.

On the population of the province of 200,000 including Indians, Mongolians, women and children I think it safe to say the total number of able bodied white men is not more than one-fifth of this, or 40,000. Dividing the total value of provincial products by this number it appears that for every white man there was produced considerably over $1,000 during the past year. I do not think any place in the world can equal this.

"Details of this production should be of public interest. Taking, first, the lumber industry the actual receipts were slightly over the estimate I gave you at the end of June. The actual revenue from this source was $508,000 or within a fraction of double the estimate which was $225,000. In value the lumber cut Exceeded All Expectations. As closely as I can ascertain it reached over $7,500,000. And, best of all, it was manufactured in the province. The government did not reap all the benefit derived from the forests as would have been largely the case if export in a virgin state were permitted. Probably half of this large sum went into the pockets of the thousands of workmen employed in the industry.

"As you know, in 1905 the mineral output of the province was $22,461,325. This was an extremely high figure for an industry only a few years old to reach and the most satisfactory feature about it is that practically all was not only mined but smelted here. There are now eleven smelters and one refinery in Active Operation with a combined capacity of 7,500 tons a day and very little goes out of the province in the form of ore. Should at any time an impulsion be apparent to ship much mineral from British Columbia before smelting I should be in favor of such a course. It is a matter regarding lumber and prohibit such exportation.

"Agriculture also advanced in common with every other line of work during the past year. This province has always been a great purchaser up till the present, but now the tide has turned. The most promising feature,

I think regarding this industry is the fact that our imports of this character are decreasing rapidly. Last year the produce of provincial farms and orchards reached the sum of $6,500,000, and there was a decrease in the value of such goods brought in of $500,000. If this rate is continued in a short time local produce will fully Supply Local Markets. Mixed farming has done much to even things up. There are splendid opportunities for this in many sections of the province. The best evidence of this is the fact that we exported butter, eggs, poultry and cheese to the value of nearly $2,000,000.

"Horticulture is rapidly coming to the front. It is becoming one of our most important industries. The great success attained at exhibitions, such as those in London and Winnipeg, will not be ephemeral; it is a Sign of Solid Growth. In 1891 the acreage under fruit was 6,500; ten years later it had only reached 7,500, but advancement has since been phenomenal. A year ago there were 22,000 acres cultivated by orchardists and fruit growers, and I fully believe that by the end of 1906 there will be 40,000 acres used in this manner.

"In time the growth of local nurseries will take the place of imported stock, but I may mention that already, during the present season, the provincial inspector has examined 1,250,000 trees. At present the growth of nursery stock is small, but next season should see 400,000 trees placed on the market and the following year 1,500,000. In a few years we will Commence to Export. Fishing, of course, has long been an important item in the commerce of the province, but even this industry shows signs of great expansion. Improved methods of catching salmon will certainly enlarge the amount caught, but I refer particularly to the new factors recently introduced. For instance, the Nanaimo herring fisheries are developing with great rapidity, and I expect in the near future to see similar institutions started at other points. The oyster traffic is only in an experimental stage, but I see no reason that it should not become important. And, although whaling can hardly be termed fishing, it is allied to it. This entirely new branch of commerce is too well known to people in Victoria to need comment from me, but I mention it to show the new lines in which people are branching out. Mild curing of salmon is also comparatively new, but very fish put up has found a ready market, and the purchasers are clamoring for more. I look to see the wealth of our fisheries exploited in the near future much more than in the past.

"When one considers these facts, and remembers that from the industries mentioned last year the province produced a value of $44,500,000, which other items increased to over $50,000,000 can there be the slightest doubt that the present prosperity will be maintained. Ten years from now

A Million Population will be no idle dream, but probably an accomplished fact.

"There is room enough for all to come. New regions in the central interior of great fertility are being settled rapidly. Fresh discoveries of minerals are made every day; the surface of our mountains has hardly been scratched. Many parts of the world are looking to British Columbia for lumber, and there are countless millions of feet to meet this demand. Our resources are being developed more and more with the utmost success. We have the protection of the British flag and are an integral part of the Empire. Such being the case I venture to state that ten years from now British Columbia will have attained the prominent place in the world that is her's by right."

"AD" MEN GATHERED ROUND FESTIVE BOARD

Visitors Entertained at Banquet at Stratheona Hotel, Shawnigan Lake, Last Night.

Ad-Ad. A-D-A-D. Where? In the Victoria Daily Times. Led by C. C. Chapman, of Portland, Ore., whose deep basso makes him an intangible manipulator of the megaphone, every member of the Pacific Coast Advertising Men's Association joined in the above "college" yell yesterday afternoon. They were gathered on the E. & N. depot awaiting the departure of the train for Shawnigan Lake, being the guests of the Times Printing & Publishing Co. on an excursion to that popular resort and a banquet at the Stratheona hotel. From the outset they entered into the spirit of the outing with boyish abandon. Dignity was forgotten, in fact anyone who presumed to stand on ceremony to the slightest extent was forcibly brought to the front, and subjected to unmerciful badinage, sarcasm of a biting personal character, until, for very peace sake, he was forced to call quarter and enter into the sport with the other "boys."

The time taken by the trip to the lake was whiled away in delightful style. It was just of sufficient length to be pleasant without becoming tedious. When there wasn't scenery imposing enough to occupy the attention of the visitors other pastimes were introduced. These were varied and somewhat novel. Once the crowd gathered in the baggage room and forming a circle commenced beating time with hands and feet while prominent members of the party were called upon in regular order for a clog-dance. No excuses were accepted, anyone whose name was mentioned had to respond. Of course there were some rather lame attempts, but the more labored the hop the more hilarious was the applause. Those whose modesty kept them in the background, therefore, were the privileged spectators of the downfall of the dignity of several of Victoria's most prominent citizens. Another favorite pastime was the repeated shouting of the aforementioned yell, the crowd going from one car to another, and making the windows shake by the concert of their lusty voices in exploiting the advantages of advertising through the medium of the Victoria Times. But it must not be supposed that the many who were not so vociferous were uninterested. The view of Shawnigan Lake from the mountain side was especially appreciated, and many expressions of admiration were noted.

It was when the train pulled up in front of the Stratheona hotel. Once more the stock "ad" call went the air, bringing the guests ascending a quiet vacation at that hostelry to the doors and windows with a curiously surprised expression on their countenances. Having appropriately introduced themselves the advertising men and local guests, headed by H. Cuthbert, proceeded to make a round of the grounds, thus passing away the time until the repast was ready. They walked down that beautiful pathway leading to the edge of the lake and scanned that wide expanse of water as far almost as the eye could see in either direction. The scene gave a few an almost irresistible desire for a "dip," but as bathing suits had been left behind that pleasure had to be omitted from the programme. Instead, F. E. Scottford and a number of the more ardent, displayed a blackberry and raspberry patch, and proceeded to stay the pangs of hunger by regaling themselves on Vancouver Island wild fruit.

Returning the party found the banquet table ready, and no time was lost in taking their places. At the head sat John Nelson, manager of the Victoria Daily Times; to his right was Rinaldo M. Hall, vice-president of the organization, and to the left L. H. Merz, the secretary-treasurer. The others present followed: C. C. Chapman, of Portland, Ore.; James H. Gossnell, of Victoria; Louis G. L. Sage, of Los Angeles, Victoria; M. Bernard, of Victoria; Ben C. Nicholas, of Victoria; A. V. Willoughby, of Seattle; Herbert Cuthbert, of Victoria; Bury Irwin Dunsen, of Victoria; Arthur W. McCurdy, of Victoria; Elliott S. Rowe, of Victoria; F. E. Scottford, of Seattle; Alex. Green, of Spokane, Wash.; R. E. Gossnell, of Victoria; John A. Read, of Los Angeles, Cal.; A. G. Sargison, of Victoria.

The fun commenced with the soup and waxed more and more uproarious with the progress of the banquet. F. B. Rivers presided at the piano and enlivened the proceedings with continual streams of popular rag-time selections and popular ditties. So infectious was the music that very frequently the delicacies set before them were forgotten to join in a chorus. At regular intervals Mr. Rivers broke into the old familiar air, "We Won't Be Home Until Morning," whereat knives and forks were abandoned in order that the singing might be indulged in with proper gusto. But the words were changed beyond recognition, running something like the following:

We won't be home until morning, We won't be home until morning, So hip, hip, hurrah! We want to live in Victoria, We want to live in Victoria, We won't go home at all.

And so the dinner continued, sparkling throughout with the evidence of perfect good fellowship and unrestrained enjoyment. The viands were all that could be desired, the table decorations were tasty and the music delightful. In fact there was not a jarring element. All combined to promote the pleasure of the occasion. The informal lines, upon which the affair was conducted made the visitors feel so perfectly at home that they gave their spirits a loose rein, and undoubtedly made mine hostess, Mrs. Wark, and the management of the Times feel that the trouble they had gone to in arranging the entertainment was worth while.

The toast list was somewhat irregular. The chairman, Mr. Nelson, in a few words, reviewed the past year in entertaining a body of men engaged in the exploitation of the resources of the Pacific coast. Some of those present were making their first visit to Canadian soil, and he was sure they didn't notice much difference. (Applause.) Had the forefathers of the two Anglo-Saxon nations been as wise as the present generation there would never have been any difference. The flags, it was true, were not the same. It was a trait of the race that whatever form of government was undertaken it was developed to its highest standard. He thought it could be stated without egotism that the President of the United States and the King of Great Britain were the two most progressive and enlightened statesmen of the age. (Enthusiastic applause.)

Vice-President Hall, in a brief address, remarked that the visit of members of the Pacific Coast Advertising Men's Association to British Columbia had opened their eyes to the possibilities of this country. The little feast which had been so much enjoyed would always remain one of their pleasantest recollections of "Victoria, the beautiful, the Gateway to the Orient from Canada."

F. E. Scottford's speech was along much the same lines as that of the vice-president.

E. Gossnell, editor of the Colonist, then was called upon to propose the health of the visitors. It gave Victorians great pleasure to combine with the "ad" men of the coast on the occasion of their annual convention. They were in perfect sympathy with the laudable endeavor towards the development and the bringing into prominence what the coast has to offer to the settler and to outside capital. He asked that all drink to the visitors, which was done, the chorus, "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows," being sung with enthusiasm.

After a toast to President Gossnell, proposed by Dr. Elliott S. Rowe, had been honored, one was drunk to the management of the Times Printing & Publishing Co., coupled with which was the name of the hostess and proprietor of the Stratheona hotel, Mrs. Wark. The gathering then broke up in time to catch the returning E. & N. train.

Arriving in Victoria, the visitors marched in line to the front of the two newspaper offices and serenaded them. Thus ended the first entertainment in Victoria in honor of the delegates to the annual convention of the "ad" men's league.

MIDDLESEX MAN WON THE KING'S PRIZE

(Special to the Times.) Belsey, July 20.—Sergeant Major Hayhurst, of Hamilton, is the only Canadian who qualified for the final stage in the King's prize competition. He scored 84. Hayhurst is a former King's prize man.

The second stage, 19 shots at 600 yards, was shot off this morning. A strong wind was blowing straight across the ranges, interfering considerably with shooting. The five Canadians who qualified for this stage did not do very well. Staff Sergeant Hayhurst led them with 34 points, and Private Drysdale, of Montreal, followed closely with 31. Private Smith, of Ottawa, scored 28, as did Capt. Skeddon, Hamilton. Major Dillon, of Oshawa, in the fifth man, only put on 63.

The totals of the Canadians in the two stages follow: Hayhurst, 178; Drysdale, 115; Dillon, 164; Skeddon, 171; Smith, 111.

The Stratheona Cup, which is the prize offered for Canadian competition by Lord Stratheona, was won by Staff Sergeant Hayhurst, Hamilton, with 324.

S. Sergeant Hayhurst, Hamilton, made 307.

A dispatch from Tokio to the London Daily Telegraph states that fire at Yokohama on July 20th destroyed 1,000 Japanese houses.

This City Supplies Hot House Vegetables, Fruits and Flowers to Pleased Purchasers From Winnipeg to Alaska.

From the snow-clad plains of Alaska and the blizzard swept prairies of Manitoba came last winter the call for Victoria hot house vegetables. Needless to say the demand was met as far as possible, for this city boasts a record extent of gardens under glass. The trade in forced-garden produce is practically a new one here, but is rapidly attaining large dimensions. A crown of moral beauty has for many years rested on the head of this city beautiful, but utility, too, has its place in commercial economy. It was Arthur Branchley, formerly manager for F. R. Bessner & Co., who started the idea and it has been taken up with avidity. But credit should be given where due and public acknowledgment made of the father of a new and growing industry.

Twenty-five acres is an expert estimate of the total area of glass covered greenhouses in this city. To glass these wide lights and roof slopes being taken into consideration—required 2,174,000 feet of glass. Under these extensive areas are grown tomatoes, cucumbers and lettuce in winter and spring, while flowers replace the vegetables at other seasons of the year. Placed end to end these greenhouses would form a line ten and a half miles long of twenty-foot wide structures. If Government street were seven miles long this glass would make a flat roof for it.

By this continuous succession of profitable cultivation local florists are achieving great prosperity.

In the winter lettuce is the principal crop, and it is shipped as far east as Winnipeg. Small quantities are exported over the mid-winter trails to Dawson, Swiftwater, Bill, when on his periodical bio-boys, has probably added many dollars to the wealth of Victoria gardeners. Cucumbers are first placed on the market in February or March, and the supply is continued until the advent of the open air crop. Tomatoes arrive fully ripe about May and there is a continuous output until about the end of August. The value placed on the latter crop can be well gauged by the following extract from the current issue of the Winnipeg Commercial:

"British Columbia hot house tomatoes, perfect in texture and flavor, are now offered for 20 cents per pound. Texas come at 10 cents. The British Columbia tomatoes are beautifully packed and the crates are a perfect picture. They are much cheaper at 20 cents than southern ones at 10 cents, as there is no waste."

The "made in Victoria" label should have been placed on the produce mentioned as these tomatoes were grown by A. J. Woodward in his greenhouses at Ross Bay.

Horticultural experience covering many years has been gained by the gentleman mentioned. The fruit of it is shown in the large area he now has under cultivation. His gardens cover the extent of eight acres, of which three and a half are under glass. He was one of the pioneers in the export business and raises his produce directly for the market. Tomatoes have been shipped for the past two or three years, but a further branching out was made last winter when flowers were sent east for the first time. The new provinces and Manitoba are the principal places to which he ships, but

A Good Market has also been opened in Alaska and the Yukon. Other growers are in a similar position; he is only one of many who are attaining a competence by furnishing vegetables in winter to places having a cold climate. During the present season up till the end of June F. F. Stewart & Co., handled $12,500 worth of these hot house products. This does not include by any means all the shipments. At least one of the larger growers of whose production no information is obtainable, but being included.

The rhubarb was received during the winter months, the lettuce from November to May; the cucumbers from March onward, and the tomato crop is now in full swing. Following are the details:

Exported:
1,100 crates tomatoes	$1,500
1,232 crates cucumbers	1,500
2,390 lbs. rhubarb	3,750
4,000 crates lettuce	2,750
Total value	$9,500
Used Locally:
73 crates tomatoes	$1,125
3,729 lbs. rhubarb	405
1,665 crates lettuce	1,715
Total value	$4,845

Other houses handling this class of goods will probably bring the total up to $20,000. And this for practically the first year of an industry that is yet in its infancy.

Turning now to Victoria's export of cut flowers, an even newer branch of industry is reached. This was only started last winter, but initial shipments were so encouraging that arrangements will be made for a much larger trade at the end of the present year. The blossoms of bulbous plants formed a large portion of those exported, the varieties being principally daffodils, hyacinths and narcissi. But Victoria roses were not forgotten. The queen of flowers is too much a favorite and grown in such profusion, both in greenhouses and gardens. There is ample opportunity for an extended market, and full advantage will be taken of it. Carefully packed in cotton wool, carried rapidly by railway and ferry, Victoria flowers adorned the tables of people in Winnipeg around the Christmas season.

Although not actually within the purview of gardens under glass, the trade in nursery stock if germane to it. This industry, one of many years in existence in Victoria, is growing rapidly. One nurseryman has been in the business for 25 years, and his only change during the whole period has been to add to the land originally purchased. All varieties of desert and cooking fruits, flowering and ornamental foliage plants are being successfully grown for the market. For roses Victoria has always held a high position, and some nurserymen have between 50 and 70 varieties under cultivation. Every part of the world has been called upon to provide stock for propagation here. Not only the average trees and shrubs that seem synonymous with happiness are grown, but also the rare and expensive ones associated with habitations of wealth. The success attained by Sir Henri July in acclimatizing eastern hardwood trees has induced others to embark in this line of effort. In a year or two small sized trees of this kind will be secure here.

