INTRODUCTION.

---

WHEN Milton gave to the world in 1671 his dramatic poem Samson Agonistes, he set before it a short discourse "Of that sort of Dramatic Poem which is call'd Tragedy." The discourse opens thus:—

"Tragedy, as it was antiently compos'd, hath been ever held the gravest, moralest, and most profitable of all other Poems: therefore said by Aristotle to be of power by raising pity and fear, or terror, to purge the mind of those and such like passions, that is to temper and reduce them to just measure with a kind of delight stirred up by reading or seeing those passions well imitated."

Of the emotions to which man is subject, pity and terror are the most urgent and tense and the most completely concentrated to a single point of time. Unlike the appetites hunger and desire, to which they bear a certain analogy in respect of urgency, tension and concentration, the emotions pity and terror have a large share of unselfishness; for pity is mainly unselfish, though closely knit up with the consideration of what one would himself feel in the circumstances of the person pitied; and terror, though primarily selfish, is largely called into play by circumstances affecting other persons and not the person assailed by the emotion. Thus these two emotions which it is the gift of tragic poetry to raise and purify are not only extreme in their urgency, tension, and concentration, but eminently purifiable by exaltation of the unselfish element and elimination of the selfish.

The high tension on the moral chords of our nature produced by pity and terror is not readily obtainable by other emotions ; and, as the strings of a musical instrument must be tense in a high degree before the player can evolve with their assistance those vibrations which constitute the basis of music, so the moral nature of man and woman must be as it were strung up, before the highest effects of art can be evoked from it. Hence the test of a great tragedy is not only the measure of its power to awaken pity and terror, but also, and chiefly, its success in purifying those emotions of all that is base or unpleasant and leaving the whole moral and intellectual nature in a state of complete and vibrant equilibrium.

It is almost needless to say that tragedies answering satisfactorily this severe test are of extreme rarity. Among dramas of the nineteenth century one looks in vain for an acted tragedy fulfilling the conditions ; and the unacted drama yields but one example,—that tragedy which Shelley wrote for the stage and greatly wished to have upon the stage, but which has been reserved during sixty-seven years for a Society of his special adherents to get acted.

But we must go further than this ; for tragedies, in the full specific sense, are so few in the whole world's literary history that the small number of companions for Shelley's work must be sought in almost as many ages and literatures. We cannot find several tragedies answering fully to the test even in the sumptuous collection of great works left us by Shakespeare. We cannot find several in ancient literature, or several in French classic literature, or even one in modern literature of the rest of Europe. But, let it be clearly understood, this is no question of relative greatness alone, simply one of greatness combined with the true tragic quality, the exaltation and purification of pity and terror. In this regard we must exclude from the competition the stately name of Æschylus, and the high names of Calderon, Alfieri, Goethe, Hugo, Wagner. The material introduction of the supernatural deducts largely from the essentially tragic character of the Oresteian Trilogy, as from Macbeth and the Ring des Nibelungen: Hamlet lacks for the intense appeal to pity and terror that concentration to a single point which we find in the few typical tragedies: Othello is comparatively domestic and un-ideal: Hugo stirs up rather than purifies pity and terror; and in the Wagnerian lyrical drama there is the further differentiating element of music.

Companionship for The Cenci must be sought in the Œdipus Tyrannus of Sophocles, in the Medea of Euripides, in Shakespeare's King Lear, and in the masterpiece of French classic drama, Phèdre.

It does not follow that a claim is set up for these five tragedies to rank as the greatest of all dramatic works. No question arises as to the relative importance of these and of the Oresteia, Macbeth, Hamlet, Othello, Athalie, Faust, Les Burgraves, or the Nibelungen Tetralogy. But, as pure tragedy, none of these latter will stand comparison with any one of the former: that is to say, the catharsis of pity and terror is not so complete in them.

Mythology and inner significance themselves deduct from the urgency and concentration of the appeal to pity and terror; and the supernatural and musical elements are comparatively cheap methods, so to speak, of helping to bring the intellectual and moral nature into a state of vibrant equilibrium. The purification of pity and terror, without any adventitious aid, but by simple concentration of human interest, is the dramatist's most difficult task;—not necessarily his highest task; but its superlative difficulty suffices to account for the rarity of pure tragedy.

For genuine tragedy of idea, conception, and laying out, there is little in English literature, outside Shakespeare's work, to compare with Otway's Venice Preserved and The Orphan; but Otway was poor as a poet and weak as a delineator of character: hence his work does not come seriously into the present comparison. Nevertheless it is noteworthy that The Orphan, as horrible in subject as it could well be, held the stage in the early part of this century in the hands of that Miss O'Neil to whom a squeamish Covent Garden manager could not even venture to submit The Cenci.

Now the extreme horror of the main subject of The Cenci is precisely what it has in common with its few great compeers in addition to the splendour of poetic treatment, without which there can be no such thing as tragedy properly so called. For just as in The Cenci, in Phèdre, in King Lear, in Medea, in Ædipus Tyrannus, the poetical style of each dramatist is at its highest level, so in each of those works we find a subject more terrible than elsewhere in the works of Shelley, of Racine, of Shakespeare, of Euripides, of Sophocles. In every one of those tragic masterpieces of the world the heart is pierced and the spirit is appalled by crimes violating the most sacred ties of nature.

It is not as dealing with real events that the tragic masterpiece of Shelley has a supreme value to the world. It is purely as an ideal work that it is of so rare a price. Antiquarian research was in its infancy when Shelley became saturated with the subject of his tragedy; and at that time, beyond the alleged outrage and the murder and execution, the real merits of the Cenci family history were but vaguely known. The documents from which he drew for his conception are the portrait of Beatrice prefixed to this volume and the "Relation of the Death of the Family of the Cenci," of which a translation is appended. It is of no consequence whatever in judging of this tragic work whether the portrait represents Beatrice and was painted by Guido or not; and it is equally inessential whether the "Relation" is true or untrue. That portrait and that narrative supplied the material; and Sophocles and Shakespeare supplied the bulk of what was not individual in the conception and treatment. The form is Shakespearean; and so very often is the language. The general sense of an awful impending doom is Sophoclean. But it was from Shelley's own deep heart that the transfiguring forces welled up to make a great tragic character of the Beatrice whose history we have in the "Relation" and whose bodily semblance we find in the picture.

The sense of that perfect human loveliness in which the Italian girl presented herself to Shelley, living within the shadow of a nameless crime, under the menacing and ever-encroaching power of a demoniac father, stirred the ardent sympathies of Shelley, his resentment against tyranny and "victorious wrong," from their very foundations. And while on the one hand the realized spectacle of that tender and lovely girlhood, pitted against the most abandoned of criminals, evokes pity from every heart where pity is not dead, on the other hand the austere dignity and unflinching courage with which, in her despair of release or relief, this gentle creature assumes in her turn the part of a criminal, and reasons of parricide as of a high duty, stirs up horror from its lowest depths.

But it is not the complicity of Beatrice alone in her father's murder that appeals to our sense of the terrible. The picture is in truth one of a series of horrors growing, as it were naturally, out of a prodigious defection from nature's rule. The spectacle of an old man, consumed with hatred of his wife, children, retainers, and indeed all who come within the scope of his dread personality, is horrible in a high degree. The terror of this picture, however, derives half its force from the mild and humane character of the wife, son, and daughter, who are transformed by the power of Count Cenci's own egregious wickedness into instruments of his death. The overpowering criminality of the one is such as to beget in the others not so much hate as fear of what may yet come to pass; and that fear becomes an imperious need which gives its victims no rest until they have accomplished their unnatural end. The expiation of the whole series of crimes by the mere death of all the principals is unimpressive compared with the surrounding and motive circumstances of guilt and tyranny, endurance and eventual resistance, despair and sudden revenge. The final horror concentrates in the innocent young brother, who sees every member of his family swept away by a devastating wave of crime.

The intolerable nature of the worst offence of Count Cenci has been urged as a reason for keeping this great tragedy off the stage. But it should not be forgotten that the same reason has been found wholly insufficient to prevent the performance of other tragedies, or even to keep from the glare of the footlights works radically unsuited for stage representation by reason of their structure. Let it be remembered that Byron's Manfred, one of the least actable of dramas, has been publicly performed, notwithstanding the crime which overshadows the hero's life, and which leaves the poem open to the same censure as The Cenci. It is remarkable that this should be the case with what is certainly one of Byron's best works, and the most poetical at all events of his dramas. In Manfred we are not left in any real doubt that the crime was actually committed. In The Cenci, the atmosphere is that of abominable outrage and impending crime against the heroine, by whom, at the close, we are assured that, "tho' wrapt in a strange cloud of crime and shame," she "lived ever holy and unstained."

An ungenerous prejudice against Shelley, and the general debasement of our national drama, have combined to prevent the performance of this masterpiece, in which, notwithstanding the horror of the subject, there is positively not an offensive word. Great and grave authorities have from the first treated The Cenci with the profound respect which it merits. To name Landor and Browning among those who acknowledge loyally this "noble tragedy" and "superb achievement" should suffice to make it certain that, when the time comes for a public performance of The Cenci to be seriously mooted, such performance will take place without let or hindrance. Our "faith is large in time"; and the time is well-nigh ripe for this consummation of Shelley's wish, this payment of the world's due, this act of simple justice to the fame of England and England's chief lyric poet, for whom we claim, in virtue of the tragedy now about to be acted for the first time, the prouder title of chief tragic poet since Shakespeare.

PROLOGUE TO "THE CENCI."

By JOHN TODHUNTER.

WHEREFORE in earnest concourse are ye come,
With hearts that chide the moments till this dumb
And shrouded stage grow eloquent? Can your eyes
Delight their sense with tawdry properties,
The pomp of theatres, the glittering shows
Of the mummer's art; with tinsel joys and woes
Posturing before a painted scene—to-day,
O'er budded woodlands when the eyes of May
Gaze blue from the deeps of heaven, when her sweet breath
To the young leaves and blossoms uttereth
Summer's delicious name?

Nay, who sit here

Quicken to rarer influence, from that sphere
Supernal, of the pure unbodied mind,
Whence, feel ye now what breathes? Spirit or wind
Instinct with Shelley! What if we be pent
From the rejoicing fields, we are content
With the poor circuit of these walls; for lo!
That wind has breathed upon them, and they grow
A Temple of the Spirit: this curtain green
Of common baize, the stage's homely screen,
Turns to the pall that hides the inmost cell
Of Tragedy.

"The Cenci!" With what spell
 Thrills in your ears that name? "The Cenci!" Falls
 On your hushed hearts a silence that appals
 Like the dumb pause of nature, ere the storm
 Wake in stern music? Here in breathing form
 Shall pass before you now, as though for you
 His spirit in its travail groaned anew,
 Shelley's tremendous vision. Ye shall behold
 That monstrous Father in strange hate grown old,
 That wrinkled vice, that rank malignity,
 Spawnd from the opulent slime of Italy.
 Ye shall see Beatrice, that sweet and strong
 Nature, disnatured by unnatural wrong,
 Avenging crime with crimé—

O who durst weigh
 Her guilt, her innocence? Who shall assay
 Gold of such dreadful mint?

Hold thou the scale,
 Manage the crucible, who hast told the tale
 Of Guido and Pompilia, weighing well,
 With beam that mounts to heaven or sinks to hell,
 Like the archangel, souls in thy balance true;
 For thou, we know, art with us now, to do
 Honour to Shelley, and we keep to-day,
 Browning, thy Birthday on this Seventh of May
 Which brings a Titan to belated birth.
 But lo! the hour comes flying o'er the earth
 Even to these gates—its advent-peal is rung,
 Hushed be the babble of this faltering tongue,
 As rills at thunderous rising of the sea—
 "The Cenci!"

A TRAGEDY IN FIVE ACTS.

DEDICATION

TO

LEIGH HUNT, Esq.

---

MY DEAR FRIEND,

I inscribe with your name, from a distant country, and after an absence whose months have seemed years, this the latest of my literary efforts.

Those writings which I have hitherto published, have been little else than visions which impersonate my own apprehensions of the beautiful and the just. I can also perceive in them the literary defects incidental to youth and impatience; they are dreams of what ought to be, or may be. The drama which I now present to you is a sad reality. I lay aside the presumptuous attitude of an instructor, and am content to paint, with such colours as my own heart furnishes, that which has been.

Had I known a person more highly endowed than yourself with all that it becomes a man to possess, I had solicited for this work the ornament of his name. One more gentle, honourable, innocent and brave; one of more exalted toleration for all who do and think evil, and yet himself more free from evil; one who knows better how to receive, and how to confer a benefit though he must ever confer far more than he can receive; one of simpler, and, in the highest sense of the word, of purer life and manners I never knew: and I had already been fortunate in friendships when your name was added to the list.

In that patient and irreconcilable enmity with domestic and political tyranny and imposture which the tenor of your life has illustrated, and which, had I health and talents, should illustrate mine, let us, comforting each other in our task, live and die.

All happiness attend you!

Your affectionate friend,

PERCY B. SHELLEY.

P R E F A C E.

A MANUSCRIPT was communicated to me during my travels in Italy, which was copied from the archives of the Cenci Palace at Rome, and contains a detailed account of the horrors which ended in the extinction of one of the noblest and richest families of that city during the Pontificate of Clement VIII, in the year 1599. The story is, that an old man having spent his life in debauchery and wickedness, conceived at length an implacable hatred towards his children; which shewed itself towards one daughter under the form of an incestuous passion, aggravated by every circumstance of cruelty and violence. This daughter, after long and vain attempts to escape from what she considered a perpetual contamination both of body and mind, at length plotted with her mother-in-law and brother to murder their common tyrant. The young maiden who was urged to this tremendous deed by an impulse which overpowered its horror, was evidently a most gentle and amiable being, a creature formed to adorn and be admired, and thus violently thwarted from her nature by the necessity of circumstance and opinion. The deed was quickly discovered, and, in spite of the most earnest prayers made to the Pope by the highest persons in Rome, the criminals were put to death. The old man had during his life repeatedly bought his pardon from the Pope for capital crimes of the most enormous and unspeakable kind, at the price of a hundred thousand crowns; the death therefore of his victims can scarcely be accounted for by the love of justice. The Pope, among other motives for severity, probably felt that whoever killed the Count Cenci deprived his treasury of a certain and copious source of revenue.<sup>1</sup> Such a story, if told so as to present to the reader all the feelings of those who once acted it, their hopes and fears, their confidences and misgivings, their various interests, passions and opinions, acting upon and with each other, yet all conspiring to one tremendous end, would be as a light to make apparent some of the most dark and secret caverns of the human heart.

On my arrival at Rome I found that the story of the Cenci was a subject not to be mentioned in Italian society without awakening a deep and breathless interest; and that the feelings of the company never failed to incline to a romantic pity for the wrongs, and a passionate exculpation of the horrible deed to which they urged her, who has been mingled two centuries with the common dust. All ranks of people knew the outlines of this history, and participated in the overwhelming interest which it seems to have the magic of exciting in the human heart. I had a copy of Guido's picture of Beatrice which is preserved in the Colonna Palace, and my servant instantly recognized it as the portrait of La Cenci.

This national and universal interest which the story produces and has produced for two centuries and among all ranks of people in a great City, where the imagination is kept for ever active and awake, first suggested to me the conception of its fitness for a dramatic purpose. In fact it is a tragedy which has already received from its capacity of awakening and sustaining the sympathy of men, approbation and success. Nothing remained as I imagined, but to clothe it to the apprehensions of my countrymen in such language and action as would bring it home to their hearts. The deepest and the sublimest tragic compositions, King Lear and the two plays in which the tale of Ædipus is told, were stories which already existed in tradition, as matters of popular belief and interest, before Shakspeare and Sophocles made them familiar to the sympathy of all succeeding generations of mankind.

This story of the Cenci is indeed eminently fearful and monstrous: any thing like a dry exhibition of it on the stage would be insupportable. The person who would treat such a subject must increase the ideal, and diminish the actual horror of the events, so that the pleasure which arises from the poetry which exists in these tempestuous sufferings and crimes may mitigate the pain of the contemplation of the moral deformity from which they spring. There must also be nothing attempted to make the exhibition subservient to what is vulgarly termed a moral purpose. The highest moral purpose aimed at in the highest species of the drama, is the teaching the human heart, through its sympathies and antipathies, the knowledge of itself; in proportion to the possession of which knowledge, every human being is wise, just, sincere, tolerant and kind. If dogmas can do more, it is well: but a drama is no fit place for the enforcement of them. Undoubtedly, no person can be truly dishonoured by the act of another; and the fit return to make to the most enormous injuries is kindness and forbearance, and a resolution to convert the injurer from his dark passions by peace and love. Revenge, retaliation, atonement, are pernicious mistakes. If Beatrice had thought in this manner she would have been wiser and better; but she would never have been a tragic character: the few whom such an exhibition would have interested, could never have been sufficiently interested for a dramatic purpose, from the want of finding sympathy in their interest among the mass who surround them. It is in the restless and anatomizing casuistry with which men seek the justification of Beatrice, yet feel that she has done what needs justification; it is in the superstitious horror with which they contemplate alike her wrongs and their revenge; that the dramatic character of what she did and suffered, consists.

I have endeavoured as nearly as possible to represent the characters as they probably were, and have sought to avoid the error of making them actuated by my own conceptions of right or wrong, false or true: thus under a thin veil converting names and actions of the sixteenth century into cold impersonations of my own mind. They are represented as Catholics, and as Catholics deeply tinged with religion. To a Protestant apprehension there will appear something unnatural in the earnest and perpetual sentiment of the relations between God and men which pervade the tragedy of the Cenci. It will especially be startled at the combination of an undoubting persuasion of the truth of the popular religion with a cool and determined perseverance in enormous guilt. But religion in Italy is not, as in Protestant countries, a cloak to be worn on particular days; or a passport which those who do not wish to be railed at carry with them to exhibit; or a gloomy passion for penetrating the impenetrable mysteries of our being, which terrifies its possessor at the darkness of the abyss to the brink of which it has conducted him. Religion coexists, as it were, in the mind of an Italian Catholic, with a faith in that of which all men have the most certain knowledge. It is interwoven with the whole fabric of life. 'It is adoration, faith, submission, penitence, blind admiration; not a rule for moral conduct. It has no necessary connexion with any one virtue. The most atrocious villain may be rigidly devout, and without any shock to established faith, confess himself to be so. Religion pervades intensely the whole frame of society, and is according to the temper of the mind which it inhabits, a passion, a persuasion, an excuse, a refuge; never a check. Cenci himself built a chapel in the court of his Palace, and dedicated it to St. Thomas the Apostle, and established masses for the peace of his soul. Thus in the first scene of the fourth act Lucretia's design in exposing herself to the consequences of an expostulation with Cenci after having administered the opiate, was to induce him by a feigned tale to confess himself before death; this being esteemed by Catholics as essential to salvation; and she only relinquishes her purpose when she perceives that her perseverance would expose Beatrice to new outrages.

I have avoided with great care in writing this play the introduction of what is commonly called mere poetry, and I imagine there will scarcely be found a detached simile or a single isolated description, unless Beatrice's description of the chasm appointed for her father's murder should be judged to be of that nature.<sup>1</sup>

In a dramatic composition the imagery and the passion should interpenetrate one another, the former being reserved simply for the full development and illustration of the latter. Imagination is as the immortal God which should assume flesh for the redemption of mortal passion. It is thus that the most remote and the most familiar imagery may alike be fit for dramatic purposes when employed in the illustration of strong feeling, which raises what is low, and levels to the apprehension that which is lofty, casting over all the shadow of its own greatness. In other respects, I have written more carelessly; that is, without an over-fastidious and learned choice of words. In this respect I entirely agree with those modern critics who assert that in order to move men to true sympathy we must use the familiar language of men, and that our great ancestors the antient English poets are the writers, a study of whom might incite us to do that for our own age which they have done for theirs. But it must be the real language of men in general and not that of any particular class to whose society the writer happens to belong. So much for what I have attempted; I need not be assured that success is a very different matter; particularly for one whose attention has but newly been awakened to the study of dramatic literature.

