Digitized by Google

THE MAHABHARATA

OF

KRISHNA-DWAIPAYANA VYASA

TRANSLATED

INTO

ENGLISH PROSE,

~ Pallet ca.

Published and distributed chiefly gratis

BY

PROTAP CHANDRA ROY.

DRONA PARVA.

CALCUTTA:

BHARATA PRESS.

No. 1, RAJA GOOROO DASS' STREET.

1888.

(The right of translation is reserved.)

97,545 REGIZIVED NOV 19 1897 WIS. HEL. CICIETY.

NOTICE.

With the Bhishma Parva, nearly one half of the entire Mahabharata The progress achieved is not inconsiderable, remembering the encyclopædic proportions of the epic. The credit of the performance, however, in no way pertains to me. It is His only who, in His own inscrutable way, has been pleased to compass His end through an insignficant instrument, so that His glory may stand confessed before the sons of men! May He, therefore, be praised, and glorified with hymns from one end of the world to the other! now in mid-ocean, and it will take some time before I succeed in crossing the other half, and enjoy the satisfaction of having taken an active part in translating the far-famed work of Vyasa from a dead into a living language. The beauty and elegance of the original, it is true, do not admit of translation, for the curse of Babel fell with greater severity on poets than on any other class of men. For all that, to the appreciative reader even a prose version, such as mine, cannot altogether fail to give glimpses of the peculiar characteristics of the original.

It has taken me over five years to go through the first half; to complete the other half, would, perhaps, take more time having regard to the difficulties of the Canti Parva, which is one of the longest of the eighteen books of the Mahabharata. Who knows, again, what revolutions these five years may bring forth? The humble individual who on a tiny raft has rashly ventured to cross the shoreless ocean, may himself be gathered to his fathers, and his place may know him no more. Many of the recipients of the translation may depart this life. considerations, weighing with me, have made me determine upon expediting the work as much as I possibly can; and if, for that object, I have to pledge my last utensil, let the public rest assured, I shall by no means shrink from doing so. For the object mentioned above, I intend, if means permit me, to double the establishment, both literary and mechanical, connected with the English translation, so that, humanly speaking, I may be able to bring the undertaking to completion as soon as possible.

Although without resources of my own, I am not altogether hopeless that I shall succeed in completing my salf-imposed task. undertaking is fortunate in one respect, viz., in being under the fostering care of many persons and personages of note, individuals, whose esponsal of any cause will ensure success. They are, indeed, towers of strength to the Datavya Bharata Karyalaya. First and foremost among them, let me name him, the illustrious statesman and nobleman, who, uniting high intelligence with sterling worth of character, is surpassed by few, if any, of his great predecessors in the high office he fills under the Crown. His Excellency, the Earl of Dufferin, has been graci usly pleased to take a warm and abiding interest in my humble labors. Then, again, this institution counts the present noble ruler of Bengal amongst its active patrons and supporters. The uniform kindness which Sir Steuart Bayley has shown to the Karyalaya has enabled it to tide over Filled with many excellent graces, Sir extreme straits and stresses. Auckland Colvin also has ever been ready to listen to the appeals I have made to His Honor in the interests of the institution. Great and signal also has been the support lent by Sir Charles Aitchison, whose resignation of his seat in the Viceregal Council the Karyalaya feels as a calamity not only to India but to itself. This institution has also been uniformly favored with the support of other high officials such as General Chesney, the Hon'ble Mr. Scoble, and many others. In Europe also, the English translation of the Mahabharata has been able to enlist the Of the former, sympathies of many noblemen and eminent personages. I may be permitted to single out his Grace the Duke of Manchester, and the Right Hon'ble the Marquis of Ripon, that best friend of India. eminent persons, I may name Dr. Reinhold Rost, the learned Librarian of the India Office, Mons. A. Barth of Paris, Mons. St. Hilaire, editor of the Journal des Savants, Dr. E. Windisch of Leipzic, Professor Herman Jacobi of Westphalia, and many other savants of note. American people also have uniformly encouraged me with their sympathy in my arduous undertaking. I may here specially mention the names of Mr. W. E. Coleman of San Francisco, Mr. H. B. Witton of Canada, Professor Lanman, Professor Maurice Bloomfield, and many other well-known scholars. The press of India, Europe, and America, has also lent its powerful aid on behalf of the English Mahabharata. In India, that veteran and able journalist and true friend of the Indian people, Mr. Robert Knight, editor of the Statesman, has given me the greatest support. Nor have the editors of the Pioneer and the Civil and Military Gazette been less eager to help me materially. this, I think, it will be evident, that there is small chance of the undertaking languishing for want of encouragement and pecuniary support.

I humbly pray to Hari, the Supreme Lord of All, to smile benignly upon His humble servant in the future, as He has done in the past, so that, defying all difficulties, and setting all impediments at naught, I may with the help of a favorable breeze cross the rest of the wide ocean, and at last anchor safely in the harbour which is still beyond my ken, thereby realising the dream of my life, viz., the completion of the Mahabhārata of Krishva-Dwaipāyana Vaysa into English!

PROTAP CHANDRA ROY.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

DRONA PARVA.

Dronābhisheka-Parva.

	F	AGE.
shtra's state on ishma's death		1
		ib
	as did
•••		ib
pillow		2
g Bhishma's lea	ave,
		ib
right		8
eir generalissim	10	ib
		5
nake his car res	dy	7
shma		10
		11
		12
to who should	be-
uru army		13
a as generalissi	mo	ib
the command		15
		ib
		ib
		ib
ttle		ib
leaders		ib
proceeds to bat	tle	17
onset		18
he Pāndava tro	ops	ib
		ib ghter of the 19
	hat the Kauray pillow g Bhishma's les right reir generalissim hake his car res shma to who should furu army ha as generalissi the command command of the ttle leaders proceeds to bat onset he Pāndava tro ghter of the	shtra's state on ishma's death

	0 ō
\equiv	0
	- 1
LO	-
LO	0
3	#
	0
0	S
00	- 00
-	w
=
-	S
-	(L)
-
0
	Œ
0	_
1 4	\sim
	_
0	0
ileann.
	+
(U)	w
Ψ,	0.7
$\overline{}$	1
73
\sim
	+
Œ
1.0
_	\subseteq
-	Ŧ
\sim	Œ
-
	_
_
-	-
	~
	- 5
	5
	_
S	_
0	-
+
+	0
Ħ
	+
	Ţ
	+
	Ţ
	Ţ
	Ţ
	Ţ
h /	Ţ
h /	Ţ
h /	Ţ
MT / h	/ htt
h /	Ţ
MT / h	d / htt
GMT / h	ed / htt
6 GMT / h	zed / htt
6 GMT / h	zed / htt
GMT / h	ized / htt
6 GMT / h	zed / htt
:06 GMT / h	tized / htt
2:06 GMT / h	itized / htt
:06 GMT / h	gitized / htt
2:06 GMT / h	gitized / htt
12:06 GMT / h	igitized / htt
2:06 GMT / h	gitized / htt
3 12:06 GMT / h	igitized / htt
03 12:06 GMT / h	-digitized / htt
-03 12:06 GMT / h	e-digitized / htt
-03 12:06 GMT / h	-digitized / htt
2-03 12:06 GMT / h	le-digitized / htt
-03 12:06 GMT / h	e-digitized / htt
2-03 12:06 GMT / h	gle-digitized / htt
-02-03 12:06 GMT / h	ogle-digitized / htt
2-02-03 12:06 GMT / h	oogle-digitized / htt
2-02-03 12:06 GMT / h	ogle-digitized / htt
22-02-03 12:06 GMT / h	oogle-digitized / htt
022-02-03 12:06 GMT / h	oogle-digitized / htt
022-02-03 12:06 GMT / h	oogle-digitized / htt
22-02-03 12:06 GMT / h	, Google-digitized / htt
022-02-03 12:06 GMT / h	n, Google-digitized / htt
1 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / h	n, Google-digitized / htt
n 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / h	in, Google-digitized / htt
1 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / h	n, Google-digitized / htt
n 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / h	ain, Google-digitized / htt
on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / h	main, Google-digitized / htt
d on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / h	ain, Google-digitized / htt
d on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / h	omain, Google-digitized / htt
ed on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / h	main, Google-digitized / htt
ed on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / h	omain, Google-digitized / htt
ted on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / h	omain, Google-digitized / htt
ated on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / h	c Domain, Google-digitized / htt
rated on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / h	omain, Google-digitized / htt
rated on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / h	ic Domain, Google-digitized / htt
erated on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / h	lic Domain, Google-digitized / htt
rated on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / h	ic Domain, Google-digitized / htt
nerated on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / h	blic Domain, Google-digitized / htt
nerated on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / h	ublic Domain, Google-digitized / htt
nerated on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / h	blic Domain, Google-digitized / htt
enerated on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / h	'ublic Domain, Google-digitized / htt

			PAGE
Drona inspires the Pandava troops with	fear		19
Yudhishthira urges Dhrishtadyumna ar	nd Arjuna	to surround Drona			ib
The Pandava leaders fight with courage	·		ib
Drona puts the Pandava troops to rout			20
Drona displays great heroism			21
Drona slain by Dhrishtadyumna			ib
Bhritarāshtra asks Sanjaya the particul	ars of Dro	na's heroism and slaughter			22
Dhritarāshtra swoons away			25
The Kuru king restored to consciousnes	s through	the ministrations of the Bharata ladies			ib
Dhritarāshtra enquires about those who	opposed
Yudhishthira			26
Ditto enquires how Arjuna fought			ib
Ditto enquires how the other warriors of	f the Pan	davas
fought			28
Dhritarāshtra recites the feats of Krishi	na		31
The Kuru king blames himself as the c	ause of the	е destruction of the Kurus			35
Ditto attributes that destruction to Dest			ib
Sanjaya begins his narrative in detail			ib
Duryodhana solicits a boon at Drona's h	ands touch	hing
the capture of Yudhishthira			ib Drona promises to seize Yudhishthira a
tain limitations			36
Yudhishthira learns through his spies th	hat Drona	has vowed to seize him alive			37
Yudhishthira's address to his brothers a	nd allies		ib
Arjuna comforts Yudhishthira			38
The Kuru host protected by Drona and		ava host by Arjuna stand inactive for son			39
Drona's heroism			ib
Drona causes a river of blood to flow on	the field	of 40
Yudhishthira rushes towards Drona and		ses
him on all sides			41

		1	AGE
The encounter between Cakuni	and Sahadeva		41
Diverse encounters between div	erse leaders of the two hosts	•••		42
The heroism of Abhimanyu			40
Abhimanyu encounters Jayadra			44
Calya engages Abhimanyu			45
Abhimanyu slays Calya's driver			ib
Calya rushes armed with a mac			ib
Bhimasena meets Calya			ib
The encounter between Calya ar	nd Bhimasena		47
Calya made insensible by Bhims			48
Kritavarman bears Calya away			ib
The Kurus fly away and the Pa
roars			ib
Karna's son Vrishasena assails t	the Pāndava army		49
Fierce battle between the Kuru			ib
Drona rallies the Kurus and rus			ib
Kumāra encounters Drona and i			ib
Drona slays many other protected		a	51
Yudhishthira's distress			ib
Arjuna rushes to Yudhishthira's	rescue	•••	ib
Arjuna defeats the Kurus			52
As evening approaches both host		eir
nightly quarters			ib
	1 - 11 - D
Samsaptaka-t	badha Parva.
The cheerlessness of Drona	= 474		52
Drona confesses his inability to	seize Yudhishthira	if
Arjuna is by	•••		ib
Advises Duryodhana to do somet		juna
away from Yudhishthira's sic	de		53
The Trigarta king Suçarman swe	ears to challenge and engage Arjuna in anothe	r part of the field		ib
The oath taken by the Samsapto	akas		54
The Samsaptakas challenge Arju	una		55
Arjuna informs Yudhishthira of	his inability to ref	use
the challenge			ib

			PACE.
Yudhishthira reminds Arjuna of Drong	a's vow ab	out
his seizure			.55
Arjuna appoints Satyajit as Yudhishth	ira's prote	ctor
in his own absence			ib
Yudhishthira gives Arjuna leave to fig	ht the
Samsaptakas			56
The joy of Duroydhana at the prospec	t of Arjun	8
leaving Yudhishthira's side			ib
The joy of the Samsaptakas at the pr	ospect of	fighting with Arjuna			ib
Arjuna addresses Krishna about the ill	l-timed joy	of the
Samsaptakas			ib
Arjuna encounters the Samsaptakas			57
The flight of the Samsaptakas			58
The king of the Trigartas rallies them			ib
Arjuna vows to Krishna that he would	I slay all t	he
Samsaptakas			ib
Arjuna shoots the Tashtra weapon an	d produces	s an illusion			59
The Samsaptakas slay one another			ib
The Samsaptakas return to the charg	е		ib
Arjuna again defeats the Samsaptaka	s and caus	es a terrible carnage	•••		60
During the time Arjuna is engaged wi	ith the San	msapta-
kas, Drona rushes towards Youdhi	shthira		ib
The Kaurava army under Drona adva	nces to the	e assault in the Garuda array			61
The constitution of the Garuda arra	у		ib
Yudhishthira urges Dhrishtadyumna	to prevent	the fulfilment of Drona's vow			62
Dhrishtadyumna promises to check D			63
Drona assails and routs Yudhishthira	's force		64
As Drona rushes towards Yudhishthin	ra he is en	countered by Satyajit			65
Satyajit slain by Drona			66
Yudhishthira flies away from Drona			ib
Encounter between Drona and Catan	ika	40.4	ib

	0 0
\equiv	5
	0,
LO	$\overline{}$
LO	0
	#
\sim
0	0
0	S
00	=
00
\equiv	S
>	S
_
	\oplus \circ
N	Ö
0	Œ
2	_
	0
+
(1)	0
_
-
	+
(L)	S
	-
\equiv	Z
0
	+
Œ
1.0 \subseteq
	+
	CTS
	(0
0	\subseteq
_	-
	,5
_	-3
	>
W	_
0	_
+
	-
+	0
ΡŢ	4
	+
	Ţ
	+
	Ţ
	Ţ
	Ţ
/ h	Ţ
/ h	Ţ
П / h	Ţ
/ h	/ htt
П / h	d / htt
П / h	/ htt
GMT / h	ed / htt
1 GMT / h	zed / htt
GMT / h	ized / htt
1 GMT / h	zed / htt
:01 GMT / h	tized / htt
2:01 GMT / h	itized / htt
:01 GMT / h	gitized / htt
2:01 GMT / h	igitized / htt
12:01 GMT / h	gitized / htt
3 12:01 GMT / h	igitized / htt
03 12:01 GMT / h	-digitized / htt
3 12:01 GMT / h	e-digitized / htt
-03 12:01 GMT / h	-digitized / htt
2-03 12:01 GMT / h	le-digitized / htt
02-03 12:01 GMT / h	gle-digitized / htt
-02-03 12:01 GMT / h	ogle-digitized / htt
-02-03 12:01 GMT / h	ogle-digitized / htt
2-02-03 12:01 GMT / h	gle-digitized / htt
22-02-03 12:01 GMT / h	oogle-digitized / htt
022-02-03 12:01 GMT / h	oogle-digitized / htt
022-02-03 12:01 GMT / h	oogle-digitized / htt
022-02-03 12:01 GMT / h	, Google-digitized / htt
2022-02-03 12:01 GMT / h	n, Google-digitized / htt
7 2022-02-03 12:01 GMT / h	in, Google-digitized / htt
7 2022-02-03 12:01 GMT / h	in, Google-digitized / htt
2022-02-03 12:01 GMT / h	ain, Google-digitized / htt
7 2022-02-03 12:01 GMT / h	main, Google-digitized / htt
7 2022-02-03 12:01 GMT / h	ain, Google-digitized / htt
d on 2022-02-03 12:01 GMT / h	omain, Google-digitized / htt
ed on 2022-02-03 12:01 GMT / h	main, Google-digitized / htt
ted on 2022-02-03 12:01 GMT / h	Domain, Google-digitized / htt
ated on 2022-02-03 12:01 GMT / h	c Domain, Google-digitized / htt
ted on 2022-02-03 12:01 GMT / h	Domain, Google-digitized / htt
rated on 2022-02-03 12:01 GMT / h	c Domain, Google-digitized / htt
erated on 2022-02-03 12:01 GMT / h	lic Domain, Google-digitized / htt
nerated on 2022-02-03 12:01 GMT / h	blic Domain, Google-digitized / htt
nerated on 2022-02-03 12:01 GMT / h	blic Domain, Google-digitized / htt
enerated on 2022-02-03 12:01 GMT / h	ublic Domain, Google-digitized / htt
nerated on 2022-02-03 12:01 GMT / h	blic Domain, Google-digitized / htt

	PAG.	E.
Drona slays Catānika	e	37
Drona causes an immense slaughter .	i	ib
Drona causes a river of blood on the field	i	b
The Pandava leaders, headed by Yudhisht	hira, encounter and encompass Drona	6	8
Drona defeats the Pandava leaders .	6	9
Duryodhana addresses Karna in joy, behol	ding the discomfiture of the Pandavas	7	0
Karna assures Duryodhana that Bhimasen	a would never leave the fight	7	1
Duryodhana proceeds towards Drona's car.	i	b
The deafening noise near Drona's car made	by the returned Pandava leaders	i	b
Dhritarāshtra enquires of Sanjaya about t	he distinctive indications of the cars of those Pa headed by Bhimasena that proceeded ag	gainst Drona 7	3
Sanjaya describes to the Kuru king the car	rs of those leaders i	b
The despondency of Dhritarashtra .	7	9
The Kuru army inspired with fear on seei	ng the Pandavas return to battle	8	1
Duryodhana urges the Kurus to meet the	Pāndavas boldly i	b
Diverse encounters between diverse leaders	of the two hosts i	b
Duryodhana rushes against Bhima and is	defeated by him 8	6
Bhima slays the Mleccha king of the Ang	as 8	7
Bhagadatta on his elephant rushes against	Bhimasena i	b
The distressful plight of Bhima	i	b
The Pandava host flies away from Bhagad		b
Bhagadatta defeats many leaders of the Pa	andava army 8	8
Arjuna, hearing the uproar of the Pandav	as, rushes
against Bhagadatta	9	1
The Samsaptakas, having returned, challe	enge Arjuna i	b
Arjuna resolves to slaughter the remnant	of the
Sumsaptakas	i	b
Arjuna defeats and slays the Samsaptaka	s 9	2
Krishna applauds Arjuna for the feat	i	ib
The Trigarta king again assails Arjuna	9	3
Arjuna makes his enemy insensible	i	b

=	0
	0 \Box
\Box	- 1
10	$\overline{}$
LO	_
3
0	(1)
0	S
_
	S
	0 Ö
2	\cup
_	-
0	Œ
0	_
1.1	_
	5
(1)	0
	+
(L) $\overline{}$ \subseteq
$\overline{}$
	+
Œ
	\subseteq
	+
	T
\sim
-	\subseteq
	_
S
	. "
0 1
-
1
-	0
\rightarrow	+
	4 \geq
	_
G	70
	(L)
0	N
0 0
	i
	+
\sim
1.1	-H
	-

			PAGE.
Arjuna proceeds against the Kuru army			93
The Kurus are unable to resist Arjuna			94
Arjuna encounters Bhagadatta			ib
Arjuna generously refrains from taking a	n advantag	е
over Bhagadatta presented by circum	stances		95
Bhagadatta assails Arjuna and Krishna			ib
Bhagadatta hurls the Vaishnava weapon	at Arjuna		96
Krishna receives that weapon on his own	breast, at	which the weapon becomes changed into a fl	oral garlan	d	ib
Arjuna taxes Krishna for this act			ib
Krishna tells Arjuna the history of the	Vaishnava
weapon			ib
The four forms of Krishna engaged in four	r different	acts	96
The Earth seeks a boon at Nārāyana's h
half of her son Naraka			97
After Naraka's slaughter by Krishna, his	son Bhaga	-
datta acquires the Vaishnava weapon			ib
Krishna urges Arjuna to slay Bhagadatta			ib
Arjuna slays Bhagadatta's elephant			ib
Bhagadatta falls, struck by Arjuna		•••	ib
Arjuna slays the Gandhara princes Vrish	a and Acha	la	99
Arjuna assailed by Dhritarāshtra's sons as	nd Cakuni		ib
Cakuni creates illusions for confounding	Arjuna		ib
Arjuna destroys those illusions			100
Arjuna defeats Cakuni who flies away in	fear		ib
The Kuru army is divided into two bodies	s one of wh	ich flies towards Drona, and the other tow	ards Duryo	dhana	ib
Arjuna causes a great slaughter			101
The Kuru host rallied		•••	ib
Fierce battle between the two armies			102
The encounter between Açwatthaman and	Nila		103
Nila slain by Açwatthāman			ib
Bhima encounters many Kuru leaders tog	ether		ib
Nakula and Sahadeva and Yuyudhāna ru	sh to Bhim	a's rescue			104
Awful sights on the field of battle .			ib
The leaders of the Pandava host attack D	rona		106

	PAGE.
Drona causes a great slaughter of the Chedis, the Pānchālas, and the Pāndavas	106
Arjuna encounters the Kurus after having defeated the
Samsaptakas	ib
The Kurus become inspired with fear and call upon
Karna to protect them	107
Karna encounters Arjuna	ib
Bhima, Sātyaki, and Dhrishtadyumna rush against Karn	a ib
Karna encounters them all	ib
Arjuna slays the three brothers of Karna	108
Bhima slays fifteen supporters of Karna	ib
Sātyaki encounters Karna and defeats him	ib
Duryodhana, Drona, and Jayadratha rescue Karna	ib
Fierce slaughter on the field	109
Evening comes and both armies retire to their nightly quarters	ib
Abhimanyu-badha Parva.
The Kuru army regarded as defeated on the second day	109
The Kurus retire cheerlessly to their tents	ib
Duryodhana reminds Drona of his vow to seize
Yudhishthira	110
Drona confesses his inability to seize Yudhishthira
if Arjuna is by	ib
Drona promises to slay some mighty car-warrior of the	5.00
Pāndavas that day	ib
Drona proceeds to battle, disposing the Kuru army in the circular array	111
Sanjaya informs Dhritarāshtra of the fall of Abhimanyu	ib
Dhritarāshtra is filled with grief at this intelligence	ib Dhritarashtra enquires how the battle was fought which terminated in Abhimanyu's fall	ib
Sanjaya's description of Abhimanyu's energy and might	112
The Kuru army disposed in what is called the circular	7.5
array	ib
The Pandavas fail to break that array	114
Yudhishthira asks Abhimanyu to break the circular array	1.55.5

					PAGE.
Abhimanyu proceed	ls agains	t the Kuru	army		116
Abhimanyu causes	a great	slaughter			117
Abhimanyu puts to	rout the	part of the	e Kuru arm	y
attacked by hin	n				119
Duryodhana proceed	ds again	st Abhiman	ıyu		120
Duryodhana rescue	d by the	Kuru leade	ers		ib
Abhimanyu defeats	diverse	leaders of	the hostile a	rmy	121
Calya defeated by A					122
Abhimanyu slays tl	he broth	er of Calya			123
Abhimanyu defeats	all the	warriors the	t encounter	him	124
Dhritarāshtra enqui	ires abou	t the detail	s of Abhima	nyu's
attack					ib
Drona's panegyric o	n Abhin	nanyu			125
Dusçāsana offers to	encount	er Abhiman	yu		126
Abhimanyu's speech					127
Encounter between	Abhima	nyu and Du	ısçāsana		128
Dusçāsana made ins				e field	ib
Abhimanyu wishes					129
Karna resists him	3 2 5 5 5 5				ib
Karna placed in gre	at distre	SS	•••		ib
The younger brothe	r of Kar	na encount	ers Abhima	nyu	ib
Karna's brother slai	n				130
Karna flies away fro	m the f	ield			ib
The Kaurava array	breaks				ib
Abhimanyu causes a	great s	laughter of	the Kaurav	as	ib
The Pandava leader					132
Jayadratha the rule	r of the	Sindhus ch	ecks them		ib
Dhritarāshtra enqui	res abou	t the source	of Jayadra	tha's
energy					ib
The boon obtained l	by Jayac	lratha from	Mahādeva		133
Jayadratha vanquisl	hes all th	he Pāndava	leaders		134
The path made by A					ib
Abhimanyu vanquis	hes Vris	hasena who	is borne aw	ay
from the field					135
Ditto slays Vāsātiya					136
Many warriors rush	against .	Abhimanyu	who slays t	hem all	ib
Abhimanyu slays R					137

-	0
2	0
	0 õ
	0 0
10	7
LO	d#
00	44
$^{\circ}$	44
0	(1)
=	S
0	(1)
	$\overline{}$ 00
-	S
_
~	S
-	(L)
	\circ
-
0	\circ
0	Œ
2	_
	2 0
+-	_
(L)	0
9	\circ
_
	+
(1)	S
0	07
$\overline{}$	\supset
-
\cup
	+
Œ
_
	+
	775 10
-
_
_
_	>
. ~
	-5
	>
	-
S	_
0	_
Ħ	0
+
	+
+
+	+
+	Ħ
+	Ħ
+	Ħ
+	Ħ
/ ht	/ htt
+	d / htt
/ ht	d / htt
GMT / ht	ed / htt
GMT / ht	d / htt
GMT / ht	zed / htt
GMT / ht	ized / htt
GMT / ht	zed / htt
:06 GMT / ht	tized / htt
2:06 GMT / ht	ized / htt
2:06 GMT / ht	tized / htt
:06 GMT / ht	gitized / htt
12:06 GMT / ht	itized / htt
12:06 GMT / ht	gitized / htt
3 12:06 GMT / ht	digitized / htt
12:06 GMT / ht	gitized / htt
3 12:06 GMT / ht	digitized / htt
-03 12:06 GMT / ht	digitized / htt
-03 12:06 GMT / ht	digitized / htt
2-03 12:06 GMT / ht	le-digitized / htt
-03 12:06 GMT / ht	gle-digitized / htt
2-03 12:06 GMT / ht	gle-digitized / htt
-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	ogle-digitized / htt
2-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	oogle-digitized / htt
2-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	oogle-digitized / htt
22-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	ogle-digitized / htt
2-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	oogle-digitized / htt
022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	oogle-digitized / htt
22-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	, Google-digitized / htt
022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	, Google-digitized / htt
1 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	n, Google-digitized / htt
n 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	, Google-digitized / htt
n 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	in, Google-digitized / htt
2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	ain, Google-digitized / htt
n 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	ain, Google-digitized / htt
n 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	main, Google-digitized / htt
d on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	omain, Google-digitized / htt
n 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	main, Google-digitized / htt
ed on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	omain, Google-digitized / htt
ted on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	Domain, Google-digitized / htt
ted on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	omain, Google-digitized / htt
ated on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	c Domain, Google-digitized / htt
rated on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	ic Domain, Google-digitized / htt
rated on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	c Domain, Google-digitized / htt
erated on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	lic Domain, Google-digitized / htt
erated on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	blic Domain, Google-digitized / htt
nerated on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	blic Domain, Google-digitized / htt
enerated on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	ublic Domain, Google-digitized / htt
nerated on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	lic Domain, Google-digitized / htt

				PAGE.
	Abhimanyu slays the friends of Rukmar	atha by the
	Gandharva weapon	4000		138
	Abhimanyu beats back the Kuru leaders			139
	Abhimanyu slays Lakshmana the son of		a
	in the sight of the latter			140
	Abhimanyu attacks the vast force of Ja	yadratha an	d
	causes a great carnage			ib
	Abhimanyu once more encountered by t	he Kuru lea	ders	141
	Karna enquires of Drona about the mea
	Abhimanyu			144
	Drona's advice to Karna about the cutting	ng of Abhir	nanyu	ı's
	bow, and the slaughter of his steeds	and drivers		145
	Six car-warriors simultaneously attack h	im and cut	off
	his weapons, steeds, drivers, and car			ib
	Abhimanyu slain by Dusçāsana's son	•••		147
	The joy of the Kurus and the grief of the	e Pāndavas	· · ·	148
	Invisible creatures censure the cowardly	act		ib
	The awful sights on the field of battle			ib
	The Pandava divisions fly away upon se	eing Abhi-
	manyu's fall		•••	ib
	Yudhishthira rallies them			149
	The approach of evening and the return	of the Kur	us
	to their nightly quarters			ib
	The awful aspect of the field			150
	Yudhishthira's lament on the fall of Abl	imanyu		151
	Vyāsa comes to Yudhishthira			152
	Vyāsa consoles Yudhishthira			153
	Vyāsa recites the history of king Akamp	ana and ho	w he was consoled by Nārada			154
	Nārada recites to Akampana the history	of Brahma	n's
	wrath			155
	Sthānu pacifies Brahman			156
	Brahman creates Death		.,,	157
	The penances performed by Death for be	ing excused the unpleasant duty imposed upon h			158
:	Brahman remains inexorable			160
	Death agrees to commence her work			161
	2

PAGE.

Akampana's grief dispelled		162
Vyāsa urges Yudhishthira to fight forgetting his		ib
Vyāsa recites the story of king Srinjaya		163
Nārada and Parvata fall in love with Srinjaya's	daughter and curse each other		164
Nārada grants to Srinjaya a boon in the form of	a son	165
The prince is slain by robbers	•••	ib
Srinjaya's grief		ib
Nārada consoles Srinjaya by reciting the story of	f Marutta	166
Nārada recites to Srinjaya the story of Suhotra		167
Ditto recites to ditto the story of Paurava		168
Ditto recites to ditto the story of Civi		169
Ditto recites to ditto the story of Rāma		171
Ditto recites to ditto the story of Bhagiratha		173
Ditto recites to ditto the story of Dilipa		174
Ditto recites to ditto the story of Mandhatri	•••	175
Ditto recites to ditto the story of Yayāti		177
Ditto recites to ditto the story of Amvarisha		178
Ditto recites to ditto the story of Caçavindu		179
Ditto recites to ditto the story of Gaya		180
Ditto recites to ditto the story of Rantideva		182
Ditto recites to ditto the story of Bharata		184
Ditto recites to ditto the story of Prithu		185
Ditto recites to ditto the story of Rāma (the so	n of Jamadagni)		188
Srinjaya's grief for the loss of his son dispelled		190
Nārada restores to Srinjaya his dead son		ib
Vyāsa shows the inability of calling Abhimany	u back to life on account of Abhimanyu's having as	cended
to heaven after the due performance of his d	luties	191
Urging Yudhishthira to abandon his grief, Vyā	sa makes himself invisible		192
The cheerlessness of Arjuna, while returning to	the
Pāndava camp		ib
The indications of disaster marked by Arjuna		193
Arjuna's grief on account of Abhimanyu's fall		194
Krishna comforts Arjuna		197

			PAGE.
Yudhishthira imparts to Arjuna the pa	rticulars of	Abhi-
manyu's heroism and fall			198
Arjuna vows to slay Jayadratha before	the setting	of the
morrow's sun			200
The uproar in the Pandava camp after a	Arjuna's vow	v	201
Jayadratha wishes to return home			202
Duryodhana comforts him with assuran	ces of prote	ction	203
Drona also promises protection to Jayac	lratha		204
Krishna remonstrates with Partha for h	nis rash vow		ib
Arjuna assures Krishna of his competer	nce to accom	1-
plish his vow			207
The fierce portents in nature			208
Krishna consoles his sister Subhadrā			ib
Sudhadrā's lament over Abhimanyu			211
Keçava returns to Arjuna's tent			214
The wakefulness in the Pandava camp			215
All the Pandava warriors pray for Arjur	a's success		ib
Krishna's speech to his charioteer Daru		3
resolution to fight on the morrow if			ib
Arjuna sees Krishna in a dream		•••	217
Arjuna sees Mahādeva in a dream			219
Krishna's hymn to Mahādeva			221
Mahādeva grants to Arjuna (in his dream	m) the Pāçi	upata
weapon			223
Arjuna and Keçava return to their camp	o		ib
The morning rites undergone by Yudhis			224
Arjuna and Keçava visit Yudhishthira			226
그의 가장 없는 경기가 되어 가장 계속 그렇게, 요즘 그는 네트리고 있다고 하다.			227
Keçava assures Yudhishthira of Arjuna	's success		228
Arjuna acquaints Yudhishthira of his di			229
Arjuna sets out for battle			230
Arjuna charges Sāyaki to protect Yudhi	shthira in h	is absence	•••		231
Dhritarāshtra's lament over the slaught	er of his tro	ops	ib
Sanjaya rebukes Dhritarāshtra for his fo		-
about the battle			235
Drona arrays the Kaurava troops			236

	0
$\overline{}$	0
	1
LO	73
	\simeq
LO	0
3	#
0	(L)
0	S
	-
00
Z	S
=
3	S
	es
-	~
	\circ
0
0	Œ
	10
0	_
	0
+	_
(L)	0
	\circ \perp
(U)	S
-	-
$\overline{}$	2
0	_
=	Ŧ
Œ
	_
-	_
	+
- 7
$\overline{}$	Q
-
\sim
_	>
	_
_	3
	>
	_
S
0	_
+
+
	tp
+	+
+	Ţ
+	+
+	Ţ
+	Ţ
+	Ţ
+	Ţ
/ ht	Ţ
/ ht	Ţ
II / ht	Ţ
II / ht	/ htt
II / ht	Ţ
MT / ht	d / htt
GMT / ht	ed / htt
GMT / ht	d / htt
6 GMT / ht	zed / htt
GMT / ht	ized / htt
6 GMT / ht	ized / htt
:06 GMT / ht	tized / htt
6 GMT / ht	ized / htt
:06 GMT / ht	itized / htt
2:06 GMT / ht	gitized / htt
2:06 GMT / ht	igitized / htt
12:06 GMT / ht	gitized / htt
3 12:06 GMT / ht	digitized / htt
03 12:06 GMT / ht	igitized / htt
3 12:06 GMT / ht	digitized / htt
-03 12:06 GMT / ht	digitized / htt
2-03 12:06 GMT / ht	le-digitized / htt
-03 12:06 GMT / ht	le-digitized / htt
02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	gle-digitized / htt
-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	ogle-digitized / htt
-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	ogle-digitized / htt
2-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	oogle-digitized / htt
2-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	ogle-digitized / htt
2-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	oogle-digitized / htt
022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	oogle-digitized / htt
2-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	, Google-digitized / htt
2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	, Google-digitized / htt
2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	n, Google-digitized / htt
2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	, Google-digitized / htt
2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	in, Google-digitized / htt
2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	ain, Google-digitized / htt
on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	ain, Google-digitized / htt
on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	ain, Google-digitized / htt
d on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	omain, Google-digitized / htt
ed on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	ain, Google-digitized / htt
ed on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	omain, Google-digitized / htt
ted on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	omain, Google-digitized / htt
ated on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	omain, Google-digitized / htt
ated on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	c Domain, Google-digitized / htt
rated on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	ic Domain, Google-digitized / htt
erated on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	lic Domain, Google-digitized / htt
erated on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	lic Domain, Google-digitized / htt
nerated on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	blic Domain, Google-digitized / htt
enerated on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	blic Domain, Google-digitized / htt
enerated on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	ublic Domain, Google-digitized / htt
nerated on 2022-02-03 12:06 GMT / ht	blic Domain, Google-digitized / htt

		F	AGE.
The resolution of the Kurus to slay Arju	na		237
Drona assures Jayadratha of protection			ib
Description of the Kaurava army		•••	238
The portents in Nature			239
Durmarshana takes up his position in the	van for opposing Arjuna			ib
The fright of the Kuru army when Arjur	a and Keça	va
blow their conchs			240
Arjuna attacks Durmarshana and his divi	sion		241
The terrible carnage caused by Arjuna		•••	ib
Durmarshana's division flies away			243
Seeing the van of the Kuru army slaugh	tered and routed, Dusçāsana encounters Arjuna	, with a lar	ge elephant force			244
Dusçāsana's division slaughtered and rou	ted		245
Arjuna meets with Drona and prays for l	eave to pen	e-
trate the Kuru army			246
Drona refuses leave and attacks Arjuna			ib
Encounter between preceptor and pupil			ib
Arjuna, unable to vanquish Drona, avoid	ls him from	fear of losing time			248
Jaya and Kritavarman and the king of t	he Kāmvoj	as
and Crutayus oppose Arjuna			ib
Firece battle between these Kuru leaders	and Arjuna	a .	249
Drona again encounters Arjuna	•••		ib
Arjuna again avoids Drona			250
Encounter between Kritavarman and Ar	juna		ib
Arjuna stupifies Kritavarman and proces	eds on his w	ay	ib
Kritavarman encounters Yudhāmanyu a	nd Uttama	ijas,
the two protectors of Arjuna's car-wi	heels, and c	hecks
their progress			251
Crutayudha encounters Arjuna			ib
Crutāyudha slain with his own mace			252
Sudakshina encounters Arjuna and is sla	ain by him		253
Arjuna slays the Abhisāhas, the Curase	enas, the Ci	vis, and the Vasātis	•••		254
Crutayush and Achyutayush encounter	Arjuna		ib

		PAGE
Arjuna made insensible by Achyu	ıtāyus	255
Regaining his senses, Arjuna slay	s both his antag	onists
with the Aindra weapon	•••	ib
Arjuna slays the sons of Crutayu	sh and Achyutāy	rush 256
The Angas with their elephants,	and many other I	Kshatriyas with the king of the K	alingas at their h	ead
encounter Arjuna		257
Arjuna causes an immense carnag	e among them	ib
Arjuna, encountered by the Mlec	chas, causes a gr	reat
carnage among them		ib
Crutayush the king of the Amva	shthas encounter	s
Arjuna and is slain by him		258
Duryodhana, beholding the slaug	ghter of his troop	s and the successful progress of Arj	una, comes to Dr	ona
and addresses him in wrath a		259
Drona acknowledges his inability	to oppose Arjuna	a on account of his own old age	•••	260
Drona cases Duryodhana in invu	lnerable armour	and urges him to oppose Arjuna		261
The history of that armour		262
The fierce battle between the Pa	ndavas and the l	Kurus
at the gate of the Kuru array	у	264
The heroism of Drona		265
The heroism of Dhrishtadyumna	•••	266
Diverse encounters between dive		267
Encounter between Dhrishtadyu		271
Dhrishtadyumna rescued by Sāt		272
The fierce encounter between Sa		273
The Pandava leaders proceed to
The Kuru warriors under Dusçã	sana proceed to th
of Drona		ib
Arjuna and Keçava steadily prod
The speed of Arjuna's car		ib
Vinda the chief of the Avantis	encounters Arjun
	•••	278
Anuvinda, the brother of Vinda	, encounters Arju
is slain by him	•••	279

	PAGE.
Keçava apprises Arjuna of the fatigue of his steeds	279
Keçava grooms the steeds while Arjuna on foot holds the whole Kuru army in check	280
Arjuna creates, by his celestial weapons, a lake of water	r for his steeds to drink from, and an arrowy hall for those animals to rest within	ib
The Kauravas fiercely attack Arjuna while the latter is on foot	281
Arjuna beats back all his assailants	ib
The Kauravas applaud Arjuna's prowess	282
The grooming over, Keçava re-harnesses the steeds and proceeds with great speed	ib
The progress of Arjuna becomes irresistible	284 Keçava points Duryodhana out to Arjuna and urges the latter to slay the Kuru king	287
Arjuna promises to slay Duryodhana	288
Duryodhana checks the progress of Arjuna's car	289
Duryodhana proudly challenges Arjuna to display his prowess	ib
Arjuna fails to pierce Duryodhana in consequence of the latter's invulnerable armour	290
Keçava expresses his surprise at Arjuna's failure	ib
Arjuna shoots a fierce shaft at Duryodhana which is cut off by Açwatthāman	291
Arjuna makes Dryodhana carless and steedless and weaponless	292
Duryodhana rescued by many Kuru leaders	ib
Arjuna causes a great slaughter among these	ib Bhuriçravas and Cala and Karna and Vrishasena and Jayadratha and Kripa and Calya proceed against
Arjuna	293
Duryodhana and these eight car-warriors assail Arjuna	294
Dhritarāshtra enquires about the different kinds of stand	1-
ards owned by those warriors	ib
Sanjaya describes the standards	2 96
Diverse encounters between diverse leaders of both sides	299
The encounter between Yudhishthira and Drona	ib

				PAGE.
Yudhishthira displays great he	eroism			300
Yudhishthira's defeat and flig	ht			301
Diverse encounters between di	verse leaders	of both h	osts	ib
Encounter between Bhimasens	and Alamvu	isha		305
Alamvusha flies away .				306
Ghatotkacha encounters Alam	vusha			307
The Pandava leaders all attacl	k Alamvusha			ib
Ghatotkacha slays Alamvusha				309
Encounter between Sātyaki a	nd Drona			310
The Pāndava leaders rescue Sa			uc-
				311
The heroism of Drona .				ib
The Pandava and the Panchal	a troops fly	away befor	е
Drona				ib
Yudhishthira hears the blare	of Pānchaja	nya and thinks Arjuna to be in dist	tress			312
Yudhishthira requests Sātyaki	to go to Ar	juna and b	ring
him intelligence of his safe	ety			ib
Sātyaki hesitates to do Yudhi	shthira's bide	ding on the	9
ground of the counter-com	mands of Arj	una .		316
Yudhishthira presses his reque	st, saying th	at Dhrisht	a-
dyumna would protect him	during Sat	yaki's abse	nce	318
Sātyaki agrees to do Yudhish	thira's biddin	g .		319
Sātyaki's speech to Yudhishth	ira			ib
Sātyaki directs his car to be p	roperly equip	pt .		322
After the equipment of his can	r, Sātyaki pi	repares to set out				323
Sātyaki penetrates the Kuru a	army			324
Drona encounters Sātyaki .				326
Sātyaki, like Arjuna, avoids I	Orona			327
Kritavarman encounters Sātys	aki			328
Sātyaki slays Kritavarman's o	harioteer and	d issues ou	t
of the Bhoja division .				ib
Sātyaki proceeds against the	division of th	ne Kāmvoj	as	329
The Pandava leaders attack D	rona while fo	ollowing
Sātyaki				ib
Kritavarman resists them .	.,	. 1		ib

PAGE.

Dhritarashtra enquires about the causes of the il	l success of the Kauravas		b
Sanjaya reminds the old king of his own folly in provoking the war	38	33
The encounter between Kritavarman and the Pan	ndava
leaders	i	b
The Pandavas discomfited by Kritavarman	35	36
Sātyaki turns back to check Kritavarman	i	b
Sātyaki makes Kritavarman carless and proceeds
leisurly on	38	37
Sātyaki encountered by the division of Jalasandh	a 38	38
Jalasandha slain by Sātyaki	38	39
The Kaurava troops fly away before Sātyaki	34	40
The Kurus headed by Drona again encounter Sat	yaki il	b
Sātyaki puts Duryodhana to flight	34	1
Sātyaki once more encountered by Kritavarman	34	12
Sātyaki makes Kritavarman insensible	34	13
Encounter between Drona and Sātyaki	i	b Sātyaki slays Drona's driver whereupon Drona is carried away by his steeds	34	15
Drona returns to the gate of the array for checking	ıg
the Pāndavas	il	b
Sudarçana encounters Sātyaki	34	16
Sātyaki slays Sudarçana	34	1.7
Satyaki proceeds on, carrying everything before h	im il	b
Sātyaki proceeds leisurely on, thinking himself t	o be near Arjuna	34	8
Sātyaki's driver pronounces an eulogy upon him	34	19
Sātyaki urges his driver to take him to the Kāmy	vojas 35	50
Sātyaki slaughters the Yavanas	35	1
The Yavanas fly away	il	b
The Kauravas applaud Sātyaki for his feats	il	b
Duryodhana and other Kuru leaders follow Sātya	ki 35	53
Sātyaki slays Duryodhana's driver	35	54
The Kuru leaders fly away before Sātyaki	35	55
A large Kuru force re-encounters Sātyaki	35	56
Sātyaki vanquishes and slaughters it	i	b

p	AGE.
	AUA, 357
1	ib
ghtered
-
	358 359
	ib
with 360
as	361
	ib
as	362
	ib 363
	ib
sana's 364 na's 365
	ib
mem-366 367 auses 368 e after-369
vag	371
	ib 372
	ib
dyumna	374
	-
	375
	376
•••	it acks ughtered to with as isana's na's

	PAGE.
Bhima requests Dhrishtadyumna, to protect Yudhish-
thira and prepares to set out after Sātyaki and Arjuna	378
Bhima breaks through the head of the Kuru array	380
Bhima meets Drona on the way	381
Bhima presses Drona's car down into the Earth	ib
Drona, having previously alighted, is saved	ib
Bhima slays eleven sons of Dhritarāshtra	382
Bhima drives all his foes before him	383
Drona checks Bhima's progress	384
Bhima alighting from his car seizes Drona's vehicle and overturns it with sheer strength of arms	ib
Drona returns to the gate of the array	ib
Bhima proceeds on and sights both Sātyaki and Arjuna	ib
Bhima makes his presence known to Arjuna by a roar	385
Arjuna and Mādhava utter loud roars in return	ib Yudhishthira hears Bhima's roar and understands that all is safe	ib
Karna encounters Bhima	387
Duryodhana sees Drona and affectionately chides him for his having allowed Sātyaki and Bhima to penetrate the Kuru host and approach to the aid of Arjuna	389
Drona counsels Duryodhana to make affective arrangements for the protection of Jayadratha	391
Duryodhana, while going back to where Jayadratha is,
encounters Yudhāmanyu and Uttamanjas	ib
Duryodhana made carless by the two Panchala princes	ib
The Panchala princes made carless by Duryodhana	ib
The latter, riding upon two other cars, proceed towards
Arjuna	392
Bhima desires to avoid Karna for going towards Arjuna	ib
Karna insultingly challenges Bhima	ib
Bhima turns back and encounters Karna	ib
Fierce battle between Bhima and Karna	394
Bhima makes Karna steedless and carless	396
Mounting upon another car Karna proceeds against
Bhima	ib
The terrible battle between Karna and Bhima	ib

		1	PAGE.
Dhritarashtra's eulogy on Bhima			399
Bhima again deprives Karna of his stee	eds and dri	ver	401
Daryodhana despatches his brother Dur	jaya to res	cue
Karna			ib
Bhima slays Durjaya in Karna's sight			ib
Riding upon another car Karna again e		Bhima	402
Bhima again makes Karna carless			403
Bhima slays Durmukha			ib
Karna rides upon Durmukha's car and	encounters	Bhima	ib
Bhima puts Karna to flight			404
Dhritarashtra's observations on Bhima'	s victory o	ver
Karna			ib
Five brothers of Duryodhana, viz., Du	rmarshana,	Dussaha, Durmada, Durdhara, and Jay
Bhima			406
Karna comes back to encounter Bhima			ib
While engaged with Karna, Bhima sla
		471	ib
Karna becomes hopeless of his life			407
Bhima again deprives Karna of his stee	eds. driver.
and bow	444		ib
Karna once more turns his back upon	Bhima		408
Duryodhana despatches other brothers			100
Bhima			ib
All of them, viz., Chitra, Upachitra,	Chāruchitra	a. Carāsana, Chitrayudha, and Chitravarn
Bhima			ib
Riding upon another car Karna again e	ncounters	Bhima	ib
Karna sorrowfully surveys the slain bro	A SHALL SHAL
Duryodhana	•••		410
Karna hard pressed by Bhima			ib
The warriors of both sides applaud Bhi	ma		411
Duryodhana despatches seven of his br
rescue of Karna			ib
Bhima slays the seven brothers, viz., (Catruniava	Catrusaha, Chittra, Chitrayudha, Dridh
1 17:1			412

			AUE.
Bhima's lament over the remains of Vik	arna		412
Beholding the slaughter of 31 of his bro	thers by E	Bhima,
Duryodhana recollects the words of	Vidura	•••	ib
Progress of the battle between Bhima ar	d Karna		413
The great carnage caused by both			414
The celestials applaud both the warriors	for their heroism and wonderful skill			418
Karna slays Bhima's steeds			419
Pierced by Karna, Bhima's driver seeks	refuge in
Sātyaki's car			ib
Karna cuts off Bhima's weapons			ib
Bhima leaps into the sky for snatching	Karna off	his car	420
Karna conceals himself on his vehicle			ib
Bhima's feat applauded by all		•••	ib
Bhima's weapons being exhausted, he fli	ies away fr	om
Karna			ib
Bhima defends himself with the slain be	odies of ele	phants	ib
Bhima, recollecting Arjuna's vow, takes	not the li	fe of
Karna			421
Karna, recollecting his promise to Kun	ti, takes n	ot
Bhima's life			ib
Karna touches Bhima with the end of I	is bow	272	ib
Karna's insulting speech to Bhima			ib
Bhima's reply			422
Arjuna forces Karna to fly from the fie	ld	•••	ib
Arjuna speeds a terrible shaft after the	retreating	Karna	423
Açwatthāman cuts it off			ib
Arjuna forces Drona's son to fly away	•••	•••	ib
Encounter between Sātyaki and Alamv	usha	•••	424
Sātyaki slays Alamvusha		•••	425
Many sons of Dhritarashtra with Dusc	āsana at t	heir
head rush against Sātyaki			ib
Sātyaki checks all of them and makes	the street of th	steedle
The Trigartas fly away before Sātyaki	4.4		426
Passing through the Curasenas and the	Kalingas	, Sā-
tyaki proceeds towards Arjuna	•••		ib
Krishna's eulogy on Sātyaki	•••	• • •	ib

PAGE.

Arjuna not pleased with the arrival of S	atyaki on s	ic-count of his anxiety for Yudhishthin	The state of the s		427
Bhuriçravas advances against Sātyaki			428
Ditto addresses Sātyaki			ib
Sātyaki's reply to Bhuriçravas			429
Encounter between Bhuricravas and Sat	yaki		ib
Each makes the other carless			430
They encounter each other with swords			ib
They fight with fists and arms			431
Krishna urges Arjuna to protect the tire	ed Sātyaki a	against
Bhuricravas who is fresh			432
Sātyaki succumbs to Bhuricravas			ib
Arjuna cuts off one of the arms of Bhu	riçravas		433
Bhuricravas rebukes Arjuna for his unr	ighteous fea	.t	434
Arjuna justifies his conduct			436
Bhuriçravas acknowledges the justice of	Arjuna's p	lea	437
Krishna blesses Bhuriçravas			ib
Sātyaki slays Bhuricravas sitting in Pr	dya		438
Sātyaki justifies his conduct		• • • •	ib
Dhritarāshtra enquires about the cause	of Sātyaki'	s defeat by Bhuriçravas			439
Somadatta's humiliation by Civi at the	self-choice	of
Devaki			440
Somadatta obtains a boon from Mahade	eva to the e	ffect that some descendant of his should	humiliate a	descendant of Civi			ib
Sanjaya's eulogy on the Vrishni heroes			441
Arjuna proceeds towards Jayadratha's c	ar		442
Duryodhana urges Karna to put forth a	all his migh	t for protecting Jayadratha			ib
Karna promises to do his best			443
Duryodhana and Karna and Vrishasens	and Calya	and
Açwatthāman and Kripa and Jayac	dratha encor	mpass
Arjuna			444
Fierce encounter between Arjuna and t	hose leaders	of the Kuru army	•••		445
Arjuna makes Karna steedless, carless,	and driver	ess	447 and the second s

		P	AGE
Karna rescued by Açwatthāman			447
Arjuna checks all his opponents and cau	ises a grea	at car-
nage			448
Arjuna encounters Jayadratha who fight	ts bravely	with him	452
Arjuna cuts off Jayadratha's standard a	nd slays h	is driver	ib
Jayadratha placed by some mighty car-	warriors in	n their midst			453
Krishna covers the Sun by means of hi	s Yoga po	wer	ib
Krishna urges Arjuna to cut off Jayadr	atha's hea	d
without delay			ib
Arjuna puts forth all his prowess			ib
Arjuna's extraordinary heroism			454
Krishna again urges Arjuna to cut off J	Jayadratha	's head
without delay			455
Krishna tells Arjuna the story of Vridd	lhakshatra	's curse	456
Arjuna cuts off Jayadratha's head and	causes it to	o fall
unperceived on the lap of Vriddhaks	shatra		457
As the head falls down from Vriddhaksh	natra's lap	, the latter's head splits into fragments		•••	ib
Vāsudeva withdraws the darkness creat	ed by him		ib
Keçava and Arjuna blow their conchs		•••	ib
Bhimasena, by a tremendous shout, ser	nds to Yud	lhish-
thira the message of victory		•••	458
Kripa in wrath encounters Arjuna			ib
Kaipa swoons away on his car		•••	459
Arjuna's grief at sight of Kripa's death		n	ib
The encounter between Karna and Saty		•••	461
Sātyaki slays Karna's charioteer and st		•••	462
Vrishasena and Calya and Drona's son i	rush to the	e rescue of Karna		•••	463
Satyaki vanquishes them all but forbea		their lives remembering the vows of Part			ib
After vanquishing Karna, Sātyaki leav	es Krishn	a's car
and rides on his own vehicle		•••	464
Insulted by Karna, Bhima addresses A	The state of the s	nduce-
ing the latter to permit him to slay	Karna	•••	465
Arjuna rebukes Karna in manly words			ib

-	· 60
0	0
	Ö
	\simeq 0 0,
	-
N
LO	0
	#
3	44
0	Ü
\sim	S
0	S
	\supset
00
	w.
2	S
>	S
0	\circ
0	Œ
	10
2	_
	-
	0
+	Ξ.
-
D	0
_	-
-
	\perp
(1)	10
Θ	S
	\supset
	_
-0	_
\equiv	+
	-
Œ
	_
-
	\perp
\sim	Œ
0	_
	_
	-
	_5
_	-
	- 5
S
0	_
	0
+	0 tp:
+	\vdash
+	Ŧ
+	\vdash
+	Ŧ
+	Ŧ
+	Ŧ
+	Ŧ
/ ht	/ htt
+	d / htt
/ ht	/ htt
GMT / ht	ed / htt
GMT / ht	zed / htt
GMT / ht	zed / htt
/ ht	ized / htt
:09 GMT / ht	tized / htt
:09 GMT / ht	tized / htt
2:09 GMT / ht	itized / htt
:09 GMT / ht	tized / htt
2:09 GMT / ht	gitized / htt
12:09 GMT / ht	itized / htt
12:09 GMT / ht	gitized / htt
3 12:09 GMT / ht	digitized / htt
03 12:09 GMT / ht	-digitized / htt
03 12:09 GMT / ht	digitized / htt
-03 12:09 GMT / ht	-digitized / htt
2-03 12:09 GMT / ht	-digitized / htt
2-03 12:09 GMT / ht	le-digitized / htt
02-03 12:09 GMT / ht	gle-digitized / htt
2-03 12:09 GMT / ht	le-digitized / htt
-02-03 12:09 GMT / ht	ogle-digitized / htt
2-02-03 12:09 GMT / ht	oogle-digitized / htt
2-02-03 12:09 GMT / ht	ogle-digitized / htt
22-02-03 12:09 GMT / ht	oogle-digitized / htt
022-02-03 12:09 GMT / ht	oogle-digitized / htt
022-02-03 12:09 GMT / ht	oogle-digitized / htt
22-02-03 12:09 GMT / ht	, Google-digitized / htt
022-02-03 12:09 GMT / ht	n, Google-digitized / htt
1 2022-02-03 12:09 GMT / ht	n, Google-digitized / htt
1 2022-02-03 12:09 GMT / ht	in, Google-digitized / htt
1 2022-02-03 12:09 GMT / ht	in, Google-digitized / htt
2022-02-03 12:09 GMT / ht	ain, Google-digitized / htt
on 2022-02-03 12:09 GMT / ht	main, Google-digitized / htt
on 2022-02-03 12:09 GMT / ht	main, Google-digitized / htt
d on 2022-02-03 12:09 GMT / ht	omain, Google-digitized / htt
ed on 2022-02-03 12:09 GMT / ht	main, Google-digitized / htt
ted on 2022-02-03 12:09 GMT / ht	omain, Google-digitized / htt
ted on 2022-02-03 12:09 GMT / ht	Domain, Google-digitized / htt
ated on 2022-02-03 12:09 GMT / ht	omain, Google-digitized / htt
ated on 2022-02-03 12:09 GMT / ht	c Domain, Google-digitized / htt
rated on 2022-02-03 12:09 GMT / ht	ic Domain, Google-digitized / htt
rated on 2022-02-03 12:09 GMT / ht	c Domain, Google-digitized / htt
erated on 2022-02-03 12:09 GMT / ht	lic Domain, Google-digitized / htt
nerated on 2022-02-03 12:09 GMT / ht	blic Domain, Google-digitized / htt
nerated on 2022-02-03 12:09 GMT / ht	blic Domain, Google-digitized / htt
enerated on 2022-02-03 12:09 GMT / ht	ublic Domain, Google-digitized / htt
nerated on 2022-02-03 12:09 GMT / ht	blic Domain, Google-digitized / htt

		1	PAGE
Arjuna vows to slay Karna's son in Karna	a's presence		466
Krishna congratulates Arjuna upon the a	ccom plishm	ent
of his vow about the slaughter of Jay	adratha		ib
Arjuna attributes the victory to Krishna	's glory		ib
Krishna points out to Arjuna the results	of that day	's
battle			467
Returning to Yudhishthira Krishna cong	ratulates th	.e
Pāndu king upon his victory			469
Yudhishthira attributes the success to K	rishna's gra	ce	ib
Yudhishthira's hymn to Krishna			470
The despondency of Duryodhana			472
Duryodhana's cheerless address to Drona			473
Drona's reply to Duryodhana			475
Drona vows to slay all the Panchalas before		nis
armour			476
Drona charges Duryodhana to bear his la	st message	to
Açwatthāman			ib
Duryodhana communicates to Karna his	suspicions
about Drona's sincerity	•••		478
Karna removes Duryodhana's suspicions			479
Karna attributes the ill-success of the Ku	irus to dest	iny	ib
Ghatotkacha-badha Pa	rva.
Dreadful battle between the Panchalas a	nd the Kam	ravas	480
Duryodhana penetrates into the midst of t			481
The extraordinary heroism of Duryodhan			ib
The immense slaughter caused by Duryon			ib
Yudhishthira makes Duryodhana insensil			482
Drona advances to the rescue of Duryodi			ib
All the Pāndava leaders proceed against l			483
Drona receives all the leaders of the Pan			200
traordinary bravery		011	487
Drona slays Civi			ib
Bhima slays the prince of the Kalingas			ib
Bhima slays Dhruva and Jayarāta			488
Bhima slays Durmada and Dushkarna in-	the very sig	ght
of Duryodhana and others	•••	•••	ìb
	V-7-5	4.55	1

		PAGE.
The Kuru army put to flight by Bhimasena		489
Somadatta's speech to Sātyaki		ib
Sātyaki's manly reply	• • •	490
The encounter between Somadatta and Sātyaki		491
Somadatta swoons on his car and borne away
by his driver		ib
Encounter between Drona and some of the Panda	va
leaders		ib
Drona slaughters the Pandava host		492
The Pandava host flies away before Drena		ib
Arjuna and Bhima proceed against Drona		ib
The Pandava army rallies at the sight of Arjuna	and
Bhima proceeding towards Drona		ib
Ghatotkacha rushes at Açwatthāman		493
Description of Ghatotkacha's car		ib
Encounter between Ghatotkacha and Açwatthāman	n	494
Duryodhana urges Cakuni to proceed against Arju	na	497
Fierce battle between Acwatthaman and the Raksh	asa host of Ghatotkacha		498
Açwatthāman destroys the car of Ghatotkacha		500
Ghatotkacha mounts upon the vehicle of Dhrishtad	yumna	ib
Both Ghatotkacha and Dhrishtadyumna fight with	p
Açwatthāman		ib
Açwatthāman destroys the Rākshasa host		501
The river of blood caused by Açwatthaman		ib
Ghatotkacha made insensible by Acwatthaman		502
Ghatotkacha borne away by Dhrishtadyumna		ib
All creatures applaud Açwatthāman		503
Bhimasena makes Somadatta insensible		ib
Bhimasena slays Vālhika the father of Somadatta		504
Bhimasena slays ten sons of Dhritarāshtra		ib
Bhima slays Vrikaratha the brother of Karna		ib
Bhima slays seven brothers of Cakuni		ib
Bhima presses Catachandra down into the Earth		ib
Bhima slays five other princes of Gandhara		ib
The Kuru kings begin to waver		505
Yudhishthira slaughters the hostile army		ib
20 IN THE SECOND TO THE SECOND SE

				PAGE
Encounter between Yudhish	nthira and	l Drona	•••	505
Drona, unable to defeat Yu	dhishthir	a, abandons l	him	506
Drona routs the Panchalas				ib
Bhima and Arjuna rally the	e Pāndav	a troops and	attack
the Kauravas with grea	t vigor			ib
Duryodhana urges Karna to	defeat the	he Pāndavas		ib
Karna vows to slay Pārtha				507
Kripa ridicules Karna	•••			ib
Karna's reply	•••			508
Kripa's rejoinder	•••			ib
Karna vows to cut off Krip	a's tongue	e if Kripa ad	dresses
him again in the same s	train	•••		510
Açwatthāman in rage rebuk	es Karna			511
Duryodhana and Kripa paci	fy Karna	and Açwattl	iāman	512
The Pandavas furiously assa	il Karna			513
Karna beats back his assails	ants causi	ng a great
carnage among them				ib
Arjuna encounters Karna				515
Arjuna slays the steeds and	driver of	Karna and n	nakes
him bowless				ib
Karna takes shelter in Krip	a's car			516
.Duryodhana resolves to him	self proce	ed against A	rjuna	ib
Kripa entertaining fears for	Duryodh	ana's life urge	es
Açwatthāman to proceed	l against	Arjuna		ib
Açwatthāman makes Duryo	dhana des	sist from an encounter with Arjuna				517
Duryodhana urges Açwattha	aman to s	lay the Panc	hā-
las and the Somakas				ib
Açwatthaman's speech to D	uryodhan	a		518
Açwatthāman routs the Par	nchālas			519
Dhrishtadyumna proceeds ag	gainst Aç	watthāman		ib
Dhrishtadyumna and Açwat	thāman s	ddress each o	other in fiery language		•••		520
The fierce encounter between	n Dhrisht	adyumna and	1
Açwatthāman				521
Açwatthāman cuts off the be	ow, the st	andard, the d	lrivers,	ib
and the steeds of Dhrish				ib

			PAGE.
The Panchalas fly away from Acwatthan	man		522
The Pandava leaders encounter Açwatth	āman		ib
Duryodhana and Drona rush to Açwatth	āman's resc	ue	ib
The fierce battle between the two hosts			ib
Arjuna slaughters the Kuru army			ib
The Pandavas attack Drona			523
Drona routs his assailants			ib
Bhima and Arjuna rally the retreating t	roops		ib
The Kauravas fly away before Arjuna			ib
Duryodhana and Drona unable to rally	their troops		ib
Sātyaki proceeds towards Somadatta			ib
Encounter between Sātyaki and Somada	atta		524
Somadatta slain by Sātyaki	•••		525
Yudhishthira attacks Drona			526
Krishna dissuades Yudhishthira from fig	hting with I	Drona	j on the ground that kings should figh	t with none	but kings			ib
The cheerless state of both armies			527
Duryodhana commands his troops to tak	e up lighted
lamps and torches			528
The brilliant sight presented on the field	of battle		529
Duryodhana appoints his brothers to pro	etect Drona
from the rear	•••		532
Yudhishthira commands all his warriors	to proceed
against Drona only			534
Diverse Kuru leaders resist diverse lead	ers of the
Pāndava host			ib
Encounter between Yudhishthira and K	ritavarman		535
Yudhishthira worsted by Kritavarman			536
Sātyaki slays the Kuru warrior Bhuri			537
Açwatthāman rushes against Sātyaki			ib
Ghatotkacha rushes against Açwatthām	an		ib
Encounter between Ghatotkacha and Ag	watthāman		ib
Açwatthāman made insensible by Ghato	tkacha		538
Recovering his senses, Açwatthaman m	akes his antagonist insensible			539
Ghatotkacha borne away from the field	by his driver		ib

			PAGE.
Fierce encounter between Bhima and I	Duryodhana		539
Bhima crushes the steeds, the driver,	and the car	of
Duryodhana			540
Duryodhana is believed to be slain	•••		ib
The Pandava leaders rush against Droi	na and fight
fiercely with him			ib
Encounter between Karna and Sahadev	va		541
Sahadeva worsted by Karna who touch	es him
with his bow			542
Calya encounters Virāta			ib
Virāta made carless by Calya			ib
Calya slays Catanika the brother of V	irāta		543
Virāta rushes against Calya once more			ib
Calya makes Virāta insensible			ib
Encounter between Alamvusha and Ar	juna		ib
Alamvusha vanquished by Arjuna			544
Encounter between Chitrasena and Nal	kula .		ib
Nakula vanquishes Chitrasena who see	ks shelter in
Kritavarman's car			545
Encounter between Vrishasena and Dru	ıpada		ib
Drupada swoons and is borne away by	his driver		ib
Vrishasena causes a greater slaughter a	mong the
Pānchālas			546
Prativindhya vanquished by Dusçasana	, and rescue	d
by his brothers			547
Cakuni encounters Nakula			548
Kripa encounters Cikhandin	•••		ib
Cikhandin borne away insensible from	the fight		549
Dhrishtadyumna rushes against Drona			550
Karna and Drona's son and Calya and I	Dusçāsana ai	nd
Duryodhana rush to Drona's rescue	and attack
Dhrishtadyumna			551
Dhrishtadyumna fights with all his foes	s		552
Dhrishtadyumna slays Drumasena			ib
Sātyaki proceeds to the rescue of Dhris			ib
Karna counsels Duryodhana to encomp	ass and slay
Dhrishtadyumna and Sātyaki			554

CONTENTS.

xxvii

		P	AGE.
Duryodhana despatches Cakuni with a la	rge force against Arjuna			554
Satyaki surrounded by many leaders of t	he Kuru ar	my	555
Sātyaki forces Duryodhana to fly away a	nd routs the	е
foes with whom he is engaged	•••		556
Arjuna deprives Cakuni of his car			557
Arjuna slaughters the Kuru army			ib
Dhrishtadyumna checks Drona and cause	s an immer	rse
carnage			558
Duryodhana's angry address to Drona and	d Karna		ib
Drona and Karna furiously attack the Pa	indava arm	y	559
The Pāndava army routed by Drona and	Karna		560
Arjuna and Krishna rally the retreating	troops	•••	ib
The fierce battle between the Kurus and	the Panda	as	561
			ib
Dhrishtadyumna made carless by Karna		•••	ib
Karna's steeds slain by Dhrishtadyumna			ib
Dhrishtadyumna mounts on the car of A		•••	562
Karna routs the Panchalas	•••		ib
Yudhishthira's address to Arjuna on beh	olding the prowess of Karna		•••	563
Krishna's counsels about Ghatotkacha en	countering	Karna	ib
Krishna's address to Ghatotkacha			564
Arjuna's ditto to ditto			565
Ghatotkacha's reply			ib
Ghatotkacha rushes against Karna			ib
Arrival of Jatāsura's son Alamvusha at t			566
Duryodhana urges Jatāsura's son to slay	Ghatotkac	ha	ib
Encounter between Alamvusha and Ghat	otkacha		567
Alamvusha slain by Ghatotkacha		•••	568
Ghatotkacha's address to Duryodhana			ib
Description of Ghatotkacha's person, ar	mour, wear	ons,
and car			569
Fierce encounter between Karna and Gh	atotkacha		570
Alayudha comes to Duryodhana and vov	ws to slay I	Bhima	577
Duryodhana urges Alāyudha to slay Bh	ima	'	ib
Description of Alayudha's person, and a	accoutremen	nts	578

	0
	6
_	1
LO
LO	0
3	#
	Û
\sim	0
0	S
00	\supset
-
	S
-	S
_
_	(L)
	O
0	\circ
0	Œ
	.10
0	_
	0 \Box
	_
D	0
9	$\overline{}$
	\perp
D	S
	-
	_
-0	_
\equiv	\perp
-
(73)
~	_
-
	4
	Q
-	\subseteq
\simeq
_
-	>
	2 -5
	>
	_
S	_
0	_
+
1	0
_	\pm
_	+
_
_	+
h	+
h	+
h	+
h /	+
1 / h	+
П / h	+
MT / h	+
	/ ht
GMT / h	d / ht
GMT / h	ed / ht
GMT / h	ed / ht
9 0	zed / ht
10 GMT / h	ized / ht
9 0	ized / ht
:10 6	tized / ht
9 0	ized / ht
2:10 G	itized / ht
:10 6	gitized / ht
2:10 G	itized / ht
12:10 6	igitized / ht
3 12:10 G	digitized / ht
3 12:10 G	-digitized / ht
03 12:10 G	-digitized / ht
-03 12:10 G	e-digitized / ht
-03 12:10 G	le-digitized / ht
2-03 12:10 G	le-digitized / ht
02-03 12:10 G	gle-digitized / ht
2-03 12:10 G	le-digitized / ht
-02-03 12:10 G	ogle-digitized / ht
2-02-03 12:10 G	oogle-digitized / ht
22-02-03 12:10 G	ogle-digitized / ht
22-02-03 12:10 G	oogle-digitized / ht
022-02-03 12:10 G	oogle-digitized / ht
022-02-03 12:10 G	oogle-digitized / ht
22-02-03 12:10 G	, Google-digitized / ht
2022-02-03 12:10 G	n, Google-digitized / ht
2022-02-03 12:10 G	n, Google-digitized / ht
2022-02-03 12:10 G	in, Google-digitized / ht
022-02-03 12:10 G	ain, Google-digitized / ht
2022-02-03 12:10 G	ain, Google-digitized / ht
on 2022-02-03 12:10 G	main, Google-digitized / ht d on 2022-02-03 12:10 G	ain, Google-digitized / ht
d on 2022-02-03 12:10 G	omain, Google-digitized / ht
ed on 2022-02-03 12:10 G	main, Google-digitized / ht
ted on 2022-02-03 12:10 G	omain, Google-digitized / ht
ted on 2022-02-03 12:10 G	Domain, Google-digitized / ht
ated on 2022-02-03 12:10 G	c Domain, Google-digitized / ht rated on 2022-02-03 12:10 G	Domain, Google-digitized / ht rated on 2022-02-03 12:10 G	ic Domain, Google-digitized / ht
erated on 2022-02-03 12:10 G	lic Domain, Google-digitized / ht
erated on 2022-02-03 12:10 G	lic Domain, Google-digitized / ht
nerated on 2022-02-03 12:10 G	blic Domain, Google-digitized / ht
enerated on 2022-02-03 12:10 G	lic Domain, Google-digitized / ht
enerated on 2022-02-03 12:10 G	ublic Domain, Google-digitized / ht
enerated on 2022-02-03 12:10 G	blic Domain, Google-digitized / ht

				PAGE.
Beholding the slaughter caus	sed by Ghat	totkacha,	Duryo-
dhana urges Alāyudha to	encounter	Ghatotka	ha	579
Ghatotkacha abandoning Ka	rna proceed	s towards
Alāyudha				ib
Bhima also proceeds against	Alāyudha		•••	580
Encounter between Bhima a	nd Alayudh	ıa		ib
Krishna despatches Ghatotk	acha to Bhi	masena's r	escue	581
The Pandava leaders, having	g slain Alāy	udha's Ra	iksha-
sas, proceed against Kar	na			582
Encounter between Alayudh	a and Ghat	otkacha		ib
Ghatotkacha cuts off Alayue	dha's head			584
Despondency of Duryodhana	upon beho	lding Ala-
yudha slain		•••		ib
Ghatotkacha again encounter	rs Karna			585
Ghatotkacha slays Karna's s	teeds and dr	iver, and	disappears from view	•••	•••		586
The last terrible illusion of	Ghatotkacha	3		ib
The great slaughter in Dury	odhana's ar	my caused	by
Ghatotkacha				587
The rout of the Kauravas				588
Karna's steeds again slain by	Ghatotkac	ha		ib
The Kauravas urge Karna to
with his invincible dart				ib
Karna hurls his dart	•••			589
Ghatotkacha slain				ib
Falling upon the Kaurava a	rmy with h	is gigantic	body,
Ghatotkacha slays with	his last brea	th a full
Akshauhini of Kuru tre	oops			590
The grief of the Pandavas			•••	ib
The joy of Vasudeva				ib
Arjuna asks Vāsudeva the c	ause of his	untimely	јоу	ib
Vāsudeva's answer				591
Vāsudeva recites to Arjuna	bow he (Vā	sudeva) ha	ıd gradually caused all the	foes of the	Pāndavas	to be slain				593
Dhritarāshtra asks Sanjaya	the reason	of Karna's	not having hurled the fatal			•••	595

		PAGE,
Sanjaya assigns Krishna's policy as the reason		596
Dhritarāshtra's grief at the folly of Karna and Dur	ryo-
dhana in using the dart against a minor foe		ib
Sanjaya informs the old king that though the Kuru	S
every night resolved to hurl the fatal dart the n	ext day at either Krishna or Arjuna, yet they repea	tedly
forgot their resolution when engaged in battle		597
Sātyaki asks Krishna why Karna had not hurled hi	is dart at Arjuna		ib
Krishna's answer		598
Dhritarāshtra attributes the ill success of the Kuru	IS to Destiny, their own folly, and the policy of Krishna		599
Yudhishthira's grief at the fall of Ghatotkacha		600
Yudhishthira proceeds in wrath against Karna		602
Vyāsa approaches Yudhishthira		ib
Vyāsa comforts Yudhishthira		603
Yudhishthira urges Dhrishtadyumna to check Dron	na	ib
The Pandava leaders all rush against Drona.		604
Duryodhana and others come to Drona's rescue		ib
Fierce battle between the two hosts		ib
Both armies become sorely afflicted with fatigue an	d
blind with sleep		ib
Arjuna grants permission to the warriors to sleep		605
The Kaurava troops bless Arjuna for this act of kin		ib
All the combatants lay themselves down on the field	d
of battle to sleep		606
The moon rises and dispels the darkness	•••	607
Both hosts, rising from sleep, again prepare for bat		ib
Duryodhana approaches Drona and taxes him wrat	h-fully for the untimely kindness shown to the Pāndava army	•••	ib
Drona promises to slay all the Panchalas		608
Drona describes to Duryodhana the measure of Arju	una's
might and prowess		ib
Angered thereat, Duryodhana vows to slay Arjuna	•••	609
Drona ridicules Duryodhana		ib

CONTENTS.

Drona urges Duryodhana to do his best in battle

Drona mocks Cakuni

XXXI

PAGE.

609

610

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:10 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

		PAGE
Sātyaki's answer		624
Encounter between Duryodhana and Sātyaki		ib
Duryodhana worsted by Sātyaki		625
Karna rushes to the rescue of Duryodhana		ib
Bhima rushes towards Karna		ib
Yudhishthira urges his warriors to rush to the resc	ue
of Sātyaki and Bhima and the twins		626 Arjuna attacks the Kurus and Drona attacks
the Pānchālas	•••	ib
The fierce slaughter caused by Drona		627
Krishna urges the Pandavas to slay Drona by aban-	don-
ing virtue	•••	ib
Yudhishthira accepts Krishna's advice with difficult	ty	ib
Arjuna doth not accept it		ib
Bhima slays an elephant of the name of Açwatthar	nan	ib
Bhima informs Drona of the death of Açwatthama	n	628
Drona does not believe Bhima		ib
Drona slays the Panchalas by means of the Brahmo	a
weapon		ib
The Rishis appear in the welkin and reprove Drona	for using the Brāhma weapon against persons not acquainted with it		629
They call upon Drona to lay aside his weapons and leave the Earth soon		ib
Drona asks Yudhishthira whether the report about
Açwatthāman's death is true		ib
Krishna urges Yudhishthira to save his army by an untruth		630
Bhimasena urges the king to do the same		ib
Yudhisthira assures Drona of Açwatthāman's death		ib
The effect of the untruth on Yudhishthira's vehicle		ib
Drona filled with despair		ib
The celestial weapons no longer appear at Drona's bid	dding	631
The exhaustion of Drona's weapons		ib
Fierce encounter between Drona and Dhrishtadyumn	a	632
Sātyaki rescues Dhrishtadyumna		624
Arjuna applauds the heroism of Sātyaki		ib
20 350 C. C. C. S. C.

	$\overline{}$
0	0
\vdash	0
$\overline{}$	ŏ
	01
N	$\overline{}$
LO	0
3	#
0	(1)
0	S
00	=
00	_
=	S
_	S
_	U
	0
0	0
0	Œ
0
. 4	6
1	2
Φ.	0
	+
(L)	S
į.	\supset
-	_
\simeq	F
Œ
_	$\overline{}$
	+
$\overline{}$	Q
-	\subseteq
	-
_	>
_	5
	5
S
0	_
+
Ŧ	0
	tp
+	+
+	Ţ
+	+
+	Ţ
+	Ţ
/ ht	Ţ
+	Ţ
MT / ht	/ htt
/ ht	d / htt
MT / ht	/ htt
MT / ht	ed / htt
0 GMT / ht	zed / htt
MT / ht	ized / htt
:10 GMT / ht	tized / htt
2:10 GMT / ht	itized / htt
:10 GMT / ht	gitized / htt
12:10 GMT / ht	igitized / htt
3 12:10 GMT / ht	gitized / htt
03 12:10 GMT / ht	-digitized / htt
3 12:10 GMT / ht	e-digitized / htt
03 12:10 GMT / ht	-digitized / htt
-03 12:10 GMT / ht	e-digitized / htt
2-03 12:10 GMT / ht	gle-digitized / htt
-02-03 12:10 GMT / ht	ogle-digitized / htt
2-02-03 12:10 GMT / ht	oogle-digitized / htt
2-02-03 12:10 GMT / ht	oogle-digitized / htt
022-02-03 12:10 GMT / ht	oogle-digitized / htt
2-02-03 12:10 GMT / ht	, Google-digitized / htt
2022-02-03 12:10 GMT / ht	n, Google-digitized / htt
n 2022-02-03 12:10 GMT / ht	in, Google-digitized / htt
2022-02-03 12:10 GMT / ht	in, Google-digitized / htt
n 2022-02-03 12:10 GMT / ht	ain, Google-digitized / htt
n 2022-02-03 12:10 GMT / ht	in, Google-digitized / htt
d on 2022-02-03 12:10 GMT / ht	omain, Google-digitized / htt
ed on 2022-02-03 12:10 GMT / ht	main, Google-digitized / htt
ted on 2022-02-03 12:10 GMT / ht	Domain, Google-digitized / htt
ated on 2022-02-03 12:10 GMT / ht	c Domain, Google-digitized / htt
rated on 2022-02-03 12:10 GMT / ht	ic Domain, Google-digitized / htt
erated on 2022-02-03 12:10 GMT / ht	lic Domain, Google-digitized / htt
nerated on 2022-02-03 12:10 GMT / ht	olic Domain, Google-digitized / htt
enerated on 2022-02-03 12:10 GMT / ht	olic Domain, Google-digitized / htt
nerated on 2022-02-03 12:10 GMT / ht	lic Domain, Google-digitized / htt

		P	AGE.
Sātyaki encountered by Duryodhana,	Karna, and H	Cripa	635
Yudhishthira urges his troops to rush	against Dron	a	636
Drona receives his assailants with great	at vigor		ib
Drona again uses the Brāhma weapo	n		ib
Bhima urges Dhrishtadyumna to sla		ckly	ib
Dhrishtadyumna proceeds against Dro	na		637
Bhima again reminds Drona of Açwa		eath	ib
Drona's grief			638
Drona lays aside his weapons			ib
Drona devotes himself to Yoga			ib ·
Drona proceeds to heaven in a blaze of	flight	• • •	ib
Only Krishna and others behold the si	ight		ib
Dhrishtadyumna cuts off Drona's head	0		639
Arjuna loudly calls upon Dhrishtadyu
preceptor alive			ib
Others cry out, urging Dhrishtadyum	na not to slay	Drona	ib Dhrishtadyumna throws the head of I
the Kurus		_	ib
The flight of the Kurus at sight of D	rona's slaugh	ter .	ib
Only Açwatthaman does not fly away			642
Açwatthāman asks Duryodhana the ca		neral	,
rout			643
Duryodhana asks Kripa to inform Açv	vatthāman of	the truth			ib
Kripa informs Açwatthaman of Drons	's death		ib
The rage of Açwatthaman on hearing		eath	645 Dhritarāshtra asks Sanjaya as to what did upon receiving the news of Dre			ib
Açwatthāman vows to destroy the Pān		ie.
Pāndavas			648
The history of the Nārāyana weapon	ı		649
Açwatthaman invokes the Narayana			650
The fierce portents in Nature			ib
Dhritarāshtra asks Sanjaya what coun		ed by the Pāndavas on seeing the retreat more advance to battle			651
5
U

0 0
LO
LO	0
3
	U
0
	S
	S
	(1)
	U
0
N	_
_
+
(L)
	+
(L)
	S $\overline{}$
Œ
	+
$\overline{}$
	,5
(A)	_
0	_
+
i.
	_
	+
	4
=
\equiv \geq
E	0
\geq \geq	Ū
\geq	Ū
\geq
4 GV	Ze
\geq	Ū
4 GV	Ze
:14 GM	Ze
:14 GM	Ze
2:14 GM	itize
:14 GM	Ze
2:14 GM	aitize
12:14 GM	itize
12:14 GM	iditize
2:14 GM	aitize
12:14 GM	iditize

	PAGE,
Yudhishthira's address to Arjuna on seeing the Kaura-
vas return for battle	651
Arjuna's reply, describing the prowess of Açwatthāman and the unrighteousness of the Pandavas in slaying Drona	652
Bhima's answer in vindication of the deed	654
Dhrishtadyumna's speech in justification of his conduct	656
Nārāyanāstra-mokshana Parva.
Dhritarāshtra asks Sonjaya as to what the Pāndavas sai	d
unto Dhrishtadyumna on hearing his speech	658
Satyaki's wrathful answer to Dhrishtadyumna	659 Dhrishtadyumna taunts Sātyaki on account of the slaughter of Bhuricravas	660
Satyaki rushes towards Dhrishtadyumna for slaying hin
Bhima holds him back	ib
Sahadeva endeavours to bring about a reconciliation	662
Krishna and Yudhishthira restore peace with great diffi	0.7
culty	663
Acwatthaman causes a great carnage among the
Pāndava troops	ib
Acwatthaman invokes the Nardyana weapon	664
The agitation of the Pandava army	ib
Behelding Arjuna standing indifferent, Yudhishthira
urges his troops to fly away	665
Yudhishthira's observations on Drona's friendship for th	10
Pāndavas	ib
Krishna arges the Pandava combatants to throw down their arms as the only means for pacifying the Nara	i-
yana weapon	666
All the Pandava warrior comply except Bhimasena	ib
Bhima vows to contend against Açwatthaman's weapon	ib
Bhima urges Arjuna not to abandon Gandiva	667
Bhima overwhelmed by the energy of the Nārāyana
weapon	. ib
Arjuna covers Bhima with the Varuna weapon	. ib

	PAGE.
Arjuna and Krishna, alighting from their car, proceed on foot towards Bhima and forcibly bring him down from his car, making him abandon his weapons	668
The Nārāyana weapon is pacified	669
Duryodhana urges Açwatthaman to use the same weapon	a
once more	ib
Açwatthaman informs Duryodhana of his inability to use the same weapon a second time	ib
Encounter between Dhrishtadyumna and Açwatthaman	670
Dhrishtadyumna made steedless and driverless	ib
Sātyaki rushes against Açwatthāman	671
Açwatthāman worsted by Sātyaki	ib
Kripa, Karna, Duryodhana, Dusçāsana, and Vrishasena all proceed against Sātyaki	ib
Sātyaki deprives Açwatthāman of his car	ib Approaching on another car Açwatthaman makes Satyaki
insensible	672
Sātyaki borne away from the fight	ib
Dhrishtadyumna greatly afflicted by Açwatthaman	ib
The Pandava leaders rush against and encounter Acwat-	,
thāman	ib
Açwatthāman slays Sudarçana, Paurava, and the prince of the Chedis	673
Fierce battle between Bhima and Açwatthaman	674
Bhima becomes insensible and is borne away from the batt.	le 676
The Panchalas fly away from Açwatthaman	ib
Açwatthāman makes a great carnage amongst them	ib
Arjuna, rallying the troops, encounters Acwatthaman	ib
Arjuna addresses Açwatthāman in harsh words	677
Açwatthāman invokes the Agneya weapons	ib
The fierce portents in Nature	678
The great slaughter in the Pandava army	ib
Arjuna baffles Açwatthāman's weapon by invoking the Brāhma weapon	679
The disturbance in Nature disappears	ib
Arjuna and Keçava emerge uninjured from the effects of the Agneya weapon	ib

			PAGE.
Açwatthaman's despondence			680
Açwatthaman meets Vyasa and enquires	of him abo	ut
the cause of the failure of his irresisti	ble weapor	in slaying Arjuna and Keçava			ib
Vyāsa recites to Açwatthāman the history	y of Nārāy	ana	ib
Nārāyana's hymn to Mahādeva			682
Mahādeva shows himself to Nārāyana an	d gives hir	n
boons			683
Nārāyana creates Nara from his own self			ib
Identity of Keçava and Arjuna with Nari	ayana and	Nara	684
Açwatthāman, after listening to Vyāsa's i	ecitation,	retires from the field, having caused the	Kuru arm	y
to be withdrawn			685
Arjuna meets with Vyasa and enquires of	him about	the invisible person who aided him in the	battle on the day of Jayadratha's slaughter			ib
Vyāsa informs Arjuna that the invisible p	erson was	none
else than Mahādeva himself			ib
The attributes of Mahadeva		•••	ib
The destruction of Daksha's Sacrifice by I	Mahādeva		689
The destruction of the tripple city by Ma	hādeva		690
Mahādeva paralyses Indra's arm			691
The gods with Indra repair to Brahman			ib
Brahman with the gods comes to Mahadev	7a.		692
Brahman's hymn to Mahādeva			ib
The other attributes of Mahadeva			ib
Explanation of some of the names of Ma	hādeva		694
Fruits that arise from a study of the Dron	a Parva		696

FINIS.

THE MAHABHARATA

DRONA PARVA.

SECTION I.

(Dronābhisheka Parva.)

Having bowed down to Nārāyana, and Nara the foremost of male beings, as also to the goddess Saraswati, must the word Jaya be uttered.

Janamejaya said,—"Hearing that his sire Devavrata of unrivalled vigor and sturdiness and might and energy and prowess had been slain by Cikhandin the prince of the Pānchālas,¹ what, indeed, O regenerate Rishi, did the powerful king Dhritarāshtra with eyes bathed in tears do?¹ O illustrious one, his son (Duryodhana) wished for sovereignty after vanquishing those mighty bowmen, viz., the sons of Pāndu, through Bhishma and Drona and other great car-warriors.³ Tell me, O thou that hast wealth of asceticism, all that he of Kuru's racedid after that chief of all bowmen had been slain!"⁴ Vaicampāyana said,—"Hearing that his sire had been slain, king Dhritarāshtra of Kuru's race, filled with anxiety and grief, obtained no peace of mind. And while he of Kuru's race was thus continually brooding over that sorrow, Gavalgani's son of pure soul once more came to him. Then, O monarch, Dhritarāshtra the son of Amvikā, addressed Sanjaya, who had that night come back from the camp to the city called after the elephant. With a heart rendered exceedingly cheerless in consequence of his having heard of Bhishma's slaughter, and desirous of the victory of his sons, he indulged in these lamentations in great distress.

"Dhritarāshtra said,—'After having wept for the high-souled Bhishma of terrible prowess, what, O son, did the Kauravas, urged by fate, next do ?9 Indeed, when that high-souled and invincible hero was slain, what did the Kauravas do, sunk as they were in an ocean of grief?15 Indeed, that swelling and highly efficient host of the high-souled Pandavas, would, O Sanjaya, excite the keenest fears of even the three worlds!11 Tell me, therefore, O Sanjaya, what the (assembled) kings did after Devavrata, that bull of Kuru's race, had fallen !'12

"Sanjaya said,—'Listen, O king, with undivided attention. to me as I recite what thy sons did after Devavrata had been slaughtered in battle.13 When Bhishma, O monarch, of prowess in capable of being baffled, was slain, thy warriors as also the Pandavas both reflected by themselves (on the situation).14 Reflecting on the duties of the Kshatriya order, they were filled with wonder and joy; but acting according to those duties of their own order, they all bowed to that high-souled warrior.15 Then those tigers among men contrived for Bhishma of immeasurable prowess a bed with a pillow made of straight And having made arrangements for Bhishma's protection, they addressed one another (in pleasant converse). bidding Ganga's son their farewell and walking round him.17 and looking at one another with eyes red in anger, those Kshatrivas, urged by fate, once more went out against one another for battle.18 Then, by the blare of trumpets and the beat of drums, the divisions of thy army, as also those of the foe, marched out.19 After the fall of Ganga's son, O king, and when the best part of the day had passed away, yeilding to the influence of wrath, with hearts afflicted by fate, so and disregarding the words, worthy of acceptance, of the high-souled Bhishma. those foremost ones of Bharata's race went out with great speed, armed with weapons.21 In consequence of thy folly and thy son's, and of the slaughter of Cantanu's son, the Kauravas with all the kings seemed to be summoned by Death himself.22 The Kurus, deprived of Devavrata, were filled with great anxiety, and resembled a herd of goats and sheep without a herdsman, in a forest abounding with beasts of prey. 3 Indeed, after the fall of that foremost one of Bharata's race, the Kurir host looked like the firmament divested of stars, or, like the sky without the atmosphere; 24 or like the Earth with blasted crops, or like an oration disfigured by bad grammar, or like the Asura host of old after Vali had been smitten down; or like a beautiful damsel deprived of husband, tor like a river whose waters have dried up, or like a roe deprived of her mate and encompassed in the woods by wolves;26 or like a specious mountain-cave with its lion killed by a Carabha. Indeed, O chief of the Bharatas, the Bharata host, on the fall of Ganga's son,27 became like a frail boat on the bosom of the ocean, tossed by a tempest blowing from every side. Exceedingly afflicted by the mighty and heroic Pandavas of sure aim,28 the Kaurava host, with its steeds, car-warriors, and elephants, much troubled, became exceedingly distressed, helpless, and panic-struck.29 And the frightened kings and the common soldiers, no longer relying upon one another, of that army, deprived of Devavrata, seemed to sink into the nethermost region of the world. Then the Kauravas remembered Karna, who, indeed, is equal to Devavrata himself. All hearts turned to that foremost of all wielders of arms, that one resembling a guest resplendent (with learning and ascetic austerities). 52 And all hearts turned to him, as the heart of a man in distress turneth to a friend capable of relieving that distress. Bharata, the kings then cried out, saying,—Karna, Karna !83 The son of Radha, our friend, that son of a Suta, that one who is ever prepared to lay down his life in battle! Endued with great fame, Karna, with his followers and friends, did not fight ^{*} Literally, like an oration teeming with unrefined expressions .- T. * I. e., deprived of robes and ornaments because of her widowhood.—T.

^{*} The first line of this verse, as read in the Bengal text, is certainly I follow the Bombay reading. Instead of Aprahrishtascha, the Bombay text reads Prahrishtascha, and for Vicampate it reads nicamya te. The second line, as read in the Bengal text, seems to me to be correct, the Bombay reading being objectionable. Nilakantha explains, that they wondered, because the slaughter of even a reverend superior was not sinful; and they were glad, because that slaughter in battle opened to the victim the way to heaven: -T.

¹ A Carabha is a fabulous animal of eight legs supposed to be stronger than the lion. T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:15 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

for these ten days! O, summon him soon! That mightyarmed hero, in the presence of all the Kshatriyas, during the tale of valiant and mighty car-warriors, was by Bhishma classed as an Ardha-ratha, although that bull among men is equal to two Mahārathas!83-85 Even thus was he classed during the tale of Rathas and Atirathas, he that is the foremost (of all Rathas and Atirathas), he that is respected by all heroes, he that would venture to fight even with Yama, Kuvera, Varuna, and Indra Through anger caused by this, O king, he had said unto Gangā's son these words:—As long as thou livest, O thou of Kuru's race, I will never fight !57 If thou, however, succeedest in slaying the sons of Pandu in great battle, I shall, O Kauravya, with Duryodhana's permission, retire into the woods!88 If, on the other hand, thou, O Bhishma, slain by the Pandavas, attainest to heaven, I shall then, on a single car, slay all of them, whom thou regardest as great carwarriors !39—Having said this, the mighty-armed Karna of great fame, with thy son's approval, did not fight for the first ten Bhishma, of great prowess in battle and of immeasurable might, slew, O Bhārata, a very large number of warriors belonging to Yudhishthira's army !41 When, however, that hero of sure aim and great energy was slain, thy sons thought of Karna, like persons desirous of crossing a river thinking of a Thy warriors and thy sons, together with all the kings, cried out, saying, -Karna! And they all said, -Even this is the time for the display of his prowess!48—Our hearts then turned to that Karna who derived his knowledge of weapons from Jamadagni's son, and whose prowess is incapable of being resisted! 44 He, indeed, O king, is competent to save us from great dangers, like Govinda always saving the celestials from great dangers!" "45

Vaicampāyana continued,—"Unto Sanjaya who was thus repeatedly applauding Karna, Dhritarashtra, sighing like a snake, said these words.46

"Dhritarashtra said,—'[I understand] that the hearts of all of you turned towards Vikartana's son Karna, and that all of you, again, saw that son of Rādhā, that hero of the Suta caste, ever prepared to lay down his life in battle.47 I hope that hero,

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:18 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google of prowess incapable of being baffled, did not falsify the expectations of Duryodhana and his brothers, all of whom were then afflicted with grief and fear, and desirous of being relieved from their danger. When Bhishma, that refuge of the Kauravas, was slain, could Karna, that foremost of bowmen, succeed in filling up the gap caused? Filling up that gap, could Karna inspire the foe with fear? Could he also crown with fruit the hopes, entertained by my sons, of victory?" 150

SECTION II.

"Sanjaya said,—'Then Adhiratha's son of the Suta caste, knowing that Bhishma had been slain, became desirous of rescuing, like a brother, thy son's army from the distress into which it had fallen, and which then resembled a boat sunk in the fathomless ocean.' [Indeed], O king, having heard that that mighty car-warrior and foremost of men, that hero of unfading glory, viz., Cantanu's son, had been thrown down (from his car), that grinder of foes, that foremost of all wielders of bows, viz., Karna, soon came (to the field of battle). When that best of car-warriors, viz., Bhishma, was slain by the foe, Karna speedily came there, desirous of rescuing the Kuru host, which resembled a boat sunk in the ocean, like a sire desirous of rescuing his children.

"'And Karna (addressing the soldiers) said,—That Bhishma in whom were firmness, intelligence, prowess, vigor, truth, self-restraint, and all the virtues of a hero, as also celestial weapons, and humility, and modesty, agreeable speech, and freedom from malice, when that ever-grateful Bhishma, that slayer of the foes of Brāhmanas, in whom were these attributes as permanently as Lakshmi in the Moon, alas, when that Bhishma, that slayer of hostile heroes, hath received his quietus, I regard all other heroes as already slain! In consequence of the eternal connection (of all things) with work, nothing exsists in this world that is imperishable. When Bhishma of high vows hath been slain, who is there that would take upon himself to say with certitude that tomorrow's sun will rise 2° When he that was endued with prowess equal to that of the

Vasus, he that was born of the energy of the Vasus, when he, that ruler of the earth, hath once more been united with the Vasus, grieve ye, therefore, for your possessions and children, for this Earth and the Kurus, and this host!*7—

"Sanjaya continued,—"Upon the fall of that boon-giving hero of great might, that lord of the world, viz., Cantanu's son of great energy, and upon the (consequent) defeat of the Bhāratas, Karna, with a cheerless heart and eyes filled with tears, began to console (the Dhartarashtras).8 Hearing these words of Rādhā's son, thy sons, O monarch, and thy troops, began to wail aloud and shed copious tears of grief corresponding with the loudness of those wails.9 When, however, the dreadful battle once more took place and the Kaurava divisions, urged on by the kings, once more set up loud shouts, that bull among mighty car-warriors, viz., Karna, then addressed the great car-warriors (of the Kaurava army) and said words which caused them great delight.10-In this transient world everything is continually running (towards the jaws of Death). Thinking of this, I regard everything as ephe-When, however, all of you were here, how could Bhishma, that bull among the Kurus, immovable as a hill, be thrown down from his car?11 When that mighty car-warrior, viz., the son of Cantany, hath been overthrown, who even now lieth on the ground like the Sun himself dropped (from the firmament), the Kuru kings are scarcely competent to bear Dhananjava, like trees incapable of bearing the mountain-wind.12 I shall, however, now protect, as that high-souled one did, this helpless Kuru host of cheerless mien, whose foremost warriors have already been slain by the foe !18 Let this burden now devolve on me. I see that this universe is transient, since that foremost of heroes hath been slain in battle. Why shall I, then, cherish any fear of battle?+14 Careering, therefore, on the field,

^{*} The sense seems to be, that when such a one hath been slain, what is there on earth that is not subject to destruction? Ye, should, therefore, grieve for your wealth, children, &.c., as things already gone.—T.

the Bombay text. The sense seems to be, that since everything is destined to death, why should I fear to do my duty?—T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:18 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access_use#pd-google I shall despatch those bulls of Kuru's race, (viz., the Pandavas), to Yama's abode by means of my straight shafts. ing fame as the highest object in the world, I shall slay them in battle, or, slain by the foe, shall sleep on the field!" ishthira is possessed of firmness, intelligence, Vrikodara is equal to an hundred elephants in prowess, Arjuna is young and is the son of the chief of the celestials. The Pandava host, therefore, is not capable of being easily defeated by the very celestials.16 That force in which are the twins, each resembling Yama himself, that force in which are Satyaki and the son of Devaki, that force is like the jaws of Death, No coward, approaching it, can come back with life.19 wise oppose swelling ascetic power with ascetic austerities. Se should force be opposed by force. Verily, my mind is firmly fixed upon opposing the foe and protecting my own party.18 O charioteer, I shall today certainly resist the might of the enemy, and vanquish him by repairing only to the field of battle. I will not tolerate this intestine feud.19 When the troops are broken, he that cometh (for aiding in the endeavour to rally) I shall either achieve this righteous feat worthy of an honest man, or casting off my life shall follow Bhishma! I shall either slay all my foes banded together, or slain by them, proceed to the regions reserved for heroes.20 O charioteer. I know that even this is what I should do when women and children cry for help or when Duryodhana's prowess sustains a Therefore, I shall today conquer the foe.21 Reckless of my very life in this terrible battle, I shall protect the Kurus and slay the sons of Pandu! Slaying in battle all my fees banded together, I shall bestow (undisputed) sovereignty on Let my armour, beautiful, made of Dhritarāshtra's son!22 gold, bright, and radiant with jewels and gems, be donned; and my head-gear, of effulgence equal to that of the Sun; and my bows and arrows that resemble fire, poison, or snakes.23 sixteen quivers be tied (to my car) at the proper places, and let a number of excellent bows be procured. Let also shafts, and darts; and heavy maces, and my conch, variegated with gold, be got Bring also my variegated, beautiful, and excellent standard, made of gold, possessed of the effulgence of the lotus,

and bearing the device of the elephant's girth, cleaning it with a delicate cloth, and decking it with excellent garlands and a network of wires.26* O charioteer's son, bring me also, with speed, some fleet steeds of the hue of tawny clouds, not lean, and bathed in water sanctified with mantras, and furnished with trappings of bright gold.26 Bring me also, with speed, an excellent car decked with garlands of gold, adorned with gems, bright as the Sun or the Moon, furnished with every necessary, as also with weapons, and unto which are yoked excellent ani-Bring me also a number of excellent bows of great toughness, and a number of excellent bowstrings capable of smiting (the foe), and some quivers, large and full of shafts, and some coats of mail for my body.28 Bring me also, with speed, O hero, every (auspicious) article needed for occasions of setting out (for battle), such as vessels of brass and gold full of curds. Let garlands of flowers be brought, and let them be put on the (proper) limbs of my body. Let drums also be beat Go, O charioteer, quickly to the spot where the diadem-decked (Arjuna), and Vrikodara, and Dharma's son (Yudhishthira), and the twins, are! Encountering them in battle, either I shall slay them, or, slain by them, my foes, shall follow Bhishma! 50 That force in which are king Yudhishthira firm in truth, and Bhima, and Arjuna, and Vasudeva, and Satyaki, and the Srinjayas, that force, I think, is incapable of being conquered by the kings! If all-destroying Death himself, with unremitting vigilance, were to protect Kiritin, still would I slay him, encountering him in battle, or repair myself to: Yama's abode by Bhishma's track!82 Verily, I say, that I will repair into the midst of those heroes! These (kings) that are my allies are not provokers of intestine feuds, or of weak attachment to me, or of unrighteous souls.—'ss "Sanjaya continued,—'Riding on an excellent and costly car

"Sanjaya continued,—'Riding on an excellent and costly car of great strength, with an excellent pole, decked with gold, auspicious, furnished with a standard, and unto which were yoked excellent steeds that were fleet as the wind, Karna proceeded (to battle) for victory.⁸⁴ Worshipped by the foremost of Kuru car-warriors like Indra by the celestials, that high-souled and fierce bowman, endued with immeasurable energy like the Sun himself, upon his car decked with gold and jewels and gems, furnished with an excellent standard, unto which were yoked excellent steeds, and whose rattle resembled the roll of the clouds, proceeded, accompanied by a large force, to that field of battle where that bull of Bharata's race (Bhishma) had paid his debt to nature. Si-Si Of beautiful person and endued with the splendour of fire, that great bowman and mighty carwarrier, viz., the son of Adhiratha, then mounted on his own beautiful car possessed of the effulgence of fire, and shope like the lord of the celestials himself riding on his celestial car."

^{*} The last line is read incorrectly, I think, in the Bombay text .- T.

SECTION III.

"Sanjaya said,—'Beholding the grandsire, viz., the venerable Bhishma, that destroyer of all the Kshatriyas, that here of righteous soul and immeasurable energy, that great bowman thrown down (from his car) by Savyasachin with his celestial weapons, lying on a bed of arrows, and looking like the vast ocean dried up by the mighty winds,1-2 the hope thy sons had for victory disappeared along with their coats of mail and peace of mind. Beholding him who was always an island unto persons sinking in the fathomless ocean in their endeayours to cross it, beholding that here covered with arrows that had coursed in a stream as continuous as that of Yamuna, that hero who looked like Maināka of unbearable energy thrown down on the earth by the great Indra, that warrior lying prostrate on the earth like the Sun himself dropped down from the firmament, that one who looked like the inconceivable Indra himself after his defeat of old by Vritra, that depriver of all warriors of their senses, that foremost of all combatants, that signal of all bowmen, beholding that here and bull among men, viz., thy sire Bhishma of high yows, that grandsire of the Bharatas,—thrown down in battle and lying, covered with Arjuna's shafts, on a hero's bed, Adhiratha's son (Karna) alighted from his car, in great affliction, filled with grief, and almost senseless, 8-8 Afflicted (with sorrow), and with eyes

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:18 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112
Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google

troubled with tears, he proceeded on foot. Saluting him with joined palms, and addressing him reverentially, he said, -I am Blessed be thou! Speak to me, O Bharata, in sacred and auspicious words, and look at me, opening thy eyes ?00 man certainly enjoyeth in this world the fruits of his pious deeds, since thou, reverend in years and devoted to virtue, liest on the ground, slain (by the foe) !11 O thou that art the foremost one among the Kurus, I do not see that there is any one else among them, who is competent (like thee) in filling the treasury, in counsels, in the matter of disposing the troops in battle array, and in the use of weapons !18 Alas, he that was endued with a righteous understanding, he that always protected the Kurus from every danger, alas, he, having slain numberless warriors, proceedeth to the region of the Pitris!13 day, O chief of the Bharatas, the Pandavas, excited with wrath, will slaughter the Kurus like tigers slaying deer !14 Today the Kauravas, acquainted with the force of Gandiva's twang, will regard Savyasāchin, like the Asuras regarding the wielder of the thunder-bolt, with terror !15 Today the noise, resembling that of heaven's thunder, of the arrows shot from Gandiva, will inspire the Kurus and other kings with great terror !16 O hero, like a raging conflagration of fierce flames consuming a forest, the shafts of Kiritin will consume the Dhartarashtras! In those parts of the forest through which fire and wind march together, they burn all plants and creepers and trees." out doubt, Partha is even like a swelling fire, and, without doubt, O tiger among men, Krishna is like the wind.19 ing the blare of Pānchajanya and the twang of Gāndiva, all the Kaurava troops, O Bharata, will be inspired with fear ! O hero, without thee, the kings will never be able to bear the rattle of the ape-bannered car belonging to that grinder of foes when he will advance (upon them) !21 Who amongst the kings, save thyself, is competent to battle with that Arjuna whose feats, as described by the wise, are all superhuman?28 Superhuman was the battle that he fought with the high-souled (Mahādeva) of three eyes! From him he obtained a boon that is unattainable by persons of unsanctified souls.25 Delighting in battle, that son of Pandu is protected by Madhava.

Who is there that is competent to vanquish him who could not be vanquished by thee before, at although thou, endued with great energy, hadst vanquished Rāma himself in battle, that fierce destroyer of the Kshatriya race, worshipped, besides, by the gods and the Dānavas? Incapable of putting up with that son of Pāndu, that foremost of heroes in battle, even I, with thy permission, am competent to slay, with the force of my weapons, that brave and fierce warrior who resembleth a snake of virulent poison and who slayeth his foes with his glances alone!—""15

SECTION IV.

"Sanjaya said,—'Unto him who was talking thus, the aged Kuru grandsire, with a cheerful heart, said these words adapted to both time and place: Like the ocean unto rivers, like the Sun unto all luminous bodies, like the righteous unto Truth, like a fertile soil unto seeds, like the clouds unto all creatures, be thou the refuge of thy relatives and friends ! Like the celestials upon him of a thousand eyes, let thy kinsmen depend upon thee !2-8. Be thou the humiliater of thy foes, and the enhancer of the joys of thy friends! Be thou unto the Kauravas as Vishnu unto the dwellers of heaven!4 sirous of doing what was agreeable to Dhritarashtra's son, thou didst, with the might and prowess of thy own arms, O Karna, vanquished the Kamvojas, having proceeded to Raja-Many kings amongst whom Nagnajit was the foremost, while staying in Girivraja, as also the Amyashthas, the Videhas, and the Gandharvas, were all vanquished by thee !6 The Kiratas, fierce in battle, dwelling in the fastnesses of Himavat, were formerly, O Karna, made by thee to own Duryodhana's And so also, the Utpalas, the Mekalas, the Paundras, the Kalingas, the Andhras, the Nishādas, the Trigartas, and the Valhikas, were all vanquished by thee, O Karna, in battle !8 In many other countries, O Karna, impelled by the desire of doing good to Duryodhana, thou didst, O hero, vanquish many races and kings of great energy ! Like Duryodhana, O child, with his kinsmen, and relatives, and friends, be thou also the refuge of all the Kauravas 100 In auspicious words I command thee, go, and fight with the enemy! Lead the Kurus in battle, and give victory unto Duryodhana! Thou art to us our grandson even as Duryodhana is. According to the ordinance, all of us also are as much thine as Duryodhana's!*13 The wise, O foremost of men, say that the companionship of the righteous with the righteous is a superior relationship than that through the womb. Without falsifying, therefore, thy relationship with the Kurus, protect thou the Kaurava host like Duryodhana, regarding it as thy own!14—

"'Hearing these words of his, Vikartana's son Karna, reverentially saluting Bhishma's feet, (bade him farewell and) came to that spot where all the Kaurava bowmen were. Viewing that wide and unparalelled encampment of the vast host, he began to cherish (by words of encouragement) those well-armed and broad-chested warriors. And all the Kauravas headed by Duryodhana were filled with joy. And beholding the mighty-armed and high-souled Karna come to the field and station himself at the head of the whole army, for battle, the Kauravas worshipped him with loud shouts and slapping of arm-pits and leonine roars and twang of bows and diverse other kinds of noise."

SECTION V.

"Sinjaya said,—'Beholding that tiger among men, viz., Karna, mounted on his car, Duryodhana, O king, filled with joy, said these words:'—This host, protected by thee, hath now, I think, got a proper leader! Let that, however, be settled now which is proper and within our power!"—

"Karna said,—Tell us thyself, O tiger among men, for thou art the wisest of kings! Another can never see so well what should be done as he seeth it whose concern it is! These kings are all desirous of listening to what thou mayst have to say! I am sure that no improper words will be uttered by thee!—

The second line of 12 is read incorrectly in the Bengal texts. Instead of tathapi the true reading (as in the Bombay edition) is tavapi.—T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:18 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized ,

"'Duryodhana said,—Bhishma was our commander, possessed (as he was) of years, prowess, and learning, and supported by all our warriors !5 That high-souled one, O Karna, achieving great glory and slaying large numbers of my enemies, protected us by fair fight for ten days! He achieved the most diffi-But now that he is about to ascend to heaven, whom, O Karna, dost thou think fit to be our commander Without a leader, an army cannot stay in battle for even a short while, O thou that art foremost in battle, like a boat without a helmsman in the waters.8 Indeed, as a boat without a helmsman, or a car without a driver, would go any where, so would the plight be of a host that is without a leader. Like a merchant who falleth into every kind of distress when he is unacquainted with the ways of the country he visits, an army that is without a leader is exposed to every kind of dis-Look thou, therefore, among all the high-souled warriors of our army, and find out a proper leader who may succeed the son of Cantanu!" Him whom thou wouldst regard as a fit leader in battle, him, all of us, without doubt, will together make our leader !18-

"Karna said,—All these foremost of men are high-souled persons! Every one of them deserveth to be our leader. There is no need of any minute examination." All of them are conversant with noble genealogies and with the art of smiting; all of them are endued with prowess and intelligence. All of them are attentive and acquainted with the scriptures, possessed of wisdom, and unretreating from battle.*14 All, however, cannot be leaders at the same time. Only one should be selected as leader, in whom are especial merits.15 All of these regard one another as equals. If one amongst them, therefore, be honored, the others will be dissatisfied, and, it is evident, will no longer fight for thee from desire of benefiting thee !16 This one, however, is the preceptor (in arms) of all these warriors; is vener-

^{*} Kula-samhanana-jnana, i. e., knowledge of Kula, as also of samhanana, which latter, as Nilakantha explains, means the body. A knowledge of the body, of vital and other limbs, was possessed by every accomplished warrior who wanted to smite effectually..—T.

able in years, and worthy of respect. Therefore, Drona, this foremost of all wielders of weapons, should be made the leader. Who is there worthy of becoming a leader, when the invincible Drona, that foremost of persons conversant with Brahma, is here, that one, viz., who is equal to Cukra or Vrihaspati himself? Amongst all the kings in thy army, O Bhārata, there is not a single warrior who will not follow Drona when the latter goeth to battle.* This Drona is the foremost of all leaders of forces, the foremost of all wielders of weapons, and the foremost of all intelligent persons. He is, besides, O king, thy preceptor (in arms)! Therefore, O Duryodhana, make this one the leader of thy forces without delay, as the celestials made Kārtikeya their leader in battle for vanquishing the Asuras.—'"21

SECTION VI.

"Sanjaya said,—'Hearing these words of Karna, king Duryodhana then said this unto Drona who was staying in the midst of the troops."

"Duryodhana said,—For the superiority of the order of thy birth, for the nobility of thy parentage, for thy learning, years, and intelligence, for also thy prowess, skill, invincibility, knowledge of worldly matters, policy, and self-conquest, by reason also of thy ascetic austerities and thy gratitude, superior as thou art as regards every virtue, among these kings there is none who can make so good a leader as thou !2-3 Protect thou, therefore, ourselves, like Vasava protecting the celestials! Having thee for our leader, we desire, O best of Brahmanas, to vanquish our foes. As Kāpāli amongst the Rudras, Pāvaka among the Vasus, Kuvera among the Yakshas, Vasava among the Maruts, Vacishtha among Brahmanas, the Sun amongst luminous bodies, Yama among Pitris, Varuna among acquatic creatures,6 as the Moon among stars, and Uçanas among the sons of Diti, so art thou the foremost of all leaders of forces. Be thou, therefore, our leader! O sinless one, let these ten and one Akshauhinis of troops be obedident to thy word of command! Disposing these troops in battle array, slay thou our foes like Indra slaying the Dānavas! Proceed thou at the head of us all like Pāvaka's son (Kārtikeya) at the head of the celestial forces. We will follow thee to battle like bulls following a bovine leader. Afterce and great bowman as thou art, beholding thee stretching the bow at our head, Arjuna will not strike. Without doubt, O tiger among men, if thou becomest our leader, I will vanquish Yudhishthira with all his followers and relatives in battle! Li—'

^{*} I. e., who will feel it humiliating for him to walk behind Drona .- T.

"Sanjaya continued,—'After Duryodhana had uttered these words, the kings (in the Kaurava army) all cried victory to Drona. And they all delighted thy son by uttering a loud leonine shout." And the troops, filled with joy, and with Duryodhana at their head, desirous of winning great renown, began to glorify that best of Brāhmanas. Then, O king, Drona addressed Duryodhana in those words." "15

SECTION VII.

"'Drona said,—I know the Vedas with their six branches. I know also the science of human affairs. I am acquainted also with the Caiva weapon, and diverse other species of weapons. Endeavouring to actually display all those virtues which ye, desirous of victory, have attributed to me, I will fight with the Pāndavas! I will not, however, O king, be able to slay the son of Prishata. O bull among men, he hath been created for my slaughter! I will fight with the Pāndavas, and slay the Somakas. As regards the Pāndavas, they will not fight with me with cheerful hearts! —'

"Sanjaya continued,—'Thus permitted by Drona, thy son, O king, then made him the commander of his forces according to the rites prescribed in the ordinance." And the kings (in the Kaurava army) headed by Duryodhana performed the investiture of Drona in the command of the forces like the celestials headed by Indra in days of yore performing the investiture of Skanda. After Drona's installation in the command, the joy of the army expressed itself by the sound of drums and the loud blare of conchs,⁷ Then with cries such as greet the ears on a festive day, with auspicious invocations by Brāhmanas gratified with presents, with the hymns and songs of bards and panegyrists,⁸ with cries of Jaya uttered by foremost of Brāhmanas, and with the dance of mimes, Drona was duly honored. And the Kaurava warriors regarded the Pāndavas as already vanquished.²

"Sanjaya continued,-Then that mighty car-warrior, viz., Bharadwaja's son, having obtained the command of the army, arrayed the troops in order of battle, and went out with thy sons from desire of fighting the foe.10 And the ruler of the Sindhus, and the chief of the Kalingas, and thy son Vikarna, clad in mail, took up their position on the right wing (of And Cakuni, accompanied by many foremost of horsemen battling with bright lances and belonging to the Gandharva tribe, proceeded, acting as their support.18 Kripa, and Kritavarman, and Chitrasena, and Vivingcati, headed by Dusçāsana, strove vigorously for protecting the left wing.18 And the Kamvojas headed by Sudakshina, and the Cakas, and the Yavanas, with steeds of great fleetness, proceeded, as the latter's support.14 And the Madras, the Trigartas, the Amvashthas, the Westerners, the Northerners, the Malavas, the Civis, the Curasenas, the Cudras, the Maladas,15 the Sauviras, the Kitavas, the Easterners, and the Southerners, placing thy son (Duryodhana) and the Suta's son (Karna) at their head, forming the rear-guard,16 gladdened the warriors of their own army and added to the strength of the (advancing) force, Vikartana's son Karna proceeded at the head of all the bowmen.*17 And his blazing and large and tall standard bearing the device of the elephant's rope, shone with an effulgence like that of the Sun, gladdening his own divisions.18 Beholding Karna, none regarded the calamity caused by Bhishma's death.

^{*} A substantial difference of reading occurs here between the Bengal and the Bombay texts. Both have defects of their own. It seems to me that Drona, as leader, proceeded in the van. Karna, when described as proceeding at the head of all bowmen, must be taken as marching at the head of the whole rear-guard. In that case, his position would be immediately behind Drona's.—T.

the kings, along with the Kurus, all became freed from grief.10 And large numbers of warriors, banded together, said unto one another,-Beholding Karna on the field, the Pandavas will never be able to stay in battle !20 Indeed, Karna is quite competent to vanquish in battle the very gods with Vasava at What need be said, therefore, of the sons of their head! Pandu who are destitute of energy and prowess?21 The mightyarmed Bhishma spared the Parthas in battle. Karna, however, will slay them in the fight with his keen shafts :22-Speaking unto one another thus, and filled with joy, they proceeded, applauding and worshipping the son of Radha.23 As regards our army, it was arrayed by Drona in the form of a Cakata (vehicle); while the array of our illustrious foes, O king, was in the form Krauncha (crane)24 as disposed, O Bharata, by king Yudhishthira the just in great cheerfulness. At the head of their array were those two foremost of persons, 25 viz., Vishnu and Dhananjaya, with their banner set up, bearing the device of The hump of the whole army and the refuge of all bowmen, 25 that banner of Partha endued with immeasurable energy, as it floated in the welkin, seemed to illumine the entire host of the high-souled Yudhishthira.27 That banner of Partha possessed of great intelligence seemed to resemble the blazing Sun that riseth at the end of the Yuga for consuming the world.28 Amongst bowmen, Arjuna is the foremost; amongst bows, Gandiva is the foremost; amongst creatures, Vasudeva is the first; and amongst all kinds of discs Sudarçana is the Bearing these four embodiments of energy, that car unto which were yoked white steeds, took up its position in the front of the (hostile) army, like the fierce discus of Death upraised (for striking).30 Thus did those two foremost of men stand at the very head of their respective forces, viz., Karna at the head of thy army, and Dhananjaya at the head of the hostile one.  Both excited with wrath, and each desirous of slaying the other, Karna and Arjuna looked at each other in that battle.22

"Then when that mighty car-warrior, viz., Bharadwāja's son, proceeded to battle with great speed, the Earth seemed to tremble with loud sounds of wailing.⁵³ Then a thick dust, raised by the wind and resembling a canopy of tawny silk, enveloped the sky and the Sun.34 And though the firmament was cloudless, yet a shower fell of pieces of flesh, bones, and And vultures and hawks and cranes and Kankas, and crows, in thosusands, 35 began continually to fall upon the (Kaurava) troops. And jackalls yelled aloud; and many fierce and terrible birds * repeatedly wheeled to the left of thy army, from desire of eating flesh and drinking blood. And many blazing meteors, illuminating (the sky), and covering large areas with their tails, fell on the field with loud sound and trembling motion.38 And the wide disc of the Sun, O monarch. seemed to emit flashes of lightning with thundering noise, when the commander of the (Kaurava) army set out. 39 These and many other portents, fierce and indicating a destruction of heroes, were seen during the battle.40 Then commenced the encounter between the troops of the Kurus and the Pandavas desirous of slaving each other. And so loud was the din that it seemed to fill the whole earth.41 And the Pandavas and the Kauravas, enraged with each other, and skilled in smiting. began to strike each other with sharp weapons, from desire of victory.40 Then that great bowman of blazing effulgence rushed towards the troops of the Pandavas with great impetuosity. scattering hundreds of sharp arrows.48 Then the Pandavas and the Srinjayas, beholding Drona rush towards them, received him, O king, with showers upon showers (in distinct sets) of arrows.44 Agitated and broken by Drona, the large host of the Pandavas and the Panchalas broke like a row of cranes by force of the wind.46 Invoking into existence many celestial weapons in that battle, Drona, within a very short time, afflicted the Pandavas and the Srinjayas.46 Slaughtered by Drona like the Dānavas by Vāsava, the Pānchālas headed by Dhrishtadyumna trembled in that battle.47 Then that mighty car-warrior, viz... Yainasena's son (Dhrishtadyumna), that here acquainted with celestial weapons, broke, with his arrowy showers, the division of Drona in many places.48 And the mighty son of Prishata baffling with his own arrowy showers the showers of arrows shot by Drona, caused a great slaughter among the Kurus. The mighty-armed Drona then, rallying his men in battle and gathering them together, rushed towards the son of Prishata. He then sped at Prishata's son a thick shower of arrows like Maghavat excited with rage showering his arrows with great force upon the Danavas.51 Then the Pandavas and the Srinjayas, shaken by Drona with his shafts, repeatedly broke like a herd of inferior animals attacked by a lion.52 And the mighty Drona careered through the Pandava force like a circle of fire. Mounted on his All this, O king, seemed highly wonderful.53 own excellent car which (then) resembled a city coursing through the skies, which was furnished with every necessary according to (military) science, whose banner floated on the air, whose rattle resounded through the field, whose steeds were (well) urged, and the staff of whose standard was bright as crystal, Drona struck fear into the hearts of the enemy and caused a great slaughter among them. 54-65

^{*} Lit., "placed thy army to their right," i. e., these birds wheeled to the left of thy host, which is an evil omen.—T.

SECTION VIII.

"Sanjaya said,—'Beholding Drona thus slaying steeds and drivers and car-warriors and elephants, the Pandavas, without being troubled, encompassed him on all sides. Then king Yudhishthira, addressing Dhrishtadyumna and Dhananjaya, said unto them,—Let the Pot-born (Drona) be checked, our men surrounding him on all sides with care! -Thus addressed, those mighty car-warriors, viz., Arjuna and Prishata's son, along with their followers, all received Drona as the latter came. the Kekaya princes, and Bhimasena, and Subhadra's son, and Ghatotkacha, and Yudhishthira, and the twins (Nakula and Sahadeva), and the ruler of the Matsyas, and the son of Drupada, and the (five) sons of Draupadi all filled with joy, and Dhrishtaketu, and Sātyaki, and the wrathful Chitrasena, and the mighty car-warrior Yuyutsu,5 and many other kings, O monarch, who followed the son of Pandu, all achieved diverse feats in keeping with their lineage and prowess.6 Beholding then that host protected in that battle by those Pandava warriors, Bharadwaja's son, turning his eyes in wrath, cast his looks upon it."

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:18 GMT / https://l Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www Inflamed with rage, that warrior, invincible in battle, consumed, as he stood upon his car, the Pandava host like the tempest destroying vast masses of clouds.8 Rushing on all sides at carwarriors and steeds and foot-soldiers and elephants, Drona furiously careered over the field like a young man though bearing the weight of years. His red steeds, fleet as the wind, and of excellent breed, covered with blood, O king, assumed a beautiful appearance.10 Beholding that hero of regulated vows felling them like Yama himself inflamed with wrath, the soldiers of Yudhishthira fled away on all sides.11 And as some fled away and others rallied, as some looked at him and others staved on the field, the noise they made was fierce and terrible.18 that noise causing delight to heroes and enhancing the fears of the timid, filled the whole welkin and the earth.18 more Drona, uttering his own name in battle, made himself exceedingly fierce, scattering hundreds of arrows among the Indeed, the mighty Drona, though old, yet acting like a young man, careered like Death himself, O sire, amid the divisions of Pandu's son.15 That fierce warrior, cutting off heads as well as arms decked with ornaments, made the terraces of many cars empty, and uttered leonine roars.36 And in consequence of those joyous shouts of his, as also of the force of his shafts, the warriors, O lord, (of the hostile army) trembled like a herd of kine afflicted by cold.17 And in consequence of the rattle of his car and the streching of his bowstring and the twang (f his bow, the whole welkin resounded with a loud noise.18 And the shafts of that hero, coursing in thousands from his bow, and enveloping all the points of the compass, fell upon the elephants and steeds and cars and foot-soldiers (of the enemy).19 Then the Panchalas and the Pandavas boldly approached Drona, who, armed with his bow of great force, resembled a fire having weapons for its flames.20 Then with their elephants and footsoldiers and steeds he began to despatch them unto the abode of And soon Drona made the earth miry with blood.21 Scattering his mighty weapons and shooting his shafts thick on every side, Drona soon so covered all the points of the compass that nothing could be seen except his showers of arrows.22 among foot-soldiers and cars and steeds and elephants nothing could be seen save Drona's arrows. The standard of his car was all that could be seen, moving like flashes of lightning amid the cars.*23 Of soul incapable of being depressed, Drona then, armed with bow and arrows, afflicted the five princes of Kekaya and the ruler of the Panchalas, and then rushed against the division of Yudhishthira.24 Then Bhimasena and Dhananjaya and the grandson of Cini, and the sons of Drupada, and the ruler of Kāçi, viz., the son of Caivya, and Civi himself, cheerfully and with loud roars covered him with their Shafts in thousands, decked with wings of gold, shot from Drona's bow, piercing through the bodies of the elephants and the young steeds of those warriors, entered the earth, their feathers dyed with blood.26 The field of battle, strewn with cars and the prostrate forms of large bands of warriors and of elephants and steeds mangled with shafts, looked like the welkin covered with masses of black clouds.27 Then Drona, desirous of the prosperity of thy sons, having thus crushed the divisions of Sātyaki, and Bhima, and Dhananjaya, and Subhadrā's son, and Drupada, and the ruler of the Kāçis, and having grinded many other heroes in battle,28 indeed, that high-souled warrior, having achieved these and many other feats, and having, O chief of the Kurus, scorched the world like the Sun himself as he rises at the end of the Yuga, proceeded hence, O monarch, to heaven!29 That hero possessed of a golden car, that grin der of hostile hosts, having achieved mighty feats and slain in thousands20 the warriors of the Pandava host in battle, hath at last been himself slain by Dhrishtadyumna! Having, in fact, slain more than two Akshauhinis of brave and unreturning warriors, that here endued with intelligence at last attained to the highest state! Indeed, O king, having achieved the most difficult feats, he hath at last been slain by the Pandavas and the Panchalas of cruel deeds. When the preceptor was slain in battle, there arose in the welkin, O monarch, a loud uproar of all creatures, as also of all the troops.