Orchard fruits attain the very highest perfection in seed cases. Victoria apples particularly are known far and wide as being produced in heavy crops of the highest quality. Small fruits of many descriptions thrive and bear plentifully. Strawberries grown just outside the city

Command the Highest Price wherever displayed. The failure of the Hood river crop this season caused a great shortage on the mainland, and it was to Victoria the merchants of Vancouver looked for their supply. It was forthcoming, and local fruit growers reaped a large amount of cash from their gardens. Of course the price provinces will be ultimately the most important outside market for Victoria fruit, and it is interesting to know that already the country as far east as Winnipeg has been tapped. California fruit has heretofore been the principal supply in the provinces east of the Rockies, but buyers are more than willing to pay much higher for Victoria fruit that ripens to perfection and of quality and flavor, has competed successfully with the banner districts of the old country.

As stated in the Times a couple of months ago, the recent discovery that the climate of Victoria is eminently suited to the propagation of bulbs has created great interest. The "bit of Holland at Oak Bay," in which E. B. Wallace carries on his experiments has been the subject of enquiries from all over the world. Advantage will be taken of the fact that bulbous blossoms that have to be produced under glass in New York and Chicago can be obtained here from plants grown in the open air. Cost of production is thus practically cut into three. Flowers that are rated at $2.50 per hundred in the outside cities mentioned, can be raised in Victoria for less than $1 including bookerage and transportation charges. The shipping quality of these blossoms has been tested and found admirable, and there will be no difficulty with one-fifth packing—landing Victoria cut flowers in first class condition in New York. For the sale of bulbs for planting, Victoria possesses equal advantages to the best districts of Holland and Sicily, an Channel Islands. Young bulbs obtained and separated here are grown under ideal conditions for transplanting. The experimental stage may now be said to be passed, and the commercial stage entered upon. No spring will see the opening of a large trade in this new line, and it will be

These, particularly favor conditions are almost parochially local, an confined in entirety to Victoria. No place on the coast, within the temperate zone, has such brilliant sunshine, such as moderate rainfall and such an equable climate all the year round. If these three beneficial conditions of nature, Victoria's pre-eminence as a vegetable and flower growing district.

MR. J. MORLEY'S NOTE OF WARNING

JUST EXCLUDE INDIA FROM PARTY POLITICS

Government - Tribute to Former Viceroy.

London, July 20.—Introducing the Indian budget in the House of Commons this afternoon, Indian Secretary Morley sounded a warning note on the necessity of excluding India from party politics. The most engrossing of Great Britain's foreign relations, he declared, are the Asiatic, those involving this country with China, Japan and Russia, which was a great Asiatic as well as European power. Any false step in India would land Great Britain in a confusion infinitely more dire and more disastrous than had the false step been in South Africa.

Mr. Morley considered the time ripe for an advance in the improvement of the system of the government of India. Everybody knows that there was new spirit abroad in India. There is no discontent, but there was no affection among the people, and the sent government of India was in sympathy with the desires of more modern ideas. With this object in view the viceroy was appointing a mission to inquire how far the extension of the representative element in the legislative council could be extensively carried out. The Indian secretary also said he considered that the time ought to be given greater attention to the higher posts in the administration of India.

Mr. Morley's speech was well received. He declared that the extension of the representative element in the legislative council could be extensively carried out. ALFRED BEIT'S BEQUESTS

Immense Sum For Educational and Charitable Purposes.
London, July 20.—It was announced to-day that the will of Alfred Beit, the South African millionaire, who died here July 16th, leaves the property known as Borstlers Jager, near Hamburg, to the city of Hamburg to be held for the people. The picture by Sir Joshua Reynolds of "Lady Cockburn and Her Children" is left to the British National Gallery, and Reynolds's picture "Mistress Bonne and Her Daughter" and other art treasures are left to Berlin and Hamburg; and the sum of £250,000 and one thousand £12.50 shares in the DeBeers Company are also bequeathed.

The sum of £1,000,000 is left to the University of Johannesburg, £500,000 is bequeathed for educational and charitable purposes in Rhodesia and other territories within the field of the British South African Company; £150,000 to the research fund of the London University; £125,000 to the Rhodes University of Grahamstown, Cape Colony; £50,000 to the Rhodes Memorial fund at Capetown; £50,000 to the Union Jack Club of London; £100,000 to the deceased firm in South Africa for educational or charitable purposes in the Transvaal; £15,000 for the same purposes to Kimberley; £12,000 to Dr. Jameson, now premier of Cape Colony; and Sir Lewis Mitch, chairman of the DeBeers Company and trustee of the Rhodes Sunday school for the same purpose in Cape Colony; $100,000 to the King's hospital (London)—fund and £200,000 to Guy's hospital, London, and £200,000 to be distributed equally in London and Hamburg by the Beit's executors for educational or charitable purposes.

THE PRINTERS' STRIKE

United Typothetae Will Not Confer With Representatives of the Union.
Buffalo, N. Y., July 20.—The United Typothetae of America to-day flatly declined to confer with officials of the International Typographical Union in regard to the strike inaugurated nearly a year ago for an eight-hour day and a closed shop.

President Ellis, of the Typothetae, read a letter signed by James M. Lynch, president, and J. W. Hays, vice-president, representing the executive council of the International Typographical Union, stating that they were ready for a conference with a view of adjusting the differences that now exist. "Falling in with this conference," the letter read, "the temper of the members of the Typographical Union will demand a continuance of the present struggle."

After the letter had been read to the convention of the typothetae the following resolution was unanimously adopted: "Resolved, that the Typothetae of America in convention assembled have nothing on which to confer with the representatives of the International Typographical Union, and that Mr. Lynch and Mr. Hays be so informed."

Mr. Hamblin, of Kansas City, outlined a plan for carrying insurance risks on printing plants on a mutual basis and a committee was instructed to investigate the plan.

The convention adopted a resolution approving the technical school work of the last year and commending the proposition to establish an Eastern, a Central and a Western school, in addition to those now in existence.

The following officers were elected by acclamation: President, George H. Ellis, Boston; vice-president, William D. Greene, New York; treasurer, Thomas E. Donnelly, Chicago; F. L. Elk, of Dallas; Franklin Hudson, of Kansas City; Samuel P. Rees, Omaha, and C. M. Skinner were chosen members of the executive committee. The place of meeting for the next convention was left to the executive committee.

CARNEGIE ON CANADA

Writes to London Times Correcting False Impressions.
London, July 20.—Andrew Carnegie writes to the Times declaring that not one word of his recent speeches in Canada justifies the construction recently put on them that they contained a palpable proposition of unity with the States instead of England, and, he says, "never did I utter a word in Canada or elsewhere about the drawing closer of our race that did not embrace and give the first place to the Motherland."

"I don't think that either Canada or America in the future is likely to need the support of the Motherland, nor do I believe that some day the Motherland will find alliance or union with her children across the Atlantic her refuge or strength during the lifetime of many now living, although 200,000,000 English-speaking people are to dwell there."

"Canada to-day is intensely loyal to Britain. If any change is made it will be that of a fond daughter leaving her mother's house with her consent to create a home for herself, followed by the mother's love; fully reciprocated. Britain has nothing to fear from American rivalry, politically."

PRESS CORRESPONDENTS

Party From Washington, D. C., Visiting the New Province.
Saskatoon, Sask., July 20.—The Washington correspondents arrived in the city yesterday. They were met at the station by Mayor Chisholm, A. E. Young, treasurer, and Jas. Weir, commissioner of the board of trade, who accompanied them to this city. On their arrival they were met by the representative reception committee with carriages in which they were driven to Smith's Grove.

On the way out they viewed the Canadian Pacific railway steel laying operations. They were then driven about the city, and the train being late, were dined at the Empire Hotel. The party left for Prince Albert at 6.45 p. m. very much surprised at the marvellous growth of the city, and the restful stay was much enjoyed.

The Japanese government has decided to purchase six railways by December 1st, paying for them $125,000,000 in five per cent. bonds payable in five years.

POPULARITY OF THE AUTOMOBILE

NUMBER OF NEW MACHINES IMPORTED
Visitors Enthusiastic Over Island Roads—Proposed Tour by Members of Local Club.
The hum of the automobile is becoming more familiar music to the ears of Victorians as the summer season advances. Since organization of the membership of the local motor club has increased to a marked extent, new machines are being imported constantly and, in short, the fascination of the sport is becoming more and more a dominating element in the life of the well-to-do classes of this city. But the appreciation of the many beautiful drives within easy reach of Victoria is not confined to local residents by any means. Motorists from Seattle, Tacoma, and other points are continually coming over here to enjoy some of the fine outings offered the enthusiast in this neighborhood. They are given just as little trouble as possible in the shipment of their machines, and up to the present have invariably expressed themselves as exceedingly pleased with the reception accorded them by officials and the cordial welcome always extended by citizens.

Dr. Garesche, secretary of the Victoria club, and one of the most noted of the local devotees of the sport, spoke of the drives in the immediate vicinity in the most enthusiastic terms this morning. That to Race Rocks, via the Metochin road, was one of the most delightful that could be found anywhere on the coast in his opinion. The road was comparatively level, and circled around in view of the sea, offering a view, the beauty of which beggared description. Then there was the Sidney run following the picturesque Saanich coast to the end of the peninsula and returning along an entirely different and equally pretty route. A trip to Goldstream and back, although shorter than those mentioned, also was most enjoyable. But there were so many that it was impossible to specify without doing injustice to some. He could say no more than that this part of Vancouver Island offered unequalled opportunities for experiencing the joys of automobile riding.

Readers of the Times will remember that a motor tour of the Island was projected by members of the Victoria club some time ago. It was not carried out then for unavoidable reasons. The idea, however, has not been abandoned. It is proposed to hold the tour some time about Labor Day, September 3rd. According to present intentions the machines will be taken to Sidney and there transferred to a scow, which will be towed by George Courtney's launch to Cowichan Bay. Upon reaching the Cowichan valley the Victoria motorists will set out on an extensive exploration trip. They will tour all along the east coast of the Island, going as far as Nanaimo or perhaps Wellington. Dr. Garesche looks forward to one of the most enjoyable times in his experience.

There is an agitation on foot to make facilities of motoring around Victoria more a feature of the Tourist Association's advertising than has been the case heretofore. The importance of the matter, it is generally acknowledged, cannot be over-estimated because, if the beautiful drives in this locality were more widely known, there is no doubt that enthusiasts from outside points would come here in larger numbers. It is a question for the association and all citizens to take up energetically.

UNKNOWN'S SUICIDE

Body of Man Who Had Ended His Life Found by Indian.
In a lonely spot on Third avenue, and not far from the North Vancouver townsite, an Indian on Thursday afternoon made a ghastly discovery. A little way from the roadside and hidden among the bushes, he found the body of a man, whose bones were bleaching in the sun. It was evident that some three or four months ago, some man tired of life had gone to this lonely spot, and had there killed himself. A rusty revolver was found lying at his feet, and a penknife was sticking in a log close by.

Owing to the badly decomposed state of the body, identification will be extremely difficult. No one appears to have been heard of as missing from North Vancouver within the past six months, and judging from its present condition, it is not likely that the body has been lying for a longer time than that.

DESTRUCTIVE BLAZE

Quebec, July 20.—A disastrous fire broke out in Levis shortly after midnight. The damage done amounts to $25,000 or $40,000. The fire broke out in the lumber yards of Paradis, Commercial street, on the river front, at about 12.35 a. m., shortly after the passage of the Ocean Limited on the Intercolonial, and is supposed to have started from a spark from the engine. The sawmill of Paradis, the office, four other buildings, and stock of lumber, were destroyed.

SUFFERED FOR MONTHS. Operation Advocated—Saved By Pe-ru-na.
Mrs. Louis Lacombe, Hayward, Wis., writes: "I have followed your treatment as closely as I could and am now entirely well."

"We had two doctors and one said that I would have to have an operation performed before I could regain my health."

"We then decided to write you as to my condition, as I had been suffering nearly a year with severe pains and headaches at times so that I could scarcely stand up."

"Now I feel so well after a short treatment with your remedy, and am so grateful that I do not know how to express my thank."

"I thank you many times for the kind advice I have had from you."

THE NEW GRAND

Another High Class Programme Will Be Presented Next Week.
Although Manager Jamieson has presented a series of five performances since the opening of the new Grand theatre, none have pleased better than that which forms his offering for the present week, and that the opinion is general is shown by the fact that the business has been better than any week since the opening. A fact particularly pleasing to the management has been the instant appreciation shown by the public of the beauty and comfort of what is generally conceded to be the sweetest vaudeville show house on the Pacific coast, if not, indeed, west of Chicago. The average attendance already is more than double what it used to be in the old Grand, and constantly increasing, each night witnessing the visits of residents of the city.

The programme for the present week is, in every way, so agreeably surprising both at the handsome theatre and the character of the performance there they at once become regular patrons. The regular performances to-night beginning at 7.45, bring to a close the banner week since the opening, but one which is only a precursor of others to follow if Manager Jamieson's enthusiastic prophecies are to be verified, about which there is little doubt.

For next week the leading feature, and incidentally the most expressive act of its kind on the road, will be the Apollo quartet, composed of Sidney Clayton, Basil Leary, G. A. Broadbridge, second tenor, Bruce Logan, bass, and Al. Marquette, baritone. This is a sort of comedy singing act, and is a decidedly fine, up-to-date little sketch. The novelty of the idea, the newness of the sketch, the ability and brilliancy of the actors make it a pleasing variation from the ordinary singing act. Humor and pathos, love and romance, are features of the plot. The sketch is entitled "The Man Outside" and the scene is laid in a typical college boy's room. The walls are covered with pennants mementoes and other decorations so dear to all those who ever attended the higher institutions of learning. The pranks of the college boys, an irate cabman after his fare, the love of three students for the same beautiful girl and the happy ending of the affair when one of them is successful, together with the discovery that the cabman is the girl's father, gives plenty of opportunity for the young men to show their versatility and their singing.

The programme will also include the Girdelles, parlor acrobats and gymnasts; Chris. Lane, monologue comedian and extemporaneous singer; Kitty Allen, high-class vocalist and cello player; and Frederic Roberts singing the illustrated song, "The Rabbi's Daughter." Prof. Nagel's orchestra will render "The Prince of Pilsen," by Luders, as an adventure, and the moving pictures will be entitled "Boys Playing Truant."

The week will open with the machine Monday at 3 o'clock.

There are many different kinds of animals in the world that never in all their life are much as a dog of man. Among these are the kangaroo, the wallaby, and the gannet of the Far East. Many naturalists believe the only motive impelled by wild rabbits is derived from green herbage.

ADVERTISING MEN IN SESSION HERE

Instructive and Interesting Addresses by Leading Publicity Experts of the Pacific Coast at Annual Convention.

Some forty members of the Pacific Coast Advertising Men's Association are attending their annual convention now in progress in Victoria. The first session, which was held yesterday afternoon at the rooms of the Victoria Development & Tourist Association, was attended by some fifteen or sixteen delegates, whose names were published in these columns last evening. Unfortunately the president, H. B. Stabler, and a large contingent failed to catch the steamer Indanapolis and did not reach here until this morning on the steamer Princess Victoria. They therefore were unable to participate in the first business or to attend the banquet given in their honor last night by the Times Printing & Publishing Company. Those who were able to take in the trip to Shawnigan lake over the E. & N., however, enjoyed it immensely. They left at 6 o'clock, had dinner at the Strathcona hotel, and returned shortly after 11 o'clock.

The second session of the "ad men's league," as it is sometimes called, took place this morning with President Stabler in the chair. This afternoon they are the guests of the Victoria Development & Tourist Association on a trolley car ride, taking in the parliament buildings, Beacon Hill, and the forts. Tonight they will be entertained at a buffet supper and smoking concert by the Colonist Printing & Publishing Company at the Oak-top hotel. Tomorrow the visitors will spend sight-seeing. In the morning the trolley will be pressed into service to take them through the residential sections, and a launch ride to the Gorge will vibrate away the time in the afternoon until the departure of the Princess Victoria for the Sound.

Some of the Delegates.

The company now visiting Victoria include some of the brightest publicity men on the coast.

R. M. Hall, the vice-president, who was in charge yesterday in the absence of President Stabler, is advertising manager in Oregon for the Pacific. He has never disclosed his age, but rumor says that he is nearly fifty, and when in repose he would pass for forty. Last evening when the merriment was at its height he would be classed as about eighteen. Mr. Hall claims responsibility for selecting Victoria as the meeting place this year.

L. H. Mertz, the secretary, is editor of Mertz's Magazine in Los Angeles, and much of the success of the organization is due to his painstaking work. He is accompanied by Mrs. Mertz and two children.

C. C. Chapman is the "man from Cook" of the party. He has a fine voice, which he augments by the use of the megaphone, and his running reel of comment on his fellow travelers does much to enliven the trip. He is head of the Chapman Advertising Agency of Portland. His clever analysis of an advertising subject and his alertness on seeing on the kicking point of a proposition was shown in his kick on Pacific coast weather yesterday.

