NANAIMO COUNCIL AWARDS CONTRACTS

Call by St. Andrew's Extended to Rev. K. MacLellan, of Vancouver

Nanaimo, April 11.—The real estate brokers of Nanaimo have arranged a series of luncheons for the purpose of discussing local matters of interest to the city and the business of real estate. The luncheons will extend over a period. The first one has been held and was attended by representatives from all the offices. It was most successful, and it was unanimously agreed that the plan should be continued.

Contracts for the paving of Wallace, Front and Halliburton streets, Stewart avenue and Comox road have been awarded to the Canadian Mineral Rubber Company by the city council.

A public meeting was held in the Athletic Club hall, and the citizens have decided to celebrate Victoria Day with a two days' celebration, May 23 and 24.

St. Andrew's Presbyterian church has extended a call to Rev. K. MacLellan, D. D., of Vancouver. He is a man of strong personality, a good speaker, and a graduate of Queen's University, Kingston.

The annual Easter vestry meeting of St. Paul's church was held in the institute. Reports from the various committees were read and discussed. Church wardens, the church committee and several other working committees for the ensuing year were elected.

AMERICAN BANKER IS HEARD BY COMMITTEE

James B. Forgan Not in Favor of Extending Small Local Bank System

SHAREHOLDERS' AUDIT FAVORED BY WITNESS

Ottawa, April 11.—James B. Forgan, president of the First National Bank of Ohio, gave evidence before the banking committee yesterday. He did not believe in an extension of small local banks in Canada, as "experience had shown the branch banking system to be more efficient and more economical. The weakness of the American system he believed to be in the difficulty of a large number of local banks individually controlling and carrying their cash reserves. This caused periodic tightness of money and occasional panics.

The distribution of gold reserve among 25,000 individual banks, all undertaking to control and carry their own share, was unscientific, wasteful, dangerous and impracticable. Mr. Forgan thought there might be a danger from too many mergers or concentrations of the banking capital. Yet conditions might easily arise when a merger would save a bank.

Mr. Forgan said that without intending to reflect in any way on the usefulness or desirability of external bank audits and inspection, the value of which he fully appreciated, experience compelled him to say that it seemed impossible to establish any system of external supervision that would at all compare in thoroughness and effectiveness with the organized internal supervision that Canada now had in connection with its system.

Everything considered, he would advise the Canadian government to keep its hands off bank supervision or anything approaching it. The minister's suggestion for a shareholders' audit seemed to him what was wanted.

With the excellent system of internal supervision in force, including audits and inspections of practically everything outside of the head office of banks, it seemed from a practical standpoint quite possible for experienced accountants to make satisfactory audits at the head offices, though they should have power, as the act states, to visit its agencies.

Hon. W. T. White, minister of finance, and H. B. Ames, chairman of the committee on banking and commerce, gave a luncheon to the western witnesses who will give evidence on the Bank Act.

MAKE A WILL

There are many reasons why everyone who owns property should make a will. Where no will is left, the law does its best to divide property equitably; but it makes the same provisions for all intestate estates, and there are no two persons whose circumstances are the same. Here in British Columbia, the married man who leaves no will generally leaves his widow dependent.

If you would protect those dependent on you, MAKE A WILL.

Let us assist you in this important duty.

RECOMMENDS CHANGE IN PILOTAGE SYSTEM

Report of Royal Commission on St. Lawrence River Service Made Public

Ottawa, April 11.—The report of the royal commission appointed to inquire into the pilotage system on the St. Lawrence river in the districts of Montreal and Quebec, makes the recommendation that the corporation of pilots for and below the harbor of Quebec, be abolished and their charter cancelled, and that the government appoint a superintendent of sea-going experience in full charge of the district to administer its affairs and be directly responsible to the minister of marine.

Changes in the apprenticeship system are recommended, as well as a compulsory retiring age of seventy years.

The report which refers to the Montreal pilotage system is mainly of a favorable nature, but the administration at Quebec is declared to be loose and bad. Appointment of a pilotage commission is recommended, with duties partly executive and partly administrative.

One of the commissioners, Mr. Lachance, of Quebec, in a minority report, favored retaining the corporation of pilots.

THIRD PREFERRED HAS INCREASED DIVIDEND

Increase of Six Millions Sterling in Gross Receipts of Grand Trunk

London, April 11.—Presiding at the half-yearly meeting of the Grand Trunk railway yesterday, Chairman Smithers expressed gratification in announcing an increase of 1 per cent, making 2½ per cent for the year on third preference stock. Satisfactory progress is being made with the grade on the Pacific section, said Mr. Smithers, and unless labor troubles intervene it is probable that the two lines will be connected in the autumn. The company then will be able not only to remove the crop eastward, but also handle traffic westward. During the year 1912 the number of Western Canadian land-seekers has been greater than ever, and the tendency during the last two years has been for home-seekers rather than speculators to buy land, a condition which the company heartily welcomed.

Gross receipts of the company are now 110,000,000 against 14,900,000 in 1895. When the present board took office their view of the money market had proved correct, a difficult year had been passed most successfully and Canada was entitled to congratulation on the way she was emerging from a trying period, said the chairman.

There is every likelihood of continued immigration and the opening of the land, he continued, which are true marks of Canadian progress and would be strongly apparent this year. The report was adopted, cordial thanks and appreciation of the meeting to the officials and staff being accorded.

ASSENT GIVEN TO BILLS BY SENATE

Ottawa, April 11.—In the senate yesterday, after some further discussion, the third-reading was given to the Japanese treaty bill.

At 5.30 Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, deputy to His Royal Highness the Governor-General, attended at the senate chamber and gave assent to the bill and to several others to which third readings had been given.

The senate then adjourned until Tuesday, April 22.