^{*} The first line of 23 is read with a slight variation in the Bengal texts. The words "nothing could be seen save Drona's arrows" are added here to make the sense clear.—T.

through heaven and earth and the intermediate space and through the cardinal and the subsidiary directions, 21-24 the loud cry—O fie,—of creatures was heard. And the gods, the Pitris, and they that were his friends, all 25 beheld that mighty car-warrior, viz., the son of Bharadwāja, thus slain. The Pāndavas, having won the victory, uttered leonine shouts. And the Earth trembled with those loud shouts of theirs." 26

Section IX.

"Dhritarashtra said,—'How did the Pandavas and the Srinjayas slay Drona in battle, - Drona who was so accomplished in weapons amongst all wielders of arms? Did his car break (in course of the fight)? Did his bow break while he was striking (the foe)? Or, was Drona careless at the time that he met with his death blow? How, indeed, O child, could Prishata's son, (viz., Dhrishtadyumna) the prince of Panchala, slay that hero incapable of being humiliated by enemies, who scattered thick showers of shafts furnished with wings of gold, and who was endued with great lightness of hand,—that foremost of Brahmanas who was accomplished in everything, acquainted with all modes of warfare, capable of shooting his shafts to a great distance, and selfrestrained, who was possessed of great skill in the use of weapons and armed with celestial weapons,—that mighty warrior, of unfading glory, who was always careful, and who achieved the fiercest feats in battle ?3-5 It is plain, it seems to me, that destiny is superior to exertion, since even the brave Drona hath been slain by the high-souled son of Prishata! That here in whom were the four kinds of weapons, alas, thou sayest that that Drona, that preceptor in bowmanship, is slain! the slaughter of that here who used to ride his bright car covered with tiger-skins and adorned with pure gold, I cannot drive away my grief!8 Without doubt, O Saniaya, no one dies of grief caused by another's calamity, since, wretch that I am, I am yet alive although I have heard of Drona's death! Destiny I regard to be all-powerful, exertion is fruitless! Surely, my heart, hard as it is, is made of adamant, o since it breaketh not into a hundred pieces, although I have heard of Drona's death!

/ https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google

Generated on 2022-03-03-12:18 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized ,

He who was waited upon by Brahmanas and princes desirous of instruction in the Vedas and divination and bowmanship, alas, how could he be taken away by Death! I cannot brook the overthrow of Drona which is even like the drying up of the ocean, or the removal of Meru from its site, or the fall of the Sun from the firmament! He was a restrainer of the wicked, and a protector of the righteous.11-18 That scorcher of foes who hath given up his life for the wretched Duryodhana, upon whose prowess rested that hope of victory which my wicked sons entertained,14 who was equal to Vrihaspati or Uçanas himself in intelligence, alas, how was he slain? His large steeds of red hue, covered with net of gold,16 fleet as the wind and incapable of being struck with any weapon in battle, endued with great strength, neighing cheerfully, well-trained and of the Sindhu breed, yoked unto his car and dragging the vehicle excellently,16 always persevering in the midst of battle,-did they become weak and Coolly bearing in battle elephants while those huge creatures roared at the blare of conchs and the beat of drums, unmoved by twang of bows and showers of arrows and other weapons, foreboding the defeat of foes by their very appearance, never drawing long breaths (in consequence of toil), above all fatigue and pain,17-18 were those fleet steeds that drew the car of Bharadwāja's son soon overpowered? Even such were the steeds yoked unto his golden car! Even such were the steeds yoked thereto by that foremost of human heroes!19 Mounted on his own excellent car decked with pure gold, why, O son, could he not cross the sea of the Pandava army?20 What feats were achieved in battle by Bharadwaja's son, that warrior who always drew tears from other heroes, and upon whose knowledge (of weapons) all the bowmen of the world rely ?21 Firmly adhering to truth, and endued with great might, what, indeed, did Drona achieve Who were those car-warriors that advanced in battle against that achiever of fierce deeds, that foremost of all wielders of the bow, that first of heroes, who resembled Cakra Did the Pandavas fly away, beholding him himself in heaven? of the golden car,22-23 him, viz., of mighty strength who invoked into existence celestial weapons? Or, did king Yudhishthira the just, with his younger brothers, and having the prince of Panchala (Dhrishtadyumna) for his binding chord,* Drona, surrounding him with his troops on all sides? Partha must have, with his straight shafts, checked all the other car-warriors,24-25 and then Prishata's son of sinful deeds must have surrounded Drona. I do not see any other warrior, save the fierce Dhrishtadyumna protected by Arjuna, who could have compassed the death of that mighty hero! It seems that when those heroes, viz., the Kekayas, the Chedis, the Karushas, the Matsyas, and the other kings, surrounding the preceptor, pressed him exceedingly like ants pressing upon a snake, while he was engaged in some difficult feat, the wretched Dhrishtadyumna must have slain him then! This is what He who, having studied the four Vedas with their branches and the histories forming the fifth (Veda),26-23 became the refuge of the Brahmanas as the ocean is of rivers, that scorcher of foes who lived both as a Brahmana and a Kshatriya,50 alas, how could that Brahmana, reverend in years, meet with his end at the edge of a weapon? Of a proud spirit, he was yet often humiliated and had to suffer pain on my account! 1st However undeserving of it, he yet attained at the hands of Kunti's son, the fruit of his own conduct.+ whose feats depend all wielders of bows in the world, 32 alas, how could that hero, firmly adhering to truth and possessed of great skill, be slain by persons desirous of affluence? Foremost in the world like Cakra himself in heaven, of great might and great energy, 33 alas, how could he be slain by the Parthas like the smaller fish slaying the whale? He from whose presence no warrior desirous of victory could ever escape with life, he whom, while alive, these two sounds never left, 84-35 viz., the sound of the Vedas by those desirous of Vedic lore, and the twang of bows caused by those desirous of skill in bowmanship, he who was never cheerless, alas, that tiger among men, that hero endued with prosperity and never vanquished in battle,36 that warrior of prowess equal to that of the lion or the elephant, hath been slain! Verily, I cannot brook the idea of his How could Prishata's son, in the very sight of foremost of men, slay in battle that invincible warrior whose might was never humiliated and whose fame was never tarnished? were they that fought in Drona's van, protecting him, standing by his side ?37-38 Who proceeded in his rear and obtained that end which is so difficult of attainment? Who were those highsouled warriors that protected the right and the left wheels of Drona ?89 Who were in the van of that hero while he struggled in battle? Who were they that, reckless of their lives on that occasion, met with Death which stood face to face with them? Who were those heroes that went the last journey in Drona's Did any of those Kshatriyas that were assigned for Drona's protection, proving false, abandon that here in battle ? Was he slain by the foe after such abandonment and while alone? Drona would never, from fear, show his back in battle, however great the danger! How then was he slain by the foe? in great distress, O Sanjaya, an illustrious person should do this, viz., put forth his prowess according to the measure of his All this was in Drona: O child, I am losing my Let this discourse be suspended for a while! regaining my senses I will once more ask thee, O Sanjaya!" "41-44

^{*} Probably, a ready instrument.-T.

[†] The sense seems to be that having carefully trained Arjuna in arms, he has got the fruit of his care and labour in the form of defeat and death at the hands of, or, at least, through, his own pupil,—T.

SECTION X.

Vaicampayana said,—"Having addressed the Suta's son in this way, Dhritarashtra, afflicted with excessive grief of heart and hopeless of his son's victory, fell down on the ground. Beholding him deprived of his senses and fallen down, his attendants sprinkled him with perfumed and cold water, fanming him the while. Seeing him fallen, the Bharata ladies, O king, surrounded him on all sides and gently rubbed him with their hands.3 And slowly raising the king from the ground, those royal ladies, their voices choked in tears, seated him on his seat.4 Seated, the king continued to be under the And he remained perfectly motioninfluence of that swoon. less, while they fanned him standing around, And a tremour then passed over the monarch's body and he slowly regained his senses. And once more he began to interrogate Gavalgana's son of the Suta caste about the incidents, as they occurred, of the battle.⁶

"Dhritarashtra said,-'[That Ajatacatru] who, like the risen Sun, dispelleth darkness by his own light; who (rusheth against a foe) as a swift and angry elephant with rent temples, incapable of being vanquished by hostile leaders of herds, rusheth against a rival proceeding with cheerful face towards a female of the species in rut, O, what warrior (of my army) resisted that Ajātacatru as he came, for keeping him away from Drona?* That hero, that foremost of persons, who hath slain many brave warriors (of my army) in battle,7-9 that mighty-armed and intelligent and courageous prince of unbaffled prowess, who, unassisted by any one, can consume the entire host of Duryodhana by means of his terrible glances alone,10 that slayer by his eyes, that one bent on winning victory, that bowman, that hero of unfading glory, that self-restrained monarch who is revered by the whole world, O, who were those heroes (of my army) that surrounded that warrior ?+11 That invincible prince, that bowman of unfading glory, that tiger among men, that son of Kunti, who advancing with great celerity came upon Drona. that mighty warrior who always achieves grand feats upon the foe, that hero of gigantic frame and great courage who in strength is equal to ten thousand elephants, O, what brave combatants of my army surrounded that Bhimasena as he rushed upon my host?12-14 When that car-warrior of exceeding energy, viz., Vibhatsu, looking like a mass of clouds, came. creating thunder-bolts like the clouds themselves,15 shooting showers of arrows like Indra pouring rain, and making all the points of the compass resound with the slap of his palms and

^{*} This sentence comprises 7, 8, and the first line of 9. I have followed the exact order of the original. The peculiarity of the Sanskrit construction is that the nominative Pronoun is made to stand in apposition with a noun in the objective case. The whole of this Section contains many such sentences.—T.

^{† 10} and 11 also refer to Ajātaçatru.—T.

the rattle of his car-wheels,16 when that hero whose bow was like the lightning's flash and whose car resembled a cloud having for its roars the rattle of its wheels, (when that hero came) the whizz of whose arrows made him exceedingly fierce,17 whose wrath resembles an awful cloud, and who is fleet as the mind or the tempest, who always pierces the foe deep into his very vitals, who, armed with shafts, is terrible to look at, who like Death himself bathes all the points of the compass with human blood in profusion, and who, with fi erce uproar and awful visage, wielding the bow Gandiva, incessantly pours on my warriors. headed by Duryodhana shafts whetted on stone and furnished with vulturine feathers, alas, when that hero of great intelligence came upon you, what became the state of your minds?18-20 When that warrior having the huge ape on his banner came, obstructing the welkin with dense showers of arrows, what became the state of your minds at sight of that Partha?21 Arjuna advance upon you, slaying your troops with the twang of Gandiva and achieving fierce feats on the way ?22 Did Dhananjaya take, with his shafts, your lives, like the tempest destroying gathering masses of clouds or felling forests of reeds, blowing through them ?23 What man is there that is capable of bearing in battle the wielder of Gandiva? Hearing only that he is stationed at the head of the (hostile) force, the heart of every foe seems to rend in twain !24 In that battle in which the troops trembled and even heroes were struck with fear, who were they that did not abandon Drona, and who were those cowards that abandoned him from fear?25 Who were they that, reckless of their lives, met Death himself standing face to face with them in the shape of Dhananjaya who hath vanquished even superhuman combatants in battle ?26 incapable of bearing the impetus of that warrior having white steeds yoked unto his car and the twang of Gandiva that resembles the roll of the very clouds!27 That car which has Vishnu himself for its driver and Dhananjaya for its warrior, that car I regard to be incapable of being vanquished by the very gods and the Asuras united together !28 Delicate, young, and brave, and of a very handsome countenance, that son of Pandu who is gifted with intelligence and skill and wisdom and

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:21 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

whose prowess is incapable of being baffled in battle,29 when that Nakula with loud noise and afflicting all hostile warriors. rushed at Drona, what heroes (of my army) surrounded him? When Sahadeva who resembles an angry snake of virulent poison, when that hero owning white steeds and invincible in battle, observant of laudable vows, incapable of being baffled in his purposes, gifted with modesty, and never vanquished in fight, came upon us, what heroes (of our army) surrounded That warrior who, having crushed the mighty host of the Sauvira king, took for his wife the beautiful Bhoia maiden of symmetrical limbs,33 that bull among men, viz., Yuyudhāna, in whom are always truth and firmness and bravery and Brahmacharya,34 that warrior gifted with great might, always practising truth, never cheerless, never vanquished. who in battle is equal to Vasudeva and is regarded as his second self, 35 who, through Dhananjaya's instructions, hath become foremost in the use of arrows, and who is equal to Partha himself in weapons, O, what warrior (of my army) resisted that Satyaki, for keeping him away from Drona? se The foremost hero among the Vrishnis, exceedingly brave among all bowmen, equal to Rama himself in (knowledge and use of) weapons and in prowess and fame, 87 (know, O Sanjaya, that) truth and firmness, and intelligence, and heroism, and knowledge of Brahma, and high weapons, are all in him (Sātyaki) of the Sātwata race as the three worlds are in Kecava!58 What heroes (of my army), approaching that mighty bowman, viz., Sātyaki, possessed of all these accomplishments and incapable of being resisted by the very gods, surrounded The foremost among the Panchalas, possessed of heroism, high-born and the favorite of all high-born heroes, ever achieving good deeds in battle, viz., Uttamaujas, 40 that prince ever engaged in the welfare of Arjuna, born for only my evil, equal unto Yama, or Vaicravana, or Aditya, or Mahendra, or Varuna,41 that prince regarded as a mighty car-warrior and prepared to lay down his life in the thick of battle, O, what heroes (of my army) surrounded him?42 Who (amongst my warriors) opposed Dhrishtaketu,-that single warrior amongst the Chedis who, deserting them, hath embraced the side of the

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:21 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google

Pandavas,—while he rushed upon Drona?48 Who resisted the heroic Ketumat for keeping him away from Drona, the brave Ketumat who slew prince Durjaya while the latter had taken shelter in Girivraja?44 What heroes (of my army) surrounded Cikhandin,—that tiger among men, who knows the merits and demerits (in his own person) of manhood and femininity, that son of Yajnasena, who is always cheerful in battle, that hero who became the cause of the high-souled Bhishma's death in battle,-when he rushed towards Drona?45-46 That foremost hero of the Vrishni race,—that chief of all bowmen, that brave warrior in whom all accomplishments exist in a greater degree than in Dhananjaya himself,47 in whom are ever weapons and truth and Brahmacharya, who is equal to Vasudeva in energy and Dhananjaya in strength,48 who in splendour is equal to Aditya and in intelligence to Vrihaspati,—viz., the souled Abhimanyu resembling Death himself with wide-open mouth,49 O, what heroes (of my army) surrounded him when he rushed towards Drona? That youth of vigorous understanding, that slaver of hostile heroes, viz., Subhadra's son, 50 O, when he rushed towards Drona, what became the state of your minds? What heroes surrounded those tigers among men, viz., the sons of Draupadi, when they rushed in battle against Drona like rivers rushing towards the sea? Those. children who, giving up all (childish) sports for twelve years, 51-52 and observing excellent vows, waited upon Bhishma for the sake of weapons; those children, viz., Kshatranjaya and Kshatradeva and Kshatravarman and Manada,53 those heroic sons of Dhrishtadyumna, O, who resisted them, seeking to keep them away from Drona! He whom the Vrishnis regarded as superior in battle to a hundred car-warriors, 4 O, who resisted that great bowman, viz., Chekitana, for keeping him away from Drona? Those five Kekaya brothers, virtuous and possessed of prowess incapable of being baffled,55 resembling (in hue) the insects called Indragopakas, with red coats of mail, red weapons and red banners, those heroes that are the maternal cousins of the Pandavas and that always wish victory unto the latter, 56 O, what heroes (of my army) surrounded those valiant princes when they rushed towards Drona for slaving him? That lord of battles, that foremost of bowmen, that hero of unbaffled aim and great strength, that tiger among men, viz., Yuyutsu, whom many wrathful kings battling together for six months at Vāranāvata from desire of slaying him could not vanquish, and who in battle at Vārānasi overthrew with a broad-headed arrow that mighty car-warrior, viz., the prince of Kāçi, desirous of seizing (at a self-choice) a maiden for wife, O, what hero (of my army) resisted him? mighty bowman, viz., Dhrishtadyumna, who is the chief counsellor of the Pandavas, 57-60 who is engaged in doing evil to Duryodhana, who was created for Drona's destruction, O, what heroes (of my army) surrounded him when he came towards Drona, breaking through all my ranks and consuming all my warriors in battle? That foremost of all persons conversant with weapons, who has been reared almost on Drupada's lap,61-62 O, what warriors (of my army) surrounded that Cikhandin protected by (Arjuna's) weapons, for keeping him away from Drona? He who encompassed this earth by the loud rattle of his car as by a leathern belt, that mighty carwarrior and foremost of all slayers of foes, who, as (a substitute for) all sacrifices, performed, without hindrance, ten horsesacrifices with excellent food and drink and gifts in profusion, who ruled his subjects as if they were his children, that Uçinara's son who in sacrifices gave away kine countless as the sand-grains in Ganga's stream, whose feat none amongst men have been or will ever be able to imitate, 68-66 after the performance of whose difficult feat the very gods had cried out, saying,-We do not see that in the three worlds with their mobile and immobile creatures a second person other than Uçinara's son was, has ever been, or will ever be, born, 67-68_ who hath attained to regions (in after life) which are unattainable by human beings, O, who (amongst my army) resisted that Caivya, that grandson of that Uçinara's son, while he came upon (Drona) ?69 What heroes (of my army) surrounded the car-division of that slayer of foes, viz., Virāta the king of the Matsyas, while it reached Drona in battle?70 kept away from Drona the gigantic Ghatotkacha, that thorn (in the side) of my sons, that warrior who always wishes victory unto the Pandavas, that heroic Rakshasa possessed of extensive powers of illusion, endued with great strength and great prowess, and born of Bhima in course of a single day, and of whom I entertain very great fears ?*71-73 What, O Sanjaya, can remain unvanquished by them for whose sake these and many others are prepared to lay down their lives in battle?73 can the sons of Pritha meet with defeat, they, viz., that have that tiger among all beings, the wielder of the bow called Carnga, for their refuge and benefactor?74 Vasudeva is, indeed, the great Master of all the worlds, the Lord of All, and Eternal! Of celestial soul and infinite power, Narayana is the refuge of men in battle !75 The wise recite his celestial feats. I also will recite them with devotion, for recovering my firmness!" "76

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:21 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

SECTION XI.

"Dhritarashtra said,—'Hear, O Sanjaya, the celestial feats Vasudeva, feats that Govinda achieved and the like of which no other person hath ever been able to achieve! being brought up, O Sanjaya, in the family of the cowherd (Nanda), that high-souled one, while yet a boy, made the might of his arms known to the three worlds.2 Even he then slew Hayarāja, living in the woods (on the shores) of Yamunā, who was equal to (the celestial steed) Uchchaicravas in strength and the wind itself in speed.+3 In childhood he also slew, with his two bare arms, the Danava, in the form of a bull, of terrible deeds, and risen like Death himself unto all the kine.4 Of eyes like lotus petals, he also slew the mighty Asuras named Pralamva, and Naraka, and Jambha, and Pitha, as also Mura that terror of the celestials. And so also Kansa of mighty energy, who was, besides, protected by Jarasandha, was, with all his followers, slain in battle by Krishna aided by his prowess alone.

^{*} Ghatotkacha was the son of Hidimva by Bhimasena. Rakshasi women bring forth the very day they conceive, and their offspring attain to youth the very day they are born .- T.

⁺ Hayaraja, lit., the prince of steeds. He was an Asura, otherwise called Keçin, in the form of a steed .- T.

I I. e., without weapons of any kind,-T.

With Valadeva as his second, that slayer of foes, viz., Krishna. consumed in battle, with all his troops, the king of the Curasenas, viz., Sunāman, of great activity and prowess in battle. the lord of a full Akshauhini, and the valiant second brother of Kansa the king of the Bhojas.7-8 The highly wrathful regenerate Rishi Durvasas was adored by him along with his wife, and the Rishi (gratified with the adoration) gave him boons.*9 Of eyes like lotus petals, and endued with great bravery, Krishna, vanquishing all the kings at a self-choice, bore away the daughter of the king of the Gandharas.10 angry kings, as if they were horses by birth, were yoked unto his nuptial car and lacerated with the whip.11 The mightyarmed Janarddana also caused Jarasandha, the lord of a full Akshauhini of troops, to be slain through the instrumentality of another. †12 The mighty Krishna also slew the valiant king of the Chedis, that leader of kings, as if he were some animal, on the occasion of the latter's disputing about the Argha. 118 Putting forth his prowess, Madhava hurled into the sea the Daitya city called Saubha, (moving) in the skies, protected by Calwa, and regarded as impregnable. The Angas, the Vangas, the Kalingas, the Magadhas, the Kaçis, the Koçalas, the Vatsyas, the Gargyas, the Karushas, and the Paundras, -these all he vanquished in battle.15 The Avantis, the Southerners, the Mountaineers, the Daçerakas, the Kaçmirakas, the Aurasikas, the Picachas, the Samudgalas, the Kamvojas, the Vatadhanas, the Cholas, the Pandyas, O Sanjaya, the Trigartas, the Malavas, the Daradas, difficult of being vanquished,17 the Khasas arrived from diverse realms, as also the Cakas, and the Yavanas with their followers, were all vanquished by him of eyes like lotus petals.18 In days of old, penetrating into the

^{*} Kaliprasanna Singha, in his Bengali translation, makes a mess of this sloka .- T.

[†] Jarasandha, the powerful king of the Magadhas, and the sworm foe of Krishna, was slain by Bhima through Krishna's instigation. - T.

[‡] Vide Sabhā Parva, p. p. 61-73.—T.

T Vide Vana Parva, p. p. 64-67.-T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:22 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

very sea, he vanquished in battle Varuna himself in those watery depths, surrounded by all kinds of acquatic animals.19 Slaving in battle (the Danava named) Panchajana living in the depths of Pātāla, Hrishikesha obtained the celestial conch called Pānchajanya.20 The mighty Keçava, accompanied by Partha, having gratified Agni at Khandava, obtained his invincible weapon of fire, viz. his discus (called Sudarçana)."1 on Vinata's son and afrighting (the denizens of) Amaravati, the heroic Krishna brought from Mahendra himself (the celestial flower called) Pārijāta.  Knowing Krishna's prowess. Cakra quietly bore that act,* We have never heard that there is any one among the kings who has not been vanquished by Krishna, 13 That exceedingly wonderful feat also, O Sanjaya, which the lotus-eyed one performed in my court, who else is capable of performing it? 4 And since, humbled by devotion, I was suffered to behold Krishna as the Supreme Lord. everything (about that feat) is well-known to me, myself having witnessed it with my own eyes. 4 O Sanjaya, the end can never be seen of the (infinite) achievements of Hrishikeça of great energy and great intelligence.36 Gada, and Camva, and Pradyumna, and Viduratha, and Charudeshna, and Sarana,  and Ulmukha, and Niçatha, and the valiant Jhillivabhru, and and Viprithu, and Camika, and Arimejaya, 28—these and other mighty Vrishni heroes, accomplished in smiting, will. standing on the field of battle, take up their position in the Pandava host, 29 when summoned by that Vrishni hero, viz., the high-souled Keçava! Everything (on my side) will then be in great danger! Even this is what I think!10 where Janarddana is, there will be the heroic Rama, equal in strength to ten thousand elephants, resembling the Kailasa peak, decked with garlands of wild flowers, and armed with the plough. That Vasudeva, O Sanjaya, whom all the regenerate ones describe as the Father of all, will that Vasudeva fight for the sake of the Pandavas? 12 O son, O Sanjaya, if he puts on his armour for the sake of the Pandavas, there is none ^{*} Viz., the transplantation of the Parijata from Amaravati to the Earth. -T.

amongst us who can be his antagonist.88 If the Kauravas happen to vanquish the Pandavas, he of the Vrishni race will then, for the sake of the latter, take up his mighty weapon.34 And that tiger among men, that mighty-armed one, slaying then all the kings in battle as also all the Kauravas, will give away the whole Earth to Kunti.35 What car will advance in battle against that car which has Hrishikeça for its driver and Dhananjaya for its warrior? The Kurus cannot, by any Tell me, then, everything about how means, gain the victory. the battle took place. 37 Arjuna is Keçava's soul, and Krishna also is the soul of the diadem-decked (Kiritin). is always victory; in Krishna is always fame. 88 In all the worlds, Vibhatsu is invincible. In Keçava are infinite merits in excess. 89 The foolish Duryodhana, who doth not know Krishna or Keçava, seems, through Destiny, to have Death's noose before him.40 Alas, Duryodhana knows not Krishna of Daçarha's race and Arjuna the son of Pandu! These highsouled ones are ancient gods. They are even Nara and Narayana.41 On Earth they are seen by men as two separate forms though in reality they are both possessed but by one soul. With the mind alone, that invincible pair, of world-wide fame. can, if only they wish it, destroy this host! Only, in consequence of their humanity they do not wish it.* change of the Yuga, the death of Bhishma, O child, and the slaughter of the high-souled Drona, overturn the senses! Indeed, neither by Brahmacharya, nor by study of the Vedas, 42-44 nor by (religious) rites, nor by weapons, can any Hearing of the slaughter of Bhishma and one prevent death. Drona, those heroes accomplished in weapons, respected by all the worlds, and invincible in battle, why O Sanjaya, do I yet In consequence of the death of Bhishma and Drona, O Sanjaya, we will henceforth have to live as dependants on that prosperity beholding which in Yudhishthira we had before been so jealous! Indeed, this destruction of the Kurus hath come in consequence only of my acts. 45-47 O Suta, in killing those that are ripe for destruction, the very straw becomes the thunder-That prosperity is without end in this world which Yudhishthira is about to obtain,48 Yudhishthira, viz., through whose wrath both Bhishma and Drona have fallen! consequence of his very disposition hath Righteousness gone over to the side of Yudhishthira while it is hostile to my sons.43 Alas, time, so cruel, that hath now come for the destruction of all, cannot be overcome! Things calculated in one way, O son, by even men of intelligence, 50 become otherwise through This is what I think! Therefore, tell me everything Destiny. that has taken place during the progress of this unavoidable and dreadful calamity productive of the most sorrowful reflections and incapable of being crossed over (by us) !- "51

^{*} Though gods they have taken their births as men; and, as men, they must achieve their objects by human means. It is for this that they do not, by a fiat only of their will, destroy this host,-T.

SECTION XII.

"Sanjaya said,-Yes, as I saw everything with my own eyes, I will describe to thee how Drona fell down, slain by the Pandavas and the Srinjayas. Having obtained the command of the troops, that mighty car-warrior, viz., Bharadwajas son, said these words unto thy son in the midst of all the troops: - Inasmuch as, O king, thou hast honored me with the command of the troops immediately after that bull among the Kauravas, viz. the son of the Ocean-going (Gangā), take thou, O Bhārata, the adequate fruit of that act of thine! What business of thine shall I now achieve? Ask thou the boon that thou desirest!4___ Then king Duryodhana, having consulted with Karna and Duscasana and others, said unto the preceptor, that invincible warrior and foremost of all victors, these words:5-If thou wouldst give me a boon, then, seizing that foremost of car-warriors, viz., Yudhishthira, alive, bring him unto me here !6-Then that preceptor of the Kurus, hearing these words of thy son, returned him the following answer, gladdening all the troops therewith."-Praised be Kunti's son (Yudhishthira) whose seizure only thou desirest! O thou that art difficult of being vanquished, thou askest not any other boon, (one for example), for his slaughter! what reason, O tiger among men, dost thou not desire his death?

Thou art, without doubt, O Duryodhana, not ignorant of policy? Why, therefore, dost thou not allude to Yudhishthira's death? It is a matter of great wonder that king Yudhishthira the just hath no enemy desirous of his death! Inasmuch as thou wishest him to be alive, thou (either) seekest to preserve thy race from extinction,10 or, O chief of the Bharatas, thou, having vanquished the Pandavas in battle, art desirous of establishing brotherly relations (with them) by giving them their kingdom !14 Auspicious was the birth of that intelligent prince! Truly is he called Ajātaçatru (the foeless one) for even thou bearest affection for him !13-Thus addressed by Drona, O Bharata, the feeling that is ever present in thy son's breast suddenly made itself known.18 Not even persons like Vrihaspati can conceal the expressions of their countenance. For this, thy son, O king: filled with joy, said these words:14-By the slaughter of Kunti's son in battle, O preceptor, victory cannot be mine! If Yudhishthira were slain, Partha then, without doubt, would slay all of us " All of them, again, cannot be slain by the very gods. amongst them that will, in that case, survive, will exterminate Yudhishthira, however, is truthful in his promises. brought hither (alive), vanquished once more at dice, the Pandayas will once more go to the woods for they are all obedient to Yudhishthira!17 It is evident that such a victory will be an enduring one. It is for this that I do not, by any means, desire the slaughter of king Yudhisthira the just.18—Ascertaining this crooked purpose of Duryodhana, Drona who was conversant with the truths of the science of Profit and gifted with great intelligence, reflected a little and gave him the boon, circumscribing it in the following way.19

"'Drona said,—If the heroic Arjuna do not protect Yudhishthira in battle, thou mayst think the eldest Pāndava as already brought under thy control. As regards Pārtha, the very gods and the Asuras together, headed by Indra, cannot advance against him in battle. It is for this that I dare not do what thou askest me to do! Without doubt, Arjuna is my disciple and I was his first preceptor in arms. He is, however, young, endued with great good fortune, and excessively intent (on the achievement of his purposes). He hath obtained, again, many weapons from Indra and Rudra. He hath, besides, been provoked by thee. I dare not, therefore, do what thou askest me !as Let Arjuna be removed, by what means soever that can be done, from the battle. Upon Pārtha being withdrawn, thou mayst regard king Yudhishthira as already vanquished. Upon his seizure is victory and not upon his slaughter, O bull among men! Even by this stratagem, can his seizure be accomplished !as Seizing that king devoted to truth and righteousness, I will, without doubt, O monarch, bring him to thy control this very day, if he stays before me in battle even for a moment, of course, if Dhananjaya the son of Kunti, that tiger among men, be withdrawn from the field. In Phālgunas' presence, however, O king, Yudhishthira is incapable of being taken in battle by even the gods and the Asuras headed by Indra!—'228

"Sanjaya continued,—"After Drona had promised the king's seizure even under these limitations, thy foolish sons regarded Yudhishthira as already taken." Thy son (Duryodhana) knew Drona's partiality for the Pāndavas. In order to make Drona stick to his promise, therefore, he divulged those counsels. Then, O chastiser of foes, the fact of Drona's having promised to seize the (eldest) Pāndava was proclaimed by Duryodhana unto all his troops."

SECTION XIII.

"Sanjaya said,—'After Drona had promised the king's seizure under those limitations, thy troops, hearing of (that promise about) Yudhishthira's capture, uttered many leonine shouts, mingling them with the whizz of their arrows and the blare of their conchs. King Yudhishthira the just, however, O Bhārata, soon learnt in detail, through his spies, everything about the purpose upon which Bharadwāja's son was intent. Then bringing together all his brothers and all the other kings of his army, king Yudhishthira the just addressed Dhananjaya, saying,—Thou hast heard, O tiger among men, about the intention of Drona! Let such measures, therefore, be adopted as may prevent the accomplishment of that purpose. It is true,

Drona, that grinder of foes, hath vowed his pledge, subject to limitations. Those limitations, however, O great bowman, rest on thee! Fight thou, therefore, today, O thou of mighty arms, in my vicinity, so that Duryodhana may not obtain from Drona the fruition of his desire!—

"'Arjuna said,—As the slaughter of my preceptor can never be accomplished by me, so, O king, I can never consent to give thee up ! O son of Pandu, I would rather yield up my life in battle than fight against my preceptor! This son of Dhritarashtra desireth sovereignty, having seized thee as a captive in battle! In this world he will never obtain the fruition of that desire of his ! The firmament itself with its stars may fall down. The Earth herself may split into fragments. Yet Drona will, surely, never succeed in seizing thee as long as I am alive !10 If the wielder of the thunderbolt himself, or Vishnu at the head of the gods, assist him in battle, still shall he not succeed in seizing thee on the field!" As long as I am alive, O great king, it behoveth thee not to entertain any fear of Drona although he is the foremost of all wielders of weapons !13 I further say unto thee. O monarch, that my promise never remains unfulfilled. I do not recollect having ever spoken any untruth. I do not recollect having ever been vanquished! I do not recollect having ever, after making a vow, left the least part of it unfulfilled !'-13

"Sanjaya continued,—'Then, O king, conchs and drums and cymbals and smaller drums were sounded and beat in the Pāndava camp. 4 And the high-souled Pāndavas uttered many leonine shouts. These and the awful twang of their bowstrings and the slaps of their palms touched the very heaven.15 Hearing that loud blare of conchs that arose from the camp of the mighty son of Pandu, diverse instruments were sounded amongst thy divisions also.16 Then thy divisions as also those of theirs were arrayed in order of battle. And slowly they advanced against each other from desire of battle.17 Then commenced a battle, that was fierce and that made the hair to stand on end, between the Pandavas and the Kurus, and Drona and the Panchalas.18 The Srinjayas, though struggling vigorously, were unable to beat in battle the host of Drona, protected as it was by Drona himself.19 And so also the mighty car-warriors of thy son, skilled in smiting, could not beat the Pandava host. protected as it was by the diadem-decked (Arjuna).20 by Drona and Arjuna, both hosts seemed to stand inactive like two blossoming forests in the silence of the night.21 Then he of the golden car, (viz., Drona) like the Sun himself of great splendor, crushing the ranks of the Pandavas, careered through them at will.22 And the Pandavas, and the Srinjayas, through fear, regarded that single warrior of great activity upon his quickly-moving car as if multiplied into many.38 Shot by him, terrible shafts coursed in all directions, frightening, Oking, the army of Pandu's son.24 Indeed, Drona then seemed as the Sun himself at midday covered by a hundred rays of light. And as the Danavas were unable to look at Indra, so there was not one among the Pandavas, who, O monarch, was able to look at the angry son of Bharadwaja in that battle.46 The valiant son of Bharadwaja then, having confounded the (hostile) troops, speedily began to consume the division of Dhrishtadyumna by means of sharp shafts. 27 covering and obstructing all the points of the compass by means of his straight shafts, he began to crush the Pandava force even there where Prishata's son was." "28

Generated on 2022-03-03-12:22 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized ,

SECTION XIV.

"Sanjaya said,-'Then Drona, causing a great confusion in the Pandava host, careered through it like a conflagration consuming (a forest of) trees! Beholding that angry warrior owning a golden car consume their divisions like a raging conflagration, the Srinjayas trembled (in fear).2 The twang, in that battle, of the constantly stretched bow of that warrior of great activity was heard to resembe the roar of the thunder. Fierce shafts shot by Drona endued with great lightness of hands, began to crush car-warriors and horsemen and elephant-warriors and ^{*} The Bengal texts read this verse incorrectly. For prataptam the correct reading is satutam; and for anukarinas the correct word is açukārinas.-T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:22 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

foot-soldiers along with elephants and steeds. Showering his arrows as the roaring clouds at the close of summer, assisted by the wind, pour hail-stones, he inspired fear in the hearts of the Careering (through the hostile ranks), O king, and agitating the troops, the mighty Drona enhanced the unnatural fear entertained by the enemy. The gold-decked bow, on his quickly-moving car, was repeatedly seen to resemble the lightning's flash amid a mass of dark clouds.7 That hero, firm in truth, endued with wisdom, and always devoted, besides, to righteousness, caused an awful river of angry current, such as may be seen at the end of the Yuga, to flow there.8 And that river had its source in the impetuosity of Drona's wrath, and it was haunted by crowds of carnivorous creatures. And the combatants constituted the waves that filled its entire surface. heroic warriors constituted the trees on its banks whose roots were constantly eaten away by its current.9 And its waters were constituted by the blood that was shed in that battle, and cars constituted its eddies, and elephants and steeds formed its And coats of mail constituted its lilies, and the flesh of creatures the mire on its bed.10 And the fat, marrow, and bones (of fallen animals and men) formed the sands on its beach, and (fallen) head-gears its froth. And the battle itself that was fought there constituted the cloudy canopy above its surface. And lances constituted the fish with which it abounded.11 it was inaccessible in consequence of the large numbers of (slain) men, elephants, and steeds (that fell in it). impetus of the shafts shot constituted its current. slain bodies themselves constituted the timber floating on it. And cars constituted its tortoises.12 And heads constituted the stones scattered on its banks and bed, and scimitars its fish in And cars and elephants formed its lakes. was decked with many adornments.13 And mighty car-warriors constituted its hundreds of little whirlpools. And the dust of And capable of being easily the earth constituted its wavelets. crossed by those possessed of exceeding energy, it was incapable of being crossed by the timid.14 And heaps of dead bodies constituted the sand-banks obstructing its navigation. the haunt of Kankas and vultures and other birds of prey.

And it carried away thousands of mighty car-warriors to the abode of Yama.15 And long spears constituted the snakes that infested it in profusion. And the living combatants constituted the fowl sporting on its waters.* Torn umbrellas constituted its large swans. Diadems formed the (smaller) birds that adorned Wheels constituted its turtles, and maces its alligators, And it was the resort of frightful and arrows its smaller fish. swarms of crows and vultures and jackalls.17 And that river, O best of kings, bore away in hundreds, to the regions of the Pitris, the creatures that were slain by Drona in battle.18 Obstructed by hundreds of bodies (floating on it), the hair (of slain warriors and animals) constituted its moss and weeds, Even such was the river, enhancing the fears of the timid, that Drona caused to flow there. +19

"'And when Drona was thus grinding the hostile army hither and thither, the Pandava warriors headed by Yudhishthira rushed at that mighty car-warrior from all sides. 20 thus rushing (towards Drona), brave combatants of thy army, possessed of unyielding prowess, received from every And the battle that thereupon ensued made the hair to stand Cakuni, full of a hundred kinds of deceipt, rushed towards Sahadeva, and pierced the latter's charioteer, and standard, and car, with many keen-pointed shafts.22 however, without being much excited, cutting off Sauvala's standard and bow and car-driver and car, with sharp arrows, pierced Sauvala himself with sixty shafts.28 Thereupon Suvala's son, taking up a mace, jumped down from his excellent car; and with that mace, O king, he felled Sahadeva's driver from the latter's car.24 Then those two heroic and mighty warriors, O monarch, both deprived of car, and both armed with mace, sported in battle like two crests of hills.25

^{*} The Bengal reading is Cura-vyála. The Bombay text reads Cula-I adopt the latter. Vājinas, in Prāni-vāji-nishevitam, is explained by Nilakantha to mean fowl or birds.—T.

[†] It is evident that the very minuteness with which the comparions is sought to be sustained destroys the effect. Regarding the respetitions, they are just such as one may expect to find in verses composed exten pore.-T.

http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-googl Generated on 2022-02-03 12:22 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized / having pierced the ruler of the Panchalas with ten shafts, was, in return, pierced by the latter with many shafts. And the latter was again, pierced by Drona with a larger number of Bhimasena pierced Vivingçati with twenty sharp The latter, however, thus pierced, trembled not, which seemed to be highly wonderful.27 Vivingçati then, O monarch, suddenly deprived Bhimasena of his steeds and standard and And thereupon all the troops worshipped him for that The heroic Bhimasena, however, brooked not that exhibition of prowess by his enemy in battle. With his mace, therefore, he slew the well-trained steeds of Vivingcati.29 Then the mighty Vivingçati, taking up a shield (and sword), jumped down from that car whose steeds had been slain, and rushed against Bhimasena like an infuriate elephant rushing against an infuriate compeer. 30 The heroic Calya, laughing the while, pierced, as if in dalliance, his own dear nephew Nakula with many . shafts for angering him. 81 The valiant Nakula, however. cutting off his uncle's steeds and umbrella and standard and charioteer and bow in that battle, blew his conch. 22 Dhrishtaketu. engaged with Kripa, cut off diverse kinds of arrows shot at him by the latter, and then pierced Kripa with seventy arrows. then he cut off the device of Kripa's standard with three arrows. 53 Kripa, however, began to oppose him with a thick shower of arrows. And resisting him in this way, the Brahmana fought on with Dhrishtaketu.34 Sātyaki, laughing the while, pierced Kritavarman in the centre of the chest with a long arrow. piercing him then with seventy arrows, he once more pierced him with many others. 55 The Bhoja warrior, however, in return, pierced Sātyaki with seven and seventy arrows of keen points. Like the swiftly-coursing winds failing to move a mountain. Kritavarman was unable to move Sātyaki or make him. Senāpati deeply struck Suçarman in his vitals. Sucarman also struck his antagonist with a lance on the should-Virāta, aided by his Matsya warriors of great energy, resisted Vikartana's son in that battle. And that feat (of the Matsya king) seemed highly wonderful.88 Even this was regarded an act of great valor on the part of the Suta's son in that he singly resisted that whole force by means of his straight shafts. 83 King Drupada was engaged with Bhaga-And the battle between those two warriors beautiful to behold.40 That bull among men, viz., Phagadatta, pierced king Drupada and his driver and standard and car with many straight shafts.41 Then Drupada, excited with wrath, quickly pierced that mighty car-warrior in the chest with a straight shaft.42 Those two foremost of warriors on earth, viz., Somadatta's son and Cikhandin, both conversant with every weapon, encountered each other in fierce battle that made all creatures tremble with fear.48 The valiant Bhuricravas, O king, covered that mighty car-warrior, viz., Yajnasena's son Cikhandin, with a thick shower of arrows.44 Cikhandin then. O monarch, excited with wrath, pierced Somadatta's son with ninety shafts, and caused him, O Bharata, to tremble.45 Rākshasas of fierce deeds, viz., Hidimbā's son and Alamvusha, each desirous of vanquishing the other, battled most wonder-Both capable of creating a hundred illusions, both swelling with pride, battled with each other most wonderfully, relying on their powers of illusion, and each desirous of vanquishing the other.47 The fierce Chekitana battled with Anu-They coursed on the field, disappearing at times, and causing great wonder.48 Lakshmana fought fiercely with Kshatradeva, even as Vishnu, O monarch, in days of old, with the (Asura) Hiranyāksha.49 With his fleet steeds and upon his car duly equipt, Paurava, O king, roared at Abhimanyu.50 Endued with great might, Paurava then rushed at Abhimanyu, Then that chastiser of foes, viz., Abhidesirous of battle. manyu, fought fiercely with that foe.51 Paurava covered Subhadra's son with a thick shower of arrows. Thereupon Arjuna's son felled his antagonist's standard and umbrella and bow on Then piercing Paurava with seven other arrows, Subhadra's son pierced the latter's driver and steeds with five Gladdening his troops thus, he then repeatedly roared like a lion. Then Arjuna's son quickly fixed an arrow on his bowstring that was certain to take away Paurava's life.54

^{*} This verse is read incorrectly in the Bengal texts. For hayan read Dhanus .- T.

Beholding, however, that arrow of frightful mien fixed on Abhimanyu's bowstring, Hridika's son, with two shafts, cut off that bow and arrow.55 Then that slayer of hostile heroes, viz. Subhadra's son, throwing aside that broken bow, took up a bright sword and a shield. 66 Whirling with great activity that shield decked with many stars, and whirling that sword also, he coursed on the field, exhibiting his prowess. 67 ling them before him, and whirling them on high, now shaking them and now jumping up himself, from the manner of his handling those weapons, it seemed that (with him) there was no difference between that offensive and that defensive weapon.58 Jumping suddenly then upon the shafts of Paurava's car, he roared aloud. Mounting next upon his car, he seized Paurava by the hair, 59 and slaying, meanwhile, with a kick, the latter's driver, he felled his standard with a stroke of his sword. as regards Paurava himself, Abhimanyu raised him up like Garuda raising a snake from the bottom of the sea, agitating the Thereupon all the kings beheld Paurava (standing helpless) with dishevelled hair, and looking like an ox deprived of its senses while on the point of being slain by a lion.61 holding Paurava thus prostrated, placed under the centrol of Ariuna's son, and dragged helplessly, Jayadratha was unable to brook it.62 Taking up a sword as also a shield that bore the device of a peacock and was decked with a hundred bells of small size suspended in rows, Jayadratha jumped down from his car with a loud roar.68 Then Krishna's son (Abhimanyu), beholding the ruler of the Sindhus, let Paurava alone. and leaping up like a hawk from the latter's car, quickly alighted on the earth.64 The lances and axes and scimitars hurled by his foes, Krishna's son cut off by means of his sword or warded off by his shield.65 Thus showing unto all the warriors the strength of his own arms, the mighty [and heroic] Abhimanyu, once more upraising his large and heavy sword as also his shield,*66 proceeded towards Vriddhakshatra's son who was a sworn foe of his (Abhimanyu's) father, like a tiger proceeding against an elephant. Approaching, they cheerfully attacked each other with their swords like a tiger and a lion with their claws and teeth.68 And none could notice any distinction between those two lions among men as regards the whirl, strokes, and descent of their swords and shields.*69 as regards the descent and the whizz of their swords, and the warding off of each other's blows, it seemed there was no distinction between the two.70 Coursing beautifully in outward and inward tracks, those two illustrious warriors then seemed to be like two winged mountains.71 Then Jayadratha struck on the shield of the renowned Abhimanyu when the latter stretched his sword for making a pass at him.72 Then, O Bharata, Jayadratha's large sword sticking into Abhimanyu's covered with golden plate, broke as the ruler of the Sindhus attempted to draw it off forcibly.79 Seeing his sword break. Jayadratha hastily retreated six steps and was seen within a twinkle of the eye to be mounted on his own car.74 Krishna's son also, that combat with the sword being over, ascended his own excellent car. Many kings then, of the Kuru army, uniting together, surrounded him on all sides.76 mighty son of Arjuna, however, eyeing Jayadratha, whirled his sword and shield, and uttered a loud shout.76 Having vanquished the ruler of the Sindhus, Subhadra's son, that slayer of hostile heroes, then began to scorch that division of the Kaurava army like the Sun scorching the world." that battle Calya hurled at him a fierce dart made wholly of iron, decked with gold, and resembling a blazing flame of fire.78 Thereupon Krishna's son, jumping up, caught hold of that dart like Garuda catching a mighty snake falling from above. And having seized it thus, Abhimanyu unsheathed his sword.79 Witnessing the great activity and might of that warrior of immeasurable energy, all the kings together uttered a leonine shout.80 Then that slayer of hostile heroes, viz., the son of Subhadra, hurled with the might of his arms at Calya himself that very dart of great effulgence decked with stones of lapis lazuli.81 Resembling a snake that has recently cast off its slough, that dart, reaching Calya's car, slew the latter's

The word "heroic" occurs in the next verse .- T.

^{*} The words in the original are Sampata, Abhighata, and Nipata.-T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:22 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

driver and felled him from his niche in the vehicle. 22 Virāta and Drupada, and Dhrishtaketu and Yudhishthira, and Sātyaki, and Kekaya, and Bhima, and Dhrishtadyumna, and Cikhandin,88 and the twins (Nakula and Sahadeva), and the five sons of Draupadi, all exclaimed, -Excellent, Excellent! And diverse kinds of sounds due to the shooting of arrows, and many leonine shouts, 84 arose there, gladdening the unretreating Thy sons, however, could not brook those son of Ariuna. indications of the victory of their foe.85 Then all of them suddenly surrounded Subhadra's son and covered him, O king, with showers of arrows like the clouds pouring rain on the mountain-broast.86 Then that slayer of foes, viz., Artayani (Calya), wishing the good of thy sons and remembering the overthrow of his own driver, rushed in rage against Subhadrā's son.' "87

SECTION XV.

"Dhritarashtra said,—'Thou hast, O Sanjaya, described to me many excellent single combats. Hearing about them, I envy those that have eyes.1 This battle between the Kurus and the Pandavas, resembling that (of old) between the gods and the Asuras, will be spoken of as exceedingly wonderful by all men.2 I am scarcely gratified with listening to thy narrations of this excellent battle. Tell me, therefore, about this combat between Artāyani (Calya) and Subhadrā's son!'s

"Sanjaya said,—'Beholding his driver slain, Calya, upraising a mace made wholly of iron, jumped down in rage from his excellent car. Bhima then, taking up his own huge mace, quickly rushed towards Calya who then resembled the blazing Yuga fire or the Destroyer himself armed with his bludgeon. Subhadra's son also, taking up a prodigious mace resembling the bolt of heaven, addressed Calya, saying, -Come, Come!-Bhima, however, with much ado, persuaded him to stand aside. The valiant Bhimasena then, having persuaded Subhadra's son to stand aside, approached Calya in battle and stood immovable The mighty ruler of the Madras also, beholding Bhima, proceeded towards him like a tiger towards an elephant. Then was heard there the loud blare of trumpets and conchs by thousands, and leonine shouts, and the loud noise of drums. And loud cries of-Excellent, Excellent,-arose among hundreds of Pandava and Kauriva warriors rushing towards each other.10 None else among all the kings, O Bhārata, save the ruler of the Madras can venture to bear the might of Bhimasena in battle.11 Similarly, who else, save Vrikodara, in the world, can venture to bear the impetus of the illustrious Calva's mace in battle ?12 Bound in hempen strings mixed with wires of gold, the prodigious mace, capable of gladdening all spectators, of Bhima, being grasped by him, shone brilliantly.18 similarly the mace of Calya also, who coursed in beautiful circles, looked like a blazing flash of lightning.14 them roared like bulls, and both coursed in circles. And both Calya and Vrikodara, standing as they did, with their maces slightly bent, looked like a couple of horned bulls.15 as regards coursing in circles or in whirling and striking with their maces, the combat that took place between those two lions among men was every way equal.16 Struck by Bhimasena with his mace, the prodigious mace of Calya, emitting fierce sparks of fire, speedily broke unto fragments.17 And similarly Bhimasena's mace, struck by the foe, looked beautiful like a tree covered with fire-flies during the season of rains at even-And the mace that the ruler of the Madras hurled in that battle, irradiating the welkin, O Bhārata, frequently caused sparks of fire (to fly around).19 Similarly the mace hurled by Bhimasena at the foe scorched his antagonist's forces like a fierce meteor falling down (from the firmament).20 both those best of maces, striking against each other, resembled sighing she-snakes and caused flashes of fire. 21 Like two large tigers attacking each other with their claws, or like two mighty elephants with their tusks, those two mighty warriors coursed in circles, encountering each other with those two foremost of maces with which they were armed.22 Struck then with those foremost of maces and soon covered with blood, those two illustrious warriors seemed to resemble a couple of flowering Kincukas.28 And the blows, loud as Indra's thunder, of the maces wielded by those two lions among men was heard on all sides.24 Struck by the ruler of the Madras with his mace on both the left and the right side, Bhima moved not in the least, like a hill riven by the thunder.26 Similarly the mighty ruler of the Madras, struck by Bhima with his mace, patiently stood still like a hill struck with the thunder.26 Both of them. with upraised maces, endued as they were with great impetus, fell upon each other, coursing in shorter circles.37 Quickly nearing each other then by eight steps and falling upon each other like two elephants, they suddenly struck each other with those maces of theirs made entirely of iron. ss And each of those heroes, in consequence of the other's impetuosity and violently struck with the other's mace, fell down at the same instant of time with the other, like a couple of Indra's poles. 20 Then the mighty car-warrior Kritavarman quickly approached Calya, who, deprived of his senses, was breathing hard as he lay on the field. 30 And beholding him, O king, struck violently with the mace, and writhing like a snake, and deprived of his senses in a swoon,³¹ the mighty car-warrior Kritavarman, taking him upon his car, quickly bore the ruler of the Madras away from the field.32 Reeling like a drunken man, the heroic Bhima of mighty arms, rising up within the twinkling of an eye, stood mace in hand.83 Thy sons then, beholding the ruler of the Madras turn away from the fight, began, O sire, to tremble, along with their elephants, and foot-soldiers, and cavalry, and cars. 4 Grinded then by the Pandavas desirous of victory, those warriors of thy army, struck with fear, fled away in all directions, like masses of clouds driven away by the wind. 55 And those mighty car-warriors, viz., the Pandavas, having vanquished the Dhartarashtras, looked resplendent in that battle, O king, like blazing fires. 56 And they uttered loud leonine roars, and blew their conchs, filled with joy. And they beat their drums, large and small, and cymbals and other instruments." ""

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:22 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

SECTION XVI.

"Sanjaya said,—'Beholding that army of thine exceedingly broken, the valiant Vrishasena, single-handed, began to protect it, O king, displaying the illusion of his weapons,1

Vrishasens in that battle, thousands of arrows coursed in all directions, piercing through men and steeds and cars and ele-

Mighty arrows, of blazing effulgence, shot by him,

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:22 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access_use#pd-google

coursed in thousands, like the rays, O monarch, of the Sun in the summer season.3 Afflicted and crushed therewith, O king, car-warriors and horse-men suddenly fell down on the earth like trees broken by the wind.4 The mighty car-warrior Vrishasena. O king, felled large bodies of steeds, of cars, and of elephants, in that battle, in thousands. Beholding that single warrior coursing fearlessly on the field, all the kings (of the Pandava army), uniting together, surrounded him on all sides. Nakula's son Catanika rushed at Vrishasena and pierced him with ten arrows capable of penetrating into the very vitals.7 The son of Karna, however, cutting off his bow, felled then his standard. Thereupon the other sons of Draupadi, desirous of rescuing that brother of theirs, rushed at him.* And soon they made Karna's son invisible by means of their arrowy showers. Against them thus smiting (the son of Karna), many car-warriors headed by Drona's son (Acwatthaman) rushed. And these, O monarch, quickly covered those mighty car-warriors, viz., the sons of Draupadi, with diverse kinds of arrows like clouds pouring rain on mountain breasts.10 Thereupon the Pandavas, from affection for their sons, quickly encountered those assailants.11 then that took place between thy troops and those of the Pandayas, was exceedingly fierce and made the hair to stand on end, resembling as it did that between the gods and the Danavas.12 Even thus did the heroic Kauravas and the Pandavas, excited with rage, fight, eyeing one another (furiously) and having incurred one another's animosity for past offences.18 bodies of those heroes of immeasurable energy then seemed, in consequence of (the) wrath (that inspired them), to resemble those of Garuda and (mighty) Nagas battling in the sky.14 And with Bhima and Karna and Kripa and Drona and Drona's son and Prishata's son and Sātyaki, the field of battle looked resplendent like the all-destructive Sun that rises at the end of the Yuga,15 The battle that took place between those mighty men engaged with mighty antagonists, and all smiting one another, was fierce in the extreme, resembling that (of 7 yore) between the Danavas and the gods.16 Then Yudhishthira's host, uttering a noise loud as that of the surging sea, began to slaughter thy troops, the great car-warriors of thy army having fled away.17 Beholding the (Kaurava) host broken and excessively mangled by the foe, Drona said .-Ye heroes, ye need not fly away !18-Then he (viz., Drona) owning red steeds, excited with wrath and resembling a (fierce) elephant with four tusks, penetrated into the Pandays host and rushed against Yudhishthira.19 Then Yudhishthira pierced the preceptor with many whetted arrows equipt with Kanka feathers. Drona, however, cutting off Yudhishthira's bow, rushed impetuously at him. 20 Then the protector of Yudhishthira's car-wheels, viz., Kumāra, the renowned prince of the Panchalas, received the advancing Drona like the continent receiving the surging sea.21 Beholding Drona, that bull among Brahmanas held in check by Kumara, loud leonine shouts were heard there with cries of Excellent, Excellent !29___ Kumāra then, in that great battle, excited with rage, pierced Drona with an arrow in the chest and uttered many leonine shouts.* Having checked Drona in battle, the mighty Kumara, endued with great lightness of hand and above all fatigue, pierced him with many thousands of arrows.24 that bull among men (viz., Drona) slew that protector of Yudhishthira's car-wheels, viz., Kumāra, that hero observant of virtuous vows and accomplished in both mantras and wear-And then penetrating into the midst of the (Pandava) host and careering in all directions, that bull among men, viz. Bharadwaja's son, became the protector of thy troops.26 piercing Cikhandin with twelve arrows, and Uttamaujas with twenty, and Nakula with five, and Sahadeva with seven,27 and Yudhishthira with twelve, and each of the (five) sons of Draupadi with three, and Satyaki with five, and the ruler of the Matsyas with ten arrows,28 and agitating the entire host in that battle, he rushed against the foremost warriors (of the Pandayas) And then he advanced against Kunti's son one after another. Yudhishthira from desire of seizing him. 29 Then Yugandhara. O king, checked Bharadwaja's son, that mighty car-warrior filled with rage and resembling the very ocean lashed into fury

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:22 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112
Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google

by the tempest.30 Bharadwaja's son, however, having pierced Yudhishthira with many straight arrows, felled Yugandhara with a broad-headed shaft from his niche in the car. 81 Virāta, and Drupada, and the Kaikeya princes, and Sātvaki. and Civi, and Vyaghradatta the prince of the Panchalas, and the valiant. Singhasena,32 these, and many others, desirous of rescuing Yudhishthira, surrounded Drona on all sides, and impeded his way, scattering countless arrows. 38 Vyaghradatta, the prince of the Panchalas, pierced Drona with fifty keenpointed arrows, at which, O king, the troops uttered loud Then: Singhasena also, quickly piercing that mighty car-warrior, viz., Drona, roared aloud in joy, striking terror into the hearts of mighty car-warriors. 55 Drona then, expanding his eyes and rubbing his bowstring and producing loud slaps of his palms, rushed against the latter.36 Then the mighty son of Bharadwaja, putting forth his prowess, cut off with a couple of broad-headed arrows the heads decked with earrings from the trunks of both Singhasena and Vyaghradatta. 87 And afflicting also, with his arrowy showers, the other mighty car-warriors of the Pandavas, he stood in the front of Yudhishthira's car like all-destroying Death himself.88 Then, O king, loud cries were heard among the warriors of Yudhishthira's army to the effect,—The king is slain,—when Bharadwaja's son of regulated vows thus stood in his vicinage.39 And the warriors there all exclaimed, beholding Drona's prowess,-Today the royal son of Dhritarashtra will be crowned with success !40 This very moment, Drona, having seized Yudhishthira, will, filled with joy, assuredly come to us and Duryodhana's presence.41—While thy soldiers were indulging in such talk, Kunti's son (Arjuna) quickly came there, filling (the welkin) with the rattle of his car,48 and creating, as he came, owing to the carnage he caused, a river whose waters were blood, and whose eddies were cars, and which abounded with the bones and bodies of brave warriors, and which bore creatures away to where the spirits of the departed dwell.43 And the son of Pandu came there, routing the Kurus, and quickly crossing that river whose froth was constituted by showers of arrows and which abounded with fish in the form of tances and other weapons.44 And the diadem-decked (Arjuna) suddenly came upon Drona's division, covering it with a thick network of arrows and confounding the very senses (of those that followed Incessantly placing his arrows on the bowstring and quickly shooting them, none could notice any lapse of time between these two acts of the renowned son of Kunti-Neither the (four cardinal) directions, nor the welkin, nor the firmament above, nor the earth, O king, could any longer be distinguished, for everything then became one continuous mass of arrows.47 Indeed, O king, when the wielder of Gandiva caused that thick darkness by means of his arrows, nothing could be seen in that battle.48 Just then the Sun also set, enveloped with a dusty cloud. Niether friend nor foe could any longer be distinguished.49 Then Drona and Duryodhana and others caused the withdrawal of their troops. taining the foe to be inspired with fear and unwilling to continue the fight, 50 Vibhatsu also slowly caused his troops Then the Pandavas and the Srinjayas and to be withdrawn. the Panchalas, filled with joy, praised Partha with delightful speeches like the Rishis praising the Sun. Having vanquished his foes thus, Dhananjaya then, filled with joy, retired to his tent, proceeding in the rear of the whole army, with Keçava as his companion. 51-52 And stationed on his beautiful car decked with the costliest specimens of sapphires and rubies and gold and silver and diamonds and corals and crystals, the son of Pandu looked resplendent like the moon in the firmament bespangled with stars." "58

SECTION XVII.

(Samsaptaka-badha Purva.)

"Sanjaya said,—'The troops of both armies, having proceeded to their tents, duly took up their quarters, O king, according to the divisions and the sub-divisions to which they belonged.' Having withdrawn the troops, Drona, in great cheerlessness of mind, beholding Duryodhana, said these words in shame: "—I told thee before that when Dhananjaya is by, Yudhishthira is incapable of being seized in battle by the very gods. Although all of you fell upon him in battle, yet Partha frustrated all your attempts. Do not doubt what I say; Krishna, and Pāndu's son (Arjuna) are invincible! If, however, Arjuna of white steeds can, by any means, be withdrawn (from Yudhishthira's side), then Yudhishthira, O king, shall soon come under thy control! Let some one, challenging him (Arjuna) in battle draw him away to some other part of the field. The son of Kunti will not return without vanquishing him. Meanwhile, when Arjuna will not be by, I, O monarch, will seize king Yudhishthira the just, penetrating through the Pandava host in the very sight of Dhrishta-Thus, O monarch, I will, without doubt, bring dyumna!7 Yudhishthira the son of Dharma, along with his followers, under control! If that son of Pandu stays even for a moment before me in battle, I will bring him a captive from the field. That feat will be more advantageous than victory (over the Pāndava army) !9—'

"Sanjaya continued,—'Hearing those words of Drona, the ruler of the Trigartas, O monarch, with his brothers, said these words:10—We, O king, are always humiliated by the wielder of Gandiva! O bull of Bharata's race, although we have done him no injury, yet he hath always injured us!12 Remembering all those diverse instances of humiliation, we burn in wrath and are never able to sleep at night!18 good luck, that Arjuna, armed with weapons, will stand before us. That, therefore, which is in our heart and which we strive to accomplish, we are resolved to achieve now,18 that, viz., which will be agreeable to thee, and which will bring us Taking him out of the field we will slay him.14 Let the earth today be without Arjuna or let it be without the Trigartas! We truly swear this before thee! This our vow will never be false !15—And Satyaratha and Satyavarman, O Bhārata, and Satyavrata and Satyeshu, and Satyakarman also, having spoken similarly,16—those five brothers together,—with ten thousand cars, came, O king, (before Duryodhana), having taken that oath on the field of battle.17 And the Malavas, and the Tundikerss with thirty thousand cars, and that tiger among men, viz., Suçarman, the ruler of Prasthala,18 with the

Mavelakas, the Lilithyas, and the Madrakas, accompanied by ten thousand cars and his brothers,19 and with another ten thousand cars from diverse realms came forward for taking Then bringing fire, and each making preparations for igniting one for himself, they took up ropes of Kuca grass and beautiful coats of mail.21 And equipt in mail. bathed in clarified butter, clad in robes of Kuça grass, and with their bowstrings serving as girdles, those heroes, who had given away thousands and hundreds as (sacrificial) presents to Brahmanas,22 who had performed many sacrifices, had been blessed with children, and were deserving of blessed regions hereafter, who had nothing more to do in this world, who were prepared to lay down their lives in battle, and who devoted their souls to the attainment of fame and victory,23 who were desirous of soon repairing by fair fight to those regions (hereafter) that are attainable by means only of sacrifices with abundant presents to Brahmanas, and by means also of rites the chief amongst which are Brahmacharya and study of the Vedas,24 those heroes, having each gratified Brahmanas by giving them gold,* and kine, and robes, and having addressed one another in loving discourse,25 ignited those fires and took that vow in battle. And in the presence of those fires, firmly resolved, they took that vow.26, And having made that vow for the slaughter of Dhananjaya, they then, in the hearing of all creatures, very loudly said,27-Those regions that are for persons who have never adopted any vows, those that are for persons that slay a Brahmana, those regions that are for one who drinketh wine, those that are for him who hath adulters ous connection with his preceptor's wife, 38 those that are for him who robbeth the property of a Brahmana, or for him who enjoyeth the king's grant without satisfying the condition of that grant, or for him who abandoneth one asking for shelter, or for him who slayeth a candidate for his favor, 29 those that are for persons that set fire to houses and for those that slay kine, those regions that are for those that injure others, those that are for persons harbouring malice against Brahmanas, those that are for him who from folly doth not seek the companionship of his wife in her season, those also that are for those that seek the companionship of women on the day they have to perform the Crāddha of their ancestors, those that are for persons that injure their own selves, 31 or for those that misappropriate what is deposited with them from confidence, or for those that destroy learning, or for those that battle with eunuchs, or for those that follow persons that are mean, so those regions that are for atheists, or for those that abandon their (sacred) fires and mothers, and those regions also that are for the sinful, those shall be ours 38 if without slaying Dhananjaya we return from the field, or if, grinded by him on the field, we turn back from fear !84 If, again, we succeed in achieving in battle feats the most difficult of accomplishment in the world, we shall then, without doubt, obtain the most desirable regions! 55 — Having said these words, O king, those heroes then marched to battle, summoning Arjuna towards the southern part of the field.86. That tiger among men, and subjugater of hostile cities, viz., Arjuna, thus challenged by them, said these words unto king Yudhishthira the just without any delay: 37-Summoned, I never turn back. This is my fixed vow. men, sworn to conquer or die, are summoning me, O king, to great battle ! This Sucarman here, with his brothers, summoneth me to battle. It behoveth thee to grant me permission for slaying him with all his followers. 30 O bull among men, I am unable to brooke this challenge. I tell thee truly, know these foes to be (already) slain in battle !40—

^{*} Nishka, litterally, a golden coin, whose weight is diversely stated by diverse authorities.—T.

"'Yudhishthira said,—Thou hast heard, O child, in detail, what Drona hath resolved to accomplish! Act thou in such a way that, that resolve of his may become futile! Drona is endued with great might. He is a hero, accomplished in arms, and above fatigue! O mighty car-warrior, even he hath towed my seizure!

"'Arjuna said,—'This Satyajit, O king, will today become thy protector in battle! As long as Satyajit lives, the preceptor will never be able to accomplish his wish! 48 If, however, O lord, this tiger among men, viz, Satyajit, be slain in battle, thou shouldst not then remain on the field even if surrounded by all (our warriors) !44—'

"Sanjaya continued,—'King Yudhishthira then gave (to Arjuna) the leave (he sought). And he also embraced Arjuna and eyed him affectionately. And diverse were the benedictions that the king uttered on him. Having made this arrangment (for Yudhishthira's protection), the mighty Pārtha went out against the Trigartas, like a hungry lion, for assuaging his hunger, upon a herd of deer. Then Duryodhana's troops, filled with joy at Arjuna's absence (from Yudhishthira's side), became furious for the seizure of Yudhishthira. Then both hosts, with great impetuosity, encountered each other, like Gangā and Sarayu in the season of rains when both streams are swollen with water."

SECTION XVIII.

"Sanjaya said,—'The Samsaptakas+ then, filled with joy, took their stand on a level field, having, with their cars formed an array in the shape of the half-moon.1 tigers among men, beholding the diadem-decked (Arjuna) come towards them, were, O sire, filled with delight and uttered loud shouts.2 That noise filled the welkin and all the points of the compass, cardinal and subsidiary. And because it was an open plain covered only with men, it produced no echoes. Ascertaining them to be exceedingly delighted, Dhananjaya, with a partial smile, said these words unto Krishna: -Behold, O thou that hast Devaki for thy mother, those Trigarta brothers, who are about to perish in battle, are filled with delight at a time when they should weep! Or, this is, without doubt, the hour of delight (with them), since they will obtain those excellent regions that are unattainable by cowards ! - Having said these words unto the mighty-armed Hrishikeça, Arjuna came upon the arrayed ranks of the Trigartas

^{*} I adopt the Bengal reading which is Vidhayaivam. The Bombay reading is Vihayainam, meaning "leaving Yudhishthira.—T.

[†] Soldiers sworn to conquer or die. Instead of using a long-winded phrase each time, the word occurs, it is better to repeat it in this form.—T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:22 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google

in battle. Taking up then his conch called Devadatta decked with gold, he blew it with great force, filling all the points of the compass with its blare. Terrified by that blare, that carhost of the Samsaptakas stood motionless in battle as if it was petrified.9 And all their animals stood with eyes wide open, ears and necks and lips paralysed, and legs motionless. And they passed urine and vomited blood.10 Regaining consciousness then, and placing their ranks in proper order, they shot their arrows all at once at the son of Pandu.11 of displaying his prowess with great speed, Arjuna, with five and ten arrows, cut off those thousands of arrows before they could reach him.12 They then pierced Arjuna, each with ten Partha pierced each of them with three arrows.18 Then each of them, O king, pierced Partha with five arrows. Endued with great prowess, he pierced each of them in return with two arrows.14 And, once again, excited with wrath, they quickly poured upon Arjuna and Keçava countless arrows like the clouds pouring upon a lake their incessant showers.15 those thousands of arrows fell upon Arjuna like flights of bees upon a flowering cluster of trees in the forest.16 Then Suvāhu deeply pierced Arjuna's diadem with thirty shafts endued with the strength of adamant.17 With those straight shafts equipt with wings of gold fixed on his diadem, Arjuna, as if decked with ornaments of gold, shone like the (newly) risen Sun.18 The son of Pandu then, in that battle, with a broad-headed arrow, cut off the leathern fence of Suvahu, and covered Suvāhu himself with showers of arrows.19 Then Suçarman and Suratha and Sudharman and Sudhanwan and Suvahu pierced Partha with ten arrows.20 Partha, having the excellent ape on his banner, pierced all of them in return with many arrows, and also cut off, with some broad-headed shafts, their standards made of gold.21 And cutting off the bow of Sudhanwan, he slew with his arrows the latter's steeds. And then he cut off from his trunk the latter's head graced with turban.22 Upon the fall of that hero, his followers were terrified. And struck with panic they all fled away to where Duryodhana's forces were. 28 Then Vasava's son, filled with smote that mighty host with incessant showers of 8 arrows like the Sun destroying darkness by means of his incessant rays.24 Then when that host broke and melted away on all sides and Arjuna was filled with wrath, the Trigartas were struck with fear. 25 While being slaughtered by Partha with his straight shafts, they remained where they deprived of their senses, like a terrified herd of deer.26 the king of the Trigartas, filled with rage, addressed those mighty car-warriors, saying,—Do not fly, ye heroes! It behoveth ye not to be frightened! " Having, in the sight of all the troops, taken those terrible oaths, repairing thither, what shall ye say unto the leaders of Duryodhana's host? Do we not incur ridicule in the world by such a (cowardly) act in battle? Therefare, cease ye all, and fight according to your strength !29—Thus addressed, O king, those heroes, repeatedly uttering loud shouts, blew their conchs, gladdening one another. 50 Then those Samsaptakas once more returned to the field, with the Narayana cowherds, resolved to face Death himself." "31

SECTION XIX.

"Sanjaya said,—'Beholding those Samsaptakas once more return to the field, Arjuna addressed the high-souled Vasudeva, saying, -- Urge the steeds, O Hrishikeça, towards the Samsap-They will not give up the battle alive. This is what Today thou shalt witness the terrible might of my arms as also of my bow! Today I shall slay all these like Rudra slaying creatures (at the end of the Yuga) ! -- Hearing these words, the invincible Krishna smiled, and gladdening him with auspicious speeches, conveyed Arjuna to those places whither the latter desired to go.4 While borne in battle by those white steeds, that car looked exceedingly resplendent like a celestial car borne along the firmament. And like Cakra's car, O king, in the battle between the gods and the Asuras in days of old, it displayed circular, forward, backward,

^{*} The second line of this verse is read incorrectly in the Bengal texts,-T.

Generated on 2022-03-03-12:22 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized ,

and diverse other kinds of motion. Then the Narayanas, excited with wrath and armed with diverse weapons, surrounded Dhananjaya, covering him with showers of arrows. bull of Bharata's race, they soon made Kunti's son Dhananjaya, together with Krishna, perfectly invisible in that battle.8 Then Phalguna, excited with wrath, doubled his energy, and quickly rubbing its string, grasped Gandiva, (firmly) in that battle.' Causing wrinkles to form themselves on his brow,sure indications of wrath,—the son of Pandu blew his prodigious conch call Devadatta.10 And then he shot the weapon called Tashtra that is capable of slaying large bodies of foes Thereupon thousands of separate forms started into existence there (of Arjuna himself and Vasudeva).11 Confounded by those diverse images after the form of Arjuna, the troops began to strike each other, each regarding the other as Arjuna's self.12—This is Arjuna!—This is Govinda!—There are Pandu's son and he of Yadu's race !- Uttering such exclamations, and deprived of their senses, they slew one another in that battle.18 Deprived of their senses by that mighty weapon, they slew one another. Indeed, those warriors (while striking one another) looked beautiful like blossoming Kincukas.14 Consuming those thousands of arrows shot by them, that (mighty) weapon despatched those heroes to Yama's Then Vibhatsu, laughing, crushed with his arrows the Lilithya, the Malava, the Mavellaka, and the Trigarta While those Kshatriyas, urged by fate, were thus slaughtered by that hero, they shot at Partha showers of diverse kinds of arrows.17 Overwhelmed with that terrible shower of arrows, neither Arjuna, nor his car, nor Keçava, could any longer be seen.18 Seeing their arrows strike the aim, they uttered many joyous shouts. And regarding the two Krishnas as already slain, they joyously waved their garments in the air.19 And those heroes also blew their conchs and beat their drums and cymbals by thousands, and uttered many leonine shouts, O sire !20 Then Krishna, covered with sweat, and much weakened, addressed Arjuna, saying,—Where art thou, O Partha! do not see thee! Art thou alive, O slayer of foes !21-Hearing these words of his, Dhananjaya with great speed dispelled, by means of the Vayavya weapon, that arrowy downpour shot by his foes.22 Then the illustrious Vayu (the presiding deity of that mighty weapon) bore away crowds of Samsaptakas with steeds and elephants and cars and weapons, as if these were dry leaves of trees.28 Borne away by the wind, O king, they looked highly beautiful, like flights of birds, O monarch, flying away from trees.24 Then Dhananjaya, having afflicted them thus, with great speed struck hundreds and thousands of them with sharp shafts.25 And he cut off their heads, and also hands with weapons in grasp, by means of his broad-headed arrows. And he felled on the ground, with his shafts, their thighs resembling the trunks of elephants.26 And some had their backs mangled, and some were deprived of legs, and some were wounded on their backs, arms, and eyes. And thus Dhananjaya deprived his foes of diverse limbs.27 And cars decked and equipt according to rule, and looking like the vapoury edifices in the welkin, he cut off into fragments by means of his arrows, slaying their riders and steeds and elephants.28 And in many places crowds of cars, whose standards had been cut off. looked like forests of headless palmyras.29 phants with excellent weapons, banners, hooks, and standards, fell down like wooded mountains split with Cakra's thunder. 50 Graced with tails looking like those of the yak, and covered with coats of mail, and with their entrails and eyes dragged out, steeds, along with their riders, rolled on the ground, slain by means of Partha's shafts. 81 No longer holding in their grasp the swords that had served for their nails, with their coats of mail torn and the joints of their bones broken, foot-soldiers, with their vital limbs cut open, helplessly laid themselves down on the field, slain by means of Arjuna's arrows. 32 field of battle assumed an awful beauty in consequence of those warriors slain or in course of being slaughtered, falling and fallen, staying or in course of being whirled along.88 the air was purified of the dust that had arisen, by means of the showers of blood (caused by Arjuna's arrows). the earth, strewn with hundreds of headless trunks, became impassable.34 And the car of Vibhatsu in that battle shone fiercely like the car of Rudra himself while engaged at the end of the Yuga in destroying all creatures.26 While slaughtered by Partha thus, those warriors, with their steeds and cars and elephants in great distress, ceased not to rush against him, though, deprived of life one after another, they had to become the guests of Cakra. 46 Then the field of battle, O chief of the Bharatas, strewn with mighty car-warriors deprived of life, looked dreadful like Yama's domains abounding with the spirits of departed creatures.37 Meanwhile, when Arjuna was furiously engaged (with the Samsaptakas), Drona, at the head of his forces arrayed for battle, rushed against Yudhishhira.  And many warriors, accomplished in smiting and properly arrayed, followed him, actuated by the desire of seizing Yu-The battle then that ensued became exceedingly fierce.' "89

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:22 GMT / https://hdl.ha Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathi

SECTION XX.

"Sanjaya said,—'Having passed the night, that mighty carwarrior, viz., Bharadwāja's son, addressed Suyodhana, O monarch, saying,-I am thine !*1 I have made arrangements for Partha's encounter with the Samsaptakas !+-After Partha went out for slaying the Samsaptakas,2 Drona then, at the head of his troops arrayed for battle, proceeded, O chief of the Bharatas, for seizing king Yudhishthira the just. Seeing that Drona had arrayed his forces in the form of a Garuda, Yudhishthira disposed his troops in counter array in the form of a semicircle. In the mouth of that Garuda was the mighty car-warrior Drona himself. And its head was formed by king Duryodhana surrounded by his uterine brothers. And Kritavarman and the illustrious Kripa formed the two eyes of that And Bhutacarman, and Kshemacarman, and the valiant Karakāksha, and the Kalingas, the Singhalas, the Easterners, the Cudras, the Ahiras, the Daçerakas, the Cakas, the Yavanas, the Kāmvojas, the Hangsapādas, the Curasenas, the

^{*} The second line is read differently in the Bombay text .- T.

[†] It seems that the text here is vicious. It certainly requires One complete sloka seems to be wanting .- T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:23 GMT / https://hdl.handle Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrus Daradas, the Madras, and the Kaikeyas, with hundreds and thousands of elephants, steeds, cars, and foot-soldiers, were stationed in its neck. And Bhuricravas, and Calya, and Somadatta, and Valhika, these heroes, surrounded by a full Akshauhini, took up their position in the right wing. And Vinda and Anuvinda of Avanti, and Sudakshina the ruler of the Kamvojas, stationed themselves in the left wing at the head, however, of Drona's son Acwatthaman.10 In the back (of that Garuda) were the Kalingas, the Amvashthas, the Magadhas, the Paundras, the Madrakas, the Gandharas, the Cakunas, the Easterners, the Mountaineers, and the Vacatis.11 In the tail stood Vikartana's son Karna, with his sons, kinsmen, and friends, and surrounded by a large force raised from diverse realms.12 dratha, and Bhimaratha, and Sampāti, and the Yājas, and the Bhojas, and Bhuminjaya, and Vrisha, and Krātha, and the mighty ruler of the Nishadhas,18 all accomplished in battle, surrounded by a large host and keeping the region of Brahma before their eyes, stood, O king, in the bosom of that array.14 That array, formed by Drona, in consequence of its foot-soldiers, steeds, cars, and elephants, seemed to dance like the tempesttossed ocean (as it advanced to battle).16 Warriors, desirous of battle, began to start out from the wings and sides of that array like roaring clouds charged with lightning rushing from all sides (in the welkin) at summer.16 And in the midst of that array, the ruler of the Pragiyotishas, mounted on his duly equipt elephant, looked resplendent, O king, like the rising Decked, O monarch, in garlands of flowers, and with a white umbrella held over his head, he looked like the moon at full when in conjunction with the constellation Kirtika.18 And his juice-blind elephant, looking like a mass of black antimony, shone like a huge mountain washed by mighty clouds (with their showers).19 And the ruler of the Pragjyotishas was surrounded by many heroic kings of the hilly countries armed with diverse weapons, like Cakra himself surrounded by the celestials.20 Then Yudhishthira, beholding that superhuman array incapable of being vanquished by foes in battle, addressed Prishata's son, saying,21-O lord, O thou that ownest steeds white as pigeons, let such measures

http://www.hathitrust.org/access_use#pd-googl Generated on 2022-02-03 12:23 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized be adopted that I may not be taken a prisoner by the Brahmana !22___

"Dhrishtadyumna said,—O thou of excellent vows, never shalt thou be placed under the power of Drona, however much may he strive! Even I shall check Drona today with all his followers !23 As long as I am alive, O thou of Kuru's race, it behoveth thee not to feel any anxiety. Under no circumstances is Drona able to vanquish me in battle !*4--

"Sanjaya continued,—'Having said these words, the mighty son of Drupada owning steeds of the hue of pigeons, scattering his shafts, rushed himself at Drona. Beholding that (to him) evil omen in the shape of Dhrishtadyumna stationed before him, Drona soon became exceedingly cheerless.36 Beholding this, that crusher of foes, viz., thy son Durmukha, desirous of doing what was agreeable to Drona, began to check Dhrishta-Then a terrible and a fierce battle took place, O Bharata, between the brave son of Prishata and thy son Dur-Then Prishata's son, quickly covering Durmukha with a shower of arrows, checked Bharadwaja's son also with a thick arrowy downpour. 29 Beholding Drona checked, thy son Durmukha quickly rushed at Prishata's son and confounded him with clouds of arrows of diverse kinds. 30 And while the prince of the Panchalas and that foremost one of Kuru's race were thus engaged in battle, Drona consumed many portions of Yudhishthira's host. 31 As a mass of clouds is dispersed in different directions by the wind, even so was Yudhishthira's host, in many parts of the field, dispersed by Drona.82 For only a short while did that battle look beautiful. And then. O king, it became an encounter of infuriate persons in which no consideration was shown for anybody.88 And the combatants could no longer distinguish their own from the foe. battle went on, the warriors being guided by inferences and watch-words.34 Upon the gems on their head-gears, upon their necklaces and other ornaments, and upon their coats of mail, rays of light like those of the Sun seemed to fall and play. 55 And cars and elephants and steeds, decked with banners, seemed in that battle to resemble masses of clouds with rows of cranes under them, "6 And men slew men, and steeds of fiery metal slew steeds, and car-warriors slew carwarriors, and elephants slew elephants.37 And soon a fierce and terrible encounter took place between elephants with tall standards on their backs and mighty compeers (rushing against them).88 And in consequence of those huge creatures rubbing their bodies against those of hostile compeers and tearing one another (with their tusks), fires mixed with smoke were engendered there by (such) friction of countless tusks with tusks.89 Shorn of the standards (on their backs), those elephants, in consequence of the fires engendered by their tusks, looked like masses of clouds in the welkin charged with lightning.40 And the earth, strewn with elephants dragging (hostile compeers) and roaring and falling down, looked beautiful like the autumnal sky overspread with clouds.41 roars of those elephants while they were being slaughtered with showers of shafts and lances, resembled the roll of clouds in the rainy season.42 And some huge elephants, wounded with lances and shafts, became panicstruck. And others amongst those creatures, left the field with loud cries*.48 And some elephants there, struck by others with their tusks, uttered fierce cries of distress that resembled the roll of the all-destroying clouds at the end of the Yuga.44 And some, turned back by huge compeers, returned to the charge, urged on by sharp hooks. And crushing hostile ranks, they began to slay all who came in their way.45 And elephant-drivers, attacked by elephantdrivers with arrows and lances, fell down from the backs of their beasts, their weapons and hooks loosened from their And many elephants, without riders on their backs, wandered hither and thither like clouds torn from mightier masses, and then fell down, encountering one another.47 some huge elephants, bearing on their backs slain and fallen warriors or those whose weapons had fallen down, wandered in all directions singly. +48 And in the midst of that carnage,

^{*} The second line of this verse is certainly vicious .- T.

[†] Ekacharās is explained by Nilakantha as "unable to bear the sight of others of their species," i. e., walking by themselves, or solitarily or singly. Some of the vernacular translators are for taking this word as implying the Rhinoceros—T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:23 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized ,

some elephants, attacked or in course of being attacked with lances, swords, and battle-axes, fell down in course of that awful carnage, uttering cries of distress.49 And the Earth; suddenly struck with the falling bodies, huge as hills, of those creatures all around, trembled and uttered loud sounds. 50 with those elephants slain along with their riders and lying all about with the standards on their backs, the Earth looked beautiful as if strewn with hills.51 And the drivers on the backs of many elephants, with their breasts pierced by carwarriors with broad-headed shafts in that battle, fell down, their lances and hooks loosened from their grasp.52 elephants, struck with long shafts, uttered crane-like cries, and ran in all directions, crushing friends and foes with their And covered with countless bodies of clephants and steeds and car-warriors, the earth, O king, became miry with flesh and blood.54 And large cars with wheels and many without wheels, crushed with the points of their tusks, were thrown up by elephants, with the warriors mounted on them. 55 Cars were seen deprived of warriors. And riderless steeds and elephants ran in all directions, afflicted with wounds. 56 there sire slew son, and son slew sire, for the battle that took place was exceedingly fierce and nothing could be distinguished.57 Men sank ankle-deep in the gory mire and looked like tall trees whose lower parts were swallowed up in a blazing forest-conflagration.58 And robes and coats of mail and umbrellas and standards having been dyed with blood, everything seemed to be bloody on the field.59 Large bodies of slain steeds, of cars, and of men, were again cut into fragments by rolling car-wheels.60 And that sea of troops having elephants for its current, and slain men for its (floating) moss and weeds, and cars for its fierce eddies, looked terribly beauti-Warriors, having steeds and elephants for their large vessels, and desirous of victory as their wealth, plunged into that sea, and instead of sinking in it endeavoured to deprive their enemies of their senses. 62 When all the warriors, each bearing particular signs, were covered with arrowy showers, there was none amongst them who lost heart though all were deprived of their signs,68 In that fierce and awful battle, Drona, confounding the senses of his foes, (at last) rushed at Yudhishthira."

SECTION XXI.

"Sanjaya continued,—'Then Drona, beholding Yudhishthira near him, fearlessly received him with a thick shower of And there arose a loud noise among the troops of Yudhishthira's army like what is made by the elephants belonging to a herd when their leader is attacked by a mighty lion. Beholding Drona, the brave Satyajit, of prowess incapable of being baffled, rushed at the preceptor who was desirous of seizing Yudhishthira. The preceptor and the Panchala prince. both endued with great might, fought with each other, agitating each other's troops, like Indra and Vali. Then Satyajit, of prowess incapable of being baffled, invoking a mighty weapon. pierced Drona with keen-pointed arrows. And Satyajit shot at Drona's charioteer five arrows, fatal as snake-poison and each looking like Death himself. The charioteer, thus struck, be-Then Satyajit quickly pierced came deprived of his senses. Drona's steeds with ten shafts; and filled with rage he next pierced each of his Parshni drivers with ten shafts. then he coursed at the head of his troops on his car in a circular motion. Excited with wrath, he cut off the standard of Drona, that crusher of foes.* Drona then, that chastiser of foes, beholding these feats of his foe in battle, mentally resolved to despatch him to the other world.* The preceptor, cutting off Satyajit's bow with arrow fixed thereon, quickly pierced him with ten arrows capable of penetrating into the very vitals.10 Thereupon the valiant Satyajit, quickly taking up another bow, struck Drona, O king, with thirty arrows winged with the feathers of the Kanka bird. Beholding Drona (thus) encountered in battle by Satyajit, the Pandavas, O king, shouted in joy and waved their garments.12 Then the mighty Vrika, O king, excited with great wrath, pierced Drona in the centre of the chest with sixty arrows. That feat seemed [·] Literally, "thought in his mind that his hour was come."-T.

highly wonderful.18 Then that mighty car-warrior, viz., Drona, of great impetuosity, covered with the arrowy showers (of his foes), opened his eyes wide and mustered all his energy.16 Then cutting off the bows of both Satyajit and Vrika, Drona, with six shafts, slew Vrika with his charioteer and steeds.15 Satyajit, taking up another bow that was tougher; pierced Drona with his steeds, his charioteer, and his standard.16 Thus afflicted in battle by the prince of the Panchalas, Drons. could not brook that act. For the destruction then of his foe, he quickly sped his arrows (at him).17 Drona then covered with incessant showers of arrows his antagonist's steeds and standard as also the handle of his bow, and both his Pārshni drivers.18 But though his bows were (thus) repeatedly cut off, the prince of the Panchalas, conversant with the highest weapons, continued to battle with him of red steeds.19 Beholding Satyajit swell with energy in that dreadful combat, Drona cut off that illustrious warrior's head with a crescent-shaped arrow. Upon the slaughter of that foremost of combatants, that mighty carwarrior among the Panchalas, Yudhishthira, from fear of Drona. fled away, (borne) by fleet steeds. 11 Then the Panchalas, the Kekayas, the Matsyas, the Chedis, the Kārushas, and the Kocalas, eying Drona, rushed at him, desirous of rescuing Yudhish-The preceptor, however, that slayer of large numbers of foes, desirous of seizing Yudhishthira, began to consume those divisions, like fire consuming heaps of cotton.35 Catanika, the younger brother of the ruler of the Matsyas; rushed at Drona who was thus engaged in incessantly destroying those divisions (of the Pandava host).24 And Catanika. piercing Drona along with his driver and steeds with six shafts bright as the rays of the Sun, and polished by the hands of their forger, uttered loud shouts.25 And engaged in a cruel act, and endeavouring to accomplish what was difficult of attainment, he covered Bharadwāja's son, that mighty car-warrior, with showers of arrows. +  Then Drona, with an arrow sharp ^{*} Literally, "half-moon-shaped.-T.

⁺ Cruel, because it was a Brahmana with whom Catanika was fight-

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:23 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

as razor, quickly cut off from his trunk the head, decked with ear-rings, of Catanika thus shouting at him. Thereupon the Matsya warriors all fled away.27 Having vanquished the Matsyas, the son of Bharadwaja then defeated the Chedis, the Kārushas, the Kaikeyas, the Pānchālas, the Srinjayas, and the Pāndus repeatedly.28 Beholding that hero of the golden car excited with rage and consuming their divisions like a fire consuming a forest, the Srinjayas trembled (with fear).29 dued with great activity and slaughtering the foe ceaselessly. the twang of the bowstring, as he streched his bow, was heard in all directions. 50 Fierce arrows shot by that warrior endued with great lightness of hand, crushed elephants and steeds and foot-soldiers and car-warriors and elephant-riders. As a mighty mass of roaring clouds in summer with violent winds (blowing) poureth a shower of hail-stones, so did Drona pour his arrowy showers and inspire fear in the hearts of his foes. 82 That mighty hero, that great bowman, that dispeller of the fears of his friends, careered in all directions (of the field) agitating the (hostile) host.33 The bow, decked with gold, of Drona of immeasurable energy, was seen in all directions like the flashes of lightning in the clouds.34 The beautiful altar on his banner, as he careered in battle, O Bharata, was seen to resemble a crest of Himavat. 85 The slaughter that Drona caused among the Pandava troops was very great, resembling that caused by Vishnu himself, the adored of both gods and Asuras, among the Daitya host. 46 Heroic, truthful in speech, endued with great wisdom and might, and possessed of prowess incapable of being baffled, the illustrious Drona caused a river to flow there that was fierce and capable of striking the timid with fear. Coats of mail formed its waves, and standards its eddies. carried away (as it ran) large numbers of mortal creatures. And elephants and steeds constituted its great alligators, and swords formed its fishes. And it was incapable of being easily The bones of brave warriors formed its pebbles, and drums and cymbals its tortoises. And shields and armour formed its boats, and the hair of warriors its floating moss and weeds. And arrows constituted its wavelets and bows its current, And the arms of the combatants formed its snakes.* And that river of fierce current, running over the field of battle, bore away both the Kurus and the Srinjayas. And the heads of human beings constituted its stones, and their thighs its fishes. And maces constituted the rafts (by which many sought to cross it). And head-gears formed the froth that covered its surface, and the entrails (of animals) its reptiles. Awful (in mien), it bore away heroes (to the other And blood and flesh constituted its mire. phants formed its corocodiles, and standards the trees (on its Thousands of Kshatriyas sunk in it. Fierce, clogged with (dead) bodies, and having horse-soldiers and elephantwarriors for its sharks, it was extremely difficult to cross it. And that river ran towards the abode of Yama. 87-48 abounded with Rakshasas and dogs and jackalls. And it was haunted by fierce cannibals all around.44

"Then many Pandava warriors headed by Kunti's son, rushing at Drona, that mighty car-warrior consuming their divisions like Death himself, surrounded him on all sides.45 those brave warriors completly encompassed Drona who was scorching everything around him like the Sun himself scorching the world with his rays.46 Then the kings and the princes of thy army, with upraised weapons, all rushed for supporting that here and great bowman.47 Then Cikhandin pierced Drona with five straight arrows. And Kshatradharman pierced him with twenty arrows, and Vasudana with five.48 And Uttamaujas pierced him with three arrows, and Kshatradeva with five. And Sātyaki pierced him in that battle with a hundred arrows, and Yudhamanyu with eight. 49 And Yudhishthira pierced Drona with a dozen shafts, and Dhrishtadyumna pierced him with ten, and Chekitāna with three.50 Then Drona of unbaffled aim and resembling an elephant with rent temples, getting over the car-division (of the Pandavas), overthrew Dridhasena. Approaching then king Kshema who was battling fearlessly, he struck him with nine arrows. Thereupon Kshema, deprived of life, fell down from his car.50 Getting then into the midst of the (hostile) troops,

The Bengal reading Vahupallava is a mistake. The correct reading is Vahupannaga as in the Bombay text.-T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:23 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

he careered in all directions, protecting others but himself in no need of protection.58 He then pierced Cikhandin with twelve arrows, and Uttamaujas with twenty. And he despatched Vasudana with a broad-headed arrow to the abode of Yama. 4 he pierced Kshemavarman with eighty-arrows, and Sudakshina with six and twenty. And he felled Kshatradeva with a broadheaded arrow from his niche in the car. 4 And having pierced Yudhāmanyu with sixtyfour arrows, and Sātyaki with thirty, Drona of the golden car quickly approached Yudhishthira. Then Yudhishthira, that best of kings, quickly fled away from the preceptor, borne by his fleet steeds. Then Panchalya rushed at Drona. 57 Drona slew that prince, cutting off his bow. and felling his steeds and charioteer along with him. of life, the prince fell down on the earth from his car like a luminary loosened from the firmament. 88 Upon the fall of that illustrious prince of the Panchalas, loud cries were heard there of-Slay Drona, Slay Drona !50-The mighty Drona then began to crush and mangle the Panchalas, the Matsyas, the Kaikeyas, the Srinjayas, and the Pandavas, all excited with rage.60 And supported by the Kurus, Drona then vanquished Sātyaki, and Chekitāna, and Dhrishtadyumna, and Cikhandin. and Vārdhakshemi, and Chitrasena's son, and Senāvindu, and Suvarchasa, all these, and numerous other kings. 61-68 warriors, O king, having obtained the victory in that great battle, slew the Pandavas as they fled away in all directions. And the Panchalas, the Kaikeyas, and the Matsyas, thus slaughtered on all sides like the Danavas by Indra, began to tremble (with fear)." "64

SECTION XXII.

"Dhritarashtra said,—'When the Pandavas were broken by Bharadwāja's son in that dreadful battle, and the Panchalas also, was there anybody that approached Drona for battle? Alas, beholding Drona stationed in battle, like a yawning tiger or an elephant with rent temples, ready to lay down his life in battle, well-armed, conversant with all modes of fight, that great bowman, that tiger among men, that enhancer of the fears of foes, grateful, devoted to truth, ever desirous of benefiting Duryodhana,—alas, beholding him at the head of his troops, was there no man that could approach him, with a laudable determination for battle, a determination that enhances the renown of Kshatriyas, that mean-spirited persons can never form, and that is distinctive only of foremost of persons? Tell me, O Sanjaya, who were those heroes that approached the son of Bharadwāja, beholding him at the head of his forces?

/ https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 / http://www.hathitrust.org/access_use#pd-google

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:23 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized ,

"Sanjaya said,—'Beholding the Pānchālas, the Pāndavas, the Matsyas, the Srinjayas, the Chedis, and the Kaikeyas, thus routed after being broken in battle by Drona with his shafts, beholding them thus driven from the field by those showers of fleet arrows shot from Drona's bow like vessels sent adrift by the awful waves of the tempest-tossed ocean, the Kauravas with many leonine shouts and with the noise of diverse instruments, began to assail the cars and elephants and foot-soldiers (of that hostile host) from all sides. And beholding those (fleeing soldiers of the Pāndavas), king Duryodhana, stationed in the midst of his own forces and encompassed by his own relatives and kinsmen, filled with joy and laughing as he spoke, said these words unto Karna.

"Duryodhana said,—Behold, O Rādhā's son, the Pānchālas broken by that firm bowman (Drona) with his shafts, like a herd of wild deer frightened by a lion !10 These, I think, will not again come to battle! They have been broken by Drona like mighty trees by the tempest !" Afflicted by that highsouled warrior with those shafts winged with gold, they fleeing away, no two persons being together! seem to be dragged in eddies all over the field !18 high-souled Drona, they are the Kauravas as also by the huddling close to one another like (a herd of) elephants in the midst of a conflagration.18 Like a blosoming tree penetrated by flights of bees, these warriors, pierced with the sharp shafts of Drona, are huddling close to one another as they are flying away from the field !14 There, the wrathful Bhima, abandoned by the Pandavas and the Srinjayas, and surrounded by my warriors, delighteth me greatly, O Karna !15 It is evident, that wicked wight beholdeth the world today to be full of Drona

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:23 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

Without doubt, that son of Pandu hath today become hopeless of life and kingdom !16-

"'Karna said,-That mighty-armed warrior will not certainly abandon the battle as long as he is alive. Nor will he, O tiger among men, brook these leonine shouts (of ours).17 will the Pandavas, I think, be defeated in battle. brave, endued with great might, accomplished in weapons, and difficult of being resisted in battle.18 Recollecting the woes caused them by our attempts at poisoning and burning them, and the woes that arose from the match at dice, bearing in mind also their exile in the woods, the Pandavas, I think, will not abandon the battle.19 The mighty-armed Vrikodara of immeasurable energy hath already turned back (for the fight). The son of Kunti will certainly slay many foremost of our car-With sword and bow and dart, with steeds and elewarriors.20 phants and men and cars,* with his mace made of iron, he willslay crowds upon crowds (of our soldiers).21 Other car-warriors headed by Sātyaki, together with the Pānchālas, the Kekayas, the Matsyas, and especially the Pandavas, are following him. 22 They are all brave, and possessed of great might and prowess. Mighty car-warriors, they are again led by Bhima in wrath ! 38 Those bulls of Kuru's race, surrounding Vrikodara on all sides like the clouds surrounding the Sun, begin to approach Drona from all sides.24 Closely intent upon one object, these will certainly afflict the unprotected Drona like flights of insects on the point of death afflicting a blazing lamp.25 Accomplished in weapons, they are certainly competent to resist Drona. Heavy is the burthen, I think, that now rests on Bharadwaja's son.26 Let us then quickly go to the spot where Drona is. Let not these slay him of regulated vows like wolves slaying a mighty elephant !27-

"Sanjaya continued,-'Hearing these words of Radheya, king Duryodhana then, accompanied by his brothers, O monarch, proceeded towards Drona's car.28 The noise there was deafening, of Pandava warriors returned to the fight on their cars

^{*} Using even these as implements for striking, for Bhima's might was superhuman, -T, drawn by excellent steeds of diverse hue, all actuated by the desire of slaying Drona alone."

SECTION XXIII.

"Dhritarāshtra said,—'Tell me, O Sanjaya, the distinctive indications of the cars of all those who, excited with wrath and headed by Bhimasena, had proceeded against Drona!"

"Sanjaya said,—'Beholding Vrikodara advancing (on a car drawn) by steeds of a dappled hue (like that of the antelope), the brave grandson of Cini (Sātyaki) proceeded, borne by steeds of a silvery hue. The irresistible Yudhamanyu, excited with rage, proceeded against Drona, borne by excellent steeds of a variegated hue. Dhrishtadyumna, the son of the Panchala king, proceeded, borne by steeds of great fleetness in trappings of gold and of the hue of pigeons. Desirous of protecting his sire, and wishing him complete success, (Dhrishtadyumna's son) Kshatradharman of regulated vows, proceeded, borne by red Kshatradeva the son of Cikhandin, himself urging welldecked steeds of the hue of lotus leaves and with eyes of pure white, proceeded (against Drona). Beautiful steeds of the Kāmvoja breed, decked with the feathers of the green parrot, bearing Nakula, quickly ran towards thy army.7 Dark steeds of the color of clouds wrathfully bore Uttamaujas, O Bharata, to battle, against the invincible Drona standing with arrows aimed. Steeds, fleet as the wind, and of variegated hue, bore Sahadeva with upraised weapons to that fierce battle. Of great impetuosity and possessed of the fleetness of the wind, steeds of the hue of ivory and having black hair on the neck, bore Yudhishthira, that tiger among men.10 And many warriors followed Yudhishthira, borne on their steeds decked in trappings of gold and all fleet as the wind.11 Behind the king was the royal chief of the Panchalas, viz., Drupada, with a golden umbrella over his head and himself protected by all those soldiers (that followed Yudhishthira).12 That great bowman among all the kings, viz., Cantabhi, proceeded, borne by beautiful steeds capable of

http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:23 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized ,

https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112

^{*} Hemadandais is a mistake of the Bengal texts for Hemubhandais.—T.

bearing every noise.18

The Kaikeyas,

by all the great car-

Accompanied

steeds of the (pale-red) hue of trumpet-flowers, looked exceedingly beautiful as they bore Virāta. Fleet steeds of vellow color and decked in chains of gold bore with great speed the warriors, Virāta quickly followed the former.

and Cikhandin, and Dhrishtaketu,14 surrounded by pective troops, followed the ruler of the Matsyas.

son (Uttara) of that slaver of foes, viz., Virāta the royal chief of the Matsyas. The five Kekaya brothers were borne by steeds of deep red hue.15-17 Of the splendour of gold and owning standards of red hue, and decked with chains of gold, all of them heroes accomplished in battle,18 they proceeded, clad in mail, and showering arrows like the very clouds. steeds, the gift of Tumvuru, of the hue of unbaked earthen pots, bore Cikhandin the Panchala prince of immea-Altogether, twelve thousand mighty carsurable energy.* warriors of the Panchala race proceeded to battle.19-20 these, six thousand followed Cikhandin. Sportive steeds, O sire, of the dappled hue of the antelope, bore the son of Cicupala that tiger among men. That bull among the Chedis, viz., Dhrishtaketu, endued with great strength,21-22 and difficult of being vanquished in battle, proceeded, borne by Kamvoja steeds of valegated hue. Excellent steeds of the Sindhu breed, of beautiful limbs, and of the hue of the smoke of straw, quickly bore the Kaikeya prince Vrihatkshatra. Possessed of eyes of pure white, of the hue of the lotus, born in the country of the Vālhikas, and decked with ornaments,25-24 bore Cikhandin's son, the brave Kshatradeva. Decked in trapprings of gold, and possessed of the hue of red silk,25 quiet steeds bore Senāvindu, that chastiser of foes, to battle. Excellent steeds of the hue of cranes, bore to battle the youthful26 and delicate son of the king of the Kāçis, that mighty car-warrior. steeds with black necks, endued with the speed of the mind, O monarch, and exceedingly obedient to the driver, bore prince The * The first line of 20 is vicious as it occurs in the Bengal texts.

Bombay reading is correct.—T.

[†] This seems to be a repetition of the 6th verse. -T.

Prativindhya. Whitish yellow steeds bore Sutasoma, the son of Arjuna, whom the latter had obtained from Soma himself. He was born in the Kuru city known by the name of Udayendu. Endued with the effulgence of a thousand Moons, and because also he had won great renown in an assembly of the Somakas. he came to be called Sutasoma.27-29 Steeds of the hue of Cala flowers or of the morning Sun bore Nakula's son Catanika worthy of every praise.30 Steeds decked in trappings of gold, and endued with the hue of the peacock's neck, bore that tigeramong men, Crutakarman, the son of Draupadi (by Bhima). 34 Excellent steeds of the hue of the king-fisher's feathers born Draupadi's son Crutākirti to that battle, who like Partha was an ocean of learning. Steeds of a tawny hue bore the youthful Abhimanyu who was regarded as superior to Krishna or Partha one and a half times in battle.88 Gigantic steeds bore Yuyutsu to battle, that only warrior amongst the sons of Dhritarashtra who (abandoning his brothers) hath sided with the Pandavas. Plump and well-decked steeds of the hue of the (dried) paddy stalk bore Vardhakshemi of great activity to that dreadful Steeds with black legs, equipt in breast-plates of gold. and exceedingly obedient to the driver, bore the youthful Sanchitti to battle.36 Steeds whose backs were covered with golden armour, decked with chains of gold, well-broken, and of the hue of red silk, bore Crenimat. 87 Steeds of a red hue bore the advancing Satyadhriti accomplished in the science of arms and in the divine Vedas. 58 That prince of Panchala who was commander (of the Pandava army) and who took Drona as the victim allotted to his share,—that Dhrishtadyumna,—was borne by steeds of the hue of pigeons." Him followed Satyadhriti, and Sanchitti irresistible in battle, and Crenimat, and Vasudana. and Vibhu the son of the ruler of the Kāçis,40 These had fleet steeds of the best Kamvoja breed, decked with chains of Each resembling Yama or Vaicravana, they proceeded to battle, striking fear into the hearts of the hostile soldiers.48 The Prabhadrakas of the Kāmvoja country, numbering six thousand, with upraised weapons, with excellent steeds of diverse hues, and with gold decked standards on their cars, 42 with streched bows and making their foes tremble with their showers of arrows and resolved to die together,* followed Dhrishtadyumna.48 Excellent steeds of the hue of tawny silk, decked with beautiful chains of gold, cheerfully bore Chekitana.44 Arjuna's maternal uncle Purujit, otherwise called Kuntibhoja. came, borne by excellent steeds of the colors of the rainbow.45 Steeds of the color of the star-bespangled firmament bore to battle king Rochamana.46 Steeds of the hue of the red deer, with white streaks over their bodies, bore the Panchala prince Singhasena the son of Gopati.47 That tiger among the Panchālas who is known by the name of Janamejava had excellent steeds of the hue of mustard flowers.48 Fleet, gigantic, and dark-blue steeds, decked with chains of gold, with backs of the hue of curds and faces of the hue of the moon, bore with great speed the ruler of the Panchalas.49 Brave steeds with beautiful heads, (white) as the stalks of reeds, and with a splendour resembling that of the firmament or the lotus, bore Danda-Light brown steeds with backs of the hue of the mouse, and with necks proudly drawn up, bore Vyaghradtata to battle. Dark-spotted steeds bore that tiger among men, viz., Sudhanwan, the prince of Panchala. Of fierce impetuosity resembling that of Indra's thunder, beautiful steeds of the hue of Indragopakas, with variegated patches, bore Chitrayudha.63 Decked with golden chains, steeds whose bellies were of the hue of the Chakravaka, bore Sukshatra the son of the ruler of the Koçalas.54 Beautiful and tall steeds of variegated hue, and gigantic bodies, exceedingly docile, and decked with chains of gold, bore Satyadhriti accomplished in battle. 55 Cukla advanced to battle with his standard and armour and bow and steeds all of the same white hue. 56 Steeds born on the seacoast and white as the moon, bore Chandrasena of fierce energy, the son of Samudrasena. Steeds of the hue of the blue lotus and decked with ornaments of gold and adorned with beautiful floral wreaths bore Caiva owning a beautiful car to battle.58 Superior steeds of the hue of Kalāya flowers, with white and red streaks, bore Rathasena difficult of being resisted in battle. White steeds bore that king who slew the Patchcharas and who is regarded as the bravest of men.60 Superior steeds

^{*} I. e., not to abandon their comrades in distress. -T.

^{*} The last word of the first line of 74 is vicious as printed in the Bengal texts.—T.

that foremost of kings, viz., the virtuous Yudhishthira at his back. The Large numbers of Prabhadrakas, of celestial shapes, advanced to battle, with good steeds of diverse excellent colors. All of them owning standards of gold and prepared to struggle vigorously, proceeded with Bhimasena, and wore the aspect, O monarch, of the denizens of heaven with Indra at their head. That assembled host of Prabhadrakas was much liked by Dhrishtadyumna.

"'Bharadwāja's son, however, O monarch, surpassed all the warriors in splendour.78 His standard, with a black deer-skin waving on its top and the beautiful water-pot, O monarch, that And Bhimasena's stanit bore, looked exceedingly beautiful.79 dard, bearing the device of a gigantic lion in silver with its eyes made of lapis lazuli, looked exceedingly resplendent. 80 The standard of Yudhishthira of great energy, bearing the device of a golden moon with the planets around it, looked Two large and beautiful kettle-drums, called very beautiful.81 Nanda and Upānanda, were tied to it. Played upon by machinery, these produced excellent music that enhanced the delight of all who heard it.82 For terrifying the foe, we beheld that the tall and fierce standard of Nakula, placed on his car, bore the device of a Carabha with its back made of gold.83 A beautiful silver swan with bells and banner, terrible to look at and enhancing the grief of the foe, was seen on Sahadeva's standard.84 The standards of the five sons of Draupadi bore on them the excellent images of Dharma, Marut, Cakra, and the twin Acwins.85 On the car, O king, of the youthful Abhimanyu was an excellent standard that bore a golden peacock which was bright as heated gold.86 On Ghatotkacha's standard, O king, a vulture shone brightly, and his steeds also were capable of going everywhere at will like those of Ravana in days of yore.87 In Yudhishthira's hands was the celestial bow called Mahendra; and in the hands of Bhimasena, O king, was the celestial bow called Vāyavya.88 For the protection of the That celestial and three worlds Brahman had created a bow. indestructible bow was held by Phalguna.89 The Vaishnava bow was held by Nakula, and the bow called Acwina was held That celestial and terrible bow, called the Pauby Sahadeva.

lastya, was held by Ghatotkacha. The five jewels of bows borne by the five sons of Draupadi were the Raudra, the Agneya, the Kauveryya, the Yāmya, and the Giriça. That excellent and best of bows, called the Raudra, which Rohini's son (Valadeva) had obtained, the latter gave unto the high-souled son of Subhadrā, having been gratified with him. These and many other standards, decked with gold, were seen there, belonging to brave warriors, all of which enhanced the fears of their foes. The host commanded by Drona, which numbered not a single coward, and in which countless standards rising together seemed to obstruct the welkin, then looked, O monarch, like images on a canvas. We heard the names and lineage, O king, of brave warriors rushing towards Drona in that battle like to what is heard, O monarch, at a Self-choice."

SECTION XXIV.

"Dhritarāshtra said,—'Those Kshatriyas, O Sanjaya, that advanced to battle, headed by Vrikodara, would inflict pain on the very host of the celestials. Man here is born, subject to (the decrees of) Destiny. It is for this that all his purposes are seen to be otherwise than what he wishes (them to be). For a while had Yudhishthira been exciled in the woods where he lived with matted locks on his head and attired in deer-skins. He had also to pass sometime in concealment.3 Even he hath assembled this vast host for battle. What can it be but the adverse fate of my son? Without doubt, man takes his birth, subject to (the decrees of) Destiny. It is for this that he is dragged (to situations) against his will. Yudhishthira was put to great distress in consequence of his having betaken himself to the calamity of dice. Even he, through good fortune, has obtained allies. -Today I have got the Kekayas, today the Kaucikas, and today the Kocalas!-Today the Chedis, and today the Vangas, have sided with me! The wide Earth is for me, O sire, and not for the son of Pritha!-it was thus, O Suta, that the wicked Duryodhana told me before. protected in the midst of those troops of his, Drona hath been slain in battle by Prishata's son! What could it be but (the result of) Destiny? How, indeed, could Death come to Drona in the midst of all the kings,—to Drona accomplished in every weapon, possessed of mighty-arms, and always delighting in Plunged into great distress, a swoon seems to take possession of my senses. Hearing that both Bhishma and Drona have been dead, I dare not live longer.11 That which the far-seeing Vidura, O sire, told my wretched self filled with affection for my son, that hath now overtaken both Duryodhana and myself!12 If by abandoning Duryodhana now I seek to save the remnant of my children, that behaviour will certainly be very cruel, but then all those will not have to die!18 That king who, abandoning virtue, pursues only wealth, loses his possessions and becomes mean.14 I do not see, O Sanjaya, that anything will be left of this (our) kingdom when it is no longer sustained by hope, and when its very hump hath been crushed.15 Indeed, how can extermination be prevented when those foremost of men, upon whom we had always relied, have both breathed their last?16 That is plain. However, tell me how the battle took place. Who were they that fought, who assailed (the foe), and who were those wretches that fled away from Tell me also of Dhananjaya, viz., what that bull among car-warriors did. It is from him that we have much fear, as also from that enemy (of ours), viz., Vrikodara.18 me, O Sanjaya, how when the Pandavas returned to the fight, that fierce collision took place of my troops (with the returned combatants).19 What also, O son, was the state of your minds when the Pandavas returned? Who also were those heroes of our army that checked them?" "so ^{} I. e., when Drona has been slain. - T.

^{*} The custom, when one warrior attacked another, was invariably to give his name and lineage before striking. -T.

SECTION XXV.

'Sanjaya said,—'When the Pandavas returned to the fight, beholding them cover Drona (with their arrows) like the clouds: covering the Sun, a great terror took possession of us.1 thick dust raised by them enveloped thy army. Then when Drona could no longer be seen, we regarded him to be dead. Beholding those brave and mighty bowmen endeavouring to achieve a fierce and cruel act, Duryodhana, without losing any time, urged his own troops. And he addressed them, saying.]-Ye kings, check ye the Pandava army according to the measure of your strength, courage, and energy, and according to the circumstances that may in each case arise "-Then thy son Durmarshana, beholding Bhima from a distance, approached him and covered him with a shower of arrows, desirous of (protecting) Drona's life. Excited with wrath in that battle and looking like Death himself, he overwhelmed Bhima with his arrows. Bhima also, in return, struck him with his The combat then that thus took place between them became fierce. Meanwhile, many brave warriors endued with intelligence and skilled in smiting, urged by their chiefs and setting at nought their kingdoms and the fear of Death, rushed against their foes in battle." Kritavarman checked the advancing grandson of Cini, that hero and ornament of battle, as he came, desirous of getting Drona within his reach.8 Cini's grandson, however, excited with rage, resisted that angry warrior with showers of arrows. Kritavarman, in return, resisted him, like one infuriate elephant resisting another. ruler of the Sindhus, that fierce bowman, checked with his sharp arrows the mighty bowman Kshatravarman, for keeping him away from Drona.10 Khatravarman, cutting off both the standard and bow of the ruler of the Sindhus, angrily smote him with ten long shafts in all his vital limbs.11 ruler of the Sindhus, taking up another bow, dexterously pierced Kshatravarman in that battle with shafts made wholly of Suvāhu, struggling vigorously, kept away from Drona his brave brother, viz., the mighty car-warrior Yuyutsu who

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:23 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google was fighting for the Pandavas.13 Yuyutsu then, with a couple of sharp and well-tempered shafts cut off the two arms of Suvāhu which resembled spiked maces, and one of which had held the bow and the other a shaft.14 The ruler of the Madras resisted the eldest son of Pandu, viz., king Yudhishthira of righteous soul, as the continent resists the surging sea.16 Yudhishthira the just showered on him many shafts capable of penetrating into the very vitals. The ruler of the Madras, in return, having pierced the son of Pandu with four and sixty shafts, shouted loudly.16 Then the eldest son of Pandu, with a pair of sharp shafts, cut off the bow and standard of the shouting Calya at which all the warriors cheered him loudly.17 King Vālhika, at the head of his forces, resisted with his shafts the royal Drupada advancing against him at the head of a mighty division.18 The encounter between those two old men at the heads of their respective forces became terrible like that between two mighty leaders, with rent temples, of two elephantine herds.19 Vinda and Anuvinda of Avanti, with their troops. encountered Virāta the ruler of the Matsyas at the head of his forces, like Indra and Agni in days of old encountering the (Asura) Vali.20 That awful encounter between the Matsyas and the Kekayas, in which steeds and car-warriors and elephants fought most fearlessly, resembled that between the gods and the Asuras in days of old. Bhutakarman, otherwise called Sabhāpati, kept away from Drona Nakula's son Catanika as the latter advanced, scattering showers of arrows.25 Then the heir of Nakula, with three broad-headed shafts of great sharpness, deprived Bhutakarman of both his arms and head in that battle.23 Vivingcati resisted the heroic Sutasoma of great prowess as the latter advanced towards Drona, scattering showers of arrows.24 Sutasoma, however, excited with wrath, pierced his uncle Vivingcati with straight arrows, and cased in mail, stood ready for the combat.25 Bhimaratha. (brother of Duryodhana), with six sharp shafts of great swiftness and made wholly of iron, despatched Calwa along with his steeds and charioteer, to Yama's abode.26 Chitrasena's son, O king, opposed thy (grand) son Crutakarman as the latter came, borne by steeds looking like peacocks,2? Those two grandsons of

thine, both difficult of being vanquished in battle, and each desirous of slaying the other, fought vigorously for the success of the objects of their respective sires.28 Beholding Prativindhya staying at the van of that dreadful battle, Drona's son (Acwatthaman), desirous of protecting the honor of his sire, resisted the former with his shafts.29 Prativindhya then, excited with rage, pierced Acwatthaman bearing on his standard the device of a lion's tail and staying in battle for the sake of his father, with many sharp shafts. 80 The (eldest) son of Draupadi then scattered over Drona's son showers of arrows like a sower, O bull among men, scattering seeds on the soil at the sowing season.*51 The son of Duscasana resisted the mighty car-warrior Crutakirti the son of Arjuna by Draupadi, as the latter was rushing towards Drona. 82 That son of Arjuna, however, who was equal to Arjuna himself, cutting off the former's bow and standard and charioteer with three broad-headed arrows of great sharpness, proceeded against Drona.88 Duryodhana's son Lakshmana resisted the slayer of the Patachcharas, -him, that is, O king, who is regarded by both the armies as the bravest of the brave.24 The latter, however, cutting off both the bow and the standard of Lakshmana, and showering upon him many arrows, blazed up with splendour. 35 The youthful Vikarna of great wisdom resisted Cikhandin, the youthful son of Yajnasena, as the latter advanced in that battle.36 Yajnasena's son then covered the former with showers of arrows. Thy mighty son Vikarna, baffling those arrowy showers, looked resplendent on the field of battle. Angada resisted with showers of arrows the heroic Uttamaujas in that battle as the latter rushed towards Drona. That encounter between those two lions among men became frightful, and it filled both them and the troops with great joy. 59 The great bowman Durmukha, endued with great might, resisted with his shafts the heroic Purujit as the latter proceeded towards Drona.40 Purujit struck Durmukha between his eyebrows with a long shaft. Thereupon Durmukha's

^{*} All the printed texts, not excepting that of Bombay, read Draupadeyās. There can be no doubt, however, that it should be Draupadeyas.—T.

Karna, in return, repeatedly covered face looked beautiful like a lotus with its stalk.41 Karna resisted with showers of arrows the five Kekaya brothers owning red standards, as they proceeded towards Drona.42 Scorched with the arrowy showers of Karna, those five brothers covered Karna with their arrows.

them with showers of arrows.43 Covered with arrows, neither Karna nor the five brothers could be seen with their steeds, charioteers, standards, and cars. 44 Thy sons Durjaya, Jaya, and Vijaya, resisted Nila, and the ruler of the Kāçis, and Jayatsena, three against three.45 And the combats between those warriors deepened and gladdened the hearts of the spectators like those between a lion, a tiger, and a wolfe on the one side and a bear. a baffalo, and a bull on the other. The brothers Kshemadhurti and Vrihanta mangled Sātyaki of the Sātwata race with their keen arrows as the latter proceeded against Drona.47 The battle between those two on the one side and Satyaki on the other became exceedingly wonderful to behold, like that between a lion and two mighty elephants with rent temples in the forest.43 The king of the Chedis, excited with wrath and shooting many arrows, kept away from Drona king Amvastha, that here who always delighted in battle.49 Then king Amvastha pierced his antagonist with a long arrow capable of penetrating into the very bones. Thereupon the latter, with bow and arrow loosened from his grasp, fell down from his car on the ground. The noble Kripa, son of Caradwat, with many small arrows, resisted Vardhakshemi of the Vrishni race who was the embodiment of wrath (in battle).61 They that looked at Kripa and Vardhakshemi, those heroes conversant with every mode of warfare, thus engaged in encountering each other, became so absorbed in it that they could not attend to anything Somadatta's son, for enhancing the glory of Drona, resisted king Manimat of great activity as the latter came to the fight.58 Then Manimat quickly cut off the bowstring, the standard, the banner, the charioteer, and the umbrella of Somadatta's son and caused them to fall down from the latter's car.*54 * The first line of 54 is read incorrectly in the Bengal texts. I follow the Bombay reading .- T.

The son of Somadatta then, bearing the device of the sacrificial stake on his standard, that slayer of foes, quickly jumping down from his car, cut off, with his large sword. his antagonist with his steeds, charioteer, standard, and car. 16 Re-ascending then upon his own car, and taking up another bow, and guiding his steeds himself, he began, O monarch, to consume the Pandava Vrishasena (the son of Karna), competent for the feat, resisted with showers of arrows king Pandya who was rush, ing to battle like Indra himself following the Asuras for smiting them. 57 With maces and spiked bludgeons, and swords and axes and stones, and short clubs and mallets and discs and short arrows and battle-axes,58 with dust and wind and fire and water and ashes and brick-bats and straw and trees, afflicting and smiting and breaking and slaying and routing the foe and hurling them on the hostile ranks, 50 and terrifying them therewith, came Ghatotkacha, desirous of getting at Drona. The Rākshasa Alamvusha, however, excited with rage, encountered him with diverse weapons and diverse accoutrements of And the battle that took place between those two foremost of Rakshasas resembled that which took place in days of old between Camvara and the chief of the celestials. blessed be thou, took place hundreds of single combats between car-warriors and elephants and steeds and foot-soldiers of thy army and theirs in the midst of that dreadful geneneral engagement. Indeed, such a battle was never seen or heard of before 62-68 as that which then took place between those warriors that were bent upon Drona's destruction and protection. Indeed, many were the encounters that were then seen on all parts of the field, some of which were terrible, some beautiful, and some exceedingly fierce, O lord!" "64-65

SECTION XXVI.

"Dhritarashtra said,—'When the troops were thus engaged and thus proceeded against one another in separate divisions, how did the Parthas and the warriors of my army endued with great activity fight? What also did Arjuna do towards the Generated on 2022-02-03 12:23 GMT / https://hdl.handle Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrus car-warriors of the Samsaptakas? And what, O Sanjaya, did the Samsaptakas, in their turn, do to Arjuna?

"Sanjaya said,-'When the troops were thus engaged and proceeded against one another, thy son Duryodhana himself rushed against Bhimasena, heading his elephant division. Like an elephant encountering an elephant, like a bovine bull encountering a bovine bull, Bhimasena, summoned by the king himself, rushed against that elephant division of the Kaurava army.4 Skilled in battle and endued with great might of arms, Pritha's son, O sire, quickly broke that elephant division.5 Those elephants, huge as hills, and with juice trickling down from every part of their bodies, were mangled and forced to turn back by Bhimasena with his arrows. Indeed, as the wind, when it riseth, driveth away gathering masses of clouds, so did that son of Pavana rout that elephant force of the Kauravas.7 Bhima, shooting his arrows at those elephants, looked resplendent like the risen Sun striking everything in the world with Those elephants, afflicted with the shafts of Bhima. became covered with blood and looked beautiful like masses of clouds in the welkin penetrated with the rays of the Sun. Then Duryodhana, excited with wrath, pierced with his sharp shafts that son of the Wind-god who was causing such a slaughter among his elephants.10 Then Bhima, with eyes red in wrath. desirous of despatching the king to Yama's abode, pierced him speedily with many sharp shafts." Then Duryodhana, mangled all over with arrows and excited with rage, pierced Bhima the son of Pandu with many shafts endued with the effulgence of solar rays, smiling the while.12 Then the son of Pandu, with a couple of broad-headed arrows, quickly cut off Duryodhana's bow as also his standard bearing the device of a jewelled elephant decked with diverse gems.18 Duryodhana thus afflicted, O sire, by Bhima, the ruler of the Angas on his elephant came there for afflicting the son of Pandu.14 Thereupon Bhimasena deeply pierced with a long arrow that prince of elephants advancing with loud roars, between its two frontal globes.16 That arrow, penetrating through its body, sank deep in the earth. And at this the elephant fell down like a hill riven by the thunder.16 While the elephant

http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google Generated on 2022-02-03 12:26 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized was falling down, the Mechecha king also was falling down with it. But Vrikodara, endued with great activity, cut off his head with a broad-headed arrow before his antagonist actuatly fell down.17 When the heroic ruler of the Angas fell, his divisions fled away. Steeds and elephants and car-warriors, struck with panic, crushed foot-soldiers as they fled.18

"'When those troops, thus broken, fled away in all directions, the ruler of the Pragiyotishas then advanced against Bhima. upon his elephant.*19 With its two (fore) legs and trunk contracted, filled with rage, and with eyes rolling, that elephant seemed to consume the son of Pandu (like a blazing fire).20 And it pounded Vrikodara's car with the steeds voked thereto into Then Bhima ran forward and got under the elephant's body, 1 for he knew the science called Anjalikavedha. Indeed, Getting under the elephant's body, the son of Pandu fled not. he began to strike it frequently with his bare arms.22 smote that invincible elephant which was bent upon slaying him. Thereupon the latter began to quickly turn round like a potter's Endued with the might of ten thousand elephants, the blessed Vrikodara, having struck that elephant thus, came out from under Supratika's body and stood facing the latter.24 Supratika then, seizing Bhima by its trunk, threw him down Indeed, having seized him by the by means of its knees. neck, that elephant wished to slay him. Twisting the elephant's trunk, Bhima freed himself from its twine, and once more got under the body of that huge creature.26 waited there, expecting the arrival of a hostile elephant of his Coming out from under the beast's body, Bhima then ran away with great speed.27 Then a loud noise was heard, made by all the troops, to the effect,—Alas, Bhima hath been slain by the elephant !28 - The Pandava host, frightened by that elephant, suddenly fled away, O king, to where Vrikodara was waiting.39 Meanwhile, king Yudhishthira, thinking Vrikodara to have been slain, surrounded Bhagadatta on all sides, aided by the Panchalas.30 Having surrounded him with numerous.