I endeavoured whilst at Rome to observe such monuments of this story as might be accessible to a stranger. The portrait of Beatrice at the Colonna Palace is admirable as a work of art: it was taken by Guido during her confinement in prison. But it is most interesting as a just representation of one of the loveliest specimens of the workmanship of Nature. There is a fixed and pale composure upon the features: she seems sad and stricken down in spirit, yet the despair thus expressed is lightened by the patience of gentleness. Her head is bound with folds of white drapery from which the yellow strings of her golden hair escape, and fall about her neck. The moulding of her face is exquisitely delicate; the eyebrows are distinct and arched: the lips have that permanent meaning of imagination and sensibility which suffering has not repressed and which it seems as if death scarcely could extinguish. Her forehead is large and clear; her eyes which we are told were remarkable for their vivacity, are swollen with weeping and lustreless, but beautifully tender and serene. In the whole mien there is a simplicity and dignity which united with her exquisite loveliness and deep sorrow are inexpressibly pathetic. Beatrice Cenci appears to have been one of those rare persons in whom energy and gentleness dwell together without destroying one another: her nature was simple and profound. The crimes and miseries in which she was an actor and a sufferer are as the mask and the mantle in which circumstances clothed her for her impersonation on the scene of the world.

The Cenci Palace is of great extent; and though in part modernized, there yet remains a vast and gloomy pile of feudal architecture in the same state as during the dreadful scenes which are the subject of this tragedy. The Palace is situated in an obscure corner of Rome, near the quarter of the Jews, and from the upper windows you see the immense ruins of Mount Palatine half hidden under their profuse overgrowth of trees. There is a court in one part of the Palace (perhaps that in which Cenci built the Chapel to St. Thomas), supported by granite columns and adorned with antique friezes of fine workmanship, and built up, according to the antient Italian fashion, with balcony over balcony of open-work. One of the gates of the Palace formed of immense stones and leading through a passage, dark and lofty and opening into gloomy subterranean chambers, struck me particularly.

Of the Castle of Petrella, I could obtain no further information than that which is to be found in the manuscript.

ACT I.

SCENE I.

AN APARTMENT IN THE CENCI PALACE. ENTER COUNT CENCI, AND CARDINAL CAMILLO.

CAMILLO.

THAT matter of the murder is hushed up
If you consent to yield his Holiness
Your fief that lies beyond the Pincian gate.—
It needed all my interest in the conclave
To bend him to this point: he said that you 5
Bought perilous impunity with your gold;
That crimes like yours if once or twice compounded
Enriched the Church, and respited from hell
An erring soul which might repent and live:—
But that the glory and the interest 10
Of the high throne he fills, little consist

With making it a daily mart of guilt
 As manifold and hideous as the deeds
 Which you scarce hide from men's revolted eyes.

CENCI.

The third of my possessions—let it go! 15
 Aye, I once heard the nephew of the Pope
 Had sent his architect to view the ground,
 Meaning to build a villa on my vines
 The next time I compounded with his uncle:
 I little thought he should outwit me so! 20
 Henceforth no witness—not the lamp—shall see
 That which the vassal threatened to divulge
 Whose throat is choked with dust for his reward.
 The deed he saw could not have rated higher
 Than his most worthless life:—it angers me! 25
 Respited me from Hell!—So may the Devil
 Respite their souls from Heaven. No doubt Pope Clement,
 And his most charitable nephews, pray
 That the Apostle Peter and the saints
 Will grant for their sake that I long enjoy 30
 Strength, wealth, and pride, and lust, and length of days
 Wherein to act the deeds which are the stewards
 Of their revenue.—But much yet remains
 To which they shew no title.

CAMILLO.

Oh, Count Cenci!

So much that thou mightst honourably live 35
 And reconcile thyself with thine own heart
 And with thy God, and with the offended world.
 How hideously look deeds of lust and blood
 Thro' those snow white and venerable hairs!—
 Your children should be sitting round you now, 40
 But that you fear to read upon their looks
 The shame and misery you have written there.
 Where is your wife? Where is your gentle daughter?
 Methinks her sweet looks, which make all things else
 Beauteous and glad, might kill the fiend within you. 45
 Why is she barred from all society
 But her own strange and uncomplaining wrongs?
 Talk with me, Count,—you know I mean you well.

I stood beside your dark and fiery youth
 Watching its bold and bad career, as men 50
 Watch meteors, but it vanished not—I marked
 Your desperate and remorseless manhood; now
 Do I behold you in dishonoured age
 Charged with a thousand unrepented crimes.
 Yet I have ever hoped you would amend, 55
 And in that hope have saved your life three times.

CENCI.

For which Aldobrandino owes you now
 My fief beyond the Pincian.—Cardinal,
 One thing, I pray you, recollect henceforth,
 And so we shall converse with less restraint. 60
 A man you knew spoke of my wife and daughter—
 He was accustomed to frequent my house;
 So the next day his wife and daughter came
 And asked if I had seen him; and I smiled:
 I think they never saw him any more. 65

CAMILLO.

Thou execrable man, beware!—

CENCI.

Of thee?

Nay this is idle:—We should know each other.
 As to my character for what men call crime
 Seeing I please my senses as I list,
 And vindicate that right with force or guile, 70
 It is a public matter, and I care not
 If I discuss it with you. I may speak
 Alike to you and my own conscious heart—
 For you give out that you have half reformed me,
 Therefore strong vanity will keep you silent 75
 If fear should not; both will, I do not doubt.
 All men delight in sensual luxury,
 All men enjoy revenge; and most exult
 Over the tortures they can never feel—
 Flattering their secret peace with others' pain. 80
 But I delight in nothing else. I love
 The sight of agony, and the sense of joy,
 When this shall be another's, and that mine.
 And I have no remorse and little fear,

Which are, I think, the checks of other men. 85
 This mood has grown upon me, until now
 Any design my captious fancy makes
 The picture of its wish, and it forms none
 But such as men like you would start to know,
 Is as my natural food and rest debarred 90
 Until it be accomplished.

CAMILLO.

Art thou not

Most miserable?

CENCI.

Why, miserable?—

No.—I am what your theologians call
 Hardened;—which they must be in impudence,
 So to revile a man's peculiar taste. 95
 True, I was happier than I am, while yet
 Manhood remained to act the thing I thought;
 While lust was sweeter than revenge; and now
 Invention palls:—Aye, we must all grow old—
 And but that there yet remains a deed to act 100
 Whose horror might make sharp an appetite
 Duller than mine—I'd do,—I know not what.
 When I was young I thought of nothing else
 But pleasure; and I fed on honey sweets:
 Men, by St. Thomas! cannot live like bees, 105
 And I grew tired:—yet, till I killed a foe,
 And heard his groans, and heard his children's groans,
 Knew I not what delight was else on earth,
 Which now delights me little. I the rather
 Look on such pangs as terror ill conceals, 110
 The dry fixed eyeball; the pale quivering lip,
 Which tell me that the spirit weeps within
 Tears bitterer than the bloody sweat of Christ.
 I rarely kill the body, which preserves,
 Like a strong prison, the soul within my power, 115
 Wherein I feed it with the breath of fear
 For hourly pain.

CAMILLO.

Hell's most abandoned fiend
 Did never, in the drunkenness of guilt,

Speak to his heart as now you speak to me ;
I thank my God that I believe you not.

Enter ANDREA.

ANDREA.

My Lord, a gentleman from Salamanca
Would speak with you.

CENCI.

Bid him attend me in the grand saloon. (Exit ANDREA.)

CAMILLO.

Farewell; and I will pray
Almighty God that thy false, impious words
Tempt not his spirit to abandon thee. (Exit CAMILLO.)

CENCI.

The third of my possessions! I must use
Close husbandry, or gold, the old man's sword,
Falls from my withered hand. But yesterday
There came an order from the Pope to make
Fourfold provision for my cursèd sons;
Whom I had sent from Rome to Salamanca,
Hoping some accident might cut them off;
And meaning if I could to starve them there.
I pray thee, God, send some quick death upon them!
Bernardo and my wife could not be worse
If dead and damned:—then, as to Beatrice—

130

135

(looking around him suspiciously)

I think they cannot hear me at that door;
What if they should? And yet I need not speak
Though the heart triumphs with itself in words.
O, thou most silent air, that shalt not hear
What now I think! Thou, pavement, which I tread
Towards her chamber,—let your echoes talk
Of my imperious step scorning surprise,
But not of my intent!—Andrea!

Enter ANDREA.

ANDREA.

My lord?

145

CENCI.

Bid Beatrice attend me in her chamber
This evening:—no, at midnight and alone. (Exeunt.)

SCENE II.

A GARDEN OF THE CENCI PALACE. ENTER BEATRICE AND ORSINO, AS IN CONVERSATION.

BEATRICE.

Pervert not truth,

Orsino. You remember where we held
That conversation;—nay, we see the spot
Even from this cypress;—two long years are past
Since, on an April midnight, underneath
The moonlight ruins of mount Palatine,
I did confess to you my secret mind.

ORSINO.

You said you loved me then.

BEATRICE.

You are a Priest,

Speak to me not of love.

ORSINO.

I may obtain

The dispensation of the Pope to marry.
Because I am a Priest do you believe
Your image, as the hunter some struck deer,
Follows me not whether I wake or sleep?

10

BEATRICE.

As I have said, speak to me not of love;
Had you a dispensation I have not;
Nor will I leave this home of misery
Whilst my poor Bernard, and that gentle lady
To whom I owe life, and these virtuous thoughts,
Must suffer what I still have strength to share.
Alas, Orsino! All the love that once
I felt for you, is turned to bitter pain.
Our's was a youthful contract, which you first
Broke, by assuming vows no Pope will loose.
And thus I love you still, but holily,
Even as a sister or a spirit might;
And so I swear a cold fidelity.
And it is well perhaps we shall not marry.

25

You have a sly, equivocating vein
 That suits me not.—Ah, wretched that I am!
 Where shall I turn? Even now you look on me 30
 As you were not my friend, and as if you
 Discovered that I thought so, with false smiles
 Making my true suspicion seem your wrong.
 Ah! No, forgive me; sorrow makes me seem
 Sterner than else my nature might have been; 35
 I have a weight of melancholy thoughts,
 And they forbode,—but what can they forbode
 Worse than I now endure?

ORSINO.

All will be well.

Is the petition yet prepared? You know
 My zeal for all you wish; sweet Beatrice; 40
 Doubt not but I will use my utmost skill
 So that the Pope attend to your complaint.

BEATRICE.

Your zeal for all I wish;—Ah me, you are cold!
 Your utmost skill . . . speak but one word . . . (aside) Alas!
 Weak and deserted creature that I am, 45
 Here I stand bickering with my only friend! (To ORSINO)
 This night my father gives a sumptuous feast,
 Orsino; he has heard some happy news
 From Salamanca, from my brothers there,
 And with this outward shew of love he mocks 50
 His inward hate. 'Tis bold hypocrisy,
 For he would gladlier celebrate their deaths,
 Which I have heard him pray for on his knees:
 Great God! that such a father should be mine!
 But there is mighty preparation made, 55
 And all our kin, the Cenci, will be there,
 And all the chief nobility of Rome.
 And he has bidden me and my pale Mother
 Attire ourselves in festival array.
 Poor lady! She expects some happy change 60
 In his dark spirit from this spect; I none.
 At supper I will give you my petition:
 Till when—farewell.

ORSINO.

Farewell. (Exit BEATRICE.) I know the Pope
 Will ne'er absolve me from my priestly vow
 But by absolving me from the revenue 65
 Of many a wealthy see; and, Beatrice,
 I think to win thee at an easier rate.
 Nor shall he read her eloquent petition:
 He might bestow her on some poor relation
 Of his sixth cousin, as he did her sister, 70
 And I should be debarred from all access.
 Then as to what she suffers from her father,
 In all this there is much exaggeration:—
 Old men are testy and will have their way;
 A man may stab his enemy, or his vassal, 75
 And live a free life as to wine or women,
 And with a peevish temper may return
 To a dull home, and rate his wife and children;
 Daughters and wives call this foul tyranny.
 I shall be well content if on my conscience 80
 There rest no heavier sin than what they suffer
 From the devices of my love—A net
 From which she shall escape not. Yet I fear
 Her subtle mind, her awe-inspiring gaze,
 Whose beams anatomize me nerve by nerve 85
 And lay me bare, and make me blush to see
 My hidden thoughts.—Ah, no! A friendless girl
 Who clings to me, as to her only hope:—
 I were a fool, not less than if a panther
 Were panic-stricken by the antelope's eye, 90
 If she escape me. (Exit.)

SCENE III.

A MAGNIFICENT HALL IN THE CENCI PALACE. A BANQUET. ENTER CENCI, LUCRETIA, BEATRICE, ORSINO, CAMILLO, NOBLES.

CENCI.

Welcome, my friends, my kinsmen; welcome ye,
 Princes and Cardinals, if lords of the church,
 Whose presence honours our festivity.

I have too long lived like an anchorite,
 And in my absence from your merry meetings 5
 An evil word is gone abroad of me;
 But I do hope that you, my noble friends,
 When you have shared the entertainment here,
 And heard the pious cause for which 'tis given,
 And we have pledged a health or two together, 10
 Will think me flesh and blood as well as you;
 Sinful indeed, for Adam made all so,
 But tender-hearted, meek and pitiful.

FIRST GUEST.

In truth, my Lord, you seem too light of heart,
 Too sprightly and companionable a man, 15
 To act the deeds that rumour pins on you.
 (To his companion) I never saw such blithe and open cheer
 In any eye!

SECOND GUEST.

Some most desired event,
 In which we all demand a common joy,
 Has brought us hither; let us hear it, Count. 20

CENCI.

It is indeed a most desired event.
 If when a parent from a parent's heart
 Lifts from this earth to the great father of all
 A prayer, both when he lays him down to sleep,
 And when he rises up from dreaming it; 25
 One supplication, one desire, one hope,
 That he would grant a wish for his two sons,
 Even all that he demands in their regard—
 And suddenly beyond his dearest hope,
 It is accomplished, he should then rejoice, 30
 And call his friends and kinsmen to a feast,
 And task their love to grace his merriment,
 Then honour me thus far—for I am he.

BEATRICE (to Lucretia).

Great God! How horrible! Some dreadful ill
 Must have befallen my brothers.

LUCRETIA.

Fear not, Child, 35
 He speaks too frankly.

BEATRICE.

Ah! My blood runs cold.
I fear that wicked laughter round his eye,
Which wrinkles up the skin even to the hair.

CENCI.

Here are the letters brought from Salamanca;
Beatrice, read them to your mother. God! 40
I thank thee! In one night didst thou perform,
By ways inscrutable, the thing I sought.
My disobedient and rebellious sons
Are dead!—Why dead!—What means this change of cheer?
You hear me not, I tell you they are dead; 45
And they will need no food or raiment more:
The tapers that did light them the dark way
Are their last cost. The Pope, I think, will not Expect I should maintain them in their coffins.
Rejoice with me—my heart is wondrous glad. 50

BEATRICE.

(Lucretia sinks, half fainting; Beatrice supports her.)
It is not true!—Dear lady, pray look up.
Had it been true, there is a God in Heaven,
He would not live to boast of such a boon.
Unnatural man, thou knowest that it is false.

CENCI.

Aye, as the word of God; whom here I call 55
To witness that I speak the sober truth;—
And whose most favouring Providence was shewn
Even in the manner of their deaths. For Rocco
Was kneeling at the mass, with sixteen others,
When the church fell and crushed him to a mummy, 60
The rest escaped unhurt. Cristofano
Was stabbed in error by a jealous man,
Whilst she he loved was sleeping with his rival;
All in the self-same hour of the same night;
Which shews that Heaven has special care of me. 65
I beg those friends who love me, that they mark
The day a feast upon their calendars.
It was the twenty-seventh of December:
Aye, read the letters if you doubt my oath.
(The assembly appears confused; several of the guests rise.)

FIRST GUEST.

Oh, horrible! I will depart.—

SECOND GUEST.

And I.—

THIRD GUEST.

No, stay!

70

I do believe it is some jest; tho' faith!

'Tis mocking us somewhat too solemnly.

I think his son has married the Infanta,

Or found a mine of gold in El dorado;

'Tis but to season some such news; stay, stay!

I see 'tis only raillery by his smile.

CENCI.

(filling a bowl of wine, and lifting it up)

Oh, thou bright wine whose purple splendour leaps

And bubbles gaily in this golden bowl

Under the lamp-light, as my spirits do,

To hear the death of my accursèd sons!

80

Could I believe thou wert their mingled blood,

Then would I taste thee like a sacrament,

And pledge with thee the mighty Devil in Hell,

Who, if a father's curses, as men say,

Climb with swift wings after their children's souls,

And drag them from the very throne of Heaven,

Now triumphs in my triumph!—But thou art

Superfluous; I have drunken deep of joy,

And I will taste no other wine to-night.

Here, Andrea! Bear the bowl around.

A GUEST (rising).

Thou wretch! 90

Will none among this noble company

Check the abandoned villain?

CAMILLO.

For God's sake

Let me dismiss the guests! You are insane,

Some ill will come of this.

SECOND GUEST.

Seize, silence him!

FIRST GUEST.

I will!

THIRD GUEST.

And I!

CENCI. (Addressing those who rise with a threatening gesture)
 Who moves? Who speaks?
 (Turning to the Company) 'tis nothing,
 Enjoy yourselves.—Beware! For my revenge 96
 Is as the sealed commission of a king
 That kills, and none dare name the murderer.
 (The Banquet is broken up; several of the Guests are departing.)

BEATRICE.

I do entreat you, go not, noble guests;
 What, although tyranny and impious hate 100
 Stand sheltered by a father's hoary hair?
 What, if 'tis he who clothed us in these limbs
 Who tortures them, and triumphs? What, if we,
 The desolate and the dead, were his own flesh,
 His children and his wife, whom he is bound 105
 To love and shelter? Shall we therefore find
 No refuge in this merciless wide world?
 Oh, think what deep wrongs must have blotted out
 First love, then reverence in a child's prone mind,
 Till it thus vanquish shame and fear! O, think! 110
 I have borne much, and kissed the sacred hand
 Which crushed us to the earth, and thought its stroke
 Was perhaps some paternal chastisement!
 Have excused much, doubted; and when no doubt
 Remained, have sought by patience, love and tears 115
 To soften him, and when this could not be
 I have knelt down through the long sleepless nights
 And lifted up to God, the father of all,
 Passionate prayers: and when these were not heard
 I have still borne,—until I meet you here, 120
 Princes and kinsmen, at this hideous feast
 Given at my brothers' deaths. Two yet remain,
 His wife remains and I, whom if ye save not,
 Ye may soon share such merriment again
 As fathers make over their children's graves. 125
 Oh! Prince Colonna, thou art our near kinsman,
 Cardinal, thou art the Pope's chamberlain,
 Camillo, thou art chief justiciary,
 Take us away!

CENCI.

(He has been conversing with Camillo during the first part of Beatrice's speech; he hears the conclusion, and now advances.)

I hope my good friends here
Will think of their own daughters—or perhaps 130
Of their own throats—before they lend an ear
To this wild girl.

BEATRICE. (Not noticing the words of Cenci.)

Dare no one look on me?

None answer? Can one tyrant overbear
The sense of many best and wisest men?
Or is it that I sue not in some form 135
Of scrupulous law, that ye deny my suit?
Oh, God! That I were buried with my brothers!
And that the flowers of this departed spring
Were fading on my grave! And that my father
Were celebrating now one feast for all! 140

CAMILLO.

A bitter wish for one so young and gentle;
Can we do nothing?

COLONNA.

Nothing that I see.

Count Cenci were a dangerous enemy:
Yet I would second any one.

A CARDINAL.

And I.

CENCI.

Retire to your chamber, insolent girl! 145

BEATRICE.

Retire thou impious man! Aye hide thyself
Where never eye can look upon thee more!
Wouldst thou have honour and obedience
Who art a torturer? Father, never dream
Though thou mayst overbear this company, 150
But ill must come of ill.—Frown not on me!
Haste, hide thyself, lest with avenging looks
My brothers' ghosts should hunt thee from thy seat!
Cover thy face from every living eye,
And start if thou but hear a human step: 155

Seek out some dark and silent corner, there,
Bow thy white head before offended God,
And we will kneel around, and fervently
Pray that he pity both ourselves and thee.

CENCI.

My friends, I do lament this insane girl 160
Has spoilt the mirth of our festivity.
Good night, farewell; I will not make you longer
Spectators of our dull domestic quarrels.

Another time.—(Exeunt all but CENCI and BEATRICE.)