LADY THOMPSON DEAD.

Toronto, April 11.—Lady Thompson, widow of the late Sir John Thompson, who was premier of Canada from December 1, 1892, to December 12, 1894, died yesterday at the General hospital following an operation. She resided here since the death of her husband in Windsor palace on December 12, 1894.

WELLS AT WINNIPEG.

Winnipeg, April 11.—A. S. Wells, of Victoria, general organizer for the Canadian Amalgamated Society of Carpenters, is in the city. He will deliver an address at a special district meeting of his body to be held at the Labor temple on Tuesday evening. Mr. Wells will remain in the city ten days and will then proceed east, en route for Manchester, England.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By RUTH CAMERON

There are some misfortunes that come into our lives utterly without warning. We are given no opportunity to prepare for them or avert them and cannot be blamed for not doing so.

But there are a great many other misfortunes, little and big, that only come to us after repeated warnings. If we would heed these warnings we might escape the misfortunes. And for not doing so, we certainly are culpable.

A friend of mine dropped her eye-glasses the other evening. "There," she said, as she stooped to recover them, "that's the fourth time I've dropped those to-day. I hope they weren't broken. I ought to tighten that screw. I'll do it this minute."

But "this minute" was too late. As she spoke the words, she picked up the glasses and found both lenses badly cracked. According to her own admission, she had had three warnings and heeded none of them.

Another friend has just lost a handsome seal ring. It was very loose and again and again it slipped off while she was about her housework. Once it was missing for several days and when it finally turned up, she said, "I must have that ring made smaller." This time she has lost it in the street and probably will never recover it. She is much grieved over the mishap and calls it her bad luck. Those who know the circumstances call it something else.

Just yesterday I caught myself committing this ridiculous folly. Three times during the forenoon I caught my foot in my skirt braid. Each time I thought, "I'm going to take this dress off in a little while. I'll fix it then." The second time I almost fell against the kitchen stove, and the third time only a tremendous effort kept me from falling the length of a flight of stairs. If I had fallen I certainly would have had only myself to blame.

Serious illness seldom comes without ample warning. Probably four illnesses out of five could be avoided if we would heed the body's danger signals.

Perhaps you think all this is very trite and obvious, and yet, my friend, I wouldn't be at all surprised if in some way or other you, too, were running past some danger signal.

Your inference is doubtless, in some matter quite different from any of the instances I have mentioned, and that is why you do not at once recognize yourself in my mirror. But think a bit before you exonerate yourself. Are there no danger signals of

THANK MEMBER FOR ENERGETIC EFFORTS

Liberals, Arranging for Annual Meeting, Congratulate H. W. Davies on Registration Work

The meeting of the Liberal ward executives, which made arrangements last evening for the annual meeting of the Victoria Liberal Association on April 23, passed unanimously a hearty vote of thanks to H. W. Davies for having obtained more names than anyone else in connection with the recent registration.

Mr. Davies said he had worked hard to show what one man could do unaided, and had proved that the new registration was badly needed.

At the annual meeting an amendment to the constitution, of which notice was given last evening, will be moved. This proposes to open the proceedings of the association to all members of the ward bodies, instead of limiting it to members of the executives only.

At the same meeting the delegates will consider the advisability of placing a candidate in the field for the next Dominion election. A committee of five was appointed to interview suitable candidates, so that a recommendation may be submitted to the meeting in case it desires to proceed with the suggestion at once.

Matters of organization were also discussed.

TO SAVE A WOMAN

A Rescue That Caused a $7,500,000 Fire in Tokyo

An extraordinary story of the origin of the recent disastrous fire in Tokyo comes from Reuter's correspondent. Because the Salvation Army rescued an unfortunate who fled from the house of ill repute, nearly 1,500 houses were burnt to the ground and damage done, which is estimated at $7,500,000, in the Kanda quarter of the city. It is believed that the keeper of the house from which the girl had fled hired some braves who set fire to the outbuildings of the Salvation Army's colonial boardinghouse. It was blowing half a hurricane at the time, and sparks were carried before the wind, enormous distances and set fire to the flimsy buildings. Two battalions of the garrison assisted the firemen in pulling down houses and effecting salvage. Fifteen thousand people were rendered homeless.

Only one person was killed, a Chinese student, and 50 were injured by falling houses, telephone poles and electric standards. Many firms of printers and publishers had their establishments destroyed. For more than a square mile there was nothing to be seen except a level space, covered knee-deep in ash. At one time the palace was in danger.

PASSING SHOW

Empress Theatre.

The Taubert sisters and their brother Paul are distinctly front rankers on the xylophone, a musical instrument on which they are heard at all the Empress shows this week. Their selections, covering a wide range from classic to rag, meet with approval.

The five-act bill has a couple of headliners in the Mayor and the Mance, the sketch which James Fulton and Mattie Choate present, and the clever acrobatic performance of the black and white girls. The Creighton sisters and Alfred Kealey fill the bill in meritorious style, and the pictures and orchestral music round out the show.

Majestic Theatre.

"The Adventure of The Counterfeit Bill," a detective story one of the features to be shown to-day and Saturday. Lambert Chase, the detective, once more proves his great skill in the detection of crime and fixing it upon the culprit. Counterfeit bills are in circulation and the secret service officers are baffled.

Chase, in disguise, finds the complete counterfeiting outfit in the store of a prosperous merchant. "Love In An Apartment Hotel" — a very pleasing Biograph offering. "Revenge" and "Rubes-Easter-at-Atlantic City," two comedies of laugh-provoking proportions. "Warwick Chronicle," the topical, this week is of great interest.

