In þe kyrke of Westmýnstere, at þe abbaý sollempnelý, þe bisshop of Canterbere, Robert of Kilwardebý, Corouned Edward þore biforn alle þe clergý,
² & dame Helianore corouned quene & lady.
Was neuer at Saynt Denýs feste holden more hy,
Ne was of more pris, ne serued so redý.
Was neuer prince, I wene, þat I writen of fond,
More had treie & tene, þan he had for his lond.
In Scotlond & in Wales, in Gasconie also,
If ze liste alle þe tales, þis storic tellis zow to.
Praš we alle to God of mýght, & his modere Marie, Grante him conquere his right Gascoýne & Normundie, þat þe kýng of France chalanges falsly.
Help him to þat chance moder of mercý,
& Thomas þe martire, St. Jon of Beuerle,

THE next zere folowand of Edward coronment, Leulyn of Walsland in to France he sent,
 þe Mountfort douhter to wedde, hir frendes alle consent, Almerik hir ledde, to schip now er þei went.
 Now þei saile & rowe to Wales to Leulyns,
 A burgeis of Bristowe charged was with wynes,
 He ouertoke þer schip, & asked wheþen þei ware ?
 He said, with kyng Philip to Wales wild þei fare.
 What did þis burgeis? desturbed his wending, þe may & hir herneis did led vnto þe kyng.
 þe mayden Edward toke, als he was fulle curteys,
 In saufte did hir loke, & þanked þe burgeis.

¶ Whan Leulyn herd say, to werre sone he bigan,
 For tene he wende to deie, þat taken was his lemman.

Edward wex fulle grim, whan he wist he was risen.
 Sone he hasted him, to mak þam alle ogrisen.
 þe Walssh wer alle daȝ slayn, now rewes þam þer res, & Leulȝn is fulle faȝn, to pray Edward for pes, Gȝues Edward for his trespas fifti þousand mark, & þer tillle bonden was with scrite & oth fulle stark,
 To com tuȝs in þe zere vnto his parlement.
 þe maȝ oȝ þis manere with Leulȝn home scho went,
 & held his heritage in pes as he did ore,
 Mad was þe mariage at Snowdon biside Bangore.

IN þe zere secunde after his corounment,
 New statute þei fonde, to Westmȝnstere þei ment.
 þe nex Paske folowand Edward sent his brefe
 To Leulȝn for his land, to com als tillle his chese.
 Leulȝn had despite of Edward's sonde,
 Bot werred also tite oȝ him with nȝth & onde.
 Edward raised scheld, after his men alle sent,
 þat seruise of him held, manly tillle him went,
 & ran on Sir Leulȝn, & alle his folk him with,
 & maugre boþe his brȝn was faȝn to com to grith.
 Daud at þat while was with Edward þe kyng, git auanced he þat file vntille a faire þing.

An ACCOUNT
Of the Hospital of
St. MARY MAGDALEN
Near SCROBY
NOTTINGHAMSHIRE,

By JOHN SLACKE,
Master of that Hospital.

From a MS. in the Hands of THOMAS FREWIN, of LINCOLN'S-Inn, Esq;

Dr. THOROTON's Antiquities of NOTTINGHAMSHIRE, Lond. 1677. fol. pag. 478.

THE Moretons did found an Hospital in the uttermost edge of the Parish [of Hartworth in Nottinghamshire] near Bautrey Town in Yorkshire, to which there is also a Chapel yet standing, wherein they of the Family have used to be buried, and amongst the rest there lies Katherin (daughter of John Boun, Esquire, by his first wife, and so) half sister of Gilbert Boun, Sergeant at Law, who was widow of George Moreton, elder brother of the before named Robert [Moreton,] who sold Hartworth [to Mr. William Saunderson,] which George died long before the said Anthony [Moreton] his father, [who paid in Queen Elizabeth's time 3 s. 4 d. for half a Knight's Fee in Hartworth, (sometime Henry Biset's) and wasted the Estate.] These Moretons bore Quarterly Gules and Ermine, the first and last charged with each a Goate's Head Erased Arg.

To the most Reverend Father in God,
 Richard, by the ¹ Devine Providence of God now Lord Archbp. of Yorke, his Grace, Primate of England and ² Metropolitane,
 John Slacke, Master of that poore Hospitall of Saint Mary Magdalen juxta Bawtrie, wisheth all happiness and eternall blessed-nes.

I was your Grace's speciall charge att Bawtrie, that I should make a Booke, and therin sett downe
 the true state of that Hospitall, viz.

1. Who was the Founder?
2. For whome it was founded?
3. What Maintenance doth belonge thereunto?

4. Who is Patron thereof?

5. How, and by whome, it was passed as a Concealment, and given to Hugh Millar, Foot-man to the late Queene Elizabeth of famous memory, and so passed under the Great Seale?

6. How, and by whome, it was reversed, uppon a solemne hearinge in the xchecquer, uppon¹ aincient Evidences and good Testemony, before the Lord Burley then Lord Treasurer, and the Barrons there, by the meanes of ² John, late Archbyshop of Yorke, and John Cooper, then Master, and Predecessor, before me, of that Hospital?

It was decreed, that the Graunt from the late Queene Elizabeth to her servant, Hugh Myller, should be reversed, and allso it was decreed, that that Hospitall should continue as in former tyme, as more at large may, and doth, appeare by the said Decree, examined by Thomas Fanshaw, her Majestie's Remembrancer in the xchecquer.

Yet after the death of Mr. Cooper, my Predecessor, it plesed the Lord Archbyshop³ Tobie, to collate that Hospitall on me John Slacke, but was resisted in the Possession by Thomas Robinson, Thomas Shorte, John Noble, John Bradley, with others, who had formerly combyned with James Brewster, late Master there, but was deprived from that Hospitall, in regard of Combination and Concealment. I repayred to Mr. Houlder, Prebend of Suthwell and Executor to Mr. Cooper, with whome I found out these Pleadings and the Decree; and some from Anthony Morton, Esq;. Thereuppon I exhibited a Bill against those, who opposed me in the ¹ Pocession, and, uppon a Motion, repeatinge the Decree, formerly made at the hearinge in the chequer, there was granted a Subpæna, to cause them to shew good cause, why the Possessions and Decree, formerly made and established, should not continue. And, upon their Answer, in Hillarie terme, octavo Jacobi, in the chequer Chamber, by Sir Laurence Tanfield Lord chiefe Barron, and the rest of the Barrons, it was there decreed againe, that the former Decree should stand, and is ordered, that both my selfe, and my Successors there after me, should quietly enjoy the same; and for that purpose the Courte granted an Injunction against any that should molest me. Lastly, the Courte did enjoyne the Auditor and Receiver for Yorkeshiire, to pay unto me such Pensions, as were arreared and stayed in his hands, as by the said Decree, entred into this Booke, it doth appeare. So that this Booke may give both Directions and Instructions, ² of any Question should hereafter arise concerninge the Premisses. And thus I take my leave from Cantley the 17th of August 1635.

At your Grace's Command

Concerninge the Founder.

IT doth appeare to be Robert Morton of Bawtrie, Esqr. who founded the Chappell, the Mansion-Howse for the Maister of that Hospitall, with other Howses as a Barne of fower Bayes, a Stable, a Dove-coate, and a Gate-howse, but most of them ruined, defaced, and pulled downe, and carried away, by Thomas Robinson, Thomas Short, and the rest, who combyned in the Concealement.

That there belongeth to the said Hospitall, wherein it standeth, a Close, also a Close-More in Scatworth carr, called Preist-Close, one other Close, called Lane-end-Close, with 15 Roods of Meddow in Scroobie Meddowes, all which were the Gift of the Founder.

It doth, moreover, appeare, that this Roberte Morton gave unto the Prior and ¹ Coment of St. Oswauld 250 l. who, to gratifie that Gift, gave unto the Master of St. Marie Magdalen, then founded by Roberte Morton, eight Markes, as appereth by the Indenture of the

And there is xxvi s. viii d. to be paid unto the Hospitall by the Lord Archbishop for the tyme beinge, as appeareth by an Abstract of the Letters Pattents, which Robert late Archbishop of Yorke purchased from King Edward the sixt, concerning the Mannor of Strooby, with thappurtenances, by meanes of which Purchase the Lord Archbishop of Yorke holdeth the same Manor; In which Purchase the Lord Archbishop doth take upon him, and for this, who shall hold the same Mannor after him, to discharge the saide Kinge of these Purchasses, which, att the day of the Purchase, they were charged with, and payed the same.

The Letters Pattents beare date the 27th of May, anno septimo Edwardi sexti, as appeareth upon Record in the Rolls, us there enrolled.

Secondly, for what poore?

I find it was founded for two poore Widdowes, and such are to be placed successively, and there is given, by your Grace's Directions, to either of them xx s. yearly.

Thirdly, all the Profitts cominge to the Master, both by Pensions and Rents, are xiiii l. x s.

Fourthly, the Patron of the Hospitall, is the Lord Archbishop of Yorke, for the time beinge, and sede vacante the Kinge.

I find a Bill of Remembrance in these Words:

“ This Bill made the xiith. day of July, anno xix^o.

Newly found out near CONQUEST in SOMMERSETT, supposed to be the place where their Conquest of BRITAIN was completed :

By Philantiquarius Britannicus.

IN that most criticall year of our Lord 1666. two large earthen Pitchers, full of Roman Medalls, each 80l. Troy weight, were diged up by Labourers with Mattocks in ploughed fields, the one in Laurence Uddyard, the other within the Parish of Stogumber adjoyning, and seeing that ¹ Nummus est rei certissimus testis, I can think no other, but that the resurrection of so much of such ancient coyne, so neare the same time and place, was, by speciall providence, to mind us (of these parts) of some memorable thing, or things, done hereabouts, now forgotten, and, therefore, I having thus long expected, shall now endeavour to extract, or pumpe out, the interpretation of this riddle, out of the mouth, or pen, of some neighbourne Antiquarie, by declaring this my conjecture, (viz.) That in some place of the valley, that extends, on the West side of Quantocke, from Taunton to Liddyard, Stogumber and Watchett, the Romans completed the conquest of so much of Britaine, as is now called England, (Wales and Scotland being then unattempted by them,) and that the Romans throughout many ages afterward continued a Legion, or part of one, here, which they paid with such money as this, to prevent insurrection by Land, and invasion by Sea; for demonstration whereof, it will be requisite, in the first place, to goe backe, and fetch my force as farr as from Julius Cæsar, &c. that I may run and leape forward the more vigorously. Julius Cæsar having once and againe audaciously ¹ envaded, and as shamefully evaded, Britaine, thereby forfeited his Triumphant Motto ² Veni, vidi, vici, was stigmatized with Venit, vidit, fugit, and scoffed at, by one of his own Poëts, with a Territa quaesitis ostendit terga Britannis. So that now he was necessitated to draw up all his forces into a fleete of 800. saile, and therewith envaded ³ Britaine a third time, even to vindicate his honour, which lay bleeding in the dust amongst his late slaughtered souldiers; and now

Antiquity is best illustrated by inhabitants, who have opportunities to survey all circumstances of time, place and persons,

Parturiunt montes, natusque est ridiculus mus:
A mouse instead of a Mount,

Kent, and a little more, subdued, and he return'd. After Julius Cæsar came Octavius Augustus in his place, and he, being well contented with what his predecessor had wonne, lived and died in peace. After him rose up Tiberius Cæsar, which was soe over powred with civill Warres, that he had no opportunity to make any attempt on Britaine. And after him Caligula Cæsar; and he had a great minde to Britaine, but would not adventure:

Catus vult pisces, sed non vult tangere lympham.

He ¹ came to Calice, where he looked over the Sea on Britaine, and put his Army in batalia on the Shore, in a braveado of a seeming attempt against Britaine. At an ebbing Sea, he commanded the Souldiers, upon the Sound of a charge, to fill their bosomes and helmetts with Shells, as Spoiles of the British Sea, whilst he, and some select friends, lanced out a little in their Gallies, and, to perpetuate the memory of this vaine glorious, or rather ridiculous, action, he built ² upon the shore, altissimam turrim, since called Britain House, (i. e.) Britains house, appointing it for a Sea Mark with Fire on the topp by night, in imitation of that ³ Phares at the Port of Alexandria.

After Caligula rose Claudius Cæsar, who, by the instigation of Bericus a banished Britain, first sent Plautius with an armie into Brittain; after him, he himself and Ostorius Scapula his Proprætor, with more and more forces, with which they subdued the greater part of the Island, which they could never have done, had the British petty Kings continued in such association, as they did under their Monarch Cassibellaunus in Julius Cæsar's time; but ¹ Dum pugnant singuli, vincuntur universi. And the Cantii, ² Trinobantes, Attrebatii, Regni, Dobuni, ³ Cattieuclani, Coritani, Cornavii, Brigantes, &c. being gained, some by the Romane sword, some by unvoluntarie Submission; there remained but two Provinces (of all now called England) unconquered, (viz.) the Iceni and the Cangi; and the Iceni being first subdued, they came in the last place to the Cangi of Somersett, and conquered them also in this valley aforesaid. So that if we can trace this Roman Army by seaven Footstepps, which are left behind it, we may, at length, find them conquering at Conquest, and afterward quartering in the vally betweene Taunton and Watthett. The first of the seaven Footstepps of this conquering Armie is, according to Tacitus⁴, decernable in the word Iceni, (i. e.) the inhabitants of Norfolk, Suffolke, Cambridge shire and Huntington shire, who haveing submitted to the Romans formerly, had now rebelled, but they, and their Confederates of the⁵ adjoynind provinces, being subdued, all that part of the Iland submitted, and the Roman armie *ductus*⁶ est in Cangos alias Gangos, which was their second Footsteppe*, Cangi, (i. e.) the inhabitants of Somersett, according to Mr. Camden, instanceing in

And these 15 Shadowes of the Cangi in Sommersett, and the confines thereof, are the more demonstrative of the old Cangies habitation therein, upon farther consideration of this, that there is no Towne nor Parrish (besides those instanced) in Devon, Dorsett, Gloucester, or Wilts, that hath the Syllable, Caun, Can or Cang in it, but only ¹ Caune in Wiltshire, whose right name is Caln, though euphonied into Cane, because l ante n quiescit. The ancient inhabitants, therefore, of Somersett being called Cangi, it will be necessary to know why so called. I con-

1. conjecture at two reasons. First their Musick and singing to their instruments of Musick. For caineg, Canuyn and gan are Synonimicalls, signifying Canticum Organi musici, and the ² British Can Wllt gon henamt intimates soe (i. e.) the song, hush or silence is the song of old age, and the word Cangi, which seems to me to be vox à sono, intimates, that the old inhabitants of this County were notably addicted to Canging and twanging on their British harps, as their offspring in Wales are still ³ Canutelin, to sing to the harp, whilst their herds and their flocks, feeding on their rich meadows and ⁴ moores, maintained their health, and mirth, without any such tilling and toying, and as their neighbouring ⁵ Dunstun & Boduni endured, and upon that account the moderne Brittaines also of Wales, call Somersett Glad-her-haf (i. e.)

merrie Sommerfeld to this day. The inhabitants of Somerset were called Cangi, merry and musicall, from their worshipping the image of Apollo, or Sol their God of Musick, with his harp in his hand, especially in Bath their Metropolis, and being the Author of heate and healing, and consequently of Mirth and Gladness, by the Bath Waters, which were therefore termed Aquæ Solis by the Romans, and the People of the City and County Somersettenses, because l ante m quiescit, as Samon not Salmon. Somersettenses, (i. e.) Inhabitants of, or belonging to, the Sun-poole, as the Anglo-Saxons for the same reasons esteemed them Sun-mer-Settan, inhabitants of the Sun-Poole, though, for easines in pronunciation, they spake them Summersett people. But neither the Romans nor Saxons called them so from that Town neare Ibelchester, whose ^{*} ancient and right Name is Sumurton, from *Flumurton*³, (i. e.) runing Poole-ton, but from Aqua Solis, Sol-merton, Sunnerton, or Sun-poole Towne or Citie of Bathe, and for this reason the Countie was antiently called both Provincia Somersettensis & Bathoniensis, & Westmonasteriensis saith⁴ that, Anno Domini 586. Reges West Saxonum dominabantur in provinciis Berren, (i. e.) Dorsetensi, Sutheriensi, Wiltoniensi, Sarisberiensis & Bathoniensi. Thus may we conjecture by the harmonious consent of these musicall names, Cangi Glad-rr-haf, Aquæ Solis, Summersett, Sunpoole-ton, how merily and melodiously the

Cangi of this Countie past their time, till the Roman Armie rushed in among them, like a sudden and violent storme, and put all their canging and twaning, canting and chanting, quite out of tune, and turned all their Mirth and Gladness into Sorrow and Sadness, battering downe and consuming their most antient Metropolis Bath, then called ¹ Caer Badon, Caer Brand the burning Citie ², yr rnaaint Caer ³, the first place being nearest to the Iceni, from which the Romans came, and then as they marched Westward ⁴ vastati agri prædæ passim auctæ, they wasted and plundered the Country, non ausis vicem hostibus, the Cangi not daring to shew themselves in the Field; but this must be taken with a Limitation thus, they durst not raise an Armie and fight the Romans at their first entrance into their borders, but that they did (though in vaine) afterward, when they came neere ⁴ Ōchic hole upon Mendyppe, will clearly appear by the third Footstepp, which this Roman Armie left behind it, (viz.) a longe Plate of Lead, plowed up neere Ōchic Holt in the Reighne of King Henry the Eighth, having this Inscription ⁵:

Of their Quartering in Ochie Hole, and consequently in other like Dens and Caves, as their mountainous military Mansions. For that Cave, viz. Ochie Hole, was most antiently called Chederne Hole, (i. e.) the valiant Souldiers hole, as Britaine it self was called Kynis y Chedern, *Insula fortium*¹. 1.

Of their fighting in the Word Chedder, being pronounced as Kakdder, rectius Cader, (i. e.) Battle Fild, the Name of a Parish neare Chederne Hole, which, I suppose, is borrowed from that adjoining Part of Hendyp, where the Battle was fought. 2.

Of the Buriall of so many of the Britans, as were there and then slain in that great number of Burrowes, or Burie-Hills, vulgò Burialls, in and neare the said Chedder or Battlefield. 3.

The 4th. Footstepp of this Conquering Armie of Claudius is Cannington Hundred, which was then called² Cangi, not so much in regard of the Natives thereof, as in respect of the Multitude of the Cangi of the whole County coming thither for Shelter, and to make resistance, it being secured on all Sides by Sea, Rivers and Mountaines, and by a large steepe Mount, fortified round the Toppe with Dyke and Rampire, in Canington Parke, and this was the old British Canington, (i. e.) the Canges Vally Towne, and by that Name distinguisht from 4.

such hilly Towns as Donsburte Castle, &c. which were tonned, tynd or fortified with militarie Works also, but that was Donsboro (i. e.) Dounsboro, this Canington. And that the Roman Armie made their fourth Stepp hither, will appear by the very words of Tacitus. Jam¹ ventum haud procul à mare, judiciously translated by Anonimus, ²*how the Romane Armie came near the Sea Coasts*, which must be as far West as Stepp Holmes and the River Parret. For there, and not before it comes thither, the Severne is called the Sea, and so far Eastward doth the Hundred of Canington extend also; and whereas he saith the Army came near the Sea Coast, not to the Sea Coast it selfe, which is Williton Hundred:

5. The 5th. Stepp of the Roman Armie was ³*ad locum, qui aspicit Hyberniam*, and that must be the Toppe of Quantocke, rectius seems ⁴*Cangi-toch*, (i. e.) the Caves of the Cangi, in which, it seems, some of the Cangi dwelt, as other in Ochte-Hole, &c. or rather they came to the Toppe of the Toppe or highest Knoll of Cantoch, (viz.) *Cotherston hill*⁵, rectius Cotherston-hill, (i. e.) Knowing or Kening Towne hill, from a becken, or beacon, standing on the Toppe of it. For the Britans were the Erectors of Beacons ever since the Britons time, where an Hole through a Poste was their Prospective Glass, by which ⁶*occulatissimus* might aspicere, though not perspicere, Hyberniam, over the interjacent Hills, at least so farre towards it as the eye of Man can kenne.

¹ Tac. Lib. 12^o. Ann. ²F. now. H. ³Tacit. ibid. ⁴For there is no Q in the British Alphabet. ⁵Saxon's Map. Coth and tutch signify knowing, and keningasuntough signifyes unknowing & obscure. ⁶Sic. H.

The 6th. Stepp of this conquering Armie I take to be 6. Conquest, two Miles Southwest from Cothelston's hill, where I shall endeavour to demonstrate,

1. That the said Armie came to this Conquest.
2. That here was a Conquest.
3. That it was a Roman Conquest.
4. It was a Roman Conquest over the Britans.
5. That the Roman Conquest was made by Claudius Cæsar.
6. That it was a very great Conquest or Victorie.

1. First, that the Romane Armie might easily come to Conquest being but two Miles, yea they must come thither, or return back againe ¹ re infecta. For there was no Food or Accomodation for Man nor Horse on the top of Cantock.

2. Here was a Conquest or Victorie; how'elce could the place obtaine such a Name, if here had been no such thing? Is there, or ever was, any man so madd, or foolish, to call his Hill or Field by the name of Conquest, where there was never any Battle known or heard off?

3. That this was a Roman Conquest may be conjectured, first from the Romane Name ² thereof Conquestus, and ³ Conquestam, and the reward of a Roman Conquerour, implicately contained in the Cognomen of the ⁴ adjoining parrish Laurence Lydiard, perhaps anciently Laurus Lydiard ⁵, holding forth the Laurell or Laurell crowne, the reward of a Roman Conquerour.

¹ Refecta MS. H. ² Dic. Fra. Goldm. ³ F. Conquestum. H. ⁴ Sic. H. ⁵ I have been informed, that that was the ancient name.

4. This was a Roman Conquest over Cangi, and it could be no other. For the Saxons compleated their conquest at ¹ Deharam in Gloucester-shire, the Deanes theirs at Bathe, and the Normans theirs at Battle Abby in Sussex. The Cangi did ² agmen carpere, (i. e.) select and collect a great multitude of the ablest of their militia against the Romanes (according to my conjecture) into the toppe of Porton Hill, within a Mile of Conquest, fortified it with a very strong Dike and Rampire, made a Sallieport, and a broad deep Avenue on the North side of the Hill, extending directly towards Conquest, by which they might invisibly and suddenly issue out, and fall on the Romans there at their pleasure. But it seems, all this availed them nothing. For a tradition of the Nortonians intimates, that they were miserably routed, (viz.) that a very great Heap of dead Mens Bodies lay unburied at the Foot of the said Hill, of whose Corruption a Serpent was generated ³, which devoured living Men, and it seems that their Ancestors believed this as their Creed, in the Place whereof, in the Rood Loft in their Church, the Effigies of this Serpent is curiously carved, and painted, as having ⁴ the nether Parts of a Man to the Navell, the Man lifting up his Hands and Eyes to Heaven, and with open Mouth crying out for Help. But

But yet this story may intimate thus much in generall, that there was a great Battel and Slaught, that some monstrous creature (though not so great) was generated of the Corruption of the slaine, (Historie ¹ and Experience giving instances of the like:) and although in this Climate not so great as reported, yet great enough to amplify this great Conquest over the Cangi.

5th. That this Conquest over the Cangi was made by Claudius Cæsar, or his Proprætor, Anno Domini 50. For, beside that Trophie found neare Dchie Hole, ² Mr. Cambden speakes of another, much like the former, which, we suppose, was erected in, or near, Canington Hundred, which extends within 2 or 3 Miles of Conquest, saying, Quid si de Cangis, minori inter Belgas ³ nostras popello, constitutum hoc fuisse Trophæum dixero ⁴ But let Claudius Cæsar speke for himselfe in this Trophie:

peared, we have enough of his Coynes found in the two Pitchers neere Conquest, to prove him the Conquerour, and describe divers things considerable both in himself and his Souldiers. The most antient and greater part of these Coynes were of Claudius Cæsar, having on the one side his Image and this Circumscription, (viz.) Imp Claudius Aug: and some Imp Claudius P F Augustus, the godly and happy Emperor Claudius Augustus, and on the other side certaine Hieroglyphicall Images, representing some Heroicall qualifications of him, as he was a conquering Emperour, explaind by these and the like circumscribed sentences: Fælicitas Augusti: or, Providentia Augusti. some having the Image of Victorie, offering a Lawrell Crowne to Claudius Cæsar, and saying Victori Augusto; and some offering up a Lawrell Crowne Jovi Victori, as if Jupiter the Conqueror had been a Juvans Pater to Claudius in his Conquest. therefore a Lawrell Crowne presented to him in this Place, thence called Can, and some other of the Coynes as they had such Image and circumscriptions aforesaid on the one Side, so on the other certaine Images representative of some military vertue, requisite in conquering Souldiers, interpreted by these and the like Sentences circumscribed, fides Militum; Spes Militum; Concordia Militum; fortitudo Militum, &c.

1. 6. That this was a very great Victorie may appear by the common fame thereof, reporting, that a very great Battle was fought, and Victorie obtained there, although I could never hear of any Instances of the particulars from the inhabitants by whome, when, how &c. But the

For although Tacitus saith, ortæ apud Brigantes ³ discordiæ retraxere ducem, certaine tumoult, sprang up among the Brigantes of Yorkshire, drew back the Generall, yet he saith not, and his whole Armie, he was so sensible (no doubt) of the late Rebellion of the Iceni, and now again of the Brigantes, that he would leave a sufficient guard behind him, and, therefore, this Vale is by Synecdoche (the greater part of the whole) called Lyddiard ⁴, rectius ℒ Lyddiard, (i. e.) the green Vale, where the gaurding Armie was. Caer, from heb. Gadher, (i.) murus, doth compare it to a walled Citie. So that if the Roman Souldiers had all these, and many more, Heards, Cards, Heads, Torrs, Burrows and Castles, to defend themselves and the Countrie, and the Command of the Britons as their Slaves, ¹ to make what more, or other, militarie workes they please, and doe what elce they required, could they wish, or desire, any thing more for their accommodation? yes Money, the Nerves of War; and Money enough and enough they had too out of their two Allwars, ² (i.) purses, Mints or Treasuries amidst the Guards and Fortifications aforesaid. the one, which it seems was the greater, now written Aller, near Archyard, the other Bicnaller, rectius Bychanallwar, (i. e.) Smaller Mint or Treasure, and it seems that these Mints and Treasuries did so much superabound, that they were faine to burie one of the said Pitchers of Money within a Furlong of Allwer, viz. at Capton, and the other at Uwydiard the next Parish; besides, perhaps, some hundreds, yea thousands, of such vessels full else where, which never did, or shall, come to light; and although some of the Money might be coyned farr from hence, yet some other Peices must needs be coyned thereabout, as may be inferred from a thinne superfigies, or rather some light Tincture on them, shining as if they had been silvered over, but if put into a Purse amongst other Money, and carried about a few houres, the said Superfigies vanished. For which reason I conceiue it could not be brought from farr, and according to probability from one of the said Allwrgs of these Coynes.