^{*} After 19 occurs a complete sloka in the Bombay text which does not appear to be genuine, -T.

cars, king Yudhishthira, that foremost of car-warriors, covered Bhagadatta with keen shafts by hundreds and thousands. 91 Then Bhagadatta, that king of the mountainous regions, frustrating with his iron hook that shower of arrows, began to consume both the Pandavas and the Panchalas by means of that elephant of his. 82 Indeed, O monarch, the feat that we then beheld, achieved by old Bhagadatta with his elephant, was highly Then the ruler of the Daçarnas rushed against the king of the Pragjyotishas, on a fleet elephant with temporal juice trickling down, for attacking Supratika in the flank.34 The battle then that took place between those two elephants of awful size, resembled that between two winged mountains overgrown with forests in days of old.85 Then the elephant of Bhagadatta, wheeling round and attacking the elephant of the king of the Dargarnas, ripped open the latter's flank and slew it outright. 36 Then Bhagadatta himself, with seven lances bright as the rays of the Sun, slew his (human) antagonist seated on his elephant just when the latter was about to fall down from his seat. 37 Piercing king Bhagadatta then (with many arrows), Yudhishthira surrounded him on all sides with a large number of cars. Staying on his elephant amid car-warriors encompassing him all around, he looked resplendent like a blazing fire on a mountain-top in the midst of a dense forest.39 He stayed fearlessly in the midst of those serried cars ridden by fierce bowmen all of whom showered upon him their arrows.40 Then the king of the Pragjyotishas, pressing (with his toe) his huge elephant, urged him towards the car of Yuyudhana.41 That prodigious beast, then seizing the car of Cini's grandson, hurled it to a distance with great force. Yuyudhana, however, escaped by timely His charioteer also, abandoning the large steeds of the Sindhu breed yoked unto that car, quickly followed Sātyaki and stood where the latter stopped.48 Meanwhile the elephant, quickly coming out of that circle of cars, began to throw down all the kings (that attempted to bar his course).44 among men, frightened out of their wits by that single elephant coursing swiftly, regarded it in that battle as multiplied into many.46 Indeed, Bhagadatta, mounted on that elephant of his, began to smite down the Pandavas like the chief of the celestials mounted on Airavata smiting down the Danavas (in days of old). As the Panchalas fled in all directions, loud and awful was the noise that arose amongst them, made by their elephants and steeds.47 And while the Pandava troops were thus destroyed by Bhagadatta, Bhima, excited with rage, once more rushed against the ruler of the Pragjyotishas.48 The latter's elephant then frightened the steeds of the rushing Bhima by drenching them with water spouted forth from its trunk, and thereupon those animals bore Bhima away from the field.49 Then Kriti's son Ruchiparvan, mounted on his car, quickly rushed against Bhagadatta, scattering showers of arrows and advancing like the Destroyer himself. Then Bhagadatta, that ruler of the hilly regions, possessed of beautiful limbs, despatched Ruchiparvan with a straight shaft abode. +51 Upon the fall of the heroic Ruchiparvan, Subhadra's son, and the sons of Draupadi, and Chekitana, and Dhrishtaketu, and Yuyutshu, began to afflict the elephant. 52 Desiring to slay that elephant, all those warriors, uttering loud shouts, began to pour their arrowy showers on the animal like the clouds drenching the Earth with their watery down-pours. 58 Urged then by its skilful rider with heel, hook, and toe, the animal advanced quickly with trunk stretched, and eyes and ears fixed.54 Treading down Yuyutsu's steeds, the animal then slew his charioteer. Thereupon, O king, Yuyutsu, abandoning his car, fled away quickly.55 Then the Pandava warriors, desirous of slaying that prince of elephants, uttered loud shouts and drenched it quickly with showers of arrows. 66 At this time, thy son, excited with rage, rushed against the car of Subhadra's Meanwhile, king Bhagadatta on his elephant, scattering his shafts on the foe,57 looked resplendent like the Sun himself scattering his rays on the Earth. Arjuna's son then pierced him with a dozen shafts, and Yuyutsu with ten,58 and each of the sons of Draupadi pierced him with three shafts and Dhrista-That elephant then, pierced ketu also pierced him with three. with these shafts shot with great care, looked resplendent like a mighty mass of clouds penetrated with the rays of the Afflicted with those shafts of the foe, that elephant then, urged by its rider with skill and vigor, 60 began to throw down the hostile warriors on both his flanks. Like a cowherd belabouring his cattle in the forest with a goad, 61 Bhagadatta repeatedly smote the Pandava host. Like the cawing of quickly retreating crows when assailed by hawks,62 a loud and confused noise was heard among the Pandava troops who fled away with great speed.68 That prince of elephants, struck by its rider with the hook, resembled, O king, a winged mountain of old. And it filled the hearts of the enemy with fear like to what merchants experience at sight of the surging sea.*64 elephants and car-warriors and steeds and kings, flying away in fear, made, as they fled, a loud and awful din that, O monarch, filled earth and sky and heaven and the cardinal and subsidiary directions in that battle.65 Mounted on that foremost of elephants, king Bhagadatta penetrated the hostile army like the Asura Virochana in days of old into the celestial host in battle well protected by the gods. 66 A violent wind began to blow; a dusty cloud covered the welkin and the troops; and people regarded that single elephant as multipled into many coursing all over the field." "67

^{*} The second line of 46 is omitted in the Bengal texts.-T.

[†] The Bengali translators have made a mess of these two verses. Amongst others, K. P. Singha makes Ruchiparvan follow Bhima and supposes Suvarchas to be some Pandava warrior who slays Ruchiparvan. The reading Suvarchas is vicious. The correct reading is Suparva, meaning, as Nilakantha explains, "of beautiful limbs. Parvatapati is Bhaga. datta himself .- T.

SECTION XXVII.

"Sanjaya said,—'Thou askest me about the feats of Arjuna in battle. Listen, O thou of mighty-arms, to what Pārtha achieved in the fight! Beholding the risen dust and hearing the wail of the troops when Bhagadatta was performing great feats on the field, the son of Kunti addressed Krishna and said,2—O slayer of Madhu, it seems that the ruler of the Prāgjyotishas hath, on his elephant, with great impetuosity, advanc-

^{*} The Bengal reading abhitas is incorrect. It should be Kshubhitas.

This loud din that we hear must be due to Well-versed in the art of grinding and battling from the back of an elephant, and not inferior to Indra himself in battle, he, I think, is the foremost of all elephant-warriors in the world. His elephant again is the foremost of elephants, without a rival to encounter it in battle. Possessed of great dexterity and above all fatigue, it is, again, impervious to all weapons. Capable of bearing every weapon and even the touch of fire, it will, O sinless one, alone destroy the Pandava force today! Except us two, there is none else capable of checking that crea-Go quickly, therefore, to that spot where the ruler of the Pragiyotishas is. Proud in battle in consequence of the strength of his elephant, and arrogant in consequence of his age, I will this very day send him as a guest to the slayer of Vala! -At these words of Arjuna, Krishna began to proceed to the place where Bhagadatta was breaking the Pandava While Arjuna was proceeding towards Bhagadatta, the mighty Samsaptaka car-warriors numbering fourteen thousand' made up of ten thousand Gopalas or Narayanas who used to follow Vasudeva, returning to the field, summoned him to Beholding the Pandava host broken by Bhagadatta, and summoned on the other hand by the Samsaptakas, Ariuna's heart was divided in twain,18 And he began to think-Which of these two acts will be better for me to do today, to return from this spot for battling with the Samsaptakas or to repair to Yudhishthira?18—Reflecting with the aid of his understanding, O perpetuator of Kuru's race, Arjuna's heart at last was firmly fixed on the slaughter of the Samsaptakas.14 Desirous of alone slaughtering in battle thousands of car-warriors, Indra's son (Arjuna) having the foremost of apes on his banner suddenly turned back.16 Even this was what both Duryodhana and Karna had thought of for achieving the slaughter of Arjuna. And it was for this that they had made arrangements for the double encounter.16 The son of Pandu allowed his heart to waver this side and that, but at last resolv-

^{*} I render 16 and 17 rather freely, as otherwise the sense would not be clear.—T.

ing to slay those foremost of warriors, viz., the Samsaptakas, he baffled the purpose of his enemies.*17 Then the mighty Samsaptaka car-warriors, O king, shot at Arjuna thousands of straight arrows.18 Covered with those arrows, O monarch, neither Kunti's son Partha, nor Krishna otherwise called Janarddana, nor the steeds, nor the car, could be seen.19 Janarddana became deprived of his senses and perspired greatly, Thereupon Partha shot the Brahma weapon and nearly exterminated them all.30 Hundreds upon hundreds of arms with bows and arrows and bowstrings in grasp, cut off from trunks, and hundreds upon hundreds of standards and steeds and charioteers and car-warriors, fell down on the ground.21 Huge elephants well-equipt and resembling foremost of hills overgrown with woods or masses of clouds, afflicted with Partha's shafts and deprived of riders, fell down on the earth.22 elephants again, with riders on their backs, crushed by means of Arjuna's shafts, fell down, deprived of life, shorn of the embroidered choths on their backs, and with their housings Cut off by Kiritin with his broad-headed arrows, countless arms having swords and lances and rapiers for their nails or having clubs and battle-axes in grasp, fell down on the earth.24 Heads also, beautiful, O king, as the morning sun or the lotus or the moon, cut off by Arjuna with his arrows, dropped down on the ground.25 While Phalguna in rage was thus engaged in slaying the foe with diverse kinds of well-adorned and fatal shafts, that host seemed to be ablaze.26 Beholding Dhananjava crushing that host like an elephant crushing lotus stalks. all creatures applauded him, saying,—Excellent, Excellent!27— Seeing that feat of Partha resembling that of Vasava himself, Madhava wondered much and, addressing him with joined hands,28 said,—Verily, O Partha, I think that this feat which thou hast achieved today in battle is difficult of being achieved by Cakra or Yama or the Lord of treasures himself! 29 that thou hast today felled in battle hundreds and thousands of mighty Samsaptaka warriors all together !20-Having slain the

^{*} The Bengal texts read, - "he is either the first or the second, on the earth, I think."-T.

Samsaptakas then,—them, that is, who stayed in battle,—Pārtha addressed Krishna, saying,—Go towards Bhagadatta!—'"s1

SECTION XXVIII.

"Sanjaya said,—'At Pārtha's desire, Krishna then urged his white steeds, fleet as the mind and covered in golden armour, towards Drona's divisions.1 While that foremost one of the Kurus was thus proceeding towards his brothers who were exceedingly afflicted by Drona, Suçarman with his brothers, followed him behind, desirous of battle.3 The ever-victorious Arjuna then addressed Krishna, saying,—O thou of unfading glory, this Suçarman here, with this brothers, challengeth me to battle! O slayer of foes, our host again is broken (by Drona) towards the north! In consequence of these Samsaptakas, my heart wavers today as to whether I should do this Sall I slay the Samsaptakas now, or protect from harm my own troops already afflicted by the foe? Know this to be what I am thinking of, viz.,-Which of these would be better for me?5—Thus addressed by him, he of Daçarha's race turned back the car, and took the son of Pandu to where the ruler of the Trigartas was. Then Arjuna, pierced Suçarman with seven shafts, and cut off both his bow and standard with a couple of sharp arrows. He then, with six arrows. quickly despatched the brothers of the Trigarta king to Yama's abode.*8 Then Sucarman, aiming Arjuna, hurled at him a dart made wholly of iron and looking like a snake, and aiming Vasudeva, hurled a lance at him. Cutting off that dart with three arrows and that lance also with three other arrows, Arjuna, by means of his arrowy showers, deprived Suçarman of his senses on his car.10 Him advancing fiercely (towards thy division), scattering showers of arrows like Vasava pouring rain, none among thy troops, O king, ventured to oppose.14 Like a fire consuming heaps of straw as it advances, Dhananjaya advanced, scorching all the mighty car-warriors among the

^{*} The Bombay reading paritas is vicious. The Bengal texts read

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:26 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

Kauravas by means of his arrows.18 Like living creatures incapable of bearing the touch of fire, thy troops could not bear the irressistible impetuosity of that intelligent son of Kunti.15 Indeed, the son of Pandu, overwhelming the hostile host by means of his arrows, came upon the king of the Pragivotishas, O monarch, like Garuda swooping down (upon his prey).14 then held in his hands that Gandiva which in battle was beneficial to the innocent Pandavas and baneful to all foes, for the destruction of Kshatriyas brought about, O king, by the fault of thy son who had recourse to deceitful dice for accomplishing his end !15-16 Agitated by Partha thus, thy host then, O king, broke like a boat when it strikes against a rock.17 thousand bowmen, brave and fierce, firmly resolved to conquer, advanced (to encounter Arjuna).18 With dauntless hearts, those mighty car-warriors all surrounded him. bearing any burden how heavy soever in battle, Partha took up that heavy burden.19 As an angry elephant of sixty years, with rent temples, crushes an assemblage of lotus stalks, even so did Partha crush that division of thy army ! And when that division was being thus crushed, king Bhagadatta, on that same elephant of his, impetuously rushed towards Arjuna.21 upon Dhananjaya, that tiger among men, staying on his car, received Bhagadatta. That encounter between Arjuna's car and Bhagadatta's elephant was fierce in the extreme.22 heroes, viz., Bhagadatta and Dhananjaya, then coursed on the field, the one on his car and the other on his elephant, both of which were equipt according to the rules of science.28 Then Bhagadatta like the lord Indra, from his elephant looking like a mass of clouds, poured on Dhananjaya, showers of arrows. 44 The vailiant son of Pritha, the son of Vasava, however, with his arrows, cut off those arrowy showers of Bhagadatta before they could reach him. 35 The king of the Pragjyotishas then, baffling that arrowy shower of Arjuna, struck both Partha and Krishna, O king, with many shafts.26 And overwhelming both of them with a thick shower of shafts, Bhagadatta then urged his elephant for the detruction of Krishna and Partha. 37 holding that angry elephant advancing like Death himself, Janarddana quickly moved his car in such a way as to keep the Generated on 2022-02-03 12:26 GMT / https://hd Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.h elephant on his left.²⁸ Dhananjaya, although he thus got the opportunity of slaying that huge elephant with its rider from the back, wished not yet to avail of it, remembering the rules of fair fight.²⁹ The elephant, however, coming upon other elephants and cars and steeds, O king, despatched them all to Yama's abode. Beholding this, Dhananjaya became filled with rage.' "50

SECTION XXIX.

"Dhritarāshtra said,—'Filled with rage, what did Pārtha the son of Pāndu do to Bhagadatta? What also did the king of the Prāgjyotishas do to Pārtha? Tell me all this, O Sanjaya!"

"Sanjaya said,—'While Partha and Krishna were thus engaged with the ruler of the Pragjyotishas, all creatures regarded them to be very near the jaws of Death. monarch, from the neck of his elephant, Bhagadatta scattered showers of shafts on the two Krishnas staying upon their car. He pierced Devaki's son with many arrows made wholly of black iron, equipt with wings of gold, whetted on stone, and shot from his bow drawn to the fullest stretch. whose touch resembled that of fire, equipt with beautiful feathers, and shot by Bhagadatta, passing through Devaki's son, entered the earth.5 Partha then cut off Bhagadatta's bow, and slaying next the warrior that protected his elephant from the flank, began to fight with him as if in sport. Then Bhagadatta hurled at him fourteen lances of sharp points, that were bright as the rays of the Sun. Arjuna, however, cut each of those lances into three fragments.7 Then Indra's son cut open the armour in which that elephant was cased, by means of a thick shower of arrows. The armour thus cut off, fell down on the earth.8 Exceedingly afflicted with the arrows shot by Arjuna, that elephant, deprived of its coat of mail, looked like a prince of mountains destitute of its cloudy robes and with streaks of water running adown its breast. Then the ruler of the Pragjyotishas hurled at Vasudeva a dart made wholly of iron and decked with gold, That dart Arjuna cut in twain,10

Then cutting off the kings's standard and umbrella by means of his arrows, Arjuna quickly pierced that ruler of the mountainous realms with ten arrows, smiling the while.11 pierced with those shafts of Arjuna that were beauifully winged with Kanka feathers, Bhagadatta, O monarch, became incensed with the son of Pandu.18 He then hurled some lances at Arjuna's head and uttered a loud shout. In consequence of those lances Arjuna's diadem was displaced.18 Arjuna then, having placed his diadem properly, addressed the ruler of the Pragjyotishas, saying,—Look well on this world! 4—Thus addressed by him, Bhagadatta became filled with rage, and taking up a bright bow showered upon both the Pandava and Govinda his arrowy down-pours.16 Partha then, cutting off his bow and quivers, quickly struck him with two and seventy shafts, afflicting his vital limbs.16 Thus pierced, he was excessively pained. Filled then with rage, he, with mantras, inspired his hook into the Vaishnava weapon and hurled it at Arjuna's breast. That all-slaying weapon, hurled by Bhagadatta, Keçava, covering Arjuna, received on his breast.18 Thereupon that weapon became a triumphal garland on Keçava's breast. Arjuna then cheerlessly addressed Keçava, saying,19-O sinless one, without battling thyself it is thine to only guide my steeds! Thou hadst said so, O lotus-eyed one! Why then dost thou not adhere to thy promise?20 If I sink in distress, or become unable to baffle or resist a foe or weapon, then mayst thou act so, but not when I am standing thus!" Thou knowest that with my bow and arrows I am competent to vanquish these worlds with the gods, the Asuras, and men!32—Hearing these words of Arjuna, Vāsudeva replied unto him, saying,—Listen, O Pārtha, to this secret and ancient history as it is, O sinless one !28 I have four forms, eternally engaged as I am in protecting the Dividing my own Self, I ordain the good of the worlds.34 One form of mine, staying on the Earth, is engaged in the practice of ascetic austerities. Another beholdeth the good and the evil deeds in the world.25 My third form, coming into the world of men, is engaged in action. My fourth form lieth down in sleep for a thousand years.26 That form of mine which awaketh from sleep at the end of a thousand years, granteth, upon awakening, excellent boons to persons deserving of them. 37 The Earth, knowing (on one occasion) that that time had come, asked of me a boon for (her son) Naraka. O Partha, what that boon was !  - Possessed of the Vaishnava weapon, let my son become incapable of being slain by the gods and the Asurus. It behoveth thee to grant me that weanon !23—Hearing of this prayer, I then gave, in days of old, the supreme and infallible Vaishnava weapon to the Earth's I said also at that time these words :- O Earth, let this weapon be infallible for the protection of Naraka, will be able to slay him ! Protected by this weapon, thy son will always, in all the worlds, be invincible and crush all hostile hosts! 22-Saying, So be it !- the intelligent goddess went away, her wishes fulfilled! And Naraka also became invincible and always scorched his foes.83 It was from Naraka. O Partha, that the ruler of the Pragjyotishas got this weapon There is none, in all the worlds, O sire, including even Indra and Rudra, who is unslayable by this weapon! 44 It was for thy sake, therefore, that I baffled it, violating my The great Asura hath now been divested of that supreme weapon. 86 Slay now, O Partha, that invincible foe of thine, viz., Bhagadatta, that enemy of the gods, even as I formerly slew for the good of the worlds the Asura Naraka !36-Thus addressed by the high-souled Keçava, Partha suddenly overwhelmed Bhagadatta with clouds of whetted arrows. 57 Then the mighty-armed and high-souled Arjuna fearlessly struck a long arrow between the frontal globes of his enemy's elephant. 58 That arrow, spiltting the elephant like the thunder splitting a mountain, penetrated into its body to the very wings like a snake penetrating into an anthill.40 Though urged repeatedly then by Bhagadatta, the elephant refused to obey him like a poor man's wife her lord.41 With limbs paralysed, it fell down, striking the earth with its tusks. Uttering a cry of distress, that huge elephant gave up the ghost.42 The son of Pandu then, with a straight shaft furnished with a crescentshaped head, pierced the bosom of king Bhagadatta.48 breast, being pierced through by the diadem-decked (Arjuna), king Bhagadatta, deprived of life, threw down his bow and arrows.44 Loosened from his head, the valuable piece of cloth that had served him for a turban, fell down like a petal from a letus when its stalk is violently struck.45 And he himself, decked with golden garlands, fell down from his huge elephant adorned with golden housings like a flowering Kincuka broken by the force of the wind from the mountain-top.46 The son of Indra then, having slain in battle that monarch who resembled Indra himself in prowess and who was Indra's friend, broke the other warriors of thy army inspired with hope of victory, like the mighty wind breaking rows of trees." "47

SECTION XXX.

"Sanjaya said,—'Having slain Bhagadatta who was ever the favorite and friend of Indra and who was possessed of great energy, Partha circumambulated him.1 Then the two sons of the king of Gandhara, viz., the brothers Vrishaka and Achala. those subjugators of hostile towns, began to afflict Arjuna in battle. Those two heroic bowmen, uniting together, began to deeply pierce Arjuna from before and behind with whetted shafts of great impetuosity.8 Arjuna then, with sharp shafts, cut off the steeds and driver and bow and umbrella and standard and car of Vrishaka the son of Suvala into atoms.4 With clouds of arrows and diverse other weapons, Arjuna then once more severely afflicted the Gandhara troops headed by Suvala's son.5 Then Dhananjaya, filled with rage, despatched to Yama's abode. with his shafts, five hundred heroic Gandharas with upraised weapons. That mighty-armed hero then, quickly alighting from that car whose steeds had been slain, mounted upon the car of his brother and took up another bow." Then those two brothers, viz., Vrishaka and Achala, both mounted on the same car. began incessantly to pierce Vibhatsu with showers of arrows. Indeed, those high-souled princes, those relatives of thine by marriage, viz., Vrishaka and Achala, struck Partha very severely like Vritra or Vala striking Indra of old.9 Of unfailing aim, those two princes of Gandhara, themselves unhurt, began once more to strike the son of Pandu like the two months of summer afflicting the world with sweat-producing rays.*1° Then Arjuna slew those princes and tigers among men, viz., Vrisha and Achala, staying on one car side by side, with, O monarch, a single arrow.¹¹ Then those mighty-armed heroes, with red eyes and looking like lions, those uterine brothers having similar features, together fell down from that car.¹² And their bodies, dear to friends, falling down upon the earth, lay there, scattering sacred fame all around.¹²

"Beholding their brave and unretreating maternal uncles thus slain by Arjuna, thy sons, O monarch, rained many weapons upon him.14 Cakuni also, conversant with a hundred different kinds of illusions, seeing his brothers slain, created illusions for confounding the two Krishnas.15 Then clubs, and iron balls, and rocks, and Cataghnis, and darts, and maces, and spiked bludgeons, and scimitars, and lances, and mallets, and axes,14 and Kampanas, and swords, and nails, and short clubs, and battle-axes, and razors, and arrows with sharp broad heads, and Nālikas, and calf-tooth-headed shafts, and arrows having bony heads,17 and discs, and snake-headed shafts, and spears, and diverse other kinds of weapons, fell upon Arjuna from all And asses, and camels, and buffalos, and tigers, and lions, and deer, and leopards, and bears, and wolves, and vultures, and monkeys, and various reptiles,19 and diverse cannibals, and swarms of crows, all hungry, and excited with rage, ran towards Arjuna.20 Then Dhananjaya the son of Kunti, that hero conversant with celestial weapons, shooting clouds of arrows, assailed them all.21 And assailed by that hero with those excellent and strong shafts, they uttered loud cries and fell down deprived of life.22 Then a thick darkness appeared and covered Arjuna's car, and from within that gloom harsh voices rebuked Arjuna.23 The latter, however, by means of the weapons

^{*} The Bengal texts read the second line differently. Loke in the locative is incorrect. It should be Lokam (accusative). For Gharman-cubhis the Bengal reading is Gharmanvubhis. Nilakantha explains that varsha (whence vārshika) means season. Hence Nidagha-vārshikau māsau would mean the two months of summer. If the Bengal reading were adopted, the meaning would be "like summer and the rainy seasons afflicting the world with sweat and rain,"—T.

Generated on 2022-03-03-12:26 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized , called Jyotishka, dispelled that thick and awful darkness.24 When that darkness was dispelled, frightful waves of water appeared. For drying up those waters, Arjuna applied the weapon called Aditya. And in consequence of that weapon, the waters were almost dried up. Thus diverse illusions, repeatedly Arjuna destroyed speedily by means created by Sauvala,25-26 of the force of his weapons, laughing the while. Upon all his illusions being destroyed, afflicted with Arjuna's shafts and unmanned by fear, 37 Cakuni fled away, aided by his fleet steeds, like a vulgar wretch. Then Arjuna, acquainted with all weapons. showing his enemies the exceeding lightness of his hands. showered upon the Kaurava host clouds of arrows. of thy son, thus slaughtered by Partha, " became divided into two streams like the current of Ganga when impeded by a And one of those streams, O bull among men, proceeded towards Drona, so and the other with loud cries, proceeded towards Duryodhana. Then a thick dust arose and covered all the troops. We could not then see Arjuna.31 Only the twang of Gandiva was heard by us from off the field. Indeed, the twang of Gandiva was heard, rising above the blare of conchs and the beat of drums and the noise of other instruments. southern part of the field took place a fierce battle between many foremost warriors32-88 on the one side and Arjuna on the I, however, followed Drona. The various divisions of Yudhisthira's force smote the foe on every part of the field." The diverse divisions of thy son, O Bharata, Arjuna smote, even as the wind in the summer season destroys masses of clouds in the welkin.35 Indeed, as Arjuna came, scattering clouds of arrows like Vasava pouring thick showers of rain, there was none in thy army who could resist that great and fierce bowman, that tiger among men. 36 Struck by Partha, thy warriors were in great pain. They fled away, and in flying killed many among their own number. 37 The arrows shot by Arjuna, winged with Kanka feathers and capable of penetrating into every body, fell covering all sides like flights of locusts.38 Piercing steeds and car-warriors and elephants and foot-soldiers, O sire, like snakes through ant-hills, those shafts entered the earth. 39 Arjuna never shot two arrows at any elephant, steed, or man, with only one arrow, each of these, severely afflicted, fell down, deprived of life.⁴⁰ With slain men and elephants and shaft-struck steeds lying all about, and echoing with the yells of dogs and jackalls, the field of battle presented a variegated and awful sight.⁴¹ Pained with arrows, sire forsook son, and friend, forsook friend, and son, forsook sire. Indeed, every one was intent upon protecting his own self. Struck with Pārtha's shafts, many warriors abandoned the very animals that bore them.' "42"

SECTION XXXI.

"Dhritarāshtra said,—'When those divisions (of mine), O Sanjaya, were broken and routed, and all of you retreated quickly from the field, what became the state of your minds?' The rallying of ranks when broken and flying away without beholding a spot whereon to stand, is always exceedingly difficult. Tell me all about it, O Sanjaya!'

"Sanjaya said,— [Although the troops were broken], yet, O monarch, many foremost of heroes in the world, inspired by the desire of doing good to thy son and of maintaining their own reputation, followed Drona. In that dreadful pass they fearlessly followed their commander, achieving meritorious feats, against the Pandava troops with weapons upraised and Yudhishthira within accessible distance. Taking advantage of an error of Bhimasena of great energy and of the heroic Sātyaki and Dhrishtadyumna, O monarch, the Kuru leaders fell upon the Pāndava army. +5 The Pānchālas urged their troops, saying,-Drona, Drona !- Thy sons, however, urged all the Kurus, saying,—Let not Drona be slain. Let not Drona be slain!6-One side saying,—Slay Drona, Slay Drona,—and the other saying,—Let not Drona be slain, Let not Drona be slain, the Kurus and the Pandavas seemed to gamble, making Drona their stake.7 Dhrishtadyumna the prince of the Panchalas

^{*} The Bengal reading Sambhrante is vicious. The Bombay reading Samprapte is evidently correct.—T.

⁺ I render 5 a little freely, and expand it slightly to make the sense clear,—T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:26 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

proceeded to the side of all those Panchala car-warriors whom Drona saught to crush.8 Thus no rule was observed as to the antagonist one might select for battling with him. became dreadful. Heroes encountered heroes, uttering loud shouts.9 Their foes could not make the Pandavas tremble. the other hand, recollecting all their woes, the latter made the ranks of their enemies tremble.10 Though possessed of modesty yet excited with rage and vindictiveness, and urged by energy and might, they approached that dreadful battle, reckless of their very lives, for slaying Drona.11 That encounter of heroes of immeasurable energy sporting in fierce battle making life itself the stake, resembled the collision of iron againtst adamant.12 The oldest men even could not recollect whether they had seen or heard of a battle as fierce as that which happened on this occasion.18 The Earth, in that encounter marked with great carnage, afflicted with the weight of that vast host, began to tremble.14 The awful noise made by the Kuru army agitated and tossed by the foe, paralyzing the very welkin, penetrated into the midst of even the Pandava host.16 Then Drona, coming upon the Pandava divisions by thousands, and careering over the field, broke them by means of his whetted shafts.16 When these were being thus crushed by Drona of wonderful achievements, Dhrishtadyumna, the generalissimo of the Pandava host, filled with rage, himself checked Drona. 17 The encounter that we beheld between Drona and the prince of the Panchalas was highty wonderful. It is my firm conviction that it has no parallel.13

"'Then Nila, resembling a veritable fire, his arrows constituting its sparks and his bow its flame, began to consume the Kuru ranks, like a conflagation consuming heaps of dry grass.13 The valiant son of Drona, who from before had been desirous of an encounter with him, smilingly addressed Nila as the latter came consuming the troops, and said unto him these polite words: *20 —O Nila, what dost thou gain by consuming so many common soldiers with thy arrowy flames? Fight with my

^{*} The Bengal reading Purvābhilāshi is better than Purvābhibhāsi. Between Nila and Acwatthaman existed a rivalry since some time. - T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:26 GMT / https://hdl.hz Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathi unaided self, and filled with rage, strike me !21-Thus addressed. Nila, the brightness of whose face resembled the splendour of a full-blown lotus, pierced Acwatthaman with his shafts,him, that is, whose body resembled an assemblage of lotuses and whose eyes were like lotus petals.29 Deeply and suddenly pierced by Nila, Drona's son, with three broad-headed arrows, cut off his antagonist's bow and standard and umbrella.33 Quickly jumping down from his car, Nila then, with a shield and an excellent sword, desired to sever from Acwatthaman's trunk his head like a bird (bearing away its prey in its talons).24 Drona's son, however, O sinless one, by means of a broadheaded arrow, cut off, from his antagonist's trunk, his head graced with a beautiful nose and decked with excellent ear-rings, and which rested on elevated shoulders.25 That hero then, the brightness of whose face resembled the splendour of the full moon and whose eyes were like lotus petals, whose stature was tall, and complexion like that of the lotus, thus slain, fell down on the earth.26 The Pandava host then, filled with great grief, began to tremble, when the preceptor's son thus slew Nila of blazing energy.27 The great car-warriors of the Pandavas, O sire, all thought,-Alas, how would Indra's son (Arjuna) be able to rescue us from the foe,28 when that mighty warrior is engaged on the southern part of the field in slaughtering the remnant of the Samsaptakas and the Narayana force ?—' "29

SECTION XXXII.

"Sanjaya said,—'Vrikodara, however, could not brook that slaughter of his army. He struck Vālhika with sixty, and Karna with ten arrows.' Drona then, desirous of slaying. Bhima, quickly struck the latter, in his very vitals, many straight and whetted shafts of keen edge.' Desirous again of allowing no time, he once more struck him with six and twenty shafts whose touch resembled that of fire and which were all like snakes of virulent poison.' Then Karna pierced him with a dozen shafts, and Açwtthāman with seven, and king Duryodhana also with six.' The mighty Bhimasena, in return, pierced them all. He struck Drona with fifty shafts, and Karna with ten.5 And piercing Duryodhana with a dozen shafts, and Drona's son with eight, he engaged in that battle uttering a loud shout. In that encounter in which the warriors fought reckless of their lives and in which death was easy of attainment, Ajatacatru despatched many warriors, urging them to rescue Bhima." Those heroes of immeasurable energy, viz, the two sons of Mādri and Pāndu, and others headed by Yuyudhāna, quickly proceeded to Bhimasena's side. And those bulls among men, filled with rage and uniting together, advanced to battle. desirous of breaking the army of Drona that was protected by many foremost of bowmen. Indeed, those great car-warriors of mighty energy, viz., Bhima and others, fell furiously upon Drona, however, that foremost of car-warriors, Drona's host. received without any anxiety,10 all those mighty car-warriors of great strength, those heroes accomplished in battle. regarding their kingdoms and easting off all fear of death, the warriors of thy army proceeded against the Pandavas.11 Horsemen encountered horsemen, and car-warriors encountered car-The battle proceeded, darts against darts, swords against swords, axes against axes.12 A fierce encounter with swords took place, producing a terrible carnage. sequence of the collision of elephants against elephants, the battle became furious.18 Some fell down from the backs of elephants, and some from the backs of steeds, with heads downwards. And others, O sire, fell down from cars, pierced with arrows.14 In that fierce press, as some one fell down deprived of armour, an elephant might be seen attacking him in the chest and crushing his head.16 Elsewhere might be seen elephants crushing numbers of men fallen down on the field. And many elephants, piercing the earth with their tusks (as they fell down), were seen to tear therewith large bodies of men.16 Many elephants, again, with arrows sticking to their tusks, wandered over the field, tearing and crushing men by And some elephants were seen pressing down into the earth fallen warriors and steeds and elephants cased in armour of black iron, as if these were only thick reeds.18 kings graced with modesty, their hour having come, laid themselves down (for the last sleep) on painful beds overlaid with vulturine feathers.19 Advancing to battle on his car, sire slew son; and son also, through madness; and losing all regard, approached sire in battle.20 The wheels of cars were broken; banners were torn; umbrellas fell down on the earth. ing broken yokes, steeds ran away.21 Arms with swords in grasp, and heads decked with ear-rings, fell down. dragged by mighty elephants, were thrown down on the ground. reduced to fragments.25 Steeds with riders fell down, severely wounded by elephants. That fierce battle went on, without any body showing any regard for any one.28-Oh father !- Oh son! - Where art thou, friend! - Wait! - Where dost thou go ?-Strike !-Bring !-Slay this one !- these and diverse other cries, with loud laughs, and shouts, and roars, were uttered and heard there. The blood of human beings and steeds and elephants, mingled together.24-25 The earthy dust The hearts of all timid persons became cheerless. Here a hero getting his car-wheel entangled with the car-wheel of another hero,26 and the distance being too near to admit of the use of other weapons, smashed that other's head by means Brave combatants, desirous of safety where there was no safety, dragged one another by the hair, and fought fiercely with fists and teeth and nails. Here was a here whose upraised arm with sword in grasp was cut off.27-28 There another's arm was lopped off with bow, or arrow, or hook in Here one loudly called upon another. There another turned his back on the field." Here one severed another's head from his trunk, getting him within reach. There another rushed with loud shouts upon an enemy. Here one was filled with fear at another's roar.80 There another slew, with sharp shafts, a friend or a foe. Here an elephant, huge as a hill; slain with a long shaft, 31 fell down on the field and lay like a flat island in a river during the summer season. elephant, with juice trickling down its body like a mountain with rillets flowing adown its breast, stood, having crushed. by its tread a car-warrior with his steeds and charioteer on Beholding brave warriors, accomplished in arms and covered with blood, strike one another,32-33 they that were timid and of weak hearts, lost their senses. In fact, all became cheerless. Nothing could any longer be distinguished.34 Overwhelmed with the dust raised by the troops, the battle became Then the commander of the Pandava forces saying,-This is the time, 5-speedily led the Pandavas on, those heroes that are always endued with great activity. Obeying his behest, the mighty-armed Pandavas,36 smiting (the Kaurava army), proceeded towards Drona's car like swans towards a lake. - Seize him, - Do not fly away, - Do not fear, - Cut into pieces, 27—these uproarious cries were heard in the vicinity of Drona's car. Then Drona and Kripa, and Karna, and Drona's Jayadratha, and Vinda and Anuvinda of son, and king Avanti, and Calya, received those heroes. Those irresistible and invincible warriors, however, viz., the Panchalas and the Pandavas, inspired by noble sentiments, did not, though afflicted Then Drona, excited with great with shafts, avoid Drona. rage, shot hundreds of shafts, 59-40 and caused a great carnage amongst the Chedis, the Panchalas, and the Pandavas. twang of his bowstring and the slaps of his palms, were, O sire, heard on all sides. 41 And they resembled the roar of thunder and struck fear into the hearts of all. Meanwhile, Jishnu. having vanquished large numbers of Samsaptakas,42 quickly came to that place where Drona was grinding the Pandava Having crossed many large lakes whose waters were constituted by blood, and whose fierce billows and eddies were constituted by shafts, and having slain the Samsaptakas, Phalguna showed himself there, Possessed of great fame and endued as he was with the energy of the Sun himself, Arjuna's em blem, viz., his banner bearing the ape, was beheld by us to with splendour. Having dried up the Samsaptaka ocean by means of weapons that constituted his rays, 48-48 the son of Pandu blasted the Kurus also as if he were the very Sun that rises at the end of the Yuga! Indeed, Arjuna burned all the Kurus by the heat of his weapons,46 like the fire

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:26 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:26 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112
Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google

[.] The word in the original is dhuma-ketu. Elsewhere I have rendered it commet. It would, seem, however, that that is wrong. In such passages the word is used in its literal sense, viz., "(an article) have ing smake for its mark," hence fire. -T.

http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google Generated on 2022-03-03-12:26 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized , that appears at the end of the Yuga burning down all crea-Struck by him with thousands of shafts, elephantwarriors and horsemen and car-warriors fell down on the earth. exceedingly afflicted with those with dishevelled hair and arrowy showers. Some uttered cries of distress. Others set up loud shouts. 47-48 And some, struck with the shafts of Partha, Recollecting the practices of (good) fell down, deprived of life. warriors, Arjuna struck not those combatants among the foe that had fallen down, or those that were re-treating, or those that were unwilling to fight. Deprived of their cars and filled with wonder, almost all the Kauravas, turning away from the field uttered cries of Oh and Alas, and called upon Karna (for Hearing that din made by the Kurus desirous of protection). protection, Adhiratha's son (Karna), 49-61 loudly assuring the troops with the words—Do not fear,—proceeded to face Arjuna, Then (Karna) that foremost of Bharata car-warriors, that delighter of all the Bharatas,52 that first of all acquainted with weapons, invoked into existence the Agneya Dhananjaya, however, baffled by means of his own arrowy downpours the flights of arrows shot by Radha's son, that warrior of the blazing bow, that here of bright shafts ! 58 And similarly Adhiratha's son also baffled the shafts of Arjuna of splendid energy. Resisting Arjuna's weapons thus by his own, Karna uttered loud shouts and shot many shafts at his antagonist. 54 Then Dhrishtadyumna and Bhima and the mighty car-warrior Sātyaki, all approached Karna, and each of them pierced him with three straight shafts.55 The son of Radha, however, checking Arjuna's weapons by his own arrowy showers, cut off with three sharp shafts the bows of those three war-Their bows cut off, they looked like snakes without Hurling darts at their foe from their respective cars, they uttered loud leonine shouts.57 Those fierce darts of great splendour and great impetuosity, looking like snakes, hurled from those mighty arms, coursed impetuously towards Karna's Cutting each of those darts with three straight shafts and speeding many arrows at the same time at Partha, the mighty Karna uttered a loud shout. 50 Then Arjuna, piercing Karna with seven shafts, despatched the latter's younger brother by Generated on 2022-02-03 12:26 GMT / https://hdl Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.ha means of his sharp shafts. Slaying Catrunjaya thus with six arrows, Partha, with a broad-headed shaft, struck off Vipāta's head as the latter stood on his car." In the very sight of the Dhartarashtras, therefore, as also of the Suta's son, the three uterine brothers of the latter were despatched by Arjuna unaided by any one.42 Then Bhima, jumping down from his own car like a second Garuda, slew with his excellent sword five and ten combatants amongst those that supported Karna. Mounting once more on his car and taking up another bow, he pierced Karna with ten shafts, and his charioteer and steeds with five.64 Dhrishtadyumna also, taking up a sword and a bright shield, despatched Chandravarman, and also Vrihatkshatra the ruler of the Naishadhas. The Panchala prince then, mounting upon his own car and taking up another bow, pierced Karna with three and seventy shafts and uttered a loud roar." Cini's grandson also, of splendour equal to that of Indra himself, taking up another bow, pierced the Suta's son with four and sixty shafts and roared like a lion.67 And cutting: off Karna's bow with a couple of well-shot shafts, he once more pierced Karna on the arms and the chest with three arrows. Then king Duryodhana, and Drona, and Jayadratha, rescued Karna from the Satyaki-ocean as the former was about to sink in it.69 And foot-soldiers and steeds and cars and elephants, belonging to thy army and numbering by hundreds, all accomplished in smiting, rushed to the spot where Karna was for frightening (his assailants).70 Then Dhrishtadyumna, and Bhima, and Subhadra's son, and Arjuna himself, and Nakula, and Sahadeva, began to protect Sātyaki in that battle." Even thus went on that fierce battle for the destruction of bowmen belonging to thy army and the enemy's. All the combatants fought, reckless of their very lives.72 Infantry and cars and steeds and elephants were engaged with cars and infantry. Car-warriors were engaged with elephants and foot-soldiers and Cars and foot-soldiers were engaged with cars and elephants.73 And steeds were seen engaged with steeds, and elaphants with elephants, and foot-soldiers with foot-soldiers.74 Even thus did that battle, marked by great confusion, take place, enhancing the jey of cannibals and carnivorous creatures, between those high-souled men facing one another fearlessly. Indeed, it largely swelled the population of Yama's kingdom. 75 Large numbers of elephants and cars and foot-soldiers and steeds were destroyed by men and cars and steeds and elephants. elephants were slain by elephants, and car-warriors with wear pons upraised, by car-warriors, and steeds by steeds, and large bodies of foot-soldiers by foot-soldiers." And elephants were slain by cars, and large steeds by large elephants, and men by steeds; and steeds by foremost of car-warriors. With tongues lolling out, and teeth and eyes pressed out of their places, with coats of mail and ornaments crushed into dust, the slaughtered creatures fell down on the field." Others, again, of terrible mien, were struck and thrown down on the earth by others armed with diverse and excellent weapons, and sunk into the earth by the tread of steeds and elephants, and tortured and mangled by heavy cars and car wheels."8 And during the progress of that fierce carnage so delightful to beasts of prey and earnivorous birds and cannibals, mighty combatants, filled with wrath, and slaughtering one another, careered over the field putting forth all their energy.79 Then when both hosts were broken and mangled, the warriors bathed in blood, looked at each other. Meanwhile the Sun went to his chambers in the Western hills, and both the armies, O Bharata, slowly retired to their respective tents.""80

SECTION XXXIII.

(Abhimanyu-badha Parva.)

"Sanjaya said,—'Having been first broken by Arjuna of immeasurable prowess, and owing also to the failure of Drona's vow in consequence of Yudhisthira having been well protected, thy warriors were regarded as defeated. All of them with coats of mail torn and covered with dust, cast anxious glances around." Retiring from the field with Drona's consent, after having been vanquished by their enemies of sure aim and humiliated by them in battle, they heard, as they proceeded, the countless merits of Phälguna praised by all creatures, and the friendship of Keçava for Arjuna spoken of by all. They passed the night like men under a curse, reflecting upon the course of events and observing a perfect silence.

Generated on 2022-03-03-12:26 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized ,

"'Next morning Duryodhana said unto Drona, these words. from affection and affectionate wrath, and in great cheerlessness of heart at the sight of the prosperity of their foe. in speech, and filled with rage at the success of the foe, the king said these words in the hearing of all the troops: -O foremost of regenerate ones, without doubt thou hast down for men who should be destroyed by thee ! didst not seize Yudhishthira today even though thou hadst got him within thy reach! That foe whom thou wouldst seize in battle is incapable of escaping thee if once thou gettest him within sight, even if he be protected by the Pandavas aided by the very gods.8 Gratified, thou gavest me a boon. however, thou dost not act according to it! They that are noble (like thee), never falsify the hopes of one devoted to them! - Thus addressed by Duryodhana, Bharadwaja's son felt great shame. Addressing the king, he said,-It behoveth thee not to take me to be such! I always endeavour to achieve what is agreeable to thee!10 The three worlds with the gods. the Asuras, the Gandharvas, the Yakshas, the Nagas, and the Rākshasas, cannot defeat the force that is protected by the diadem-decked (Arjuna).11 There where Govinda the Creator of the Universe is, and there where Arjuna is the commander. whose might can avail save the three-eyed Mahadeva's, lord?13 O sire, I tell thee truly today and it will not be otherwise! Today I will slay a mighty car-warrior, one of the foremost heroes of the Pandavas !18 Today I will also form an array that is impenetrable by the very gods. Do, however, O king, by some means take Arjuna away from the field! There is nothing that he doth not know or cannot achieve in From varrious places hath he acquired all that is to be known about battle.15-

"Sanjaya continued,—'After Drona had said these words, the Samsaptakas once more challenged Arjuna to battle and took him away to the southern side of the field.16 Then an encounter took place between Arjuna and his enemies, the like of which hath never been seen or heard.17 On the other hand, the array formed by Drona, O king, looked resplendent. Indeed, that array was incapable of being looked at like the Sun himself when in his course he reaches the meridian and scorches (everything underneath).18 Abhimanyu, at the command, O Bharata, of his sire's eldest brother, pierced in battle that impenetrable circular array in many places.19 Having achieved the most difficult feats and slain heroes by thousands, he was (at last) encountered by six heroes together. In the end, succumbing to Dusçāsana's son, o lord of earth, Subhadrā's son, O chastiser of foes, gave up his life! At this we were filled with great joy and the Pandavas with great grief. after Subhadra's son had been slain, our troops were withdrawn for nightly rest."1 "Dhritarashtra said,—'Hearing, O Sanjaya, of the slaughter

"Dhritarāshtra said,—'Hearing, O Sanjaya, of the slaughter of the son (Abimanyu), yet in his minority, of that lion among men, (viz., Arjuna), my heart seems to break into pieces! Legislators, indeed, are the duties of Kshatriyas as laid down by the legislators, inasmuch as brave men, desirous of sovereignty scrupled not to shoot their weapons at even a child! O son of Gavalgana, tell me how so many warriors, accomplished in arms, slew that child who, though brought up in luxury, yet careered over the field so fearlessly! Tell me, O Sanjaya, how our warriors sported in battle with Subhadrā's son of immeasurable energy who had penetrated into our car-array! 25

"Sanjaya said,—'That which thou askest me, O king, viz., the slaughter of Subhadrā's son, I will describe to thee in detail! Listen, O monarch, with attention! I will relate to thee how that youth, having penetrated into our ranks, sported with his weapons, and how the irresistible heroes of our army, all inspired by hope of victory, were afflicted by him. I Like the denizens of a forest abounding with plants and herbs and trees, when surrounded on all sides by a forest conflagration, the warriors of thy army were all filled with fear."

SECTION XXXIV.

"Sanjaya said,—'Of fierce deeds in battle, and above all fatigue as proved by their cats, the five sons of Pandu, with Krishna, are incapable of being resisted by the very gods.3 In righteousness, in deeds, in lineage, in intelligence, in achievements, in fame, in prosperity, there never was, and there never will be, another man so endued as Yudhisathira.2 voted to Truth and righteousness, and with passions under control, king Yudhishthira, in consequence of his worship of the Brahmanas and diverse other virtues of a similar nature, is always in the enjoyment of Heaven.3 The Destroyer himself at the end of the Yuga, Jamadagni's valiant son (Rāma), and Bhimasena on his car,-these three, O king, are spoken of as equal.4 Of Partha, the wielder of Gandiva, who always achieveth his vows in battle, I do not see a becoming parallel Reverence for superiors, keeping counsels, humility; self-restraint, beauty of person, and bravery,—these six are ever present in Nakula. In knowledge of scriptures, gravity, sweetness of temper, righteousness, and prowess, the heroic Sahadeva is equal to the Acwins themselves. All those noble qualities that are in Krishna, all those that are in the Pandavas, all that assemblage of qualities was to be seen in Abhimanyu In firmness he was equal to Yudhishthira, and in conduct to Krishna; in feats he was the equal of Bhimasena of terrible deeds; in beauty of person, in prowess, and in knowledge of scrptures, he was the equal of Dhananjaya. lity he was equal to Sahadeva and Nakula."10

"Dhritarāshtra said,—'I desire, O Suta, to hear in detail, how the invincible Abhimanyu, the son of Subhadrā, hath been slain on the field of battle!' "11

"Sanjaya continued,—'Be still, O king! Bear thy grief that is so intolerable! I will speak to thee of the great slaughter of thy kinsmen. Listen to it!"

"The preceptor, O king, had formed the great circular array. In it were placed all the kings (of our side) that are each equal to Cakra himself.¹³ At the entrance were stationed all the princes possessed of solar effulgence. All of them had taken oaths (about standing by one another).¹⁴ All of them had standards decked with gold. All of them were attired in fed robes, and all had red ornaments.¹⁵ All of them had red banners and all were adorned with garlands of gold. Smeared with sandal-paste and other perfumed unguents, they were decked with floral wreaths.16 Unitedly they rushed towards desirous of battle. Arjuna's son, Firm bowmen all, they numbered ten thousand.17 Placing thy handsome grandson Lakshmana at their head, all of them, symphathising with one another in joy and grief, and emulating one another in feats of courage, desiring to excell one another, and devoted to one another's good, they advanced to battle. Duryodhana, O monarch, was stationed in the midst of his forces.19 And the king was surrounded by the mighty car-warriors Karna and Duscashana and Kripa, and had a white umbrella held over his head. And fanned with yak-tails, he looked resplendent like the chief And at the head of that army was the comof the celestials. mander Drona looking like the rising Sun. *20-21 stood the ruler of the Sindhus, of great beauty of person, and immovable like the cliff of Meru. Standing by the side of the ruler of the Sindhus and headed by Açwatthāman,22 were, O king, thy thirty sons resembling the very gods. There also, on Jayadratha's flank, were those mighty car-warriors, viz., the ruler of the Gandharvas, i. e., the gamester (Cakuni), and Calya, and Bhuricravas. Then commenced the battle, fierce and making the hair to stand on end, between thy warriors And both sides fought, making death and those of the foe. itself the goal." "23-24

SECTION XXXV.

"Sanjaya said,—'The Parthas then, headed by Bhimasena, approached that invincible array protected by Bharadwaja's son. And Sātyaki, and Chekitāna, and Dhrishtadyumna the son of Prishata, and Kuntibhoja of great prowess, and the mighty car-warrior Drupada,2 and Arjuna's son (Abhimanyu), and Kshatradharman, and the valiant Vrihadkshatra, and Dhrishtaketu the ruler of the Chedis, and the twin sons of Madri, (viz., Nakula and Sahadeva), and Ghatotkacha, and the powerful Yudhā-

15

^{*} The first-half of the first line of 21 seems to be grammatically connected with 20,-T

manyu, and the unvanguished Cikhandin, and the irresistible Uttamaujas, and the mighty car-warrior Virata, and the five sons of Draupadi,-these all excited with wrath, and the valiant son of Cicupala, and the Kaikeyas of mighty energy, and the Srinjayas by thousands, -these and others, accomplished in weapons and difficult of being resisted in battle, suddenly rushed, at the head of their respective followers, against Bharadwaja's son, from desire of battle. The valiant son of Bharadwaia, however, fearlessly checked all those warriors, as soon as they came near, with a thick shower of arrows." mighty wave of waters coming against an impenetrable hill, or the surging sea itself approaching its bank, those warriors were dashed back by Drona.8 And the Pandavas, O king. afflicted by the shafts shot from Drona's bow, were unable to And the strength of Drona's arms that we stay before him.9 saw was wonderful in the extreme, inasmuch as the Panchalas and the Srinjayas failed to approach him.10 Beholding Drons advancing in rage, Yudhishthira thought of diverse means for checking his progress.11 At last regarding Drona incapable of being resisted by any one else, Yudhishthira placed that heavy and unbearable burden on the son of Subhadra.12 dressing Abhimanyu, that slayer of hostile heroes, who was not inferior to Vasudeva himself and whose energy was superior to that of Arjuna, the king said,18-O child, act in such a way that Arjuna, returning (from the Samsaptakas), may not reprove us! We do not know how to break the circular array !14 Thyself, or Arjuna, or Krishna, or Praddyumna, can pierce that array! O mighty-armed one, no fifth person can be found (to achieve that feat)!15 O child, it behoveth thee, O Abhimanyu, to grant the boon that thy sires, thy maternal uncles, and all these troops ask of thee !16 Taking up thy arms quickly, destroy this array of Drona, else, Arjuna returning from the fight, will reprove us all !17-

"'Abhimanyu said,—Desiring victory to my sires, soon shall I in battle penetrate into that firm, fierce, and foremost of arrays formed by Drona!" I have been taught by my father the method of (penetrating and) smiting this kind of array. I cannot, however, come out if any kind of danger overtake me!"—

"'Yudhishthira said,—Break this array once, O foremost of warriors, and make a passage for us! All of us will follow thee in the track by which thou wilt go! In battle thou art equal to Dhananjaya himself! Seeing thee enter, we shall follow thee, protecting thee on all sides!

"Bhima said,—I myself will follow thee, and Dhrishtadyumna, and Sātyaki; and the Pānchālas, and the Prabhadrakas.25 After the array will once have been broken by thee, we will enter it repeatedly and slay the foremost warriors within it!28—

"'Abhimanyu said,—I will penetrate into this invincible array of Drona, like an insect filled with rage entering a blazing fire.²⁴ Today I will do that which will be beneficial to both races (viz., my sire's and my mother's). I will do that which will please my maternal uncle as also my father!²⁵ Today all creatures will behold large bodies of hostile soldiers continually slaughtered by myself, an unaided child!²⁶ If anybody, encountering me, escapes today with life, I shall not then regard myself begotten by Pārtha and born of Subhadrā!²⁷ If on a single car I cannot in battle cut off the whole Kshatriya race into eight fragments, I will not regard myself the son of Arjuna!²⁸—

"'Yudhishthira said,—Since, protected by these tigers among men, these great bowmen endued with fierce might, these warriors that resemble the Sādhyas, the Rudras, or the Maruts, or are like the Vasus, or Agni, or Āditya himself in prowess, thou venturest to pierce the invincible array of Drona, and since thou speakest so, let thy strength, O son of Subhadrā, increase!'20-30—

"Sanjaya continued,—'Hearing these words of Yudhishthira, Abhimanyu ordered his charioteer Sumitra, saying,—Quickly urge the steeds towards Drona's army!—'"

131

SECTION XXXVI.

"Sanjaya said,—'Hearing these words of the intelligent Yudhishthira, the son of Subhadra, O Bharata, urged his charioteer towards Drona's array.' The charioteer, urged by him with the words-Proceed-Proceed,-replied unto Abhimanyu, O king, in these words:2-O thou that art blest with length of days, heavy is the burthen that hath been placed upon thee by the Pandavas! Ascertaining by thy judgment as to whether thou art able to bear it or not, thou shouldst then engage in battle! The preceptor Drona is a master of superior weapons and accomplished (in battle)! ever, hast been brought up in great luxury, and art unused to battle !*4_

"'Hearing these words, Abhimanyu replied unto his charioteer, saying with a laugh,—O charioteer, who is this Drona? What, again, is this vast assemblage of Kshatriyas? Cakra himself on his Airavat and aided by all the celestials, I would encounter in battle. I do not feel the slightest anxiety about all these Kshatriyas today! This hostile army doth not come up to even a sixteenth part of myself! O son of a Suta, getting my maternal uncle Vishnu himself, the conqueror of the universe,7 or my sire Arjuna, as an antagonist in battle, fear would not enter my heart !- Abhimanyu then, thus disregarding those words of his charioteer, urged the latter, say ing,-Go with speed towards the army of Drona !- Thus commanded, the charioteer, with a heart scarcely cheerful, urged-Abhimanyu's three year old steeds decked with golden trapp-Those coursers, urged by Sumitra towards Drona's army, 9-10 rushed towards Drona himself, O king, with great speed and prowess. Beholding him coming (towards them) in that way, all the Kauravyas, headed by Drona, advanced against him, as, indeed, the Pandavas followed him behind.12 Then Arjuna's son, superior to Arjuna himself, cased in golden mail and owning an excellent standard that bore the device of a Karnikāra tree, fearlessly encountered, from desire of battle, those warriors headed by Drona, like an infant lion

^{*} The last half of the second line of 4 is vicious as occurring in the The correct reading is ayuddha-viçaradas.—T.

[†] The Bombay edition reads Mahavega-parakramam. This is vicious. The Bengal texts rightly make it an adjective of l'ajinas in the previous line. - T.

assailing a herd of elephants.12 Those warriors then, filled with joy, began to strike Abhimanyu while he endeavoured to pierce their array.* And for a moment an agitation took place there like to the eddy that is seen in the ocean where the current of Gangā mixes with it.18 The battle, O king, that commenced there, between those struggling heroes striking one another, became fierce and terrible.14 And during the progress of that awful battle, Arjuna's son, in the very sight of Drona, breaking that array, penetrated into it.15 Then large. bodies of elephants and steeds and cars and infantry, filled with joy, encompassed that mighty warrior after he had thus penetrated into the midst of the foe, and commenced to smite [Causing the Earth to resound] with the noise of diverse musical instruments, with shouts and slaps of arm-pits and roars, with yells and leonine shouts, with exclamations of-Wait, - Wait, 17 - with fierce confused voices, with cries of-Do not go, Wait, Come to me,—with repeated exclamations of— This one,-It is I,-The foe,18-with the grunts of elephants, with the tinkling of bells and ornaments, with bursts of laughter, and the clatter of horse-hoofs and car-wheels, the (Kaurava) warriors rushed at the son of Arjuna.19 That mighty hero, however, endued with great lightness of hands and having a knowledge of the vital parts of the body, quickly shooting weapons capable of penetrating into the very vitals, slew those advancing warriors.20 Slaughtered by means of sharp shafts of diverse kinds, those warriors became perfectly helpless; and like insects falling upon a blazing fire, they continued to fall upon Abhimanyu on the field of battle.21 And Abhimanyu strewed the earth with their bodies and diverse limbs of their bodies like priests strewing the altar at a sacrifice with blades of Kuça grass.22. And Arjuna's son quickly cut off by thousands the arms of those warriors. And some of these were cased in fences made of iguana skin, and some held bows and shafts. And some held swords or shields or iron

^{*} The Bengal reading Te viçantam mudā yuktās seems to me better than the Bombay reading Te vingçati pade yattās, although Nilakantha prefers the latter,—T.

hooks or reins; and some, lances or battle-axes. And some held maces or iron-balls or spears; and some, rapiers and crows and axes. And some grasped short arrows, or spiked maces, or darts, or shafts, or Kampanas. And some had goads and prodigious conchs; and some had bearded darts and Kacha-And some had mallets and some other And some had nooses, and some heavy clubs, and some brick-bats. And all those arms were decked with armlets and laved with delightful perfumes and unguents. 28-26 with those arms dyed with gore and looking bright, the field of battle became beautiful, as if strewn, O sire, with five-headed snakes slain by Garuda.27 And Phalguna's son also scattered over the field of battle countless heads of foes, heads graced with beautiful noses and faces and locks, without pimples, and Blood flowed from those heads copiadorned with ear-rings. ously, and the nether lips in all were bit with wrath. with beautiful garlands and crowns and turbans and pearls and gems, and possessed of splendour equal to that of the Sun or the Moon, they seemed to be like lotuses severed from their stalks. Fragrant with many perfumes, while life was in them they could speak words both agreeable and beneficial. 28-30 cars, well equipt, and looking like the vapoury edifices in the welkin, with shafts in front and excellent bamboo poles and looking beautiful with the standards set up on them, 31 were deprived of their Janghas, and Kuvaras, and Nemis, and Daçanas, and wheels, and standards, and terraces. utensils of war in them were all broken.32 And the rich cloths with which they were overlaid, were blown away, and the warriors on them were slain by thousands. Mangling everything before him with his shafts, Abhimanyu was seen coursing on all sides. +33 With his keen-eged weapons, he cut into pieces elephant-warriors, and elephants with standards and hooks and banners, and quivers and coats of mail, and girths and neck-ropes and blankets, and bells and trunks and tusk-ends, as also the foot-soldiers that protected those elephants from ^{} Janghas, &c., are diverse limbs of cars used in battle.-T.

[†] I read both 32 and 33 as in the Bombay text.-T behind.34-35 And many steeds of the Vanayu, the hilly, Kāmvoja, and the Vālhika breeds, with tails and ears and eyes motionless and fixed, possessed of great speed, well-trained, and ridden by accomplished warriors armed with swords and lances. were seen to be deprived of the excellent ornaments on their heads as also of their beautiful tails.37 And many lay with tongues lolling out and eyes detached from their sockets, and entrails and livers drawn out. And the riders on their backs lay lifeless by their sides. And the rows of bells that adorned them were all Strewn over the field thus, they caused great delight to Rakshasas and beasts of prey. 88 With coats of mail and other leathern armour (casing their limbs) cut open, they weltered Thus slaying many foremost in excreta ejected by themselves. of steeds of thy army, Abhimanyu looked resplendent. 39 achieving the most difficult feats like the inconcievable Vishnu himself in days of old, Abhimanyu crushed thy vast host of three kinds of forces (cars, elephants, and steeds),40 like the Three-eyed (Mahadeva) of immseasurable energy crushing the terrible Asura host. Indeed, Arjuna's son, having achieved in battle feats incapable of being borne by his foes,41 everywhere mangled large divisions of foot-soldiers belonging to thy army. Beholding then thy host extensively slaughtered by Subhadra's son single-hand with his whetted shafts like the Asura host by Skanda (the celestial generalissimo), thy warriors and thy sons cast vacant looks on all sides.42-48 Their mouths became dry; their eyes became restless; their bodies were covered with sweat; and their hair stood on end. Hopeless of vanquishing their foe, thy set their hearts on flying away from the field.44 Desirous of saving their lives, they called one another by their names and the names of their families, and abandoning their wounded sons and sires and brothers and kinsmen and relatives by marriage lying around on the field, they endeavoured to fly away, urging their steeds and elephants (to their utmost speed)." "45 ^{} Charumukután (Beng.) is better than Chamaramukhan, (Bom.)—T.

SECTION XXXVII.

"Sanjaya said,—'Beholding his army routed by Subhadra's son of immeasurable energy, Duryodhana, filled with rage, himself proceeded against the former.1 Seeing the king turn back towards Subhadra's son in battle, Drona, addressing all the (Kaurava) warriors, said,—Rescue the king.*2 Before us, in our very sight, the valiant Abhimanyu is slaying all he aims Rush ye, therefore, speedily against him, without fear, and protect the Kuru king! - Then many grateful and mighty warriors, having Duryodhana's good at heart and always graced with victory, inspired with fear, surrounded thy son.4 Drona, and Drona's son, and Kripa, and Karna, and Kritavarman, and Suvala's son, and Vrihadvala, and the ruler of the Madras, and Bhuri, and Bhuricravas, and Cala,6 and Paurava, and Vrishasena, shooting sharp shafts, checked Subhadra's son by means of those arrowy showers.6 Confounding him with those showers of shafts, they rescued Duryodhana. of Arjuna, however, brooked not that act of snatching a morsel from his mouth." Covering those mighty car-warriors, their charioteers, and steeds with thick showers of arrows and causing them to turn back, the son of Subhadra uttered a leonine roar.8 Hearing that roar of his resembling that of a lion hungering after prey, those angry car-warriors headed by Drona, brooked it not.9 Encompassing him on all sides, .O sire, with a large body of cars, they shot at him showers of diverse kinds of arrows.10 Thy grandson, however, cut them off in the welkin (before any of them could reach him) by means of sharp shafts, and then pierced all of them with his shafts. feat of his seemed exceedingly wonderful,11 Provoked by him thus by means of those shafts of his that resembled snakes of virulent poison, they surrounded that unretreating son of Subhadra, desirous of slaying him.18 That sea of (Kaurava) troops, however, O bull of Bharata's race, the son of Arjuna singly held in check by means of his shafts like the continent

^{*} The second half of the second line of 2 is vicious in the Bengal texts.-T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:27 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google

resisting the surging ocean.13 And among those heroes thus fighting with and striking one another, viz., Abhimanyu and his on one side and all those warriors together on the other, none turned back from the field.14 In that dreadful and fierce battle Dussaha pierced Abhimanyu with nine shafts.16 Dusçāsana pierced him with a dozen; and Caradwat's son Kripa, with three. And Drona pierced him with seventeen shafts, each resembling a snake of virulent poison.16 And Vivingcati pierced him with seventy shafts, and Kritavarman with seven. And Vrihadvala pierced him with eight, and Acwtthaman with seven shafts.17 And Bhuricravas pierced him with three shafts and the ruler of the Madras with six. And Cakuni pierced him with two, and king Duryodhana with three shafts.18 valiant Abhimanyu, however, O king, seemingly dancing on his car, pierced each of those warriors in return with three Then Abhimanyu, filled with rage in consequence of thy sons endeavouring to frighten him thus, displayed the wonderful strength he had acquired from culture and practice.20 Borne by his well-broken steeds endued with the speed of Garuda or the Wind, and thoroughly obedient to the behests of him who held their reins, he quickly checked the heir of Staying before him, the handsome son of Açmaka, endued with great might, pierced him with ten shafts and, addressing him, said, - Wait, - Wait. 22 Abhimanyu then, with ten shafts, cut off the former's steeds and charioteer and standard and two arms and bow and head, and caused them to fall down on the earth, smiling the while.28 After the heroic ruler of the Acmakas had thus been slain by the son of Subhadra, the whole of his force wavered and began to fly away from the field.24 Then Karna, and Kripa, and Drona, and Drona's son, and the ruler of the Gandharas, and Cala. and Calya, and Bhuricravas, and Krātha, and Somadatta, and Vivingçati,25 and Vrishasena, and Sushena, and Kundavedhin, and Pratarddana, and Vrindaraka, and Lilithya, and Pravāhu, and Dirghalochana,26 and the angry Duryodhana, showered their arrows upon him. Abhimanyu, excessively pierced by those great bowmen with their straight shafts,27 sped a shaft at Karna which was capable of piercing through every armour and body. That shaft, piercing 16 through Karna's coat of mail and then his body,28 entered the earth like a snake piercing through an ant-hill. Deeply pierced, Karna felt great pain and became perfectly helpless.29 Indeed. Karna began to tremble in that battle like a hill during an Then with three other shafts of great sharpearth-quake. ness, the mighty son of Arjuna, excited with rage, slew those three warriors, viz., Sushena, Dirghalochana, and Kundavedhin. Meanwhile, Karna (recovering from the shock) pierced Abhimanyu with five and twenty shafts. 80-81 And Acwathaman struck him with twenty, and Kritavarman with seven. ed all over with arrows, that son of Cakra's son, filled with rage,32 careered over the field. And he was regarded by all the troops as Yama's self armed with the noose. He then scattered ever Calya, who happened to be near him, thick showers of arrows. 53 That mighty-armed warrior then uttered loud shouts, frightening thy troops therewith. Meanwhile, Calya, pierced by Abhimanyu accomplished in weapons, with straight shafts penetrating into his very vitals,84 sat down on the terrace of his car and swooned away. Beholding Calya thus pierced by the celebrated son of Subhadra, 35 all the troops fled away in the very sight of Bharadwaja's son. Seeing that mighty-armed warrior, viz., Calya, thus covered with shafts of golden wings, thy army fled away like a herd of deer afflicted by a lion. 86 And Abhimanyu, glorified by the Pitris, the gods, and Chāranas, and Siddhas, as also by diverse classes of creatures on the Earth, with praises about (his heroism and skill in) battle, looked resplendent like a sacrificial fire drenched with clarified butter.' "87

SECTION XXXVIII.

"Dhritarāshtra said,—'While Arjuna's son was thus grinding, by means of his straight arrows, our foremost of bowmen, what warriors of my army endeavoured to check him?'

"Sanjaya said,—'Hear, O king, of the splendid prowess in battle of the youthful Abhimanyu while engaged in breaking the car-ranks (of the Kauravas) protected by the son of Bharadwāja himself!²

"Beholding the ruler of the Madras disabled in battle by Subhadra's son with his shafts, the younger brother of Calya, filled with wrath, advanced against Abhimanyu, scattering his Arjuna's son, however, endued with great lightness shafts. of hand, cut off his antagonist's head and neck, arms and feet, his four steeds, umbrella, standard, and charioteer, his tripple bamboo-pole, his (bed on the car), his car-wheels, his yoke, and shafts, and quiver, and car-bottom, by means of his arrows, as also his banner, and every other implement of battle with which his car was equipt. So quick were his movements that none could obtain a sight of his person. Deprived of life, that foremost and chief of all ornaments of battle fell down on the earth,4-6 like a huge hill uprooted by a mighty tempest. followers then, struck with fear, fled away in all directions. Beholding that feat of the son of Arjuna, all creatures were highly gratified, and cheered him, O Bharata, with loud shouts of—Excellent, Excellent!8—'

"'After Calya's brother had thus been slain, many followers of his, loudly proclaming their families, places of residence, and names, rushed against Arjuna's son, filled with rage and armed with diverse weapons. Some of them were on cars, some on steeds, and some on elephants; and others advanced And all of them were endued with fierce might.9-10 And they rushed frightening the son of Arjuna with the loud whizz of their arrows, the deep roar of their car-wheels, their fierce whoops and shouts and cries, their leonine roars, the loud twang of their bowstrings, and the slaps of their palms. they said,—Thou shalt not escape us with life today!11-12-Hearing them say so, the son of Subhadra, smiling the while, pierced with his shafts those amongst them that had pierced him Displaying diverse weapans of beautiful look and great celerity, the heroic son of Arjuna battled mildly with them. 14 Those weapons that he had received from Vasudeva, and those that he had received from Dhananjaya, Abhimanyu displayed in the very same way as Vasudeva and Dhananjaya.15 garding the heavy burthen he had taken upon himself and casting off all fear, he repeatedly shot his arrows. again, could be noticed between his aiming and letting off an arrow.16 Only his trembling bow drawn to a circle could be seen on every side, looking like the blazing disc of the autumnal Sun.17 And the twang of his bow, and the slap of his palms, O Bharata, were heard to resemble the roar of clouds charged with thunder.18 Modest, wrathful, reverential to superiors, and exceedingly handsome, the son of Subhadra, out of regard for the hostile heroes, fought with them mildly."9 Commencing mildly, O king, he gradually became fierce, like the illustrious maker of the day when autumn comes after the season of the rains is over.20 Like the Sun himself shedding his rays, Abhimanyu, filled with wrath, shot hundreds and thosuands of whetted arrows furnished with golden wings. 21 sight of Bharadwaja's son, that celebrated warrior covered the car-division of the Kaurava army with diverse kinds of arrows.*22 Thereupon that army, thus afflicted by Abhimanyu with his shafts, turned its back on the field." "23

SECTION XXXIX.

"Dhritarāshtra said,—'My heart, O Sanjaya, is inspired with different sentiments, viz., shame and gratification, upon hearing that Subhadrā's son singly held in check the whole army of my son.' O son of Gavalgana, tell me everything once more in detail about the encounter of the youthful Abhimanyu which seems to have been pretty like Skanda's encounter with the Asura host!'

"Sanjaya said,—'I will relate to thee that fearful encounter, that fierce battle, as it took place between one and the many."

Mounted upon his car, Abhimanyu, with great daring, showered

^{*} I omit the names as they occur in the text. These are (1) Kshura-pras, i. e., arrows sharp as razors, (2) Vatsadantas, i. e., arrows having heads like a calf-tooth; (3) Vipāthas, i. e., long arrows having stout bodies; (4) Nārāchas, also long arrows; Ardha-chandrābhais, i. e., looking like shafts furnished with heads of the form of the half-moon; it is an adjective qualifying Nārāchais; (5) Anjalikas were broad-headed shafts.—T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:27 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized ,

his arrows on the warriors of thy army mounted on their cars, all of whom were chastisers of foes, endued with great courage !* Careering with great activity like a circle of fire, he pierced Drona, and Karna, and Kripa, and Calya and Drona's son, and Kritavarman of the Bhoja race, and Vrihadvala, and Duryodhana, and Somadatti, and the mighty Cakuni, and diverse kings and diverse princes, and diverse bodies of troops. 5-6 gaged in slaying his foes by means of superior weapons, the valiant son of Subhadra, endued with mighty energy, seemed, O Bharata, to be present everywhere ! Beholding that conduct of Subhadra's son of immeasurable energy, thy troops trembled repeatedly. Seeing that warrior of great proficiency in battle, Bhardwaja's son of great wisdom, with eyes expanded in joy, quickly came towards Kripa, and addressing him, said, as if crushing (by that speech of his) the very vitals of thy son, O Bhārata, the following words:10—Yonder cometh the youthful son of Subhadra at the head of the Parthas, delighting all his friends, and king Yudhishthira,11 and Nakula, and Sahadeva, and Bhimasena the son of Pandu, and all his kinsmen, and relatives by marriage, and all who are watching the battle as spectators without taking any part in it!18 I do not regard any bowman to be his equal in battle! If only he entertains the wish, he can slay this vast host! It seems, that for some reason or other, he doth not entertain that wish !18—Hearing these words of Drona, so expressive of the gratification he felt, thy son, enraged with Abhimanyu, looked at Drona, faintly smiling the while.14 Indeed, Duryodhana said unto Karna and king Vālhika and Dusçāsana and the ruler of the Madras and the many other mighty car-warriors of his army, these words: 5—The preceptor of the entire order of Kshatrivas,—he that is the foremost of all conversant with Brahma, doth not, from stupefaction, wish to slay this son of Arjuna!16 None can, in battle, escape the preceptor with life, not even the Destroyer himself if the latter advanceth against the preceptor as a foe! What, O friend, shall we say then of any mortal? I say this truly !17 This one is the son of Arjuna, and Arjuna is the preceptor's disciple. It is for this that the preceptor protecteth this youth! Disciples and sons and their sons are always dear to virtuous people.*18 Protected by Drona, the youthful son of Arjuna regardeth himself valorous. He is only a fool entertaining a high opinion of himself! Crush him, therefore, without delay !19—Thus addressed by the Kuru king, those warriors, O monarch, excited with rage and desirous of slaying their foe, rushed, in the very sight of Drona, at the son of (Subhadra) that daughter of the Satwata Dusçasana, in particular, that tiger among the Kurus, hearing those words of Duryodhana, answered the latter, saying, 1 - O monarch, I tell thee that even I will slay this one in the very sight of the Pandavas and before the eyes of the Pānchālas!22 I shall certainly devour the son of Subhadrā today like Rāhu swallowing Surya!—And once more addressing the Kuru king loudly, Dusçāsana said,23-Hearing that Subhadra's son hath been slain by me, the two Krishnas, who are exceedingly vain, will, without doubt, go to the region of the departed spirits, leaving this world of men! 44 Hearing then of the death of the two Krishnas, it is evident that the other sons born of Pandu's wives, with all their friends, will, in course of a single day, cast away their lives from despair !25 It is evident, therefore, that this one foe of thine being slain, all thy foes will be slain! Wish me well, O king, even I will slay this foe of thine !26—Having said these words, O king, thy son Dusçāsana, filled with rage and uttering a loud roar, rushed against the son of Subhadra and covered him with showers of Abhimanyu then, O chastiser of foes, received that son of thine thus advancing upon him wrathfully, with six and twenty arrows of sharp points.28 Dusçāsana, however, filled with rage, and looking like an infuriate elephant, fought desperately with Abhimanyu the son of Subhadra in that battle.29 Both of them masters in car-fight, they fought on, describing beautiful circles with their cars, one of them to the left and the other to the right. 50 The warriors then, with their Panavas and Mridangas and Dundubhis and Krakachas and great Anakas and Bheris and Jharjharas, caused a deafening noise mingled with leonine roars, such as arise from the great receptacle of salt waters."1

^{*} The Bengal texts read Dharminam, the Bombay reading is Dharminam. -T.

SECTION XL.

"Sanjaya said,-'Then the intelligent Abhimanyu, with limbs mangled with arrows, smilingly addressed his foe Dusçāsana stationed before him, saying,1-By good luck it is that I behold in battle that vain hero arrived before me, who is cruel, who hath cast away all righteousness, and who bawleth out lustily his own praises !2 In the assembly (of the Kurus) and in the hearing of king Dhritarashtra, thou hadst, with thy harsh speeches, angered king Yudhishthira !8 Relying on the deception of the dice and the skill (therein) of Suvala's son, thou hadst also, maddened by success, addressed many delirious speeches to Bhima !+4 In consequence of the anger of those illustrious persons, thou art at last about to obtain the fruit of that conduct of thine ! O thou of wicked understanding, obtain thou without delay the fruit of the robbery of other people's possessions, of wrathfulness, of thy hatred of peace, of avarice, of ignorance, of hostilities (with kinsmen), of injustice and persecution, of depriving my sires, those fierce bowmen, of their kingdom, and of thy own fierce temper! I shall today chastise thee with my arrows in the sight of the whole army !6-7 Today I shall in battle disburden myself of that wrath which I cherish against thee! I shall today free myself of the debt I owe to the angry Krishnā and to my sire who always craveth for an opportunity to chastise thee !8 O Kauravya, today I shall free myself of the debt I owe to Bhima! With life thou shalt not escape me, if, indeed, thou dost not abandon the battle !9—Having said these words, that mighty-armed warrior, that slayer of hostile heroes, aimed a shaft endued with the splendour of Yama or of Agni or of the Wind-god,

^{*} These are the names of diverse kinds of drums small and large.-T.

[†] I adopt the Bombay reading of the 1st line of 4.-T.

[†] The fruit being the present encounter with Abhimanyu in which Dusçāsana, according to Abhimanyu, shall have to lay down his life.—T.

http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google Generated on 2022-02-03 12:27 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized , and capable of despatching Dusçasana to the other world.10 Quickly approaching Dusçāsana's bosom, that shaft fell upon his shoulder-joint and penetrated into his body up to the very wings like a snake into an ant-hill.11 And soon Abhimanyu once more struck him with five and twenty arrows whose touch resembled that of fire and which were sped from his bow drawn to its fullest stretch.12 Deeply pierced and greatly pained, Dusçāsana sat down on the terrace of his car, and was, O king, overtaken by a swoon.18 Afflicted thus with the arrows of Subhadra's son and deprived of his senses, Dusçasana was speedly borne away from the midst of the fight by his charioteer.14 Beholding this, the Pandavas, the five sons of Draupadi, Virāta, the Pānchālas, and the Kekayas, uttered leonine shouts.16 And the troops of the Pandavas, filled with joy, caused diverse kinds of musical instruments to be beat and blown.16 Beholding that feat of Subhadra's son they laughed with joy. Seeing that implacable and proud foe of theirs thus vanquished,17 those mighty car-warriors, viz., the (five) sons of Draupadi who had on their banners the images of Yama and Maruta and Cakra and the twin Acwins,18 as also Sātyaki, and Chekitāna, and Dhrishtadyumna, and Cikhandin, and the Kekayas, and Dhrishtaketu, and the Matsyas, and the Panchalas, and the Srinjayas,19 and the Pandavas, headed by Yudhishthira, were filled with joy. And all of them rushed with speed, desirous of piercing Drona's array.20 dreadful battle took place between thy warriors and those of All of them were unretreating heroes and inspired by desire of victory.21 During the progress of that dreadful encounter, Duryodhana, O monarch, addressing the son of Radha, said,22—Behold, the heroic Dusçasana, who resembleth the scorching Sun and who was hitherto slaying the foe in battle, hath at last himself succumbed to Abhimanyu !28 davas also, filled with rage and looking fierce like mighty lions, are rushing towards us, desirous of rescuing the son of Subhadrā!24—Thus addressed, Karna, filled with rage, and desirous of doing good to thy son, rained showers of sharp arrows on the invincible Abhimanyu.25 And the heroic Karna, as if in contempt of his antagonist, also pierced the latter's followers on the field of battle, with many excellent shafts of great sharpness.26 The high-souled Abhimanyu, however, O king, desirous of proceeding against Drona, quickly pierced Rādhā's son with three and seventy shafts.27 No car-warrior of thy army succeeded at that time in obstructing the progress, towards Drona, of Abhimanyu, who was the son of Indra's son and who was afflicting all the foremost car-warriors of the Kau-Then Karna, that most honored of all bowmen, desirous of obtaining victory, pierced the son of Subhadra with hundreds of arrows, displaying his best weapons.29 That foremost of all persons conversant with weapons, that valiant disciple of Rama, by means of his weapons, thus afflicted Abhimanyu who was incapable of being defeated by foes.80 afflicted in battle by Rādhā's son with showers of weapons, still Subhadra's son who resembled a very celestial (for prowess) felt With his straight shafts whetted on stone and furnished with sharp points, the son of Arjuna, cutting off the bows of many heroic warriors, began to afflict Karna in return. 82 With shafts resembling snakes of virulent poison and shot from his bow drawn to a circle, Abhimanyu quickly cut off the umbrella, the standard, the charioteer, and the steeds of Karna, smiling the while.33 Karna then sped five straight arrows at Abhimanyu. The son of Phalguna, however, received them fearlessly.34 Endued with great valour and courage, the latter then, in a moment, with only a single arrow, cut off Karna's bow and standard and caused them to drop down on the ground. 55 holding Karna in such distress, his younger brother, drawing the bow with great force, speedily proceeded against the son of Subhadra. 36 The Parthas then, and their followers, uttered loud shouts and beat their musical instruments and applauded the son of Subhadrā [for his heroism]." ""

SECTION XLI.

"Sanjaya said,—'Then the younger brother of Karna, uttering loud roars, bow in hand, and repeatedly stretching the bowstring, quickly placed himself between those two illustrious warriors.' And Karna's brother, with ten shafts, pierced the invincible Abhimanyu and his umbrella and standard and charioteer and steeds, smiling the while.2 Beholding Abhimanyu thus afflicted with those arrows although he had achieved those superhuman feats after the manner of his sire and grandsire, the warriors of thy army were filled with delight.3 Then Abhimanyu, forcibly bending the bow and smiling the while, with one winged arrow cut off his antagonist's head. That head, severed from the trunk, fell down on the earth.4 Beholding his brother slain, and overthrown like a Karnikāra tree shaken and thrown down by the wind from the mountaintop, Karna, O monarch, was filled with pain. Meanwhile, the son of Subhadra, causing Karna by means of his arrows to turn away from the field, quickly rushed against the other great bowmen.6 Then Abhimanyu of fierce energy and great fame, filled with wrath, broke that host of diverse forces abounding with elephants and steeds and cars and infantry." As regards Karna, afflicted by Abhimanyu with countless shafts, he fled away from the field, borne by swift steeds. The Kaurava array then broke. When the welkin was covered with Abhimanyu's shafts like flights of locusts or thick showers of rain, nothing, O monarch, could be distinguished. Amongst thy warriors thus slaughtered by Abhimanyu with sharp shafts, none, O monarch, stayed any longer on the field of battle except the ruler of the Sindhus.10 Then that bull among men, viz., the son of Subhadra, blowing his conch, speedily fell upon the Bharata host, O bull of Bharata's race.11 a burning brand thrown into the midst of a heap of dry grass, Arjuna's son began to consume his foes, quickly careering through the Kaurava army.12 Having pierced through their array, he mangled cars and elephants and steeds and human beings by means of his sharp shafts, and caused the field of battle to teem with headless trunks.18 Cut off by means of excellent arrows sped from the bow of Subhadra's son, the Kaurava warriors fled away, slaying, as they fled, their own comrades before them.14 Those fierce arrows, of terrible effect, whetted on stone and countless in number, slaying car-warriors elephants and steeds, fell fast on the field.15 decked with Angadas and other ornaments of gold, cut off from trunks, lay scattered about, with maces and other weapons in grasp and hands cased in leathern fences.16 And arrows, and bows, and scimitars, and bodies and heads decked with ear-rings and floral wreaths, lay in thousands on the field.17 Obstructed with Upashkaras and Adhishthanas and long poles, as also with crushed Akshas and broken wheels and yokes, numbering thousands,*18 with darts and bows and swords and fallen standards, and with shields and bows and arrows lying all about,19 with the bodies, O monarch, of slain Kshatriyas and steeds and elephants, the field of battle, looking exceedingly fierce, soon became impassable.20 The noise made by the princes as they called upon one another while slaughtered by Abhimanyu, became defeaning and enhanced the fears of the timid.21 That noise, O chief of the Bharatas, filled all the points of the compass. The son of Subhadra rushed against the (Kaurava) troops, slaying foremost of car-warriors and steeds and elephants.22 Quickly consuming his foes, like a fire sporting in the midst of a heap of dry grass, the son of Arjuna was seen careering through the midst of the Bharata Encompassed as he was by our troops and covered with dust, none of us could obtain a sight of that warrior when, O Bharata, he was careeing over the field in all directions, cardinal and subsidiary. 4 And he took the lives of steeds and elephants and human warriors, O Bharata, almost And soon after we saw him (come out of the Indeed, O monarch, we beheld him then scorching his foes like the meridian Sun (scorching everything with his Equal to Vāsava himself in battle, that son of Vāsava's son, viz., Abhimanyu, looked resplendent in the midst of the (hostile) army." "s

17

SECTION XLII.

"Dhritarashtra said,-'A mere child in years, brought up in great luxury, proud of the strength of his arms, accomplished in battle, endued with great heroism, the perpetuator of his race, and prepared to lay down his life, when Abhimanyu

These are particular limbs of cars,-T.

penetrated into the Kaurava army, borne on his three year old steeds of proud mettle, was there anybody in Yudhishthira's army, any great warrior, that followed the son of Arjuna?'2

"Sanjaya said,-'Yudhishthira, and Bhimasena, and Cikhandin, and Sātyaki, and the twins Nakula and Sahadeva, and Dhrishtadyumna, and Virāta, and Drupada, and Kekaya, and Dhristaketu, all filled with wrath, and the Matsya warriors, rushed to battle. Indeed, Abhimanyu's sires, accompanied by his maternal uncles,—those smiters of foes,—arrayed in order of battle, rushed by the self-same path that Abhimanyu had created, desirous of rescuing him. Beholding those rushing heroes, thy troops turned away from the fight.4-5 Seeing then that vast army of thy son turning away from the fight, thy son-in-law of great energy rushed to rally them.6 Indeed, king Jayadratha, the son of the ruler of the Sindhus, checked, with all their fellowers, the Parthas desirous of rescuing their son. That fierce and great bowman, viz., the son of Vriddhakshatra, invoking into existence his celestial weapons, resisted the Pandavas, like an elephant sporting in a low land!"*8

"Dhritarāshtra said,—'I think, O Sanjaya, that heavy was the burthen thrown upon the ruler of the Sindhus inasmuch as, alone, he had to resist the angry Pāndavas desirous of rescuing their son! Exceedingly wonderful, I think, was the might and heroism of the ruler of the Sindhus. Tell me what that high-souled warrior's prowess was and how he accomplished that foremost of feats! What gifts did he make, what libations had he poured, what sacrifices had he performed, what ascetic austerities had he well undergone, in consequence of which, single-handed, he succeeded in checking the Pārthas excited with wrath?"

"Sanjaya said,—'On the occasion of the ravishment of Draupadi, Jayadratha was vanquished by Bhimasena. From a keen sense of his humiliation, the king practised the severest of ascetic austerities, desirous of a boon.¹² Restraining his ^{*} Pravanādiva is explained by Nilakantha as ninnadeçam prāpya. The meaning seems to be, as I have put it, "like an elephant in a low land, i. c., land covered with mud and water.—T.

senses from all objects dear to them, bearing hunger, thirst, and heat, he reduced his body till his swollen veins became visible.13 Uttering the eternal words of the Veda, he paid his adorations to the god Mahādeva. That illustrious Deity, always inspired with compassion for his devotees, at last became kind towards Indeed, Hara, appearing in a dream unto the son of the saying,-Solicit the ruler of the Sindhus, addressed him, boon thou desirest! I am gratified with thee, O Jayadratha! What dost thou desire?15—Thus addressed by Mahādeva, Jayadratha the ruler of the Sindhus bowed down unto him and said with joined hands and restrained soul, 16-Alone, on a single car, I shall check in battle all the sons of Pandu, endued though they are with terrible energy and prowess !- Even this, O Bharata, was the boon he solicited.17 Thus solicited, that foremost of deities said unto Jayadratha,-O amiable one, I give thee the boon. Excepting Dhananjaya the son of Pritha,18 thou shalt in battle check the four other sons of Pāndu!—So be it,—said Jayadratha unto that Lord of the gods and then awoke, O monarch, from his slumhers.19 quence of that boon which he had received and of the strength also of his celestial weapons, Jayadratha, single-handed, held in check the entire army of the Pandavas !20 The twang of his bowstring and the slaps of his palms inspired the hostile Kshatriyas with fear, filling thy troops, at the same time, with And the Kshatriyas (of the Kuru army), beholding that the burthen was taken up by the ruler of the Sindhus, rushed with loud shouts, O monarch, to that part of the field where Yudhishthira's army was." "22

SECTION XLIII.

"Sanjaya said,—'Thou askest me, O monarch, about the prowess of the ruler of the Sindhus. Listen to me as I describe in detail how he fought with the Pāndavas! Large steeds of the Sindhu breed, well trained and fleet as the wind, and obedient to the commands of the charioteer, bore him (on that occasion). His car, duly equipt, looked like a vapoury edifice in the welkin, His standard, bearing the device of a large boar in silver, looked exceedingly beautiful.3 With his white umbrella, and banners, and the yak tails with which he was fanned,-regal indications these,-he shone like the Moon himself in the firmament.4 His car-fence made of iron was decked with pearls and diamonds and gems and gold. And it looked resplendent like the firmament bespangled with luminous bodies.5 Drawing his large bow and scattering countless shafts, he once more filled up that array in those places where openings had been made by the son of Arjuna.6 pierced Satyaki with three arrows, and Vrikodara with eight; and having pierced Dhrishtadyumna with sixty arrows he pierced Drupada with five sharp ones, and Cikhandin with ten. ing then the Kaikeyas with five and twenty arrows, Jayadratha pierced each of the five sons of Draupadi with three arrows.7-8 And piercing Yudhishthira then with seventy arrows, the ruler of the Sindhus pierced the other heroes of the Pandava army with thick showers of shafts. And that feat of his seemed exceedingly wonderful.9 Then, O monarch, the valiant son of Dharma, aiming Jayadratha's bow, cut it off with a polished and well-tempered shaft, smiling the while.10 Within the twinkling, however, of the eye, the ruler of the Sindhus took up another bow and, piercing Partha (Yudhisthira) with ten arrows, struck each of the others with three shafts." Marking that lightness of hands showed by Jayadratha, Bhima then, with three broad-headed shafts, quickly felled on the earth his bow, stand-The mighty Jayadratha then, taking up ard, and umbrella.12 another bow, stringed it and felled Bhima's standard and bow and steeds, O sire!18 His bow cut off, Bhimasena then, jumping down from that excellent car whose steeds had been slain, mounted on the car of Sātyaki like a lion jumping to the top of a mountain.14 Seeing this, thy troops were filled with joy. And they loudly cried—Excellent, Ecellent !—And they repeatedly applauded that feat of the ruler of the Sindhus.15 deed, all creatures highly applauded that feat of his which consisted in his resisting, single-handed, all the Pandavas together excited with wrath.16 The path that the son of Subhadra had made for the Pandavas by slaying numerous warriors and elephants was then filled up by the ruler of the Sindhus.17 Indeed, those heroes, viz., the Matsyas, the Pānchālas, the Kaike-yas, and the Pāndavas, exerting themselves vigorously, succeeded in approaching the presence of Jayadratha, but none of them could bear him.¹⁸ Every one amongst thy enemies who endeavoured to pierce the array that had been formed by Drona, was checked by the ruler of the Sindhus in consequence of the boon he had got (from Mahādeva).' "19

SECTION XLIV.

"Sanjaya said,—'When the ruler of the Sindhus checked the Pandavas desirous of success, the battle that took place then between thy troops and the enemy became awful.1 cible son of Arjuna, of true aim and mighty energy, having penetrated into the (Kaurava) array, agitated it like a makara agitating the ocean.2 Against that chastiser of foes then, viz., the son of Subhadra, who was thus agitating the hostile host with his arrowy showers, the principal warriors of the Kaurava army rushed, each according to his rank and precedence.3 The clash between them of immeasurable energy, scattering their arrowy showers with great force, on the one side, and Abhimanyu alone on the other, became awful.4 The son of Ariuna, encompassed on all sides by those enemies with crowds of cars, slew the charioteer of Vrishasena and also cut off his And the mighty Abhimanyu then pierced Vrishasena's steeds with his straight shafts, upon which those coursers with the speed of the wind bore Vrishasena away from the battle. Availing of that opportunity, Abhimanyu's charioteer freed his car from that press by taking it away to another part of the field. Those numerous car-warriors then, (beholding this feat), were filled with joy and exclaimed, -Excellent, -Excellent!"—Seeing the lion-like Abhimanyu angrily slaying the foe with his shafts and advancing from a distance, Vasativa. proceeding towards him quickly, fell upon him with great The latter pierced Abhimanyu with sixty shafts of golden wings, and addressing him, said,—As long as I am alive, thou shalt not escape me with life !9-Cased though he was in an iron coat of mail, the son of Subhadra pierced him in the chest with a far-reaching shaft. Thereupon Vasatiya fell down. on the earth, deprived of life.10 Beholding Vasātiya slain, many bulls among Kshatriyas became filled with wrath, and surrounded thy grandson, O king, from desire of slaying him.11 They approached him, stretching their countless bows of diverse kinds, and the battle then that took place between the son of Subhadra and his foes was exceedingly fierce.12 Then the son of Phalguna, filled with wrath, cut off their arrows and bows, and diverse limbs of their bodies, and their heads decked with ear-ings and floral garlands.18 And arms were seen lopped off, that were adorned with various ornaments of gold and that still held scimitars and spiked maces and battle-axes and the fingers of which were still cased in leathern fences.14 [And the earth became strewn]* with floral wreaths and ornaments and cloths, with fallen standards, with coats of mail and shields and golden chains and diadems and umbrellas and yak tails;15 with Upashkaras, and Adhishtanas, and Dandakas, and Vandhuras; with crushed Akshas, broken wheels, and yokes, numbering thousands; +16 with Anukarshas, and banners, and charioteers, and steeds; as also with broken cars, and elephants, and steeds.17 field of battle, strewn with slain Kshatriyas endued (while living) with great heroism,-rulers of diverse realms, inspired with desire of victory,—presented a fearful sight.18 Abhimanyu angrily careered over the field of battle in all directions, his very form became invisible.19 Only his coat of mail, decked with gold, and his ornaments, and bow, and shafts, could be seen.20 Indeed, while he slew hostile warriors by means of his shafts, staying in their midst like the Sun himself in his blazing effulgence, none could gaze at him with his eyes.""21

SECTION XLV.

"Sanjaya said,—'Engaged in taking the lives of brave warriors, Arjuna's son then resembled the Destroyer himself when ^{*} These words occur in 17 lower down,-T.

t These are limbs of cars. - T

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:27 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized ,

the latter takes the lives of all creatures on the arrival of the hour of Universal Dissolution.1 Possessed of prowess resembling that of Cakra himself, the mighty son of Cakra's son, viz., Abhimanyu, agitating the Kaurava army, locked exceedingly resplendent.2 Penetrating into the Kaurava host, O king, that destroyer of foremost Kshatriyas resembling Yama himself, seized Satyacravas like an infuriate tiger seizing a Beholding Satyacravas seized by him, many mighty car warriors, taking up diverse kinds of weapons, rushed upon Indeed, those bulls among Kshatriyas, from a spirit of rivalry, rushed at the son of Arjuna from desire of slaying him, all exclaiming,-I shall go first, I shall go first !5-As a whale in the sea, obtaining a shoal of small fish, seizes them with the greatest ease, even so did Abhimanyu receive that whole division of rushing Kshatriyas.6 Like rivers that never go back when they approach the sea, none amongst those unretreating Kshatriyas turned back when they approached Abhimanyu.7 That army then reeled like a boat tossed on the ocean when overtaken by a mighty tempest, (with its crew) afflicted with panic caused by the violence of the wind.8 Then the mighty Rukmaratha, son of the ruler of the Madras, for assuring the frightened troops, fearlessly said,—Ye heroes, ye need not fear! When I am here, what is Abhimanyu? Without doubt, I will seize this one a living captive !9-10-Having said these words, the valiant prince, borne on his beautiful and well-equipt car, rushed at Abhimanyu.11 Piercing Abhimanyu with three shafts in the chest, three in the right arm, and three other sharp shafts in the left arm, he uttered a loud roar.12 na's son, however, cutting off his bow, his right and left arms, and his head adorned with beautiful eyes and eye-brows, quickly felled them on the earth.18 Beholding Rukmaratha, the honored son of Calya, slain by the illustrious son of Snbhadra, that Rukmaratha, viz., who had vowed to consume his foe or take him alive,14 many princely friends of Calya's son, O king, accomplished in smiting and incapable of being easily defeated in battle, and owning standards decked with gold, (came up for the fight).15 Those mighty car-warriors, stretching their bows full six cubits long, surrounded the son of Arjuna on all sides, pouring their arrowy showers upon him.16 ing the brave and invincible son of Subhadra singly encountered by all those wrathful princes endued with heroism and skill acquired by practice and strength and youth, and seeing him covered with showers of arrows, Duryodhana rejoiced greatly, and regarded Abhimanyu as one already made a guest of Yama's abode.17-18 Within the twinkling of an eye, those princes, by means of their shafts of golden wings and diverse forms and great impetuosity, made Arjuna's son invisi-Himself, his standard, and his car, O sire, were seen by us covered with shafts like (trees overwhelmed with) flights of locusts.20 Deeply pierced, he became filled with rage like an elephant struck with the hook. He then, O Bharata, applied the Gandharva weapon and the illusions consequent on it.1 Practising ascetic penances, Arjuna had obtained that weapon from the Gandharvas Tumvuru and others. With that weapon Abhimanyu now confounded his foes. Quickly displaying his weapons, he careered in that battle like a circle of fire, and was, O king, seen sometimes as a single individual, sometimes as a hundred, and sometimes as a thousand.23 Confounding his foes by the skill with which his car was guided and by the illusion caused by his weapons, he cut into a hundred pieces, O monarch, the bodies of the kings (opposed to him).24 means of his sharp shafts the lives of living creatures were These, O king, attained to the other world while despatched. their bodies fell down on the earth.25 Their bows, and steeds, and charioteers, and standards, and arms decked with Angadas, and heads, the son of Phalguna cut off with his sharp shafts.26 Those hundred princes were slain and felled by Subhadra's son like a tope of five year old mango trees just on the point of bearing fruit (laid low by a tempest).27 Beholding those youthful princes brought up in every luxury and resembling angry snakes of virulent poison, all slain by the single-handed Abhimanyu, Duryodhana was filled with fear.28 Seeing (his) carwarriors and elephants and steeds and foot-soldiers crushed, the Kuru king quickly proceeded in wrath against Abhi-

^{*} The Bombay reading is slightly different.-T.

manyu.³ Continuing for only a short space of time, the unfinished battle between them became exceedingly fierce. Thy son then, afflicted with Abhimanyu's arrows, was obliged to turn back from the fight.' "50

SECTION XLVI.

"Dhritarāshtra said,—'That which thou tellest me, O Suta, about the battle, fierce and terrible, between the one and the many, and the victory of that illustrious one, that story of the prowess of Subhadrā's son, is highly wonderful and almost incredible! I do not, however, regard it as a marvel that is absolutely beyond belief in the case of those that have righteousness for their refuge. After Duryodhana was beat back and the hundred princes slain, what course was pursued by the warriors of my army against the son of Subhadrā?

"Sanjaya said,—'Their mouths became dry, and eyes rest-Sweat covered their bodies, and their hair stood on end. Despairing of vanquishing their foe, they became ready to leave the field.4 Abandoning their wounded brothers and sires and sons and friends and relatives by marriage and kinsmen, they fled, urging their steeds and elephants to their utmost speed. Beholding them broken and routed, Drona, and Drona's son, and Vrihadvala, and Kripa, and Duryodhana, and Karna, and Kritavarman, and Suvala's son (Cakuni),6 rushed in great wrath against the unvanquished son of Subhadrā. these, O king, were beat back by thy grandson. Only one warrior then, viz., Lakshmana, brought up in luxury, accomplished in arrows, endued with great energy, and fearless in consequence of inexperience and pride, proceeded against the son of Arjuna. Anxious about his son, his father (Duryodhana) turned back for following him. Other mighty carwarriors turned back for following Duryodhana.9 All of them then drenched Abhimanyu with showers of arrows like the pouring rain on the mountain-breast. Abhimanyu, however, single-handed, began to crush them like the dry winds that blow in every direction destroying gathering clouds.10 Like one infuriate elephant encountermasses of

ing another, Arjuna's son then encountered thy invincible grandson Lakshmana of great personal beauty, endued with great bravery, staying near his father with bow, brought up in every luxury, and resembling a second prince of the Yakshas.*11-12 Encountering Lakshmana, that slaver of hostile heroes, viz., the son of Subhadra, had his two arms and chest struck with sharp shafts.18 Thy grandson, the mighty-armed Abhimanyu then, filled with rage like a snake struck (with a rod), addressing, O king, thy (other) grandson, said,14-Look well on this world, for thou shalt (soon) have to go to the other! In the very sight of all thy kinsmen, I will despatch thee to Yama's abode !15-Saying thus, that slayer of hostile heroes, viz., the mightyarmed son of Subhadra, took out a broad-headed arrow that resembled a snake just freed from its slough.16 That shaft, sped by Abhimanyu's arms, cut off the beautiful head, decked with ear-rings, of Lakshmana, that was graced with a beautiful nose, beautiful eye-brows, and exceedingly good-looking Beholding Lakshmana slain, the troops uttered exclamations of Oh and Alas. Upon the slaughter of his dear son, Duryodhana became filled with rage.18 That bull among Kshatriyas then loudly urged the Kshatriyas under him, saying,-Slay this one !- Then Drona, and Kripa, and Karna. and Drona's son, and Vrihadvala,19 and Kritavarman the son of Hridikā,-these six car-warriors eucompassed Abhimanyu. Piercing them with sharp arrows and beating them off from him, the son of Arjuna fell with great speed and fury upon the vast force of Jayadratha. Thereupon the Kalingas, the Nishādas, and the valiant son of Krātha, all clad in mail, cut off his path by encompassing him with their elephant The battle then that took place between Phalguna's son and those warriors was obstinate and fierce.20-22 Then the son of Arjuna began to destroy that elephant division as the wind coursing in every direction destroys vast masses of gathering clouds in the welkin.23 Then Krātha covered the son of Arjuna with showers of arrows, while many other car-warriors headed by Drona, having returned to the field,²⁴ rushed at him, scattering high and mighty-weapons. Checking all those weapons by means of his own arrows, the son of Arjuna began to afflict the son of Krātha²⁵ with ceaseless showers of shafts, using great despatch and inspired by the desire of slaying his antagonist. The latter's bow and shafts, and bracelets, and two arms, and head decked with diadem,²⁶ and umbrella, and standard, and charioteer, and steeds, were all cut off and felled by Abhimanyu. When Krātha's son possessed of nobility of lineage, good behaviour, acquaintance with the scriptures, great strength, fame, and power of arms, was slain, the other heroic combatants almost all turned away from the fight.'"²⁷

^{*} Literally, "like another son of the Lord of Treasures."-T.

SECTION XLVII.

"Dhritarāshtra said,—'While the youthful and invincible son of Subhadrā, never retreating from battle, was, after penetrating into our array, engaged in achieving feats worthy of his lineage, borne by his three year old steeds of great might and the best breed, and apparently swimming in the welkin, what heroes of my army encompassed him?'1-2

"Sanjaya said,—'Having penetrated into our array, Abhimanyu of Pandu's race, by means of his sharp shafts, made Then Drona, and all the kings turn away from the fight.3 Kripa, and Karna, and Drona's son, and Vrihadvala, and Kritavarman the son of Hridika,—these six car-warriors,—encompassed him.4 As regards the other combatants of thy army, beholding that Jayadratha had taken upon himself the heavy duty (of keeping off the Pandavas), they supported him, O king, by rushing against Yudhishthira.5 Many amongst them, endued with great strength, drawing their bows full six cubits long, showered on the heroic son of Subhadra arrowy downpours like torrents of rain. Subhadra's son, however,that slayer of hostile heroes,-paralysed by his shafts all those great bowmen conversant with every branch of learning.7 he pierced Drona with fifty arrows, and Vrihadvala with twenty. And piercing Kritavarman with eighty shafts, he pierced Kripa with sixty. And the son of Arjuna pierced Açwatthaman with ten arrows equipt with golden wings, endued with great speed, and shot from his bow drawn to its fullest stretch. And the son of Phalguna pierced Karna, in the midst of his foes, in one of his ears, with a bright, welltempered, and barbed arrow of great force.10 Felling then the steeds yoked to Kripa's car, as also both his Pārshni charioteers, Abhimanyu pierced Kripa himself in the centre of the chest with ten arrows." The mighty Abhimanyu then, in the very sight of thy heroic sons, slew the brave Vrindaraka, that enhancer of the fame of the Kurus.12 While Abhimanyu was thus engaged in fearlessly slaying one after another the foremost warriors among his enemies, Drona's son Açwatthāman pierced him with five and twenty small arrows.18 The son of Arjuna, however, in the very sight of all the Dhartarashtras, quickly pierced Acwatthaman in return, O sire, with many whetted shafts.14 Drona's son, however, in return, piercing Abhimanyu with sixty fierce arrows of great impetuosity and keen sharpness, failed to make him tremble, for the latter, pierced by Açwatthaman, stood immovable like the Mainaka Endued with great energy, the mighty Abhimountain.15 manyu then pierced his antagonist with three and seventy straight arrows equipt with wings of gold.16 Drona then, desirous of rescuing his son, pierced Abhimanyu with a hundred And Acwatthaman pierced him with sixty arrows. desirous of rescuing his father.17 And Karna struck him with two and twenty broad-headed arrows, and Kritavarman struck him with four and ten. And Vrihadvala pierced him with fifty such shafts, and Caradwat's son Kripa with ten.18 manyu, however, pierced each of these in return with ten The ruler of the Koçalas struck Abhimanyu in the chest with a barbed arrow.19 Abhimanyu, however, quickly felled on the earth his antagonist's steeds and standard and bow and charioteer. The ruler of the Koçalas then, thus deprived of his car, took up a sword and shield,20 and wished to sever from Abhimanyu's trunk his beautiful head decked with earrings. Abhimanyu then pierced king Vrihadvala the ruler Generated on 2022-02-03 12:27 GMT / https://hdl.h Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hath of the Koçalas, in the chest, with a strong arrow. The latter then, with riven heart, fell down. Beholding this, ten thousand illustrious kings broke and fled.²¹⁻²² Those kings, armed with swords and bows, fled away, uttering words inimical (to king Duryodhana's interests).* Having slain Vrihadvala thus, the son of Subhadrā careered in battle, paralysing thy warriors,—those great bowmen,—by means of arrowy downpours thick as rain.' "†²³

^{*} I expand the 5th a little to make the sense clear.-T.

SECTION XLVIII.

"Sanjaya said,—'Phalguna's son once more pierced Karna in the ear with a barbed arrow, and for angering him still further, he pierced him with fifty other shafts.1 The son of Rādhā pierced Abhimanyu in return with as many shafts. Covered all over with arrows, Abhimanyu then, O sire, looked exceedingly beautiful. Filled with rage, he caused Karna also Mangled with arrows and covered with to be bathed in blood. blood, the brave Karna also shone greatly.;* Both of them pierced with arrows, both bathed in blood, those illustrious warriors then resembled a couple of flowering Kincukas.* The son of Subhadra then slew six of Karna's brave counsellors conversant with all modes of warfare, with their steeds and charioteers and standards and cars. As regards the other great bowmen, Abhimanyu fearlessly pierced each of them, in return, with ten arrows. That feat of his seemed highly Slaying next the son of the ruler of the Magawonderful. dhas, Abhimanyu, with six straight shafts, slew the youthful Acwaketu with his four steeds and charioteer.7 Then slaying, with a sharp razor-headed arrow, the Bhoja prince of Martikāvata bearing the device of an elephant (on his banner), the son of Arjuna uttered a loud shout and began to scatter his

^{*} I confess I do not understand what the meaning is of açiva vāchas Srijatām. The rendering I offer is tentative.—T.

[†] I follow the numbering of the Bengal texts. 23 consists of three lines.—T.

[‡] In the first line of 3, the correct reading is Karnunchāpyakarot krudha &c., the reading in the Bengal texts is vicious and unmeaning.—T

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:27 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

shafts on all sides. Then the son of Dusçasana pierced the four steeds of Abhimanyu with four shafts, his charioteer with one, and Abhimanyu himself with ten.9 The son of Arjuna then, piercing Dusçasana's son with ten fleet shafts, addressed him in a loud tone and, with eyes red in wrath, said,10-Abandoning the battle, thy sire hath fled like a coward. well that thou knowest how to fight. Thou shalt not, however escape today with life !"-Saying these words unto him, Abhimanyu sped a long arrow, well polished by the smith's The son of Drona cut that arrow with three hand, at his foe. shafts of his own.12 Leaving Acwatthaman alone, Arjuna's son struck Calya with three arrows. Calya, in return, fearlessly pierced him, in the chest with nine shafts equipt with vulturine feathers. That feat seemed highly wonderful. The son of Arjuna then cut off Calya's bow and slew both his Pārshni chariot-Abhimanyu then pierced Calya himself with six shafts made wholly of iron. Thereupon the latter, leaving that steedless car, mounted another, Abhimanyu then slew five warriors named Catrunjaya, and Chandraketu, and Mahamegha, and Suvarchas, and Suryabhāsa. He then pierced Suvala's son. The latter, piercing Abhimanyu with three arrows, said unto Duryodana,16-16—Let us all together grind this one, else, fighting singly with us he will slay us all! O king, think of the means of slaying this one, taking counsel with Drona and Kripa and others!17 -Then Karna the son of Vikartana said unto Drona,-Abhimanyu grindeth us all! Tell us the means by which we may slay him!—Thus addressed, the mighty bowman Drona, addressing them all, said,-Observing him with vigilance, have any of you been able to detect any laches in this youth?18-19 Yet have any of you been able to careering in all directions. detect today the least hole in him? Behold the lightness of hand and quickness of motion of this lion among men, this son of Arjuna!20 In the track of his car, only his bow drawn to a circle can be seen, so quickly is he aming his shafts and so quickly is he letting them off !21 Indeed, this slayer of hostile heroes, viz., the son of Subhadra, gratifieth me although he afflicteth my vital breaths and stupefieth me with his shafts !22 the mightiest of car-warriors, filled with wrath, are unable to detect any lackes in him! The son of Subhadra, therefore, careering on the field of battle, gratifieth me greatly !28 not see that in battle there is any difference between the wielder of Gandiva himself and this one of great lightness of hand filling all the points of the horizon with his mighty shafts !24_ Hearing these words, Karna, afflicted with the shafts of Arjuna's son, once more said unto Drona,-Exceedingly afflicted with the shafts of Abhimanyu, I am staying in battle only bebecause (as a warrior) I should stay here! Indeed, the arrows of this youth endued with great energy are exceedingly fierce! Terrible as they are and possessed of the energy of fire, those arrows are weakening my heart !- The preceptor then, slowly and with a smile, said unto Karna,-Abhimanyu is young, His prowess is great. His coat of mail is impenetrable.25-27 one's father had been taught by me the method of wearing This subjugator of hostile towns assuredly defensive armour. knoweth the entire science (of wearing armour).28 With shafts well-shot, you can, however, cut off his bow, bowstring, the reins of his steeds, the steeds themselves, and the two Pārshni charioteers.29 O mighty bowman, O son of Radha, if competent, do this! Making him turn back from the fight (by this Strike him then! 30 With his bow in hand, he is incapable of being vanquished by the very gods and the Asuras together! If you wish, deprive him of his car, and divest him of his bow !31-Hearing these words of the preceptor, Vikartana's son Karna quickly cut off, by means of his shafts, the bow of Abhimanyu as the latter was shooting with great acti-He of Bhoja's race (viz., Kritavarman) then slew his steeds, and Kripa slew his two Pārshni charioteers. others covered him with showers of arrows after he had been divested of his bow.33 Those six great car-warriors, great speed when speed was so necessary, ruthlessly covered that carless youth fighting single-handed with them, with showers of arrows.84 Bowless and carless, with an eye however to his duty (as as a warrior), the handsome Abhimanyu, taking up a sword and a shield, jumped into the sky. 35 playing great strength and great activity, and describing the tracks called Kaucika and others, the son of Arjuna fiercely coursed through the sky like the prince of winged creatures (viz... Garuda). 86-He may fall upon me, sword in hand,-with such thoughts, those mighty bowmen, on the look out for the laches of Abhimanyu, began to pierce him in that battle, with their gaze turned upwards. Then Drona of mighty energy, that conqueror of foes, with a sharp arrow quickly cut off the hilt, decked with gems, of Abhimanyu's sword.38 Karna, with sharp shafts, cut off his excellent shield. ed of his sword and shield thus, he came down, with sound limbs, from the welkin, upon the earth. Then taking up a car-wheel, he rushed in wrath against Drona. 89 His body bright with the dust of car-wheels, and himself holding the carwheel in his upraised arms, Abhimanyu looked exceedingly beautiful, and imitating Vasudeva (with his discus), became awfully fierce for a while in that battle.40 His robes dyed with the blood flowing (from his wounds), his brow formidable with the wrinkles visible thereon, himself uttering loud leonine roars, the lord Abhimanyu of immeasurable might, staying in the midst of those kings, looked exceedingly resplendent on the field of battle." "41

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:31 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112
Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google

SECTION XLIX.

"Sanjaya said,- 'That joy of Vishnu's sister, (viz., Abhimanyu), that Atiratha decked with the weapon of Vishnu himself, looked exceedingly beautiful on the field of battle like a second Janarddana. With the end of his locks waving in the air, with that supreme weapon upraised in his hands, his body became incapable of being looked at by the very gods. kings beholding it and also the wheel in his hands, became filled with anxiety. They then cut off that wheel into a hundred fragments. Then that great car-warrior, viz., the son of Arjuna, took up a mighty mace. Deprived by them of his bow and car and sword, and divested also of his wheel by his foes, the mighty-armed Abhimanyu (mace in hand) rushed against Acwatthaman. Beholding that mace upraised which looked like the blazing thunderbolt, Açwatthāman, that tiger among men, rapidly alighted from his car and took three (long) leaps

(for avoiding Abhimanyu).5 Slaying Acwatthaman's steeds and two Pārshni charioteers with that mace of his, Subhadra's son, pierced all over with arrows, looked like a porcupine.6 that here pressed Savala's son Kälikeya down into the earth, and slew seven and seventy Gandhara followers of the latter." Next he slew ten car-warriors of the Brahma-Vasātiya race, and then seven car-warriors of the Kaikeyas, and then ten huge elephants.6 Proceeding next towards the car of Dusçãsana's son, he crushed the latter's car and steeds, pressing them down into the earth. The invincible son of Dusçasana then, O sire, taking up his mace,9 rushed at Abhimanyu, saying .- Wait, Wait !- Then those cousins, those two heroes, with upraised maces, began to strike each other, desirous of achieving each other's death, like the three-eyed (Mahādeva) and (the Asura) Andhaka in days of old. Each of those chastisers of foes, struck with the other's mace-end, fell down on the earth like two uprooted standards erected to the honor of Then Duscasana's son, that enhancer of the fame of the Kurus, rising up first,10-12 struck Abhimanyu with the mace on the crown of his head as the latter was on the point of rising. Stupefied with the force of that stroke as also with the fatigue he had undergone,18 that slayer of hostile hosts, viz., the son of Subhadra, fell on the earth, deprived of his senses. O king, was one slain by the many in battle,14—one who had grinded the whole army, like an elephant grinding lotus stalks in a lake. As he lay dead on the field, the heroic Abhimanyu looked like a wild elephant slain by the hunters.15 The fallen hero was then surrounded by thy troops. And he looked like an extinguished fire in the summer season after (as it lies) having consumed a whole forest; or, like a tempest divested of its fury after having crushed mountain crests;* or, like the Sun arrived at the Western hills after having blasted with his heat the Bharata host; '7 or, like Soma swallowed up by Rahu; The mighty car-warriors of or, like the ocean reft of water. thy army, beholding Abhimanyu whose face had the splendour of the full moon and whose eyes were rendered beautiful in consequence of lashes black as the feathers of the raven, lying prostrate on the bare earth, were filled with great joy. they repeatedly uttered leonine shouts. 18-19 Indeed, O monarch. thy troops were in transports of joy, while tears fell fast from the eyes of the Pandava heroes.20 Beholding the heroic Abhimanyu lying on the field of battle like the moon dropped from the firmament, diverse creatures, O king, in the welkin, loudly said,21—Alas, this one lieth on the field, slain, while fighting singly, by six mighty car-warriors of the Dhartarashtra army, headed by Drona and Karna! This act hath been, we hold, an unrighteous one !22-Upon the slaughter of that hero, the earth looked exceedingly resplendent like the star-bespangled firmament with the Moon.28 Indeed, the earth was strewn with shafts equipt with wings of gold, and covered with waves And strewn with the beautiful heads of heroes. decked with ear-rings24 and variegated turbans of great value, and banners and yak tails and beautiful blankets, and begemmed weapons of great efficacy,25 and the bright ornaments of cars and steeds and men and elephants, and sharp and welltempered swords looking like snakes freed from their sloughs, se and bows, and broken shafts, and darts, and swords, and lances, and Kampanas, and diverse other kinds of weapons, assumed a beautiful aspect.27 And in consequence of the steeds dead or dying but all weltering in blood, with their riders (lying about them), felled by Subhadra's son, the earth in many places became impassable.23 And with iron hooks, and elephants-huge as hills-equipt with shields and weapons and standards, lying about, crushed with shafts,29 with excellent cars deprived of steeds and charioteers and car-warriors, lying scattered on the earth, crushed by elephants and looking like agitated lakes, so with large bodies of foot-soldiers decked with diverse weapons and lying dead on the ground, the field of battle, wearing a terrible aspect, inspired all timid hearts with terror.31

^{*} The Bengal texts read Taru-cringani, i. e., tree-tops. - T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:28 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

"Beholding Abhimanyu, resplendent as the Sun or the Moon, lying on the ground, thy troops were in transports of joy, while the Pandavas were filled with grief. 82 When the youthful Abhimanyu yet in his minority fell, the Pandava divisions, O king, fled away in the very sight of king Yudhishthira.

Beholding his army breaking upon the fall of Subhadra's son, Yudhishthira addressed his brave warriors, saying, 4-The heroic Abhimanyu, who without retreating from battle hath been slain, hath certainly ascended to heaven! Stay then, and fear not, for we shall yet vanquish our foes! 55—Endued with great energy and great splendour, king Yudhishthira the just, that foremost of warriors, saying such words unto his soldiers inspired with grief, endeavoured to dispel their woe.36 king continued,-Having, in the first instance, slain in battle hostile princes resembling snakes of virulent poison, the son of Arjuna hath then given up his life !87 Having slain ten thousand warriors, and that mighty car-warrior, viz., the king of the Koçalas, Abhimanyu, who was even like Krishna or Arjuna himself, hath assuredly gone to the abode of Indra! 38 destroyed cars and steeds and men and elephants by thousands, he was still not content with what he did! Performing as he did such meritorious feats, we should not certainly grieve He hath gone to the bright regions of the righteous, regions that men acquire by meritorious deeds !- ""89

SECTION L.

"Sanjaya said,-'Having thus slain one of their foremost warriors, and having been afflicted with their arrows, we came back to our encampment in the evening, covered with blood.1 Steadfastly gazed at by the enemy, we slowly left, O monarch, the field of battle, having sustained a severe loss and nearly deprived of our senses.2 Then came that wonderful hour intervening between day and night. Inauspicious howls of jackals were heard. The Sun, with the pale-red hue of the filaments of the lotus,—sank low in the horizon, having approached the Western hills.3 And he took away with him the splendour of our swords and darts and rapiers and carfences, and shields and ornaments. Causing the firmament and the earth to assume the same hue, the Sun assumed his favorite form of fire.4 The field of batttle was strewn with the motionless bodies of innumerable elephants deprived of life, looking like crests of cloud-capt hills riven by the thunder,

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:28 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

and lying about with their standards and hooks and guides fallen from their backs.5 The earth looked beautiful with large cars crushed to pieces and with their warriors and charioteers and ornaments and steeds and standards and banners crushed, broken, Those huge cars, O king, looked like living creatures deprived of their lives by the foe with his shafts.6 of battle assumed a fierce and awful form in consequence of large numbers of steeds and riders all lying dead, with costly trappings and blankets of diverse kinds scattered about, and the tongues and teeth and entrails and eyes of those creatures dragged out of their places." Men decked with costly coats of mail and ornaments and robes and weapons, deprived of life, lay with slain steeds and elephants and broken cars, on helpless, although deserving of the bare ground, perfectly costly beds and blankets.8 Dogs and jackals and crows and cranes and other carnivorous birds, and wolves and hyenas, and ravens, and other blood-drinking creatures, and diverse tribes of Rākshasas, and large numbers of Piçāchas, on the field of battle, tearing the skins of the corpses and drinking their fat. blood, and marrow, began to eat their flesh.9 And they began to suck also the secretions of rotten corpses, while the Rakshasas laughed horribly and sang aloud, dragging dead bodies numbering by thousands.10 An awful river, difficult to cross like the Vaitarani itself, was caused there by foremost of warriors. were constituted by the blood (of fallen creatures). constituted the rafts (on which to cross it). Elephants formed it rocks, and the heads of human beings, its smaller stones. it was miry with the flesh (of 'slain steeds and elephants and And diverse kinds of costly weapons constituted the garlands (floating on it or lying on its banks). And that terrible river flowed fiercely through the middle of the field of battle, wafting living creatures to the regions of the dead.11-12 large numbers of Picachas, of horrible and revolting shapes, rejoiced, drinking and eating in that stream. jackals and carnivorous birds, all eating of the same food, and inspiring living creatures with terror, held their high carnival And the warriors, gazing on that field of battle which, enhancing the population of Yama's domains, presented such an awful sight, and where human torsos, rising up, began to dance, slowly left it as they beheld the mighty car-war-rior Abhimanyu, who resembled Cakra himself, lying on the field, his costly ornaments displaced and fallen off, and looking like a sacrificial fire on the altar no longer drenched with clarified butter." "14-15

SECTION LI.