NEW MODERN HOTEL OPPOSITE DOMINION

Owners of Property Ask $90,000; Hotel to Have 150 Rooms and 75 Baths

A new one hundred and fifty-roomed hotel is to be erected within the next eleven months at the southeast corner of Yates street and Blanchard streets across the road from the Dominion hotel. The site, or a portion of it, is now occupied by the Retreat Saloon. All saloon licenses expire on March 1, 1914, and in order to save the license it is necessary to build.

John Gosnell and A. Netherbee, the present license-holders, do not own the property and the price asked for it is said to be $90,000. Some New York capitalists, it is understood, have been interested and have agreed to back the proposal to erect a thoroughly modern hotel building on that corner. The hotel, which it is designed to put up, will have 150 rooms with a private bath for every two. Yates street is predicted by many to be the coming hotel centre of the city and success for this project is predicted by those who have been made aware of it.

"We shall probably begin tearing down in three or four months," said Mr. Gosnell yesterday. "We want to be open for business by next March."

Forbes Robertson, the Great Actor, Tells of Memories and Triumphs

Forbes Robertson, the great British actor who is retiring from the stage, recently gave a remarkable interview to the London Daily Chronicle:

Probably not until it is all over—not until the last curtain has come down and the last speech been made, and the last cheer been raised by the gallery boys outside the stage door—shall we realize to the full all that is meant by the coming farewell season of Forbes Robertson, to be opened with Saturday's revival of "Hamlet" at Drury Lane.

It is not as if Forbes Robertson represented some half-forgotten reputation of long ago. Somehow or other it is still difficult not to think of him, despite his 60 years, as a young man. We of the present generation of playgoers still count him as one of ourselves—as part of the great movement that brought us first to the theatre.

How much he means to us! Above all, he means romance. It is not the "romance" of mere love-making and melodrama, but the romance that means beauty; the romance that brought to this drab London and its stage a new glamor of tender color, of grace, of memory, of imagination; the romance that was at the heart of the aesthetic movement; the romance that found its dramatic home behind the dim green curtain at the old Lyceum.

With the Bancrofts. According to dates, of course, Forbes Robertson might have far more reason to regard his sojourn with the Bancrofts at the "little old Prince of Wales" as the starting-point of his fame. Truth never does fit in with facts. Certain it is that he came to the Lyceum company comparatively late. His name was already established, both in London and the provinces, at the Geoffrey Winyard of "Dan'l Druce, Blacksmith," and as the original Count Orloff, and afterwards the Julian Beauclerc, in the famous production of "Diplomacy," which we are so soon to see revived at Wyndham's. Indeed when he did join Sir Henry Irving to play Claudio in the 1882 revival of "Much Ado"—it was some three years after Norman Forbes, his younger brother.

Yet the Lyceum seemed to have been waiting for him all the time. Mere social comedy was never his truest home. Those expressive features of his, with their blended delicacy and strength and passionateness, reminding one sometimes of the priest, sometimes of the poet, sometimes of the knight-at-arms; the beautiful voice; the sensitive artistic temperament of the painter; and musician—all have marked him out for romance.

At least eight years before his Lyceum days, too, Forbes Robertson had been helping in his own way to bring the stage in touch with the art-movement on which the Lyceum was nurtured, and in the atmosphere of which, as a Royal Academy student rival of "Much Ado"—it was some three years after Norman Forbes, his younger brother.

Only the other morning in the rambling old house in Bedford square where he has lived for so long, Forbes Robertson was telling of that first meeting. Miss Ellen Terry was little known then save to a little circle of friends, and was playing at Astley's theatre in Charles Read's melodrama, "The Wandering Heir." Forbes Robertson was cast as Annsley to her Philippa—his second part in London, the first having been Chastelard in "Mary Queen of Scots," with the late Mrs. Rousby, at the Princess'. After a few rehearsals the young actor called upon his heroine.

"Never shall I forget," he said, "my first vision of Miss Terry in her own environment. Out of the Victorian street and its dingy ugliness I was ushered into a room, on the first floor, carpeted and paneled in yellow mastic, with blue china dotted about here and there. Everything was in the most daring but perfect taste, and like nothing else that, up to that time, had been seen in the world. In one corner of the room was a full-sized reproduction of the Venus of Milo, and before it, upon a little table, incense was burning.

"Whilst I was waiting, in wonder, they flooded into the room the most superbly beautiful creature that could be described—though indeed it would be impossible to describe the enchantment that Miss Ellen Terry cast around her in those early days, with that magical buoyancy of hers that seems not a mere quality but part of herself. I remember that she wore a characteristic gown of a soft grey-blue that no one else would have thought of wearing at that time, but might have been expressly woven to be in harmony with the tint of her yellow hair.

"At that time, of course, she was already the admired cynosure and inspiration of the aesthetic world—and her sister Kate was famous. But so far as the general playgoing public were concerned she herself was almost unknown. To come out of the Victorian world to meet her thus was like opening some scullery door and finding oneself suddenly in a dreamland of beauty and of art."

The Old Tragedians.

But romance and the Lyceum are, after all, only a part of what Forbes Robertson means to us—present-day playgoers. He represents at the same time something older and just as vital so far as the actual drama is concerned. It was something far older, too, than those beginnings of modern comedy in the midst of which he started his career. He represents, as does no other living actor, the stern tradition of the old tragedians.

Nowadays, tragedy is believed in various quarters to be more or less dead, and some people are wont to blame the modern actor. But Forbes Robertson must be excepted from any such taunt. His early training under Samuel Phelps puts him in direct succession to those old players who believed in sound acting—personal competence with nothing external to help it—and who did manage to keep tragedy alive. He himself is never tired of confessing how much he owes to "brave old Samuel, ultimus Romanorum," the unsparing purist—great alike in tragedy and comedy—who gave him his first drilling in the traditions of Siddons and Macready.