My brain is swimming round;
Give me a bowl of wine! (To Beatrice) Thou painted viper!
Beast that thou art! Fair and yet terrible! 166
I know a charm shall make thee meek and tame,
Now get thee from my sight! (Exit BEATRICE.)

Here, Andrea,

Fill up this goblet with Greek wine. I said
I would not drink this evening; but I must; 170
For, strange to say, I feel my spirits fail
With thinking what I have decreed to do.—

(Drinking the wine)

Be thou the resolution of quick youth
Within my veins, and manhood's purpose stern,
And age's firm, cold, subtle villainy; 175
As if thou wert indeed my children's blood
Which I did thirst to drink! The charm works well;
It must be done; it shall be done, I swear! (Exit.)

END OF THE FIRST ACT.

ACT II.

SCENE I.

AN APARTMENT IN THE CENCI PALACE. ENTER LUCRETIA AND BERNARDO.

LUCRETIA.

Weep not, my gentle boy; he struck but me
 Who have borne deeper wrongs. In truth, if he Had killed me, he had done a kinder deed.
 O, God Almighty, do thou look upon us,
 We have no other friend but only thee! 5
 Yet weep not; though I love you as my own,
 I am not your true mother.

BERNARDO.

Oh more, more,
 Than ever mother was to any child,
 That have you been to me! Had he not been
 My father, do you think that I should weep? 10

LUCRETIA.

Alas! Poor boy, what else couldst thou have done?

Enter BEATRICE.

BEATRICE (In a hurried voice).

Did he pass this way? Have you seen him, brother?
 Ah! No, that is his step upon the stairs;
 'Tis nearer now; his hand is on the door;
 Mother, if I to thee have ever been 15
 A duteous child, now save me! Thou, great God,
 Whose image upon earth a father is,
 Dost thou indeed abandon me? He comes;
 The door is opening now; I see his face;
 He frowns on others, but he smiles on me, 20
 Even as he did after the feast last night.

Enter a Servant.

Almighty God, how merciful thou art!
 'Tis but Orsino's servant.—Well, what news?

SERVANT.

My master bids me say, the Holy Father
 Has sent back your petition thus unopened. (Giving a paper)
 And he demands at what hour 'twere secure 26
 To visit you again?

LUCRETIA.

At the Ave Mary. (Exit Servant.)

So, daughter, our last hope has failed; Ah me!
 How pale you look; you tremble, and you stand
 Wrapped in some fixed and fearful meditation, 30
 As if one thought were over strong for you:
 Your eyes have a chill glare; O, dearest child!
 Are you gone mad? If not, pray speak to me.

BEATRICE.

You see I am not mad; I speak to you.

LUCRETIA.

You talked of something that your father did 35
 After that dreadful feast? Could it be worse
 Than when he smiled, and cried, My sons are dead!
 And every one looked in his neighbour's face
 To see if others were as white as he?
 At the first word he spoke I felt the blood 40
 Rush to my heart, and fell into a trance;
 And when it past I sat all weak and wild;
 Whilst you alone stood up, and with strong words
 Checked his unnatural pride; and I could see
 The devil was rebuked that lives in him. 45
 Until this hour thus have you ever stood
 Between us and your father's moody wrath
 Like a protecting presence: your firm mind
 Has been our only refuge and defence:
 What can have thus subdued it? What can now 50
 Have given you that cold melancholy look,
 Succeeding to your unaccustomed fear?

BEATRICE.

What is it that you say? I was just thinking
 'Twere better not to struggle any more.
 Men, like my father, have been dark and bloody, 55
 Yet never—O! Before worse comes of it
 'Twere wise to die: it ends in that at last.

LUCRETIA.

Oh, talk not so, dear child! Tell me at once
 What did your father do or say to you?
 He stayed not after that accursèd feast
 One moment in your chamber.—Speak to me.

BERNARDO.

Oh, sister, sister, prithee, speak to us!

BEATRICE.

(Speaking very slowly with a forced calmness)

It was one word, Mother, one little word;
 One look, one smile. (wildly) Oh! He has trampled me
 Under his feet, and made the blood stream down
 My pallid cheeks. And he has given us all
 Ditch water, and the fever-stricken flesh
 Of buffaloes, and bade us eat or starve,
 And we have eaten.—He has made me look
 On my beloved Bernardo, when the rust
 Of heavy chains has gangrened his sweet limbs,
 And I have never yet despaired—but now!
 What could I say? (recovering herself.)

Ah! No, 'tis nothing new

The sufferings we all share have made me wild:
 He only struck and cursed me as he passed;
 He said, he looked, he did;—nothing at all
 Beyond his wont, yet it disordered me.
 Alas! I am forgetful of my duty,
 I should preserve my senses for your sake.

75

LUCRETIA.

Nay, Beatrice; have courage my sweet girl,
 If any one despairs it should be I
 Who loved him once, and now must live with him
 Till God in pity call for him or me.
 For you may, like your sister, find some husband,
 And smile, years hence, with children round your knees;
 Whilst I, then dead, and all this hideous coil
 Shall be remembered only as a dream.

85

BEATRICE.

Talk not to me, dear lady, of a husband.
 Did you not nurse me when my mother died?
 Did you not shield me and that dearest boy?

And had we any other friend but you
 In infancy, with gentle words and looks,
 To win our father not to murder us?
 And shall I now desert you? May the ghost
 Of my dead Mother plead against my soul
 If I abandon her who filled the place
 She left, with more, even, than a mother's love!

BERNARDO.

And I am of my sister's mind. Indeed
 I would not leave you in this wretchedness,
 Even though the Pope should make me free to live
 In some blithe place, like others of my age,
 With sports, and delicate food, and the fresh air.
 Oh, never think that I will leave you, Mother!

LUCRETIA.

My dear, dear children!

Enter CENCI, suddenly.

CENCI.

What, Beatrice here!
 Come hither! (she shrinks back, and covers her face)
 Nay, hide not your face, 'tis fair;
 Look up! Why, yesternight you dared to look
 With disobedient insolence upon me,
 Bending a stern and an inquiring brow
 On what I meant; whilst I then sought to hide
 That which I came to tell you—but in vain.

BEATRICE. (Wildly, staggering towards the door.)
 Oh, that the earth would gape! Hide me, oh God!

CENCI.

Then it was I whose inarticulate words
 Fell from my lips, and who with tottering steps
 Fled from your presence, as you now from mine.
 Stay, I command you—from this day and hour
 Never again, I think, with fearless eye,
 And brow superior, and unaltered cheek,
 And that lip made for tenderness or scorn,
 Shalt thou strike dumb the meanest of mankind;
 Me least of all. Now get thee to thy chamber!
 Thou too, loathed image of thy cursèd mother,

120

(to BERNARDO)

Thy milky, meek face makes me sick with hate!

(Exeunt BEATRICE and BERNARDO.)

(Aside.) So much has past between us as must make Me bold, her fearful.—'Tis an awful thing
 To touch such mischief as I now conceive: 125
 So men sit shivering on the dewy bank,
 And try the chill stream with their feet; once in . . .
 How the delighted spirit pants for joy!

LUCRETIA. (Advancing timidly towards him)

Oh, husband! Pray forgive poor Beatrice,
 She meant not any ill.

CENCI.

Nor you perhaps? 130

Nor that young imp, whom you have taught by rote
 Parricide with his alphabet? Nor Giacomo?
 Nor those two most unnatural sons, who stirred
 Enmity up against me with the Pope?

Whom in one night merciful God cut off: 135

Innocent lambs! They thought not any ill.

You were not here conspiring? You said nothing
 Of how I might be dungeoned as a madman;

Or be condemned to death for some offence,
 And you would be the witnesses?—This failing, 140
 How just it were to hire assassins, or

Put sudden poison in my evening drink?

Or smother me when overcome by wine?

Seeing we had no other judge but God,

And he had sentenced me, and there were none 145
 But you to be the executioners

Of his decree enregistered in heaven?

Oh, no! You said not this?

LUCRETIA.

So help me God,

I never thought the things you charge me with!

CENCI.

If you dare speak that wicked lie again 150

I'll kill you. What! It was not by your counsel

That Beatrice disturbed the feast last night?

You did not hope to stir some enemies

Against me, and escape, and laugh to scorn
 What every nerve of you now trembles at? 155
 You judged that men were bolder than they are;
 Few dare to stand between their grave and me.

LUCRETIA.

Look not so dreadfully! By my salvation
 I knew not aught that Beatrice designed;
 Nor do I think she designed any thing 160
 Until she heard you talk of her dead brothers.

CENCI.

Blaspheming liar! You are damned for this!
 But I will take you where you may persuade
 The stones you tread on to deliver you:
 For men shall there be none but those who dare 165
 All things—not question that which I command.
 On Wednesday next I shall set out: you know
 That savage rock, the Castle of Petrella:
 'Tis safely walled, and moated round about:
 Its dungeons underground, and its thick towers 170
 Never told tales; though they have heard and seen
 What might make dumb things speak.—Why do you linger?
 Make speediest preparation for the journey!

(Exit LUCRETIA.)

The all-beholding sun yet shines; I hear
 A busy stir of men about the streets; 175
 I see the bright sky through the window panes:
 It is a garish, broad, and peering day;
 Loud, light, suspicious, full of eyes and ears,
 And every little corner, nook and hole
 Is penetrated with the insolent light. 180
 Come darkness! Yet, what is the day to me?
 And wherefore should I wish for night, who do
 A deed which shall confound both night and day?
 'Tis she shall grope through a bewildering mist
 Of horror: if there be a sun in heaven 185
 She shall not dare to look upon its beams;
 Nor feel its warmth. Let her then wish for night;
 The act I think shall soon extinguish all
 For me: I bear a darker deadlier gloom
 Than the earth's shade, or interlunar air, 190

Or constellations quenched in murkiest cloud,
 In which I walk secure and unbeheld
 Towards my purpose.—Would that it were done! (Exit.)

SCENE II.

A CHAMBER IN THE VATICAN. ENTER CAMILLO AND GIACOMO, IN CONVERSATION.

CAMILLO.

There is an obsolete and doubtful law
 By which you might obtain a bare provision
 Of food and clothing—

GIACOMO.

Nothing more? Alas!
 Bare must be the provision which strict law
 Awards, and agèd, sullen avarice pays. 5
 Why did my father not apprentice me
 To some mechanic trade? I should have then
 Been trained in no highborn necessities
 Which I could meet not by my daily toil.
 The eldest son of a rich nobleman 10
 Is heir to all his incapacities;
 He has wide wants, and narrow powers. If you,
 Cardinal Camillo, were reduced at once
 From thrice-driven beds of down, and delicate food,
 An hundred servants, and six palaces, 15
 To that which nature doth indeed require?—

CAMILLO.

Nay, there is reason in your plea; 'twere hard.

GIACOMO.

'Tis hard for a firm man to bear: but I
 Have a dear wife, a lady of high birth,
 Whose dowry in ill hour I lent my father 20
 Without a bond or witness to the deed:
 And children, who inherit her fine senses,
 The fairest creatures in this breathing world;
 And she and they reproach me not. Cardinal,

Do you not think the Pope would interpose
And stretch authority beyond the law? 25

CAMILLO.

Though your peculiar case is hard, I know
The Pope will not divert the course of law.
After that impious feast the other night
I spoke with him, and urged him then to check 30
Your father's cruel hand; he frowned and said,
"Children are disobedient, and they sting
"Their fathers' hearts to madness and despair,
"Requiting years of care with contumely.
"I pity the Count Cenci from my heart; 35
"His outraged love perhaps awakened hate,
"And thus he is exasperated to ill.
"In the great war between the old and young
"I, who have white hairs and a tottering body,
"Will keep at least blameless neutrality." 40

Enter ORSINO.

You, my good Lord Orsino, heard those words.

ORSINO.

What words?

GIACOMO.

Alas, repeat them not again!
There then is no redress for me, at least
None but that which I may achieve myself,
Since I am driven to the brink.—But, say, 45
My innocent sister and my only brother
Are dying underneath my father's eye.
The memorable torturers of this land,
Galez Visconti, Borgia, Ezzelin,
Never inflicted on the meanest slave 50
What these endure; shall they have no protection?

CAMILLO.

Why, if they would petition to the Pope
I see not how he could refuse it—yet
He holds it of most dangerous example
In aught to weaken the paternal power, 55
Being, as 'twere, the shadow of his own.
I pray you now excuse me. I have business
That will not bear delay. (Exit CAMILLO.)

GIACOMO.

But you, Orsino,
Have the petition: wherefore not present it?

ORSINO.

I have presented it, and backed it with
My earnest prayers, and urgent interest; 60
It was returned unanswered. I doubt not
But that the strange and execrable deeds
Alleged in it—in truth they might well baffle
Any belief—have turned the Pope's displeasure 65
Upon the accusers from the criminal:
So I should guess from what Camillo said.

GIACOMO.

My friend, that palace-walking devil Gold
Has whispered silence to his Holiness:
And we are left, as scorpions ringed with fire. 70
What should we do but strike ourselves to death?
For he who is our murderous persecutor
Is shielded by a father's holy name,
Or I would— (stops abruptly)

ORSINO.

What? Fear not to speak your thought.
Words are but holy as the deeds they cover: 75
A priest who has forsworn the God he serves;
A judge who makes Truth weep at his decree;
A friend who should weave counsel, as I now,
But as the mantle of some selfish guile;
A father who is all a tyrant seems, 80
Were the profaner for his sacred name.

GIACOMO.

Ask me not what I think; the unwilling brain
Feigns often what it would not; and we trust
Imagination with such phantasies
As the tongue dares not fashion into words, 85
Which have no words, their horror makes them dim
To the mind's eye.—My heart denies itself
To think what you demand.

ORSINO.

But a friend's bosom
Is as the inmost cave of our own mind

Where we sit shut from the wide gaze of day, . 90
 And from the all-communicating air.
 You look what I suspected—

GIACOMO.

Spare me now!

I am as one lost in a midnight wood,
 Who dares not ask some harmless passenger
 The path across the wilderness, lest he, 95
 As my thoughts are, should be—a murderer.
 I know you are my friend, and all I dare
 Speak to my soul that will I trust with thee.
 But now my heart is heavy, and would take
 Lone counsel from a night of sleepless care. 100
 Pardon me, that I say farewell—farewell!
 I would that to my own suspected self
 I could address a word so full of peace

ORSINO.

Farewell!—Be your thoughts better or more bold.

(Exit GIACOMO.)

I had disposed the Cardinal Camillo 105
 To feed his hope with cold encouragement:
 It fortunately serves my close designs
 That 'tis a trick of this same family
 To analyse their own and other minds.
 Such self-anatomy shall teach the will 110
 Dangerous secrets: for it tempts our powers,
 Knowing what must be thought, and may be done,
 Into the depth of darkest purposes:
 So Cenci fell into the pit; even I,
 Since Beatrice unveiled me to myself, 115
 And made me shrink from what I cannot shun,
 Shew a poor figure to my own esteem,
 To which I grow half reconciled. I'll do
 As little mischief as I can; that thought
 Shall fee the accuser conscience.

(After a pause)

Now what harm 120

If Cenci should be murdered?—Yet, if murdered,
 Wherefore by me? And what if I could take
 The profit, yet omit the sin and peril
 In such an action? Of all earthly things

I fear a man whose blows outspeed his words; 125
 And such is Cenci: and while Cenci lives
 His daughter's dowry were a secret grave
 If a priest wins her.—Oh, fair Beatrice!
 Would that I loved thee not, or loving thee .
 Could but despise danger and gold and all 130
 That frowns between my wish and its effect,
 Or smiles beyond it! There is no escape . . .
 Her bright form kneels beside me at the altar,
 And follows me to the resort of men,
 And fills my slumber with tumultuous dreams, 135
 So when I wake my blood seems liquid fire;
 And if I strike my damp and dizzy head
 My hot palm scorches it: her very name,
 But spoken by a stranger, makes my heart
 Sicken and pant; and thus unprofitably 140
 I clasp the phantom of unfelt delights
 Till weak imagination half possesses
 The self-created shadow. Yet much longer
 Will I not nurse this life of feverous hours:
 From the unravelled hopes of Giacomo 145
 I must work out my own dear purposes.
 I see, as from a tower, the end of all:
 Her father dead; her brother bound to me
 By a dark secret, surer than the grave;
 Her mother scared and unexpostulating 150
 From the dread manner of her wish achieved:
 And she!—Once more take courage my faint heart;
 What dares a friendless maiden matched with thee?
 I have such foresight as assures success:
 Some unbeheld divinity doth ever, 155
 When dread events are near, stir up men's minds
 To black suggestions; and he prospers best,
 Not who becomes the instrument of ill,
 But who can flatter the dark spirit, that makes
 Its empire and its prey of other hearts 160
 Till it become his slave . . . as I will do. (Exit.)

END OF THE SECOND ACT.

ACT III.

SCENE I.

AN APARTMENT IN THE CENCI PALACE. LUCRETIA, TO HER ENTER
BEATRICE.

BEATRICE.

(She enters staggering, and speaks wildly.)

Reach me that handkerchief!—My brain is hurt;
My eyes are full of blood; just wipe them for me. . .
I see but indistinctly. . .

LUCRETIA.

My sweet child,
You have no wound; 'tis only a cold dew
That starts from your dear brow. . . Alas! Alas! 5
What has befallen?

BEATRICE.

How comes this hair undone?
Its wandering strings must be what blind me so,
And yet I tied it fast.—O, horrible!
The pavement sinks under my feet! The walls
Spin round! I see a woman weeping there, 10
And standing calm and motionless, whilst I
Slide giddily as the world reels. . . My God!
The beautiful blue heaven is flecked with blood!
The sunshine on the floor is black! The air
Is changed to vapours such as the dead breathe 15
In charnel pits! Pah! I am choked! There creeps
A clinging, black, contaminating mist
About me. . . 'tis substantial, heavy, thick,
I cannot pluck it from me, for it glues
My fingers and my limbs to one another, 20
And eats into my sinews, and dissolves
My flesh to a pollution, poisoning
The subtle, pure, and inmost spirit of life!
My God! I never knew what the mad felt
Before; for I am mad beyond all doubt! 25

(more wildly) No, I am dead! These putrefying limbs
 Shut round and sepulchre the panting soul
 Which would burst forth into the wandering air! (a pause)
 What hideous thought was that I had even now?
 'Tis gone; and yet its burthen remains here 30
 O'er these dull eyes. . . upon this weary heart!
 O, world! O, life! O, day! O, misery!

LUCRETIA.

What ails thee, my poor child? She answers not:
 Her spirit apprehends the sense of pain,
 But not its cause; suffering has dried away 35
 The source from which it sprung. . .

BEATRICE (frantically).

Like Parricide. . .

Misery has killed its father: yet its father
 Never like mine. . . O, God! What thing am I?

LUCRETIA.

My dearest child, what has your father done?

BEATRICE (doubtfully).

Who art thou, questioner? I have no father. 40
 (aside) She is the madhouse nurse who tends on me,
 It is a piteous office.

(To Lucretia, in a slow, subdued voice) Do you know
 I thought I was that wretched Beatrice
 Men speak of, whom her father sometimes hales
 From hall to hall by the entangled hair; 45

At others, pens up naked in damp cells
 Where scaly reptiles crawl, and starves her there,
 Till she will eat strange flesh. This woful story
 So did I overact in my sick dreams,
 That I imagined. . . no, it cannot be! 50

Horrible things have been in this wild world,
 Prodigious mixtures, and confusions strange
 Of good and ill; and worse have been conceived
 Than ever there was found a heart to do.
 But never fancy imaged such a deed 55

As. . . (pauses, suddenly recollecting herself)

Who art thou? Swear to me, ere I die
 With fearful expectation, that indeed
 Thou art not what thou seemest. . . Mother!

LUCRETIA.

Oh!

My sweet child, know you. . .

BEATRICE.

Yet speak it not:

For then if this be truth, that other too 60
 Must be a truth, a firm enduring truth,
 Linked with each lasting circumstance of life,
 Never to change, never to pass away.
 Why so it is. This is the Cenci Palace;
 Thou art Lucretia; I am Beatrice. 65
 I have talked some wild words, but will no more.
 Mother, come near me: from this point of time,
 I am. . . (her voice dies away faintly)

LUCRETIA.

Alas! What has befallen thee, child?

What has thy father done?

BEATRICE.

What have I done?

