HISTORY.

The Association had its origin in a conference of merchants and others interested in the maintenance of the commercial rights and privileges possessed by the United States in China, held at 59 Wall Street, New York, on Thursday, January 6, 1898. Mr. James McGee of the Standard Oil Company presided, and it was resolved that a committee of five be appointed by the chair to confer with the appropriate committee of the Chamber of Commerce and, if deemed desirable, to communicate with other commercial bodies throughout the country in relation to the methods to be adopted to conserve the rights of citizens of the United States in the Chinese Empire. The committee thus appointed consisted of Mr. Everett Frazar of Frazar & Company, Mr. S. D. Brewster of Deering, Milliken & Company, Captain E. L. Zalinski of the Bethlehem Iron Company, Mr. Clarence Cary of Cary & Whitridge, and Mr. John Foord of the Journal of Commerce & Commercial Bulletin. This committee conferred with the Committee on Foreign Commerce and the Revenue Laws of the Chamber of Commerce, and submitted to it the following petition, together with other data bearing on the trade and treaty rights of American citizens in China:

To the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York :

The undersigned merchants, manufacturers and others interested in the large and rapidly growing export trade of the United States in the Empire of China, believing that the movements of European powers recently occurring, and likely to further occur within the territory of such Empire, affect, and may ultimately prove highly detrimental to the trade privileges now enjoyed there by American citizens under their existing treaty rights, hereby respectfully urge the Chamber of Commerce, of the State of New York, to consider, and to take such immediate action in the premises as may be deemed expedient and proper, to the end that the present situation may be brought to the attention of the Department of State, at Washington, and that the important commercial interests of the United States, together with existing treaty rights of her citizens in China, may be duly and promptly further safeguarded.

Through its chairman, Mr. Gustav H. Schwab, the Committee on Foreign Commerce and the Revenue Laws submitted the following report to the Chamber of Commerce at its regular monthly meeting of February 3, 1898 :

Your Committee find that the citizens of the United States in China are accorded certain trade rights and privileges under three treaties concluded at various times between the United States Government and that of the Empire of China, guaranteeing to the citizens of the United States, under the so-called favored nation clause all right, privileges and favors granted by China to any other nation. Furthermore they find that the export trade from the United States to China and Hong Kong, as far as it could be determined from the returns of trade, has increased in value from the sum of $8,117,059 in 1893, to the sum of $17,978,065 in 1897. These figures are incomplete, as the sums quoted and taken from the Chinese customs returns represent goods carried directly between an American and a Chinese port, whereas goods transhipped in a British or foreign port appear under the head of imports from the intermediate country. The total quantity of exports from the United States to China, therefore, in reality is without doubt considerably larger. The returns given by your Committee, nevertheless, indicate a considerable growth in the exports from the United States to China in the present condition of trade with that country, which is limited to certain treaty ports, and it is to be expected that with the further opening of the Empire to Western civilization, and the removal of restrictions to trade now existing, the export of American products to China will continue to show an increasing growth.

Steps have been taken by European powers to occupy Chinese territory, and to acquire title to such territory whereby the jurisdiction of the Chinese Empire over the territory thus ceded would cease and the laws of the foreign government would prevail.

Under these circumstances your Committee believe that the privileges in China, now enjoyed by American citizens under existing treaty rights, should be jealously guarded and carefully watched, and that the Chamber of Commerce should impress upon our Government the increasing value of the export trade of the country to the Empire of China and the imperative necessity for its protection, in view of the action taken by European powers in the East.

Your Committee, therefore, submit the following memorial to the President of the United States, embodying these views and urging that steps be taken to safeguard the commercial interests of the United States in China:

*To the President of the United States,
Washington, D. C. :*

The Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York beg leave respectfully to represent:

That there are important changes going on in the relations of European powers to the Empire of China affecting the territory of that Empire, and to that extent affecting the privileges enjoyed under existing treaty rights by American citizens trading in and with China.

That the trade of the United States to China is now rapidly increasing, and is destined, with the further opening of that country, to assume large proportions unless arbitrarily debarred by the action of foreign governments, the exports from the United States to China and Hong Kong, as far as they can be traced, having grown from $8,117,059 in 1893, to $17,978,965 in 1897.