Perhaps this is one of the reasons why, with all his romantic bent, Forbes Robertson's highest claim to actual greatness should be his "Hamlet," where mere atmosphere and pictorial beauty are very far from being of first importance.

"After all," said Mr. Robertson in talking this over, "it is very well to be an artist, a musician, a poet, or a philosopher. When it comes to a part like Hamlet it is all no good unless one is an actor as well. I am certain I should never have made any success in it at all without the groundwork of a hard and sound schooling that my dear old master gave me.

"Perhaps it would be as well to emphasize this. Nothing worth doing will ever be done upon our stage if young actors get the idea into their heads that they can rub along without the most thorough and painstaking study and practice in elocution, in gesture, in all the thousand things that afford the actor his means of expression. You may talk of grace, but it is only the ease that comes after complete competence has been achieved. You may talk of imagination, but what is the use of imagination if you have not drained your physique to express what you imagine? I am happy enough to have been praised for my voice, but every inflection is the result of training. As it is, the mere physical strain of a really big part is so exhausting that I don't think any actor can play Hamlet properly two evenings in succession.

"I am delighted to say that I do not think now there is any truth in the idea that our young actors are, as a body, shirking their work. A little while ago, when the evils of the long-run system had not enforced their efforts at reform, there was, perhaps, what might be described as a wave of incompetence. Some of our young people did not take the trouble even to speak in any other than a conversational voice. They were, as the mummers would have put it, d—d confidential! But at the moment I see improvement everywhere, and there is an amount of splendid material among the crowds of earnest young men and women who are coming into the theatre.

"So far as poetic drama is concerned, however, I cannot bring myself to take quite so cheery an outlook. Pure imagination, expressed through an extremely delicate and subtle artistic convention, is a very different thing from just being as like life as possible. It needs a kind of all-round preliminary training that does not come the way of most of our young people, though I am very glad to notice the excellent and genuine work being done by the Academy of Dramatic Art.

Apart from all these phases of his art—and his personality, there is another thing that Forbes Robertson means to us, and to the stage. It means intelligence, broad sympathy, ripe culture, scholarship, sincerity, dignity of purpose.

Without any ostentation or banner-waving he has been almost surprisingly in the van of every movement for the advance of the theatre. As an actor he found himself—in Sir Arthur Pinero's "Profligate"—the first hero of the first English "problem-play." As a manager—despite his romantic traditions—he was the first of his own standing to produce a Shaw play—indeed his acting in "The Devil's Dilemma" and "Caesar and Cleopatra" did a good deal to start the Shaw cult in America. It is pleasant, by the way, to hear Mr. Robertson talk of Mr. Shaw, to find how he forgets the pranks and shouting in quiet respect for the real man and the sincere ideals underlying it all.

Then he was the first manager to give the late John Davidson a chance with "For the Crown." He was, too, the first living manager to challenge and convince German opinion with his "Hamlet."

just now, that talent suffers by prosperity, and that genius must be disreputable or nothing. I don't believe there is anything in the idea at all. If there were no talent, if there were no genius, there would soon enough be no public. It is just that there is more of everything now—more of the real thing and more pretence to it.

"As for the public, I have been simply amazed upon this last farewell tour of mine to find not only how touchingly the old playgoers seem to remember me, but what a tremendous and intelligent new public has arisen. It is in the great industrial centres that the change is most marked. How different a place Manchester is, for instance, from the days when I was a young actor there with the late Charles Calvert! Then there are the 'Potteries.' There was a time when 'the Potteries' used to be looked upon as something in the nature of outer darkness. Even now one gathers no very roseate impressions from Arnold Bennett's books. But you should have seen our Hanley audience for 'Hamlet'—and they understood it as well as the Lyceum pit itself!"

A National Theatre. It is from this point of view that Forbes Robertson, who, it will be remembered, was paid the appropriate compliment of being asked to open America's National theatre, is particularly eager in connection with the English scheme, to which he has already given invaluable help. "I must confess," he said, "that personally I am in favor of a building, and not only a mere company. But if there is to be a building it must be a good and worthy one, or it is worse than useless, and, to my mind, it should be opened at popular prices. It must be a people's movement—and it is my experience that the people are becoming every day more ready for the theatre.

"This is one reason why I think a fit building is necessary—a fine building some time or other. If possible, in every large town. It is all very well to say that when a play or a management becomes a vogue playgoers will crowd into any little place. They will do that when they are the sort of people who are reached by fashions and crazes. But the great mass of the public are different. They must be appealed to by the eye, with externals—as they are already in other things than the theatre. The man in the street must stop and ask, 'What is that fine building there?' and on being told that it is a theatre, may possibly say to himself, 'I will see if there is anything in this drama game.' And if the seats are cheap he may be lured in.

"I think that is the only way, commercial as it seems. It takes a long time for news about a 'cozy little show' to filter through to the millions that matter."

POLICE BOATS WHICH PATROL THE SEAS

Every Country in Europe Has Its Silent Cruisers Which Sail Without Lights

It is well known that the man who defies justice is no more free from her clutch on sea than on land.

Every fleet of Europe has its police boats cruising swiftly and stealthily in search of offenders, with no prescribed beat or time table to put them on their guard. To-night the searchlight of one such vessel may be sweeping the waters over the Dogger Bank; to-morrow she may be chasing smugglers' craft a hundred miles away, or dispensing justice to delinquents with all the authority of a high court.

For these patrol vessels are not only swiftly moving police boats; they are so many floating law courts, with their commanders for judges, empowered to take vessels and men alike into custody, to assess damages and to impose penalties, with no appeal from their decisions except to the court of appeal. From arrest to sentence their powers are complete, combining the authorities of the land police and the courts of justice.

They have a specially watchful eye for the fishermen, who are, without doubt, the most daring lawbreakers of all who "go down to the sea" in ships.