"Sanjaya said,—'After the slaughter of that hero, that leader of car-divisions, viz., the son of Subhadra, the Pandava warriors, leaving their cars and putting off their armour, and throwing aside their bows, sat, surrounding king Yudhishthira. they were thinking of that grief of theirs, their hearts fixed upon the (deceased) Abhimanyu.1-8 Indeed, upon the fall of that heroic nephew of his, viz., the mighty car-warrior Abhimanyu, king Yudhishthira, filled with grief, indulged in (these) lamentations. 4—Alas, Abhimanyu, from desire of achieving my good, pierced the array formed by Drona and teeming with his sol-Encountering him in battle, mighty bowmen endued with great courage, accomplished in weapons and incapable of being easily defeated in battle, were routed and forced to re-Encountering our implacable foe Dusçāsana in battle, treat !5 he, with his arrows, caused that warrior to fly away from the field, deprived of his senses! Alas, the heroic son of Arjuna, having crossed the vast sea of Drona's army, was ultimately obliged to become a guest of Yama's abode, upon encountering the son of Dusçasana! When Abhimanyu is slain, how shall cast my eyes on Arjuna as also on the blessed Subhadra de prived of her favourite son? What senseless, disjointed, and improper words shall we have to say today unto Hrishikeça and Dhananjaya! Desirous of achieving what is good, and expectant of victory, it is I who have done this great evil unto Subhadrā and Keçava and Arjuna!10 He that is covetous never beholdeth his faults. Covetousness springs from folly. Collectors of honey see not the fall that is before them. even like them.11 He who was only a child, he who should have been indulged with (good) food, with vehicles, with beds, with ornaments, alas, even he was placed by us in the van of battle!12 How could good come to a child of tender years, unskilled in battle, in such a situation of great danger! Like a horse of proud mettle, he sacrificed himself instead of refusing to do the bidding of his masters.18 Alas, we also shall today lay ourselves down on the bare earth, blasted by the g'ances of grief cast by Arjuna filled with wrath!14 jaya is liberal, intelligent, modest, forgiving, mighty, possessed of well-developed and beautiful limbs, respectful to superiors, heroic, beloved, and devoted to truth.15 Of glorious achievements, the very gods applaud his feats. That valiant hero slew the Nivātakavachas and the Kālakeyas.16 those enemies of Indra having their abode in Hiranya-Within the twinkling of an eye he slew the Paulomas with all their kinsmen !17 Endued with great might, he granteth quarter to even implacable enemies asking for quarter! Alas, we could not protect today the son of even such a person from danger !18 A great fear hath overtaken the Dhartarashtras endued though they might be with great strength!* Enraged at the slaughter of his son, Partha will exterminate the Kauravas.19 It is evident also that the mean-minded Duryodhana, having mean counsellers, that destroyer of his own race and partisans, beholding this extermination of the Kaurava army, will give up his life in grief!20 Beholding this son of Indra's son, of unrivalled energy and prowess, lying on the field of battle, neither victory, nor sovereignty, nor immortality, nor abode with the very celestials, causeth me the least delight!" "21_

SECTION LII.

"Sanjaya said,-'While Kunti's son Yudhishthira was indulging in such lamentations, the great Rishi Krishna-Dwaipayana came to him.1 Worshipping him duly, and causing him to be seated, Yudhishthira, afflicted with grief on account of the death of his brother's son, addressed him, saying, -

^{*} The correct reading is Mahavalan and not Mahavalat .- T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:28 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized

Alas, while battling with many mighty bowmen, the son of Subhadra, surrounded by several great car-warriors of unrighteous propensities, hath been slain on the field!8 slayer of hostile heroes, viz., the son of Subhadra, was a child in years and of childish understanding.* He fought in battle against desperate odds. I asked him to open a passage for us in battle. He penetrated within the hostile army, but we could not follow him, prevented by the ruler of the Sin-Alas, they that betake themselves to battle as a profession always fight with antagonists equally circumstanced with themselves. This battle, however, that the enemy fought with Abhimanyu, was an extremely unequal one!6 which grieves me greatly and draws tears from me! of this, I fail to regain peace of mind!'7-

"Sanjaya continued,—'The illustrious Vyāsa, addressing Yudhishthira who was indulging in such lamentations and who was thus unmanned by an accession of sorrow, said these words.8

"'Vyāsa said,—O Yudhishthira, O thou of great wisdom, O thou that art master of all branches of knowledge, persons like thee never suffer themselves to be stupified by calamities! This brave youth, having slain numerous foes, hath ascended to heaven! Indeed, that best of persons, (though a child), acted, however, like one of mature years !10 O Yudhishthira, this law is incapable of being transgressed! O Bharata, death takes all, viz., gods and Danavas and Gandharvas (without exception !11-

"'Yudhishthira said,—Alas, these lords of Earth, that lie on the bare Earth, slain in the midst of their forces, reft of consciousness, were possessed of great might !12 Others (of their class) possessed strength equal to that of ten thousand Others, again, were endued with the impetuosity elephants. and might of the very Wind! They have all perished in battle, slain by men of their own class !18 I do not behold the person (save one of their own class) who could slay any of Endued with great prowess, they were possthem in battle!

^{*} The Bombay reading, which I accept, is Valabudhiccha. Of course, the Bengal reading is Avalabudhiccha.-T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:31 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

essed of great energy and great might !14 Alas, they who used daily to come to battle with this hope firmly implanted in their hearts, viz., that they would conquer, alas, even they. possessed of great wisdom, are lying on the field, struck (with weapons) and deprived of life !15 The significance of the word Death hath today been made intelligible, for these lords of Earth, of terrible prowess, have almost all been dead !16 These heroes are lying motionless, reft of vanity, having succumbed Many princes, filled with wrath, have been victimised before the fire (of their enemies' wrath).17 A great doubt possesses me, viz., whence is Death? Whose (offspring) is Death? What is Death? Why does Death take away creatures? O grandsire, O thou that resemblest a god, tell me this !18-

"Sanjaya continued,-'Unto Kunti's son Yudhishthira asking him thus, the illustrious Rishi, comforting him, said these words :19-

"'Vyāsa said,—As regards the matter in hand, O king, this ancient story of what Nārada had in days of old said unto Akampana, is cited.20 King Akampana, O monarch, I know, while in this world was afflicted with very great and unbearable grief on account of the death of his son. 11 now tell thee the excellent story about the origin of Death. Having listened to it, thou wilt be emancipated from sorrow and the touch of affection's tie.  Listen to me, O sire, as I recite this ancient history! This history is, indeed, excellent. It enhanceth the period of life, killeth grief, and conduceth to health !23 It is sacred, destructive of large bodies of foes, and auspicious of all auspicious things. Indeed, this history is even as the study of the Vedas, 44 O monarch, it should every morning be listened to by foremost of kings who are desirous of long-lived children and sovereignty and their own good !56

"'In days of old, O sire, there was a king named Akam-Once, on the field of battle, he was surrounded by his foes and nearly overpowered by them. 26 He had a son who was called Hari. Equal to Nārāyana himself in might, the latter was exceedingly handsome, accomplished in weapons, gifted with great intelligence, possessed of might, and resembled Cakra himself in battle, 27 Encompassed by countless foes on the field of battle, he sped thousands of shafts at this warriors and the elephants that surrounded him. 48 Having achieved the most difficult feats in battle, O Yudhishthira, that scorcher of foes was at last slain in the midst of he Performing the obsequies of his son, king Akampana cleansed himself.* Grieving, however, for his son day and night, the king failed to regain happiness of mind. Informed of his grief on account of the death of his son, the celestial came to his presence. $1 Rishi Narada The blessed king, beholding the celestial Rishi arrive, worshipped him duly. And then the king spoke unto the Rishi,32 telling the latter everything that had happened unto him, viz., his defeat at the hands of his foes, and the slaughter of his son.88 king said, -[My son was endued with great energy, and equalled Indra or Vishnu himself in splendour. That mighty son of mine, having displayed his prowess on the field against countless foes, was at last slain !34 O illustrious one, who is this Death? What is the measure of his energy, strength, and prowess? O foremost of intelligent persons, I desire to hear all this truly !]26—Hearing these words of his, the boon-giving lord Nārada recited the following elaborate history destructive of grief on account of a son's death.86-

"'-Nār da said,-[Listen, O mighty-armed king, to this long history, exactly as I have heard it, O monarch !87 beginning, the Grandsire Brahman created all creatures. dued with mighty energy, he saw that the creation bore no signs of decay. 58 Thereat, O king, the Creator began to think about the destruction of the Universe. Reflecting on the matter, O monarch, the Creator failed to find any means of destruction. so He then became angry, and in consequence of his anger a fire sprang from the sky. That fire spread in all directions for consuming everything in the Universe.40 Then heaven, sky, and Earth, all became filled with that fire. And thus the Creator began to consume the whole mobile and immobile universe.41 Thereat all creatures, mobile and immobile, were destroyed. Indeed, the mighty Brahman, frightening everything by the force of his wrath, did all this.42 Then Hara, otherwise called Sthanu or Civa, with matted locks on head. that Lord of all wanderers of the night, appealed to the divine Brahman, the Lord of all the gods.43 When Sthanu fell (at .Erahman's feet) from desire of doing good to all creatures, the Supreme Deity (Brahman), that greatest of ascetics, blazing with splendour, said,44-What wish of thine shall we accomplish, O thou that deservest to have all thy wishes fulfilled! O son, thou hast been born of our wish! do all that may be agreeable to thee! Tell us, O Sthanu, what is thy wish !-]" "46

^{*} During the days of mourning a person is regarded as unclean, being unable to perform his ordinary worship and other religious rite. After the obsequies are performed and the mourning is ended, he is supposed to be cleansed.—T.

SECTION LIII.

"'-[Sthanu said,-O lord, thou hadst taken great care for creating diverse creatures! Indeed, creatures of diverse kinds were created and reared by thee !1 Those very creatures, again. are now being consumed through thy ire! Seeing this, I amfilled with compassion! O illustrious lord, be inclined tograce!-12

"'-[Brahman said,-I had no desire of destroying the Uni-I desired the good of Earth, and it was for this that wrath possessed me! The goddess Earth, afflicted with the heavy weight of creatures, always urged me for destroying the creatures on her.4 Urged by her I could not, however, find any means for the destruction of the infinite creation.

wrath possessed me!]-5

"'-[Rudra said,-Be inclined to grace! O lord of the Universe, cherish not thy wrath for the destruction of creatures! No more let creatures immobile and mobile be destroyed! Through thy grace, O illustrious one, let the threefold Universe, viz., the Future, the Past, and the Present, exist! Lord, hadst blazed up with wrath! From that wrath of thine, a substance like fire sprang into existence. That fire is even now blasting rocks and trees and rivers,* and all kinds of herbs and grass! Indeed, that fire is exterminating the immobile and the mobile Universe. The moble and the immoble Universe is being reduced to ashes! Be inclined to grace, O illustrious one! Do not give way to wrath! Even this is the boon I solicit! All created things, O divine Being, belonging to thee, are being destroyed! Therefore, let thy wrath be appeased! Let it be annihilated in thy own self! Cast thy eye on thy creatures, inspired with the desire of doing them good! Do that by which creatures endued with life may not cease to be! Let not these creatures, with their productive prowers weakened, be exterminated! O Creator of the worlds, thou hast appointed me their Protector! O Lord of the Universe, let not the mobile and the immobile Universe be destroyed! Thou art inclined to grace, and it is for this that I say these words unto thee!—]

"'-Nārada continued,-[Hearing these words (of Mahādeva), the divine Brahman, from desire of benefiting creatures, held in his own inner self his wrath that had been roused.15 Extinguishing the fire, the divine benefactor of the world, the great Master, declared the duties of Production and Emancipa-And while the Supreme Deity exterminated that fire born of his wrath, there came out from the doors of his diverse senses a female17 who was dark and red and twany, whose tongue and face and eyes were red, and who was decked with two brilliant ear-rings and diverse other brilliant ornaments.18 Issuing out of his body, she smilingly looked at those two lords of the Universe and then set out for the southern quarter.19 Then Brahman, that controller of the creation and the destruction of the worlds, called after her by the name of Death. And Brahman, O king, said unto her,—Slay these creatures of Thou hast been born of that wrath of mine which I cherished for the destruction (of the Universe). slay thou all creatures including idiots and seers,21 at my com-By doing this, thou wilt be benefited !- That lotuseyed lady called Death, thus addressed by him, 22 reflected deeply, and then helplessly wept aloud in melodious accents. The Grandsire then caught the tears she shed, with his two hands, for the benefit of all creatures, and began to implore her (in the following words).]-" "28

SECTION LIV.

"'-Nārada said,-[The helpless lady, suppressing her sorrow within her own self, addressed, with joined hands, the Lord of the Creation, bending with humility like a creeper." And she said,—O foremost of speakers, created by thee, how shall I, being a female, do such a cruel and evil act knowing it to be cruel and evil? I fear unrighteousness greatly. O divine Lord, be inclined to grace! Sons and friends and brothers and sires and husbands are always dear.3 them), they who will suffer these losses will seek to injure me. It is this that I fear! The tears that will fall from the eyes of woe-stricken and weeping persons,4 inspire me with fear, O Lord! I seek thy protection! O divine Being, O foremost of gods, I will not go to Yama's abode! O boongiving one, I implore thee for thy grace, bowing my head and joining my palms! O Grandsire of all the worlds, I solicit (the accomplishment of even) this wish at thy hands !*6 desire, with thy permission, to undergo ascetic penances. O Lord of created things! Grant me this boon, O divine Being, O great Master !7 Permitted by thee, I will go to the excel asylum of Dhenuka! Engaged in adoring Thyself, I will undergo the severest austerities there !3 I will not be able, O Lord of the gods, to take away the dear life-breaths of living creatures weeping in sorrow! Protect me from unrighteousness !- 1º

"'—[Brahman said,—O Death, thou hast been intended for achieving the destruction of creatures! Go, destroy all creatures, thou needst have no scruples!\(^{10}\) Even this must be! It cannot be otherwise! Do but my behest! Nobody in the world will find any fault in thee!—\(^{11}\)

"'—Nārada continued,—[Thus addressed, that lady became very much affrighted. Looking at Brahman's face, she stood with joined hands. From desire of doing good to creatures,

^{*} The first line of 6 is read differently in the Bombay edition. The Bengal reading, however, seems to me to be preferable.—T.

she did not set her heart upon their destruction.*12 divine Brahman also, that Lord of the lord of all creatures. remained silent. And soon the Grandsire became gratified in his own self.18 And casting his eyes upon all the Creation, he And thereupon creatures continued to live as before. i. e., unaffected by premature death. And upon that invincible and illustrious Lord having shaken off his wrath, that damsel left the presence of that wise Deity.15 Leaving Brahman without having agreed to destroy creatures, the damsel called Death speedily proceeded to the retreat called Dhenuka. Arrived there, she practised excellent and highly austere vows. And she stood there on one leg for sixteen times ten billions of years,17 and five times ten billions also, through pity for living creatures and from desire of doing them good, and all the time restraining her senses from their favourite objects.18 And once again, O king, she stood there on one leg for one and twenty times ten billions of years.19 And then she wandered for ten times ten thousand billions of years with the creatures Next, repairing to the sacred Nandā that was (of the Earth). full of cool and pure water, 20 she passed in those waters eight thousand years. Observing rigid vows at Nanda, she cleansed herself of all her sins.31 Then she proceeded, first of all, to the sacred Kauciki, observant of vows. Living upon air and water only, she practised austerities there.22 Repairing then to Panchagangā and next to Vetasa, that cleansed damsel, by diverse kinds of especial austerities, emaciated her own body.35 Going next to Ganga and thence to the great Meru, she remained motionless like a stone, suspending her life-breaths.24 going to the top of Himavat, where the gods had performed their sacrifice (in days of yore), that amiable and auspicious girl remained for a billion of years, standing on the toe only of her feet.25 Wending then to Pushkara, and Gokarna, and Naimisha, and Malaya, she emaciated her body by practising

^{*} Both the Bengal and the Bombay editions, in the first line of 12, read prita, i., e., gratified. There can be no doubt, however, that the correct reading is bhita, i., e., affrighted, as I have put it. I find that some of the Bengali translators have also made this correction .- T.

austerities agreeable to her heart.26 Without acknowledging any other god, with steady devotion to the Grandsire, she lived and gratified the Grandsire in every way.27 Then the unchangeable Creator of the worlds, gratified, said unto her, with a softened and delighted heart,28-O Death, why dost thou undergo ascetic austerities so severe ?-Thus addressed, Death said unto the divine Grandsire, *9-Creatures, O Lord, are liv-They do not injure one another even by words. ing in health. I shall not be able to slay them! O Lord of all, O Master, I desire even this boon at thy hands !80 I fear sin, and it is for this that I am engaged in ascetic austerities! O blessed one, undertake to remove for ever my fears !81 I am a woman, in distress, and without fault! I beg thee, be thou my protector !- Unto her the divine Brahman acquainted with the past, the present, and the future, said, 52-Thou shalt commit no sin, O Death, by slaying these creatures! My words can never be futile, O amiable one!38 Therefore, O auspicious damsel, slay these creatures of four kinds! Eternal virtue shall always be thine! 4 That Regent of the world, viz., Yama, and the diverse Diseases, shall become thy help-mates! myself and all the gods will grant thee boons, so that, freed from sin and perfectly cleansed, thou mayest even acquire glory !- Thus addressed, O monarch, that lady, joining her hands, once more said these words, seeking his grace by bowing down unto him with her head,-If, O Lord, this is not to be without me, 86-87 then thy command I place upon my head! Listen, however, to what I say! Let covetousness, wrath, malice, jealousy, quarrel, folly, and shamelessness, and other stern passions tear the bodies of all embodied creatures !--]  "'-[Brahman said,-It will be, O Death, as thou sayest!

"—[Brahman said,—It will be, O Death, as thou sayest! Meanwhile, slay creatures duly! Sin shall not be thine, nor shall I seek to injure thee, O auspicious one! Those teardrops of thine that are in my hands, even they will become diseases springing from living creatures themselves. They will kill men; and if men are killed, sin shall not be thine! Therefore, do not fear! Indeed, sin shall not be thine! Thou shalt be the virtue of living creatures, and the goddess of that virtue! Devoted to righteousness, and observants.

of thy duty, thou shalt sway (all creatures)! Therefore, slay thou always the lives of these living creatures! Casting off both desire and wrath, take thou the life of all living creatures. Even thus will eternal virtue be thine! Sin will slay those that are of wicked behaviour! By doing my bidding cleanse thyself. It will be thine to sink them in their sins that are wicked. Therefore, cast off both desire and wrath, and kill these creatures endued with life!—]

"'-Nārada continued,-[Then that damsel, seeing that she was (persistently) called by the name of Death, feared (to act And in terror also of Brahman's curse, she said,otherwise). Yes!-Unable to do otherwise, she began, casting off desire and wrath, to take the lives of living creatures when the time came (for their dissolution).44 It is only living creatures that Diseases spring from living creatures themselves. Disease is the abnormal condition of creatures. They are pained by it. Therefore, indulge not in fruitless grief for creatures after they are dead!45 The senses, upon the death of creatures, go with the latter (to the other world), and achieving their (respective) functions, once more come back (with creatures when the latter are Thus all creatures, O lion among beings, the very gods included, going thither, have to act, like mortals!*46 The wind, that is awful, of terrible roars and great strength, omnipresent and endued with infinite energy, it is the wind that will rive the bodies of living creatures. It will, in this mather, put forth no active energy, nor will it suspend its functions; (but do this naturally).47 Even all the gods have the appellation of mortals attached to them. Therefore, O lion among kings, do not grieve for thy son! Repairing to heaven, the son of thy body is passing his days in perpetual happiness, having obtained those delightful regions that are for heroes.48 Casting off all sorrow, he hath attained to the companionship of the righteous. hath been ordained by the Creator himself for all creatures! When their hour comes, creatures are destroyed duly. death of creatures arises from the creatures themselves.49 tures kill themselves. Death doth not kill any one, armed with her bludgeon! Therefore, they that are wise, truly knowing death to be inevitable because ordained by Brahman himself, never grieve for creatures that are dead. Knowing this death to be ordained by the Supreme God, cast off, without delay, thy grief for dead sons !]-" "50

^{*} Devās, in the first line of 46, means the senses. Vrittās, as explained by Nilakantha, means Vritavantas.—T.

"'Vyāsa continued,-Hearing these words of grave import spoken by Nārada, king Akampana, addressing his friend, said, 51 — [O illustrious one, O foremost of Rishis, my grief is gone, and I am contented! Hearing this history from thee, I am grateful to thee, and I worship thee !]52—That foremost of superior Rishis, that celestial ascetic of immeasurable soul, thus addressed by the king, proceeded to the woods of Nan-The frequent recital of this history for the hearing of others, as also the frequent hearing of this history, is regarded as cleansing, leading to fame and heaven, and worthy of approbation. It enhanceth, besides, the period of life.54 Having listened to this instructive story, cast off thy grief, O Yudhishthira, reflecting besides on the duties of a Kshatriya and the high state (of blessedness) attainable by heroes. 55 Abhimanyu, that mighty car-warrior, endued with mighty energy. having slain (numerous) foes before the gaze of all bowmen, hath attained to heaven. 56 That great bowman, that mighty car-warrior, struggling on the field, hath fallen in battle, struck with sword, and mace, and dart, and bow.57 Sprung from Soma, he hath disappeared in the lunar essence, cleansed of all his impurities. Therefore, O son of Pandu, mustering all thy fortitude, thyself with thy brothers, without allowing your senses to be stupified, speedily set out, inflamed with rage, for battle !-- "58 *

^{*} Verses 55 to 58, as occurring in both the Bengal and the Bombay texts, require correction. 55 is incomplete. For the words tadā Rājā, therefore, I read Cokam tyaja as suggested by K. P. Singha. the Visarga after Yudhishthira must be dropped to make it a vocative. Similarly, Pándavas in 58 should be Pándava, a vocative and not a nominative; upākrāmat should be upakrama. The last two corrections are made in the Bombay text. The fact is, are 55 to 58 the words of Vyā sa, or of Sanjaya? Evidently, it is Vyāsa that speaks, and hence teh necessity of the corrections noted. - T.

SECTION LV.

"Sanjaya said,—'Hearing of the origin of Death and her strange acts, king Yudhishthira, humbly addressing Vyāsa, ence more said these words unto him."

"'Yudhishthira said,—Many kings there were, in blessed countries, of righteous deeds and of prowess equal to that of Indra himself. They were royal sages, O regenerate one, that were sinless and truth-speaking! Once more, address me in words of grave import, and console me with (accounts of) the feats of those royal sages of ancient times! What was the measure of the sacrificial gifts made by them? Who were those high-souled royal sages of righteous deeds that made them? Tell me all this, O illustrious one!—-

"'Vyāsa said,—There was a king of the name of Cwitya. He had a son who was called Srinjaya. The Rishis Nārada and Parvata were his friends.5 One day, the two ascetics, Duly worfor paying Srinjaya a visit, came to his palace. shipped by Srinjaya, they became pleased with him, and continued to live with him happily.6 Once on a time, as Srinjava was seated at his ease with the two ascetics, his beautiful daughter of sweet smiles came to him.7 Saluted with reverence by his daughter, Srinjaya delighted that girl standing by his side with proper benedictions of the kind she desired.8 holding that maiden, Parvata smilingly asked Srinjaya, saying, -[Whose daughter is this damsel of restless glances and possessed of every auspicious omen? Is she the splendour of Surva, or the flame of Agni? Or, is she any of these, viz., Cri, Hri, Kirti, Dhriti, Pushti, Siddhi, and the splendour of Soma?10]-Unto the celestial Rishi (Parvata) saying those words, king Srinjaya answered, saying, [O illustrious one, this girl is my She beggeth my blessings! Then Nārada addressed king Srinjaya and said,-[If, O monarch, thou wishest for great good (to thyself), then give this daughter of thine unto me for a wife!]12—Delighted (with the Rishi's proposal), Srinjaya addressed Nārada, saying, -[I give her unto thee!]

At this, the other Rishi, viz., Parvata, indignantly addressed Nārada, saying,18—[Chosen before this by me, within my heart, thou hast taken this damsel as thy wife! And since thou hast done this, thou, O Brahmana, shalt not go to at thy will!]14-Thus addressed by him, Nārada answered him, saying,-[(The husband's) heart and speech (directed thereto), (the giver's) consent, the speeches (of both), the actual gift made by sprinkling water,16 and the (recital of the) mantras ordained for the seizure of the (bride's hand), -these have been declared to be indications by which one is constituted a husband. Even this ceremonial, though essential, is not all. That which (above all) is essentail is the walk for seven paces (by the bride in circumambulating the bridegroom).16 Without thy purpose (about marriage) having been accomplished, thou hast cursed me! Therefore, thou also shalt not go to heaven without me !]"-Having cursed each other thus, those two Rishis continued to live there. while, king Srinjaya, desirous of (obtaining) a son, began, with cleansed soul, to carefully entertain the Brahmanas, to the utmost of his power, with food and drink and robes. a certain time, those foremost of Brahmanas, devoted to the study of the Vedas and fully conversant with those scriptures and their branches, became gratified with that monarch desirous of getting a son. Together they came to Nārada and said unto him -[Give this king a son of the kind he desires!]18-20 -Thus addressed by the Brāhmanas, Nārada replied unto them, saying, [So be it!]—And then the celestial Rishi addressed Srinjaya, saying, -[O royal sage, the Brāhmanas have been pleased with thee and they wish thee a son!21 thou the boon, blessed be thou, about the kind of son thou desirest!]—Thus addressed by him, the king, with joined hands, asked for a son possessed of every accomplishment,22 famous, of glorious feats, of great energy, and capable of chastising And he further asked that the urine, the excreta, the phlegm, and the sweat of that child should be gold.23 And in due time the king had a son born unto him, who came to be named Suvarnashthivin on Earth. And in consequence of the boon, that child began to increase (his father's) wealth beyond all limits.24 And king Srinjaya caused all desirable things of his to be made of gold. And his houses and walls and forts, and the houses of all Brahmanas (within his dominions),25 and his beds, vehicles, and plates, and all manner of pots and cups, and the palace that he owned, and all implements and utensils, domestic and otherwise. 26 were made of gold. in time his stock increased. Then certain robbers, hearing of the prince and seeing him to be such, 37 assembled together and sought to injure the king. And some amongst them said,-[We will seize the king's son himself!28 He is his father's mine of gold. Towards that end, therefore, we should strive !]-Then those robbers, inspired with avarice, penetrating into the king's palace,29 forcibly took away prince Suvarnashthivin. seized and taken him to the woods, those senseless idiots. inspired with avarice but ignorant of what to do with him, slew him there and cut his body into fragments. They saw not, however, any gold in him. After the prince was slain, all the gold obtained in consequence of the Rishi's boon, disappeared. 20-81 The ignorant and senseless robbers struck one And striking one another thus, they perished, and with them that wonderful prince on the Earth. 32 And those men of wicked deeds sank in an unimaginable and awful hell. Seeing that son of his, obtained through the Rishi's boon, thus slain, that great ascetic, 38 viz., king Srinjaya, afflicted with deep sorrow, began to lament in piteous accents. Beholding the king afflicted with grief on account of his son, and thus weeping,34 the celestial Rishi Nārada showed himself in his presence. Listen, O Yudhishthira, to what Nārada said unto Srinjaya, having approached that king, who afflicted with grief and deprived of his senses, was indulging in piteous lamentations. Nārada said,—[O Srinjaya, with thy desires unfulfilled, thou shalt have to die, $5-36 although we, utterers of Brahma, live in Avikshit's son Marutta even, O Srinjaya, we hear, had to die !87 Piqued with Vrihaspati, he had caused Samvarta

^{*} I follow Nolakantha in rendering these two verses .- T.

ß

^{*} Of golden excreta.-T.

himself to officiate at one of his great sacrifices!* Unto that royal sage the illustrious lord (Mahadeva) himself had given wealth in the shape of a golden plateau of Himavat. (With that wealth) king Marutta had performed diverse sacrifices. Unto him, after the completion of his sacrifices, diverse tribes of celestials, those creators of the universe, with Indra himself in their company and with Vrihaspati at their head, used to come. All the carpets and furniture of his sacrificial compound were of gold. 38-40 The regenerate classes, desirous of food, all ate as they pleased, at his sacrifices, food that was clean and agreeable to their wishes. And at all his sacrifices, milk and curds and clarified butter, and honey, and other kinds of food and edibles, all of the best order, and robes and ornaments desirable for their costliness, gratified Brahmanas thoroughly conversant with the Vedas. The very gods used to become distributors of food in king Marutta's palace.41-48 The Vicwedevas were the courtiers of that royal sage, the son of By him were gratified the dwellers of heaven with libations of clarified butter. And gratified (therewith), these, in their turn, increased that powerful ruler's wealth of crops with copious showers of rain. He always contributed to the gratification of the Rishis, the Pitris, and the gods, and thereby made them happy, by practising Brahmacharya, study of the Vedas, obsequial rites, and all kinds of gifts. And his beds and carpets and vehicles, and his vast stores of gold difficult to be given away,44-48 in fact, all that untold wealth of his, were given away voluntarily unto the Brahmanas. Cakra himself used to wish him well. His subjects were made happy (by him).47 Acting always with piety, he (ultimately) repaired to those eternal regions of bliss acquired by his religious merit. children and counsellors and wives and descendants and kins-

^{*} The Bengal reading is Samvartam. The Bombay text makes Samvarta amominative. I have adopted the Bengal reading. reading be accepted, the meaning would be that Samvarta himself, piqued with Vrihaspati, caused Marutta to perform a sacrifice. Singha makes a ludicrous blunder in supposing Samvarta to have been a kind of sacrifice. - T.

men,⁴⁸ king Marutta, in his youth, ruled his kingdom for a thousand years. When such a king, O Srinjaya, died, who was superior to thee in respect of the four cardinal virtues (viz., ascetic penances, truth, compassion, and liberality), and who, superior to thee, was much more superior to thy son, do not grieve,—O Cwaitya,—for thy son saying he performed no sacrifice and made no sacrificial present.]—'"⁴⁹⁻⁵⁰

SECTION LVI.

"'-Nārada said,-[King Suhotra also, O Srinjava, we hear, fell a prey to death. He was the foremost of heroes, The very gods used to come for seeing and invincible in battle. Acquiring his kingdom virtuously, he sought the advice of his Ritwijas and domestic priests and Brāhmanas for his own good, and enquiring of them, used to obey their Well acquainted with the duty of protecting his subjects, possessed of virtue and liberality, performing sacrifices and subjugating foes, king Suhotra wished for the increase of his wealth. He adored the gods by following the ordinances of the scriptures, and defeated his foes by means of his arrows. He gratified all creatures by means of his own excellent accomplishments.4 He ruled the Earth, freeing her Mecchas and the forest theives.* The deity of the clouds showered gold unto him from year's end to year's end. In those olden days, therefore, the rivers (in his kingdom) ran (liquid) gold, and were open to everybody for use. † The deity of the clouds showered in his kingdom large numbers of alligators and crabs and fishes of diverse species and various objects of desire, countless in number, that were all made of gold. The artificial lakes in that king's dominions each measured full two miles. Beholding thousands of dwarfs and and humpbacks and alligators and Makaras and tortoises all made of gold, king Suhotra wondered much. 6-3 That unlimited wealth of gold, the royal sage Suhotra, performing a sacrifice at Kurujangala, gave away unto the Brahmanas, before the completion of the sacrifice.9 Having performed a thousand Horsesacrifices, a hundred Rājasuyas, many sacred Kshatriya-sacrifices,* in all of which he made abundant presents to the Brahmanas,10 and having performed daily rites, almost countless in number, undergone from specified desires, the king ultimately obtained a very desirable end. When, O Srinjaya, such a king died, who was superior to thee as regards the four cardinal virtues and who, superior to thee, was, therefore, much more superior to thy son, thou shouldst not grieve, O Cwaitya,for thy son saying he performed no sacrifice and made no sacrificial present.]-" "11-18

^{*} The word in the original is Atāvika, literally meaning one dwelling in the woods. It is very generally used in the sense of thieves or robbers, thus showing that these depredators from the earliest times, had the woods and the forests for their home.—T.

[†] Vāhinyas rivers. Swairinyas, open to everyboby. The Bengal reading is abhavan; the Bombay reading, Vyavahan. If the former reading be adopted, it would mean the rivers were of liquid gold."—T.

SECTION LVII.

"'-Nārada said,-[The heroic king Paurava also, O Srinjaya, we hear, fell a prey to death. That king gave away a thousand times thousand horses that were all white in hue.' At the Horse-sacrifice performed by that royal sage, countless numbers of learned Brāhmanas versed in the principles of Cikshā and Akshara came from diverse realms.+2 These Brāhmanas, washed bythe Vedas, by knowledge, and by vows, and liberal and of agreeable countenances, having obtained from the king costly gifts such as robes and houses and excellent beds and carpets and vehicles and draft-cattle, were always delighted by actors and dancers and singers, thoroughly competent and well-versed (in their respective arts), engaged in sport and ever striving for their diversion.4 At each of his

^{*} I. e., Sacrifices ordained for Kshatriyas -T.

⁺ Ciksha, one of the six branches of the Vedas; it may be called the orthoppy of the Vedas. Akshara, letters or the alphabet. The sense seems to be that these Brahmanas were good readers of the Vedas.—T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:32 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized / sacrifices in due time he gave away as sacrificial presents ten thousand elephants of golden splendour, with the temporal juice trickling down their bodies,5 and cars made of gold with He also gave away, as sacrificial prestandards and banners. sents, a thousand times thousand maidens decked with ornaments of gold,6 and cars and steeds and elephants for mounting, and houses and fields, and centuries of kine, by hundreds of thousands, and thousands of cowherds decked with gold. They that are acquainted with the history of the past sing this song 7-8 viz., that in that sacrifice king Paurava gave away kine, with calves, having golden horns and silver hoofs and brass milkpots, and female slaves and male slaves and asses and camels, and sheep, countless in number; and diverse kinds of gems and diverse hills of food.10-That sacrificing king of the Angas successively performed, in the order of their merit, and according to what was competent for his own class, many auspicious sacrifices capable of yielding every object of desire.11 When such a king, O Srinjaya, died who was superior to thee as regards the four cardinal virtues and who, superior to thee, was, therefore, much more superior to thy son, thou shouldst not, saying,-Oh Cwaitya, Oh Cwaitya,-grieve for thy son who performed no sacrifice and made no sacrificial present.]-""12

SECTION LVIII.

"'-Nārada said,-[Uçinara's son Civi also, O Srinjaya, we hear, fell a prey to death. That king had, as it were, put a leathern girdle around the Earth, by making the Earth with her mountains and islands and seas and forests resound with the clatter of his car. That vanquisher of foes, viz., king Civi, always slew the foremost of foes.2 He performed many sacrifices with presents in profusion unto the Brahmanas. That monarch of great prowess and great intelligence had acquired enormous wealth.3 In battle he won the applause of all Kshatriyas.*

^{*} The word in the original is Murddhabhishikta, which literally means one whose coronal locks have undergone the ceremony of the sacred investiture. Hence, it is used to denote Kshatriyas or persons of the royal order.-T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:32 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

Having brought the whole earth under subjection, he performed many Horse-sacrifices,4 without obstruction, which were productive of great merit, giving away (as ascrificial presents) thousand crores of golden nishkas, and many elephants and steeds and other kinds of animals, much grain, and many deer and kine and sheep.5 And king Civi gave away the sacred Earth consisting of diverse kinds of soil unto the Brah-Indeed, Uçinara's son Civi gave away as many kine as the number of rain-drops showered on the Earth, or the number of stars in the firmament, or the number of sand-grains on the bed of Ganga, or the number of rocks that constitute the mountain called Meru, or the number of gems or of (aquatic) animals The Creator himself hath not met with and will in the ocean. not meet with in the past, the present, or the future, another king capable of bearing the burdens that king Civi bore. were the sacrifices, with every kind of rites, that king Civi performed. 6-3 In those sacrifices, the stakes, the carpets, the houses, the walls, and the arches, were all made of gold. Food and drink, agreeable to the taste and perfectly clean, were kept in profu-And the Brahmanas that repaired to them could be counted in myriads and myriads.10 Abounding with viands of every description, nothing but agreeable words (such as give away and take) were heard there. Milk and curds were collected in large lakes. In his sacrificial compound, there were rivers of drink and white hills of food. 11-Bathe, and drink, and eat as ye like,-these only were the words heard there. Gratified with his righteous deeds, Rudra gave Civi a boon, saying,12-As thou givest away, let thy wealth, thy devotion, thy fame, thy religious acts, the love that all creatures bear thee, and the heaven (thou wilt attain), be all inexhaustible !13-Having obtained all these desirable boons, even Civi, when the time came, left this When, O Srinjaya, he died who was suworld for heaven. perior to thee in respect of the four cardinal virtues and who, superior to thee, was much more superior to thy son, thou saying, Oh Cwaitya, Oh Cwaitya, grieve shouldst not, for thy son who performed no sacrifice and made no sacrificial present.]-" "14-15

SECTION LIX.

"'-Narada said,-[Rāma the son of Daçaratha, O Srinjaya, we hear, fell a prey to death. His subjects were as much delighted with him as a sire is delighted with the children of his lions. Endued with immeasurable energy, countless virtues were in him. Of unfading glory, Rāma, the elder brother of Lakshmana, at the command of his father, lived for fourteen That bull among men slew years in the woods, with his wife. in Janasthana fourteen thousand Rakshasas for the protection of the ascetics. While dwelling there, the Rākshasa called Rāvana, beguiling both him and his companion (Lakshmana), ravished his wife the princess of Videha. Like the Three-eyed (Mahādeva), in days of old, slaying (the Asura) Andhaka; Rāma in wrath slew in battle that offender of Pulastya's race who had never before been vanquished by any foe. Indeed, the mighty-armed Rāma slew in battle that descendant of Pulastya's race with all his kinsmen and followers, that Rākshasa who was incapable of being slain by the gods and the Asuras together, that wretch who was a thorn unto the gods and the the Brahmanas. In consequence of his affectionate treatment of his subjects, the celestials worshipped Rāma.2-7 Filling the entire Earth with his achievements, he was much applauded by even the celestial Rishis. Compassionate unto all creatures, that king, having acquired diverse realms and protected his subjects virtuously, performed a great sacrifice without obstruc-And the lord Rāma also performed a hundred Horsesacrifices and the great sacrifice called Jāruthya. libations of clarified butter he contributed to Indra's delight.* And the king performed diverse other sacrifices of great and varied merits.10 And by these acts of his, Rāma conquered hunger and thirst, and all the diseases to which living creatures Possessed of every accomplishment, he always blazed with his own energy.11 Indeed, Rama the son of Daca-

^{*} Havisha mudamāvahat; or havishām udam avahat, which would mean, he poured libations unto Indra as copious as water.—T.

ratha greatly outshone all creatures. When Rāma ruled his kingdom, the Rishis, the gods, and men, all lived together on The lives of living creatures were never cut short. It was never otherwise. The life-breaths also, called Prana, Apāna, Samāna, and the others, when Rāma kingdom, all performed their functions. All luminous bodies shone brighter, and calamities never occurred.12-14 All his subjects were long-lived. None died in youth. The dwellers of heaven, highly gratified, used to get, according to (the ordinances of) the four Vedas, 15 libations of clarified butter and other offerings of food made by men. His realms were free from flies and gnats; and beasts of prey and poisonous reptiles there were none.16 And none were of unrighteous tendencies, none were covetous, and none were ignorant.17 jects, of all the (four) orders, were engaged in righteous and When the Rākshasas, about this time, obstructdesirable acts. ed the offerings to the Pitris and the worship of the gods in Janasthāna,18 the lord Rāma, slaying them, caused those offerings and that worship to be once more given to the Pitris and the gods. Men were each blessed with a thousand children, and the period of their lives was a thousand years.19 had never to perform Crāddhas of their juniors.* Youthful in shape, of a dark-blue hue, of red eyes, possessed of the tread of an infuriate elephant,20 with arms reaching down to the knees and beautiful and massive, of leonine shoulders, of great strength, and beloved by all creatures, Rama ruled his kingdom for eleven thousand years. His subjects always took his name.21-22 While Rama ruled his kingdom, the world became extremely Taking at last his four kinds of subjects+ with him, Rāma went to heaven, 28 having established his own line consisting of eight houses on the Earth. When even he died, O Srinjaya, who was superior to thee in respect of the four cardinal

^{*} Because juniors never pre-deceased their seniors. form of akarayan is a license. -T.

⁺ The four kinds of creatures that owned Rama's sway were (1) those that were oviparous, (2) those that were viviparous, (3) those born of filth, and (4) that vegetables. - T.

virtues²⁴ and who, superior to thee, was much more superior to thy son, thou shouldst not, saying,—Oh Çwaitya, Oh Çwaitya,—grieve for thy son who performed no sacrifice and made no sacrificial present.]—' "25

SECTION LX.

"'-Nārada said,-[Even king Bhagiratha, O Srinjaya, we He caused the shores of Ganga, called after hear, was dead. his name Bhāgirathi, to be covered with flights of steps made Surpassing all kings and all princes he, gave unto the Brahmanas a thousand times thousand damsels decked with ornaments of gold. All those damsels were upon cars. unto every car were yoked four steeds. And behind each car were hundred elephants all decked in gold.8 And behind each elephant were a hundred steeds. And unto each steed were a hundred kine. And behind each cow were (many) goats and King Bhagiratha gave enormous presents at his sacri-For that reason large was the concourse of men assembled there. Afflicted therewith, Ganga was much pained. Protect me!—she said and sat down on his lap. And because Gangā thus sat upon his lap in days of old, therefore, she, like the celestial danceuse Urvaçi came to be regarded as his daughter and was named after his name. And having become the king's daughter, she became his son (by becoming, like a son, the means of salvation unto his deceased ancestors).+ Sweet-speeched Gandharvas of celestial splendour, gratified,

^{*} These were ghats for facilitating access to the sacred stream .- T.

⁺ Both 5 and 6 are difficult slokas. But for Nilakantha I could never have understood their sense. The reading Jalaughena, occurring in both the Bengal and the Bombay editions, is a mistake for Janaughena. The construction of 5 is this: Dakshinā Bhuyasirddadat: tena (hetunā Janaughena ākrüntā. The story of the salvation of Bhagiratha's ancestors is a beautiful myth. King Sagara (whence Sāgara or the Ocean) had sixty thousand sons. They were all reduced to ashes by the curse of the sage Kapila, an incarnation of Vishnu himself. Bhagiratha, a remote descendant, caused the sacred Gangā to roll over the spot where the ashes of his ancestors lay, and thus procured their salvation.—T.

sang all this in the hearing of the Rishis, the gods, and human Thus, O Srinjaya, did that goddess, viz., the oceangoing Ganga, select the lord Bhagiratha, that descendant of Ikshāku, that performer of sacrifices with profuse gifts (to the Brāhmanas), as her father.8 His sacrifices were always decked with (the presence of) the very gods with Indra at their head. And the gods used to take their respective shares, and removing all impediments, to facilitate those sacrifices in every way. Possessed of great ascetic merit, Bhagiratha gave unto the Brāhmanas whatever benefit they desired, without obliging them to stir from the place where they might entertain those desires.10 There was nothing which he could withhold from the Every one received from him everything he At last the king ascended to the region of Brahman, through the grace of the Brahmanas.11 For that object on which the Rishis that subsisted on the rays of the sun used to wait upon the sun and the presiding diety of the sun, for that very object they used to wait upon the lord Bhagiratha, that ornament of the three worlds.12 When he died, O Srinjaya, who was superior to thee, as regards the four cardinal virtues, and who, superior to thee, was much more superior to thy son, thou shouldst not, saying,—Oh Cwaitya, Oh Cwaitya,—grieve for the latter who performed no sacrifice and made no sacrificial presents.]-" "18

SECTION LXI.

"'-Nārada said,-[Dilipa the son of Ilavila, O Srinjaya, we hear, fell a prey to death. Brāhmanas, versed in knowledge of Truth, devoted to the performance of sacrifices, blessed with children and children's children, and numbering myriads upon myriads, were present at his century of sacrifices. Dilipa, having performed various sacrifices, gave away this Earth, filled with treasures, unto the Brāhmanas. rifices of Dilipa, the roads were all made of gold.1-3 gods with Indra at their head used to come to him regarding him as Dharma himself. The upper and lower rings in his sacrificial stake were made of gold.4 Eating his Rāga-khāndavas, many persons, at his sacrifices, were seen to lie down on the While battling over the waters, the two wheels of Dilipa's car never sank in that liquid. This seemed exceedingly wonderful, and never occurred to other kings. Even those that saw king Dilipa, that firm bowman always truthful in speech and giving away profuse gifts at his sacrifices, succeeded in ascending to heaven. In the abode of Dilipa, called also Khattanga, these five sounds were always to be heard, 5-7 viz., the sound of Vedic recitations, the twang of bows, and Drink, Enjoy, and Eat!—When he died, O Srinjaya, who was superior to thee in respect of the four cardinal virtues and who, superior to thee, was much more superior to thy son, thou shouldst not, saying,-Oh Cwaitya, Oh Cwaitya,-grieve for thy son who performed no sacrifice and made no sacrificial gift.]*- "8-9

^{*} The correct reading is Valguvadinas, and not the form in the genetive plural. - T.

SECTION LXII.

"'-Nārada said,-[Māndhātri the son of Yuvanāçwa, O Srinjaya, we hear, fell a prey to death. That king vanquished the gods, the Asuras, and men.1 Those celestials, viz., the twin Acwins, brought him out of his father's womb by a surgical operation. Once on a time, king Yuvanāçwa, while chasing the deer in the forest, became very thirsty and his steeds also became exceedingly fatigued.2 Beholding a wreath of smoke, the king (directed by it) went to a sacrifice and drank the sacred sacrificial butter that lay scattered there. Beholding that Yuvanāçwa (The king thereupon conceived). was quick with child, those best of physicians, viz., the twin Acwins among the celestials, extracted the child from the king's Seeing that child of celestial splendour lying on the lap of his father,4 the gods said unto one another,—What shall support this child?—Then Vasava said,—Let the child suck my fingers.5—Thereupon, from the fingers of Indra issued milk

^{*} In the Binbiy edition some verses occur after the 3rd -T

sweet as nectar. And since Indra, from compassion, had said,-He will draw his sustenance from me,-and showed him that kindness, therefore, the gods named that child Mandhatri.* Then jets of milk and clarified butter dropped into the mouth of Yuvanācwa's son from the hand of the high-souled Indra. The boy continued to suck the hand of Indra and by that means to grow.7-8 In twelve days he became twelve cubits in stature and endued with great prowess. And he conquered the whole of this Earth in course of a single day.9 ous soul, possessed of great intelligence, heroic, devoted to truth, and a master of his passions, Mandhatri vanquished by his bow Janamejaya and Sudhanwan and Jaya and Cuna and Vrihadratha and Asita and Nriga. + All the lands lying between the hill where the Sun rises and the hill where he sets, are known to this day as the dominions of Mandhatri. ing performed a hundred Horse-sacrifices, and a hundred Rajasuya sacrifices also,10-12 he gave away, O monarch, unto the Brāhmanas, some Rohita fishes made of gold, that were ten Yojanas in length and one Yojana in breadth.18 Mountains of savoury food and edibles, of diverse kinds, after the Brahmanas had been entertained, were eaten by others (who came at his sacrifices) and contributed to their gratification.14 Vast quantities of food and edibles and drink, and mountains of rice, looked beautiful as they stood. Many rivers, having lakes of clarified butter, with diverse kinds of soup for their mire, curds for their froth, and liquid honey for their water, looking beautiful, and wafting honey and milk, encircled mountains of solid viands. Gods and Asuras and men and Yakshas and Gandharvas and Snakes and birds,15-16 and many Brāhmanas, accomplished in the Vedas and their branches, and many Rishis, came to his Amongst those present there, none was illiterate.17 King Mandhatri, having bestowed the Earth bounded by the seas and full of wealth upon the Brāhmanas, at last disappeared like the Sun.18 Filling all the points of the compass with his fame, he repaired to the regions of the righteous.

^{*} Literally—"having me for his sustainer.—T.

t Instead of Cuna, the Bombay text gives Puru. - T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:32 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access_use#pd-google died, O Srinjaya, who excelled thee in the four cardinal virtues and who, superior to thee, was much more superior to thy son, thou shouldst not, saying,—Oh Çwaitya, Oh Çwaitya,—grieve for the latter who performed no sacrifice and made no sacrificial gift.]—'"13-20"

SECTION LXIII.

"'-Narada said,-[Yayāti the son of Nahusa, O Srinjaya, we hear, fell a prey to death. Having performed a hundred Rājasuyas, a hundred Horse-sacrifices, a thousand Pundarikas, a hundred Vājapeyas, a thousand Atirātras, inumerable Chāturmāsyas, diverse Agnishtomas, and many other kinds of sacrifices, in all of which he made profuse gifts unto the Brahmanas, he gave away unto the Brahmanas, having counted it first, the whole of the wealth that existed on this Earth in the possession of Mlecchas and other Brahmana-hating people. When the gods and the Asuras were arrayed for battle, king Yayāti aided the gods.1-4 Having divided the Earth into four parts, he gave Having performed various sacrifices it away unto four persons. and virtuously begotten excellent offspring upon (his wives) Devayani the daughter of uçanas, and Carmishtha, king Yayati, who was like unto a celestial, roved through the celestial woods at his own pleasure like a second Vasava. ed with all the Vedas, when, however, he found that he was not satiated with the indulgence of his passions, 5-7 he then, with his wives, retired into the forest, uttering this saying,-Whatever of paddy and wheat and gold and animals and women there Earth, even the whole of these is not sufficient for one Thinking of this, one should cultivate contentment!-Thus abandoning all his desires, and attaining to contentment, the lord Yayati, installing (his son) on his throne, retired into When he died, O Srinjaya, who was superior to thee in respect of the four cardinal virtues and who, superior to thee, was much more superior to thy son, thou shouldst not, saying,—Oh Cwaitya, Oh Cwaitya,—grieve for the latter who performed no sacrifice and made no sacrificial present.]" "8-11

SECTION LXIV.

"'Nārada said,-[Nābhāga's son Amvarisha, O Srinjaya, we hear, fell a prey to death. Alone he battled with a thousand times thousand kings.1 Desirous of victory, those foes, accomplished in weapons, rushed against him in battle from all sides, uttering fierce exclamations.2 Aided by his strength and activity and the skill he had acquired by practice, he cut off, by the force of his weapons, the umbrellas, the weapons, the standards, the cars, and the lances of those enemies, and dispelled his anxieties.*3 Desirous of saving their lives, doffing their coats of mail, implored him (for mercy). sought his protection, saying,—We yield ourselves to thee!4-Reducing them to subjection, and conquering the whole earth, he performed a hundred sacrifices of the best kind, according to the rites ordained in the scriptures, O sinless one!5 essed of every agreeable quality was eaten (at those sacrifices) by large classes of people. At those sacrifices, the Brahmanas were respectfully worshipped and greatly gratified.6 regenerate classes ate sweet-meats, and Purikas, and Pupas, and Cashkulis of good taste and large size, and Karambhas, Prithumridwikas, and diverse kinds of well-dressed edibles, and various kinds of soup, and Maireya, and Ragakhāndavas, and diverse kinds of confectionery, well-prepared, soft, and of excellent fragrance, and clarified butter, and honey, and milk, and water, and sweet curds, and many kinds of fruit and roots agreeable to the taste. +7-9 And they that were habituated to wines, drank, in due time, diverse kinds of intoxicating drinks for the sake of the pleasure these produced, and sang and played upon their musical instruments.10 And others, by thousands, intoxicated with what they drank, danced and merrily sang hymns to the praise of Amvarisha; while others, unable to bear themselves erect, fell down on the earth." In those sacrifices, king Amvarisha gave, as sacrificial presents, the kingdoms

^{*} The Bengal texts read this verse differently.—T.

[†] The words in italics are names of Indian confectionery, prepared with wheat or barley, milk, and sugar or honey.-T.

of hundreds and thousands of kings unto the ten milions of priests (employed by him).13 Having performed diverse sacrifices, the king gave unto the Brahmanas, as sacrificial presents, numbers of princes and kings whose coronal locks had undergone the sacred bath, all cased in golden coats of mail, all having white umbrellas spread over their heads, all seated on golden cars, all attired in excellent robes and having large trains of followers, and all bearing their sceptres and in possession of their treasuries. The great Rishis, seeing what he did, were highly gratified, and said, -None amongst men in past times did, none in the future will be able to do, what king Amvrisha of profuse liberality is doing now!13-16—When he, O Srinjaya, died who was superior to thee in respect of the four cardinal virtues and who, superior to thee, was much more superior to thy son, thou shouldst not, therefore, saying,—Oh Cwaitya, Oh Cwaitya,—grieve for the latter who performed no sacrifice and made no sacrificial present!]-""17

SECTION LXV.

"'-Nārada said,- King Caçavindu, O Srinjaya, we hear, fell a prey to death. Of great beauty and prowess incapable of being baffled, he performed diverse sacrifices. That high-souled monarch had one hundred thousand wives. From each of those wives were born a thousand sons.2 All those princes were endued with great prowess. They performed millions of sacrifices. Accomplished in the Vedas, those kings performed many foremost of sacrifices. All of them were cased (on occasions of battle) in golden coats of mail. And all of them were excellent bowmen. All these princes born of Cacavindu performed Horsesacrifices.4 Their father, O best of monarchs, in the Horsesacrifice he performed, gave away, (as sacrificial presents), all' those sons unto the Brahmanas. Behind each of those princes were hundreds upon hundreds of cars and elephants and fair maidens decked in ornaments of gold. With each maiden were a hundred elephants; with each elephant, a hundred cars; with each car a hundred steeds decked in garlands of gold. each of those steeds were a thousand kine; and with each cow were fifty goats. The highly blessed Cacavindu gave away unto the Brahmanas, in that great Horse-sacrifice of his such unlimited wealth !8 The king caused as many sacrificial stakes of gold to be made for that great Horse-sacrifice of his as is the number, doubled, of sacrificial stakes of wood in other sacrifices There were mountains of food and drink of the height of about two miles each. Upon the completion of his Horse-sacrifice, thirteen such mountains of food and drink remained (untouched).10 His kingdom abounded with people that were contented and well-fed. And it was free from all inroads of evil and the people were perfectly happy. Having ruled for many long years, Caçavindu at last ascended to heaven.11 died, O Srinjaya, who was superior to thee in respect of the four cardinal virtues and who, superior to thee, was, therefore, much more superior to thy son, thou shouldst not, saying,-Oh Cwaitya, Oh Cwaitya,—grieve for the latter who performed no sacrifice and made no sacrificial presents !]-' "12

SECTION LXVI.

"'-Nārada said,- Gaya the son of Amartarayas, O Srinjay, we hear, fell a prey to death. That king, for a hundred years, ate nothing but what remained of the libations of clarified butter poured into the fire.1 Agni (gratified with this proof of great dovotion) offered to give him a boon. Gaya solicited the boon (he desired), saying,—I desire to have a thorough knowledge of the Vedas through ascetic penances, through practice of Brahmacharya, and of vows and rules, and through the grace of my I desire also inexhaustible wealth, through practice of the duties of my own order and without injury to others! I wish also that I may always be able to make gifts unto Brahmanas, with devotion! Let me also procreate sons upon wives belonging to my own order and not upon others! Let me be able to give away food with devotion. Let my heart always delight in righteousness! O (Agni) thou supreme cleanser, let no impediment overtake me while I am engaged in acts for ^{*} These are the methods by which he sought a knowledge of the Vedas,—T.

the attainment of religious merit !5-Saying-So be it,-Agni disappeared there and then. And Gaya also, acquiring all he had asked for, subjugated his foes in fair fight. King Gaya then performed, for a full hundred years, diverse kinds of sacrifices with profuse presents unto the Brahmanas and the vows Every year, for a century, the called Chaturmasyas and others. king gave (unto the Brāhmanas) one hundred and sixty thousand kine, ten thousand steeds, and one hundred thousand crores gold (nishkas), upon rising (on the completion of his sacrifices).7-3 Under every constellation also, he gave away the presents ordained for each of those occasions.* Indeed, the king performed various sacrifices like another Soma or another Angiras.10 In his great Horse-sacrifice, king Gaya, making the Earth golden, gave her away unto the Brāhmanas.11 In that sacrifice the stakes of king Gaya were all exceedingly costly, being of gold, decked with gems, and delightful to all creatures.12 able of filling every wish, Gaya gave those stakes unto wellpleased Brāhmanas and other people.13 The diverse classes of creatures dwelling in the ocean, the woods, the islands, the rivers male and female, the waters, the towns, the provinces, and even in heaven, were all gratified with the wealth and food distributed at Gaya's sacrifices. And they all said,—No other sacrifice can come up to this one of Gaya!14-16—The sacrificial altar of Gaya was thirty Yojanas in length, six and twenty Yojanas in width, and four and twenty Yojanas in height. it was made entirely of gold, and overspread with pearls and diamonds and gems. And he gave away this alter unto the Brāhmanas, as also robes and ornaments.16-17 And the munificent monarch also gave unto the Brahmanas other presents of the kind laid down (in the scriptures). Upon the completion of that sacrifice, five and twenty hills of food remained untouched, 18 and many lakes and several beautifully flowing rivulets of juicy drinks, and many heaps, besides, of robes and ornaments.19 And in consequence of the merit of that great sacrifice, Gaya came to be well-known in the three worlds. And due to that sacrifice are the eternal Banian and the sacred Brahma-saras.²⁰ When he died, O Srinjaya, who was superior to thee in respect of four cardinal virtues and who, superior to thee, was, therefore, much more superior to thy son, thou shouldst not, saying,—Oh Cwaitya, Oh Cwaitya,—grieve for the latter who performed no sacrifice and made no sacrificial present!—'"²¹

^{*} Nakshatra-dakshinà is explained by Nilakantha as Nakshtra-vihità-Dakshinā,—T.

SECTION LXVII.

"'-Nārada said,- Rantideva the son of Sankriti, O Srinjaya, we hear, fell a prey to death. That high-souled king had two hundred thousand cooks to distribute excellent food, raw and cooked, like unto Amrita, unto the Brahmanas, by day and by night, who might come to his house as guests.*1-2 The king gave away unto the Brahmanas his wealth acquired by righte-Having studied the Vedas, he subjugated his foes in fair fight.8 Of rigid vows and always engaged in the due performance of sacrifices, countless animals, desirous of going to heaven, used to come to him of their own accord.4+ was the number of animals sacrificed in the Agnihotra of that king that the secretions flowing from his kitchen from the heaps of skins deposited there caused a veritable river. river, from this circumstance, came to be called the Char-He incessantly gave away nishkas of bright gold unto the Brahmanas.— I give thee nishkas!— I give thee nishkas!-these were the words incessantly uttered by him. -I give thee,- I give thee,- saying these words he gave away thousands of nishkas. And once again, with soft words to the Brahmanas, he give away nishkas." Having given away, in course of a single day, one crore of such coins, he thought that he had given away very little. And therefore, he would give away many more. Who else is there that would be able to give what he gave ?8 The king gave away wealth,

^{*} The Bengal reading of the second line of the second verse is vicius. At any rate, the Bombay reading is better.—T.

⁺ Animats slain in sacrifices are believed to go to heaven .- T.

Identified with the modern chumabal. - T.

thinking,—If I do not give wealth into the hands of Brahmanas, great and eternal grief, without doubt, will be mine! --For a hundread years, every fortnight, he gave unto thousands of Brāhmanas a golden bull unto each, followed by a century of kine and eight hundred pieces of nishkas. All the articles that were needed for his Agnihotra, and all that were needed for his other sacrifices,10-11 he gave away unto the Rishis, including Karakas and water-pots and plates and pans, and beds and carpets and vehicles, and mansions and houses,12 and diverse kinds of trees, and various kinds of viands. Whatever utensils and articles Rantideva possessed were all of gold.18 They that are acquainted with the history of ancient times, seeing the superhuman affluence of Rantideva, sing this song,14 viz.,-We have not seen such accumulated treasures even in the abode of Kuvera; what need be said, therefore, of human beings?15-And people wonderingly said,-Without doubt, the kingdom of Rantideva is made of gold.* On such nights when guests were assembled in the abode of Rantideva,16 one and twenty thousand kine were sacrified (for feeding them). And yet the royal cooks, decked with begemmed ear-rings, had to cry out, saying,17 -Eat as much soup as you like, for, of meat, there is not as much today as in other days!-Whatever gold was left belonging to Rantideva, he gave even that remnant away unto the Brahmanas during the progress of one of his sacri-In his very sight the gods used to take the libations of clarified butter poured into the fire for them,18-19 and the Pitris the food that was offered them in Crāddhas. And all superior Brahmanas used to obtain from him (the means of gratifying) all their desires. When he died, O Srinjava, who was superior to thee in respect of the four cardinal virtues and who, superior to thee, was, therefore, much more superior to thy son, thou shouldst not, saying—Oh Cwaitya, Oh Cwaitya,

[§] A kind of vessel by Brahmanas and others for begging .- T.

^{*} Vaswoksārà means "made of gold." It is a feminine adjective. The substantive is omitted. I think the passage may mean—"The city of Rantideva is made of gold."—T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:36 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

-grieve for the latter who performed no sacrifice and made no sacrificial gift !]-""31

SECTION LXVIII.

"'-Nārada said,-[Dushmanta's son Bharata, O Srinjaya, we hear, fell a prey to death. While only a child (living) in the forest, he achieved feats incapable of being achieved by others.1 Endued with great strength, he speedily deprived the very lions, white as snow and armed with teeth and claws, of all their prowess, and dragged them and bound them (at his pleasure). He used to check tigers also, that were fiercer and more ruthless (than lions), and bring them to subjection. Seizing other beasts of prey possessed of great might, and even huge elephants, dyed with red arsenic and spotted with other liquid minerals, by their teeth and tusks, he used to bring them to subjection, causing their mouths to become dry or obliging them to fly away.8-4 Possessed of great might, he used also to drag the mightiest of buffalos. And in consequence of his strength, he checked proud lions by hundreds, and powerful Srimaras and horned rhinoceroses and other animals. Binding them by their necks and crushing them to an inch of their lives, he used to let them go. 5-6 For those feats of his, the regenerate ascetics (with whom he lived) came to call him Sarvadamana (the controller of all). His mother at last forbade him to torture animals in that way.7 Endued with great prowess he performed a hundred Horse-sacrifices on the banks of Yamuna, three hundred such sacrifices on the banks of Saraswati, and four hundred on the banks of Ganga. Having performed these sacrifices he once more performed a thousand Horse-sacrifices and a hundred Rājasuyas, great sacrifices, in which his gifts also to the Brāhmanas were very profuse.9 Other sacrifices, again, such as the Agnishtoma, the Atirātra, the Ukthya and the Viçwajit, he performed, together with thousands and thousands of Vājapeyas, and completed without any impediment.10 Cakuntalā, having performed all these, gratified the Brāhmanas with presents of wealth. Possessed of great fame, Bharata then gave ten thousand billions of coins, made of the most pure gold, unto Kanwa (who had brought up his mother Cakuntala as his own daughter). The gods with Indra at their head, accompanied by the Brahmanas, coming to his sacrifice, set up his sacrificial stake made entirely of gold and measuring in width a hundred Vyāmas.* And the imperial Bharata of noble soul, that victor over all foes, that monarch never conquered by any enemy, gave away unto the Brahmanas beautiful horses and elephants and cars, decked with gold, and beautiful gems of all kinds, and camels and goats and sheep, and slaves-male and female—and wealth, and grain, and milch cows with claves, and villages and houses and fields, and diverse kinds of robes, numbering by millions and millions. When he died, O Srinjaya, who was superior to thee in respect of the four cardinal virtues11-16 and who, superior to thee, was, therefore, much more superior to thy son, thou shouldst not, saying—Oh Cwaitya, Oh Cwaitya,—grieve for the latter who performed no sacrifice and made no sacrificial present !]- "17

SECTION LXIX.

"'Nārada said,—[Vena's son, king Prithu, O Srinjaya, we hear, fell a pray to death. In the Rājasuya sacrifice he performed, the great Rishis installed him as Emperor (of the world). He vanquished all, and through his achievements, became known (all over the world). For this he came to be called Prithu (the celebrated). And because he protected all people from wounds and injuries, for this he became a true Kshatriya.† Beholding Vena's son Prithu, all his subjects said,—We are highly pleased with him!—In consequence of this affection that he enjoyed of his subjects he came to be called a Rājā.‡ During the time of Prithu, the Earth, without being cultivated, yielded crops in sufficiency. All the kine, again, yielded milk whenever they were touched. Every lotus was full of honev.* Kuça blades were all of gold, agreeable to the touch, and otherwise delightful. And the subjects of Prithu made cloths of those blades, and the beds also on which they lay.5 All the fruits were soft and sweet and like unto Amrita (in taste). And these constituted the food of his subjects none amongst whom had ever to starve. And all men in Prithu's time were hale. And all their wishes were crowned with fruition. They had nothing to fear. On trees or in caves, they dwelt as they liked. His dominions were not distributed into provinces and towns. The people lived happily and in joy as each desired.8 king Prithu went to the sea, the waves became solid. very mountains used to yield him openings that he might pass through them. The standard of his car never broke (obstructed by anything). Once on a time, the tall trees of forest, the mountains, the gods, the Asuras, men, the snakes, the seven Rishis, the Apsaras,10 and the Pitris, all came to Prithu seated at his ease, and addressing him, said,—Thou art our Emperor! Thou art king! Thou art our protector and father! Thou art our Lord! 11 Therefore, O great king, give us boons after our own hearts, through which we may, for ever, obtain gratification and joy!12 Unto them Prithu the son of Vena said,—So be it!—Then taking up his Ajagava bow* and some terrible arrows the like of which existed not, he reflected He then addressed the Earth, saying, 18—Come for a moment. quickly, O Earth! Yield to these the milk they desire! that, blessed be thou, I will give them the food they solicit!14-Thus addressed by him, the Earth said,—It behoveth thee, O hero, to regard me as thy daughter !- Prithu answered,-So be it !- And then that great ascetic having his passions under control, made all arrangements (for milking the Earth).15 Then the entire assemblage of creatures began to milk the Earth. And first of all the tall trees of the forest rose for milking her.16 The Earth then, full of affection, stood there, desiring a calf, a milker, and vessels (wherein to hold the milk). Then the blossoming Çāla became the calf, the banian became the milker,17 torn buds became the milk, and the auspicious fig tree became the vessel. The Eastern hill, whereon the Sun the mountains milked her). rises, became the calf; the prince of mountains, viz., Meru, became the milker;18 the diverse gems and deciduous herbs became the milk; and the stones became the vessels (for holding that milk). Next one of the gods became the milker, and all things capable of bestowing energy and strength became the coveted milk.19 The Asuras then milked the Earth, having wine for their milk, and using an unbaked pot for their vessel. Dwimurddhan became the milker, and Virochana Then human beings milked the Earth for cultivation The Self-create Manu became their calf, and Prithu himself the milker. 21 Next the Snakes milked the Earth, getting poison as the milk, and using a vessel made of a gourd. Dhritarashtra became the milker, and Takshaka the calf.23 The seven Rishis, capable of producing everything by their fiat,* then milked the Earth, getting the Vedas as their milk. Vrihaspati became the milker, the Chhandas were the vessel, and the excellent Soma, the calf. 33 The Yakshas, milking the Earth, got the power of disappearance at will as the milk. Vaicravana (Kuvera) became their milkin an unbaked pot. er, and Vrishadhdhaja their calf.24 The Gandharvas and the Apsaras milked all fragrant perfumes in a vessel made of a Chitraratha became their calf, and the puissant Vicwaruchi their milker. 25 The Pitris milked the Earth, getting Swahā as their milk in a vessel of silver. Yama the son of Vivaswat became their calf, and (the Destroyer Antaka) their milker.26 Even thus was the Earth milked by that assemblage of creatures who all got for milk what they each desired. The very calves and vessels employed by them are existing to this day and may always be seen.27 The powerful Prithu the son of Vena, performing various sacrifices, gratified all creatures in respect of all their desires by gifts of articles agreeable to their hearts.28 And he caused golden images to be made of ^{*} Aklishtakarman, literally, one who is never fatigued with work; hence, one capable of obtaining the results of action by a mere fiat of the will. It may also mean, of unspotted acts.—T.

^{*} A vyāma is the space between the two arms extended at their furthest.—T.

⁺ Literally, a Kshatriya is one that rescues another from wounds and injuries.—T.

[‡] A rājā is one who enjoys the affections of his people, and with whom they are delighted.—T.

^{*} The bow of Civa, otherwise called Pinaka .- T.

every article on Earth, and bestowed them all on the Brahmanas at his great Horse-sacrifice. The king caused six and sixty thousand elephants to be made of gold, and all those he gave away unto the Brahmanas. 40 And this whole Earth also the king caused to be decked with jewels and gems and gold. and gave her away unto the Brahmanas. 11 When he died, O Srinjaya, who was superior to thee as regards the four cardinal virtues and who, superior to thee, was, therefore, much more superior to thy son, thou shouldst not, saying—Oh Cwaitya, Oh Cwaity i,—grieve for the latter who performed no sacrifice and made no sacrificial present !]-""sa

SECTION LXX.

"'-Nārada said,-[Even the great ascetic Rāma, that hero worshipped by all heroes, that son of Jamadagni, of great fame, will die, without being contented (with the period of his life)! Rooting out all evils from the earth, he caused the primeval Having obtained unrivalled prosperity, no Yuga to set in. fault could be seen in him.+2 His father having been slain and his calf having been stolen by the Kshatriyas, he, without any boast, slew Karttavirya who had never been vanquished before by foes. With his bow he slew four and sixty times ten thousand Kshatriyas already within the jaws of death. In that slaughter were included fourteen thousand Brahmana-hating Kshatriyas of the Dantakura country, all of whom he slew. Of the Haihayas, he slew a thousand with his short club, a thousand with his sword, and a thousand by hanging. to Heroic warriors, with their cars, steeds, and elephants, lay dead on the field, slain by the wise son of Jamadagni, enraged at the slaughter of his father. And Rama, on that occasion, slew ten thousand Kshatriyas with his axe. He could not quietly ^{*} Parthivus, i. e., relaing to the Earth .- T.

[†] The first line of this verse, I think, has been correctly explained by Nilakantha. The paraphrase is ya imam bhumim sukham kurvan adyam (i. e., adyam yugam) anuparyeti sma.-T.

I The Bombay text adds some verses here which do not occur in the Bengal texts.-T.

bear the furious speeches uttered by those (foes of his).3 when many foremost of Brahmanas uttered exclamations, mentioning the name of Rama of Bhrigu's race,* then the valiant son of Jamadagni, proceeding against the Kāshmiras, the Daradas, the Kuntis, the Kshudrakas, the Malavas, the Angas, the Vangas, the Kalingas, the Videhas, the Tamraliptakas, the Rakshovāhas, the Vitahotras, the Trigartas, the Mārtikāvatas, counting by thousands, slew them all by means of his whetted shafts. 9-11 Proceeding from province to province, he thus slew thousands of crores of Kshatriyas. Creating a deluge of blood and filling many lakes also with blood as red as Indrajopakas or the wild fruit called Vandujiva, and bringing all the eighteen islands (of which the Earth is composed) under his subjection, that son of Bhrigu's race12-18 performed a hundred sacrifices of great merit, all of which he completed and in all of which the presents he made unto the Brahmanas were profuse. The sacrificial altar, eighteen nalas high, made entirely of gold, and constructed according to the ordinance,14 full of diverse kinds of jewels and gems and decked with hundreds of standards. and this Earth abounding with domestic and wild animals,15 were accepted by Kacyapa as the sacrificial present made unto him by Rāma the son of Jamadagni. And Rāma also gave him many thousands of prodigious elephants all adorned with gold.16 Indeed, freeing the Earth from all robbers, and making her teem with honest and graceful inhabitants, Rama gave her away to Kacyapa at his great Horse-sacrifice.17 Having divested the Earth of Kshatriyas for one and twenty times, and having performed hundreds of sacrifices, the puissant hero gave away the Earth to the Brahmanas.18 And it was Māricha (Kacyapa) who accepted from him the Earth with her seven islands. Then Kaçyapa said unto Rāma,—Go out of the Earth, at my command !19—At the word of Kacyapa, that fornemost of warriors, desirous of obeying the Brāhmana's behest, caused by his arrows the very ocean to stand aside, so and reparing to that best of mountains called Mahendra, continued to live there. Even that enhancer of the fame of the Bhrigus, possessed of such numberless virtues, 21 that famous son of Jamadagni, of great splendour, will die! Superior to thee as regards the four cardinal virtues, and much more superior to thy son, (even he will Do not, therefore, grieve for thy son who performed no sacrifice and made no sacrificial present. All these, superior to thee as regards the four cardinal virtues and as regards also a hundred other merits, all these foremost of men, have died, O Srinjaya, and they that are like them will also die!]—'"28

K. P. Sinha makes a ludicrous blunder in reading this line. - T.

SECTION LXXI.

"'Vyāsa said,—Hearing these sacred histories of sixteen kings, capable of enhancing the period of life (of the listener), king Srinjaya remained silent without saying anything." The illustrious Rishi Nārada then said unto him thus sitting silent,-[O thou of great splendour, hast thou heard these histories recited by me, and hast thou caught their meaning? Or, are all these lost, like a Crāddha performed by a person of the regenerate classes having a Cudra wife !]—Thus addressed, Srinjaya replied with joined hands, -[O thou that hast wealth of asceticism, having listened to these excellent and praiseworthy histories of ancient royal sages all of whom performed great sacrifices with profuse presents unto the Brahmanas,* my grief hath all been dispelled by wonder, like the darkness that is dispelled by the rays of the Sun! I have now been cleansed of my sins, and I do not feel any pain now. what shall I do now !]5.

"'-Nārada said,-[By good luck it is that thy grief hath been dispelled! Solicit thou the boon that thou desirest! Thou wilt obtain all that thou mayst ask! We never say what is false !.]"6

" '-Srinjaya said,-[I am happy with even this, viz., that thou, O holy one, art gratified with me! He with whom thou, O holy one, art gratified, hath nothing unobtainable here !]

"'-Nārada said,-[I will once more give thee thy son who was fruitlessly slain by the robbers, taking him out of terrible hell like an animal slaughtered in a sacrifice !]-

"'Vyāsa said,—Then the son of Srinjaya, of wonderful splendour, appeared, that child resembling the son of Kuvera himself, bestowed by the gratified Rishi (on the bereaved father).9 And King Srinjaya, once more meeting with his son, became highly delighted. And he performed many meritorious sacrifices, giving away profuse sacrificial presents upon completion.10 Srinjaya's son had not fulfilled the purposes He had performed no sacrifice and had no children. Destitute of bravery, he had perished miserably and It was for this reason that he could be brought not in battle. back into life.*11 As regards Abhimanyu, he was brave and He hath fulfilled the purposes of life, for the brave son of Subhadra, having blasted his foes by thousands, hath left the world, falling in the field of battle !12 Those inexhaustible regions that are attainable by Brahmacharya, by knowledge, by acquaintance with the scriptures, by foremost of sacrifices, even those have been obtained by thy son.18 Men of knowledge always desire heaven by their righteous deeds. that are living in heaven never prefer this world to heaven.14 Therefore, it is not easy for any desirable thing that might have been unattained by him to bring back into the world Arjuna's son slain in battle and now residing in heaven.18 Thy son has attained to that eternal goal which is attained by yogins with eyes shut in contemplation, or by performers of great sacrifices, or people possessed of great ascetic merit.16 After death, attaining a new body, that hero is shining like a king in his own immortal rays. Indeed, Abhimanyu has once more got his own body of lunar essence that is desirable by all regenerate persons. He deserveth not thy grief.+17 Knowing this, be quiet, and Let fortitude be thine. O sinless one, it is the slav thy foes. living that stand in need of our grief, and not they that have attained to heaven.18 His sins increase, O king, for whom the living grieve. Therefore, he that is wise, abandoning grief, should strive for (the) benefit (of the dead).19 The living man [·] Sannāhikas, i. e., clad in mail.-T.

[†] The Bengal reading Dwijaidhitam is certainly better than the Bombay reading Dwijochitam although Nilakantha explains uchi am as abhimatam,-T.

should think of the joy, the glory, and the happiness (of the Knowing this, the wise never indulge in grief, for grief is grief.20 Know this to be true! Rise up! Strive (to achieve Do not grieve! Thou hast heard of the origin thy purpose)! of Death, and her unexampled penances, 21 as also the impartiality of her behaviour towards all creatures. Thou hast heard that prosperity is unstable. Thou hast heard how the dead son of Srinjaya was revived.22 O learned king, do not grieve! Peace be to thee, I go !- Having said this, the holy Vyasa disappeared then and there. 33 Upon the departure of that master of speech, that foremost of intelligent persons, viz., the holy Vyāsa, whose color was like that of the clouded sky, Yudhishthira, having derived consolation⁸⁴ in consequence of what he had heard about the sacrificial merit and prosperity of those great monarchs of olden times possessed of energy equal to that of the great Indra himself and all of whom had acquired wealth by righteous means,36 mentally applauded those illustrious persons and became freed from grief. Once more, however, with a melancholy heart he asked himself, saying,—'What shall we say unto Dhananjaya?" " 26

SECTION LXXII.

(Pratijnā Parva).

"Sanjaya said,-'When that terrible day, so fraught with the slaughter of creatures, departed, and when the sun set, the beautiful twilight of the evening spread itself.1 The troops, O bull of Bharata's race, of both parties, had retired to their Then the ape-bannered Jishnu, having slain large numbers of Samsaptakas by means of his celestial weapons, proceeded towards his tent, mounted on that victorious car of his. And as he was proceeding, he asked Govinda, with voice choked in tears,-Why is my heart afrighted, O Keçava, and why doth my speech falter? Evil omens encounter me, and my limbs are weak !2-1 Thoughts of disaster possess my mind without leaving it. On earth, in all sides, various omens strike me with Of many kinds are those omens and indications, and seen everywhere, foreboding dire calamity! Is it all right with my venerable superior, viz., the king, with all his friends?⁵⁻⁶—

"'Vāsudeva said,—It is evident that everything is right with thy brother and his friends. Do not grieve, some trifling evil in another direction will happen."—'

"Sanjay continued,—Then those two heroes, (viz., Krishna and Arjuna), having adored the twilight,* mounted on their car and proceeded, talking of the incidents of that day's battle so destructive of heroes.8 Having achieved feats exceedingly difficult of accomplishment, Vasudeva and Arjuna at last reached Then that slayer of hostile heroes, the (Pandava) encampment. viz., Vibhatsu, beholding the camp joyless and melancholy and everything to be in confusion, addressed Krishna with an agonised heart, and said,9-10-O Janarddana, no auspicious trumpet blows today, its blasts mingled with the beat of drums and the loud blare of conchs!" The sweet Vinī also is nowhere played upon in accompaniment with slapping of palms.+ picious and delightful songs fraught with praise are nowhere recited or sung by our bards amongst the troops! The warriors also, beholding me, all recede, hanging down their heads!12-13 They do not tell me, as before, of the feats achieved by them! O Mādhava, is it all right with my brothers today?14 our own men plunged in grief, I know no peace! Is it all right, O giver of honors, with the ruler of the Panchalas, or Virāta,15 or all our warriors, O thou of unfading glory? Alas, Subhadra's son, ever cheerful, doth not today, with his brothers, come out with smiles to receive me returning from battle !16-

"Sanjaya said,—'Thus conversing, those two, (viz., Krishna and Arjuna), entered their own camp. And they saw that the Pāndavas, all cheerless, were sitting, plunged into great grief. Beholding his brothers and sons, the ape-bannered Arjuna became very cheerless. Not seeing the son of Subhadrā there, Arjuna said, 18—Pale is the color I behold of the faces of you all!

^{*} Twilight is herself the goddess who is supposed to be adored by certain prayers said on the occasion.—T.

[†] These slaps mark the cadences .- T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:39 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

I do not, again, see Abhimanyu! Nor doth he come to congratulate me!19 I heard that Drona had today formed the circular array. None amongst you, save the boy Abhimanyu, could break that array.20 I, however, did not teach him how to come out of that array, after having pierced it. Did you cause the boy to enter that array?" Hath that slayer of hostile heroes, viz., the son of Subhadra, that mighty bowman, having pierced that array, through numberless warriors of the enemy in battle, fallen at last in the fight? Oh, tell me how that hero, of mighty arms and red eyes, born (in our line) like a lion on the mountain breast, and equal unto the younger brother of Indra himself, hath fallen on the field of battle !22-28 What warrior, deprived of his senses by Death, ventured to slay that dear son of Subhadra, that favourite of Draupadi and Keçava, that child ever loved by Kunti?24 Equal unto the high-souled Vrishni hero Keçava himself in prowess and learning and dignity, how hath he been slain on the field of battle? The favourite son of that daughter of the Vrishni race, always cherished by me, alas, if I do not see him I will repair to the abode of Yama !26 locks ending in soft curls, of tender years, with eyes like those of a young gazelle, with tread like that of an infuriate elephant, tall like a Cila offshoot,27 of sweet speech accompanied with smiles, quiet, ever obedient to the behests of his superiors, acting like one of mature years though tender in age, of agreeable speech, reft of vanity,28 of great courage and great energy. of large eyes resembling lotus petals, kind to those devoted to him, self-restrained, never following anything mean,29 grateful. possessed of knowledge, accomplished in weapons, unretreating from battle, always delighting in fight, and enhancing the fears of foes, so engaged in the welfare of kinsmen, desirous of victory unto his sires, never striking first, perfectly fearless in battle, 31 alas, if I do not behold that son, I will repair to the abode of Yama! In the tale of car-warriors always reckoned as a Mahāratha, 32 superior to me one and a half times, of tender years, of mighty arms, over dear to Praddyumna and Keçava and myself, 38 alas, if I do not behold that son I will repair to the abode of Yama! Of beautiful nose, of beautiful f rehead, of fair eyes and eyebrows and lips,84 if I do not be-

https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google Generated on 2022-02-03 12:39 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized hold that face what peace can my heart have? Melodious as the voice of the male Kokila, delightful, and sweet as the warblings of the Vinā,35 without listening to his voice what peace can my heart have? His beauty was unrivalled, rare even among the celestials !26 Without casting my eyes on that form, what peace can my heart have? Accomplished in saluting (his superiors) with reverence, and always obedient to the behests of his sires, 37 alas, if I do not behold him what peace can my heart have? Brave in battle, accustomed to every luxury, deserving of the softest bed, sa alas, he sleepeth today on the bare Earth as if there is none to take care of him although he is the foremost of those that have protectors to look He on whom, while on his bed, the foremost of beautiful women used to attend,89 alas, he, mangled with shafts, will have inauspicious jackalls, prowling over the field, attend upon him today! He who was formerly awaked from his slumbers by singers and bards and panegyrists,40 alas, he will today be surely awaked by discordant beasts of prey! That beautiful face of his eminently deserved to be shaded by the Alas, the dust of the battle-field will surely begrim O child, unfortunate that I am, death forcibly takes it today ! thee away from me, who was never satiated with looking at Without doubt, that abode of Yama, which is always the goal of persons of righteous deeds,41-48 that delightful mansion, illumined today by thy own splendour, is rendered exceedingly beautiful by thee! Without doubt, Yama and Varuna and Catakratu and Kuvera, obtaining thee as a favourite guest, are making much of thy heroic self!-Thus indulging in diverse lamentations like a merchant whose vessel has been drowned,44-45 Arjuna, afflicted with great grief, asked Yudishthira, saying,-O thou of Kuru's race, hath he ascended to heaven, having caused a great slaughter among the enemy and contended with foremost warriors in the face of battle? Without doubt, while contending single-handed with foremost of warriors countless in number and fighting with vigor and resolution, his heart turned towards me from desire of help! While afflicted by Karna and Drona and Kripa and others with sharp shafts of diverse kinds and bright points, my son of little strength, must have repeatedly thought-My father will in this press be my rescuer! 46-49-I think, while indulging in such lamentations he was felled on the ground by cruel war-Or, perhaps, when he was begotten by me, when he was the nephew of Mādhava,50 when he was born in Subhadrā, he could not have uttered such exclamations! Without doubt, my heart, hard as it is, is made of the essence of the thunder, 52 since it breaketh not even though I do not behold that mightyarmed hero of red eyes! How could those mighty bowmen of cruel hearts shoot their deep-piercing shafts upon that child of tender years who, again, was my son and the nephew of Vasudeva? That noble-hearted youth who, coming forward everyday, used to congratulate me, 52-53 alas, why doth he not present himself today to me when I come back having slain Without doubt, overthrown, he lieth today on the bare earth, bathed in blood!54 Beautifying the Earth with his body, he lieth like the Sun fallen (from the firmament)! grieve for Subhadra, who, hearing of the death in battle her unretreating son, will, afflicted with sorrow, cast away her What will Subhadra, missing Abhimanyu, say unto What also will Draupadi say unto me? with grief as they are, what also shall I say unto them? out doubt, my heart is made of the essence of the thunder, since it breaketh not57 into a thousand fragments at the sight of my weeping daughter-in-law pierced with grief! The leoning shouts of the Dhartarashtras swelling with pride did, indeed, enter my ears !58 Krishna also had heard Yuyutsu censuring the heroes (of the Dhartarashtra army in these words):-Ye mighty car-warriors, having been unable to vanquish Vibhatsu, ard having slain only a child, 50 why do ye rejoice! righteous on s, ye will soon feel the might of the Pandavas! Why, having done what is disagreeable to those two, viz, Keçava and Arjuna, in battle,60 why do you in joy roar like lions when truly the hour for your sorrow is come? The fruits of this sinful deed of yours will soon overtake you!61 Heinous is the crime perpetrated by you! How long will it not bear its fruits? -Rebuking them in these words, the high-souled son of Dhritarāsh ra by his Vaiçya wife, 2 went away, casting off his weapons, afflicted with rage and grief! O Krishna, why did you not tell me all this during the battle? I would then have consumed all those car-warriors of cruel hearts!⁶⁸—'

Generated on 2022-03-03-12:39 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

"Sanjaya continued,—'Then Vasudeva, comforting Partha who was afflicted with grief on account of his son, who was exceedingly thoughtful, whose eyes where bathed in tears, and who was, in fact, overwhelmed with this sorrow caused by the slaughter of his child,64 said unto him,—Do not yield so to grief! This is the way of all brave, unreturning heroes, 65 especially of Kshatriyas, whose profession is battle! O foremost of intelligent men, even this is the goal ordained by the authors of our scriptures for unretreating heroes engaged in battle! Death is certain for heroes that do not retreat!66-67 There is no doubt that Abhimanyu hath ascended to those regions that are reserved for persons of righteous acts! O bull of Bharata's race, even this is coveted by all that are brave,68 viz., that they may die in battle, facing their foes! As regards Abhimanyu, he, having slain in battle many heroic and mighty princes, 69 hath met with that death in the face of battle which is coveted by heroes! Do not grieve, O tiger among men! The legislators of old have declared this to be the eternal merit of the Kshatriyas, viz., their destruction in battle! O best of the Bharatas. these brothers of thine are all exceedingly cheerless, 70-71 as also these kings, and these thy friends, seeing thee plunged into grief! O giver of honors, comfort these in consoling words!72 That which should be known is known to thee! It behovto grieve !- Thus comforted by Krishna of not wonderful deeds, Partha78 then said these words unto all his brothers, in a voice choked with sorrow:—O lord of Earth, I desire to hear how the mighty-armed Abhimanyu, how that hero of large eyes resembling lotus petals, fought! Ye will see that I will exterminate the foe with his elephants and cars and steeds,74-75 I will exterminate in battle those slayers of my son with all their followers and kinsmen! Ye all are accomplished Ye all were armed with weapons. 76 How then could Subhadra's son be slain even if it were the wielder of the thunder-bolt himself with whom he fought? Alas, if I had known that the Pandavas and the Panchalas would be unable to protect http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google Generated on 2022-02-03 12:39 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized / my son in battle, I myself would then have protected him! were then on your cars. Ye were shooting your shafts. how then could Abhimanyu be slain by the foe causing a great carnage in your ranks? Alas, ye have no manliness, nor have ye any prowess,77-79 since in the very sight of you all was Abhimanyu slain! Or, I should chide my own self, since knowing that ye all are weak, cowardly, and irressolute, I went away! Alas, are your coats of mail and weapons of all kinds only ornaments for decking your persons, and were words given you only for speaking in assemblies, that ye failed to protect my son (even though ye were clad in mail, armed head to foot, and even though ye had assured me in words of your competence)?-Having said these words, Partha sat down, holding the bow and his excellent sword.30-32 Indeed, none could, at that time, even look at Vibhatsu who then resembled the Destroyer himself in wrath, repeatedly drawing long breaths.88 None of his friends or kinsmen could venture to look at or speak unto Arjuna as he sat there exceedingly afflicted with grief on account of his son and with face bathed in tears.84 None, indeed, could address him, save Vāsudeva or Yudhishthira. These two, under all circumstances, were acceptable to Arjuna.85 they were highly reverenced and dearly loved, therefore, could they alone address him at such times. Then king Yudhishthira, addressing Partha of eyes like lotus petals, who was then filled with rage and exceedingly afflicted with grief on account of the death of his son, said these words." "36

SECTION LXXIII.

"'Yudhishthira said,—O mighty-armed one, after thou hadst gone towards the army of the Samsaptakas, the preceptor Drona made fierce endeavours for seizing me. We succeeded, however, in resisting Drona at the head of his array at all points, having, in that battle, disposed our vigorously-contending cardivisions in counter-array.2 Held in check by a large number of warriors, and myself also having been well protected, Drona began to smite us with great activity, afflicting us with his

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:39 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access_use#pd-google

whetted shafts.3 Thus afflicted by him, we could not then even gaze at his army, far less pierce it in battle.4 All of us then, addressing thy son by Subhadra, who was equal to thyself, O lord, in prowess, said unto him,-[O son, pierce this array of Drona] !5-That valorous hero, thus urged by us, then sought, like a good horse, to take that burden on himself however unbearable it might have been for him. Endued as he was with thy energy, aided by that knowledge of weapons which he derived from thee, that child then penetrated unto that array like Garuda penetrating into the ocean. As regards ourselves, we followed that hero, that son of Subhadra, desirous in, in that battle, of penetrating (into the Dhartarashtra army) by the same path by which Abhimanyu had entered it. Then, O sire, the wretched king of the Sindhus, viz., Jayadratha, in consequence of the boon granted to him by Rudra, checked all of us! Then Drona and Kripa and Karna and Drona's son, and the king of the Koçalas, and Kritavarman, these six car-warriors, surrounded the son of Subhadra.10 Having surrounded that child, all those great car-warriors,—too many for him although he was contending to the utmost of his power,—deprived him of his After he had been deprived of his car, Dusçasana's son, though he himself had a hair-breadth escape, succeeded, as chance would have it, in making Abhimanyu meet with his end. As regards Abhimanyu, he, having slain many thousands of men and steeds and elephants, and eight thousand cars, and once more nine hundred elephants,18 two thousand princes, and a large number of heroic warriors unknown to fame, and despatching in that battle king Vrihadvala also to heaven,14 at last, through ill luck, met with his own death. Thus hath occurred this fact that so enhances our grief !15 That tiger among men hath even thus ascended to heaven !- Hearing these words uttered by king Yudhishthira, Arjuna,16 saying-Oh son !- and breathing a deep sigh, fell down on the earth in great pain. all the warriors of the Pandavas, surrounding Dhananjaya with cheerless faces,17 began, filled with grief, to look at one another with winkless eyes. Recovering consciousness then, Vāsava's son became furious with rage.18 He seemed to be in a feverish tremor, and sighed frequently. Squeezing his hands, drawing deep breaths, with eyes bathed in tears, and casting his glances like a madman, he said these words.19

"'Arjuna said,-Truly do I swear that tomorrow I will slay If from fear of death he doth not forsake the Javadratha! Dhartarashtras,20 or implore our protection, or the protection of Krishna that foremost of men, or of thine, O king, I shall as-Forgetting his friendship for suredly slay him tomorrow !21 me, engaged in doing what is agreeable to Dhritarashtra's son, that wretch is the cause of the child's slaughter! I will slay him !22 Whoever they may be that will encounter me in battle tomorrow for protecting him, be it Drona or Kripa, O king, I will cover them all with my arrows!28 among men, if I do not achieve even this in (tomorrow's) battle, let me not attain the regions reserved for the righteous, ye foremost of heroes !24 Those regions that are for them that slay their mothers or for them that slay their fathers, or them that violate their preceptors' beds, or them that are vile and wicked,25 or them that cherish envy against the righteous, or them that speak ill of others, or them that appropriate the wealth confidingly deposited with them by others, or them that are betrayers of trusts,26 or them that speak ill of wives enjoyed by them before, or them that have slain Brahmanas, or them that have killed kine,27 or them that eat sugared milk and rice, or food prepared of barley, or potherbs, or dishes prepared of milk, sessamum, and rice, or thin cakes of powdered barley fried in clarified butter, or other kinds of cakes, or meat, without having dedicated the same to the gods,28—even those regions shall speedily be mine if I do not slay Jayadratha! Those regions to which they go that offer insults to Brahmanas devoted to the study of the Vedas or otherwise worthy of respect or to those that are venerable in years or to those that are righteous or to those that are their preceptors, (those regions shall speedily be mine if I do not slay Jayadratha!) That end which becomes theirs who touch Brahmanas or fire with the feet, that end which becomes theirs who throw phlegm and excrete and eject urine into the water, even that miserable end shall be mine if I do not slay Jayadratha!25-31 That end which is his who bathes (in water) in a state of nudity, or his who does not hospitably entertain a guest, that end which is theirs who receive bribes, speak falsehoods, and deceive and cheat others, 82 that end which is theirs who offend against their own souls, or who falsely utter praises (of others), or of those low wretches who eat sweatmeats in the sight of servants and sons and wives and dependents without sharing the same with these, that awful end shall be mine if I do not slay Jayadratha !58-84 That end which overtakes the wretch of ruthless soul who without supporting a righteous and obedient protege casts him off, or him who, without giving unto a deserving neighbour the offerings in Crāddhas, giveth them away unto those that deserve them not, that end which overtakes them who marry girls called Vrishalis, that end which is his who drinks wine, or his who insults those that are worthy of respect, or his who is ungrateful, or his who speaketh ill of his brothers, that end shall soon be mine if I do not slay Jayadratha! 55-37 The end of all those sinful persons whom I have not mentioned, as also of those whom I have mentioned, shall soon be attained by me, so if, after this night passes away, I do not slay Jayadratha tomorrow!-

"—Listen now to another oath of mine! If tomorrow's Sun sets without my slaying that wretch, then even here I shall enter the blazing fire! Ye Asuras and gods and men, ye birds and snakes, ye Pitris and all wanderers of the night, ye regenerate Rishis and celestial Rishis, ye mobile and immobile creatures, ye all that I have not mentioned, ye will not succeed in protecting my foe from me! If he enters the abode of the nether region, or ascends the firmament, or repairs to the celestials, or the realms of the Daityas, I shall still, with a hundred arrows, assuredly cut off, on the expiration of this night, the head of Abhimanyu's foe! 2—

"Sanjaya continued,—'Having uttered these words, Arjuna begaan to stretch Gāndiva with both his arms. Transcending Arjuna's voice the sound of that bow rose and touched the very heavens. After Arjuna had taken that oath, Janārddana, filled with wrath, blew his conch Pānchajanya. And Phālguna blew Devadatta. The great conch Pānchajanya, well-filled with the wind from Krishna's mouth, produced a loud blare. And that blare made the regents of the cardinal and the subsidiary points, the nether regions, and the whole universe, to tremble like to what happens at the end of the Indeed, after the high-souled Arjuna had taken that oath, the sound of thousands of musical instruments and loud leonine roars arose from the Pandava camp." "46

SECTION LXXIV.

"Sanjaya said,—'When the spics (of Duryodhana), having heard that loud uproar made by the Pandavas desirous of victory, informed (their masters of the cause), Jayadratha, overwhelmed with sorrow, and with heart stupified by grief, and like one sinking in a fathomless ocean of distress, slowly rose up, and having reflected for a long while, proceeded to the assembly of Reflecting for a while in the presence of those gods among men,1-8 Jayadratha, in fear of Abhimanyu's father and covered with shame, said these words:-He who in Pandu's soil was begetten by Indra under the influence of desire,4 that wicked wretch is thinking of despatching me to the abode of Blessed be ye, I shall, therefore, go back to my home from desire of life !5 Or, ye bulls among Kshatriyas, protect me by the force of your weapons! Partha seeks to slay me. Ye heroes, make me fearless! Drona and Duryodhana and Kripa, and Karna, and the ruler of the Madras, and Valhika, and Dusçasana and others, are capable of protecting a person who is afflicted by Yama himself! When, however, I am threatened by Phalguna alone, will not all these lords of Earth, will not all of you, joined together, be able to protect me? Having heard the shouts of joy of the Pandavas, great hath been my fear. My limbs, ye lords of Earth, have become powerless like those of a person on the point of death! out doubt, the wielder of Gandiva hath vowed my death! is for this that the Pandavas are shouting in joy at a time when they should weep!10 Let alone the rulers of men, the very gods and Gandharvas, the Asurās, the Uragas, and the Rākshasas, cannot venture to baffle a vow of Arjuna!11 fore, ye bulls among men, blessed be ye, give me permission (to leave the Kuru camp). I want to make myself scarce.

Pandavas will no longer be able to find me !12-While indulging in such lamentations, with heart agitated by fear, king Duryodhana, always looking upon the accomplishment of his own business to be preferable to everything else, said unto him these words:13-Do not fear, O tiger among men! O bull among men, who will seek to encounter thee in battle when thou wilt stay in the midst of these Kshatriya heroes!"* Myself, Vikartana's son Karna, Chitrasena, Vivingcati, Bhuricravas, Cala, Calya, the invincible Vrishasena,16 Purumitra, Jaya, Bhoja, Sudakshina the ruler of the Kāmvojas, Satyavrata, the mightyarmed Vikarna, Durmukha,16 Dusçāsana, Suvāhu, the ruler of the Kalingas with his weapons upraised, Vinda and Anuvinda of Avanti, Drona, Drona's son, and Cuvala's son (Cakuni),17 -these and numerous other kings will, with their forces, march, to battle, surrounding thee on all sides! Let the fever of thy heart, therefore, be dispelled!18 Thou art thyself one of the foremost of car-warriors! O thou of immeasurable splendour, thou thyself art a hero! Being what thou art, how canst thou then see any cause of fear, O king of the Sindhus!19 eleven Akshauhinis of troops I own will carefully fight for protecting thee! Therefore, do not fear, O king of the Sin-Let thy fears be dispelled 120—'

"Sanjaya continued,—'Thus comforted, O monarch, by thy son, the king of the Sindhus then, accompanied by Duryodhana, repaired that very night to Drona (the generalissimo of the Kuru army).²¹ Then, O king, having touched Drona's feet with reverence, and taken his seat with humility, he asked his preceptor these words:²²—In hitting the aim, in hitting it from a distance, in lightness of hand, and in the force of the stroke, O illustrious one, tell the difference between myself and Phālguna!²³ O preceptor, I wish to know accurately the difference as regards proficiency (in the science of arms) between myself and Arjuna! Say it unto me truly!—²⁴

"Drona said,—Of tutorial instruction, both of you, i, e., thyself and Arjuna, have had the same measure, O son! In consequence, however, of yoga and the hard life led by Arjuna, he is superior to thee! Thou shouldst not, however, for any reason, cherish fear of Partha! Without doubt, I will

O son, protect thee from this fear!" The very gods cannot prevail over him who is protected by my arms! I will form an array which Partha will not succeed in piercing!*27 Therefore, contend thou in battle, do not fear, observing the duties of thy own order! O mighty car-warrior, tread in the track of thy sires and grandsires !28 Having duly studied the Vedas, thou hast poured libations, according to the ordinance, on the fire! Thou hast also performed many sacrifices. cannot, therefore, he an object of terror to thee !29 (For if thou diest), attaining then to that great good fortune which is unattainable by vile men, thou wilt acquire all those excellent regions in heaven that are acquirable by the might of one's The Kauravas, the Pandavas, the Vrishnis, and other men, as also myself with my son, are all mortal and short-Think of this: 81 One after another, all of us, slain by Time which is all powerful, shall go to the other world, bearing with us only our respective deeds ! 22 Those regions that ascetics acquire by undergoing severe penances, those regions are acquired by heroic Kshatriyas that are observant of the duties of their order. 83 - Even thus was the ruler of the Sindhus comforted by Bharadwāja's son. Banishing his fear of Partha, he set his heart on battle. 84 Then, O king, thy troops also felt great delight, and the loud sound of musical instruments was heard, mingled with leonine shouts." "ss

SECTION LXXV.

"Sanjaya said,—'After Pārtha had vowed the slaughter of the ruler of the Sindhus, the mighty-armed Vāsudeva addressed Dhananjaya and said,—With the consent of thy brothers (alone, but without consulting me), thou hast vowed, saying,—I will slay the ruler of the Sindhus!—This hath been an act of great rashness (on thy part)! Without consulting with me thou hast taken up a great weight (upon thy shoulders)! Alas, how shall we escape the ridicule of all men! I had sent some spies into the camp of Dhritarāshtra's son. Those spies, quick-

^{*} Literally, "in crossing."-T

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:39 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized

^{*} The Bengal reading Satyavratais in the first line of 9 is vicious. I adopt the Bombay reading Satyatas, qualifying tava. To suppose that Krishna paid such a compliment to the Kauravas as is implied by the Bengal reading is an absurdity.—T.

permission then, O king, so that I may return home!16-Thus addressed (by Jayadratha), Suyodhana became cheerless and sat, hanging down his head. Ascertaining that Jayadratha was in a great fright, Suyodhana began to reflect in silence.17 Beholding the Kuru king to be greatly afflicted, king Jayadratha the ruler of the Sindhus slowly said these words having a beneficial reference to himself:18—I do not behold here that bowman of superior energy who can baffle with his weapons the weapons of Arjuna in great battle !19 Who, even if it be Catakrutu himself, will stay in front of Arjuna having Vasudeva for his ally, while wielding the bow Gandiva?20 It is heard that the lord Mahecwara himself of supreme energy had been encountered, before this, by Partha on foot, on the mountains of Himavat! 121 Urged by the chief of the celestials, he slew. on a single car, a thousand Danavas dwelling in Hiranyapura!22 That son of Kunti is now allied with Vasudeva of I think that he is competent to slay the great intelligence. three worlds including the very gods.28 I wish that you will either grant me permission (to leave the field for my home) or that the high-souled and heroic Drona with his son will protect me! Or, I would await thy pleasure !24-O Arjuna, (thus addressed by Jayadratha) king Suyodhana humbly beseeched the preceptor in this matter.* All remedial measures have been adopted. Cars and steeds have been arranged. 25 Karna and Bhuricravas, and Drona's son, and the invincible Vrishasena, and Kripa, and the ruler of the Madras,—these six will be in (Jayadratha's) van.26 Drona will form an array half of which will be a Cakata+ and half a lotus. In the middle of of the leaves of that lotus will be a needle-mouthed array. Jayadratha,27 that ruler of the Sindhus difficult of being conquered in battle, will take his stand, by it, protected by heroes! In (the use of) the bow, in weapons, in prowess, in strength, and also in lineage,28 those six car-warriors, O Partha, are, without doubt, exceedingly difficult of being borne.

^{*} I. e., added his voice to that of Jayadratha, requesting Drona to protect the latter.-T.

[†] A kind of car or vehicle.-T.

out first vanquishing those six car-warriors, access to Jayadratha will not be had.²⁹ Think, O Arjuna, of the prowess of each of those six. O tiger among men, when united together, they are not capable of being easily vanquished!⁸⁰ We should, therefore, once again, take counsel with well-wishing counsellors conversant with policy, for our benefit and for the success of our object!—'"²¹

SECTION LXXVI.

"'Arjuna said,—These six car-warriors of the Dhartarashtra army whom thou regardest to be so strong, their (united) energy, I think, is not equal to even half of mine! Thou shalt see, O slayer of Madhu, the weapons of all these cut off and baffled by me when I go against them for slaying Jayadratha 12 the very sight of Drona and all his men, I will fell the head of the ruler of the Sindhus, on the Earth, beholding which they will indulge in lamentations. If the Saddhyas, the Rudras, the Vasus with the Acwins, the Maruts with Indra (at their head), the Viewedevas with the other gods, the Pitris, the Gandharvas, Garuda, the Ocean, the mountains, the firmament, Heaven, Earth, the point of the compass (cardinal and subsidiary), and the regents of those points, all the creatures that are domestic and all that are wild, in fact, if all the mobile and the immobile beings together, become the protectors of the ruler of the Sindhus, yet, O slayer of Madhu, shalt thou behold Jayadratha slain by me tomorrow in battle with my arrows! O Krishna, I swear by Truth, I touch my weapons (and swear by them), that I shall, O Keçava, at the very outset, encounter that Drona, that mighty bowman, who hath become the protector of that sinful wretch Jayadratha! thinks that this game (of battle) resteth on Drona! Therefore, piercing through the very van commanded by Drona himself. I shall get at Jayadratha! Thou shalt tomorrow behold the mightiest of bowmen riven by me in battle by means of my shafts endued with fierce energy, like summits of a hill riven by the thunder !10 Blood shall flow (in torrents) from the breasts of fallen men and elephants and steeds split open by whetted shafts falling fast upon them !" The shafts shot from Gāndiva, fleet as the mind or the wind, will deprive thousands of men and elephants and steeds of life !12 Men will behold in tomorrow's battle those weapons which I have obtained from Yama and Kuvera and Varuna and Indra and Rudra!18 shalt behold in tomorrow's battle the weapons of all those who come to protect the ruler of the Sindhus, baffled by me with my Brahma weapon !14 Thou shalt in tomorrow's battle, O Keçava, behold the Earth strewn by me with the heads of kings cut off by the force of my shafts !15 (Tomorrow) I shall gratify all cannibals, rout the foe, galdden my friends, and crush the ruler of the Sindhus!16 A great offender, one who hath not acted like a relative, born in a sinful country, the ruler of the Sindhus, slain by me, will sadden his own.17 Thou shalt behold that ruler of the Sindhus, of sinful behaviour, and brought up in every luxury, pierced by me with my shafts !18 On the morrow, O Krishna, I shall do that which shall make Suyodhana think that there is no other bowman in the world who is equal to me !19 My Gandiva is a celestial bow! self am the warrior, O bull among men! Thou, O Hrishikeça, art the charioteer! What is there that I will not be able to vanquish ?20 Through thy grace, O holy one, what is there unattainable by me in battle? Knowing my prowess to be incapable of being resisted, why, O Hrishikeça, dost thou yet rebuke As Lakshmi is ever present in Soma, as water is ever present in the Ocean, know this, O Janarddana, that even so is my vow ever accomplished!22 Do not think lightly of my weapons! Do not think lightly of my tough bow! think lightly of the might of my arms! Do not think lightly of Dhananjaya !28 I shall go to battle in such a way that I shall truly win and not lose! When I have vowed it, know that Jayadratha hath already been slain in battle !24 Verily, in the Brāhmana is truth; verily, in the righteous is humility; verily, in sacrifice is prosperity; verily, in Nārāyana is victory!—'25

"Sanjaya continued,—'Having said these words unto Hrishikeça, having himself said so unto his own self, Arjuna the son of Vāsava, in a deep voice, once more addressed the lord "Keçava,²⁶ saying,—Thou shouldst, O Krishna, so act that my car my be well equipt as soon as this night dawns, since grave is the task that is at hand !—' "27

SECTION LXXVII.

"Sanjaya said,—'Both Vāsudeva and Dhananjaya, afflicted with sorrow and grief, and frequently sighing like two snakes, got no sleep that night.1 Understanding that both Nara and Nārāyana were in rage, the gods with Vāsava became very thinking,-What will come of it ? - Fierce winds, that were again dry and foreboded danger, began to blow. headless trunk and a mace appeared on the dise of the sun. And although it was cloudless, frequent thunders were heard, of loud report, mixed with flashes of lightning. The Earth, with her mountains and waters and forests, shook.4 The seas, those habitations of Makaras, swelled, O king, in agitation. rivers ran in directions opposite to their usual courses. nether and upper lips of car-warriors and steeds and men and elephants began to tremble. And as if for gladdening the cannibals, on that occasion foreboding a great accession of population to the domains of Yama, the animals (on the field) began to eject urine and excreta, and utter loud cries of woe. Beholding these fierce omens that made the hair to stand on end, and hearing also of the fierce vow of the mighty Arjuna, all thy warriors, O bull of Bharata's race, became exceedingly agitated.8 Then the mighty-armed son of Pakaçasana said unto Krishna,-Go, and comfort thy sister Subhadra with her daughter-in-law! And, O Mādhava, let also that daughter-inlaw, and her companions, be comforted by thee! Olad, comfort them with soothing words that are again fraught with truth! 10 Thus addressed, Vasudeva, with a cheerless heart, wending to Arjuna's abode, began to comfort his sorrowing sister afflicted with grief on account of the death of her son."

"Vāsudeva said,—O lady of Vrishni's race, do not grieve, with thy daughter-in-law, for thy son! O timid one, all creatures have but one end ordained by Time!¹² The end that thy son hath met with becometh a hero of proud lineage, especially one who is a Kshatriya! Do not, therefore, grieve!¹⁸ By good luck it is that that mighty car-warrior of great wisdom, of prowess equal to that of his father, hath, after the Kshatriya custom, met with an end that is coveted by heroes !14 Having vanquished numberless foes and despatched them unto Yama's presence, he hath himself repaired to those eternal regions, that grant the fruition of every wish, and that are for the righteous !15 Thy son hath attained that end which the righteous attain by penances, by Brahmacharya, by knowledge of the scriptures, and by wisdom !16 The mother of a hero, the wife of a hero, the daughter of a hero, and a kinswoman of heroes, O amiable one, grieve not thou for thy son who hath obtained the supreme The wretched ruler of the Sindhus, O beautiful lady. that murderer of a child, that perpetrator of a sinful act, shall, with his friends and kinsmen, obtain the fruit of this arrogance of his on the expiry of this night! Even if he enters the abode of Indra himself, he will not escape from the hands of Par-Tomorrow thou shalt hear that the head of the ruler of the Sindhus hath, in battle, been cut off from his trunk to roll on the outskirts of Samantapanchaka! Dispel thy sorrow, and do not grieve !20 Keeping the duties of a Kshatriya before him, thy brave son hath attained the end of the righteous, that end, viz., which we here expect to obtain as also others that bear arms as a profession. of broad chest, mighty-arms, unreturning, a crusher of car-warriors, thy son, O beautiful lady, hath gone to heaven! Drive away this fever (of thy heart) !22 Obedient to his sires and maternal relations, that heroic and mighty car warrior of great prowess hath fallen a prey to death, after having slain thousands of foes!28 Comfort thy daughterin-law, O queen! Do not grieve too much, O Kshatriya lady! Drive away thy grief, O daughter, as thou shalt hear such agreeable news on the morrow !24 That which Partha hath vowed must be accomplished. It cannot be otherwise! is sought to be done by thy husband can never remain unaccomplished !25 Even if all human beings and snakes and Piçāchas, and all the wanderers of the night and birds, and all the gods and the Asuras, aid the ruler of the Sindhus on the field of battle, he shall still, with them, cease to exist tomorrow !- "2"

27

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:39 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

SECTION LXXVIII.

"Sanjaya said,— 'Hearing these words of the high-souled Keçava, Subhadra, afflicted with grief on account of the death of her son, began to indulge in these piteous lamentations: -Ohson of my wretched self, O thou that wast in prowess to equal thy father, O child, how couldst thou perish, going to battle ! Alas, how doth that face of thine which resembleth the blue lotus and is graced with beautiful teeth and excellent eyes, now seem, now that, O child, it is covered with battle's dust !s Without doubt, thee so brave and unreturning, thee fallen on the field, with beautiful head and neck and arms, with broad chest, low belly,* thy limbs decked with ornaments, thee that art endued with beautiful eyes, thee that art mangled with weapon-wounds, thee all creatures are, without doubt, beholding as the rising moon! Alas, thou whose bed used to be overlaid with the whitest and costliest sheets, alas, deserving as thou art of every luxury, how dost thou sleep today on the bare earth, thy body pierced with arrows ?6 That hero of mighty arms who used of old to be waited upon by foremost of beautiful women, alas, how he, fallen on the field of battle, pass his time now in the company of jackalls? He who of old was praised with hymns by singers and bards and panegyrists, alas, he is today cheered by fierce and yelling cannibals and beasts of prey! By whom, alas, hast thou been helplessly slain when thou hadst the Pandayas, O lord, and the heroes of the Vrishni race, and all the Pānchālas, for thy protectors ? Oh son, Oh sinless one, I am not yet satiated with looking at thee! Wretched as I am, it is evident that I shall have to go to Yama's abode !10 again shall I cast my eyes on that face of thine decked with large eyes and beautiful locks, that smooth face without pimples, from which sweet words and excellent perfumes constantly Fie on the strength of Bhimasena, on the bowmanship of Partha, on the prowess of the Vrishni heroes, and the might of the Panchalas !12 Fie on the Kaikeyas, the Chedis, the Matsyas, and the Srinjayas, they that could not protect thee, O hero, while engaged in battle !18 I behold the Earth today to be empty and cheerless! Without seeing my Abhimanyu, my eves are troubled with affliction !14 Thou wast the sister's son of Vasudeva, the son of the wielder of Gandiva, and thyself, a hero and an Atiratha! Alas, how shall I behold thee slain!16 Alas, O hero, thou hast been to me like a treasure in a dream, that is, seen and lost! Oh, everything human is as transitory as a bubble of water!16 This thy young wife overwhelmed with grief on account of the evil that hath befallen thee, alas, how shall I comfort her who is even like a cow without her calf!17 Alas, O son, thou hast prematurely fled from me at a time when thou wast about to bear fruit, although I am longing for a sight of thee !10 Without doubt, the conduct of the Destroyer cannot be understood by even the wise, since although thou hadst Kecava for thy protector thou wast yet slain as if thou wast perfectly helpless !19 O son, let that end be thine which is theirs that perform sacrifices, and theirs that are Brahmanas of purified soul, and theirs that have practised Brahmacharya, and theirs that have bathed in sacred waters, and theirs that are grateful and charitable and devoted to the service of their preceptors, and theirs that have made sacrificial presents in profusion !20-21 That end which is theirs that are brave and unreturning while engaged in battle, or theirs that have fallen in battle, having slain their foes, let that end be thine !22 That auspicious end which is theirs that have given away a thousand kine, or theirs that have given away in sacrifices, or theirs that give away houses and mansions agreeable to the recipients,28 that end which is theirs that give away gems and jewels to deserving Brahmanas, or theirs that are punishers of crime, O, let that end be thine ! * That end which is attained by Munis of rigid vows by Brahmacharya, or that which is attained by those women that adhere to but one husband, O son, let that end be thine !25 That eternal end which is attained by kings by means of good behaviour, or by those persons that have cleansed themselves by leading, one after another, all the four modes of life, and through the due observance of their duties,26 that end which is theirs that are compassionate to the poor and the distressed, or theirs that equitably divide sweets amongst themselves and their dependants, or theirs that are never addicted to deceit and wickedness, O son, let that end be thine !27 That end which is theirs that are observant of vows, or theirs that are virtuous, or theirs that are devoted to the service of preceptors, or theirs that have never sent away a guest unentertained, O son, let that end be thine !28 That end which is theirs that in distress and the most difficult straits succeed in preserving the equanimity of their souls however much scorched they might be by the fire of grief, O son, let that end be thine!29 O son, let that end be thine which is theirs that are always dovoted to the service of their fathers and mothers, or theirs that are devoted to their own wives only! 30 O son, let that end be thine which is attained by those wise men who, restraining themselves from the wives of others, seek the companionship of only their own wives in season! O son, let that end be thine which is theirs that look upon all creatures with an eye of peace, or theirs that never give pain to others, or theirs that always forgive! 32 O son, let that end be thine which is theirs that abstain from honey, meat, wine, pride, and untruth, or theirs that have refrained from giving pain to others !" Let that goal be thine which they attain that are modest, acquainted with all the scriptures, content with knowledge, and have their passions under control !*4-

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:39 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized

"'And while the cheerless Subhadra, afflicted with grief, was indulging in such lamentations, the princess of Panchala (Draupadi), accompanied by Virāta's daughter (Uttarā), came to her. 35 All of them, in great grief, wept copiously and indulged in heart-rending lamentations. And like persons reft of reason by sorrow, they swooned away and fell down on the earth.55 Then Krishna, who stood ready with water, deeply afflicted, spinkled it over his weeping, insensible, and trembling sister pierced in her very heart, and comforting her, said what should be said on such an occasion. And the lotus-eyed one said, 37-88 — Grieve not, O Subhadra! O Panchali, comfort Uttarā! Abhimanyu, that bull among Kshatriyas, hath obtained the most laudable goal !50 O thou of beautiful face, let all the other men yet alive in our race obtain that goal which Abhimanyu of great fame hath obtained !40 Ourselves with all our friends, wish to achieve, in this battle, that feat, the like of which, O lady, thy son, that mighty car-warrior, hath achieved without any assistance !41—Having comforted his sister and Draupadi and Uttarā thus, that chastiser of foes, viz., the mighty-armed (Krishna), returned to Partha's side.42 Krishna, saluting the kings, his friends, and Arjuna, entered the inner apartments of the (latter's) tent, while those kings also repaired to their respective abodes." "48

Generated on 2022-03-03-12:39 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

SECTION LXXIX.

"Sanjaya said,—'Then the lord Keçava, of eyes like lotus petals, having entered the unrivalled mansion of Arjuna, touched water, and spread (for Arjuna) on the auspicious and even floor an excellent bed of Kuca blades that were of the hue of the lapis lazuli. And keeping excellent weapons around that bed, he adorned it duly with garlands of flowers and fried paddy and perfumes and other auspicious articles. And after Partha (also) had touched water, meek and submissive attendants 1-3 brought the usual nightly sacrifice to the Three-eyed (Mahā-Then Partha, with a cheerful soul, having decked Madhava with perfumes and floral garlands, presented unto Mahādeva the nightly offering.* Then Govinda, with a faint smile, addressed Partha, saying,4-5-Blessed be thou, O Partha, lay thyself down, I leave thee !-Placing door-keepers then, and also well-armed, the blessed Keçava, followed by (his charioteer) Dāruka, repaired to his own tent. He then laid himself down on his white bed, and thought of diverse measures And the illustrious (Keçava) of eyes like lotus to be adopted.7 leaves, began, for Partha's sake, to think of various acts that would dispel (Partha's) grief and sorrow and enhance his prowess and splendour.8 Of soul rapt in yoga, that Supreme Lord of all, viz., Vishnu of wide-spread fame, who always did what was agreeable to Jishnu, desirous of benefiting (Arjuna), had recourse to yoga meditation. There was none in the Pandava ^{*} Nilakantha supposes that tasmai here refers to the Three-eyed and not to Krishna. This seems to be right .- T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:39 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access_use#pd-google

camp who slept that night. Wakefulness possessed every one, O monarch,10 And everybody (in the Pandava camp) thought of this, viz.,—The high-souled wielder of Gandiva, burning with grief for the death of his son, hath suddenly vowed the slaughter of the ruler of the Sindhus! How, indeed, will that slayer of hostile heroes, that son of Vasava, that mightyarmed warrior, accomplish his vow ?11-18 The high-souled son of Pāndu hath, indeed, made a most difficult resolve! King Jayadratha is endued with mighty energy! Oh, let Arjuna succeed in accomplishing his vow! 18 Difficult is that vow which he, afflicted with grief on account of his son, hath made! Duryodhana's brothers are all possessed of great prowess. also is countless.14 The son of Dhritarashtra hath assigned all these to Jayadratha (as his protectors). Oh, let Dhananjaya come back (to the camp), having slain the ruler of the Sindhus Vanquishing his foes, let Arjuna accomplish his in battle!18 If he fails to slay the ruler of the Sindhus tomorrow, he will certainly enter the blazing fire !16 Dhananjaya the son of Pritha will not dare to falsify his oath! If Arjuna dies, how will the son of Dharma succeed in recovering his kingdom?17 Indeed, (Yudhishthira) the son of Pandu, hath reposed (all his hopes of) victory on Arjuna! If we have achieved any (religious) merit, if we have ever poured libations of clarified butter on the fire,18 let Savyasāchin, aided by the fruits vanquish all his foes!—Thus talking, O lord, with one another about the victory (of the morrow),19 that long night, O king, of theirs at last passed away. In the middle of the night, Janarddana, having awaked,20 remembered Partha's vow, and addressing (his charioteer) Dāruka, said,—Arjuna, in grief for the death of his son, hath vowed,21 O Dāruka, that before tomorrow's sun goes down he will slay Jayadratha! Hearing of this, Duryodhana will assuredly take counsel with his counsellors,22 about how Partha may fail to achieve his His several Akshauhinis of troops will protect Jayadratha.23 Fully conversant with the rules about applying all weapons, Drona also, with his son, will protect him. matchless hero, the Thousand-eyed (Indra himself), that crusher of the pride of Daityas and Danavas,24 cannot venture to slay him in battle who is protected by Drona! I, therefore, will do that tomorrow by which Arjuna the son of Kunti25 may slay Jayadratha before the Sun sets! My wives, my friends, my kinsmen, my relatives,26 none amongst these is dearer to me than Arjuna! O Dāruka, I shall not be able to cast my eyes, even for a single moment, on the Earth bereft of Arjuna! I tell thee, the Earth shall not be reft of Arjuna! Myself vanquishing them all with their steeds and elephants by putting forth my strength for the sake of Arjuna, even I will slay them with Karna and Suyodhana! Let the three worlds tomorrow behold my prowess in great battle, $7-29 when I put forth my valor, O Dāruka, for Dhananjaya's sake! Tomorrow thousands of kings and hundreds of princes, so with their steeds and cars and elephants, will, O Dāruka, fly away from battle! Thou shalt tomorrow, O Dāruka, behold that army of kings overthrown and crushed with my discus⁸¹ by myself in wrath for the sake of the son of Pandu! Tomorrow the (three) worlds with the gods, the Gandharvas, the Piçāchas, the Snakes, and the Rākshasas,35 will know me as a (true) friend of Savyasāchin. He that hateth him, hateth me. He that followeth him, followeth me.38 Thou hast intelligence. Know that Arjuna is half my When morning comes after the expiry of this night, thou, O Dāruka, equipping my excellent car according to the rules of military science, must bring it and follow me with it Placing on it my celestial mace called Kaumodaki. my dart, and discus, and bow and arrows, and every other neccessary, O Suta, and making room on the terrace of my car for my standard and for the heroic Garuda thereon that adorns my umbrella, and yoking thereto my foremost of steeds named Valāhaka and Meghapushpa and Caivya and Sugriva, having cased them in golden mail of the splendour of the Sun and the fire, and thyself putting on thy armour, stay on it carefully. Upon hearing the loud and terrible blast of my conch Pānchajanya emitting the shrill Rishava note,* thou wilt come quickly In course of a single day, O Dāruka, I shall dispel the wrath and the diverse woes of my cousin, the son of my paternal aunt! By every means shall I strive so that Vibhatsu in battle may slay Jayadratha in the very sight of the Dhārtarāshtras! O charioteer, I tell thee that Vibhatsu will certainly succeed in slaying all those for whose slaughter he will strive!—⁸⁴⁻⁴²

^{*} The second note of the Hindu gamut. -T.

"'Dāruka said,—He is certain to have victory whose charioteership, O tiger among men, hath been taken by thee! Whence, indeed, can defeat come to him? As regards myself, I will do that which thou hast commanded me to do. This night will bring (on its train) the auspicious morn for Arjuna's victory!—'"

SECTION LXXX.