Am I not innocent? Is it my crime 70
 That one with white hair, and imperious brow,
 Who tortured me from my forgotten years,
 As parents only dare, should call himself
 My father, yet should be!—Oh, what am I?
 What name, what place, what memory shall be mine? 75
 What retrospects, outliving even despair?

LUCRETIA.

He is a violent tyrant, surely, child:
 We know that death alone can make us free;
 His death or ours. But what can he have done
 Of deadlier outrage or worse injury? 80
 Thou art unlike thyself; thine eyes shoot forth
 A wandering and strange spirit. Speak to me,
 Unlock those pallid hands whose fingers twine
 With one another.

BEATRICE.

'Tis the restless life

Tortured within them. If I try to speak 85
 I shall go mad. Aye, something must be done;
 What, yet I know not. . . something which shall make

The thing that I have suffered but a shadow
 In the dread lightning which avenges it;
 Brief, rapid, irreversible, destroying 90
 The consequence of what it cannot cure.
 Some such thing is to be endured or done:
 When I know what, I shall be still and calm,
 And never any thing will move me more.
 But now!—Oh blood, which art my father's blood, 95
 Circling thro' these contaminated veins,
 If thou, poured forth on the polluted earth,
 Could wash away the crime, and punishment
 By which I suffer . . . no, that cannot be!
 Many might doubt there were a God above 100
 Who sees and permits evil, and so die:
 That faith no agony shall obscure in me.

LUCRETIA.

It must indeed have been some bitter wrong;
 Yet what, I dare not guess. Oh, my lost child,
 Hide not in proud impenetrable grief 105
 Thy sufferings from my fear.

BEATRICE.

I hide them not.

What are the words which you would have me speak?
 I, who can feign no image in my mind
 Of that which has transformed me: I, whose thought
 Is like a ghost shrouded and folded up 110
 In its own formless horror: of all words,
 That minister to mortal intercourse,
 Which wouldst thou hear? For there is none to tell
 My misery: if another ever knew
 Aught like to it, she died as I will die, 115
 And left it, as I must, without a name.
 Death! Death! Our law and our religion call thee
 A punishment and a reward . . . Oh, which Have I deserved?

LUCRETIA.

The peace of innocence;
 Till in your season you be called to heaven. 120
 Whate'er you may have suffered, you have done
 No evil. Death must be the punishment

Of crime, or the reward of trampling down
The thorns which God has strewed upon the path
Which leads to immortality.

BEATRICE.

Aye, death. . .

125

The punishment of crime. I pray thee, God,
Let me not be bewildered while I judge.

If I must live day after day, and keep
These limbs, the unworthy temple of thy spirit,

As a foul den from which what thou abhorrest
May mock thee, unavenged. . . it shall not be!

130

Self-murder. . . no, that might be no escape,
For thy decree yawns like a Hell between

Our will and it:—O! In this mortal world
There is no vindication and no law

135

Which can adjudge and execute the doom
Of that through which I suffer.

Enter ORSINO.

(She approaches him solemnly.) Welcome, Friend!

I have to tell you that, since last we met,
I have endured a wrong so great and strange,

That neither life nor death can give me rest.

140

Ask me not what it is, for there are deeds

Which have no form, sufferings which have no tongue.

ORSINO.

And what is he who has thus injured you?

BEATRICE.

The man they call my father: a dread name.

ORSINO.

It cannot be. . .

BEATRICE.

What it can be, or not,

145

Forbear to think. It is, and it has been;

Advise me how it shall not be again.

I thought to die; but a religious awe

Restrains me, and the dread lest death itself

Might be no refuge from the consciousness

150

Of what is yet unexpiated. Oh, speak!

ORSINO.

Accuse him of the deed, and let the law
Avenge thee.

BEATRICE.

Oh, ice-hearted counsellor!
If I could find a word that might make known
The crime of my destroyer; and that done, 155
My tongue should like a knife tear out the secret
Which cankers my heart's core; aye, lay all bare
So that my unpolluted fame should be
With vilest gossips a stale mouthèd story;
A mock, a bye-word, an astonishment:— 160
If this were done, which never shall be done,
Think of the offender's gold, his dreaded hate,
And the strange horror of the accuser's tale,
Baffling belief, and overpowering speech;
Scarce whispered, unimaginable, wrapt 165
In hideous hints. . . Oh, most assured redress!

ORSINO.

You will endure it then?

BEATRICE.

Endure?—Orsino,
It seems your counsel is small profit.
(Turns from him, and speaks half to herself) Aye,
All must be suddenly resolved and done.
What is this undistinguishable mist 170
Of thoughts, which rise, like shadow after shadow,
Darkening each other?

ORSINO.

Should the offender live?
Triumph in his misdeed? and make, by use,
His crime, whate'er it is, dreadful no doubt,
Thine element; until thou mayest become 175
Utterly lost; subdued even to the hue
Of that which thou permittest?

BEATRICE (To herself).

Mighty death!
Thou double-visaged shadow! Only judge!
Rightfullest arbiter! (She retires absorbed in thought.)

LUCRETIA.

If the lightning
Of God has e'er descended to avenge. . . 180

ORSINO.

Blaspheme not! His high Providence commits
Its glory on this earth, and their own wrongs
Into the hands of men; if they neglect
To punish crime. . .

LUCRETIA.

But if one, like this wretch,
Should mock with gold, opinion law and power? 185
If there be no appeal to that which makes
The guiltiest tremble? If because our wrongs,
For that they are unnatural, strange and monstrous,
Exceed all measure of belief? Oh, God!
If, for the very reasons which should make 190
Redress most swift and sure, our injurer triumphs?
And we, the victims, bear worse punishment
Than that appointed for their torturer?

ORSINO.

Think not
But that there is redress where there is wrong,
So we be bold enough to seize it.

LUCRETIA.

How? 195
If there were any way to make all sure,
I know not. . . but I think it might be good
To. . .

ORSINO.

Why, his late outrage to Beatrice;
For it is such, as I but faintly guess,
As makes remorse dishonour, and leaves her 200
Only one duty, how she may avenge:
You, but one refuge from ills ill endured;
Me, but one counsel. . .

LUCRETIA.

For we cannot hope
That aid, or retribution, or resource
Will arise thence, where every other one 205
Might find them with less need. (BEATRICE advances.)

ORSINO.

Then . . .

BEATRICE.

Peace, Orsino!

And, honoured Lady, while I speak, I pray,
 That you put off, as garments overworn,
 Forbearance and respect, remorse and fear,
 And all the fit restraints of daily life, 210
 Which have been borne from childhood, but which now
 Would be a mockery to my holier plea.
 As I have said, I have endured a wrong,
 Which, though it be expressionless, is such
 As asks atonement; both for what is past, 215
 And lest I be reserved, day after day,
 To load with crimes an overburthened soul,
 And be . . . what ye can dream not. I have prayed
 To God, and I have talked with my own heart,
 And have unravelled my entangled will, 220
 And have at length determined what is right.
 Art thou my friend Orsino? False or true?
 Pledge thy salvation ere I speak.

ORSINO.

I swear

To dedicate my cunning, and my strength,
 My silence, and whatever else is mine, 225
 To thy commands.

LUCRETIA.

You think we should devise

His death?

BEATRICE.

And execute what is devised,
 And suddenly. We must be brief and bold.

ORSINO.

And yet most cautious.

LUCRETIA.

For the jealous laws
 Would punish us with death and infamy 230
 For that which it became themselves to do.

BEATRICE.

Be cautious as ye may, but prompt. Orsino,

What are the means ?

ORSINO.

I know two dull, fierce outlaws,
Who think man's spirit as a worm's, and they
Would trample out, for any slight caprice, 235
The meanest or the noblest life. This mood
Is marketable here in Rome. They sell
What we now want.

LUCRETIA.

To-morrow before dawn,
Cenci will take us to that lonely rock,
Petrella, in the Apulian Apennines. 240
If he arrive there. . .

BEATRICE.

He must not arrive.

ORSINO.

Will it be dark before you reach the tower ?

LUCRETIA.

The sun will scarce be set.

BEATRICE.

But I remember
Two miles on this side of the fort, the road
Crosses a deep ravine ; 'tis rough and narrow, 245
And winds with short turns down the precipice ;
And in its depth there is a mighty rock,
Which has, from unimagivable years,
Sustained itself with terror and with toil
Over a gulph, and with the agony 250
With which it clings seems slowly coming down ;
Even as a wretched soul hour after hour,
Clings to the mass of life ; yet clinging, leans ;
And leaning, makes more dark the dread abyss
In which it fears to fall : beneath this crag 255
Huge as despair, as if in weariness,
The melancholy mountain yawns . . . below,
You hear but see not an impetuous torrent
Raging among the caverns, and a bridge
Crosses the chasm ; and high above there grow, 260
With intersecting trunks, from crag to crag,
Cedars, and yews, and pines ; whose tangled hair

Is matted in one solid roof of shade
By the dark ivy's twine. At noon-day here
'Tis twilight, and at sunset blackest night.

265

ORSINO.

Before you reach that bridge make some excuse
For spurring on your mules, or loitering
Until . . .

BEATRICE.

What sound is that?

LUCRETIA.

Hark! No, it cannot be a servant's step;
It must be Cenci, unexpectedly
Returned . . . Make some excuse for being here.

270

BEATRICE. (to ORSINO, as she goes out)

That step we hear approach must never pass
The bridge of which we spoke.

(Exeunt LUCRETIA and BEATRICE.)

ORSINO.

What shall I do?

Cenci must find me here, and I must bear
The imperious inquisition of his looks
As to what brought me hither: let me mask
Mine own in some inane and vacant smile.

275

Enter GIACOMO, in a hurried manner.

How! Have you ventured hither? Know you then
That Cenci is from home?

GIACOMO.

I sought him here;

And now must wait till he returns.

ORSINO.

Great God!

280

Weigh you the danger of this rashness?

GIACOMO.

Aye!

Does my destroyer know his danger? We
Are now no more, as once, parent and child,
But man to man; the oppressor to the oppressed;
The slanderer to the slandered; foe to foe:
He has cast Nature off, which was his shield,

285

And Nature casts him off, who is her shame;
 And I spurn both. Is it a father's throat
 Which I will shake, and say, I ask not gold;
 I ask not happy years; nor memories 290
 Of tranquil childhood; nor home-sheltered love;
 Though all these hast thou torn from me, and more;
 But only my fair fame; only one hoard
 Of peace, which I thought hidden from thy hate,
 Under the penury heaped on me by thee, 295
 Or I will. . . God can understand and pardon,
 Why should I speak with man?

ORSINO.

Be calm, dear friend.

GIACOMO.

Well, I will calmly tell you what he did.
 This old Francesco Cenci, as you know,
 Borrowed the dowry of my wife from me, 300
 And then denied the loan; and left me so
 In poverty, the which I sought to mend
 By holding a poor office in the state.
 It had been promised to me, and already
 I bought new clothing for my ragged babes, 305
 And my wife smiled; and my heart knew repose.
 When Cenci's intercession, as I found,
 Conferred this office on a wretch, whom thus
 He paid for vilest service. I returned
 With this ill news, and we sate sad together 310
 Solacing our despondency with tears
 Of such affection and unbroken faith
 As temper life's worst bitterness; when he,
 As he is wont, came to upbraid and curse,
 Mocking our poverty, and telling us 315
 Such was God's scourge for disobedient sons.
 And then, that I might strike him dumb with shame,
 I spoke of my wife's dowry; but he coined
 A brief yet specious tale, how I had wasted
 The sum in secret riot; and he saw 320
 My wife was touched, and he went smiling forth.
 And when I knew the impression he had made,
 And felt my wife insult with silent scorn

My ardent truth, and look averse and cold,
 I went forth too: but soon returned again; 325
 Yet not so soon but that my wife had taught
 My children her harsh thoughts, and they all cried,
 "Give us clothes, father! Give us better food!
 "What you in one night squander were enough
 "For months!" I looked, and saw that home was hell. 330
 And to that hell will I return no more
 Until mine enemy has rendered up
 Atonement, or, as he gave life to me
 I will, reversing nature's law . . .

ORSINO.

Trust me,
 The compensation which thou seekest here 335
 Will be denied.

GIACOMO.

Then . . . Are you not my friend?
 Did you not hint at the alternative,
 Upon the brink of which you see I stand,
 The other day when we conversed together?
 My wrongs were then less. That word parricide, 340
 Although I am resolved, haunts me like fear.

ORSINO.

It must be fear itself, for the bare word
 Is hollow mockery. Mark, how wisest God
 Draws to one point the threads of a just doom,
 So sanctifying it: what you devise 345
 Is, as it were, accomplished.

GIACOMO.

Is he dead?

ORSINO.

His grave is ready. Know that since we met
 Cenci has done an outrage to his daughter.

GIACOMO.

What outrage?

ORSINO.

That she speaks not, but you may
 Conceive such half conjectures as I do, 350
 From her fixed paleness, and the lofty grief
 Of her stern brow bent on the idle air,

And her severe unmodulated voice,
 Drowning both tenderness and dread; and last
 From this; that whilst her step-mother and I, 355
 Bewildered in our horror, talked together
 With obscure hints; both self-misunderstood
 And darkly guessing, stumbling, in our talk,
 Over the truth, and yet to its revenge,
 She interrupted us, and with a look 360
 Which told before she spoke it, he must die: . . .

GIACOMO.

It is enough. My doubts are well appeased;
 There is a higher reason for the act
 Than mine; there is a holier judge than me,
 A more unblamed avenger. Beatrice, 365
 Who in the gentleness of thy sweet youth
 Hast never trodden on a worm, or bruised
 A living flower, but thou hast pitied it
 With needless tears! Fair sister, thou in whom Men wondered how such loveliness and wisdom 370
 Did not destroy each other! Is there made
 Ravage of thee? O, heart, I ask no more
 Justification! Shall I wait, Orsino,
 Till he return, and stab him at the door?

ORSINO.

Not so; some accident might interpose 375
 To rescue him from what is now most sure;
 And you are unprovided where to fly,
 How to excuse or to conceal. Nay, listen:
 All is contrived; success is so assured
 That. . .

Enter BEATRICE.

BEATRICE.

'Tis my brother's voice! You know me not? 380

GIACOMO.

My sister, my lost sister!

BEATRICE.

Lost indeed!

I see Orsino has talked with you, and
 That you conjecture things too horrible

To speak, yet far less than the truth. Now, stay not,
 He might return: yet kiss me; I shall know 385
 That then thou hast consented to his death.
 Farewell, farewell! Let piety to God,
 Brotherly love, justice and clemency,
 And all things that make tender hardest hearts
 Make thine hard, brother. Answer not. . . farewell. 390
(Exeunt severally.)

SCENE II.

A MEAN APARTMENT IN GIACOMO'S HOUSE. GIACOMO ALONE.

GIACOMO.

'Tis midnight, and Orsino comes not yet.
(Thunder, and the sound of a storm.)
 What! can the everlasting elements
 Feel with a worm like man? If so the shaft
 Of mercy-wingèd lightning would not fall
 On stones and trees. My wife and children sleep: 5
 They are now living in unmeaning dreams:
 But I must wake, still doubting if that deed
 Be just which was most necessary. O,
 Thou un replenished lamp! whose narrow fire
 Is shaken by the wind, and on whose edge 10
 Devouring darkness hovers! Thou small flame,
 Which, as a dying pulse rises and falls,
 Still flickerest up and down, how very soon,
 Did I not feed thee, wouldst thou fail and be
 As thou hadst never been! So wastes and sinks 15
 Even now, perhaps, the life that kindled mine:
 But that no power can fill with vital oil
 That broken lamp of flesh. Ha! 'tis the blood
 Which fed these veins that ebbs till all is cold:
 It is the form that moulded mine that sinks 20
 Into the white and yellow spasms of death:
 It is the soul by which mine was arrayed
 In God's immortal likeness which now stands
 Naked before Heaven's judgment seat!

(a bell strikes) One! Two!

The hours crawl on; and when my hairs are white, 25
 My son will then perhaps be waiting thus,
 Tortured between just hate and vain remorse;
 Chiding the tardy messenger of news
 Like those which I expect. I almost wish
 He be not dead, although my wrongs are great; 30
 Yet... 'tis Orsino's step...

Enter ORSINO.

Speak!

ORSINO.

I am come

To say he has escaped.

GIACOMO.

Escaped!

ORSINO.

And safe

Within Petrella. He past by the spot
 Appointed for the deed an hour too soon.

GIACOMO.

Are we the fools of such contingencies? 35
 And do we waste in blind misgivings thus
 The hours when we should act? Then wind and thunder,
 Which seemed to howl his knell, is the loud laughter
 With which Heaven mocks our weakness! I henceforth
 Will ne'er repent of aught designed or done 40
 But my repentance.

ORSINO.

See, the lamp is out.

GIACOMO.

If no remorse is ours when the dim air
 Has drank this innocent flame, why should we quail
 When Cenci's life, that light by which ill spirits
 See the worst deeds they prompt, shall sink for ever? 45
 No, I am hardened.

ORSINO.

Why, what need of this?

Who feared the pale intrusion of remorse
 In a just deed? Altho' our first plan failed,

Doubt not but he will soon be laid to rest.
But light the lamp; let us not talk i' the dark. 50

GIACOMO (lighting the lamp).

And yet once quenched I cannot thus relume
My father's life: do you not think his ghost
Might plead that argument with God?

ORSINO.

Once gone
You cannot now recall your sister's peace;
Your own extinguished years of youth and hope; 55
Nor your wife's bitter words; nor all the taunts
Which, from the prosperous, weak misfortune takes;
Nor your dead mother; nor. . .

GIACOMO.

O, speak no more!
I am resolved, although this very hand
Must quench the life that animated it. 60

ORSINO.

There is no need of that. Listen: you know
Olimpio, the castellan of Petrella
In old Colonna's time; him whom your father
Degraded from his post? And Marzio,
That desperate wretch, whom he deprived last year 65
Of a reward of blood, well earned and due?

GIACOMO.

I knew Olimpio; and they say he hated
Old Cenci so, that in his silent rage
His lips grew white only to see him pass.
Of Marzio I know nothing.

ORSINO.

Marzio's hate 70
Matches Olimpio's. I have sent these men,
But in your name, and as at your request,
To talk with Beatrice and Lucretia.

GIACOMO.

Only to talk?

ORSINO.

The moments which even now
Pass onward to tomorrow's midnight hour 75

ACT IV.

SCENE I.

AN APARTMENT IN THE CASTLE OF PETRELLA. ENTER CENCI.

CENCI.

She comes not; yet I left her even now
 Vanquished and faint. She knows the penalty
 Of her delay: yet what if threats are vain?
 Am I not now within Petrella's moat?
 Or fear I still the eyes and ears of Rome? 5
 Might I not drag her by the golden hair?
 Stamp on her? Keep her sleepless till her brain
 Be overworn? Tame her with chains and famine?
 Less would suffice. Yet so to leave undone
 What I most seek! No, 'tis her stubborn will 10
 Which by its own consent shall stoop as low
 As that which drags it down.

Enter LUCRETIA.

Thou loathèd wretch!
 Hide thee from my abhorrence; Fly, begone!
 Yet stay! Bid Beatrice come hither.

LUCRETIA.

Oh,
 Husband! I pray for thine own wretched sake 15
 Heed what thou dost. A man who walks like thee
 Thro' crimes, and thro' the danger of his crimes,
 Each hour may stumble o'er a sudden grave.
 And thou art old; thy hairs are hoary gray;
 As thou wouldst save thyself from death and hell, 20
 Pity thy daughter; give her to some friend
 In marriage: so that she may tempt thee not
 To hatred, or worse thoughts, if worse there be.

CENCI.

What! like her sister who has found a home
 To mock my hate from with prosperity? 25
 Strange ruin shall destroy both her and thee

And all that yet remain. My death may be
 Rapid, her destiny outspeeds it. Go,
 Bid her come hither, and before my mood
 Be changed, lest I should drag her by the hair. 30

LUCRETIA.

She sent me to thee, husband. At thy presence
 She fell, as thou dost know, into a trance;
 And in that trance she heard a voice which said,
 "Cenci must die! Let him confess himself!
 "Even now the accusing Angel waits to hear 35
 "If God, to punish his enormous crimes,
 "Harden his dying heart!"

CENCI.

Why—such things are. . .