That, in view of the changes threatening to future trade development of the United States in China, the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York respectfully and earnestly urge that such proper steps be taken as will commend themselves to your wisdom for the prompt and energetic defense of the existing treaty rights of our citizens in China, and for the preservation and protection of their important commercial interests in that Empire.

And your memorialists will ever pray.
All of which is respectfully submitted.

NEW YORK, January 28, 1898.

The report and memorial were adopted, and it was ordered that the memorial be engrossed, and signed by the officers of the Chamber, and sent to the President of the United States.

To this communication the following reply was received from the Secretary of State:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,

WASHINGTON, February 11, 1898.

A. E. ORR, Esq.,

President Chamber of Commerce, New York, N. Y.:

Sir: The President has referred to this Department the memorial of the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York, dated the 3d instant, in regard to the effect upon American trade of the changes now going on in the relations of European powers with the Empire of China.

This Government having been the first to bring about the opening of the ports of China to foreign commerce, and the commercial relations of the United States with the Chinese Empire having been of large and growing importance during the forty years since its treaties with that Empire went into effect, this Department necessarily feels a deep interest in conserving and expanding the volume of trade with that country. I have pleasure, therefore, in assuring the Chamber of Commerce of the State New York, that this subject is being given the most careful consideration.

Respectfully yours,

(Signed) JOHN SHERMAN.

The Chambers of Commerce of Philadelphia, Boston, Cleveland, and San Francisco were also communicated with, and those of Philadelphia, Boston and San Francisco took action by sending similar communications to the President.

The American Asiatic Association was formally organized at a meeting held in New York on June 9th, 1898, with an enrolled membership of a little over fifty. The membership now numbers 218. The activity of the organization has been duly recorded in its Journals, nine of which have already been issued. The Association has addressed itself in a variety of ways to the education of public sentiment in the United States in regard to the magnitude of the industrial and commercial interests involved in the maintenance of our existing treaties with China. By bringing about the formation of the American Association of China and the American Asiatic Association of Japan, it has greatly expanded the representation of American interests in the Far East.

From the American Association of China this Association has received a number of valuable suggestions bearing on the necessity of informing their fellow-countrymen at home in regard to the views of American merchants residing at Shanghai and other Chinese ports, and of keeping before the Government of the United States the necessity of assuming a firm attitude in dealing with questions affecting the future of trade in China. These have been brought to the notice of the President of the United States and the Secretary of State, and have received courteous attention. But it became evident to those charged with the conduct of the work of the Association that to exercise its legitimate influence in shaping the course of this Government in dealing with questions affecting trade in China, it was absolutely essential that the public sentiment of the country should be better informed and should find more emphatic expression than heretofore. The campaign of public education conducted by the Association through the press and by letters and pamphlets, as well as by its own journals, has prepared the way for the general appreciation and support of the policy of the Administration in securing an international guarantee for the maintenance of equality of commercial opportunity in the markets of China. Declarations have been made, at the instance of the Government of the United States, by Great Britain, France, Germany, Russia, Italy and Japan to the following effect:

1. That none of them will in any wise interfere with any treaty port or any vested interest within any so-called "sphere of interest" or leased territory it may have in China.

2. That the Chinese Treaty Tariff of the time being shall apply to all merchandise landed or shipped to all such ports as are within such "spheres of interest" (unless they be "Free Ports") no matter to what nationality it shall belong, and that duties so leviable shall be collected by the Chinese Government.

3. That none of them will levy any higher harbor dues on vessels of another nationality frequenting any port in such "sphere" than shall be levied on vessels of its own nationality, and no higher railroad charges shall be levied over lines built, controlled or operated within its sphere, on merchandise belonging to citizens or subjects of other nationalities transported through such "sphere" than shall be levied on similar merchandise belonging to its own nationality transported over equal distances.

The Association has fully appreciated the value of this great diplomatic achievement, so thoroughly in the line of its own activity, but it has been compelled to recognize the fact that this is merely the first step towards the permanent establishment of the open door for commerce in China. There are so many international problems of the first magnitude, chief among them being the preservation of the integrity of the Chinese Empire itself, bound up with the maintenance and extension of American influence in the Far East, as to render it certain that there is more important work before the Association even than any it has yet undertaken. In addition to questions of broader scope, the issues raised by the pending revision of the commercial clauses of the treaty of Tientsin, the changed status of foreigners before the law in Japan, and the policy to be pursued in regard to trade and taxation in the Philippine Islands are among the subjects which will demand the attention of the Association in the immediate future.

