And very curious 'tis, you'll find ;
For if of three it is bereft,
The self-same number will be left !

11

If by nought you divide one hundred and ten,
You will have a fine animal, treasured of men.

12

Though but three letters I am named,
My first two make a word of four ;
My third, split from a nation famed,
Will leave a dweller on its shore.

I've often wept o'er human guilt,
And yet I never shed a tear ;
And though another's blood I've spilt,
The law has never made me fear.

Though on the Arctic shores I dwell,
And far in China always stay,
'Tis true I toll the Moscow bell,
And yet you see me every day.

My brother is of Moorish birth,
And gladdens oft Sahara's waste ;
I rightly estimate his worth,
And find him pleasant to the taste.

We, both united, form, you see,
A mighty instrument of power ;
We are a despot's firm decree,
And cause republicans to cower.

13

A WORD OF FIVE LETTERS.

If you my first by two divide,
 My fifth it will produce ;
 Which, if you will by ten divide,
 My third you may peruse.
 Again my third by five divide,
 My second will appear ;
 My second then by one divide,
 You'll see my fourth quite clear ;
 My whole at once you'll plainly see,
 Which I advise you all to be.

14

We two, when together, incite division,
 Yet either one of us preserves unity, and is ever present with every man.

Bound together, we are leaders of harmony,
 Then, joining our heads, we lead armies.
 When crossed, we assist in every exaltation.
 Tied by the heels, we crown victory.

THE SILVER PUZZLE.

Lay a ten-cent piece upon the table-cloth, between two half-dollars, and place a tumbler upon the larger coins, The puzzle is to remove the ten-cent piece without displacing either of the half-dollars, or the glass. You are not allowed to touch the ten-cent piece, either with your hands or anything else, nor must you blow it away !

THE DOG PUZZLE.

Add four lines to these apparently dead dogs, which shall give them the appearance of running away.

24

Find a word containing six letters, or less, and out of it produce all the parts of speech.

25

Find a word which contains the five vowels, each vowel being used but once.

26

I am a word of five letters. My first minus my fifth will leave my second; my fifth divided by my first will produce my fourth; and five times my first added to five times my fifth will make my third; my whole is funny.

27

I contain just five hundred and fifty,
 And also one hundred and nought,
 If the numbers are rightly disposed,
 You'll obtain just the number you sought;
 You will find I'm a portion of earth,
 Though perhaps on the map I'm not named,
 Yet the deep-sounding sea gave me birth,
 At my feet there's a river far-famed.

29

One thousand five hundred divided by one,
Will express what a lamp is, compared with the sun.

30

43

I am a verb, a small word of six letters; something that every one should strive to do. But I am a very comprehensive little word, for in me may be found—

1. An entreaty.
2. A vendue.
3. A vegetable.
4. A vital principle.
5. A spring.
6. A "restorer."
7. A stamp.
8. A contract.

What two letters of the alphabet will express the name of a river in one of the Southern States?

46

What letter of the alphabet expresses the joining together of two States?

47

What word is that of five letters, which, if the two first letters are taken away, leaves only one?

LABYRINTH NO. 1.

This Labyrinth may be entered by any of the openings in the margin: the puzzle is, to trace a way to the center without crossing any of the lines

CHARADES.

My first is the name of a fowl,
An emblem of modesty known;
My second has coloring power,
And grows 'neath a tropical sun.

My third is a mourning array,
That's worn in an Orient clime,
And reminds of those regions of day
Beyond the confines of time.

My fourth in the spring-time is gay,
And comes with the note of the bird;
In autumn, leaves forest and spray,
And goes when no music is heard.

My fifth takes the place of my fourth,
 When leaves are in autumn time sere;
 But when winter comes on, with its dearth,
 This too will in turn disappear.

My sixth is a fruit of one zone,
 And name of a prince who sped
 In triumph to England's proud throne,
 In place of a king who had fled.

My seventh 's in the meteor's blaze
 That lights up the star-spangled sky,
 And glows in the twilight's maze,
 And the clouds in their golden dye.

My whole in beauty far outvies
 The richest robe a prince e'er wore,
 A signet gleaming in the skies,
 A covenant for evermore.

2

My first oft preys upon my second;
 My whole a bitter shrub is reckoned.

3

My first and last are just the same,
 And would you know my second,
 'Mong children's first abbreviates
 You'll oftenest find it reckoned.
 My first and last are always seen,
 A common preposition,
 And here methinks they love to meet
 For tasteful coalition.
 My second, infants spell the word,
 Ere they can lisp another;
 'Tis name of one still dearer far
 Than sister or than brother.

My whole, a luscious, pulpy fruit,
 In garden oft found growing,
 Is either with a yellow dress,
 Or richest red robe glowing.
 'Tis in its prime, when wheat and rye
 Are ripening for the sickle,
 And ready then for present use,
 Or yet to dry and pickle.
 Few fruits in our cold northern clime,
 Than this is more inviting ;
 You surely know its name, even while
 Its praises I'm reciting.

My first is the chief of delights
 That boys from their cradles desire ;
 Its shrill crack more musical far
 To them than Apollo's sweet lyre,

Except when applied with masterly art,
To root out the evil that lurks in the heart.

My second the Bible commends
To the rich, the wise, and the great,
With eloquence pleadeth their cause,
And blesseth their lowly estate ;

They are ever with us, without search are found,
The more we give to them, the more we abound.

