The Bas has this day changed proprietors: the former Editor having formed a new partnership. complete it his duty towards the public to ex ress his gratification or the patronage which been granted to this paper, from its first publication to mis day life great confidence in the activity and experience of his new association authorises him to believe that his patrons wil consider this change as a new proof of the zeal he has always shewn to deserve their favors.

The journal shall continue to be published under the same title by Messra. G. Baron, DELAUP & Doceans, who have made arrangements in order that the paper be delivered as usual to such Superibers who have paid in advance, or to those who have not given notice to discontinue their subscription—The new Editors fully impressed have taken upon themselves, will use new exertithe Spanish Americas. Terms heavy b tions, by improving the typographical part of their paper, as well as by a more particular attention to the English side of it, which had in some manner been neglected—to deserve a condisuation of past favors, they have ordered from the North a complete assurtment of the newest wpes, which will enable them in about two months to enlarge the size of their paper, and Pring it on six columns.

In a commercial city of such importance as New-Orleans, the principal object of the editor of a commercial paper is to render himself so useful as possible to merchants—with this view, the editors having observed that, but one evening paper was published in this city, have concluded to make their's an evening paper, as soon as they will receive the types to enable them to enlarge its size. By publishing in the evening, the paper will contain a shipping list of all the arrivals and departures of the day and night previous, which is undoubtedly very ad vantageous to merchants; is it will not in the Bast impair the political and literary part.

The Bas not being formerly entirely devoted to commercial interests, the former editors had not availed the molves of all the advantages of their extended correspondence will the northern cities, France, England, Mexico, etc. but her after nothing shall be neglected under that head, and that correspondence dided to the best papers of the principal sommercial cities, will afford to the editors the means of giving correct Intelligence of such transactions in foreign marhere so might be interesting to the merchants of Bow-Orleans.

Such are the principal changes and improve ments intended by the new proprietors of this paper, which has heger pretended to enter in competition against its powerful rivals, but by the moderation and liberality of its principles, and which on that account has deserved the patransge of the public. The editorial part of the Ban being still confided to the same person, the ind-pendent principles which have always been advocated in its columns during the greatest beat of political discussions, shall commute to be the notto of the Editors, but as faithful sentinels of the public and of our sacred institutions they will never hesitate upon all accessary occonfine, to take an independent stand in favor of the rights of the people—they will not be the tees ready to scrutinize at all times the official conduct of any public officer who me it be wanting in the performance of his duties. Such in short will be the principles on which the Editors will act; the public before whom they now of the patronage heretofore granted to this pa rieure, &c. of their promises's and the manner in which they will fulfil them, is the only criterion by which they ask to be judged.