K. L. Bernard was here several years ago in charge of the Klittie band, and was also with Sousa's band, the "Devil's Auction" and other shows. He studied singing in comic opera, but after three years his voice gave out and he was driven into the financial end of the amusement business to the profit of both himself and his directors. He is making the "Oaks Park" at Portland a hummer, and is working up a circuit of these. He will probably see Manager Toward of the B. C. Electric before returning, and will go into the Gorge park matter with him with a view to bringing it up to first class standard as an amusement park. Mr. Bernard is raconteur of exceptional cleverness.

Mr. Merrick, of Seattle, is the publicity man for the Alaska-Yukon exhibition to be held in Seattle in 1909. He "made good" as publicity man for the Lewis & Clark exposition, and hypnotized so many newspapers into using his films that Seattle annexed him for their show.

E. Held, advertising agent of Seattle, has a serious charge hanging over his head. He mistook the Marcellaise for the National Anthem and insisted on calling up the whole company to do honor to the British nation. He was momentarily suspected of Socialist leanings and narrowly escaped penalization.

Robt. A. Read is head of the Read Advertising Agency in Los Angeles. He is said to have been the original "Sunny Jim" of Force fame, and looks the part.

B. F. Dasant, of the Portland General Electric Company, is the personification of good humor and solid ability combined. He is a vocalist whose high voice has a weird beauty all their own.

Frederick Scottford, the big officer of the Quoin Club, is one of the capital figures of the association. He has 20,000,000 readers for his copy in the leading American magazines (about thirty of them are represented in the Quoin Club).

Opening Session.

Rinaldo Hall, vice-president of the Pacific Coast Advertising Men's Association, and advertising agent of the Union Pacific at Portland, Oregon, suggested the chair yesterday afternoon at the first session of the annual convention of that organization. The meeting was held at the rooms of the Victoria Development & Tourist Association and there were in attendance fifteen or more delegates, the majority having missed the steamer Indanapolis at Seattle. Among that number was A. B. Stabler, the president, for whose absence Chairman Hall apologized in fitting terms upon opening the proceedings.

His Worship Mayor Morley in extending a welcome to the visitors offered them the freedom of the city in unqualified terms. He did not know what Victoria was to the most congratulated in being given the opportunity to entertain what he believed to be the essence of the brain and intelligence of the Pacific Coast or the association members in gathering together in what he knew to be the most beautiful city of the northwest (Enthusiastic applause). It was his hope that they would gather a sufficient number of bright ideas while in session to enable them to go back to their respective homes and make money enough to sustain them in peace and comfort in Victoria, commonly called "the beautiful city." (Laughter and applause.) There was only one sad feature to the event. There generally was such a side to all things in this life. That was that the delegates would have to leave their present surroundings and go back to a humdrum commercial existence. (More hearty and enthusiastic applause.) In conclusion he assured everybody to make themselves just as much at home as citizens. (Enthusiastic applause.)

Chairman Hall expressed the opinion that he was voicing the sentiment of the meeting when he said that the whole-hearted welcome extended to them here was the best that could be given. One of the dreams of his life had been to see Victoria and behold it was realized. (Laughter.) For months and months he had known Mr. Cuthbert, Victoria's representative. When first meeting him he had proceeded to point out the many charms of the city, and Mr. Cuthbert had asked him whether he had ever seen Victoria. Giving a negative reply he had been told that he didn't and couldn't realize what genuine scenic beauty was until he visited that part of the northwest. Now he knew what Mr. Cuthbert meant. People were beginning to travel northwards, and he added a year had never dawned with brighter prospects for the Pacific coast than that of 1906. (Applause.)

Frederick E. Scofield, the representative of the New York Quoin Club on the coast, was called upon for the first address. He opened by remarking that he represented thirty of the magazines of America. His mission to the West was to assist in building up the country from an advertising standpoint. On arriving he found the business men doing this themselves. Any man coming in among them and attempting to tell them how to go about the work in a domineering way would have immediately been discredited. He spoke of the extent of the district which he had originally been commissioned to cover. It was so large that he could not possibly do it thoroughly. Presently, therefore, he had confined his endeavors largely to Washington and Oregon. Proceeding to give instances of the work in individual cities he referred to Seattle. There the business men some months ago had set out to raise $40,000 to advertise their city. They had succeeded in obtaining one-third of the amount before the San Francisco disaster. Afterwards their resources had been taxed in assisting in the relief of those rendered destitute as a result of the catastrophe. Nothing further had been done. It was a campaign had been started some time ago to raise the same sum—$40,000. It was claimed that the amount had been secured, but $10,000 perhaps was stage money. (Laughter.) The results achieved, however, were good. (Applause.)

"What I am trying to do for the Pacific coast" was the subject he had been given to speak upon. He had been thinking over it, and really he didn't know. The problem was one of the first magnitude. Some time ago he appeared before the Quoin Club, and was asked how he proposed to conduct his campaign in the West, and an estimate of the time it would take to achieve perceptible result. His methods, he replied, would be reasonable ones, and the time to make things move from one to three years. Therefore, he came West absolutely unhampered, willing and anxious to advocate and assist in all means of reputable publicity. Although he represented magazines, he did not allow himself to be biased in giving advice on that account. Often when asked for an opinion he had recommended the use of daily newspaper advertising. (Applause.)

"What have you on the Pacific coast which the magazines could help exploit?" he asked. The natural answer would be "everything." In his investigations he had been particularly impressed with the tourist business. As far as the northwest was concerned it was practically in its infancy. Southern California had received a staggering blow as a result of the San Francisco earthquake and fire. There now was only 30 per cent. of the travel that had been there. There had been previously. But there was no reason for it as the summer resorts were not closed, and he observed that followed that the scenery of the northwest was grand, that of the Olympics and Cascades being an incalculable asset from a tourist standpoint.

There also were the lands of the northwest to take into consideration. The farmer was needed, and there was no surer way of reaching the public at large in this direction than through the magazines. The returns were dollar for dollar. He claimed that the publicity that country that there had had a circulation of 20,000,000 per month, which meant that every man, woman and child of the United States and Canada had an opportunity to read and "ad" one and a half times a month. The speaker then presented another large field. Looking about the room he noticed that of salmon canning. Capital was slow to take this and others up in an enterprising way. There was no reason why a first-class brand should not be placed upon the market and made to command double the price that was the case at present. He couldn't shut his eyes and name one brand of salmon, while he could off-hand enumerate five of soap. He referred to the prune industry of California and Oregon, and expressed regret that the growers in the two states could not be got to work together in their own interests. Through his efforts an organization had been formed, and he hoped for better results in the future. (Applause.)

Continuing, the speaker stated that at his headquarters from forty to two hundred and fifty inquiries were received from all over the continent as to conditions of the West. All applicants who appeared to be in earnest received a direct reply from himself, and all got an answer of some kind. The lists were forwarded to different tourist agencies, railways, etc., in the northwest in order that they might do their best to induce colonists to come to the country. Herbert Victoria had been neglected in this regard. He was sorry to say, but he had promised Mr. Cuthbert that he should get the lists in his future. (Enthusiastic applause.) This, he added, would give some idea of what the Quoin Club was trying to do for the northwest. It stood for publicity, and he as its representative was willing to go anywhere within the bounds of his district to talk business—talking was one of his favorite pastimes.

Concluding, he spoke of the inadequate idea prevailing in the East of the extent of the West. The cities along the coast were bound to grow into large centres of civilization. The population of the world doubled every thirty years, so that if westerners went to sleep for that space of time they would wake up and find themselves twice as large as before. (Laughter.) But the West offered health and happiness to the intending settler, and every city on the coast would grow by leaps and bounds. It was up to them. (Enthusiastic applause.)

"Hands Across the Straits" was the subject of Herbert Cuthbert's address, the next called for. He stated that nothing gave him greater pleasure than to welcome the representatives of the association to Victoria. He was proud to extend the hand across the straits. (Applause.) And the hand had been grasped in a gratifying hearty manner. No matter where he had called in his travels, on behalf of Victoria, he had received courteous treatment.

Referring to the local society, he said that the maximum amount spent annually in making public the many charms of the place was $7,500. He did not think that any other organization could have achieved more so economically.

The Advertisers' Association, he remarked, was gathered together for the first time in its history under the Union Jack. (Loud applause.) There was subject for thought in that statement, something deeper than mere commercialism. The hand was stretched not only across the straits, but across the seas from the United States to Great Britain. He mentioned Great Britain's support of the States at the time of the war with Spain, and then remarked that while war brought about the desired results, "Peace brought victories no less renewed than war." One of the greatest victories the advertising men could achieve would be the carrying of the glad tidings to Eastern Canada, that there are paradises in the West of which they have never dreamed. He went on to compare the conditions of life and finished with a comment on the good feeling and brotherly fellowship which exists between the advertisers of the Pacific Coast, now that the hand had been "extended across the straits." (Applause.)

B. J. Dasant, advertising agent of the Portland Electric Company, then read an interesting paper on "Electric Light to Secure Publicity."

Louis G. LeSage, of LeSage Bros., Los Angeles, gave an address on "Retail Shoe Advertising." In his introductory remarks he said: "It has been a round of pleasure and sight-seeing for the three members from the great southwest coast the past few weeks. We are all glad to be here. I would say to you, Mayor, that this is certainly the most beautiful country, next to Southern California, that I have ever seen, and that country is hard to beat."

Continuing, he said: "I am not an advertising man, although present here at an advertising men's convention; nor do I pretend to know the intricacies of the advertising business. But as a member of the firm of LeSage Bros. I am an advertiser—I might say an enthusiastic advertiser—in a small way. Because advertising has been a strong force in building up our shoe business—and I consider it as much a member of the sales department as any half dozen salespeople upon the floor.

Advertising in a shoe store successfully is not the simple matter that it appears on the surface. A shoe store has but one source of profit, one line to draw from. When a customer comes in, but one line of goods is there for him to buy—there are no dozen and one things to sell and help pay the advertising expense. Another point—the margin of profit on shoes which are naturally sold through advertising is small—necessarily so.

All of which works toward the one conclusion—the advertising appropriation of a shoe store must be closely limited—and its expenditures must be shrewdly determined to bring direct, satisfactory results.

"I can see but two kinds of shoe stores that can be built for permanent profit in the larger cities—the shoe store that caters to a class and the popular shoe store that reaches out for volume of business. The store of the common people, where they can get 'good shoes cheap.' The latter is the kind of store with which I am associated, and that is the slogan under which we do 'business'—good shoes cheap. And I believe that the popular store is the successful, healthy, business-provided, of course, it is wisely conducted and its owners make no promises which they cannot make good.

"While a business of this class can build for itself a large following, it must be advertised strongly and systematically in order to win any large measure of success and to maintain its position in the business world. Its directors must be live shoe men and live merchandisers, and its advertising policy must be outlined and handled by competent, aggressive advertising men. We have been five years in business in Los Angeles, and have seen our sales increase from less than $1,000 a month to a figure exceeding $100,000 a year. Some of this growth has been due to the growth of Los Angeles, some to the natural increase that accompanies any business that gets into its stride. But aggressive advertising, backed by honest values, has been the vital element in our success. We never stop working, and neither does our advertising man. We do not believe much in 'class shoes.' We sell a shoe for as little as $1.00, and we regard its name or value in the public estimation. We use small spaces in our advertising, well positioned, and our announcements go directly to the point: no general publicity or other space wasters will do for us. And we get results—sell plenty of shoes to plenty of people. It's a simple matter, after all—good values, well advertised, backed by good salesmanship when the people reach the store. That's the shoe business, or any other business, in a nutshell. And every part of it belongs—fits into every part of the business presented."

Mr. Chapman, of Portland, the first spoke of the weather conditions. He pointed out that the temperature here combined the ideal both in the summer and winter months. He went into statistics to explain his statement, which was received with enthusiasm and applause.

After a vote of thanks to the president and directors of the Pacific Club for extending the privileges of that institution to members while here, the meeting adjourned.

CONSTRUCTING CULVERTS.

Workmen Getting Things in Shape For Filling in Bridges Along Island Railway.

The C. P. R. is spending a large amount of money along the line of the E. & N. railway. As before stated in the Times an expenditure of between $50,000 and $70,000 is contemplated during the summer, and already a considerable amount of work has been done. A large gang of men are preparing the watercourses to remove danger when the high bridges are filled in. The water will be carried under the fillings in heavy concrete culverts, and these are now under construction. As soon as this is finished gravel trains will be placed in commission and fill in the bridges before fall.

Nothing is known definitely regarding the extension of terminal accommodations. While the present congestion must be relieved at an early date the plans are being prepared at headquarters and construction cannot commence until these have been decided upon. The resident engineer in Victoria has no information on the subject.

A rumor was current on the street this morning that the E. & N. would be double tracked soon. Inquiry was made at the company's office and a plain statement was made that such a work was not contemplated for many years.

THE SALVATION ARMY.

Illustrated Lecture by Brigadier Smeeton, 8 o'clock, Special Services To-Morrow.

An illustrated lecture on missionary work among the British Columbia and Alaska Indians will be given by Brigadier Smeeton, provincial officer for British Columbia and the Yukon division of the Salvation Army, in the local army hall to-night, commencing at 8 o'clock. The brigadier will arrive from Vancouver on the steamer Princess Victoria this evening, and will remain over Sunday here.

Special services will be conducted tomorrow at 11 a. m., 7 and 7:30 p. m. At these services the brigadier will be assisted by Ensign Bloss, of Vancouver, and Adjutant Byers and wife, of Calgary, who are on their way to visit San Francisco. Brigadier Smeeton is very much interested in the work of the army in this city, and during his visit will be making a special investigation for the purpose of ascertaining what can be done towards furthering it. Capt. Fearis, who a few weeks ago took charge of the local corps, reports that he is meeting with every encouragement.

Well-Founded Popularity. It is not the volume of business written in any one or more years but the business retained on the company's books which shows successful management. Hence the more popular a company becomes the fewer will be the policies discontinued in proportion to the total business in force. During the last decade "the business retained" by the Mutual Life Assurance Company of Canada has increased to a greater extent than the home business of any other Canadian Company, as a reference to the Dominion Blue Books will show. If you are contemplating taking out an insurance policy don't fail to obtain the rates and plans of the most popular and successful Canadian company—The Mutual Life of Canada. A. B. ### TO INSPECT WORK AT PRINCE RUPERT

J. H. BACON ON HIS WAY TO THE NORTH

Harbor Engineer of Grand Trunk Pacific is on Coast - Conditions at Terminus.

G. T. Pacific, has gone north to the site of the terminal city of Prince Rupert. It was expected that Mr. Bacon would come to Victoria before proceeding to Kalien Island. In that case his trip north would not have been undertaken until about the 21st of the month.

Engineer Pillsbury of the G. T. Pacific has been at Prince Rupert for some time in connection with the terminal work. Mr. Bacon will inspect all that has been done and will likely remain at the embryo city for some weeks at least.

In connection with the choice of Prince Rupert as the terminal point it is said that the engineers of the company, including Mr. Baker, made a very careful selection. The site of the terminal is said to combine in a strange way most of the advantages desired. It was chosen because in the minds of the engineers it excelled every other point available.

The result of the work now in progress is more and more convincing the engineers that the selection was a good one. The townsite is proving itself an excellent one according to information received from the north. The harbor facilities are also unexcelled, providing accommodation for all classes of vessels.

Speaking of the climatic conditions of the new city, A. E. Green, Inspector of Indian schools, who is a frequent visitor to the north, says that it is most enjoyable. During certain months in the spring and late autumn there is considerable rainfall, but the summer and winter are delightful. Early fall, including August and often September, the conditions are ideal, he says. Following the fall and early winter rains the months of February and March are dry and extremely enjoyable. After a few weeks of spring rains the summer opens with charming weather which continues through the months of June, July and often into October.

Reports from the men engaged in harbor survey and in connection with the terminal work is to the effect that they are enjoying their life there and are well pleased with conditions.

ACREAGE AREAS HARD TO OBTAIN

MANY INQUIRIES, BUT PROPERTY IS SCARCE

Local Real Estate Market Very Active and Many Parcels Change Hands.

The chief feature of the real estate market this week is the demand for acreage that cannot be met. Inquiries have numbered several hundred, as evidenced by a tour of the real estate offices; but the small number of parcels available makes choice practically impossible. It is practically a case of take this or nothing. A couple of months ago several members of the board of trade expressed the hope that some of the large holdings would be donated, and instructed the Hudson's Bay Company farm on Cordova bay. It was stated such a subdivision would be endorsed by local officials of the company, but up to date nothing further has been heard of the proposal.

There is a great reticence among real estate men regarding their calls. Some of them deem an air of mystery is productive of good results. They cannot understand the force of the phrase, "It's a good thing, push it along," and imagine that uncommunicativeness is business sense. The Times proposes to get the sales, as far as possible each week. At the real estate men retain their attitude of reticence no surprise need be manifested if particulars that otherwise, in courtesy to them, would be withheld, are published.