No doubt divine revealings may be made.
 'Tis plain I have been favoured from above,
 For when I cursed my sons they died.—Aye. . . so. . . 40
 As to the right or wrong that's talk. . . repentance. . .
 Repentance is an easy moment's work
 And more depends on God than me. Well. . . well. . .
 I must give up the greater point, which was
 To poison and corrupt her soul. 45

(A pause; Lucretia approaches anxiously, and then shrinks back as he speaks.)

One, two;

Aye. . . Rocco and Cristofano my curse
 Strangled: and Giacomo, I think, will find
 Life a worse Hell than that beyond the grave:
 Beatrice shall, if there be skill in hate,
 Die in despair, blaspheming: to Bernardo, 50
 He is so innocent, I will bequeath
 The memory of these deeds, and make his youth
 The sepulchre of hope, where evil thoughts
 Shall grow like weeds on a neglected tomb.
 When all is done, out in the wide Campagna, 55
 I will pile up my silver and my gold;
 My costly robes, paintings and tapestries;
 My parchments and all records of my wealth,
 And make a bonfire in my joy, and leave
 Of my possessions nothing but my name; 60

Which shall be an inheritance to strip
 Its wearer bare as infamy. That done,
 My soul, which is a scourge, will I resign
 Into the hands of him who wielded it;
 Be it for its own punishment or theirs, 65
 He will not ask it of me till the lash
 Be broken in its last and deepest wound;
 Until its hate be all inflicted. Yet,
 Lest death outspeed my purpose, let me make Short work and sure. . . (going)

LUCRETIA. (Stops him)

Oh, stay! It was a feint: 76
 She had no vision, and she heard no voice.
 I said it but to awe thee.

CENCI.

That is well.

Vile palterer with the sacred truth of God,
 Be thy soul choked with that blaspheming lie!
 For Beatrice worse terrors are in store 75
 To bend her to my will.

LUCRETIA.

Oh! to what will?

What cruel sufferings more than she has known
 Canst thou inflict?

CENCI.

Andrea! Go call my daughter,

And if she comes not tell her that I come.
 What sufferings? I will drag her, step by step, 80
 Thro' infamies unheard of among men:
 She shall stand shelterless in the broad noon
 Of public scorn, for acts blazoned abroad,
 One among which shall be . . . What? Canst thou guess?
 She shall become, (for what she most abhors 85
 Shall have a fascination to entrap
 Her loathing will), to her own conscious self
 All she appears to others; and when dead,
 As she shall die unshrived and unforgiven,
 A rebel to her father and her God, 90
 Her corpse shall be abandoned to the hounds;
 Her name shall be the terror of the earth;

Her spirit shall approach the throne of God
 Plague-spotted with my curses. I will make
 Body and soul a monstrous lump of ruin.

Enter ANDREA.

ANDREA.

The lady Beatrice . . .

CENCI.

Speak, pale slave! What

Said she?

ANDREA.

My Lord, 'twas what she looked; she said:
 "Go tell my father that I see the gulph
 "Of Hell between us two, which he may pass,
 "I will not."

(Exit ANDREA.)

CENCI.

Go thou quick, Lucretia,

100

Tell her to come; yet let her understand
 Her coming is consent: and say, moreover,
 That if she come not I will curse her. (Exit LUCRETIA.)

Ha!

With what but with a father's curse doth God
 Panic-strike armèd victory, and make pale
 Cities in their prosperity? The world's Father
 Must grant a parent's prayer against his child
 Be he who asks even what men call me.

105

Will not the deaths of her rebellious brothers
 Awe her before I speak? For I on them
 Did imprecate quick ruin, and it came.

110

Enter LUCRETIA.

Well; what? Speak, wretch!

LUCRETIA.

She said, "I cannot come;
 "Go tell my father that I see a torrent
 "Of his own blood raging between us."

CENCI (kneeling).

God!

Hear me! If this most specious mass of flesh,
 Which thou hast made my daughter; this my blood,

115

This particle of my divided being;
 Or rather, this my bane and my disease,
 Whose sight infects and poisons me; this devil
 Which sprung from me as from a hell, was meant 120
 To aught good use; if her bright loveliness
 Was kindled to illumine this dark world;
 If nursed by thy selectest dew of love
 Such virtues blossom in her as should make
 The peace of life, I pray thee for my sake, 125
 As thou the common God and Father art
 Of her, and me, and all; reverse that doom!
 Earth, in the name of God, let her food be
 Poison, until she be encrusted round
 With leprous stains! Heaven, rain upon her head 130
 The blistering drops of the Maremma's dew,
 Till she be speckled like a toad; parch up
 Those love-enkindled lips, warp those fine limbs
 To loathèd lameness! All beholding sun,
 Strike in thine envy those life-darting eyes 135
 With thine own blinding beams!

LUCRETIA.

Peace! Peace!

For thine own sake unsay those dreadful words.
 When high God grants he punishes such prayers.

CENCI.

(Leaping up, and throwing his right hand towards Heaven)
 He does his will, I mine! This in addition,
 That if she have a child . . .

LUCRETIA.

Horrible thought! 140

CENCI.

That if she ever have a child; and thou,
 Quick Nature! I adjure thee by thy God,
 That thou be fruitful in her, and encrease
 And multiply, fulfilling his command,
 And my deep imprecation! May it be 145
 A hideous likeness of herself, that as
 From a distorting mirror, she may see
 Her image mixed with what she most abhors,
 Smiling upon her from her nursing breast.

And that the child may from its infancy 150
 Grow, day by day, more wicked and deformed,
 Turning her mother's love to misery:
 And that both she and it may live until
 It shall repay her care and pain with hate,
 Or what may else be more unnatural. 155
 So he may hunt her through the clamorous scoffs
 Of the loud world to a dishonoured grave.
 Shall I revoke this curse? Go, bid her come,
 Before my words are chronicled in heaven. (Exit LUCRETIA.)
 I do not feel as if I were a man, 160
 But like a fiend appointed to chastise
 The offences of some unremembered world.
 My blood is running up and down my veins;
 A fearful pleasure makes it prick and tingle:
 I feel a giddy sickness of strange awe; 165
 My heart is beating with an expectation
 Of horrid joy.

Enter LUCRETIA.

What? Speak!

LUCRETIA.

She bids thee curse;

And if thy curses, as they cannot do,
 Could kill her soul...

CENCI.

She would not come. 'Tis well,

I can do both: first take what I demand, 170
 And then extort concession. To thy chamber!
 Fly ere I spurn thee: and beware this night
 That thou cross not my footsteps. It were safer
 To come between the tiger and his prey. (Exit LUCRETIA.)
 It must be late; mine eyes grow weary dim 175
 With unaccustomed heaviness of sleep.
 Conscience! Oh, thou most insolent of lies!
 They say that sleep, that healing dew of heaven,
 Steeps not in balm the foldings of the brain
 Which thinks thee an impostor. I will go 180
 First to belie thee with an hour of rest,
 Which will be deep and calm, I feel: and then...
 O, multitudinous Hell, the fiends will shake

Thine arches with the laughter of their joy!
 There shall be lamentation heard in Heaven
 As o'er an angel fallen; and upon Earth
 All good shall droop and sicken, and ill things
 Shall with a spirit of unnatural life
 Stir and be quickened . . . even as I am now. (Exit.)

185

SCENE II.

BEFORE THE CASTLE OF PETRELLA. ENTER BEATRICE AND LUCRETIA ABOVE ON THE RAMPARTS.

BEATRICE.

They come not yet.

LUCRETIA.

'Tis scarce midnight.

BEATRICE.

How slow
 Behind the course of thought, even sick with speed,
 Lags leaden-footed time!

LUCRETIA.

The minutes pass . . .

If he should wake before the deed is done?

BEATRICE.

O, Mother! He must never wake again.
 What thou hast said persuades me that our act
 Will but dislodge a spirit of deep hell
 Out of a human form.

LUCRETIA.

'Tis true he spoke
 Of death and judgment with strange confidence
 For one so wicked; as a man believing
 In God, yet recking not of good or ill.
 And yet to die without confession! . . .

10

BEATRICE.

Oh!

Believe that Heaven is merciful and just,
 And will not add our dread necessity

To the amount of his offences.

Enter OLIMPIO and MARZIO, below.

LUCRETIA.

See,

15

They come.

BEATRICE.

All mortal things must hasten thus
To their dark end. Let us go down.

(Exeunt LUCRETIA and BEATRICE from above.)

OLIMPIO.

How feel you to this work?

MARZIO.

As one who thinks
A thousand crowns excellent market price
For an old murderer's life. Your cheeks are pale.

20

OLIMPIO.

It is the white reflexion of your own,
Which you call pale.

MARZIO.

Is that their natural hue?

OLIMPIO.

Or 'tis my hate and the deferred desire
To wreak it, which extinguishes their blood.

MARZIO.

You are inclined then to this business?

OLIMPIO.

Aye.

25

If one should bribe me with a thousand crowns
To kill a serpent which had stung my child,
I could not be more willing.

Enter BEATRICE and LUCRETIA, below.

Noble ladies!

BEATRICE.

Are ye resolved?

OLIMPIO.

Is he asleep?

MARZIO.

Is all

Quiet?

LUCRETIA.

I mixed an opiate with his drink: 30
He sleeps so soundly. . .

BEATRICE.

That his death will be
But as a change of sin-chastising dreams,
A dark continuance of the Hell within him,
Which God extinguish! But ye are resolved?
Ye know it is a high and holy deed? 35

OLIMPIO.

We are resolved.

MARZIO.

As to the how this act
Be warranted, it rests with you.

BEATRICE.

Well, follow!

OLIMPIO.

Hush! Hark! What noise is that?

MARZIO.

Ha! some one comes!

BEATRICE.

Ye conscience-stricken cravens, rock to rest
Your baby hearts. It is the iron gate, 40
Which ye left open, swinging to the wind,
That enters whistling as in scorn. Come, follow!
And be your steps like mine, light, quick and bold.
(Exeunt.)

SCENE III.

AN APARTMENT IN THE CASTLE. ENTER BEATRICE AND LUCRETIA.

LUCRETIA.

They are about it now.

BEATRICE.

Nay, it is done.

LUCRETIA.

I have not heard him groan.

BEATRICE.

He will not groan.

LUCRETIA.

What sound is that?

BEATRICE.

List! 'tis the tread of feet

About his bed.

LUCRETIA.

My God!

If he be now a cold stiff corpse. . .

BEATRICE.

O, fear not

What may be done, but what is left undone:
The act seals all.

Enter OLIMPIO and MARZIO.

Is it accomplished?

MARZIO.

What?

OLIMPIO.

Did you not call?

BEATRICE.

When?

OLIMPIO.

Now.

BEATRICE.

I ask if all is over?

OLIMPIO.

We dare not kill an old and sleeping man;
His thin grey hair, his stern and reverent brow,
His veinèd hands crossed on his heaving breast,
And the calm innocent sleep in which he lay,
Quelled me. Indeed, indeed, I cannot do it.

MARZIO.

But I was bolder; for I chid Olimpio,
And bade him bear his wrongs to his own grave
And leave me the reward. And now my knife
Touched the loose wrinkled throat, when the old man
Stirred in his sleep, and said, "God! hear, O, hear,
"A father's curse! What, art thou not our father?"

15

And then he laughed. I knew it was the ghost 20
 Of my dead father speaking through his lips,
 And could not kill him.

BEATRICE.

Miserable slaves!
 Where, if ye dare not kill a sleeping man,
 Found ye the boldness to return to me
 With such a deed undone? Base palterers! 25
 Cowards and traitors! Why, the very conscience
 Which ye would sell for gold and for revenge
 Is an equivocation: it sleeps over
 A thousand daily acts disgracing men;
 And when a deed where mercy insults heaven... 30
 Why do I talk?

(Snatching a dagger from one of them and raising it.)

Hadst thou a tongue to say,
 She murdered her own father, I must do it!
 But never dream ye shall outlive him long!

OLIMPIO.

Stop, for God's sake!

MARZIO.

I will go back and kill him.

OLIMPIO.

Give me the weapon, we must do thy will. 35

BEATRICE.

Take it! Depart! Return! (Exeunt OLIMPIO and MARZIO.)

How pale thou art!

We do but that which 'twere a deadly crime
 To leave undone.

LUCRETIA.

Would it were done!

BEATRICE.

Even whilst
 That doubt is passing through your mind, the world 40
 Is conscious of a change. Darkness and hell
 Have swallowed up the vapour they sent forth
 To blacken the sweet light of life. My breath
 Comes, methinks, lighter, and the jellied blood
 Runs freely thro' my veins. Hark!

Enter OLIMPIO and MARZIO.

He is . . .

OLIMPIO.

Dead!

MARZIO.

We strangled him that there might be no blood; 45
And then we threw his heavy corpse i' the garden
Under the balcony; 'twill seem it fell.

BEATRICE. (giving them a bag of coin)
Here, take this gold, and hasten to your homes.
And, Marzio, because thou wast only awed
By that which made me tremble, wear thou this! 50

(Clothes him in a rich mantle)

It was the mantle which my grandfather
Wore in his high prosperity, and men
Envied his state: so may they envy thine.
Thou wert a weapon in the hand of God
To a just use. Live long and thrive! And, mark, 55
If thou hast crimes, repent: this deed is none.

(A horn is sounded.)

LUCRETIA.

Hark, 'tis the castle horn; my God! it sounds
Like the last trump.

BEATRICE.

Some tedious guest is coming.

LUCRETIA.

The drawbridge is let down; there is a tramp
Of horses in the court; fly, hide yourselves! 60

(Exeunt OLIMPIO and MARZIO.)

BEATRICE.

Let us retire to counterfeit deep rest;
I scarcely need to counterfeit it now:
The spirit which doth reign within these limbs
Seems strangely undisturbed. I could even sleep
Fearless and calm: all ill is surely past. (Exeunt.) 65

SCENE IV.

ANOTHER APARTMENT IN THE CASTLE. ENTER ON ONE SIDE THE LEGATE SAVELLA, INTRODUCED BY A SERVANT, AND ON THE OTHER LUCRETIA AND BERNARDO.

SAVELLA.

Lady, my duty to his Holiness
Be my excuse that thus unseasonably
I break upon your rest. I must speak with Count Cenci; doth he sleep?

LUCRETIA. (in a hurried and confused manner)

I think he sleeps;

Yet wake him not, I pray, spare me awhile, 5
He is a wicked and a wrathful man;
Should he be roused out of his sleep to-night,
Which is, I know, a hell of angry dreams,
It were not well; indeed it were not well.
Wait till day break. . . (aside) O, I am deadly sick! 10

SAVELLA.

I grieve thus to distress you, but the Count
Must answer charges of the gravest import,
And suddenly; such my commission is.

LUCRETIA. (with increased agitation)

I dare not rouse him: I know none who dare. . .
'Twere perilous; . . . you might as safely waken 15
A serpent; or a corpse in which some fiend
Were laid to sleep.

SAVELLA.

Lady, my moments here
Are counted. I must rouse him from his sleep,
Since none else dare.

LUCRETIA (aside.)

O, terror! O, despair! 19

(To Bernardo) Bernardo, conduct you the Lord Legate to Your father's chamber. (Exeunt SAVELLA and BERNARDO.)

Enter BEATRICE.

BEATRICE.

'Tis a messenger
Come to arrest the culprit who now stands
Before the throne of unappealable God.
Both Earth and Heaven, consenting arbiters,
Acquit our deed.

LUCRETIA.

Oh, agony of fear! 25
Would that he yet might live! Even now I heard
The Legate's followers whisper as they passed
They had a warrant for his instant death.
All was prepared by unforbidden means 30
Which we must pay so dearly, having done.
Even now they search the tower, and find the body;
Now they suspect the truth; now they consult
Before they come to tax us with the fact;
O, horrible, 'tis all discovered!

BEATRICE.

Mother,

What is done wisely, is done well. Be bold 35
As thou art just. 'Tis like a truant child
To fear that others know what thou hast done,
Even from thine own strong consciousness, and thus
Write on unsteady eyes and altered cheeks
All thou wouldst hide. Be faithful to thyself, 40
And fear no other witness but thy fear.
For if, as cannot be, some circumstance
Should rise in accusation, we can blind
Suspicion with such cheap astonishment,
Or overbear it with such guiltless pride, 45
As murderers cannot feign. The deed is done,
And what may follow now regards not me.
I am as universal as the light;
Free as the earth-surrounding air; as firm
As the world's centre. Consequence, to me, 50
Is as the wind which strikes the solid rock
But shakes it not. (A cry within and tumult)

VOICES.

Murder! Murder! Murder!

Enter BERNARDO and SAVELLA.

SAVELLA (to his followers).

Go search the castle round; sound the alarm;
Look to the gates that none escape!

BEATRICE.

What now?

BERNARDO.

I know not what to say... my father's dead.

55

BEATRICE.

How; dead! he only sleeps; you mistake, brother.
His sleep is very calm, very like death;
'Tis wonderful how well a tyrant sleeps.
He is not dead?

BERNARDO.

Dead; murdered.

LUCRETIA. (with extreme agitation)

Oh, no, no,

He is not murdered though he may be dead;
I have alone the keys of those apartments.

60

SAVELLA.

Ha! Is it so?

BEATRICE.

My Lord, I pray excuse us;
We will retire; my mother is not well:
She seems quite overcome with this strange horror.

(Exeunt LUCRETIA and BEATRICE.)

SAVELLA.

Can you suspect who may have murdered him?

65

BERNARDO.

I know not what to think.

SAVELLA.

Can you name any

Who had an interest in his death?

BERNARDO.

Alas!

I can name none who had not, and those most
Who most lament that such a deed is done;
My mother, and my sister, and myself.

SAVELLA.

'Tis strange! There were clear marks of violence.

I found the old man's body in the moonlight
 Hanging beneath the window of his chamber,
 Among the branches of a pine: he could not
 Have fallen there, for all his limbs lay heaped 75
 And effortless; 'tis true there was no blood...
 Favour me, Sir; it much imports your house
 That all should be made clear; to tell the ladies
 That I request their presence. (Exit BERNARDO.)

Enter Guards bringing in MARZIO.

GUARD.

We have one.

OFFICER.

My Lord, we found this ruffian and another 80
 Lurking among the rocks; there is no doubt
 But that they are the murderers of Count Cenci:
 Each had a bag of coin; this fellow wore
 A gold-inwoven robe, which shining bright
 Under the dark rocks to the glimmering moon 85
 Betrayed them to our notice: the other fell
 Desperately fighting.

SAVELLA.

What does he confess?

OFFICER.

He keeps firm silence; but these lines found on him
 May speak.

SAVELLA.

Their language is at least sincere. (reads)

TO THE LADY BEATRICE.

"That the atonement of what my nature 90
 "Sickens to conjecture may soon arrive,
 "I send thee, at thy brother's desire, those
 "Who will speak and do more than I dare
 "Write... Thy devoted servant, ORSINO."

Enter LUCRETIA, BEATRICE, and BERNARDO.

Knowest thou this writing, Lady?

BEATRICE.

No.

SAVELLA.

Nor thou? 95

LUCRETIA.

(Her conduct throughout the scene is marked by extreme agitation.)

Where was it found? What is it? It should be Orsino's hand! It speaks of that strange horror
Which never yet found utterance, but which made
Between that hapless child and her dead father
A gulph of obscure hatred.

SAVELLA.

Is it so?

100

Is it true, Lady, that thy father did
Such outrages as to awaken in thee
Unfilial hate?

BEATRICE.

Not hate 'twas more than hate:
This is most true, yet wherefore question me?

SAVELLA.

There is a deed demanding question done;
Thou hast a secret which will answer not.

105

BEATRICE.

What sayest? My Lord, your words are bold and rash.

SAVELLA.

I do arrest all present in the name
Of the Pope's Holiness. You must to Rome.

LUCRETIA.

O, not to Rome! Indeed we are not guilty.

110

BEATRICE.

Guilty! Who dares talk of guilt? My Lord,
I am more innocent of parricide
Than is a child born fatherless . . . Dear Mother,
Your gentleness and patience are no shield
For this keen-judging world, this two-edged lie,
Which seems, but is not. What! will human laws,
Rather will ye who are their ministers,
Bar all access to retribution first,
And then, when heaven doth interpose to do
What ye neglect, arming familiar things
To the redress of an unwonted crime,
Make ye the victims who demanded it

115

120

Culprits? 'Tis ye are culprits! That poor wretch
 Who stands so pale, and trembling, and amazed,
 If it be true he murdered Cenci, was
 A sword in the right hand of justest God.
 Wherefore should I have wielded it? Unless
 The crimes which mortal tongue dare never name
 God therefore scruples to avenge.