When the rich man lies down in the grave,
He takes not his riches away,
And anxious expectants cluster around,
To hear what my third has to say :

Its mandate is law, and if it sore pinches
The fawning false friend, then vainly he flinches.

My whole is a sombre brown bird,
That sadly each night trills his lay ;
And each passer-by stops to hear
What this bird of eve has to say.

As ever he sings the same plaintive song,
Who that has e'er heard him will guess on this long ?

5

My first, although not giving grace
To ev'ry living creature,
Is yet upon the human face,
A most important feature.

On some it has a classic mien,
Fair Grecian or bold Roman ;
On some 'tis flat, on some I ween
"I would answer for a gnomon !

The water fowl which swims the pond,
Or bathes in ocean briny,
The dove that coos her ditty fond,
My first doth have, yet tiny.

My second is a vowel plain ;
 My third an exclamation,
 Upon the music scale again
 It holdeth goodly station.

My whole, ah, look in yonder sky,
 And you will see it gleaming,
 Less clear, perchance, because more shy,
 Than stars so brilliant beaming.

The telescope will make how bright
 Its timid, shrinking beauties !
 And bring to mortal ken, the light
 Of its revolving duties.

Awake, idle sleeper. Up! up! and arise,
 Already my first hath made vocal the skies.
 Arouse thee! arouse thee! mount horse, and away ;
 For long is the journey before thee to-day.

Forget not my second, when weary thy steed,
 By that shalt thou urge on his lingering speed .
 For many a forest and ford must be passed,
 Before thou shalt reach thine own cottage, at last.

And ere though thine own cottage garden thou'lt tread,
 The dews of the night on my whole shall be shed,
 On my beautiful whole, yet less blue and less bright,
 Than the eyes which will meet thee with glistening delight.

My first in kingdoms you will find
 Where sovereigns great have reign ;
 My second on the Atlantic see,
 When brave hearts cross the main.

My whole, an ally strong and bold
 Of a United State,
 If on the map you think to find,
 Some time you'll have to wait.

3

When night-winds whistle o'er the plain,
 And howls the storm in many a burst,
 How cheering to the way-worn swain
 To seek the shelter of my first!

With cunning shining in his face,
 From eyes so watchful, keen, and dark,
 The scion of a remnant race—
 My artful second you may mark.

My third in bearded front arrayed,
 With Autumn's golden stores is found;
 Yet torn, and bruised, and lowly laid,
 Its head must rest upon the ground.

My whole you always must forgive,
 As you expect to be forgiven;
 Nor must it in your memory live,
 Though multiplied to seven times seven.

9

I stand on my first, on my second I sit,
On my whole I do either just as I think fit.

10

First.

Mantling the ruined wall
With my green, yielding pall;
    You know me well.
Covering the river's brink,
'Neath your soft tread I sink.
    My name pray tell.

Second.

Fairest of earthly flowers,
Queen of your garden bowers,
    Flora's delight,
Twined o'er the cottage door,
My showers of incense pour
    On the still nights.

Whole.

See, when the blushing bride
Casts her rich veil aside,
    I'm nestled there,
Near some soft, waving tress,
Or on her bridal dress,
    Shining so fair.

Oft on the mourner's tomb
Drooping and sad I bloom,
    Token of love
Left by the orphaned child,
Calling in accents wild
    For those above.

11

My first is a short sleep. My second is a relation. My whole is an article in daily use.

12

My first belongs, in pairs, to man and beast,
 And of the gifts of harvest not the least ;
 The treasures of my next no boy of feeling
 Will e'er disgrace his heart or name by stealing ;
 My first and third the time, my whole the way,
 To undertake the duties of each day.

13

My first is a body of water.
 My second is a fish.
 My third is a preposition.
 My fourth is a name for the head.
 My whole was a bone of contention.

14

Did'st ever go to singing-school,
 And hear the master try
 To sound the notes upon the scale,
 From lowest to most high?
 Then have you heard my first, the best,
 Fall sweetly on your ear,
 'Tis strange that with such company
 My second should appear.

My second ne'er in gentle mood,
 Is full of ire and hate,
 Oh, let none who shall glance this o'er,
 Be found in such a state.
 'Tis only for the lunatic,
 Bereft of reason's light,
 Thus to profane his nature by
 So sorrowful a sight.

My whole is an illusion vain,
 Yet perfect as untrue;
 It doth the real object seem,
 But double on the view.
 By its strange spell the water seems
 As if 'twere hung in air,
 The desert traveler knows full well
 Its vision false as fair.

15

My first is one, 'tis even you,
 My whole by many have been reckoned,
 But only He who numbers all
 Can ever rightly count my second.

16

My first is an article in daily use.
 My second spells the twentieth letter of the alphabet.
 My third, if you prefix the letters, will name a declivity.
 My whole is an animal.

17

My first is a part of the human face.
 My second is an unpleasant sensation.
 My third is an article.
 My whole is a small animal.

18

My first is found in every bog,
 In every pool and pond,
 Without me not a single frog
 Or toad could e'er be found.
 My next is always to be found
 Wherever men exist ;
 I build their houses, plow their ground,
 And help them to subsist.
 With dread the superstitious soul
 Will speculate upon my whole.