Among this week's sales the most important is that of the Heathorn block through the agency of A. W. Bridgman to the B. C. Permanent Loan and Savings Company. The consideration was $25,000. At present the ground floor is occupied by the Hicks-Lovick Piano Company and J. Wenger, while the upstairs is used as offices. The loan company will, as soon as possible, vacate their present location on the "other side" of Government street and move into the property just purchased.

Capt. John Thompson, the local pilot, purchased through A. St. G. Flint, within the past two or three days the last available acreage with water front on the Gorge road. It is situated near the Garesche property, and a residence will soon be erected. Another new resident in that vicinity is Guy F. Pownall, lately of Fort Steele, who bought a fine piece of property near Craigflower road, has just moved into the house erected from plans designed by Thomas D. Sedger.

Several other acreage properties have also been sold this week. Pemberton and Sons disposed of two pieces near Mount Tolmie to Winnipeg people, and also an acre at Oak Bay to a party from the same city. The firm mentioned also sold a first class lot on Dallas road. H. H. Jones & Co. also report the acreage market active. During the past week they sold a piece of land on Cudbore Bay road for $7,000, another on Douglas street, near the city limits, for $2,500, and this morning concluded the deal for another area in the same vicinity for $4,000.

Grant & Conyers, among other properties, sold a lot on St. Charles street to E. C. Moss to a local man, who will probably build. The same firm disposed of twenty acres on Holland avenue, near the end of the Arm, to A. K. Munro, president of the Victoria Book & Stationery Company.

Several properties in Saanich changed hands recently. Robert Clarke, of Keating, sold 24 acres of his unimproved property back of the railway to Thomas Tubman, of this city, for about $1,500. The purchaser will build a house at once. A new arrival from the north, named Patterson, has bought the Crowther farm near Shady creek for $5,200. He will bring out his family from England and live there.

Vancouver Island abounds in picturesque scenery, but out of the many charming spots few excel in majestic beauty the head of Saanich inlet, generally known as Goldstream arm, and very striking to any one who visits the beautiful stretch of water and land, which invariably makes visitors stand in silent admiration as they gaze at the pine clad hills, which like "motionless torrents, silent cataracts," roll grandly down to the very edge of the blue waters. Doubtless the lack of transport facilities is somewhat to blame. The opportunity presented by the St. John's excursion on Saturday, July 28th, should therefore be taken advantage of by all Victorians and visitors who desire to know more about Vancouver Island.

GENERAL BOOTH AND HIS EMIGRATION SCHEME

No one may be received in that little office of the commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army without feeling that emotion which comes to one in the presence of real greatness. Justice has not yet been given to the extraordinary personality of this man. The great work that has been done and is being done by the Salvation Army is now fully acknowledged by the English nation, in spite of all criticism and prejudice of its methods and religious influences.

This is the first and strongest impression of him—that he is a man with a hearty sense of humor, and a love of laughter. He has all the wit of George Bernard Shaw and all the humanity of John Bright.

BENEDICT BANTLY ON GERMAN MUSIC

Germany is the greatest centre in the world for instrumental music, says Benedict Bantly, the young Victoria musician who has just completed a four-year term of study in Leipzig conservatory.

The present highly developed state of modern German music dates practically from the time of Johann Sebastian Bach, continued Mr. Bantly.

It will be interesting to note that he composed "Messiah" in the short space of 24 days. He produced it for the first time in Dublin in 1742.

Johann Sebastian Bach is looked upon—and very justly so—as the "father of modern music."

Through the untiring efforts of Mozart, many treasures were revealed to the musical world in the bringing to light of numbers of Bach's unpublished manuscripts, thereby helping Germany to

A Full Appreciation of this great master. In a similar manner have many of his compeers perpetuated their sense of obligation to one who is almost unknown to the general public compared with the popularity of some of his fellow composers.

Bach's great glory as a composer came to light after his death, perhaps due to the fact of his being so modest and diffident, and we can safely conclude that his compositions were not properly brought before the public during his lifetime.

Amongst Bach's great compositions are found his "Preludes and Fugues" for organ, which are perhaps beyond the comprehension of all but learned musicians, the "Passion of St. Matthew" for two choruses and two orchestras, one of the most admired of all compositions, and which was not produced till a century after it was written.

His "Inventions" were written to amuse his children. Many children and even grown up children have found them a source of great tantalization, and have perhaps wished that Bach had become a father, or else sought to amuse them by some other means.

and Laplace the mathematician for mathematicians, but we can safely call Bach the Musician for Musicians.

Bach's contemporary to the modern Englishman is George Frederick Handel, spell bound before the piano during his lifetime. Chiefly through the exertions of Mozart, Haydn and Beethoven, the musical world was made acquainted with the masterpieces of the grand musician.

His principal achievement in life was in England many evidences of Handel's greatness and popularity are witnessed. Paintings and busts of this great minstrel are scattered everywhere throughout the land.

able to dispense with all scenic and stage effects. He was one of the finest operatic composers of the time, the rival of Bach as an instrumental composer and performer on the harpsichord and organ.

The unanimous verdict of the whole musical world is that no one has ever equalled him in completeness, range of effect, elevation and variety of conception, and sublimity in the treatment of sacred music.

Our next subject, and living during 40 years of Handel's life, is Christoph Willibald Gluck. Born 1714 in Weidenwang, in Franconia, he died in Vienna in 1787.

Handel, his contemporary, spoke of him with the deepest admiration and called him the giant of music. Haydn said: "Whoever understands me knows that I owe much to Sebastian Bach, that I have studied him thoroughly and well, and that I acknowledge him only as my model."

Through the untiring efforts of Mozart, many treasures were revealed to the musical world in the bringing to light of numbers of Bach's unpublished manuscripts, thereby helping Germany to expression, he anticipated their important reform, and in his musical creations we see all that is best in what is called the new school.

Now comes "Papa Haydn." Thus did Mozart speak of his foster-father, in music. Joseph Haydn was born in Rohrau, Austria, in 1732. He died in Vienna in 1809, the year of Chopin's birth.

Let us now pass on to Mozart, Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart was born in Salzburg in 1756, where it was his privilege to visit the house of his birth and play upon his spinet during one of his vacation rambles. What a and veneration came over me as I walked up the narrow steps that led to his apartments. Often have I thought after that visit how a genius like Mozart would have felt to play upon one of our modern instruments instead of such a feeble creation as the spinet upon which he had to perform.

Since this is only a cursory glance at most prominent German composers, it is impossible to dwell at any length on any of these masters, so as to do them justice in any wise.

Wagner, the God of Germany, comes next in the order of merit, but in that of time, Richard Wagner was born at Leipzig in 1813. Wagner, as music was considered to be the of modern thought, until Richard Strauss has founded the world with his still more modern creations. One of the main features in the Wagner music is his wonderful use of the orchestra. This is no longer an accompaniment to the singer, but translates the passion of the play into a grand symphony, running parallel and commingling with the vocal music.

Richard Strauss is still in his prime, being born in Munich in 1864. Amongst his best known works may be mentioned "Till Eulenspiegel" (1895), "Heldenleben," or "Life of a Hero" (1899) and the "Domestic Symphony," which depicts his own family life.

wonderful works, are amongst the most beloved of all musical creations. Had he written only one of them, his name would have been immortalized.

Robert Schumann was born in 1810 in Zwickau in Saxony, and died near Bonn in 1855. Schumann is the most romantic of all German composers. His songs are amongst the most beautiful ever written, and his symphonies are always listened to with delight.

Robert Franz, the last of those three great song writers, was born in Halle in 1815, and died in the same town in 1892. He left about 400 songs to perpetuate his memory, of which about 50 are masterpieces.

Now we come to Chopin. Frederick Chopin was born near Warsaw in 1809 and died in Paris in 1849. Perhaps the bringing in of Chopin amongst German composers will require a word of explanation.

Was So Enthusiastic over the singing that he did not notice the fact that his cane was resting on the foot of his neighbor, and supporting his whole weight, until the Saxons in question wished to get up and go out, but assured his companion that he would bring his foot back again in a moment if he chooses to put his cane on the ground.

An amusing tale is also told of a doctor who took one of his patients to a performance of "Rienzi," assuring him that it would cure him of his deafness. During the first act neither of them said anything, but in the second the deaf man commenced to hear.

Commencing with "Rienzi," through "The Flying Dutchman," "Lohengrin," "Tannhauser," "The Mastersingers of Nuremberg," "Tristan and Isolde," the student is taken down to the Niebelungen King, which comprises the culmination of Wagner's efforts.

Now, in leaving Richard Wagner to reach Richard Strauss we must pause a moment to look in at the shrine of Johannes Brahms. Brahms, Beethoven and Brahms are the strongest links in the chain of modern music.

Johannes Brahms was born at Hamburg in 1833. He is recognized by musicians as being the Titan of modern composition, in his power of Peter Frehalikowsky is also closely connected with German music, although a native of Russia. He was born in 1840 and died in 1893. His symphonies and piano concertos will render him famous for many years to come.

And still another whom we can just claim is Edward Grieg, who was educated in the Leipzig conservatory. Born in Bergen, Norway, in 1842, he is still most active and makes frequent visits to Leipzig.

And now comes Richard Strauss, the culmination of all modern musical thought and research. When Wagner came forth as he did the world was indignant at his freedom and determination to break away from all known rules.

makers in Germany at least. It is really an immense pleasure to observe the enthusiasm displayed over a Wagnerian performance. Many of the operas last five hours when given in their entirety. In those cases the curtain rises at 6 p.m. and towards 11 the finale is reached. The real opera enthusiast there goes armed with a pair of opera glasses, and glasses would be a more appropriate term for the Germans as a nation are not good at articles of adornments only, but believe in having a share of utility in combination with the daintiness of the article in question.

CARNIVAL AND LIFEBOAT EXHIBITION AT GORGE

Bioscopic Programme For Next Week Includes Startling Novelties—"The Sleeping Beauty."

Although it is as yet too early to make more than passing reference, it is probable that next month will see two important events in the programme of these in line with the company's determination to provide entertainment for summer visitors and citizens. It is planned to give during August a two or three-day aquatic carnival, similar to those that have been so immensely popular at English Bay.

There has been no more interesting news for weeks than the announcement of the engagement of J. Austen Chamberlain, M. P., to the daughter of Col. Dundas, a retired staff officer. The idea that "Mr. Austen" has at last capitulated to the girl after reaching his 34th year is fascinating to men and overwhelming to women. He is the most popular and most reticent of all the younger men in public life. In the first place, he is exactly like his eminent father. He has the same clear cut, finely chiselled face, the keen eye, the firm, small mouth, the inevitable smile and the ever-present orchid in his coat-tail.

He is the exception to the rule that a great man cannot have a great son, for "Mr. Austen" is exceedingly great in many respects. He has been the best Chancellor of the Exchequer that this country has known for many generations. He was an ideal Postmaster-General, and while he falls short of his father's exceptional ability as a fighting man in debate, he is still so far in front of his contemporaries that he may be called first-class. Aside from this, he is modest, sedate, studious, industrious and considerate; and his father simply adores him. It is almost pathetic to watch the elder statesman, when the younger is on his feet in the House of Commons.

The old warrior, scarred by many fights with the great men of the Victorian parliaments, sits up straight, never allowing his eyes to leave the adored object. "I congratulate my right honorable friend the member for Edgworthstown," says Mr. Chamberlain, in referring to his son (names are never mentioned in the House except by the Speaker) "he wishes a member to know that he is in disgrace, and "Mr. Austen" refers to his parent as "my right honorable friend the member for West Birmingham."

There are people here who believe that a man's usefulness as a politician is impaired by marriage, and that the member for Edgworthstown will not be so great a man after the ceremony at the church, but I am inclined to scoff at the idea. There are and have been so many great men in politics whose married life belies it. Mr. Gladstone's wife was responsible for much of his power, for she looked after his engagements and generally sponsored him. Lord Beaconsfield, the success of his career, was married; so were Palmerston and Salisbury.

On the other hand, the doubters point to the experience of Lord Melbourne, to Charles James Fox, to Mr. Parnell, to Mr. Balfour, as proof of their contention. Parliamentary life, like journalism, certainly takes a man from his home circle more than is usual with men who live a life of the public.

For the week opening on Monday yet further extensions are promised in the bioscopic programme. This will include two feature series—the one being a reproduction of the English painter's "The Coal Man's Beauty," and the other a film of travel from Christia to North Cape, an exceedingly interesting and timely series, as this is the season for the coal trade.

THE OAR. THE N. P. A. O. REGATTA.

The latest edition of Victoria's famous "Big Four" leave to-morrow for the Indianapolis for Nelson, where it is believed they will again be successful in landing the senior four. They will meet the Portland and Seattle crews at the latter city and travel with them to the Kootenay capital. Whatever the result may be, the J. B. A. O. representatives carry with them the best wishes of the city and have done all in the way of faithful training and hard work that could be accomplished. While the change in dates somewhat spoiled the continuity of training and prevented them being accompanied by many supporters, they will leave in good spirits and determined to uphold the rowing supremacy of the capital.

TO-DAY'S REGATTA.

This afternoon at 2:15 the regular monthly regatta of the J. B. A. O. is being held on the 1 1/2 mile course running from Coffin Island to the club house. Eight crews have entered and all the heats so far have been "hotly contested." The many club members present are taking advantage of the opportunity to wish the big four, who leave for Nelson to-morrow, good luck on their journey. All the crews given in last night's Times are in attendance, and the large crowd is watching the contest with great interest.

LACROSSE. MATCH AT WESTMINSTER.

Despite the earnest efforts of the management of the Victoria Lacrosse Club, there is great apathy displayed among active players. Eleven men left this morning to play a championship match at New Westminster, it being impossible to secure a full team. Under the circumstances it is hardly to be expected they can win, but they show a laudable endeavor to preserve interest in the sport by this fighting against adverse circumstances. The team that went over consists of Campbell, Crocker, Mason, Clark, Temple, Stevens, Baker, Fairall, Campbell, Cessford and Morris.

CRICKET. CLUB MATCH.

A cricket match between two teams from the local club is being played this afternoon at the Jubilee hospital grounds. The eleven are captained by Q. D. H. Warden and L. O. Garnett. They were given in full in yesterday's issue.

GAME AT NELSON.

The Nelson club and a team of Kootenay ranchers met yesterday at Nelson, when the visitors were defeated by 100 runs. Arrangements are already under way for selecting the Kootenay team to play in the big Victoria tournament that commences August 20th.

LAWN TENNIS. TOURNAMENT OPENS MONDAY.

There has been a large entry for the annual handicap tournament of the Victoria Lawn Tennis Club that opens on Monday at 10:30 a. m. at the Belcher street courts. Competitors are absolutely required to be on time, and those absent will be scratched. Light refreshments will be served by the ladies. No charge for entrance will be made, and the general public is invited to attend. Monday's fixtures are as follows:

A NEW "WIRELESS" SYSTEM.

A new system of wireless electrical communication that is admirably suited for connection over distances of a few miles, and that possesses the advantage of cheapness, reliability, and secrecy in a degree that probably exceeds all the other systems, has just emerged from some very successful trials in Germany. The experiments have been carried out by Herr F. Ruhmer on the Wannsee lake, near Berlin. A projector, as it is called, which consists of a large parabolic reflector, forms the sending apparatus. In the centre of the projector is an ordinary arc electric light of the usual pattern. But on the current that forms the arc is "superposed" another current that is frequently interrupted by a mechanical interruptor. This current can also be broken at other intervals by means of an ordinary Morse telegraph key. The receiver consists of another large parabolic reflector that catches the luminous rays and on its surface is placed a selenium cell which is in the circuit of two telephone receivers. The broken current of the sending station causes in the selenium cell of the receiver variations of resistance that result in a humming noise in the receiver telephones. This humming is cut out by a Morse key, and the long and short signals of the Morse code, and convey thus the message sent out by the sender. The receiver resembles very closely the instrument in common use in army telegraphy which is known as the "buzzet," and which is reputed to be so telegraphic that it will work through a long break in the telegraph wire. (This is largely a "soldier's yarn.")

The new system offers great advantages for such purposes as putting into communication a lighthouse and the shore, in all weathers, for taking up camp, ships at anchor, islands at sea, and great distances from the mainland, and all such purposes. It possesses the advantage that the apparatus can also be applied to telephony. But in transmitted the different acoustic qualities of the different vowels. In the telegraph system, however, the acoustic quality of every signal is equal, and therefore no uncertainty arises. The pitch of the sound can be regulated by the frequency of the mechanical interruption of the sending current.

Today's Meeting.