American Treaty Rights in China.

In presenting the petition to the Chamber of Commerce Committee the following information, prepared by Mr. Clarence Cary, was filed in regard to the history and status of existing treaties between the United States and the Empire of China:

The first treaty, which was concluded July 3, 1844, at Wang Hiya in China, by Caleb Cushing on one side, and Tsiyang, the Chinese Commissioner, on the other (commonly referred to as the Wang Hiya Treaty), contained the following provision under Article 2:

“Citizens of the United States resorting to China for the purposes of commerce will pay the duties of import and export prescribed in the tariff, which is fixed by and made part of this treaty. They shall in no case be subject to other or higher duties than are or shall be required of the people of any other nation whatever * * * and if additional advantages and privileges of whatever description be conceded hereafter by China to any other nation, the United States and the citizens thereof shall be entitled thereupon to a complete, equal and impartial participation in the same.”

This treaty, by Article III, named Kwangchow, Amoy, Suchow, Ningpo, and Shanghai as the five ports which the citizens of the United States were permitted to frequent, and where they might “reside with their families and trade,” and also “proceed at pleasure with their vessels and merchandise from any foreign port” (to any of such five ports, or from any one of such five ports, to the other).

Attached to the treaty is the tariff to be paid upon goods imported and exported by the United States at the Custom Houses of the five ports referred to.

The next treaty was concluded June 18, 1858, at Tient-sin, by the American Representative, William B. Reed and the Chinese functionary Kweiliang. This treaty says on the particular point we are now concerned with, under section XXX (the first mention of the “most favored nation clause”), as follows:

“The contracting parties hereby agree that should at any time ‘Ta-Tsing Empire’ (which is the style in the treaties used in describing China), ‘grant to any nation or the merchants or citizens of any nation any right, privilege or favor connected either with navigation, commerce, political or other intercourse which is not conferred by this treaty, such right, privilege and favor shall at once freely inure to the benefit of the United States, its public officers, merchants and citizens."

This Tient-sin treaty also contains provisions relating to then existing treaty ports, and stipulates, under Article XIV that the citizens of the United States are permitted to frequent the same, "and any other ports or place hereafter by treaty with other powers or with the United States opened to commerce, and to reside with their families and trade there, and to proceed at pleasure with their vessels and merchandise from any of these ports to any other of them."

Article XV is to the effect that at each of the open ports, citizens of the United States "shall be permitted to import from abroad and sell, purchase and export, all merchandise of which the importation or exportation is not prohibited by laws of the Empire;" and after referring to the tariff of duties as being substantially the same as that fixed by the treaty of Wang Hiya, above referred to, "except so far as it may be modified by treaties with other nations, it being expressly agreed that citizens of the United States shall never pay a higher duty than those paid by the 'most favored nation.'"

A convention between China and the United States, concluded at Shanghai, November 8, 1858, between the same Mr. Reed and Kweiliang, refers to the foregoing Tient-sin Treaty and to its stipulation that the tariff shall be as in the Wang Hiya Treaty, in effect recapitulating the clause last above quoted and fixes new tariff and regulations. A further convention of the same date between the same parties and at the same place, has reference to liquidation of claims of American citizens, and does not concern the point we are at present considering.

The next treaty was concluded July 28, 1868, at Washington, by William H. Seward, on the part of the United States, and Anson G. Burlingame and two others (native officials), on behalf of China. This is styled: "Additional articles to the treaty between the United States and China of June 18, 1858, etc." It contains nothing of consequence on the point we are now considering, but in nowise changes the trade rights. The "most favored nation clause" in this treaty refers rather to rights of United States citizens "in respect to travel or residence, etc."