19

Entire, I'm water, earth, or air,
 I'm food, or clothes, or light,
 Always provided, lady fair,
 That these are used aright.

And though in fifty things I stay,
 This you will surely find,
 Come in whatever form I may,
 I benefit mankind.

Two syllables I do possess,
 But what is very droll,
 Although a part my second is,
 My first one is the whole.

20

My first is always on a par
 With every earthly thing ;
 With reptile, brute, bird, fish, and man,
 With beggar, priest, and king.

My second is a title—
 A foreign one, 'tis true—
 But none the less familiar
 To every one of you.

My whole—a glorious revenge !
 And Heaven's kindest boon :
 I dare not tell you plainer, lest
 You find me out too soon.

21

My first is what young ladies aim at in their movements, and what Christians pray for.

My second is what in winter we see little of, and what no young man likes to be considered.

My third is what every woman should be before she is won, and what we should be badly off without during this cold weather.

My whole is the name of an authoress, highly popular with both old and young.

22

My first, from the frozen North comes down
 In snowy mantle dressed ;
 And the smiling earth grows bare and brown,
 Where'er his steps have pressed,
 The flowers close up each sparkling eye,
 And hide in the earth till he passes by.

But when bleak winds and frosts are gone,
 'Mid April's smiles and tears,
 My second's hue the earth puts on,
 And summer beauty wears ;
 And tuneful birds and opening flowers
 Invite you to the forest bowers.

On moss-grown banks, half hidden there,
 My whole may oft be seen ;
 My fragrant leaves perfume the air,
 And shine in emerald green ;
 And there my crimson berry glows,
 Ripened beneath New England snows.

23

My first.

The boy who, trusting in his father's word,
 Sprang from the towering mast to meet the wave,
 Possessed in me the pledge that risk incurred,
 Was equaled by that father's power to save.

My second.

The nation scourged, dispersed through every land,
 For many ages, wanderers without home,
 In me waits patiently the guiding hand
 Will lead its pilgrims back no more to roam.

My third.

The mother standing at the judgment seat,
 When wisdom's voice to death her babe did give,
 Resigned to me her claim—willing to meet
 Her loss, so that her precious child might live.
 Through me the tongue of slander lulls its voice,
 Through me the poor have full provision given;
 I lift the fallen one, bid hearts rejoice;
 I bid the poor of earth seek wealth in heaven.

My whole.

A jeweled diadem of priceless worth,
 I quench the luster of all crowns on earth.

24

My first in gardens oft is seen,
 And oft adorns the bride;
 In early spring its leaves are green—
 It is the maiden's pride.

My second thou repeatest
 Full oft in fireside games:
 As sweet, if not the sweetest,
 Of all familiar names.

A flow'ring shrub, in a distant clime,
 My whole in beauty grows ;
 It grew by the sea in olden time,
 And thus its name arose.

25

Awake, my first, with thy inspiring tone,
 Behold an instrument joy calls his own,
 And with responsive foot, on dewy meads,
 The sylvan dance of fawn and wood nymph leads.

My next adorns the noble Latin tongue,
 Whose numbers flow sonorous, smooth, and strong ;
 There, should you fail to find the word, perchance
 'Twill greet you in the livelier tones of France.

My whole, a fragrant flower—'tis not for me
 To eulogize its grace and modesty ;
 Full oft the poet's reed hath breathed its fame,
 In loftier measures—can'st thou tell its name ?

26

In stillness of midnight, the cry of my first
 On ear of the sleeper affrighted will burst ;
 The bells peal their loudest each moment of time,
 As if life depended on even one chime.

Oh, then is my first in his terror arrayed,
 When anger burns fiercely, he may not be stayed.
 Again round the hearth-stone are happy hearts met,
 From gray-headed sire to the lisping young pet.
 The flame doth grow warmer, and brighter the light;
 How cheering it maketh the winter's cold night!
 So changeth my first, as the hawk to the dove,
 His aspect is here one of comfort and love.

My second, bound neither to inland or coast,
 Is one 'mong the many, a numberless host;
 Full transient his being; he cometh in spring,
 And chill winds of autumn his requiem sing.
 Though said to be useful, I frankly confess,
 My wish has been often his music were less.
 Though peaceful his temper, I can not deny
 That rarely by nature he's suffered to die.
 A foe doth he find in the duster and brush,
 E'en flowerets allure, his existence to crush;
 Like warfare with bodkin Domitian begun,
 Hence gathering much of the fame which he won.

My whole doth love best to be out in the night,
 And flatters himself on his furnishing light;
 Dear Luna is nothing of comfort to him,
 For brighter his glory when hers is most dim.
 Two lamps he doth carry, and brillant they are,
 As beams which were stolen from eye of a star.
 His joy is to frisk from the sunset to dawn;
 When morn comes, the pride of his beauty is gone!
 In tropical climates he oft'nest doth dwell,
 He lighteth the savage—hast never heard tell?
 'Tis growing quite dark; oh, I wish he were nigh;
 Perchance he would give me his lamps to see by.

27

My first is equality, my second inferiority, and my whole superiority.

28

I am composed of nine letters.

My first is a name appropriated to a certain class of foreigners. It is also a nickname.

My second is an article.

My third implies motion.

My fourth in sound implies proximity.

My fifth is a vowel.

My whole is a part of the Western hemisphere.