The most antient of these Coynes were sorts of Claudius Cæsar's, and as they demonstrate him to be the Conquerour of the Cangi at Conquest, so the rest, Domitianus, Domitianus, Trajanus, Antoninus, Victorinus, Septimius Severus, Tacitus, Galienus, Aurelius, Aurelianus, Tetricus, Quintillus, Posthumus &c. yea almost all the Successors of Claudius about 500. Years, 'till the Romanes left this Iland, declare, that in these Maritime Parts, lying low, open and easie for Invasion, the Romanes kept guard, to prevent Rebellions and Invasions, and paid them with such Coynes as this, which was hid by them in such Vessels when they were all to returne home to defend their own native Country, but never returned to take them up. It is true, that in ancient Ages of the World, before the Invention of Money, Men were all for bartering of Commodities, as ¹ Diodeme ² armour was valued at 10 Cowes, and Glaucus his Golden Armour at 100. but I read of no Money, 'till Abraham ³ paid 400. Shekles for a burying Place. The old Britons ⁴ used Iron Rings and Plates for Money. The Græcians made a Law for the using of Money, calling it ⁵ νόμισμα, ἀπὸ τοῦ νόμου, the Latines, pecuniam, à pecu, (the Image ⁶ Cow ⁷ being stamped on it,) & monetam, from ⁸ μένω to ⁹ remaine, meinument & monument amongst such as used it. The Hebrews called it ἤαῃῃ, the French Mo- noy, the Spaniard Moneda, the Germans Müniz, the Anglo-Saxon ¹ Mynet, unde mīnt, and so regina pecunia Mundi. But we must returne to the Roman Money, and speke a little of the Valuation thereof, and so leave it. The ancient Roman Coyne ² was called As, (not quasi, but) quia æs. At first an As consisted of a full Pound Weight. Afterward, in the Punick Warr, by reason of the scarcity of Money, they made of every Pound of Brass 6 of the larger Coynces, each valuing as that one at first. In the second Punick Warr 12 made of every Pound, and afterwards 24 of a Pound, of which six are our largest ³ Medalls, and made for honour and to continue the memorie of Princes, yet they were currant as the smaller, though all the same value, (viz.) an halfe penny farthing a peece, ye ten of them were the price of a sheepe, and ⁴ an 100 the price of an ox. The next probable argument, to prove, that the ⁵ maritime Parts were gaurded by the Romans, as aforesaid, is, that they were as carefull to keep and preserve what they had conquered, as industrious to conquer, according to their maxime:

Non minor est virtus, quàm quætere, parta tueri.

Catch is a good dog, but hold fast is a better.

And, therefore, when they had conquered all Britaine, Antoninus, who ⁶ began to rule as Emperor ⁷ about 40 years after Claudius, divided, or caused to be divided, all Britaine into 16. Iters or Itineraries, each consisting of (12 and between that and 20) Mansions or Stations,

(i. e.) encamping Places, fortified with Dyke and Rampire, on the toppe of high and steepe Hills, the Remaynes whereof are extant in many Places to this day. And the three Legions, (i. e.) about 1800 Romans Souldiers, were distributed amongst these Itineraries and Mansions, according to their discretion, to prevent Insurrections and Invasions. 6 of these Mansions (with their subservient militarie Fortifications) were designed to guard the South Sea Coasts of this West Part of Britaine, (viz.) *Isca*² Danmoriorum, now Exeter, ³ Moridum now Seaton, Durnovaria now Dorchester, Vindogladia now Winburne, Regnum now Ringwood, and Clausentum now Southampton. So likewise there were 7 more of those Mansions to secure the South part of Wales against the Severne, as Abone now Avington, Venta Silurum now Caerwent, ⁴ Esca Legionum now Caerleon, Bovium now Boverton, Nedus now Neath, Leucarum now Loghor, and ⁵ Maridunum now Caermarthen. and can any man be so void of reason, as to think, that both those Sea Coasts ought so much to be guarded and reguarded, and that this Sea Coast being either land, and of greater consequence to the Iland, should be altogether slighted? No. For although Antoninus his Itineraries⁶ mentions no mansions of his, or North Sea Coast, yet⁷ there were many such fortified Places hereabout, may be conjectured by the great multitude of Antoninus Coynes⁸ in the Pictures, intimating the multitude of Souldiers belonging to them, which were to receive them as their pay in these parts.

1. To these ¹ these may be added these 3 more Arguments briefly. First, that, during the whole time long of the Romans dominion here, there was never any Invasion of these maritime Parts, because, it seems, it was known how well they were fortyfied at that time. But shortly after the Romanes had relinquished Britaine, (viz.) in the time of the Anglo-Saxons, these maritime Parts were invaded 8 times. But the Natives, in all the invasions, stoutly defended themselves, and destroyed them which invaded them, and this they did by the help of the King's Armie, or Parties of the same, which was divided, in Australi ² parte of the Seaverne, opportuna per loca, and the opportuna per loca, I conceive, were those, and the like Gards, Heads, Torrs, Burrowes and Castles aforesaid. And this will more clearly appear by the circumstances of the said 8 Invasions and Repulses, as they are described by authentick Historians, some of them living and writing in, and some shortly after, the time these things were done. Seaven of the 8 Invasions on these maritime Parts were made some in the Reigne of King ³ Alfred, and the rest betwene that time and the Norman Conquest, which was Anno Domini 1066. And, therefore, it will be requisite to declare the condition of King Alfred and this Kingdome, as it was in the beginning of his Reigne, for the better understanding of these Invasions and Repulses afterward.

The Danes having subdued the greater part of this Kingdome, before the beginning of King Alfred's reign, the first nine years thereof he strove, with that little power left him, to recover from them all that was left, but all in vaine. For they gained still more and more from him, till they had ¹ left him no more but the three Counties, Sommersett, Wiltshire and Hampshire, and those too fide ² vigentes; and now they brought an innumerable multitude of their heathonish nation, under 3 more of their Kings, to subdue and possess this small remnant, and quartered and rendevouzed at, and about, Chyppnam neare Bath, and when none could resist them, they took all for their owne, whilst some of the Natives fled out of the Kingdome, some into deserts and mountains, rocks and dennes, &c. yea the King himself was necessitated to fly for refuge, with a few of his nobles, into the Isle of ³ Athelney, near Burrow bridge Sommersett, where he lived secretly by fishing and fowling, whilst he quartered with a swineheard in that inaccessible moorish place, waiting for better times, where, for his recreation, having obtained dexteritie in the art of jugling, he under the disguise of a jugler, adventured to the Camp of the Deanes, and insinuated first with the Souldiers, and then into their King's presence, where having observed their security, and learned such of their counsel, he secretly returned to his homely quarters, wherein having suddenly and covertly raised a considerable power in the County of Sommersett, he marched then to ⁴ Selwood in the East of that County, and from thence, as out of an Ambush, suddenly fell on the Deanes, and routed them at Edindon in the West of Wiltshire, and pursued them usque ad firmitatem suam, (i. e.) some fortified place of theirs, where when he had besieged them 14 dayes, they were constrayned, *throug hunger and cold, to yeild themselves up to his mercy, give pledges, swear they would depart the Kingdome, and promised ¹that¹ their chiefest King Gudn, *aliàs Guthrum*², should be baptized a Christian, who shortly after, with 30 of his noble men, came to King Alfred, at A: lere (i. e.) Alle, near Athelney, and were all baptized accordingly, King Alfred himself being ³Gurmund's Godfather, and named him Æthelstane, (i. e.) Royal or precious Stone, and Alfred having feasted him there 12 dayes, dismissed him with many rich presents. King Alfred having thus, by his Wisdome, Valour and Mercy, recovered the greater part of the Kingdome, yet some of the Deanes, which were still left in the Kingdome, conspiring, with others, which still swarmeing (as out of an hive) out of Denmarke, made Invasions upon Invasions, sometimes in one place, sometimes in another, and particularly in 8 places of the maritime Coasts aforesaid.

1. The first invasion of the Deanes in these Coasts was Buttendune, ⁴now Witsham on Seaverne, a little Eastward of Brentknoll, of which King Alfred having speedy intelligence, drew thither a seeming invincible Army, and ⁵besieged by land, and also by Sea with his fleet, so long, till the Deanes had eaten up all their provision, and after that their horses, and then they endeavoured to escape away through that part of the King's Army, which lay on the East part of the River, where, in the sharp conflict, Ordemus and many others of the King's Army were slaine at the first encounter, but the Christians prevailing at length put the Pagans to flight, a great number of them being drowned and slain with the sword, and a great number of those which escaped fled to ¹Legerester, Anglo-Saxonice Witthale, now Woerle, five miles Northeast of Bitham, where they associated themselves to a strong partie of theirs, which had fortified themselves so ²impregnable, that the King finding it so, although he did not besiege it, yet burnt up all things round about, that might yeild sustenance, whereby they were constrained to forsake the Countrie of their own accord. A second Invasion of the Danes ³ on these two maritime parts, was at the mouth of the River Pedred, which runs by, and gives name to, North and South Pedred-ton, vulgò Pether-ton, Pey-ton, &c. but now euphonied into Peyret, whose muth, (now mouth,) then, it seems, lying open, without any party of the Army of the King to defend it, received a fleete of 35 of the Danes largest Ships, man'd with a great number of Sea-men and Souldiers, but venerable ⁴Alestane Bishop of Sherbourne, Duke Ernulph with the forces of Sommersett, and Duke Osred ⁵ with his Dorsetanians, gave them battle, and there slew very many of them, and obtained a very glorious victorie apud Pedredsthe. Whereas this Victorie was obtained at the mouth of the River Perr-rat, I suppose the particuler place was Brent-Knoll,

- within a mile or two thereof. For the tradition of that Place is, that the Danes invaded and burnt the three Parishes of South and East Brent and Burnham, which, I suppose, took their Names from their burning or ¹ Brenning, as Brentford, now Brainford, near London did upon that account. And this may be yet farther confirmed by Brent-Knoll it self, which is a very high and steep Burrow or Mount, the topp whereof fortified with dyke and Rampire, in which the Danes, probably, seated themselves, and by a Ground almost plain on the Southside of the said hill, by estimation two Acres, called Battlebury, where the Battle might be fought, and the Victorie obtained. The third Invasion on these Parts was ² apud Portlocan ³ slatino, Britt. Shipport, aliter Pordocan (from Britt. Porth, a port, and Græc. ⁴ δοχησιον, a dock or receptacle for Shipping) but now Portlocke, where the Danes in the night, leaving their Shippes on the shore, plundered and burnt the said Towne, and other Places adjoyning, but were all slain by a partie of the King's Armie, which was designed for the defence of that Coast, and the present Inhabitants of that Towne speke traditionallie thereof to this day, and if they were silent, the burnt Foundation Stones of some of the ancient Houses would proclaim the truth thereof. The ⁴th. Invasion was apud ⁵ *Wlecheport, aliàs Wlechport, (i. e.) their Generalls, and having sailed round Cornwall, came into Seaverne, plundered and burnt upon the Sea Coast wheresoever they had opportunity, but the King had disposed his Armie into convenient places of defence from the River Avon, which runs through Bristol, along the Sea Coasts to Cornwall, notwithstanding the Danes brake into Wattchett by stealth in the night, plundered and ¹ burnt the same, and then they marched toward the other part thereof, which must be Williton, where a part of the King's Armie ² using out of their fortifications, there met them, as they were coming encountered them, and slew a great number on the place, pursued the rest to Wattchett, and slew as many as could not swim to their Shippes. But the Anglo-Saxons Duke, or General, Godman (sometimes abbreviated into Goda) and their valiant Champion Streame Guld, and divers other of the King's Armie were slain also. upon which Victorie the Anglo-Saxons made two solemn triumphs, the first in loco funeris, the second in loco fluminis, according to the words of my Authors. And now let us returne, and enquire after some Remaines and Monuments of this Victorie. The Field, in which this battle was fought, must be the rich plaine or vale (now divided into meadows and pasture) betwixt Wattchett and Williton, where the Danes were encountred, as they were coming to Williton as aforesaid. 1.

The locus funeris, or buring place, of the slaine, I suppose, was Gabburro, alias Crabburrowes, where, it seems, the greatest furie of the battle and slaughter was, and where the remainder of three huge moles or bur- 2.

rowes, each 120 yeards round the Basis, and so of a proportionall pyramidall height and forme, as first appeared to be the burfalls, aliàs bursehills, of the dead. For by the often diging, and carrying away of much earth from them, to dress the ground adjoyning, some times in one, and some times in another, have been found fragments of mens bones, and sometimes sepulchres composed each of three broad stones, like Tombe stones, two of them lying along on their edges, about two foot distance, and a third lying flatt on the topp, the both ends walled up closely, and the concavity containing peices of mens bones, and these latter I take to be monuments of such Anglo-Saxons, as were slain and there buried, as the others, lying confusedly, were remaines of the Danes, for which there was no such care taken. And as res ipsa, so vox ipsa Grabborrowes, spekes the same Grabe Burrowes, Grabeburæ being a Teutonicke¹, (viz.) an old Germanick, word, common both to the Danish and Saxons, signifying both a Saxonick Danish monument, being compounded of Grab and buræ, and either of them signifies a grave: but Grab (from the Teutonicke Graben, to digge) signifies properly the pit which is digged, buræ, and so buræ, signifies the heap raised upon the pitt, sometimes long and small, as our ordinarie Churchyard Graves,² some round and high, as these Grabburæ; but here Grabb and buræ joyned together, to make a compleate description of this compleate sepulchre of the slain Saxons and Deanes. The most ancient grave³, that I read of,

was called in Hebrew Keher, and in Greek κρίβητος, a bed or death bed, unde Lat. Grabbatus, properly a bed to rest on in the after noone, metaphorically in the evening of this life, unde Belgick ¹ Graf, Saxon Gruf, English Grave, Teutonick Grab and Grabham, (i. e.) grave home, alias long home, and Anglo-Saxon and Danish Grabburroæ, in which, after their furious fighting, they sleep quietly together.

But as these 3 *Grabburroæ*s are to be looked on as sepulchres of the Anglo-Saxons and Danes, so also as Trophies of the Anglo-Saxons. It was the common practice of the ancients, to triumph in, or neare, the field, where the victorie was obtained, and to erect ² Trophies, (i. e.) huge Burrowes, Pillers, Arches, &c. in the places, where victories were obtained, to perpetuate the memory, both of the victorie and the triumphe. So that, as here was a funus as before, so a dominantur in loco funeris, a domineering or triumphing in the place of the funerall, and, consequently, these 3 Grabburrowes were 3 Trophies also of the victorie here obtained, and the triumph here celebrated.

But there was another domineering or triumphing, besides this, and consequently other Trophies also. Angli ? loco dominantur fluminis, the Anglo-Saxons triumph or domineere in the place of the River, not in the River, but in the place of the River, (i. e.) Williston, which adjoynes close to the River, and indeed here was the greatest cause of joy, triumphing and domineering, when the village was so seasonably preserved, when the Enemies, like hungry Lions, greedy of their prey, were so near at hand; with open mouths ready to devour them, and all theirs. If the King's armie dominantur in loco funeris, then much more ¹ Willitonians now dominantur in loco fluminis, and if the King's armie erected 3 Crabburroes, as Trophes of this Victorie and triumphe, the Willitonians will erect 3 Crosses (in their Teutonicke language Kreutzes) in emulation of them. For what else could move them to erect 3 formall Corosses, so near together in one village, when scarcely one was to be found in a Royal City, but to perpetuate the memorie of this victorie and triumphe of the Christians over Pagans? the originall of which partie was this; ² Maxentius, a Pagan usurping the Roman Empire, Constantine, who was almost perswaded to be a Christian, raised an army to suppress him, and to that end marching towards Rome, where Maxentius tyrannized, there appeared unto him by the way, and to his army, at noone, the lively figure of a Cross in the heaven, with this inscription in it, In hoc vince; ³ which Christ interpreted to him in a dream the night following, by which his Faith in Christ crucified being confirmed, he passed forward with much alacritie. Maxentius hearing of his approach, drew out his army into the field beyond the River, on which he made a bridge of boates, called Pons ⁴ Milvius, so fallaciously, that, when any considerable weight of men should come on it, it should break and sinke; but Ma-

Maxentius being routed, was necessitated to endeavour to fly out over that bridge, which he had contrived against Constantine, which sinking, he himself, and very many of the cheif of his army were drowned, whereupon Constantine entred into Rome, without resistance, was created the first Christian Emperour, erected multitudes of such ¹ Crosses in every place, as Trophies of this his victorie over the heathens, and afterwards Christians obtaining Victorie over Pagans did the like, and so the 3 Crosses of Williton might be erected, as such Trophies of Victorie over such Heathens.

Of this Victorie of Constantine, Prudentius, a divine Poët of the same age, singeth an επιγράμμιον, thus englished by Dr. Meredith Hanmer, in the life of Constantine².

¹ My brother near Bath had a stone Coffin diged up in his grounds, near which he found a brass Coyne, on one side with this Circumscription, Constantinopolis, which was the name of Constantine, and his imperiall City; on the other side, an Angel holding such a Crosse in his hand. ² Eusebius Pam: in vita Con. translated by Dr. M. 5. A fift monument of this fatal battle, is a stone of 8 foot high above ground, but, before a part of it was broken away, I suppose, so much higher. It is now called, in the full of the mouth, hoore-stone, according to the dialect of Sommersett, which varies her into hurr, and where into whore and whoore; but I cannot believe any one to be so simple, as to think this to be an ancient monument of some whore; for then it would have been called ¹ Hyre stone. But, doubtless, the ancient name was either Herelston or Hewr-stone, of hier-stone, (i. e.) Duke's Stone or Generall's Stone Anglo-Saxonice. For though a Generall at first was called Hertz-jug and Heretogh, (i.) a Lord Tugger (unde tonah), because he went foremost, and tugged or drew his Army after him by his exhortation and example, as Julius Caesar, who never said ite, but venite; yet Teutonice he was, and is, called ² Ueld-herc (i. e.) Field Generall, and for brevity Here Hewrursten, (i. e.) that is, first or prime Lord or Commander, and sometimes ³ Hewr. And if the right name of this stone is Heurston, it signifies the Generall's, or cheif ³ Commander's Stone, who

¹ Verst. Ant. p. 261. I know not with what reason some write whore, seeing the ancient name is hyre, from the letting her body to hire. ² Minish. Diction. Vers. being slain as aforesaid, was buried here. For to die and be buried in the feild was most honourable, and this stone, as I suppose, erected as a Pillar or the Grave of Generall Godham, according to the practice of the Antients. great stones erected, as pillars, on the graves of eminent men there slain and buried under them, fragments of bones yet remaining. Q. But what doth Godham signifye, and why was he so called? God signified with the Anglo-Saxons as now with us, and ham signified an house or home. So that *Godham*¹, (i.) Godshouse or Godhouse, and, as others took their names from Woods, Hills and Valleys, in, or near, where they dwelt, so this man, from such Church or Chappel, then called Godham, and what Godham more likely, then that most ancient Chappell of Williston, and so called in the Anglo-Saxons times? and why might not Godham take his name from his dwelling near this Chappell, as well as Streame-would, the other Champion, from his dwelling at, or near, Streame, as shall be shewed? It may be answered, that, if any Godham anciently had dwelt in that ancient Manor-house, there had been some colour for it. But it may be replied, antiently one Ursus dwelt in it, and left his cognisance, (viz.) 3 bears heads, in his Chamber window, apparent to this day, and this Ursus might be called at first heurs haus, (i. e.) the Lord's house, as well as ¹ Godham, Godham, Gods house, but euphonied out of that harsh word heurs haus into Ursus, as Ursus, for the same reason, into Urse, according to William of Malmsburie², which saith, that, as soone as William the Conquerour was anointed King by Alredus Archbishop of Yeorke, the King made one Ursus sherrife of Worcestershire, and he, (according to his Commission,) begining to fortifie Severne, the first Castle which he built, was that of Worcester, but built it so near the Abbey, that part of the Abbey Church Yeard sanck down into the Castle trench or mote, whereupon the said Arch Bishop denounced a curse on Ursus in these Words, hatest thou Urse, have thou God's Curse. Whence I inferre, if this Stone be Huer-stone, it is, Lords Generalls Stone, if Urse-stone, it is, Ursus-stone, if Huer-stone and Urse-stone, then Lord General Ursus his stone, who might be father to Sherife Urse in respect of time; for this Battle was fought in the Reigne of King Ethelred, about 60 years before King William the Conquerour: and in respect of Office, the one (it seems) succeeding the other in guarding the Severne-Coasts. 3 in respect of honourable blood; for Serrife Ursus was *vir generis præ eminentia conspicuus*³.

6. And as I suppose Godam dwelt, or quartered, at, or near, Godam, (viz.) Williton Chappel, so I am confident, that the valiant Champion Streame-would dwelt, or quartered, in, or near, ¹ Stream-would, (i. e.) Streame-wild hill, (which word, before inclosures, comprehended ² Black-Downe and Peard hill, aliàs guard hill,) which he, probably, was to guard, together with the great travelling wayes on every side, and from thence took his name Streame-would of Streame would.

The fourth invasion (or rather evasion) of the Danes in these parts, was into Steep Homes, by Florentius Wiggorniensis ³ termed ⁴ Keoric, (i. e.) high mount, but by ⁵ H. H. insula steppen, for they being so miserably routed at Williton, some killed in the pursuit, some drowned in wading and swimming to their Ships, and the survivours discouraged by the sight of more and more of the King's forces approaching, upon this encouragement, and now wanting Marriners to guide, and Soldiers to mann, their Ships, they fled to this succourless Iland, or rather rock, for refuge, where they continued in hunger and cold, till the greater number were consumed, there being no house or harbour, but one poor Cave, no meat or drink, but one small fresh-water spring, to refresh some.

Their 5th. invasion, was at Uphill, Bledon, &c. where I have enquired of the ⁶ inhabitants, whether they had, at any time, heard of any Deanes, that came, in the days of yore, to Steep homes near them. They told me, that the generall tradition of their Country hath beene, that a flecte of Deanes fled, to shelter themselves in the said Isle, and sometime they brake out into England, and sometimes into Wales, for sustenance; at length coming to Uphill and Bledon, etc. they fastned their ships to the shoare, left them, and marched up into the Country for booties, and that all the inhabitants fled away before them, one poor lame woman excepted, which hidd in a Rock near the ships, and when she was near spent with hunger, she was necessitated to adventure down the ships for releif: saying to her self, with the Lepers, if they kill me, I shall but die: but coming thither, and searching from ship to ship, and finding no living Creature, at last espying an hatchett, took it, and with it chopped of all the Cables, which anchored the ships to the shoare, and sent them to Sea, where they quickly perished. The Danes having gotten intelligence of the loss of some of their ships, speedily retreated, to save themselves and the rest, but the people of the Country, having intelligence, that all their ships were cast away, took courage, pursued them to Bledon, there fought, and destroyed them with such a bloody slaughter, as that frome thence the place took, and ever since hath kept, the name Bledon, alias Bleed-down or bloud-down, to this day. And some of them have informed me, that, when their Husbandmen plough their grounds, they find multitudes of Men's Teeth there, which being naturally the hardest bones in the body, and obdurated with chewing (in some grounds) are almost as permanent as little stones. And a Gentleman there, within 7 yeares last past, having bought a peice of Moorish ground, lying at the foot of the said Bledon, when his labourers renewed the dyke filled up about it, they found great heaps of Men's skulls, and other hu-

¹ Ernlph, with the forces of Sommersett, and Duke Osred, with his Dorsettanians, gave them battel there, and slew a great number of them, and obtained a glorious Victorie. Wheras this Victorie is said to be obtained at the mouth of the River Parrett, I suppose the particular place meant (though not mentioned) was Brent-Knoll, within a Mile or two therof. For the tradition, amongst the natives there, is, that the Deanes invaded that place, plundered and burat the 3 parishes of East and South Brent, and Brenham, now Burn-ham, all which, I suppose, took their Names from their burneing, now burning, as Brentford, now Braynesford, because it was burnt by the Deanes also. And this may yet be farther confirmed by Brent-Knoll it self, which ² is a very steep and round Burrow or Mole, the topp fortified with Dyke and Rampire, where the Deans, according to probability, seated themselves. And by a Ground (almost plaine) of two acres in the South Side of that burrow, called Battel-burie, where, I suppose, the battel was foughten, and the Victorie obtained.

A 7th. invasion, intended ³ against the ⁴ maritime Coasts, but by the hand of God confounded, before they could come quite thither (like that of the Spaniards in 88) thus. The Deanes having a great fleet and armie at Wareham in Dorsett shire, designed their armie in these parts by land, and a fleet of 120 saile here to meet them. So the fleet sailing round about Cornwell, came to anchor apud Swanwick, which I take to be now Swansey, on the North Coasts, over against the West of Som-

So may I say ² of King Swanus his fleet, drowned at Swanatwſck atias Swanesey, (i. e.) Swanus-Sea, Swanus Sanewicis nomina dedit aquis.

Swanus to Sane-Sea waters gave their name.

The 8th. and last invasion in these parts, was at ³ Hyne-head by a fleet of Welchmen, in the 49th year of King Henry the 3^d. Anno Domini 1265, set forth by Matt. ⁴ Paris, but the Antecedents and Consequents &c. to compleate this storic, being collected out of severall places of this Author, and duly composed, the whole will sound thus. King Henry the third and his Barons, having long contended the one for the other, against certaine privildges and prerogatives claymed by the King, and denied by the Barons, at last their differences were composed in a Parliament at Oxford, where the King himself, and his eldest sonne Prince Edward, solemnly swore to the due observation of all the particulars of the agreement; but afterward the King, by the instigation of evill Counsellours, repented of the said Oath, and because he would not be esteemed a perjured person, sued, and easily obtained, an absolution from the said Oath of the Pope; but Prince Edward did not accept of the said absolution, and so raised an Army against his Barons, and they another against the King, making Simon de Monte forti, Earl of Leicester, their Generall, who gave the King Battell, routed his Armie, tooke him and Prince Edward Prisoners, detained, or rather entertained, the King as a Royall Prisoner with himself withersoever he went, and sent Prince Edward Prisoner to Hereford Castle, where he being permitted to recreate himself, by racing with Noble men in a large meadow, adjoining to the Citie, he tempted them to run their horses so often, that his own and their horses being tired, and he having

FOOL'S BOLT

SOON SHOTT AT

STONAGE.

From another MS. lent me by the same Friend, Mr. JAMES WEST, of BALLIOL-Coll. written in the same hand, and by the same anonymous Author.

WANDER witt of Wiltshire, rambling to Rome to gaze at Antiquities, and there skrewing himself into the company of Antiquaries, they entreated him to illustrate unto them, that famous Monument in his Country, called Stonage. His Answer was, that he had never seen, scarce ever heard of, it. Whereupon, they kicked him out of doors, and bad him goe home, and see Stonage; and I wish all such Æsopicall Cocks, as slight these admired Stones, and other our domestick ¹ Monuments (by which they might be admonished, to eschew some evil, or doe some good) and scrape for barley Cornes of vanity out of forreigne dunghills, might be handled, or rather footed, as he was. If I had been in his place, I should have been apt to have told them, that, surely, it was some heathonish temple demolished by the immediate hand of God, as an intollerable abomination unto him: yet reserving so much of it standing, as may declare what the whole was, and how, and why, so destroyed, that, as we are to remember Lot's wife, turned into a Piller of Salt, for looking back-ward towards Idolatrous Sodome, so we should remember, that these forlorne Pillers of Stone are left to be our remembrancers, dissuading us from looking back in our hearts upon any thing of Idolatry, and persuading us, in imitation of Moses, and the Prophets, so to describe, and deride, it in it's uglie Coullers, that none of us, or our posterity, may returne, with Doggs, to such Vomit, or Sows to wallowing in such mire. And since all, that have (as yet) written on this Subject, have contradicted and confuted each other, and never any hath as yet revealed this mysterie of iniquity to this purpose, and that Pedlers and Tinckers, vamping on London way near it, may, and do, freely spend their mouthes on it, I know nothing to the contrary, but that I also may shoot my bolt a little farther into it, however I will adventure, were it for nothing elce, but to recreate my self sometimes, after other studies, and to provoke my friends, which importun'd me to it, to shoote their acute shafts at it also, hoping, that one or other of us, by art or accident, shall hit the mark. My bolt is soon shott in this short conjecture, that Stonage was an old British triumphall tropicall temple, erected to Anaraith, their Godess of victory, in a bloody field there, wone,

wone, by illustrious Stanengs and his Cangick Giants, from K. Divitiacus and his Belgæ. In which temple the Captives and spoiles were sacrificed to the said Idol Anaraith. So that these 12 particulers hereof are to be demonstrated,

1. That Stonage was an old British Monument.
2. That it was a Monument of a bloody battel foughten there.
3. This bloody battel produced a glourious Victorie.
4. This Victorie was wonne by the Cangi of Clad-erhaf.
5. The Cangi were Giants.
6. Commanded by the famous Stanenges of Honni-cutt.
7. The Army conquered, was K. Divitiacus and his Belgæ.
8. In this place, assoone as the Cangi had conquered, they triumphed.
9. Where they triumphed they erected this Monument as a Trophie.
10. This Trophie was a Temple.
11. This Temple was consecrated to Anaraith, their Goddess of Victorie.
12. In this temple the said Victors sacrificed their Captives and Spoiles to their said Idoll of Victorie.