Fishing boats, it should be known, are privileged to use two distinct sets of lights—a white masthead light when their nets are in the water, the ordinary sailing lights when they are not engaged in trawling; and the skipper who wishes to have a clear "field" is often tempted to expose the unauthorized lamp. He is prepared to run the risk of being caught for the sake of the "clear road," which gives him a better scope for his operations.

Other skipper there are who boldly fish in forbidden waters, especially where the water is shallow and strewn with rocks, trusting to their fast-sailing boats to escape when danger threatens. But whether the travelers juggle with their lights or defy the law by catching, they know that the police of the sea are always on their track, and that one day they will be caught "red-handed."

Travel Without Lights.

Ocean "tramps" too, give ample work for our sea patrols; for they have a dangerous trick of creeping up through the darkness without lights, thus saving their oil at the risk of a collision—and also at the risk of a heavy penalty when they are discovered in the act. And although the dangerous practice is seldom engaged in except when well out at sea, every year yields its crop of penalties. If a vessel is not under proper control she is liable to be arrested; and if a skipper cannot give a satisfactory explanation he may expect trouble.

Not long ago the captain of a 50-ton smack, carrying fish to Scotland, was abandoned by his crew, and, in a foolish spirit of defiance, to show that he could dispense with their help, he set out on the return voyage, single-handed. He succeeded in bringing his boat safely back to the Humber; but it proved a dangerous adventure, for he narrowly escaped a long term of imprisonment.

Every year there are scores of cases in which vessels drift helplessly, carrying drunken crews; or the man who should be on the watch is asleep. If vessels in this condition are discovered by the sea police, there is sure to be an account to settle.

Land Has No Monopoly.

The land, too, has no monopoly of thieves. There are hundreds of sailors and fishermen whose hands are expert in "picking and stealing," and for which the sea police have to keep a vigilant lookout. Favorite forms of thieving are to draw up nets—which stretch for a mile or more—at a distance from the vessel to which they belong and appropriate the fish caught in them, or to carry off the nets themselves, and claim salvage for them.

TOURS WORLD ON MOTORCYCLE.

Augustus Karekus, the Greek motorcyclist who is touring the world on his two-wheeler, is now on his way to San Francisco, from which point he will sail to Hawaii. Before winter he expects to have travelled through every state in the American Union and the Philippines. He will then start for the Old Country, finally ending his worldwide tour in his native land.

AN APPRECIATION OF JOAQUIN MILLER

He Drew His Inspiration From the Surroundings of Western Plains and in Mountains

In many respects this poet of the forest, this self-made student of the life of the western plains and mountains, was unique, says the Christian Herald. He was not the representative of a class but a class in himself. He drew inspiration from his surroundings as they were, he lived close to the great throbbing heart of nature, and then strung his lyre in harmony with the story she had to tell. He to interpret the mountains and the valleys, the backwoods and the camps, the rivers and the forests—in a word, the life and labors and pastimes, the joys and the sorrows of the western people—in a cadence which thrilled their hearts; he touched the chords of their nature and, ere they were aware, they listened to the strains he evoked.

He was typical of the mighty west in all its moods and tones; it was his first love and his last; he never forgot the home ties nor wished to cast off the early influences which called forth the splendid effort of song which was to make his name known and loved not alone in his own land but wherever the English language is spoken.

True, he was a wanderer at times, but his heart ever turned to the early associations which gave bent to his native genius. He was not a great poet in our modern acceptance of the term; he soared to no great heights of fancy nor did he attempt any sublime ethics. All his life he was a man of the people, and he became a poet of the people, loved for his simplicity and the homely themes he treated.

TO LODGE PROTEST AGAINST THE BREACH

Liberal Members of Canadian Club Will Take Up Chief Justice Hunter's Speech

SPEAKERS CONDEMN PARTIZAN ATTITUDE

Disruption of Club Threatened if Occurrence is Permitted Again

The remarkable act of Chief Justice Hunter in indulging in a partizan speech at the Canadian Club dinner on Tuesday, which is described by the provincial secretary as "the noblest thought of the Canadian people," does not commend itself to the Liberal members of the Canadian Club of Victoria.

The breach both of the rules of the club and the traditions of the bench were strongly commented upon at a meeting of the Liberal ward executives last evening. The meeting recognized that a vote of censure coming from that meeting would not have the same power as one expressing the opinion of the Liberal members of the Canadian Club, and H. A. Munn, a past president, and now provincial vice-president for British Columbia, undertook to collect the opinions of Liberal members with a view to lodging a protest with the president and executive of the club. Members who took part in the discussion stated that the result of the introduction of politics into the club would lead to its disruption unless the movement was checked.

President J. Kingham, who introduced the matter, alluded to the subject as one which Liberals in the city could not ignore. Coming as it did from the chief justice of the Supreme Court of the province, the moral effect of the speech on the community could not fail to be deleterious.

Regretted It.

H. C. Brewster remarked that though he was not a member of the club here he could not help regretting the breach of precedent, and the example set to others.

H. A. Munn agreed that the impression given him was that the declaration of policy had been prepared beforehand, and that while the Liberals present at the dinner were not in a position to lodge a protest at the time, they did not intend to allow the matter to rest.

R. L. Drury said that he would have withdrawn from the dinner in protest had not another engagement prevented him from attending. The breach of etiquette was unprecedented.

Dr. Lewis Hall also adversely commented on the judge's action.

Too Frequent.

Ex-Alderman Peden observed that these incursions into party politics by men who should be above these matters had become too frequent of late in Victoria. There had been an example of the lack of propriety in the secretary of the Vancouver Island Development League taking part in the recent majority contest.

The Liberal members present then conferred with the purpose of taking joint action in the way of protest.