29

When round the weary traveler
 The stormy evening closes,
 When tangled wood or swelling stream
 His toilsome way opposes ;
 If through the trees his eager steps
 To rest and warmth are beckoned,
 How gladly will he hail my first,
 That leads him to my second !

When from some hill's commanding brow
 The gloomy prospect viewing,
 He hears the distant ocean rage,
 Waves, frightened waves pursuing,
 How gladly turns he to my whole,
 In watch serene abiding,
 And fears no more to think of those
 Who trust my faithful guiding.

30

Till winter takes his stormy seat,
 In fragrant meads and gardens sweet
 Evolves my viscid first ;
 When stilly night, with fleecy cloud
 Flings round the earth a darksome shroud,
 My second often beams ;—

O would you each enjoy my whole,
 And have true bliss pervade your soul
     And from your eyes outburst—
 Some loving one make haste to find,
 Let Hymen close your spirits bind,
     And learn just how it seems!

31

My first is a timid and gentle creature,
 Restless and bright her glancing eye,
 Quick to discern the approach of danger,
 Swift from her covert to spring and fly:
 Oft in the cool of the dewy morning,
 Startled amid her calm retreat,
 She heareth the shrill-toned sound of warning,
 And bounds away on frantic feet,
 While close her fierce pursuers follow,
 Through brush and brake, o'er hill and hollow.

My second telleth of holy seasons,
 And calleth the multitude to prayers;
 On festivals speaketh right joyously,
 When all a face of gladness wears;
 Having at times, too, a voice of sorrow,
 Speaking in deep and solemn tone,
 Telling how faithless is false to-morrow,
 To those who weep for the dear ones gone;
 Yet feeling itself nor grief nor gladness,
 Responsive ever to mirth or sadness.

My whole is a beautiful, modest flower,
 Shaking its bells to the summer wind,
 Peeping out coyly from lonely places,
 Which footsteps of children love to find,
 Dreaming they hear in the purple blossoms
 Fairy-like tones of the olden time:
 Fondly thinking the sweet bells are ringing,
 With a soft, low, musical chime,
 Their golden curls and innocent bosoms,
 They fill with the graceful, drooping blossoms.

My first is seen in all its pride
 On summer nights when bright and clear,

O'er hill and dale I beauty throw ;
Night owes me much throughout the year ;
Some say my whole no substance has,
However plain it may appear ;
I shall not give you further clue,
No need to one as smart as you ;
Enough, my whole is written here.

LABYRINTH NO. 2.

This Labyrinth must be entered at the front gate, and a way traced to the centre (A), without climbing the walls.

R I D D L E S .

I HAVE three feet, dear friends,
And you must know :
I've sixteen nails,
But not a single toe !

2

I am originally a descendant of rags, but, in spite of my mean origin, I boast one of the most numerous families in the world. I wear the countenance of a man, varying in complexion from crimson to azure ; and twice two stars are my companions. But, although of such dignity, besides having my face disfigured, I am continually spit upon, and trodden under foot by all mankind, who seem to value me only for my good looks—without them, I am despised. I am diminutive in size, and my days are few, but I am well known, and constantly sought after.

3

Who are we ? When in the morning you rise
We let the sunshine down into your eyes.
Then we go playing before you all day,
Dark things we brighten, and soften the gay.
Oh ! we make half the world's beauty for you.
Little blue-eyed one, who are we ? guess who ?

Who are we ? When the night shadows grow deep,
We draw around you the curtains of sleep.
When into dream-land we've locked you up tight,
Until the morn brings her bright keys of light,
Guess who like sentinels guarding you lie,—
Look—we're before you now—black and gray eye.

4

I am born of a moment, as every one knows,
 And rival the tints of the loveliest rose ;
 There are many who think me the offspring of shame,
 But I'm oftener found in sweet modesty's train ;
 E'en poets have made me the theme of their muse,
 And painters have studied my delicate hues :
 Yet, would you believe it! I cause much vexation
 To those who possess me, and some irritation ;
 For I've often betrayed what they would have concealed,
 And some of their most-cherished secrets revealed :
 So be truthful, dear girls, or in spite of your tact,
 I'll fly in your faces and tell the whole fact.

5

Of metal I can make a heart ;
 I put a stop to ease ;
 And with a tradesman I can talk
 As glibly as you please.
 With a building in New York I'll make
 A covering for your head ;
 And with the rust upon your knife
 I'll make a piece of bread.
 I'll make a prison with old time,
 And with a measure, too :
 Now, Cousins all, say what I am,
 For I belong to you.

6

I was pure, unsullied, white as snow,
 But a little while ago,
 When, by a tremendous squeeze,
 I was spotted as you please.
 Now, if you but look at me,
 Something funny you will see,
 That I am striped, spotted, white,
 Yet that I am red to-night.

In Eden first, nigh the forbidden tree,
 Found I my germ, as man his destiny ;
 Down in the depths of hell I had my birth ;
 I tortures there invented spread o'er Earth.
 The man who strives for Fame's approving nod,
 I strike him on the face, he lies a clod.
 I walk the public halls, and cheeks turn pale ;
 The speaker hears me, and his heart doth fail.

The young debutant on histrionic boards
 Hath grace or ruin as my mood accords.
 When two great powers (both vital friends of man
 And both his enemies) in battle stand,
 When over, under in their rage they roll ;
 Nor ever cease the fight, without control
 Then am I found, and in the expiring sigh
 The vanquished wrestler utters, then I die.