"Sanjaya said,—'Kunti's son Dhananjaya, of inconceivable prowess, thinking of how to accomplish his vow, recollected the mantras (given to him by Vyāsa). And soon he was lulled in the arms of sleep,1 Unto that ape-bannered hero burning with grief and immersed in thought, Keçava, having Garuda en his banner, appeared in a dream.2 Dhananjaya of righteous soul, in consequence of his love and veneration for Keçava, never omitted under any circumstances to stand up and advance a few steps for receiving Krishna.2 Rising up, therefore, now (in his dream), he gave unto Govinda a seat. He himself, however, at that time, did not set his heart upon taking his seat. Then Krishna of mighty energy, knowing the resolution of Partha, said, while seated, unto the son of Kunti, these words while the latter was standing :5-Do not set thy heart, O Partha, on grief! Time is unconquerable! Time forceth all creatures into the inevitable course. O foremost of men, what for is this grief of thine? Grief should not be indulged in, O foremost of learned persons! Grief is an impediment to ac-Accomplish that act which should be accomplished! The grief that maketh a person forego all efforts is, indeed, O Dhananjaya, a fee to that person! A person, by indulging in grief, gladdens his foes and saddens his friends; while the person is himself weakened. Therefore, it behoveth thee not to grieve !9 -Thus addressed by Vasudeva, the unvanquished Vibhatsu of great learning then said these words of grave import:10-28

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:39 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

Grave is the vow that I have made about the slaughter of Jayadratha! Even tomorrow I shall slay that wicked wretch, that slayer of my son! Even this hath been my vow, O Keçava!" For frustrating my vow, Jayadratha, protected by all the mighty car-warriors, will be kept in their rear by the Dhartarashtras !12 Their force, in number, consists, O Madhava, of the remnant, after slaughter, of eleven Akshauhinis of troops difficult of being vanquished!18 Surrounded in battle as he will be by all of them and by all the great car-warriors, how shall we obtain a a sight, O Krishna, of the wicked ruler of the Sindhus?14 vow will not be accomplished, O Keçava! How can a person like me live, having failed to acomplish his vow?15 the non-accomplishment is evident of this (my vow which to me is a) source of great grief! (At this season of the year), I tell thee that the Sun setteth quickly !16—The bird-bannered Krishna hearing this cause of Partha's grief, touched water and sat with face turned to the East.17 And then that hero of eyes like lotus leaves and possessed of great energy said these words for the benefit of Pandu's son who had resolved upon the slaughter of the ruler of the Sindhu's.18-O Pārtha, there is an eternal and supreme weapon of the name of Pāçupata! it the god Maheçwara slew in battle all the Daityas!13 If thou rememberest it now, thou wilt then be able to slay Jayadratha tomorrow! If it is unknown to thee (now), adore within thy heart the god having the bull for his mark !20 of that god in thy mind, remember him, O Dhananjaya! art his devotee. Through his grace thou shalt obtain that rich possession !21-Hearing these words of Krishna, Dhananjaya, having touched water, sat on the earth with concentrated mind and thought of the god Bhava.22 After he had thus sat with rapt mind at that hour, called Brāhma, of auspicious indications, Arjuna saw himself sojourning through the sky with Keçava!28 And Partha, possessed of the speed of the mind, seemed to reach, with Keçava, the sacred foot of Himavat and the Manimat mountain abounding with many brilliant gems and frequented by Siddhas and Chāranas. Keçava seemed to have caught hold of his left arm. 24-25 And he seemed to see many wonderful sights as he reached

(those places). And Arjuna of righteous soul then seemed to arrive at the White mountain on the North.26 And then he beheld, in the pleasure gardens of Kuvera the delicious lake decked with lotuses. And he also saw that foremost of rivers, viz., Ganga, full of water.27 And then he arrived at the regions about the Mandara mountains. Those regions were covered with trees that always bore blossoms and fruits. abounded with stones lying scattered about, that were all transparent crystal. And they were inhabited by lions and tigers and abounded with animals of diverse kinds. And they were adorned with many beautiful retreats of ascetics echoing with the sweet notes of delightful warblers. And they resounded also with the songs of Kinnaras.28-29 Graced with many golden and silver peaks, they were illumined with diverse herbs and plants. And many Mandara trees with their beautiful burden of flowers, adorned them. 30 And then Arjuna reached the mountains called Kala that looked like a heap of antimony. And then he reached the summit called Brahmatunga, and then many rivers. and then many inhabited provinces.81 And he arrived at Catacringa, and the woods known by the name of Caryyati. And then he beheld the sacred spot known as the Horse-head, and then the region of Atharvana. $2 And then he beheld that prince of mountains called Vrishadança, and the great Mandara. abounding with Apsaras, and adorned with Kinnaras.38 roaming on that mountain, Partha, with Krishna, beheld a spot of Earth adorned with excellent fountains, decked with golden minerals, and possessed of the splendour of the lunar rays and having many cities and towns. And he also beheld many seas of wonderful forms and diverse mines of wealth. 84-35 And thus sojourning through the sky and firmament and the Earth, he reached the spot called Vishnupada. And wondering. with Krishna in his company, he came down with great velocity like a shaft shot (from a bow).86 And soon Partha beheld a blazing mountain whose splendour equalled that of the planets, the constellations, or the fire. 37 And arrived at that mountain, he beheld on its top, the high-souled god having the bull for his mark, and ever engaged in ascetic penances,28 like a thousand Suns collected together, and blazing with his own effulg-

Trident in hand, matted locks on head, of snow-white color, he was robed in barks and skins. 50 Endued with great energy, his body was variegated with a thousand eyes. he was seated with Parvati and many creatures of brilliant forms (around him).40 And his attendants were engaged in singing and playing upon musical instruments, in laughing and dancing, in moving about and stretching their hands, and in uttering loud shouts. And the place was perfumed with fragrant And Rishis that uttered Brahma adored him with excellent hymns of praise. And possessed of unfading glory, he was the protector of all creatures, and wielded the (great) bow (called Pināka).42 Beholding him, Vāsudeva of righteous soul, with Partha, touched the earth with his head, uttering the eternal words of the Veda.43 And Krishna adored, with speech, soul, understanding, and acts, that god who is the first source of the worlds, the creator of the universe, himself increate, the supreme lord of unfading glory; who is the highest cause of the mind, who is space and the wind, who is the cause of all the luminous bodies (in the firmament), who is the creator of the rain, and the supreme pimordial substance of the Earth. who is the object of adoration with the gods, the Danavas, the Yukshas, and human beings; who is the supreme Brahma that is seen by Yogins, and the refuge of those acquainted with Brahma; who is the creator of all mobile and imobile creatures, and their destroyer also; who is the Wrath that burns everything at the end of the Yuga; who is the supreme soul; who is Cakra and Surya, and the origin of all attributes.44-47 And Krishna sought the protection of that Bhava whom men of knowledge, desirous of attaining to that which is called the subtile and the spiritual, behold; that increate one who is the soul And Arjuna repeatedly adored that deity, knowing that he was the origin of all creatures and the cause of the past, the future, and the present.49 Beholding those two, viz., Nara and Nārāyana arrived, Sarva of cheerful soul, smilingly said unto them:50-Welcome are ye, ye foremost of men! Rise up, and let the fatigue of your journey be over! What, O heroes, is the desire in your heart! Let it be uttered quick-What is the business that has brought you hither?

I will accomplish it! Do what would benefit you! grant you everything ye may desire !52—Hearing those words of the god, they both rose. And then with joined hands, the faultless Vasudeva and Arjuna, both of great wisdom, began to gratify that high-souled deity with an excellent hymn. 53 And Krishna and Arjuna said,—We bow to Bhava, to Sarva, to Rudra, to the boon-giving deity! We bow to the lord of all creatures endued with life, to the god who is always fierce, to him who is called Kaparddin! We bow to Mahadeva, to Bhima, to the Three-eyed, or to him who is peace and contentment!54 We bow to Içana, or to him who is the destroyer of Sacrifice! Let salutations be to the slayer of Andhaka, to the father of Kumāra, to him who is of blue throat, to him who is the creator !55 Let salutations be to the wielder of $Pin\bar{a}ka$, to the vow embodied of abstemious food, to him who is Truth, to him who is all-pervading! To him who is red, who is smoke, who is a hunter (in guise), to him who is unvanquished!56 who is always of bule locks, to him who is armed with the trident, to him who is of celestial vision! To him who is Hotri, to him who protecteth all, to him who is of three eyes, to him who is disease, to him whose vital seed fell on the fire!57 To him who is inconceivable, to him who is the lord of Amvika, to him who is adored by all the gods! To him who hath the bull for his mark, to him who is bald, to him who is of matted locks; to him who is a Brahmachārin.58 To him who standeth as an ascetic in the water, to him who is devoted to Brahma, to him who hath never been conquered! To him who is the soul of the universe, to him who is the creator of the universe, to him who liveth pervading the whole universe !50 We bow to thee that art the object of the reverence of all, to thee that art the original cause of all creatures! To thee that art called Brahmachakra, to thee that are called Sarva, Cankara, and Civa!60 We bow to thee that art the lord of the universe, and the lord of all great beings!61 We bow to thee that hast a thousand heads, to thee that hast a thousand arms, to thee that art called death! To thee that hast a thousand eyes and a thousand To thee whose acts are innumerable !42 We bow to thee whose complexion is that of gold, to thee that art cased in golden mail, to thee that art ever compassionate to thy devotees! O lord, let our wish be accomplished!—'68

"Sanjaya continued,—'Having adored Mahādeva in these terms, Vāsudeva with Arjuna then began to gratify him for obtaining (the great) weapon (called Pācupata)." "64

SECTION LXXXI.

"Sanjaya said,—'Then Partha, with a cheerful soul and joined hands and eyes expanded (in wonder), gazed at the god having the bull for his mark and who was the receptacle of every energy.1 And he beheld the offerings he made every night to Vasudeva lying by the side of the Three-eyed deity.2 The son of Pandu then, mentally worshipping both Krishna and Sarva, said unto the latter,—I desire (to obtain) the celestial weapon!8—Hearing these words of Partha expressive of the boon he sought, the god Civa smilingly said unto Vasudeva and Arjuna,4—Welcome to you, ye foremost of men! know the wish cherished by you, and the business for which you have come here! I will give you what you wish!5 There is a celestial lake full of Amrita not far from this place, ye slay-There were kept sometime before, that celestial ers of foes! bow and arrow of mine! With them I slew in battle all the enemies of the gods! Bring hither, ye Krishnas, that excellent bow with arrow fixed on it!7—Hearing these words of Civa, Vāsudeva and Arjuna answered,—So be it !—And then, accompanied by all the attendants of Civa, those two heroes set out for that celestial lake which possessed hundreds of heavenly wonders, that sacred lake, capable of granting every object, which the god having the bull for his mark had indicated to And unto that lake, the Rishis Nara and Nārāyana (viz., Arjuna and Vāsudeva) went fearlessly. And having reached that lake bright as the disc of the Sun, Arjuna and Achyuta beheld within its waters a terrible snake. 10 behe'd there another foremost of snakes, that had a thousand And possessed of the effulgence of fire, that snake was vomiting fierce flames.11 Then Krishna and Partha having touched water, joined their hands, and approached those snakes, having bowed unto the god having the bull for his mark.12 And as they approached the snakes, conversant as they were with the Vedas, they uttered the hundred stanzas in the Veda to the praise of Rudra, bowing the while, with their whole souls, unto Bhava of immeasurable power.18 Then those two terrible snakes, in consequence of the power of those adorations to Rudra, abandoned their snake-forms, and assumed the forms of a foe-killing bow and arrow.14 Gratified (with what they saw), Krishna and Arjuna then seized that bow and arrow of great And those high-souled heroes then brought them away and gave them unto the illustrious Mahadeva.15 from one of the sides of Civa's body there came out a Brahmachārin of tawny eyes. And he seemed to be the refuge of asce-Of blue throat and red locks, he was endued with great Taking up that best of bows, that Brahmachārin stood placing (both and the bow and his feet properly). fixing the arrow on the bow-string, he began to stretch the latter Beholding the manner of his seizing the handle of the bow and drawing the string and placing his feet, and hearing also the Mantras uttered by Bhava, the son of Pandu, of inconceivable prowess, learnt everything duly.18 The mighty and puissant Brahmachārin then sped that arrow to that same lake. And he once more threw that bow also in that selfsame lake.19 Then Arjuna of good memory, knowing that Bhava was gratified with him, and remembering also the boon the latter had given him in the forest and the sight also he gave him of his person, 20 mentally entertained the desire,-Let all this become productive of fruit!—Understanding this to be his wish, Bhava, gratified with him, gave him the boon.21 And the god also granted him the terrible Pācupata weapon and the accomplish-Then, having thus once more obtained the ment of his vow. Pāçupata weapon from the Supreme god,22 the invincible Arjuna, with hair standing on end, regarded his business to be Then Arjuna and Krishna, filled with joy, already achieved. paid their adorations unto the great god by bowing their heads.23 And permitted by Bhava, both Arjuna and Keçava, those two heroes, almost immediatly came back to their own camp, filled with transports of delight,24 Indeed, their joy was as great as that of Indra and Vishnu when those two gods, desirous of slaying Jambha, had obtained the permission of Bhava that slayer of great Asuras.' "25

SECTION LXXXII.

"Sanjaya said,—'While Krishna and Daruka were thus conversing together, that night, O king, passed away. morning dawned), king Yudhishthira rose from his bed. Pāniswanikas, and Māgadhas, and Madhuparkikas and Vaitālikas and Sutas, gratified that bull among men (with songs and music).2 And dancers began their dance, and sweet-voiced singers sang their sweet songs fraught with the praises of the Kuru race. And skilled musicians, well trained (in their respective instruments), played on Mridangas and Jharjharas and Bheris, and Panavas, and Anakas, and Gomukhas, and Adamvaras, and conchs, and Dundubhis, of loud sound, and diverse other instruments.4-6 That loud noise, deep as the roar of the clouds, touched the very heavens. And it awoke that foremost of kings, viz., Yudhishthira, from his slumbers. Having slept happily on his excellent and costly bed, the king And the monarch, rising from his bed, proceeded to the bath room for performing those acts that were absolutely neces-Then a hundred and eight servants, attired in white, themselves washed, and all young, approached the king with many golden jars filled to the brim.8 Seated at his case on a royal seat, attired in a thin cloth, the king bathed in several kinds of water fragrant with sandal wood and purified with His body was rubbed by strong and well-trained servants with water in which diverse kinds of medicinal herbs had been soaked. He was then washed with adhivasha water rendered fragrant by various odoriferous substances.10 Obtaining then a long piece of cloth (for the head) that was as white as the feathers of the swan, and that had been kept loose before him, the king tied it round his head for drying the water." Smearing his body then with excellent sandal-paste, and wearing floral garlands, and dressing himself in clean robes, the mighty-armed monarch sat with face towards the east, and his hands joined together.18 Following the path of the righteous, the son of Kunti then mentally said his prayers. with great humility he entered the chamber in which the blazing fire (for worship), was kept.13 And having worshipped the fire with faggots of sacred wood and with libations of clarified butter sanctified with Mantras, he came out of the chamber.14 Then that tiger among men, entering a second chamber, beheld there many bulls among Brahmanas well-acquainted with the And they were all self-restrained, and purified by the study of the Vedus and by vows. And all of them had undergone the bath on the completion of sacrifices performed by Worshippers of the Sun, they numbered a thousand. And, besides them, there were also eight thousand others of the same class.16 And the mighty-armed son of Pandu, having caused them to utter, in distinct voices, agreeable benedictions, by making presents to them of honey and clarified butter and auspicious fruits of the best kind, he gave unto each of them a nishka of gold, a hundred steeds decked with ornaments, and costly robes, and such other presents as were agreeable to them. 17-18 And making unto them presents also of kine yielding milk whenever touched, with calves, and having their horns decked with gold and their hoofs with silver, the son of Pandu circumambulated them.19 And then seeing and touching Swastikas fraught with increase of good fortune, and Nandyāvartas made of gold, and floral garlands, and water-pots, and blazing fire, and vessels full of sun-dried rice and other auspicious articles, and the yellow pigment prepared from the urine of the cow, and auspicious and well-decked maidens, and curds and clarified butter and honey, and auspicious birds and diverse other things held sacred, the son of Kunti came into the outer chamber. 20-22 Then, O mighty-armed one, the attendants waiting in that chamber brought an excellent and costly seat of gold that was of a circular shape. Decked with pearls and lapis lazuli, and overlaid with a very costly carpet over which was spread another cloth of fine texture, that seat was the handiwork of the celestial artificer himself.25-24 After the high-souled monarch had taken his seat, the servants then brought to him all his costly and bright ornaments.25 The high-souled son of Kunti put on those begemmed ornaments, whereupon his beauty became such as to enhance the grief of his foes.26 And when the servants began to fan him with white yak-tails of the bright effuigence of the moon and all furnished with handles of gold, the king looked resplendent like a mass of clouds charged with lightning.27 And bards began to sing his praises and panegyrists uttered his eulogies. And singers began to sing unto that delighter of Kuru's race.28 And in a moment the voices of the panegyrists swelled into a loud noise. And then was heard the clatter of car-wheels, and the tread of horse-hoofs.29 consequence of that noise mingling with the tinkle of elephants' bells and the blare of conches and the tread of men, the very earth seemed to tremble. Then one of the orderlies in charge of the doors, cased in mail, youthful in years, decked with earrings, and his sword hanging by his side, entering the private apartment, knelt down on the ground, and saluting with (a bend of) his head the monarch who deserved every adoration. represented unto that high-souled and royal son of Dharma that Hrishikeça was waiting to be introduced. Then that tiger among men, having ordered his servants, saying,-Let an excellent seat and an Argha be kept ready for him,-caused him of Vrishni's race to be introduced and seated on a costly seat. And addressing Madhava with the usual enquiries of welcome, king Yudhishthira the just duly worshipped Keçava." 31-34

SECTION LXXXIII.

"Sanjaya said,—'Then king Yudhishthira the son of Kunti. saluting Devaki's son Janarddana, cheerfully addressed him, saying, -Hast thou passed the night happily, O slaver of Are all thy perceptions clear, O thou of unfading glory?2—Vāsudeva also made similar enquiries of Yudhishthira. Then the orderly came and represented that the other Kshatriya warriors were waiting to be introduced.3 Commanded by the king, the man introduced that concourse of heroes, consisting of Virāta and Bhimasena and Dhrishtadyumna and Sātyaki. and Dhrishtaketu the ruler of the Chedis, and the mighty carwarrior Drupada, and Cikhandin, and the twins (Nakula and Sahadeva), and Chekitana and the ruler of the Kaikayas, and Yuyutsu of Kuru's race, and Uttamaujas of the Panchalas, and Yudhāmanyu, and Suvāhu, and the (five) sons of Draupadi. These and many other Kshatriyas, approaching that highsouled bull among Kshatriyas, sat down on excellent seats." Those mighty and high-souled heroes of great splendour, viz., Krishna and Yuyudhana, both sat on the same seat.8 in the hearing of them all, Yudhishthira, addressing the lotus-eyed slayer of Madhu, said unto him these sweet words :9 -Relying on thee alone, we, like the celestials on the deity of a thousand eyes, seek victory in battle and eternal happi-Thou art aware, O Krishna, of the deprivation of our kingdom, our exile at the hands of the foe, and all our diverse woes !11 O Lord of All, O thou that art compassionate unto those that are devoted to thee, upon thee wholly rests the happiness of us all and our very existence, O slayer of Madhu!12 O thou of Vrishni's race, do that by which my heart may ever rest on thee! Do also that, O Lord, by which the purposed vow of Arjuna may be realised!13 O, rescue us today from this ocean of grief and rage! O Madhava, become thou today a boat unto us that are desirous of crossing (that ocean) !14 The car-warrior desirous of slaying the foe cannot, in battle, do that (for the success of his object) which, O Krishna, the car-driver can do if he exerts himself carefully !15 O Janarddana, as thou always savest the Vrishnis in all calamities, even so it behoveth thee to save us from this distress, O mightyarmed one !16 O bearer of the conch, discus, and mace, rescue the sons of Pandu sunk in the fathomless and boatless Kuru ocean, by becoming a boat unto them !17 I bow to thee, O god of the lord of the gods, O thou that art eternal, O supreme Destroyer, O Vishnu, O Jishnu, O Hari, O Krishna, O Vaikuntha, O best of male beings !18 Nārada described thee as that ancient and best of Rishis (called Nārāyana) that giveth boons, that beareth the bow Carnga, and that is the foremost of all! O Mādhava, make those words true 119—Thus addressed in the midst of that assembly by king Yudhishthira the just, Keçava, that foremost of speakers, replied unto Yudhishthira in a voice deep as that of clouds charged with rain, saying.20 In all the worlds including that of the celestials, there is no bowman equal to Dhananjaya the son of Pritha !21) Possessed of great energy, accomplished in weapons, of great prowess and great strength, celebrated in battle, ever wrathful, and of great energy, Arjuna is the foremost of men !22 Youthful in years, bull-necked, and of long arms, he is endued with Treading like a lion or a bull, and exceedgreat strength. ingly beautiful, he will slay all thy foes !38 myself, I will do that by which Arjuna the son of Kunti may be able to consume the troops of Dhritarashtra's son like a swelling conflagration.24 This very day Arjuna will, by his arrows, despatch that vile wretch of sinful deeds, that slayer of Subhadra's son, (viz., Jayadratha), to that road from which no traveller comes back.25 Today vultures and hawks and furious jackalls and other carnivorous creatures will feed on O Yudhishthira, if even all the gods with Indra his flesh.26 become his protectors today, Jayadratha will still, slain in press of battle, repair to Yama's capital !27 Having slain the ruler of the Sindhus, Jishnu will come to thee (in the evening). Dispel thy grief and the fever (of thy heart), O king, and be thou graced with prosperity!" "28

SECTION LXXXIV.

"Sanjaya said,-'While Yudhishthira, Vasudeva, and others were thus conversing, Dhananjaya came there, desirous of beholding that foremost one of Bharata's race, viz., the king, as also his friends and well-wishers.1 After he had entered that auspicious chamber and, having saluted him duly, taken his stand before the king, that bull among the Pandavas, (viz., king Yudhishthira), rising up from his seat, embraced Arjuna with great affection.2 Smelling his head and embracing him with his arms, the king blessed him heartily. And addressing him smilingly, he said, -It is evident, O Arjuna, that complete victory certainly awaits thee in battle, judging from thy countenance (bright and cheerful as it is), and by the fact that Janarddana is well-pleased with thee ! Then Jishnu related unto him that highly wonderful incident, saying,-Blessed be thou, O monarch, I have, through Keçava's grace, beheld something exceedingly wonderful !5-Then Dhanan jaya everything he had seen about his meeting with the Three-eyed god, for assuring his friends. Then all the hearers, filled with wonder, bent their heads to the ground. And bowing unto the god having the bull for his mark, they said,—Excellent, Excellent!7—Then all the friends and well-wishers (of the Pandavas), commanded by the son of Dharma, quickly and cheerfully proceeded to battle, their hearts filled with rage (against the foe).* Saluting the king, Yuyudhana and Kecava and Arjuna, cheerfully set out from Yudhishthira's abode.9 And those two invincible warriors, those two heroes, viz., Yuyudhana and Janarddana, together proceeded on the same car to Arjuna's pavilion.10 Arrived there, Hrishikeça, like a charioteer (by profession), began to equip that car bearing the mark of the prince of apes and belonging to that foremost of carwarriors (viz., Arjuna).11 And that foremost of cars, of the effulgence of heated gold, and of rattle resembling the deep roar of the clouds, equipt (by Krishna), shone brightly like the morning Sun. 12 Then that tiger among men, (viz., Vāsudeva), clad in mail, informed Partha, who had finished his morning prayers, of the fact that his car had been properly equipt.18 Then that foremost of men in this world, viz., the diademdecked (Arjuna), clad in golden armour, and with his bow and arrows in hand, circumambulated that car.14 And adored and blessed with benedictions about victory by Brahmanas old in ascetic penances and knowledge and years, ever engaged in the performance of religious rites and sacrifices, and having under control, Arjuna then their passions ascended that great car,15 that excellent vehicle, which had previously been sanctified with mantras capabale of giving victory in battle, like Surya of blazing rays ascending the Eastern mountain.16 And that foremost of car-warriors decked with gold, in consequence of those golden ornaments of his, shone on his car like Surya of blazing splendour on the breast of Meru.17 After Partha, Yuyudhana and Janarddana mounted on that car like the twin Acwins riding the same car with Indra while coming to the sacrifice of Swaryyāti,18 Then Govinda, that foremost of charioteers, took the reins (of the steeds) like Mātali taking the reins of Indra's steeds while the latter went to battle for slaying Vritra.*19 Mounted on that best of cars with those two friends, that slayer of large bodies of foes, viz., Partha, proceeded for achieving the slaughter of the ruler of the Sindhus, like Soma rising (in the firmament) with Vudha and Cukra, for destroying the gloom of night, or like Indra proceeding with Varuna and Surya to the great battle (with the Asuras) occasioned by the abduction of Taraka (the wife of Vrihaspati).20-21 Then bards and musicians gratified the heroic Arjuna, as he proceeded, with the sound of musical instruments and auspicious hymns of good omen.22 And the voices of the panegyrists and the bards uttering benedictions of victory and wishing good day, mingling with the sounds of musical instruments, became gratifying to those heroes.28 And an auspicious breeze fraught with fragrance blew from behind Partha, gladdening him and sucking up the energies of his foes.24 at that hour, O king, many auspicious omens of various kinds appeared to view, indicating victory25 to the Pandavas and defeat to thy warriors, O sire! Beholding those indications of victory, Arjuna, addressing the great bowman Yuyudhana on his right, said these words :- O Yuyudhāna, in today's battle my victory seems to be certain, 26-27 since, O bull of Cini's race. all these (auspicious) omens are seen! I shall, therefore, go thither where the ruler of the Sindhus28 waiteth for (the display of) my energy and in expectation of repairing to the regions Indeed, as the slaughter of the ruler of the Sindhus is one of my most imperative duties,29 even so is the protection of king Yudhishthira the just another of my most imperative obligations. O thou of mighty arms, be thou today the king's protector !80 Thou wilt protect him even as I myself protect him! I do not behold the person in the world who would be able to vanquish thee !81 Thou art, in battle, equal to Vāsudeva himself! The chief of the celestials himself is unable to vanquish thee! Reposing this burden on thee or on that mighty car-warrior Praddyumna, 52 I can, O bull among men, without anxiety slay the ruler of the Sindhus! O thou of the Sātwata race, no anxiety need be entertained on my account!  With thy whole soul must thou protect the king! There where the mighty-armed Vāsudeva stayeth, and where I myself stay, without doubt, the slightest danger (to him or me) can never arise! —Thus addressed by Pārtha, Sātyaki, that slayer of hostile heroes, replied, saying,—So be it!—And then the latter proceeded to the spot where king Yudhishthira was.' ****

^{*} Vāsavamiva is a mistake for Vāsavasyeva.—T.

SECTION LXXXV.

(Jayadratha-badha Parva.)

"Dhritarāshtra said,—'After Abhimanyu's slaughter when the next day came, what did the Pandavas, afflicted with grief and sorrow, do? Who amongst my warriors fought with Knowing, as they did, the achievements of Savyasāchin, O, tell me, how could the Kuravas, having perpetrated such a wrong, remain fearlessly! How could they in battle venture to even gaze at that tiger among men, (viz., Arjuna,) as he advanced like the all-destroying Death himself in fury, burning with grief on account of the slaughter of his son? Beholding that warrior having the prince of apes on his banner, that hero grieved on account of his son's death, shaking his gigantic bow in battle, what did my warriors do? What, O Sanjaya, hath befallen unto Duryodhana? A great sorrow hath overtaken us today! I do not any longer hear the sounds of joy! Those charming sounds, highly agreeable to the car, that were formerly heard in the abode of the Sindhu king, alas, those sounds are no longer heard today! Alas, in the camp of my sons, the sounds of countless bards and panegyrists singing their praises and of dancers are no longer heard! merly such sounds used to strike my ears incessantly! plunged into grief as they are, I do not any longer hear those sounds uttered (in their camp) !8 Formerly, O Sanjaya, while sitting in the abode of Somadatta who was devoted to truth, I used to hear such delightful sounds! Alas, how destitute of (religious) merit I am, for I observe the abode of my sons today to be echoing with sounds of grief and lamentations and destitute of every noise betokening life and energy !10 houses of Vivingçati, Durmukha, Chitrasena, other sons of mine, I do not hear the sounds I used to hear That great bowman, viz., the son of Drona, who was the refuge of my sons, upon whom Brāhmanas and Kshatrivas and Vaiçyas, and a large number of disciples used to wait,12 who took pleasure day and night in controversial disputation, in talk, in conversation, in the stirring music of diverse instruments, and in various kinds of delightful songs,18 who was worshipped by many persons among the Kurus, the Pāndavas, and the Sātwatas, alas, O Suta, in the abode of that son of Drona no sound can be heard as formerly !14 ers and dancers used, in large numbers, to wait closely upon that mighty bowman, viz., the son of Drona! Alas, their sounds can no longer be heard in his abode !15 That loud noise which rose in the camp of Vinda and Anuvinda every evening, alas, that loud noise is no longer heard there! Nor in the camp of the Kaikayas16 can that loud sound of song and slapping of palms be heard today which their soldiers, engaged in dance and revelry, used to make !17 Those priests competent in the performance of sacrifices who used to wait upon Somadatta's son, that refuge of scriptural rites, alas, their sounds can no longer be heard!18 The twang of the bow-string, the sound of Vedic recitations, the whiz of lances and swords, and the rattle of car-wheels, used incessantly to be heard in the abode Alas, those sounds can no longer be heard there !19 That swell of songs of diverse realms, that loud noise of musical instruments, which used to arise there, alas, those can no longer be heard today !20 When Janarddana of unfading glory came from Upaplavya desirous of peace, from compassion for every creature,21 I then, O Suta, said unto the wicked Duryodhana.—Obtaining Vasudeva as the means, make peace with the Pandavas, O son !22 I think the time has come (for making peace)! Do not, O Duryodhana, transgress my command! If thou settest Vāsudeva aside who now begs thee for peace 23 and addresses thee for thy good, victory thou wilt never have in battle !- Duryodhana, however, did set aside Him of Daçarha's race, that bull among all bowmen,24 who then spoke

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:40 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:40 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google

what was for Duryodhana's good. By this, he embraced what was calamitous to himself. Seized by Death himself, that wicked-souled son of mine, rejecting my counsels, adopted those of I myself did not approve of the match Dusçāsana and Karna. Vidura did not approve of it.25-26 The ruler of the Sindhus did not, nor Bhishma, nor Calya; nor Bhuricravas; nor Purumitra; nor Jaya;27 nor Açwatthaman; nor Kripa; nor Drona, O Sanjaya! If my son had conducted himself according to the counsels of these persons,28 he would then, with his kinsmen and friends, have lived for ever in happiness Of sweet and delightful speech, ever saying what is agreeable amid their kinsmen, so high-born, loved by all, and possessed of wisdom, the sons of Pandu are sure to obtain The man who casteth his eye on righteousness, always and everywhere obtaineth happiness. 30 Such a man. Possessed of sufficient after death, winneth benefit and grace. might, the Pandavas deserve to enjoy half the Earth. 81 Earth girt by the sea is as much their ancestral possession (as Possessed of sovereignty, the Pandavas will of the Kurus). never deviate from the track of righteousness. 32 have kinsmen to whose voice the Pandavas will ever listen,-Calya, Somadatta, the high souled such, for instance, as Bhishma, 58 Drona, Vikarna, Valhika, Kripa, and others among the Bhāratas that are illustrious and reverend in years.84 they speak unto them on thy behalf, the Pandavas will certainly act according to those beneficial recommendations. amongst these, thinkest thou, belongs to their party that will speak to them otherwise ?35 Krishna will never abandon the path of righteousness. The Pandavas are all obedient to him. Words of righteousness spoken by myself also, those heroes will never disobey, for the Pandavas are all of righteous souls! -Piteously lamenting, O Suta, I spoke these and many other words unto my son. 86-37 Foolish as he is, he listened not to I think all this to be the mischievous influence of time! There where Vrikodara and Arjuna are, and the Vrishni hero Sātvaki,38 and Uttamaujas of the Panchālas, and the invincible Yudhāmanyu, and the irrepressible Dhrishtadyumna, and the unvanquished Cikhandin, so the Açmakas, the Kekayas, and

30

Kshatradharman of the Somakas, the ruler of the Chedis, and Chekitāna, and Vibhu the son of the ruler of the Kāçis,40 the sons of Draupadi, and Virāta, and the mighty car-warrior Drupada, and those tigers among men, viz., the twins (Nakula and Sahadeva), and the slayer of Madhu to offer counsel,41 who is there in this world that would fight these, expecting to live? Who else, again, is there, save Duryodhana, and Karna, and Cakuni the son of Suvala, and Dusçasana as their fourth, for I do not see the fifth, that would venture to resist my foes while the latter display their celestial weapons?42-43 They who have Vishnu himself on their car, clad in mail and reins in hand, they who have Arjuna for their warrior, they can never have Doth not Duryodhana now recollect those lamentations of mine? Those tigers among men, Bhishma and Drona, thou hast said, have been slain.45 I think, beholding these fruits of the words uttered by the far-seeing Vidura, my sons are now indulging in lamentations !46 I think, beholding his army overwhelmed by Cini's grandson and Arjuna, beholding the terraces of his cars empty, my sons are indulging in lament-As a swelling conflagration urged by the winds consumes a heap of dry grass at the close of winter, even so will Dhananjaya consume my troops !48 O Sanjaya, thou art accomplished in narration! Tell me everything that transpired after the doing of that great wrong to Partha in the evening !49 When Abhimanyu was slain, what became the state of your minds? Having, O son, greatly offended the wielder of Gandiva. my warriors are incapatle of bearing in battle his achievements! What measures were resolved upon by Duryodhana, and what What also did Dusçāsana and Suvala's son do? O Sanjaya, O son, that which has in battle befallen all my children assembled together, is certainly due to the evil acts of the wicked Duryodhana, who followeth in the path of avarice. who is of wicked understanding, whose judgment is perverted by wrath, who coveteth sovereignty, who is foolish, and who is deprived of reason by anger! Tell me, O Sanjaya, what measures were then adopted by Duryodhana? Were they illjudged or well-judged ?" "50-54

SECTION LXXXVI.

"Sanjaya said,—'I will tell thee all, for everything hath been witnessed by me with my own eyes! Listen calmly! Great is thy fault " Even as an embankment is useless after the waters (of the field) have flowed away, even so, O king, are these lamentations of thine useless! O bull of Bharata's race, do not grieve! Wonderful as are the decrees of the Destroyer, they are incapable of being transgressed. grieve, O bull of Bharata's race, for this is not new! thou hadst formerly restrained Yudhishthira the son of Kunti and thy sons also from the match at dice, this calamity then would never have overtaken thee ' If, again, when the time for battle came, thou hadst restrained both the parties inflamed by wrath, this calamity then would never have overtaken thee ! If, again, thou hadst formerly urged the Kurus to slay the disobedient Duryodhana, then this calamity would never have overtaken thee !6 (If thou hadst done any of these acts), the Pandavas, the Panchalas, the Vrishnis, and the other kings would then have never known thy wrong-headed-If, again, doing thy duty as a father, thou hadst, by placing Duryodhana in the path of righteousness, caused him to tread along it, then this calamity would never have over-Thou art the wisest man on Earth. eternal virtue, how couldst thou follow the counsels of Duryodhana and Karna and Cakuni? These lamentations of thine. therefore, O king, that I hear,—of thine that art wedded to (worldly) wealth,—seem to me to be honey mixed with poison!10 O monarch, formerly Krishna did not respect king Yudhishthira the son of Pandu, or Bhishma, or Drona, so much as he used to respect thee !" When, however, he came to know thee as one fallen off from the duties of a king, since then Krishna hath ceased to regard thee with respect !12 Thy sons had addressed various harsh speeches towards the sons of Pritha. Thou wast indifferent to those speeches then. O thou that wishest sovereignty unto thy sons, the consequence of that indifference of thine hath now overtaken thee !18 one, thy ancestral sovereignty is now in danger. (If it is not so), obtain now the whole Earth subjugated by the sons of Prithā!*14 The kingdom that the Kurus enjoy, as also their fame, had been acquired by Pandu. The virtuous sons of Pāndu added to that kingdom and that fame.15 Those achievements, however, of theirs, became (to them) barren of fruit as they came in contact with thee, since they were deprived of even their ancestral kingdom by thy covetous self.16 king, when the battle has begun, thou censurest thy sons, indicating diverse faults of theirs. This is scarcely becoming." The Kshatriyas, while fighting, do not take care of their very Indeed, those bulls among Kshatriyas fight, penetrating into the array of the Parthas!18 Who else, indeed, save the Kauravas, would venture to fight with that force which is protected by Krishna and Arjuna, by Sātyaki and Vriko-Them that have Arjuna for their warrior, them that have Janarddaua for their counsellor, them that have Satyaki and Vrikodara for their protectors,20 what mortal bowman is there that would dare fight with, save the Kauravas and those that are following their lead?21 All that is capable of being achieved by friendly kings endued with heroism and observant of the duties of Kshatriyas, all that is being done by the warriors on the Kaurava side!22 Listen now, therefore, to everything that hath taken place in that terrible battle between those tigers among men, viz., the Kurus and the Pandavas!" "23

SECTION LXXXVII.

"Sanjaya said.—'After that night had passed away, Drona, that foremost of all wielders of weapons, began to array all his ^{*} Apavrittam is explained by Nilakantha as, endangered or made doubtful. What Sanjaya says is that if it is not so, thou shalt then have to undergo the bitterness of ruling over the whole world bestowed upon thee by the Pandavas. Either the Pandavas will snatch away thy kingdom, or make thee ruler of the whole world after slaying thy sons. Either of these alternatives would be bitter to thee.—T.

divisions for battle. Diverse sounds were heard, O monarch, of angry heroes shouting in wrath and desirous of slaying one another.2 And some stretched their bows, and some rubbed with their hands their bow-strings. And drawing deep breaths, many of them shouted, saying,—Where is that Dhananjaya? -And some began to throw upwards (and again sieze) their naked swords, unyielding, well-tempered, of the color of the sky, possessed of great sharpness, and furnished with beautiful And brave warriors, desirous of battle, by thousands, were seen to perform the evolutions of swordsmen and of bowmen, with skill acquired by practice. Some, whirling their maces decked with bells, smeared with sandal paste, and adorned with gold and diamonds, enquired after the son of Pandu. Some, intoxicated with the pride of strength and possessed of massive arms, obstructed the welkin with their spiked clubs that resembled (a forest of sturdy) poles raised in honor of Others, brave warriors all, adorned with beautiful garlands of flowers, desirous of battle, occupied diverse portions of the field, armed with diverse weapons.8 Where is that Govinda? Where is the proud Bhi-Where also are those allies of theirs?—Even thus did they call upon them in battle.9 Then blowing his conch and himself urging his horses to great speed, Drona moved about with great celerity, arraying his troops.10 After dvisions that delight in battle had taken up their stations, Bharadwāja's son, O king, said these words unto Jayadratha:11— Thyself, Somadatta's son, the mighty car-warrior Karna, Acwatthāman, Calya, Vrishasena, and Kripa,12 with a hundred thousand horse, sixty thousand cars, four and ten thousand elephants with rent temples,18 one and twenty thousand foot-soldiers clad in mail, take up your station behind me at the distance of twelve miles !14 There the very gods with Vasava at their head will not be able to attack thee, what need be said, therefore, of the Pandavas? Take comfort, O ruler of the Sindhus!15.—Thus addressed (by Drona), Jayadratha the ruler of the Sindhus became comforted. And he proceeded to the spot indicated by Drona, accompanied by many Gandhara warriors, and surrounded by those great car-warriors,16 and with many Generated on 2022-02-03 12:40 GMT / https://hdl.handlu Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitru: foot-soldiers clad in mail, prepared to fight vigorously, and armed with nooses. The steeds of Jayadratha, well skilled in bearing or drawing, were all, O monarch, decked with yak-tails and ornaments of gold. And seven thousand such steeds, and three thousand other steeds of the Sindhu breed were with him.¹⁷⁻¹⁸

"'Thy son Durmarshana, desirous of doing battle, stationed himself at the head of all the troops, accompanied by a thousand and five hundred infuriate elephants of awful size, clad in mail and of fierce deeds, and all ridden by well-trained elephantriders. 19-20 Thy two other sons, viz., Dushcasana and Vikarna, took up their position amid the advance divisions of the army, for the accomplishment of the objects of Jayadratha. 1 array that Bharadwaja's son formed, part Cakata and part a circle, was full forty eight miles long and the width of its rear measured twenty miles. 22 Drona himself formed that array, with countless brave kings stationed within it and countless cars and steeds and elephants and foot-soldiers.28 In the rear of that array was another impenetrable array of the form of a And within that lotus was another dense array called the Having formed his mighty array thus, Drona took up his station. At the mouth of that needle, the great bowman Kritavarman took up his stand.26 Next to Kritavarman, O sire, stood the ruler of the Kāmvojas and Jalasandha. Next to these stood Duryodhana and Karna.26 Behind them hundreds and thousands of unreturning heroes were stationed in that Cakata for protecting its head.27 Behind them all, O monarch, and surrounded by a vast force, was king Jayadratha stationed at one side of that needle-shaped array.88 entrance of the Cakata, O king, was Bharadwaja's son. hind Drona was the chief of the Bhojas, who protected him.29 Clad in white armour, with excellent head-gear, of broad mighty arms, Drona stood, stretching his large chest and bow, like the Destroyer himself in wrath. 50 Beholding Drona's car which was graced with a beautiful standard and had red steeds yoked to it and whose banner bore the device of a sacrificial altar and a black deer-skin, the Kauravas were filled with delight.81 Seeing that array formed by Drona, which resembled the ocean itself in agitation, the Siddhas and the Charanas were filled with wonder. 32 And all creatures thought that that array would devour the whole Earth with her mountains and seas and forests, and abounding with diverse And king Duryodhana, beholding that mighty array in the form of a Cakata, teeming with cars and men and steeds and elephants, roaring dreadfully, of wonderful form, and capable of riving the hearts of foes, began to rejoice." "84

Generated on 2022-03-03-12:40 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

SECTION LXXXVIII.

"Sanjaya said,-'After the diverse divisions of the Kuru army had been (thus) arrayed, and a loud uproar, O sire, had arisen; after drums and Mridangas began to be beat and played upon; after the din of the warriors and the noise of musical instruments had become audible; after conchs began to be blown, and an awful roar had arisen, making the hair to stand on end; after the field of battle had been slowly covered by the Bharata heroes desirous of fight; and after the hour called Rudra had set in, Savyasāchin made his appearance. Many thousands of ravens and crows, O Bharata, proceeded sporting on the front of Arjuna's car. Various animals of terrible cries, and jackalls of inauspicious sight, began to yell and howl on our right as we proceeded to battle.5 Thousands of blazing meteors fell with great noise. The whole Earth trembled on that dreadful occasion.6 Dry winds blew in all directions, accompanied by thunder, and driving hard pebbles and gravel when Kunti's son came at the commencement of battle. Nakula's son Catanika, and Dhrishtadyumna the son of Prithata, those two warriors possessed of great wisdom, arrayed the several divisions of the Pandavas.8 Then thy son Durmarshana, accompanied by a thousand cars, a hundred elephants, three thousand horses, and ten thousand foot-soldiers, and covering a piece of ground that measured the length of fifteen hundred bows, took up his position at the very van of all the troops, and said,9-10-Like the continent resisting the surging sea, even I will today resist the wielder of Gandiva, that scorcher of foes, that warrior who is irresistible in battle !11 Let people today behold the wrathful Dhananjaya collide with me like a mass of stone against another stony mass!12 Ye car-warriors that are desirous of battle, stay ye (as witnesses)! Alone I will fight with all the Pandavas assembled together, for enhancing my honor and fame !18--That high-souled and noble son of thine, that great bowman, saying this, stood there, surrounded by many great bowmen.14 Then, like the Destroyer himself in wrath, or Vasava himself armed with the thunder, or Death's irresistible self armed with his club and urged on by Time, 15 or Mahadeva armed with the trident and incapable of being ruffled, or Varuna bearing his noose, or the blazing fire at the end of the Yuga risen for consuming the creation, 16 the slayer of the Nivatakavachas, inflamed with rage and swelling with might, the ever-victorious Jaya devoted to truth and desirous of achieving his great vow,17 clad in mail and armed with sword, decked in golden diadem, adorned with garlands of white flowers and attired in white robes, his arms decked with beautiful Angadas and ears with excellent earrings, 18 mounted on his own foremost of cars, (the incarnate) Nara, accompanied by Nārāyana, shaking his Gāndiva in battle, shone brilliantly like the risen Sun !19 And Dhananjaya of great prowess, placing his car, O king, at the very van of his army where densest showers of arrows would fall, blew his Then Krishna also, O sire, fearlessly blew with great force his foremost of conchs called Panchajanya as Partha And in consequence of the blare of their conchs, all the warriors in thy army, O monarch, trembled and became And their hair stood on end at that sound.32 all creatures are possessed with fright at the sound of the thunder, even so did all thy warriors take fright at the blare of those conchs. 28 And all the animals ejected urine and . Thy whole army with its animals became filled with anxiety.24 O king, in consequence of the blare of those (two) conchs, all men, O sire, lost their strength. amongst them, O monarch, were inspired with dread, and some lost their senses.25 And the ape on Arjuna's banner, opening his mouth wide, made an awful noise with the other creatures on it, for terrifying thy troops.26 Then conchs and horns and cymbals and Anakas were once more blown and Generated on 2022-02-03 12:40 GMT / https:// Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www beat for cheering thy warriors.²⁷ And that noise mingled with the noise of diverse (other) musical instruments, with the shouts of warriors and the slaps of their armpits, and with the leonine roars uttered by great car-warriors in summoning and challenging (their antagonists).*23 When that tumultuous uproar arose there, an uproar that enhanced the fears of the timid, the son of Pākaçāsana, filled with great delight, addressing him of Daçārha's race, said (these words).' "29

SECTION LXXXIX.

"'Arjuna said,—Urge the steeds, O Hrishikeça, to where Durmarshana stayeth! Piercing through that elephant-division I will penetrate into the hostile army!

"Sanjaya continued,-" Thus addressed by Savyasāchin, the mighty-armed Keçava urged the steeds to where Durmarshana was staying. Fierce and awful was the encounter that commenced there between one and the many, an encounter that proved very destructive of cars and elephants and men! Then Partha, resembling a pouring cloud, covered his foes with showers of shafts like a mass of clouds pouring rain on the mountain breast.+4 The hostile car-warriors also, displaying great lightness of hands, quickly covered both Krishna and Dhananjaya with clouds of arrows. The mighty-armed Partha then, thus opposed in battle by his foes, became filled with wrath, and began to strike off with his arrows the heads of car-warriors from their trunks. And the Earth became strewn with beautiful heads decked with ear-rings and turbans, the nether lips bit by the upper ones, and the faces adorned with eyes troubled with wrath.7 Indeed, the scattered heads of the warriors looked resplendent like an assemblage of plucked off and crushed lotuses lying strewn about the field.8 coats of mail dyed with gore, (lying thick over the field), looked like masses of clouds charged with lightning.*9 The sound, O king, of heads falling on the Earth, resembled that of falling palmyra fruits ripened by time.10 Headless trunks arose, some standing bow in hand, and some with naked swords upraised in the act of striking." Those brave warriors, incapable of brooking Arjuna's feats and desirous of vanquishing him, had no distinct perception as to when their heads were struck off by The Earth became strewn with heads of horses, trunks of elephants, and the arms and legs of heroic warriors.13 —This one is Pārtha,—Where is Pārtha ?—Here is Pārtha ! -Even thus, O king, the warriors of thy army became filled with the idea of Partha only !14 Deprived of their senses by Time, they regarded the whole world to be full of Partha only, and, therefore, many of them perished, striking one another, and some struck even their own selves.15 Uttering wails of woe, many heroes, covered with blood, deprived of their senses, and in great agony, laid themselves down, calling upon their friends and kinsmen.46 Arms, bearing short arrows, or lances, or darts, or swords, or battle-axes, or pointed stakes, or scimitars, or bows, or spears, or shafts, or maces, and cased in armour and decked with Angadas and other ornaments, and looking like large snakes, and resembling huge clubs, cut off (from trunks) with mighty weapons, were seen to jump about, jerk about, and move about, with great force, as if in rage. 17-19 Every one amongst those that wrathfully advanced against Partha in that battle, perished, his body pierced with some fatal shaft of that hero.20 While dancing on his car as it moved, and drawing his bow, no one there could detect the minutest opportunity for striking him.21 The quickness with which he took his shafts, fixed them on the bowstring, and let them off, filled all his enemies with wonder.22 Indeed, Phalguna, with his shafts, pierced elephants and elephant-riders, horses and horse-riders, car-warriors and drivers of cars.28 There was none amongst his enemies, whether staying before him, or struggl-

^{*} This verse is grammatically connected with 27. The Bengal reading samāhutais is better than the Bombay reading samāhutais although Nilakantha accepts the last.—T.

[†] The original is pleonastic .- T.

^{*} This verse obviously needs correction. Instead of "golden coats of mail," I think some such correction is needed, viz, "coats of mail, of black iron, decked with gold and dyed with blood, &c."-T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:40 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

ing in battle, or wheeling about, or pressed forward by those on their back, whom the son of Pandu did not slay.24 Sun rising in the welkin destroyeth the thick gloom, even so did Arjuna destroy that elephant force by means of his shafts winged with Kanka plumes.25 The field occupied by thy troops, in consequence of riven elephants fallen upon it, looked like the Earth strewn with huge hills at the hour of universal dissolution.26 As the midday Sun is incapable of being looked at by all creatures, even so was Dhananjaya excited with wrath incapable of being looked at, in battle, by his enemies. The troops of thy son, O chastiser of foes, afflicted (with the arrows of Dhananjaya), broke and fled in fear.28 Like a mass of clouds pierced and driven away by a mighty wind, that army was pierced and routed by Partha. indeed, could gaze at that hero while he was slaying the foe.29 Urging their horses to great speed by goads, by the horns of their bows, by deep growls, by encouraging behests, by whips, by cuts on their flanks, and by threatening speeches, thy men, viz., thy cavalry and thy car-warriors, as also thy footsoldiers, afflicted with the shafts of Arjuna, fled away from the Others (that rode on elephants), fled away, urging those huge beasts by pressing their flanks with their toes or with strokes of the hook. Others, deprived of their senses by Pārtha's arrows, in flying, ran against Pārtha himself. thy warriors then became all cheerless and their understandings were all confused." "32

SECTION XC.

"Dhritarashtra said,—'When the van of my army thus slaughtered by the diadem-decked (Arjuna) broke and fled, who were those heroes that advanced against Arjuna?1 (Did any of them actually fight with Arjuna, or) did all, abandoning their resolutions, enter the Cakata array, getting behind the fearless Drona resembling a solid wall?"2

"Sanjaya said,—'When Indra's son Arjuna, O sinless one, began, with his excellent arrows, to break and incessantly slay that force of ours, many heroes were either slain, or becoming dispirited, fled away. None, in that battle, was capable of even looking at Arjuna.3-4 Then thy son Dusçasana, O king, beholding that state of the troops, became filled with wrath and rushed against Arjuna for battle. That hero of fierce prowess, cased in a beautiful coat of mail made of gold and his head covered with a turban decked with gold,6 caused Arjuna to be surrounded by a large elephant force which seemed capable of devouring the whole Earth.7 With the sound of the elephants' bells, the blare of conchs, the twang of bowstrings, and the grunts of the tuskers, the Earth, the points of the compass, and the welkin, seemed to be entirely filled. That space of time became fierce and awful. Beholding those huge beasts with extended trunks filled with wrath and rushing quickly towards him, like winged mountains, urged on with hooks,10 Dhananjaya, that lion among men, uttering a leonine shout, began to pierce and slay that elephant force with his shafts." And like a Makara penetrating into the vasty deep surging into mountain waves when agitated by the tempest, the diadem-decked (Arjuna) penetrated into that elephant host.12 , Indeed, Partha, that subjugator of hostile cities, was then seen by all on every side to resemble the scorching Sun that rises, transgressing the rule about direction and hour, on the day of the universal destruction.13 And in consequence of the sound of horse-hoofs, the rattle of car-wheels, the shouts of combatants, the twang of bow-strings,14 the noise of diverse musical instruments, the blare of Panchajanya and Devadatta, and the roar of Gandiva,15 men and elephants were dispirited and deprived of And men and elephants were riven by Savyasatheir senses. chin with his shafts whose touch resembled that of snakes of virulent poison.16 And those elephants, in that battle, were pierced all over their bodies with sharp shafts, numbering thousands upon thousands, sped from Gandiva.17 While thus mangled by the diadem-decked (Arjuna), they uttered loud noises and incessantly fell down on the earth like mountains shorn of their wings.18 Others struck at the jaw or frontal globes or temples, with long shafts, uttered cries resembling those of cranes.19 The diadem-decked (Arjuna) began to cut off, with his straight arrows, the heads of warriors standing on the necks of elephants.20

Those heads decked with ear-rings, constantly falling on the Earth, resembled a multitude of lotuses that Partha was culling for an offer to his gods.21 And while the elephants wandered on the field, many warriors were seen to hang from their bodies, divested of armour, afflicted with wounds, covered with blood, and looking like painted pictures.25 In some instances two or three warriors, pierced by one arrow winged with beautiful feathers and well-shot (from Gandiva), fell down on the Earth.23 Many elephants, deeply pierced with long shafts, fell down, vomiting blood from their mouths, with the riders on their backs, like hills overgrown with forests tumbling down through some convulsion of nature.24 And Partha, by means of his straight shafts, cut into fragments the bowstrings, standards, bows, yokes, and shafts of the car-warriors opposed to None could notice when Arjuna took up his arrows, when he fixed them on the bowstring, when he drew the string, and when he let them off. All that could be seen was that Partha seemed to dance on his car with his bow incessantly drawn to a circle.26 Elephants, deeply pierced with long shafts and vomiting blood from their mouths, fell down, as soon as they were struck, on the Earth.27 And in the midst of that great carnage, O monarch, innumerable headless trunks were seen to stand up.28 Arms, with bows in grasp, or whose fingers were cased in leathern fences, holding swords, or decked with Angadas and other ornaments of gold, cut off from trunks, were seen lying about.29 And the field of battle was strewn with innumerable Upushkaras and Adhishtānas, and shafts, and crowns, crushed car-wheels, and broken Akshas, and yokes, and warriors armed with shields and bows, and floral garlands, and ornaments, and robes, and fallen standards. 10-81 And in consequence of those slain elephants and steeds, and the fallen bodies of Kshatriyas, the Earth there assumed an awful Dusçāsana's force, thus slaughtered, O king, by the d'adem-decked (Arjuna), fled away. Their leader himself was in great pain, 35 for Dusçasana, greatly afflicted by those shafts, and overcome by fear, entered, with his division, the Cakata array, seeking Drona as his deliverer." "84

SECTION XCI.

"Sanjaya said,—'Slaying the force of Dusçasana, the mightycar-warrior Savyasachin, desirous of getting at the ruler of the Sindhus, proceeded against the division of Drona.1 Having approached Drona who was stationed at the entrance of the array, Partha, at Krishna's request, joined his hands and said these words unto Drona:2-Wish me well, O Brahmana, and bless me, saying,—Swasti! Through thy grace I wish to penetrate into this impenetrable array 18 Thou art to me even as my sire, or even as king Yudhishthira the just, or even as Krishna! I tell thee this truly! O sire, O sinless one, even as Açwatthāman deserves to be protected by thee, I also deserve to be protected by thee, O foremost of regenerate ones!5 Through thy grace, O foremost of men, I desire to slay the ruler of the Sindhus in battle! O lord, see that my vow is accomplished !6-

"Sanjaya continued,—'Thus addressed by him, the preceptor, smiling, replied unto him, saying,-O Vibhatsu, without vanquishing me, thou shalt not be able to vanquish Jayadratha!"-Telling him this much, Drona, smiling, covered him with showers of sharp arrows, as also his car and steeds and standard and charioteer.8 Then Arjuna, baffling arrowy showers with his own arrows, rushed against Drona, shooting mightier and more awful shafts.9 Observant of Kshatriya duties, Arjuna then pierced Drona in that battle with nine arrows.10 Cutting the shafts of Arjuna by his own shafts, Drona then pierced both Krishna and Arjuna with many shafts Then, while Arjuna was thinkthat resembled poison or fire.11 ing of cutting off Drona's bow with his arrows, the latter, endued with great valor, fearlessly and quickly cut off, with his shafts, the bowstring of the illustrious Phalguna. he also pierced Phalguna's steeds and standard and chariot-And the heroic Drona covered Phalguna himself with many arrows, smiling the while. Meantime, stringing his large bow anew,14 Partha, that foremost of all persons conversant with arms, getting the better of his preceptor, quickly shot six hundred arrows as if he had taken and shot only one And once more he shot seven hundred other arrows, and then a thousand arrows incapable of being resisted, and ten thousands of other arrows. All these slew many warriors of Drona's array.16 Deeply pierced with those weapons by the mighty and accomplished Partha acquainted with all modes of warfare, many men and steeds and elephants fell down deprived And car-warriors, afflicted by those shafts, fell down from their foremost of cars, deprived of horses and standards and destitute of weapons and life.18 And elephants fell down like summits of hills, or masses of clouds, or large houses, loosened, dispersed, or burnt down by the thunder, the wind, or Struck with Arjuna's shafts, thousands of steeds fell down like swans on the breast of Himavat, struck down by the force of watery currents.20 Like the Sun, that rises at the end of the Yuga, drying up with his rays vast quantities of water, the son of Pandu, by his showers of weapons and arrows, slew vast numbers of car-warriors and steeds and elephants and foot soldiers.21 Then like the clouds covering the Sun, the Dronacloud, with its arrowy showers, covered the Pandava-Sun, whose rays in the shape of thick showers of arrows were scorching in the battle the foremost ones among the Kurus.22 the preceptor struck Dhanajaya at the breast with a long shaft shot with great force and capable of drinking the life of every foe.23 Then Arjuna, deprived of strength, shook in all his limbs like a hill during an Earthquake. Soon, however, regaining his fortitude, Vibhatsu pierced Drona with many winged Then Drona struck Vasudeva with five arrows. he struck Arjuna with three and seventy arrows, and his standard with three.25 Then, O king, the valorous Drona, getting the better of his disciple, within the twinkling of an eye made Arjuna invisible by means of his arrowy showers.26 We then beheld the shafts of Bharadwaja's son falling in continuous lines, and his bow also was seen to present the wonderful as-And those shafts, pect of being incessantly drawn to a circle.27 countless in number, and winged with Kanka feathers, shot by Drona in that battle, incessantly fell, O king, on Dhananjaya

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:40 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

and Vāsudeva.28 Beholding then that battle between Drona and the son of Pandu, Vasudeva of great intelligence began to reflect upon the accomplishment of the (important) task. 20 Then Vāsudeva, addressing Dhananjaya, said these words:-O Pārtha, O Pārtha, O thou of mighty arms, we should not waste time !80 We must go on, avoiding Drona, for a more important task awaits us !- In reply Partha said unto Krishna, -O Keçava, as thou pleasest! 1-Then keeping the mightyarmed Drona to their right, Arjuna proceeded onwards. ing his face round, Vibhatsu proceeded, shooting his shafts.52 Then Drona, addressing Arjuna, said,—Whither dost thou proceed, O son of Pandu! Is it not true that thou ceasest not (to fight) till thou hast vanquished thy foe ?88-

"'Arjuna answered,-Thou art my preceptor and no foe! I am thy disciple and, therefore, like to thy son! Nor is there the man in the whole world who can vanquish thee in battle !34--

"Sanjaya continued,—'Saying these words, the armed Vibhatsu, desirous of slaying Jayadratha, quickly proceeded against the (Kaurava) troops. 36 And while he penetrated into thy army, those high-souled princes of Panchala, viz., Yudhāmanyu and Uttamaujas, followed him as the protectors of his wheels. 36 Then, O king, Jaya, and Kritavarman of the Sātwata race, and the ruler of the Kāmvojas, and Crutāyus, began to oppose the progress of Dhananjaya. 37 And these had ten thousand car-warriors for their followers. The Abhishahas, the Curasenas, the Civis, the Vasatis,38 the Mavellakas, the Lilithyas, the Kaikayas, the Madrakas, the Nārāyana-Gopālas, and the various tribes of the Kāmvojas who had before been vanquished by Karna, all of whom were regarded as very brave, placing Bharadwaja's son at their head, and becoming regardless of their lives, rushed towards Arjuna,40 for resisting that angry hero burning with grief on account of the death of his son, that warrior resembling all-destroying Death himself, clad in mail, conversant with all modes of warfare, prepared to throw away his life in the thick of battle,41—that mighty bowman of great prowess, that tiger among men,-who resembled an infuriate leader of an elephantine herd, and who seemed ready to devour the whole hostile army!48 The battle then that

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:40 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access_use#pd-google commenced was exceedingly fierce and made the hair stand on end, between all those combatants on the one side and Arjuna on the other, desiring to encounter each other. ⁴³ And all of them, uniting together, began to resist that bull among men advancing for the slaughter of Jayadratha, like medicines resisting a raging disease." ⁴⁴

SECTION XCII.

"Sanjaya said,—'Held in check by them, that foremost of car-warriors, viz., Partha of great might and prowess, was quickly pursued by Drona from behind. The son of Pandu. however, like diseases scorching the body, blasted that army, scattering his sharp shafts and resembling on that account the Sun himself scattering his countless rays of light.2 were pierced, and cars with riders were broken and mangled. And umbrellas were cut off and elephants were overthrown. and displaced, and vehicles were deprived of their wheels. And the combatants fled on all sides, exceedingly afflicted with Even thus progressed that fierce battle between those warriors and Arjuna encountering each other. Nothing could be distinguished. With his straight shafts, Arjuna, O monarch, made the hostile army tremble incessantly.4-5 devoted to truth, Arjuna then, of white steeds, desirous of accomplishing his vow, rushed against that foremost of carwarriors, viz., Drona of red steeds.6 Then the preceptor Drona struck his disciple, viz., the mighty bowman Arjuna, with five and twenty straight shafts capable of reaching the very Thereupon Vibhatsu, that foremost of all wielders of weapons, quickly rushed against Drona, shooting arrows capable of baffling the force of counter arrows shot at him.8 into existence then the Brahma weapon, Arjuna of immeasurable soul baffled with his straight shafts those shot so speedily at him by Drona.' The skill we then beheld of Drona was exceedingly wonderful, since Arjuna, though young, and though struggling vigorously, could not pierce Drona with a single shaft.10 Like a mass of clouds pouring torrents of rain, the Drona cloud rained showers of arrows on the Partha mount-

Generated on 2022-03-03-12:40 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

Possessed of great energy, Arjuna received that arrowy downpour, O king, by invoking the Brahma weapon, and cut off all those arrows by arrows of his own.12 Drona then afflicted Partha of white steeds with five and twenty arrows. struck Vasudeva with seventy arrows on the chest and arms.18 Partha then, of great intelligence, smiling the while, resisted the preceptor in that battle who was incessantly shooting sharp arrows.14 Then those two foremost of car-warriors, while thus struck by Drona, avoided that invincible warrior, who resembled the raging Yuga fire.15 Avoiding those sharp shafts shot from Drona's bow, the diadem-decked son of Kunti, adorned with garlands of flowers, began to slaughter the host of the Indeed, avoiding the invincible Drona who stood immovable like the Maināka mountain, Arjuna took up his position between Kritavarman and Sudakshina the ruler of the Kāmvojas.17 Then that tiger among men, viz., the ruler of the Bhojas, coolly pierced that invincible and foremost descendant of Kuru with ten arrows winged with Kanka feathers.18 Then Arjuna pierced him, O monarch, in that battle with a And once more he pierced him with three hundred arrows. other arrows, stupifying that hero of the Satwata The ruler of the Bhojas then, laughing the while, pierced Partha and Vasudeva each with five and twenty arrows.20 Arjuna then, cutting off Kritavarman's bow, pierced him with one and twenty arrows resembling blazing flames of fire or angry snakes of virulent poison. Then Kritavarman, that mighty car-warrior, taking up another bow, pierced Arjuna in the chest, O Bharata, with five arrows. And once more he pierced Partha with five sharp arrows. Then Partha struck him in return in the centre of the chest with nine arrows.28 Beholding the son of Kunti obstructed before the car of Kritavarman, he of Vrishni's race thought that no time should be Then Krishna, addressing Partha, said,-Do not show any mercy to Kritavarman! Disregarding thy relationship (with him), crush and slay him !25—Then Arjuna, stupifying Kritavarman with his arrows, proceeded, on his swift steeds, to the division of the Kāmvojas.26 Seeing Arjuna of white steeds penetrate into the Kamvoja force, Kritavarman

http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-googl Generated on 2022-02-03 12:40 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

became filled with wrath. Shaking his bow with arrow fixed thereon, he then encountered the two Panchala princes. 27 deed, Kritavarman, with his arrows, resisted those two Panchala princes as they advanced, following Arjuna for protecting his Then Kritavarman the ruler of the Bhojas pierced them both with sharp shafts, striking Yudhamanyu with three, and Uttamaujas with four.29 Those two princes in return each pierced him with ten arrows. And once more Yudhamanyu shooting three arrows and Uttamaujas shooting three, to cut off Kritavarman's standard and bow. Then the son of Hridika, taking up another bow, and becoming infuriate with rage, 81 deprived both those warriors of their bows and covered them Then those two warriors, taking up and stringing two other bows, began to pierce Kritavarman.82 while Vibhatsu penetrated into the hostile army. two princes, resisted by Kritavarman, obtained no admittancess into the Dhartarashtra host, although those bulls among men struggled vigorously. Then Arjuna of white steeds quickly afflicted in that battle the divisions opposed to him.84 slayer of foes, however, slew not Kritavarman although he had Beholding Partha thus proceeding, got him within reach. the brave king Crutayudha, 55 filled with wrath, rushed at him, shaking his large bow. And he pierced Partha with three arrows, and Janarddana with seventy.36 And he struck the standard of Partha with a very sharp arrow having a razor-like head. Then Arjuna, filled with wrath, deeply pierced his antagonist with ninety straight shafts like (a rider) striking a mighty elephant with the hook. Crutayudha, however, could not, O king, brook that act of prowess on the part of Pandu's He pierced Arjuna in return with seven and seventy Arjuna then cut off Crutayudha's bow and then his quiver, 39 and angrily struck him on the chest with seven straight Then king Crutayudha, deprived of his senses by wrath, took up another bow40 and struck the son of Vasava with nine arrows on the latter's arms and chest. Then Arjuna, that chastiser of foes, laughing the while, O Bharata, afflicted Crutayudha with many thousands of arrows. And that mighty car-warrior quickly slew also the latter's steeds and chariot-

Endued with great strength, the son of Pandu then pierced his foe with seventy arrows. Then the valiant king Crutayudha, abandoning that steedless car,43 rushed in that encounter against Partha, uplifting his mace. The heroic king Crutayudha was the son of Varuna,44 having for his mother that mighty river of cool water called Parnāçā. mother, O king, had, for the sake of her son, begged Varuna, saying,45—Let this my son become unslayable on Earth !-Varuna, gratified (with her), had said,-I give him a boon highly beneficial to him, 46 viz., a celestial weapon, by virtue of which this thy son will become unslayable on Earth by foes! No man can have immortality.47 O foremost of rivers, every one who hath taken birth must inevitably die! This child, however, will always be invincible by foes in battle,48 through the power of this weapon. Therefore, let thy heart's fever be dispelled !- Having said these words, Varuna gave him, with mantras, a mace.49 Obtaining that mace, Crutayudha became invincible on Earth. Unto him, however, the illustrious Lord of the waters again said, 50 - This mace should not be hurled at one who is not engaged in fight. If hurled at such a person it will come back and fall upon thyself. O illustrious child. (if so hurled) it will then course in an opposite direction and slay the person hurling it !51-It would seem that when his hour came, Crutayudha disobeyed that injunction. With that heroslaying mace he attacked Janārddana.52 The valiant Krishna received that mace on one of his well-formed and stout should-It failed to shake Caurin like the wind failing to shake the mountains of Vindhya.58 That mace, returning unto Crutāyudha himself, struck that brave and wrathful king staying on his car, like an ill-accomplished act of sorcery injuring the performer himself,54 and slaying that hero, fell down on the Beholding the mace turn back and Crutayudha slain,55 loud cries of Alus and Oh arose there among the troops, at the sight of Crutayudha, that chastiser of foes, slain by a weapon of his own. *56 And because, O monarch, Crutayudha had hurled that mace at Janarddana who was not engaged in fighting,

^{*} The original is pleonastic .- T.

it slew him who had hurled it.67 And Crutayudha perished on the field even in the manner that Varuna had indicated. prived of life he fell down on the Earth before the eyes of all the bowmen.58 While falling down, that dear son of Parnaçã shone resplendent like a tall banian with spreading boughs broken by the wind. 59 Then all the troops and even all the principal warriors fled away, beholding Crutayudha, that chastiser of foes, slain.60 Then the son of the ruler of the Kamvojas, viz., the brave Sudhakshina, rushed on his swift steeds against Phalguna that slayer of foes. 61 Partha then, O Bharata, sped seven shafts at him. Those shafts, passing through the body of that hero, entered the Earth.62 Deeply pierced by these shafts sped in battle from Gandiva, Sudakshina pierced Arjuna in return with ten shafts winged with Kanka feathers. 63 And piercing Vasudeva with three shafts, he once more pierced Then, O sire, Partha, cutting off Sudakshi-Partha with five. na's bow, lopped off the latter's standard.64 And the son of Pandu pierced his antagonist with a couple of broad-headed arrows of great sharpness. Sudakshina, however, piercing Partha once more with three arrows, uttered a leonine shout.65 Then the brave Sudakshina, filled with wrath, hurled at the wielder of Gandiva a terrible dart made wholly of iron and decked with bells.66 That dart, blazing as a large meteor, and emitting sparks of fire, approaching that mighty car-warrior, pierced him through and fell down on the Earth.67 struck by that dart and overcome with a swoon, Arjuna soon Then that hero of mighty energy, licking enough recovered. the corners of his mouth,68 that son of Pandu, of inconceivable feats, pierced his foe, with his steeds, standard, bow, and charioteer, with four and ten shafts winged with Kanka feath-With other arrows, countless in number, Partha then cut Sudakshina's car into fragments. And then the son of Pandu pierced Sudakshina, the prince of the Kamvojas, whose purpose and prowess had both been baffled, with a sharp arrow Then the brave prince of the Kamvojas, his in the chest. coat of mail cut off, his limbs weakened, his diadem and Angadas displaced, fell, head downwards, like a pole of Indra when hurled from an engine. Like a beautiful Karnikāra tree in the spring, gracefully growing on a mountain summit with beautiful branches, lying on the Earth when uprooted by the wind, the prince of the Kamvojas lay on the bare ground, deprived of life, though deserving of the costliest bed. 70-78 Decked with costly ornaments, handsome, possessed of eyes that were of a coppery hue, and bearing on his head a garland of gold endued with the effulgence of fire, the mighty-armed Sudakshina, the son of the ruler of the Kamvojas, overthrown by Partha with his shafts, and lying on the Earth, reft of life, looked resplendent like a beautiful mountain with a level top. Then all the troops of thy son fled away, beholding Crutayudha, and Sudakshina the prince of the Kamvojas, slain."74-76

SECTION XCIII.

"Sanjaya said,—'Upon the fall of Sudakshina and of the heroic Crutayudha, O monarch, thy warriors, filled with wrath, rushed with speed at Partha.1 The Abhishahas, the Curasenas, the Civis, the Vasātis, began, O king, to scatter their arrowy showers on Dhananjaya. The son of Pandu then consumed by means of his arrows six hundred of them at once. upon those warriors, terrified, fled away like smaller animals from a tiger. Rallying, they once more surrounded Partha, who was slaying his foes and vanquishing them in battle.4 Dhananjaya then, with shafts sped from Gandiva, speedily felled the heads and arms of the combatants thus rushing upon Not an inch of the field of battle was unstrewn with fallen heads, and the flights of crows and vultures and ravens that hovered over the field seemed to form a cloudy canopy. Seeing their followers thus exterminated, Crutayush and Achyutayush were both filled with wrath. And they continued to contend vigorously with Dhananjaya. Endued with great might, proud, heroic, of noble lineage, and possessed of strength of arms, those two bowmen, O king, solicitous of winning great fame and desirous, for the sake of thy son, to compass the destruction of Arjuna, quickly showered upon the latter their arrowy downpours from at once his right and left.7-9 angry heroes, with a thousand straight shafts, covered Arjuna like two masses of clouds filling a lake.10 Then that foremost of car-warriors, viz., Crutayush, filled with wrath, struck Dhananjaya with a well-tempered and sharp-pointed lance.11 That crusher of foes, then, viz., Arjuna, deeply pierced by his mighty foe, swooned away in that battle, stupifying Keçava also (by that act).12 Meanwhile, the mighty car-warrior Achyutāyush forcibly struck the son of Pāndu with a keen-pointed By that act he seemed to pour an acid upon the wound of the high-souled son of Pandu. Deeply pierced therewith, Partha supported himself by seizing the flagstaff.14 Then a leonine shout was sent forth by all thy troops, O monarch, in the belief that Dhananjaya was deprived of life.16 Krishna also was scrorched with grief upon beholding Partha senseless. Then Keçava comforted Dhananjaya with soothing Then those foremost of car-warriors, (viz., Crutayush and Achyutāyush), of true aim, pouring their arrowy showers on all sides, in that battle, made Dhananjaya and Vasudeva of Vrishni's race invisible with their car and car-wheels and Kuvaras, their steeds and flagstaff and banner. And all this seemed wonderful.17-18 Meanwhile, O Bharata, Vibhatsu slowly regained his senses, like one come back from the very abode of the king of the dead.19 Beholding his car with Keçava overwhelmed with arrows, and seeing also those two antagonists of his staying before him like two blazing fires,20 the mighty car-warrior Partha then invoked into existence the weapon named after Cakra. From that weapon flowed thousands of straight shafts.21 And those shafts struck Crutayush and Achyutāyush, those mighty bowmen. And the arrows shot by the latter, pierced by those of Partha, coursed through the And the son of Pandu, quickly baffling those arrows by the force of his own arrows, began to career over the field, encountering mighty car-warriors. Meanwhile Crutayush and Achyutāyush were, by Arjuna's arrowy showers, deprived of their arms and heads. And they fell down on the Earth like a couple of tall trees broken by the wind.28-24 And the death of Crutayush and the slaughter of Achyutayush created a surprise equal to what men would feel at the sight of the ocean becoming dry,25 Then slaying fifty car-warriors amongst the followers of those two princes, Partha proceeded against the Bharata army, slaying many foremost of warriors.26 Beholding both Crutayush and Achyutayush slain, their sons, those foremost of men, viz., Niyatāyush and Dirghāyush, O Bhārata, both filled with rage, rushed against the son of Kunti, scattering shafts of diverse kinds, and much pained by the calamity that had happened to their sires.27-28 cited with rage, in a moment despatched them both towards Yama's abode, by means of straight shafts.29 And those bulls among Kshatriyas (that were in the Kuru army) were perfectly unable to resist Partha who agitated the Dhartarashtra ranks like an elephant agitating the waters of a lake filled with lotuses. 50 Then thousands of trained elephant-riders amongst the Angas, O monarch, filled with rage, surrounded the son of Pandu with their elephant force. 81 Urged by Duryodhana, many kings also of the West and the South, and many others headed by the ruler of the Kalingas, also surrounded Arjuna, with their elephants huge as hills.82 Partha, however with shafts sped from Gandiva, quickly cut off the heads and arms, decked with ornaments, of those advancing combatants. $8 field of battle, strewn with those heads and arms decked with Angadas, looked like golden stones entwined by And the arms of warriors cut off therewith, while falling down, looked like birds dropping down from trees. 35 And the elephants, pierced with thousands of arrows and shedding blood (from their wounds), looked like hills in the season of rains with liquified red chalk streaming down their sides. 66 Others, slain by Partha with sharp shafts, lay prostrate on the field. And many Mlecchas on the backs of elephants, of diverse kinds of ugly forms, 57 robed in diverse attires, O king, and armed with diverse kinds of weapons, and bathed in blood, looked resplendent as they lay on the field, deprived of life by means of diverse kinds of arrows. 88 And thousands of elephants along with their riders and those on foot that urged them forwards, struck with Partha's shafts, vomitted blood, 50 or uttered shricks of agony, or fell down, or ran ungovernably in all directions. And many, exceedingly frightened, trod down and crushed their own men.40 And many, which were kept

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:40 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:40 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112
Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access_use#pd-googl

as reserves and which were fierce as snakes of virulent poison, did the same.41 And many terrible Yavanas and Pāradas and Cakas and Valhikas, and Mlecchas born of the cow (belonging to Vacishtha), of fierce eyes, accomplished in smiting, looking like messengers of Death, and all conversant with the deceptive powers of the Asuras, and many Darvātisāras and Daradas and Pundras numbering by thousands, in hundreds and thousands of bands, and together forming a force that was countless, 42-43 began to shower their sharp shafts upon the son of Pandu, Accomplished in various modes of warfare, those Mlecchas covered Arjuna with their arrows.44 Upon them Dhananjaya also quickly poured his arrows. And those arrows, shot from Gandiva, looked like flights of locusts, as they coursed through the welkin.45 Indeed, Dhananjaya, having by his arrows caused a shade over the troops like that of the clouds, slew, by the force of his weapons, all the Mlecchas with heads completely shaved or half-shaved or covered with mattled locks, impure Those dwellers of hills, pierced in habits, and of crooked faces. with arrows,46-47 those denizens of mountain caves, fled away And ravens and Kankas and wolves, with great glee, drank the blood of those elephants and steeds and their Melccha riders overthrown on the field by Partha with his sharp shafts, Indeed, Arjuna caused a fierce river to flow there whose current consisted of blood. (Slain) foot-soldiers and steeds and cars and elephants constituted its embankments. The showers of shafts poured constitued its rafts and the hair of the combatants formed its moss and weeds. 48-50 And the fingers cut off from the arms of warriors, formed its little fishes. And that river was as awful as Death itself at the end of the Yuga. river of blood flowed towards the region of Yama. bodies of slain elephants, floating on it, obstructed its current. 62 And the Earth was covered all over with the blood of Kshatriyas and of elephants and steeds and their riders, and of car-warriors, and became one bloody expanse like to what is seen when Indra showers a heavy down-pour covering uplands and lowlands And that bull among Kshatriyas despatched six thousand horsemen and again a thousand foremost of Kshatrıyas in that battle into the jaws of Death. Thousands of well-equipt 33 elephants, pierced with arrows,52-54 lay prostrate on the field like hills struck down by thunder. And Arjuna careered over the field, slaying steeds and car-warriors and elephants, like an elephant of rent temples crushing a forest of reeds. As a conflagration, urged by the wind, consumes a dense forest of trees and creepers and plants and dry wood and grass, even so did that fire, viz., Pandu's son Dhanajaya, having shafts for its flames and urged on by the Krishna wind, angrily consume thy forest of warriors. Making the terraces of cars empty, and causing the Earth to be strewn with human bodies,56-53 Dhananjava seemed to dance, bow in hand, in the midst of those vast masses of men. Deluging the Earth with blood by means of his shafts endued with the strength of the thunder,50 Dhananjaya, excited with wrath, penetrated into the Bharata host. thus proceeding, Crutayush the ruler of the Amvashthas resisted Arjuna then, O sire, speedily felled, with keen shafts equipt with Kanka feathers, the steeds of Crutayush struggling And cutting off, with other shafts, the bow also of his antagonist, Partha careered over the field. The ruler of the Amvashthas then, with eyes troubled in wrath, took up a mace62 and approached the mighty car-warrior Partha and Keçava also in that battle. Then that hero, uplifting his mace. stopped the (progress of Arjuna's) car by its strokes, and struck Keçava also therewith. Then that slayer of hostile heroes, viz... Arjuna, beholding Keçava struck with that mace, became filled with wrath. And then, O Bharata, that hero, with his shafts equipt with wings of gold, covered the ruler of the Amvashthas. that foremost of car-warriors, armed with mace, like the clouds covering the risen Sun. With other shafts, Partha then cut off the mace of that high-souled warrior into fragments, reducing it almost to dust. And all this seemed highly wonderful. Beholding that mace of his cut off into fragments, the ruler of the Amvashthas took up another huge mace, 68-67 and repeatedly struck both Arjuna and Keçava therewith. Then Arjuna, with a couple of sharp broad-faced arrows, cut off the uplifted arms of Crutayush which held the mace, those arms that looked like a couple of Indra's standards, and with another winged arrow, he cut off the head of that warrior. Thus slain, Crutayush fell down, O king, filling the Earth with a loud noise, 68-69 like a tall standard of Indra when the strings, tying it to the engine on which it is set, are cut off. Surrounded then on all sides by ranks of cars and by hundreds upon hundreds of elephants and cars, Pārtha became invisible like the Sun covered with clouds."

SECTION XCIV.

"Sanjaya said,—'After the son of Kunti, impelled by the desire of slaying the ruler of the Sindhus, had penetrated (into the Bharata host), having pierced through the irresistible divisions of both Drona and the Bhojas, after the heir of the ruler of the Kāmvojas, viz., prince Sudakshina, had been slain, after Savyasāchin had killed the valiant Crutāyudha also, after the (Kuru) ranks had fled away and confusion had set in on all sides, thy son, beholding his army broken, repaired to Drona.3 Quickly coming on his car to Drona, Duryodhana said:-That tiger among men (viz., Arjuna), having crushed this vast host, hath already passed through it ! Aided by thy judgment, think now what should be done next for the slaughter of Arjuna in view of this awful carnage ! Blessed be thou, adopt such measures that that tiger among men may not succeed in slaying Jayadratha! Thou art our sole refuge !5 Like a raging conflagration consuming heaps of dry grass and straw, the Dhananjaya-fire, urged by the wind of his wrath, is consuming the grass and straw constituted by my troops! O scorcher of foes, seeing the son of Kunti pass, having pierced through this host, those warriors that are protecting Jayadratha have become doubtful (of their ability to resist Partha). O foremost of those acquainted with Brahma, it was the settled conviction of the kings that Dhananjaya would never, with life, succeed in transgressing Drona! O thou of great splendour, when, however, Partha has pierced through thy division in thy very sight, I regard my army to be very weak. Indeed, I think that I have no troops!10 O thou that art highly blessed, I know thou art devoted to the welfare of the Pandavas! I lose my reason, O regenerate one, in thinking what should be done!" To the best of my power, O regenerate one, I behave myself well with thee! To the best of my power I also seek to gratify thee! Thou, however, dost not bear all this in mind!12 O thou of immeasurable prowess, although we are ever devoted to thee, still thou never seekest our welfare! Thou art always well-pleased with the Pāndavas and always engaged in doing us evil!13 deriving thy livelihood from us, still thou art engaged in doing evil to us! I was not aware that thou art but a razor steeped in honey!14 If thou hadst not granted me the boon about humiliating and checking the Pandavas, I would never have prevented the ruler of the Sindhus from returning to his own country !15 Fool that I am, expecting protection from thee, I assured the ruler of the Sindhus, and through my folly offered him as a victim to Death!16 A man may escape, having en-But there is no escape for tered the very jaws of Death. Jayadratha, when once he comes within reach of Dhanajaya's O thou that ownest red steeds, do that by which the ruler of the Sindhus may yet be saved! Do not give way to wrath on hearing the delirious ravings of my afflicted self! O, protect yet the ruler of the Sindhus!18-

"'Drona said,-I do not find fault with thy words! art as dear to me as Açwatthāman himself! I tell thee truly! Act, however, now according to my words, O king !19 Of all His steeds also are drivers of cars, Krishna is the foremost. the foremost of their species. Obtaining only a very small space, Dhananjaya can pass very quickly through it.20 thou not that the shafts of the diadem-decked (Arjuna), countless in number, shot from his bow, are falling full two miles behind his car as he is proceeding?21 Burdened with the weight of years, I am now incapable of going so fast. The whole army of the Parthas again is now close upon our van !22 Yudhishthira also should be seized by me. Even so, O thou of mighty arms, hath been the vow made by me in the presence of all bowmen and in the midst of all the Kshatriyas [98 O king, he is now staying at the head of his troops, abandoned by Dhananjaya! I sha'l not, therefore, abandoning the gate of our array, fight with Phalguna 124 It is meet that thyself, properly supported, shouldst fight with that foe of thine, who is alone, and who is thy equal in lineage and feats! Do not fear! Go and fight with him! Thou art the ruler of the world! Thou art a king! Thou art a hero! Possessed of fame, thou art accomplished in vanquishing (thy foes)! O brave subjugator of hostile towns, go thyself to that spot where Dhananjaya the son of Prithā is!—26

"'Duryodhana said,—O preceptor, how is it possible for me to resist Dhananjaya who has transgressed even thee that art the foremost of all wielders of arms?27 The very chief of the celestials, armed with the thunder, is capable of being vanquished in battle, but Arjuna. that subjugator of hostile towns. cannot be vanquished in battle !28 He by whom Hridikā's son (Kritavarman), the ruler of the Bhojas, and thyself equal unto a celestial, have both been vanquished by the power of his weapons, he by whom Crutayush hath been slain,29 as also Sudakshina, and king Crutayudha too, he by whom both Crutāyush and Achyutāyush and myriads of Mlecchas also have been slain. 50 how can I contend in battle with that invincible son of Pandu, that accomplished master of weapons, who is even like an all-consuming fire?" How also dost thou think I am dependent on me competent to fight with him today? Protect my fame !- 32 thee like a slave!

"'Drona said,—Thou sayest truly, O thou of Kuru's race, that Dhananjava is irresistible! I, however, will do that by which thou shalt be able to bear him !38 Let all the bowmen in the world behold today the wonderful fact of the son of Kunti being held in check by thee in the very sight of Vasudeva!84 This thy armour of gold, O king, I will tie on thy body in such a way that no weapon used by man will be able to strike thee in battle !35 If even the three worlds with the Asuras and the celestials, the Yakshas, the Uragas, and the Rakshasas, together with all human beings, fight with thee today, thou needst still entertain no fear !"6 Neither Krishna, nor the son of Kunti, nor any other wielder of weapons in battle. will be able to pierce this armour of thine with arrows!37 that coat of mail, quickly go thou today against the angry Arjuna in battle! He will not be able to bear thee! 88-

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:40 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

"Sanjaya said,—'Having said these words, Drona, that foremost of persons conversant with Brahma, touching water, and duly uttering certain mantras, speedily donned that highly wonderful and bright armour on Duryodhana's body, for the victory of thy son in that dreadful battle, and causing (by that act) all persons there to be filled with amazement. 89-40 Drona said,—Let the Vedas, and Brahman, and the Brahmanas, bless thee! Let all the higher classes of reptiles be a source of blessing to thee, O Bharata!41 Let Yayati, and Nahusha, and Dhundumara, and Bhagiratha, and the other royal sages, all do what is beneficial to thee! Let blessings be to thee from creatures having but one leg, and from those that have many legs! Let blessings be to thee, in this great battle, from creatures that have no legs!48 Let Swaha, and Swadha, and Cachi, also, all do what is beneficial to thee! O sinless one, let Lakshmi and Arandhati too do what is beneficial to thee ! Let Asita, and Devala, and Vicwamitra, and Angiras, and Vaçishtha, and Kaçyapa, O king, do what is beneficial to thee !45 Let Dhātri, and the lord of the worlds, and the points of the compass, and the regents of those points, and the sixfaced Kārtikeya, all give thee what is beneficial!46 divine Vivaswat benefit thee completely! Let the four elephants, of the four quarters, the Earth, the firmament, the planets,47 and he who is underneath the Earth and holds her (on his head), O king, viz., Cesha, that foremost of snakes, give thee what is for thy benefit! 48 O son of Gandhari, formerly the Asura named Vritra, displaying his prowess in battle, had defeated the best of celestials in battle. The latter, numbering thousands upon housands, with mangled bodies, 49—those denizens of heaven, - with Indra at their head, deprived of energy and might all repaired to Brahman and sought his protection, afeared of the great Asura Vritra!50 And the gods said,—[O best of gods, O foremost of celestials, be thou the refuge of the gods now crushed by Vritra! Indeed, rescue us from this great fear !]51—Then Brahman, addressing Vishnu staying beside him as also those best of celestials headed by Cakra, said unto them that were all cheerless, these words fraught with truth:52-[Indeed, the gods with Indra at their head, and the Brahmanas also, should ever be protected by The energy of Tashtri is invincible from which Vritra hath been created. 43 Having in days of yore performed ascetic penances for a million of years, Tashtri then, ye gods, created Vritra, obtaining permission thereto from Mahecwara. 4 mighty foe of yours hath succeeded in smiting you through the grace of that god of gods! Without going to the place where Cankara stayeth, ye cannot see the divine Hara !55 ing seen that god, ye will be able to vanquish Vritra! fore, go ye without delay to the mountains of Mandara! stayeth that origin of ascetic penances, that destroyer of Daksha's sacrifice, 56 that wielder of Pināka, that lord of all creatures, that slayer of the Asura called Bhaganetra!]-Thus addressed by Brahman, the gods, proceeding to Mandara with Brahman in their company,57 beheld there that heap of energy, that Supreme god endued with the splendour of a million Suns. Seeing the gods, Maheçwara welcomed them and enquired what he was to do for them.58 -[The sight of my person can never be Let the fruition of your desires proceed from this!] -Thus addressed by him, the dwellers of heaven replied,59-[We have been deprived of our energy by Vritra! the refuge of the dwellers of heaven! Behold, O lord, our bodies beaten and bruised by his strokes! We seek thy pro-Be thou our refuge, O Maheçwara!]60-The god of gods, called Sarva, then said,-[Ye gods, it is well known to you how this action, fraught with great strength, terrible, and incapable of being resisted by persons destitute of ascetic merit, originated, springing from the energy of Tashtri, (the divine As regards myself, it is certainly my duty to renartificer) !61 der aid to the dwellers of heaven! O Cakra, take this effulgent armour from off my body. And, O chief of the celestials, put it on, mentally uttering these mantras !]-62

"'Drona continued,—Having said these words, the boongiving (Civa) gave that armour with the mantras (to be uttered by the wearer). Protected by that armour, Cakra proceeded against the host of Vritra in battle. And although diverse kinds of weapons were hurled at him in that dreadful battle, yet the joints of that armour could not be cut open. Then the lord of the celestials slew Vritra, and afterwards gave unto Angiras that armour whose joints were made up of mantras. And Angiras imparted those mantras to his son Vrihaspati having a knowledge of all mantras. And Vrihaspati imparted the knowledge to Agniveçya of great intelligence. And Agniveçya imparted it to me, and it is with the aid of those mantras, O best of kings, that I, for protecting thy body, tie this armour on thy body! 57.—'

"Sanjaya continued,--'Having said these words, Drona, that bull among preceptors, once more addressed thy son of great splendour, saying, 68-O king, I put this armour on thy body, joining its pieces with the aid of Brahma strings. In days of yore Brahman himself had thus put it on Vishnu in battle !69 Even as Brahman himself had put this celestial armour on Cakra in the battle caused by the abduction of Tārakā, I put it on thee !70—Having thus, with mantras, donned that armour duly on Duryodhana, the regenerate Drona sent the king to battle.74 And the mighty-armed king, cased in armour by the high-souled preceptor, and accompanied by a thousand car-warriors of the Trigarta country, all accomplished in smiting,72 and a thousand infuriate elephants endued with great prowess, and a hundred thousand horse, and many other mighty car-warriors,78 proceeded towards the car of Arjuna. And the mighty-armed king proceeded, with the noise of diverse kinds of musical instruments, against his foe, like Virochana's son (Vali in days of yore). Then, O Bharata, a loud uproar arose among thy troops, beholding the Kuru king proceeding like a fathomless ocean," "75

SECTION XCV.

"Sanjaya said,—'After that bull among men, viz., Duryo-dhana, had set out from behind, following Pārtha and him of Vrishni's race, O king, both of whom had penetrated into the Kaurawa army, the Pāndavas, accompanied by the Somakas, quickly rushed against Drona with loud shouts. And then commenced the battle (between them and Drona's troops). And the battle that took place between the Kurus and the Pāndavas at the gate of the array, was fierce and awful, making the hair to stand on end. The sight filled the spectators with wonder. O king, the Sun was then in the meridian. encounter, O monarch, was truly such that we had never seen or heard of its like before. The Parthas headed by Dhrishtadyumna, all accomplished in smiting and arrayed properly, covered the troops of Drona with showers of arrows. selves also, placing Drona, that foremost of all wielders of weapons, at our head, covered the Parthas headed by Prishata's son with our shafts.6 The two hosts, adorned with cars and looking beautiful, then appeared like two mighty masses of clouds in the summer sky, driven towards each other by opposite winds. Encountering each other, the two hosts increased their impetuosity, like the rivers Gangā and Yamunā swollen with water during the season of rains.* Having diverse kinds of weapons for the winds that ran before them, teeming with elephants and steeds and cars, charged with lightning constituted by the maces wielded by the warriors, the fierce and mighty cloud formed by the Kuru host, urged on by the Drona-tempest, and pouring incessant shafts that constituted its torrents of rain, sought to quench the raging Pandava-fire.10 Like an awful hurricane in summer agitating the ocean, that best of Brahmanas, viz., Drona, agitated the Pandava host.16 Exerting themselves with great vigor, the Pandavas rushed towards Drona alone for piercing his host, like a mighty torrent of water towards a strong embankment for sweeping it away.12 Like an immovable hill resisting the fiercest current of water, Drona, however, resisted in that battle the enraged Pandavas and Panchālas and Kekayas.13 Many other kings also, endued with great strength and courage, attacking them from all sides, began to resist the Pandavas.14 Then that tiger among men, viz., the son of Prishata, uniting with the Pandavas, began repeatedly to strike Drona, for piercing the hostile host.15 Indeed, as Drona showered his arrows on Prishata's son, even so did the latter shower his on Drona.16 Having scimitars and swords for the winds that blew before it, well-equipt with darts and lances and sabres, with the bowstring constituting its lightning, and the (twang of the) bow for its roars, the Dhrishtadyumna-cloud'? poured on all sides torrents of weapons as its showers of stones.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:40 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

Slaving foremost of car-warriors and large numbers of steeds, the son of Prishata seemed to deluge the hostile divisions (with his arrowy downpours).18 And the son of Prishata, by his arrows, turned Drona away from all those tracks amid the car-divisions of the Pandavas through which that here attempted to pass striking the warriors there with his shafts.19 And although Drona struggled vigorously in that battle, yet his host, encountering Dhrishtadyumna, became divided into One of these retreated towards Kritavarman the chief of the Bhojas, another towards Jalasandha; and another, fiercely slaughtered the while by the Pandavas, proceeded towards Drona himself.21 Drona, that foremost of car-warriors, repeatedly united his troops. The mighty warrior Dhrishtadyumna as often smote and separated them.22 Indeed, the Dhartarashtra force, divided into three bodies, was slaughtered by the Pandavas and the Srinjayas fiercely, like a herd of cattle in the woods by many beasts of prey, when unprotected by herds-And people thought that in that dreadful battle, it was Death himself who was swallowing the warriors first stupified by Dhrishtadyumna.24 As a kingdom of a bad king is destroyed by famine and pestilence and robbers, even so was thy host afflicted by the Pandavas.25 And in consequence of the rays of the Sun falling upon the weapons and the warriors, and of the dust raised by the soldiers, the eyes of all were painfully afflict-Upon the Kaurava host being divided into three bodies during that dreadful carnage by the Pandavas, Drona, filled with wrath, began to consume the Panchalas with his shafts.27 And while engaged in crushing those divisions and exterminating them with his shafts, the form of Drona became like that of the blazing Yuga fire.28 That mighty car-warrior pierced cars, elephants, and steeds, and foot-soldiers, in that battle, each with only a single arrow, (and never employing more than one in any case).29 There then was no warrior in the Pandava army who was capable of bearing, O lord, the arrows shot from the bow of Drona. Scorched by the rays of the Sun and blasted by the shafts of Drona, the Pandava divisions there began to reel about on the field. And thy host also, similarly slaughtered by Prishata's son, seemed to blaze up at every point like a dry forest one fire.32 And while both Drona and Dhrishtadyumna were slaughtering the two hosts, the warriors of both armies, in utter disregard of their lives, fought everywhere to the utmost extent of their prowess.88 Neither in thy host nor in that of the enemy, O bull of Bharata's race, was there a single warrior who fled away from the battle through fear. 4 Those uterine brothers, viz., Vivingçati and Chitrasena and the mighty car-warrior Vikarna, surrounded Kunti's son Bhimasena on all sides. 25 And Vinda and Anuvinda of Avanti, and Kshemadhurti of great prowess, supported thy three sons (who contended against Bhimasena).86 King Vālhika of great energy and noble parentage, that mighty car-warrior, with his own troops and counsellors, resisted the sons of Draupadi. 87 vya the chief of the Govasanas, with a thousand foremost warriors, faced the son, of great prowess, of the king of the Kāçis and resisted him.38 King Calya the ruler of the Madras surrounded the royal Yudhishthira the son of Kunti, who resembled a blazing fire. 39 The brave and wrathful Dusçasana, properly supported by his own divisions, angrily proceeded, in that battle, against Sātyaki, that foremost of car-warriors.40 self, with my own troops, cased in mail and equipt with weapons, and supported by four hundred foremost of bowmen, resisted Chekitāna.*41 Cakuni with seven hundred Gandhara warriors armed with bows, darts and swords, resisted the son of Mādri, (viz., Sahadeva).48 Vinda and Anuvinda of Avanti, those two great bowmen, who had, for the sake of their friend (Duryodhana), uplifted their weapons, disregarding their lives, encountered Virāta the king of the Matsyas.43 King Vālhika, exerting himself vigorously, resisted the mighty and unvanquished Cikhandin the son of Yajnasena, that here capable of resisting all foes.44 The chief of Avanti, with the Sauviras. and the cruel Pravadrakas, resisted the wrathful Dhrishtadyumna the prince of the Panchalas.45 Alayudha quickly rushed against the brave Rākshasa Ghatotkacha of cruel deeds who was wrathfully advancing to battle.46 The mighty car-warrior Kuntibhoja, accompanied by a large force, resisted Alamvusha, that prince of Rākshasas, of fierce mein.47 Thus, O Bhārata, hundreds of separate encounters between the warriors of thy army and theirs took place.

^{*} This sloka occurs in all the texts. It would seem, therefore, that Sanjaya was not always a witness only of the battle for narrating what he saw to Dhritarāshtra, but somtimes at least took part in the battle.

"'As regards the ruler of the Sindhus, he remained in the rear of the whole army, protected by many foremost of bowmen and car-warriors numbering Kripa amongst them.48 the ruler of the Sindhus had for the protectors of his wheels two of the foremost warriors, viz, the son of Drona on his right, O king, and the Suta's son (Karna) on the left.49 for protecting his rear he had a number of warriors headed by Somadatta's son, viz., Kripa, and Vrishasena, and Cala, and the invincible Calya,50 who were conversant with policy and were mighty bowmen accomplished in battle. And the Kuru warriors, having made these arrangements for the protection of the ruler of the Sindhus, fought (with the Pandavas.)' "54

SECTION XCVI.

"Sanjaya said,—'Listen, O king, to me as I describe to thee the wonderful battle that then took place between the Kurus and the Pandavas. Approaching Bharadwaja's son who was staying at the gate of his array, the Parthas battled vigorously for piercing through Drona's division.2 And Drona also. accompanied by his forces, desirous of protecting his own array, battled with the Parthas, seeking glory.3 Vinda and Anuvinda of Avanti, excited with wrath and desirous of benefiting thy son, struck Virāta with ten shafts.4 Virāta also, O king, approaching those two warriors of great prowess staying in battle, fought with them and their followers.5 The battle that took place between these was fierce in the extreme, and blood ran And it resembled an encounter in the woods in it like water. between a lion and a couple of mighty elephants with rent temples.6 The mighty son of Yajnasena forcibly struck king Valhika in that battle with fierce and sharp shafts capable of penetrating into the very vitals.7 Valhika also, filled with wrath, deeply pierced Yajnasena's son with nine straight shafts of golden wings and whetted on stone.8 And that battle between those two warriors became exceedingly fierce, characterised as it was by dense showers of shafts and darts. enhanced the fears of the timid and the joy of heroes.9 arrows shot by them entirely covered the welkin and all the points of the compass so that nothing could any longer be dis-And Caivya the king of the Govasanas, at the head of his troops, fought in that battle with that mighty car-warrior the prince of the Kāçis, like an elephant battling with an-The king of the Vālhikas, excited with wrath, fighting against those (five) mighty car-warriors, viz., the sons of Draupadi, looked resplendent like the mind contending against the five senses.12 And those five princes also, O foremost of embodied beings, fought with that antagonist of theirs, shooting their arrows from all sides, like the objects of the senses for ever battling with the body.18 Thy son Dusçasana struck Sātyaki of Vrishni's race with nine straight shafts of keen Deeply pierced by that strong and great bowman, Sātyaki of prowess incapable of being baffled, was partially deprived of his senses.15 Comforted soon, he of Vrishni's race then quickly pierced thy son, that mighty car-warrior, with ten shafts winged with Kanka feathers.16 Piercing each other deeply and afflicted with each other's shafts, they looked resplendent, O king, like two Kingukas decked with flowers.17 Afflicted with the arrows of Kuntibhoja, Alamvusha, filled with wrath, looked like a beautiful Kinguka graced with its flowering burthen.18 The Rākshasa then, having pierced Kuntibhoja with many arrrows, uttered awful shouts at the head of thy host.12 And as those heroes fought with each other in that battle, they seemed to all the troops to resemble Cakra and the Asura Jambha in days of old.20 The two sons of Mādri, filled with wrath, fiercely grinded with their shafts the Gandhara prince Cakuni who had offended against them greatly.21 carnage, O monarch, that set in was awful. Originated by thee, nurtured by Karna,22 and kept up by thy sons, the fire of wrath (of the Pandavas) hath swelled now, O monarch, and is ready to consume the whole Earth !28 Forced to turn his back on the field by the two sons of Pandu with their shafts, Cakuni, unable to put forth his valour, knew not what to do.24 ing him turn back, those mighty car-warriors, viz., the two sons of Pandu, once more showered their arrows on him like two masses of clouds pouring torrents of rain on a mighty hill.25 Struck with countless straight shafts, the son of Suvala fled towards the division of Drona, borne by his swift steeds.26 brave Ghatotkacha rushed towards the Rākshasa Alāyudha in that battle, with impetuosity much short of what he was capable.27 The bttale between those two became beautiful to behold, like that which in days of yore had taken place between Rama and Ravana. King Yudhishthira, having in that battle pierced the ruler of the Madras with five hundred arrows, once more pierced him with seven.29 Then commenced that battle between them which was exceedingly wonderful, O monarch, which resembled that, in days of yore, between the Asura Camvara and the chief the celestials. 50 Thy sons Vivingcati and Chitrasena and Vikarna, surrounded by a large force, battled with Bhimasena." "81

SECTION XCVII.

"Sanjaya said,-'When that fierce battle making the hair to stand on end, commenced, the Pandavas rushed against the Kauravas who had been divided into three bodies.1 rushed against the mighty-armed Jalasandha, and Yudhishthira. at the head of his troops, rushed, in that battle, against Kritavarman.2 And Dhrishtadyumna, O king, scattering his shafts like the Sun shooting his rays, rushed against Drona. Then commenced that battle between all the bowmen, eager for the encounter, of the Kurus and the Pandavas excited with wrath. And during the progress of that terrible carnage, when all the warriors were battling with one another fearlessly,5 the mighty Drona fought with the mighty prince of the Panchalas. the clouds of arrows he shot in that encounter filled all spectators with wonder. And Drona and the prince of the Panchalas, cutting off the heads of men by thousands, scattered them on the field of battle, making the latter resemble a forest of lotuses. In every division were soon strewn on the ground robes.

http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-googl Generated on 2022-02-03 12:40 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized , and ornaments and weapons, and standards and coats of mail. And golden coats of mail dyed with blood looked like clouds charged with lightning.9 Other mighty car-warriors, drawing their large bows measuring full six cubits long, felled with their shafts elephants and steeds and men.10 In that dreadful encounter of arms between brave and high-souled warriors, swords and shields and bows and heads and coats of mail were seen lying scattered about.11 Innumerable headless trunks were seen to rise up, O king, in the midst of that fierce battle.12 vultures and Kankas and crows and jackalls and swarms of other carnivorous animals, O sire, were seen there,18 eating the flesh of fallen men and steeds and elephants, or drinking their blood, or dragging them by the hair, or licking or pecking, O king, at their marrow,14 or dragging their bodies and severed limbs, or rolling their heads on the ground.15 Warriors skilled in battle, accomplished in weapons, and firmly resolved on fight, struggled vigorously in the combat, solicitous only of fame.16 Many were the combatants that careered over the field, performing the diverse evolutions of swordsmen. With sabres and darts and lances and spears and axes,17 with maces and spiked clubs and other kinds of weapons, and with even bare arms, men who had entered the arena of battle, filled with rage, slew one another.18 And car-warriors fought with car-warriors, and horsemen with horsemen, and elephants with foremost of elephants, and foot-soldiers with foot-soldiers.19 And many infuriate elephants, as if perfectly mad, uttered loud shrieks and slew one another, after the manner they do in sporting arenas.20

"'During the progress, O king, of that battle in which the combatants fought without any regard for one another, Dhrishtadyumna caused his own steeds to be mixed up with those of Those steeds endued with the speed of the wind, that were white as pigeons and red as blood, thus mixed with one another in battle, looked exceedingly beautiful.22 Indeed, they looked resplendent like coulds charged with lightning. that slayer of hostile heroes, viz., the heroic Dhrishtadyumna, the son of Prishata beholding, Drona, O Bharata, arrived so near, cast off his bow and took up his sword and shield, for achieving a difficult feat.23-24 Seizing the shaft of Drona's car,

^{*} The words tatcainyanyabhyapujayan seem to be unmeaning in this connection. The Bengali translators, unable to do anything with them, have left them out.-T.

SECTION XCVIII.

"Dhritarāshta said,—'After that shaft of Drona had been cut off and Dhrishtadyumna thus rescued, O Sanjaya, by Yuyudhāna, that foremost one of the Vrishni race,' what did that great bowman, that foremost of all wielders of weapons, viz., Drona, do in battle unto that tiger among men, viz., the the grandson of Cini?"

"Sanjaya said.—'Then Drana, like a mighty snake, having wrath for his poison, his stretched bow for his wide-open mouth, his sharp shafts for his teeth and whetted arrows for his fangs, with eyes red as copper from rage, and breathing hard,—that mighty hero among men, perfectly fearless,-borne on his red steeds of great speed that seemed to soar into the skies or get at the top of a mountain, rushed towards Yuyudhana, scattering his arrows equipt with golden wings. 5-5 Then that sujugator of hostile cities, that hero of Cini's race, invincible in battle, beholding that irresistible Drona-cloud having showers of arrows for its watery downpour, the rattle of car-wheels for its roar, the outstretched bow for its volume, long shafts for its lightning flashes, darts and swords for its thunder, wrath for the winds preceding it, and urged on by those steeds that constituted the hurricane (impelling it forwards), rush towards him, addressed his charioteer and smilingly said, 6-8-O Suta, proceed quickly and cheerfully, urging the steeds to their greatest speed, against that heroic Brahmana fallen off from the duties of his order, that refuge of Dhritarashtra's son, that dispeller of the (Kuru) king's sorrows and fears, that preceptor of all the princes, that warrior ever boastful of his priwess !9-10-Then the excellent steeds of silvery hue belonging to him of Madhu's race, endued with the speed of the wind, quickly proceeded towards Drona.11 Then those two chastisers of foes, viz., Drona and Cini's grandson, fought with each other, each striking the other with thousands of shafts.12 Those two bulls among men filled the welkin with their arrowy showers. deed, the two heroes covered the ten points of the compass with their shafts.18 And they poured on each other their shafts like two clouds pouring their contents (on the Earth) on the expira-The Sun became invisible. The very wind tion of summer. And in consequence of those showers of ceased to blow.14 shafts filling the welkin, a continuous and thick gloom was caused there that became unbearable to the other heroes.15 when the shafts of Drona and Cini's grandson had caused that gloom there, none beheld any cessation in shooting in either of They were both quick in the use of weapons, and they were both looked upon as lions among men. The sound produced by those torrent of arrows, shot by both, striking against one another,16-17 was heard to resemble the sound of the thunder The forms of heroic warriors pierced with hurled by Cakra. long shafts looked like those of snakes, O Bharata, bit by snakes Brave warriors incessantly heard the twangs of virulent poison. of their bows and the sounds of their palms 18-19 to resemble the sound of thunder falling upon summits of mountains. cars of both those warriors, O king, their steeds, and their charioteers,20 pierced with shafts of golden wings, became beautiful to behold. Fierce was the downpour, O monarch, of shafts that were bright and staight and that looked resplendent like snakes of virulent poison freed from their sloughs. brellas of both were cut off, as also the standards of both.21-22 And both of them were covered with blood, and both were inspired with the hope of victory. With blood trickling down every limb of theirs, they resembled a couple of elephants with secretions trickling down their bodies.28 And they continued to strike each other with fatal shafts. The roars and shouts and other cries, of the soldiers, the blare of conchs and the beat of drums,24 ceased, O king, for none uttered any sound. Indeed, all the divisions became silent, and all the warriors stopped from fighting.25 People, filled with curiosity, became spectators of that single combat. Car-warriors and elephant-riders and horsemen and foot-soldiers,26 surrounding those two bulls among men, witnessed their encounter with steadfast eyes. And the elephant divisions stood still; and so also the horse divisions;37 and so also the car-divisions. All stood still, disposed in array. Variegated with pearls and corals, decked with gems and gold,28

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:40 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-googl

adorned with standards and ornaments, with coats of mail made of gold, with triumphal banners, with the rich housings of elephants, with fine blankets, 29 with bright and sharp weapons, with yak-tails, graced with gold and silver, on the heads of steeds, so with garlands round the frontal globes of elephants and rings round their tusks, O Bharata, the Kuru and the Pandava hosts then looked like a mass of clouds at the close of summer, decked with rows of cranes and myriads of fireflies (under them) and adorned with rainbows and flashes of light-Both our men and those of Yundhishthira, $1-82 beheld that battle between Yuyudhana and the high-souled Drona; the gods also, headed by Brahman and Soma, and the Siddhas, and the Chāranas, and the Vidyādharas, and the great Snakes, saw it, stationed on their foremost of sky-ranging cars. beholding the diverse motions forward and backward, of those lions among men, and their acts of striking each other, the spectators were filled with wonder. And both endued with great strength, Drona and Sātyaki, displaying their lightness of hand in the use of weapons, began to pierce each other with Then he of Daçarha's race, with his mighty shafts, cut off those of the illustrious Drona in that battle, and then, within a moment, the latter's bow also. Within, however, the twinkling of an eye, the son of Bharadwaja took up another bow and stringed it. Even that bow of his was cut off by Drona then, with great speed, waited with another bow in hand. 88-38 As often, however, as Drona stringed his bow. Sātvaki cut it off. And this he did for full nine and seven Beholding then that superhuman feat of Yuyudhana in battle, Drona, O monarch, thought in his mind,—This force of weapons that I see in this foremost one among the Satwatas exists in Rāma and Dhananjaya and was seen also in Kārttavirya and that tiger among men, viz., Bhishma !- The son of Bharadwāja, therefore, mentally applauded the prowess of Sātyaki. 85-41 Beholding that lightness of hand equal unto that of Vasava himself, that foremost of regenerate ones, that first of all persons conversant with weapons, was highly gratified with Madha-And the gods also, with Vasava at their head, were gratified with it.42 The gods and the Gandharvas, O monarch, had never before witnessed that lightness of hand of the quickly moving Yuyudhāna,48 although they and the Siddhas and the Chāranas had been acquainted with the feats of which Drona was capable. Then Drona, that foremost of persons acquainted with weapons, that grinder of Kshatriyas, taking up another Sātyaki, however, baffling those bow, aimed some weapons. weapons with the illusion of his own weapons,41-45 struck him some sharp shafts. All this seemed highly wonderful. . Beholding that superhuman feat of his in battle, that feat of which nobody else was capable,46 and which displayed very great skill, those amongst thy warriors that were judges of skill, applauded it. Sātyaki shot the same weapons that Drona shot. 47 Beholding this, that scorcher of foes, viz., the preceptor, fought with a little less boldness than usual. Then that master of military science, O king, filled with wrath,48 invoked celestial weapons for the destruction of Yuyudhana. Beholding that terrible and foe-slaughtering Agneya weapon, Sātyaki,49 that mighty bowman, invoked another celestial weapon, viz., the Seeing them both take up celestial weapons, loud cries of oh and alas arose there. 50 The very creatures having the sky for their element ceased to range through it. the Varuna and the Agneya weapons, which had thus been grafted on their shafts,51 coming against each other (become fruitless).* Just at that time the Sun passed down in his Then king Yudhishthira, and Bhimasena the son of Pāndu,52 and Nakula, and Sahadeva, desirous of protecting Sātyaki, and the Matsyas, and the Calweya troops, speedily proceded towards Drona. Then thousands of princes placing Duscāsana at their head,53-54 hastily proceeded towards Drona (for protecting him) who was surrounded by foes. king, commenced a fierce battle between them and thy bow-The Earth was covered with dust and with showers of arrows shot (by both sides). And everything being thus covered, nothing could anylonger be discerned. Indeed, when the troops were thus overwhelmed with dust, the battle proceeded in utter disregard (of persons and rules)." "56

^{*} The celestial weapons were forces dependent on mantras. Ordinary shafts, inspired with these mantras, were converted into celestial weapons. -T.

SECTION XCIX.

"Sanjaya said,—'When the Sun turned in his downward course towards the summit of the Asta hills, when the welkin was covered with dust, when the heat of the solar orb abated, the day began to fade fast. As regards the soldiers, some rested, some fought on, some returned to the encounter, desir-And while the troops, inspired with hope of victory, were thus engaged, Arjuna and Vasudeva proceeded towards the place where the ruler of the Sindhus was.3 son of Kunti, by means of his shafts, made (through the hostile soldiers) a way sufficiently wide for his car. And it was in this way that Janarddana proceeded, (guiding the car).4 Thither where the car of the high-souled son of Pandu proceeded, thither thy troops, O monarch, broke and yielded a way. he of Daçarha's race, endued with great energy, displayed his skill in driving cars by showing diverse kinds of circling mo-And the shafts of Arjuna, engraved with his name, well-tempered, resembling the Yuga fire, tied round with catgut, of straight joints, thick, far-reaching, and made either of (cleft) bamboo (or their branches) or wholly of iron, taking the lives of diverse foes, drank in that battle, with the birds (of prey assembled there) the blood of living creatures.7-8 Standing on his car as Arjuna shot his shafts full two miles ahead, those shafts pierced and despatched his foes just as that car itself came up to the spot.*9 Hrishikeça proceeded, borne by those yoke-bearing steeds endued with the speed of Garuda or the wind, with such speed that he caused the whole universe to wonder at it.10 Indeed, O king, the car of Surya himself, or that of Rudra, or that of Vaicravana, never goeth so fast.11 Nodbody else's car had ever before moved with such speed in battle as Arjuna's car moving with the celerity of a wish cherished in the mind.¹² Then Keçava, O king, that slayer of hostile heroes, having taken the car to battle, quickly urged the steeds, O Bhārata, through the (hostile) troops.¹³ Arrived in the midst of that throng of cars, those excellent steeds bore Arjuna's car with difficulty, suffering as thy did from hunger, thirst, and toil,¹⁴ and mangled as they had been with the weapons of many heroes delighting in battle. They frequently, however, described beautiful circles as they moved,¹⁵ proceeding over the bodies of slain steeds and men, over broken cars, and the bodies of dead elephants looking like hills by thousands.¹⁶

[•] In other words Arjuna's car shot as quickly through the enemy s the arrows themselves sped from it.—T.

"'Meanwhile, O king, the two heroic brothers of Avanti, (viz., Vinda and Anuvinda), at the head of their forces, beholding the steeds of Arjuna to be tired, encountered him.17 with joy, they pierced Arjuna with four and sixty shafts, and Janarddana with sevently, and the four steeds (of Arjua's car) with a hundred arrows.18 Then Arjuna, O king, filled with wrath, and having a knowledge of the vital parts of the body, struck them both in the battle, with nine straight shafts, every one of which was capable of penetrating into the very vitals.19 Thereupon the two brothers, filled with rage, covered Vibhatsu and Keçava with showers of shafts and uttered leonine roars.20 Then Partha of white steeds, with a couple of broad-headed shafts, quickly cut off in that battle the beautiful bows of the two brothers and then their two standards bright as gold.21 Vinda and Anuvinda then, O king, taking up two other bows and becoming infuriate with anger, began to grind the son of Pandu with their arrows.22 Then Dhananjaya the son of Pandu, exceedingly enraged, once more, with a couple of shafts, quickly cut off those two bows also of his foes. 48 And with a few other arrows whetted on stone and equipt with wings of gold, Arjuna then slew their steeds, their charioteers, the two combatants that protected their rear, with those that followed the And with another broad-headed arrow sharp as a razor, he cut off the head of the eldest brother, who fell down on the Earth, deprived of life, like a tree broken by the wind.25 The mighty Anuvinda then, endued with great prowess, beholding Vinda slain, left his steedles car, having taken up a mace.26 Then that foremost of car-warriors, viz, the brother of Vinda, apparently dancing as he advanced with that mace in his arms, proceeded in that battle for avenging the slaughter of his elder Filled with rage, Anuvinda struck Vasudeva on the forehead with that mace. The latter, however, trembled not but stood still like the mountain Mainaka.28 Then Arjuna, with six arrows, cut off his neck and two legs and two arms and Thus cut off (into fragments, the limbs of) Anuvinda fell down like so many hills.29 Beholding them both slain, their followers, O king, filled with rage, rushed (towards Arjuna), scattering hundreds of arrows. so Slaying them soon, O bull of Bharata's race, Arjuna looked resplenent like a fire consuming a forest on the expiry of winter.31 Passing over those troops with some difficulty, Dhananjaya then shone brightly like the risen Sun transgressing the clouds under which it was Beholding him the Kauravas were filled with fright. But recovering soon enough, they rejoiced once more and rushed at him from all sides, O bull of Bharata's race!88 standing that he was tired and that the ruler of the Sindhus was yet at a distance, they surrounded him, uttering leonine Beholding them filled with wrath, Arjuna, that bull among men, smilingly addressed him of Daçarha's race in soft words, and said, 55—Our steeds are afflicted with arrows and The ruler of the Sindhus is still at a distance. do you think is the best that should be done now?86 O Krishna, truly! Thou art always the wisest of persons! The Pandavas having thee for their eyes will vanquish their foes in battle !87 That which seems to me should be done next, truly shall I say unto thee! Unyoking the steeds to their ease, pluck off their arrows, O Madhava! 88—Thus addressed by Pārtha, Keçava replied unto him,—I also am, O Pārtha, of the same opinion which thou hast expressed!-

"'Arjuna then said,-I will hold in check the whole army O Keçava! Do thou properly perform that which should be next done !40-

"Sanjaya continued,-'Alighting then from the terrace of his car, Dhananjaya, taking up his bow Gandiva, fearlessly stood there like an immovable hill.41 Beholding Dhananjaya standing on the ground, and regarding it a good opportunity, the Kshatriyas, desirous of victory and uttering loud shouts, rushed towards him.42 Him standing alone they surrounded with a large throng of cars, all stretching their bows and showering their shafts on him.48 Filled with wrath they displayed diverse kinds of weapons and entirely shrouded Partha with their shafts like the clouds shrouding the Sun.44 great Kshatriya warriors impetuously rushed against that bull among Kshatriyas, that lion among men, like infuriate elephants rushing towards a lion.46 The might then that we beheld of Partha's arms was exceedingly great, since, filled with rage, alone, he succeeded in resisting those countless warriors.46 The puissant Partha, baffling with his own weapons those of foes, quickly covered all of them with countless shafts.47 In that part of the welkin, O monarch, in consequence of the clash of those dense showers of shafts, a fire was generated emitting incessant sparks.48 There in consequence of hostile heroes, countless in number, all filled with wrath, and all great bowmen united together for a common purpose, seeking victory in battle, aided by steeds covered with blood and breathing hard, and by infuriate and foe-grinding elephants uttering loud shrieks, the weather became exceedingly hot. 49-50 That uncrossable, wide, and limitless Ocean of cars, incapable of being agitated, having arrows for its current, standards for its eddies, elephants for its crocodiles, foot-soldiers for its countless fishes, the blare of conchs and the beat of drums for its roar, cars for its surging waves, head-gears of combatants for its tortoises, umbrellas and banners for its froth. and the bodies of slain elephants for its (submarine) rocks. Partha resisted with his arrows, becoming, as it were, a conti-Then, in course of that battle, the mighty-armed Janarddana, fearlessly addressing that dear friend of his, that foremost of men, viz., Arjuna, said unto him,54-There is no well here in the field of battle, O Arjuna, for the steeds to The steeds want water for drink, but not for a drink from! bath !55 - Thus addressed by Vasudeva, Arjuna cheerfully said. -Here is it !-And so saying, he pierced the Earth with a weapon and made an excellent lake from which the steeds could drink.56 And that lake abounded with swans and ducks, and was adorned with Chakravākas. And it was wide and full of transparent water, and abounded with full-blown lotuses of the foremost species.⁵⁷ And it teemed with diverse kinds of fish. And fathomless in depth, it was the resort of many a Rishi. And the celestial Rishi Nārada came to have a look at that lake created there in a moment.⁵⁸ And Pārtha, capable of achieving wonderful works like (the celestial artificer) Tashtri himself, also constructed there an arrowy hall, having arrows for its beams and rafts, arrows for its pillars, and arrows for its roof.⁵⁹ Then Govinda, laughing in joy, said,— Excellent, Excellent,—upon seeing the high-souled Pārtha create that arrowy hall.'"⁵⁰

SECTION C.

"Sanjaya said,-'After the high-souled son of Kunti had created that water, after he had commenced to hold in check the hostile army, and after he had built also that arrowy hall. Vāsudeva of great splendour, alighting from the car, unyoked the steeds pierced and mangled with arrows.3 Beholding that sight never seen before, loud uproars of applause were heard there, uttered by the Siddhas and the Charanas and by all Mighty car-warriors (assembled together) were the warriors.8 unable to resist the son of Kunti even when he fought on All this seemed highly wonderful.4 Although throngs upon throngs of cars, and myriads upon myriads of elephants and steeds, rushed towards him, yet Partha felt no fear but fought on, prevailing upon all his foes.5 All the (hostile) kings shot showers of shafts at the son of Pandu. That slayer of hostile heroes, however, viz., the son of Vasava, of virtuous soul, felt no anxiety whatever. Indeed, the valiant Partha received hundreds of arrowy showers and maces and lances coming towards him as the Ocean receives hundreds upon hundreds of rivers flowing towards it." With the impetuous might of his own weapons and the strength of his arms, Partha received the foremost of shafts shot at him by those foremost of kings.* Although staying on the ground, and alone, he succeeded yet in baffling all those kings on their cars like that one fault, avarice, destroying a host of accomplishments.9 The Kauravas, O king, applauded the highly wonderful prowess of Partha as also of Vasudeva, saying,10-What more wonderful incident hath ever taken place in this world or will ever take place than this, viz., that Partha and Govinda, in course of battle, have unyoked their steeds?" Displaying fierce energy on the field of battle and the greatest assurance, those best of men have inspired us with great fright !12-Then Hrishikeca of eyes like lotus petals, smiling with the coolest assurance as if, O Bhārata, he were in the midst of women (and not armed foes), after Arjuna had created in the field of battle that hall made of arrows, led the steeds into it, in the very sight, O monarch, of all thy troops!18-14 And Krishna, who was well-skilled in grooming horses, then removed their fatigue. pain, froth, trembling, and wounds.*15 Then plucking out their arrows and rubbing those steeds with his own hands, and walking them duly, he caused them to drink.16 Having caused them to drink and having bathed them properly and made them eat and removed their fatigue and pain, he once more carefully yoked them to that foremost of cars.17 Then that foremost one among all wielders of weapons, viz., Caurin, of great energy. mounting on that car with Arjuna, proceeded with great speed. 13 Beholding the car of that foremost of car-warriors once more equipt with those steeds whose thirst had been slaked, the foremost ones among the Kuru army once more became cheerless.19 They began to sigh, O king, like snakes whose fangs had been pulled out. And they said, -Oh, fie, fie on us! Both Partha and Krishna have gone,20 in the very sight of all the Kshatriyas, riding on the same car, and clad in mail, and slaughtering our troops with as much ease as boys sporting with a toy '21 deed, those scorchers of foes have gone away in the very sight of all the kings, displaying their prowess and unimpeded by our shouting and struggling combatants 122-Seeing them gone away, other warriors said,-Ye Kauravas, speed ye for the

36

^{*} The Bengal reading of the first line is vicious. The Bombay reading is Vamathum, Vepathum, Vanan. The first word means the froth in the mouths of steeds .- T.

slaughter of Krishna and the diadem-decked (Arjuna) !28 ing his steeds unto his car in the very sight of all (our) bowmen, he of Daçarha's race is proceeding towards Jayadratha, slaughtering us in battle !24—And some lords of Earth there, O king, said amongst themselves, having seen that highly wonful incident in battle never seen before, 25—Alas, through Duryodhana's fault, these warriors, king Dhritarashtra, the Kshatriyas, and the whole Earth, fallen into great distress,26 are being King Duryodhana understands it not !—Thus spoke Others, O Bhārata, said,27—The ruler of many Kshatriyas. the Sindhus hath already been despatched to Yama's abode! Of false sight and unacquainted with means, let Duryodhana now do what should be done for that king !*28—Meanwhile the son of Pandu, seeing the Sun coursing towards the setting hills, proceeded with greater speed towards the ruler of the Sindhus, on his steeds whose thirst had been slaked.29 The (Kuru) warriors were unable to resist that mighty-armed hero, that foremost of all wielders of weapons, as he proceeded like the Destroyer himself in wrath. 50 That scorcher of foes, viz., the son of Pandu, routing the warriors (before him), agitated that army like the lion agitating a herd of deer, as he proceeded for getting at Jayadratha. Penetrating into the hostile army, he of Daçārha's race urged the steeds with great speed, and blew his conch Pānchajanya which was of the hue of the clouds. 32 The shafts shot before by the son of Kunti began to fall behind him, so swiftly did those steeds, endued with the speed of the wind, drew that car.33 Then many kings, filled with rage, and many other Kshatriyas, surrounded Dhananjaya who was desirous of slaying Jayadratha.34 When the (Kuru) warriors thus proceeded towards that bull among men, (viz., Arjuna) who had stopped for a moment, Duryodhana, proceeding quickly, followed Partha in that great battle.35 Many warriors, beholding the car whose rattle resembled the roar of the clouds and which was equipt with that terrible standard bearing the ape and whose banner floated upon the wind, became exceedingly cheerless.53

^{*} I. e., his funeral obsequies. The vernacular translators do not see the intended joke.-T.