SIX GOOD REASONS

J. Allen Baker, M.P., States His Reasons for Supporting Laurier Policy.

J. Allen Baker, M.P., a famous Canadian in the Imperial parliament, gives six good reasons in support of his contention that Sir Wilfrid Laurier's policy is the better of the two:

1. It does directly secure what is indubitably the desire of very many Canadians—the presence of ships of war in Canadian waters.

2. By it Canada would repay her debt by definitely lightening the burden of responsibility that rests on the British Admiralty.

3. By adopting such a policy, Canada would simply be applying one of the basic principles on which our Imperial relations rest.

4. By the application of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's policy alone can a logical limit be set to Canadian naval expenditures. If Canada has to consider the needs of England and the Empire as well as her own, there will be no method of fixing her expenditure. If Canada at some future time were to establish a Canadian navy as well, time will have been lost, and parliament would be called upon to make financial sacrifices that would react unfavorably on Canadian prosperity and development.

5. If Canadians wish to help in bearing the burden of naval preparation, they must be prepared to agree themselves, and the only way to induce them to do so is to have a national fleet.

6. Sir Wilfrid Laurier's plan does not throw us precipitately into those problems of Imperial federation which a continued policy of Canadian contributions must necessarily involve.—London Chronicle.

MEMENTOS FOR A QUEEN.

Among the many letters of congratulation received by Queen Alexandra on the jubilee of her arrival in England was one from a couple of old-age pensioners (Mr. and Mrs. Thompson, of Willenhall), who were married on the same day as her Majesty. Mr. Thompson asked her Majesty's acceptance of "the enclosed mementos of your marriage, bought on our own wedding." The mementos consisted of a medal struck in commemoration of the royal marriage and a silk book-marker bearing portraits of the King and Queen. Not only did the Queen Mother accept the gifts, but she directed that a letter be sent to the aged couple expressing her thanks and enclosing $10 "with which to buy some small comforts."

Canada is testifying to the faith that exists in the great Northern Interior of British Columbia. In practically every section of the Dominion, from Victoria to Halifax, people are investing their money in Port Edward townsite lots. There is no investment open to the public to-day that can compare with this industrial annex to the great Pacific terminus of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway.

Many Victorians have already secured lots in Port Edward. This is the original sale at starting prices. Port Edward offers the same opportunity now that Prince Rupert offered three years ago. Port Edward is already well established. Don't wait until prices are raised. Get your lots now. Complete details are yours on request.

Port Edward, B.C.
 Prince Rupert's
 Industrial Annex

This new townsite offers a great opportunity to everyone who takes advantage of it now. Don't doubt; prove it. No matter whether you ever invested a cent in your life heretofore, you can do it now and make just as profitable returns as the man who has engineered investments all his life. Port Edward gives you a clear field, and removes the difficulty of finding an investment that is reliable. Port Edward is absolutely reliable, is backed by a company comprising some of the most highly respected business and professional men in Canada, with a capital of $1,000,000, all subscribed. The future of Port Edward is beyond speculation; it is thoroughly assured. It is not likely that you know much about Port Edward yet, because the world at large is only just awakening to the immense future of the North Pacific section of Canada. Port Edward's future is wrapped up in the future of Prince Rupert, Pacific terminus of the Grand Trunk Pacific, the transcontinental with the lowest grade on record. Prince Rupert startled and surprised the world. Port Edward offers the same opening to-day that Prince Rupert offered three years ago. Port Edward supplies every requirement of the industrial development that is now beginning to enter the wonderfully rich field that will be created by the completion of the G. T. P. and accentuated by the opening of the Panama canal. Prince Rupert, it is well known, cannot supply the industrial waterfront sites that these industries demand. Port Edward, situated on the mainland of British Columbia, adjacent to Prince Rupert and on the main line of the G. T. P., fulfills every possible requirement of industry better than any other townsite on the Pacific Coast. Important industrial enterprises are already planning for locations at Port Edward; some have already secured sites and are developing plants. Here modern industry will make use of the natural resources of one of the richest areas in the world. The development of this section will outdo anything that Western Canada has yet seen. Enhancement of values will necessarily be very rapid. Get the facts about this country; read the descriptive literature and substantiate every statement made. By learning about this great Last West NOW you can profit by its development. Sit right down now and send in the coupon. To do so does not obligate you in any sense whatsoever. You'll regret it later if you do not now take advantage of this great opportunity.

SAYS MORE PROFIT IN SANITARY MILK

New York Agriculturist Takes
Up Problem of Producing
Pure Milk on the Farm

IS MORE PROFITABLE THAN UNCLEAN MILK

Poorly Cared for Milk Will Not Produce as Much Butter and Cheese

According to the Winnipeg Telegram Dean Cook, of the New York school of agriculture, takes up the problem of producing sanitary milk on the farm.
Clean milk, he says, would increase the dairyman's market as a business proposition, entirely apart from the question of health.

It is almost impossible for one to understand just why our farm business should be so thoroughly filled with worthless traditions to which we stick with unyielding tenacity. Here is one:
No business on earth would cling to and insist upon the sort of hygiene which has surrounded our dairy herds and the care of the milk. If we might entirely eliminate the humanitarian side of the question and stand pat that dirty milk and rassy milk and tainted milk were just as healthful, it would seem that just common horse sense, of which the farmer is supposed to possess his full share, would long ago have demonstrated that people would buy more and at a higher price if clean and attractive.

Manufacturers of foods have bid the world come and see "how clean" and it was clean at least so far as the ordinary preventable filth was concerned.
But this cow keeper, this man with a product which could not be made artificially, this man with a feed the world must have or go out of business absolutely, did not, and as yet has not,
a few exceptions noted, unless forced by statute law, and then almost at the point of the shotgun, accepted and cleaned up.