Our work lies before us in these 12 particulers, and our tooles, to perform it, should be antcient and credible histories, treating of this subject. but what are they, and where to be found? Jeffrie of Monmouth will tell you a tale, that these Stones were brought by Giants from

from Africa into Dusldaze in Ireland, and, by some Le-gerdemaine of Merlin, conveyed to the place, where they are; but no credible Historian could speke any word of any such thing. Gildas Badonicus of Bathe, within 20 Miles of Stonage, writing anno Domini 543. hath not a word of it, nor venerable Bede, who writing anno 727. of many other rarities of this Land, hath not a word of Stonage, nor William of Malms-burie, writing anno 1142. within 14 miles of Stonage, hath not a word of it, nor Ethelwred, nor Hoveden, nor ¹ Ingulthus, nor Paris, nor Westmonasteriensis, nor Florentius Wigorniensis, who all wrote above 500 years since, yet not a word of it; and Henricus Huntingdoniensis, writing near the same time, tells the naked truth of the Matter, that it was not because they would not, but because they could not, say any thing of it. His words are²: Quatuor sunt in Anglia, quæ mira videntur, scilicet Stanenges, (i. e.) Stonage, ubi lapides miræ magnitudinis in modum portarum elevati sunt, ita ut portæ portis superpositæ videantur, nec potest quis excogitare, quâ arte tanti lapides adeo in altum elevati sunt, vel quare ibidem constructi sunt. This Stonage did astonish them, this did amaze them, that they durst not labour, lest they should ³ lost their labour, and themselves also. And if the grand Seniors, which lived so near it, above a thousand years since, could not, how shall we sillie freshmen unlock this Closet? I have stumbled on 2 picklocks, which, if dexterously handled, will set it wide open to the world.

1. A description of the fabrick of Stonage, at least of some part of it, as it was in it's primitive perfection.

2. A mappe of Wiltshire.

1. As for a description of the saide fabricke, I would referr you to Architector Inigo Jones in his book, entitled, Stonchenge restored, but that some would be ready to say, the multitude of his Græcian Architectonicall termes of the parts of it, as hypæthros, monopteros, ¹ dipteros, architrave, ² Pycnostylos, Scheame, peripteros, hexagon, &c. do rather obscure then illustrate the same, and that, whereas he hath 10 designs of this fabrick all in folio, one in 4^o. may serve the turn as well. Nay one whole one is to much; because the externall circle of high Stones will overshadow almost all within them, as a company of tall men, standing round about a company of Children. And I think three or four Stones of each of the 5 Circles, with verball apprehensions of the number and dimension of the Stones of each circle, will give best intelligence to common capacities, which I endeavour to informe, and this I have done in the frontispice, and have added Characteristicall letters to each remarkable part and place of the fabrick, correlating to what I shall say concerning such particularers.

2. The second pick-lock, to help the former, is a Mapp of Wiltshire, at least of the Hill Country about Stonage, describing the antient British Names of circumjacent Hills, Hamletts, Rivers, &c. For I conceive, that the old Britons, which lived in those places, took it for a great honour, that thence pittifull habitations should be called after the name of this antient renowned mount, or some part or propertie thereof, and this is most observable in those 3 eminent Rivers, Tellinburn, Avon and Waddet, runing from their severall quarters almost to Stonage, and meeting a little below it, and in many of the hamletts, situate on, or near, those Rivers, up to their Fountaines, both the said Rivers, and many Villages on them, taking their antient British names, some from Stonage, some from some, some from other, parts and properties thereof, shortly after it was founded, and seeing, that conveniunt rebus nomina, and that any one of those antient names, taken from Stonage, is a Description of the same, then, surely, out of many of those names, methodically composed, may a definition of it be formed, at least some such conjecture of mine aforesaid. And because this nominall picklock is of my invention, as he that forgeth a pick-locke will try him upon some doore of his own, before he will adventure with it to the publick treasurie, so I entreat leave to try, how I can illustrate that famous monument the hot Bathe water of Bathe, by this engine, before I make use of it on Stonenge. Suppose then, that when the heathonish Saxons had subdued all this Iland, saving Bathe and parts adjoyning, and at last came so near Bathe as Deboram, now Dirram, and having there slain the 3 Kings of Bathe, Glocester, and Cirencester, routed their armies, and destroyed those Cities, suppose, I say, upon the invasion of those infidells, and destruction of those Christians, the Lord had, in his wrathfull indignation, dryed up the waters of life and health, as he did ² other salutiferous waters, upon like provocation, or that Merlin's provecie, frigebant Badonis balnea, & salubres eorum aquæ mortem generabant, had been fulfilled, as soon as it had been pronounced; and that those barbarous Saxons had, in their furie, burnt the Citie to ashes, and nothing of it remaining, but the old British names thereof in antient histories, and in the names of Hills, Rivers, Hamletts, &c. near it, yet much of the Citie, and nature and propertie of the Bath-water, might be collected and inferred out of those names now a thousand years afterward; as, first, the tradition of the manner of finding out the vertue of the Bath-water being this. Bladud, alias Bluda, the son and heir of Rudhudibres, beeing smitten with a leprosie, was, Nebuchadnezar like, driven out from amongst men, and became a swineherd near Bathe, which was then a bogg or quagmire of hot water, in which his swine often wallowed, and one of them, being a Scabbilonian, was thereby cured, whereupon Bladon making triall of it was also cured, whereupon he built a Temple, and consecrated it to the sun, as the God of the heat of the Bath-water, and Health, which he recovered by the same, and his father dying, Bladon reigned there in his place. Now although this is taken generally for a fabulous tradition, yet much of it may be proved by such old British names, as aforesaid; as, first, that Bathe was such a bogg, or quagmire, may be inferred from the most antient name thereof ' Car Badon, the bogg of Bathe, Meretune, (i. e.) Mireton.

2. That there was such a King Rudhudibres, may be inferred from part of his name, still continuing in Rudlie, and a relique of his Kinglie dignitie in Kingwood, Kingdowne adjoyning.

3. That there was a man of great honour and fame, living in, or near, Bathe, of the name Bladon. For the

4. That this Bladud was a King, but reduced into ſome miſerable condition on the North ſide of Bathe, as may be collected by his picture over the North gate of Bathe.

5. That he being healed, as aforeſaid, he lived in a ³Cave in the ſide of Salesburſe hill there, called vulgò Jackadrum holle, orthog. Jack-cun trwon holl, (i.) the healed King's hole in the ſide of the hill, which laſt words intimate, that he had ſome other Cave, in ſome other place of the ſaid hill, and about 4 years ſince there was diſcovered a formall Cave, vaulted over with ſome Crombs of a man's bones in it, which might be the ſaid healed King's hole on the topp of the hill, from thence called Orthog. Saluſ-hyl, (i. e.) health on the topp of the hill, in which he might live, die, and be buried in his own Cave, according to the cuſtome of thoſe dayes, as Abraham, Sara, &c.

6. That the ſaid Salesburſe, being alſo called Solſburſe, (i. e.) Sunſburſe, (as another little one alſo, at the foot thereof, is called Sundate's hill) the temple of the ſun might be built thereon⁴. For Landdowne, Lanſbridge, and Lambriſck, (i. e.) Temple downe, Templeridge, and Templebridge, round about this hill, intimate, that there was ſuch a heathonish temple on it, and what more likely place for Sol's temple then Solsburie? and why might not that Image of the Sun, like the face of a man, and ^a Hercules, with his Clubb, affixed to the city walls, be brought from Sols-burie, as well as those antient Roman urnes there also brought out of the Fields?

7. That, in regard of the supposed influence of the Sun on the Bath water, it was called Sol-mêr, (i.) the Sun-Poole, although euphonied into Sommer, as Psalme into Plame, and Salmon into Samon, because V ante m quiescit.

8. That, upon the said account, Bath was antiently called Sommerset, (i. e.) the seate or Citie of the Sun-poole, and the province or County of which it was the metropolis, as sometimes provincia Bathoniensis, sometimes Sommersetensis^a.

9. That the vertue of the Bath water being discovered, as aforesaid, the neighbouring hamlets (as those about Stonage) ambitiously attributed to themselves variety of names, which they caught, or borrowed, from Bath, as Bathelston, Bathampton, Bathford, Bathwick, Bathedowne, &c.

10. That so great was the confluence of people, troubled with aches, to this City, that it was thereupon called *Akemancester*², (i.) the Citie of ached people.

ly Cottages, about this water, as that the ground, of large circumference, now without the Citie, is called Bathams, Bathewickshams, &c. to this day.

14. That this City Batham, lying in a low valley, had a Bathampton (i. e.) a Bathefort, on the toppe of Bathampton downe, to secure the mabout 50 acres off, the topp whereof being surrounded with a strong Dike and Rampire, a sallie port to issue out upon occasion on Claurtong downe, and military worke about 100 yards off, to secure their issues and retreats, and avenue extending from the fort down the hill directly towards Bathē, whereby the Bathonians might pass and repass securely and invisibly between Batham and Bathampton.

15. That, in processe of time, there was so much resort to this hill, that they dwelt here and there over all the downes, which, before inclosures, was comprized all under the name of Badon, and, upon that account, Bathē was also called Badon, Badonsa, Bathon, Bathonsa, &c.

16. That, for their better security, they afterward fortified the said Downe in more places, as near Tunlic Lane end, Wondich, or Thog:wodensdicke, &c. and thereupon it was called Cast-Badon, the fortified Bathedowne. So that, I say again, if Bathē had been annihilated 1000 years since, yet these and the like names of it, and other neighbouring places, preserved, a philantiquarie might easily out of them extract both these, and many more, things, which otherwise would continue buried in oblivion, and much of the fabrick, and many of the names, of Stonage, and parts and properties thereof, being hitherto preserved, I hope, I shall do the like thereupon, beginning with the first particuler of my conjecture, viz.

1. Stonage

1. Stonage is an old British monument; where, first, I shall briefly shew, who, and what, the old Britons were, and afterward, that this was an old British monument.

The old Britons were the first of six Nations, which had the possession of this Land successively, viz. old Britons, Belgæ, Romanes, Saxons, Danes and Normans. The old Britons came origenally from the Tower of ¹ Babel thus. Shortly after the deluge, the Lord having blessed Noah and his posterity, saying, be fruitfull, multiplye and replenish the earth, ² they notwithstanding had been fruitfull, and had, in a short time, multiplied incredibly, yet they obstinately refused to replenish the earth, but said, go too, let us build us a Citie and a Tower in it, whose topp may reach unto heaven, least we be scattered over the face of the whole earth; so they intended to dwell in their Citie together, and to secure themselves from any future flood in the Tower, but the Lord confounded their one (viz. the Hebrew) in 52 Languages, so that they, not understanding each other, ³ Babling about carrying on the Worke, were necessitated to give it over unfinished, and then each principall man amongst them having sought out, and brought together, such as could understand his language, conducted them into the severall parts of the earth, where many of them are called after their conducters names to this day, as the Medes from Madai, the Moscovites from Mesech alias Mosoch, the Canonites from Canan, and Gomer, the eldest son of Japhet, calling together all such as could understand ⁴ Comtraeg, as the speech of Gomer, conducted them to, and seated them in, France, where they were called Gomeri after old Gomer, and some of them into Britaine. But because ¹ he doth not particularize the place, where they were first seated, give me leave to conjecture, that it was in Mount Gomeri in Wales (for that is also called Trefaldguin, the famous old Towne, a proper name for such old Towns-men.) From Mount Gomeri they might dilate their plantation over all Mount Gomerishire, still called Gomeri, as long as they had such garments ² as their fore-fathers had; but those being worne out, and they being destitute (in this wilderness) of meanes to recruite apparrell, yet found expedients to paint their naked bodies with severall Coullers of Cloathes, and then they were no longer called Gomeri, but Britons, (i. e.) Painters, and their land Britaine, (i. e.) *the painted nation*³. Some families painted gwin white, some du black, some Glás blew, some Coth (pronounced Coff) red, some Lloid (pronounced Floyd) green, and this is the originall of those common names Gwin, Du, Glás, Coff and Floyd, amongst their posteritic in Wales to this day. He that desires any further intelligence concerning the old Britons, let him reade Cæsar's Commentaries, Strabo, Diodorus Siculus, Pomponius Mela, Solinus, Dio Cassius, Ziphiline, Plinius Secundus, Cambden, Speede, &c.

Having seen who the old Britons were, we may, in the next place, well look upon this Stonage as an old British monument. If it had but one old British name, it were a probable argument, that it was an old British thing. For conveniunt rebus nomina, ut supra. For who, but old British Founders, would have given it an old British name? But if I can produce, at least, old British names thereof, and parts and properties thereof, and not one Belgick, Romane, Saxon, Deanish or Norman name thereof (but the nick-name ¹ Stonehenge) then, surely, it was an old British monument. I forbear mentioning those names now, because I would not tautologize, when I shall have occasion both to mention and interpret sometimes one, sometimes another, of them. But the Architector (and I wish I could say the Antiquarie) Jones is point blanck against a British, and also for a Romane, Monument, and I will complie with him, as farr as I may, by saying, it might be a Romane work, but not a Romaue Monument. For it is true, which he mainteins at large, that this monument was framed according to the most exquesite rules of Architecture, in which the pittifull naked Britons had no knowledge at all, and the Romans were the most expert men in the world in that art, and might be hired by the Britons to do that work for them. For ² there was a commerce between the Britons and forreigue nations, before Julius Cæsar's dayes, insomuch that the Græcians frequented this Iland upon this account; and if so, then much more the nearer and more Architectonicall Romanes, who as they ³ taught and helped the Britons to build tempells after they had conquered them (being well hired,) so might some of them build, or help them to build, this one before they conquered them, and, in this respect, it might be called a Roman work, but no more a Romane Monument, or Temple, then the temple of the Jews might be called the temple of the Gentiles, because the Gentiles had the chiefest hand in building it for the Jews. The Romans endeavoured (no way more, then) by magnificent Structures to perpetuate their fame, as well in this Iland, as in other places, and, to this end, they imposed their Romane names on them, as Templum Claudii; ac Camalodunum, consecrated Victoriae; murus Severi, extending from Sea to Sea in the North of this Land; the fosse way from the Roman fossa, a ditch on each side of it, out of which the earth was cast up; ¹ Antonini Itinerarium, by which he divided Britaine into 16 Itinera, and every Iter into 12, 13 or 14 Mansions, some Remainers of some of them to be seen to this day. Not so much as that paltrick tottering bridge, built by, or for, the Romanes, near Glasfenburie, but must be called by the Romane name Pons periculosus, and is called Pomperis at this day. and if so, then, surely, this most glorious monument (if it had been Roman) should have been called after the name of one of the Roman Emperors, as ² founders of it, at least by some other Roman name or word; but no Roman name, word or syllable, on or near it, but all British, is argumentum Herculisimum, that it was no Roman, but a British, monument.

2. My second particuler is, that a bloody battle was foughten at Stonage. For the very name Stoneage, signifies Stone-battle, the last syllable age coming from ³ the Greek ἀγών, a furious battle, and a village near Stonage is called Fittle-ton, not in regard of it's owne

⁴ See Burton's Com. on it. ² F. founder. II. ³ When the Græcians came and traded with the Britons, they left some part of their words compounded with British, as Iris, Chamasis, age in Stonage. Camb. Brit. in Belg. Speede.

Situation (in a valley;) but because it is near the fight-tullton, or place ¹ hired in, where the fight was, (i. e.) Stonage, which stand in the midst of a multitude of burrowes, (i. e.) burying hillocks, which are the tumuli or tombes, in which the slaine of the battle were buried. He that can not, or will not, believe it, let him seearch one of them, and there see the fragments of mens bones, and peices of their old fashioned armour, spoken of by Cambden, Speede, &c. and conclude, as I do, this particuler, that all, that have built their opinion of this monument, on any other foundation, then a bloody battle, have built Stonages in the aire.

8. This bloudie battle produced a glorious Victorie. It was not bellum anceps, or a drawn battle. He that runeth may reade almost clear Victorie of the one over the other armie, in the numerous traines of burrowes, with mens bones in them, extending from Stonage to Amesburie, and from thence to the topp of Haradon hill, about 5 miles in all the burrowes, being very great, and standing thicke at, and near, Stonage, and still smaller and thinner till near the topp of Haradon hill, plainly declaring the great execution done neare Stonage, and that the conquered Armie fled toward Haradon hill, the conquering armie pursued them thither, and slew many thousands of them, and buried them in heaps together, in, and near, London way to the said hill.

4. That this Victorie was won by the Cangi of Gladest-haf, viz. the people of Sommerset, who ² where all called *Cangi*³, (i. e.) Singers to instruments of Musick, from ⁴ Tanig, Canticum organi musici, in which, it seems, they delighted so much, that, as the old Britons did, so their posteritie of Wales do, call Sommersett Glad-er-haf, the merry Summer-field, to this day. The Cangi then were the Westermost inhabitants of this Iland. For Devon and Cornwall were not then inhabited, and their province extended East-ward either to, or near unto, Stonage. For Mr. Cambden¹ intimateth, that Cannings Hundred, reaching within few miles of Stonage, was so called, as being part of the Cangies territories, ² whence I inferr, that if the traine of burying hillocks aforesaid, had extended from Stonage westward, then the Cangi had been routed and slaine in their flight home-ward. But the traine extending East-ward declareth, that the Cangi, coming out of their westerne parts, routed their enemies assoone as they began to enter upon their frontiers, and pursued them East-ward towards their homes, or quarters, as more in due place.

5. That these Cangi were Giants will appear,

1. by their names. For Cambden³, Speed, &c. affirme, that this monument was antiently called the Giants dance, and Cannings or the ⁴ Cangings, near Stonage, signifie Cangick Giants.

2. By their chaines, intimated by all the names of Rivers and Villages on them near Stonage, which have the syllable in or yn in them⁵. For they come from Heb. ⁶ Anak, which signifies a Giant hanging a Chain about his neck, as those Anakims in the scripture, and such Anakims were the Gigantick old Britons, wearing Chaines about their necks and wasts. ⁷ vestis usum non

3. By some huge bones of men, found, amongst others, in the said burrowes, as aforesaid, and in other places near Stonage, according to the very words of Sr. Thomas Elliott in his Dictionarie, on the word Gigas. About 30 years since I my self, being with my father, Sr. Richard Elliott, at a Monasterie of regular Canons (three or fouy miles from Stonage,) beheld the bones of a dead man found deep in the ground, which being joyned together, was in length ² 13 foot and 10 inches, whereof one of the teeth my father had, which was of the quantity of a great wallnut. This I have writen, (saith he) because some men will beleibe nothing, that is out of the compals of their own knowledge. He that cannot beleibe Sir Thomas Elliott, let him see a Giant's tooth, which I can shew him, diged up Anno Domini 1670. at Weedmoore near Wells, three inches long above the roots, 3 inches about, and 4 ounces in weight, and at the Lord Sturton's house in Sturton Caundell, (i. e.) the borders of the Cangi, a Giant's thigh bone of a full yeard, in which instances argue, that, as amongst the Canonites, so amongst the conquering Cangi, there were races of Giants 10 principall Commanders, in regard of which Stonage was called Giants Dance. 4. by their armour, or peices of it, (which, when new, was large enough for Giants) found there also. But
5. here I must distinguish Giants into two sorts, Giants of antiquitie, and Giants of abilitie, and so declare what sort of these 2 the Cangi were. Giants of antiquity were so called in respect of their senioritie, as if they had not been borne into the world by the way of all flesh. For they being heathens, and not beleiving any Creation, supposed the first inhabitants of each nation, were brought forth by the earth, as froggs, mice, serpents, and here-upon the earth was worshiped by the name of Dea mater, and the first inhabitants termed Terræ filii, and terrâ editi, and Gigantes, (ἀ γινόμεαι ἐτ γᾶς, Dorice γᾶ) that is, men brought forth by the earth, according to that of the Poet¹:

Terra scros partus, immania monstra Gigantes, Edidit.

And such were the Giants of antiquity. Giants of ability were men of a very great stature and strength. And these Cangick Conquerors were Giants both of great Antiquitie and Abilitie. Their great Antiquitie may appear in Allyngton, orthog. Aldinton, (i. e.) antient Giants ton. Their abilitie in Ablington, (i. e.) able or strong Giants-ton. For neither of these two names were proper to either of those villages, but borrowed from Stonage as aforesaid, and now restored to Stonage, to declare the antiquity and ability of the Cangick Giants, which here conquered. As ex ungue Leonem, so ex dente Gigantem, it is easie to conjecture at the incredible stature and strength of a Cangick Giant, by the topp of his skull an inch thick, and a tooth of his, which I have, 3 inches long¹ now since the root is broken away, and three inches and a quarter round, and three ounces and half in weight, being full four ounces till the roots were broken off; so that, according to this instance, the Cangick Giants were very much greater and stronger then Goliah, or any other of the Giants described in the Scripture. Mr. Cambden writes of two teeth of a Giant, out of which 200 ordinary teeth might be cut, and this one Cheektooth weigheth just 100 Cheek teeth.

6. That the commander in chace of these Cangi was the famous old ² Stanenges of Glad-ar-haf aforesaid, which gives demonstration age, as Stonage was one, so Stanenges another, Britannick-Græcian name of this Monument, compounded of Stane and εργυς, (i. e.) Stones pitched up near together; and as Stanenges was the name of this antient Monument, so also of a most antient family flourishing in Glad-ar-haf to this day, which name could not arise from any other place, or thing, then this monument. For there was never any other place, or thing, of this name but this.

Therefore, the prime Ancestour, of the family Stanenges, took his name from this monument Stonenges, which being easily granted, it will be enquired, upon what account he took his name from this monument? and answered, it must be either from his ³ habitation there, or from some action performed there by him.

¹ These reliques of a Cangick Giant, were found 13 foot deep in digging of a draught well, in Wedmore, Anno Domini 1670, ² H. Hun. lib. primo Histor. ³ As Hill dalewood, Deade field, &c. were so called from their dwelling in such places.

Not from any inhabitation there. For it was an heathonish Temple, as shall be shewed, and the inhabiting in, or at, it had been esteemed a greater prophanation, then the dwelling in a Church or Chappell. Besides, there was no water, nor any other accommodation for a dwelling, within 2 or 3 miles of it. So the name of Stanenges was not taken from any habitation there, but from some action performed there; and what action could that be, but from conquering, and erecting this Trophie there? Nimrod the conquerour, and his adherents, would needs build him a 'Bable to get him a name, and from what else could Trophimus, and others of that name before and since him, take their Tropicall names, but from their Trophies? And why should not old Stanenges take his name from Stanenges also; as he did his Arms, 3 Batts volitant in a field argent, from the innumerable multitude of Batts (the peculiar animals of that place) ambuscadeing there by day, and rendezouzing by night, never so much as any sheep coming to rubbe or shelter there. Or in what respect could their most antient Honnscutt, alias Honnsad-cutt, (i. e.) illustrious court, be so called, but from that most antient illustrious Stanenges of Honnscutt, who wonne the field, and erected the Trophie aforesaid?

7. The people conquered by the Cangi were King Divitiacus and his Belgæ of Low Germanie. For

1. The king Divitiacus and his Belgæ were the only people recorded, that invaded the old Britons, and therefore if the old Britons conquered such as invaded them, they were the King Divitiacus and his Belgæ.

' No monument was ever erected, but to gett the owner a name.

2. Julius Cæsar saith, that ¹ Divitiacus magnum partem Britanniae obtinebat nostrâ etiam memoriâ; which great part of Britaine Mr. Cambden supposeth was Hampshire, Wiltshire, and Sommersett, called antiently the Belgæ, after the name of those which conquered them; but Julius Cæsar doth not say, they conquered them without any repulse. Julius Cæsar himself was routed 2 or 3 times by the Britons, before he could subdue that little part of Britaine which he did, and therefore King Divitiacus and his Belgæ might be routed, at least, once by them, and at Stonage, before they could vincere that great part of Britaine called Belgæ.

3. The armie, which was conquered, fled Northeast directly towards Belgium, as the traine of Burrowes aforesaid declares.

4. Paradun hill, orthog. Hertodun, to which the routed armie fled for refuge, is a Belgick word, or name, signifying the hill of refuge. and who was so likely as the Belgæ, to give it a Belgick name of refuge, when being routed at Stonage, they fled back thither for refuge? all which being put together, will amount to some such historie, instead of a Chronicle, as this:

Divitiacus, King of the Belgæ, invading Britaine with his Salii of Belgium, came into Wiltshire, and quartered and plundered all over the Salisbury Plaine, particularly at Salethorpe, Lurgisale, Rustisale, ² Martinsale, Martinsale, Luffale, &c. so called from the Salii, which were the chief people of the Belgæ. Old Stenenges and his Cangi drew up their Armie in Pearnsburie, orth. Parasburghie, Castle, 5 miles Westward from Ston- age, Divitiacus and his armie from the topp of Haradon hill 5 miles Northeast thereof, where, after they had faced each other a while, they mett and fought a bloudie battle in the midd-way, where the Belgæ being routed, fled homeward toward their said hill of refuge, but so many of their Salii were slain and buried in the burrowes aforesaid, that the field was ever since called Salisbury Plaine.

8. The Cangick Giants having conquered, triumphed over their enemies at Stonage, which, upon that occasion, was called the Giants dance, and this triumphant singing and dancing together, at the time and place of Victorie, was the common practice of the antients. So when ¹ Jephtha had conquered the Ammonites, the Israelites triumphed with timbrell and dances. So assoone as ² David had slain Goliah, and the Philistines were routed, the Isralites triumphed, singing and dancing with Tabretts and joy, and with instruments of Musick, and the women answered one to another as they played, Saul hath slain his thousands, and David his ten thousands. So assoon as the Lord had given victorie to the Isralites over the Egyptians, and that they saw the Egyptians dead upon the Sea shore, ³ Then sang Moses and the Children of Israell this song unto the Lord &c. and then verss the 20th. Miriam the Prophetess, the sister of Aaron, took a timbrell in her hand, and all the women went out after her with Tabretts and with dances, and Miriam answered them, sing ye to the Lord, for he hath triumphed gloriously. And yet not long ⁴ after they sang and danced a palinodia, like an herd of skipping and bleating Calves, to the similitude of a ¹ Calf that ² eatheth hay, sitting down to eat and drink, and rising up to play, dancing and singing, (much out of Tune) these be thy Gods, O Israell, which have brought ³ the up out of the land of Egypt, and this Idolatrous singing and dancing being too easily learned of the Gentiles from the Jewes, was put in practice at Stonage, by the Cangick Giants of Glad-er-haf, which was thereupon called the Giants dance.

9. But all this singing and dancing did but beate the aire, uncapable of any legible impression, in which posteritie might read this glorious victorie; therefore they thought it expedient to erect this Monument, as their ⁴ Tropheic, and as such a Gazett, as all the world might gaze at, and in it admire their Heroicall valour through all generations: and herein also they imitated, or rather emulated, the Isralites, who being delivered from the Egyptians, and having trampled the Red Sea and Jordan (opposing them) under their feet, did, by God's command, erect a Stonage of twelve Stones in the midst of Jordan, whence it was driven back, and they are ⁵ there, saith Josuah ⁶, unto this day, standing, perhaps, as a circular guard of Souldiers, up to their middle in water, as keeping in possession what had been conquered as aforesaid; and another such a Stonage of 12 Stones they carried to their first quarters, and erected them as a memoriall to the Children of Israell for ever. vers. 7.

¹ Psalm. 106. ver. 20. &c. ² Sic. H. ³ Sic. H. ⁴ A τρίφω, to turne, because it was set at the place, where their Enemies were turned to flight, at the beginning of the traine of the Burrowes aforesaid, &c. ⁵ They MS. H. ⁶ Joshua the 4th 8th.