Then when the Sun was almost completely shrouded by the dust (raised by the combatants), the (Kuru) warriors, afflicted with shafts, became incapable of even gazing, in that battle, at the two Krishnas." "87

SECTION CI.

"Sanjaya said,—'O monarch, beholding Vasudeva and Dhananjaya penetrate into their host having already pierced through many divisions, the kings of thy army, fled away in fear,1 little while after, however, those high-souled ones, filled with rage and shame, and urged on by their might, became cool and collected, and proceeded towards Dhananjaya.2 O king, who, filled with rage and vindictiveness, proceeded against the son of Pandu in battle, returned not, like rivers never returning from the Ocean.3 Seeing this, many ignoble Kshatriyas incurrred sin and hell by flying away from battle, like atheists turning away from the Vedas. Transgressing that throng of cars, those two bulls among men at last issued out of it and looked like the Sun and the Moon freed from the jaws of Rāhu.5 Indeed, the two Krishnas, their fatigue dispelled, having pierced through that vast host, looked like two fishes that had passed through a strong net. Having forded through that impenetrable division of Drona, the way through which was obstructed by dense showers of weapons, those two high-souled heroes looked like Yuga-Suns risen (on the welkin).7 Piercing through and through those dense showers of weapons and freed from that imminent danger, those high-souled heroes, themselves obstructing the welkin with thick clouds of weapons, seemed like persons escaped from a raging conflagration or like two fishes from the jaws of a makara. And they agitated the (Kuru) host like a couple of makaras agitating the ocean. 8-9 Thy warriors and thy sons, while Partha and Krishna were vet in the midst of Drona's division, had thought that the two would never be able to issue out of it.10 Beholding, however, those

^{*} I give the sense of this verse, without giving a closely literal version.-T.

two heroes of great splendour issue out of Drona's division, they no longer, O monarch, hoped for Jayadratha's life !11 Hitherto they had strong hopes of Jayadratha's life, for they had thought, O king, that the two Krishnas would never be able to escape from Drona and Hridikā's son.12 Frustrating that hope those two scorchers of foes had, O monarch, crossed the division of Drona as also the almost uncrossable division of the Bhojas. 18 Beholding them, therefore, ford through those divisions and look like two blazing fires, thy men became possessed with despair and no longer hoped for Jayadratha's life!14 those two fearless hereos, viz., Krishna and Dhananjaya, those enhancers of the fears of foes, began to converse between themselves about the slaughter of Jayadratha.15 And Arjuna said,— This Jayadratha hath been placed in their midst by six of the foremost car-warriors among the Dhartarashtras. The ruler of the Sindhus, however, shall not escape me if once he is seen by If Cakra himself with all the celestials become his protector in battle, yet shall we slay him !- Thus did the two Krish-Even so, O mighty-armed one, did they converse amongst themselves while looking after the ruler of the Sin-(Having heard what they said), thy sons set up a loud Those two chastisers of foes then looked like a couple of thirsty elephants of great quickness of motion refreshed with drinking water after having passed through a desert.19 death and above decrepitude, they then looked like two merchants that have passed over a mountainous country abounding with tigers and lions and elephants.20 Indeed, beholding them freed (from Drona and Krivarman), thy warriors regarded the color of Partha's and Krishna's face to be such. And thy men then, from all sides, set up a loud wail.21 Freed from Drona who resembled a snake of virulent poison or a blazing fire, as also from the other lords of Earth, Partha and Krishna looked like two blazing Suns.22 Indeed, those two chastisers of foes, freed from Drona's division which resembled the very Ocean, seemed to be filled with joy like persons that have safely crossed the vasty deep.28 Freed from those dense showers of weapons, from those divisions protected by Drona and Hridika's son, Keçava and Arjuna looked like Indra and Agni of blazing efful-

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:41 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

The two Krishnas, pierced with the sharp shafts of Bharadwaja's son and with bodies dripping with blood, looked resplendent like two mountains decked with flowering Karni-Having forded that wide lake, of which Drona contituted the alligator, darts formed the fierce snakes, shafts the Makaras, and Kshatriyas the deep waters,26 having issued out of that cloud constituted by Drona's weapons, whose thunders were the twang of bows and the sound of palms, and whose lightning flashes were constituted by maces and swords, Partha and Krishna looked like the Sun and the Moon freed from darkness.27 Having crossed the region obstracted by the weapons of Drona, all creatures regarded those mighty and famous bowmen, viz., the two Krishnas, as persons who had forded, with the aid of their arms, the five rivers, (viz., the Catadru, the Vipaça, the Ravati, the Chandrabhaga, and the Vitasta) having the Ocean for their sixth when full of water during the season of rains and abounding with large alligators.28-29 Casting their eyes, from desire of slaughter, on Jayadratha who was not far off from them, the two heroes looked like two tigers waiting from desire of falling upon a Ruru deer. 30 Such was then the color of their faces that thy warriors, O monarch, regarded Jayadratha as one already slain. 31 Possessed of red eyes, O mighty-armed one, and staying together, Krishna and the son of Pandu, at sight of Javadratha, were filled with joy and roared repeatedly. 32 Indeed, O monarch, the splendour then of Caurin standing with reins in hand and of Partha armed with bow, was like that of the Sun or the fire.33 from the division of Drona, their joy, at sight of the ruler of the Sindhus, was like that of a couple of hawks at sight of a piece of flesh.34 Beholding the ruler of the Sindhus not far off, they rushed in wrath towards him like a couple of hawks swooping down towards a piece of meat. 55 Seeing Hricikeça and Dhananjaya transgress (the divisions of Drona), thy valiant son, viz., king Duryodhana, whose armour had been bound on his person by Drona, and who was well versed in grooming and guiding horses, rushed, on a single car, O lord, for the protection of the Sindhus. 36-37 Leaving those mighty bowmen, viz., Krishna and Partha, behind, thy son, O king, turned back, facing Keçava of lotus-like eyes.⁵⁸ When thy son thus outran Dhananjaya, diverse musical instruments were joyfully blown and beat among all thy troops.⁵⁹ And leonine roars also were uttered, mingled with the blare of conchs, beholding Duryodhana staying in the face of the two Krishnas.⁴⁰ They also, O king, resembling blazing fires, that stood as the protectors of Jayadratha, were filled with joy upon beholding thy son in battle.⁴¹ Seeing Duryodhana transgress them with his followers, Krishna, O monarch, said unto Arjuna these words suited to the occasion.' "⁴²

SECTION CII.

"'Vāsudeva said,-Behold, O Dhananjaya, this Suyodhana who hath transgressed us! I regard this as highly wonderful! There is no car-warrior equal to him !1 His arrows are far-reach-He is a great bowman. Accomplished in weapons, he is exceedingly difficult to vanquish in battle. The mighty son of Dhritarāshtra strikes hard, and is conversant with all modes of Brought up in great luxury, he is much regarded by even the foremost of car-warriors. He is well accomplished, and, O Pārtha, he always hates the Pāndavas! For these reasons, O sinless one, I think, thou shouldst now fight with Upon him resteth, as upon a stake at dice, victory or the Upon him, O Partha, vomit that poison of thy wrath which thou hast cherished so long! This mighty car-warrior is the root of all the wrongs of the Pandavas! He is now within reach of thy shafts. Look after thy success! king Duryodhana, desirous as he is of kingdom, come to battle with thee ?6 By good luck it is that he is now arrived within reach of thy arrows! Do that, O Dhananjaya, by which he may be deprived of very life! Reft of his senses through pride of affluence, he hath never felt any distress! O bull among men, he doth not know also thy prowess in battle !8 the three worlds with the celestials, the Asuras, and human beings, cannot venture to vanquish thee in battle! need be said, therefore, of the single Duryodhana?9 luck it is, O Partha, that he hath approached the vicinity of

O mighty-armed one, slay him as Purandara slew O sinless one, this Duryodhana hath endeavoured to bring evil on you! By deceit he cheated king Yudhishthira at dice !11 O giver of honors, sinless though you all are, this prince of sinful soul has always done various cruel acts towards you !18 Nobly resolved upon battle O Partha slay without any scruple this wicked wight, who is ever wrathful and ever cruel, and who is the very embodiment of avarice !13 Remembering the deprivation of your kingdom by deceit, your exile into the woods, and the wrongs of Krishna, put forth thy prowess, O son of Pāndu!14 By good luck it is that he stayeth within the range By good luck it is that staying before thee he of thy shafts. endeavours to resist thy purpose !15 By good luck it is that he knows today that he will have to fight with thee in battle! good luck it is that all your purposes, even those that are not presently entertained by you, will be crowned with fruition !16 Therefore, O Partha, slay this wretch of his race, viz., the son of Dhritarāshtra, in battle, as Indra had, in days of yore, slain the Asura Jambha in the battle between the celestials and the Asuras!17 If he is slain by thee, thou canst then pierce through this masterless host! Cut the very root of these wicked-souled Let the avabhritha of this hostility be now accomwretches! plished !*18-'

"Sanjaya continued,—'Thus addressed, Pārtha replied unto Keçava, saying,—So be it. Even this should be done by me! Disregarding everything else, proceed thither where Duryodhana is! Putting forth my prowess in battle, I will cut off the head of that wretch who hath for such a long period enjoyed our kingdom without a thorn in his side! Shall I not succeed, O Keçava, in avenging the insult, in the shape of dragging her by the hair, offered unto Draupadi undeserving as she was of that wrong? Thus conversing with each other, the two Krishnas, filled with joy, urged those excellent white ^{*} Avabhritha is the final bath undergone, on completion of a sacrifice, by the person performing the sacrifice. The slaughter of Duryodhana would, according to Krishna, be the avabhritha of the sacrifice of battle.—T.

http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google

steeds of theirs, desirous of getting at king Duryodhana.22 regards thy son, O bull of Bharata's race, having approached the presence of Partha and Krishna, he entertained no fear, although, O sire, every circumstance was calculated to inspire fear.28 the Kshatriyas there, on thy side, highly applauded him then, for he proceeded to face Arjuna and Hrishikeça for resisting Indeed, beholding the king in battle, a loud shout was heard there, O monarch, uttered by the entire Kuru army. 25 When that terrible and awful shout arose there, thy son, pressing his foe hard, opposed his progress.26 Held in check by thy son armed with bow, the son of Kunti became filled with rage, and that chastiser of foes, viz., Duryodhana, also became highly Pārtha.27 enraged with Beholding both Duryodhana and Dhananjaya enraged with each other, all the Kshatriyas, of fierce forms, began to look at them from all sides.28 Partha and Vasudeva both filled with rage, thy son, O sire, desirous of battle, smilingly challenged them.29 Then he of Daçārha's race became filled with joy, and Dhananjaya also, Uttering loud roars, they the son of Pandu, became cheerful. both blew their foremost of conchs. 80 Seeing them thus cheerful, all the Kauravas became hopeless of thy son's life. 31 all the Kuravas, and many even amongst the enemy, became possessed with grief, and regarded thy son as a libation already poured into the mouth of the (sacred) fire. 32 Thy warriors, seeing Krishna and the Pandava so cheerful, loudly exclaimed, afflicted with fear,—The king is slain !—The king is slain !ss_ Hearing that loud uproar of the warriors, Duryodhana said.— Let your fears be dispelled! I will despatch the two Krishnas unto the regions of Death !84—Having told all his warriors these words, king Duryodhana then, expectant of success, addressed Partha angrily and said these words: 85—If, O Partha, thou art begotten by Pandu, exhibit upon me, without loss of time, all the weapons, celestial and earthly, that thou hast learnt!86 forth quickly all thy might and prowess, and all that Kecava also hath of either, upon me! I wish to see thy manliness! They speak of many feats achieved by thee out of our view. Show me those feats that have won the applause of many as endued with great heroism !- ""E8

SECTION CIII.

"Sanjaya said,- 'Saying these words, king Duryodhana pierced Arjuna with three shafts of great impetuosity and capable of penetrating into the very vitals. And with four others he pierced the four steeds of his foe.' And he pierced Vāsudeva in the centre of the chest with ten shafts, and cutting off, with a broad-headed arrow, the whip in the latter's hands, he felled it on the ground.2 Then Partha, coolly and without losing a moment, shot at him four and ten shafts whetted on stone and equipt with beautiful feathers. All those shafts, however, were repelled by Duryodhana's armour.3 Beholding their fruitlessness, Partha once more sped at him nine and five arrows of keen points. But these too were repelled by Duryodhana's armour.4 Seeing eight and twenty arrows of his become abortive, that slayer of hostile heroes, viz., Krishna, said unto Arjuna, these words:5—I see a sight never before witnessed by me, like the walking of hills! Shafts sped by thee, O Partha, are becoming abortive !6 O bull of Bharata's race, hath thy Gandiva decayed in power? Have the might of thy grasp and the power of thy arms become less than what they were! this to be thy last meeting with Duryodhana? Partha, for I ask thee!8 Great hath been my amazement, O Partha, upon seeing all these shafts of thine fall towards Duryodhana's car without producing the slightest effect! what misfortune is this that these terrible shafts of thine that are endued with the might of the thunder and that always pierce the bodies of foes, fail of effect !10-

"'Arjuna said,—I think, O Krishna, that this armour hath been put on Duryodhana's body by Drona! This armour, tied as it hath been, is impenetrable to my weapons!" In this armour, O Krishna, inhereth the might of the three worlds. Only Drona knoweth it, and from that best of men I also have learnt it!" This armour is not capable of being pierced by my weapons! Maghavat himself, O Govinda, cannot pierce it with his thunder!" Knowing it all, O Krishna, why seekest thou to

That which occurred in the three worlds, that confound me? which, O Keçava, exists now,14 and that which is in the womb of futurity, are all known to thee! Indeed, O slayer of Madhu, no one also knoweth this better than thou dost!16 This Duryodhana, O Krishna, cased by Drona in this armour, is staying fearlessly in battle, wearing this coat of mail.16 That, however, which one wearing such armour should do, is not known to him, O Madhava! He weareth it only like a woman. 17 Behold now, O Janarddana, the might of my arms and that of my bow too! Though protected by such a coat of mail, I will still vanquish the Kuru prince !18 The chief of the celestials gave this effulgent armour to Angiras. From the latter it was obtained by Vrihas-And from Vrihaspati it was got by Purandra.19 of the celestials once more gave it to me with the mantras to Even if this armour were divine, if it be uttered in wearing it. were created by Brahman himself, still the wretch Duryodhana, struck with my arrows, shall not be protected by it !- '20

"Sanjaya continued,—'Having said these words, Arjuna inspired some arrows with mantras, and began to draw them on the bowstring. And while he was thus drawing them on the bowstring, the son of Drona cut them off with a weapon that was capable of baffling every weapon. Beholding those shafts of his thus frustrated from a distance by that utterer of Brahma (viz., Acwatthaman),22 Arjuna, owning white steeds, filled with amaze, represented unto Keçava, Saying,—I cannot, O Janarddana, twice use this weapon, so for if I do so, it will slay my own self and my own troops !- Meanwhile Duryodhana, O king, pierced each of the Krishnas in that battle with nine shafts resembling snakes of virulent poison. And once more the Kuru king showered his shafts on Krishna and the son of Pandu.24-25 holding these dense showers of arrows (shot by their king), thy They beat their musical instruwarriors were filled with joy. ments and uttered leonine roars.26 Then Partha, excited with rage in that battle, licked the corners of his mouth. Casting his eyes on his enemy's body he saw not any part that was not well covered with that impenetrable armour.27 With some sharppointed shafts then, well shot from his bow and each of which resembled Death himself, Arjuna slew his antagonist's steeds and then his two Pārshni charioteers.28 And soon also the valiant Partha cut off Duryodhana's bow and the leathern fence Then Savyasachin commenced to cut off his casing his fingers. enemy's car into fragments.29 And with a couple of keen arrows And then Arjuna pierced both he made Duryodhana carless. the palms of the Kuru king.20 Beholding that great bowman afflicted with the shafts of Dhananjaya and fallen into great distress, many warriors rushed to the spot, desirous of rescuing These, with many thousands of cars, well-equipt elephants and horse, as also with large bodies of foot-soldiers excited with wrath, encompassed Dhananjaya. 32 Covered with dense showers of weapons and encompassed by large bodies of men, neither that car of theirs nor Arjuna and Govinda could any longer be seen. 83 Then Arjuna, by the might of his weapons, began to slaughter that host. And car-warriors and elephants, by hundreds, deprived of limbs, fell fast on the field.34 Slain or in the act of being slain, these failed to reach the excellent car. Indeed, the car on which Arjuna rode stood motionless full two miles from the besieging force on every side. 35 Then the Vrishni hero (Krishna), without taking any time, said unto Arjuna these words: - Draw thy bow quickly and with great force, for I will blow my conch. 56-Thus addressed, Arjuna drawing his bow Gandiva with great force, began to slaughter the foe, shooting dense showers of shafts and making a loud noise by stretching the bowstring with his fingers. 87 Keçava meanwhile forcibly and very loudly blew his conch Panchajanya, his face covered with sweat and his eyelashes covered with dust.38 consequence of the blare of that conch and of the twang of Gandiva, the Kuru warriors, strong or weak, all fell down on the ground. 59 The car of Arjuna then, freed from that press, looked resplendent like a cloud driven by the wind. (Beholding Arjuna), the protectors of Javadratha, with their followers, became filled Indeed, those mighty bowmen, the protectors of the ruler of the Sindhus, suddenly beholding Partha, uttered loud shouts, filling the Earth with that noise.41 their arrows mingled with other fierce noises and the loud blare of their conchs. Those high-souled warriors uttered leonine shouts.42 Hearing that awful uproar raised by thy troops, Vasudeva and Dhananjaya blew their conchs.⁴⁸ With the loud blare (of their conchs), the whole Earth, with her mountains and seas and islands and the nether regions, O monarch, seemed to be filled.⁴⁴ Indeed, that blare, O best of the Bharatas, filled all the points of the compass, and was echoed back by both the armies.⁴⁵ Then thy car-warriors, beholding Krishna and Dhananjaya, became very much frightened. Soon, however, they recovered and put forth their activity.⁴⁶ Indeed, the great carwarriors of thy host, beholding the two Krishnas, those highly blessed persons, cased in mail, rushed towards them in wrath. The sight thus presented became a wonderful one." ⁴⁷

SECTION CIV.

"Sanjaya said,—'Thy warriors, as soon as they beheld those foremost of persons of the Vrishni-Andnaka and the Kuru races, lost no time, each striving to be first, in proceeding against them from desire of slaughtering them. And so Vijaya also rushed against those foes of his.1 On their great cars decked with gold, cased in tiger-skins, producing deep rattle, and resembling blazing fires, they rushed, illumining the ten points of the compass,3 armed, O king, with bows the backs of whose staves were decked with gold, and which, in consequence of their splendour, were incapable of being looked at, and uttering loud cries, and drawn by angry steeds.3 Bhuricravas, and Cala, and Karna, and Vrishasena, and Jayadratha, and Kripa, and the ruler of the Madras, and that foremost of car-warriors, viz., the son of Drona,4 these eight great car-warriors, as if devouring the skies (as they proceeded) illumined the ten compass with their splendid cars cased in tiger-skins and decked with golden moons.5 Clad in mail and filled with wrath, and mounted upon their cars the rattle of whose wheels resembled the roar of masses of clouds, they covered Arjuna on every side with showers of sharp shafts.6 Beautiful steeds of the best breed, endued with great speed, bearing those great car-warriors, looked resplendent as they illumined the ten points of the compass.7 Their cars dragged by foremost steeds of great fleetness born in diverse countries and of diverse species, some bred in mountainous regions, some in rivers, and some in the country of the Sindhus,8 many foremost of car-warriors among the Kurus, desirous, O king, of rescuing thy son, quickly rushed towards Dhananjaya's car from every side.9 Those foremost of men, taking up their great conchs, blew them, filling, O king, the welkin and the Earth with her seas (with that Then those foremost ones among the gods, viz., Vasudeva and Dhananjaya, also blew their foremost of conchs on The son of Kunti blew Devadatta, and Keçava blew The loud blast of Devadatta, sent forth by Pānchajanya. Dhananjaya,12 filled the Earth, the welkin, and the ten points of the compass. And so Panchajanya also, blown by Vasudeva, 18 snrpassing all sounds, filled the sky and the Earth. that awful and fierce noise continued,14 a noise that inspired the timid with fear and the brave with joy, and while drums and Jharjharas and cymbals 15 and Mridangas, O great king, were beat by thousands, great car-warriors invited to the Kuru side and solicitous of Duryodhana's welfare,16 those great bowmen, filled with rage and unable to bear the loud blasts of Arjuna's and Krishna's conchs, those kings from diverse realms supported by their respective troops, 17 in rage blew their great conchs, desiring to answer with their own blasts the blasts of Keçava and Arjuna.18 The Kuru army then, urged forward by that blare of conchs, had its car-warriors, elephants, and steeds filled with anxiety and fear. Indeed, O lord, that host looked as if they that comprised it were all ill.19 The agitated Kuru host, echoing with that blare of conchs blown by brave warriors, seemed to be like the welkin resounding with the noise of thunder and fallen down (through some convulsion of nature).20 That loud uproar, O monarch, resounded through the ten points and frightened that host like the developed incidents at the end of the Yuga frightening all living creatures.21 Then Duryodhana and those eight great car-warriors appointed for the protection of Jayadratha all surrounded the son of the Pandu.22 The son of Drona struck Vasudeva with three and seventy ^{} Praviddham means fallen down or loosened from its usual place.

Thus Nilakantha.—T.

shafts. Ariuna himself with three broad-headed shafts, and his standard and (four) steeds with five others.28 Beholding Janarddana pierced, Arjuna, filled with rage, struck Acwatthaman with six hundred shafts.24 Then piercing Karna with ten arrows and Vrishasena with three, the valiant Dhananjaya cut off Calya's bow with arrow fixed on the string, at the handle.25 Calya then, taking up another bow, pierced the son of Pandu. And Bhuricravas pierced him with three arrows whetted on stone and equipt with golden wings.26 And Karna pierced him with two and thirty arrows, and Vrishasena with seven. Jayadratha pierced Arjuna with three and seventy shafts, and Kripa pierced him with ten.27 And the ruler of the Madras also pierced Phalguna in that battle with ten arrows. the son of Drona pierced him with sixty arrows.28 more pierced Partha with five arrows. and Vāsudeva with Then that tiger among men, viz., Arjuna owning white steeds and having Krishna for his driver,29 pierced each of those warriors in return, displaying the lightness of his hand. Piercing Karna with a dozen shafts and Vrishasena with three, 50 Partha cut off Calya's bow at the handle. And piercing the son of Somadatta with three arrows, and Calya with ten, 81 he pierced Kripa with five and twenty arrows, and the ruler of the Sindhus with a hundred. 82 Partha struck Drona's son with Then Bhuricravas, filled with rage, cut off seventy arrows. the goad in Krishna's hand, 38 and struck Arjuna with three and Then Dhananjaya, of white steeds, filled with twenty shafts. rage, mangled those enemies of his with hundreds upon hundreds of arrows, like a mighty tempest tearing masses of clouds." "54

SECTION CV.

"Dritarāshtra said,—'Describe to me, O Sanjaya, the diverse kinds of standards resplendent with great beauty, of both the Pārthas and our warriors (in that battle)."

"Sanjaya said,—'Hear, O king, of the diverse kinds of standards of those high-souled warriors. Listen to me as I describe their forms and names! Indeed, O king, upon the cars of those foremost of car-warriors were seen diverse kinds of standards that shone like blazing fires! Made of gold, or decked with gold, or adorned with garlands of gold, and each looking like the golden mountain (Meru), diverse kinds of standards were there that were highly beautiful. And those standards of the warriors had attached all around them excellent banners.4-5 Indeed, having banners of diverse hues attached to them all around, those standards looked exceedingly beautiful. Those banners, again, moved by the wind, looked like fair ladies dancing in the midst of the sporting arena. Endued with the splendours of the rainbow, those banners, O bull of Bharata's race, of those car-warriors, floating in the breeze, highly adorned their cars. standard, bearing the sign of the ape of fierce face and tail like that of the lion, belonging to Deananjaya, seemed to inspire fear That standard, O king, of the wielder of Ganin that battle. diva, bearing that foremost of apes, and adorned with many banners, frightened the Kuru host. Similarly, the lion-tailed standard-top of Drona's son, O Bharata, we saw, was endued with the effulgence of the rising Sun. Decked with gold, floating in the breeze, possessed of the splendours of the rainbow, 9-11 the standard-mark of Drona's son appeared on high, inspiring the foremost of Kuru warriors with joy. The standard of Adhiratha's son bore the mark of an elephant-rope made of gold.12 It seemed, O king, in battle to fill the whole welkin. The banner, adorned with gold and floral garlands, attached to the standard of Karna in battle,18 moved by the wind, seemed to dance upon his car. The preceptor of the Pandavas, that Brahmana given to ascettic penances, viz., Kripa the son of Gotama, had for his mark an excellent bovine bull. That high-souled one, O king, with that bovine bull, looked as resplendent,14-15 as the Destroyer of the three cities looks resplendent with his bull.* Vrishasena had a peacock made of gold and adorned with jewells and gems.16 And it stood on his standard as if in the act of crowing, and always adorned the van of the army. With that peacock, the car of the high-souled Vrishasena shone,17 like the car, O king, of Skanda (the celestial generalissimo) shining with his peacock. Calya the ruler of the Madras, we saw, had on his standardtop, an unrivalled and beautiful ploughshare made of gold and looking like a flame of fire. That ploughshare, O sire, looked resplendent on his car,18-19 like the presiding goddess of corn herself endued with beauty and producing every seed. boar adorned the standard-top of the ruler of the Sindhus. Decked with golden garlands, it was of the splendour of a white With that silvern mark on his banner, the ruler of the Sindhus looked as resplendent,20-21 as Surya in days of yore in the battle between the celestials and the Asuras. standard of Somadatta's son devoted to sacrifices, bore the sign of the sacrificial stake. It was seen to shine like the Sun or the Moon. That sacrificial stake, made of gold, O king, of Somadatta's son, looked resplendent 22-25 like the tall stake erected in that foremost of sacrifices called the Rajasuya. standard of Calya, O monarch, bearing a huge silvern elephant was adorned on all sides with peacocks made of gold. standard, O bull of Bharata's race, adorned thy troops²⁴⁻²⁵ like the huge white elephant adorning the host of the celestial king. On the standard decked with gold, of king Duryodhana, was an elephant adorned with gems.26 Tinkling with the sound of a hundred bells, O king, that standard stood upon the excellent And, O king, thy son, that bull among the car of that hero. Kurus, looked resplendent, O monarch, with that tall standard in battle. These nine excellent standards stood erect among thy divisions. The tenth standard seen there was of Arjuna, decked with that huge ape. 27-29 And with that standard, Arjuna looked highly resplendent like Himavat with a blazing fire (on Then many mighty car-warrriors, all chastisers of foes, quickly took up their beautiful, bright, and large bows for Similarly Partha also, that the sake of (resisting) Arjuna. achiever of celestial feats, took up his foe-destroying bow Gan-

^{*} Tripura means the three cities, constructed by the Asura artificer Maya. The Asura, however, who owned those cities is also called Tripura. It was Mahadeva who destroyed the three cities with all their population. Vide the close of the Harivança.—T.

^{*} The true reading is alohita and not lohita. Arka here is crystal and not the Sun. It was a silvern boar, which could not, evidently, be like the Sun.—T.

diva, in consequence, O king, of thy evil policy. Many royal warriors, O king, were then slain in that battle owing to thy fault, so-se rulers of men come from different realms, invited (by thy sons). And with them perished many steeds and many elephants. Then those mighty car-warriors headed by Duryodhana (on one side) and that bull amongst the Pandavas on the other, uttered loud roars and began the encounter. And the feat that Kunti's son having Krishna for his charioteer achieved there was highly wonderful, inasmuch as, alone, he encountered fearlessly all those warriors united together. that mighty-armed hero looked resplendent as he stretched his bow Gandiva, 32-35 desirous of vanquishing all those tigers among men and of slaying the ruler of the Sindhus. With his shafts shot in thousands, that tiger among men, viz., Arjuna, 36 that scorcher of foes, made all those warriors invisible (by means of his arrowy showers). On their side, those tigers among men, those mighty car-warriors, also made Partha invisible by means of their clouds of shafts shot from all sides. holding Arjuna, that bull of Kuru's race, covered by those lions among men with their shafts, loud was the uproar made by thy troops!" "87-88

SECTION CVI.

"Dhritarashtra said,—'After Arjuna had got the ruler of the Sindhus within sight, what, O Sanjaya, did the Panchalas, attacked by Bharadwaja's son, do, encountering the Kurus?'1

"Sanjaya said, -- On the afternoon of that day, O monarch, in the battle that took place between the Panchalas and the Kurus, Drona became, as it were, the stake (for which each fought on to win or lose).2 The Panchalas, O sire, desirous of slaying Drona, cheerfully uttered loud roars and shot dense showers of arrows. Indeed, that encounter between the Panchālas and the Kurus, fierce, awful, and highly wonderful as it was, resembled that in days of yore between the gods and the Asuras. Indeed, all the Panchalas with the Pandavas, obtaining Drona's car (within reach) used many mighty weapons, desirous of piercing through his array.5 Car-warriors stationed on their cars, causing the Earth to shake under them, and showering their arrowy downpours, rushed towards Drona's car, without much speed.6 Then that mighty car-warrior among the Kaikayas, viz., Vrihatkshatra, incessantly scattering keen shafts that resembled the thunder in force, proceeded towards Drona. Then Kshemadhurti of great fame quickly rushed against Vrihatkshatra, shooting keen arrows by thousands. Beholding this, that bull among the Chedis, viz., Dhrishtaketu, endued with great might, quickly proceeded against Kshemadhurti like Mahendra proceeding against the Asura Camvara.9 Seeing him rush with great impetuosity like the Destroyer himself with wide open mouth, that mighty bowman, viz., Viradhanwan, proceeded against him with great speed.10 King Yudhishthira staying there at the head of his division from desire of victory, was resisted by the valiant Drona himself." Thy son Vikarna, O lord, endued with great prowess, proceeded against the rushing Nakula of great prowess, that warrior accomplished in battle.12 That scorcher of foes, viz., Durmukha, covered the advancing Sahadeva with many thousands of swiftly-coursing shafts.18 The heroic Vyaghradatta resisted that tiger among men, viz., Sātyaki, making him repeatedly tremble by means of his sharp and keen-pointed shafts.14 The son of Somadatta resisted the (five) sons of Draupadi, those tigers among men, those great car-warriors, wrathfully shooting mighty shafts.16 That mighty car-warrior, viz., Rishyaçringa's fierce son (the Rākshasa Alamvusha), of awful mien, resisted the advancing Bhimasena filled with wrath.16 The encounter that then took place between that man and Rākshasa resembled, O king, the battle in days of yore between Rāma and Rāvana.17 Then, O Bhārata, Yudhishthira, that chief of the Bharatas, struck Drona with ninety straight shafts in all his vital parts.18 Enraged by the famous son of Kunti, Drona struck him in return, O chief of the Bharatas, in the centre of the chest, with five and twenty And once more, in the very sight of all the bowmen, Drona struck him, with his steeds, charioteer, and standard, with twenty shafts.20 Pandu's son, of virtuous soul, displaying great lightness of hand, baffled with his own arrowy showers those arrows shot by Drona.21 Then the great bowman

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:46 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

Drona, filled with rage, cut off the bow of the high-souled king Yudhishthira the just.22 Then that great car-warrior (viz., the the son of Bharadwaja) speedily covered the bowless Yudhishthira with many thousands of shafts.28 Beholding the king made invisible by the shafts of Bharadwaja's son, all creatures thought that Yudhishthira was dead.24 And some thought that the king had fled from before Drona. And many cried out, O king, saying,-Alas, the king hath been slain by the high-souled Brāhmana !25—Then king Yudhishthira the just, fallen into great distress, having laid aside that bow cut off by Bharadwaja's son in battle,20 took up another excellent, bright, and tougher And that hero then cut off in that encounter all those shafts shot in thousands by Drona. All this seemed exceedingly Having cut off those shafts, O king, Yudhishthira, with eyes red in wrath, 27-28 took up in that battle a dart capable of riving even a mountain. Equipt with a golden staff, of awful mien, having eight bells attached to it, and exceedingly terrible,29 the mighty Yudhishthira, taking it up, uttered a loud roar. And with that roar, O Bharata, the son of Pandu inspired all creatures with fear. 80 Beholding that dart upraised by king Yudhishthira the just, all creatures, as if with one accord, said,—Good be to Drona '81—Hurled from the king's arms, that dart resembling a snake just freed from its slough, coursed towards Drona, illumining the welkin and all the directions cardinal and subsidiary, like a she-snake with fiery Beholding it coursing towards him impetuously, O king, Drona, 22-58 that foremost of all persons acquainted with weapons, invoked into existence the weapon called Brahma. That weapon, reducing that dart of terrible mien into dust, 34 coursed towards the car of the illustrious son of Pandu. Then, O O sire, king Yudhishthira of great wisdom baffled that weapon of Drona thus coursing towards him by himself invoking the And then piercing Drona himself in that Brahma weapon. battle with five straight shafts, $5-86 he cut off, with a sharp razor-faced shaft, the large bow of Drona. Then Drona, that grinder of Kshatriyas, throwing aside that broken bow, 37 hurled with great force, O sire, a mace at the son of Dharma. holding that mace impetuously coursing towards him, Yudhish-thira. 88 O chastiser of foes, filled with rage, took up a mace. Then those two maces, both hurled with great force, encountering each other in mid air, 30 produced by their collision sparks of fire and then fell down on the Earth. Then Drona, filled with fury, slew, O sire, the steeds of Yudhishthira, with four excellent shafts of keen points. And with another broadheaded shaft he cut off the king's bow resembling a pole erected to the honor of Indra.40-41 And with another shaft he cut off the standard of Yuhisdthira, and with three he afflicted Then king Yudhishthira, speedily jumpthe Pandava himself. ing down from that steedless car, stood weaponless and with arms upraised, O bull of Bharata's race! Beholding him carless, and especially weaponless, 42-48 Drona, O lord, stupified his foes, or rather the whole army. Firmly adhering to his vow, and endued with great lightness of hands, Drona shot showers of sharp shafts,44 and rushed towards the king like a furious lion towards a deer. Beholding Drona, that slaver of foes, rush towards him, 45 cries of Oh and Alas suddenly rose from the Pāndava army. And many cried out, saying,—The king is slain by Bharadwaja's son !46—Loud wails of this kind were heard, O Bharata, among the Pandava troops. Meanwhile king Yudhishthira the son of Kunti, getting up on the car of Sahadeva, retreated from the field, borne away by swift steeds."47

SECTION CVII.

"Sanjaya said,—'Kshemadhurti, O monarch, pierced the advancing Vrihatkshatra of great valor, that prince of the Kaikayas, with many arrows in the chest.1 King Vrihatkshatra then, O monarch, desirous of piercing through Drona's division, quickly struck his antagonist with ninety straight-shafts. Kshemadhurti, however, filled with rage, cut off, with a sharp, well-tempered, and broad-headed shaft, the bow of that highsouled prince of the Kaikayas. Having cut off his bow, Kshemadhurti then, with a keen and straight shaft, quickly pierced in that encounter that foremost of all bowmen.4 Then Vrihatkshatra, taking up another bow and smiling (at his foe), soon made the mighty car-warrior Kshemadhurti steedless and driverless and carless.5 And with another broad-headed shaft that was well-tempered and sharp, he cut off, from the trunk of his royal antagonist his head blazing with (a pair of) ear-rings. head, graced with curly locks and a diadem, suddenly cut off, fell down on the Earth and looked resplendent like a luminary fallen from the firmament. Having slain his foe, the mighty car-warrior Vrihatkshatra became filled with joy and fell with great force upon thy troops for the sake of the Parthas. The great bowman Viradhanwan, O Bharata, endued with great prowess, resisted Dhrishtaketu who was advancing against Drona.9 countering each other, those two heroes having arrows for their fangs, and both endued with great activity, struck each other with many thousands of arrows.10 Indeed, those two tigers among men fought with each other like two leaders of elephantine herds in the deep woods, with fury." Both endued with great energy, they fought, each desirous of slaying the other, like two enraged tigers in a mountain cave.12 That combat, O monarch, became exceedingly fierce. Deserving to be witnessed, The very Siddhas and the Charait became highly wonderful. nas, in large numbers, witnessed it with wonder-waiting eyes.13 Then Viradhanwan, O Bharata, with a laugh, cut off in rage Dhrishtaketu's bow in twain by means of broad-headed arrows.14 Abondoning that broken bow, the ruler of the Chedis, that mighty car-warrior, took up a fierce dart made of iron and equipt with a golden staff.15 Bending with his hands, O Bharata, that dart of fierce energy towards the car of Viradhanwan, Dhrishtaketu hurled it carefully and with great force.16 with great force by that hero-slaying dart, and his heart pierced by it through, Viradhanwan quickly fell down on the Earth from his car.17 Upon the fall of that hero, that mighty carwarrior among the Trigartas, thy army, O lord, was broken by the Pandavas.18 (Thy son) Durmukha sped sixty shafts at Sahadeva, and uttered a loud shout in that battle, challenging that son of Pandu.19 The son of Madri then, filled with rage, pierced Durmukha with many keen arrows, smiling the while, the brother striking the brother.20 Beholding the mighty Durmukha fighting furiously, Sahadeva then, O Bhārata, once more struck him with nine shafts.21 Endued with great strength

Sahadeva then cut off Durmukha's standard with a broadheaded arrow, and struck down his four steeds with four other And then with another broad-headed arrow welltempered and sharp, he cut off, from his trunk, the head of Durmukha's charioteer that blazed with a pair of ear-rings.28 And cutting off Durmukha's large bow with a razor-faced arrow, Sahadeva pierced Durmukha himself in that battle with five Durmukha then, cheerlessly jumping down from that steedless car, mounted the car, O Bharata, of Niramitra.25 Then that slaver of hostile heroes, viz., Sahadeva, filled with rage, slew in that great battle Niramitra in the midst of his division with a broad-headed arrow.26 Thereupon prince Niramitra, the son of the ruler of the Trigartas, fell down from his car, afflicting thy army with great grief.27 Slaying him, the mighty-armed Sahadeva looked resplendent like Rāma the son of Dacaratha after slaying the mighty (Rākshasa) Khara.28 Beholding that mighty car-warrior, viz., prince Niramitra, slain, loud cries of Oh and Alas arose, O monarch, among the Trigarta warriors.29 Nakula, O king, in a moment vanquished This seemed highly wonderful. 80 thy son Vikarna of large eyes. Vyaghradatta, by means of his straight shafts, made Sātyaki invisible with his steeds and driver and standard in the midst of his division. The brave grandson of Cini, baffling those shafts with great lightness of hand, felled Vyaghradatta by means of his arrows, with his steeds and driver and stan-Upon the fall, O lord, of that prince of the Magadhas. the latter, struggling vigorously, rushed against Yuyudhana from all sides.33 Scattering their shafts and lances by thousands, and short arrows and spears and mallets and thick clubs, 54 those brave warriors fought in that battle with that invincible hero of the Satwata race. Endued with great might, the invincible Sātyaki, that bull among men, with the greatest ease and laughing the while, vanquished them all. The Maghadas were nearly exterminated. A small remnant flew from the Beholding this, thy army, already afflicted with the arrows of Yuyudhāna, broke, O lord! Then that foremost one of Madhu's race, having slaughtered in battle thy troops, 87 that illustrious hero, looked resplendent as he shook his bow. Thy army, O king, was thus routed by that high-souled one of the Sātwata race. 88 Indeed, frightened by that hero of long arms, none approached him for fight. Then Drona filled with rage, and rolling his eyes, himself rushed impetuously towards Sātyaki of feats incapable of being baffled." "89

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:46 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

SECTION CVIII.

"Sanjaya said,—'The illustrious son of Somadatta pierced each of the sons of Draupadi, those great bowmen, with five arrows, and once more with seven arrows.1 Much afflicted, O lord, by that fierce warrior, they were stupified and knew not for sometime what to do. Then that crusher of foes, viz., Catanika the son of Nakula, piercing Somadatta's son, that bull among men, with a couple of arrows, uttered in joy a loud roar.3 The other brothers then, struggling vigorously, quickly pierced the wrathful son of Somadatta, each with three straight shafts. Then the illustrious son of Somadatta, O monarch, sped at them five shafts, piercing each of them in the chest with one shaft.5 Then those five brothers, thus pierced by that high-souled warrior with his shafts, surrounded that hero on every side and began to pierce him deeply with their shafts. Then the son of Arjuna, filled with rage, despatched, with keen shafts, the four steeds of Saumadatti to the regions of Yama. And the son Bhimasena, cutting off the bow of the illustrious son of Somadatta, uttered a loud shout and pierced his foe with many sharp arrows.8 The son of Yudhishthira then, cutting off Saumadatti's standard, felled it on the Earth, while the son of Nakula felled the enemy's charioteer from his niche in the Then the son of Sahadeva, ascertaining the foe to be on the point of leaving the field in consequence of the acts of the brothers, cut off, with a razor-faced arrow, the head of that illustrious warrior.10 That head, decked with ear-rings of gold, fell on the Earth and adorned the field like the Sun of brilliant effulgence that rises at the end of the Yuga." the head of the high-souled son of Somadatta thus falling on the ground, thy troops, O king, inspired with fear, fled in all drections,12

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:46 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized ,

"The Rakshasa Alamvusha in that battle, filled with rage, fought with the mighty Bhimasena like Ravana's son (Indrajit) with (Rāma's brother) Lakshmana.18 Beholding that Rākshasa and that human warrior engaged in fight, all creatures experienced both joy and wonder.14 Then Bhima, O king, laughing the while, pierced that wrathful prince of Rākshasas, viz., Rishyacringa's son (Alamvusha), with nine keen shafts.15 Then that Rākshasa, thus pierced in battle, uttered a loud and awful sound, and rushed, with all his followers, against Bhima.16 Piercing Bhima then with five straight shafts, he quickly destroyed, in that battle, thirty cars supporting Bhima.17 once more destroying four hundred cars of Bhimasena, the Rākshasa pierced Bhimasena himself with winged arrows. mighty Bhima, deeply pierced by the Rākshasa,48 sat down on the terrace of his car, overcome by a swoon. The son of the Wind-god then, recovering his senses, became filled with rage.19 Drawing his excellent and terrible bow that was capable of bearing a great strain, he afflicted Alamvusha, in every part of his body, with keen shafts.20 Thereupon the Rākshasa who resembled a huge mass of antimony, looked resplendent, O king, like a flowering Kincuka.21 Whilst being struck in that battle with those shafts sped from the bow of Bhima, the Rākshasa recollected the slaughter of his brother (Vaka) by the illustrious Pāndava.22 Assuming then an awful form, he addressed Bhima, saying,—Wait a little in this battle, O Partha! Behold today my prowess !28 O thou of wicked understanding, that foremost of Rākshasas, viz., the mighty Vaka, was my brother! true he was slain by thee! But that took place out of my sight!24—Having said these words unto Bhima, Alamvusha made himself invisible, and began to cover Bhimasena with a dense shower of arrows.26 Upon the disappearance of the Rākshasa, Bhima, O monarch, covered the welkin with straight Thus afflicted by Bhima, Alamvusha soon returned And soon again, he entered into the bowels of the Earth, and once more becoming little he suddenly soared into Alamvusha assumed countless forms. ing subtile and now huge and now gross, he began to roar like the clouds.28 And he uttered diverse kinds of words and 39 speeches all around. And from the welkin there fell thousands of arrowy torrents,29 as also darts, and Kunapas, and lances, and pikes, and axes, and spears, and rockets, and spiked maces, and short arrows, and battle-axes, so and rocks, and scimitars, and treacle, and swords, and thunders also. That awful downpour of arrows caused by the Rakshasa, si slew the troops of Pandu's son on the field of battle. And in consequence of that arrowy downpour, many elephants also of the Pandava army were slain, 32 and many steeds also, O king, and many And many car-warriors fell down from their cars, foot-soldiers. slain by the Rikshasa's shafts. 53 And a river was caused there whose waters were blood and whose eddies were constituted by cars. And it abounded with elephants that constituted its alligators. And the umbrellas of car-warriors constituted its swans, and the flesh and marrow of animals, its And it teemed with the (cut off) arms of human beings, And it was haunted by many that constituted its snakes. Rākshasas and other cannibals. And it wafted away, O king, countless Chedis and Pānchālas and Srinjayas. 84-85 him, O monarch, careering so fearlessly in that battle and seeing his prowess, the Pandavas became filled with anxiety. 56 And joy filled the hearts of thy troops then. And amongst the latter, loud and terrible sounds of musical instruments, making the hair to stand on end, arose. 87 Hearing that loud uproar made by thy troops, the son of Pandu could not bear it as a snake cannot bear the sound of human palms.33 With eyes red as copper in rage, with glances that like fire consumed every thing, the son of the Wind-god, like Tashtri himself, aimed the weapon known by the name of Tashtri. 39 From that weapon were produced thousands of arrows on all sides. And in consequence of those arrows, a universal rout was seen among thy That weapon, shot in battle by Bhimasena, destroying the effective illusion produced by the Rākshasa, greatly afflicted the Rikshasa himself.41 Struck in every part of his body by Bhimasena, the Rākshasa then, abandoning Bhimasena, fled towards the division of Drona.42 Upon the defeat of that prince of Rikshasas by the high-souled Bhima, the Pandavas caused every point of the compass to resound with their leonine roars.⁴³ And filled with joy, they worshipped the mighty son of Marut, like the Maruts worshipping Cakra after the defeat in battle of Prahlāda.' "44

SECTION CIX

"Sanjaya sāid,—'(Having fled away from Bhima, Alamvusha, in another part of the field, careered fearlessly in battle). And while he was thus fearlessly careering in battle, the son of Hidimva rushed impetuously at him and pierced him with keen The battle between those two lions among Rākshasas became terrible. Both of them invoked into existence diverse illusions like Cakra and Camvara (in days of old).2 excited with rage, attacked Ghatotkacha. Indeed, the encounter between those two foremost of Rākshasas resembled that of old between Rāma and Rāvana, O lord! Then Ghatotkacha, having pierced Alamvusha in the centre of the chest with twenty long shafts, repeatedly roared like a lion. Smilingly, O king, Alamvusha also, repeatedly piercing the invincible son of Hidimva, uttered loud roars in joy, filling the entire welkin. two foremost of Rakshasas, both endued with great might, became filled with rage.4-6 They fought with each other, displaying their powers of illusion, but without any of them getting any advantage over the other. Each, creating a hundred illusions, stupified the other. Both accomplished in producing illusions in battle, they fought with each other, producing The illusions, O king, that Ghatotkacha displayed in battle, were all destroyed, O monarch, by Alamvusha producing similar illusions of his own. Beholding that prince of Rākshasas, viz., Alamvusha, who was accomplished in producing illusions, fight in that manner, the Pandavas became filled with Filled with anxiety, they then caused him to be surrounded by many foremost of car-warriors.9-10 Bhimasena and others, O monarch, all rushed in rage against him. him, O sire, on all sides by means of numberless cars," they shrouded him from every side with shafts like men in a forest encompassing an elephant with blazing brands. Baffling that shower of weapons by means of the illusion of his own wear

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:48 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

pons,12 Alamvusha freed himself from that press of cars like an elephant from a forest conflagration. Then drawing his terrible bow whose twang resembled the thunder of Indra,18 he pierced the son of the Wind-god with five and twenty shafts, and Bhimasena's son with five, and Yudhishthira with three, and Sahadeva with seven, and Nakula with three and seventy, and each of the five sons of Draupadi with five shafts, and uttered a loud roar.14-15 Then Bhimasena pierced him in return with nine shafts, and Sahadeva with five. And Yudhishthira pierced the Rākshasa with a hundred shafts.16 And Nakula pierced him with four and sixty shafts, and each of the sons of Draupadi pierced him with three shafts. The son of Hidimva, having pierced him with five hundred shafts,17 Alamvusha once more pierced him with seventy, and that mighty warrior then uttered a loud roar. With that loud roar of Ghatotkacha the Earth shook, 18 O king, with her mountains and forests and with her trees and waters. Deeply pierced on all sides by those great bowmen and mighty car-warriors,19 Alamvusha pierced each of them in return with five arrows. Then that Rakshasa, O chief of the Bharatas, viz., the son of Hidimva, filled with rage, pierced that other angry Rakshasa in battle with many shafts. Then that mighty prince of Rakshasas, viz., Alamvusha, deeply pierced, 20-21 quickly shot countless shafts equipt with wings of gold and whetted on stone. Those shafts, perfectly staight, all entered the body of Ghatotkacha,22 like angry snakes of great strength entering a mountain summit. Then the Pandavas, O king, filled with anxiety, and Hidimva's son Ghatotkacha also, sped at their foe from every side clouds of keen shafts. struck in battle by the Pandavas desirous of victory, 25-24 Alamvusha, mortal as he was, did not know what to do. Then that delighter in battle, viz., the mighty son of Bhimasena,25 beholding that state of Alamvdsha, set his heart upon his destruc-He rushed with great impetuosity towards the car of that prince of Rakshasas,26 that car which resembled a burnt mountain summit or a broken heap of antimony. Hidimva, inflamed with wrath, flew from his own car to that of Alamvusha, and seized the latter.27 He then took him up from the car like Gāruda taking up a snake. Thus dragging him up with his arms, he began to whirl him repeatedly,28 and then crushed him into pieces, hurling him down on the Earth like a man crushing an earthen pot into fragments by hurling it against a rock. Endued with strength and activity, and possessed of great prowess,29 the son of Bhimasena, inflamed with wrath in battle, inspired all the troops with fear. limbs broken and bones reduced to fragments, the frightful Rākshāsa Alamvusha, thus slain by the heroic Ghatotkacha, resembled a tall Cala uprooted and broken by the wind. the slaughter of that wanderer of the night, the Parthas became very cheerful. 80-31 And they uttered leonine roars and waved Thy brave warriors, however, beholding that their garments. mighty prince of Rakshasas, viz., Alamvusha, slain and lying like a crushed mountain, uttered cries, O monarch, of Oh and Alas. $2-88 And people, possessed with curiosity, went to view that Rākshasa lying helplessly on the Earth like a piece of charcoal (no longer capable of burning).34 The Rākshasa Ghatotkacha then, that foremost of mighty beings, having thus slain his foe, uttered a loud shout like Vāsava after slaying (the Asura) Vala. 35 Having achieved that excedingly difficult feat, Ghatotkacha was much applauded by his sires as also by Indeed, having felled Alamvusha like an Alamhis relatives. vusha fruit, he rejoiced exceedingly with his friends. 86 arose then a loud uproar (in the Pandava army) of conchs and of diverse kinds of arrows. Hearing that noise, the Kauravas uttered loud shouts in reply, filling the whole Earth with its echoes.' "87

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:48 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized ,

SECTION CX.

"Dhritarāshtra said,—'Tell me, O Sanjaya, how Yuyudhāna rushed against the son of Bharadwaja in battle. I feel a great curiosity to hear it !"

"Sanjaya said,—'Listen, O thou of great wisdom, to the account of that battle, that makes the hair stand on end, between Drona and the Pandavas headed by Yuyudhana!2 holding the (Kuru) army slaughtered, O sire, by Yuyudhana, Drona himself rushed towards that warrior of unbaffled prowess,

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:48 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

called also by the name of Sātyaki. Sātyaki pierced that mighty car-warrior, viz., the son of Bharadwaja, thus advancing against him, with five and twenty small arrows. Drona also, possessed of great prowess in battle, with deliberate aim, quickly pierced Yuyudhana with five whetted arrows equipt with wings of gold. Those arrows, piercing the hard armour of the foe and drinking his life blood, entered the Earth, O king, like sighing The long-armed Sātyaki then, inflamed with rage like an elephant struck with the hook, pierced Drona with fifty long arrows that resembled flames of fire.7 Then Bharadwāja's son, thus quickly pierced in battle by Yuyudhāna, pierced the carefully exerting Sātyaki in return with many Then that great bowman, endued with great might, and filled with rage, once more afflicted that hero of the Satwata race with many straight shafts.9 Thus struck in that battle by the son of Bharadwaja, Satyaki, O monarch, knew not what Then, O king, Yuyudhana's face became cheerless, seeing the son of Bharadwaja shoot countless keen arrows.11 Beholding Sātyaki thus situated, thy sons and troops, O king, becoming exceedingly cheerful, repeatedly uttered leonine roars.18 Hearing that terrible uproar and beholding that hero of Madhu's race thus afflicted, king Yudhishthira, O monarch, addressing all his soldiers, said,18—That foremost one among the Vrishnis, viz., the brave Sātyaki of prowess incapable of being baffled, is about to be devoured by the heroic Drona like the Sun by Rāhu!14 Go and rush ye to the spot were Sātyaki is battling!-The king, addressing Dhrishtadyumna of the Panchala race, said, 16—Rush thou with speed at Drona! Why dost thou tarry, O son of Prishata! Seest thou not the great danger to ourselves that has already arisen from Drona?16 Drona is a great bowman. He is sporting with Yuyudhana in battle like a boy with a bird bound in a string!17 Let all of you, headed by Bhimasena, and accompanied by thee, proceed thither where Sātyaki's car is!18 Behind you I will follow with my troops! Rescue Sātyaki today who is already within the jaws of the Destroyer!19—Having said these words, O Bhārata, king Yudhishthira with all his troops rushed towards Drona for the sake of Yuyudhāna.20 Blessed be thou, great was the uproar made there by the Pandavas and the Srinjayas all fighting with Drona only.21 Together approaching, O tiger among men, that mighty car-warrior, viz., the son of Bharadwaja, they covered him with showers of keen arrows equipt with the feathers of Kankas and peacocks.22 Drona, however, received all those heroes smilingly like a householder receiving guests, arrived of their own will, with seats and water.23 With the shafts of Bharadwaja's bow-wielding son, those heroes were well gratified like guests, O king, with the hospitality they receive in the houses (of good hosts).24 And none of them, O lord, could even gaze at the son of Bharadwaja who then resembled the thousand-rayed Sun at midday.25 Indeed, Drona, that foremost of all wielders of weapons, scorched all those great bowmen with showers of arrows like the Sun scorching (everything below) with his burning rays.26 Thus struck, O king, by Drona, the Pandavas and the Srinjayas beheld no protector, like elephants sunk in a morass.27 The mighty arrows of Drona, as they coursed (through the welkin), looked like the rays of the Sun blasting everything around. In that encounter, five and twenty warriors among the Panchalas were slain by Drona, who were all regarded as Mahārathas and all approved (as such) by Dhrishtadyumna.29 And amongst all the troops of the Pandavas and the Panchalas, men quietly beheld the brave Drona slaying the foremost of warriors in succession. 50 Having slain a hundred warriors amongst the Kekayas and routing them on all sides, Drona stood, O monarch, like the Destroyer himself with wideopen mouth.31 The mighty-armed Drona vanquished the Panchālas, the Srinjayas, the Matsyas, and the Kekayas, O monarch, by hundreds and thousands. 82 Pierced by the arrows of Drona, the clamour made by them resembled that made in the woods by the denizens of the forest when encompassed by a conflagra-The gods, Gandharvas, and the Pitris, said,—Behold, the Panchalas, and the Pandavas, with all their troops, are flying away !34—Indeed, when Drona was thus engaged in slaughtering the Somakas in battle, none ventured to advance against him, and none succeeded in piercing him. 85 that dreadful encounter, so destructive of great heroes, continued, Pritha's son (Yudhishthira) suddenly heard the blare of Pānchajanya.86 Blown by Vāsudeva, that prince of conchs gave Indeed, while the heroic protectors of the ruler of the Sindhus were fighting, st and while the Dhartarashtras were roaring in front of Arjuna's car, the twang of Gandiva could not be heard. 58 The royal son of Pandu repeatedly swooned, and thought,—Without doubt, all is not well with Partha, since that prince of conchs (Pānchajanya) is yielding such blasts, 19 and since the Kauravas also, filled with joy, are incessantly uttering such shouts !- Thinking in this way, with an anxious heart,40 Ajātacatru the son of Kunti said unto him of the Sātwata race (viz., Sātyaki) these words in a voice choked Though repeatedly stupified, king Yudhishthira, however, did not lose sight of what was to be done next. dressing Cini's grandson, that bull of his clan, (Yudhishthira said),41—O grandson of Cini, the time for that eternal duty which the righteous ones of old have indicated (for friends) towards friends in seasons of distress, hath now come 142 amongst the Cinis, reflecting within myself, I do not, O Sātyaki, see, amongst all my warriors, one who is a greater well-wisher to us than thou!48 He who is always well-affected, he who is always obedient, I think, he should be appointed to a grave commission in times of distress!44 As Keçava is ever the refuge of the Pandavas, even so art thou, O thou of Vrishni's race, who art equal unto Keçava in prowes!45 I will, there fore, lay a burthen on thee! It behoveth thee not to frustrate my purpose!46 Arjuna is thy brother, friend, and preceptor! O bull among men, in this battle, render him aid in time of Thou art devoted to truth! Thou art a hero! Thou art the dispeller of the fears of friends! Thou art celebrated in the world, in consequence of thy acts, O hero, as one that is truthful in speech !48 He, O grandson of Cini, who casteth away his body while fighting in battle for friends, is equal to him who giveth away to Brāhmanas the whole Earth!49 We have heard of various kings gone to heaven, having given away the whole of this Earth unto Brahmanas with due rites!50 O thou of virtuous soul, I beg of thee, with joined hands, even this, viz., that, O lord, attain thou the fruit of giving away (unto Brāhmanas) the whole Earth, or something higher than that, (by incurring danger to thy life itself for aiding Arjuna) !51 There is one, viz., Krishna, that dispeller of the fears of friends, who is ever willing to cast away his life in battle (for the sake of friends)! Sātyaki, art the second !52 None but a hero can render aid unto a hero exerting valorously in battle, from desire of fame! An ordinary person cannot do so.58 In this matter, there is none else save thee who can protect Arjuna!54 On one occasion, while applauding thy numerous feats, Arjuna, giving me great pleasure, repeatedly recited them!55 He said of thee that thou art endued with extreme lightness of hands, that thou art conversant with all modes of warfare, that thou art possessed of great activity and great prowess! [Sātyaki is endued with great wisdom, is acquainted with every weapon, is a hero, and is never stupified in battle !56 Of broad neck and broad chest, of mighty arms and broad cheeks, of great strength and great prowess, Sātyaki is a high-souled Mahāratha!57 He is my disciple and friend! I am dear to him, and he is dear to me! Becoming my ally, Yuyudhana will crush the Kauravas!58 Even if Keçava and Rāma, and Aniruddha, and the mighty car-warrior Praddyumna, and Gada, and Sārana, and Cāmva, with all the Vrishnis, case themselves in mail for assisting us, O king, in the field of battle, I shall yet appoint that tiger among men, viz., Satyaki of unbaffled prowess, for our aid, since there is none equal to him !]69-61_ Even this is what Dhananjaya told me in the Dwaita woods, in thy absence while truly describing thy merits in an assembly of righteous persons!62 It behoveth thee not, O thou of the Vrishni race, to felsify that expectation of Dhananjaya, and also of myself and Bhima!68 When, returning from to various tirthas, I proceeded to Dwaraka, there I witnessed thy reverence for Arjuna!64 While we were at Upaplava, I did not mark anybody else, O grandson of Cini, who showed us such affection as thou! 55 Thou art of noble lineage and feelest For showing kindness, therefore, to one who reverence for us. is thy friend and preceptor, it behoveth thee, O thou of mighty arms, to act in a way deserving, O great bowman, of thy friendship and prowess and noble parentage and truthfulness, 40

O thou of Madhu's race !66-67 Suyodhana, cased in armour by Drona himself, hath suddenly gone, following Arjuna! other great car-warriors of the Kauravas have, before that, Loud uproars are being heard against followed Arjuna !68 Arjuna's car! O grandson of Cini, it behoveth thee, O giver of honors, to go thither quickly !69 Bhimasena and ourselves, well-equipt and with all our forces, will resist Drona if he advance against thee !70 Behold, O grandson of Cini, the Bharata troops are flying away in battle, and as they are flying away, they are uttering loud wails!" Like the very Ocean at full tide agitated by a mighty tempest, the Dhartarashtra host, O sire, is agitated by Savyasāchin !73 Behold, in consequence of countless cars and men and steeds moving quickly, the earthy dust raised is gradually spreading (over the field)!78 See, that slaver of hostile hosts, viz., Phalguna, is encompassed by the Sindhu-Sauviras armed with pikes and lances and adorned with many heroes in their ranks !74 Without vanquishing this force it will not be possible to vanquish Jayadratha! These warriors are prepared to lay down their lives for the sake of the ruler of the Sindhus!75 Behold the invincible Dhartarashtra force. stationed there, that bristles with arrows and darts and tall standards, and that teems with steeds and elephants!76 the beat of their drums and the loud blare of their conchs, the tremendous leonine shouts uttered by them, and the rattle of their car-wheels.77 Hear the grunt of their elephants, the heavy tread of their foot-soldiers, and the clamp of their rushing cavalry, which all seem to make the very Earth tremble!78 him is the division of Jayadratha, and behind is that of Drona! So great is the number of the foe that he is capable of afflicting the chief of the celestials himself.79 Sunk in the midst of this fathomless host, Arjuna may lose his life! If he be slain in battle, how can one like me live?80 Is this calamity to befall me when thou art alive? Dark-blue in color, young in years, of curly locks, and exceedingly handsome, is that son of Pandu 182 Active in the use of weapons, and conversant with every mode of warfare, the mighty-armed Arjuna hath, O sire, penetrated into the Bharata host at sunrise! The day is about to end! O thou of Vrishni's race, I do not know whether he liveth or

The vast Kuru host is like the ocean !38 O sire, Vibhatsu hath penetrated into it all alone! That army is incapable of being resisted by the very gods in battle !84 In today's battle, I fail to keep my judgment clear! Drona also is, with great might, afflicting my forces 185 Thou seest, O mighty-armed one, how that regenerate one is careering in battle! several tasks present themselves together, thou art well skilled in selecting that which should be first attended to!86 hoveth thee, O giver of honors, to accomplish with activity that task which is the gravest of all! Amongst all these tasks I myself think that this (viz., aiding Arjuna) is the first that demands our attention !87 The rescue of Arjuna in battle should be first undertaken! I do not grieve for Him of Daçārha's race. He is the Protector and the Lord of the Uuniverse !88 I tell thee truly that that tiger among men, O sire, is able to vanquish in battle the three worlds assembled together! 89 What need I say, therefore, of this weak Dhartarashtra host? Arjuna, however, O thou of Vrishni's race, is being afflicted by countless odds in battle !90 He may yield up his life! It is for this that I am so cheerless! Go thou then in his track, since persons like thee should follow a person like him, at such a season, urged on by one like me! Amongst the foremost ones of the Vrishni race, two are regarded as Atirathas!91-92 the mighty-armed Praddyumna and thyself, O Satwata, that are so famous! In weapons thou art equal to Nārāyana himself, and in strength to Sankarshana !98 In bravery, thou art equal to Dhananjaya, O tiger among men, and surpassest Bhishma and Drona, and every one accomplished in battle !94 O tiger among men, the wise speak of thee, saying, O Madhava,-There is nothing unachievable by Sātyaki !95-O thou of great strength, do thou, therefore, that which I say unto thee, viz., obey the wishes of all here, of myself and of Arjuna!96 behoveth thee not, O mighty-armed one, to frustrate that wish! Reckless of thy very life, career thou in battle like a hero! 97 O grandson of Cini, the scions of Daçarha's race never care to protect their lives in battle! Avoiding battle, or fighting from behind breast-works, or flying away from battle,98—these practices of cowards and wretches are never practised by the Dacar-

The virtuous-souled Arjuna is thy superior, O bull among the Cinis !99 Vāsudeva is the superior of both thyself and the intelligent Arjuna! Casting my eyes on these two reasons, I say unto thee these words !100 Do not discard my words, I am the superior of thy superiors. That which I am saying unto thee is approved by Vāsudeva as also by Arjuna!101 thee this truly! Go then to the spot where Dhananjaya is! Attending to these words of mine, O thou of prowess incapable of being baffled,102 penetrate into this host of the wicked son of Dhritarashtra! Having penetrated into it duly, encountering the great car-warriors, and display, O Sātwata, such feats as are worthy of thyself!" "103

MAHABHARATA.

SECTION CXI.

"Sanjaya said,—'That bull amongst the Cinis, viz., Satyaki, hearing these words full of affection, agreeable, frought with sweet sounds, opportune, delightful, and equitable, that were uttered by king Yudhishshthira the just, replied unto him, O chief of the Bharatas, saying,1-2-O thou of unfading glory. I have heard all the words thou hast said, words frought with justice, delightful, and conducive to fame, for the sake of Phal-At such a time, indeed, beholding one devoted (to thee) like me, it behoveth thee, O king of kings, to command him as much as thou canst command Partha himself! As regards myself, I tell thee that I am prepared to cast away my life for the sake of Dhananjaya! Commanded, again, by thee, what is there that I would not do in great battle? What need I say of this weak (Dhartarashtra) force? Urged by thee, I am prepared, O best of men, to battle with the three worlds including the gods, the Asuras, and men! Today I will fight with the entire army of Suyodhana, and vanquish it in battle! do I say this unto thee, O king ! Safely shall I reach Dhananjay, himself in safety, and after Jayadratha is slain, I shall, O king, come back into thy presence ! I must, however, O king, inform thee of the words of Vasudeva as also of the intelligent Arjuna! I was strongly and repeatedly solicited by Arjuna in the midst of all our warriors and in the hearing also of Vasudeva (in these words) !16-[Today, O Mādhava, nobly resolved on battle, protect thou the king carefully, till I slay Jayadratha!11 Making over the monarch to thee, O mighty-armed one, or to that great car-warrior Praddyumna, I can go with an easy heart towards Jayadratha!12 Thou knowest Drona in battle, that warrior who is ragarded as the foremost one among the Thou knowest also the vow made by him in the presence of all, O lord !18 The son of Bharadwaja is always eager to seize the king! He is competent also in afflicting king Yudhishthira in battle !14 Charging thee with the protection of that best of men, viz., king Yudhishthira the just, I will proceed today for the destruction of the ruler of the Sindhus!15 Slaying Jayadratha I shall soon come back, O Mādhava! that Drona may not succeed in forcibly seizing king Yudhishthira the just in battle !16 If Yudhishthira be seized by Bharadwāja's son, O Mādhava, I shall not succeed in slaying Jayadratha, and great will be my grief!17 If that best of men, the truthful son of Pandu, be seized, it is evident that we shall have again to go into the woods !10 My success, therefore, over Jayadratha, it is plain, will be productive of no benefit, if Drona, inflamed with rage, succeeds in seizing Yudhishthira in battle !19 O mighty-armed one, for doing what is agreeable to me, therefore, O Mādhava, as also for the sake of my success and fame, protect the king in battle !] ao __Thou seest, therefore, O king, thou hast been made over to me as a trust by Savyasāchin, O lord, in consequence of his constant fear of Bharadwāja's son !21 O mighty-armed one, I myself daily see, O lord, that there is none, save Rukmini's son (Praddyumna), who can be a match for Drona in battle !32 I also am regarded to be a match for the intelligent son of Bharadwaja in battle. It is plain, therefore, I cannot dare falsify that reputation which I have, or disregard the commands of my preceptor (Arjuna), or leave thee, O king! The preceptor (Drona), cased as he is in impenetrable mail, in consequence of his lightness of arms,28-24 obtaining thee in battle, will sport with thee as a child with a little bird! If Krishna's son bearing the Makara on his banner were here,26 I could then have made thee over to him, for he would have protected thee as Arjuna himself! Thou shouldst protect thyself! When I am gone, who will protect thee,26 who, that is, that will advance against Drona while I proceed towards Arjuna? O king, let no fear be thine today on Arjuna's account!27 He never becomes cheerless under any burden howsoever heavy! Those warriors that are opposed to him, viz., the Sauvirakas, the Saindhava-Pauravas,28 they from the north, they from the south, and they O king, headed by Karna, that are regarded as foremost of car-warriors, 29 do not together come up to a sixteenth part of Arjuna! The whole Earth rising against him, with the gods, the Asuras, and men, so with all the tribes of Rakshasas, O king, with the Kinnaras, the great snakes, and in fact, all the mobile and the immobile creatures assembled together, is no match for Arjuna in battle!31 ing this, O king, let thy fear on Dhananjaya's account be dispelled! There where those two heroes and great bowmen, viz., the two Krishnas, of prowess incapable of being baffled, are,82 there the slightest obstacle cannot happen to their purpose! Think of the celestial puissance, the accomplishment in weapons, the resourcefulness, the wrath in battle, the gratefulness, and the compassion of thy brother! Think also, O king, of the wonderful knowledge of weapons that Drona will display in battle when I leave this place for going to Arjuna! The preceptor, O monarch, is eagerly solicitous of seizing He is eagerly desirous also, O king, of making good thee !88-35 his vow, O Bharata! Be attentive, O king, to thy own protec-Who will protect thee when I am gone, so who is he, that is, confiding on whom I may go towards Pritha's son Phalguna? I tell thee truly, O great king, that without making thee over to somebody in this great battle, I will not surely go towards Arjuna, O thou of Kuru's race! Reflecting on this, from every point of view, with the aid of thy intelligence, O foremost of all intelligent persons, and ascertaining with thy intelligence what is for thy highest good, command me, O king !57-88-

MAHABHARATA.

"'Yudhishthira, hearing these words, said,—It is even so, O mighty-armed one, as thou sayest, O Mādhava! For all that, however, O sire, my heart doth not become easy on Arjuna's account !50 I shall take the greatest precautions in protecting myself! Commanded by me, go thou thither where

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:48 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

Dhananjaya hath gone !40 Weighing, with my judgment, my own protection in battle with the necessity there is of going towards Arjuna, the latter seems to me preferable.41 self ready, therefore, to go thither whither Dhananjaya hath gone! The mighty Bhima will protect me !42 Prishata's son, with all his uterine brothers, and all these mighty kings, and the sons of Draupadi, will, without doubt, protect me !48 five Kekaya brothers, and the Rakshasa Ghatotkacha, and Virāta, and Drupada, and the mighty car-warior Cikhandin,44 and Dhrishtaketu of great strength, and Kuntibhoja, O sire, and Nakula, and Sahadeva, and the Panchalas, and the Srinjayas,45 -all these, O sire, will, without doubt, very carefully protect me! Drona at the head of his troops, and Kritavarman also, in battle,46 will not succeed in beating us or afflicting me! scorcher of foes, viz., Dhrishtadyumna, displaying his prowess, will resist the angry Drona like the continent resisting the sea. There where Prishata's son, that slayer of hostile heroes, will remain,47-48 there Drona will never be able to forcibly transgress This Dhristadyumna sprang from the fire, for the destruction of Drona, clad in mail, armed with bow and arrows and sword, and decked with costly ornaments. Go, O grandson of Cini, with an easy heart, do not be anxious on my account! Dhrishtadyumna will resist the angry Drona in battle!" "49-50.

SECTION CXII.

"Sanjaya said,—'Hearing these words of king Yudhishthira the just, that bull among the Cinis feared the censure of Arjuna if he left the king.' Seeing, however, the certainty of an imputation of cowardice by the people (if he disobeyed Yudhishthira), he said to himself,—Let not people say that I am afraid of proceeding towards Arjuna! —Reflecting repeatedly on this, Sātyaki, that hero invincible in battle, that bull among men, said these words unto king Yudhishthira the just: —If thou thinkest that these arrangments will suffice for thy protection, O monarch, I will then do thy bidding and follow Vibhatsu! I tell thee truly, O king, that there is none in the three worlds that is dearer to me than Phālguna! I will follow in his track at thy command, O giver of honors! There is a nothing that I will not do for thy sake !6 O best of men, the commands of my preceptor are always of weight with me. thy commands are still weightier with me, O lord!7 brothers, viz., Krishna and Dhananjaya, are always engaged in doing what is agreeable to thee!8 Taking thy command on my head, for the sake of Arjuna, O lord, I will proceed, O bull among men, piercing through this impenetrable host! wrathfully through this force of Drona like a fish through the sea. I will go thither, O monarch, were king Jayadratha,10 depending upon his troops, stayeth in fear of the son of Pandu. protected by those foremost of car-warriors, viz., Drona's son and Karna and Kripa!" The distance from here, O king, is three Yojanas, I think, of that spot where Partha stayeth, ready to slay Jayadratha !18 But though Partha is three Yojanas distant I shall yet follow in his track with a stout heart, and stay with him, O king, till Jayadratha's slaughter!18 What man is there that goes to battle without the commands of his superiors? And when one is commanded, O king, as I have been by thee, who is there like me that would not fight?14 I know that place whither I shall have to go, O lord! as this Ocean-like host doth with plough-shares and darts and maces and shields and scimitars and swords and lances and foremost of shafts, I will today agitate this ocean. phant division, consisting of a thousand elephants, that thou seest,15-16 all belonging to the breed known by the name of Anjana, and all endued with great prowess, which are all mounted by a large number of Mlecchas delighting in battle and accomplished in smiting,17—these elephants, O king, that are shedding their juicy secretions like rain-pouring clouds,these never retreat if urged forward by those upon their backs !18 They cannot be vanquished, O king, unless they are slaught-Then again, those car-warriors, numbering thousands, that thou seest,19 are all of royal lineage and are all Maharathas. They are called Rukmarathas.* They are accomplished in weapons and in battling from cars, as also in fighting ^{*} Owners of golden cars. -T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:48 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:48 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89935511112
Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access_use#pd-googl

from the backs of elephants, O monarch !20 Through masters of the science of weapons, they are accomplished in fighting Skilled in battling with maces, masters also of with their fists. the art of close fight,21 they are equally clever in striking with scimitars and falling upon the foe with sword and shield. are brave and learned, and animated by a spirit of rivalry.22 Every day, O king, they vanquish vast numbers of men in battle. They are commanded by Karna and devoted to Dusçāsana.28 Even Vāsudeva applauds them as great car-warriors. solicitous of Karna's welfare, they are obedient to him.24 at Karna's command, O king, that returning from their pursuit of Arjuna and, therefore, unfatigued and unworn, those brave warriors, cased in impenetrable armour and armed with strong bows,25 are certainly waiting for me, ordered by Duryodhana also! Crushing these in battle for thy good, O Kaurava,26 I shall then follow in the track of Savyasāchin! Those other elephants, O king, seven hundred in number, 27. that thou seest, all cased in armour and ridden by Kirātas, and decked with ornaments, the king of the Kirātas, desirous of his life, had formerly presented to Savyasachin, together with many servants in their train. These, O king, were formerly employed in doing thy business.28-29 Behold the vicissitudes that time brings about, for these are now battling against thee! Those elephants are ridden by Kirātas difficult of defeat in battle. 80 They are accomplished in fighting from elephants, and are all sprung from the race of Agni. Formerly they were all vanquished in battle by Savyasāchin.81 They are now waiting for me carefully, under the orders of Duryodhana. Slaying with my shafts, O king, these Kirātas difficult of defeat in battle,52 I shall follow in the track of Arjuna who is intent on the slaughter of the ruler of Those (other) huge elephants, sprung from the race of Anjana,23 of impenetrable hides, well-trained, and adown whose cheeks and from whose mouths the juicy secretions are trickling down, and which are well adorned with armour made wholly of gold,34 are very effective in battle and resemble Airāvat himself! They have come from the northern hills, and are ridden by fierce robbers 55 that are of strong limbs, that are all foremost of warriors, and that are cased in steel coats of

There, amongst them, are persons born of the cow, or of the ape, 36 or of diverse other creatures, including those born That division of the assembled Mlecchas that are all sinful and that come from the fastnesses of Himavat, seem at a distance to be of a smoky color. Obtaining these, and countless Kshatriyas, 87-38 as also Kripa, and Somadatta's son, and that foremost of car-warriors, viz., Drona, and the ruler of the Sindhus, and Karna, he thinks lightly of the Pandavas! 39 Impelled by fate, he regards himself crowned with success. Those I have named will, however, today be within reach of my arrows.40 They shall not escape me, O son of Kunti, even if they be endued with the speed of the mind. Much regarded always by Duryodhana, that prince who dependeth upon the prowess of others,41 those warriors, afflicted with my clouds of Those other car-warriors, shafts, will meet with destruction. O king, whom thou seest, and who have golden standards,42 and are difficult of being resisted, are called Kāmvojas! brave and accomplished, and firmly devoted to the science of weapons.43 Desiring one another's welfare, they are all firmly They compose a full Akshauhini of wrathful warriors, O Bharata,44 and are staying carefully for my sake, well protected by the Kuru heroes. They are on the alert, O king, with their eyes on me!45 I shall certainly destroy them all, like fire destroying a heap of straw. Therefore, O king, let those that equip cars place quivers and all necessaries on my car in proper places. Indeed, in such a dreadful battle, diverse kinds of weapons ought to be taken.46-47 Let the car be equipt (with necessaries) five times more than what professors of military science direct, for I shall have to encounter the Kamvojas who resemble fierce snakes of virulent poison,48 I shall have also to encounter the Kirātas who are armed with diverse weapons of warfare, who resemble virulent poison, who are accomplished in smiting,49 who have always been well treated by Duryodhana. and who on that account are always intent on Duryodhana's I shall also have to encounter the Cakas endued with prowess equal to that of Cakra himself,50 who are fierce as fire and difficult of being put down like a blazing conflagration.51 Indeed, O king, I shall have to encounter in batte many warriors difficult of being resisted. For this, let well-known steeds of the foremost breed and graced with auspicious marks be yoked to my car, after causing their thirst to be slaked and after grooming them duly !—'52

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:48 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

"Sanjaya continued,-'After this, king Yudhishthira caused quivers full of shafts, and diverse kinds of weapons, and, indeed, all necessaries, to be placed on Satyaki's car. 58 people caused his four well-harnessed and excellent steeds to drink intoxicating wines. 4 And having caused those four steeds to drink and walk and bathe and eat, and having adorned them with golden garlands and plucked out their arrows, 55 those animals, that had (for these operations) been freed from the yoke, and that were of the hue of gold and well-trained and endued with great speed and cheerful and exceedingly docile, were duly yoked again unto his car.56 And upon that car was set up a tall standard bearing a lion with golden manes. And that standard had attached round it banners of the hue of white clouds and graced with golden circles and pearls and corals. umbrella set upon a tall staff of gold was also placed upon that vehicle bearing a heavy weight of weapons. 57-58 steeds, adorned with trappings of gold, had been yoked to that car, the younger brother of Daruka, who was the charioteer and the dear friend of Sātyaki,59 came and represented unto the latter that the car had been duly equipt, like Mātali representing the equipment of the car unto Vasava himself. then, having taken a bath and purified himself and undergone every auspicious ceremony,60 gave nishkas of gold unto a thousand Snātaka Brāhmanas who uttered benedictions upon Blessed with those benedictions, Sātyaki, that foremost of handsome men, that here worthy of worship, having drunk kairāta honey, shone resplendent, with reddened eves rolling in intoxication.62 Having touched a brazen mirror and filled with great joy, his energy became doubled and he himself looked like a blazing fire. 68 Taking up on his shoulders his bow with arrows, that foremost of car-warriors, cased in armour and decked in ornaments, had the regenerate ones perform for him the rites of propitiation.64 And fair maidens honored him by showering upon him fried paddy and perfumes and floral gar-

http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google Generated on 2022-02-03 12:48 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

And the hero then, with joined hands, worshipped the feet of Yudhishthira,65 and the latter smelt his head. having undergone all these rites, he then mounted his foremost Then those steeds, cheerful and strong and fleet as the wind,66 and invincible, and belonging to the Sindhu breed. bore him on that triumphant car. Similarly, Bhimasena also, honored by king Yudhishthira the just, and reverentially saluting the monarch,67 set out with Sātyaki. Beholding those two chastisers of foes on the point of penetrating thy host,68 their enemies, viz., thy troops, all stood still with Drona at their head. Then Sātyaki, seeing Bhima cased in mail and following him. 69 saluted that here and spoke unto him these delightful words. Indeed, the heroic Satyaki, with every limb filled with joy, said unto Bhima, 70 - Do thou, O Bhima, protect the king! Even this is thy duty above all things! Piercing through this host whose hour hath come, I will proceed.71 Whether now or hence, the protection of the king is thy highest duty! knowest my prowess, and I also know thine, O chastiser of foes! If, therefore, thou desirest my good, return, O Bhima! Thus addressed by Satyaki, Bhima replied,—Go then, for the success of thy object!73 O best of men, I will protect the king! -Thus addressed, he of Madhu's race answered Bhima, saying,74—Go back, O son of Prithā! My success is certain, since won over by my merits, thou, O Bhima, art today obedient to my wishes!75 Indeed, O Bhima, as these auspicious omens tell me, my victory is assured! After the sinful ruler of the Sindhus will have been slain by the high-souled son of Pandu,76 I shall embrace king Yudhishthira of virtuous soul !- Having said these words unto Bhima and dismissing him with an embrace, that illustrious warrior eyed thy troops like a tiger eyeing a herd of deer. Beholding him thus looking at thy army, O king, 77-78 thy troops became once more stupified and began to tremble violently. Then, O king, Sātyaki, desirous of seeing Arjuna at the command of king Yudhishthira the just, suddenly dashed against thy troops." "79

http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google

SECTION CXIII. .

"Sanjaya said,-'O king, when Yuyudhana, from desire of battle, proceeded against thy troops, king Yudhishthira, surrounded by his forces,1 followed Yuyudhana for reaching the Then the son of the king of the Panchalas, viz., car of Drona. the invincible warrior Dhristadyumna, and king Vasudana, both loudly exclaimed within the Pandava host,-Come, smite quickly, and rush against the foe, so that Sātyaki, that warrior invincible in battle, may pass easily (through the Kaurava Many mighty car-warriors will struggle for vanquishing him !4—The great car-warriors (of the Pandava army), saying this, fell impetuously upon their foes. Indeed, they all rushed, saying,-We will vanquish those that will endeavour to vanquish Sātyaki !5-Then a loud uproar was heard about the car of Sātyaki. Thy son's host, however, covered with Satyaki's shafts, fled away. Indeed, O king, that host was broken into a hundred straggling bodies by him of the Satwata race. while that force was breaking, that mighty car-warrior, viz., the (grandson) of Cini, crushed seven heroic and great bowmen in the front ranks of the foe. And, O monarch, with his shafts that resembled blazing flames of fire, he despatched many other heroes, kings of diverse realms, unto the regions of Yama. sometimes pierced a hundred warriors with one shaft, and sometimes one warrior with a hundred shafts.8-9 Like the great Rudra destroying creatures, he slew elephants and elephantriders, horses and horse-riders, and car-warriors with steeds and drivers.10 None amongst thy troops ventured to advance against Sātyaki who was displaying such lightness of hand and who showered such clouds of shafts." Struck with panic and crushed and grinded thus by that hero of long arms, those brave warriors all left the field at sight of that proud hero.12 Although alone, they saw him multiplied manifold, and were stupified by his energy. And the Earth looked exceedingly beautiful with crushed cars and broken nidas,* O sire, and wheels, and fallen umbrellas and standards, and anukarshas, and banners, and headgears decked with gold, and human arms smeared with sandalpaste and adorned with Angadas, O king, and human thighs resembling trunks of elephants or the tapering bodies of snakes, and faces, beautiful as the moon and decked with ear-rings, of large-eyed warriors lying all about the field. And the ground there looked exceedingly beautiful with the huge bodies of fallen elephants cut off in diverse ways, like a large plain strewn with hills. Crushed by that hero of long arms, steeds, deprived of life and fallen down on the ground, looked beautiful in their traces made of burnished gold and decked with rows of pearls and in their curasses of handsome make and design.18-19 Having slain diverse kinds of thy troops, he of the Satwata race entered into thy host, agitating and routing thy army.20 Then Sātyaki desired to go by that very track by which Dhananjaya had gone before him. Then Drona came and resisted him.21 Encountering the son of Bharadwaja, Yuyudhana, filled with rage, stopped not like a vast expanse of water upon encountering an embankment.22 Drona, however, checking in that battle the mighty car-warrior Yuyudhana, pierced him with five keen shafts capable of penetrating into the very vitals.23 Satvaki. however, O king, in that battle pierced Drona with seven shafts whetted on stone, equipt with golden wings and the feathers of the Kanka and the peacock.24 Then Drona, afflicted Satyaki. his steeds, and his driver, with six shafts. The mighty carwarrior Yuyudhana could not brook that feat of Drona.25 Uttering a leonine shout, he then pierced Drona with ten shafts, and then with six, and then with eight others.26 And once more Yuyudhana pierced Drona with ten shafts, his charioteer with one, and his four steeds with four.27 And with another shaft, O sire, Sātyaki struck Drona's standard. speedily covered Sātyaki, his car, steeds, driver, and standard, with swiftly coursing shafts countless in number like a flight Similarly Yuyudhana fearlessly covered Drona with countless shafts of great speed. Then Drona, addressing Yuyudhāna, said,—Thy preceptor (Arjuna) hath, like a coward, gone away, leaving the battle,28-20 avoiding me who was fighting with him, proceeding by my flank! O thou of Madhu's race, if like thy preceptor, thou too dost not quickly avoid me in this battle, thou shalt not escape me with life today, engaged as I am in battle with thee!—⁸¹

^{*} Nidas were niches or drivers' boxes. -T.

"'Sātyaki, hearing these words, answered,—At the command of king Yudhishthira the just, I shall follow in the track of Dhananjaya! Blessed be thou, O Brāhmana, I would lose time (if I fight with thee)! A disciple should always tread in the way trod by his preceptor. I shall, therefore, follow in the track that has been trod by my preceptor! ***

"Sanjaya continued,—'Having said this much, the grandson of Cini avoided the preceptor and suddenly proceeded onwards, O king! And addressing his charioteer, he said, 4-Drona will, by every means, endeavour to check my progress! carefully, O Suta, in battle, and listen to these grave words of Yonder is seen the host, of great splendour, of the Next to them is the mighty host of the Souther-Avantis! And next to it is the great host of the Valhikas. the side of the Valhikas stands resolved for fight the mighty host commanded by Karna !87 O charioteer, all these hosts are different from one another, but relying upon one another they protect one another on the field of battle !38 Arrived at the space left open between these divisions, cheerfully urge thou the steeds! Indeed, O charioteer, bear me thither, making the steeds adopt a tolerable speed, 39—thither, that is, where are seen the Vālhikas with diverse weapons uplifted in their arms, and the countless Southerners headed by the Sutu's son, 40 and whose division is seen to present a serried array of elephants and steeds and cars and in which stand foot-soldiers raised from diverse realms!41—Having said this much unto his driver, avoiding the Brāhmana (Drona), he proceeded, telling his charioteer,—Pass through the open space between those two divisions towards the fierce and mighty host of Karna! 42however, excited with wrath, pursued him behind, shooting at him countless shafts. Indeed, the preceptor closely followed the highly blessed Yuyudhana who advanced without any desire of turning back. Smiting the great host of Karna with whetted arrows, Sātyaki penetrated into the vast and limitless army of the Bharatas,44 When Yuyudhana, however, entered that army, the troops (opposed to him) fled away. this, the wrathful Kritavarman came forward to resist Satyaki.45 The valiant Sātyaki, striking the advancing Kritavarman with six shafts, quickly slew his four steeds with four other shafts.46 And once again he pierced Kritavarman in the centre of the chest with sixteen straight shafts of great speed.47 Thus encountered, O monarch, with many shafts of fierce energy by him of the Satwata race, Kritavarman was ill able to brook Aiming then a calf-toothed shaft resembling a snake of virulent poison and endued with the speed of the wind, and drawing the bow-string, O monarch, to his ear, he pierced Satyaki in the chest.49 That shaft equipt with beautiful feathers. penetrating through his armour and body and dyed in blood, entered the Earth. 50 Then, O king, Kritavarman, that warrior acquainted with the highest weapons, shooting many shafts, cut off the bow of Sātyaki with arrows fixed thereon.51 excited with rage, he then, in that battle, O king, pierced Sātyaki of unbaffled prowess in the centre of the chest with ten shafts of great keenness.52 Upon his bow being broken, that foremost of mighty men, viz., Sātyaki, hurled a dart at the right arm of Kritavarman.58 And taking up and drawing a tougher bow, Yuyudhana quickly shot at his foe shafts by hundreds and thousands,54 and entirely shrouded Kritavarman and his car with that arrowy downpour. Having thus shrouded the son of Hridika, O monarch, in that battle, Satvakiss cut off, with a broad-headed arrow, the head of his foe's chariot-The charioteer of Hridika's son then. eer from his trunk. thus slain, fell down from that great car.56 At this the steeds of Kritavarman, deprived of a driver, ran away with great The ruler of the Bhojas then, in great agitation, himself checked those steeds.⁵⁷ That heroic warrior then, bow in hand, stood upon his car (ready for battle). Beholding this feat, his troops applauded it highly. Resting for a short space of time, Kritavarman then urged those good steeds of his.58 Himself divested of fear, he inspired his foes with great fear. Sātyaki, however, had by that time left him behind, while Kritavarman himself now rushed against Bhimasena without pursuing Sātyaki,59 Thus issuing out of the division of the Bhojas, Sātyaki proceeded with great speed towards the mighty division of the Kāmvojas.50 Resisted there by many brave and mighty car-warriors, Yuyudhana, of prowess incapable of being baffled, could not then, O monarch, proceed a step.61 Meanwhile Drona, having placed his troops in a proper position and made over the burthen of protecting them to the ruler of the Bhojas, firmly resolved, proceeded with great speed towards Yuyudhāna from desire of battle.62 Then the foremost warriors of the Pandava host, beholding Drona thus pursuing Yuyudhana from behind, cheerfully began to resist him. 68 Panchalas, however, who were headed by Bhimasena, having approached the son of Hridika, that foremost of car-warriors, all became cheerless.64 The heroic Kritavarman, O king, displaying his prowess, resisted all those warriors who, although they had become a little heartless, struggled yet with great Fearlessly he weakened, by means of his arrowy showers, the animals of his foes. The brave warriors, however, (of the Pandava army), though thus afflicted by the ruler of the Bhojas, stood, like high-born soldiers that they were, resolved to fight with the division of the Bhojas itself, from desire of great renown." "66

SECTION CXIV.

"Dhritarāshtra said,—'Our army is equally possessed of many excellencies. It is equally regarded as superior. It is equally arrayed according to the rules of science, and it is equally numerous, O Sanjaya!*1 It is always well treated by us, and is always devoted to us. It is vast in numerical strength, and presents a wonderful aspect. Its prowess had before been tested.2 The soldiers are neither very old nor very young. They are neither lean nor corpulent. Of active habits, of well-developed and strong frames, they are free from disease.3 They are cased in mail and well equipt with arms. They are

^{*} Many of the opening slokas of this section are nearly the same as those of section 76 of Bhishma Parva, vide ante. In a few instances I have adopted the readings of the Bombay edition.—T.

devoted to all kinds of armed exercises.4 They are adepts in mounting upon and descending from the backs of elephants, in moving forward and stepping back, in smiting effectually, and in marching and retreating.5 Oftentimes have they been tested in the management of elephants and steeds and cars. been examined duly, they have been entertained on pays and not for the sake of lineage, nor from favor, nor from relationship. They are not a rabble come of their own accord, nor have they been admitted into my army without pay.7 My army consists of well-born and respectable men, who are, again, contented, well fed, and submissive. They are sufficiently honored by us and They are all famous and endued with sufficiently rewarded. great intelligence.8 They are, again, O son, protected by many of our foremost counsellors and others of righteous deeds. all of whom are best of men resembling the very Regents of the Innumerable rulers of Earth, seeking to do what is agreeable to us, and who have of their own will sided us with their forces and followers, also protect them. 10 Indeed, our army is like the vast Ocean filled with the waters of innumerable rivers running from all directions. It abounds with steeds and cars which, though destitute of wings, still resemble the winged tenants of the air.11 It teems also with elephants adown whose cheeks flow juicy secretions. What can it, therefore, be but Destiny that even such an army should be slain?12 (Oceanlike as it is) vast numbers of combatants constitute its interminable waters, and the steeds and other animals constitute its Innumerable swords and maces and darts and terrible waves. arrows and lances constitute the ears (plied on that ocean).13 Abounding with standards and ornaments, the pearls and gems (of the warriors) constitute the lotuses that deck it. ing steeds and elephants constitute the winds that agitate it into fury.14 Drona constitutes the fathomless cave of that ocean. Kritavarman its vast vortex, Jalasandha its mighty alligator, and Karna the rise of the Moon that makes it swell with energy and pride !15 When that bull amongst the Pandavas, on his single car, hath speedily gone, piercing through that ^{} I prefer the reading Sumākulam to Jhashākulam.—T.

army of mine vast (though it be) like the Ocean, and when Yuyudhana also hath followed him, I do not, O Sanjaya, see the prospect of even a remnant of my troops being left alive by Savyasāchin, and that foremost of car-warriors belonging to the Sātwata race !*16-17 Beholding those two exceedingly active heroes pierce through (the divisions placed in the van), and seeing the ruler of the Sindhus also within reach of the shafts from Gandiva,18 what, indeed, was the measure adopted by the Kuravas impelled by fate? At that time, when all were fighting intently, what became of them?19 O sire, I regard the assembled Kurus to be overtaken by Death himself! deed, their prowess also in battle is no longer seen to be what it once was !20 Krishna and the son of Pandu have both entered the (Kuru) host unwounded! There is none in that host, O Sanjaya, capable of resisting them !41 Many combatants that are great car-warriors were admitted by us after examination. They are all honored (by us) with pay as each deserves, and others with agreeable speeches.29 There is none, O son, amongst my troops who is not honored with good offices (done to him). Each receives his assigned pay and rations according to the character of his services.33 In my army, O Sanjaya, there is none who is unskilled in battle, none who receives pay less than what he deserves, or none who does not receive any pay.24 soldiers are worshipped by me, according to the best of my powers, with gifts and honors and seats. The same conduct is followed towards them by my sons, my kinsmen, and my Yet on the very approach of Savyasachin have they been vanquished by him and by the grandson of Cini! What can it be but Destiny?26 They who are protecting them, all follow the same road, the protected with the protectors !27 holding Arjuna arrived at the front of Jayadratha, what measure was adopted by my foolish son ?28 Beholding Sātyaki also entering the host, what step did Duryodhana think suitable to that occasion ?29 Indeed, beholding those two foremost of carwarriors who are beyond the touch of all weapons, enter my host, what resolution was formed by my warriors in battle? 300

^{*} The construction of the original is so involved and again pleonastic, that I do not render these two slokas literally.—T.

http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-googl Generated on 2022-02-03 12:50 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

I think, beholding Krishna of Dacarha's race and that bull of Cini's race also both engaged for Arjuna's sake, my sons are filled with grief !51 I think, seeing, both Satwata and Arjuna pass through my army and the Kurus flying away, my sons are filled with grief !32 I think, seeing their car-warriors retreat in hopelessness of subjugating the foe and set their hearts upon flying away from the field, my sons are filled with grief!33 think, seeing the terraces of their cars made empty by Satwata and Arjuna, and seeing also their combatants slain, my sons are I think, seeing their steeds and elephants filled with grief!34 and cars and heroic combatants by thousands flying away from the field with anxiety in their hearts, my sons are filled with grief!35 I think, seeing many huge elephants fly away, afflicted with the shafts of Arjuna, and others fallen and falling, my sons are filled with grief! se I think, seeing steeds deprived of riders and warriors deprived of cars by Sātyaki and Pārtha, my sons are filled with grief !87 I think, large bodies of steeds slain or routed by Madhava and Partha, my sons are filled with grief :38 I think, seeing large bodies of foot-soldiers flying away in all directions, my sons, despairing of success, are filled with grief! 39 I think, seeing those two heroes pass through Drona's division unvanquished within a moment, my sons are filled with Stupified am I, O son, upon hearing that Krishna and Dhananjaya, those two heroes of unfading glory, have both, with Sātwata, penetrated into my host !41 After that foremost of car-warriors among the Cinis, had entered my host, and after he had passed through the division of the Bhojas, what did the Kauravas do ?42 Tell me also, O Sanjaya, how did the battle take place there where Drona afflicted the Pandavas on the Drona is endued with great might, is the foremost of all persons, is accomplished in weapons, and is incapable of How could the Panchalas pierce that great defeat in battle! bowman in the fight?44 Desirous of Dhananjaya's victory, the Panchalas are inveterate foes of Drona. The mighty carwarrior Drona also is an inveterate foe of theirs.45 skilled in narration, O Sanjaya! Tell me, therefore, everything about what Arjuna did for compassing the slaughter of the ruler of the Sindhus !46

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:49 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access_use#pd-googl

"Sanjaya said,—'O bull of Bharata's race, overtaken by a calamity that is the direct result of thy own fault, thou shouldst not, O hero, indulge in such lamentations like an ordinary person!47 Formerly many of thy wise well-wishers numbering Vidura amongst them had told thee,-Do not, O king, abandon the sons of Pandu!-Thou didst not then heed those words!48 The man that heedeth not the counsels of well-wishing friends, weepeth, falling into great distress, like thyself !49 He of Dacarha's race, O king, had formerly begged thee for peace! Krishna of world-wide fame obtained not his wish!50 Ascertaining thy worthlessness, and thy partiality for thy sons, thy scepticism in virtue, and thy jealousy towards the Pandavas, 1 and understanding also thy crooked intentions towards the sons of Pandu, and hearing thy delirious lamentations, O best of kings,52 that puissant Lord of all the worlds, that Being, acquainted with the truth of everything in all the worlds, viz., Vasudeva, then caused the flame of war to blaze forth among the Kurus!53 This great and wholesale destruction hath come upon thee, brought about by thy own fault! O giver of honors, it behoveth thee not to impute the fault to Duryodhana !54 In the development of these incidents no merit of thine is to be seen in the beginning, middle, or end! This defeat is entirely owing to thee !55 Therefore, knowing as thou dost the truth about this world, be quiet and hear how this fierce battle, resembling that between the gods and the Asuras, took place !56 grandson of Cini, that warrior of prowess incapable of being baffled, had entered into thy host, the Parthas headed by Bhimasena also rushed against thy troops. 57 The mighty carwarrior Kritavarman, however, alone, resisted in that battle the Pandavas thus rushing in fury and wrath with their followers against thy host.58 As the continent resists the surging sea, even so did the son of Hridika resist the troops of the Pandavas in that battle.59 The prowess that we then beheld of the son of Hridikā was wonderful, in as much as the united Parthas succeeded not in transgressing his single self.60 the mighty-armed Bhima, piercing Kritavarman with three shafts, blew his conch, gladdening all the Pandavas.61 Sahadeva pierced the son of Hridika with twenty shafts, and Yudhishthira the just pierced him with five, and Nakula pierced him with a hundred. 62 And the sons of Draupadi pierced him with three and seventy shafts and Ghatotkacha pierced him with seven.68 And Virāta and Drupada and Drupada's son (Dhrishtadyumna) each pierced him with five shafts, and Cikhandin, having once pierced him with five,64 again pierced him smilingly with five and twenty shafts. Then Kritavarman O king, pierced every one of those great car-warriors 65 with five shafts, and Bhima again with seven. And the son of Hridikā felled both the bow and the standard of Bhima from the latter's car.66 Then that mighty car-warrior, with great speed, wrathfully struck Bhima, whose bow had been cut off with⁶⁷ seventy keen shafts in the chest. The mighty Bhima, deeply pierced with those excellent shafts of Hridika's son, trembled on his car like a mountain during an Earthquake.68 Beholding Bhimasena in that condition, the Parthas headed by king Yudhishthira the just afflicted Kritavarman, O king, shooting at him many shafts.69 Encompassing that warrior there with throngs of cars, O sire, they cheerfully began to pierce him with their shafts, desiring to protect the Wind-god's son in that battle. The mighty Bhimasena then, recovering consciousness, took up in that battle a dart made of steel and equipt with a golden staff," and hurled it with great speed from his own car at the car of Kritavarman. That dart resembling a snake freed from its slough, hurled from Bhima's hands,72 fierce-looking as it was, blazed forth as it proceeded Beholding that dart endued with the towards Kritavarman. splendour of the Yuga fire coursing towards him,78 the son of Hridikā cut it in twain with two shafts. Thereupon that dart decked with gold, thus cut off, fell down on the Earth, 4 illumining the ten points of the compass, O king, like a large meteor falling from the firmament. Seeing his dart baffled, Bhima blazed up in wrath.75 Then taking up another bow which was tougher and whose twang was louder, Bhimasena, filled with wrath, attacked the son of Hridika in that battle.76 Then, O king, Bhima of terrible might struck Kritavarman in the centre of the chest with five shafts, in consequence of thy evil policy, O monarch!" The ruler of the Bhojas then, mangled in every limb, O sire, by Bhimasena, shone resplendent in the field like a red Acoka covered with flowers.78 Then that mighty bowman, viz., Kritavarman, filled with rage, smilingly struck Bhimasena with three shafts, and having struck him forcibly pierced in return every one of those great car-warriors struggling vigorously in battle, with three shafts. Each of the latter then pierced him in return with seven Then that mighty car-warrior of the Satwata race, filled with rage, cut off, smiling in that battle, with a razorfaced shaft, the bow of Cikhandin.81 Cikhandin then, seeing his bow cut off, quickly took up a sword and a bright shield decked with a hundred moons.82 Whirling his large shield decked with gold, Cikhandin sent that sword towards the car of Kritavarman.88 That large sword, cutting off, O king, Kritavarman's bow with arrow fixed thereon, fell down on the Earth, like, O monarch, a bright luminary loosened from the firmament.84 Meanwhile, those mighty car-warriors quickly and deeply pierced Kritavarman with their shafts in that battle.85 Then that slayer of hostile heroes, viz., the son of Hridikā, casting off that broken bow, and taking up another, se pierced each of the Pandavas with three straight shafts. he pierced Cikhandin at first with three, and then with five shafts.87 Then the illustrious Cikhandin, taking up another bow, checked the son of Hridika with many swift going shafts furnished with heads like tortoise nails. Then, O king, the son of Hridika, inflamed with rage in that battle, rushed impetuously at that mighty car-warrior, viz., the son of Yajnasena, so that warrior, O monarch, who was the cause of the illustrious Bhishma's fall in battle. Indeed, the heroic Kritavarman rushed at Cikhandin, displaying his might, like a tiger at an elephant." Then those two chastisers of foes, who resembled a couple of huge elephants or two blazing fires, encountered each other with clouds of shafts91 And they shook their best of bows, and aimed their arrows, and shot them in hundreds like a couple of Suns shedding their rays.92 those two mighty car-warriors scorched each other with their keen shafts, and shone resplendent like two Suns appearing at the end of the Yuga. 93 And Kritavarman in that battle pierced that mighty car-warrior, viz., Yajnasena's son, with three and seventy shafts and once more with seven.94 Deeply pierced therewith, Cikhandin sat down in pain on the terrace of his car, throwing aside his bow and arrows, and was overtaken by a swoon. 95 Beholding that hero in a swoon, thy troops, O bull among men, worshipped the son of Hridika, and waved their garments in the air.96 Seeing Cikhandin thus afflicted with the shafts of Hridika's son, his charioteer quickly bore that mighty car-warrior away from the battle.97 The Parthas, beholding Cikhandin lying senseless on the terrace of his car, soon encompassed Kritavarman in that battle with crowds of cars. 98 mighty car-warrior Kritavarman then achieved a most wonderful feat there, inasmuch as, alone, he held in check all the Parthas with their followers. 99 Having thus vanquished the Parthas, that mighty car-warrior then vanquished the Chedis, the Pānchālas, the Srinjayas, and the Kekayas, all of whom are endued with great prowess.100 Those forces of the Pandavas then, thus slaughtered by the son of Hridika, began to run in all directions, unable to stay coolly in battle.101 Having vanquished the sons of Pandu headed by Bhimasena himself, the son of Hridikā stayed in battle like a blazing fire. 102 mighty car-warriors, afflicted with torrents of shafts and routed by Hridika's son in battle, ventured not to face him." "108

SECTION CXV.

"Sanjaya said,—'Listen with undivided attention, O king, to what thou hast asked me! After the rout of that force by the high-souled son of Hridikā,' and upon the Pārthas being humiliated with shame and thy troops elated with joy, he that became the protector of the Pāndavas who were solicitous of protection while sinking in that fathomless sea of distress, that hero, viz., the grandson of Cini, hearing that fierce uproar of thy army in that terrible battle, quickly, O king, turned back and proceeded against Kritavarman. Hridikā's son Kritavarman then, excited with wrath, covered the grandson of Cini with clouds of sharp shafts. At this, Sātyaki also became filled with rage. The grandson of Cini then quickly

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:49 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

sped at Kritavarman a sharp and broad-headed arrow in that encounter and then four other arrows. These four arrows slew the four steeds of Kritavarman, and the other cut off Kritavarman's bow. Then Satyaki pierced the charioteer of his foe and those that protected the latter's rear, with many keen shafts.6 Having made Kritavarman carless, Sātyaki, of prowess incapable of being baffled, then began, with his straight shafts, to afflict his antagonist's forces." The hostile division then, afflicted with Sātyaki's arrows, broke. Thereupon Sātyaki, of prowess incapable of being baffled, quickly proceeded on his way.8 Hear now, O king, what that hero of great valor then did unto thy troops! Having, O monarch, forded the ocean constituted by Drona's division, and filled with joy at having vanguished Kritavarman in battle, that hero then addressed his charioteer, saying,-Proceed slowly without fear !10-Beholding, however, that army of thine that abounded with cars and steeds and elephants, and that teemed with foot-soldiers, Satyaki once more said unto his charioteer,11-That large division which thou seest on the left of Drona's host, and which looks dark as the clouds, consists of the elephants (of the foe). Rukmaratha is its leader!12 Those elephants are many, O charioteer, and are difficult of being resisted in battle. Urged by Duryodhana, they wait for me, prepared to cast away their lives!18 combatants are princes by birth, are great bowmen, and capable of displaying great prowess in battle. Belonging to the country of the Trigartas, they are all illustrious car-warriors, owning standards decked with gold.14 Those brave warriors are waiting, desirous of battle with me! Urge the steeds quickly, O charioteer, and take me thither!16 I shall fight with the Trigartas in the very sight of Bharadwaja's son !- Thus addressed, the charioteer, obedient to Satwata's will, proceeded slowly.16 Upon that bright car of solar effulgence, equipt with standard, those excellent steeds harnessed thereto and perfectly obedient to the driver, endued with speed of the wind, and white as the Kunda flower, or the moon, or silver, bore him (to that spot). As he advanced to battle, drawn by those excellent steeds of the hue of a conch,17-18 those brave warriors encompassed him on all sides with their elephants, scattering diverse kinds of keen arrows capable of easily piercing everything.19 Satwata also fought with that elephant division, shooting his keen shafts like a mighty cloud at the end of summer pouring torrents of rain on a mountain-breast.20 Those elephants. slaughtered with those shafts, whose touch resembled thunder, sped by that foremost one among the Cinis, began to fly away from the field,21 their tusks broken, bodies covered with blood, heads and frontal globes split open, ears and faces and trunks cut off, and themselves deprived of riders and standards.28 Many elephants, their skins cut open, bells broken, tall standards cut down, riders slain, and blankets loosened, ran away, O king, in all directions.28 Many amongst them, O monarch, mangled by Satwata with long shafts and calf-tooth-headed arrows and broad-headed arrows and Anjalikas and razor-faced arrows and crescent-shaped ones, fled away, with blood flowing down their bodies, and themselves ejecting urine and excreta and uttering loud and diverse cries deep as the roar of clouds.24-25 amongst the others wandered, and some limped, and some fell down, and some became pale and cheerless. Thus afflicted by Yuyudhana, with shafts that resembled the Sun or fire, that elephant division fled away in all directions. After that elephant division was exterminated, the mighty Jalasandha, 26-27 exerting himself coolly, led his elephant before Yuyudhāna's car drawn by white steeds. Cased in golden mail, decked with golden Angadas, with ear-rings and diadem, armed with sword, smeared with red sandal paste, his head encircled with a blazing chain of gold, his breast covered with a curass, his neck adorned with a bright garland (of gold), that hero of sinless soul, stationed on the head of his elephant, and shaking his bow decked with gold, 28-30 looked resplendent, O king, like a cloud charged with Like the continent resisting the surging sea, Sātyaki checked that excellent elephant of the ruler of the Magadhas that approached him with such fury. Beholding the elephant checked by the excellent shafts of Yuyudhāna, 81-82 the mighty Then, O king, the enraged Jalasandha became filled with rage. Jalasandha, pierced Cini's grandson on his broad chest with some shafts of great force. With another sharp and well-tempered and broad-headed arrow, $3-54 he cut off the bow of the

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:49 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access_use#pd-googl

Vrishni hero while the latter was drawing it. And then, O Bharata, smiling the while, the heroic ruler of the Magadhas pierced the bowless Sātyaki with five keen shafts. The valiant and mighty-armed Satyaki, however, though pierced with many shafts by Jalasandha, 85-36 trembled not in the least. Then the mighty Yuyudhana, seemed exceedingly wonderful. without any fear, thought of the shafts (he should use). 57 Taking up another bow, he addressed Jalasandha, saying,—Wait, Wait !- Saying this much, the grandson of Cini deeply pierced Jalasandha on his broad breast with sixty arrows, smiling the And with another razor-faced arrow of great sharpness he cut off Jalasandha's bow at the handle, and with three more Then Jalasandha, casting shafts he pierced Jalasandha himself. aside that bow of his with arrow fixed thereon, 88-40 hurled a lance, O sire, at Sātyaki. That terrible lance, passing through the left arm of Madhava in that fierce battle, entered the Earth like a hissing snake of gigantic proportions. After his left arm had thus been pierced, Sātyaki, of prowess incapable of being baffled.41-42 struck Jalasandha with thirty keen shafts. mighty Jalasandha then, taking up his scimitar,43 and a large shield made of bull's hide and decked with a hundred moons, whirled the former for a while and hurled it at Sātwata.44 Cutting off the bow of Cini's grandson, that scimitar fell down on the Earth, and looked resplendent like a circle of fire, as it lay on the Earth.45 Then Yuyudhana took up another bow capable of piercing every body, large as a Cala offshoot, and of twang resembling the roar of Indra's thunder,46 and, filled with rage, stretched it and then pierced Jalasandha with a single shaft. And then Satyaki, that foremost one of Madhu's race, smiling the while, cut off, with a pair of razor-faced arrows, the two arms, decked with ornaments, of Jalasandha. Thereupon those two arms, looking like a couple of spiked maces, fell down from that foremost of elephants, 47-48. like a couple of five-headed snakes falling down from a mountain. with a third razor-headed arrow, Sātyaki cut off his antagonist's large head endued with beautiful teeth and adorned with a pair of beautiful ear-rings. The headless and armless trunk, of fearful aspect, 49-50 dyed Jalasandha's elephant with blood.

slain Jalasandha in battle, Sātwata quickly felled the wooden edifice, O king, from that elephant's back. Bathed in blood, the elephant of Jalasandhas bore that costly seat hanging And afflicted with the arrows of Satwata, . down from his back. huge beast crushed friendly ranks68 as it ran wildly, uttering fierce cries of pain. Then, O sire, wails of woe arose among thy troops,54 at sight of Jalasandha slain by that bull among the Vrishnis. Thy warriors then, turning their faces, fled away in all directions.56 Indeed, despairing of success over the foe, they set their hearts on flight. Meanwhile, O king, Drona, that foremost of all wielders of bows, so approached the mighty car-warrior Yuyudhana, borne by his swift coursers. Many bulls among the Kurus, beholding Cini's grandson swelling (with rage and pride),57 rushed at him with Then commenced a battle, O fury, accompanied by Drona. king, between the Kurus and Drona (on one side) and Yuyudhāna (on the other), that resembled the awful battle of old between the gods and the Asuras." "58

SECTION CXVI.

Sanjaya said,-'Shooting clouds of arrows, all those warriors, accomplished in smiting, carefully and speedily, O monarch, encountered Yuyudhana.1 Drona struck him with seven and seventy shafts of great keenness. And Durmarshana struck him with a dozen, and Dussaha struck him with ten shafts.2 And Vikarna also pierced him on the left side as also on the centre of the chest, with thirty keen shafts equipt with Kanka feath-And Durmukha struck him with ten shafts, and Duscasana with eight, and Chitrasena, O sire, pierced him with a couple of And Duryodhana, O king, and many other heroes. afflicted that mighty car-warrior with dense showers of shafts in that battle. Though checked on all sides by those mighty car-warriors, viz., thy sons, Yuyudhana of Vrishni's race pierced each of them separately with his straight shafts.6 pierced the son of Bharadwaja with three shafts, and Dussaha with nine, and Vikarna with five and twenty, and Chitrasena with seven, and Durmarshana with a dozen, and Vivingcati with eight, and Satyavrata with nine, and Vijaya with ten And having pierced Rukmangada also, that mighty car-warrior, viz., Sātyaki, shaking his bow, speedily proceeded against thy son (Duryodhana).9 And Yuyudhana, in the sight of all men, deeply pierced with his arrows the king, that greatest of car-warriors in the whole world. Then commenced a battle between those two.10 Both shooting keen arrows and both aiming countless shafts, each of those mighty car-warriors made the other invisible in that battle.11 And Sātyaki, pierced by the Kuru king, looked exceedingly resplendent as blood copiously ran adown his body like a sandal tree shedding its juicy Thy son also, pierced by Sātwata with clouds of shafts, looked beautiful like a snake set up (at a sacrifice) decked all over with gold.18 Then Madhava, O king, in that battle, cut off with a razor-faced arrow, smiling the while, the bow of the Kuru king.14 And then he pierced the bowless king with countless arrows. Pierced with arrows by that foe of great activity,15 the king could not brook this indication of the enemy's success. Duryodhana then, taking up another formidable bow the back of whose staff was decked with gold,16 speedily pierced Deeply pierced by thy mighty Satyaki with a hundred arrows. son armed with the bow,17 Yuyudhana became inflamed with wrath and began to afflict thy son. Beholding the king thus afflicted, thy sons, those mighty car-warriors,18 shrouded Sātyaki with dense showers of arrows shot with great force. Whilst being thus shrouded by those mighty car-warriors, viz., thy multitude of sons,19 Yuyudhāna pierced each of them with five arrows, and once more with seven. And soon he pierced Duryodhana with eight swift arrows20 and, smiling the while, cut off the latter's bow that frightened all foes. And with a few arrows he also felled the king's standard decked with a jewelled elephant.21 And slaving then the four steeds of Duryodhana with four keen arrows, the illustrious Satyaki felled the king's charioteer with a razor-faced shaft.22 Meanwhile, Yuyudhana, filled with joy, pierced that mighty car-warrior, viz., the Kuru king, with many arrows capable of penetrating into the very vitals.28 Then, O king, thy son Duryodhana, while being thus struck in that battle with those excellent arrows of Cini's grandson, suddenly fled away.44 And the king quickly mounted the car of Chitrasena armed with the bow. Beholding the king thus attacked by Satyaki in battle, and reduced to the position of Soma in the firmament while seized by Rāhu, cries of woe arose from every part of the universe. Hearing that uproar, the mighty carwarrior Kritavarman25-26 quickly proceeded to that spot where the puissant Madhava was battling. And Kritavarman proceeded, shaking his bow, and urging his steeds,27 and reproving his charioteer with the words, -Go with speed, Go with speed !-Beholding Kritavarman rushing towards him like the Destroyer himself with wide open mouth, 28 Yuyudhana, O king, addressed his driver, saying,-That Kritavarman, armed with arrows, is rushing on his car towards me with speed!29 Proceed, on this car, against that foremost one among all car-warriors !- Then, with his steeds urged to their greatest speed, and on his car duly equipt, so Sātyaki came upon the ruler of the Bhojas, that foremost of all bowmen. Then those two tigers among men, both inflamed with rage and both resembling a blazing fire, encountered each other like two tigers endued with great activity. Kritavarman pierced Cini's grandson with six and twenty whetted arrows of keen points, and the latter's driver with five And skilled in battle, the son of Hridika pierced. with four mighty shafts, the four excellent and well-broken steeds of Sātyaki that were of the Sindhu breed. Owning a standard decked with gold, and adorned with golden mail, Kritavarman, shaking his formidable bow whose staff was decked with gold, thus checked Yuyudhana with shafts equipt with golden wings. Then the grandson of Cini, desirous of seeing Dhananjaya, sped with great activity eight arrows at Krita-That scorcher of foes then, deeply pierced by that mighty foe, 81-86—that invincible warrior,—began to tremble like a hill during an earthquake. After this, Sātyaki, of prowess incapable of being baffled, speedily pierced Kritavarman's four steeds with three and sixty keen arrows, and his driver also Indeed, Sātyaki, then aiming another arrow of golden wings, 87-38 that emitted blazing flames and resembled an angry snake or the rod of the Destroyer himself, pierced Kritavarman therewith. 39 That terrible arrow, penetrating

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:50 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 Generated on 2022-02-03 12:50 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

through his antagonist's effulgent armour decked with gold, entered the Earth, dyed with blood.40 Afflicted with the shafts of Sātwata, and bathed in blood in that battle, Kritavarman throwing aside his bow with arrow, fell upon his car.1 lion-toothed hero of immeasurable prowess, that bull among men, afflicted by Sātyaki with his arrows, fell on his knees upon the terrace of his car.42 Having thus resisted Kritavarman who resembled the thousand-armed Arjuna of old or Ocean himself of immeasurable might, Sātyaki proceeded onwards.48 through Kritavarman's division bristling with swords and darts and bows, and abounding with elephants and steeds and cars, and the ground under whose feet was rendered awful in consequence of the blood shed by foremost of Kshatriyas numbering by hundreds, that bull among the Cinis proceeded onwards, in the very sight of all the troops, like the slayer of Vritra through the Asura array.44-45 Meanwhile the mighty son of Hridika, taking up another huge bow, stayed where he was, resisting the Pāndavas in battle." "46

SECTION CXVII.

"Sanjaya said,—'While the (Kuru) host was made to tremble by the grandson of Cini in those places (through which he proceeded), the son of Bharadwaja covered him with a dense shower The encounter that then took place between Drona and Satwata in the very sight of all the troops was extremely fierce like that between Vali and Vasava (in days of old).2 Then Drona pierced the grandson of Cini on the forehead with three beautiful arrows made entirely of iron and resembling snakes of virulent poison.3 Thus pierced on the forehead with those straight shafts, Yuyudhana, O king, looked beautiful like a mountain with three summits.4 The son of Bharadwaja, always on the alert for an opportunity, then sped in that battle many other arrows at Sātyaki whose whiz resembled the roar of Indra's thunder. Then he of Daçarha's race, acquainted with the highest weapons, cut off all those arrows shot from Drona's bow, with two beautifully winged arrows of his.6 Beholding that lightness of hand (in Sātyaki), Drona, O king, smiling the while, suddenly pierced that bull among the Cinis Surpassing by his own lightness the lightwith thirty arrows.7 ness of Yuyudhana, Drona once more pierced the latter with fifty arrows and then with a hundred. Indeed, those mangling arrows, O king, issued from Drona's car like vigorous snakes in wrath issuing through an ant-hill. Similarly, blood-drinking arrows shot by Yuyudhana in hundreds and thousands covered the car of Drona.10 We did not mark any difference, however, between the lightness of hand displayed by that foremost of regenerate ones and that displayed by him of the Satwata race. Indeed, in this respect both those bulls among men were equal.11 Then Satyaki, inflamed with wrath, struck Drona with nine straight arrows. And he struck Drona's standard also with many sharp shafts.12 And in the sight of Bharadwaja, he pierced the latter's driver also with a hundred arrows. Beholding the lightness of hand displayed by Yuyudhana, the mighty car-warrior Drona's piercing Yuyudhāna's driver with seventy shafts, and each of his (four) steeds with three, cut off with a single arrow the standard that stood on Madhava's car.14 With another broadheaded arrow equipt with feathers and with wings of gold, he cut off in that battle the bow of that illustrious hero of Madhu's race.16 Thereupon the mighty car-warrior Satyaki, excited with wrath, laid aside that bow, and taking up a huge mace, hurled it at the son of Bharadwaja.16 Drona, however, with many arrows of diverse forms, resisted that mace made of iron and twined round with strings, as it coursed impetuously towards him. 17 Then Sātyaki, of prowess incapable of being baffled, took up another bow and pierced the heroic son of Bharadwaja with many arrows whetted on stone.18 Piercing Drona therewith in that battle, Yuyudhāna uttered a leonine shout. Drona, however, that foremost of all wielders of weapons, was unable to brook that roar." Taking up a dart made of iron and equipt with a golden staff, Drona sped it quickly at the car of Madhava. 20 That dart, however, fatal as Death, without touching the grandson of Cini, pierced through the latter's car and entered the

^{*} Uttamat, though it occurs in all the texts, is an error. seems to me to be the correct reading .- T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:51 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

Earth with a fierce noise. 1 The grandson of Cini then, O king, pierced Drona with many winged arrows. Indeed, striking him on the right arm, Sātyaki, O bull of Bharata's race, afflicted him greatly!22 Drona also, in that battle, O king, cut off the huge bow of Madhava with a crescent-shaped arrow and smote the latter's driver with a dart.28 Struck with that dart, Yuyudhāna's driver swooned away and for a while lay motionless on the terrace of the car.24 Then, O monarch, Sātyaki, acting as his own driver, achieved a superhuman feat, inasmuch as he continued to fight with Drona and hold the reins himself.26 Then the mighty car-warrior Yuyudhana struck that Brahmana with a hundred arrows in that battle, and rejoiced exceedingly, O monarch, at the feat he achieved. Then Drona, O Bharata, sped at Sātyaki five arrows. Those fierce arrows, piercing Sātyaki's armour, drank his blood in that battle.37 Thus pierced with those frightful arrows, Sātyaki became inflamed with In return that hero shot many shafts at him of the golden car.28 Then felling on the Earth with a single shaft the driver of Drona, he caused next, with his arrows, those driverless steeds of his antagonist to fly away.29 that car was dragged to a distance. Indeed, the bright chariot of Drona, O king, began to trace a thousand circles in the field of battle like a Sun in motion. 50 Then all the kings and princes (of the Kaurava host) made a loud uproar, exclaiming, -Run, Rush, Seize the steeds of Drona! 1-Quickly abandoning Sātyaki in that battle, O monarch, all those mighty carwarriors rushed to the place where Drona was.32 Beholding those car-warriors run away afflicted with the arrows of Satyaki, thy troops once more broke and became exceedingly cheerless.35 Meanwhile Drona, once more proceeding to the gate of the array, took up his station there, borne away (from Sātyaki's presence) by those steeds, fleet as the wind, that had been afflicted with the shafts of the Vrishni hero.84 The valiant son of Bharadwaja, beholding the array broken (in his absence) by the Pandavas and the Panchalas, made no endeavour to follow the grandson of Cini, but employed himself in protecting his (broken) array.35 Checking the Pandavas and the Panchālas then, the Drona fire, blazing up in wrath, stayed there, consuming everything, like the Sun that rises at the end of the Yuga.' "36

SECTION CXVIII.