I have heard men almost frantic over the inspection of their stables, ex-cusing themselves because the inspector was not versed in the details of farm operations. But there was one thing he did not know and that was that a manure plastered stable festooned with cobwebs was not a fit place to produce milk. I have seen panic prevail where men were gathered together to discuss this awful trespass upon their "personal liberty," and the only way out of this dilemma was to say that "your milk cannot come into our market unless you clean up."

Cities have done woman's service and very wholesome stable surroundings are found in sections supplying crude milk and cream.
No business was ever more blasphe-mized or lied about than the statement that these products (butter and cheese) were made in a celebrated dairy section with a high altitude and the purest spring water, and hence must be pure. All of this said, when the writer knew that the cows and the milk handling was ancient and bad, I am anxious to know why we should as dairymen longer put up a bluff. Why not square ourselves on this question and pass a law giving either a board of health, or a department of agriculture
the power to say to every milk maker, whether his milk is used raw or manufactured, that certain reasonable sanitation must prevail and that the manufacturer of milk products must have the same kind of milk in every way now demanded by city boards of health or his milk cannot be manufactured into food.

Our dairy schools and state experts have spent more than 90 per cent. of their time since these agencies were organized in getting makers out of trouble when they had had milk and teaching them what to do next time.
The whole scheme is absolutely ridiculous when viewed from a present day standpoint.

Let us state the situation like this:
An institution buying milk, any small part of which is going to the city market, has an inspector looking after the stables and the milk. With reasonable watchfulness on the part of the buyer
he can guarantee his product.

We need the same backing now given the city milk inspector, viz.: the right to say to this man that "certain evidences of environment and care of sterilia is sufficient evidence that your milk cannot be good, and we have no time to take the question to the courts." This poorly cared for milk will not produce as much butter and cheese, let alone the quality, and so we will find this butter and cheese-maker competing with the protected city buyer and obliged to take milk having from 10 to 20 per cent. less value and turn it out as having full value.

LLOYD GEORGE HAS GOOD SENSE OF HUMOR

According to a well known London periodical, visitors to the House of Commons are said often to be disappointed with the appearance and bearing of Mr. Lloyd George. Expecting to find a rather boisterous demagogue with a hectoring contempt of his opponents, they see a dandified, pale, and delicate looking man who wears a monocle and speaks with a soft voice that is said to be so excellent a thing in women. A correspondent of the New York Evening Post reminds us of the old lady who was informed, at a certain fugal funeral, that Gladstone had just entered the church.
"Dear me," she exclaimed, "I hope he won't make a disturbance." In the same way the uninformed visitor to London is apt to suppose that Mr.
George's political stock in-trade is to make disturbances.

One of the famous chancellor's characteristics is an intense appreciation of a joke that is against himself. At the recent unveiling of his portrait,
the gift of some Welsh admirers, no one enjoyed more than himself the artless statement of the chairman that for some weeks past the attention of the subscribers had been occupied by the problem, "Where shall we hand Lloyd George?"

He himself tells another beautiful story of a man who was presented with a testimonial for saving someone from drowning. The hero modestly depreciated the praises showered upon him and remarked: "Really, I have done nothing to deserve this reward. I saw a man struggling in the water, and, as no one else was by, I saw he would be drowned if I didn't save him. So I jumped in, swam to him, turned him over to see that he wasn't Lloyd George, and then pulled him out."

MADAME WANTED HENS.
Amusing Example of Official Red Tape
in Dispute in France.

According to an Eastern exchange,
an amusing example of official red tape is furnished by a dispute between a state department and ex-President Fallieres about the poultry yard at which Mme. Fallieres kept at the presidential chateau at Rambouillet.

Mme. Fallieres found when she took up residence a very inferior breed of poultry to that which she boasted at her country home in Lot-et-Garonne.
She imported thirty-four of her best poultry and the state department of domains added two black Houdan cock-ereels.

Now that she has left the official residence, Mme. Fallieres proposes to take her poultry with her. But the department has intervened. Mme. Fal-lieres took thirty-four fowls to Ram-bouillet, said the department. Mme.
Fallieres is at liberty to take away thirty-four fowls—no more.

The ex-president's wife protested energetically that in seven years the original fowls had multiplied considerably. The department replied that in that case the imported hens had taken the place of the original number which Mme. Fallieres found on arrival, and that they consequently did not belong to her. Moreover, proceeded the department, if the number has increased so greatly the poultry must be the descendants of the two state cockereels.

Mme. Fallieres replied that the state cockereels died long ago. Granted, said the department, then the cockereels which are there now take the place of those so generously provided by the state.
There the dispute stands at present.

TO-DAY IN CANADIAN HISTORY

Sometimes the American Loyalists are depicted as blind and stupid in their devotion to the King and to the royal government. Many of them, however, were earnestly opposed to the oppressive and aggressive acts of George III., and, if they did not consider rebellion the proper means for obtaining redress, were by no means satisfied to remain passive under grievances. For instance, the Loyalists who received grants on the St. Lawrence were hardly settled in their new homes when they began to petition for an Assembly and a division of the province which would free them from the French system of civil law in force throughout Canada since the passing of the Quebec Act. A petition dated April 11, 1785, was signed by that prominent Loyalist, Sir John Johnson, and others, making a number of suggestions afterwards embodied in the Constitutional Act of 1791. After pointing out the hardships involved in the tenure of land under the Quebec Act, they proposed the division of the province into two, and the subdivision of the western district into counties, with Cataract (later Kingston) as the capital; and concluded, "Your petitioners implore your Majesty that the blessing of British laws and British government may be extended to the said settlements."