The convention of the Pacific Coast Advertising Men's Association was supplemented this morning by the following members: C. V. White, Seattle; President H. P. Stabler, Yuba City, Calif.; F. H. Mantor, Seattle; W. J. Williams, Seattle; Geo. E. Hillmich, Seattle; C. P. Conant, Seattle; J. B. Best, Everett; Mr. Whitley, Seattle; Mr. Butler, Seattle.

The business this morning developed a little misunderstanding in which F. E. Scottford, of the Quoin Club, played an important part. The little trouble was happily settled and all passed off very smoothly in the end.

Upon opening the meeting the secretary-treasurer, H. M. Mertz, of Los Angeles, presented his annual report, showing the financial condition of the association. The report was adopted. A committee on resolutions was appointed.

An amendment to the constitution was carried changing the regular meetings of the association to semi-annual instead of quarterly. The meeting will be held in January and July.

Letters of regret were read from members who were not able to attend, and from sister organizations throughout the continent.

Joe Mitchell Chappell wrote from Chicago expressing regret at having been recalled to Boston, which made it impossible to be in Victoria.

C. V. White, of Seattle, called attention to the fact that the convention of the association often lacked drawing cards. He suggested that a committee should be formed to endeavor to get some of the well known advertising experts to attend the convention.

He suggested the names of Prof. Walter D. Scott, Mr. Lord, of Lord & Thomas, and Geo. P. Rowell. It was a long trip to travel from one extreme to the other and the members should feel that it was an educational trip.

F. H. Mantor, of Seattle, while he was not prepared to discriminate against Pacific Coast men, would like, however, to have the fullest advantage taken of some eastern advertising men who would give benefits to the western men.

R. W. Hall agreed with this, but thought that such a man, if brought out, should not come with any connection by which he would solicit advertising business in opposition to members on the coast. He did not approve of the action of Mr. Mann, of Chicago, coming west and taking advantage of his visit to get business here.

Mr. Chapman advocated such a visitor making a tour of the principal centres.

Secretary Mertz pointed out that there were difficulties in building up an advertising business on the Pacific Coast. He was opposed to making a radical move. He thought it wise to bring an eastern man to give instruction untrammelled. He did not favor going on record as announcing that all business done on the coast should be placed in the hands of Pacific Coast men.

Making reference to Mr. Mann's visit, he believed that gentleman had through certain influences been assured of the business he done before he came west.

Emil Held, of Portland, said the Pacific Coast advertising was just beginning. He suggested that any meeting which would arouse jealousy. He did not think that the Pacific Coast advertisers should fear the eastern agencies. This personal feeling should be obliterated.

Mr. Hall said that he wished to go on record as advocating that the association should bring men out to lecture before the Pacific Coast association who were independent of any advertising schemes and soliciting business while here.

Mr. Chapman regretted the phase which the discussion had taken. He did not believe in the association excluding men who were out from the east on business. There had been instances where experts from the east had taken advantage of every courtesy extended to them in pushing business.

F. E. Scottford, of the Quoin Agency, said he wished it understood that he appeared before the association not at his own request but by invitation. He had put in a proposal for membership. He wished now to withdraw that.

the advertising business on the Coast. Resolved, that the Pacific Coast Advertising Men's Association in conformity with the action of the Quoin Club in placing a representative on this Coast. Resolved further, that this association appreciates the courtesy extended to this territory in giving it some $30,000 worth of publicity without charge.

Resolved, that this association as a body do everything in its power to assist the work of Frederick E. Scottford, representative of the Quoin Club on the Coast, and that it urge its individual members to do likewise.

Resolved further, that the secretary of this association be instructed to send a copy of this resolution to the secretary of the Quoin Club and to Mr. Frederick E. Scottford, and to spread the same on the minutes of the association.

Resolved, that Frederick E. Scottford and all other representatives are welcome on the Coast and have our hearty support.

On motion of Mr. Mantor those who had taken part in the discussion were appointed a committee to wait upon Mr. Scottford and request his return immediately to the meeting.

The following resolution was carried: That a committee of three be appointed to secure a speaker to address our next meeting, said speaker's expenses being paid by the association.

The committee appointed to carry this out was named as J. H. Hall, of Portland, B. A. Reed, of Los Angeles, and F. H. Mantor, of Seattle.

R. M. Hall read a paper on the Benefits of the Lewis and Clark Exposition in attracting visitors and settlers to the West. In his paper it was set forth that as a result of the campaign of education begun two years before the exposition, the O. R. & N. Company between June 1st and October 15th, 1905, brought the following passengers from Oregon, Washington, and Idaho: $3,647; from Montana, Dakota, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, and Arizona, 17,101; from Missouri river points, 48,856; making a total of 149,614. Mr. Hall concluding, said: "The exposition was a success in every particular; no year in the history of the city of Portland has begun so auspiciously."

He suggested that the following be adopted as the one following the exposition: real estate values have tripled; rentals were never so profitable; building permits were never so large in number; the population has increased beyond all expectations; the city has dressed and cleaned up and taken new life; the pessimistic prognosticators are on the other side of the fence; the singing the same happy song and working shoulder to shoulder with the same aim to make Portland all God-land it should be, the most beautiful and progressive city on the coast, ever ready to extend a helping hand to its sister cities in the north and to the sister cities on the south in order that they too may move forward on the great wave of prosperity set in motion by the Lewis and Clark exposition, which was your fair as well as our own."

A paper prepared by Mr. Constantine, of Seattle, upon the "Best Plan for Promoting a Manufactured Article" was read.

Mr. Austin on "What Constitutes Newspaper Circulation," said that with advertisers the circulation was not so much the number of papers printed as the results obtained. As a result of the missionary work of the American Advertiser Association a great deal of information had gone out.

Just after Mr. Austin began the committee returned with Mr. Scottford, who was received with applause.

Mr. Scottford said after the explanation of the committee he found that he had misinterpreted the remarks. He regretted, therefore, his act in going out and having two drinks all alone. He asked to be reinstated in his application for membership.

The meeting sang "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," with "Who? Scottford." The chairman then Mr. Scottford took all round for talking two alone.

Mr. Austin resumed, said that advertisers now used judgment regarding circulation. He wanted to know where were the subscribers and where they were. The quality of a newspaper was everything. The time would come, he believed, when circulation would be measured by the paid circulation.

R. A. Reed, of Los Angeles, who was introduced as the man who had done so much to entertain the association in Los Angeles, spoke on the Ideal Department Store, a branch of business with which he has had wide experience. He advocated a department store not too large—a three story one with basement. He went into the subject in detail. He advocated the store being on co-operatively lines where at least the heads of departments should hold stock. The clerks would be paid premiums on increased business.

He advocated special advertising. A departmental store would under this system have three advertisements in separate pages of the paper.

Dr. Elliot S. Rowe referred to the members of the association being doctors of publicity, therefore D. O. P., with whatever was needed to complete it, and that was what they were prepared to deal out in advocating the claims of Vancouver Island Dr. Rowe pointed out that the resources of the island, as yet only partially developed, were destined to play a most important part in the western development.

Referring to the salmon industry, he touched upon the fish hugging the shore of Vancouver Island in reaching the spawning grounds. This he could only ascribe to the inherent love of the flag under which the salmon had its birth. The only explanation of why they took the American waters in Puget Sound was because the fish protested against the giving of this territory to regard it as belonging to Canada.

Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition of 1906, outlined the objects in view. The exposition was to be a means for affording to visitors information relative to the western states and the principal countries on the Pacific Coast. The gold of Alaska was a comparatively small part of the production of that territory. By the aid of this exposition it was hoped to induce a large number of people to visit Alaska. In this the whole coast would reap benefits. The idea was to have people who would maintain the exposition and get about 25 per cent. in return. But Seattle would get thousands of dollars of advertising, and the Pacific Coast would get millions of dollars' worth. This was a useless move by Seattle, which was the only one of the Pacific Coast. There were miners, tourists and capitalists coming West. The exposition named was for the purpose of inducing people to come to the coast. In doing this Seattle followed the example of Portland in the Lewis and Clark exposition, in dispersing wrong impressions concerning the coast.

On the conclusion of the address a motion was moved by Mr. Hall in which the association endorsed the exposition as an advertising medium, and assured the management of it of its assistance.

This was referred to the resolution committee.

Mr. Merrick, of the exposition, was asked to address the meeting also. He said that the object was to bring the West and the East together. It was to be international in its scope. It would include all countries bordering the Pacific Ocean, Germany, Denmark and the Netherlands would be asked to co-operate on behalf of their dependencies on the Pacific.

The resolution committee submitted the resolution endorsing the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition, thanks to the Victoria Development and Tourist Association for all courtesies; Times Printing & Publishing Company for transportation and banquet; Colonist Printing & Publishing Company for bouffe dinner; railway company for transportation about the city; Secretary Williams, of the Steamship Company for courtesies in Seattle; Pacific Club of Victoria for courtesies extended; and courtesies extended by Portland.

The resolutions were adopted. A transportation committee was appointed consisting of J. H. Bernard, of Portland; John Neilson, of Victoria, and J. B. Best, of Everett.

F. H. Mantor gave an interesting talk on "Random Notes," containing many suggestions.

The invitation by Mr. Merrick from the Seattle-Alaska-Pacific exposition, was extended for the association to hold its 1909 convention in Seattle. This invitation was accepted.

The suggestion was made by Mr. Reed, of Los Angeles, that Clearwater, Mexico, should be the next meeting place. Bull fights were popular there and it might be a good place to meet. The meeting then adjourned.

LOGGER OUTWITS THE GOVERNMENT

Chased from pillar to post by the provincial timber inspectors J. S. Emerson sought refuge for his logs in the confines of Victoria harbor. J. A. Sayward provided a haven of refuge for half a million feet near his mill.

Emerson, it will be remembered, is fighting the provincial government on the ground that the act passed last session prohibiting export of logs in the rough, felled under hand-loggers licenses, was not retrospective. He has carried his case to the Supreme and Full courts, but an appeal to the Privy Council has been allowed.

Pending the result of this appeal the government has determined to seize all logs out before the passage of the act if an attempt to export them is made. Accordingly the chief commissioner gave orders, three or four days ago, that the logs in Victoria harbor owned by Emerson should be seized. There was some leakage in the lands and works department, and Emerson was advised of the proposed seizure. Accordingly the wires were put to work and a tug engaged to take the logs across the line.

After the usual dilatoriness the government officials got to work and went down to Sayward's mill only to be received by a defiant boat from a tug well out towards Trial Island, towing the logs to Bellingham. The boom is now safe on the other side, and Emerson is laughing in his sleeve at the way the authorities were outwitted.

NEW RECORD.

(Associated Press.) Hamilton, Ont., July 21.—The mails from the Canadian Pacific steamer Empress of Britain arrived at the local post office and were sorted and ready for those to whom addressed at 8 o'clock yesterday morning.

The Empress of Britain left Liverpool on Thursday, July 12th, and came via the St. Lawrence river route. Her mails were sorted and distributed at the Hamilton post office within eight days. One hour later the mails of the White Star steamer, which left Liverpool on Wednesday, July 11th, one day earlier, and came via New York, arrived at the Hamilton post office. The Empress of Britain's mails made a new record to the local office.

SALE OF PUPS.

PRINCESS VICTORIA CUTS YACHT IN TWO

Five of the Occupants of the Smaller Craft Were Drowned—Only One Man Saved.

(Special to the Times.)

Victoria, July 21.—The steamer Princess Victoria ran into a steam pleasure yacht off Brockton Point at 2.30 this afternoon, completely cutting her in two.

The Victoria was proceeding out of the harbor and the yacht tried to cross her bows, but was carried by the tide broadside on to the C. P. R. flyer.

Six occupants of the yacht were precipitated into the water, and the Princess towed all her boats to their rescue.

Owing to the rush of the tide this was very difficult, and only one man was saved, the other five being drowned.

A SAVINGS BANK FOR CITY SCHOOLS

Practical Proposal Is Being Considered. Committee of Trustees Will Warmly Recommend Scheme For Children to Save Small Amounts.

The school savings bank is a very practical proposal and of great educational value which will in all probability be introduced into the city schools. The progressive manager of the Bank of British North America (Mr. Mackenzie) suggested the scheme to the chairman of the school board some two or three months since. After he had looked into the question of school banks the matter was presented to the board of school trustees at their last regular meeting. A committee was appointed, consisting of Trustees Mrs. Jenkins, Jay and the chairman, to investigate the plan in other places and to encourage the children to save at least the small amounts to be highly commended, and the committee consider that Mr. Mackenzie is deserving of thanks for introducing the system to the local board of school trustees.

The method is a very simple one, entailing not more than thirty minutes of the teacher's time during the week, excepting perhaps that of the principal, who will be entrusted with the funds deposited by each child, until the sum of one dollar has been reached, when the young depositor will open a direct account with the bank. The educational feature of the scheme is to encourage the children to save at least the small amounts to be highly commended, and the committee consider that Mr. Mackenzie is deserving of thanks for introducing the system to the local board of school trustees.

To record its history, to give the names and opinions of thousands of educators, bankers and philanthropists in general, who have encouraged the movements of the introducer would fill a large volume, which would pleasantly astonish the reader and, perhaps, win many more friends to the firmly established work of the system.

The experience in school banking of the last twenty years has evolved no alteration in its principles and precepts. There can be no doubt that theory and practice which inculcate in children the habits of frugality, thrift and self-dependence, all of which are essential to a life of individual responsibility, answer a high and noble end. It has been avowed by many philanthropists and social reformers that the universal introduction of the school savings bank system into our public schools would be a most important step toward the elimination of idleness, pauperism and crime, which, notwithstanding the numerous remedial means employed by generous associations and individuals, seem to be increasing instead of diminishing.

The school savings bank system is now in operation in 1,623 schools of 125 cities of 25 states of America, and the scholars of these schools have saved $4,864,575.88, of which $1,615,016 has been withdrawn, leaving a balance of $3,249,559.88 in the hands of the banks.

It was the eve of his wedding when William Griffiths, of Yorton, Shropshire, under the cloak of night, visited his master's flock and stole a lamb. Having killed the animal he and his guests made merry the next day when the nuptials were celebrated. The lamb's skin, however, was found buried in a garden, with the result that the honeymoon was interrupted by the Eschurch magistrates, who sent Griffiths to jail for six weeks.

VICTIMS OF THE COLLISION

A special dispatch from Vancouver, timed 3.37 p. m., says: The boat cut in two by the steamer Princess Victoria was the Chehalis, Union Steamship Co. Mr. and Mrs. Bryce, Messrs. Benwell and Chick and Dr. Hutton are supposed to have been drowned.

MORE COMPETITIONS

Season's Trapshooting Programme Decided Upon at Meeting of Capital Gun Club.

A meeting of the Capital Gun Club was held last evening at which dates were set for the different trophies yet to be competed for. There was a large attendance.

It was decided that the Dupont cup should be open to members of both the Capital and Victoria organizations. The conditions as outlined were that it should be shot for five times and become the property of the individual successful in the majority of instances. The first shoot, it was agreed, will take place on the 22nd inst. (to-morrow) at the Willows traps, the second on the 29th, the third on the 5th of August, and the fourth on the 12th of the latter month. The final shoot will be held on a date to be fixed when it becomes necessary. Thirty birds will be the limit of the contest in each case.

(Associated Press.) Bisley, July 21.—The King's prize (£1,250, the gold medal and the gold badge), open only to volunteers, was won today by Capt. Davick, of the First Middlesex volunteers, with a total score of 225.

Sergt. Ommundsen, of Edinburgh, winner of the King's prize in 1901, carried off the silver medal and another Scotchman, Sergt. Reid, of Glasgow, took the bronze medal.

The meeting of the National Rifle Association ended this afternoon.

TIDE TABLE. Victoria, B. C., July 1906. Date Time of High Water Time of Low Water

The time used in Pacific Standard, for the 24th meridian west, is counted from 0 to 24 hours, from midnight to midnight. The figures for height serve to determine high water and low water. The height is measured from the level of the lower low water at spring tides. This level corresponds with the datum which the soundings on the Admiralty chart of Victoria harbor are referred, as closely as can now be ascertained.

LOST BABIES IN LONDON.

Legions of Them Cared For By the Police.

The number of little children missing from London homes must be appalling. In the year 1904 the number of lost persons restored to homes was 15,962, most of the being little children who had been kidnapped for begging purposes.

A sensational proof of the fact that thousands of children are lost in London was supplied recently. A three-year-old boy, well dressed, wearing a white fur coat, was found by a policeman and taken to the workhouse, where he became ill and died of acute meningitis, due to an injury to the forehead as the result of a blow or fall.

A description was circulated, but the child was not claimed, and after the inquest, the unknown little body was buried by the workhouse authorities.

Since the finding of the child was made public the city police station has been besieged by inquirers. Distracted parents, relatives and friends have come in, see the photograph taken after the death of the child, who was, they feared, their own missing boy. In fact, thousands of people have been there to see the photograph, but the child still is unknown.