"Sanjaya said,—'Having vanquished Drona and other warriors of thy army headed by the son of Hridika, that foremost of men, viz., that bull amongst the Cinis, O foremost one of the Kurus, laughing, said unto his charioteer, -Our foes, O Suta, had already been consumed by Keçava and Phalguna! In vanquishing them (again), we have only been the (ostensible) Already slain by that bull among men, viz., the son of the celestial chief, we have but slain the slain!2-Saying these words unto his charioteer, that bull amongst the Cinis, that foremost of bowmen, that slayer of hostile heroes, that mighty warrior, scattering with great force his arrows all around in that dreadful battle, proceeded like a hawk in search The Kuru warriors, although they attacked him from all sides, succeeded not in resisting that foremost of carwarriors resembling the Sun himself of a thousand rays, that foremost of men, who, having pierced the Kaurava ranks, was proceeding, borne by those excellent steeds of his that were white as the moon or a conch.4 Indeed, O Bharata, none amongst those that fought on thy side could resist Yuyudhana of irresistible prowess, of might incapable of impairment, of valour equal to that of him of a thousand eyes, and looking like the autumnal Sun in the firmament.5 Then that foremost of kings, viz., Sudarçana, conversant with all modes of warfare, clad in golden coat of mail, armed with bow and arrows, and filled with rage, advanced against the rushing Satyaki and endeavoured to check his course.6 The encounter that took place between them was fierce in the extreme. And both thy warriors and the Somakas, O king, highly applauded the encounter between Vritra and Vasava. Sudarçana endeavoured to pierce that foremost one of the Satwata's in that battle, with hundreds of keen shafts. That bull among the Cinis, however, O king, cut off all those shafts before they could reach him. Similarly, Sudarçana, stationed on his foremost of

/ https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 Generated on 2022-02-03 12:51 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized , cars, cut off, by means of his own excellent shafts, in two or three fragments, all the shafts that Sātyaki resembling Indra himself sped at him.9 Beholding his shafts baffled by the force of Sātyaki's shafts, Sudarçana of fierce energy, as if to consume (his foe), wrathfully shot some beautiful arrows winged And once more he pierced his enemy with three beautiful arrows resembling fire itself and equipt with wings of gold, shot from his bow-string drawn to the ear. These, piercing through Satyaki's armour, penetrated into the latter's Similarly, that prince (viz., Sudarçana), aiming four other blazing arrows, smote therewith the four steeds of Satvaki that were white as silver in hue.12 Thus afflicted by him. the grandson of Cini, endued with great activity and possessed of prowess equal to that of Indra himself, speedily slew with his keen shafts the steeds of Sudarçana and uttered a loud roar.18 Then cutting off with a broad-headed arrow endued with the force of Cakra's thunder, the head of Sudarcana's driver, that foremost one amongst the Cinis, with a razor-faced arrow resembling the Yuga fire, cut off from Sudarçana's trunk his head graced with ear-rings, resembling the moon at full, and decked with an exceedingly radiant face, like the wielder of the thunder, O king, in days old, forcibly cutting off the head of the mighty Vala in tattle !14-15 That high-souled bull among the Yadus then, endued with great activity, having thus slain that grandson of a prince, became filled with delight and shone resplendent, O monarch, like the chief of the celestials Yuyudhana then, that hero among men, proceeded along the track by which Arjuna had passed before him, checking (as he went) by means of clouds of shafts all thy troops, and riding on that same car of his, O king, unto which were voked those excellent steeds, and filling everybody with amaze-All the foremost of warriors there, assembled together, applauded that foremost of amazing feats achieved by him, for he consumed all foes that came within reach of his arrows like a conflagration consuming everything in its way." "18

SECTION CXIX.

"Sanjaya said,—'Then that bull of Vrishni's race, viz., the high-souled Satvaki of great intelligence, having slain Sudarcana, once more addressed his driver, saying, -Having forded through the almost unfordable ocean of Drona's division teeming with cars and steeds and elephants, whose waves are constituted by arrows and darts, fishes by swords and scimitars, and alligators by maces, which roars with the whiz of shafts and the clash of diverse weapons,—an ocean that is fierce and destructive of life and resounds with the noise of diverse musical instruments, whose touch is unpleasant and unbearable to warriors desirous of victory, and whose margent is infested by fierce cannibals represented by the force of Jalasandha,-I think the portion of the array that remains may easily be forded like a miserable stream of shallow water. Urge thou the steeds, therefore, without fear !2-5 I think I am very near to Savya-Having vanquished in battle the invincible Drona with his followers. and that foremost of warriors, viz., the son of Hridika. I think I cannot be distant from Dhananjava. never comes to my heart even if I behold countless foes before These to me are like a heap of straw and grass to a blazing conflagration in the woods. Behold, the track by which the diadem-decked (Arjuna), that foremost one among the Pandavas, hath gone,3 is rendered uneven with large bodies of foot soldiers and steeds and car-warriors and elephants lying slain on the Behold routed by that high-souled warrior, Kaurava army is flying away !9 Behold, O charioteer, a dark brown dust is raised by those retreating cars and elephants and I think I am very near to Arjuna of white steeds having Krishna for his charioteer! Hark, the well-known twang of Gandiva of immeasurable energy is being heard!" the character of the omens that appear to my view, I am sure that Arjuna will slay the ruler of the Sindhus before the Sun Without causing their strength to be spent, urge the steeds slowly to where those hostile ranks are staying, that is, to where yonder warriors headed by Duryodhana, their hands cased in leathern fences, and yonder Kāmvojas of fierce deeds, clad in mail and difficult of defeat in battle, and those Yavanas armed with bow and arrows and skilled in smiting, and yonder Cakas and Kirātas and Daradas and Barbaras and Tāmraliptakas, and other countless Mecchas armed with diverse weapons, are, but the spot (I repeat) where, indeed, yonder warriors headed by Duryodhana, their hands cased in leathern fences, are waiting with their faces turned towards me and inspired with the resolution of battling with me! Regard me to have already passed through this fierce fastness, O Suta, having slain in battle all these combatants with cars and elephants and steeds and foot-soldiers that are amongst them!

" 'The charioteer, thus addressed, said,—O thou of Vrishni's race, fear I have none, O thou of prowes that cannot be baffled! If thou hast before thee Jamadagni's son himself in wrath, 18 or Drona, that foremost of car-warriors, or Kripa, or the ruler of the Madras himself, even then fear doth not enter my heart, O thou of mighty arms, as long as I am under the shadow of thy protection !19 O slayer of foes, countless Kāmvojas, clad in mail, of fierce deeds, and difficult of defeat in battle, have already been vanquished by thee, 20 as also many Yavanas armed with bow and arrows and accomplished in smiting, including Cakas and Kirātas and Daradas and Barbaras and Tāmraliptakas, and many other Mecchas armed with various weapons. Never before did I experience fear in any battle !22 Why shall I, therefore, O thou of great courage, experience any fear in this miserable fray?* O thou that art blessed with length of days, by which way shall I take thee to where Dhananjaya is? With whom hast thou been angry, O thou of Vrishni's race? Who are they for whom Death waits? Who are they that desire to repair today to the abode of Yama?24 Who are they that will fly away from battle, beholding thee endued with such prowess, resembling the Destroyer himself as he appears at the end of the Yuga, and putting forth that prowess of thine ^{*} Literally rendered, the expression is, "in this battle that is like the vestige of a cow's hoof?"—T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:51 GMT / https://hdl.hand Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitr (against thy foes)? O thou of mighty arms, who are they of whom king Vaivaswāt is thinking today?²⁵—

"'Sātyaki said,—Like Vāsava destroying the Dānavas, I shall slay these warriors with shaved heads. By slaying these Kāmvojas I will fulfil my vow! Bear me thither! 26 great carnage amongst these, I shall today repair to the dear son of Pandu! The Kauravas with Suyodhana at their head will today behold my prowess,27 when this division of Mlecchas, of shaved heads, will have been exterminated and the whole Kaurava army put to the greatest distress! Hearing the loud wails of the Kaurava host today while mangled and broken by me in battle, Suyodhana will be inspired with grief! Today I shall show unto my preceptor, the high-souled Pandava of white steeds, the skill in weapons acquired by me from him! Beholding today thousands of foremost warriors slain with my arrows, king Duryodhana will be plunged into great grief! The Kauravas will today behold the bow in my hands to resemble a circle of fire when, light-handed as I am, I will stretch the bowstring for shooting my host of shafts. Beholding the incessant slaughter of his troops today, their bodies covered with blood and pierced all over with my shafts, Suyodhana will be filled with grief! While I shall slay in wrath the foremost of Kuru warriors, 28-38 Suyodhana will today behold the world to contain two Arjunas! Beholding thousands of kings slain by me in battle, king Duryodhana will be filled with grief in today's great battle! Slaying thousands of kings today I will show my love and devotion to those high-souled ones, viz., the royal sons of Pandu! The Kauravas will know today the measure of my might and energy, and my gratefulness (to the Pandavas) !"84-86

"Sanjaya continued,—'Thus addressed, the charioteer urged to their utmost speed those well-trained coursers of delightful pace and the hue of the moon. Those excellent animals, endued with the speed of the wind or thought, proceeded, devouring the very skies, and bore Yuyudhāna to the spot where those Yavanas were. Thereupon the Yavanas, many in number and endued with lightness of hands, approaching the unretreating Sātyaki, covered him with showers of arrows. The rushing Sātyaki, however, O king, cut off, by means of his own straight arrows, all those shafts and weapons of the Yava-None of those shafts and weapons, therefore, could reach him.40 Inflamed with wrath, Yuyudhana then, with straight shafts of great sharpness winged with gold and vulturine feathers, cut off the heads and arms of those Yavanas.41 Many of those arrows, again, piercing through their coats of mail made of iron and brass, entered the Earth. 42 Struck by the brave Satyaki in that battle, the Mlecchas began to fall down on the Earth in hundreds, deprived of life,48 arrows shot in continuous lines from his bow drawn to its fullest stretch, that hero began to slay five, six, seven, or eight Yavanas at a time.44 Thousands of Kamvojas, and Cakas, and Barbaras, were similarly slain by Sātyaki.45 Indeed, the grandson of Cini, causing a great carnage among thy troops, made the Earth impassable and miry with flesh and blood.46 of battle was strewn with the head-gears of those robbers and their shaved heads too that looked, in consequence of their long like featherless birds.47 Indeed, the field of battle covered with headless trunks dved all over with blood, looked beautiful like the welkin covered with coppery clouds.48 by Satwata by means of his straight shafts whose touch resembled that of Indra's thunder, the Yavanas covered the surface of the Earth.49 The small remnant of those mail-clad troops, vanguished in battle, O king, by Sātwata, becoming cheerless, their lives on the point of being taken, broke of and urging their steeds with goads and whips to their utmost speed, fled from fear in all directions. 51 Routing the invincible Kamvoja host in battle, O Bharata, as also that host of the Yavanas and that large force of the Cakas,52 that tiger among men who had penetrated into thy army, viz., Sātyaki, of prowess incapable of being baffled, crowned with victory, urged his charioteer, saying, -Proceed! 58-Beholding that feat of his in battle, never before achieved by any one else, the Chāranas and the Gandharvas applauded him highly.54 Indeed, O king, the Chāranas, as also thy warriors, beholding Yuyudhāna thus proceed for aiding Arjuna, became filled with delight (at his heroism)." "55

SECTION CXX.

"Sanjaya said,—'Having vanquished the Yavanas and the Kāmvojas, that foremost of car-warriors, viz., Yuyudhāna, proceeded towards Arjuna, right through the midst of thy troops.1 Like a hunter slaving deer, that tiger among men, (viz., Satyaki), endued with beautiful teeth, clad in excellent armour, and owning a beautiful standard, slew the Kaurava troops and inspired them with fear.2 Proceeding on his car, he shook his bow with great force, that bow the back of whose staff was decked with gold, whose toughness was great, and which was adorned with many golden moons.8 His arms decked with golden Angadas, his head-gear adorned with gold, his body clad in golden mail, his standard and bow also embellished with gold, that hero shone like the summit of Meru.4 shedding such effulgence, and bearing that circular bow in his hand, he looked like a second Sun in autumn. among men, possessing the shoulders and tread and eyes of a bull, looked in the midst of thy troops, like a bull in a cowpen. Thy warriors approached him from desire of slaughter like tigers approaching the leader, with rent temples, of an elephantine herd standing proudly in the midst of his herd, resembling as he did, and possessed as he was of the tread of an infuriate elephant. Indeed, after he had passed through Drona's division, and the unfordable division of the Bhojas,"after he had forded through the sea of Jalasandha's troops as also the host of the Kamvojas, after he had escaped the alligator constituted by Hridika's son, after he had traversed those ocean-like hosts, many car-warriors of thy army, excited with wrath, surrounded Sātyaki. And Duryodhana and Chitrasena and Dusçasana and Vivingçati,10 and Cakuni and Dussaha, and the youthful Durdharshana, and Kratha, and many other brave warriors well conversant with weapons and difficult of defeat," wrathfully followed Satyaki from behind as he proceeded onwards. Then, O sire, loud was the uproar that arose among thy troops,12 resembling that of the

/ https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 http://www.hathitrust.org/access_use#pd-google

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:51 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized ,

Ocean itself at full tide when lashed into fury by the tempest. Beholding all those warriors rushing at him, that bull among the Cinis¹⁸ smilingly addressed his charioteer, saying,—Proceed slowly. This Dhartarashtra force, swelling (with rage and pride),14 and teeming with elephants and steeds and cars and foot-soldiers, that is rushing with speed towards me, filling the ten points of the compass with the deep roar of its cars, O charioteer,15 and causing the Earth, the welkin, and the very seas, to tremble therewith,—this sea of troops, O driver, I will resist in great battle,16 like the continent resisting the ocean swelling to its utmost height at full moon! Behold, O charioteer, my prowess which is equal to that of Indra himself in great I will consume this hostile force by means of my Behold those foot-soldiers and horsemen and car-warriors and elephants slain by me's in thousands, their bodies pierced with my fiery arrows !-While saying these words (unto his charioteer), those combatants, from desire of battle, spedily came before Sātyaki of immeasurable prowess. made a loud noise, saying, as they came,-Slay, Rush, Wait, See, See !19-20 Of those brave warriors that said these words, Satyaki, by means of his sharp arrows, slew three hundred horsemen and four hundred elephants.21 The passage at arms between those united bowmen (on the one side) and Sātyaki (on the other) was exceedingly fierce, resembling that between the gods and the Asuras (in days of old). An awful carnage set in.22 The grandson of Cini received with his shafts resembling snakes of virulent poison that force, O sire, of thy son which looked like a mass of clouds.23 Shrouding every side, in that battle, with his arrowy downpours, that valiant hero, O monarch. fearlessly slew a large number of thy troops.24 Exceedingly wonderful, O king, was the sight that I witnessed there, viz., that not one arrow even, O lord, of Sātyaki failed of effect !25 That sea of troops, abounding with cars and elephants and steeds, and full of waves constituted by foot-soldiers, stood still as soon as it came in contact with the Satyaki continent.26 That host consisting of panic-struck combatants and elephants and steeds, slaughtered on all sides by Sātyaki with his shafts, repeatedly turned round,27 and wandered hither and thither like a herd of kine afflicted with the chilling blasts of winter. saw not the foot-soldier or car-warrior or elephant or horseman or steed that was not struck with Yuyudhana's arrows. even Phalguna, O king, had caused such a carnage there 28-29 as Sātyaki, O monarch, then caused among those troops! bull among men, viz., the dauntless grandson of Cini, endued with great lightness of hand and displaying the utmost skill, fighteth, surpassing Arjuna himself. Then king Duryodhana pierced the charioteer of Satwata with three keen shafts and his four steeds with four shafts. And he pierced Sātyaki himself with three arrows and once again with eight. 50-32 Dusçasana pierced that bull among the Cinis with sixteen And Cakuni pierced him with five and twenty arrows, and Chitrasena with five. 38 And Dussaha pierced Sātyaki in the chest with five and ten arrows. That tiger amongst the Vrishnis then, thus struck with their arrows, proudly54 pierced every one of them, O monarch, with three arrows. Deeply piercing all his foes with shafts endued with great energy, $5 the grandson of Cini, possessed of great activity and prowess, careered on the field with the activity of a hawk. Cutting off the bow of Suvala's son as also the leathern fence that cased his hand. 86 Yuyudhana pierced Duryodhana in the centre of the chest with three shafts. And he pierced Chitrasena with a hundred arrows, and Dussaha with ten. 57 And that bull of Cini's race then pierced Dusçāsana with twenty arrows. Thy brother-inlaw (Cakuni) then, O king, taking up another bow, 38 pierced Sātyaki with eight arrows and once more with five. Dusçasana pierced him with ten arrows, and Dussaha pierced And Durmuka, O king, pierced Sātyaki him with three. 39 with a dozen shafts. And Duryodhana, O Bharata, having pierced Mādhava with three and seventy arrows,40 then pierced his charioteer with three keen shafts. Then Sātyaki pierced each of those brave and mighty car-warriors vigorously tending in battle together, with five shafts in return. that foremost of car-warriors, (viz., Yuyudhāna), speedily struck thy son's charioteer with a broad-headed shaft, whereupon the latter, deprived of life, fell down on the Earth. the fall of the charioteer, O lord, thy son's car41-18 was taken away from the battle by the steeds yoked thereto, with the speed of the wind. Then thy sons, O king, and the other warriors, O monarch, 44 setting their eyes on the king's car, fled away in hundreds. Beholding that host fly away, O Bhārata, Sātyaki 65 covered it with showers of keen shafts whetted on stone and equipt with wings of gold. Routing all thy combatants counting by thousands, 46 Sātyaki, O king, proceeded towards the car of Arjūna. Indeed, thy troops worshipped Yuyudhāna, beholding him shooting arrows and protecting his charioteer and himself as he fought in that battle." "47

SECTION CXXI.

"Dhritarāshtra said,—'Beholding the grandson of Cini proceeding towards Arjuna, grinding as he went that large force, what, indeed, O Sanjaya, did those shameless sons of mine When Yuyudhana who is equal to Savyasachin himself was before them, how, indeed, could those wretches, that were on the point of death, set their hearts upon battle? What also did all those Kshatriyas, vanquished in battle, then do? How, indeed, could Satyaki of world-wide renown pass through them in battle? How also, O Sanjaya, when my sons were alive, could the grandson of Cini go to battle? Tell me all this! This is exceedingly wonderful, O sire, that I have heard from thee, viz., this encounter between one and the many, the latter, again, being all mighty car-warriors!5 O Suta, I think Destiny is now unpropitious to my sons, since so many mighty car-warriors have been slain by that one warrior of the Sātwata race! Alas, O Sanjaya, my army is no match for even one warrior, viz., Yuyudhana, inflamed with Let all the Pandavas hang up these weapons!7 quishing in battle Drona himself who is skilled in weapons and conversant with all modes of warfare, Sātyaki will slay my sons like a lion slaying smaller animals: Numerous heroes, of whom Kritavarman is the first, contending vigorously in battle, could not slay Yuyudhāna! The latter, without doubt, will ^{} Literally, "Let all the Pandavas remain inactive !"-T.

slay my sons! Phalguna himself fought not in the manner in which the renowned grandson of Cini has fought! 10

'Sanjaya said,—'All this, O king, has been brought about by thy evil counsels and the acts of Duryodhana! Listen attentivey to what, O Bhārata, I say unto thee!" At the command of thy son, the Samsaptakas, rallying, all resolved upon fighting fiercely.12 Three thousand bowmen headed by Duryodhana, with a number of Cakas and Kamvojas and Vahlikas and Yavanas and Pāradas,18 and Kalingas and Tanganas and Amvashthas and Piçachas and Barbaras and mountainers, O monarch, inflamed with rage and armed with stones,14 all rushed against the grandson of Cini like insects against a blazing Five hundred other warriors, O king, similarly rushed against Sātyaki.*15 And another mighty body consisting of a thousand cars, a hundred great car-warriors, a thousand elephants, two thousand horse, and countless foot-soldiers, also rushed against the grandson of Cini.+16-17 Dusçāsana, O Bhārata, urging all those warriors, saying,—Slay him,—surrounded Satyaki therewith.18 Grand and wonderful was the conduct that we then beheld of Cini's grandson, inasmuch as alone he fought fearlessly with those innumerable foes.19 he slew that entire body of cars and that elephant force, and all those horsemen and that entire body of robbers.20 autumnal firmament bespangled with stars, the field of battle there became strewn with car-wheels broken and crushed by means of his mighty weapons, with innumerable Akshas and beautiful car-shafts reduced to fragments, with crushed elephants and fallen standards, with coats of mail and shields scattered all about, with garlands and ornaments and robes and Anukarshas, O sire !21-23 Many foremost of elephants, huge as hills, and born the race of Anjana or Vāmana, O Bhārata, or of Supratika or Mahāpadmaka or Airāvata, or in other races, many foremost of tuskers, O king, lay there on the ground,

^{*} The Bombay text has a different reading .- T.

[†] The Bengal reading Parantopa is vicious. The Bombay text reads Pattagas.-T.

deprived of life! And Sātyaki slew, O monarch, many foremost of steeds of the Vanāyu, the mountain, the Kāmvoja and the Valhika breeds. And the grandson of Cini also slew foot-soldiers-there, in hundreds and thousands, born in various realms and belonging to various nations. Whilst those soldiers were being thus slaughtered, Dusçāsana, addressing the robbers said,24-28—Ye warriors unacquainted with morality, fight! Why do you retreat?—Beholding them run away without paying any heed to his words, thy son Dusçasana 29 urged on the brave mountaineers skilled in fighting with stones, saying,-Ye are accomplished in battling with stones! Satyaki is ignorant of this mode of warfare !80 Slay ye, therefore, that warrior who though desirous of battle is ignorant of your mode of fight! The Kauravas also are all unacquainted with this mode of battle. 81 Rush ye at Sātyaki! Do not fear! Sātyaki will not be able to approach you!-Thus urged, those Kshatriyas dwelling on the mountains, all acquainted with the method of fighting with stones,32 rushed towards the grandson of Cini like ministers towards a king. Those denizens of the mountains then, with stones huge as elephants' heads, 88 uplifted in their hands, stood before Yuyudhana in that battle. Others, urged by thy son, and desirous of slaying Satwata, encompassed the latter on all sides, armed with missiles. Then Sātyaki, aiming at those warriors rushing at him from desire of fighting with stones, sped at them showers of keen shafts. That bull amongst the Cinis, with those shafts looking like snakes, cut into fragments that dense shower of stones thrown by the mountaineers. The fragments of those stones, looking like a swarm of blazing fire-flies,84-37 slew many combatants there, whereupon, O sire, cries of oh and alas arose on the field. Then, again, five hundred brave warriors, with huge stones uplifted in their hands, 88 fell down, O king, on the ground, their arms cut off. And once more a full thousand, and again a hundred thousand, amongst others,30 fell down without being able to approach Sātyaki, their arms with stones still in grasp cut off by him. Indeed. Sātyaki slew many thousands of those warriors fighting with stones. All this seemed exceedingly wonderful. Then many of them, returning to the fight, hurled at Satyaki showers of stones. 40-41.

And armed with swords and lances many Daradas and Tanganas and Khaças and Lampakas and Pulindas, hurled their weapons Sātyaki, however well conversant with the application of weapons, cut off those stones and weapons by means of his Those stones while being pierced, broken in the welkin by Sātyaki's whetted shafts, 42-48 produced a fierce noise, at which many car-warriors and steeds and elephants fled away And struck with the fragments of those stones, men and elephants and steeds,44 became incapable of staying in battle, for they felt as if they were bit by wasps. small remnant of the elephants (that had attacked Sātyaki), covered with blood, their heads and frontal globes split open, then fled away from Yuyudhāna's car. Then there arose among thy troops, O sire, while they were being thus grinded by Mādhava, a noise like that of the ocean at full tide. that great uproar, Drona, addressing his charioteer, said, 45-47—O Suta, that great car-warrior of the Satwata race, excited with wrath, is tearing our army into diverse fragments, and careering in battle like the Destroyer himself :48 Take thou the car to that spot whence this furious uproar is being heard! doubt, Yuyudhana is engaged with the mountaineers who battle with stones!49 Our car-warriors are seen also to be borne away by their wildly running steeds! Many amongst them, weaponless and armourless and wounded, are falling down :50 The charioteers are unable to check their steeds as these are rushing wildly !- Hearing these words of Bharadwaja's son, the chariotecr51 said unto Drona, that foremost of all wielders of weapons,-O thou blest with length of days, the Kaurava troops are flying away!52 Behold, our warriors, routed (by the foe), are flying in all directions! There again, those heroes, viz., the Panchalas and the Pandavas, united together, 3 are rushing from all sides from desire of slaughtering thee! O chastiser of foes, do thou determine which of these tasks should first demand attention!54 Should we stay here (to meet the advancing Pandavas, or should we proceed (towards Satyaki)? As regards Sātyaki, he is now far ahead of us :- While the charioteer, O sire, was speaking thus unto Bharadwaja's son,55 the grandson of Cini suddenly appeared to the view, engaged in slaughtering a large number of car-warriors. Those troops of thine, while being thus slaughtered by Yuyudhāna in battle, ⁵⁶ fled away from Yuyudhāna's car towards where Drona's division was. Those (other) car-warriors also with whom Dusçāsana had proceeded, all struck with panic, similarly rushed to the spot where Drona's car was seen." ⁵⁷

SECTION CXXII.

"Sanjaya said,—Beholding Dusçāsana's car staying near his, the son of Bharadwaja, addressing Duscasana, said these words, -Why, O Dusçāsana, are all these cars flying away! Is the king well? Doth the ruler of the Sindhus yet live? Thou art a prince! Thou art a brother of the king! Thou art a mighty car-warrior! Why dost thou fly away from battle! (Securing the throne to thy brother) become thou the Prince-Regent! Thou hadst formerly said unto Draupadi,-[Thou art our slave, having been won by us at dice! Without being confined to thy husbands, cast aside thy chastity! a bearer of robes to the king my eldest brother! Thy husbands are all dead! They are as worthless as grains of sesamum without kernel! |-- Having said these words then, why, O Dusçāsana, dost thou fly from battle now? Having thyself provoked such fierce hostilities with the Panchalas and the Pandavas, why art thou afeard in battle in the presence of Sātyaki alone ?6 Taking up the dice on the occasion of the gambling match, couldst thou not divine that those dice then handled by thee would soon transform themselves into fierce shafts resembling snakes of virulent poison? It was thou that hadst formerly applied diverse abusive epithets towards the The woes of Draupadi have thee for their root! Where now is that pride, that insolence, that brag of thine? Why dost thou fly, having angered the Pandavas that resemble snakes of virulent poison? When thou, that art a brave brother of Suyodhana, are intent on flight, without doubt, both king Suyodhana and this Bharata army are to be pitied!10 doubt, O hero, thou shouldst today protect, relying on the energy of thy own arms, this routed and panic-struck Kaurava host!11

http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-googl Generated on 2022-02-03 12:51 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

Without doing this, thou, however, forsakest the battle in fear and enhancest the joy of thy foes! O slaver of foes, when thou that art the leader of thy host fliest away thus,12 who else will stay in battle? When thou, its refuge, art frightened, who is there that will not be frightened,? Fighting with that single warrior of the Satwata race,18 thy heart is inclined towards flight from battle! What, however, O Kaurava, wilt thou do when thou wilt see the wielder of Gandiva in battle, Bhimasena, or the twins (Nakula and Sahadeva)? The shafts of Sātyaki, frightened by which thou seekest safety in flight, are scarcely equal to those of Phalguna in battle that resemble the Sun or the fire in splendour? If thy heart is firmly bent on flight,14-16 let the sovereignty of the Earth then, upon the conclusion of peace, be given to king Yudhishthira the just! Before the shafts of Phalguna, resembling snakes freed from their sloughs,17 enter thy body, make peace with the Pan-Before the high-souled Parthas, slaying thy hundred brothers in battle, wrest the Earth by force, make with the Pandavas! Before king Yudihishthira is enraged, 18-19 and Krishna also, that delighter in battle, make peace with the Pandavas! Before the mighty-armed Bhima, penetrating into this vast host,20 seizes thy brothers, make peace with Bhishma formerly told thy brother Suyothe Pandavas! dhana,21- The Pandavas are unconquerable in battle! amiable one, make peace with them !]-Thy wicked brother Suyodhana, however, did not do it.22 Therefore, setting thy heart firmly on battle, fight vigorously with the Pandavas! Go quickly on thy car to the spot where Sātyaki is.23 thee, O Bharata, this host will fly away! For the sake of thy own self, fight in battle with Satyaki of prowess incapable of being baffled!24—Thus addressed (by Drona), thy son said not a word in reply. Feigning not to have heard the words (of Bharadwāja's son), Dusçāsana proceeded to the place where Sātyaki was.25 Accompanied by a large force of unretrating Mlecchas, and coming upon Sātyaki in battle, Dusçāsana fought vigorously with that hero.26 Drona also, that foremost of carwarriors, excited with wrath, rushed against the Panchalas and the Pandavas, with middling speed. Penetrating into the midst of the Pandava host in that battle, Drona began to crush their warriors by hundreds and thousands.28 O king, proclaiming his name in that battle, caused a great carnage among the Pandavas, the Panchalas, and the Matsyas.29 Then the illustrious Viraketu, the son of the ruler of the Pānchālas, rushed against the son of Bharadwāja who was thus engaged in vanquishing the Pandava ranks.80 Drona with five straight shafts, that prince then pierced Drona's standard with one shaft, and then his charioteer with seven. 22 The sight that I then beheld, O monarch, in that battle, was exceedingly wonderful, inasmuch as Drona, though exerting himself vigorously, could not approach the prince of the Pan-Then, O sire, the Panchalas, beholding Drona checked in battle, surrounded the latter on all sides, O king, from desire of king Yudhishthira's victory.33 And those warriors then covered Drona alone with showers of fiery shafts and strong lances and various other kinds of weapons, O king!54 Baffling then that dense shower of weapons by means of his own numerous shafts like the wind driving away from the welkin masses of clouds, Drona looked exceedingly resplendent.35 Then that slayer of hostile heroes, (viz., the son of Bharadwaja), aimed a fierce shaft endued with the effulgence of the Sun or the fire, at the car of Viraketu. 86 That shaft, O monarch, piercing through the prince of Panchala, quickly entered the Earth, bathed in blood and blazing like a flame of fire. 87 prince of the Panchalas quickly fell down from his car like a Champaka tree uprooted by the wind falling down from a mountain summit.88 Upon the fall of that great bowman, that prince endued with great might, the Panchalas speedily encompassed Drona on every side. 33 Then Chitraketu, and Sudhanwan, and Chitravarman, O Bhārata, and Chitraratha also, all afflicted with grief on account of their (slain) brother, 40 together rushed against the son of Bharadwaja, desirous of battling with him, and shooting shafts (at him) like the clouds (pouring rain) at the end of summer.41 Struck from all sides by those mighty car-warriors of royal lineage, that bull among Brāhmanas mustered all his energy and wrath for their destruction.42 Then Drona shot showers of shafts at them. Struck with those shafts of

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:51 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112
Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google

46

http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-googl Generated on 2022-02-03 12:51 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

Drona shot from his bow drawn to its fullest stretch,48 those princes, O best of monarchs, became confounded and knew not what to do. The angry Drona, O Bharata, beholding those princes stupified, smilingly deprived them of their steeds and charioteers and cars in that battle. Then the illustrious son of Bharadwaja, by means of his sharp arrows and broad-headed shafts,44-45 cut off their heads like a person plucking flowers from a tree. Deprived of life, those princes there, O king of great splendour, fell down from their cars, on the Earth, 46 like the (slain) Daiteyas and Danavas in the battle between the gods and the Asuras in days of old. Having slain them in battle, 0 king, the valiant son of Bharadwaja47 shook his invincible bow the back of whose staff was decked with gold. Beholding those mighty car-warriors, resembling the very celestials, among the Pānchālas slain, 48 Dhishtadyumna, inflamed with rage, shed tears in that battle. Excited with wrath, he rushed, in that encounter, Then, O king, cries of woe suddenly against Drona's car.49 arose there at sight of Drona covered with arrows by the prince of Panchala.50 Completely shrouded by the high-souled son of Prishata, Drona, however, suffered no pain. hand, he continued to fight, smiling the while.51 of the Panchalas then, furious with rage, struck Drona in the chest with many straight shafts.52 Deeply pierced by that mighty warrior, the illustrious son of Bharadwaia sat down on the terrace of his car and went into a swoon.53 Beholding him in that condition, Dhrishtadyumna endued with great prowess and energy, laid aside his bow and quickly took up a That mighty car-warrior then, speedily jumping down from his own car, mounted that of Bharadwaja, O sire, in no time,56 his eyes red in wrath and impelled by the desire of cutting Drona's head from off his trunk. Meanwhile, the valiant Drona, regaining his senses,56 took up his bow and seeing Dhrishtadyumna arrived so near him from desire of slaughter, began to pierce that mighty car-warrior with shafts measuring a span only in length and, therefore, fit to be used in close Those arrows of the measure of a span and fit to be used in close fight, 57-58 were known to Drona, O king! And with them he succeeded in weakening Dhrishtadyumna. The mighty Dhrishtadyumna, struck with a large number of those arrows, 59 quickly jumped down from Drona's car. Then that hero of great prowess, his impetuosity baffled, mounted upon his own car and once more took up his large bow.60 And the mighty car-warrior Dhrishtadyumna once more began to pierce Drona And Drona also, O monarch, began to pierce the in that battle. son of Prishata with his arrows. 61 Thereupon the battle that took place between Drona and the prince of the Panchalas was wonderful in the extreme, like that between Indra and Prahlada both desirous of the sovereignty of the three worlds.62 conversant with the ways of battle, they careered over the field. displaying diverse motions of their cars and mangling each other with their shafts.63 And Drona and Prishata's son, stupifying the minds of the warriors, shot showers of shafts like two mighty clouds (pouring torrents of rain) in the rainy season.64 And those illustrious warriors shrouded with their shafts the welkin, the points of the compass, and the Earth. creatures, viz., the Kshatriyas, O king, and all the other combatants there, highly applauded that battle between them. And the Panchalas, O king, loudly exclaimed,—Without doubt, Drona, having encountered Dhishtadyumna in battle, will succumb to us!-Then Drona, in that battle, quickly cut off the head of Dhristadyumna's charioteer like a person plucking Then the steeds, O king, of the higha ripe fruit from a tree. souled Dhrishtadyumna ran away. 65-68 And after those steeds had carried away Dhrishtadyumna from the field, Drona, endued with great prowes, began to rout the Panchalas and the Srinjayas in that battle.69 Having vanquished the Pandus and the Pānchālas, Bharadwāja's son of great prowess, that chastiser of foes, once more took up his station in the midst of his own And the Pandavas, O lord, ventured not to vanquish him in battle.' "70

SECTION CXXIII.

"Sanjaya said,—Meanwhile, O king, Dusçāsana rushed against the grandson of Cini, scattering thousands of shafts like a mighty cloud pouring torrents of rain." Having pierced Satyaki with sixty arrows and once more with sixteen, he failed to make that hero tremble, for the latter stood in battle immovable as the Maināka mountain.2 Accompanied by a large throng of cars hailing from diverse realms, that foremost one of Bharata's race shot numberless arrows, and filled all the points of the compass with roars deep as those of the clouds. Beholding the Kaurava coming to battle, Satyaki of mighty arms rushed towards him and shrouded him with his shafts. They that were at the van of Duscasana, thus covered with those arrowy showers,6 all fled away in fear, in the very sight of thy son. After they had fled away, O monarch, thy son Dusçasans, O king, remained fearlessly in battle and began to afflict Sātyaki with arrows. And piercing the four steeds of Sātyaki with four arrows, his charioteer with three, and Satyaki himself with a hundred in that battle, Dusçasana uttered a loud roar. Then, O monarch, Madhava, inflamed with rage, soon made Dusçāsana's car and driver and standard and Dusçāsana himself invisible by means of his straight arrows. Indeed, Sātyaki entirely shrouded the brave Duscasana with arrows. 7-9 spider entangling a gnat within reach by means of its threads, that vanguisher of foes quickly covered Dusçasana with his shafts.10 Then king Duryodhana, seeing Dusçasana thus covered with arrows, urged a body of Trigartas towards the car of Yuyudhāna,11 Those Trigarta car-warriors, of fierce deeds, accomplished in battle, and numbering three thousand, proceeded towards Yuyudhāna.12 Firmly resolved upon battle and swearing not to retreat, all of them encompassed Yuyudhāna with a large throng of cars.18 Soon, however, Yuyudhana struck down five hundred of their foremost warriors stationed in the van of that force as it advanced towards him in battle, shooting showers of arrows at him.14 Speedily slain by that foremost one amongst the Cinis with his shafts, these fell down like tall trees from mountain-tops, uprooted by a tempest.16 And the field of battle, strewn with mangled elephants, O monarch, and fallen standards, and the prostrate bodies of steeds decked in trappings of gold and torn and lascerated with the shafts of Cini's grandson and weltering in blood, looked beautiful, O king, like a plain overgrown with flowering Kincukas.16-17 Those soldiers of thine, thus slaughtered by Yuyudhana, failed to find a protecter like elephants sunk in a morass.18 Then all of them turned towards the spot where Drona's car was, like mighty snakes making towards holes from fear of the prince of birds.19 Having slain those five hundred brave warriors by means of his shafts resembling snakes of virulent poison, that hero slowly proceeded towards the place where Dhananjaya's car was.20 And as that foremost of men was thus proceeding, thy son Dusçasana quickly pierced him with nine straight arrows.21 That mighty bowman then, (viz., Yuyudhāna), pierced Dusçāsana in return, with five straight and sharp arrows equipt with golden wings and vulturine feathers.22 Then Duscasana, O Bharata, smiling the while, pierced Sātyaki, O monarch, with three arrrows and once more with five.28 The grandson of Cini then, striking thy son with five arrows and cutting off his bow, proceeded smilingly towards Arjuna.24 Then Dusçasana, inflamed with wrath, and desirous of slaying the Vrishni hero, hurled at him, as he proceeded, a dart made wholly of iron.25 Sātyaki, however, O king, cut off, with his shafts equipt with Kanka feathers, that fierce dart of thy son.26 Then, O ruler of men, thy son, taking up another bow, pierced Sātyaki with some arrows and uttered a loud roar.37 Then Sātyaki, excited with wrath, stupifying thy son in that battle, struck him in the centre of the chest with some shafts that resembled flames of fire.28 And once more he pierced Dusçasana with shafts made wholly of iron and having very keen Dusçāsana, however, pierced Sātyaki in return with points. twenty arrows.29 Then the highly blessed Sātyaki, O monarch pierced Dusçāsana in the centre of the chest with three straight arrows.30 And the mighty car-warrior Yuyudhana, with some keen shafts, slew the steeds of Dusçasana; and inflamed with wrath he slew, with some srtaight arrows, the latter's charioteer also. 81 With one broad-headed arrow he then cut off thy son's bow, and with five arrows he cut the leathern fence that encased his hand. Acquainted as he was with the highest weapons, Satyaki, then, with a couple of broad-headed shafts, cut off Dusçasana's standard and the wooden shaft on his car. And then with a number of keen arrows he slew both the Pārshni charioteers of thy son. latter then, bowless and carless and steedless and driverless, 52-23 was taken up by the leader of the Trigarta warriors on his car. The grandson of Cini then, O Bharata, pursuing him for a moment.84 restrained himself and slew him not, for the mightyarmed hero recollected the words of Bhimasena. Bhimasena, O Bharata, vowed in the midst of the assembly the destruction of all thy sons in battle! Then, O lord, Satyaki, having thus vanquished Dusçasana, quickly proceeded, O king, along the track by which Dhananjaya had gone before him.' "85-86

Generated on 2022-03-03-12:51 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized ,

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:51 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized

SECTION CXXIV.

"Dhritarashtra said,—'Were there, O Sanjaya, no mighty car-warriors in that army of mine who could slay or resist that Sātyaki while he proceeded (towards Arjuna)? Of prowess ineapable of being baffled, and endued with might equal to that of Cakra himself, alone he achieved feats in battle like the great Indra amidst the Danavas! Or, perhaps, the track by which Sātyaki proceeded was empty! Alas, possessed of true prowess, alone he hath crushed numberless warriors !8 Tell me, O Sanjaya, how the grandson of Cini, alone as he was, passed through that vast force struggling with him in battle?"4*

"Sanjaya said,—O king, the fierce exertions and the uproar made by thy host which abounded with cars and elephants and steeds and foot-soldiers, resembled what is seen at the end of the Yuga.5 O giver of honors, when thy assembled host was (daily) mustered, it seemed to me that another assemblage like that of thy army had never been on Earth. gods and the Chāranas, who came there said,—This muster will be the last of its kind on Earth !+7-Indeed, O king,

^{*} The Bombay text adds certain slokus after the 2nd, which do not occur in any of the Bengal texts.-T.

[†] Both 6 and 7 are difficult slokas. The Bengal texts read ahnikeshu; the Bombay reading is ahuteshu. If the Bengal reading be accepted, the meaning would be-"Day by day, upon muster, &c." The never had such an array been formed before as that which was formed by Drona on the day of Jayadratha's slaughter. The uproar made by those vast bodies of soldiers rushing at one another in battle resembled that of the ocean itself lashed into fury by the tempest.9 In that host of thine, as also in that of the Pandavas, there were hundreds and thousands of kings, O best of men.10 The noise made by those angry heroes of fierce deeds while engaged in battle, was tremendous and made the hair to stand on end.11 Then Bhimasena and Dhrishtadyumna, O sire, and Nakula and Sahadeva and king Yudhishthira the just, loudly shouted -- Come, Strike, Rush! The brave Madhava and Arjuna have entered the hostile army! Do that quickly by which they may easily go to where Jayadratha's car is! -Saying this, they urged their soldiers. And they continued,-If Sātyaki and Arjuna be slain, the Kurus will have achieved their objects, and ourselves will be defeated! of you, therefore, uniting together, quickly agitate this oceanlike army (of the foe) like impetuous winds agitating the deep !- The warriors, O king, thus urged by Bhimasena and the prince of the Panchalas,18-16 smote the Kauravas, becoming reckless of their very lives. Endued with great energy, all of them, desiring death in battle at the point or the edge of weapons in expectation of heaven, showed not the least regard for their lives in fighting for their friends. Similarly thy warriors, O king, desirous of great renown, 17-18 and nobly resolved upon battle, stood on the field, determined to fight. In that fierce and terrible battle,19 Sātyaki, having vanquished all the combatants, proceeded towards Arjuna. The rays of the Sun being reflected from the bright armour of the warriors, the combatants were obliged to withdraw their eyes from these. also, O king, penetrated the mighty host of the high-souled second line of 7 which I render "This muster will be the last of its kind on Earth," may be interpretated in another away. Taking it as an exclamation, it may be rendered .- "Will an assemblage of such limits take place on Earth !" i. e., "How vast is this assemblage on Earth !" Of course, if the version last given be correct, Etadantas would mean "Having this for its limit."-T.

Pāndavas vigorously struggling in battle. The encounter that took place between him on the one side and them on the other was exceedingly fierce, and great was the carnage that occurred there on the occasion.'20-28

"Dhritarāshtra said,—'When the Pāndava host was thus proceeding to battle, Duryodhana, in penetrating it, must have been placed in great distress. I hope he did not turn his back upon the field, O Suta!²⁸ That encounter between one and the many in dreadful battle, the one again being a king, seems to me to have been very unequal!²⁴ Besides, Duryodhana hath been brought up in great luxury. In wealth and possessions, he is a king of men. Alone encountering many, I hope he did not turn back from the fight!²⁵

"Sanjaya said,-'Listen to me, O king, as I narrate, O Bharata, that wonderful battle fought by thy son, that encounter between one and the many !26 Indeed, the Pandava army was agitated by Duryodhana in that battle like an assemblage of lotus stalks in a lake by an elephant.27 Seeing then that army thus smitten by thy son, O king, the Panchalas headed by Bhimasena rushed at him. 28 Then Duryodhana pierced Bhimasena with ten arrows, and each of the twins with three and king Yudhishthira with seven. 49 And he pierced Virata and Drupada with six arrows, and Cikhandin with a hundred, And piercing Dhrishtadyumna with twenty arrows, he struck each of the five sons of Draupadi with three arrows. 50 With his fierce shafts he cut off hundreds of other combatants in that battle, including elephants and car-warriors, like the Destroyer himself in wrath exterminating creatures. In consequence of his skill acquired by practice and of the power of his weapons, he seemed, as he was engaged in striking down his foes, to bear his bow incessantly drawn to a circle whether when aiming or letting off his shafts.38 Indeed, that formidable bow of his, the back of whose staff was decked with gold, was seen by people to be drawn into a perpetual circle as he was employed in slaying his enemies. 33 Then king Yudhishthira, with a couple of broad-headed shafts, cut off the bow of thy son, O thou of Kuru's race, as the latter struggled in fight. 54 And Yudhishthira also pierced him deeply with ten excellent and foremost

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:51 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized

Those arrows, however, touching the armour of Duryodhana, quickly broke into pieces. 55 Then the Parthas, filled with delight, surrounded Yudhishthira like the celestials and great Rishis in days of old surounding Cakra on the occasion of the slaughter of Vritra. 56 Thy valiant son then, taking up another bow, addressed king Yudhishthira the son of Pandu, saying,—Wait, Wait,—and rushed against him. 37 thy son thus advancing in great battle, the Panchalas, cheerfully and with hopes of victory, advanced to receive him. 38 Then Drona, desirous of rescuing the (Kuru) king, received the rushing Panchalas, like a mountain receiving masses of raincharged clouds driven by the tempest. 30 The battle then, O king, that took place there was exceedingly fierce, making the hair to stand on end, between the Pandavas, O thou of mighty arms, and thy warriors.40 Dreadful was the carnage of all creatures that then took place, resembling the sport of Rudra himself (at the end of the Yuga). Then there arose a loud uproar at the place where Dhananjaya was.41 And that uproar, O lord, making the hair to stand on end, rose above all other sounds. O mighty-armed one, progressed the battle between Arjuna and thy bowmen.42 Thus progressed the battle between Satyaki and thy men in the midst of thy army. And thus continued the fight between Drona and his enemies at the gate of the array.48 Thus, indeed, O lord of Earth, continued that carnage on the Earth when Arjuna and Drona and the mighty carwarrior Sātyaki were all excited with wrath." "44

SECTION CXXV.

"Sanjaya said,—'On the afternoon of that day, O king, a dreadful battle, characterised by roars deep as those of the clouds, once more happened between Drona and the Somakas.1 That foremost of men (viz.. Drona), mounted on his car of red steeds, and intent on battle, rushed against the Pandavas, with middling speed.3 The valiant son of Bharadwaja, that great bowman endued with mighty strength, that hero born in an excellent pot, engaged in doing what was agreeable to thee, O king, and striking down, O Bhārata, many foremost of warriors

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:51 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

with his whetted arrows equipt with beautiful wings, seemed to sport in that battle.8-4 Then that mighty car-warrior of the Kaikayas, viz., Vrihatkshatra, irresistible in battle, and the eldest of five brothers, rushed against him. Shooting many keen shafts, he greatly afflicted the preceptor, like a mighty mass of clouds pouring torrents of rain on the mountains of Gandhamādana.6 Then Drona, O king, excited with wrath, sped at him five and ten shafts whetted on stone and equipt with wings of g ld. The prince of the Kekayas, however, cheerfully cut off every one of those shafts shot by Drona and which resembled angry snakes of virulent poison, with five shafts of his Beholding that lightness of hand displayed by him, that bull among Brahmanas then sped at him eight straight Seeing those shafts shot from Drona's bow swiftly coursing towards him, Vrihatkshatra in that battle resisted them with as many sharp shafts of his.10 Beholding that exceedingly difficult feat achieved by Vrihatkshatra, by troops, O king, were filled with amazement.11 Then Drona, O monarch, applauding Vrihatkshatra, invoked into existence the irresistible and celestial weapon called Brahma in that battle.12 The prince of the Kekayas, seeing it shot by Drona in battle, baffled that Brahma weapon, O monarch, by a Brahma weapon After that weapon had been thus baffled, Vrihatof his own.18 kshatra, O Bhārata, pierced the Brāhmana with sixty shafts whetted on stone and equipt with wings of gold.14 Then Drons, that foremost of men, pierced the prince of the Kekayas with a powerful shaft which, penetrating through the latter's armour, (passed through his body and) entered the Earth. As a black cobra, O best of kings, pierces through an ant-hill, even so did that shaft enter the Earth, having pierced through the body of the Kekaya prince in that battle.16 Deeply pierced, O monarch, with the shafts of Drona, the prince of the Kekayas, filled with rage and rolling his beautiful eyes, 17 pierced Drona with seventy arrows whetted on stone and equipt with wings of gold. And with another arrow he greatly afflicted Drona's charioteer Pierced by Vrihatkshatra, O sire, with in his very vitals.18 arrows, Drona shot showers of keen shafts at the car of the prince of the Kekayas.19 Depriving the mighty car-warrior Vrihatkshatra of his coolness, Drona then, with four winged arrows, slew the four steeds of the former.²⁰ With another arrow he felled Vrihatkshatra's charioteer from his niche in the car. And felling on the Earth, with two other arrows, his enemy's standard and umbrella,²¹ that bull among Brāhmanas, with a third shaft, well shot from his bow, pierced Vrihatkshatra himself in the chest. Thereupon the latter, thus struck in the chest, fell down from his car.²²

"Upon the slaughter, O king, of Vrihatkshatra, that mighty car-warrior among the Kaikayas, the son of Cicupala, filled with rage, addressed his charioteer, saying,28-O charioteer, proceed to the spot where Drona stayeth, clad in armour, and engaged in slaying the Kaikaya and the Panchala hosts !24-Hearing these words of his, the charioteer soon took that foremost of car-warriors unto Drona, by means of those fleet steeds of the Kamvoja breed.25 Then Dhrishtaketu, that bull among the Chedis, swelling with might, rushed towards Drona for his own destruction like an insect upon a blazing fire. Soon he pierced Drona and his steeds and car and standard with sixty shafts. And once more he struck him with many other keen shafts like a man rousing a sleeping tiger.27 Then Drona. with a sharp razor-faced arrow winged with vulturine feathers, cut off in the middle the bow of that mighty warrior struggling in battle.28 Then that powerful car-warrior, viz., the son of Cicupala, taking up another bow, pierced Drona with many shafts winged with the feathers of Kankas and peacocks.29 Drona then, slaying with four shafts the four steeds of Dhrishtaketu, smilingly cut off the head of the latter's charioteer from his trunk. 30 And then he pierced Dhrishtaketu himself with five and twenty arrows. The prince of the Chedis then, quickly jumping down from his car, took up a mace, 31 and hurled it at the son of Bharadwaja like an angry snake. Beholding that heavy mace, endued with the strength of adamant and decked with gold, coursing towards him like the death night, the son of Bharadwaja cut it off with many thousands of whetted That mace, cut off by Bharadwaja's son, O sire, with many shafts, fell down, O Kaurava, making the Earth echo with its noise.54 Beholding his mace baffled, the wrathful and brave Dhrishtaketu hurled a lance and then a dart decked with Cutting off that lance with five shafts, Drona cut off that dart also with five arrows. Both those missiles, thus cut off, fell down on the Earth like a couple of snakes mangled and torn by Garuda. 66 The valiant son of Bharadwaja then, in that battle, sped for his destruction a keen shaft at Dhrishtaketu who was battling for the destruction of Bharadwaja him-That shaft, piercing through the armour and breast of Dhrishtaketu of immeasurable energy, entered the Earth like a swan diving into a lake overgrown with lotuses. 58 jay seizes and devours a little insect, even so did the heroic Drona devour Dhrishtaketu in that great battle.89 slaughter of the ruler of the Chedis, his son who was conversant with the highest weapons, excited with wrath, sought to bear the burthen of his sire.40 Him also, Drona, smiling the while, despatched to the abode of Yama by means of his shafts, like a huge and mighty tiger in the deep woods slaying an infant deer.41

"'While the Pandavas, O Bharata, were thus being thinned, the heroic son of Jarasandha rushed towards Drona.42 the clouds shrouding the Sun, he quickly made the mightyarmed Drona invisible in that battle by means of his arrowy showers.48 Beholding that lightness of hand in him, Drona, that grinder of Kshatriyas, quickly shot his shafts by hundreds and thousands.44 Covering (with his arrows) in that battle that foremost of car-warriors stationed on his car, Drona speedily slew the son of Jarasandha in the very sight of all the bow-Indeed, Drona, resembling the Destroyer himself, swallowed up every one who approached him then, like the Destroyer swallowing up creatures when their hour arrives.46 Drona, O monarch, proclaiming his name in that battle, covered the Pandavas with many thousands of shafts.47 Those shafts shot by Drona, whetted on stone and engraved with his name, slew in that battle men and elephants and steeds by hundreds.48 Thus slaughtered by Drona like the Asuras by Cakra, the Panchalas began to tremble like a herd of kine afflicted with Indeed, O bull of Bharata's race, when the Pandava army was thus being slaughtered by Drona, there arose an

Scorched by the Sun and slaughtawful wail of woe from it.50 ered by means of those arrows, the Panchalas then became filled with anxiety.51 Stupified by Bharadwaja's son with his arrowy showers in that battle, the mighty car-warriors among the Panchalas felt like persons whose thighs had been seized by Then, O king, the Chedis, the Srinjayas, the Kāçis, and the Koçalas, rushed cheerfully against the son of Bharadwaja from desire of battle. 53 And the Chedis, the Panchālas, and the Srinjayas addressed one another, saying,-Drona is slain !- Drona is slain !- Saying these words they rushed at that hero.54 Indeed, all those tigers among men fell with their utmost might upon the illustrious Drona, desirous of despatching him to the abode of Yama.55 Then the son of Bharadwaja, by means of his shafts, despatched those brave warriors struggling vigorously in battle, especially those foremost ones among the Chedis, into the presence of the king of After those foremost ones among the Chedis had been exterminated, the Panchalas, afflicted with the shafts of Drona, began to tremble. 57 Beholding, O sire, those feats of Drona, they loudly called after Bhimasena and dyumna, O Bhārata, and said,58—This Brāhmana hath, without doubt, practised the austerest of penances and acquired great ascetic merit! Inflamed with wrath in battle, he consumeth the foremost of Kshatriyas!50 A Kshatriya's duty is battle; a Brāhmana's, the highest asceticism. A Brāhmana endued with ascetic merit and learning, is capable of burning everything with his glances only !60 Many foremost of Kshatriyas, having approached the uncrossable and fierce fire of Drona's weapons, have, O Bhārata, been blasted and consumed!61 The illustrious Drona, to the measure of his might, courage, and perseverance, stupifies all creatures and slays our troops !62-Hearing these words of theirs, the mighty Kshatradharman, rigidly observant of the duties of a Kshatriya, wrathfully cut off with a crescent-shaped arrow the bow of Drona with arrow Then Drona, that grinder of Kshatriyas, becoming more angry still,68-64 took up another bright bow tougher than the one he laid aside. Fixing on it a keen arrow destructive of hostile ranks,65 the preceptor, endued with great strength, sped it at the prince, drawing the bowstring to his ear. That arrow, slaving Kshatradharman, entered the Earth.66 His breast pierced through, he fell down from his vehicle on Upon the slaughter of Dhrishtadyumna's son, the (Pāndava) troops began to tremble.67 Then the mighty Chekitana fell upon Drona. Piercing Drona with ten arrows, he once more pierced him with a shaft in the centre of his chest.68 And he pierced Drona's charioteer with four arrows and his four steeds also with four. The preceptor then pierced the right arm of Chekitana with sixteen arrows,69 and his standard with sixteen, and his charioteer with seven. Upon the charioteer being slain, Chekitana's steeds fled away, dragging the car after them. 70 Beholding the steeds of Chekitana pierced with the arrows of Bharadwaja's son, and his car also deprived of driver,*71 the Panchalas and the Pandavas were inspired with Drona then, O sire, routing on all sides the Panchālas and the Srinjayas united together in battle, looked exceedingly resplendent. The venerable Drona full five and eighty years of age, dark in hue and with white locks descending to his ears, careered in battle like a youth of sixteen. O king, enemies regarded the foe-slaying Drona as he fearlessly careered in battle to be none else than Indra himself armed with the thunder. Then, O monarch, the mighty-armed Drupada of great intelligence said, 72-75—This one (Drona) is slaving the Kshatriyas like a hungry tiger slaying smaller animals! The sinful Duryodhana of wicked soul will assuredly obtain the most miserable regions (in the next world)!76 It is through his covetousness that many foremost of Kshatriyas, slain in battle, lay prostrate on the field, like mangled bulls," weltering in blood and becoming the food of dogs and jackals !- Saying these words, O monarch, Drupada, that master of an Akshauhini of troops, placing the Parthas at his head, rushed with speed towards Drona.' "78

^{*} The texts requires correction.-T.

SECTION CXXVI.

"Sanjaya said,—'When the army of the Pandavas was thus agitated on all sides, the Parthas and the Panchalas and the Somakas, retreated to a great distance! During the progress of that fierce battle making the hair to stand on end, and of that universal carnage like to what happens, O Bharata, at the end of the Yuga, when, indeed, Drona of great prowess was repeatedly uttering leonine shouts, and when the Panchalas were being weakened and the Pandavas slaughtered, king Yudhishthira the just, failing to see any refuge in that distress, began, O king, to think how the matter would end!4 his eyes around in expectation of seeing Savyasachin, Yudhishthira, however, saw neither that son of Pritha nor Madhava. Not seeing that tiger among men, viz., the ape-bannered Arjuna, and not hearing also the twang of Gandiva, the monarch became filled with anxiety. Not seeing Satyaki also, that foremost of car-warriors among the Vrishnis, king Yudhishthira the just became equally anxious." Indeed, not seeing those two foremost of men, Yudhishthira knew no peace. high-souled king Yudhishthira the just, of mighty-arms, fearing the evil opinion of the world, began to think of Satyaki's car.—Cini's grandson Sātyaki of true prowess, that dispeller of the fears of friends, hath been sent by me in the track of I had only one source of anxiety before. I should have tidings of both Sātyaki and now I have two. Dhananjaya the son of Pandu! Having despatched Satyaki to follow in the track of Arjuna,8-11 whom shall I now send in the track of Sātyaki? If by every means I endeavour to obtain intelligence of my brother only 12 without enquiring after Yuyudhana, the world will reproach me! They will say that, -[Yudhishthira the son of Dharma, having enquired after his brother,18 leaves Sātyaki of Vrishni's race, that hero of unfailing prowess, to his fate !]—Fearing as I do the reproach of the world, I should, therefore, send Vrikodara the son of Pritha in the track of the high-souled Madhava. The love I bear to the Vrishni hero, to that invincible warrior of the Satwata race, (viz., Sātyaki), is not less than the love I bear to Arjuna, that slayer of foes! The delighter of the Cinis hath, again, been set by me to a very heavy task !14-16 That mighty warrior, however, hath, either for the sake of a friend's request or for that of honor, penetrated into the Bharata army like a Makara into the ocean.17 Loud is the noise I hear of unretreating heroes fighting together against that Vrishni hero of great intelligence!18 Without doubt, they are too many for him! The time, therefore, is come when I should think of his rescue! to me that armed with the bow, Bhimasena the son of Pandu should go there where those two mighty car-warriors are! There is nothing on Earth that Bhima cannot bear!19-20 gles with resolution, he is a match in battle for all the bowmen Depending on the might of his own arms he can in the world. stand against all foes.21 Relying on the strength of arms of that high-souled warrior, we have been able to come back from our exile in the woods and we have never been vanquished in If Bhimasena the son of Pandu proceedeth hence to Sātyaki, both Sātyaki and Phālguna will derive real aid!23 Without doubt, I should not feel any anxiety for Satyaki and Phalguna. Both of them are accomplished in weapons, and Vāsudeva himself is protecting them !24 (For all that, I feel anxious on their account). I should certainly seek to remove my anxiety! I shall, therefore, set Bhima to follow in the wake of Sātyaki !25 Having done this, I should regard my arrangements complete for the rescue of Sātyaki!-Yudhishthira the son of Dharma, having settled this in his mind, se addressed his charioteer and said,—Take me to Bhima !—Hearing the command of king Yudhishthira the just, the charioteer who was versed in horse-lore, 27 took that car decked with gold Arrived at the presence of Bhima, the to where Bhima was. king, remembering the occasion,28 became unmanned by grief, and pressed Bhima with diverse solicitations. whelmed with grief, the monarch addressed Bhima." were the words, O king, that Yudhishthira the son of Kunti then said unto him: -O Bhima, I do not behold the standard of that Arjuna, who on a single car had vanquished of all the

http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google Generated on 2022-03-03-12:51 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized ,

gods, the Gandharvas, and Asuras !- Then Bhimasena, addressing king Yudhishthira the just who was in that plight, said, 30-31—Never before did I see or hear thee afflicted with such cheerlessness! Indeed, formerly, when we were pierced with grief, it was thou who hadst been our comforter!82 Rise, Rise, O king of kings, say what I am to do for thee! O giver of honors, there is nothing that I cannot do !53 Tell me what your commands are, O foremost one of Kuru's race! Do not set your heart on grief!-Unto Bhimasena then, the king with a sorrowful face and eyes bathed in tears said, sighing the while like a black cobra, 34—The blasts of the conch Pānchajanya, wrathfully blown by Vasudeva of world-wide renown, are being heard! It seems, from this, that thy brother Dhananjaya lieth today on the field, deprived of life !55-36 Without doubt, Arjuna having been slain, Janarddana is battling! That hero of great might, relying on whose prowess the Pandavas are alive,27 he to whom we always turn in times of fear like the celestials towards their chief of a thousand eyes, that hero hath, in search after the ruler of the Sindhus, penetrated into the Bharata host !58 this, O Bhima, viz., that he hath gone, but he hath not yet returned! Dark in complexion, youthful in years, of curly locks, exceedingly handsome, a mighty car-warrior, so of broad chest and long arms, possessed of the tread of an infuriate elephant, of eyes of the color of burnished copper and like those of a chakra, that brother of thine enhances the fears of foes!40 Blessed be thou, even this is the cause of my grief, O chastiser For Arjuna's sake, O thou of mighty arms, as also for the sake of Sātwata,41 my grief increaseth like a blazing fire fed with libations of clarified butter! I do not see his stan-For this am I stupified with sorrow!42 Without doubt. he hath been slain, and Krishna, skilled in battle, is fighting! Know also that that tiger among men, that mighty car-warrior, viz., Sātwata, is slain!43 Alas, Sātyaki hath followed in the wake of that other mighty car-warrior, viz., thy brother! Without seeing Satyaki also, I am stupified with grief! Therefore, O son of Kunti, go thither where Dhananjaya is and Sātyaki also of mighty energy, if, of course, thou thinkest it thy duty45 to obey my words, O thou that art acquainted http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google Generated on 2022-02-03 12:51 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized , with duty! Remember that I am thy eldest brother! Thou shouldst think Sātyaki to be dearer to thee than Arjuna himself!46 O son of Pritha, Satyaki hath gone, from desire of doing good to me, in the track of Arjuna, a track that is incapable of being trod by persons of vile souls!47 Beholding the two Krishnas and Sātyaki also of the Sātwata race sound and whole, send me a message, O son of Pandu, by uttering a leonine roar !- "48

SECTION CXXVII.

"Bhima said,—That car which formerly bore Brahman and Içana and Indra and Varuna (to battle), mounting upon that car, have the two Krishnas gone! They can have no fear of Taking, however, thy command on my head, lo, I am going! Do not grieve! Meeting with those tigers among men, I shall send thee intelligence !2-'

"Sanjaya said,-'Having said these words, the mighty Bhima began to prepare for setting out, repeatedly making over Yudhishthira to Dhrishtadyumna and the other friends (of the Pāndava cause). Indeed, Bhimasena of mighty strength addressing Dhrishtadyumna, said,—It is known to thee, O thou of mighty arms, how the mighty car-warrior Drona is always on the alert to seize king Yudhishthira the just by all means in his power! Indeed, O son of Prishata, I should never place my going (to Arjuna and Sātyaki) above my duty of protecting the king! King Yudhishthira, however, hath commanded me to go. I dare not contradict him ! I shall go thither where the ruler of the Sindhus stayeth at the point of death. in complete trustfullness, act according to the words of king Yudhishthira the just! I shall, therefore, follow in the wake of my brother (Arjuna) and of Sātyaki endued with great intelligence. Thou shouldst, therefore, vigorously resolved on fight, protect Yudhishthira the son of Pritha today 's Of all tasks, this is thy highest duty in battle !- Thus addressed by Vrikodara, O monarch, Dhrishtadyumna replied, -I shall do what thou wishest! Go, O son of Pritha, without any anxiety of the kind! Without slaving Dhrishtadyumna in battle, Drona will never be able to humiliate king Yudhishthira in the fight!-Thus making the royal son of Pandu over to Dhrishtadyumna,11 and saluting his eldest brother, Bhimasena proceeded towards the spot where Phalguna was. Before dismissing him, however, king Yudhishthira the just, O Bharata, embraced Bhimasena12 and smelt his head and pronounced auspicious After circumambulating a number blessings upon him. Brāhmanas previously gratified with worship and presents, 18 and touching the eight kinds of auspicious articles, and quaffing Kairātaka honey, that hero, the corners of whose eyes had become red in intoxication, felt his might to be doubled.14 The Brahmanas performed propitiatory ceremonies for him. Various omens, indicative of success, greeted him. Beholding them, he felt the delight of anticipated victory.15 winds began to blow and indicate his success. Then the mightyarmed Bhimasena, that foremost of car-warriors, clad in mail, decked with ear-rings and Angadas, and his hands cased in leathern fences, mounted on his own excellent car. coat of mail, made of black steel and decked with gold,16-17 looked like a cloud charged with lightning. His body was beautifully covered with yellow and red and black and white robes.18 Wearing a colored curass that protected also his neck, Bhimasena looked resplendent like a cloud decked with a rainbow.

^{*} The last line of 4 and the first line of 5 I render freely .- T.

"'While Bhimasena was on the point of setting out against thy troops from desire of battle, 19 the fierce blasts of Pānchajanya were once more heard. Hearing those loud and terrible blasts capable of filling the three worlds with fear,20 the son of Dharma once more addressed Bhimasena, saving,—There, the Vrishni hero is fiercely blowing his conch!21 Indeed, that prince of conchs is filling the Earth and the welkin with its Without doubt, Savyasāchin having fallen into great distress,22 the bearer of the discus and the mace is battling with all the Kurus! Without doubt, the venerable Kunti, and Draupadi, and Subhadra, are all, with their relatives and friends, beholding today exceedingly inauspicious omens! Therefore, O Bhima, go thither with speed where Dhananjaya is 128-24

All the points of the compass, O Partha, seem empty eyes in consequence of my (unsatisfied) desire to see jaya and owing also to Satwata !35—Repeatedly urged by his superior to go, the valiant son of Pandu, viz., Bhimasena, O king, so casing his hands in leathern fence, took up his bow. Urged by his eldest brother, that brother (viz., Bhimasena,) who was devoted to his brother's good,27 cause d drums to be And Bhima forcibly blew his conch also and uttering leonine roars, began to twang his bow.28 Damping the hearts of hostile heroes by those leonine roars, and assuming a dreadful form, he rushed against his foes.29 Swift and well-broken steeds of the foremost breed, neighing furiously, bore him. Endued with the speed of the wind or thought, their reins were held by Viçoka.30 Then the son of Pritha, drawing the bowstring with great force, began to crush the head of the hostile array, mangling and piercing and grinding the combatants And as that mighty-armed hero proceeded, the brave Pānchālas and the Somakas followed him behind, like the celestials following Maghavat.32 Then the brothers Duscala and Chitrasena and Kundabhedin and Vivingçati, and Durmukha and Dussaha and Cala, and Vinda and Anuvinda and Sumukha and Dirghavāhu and Sudarçana, and Vrindāraka and Suhasta and Sushena and Dirghalochana, and Abhaya and Raudrakarman and Suvarman and Durvimochana, approaching, encompassed Bhimasena. 23-35 Those foremost of car-warriors, those heroes, all looking resplendent, with their troops and followers, firmly resolved upon battle, rushed against Bhimasena.36 heroic and mighty car-warrior, viz., Kunti's son Bhimasena of great prowess, thus encompassed, cast his eyes on them, so and rushed against them with the impetuosity of a lion against Those heroes, displaying celestial and mighty smaller animals. weapons, 38 covered Bhima with shafts like clouds shrouding the risen Sun. Transgressing all those warriors with impetuosity, Bhimasena rushed against Drona's division, so and covered the elephant force before him with showers of arrows.

^{*} Arujan is mangling, Virujan is piercing; and Vikarshan is crushing or grinding, as explained by Nilakantha.—T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:51 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89033511112 Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-googl

the Wind-god, manglingwith his shafts in almost no time that elephant division, dispersed it in all directions. Indeed, like animals terrified in the forest at the roar of a Carabha,40-41 those elephants all fled away, uttering frightful cries. over that ground with great speed, he then approached the division of Drona.42 Then the preceptor checked his course like the continent resisiting the surging sea. Smilingly he struck the son of Pandu in his forehead with a shaft.43 the son of Pandu looked resplendent like the Sun with upward The preceptor thought that Bhima would reverence him as Phālguna had done before. Addressing Vrikodara, therefore, he said,—O Bhimasena, it is beyond thy power to enter into the hostile host, 44-45 without vanquishing me, thy foe, in battle, Although Krishna with thy thou of mighty strength! younger brother hath penetrated this host with my permission, thyself, however, wilt never succeed in so doing !- Hearing these words of the preceptor, the dauntless Bhima,46-47 excited with wrath, and his eyes red as blood or burnished copper, quickly replied unto Drona, saying,—O wretch of a Brahmana, it cannot be that Arjuna hath entered this host with thy per-He is invincible! He would penetrate into the host commanded by Cakra himself! If he offered thee reverential worship, it was only for honoring thee !48-49 But know, O Drona, that myself am no compassionate Arjuna. On the other hand, I am Bhimasena, thy foe! We regard thee as our father, preceptor, and friend! Ourselves we look upon as thy sons! Thinking so we always humble ourselves to thee! however, thou usest such words towards us today, it seems that all that is altered !51 If thou regardest thyself as our foe, let it be as thou thinkest! Being none else than Bhima, I will presently act towards thee as I should towards a foe !52—Saying this, Bhima, whirling a mace like the Destroyer himself whirling his fatal rod, hurled it, O king, at Drona. Drona, however, had quickly jumped down from his car,58 (and that proved his safety). For that mace pressed down into the Earth the car of Drona, with its steeds, driver, and standard. Then Bhima crushed numerous warriors like the tempest crushing trees with its force.54 Then those sons of thine once more encompassed that foremost of car-warriors. Meanwhile Drona, that foremost of smiters, mounting another chariot,56 proceeded to the gate of the array and stayed there for battle. Then, O king, the angry Bhima of great prowess,55 covered the car-division in his front with showers of shafts. Then those mighty carwarriors, viz., thy sons, thus struck in battle,57 endued as they were with great strength, fought with Bhima from desire of Dusçāsana, excited with wrath, hurled at Bhimasena a keen dart made entirely of iron, wishing to slay Bhima, however, cut in twain that fierce the son of Pandu. dart hurled by thy son, as it coursed towards him. seemed exceedingly wonderful. The mighty son of Pandu then, with three other keen shafts, slew the three brothers Kundabhedin and Sushena and Dirghanetra. And again amongst those heroic sons of thine battling with him, Bhima slew the heroic Vrindaraka, that enhancer of the fame of the Kurus. again, with three other shafts, Bhima slew three other sons of thine, viz., Abhaya and Raudrakarman and Durvimochana. Thus slaughtered, O king, by that mighty warrior, thy sons 58-68 surrounded Bhima, that foremost of smiters, on all sides. They then showered their arrows upon that son of Pandu, of terrible deeds,64 like the clouds at the end of summer pouring That slaver of hosts. torrents of rain on the mountain-breast. viz., the heir of Pandu, received that arrowy shower like a mountain receiving a shower of stones. Indeed, the heroic Bhima felt no pain. Then the son of Kunti, smiling the while. despatched by means of his shafts thy sons Vinda and Anuvinda and Suvarman to the abode of Yama. Then the son of Pandu, O bull of Bharata's race, quickly pierced in that battle thy heroic son Sudarçana. The latter thereupon fell down and Within a very short time, the son of Pandu, casting his glances on that car-force, caused it by his shafts to fly away in all directions. Then like a herd of deer frightened at the clatter of car-wheels or a loud shout,65-69 thy sons, in that battle, O king, afflicted with the fear of Bhimasena, suddenly broke and fled.70 The son of Kunti, however, pursued that large force of thy sons, and began, O king, to pierce the Kauravas from every side.71 Thy soldiers, O monarch, thus Generated on 2022-02-03 12:51 GMT / https://hdl.f Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hatf slaughtered by Bhimasena, fled away from battle, avoiding the son of Pāndu and urging their own excellent steeds to their greatest speed. The mighty Bhimasena then, having vanquished them in battle, uttered leonine roars and made a great noise by slapping his armpits. And the mighty Bhima, having made also a fierce noise with his palms and thereby frightened that car-force, and having slain the formost of warriors that were in it, passed towards the division of Drona, transgressing that car-force (which he had vanquished)."

SECTION CXXVIII.

"Sanjaya said,—'After the son of Pandu had crossed that car-force, the preceptor Drona, smiling the while, covered him with showers of arrows, desirous of checking his course.1 Stupifying thy force then with his powers of illusion, and drinking, as it were, those shafts shot from the bow of Drona, Bhimasena rushed against those brothers, (viz., thy sons).2 Then many kings, that were all great bowmen, urged by thy sons, rushing impetuously, began to surround him.8 Encompassed by them, O Bharata, Bhima, smiling the while and uttering a leonine roar, took up and hurled at them with great force a fierce mace destructive of hostile ranks. That mace of adamantine strength, hurled like Indra's thunder by Indra himself,4-5 crushed, O king, thy soldiers in battle. And it seemed to fill, O king, the whole Earth with a loud noise. And blazing forth in splendour, that fierce mace inspired thy sons with fear. Beholding that mace of impetuous course and endued with lightning flashes coursing towards them,7 thy warriors fled away, uttering frightful cries. And at the unbearable sound, O sire, of that fierce mace, many men fell down where they stood, and many car-warriors also fell down from their cars. Slaughtered by Bhimasena armed with the mace, thy warriors fled away in fear from battle, like deer attacked by a tiger. The son of Kunti, routing in battle those valorous foes of his,10 impetuously crossed that force like Garuda of beautiful feathers.

"While Bhimasena, that leader of leaders of car-divisions, was employed in such carnage, Bharadwaja's son, O king, rushed And Drona, checking Bhima by means of his arrowy showers,11-12 suddenly uttered a leonine roar that inspired the Pāndavas with fear. The battle that took place between Drona and the high-souled Bhima was, O king, furious and terribe and resembled the encounter between the gods and the Asuras of Heroic warriors by hundreds and thousands were in that battle begun to be slain by the keen shafts shot from the bow of Drona. The son of Pandu then, jumping down from his car, shut his eyes, O king, and rushed on foot with great speed Indeed, as a bovine bull easily bears towards the car of Drona. a heavy shower of rain,18-16 even so that tiger among men, viz., Bhima, bore that arrowy downpour from Drona's bow. Struck in that battle, O sire, by Drona, the mighty Bhima, seizing Drona's car by the shaft, threw it down with great force. Thus thrown down in battle, O king, Drona, however, quickly mounting another car, proceeded towards the gate of the array, his driver urging his steeds at that time with great speed."-13 That feat, O thou of Kuru's race, achieved by Bhimasena, exceedingly wonderful. The mighty Bhima then, mounting upon his own car,20 rushed impetuously towards the army of thy son. And he crushed the Kshatriyas in that battle like a tempest crushing rows of trees.21 Indeed, Bhima proceeded, resisting the hostile warriors like the mountain resisting the surging sea. Coming then upon the Bhoja troops that were protected by the son of Hridikā. Bhimasena, O king, grinded it greatly, and passed through it. Frightening the hostile soldiers with the sound of his palms, O sire,23 Bhima vanquished them all like a tiger vanquishing a herd of bovine bulls. Passing through the Bhoja division and that of the Kamvojas also,24 and the countless tribes of Mlechas too, who were all accomplished in fight, and beholding that mighty car-warrior, viz., Sātyaķi, engaged in fight,36 Bhimasena the son of Kunti, O monarch, proceeded resolutely and with great speed, desirous of having a sight of Dhananjaya.26 Transgressing all thy warriors in that battle, the son of Pandu then sighted the mighty car-warrior Arjuna engaged in the fight. 27

Bhima, that tiger among men, beholding Arjuna putting forth his prowess for the slaughter of the ruler of the Sindhus, uttered a loud shout,23 like, O monarch, the clouds roaring in the season of rains, Those terrible shouts of the roaring Bhimasena were, O thou of Kuru's race, heard by both Arjuna and Vasudeva in the midst of that battle! Both those heroes, simultaneously hearing that shout of the mighty Bhima, 29-30 repeatedly shouted themselves from desire of beholding Vrikodara. Arjuna uttering a loud roar, and Madhava also doing the same,31 careered in battle like a couple of roaring bulls. Hearing then that roar of Bhimasena, as also that of Phalguna armed with the bow,32 Yudhishthira the son of Dharma, O king, became highly gratified. And king Yudhishthira, hearing those sounds of Bhima and Arjuna, had his grief dispelled. 88 And the lord Yudhishthira repeatedly wished success to Dhananjaya in battle.

"'While the fierce Bhima was thus roaring, st the mightyarmed Yudhishthira the son of Dharma, that foremost of virtuous men, smilingly reflected awhile and thus worded the thoughts that inspired his heart:35-O Bhima, thou hast truly sent me the message! Thou hast truly obeyed the commands of thy superior! They, O son of Pandu, can never have victory that have thee for their foe !ss By good luck it is that Dhananjaya, capable of shooting the bow with (even) his left hand, By good luck the heroic Sātyaki also, of prowess still liveth! incapable of being baffled, is safe and sound!37 By good luck it is that I hear both Vasudeva and Dhananjaya uttering these roars! He who, having vanquished Cakra himself in battle, had gratified the bearer of sacrificial libations,38 that slayer of foes, viz., Phalguna, by good luck still liveth in this battle! He, relying upon the might of whose arms all of us are alive, 39 that slayer of hostile armies, viz., Phalguna, by good luck, liveth still! He by whom with the aid of a single bow the Nivatakavachas were vanquished. those Danavas, that is, that were incapable of being defeated by the very gods, he, viz., Partha, by good luck, liveth still! He who had vanquished in Matsya's city all the Kauravas assembled together for seizing Virāta's kine, that Pārtha, by good luck, liveth still! He who, by the might of his arms, slew fourteen thousands of Kālakeyas, that Pārtha, by good luck, liveth still! He who, for Duryodhana's sake, had vanquished, by the energy of his weapons, the mighty king of the Gandharvas, that Partha, by good luck, liveth still! Decked with diadem and garlands (of gold), endued with great strength, having white steeds (yoked to his car) and Krishna himself for his charioteer, 40-44 that Phalguna, always dear to me, by good luck, liveth still! Burning with grief on account of the death of his son, endeavouring to achieve a most difficult feat,45 and even now seeking to slaughter Jayadratha, alas, he that hath made that vow, viz., Dhananjaya, will he succeed in slaying the ruler of the Sindhus in battle ?46 After he, protected by Vāsudeva, will have accomplished that vow of his, shall I behold that Arjuna again, before the sun sets?47 Shall the ruler of the Sindhus who is devoted to Duryodhana's welfare, slain by Phālguna, gladden his foes?48 Shall king Duryodhana, beholding the ruler of the Sindhus slain in battle, make peace with us?49 Beholding his brothers slain in battle by Bhimasena, shall the wicked Duryodhana make peace with us?50 Beholding other great warriors lying prostrate on the surface of the Earth, shall the wicked Duryodhana give way to Shall not our hostilities cease with the single sacrifice of Bhishma? Shall that Suyodhana make peace with us for saving the remnant (of what is still left to him and us)?52 -Diverse reflections of this kind passed through the mind of king Yudhishthira who was overwhelmed with compassion. Meanwhile, the battle (between the Pandavas and the Kauravas) raged furiously." "58

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:52 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

SECTION CXXIX.

"Dhritarāshtra said,—'While the mighty Bhimasena was uttering those loud shouts deep as the roar of the clouds or peals of thunder, what heroes (of our side) surrounded him? I do not behold that warrior, O Sanjaya, in the three worlds, who is capable of staying before the enraged Bhimasena in battle! I do not, O son, behold him that would stay on the field of battle before Bhimasena armed with mace and resembling Death himself! Who will stand before that Bhima, not excepting Cakra himself, that destroys a car with a car, and an elephant with an elephant?4* Who, amongst those devoted to Duryodhana's welfare, stood in battle before Bhimasena excited with rage and engaged in slaughtering my sons? Who were those men that stood in batttle in front of Bhimasena engaged in consuming my sons like a forest conflagration consuming dry leaves and straw? Who were they that surrounded Bhima in battle, beholding my sons slain by him one after another like Death himself cutting off all creatures? not fear Arjuna so much, or Krishna so much, or Sātyaki so much, or him (viz., Dhrishtadyumna) so much who was born of the sacrificial fire, as I fear Bhima! Tell me, O Sanjaya, who were those heroes that rushed against that blazing fire, represented by Bhima, which so consumed my sons?"

"Sanjaya said,-'While the mighty car-warrior Bhimasena was uttering those roars, the mighty Karna, unable to bear them, rushed at him with a loud shout, stretching his bow with great force. Indeed, the mighty Karna, desirous of battle, displayed his strength, 10-11 and checked Bhima's course like a tall tree withstanding the tempest. The heroic Bhima also, beholding Vikartana's son before him, suddenly blazed up in wrath and sped at him with great force many shafts whetted on stone. Karna received all those shafts and sped many in return. 12-13 At that encounter between Bhima and Karna, hearing the sounds of their palms, the limbs of all the struggling combatants, car-warriors, and horsemen, began to tremble. hearing the terrible roars of Bhimasena on the field of battle,14-15 even all the foremost of Kshatriyas regarded the whole Earth and the welkin to be filled by that noise. And at the fierce peats uttered by the high-souled son of Pandu,16 the bows of all warriors in that battle dropped on the Earth. And steeds and elephants, O king, dispirited, ejected urine and excreta. ous frightful omens of evil then made their appearance.17-13 The

^{*} I. c., using cars and elephants as weapons for destroying cars and elephants.—T.

http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google Generated on 2022-02-03 12:52 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized welkin was covered with flights of vultures and Kankas during that terrific encounter between Bhima and Karna.19 Then Karna struck Bhima with twenty arrows, and quickly pierced the latter's charioteer also with five.20 Smiling, the mighty and active Bhima then, in that battle, quickly sped at Karna four and sixty arrows.21 Then Karna, O king, sped four shafts Bhima, by means of his straight shafts, cut them into many fragments, O king, displaying his lightness of hand. Then Karna covered him with dense showers of arrows. 53-28 Thus covered by Karna, the mighty son of Pandu, however, cut off Karna's bow at the handle, and then pierced Karna with ten straight arrows. The Suta's son then, that mighty car-warrior of terrible deeds, taking up another bow and stringing it quickly, pierced Bhima in that battle (with many shafts). Then Bhima, excited with rage struck the Suta's son with great force in the chest with three straight shafts. With those arrows sticking at his breast, Karna looked beautiful,24-27 O bull of Bharata's race, like a mountain with three tall summits. Thus pierced with mighty shafts, blood began to flow from his wounds38 like torrents of liquid red chalk adown the breast of a mountain. Afflicted with those shafts shot with great force, Karna became agitated a little.29 Fixing an arrow then on his bow, he pierced Bhima again, O sire! And once more he began to shoot arrows by hundreds and thousands.30 Suddenly shrouded with shafts by that firm bowman, viz., Karna, the son of Pāndu, smiling the while, cut off Karna's bowstring.31 And then, with a broad-headed arrow, he despatched Karna's charioteer to the abode of Yama. And that mighty car-warrior, viz., Bhima, deprived the four steeds also of Karna of their lives. 53 The mighty car-warrior Karna then, speedily jumping down, 0 king, from his steedless car, mounted the car of Vrishasena.38 The valiant Bhimasena then, having vanquished Karna in battle, uttered a loud shout deep as the roar of the clouds.34 that roar, O Bharata, Yudhishthira became highly gratified, knowing that Karna had been vanquished by Bhimasena. 35 And the combatants of the Pandava army blew their conchs from every side. Their enemies, viz., thy warriors, hearing that noise, roared loudly. 46 Arjuna stretched Gandiva, and Krishna blew Pānchajanya. Drowning, however, all those sounds, the noise made by the roaring Bhima, ⁸⁷ was, O king, heard by all the combatants, O sire! Then those two warriors, viz., Karna and Bhima, each struck the other with straight shafts. The son of Rādhā, however, shot his shafts mildly, but the son of Pāndu shot his with great force." ⁸⁸

SECTION CXXX.

"Sanjaya said,—'After that army had (thus) been routed, and Arjuna and Satwata and Bhimasena had all gone after the ruler of the Sindhus, thy son (Duryodhana) proceeded towards Drona.1 And Duryodhana went to the preceptor, on his single car, thinking, by the way, of diverse duties. of thy son, endued with the speed of the wind or thought, proceeded with great celerity towards Drona. With eyes red in wrath, thy son addressed the preceptor and said,2-3-O grinder of foes, Arjuna and Bhimasena, and the unvanquished Sātyaki, and many mighty car-warriors, defeating all our troops, have succeeded in approaching the ruler of the Sindhus! those mighty car-warriors, having vanquished all the troops, themselves unvanquished, are fighting even there! O giver of honors, how hast thou been trangressed by both Sātyaki and Bhima?4-6 O foremost of Brāhmanas, this thy defeat at the hands of Sātwata, of Arjuna, and of Bhimasena, is, like the drying of the ocean, exceedingly wonderful in this world! People are loudly asking,-[How, indeed, could Drona, that master of the science of arms, be vanquished?]7-8 Even thus are all the warriors speaking in depreciation of thee! tion is certain for my luckless self in battle," when three carwarriors, O tiger among men, have in succession transgressed When, however, all this hath happened, tell us what thou hast to say on the business that awaits us!10 What hath happened, is past! O giver of honors, think now of what remains! Say quickly what should next be done for the ruler of the Sindhus on the present occasion, and let what thou sayest be quickly and properly carried out!"-

"'Drona said,-Listen, O great king, to what I, having reflected much, say unto thee about what should now be done! As yet only three great car-warriors among the Pandavas have transgressed us.12 We have as much fear behind those three as we have before them.* There, however, where Krishna and Dhananjaya are, our fears must be greater.13 The Bharata army hath been attacked both before and behind. In this pass I think that the protection of the ruler of the Sindhus is what I think our first duty.14 Jayadratha, afraid of Dhananjaya, deserves of all to be protected by us! The heroic Yuyudhana and Vrikodara have both gone against the ruler of the Sin-All this that hath come is the fruit of that match at dice conceived by Cakuni's intellect. Neither victory nor defeat took place in the (gaming) assembly.16 Now that we are engaged in this sport, there will be victory or defeat! Those innocent things with which Cakuni had formerly played in the Kuru assembly 17 and which he regarded as dice, were in reality invincible shafts. Truly, there where, O sire, the Kauravas were congregated, they were not dice, but terrible arrows capable of mangling your bodies! At present, however, O king, know these combatants for players, these shafts for dice. 18-19 and the ruler of the Sindhus, without doubt, O monarch, for the stake, in this game of battle! Indeed, Jayadratha is the great stake about which we are playing today with the enemy!20 Under the circumstances, therefore, O monarch, all of us, becoming reckless of our very lives, should make due arrangements for the protection of the ruler of the Sindhus in battle !21 Engaged as we are in our present sport, it is here that we will have victory or defeat, here, that is, where those great bowmen are protecting the ruler of the Sindhus!22 Go thither, therefore, with speed, and protect those protectors (of Jayadratha)! As regards myself, I will stay here, for despatching others (to the presence of Jayadratha)23 and checking the Panchalas, the Pandus, and the Srinjayas united together !- Thus commanded

^{*} The fear behind them was from the Pandava army. The fear before them was from the car warriors who had succeeded in penetrating the Kuru host.—T

by the preceptor, Duryodhana quickly proceeded (to the place indicated) with his followers, resolutely setting his self to (the accomplishment of) a fierce task. The two protectors of the wheels of Arjuna's car, viz., the Panchala princes Yudhamanyu and Uttamaujas,24-25 were at that time proceeding towards Savyasāchin by the skirts of the Kuru array. Thou mayst remember, O king, that formerly while Arjuna penetrated thy host from desire of battle, those two princes, O monarch, had been checked in their progress by Kritavarman. the Kuru king beheld them proceeding by the skirts of his The mighty Duryodhana of Bharata's race lost no time in engaging in a fierce battle with those two brothers thus rushing furiously.28 Those two foremost of Kshatriyas, reputed as mighty car-warriors, then rushed, in that battle, at Duryodhana, with outstretched bows.29 Yudhāmanyu pierced Duryodhana with twenty, and his four steeds with four shafts. 30 Daryodhana, however, with a single shaft, cut off Yudhamanyu's standard. And thy son then cut off the former's bow also with another shaft.⁸¹ And then with a broad-headed arrow the Kuru king felled Yudhāmanyu's charioteer from his niche in the car. And then he pierced the four steeds of the latter with four shafts. 32 Then Yudhamanyu, excited with wrath, quickly sped, in that battle, thirty shafts at the centre of thy son's chest.35 Then Uttamaujas also, excited with wrath, pierced Duryodhana's charioteer with shafts decked with gold, and despatched him to Yama's abode. 34 Duryodhana also, O monarch, then slew the four steeds as also the two Parshni charioteers of Uttamaujas the prince of the Panchalas. Then Uttamaujas, in that battle, becoming steedless and driverless, quickly ascended the car of his brother Yudhāmanyu. So Ascending on the car of his brother, he struck Duryodhana's steeds with many Slain therewith, those steeds fell down on the Earth. 87 Upon the fall of his steeds, the valiant Yudhamanyu then, by a mighty weapon, quickly cut off Duryodhana's bow, and then (with another shaft) his leathern fence.  That bull among men then, viz., thy son, jumping down from that steedless and driverless car, took up a mace and proceeded against the two princes of Pauchala. 39 Beholding that subjugator of hostile

"'Drona said,-Listen, O great king, to what I, having reflected much, say unto thee about what should now be done! As yet only three great car-warriors among the Pandavas have transgressed us.12 We have as much fear behind those three as we have before them.* There, however, where Krishna and Dhananjaya are, our fears must be greater.18 The Bharata army hath been attacked both before and behind. In this pass I think that the protection of the ruler of the Sindhus is what I think our first duty.14 Jayadratha, afraid of Dhananjaya, deserves of all to be protected by us! The heroic Yuyudhana and Vrikodara have both gone against the ruler of the Sin-All this that hath come is the fruit of that match at dice conceived by Cakuni's intellect. Neither victory nor defeat took place in the (gaming) assembly.16 Now that we are engaged in this sport, there will be victory or defeat! Those innocent things with which Cakuni had formerly played in the Kuru assembly 17 and which he regarded as dice, were in reality invincible shafts. Truly, there where, O sire, the Kauravas were congregated, they were not dice, but terrible arrows capable of mangling your bodies! At present, however, O king, know these combatants for players, these shafts for dice,18-19 and the ruler of the Sindhus, without doubt, O monarch, for the stake, in this game of battle! Indeed, Jayadratha is the great stake about which we are playing today with the enemy!20 Under the circumstances, therefore, O monarch, all of us, becoming reckless of our very lives, should make due arrangements for the protection of the ruler of the Sindhus in battle!21 Engaged as we are in our present sport, it is here that we will have victory or defeat, here, that is, where those great bowmen are protecting the ruler of the Sindhus!22 Go thither, therefore, with speed, and protect those protectors (of Jayadratha)! As regards myself, I will stay here, for despatching others (to the presence of Jayadratha)23 and checking the Panchalas, the Pandus, and the Srinjayas united together !- Thus commanded

^{*} The fear behind them was from the Pandava army. them was from the car warriors who had succeeded in penetrating the Kuru host .- T

by the preceptor, Duryodhana quickly proceeded (to the place indicated) with his followers, resolutely setting his self to (the accomplishment of) a fierce task. The two protectors of the wheels of Arjuna's car, viz., the Panchala princes Yudhamanyu and Uttamaujas,24-25 were at that time proceeding towards Savyasāchin by the skirts of the Kuru array. remember, O king, that formerly while Arjuna penetrated thy host from desire of battle, those two princes, O monarch, had been checked in their progress by Kritavarman. the Kuru king beheld them proceeding by the skirts of his The mighty Duryodhana of Bharata's race lost no time in engaging in a fierce battle with those two brothers thus rushing furiously.28 Those two foremost of Kshatriyas, reputed as mighty car-warriors, then rushed, in that battle, at Duryodhana, with outstretched bows.29 Yudhāmanyu pierced Duryodhana with twenty, and his four steeds with four shafts. 30 Duryodhana, however, with a single shaft, cut off Yudha-And thy son then cut off the former's bow manyu's standard. also with another shaft.81 And then with a broad-headed arrow the Kuru king felled Yudhāmanyu's charioteer from his niche in the car. And then he pierced the four steeds of the latter with four shafts. 32 Then Yudhamanyu, excited with wrath, quickly sped, in that battle, thirty shafts at the centre of thy son's chest. 33 Then Uttamaujas also, excited with wrath, pierced Duryodhana's charioteer with shafts decked with gold, and despatched him to Yama's abode. Buryodhana also, O monarch. then slew the four steeds as also the two Pārshni charioteers of Uttamaujas the prince of the Panchalas. Then Uttamaujas, in that battle, becoming steedless and driverless, quickly ascended the car of his brother Yudhāmanyu. 86 Ascending on the car of his brother, he struck Duryodhana's steeds with many Slain therewith, those steeds fell down on the Earth. 57 Upon the fall of his steeds, the valiant Yudhamanyu then, by a mighty weapon, quickly cut off Duryodhana's bow, and then (with another shaft) his leathern fence. 18 That bull among men then, viz., thy son, jumping down from that steedless and driverless car, took up a mace and proceeded against the two princes of Panchala. 99 Beholding that subjugator of hostile towns thus advancing in wrath, both Yudhāmanyu and Uttamaujas jumped down from the terrace of their car.⁴⁰ Then Duryodhana, armed as he was with a mace, pressed down into the Earth with that mace that foremost of cars decked with gold, with steeds and driver and standard.⁴¹ Thy son then, that scorcher of foes, having thus crushed that car, steedless and driverless as he himself was, quickly ascended the car of the king of the Madras.⁴² Meanwhile those two mighty carwarriors, viz., those two foremost of Pānchāla princes, ascending on two other cars, proceeded towards Arjuna.' "42"

SECTION CXXXI.

"Sanjaya said,—'During the progress, O monarch, of that battle making the hair to stand on end, and when all the combatants were filled with anxiety and greatly afflicted, the son of Rādhā, O bull of Bharata's race, proceeded against Bhima for battle, like an infuriate elephant in the forest proceeding against another infuriate elephant."

"Dhritarashtra said,—'How raged that battle, in the neighbourhood of Arjuna's car, between those two mighty car-warriors, viz., Bhima and Karna, both of whom are endued with great strength? Once before, Karna had been vanquished by Bhimasena in battle. How, therefore, could the mighty car-Karna again proceed against Bhima? How also could Bhima proceed against the Suta's son, that mighty warrior who is reckoned the greatest of car-warriors on Earth? Yudhishthira the son of Dharma, having prevailed over Bhishma and Drona, did not fear anybody else so much as the bowman Karna! Indeed, thinking of the mighty car-warrior Karna, he passeth his nights sleeplessly from fear! How, then, could Bhima encounter that Suta's son in battle? O Sanjaya, how could Bhima fight with Karna, that foremost of warriors, that hero devoted to the Brahmanas, endued with energy, and never retreating from battle? How, indeed, did those two heroes, viz., the Suta's son and Vrikodara, fight with each other in that encounter which took place in the vicinity of Informed before of his brotherhood (with the Arjuna's car?

Pandavas), the Suta's son is, again, compassionate. Remembering also his words to Kunti, how could he fight with Bhima?10 As regards Bhima also, remembering all the wrongs formerly inflicted on him by the Suta's son, how did that hero fight with Karna in battle?11 My son Duryodhana, O Suta, hopeth that Karna will vanquish all the Pandavas in battle?12 He upon whom my wretched son resteth his hope of victory in battle, how did he fight with Bhimasena of terrible deeds?18 That Suta's son, relying upon whom my sons chose hostilities with those mighty car-warriors (viz., the sons of Pandu), how did Bhima fight with him?14 Indeed, remembering the diverse wrongs and injuries done by him, how did Bhima fight with that son of a Suta?15 How, indeed, could Bhima fight with that son of a Suta, who, endued with great valour, had formerly subjugated the whole Earth on a single car?16 Bhima fight with that son of a Suta, who was born with a (natural) pair of ear-rings?17 Thou art skilled in narration, O Sanjaya! Tell me, therefore, in detail how the battle took place between those two, and who amongst them obtained the victory ?'18

"Sanjaya said,—'Leaving Rādhā's son, that foremost of carwarriors, Bhimasena, desired to proceed to the place where those two heroes, viz., Krishna and Dhananjaya, were.19 The son of Rādhā, however, rushing towards him as he proceeded, covered him, O king, with dense showers of arrows like a cloud pouring torrents of rain on a mountain. The mighty son of Adhiratha, his face beautiful as a full-blown lotus lighted up with a smile, challenged Bhimasena to battle, as the latter was pro-And Karna said,—O Bhima, I dreamt not that thou knowest how to fight! Why then dost thou show me thy back from desire of meeting with Arjuna? O delighter of the Pandavas, this is scarcely fit for a son of Kunti! Staying, therefore, where thou art, cover me with thy arrows !29-Bhimasena, hearing that challenge of Karna, brooked it not, but wheeling his car a little, began to fight with the Suta's son.24 illustrious Bhimasena showered clouds of straight shafts. siring also to arrive at the end of those hostilities by slaying Karna, Bhima began to weaken that hero conversant with every weapon and clad in mail and staying before him for engaging in a single combat. The mighty Bhima, that scorcher of foes, that wrathful son of Pandu, having slain numerous Kauravas, shot diverse showers of fierce shafts at Karna, O The Suta's son, endued with great strength. swallowed up, by means of the power of his own weapons, all those showers of arrows shot by that hero possessed of the tread of an infuriate elephant.28 Duly favoured by knowledge, that great bowman, viz., Karna, began in that battle, O monarch, to career like a preceptor (of military science).23 The wrathful son of Rādhā, smiling the while, seemed to mock Bhimasena as the latter was battling in great wrath.30 The son of Kunti brooked not that smile of Karna in the midst of many brave warriors witnessing from all sides that fight of theirs. 31 Like a guide striking a huge elephant with a hook, the mighty Bhima, excited with rage, pierced Karna whom he had obtained within reach, with many calf-toothed shafts in the centre of the chest. 52 And once more Bhimasena pierced the Suta's son of variegated armour with three and seventy well-shot and keen arrows equipt with beautiful wings.83 Then the heroic Karna pierced Bhima's steeds, fleet as the wind and cased in golden armour, each with five shafts. 4 And soon, within the twinkling of the eye, was seen a network of shafts about Bhima's car caused by Karna. 85 Indeed, O monarch, those shafts shot from Karna's bow completely shrouded that car with its standard and driver and the Pandava himself.36 Then Karna pierced the impenetrable armour of Bhima with four and sixty arrows. And excited with rage he then pierced Partha himself with many straight shafts capable of penetrating into the very vitals.87 The mighty-armed Vrikodara, however, disregarding whose shafts shot from Karna's bow, fearlessly struck the Suta's son. 88 Pierced with those shafts, resembling snakes of virulent poison, shot from Karna's bow, Bhima, O monarch, felt no pain in that battle. 39 The valiant Bhima then, in that encounter, pierced Karna with two and thirty broad-headed shafts of keen points and fierce Karna, however, with the greatest indifference, energy.40 covered, in return, with his arrows, the mighty-armed Bhimasena who was desirous of Jayadratha's slaughter.41 Indeed, the son of Radha, in that encounter, fought mildly with Bhima, while Bhima, remembering his former wrongs, fought with him The wrathful Bhimasena could not brook that disregard by Karna. Indeed, that slayer of foes quickly shot showers of arrows at Rādhā's son.48 Those arrows, sped in that encounter by Bhimasena, fell on every limb of Karna like cooing birds.44 Indeed, those arrows equipt with golden wings and keen points, shot from Bhimasena's bow, covered the son of Rādhā like a flight of insects covering a blazing fire.45 Karna, however, O king, that foremost of car-warriors, thus covered all over with those arrows, shot showers of fierce shafts in return, O Bharata.46 Then Vrikodara cut off, with many broad-headed arrows, those shafts, resembling thunder-bolts, shot by that ornament of battle, before they could come at him.47 That chastiser of foes, viz., Karna the son of Vikartana, once more, O Bharata, covered Bhimasena with his arrowy showers.48 We then, O Bhārata, beheld Bhima so pierced in that encounter with arrows as to resemble a porcupine with its quills erect on its body.49 Like the Sun holding his own rays, the heroic Bhima held in that battle all those shafts, whetted on stone and equipt with wings of gold, that were shot from Karna's bow.50 All his limbs bathed in blood, Bhimasena looked resplendent like an Acoka tree in spring decked with its flowery burthen. The mighty-armed Bhima could not brook that conduct, in battle, of the mighty-Rolling his eyes in wrath,52 he pierced Karna with five and twenty long shafts. Thereupon Karna looked like a white mountain with many snakes of virulent poison (hanging from its sides).58 And once more Bhimasena, endued with the prowess of a celestial, pierced the Suta's son who was prepared to lay down his life in battle, with six and then with eight And, again, with another arrow, the valiant Bhimasena quickly cut off Karna's bow, smiling the while.55 he slew also with his shafts the four steeds of Karna and then his charioteer, and then pierced Karna himself in the chest with a number of long shafts endued with the effulgence of the

Generated on 2022-03-03-12:52 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized ,

^{*} Many of the Bengal texts have Calabhairiva. This is a mistake, the word being Calala, and not Calabha which would be unmeaning here. - T.

Sun. 56 Those winged shafts, piercing through Karna's body, entered the Earth, like the rays of the Sun piercing through Afflicted with arrows and his bow cut off, Karna, though proud of his manliness, felt great pain and proceeded to another car.' "58

SECTION CXXXII.

'Dhritarashtra said,—'What, indeed, O Sanjaya, did Duryodhana say when he saw that Karna turning away from the field upon whom my sons had reposed all their hopes of victory? How, indeed, did the mighty Bhima, proud of his energy, What also, O son, did Karna do after this, beholding Bhimasena in that battle resemble a blazing fire?'s

"Sanjaya said,-'Mounting upon another car that was duly equipt, Karna once more proceeded against the son of Pandu. with the fury of the ocean tossed by the tempest. Adhiratha's son excited with rage, thy sons, O king, regarded Bhimasena to be already poured as a libation on the (Karna-) fire.4 With furious twang of bowstring and terrible sounds of his palms, the son of Rādhā shot dense showers of shafts towards Bhimasena's car. And once more, O monarch, a terrible encounter took place between the heroic Karna and the highsouled Bhima.6 Both excited with wrath, both endued with mighty-arms, each desirous of slaving the other, those two warriors looked at each other as if resolved to burn each other with their (wrathful) glances. The eyes of both were red in rage, and both breathed fiercely, like a couple of snakes. dued with great heroism, those two chastisers of foes approached and mangled each other.8 Indeed, they fought with each other like two hawks endued with great activity, or like two Carabhas excited with wrath. Then that chastiser of foes, viz., Bhima, recollecting all the woes suffered by him on the occasion of the match at dice, and during his exile in the woods and residence in Virāta's city,10 and bearing in mind the robbing of their kingdom swelling with prosperity and gems by thy sons, and the numerous other wrongs inflicted on the Pandavas by thee and the Suta's son," and remembering also the fact that thou hadst conspired to burn the innocent Kunti with her sons, and calling to his memory the sufferings of Krishna in the midst of the assembly at the hands of those wretches,12 as also the seizure of her tresses by Dusçasana and the harsh speeches uttered, O Bhārata, by Karna,18 to the effect—Take thou another husband, for all thy husbands are dead: the sons of Pritha have sunk into hell and are like sesamum seeds without kernel,14-remembering also those other words, O son of Kuru, that the Kauravas uttered in thy presence, and the fact also that thy sons had been desirous of enjoying Krishnā as slave,15 and those harsh words that Karna spoke to the sons of Pandu when the lattter, attired in deer-skins, were about to be banished to the woods,16 and the brag in which thy wrathful and foolish son, himself in prosperity, indulged, regarding the distressed sons of Pritha as veritable straw, 17 indeed, the virtuous Bhima, that slayer of foes, remembering these and all the woes he had suffered since his childhood, became reckless of his very life.18 Stretching his invincible and formidable bow the back of whose staff was decked with gold, Vrikodara, that tiger of Bharata's race, utterly reckless of his life, rushed against Karna.19 Shooting dense showers of bright arrows whetted on stone, Bhima shrouded the very light of the Sun.20 Adhiratha's son, however, smiling the while, quickly baffled, by means of his own winged arrows whetted on stone, that arrowy downpour of Bhimasena. Endued with great strength and mighty arms, that mighty car-warrior, viz., the son of Adhiratha, then pierced Bhima with nine keen arrows.33 Struck with those arrows like an elephant struck with the hook, Vrikodara fearlessly rushed against the Suta's son.28 however, in wrath, rushed against that bull among the Pandavas who was thus rushing towards him with great impetuosity and force, like an infuriate elephant against an infuriate com-Blowing his conch then whose blast resembled the sound of a hundred trumpets, Karna cheerfully agitated the force that supported Bhima, like the raging sea.25 Beholding that force of his, consisting of elephants and steeds and cars and foot-soldiers, thus agitated by Karna, Bhima, approaching the former, covered him with arrows. Then Karna caused his own steeds of the hue of swans to be mingled with those of Bhimasena of the hue of bears, and shrouded the son of Pandu with his shafts.37 Beholding those steeds of the hue of bears and fleet as the wind, mingled with those of Karna of the hue of swans, cries of oh and alas arose from among the troops of thy sons.28 Those steeds, fleet as the wind, thus mingled together, looked exceedingly beautiful, like white and black clouds, O monarch, mingled together in the firmament.29 Beholding Karna and Vrikodara to be both excited with wrath, the great car-warriors of thy army began to tremble with fear.  field of battle where they fought soon became awful like the domains of Yama. Indeed, O best of Bharatas, it became as frightful to behold as the city of the king of the dead. 51 great car-warriors of thy army, looking upon that scene as if they were spectators of a sport in an arena, beheld not any of the two to gain any advantage over the other in that dreadful They only beheld, O king, that mingling and clash of the mighty weapons of those two warriors, as a result, O monarch, of the evil policy of thyself and thy son! 53 Those two slayers of foes continued to cover each other with Both endued with wonderful prowess, they their keen shafts. filled the welkin with their arrowy downpours.34 Those two mighty car-warriors shooting at each other keen shafts from desire of taking each other's life, became exceedingly beautiful to behold like two clouds pouring torrents of rain.35 Those two chastisers of foes, shooting gold-decked arrows, made the welkin look bright, O king, as if with blazing meteors. 36 equipt with vulturine feathers, shot by those two heroes, looked like rows of excited cranes in the autumn sky 87 Krishna and Dhananjaya, those chastisers foes, engaged in battle with the Suta's son, thought the burthen too great for Bhima to bear. 38 As Karna and Bhima, for baffling each other's shafts, shot these arrows at each other, many elephants and steeds and men, deeply struck therewith, fell down deprived of life. 89 And in consequence of those falling and fallen creatures deprived of life and counting by thousands, a great carnage, O king, took place in the army of thy sons.40 And soon, O bull of Bharata's race, the field of battle became covered with the bodies of men and steeds and elephants deprived of life." "41

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:52 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

SECTION CXXXIII.

"Dhritarāshtra said,—'I regard Bhimasena's prowess to be exceedingly wonderful, inasmuch as he succeded in battling with Karna of singular activity and energy.1 Indeed, O Sanjaya, tell me why that Karna, who is capable of resisting in in battle the very celestials with the Yakshas and Asuras and men, armed with all kinds of weapons, could not vanquish in battle Pandu's son Bhima blazing with resplendence?2-3 O tel! me, how that battle took place between which each staked his very life. I think that in an encounter between two, success is within reach of both as, indeed, both are liable to defeat. 4* O Suta, obtaining Karna in battle, my son Suyodhana always ventures to vanquish the sons of Pritha with Govinda and the Satwatas! Hearing, however, of the repeated defeat in battle of Karna by Bhimasena of terrible deeds, a swoon seems to come upon me! I think the Kauravas to be already slain, in consequence of the evil policy of my son! Karna will never succeed, O Sanjaya, in vanquishing those mighty bowmen, viz., the sons of Pritha! In all the battles that Karna has fought with the sons of Pandu, the latter have invariably defeated him on the field.8 Indeed, O son, the Pandavas are incapable of being vanquished by the very gods with Vasava at their head! Alas, my wicked son Duryodhana knoweth it not! Having robbed Pritha's son, who is like the Lord of the treasures himself, of his wealth, my son of little intelligence seeth not the fall like a searcher of honey (in the mountains).10 Conversant with deceit, he regardeth it to be irrevocably his and always insulteth the Pandavas.11 also, of unrefined soul, overcome with affection for my children, scrupled not to despise the high-souled sons of Pandu that are

^{*} I render the second line of 4 too freely. The sense seems to be that when two persons fight, one cannot say beforehand who will succeed. Both have chances of success as, indeed, both have chances of defeat.—T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:52 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

observant of morality !18 Yudhishthira the son of Pritha, of great foresight, always showed himself desirous of peace. sons, however, regarding him incapable, despised him.13 ing in mind all those woes and all the wrongs (sustained by the Pandavas), the mighty-armed Bhimasena battled with the Suta's son!14 Tell me, therefore, O Sanjaya, how Bhima and Karna, those two foremost of warriors, fought with each other, desirous of taking each other's life !"5

"Sanjaya said,—Hear, O king, how the battle took place between Karna and Bhima which resembled an encounter between two elephants in the forest desirous of slaying each other.16 The son of Vikartana, O king, excited with rage and putting forth his prowess, pierced that chastiser of foes, viz., the angry Bhima of great prowess, with thirty shafts.17 deed, O chief of Bharata's race, Vikartana's son struck Bhima with many arrows of keen points, decked with gold, and endued with great impetuosity.18 Bhima, however, with three sharp shafts cut off the bow of Karna as the latter was engaged in striking him. And with a broad-headed arrow the son of Pandu then felled on the Earth Karna's charioteer from his niche in the car.19 The son of Vikartana, then, desirous of slaying Bhimasena, seized a dart whose shaft was decked with gold and stones of lapis lazuli. Grasping that fierce dart, which resembled a second dart of Death, and uplifting and aiming it, the mighty son of Radha hurled it at Bhimasena with a force sufficient to take away Bhima's life. Hurling that dart like Purandara hurling the thunder-bolt, Rādhā's son32 of great strength uttered a loud roar. Hearing that roar thy sons became filled with Bhima. however, with seven swift arrows, cut off in the welkin that dart endued with the effulgence of the Sun or fire, hurled from the hands of Karna.24 Cutting off that dart resembling a snake just freed from its slough, Bhima, O sire, as if on the look out for taking the life-breaths of the Suta's son, s sped, in great wrath, many shafts in that battle that were equipt with peacock feathers and golden wings, and each of which, whetted on stone, resembled the rod of Yama.16 Karna also of great energy, taking up another formidable bow the back of whose staff was decked with gold, and drawing it with force, shot many shafts.27 The son of Pandu, however, cut off all those arrows with nine straight arrows of his Having cut off, O ruler of men, those mighty shafts shot by Vasushena, Bhima, O monarch, uttered a loud roar like that Roaring at each other like two mighty bulls for the sake of a cow in season,28-30 or like two tigers for the sake of the same piece of meat, they endeavoured to strike each other, each being desirous of finding the other's laches. to they looked at each other with angry eyes like two mighty bulls Then like two huge elephants striking each other in a cowpen. with the points of their tusks, s1 they encountered each other with shafts shot from their bows drawn to the fullest stretch. Scorching each other, O king, with their arrowy showers, they put forth their prowess upon each other, eyeing each other in great wrath. 52 Sometimes laughing at each other and sometimes rebuking each other, and sometimes blowing their conchs, they continued to fight with each other." Then Bhima once more cut off Karna's bow at the handle, O sire, and despatched by means of his shafts the latter's steeds, white as conchs, to the abode of Yama.34 And the son of Pandu also felled his enemy's charioteer from his niche in the car. Then Karna the son of Vikartana, made steedless and driverless, and covered in that battle (with shafts), became plunged into great anxiety. Stupified by Bhima with his arrowy showers, he knew not what Beholding Karna placed in that distressful plight, king Duryodhana, trembling with wrath, commanded (his brother) Durjaya, saying,87-Go, O Durjaya! There the son of Pandu is about to devour the son of Radha! Slay that beardless eunuch soon, and infuse strength into Karna! -Thus addressed, thy son Durjaya, saying unto Duryodhana-So be it,-rushed towards Bhimasena engaged (with Karna) And Durjaya struck Bhima and covered him with arrows.89 with nine shafts, his steeds with eight, his driver with six, his standard with three, and once more Bhima himself with seven. 40 Then Bhimasena, excited with wrath, piercing with his shafts the very vitals of Durjaya and his steeds and driver, despatched them to Yama's abode.41 Then Karna, weeping in grief, ciroumambulated that son of thine, who, decked with ornaments, lay on the Earth, writhing like a snake. Bhima then, having made that deadly foe of his, viz., Karna, carless, smilingly covered him with shafts and made him look like a Çatāghni with numberless spikes on it. The Atiratha Karna, however, that chastiser of foes, though thus pierced with arrows, did not yet avoid the enraged Bhima in that battle."

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:52 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access_use#pd-google

SECTION CXXXIV.

"Sanjaya said,—'The carless Karna, thus once more completely defeated by Bhima, mounted another car and speedily began to pierce the son of Pandu.' Like two huge elephants encountering each other with the points of their tusks, they struck each other with shafts shot from their bows drawn to the fullest stretch. Then Karna, striking Bhimasena with showers of shafts, uttered a loud roar, and once more pierced him in the chest. Bhima, however, in return, pierced Karna with ten straight arrows and once more with twenty straight Then Karna, piercing Bhima, O king, with nine arrows in the centre of the chest, struck the latter's standard with a sharp shaft.5 The son of Pritha then pierced Karns in return with three and sixty arrows, like a guide striking a mighty elephant with the hook or a rider striking a steed with the whip. Deeply pierced, O king, by the illustrious son of Pandu, the heroic Karna began to lick with his tongue the corners of his mouth, and his eyes became red in rage.7 Then, O monarch, Karna sped at Bhimasena, for his destruction, a shaft capable of piercing every body like Indra hurling his thunderbolt. That shaft equipt with beautiful feathers, sped from the bow of the Suta's son, piercing Partha in that battle, sank deep into the Earth.9 Then the mighty-armed Bhima, with eyes red in wrath, hurled without a moment's reflection, at the Suta's son, a heavy six-sided mace, decked with gold, measuring full four cubits in length, and resembling the bolt of Indra in Indeed, like Indra slaying the Asuras with his thunderbolt, that hero of Bharata's race, excited with wrath, slew with that mace the well-trained steeds, of the foremost breed, of Then, O bull of Bharata's race, the mighty-Adhiratha's son.

armed Bhima, with a couple of razor-faced arrows, 10-18 cut off the standard of Karna. And then he slew, with a number of shafts, his enemy's charioteer. Abandoning that steedless and driverless and standardless car,18 Karna, O Bhārata, cheerlessly stood on the Earth, drawing his bow. The prowess that we then beheld of Rādhā's son was extremely wonderful,14 inasmuch as that foremost of car-warriors, though deprived of car, continued to resist his foe. Beholding that foremost of men, viz., the son of Adhiratha, deprived of his car,16 Duryodhana, O monarch, said unto (his brother) Durmukha,—There, O Durmukha, the son of Rādhā hath been deprived of his car by Bhimasena!" Furnish that foremost of men, that mighty car-warrior, with a car !- Hearing these words of Duryodhana, thy son Durmukha, O Bhārata,17 quickly proceeded towards Karna and covered Bhima with his shafts. Beholding Durmukha desirous of supporting the Sutu's son in that battle,18 the son of the Wind-god was filled with delight and began to lick the corners of his mouth. Then resisting Karna the while with his shafts,19 the son of Pandu quickly sped his car towards Durmukha. And in that moment, O king, with nine straight arrows of keen points, Bhima despatched Durmukha Upon Durmukha's slaughter, the son of to Yama's abode. Adhiratha mounted upon the car of that prince, and looked resplendent, O king, like the blazing Sun. Beholding Durmukha lying prostrate on the field, his very vitals pierced (with shafts), and his body bathed in blood, Karna with tearful eyes abstained for a moment from the fight. Circumambulating the fallen prince and leaving him there, 21-28 the heroic Karna began to breathe long and hot breaths and knew not what to do. Seizing that opportunity, O king, Bhimasena sped at the Suta's son four and ten long shafts equipt with vulturine feathers. Those blood-drinking shafts of golden wings, endued with great force, illumining the ten points as they coursed through the welkin, pierced the armour of the Suta's son, and drank his life-blood, O king,24-26 and passing through his body, sank into the Earth and looked resplendent like angry snakes, O monarch, urged on by Death himself,27 with half their bodies inserted within their holes, Then the son of Radha, without reflecting a moment, pierced Bhima in return with four and ten fierce shafts decked with gold. Those fierce winged arrows, piercing through Bhima's right arm,28-28 entered the Earth like Striking against the Earth, birds entering a grove of trees. those arrows looked resplendent, so like the blazing rays of the Sun while proceeding towards the Asta hills. battle with those all-piercing arrows, Bhima began to shed copious streams of blood like a mountain ejecting streams of Then Bhima pierced the Suta's son in return with three shafts endued with the impetuosity of Garuda, and he pierced the latter's charioteer also with seven. Then, O king, Karna thus afflicted with Bhima's might, became exceedingly distressed. 82-28 And that illustrious warrior then fled, forsaking the battle, borne away by his fleet steeds. The Atiratha Bhimasena, however, drawing his bow decked with gold, stayed in battle, looking resplendent like a blazing fire." "84

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:53 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized ,

SECTION CXXXV.

"Dhritarashtra said,—'I think Destiny is supreme. Exertion which is useless, inasmuch as the son of Adhiratha. though fighting resolutely, could not vanquish the son of Pandu !'-Karna boasts of his competence to vanquish in battle all the Parthas with Govinda amongst them. I do not, in the world, see another warrior like Karna! -I often heard Duryodhana speak in this strain. Indeed, O Suta, the wretched Duryodhana used to tell me formerly,—Karna is a mighty hero, a firm bowman, above all fatigue. If I have that Vasushena for my ally, the very gods will not be a match for me, what need be said, therefore, O monarch, of the sons of Pandu that are weak and heartless?-Tell me, therefore, O Sanjaya, what did Duryodhana say beholding that Karna defeated and looking like a snake deprived of its poison and flying away from battle! Alas, deprived of his senses, Duryodhana despatched the unsupported Durmukha, unacquainted though he was with battle, into that fiery encounter like an insect into the blazing fire! O Sanjaya, even Açwatthāman and the ruler of the Madras and Kripa, united together, cannot stay before Bhimasena! Even

Generated on 2022-03-03-12:52 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized

these know the terrible might, equal to that of ten thousand elephants, of Bhima endued with the energy of Marut himself, as also his cruel intents! Why would those warriors, acquainted with Bhima's might, wrath, and energy, provoke the ire, in battle, of that hero of cruel deeds, that warrior resembling Yama himself as the latter becomes at the end of the Yuga? It seems that the Suta's son, the mighty-armed Karna alone, relying on the prowess of his own arms, $-10 fought in battle with Bhimasena, disregarding the latter. That son of Pandu who vanquished Karna in battle like Purandara vanquishing an Asura, is incapable of being vanquished by anybody in fight. Who is there that would, hopeful of life, approach that Bhima who, in Arjuna's quest, alone entered my host, having grinded Drona himself? Who, indeed, is there, O Sanjaya, that would dare stay in the face of Bhima?11-18 Who is there among the Asuras that would venture to stay before the great Indra with the thunderbolt uplifted in his hand?* A man may return, having entered the abode of the king of the dead.14 however, can return having encountered Bhimasena! men of weak prowess who senselessly rushed against the angry Bhimasena were like insects falling upon a blazing fire. out doubt, reflecting upon what the angry and the fierce Bhima had said in the assembly in the hearing of the Kurus about the slaughter of my sons, and beholding the defeat of Karna, 18-17 Dusçasana and his brothers ceased to encounter Bhima from fear! That wicked son also of mine, O Sanjaya, who repeatedly said in the assembly (these words, viz.,)— Karna and Duscasana and I myself will vanquish the Pāndavas in battle,-without doubt, beholding Karna defeated and deprived of his car by Bhima, 18-19 is consumed with grief in consequence of his rejection of Krishna's suit ! Beholding his mail-clad brothers slain in battle by Bhimasena, 20 in consequence of his own fault, without doubt, my son is burning with ^{*} The genius of the two languages being entirely different, I give the sense of the first line of 14 separately, without seeking to connect it, in the assertive form, with the second half of 13.—T.

t Literally, "disregard of Krishna."-T.

grief! Who that is desirous of life will make a hostile advance against Pāndu's son²¹ Bhima excited with wrath and armed with terrible weapons and standing in battle like Death himself? A man may escape from the very jaws of the Vadavā fire.²² But it is my belief that no one can escape from before Bhima's face! Indeed, neither Pārtha, nor the Pānchālas, nor Keçava, nor Sātyaki,²³ when excited with wrath in battle, shows the least regard for (his) life. Alas, O Suta, the very lives of my sons are in danger!²⁴

"Sanjaya said,—'Thou, O Kauravya, that art thus grieving in view of the present carnage, thou, without doubt, art the root of this destruction of the world!" Obedient to the counsels of thy sons, thou hast thyself provoked this fierce hostility. Though urged (by well-wishing friends), thou acceptedst not the proper medicine like a man fated to die! O monarch, O best of men, having thyself drunk the fiercest and the most indigestible poison, take thou all its consequences now! The combatants are fighting to the best of their might: still thou speakest ill of them! Listen, however, to me as I describe to thee how the battle raged.

"'Beholding Karna defeated by Bhimasena, five of thy sons, those uterine brothers that were great bowmen, could not, O sire, brook it. They were Durmarshana and Dussaha and Durmada and Durdhara and Jaya. Clad in beautiful mail, all of them rushed against the son of Pandu. 80 Encompassing the mighty-armed Vrikodara on all sides, they shrouded all the points of the compass with their shafts looking like flights of Bhimasena, however, in that battle, smilingly received those princes of celestial beauty thus rushing suddenly against him. 32 Beholding thy sons advancing against Bhimasena, Rādhā's son Karna rushed against that mighty-warrior, 33 shooting arrows of keen points that were equipt with golden wings and whetted on stone. Bhima, however, quickly rushed against Karna, though resisted by thy sons.34 Then the Kurus, surrounding Karna, covered Bhimasena with showers of straight With five and twenty arrows, O king, Bhima, armed with his formidable bow, despatched all those bulls among men to Yama's abode with their steeds and charioteers. 36 ing down from their cars along with their charioteers, their lifeless forms looked like large trees with their variegated weight of flowers uprooted by the tempest. The prowess that we then beheld of Bhimasena was exceedingly wonderful, inasmuch as, resisting Adhiratha's son the while, he slew those sons of thine. Resisted by Bhima with whetted arrows on all sides, the Suta's son, O king, only looked at Bhima. Bhimasena also, with eyes red in wrath, began to cast angry glances on Karna, stretching his formidable bow the while."

SECTION CXXXVI.