8

I am always seen in sugar,
 And always seen in salt.
 I am never seen in hops or beer,
 But always seen in malt.
 I'm never seen when it is light,
 Yet, strange, I'm seen in day.
 If you will look right sharp, I'm sure
 You will find me when you stray.
 I am never seen in coffee,
 But always seen in tea.
 I'm never found with mother,
 With father I must be.
 I'm always found with any thing,
 Yet, strange as it may seem,
 I'm never found in buttermilk,
 But always found in cream.
 I'm never found in good or sweet,
 And never in your mind,
 If you will study this right close,
 My name you'll surely find.

9

What force or strength can not get through,
 I with a gentle touch can do ;
 And many in the street would stand,
 Were I not as a friend at hand.

10

There is a certain natural production neither animal, vegetable, nor mineral. It generally exists from two to six feet above the surface of the earth. It has neither length, breadth, nor substance. It is neither male nor female, but commonly exists between both. It is often spoken of in the Old Testament, and strongly recommended in the New; and serves equally the purposes of treachery and fidelity.

11

I am a word in very common use. You will find me more than once upon almost or quite every page, whether a monosyllable, or dissyllable, or a polysyllable is to be found out; but this much is told: my first and last letter is the same; and my first three and my last three spell the same word. A useful article this of personal decoration. My interior is remarkable. Viewed one way, you laugh; viewed another, you sigh. I am an etymological stumble, and a novice hardly ever knows where to find me. To a Frenchman and a German I am an abhorrence. They never learn me so as even to call my name.

12

In vain you struggle to regain me,
When lost, you never can obtain me ;
And yet, what's odd, you sigh and fret,
Deplore my loss, and have me yet.
And often using me quite ill,
And seeking ways your slave to kill—
Then promising in future you
Will give to me the homage due.
Thus we go on from year to year ;
My name pray let the party hear.

13

I'm swift as a shadow ; I'm slow as a snail ;
I fly like the storm-cloud impelled by the gale ;
I sail with the mariner o'er the wide sea,
And traverse the shore with the bird and the bee.
I travel by day, and I travel by night,
And rarely from mortals I pass out of sight.
I dwell in the palace of nobles and kings,
But scorn not the cot where the poor mother sings ;
But though I abide with the lowliest poor,
I ne'er have been turned from the rich man's door.
I'm seen in the moon, when it waxes and wanes,
In the sun, too, at times when nature complains.
I'm courted much under shady bowers,
And welcomed at midnight or noonday hours.
I fly round the world each passing day,
And yet I'm as idle as a boy at play ;
Nor do I repose at the set of the sun,
But wing my way by the light of the moon.
By day and by night I enter the door
Of high and of low, of rich and of poor ;
And yet with a step so noiseless I come,
I'm not an intruder abroad or at home.

All deeds of darkness I ever eschew,
Though many such deeds I am forced to view
And now, since so often my features are seen,
Unless you can guess me, you surely are green.

14

I was born in the fields ; taken from thence at an early age, I was made to assume my present form, and sold as a slave into the family of a wealthy merchant. While I was young, and comely, my life was comparatively easy ; the modest Lucy would take me by the hand, and with her I would roam over the richly-carpeted mansion ; and many a service I have rendered her. One morning, quite early, before the rest of the family were up, Lucy was standing by the window ; I was leaning against her shoulder, when she uttered a slight scream. I jumped, and came near falling, but she caught hold of me, and pointing towards the window, showed me the cause of her terror. One well-aimed blow of mine felled the intruder to the earth, and the footman coming in just then, gave him the finishing touch. But, alas! my days of pleasant servitude were drawing near a close. Lucy became dissatisfied with me, and in a fit of pique, handed me over to the cook, by whom I was hustled hither and thither, wherever her fancy dictated. She was a careless woman, and one day, while I was doing all I could to serve her, she actually pushed me into the fire! Snatching me out as quickly as possible, she plunged me into a bucket of cold water; but I was disfigured and crippled for life, and disabled from further service. The cook at length declared she would no longer give me house-room, and one bitter cold night, turned me out into the street, without a stitch of clothing. I have never murmured when called upon to work; yet here I lie, neglected, unheeded, and uncared for.

But why should I complain? am I the only one shunned and forsaken, when no longer able to minister to the wants or pleasures of the world?

15

Among the snakes, I reckon one,
 Not born of earthly breed,
 And with this serpent vieth none,
 In terror or in speed.

It darts upon its helpless prey
 With roar both loud and high;

In one destruction borne away,
Rider and steed must die.

In highest place it loves to bide,
No door may bar its path,
And scaly armor's iron pride
Will but attract its wrath.

The firmest earth it plows amain,
How tough soe'er it be—
As brittle reeds are snapt in twain
'Twill rend the mightiest tree.

Yet hath this monster, grim and fierce,
Ne'er twice with prey been fed,
But once its fiery tooth can pierce—
It slayeth—and is dead.

R E B U S E S .

1

A letter prefix to the tyrant's delight,
You'll see a kind friend on a cold winter's night.

My first may be divided into three parts. It may belong to one of the senses ; it may be almost a lake ; or it may represent 100.

My second may likewise be divided into three parts. It may have something to do with myself ; it may be a part of myself ; or it may represent 1.