SAVELLA.

You own

That you desired his death?

BEATRICE.

It would have been

130

A crime no less than his, if for one moment
 That fierce desire had faded in my heart.
 'Tis true I did believe, and hope, and pray,
 Aye, I even knew . . . for God is wise and just,
 That some strange sudden death hung over him.
 'Tis true that this did happen, and most true
 There was no other rest for me on earth,
 No other hope in Heaven . . . now what of this?

SAVELLA.

Strange thoughts beget strange deeds; and here are both:
 I judge thee not.

BEATRICE.

And yet, if you arrest me,

140

You are the judge and executioner
 Of that which is the life of life: the breath
 Of accusation kills an innocent name,
 And leaves for lame acquittal the poor life
 Which is a mask without it. 'Tis most false
 That I am guilty of foul parricide;
 Although I must rejoice, for justest cause,
 That other hands have sent my father's soul
 To ask the mercy he denied to me.
 Now leave us free: stain not a noble house
 With vague surmises of rejected crime;
 Add to our sufferings and your own neglect
 No heavier sum: let them have been enough:
 Leave us the wreck we have.

145

150

SAVELLA.

I dare not, Lady.
I pray that you prepare yourselves for Rome: 155
There the Pope's further pleasure will be known.

LUCRETIA.

O, not to Rome! O, take us not to Rome!

BEATRICE.

Why not to Rome, dear mother? There as here
Our innocence is as an armèd heel
To trample accusation. God is there 160
As here, and with his shadow ever clothes
The innocent, the injured and the weak;
And such are we. Cheer up, dear Lady, lean
On me; collect your wandering thoughts. My Lord,
As soon as you have taken some refreshment, 165
And had all such examinations made
Upon the spot, as may be necessary
To the full understanding of this matter,
We shall be ready. Mother; will you come?

LUCRETIA.

Ha! they will bind us to the rack, and wrest 170
Self-accusation from our agony!
Will Giacomo be there? Orsino? Marzio?
All present; all confronted; all demanding
Each from the other's countenance the thing
Which is in every heart! O, misery! 175

(She faints, and is borne out.)

SAVELLA.

She faints: an ill appearance this.

BEATRICE.

My Lord,
She knows not yet the uses of the world.
She fears that power is as a beast which grasps
And loosens not: a snake whose look transmutes
All things to guilt which is its nutriment. 180
She cannot know how well the supine slaves
Of blind authority read the truth of things
When written on a brow of guilelessness:
She sees not yet triumphant Innocence

Stand at the judgment-seat of mortal man, 185
 A judge and an accuser of the wrong
 Which drags it there. Prepare yourself, my Lord;
 Our suite will join yours in the court below. (Exeunt.)

END OF THE FOURTH ACT.

ACT V.

SCENE I.

AN APARTMENT IN ORSINO'S PALACE. ENTER ORSINO AND GIACOMO.

GIACOMO.

Do evil deeds thus quickly come to end?
 O, that the vain remorse which must chastise
 Crimes done, had but as loud a voice to warn
 As its keen sting is mortal to avenge!
 O, that the hour when present had cast off 5
 The mantle of its mystery, and shewn
 The ghastly form with which it now returns
 When its scared game is roused, cheering the hounds
 Of conscience to their prey! Alas! Alas!
 It was a wicked thought, a piteous deed, 10
 To kill an old and hoary-headed father.

ORSINO.

It has turned out unluckily, in truth.

GIACOMO.

To violate the sacred doors of sleep;
 To cheat kind nature of the placid death
 Which she prepares for overweari'd age; 15
 To drag from Heaven an unrepentant soul
 Which might have quenched in reconciling prayers
 A life of burning crimes...

ORSINO.

You cannot say
 I urg'd you to the deed.

GIACOMO.

O, had I never
 Found in thy smooth and ready countenance 20
 The mirror of my darkest thoughts; hadst thou
 Never with hints and questions made me look Upon the monster of my thought, until
 It grew familiar to desire . . .

ORSINO.

'Tis thus
 Men cast the blame of their unprosperous acts 25
 Upon the abettors of their own resolve;
 Or any thing but their weak, guilty selves.
 And yet, confess the truth, it is the peril
 In which you stand that gives you this pale sickness
 Of penitence; Confess 'tis fear disguised 30
 From its own shame that takes the mantle now
 Of thin remorse. What if we yet were safe?

GIACOMO.

How can that be? Already Beatrice,
 Lucretia and the murderer are in prison.
 I doubt not officers are, whilst we speak, 35
 Sent to arrest us.

ORSINO.

I have all prepared
 For instant flight. We can escape even now,
 So we take fleet occasion by the hair.

GIACOMO.

Rather expire in tortures, as I may.
 What! will you cast by self-accusing flight 40
 Assured conviction upon Beatrice?
 She, who alone in this unnatural work,
 Stands like God's angel ministered upon
 By fiends; avenging such a nameless wrong
 As turns black parricide to piety; 45
 Whilst we for basest ends . . . I fear, Orsino,
 While I consider all your words and looks,
 Comparing them with your proposal now,
 That you must be a villain. For what end
 Could you engage in such a perilous crime, 50
 Training me on with hints, and sigs, and smiles,

Even to this gulph? Thou art no liar? No,
 Thou art a lie! Traitor and murderer!
 Coward and slave! But, no, defend thyself; (drawing.)
 Let the sword speak what the indignant tongue 55
 Disdains to brand thee with.

ORSINO.

Put up your weapon.

Is it the desperation of your fear
 Makes you thus rash and sudden with a friend,
 Now ruined for your sake? If honest anger
 Have moved you, know, that what I just proposed 60
 Was but to try you. As for me, I think,
 Thankless affection led me to this point,
 From which, if my firm temper could repent,
 I cannot now recede. Even whilst we speak
 The ministers of justice wait below: 65
 They grant me these brief moments. Now if you
 Have any word of melancholy comfort
 To speak to your pale wife, 'twere best to pass
 Out at the postern, and avoid them so.

GIACOMO.

O, generous friend! How canst thou pardon me? 70
 Would that my life could purchase thine!

ORSINO.

That wish

Now comes a day too late. Haste; fare thee well!
 Hear'st thou not steps along the corridor? (Exit GIACOMO.)
 I'm sorry for it; but the guards are waiting
 At his own gate, and such was my contrivance 75
 That I might rid me both of him and them.
 I thought to act a solemn comedy
 Upon the painted scene of this new world,
 And to attain my own peculiar ends
 By some such plot of mingled good and ill 80
 As others weave; but there arose a Power
 Which graspt and snapped the threads of my device
 And turned it to a net of ruin . . . Ha! (a shout is heard.)
 Is that my name I hear proclaimed abroad?
 But I will pass, wrapt in a vile disguise; 85
 Rags on my back, and a false innocence

Upon my face, thro' the misdeeming crowd
 Which judges by what seems. 'Tis easy then
 For a new name and for a country new,
 And a new life, fashioned on old desires, 90
 To change the honours of abandoned Rome.
 And these must be the masks of that within,
 Which must remain unaltered. . . Oh, I fear
 That what is past will never let me rest!
 Why, when none else is conscious, but myself, 95
 Of my misdeeds, should my own heart's contempt
 Trouble me? Have I not the power to fly
 My own reproaches? Shall I be the slave
 Of . . . what? A word? which those of this false world
 Employ against each other, not themselves; 100
 As men wear daggers not for self-offence.
 But if I am mistaken, where shall I
 Find the disguise to hide me from myself,
 As now I skulk from every other eye? (Exit.)

SCENE II.

A HALL OF JUSTICE. CAMILLO, JUDGES &C. ARE DISCOVERED SEATED; MARZIO IS LED IN.

FIRST JUDGE.

Accused, do you persist in your denial?
 I ask you, are you innocent, or guilty?
 I demand who were the participators
 In your offence? Speak truth and the whole truth.

MARZIO.

My God! I did not kill him; I know nothing; 5
 Olimpio sold the robe to me from which
 You would infer my guilt.

SECOND JUDGE.

Away with him!

FIRST JUDGE.

Dare you, with lips yet white from the rack's kiss
 Speak false? Is it so soft a questioner,

That you would bandy lover's talk with it 10
Till it wind out your life and soul? Away!

MARZIO.

Spare me! O, spare! I will confess.

FIRST JUDGE.

Then speak.

MARZIO.

I strangled him in his sleep.

FIRST JUDGE.

Who urged you to it?

MARZIO.

His own son Giacomo, and the young prelate 15
Orsino sent me to Petrella; there
The ladies Beatrice and Lucretia
Tempted me with a thousand crowns, and I
And my companion forthwith murdered him.
Now let me die.

FIRST JUDGE.

This sounds as bad as truth. Guards, there, 20
Lead forth the prisoners!

Enter LUCRETIA, BEATRICE and GIACOMO, guarded.

Look upon this man;

When did you see him last?

BEATRICE.

We never saw him.

MARZIO.

You know me too well, Lady Beatrice.

BEATRICE.

I know thee! How? where? when?

MARZIO.

You know 'twas I

Whom you did urge with menaces and bribes 25
To kill your father. When the thing was done
You clothed me in a robe of woven gold
And bade me thrive: how I have thriven, you see.
You, my Lord Giacomo, Lady Lucretia,
You know that what I speak is true.

(BEATRICE advances towards him; he covers his face, and shrinks back.)

O, dart 30

The terrible resentment of those eyes
 On the dead earth! Turn them away from me!
 They wound: 'twas torture forced the truth. My Lords,
 Having said this let me be led to death.

BEATRICE.

Poor wretch, I pity thee: yet stay awhile. 35

CAMILLO.

Guards, lead him not away.

BEATRICE.

Cardinal Camillo,

You have a good repute for gentleness
 And wisdom: can it be that you sit here
 To countenance a wicked farce like this?
 When some obscure and trembling slave is dragged 40
 From sufferings which might shake the sternest heart
 And bade to answer, not as he believes,
 But as those may suspect or do desire
 Whose questions thence suggest their own reply:
 And that in peril of such hideous torments 45
 As merciful God spares even the damned. Speak now
 The thing you surely know, which is that you,
 If your fine frame were stretched upon that wheel,
 And you were told: "Confess that you did poison
 Your little nephew; that fair blue-eyed child 50
 Who was the loadstar of your life:"—and though
 All see, since his most swift and piteous death,
 That day and night, and heaven and earth, and time,
 And all the things hoped for or done therein
 Are changed to you, through your exceeding grief, 55
 Yet you would say, "I confess any thing:"
 And beg from your tormentors, like that slave,
 The refuge of dishonourable death.
 I pray thee, Cardinal, that thou assert
 My innocence.

CAMILLO (much moved).

What shall we think, my Lords? 60

Shame on these tears! I thought the heart was frozen
 Which is their fountain. I would pledge my soul
 That she is guiltless.

JUDGE.

Yet she must be tortured.

CAMILLO.

I would as soon have tortured mine own nephew
 (If he now lived he would be just her age; 65
 His hair, too, was her colour, and his eyes
 Like her's in shape, but blue and not so deep)
 As that most perfect image of God's love
 That ever came sorrowing upon the earth.
 She is as pure as speechless infancy! 70

JUDGE.

Well, be her purity on your head, my Lord,
 If you forbid the rack. His Holiness
 Enjoined us to pursue this monstrous crime
 By the severest forms of law; nay even 75
 To stretch a point against the criminals.
 The prisoners stand accused of parricide
 Upon such evidence as justifies Torture.

BEATRICE.

What evidence? This man's?

JUDGE.

Even so.

BEATRICE (to MARZIO).

Come near. And who art thou thus chosen forth
 Out of the multitude of living men
 To kill the innocent?

MARZIO.

I am Marzio, 80

Thy father's vassal.

BEATRICE.

Fix thine eyes on mine;
 Answer to what I ask. (turning to the Judges)

I prithee mark

His countenance: unlike bold calumny
 Which sometimes dares not speak the thing it looks,
 He dares not look the thing he speaks, but bends 85
 His gaze on the blind earth.

(to MARZIO) What! wilt thou say
 That I did murder my own father?

MARZIO.

Oh!

Spare me! My brain swims round. . . I cannot speak. . .
 It was that horrid torture forced the truth.
 Take me away! Let her not look on me! 90
 I am a guilty miserable wretch;
 I have said all I know; now, let me die!

BEATRICE.

My Lords, if by my nature I had been
 So stern, as to have planned the crime alleged,
 Which your suspicions dictate to this slave, 95
 And the rack makes him utter, do you think
 I should have left this two-edged instrument
 Of my misdeed; this man, this bloody knife
 With my own name engraven on the hilt, 100
 Lying unsheathed amid a world of foes,
 For my own death? That with such horrible need
 For deepest silence, I should have neglected
 So trivial a precaution, as the making
 His tomb the keeper of a secret written 105
 On a thief's memory? What is his poor life?
 What are a thousand lives? A parricide
 Had trampled them like dust; and, see, he lives!
 (turning to MARZIO) And thou . . .

MARZIO.

Oh, spare me! Speak to me no more!
 That stern yet piteous look, those solemn tones, 110
 Wound worse than torture.
 (to the Judges) I have told it all;
 For pity's sake lead me away to death.

CAMILLO.

Guards, lead him nearer the Lady Beatrice,
 He shrinks from her regard like autumn's leaf
 From the keen breath of the serenest north. 115

BEATRICE.

Oh, thou who tremblest on the giddy verge
 Of life and death, pause ere thou answerest me;
 So mayst thou answer God with less dismay:
 What evil have we done thee? I, alas!
 Have lived but on this earth a few sad years 120

And so my lot was ordered, that a father
 First turned the moments of awakening life
 To drops, each poisoning youth's sweet hope; and then
 Stabbed with one blow my everlasting soul;
 And my untainted fame; and even that peace 125
 Which sleeps within the core of the heart's heart;
 But the wound was not mortal; so my hate
 Became the only worship I could lift
 To our great father, who in pity and love,
 Armed thee, as thou dost say, to cut him off; . 130
 And thus his wrong becomes my accusation;
 And art thou the accuser? If thou hopest
 Mercy in heaven, shew justice upon earth:
 Worse than a bloody hand is a hard heart.
 If thou hast done murders, made thy life's path 135
 Over the trampled laws of God and man,
 Rush not before thy Judge, and say: "My maker,
 "I have done this and more; for there was one
 "Who was most pure and innocent on earth;
 "And because she endured what never any 140
 "Guilty or innocent endured before:
 "Because her wrongs could not be told, not thought;
 "Because thy hand at length did rescue her;
 "I with my words killed her and all her kin."
 Think, I adjure you, what it is to slay 145
 The reverence living in the minds of men
 Towards our ancient house, and stainless fame!
 Think what it is to strangle infant pity,
 Cradled in the belief of guileless looks,
 Till it become a crime to suffer. Think 150
 What 'tis to blot with infamy and blood
 All that which shews like innocence, and is,
 Hear me, great God! I swear, most innocent,
 So that the world lose all discrimination
 Between the sly, fierce, wild regard of guilt, 155
 And that which now compels thee to reply
 To what I ask: Am I, or am I not
 A parricide?

MARZIO.

Thou art not!

JUDGE.

What is this?

MARZIO.

I here declare those whom I did accuse
Are innocent. 'Tis I alone am guilty.

160

JUDGE.

Drag him away to torments; let them be
Subtle and long drawn out, to tear the folds
Of the heart's inmost cell. Unbind him not Till he confess.

MARZIO.

Torture me as ye will:

A keener pain has wrung a higher truth
From my last breath. She is most innocent!
Bloodhounds, not men, glut yourselves well with me;
I will not give you that fine piece of nature
To rend and ruin. (Exit MARZIO, guarded.)

165

CAMILLO.

What say ye now, my Lords?

JUDGE.

Let tortures strain the truth till it be white
As snow thrice sifted by the frozen wind.

170

CAMILLO.

Yet stained with blood.

JUDGE (to BEATRICE).

Know you this paper, Lady?

BEATRICE.

Entrap me not with questions. Who stands here
As my accuser? Ha! wilt thou be he,
Who art my judge? Accuser, witness, judge,
What, all in one? Here is Orsino's name;
Where is Orsino? Let his eye meet mine.
What means this scrawl? Alas! Ye know not what,
And therefore on the chance that it may be
Some evil, will ye kill us?

175

Enter an Officer.

OFFICER.

Marzio's dead.

JUDGE.

What did he say?

OFFICER.

Nothing. As soon as we
Had bound him on the wheel, he smiled on us,
As one who baffles a deep adversary;
And holding his breath, died.

JUDGE.

There remains nothing
But to apply the question to those prisoners, 185
Who yet remain stubborn.

CAMILLO.

I overrule
Further proceedings, and in the behalf
Of these most innocent and noble persons
Will use my interest with the Holy Father.

JUDGE.

Let the Pope's pleasure then be done. Meanwhile 190
Conduct these culprits each to separate cells;
And be the engines ready: for this night
If the Pope's resolution be as grave,
Pious, and just as once, I'll wring the truth
Out of those nerves and sinews, groan by groan. 195
(Exeunt.)

SCENE III.

THE CELL OF A PRISON. BEATRICE IS DISCOVERED ASLEEP ON A COUCH; ENTER BERNARDO.

BERNARDO.

How gently slumber rests upon her face,
Like the last thoughts of some day sweetly spent
Closing in night and dreams, and so prolonged.
After such torments as she bore last night,
How light and soft her breathing comes. Ay, me! 5
Methinks that I shall never sleep again.
But I must shake the heavenly dew of rest
From this sweet folded flower, thus... wake! awake!
What, sister, canst thou sleep?

BEATRICE (awaking).

I was just dreaming
That we were all in Paradise. Thou knowest 10
This cell seems like a kind of Paradise
After our father's presence.

BERNARDO.

Dear, dear sister,
Would that thy dream were not a dream! O, God!
How shall I tell?

BEATRICE.

What wouldst thou tell, sweet brother?

BERNARDO.

Look not so calm and happy, or even whilst 15
I stand considering what I have to say
My heart will break.

BEATRICE.

See now, thou mak'st me weep:
How very friendless thou wouldst be, dear child,
If I were dead. Say what thou hast to say.

BERNARDO.

They have confessed; they could endure no more 20
The tortures. . .

BEATRICE.

Ha! What was there to confess?
They must have told some weak and wicked lie
To flatter their tormentors. Have they said
That they were guilty? O, white innocence,
That thou shouldst wear the mask of guilt to hide 25
Thine awful and serenest countenance
From those who know thee not!

Enter JUDGE with LUCRETIA and GIACOMO, guarded.

Ignoble hearts!

For some brief spasms of pain, which are at least
As mortal as the limbs through which they pass,
Are centuries of high splendour laid in dust? 30
And that eternal honour which should live
Sunlike, above the reek of mortal fame,
Changed to a mockery and a bye-word? What!
Will you give up these bodies to be dragged

At horses' heels, so that our hair should sweep 35
 The footsteps of the vain and senseless crowd,
 Who, that they may make our calamity
 Their worship and their spectacle, will leave
 The churches and the theatres as void
 As their own hearts? Shall the light multitude 40
 Fling, at their choice, curses or faded pity,
 Sad funeral flowers to deck a living corpse,
 Upon us as we pass to pass away,
 And leave. . . what memory of our having been?
 Infamy, blood, terror, despair? O thou, 45
 Who wert a mother to the parentless,
 Kill not thy child! Let not her wrongs kill thee!
 Brother, lie down with me upon the rack,
 And let us each be silent as a corpse;
 It soon will be as soft as any grave. 50
 'Tis but the falsehood it can wring from fear
 Makes the rack cruel.

GIACOMO.

They will tear the truth
 Even from thee at last, those cruel pains:
 For pity's sake say thou art guilty now.

LUCRETIA.

O, speak the truth! Let us all quickly die; 65
 And after death, God is our judge, not they;
 He will have mercy on us.

BERNARDO.

If indeed
 It can be true, say so, dear sister mine;
 And then the Pope will surely pardon you,
 And all be well.

JUDGE.

Confess, or I will warp 60
 Your limbs with such keen tortures. . .

BEATRICE.