This Trophie of these Giants was called Manynng, orthogr. Manynng, (i. e.) Giants great Stone, observable in the 3 Manynng fords, so called, because at each of those villages there are fords to pass over that River, which runeth downe near to Manynng, or Giants great Stones. So that although that River is commonly called Abon (i. e.) the River, yet the proper name is Manynng, the Giants great Stones, from runing down near them, as Normanton, orth. Northmanton, (i. e.) the Towne standing nearest to them; and all this may be exemplified by other old British Trophies, all resembling Stonage in their circular formes, British names, and some other respects, although not in magnificence, as

1. The first was also called Mannton near Marlburrowe, from a pettie Stonage there, of eight huge Stones, now called the broad Stones, antiently standing, but now lying circularly in London way, testified to be a British Trophie, by the fragments of mens bones found in the Burrowes in the fields adjoyning.

2. On Sebenburrowes hill, 4 Miles West of Marleburrow near London way, are 40 great Stones, sometimes standing, but now lying in a large Circle, inclosing an inner circle of 16 great Stones, now lying also, testified to be an old British Trophie by the Anglo-British name thereof, (viz.) Seaven Burrowes, and by those 7 huge Burrowes very near it with fragments of mens bones.

3. At Stanton Du, six miles on the South of Bristol, are 8 Stones bigger then the greatest of those at Stonage, but their topps broken off, so that they are not above 12 foot high standing circularlie, and round about, within 200 yeard of those 8, are, at least, 60 more smaller stones, 6, 7 or 8 foot high, standing upright.

This was an old British Trophie, as may appear by the name thereof, retined still in the name of the parrish, in which it stands, viz. Stanton-Dyu, the Stone Town of Victorie. 2 by the smaller stones, monuments of the Conquerours friends ¹ their slain, one of which being lately fallen, in the Pitt, in which it stood, were found the crumbes of a man's bones, and a round bell, like a large horse-bell, with a skrew as the stemme of it; whence I conjecture, that as the circle of large Stones was the Trophie of victorie, so those smaller were monuments of friends slain in wining the Victorie, (for Victors would not honour their enemies with such monuments :) and the bell was part of an old Briton's Weapon, there buried with it's owner, and, I suppose, the like bones and bells may be found under the othter small stones, confirming the præmises. For Mr. Speed, in his Chronicle, pictureth an old Briton naked, Lions, Beares, Serpents painted on him to terrifie enemies, ² with a Lance in his hand, on the butt end whereof is such a bell screwed fast, which served in steade of a Trumpett to alarme, and a clubb to dash out the enemies braines, and this bell was, I suppose, the permanent part of that old Briton's weapon there buried with his owner, according to the old custome, continued to this day, in burying Souldiers weapons with them, at least in carrying them on their Coffins to their graves.

4. In Denbigh shire ¹ is a famous monument of a circle of great Stones, called Sereg y Druidion, (i. e.) the Stones of Victorie, alias the stones of the Druides, (i. e.) Priests sacryficeing at Victories.

5. In Mount Gomerie Shire ² there is an high Mountain, called Corndon, on which there is a famous monument of great stones, standing circularly, a Trophie of Victory.

6. At Biscaw Maum in Cornwall ³ are 21 great Stones in a Circle, the greatest standing in the Center, a Trophie of Victorie.

7. At Hochsnorton in Oxford Shire ⁴ 36 very great stones in a circle, called Roll-rich-stones, and this, as all the former, deemed Trophies of Victorie, by that Oracle of antiquities Mr. Cambden, who, for the excellencie of his knowledge in affaires of this Nature, was created King at armes, and if all these pettie, or diminutive, Stonages were Trophies of Victorie, then, surely, their great grandfather Stonage was a Trophie of that Victorie aforesaid.

Q. But what kind of Stones are they? how brought hither? and sett up in this place?

A. Quot homines tot sententiæ, the first is, that monstrous legend of Monmouth, and his Giants bringing them per mare, per terras, out of the utmost parts of Africa, to Kildart, &c. of which a little, but too much, already.

2. The second is, that childish tale of Childrie, who, because he could find no small stones on Salisburie plaines, dreamed¹, that nature had aggregated all the lapidifick Vertue of that country into Stonage.

3. The third is, that of Inigo², who might truly have said out I goe, when, after he had affirmed, fol. ³ 10. they were hewen out of a quarrie at Alburie, he said, they are so churlish and extream hard, that they disdain the touch of tooles, and if they were hewne out from thence, tell me, how they were brought 15 miles over hills and dales from thence to Stonage, & eris mihi magnus Apollo.

4. The fourth is, that of learned Cambden, who supposeth⁴ them to be saxa factitia ex arena pura & ⁵ unctuoso aliquo coagmentata.

5. And I am confident they are saxa factitia, great artificial stones, made of many small naturall Stones, ⁶ made of many small naturall Stones". That a Limekilne was there erected, which being filled with limestones, extraordinarily coaled, were melted with fervent heat into a birdlime-like substance, which was let runne out into such variety of Cisterns, one after another, as formed them for their severall places, into which they were drawne up by some Crane, or other Engine.

1. My reasons are; first, itt was impossible to work them into their severall formes. Free stones may be wrought to any, but these churlish stones to no, forme, in regard of hardness and brittleness.

2. Iron ⁷ ginnes, chimney back-stones, stone-inges, the pillers of the late royall exchange, the 8 great pillers of Stanton-Dru Trophie, were all cast stones, formed some of one, some of another, sort of melted stones, and why might not Stonage-stones be so also? Surely heere was such an aggregation for a saxification, but not made by Minerva, as Childrie doteth, but Mars, or indeed by the Martiall old Britons, who having been active in gaining the victorie, were officious in gathering together the small stones of the plaines to be melted into great ones, and so nullorum manibus grande levatur onus, an old British limeburner and his stonegethers performed this opus herculissimum.

10. This trophie was a Temple, or rather a Tropicall Temple. For first, it was the common practice of the heathens, to promise and vow Temples as Trophies to their supposed Gods, or Goddessess, of Victorie, in case they would give them some great Victorie, which when they had obtained, they surely built it accordingly in the place aforesaid of an ordinarie Trophie, so it was called a Tropicall Temple, and, upon this account, the Romans usuallie vowed and built Temples as Trophies to Mars, Victoria, &c. and upon this account Canutus built ¹ a Temple at Ash downe, and all other places where he wone Victories; yea some Christians have imitated heathens in this particuler, as King William the Conquerour, once, though he built not a Temple to Mars, yet he did an Abbey to St. Martin, as a Trophie, in the place where he conquered King Herald, the ruines whereof in Sussex are called Battle abbey to this day.

2. Stonage was a Temple in respect of the magnificence thereof. Any such circle of rough stones, as aforesaid, served well enough for a Trophie, but this was a magnificent Tropicall Temple, or Templarie Trophie.

3. Stonage was of a Circuler forme, according to the forme of all other heathonish Temples.

4. In that it stood sub dio, open to the heavens and ayre. For the Heathens ¹ accounted it a great sin to imprison their Gods within roofs and walls, who would have liberty (as they thought) to be abroad doing good.

5. It was the opinion of our great Architector ² (orthodox in this point) saying, I am clearely of opinion, that Stonage was originally a Temple.

6. Wilton, within 2 miles of Stonage, was antiently called Ulandune (pronounced Ellandune) (i.) Temple-downe, not in regard of any such thing in it self, but in regard it was so near the said heathonish Temple, and the Earles of Wiltshire were antiently stiled Earles of Ellandune, and if Wilton, the old Metropolis of Wiltshire, took it's antient name from this Temple, then consequently Wiltshire, and all the rest of the Wills about Stonage, as Willisbourne, Willfall, Willford, and Wilsford, Wiscott, and Willcot situate some on one, some on other, of the Rivers near Stonage, took their Templarie names from, and must then restore them to, Stonage, to prove that it was a Temple, and so must all those Villages near it, whose names begin with Chel or ⁴ Cil, which antiently were Cel and Cil, signifying, properlie, the Cell of a Temple, but here synecdochichallie (the chief part for the whole) a Temple; so that, according to the rule aforesaid, Chilton termeth Stonage a Temple, Cheltenham an elegant Temple, but Cheltenham the Giants elegant Temple. And if Stonage was such a triumphant Tropicall Temple of singing and dancing, then, surely, no such sepulchre of sorrow, or monument of mourning, weeping, wailing and gnashing of teeth, erected by the old Britons for Aurelius Ambrosius, according to Polydorus Virgilius, or for the old Britons by Aurelius Ambrosius, according to Galfridus Monumethensis, or for Queen Baodicca by the Iceni, according to Anonimus. For never any sepulchre bare any aspect like this monument, but far different in forme, manner and composure. The severall pillers of Rachell and Absolon, the ' columnes of Vespasian and Trajane, the one having his shield, the other a Colossus on the topp of it, had no resemblance with this. Neither had the Obelisks of Mitres or Ramesis, or the Piramides of Memphis, or Arsinoe, or the Mausoleum of Arthemisia, any resemblance with Stonage. And how much did the sepulchre of King Arthur, ² buried at Glaffenburse in an hallowed Oake, with a little Pyramis at the head, and another at the feet, differ from this? Is there any probability, that King Arthur and Ambrosius, fellow Christians, Coætaniens, living and dying so near together in time and place, that the one should be buried and monumented according to the custome of the old British Kings and Princes, and the other as never man before, or since? Amongst all nations sepulchres were alwaies such sollid piles, as might be truly termed monuments, (i. e.) remains, not ayerious, with frequent openings and void spaces within, and subject to ruine, but this was such, therefore no sepulchre, but a Temple.

II. And this Temple was consecrated to Andraste, aliàs Anraith, aliàs Andates, their Goddess of Victorie.

For to whome else would, or could, they dedicate a Temple for Victorie, but to their supposed Goddess of Victorie? She was termed Andraste, in relation to the Conquerors, from ¹ ἀνδραῖος, a manlie virago, not quasi, but quia, vir agens, playing the man, and, in respect of the conquered, Anraith. For as ῥαῖδ signified a Spear, so Anraid and Anraith unseparated, figuratively disarmed and bereft of all treasures, garments, food and other necessaries to maintaine life; and it is observable, that some parts of those names, Andraste, Anraith and Andates, are retained in the names of some of the circumjacent Villages to this day;

1. as Andraste in Andros Lunsdon. There is a Berri Blunsdon, a broade Blunsdon, and an Andros Lunsdon, and Andros Lunsdon is nearest to the Temple of Andraste; two Ogburnes, George Ogburne, and Andros Ogburne, nearest to this Temple of Andraste; ² Callingburne, Callingbourne, Callingburne Kingston, and Callingburne Andros, and Callingburn Andros nearest to this Temple of Andraste. The name of Anraith is retained in Parnsburie Castle, (orthog. y Anraithsburie Castle;) in Great Amesburie and Little Amesburie, ³ wick Mr. Speede, in his Mapp, terms Ansburie, (i. e.) Anraithsburie, so distinguished from y Anraithsburie Castle, and upon the same account the two Ansties and Ans hills might be Anraithstie and Anraiths hill, but euphonied to what they are now, because they did stick in the teeth in pronunciation. Andates in Andover, (orthog. Andwofur;) Andates river running through it, and Andeverley hundred; so that whereas

Q. But of what forme and countenance was this Idoll? Gildas sapiens (alias Badonicus) an old Briton, borne at Bathe about 20 miles from Stonage Anno Domini 493. in his Book de excidio Britannorum describeth the Idols of that his native Country in these words:

Nec enumerans patriæ portenta ipsa diabolica, pene numero Ægyptiaca vincientia, quorum nonnulla, lineamentis adhuc deformibus, intra vel extra desertu mœnia solito more rigentia, torvis cultibus intuemur. He

1. doth characterize them, first by their monstrous shape, implied in the word portenta.

2. by their Father and Patron, in ipsa Diabolica.

3. by their multitude, in pene numero Ægyptiaca vincientia, although they Goddified their very Leeks and Onyons, to encrease their number, insomuch that Juvenal scoffed at them, saying, felices gentes, quibus hæc noscuntur, etc.

4. by their deformed lineaments, in lineamentis deformibus.

5. by their Temples, in intra vel extra mœnia.

6. by their long standing in the word, adhuc, from the begining of the world till his daies.

7. by their bullish countenances, in torvis cultibus.

For torvus comes from Taurus. Gold. Dictio. and as these words of Gildas, so the bullish names of divers circumjacent parrishes, do intimate, that Anraith was a very Bullegger, as Bulford, two Blundons, orthog. Bul- ians.

lanDownes, (i. e.) Bulls-Temple Downes, and Mill-fall, orthog. Bullfall, (i. e.) Bul Devil, and why might not the old Britons have their Bul Devil, as well as the Israelites their Calf Devill, and the Egyptians their Or Devil, Apis?

12. In this Temple the said Victors sacrificed their Captives and Spoiles to their said Idoll of Victorie, where I shall shew, that

1. The said Britons usually sacrificed their Captives and Spoiles,

2. to Andates, aliàs Anraith, in Temples consecrated.

3. That they sacrificed their captives and spoiles there in this Temple of Andate.

The Britons usually sacrificed their Captives and Spoiles of war, according to the testimony of Julius Cæsar¹, when he invaded this Island, Qui in bello versantur, aut pro victimis homines ²*immolant, aut se inmoluturos covent*, (i. e.) They which addict themselves to warr either sacrifice, or vow they will sacrifice men, (i. e.) their Captives, as Victimes for Victory (saith he). The Majesty of the immortal ³*Godess would not be pleased, unless they offer up the life of a Captive, or the life of a man, and they have sacrificed or publickly instituted, and some of them* (saith he) make hallow images of vast magnitude, with twiggs wreathed about together, whose members they fill up with living men, (i. e.) Captives, and so burn the Images, men and all together: and these ⁴*instanses* are sufficient to prove, that the old Britons did usually sacrifice their Captives.

2. They usually sacrificed their Captives and spoiles to Andates in her Temple; and this I prove out of Cornelius Tacitus. The Romans having conquered Britaine, tyrannized so intollerably over them, that Prasutagus, King of the Iceni, that he might free his Subjects from their calamities, made the Romane Emperor Nero his Heir, hoping that he, and his, should thereby have the more favour, during his life at least; but the Romanes taking all for their owne, presently tyrannized infinitely the more, whipped his Queen Baodicea, ravished his daughters, and plundered his Subjects of all their estates, whereupon his wife Baodicea (whom Gildas termes the subtile Lioness) stirring up first the Trinobantes (i. e.) the Londoners, and afterwards the Britons in generall, raised a most bloody warr against the Romans, cut off their two Colonies Verolanium, and Camalodunum, destroyed ¹three in the Legion, put Catus Decianus to flight, destroyed 80000 of them, some by the sword, and some by sacrificing them with the greatest crueltie to Andates in her Temple.

And that those old Britons sacrificed their Captives also to Andates in this her Temple, may appear by this, that it had all accomodations for such heathonish sacrifices, as an internall, or spatious, Court, lying round about, marked with the Letter A in the frontispice, wherein the Victimes for oblation were slain, into which it was unlawfull for any prophane person to enter. It was seperated from the circumjacent plain with a large trench, (marked with B) instead of a wall, as a boundarie about the Temple, most conformable to the maine work, wholly exposed to open view. Without this Trench the common promiscuous multitude, with zeal too much attended their Idolatrous sacrifices, and might see the oblations, but not come within them. * * * * *

- akres, fields. So that the Word was taken formerly in a more extended Sense than it is at this this day, when we confine it to a measure of Land containing 40 Perches in Length, and 4 in Breadth. And indeed as Akre denotes Field (and not that small Quantity of Ground, which we now adays understand by it) it agrees exactly with the original Saxon word Acepe, from whence it comes. For, saith Somner in his Saxon Dictionary, "Acepe. "Ager, campus. a field. Vocabulum omnibus Europæis fere commune, ut viro doctissimo jam observatum, Notis in Willeramum, p. 143". And truly 'tis worth while taking notice, that the Acre of land (notwithstanding the former quantity prescribed) is not in every place in this land of like quantity; for the Cornish acre is said to contain a Carew of land. 6. E. 3. 283. and in the Commentary of Mr. Ploden the Cornish Acre is said to contain an hundred other Acres. Com. Throg. & Tracy 154¹. And sometimes it hath been noted to be the same with a yard land, scil. 34 or 30 Acres², tho' even the yard land also differs much in different places. From this extensive signification of the word in old time I cannot but observe, that whereas in some places, where there have been undoubtedly Roman Works, the common people, as well as others, make use of Castle Acre, to distinguish such a piece of Ground where they have been, I think we ought not to restrain that term to our modern narrow Acceptation of the word, but look upon it to be meant in the old sense, so as to denote an intire Field. So whereas by Castle Acre in Weycock field, in the Parish of Lawrence - Waltham near Maidenhead in Berks, the Country people commonly understand, no more ground than what is now generally known by the term Acre, I rather think, that 'tis to be understood of the whole Field, at least of a great many of our common Acres, and that the Building there was very large, a thing which the great number of Antiquities found in the Field proves very plainly, in reference to which I shall here transcribe, what I put down in one of my MSS.³ a few years since, when, in my walk, I lay at Hare-Hatch, and the next day went through this Field, as I have upon occasion done several times. And the word was so well approved of afterwards, that even the person, that undertook to metaphrase him (tho' his performance was but indifferent) about the time of K. Henry VI. kept to the very word, as may appear from the intire Passage, as I have here transcrib'd it from the vellum MS. of this Metaphrase, that was lent me (since I publish'd Robert of Gloucester) by a curious Gentleman, viz. Thomas Ward of Longbridge, near Warwick, Esq. Noman myght thynke the loue that was betwene him [K. Hen. II.] and seynt Thomas. The ancients used to write upon the bark of trees, particularly upon the bark of beech trees, the greatest plenty whereof, among us, grew in that Province call'd, probably from thence, Buckinghamshire. Afterwards even pieces of Wood were called also bokes, insomuch that boka¹ also signify'd an old bit of Wood.*

Of such Pieces of Wood Chimney-pieces formerly consisted, upon which inscriptions were sometimes cut by our Ancestors, as there were also now and then when they were made of Stone. Such Pieces had often Mouths to them. Such is that published by Dr. Wallis.

The French Word bouche, therefore, very properly signifies os or mouth. In which signification is also to be taken the Word boka in the following old Inscription, written over a Chimney-piece, or rather cut in stone, at Puddleton in Dorsetshire.

Dominus Willelmus Owen
vicarius istius loci, Quod boka icy.

Quod (the same with quoth) for inquit or saith, is often found in MSS. particularly after the Reign of Edw. II^d. about which time I take this Inscription to be. And I find it expressly many times in Mr. Sheldon's old MS. of the Lives of the Saints. Icy is the same as hic. So that the meaning of the last line is, saith the Mouth [of the Chimney] here.

The Word boon, for a favour, good Turn, or Request, (from the Saxon bene, postulatio, petitio, rogatio) is now in common use. And it denotes also a blessing; to which purpose 'tis well apply'd to K. Charles I. (a King so calm, so patient, so mercifull, more like to a natural Father than a Prince, that such another, for an excellent temper, and all perfections belonging to a good Prince, was never read of before in the Stories of this Land¹, and therefore, as I said, the Word is properly used of him) in p. 100. of a very loyal, and very scarce little Book (consisting of six Sheets and an half, and printed in 12°. at London A. D. 1660.) intit. Cromwell's bloody slaughter-house; or, his damnable Designes laid and practised by him and his Negro's, in contriving the murder of his Sacred Majesty King Charles I. discovered. By a Person of Honour. I say this word boon for a blessing is properly us'd in this little Book, this excellent Prince being certainly one of the greatest Blessings ever bestowed upon these Kingdoms, tho' his Rebellious Subjects made a very ill use of it. The Stationer in the Preface to this small, but very valuable, Treatise acquaints us (that I may observe this by the way) that it was penn'd many years before it came out, and was sent over from the Hague to be Printed here, for his Majesty's service; but that 'twas hindered (till after the Restoration) upon this occasion. The Printer, to whose care it was commended, fell into some trouble, for some Acts of Loyalty, which were then call'd Treason; such as were the Printing K. Charles the 1st's incomparable Book, intituled ΕΙΚΩΝ ΒΑΣΙΛΙΚΗ, in English, Latin, French and Italian: Salmasii Defensio Regia: Elenchus Motuum nuperorum in Anglia, by Dr. Bates; and some other things of the like nature. He was committed to Newgate; his Press and other Materials seized upon and carried away by Huns-cott; his Wife and six children turned out of doors, and threatned to be tried by an high Court of In-justice. When it appear'd, those of rebellious Principles were strangely nettled at it, especially when they saw, that the Author had discovered (in p. 33. as well as in the Frontispiece of the Book) that Hugh Peters was the disguised Villuin, that cut off this blessed King's Head. Who the Author was, I cannot say. My learned Friend Mr. Baker of Cambridge suspects it to have been done by Clem. Walker, Esq; whose third Part of the History of Independency bears the like Title, viz. The High Court of Justice, or Cromwel's New Slaughter House &c. but it was printed before the year 1660. and reprinted that year in 4to. and nothing is there said of Hugh Peters being the Executioner, who tho' he had guilt enough to deserve hanging, yet (in the Trial of the Regicides) seems to clear himself of that part of the charge, by

by proving, he was sick in his Bed all the day of the King's Murther, and the Judges seem to absolve him from that Crime, tho' it was sworn against him. Indeed that seems to me to be very true, which is observ'd by William Lilly the Astrologer in his Life, written by himself, which I have seen, under his own hand, in the Ashmolean Museum, viz. that Lieutenant Collonel Joyce was the very person, that did this barbarous Execution; nor can I think, that any will look upon it as at all improbable, that shall consider the impudence of that vile Fellow, and how he was prompted and instigated to undertake this villainous Action by that Arch-Rebell, Oliver Cromwell, who was as great an Enemy to the Church of England, as this King was a Friend to it, it being his sincere Affection to this excellent Church (the Rights of which he would not give up) that brought him to the Block, a thing which Bishop Andrews had predicted many years before it happened, as may appear from an authentic Paper (transcribed from a MS. in the Ashmolean Museum, and given to me, by Mr. Jones, one of the Assistants of that place) which I have printed in the Appendix to my Preface¹.

 Brute, (in the Prologue of Rob. of Brunne,) Brute. þe Brute alle þat þe Latyn spellen, all that the Latin tells of Brute. or, it may be, 'tis here the same with bruit or a story. And so perhaps the English Chronicle call'd Brute of England (of which there are many MS. where of one, tho' imperfect in several places, which is pity, it being otherwise a Book of very good note, was given me very lately by my Friend Mr. Burman of Christ-Church in Oxford) was stiled not from Brutus, but from the Notion receiv'd at that time, when the Compiler lived, that Brute was an History or Story; and then Brute of England will be no more than the History or Story of England. Yet I do not know, but the word bruit for a Story in general, might owe it's original to the Word Brutus, who used formerly to be so much talk'd of, as giving Name to Britannia. This is certain, that, in the said Prologue of Brunne, these Words, Maÿster Wace þe Brute all redes, are the same as,

It came afterwards to have various significations. Hence Ebrardus Bethuniensis (an author who flourished in the year 1212. ¹) in his Græcis-mus ²:

Bulla, tumor laticis, Nola, Sidus, Gemma, Sigillum, Bulla notat Gemmam, Stellam, vestem puerorum, Ornamenta sil. . . bullas, & balthea signat.

But the Signification, that more nearly concerns us, is that, which relates to the Briefs or Mandats of the Pope ³, which are called Bulls, from the lead, and sometimes golden Seal affixed thereto, which Seal Matth. Latin Glossary (that I have) written, as I take it, about the time of K. Edw. I. and is the same that is cited by the learned Mr. Dodwell ³, (to whom I had sent some Passages out of it:) Bulla, ut ait Papias, ornamentum est regalium puerorum, vel equorum, vel camelorum, quia hujusmodi ornamenta ponebantur circa colla eorum. In signum etiam nobilitatis nobiles pueri portabant bullas, à collo pendentes. Dicuntur bullæ, quia similes sunt rotunditate bullis, quæ in aqua vento inflantur; vel dicuntur bullæ à bulliando. Item bulla dicitur, quæ fit in aqua ex cadente pluvia, & vento inflante. Item invenitur etiam pro stella. Unde Ovidius Methamor. ex. gracia, ⁴ Intumuit sicut pluvia perlucida cælo surgere bulla solet. Idem bullam vocat Ivo vestem, & papale sigillum. The Form of Absolution by the Pope's Bull I find express'd thus, in a small Quarto Paper MS. written about the time of K. Hen. VI. and lent me by Thomas Ward, of Longbridge near Warwick, Esq; (containing, among other Things, a Latin account of the finding the Holy Cross:)

from equus a Horse; because they were esteemed Equites ¹, who having a publick Horse, did receive the stipend of a Horseman to serve in the Wars: and indeed one part of the Ceremony, whereby this Honor became conferred, was the giving of a Horse, bestowed on them at the Publick Charge. And it must be noted, withall, that ² the word used to denote the Degree of Knighthood, in the several Dialects of other Nations, hath the same derivation, to wit, from a Horse; for in the French, a Knight is called Chevalier; (which was a Word also much used by our English Ancestors, and it very frequently occurs in our MSS. as it does also in Mr. Dodsworth's MSS. Collections:) in the German, Ridder; in the Italian, Cavagliero; (to which Italian term our modern English Word Cavalier, now commonly used for a truly honest man, such as those that suffered for K. Charles I. &c. answers:) nay even in the ancient British, Morchog; concerning some of which, hear also (saith Mr. Ashmole ³) one of Geoffry Chaucer's Scholars.

⁴ Eques, ab Equo, is said of very ryght,
 And Chevalier, is said of Chevalrie,
 In which a Rider called is a Knight, Arongers done also specific Caballiero through all that partie,
 Is name of worship, and so took his 'ginning,
 Of Spurs of Gold, and chiefly Riding.

And altho the Latin Word Miles, and the English Word Knight, had not their derivation from a Horse, as those had that are before enumerated; yet they are now restrained to a Title of Honor (notwithstanding heretofore they had other significations) and are ordinarily used to express a dubbed Knight. And such kind of dubbed Knights were those four wretched Knights, that slew Saint Thomas a Becket, mentioned thus in his Life, written about the time of King Edward the 1st, in a MS. ⁵ that is refer'd to by Mr. Ashmole ⁶:

 And Sir William Traci, and Sir Richard le Brut.

Mr. Ashmole notes ⁴, that these four Knights in the same MS. are term'd luther Knights, a very proper Appellation for those, that, by their vileness and wickedness, forfeit their Vertue and the Honour of Knighthood, as certainly all do that are concerned in treacherous and disloyal Acts. And therefore, even in the primitive bloody Persecutions, such Knights (Equites) as appear'd most zealous against the Christians, lost also their Honour, however instigated and countenanced by the Emperours, as acting against common humanity, the light of the Gospel that they had heard, and abetting the Designs of the grand Rebell the Devil himself. There were many wicked men of this nature in Britain, in the time of Diocletian, and we have Accounts of their Cruelties represented not only in old Writings, particularly Martyrologies (one MS. of which I purchas'd lately) but in Pictures and old Stones, some of which Stones are of Alabaster, and are very curious in their kind. I saw an Alabaster one (but broke) in a Friend's hands lately, in which is represented the torture of some very holy Person (a Bishop, I suppose) with a Mitre on, in a very barbarous cruel manner. I cannot be positive when it was done, tho' I think it was about the time of Richard I. The Ruffians have the Visages of Saracens. The Shoes are of the Age I have mentioned. Archbishops, Bishops and Abbots had rarely Mitres, 'till a thousand Years after Christ, tho' Women had them commonly before that Period, but of a different make from those used afterwards by men. I

The Roods that were in Churches and Chappels were placed in Shrines, that were stiled Roodlofts. "Roodloft" (saith Blount²) "a Shrine whereon was placed the Cross of Christ. The Rood was an image of Christ on the Cross, made generally of wood, and erected in a loft for that purpose, just over the passage out of the Church into the Chancel." But Roodloft sometimes also signifies a Shrine, on which was placed the Image or Relicks of a Saint, because generally a Crucifix or a Cross used likewise to attend such Images or Relicks. I am, therefore, inclin'd to think, that even the fine Image of the Assumption of the Virgin Mary, found on Friday³ Febr. 7. 1723. just within the Church of Sandford, near Oxford, stood in a Roodloft there, and that it was removed and hid, being made part of the Floor of the Church, (for the Face

An Act for the abolishing and putting awaie of diuerse bookes and images.