My third may be divided into two parts. It may be either a river, or represent 500.

Then 100, 1, and 500 make the answer.

The whole was the title of one who surprised Europe by the brilliancy of his military exploits.

3

A fragment, an article of dress, a noise, an animal, a fruit, and a part of the body. The initials of these spell my whole, out of which I hope you will always keep.

Find me a word which will express the name
Of feathered biped, found both wild and tame :
Then take away one letter, and it will
Express the name of feathered biped still.

5

Find me a word which shows us at a glance
A foreign country, farther off than France ;
Then take away one letter, and it will
Express the name of a foreign country still.

6

In an every-day word (with but six letters in it)

You will find a few things which are worthy attention ;
I will give you a clue, and I think in a minute

You'll not find it much trouble those few things to mention.

Take four of the letters, and if they're placed rightly,

They one drop of liquid will bring to your view ;
Cut off the last letter, and then see what nightly
Is drank by the many, and not by the few.

Now mix up the letters, and four more take out,
To make what all animals always possess.

Many more I could name ; but I haven't a doubt
 You are ready this moment my riddle to guess.
 So the name of the whole, now, is all I require—
 It's what every woman should always have by her.

Entire I'm a useful quadruped ; remove my first, and I become a species of grain ; replace my first, and remove my last, and I am a city famed for its inquisition.

How can you take something from nothing, and leave a number ?

Entire I am very useful in machines ; take away my first letter, and I am a part of the body ; take away my first and second, and I am a species of snake.

10

Add to an article, in every-day use, a letter, and it becomes another useful article ; with a third letter it becomes a girl's name, and with a fourth letter another name ; with a fifth letter it becomes an historical record, and with a sixth letter it is much the same thing, only more so.

11

My first and my second are each like the other,
 (When transposed they have oft proved a curse;)
 My whole sounds most sweetly by sea or by river,
 But at home it is quite the reverse.

12

I am composed of five letters.
 My first is the same as my last.
 My second is the initial of the name of a very old gardener.
 My third you will find in the centre of the largest city in America.
 My fourth is the initial of the name of a man that King David used rather badly.
 My fifth is the same as my first.
 My whole is two monosyllables that publishers often say to their subscribers, and like to have them respond to.

13

Prefix a letter to a Christian name,
 'Twill spell an attribute that few would claim.

14

Entire, I am a reptile. Behead me, and I become an article much used by carpenters. Take away another letter, and I shall not be well.

15

A part of the hand you transpose right,
You'll find it's what you use at night.

16

Entire I am a vegetable. Cut off my tail; and I am a small insect. Put on my tail, and take away my third letter, and I am what gamblers often do.

17

Forwards, backwards, read my name,
In sound and meaning I'm the same.
Infants, on their mother's knee,
Often smile at sight of me.
Add a letter, strange, but true,
A man I then appear in view.

18

What eight words of four letters will resolve themselves into four different words each?

19

I am the name of something felt, but never seen. Take away my third letter, and you have an utensil much used in pastry-cooking. Reverse it, and you have something quite refreshing on summer afternoons. Take away my second, and you have a very important article in a lady's toilet. Take away my first and third, and you have a rather indefinite article.

20

The name of a great city in Europe.

Transpose, I am an adjective of the comparative degree.

Cut off my last two letters, and reverse, I am a preposition.

Drop my first two letters, I am a pronoun.

Leave out my second letter, and transpose, I am a French word signifying sea.

Drop the first and last two letters, I am an interjection.

Drop my third letter and transpose, I am unrefined metal.

21

Entire I am polite. My fifth multiplied by the sum of my second and fourth, produces my first. My second and third multiplied by my fifth, is twice my first.

22

It is a compound word, and belongs to the mineral, and sometimes vegetable kingdom. The whole word is used to contain the first. There are six letters in the first, and two vowels. The last word spelled backward, is a toy that boys play with. The first two letters of the last word is the name of a river in Europe. The first word spelled differently, but pronounced the same, is a substance of which an important article of food is made.

23

Entire I am a bird. Take away my last two, and I am a bird. Behead me and cut off my tail, and I signify perpetuity. Cut off my first two, and I am an exclamation!

24

Complete, I form a rapid view;
 Behead—a weapon next appears;
 Behead again—transpose—and lo!

I now excite the truant's fears.

'Tis something strange, and though there be
 Three letters left, but one you see.

25

What city is there, whose name, if transposed, will give you a name considered very disgraceful in the time of the revolutionary war; transposed again, you have a term applied to one not very proficient.

26

A nice place to stroll in when evenings are fair,
 My letters will make, if arranged with due care ;
 But when they're transposed—Oh ! pray, be discreet,
 Nor be reckless in daring my presence to meet.

27

I am a proper name of two syllables.
 My first syllable is a place where wild beasts may often be found.

My first syllable backward is a boy's nickname.
 My second syllable backward is the worst thing in the world.

28

I am but small, yet when entire,
 Enough to set the world on fire.
 Leave out a letter, and 'tis clear
 I can maintain a herd of deer.
 Leave out another, and you'll find
 I once have saved all human kind.

29

In full dress, I am considered finished ; take off my cap, and I am a number ; put on my cap and take off my shoes,
 and I am a title.