The question arises, Where is this lost legion of children? That a thousand or even a hundred little ones can be spirited away from their homes and all of them lost absolutely is incomprehensible; and to parents a terrifying state of affairs.

SWINDLED BY "PROPHETS." A curious story of superstitition comes from the Sledlets region of Russia. A peasant named Siwo, poor, but possessing the cunning intelligence of his class, having been in Kronstadt, and seeing the enormous sums of money placed at the disposal of Father John, conceived the idea of exploiting the credulous devotion of the people. Associating with himself a woman named Danucha, he schooled her for her part, and then procuring her a prophetic, the two tramped from one rural village to another over a wide tract, cross in hand, proclaiming the imminence of the Last Day, and urging the rustics who crowded to hear them to cast aside all cares of earth. They netted considerable sums, and induced 20 poor families to sell all they possessed in the world, and to hand the proceeds over to the two "prophets," who promptly decamped, leaving the unfortunate people destitute. The amount was about £1,000.

OUR LONDON LETTER

London, June 25.—That ever popular event, the Handel festival, was again this year the means of drawing thousands of music-lovers to the Crystal Palace. The weather certainly was most satisfactory, though perhaps one would have wished for a little more air and less stifling heat. However, we are thankful for small mercies in this variable climate of ours and bravely the thousands set through the long programmes, and there was no lack of enthusiasm. Mr. Santley was uproariously received, and, in fact, his reception was one of the incidents of the festival. Madame Albani, too, an old favorite, had no reason to be dissatisfied with her reception. But most of the praise is due to Mr. Frederic Cowen, who for the second time conducted the great festival, and he had under his control a choir and orchestra of 4,000 performers.

A Shake in Wales.
They are evidently not going to have it all their own way in California in the matter of earthquakes, and Great Britain, seemingly, is making up its mind to take a share of the honors in this direction, for the inhabitants of South Wales, in the districts of Swansea and Cardiff, and the surrounding country, were terrified by a seismic disturbance through happily no lives were lost. As I write the news comes to hand that a similar experience fell to the lot of the residents of Croston, a suburb of London, but in the latter case the tremor was very light. However it was quite bad enough to upset the nerves of the Crostonites, and it is taking the authorities at the meteorological department all their time by assuring them that there is really no fear of a repetition of the San Francisco disaster.

A Strenuous King.
This week is the most important one of the whole year in the social world and the West End of London is one of excitement. Political and social notabilities must certainly find it difficult even to remember their numerous engagements. But there can be no shirking of responsibilities in this direction since the King sets such an example of untiring energy. To anyone who may be inclined to think that being a King is an easy game to play at, a list of the various functions at which his Majesty put in an appearance this week, may prove enlightening. He attended the Canadian festival at Queen's hall, a garden party of the Duchess of Northumberland, a ball given by the Duchess of Devonshire, he visited the Royal Agricultural show at Derby, attended two private dinner parties, was present at the Vienna philharmonic concert, held a court at Buckingham Palace; of course attended the trooping of the colors, which, by the way, had a surprising attendance for the proceedings. Then there were the birthday celebrations, and for the week-end his Majesty has gone to stay with the Earl of Sandwich at his country residence. There is nothing formal about any of these functions, which makes them all the more enjoyable, for royalties cannot "drop in" unceremoniously, but must be received with the dignity and state due to their high position.

Moonlight Suppers.
It is at this gay season of the year that new fashions in enterprising are introduced by enterprising hostesses. We hear that this year the time-honored five-o'clock-tea party and the afternoon "at home" are tabooed by smart hostesses. They are replaced by delightful moonlight suppers, out of doors, garden being lit up with fairy lights, and tables for two doled out about in nooks that are "cool and shady." It is a pretty idea and conducive to romance, which in itself is an advantage in these prosaic days. Of course performers, discourse, sweet music to add to the enchantment of the wifely supper hour. The doom of that typical form of British entertainment—the afternoon "at home"—was pronounced when hostesses discovered that they were being developed into "hot-parties." Mere man shunned the afternoon "at home" as he would the plague, and wise hostesses, awakening to the fact were quick to turn on the electric light and the "at home" was absolute essential to suit all seasons. Therefore, the rest and are doing away with afternoon parties.

Rest Cure.
Fashionable doctors, wise in their generation, have their prescriptions to suit all seasons. Therefore, the rest cure—they advocate when society must needs remain in the sultry, laden atmosphere of London in June, are different from those they recommend when the season is at an end. No sending patients off to continental resorts to drink wind concoctions and walk bare-footed in the grass at this time of the year, and the early to bed and early to rise theory seems to have quite evaporated. Wise doctors instead the fashionable society woman is only required to attend a concert, the musical programme of which is specially devoted to "peace and rest" music. Simple soothing melodies and freedom from the conventionalities of concert room are the main objects of these "rest music" entertainments. The listeners are not even required to applaud, and may fall asleep if they choose. The feelings of the performers who have to play to these somnolent audiences are better imagined than described, and one would not answer for the action of a celebrated musician who was interrupted in his masterpiece by the resounding snoring of Mayfair.

Society Lectures.
Our clergymen in London are not as considerate as our doctors, however, and evidently have no sympathy with the "nerves" of the world of fashion. For in the very heart of the West End at the Roman Catholic church in Farm street, Father Vaughan is preaching Sunday after Sunday on the sins of society and vigorously denouncing the sins and vices which are rampant in this self same set, apparently, all his church, if one can judge from appearances. They are an extremely fashionable and frivolous looking crowd, and gaze at the grave preacher through their lorgnettes with rather a supercilious air. It is difficult to guess what these abashed consciences that make the fair dames use smelling salts so often while the dainties against their set are being launched at their heads, Father Vaughan is particularly strong on the subject of matrimony, and the lightness with which it is regarded. No language he said, could describe the thrill of horror which an English Christian gentleman he left when he reflected on the consequence to England of the attitude of these "fast" people towards married life. Mutual love is a newly deified par they regarded as "the form." It is said by saying that the West End of London was littered with broken marriage vows. As usual, it is on feminine shoulders he lays the blame. For once the press is taking the side of the "smart set," and maintain that it is not so black as it is painted.

"By conferring your hand, mademoiselle," said Montignac, following her and grasping her wrist. "Your father will be glad to give his consent for your liberty, if he knows that you have given yours. But we can arrange to proceed without his consent. Do not draw back, mademoiselle. It is marriage that I offer, when I speak of other terms. My family is a good one; my prospects are the best, and I have to lay at your feet a love that has never been offered to another, a love that will be yours for ever and ever. I clutch the chain to give vent to my rage. Mademoiselle was looking toward me, and saw the curtain move. "Say no more!" she cried, fearful lest his continuance might be too much for my restraint. "I cannot hear you!" "I love you, mademoiselle," he went on, losing his self-control, so that his face quivered with passion. "I can save you and your father!" He thrust his face so close to hers that she drew back with an expression of disgust. "A fine love, indeed!" she cried scornfully, "that would buy the love it dare not hope to elicit free!" And she turned to La Chatre as if for protection. But the governor shook his head, and remained motionless at the window. "A love you shall not despise, mademoiselle," hissed Montignac, stung by her scorn. He was standing by the table near the bed, and in his anger he made to strike the table with his dagger, but he struck instead the tray on the table, and so produced a loud ringing sound that startled the ear. "Your fate is in my hands," he went on, "so in your father's. As for your Tournois, concerning whom you have suddenly become suspicious, he is, doubtless, by this time in the hands of the troops who have come for him, and very well it is that we decided not to wait for you to lead him to us. As soon as he is in our power, we will free him, and you shall still belong to me! Why not give me what I have the power and the intention to take?" "If you take it!" cried mademoiselle, "that is your act. Were I to give, that would be mine. It is by your own acts that you are, and of fall in, our own eyes and God's!" She spoke boldly in her resolute voice, as if to show me that she could look to herself, so that I need not come out to her defence, for well she guessed my mind and knew that, though she had consented a thou-reminded me of them, that is to say, I recall them exactly. I was to send the order to the governor of Fleurier for your father's immediate release the instant I should stand face to face with Sieur de la Tournois in the chateau of Clochonne."

I threw aside the bed curtain, stepped forth, and said:
"That time has come, monsieur!"

CHAPTER XVII.
Sword and Dagger.
M. de la Chatre could not have been surprised if a spirit had arisen from the floor at feet. He stared at me with startled eyes. I had sheathed my sword while behind the curtains, and now I stood motionless, with folded arms, before him. Mademoiselle uttered a slight cry. Montignac, who stood beside her, was as much startled as I. He was quicker to comprehend the situation. Without moving from his attitude of surprise, he regarded me with intense curiosity and hate. This was his first sight of me, hence his curiosity. He had already inferred that mademoiselle loved me, therefore his hate. "Who are you?" said La Chatre, at last, in a tone of mingled alarm and resentment, as one might address a supernatural intruder.

"The Sieur de la Tournois," said I, "standing face to face with you in the chateau of Clochonne." You shall give mademoiselle that or she shall never break your word again."
"And I drew my sword, and held it with its point toward his hate. The fear of death blanched his cheeks and spurred his dull wits. "Montignac," he cried, keeping his eyes fixed on mine, "if this man makes a move, kill the woman!" In his situation of peril, his mind had become agile. He had suddenly perceived how things were between mademoiselle and me.

"As I have shown, Montignac stood with mademoiselle at some distance from La Chatre and myself. I dared not take my eye from the governor, who should step out of reach of my sword; but I could not help glancing quickly unobtrusively at his dagger, and mademoiselle gave a sharp ejaculation of pain. Then I turned my head for a moment's glance, and saw that he had caught her wrist in a tight grasp, and that he held his dagger ready to strike her, if I did not stop him. "For a short time stood thus, while I considered what to do next. It was certain that Montignac would obey the governor's order, if only out of hatred for me and in revenge on her for his deposed love, though he might fall by my sword a moment later. Therefore, I did not dare go to the rescue of mademoiselle, but I dared attack La Chatre. The governor, of course, would not let her be killed unless I made some hostile movement, for if she were dead nothing could save him from me, unless help came. He feared to call for help, I suppose, lest rather than that he should risk a rush at Montignac and have himself for an instant at my mercy, after all. I cast another glance at Montignac, and measured the distance from me to him, to consider whether I might reach him before he could strike mademoiselle. La Chatre must have divined my thoughts, for he said to me:
"Montignac, I will deal with this gentleman. Take mademoiselle into that chamber and close the door." And he pointed to the door immediately behind mademoiselle, the one by which I had first seen her enter.

"But, monsieur," began Montignac, "I had not quite finished, Montignac went on to La Chatre, "I have no reason for desiring you and the lady to withdraw. Fear not to leave me with him. Leave as I am, I am no match for him, it is true, but mademoiselle shall continue to be a hostage for his good behavior."
"I understand," said Montignac, "but how shall I know?"
"Should M. de la Tournois make one step toward me," said the governor, "he is paused and took up the hunting horn and looked at it, but presently dropped it and pointed to the bowl of fruit, which was near the first place. "I shall strike this bowl," thus. He struck the bowl with his stick, and it gave forth a loud metallic ring, like that previously produced by Montignac's dagger from the tray on the other table. "The voice is not always to be relied on," continued the governor. "Sometimes it is the hand that speaks."
"A sound like this," and he struck the bowl again, "can be made instantly and with certainty. Should you hear one strike on the bowl—only, not followed quickly by a second stroke—let mademoiselle pay for the rashness of her challenge."
"Yes, monsieur," replied Montignac, a kind of diabolical triumph in his voice.
"It may be," said La Chatre, "that no such violent act will be necessary, and that I shall merely require your presence here. In that case, I shall leave you rapidly, with the understanding that you wait in the instant you hear a stroke, wait an instant, then there be a second stroke. But if there be no second, act as I have told you."
"After you, mademoiselle," said Montignac, indicating by a motion his desire that she should precede him backward out of the chamber. She still clutched her arm and held his dagger aloft, intending thus to back out of the room after her.
"I will not go!" she answered, trying to resist the force that he was using on her arm.
"This was the first resistance she had offered. She had previously stood motionless beneath his lifted dagger, feeling herself unable to break from his grasp of iron, and supposing that any effort to do so would bring down the dagger into her delicate breast. A big, dark, hairy man, whose name she had trusted to me for what action might seem to be necessary from our own eyes. But now her terror of leaving my presence, and her horror of being alone with Montignac, overcame her. "Go, mademoiselle," said I, gently, taking her glove from my belt, where I had placed it, and kissing it, to show that I was still her devoted chevalier. "Go! 'Tis the better way." For I well knew that the next moment the Montignac from the chamber, and leave La Chatre's wit unaided to cope with mine. Her eyes showed submission, and she immediately obeyed the guidance of Montignac's hand. Facing me still, she went out after her and closed the door.

I was alone with La Chatre. The secretary stood a little too near the point of my sword, said the governor, "for the perfect security of my hostage. There was just a possibility of your being too quick for him. I saw that you were contemplating that possibility. As it is now, should I give him the signal as I shall if you move either toward me or toward that chamber—he could easily put mademoiselle out of the way before you could open the door. Not that I desire harm to mademoiselle. Her death would not serve me at all. It would, indeed, be something that I should have to deplore. If I should deplore it, how much more would you! And since you surely will not be so ungrateful as to cause the death of so becoming a lady, I think I have you, let us say, at a slight disadvantage." And he sat down beside the table near the fire place.

"I think not so, monsieur," said I, touching lightly with my sword's point the tray on the table near the bed; "for should you strike once on your sword, I should very quickly strike once on this tray, and that two strokes would be heard, and the obedient Montignac, mindful of his orders, would enter this chamber, not having slain mademoiselle."
"I ought not to have disclosed this, my advantage," I thought rather to have summoned Montignac by two strokes on the tray, but I had not waited to consider. I spoke of the advantage as soon as I noticed it, supposing that La Chatre, on seeing it, would think himself at my mercy and would come to some higher, but I had not waited to consider. "After all, I could shout to him."
"It would be your last shouting. Moreover, your shouted orders would be cut off unfinished, and the punctilious Montignac would be left in doubt as to your wishes. Rather than slay mademoiselle on an uncertainty, he would come nearer to assure himself, in which case God pity him!"
"Thank you for your warning, monsieur," said La Chatre, with mock courtesy. "There shall be no shouting." Whereupon he struck the bowl with his stick. Taken by surprise, I could only strike my tray with my sword, so that two strokes might surely be heard, although at the same time his intention was merely to summon Montignac. In my momentary fear for mademoiselle's life, and with my thoughts instantly concentrated on striking the trap, I did not have the wit to leap to the door and receive Montignac on my sword's point, as I should have done had I myself summoned him, or had I expected La Chatre's signal.

"So there I stood, far from the door, when it opened, and the secretary advanced his foot across the threshold. Even then I made a movement as if to rush on him, but he brought forward his left hand, and I saw that it still clutched the wretched tray. He looked only. Only his arm was visible in the doorway. Montignac still held his dagger raised. One step backward and one thrust, and he could lay her dead at his feet. Had I been ready at the door for him, I could have killed him before he could have made these two movements. I had not time to think, but I had done so. So I listened in some chagrin to the governor's words.
"I change the signal, Montignac. At one stroke, do not harm the lady, but come hither; or should you hear two strokes, or three, or any number more, she is to be sacrificed."
"I am ready, monsieur!"
"Again the door closed; again I was alone with La Chatre.
"I had lost my former advantage. For now, should I strike my tray once, for the purpose of summoning Montignac, so that I might be at the door to slay him at first sight, the governor could strike his bow, and Montignac would hear two strokes or more—signal for mademoiselle's death.
"And now, monsieur," said the governor, making himself comfortable in his chair between table and fireplace, "let us talk. You see, if you approach me or that door, or if you try to leave the chamber, you can easily strike the bowl twice—before you take three steps."
"I could see that he was not so easy in his mind as he pretended to be. It was true that, as matters now were, his life was secure through my regard for mademoiselle; but were he to attempt leaving the room or calling help, or, indeed, if help were to come uncalled, and I should find my own life or liberty threatened, I might risk anything, even mademoiselle's life, for the sake of revenge on him. He would not dare save himself by letting me go free out of his own chateau. To do that through the door, the wrath of the Duke of Geneva could mean ruin. That I knew well. If I should go to the chamber, he would give the signal for Montignac to kill mademoiselle. As for me, I did not wish to go without her or until I should have accomplished a certain design I had conceived. This was La Chatre's prisoner, and he was mine. Each could only hope, by thought or talk, to arrive at some means of getting the better of the other.