Where the kings most excellent maiestie hath of late set fourth and established by authoritie of parlement, an yniforme, quiet, and godlie order of common and open praier, in a booke intituled The booke of common praier, and administration of the sacraments, and other rites and ceremonies, after the church of England, to be vsed and obserued in the said church of England, agreeable to the order of the primitive church, much more comfortable vnto his louing subiects, than other diuersitie of seruice as heeretofore of long time hath bene vsed, being in the said booke ordeined nothing to be read, but the verie pure word of God, or which is eidentlie grounded vpon the same, and in the other things corrupt, vntrue, vaine, and superstitious, and as it were a preparation to superstition, which for that they be not called in, but permitted to remaine vndefaced, doo not onelie giue occasion to such peruerse persons, as doo impugne the order and godlie meaning of the kings said booke of common praier, to continue in their old accustomed superstitious seruice, but also minister great occasion to diuersitie of opinions, rites, ceremonies and seruices. Be it therefore enacted by the king our soueraigne lord, the lords spirituall and temporall, and the commons in this present parlement assembled, that all bookes called antiphoners, missals, grails, processionals, manuels, legendies, pies, portuasses, primers in Latine or English, couchers, iournals, ordinals, or other bookes or writings whatsoeuer, heeretofore vsed for seruice of the church, written or printed in the English or Latine toong, other than such as are or shall be set forth by the kings maiestie, shall be by authoritie of this present act cleerlie and vtterlie abolished, extinguished, and forbidden for euer to be vsed, or kept in this realme, or elsewhere within anie the kings dominions.

And be it further enacted by the authoritie aforesaid, that if anie person or persons, of what estate, degree, or condition so euer he, she, or they be, bodies politike or corporat, that now haue, or heerafter shall haue in his, hir, or their custodie, anie the bookes or writings of the sorts aforesaid, or anie images of stone, timber, alabaster, or earth, grauen, carued, or painted, which heeretofore hane bene taken out of anie church or chapell, or yet stand in anie church or chapell, and doo not, before the last day of June next insuing, deface and destroye, or cause to be defaced and destroyed the same images and enerie of them, and deliuer or cause to be deliuered, all and euerie the same bookes to the maior, bailiffe, constable, or church-wardens of the towne, where such bookes then shall be, to be by them deliuered ouer o-penlie within three months next folowing after the said deliuerie to the archbishop, bishop, chancellor, or commissarie of the same diocesse, to the intent the said archbishop, bishop, chancellor, or commissarie, and euerie of them, cause them immediatlie either to be openlie burnt, or otherwaies defaced and destroyed, shall for euerie such booke or bookes willinglie retained in his, hir, or their hands or custodie, within this realme, or elsewhere within anie the kings dominions, and not deliuered, as is aforesaid, after the said last daie of June, and be thereof lawfullie conuict, forfeit and loose to the king our souereigne lord, for the first offense ten shillings, and for the second offense shall forfeit and loose being thereof lawfullie conuict, foure pounds, and for the third offense, shall suffer imprisonment at the kings will.

And be it further enacted by the authoritie aforesaid, that if anie maiors, bailiffes, constables, or church-wardens, doo not within three moneths after the receipt of the same bookes, deliuer or cause to be deliuered, such bookes so by them them receiued, to the archbishop, bishop, chancellor or commissaries of their diocese: and if the said archbishops, bishops, chancellor, or commissaries, doo not within fortie daies after the receipt of such bookes, burne, deface, and destroie, or cause to be burned, defaced or destroyed the same bookes, and euerie of them, that then they and euerie of them so offending, shall loose and forfeit to our souereigne lord the king, being there of lawfullie conuict, fortie pounds: the one halfe of all such forfeitures shall be to anie of the kings subjects, that will sue for the same, in anie of the kings courts of record, by bill, plaint, action of debt, or information, in which action no essoine, protection, wager of law, or other delaie shall be allowed.

And for better execution of the same act, be it enacted by the authoritie aforesaid, that as well iustices of assise in their circuits, as iustices of peace, within the limits of their commission in the generall sessions, shall haue full power and authoritie, to inquire of the offenses aforesaid, and to heare and determine the same in such forme as they may doo in other such like cases.

Prouiued alwaies, that this act or anie thing therein contained, shall not extend to anie image or picture, set or grauen vpon anie roome in anie church, chapell, or churchyard, one lie for a monument of anie king, prince, nobleman, or other dead person, which hath not bene commonlie reputed and taken for a saint, but that all such pictures and images may stand and continue in like maner and forme, as if this act had neuer bene had nor made, anie thing in this act to the contrarie in anie wise notwithstanding.

Prouiued alwaies, and be it enacted by authoritie aforesaid, that anie person or persons, may vse, keepe, haue and reteine anie primers in the English or Latine toong, set foorth by the late king of famous memorie king Henrie the eight, so that the sentences of inuocation or praier to saints, in the same primers, be blotted or cleerlie put out of the same, anie thing in this act to the contrarie notwithstanding.

This was one of the extravagant vagant Acts (as some call them) made in those times. 'Tis incredible to think, what a vast number of curious Books and Monuments perished by virtue of it. The Reader will take the more notice of it, because I have transcrib'd it from an Edition of our Acts, in which are many Particulars that have been left out in later Editions. The Sandford Image (made of Barrington Stone by Burford, and painted) is certainly comprehended in this Act. I look upon it to be as old as the Reign of K. Edw. III^d. and as the Artists us'd to have some fine Lady of their own time in view, when they wrought Images of the Virgin Mary, so I am of opinion, that the Face (which is a little damag'd, as the Arms are also broke off) of this Image was intended by the Artist for that of Q. Philippa, a thing which I noted also (soon after it was discovered) in one

But now, if any one should think, as I once did ², that this Image did not originally belong to Sandford Church, it may be he will not judge it absurd to believe, that it belong'd either to the Chappel by the great Ivy House at Sandford, or else to the Minchery at Littlemore, and that in Hen. VIIIth time, when such a Destruction of Religious Houses was made, it was removed to Sandford Church, as to the more safe Place, since Parochial Churches were not ordered to be destroyed or pulled down.

I have often been willing to think, that K. Edw. VI. had he lived to a mature age, would have repented of the Act above published, and of many other Things, that he was drawn to consent to by bad Counsellors, such as his own Godfather Cranmer, who (as well as Cardinal Wolsey) had likewise suggested many unworthy Things to this young King's Father Hen. VIII. a Prince of himself, without such Prompters, naturally ready to commit Barbarities, and to involve himself in Sacrilege, of which there are deplorable Instances, one of which many have look'd upon to be the beheading of Bishop Fisher, a thing of it self that, as these men observe, was enough to draw down severe Judgments. One of these Observers was Richard Hall, D. D. sometime ³ of Christ's coll. in Cambridge (the same ⁴, of which Bishop Fisher was a member) afterwards Canon, and Official of the Cathedral Church at St. Omer's, who dying in the year 1604. left behind him in MS. the Life of this most venerable Prelate, which was printed at London in 8vo. in the year 1655. by Dr. Thomas Bayly, but with very many and unwarrantable Alterations, as may appear in part from the Conclusion of this Life; which Conclusion I shall here take the opportunity of publishing from a MS. Copy, that I have¹, of the Life, that it may be the more easily compared with the said Dr. Bayly's Edition. But then it must not from hence be inferr'd, that I am of the same persuasion with Dr. Hall, the original Author of this Life. Dr. Bayly would have maintain'd a better Character, had he published it faithfully; and, therefore, tho' Dr. Hall and my self happen to be of different persuasions (for I profess my self to be a sincere, tho' very unworthy, Member of the Church of England) yet in publishing MSS. I look upon it as a forfeiture of one's honesty and honour, to make them speak otherwise than the Authors of them both wrote and thought. I am apprehensive, what will be objected against Dr. Hall, upon account of this Specimen only, and much more upon account of the whole, were I to publish it. Let the whole blame of the composition fall upon the Dr. who is now above all calumny; and as for my self, if there be any hurt faithfully to transcribe and publish, upon occasion, a Citation from an historical Author, I am ready to undergo the Censures, that such Readers shall be pleased to pass upon me.

owne dayes, and some since, shall easilie perceive that he [Fisher] was a man, for his profound learning and rare vertue, highlie revered and esteemed throughout Christendome. And no doubt, but if his writings and doings be well compared, ye shall find him most like those holy Fathers and Doctors, that, in the ¹ primitive Church, laid the verie foundation and first ground of our beliefe, upon the which we have since rested and stayed our ² selves, whome to describe whollie and fullie unto you, according to his worthinesse, I will not take upon me to do it, neither am I able. No, were I as eloquent as Cicero, or as witty and subtil as Aristotle, as copious as Demosthenes, or as profound in philosophies as Plato, such, and so innumerable, were his ³ singuler vertues. But herin I will content my selfe with the generall commendacion, which all the famous universities of ⁴ devinitie in Europe do give this learned Father, by calling him blessed Martir, and alleaging his workes for great authoritie. Thus much I may also say, that unto Justus his predecessor, the first Bishoppe of Rochester, he was a just and true successour. The place of his birth he doth greatlie beautifie with the glorious Bishoppe St. John of Beverley. To the Countrey of Kent, where he was bishoppe, he is an ornament with St. Thomas of Canterburie; in gravetie of his writing he is to be revered with St. Bede; for stout defending the right and libertie of the holie Church, against the power of princes, he is not inferiour to the blessed bishoppe St. Ambrose, and St. Crystostome; in praying for his enemies and persecutors, he resembleth holie St. Stephen; in constancie and stoutnesse of his martirdom, he was a second Cyprian. But, above all other, he is most to be likened and compared to the holie Prophett and Martir of God St. John Baptist; and first, to sett aside all congruence in their names of John, it is to be noted, that as John lived in ⁵ wildernes a hard and solitarie life, in penance and punishment of himselfe, so this John lived a solitarie and austere life, in his private house and cell, saving when he was called abroad to other businesse, punishing himselfe with studie, hard lodging upon the mattes, fasting, praying, wearing of heare shirtes, and whipping himself. Likewise, as that John preached diligently the coming of Christ at hand, giving knowledge of salvation to all them that would beleeve and be baptised, so this John, with like diligence and care, warned the people by his continuall preaching and writing of Christe's departure at hand, in case they stopped not their eares against those horrible heresies, dailie preached and sett forthe unto them; And, as that John, died for a case of matrimony, contrarie in appearance, but agreeable in substance and truth, saying unto kinge Henrye, it is not lawfull for¹ the “to put away thy wife, and “take an other, though she “were once thy brother’s wife, “for thy brother is dead with- “out issue, and • then now “lawfullie married unto her by “dispensation and authoritye “of the Church.” For Herode, whom St. John Baptist reprehended, took to him his brother’s wife, his brother living, which³ is manifestlie repugnant to God’s Lawe, could not be done: But king Henrye tooke his brother’s wife, when his brother was dead without issue of her, which by Moyse Lawe is not in that case forbidden, and by the authoritye of the Church may be permitted as this was, and therefore was the mariage good and lawfull, and consequentlie the second detestable and unlawfull. Furthermore, as that John’s head was begged of king Herode at a banquet by a Psaltresse or woman dancer, so this John’s head was by a like person of king Henrye, as he sat banqueting and chearing at his house at Hamworth. As this John was beheaded on the birth day of kinge Herode, so this John was beheaded on the birth day of king Henrye, the king having accomplished that day the just age of fortie five yeares. And as the holie finger of that John with pointing to the Lambe, when he said, Ecce agnus dei, was miraculously preserved from Corruption long after his death and martirdome, so the holie head of this John, wherwith he stoutlie defended the head of our holie mother the Church, was by miracle preserved long after his martirdome with a fresh and livelie colour, till, by commaundement of the king, it was taken away, and conveyed out of sight. Finally, as in the person of that *John*⁴ their died thre severall functions or offices at once, that is to saye, of a Preist, a Prophet, and a Patriarke, so in the person of this John there died three like worthie vocations, that is to say, a Priest, a Bishope and a Cardinall. And thus we see, how the death of our holie John may be compared to St. John Baptiste’s death, and yet in verie deed for some respectes it surpasseth the death of St. John. And the wicked doings of kinge Henrye surpasseth likewise the wicked doings of king Herode. For St. John Baptist reprehend-

ed Herode, and would not allow his acte in taking onelie his brother's wife; but king Henrie, whome this our holie John reprehended, put away his lawfull and vertuous wife, and took to him, as is rehearsed, his own unlawfull daughter, made suer allreadie to another, and in honestie no better then an harlott. Herode was sorie for his rash promise to the woman dauncer when he heard her ask St. John's head, but king Henrie was nothing at all sorie for the promise he made of this our holy John's head, but wilfullie and maliciouslie sought all unlawfull meanes to cut it from the bodie, neither respecting his age, his vertue, his learninge, sanctytie of life, dignitie, nor other quality in his worthis personage. The fact of king Herod, for which St. John died, did most concerne the injurie, which Herode did to his brother, whose wife he took. But the fact of king Henrie, wherefore our blessed John died, not onelie touch the injurie committed against the vertuous ladie his lawfull wife, but it contained the expresse contempt of our holie father the Pope, and of the authoritie of the Catholike Church, besides the occasion of sinne and scandall, which it gave to the partie, that did pretend title to her, whome the king would nedes marry. But what should I speake of Herode, whose crueltie was nothing to be compared to this king? For in malice, which he showed to a great number of holie and learned men, principallie to this our holie father, he had never yet his like bearing the name of Christ, and professing his faith. In unthankfulnesse he was much worse then Alexander. For he did not onelie nothing consider the great affiance, which his noble father king Henrie the Vjjth. had in this holie man, making him, at his death, one of his executors (as we have before mentioned) nothing waying the singular affection and credit, that his Grandmother, that worthy Ladie, Margarett Countesse of Richmond and Darbie, had in him above all the Prelates and Bishops of this Land; but setting at naught the great Vertue, Learning and Holinesse, which he knew to be in this so rare a Bishope, and utterlie forgetting the honor and fame, which by him both he, and all his realme had gotten, like a most unthankfull Prince, and most contemptuous of his soveraigne and holie father the head of Christ in earth, sought out most wickedlie all the meanes he could, to intrappe this holie Bishopp and vertuous Cardinall; and contrarie both to the law of God, and decrees of our holie mother the Church, being a meere lay

Prince, and so having no Authority nor Jurisdiction, wherby he might lawfullie thus proceed against an anointed Bishoppe and Cardinal of the Church of Rome, but that by intending the least of the waies, that he used against him, must, of necessitie, incurre the sore and grevous Excommunication, accompanied with manie other dangers and inconveniences then can well be rehearsed: He, I say, contemning all these, did most wickedlye take upon him and usurpe the authoritie, which, before his daies, never Christian and Catholik Prince did, (and which John Calvin; an heretike, did utterlie detest and condemne in him;) and against all lawe and reason most cruellie put to death this man of God, over whome neither by Lawe, nor Custome, he could have anie Criminnall Jurisdiction, but ought, if he had made anie offence, to have referred the hearing and discussing of his crime to his Metropolitan, or rather to the cheefe Head of all Bishopps, to whome onelie the Judgement and hearing of a Bishoppe's crime in a spirituallcause, as this was, doth and allwaies hath of right appertained. And as the enormities of King Henric in this case were so exorbitant, and surpassing all Lawe, Reason and Conscience, so is the wonderfull working of Allmightie God, whose Judgements are secrett and strange in our sight, much to be marked and noted in him, and his adherentes. For as God of his owne nature is patient and long suffering, ¹ by cause he expecteth the amendment of our sinfull lives; so is he also just in his doings, and punisheth greivously when no amendment is iudevoured, as now may well be perceived by those persons, that were persecutors of this blessed man. For they escaped not the danger of his heavie hand, as shal bedeclared unto you.

And first to begin with the Ladie Anne Bullen, as the chefe and principall cause, for whome all this wofull tragedie began, who was also the chefe persecutor of this holie man, marke how she was, in short space, cast downe from the topp of her high honor and dignitie, wherin she was exalted, and for a most vile and abominable incest, committed with her owne brother, besides sundrie adulteries with other persons, was throwne into cruell and straite prison, where she remained not longe before she was condemned to death by sundrie noble men of this realme, that lately before were pliable and readie to please her in all her commaundements, whereof some were neare of kindred to her, yea one of them her owne father. According to which condemnation she was put to open and shamefull execution of death, leaving behind her nothing but an infamous name to remaine for ever, for whose losse the king himselfe tooke so little sorow, that the verie next day after she was dead, he was married to an other wife.

Next that the Lord Crumwell is to be remembred, who with a great diligence solicited the matter to the king, and earnestlie provoked him in this and manie other ill purposes. He being advaniced to such honor and authoritye, as no man in this realme, at that time, bare the like about the king, grew at last into such hatred amongst the noble men and commons¹ throughtout the realme, for his untollerable and tirannicall crueltie, exercised over them, that, finallie, he was by sundrie practises brought also into the king's displeasure, and so cast into miserable prison condemned to death by act of parliament for heresie and treason, and after executed according to his judgment, no man pitting his case.

Then cometh to mind Mr. Thomas Cranmer, archbishops of Caunterburie, who of his owne power, without just warrant, pronounced the sentence of divorce betwene the king and the Queene, and after calling this holy man before him and others, cast him into prison, with as much extremitie as could be shewed, for refusing the two othes, the one of the king's new marriage, the other of the supremacie, from whence he was never delivered, till death rid him of all worldlie cares. Thus Mr. Cranmer although he continued his place and dignity, during the unnaturall and cruell times of king Henrie, and the infant his sonne king Edward; yet, at last, in the raigne of that most blessed ladie Queene Marie, when the true light of Justice of Christe's ancient and Catholike religion began againe to shine, he was called to a reckoning for manie of his former ill doings, and, lastlie, standing stiffe in divers horrible and foule heresies, was worthelie burnt with fier, and consumed to ashes.

Likewise Mr. Rich, the king's Soliciter, that gave false testimonie against him, and was forsworne at his² arraignment, in so falselie betraying him, although for manie yeares after he continued corruptlie gathering together of wealthe, till the daies of king Henrie were ended, yet have I bin crediblye informed, that, if the king had lived but a fewe dayes longer then he did, he was growne into such displeasure against him for sundrie falsehoodes and deceiptes, in fraudulent purchasing and exchanging of land betwene the king and him, wherin the king was deceived of no small value, and likewise for diverse bribes extorted upon many of his subjectes, that he was fullie determined to have attained him of felonie, extortion and perjurie, and so in one houre to have spoiled him of all the great heape, which he so falselie had raked together in manie yeares before. But being after, in the wicked time of the Infant's raigne, advanced to high honor and place, far above his desert, yet lived he to be deposed againe of that place, 'evin by the same persons that preferred him. But since, in the time of that noble and blessed Queene Mary of worthie memorie, he became penitent, as I have heard, for many of his offences, for the which God permitted him (as it may be thought) to die in better order then the rest before did. But true it is, that after his death his bodie escaped a narrow daunger of burning. For at such time as he was dead, and his bodie laid in a coffin ceared and balmed, and certaine candles set upon the hearse, as the maner was, one of the candles, either by the will of God, or els by negligence of some² of some¹ of the watchers that were absent, fell downe, and tooke hold, first of the clothes, and after of the coffin, that, in the end, before anie bodie was ware, the fier was fastned upon the seare-clothes, where his miserable carcasse lay, and had, without all doubt, consumed the same into ashes, had it not bin spedelie espied by certaine of the servantes by chaunce, who saved all for that time, though not with out great danger to the bodie and the rest of his howse also; All which so narrow escapes I can impute to nothing, but onelie to the goodnesse of God, for that he conceived (as before is said) some repentance, though I never heard of anie penance by him donne at all.

Last of all, it is worthie to be remembred, how justlie the king him selfe was plagued, first by the inordinate number of wives, being in all six, and not one lawfull more then the first, as may be thought. Of these six, two were repudiate, two beheaded for incontinence, one killed wittinglie in childbedd for saving of her child, and the sixt survived him, wherin her fortune was better then the rest of her fellowes. For (as I have heard reported by such as had no cause to lye) he was wearie of her long before he died, and therefore, if he had lived but one yeare longer, meant to have framed such matter against her, for heresie, as should have cost her her life, as it did some others of her predecessors before. And as for heire male of his bodie, which he so much desired, and made so much adoe for, as though the realme had bin utterlie undonne, if he had died without issue male, we see that God, for some purpose, permitted him at last to have a sonne, rather, as it may be thought, that no sillie woman should loose their lives for satisfying his licentious and vaine appetite, then for anie other just respect. But after his death, the raigue of that sonne was verie short, and his yeares verie few, so is there no great matter praise worthie to be written of him, but of things done under the colour of his name and authoritie we have all great cause to lament, which tended to nothing else, but the overthrow and extirpation of the Catho-like faith here within this realme, as we have felt and tasted, and should have tasted still more, if God had not taken upon him some speciall favour (as may be thought) and mercifull pittie, which at last he beganne to have, of his poore afflicted contrey, reducing it to the true and auncient faith, by the cutting away of such an Impe, at whose handes we were not to looke for more grace, then the father, by his pernicious examples, had grafted in so incestuous and damnable a stock. Then note his unmercifull and unspeakable crueltie, wherein he was entred by the horrible murder of this holy Prelate, he conceived such a boldnesse, and therewithall was stricken with such a blindness, that in crueltie he was to be accompted nothing inferiour to Nero. For wheras Nero committed execrable¹ paracide, in causing his naturall mother to be slaine, and not satiate therewith commaunding, that, in his presence, her bellie should be opened, to the intent, as he said, that unnaturallie he might behould the place where he was conceived in her wombe; this king Heurie, an other Nero, did not onelie² perpetrate paracide and sacriledge, but also that haynous treason of heresie, all at one clapp, whiles, in ripping the bowels of his mother the holy Church, and verie spouse of Christ upon earth, he labored to teare her in peces, and despising her authoritie, being but one of her rotten members, monstrouslie took upon him to be her supreame head. For this onelie act, if he had donne nothing els, alwaies was, and is, by law accounted so enorme and exorbitant a thing, that as he, which withdraweth, or detracteth, from anie particular church her right, doth manifest injurie and wronge; so he, that goeth about to take awaye the priveledge of the church of Rome, given of Christ himselfe, the supreame head of all Churches, falleth into heresie. And wheras the other transgressor is to be termed injurious and unnaturall, this kind of offendor is to be called both a schismatike and an heretike. For he doth violate faith and nature, in attempting against the Church, which is the mother of faith. But this our second Nero was not yet content with this abominable act, but heaped a great manie moe upon it, rasing to the ground holie Monasteries, priories, and all sortes of religious houses, profaning them, with all the holie reliques and pretious ornâmentes dedicate to the service of God, not sparing the bloodshedd of all such holie men, and learned Clarkes, as preferred the pleasure of God, and commaundement of their mother the Catholik Church, before his unlawfull lawes and wicked will. And for noble personages of this Realme, both men and women, he spared neither kindred nor other; yea manie times, for a word speaking, he would revenge by death, were it spoken upon never so reasonable a ground or cause, by reason wherof more of the nobilitie were consumed in his daies, then in anie 3. of his predecessours, since this Realme was first inhabited; so that in murder he passed the cruell Turk Selim. To this joyne his licentious and wanton expences, wherby he consumed the treasure of his realme, and then falling into lacke, turned his gold and silver into copper, and after spending the same unthriftelie, tooke of his subjectes so excessive, that never Prince in this realme lived with lesse loye and favour of all good people, though among flatterers and Parasites (among whom this treasure was spent) never so highlie magnified and extolled. Then consider, how justlie he was plagued in his grosse bodie, many yeares before his death, with sores and diseases, that grew upon him by meanes of drunken surfetts, idlenesse, sloth and vicious trade of life, sparing neither kindred nor other, if she liked his carnall appetite, wherby he became at last so impotent and lothsome, that when the surgions should dresse him, it hath bin reported by some of his privie Chamber, that they have smelt the ill savour of his sores the space of two chambers, before they came at him. Lastlie, and most of all, weighe the danger of his miserable soule, dying in the perilous state of excommunication, without anie recouciation or repentance knowne or hard of in the world: yea it hath bin reported by such as were about him, at his end, that he died almost in desperacion, cryin out upon the Phisitians, because they could not cure him, saying, "Have I thus rewarded

" you with Livings, and given
" you fees, and nowe none of " you able to helpe me, when I " have most need of your helpe?" And with that calling for Dr. Anthony Denney, an egregious flatterer about him, and commonlie never far from him, commaunded him to whippe them. And although he perceived at last, that by no meanes he could escape death, yet, as farre as anie man can report, in all the time of his sickness he not once called to God for mercie and forgiveness of his former wretched life. No trulie, but sometimes lying in a studie with him selfe, and sometimes sorrowing, as seemed by his countenance, would sodenlie say, "Oh! "I must die. Yea, Sir," would some one or other saye, "you "must nedes die once, and so "must I and everie one heare, "but I trust you shall not die "now. Alas!" would he say "againe, "thinkest thou that I "shall be saved when I die? for "I have bin a king and lived like "a king". And no doubt but evin as his life was sinfull, so, after his death, God shewed a strange example upon his wretched carcasse. For in such time as it was in preparing, to be ceared and spiced, by the surgeons in the chamber at Westminster, where he died, to be after removed downe to the chappell, and so from thence to Windsore, where it was buried, it chaunced the said carcasse, by mishap, and over boisterous lifting, to fall to the ground, out of which issued such a quantitie of horrible and stinking blood and matter, that it was no small troble to a number about it, to clense the place againe, and make it cleane against the next day for the remove. But before all could be done, there came into the place, as I have bin credleble informed, a great black dogg, no man could tell from whence, which dogg, whiles everie one was occupied, filled himselfe so full as his sides could hold with licking up filthy blood that was spilt, and in the end escaped without hurt from the guard and diverse others, that stroke at him with their holberdes and other weapons, meaning verelie to have killed him, if they could.

Others I coulde have named unto you that were doers in this matter, and that of¹ righ great calling, whome God wortheleie after punished, some by a foule and shamefull end, some by leaving them without either issue or kindred, wherby their lands and goodes, after their death, came to the handes of straungers, that fell in strife among² themselves. Others were attainted, and thereby not onelie their owne bodies executed to shamefull death, but also their lands and goodes being forfeited, their children went a begging, some came to one mis-happe, and some to an other, which, if it were written, wold requier a long processe.

These being manifest signes and tokens of God's indignation and heavie displeasure against this whole realme, for so cruell and horrible murdering of his holie Prophettes, it standeth us in hand, and that spedelie, without delay, to prostrate our selves before him, and with humilitie to beseech him, of his infinite mercie and goodnesse, that we be not, according to our desertes, worthelye punished, first, in this world, by the intollerable yoake and barbarous tirannie of Infidells and Turkes, and after, in the world to come, by everlasting paine and torment of Hell fier; but that rather, by the meritts and intercession of this, and other holie Martirs, this noble Realme may once againe be restored to that auncient, and true Christian faith, in which our forefathers lived these thousand yeares and more, and that we the dwellers therin, and our posteritie, may once againe peaceblie serve him, in the same faith, all the daies of our lives, and after, in the world to come, glorifie him in his heavenly kingdome, where he reigneth for ever and ever. Amen. This is the Conclusion of a Popish Book, to the Doctrines of which I by no means subscribe. Nor will I vouch for the matters of Fact. I have been a faithfull Transcriber, and I leave the whole to the Judgment of the Reader. I took occasion to do it from the mention of the fatal destruction of Bookes and Images, by virtue of the order for which many excellent Pictures also perished of divers worthy persons of both Sexes. Even these, however innocent in themselves, were look'd upon as

Images and Representations of Favourers and Abettors of Superstition. The Executioners of the Act exceeded their Commission, and made it reach even to Things never intended by it. So that 'tis a wonder, that any curious Pictures of Antiquity escap'd their Fury, and that they had not committed to the Flames even such Pictures, as K. Henry the VIIIth. himself admired, (particularly those of fine, but wanton Women) one of which was an ancient and fine one of the beautifull Rosamond, that is now in the possession of my ingenious and worthy Friend Samuel Gale, Esq; who lately purchas'd it accidentally, and 'twas from him that I receiv'd the following account of it. 'Tis painted on a Pannel of Wainscot, and represents her in a three quarter proportion, dress'd in the Habit of the Times, a streight Body'd Gown of changeable red Velvet, with large square Sleeves of Black flower'd Damask Faceings, turn'd up above the Bend of her Arms, and close sleeves of a pearl colour'd Sattin puff'd out, but button'd at the Rist appearing from under the Large ones. She has several Rings sett with pretious Stones on her Fingers. Her Breast cover'd with a fine Flower'd Linnen, gather'd close at the Neck like a Ruff. Her Face is charmingly Fair, with a fine Blush in her Cheeks. Her Hair of a Dark Brown, parted with a Seam from the middle of her Forehead upwards under her Coifure, which is very plain, but a Gold Lace appears above it, and that cover'd with a small cap of Black Silk. She is looking very intently upon the fatal Cup, which she holds in one hand, and the Cover in the other, as going to drink it. Before her is a table cover'd with black Damask, on which there lies a Prayer Book open, writ in the ancient black Character. The whole Piece is extremely well preserv'd. Mr. Gale takes it to have been done about Harry the 7th's time.