30

I'm seven letters; and I name
 A man, who does high office claim.
 Decapitate me, and I still Survive, you'll find, a tale to tell;
 Again behead, I tell of gladness;
 Again—I oft am cause of sadness;
 Once more, and still I live to say
 What you, no doubt, did yesterday;
 Beheaded yet once more, I name
 Yourself, in tongue of classic fame;
 At last, of all but one bereft,
 That one a Latin word is left.

31

Without me man is incomplete,
 A friend I am to you;
 But for my aid I'm very sure
 That little work you'd do.

But if to what I now possess,
 One letter you should add,
 You'll see what mischief I can do
 Whene'er my master's mad.

And now if you to me should add
 Another letter still,
 'Twill show what pretty ladies oft
 Can do with me at will.

32

I am something which fishermen use. Behead me, and I become food for horses. Put on my head and cut off my tail, and I am a large serpent.

33

Entire, I am one drop of liquid; behead me, and I become a part of the human frame; put on my head and cut off my tail, and I am a plant.

34

My whole is what animals always will be
 When tamed by the power of man ;
 Transpose me, and then with the farmer I'll be,
 When plowing the field with his span.

Again if transposed, on the table I'm placed,
 When at supper he goes home at night ;
 And (if he is married) transpose me again,
 I'm sitting, perhaps, on his right.

35

I am a pronominal adjective ; behead me and I am a personal pronoun ; again behead me and I am a verb.

36

Three letters there are which may be so arranged,
 That three things they can spell you with care,
 A nickname quite common,—what all things must have,—
 And the home of the lion or bear.

37

My whole is a name that belongs to some men,
 And is short, if 'tis not very sweet ;
 Transpose me, and now on the fair sex I'm seen,
 When they're taking a walk in the street.

Transpose me again, and a verb I become,
 Which boys must all do to be men ;
 A third time transpose me, ah! shun me, and run,
 For wretched and sinful I'm then.

38

Pray, discover a part of the human frame,
 Which divided, another will make,
 A member, whose function is also made known,
 If the letters you rightly shall take :
 Again, it will show what another one does,
 And that which is made by a third,
 But each of these members return to my whole,
 (When transposed), which no doubt you have heard.

39

Unbroken I am a term sometimes applied to the atmosphere ; remove my first, and I am a king famed in tragedy ; remove my first and second, I am a part of the human body ; remove my first, second, and third, and I am a city mentioned in the Bible ; remove my first and last, and I am an inclosure.

40

Entire I'm false as false can be,
 And every one should doubt me,
 But without hat and wig, you'll see,
 There's nothing false about me.

41

What preposition by prefixing a letter is what we do every day; by prefixing another, is what we have in summer; by prefixing yet another, is a kind of grain?

42

My whole is in cottage, and palace, and hall,
 And is constantly used by the great and the small,
 Beheaded, it still is attached to a head,
 And of various colors, black, brown, white, or red.
 Behead it again, and all heads would lie low,
 If deprived of its aid, as you probably know.

43

One, two, three, four, are all the same in sound,
 Whatever difference in their sense is found;
 My number one was once performed, you'll say,
 For some you honor, on a joyful day.
 For number two each claims that he contends,
 Who fights another, or himself defends.
 My number three is something I can do,
 And hope the same may be affirmed of you.
 A man of handicraft is number four.
 Now, if you know them all, I'll say no more.

44

Entire I often cause great pain ; beheaded I am boisterous ; curtailed you see a heathen deity ; transposed I describe a course.

45.

What wicked deed is that which, read backward, gives what is generally the cause of it?

46

To a place where the living did all once reside,
Add fifty—be sure that 'tis on the right side ;
You will then see a name which you'll find to belong
To a songster that's famed for melodious song.

47

What two consonants and one vowel can be so arranged as to spell the name of an animal, a name applied to a particular class of men, and a word expressing human ability.

48

Entire, I'm considered rude by some,
Behead me, and a weed I then become,
Exchange my head, and then there will be seen
An animal that boundeth on the green.

Again, if of my head I am bereft,
 A verb is all that you'll discover left ;
 Transpose me now, an organ I shall be,
 That very oft in churches you may see.

49

I am found on the deep where the gallant ship sails,
 Transpose me, I'm perhaps in the hold ;
 Transpose me again, with the cargo I'm placed,
 'Mongst the goods which the artist has sold.

Now change me again,
 And the Bible will say
 How I guided the mariner
 Safe on his way.

50

I am a word of evil import. Without my hat I am almost as bad ; place my wig at my feet, I am no better ; my last two letters make me slightly ill, and with my second, fourth, and fifth letters transposed, I am utterly false.

51

A strong desire to gain my whole
 Has many a politician made,
 More than a yearning in the soul,
 With love of country, I'm afraid ;
 One letter less, and now on me
 The ladies cast their longing eyes,
 Hundreds of dollars, recklessly,
 Are spent for me, which is not wise.
 Of one more letter now bereft,
 ('Tis no more strange than true),
 You'll find exactly one is left,
 Yet, 'tis three fifths of two.

52

When spelled with four letters, I'm solemn, 'tis true ;
 But spell me in five, and you'll know what I do.
 Even change two of these, and no wrong you will find,
 And in six, I'll build wagon or house to your mind.

53

Curtail me once, I am a youth ;
 Behead me once, a snake ;
 Complete I'm often used in truth
 When certain steps you take.