La Chatre's back was toward the door by which I had entered. By mere chance, it seemed, I turned my head toward the door. At that instant, my man Frojac appeared in the doorway. He had approached with some movement of a girl's hand, and the guardman, and his match was burning. Risking all on the possible effect of a sudden surprise on the governor, I cried sharply:
"Frojac, on that man, Frojac, if he has any man's courage, he will strike!"
La Chatre, completely startled, rose from his chair and turned about, forgetting of the stick and bowl. When his glance reached Frojac, my good man had his arquebus on a line with the governor's head, the match dangerous. "I have looked after the guards, monsieur," said Frojac, cheerily, "both of them."
"Stand where you are," said I to him, and if that gentleman attempts to strike that bowl, see that he does not live to strike it more than once." "He shall not strike it even once, monsieur!"

"You see, M. de la Chatre," said I, "the contents of an arquebus travel faster than a man can."
"This is unfair!" were the first words of the governor, after his season of dumb astonishment.
"Pardon me," said I. "It is but having you, let us say, at a slight disadvantage, and now I think I may move."
I walked over to the governor's table and took up the bowl. La Chatre watched me in helpless chagrin, inflicting himself by a side glance that Frojac's weapon still covered him.
"You look somewhat irritated and disgusted, monsieur," said I. "Fray all down!"
As I held my sword across the table, the point in close proximity to his chest, he obeyed, uttering a heavy sigh at his powerlessness. I then threw the bowl into the bed, taking careful aim so that it might make no sound. At that moment I saw La Chatre look towards the chamber in which were Montignac and mademoiselle, and there came on his face the sign of a half-formed project.

"See also, Frojac," said I, "he does not open his mouth to shout."
"He shall be as silent as if born dumb, monsieur."
"Oh, he may speak, but not so loud as to be heard in the next chamber. Look to it, Frojac."
"Very well, monsieur."
For I did not wish, as yet, that Montignac should know what was going on. Through the closed door and the thick tapestried walls, only a loud cry, or some such sound as a stroke on the resonant bowl or tray, could have reached him. We had spoken in careful tones, La Chatre not daring to raise his voice. Thus the closing of the door, intended by the governor, to make Montignac suffer from a sudden rush on my part, now served my own purpose. It is true, since Frojac had appeared, and the governor could not make a signal, I might have summoned Montignac by a single stroke, and dispatched him in the doorway. But now that my own position was easier, I contemplated when only a desperate stroke seemed possible, was full of danger to mademoiselle. I might bungle it, whereupon Montignac would certainly attempt one blow against her, though it were his last. I must, therefore, use the governor's release, for a perilous situation, but first I must use him for another purpose, which the presence of the keen-witted Montignac might defeat. Hence, the secretary was not yet to be made aware of the turn things had taken.

"There were three quills on the table. I took up one of them and dipped it in a glass of ink.
"Shall I tell you of what you are thinking, monsieur," said I, observing on the governor's face a new expression, that of one who listens and makes some mental calculation.
"Amuse yourself as you please, monsieur," he said.
"You are thinking, first, that as I am in your chateau, and not alone, I have, doubtless, deprived you of all the soldiers left to guard your chateau; secondly, that at a certain time, a few hours ago, your troops set out for my residence; that they have probably now learned that I am not there; that they have consequently started to return. You are asking yourself what will happen if I am here when they arrive. Will I kill you before I allow myself to be taken? Probably, you say. Men like me value themselves highly, and sell themselves dearly. You are turning, now, to what I have just said. Then you can send them on my track. Very well; write, monsieur!" And I handed him the pen.
He looked at me with mingled vindictiveness and wonder, as if it were remarkable that I had uttered the thoughts that any one in his position must have had. Mechanically he took the pen.
"What shall I write?" he muttered.
"Write this: To M. de Brissard, Governor of Fleurier. Release M. de Varion immediately. Let him accompany the man who bears this and who brings a horse with him."
With many haltings, many side glances at Frojac's arquebus and my sword-point, many quill looks and black frowns, he wrote, while I watched him across the table. Then he threw the document toward me.
"Sign and seal," I said, tossing it back to him.
With intended slovenliness he affixed the signature and seal, then threw the pen to the floor. I took the order, scanned it, and handed him another pen.
"Excellent!" said I. "And now again!"
He made a momentary show of haughty indignance, refusal, but movement of my sword quelled the brief revolt in him.
"The bearer of this," I dictated, "M. de Varion, is to pass free in the province, and to cross the border where he will."
This time he signed and affixed the seal without additional request. He threw the document pen after the first, and looked up at me with a scowl.
"A bold, brave signature, monsieur! There is one pen left!" and I handed him the third quill.
He took it with a look of wrath, after which he gave a sigh of forced patience, and sat ready to write.
"The bearer of this," Ernanton de Launay—Sieur de la Tournois," I went on.
He started at me aghast, as if my presumption really passed all bounds, but a glint of light on my sword caught his eye; he carried his eye along to the point, which was under his nose, and consented.
"No, no, no! I will never write that!"
"You are an instant's hesitation," I drew back my sword as if to add weight to an intended thrust. He gasped, and the ink-blot he passed, signed it, and attached the seal.
"Be assured," I said, as I took up the last order, "these will be used before you shall have time to countermand them." He gritted his teeth at this, "I thank you heartily, monsieur, and shall ask you to do no more writing. But in favor, will I claim the loan of a few gold pieces for M. de Varion. Come, monsieur, your purse has ever been well fed."
With a look of inward groaning he negligently handed me some pieces, not counting them.

"Frojac!" he said. "You will ask me for my chateau next."
"All in good time. It is a good jest, monsieur, that while you visit me at Maury by proxy, I return the visit at Clochonne in person and find your chateau unguarded. To complete the jest, I need only take possession. But I am for elsewhere. Frojac, come here!"
While Frojac approached, I held my sword ready for any movement on the part of my unhappy adversary, for I saw him cast a furtive look at the tray on the other table, and I read on his face the birth of some new design.
Rapidly I gave Frojac my commands, with the gold and the two orders first written.
"Take this order immediately, with my horse and your own, to the chateau of Fleurier. Secure M. de Varion's release, and fly with him at once from the province, leaving by the western border, so that you cannot possibly be forestalled by any troops or counter orders that this gentleman may send from here. Make you way speedily to Guilenne."
"And in Guilenne, monsieur?"
"You will doubtless find me at the camp of Henri de Navarre. As soon as you see M. de Varion, assure him of the safety of his daughter. And now to horse!"
"I am already on my way, monsieur!" And the good fellow ran from the chamber and down the stairs. In a few moments I heard the horses clattering out of the courtyard and over the bridge. Pleased at his zeal and swiftness, I stepped to the window to waive him a godspeed. I thus turned my back toward La Chatre.
Frojac saw me and waved in response, as he dashed down the moonlit way toward the road to Fleurier.

and turning, saw what made me hesitate, and my momentary forgetfulness and my reliance on the governor's lameness. The sight revealed plainly enough what new idea had come into La Chatre's mind—simply that, if he should give the signal for mademoiselle's death, I would probably not stay to attack him, but would instantly rush into the next chamber in the hope of saving her. He could then fasten the door, and hold me prisoner in that chamber until the return of his troops. Well for us that he had not thought of this before the arrival of Frojac.
He was already near the table on which was the tray, when I turned and saw him. He raised his stick to strike the tray. I rushed after him.
He brought down his stick. The tray sounded, loud and bell-like. He heard me coming, and raised his stick again. The second clang would be the death-knell of my beloved!

THE RIGHT AND THE WRONG WAY TO PRACTICE

A Good stretch every fifteen minutes

Common faults which produce bad results

WITH THE coming of summer weather and school vacations, music lessons are dropped, although a little daily practicing is usually required of children by mothers who feel that the discipline of regular tasks, neither hard nor taxing, is valuable.

So much harm has been done by injudicious practicing—not so much the length of time spent at it, as the way it is done—that it is well for mothers to watch out for the signs of the right or the wrong ways of practicing during the months when they themselves are brought more closely in touch with the small pupils.

Music is nervous work, even for the child (perhaps most of all for her) who loves it, so that practicing is a pleasure. That point should be borne in mind, and the child taught to practice for, say fifteen minutes at a time, and then to rise and go through some simple stretching exercises—those with a cane are particularly good—before returning to finish her half hour or hour, as the case may be.

The way she sits at the piano is really the most important point to be considered. The piano stool should be raised so that when she sits upon it and rests her hands upon the keys her arms, from elbow to wrist, are, without any effort, in a straight line. Stools are most trying articles of furniture, for the small body perched upon one gets impossibly weary with nothing to rest her feet on, and the general tendency to let her body droop and drag in accordance with the drop of her little legs over the edge is well nigh irresistible.

The best piano seat is a chair with a back no higher than those new chairs made for dressing-tables. A footstool should be provided that is of the right height, so that the child's feet may be set firmly upon it.

Then the child should be taught and watched to see that she does not lapse into bad habits—to sit easily erect, the shoulders back, and when bending forward is necessary, to bend from the waist, instead of craning the neck forward and developing the awkward round shoulders which so many children have later to overcome.

If the child shows any tendency towards stooping, exercises to correct it should be gone through regularly when the practicing time is up, and the mother should watch her pose at the piano even more sharply.

Hooking the feet around the legs of the chair or stool should be forbidden, unconsciously the whole body is thrown into a false position by such a trick.

The Correct Position

Mrs. Henry Symes' Advice to Correspondents

In your columns you speak of an institution where mechanical massage is given. Had I something to say about it? You kindly give me the address? Also, will you tell me if in the article you speak of "to be" flat on floor and raise body without bending knees, you mean to say I cannot raise myself without help from my elbows. Now, is that right?

It is against my rules to give the names or addresses of specialists to my readers, so I cannot grant that request. I will repeat the exercises to reduce the abdomen, so that you may know exactly what the directions are. Usually a movement that at first trial seems quite impossible may be executed with ease after a time of persistent practice.

To Reduce the Abdomen.

Lie flat on your back and slowly raise both legs to perpendicular position, then lower them slowly to the floor. This will make your abdomen small and firm. Do repeat this exercise many times in succession, as too many repetitions might strain the legs.

Alternate it with the following, which is also strengthening to the muscles of the abdomen: Lie flat, and keeping the heels on the floor, raise in a sitting position, with the arms crossed over the chest, the trunk forward to the feet. If this is too difficult, begin by raising the arms forward to give the body an impetus. When it becomes easier, perform in both of these arm positions, increase the pull by clasping the hands at the tips of the back, thus coming to a sitting position. This sitting position should always be exact.

Tonic for Bleached Hair

Would you recommend the quinine hair tonic for bleached hair? I use peroxide of hydrogen, and wash the hair with it. It keeps the hair from falling out. M. E. C.

I would use the same tonic for bleached hair, as for hair of the natural color, but that of the former condition at least is never as soft and healthy as the latter.

Red Inflammation

I am 35 years old, a youth, and am troubled greatly by my nose being red and inflamed all the time. I have tried many remedies, but none seem to do me any good. I would kindly tell me through your columns of something that will help me, as I am very sensitive about it at school. M. E. C.

Perhaps this trouble is caused by indigestion; certainly, the blood does not circulate properly. There is a great need, I think, for me to suggest exercise to schoolboy, but are you just as careful as you might be about what you eat and the way you eat it? Try going without pie and all rich foods for awhile. Drink only water and milk, and never touch candy. Go to your meals regularly, and eat slowly. Drink water as many times a day as you can. This ought to help if you are faithful to the directions, and it is much better and more effective than medicines or cosmetics.

For Freckles

I would like very much to have your advice as to whether the orange-flower cream would be the best thing for me to use. My skin seems dry and rough at times, and my complexion does not seem as clear as it was. I have a few freckles that will begin to thicken now that the winter weather is here. Would the cream keep them light and make my skin fine and white? Could I buy it put up at the drugist?—DOROTHY O.

The orange-flower cream is an excellent skin food, but it has not the bleaching qualities that freckles require. Should the freckles become very objectionable I would use the formula below. Yes, any reliable drugist will prepare the cream for you.

Dr. Shoemaker's Bleach.

(For tan, freckles and yellow discolorations of the face.)

Nichloride of mercury in coarse powder, 1 grain; distilled witch hazel, 2 ounces; rose water, 2 ounces.

Agitate until solution is obtained. Moisten the affected parts. Keep out of the way of ignorant persons and children.

Gray Hair

Somebody asked your advice for dyeing hair, and you suggested to use the physician's remedy. I would like to know what you mean when you say "I can get it for me where I can get it."

LA FEMME.

The physician's remedy for gray hair is to its natural color. You can procure it in any reliable drugist's. It is especially good for very dry hair.

Gray Hair

Will you please inform me where the "Physician's Remedy" can be obtained and also the price of it? I have been helped and I notice you mentioned in the paper that it was good. Any reliable drugist will prepare the remedy for you, and you should know the formula that is frequently published in your columns. (Glycerine, 1 ounce, alcohol, 1 ounce, water, 1 ounce.)

Caused by Blackheads

Please send me the remedy for enlarged pores. My skin is oily. I have a number of blackheads, but I have only a few now. The pores are very large. A. S.

Lotion for Enlarged Pores.

Boric acid, 1 dram; distilled witch hazel, 4 ounces. Apply with a piece of lint or a bit of absorbent cotton. Cleanse the skin thoroughly before applying.

then, but now I am all washed out looking and my skin looks as though I were much older than I am. I am only 22 years of age.

It is much to be regretted that so many women make this mistake—too much massage, or using the treatment when it is not only unnecessary, but harmful. To restore your skin to its natural health and freshness will be rather a tedious matter; but with time and care, you should accomplish that result.

Rub into your skin gently once a day the orange-flower cream, the formula for which is frequently published in these columns. Give your face cold water baths to bring a glow to the skin, and more frequently, if you can, a rubbing briskly but gently. Get up a good circulation by as much outdoor exercise as possible.

Dry, Falling Hair

My hair is gray, almost white, and very dry, and coming out in bunches. Anything I put on it turns it yellow. Will you please let me know what to do to keep it moist and prevent it from falling out?—Mrs. M. R.

Try this tonic for falling hair:

Tonic for Falling Hair.

Phenic acid, 2 grains; tincture of nuxvomica, 10 grains; tincture of castor oil, 10 grains; tincture of cantharides, 2 grains; tincture of hyacinth, 2 grains; tincture of aloes, 2 grains; tincture of opium, 2 grains.

Apply to the roots of the hair, with a soft sponge once twice a day. This lotion is especially good for very dry hair.

A Barn for a Gymnasium.

GIVE two or three, or a dozen, young people a barn, the liveliest games will be invented, as if by magic—games in which strength and suppleness and grace are developed unconsciously.

The same barn may be turned into the joint use of a gymnasium, in which most of the feats common to gymnastic courses, and many another unheard of such quarters, may be practiced.

No fittings at all are required, although a few contrivances added here and there, interest the barn with the charm of a gymnasium with all its own charm added.

Those great beams which run the length of the barn, interrupted by cross-beams, give a splendid advantage ground for all sorts of daring leaps and somersault turning, with soft beds of hay to break the force of the fall and to do away with the fear of being hurt should you fall in your first attempts.

Those same beams are the very things to suspend the wooden rings from, with which every gymnasium is provided; and a ladder provides equipment enough for all the exercises, from crawling in and out the rungs to walking across it (as it stretches from one hay-mow to the other), not in the usual way, on your feet, but by your hands.

Put on gymnasium suits when you go out for a good romp in the barn. Then there's nothing to catch and trip you as you swing, by means of the wooden rings from one beam to another, or slide down the great piles of hay.

Turn children loose in the barn in summer—they will discover ways enough to develop and strengthen muscles without ever, for a moment, supposing that they are doing anything but playing.

You get tired and dirty and disheveled, but strong and lithe and well, gaining most of the good your country outing does from your romping in the sweet-smelling, dusty recesses of the old barn, which for the time being, you have turned into your gymnasium.

On the Care of the Face and Hair

Results From Bleach

Please tell me how long you have to use peroxide before it shows results? Do you use it with orange or soft soap? And do you use the orange-flower cream in conjunction with it?

I presume you refer to peroxide of hydrogen as a skin bleach. With daily applications it should be able to show results in two to four weeks. Apply it undiluted with a soft rag. You can use the orange-flower cream in conjunction with it.

Harmless Rouge

Will you please publish again the recipe for a harmless strawberry rouge, that I noticed in your columns some months ago.

A. R. P.

Strawberry Natural Blush.

Fresh ripe strawberries, 1 quart; distilled water, 1 pint. Place in a fruit jar and set the jar in a saucepan of water over a slow fire.

Boil the water simmer for two hours, and strain through a fine sieve. Add 1 ounce cold and pure alcohol, 12 ounces; best linseed oil, 12 ounces; 20 grains; best carmine (first dissolved in the alcohol); 15 grains; oil of sweet almond, 1 drop; oil of neroli, 2 drops.

Keep closely stoppered in a dark place. Apply to the cheeks with a bit of absorbent cotton.