- Demaynes sive Demaines, Demains or demesns, (either from the Lat. Dominicum, or French Demain or Domain;) a word sufficiently known, and signifies as much as patrimonium Domini. Hotoman, (in verbis feudalibus, verbo Dominicum;) by divers Authori-
- ties, proves those lands to be Dominicum, which a man holds originally of himself; and those to be feodum, which he holds by the benefit of a superior Lord. But this word is now most commonly used for a distinction between those Lands, that the Lord of a Manour hath in his own hands, or in the hands of his Lessee, dimised upon a rent for term of years or life; and such other Lands appertaining to the said Manour, which belong to Free or Copy-holders; howbeit the Copy-hold belonging to any Manour, is also, in the opinion of many good Lawyers, accounted Demeasn. But then what sort of horns these were I cannot, as yet, learn, tho' I have written, for Satisfaction, into that very Country, where the Action is related to have been. Nor indeed can I recollect, that I have met with the word any where else. The Scots had design'd, to have got an entire victory over K. Stephen, by a vast, and almost incredible, number of cattle, that they had got together, thinking (by that means) to trample down the English before them; but the

the English, being forewarned of the matter, cunningly prevented it, by placing Earth-horns or Country-horns in every street and way, which the Cattle were to pass, and the Effect proved according to their wishes. For the Earth-horns being blow'd, it put the Cattle into such a terrible consternation, that they ran furiously back, crush'd the Scots themselves, and so the English came off compleat conquerors. The matter was talk'd of, as if it had been fresh, very frequently in the time of Robert of Brunne; for as for the relation in Peter Langtoft himself (I mean in the original French) it is not otherwise express'd, than that the Scots were vanquish'd by an hideous sound, or noise, that was made by the English. The Stratagem is so very remarkable, that I can not but think, that Polyænus would have vouchsaf'd it a particular place in his Work πρὸ στρατηγικῶν, had it been transacted either before, or in, his time, especially since he tells us¹, how the besiegers of Theodosia, or Theodosia, a city of Pontus, were frighted away by the Noise of a great number of Trumpets, that were sounded all at the same time.

It must be here remembered, that on this side Fryer Bacon's study at Oxford is a little Bridge¹, under which runneth a small stream, (that divideth Oxford-shire and Bark-shire) being part of Tril-milbow, whose Course of old time was not to fall into Isis, as now it doth, but into the River Charwell through the midst of Christ-Church Meadow, which though it be now but one, in former times was two, whereof the farther part, next to Isis, belonged to the City of Oxford, and was called the Town Mead,

and the higher part, next to Frideswide's, belong'd to Christ-Church, and was called of old Frideswide's Mead. But in the days of K. Edward VIth. the Dean and Chapter, having then an annual Market, or Fair, usually kept about St. Frideswide's day in the Quadrangle, for many days together (and was much more considerable than Stourbridge Fair by Cambridge) were pleased to exchange the said Fair with the Town for their part of the foresaid Meadow; so that Christ-Church having thus got the whole Meadow to themselves, they damn'd up the old Channell, that ran into Charwell, and brought both the Meads into one; yet to keep up certain tokens, how the Course ran, certain meer stones were set in the Meadow, and it still bore the name of Shire-lake. And indeed even to this day, there are very visible signs, such as Rushes and different Grass, where it went, and (which is the reason, for which I mention all this) it is often call'd the flum or the flum. It is with- all remarkable, that low, watry, rushy places are frequently call'd Flams by persons (especially such as deal in Meadows and Cattle) in and about Oxford. Of which Flams there was formerly a much greater Number than there is at present, the Water of Charwell being then more obstructed than now, which conduc'd, in no small degree, to Sicknesses. And those that are acquainted with the History of Oxford are not ignorant, that the Pestilence was often in old time in that place, which occasioned the Scholars to retire, a thing which is to be attributed, in great measure, to the Flams, as well as to the neglect of cleansing the Streets, and keeping out Creatures that raised Filth and corrupted the Air. Of such kind of Flams there were abundance on the South side of the City, even beyond Fryer Bacon's Study, the Causey being not raised so high as at present, nor that way so much frequented (the Flams hindering) as nowadays; which was the reason therefore that the place, now called Fryer Bacon's Study, was very private (in respect of what it is now) and afforded that great Man a very convenient Retreat from the Grey Fryery, in order to contemplate in the night time, and make proper Observations in Astronomy, and other parts of Mathematics; which he did with the greater advantage, after he had invented the Telescope (for 'tis to him we are to ascribe this usefull Invention¹) which added so much to his Reputation, that there was no one but look'd upon him as a prodigy, and his Discoveries derived upon him so much Envy, that he was proceeded against as a Magician, tho' he wrote expressly against Magick, as I have shew'd elsewhere². But 'twas in the Summer time chiefly, that this admirable Scholar made his Observations at the place that now bears his Name, and not in Winter. At that dry Season he was less obnoxious to the ill Vapours, that at other Seasons were troublesome and dangerous, especially when there was then such a Multitude of Flams, the ill Effects of which, however, himself, by the Directions he gave, very much prevented, for which he deserved, and, without doubt, received thanks from the University, as well as the Town, it being the Interest of this Seat of Learning, which is so admirably (nothing more finely) situated, to listen to persons of Skill when they prescribe what may prevent Infection, and therefore more Attention should have been given to such knowing Men above fourscore years since, when many suffered by a new Disease, which tho' it was felt at other places, yet rag'd most at Oxford, as may appear³ from a scarce little Book, lent me by my worthy Friend Thomas Rawlinson, Esq;. intituled, Morbus Epidemius Anno 1643. England's new Disease most contagious at present in Oxford. With the Signes, Causes, Remedies. Published by his Majesties Command. Oxford, Printed by Leonard Lichfield, Printer to the University. 4° in 3 Sheets. Though it was as ancient as Hippocrates⁴, yet it was termed The new Disease. 'Twas generally defined to be a malignant and contagious Feaver, being comprised under the Genus of a putrid continued Feaver, which proceedeth from putrefaction of blood, or humours continued in the greater vessels. So that the Disease may be truly called, Febris putrida, continua, maligna, & contagiosa; that is, a putrid, continued Feaver, both malignant and contagious. Tho' it was not the Plague, yet it was (as we before defined it) what some nevertheless denied, malignant and contagious, as the Author of that Tract hath well proved. One cause of it was found to be those putrid Exhalations, drawn up by the Sun, from stinking Matter, Dung, Carcasses of dead Horses, and other Carrion, in and about the City, the removing of which noysome Inconveniencies, and keeping the Streets sweet, and clean, was soon found to tend much to the abatement of the Disease. A second cause was found to be Diet. For although there was no such scarcity of Provisions, as forced any of the Inhabitants (Scholars or others) to feed upon bad Meats, yet the Drink could not be excused, being, for the most part, (by reason of the multitude, and concourse of people) overnew, and not ripe or fit for drinking. Which Inconvenience is what we still complain of. And therefore 'tis wished the Brewers would somewhat regard our health, as well as their own profit, in drying their Mault sufficiently, throughly boyling their Beer, and making clean their Vessels; whereas a common Complaint against them is, that they make use of slack-dried Mault, do not half boyl their Beer, that they add few or no Hopps, and tun it up in unwashed Vessels, which causeth the Drink to be crude, raw, and apt to corrupt within us. To which Observation we may add, that the Brew-houses all stand upon the Banks of the River Isis, which of it self is a cold hungry Water, the source and springs of it arising from Cotswold in Gloucestershire: where at the spring head, the extremity of Coldness in the Water is such, that, as it is observed, Beasts refuse to drink of it; how great care then ought the Brewers to take in'th boyling, whereby to alter, and amend this quality of the water? This Disease as it proved mortal to some, so it hung long upon others; but then many prevented the ill Effects by using this method. Presently upon complaint of Chilness, of aking and dizziness in the Head, they took a Cordial, went straitway into bed, and swet, and rose next day, without any distemper: which might very well be, by discussing, and expelling the μασμα, and inquinamentum putredinale, before it had fermented, and assimilated the whole Masse. And by this means alone was cured that most fatal Disease ιδρωσος, or Sudor Anglicus, which raged with such destructive violence (till constant sweating for 24 houres; the only certain Remedy was found out) that neigh-

- neighbouring Counties did not believe this Island had so many Inhabitants as died. We have not been wholly free since that time from the same kind of Disease, that this little Book before mentioned describes to have been so violent at Oxford; and whether or no there was not a touch of it in the latter end of the year 1724. I shall leave to the Judgment and Decision of those, that shall read these Notes and made any Remarks of what happened at that Season.*

But 'twas common with our Ancestors to prefix h to Words, when there was no manner of occasion. Hence some of them writ Honoxia for Oxonia, as is even observ'd by Mr. Vernon in his Oxonium Poëma, where he writes¹ thus of two odd Verses in Merton-College Windows:*

We commonly call any Coach or Horse, let out to hire, a Hackney, &c. and some will tell you, that the name owes it's original to Hackney, a Town of much resort, about three Miles from London. But then how comes it to pass, that it should be so much used in the same sense in Countries, where this town was never heard of? or how came the Word to be in vogue before this Town became noted?
I altogether, therefore, incline to the French. And so does the learned Dr. Skinner.

old Rhythmical Tract, about the Pains of Hell, in an ancient Vellum MS. (given me by my learned Friend Richard Graves, of Mickleton in Gloucestershire, Esq;) Hell is not only made to signify a great pit or hole, where the wicked are to be punished after the Resurrection, but the Sea, where the fiends dwell, as well as in the air and earth, till the day of Judgment. I do not know, but Robert of Brunne might be the Author of this old Tract, as well as of the other Pieces in the MS. Be that as it will, it puts me in mind of the old odd Map, I formerly often perus'd in the Bodl. Library, in which the Scottish Sea is made to be Hell, our Ancestors having strange Notions of that Sea, as well as they had of all Scotland, particularly the Northern Parts of it. But I shall give the Rhythms in the old Tract ¹, I have spoke of, at large.

But first I will schewe where is helle

 For al the erthe ⁴ be skylle lykned may be ⁵ Vntyl a round appul tre,
 That euene ⁶ a myddes haneth a colke,
 Ryght as an ⁷ ey a mydde haneth a zolke.
 For as a zolk is euene a mydwarde
 Of the schelle of aney, whan it is harde;
 Ryght so is helle pit, as clerkes telles,
 A mydde the erthe and no where elles.
 As the zolk a mydde of an ey ⁸ lys,
 And the white a boutte, so in the same wys,
 Ryght so is the erthe, with oute doute,
 A myddes the heuenes, that ⁹ gon a boutte.

riot, Coach or Waggon; yet there is also another signification, which however foreign to any thing, that is mentioned in our Author (in whose time also Coaches, as we at present understand the Expression, were not in use,) I think fit to mention here, and that is, what these Words in the Statute of 2 Hen. VI. 14. have relation to: And that no Goldsmith nor Jeweller, nor any other that worketh Harness of Silver, shall set any of the same to sale within the City [of London,] before that it be touched with the touch, and also with the Mark or Sign of the Workman of the same, upon pain of Forfeiture of the double value &c. upon which Passage the Author of a little Book in 8vo¹ intituled, A Touch-stone for Gold and Silver Wares, remarks², that all sorts of Silver Work, of the most Eminent account (that are made in and about the City of London, and within three miles of the same) are comprehended under the Names of Vessels and Harness; mentioning vessels by reason of

Kampedene, p. 2. a place so called in which a great Victory was obtained by K. Ina over the Danes.

In a grete Daneis felde þer þei samned alle,

Nor is the French otherwise :

En le chaump Danaÿs touz sunt assemblez,
Qe pus cel heure en sca [vel ca, sive cea] est Campedene nomøz.

So that, according to this Author, Campden is Campus Danorum, Danes Field or Danish Field; and I do not doubt but that was the vulgar notion at that time. But I rather ¹ incline to those, who make Campden to be a military valley.

“Campden, vel Camden”, (saith Dr. Skinner ²) “in Com. Gloc.

Especially since Mr. Somner, in his Saxon Dictionary, expressly tells us, that camp or campe, is bellum, castra. warre, a camp; that cempa, is miles, agonista, manipularis, tyro. a souldier, a champion, a combatant, a trouper, a novice, a fresh water souldier; and that Den is vallis, a valley, a vale, a dale. (to omit the other Significations of it's being cubile, a couch, a den; and locus inuius, sylvestris, asper & incultus, porcisque & pecudibus pascendis accomodus. a Forest.) Sir Robert Atkins indeed is pleased to note ³ of Campden in Gloucestershire, which is the same with our Kampedene, that it is so called from a Camp, near that Place, where a Battle had been formerly fought, without expressing, at the same time, what the latter Syllable of the Word denotes, as thinking that it was sufficiently known. And he had just reason to think so, since there are so many Deans in England, that from their very nature all shew what the meaning of that Term is; which puts me in mind of a very pleasant valley called Cookham Dean, (in the Parish of Cookham) in Berks, which as 'tis near Maidenhead in that County, so, withall, 'tis but at a little distance from Great-Marlow in Buckinghamshire, which is a very pleasunt, tho' very poor Market-Town; where however there is plenty of Fish, Corn and Wood, whence the People of Great-Marlow commonly say: Here is Fish for catching, Corn for snatching, and Wood for fetching. And now upon writing these particulars, I cannot but observe, that Kimpton, near Andover in Hampshire, seems to me to be the same with Kempton. It was usual to change e into i. The Syllable ton for toun is very common. Nor will what I note seem at all improbable to those, that shall consider, that the Parish of Kimpton, as I am inform'd (for I never saw it my self) by the present learned Rector thereof, the Reverend Mr. George Greenway, is encompass'd with Roman camps, ways, &c. on every side, and that Roman Urns and Coins, and other Curiosities have been frequently discovered thereabouts. Two Urns have been found in the Parish since Mr. Greenway came to it, one a Sepulchral Urn with bones in it, and several teeth as firm as ever he saw, that he gave to the Earl of Burlington. In the other were many Coins found, seven of which, viz. one of Silver, the others of Brass or Copper, Mr. Greenway was pleased to give me. That of Silver is of Julian the Apostate, on the obverse or face side of which is, FL CL IVLIANVS PF AVG Juliani Apostatæ caput diad.

in corona quercea, which is (as I think) of the Year 360, when Julian was declared Augustus in Gaul, and is the very year when he apostatiz'd. Under the Corona quercea is T CON that is, percussa Constantinopoli, T being put for P, unless CON be Constantia, Mediobarbus having one in that very year with T. CONSTANTIA, tho' he hath not any one exactly the same with this given me by Mr. Graves. Two of the six Brass ones (given me by Mr. Greenway) are of the said Constantius; the others are of Faustina, (wife of Marcus Antoninus) Claudius Gothicus, Constantine the Great and Valens, but are much oblitterated and defaced, and not of so good account as either that I have described of Julian (which is scarce, and not in Occo or Mediobarbus) or two Silver ones found in the same Urn of Gratian very well preserv'd, which Mr. Greenway gave the E. of Winchelsea, having on their Reverse a Trophy with VIRTVS EXERCITVS, which Mr. Greenway supposes was a complement to the Army, which had here saluted him Emperour. But I should rather ascribe it to some Victory that he had obtain'd against the Saxons in Gaul in the year 370. since I find, that Occo is of the same opinion, when in p. 509. of the folio Ed. of his Book of Coins he writes thus, with respect to a Coin with the same reverse, Saxones in Galliis irrumpentes, cum Patre Valentiniano repellit Gratianus, placing it A. V. C. 1122. Christi 370. at which time Gratian was much beloved in Britain, tho' not so some Years after, when Magnus Maximus was declared Augustus there, and treacherously caused Gratian to be murdered. After I had writ what goes before, I took occasion to mention Dr. Skinner that excellent Etymologist's Account of Campden to the before-mentioned Mr. Graves, who soon after sent me a Letter, fraught with curious Notices of things, as the Reader may be pleas'd to see in the Appendix¹ to my Preface. Upon occasion of which Letter of Mr. Graves's, it may be here farther remark'd, that Denton-Court, in the Parish of Cumnor near Abbingdon in Berks, was not so denominated from the Danes, as several have suggested, but from it's being situated in a Valley. In old time there were at that place several little Cottages, all which together were stiled Denton, i. e. a Town in the Valley, but a Manour House, call'd frequently in those days curtis or court, being at length built there, it was afterwards, as 'tis to this time, call'd Denton-Court; of which kind of Courts there was a vast number formerly, which were likewise stiled sometimes cassati, a word by which also the Saxon hūda is translated in Heming's Chartulary of the Church of Worcester¹. These curtes were also in old time often call'd mansæ, and indeed either curtes or mansæ was a proper appellation enough for the old Halls in Oxford, I mean even the three famous ones of King Ælfred, as well as the vast number besides that were there, two of which were King's-Hall and Black-Hall in the Parish of St. Gyles, as they are mentioned by the famous Mr. Miles Windsore, who specifies these two (and there were others besides) as far more ancient than Great or Mitchell University Hall. Quia fuerant aliæ longe antiquiores, nempe Regia & nigra in parochia Scti. Ægidii, are Mr. Windsore's Words, as I find them written in the margin just opposite to these (which are the first) Words of Assertio antiquitatis Oxoniensis Academiæ: "Collegium Universitatis, quod primum magna universitatis aula appellabatur". The said Words are of Mr. Windsore's own hand writing, and indeed the whole Book, (which I very lately purchas'd,) containing the first Edition of Londinensis's two Books de Antiquitate Cantabrigiensi Academiæ, as well as the said Assertio, is full of marginal Notes and Strictures, several of which are very good, by Mr. Windsore, for which reason I set the greater value upon it, these Notes fully convincing me, that the Author had studied the Antiquities of Oxford to very good purpose, and I do not doubt but he furnished Mr. Tuynes with many Things that were made use of by him in his Apology, which will not seem at all a wonder to those, that consider, that Mr. Windsore was well acquainted with Mr. Thomas Key, the Author of the Assertio, and had engag'd to defend him, for which end he had also got (it may be from Mr. Key himself) a Defence of the Assertio, as Mr. Key had drawn it up, tho' it was never yet printed; and this Defence is that very MS. that Mr. Wood speaks ¹ of under this Title: Examen judicii Cantabrigiæ cujusdam, qui se Londinensem dicit, nuper de origine utriusque Academiæ lati, several MSS. Copies of which he tells us went about from hand to hand. But the very best Copy in the World is that which I now have, being the very original Book of the Author, containing a printed Copy of the first Ed. of Londinensis and the Assertio, with abundance of MSS. Strictures upon Londinensis, and some MSS. Additions to the Assertio, and at the End is added the said Examen consisting of many Sheets under this Title, Animadversiones aliquot in Londinensis de antiquitate Cantabrigiæ Academiæ libros duos. The whole Work is just as Mr. Key intended to have publish'd it (for he would have reprinted Londinensis too) had he not been prevented by death. All the MSS. Things are neatly and correctly written, and 'tis this Book I had an Eye to, when, in my Preface² to Sprotti Chronica, I promised to print Mr. Key's Examen, which I still design to do, if other Things do not obstruct. But to return to mansæ, although, as I have said, this was a Word often used for curtes, yet we must not take it in that sense in pag. 101. of the first Vol. of the Monasticon Anglicanum, where we are inform'd, that Kenulf, King of the Mercians, Anno D. 821. being the eleventh³ of his Reign (which does not agree with the Accounts, that make him begin his Reign Anno 796, and to dye Anno 819⁴ or 820⁵;) gave 15 mansæ in Cullanhamme, or Cullanhom, now call'd Culham, to the Abbey of Abbingdon, which mansæ tho' they were houses to which lands (Papias says⁶ 12 Acres) were annex'd, yet they were too small to be term'd curtes, which Word however agreed properly enough to Manours or mansa capitalia, as it did likewise to religious cells, such as that (which belong'd to Abbingdon) at Bradanfeld, (which I take to be Bradfield in the Hundred of Theale near Reading in Berks,) that the Monasticon calls¹ a monastery, and is said there to have been built by King Ina.

kemse, p. 122. shift, smock. This is the common signification of the Word, but it being here made use of, upon account of the Empress Maud's escaping out of the Castle of Oxford, it must denote a white garment over her smock, as even the Latin camisia also (from whence tis taken) and the Greek καμίσιον, signified a priest's white Garment, or, as we now call it, a Surplice, as well as a smock or shift. And this interpretation is justify'd from the word smok, made use of in this Chronicle immediately before. The Author says, that the Empress, being block'd up in the Castle, entered upon a strange adventure. For, as he tells us, soon after Midnight she went out in her Smock, in the midst of the Snow, over the Thames, that was frozen, without kirtle or kemse, that is, without either gown or linnen garment over her smock, and having nothing over her face but her kerchief. If we do not take it in this sense, we must (what will be very absurd) suppose, that she went to Wallingsford stark naked, whereas his mentioning the word smok before shews the contrary. And indeed Robert of Gloucester (p. 463.) expressly tells us, that she put on white cloaths; signifying thereby, that she had some other garment of a white colour besides her smock, which must be the kemse or camisia specify'd here. And 'tis remarkable, that the Greeks distinguish'd the Smock from the other linnen garment, by terming the Smock ἰσοκαμισιον or ἰσοχιτών, and the other καμισιον or χιτών. But whereas the Author of the prose MS. Chronicle, in Mr. Ward of Longbridge's hands, taken from Robert of Gloucester, says, that she and her retinue clothed themselves in white Sheets, I think, he took too great liberty with Robert of Gloucester, as he did likewise all along both in curtailing him, and in using words which the original sense will not often bear. But the Passage in that MS. (that the curious Reader may judge of it) is this: Alle' this batailes was done in the sixt yere of kynge Stephen's regne. Kynge Stephen then evir was in a wayte to gete the Emperes, and she was in the Castelle of Oxenforde. The kynge come thedre, and set stronge siege to the Castelle. And at that tyme was so grete Frost and Snowe, that the water wold bere a wayne, charged with her lode. And vppon a nyght the Emperes thocht hir vppon a wile, and toke vppon hir and hir² pryve meyny white shetes, and so stale out at a Postorne, and went vppon the ise ovir Temes, and so forth to Walyngforde. And when the kynge had goten the Castelle, he fonde not hir there. And therefore he was right wroth, and robbed the Countre in euery quarter. For white shetes 'tis white lynen cloth in the chronicle culled Brute of England. For thus in the valuable (tho' very imperfect) MS. thereof, that was given me by my ingenious Friend Mr. William Burman of Christ-Church: And whanne he [K. Stephen] was come out of prison [at Bristol,] he went to Oxinford, & biseged þe Emperesse, that³ tho was in that toun, and þe seege dured from Mighelmasse vnto seint Andrewes tide. And the Emperesse þo lete hir clothe alle in white linnen cloth, for ² encheson that she wold nought ben knowen, for in that tyme þer was moche snow, and so she ascaped away bi Tamyse from hir enemyes, and from thennes she went to Wal-yngford, and þer hir helde, and þe Kyng wold haue biseged hir, but he had so moche to done wiþ the erl Randolf of Chestre, and wiþ Bigott that strongly werred vpon him in euery place, that he ² ne wist whither for to turne, and þe Erl of Gloucestre halp hem wiþ his power. And in an old Vellum MS. Chronicle, in Trinity-College Library Oxford, ascrib'd by Dr. Powell (to whom it belong'd) to John Bever, 'tis albæ vestes. For thus that MS. ³ Anno regis Stephani septimo idem rex obsedit imperatricem in urbe Oxon. à festo Sancti Michaëlis usque ad Natale domini cuncta extrinsecus devastando. Inualescente itaque inedia, Imperatrix, albis vestibus cooperta, per Thamisiam congelatam & nive conspersam evasit usque ad Wallingfordiam. Nam oculi obsedencium per nivis reverberacionem delusi erant, & sic urbs ista regi reddita est. This escape of the Empress is one of the most considerable Passages in all our English History, and it ought to be ascrib'd to the divine Providence. She was intirely belov'd by the University and Town of Oxford, who were persons of too good sense and too much honesty heartily to approve of K. Stephen, who was an Usurper. The Town was a very strong place, and the Castle look'd upon as impregnable. There was no coming hither by reason of the depth of the Waters all about, as is well observ'd by Robert de Monte. And yet such was the Intrepidity of K. Stephen, that he forced his way through the depth of the Waters into the Town, and immediately attack'd the Castle, where the Empress was inclos'd with a great number of gallant men (several of which were Scholars) and Ladies to assist her. K. Stephen did not doubt but to take her prisoner, but after above two Months Siege of the Castle, (for notwithstanding what the Trinity-College MS. and other Writers say, the City was taken long before the Castle) he was quite baffled. For just as she was as it were starv'd for want of Provisions, she made her miraculous Escape (with a very few Attendants) God Almighty having heard the Prayers both of her self and her Friends. K. Stephen was extremely vex'd and enrag'd, when he found himself disappointed. She went over the Snow and Ice directly by Kennington to Rodley now called Radley (where there was a Rode in those times) and so to Wallingford, a wonderfull strong Castle, where she secured her self. K. Stephen presently pursues her, with a design to besiege her, but was obliged to give over his purpose for the present to mind other Troubles, with which he was surrounded, and he did not resume his undertaking 'till two or three years afterwards, when he besieged Wallingford in good earnest, and built the Castles of Cromish and Brightwell (that were afterwards demolished by K. Henry II.) in opposition to the Empress at Wallingford, and yet at last was forced to quit his Attempt, and to leave the Empress, whom God Almighty watch'd over, to the utter confusion of the tyrannical Usurper, who was the more vex'd because he found the people of Wallingford, as well as those at Oxford, in the Interest of the Empress, for whose security they had also fortify'd their very houses, which might, for that reason, be properly stiled hagæ, as they were in the time of K. Edward the Confessor, when the Town¹, according to *Domesday Book*², consisted of VIII. virgats of Land, containing 276. hagæ, 8 of which were afterwards destroy'd for the Castle. By which it appears, that Wallingford even then (and it had been bigger in former times, before it had suffered so much from the Danes) contained three hundred and twenty acres of ground, every virgat comprehending forty acres, as is plain from the following Note, in an old hand, at the end of John of Glastonbury's History or Chronicle of Glastonbury, that I have now before me, by the favour of the Rt. honourable the Lord Bruce, who was pleased to lend me the MS.

Decem acræ faciunt ferdellum.

Quatuor fardella faciunt virgatam unam.

Fardellum	virgata	hida.	feodum unum
Acrae x.	xl.	clx.	cccccxl.