Tortures! Turn
 The rack henceforth into a spinning wheel!
 Torture your dog, that he may tell when last
 He lapped the blood his master shed . . . not me!

My pangs are of the mind, and of the heart, 65
 And of the soul; aye, of the inmost soul,
 Which weeps within tears as of burning gall
 To see, in this ill world where none are true,
 My kindred false to their deserted selves.
 And with considering all the wretched life 70
 Which I have lived, and its now wretched end,
 And the small justice shewn by Heaven and Earth
 To me or mine; and what a tyrant thou art,
 And what slaves these; and what a world we make,
 The oppressor and the oppressed . . . such pangs compel 75
 My answer. What is it thou wouldst with me?

JUDGE.

Art thou not guilty of thy father's death?

BEATRICE.

Or wilt thou rather tax high judging God
 That he permitted such an act as that
 Which I have suffered, and which he beheld; 80
 Made it unutterable, and took from it
 All refuge, all revenge, all consequence,
 But that which thou hast called my father's death?
 Which is or is not what men call a crime,
 Which either I have done, or have not done; 85
 Say what ye will. I shall deny no more.
 If ye desire it thus, thus let it be,
 And so an end of all. Now do your will;
 No other pains shall force another word.

JUDGE.

She is convicted, but has not confessed. 90
 Be it enough. Until their final sentence
 Let none have converse with them. You, young Lord,
 Linger not here!

BEATRICE.

O, tear him not away!

JUDGE.

Guards do your duty.

BERNARDO (Embracing BEATRICE).

Oh! would ye divide

Body from soul?

OFFICER.

. That is the headsman's business. 95

(Exeunt all but LUCRETIA, BEATRICE, and GIACOMO.)

GIACOMO.

Have I confessed? Is it all over now?

No hope! No refuge! O, weak, wicked tongue

Which hast destroyed me would that thou hadst been Cut out and thrown to dogs first! To have killed

My father first, and then betrayed my sister; 100

Aye, thee! the one thing innocent and pure

In this black guilty world, to that which I

So well deserve! My wife! my little ones!

Destitute, helpless, and I . . . Father! God!

Canst thou forgive even the unforgiving, 105

When their full hearts break thus, thus! . . .

(Covers his face and weeps)

LUCRETIA.

O, my child!

To what a dreadful end are we all come!

Why did I yield? Why did I not sustain

Those torments? Oh, that I were all dissolved

Into these fast and unavailing tears, 110

Which flow and feel not!

BEATRICE.

What 'twas weak to do,

'Tis weaker to lament, once being done;

Take cheer! The God who knew my wrong, and made

Our speedy act the angel of his wrath,

Seems, and but seems to have abandoned us. 115

Let us not think that we shall die for this.

Brother, sit near me; give me your firm hand,

You had a manly heart. Bear up! Bear up!

O, dearest Lady, put your gentle head

Upon my lap, and try to sleep awhile: 120

Your eyes look pale, hollow and overworn,

With heaviness of watching and slow grief.

Come, I will sing you some low, sleepy tune,

Not cheerful, nor yet sad; some dull old thing,

Some outworn and unused monotony, 125

Such as our country gossips sing and spin,

Till they almost forget they live: lie down!
 So, that will do. Have I forgot the words?
 Faith! They are sadder than I thought they were.

SONG.

False friend, wilt thou smile or weep 130
 When my life is laid asleep?
 Little cares for a smile or a tear,
 The clay-cold corpse upon the bier!
     Farewell! Heigho!
     What is this whispers low? 135
 There is a snake in thy smile, my dear;
 And bitter poison within thy tear.

Sweet sleep, were death like to thee,
 Or if thou couldst mortal be,
 I would close these eyes of pain; 140
 When to wake? Never again.
     O, World! Farewell!
     Listen to the passing bell!
 It says, thou and I must part,
 With a light and a heavy heart. (The scene closes.) 145

SCENE IV.

A HALL OF THE PRISON. ENTER CAMILLO AND BERNARDO.

CAMILLO.

The Pope is stern; not to be moved or bent.
 He looked as calm and keen as is the engine
 Which tortures and which kills, exempt itself
 From aught that it inflicts; a marble form,
 A rite, a law, a custom: not a man. E
 He frowned, as if to frown had been the trick
 Of his machinery, on the advocates
 Presenting the defences, which he tore
 And threw behind, muttering with hoarse, harsh voice:
 "Which among ye defended their old father 10

“Killed in his sleep?” Then to another: “Thou
 “Dost this in virtue of thy place; ’tis well.”
 He turned to me then, looking deprecation,
 And said these three words, coldly: “They must die.”

BERNARDO.

And yet you left him not?

CAMILLO.

I urged him still; 15
 Pleading, as I could guess, the devilish wrong
 Which prompted your unnatural parent’s death.
 And he replied: “Paolo Santa Croce
 “Murdered his mother yester evening,
 “And he is fled. Parricide grows so rife
 “That soon, for some just cause no doubt, the young 20
 “Will strangle us all, dozing in our chairs.
 “Authority, and power, and hoary hair
 “Are grown crimes capital. You are my nephew,
 “You come to ask their pardon; stay a moment; 25
 “Here is their sentence; never see me more
 “Till, to the letter, it be all fulfilled.”

BERNARDO.

O, God, not so! I did believe indeed
 That all you said was but sad preparation
 For happy news. O, there are words and looks 30
 To bend the sternest purpose! Once I knew them,
 Now I forget them at my dearest need.
 What think you if I seek him out, and bathe
 His feet and robe with hot and bitter tears?
 Importune him with prayers, vexing his brain 35
 With my perpetual cries, until in rage
 He strike me with his pastoral cross, and trample
 Upon my prostrate head, so that my blood
 May stain the senseless dust on which he treads,
 And remorse waken mercy? I will do it! 40
 O, wait till I return! (rushes out.)

CAMILLO.

Alas! poor boy!

A wreck-devoted seaman thus might pray
 To the deaf sea.

Enter LUCRETIA, BEATRICE and GIACOMO, guarded.

BEATRICE.

I hardly dare to fear
That thou bring'st other news than a just pardon.

CAMILLO.

May God in heaven be less inexorable
To the Pope's prayers, than he has been to mine.
Here is the sentence and the warrant.

BEATRICE (wildly).

Oh,

My God! Can it be possible I have
To die so suddenly? So young to go
Under the obscure, cold, rotting, wormy ground!
To be nailed down into a narrow place;
To see no more sweet sunshine; hear no more
Blithe voice of living thing; muse not again
Upon familiar thoughts, sad, yet thus lost—
How fearful! to be nothing! Or to be. . .
What? O, where am I? Let me not go mad!
Sweet Heaven, forgive weak thoughts! If there should be
No God, no Heaven, no Earth in the void world;
The wide, grey, lampless, deep, unpeopled world!
If all things then should be. . . my father's spirit,
His eye, his voice, his touch surrounding me;
The atmosphere and breath of my dead life!
If sometimes, as a shape more like himself,
Even the form which tortured me on earth,
Masked in grey hairs and wrinkles, he should come
And wind me in his hellish arms, and fix
His eyes on mine, and drag me down, down, down!
For was he not alone omnipotent
On Earth, and ever present? Even tho' dead,
Does not his spirit live in all that breathe,
And work for me and mine still the same ruin,
Scorn, pain, despair? Who ever yet returned
To teach the laws of death's untrodden realm?
Unjust perhaps as those which drive us now,
O, whither, whither?

LUCRETIA.

Trust in God's sweet love,
The tender promises of Christ: ere night,

Think we shall be in Paradise.

BEATRICE.

'Tis past!

Whatever comes my heart shall sink no more.
 And yet, I know not why, your words strike chill:
 How tedious, false and cold seem all things. I
 Have met with much injustice in this world;
 No difference has been made by God or man,
 Or any power moulding my wretched lot,
 'Twixt good or evil, as regarded me.
 I am cut off from the only world I know,
 From light, and life, and love, in youth's sweet prime.
 You do well telling me to trust in God,
 I hope I do trust in him. In whom else
 Can any trust? And yet my heart is cold.

(During the latter speeches GIACOMO has retired conversing with CAMILLO, who now goes out; GIACOMO advances.)

GIACOMO.

Know you not, Mother . . . Sister, know you not?
 Bernardo even now is gone to implore
 The Pope to grant our pardon.

LUCRETIA.

Child, perhaps

It will be granted. We may all then live
 To make these woes a tale for distant years:
 O, what a thought! It gushes to my heart
 Like the warm blood.

BEATRICE.

Yet both will soon be cold.

O, trample out that thought! Worse than despair,
 Worse than the bitterness of death, is hope:
 It is the only ill which can find place
 Upon the giddy, sharp and narrow hour
 Tottering beneath us. Plead with the swift frost
 That it should spare the eldest flower of spring:
 Plead with awakening earthquake, o'er whose couch
 Even now a city stands, strong, fair and free;
 Now stench and blackness yawn, like death. O, plead
 With famine, or wind-walking Pestilence,

Blind lightning, or the deaf sea, not with man!
 Cruel, cold, formal man; righteous in words,
 In deeds a Cain. No, Mother, we must die:
 Since such is the reward of innocent lives; 110
 Such the alleviation of worst wrongs.
 And whilst our murderers live, and hard, cold men,
 Smiling and slow, walk thro' a world of tears
 To death as to life's sleep; 'twere just the grave
 Were some strange joy for us. Come, obscure Death, 115
 And wind me in thine all-embracing arms!
 Like a fond mother hide me in thy bosom,
 And rock me to the sleep from which none wake.
 Live ye, who live, subject to one another
 As we were once, who now . . .

BERNARDO rushes in.

BERNARDO.

Oh, horrible! 120
 That tears, that looks, that hope poured forth in prayer,
 Even till the heart is vacant and despairs,
 Should all be vain! The ministers of death
 Are waiting round the doors. I thought I saw
 Blood on the face of one . . . what if 'twere fancy? 125
 Soon the heart's blood of all I love on earth
 Will sprinkle him, and he will wipe it off
 As if 'twere only rain. O, life! O, world!
 Cover me! let me be no more! To see
 That perfect mirror of pure innocence 130
 Wherein I gazed, and grew happy and good,
 Shivered to dust! To see thee, Beatrice,
 Who made all lovely thou didst look upon . . .
 Thee, light of life . . . dead, dark! while I say, sister,
 To hear I have no sister; and thou, Mother, 135
 Whose love was as a bond to all our loves . . .
 Dead! The sweet bond broken!

Enter CAMILLO and Guards.

They come! Let me
 Kiss those warm lips before their crimson leaves
 Are blighted . . . white . . . cold. Say farewell, before
 Death chokes that gentle voice! O, let me hear 140
 You speak!

BEATRICE.

Farewell, my tender brother. Think
 Of our sad fate with gentleness, as now:
 And let mild, pitying thoughts lighten for thee
 Thy sorrow's load. Err not in harsh despair,
 But tears and patience. One thing more, my child, 145
 For thine own sake be constant to the love
 Thou bearest us; and to the faith that I,
 Tho' wrapt in a strange cloud of crime and shame,
 Lived ever holy and unstained. And tho'
 Ill tongues shall wound me, and our common name 150
 Be as a mark stamped on thine innocent brow
 For men to point at as they pass, do thou
 Forbear, and never think a thought unkind
 Of those, who perhaps love thee in their graves.
 So mayest thou die as I do; fear and pain 155
 Being subdued. Farewell! Farewell! Farewell!

BERNARDO.

I cannot say, farewell!

CAMILLO.

O, Lady Beatrice!

BEATRICE.

Give yourself no unnecessary pain,
 My dear Lord Cardinal. Here, Mother, tie
 My girdle for me, and bind up this hair 160
 In any simple knot; aye, that does well.
 And yours I see is coming down. How often
 Have we done this for one another; now
 We shall not do it any more. My Lord,
 We are quite ready. Well, 'tis very well. 165

THE END.

APPENDIX.

In a most interesting letter to Peacock, dated "Livorno, July 1819" (Essays, &c., Vol. II, pp. 217 to 220), Shelley gives an account of The Cenci, begs his friend to get it acted at Covent Garden, and says: "I send you a translation of the Italian manuscript on which my play is founded, the chief subject of which I have touched very delicately. . . . The translation which I send you, is to be prefixed to the play, together with a print of Beatrice." The omission of this literal version of the story from the two editions of The Cenci published during Shelley's life may perhaps have arisen from the consideration that, to the public of that day, the bare horrors of the story might, if given, negative that very delicacy and reticence to which Shelley refers. In the same letter to Peacock, it is stated that the narrative then existed only in manuscript.

APPENDIX.

RELATION OF THE DEATH OF THE FAMILY OF THE CENCI.

THE most wicked life which the Roman nobleman, Francesco Cenci, led while he lived in this world, not only occasioned his own ruin and death, but also that of many others, and brought down the entire destruction of his house. This nobleman was the son of Monsignore Cenci, who, having been treasurer during the pontificate of Pius V., left immense wealth to Francesco, his only son. From this inheritance alone he enjoyed an income of 160,000 crowns, and he increased his fortune by marrying an exceedingly rich lady, who died after she had given birth to seven unfortunate children. He then contracted a second marriage with Lucretia Petroni, a lady of a noble Roman family; but he had no children by her. Sodomy was the least, and atheism the greatest, of the vices of Francesco; as is proved by the tenor of his life; for he was three times accused of sodomy, and paid the sum of 100,000 crowns to government, in commutation of the punishment rightfully awarded to this crime: and concerning his religion, it is sufficient to state, that he never frequented any church; and although he caused a small chapel, dedicated to the apostle St. Thomas, to be built in the court of his palace, his intention in so doing was to bury there all his children, whom he cruelly hated. He had driven the eldest of these, Giacomo, Cristofero, and Rocco, from the paternal mansion, while they were yet too young to have given him any real cause of displeasure. He sent them to the university of Salamanca, but, refusing to remit to them there the money necessary for their maintenance, they desperately returned home. They found that this change only increased their misery, for the hatred and contempt of their father towards them was so aggravated, that he refused to dress or maintain them, so that they were obliged to have recourse to the Pope, who caused Cenci to make them a fit allowance, with which they withdrew from his house.

The third imprisonment of Francesco for his accustomed crime of sodomy, occurred at this time, and his sons took occasion to supplicate the Pope to punish their father, and to remove so great a monster from his family. The Pope, though before inclined to condemn Francesco to the deserved punishment of death, would not do it at the request of his sons, but permitted him again to compound with the law, by paying the accustomed penalty of 100,000 crowns. The hatred of Francesco towards his sons was augmented by this proceeding on their parts; he cursed them; and often also struck and ill-treated his daughters. The eldest of these, being unable any longer to support the cruelty of her father, exposed her miserable condition to the Pope, and supplicated him either to marry her, according to his choice, or to shut her up in a monastery, that by any means she might be liberated from the cruel oppression of her parent. Her prayer was heard, and the Pope, in pity to her unhappiness, bestowed her in marriage to Signore Carlo Gabrielli, one of the first gentlemen of the city of Gabbio, and obliged Francesco to give her a fitting dowry of some thousand crowns.

Francesco fearing that his youngest daughter would, when she grew up, follow the example of her sister, bethought himself how to hinder this design, and for that purpose shut her up alone in an apartment of the palace, where he himself brought her food, so that no one might approach her; and imprisoned her in this manner for several months, often inflicting on her blows with a stick.

In the meantime ensued the death of two of his sons, Rocco and Cristofero—one being assassinated by a surgeon, and the other by Paolo Corso, while he was attending mass. The inhuman father showed every sign of joy on hearing this news, saying that nothing would exceed his pleasure if all his children died, and that when the grave would receive the last he would, as a demonstration of joy, make a bonfire of all that he possessed. And on the present occasion, as a further sign of his hatred, he refused to pay the smallest sum towards the funeral expenses of his murdered sons. Francesco carried his wicked debauchery to such an excess, that he caused girls (of whom he constantly kept a number in his house), and also common courtezans, to sleep in the bed of his wife, and often endeavoured, by force and threats, to debauch his daughter Beatrice, who was now grown up, and exceedingly beautiful. He gave her more liberty in his palace, and was not ashamed to seek her naked in her bed, showing himself thus with his courtezans, and making her witness of all that could pass between them and him. He tried to persuade the poor girl, by an enormous heresy, that children born of the commerce of a father with his daughter were all saints, and that the saints who obtained the highest places in Paradise had been thus born. Beatrice's resistance of his infamous desires was punished by blows and ill treatment.

Beatrice, finding it impossible to continue to live in so miserable a manner, followed the example of her sister; she sent a well-written supplication to the Pope, imploring him to exercise his authority in withdrawing her from the violence and cruelty of her father.—But this petition, which might, if listened to, have saved this unfortunate girl from an early death, produced not the least effect. It was afterwards found among the collection of memorials, and it is pretended that it never came before the Pope.

Francesco, having discovered this attempt on the part of his daughter, became more enraged, and redoubled his tyranny; confining with rigour not only Beatrice, but also his wife. At length, these unhappy women, finding themselves, without hope of relief, driven by desperation, resolved to plan his death.

The Palace Cenci was sometimes visited by a Monsignore Guerra—a young man of handsome person and attractive manners, and of that facile character which might easily be induced to become a partner in any action, good or evil, as it might happen. His countenance was pleasing, and his person tall and well proportioned; he was somewhat in love with Beatrice, and well acquainted with the turpitude of Francesco's character, and was hated by him on account of the familiar intercourse which subsisted between him and the children of this unnatural father : for this reason he timed his visits with caution, and never came to the house but when he knew that Francesco was absent. He was moved to a lively compassion of the state of Lucretia and Beatrice, who often related their increasing misery to him, and his pity was for ever fed and augmented by some new tale of tyranny and cruelty. In one of these conversations Beatrice let fall some words which plainly indicated that she and her mother-in-law contemplated the murder of their tyrant, and Monsignore Guerra not only showed approbation of their design, but also promised to cooperate with them in their undertaking. Thus stimulated, Beatrice communicated the design to her eldest brother, Giacomo, without whose concurrence it was impossible that they should succeed. This latter was easily drawn into consent, since he was utterly disgusted with his father, who ill-treated him, and refused to allow him a sufficient support for his wife and children.

The apartments of Monsignore Guerra was the place in which the circumstances of the crime about to be committed were concerted and determined on. Here Giacomo, with the understanding of his sister and mother-in-law, held various consultations, and finally resolved to commit the murder of Francesco to two of his vassals, who had become his inveterate enemies ; one called Marzio, and the other Olympio : the latter, by means of Francesco, had been deprived of his post as castellan of the Rock of Petrella.

It was already well known that Francesco, with the permission of Signore Marzio di Colonna, baron of that feud, had resolved to retire to Petrella, and to pass the summer there with his family. Some banditti of the kingdom of Naples were hired, and were instructed to lie in wait in the woods about Petrella, and, upon advice being given them of the approach of Francesco, to seize upon him. This scheme was so arranged that, although the robbers were only to seize and take off Francesco, yet that his wife and children should not be suspected of being accomplices in the act. But the affair did not succeed ; for, as the banditti were not informed of his approach in time enough, Francesco arrived safe and sound at Petrella. They were obliged therefore to form some new scheme to obtain the end which every day made them more impatient to effect ; for Francesco still persisted in his wicked conduct. He, being an old man, above seventy years of age, never quitted the castle ; therefore no use could be made of the banditti, who were still secreted in the environs. It was determined, therefore, to accomplish the murder in Francesco's own house.