NEW FINANCING IS NOTED ON STREET New York Fairly Firm in Tone as Consequence of European News

IMPROVED FEELING IN EXCHANGE TRADES Coronation Gold and Blackbird Have Undiminished Demand on Call To-day

JULY AND SEPTEMBER CLOSE WITH STRENGTH Support Tendered Sufficient to Drive Back Weakness of Opening Price

(By F. W. Stevenson & Co.) New York, April 11.—While the market during the forenoon displayed a fairly firm tone as a consequence of the more cheerful tenor of European advices, still it was apparent that sentiment was being influenced by the news of new financing inaugurated by the St. Paul and Pennsylvania. This fact was rather accentuated by the selling movement which occurred in the last hour, the same being induced in part by the weakness of New York Central, which was said to be negotiating in Europe for notes on a basis which according to the advices in circulation suggests that the cost of new financing is likely to prove to be a burden to some corporations not strongly entrenched.

Victoria, April 11.—A continuation of improved feeling was noted in trading on the local stock exchange to-day. Coronation Gold was stronger and acted firmly in spite of the period of inactivity in the stock. Blackbird was bid so high yesterday, but demand was undiminished. Grandly was changed, the unsettled condition of exchange markets in New York and Boston finding logical reflection in such an issue. The balance of the list were firm to steady.

(By F. W. Stevenson & Co.) Chicago, April 11.—As a result of to-day's trading in wheat, July and September options closed 1/4 to 3/4 stronger than last night, and May 3/4 off. There was early weakness, a continuance of yesterday's selling, but the support tendered at bottom was sufficient to produce reactions. Snowstorms in the northwest and fear of a late season for the spring crop was the chief bull influence on the advance. The prospect of clearing weather over the entire wheat and corn regions of the country was the bearish influence. Seldom has this wheat trade had more favorable reports on a big growing crop than were sent in to-day by practically all the experts now going over the banner wheat sections of Oklahoma, Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska.

BUILD ORANGE HALL
 IN NORTH PARK ST.

Application for Incorporation of Company Made to Provincial Government

BERNATH ARBITRATION
 RESUMES ITS SITTING

Land Purchasing Agent for British Columbia Electric Railway is on Stand

Application has been made for the incorporation of the Victoria Orange Hall Company, with a capital of $50,000, in 10,000 shares of $5 each. A site for the proposed Orange hall was purchased this morning for $19,000 on the north side of North Park street, between Quadra and Cook streets. The property is described as lot 4, and two feet of lots 1, 2 and 3, being part of five-acre lot No. 8.

As announced in the Times some months ago, steps will be taken immediately towards the erection of a $30,000 Orange hall. This structure will have a basement and three stories. The ground floor will be divided into two stores; the second floor will consist of a large assembly hall, and the top floor will be divided into one large hall and two small ones.

The chairman of the provisional board of directors is J. G. Grimason; the treasurer, W. Duncan, and the secretary, O. J. B. Lane. Shareholders are confined to members of the Orange Association of Victoria. This undertaking was decided upon at a mass meeting of the Orange Association in St. John's hall three months ago.

A further session of the arbitration on the Bernath and Harman claim at Humpback for right-of-way in connection with Sooke waterworks, was held this morning.

Among the witnesses was H. D. Miller, formerly right-of-way purchasing agent for the British Columbia Electric railway, who required an easement over land in this district for the power line from Jordan river to the Tod Inlet plant. Mr. Miller mentioned prices at which land has been acquired in the Goldstream district.

The city requires about 3.25 acres of land from this property for the right-of-way, while the owners state that the damage inflicted thereby should compel the city to acquire the whole of the land comprised in the holding.

City Solicitor Robertson appeared for the owners.

The arbitrators sitting are Hugh Kennedy, James Forman, and W. J. Cox.

RHEUMATISM YIELDS TO ZAM-BUK

Read This Lady's Experience.

Just at this season many people find themselves suffering from aches and pains of rheumatism, sciatica, etc. For these, Zam-Buk is a sure cure.

Mrs. Mary Harman, Wheatley, Ont., writes: "I had rheumatism very badly. It affected my right arm and leg, and was so bad that I could not put my hand to my head or behind me. I was quite helpless, could not do my work, and could not even dress myself, but had to be attended to like a child. The rheumatism in my leg was so bad that at times I could hardly walk."

"Naturally I tried various remedies, but they seemed to do me no good. A friend advised me to try Zam-Buk. I obtained some, and had it rubbed thoroughly into the affected muscles. Before the first box was used I was very much better. I could move around the house with ease, and dress myself, and needed very little personal attention. I continued with the treatment, rubbing Zam-Buk in thoroughly every day, and in a few weeks' time the rheumatism was driven completely out of my system. The cure was permanent, too, and since that time I have never been troubled with rheumatism."

It is just as good for skin injuries and diseases, eczema, scalp sores, eruptions, piles, cuts, burns, bruises, scalds, etc. All druggists and stores. 50c. box, or by mail from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

Former Premier and Mayor to Be Subpoenaed in City Clerk's Inquiry.

When the investigation into the city clerk's office is resumed this evening Ex-Mayor Robert Beaven, former premier of the province, and mayor of Victoria in 1892, 1893 and 1894 will testify. His regime alone goes back, with the exception of that of John Grant, who is now in the Yukon, to the early days of Mr. Dowler's association with the city hall and the evidence will be interesting as an echo of other days.

DANGER OF A SNEER.

The strangest thing yet in the line of lock-outs is threatened in England—noting less than a national lock-out in the boot trade resulting from a sneer! Recently a girl trade unionist was dismissed for sneering at a non-unionist in a Leicester co-operative factory. A strike was declared to secure her reinstatement, and the demand was widened to include the dismissal of all non-unionists. If the matter is not settled at once the employers' organization may declare a national lock-out on the ground that the workers have violated their agreement by striking.