Which Note I the more readily insert here, because 'tis the account the Abbey of Glastonbury went by. So that whereas 'tis said in Domesday Book ¹, that Ashbury (in the County of Berks) which belong'd to the Monastery of Glastonbury, (the Manour of Ashbury, containing forty hides, being given to it by E-dred² King of the West-Saxons, the same that is mentioned in pag. 33. of this work) had a Church and Priest, to whom appertain'd one Hide (Ibi Ecclesia & Presbyt. habent 1 Hyd. & 4 servos ³, or Ibi Ecclesia & presbiter habens 1 hid. & 4 servi ⁴) we must understand by it, that the Parson there had an hundred and sixty acres of Land, which was a noble thing, and enabled him to keep hospitality and to give away in Charity. But not only Glastonbury, but other places, went by the same account, tho' in several places (as a Yard-land now also varies) there were differences; notwithstanding which, where the Church and Religion were concern'd, there was a certainty, and they were guided by the before mentioned explication. And 'tis by that interpretation that I would explain the same terms, when they occur in Domesday. So that whereas 'tis, in that old and most valuable Register ⁵, said, that Shottesbrooke in Berkshire contain'd 7 hides, I would understand thereby one thousand one hundred and twenty acres: And whereas, in the same venerable Monument of Antiquity ⁶ 'tis said, that that part of Abbot's-Waltham (now commonly called White Waltham) which belong'd to the

¹ Coll. nostr. MSS. Vol. 99. p. 111. ² Sic in Johannis Glastoniensis Chronica sive Historia de rebus Glastoniensibus, MS. ³ Ita in dicto Vol. Coll. nostror. ⁴ Coll. nimirum cl. Abbey of Chertsey, contain'd 10 hides, I would thereby understand one thousand six hundred acres, without any regard to the three hides of Land which the same Book tells ¹ us belong'd, in Bernesh Hundred (by which one would gather, that it was also part of Abbot's or White-Waltham, which is in Bernesh Hundred, whereas Laurence-Waltham is in the hundred of Wargrove) to the Bishop of Durham, and contain'd, according to this Explication, four hundred and eighty acres. And moreover, whereas the same Register informs us, that Cunnor (in Berks) which belong'd, and always did belong, to the Abbey of Abbington, contain'd in Edw. the Confessor's time 50 ² hides, and but 30 in K. William the Conqueror's, the meaning is, that in the former King's time it consisted of eight thousand acres, in the latter's of only four thousand eight hundred. Yet it must be granted, that as there were great Alterations between K. Edward the Confessor's time and the reign of William the Conqueror (otherwise Cunnor could not have been so much lessen'd) so there have been much greater since the Conqueror's time; so as to have even very considerable Changes with respect to Counties, Hundreds and Parishes. How else comes it to pass, that Cookham, near Maidenhead in Berks, now gives name to a Hundred, whereas in the Conqueror's time it was reckon'd in Bernesh Hundred? For thus in that Register ³: In Bernes Hund. Rex tenet Cocheham in Dominio. Rex E. tenuit. Tunc 20ti. hidæ, sed nunquam geld. Terra est 25. car. And here, without doubt, some Readers will be apt to inquire, what the true meaning of the word haga is? In answer to which I shall here transcribe what Mr. Somner notes about the word hæz in his Saxon Dictionary, viz.

*“ Hæz. Sepes, septum. a hedge.
 “ Hinc Latino-barbarorum “ haia, pro septo. Cassis, vel “ tendicula nobis hodiéque, a “ hay to eatch conies. Hage, “ & hagen tot oppidorum Teu“ tonicorum nominibus hinc
 “ aunexum. Upon which account I would translate the word haga in Domesday always by hedge (some perhaps would rather use haw, hay, or hack)*

and not, as others do, house, so as there were in Wallingford 276 hedges in the time of E. Conf. 8 of which were destroy'd for the Castle, that was built by K. William Conq. in lieu of an older Castle, that had, I suppose, been originally built by the Romans, tho' utterly destroy'd by the Danes. Which hedges were made of (vimina) twigs, wattles, &c. and from thence our fences of closes, grounds, and fields are now stiled by the same name; but then being covered at the top fit for lodging, (just as the ancient cassati, which had land annex'd, were) they are commonly translated houses, as if domus and haga were really the same kind of Inclosure or Fence, whereas haga or hedge was of a more ordinary kind of work, tho' generally large, as may appear not only from their being call'd curtes in Heming's Chartulary of the Church of Worcester¹, but from the present site of Wallingford Castle, which is about five Acres, and shews that formerly an haga or hedge (since eight hagæ only were pull'd down and destroy'd for building it) was of a considerable extent and compass. But now whereas the word domus instead of haga occurs in Domesday Book, where it speaks of Oxford, as I take it we are thereby to understand, that the Buildings of Oxford were far better than those at Wallingford. For that I think the true signification of domus will warrant, the word really denoting Buildings or Inclosures of a much better kind than those call'd hagæ. A thing which may also appear from Publius Victor's Description of Rome, in which tho' the several Wards are represented as large, yet the Domus, a word always there used, as 'tis also in the old anonymous Description of the same City published by Labbé, are but few in comparison of the Extent of those Wards; much fewer indeed than the Wards of the City of Constantinople, described also by another anonymous Author published by the same Labbé, and yet the Wards of Constantinople were less than those of Rome. I should therefore readily conclude, that the Domus in Constantinople (for that is the Word there used also, that of haga being not as yet come into fashion) were nothing near so big nor so fine as those at Rome, and yet in both places

they were of stone, to which the word haga cannot properly agree, which I look upon therefore as one reason, why 'tis not used with respect to Oxford, where they had begun to have some Stone buildings some time before the Conquest, as may appear from St. Grymbald's building St. Peter's Church in the East of Stone out of Hengesteseiht (commonly call'd Hinxey) Quarry, Masons being brought for that end out of Normandy, at which time also instead of hagæ other domus were erected of Stone, and the method of building therewith being now learned, it soon began to be established and practised elsewhere, tho' not without much interruption¹. Yet tho' I should reckon St. Peter's Church among the old Domus of Oxford, it ought nevertheless by no means to be reckoned in the Taxation of William the Conq. in which notwithstanding I fear the three famous Halls were reckoned that were built by King Ælfred, because I find², that K. William withdrew the Exhibitions that K. Ælfred had settled upon his

Schools, tho' others say³ that K. Harold depriv'd these Schools of their Revenue, and totally destroy'd the two lesser of K. Ælfred's Halls. But be this as it will, those Halls ought properly to be stiled domus, yet perhaps being so much superior to the generality of buildings then in Oxford, had the anonymous author of the Description of Constantinople seen them and described Oxford, he would, it may be, have called them domus nobilissimæ, an expression he uses with respect to houses of a better kind than ordinary. However notwithstanding this difference between domus and haga, we cannot determine for certain how big generally those domus were in Oxford. There is no doubt but they were large, since Domesday Book⁴ tells us, that in William the Conqueror's time there were only 243 domus both within and without the Walls of Oxford, besides 20 mural mansions, call'd so because, upon occasion, they were obliged to repair the Walls (in order to which there were there, as well as

- at old Athens, τυχοποιοὶ καὶ ἐπιστάται τῶν ἔργων) tho' it withall informs us, that 478 lay in ruins, which, however, will not diminish the notion we have of the largeness of those domus, since they seem to have been chiefly on the North West side of Oxford, even without the present City down as far as Walton-Well, at which time also what is now called St. Giles's Church, (formerly the University Church, in which Convocations and Congregations were held, as they were afterwards in St. Marie's Church ¹) lay also in it's ruins, and was not rebuilt by Elwine Fitz-Godegose 'till about the time of K. Stephen ².

This St. Edmund's Father was Raynold le Riche¹, (not Edward Rich, as in Godwin²) so surnamed from his Wealth. His Mother's Name was Mabilia or Mabile, a Woman very eminent for her Piety, as is noted by many Writers, and particularly likewise by the Author of the before mentioned Rhythmical Life of St. Edmund, where 'tis noted, withall, that she was buried in St. Nicholas's Church at Abbington:

This ³ goude womman [Mabile þe riche] deide þus, þat of ⁴ wedewen was flour,

What the Author here tells us of her being buried in St. Nicholas's Church, may be true enough with regard to his own time, when, 'tis likely, the chappel, in which Mabilia, or Mabile, was buried, was look'd upon as part of St. Nicholas's Church; but it could not be true at the time of her burial, because at that time St. Nicholas's Church was not in being, it being not built 'till the Reign of K. Edw. I. the Founder being ¹⁸ Nicholas de Coleham, who became Abbat of Abbington A.D. ¹⁹ 1289. and died A.D. 1307. and after it was so built, it became the chief Parish Church of Abbington ²⁰, tho' the greatest Resort now is to St. Helen's Church. But now notwithstanding St. Nicholas's Church was built after Mabile's death, yet there can be no doubt of a chappel's being built some time (tho' not long) before that happened, since Mr. Wood assures¹ us, that she was interr'd in a chappel (adjoyning to the Abbey-Church) built, about the middle of H. III^d's Reign, by John de Glostineville (the same that others² call John de Blossmevil) Abbat of Abbington, and that this chappel was generally known by the Name of the chappel of St. Edmund's Mother, altho' it was reported to be dedicated to the Holy Cross, and to St. Edmund and St. Guthlac the Confessors. When 'twas that this chappel was destroy'd, I cannot tell. 'Tis, however, probable it might remain 'till the lamentable Age of Confusion and Sacrilege, at which time too (for I cannot think it was before) 'tis very likely the Story of this venerable and holy Matron (that was put over her Tomb, to be read and considered by such as came out of Reverence and Devotion to see it) might be utterly defaced and obliterated, and the very Plate convey'd off, with many holy Relicks relating to her. I mention holy Relicks, because there was such an universal opinion conceiv'd of her extraordinary Sanctity, that, some years after her Death, a prodigious concourse of people constantly flock'd to the chappel, and look'd upon themselves as happy, if they could but have a sight, or a touch, of her Tomb, and any thing that appertain'd to her. Several Things belonging, in some sort or other, to her were preserv'd there; as there were others in private hands, which were as religiously secured, the possessors thinking themselves, in those times, very happy on that account. Hence the highest value was put upon even the least rag of her clothes. ³What, therefore, shall we think of the fine gilt Girdle, with a curious blew Pendant (commonly call'd the long pendant Girdle) that was formerly preserv'd by some devout people at Oxford, and was at last bequeath'd (by Johanna Gylle, wife of Edmund Gylle of Oxford, and Daughter and Heiress of William Danvyle, of Oxford, Gent.) in the year 1486. (beginning the beginning of Hen. VII's. Reign) to the Image of St. Edmund of Abbingdon, that was in one of our Oxford Churches; i. e. All-Saints, alias All-Hallows, as Mr. Wood reckons ¹, in which the said Johanna was buried? Surely such a Curiosity as this, was judg'd as invaluable, and could not, therefore, be well lost 'till the Dissolution. After this great Man had been canonized, many places were immediately dedicated to his honour. Among the rest must be reckon'd, St. Edmund's chappel in the Nunnery of Catesby in Northamptonshire, of which place his two Sisters were Nunns, being placed there by himself, having before try'd some other Nunneries, but could not prevail, unless he would have incurr'd the Guilt of Simony. One of these Sisters was afterwards Prioress of Catesby. The chappel to St. Edmund was built by their care, and upon their Death they were buried in it before the High Altar. For thus our Rhythmical Author before cited:

This passage may give some light to such as are concern'd about the Dedication of this Nunnery of Catesby. Some say 'twas to St. Thomas the Martyr, others to St. Mary and St. Ed-

'Tis mentioned expressly in the remarkable old Rhythms of Robert of Gloucester, concerning the great Conflict between the Scholars and Townsmen of Oxford, in the year 1263. (47 II. 3.) at the time Prince Edward pass'd by Oxford, in his Journey towards the Marches of Wales. The whole Passage in Robert of Gloucester is very well worth reading, and deserves attention, and therefore 'twas deservedly taken (tho', as it seems, from second hand ¹) into Mr. Wood's History and Antiquities of the University of Oxford ², where are several Mistakes, which render it unintelligible, and for that reason 'twill be proper to peruse it, as I have printed it from the Cottonian MS. ³ and at the same time it will be requisite also to compare it with the prose passage, upon the same occasion, that I shall here transcribe, and publish, from a MS. Chronicle of England in the hands* of the ingenious Thomas Ward, of Longbridge near Warwick, Esq;. written about the Reign of H. VI. by an Author, who undertook to metaphrase Robert of Gloucester, but in doing it he hath committed many Mistakes, and oftentimes miserably curtail'd the Work, especially where he did not understand his Author, as may, in some measure, be learn'd from this very Passage about the said Conflict, where he hath quite pass'd over those remarkable Words here well, purely, as I conceive, because he did not understand the Signification of the Expression, which is no more than old well, and is to be understood of Walton well, as I have insinuated in my Preface to Rob. of Gloucester ⁴. Then the barones had the towne, and the kynge had the Castelle [of Gloucester,] and oftentimes bykred to gedre. So that Sir Edward, þat was in the Est quarter, entend to rescue the Castelle of Gloucestre, and come with his poer, and wolde come throgh Oxenforde. But the yates were shitt faste ageynst hym. For the Burges of the vnyversite wold not suffre hym come ynne. But he lay in the kynge's halle without the gates, and vppon the morowe he went his wey Westward. And then alle the gates were opened, save the smeþe gate. For that wey alle þe Clerkes shulde goo vnto their pleyngce place, called Bemondes. Oftentimes they desirede the baillies to opene that gate, that thei might haue their sportynge, but alle was for nocht. So that wilde hedede felowes toke their councelle, and after dyner come to the gate with axes vnder their mantelles, and alle to hewede the gate, and bare hym forth vppone their shuldors to Bemonde, and sange subuenyte, as it were to a dede Cors. William Spicer and Geffrey Hencsey were porters, and Nycolle Kynston was Meir. And thoo were at brekyngce of the gate were put in pryson by the Meir's commaundement. And the ¹ Propters sende dyvers times to haue hem delyvered. And ther with alle were the Clerkes wroth. But the bourges were bolde, and thretened to put moo of hem in prison. And the first

Thursday in Lent the bourges, while people were at mete, reised vppe two baners, and gadred their power to destroy the Clerkes or they were ware. And as thei come by Allehalowen with their power, at Seynt Mary churchce a clerke range the towne belle, and alle the Clerkes stirt from their mete, and put their trust in God, for thei stode in grete daunger. Thei met with the Bourges, and began to shete fast, so that many were sore wonded of the Bourges, and at last the began to fle, so the Clerkes hadde the stretes fre. Thei brake vppe the boweers shoppe, and toke out bowes, and then they set the Porteres houses a fiere. And sone after they went and brake vppe the Spicerý, and bare it awey, and then made havok of the meyr's wyne, by cause he was a vjntener. And whenne the kynge vnderstode of suche trespass, he put out alle the Clerkes out of Oxenford tille after Myghelmas. West ende of Gloucestre, and assoilled þe towne strongly, &c. This MS. (which is in Folio) begins with the Story of Albion's being so called from Albine, the eldest of Dioclecian King of Syria's XXXIII. Daughters, (not fifty one, as in Hector Boëthius) who having murdered their Husbands, were by their Father put to the hazard of the Sea, and were luckily brought to this Island, which was named Albion by the eldest from her own Name. The Story occurs in Caxton and elsewhere, and particularly in Latin at the beginning of an old vellum MS¹. of Geffry Monmouth and venerable Bede's History in the hands of my learned Friend, Thomas Rawlinson, Esq;. where nevertheless are only XXX Daughters mentioned of Dioclecian. Tho' there is not one material point of History in Mr. Ward's MS. but what is already well known, and far better and more fully delivered in the original of Robert of Gloucester, that I printed, yet 'tis a great Curiosity, and worth preserving, being really different (as far as I can remember) from all the MSS. of the History or Chronicle, commonly call'd Brute of England, that I have seen hitherto². There is a Picture at the beginning of Dioclecian and his Daughters. The King is represented standing, with a sword in his right hand, and an hat, or sort of bonnet, upon his head. The Daughters are represented going to a Ship. It ends at the Battle of Lewes, in which it says, that the King of Almaine was taken in a Windmill, and that Prince Edward fled into the Minor (or Grey) Friars. And when the two ostes (these are the Words) met, there was many a modre sonne broght to grounde, and the kyng of Almayne was taken in a wýndemýlle, þat som tyme was duke of Cornewalle, and Sir Edward ron to the Froiers Menores

 I have put points, because a little more than a line (which would have quite fill'd the page) is plainly eras'd (the Rasure being very visible) by I know not what hand, on purpose to make one believe,

if possible, that the book is compleat; for which reason a late, I suppose the same, hand hath added the Word Finis to it, tho' 'tis certain 'tis an imperfect MS. and I do not doubt, but it concluded, as Robert of Gloucester himself did, at the Beginning of Edward the 1st's. Reign, to which Period perhaps another Picture at the End of the Book relates. At the beginning of the MS. (on the backside of the first Picture) is written and below that again by the same hand, on the same page,

Jo: Hales 1640.

Jo: Hales.

I first thought, that this had been the hand writing of the famous Mr. John Hales of Eaton, and that the Book belong'd to him; but I am now of opinion with Mr. Ward, that it rather belong'd to the Family of the Hales's of Coventry, and that, perhaps, it came from the Priory of Coventry. This Family lately dwelt at Coventry, and John Bale says thus of one of their Ancestors ¹: JOHANNES HAYLES, vel HALESIIUS, illustri Generis Homo, bonarumque literarum peritus, Coventriæ magnificas erexit Scholas, ac pro pueris instituendis edidit Introductiones quasdam, Lib. I.

Claruit anno Domini 1548.

And I am the rather inclin'd to be of this opinion, from some things that I have heard from my worthy Friend, Mr. Francis Taylor, M.A. and Fellow of University-College. The said John Hales, as Dugdale also observes ², was the same that Leland calls ³, Hales with the clubbe Foot.

Part of Caxton's ymage or myrrour of the world, which is a most rare Book (printed in 1480.) and was lent me by the ingenious Mr. Ward of Longbridge. As there are many things in that book, which are very odd and singular, so it will be very diverting to the reader, to read the Author's notion about money, especially too since the Remark will be of some service in illustrating our old English Coyns:*

¶ Here it declareth for what cause monoye was first established.

THE monoyes were established first | for as moche as they had not of alle thinges necessarye to gydre That one had whete | another had wyn | and another cloth or other wares | he that had whete | had not wyn withoute he chaunged one for another | and so muste they dayly change one for another | For to haue

haue that they had not | as they that knewe none other mene | whan the philosophres sawe this | they dyde so moche that they established wyth the lordes somtyme regnyng | a lytil lyght thyng whiche euery man myght bere with him to bye that was nedeful to hym | and behoefful for his lyf | And so ordeyned by aduise to gydre a thyng whiche was not ouer dere | ne holden for ouer vyle | and that it were of somme valure for to bye and vse wyth all true marchandyse one wyth another | by vertue of suche enseygne | And that it were comune ouerall and in all maner | And established thenne a lytil moneye | whiche shold goo and haue cours thurgh the world | And by cause it lad men by the waye and mynystered to them that was necessarye | it was called monoye | That is as moche to saye | as to gyue to a man al that hym behoueth for his lyuyng | Monos in grekyssh langage is as moche to saye | as one thyng only | For thenne was but one maner of monoye in all the world—But now euery man maketh monoye at his playsir by which they desuoy and goo out of the waye more | than yf ther were but one coyne only | For by this cause is seen ofte plente of dyuerse monoyes | Thus established not the philosophres | For they established for to saue the state of the world | And I saye it for as moche yf the monoye were out of grotes and pens of siluer so thenne it shold be of lasse weyght and lasse of valewe | and that shold be better for to bere by the way for poure folke | and better shold be easid for the helpe of their nedes to their lyuyng. And for none other cause it was ordeyned first | For the monoyes be not preysed but for the gold and syluer that is therein | And they that established it first | made it right lytil and lyght | For the more ease to be born al aboute | where men wold goo | For now in late dayes as in the begynnyng of the Regne of kyng Edward ¹ and longe after was no monoye curraunt in englond but pens and halfpens and ferthynges | And mores, p. 310. moors, barren mountains, heaths or barren spaces of ground, meers, fens, or low moist or marshy places, and so it seems to signify here from the word medis immediately following. The Words moor and meer in the South parts of England are confounded, whence 'tis, that the great meer near Bicester is called Otmoor, when it should be Otmeer or Otmere. The Word mora also is taken in both senses in the middle-aged Latin Writers, tho' it more frequently signifies in them a fenny or moist place, and so 'tis certainly to be understood in John of Glastonbury, when he is speaking of the XII. Hides of Glastonbury. Between Rotherfield Grays and Nettlebed in Oxfordshire is an Hamlet called Highmor, which I once thought^r should be High meer, meer signifying often a boundary; but I am since sufficiently satisfy'd, that it is rightly called Highmor or Highmore, being an high, barren, dry Ground, where is a prodigious Quantity of black Cherries, which grow in the very Hedges. And just above Sandford, as we go from Oxford to Dorchester, is a dry barren Soil, which they call Basse-More (not from one Bassus^r, a Roman General, that got a great Victory here, as some have right foolishly suggested, but) from it's being a low Moor, or low dry barren ground, in opposition to the high dry barren ground, that is further off than this, being upon the Hill just beyond the way that turns off to Nexnham Courtney, and may therefore be properly stiled, as the Moor by Nettlebed is, Highmor or Highmore. And this mention of mores brings to my mind a remarkable Passage (concerning a dry ground, call'd Hob More) that occurs in a Letter that was writ to me from Mickleton in Gloucestershire on Saturday July 28th. 1723. by my very worthy Friend, Richard Graves, Esq;. It is this.

“ I was mightily pleas’d with “ a Statue I met with upon
 “ the Road, the Morning that I “ came from York. It stands “ about half a Mile from the “ City on the right hand of “ the Road to London, about a “ Land’s Length from it in a “ short Lane, that leads down
 “ to a Common, called Hob “ More. It is of a Person in “ Armour, his Face bare, and “ very comely; cross-legg’d,
 “ with Spurs on; girt about
 “ with a Sword, and Belt;
 “ and a large Shield on his left “ Arm, with these Arms there-
 “ on, viz. three Waterbou“ gets; which I remembered

“ I had seen the day before, “ carved on the Shields in se“ verall Places of the Stone“ work in the Minster.

“ It had been tumbled down,
 “ and lay neglected for seve-“ rall years, till it was repayr“ ed, and set up again about “ 6. years since; and tho’ they “ have now set it upright upon
 “ a Pedestal, I am apt to think “ it at first lay along upon “ an Altar, like another Mo“ nument; for the Backside is “ square and flat, and seem’s
 “ to have joyn’d to something “ else; and upon this they “ have put the following In“ scription, viz.

“ This Image long Hob’s Name ha’s bore,

“ Who was a Knight in time of yore,

“ And gave this Common to the Poor.

“ This was erected, Anno, 1717.

“ W. Tesh, L. Darcy, J. Yates, J. Lum,

“ It was given to the Poor of Mickle gate Ward.

 onde, (anhelitus,) breath, fury, wickedness, contention. with nýth & onde, with the utmost malice and vehemence. See Cotgrave and Skinner. It is a French word, signifying a wave which goes with force. 'Tis very properly us'd, in Mr. Sheldon's MS. of the Lives of the Saints, for malice or fury, with respect to the unnatural barbarity that was shew'd to that admirable young King, St. Edward the martyr (who is very absurdly represented with a long long beard in the old Paint- Library) by his Step-Mo-ings of All-Souls College ther:

Seynt Edward þe zonge martir was kyng of Engelonde:
zong y marterid he was þorw trecherie and onde.

*In which MS. (to note this with which this holy Prince by the way) is the following was slain:
mention made of the Knife,*

A, sere, quod þis luþer quene, whanne hit so schal be,
I wol to þe drynke, and suþe þou scalt hym se.
A redy was þe boteler, and brougt hem drynke anon,
Amonge alle þe oþer schrewyn þer com on gon,
And welcomede the kyng, and made him ioie y now,
And custe hym Judas¹ cos, and þer wiþ hym slow.
For as he stoupid adoun, and² prest was y now,
In his wombe he put aknyf, and þe guttis adoun drow.
A longe knyf and asmale, as me may zit y se.
For in þe church of Cauersham he hauyþ geris y be.

*Now as this Passage ought to be compar'd with what I have observ'd in §. VI. of my Preface to Robert of Gloucester;
so I desire it may be observ'd, that in this MS. at the End of the Account of K. Edward the Martyr (whom Caxton erroneously makes to be buried at*

Glastonbury, instead of Shaft-bury) are the following Verses relating to K. Edward the Confessor, which plainly confirm what I have remark'd in my Glossary³ to Robert of Gloucester about the Month of Lud's being the same with the Month of Murch:

The Kyng Atheldred his [K. Edw. the Martyr's] broþer goode man was y nowe,
Edward was his sone y hote, þat to alle godnesse drowe,
That kyng was suþe after hym, an hy halwe in heuene is,
He was suþe yschryned, at Westmester iwis,

 A mydde þe mounþe of Lyde ² y þat itolde here.
 God for loue of hem boþe, þat oure kynges were,

The Word Lyde is the same with Robert of Gloucester's Lud. And the Author's noting, that K. Edward's day (he means the Confessor) is in the middle of the Month of Lyde, shews that March is meant by it. For against the 18th. of that Month, in our old Kalendars, we have Edwardi regis & mar.

This Word sawe or saw, for a saying or proverb, is us'd in many Places to this day, and it occurs in the very beginning of the Preface to a very shrewd book, written by Dr. Nicholas Harpesfield, never yet printed, but is in MS. in the Library of New-College (where I saw it on June 26, 1719. and on May 13. 1725.) and is intit'led, A Treatise of Dr. Nicholas Harpsfield's concerning Marriage, occasioned by the pretended Divorce between King Henry the Eight and Queen Catherine. The Preface, call'd The Epistle to the gentle Reader, begins thus,¹

(Ath. Oxon. Vol. 1. col. 172.) takes notice of this book, and of the beginning of it, but without saying any thing about the two Corrections (by another Hand) that I have mentioned in the Margin. He also observes, that at the End of the MS. is this note: This copy was taken from the original, which was found by Mr. Topcliff in the house of William, sometimes servant to the said Dr. Harpesfield, who confessed, that two lines of the said original, were of his said Masters own hand writing. I saw this Note at the End, but then for two lines 'tis two leaves in the MS. Yet a Friend told me at that time * (when I first saw this MS.) that in a Copy he had of this book it is two lines; which Copy he thought was as authentick as the MS. in New-Coll. besides which he mentioned a third, that was equally as valuable, in the hands of another Friend. And even I my self have now by me a little Folio MS. (being given me by a Gentleman of very eminent Virtues, who died in 1721.) which contains many remarkable Extracts out of that work, among which is the in-tire Epistle to the Reader, beginning, It is an old true sad saying (gentle Reader) that truth is the daughter of time: &c. The last thing in these Extracts is this Memorandum: At the end of the Booke, from whence all, that is here, [was] transcribed, there is this Note:

“ This coppie was taken from “ the originall, which was “ found by Mr. ¹Topliffe in “ the house of William Car“ tor, sometime servant to “ the said Doctor Nicholas “ Harpsfield, who confess“ ed, that two leaves of the “ said originall were of his
 “ said Masters owne hand “ writing.

There is abundance of secret History in this Book, some whereof is contain'd in the said Extracts, all which, however, I shall here pass by, not so much as insisting upon what he insinuates about Anne Bullen's being K. Henry VIIIth's own Daughter (a point which hath been much urg'd by a learned anonymous Author, with whom I cannot agree, that I have refer'd to elsewhere ²) or what he notes about the King's being married to that Lady, long before there was any Divorce, secretly at White Hall, very early before day, and will only beg leave (tho' I fear it may

* In the Errata to the former edition of Langtoft, Hearne inserted the following Note on this passage:

“ He is since dead. I find his Memory fail'd him. For his Brother tells me, that 'tis expressly two leaves in the MS. and not two lines. The Transcript he sent me of the Note at the End of the MS. is verbatim thus: This Copy was taken from an authentic Transcript of the original, which was found by Mr. Topliffe, in the House of William Carter, some time servant to the said Dr. Nicholas Harpsfield, who confessed that two Leaves of the said original were of his said Master's own hand writing.” EDIT.

he look'd upon as unseasonable) to insert two of his Remarks, viz. that about the Death and Virtues of K. Henry VIIIth's first Queen, the Lady Katherine of Spain, and that which concerns the Mischiefs that occur'd from the Dissolution of the Monasteries.