Marzio and Olympio were called to the castle ; and Beatrice, accompanied by her mother-in-law, conversed with them from a window during the night-time, when her father slept. She ordered them to repair to Monsignore Guerra with a note, in which they were desired to murder Francesco, in consideration of a reward of a thousand crowns : a third to be given them before the act, by Monsignore Guerra, and the other two thirds, by the ladies themselves, after the deed should be accomplished. Having consented to this agreement, they were secretly admitted into the castle the 8th of September, 1598 ; but because this day was the anniversary of the birth of the Blessed Virgin, the Signora Lucretia, held back by her veneration for so holy a time, desired, with the consent of her daughter-in-law, that the execution of the murder should be put off until the following day. They dexterously mixed opium with the drink of Francesco, who, upon going to bed, was soon oppressed by a deep sleep. About midnight his daughter herself led the two assassins into the apartment of her father, and left them there that they might execute the deed they had undertaken, and retired to a chamber close by, where Lucretia remained also, expecting the return of the murderers, and the relation of their success. Soon after the assassins entered, and told the ladies that pity had held them back, and that they could not overcome their repugnance to kill in cold blood a poor sleeping old man. These words filled Beatrice with anger, and after having bitterly reviled them as cowards and traitors, she exclaimed, "Since you have not courage enough to murder a sleeping man, I will kill my father myself ; but your lives shall not be long secure." The assassins, hearing this short but terrible threat, feared that if they did not commit the deed, the tempest would burst over their own heads, took courage, and re-entered the chamber where Francesco slept, and with a hammer drove a nail into his head, making it pass by his eye, and another they drove into his neck. After a few struggles the unhappy Francesco breathed his last. The murderers departed, after having received the remainder of the promised reward ; besides which, Beatrice gave Marzio a mantle trimmed with gold. After this the two ladies, after drawing out the two nails, enveloped the body in a fine sheet, and carried it to an open gallery that overhung a garden, and had underneath an elder-tree : from thence they threw it down, so that it might be believed that Francesco, attending a call of nature, was traversing this gallery, when, being only supported by feeble beams, it had given way, and thus had lost his life.

And so indeed was it believed the next day, when the feigned lamentations of Lucretia and Beatrice, who appeared inconsolable, spread the news of Francesco's death. He received an honourable burial ; and his family, after a short stay at the castle, returned to Rome to enjoy the fruits of their crime. They passed some time there in tranquillity ; but Divine Justice, which would not allow so atrocious a wickedness to remain hid and unpunished, so ordered it, that the Court of Naples, to which the account of the death of Cenci was forwarded, began to entertain doubts concerning the mode by which he came by it, and sent a commissary to examine the body and to take informations. Among other things, this man discovered a circumstance to the prejudice of the family of the deceased : it appeared that the day after the event of her father's death, Beatrice had given to wash a sheet covered with blood, saying : . . .<sup>1</sup> These informations were instantly forwarded to the Court of Rome ; but, nevertheless, several months passed without any step being taken in disfavour of the Cenci family ; and, in the meantime, the youngest son of Francesco died, and two only remained of the five that he had had ; namely, Giacomo and Bernardo. Monsignore Guerra, having heard of the notification made by the Court of Naples to that of Rome, fearing that Marzio and Olympio might fall into the hands of justice, and be induced to confess their crime, suddenly hired men to murder them, but succeeded only in assassinating Olympio at the city of Terni. Marzio, who had escaped this misfortune, soon incurred that of being imprisoned at Naples, where he confessed the whole ; and instantly, while the arrival of Marzio at Rome from Naples was expected, Giacomo and Bernardo were arrested, and imprisoned in the Corte Savella, and Lucretia and Beatrice were confined in their own house under a good guard ; but afterwards they were also conducted to the prison where were the brothers. They were here examined, and all constantly denied the crime, and particularly Beatrice, who also denied having given to Marzio the mantle trimmed with gold, of which mention was before made ; and Marzio, overcome and moved by the presence of mind and courage of Beatrice, retracted all that he had deposed at Naples, and, rather than again confess, obstinately died under his torments.

There not being sufficient proof to justify putting the Cenci family to the torture, they were all transferred to Castello, where they remained several months in tranquillity. But, for their misfortune, one of the murderers of Olympio at Terni fell into the hands of justice ; he confessed that he had been hired to this deed by Monsignore Guerra, who had also commissioned him to assassinate Marzio. Fortunately for this prelate, he received prompt information of the testimony given against him, and was able to hide himself for a time, and to plan his escape, which was very difficult ; for his stature, the fairness and beauty of his countenance, and his light hair, made him conspicuous for discovery. He changed his dress for that of a charcoal-man, blackening his face, and shaving his head ; and thus disguised, driving two asses before him, with some bread and onions in his hands, he passed freely through Rome, under the eyes of the ministers of justice, who sought him everywhere ; and, without being recognised by any one, passed out of one of the gates of the city, where, after a short time, he was met by the sbirri, who were searching the country, and passed unknown by them, not without suffering great fear at his risk of being discovered and arrested : by means of this ingenious disguise he effected his escape to a safe country.

The flight of Monsignore Guerra, joined to the confession of the murderer of Olympio, aggravated the other proofs so much, that the Cenci were re-transferred from Castello to Corte Savella, and were condemned to be put to the torture. The two sons sank vilely under their torments, and became convicted; Lucretia, being of advanced age, having completed her fiftieth year, and being of a fat make, was not able to resist the torture of the cord, and therefore told all she knew. But the Signora Beatrice, being young, lively, and strong, neither with good nor ill treatment, with menaces, nor fear of torture, would allow a single word to pass her lips which might inculcate her; and even, by her lively eloquence, confused the judges who examined her. The Pope, being informed of all that passed by Signor Ulysse Moraci, the judge employed in this affair, became suspicious that the beauty of Beatrice had softened the mind of this judge, and committed the cause to another, who found out another mode of torment, called the torture of the hair; and when she was already tied under this torture, he brought before her her mother-in-law and brothers. They began altogether to exhort her to confess; saying, that since the crime had been committed, they must suffer the punishment. Beatrice, after some resistance, said, "So you all wish to die, and to disgrace and ruin our house?—This is not right; but since it so pleases you, so let it be:"—and turning to the jailers, she told them to unbind her, and that all the examinations might be brought to her, saying, "That which I ought to confess, that will I confess; that to which I ought to assent, to that will I assent; and that which I ought to deny, that will I deny:"—and in this manner she was convicted without having confessed. They were then all unbound; and, since it was now five months since all had met, they wished to eat together that day: but, three days afterwards, they were again divided—the ladies being left in the Corte Savella, and the brothers being transferred to the dungeons of the Tordinona.

The Pope, after having seen all the examinations, and the entire confessions, ordered that the delinquents should be drawn through the streets at the tails of horses, and afterwards decapitated. Many cardinals and princes interested themselves, and entreated that at least they might be allowed to draw up their defence. The Pope at first refused to comply, replying with severity, and asking these intercessors what defence had been allowed to Francesco, when he had been so barbarously murdered in his sleep ; but afterwards he yielded to allow them twenty-five days' time. The most celebrated Roman advocates undertook to defend the criminals ; and, at the end of the appointed time, brought their writings to the Pope. The first that spoke was the advocate Nicolas di Angelis ; but the Pope interrupted him angrily in the middle of his discourse, saying, that he greatly wondered that there existed in Rome children unnatural enough to kill their father ; and that there should be found advocates depraved enough to defend so horrible a crime. These words silenced all except the advocate Farinacci ; who said " Holy Father, we have not fallen at your feet to defend the atrocity of the crime, but to save the life of the innocent, when your Holiness will deign to hear us." The Pope listened patiently to him for four hours, and then, taking the writings, dismissed them. The advocate Altieri, who was the last to depart, turned back, and, throwing himself at the feet of the Pope, said, that his office as advocate to the poor would not allow him to refuse to appear in this affair ; and the Pope replied that he was not surprised at the part that he, but at that which the others had taken. Instead of retiring to rest, he spent the whole night in studying the cause with the Cardinal di San Marcello—noting with great care the most exculpating passages of the writing of the advocate Farinacci ; with which he became so satisfied, that he gave hope of granting a pardon to the criminals ; for the crimes of the father and children were contrasted and balanced in this writing ; and to save the sons, the greater guilt was attributed to Beatrice ; and thus, by saving the mother-in-law, the daughter might the more easily escape, who was dragged, as it were, to the committing so enormous a crime by the cruelty of her father. The Pope, therefore, that the criminals might enjoy the benefit of time, ordered them again to be confined in secret. But since, by the high dispensation of Providence, it was resolved that they should incur the just penalty of parricide, it so happened, that at this time Paolo Santa Croce killed his mother in the town of Subiaco, because she refused to give up her inheritance to him. And the Pope, upon the occurrence of this second crime of this nature, resolved to punish those guilty of the first ; and the more so, because the matricide Santa Croce had escaped from the vengeance of the law by flight. The Pope returned to Monte Cavallo the 6th of May, that he might consecrate the next morning, in the neighbouring church of S. Maria degli Angeli, the Cardinal Diverstiana, appointed by him to be bishop of Olumbre, on the 3rd of May of the same year, 1599 : on the 10th of May he called into his presence Monsignore Ferrante Taverna, governor of Rome, and said to him, "I give up into your hands the Cenci cause, that you may as soon as you can execute the justice allotted to them." As soon as the governor arrived at his palace, he communicated the sentence to, and held a council with, the criminal judge, concerning the manner of death to be inflicted on the criminals. Many nobles instantly hastened to the palaces of the Quirinal and the Vatican, to implore the grace of at least a private death for the ladies, and the pardon of the innocent Bernardo ; and, fortunately, they were in time to save the life of this youth, because many hours were necessarily employed in preparing the scaffold over the bridge of S. Angelo, and then in waiting for the Confraternity of Mercy, who were to accompany the condemned to the place of suffering.

The sentence was executed the morning of Saturday, the 11th of May. The messengers charged with the communication of the sentence, and the Brothers of the Conforteria, were sent to the several prisons at five the preceding night ; and at six the sentence of death was communicated to the unhappy brothers while they were placidly sleeping. Beatrice on hearing it broke into a piercing lamentation, and into passionate gesture, exclaiming, "How is it possible, O my God ! that I must so suddenly die ?" Lucretia, as prepared and already resigned to her fate, listened without terror to the reading of this terrible sentence ; and with gentle exhortations induced her daughter-in-law to enter the chapel with her ; and the latter, whatever excess she might have indulged in on the first intimation of a speedy death, so much the more now courageously supported herself, and gave every one certain proofs of a humble resignation. Having requested that a notary might be allowed to come to her, and her request being granted, she made her will, in which she left 15,000 crowns to the Fraternity of the Sacre Stimmate ; and willed that all her dowry should be employed in portioning for marriage fifty maidens ; and Lucretia, imitating the example of her daughter-in-law, ordered that she should be buried in the church of S. Gregorio at Monte Celio, willed 32,000 crowns for charitable uses, and made other legacies; after which they passed some time in the Conforteria, reciting psalms and litanies and other prayers, with so much fervour that it well appeared that they were assisted by the peculiar grace of God. At eight o'clock they confessed, heard mass, and received the holy communion. Beatrice, considering that it was not decorous to appear before the judges and on the scaffold with their splendid dresses, ordered two dresses, one for herself, and the other for her mother-in-law, made in the manner of the nuns—gathered up, and with long sleeves of black cotton for Lucretia, and of common silk for herself; with a large cord girdle. When these dresses came, Beatrice rose, and, turning to Lucretia—"Mother," said she, "the hour of our departure is drawing near, let us dress therefore in these clothes, and let us mutually aid one another in this last office." Lucretia readily complied with this invitation, and they dressed, each helping the other, showing the same indifference and pleasure as if they were dressing for a feast.

The Company of Mercy arrived soon after at the prisons of the Tordinona; and while they were waiting below in the street with the crucifix until the condemned should descend, an accident happened, which gave rise to such a tumult among the immense crowd there collected, that there was danger of much disorder. It thus happened; some foreign gentlemen, who were posted at a high window, inadvertently threw down a flower-pot which was outside the window, which falling on one of the brothers of the Order of Mercy, mortally wounded him. This caused a disturbance in the crowd; and those who were too far off to know the cause, took flight, and falling one over the other, several were wounded. When the tumult was calmed, the brothers Giacomo and Bernardo descended to the door of the prison, near which opportunely happened to be some fiscal officers, who, going up to Bernardo, told him that through the clemency of the sovereign pontiff, his life was spared to him, with this condition, that he should be present at the death of his relations. A scarlet mantle trimmed with gold, in which he had at first been conducted to prison, was given him, to envelop him. Giacomo was already on the car, when the placet of the Pope arrived, freeing him from the severer portion of the punishment added to the sentence, and ordering that it should be executed only by the hammer and quartering.

The funereal procession passed through the Via dell' Orso, by the Apollinara, thence through the Piazza Navona; from the church of S. Pantalio to the Piazza Pollarola, through the Campo di Fiori, S. Carlo a Castinari, to the Arco de' Conte Cenci; proceeding, it stopped under the Palace Cenci, and then finally rested at the Corte Savella, to take the two ladies. When these arrived, Lucretia remained last, dressed in black, as has been described, with a veil of the same colour, which covered her as far as her girdle: Beatrice was beside her, also covered by a veil: they wore velvet slippers, with silk roses and gold fastenings; and, instead of manacles, their wrists were bound by a silk cord, which was fastened to their girdles in such a manner as to give them almost the free use of their hands. Each had in her left hand the holy sign of benediction, and in the right a handkerchief, with which Lucretia wiped her tears, and Beatrice the perspiration from her forehead. Being arrived at the place of punishment, Bernardo was left on the scaffold, and the others were conducted to the chapel. During this dreadful separation, this unfortunate youth, reflecting that he was soon going to behold the decapitation of his nearest relatives, fell down in a deadly swoon, from which, however, he was at last recovered, and seated opposite the block. The first that came forth to die was Lucretia, who, being fat, found difficulty in placing herself to receive the blow. The executioner taking off her handkerchief, her neck was discovered, which was still handsome, although she was fifty years of age. Blushing deeply, she cast her eyes down, and then, casting them up to heaven, full of tears, she exclaimed, "Behold, dearest Jesus, this guilty soul about to appear before thee—to give an account of its acts, mingled with many crimes. When it shall appear before thy Godhead, I pray thee to look on it with an eye of mercy, and not of justice." She then began to recite the psalm Miserere mei Deus, and placing her neck under the axe, the head was struck from her body while she was repeating the second verse of this psalm, at the words et secundum multitudinem. When the executioner raised the head, the populace saw with wonder that the countenance long retained its vivacity, until it was wrapt up in a black handkerchief, and placed in a corner of the scaffold. While the scaffold was being arranged for Beatrice, and whilst the Brotherhood returned to the chapel for her, the balcony of a shop filled with spectators fell, and five of those underneath were wounded, so that two died a few days after. Beatrice, hearing the noise, asked the executioner if her mother had died well, and being replied that she had, she knelt before the crucifix, and spoke thus:—"Be thou everlastingly thanked, O my gracious Saviour, since, by the good death of my mother, thou hast given me assurance of thy mercy towards me." Then, rising, she courageously and devoutly walked towards the scaffold, repeating by the way several prayers with so much fervour of spirit, that all who heard her shed tears of compassion. Ascending the scaffold, while she arranged herself, she also turned her eyes to heaven, and thus prayed:—"Most beloved Jesus, who, relinquishing thy divinity, becamest a man; and didst through love purge my sinful soul also of its original sin with thy precious blood; deign, I beseech thee, to accept that which I am about to shed at thy most merciful tribunal, as a penalty which may cancel my many crimes, and spare me a part of that punishment justly due to me." Then she placed her head under the axe, which at one blow was divided from her body, as she was repeating the second verse of the psalm De profundis, at the words fiant aures tuæ; the blow gave a violent motion to her body, and discomposed her dress. The executioner raised the head to the view of the people, and in placing it in the coffin placed underneath, the cord by which it was suspended slipped from his hold, and the head fell to the ground, shedding a great deal of blood, which was wiped up with water and sponges. ✕

On the death of his sister, Bernardo again fainted; the most efficacious remedies were for some time uselessly employed upon him; and it was believed by all that his second swoon, having found him already overcome and without strength, had deprived him of life. At length, after the lapse of a quarter of an hour, he came to himself, and by slow degrees recovered the use of his senses. Giacomo was then conducted to the scaffold, and the executioner took from him the mourning cloke which enveloped him. He fixed his eyes on Bernardo, and then, turning, addressed the people with a loud voice : “ Now that I am about to present myself before the Tribunal of infallible Truth, I swear that if my Saviour, pardoning me my faults, shall place me in the road to salvation, I will incessantly pray for the preservation of his Holiness, who has spared me the aggravation of punishment but too much due to my enormous crime, and has granted life to my brother Bernardo, who is most innocent of the guilt of parricide, as I have constantly declared in all my examinations. It only afflicts me in these my last moments, that he should have been obliged to be present at so fatal a scene : but since, O my God, it has so pleased thee, fiat voluntas tua.” After speaking thus, he knelt down : the executioner blinded his eyes, and tied his legs to the scaffold, gave him a blow on the temple with a leaded hammer, cut off his head, and cut his body into four pieces which were fixed on the hooks of the scaffolding.

When the last penalty of justice was over, Bernardo was re-conducted to the prison of the Tordinona, where he was soon attacked by a burning fever ; he was bled and received other remedies, so that in the end he recovered his health, though not without great suffering. The bodies of Lucretia and Beatrice were left at the end of the bridge until the evening, illuminated by two torches, and surrounded by so great a concourse of people, that it was impossible to cross the bridge. An hour after dark, the body of Beatrice was placed in a coffin, covered by a black velvet pall, richly adorned with gold : garlands of flowers were placed, one at her head, and another at her feet ; and the body was strewed with flowers. It was accompanied to the church of S. Peter in Montorio by the Brotherhood of the Order of Mercy, and followed by many Franciscan monks, with great pomp and innumerable torches ; she was there buried before the high altar, after the customary ceremony had been performed. By reason of the distance of the church from the bridge, it was four hours after dark before the ceremony was finished. Afterwards the body of Lucretia, accompanied in the same manner, was carried to the church of S. Gregorio upon the Celian Hill ; where, after the ceremony, it was honourably buried.

Beatrice was rather tall, of a fair complexion ; and she had a dimple on each cheek, which, especially when she smiled, added a grace to her lovely countenance that transported every one who beheld her. Her hair appeared like threads of gold ; and, because they were extremely long, she used to tie it up, and, when afterwards she loosened it, the splendid ringlets dazzled the eyes of the spectator. Her eyes were of a deep blue, pleasing, and full of fire. To all these beauties she added, both in words and actions, a spirit and a majestic vivacity that captivated every one. She was twenty years of age when she died.

Lucretia was as tall as Beatrice, but her full make made her appear less : she was also fair, and so fresh complexioned, that at fifty, which was her age when she died, she did not appear above thirty. Her hair was black, and her teeth regular and white to an extraordinary degree.

Giacomo was of a middle size ; fair but ruddy ; and with black eyebrows : affable in his nature, of good address, and well skilled in every science, and in all knightly exercises. He was not more than twenty-eight years of age when he died.

Lastly, Bernardo so closely resembled Beatrice in complexion, features, and everything else, that if they had changed clothes the one might easily have been taken for the other. His mind also seemed formed in the same model as that of his sister ; and at the time of her death he was six-and-twenty years old.

He remained in the prison of Tordinona until the month of September of the same year, after which time, at the intercession of the most Venerable Grand Brotherhood of the Most Holy Crucifix of St. Marcellus, he obtained the favour of his liberty upon paying the sum of 25,000 crowns to the Hospital of the Most Holy Trinity of Pilgrims. Thus he, as the sole remnant of the Cenci family, became heir to all their possessions. He is now married, and has a son named Cristofero.

The most faithful portrait of Beatrice exists in the Palace of the Villa Pamfili, without the gate of San Pancrazio : if any other is to be found in the Palazzo Cenci, it is not shown to any one ;—so as not to renew the memory of so horrible an event.

This was the end of this family : and until the time when this account is put together it has not been possible to find the Marquess Paolo Santa Croce ; but there is a rumour that he dwells in Brescia, a city of the Venetian states.

* * * In this edition the numerous volumes published by Shelley during his lifetime are reprinted precisely as they stand, except where there are obvious printer's errors, or writer's inadvertencies; but, as these are often matters of opinion, the Editor does not deviate in so much as a comma or a single letter from the original, without indicating in a footnote the precise change made. Some of the most important of those works which first appeared after Shelley's death are given from manuscript sources, instead of being reproduced from the incorrect editions hitherto circulated; and for purposes of revision, as well as for variorum readings, manuscripts of works published in the poet's lifetime, as well as those of posthumous works, have been consulted. The highly-important Leigh Hunt manuscripts, the actual copy of Laon and Cythna on which Shelley made the MS. changes converting the Poem into The Revolt of Islam, Shelley's own copy of Queen Mab, most copiously revised, and other special sources of information, have enabled the Editor not only to set the text right with absolute certainty in numerous instances, but also to give to the reading public Poems by Shelley not hitherto known to Shelley students; and through the kindness of Sir Percy and Lady Shelley, the Editor has been able to add several important pieces not before published.