The next treaty was concluded November 17, 1880, at Pekin, by James B. Angell and two others on behalf of the United States, and Pao Chun and another, on behalf of China. It refers to the foregoing and supplemental treaty of the same date, proclaimed by the United States on October 5, 1881, refers to the foregoing treaty and recites the fact of certain points of incompleteness in existing treaties between the two Governments, and in Article III, provides as follows :

“His Imperial Majesty, the Emperor of China, hereby promises and agrees that no other kind or higher rate of tonnage dues or duties for imports or exports or coastwise trade shall be imposed or levied in the open ports of China upon vessels wholly belonging to the citizens of the United States or upon the produce, manufactures or merchandise imported in the same from the United States or from any foreign country, or upon the produce, manufactures or merchandise exported in the same to the United States, or to any foreign country, or transported in the same from one open port of China to another, than are imposed or levied on vessels or cargoes from any other nation or on those of Chinese subjects.”

The above treaty of November 17, 1880, and the supplemental one proclaimed October 5, 1881, will be found in the United States Statutes at Large, Vol. 22, pp. 826 to 829.

The above last mentioned treaties contain nothing else of material importance on the point immediately concerned, but it is of interest to note that that is the treaty which restricts Chinese immigration, its provisions being further put into effect in the United States by the comprehensive United States Statute of May 6, 1882, found in United States Statutes at Large, Vol. 22, p. 58, and subsequent ones of like purport.

THE CHINA ASSOCIATION.

The China Association, on the lines of which the American Asiatic Association has been formed, was organized in London in 1889, "to represent, express, and give effect to the opinion of the British Mercantile Community in their political and commercial relations with the Chinese and Japanese," and "to promote and protect the trade, commerce, shipping, and manufactures of the United Kingdom, India, and the Colonies with and in China, Hong Kong, and Japan." This Association has proved itself a power in all matters affecting the commercial relations of England in the Far East. It has branches and committees in Shanghai, Hong Kong, and Yokohama, and its general membership in Great Britain and the East includes 537 individual names. The relations between the Association and the British Foreign Office are intimate and mutually advantageous in respect of the collection and diffusion of accurate information.

The substantial identity of purpose of the two organizations was recognized at the fifth annual general meeting of the members of the China Association held at Shanghai on April 22, 1898. On that occasion the following resolution was unanimously adopted: "That this meeting hears with pleasure of the formation in New York of an American China Association, specially to watch the commercial interests of the United States in the Far East, and tenders to the new society its hearty sympathy, feeling convinced that British and American interests are identical in the joint desire of both countries to secure for all nationalities open trading facilities in China."

THE AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF CHINA.

In compliance with a suggestion addressed by the Executive Committee of the American Asiatic Association to Messrs. F. E. Haskell, J. F. Seaman, J. H. McMichael and W. S. Emens of Shanghai, to form a branch of the Association there, "The American Association of China" was provisionally organized at a meeting held in the Municipal Board Room on Friday, December 16, 1898. The following resolutions were adopted at that meeting, and form the basis of the organization:

"Resolved, that an association of Americans residing in the Far East be hereby formed in accordance with the circular invitation to the meeting dated 9th December, to be called 'THE AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF CHINA,' the primary objects of which shall be the furtherance of American Trade and other interests in China and the defence of American rights.

"Resolved, that such Americans present as favor the establishment of the Association may subscribe at this meeting to the roll, and they shall thereby provisionally organize the Association.

THE AMERICAN ASIATIC ASSOCIATION OF JAPAN.

The American Asiatic Association of Japan was organized on June 26, 1879, and its first annual meeting was held on November 29, 1879. At that time various subjects of commercial interest were discussed which had previously been under consideration by the Executive Committee. Among these were the following:

1st. The Establishment of an American Bank in the Orient with Branches in Japan.

2d. The Organization of a School for American Children at Yokohama.

3d. The Provision of a Charitable Fund for Americans in Yokohama and Tokyo.

4th. A Reply to the Department of State, Isthmian Canal Commission.

An opportunity for the advantageous exercise of the organization presented itself in the arrival at Yokohama of the American Volunteer Soldiers, returning home from the Philippine Islands. The Committee appointed two of its members and its Treasurer to act in co-operation with the American Ladies of Yokohama in providing means for the reception and assistance of these men in a hospitable manner.

In accordance with the request of The American Asiatic Association, Messrs. McGrath, Taylor, Gill, Olmstead and Atkinson were invited to form a branch of the Association at Kobe, and this was accomplished in harmony with the suggestions made.