54

Four letters, just, compose my name,
 Read forward, backward, both the same
 Will readily appear ;
 A Prophetess, I stand confess'd,
 Who once the Mediator bless'd,
 With reverential fear.

55

A bird and a sheep, and a yard and a quarter,
 An organ of very great use, I am sure,
 And the very beginning of literature,
 Are the name of many a gentleman's daughter.

56

Ah! wo to him who feels my power!
 A grasping, clutching thing am I,
 And many, in some evil hour,
 Have, by my means, been called to die.

Remove my head, and scarcely less
 Will be the mischief that I make;
 Beware of both, for I confess
 That either will insure an ache.

57

Cut off my head and singular I am;
 Cut off my tail and plural I appear;
 Cut off both head and tail, and strange to say,
 Although my middle's left, there's nothing there!
 What is my head cut off? A sounding sea.
 What is my tail cut off? A roaring river,
 Beneath whose placid waves I peaceful play,
 The parent of soft sounds, though mute forever.

58

It is a compound word, calling to mind social pleasures. The subject of a pretty Scotch song, and the place in the family most missed by the absent. The first four letters form the name of a cruel master. Take my second, third, and fourth, and it is a wicked passion. The last four letters form a part of the animal body. Put the fifth letter after the last three, and you will see a term used among the ancient Romans in regard to time. Transpose the first four, and it means prevailing. Transpose the last three, and, as a noun, it is anxiously watched by the gambler; and, as a verb, puts an end to earthly joys and sorrows. Remove the third letter, and the first, second, and fourth is an exclamation.

59

I am something very beautiful, which you can look at, but never touch: spell me backward, and I do a great deal of mischief.

60

Find your way from the gate to the bower, by keeping the right road, and not jumping over any of the fences.

SOLUTION TO THE PREFACE.

The enigma is of such ancient and respectable origin, that I shall ask no one to excuse me for offering this book to the public. Enigmatical questions are frequent in the Scriptures, and in olden times often contained a great deal of valuable information.

I intend, my dear young friends, to combine instruction with amusement; and do not fear but what my expectations will be sufficiently realized.

Right well, I know, little lads and lasses, you can not fail to be delighted when I am making such efforts in your behalf; so, heartily shaking you all by the hand,

I remain,

Yours truly,

SANTA CLAUS

SOLUTIONS TO THE PUZZLES.

1. Mimic.
2. Make no friendship with an envious man.
3. Bees put by honey to use in winter.
4. Beware of small expenses, a little leak will sink a ship.
5. Isaiah Bebee, you are too cross, and your ideas are too empty to amuse any one; you are too epicurean to exercise your energies; nothing excuses, nothing extenuates your excesses, for you ought to be wiser.
6. Opium and beer, effeminacy and tears, are usually enemies to energy, and ought to be especially odious to you, dear Ellen.
7. Oh! Emily, benign and effeminate, before you extenuate any excess, see a wise Deity.
8. Our own caprice is more extravagant than the caprice of fortune.
9. FIVE.—V.
10. Cicero's orations are superior to any orations of other Roman orators extant.
11. Cow.
12. Mandate.
13. Civil.
14. II (Two I's.—H. A. X. V.)
15. In every land and clime I may be found.
In air, in water, also under ground;
Of various sorts I am, and various hues,
Of various kinds of brown, and various blues;
I'm sometimes black or gray, and sometimes red:
You'll surely find me out from what I've said.
One other hint to aid you in your guess:
Without me beauty's self were valueless. (The eye.)
16. Perverse—preserve.
17. Fiddle. (Take V from FIVE, and insert DDL.)
18. A Chinese.
19. By gently and frequently scratching the table-cloth within three or four inches of the tumbler, the coin will creep from under.

20. Come ye ingenious ones, this riddle guess,
It is not difficult, you will confess.
What is that number which, if you divide,
You then will nothing leave on either side?
(The figure 8, divided laterally.)
21. When one will not, two can not quarrel.
22. A great many of our difficulties may be overcome by assiduity and proper diligence. Mischief lurks under dissimulation.
23. Draw a horizontal line from the shoulders of one dog to the tail of the other, and from the fore legs of one to the hind legs of the other.
24. Hasten. (a, an, hat, he, neat, eat, then, at, than ah!) There are other words out of which may be made all the parts of speech.

26. Comic.
27. Clod.
28. Ere long expect a great overturning and uprising in Europe.
29. Dim.
30. Og.
31. Ye clever knowing ones read me aright,
And bring my subtle meaning into light.
'Twill need some patience, perseverance, tact,
To set my dislocations—that's a fact.
32. Why tedious.
33. Little more than kin, and less than kind.
34. Stop, reader, here, and deign to look
On one without a name,
- Ne'er entered on the ample book
Of fortune or of fame.
35. Never put off till to-morrow what can be done to-day.
36. With one cut take off the toe, which will leave three pieces of paper; place these one upon another, and again cut them through.
37. Research.
38. A SMART REPARTEE.
Cries Sylvia to a reverend dean,
What reason can be given,
Since marriage is a holy thing,
That there is none in heaven?
There are no women, he replied.
She quick returns the jest,
Women there are, but I'm afraid
They can not find a priest.
39. Handsome is that handsome does.
40. Despair blunts the edge of industry.
41. By forgetfulness of injuries, we show ourselves superior to them.