To Promote Growth of the Hair

I find your dandruff cure excellent, but would like to know how often it should be applied. I have used it now for three weeks, and I am getting better. Do you think the dandruff cure is the cause of the hair falling out? Is there really anything that will make the hair grow out again? I used to have a nice growth of hair, but lost nearly all of it during my trials with dandruff, and I never do obtain any more except from my temples.

F. B. B.

If the dandruff cure has benefited you in that respect, you should discontinue using it. Apply this tonic for awhile:

Falling of the Hair

Tincture of nuxvomica, 1 ounce; spirits of rosemary, 1 ounce; alcohol, 2 ounces. Apply several times a week to the roots of the hair.

Prescription Mislead

A few weeks ago you published the recipe for the walnut stain for the hair. I mislead the paper and have not seen the recipe since. Will you kindly write me the prescription for me so that I may have it filled?

M. R. G.

Walnut Stain for Hair.

Four ounces of walnut husks beaten to a pulp, to which is added pure alcohol, 16 ounces.

Let stand eight days and strain. Then apply as any other dye.

Massaging Wrinkles

Will you please tell me how to massage the wrinkles from the face that form at the corners of the eyes, and near the temples? Is the "wax" you had in the paper for permanent wrinkles good to use for wrinkles?

The success you will meet with in removing these wrinkles depends largely upon your age, which you have not mentioned.

The lotion for premature wrinkles is of use only to young women whose skin is naturally soft and pliable, and whose traits of character have not had time to make their tell-tale traces on the face.

The first important step is for you to render your skin as young as possible. Then smooth out the wrinkles with regular movements, say a hundred strokes twice a day; steaming the face and afterward applying some pure facial cream takes out the finer lines. Avoid the use of harsh alkaline soaps, facial powders and toilet vinegars.

Hair Turning Gray at 32

What can be done for my hair? It is turning gray rapidly. I am only 32 years old, and I am only 22 years old. If you recommend the physician's remedy, will you please send me the prescription? I would like to know what can be done for wrinkles.

M. R. G.

To Restore the Natural Color of the Hair.

(A physician's prescription.)

Sugar of lead, 1 ounce; lac sulphur, 4 ounces; tincture of nuxvomica, 1 ounce; alcohol, 1/2 pint; glycerine, 1 ounce; tincture of cantharides, 1/2 ounce; ammonia, 1/2 ounce.

Mix all in one pint of soft water. Apply to the roots of the hair, which must be clean.

If these roots are not kept as clean as possible, the hair will be apt to fall out, or become brittle. Wash the hair with a small brush, then spread it evenly over the scalp, and wash the hair with an ordinary shampoo.

You will find suggestions as to the wrinkles in your face in the answer to "M. R."

Wash for Delicate Skin

Boracic acid, 1 dram; distilled witch hazel, 2 ounces; rosewater, 2 ounces.

Use as a wash when desirable.

Skin Food.

White wax, 1 ounce; spermaceti, 1 ounce; lanolin, 2 ounces; coconut oil, 2 ounces; orange flower water, 2 ounces; oil of sweet almond, 4 ounces; tincture of benzoin, 20 drops.

Melt the first five ingredients together. Take off the fire and distill until nearly dry, adding little by little the benzoin and lastly the orange flower water.

Offensive Breath

I am troubled with an offensive breath, and would like your advice as to what I could use to remedy it. My teeth are in good condition. I have a good appetite and my breath is good.

If your teeth are in good condition and your health is good, the trouble evidently arises from some disturbance in the stomach. This is often the case, when there apparently is no reason for it. Drink two or three times during the night parsley tea, hot or cold. Eat plenty of onions (when you don't expect company) and never allow constipation to continue for a day. Eat an apple on going to bed at night, and keep a gargle on your washing stand of tincture of bark and myrrh. Use the following wash:

Antiseptic Tooth Wash (Beaumes).

Phenic acid, 1 dram; boracic acid, 25 grains; tincture of benzoin, 10 cents; essence of mentha, 30 drops; tincture of aloes, 15 grains; distilled water, 3 pints.

Rinse the mouth with the above, which should be diluted for use. In the proportion of one of tooth wash to nine of water of clear water. Use after each meal, and at any time required.

Depends Upon Individual Case

Having noticed the recipe in your column for enlarging the bust, I have thought of trying it. I have been helped and I notice you mentioned in the paper that it was good. Any reliable drugist will prepare the remedy for you, and you should know the formula that is frequently published in your columns. (Glycerine, 1 ounce, alcohol, 1 ounce, water, 1 ounce.)

If your skin has become tender from the use of strong depilatories, I would advise you to discontinue the depilatory hair treatment and attend to the skin. Use some healing wash for a few days. Directions are With Recipe

Will you kindly give me the formula for Dr. Vaucaire's Remedy, and also the directions for taking for bust developer?

Dr. Vaucaire's Remedy for the Bust.

Liquid extract of galega (goatsrue), 10 grains; lacto phosphate of lime, 10 grains; tincture of ferrous iodide, 10 grains; tincture of iron, 10 grains; tincture of quinine, 10 grains.

Take two spoonfuls with water before each meal. Dr. Vaucaire also advises the drinking of malt extract during the treatment.

No Effect Upon Wrinkles

Would you kindly tell me if Dr. Vaucaire's Remedy has any effect on wrinkles, and remove wrinkles, and how much should the prescription cost to get it filled?

Henna Hair Stain

Will you kindly inform me through your columns what to use to color the hair a dark brown, and how to mix it? I have something you recommended, I think it was some kind of leaves, but cannot remember.

You probably refer to henna hair stain. This is made from henna leaves, and gives a reddish tinge to the hair.

How to Use Henna.

Henna may be applied in several ways, the simplest and easiest way for the amateur is to use a tea made of the leaves. In preparing the tea use a gill of water to a quart of water. The stain should be applied to the roots of the hair with a small brush, or a clean tooth brush will answer. Wash the hair thoroughly with soap and water, and then thoroughly afterward, either in the bath or by hand.

See Answer to "E. E."

Miss R.—The henna hair stain is not a paint, but a dye. You will find full directions for its use in the answer to "E. E."

Detailed Symptoms Necessary

IN DISTRESS—Unless you mention from what source the odor arises I cannot suggest a remedy.

Severe Blood Disorder

A. B. C.—Your trouble seems from your letter to be a severe blood disorder. You should consult a physician at once.

Swollen Veins

I have found all I've used, and there are quite a number, of your formulas just what you say they are; and now will you kindly tell me how to mix Dr. Vaucaire's Remedy? The blood fills the veins so they burst out like great cords. I cannot wear short sleeves or a medium short one. I am thin, so 'tis not on account of overheat or tight clothing. Mrs. M. R. G.

Doubtless this trouble is due to the very fact that you are thin. Take steps to increase your weight, and apply local treatment to your arms by massaging with a good skin food. When the flesh takes on plumpness the veins will be hidden as they should.

THAT BUSY LITTLE MISCHIEF AGAIN

NOW BUSTER GO AND TAKE YOUR MUSIC LESSON

LOOK AT THAT FOR A FIDDLE

I'LL TRADE VIOLINS WITH YOU

GUTE

I MUST TELL HIM

BUSTER, I BEG OF YOU- DONT

ALL RIGHT I'LL TRADE

BUT THINK WHAT A BIG NOISE IT WILL MAKE

DONT BE SILLY TIGE, I'VE GOT THE BEST OF IT

MARY JANE, I HOPE I DIDN'T TAKE AN UNFAIR ADVANTAGE OF THAT OLD MAN

IT WAS A GENUINE "STRAD"

BE CAREFUL NOW BUSTER

THAT'S WHAT I GET FOR TURNING IT AROUND

MA I TRADED FOR THIS, BUT IT NEEDS FIXING UP A LITTLE

I WONT HURT YOU PETTY- COME GIVE ME A KISS

WELL, HERE WE GO AGAIN- WE DONT NEED A PROFESSIONAL STARTER.

DONT MA

I MUST BE DREAMING- CAN ANY ONE UNDERSTAND WOMEN?

RESOLVED THAT, THAT OLD MUSICIAN PLAYED A TRICK ON ME. YOU'VE OFTEN HEARD IT SAID THAT THERE ARE TRICKS IN ALL TRADES- WELL, IT'S ALL THE SAME OLD TRICK AND THAT'S DISHONESTY. MIGHTY FEW PEOPLE EVER SUCCEED BY TRICKS- THE SAFE WAY IS JUST PLAIN HONESTY, AND DELIVERING THE GOODS. THE TIME AND BRAINS SOME PEOPLE WASTE TRYING TO CHEAT, WOULD MAKE THEM GOOD HONEST MONEY. HONESTY CERTAINLY IS THE BEST POLICY, BOYS, BECAUSE THE WAY OF THE TRANSGRESSOR IS HARD AS A ROCK.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWEST HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS.

Any even numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba or the Northwest Provinces, excepting 2 and 3, not reserved, may be homesteaded upon by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section, of 160 acres, more or less.

Entry may be made personally at the local land office in the district in which the land is situated, or by mail, if the person is unable to appear in person.

HOMESTEAD DUTIES: A settler who has been granted an entry for a homestead is required to perform the conditions connected therewith under one of the following plans:

(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year during the term of three years.

(2) If the father, for another, if the father is deceased, or any person who is eligible to make a homestead entry under the provisions of this Act, resides upon the land in the district in which the land is situated, the requirements of this Act as to residence or to cultivating the land may be satisfied by such person residing with the father or mother.

(3) If the settler has his permanent residence upon farming land owned by him in the vicinity of the homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence may be satisfied by residence upon the said land.

APPLICATION FOR PAYMENT: Should be made at the end of three years, before the Local Agent, Sub-Agent or the Home-land Inspector.

Before making application for payment, the settler must give six months' notice in writing to the local land office in the district in which the land is situated.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWEST MINING REGULATIONS: Coal—Coal lands may be purchased at $10 per acre for soft coal and $20 for anthracite. Not more than 500 acres can be acquired by one individual or company.

Quartz—Free miner's certificate is granted upon payment of the fee of $2 per annum for an individual, and from $20 to $100 per annum for a company according to capital.

A free miner, having discovered mineral in place, may locate a claim 1,000,100 feet.

The fee for recording a claim is $5. At least $100 must be expended on the claim each year or paid to the local land office in lieu thereof.

When a survey has been made upon having a survey made, the settler must comply with other requirements, purchase the land at public sale, and pay the patent provided for the payment of a royalty of 2 1/2 per cent. on the sales.

Free miner may obtain two leases to dredge for gold of five miles each for a term of twenty years, renewable at the discretion of the local land office.

The lessee shall have a dredge in operation within one season from the date of the lease for each mile of river leased.

MRS. HARRY THAW SUPPORTS HUSBAND
IN FIGHT AGAINST PLEA OF INSANITY

Prisoner's Mother May Apply For Appointment as Her Son's Legal Guardian.
(Associated Press.)
New York, July 21.—Following the report yesterday that Harry Thaw had been reported insane by alienists employed to make preliminary examinations by M. K. Olcott, it was asserted that although without direct cooperation friends of Stanford White were on the side of the mother of the prisoner in her effort to settle the case without the necessity of a trial.
Still far apart are the divergent interests in the case. Thaw's wife and Mr. Harridge, her personal counsel, are all for a trial where justification of the plea of "unwritten law" or emotional insanity is to be tested. The district attorney, it is said, believes the ends of justice would be best served by a trial.
Mrs. Thaw and the firm of Black, Olcott, Gruber & Bonyng, which she still retains, although the engagement is not recognized by her son, arranged that the trial be held at the residence of the father, and that she herself take the task of bringing her son to her way of thinking in the matter of retaining the Olcott firm, and accepting the advice regarding the plea of insanity. Thus far she has gained little ground, and her failure, it is believed, has not served to increase the cordiality of feeling between herself and her daughter-in-law, who is supporting her husband in his position.
Should other resources fail, it was said yesterday that the elder woman would apply to the courts for an appointment as her son's legal guardian on the ground that he was mentally unable to take care of himself. She would thus take charge of his person and estate and have the right to take any step she might deem to his advantage. The half-dozen or more prominent alienists who were retained several weeks ago to examine Olcott, Gruber & Bonyng are not, it is believed, to work for Thaw's new lawyers or make reports to them. These alienists have been retained by Mrs. Wm. Thaw, and they will not be transferred to Lawyers Harridge and Gleason, who are conducting Thaw's personal defense.

UKASE DISSOLVING PARLIAMENT WITHHELD

Ultimatum From the Ministry Was Responsible For Sudden Change in Plans.
(Associated Press.)
St. Petersburg, July 21.—The acute crisis which faced the country yesterday has been passed.
On Thursday the decision was reached to dissolve parliament to-day, and a Ukase to this effect was actually prepared, but yesterday when it became apparent that the Constitutional Democrats although they had obtained a nominal victory had virtually suffered a defeat, and were anxious to retrieve their blunder, it was decided at Petrozavodsk to drag along for the present and not to issue the Ukase. This morning Interior Minister Stolypin notified the chancellor that he would appear in the house to-day and answer questions.
The Nasha-Shtet says that the decision to postpone the dissolution of parliament was preceded by the receipt of what was practically an ultimatum from the Gensseken-ministry, which demanded to be allowed to resign or that it be given a free hand.
The prevailing sentiment at Petrozavodsk continues to be that a decisive step to suppress parliament as a revolutionary centre will be necessary in the near future, but there seems to be hope that the open breach between the government and Constitutional Democrats with the loss of prestige suffered by the latter may complicate the situation as to render the task of the government easier.
All chance of the formation of a minority composed of constitutional democrats is seemingly ended, as it is plain that the Constitutional Democrats no longer command a parliamentary ministry.
The present situation cannot be prolonged and many competent judges believe that matters are rapidly moving toward a dictatorship.
The arrival of the guard regiments at the capital has been followed by the strengthening of the patrols throughout the industrial quarters where the workmen are greatly excited by the complete suppression of the Socialistic papers. Orders have also been issued to all printing offices to notify the chief of police immediately of any attempt to set up the address of the lower house to the country.

MATTINGS
The increased demand for mattings means increased appreciation by the public of these most useful floor coverings, hence we have increased our stock to keep pace with the demand, and want you to know something about the various grades and many artistic patterns now awaiting your inspection
JAP MATTINGS
In Jap Mattings, we are showing five grades, at, per yard . . . . . 20c, 30c, 35c, 40c and 50c
The 20c values are in very pretty reds and greens.
The 30c values are in natural color, with artistic Japanese inserted designs.
The 35c values comprise a new range of charming printed patterns, and are specially suitable for dados, cosy corners, walls, etc.
The 40c values consist of very excellent carpet pattern designs on very strong materials; most useful for covering entire rooms.
The 50c values are woven from very fine materials, with woven insertions, consisting of floral designs.
We buy in very large quantities, with the result that our customers get the advantage in increased values at the above prices.

CHINA MATTING
Is noted for its durability—due to the extra weight of materials used. We are showing an excellent range of patterns in a great variety of colors, at, per yard . . . . . 20c, 35c and 40c

TUBERCULAR EXHIBITION.

New Way of Spreading Information Relative to Consumption.
(Associated Press.)
New York, July 21.—New York's department of health has gone into vaudeville, and will open the season with "a tubercular exhibition" next week. These shows, planned by Dr. Thomas Darlington, president of the department, are designed solely to instruct the people of the city in simple prevention of the "white plague" and incidentally to look for those suffering with the disease. There will be four or five performances each week from now until September. They will be held in the various parks and on recreation piers.
These exhibitions are entertaining as well as educational, will consist of stereoscopic "view" showing how the "white plague" is contracted in poorly ventilated city rooms and a few illustrations of localities in which the parents stay during their illness and some of them, fortunate enough to be convalescent.
Between these instructive health slides, there will be pictures of well-known public men and a fire scene with an occasional song from a quartette to make the exhibition entertaining and to hold the interest and attention of the crowds.
In inaugurating the performances the department of health believes that by a combination of entertainment it can reach thousands of people who would not read literature or attend lectures to learn how to prevent contraction of tuberculosis or to care for those suffering with it.

THE LEGION OF HONOR.

Council Refuses Government Permission to Decorate Mme. Bernhardt.
New York, July 21.—A cable dispatch to the Herald from Paris says: "The council of the Order of the Legion of Honor to which according to custom the French government submitted the proposition to decorate Mme. Sarah Bernhardt with the cross of the order, has refused to grant his permission for the decoration."
"Such refusals have been very rare indeed, but do not absolutely preclude the conferring of the decoration for the government can bring influences to bear that may cause the council to yield as happened in a similar case some years ago."

THE "MISSING LINK"
DROP FORGED FROM HIGH GRADE STEEL.

This style of link made of malleable iron has been on the market for more than twenty-five years. We have recently improved them by making them drop-forged and adding an interlocking lug in the end of the link, as shown in the foregoing cut, thereby nearly doubling the strength. Ours are the only links that are stronger than chain of the same size and conforming to it. When purchasing Links be sure they have the interlocking lug.