—“ But the Pope,” (saith this learned Writer) when he understood, how all such things, as wee have before declared, had passed in England, was so farr from any manner of confirmation of the said divorce, that he accused the King and the whole Realme. The procureing whereof was imputed to Queen Catherine, and therefore the Duke of Suffolke was sent to her att Bugden in December in the 25 yeare of the King, where he brake the order of her court, and discharged a great sort of her household servants, who beeing sworne before to serve her as Queene, would not now serve her as Princess Dowager. In January twelve month after she departed att Kymbalton, and chainged her wofull troublesome life, with the celestial heavenly life, and for her terrestial ingrate husband, found a kinder and better and a celestiall spouse, from whome she shall never be sequestrated and divorced, but raigne with him in eternall glory for ever. Att the time of her death, she wrote a letter to the King of this tenor: *My Lord and Deare Husband, I comend mee unto you. The hower of my death draweth fast on, and my case beeing such, the tender love, I owe you, forceth mee with a few words to put you in remembrance of the health and safeguard of your soule, which you ought to preferre before all worldly matters, and before the care and tendering of your owne bodie, for the which you have cast mee into many miseries, and your selfe into many cares. For my part, I do pardon you, yea I do wish and devoutly pray God, that hee would also pardon you. Then after she had commended to him her Daughter the Ladie Mary, and her household servants, desiring him to bee good to them, shee shutteth up her letter thus: *fnally, I declare that my Eyes desire nothing, but only to see you. Att the reading of which letter the King burst out a weeping. Her dead corps was

 “ there interred. Before she “ departed att Kimbolton, shee
 “ had lye[n] two yeares at Bug-“ den, passing her solitarie life
 “ in much prayer, great almes
 “ and abstinence, and when “ shee was not this way occu“ pied, then was shee and her “ gentlewomen workeing with “ their owne hands, something “ wrought in needleworke cost“ lie and artificially, which “ shee intended to the honour “ of God to bestow upon some “ Churches. There was in “ the said house of Bugden a “ chamber, with a window, “ that had a prospect into “ the chappell, out of the “ which shee might heare di“ vine service. In this cham“ ber shee inclosed her selfe, “ sequestred from all other “ company, a greate part of “ the day and night, and upon “ her Knees used to pray att
 “ the said windowe, leaning “ upon the stones of the same.
 “ There¹ was some of her gen“ tlewomen, which did curi“ ously marke and observe all “ her doeings, who reported,
 “ that often times they found “ the said stones so wett after “ her departure, as though it “ had rained upon them. It

“ was credibly thought, that in “ the time of her prayer shee “ removed the cushions, that “ ordinarily lay in the same “ Window, and that the said “ stones were imbrued with the “ tears of her devoute Eyes. I “ have credibly also heard, that “ att a time, when one of her “ Gentlewomen began to curse
 “ the Ladie Anne Bull:” [with whom Sir Thomas Wyatt the elder had had carnal pleasure, before the King married her, as Sir Thomas himself told the King when he endeavoured to dissuade his Majesty from the Match, because her conversation had been very loose and base,

 Author observes in another place] “ she answered, hold “ your peace, curse her not, but “ pray for her, for the time will “ come shortly, when you shall “ have much neede to pittie and “ chanced indeed.” In short, this Lady was one of the greatest patterns of true Humility, Chastity, and all Virtues, of that age, and ’twould have been very happy (according to this writer) for the King to have acted contrary to what he did, especially since himself always ac-of an unblemished Character and Reputation. But as the King was in this case manag'd by that great wicked man Cardinal Wolsey (for such, if we credit this writer, he certainly was, notwithstanding his Generosity and Hospitality) so the Cardinal himself, as well as the King, soon tasted, even in this Life, the Fruits of unparallel'd Villany, a term soft enough (in the opinion of this writer) for an Act, that derived such an ocean of Mischief upon the Nation, part of which was the destruction of the Monasteries, which our Author (the second Remark I promised to mention) speaks of in the following manner :

“ — Yea I will now add
 “ and conclude withall, that the “ only losse of the Monasteryes, “ was not only for the decay of “ Vertue, Prayer and Religion, “ but also of the publicke com“ mon Wealth, inestimable and “ importable. I say, they were
 “ the very Nurseryes, not only “ of pietie and devotion, but “ also of the happy flourishing
 “ of the common wealth. Where

Thence in a wonderfull rare little book (consisting of seven sheets of paper in 8^{vo}.) intit'led, A brefe Chronycle concerning the examination and death of the Blessed martir of Christ | Sir John Oldecastell the Lord Cobham | collected together by Johan Bale. Imprinted at London | by Anthony Scoloker. And Wylyyam Seres Dwelling wythout Aldersgate. ¶ Cum Gratia et priuilegio ad Imprimendum solum, (at E iij b, for the book is not paged) we find it used in this passage:

An other clerke yet asked him
 [the Lord Cobham.] Wyll ye than do none honour to the holy cross?

He answered him. Yes |
 if he were myne I wolde lay him vp honestlye | and set vnto him that he shuld take no more scathes abroade | nor be robbed of his goodes | as he is now a dayes. *This book was

The Kyng nowe hearing that the Scottes were comyng towards him, rayseed hys fieldes, and wente forth to meete them, lodgyng the nexte nyghte in a fayre playne. In the morning very early, a greate alarme was reysed, so that euery man got him to armour, supposing the Scottes to be at hande. The horse appoynted for the kyngs saddle that day, as the Kyng shoulde haue got vppon hym, affrighted with some noyse, starte a side, and threwe the Kyng downe wyth suche violence, that hee brake twoo of his ribbes, as the reporte went. Other write, that his horse trode on hym in the night as he and his people rested them, keeping their horses still bridled, to bee ready the sooner vppon occasion of any necessitie: but howsoeuer hee came by hys hurt, he stayed not to passe forward in his purposed iourney, but mounting vppon an other horse, went forth wyth hys armye till he came to a place called Foukirke, where both the armies of England and Scotland met and fought. The Scottes were deuided into four schiltrons, as they termed them, or as we may say, round battailes, in forme of a circle, in the whiche stode theyr people, that caried long stauers or speares which they crossed ioyntly together one wythin an other, betwixt which schiltrons or round battails were certain spaces left, the which wer filled wyth theyr archers and bowmen, and behinde all these were theyr horsmen placed. They had chosen a strong grounde, somewhat sideling on the side of a hill. The Erles Marshall, Herford, and Lincolne whiche ledde the fore warde of the Englishemen, at the first made directly towardes the Scottes, but they were stayed by reason they founde a marys, or an euill faoured mosse betwixt theyr enemyes and them, so that they were constreyned to fetch a compasse towardes the weste side of the fieelde.

The Byshop of Durham ruling in the seconde battaile of the Englishemen consisting of sixe and thirtie standerds, or banners, knowing the let of that mosse or maris, made toward the Easte side, hasting forth to be the firste that shoulde giue the onset: but yet when they approched neare to the enemyes, the Bysshoppe commaunded his people to staye till the thyrde battaile, which the Kyng led, mighte approach: but that valiant Knyght the Lorde Raufe Basset of Drayton sayde to hym: "My Lorde Byshoppe, you may goe and say Masse, which better becometh you, than to teache vs what we haue to doe, for wee will doe that that belongeth to the order of warre:" and herewyth they hasted forth on that syde to chardge the fyrste schiltron of the Scottes, and the Earles wyth theyr battaile on the other side, and euen vpon the firste brunt, the Scottishe horsemen fledde, a fewe only excepted, which stayed to keepe the footemen in order. And amongst other, was the brother of the Lorde Steward of Scotlande, who as hee was aboute to set in order the bowemen of Selkirke, by chaunce was unhorsed, and slayne there amongst the same bowemen, and many a tall mans bodye wyth hym. The Scottishe archers thus being slain, the Englishemen assailed the speare men, but they keeping them selues close togyther, and standyng at defence wyth theyr speares like a thicke wood, kepte out the Englishe horsemen for a while, and foughte manfully, though they were sore beaten wyth shotte of arrowes by the Englishe archers a foote: and so at length galled wyth shot, and assailed by the horsemen on eche side, they begun to disorder and shrinke from one side to another, and herewith the horsmen brake in amongst them, and so they were slaine and beaten down in maner all the whole number of them. Some saye there dyed of the Scottes that daye (beyng the twoo and twenty of July, and the feaste of Mary Magdalene) aboue twentie thousande. Other write, that there were slaine at the leaste to the number of XV. thousande. The Scottishe writers alledge that this battaile was loste by treason of the Cumyns and other, as in the Scottish historie ye may more plainly perceiue, with more mater touching the same battaile:—

The word skyles or skilles (in the plural) occurs for reasons in a piece of an old Homily, in old English, written, as I guess, in the Reign of K. Rich. II. and lent me by Thomas Ward, of Longbridge, Esq;. The Subject is Charity. It begins thus: And for we speke of charite and loue of god and oure broþere, ic ¹ segge, þou most loue god more þan alle þyng, ge more þan þy self. & þat for iiii skyles. þe firste is, for þou ² nadest neuere ibe, gif he ne were. þe ii is, þat tabard, *(Fr. tabarre.) taberd, a jacket, jerkin, mandilion, or sleeveless coat, worne in times past by Noblemen in the warrs, but now only by Heralds, and is called their coat of Arms in service. Verstegan tells us, in his Restitution of decayed intel-

 "ciently a short gown, that
 "reached no further than to
 "the mid-leg, that it remain-
 "eth for the name of a gown
 "in Germanie and in the Ne"therlands, and that in Eng"land it is now the name only
 "of a heralds coat. But what Stowe tells us, in his Survey of London, is more remarkable, where talking of several fair*

Inns in Southwark, he takes occasion to speak of the Tabard Inn as the most ancient of them, and thereupon writes thus ¹: “ Amongst the which cerning which Mr. Somner, in his Saxon Dictionary ¹, hath observ'd many remarkable Particulars, which I shall forbear repeating here, and, instead thereof, shall take the opportunity of informing the Reader with what I meet with, in a very ancient and very valuable MS. (in vellum) de computo Ecclesiastico, in the Ashmolean Muséum, the author whereof was Byrðferthus, Brightfertus or Bridfertus, monk of Ramsey, or, as others ² say, Thorney, who, according to Bale, flourished in the year 980. in the Reign of King Ethelred. He tells us, 564 atoms make a moment, 4 moments a minute, two minutes and an half a prick or point, four pricks or points a tid or hour in the course of the Sun, six tids a fyrthling, 4 fyrthlings a day, and seven days a week. The original words (which will be more acceptable) are these. fīf hund 7 feoper 7 gýxtig atomi zepýrcað an momentum. feoper momenta zefýllað minutum. 7 tpezen minuta 7 healz zepýrcað anne ppican. 7 feoper ppica zepýrceað ane tid on þæpe runnan þýne. 7

gýx tida pýrcað anne pýrðling. 7 feoper pýrðlingaz pýrcað anne dæg. 7 feoþon dagaz ane pucan. I the rather take notice of this MS. because it contains many things that are really very curious, such as will give great light, in many respects, to such as deal in the Saxon times, and, for that reason, Leland ³ read this author intirely over, with wonderfull pleasure and delight. Indeed the Work is an improvement of Bede, whom Byrðferthus stiles appurða pimepæftiga, a very worthy chronologer, or, as Byrðferthus expresses it in Latin, venerandus astrologus, the word astrologus, it seems, being then apply'd to Chronologers and Astronomers, notwithstanding not observ'd by Du-Fresne, who was however acquainted ⁴ with this Author. tight, prepared, appointed, ordered, a direct journey, intire. had tight, p. 203. carried himself directly. to Snowdon has he tight, he hath all intirely to Snowdon. tighte, tight. tille, get, obtain, munage, to, till, labour, cultivate, improve, while. to tille lende, to get, obtain,

Mabyle, the daughter of Robert Fitz Haym, which is much better in the original, than in the prose MS. taken from Robert of Gloucester (about the time of Hen. VI.) in the Hands of Thomas Ward, Esq. where the passage is thus curtail'd, the Author being not well enough skill'd to interpret Robert at large: One of the grettest lordes of Englonde, except the kyng, callede Robert le figh Haym. For he lefte his bodi buried at Tewkesbury, for he rered that Abbey hym selfe. He hadde a doughter and his heire called Maboly.  since, called this hora tertia, the houre of terce, and in Edward the IVth's. time, when some dispute arose about the exact hour of the day, which this word denoted in the Statutes of the Order of the Garter, it was determined ² to be nine of the clock in the forenoon, tho' afterwards ³, in Hen. VIIIth's time, it was interpreted to be 3 of the clock in the afternoon: but very absurdly; as plain'y appears from the ancient Canonical hours of the Church, which ⁴ were seven in number, viz.

 Matutinæ laudes, or Mattins, the Prima Hora, or Prime, the Hora tertia, the Hora sexta, the Hora nona, Vespers, and the Completorium, besides the Nocturnum Officium, the Office for Nights; which is also divided into four Vigils, the Conticinium, Gallicinium, Intempestum, and Antelucinium. Now since their Mattins were performed about break of day, and their Prime, by consequence, at 6 a Clock in the morning, I can see no reason to doubt, but the hour of Tierce was 9 a Clock in the Morning, and so the rest at 3 hours distance one after the other. And this Determination of it to nine of the clock is confirmed again by Mr.
 Somner in another place of his Saxon Dictionary, where s this passage occurs. " Kyp-

To what hath been here suggested I shall add, that as the word terce comes from the Latin tertia, so in all the old Books of Offices, which I have seen, the Expression hora tertia is always understood to be nine of the clock in the Morning, and hora nona three in the afternoon. I have now (Jan. 8. 1724.) before me one MS. of this kind, being a Breviary, in which both Expressions occur in that sense. And I mention this MS. the rather, because I find, at the End of it, the following remarkable Notes (in an old, tho' later, hand) relating to the Family of the Tylneys:

One would think from the first of these Notes, that the MS. is, at least, as old as the Reign of K. Richard the first. And yet, as soon as I saw it, I guess'd it to be much more modern. And I soon found my conjecture confirm'd from the mention (in the body of the book, in the very same hand with the rest) of Pope Sixtus the fourth thus: Dominus papa Sixtus quartus composuit quartam & quintam prædictorum suffragiorum oraciunculas. Et cum hoc omnes indulgencias hæc legentibus per ante concessas duplicavit. Now Sixtus the fourth being made Pope in 1471. and dying in 1484. the Book cannot be older than the Reign of Edw. IV. I suppose, therefore, that the Note relates really to some other older Breviary or Book of Offices, of which this (which is finely written, in good large characters, such as were proper for elderly people, and those that had bad Eyes) may have been a Copy. The like Note occurs both in Hackluyt and Weever; but there being some differences, I question whether it were immediately from the same MS. That the Reader may the better perceive the Variations, I shall transcribe the Copy as 'tis in Weever's Ancient Funerall Monuments, pag. 818.

Mr. Le Neve hath observed, in a Letter to me, that Sir Fredericke de Tylney was the famous champion, known by the name of Hycophrix or Hycothrift, which is, probably, a corruption of Frederick, and he hath noted, withall, that his MS. is the very same, that Hackluyt refers to. For the Reader's better satisfaction, I shall take the opportunity of publishing the whole passage in Mr. Le Neve's Letter, and afterwards I will leave it to the Reader's own Judgment, to determine as he shall think fit.

“ College of Arms in London, “ Saturday 16 of May 1724.

“ In your Glossary to Robert of Glouc. page 640. you mention the famous champion of Mersland in Norfolk, whose story hath been long since printed in a black letter, but the signification of the fable I am not yet satisfied fully about. Tho I intend, this vacation, to travel over Mersland in Norfolk, to find out more certainty; in the mean time, I would beg to know, what is in your MSS. vol. 61. p. 117. and vol. 82. p. 67. said of him. The most probable opinion is Sir Henry Spelman's, and that of Mr. Weaver in his funerall Monuments, pag. 818. (from Hackluit) in his Discourse of Terrington in that country, who tells you, that Sir Frederick de Tylney, a valiant Knight, was at the seige of Acon with King Ric. I. & Iyes buried in Tirington church-yard, and, I suppose, haveing a cross on the upper end of a long staff, “ cutt on his tomb, (which I will suppose something like the cross in the hand of the cutt of the Knight templer in Dugdale Mon. Angl. [and] might give rise to the story of the wheele & axle tree,) as dyeing in the holy laud, might be the person, who either gave the large common to the inhabitants of the towns round (called Tilney Smeth) or rather recovered it for them by his power or lawe from some person, who had inclosed it. (Quære if Hycophrix is not a corruption of Frederick?) The story about the 16 Knights of the name succeeding him is false. For they were not all Knights, neither were sixteen descents from him to Sir Philip Tilney, Knt. whose daughter was second wife of Tho. Duke of Norfolk, & which Duke married to his first Wife Eliz. daughter & sole heir of Frederick Tylney, Esq; not Knight, of Boston in Lincolnshire, and carried away the main of the estate of the family to her son John, last Lord Berners, by her first husband Sir Humfry Bourchier, Knt. killed at Barnet field *t. Somner's Sax. dict. voc. pepe.

Where it must be observ'd,
that this Saxon Word pepe is quite distinct from pape, which signifies properly men, incolæ, habitatores, &c. For which reason it is, that in my Preface to the second Volume of Ductor Historicus I have noted, that Мерцпape is the same with viri palustres, or Marshmen, and that agreeably to what Mr. Somner hath said in the said Saxon Dictio-here I must beg leave to do my self one piece of Justice, which is this, that whereas in the fourth Edition of Ductor

 and absurdly printed Menrc-ascrib'd to me, the said Edition being both printed and publish-privity. Nor indeed had I any manner of hand in any of the Editions of Ductor Historicus,

 of the first Volume, and the first

 This Word woke is used also by Robert of Gloucester for place, ' where he speaks of Otho the Pope's Legate's going to Oxford, and of the great fray that happened at that time at Osney, when the Legate was forced, for security, to get into the Steeple of Osney Abbey Church, the Scholars of Oxford being enraged to such a degree, from the Affront put upon them by one of his servants, that, in all probability, he might, otherwise, have lost his Life. The matter was afterwards accommodated, but with Loss to the Scholars, as may be learned from Mr. Wood's account thereof, in his History and Antiquities of the University of Oxford, under the years CIOCCXXXIIX, CIOCCXXXIIX. But then Mr. Wood does not take notice of what Robert of Gloucester says thereof, having not, I suppose, met with it in the Papers (for I do not think, that he had seen Robert of Gloucester himself ¹) which he perused; and yet Robert's account ought not to have been passed over, as having something in it very particular about an allowance, that the Scholars made to the Legate, even as much as he spent in commons (or in his Family or Houshold) in the Week, which was a great Burthen, considering that it lasted many Weeks together, and that the Legate, and his Retinue, which was very large, lived very magnificently, and spent much, notwithstanding the frequent Treats they met with. But the MS. prose Chronicle, in Mr. Ward of Longbridge's hands, represents this compromise, as if the Scholars granted the Legate as much as every Scholar's Commons came to by the Week, whereas the original Words have another Sense, viz. what I have mentioned, that they allowed him as much as he spent in the Week in Commons, which might be therefore sometimes more, sometimes less (but always, to be sure, very great) as occasions offered.

in which Treatise the Author most maliciously writes, not only against the Pope and other Bishops, but against Canons, Priests, Monks and Friers, and makes use of such opprobrious, unbecoming language, as he was hardly match'd by any of those times, unless by foul-mouth'd Bale. But notwithstanding he reviles the Clergy and others at such a rate, he was, tho' a clergyman himself (being Rector of Dysse in Norfolk⁴) guilty of those very crimes, that he accuses others, however innocent, of, insomuch that he kept a concubine or whore in his house, and made use of her body (and

Word wroke for reveng'd was used even in the Reign of K. Henry VIII. For thus John Skelton, the famous Poët Laureat at that time, in his Ymage of Ypocresy², the MS. whereof was lent me by the learned Peter Le Neve, Esq.; Norroy King of Arms:

a great while together⁶, a thing so very notorious, that he most deservedly fell⁷ under the censure of his Diocesan Richard Nykke, Bishop of Norwich, which discontented him (for he was a proud man) to that degree, that it shorten'd his Life⁸. This man's malice was so outrageous as to fall upon that great, good man Sir Thomas More, whom in this Treatise he thus asperses⁹:

Now had he taken care to have his Satyr levelled against the Crimes of particular ill Men, it had been tolerable, and his Lashes might have proved of great Service. Wise men in this Age do not blame him for his falling upon Cardinal Wolsey, who, with all his Greatness and Magnificence, did an incredible deal of Mischief, as is well known to such as recollect, not only his perswading the King to put away his virtuous and truly religious Wife, and his leading the way to destroy Churches, Chappels, and other Houses, dedicated to Religion, but his great Enmity to that usefull art of printing, so as to obstruct it's progress at St. Alban's, where otherwise we should have seen many more Books printed than we now, with all our Searches, find that there were. It must be allow'd, that the Author's Name is wanting in this MS. but, notwithstanding that, Mr. Le Neve (and I readily agree with him) for many reasons ascribes it to Skelton, who therefore in vain endeavoured to stifle his name, and to get off in a leering manner, (after the fashion of Buffoons) if he were inquired after, as may

 { And live in charite.

But we ought not to wonder, that Skelton, and such as he, should, in their Writings, fall so very foully and scurrilously upon great good Men, when even others, that would fain be thought of a more sedate temper, have not avoided the same indecency in their Writings; whence 'tis, that we find such malicious stirs against the poor Monks in Robert Hegg's Legend of St. Cuthbert, that was published at London A.D. 1663. by one, who stiles himself B. R. (not, as in Anthony à Wood¹. R. B.) Esq;. But, it seems, the Publisher hath taken such a liberty, in setting out this little Book (which is now extremely scarce) that, it may be, all the unbecoming Expressions are to be ascribed to him, and not to the Author, whose original MS. was formerly in the hands of the famous Dr. Pocock, from which the learned Mr. Rosewell (late Master of Eaton School) transcrib'd the Epistle to the Reader, omitted by the Publisher, and inserted it in a Copy of the printed Book, that I lately very luckily purchased, from which I shall here copy it, together with what “ N. B. In pag. 248. of this Work is a short account of the taking of Acon or Acres from the Christians by the Saracens in the year 1292, upon occasion of which I shall here beg leave to publish a Letter of Soldon Emperour of the Turks directed to a Christian King, as it was transcribed and sent to me from the Register of John de Pontissera Bishop of Winchester by my learned friend the Reverend Mr. Richard Furney, Archdeacon of Surrey. 'Tis a Curiosity, and as it pleased me, so I believe it may not be displeasing to curious Readers.

 cipatio Amiralii fidelium, filius Soldani Malet Monso-riensis fidei talaon Salachii, In Nomine Dei Misericordis Nobili et honorabili sapienti Leoni Haiconi de Stirpe Christi, gloria nationis crucis, lumen sequentium Ihesum, amicum Regum et Soldanorum faciat te Deus qui pro-videt de futuris in præteritis et præsentibus per ex-emplum, et uniat te cum obedientibus private et mani-feste, qui recepit in propria persona cum patientia tri-bulationem emergentem supra suam nationem, ex quo viam invenire non potuit resistendi, facimus vobis notum, quod Civitatem Aconen: quæ erat sedes fidei crucis, conquisivimus, eam in tam paucis diebus obse-dimus, quod milites cum omni sua potentia eam defendere non valebant, nec resistere multitudini exercitus obsidentis, et cum sustinere nequiverunt propter mul-tudinem occisorum, quantumcunque nominati essent et laudati milites, una brevi hora diei omnes à nobis ferrati fuerunt et compediti. Omnes Milites Hospital:
 noster consumpsit vibrans ensis. Templarii Civitatem Aconen: prodiderunt et fratres terram perdere dubi-tantes, set nec sic ruinæ eventum evaserunt. Consumpto totaliter Hospitali Alamanorum, Ecclesias omnes terræ coæquavimus, super altaribus trucidatis qui populum ad obedientiam ipsorum inducebant: Patriarcha finali supplicio liberato, copiam aurorum credere non possetis qui ad manus hominum devenerunt. Tanta fuit Dominarum multitudo, quod una pro drag-ma vendebatur. Civitate conversa in agriculturam et desertum, Illius civitatis notorius est conquestus, et ex præsentium literarum nostrarum exhibitione scire poteritis, quomodo mortuorum corpora balistariis coæquantur, ignem supponentes mortuorum corporibus in pulverem sunt redacta. Ex armamentis fieri fecimus com-pedes pro pedibus. Qui vivi nobiscum remanserunt Comites et Barones, qui signa super eorum capita portare consueverant, ligatis pedibus et manibus nostris carceribus mancipantur. Et tu Rex si teipsum castiga-veris per hujus rei eventum, qui super civitatem Acon

6 per nos subito & potenter evenit, salvus eris; quod si
 6 non feceris, super te dicetur quod dicitur, super eis
 6 peribis tu et terra tua, sicut ipsi per ensem nostrum
 6 perierunt. Et si cognoveris eventum eorum quæ acci-
 6 derunt, erit tibi ad profectum, et venias personaliter
 6 cum donis tuis et tributo duorum annorum ad altitudi-
 6 nem portarum nostrarum, sicut homo qui vult salutem
 6 personæ propriæ et terræ suæ, et qui velit subterfugere
 6 robur potentiæ tanti regis, et dicere poteris, quod post
 6 des lationem Acon talis victor, sicut nos sumus, non 6 remansit. Idcirco cogita de teipso, & cito labora ante-6 quam in Museipulam nostram cadas.'

" N. B. In p. 645. of my Glossary to this Work,
 I have taken notice of lying Bale's Book about Sir John Oldecastell, which being printed after a very particular manner in the black Letter (agreeable to the black Character of its Author) by Anthony Scoloker and Wylljam Seres. hath occasion'd some, that are curious after Books printed in the black Letter, to give great Rates for it, otherwise 'tis but a Trifle, and is taken into John Fox's Acts and Monuments, particularly into the first Edition thereof, p. 261. col. a."

Historia Vitæ et Regni Ricardi II. Angliæ Regis.
 8vo. Oxon. 1729.

To these may be added two or three Notes from the copy of Peter Langtofts Chronicle formerly belonging to John Loveday Esqr. of Caversham near Reading: a friend and contemporary of Hearne.

" Pref. p. xliii. Gidding] See Papers relating to the Protestant Nunnery of Little Gidding: and some Historical Notes about the Ferrars, particularly Mr. Nich.
 Ferrar, at the end of Caii Vindiciæ Antiq. Acad. Oxon.

P. clxii. Mr. Theodore Hank.] Haak. v. Birch's Life of R. Boyle, p. 53. Ath. Ox. II. 845.

P. 343. The Certificat of Richard Pollard and Thomas Moyle.] Publish'd from the Copy of the Original in the hands of Mr. Gray of Colchester. See the Apparatus to Caj Vindiciæ Antiq. Acad. Oxon. p. xcvi.

P. 533. 1. 13. Quod (the same with quoth.)] Hearne saw the following inscription over the door of the parsonage house at Chewstoke in Somersetshire in 1729.

“ A dño factū est Istud quod Barry in anno dñi 1529.”

— note. For Britanniæ L. Britannicæ.

P. 538. note 3. L. 28. 40. 113.

P. 645. A brefe Chronycle &c.] It was republished at London by Mr. Blackbourne, in 1729, with an Appendix.

P. 670. 1. 11. undarne.] Dr. Hickes gives another very expressive proof of what we contend for, in his MSS. Additions to Somner's Saxon Dictionary, in the Earl of Oxford's Library. The words are Undepnīſ dages þrīdde tid. Cod. MS. Can. et Const. Eccl. in Rubricâ de Officiis. Cap. 28. See the Glossary to Urry's Chaucer, the author of which nevertheless says that it is still us'd as the Afternoon, the Evening, in some parts of England, and may be so understood in Chaucer.”

For the permission to transcribe these last Notes the Editor is indebted to ——— Loveday, Esq. of Williamscot, in Oxfordshire, through the medium of Mr. Archdeacon Churton.