"Sanjaya said,—'Beholding thy sons lying (on the field), Karna of great prowess, filled with great wrath, became hopeless of his life. And Adhiratha's son regarded himself guilty, seeing thy sons slain before his eyes in battle by Bhima. Bhimasena, recollecting the wrongs formerly inflicted by Karna, became filled with rage and began with deliberate care to pierce Karna with many keen arrows.3 Then Karna, piercing Bhima with five arrows, smiling the while, once more pierced him with seventy arrows equipt with golden wings and whetted Disregarding those shafts shot by Karna, Vrikodara pierced the son of Radha in that battle with a hundred straight And once more piercing him in his vitals with five keen arrows, Bhima, O sire, cut off with a broad-headed arrow the bow of the Suta's son. The cheerless Karna then, O Bhārata, taking up another bow, shrouded Bhimasena on all Then Bhima, slaying Karna's steeds sides with his arrows." and charioteer, laughed a loud laugh, having thus counteracted Karne's feats.* Then that bull amongst men, viz., Bhima, cut off with his arrows the bow of Karna. That bow, O king, of loud twang and the back of whose staff was decked with gold, fell down (from his hand). Then the mighty car-warrior Karna alighted from his car and taking up a mace in that battle wrathfully hurled it at Bhima.10 Beholding that mace, O king, impetuously coursing towards him, Vrikodara resisted it with his arrows in the sight of all the troops." Then the son of Pandu, gifted with great prowess and exerting himself with great activity, sped a thousand arrows at the Suta's son, desirous of taking the latter's life.18 Karna, however, in that dreadful battle, resisting all those shafts with his own, cut off Bhima's armour also with his arrows.18 And then he pierced Bhima with five and twenty small shafts in the sight of all the troops. All this seemed exceedingly wonderful. Then, O monarch, Bhima, excited with rage, sped nine straight shafts at the Suta's son.15 Those keen shafts, piercing through Karna's coas of mail and right arm, entered the Earth like snakes into an Shrouded with showers of shafts shot from Bhimasena's bow, Karna once more turned his back upon Bhimasena. 17 Beholding the Suta's son turn back and flying away on foot, covered all over with the arrows of Kunti's son, Duryodhana said,18—Go ye quickly from all sides towards the car of Rādhā's son !- Then, O king, thy sons, hearing these words of their brother that were to them a surprise,19 rushed towards the son of Pandu for battle, shooting showers of shafts. Chitra, and Upachitra, and Charuchitra, and Carasana, and and Chitrayudha, and Chitrayarman. All of them were wellversed in every mode of warfare. The mighty car-warrior Bhimasena, however, felled each of those sons of thine thus rushing against him with a single arrow. Deprived of life, they fell down on the Earth like trees uprooted by a tempest. ---Beholding those sons of thine, all mighty car-warriors, O king, thus slain, Karna, with tearful face, recollected the words of Mounting upon another car that was duly equipt, Karna, endued with great prowess, quickly proceeded against the son of Pandu in battle.34 Piercing each other with whetted arrows equipt with wings of gold, the two warriors looked resplendent like two masses of clouds penetrated by the rays of the sun.35 Then the son of Pandu excited with rage, cut off the armour of the Suta's son with six and thirty broad-headed arrows of great sharpness and fierce energy. The mighty-armed Suta's son also, O bull of Bharata's race, pierced the son of Kunti with fifty straight arrows.27 two warriors then, smeared with red sandal paste, with many a wound caused by each other's arrows, and covered also with gore, looked resplendent like the risen sun and the moon.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:53 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

Their coats of mail cut off by means of arrows, and their bodies covered with blood. Karna and Bhima then looked like a couple of snakes just freed from their sloughs.29 Indeed, those two tigers among men mangled each other with their arrows like two tigers mangling each other with their teeth. heroes incessantly showered their shafts like two masses of clouds pouring torrents of rain. 50 Those two chastisers of foes tore each other's body with their arrows like two elephants tearing each other with the points of their tusks. 81 Roaring at each other and showering their arrows upon each other, those two foremost of car-warriors seemed to sport with each other, causing their cars to trace beautiful circles. 88 They resembled a couple of mighty bulls roaring at each other in the presence of a cow in her season. Indeed, those two lions among men then looked like a couple of mighty lions endued with great prowess.18 Casting their glances upon each other with eyes red in wrath. those two warriors endued with great energy fought on like Cakra and Virochana's son (Prahlada).34 Then, O king, the mighty-armed Bhima, as he stretched his bow with his two hands, looked like a cloud charged with lightning. 55 Then the mighty Bhima cloud, having the twang of the bow for its thunder and incessant showers of arrows for its rainy downpour, covered, O king, the Karna mountain.86 And once more Pandu's son Bhima of terrible prowess, O Bharata, shrouded Karna with a thousand shafts shot from his bow. 87 And as he shrouded Karna with his winged shafts equipt with Kanka feathers, thy sons witnessed his extraordinary prowess.38 Gladdening Partha himself and the illustrious Keçava and Satyaki and the two protectors of the (two) wheels (of Arjuna's car), Bhima fought even thus with Karna.59 Beholding the prowess, the might of arms, and the perseverance of Bhima who knew his own self, thy sons, O monarch, all became cheerless."40

SECTION CXXXVII.

"Sanjaya said,—'Hearing the twang of Bhimasena's bow and the sound of his palms, the son of Rādhā could not brook it like an infuriate elephant incapable of brooking the roars of

http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-googl

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:53 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized

an infuriate rival.1 Returning for a moment from before Bhimasena, Karna cast his eyes upon those sons of thine that had been slain by Bhimasena.3 Beholding them, O best of men, Karna became cheerless and plunged in grief. Breathing hot and long sighs he once more proceeded against the son of Pāndu.⁸ With eyes red as copper, and sighing in wrath like a mighty snake, Karna then, as he shot his arrows, looked resplendent like the Sun scattering his rays. Indeed, O bull of Bharata's race, Vrikodara was then covered with the arrows, resembling the spreading rays of the Sun, that were shot from Karna's bow.5 The beautiful shafts, equipt with peacock feathers, shot from Karna's bow, penetrated into every part of Bhima's body like birds into a tree for roosting there.6 Indeed, the arrows, equipt with wings of gold, shot from Karna's bow, falling incessantly, resembled continuous rows of cranes. So numerous were the shafts shot by Adhiratha's son that these seemed to issue not from his bow alone but from his standard, his umbrella, and the shaft and yoke and bottom of his car also.8 Indeed, Adhiratha's son shot his sky-ranging shafts of impetuous energy, decked with gold and equipt with vulturine feathers, in such a way as to fill the entire welkin with them. Beholding him (thus) excited with fury and rushing towards him like the Destroyer himself, Vrikodara, becoming utterly reckless of his life and prevailing over his foe, pierced him with nine shafts.+10 Beholding the irresistible impetuosity of Karna as also that dense shower of arrows, Bhima, endued as he was with great prowess, quailed not in fear.11 The son of Pandu then, counteracting that arrowy downpour of Adhiratha's son, pierced Karna himself with twenty other sharp shafts18 Indeed, as Pritha's son himself had before been shrouded by the Suta's son, even so was the latter now shrouded by the former in that battle.18 Beholding the prowess of Bhimasena in battle, thy

^{*} The Bombay reading, which I adopt, seems to be better than the

⁺ I think that both Vrikodaram and nicitais in this verse as given in the Bombay text are incorrect. I read Vr ikodaras and navabhis, following the Bengal texts. - T.

warriors, as also the Chāranas, filled with joy, applauded him.14 Bhuricravas, and Kripa, and Drona's son, and the ruler of the Madras, and Jayadratha, and Uttamaujas, and Yudhamanyu, and Sātyaki, and Keçava, and Arjuna,15—these great car-warriors, O king, among both the Kurus and the Pandavas,—loudly cheered Bhima, saying,-Excellent, Excellent,-and uttered leonine roars.16 When that fierce uproar making the hair to stand on end arose, thy son Duryodhana, O king, quickly said'7 unto all the kings and princes and particularly his uterine brothers, these words, viz.,—Blessed be ye, proceed towards Karna for rescuing him from Vrikodara,18 else shafts shot from Bhima's bow will slay the son of Rādhā! mighty bowmen, strive ye to protect the Suta's son! "-Thus commanded by Duryodhana, seven of his uterine brothers, O sire, rushing in wrath towards Bhimasena, encompassed him on Approaching the son of Kunti they covered him with showers of arrows like clouds pouring torrents of rain on the mountain breast in the season of rains.21 Excited with wrath, those seven great car-warriors began to afflict Bhimasena, O king, like the seven planets afflicting the Moon at the hour of the universal dissolution.22 The son of Kunti then, O monarch, drawing his beautiful bow with great force and firm grasp,23 and knowing that his foes were but men, aimed And the lord Bhima in great rage sped at them those shafts effulgent as solar rays.24 Indeed, Bhimasena, recollecting his former wrongs, shot those shafts as if for extracting the life from out the bodies of those sons of thine.25 Those arrows, O Bharata, whetted on stone and equipt with wings of gold, shot by Bhimasena, piercing through the bodies of those Bharata princes, flew into the sky. Indeed, those arrows winged with gold, piercing through the hearts of thy sons, looked beautiful, O monarch, as they passed into the welkin, like birds of excellent plumage.27 Decked with gold and covered all over with blood, those arrows, O king, drinking the blood of thy sons, passed out of their body.28 Pierced in their vital limbs by means of those arrows, they fell down on the Earth from their cars like tall trees growing on mountain precipices, broken by elephants.23 The seven sons of thine that

http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google Generated on 2022-02-03 12:53 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized

were thus slain were Catrunjaya, and Catrusaha, and Chitra, and Chitrayudha, and Dridha, and Chitrasena, and Vikarna." Amongst all thy sons thus slain, Vrikodara the son of Pandu grieved bitterly from sorrow for Vikarna who was dear to him. 51 And Bhima said,—Even thus was the vow made by me, viz, that all of you should be slain by me in battle! It is for that, O Vikarna, that thou hast been slain! My vow hath been accomplished. 82 O hero, thou camest to battle, bearing in mind the duties of a Kshatriya! Thou wert ever engaged in our good, and especially in that of the king (our eldest brother)!" It is scarcely proper, therefore, for me to grieve for thy illustrious self !- Having slain those princes, O king, in the very sight of Rādhā's son,34 the son of Pāndu uttered a terrible That loud shout of the heroic Bhima, O Bhaleonine roar. rata, informed king Yudhishthira the just that the victory in that battle was his. Indeed, hearing that tremendous shout of Bhima armed with the bow, 25-36 king Yudhishthira felt great joy in the midst of that battle. The gladdened son of Pandu then, O king, received that leonine shout of his brother with sounds of drams and other musical instruments. Vrikodara had sent him that message by the sign agreed upon, Yudhishthira, that foremost of persons acquainted with weapons, filled with joy, rushed against Drona in battle. On the other hand, O king, beholding one and thirty of thy sons slain. Durvodhana recollected the words of Vidura. Those beneficial words spoken by Vidura are now realised! 17-40thinking even so, king Duryodhana was unable to do what he All that, during the match at dice, thy foolish and wicked son, with Karna (on his side), said unto the princess of Pānchāla causing her to be brought into the assembly, all the harsh words again that Karna said unto Krishna, in the same place,41-42 before thyself, O king, and the sons of Pandu, in thy hearing and that of all the Kurus,48 to the effect that-O Krishnā, the Pāndavas are lost and have sunk into eternal hell, therefore, choose thou other husbands !-- alas, the fruis of all that is now mainfesting itself! Then again, O thou of Kuru's race, diverse harsh speeches such as sesamum seeds without kernel, &c., were applied by thy wrathful sons to those high-souled ones, viz., the sons of Pandu! Bhimasena, vomiting forth the fire of wrath (which these engendered) and which he had restrained for thirteen years, is now compassing the destruction of thy sons!45-46 Indulging in copious lamentations, Vidura failed to incline thee towards peace. of the Bharatas, suffer the fruit of all that with thy son!47 Thou art old, patient, and capable of foreseeing the consequences of all acts. Being so, when thou didst yet refuse to follow the counsels of thy well-wishers, it seems that all this is the result of destiny.48 Do not grieve, O tiger among men! All this is thy great fault! In my opinion, thou art thyself the cause of the destruction of thy sons!49 O monarch, Vikarna hath fallen, and Chitrasena also of great prowess! Many other mighty car-warriors and foremost ones among thy sons have also fallen!50 Others again among thy sons whom Bhima saw come within the range of his vision, O mighty-armed one, he slew in a trice. 11 It is for thee only that I had to see our army scorched in thousands by means of the arrows shot by Pāndu's son Bhima and Vrisha (Karna)!" "52

SECTION CXXXVIII.

"Dhritarāshtra said,—'O Suta, O Sanjaya, this grievous result that has now overtaken us is, I think, certainly due to I had hitherto thought that what is past is my evil policy !1 past. But, O Sanjaya, what measures should I now adopt? I am now once more calm, O Sanjaya! Therefore, tell me how this slaughter of heroes is going on, having my evil policy for its cause !'8

"Sanjaya said,-Indeed, O king. Karna and Bhima, both endued with great prowess, continued in that battle to pour their arrowy showers like two rain-charged clouds.4 The arrows winged with gold and whetted on stone and marked with Bhima's name, approaching Karna, penetrated into his body as if piercing into his very life. Similarly Bhima also, in that battle, was shrouded with the shafts of Karna in hundreds and thousands, resembling snakes of virulent poison.6 With their arrrows, O king, falling on all sides, an agitation was produced among the troops resembling that of the very ocean." Many were the combatants, O chastiser of foes, in thy host that were deprived of life by arrows, resembling snakes of virulent poision, shot from Bhima's bow. Strewn with fallen elephants and steeds mixed with the bodies of men, the field of battle looked like a tract scattered over with trees broken by a tempest.' Slaughtered in battle with the arrows shot from Bhima's bow, thy warriors fled away, saying, - What is this?10—Indeed, that host of the Sindhus, the Sauviras, and the Kauravas, afflicted with the impetuous shafts of both Karna and Bhima, was removed to a great distance.11 remnant of those brave soldiers, with their steeds and elephants killed, leaving the vicinity of both Karna and Bhima, fled away in all directions.12 (And they cried out)-Verily, for the sake of the Parthas, the gods are stupefying us, since those arrows shot by both Bhima and Karna are slaying our forces.13 -Saying those words, these troops of thine, afflicted with fear, avoiding the range of (Karna's and Bhima's) arrows, stood at a distance for witnessing that combat.14 Then on the field of battle there began to flow a terrible river enhancing the joy of heroes and the fears of the timid.15 And it was caused by the blood of elephants and steeds and men. And covered with the lifeless forms of men and elephants and steeds,16 with flagstaffs and the bottoms of cars, with the adornments of cars and elephants and steeds, with broken cars and wheels and Akshas and Kuvarus,17 with loud-twanged bows decked with gold, and gold-winged arrows and shafts in thousands18 shot by Karna and Bhima and resembling snakes just freed from their sloughs, with countless lances and spears and scimitars and battle-axes,19 with maces and clubs and axes all adorned with gold, with standards of diverse shape, and darts and spiked clubs,20 and with beautiful cataghnis, the Earth, O Bharata, looked resplendent. all over with ear-rings and necklaces of gold and bracelets loosened (from wrists), and rings, and precious gems worn on diadems and crowns, and head-gears, and golden ornaments of diverse kinds, O sire, and coats of mail, and leathern fences, and elephants' ropes, and umbrellas displaced (from their places), and yak-tails, and fans, with the pierced bodies of elephants and steeds and men, with blood-dyed arrows, and with diverse other objects, lying about and loosened from their places, the field of battle looked resplendent like the firmament bespangled with Beholding the wonderful, inconceivable, and superhuman feats of those two warriors, the Chāranas and the Siddhas were exceedingly amazed. As a blazing conflagration having the wind for its ally courses through an (extended) heap of dry grass, even so Adhiratha's son, engaged with Bhima, coursed fiercely in that battle.* Both of them felled countless standards and cars and slew steeds and men and elephants, 31-27 like a pair of elephants crushing a forest of reeds while engaged in battle with each other. Thy host looked like a mass of clouds O king of men, and great was the carnage caused in that battle by Karna and Bhima." "28+

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:53 GMT / https://hdl.handl Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitru

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:53 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized

SECTION CXXXIX.

"Sanjaya said,—'Then Karna, O king, piercing Bhima with three arrows, poured countless beautiful arrows upon him.1 The mighty-armed Bhimasena the son of Pandu, though struck by the Suta's son, showed no signs of pain but stood immovable like a hill pierced (with arrows).* In return, O sire, in that battle, he deeply pierced Karna in the ear with a barbed arrow rubbed with oil, of great keenness, and excellent temper.8 (With that arrow) he felled on the Earth the large and beautiful ear-ring of Karna, And it fell down, O monarch, like a blazing luminary of great effulgence from the firmament.* Excited with wrath, Vrikodara then, smiling the while, deeply pierced the Suta's son in the centre of the chest with another broad-headed arrow. And once again, O Bharata, the mightyarmed Bhima quickly sped in that battle ten long shafts that looked like snakes of virulent poison just freed from their sloughs. Shot by Bhima, those shafts, O sire, striking

^{*} The sense seems to be that Karna and Bhima were like fire and wind .- T.

[†] Verse 28 is a triplet. The second line is obscure. It seems that a line has been omitted .- T.

Karna's forehead, entered it like snakes entering an anthill." With those shafts sticking to his forehead, the Suta's son looked beautiful as he did before while his brow had been encircled with a chaplet of blue lotuses. Deeply pierced by the active son of Pandu, Karna, supporting himself on the Kuvara of his car, closed his eyes.3 Soon, however, regaining consciousness, Karna, that scorcher of foes, with his body bathed in blood, became mad with rage.10* Infuriate with rage in consequence of his being thus afflicted by that firm bowman, Karna, endued with great impetuosity, rushed fiercely towards Bhimasena's car.11 Then, O king, the mighty and wrathful Karna, maddened with rage, sped at Bhimasena, O Bharata, a hundred shafts winged with vulturine feathers,12 of Pandu, however, disregarding his foe and setting at nought his energy, began to shoot showers of fierce arrows at him.18 Then Karna, O king, excited with rage, O scorcher of foes, struck the son of Pandu, that embodiment of wrath, with nine arrows in the chest.14 Then both those tigers among men, (armed with arrows and, therefore,) resembling a couple of tigers with fierce teeth, poured upon each other, in that battle, their arrowy showers like two mighty masses of clouds.15 They sought to frighten each other, in that battle, with the sounds of their palms and with showers of arrows of diverse kinds.16 Excited with rage, each sought in that battle to counteract the other's Then that slayer of hostile heroes, viz., the mightyarmed Bhima, O Bharata, cutting off, with a razor-faced arrow, the bow of the Suta's son, uttered a loud shout. off that broken bow, the Suta's son, that mighty car-warrior,17-18 took up another bow that was stronger and tougher. Beholding that slaughter of the Kuru, the Sauvira, and the Sindhu heroes,19 and marking that the Earth was covered with coats of mail and standards and weapons lying about, and seeing also the lifeless forms of elephants, foot-soldiers and horsemen and car warriors on all sides,20 the body of the Suta's son, from wrath, blazed up with effulgence. Stretching his formidable bow decked with gold, si Rādhā's son, O king, eyed Bhima with ^{*} Literally, "mustered all his rage.-T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:53 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized ,

Infuriate with rage, the Suta's son, while wrathful glances. shooting his arrows, looked resplendent22 like the antumnal Sun of dazzling rays at mid-day. While employed with his hands in taking up an arrow, fixing it on the bow-string, stretching the string, and letting it off, none could notice any interval between those acts. And while Karna was thus engaged in shooting his arrows right and left, his bow was incessantly drawn to a circle, like a terrible circle of fire. pointed arrows, equipt with wings of gold, shot from Karna's bow, 95-26 covered, O king, all the points of the compass, darkening the very light of the Sun. Countless flights were seen, in the welkin, of those shafts equipt with wings of gold, shot from Indeed, the shafts shot from the bow of Adhiratha's son, $7-28 looked beautiful like rows of cranes in the The arrows that Adhiratha's son shot were all equipt with vulturine feathers, whetted on stone, decked with gold, endued with great impetuosity, and furnished with blazing Impelled with the force of his bow, those arrows decked with gold29-80 fell incessantly towards Bhima's car. those gold-decked arrows urged by Karna, while coursing in thousands through the welkin, looked beautiful like successive flights of locusts. The arrows shot from the bow of Adhiratha's son, as they coursed through the welkin, looked like one long continuous arrow in the sky. Like a cloud covering a mountain with torrents of rain, 81-88 Karna, excited with rage, covered Bhima with showers of arrows. Then thy sons, O Bharata, with their troops, beheld the might, energy, prowess, and perseverance of Bhima, for the latter, disregarding that arrowy downpour resembling the raging sea, rushed in wrath against Karna. Bhima, O monarch, was armed with a formidable bow the back of whose staff was decked with gold. 94-86 He stretched it so quickly that it seemed, like a second bow of Indra, to be incessantly drawn to a circle. Shafts issued continuously from it and seemed to fill the whole welkin. 87 With those straight arrows, equipt with wings of gold, shot by Bhima, a continuous line was made in the sky that looked effulgent like a garland of gold.55 Then those showers of (Karna's) arrows spread in the welkin, struck by Bhimasena 53 with his shafts, were scattered in portions and fell down on the Then the sky was covered with those showers of gold-winged and swiftly-coursing arrows, of both Karna and Bhimasena, that produced sparks of fire as they clashed against The very Sun was then shrouded, and the very air ceased to move.40-41 Indeed, when the welkin was thus covered with those arrowy showers, nothing could be seen. Then the Suta's son, disregarding the energy of the highsouled Bhima, completely shrouded Bhima with other arrows and endeavoured to prevail over him. Then, O sire, those arrowy showers shot by both of them, 42-48 seemed to clash against each other like two opposite currents of wind. And in consequence of that clash of the arrowy showers of those two lions among men,44 a conflagration, O chief of the Bharatas, seemed to be generated in the sky. Then Karna, desirous of slaying Bhima, sped at him in rage many whetted arrows equipt with wings of gold and polished by the hands of the Bhima, however, cut off with his own shafts every one of those arrows into three fragments, 45-46 and prevailing over the Suta's son, he cried out, Wait, Wait! -And the wrathful and mighty son of Pandu, like an all-consuming conflagration, once more shot in rage showers of fierce shafts. And then, in consequence of their leathern fences striking against their bow-strings, loud sounds were generated. 47-48 loud also became the sound of their palms and terrible their leonine shouts and fierce the rattle of their car-wheels and the twang of their bow-strings. And all the combatants, O king, ceased to fight, desirous of beholding the prowess of Karna and the son of Pandu, each of whom was desirous of slaving the other. 60 And the celestial Rishis and Siddhas and Gandharvas, applauded them, saying, -Excellent, Excellent !-And the tribes of Vidyādharas rained flowery showers upon them. 41 Then the wrathful and mighty-armed Bhima of fierce prowess, baffling with his own weapons the weapons of his foe, pierced the Suta's son with many shafts.52 Karna also, endued with great might, baffling the shafts of Bhimasena, sped at him nine long shafts in that battle.58 Bhima, however, with as many arrows, cut off those shafts of the Suta's son in the welkin and addressed him, saying,-Wait, Wait !54-Then the mighty-armed and heroic Bhima, excited with rage, shot at Adhiratha's son an arrow resembling the rod of Yama or Death Rādhā's son, however, of great prowess, smilingly cut off that arrow, O king, of Pandu's son, with three arrows of his, as it coursed towards him through the welkin.50 The son of Pandu then once more shot showers of fierce shafts. Karna, however, fearlessly received all those arrows of Bhima. 57 Then excited with rage, the Suta's son Karna, by the power of his weapons, with his straight arrows, cut off in that encounter the couple of quivers and the bowstring of the battling Bhima as also the traces of his steeds. And then slaying his steeds also, Karna pierced Bhima's charioteer with five shafts.58-69 The charioteer, quickly running away, proceeded to Yudhamanyu's car. Excited with rage, the son of Rādhā then, whose splendour resembled that of the Yuga fire, smiling the while, cut off the flag-staff of Bhima and felled his banner. of his bow, the mighty-armed Bhima then seized a dart such as car-warriors may use. 60-61 Excited with wrath, he whirled it in his hand and then hurled it with great force at Karna's The son of Adhiratha then, with ten shafts, cut off, as it coursed towards him with the effulgence of a large meteor, that gold-decked dart thus hurled (by Bhima).* Thereupon that dart fell down, cut off into ten fragments by those sharp shafts of the Suta's son Karna, that warrior conversant with every mode of warfare, then battling for the sake of his friends. Then the son of Kunti took up a shield decked with gold 62-64 and a sword, desirous of obtaining either death or victory. Karna, however, O Bharata, smiling the while, cut off that bright shield of Bhima with many fierce shafts. The car-less Bhima, O king, deprived of his shield, became mad with Quickly then he hurled his formidable sword at Karna's car. That large sword, cutting off the stringed bow of the Suta's son,67 fell down on the Earth, O king, like an angry snake from the sky. Then Adhiratha's son, excited with rage in that battle, smilingly took up another bow destructive of foes, having a stronger string, and tougher than the one he had lost. Desirous of slaving the son of Kunti, Karna then began to shoot thousands of arrows, O king, equipt with wings of gold and endued with great energy. those shafts shot from Karna's bow, the mighty Bhima 68-70 leaped into the sky, filling Karna's heart with anguish. Beholding the conduct in battle of Bhima desirous of victory, 12 the son of Rādhā beguiled him by concealing himself in his Seeing Karna conceal himself with an agitated heart on the terrace of his car,78 Bhima, catching hold of Karna's flagstaff, waited on the Earth. All the Kurus and the Chāranas highly applauded that attempt of Bhima of snatching Karns away from his car like Garuda snatching away a snake. His bow cut off, himself deprived of car, Bhima, observant of the duties of his order,78-74 stayed still for battle, keeping his (broken) car behind him. The son of Radha then, from rage, in that encounter, proceeded against the son of Pandu who Then those two mighty warriors, 0 was waiting for battle. king, challenging, as they approached, each other, 75-76 those two bulls among men, roared at each other like the clouds at the close of summer. And the passage-at-arms that then took place between those two enraged lions among men that could not brook each other in battle resembled that of old between the gods and the Danavas. The son of Kunti, however, whose stock of weapons was exhausted, was (obliged to turn back) pursued by Karna.77-78 Beholding the elephants, huge as hills, that had been slain by Arjuna, lying (near), the unarmed Bhimasena entered into their midst, for impeding the progress of Karna's car.79 Approaching that multitude of elephants and getting into the midst of that fastness which was inaccessible to a car, the son of Pandu, desirous of saving his life, refrained from striking the son of Radha. Desirous of shelter, that subjugator of hostile cities, viz., the son of Pritha, uplifting an elephant that had been slain by Dhananjaya with his shafts, waited there like Hanumat uplifting the peak of Gandhamadana.* Karna, however, with his safts, cut off that ^{*} Literally, "a mountain overgrown with medicinal herbs of great elephant held by Bhima. The son of Pandu thereupon hurled at Karna the fragments of that elephant's carcase, as also car-wheels and steeds. In fact, all objects that he saw lying there on the field, the son of Pandu, excited with rage, took up and hurled at Karna. Karna, however, with his sharp arrows, cut off every one of those objects thus thrown at him.84 Bhima also, raising his fierce fists that were endued with the force of the thunder, desired to slay the Suta's son. Soon, however, he recollected Arjuna's vow.65 The son of Pandu, therefore, though competent, took not the life of Karna, from desire of not falsifying the vow that Savyasachin had made.86 The Suta's son, however, with his sharp shafts, repeatedly caused the distressed Bhima to lose his senses. But Karna, recollecting the words of Kunti, took not the life of the unarmed Approaching quickly, Karna touched him with the horn of his bow.88 As soon, however, as Bhimasena was touched with the bow, excited with rage and sighing like a snake, he snatched the bow from Karna and struck him with it on the head. Struck by Bhimasena, the son of Radha, with eyes red in wrath, smiling the while, said unto him repeatedly these words, viz., Beardless eunuch, ignorant fool, and glutton.—And Karna said,—Without skill in weapons, do not fight with me! Thou art but a child, a laggard in battle!" There, O son of Pandu, where occurs a profusion of edibles and drink, there, O wretch, shouldst thou be but never in battle !99 Subsisting on roots, flowers, and fruits, and observant of vows and austerities, thou, O Bhima, shouldst pass thy days in the woods, for thou art unskilled in battle !98 Great is the difference between battle and the austere mode of a Muni's life! O Vrikodara, retire into the woods! O child, thou art not fit for engaging in battle. Thou hast an aptitude for a life in the woods! 4 Urging cooks and servants and slaves in the house to speed, thou art fit only for reproving them in wrath for the sake of thy dinner, O Vrikodara!" Or, O Bhima, O thou of a foolish understanding, betaking thyself to a Muni's mode of efficacy." Of course, the allusion is to Hanumat's removal of Gandha-madana for the cure of Lakshmana.—T.

^{*} In the first line of 62, the Bengal reading Ayastam is better than the Bombay reading Ayastas. - T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:53 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized

life, gather thou fruits (for thy food)! Go to the woods, O son of Kunti, for thou art not skilled in battle !" Employed in culling fruits and roots or in waiting upon guests, thou art unfit, I think, to take a part, O Vrikodara, in any passage-at-arms!" -And, O monarch, all the wrongs done to him in his younger years, he was also reminded of by Karna in harsh words.38 And as he stood there in weakness, Karna once more touched And laughing loudly, Vrisha once more him with the bow. told Bhima these words: 99-Thou shouldst fight with others, O sire, but never with one like me! They that fight with persons like us have to undergo this and else !100 where the two Krishnas are! They will protect thee in battle! Or, O son of Kunti, go home, for, a child as thou art, what business hast thou with battle?101—Hearing those harsh words of Karna, Bhimasena laughed aloud and addressing Karna said unto him these words in the hearing of all:108-O wicked wight, repeatedly hast thou been vanquished by me! How cast thou indulge then in such idle boast? In the world the ancients witnessed the victory and defeat of the great Indra himself !108 O thou of ignoble parentage, engage with me in an athletic encounter with bare arms! Even as I slew the mighty Kichaka of gigantic frame,104 I would then slay thee in the very sight of all the kings !- Understanding the motives of Bhima, Karna, that foremost of intelligent men,105 abstained from that combat in the very sight of all the bowmen. Indeed, having made Bhima carless, Karna, O king, reproved him in such boastful language 106 in the view of that lion among the Vrishnis, (viz., Krishna) and of the high-souled Partha. Then the ape-bannered (Arjuna), urged by Keçava, sped at the Suta's son, O king, many shafts whetted on stone. Those arrows decked with gold, shot by Partha's arms and issuing out of Gandiva, entered Karna's body like cranes into the Karauncha mountains. those arrows shot from Gandiva, which entered Karna's body like so many snakes,107-9 Dhananjaya drove the Suta's son from Bhimasena's vicinage. His bow cut off by Bhima and himself afflicted with the arrows of Dhananjaya, 110 Karna quickly fled away from Bhima on his great car. Bhimasena also, O bull among men, mounting upon Sātyaki's car," proceeded in that battle in the wake of his brother Savyasachin the son of Pandu. Then Dhananjaya, with eyes red in wrath, aiming at Karna, quickly sped a shaft like the Destroyer urging forward Death's That shaft sped from Gandiva, like Garuda in the welkin in quest of a mighty snake, quickly coursed towards Karna. The son of Drona, however, that mighty car-warrior, with a winged arrow of his, cut it off in mid-air, desirous of rescuing Karna from the fear of Dhananjaya. Then Arjuna, excited with wrath, pierced the son of Drona with four and sixty112-15 arrows, O king, and addressing him, said,—Do not fly away, O Acwatthaman, but wait a moment !- Drona's son, however, afflicted with the shafts of Dhananjaya, quickly entered a division of the Kaurava army that abounded with infuriate elephants and that teemed with cars. The mighty son of Kunti then, with the twang of Gandiva, drowned the noise made in that battle by all other twanging bows of staffs decked with Then the mighty Dhananjaya followed from behind the son of Drona who had not retreated to a great distance, frightening him all the way with his shafts. Piercing with his shafts winged with the feathers of Kankas and peacocks, the bodies of men and elephants and steeds, Arjuna began to grind Indeed, O chief of the Bharatas, Partha the son of Indra began to exterminate that host teeming with steeds and elephants and men.' "116-26

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:53 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized

SECTION CXL.

"Dhritarāshtra said,—'Day by day, O Sanjaya, my blazing fame is being darkened! A great many warriors of mine have I think all this is due to the reverses brought about Dhananjaya, excited with rage, hath penetrated into my host which is protected by Drona's son and Karna, and which, therefore, is incapable of being penetrated by the very gods! United with those two of blazing energy, viz., Krishna and Bhima, as also with that bull among the Cinis, his prowess hath been increased! Since I have heard of Dhananjaya's entry, grief is consuming my heart like fire consuming a heap of dry grass. I see that all the kings of the Earth with the ruler of the Sindhus amongst them, are affected by evil destiny. Having done a great wrong to the diadem-decked (Arjuna), how can the ruler of the Sindhus, if he falls within Arjuna's sight, save his life? From circumstantial inference, I see, O Sanjaya, that the ruler of the Sindhus is already dead! Tell me, however, truly how the battle raged! Thou art skilled in narration, O Sanjaya, tell me truly how the Vrishni hero Sātyaki fought, who, striving resolutely for Dananjaya's sake, alone entered in rage that vast force, disturbing and agitating it repeatedly, like an elephant plunging into a lake overgrown with lotuses. 7-8

"Sanjaya said,—'Beholding that foremost of men, viz., Bhima, proceed, afflicted with Karna's shafts in the midst, O king, of many heroes, that foremost warrior amongst the Cinis followed him on his car. Roaring like the clouds at the close of summer, and blazing like the autumnal Sun, he began to slaughter with his formidable bow the host of thy son, causing it to tremble repeatedly.10 And as that foremost one of Madhu's race, O Bhārata, thus proceeded along the field on his car drawn by steeds of the hue of silver and himself roaring terribly, none amongst thy warriors could check his progress.12 Then that foremost of kings, viz., Alamvusha, full of rage, never retreating from battle, armed with bow, and clad in a golden coat of mail, rushing quickly, impeded the progress of Sātyaki, that foremost warrior of Madhu's race.19 counter then, O Bhārata, that took place between them was such that its like had never been. All thy warriors and the enemy, abstaining from the fight, became spectators of that engagement between those two ornaments of battle.18 Then that foremost of kings, viz., Alamvusha, forcibly pierced Satyaki with That bull of Cini's race, however, with his shafts, cut off all those arrows before they could reach him.14 once more Alamvusha struck Sātyaki with three sharp arrows equipt with beautiful wings, blazing as fire, and shot from his bow drawn to the ear. These, piercing through Sātyaki's coat of mail, penetrated into his body.15 Having pierced Sātyaki's body with those sharp and blazing arrows endued with the force of fire or the wind, Alamyusha forcibly struck the four steeds

Generated on 2022-03-03-12:54 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized ,

of Sātyaki, white as silver, with four other arrows,16 grandson of Cini, endued with great activity and prowess like that of (Keçava himself) the bearer of the discus, thus struck by him, slew with four shafts of great impetuosity the four steeds of Alamvusha,17 Having then cut off the head of Alamvusha's charioteer, he severed from Alamvusha's trunk the latter's head, beautiful as the full moon and decked with excellent ear-rings, with a broad-headed arrow fierce as the Yuga fire.18 Having slain that descendant of many kings in battle, that bull among the Yadus, that here capable of grinding hostile hosts, proceeded towards Arjuna, O king, resisting as he went the enemy's troops.19 Indeed, O king, thus careering in the midst of the foe, the Vrishni hero, while proceeding in the wake (of Arjuna), was seen to repeatedly destroy with his shafts the Kuru host, like the hurricane dispersing gathering masses of clouds.20 Whithersoever that lion among men desired to go, thither he was borne by those excellent steeds of his, of the Sindhu breed, well-broken, docile, white as vaccine milk or the Kunda flower or the moon or the snow, and adorned with trappings of gold.21 Then, O thou of Ajamida's race, thy sons, uniting with other warriors of thy army, quickly rushed against Sātyaki, making that foremost of warriors, viz., Dusçāsana, their commander.22 Those leaders of divisions, encompassing the grandson of Cini on all sides in that battle, began to strike That foremost one among the Satwatas, that hero, viz., Sātyaki, also, resisted them all with showers of arrows.28 Quickly checking all of them by means of his fiery shafts, that slayer of foes, viz., the grandson of Cini, forcibly uplifting his bow, O Ajamida, slew the steeds of Dusçasana. Then Arjuna, and Krishna, beholding that foremost of men, (viz., Sātyaki) in that battle, became filled with joy."24

SECTION CXLI.

"Sanjaya said,—Then the great bowmen of the Trigarta country, owning standards decked with gold, encompassed on all sides the mighty-armed Satyaki, that warrior who accomplished with great activity everything that demanded accomplishment,

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:54 GMT / https://hdl.handlu Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitru: and who, having penetrated into that host unlimited as the sea, was rushing against Duscasana's car from desire of Dhananjaya's success.1-2 Checking his course with a large throng of cars on all sides, those great bowmen, excited with rage, covered him with showers of arrows.8 Having penetrated into the midst of the Bharata army which resembled a shoreless sea, and which, filled with the sound of palms, abounded with swords and darts and maces, Sātyaki, of prowess incapable of being baffled, alone vanquished his foes, those fifty (Trigarta) princes shining brilliantly in that battle.4-5 On that occasion we saw that the conduct of Cini's grandson in battle was extremely wonderful. So great was the lightness (of his movements) that having seen him on the west we immediately saw him in the east. North, South, East, West, in these, and the other subsidiary directions, that here seemed to career dancingly as if he constituted a hundred warriors in his single self. Beholding that conduct of Satyaki endued with the sportive tread of the lion, the Trigarta warriors, unable to bear his prowess, fled away towards (the divisions of) their own (countrymen).8 Then the brave warriors of the Curasenas endeavoured to check Sātyaki, striking him with showers of shafts like a guide striking an infuriate elephant with the hook. The high-souled Satyaki struggled with them for a short space of time, and then that hero of inconceivable prowess began to fight with the Transgressing that division of the Kalingas which was incapable of being crossed, the mighty-armed Satyaki approached the presence of Dhananjaya the son of Pritha." Like a tired swimmer in water when he reaches the land, Yuyudhana became comforted on obtaining the sight of Dhananjaya, that tiger among men.12 Beholding him approach, Keçava, addressing Partha, said,—Yonder cometh the grandson of Cini, O Partha, following in thy wake !18 O thou of prowess incapable of being baffled, he is thy disciple and friend! That bull among men, regarding all the warriors as straw, hath vanquished them." Inflicting terrible injuries upon the Kaurava warriors, Sātyaki, who is dear to thee as life, cometh towards thee, O Kiritin! Having with his shafts crushed Drona himself and Kritavarman of the Bhoja race, this Sātyaki cometh to thee, O Phālguna!15

Intent on Yudhishthira's good, having slain many foremost of warriors, the brave Sātyaki, skilled in weapons, is coming to thee, O Phalguna!17 Having achieved the most difficult feats in the midst of the (Kaurava) troops, the mighty Sātyaki, desirous of obtaining thy sight, cometh to thee, O son of Pandu!18 Having on a single car fought in battle with many mighty car-warriors with the preceptor (Drona) for their head, Sātyaki cometh to thee, O Pārtha!19 Despatched by Dharma's son, this Satyaki cometh to thee, O Partha, having pierced through the Kaurava army, relying on the might of his own Invincible in battle, that Satyaki, who hath no warrior amongst the Kauravas equal to him, is coming to thee, O son of Kunti !21 Having slain countless warriors, this Satyaki cometh to thee, O Partha, freed from amid the Kaurava troops like a lion from amid a herd of kine!22 Having strewn the Earth with the faces, beautiful as the lotus, of thousands of kings, this Sātyaki is coming to thee, O Pārtha !23 vanquished in battle Duryodhana himself with his brothers, and having slain Jalasandha, Sātyaki is coming quickly!24 Having caused a river of blood with blood for its mire, and regarding the Kauravas as straw, Sātyaki cometh towards thee !25—The son of Kunti, without being cheerful, said these words unto Keçava,—The arrival of Sātyaki, O mighty-armed one, is scarcely agreeable to me!26 I do not, O Keçava, know how king Yudhishthira the just is! Now that he is separated from Sātwata, I doubt whether he is alive !27 O mighty-armed one, this Satyaki should have protected the king! Why then, O Krishna, hath this one, leaving Yudhishthira, followed in my The king, therefore, hath been abandoned to Drona The ruler of the Sindhus hath not yet been slain. Bhuricravas is proceeding against Sātyaki in battle !29 heavier burthen hath been cast upon me on account of Jaya-I should know how the king is, and I should also protect Sātyaki !80 I should also slay Jayadratha! hangeth low. As regards the mighty-armed Sātyaki, he is tired; his weapons also have been exhausted. 31 His steeds. as also their driver, are tired, O Madhava! Bhuricravas, on the other hand, is not tired. He hath supporters behind him,

O Keçava!⁵² Will success be Sātyaki's in this encounter? Having crossed the very ocean, will Sātyaki of unbaffled prowess,⁵³ will that bull amongst the Cinis, of great energy, sucsumb, obtaining (before him) the vestige of a cow's foot?* Encountering that foremost one amongst the Kurus, viz., the high-souled Bhuriçravas skilled in weapons, will Sātyaki have good fortune? I regard this, O Keçava, to have been an error of judgment on the part of king Yudhishthira the just!⁵⁴⁻⁵⁵ Casting off all fear of the preceptor, he hath despatched Sātyaki (from away his side)! Like a sky-ranging hawk after a piece of meat, Drona always endeavoureth after the seizure of king Yudhishthira the just! Will the king be free from all danger?' "34

SECTION CXLII.

"Sanjaya said,—'Beholding Sātwata, invincible in battle, coming (towards Arjuna), Bhuricravas, in rage, O king, suddenly advanced towards him. He of Kuru's race then, O king, addressing that bull of Cini's race, said,—By good luck it is that thou hast today come within the range of my vision! Today, in this battle, I obtain the wish I had always cherish-If thou dost not fly away from battle, thou wilt not escape me with life !3 Slaying thee today in fight, thee that art ever proud of thy heroism, I will, O thou of Daçarha's race, gladden the Kuru king Suyodhana! Those heroes, viz., Keçava and Arjuna, will today together behold thee lying on the field of battle, scorched with my arrows! Hearing that thou hast been slain by me, the royal son of Dharma, who caused thee to penetrate into this host, will today be covered with shame ! Pritha's son Dhananjaya will today behold my prowess when he sees thee slain and lying on the Earth, covered with gore! This encounter with thee hath always been desired by me, like the encounter of Cakra with Vali in the battle between the gods and the Asuras in days of old! Today I will give thee dreadful battle, O Satwata! Thou shalt thence truly understand (the measure of) my energy, might, and manliness! Slain by me in battle, thou shalt today proceed to the abode of Yama like Ravana's son (Indrajit) slain by Lakshmana the younger brother of Rama!10 day Krishna and Partha and king Yudhishthira the just, O thou of Madhu's race, witnessing thy slaughter, will, without doubt, be overcome with despondence and give up battle!12 Causing thy Death today, O Madhava, with keen shafts, I will gladden the wives of all those that have been slain by thee in Having come within the scope of my vision, thou battle !13 shalt not escape, like a small deer from within the range of a lion's vision !18—Hearing these words of his, Yuyudhāna, O king, answered him with a laugh, saying,—O thou of Kuru's race, I am never inspired with fear in battle !14 Thou shalt not succeed in terrifying me with thy words only! slay me in battle who will succeed in disarming me !15 will slay me in battle will slay (foes) for all time to come!* What is the use of such idle and long-winded boast in words? Accomplish in deeds what thou sayest !16 Thy words seem to be as fruitless as the roar of autumn clouds! Hearing, O hero, these roars of thine, I cannot restrain my laughter!" Let that encounter, O thou of Kuru's race, which has been desired by thee so long, take place today! My heart, O sire, inspired as it is with the desire of an encounter with thee, cannot brook any delay !18 Without slaying thee, I shall not abstain from the fight, O wretch!-Rebuking each other in such words, those two bulls among men, both excited with great wrath, struck each other in battle, each being desirous of taking the other's life. Those great bowmen, both endued with great might, encountered each other in battle, each challenging the other, two wrathful elephants in rut for the sake of a she-elephant in her season. And those two chastisers of foes, viz., Bhuricravas and Sātyaki, poured upon each other dense showers of arrows like two masses of clouds. Then Somadatta's son, having shrouded the grandson of Cini

^{*} I. c., the little indent caused by a cow's hoof .- T.

^{*} The sense is that he that will slay me will always be victorious in battle, will always slay the warriors with whom he may engage in battle. Defeat will never be his .- T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:54 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

with swiftly-coursing shafts, so once more pierced the latter, O chief of the Bharatas, with many keen shafts, from desire of slaying him. Having pierced Satyaki with ten shafts, Somadatta's son sped many other keen shafts at that bull amongst the Cinis, from desire of compassing his destruction. however, O lord, cut off, with the power of his weapons, all those keen shafts of Bhuricravas, O king, in the welkin, before, in fact, any of them could reach him. Those two heroes, those two warriors that enhanced the fame of the Kurus and the Vrishnis respectively, both of noble lineage, thus poured upon each other their arrowy showers. Like two tigers fighting with their claws or two huge elephants with their tusks,28-26 they mangled each other with shafts and darts such as car-warriers Mangling each other's limbs, and with blood issuing out of their wounds,27 those two warriors, engaged in a gamb!ing match in which their lives were at the stake, checked and confounded each other. Those heroes of excellent feats, those enhancers of the fame of the Kurus and the Vrishnis,28 thus fought with each other like two leaders of elephantine herds. Indeed, those two warriors, both coveting the highest region, both cherishing the desire of very soon attaining the region of Brahman, thus roared at each other. Indeed, Satyaki and Somadatta's son continued to cover each other with their arrowyshowers in the sight of the Dhartarashtras filled with joy. And the people there witnessed that encounter between those two foremost of warriors 9-81 who were fighting like two leaders of elephantine herds for the sake of a she-elephant in her Then each slaying the other's steeds and cutting off: the other's bow,32 those car-less combatants encountered each other with swords in dreadful fight. Taking up two beautiful and large and bright shields made of bull's hide, 88 and two naked swords, they careered on the field. circles and diverse other kinds of courses duly,54 those grinders of foes, excited with rage, frequently struck each Armed with swords, clad in bright armour, decked with curass and Angadas,36 those two famous warriors showed diverse kinds They wheeled about, and whirled about on high, and made side-thrusts, and jumped forward, and leapt high,

Generated on 2022-03-03-12:54 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized ,

and ran above, and rushed forward, and rushed upwards. 86 And those chastisers of foes began to strike each other with And each of them looked eagerly for the laches And both those heroes leapt beautifully 17 and of the other. both showed their training, lightness of motion, and skill. those foremost of warriors, in that battle, began also to make skillful passes at each other. 88 And having struck each other, O king, those heroes took rest for a moment in the sight of all the troops. 89 Having with their swords cut into pieces each other's beautiful shield, O king, decked with a hundred moons, those tigers among men, engaged in a wre-tling encounter.40 Both having broad chests, both having long arms, both wellskilled in wrestling, they encountered each other with their arms of iron that resembled spiked maces,41 And they struck each other with their arms, and seized each other's arms, and each seized with his arms the other's neck. And the skill they had acquired by exercise contributed to the joy of all the warriors that stood as spectators of that encounter.42 And as those heroes fought with each other, O king, in that battle, loud and terrible were the sounds produced by them resembling the fall of the thunder upon the mountain breast.48 Like two elephants encountering each other with the ends of their tusks or like two bulls with their horns, those two illustrious and foremost warriors of the Kuru and the Satwata races, fought with each other, sometimes binding each other with their arms, sometimes striking each other with their heads, sometimes intertwining each other's legs, sometimes slapping their armpits, sometimes pinching each other with their nails, sometimes clasping each other tightly, sometimes twining their legs round each other's loins, sometimes rolling on the ground, sometimes advancing, sometimes receding, sometimes challenging each other, sometimes throwing each other down, sometimes rising up, and sometimes leaping up.44-46 Indeed, those two mighty combatants showed in that encounter, O Bharata, all the two and thirty kinds of separate manœuvres and acts that characterise encounters of that kind.47

"'When Sātwata's weapons were exhausted during his engagement with Bhuricrayas, Vāsudeva said unto Arjuna,—Be-

Generated on 2022-03-03-12:54 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized ,

hold that foremost of all bowmen, vie., Satyaki, engaged in battle, deprived of car !48 He hath entered the Bharata host, having pierced through it, following in thy wake, O son of He hath fought with all the Bharata warriors of great The giver of large sacrificial presents, viz., Bhuricravas, hath encountered that foremost of warriors while tired with fatigue. Desirous of battle, Bhuricravas is about to encounter the advancing Bhima. It will, O Arjuna, be a very unequal encounter !50-Then that warrior invincible in battle, viz, Bhuricravas, excited with wrath, vigorously struck Satyaki, O king, like an infuriate elephant striking an infuriate compeer. 12 Those two foremost of warriors, both upon their cars and both excited with wrath, fought on, O king, Keçava and Arjuna witnessing their encounter.52 Then the mighty-armed Krishna, addressing Arjuna, said,—Behold, that tiger among the Vrishnis and the Andhakas has succumbed to Somadatta's son !66 Having achieved the most difficult feats, exhausted with exertion, he hath been deprived of his car! O Arjuna, protect Sātyaki, thy heroic disciple !54 See that that foremost of men may not, for thy sake, O tiger among men, succumb to Bhuricravas devoted to sacrifices! O puissant one, speedily do what is needed! 55 - Dhananjaya, with a cheerful heart, addressing Vasudeva, said,—Behold, that bull amongst the Kurus and that foremost one among the Vrishnis are sporting with each other,56 like a huge elephant mad with rage sporting with a mighty lion in the forest !- While Dhananjaya the son of Pandu was thus speaking, 57 loud cries of oh and alas arose among the troops, O bull of Bharata's race, since the mighty-armed Bhuricravas, exerting vigorously, struck Satyaki and brought him down upon the ground.58 And like a lion dragging an elephant, that foremost one of Kuru's race, viz., Buricravas, that giver of profuse presents at sacrifices, dragging that foremost one amongst the Sātwatas, looked resplendent in that battle.50 Then Bhuricravas, in that encounter, drawing his sword from the scabbard, seized Sātyaki by the hair of his head and struck him at the chest with his feet. 60 Bhuricravas then was about to cut off from Sātyaki's trunk his head decked with ear-rings. For sometime the Sātwata hero rapidly whirled his head to with the arm of Bhuricravas that held it by the hair, like a potter's wheel whirled round with the staff.62 Beholding Satwata thus dragged in battle by Bhuricravas, Vasudeva once more, O king, addressed Arjuna and said,63-Behold, that tiger among the Vrishnis and the Andhakas, that disciple of thine, O mightyarmed one, not inferior to thee in bowmanship, hath succumbed to Somadatta's son!64 O Partha, since Bhuricravas is thus prevailing over the Vrishni hero Satyaki of prowess incapable of being baffled, the very name of the latter is about to be falsified !65 * Thus addressed by Vasudeva, the mighty-armed son of Pandu mentally worshipped Bhuricravas in that battle,66 saying,—I am glad that Bhuricravas, that enhancer of the fame of the Kurus, is dragging Sātyaki in battle, as if in Without slaying Satyaki, that foremost one among the heroes of the Vrishni race, the Kuru warrior is only dragging him like a mighty lion in the forest dragging a huge elephant !68-Mentally applauding the Kuru warrior thus, O king, the mighty-armed Arjuna the son of Pritha, replied unto Vāsudeva, saying, 69—My eyes having rested upon the ruler of the Sindhus, I could not, O Mādhava, see Sātyaki! I shall, however, for the sake of that Yadava warrior, achieve a most difficult feat! 70 -- Having said these words, in obedience to Vasudeva, the son of Pandu fixed on Gandiva a sharp razor-headed That arrow, shot by Partha's hands and resembling a dazzling meteor flashing down from the firmament, cut off the Kuru warrior's arm with the sword in its grasp and decked with Angada.' "72

SECTION CXLIII.

"Sanjaya said,—'That arm (of Bhuricravas) decked with Angada and holding the sword in its grasp, (thus cut off), fell down on the Earth to the great grief of all living creatures."

^{*} I do not render 65 literally. Sätyaki is called "Satyavikrama," i., e., of "true prowess" or "of prowess incapable of being baffled." If he sustains a defeat today at Bhurigravas's hands, that title of his will be falsified. This is all that Krishna means.—T.

http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-googl Generated on 2022-02-03 12:54 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized , Indeed, that arm, which was to have cut off Satyaki's head, itself cut off by the unseen Arjuna, quickly dropped down on the Earth like a snake of five heads.2 The Kuru warrior, beholding himself incapacitated by Partha, abandoned his hold on Sātyaki and wrathfully reproved the son of Pāndu.3

"'Bhuricravas said,-Thou hast, O son of Kunti, done a cruel and heartless deed, since without being engaged with me, thou hast, unseen by me, cut off my arm! Shalt thou not have to say unto Yudhishthira, the royal son of Dharma, even this, viz., Bhuricravas, while otherwise engaged, was slain by me in battle? - Wert thou taught this use of weapons by the high-souled Indra, or by Rudra, O Partha, or by Drona, Thou art, in this world, better acquainted with or by Kripa!6 the rules about the use of weapons than all others! hast thou cut off in battle the arm of a warrior who was not engaged with thee? The righteous never strike him that is heedless or him that is terrified, or him that is made carless, or him that beggeth for life or protection, or him that hath fallen into distress !8 Why then, O Partha, hast thou perpetrated such an extremely unworthy deed that is sinful, that is worthy only of a low wretch, and that is practised by only a wicked wight!9 A respectable person, O Dhananjaya, can easily accomplish a deed that is respectable. A deed, however, that is disrespectable becomes difficult of accomplishment by a person that is respectable.10 A man quickly catches the behaviour of those with whom and amongst whom he moves. seen in thee, O Partha!11 Being of royal lineage and born, especially, in Kuru's race, how hast thou fallen off from the duties of a Kshatriya, although thou wert of good behaviour and observant of excellent vows !12 This mean act that thou hast perpetrated for the sake of the Vrishni warrior, is, without doubt, conformable to Vasudeva's counsels! Such an act does not suit one like thee !18 Who else, unless he were a friend of Krishna's, would inflict such a wrong upon one that is heedlessly engaged with another in battle?14 Vrishnis and the Andhakas are bad Kshatriyas, ever engaged in sinful deeds, and are, by nature, addicted to censurable Why, O Partha, hast thou taken them for thy behaviour.

model ?- Thus addressed in battle, Partha replied unto Bhuricravas, saying,*15-It is evident that with the decrepitude of the body one's intellect also becomes decrepit, since, O lord, all these senseless words have been uttered by thee !16 Although thou knowest Hrishikeça and myself well, how is it that thou rebukest us thus? Knowing as I do the rules of battles and conversant as I am with the meaning of all the scriptures,17 I would never do an act that is sinful! Knowing this well, thou rebukest me yet! The Kshatriyas battle with their foes, surrounded by their own followers,18 their brothers, sires, sons, relatives, kinsmen, companions, and friends. These also fight, relying on the (strength of) arms of those they follow.19 then should I not protect Sātyaki, my disciple and dear kinsman, who is fighting for our sake in this battle, regardless of life itself that is so difficult of being laid down. +20 in fight, Sātyaki, O king, is my right arm in battle. should not protect his own self only, when he goes to battle.21 He, O king, who is engaged in the business of another, should be protected (by that other). Such men being protected, the king is protected in press of battle.28 If I had calmly beheld Satyaki on the point of being slain in great battle (and had not interfered for saving him), sin would then, owing to Sātyaki's death, have been mine for such negligence !23 Why then dost thou became angry with me for my having protected Sātyaki? Thou rebukest me, O king, saying.—Though engaged with another, I have yet been maimed by thee !- In that matter, I answer, I judged wrongly. Sometimes shaking my armour, sometimes riding on my car, sometimes drawing the bowstring, I was fighting with my enemies in the midst of a host resem-

^{*} This is, as printed in the Bengal texts, a triplet. Bad Kshatri-triyas, original—Vrātyās. A Brāhmana or a Kshatriya or a Vaiçya becomes a Vrātyas when the usual scriptural rites are not performed in proper time in respect of his person. He becomes, what is called, a fallen person.—T.

[†] Verse 20 is incomplete. I supply the words,—"Why then should I not protect" in order to make the meaning intelligible. The first line of 21 is grammutically connected with 20. To avoid an ugly construction I render it separately.—T.

bling the vasty deep, teeming with cars and elephants and abounding with steeds and foot-soldiers and echoing with herce leonine shouts. Amongst friends and foes engaged with one another, how could it be possible that the Sātwata warrior was engaged with only one person in battle? Having fought with many, and vanquished many mighty car-warriors, 34-28 Sātyaki His animals also had been tired. He himself, had been tired. afflicted with weapons, had become cheerless. Having, under such circumstances, vanquished the mighty car-warrior Satyaki,29 and brought him under thy control, thou soughtest to display thy superiority! Thou hadst desired to cut off, with thy sword, the head of Sātyaki in battle! I could not possibly behold with indifference Sātyaki reduced to that strait!* shouldst rather rebuke thy own self since thou didst not take care of thyself (when seeking to injure another)! Indeed, O hero, how wouldst thou have behaved towards one who is thy dependant?'-"

"Sanjaya continued,—'Thus addressed (by Arjuna), the mighty-armed and illustrious Bhuricravas bearing the device of the sacrificial stake on his banner, abandoning Yuyudhana, desired to die according to the vow of Prāya. +12 Distinguished by many righteous deeds, he spread with his left hand a bed of arrows, and desirous of proceeding to the region of Brahman, committed his senses to the care of the deities presiding over them. 88 Fixing his gaze on the Sun, and setting his cleansed heart on the Moon, and thinking of (the mantras in) the great Upanishad, Bhuricravas, betaking himself to Yoga, ceased to speak.34 Then all the persons in the entire army began to speak ill of Krishna and Dhananjaya and applaud Bhuricravas, that bull among men. Though censured, the two Krishnas, however, spoke not a word disagreeable (to the The stake-bannered Bhuricravas also, though dying hero). thus applauded, felt no joy. 36 Then Pandu's son Dhananjaya, ^{*} Literally, "who could witness with indifference Satyaki reduced to that plight?"-T.

^{*} Generally, to die, abstaining from all food. It is a method of freeing the soul from the body by Yoga.—T.

called also Phalguna, incapable of bearing thy sons speaking in that strain as also of putting up with their words and the words of Bhuricravas, O Bharata, in grief and without an angry heart, and as if for reminding them all, said these words, 57-58-All the kings are acquainted with this my great vow, viz., that no one shall succeed in slaying anybody that belongs to our side, as long as the latter is within the range of my shafts!" Remembering this, O stake-bannered one, it Without knowing what is behoveth thee not to censure me! morality, it is not proper for one to censure others.40 have cut off thy arm while thou, well-armed in battle, wert on the point of slaving (the unarmed) Satyaki, is not at all contrary to morality !41 But what righteous man is there, O sire, that would applaud the slaughter of Abhimanyu, a mere child, without arms, deprived of car, and his armour fallen off? 42—Thus addressed by Partha, Bhuricravas touched the ground with his head and offered with his left arm the right one (that had been lopped off).48 The stake-bannered Bhuricravas, O king, of dazzling effulgence, having heard those words of Partha, remained silent, with his head hanging down.44 Then Arjuna said,—O eldest brother of Cala, equal to what I bear to king Yudhishthira the just, or Bhima, that foremost of all mighty persons, or Nakula, or Sahadeva, is the love I bear to Commanded by me as also by the illustrious Krishna, repair thou to the regions of the righteous, even where Civi the son of Uçinara is !- 46

"'Vāsudeva also said,-Thou hast constantly performed sacrifices and Agnihotras! Go thou then, without delay, into those pure regions of mine that incessantly blaze forth with splendour and that are desired by the foremost of deities with Brahman as their head, and becoming equal to myself, be thou borne on the back of Garuda !- '47

"Sanjaya continued,-'Set free by Somadatta's son, the grandson of Cini, rising up, drew his sword and desired to cut off the head of the high-souled Bhuricravas.48 Indeed, Satyaki desired to slay the sinless Bhuricravas, the eldest brother of Cala, that giver of profuse presents in sacrifices, who was staying with his senses withdrawn from battle, who had already been almost slain by the son of Pandu,49 who was sitting with his arm lopped off, and who resembled on that account a trunkless elephant. All the warriors loudly censured him (for his But deprived of reason, so and forbidden by Krishna and the high-souled Partha, and Bhima, and the two protectors of the two wheels (of Arjuna's car, viz., Yudhamanyu and Uttamaujas), and Acwatthaman, and Kripa, 51 and Karna, and Vrishasena, and the ruler of the Sindhus also, and while the soldiers were yet uttering shouts of disapproval, Sātyaki slew Bhuricravas while in the observance of his vow.52 Satyaki, with his sword, cut off the head of the Kuru warrior who had been deprived of his arm by Partha and who was then sitting in Prāya for freeing his soul from the body.53 The warriors did not applaud Sātyaki for that act of his in slaying that perpetuator of Kuru's race who had before been almost slain by The Siddhas, the Chāranas, and the men, there present, as also the gods, beholding the Cakra-like Bhuricravas slain in that battle though sitting in the observance of the Praya vow, began to applaud him, amazed at the acts accomplished by him. Thy soldiers also argued the matter, saying. 55-56 -It is no fault of the Vrishni hero. That which was pre-ordained has happened. Therefore, we should not give way to wrath. Wrath is the cause of men's sorrow. 57 It was ordained that Bhuricavas would be slain by the Vrishni hero. There is no use of judging of its propriety or otherwise. The Creator had ordained Sātyaki to be the cause of Bhuricravas's death in battle! 8-

"'Sātyaki said,—Ye sinful Kauravas, wearing the outward garments of righteousness, ye tell me, in words of virtue, that Bhuriçravas should not be slain! "Where, however, did this righteousness of yours go when ye slew in battle that child, viz., the son of Subhadrā, while destitute of arms? I had, in a certain fit of haughtiness vowed that he who would, throwing me down alive in battle, strike me with his foot in rage, he would be slain by me even though that foe should adopt the vow of asceticism! Struggling in the encounter, with my arms and eyes whole and sound, 2 ye had yet regarded me as dead! This was an act of folly on your part! Ye bulls among the Kurus, the slaughter of Bhuriçravas, accomplished by me,

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:54 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized ,

hath been very proper!68 Partha, however, by cutting off this one's arm with sword in grasp for fulfilling, from his affection for me, his own vow (about protecting all on his side), hath simply robbed me of glory!44 That which is ordained must happen. It is destiny that works! Bhuricravas hath been slain in press of battle! What sin have I perpetrated?64 In days of yore Valmiki sang this verse on Earth, viz.,—Thou sayest, O ape, that women should not be slain!66 In all ages, however, men should always, with resolute care, accomplish that which gives pain to enemies !- "67

"Sanjaya continued,—'After Sātyaki had said these words, none amongst the Pandavas and the Kauravas, Oking, said anything. On the other hand, they mentally applauded Bhuri-No one there applauded the slaughter of Somadatta's illustrious son who resembled an ascetic living in the woods or one sanctified with mantras in a great sacrifice, and who had given away thousands of golden coins.69 The head of that hero. graced with beautiful blue locks and eyes red as those of pigeons, looked like the head of a horse cut off in a horse-sacrifice and placed on the sacrificial altar.*70 Sanctified by his prowess and the death he obtained at the edge of the weapon, the boongiving Bhuricravas, worthy of every boon, casting off his body in great battle, repaired to regions on high, filling the welkin with his high virtues." "71

SECTION CXLIV.

"Dhritarāshtra said,—'Unvanguished by Drona and Rādhā's son and Vikarna and Kritavarman, how could the heroic Satyaki, never before checked in battle, having after his promise to Yudhishthira crossed the ocean of the Kaurava troops, be humiliated by the Kuru warrior Bhuricravas and forcibly thrown down on the ground ?"1-2

"Sanjaya said,-'Hear, O king, about the origin, in past times, of Cini's grandson, and of how Bhuricravas also came This will explain thy doubts.3 to be descended. Atri had for ^{*} Literally, "near the place assigned for the sacrificial butter."-T.

http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google Generated on 2022-03-03-12:54 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized

Soma's son was called Vudha. Vudha had one son, of the splendour of the great Indra, called Pururavas. Ayush had for son Nahu-Pururavas had a son called Ayush. Yayati who was a royal sha. Nahusha had for his son sage equal to a celestial. Yayati had by Devayani Yadu for his eldest son. In Yadu's race was born a son of the name of Devamida.6 Devamida of Yadu's race had a son named Cura applauded in the three worlds. Cura had for his son that foremost of men, viz., the celebrated Vasudeva.7 Foremost in bowmanship, Cura was equal to Kartaviryya in In Cura's race and equal unto Cura in energy was born Cini, O king!8 About this time, O king, happened the self-choice of the high-souled Devaka's daughter, in which all the Kshatriyas were present.9 In that self-choice, Cini, vanquishing all the kings, quickly took up on his car the princess Devaki for the sake of Vasudeva.10 Beholding the princess Devaki on Cini's car, that bull among men, viz., the brave Somadatta of mighty energy could not brook the sight.11 battle, O king, ensued between the two which lasted for half a day and was beautiful and wonderful to behold. that took place between those two mighty men was a wrestling That bull among men,12 viz., Somadatta, was encounter. forcibly thrown down on the Earth by Cini. Uplifting his sword and seizing him by the hair, Cini struck his foe with his foot,18 in the midst of many thousands of kings who stood as spectators all around. At last from compassion he let him off, saying,-Live !14-Reduced to that plight by Cini, Somadatta, O sire, under the influence of wrath, began to pay his adorations to Mahadeva for inclining him to grace.16 That great lord of all boon-giving deities, viz., Mahadeva, became gratified with him and asked him to solicit the boon he desired. royal Somadatta then solicited the following boon, viz.,"-I desire a son, O divine lord, who will strike Cini's son in the midst of thousands of kings and who will in battle strike him with his foot !17—Hearing these words, O king, of Samadatta, the god saying,—So be it—disappeared then and there.18 was in consequence of the gift of that boon that Somadatta subsequently obtained the highly charitable Bhuricravas for son, and it was for this, Somadatta's son threw down Cini's descendant in battle,19 and struck him, before the eyes of the whole army, with his foot. I have now told thee, O king, what thou hadst asked me.20 Indeed, the Satwata hero is incapable of being vanquished in battle by even foremost of men. Vrishni heroes are all of sure aim in battle, and are conversant with all modes of warfare.21 They are vanquishers of the very gods, the Danavas, and the Gandharvas. They are never confounded. They always fight, relying upon their own energy. They are never dependent on others. None, O lord, are seen in this world to be equal to the Vrishnis! None, O bull of Bharata's race, have been, are, or will be, equal in might to the Vrishnis.33 They never show disrespect to their kinsmen. They are always obedient to the commands of those that are reverend in years. The very gods and Asuras and Gandharvas, the Yakshas, the Uragas, and the Rakshasas cannot et vanquish the Vrishni heroes, what need be said of men, therefore, They never covet the possessions of Brahmanas or in battle? their preceptors or their kinsmen.26 They never covet also the possessions of those that ever render them aid on any occasion Devoted to the Brahmanas and truthful in speech, they never display any pride although they are wealthy.26 Even the strong the Vrishnis regard as weak and rescue them from Always devoted to the gods, the Vrishnis are self-restrained, charitable, and free from pride.27 It is for this that the prowess* of the Vrishnis is never baffled. A person may remove the mountains of Meru, or swim across the very ocean.28 no one can, O king, encountering the Vrishnis, prevail over them. I have now told thee everything about which thou hadst thy doubts, O lord! All this, however, O king of the Kurus, that is happening, is due to thy evil policy, O best of men!"23

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:54 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized ,

SECTION CXLV.

"Dhritarashtra said,—'After the Kuru warrior Bhuricravas had been slain under those circumstances, tell me, O Sanjaya, how proceeded the battle !"

56

Nilakantha explains chakram as pratapam. - T.

http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google Generated on 2022-02-03 12:54 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:54 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112
Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access_use#pd-google

taining what is practicable and what impracticable, made this vow in battle, was aflicted by destiny itself, his judgment having taken a misdirected course !17 Without doubt, O Karna, the diadem-decked son of Pandu must have made this vow about the slaughter of Jayadratha for his own destruction!'s How, O son of Rādhā, when thou art alive, will Phālguna succeed in slaying the ruler of the Sindhus before the Sun goes to the Asta hills ?19 How will Dhananjaya slay Jayadratha in battle when the latter is protected by the king of the Madras, and by the illustrious Kripa?20 How will Vibhatsu, who it seems hath been urged on by Fate, get at the ruler of the Sindhus when the latter is protected by Drona's son, by myself, and by Dusçāsana?21 Many are the heroes engaged in fight. The Sun is hanging low in the sky. Partha will not even get at Jayadratha in battle, O giver of honors!22 Do thou, therefore, O Karna, with myself and other brave and mighty car-warriors, with Drona's son and the ruler of the Madras and Kripa,28 fight with Partha in battle, exerting thyself with the greatest firmness and resolution !- Thus addressed by thy son, O sire, the son of Rādhā24 replied unto Duryodhana, that foremost one among the Kurus, in these words :- Deeply hath my body been pierced in battle by the brave bowman Bhimasena, capable of striking vigorously, with repeated showers of O giver of honors, that I am yet present in battle is because that one like me should be present here !25-26 with the powerful shafts of Bhimasena, every limb of mine is I shall, however, for all that, fight to the suffering tortures. best of my powers. My life itself is for thee !27 I shall strive my best so that this foremost one of the sons of Pandu may not succeed in slaying the ruler of the Sindhus. As long as I shall fight, shooting my whetted shafts,28 the heroic Dhananjaya capable of drawing the bow with even his left hand will not succeed in getting at the ruler of the Sindhus! a person bearing love and affection to thee and always solicitous of thy good may do,23 shall be done by me, O thou of Kuru's As regards victory, that depends on destiny! I shall in battle today exert myself to my utmost for the sake of the ruler of the Sindhus, so and for achieving thy good, O king!

Victory, however, is dependent on destiny! Relying on my manliness. I shall fight with Arjuna today 11 for thy sake, O tiger among men! Victory, however, is dependent on destiny! O chief of the Kurus, let all the troops behold today the fierce battle, making the very hair to stand on end, that takes place between myself and Arjuna !- While Karna and the Kuru king were thus talking to each other in battle, \$2-88 Arjuna began, with his keen arrows, to slaughter thy host. With his broad-headed arrows of great sharpness, he began to cut off in that battle the arms, looking like spiked clubs or the trunks of elephants, of unreturning heroes. And the mighty-armed hero also cut off their heads with whetted shafts. 84-25 Vibhatsu also cut off the trunks of elephants and the necks of steeds and the Akshus of cars all around, as also blood-dved horsemen armed with spears and lances, with razor-faced arrows, into two or three fragments. And steeds and foremost of elephants 86-87 and standards and umbrellas and bows and vaktails and heads fell fast on all sides. Consuming thy host like a blazing fire consuming a heap of dry grass, 58 Partha soon caused the Earth to be covered with blood. And the mighty and invincible Partha, of prowess incapable of being baffled, http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google causing an immense slaughter in that army of thine, soon reached the ruler of the Sindhus. Protected by Bhimasena and by Satwata, Vibhatsu, 20-40 O chief of the Bharatas, looked resplendent like a blazing fire. Beholding Phalguna in that state, the mighty bowmen of thy army, those bulls among men, endued with wealth of energy, could not brook him. Then Duryodhana and Karna and Vrishasena and the ruler of the Madras, 41-42 and Acwatthaman and Kripa and the ruler of the Sindhus himself, excited with wrath and fighting for the sake of the Sindhu king, encompassed the diadem-decked Arjuna on all sides. All those warriors, skilled in battle, placing the ruler of the Sindhus at their back, and desirous of slaying Arjuna and Krishna, fearlessly surrounded Partha, that Generated on 2022-02-03 12:54 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized / hero conversant with battle, who was then dancing along the track of his car, producing fierce sounds with the bowstring and his palms, and resembling the Destroyer himself with wide-open mouth.44-46 The Sun then had assumed a red hue in the sky. Desirous of his (speedy) setting, the Kaurava warriors, bending their bows with arms resembling the (tapering) bodies of snakes,46 sped their shafts in hundreds, towards Phālguna, resembling the rays of the Sun. Cutting off all those shafts thus sped towards him, into two, three, or eight fragments, the diadem-decked Arjuna, invincible in battle, pierced them all in that encounter. Then Acwatthaman, bearing on his banner the mark of the lion's tail, displaying his might,47-48 began, O king, to resist Arjuna. Indeed, the son of Caradwat's daughter, piercing Partha with ten shafts and Vasudeva with seven,49 stayed in the track of Arjuna's car, protecting the ruler of Then many foremost ones among the Kurus, the Sindhus. great car-warriors all, encompassed Arjuna on all sides with a Stretching their bows and shooting large throng of cars. countless shafts, 50-51 they began to protect the ruler of the Sindhus, at the command of thy son. We then beheld the might of arms of the brave Partha,52 as also the inexhaustible character of his shafts, and the power, too, of his bow $G\bar{a}n$ -Baffling with his own weapons these of Drona's son and Kripa,58 he pierced every one of those warriors with nine Then Drona's son pierced him with five and twenty arrows, and Vrishasena with seven;54 and Duryodhana pierced him with twenty, and Karna and Calwa each with three. all of them roared at him and continued to pierce him frequently.55 And shaking their bows, they surrounded him on all sides. And soon they caused their cars to be drawn up in a serried line around Arjuna.56 Desirous of the (speedy) setting of the Sun, those mighty car-warriors of the Kaurava army, endued with great activity, began to roar at Arjuna, and shaking their bows, 57 covered him with showers of keen arrows Those brave warlike clouds pouring rain on a mountain. riors, with arms resembling heavy clubs, also displayed on that occasion, O king, on Dhananjaya's body their celestial weapons. Having caused an immense slaughter in thy army, the mighty, 58-59 and invincible Dhananjaya, of prowess incapable of being baffled, came upon the ruler of the Sindhus. however, O king, with his arrows, resisted him in that battle, 60 in the very sight, O Bharata, of Bhimasena and Satwata.

arrows. 61-62

Then Satwata, O sire, pierced Karna with three

And Bhimasena pierced him with three arrows, mighty-armed Partha, in the very sight of all the troops, pierced the Suta's son, in return, with ten arrows, on the field and Partha himself, once more, with seven. The mighty carwarrior Karna then pierced each of those three warriors with sixty arrows.68 And thus, O king, raged that battle between Karna alone (on one side) and the many (on the other). prowess, O sire, that we then beheld of the Suta's son was wonderful in the extreme, 64 since, excited with wrath in battle, he singly resisted those three great car-warriors. Then the mighty-armed Phalguna, in that battle, pierced Karna the son of Vikartana, in all his limbs, with a hundred arrows. All his limbs bathed in blood, the Sutu's son of great prowess 65-66 and bravery pierced Phalguna in return with fifty arrows. Beholding that lightness of hand displayed by him in battle, Arjuna brooked it not.67 Cutting off his bow, that hero, viz., Dhananjaya the son of Pritha, quickly pierced Karna in the centre of the chest with nine arrows. Then Dhananjaya, with great speed at a time when speed was necessary, shot in that battle a shaft of solar effulgence for the destruction of http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-googl Drona's son, however, with a crescent-shaped arrow, cut off that shaft as it coursed impetuously (towards Karna). Thus cut off by Acwatthaman, that shaft fell down on the Earth. 7º Endued with great prowess, the Suta's son then, taking up another bow, covered the son of Pandu with several thousands of arrows.71 Partha, however, like the wind dispersing a flight of locusts, dispelled with his own arrows that extraordinary shower of arrows issuing out of Karna's bow.72 Then Arjuna, displaying his lightness of hands, covered Karna, in that battle, with his arrows, in the very sight of all the Karna also, that slayer of hosts, desirous of counteracting Arjuna's feat, covered Arjuna with several thousands of arrows.74 Roaring at each other like two bulls, those lions Generated on 2022-02-03 12:54 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized , among men, those mighty car-warriors, shrouded the welkin with clouds of straight shafts.75 Each rendered invisible by the other's arrowy showers, they continued to strike each other. And they roared at each other and pierced each other with their wordy darts, saying,—I am Pārtha, wait!—or I am Karna, wait, O Phālguna!—Indeed, those two heroes fought with each other beautifully, displaying great activity and skill. 76-77 And the sight they presented was such that all the warriors became witnesses of that battle. And applauded by Siddhas, Chāranas, and Pannagas,78 they fought with each other, O king, each desirous of slaying the other. Then Duryodhana, O king, addressing thy warriors, said,79-Carefully protect the son of Rādhā! Without slaying Arjuna he would not abstain from battle! Even this is what Vrisha told me! 80-Meanwhile, O monarch, beholding the prowess of Karna, Arjuna of white steeds, with four shafts shot from the bowstring drawn to the ear, despatched the four steeds of Karna to Yama's domains. And he also felled, with a broad-headed arrow, Karna's charioteer from his niche in the car. 81-82 covered Karna himself with clouds of shafts in the very sight of thy son. Thus shrouded with arrows, the steedless and driverless Karna,88 stupefied by that arrowy shower, knew not Beholding him made carless, Açwatthaman, O what to do. king, caused him to ride on his car, and continued to fight with Arjuna. Then the ruler of the Madras pierced the son of Kunti with thirty arrows.84-85 Caradwat's son pierced Vāsudeva with twenty arrows. And he struck Dhananjaya also with a dozen shafts.86 And the ruler of the Sindhus pierced Krishna and Partha each with four arrows, and Vrishasena also pierced each of them, O king, with seven arrows.87 ti's son Dhananjaya pierced all of them in return. piercing Drona's son with four and sixty shafts, and the ruler of the Madras with a hundred,89 and the Sindhu king with ten broad headed arrows, and Vrishasena with three arrows, and Caradwat's son with twenty, Partha uttered a loud shout.39 Desirous of baffling the vow of Savyasachin, thy warriors, excited with wrath, quickly rushed at Dhananjaya from all sides. Then Arjuna, frightening the Dhartarashtras, invoked into existence the Vāruna weapon on all sides. The Kauravas, however, on their costly cars, pouring showers of arrows, advanced against the son of Pandu. 91 But, O Bharata, in course of that stupefying and fierce engagement fraught with the greatest confusion, that prince, viz., Arjuna, decked with diadem and garland of gold, never lost his senses. On the other hand, he continued to pour showers of arrows." Desirous of recovering the kingdom and recollecting all the wrongs he had suffered for twelve years in consequence of the Kurus, the highsouled and immeasurable Arjuna darkened all the points of the compass with shafts shot from Gandiva.98 The welkin seemed Innumerable crows, alighting from the ablaze with metors. skies, perched on the bodies (of dead combatants). Ariuna continued to slay the foe with his Gandiva like Mahadeva slaying the Asuras with his Pināka equipt with tawny string. *14 Then the illustrious Kiritin, that subjugator of (hostile) ranks, dispersing the shafts of the foe by means of his own formidable bow, slaughtered with his arrows many foremost ones among the Kurus mounted on their foremost of steeds and elephants.96 Then many kings, taking up heavy maces and clubs of iron and swords and darts and diverse other kinds of powerful weapons, and assuming terrible forms, rushed suddenly against Partha in that battle. 96 Then Arjuna, bending with his arms his formidable bow Gandiva which resembled the bow of Indra himself and whose twang was as loud as the roar of the clouds congregrating at the end of the Yuya, and laughing the while, went on consuming thy troops and increasing the population of Yama's kingdom. 97 Indeed, that hero caused those raging warriors with their cars and elephants and with the foot-soldiers and bowmen supporting them, to be deprived of their arms and lives and thus to swell the population of Yama's domains." "98

SECTION CXLVI.

"Sanjaya said,-'Hearing the twang, resembling the loud call of Death himself or the frightful peal of Indra's thunder, of Dhananjaya's bow while he stretched it,1 that host of thine, O king, anxious with fear and exceedingly agitated, became like the waters of the sea with fishes and makaras within them, ruffled into mountain waves and lashed into fury by the hurricane that arises at the end of the Yuga. Then Dhananjaya the son of Pritha careered in battle in such a way that he was seen2-3 at the same time to be present in all directions, displaying his wonderful weapons. Indeed, so light-handed was the son of Pandu that we could not mark when he took out his shafts, O king, when he fixed them on the bow-string, when he stretched the bow, and when he let them off. the mighty-armed one, O king, excited with wrath, invoked into existence the invincible Aindra weapon, frightening all Hundreds and thousands of blazing shafts of the Bharatas. fiery mouths, inspired by mantras with the force of celestial With those shafts resembling fire weapons, flowed from it. or the rays of the Sun, coursing with fierce impetuosity,4-7 the welkin became incapable of being gazed at as if filled with Then that darkness which had been caused flashing meteors. by the Kauravas with their arrows,8 which was incapable of being dispersed even in imagination by others, the son of Pandu, careering around and displaying his prowess, destroyed by means of those shafts of his that were inspired by means of mantras with the force of celestial weapons, like the Sun himself speedily dispersing at dawn of day the darkness of night by means of his rays. The puissant Arjuna, with those blazing shafts of his, sucked the lives of thy warriors10 like the summer Sun sucking with his hot rays the waters of tanks and Indeed, those showers of shafts endued with the force of celestial weapons, (sped by Arjuna)11 covered the hostile army like the rays of the Sun covering the Earth. arrows of fierce energy, sped (by Dhananjaya),12 quickly entered the hearts of (hostile) heroes like dear friends. those brave warriors that came in that battle before Arjuna,18 all perished like insects approaching a blazing fire. crushing the lives of his foes and their fame,14 Partha careered in that battle like Death in an embodied form. Heads decked with diadems, massive arms adorned with Angadas,15 and ears with ear-rings, of his foes, Partha cut off with his shafts. The arms, with spears, of elephant-riders; those, with lances, of horsemen; those, with shields, of foot-soldiers; those, with

^{*} The second line of 94 I render a little freely to make the sense clearer .- T.

http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-googl Generated on 2022-02-03 12:54 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized ,

bows, of car-warriors; and those, with whips and goads, of charioteers; the son of Pandu cut off.16-17 Indeed, Dhananjava looked resplendent with his shafts of blazing points that seemed to constitute his rays, like a blazing fire with incessant sparks and rising flames.18 The hostile kings, mustering all their resolution, could not even gaze at Dhananjaya, that foremost of all bearers of arms, that here equal to the chief of the gods himself, that bull among men, seen at the same time in all directions on his car, scattering his mighty weapons, dancing in the track of his car, and producing deafening sounds with his bowstring and palms, and resembling the mid-day Sun of scorching rays in the firmament.19-21 Bearing his shafts of blazing points, the diadem-decked Arjuna looked beautiful like a mighty mass of rain-charged clouds in the season of rains decked with a rain-bow.22 When that prefect flood of mighty weapons was set in motion by Jishnu, many bulls among warriors sank in that frightful and unfordable flood. Strewn with infuriate elephants whose trunks or tusks had been cut off, with steeds deprived of hoofs or necks, with cars reduced to pieces, with warriors having their entrails drawn out and others with legs or other limbs cut off, with bodies lying in hundreds and thousands that were either perfectly still or moving unconsciously, we beheld the vast field on which Partha battled resemble the coveted arena of Death, O king, enhancing the terrors of the timid,24-27 or like the sporting ground of Rudra when he destroyed creatures in days of old. Portions of the field, strewn with the trunks of elephants cut off with razor-headed arrows, looked as if strewn with snakes. Portions again, covered with the cut-off heads of warriors, looked as if strewn with garlands of lotuses. Variegated with beautiful head-gears and crowns, with Keyuras and Angadas and ear-rings, with coats of mail decked with gold, and with the trappings and other adornments of elephants and steeds, and scattered over with hundreds of diadems lying here and there, the Earth looked exceedingly beautiful like a new bride. Dhananjaya then caused a fierce and terrible river, full of fearful objects and enhancing the fears of the timid, to flow resembling the Vaitarani itself. The marrow and fat (of men and animals) formed its mire. Blood formed its current. Full of limbs and bones, it was fathomless in depth. The hair of creatures formed its moss and weeds. Heads and arms formed the stones on its shores. It was decked with standards and banners that variegated its aspect. Umbrellas and bows formed its waves. abounded with the bodies of huge elephants deprived of life. And it teemed with cars that formed hundreds of rafts floating on its surface. And the carcasses of countless steeds formed its And it was difficult to cross in consequence of wheels and vokes and shafts and Akshas and Kuvaras of cars, and spears and swords and darts and battle-axes and shafts looking And ravens and kankas formed its alligators. And jackalls, forming its Makaras, made it terrible. And fierce vultures formed its sharks. And it became frightful in consequence of the howls of jackalls. And it abounded with capering ghosts and Picachas and thousands of other kinds of spirits. it floated countless bodies of warriors destitute of life. ing that prowess of Arjuna whose visage then resembled that of the Destroyer himself,28-88 a panic, such as had never occurred before, possessed the Kurus on the field of battle. The son of Pandu then, baffling with his weapons those of the hostile heroes, so and engaged in achieving fierce feats, gave all to un-Then Arjuna derstand that he was a warrior of fierce feats. transgressed all those foremost of car-warriors.40 day Sun of scorching rays in the firmament, no one amongst the creatures there could even look at him.41 The shafts issuing out of the bow Gandiva of that illustrious hero in that battle, seemed to us to resemble rows of cranes in the welkin.42 Baffling with his own the weapons of all those heroes, and showing by the terrible achievements in which he was engaged that he was a warrior of fierce feats,48 Arjuna, desirous of slaying Jayadratha, transgressed all those foremost of car-warriors, stupefying them all by means of his shafts.44 Shooting his shafts on all sides, Dhananjaya, having Krishna for his charioteer, presented a beautiful sight by careering with great speed on the field of The shafts, in the welkin, by hundreds and thousands, of that illustrious hero, seemed to course incessantly through the sky. 46 We never could notice when that mighty bowman took out his shafts, when, indeed, that son of Pandu aimed them, and when he let them off.47 Then, O king, filling all the points of the compass with his shafts and afflicting all the car-warriors in battle, the son of Kunti proceeded towards Jayadratha,48 and pierced him with four and sixty Then the Kuru warriors, beholding the son straight arrows. of Pandu proceed towards Jayadratha,49 all abstained from In fact, those heroes became hopeless of Jayadratha's Every one amongst thy warriors that rushed in that fierce battle against the son of Pandu, so had his body deeply pierced, O lord, with a shaft of Arjuna. The mighty carwarrior Arjuna, that foremost of victorious persons, with his shafts blazing as fire, made thy army teem with headless Indeed, O king, thus creating a perfect confusion in thy host consisting of four kinds of forces, the son of Kunti proceeded towards Jayadratha. And he pierced the son of Drona with fifty shafts and Vrishasena with three. 51-58 the son of Kunti mildly struck Kripa with nine arrows. he struck Calya with sixteen arrows and Karna with two and thirty.54 And piercing the ruler of the Sindhus then with four and sixty arrows, he uttered a leonine shout. the Sindhus, however, thus pierced by the wielder of Gandiva with his arrows,55 became filled with rage and unable to brook it like an elephant when pierced with the hook. device of the boar on his banner, he quickly sped towards Phalguna's car many straight shafts equipt with vulturine feathers, resembling angry snakes of virulent poison, well polished by the hands of the smith, and shot from his bow drawn to the fullest stretch. 56-57 Then piercing Govinda with three shafts, he struck Arjuna with six. And then he pierced the steeds of Arjuna with eight arrows, and his standard also with Then Arjuna, baffling the keen arrows sped by the ruler of the Sindhus, cut off, at the same time, with a pair of shafts, the head of Jayadratha's driver and the well-decked standard

^{*} A Kavandha is a headless trunk moving about as if endued with Tales are told of these headless beings drinking the blood of victims falling within their grasp .- T.

/ https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 Generated on 2022-02-03 12:56 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

also of Jayadratha. Its stay cut off and itself pierced and struck with arrows, that standard fell down like a flame of fire. Meanwhile the Sun was going down quickly. 59-61 then quickly addressed the son of Pandu and said,—Behold, O Partha, the ruler of the Sindhus hath, by six mighty and heroic car-warriors, been placed in their midst!62 also, O mighty-armed one, is waiting there in fear! vanjuishing those six car-warriors in battle, O bull among men 63 thou wilt never be able to slay the ruler of the Sindhus even if thou exertest thyself without intermission! I shall, therefore, have recourse to Yoga for shrouding the Sun! Only the ruler of the Sindhus will (in consequence) behold the Sun to have set. Desirous of life, O lord, through joy that wicked wight will no longer, for his destruction, conceal himself. Availing of that opportunity, thou shouldst then, O best of the Kurus, strike him !65-86 Thou shouldst not give up the enterprise, thinking the Sun to have really set !- Hearing these words, Vibhatsu replied unto Keçava, saying,—Let it be so !67-Then Krishna, otherwise called Hari, possessed of powers,—that lord of all ascetics,—having recourse to Yoga, created a darkness for shrouding the Sun.68 When Krishna created that darkness, thy warriors, O king, thinking the Sun to have set, were filled with delight at the prospect of Partha's laying down his life.69 Indeed, thy warriors, not seeing the Sun, were filled with gladness. All of them stood, with heads King Jayadratha also was in the same thrown backwards. attitude. 70 And while the ruler of the Sindhus was thus beholding the Sun, Krishna, once more addressing Dhananjaya, said these words:"-Behold, the heroic ruler of the Sindhus is now looking at the Sun, casting off his fear of thee, O foremost one among the Bharatas!78 This is the hour, O mighty-armed one, for the slaughter of that wicked-souled wretch! Speedily cut off his head and make thy vow true! 78— Thus addressed by Keçava, the valiant son of Pandu began to slaughter thy host with his arrows resembling the Sun or the fire in splendour.74 And he pierced Kripa with twenty arrows and Karna with fifty. And he struck Calya and Duryodhana each with six arrows,78 And he pierced Vrishasena with eight arrows and the ruler of the Sindhus himself with sixty. And the mighty-armed son of Pandu, O king, deeply piercing with his arrows the other warriors of thy host, rushed against Jaya-Beholding him in their presence like a swelling fire with its tongue of flame outstretched,76-77 the protectors of Javadratha were sorely puzzled. Then all thy warriors, O king, desirous of victory,78 bathed the son of Indra in that battle Shrouded with incessant showers of with torrents of arrows. arrows, the son of Kunti," that mighty-armed and unvanquished descendant of Kuru, became filled with rage. that tiger among men, viz., the son of Indra, desirous of slaughtering thy host, created a thick net of arrows. those warriors of thine, O king, thus slaughtered in battle by that hero. 80-81 abandoned the ruler of the Sindhus in fear and fled away. And they fled away in such a manner that no two persons could be seen flying together. The prowess that we then beheld of Kunti's son was extremely wonderful.*2 the like of what that illustrious warrior then did had never been nor will ever be. Like Rudra himself slaughtering creatures, Dhananjaya slaughtered elephants and elephant-riders, horses and horse-riders, and (car-warriors and) car-drivers. I did not in that battle, O king, see a single 88-84 elephant or steed or human warrior that was not struck with Partha's shafts. Their vision destroyed by dust and darkness, thy warriors 15 became perfectly cheerless and unable to distinguish one another. Urged on by fate, and with their vital limbs cut open and mangled with shafts, thy soldiers, so began to wander or limp or fall And some amongst them, O Bhārata, became paralysed and some became deadly pale. During that terrible carnage resembling the slaughter of creatures at the end of the Yuga, *7 in that deadly and fierce battle from which few could escape with life, the Earth became drenched with gore and the earthy dust that had arisen disappeared in consequence of the showers of blood that fell and the swift currents of wind that blew over the field. So deep was that rain of blood that the wheels of cars sank to their naves.81-89 Thousands of infuriate elephants endued with great speed, O king, of thy army, their riders slain and limbs mangled, of fled away, uttering cries of http://www.hathitrust.org/access_use#pd-googl Generated on 2022-02-03 12:55 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized pain and crushing friendly ranks with their tread. destitute of riders, and foot-soldiers also, O king," fled away, O monarch, from fear, struck with the shafts of Dhananjaya. Indeed, thy soldiers, with dishevelled hair and deprived of their coats of mail, with blood streaming out of their wounds, fled away in terror, leaving the field of battle. deprived of the power of motion as if their lower limbs had been seized by alligators, remained on the field." 2-98 others concealed themselves behind and under the bodies of slain elephants. Routing thy host thus, O king, Dhananiava 14 began to strike with terrible shafts the protectors of the ruler of the Sindhus. The son of Pandu shrouded with his arrowy showers Karna and Drona's son and Kripa and Calya and Vrishasena and Duryodhana. So quick was he in the use of weapons that no one could mark when Arjuna took out his arrows. when he fixed them on the bowstring, when he stretched the bow and let them off. Indeed, while striking the foe, his bow was seen incessantly drawn to a circle.95-37 His arrows also were seen incessantly issuing out of his bow and scattered in Then cutting off Karna's bow as also Vrishaall directions. sena's, 98 Arjuna felled Calya's driver from his niche in the car. with a broad-headed arrow. With many arrows that foremost of victors, viz., Dhananjaya, then deeply pierced in that battle Kripa and Acwatthaman, related as uncle and nephew to each Sorely afflicting those mighty car-warriors of thy army thus, 99-100 the son of Pandu took up a terrible arrow of fiery Looking like the thunderbolt of Indra, and inspired with divine mantras,101 that formidable arrow was capable of bearing any strain. And it had been always worshipped with perfumes and garlands of flowers. Duly inspiring it (by mantras) with the force of the thunderbolt, that descendant of Kuru,102 viz., the mighty armed Arjuna, fixed it on Gan-When that arrow of fiery effulgence was fixed on the bowstring, 108 loud shouts, O king, were heard in the welkin. Then Janarddana, once more addressing Arjuna, quickly said, 104 -O Dhananjaya, quickly cut off the head of the wicked-souled ruler of the Sindhus! The Sun is about to get at the mountains of Asta!105 Listen, however, to the words I say about the slaughter of Jayadratha! The father of Jayadratha is Vriddhakshatra known over all the world.106 It was after a long time that he got Jayadratha, that slayer of foes, for his (At the birth of the son) an incorporeal and invisible voice, deep as that of the clouds or the drum, said unto king Vriddhakshatra,-[This thy son, O lord, amongst men in this world will become worthy of the two races (viz., the Solar and the Lunar) in respect of blood, behaviour, self-restraint and the other attributes! He will become one of the foremost of Kshatriyas, and will always be worshipped by heroes!107-0 But while struggling in battle, some bull among the Kshatriyas, some conspicuous person in the world, excited with wrath, will cut off this one's head ! 110-That chastiser of foes, viz., the (old) ruler of the Sindhus, hearing these words, reflected for Overwhelmed with affection for his son, he summoned all his kinsmen and told them,"11-[That man who will cause the head of my son to fall on the Earth while the latter, struggling in battle, will be bearing a great burthen," I say that the head of that man will certainly crack into a hundred pieces !]-Having spoken these words and installed Javadratha on the throne," Vriddhakshatra, repairing to the woods, devoted himself to ascetic austerities. great energy, he is still engaged in the observance of the austerest of penances114 outside this very Samanta panchaka, O ape-bannered one! Therefore, cutting off Jayadratha's head in this dreadful battle, thou," O slayer of foes, shouldst, O Bharata, by thy fierce celestial weapon of wonderful feats, quickly throw that head decked with ear-rings upon the lap of Vriddhakshatra himself, O younger brother of the son of the Wind-god! If thou fellest Jayadratha's Earth, 116-17 thy own head then, without doubt, will crack into a hundred fragments! Aided by thy celestial weapon, do the deed in such a way that that lord of Earth, viz., the old Sindhu king, may not know that it is done! Truly, O Arjuna, there is nothing in the three worlds which thou canst not achieve or do, O son of Vasava!—Hearing these words (of Krishna), Dhananjaya, licking the corners of his mouth, 118-20 quickly sped that arrow which he had taken up for Jayadratha's slaughter, that arrow, viz., whose touch resembled that of Indra's thunder, which was inspired with mantras and converted into a celestial weapon, which was capable of bearing any strain, and which had always been worshipped with perfumes and garlands. That shaft, sped from Gandiva, coursing swiftly, snatched Jayadratha's head away like a hawk snatching away a smaller bird from the top of a tree. Dhananjaya then, with his shafts, sped that head along in the welkin (without allowing it to fall down). 121-28 For grieving his foes and gladdening his friends, the son of Pandu, by shooting his shafts repeatedly at it,124 sped that head outside the limits of Meanwhile king Vriddhakshatra,125 the Samantapanchaka. father of thy son-in-law, endued with great energy, was, O sire, engaged in his evening prayers. Decked with black locks and adorned with ear-rings, that head of Jayadratha was thrown upon Vriddhakshatra's lap as the latter was saying his prayers in a sitting posture. Thus thrown on his lap, that head decked with ear-rings, O chastiser of foes, was not seen by king Vriddhakshatra. As the latter, however, stood up after finishing his prayers, it suddenly fell down on the Earth. And as the head of Jayadratha fell down on the Earth, the head of old Vriddhakshatra, O chastiser of foes, cracked into a hundred pieces. At sight of this, all creatures were filled with wonder. 126-30 And all of them applauded Vasudeva and the mighty Vibhatsu.

"'After, O king, the ruler of the Sindhus had been slain by the diadem decked Arjuna,181 that darkness, O bull of Bharata's race, was withdrawn by Vāsudeva. Thy sons with their followers, O king, thus came to know subsequently that the darkness they had seen had all been an illusion produced by Vāsudeva. Even thus, O king, was thy son-in-law, the ruler of the Sindhus, having caused eight Akshauhinis to be slaughtered, himself slain by Partha of inconceivable energy! Beholding Jayadratha, the ruler of the Sindhus, slain, 182-84 tears of sorrow fell from the eyes of thy sons. After Jayadratha, O king, had been slain by Partha, Keçava186 blew his conch and that scorcher of foes, viz., the mighty-armed Arjuna also blew his. Bhimasena also, in that latt'e, as if for sending a message to Yudhishthira,186 filled the welkin with a tremen-Yudhishthira the son of Dharma, hearing dous leonine shout. that tremendous shout,187 understood that the ruler of the Sindhus had been slain by the high-souled Phalguna. With sounds of drums and other instruments he gladdened the warriors of his own army,153 and proceeded against the son of Bharadwāja from desire of battle. Then commenced, O king, after the Sun had set, a fierce battle between Drona and the Somakas, that made the very hair to stand on end. Desirous of slaying him, those mighty car-warriors, after the fall of Javadratha, fought with the son of Bharadwaja, exerting themselves to their utmost. Indeed, the Pandavas, having got the victory by slaying the ruler of the Sindhus,189-41 fought with Drona, intoxicated with success. Arjuna also, O king, having slain king Jayadratha, fought with many mighty carwarriors of thy army.142 Indeed, that hero decked with diadem and garlands, having accomplished his former vow, began to destroy his foes like the chief of the celestials destroying the Danavas or the Sun destroying the darkness." "143

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:55 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

SECTION CXLVII.

"Dhritarashtra said,-'Tell me, O Sanjaya, what did my warriors do, after the heroic ruler of the Sindhus had been slain by Arjuna!"

"Sanjaya said,—'Beholding the ruler of the Sindhus, O sire, slain in battle by Partha, Kripa the son of Caradwat, under the influence of wrath, covered the son of Pandu with a dense shower of arrows. Drona's son also, on his car, rushed against Phalguna the son of Pritha. Those two foremost of car-warriors began from their cars to shower, from opposite directions, upon the son of Pandu their keen arrows. That foremost of car-warriors, viz., the mighty-armed Arjuna, afflicted by those arrowy showers (of Kripa and Drona's son) felt great pain.5 Without desiring, however, to slay his preceptor (Kripa) as also the son of (his other preceptor) Drona, Dhananjaya the son of Kunti began to act like a preceptor in arms. Baffling with his own weapons those of both Acwatthaman and Kripa,

http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google Generated on 2022-02-03 12:55 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

he sped at them, without desiring to slay them, shafts that coursed mildly. Those shafts, however, (though mildly) sped by Jaya, struck the two with great force, and in consequence of their number, caused great pain to Kripa and his nephew. Then Caradwat's son, O king, thus afflicted with the arrows of Arjuna, lost all strength and swooned away on the terrace of Understanding his master afflicted with shafts to be deprived of his senses, and believing him to be dead, the driver of Kripa's car bore Kripa away from the fight.10 Kripa the son of Caradwat had thus been borne away from the battle, Açatthaman also, from fear, fled away from the son of Pār.du.11 Then the mighty bowman Partha, beholding the son of Caradwat afflicted with shafts and in a swoon, began to indulge, on his car, in piteous lamentations.12 With a tearful face and in great dejection of heart, he uttered these words:-Beholding all this (in his mental vision), Vidura of great wisdom had, on the birth of the wretched Suyodhana, that exterminater of his race, said unto Dhritarashtra,-[Let this wretch of his race be soon killed.18-14 Owing to him, a great calamity will overtake the foremost ones of Kuru's race !]-Alas, these words of the truth-telling Vidura have come to be true!15 It is for him that I behold my preceptor today lying on a bed of arrows! Fie on the practices of a Kshatriya! Fie on my might and prowess !16 Who else like me would fight with a Brāhmana that is, besides, his preceptor? Kripa is the son of a Rishi; he is, again, my preceptor; he is also the dear friend of Drona!17 Alas, he lieth stretched on the terrace of his car, afflicted with my arrows! Though not wishing it, I have still been the means of crushing him with my shafts!18 senseless on the terrace of his car, he paineth my heart ex-Even though he afflicted me with shafts I should ceedingly! still have only looked at that warrior of dazzling splendour (without striking him in return)!19 Struck with numerous shafts of mine, he hath gone the way of all creatures! that he hath pained me more than even the slaughter of my own son !20 Behold, O Krishna, to what plight he hath been reduced, thus lying miserably and in a senseless state on his Those bulls among men that give desirable objects

http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-googl Generated on 2022-02-03 12:55 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized / unto their preceptors after obtaining knowledge from them, attain to godhead! Those lowest of mortals, on the other hand, who, after obtaining knowledge from their preceptors, $1-22 strike the latter, those wicked men, go to hell! Without doubt, this act that I have done will lead me to hell!23 I have deeply pierced my preceptor on his car with showers of arrows! While studying the science of arms at his feet, Kripa told me in those days,24-[Do not, O thou of Kuru's race, ever strike thy preceptor ! - That command of my righteous and highsouled preceptor25 I have not obeyed, for I have struck the very Kripa with my shafts! I bow to that worshipful son of Gotama, to that unretreating hero!26 Fie on me, O thou of Vrishni's race, since I have struck even him !- While Savvasachin was thus lamenting for Kripa,27 the son of Radha, beholding the ruler of the Sindhus slain, rushed towards him-Seeing the son of Rādhā thus rushing towards the car of Arjuna,  the two Pānchāla princes and Sātyaki suddenly rushed towards him. The mighty car-warrior Partha, beholding the son of Rādhā advance,25 smilingly addressed the son of Davaki and said, -Yonder cometh the son of Adhiratha against the car of Sātyaki !50 Without doubt, he is unable to bear the slaughter of Bhuricravas in battle! Urge my steeds, O Janarddana, towards the spot whither Karna cometh! Let not Vrisha (Karna) cause the Sātwata hero to follow in the wake of Bhuricravas!-Thus addressed by Savyasachin, the mighty-armed Kecava32 endued with great energy replied in these opportune words:-The mighty-armed Sātyaki is singly a match for Karna, O son of Pandu! superior then will this bull among the Satwatas be when he is united with two sons of Drupada! For the present, O Partha, it is not proper for thee to battle with Karna !34 The latter hath with him the blazing dart, like a fierce meteor, that Vasava gave him! O slayer of hostile heroes, he hath kept it for thy sake, worshipping it with reverence !55 Let Karna then freely proceed against the Satwata hero! I know, O son of Kunti, this wicked wight's hour, when, indeed, thou wilt, with keen shafts, throw him down from his car! se_'

"Dhritarashtra said,--Tell me, O Sanjaya, how the battle took place between the heroic Karna and Sātyaki of the Vrishni race, after the fall of Bhuricravas and the ruler of the Sindhus! Sātyaki had been made carless. Upon what car then was he mounted? And how also did the two protectors of the wheels (of Arjuna's car), viz., the two Pānchāla princes, fight?'87-88

"Sanjaya said,—'I will describe to thee all that happened in that dreadful battle. Listen patiently to (the consequences of) thy own evil conduct! Before even the encounter, Krishna knew it in his heart that the heroic Satyaki would be vanguished by the stake-bannered (Bhuricravas)!40 dana, O king, knoweth both the past and the future. this, summoning his charioteer Dāruka, he had commanded him, saying,41—Let my car be equipt tomorrow!—Even this had been the command of that mighty one. Neither the gods, nor the Gandharvas, nor the Yakshas, nor the Uragas, nor the Rākshasas,42 nor human beings, are capable of conquering the two Krishnas! The gods with the Grandsire at their head, as also the Siddhas, know48 the incomparable prowess of those Listen, however, now to the battle as it happened. holding Sātyaki carless and Karna ready for battle,44 Mādhava blew his conch of loud blare in the Rishabha note.* hearing the blare of (Keçava's) conch, understood the meaning,45 and soon took that car, equipt with a lofty standard of gold, to where Keçava was. With Keçava's permission, upon that car guided by Daruka,46 and which resembled the blazing fire or the Sun in effulgence, ascended the grandson of Cini. Ascending upon that car which resembled a celestial vehicle and unto which were yoked those foremost of steeds, capable of going everywhere at will, viz., Caivya and Sugriva and Meghapushha Valāhaka, and which were adorned with trappings of gold,47-48 Sātyaki rushed against the son of Rādhā, scattering countless shafts. The two protectors of (Arjuna's) car-wheels, viz., Yudhāmanyu and Uttamaujas,49 abandoning Dhananjaya's car, proceeded against the son of Rādhā. dhā's son also, O king, shooting showers of shafts, so angrily rushed, in that battle, against the invincible grandson of Cini. The battle that took place between them was such that its like had never been heard to have taken place on Earth or in heaven between gods, Gandharvas, Asuras, Uragas, or Rākshasas. The entire host, consisting of cars, steeds, men, and elephants, abstained from the fight, 51-52 beholding, O monarch, the stunning feats of the two warriors. All became silent spectators of that superhuman battless between those two human heroes, O king, and of the skill of Daruka in guiding the car. beholding the skill of the charioteer Daruka standing on the car, as he guided the vehicle forwards, backwards, sidelong, now wheeling in circles and now stopping outright, all were amazed. The gods, the Gandharvas, and the Danavas, in the welkin, 54-65 intently watched that battle between Karna and the grandson Both of them endued with great might, each challenging the other, those two warriors put forth their prowess for the sake of their friends.56 Karna who looked like a celestial, and Yuyudhana, O king, rained upon each other showers of shafts.⁵⁷ Indeed, Karna grinded the grandson of Cini with his arrowy downpours, unable to put up with the slaughter (by Sātyaki) of the Kuru hero Jalasandha.58 Filled with grief and sighing like a mighty snake, Karna, casting angry glances on the grandson of Cini in that battle and as if burning him therewith,5° rushed at him furiously again and again, O chastiser of Beholding him filled with rage, Sātyaki pierced him in return, shooting dense showers of arrows, like an elephant piercing (with his tusks) a rival elephant. Those two tigers among men, endued with the activity of tigers " and possessed of incomparable prowess, mangled each other furiously in that The grandson of Cini then, with shafts made entirely of iron, repeatedly pierced Karna, that chastiser of foes, in all And he also felled, with a broad-headed arrow, the charioteer of Karna from his niche in the car. 63-68 his keen shafts he also slew the four steeds, white in hue, of And then cutting into a hundred fragments Adhiratha's son. the standard of Karna with a hundred arrows, that bull among men64 made Karna carless in the very sight of thy son. all thy warriors, O king became cheerless.65 Then Vrishasena the son of Karna, and Calya the ruler of the Madras, and Drona's son, encompassed the grandson of Cini from all sides.66 Then a confusion set in, such that nothing could be seen. deed, when the heroic Karna was made carless by Sātyaki,67 cries of Oh and Alas arose, among all the troops. Karna also, O king, pierced by Sātwata with his arrows and exceedingly weakened,68 ascended the car of Duryodhana, sighing deeply, remembering his friendship for thy son from his childhood69 and having striven to realise the promise he had made about the bestowal of sovereignty on Duryodhana. After Karna had been made carless, thy brave sons headed by Dusçasana, O king, were not slain by the self-restrained Satyaki because the latter wished not to falsify the vow made by Bhimasena. also of not falsifying the vow formerly made by Partha (about the slaughter of Karna),70-71 Sātyaki simply made those warriors carless and weakened them exceedingly but did not deprive Indeed, it is Bhima that hath vowed the slaughthem of life. ter of thy sons,72 and it is Partha that, at the time of the second match at dice, vowed the slaughter of Karna. though all those warriors headed by Karna made strong efforts for slaying Sātyaki,73 yet those foremost of car-warriors failed to slay him. Drona's son and Kritavarman and other mighty car-warriors,74 as also hundreds of foremost Kshatriyas were all vanquished by Sātyaki with only one bow. fought, desirous of benefiting king Yudhishthira the just, and of attaining to heaven.76 Indeed, Sātyaki, that crusher of foes, is equal to either of the two Krishnas in energy. Smiling the while, he vanquished all thy troops, 76 O best of men! In this world, there are only three mighty bowmen, viz., Krishna, Pārtha, and Sātyaki. There is no fourth to be seen !'77

^{*} The second of the seven notes of the Hindu Gamut .- T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:55 GMT

"Dhritarāshtra said,—'Ascending on the invincible car of Vāsudedva that had Dāruka for its driver, Sātyaki, proud of the might of his arms, and equal in battle unto Vāsudeva himself, made Karna carless. Did Sātyaki ride any other car (after his encounter with Karna was over)? I am desirous to hear this, O Sanjaya! Thou art skilled in narration. I regard Sātyaki to be endued with unbearable prowess. Tell me all, O Sanjaya!

"Sanjaya said,—'Hear, O king, how it happened. telligent younger brother of Dāruka soon brought unto Sātyaki another car, duly equipt with all necessaries.81 With shaft attached to it by chains of iron and gold and bands of silk, decked with a thousand stars, decked with banners and with the figure of a lion on his standard, 82 with horses fleet as the wind and adorned with trappings of gold yoked unto it, and with rattle deep as the roar of the clouds, that car was brought unto him. 88 Ascending upon it, the grandson of Cini rushed against thy troops. Dāruka, meanwhile, went as he listed to Keçava's side. 4 A new car was brought for Karna also, O king, unto which were yoked fleet steeds of the best breed that were decked in trappings of gold and white as conchs or vaccine milk. Its kaksha and standard were made of gold. Furnished with banners and machines, that foremost of cars And it was furnished with a profusion had an excellent driver. Mounting on that car, Karna also of weapons of every kind. I have now told thee all that thou rushed against his foes. hadst asked me. 85-87 Once more, however, O king, learn the (extent of the) destruction caused by thy evil policy. one of thy sons have been slain by Bhimasena.88 Durmukha for their foremost, they were conversant with all modes of warfare. Sātyaki and Arjuna also have slain hundreds of heroes with Bhishma as their foremost and Bhaga-Even thus, O king, hath the destruction datta also, O sire! commenced, caused by thy evil counsels." "89-90

SECTION CXLVIII.

"Dhritarāshtra said,—'When such was the condition, in battle, of those heroes of their side and mine, what did Bhima then do? Tell me all, O Sanjaya!'

"Sanjaya said,—"After Bhimasena had been made carless, that hero, afflicted with the wordy darts of Karna and filled with rage, addressed Phālguna and said,*—In thy very sight, O Dhananjaya, Karna hath repeatedly told me—Eunuch, fool, glutton, unskilled in weapons, do not fight, child, unable to bear the burden of battle!—He that would tell me so would be slain by me. Karna hath told me those words, O Bharata! *-O mighty-armed one, thou knowest the vow which I have made Remember the words that were then jointly with thee! O foremost of men, act in such a way that spoken by me! that vow of mine, O son of Kunti, as also thy own vow, may not be falsified! O Dhananjaya, do that by which that vow of mine may be made true 16-6-Hearing these words of Bhima, Arjuna of immeasurable prowess, getting near Karna in that battle, told him,"—O Karna, thou art of false sight. a Suta, thou applaudest thy own self! Of wicked understanding, listen now to what I tell thee !8 Heroes meet with either of these two things in battle, viz., victory or defeat. these are uncertain, O son of Radha! The case is not otherwise when Indra himself is engaged in battle! by Yuyudhana, with thy senses no longer under thy control, thou wert almost on the point of death! Remembering, however, that I had vowed to slay thee, that hero dismissed thee without taking thy life 10 It is true thou hadst succeeded in depriving Bhimasena of his car. Thy abuse, however, O son of Rādhā, of that hero was sinful!11 Those bulls among men that are truly righteous and brave, having vanquished a foe, never boast, nor speak ill of any body !12 Thy knowledge. however, is little. It is for this, O son of a Suta, that thou indulgest in such speeches! Then, again, the abusive epithets thou didst apply to the battling Bhimasena endued with great prowess and heroism and ever devoted to the practices of the righteous, were not consistent with truth! In the very sight of all the troops, of Keçava, as also of myself,18-14 thou wert many a time made carless by Bhimasena in battle! That son of Pandu, however, did not tell thee a single harsh word.16 Since, however, thou hast addressed Vrikodara in many harsh speeches, and since thou with others hast slain the son of Subhadra out of my sight,16 thou shalt, therefore, this very day obtain the fruit of those offences of thine! It was for thy own destruction, O wicked wight, that thou didst then cut off Abhimanyu's bow !17 For that, O thou of little understanding, thou shalt be slain by me, with all thy followers, forces, and Accomplish now all those acts which thou shouldst.

/ https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 / http://www.hathitrust.org/access_use#pd-google

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:55 GMT / https://hdl.handle./ Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust

http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-googl Generated on 2022-02-03 12:55 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

do, for a great calamity is impending over thee!" I will slav Vrishasena in thy very sight in battle. All those other kings, again, that will from folly advance against me,19 I will despatch I say this truly, laying my hand on my unto Yama's abode. weapon! A fool as thou art, without wisdom and full vanity, I say that beholding thee lying on the field of battle the wicked Duryodhana will indulge in bitter lamentations!-After Arjuna had vowed the slaughter of Karna's son, 20-21 a loud and tremendous uproar arose amongst the car-warriors. At that frightful time when confusion was everywhere,22 the thousand-rayed Sun, dimming his rays, entered the Asta hill. Then, O king, Hrishikeça, stationed in the van of battle, stat embracing Arjuna who had accomplished his vow, told him these words: -By good luck, O Jishnu, thy great vow hath been accomplished !24 By good luck, that wretch, viz., Vriddhakshatra, hath been slain along with his son! The celestial generalissimo himself, O Bhārata, encountering the Dhārtarāshtra force,26 would, in battle, O Jishnu, lose his senses! There is no doubt of this! Except thee, O tiger among men, I do not, even on reflection, see the person in the three worlds that would fight with this host! Many royal warriors endued with great prowess, equal to thee or superior, have been united together at Duryodhana's command! Clad in mail, they could not approach thee, encountering thy angry self in battle. - Thy energy and might are equal to that of Rudra or Cakra or the Destroyer himself. No one else is capable of putting forth such prowess in battle" as thou, O scorcher of foes, alone and unsupported, didst today put forth! applaud thee again after Karna of wicked soul shall have been slain along with his followers. Thus shall I glorify thee when that foe of thine shall have been vanquished and slain !- Unto him Arjuna replied,—Through thy grace, O Madhava, to-st this vow, that even the gods could with difficulty accomplish, hath been accomplished by me! Their victory is not at all a matter of wonder that have thee, O Keçava, for their lord!83 thy grace Yudhishthira will obtain the whole Earth. All this is due to thy power, O thou of Vrishni's race! This is thy victory, O lord !50 Our prosperity is thy care and we are thy servants, O slayer of Madhu!—Thus addressed, Krishna smiled softly, and slowly urged the steeds. And he showed unto Pārtha, as they came, the field of battle abounding with cruel sights.⁸⁴

"Then Krishna said,—Desirous of victory in battle or world-wide fame, many heroic kings are lying on the Earth, struck with thy shafts !55 Their weapons and ornaments lay scattered, and their steeds, cars, and elephants are mangled and With their coats of mail pierced or cut open, they have come to the greatest grief. 86 Some of them are yet alive, and some of them are dead. Those, however, that are dead, still seem to be alive in consequence of the splendour with which they are endued. 87 Behold the Earth covered with their shafts equipt with golden wings, with their numerous other weapons of attack and defence, and with their animals (deprived of life) !58 Indeed, the Earth looks resplendent with coats of mail and necklaces of gems, with their heads decked with ear-rings, and head-gears and diadems, and floral wreaths and jewels worn on crowns, and Kanthasutras and Angadas, and collars of gold, and with diverse other beautiful ornaments. $5-40 Strewn with Anukarshas and quivers, with standards and banners, with Upashkarus and Adhisthānas, with shafts and crests of cars. with broken wheels and beautiful Akshas in profusion, with yokes and trappings of steeds, with belts and bows and arrows, with elephant's housings, with spiked maces and hooks of iron, with darts and short arrows, with spears and pikes, with Kuntas and clubs, with Cataghnis and Bhucundis, with scimitars and axes, with short and heavy clubs and mallets, with maces and Kunapas, with whips decked with gold, O bull of Bharata's race, with the bells and diverse other adornments of mighty elephants, with floral garlands and various kinds of ornaments, and with costly robes, all loosened from the bodies of men and animals, the Earth shines brilliantly like the autumnal firmament with planets and stars. The lords of Earth, slain for the sake of Earth, are slumbering on the Earth, clasping with their limbs the Earth like a dear wife. Like mountains shedding through their caves and fissures streams of liquid chalk, these elephants, resembling Airavat himself and huge as mountains, are shedding profuse streams of blood through the openings in their bodies caused by weapons.41-49 Behold, O hero, those huge creatures afflicted with shafts lying on the ground in con-Behold those steeds also, lying on the ground, decked in trappings of gold!50 Behold also, O Partha, those riderless and driverless cars that had at one time resembled celestial vehicles or the vapoury forms in the evening sky, now lying on the ground, with standards and banners and Akshas and yokes cut into pieces, and with broken shafts and crests, O lord. 51-52 Foot-soldiers also, O hero, bearing bows and shields, and slain in hundreds and thousands, are lying on the ground, bathed in bloods and clasping the Earth with every limb, and their locks smeared with dust. Behold, O mightyarmed one, those warriors with bodies mangled with thy weap-Behold the Earth, strewn with yak-tails and fans, and umbrellas and standards, and steeds and cars and elephants. and with diverse kinds of blankets, and reins of steeds, and beautiful robes and costly Varuthas (of cars), look as if overspread with embroidered tapestry !55-56 Many warriors fallen from the backs of well-equipt elephants along with those creatures themselves that they had ridden, are looking like lions fallen from mountain summits struck down by thunder. 57 Mingled with the steeds (they had ridden) and the bows (they had held), horsemen and foot-soldiers, in large numbers, are lying on the field, covered with blood. 88 Behold, O foremost of men. the surface of the Earth is frightful to look at, covered as it is with large numbers of slain elephants and steeds and carwarriors, and miry with blood, fat, and rotten flesh in profusion, and on which dogs and wolves and Picachas and diverse wanderers of the night are careering in joy !59 This fame-enhancing and mighty feat on the field of battle is capable of being achieved by thee only, O puissant one, or by that chief of the gods, viz., Indra himself, who in great battle slayeth the Daityas and the Danavas !60-

"Sanjaya continued,—'Thus showing the field of battle unto the diadem-decked Arjuna, Krishna blew his conch Pān-chajanya with the gladdened soldiers of the Pāndava army (blowing their respective conchs)." Having shown the field of battle unto the diadem-decked hero, that slayer of foes, viz., Janarddana, quickly proceeded towards Ajatacutru the son of Pāndu and informed him of the slaughter of Jayadratha." ***

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:55 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

SECTION CXLIX.

"Sanjaya said,—'After the ruler of the Sindhus had been by Partha, Krishna, repairing unto the king, viz., Yudhishthira the son of Dharma, worshipped the latter with a gladdened heart.' And he said,—By good luck, O king of kings, thy prosperity increaseth! O best of men, thy foe hath been slain! By good luck, thy younger brother hath accomplished his vow! - Thus addressed by Krishna, that subjugator of hostile towns, viz., king Yudhishthira, filled with joy, came down from his car, O Bharata! His eyes filled with tears of joy, he embraced the two Krishnas, and wiping his bright and lotus-like face, said these words unto Vasudeva and Dhananjava the son of Pandu,—Ye mighty car-warriors, by good luck, I behold both of you after ye have accomplished your task! By good luck, that sinful wretch, viz., the ruler of the Sindhus, hath been slain! Ye Krishnas, by good luck, ye have done that which hath filled me with great happiness! good luck, our foes have been plunged into an ocean of grief! Thou art the soveriegn lord of all the worlds, O slayer of In the three worlds they that have thee for their protector can have no object incapable of accomplishment! Through thy grace, O Govinda, we will conquer our foes7-8 like Indra conquering the Danavas in days of old! the conquest of the world, or be it the conquest of the three worlds,' everything is certain, O thou of the Vrishni race, in their case with whom thou art gratified, O giver of honors! They can have no sin, nor can they meet with defeat in battle 10 with whom thou, O lord of the celestials, art gratified, O giver It is through thy grace, O Hrishikeça, that Cakra of honors!

^{*} The printed editions and the manuscripts do not agree with one another in respect of the order and numbering of the last dozen verses. The Bombay edition omits a few of the verses.—T.

hath become the chief of the celestials!" It is through thy grace that that blessed personage obtained on the field of battle the sovereignty of the three worlds! It is through thy grace, O lord of the celestials, that the latter's obtained immortality, O Krishna, and enjoy eternal regions (of bliss)! thousands of Daityas with prowess having its origin in thy grace, O slayer of foes,18 Cakra obtained the lordship of the Through thy grace, O Hrishikeça, the mobile and the immobile universe,14 without swerving from its (ordained) course, O hero, is engaged in prayers and the homa! the beginning, this universe, enveloped in darkness, had been one vast expanse of water.15 Through thy grace, O mightyarmed one, the universe became manifest, O best of men! Thou art the Creator of all the worlds, thou the Supreme Soul, and thou art immutable !16 They that behold thee, keça, are never confounded! Thou art the Supreme God, thou art the God of gods, and thou art Eternal! They that seek refuge with thee, O lord of the gods, are never confounded! Without beginning and without death, thou art Divine, the Creator of all the worlds, and immutable !18 They that are devoted to thee, O Hrishikeça, always pass over every difficulty. Thou art Supreme, the Ancient one, the Divine male being, and that which is the Highest of the high !19 attaineth to that, viz., thy Supreme Self, hath ordained for him the highest prosperity! Thou art sung in the four Vedas. The four Vedas sing of thee! " By seeking thy shelter, O high-souled one, I shall enjoy unrivalled prosperity! the Supreme God, thou art the God of the highest Gods, thou art the lord of winged creatures, and the lord of all human beings !21 Thou art the Supremest Lord of everything! I bow to thee, O best of Beings! Thou art the Lord, the Lord of Lords, O puissant one! Prosperity to thee, O Madhava! 28 O thou of large eyes, O Universal Soul, thou art the origin of all things! He, again, that is a friend of Dhananjaya or is engaged in Dhananjaya's good, so obtaineth thee that art the protector of Dhananjaya and attaineth to happiness!-Thus addressed by him, those high-souled ones, viz., Keçava and Arjuna,*4 cheerfully said unto the king, that lord of the Earth, -The sinful king Jayadratha hath been consumed by the fire of thy wrath !25 O puissant one, although the Dhartarashtra host is vast and swelleth with pride, yet, O Bharata, struck and slain, it is being exterminated !26 O slaver of foes, it is in consequence of thy wrath that the Kauravas are being destroyed! Having, O hero, angered thee that canst slay with thy eyes alone, the wicked-minded Suyodhana, with his friends and kinsmen, will have to lay down his life in battle! Slain before in consequence of thy ire, and struck down also by the gods themselves, the invincible 27-28 Bhishma, the grandsire of the Kurus, lieth now on a bed of arrows! O slayer of foes, victory in battle is unattainable by them and death also waiteth for them that have thee, O son of Pandu, for their foe! life, dear ones, children, and diverse kinds of bliss, so will soon be lost by him with whom thou, O scorcher of foes, hast been angry! I regard the Kauravas to be lost with their sons, animals, and kinsmen. 31 when thou, O scorcher of foes, that art observant of the duties of kings, hast been angry with them !-Then, Bhima, O king, and the mighty car-warrior Sātyaki, sa both mangled with shafts, saluted their senior. two mighty bowmen sat down on the ground, surrounded by the Panchalas. Beholding those two heroes filled with joy and arrived and waiting with joined hands, the son of Kunti congratulated them both, saying, 84-By good luck it is that I see you both, ye heroes, escaped with life from that sea of (hostile) troops, that sea in which Drona acted the part of an invincible alligator and the son of Hridikā that of a fierce shark! good luck, all the kings of the Earth have been vanquished (by you two) !85# By good luck, I see both of you victorious in By good luck, Drona hath been vanquished in battle, and that mighty car-warrior also, viz., the son of Hridika ! By good luck Karna hath been vanquished in battle with barb-By good luck, Calya also was obliged to turn away ed shafts!

^{*} Everything, even the inanimate creation, exists and adores the Supreme deity.

^{*} This is a triplet in the Calcutta edition .- T.

from the field by you both, ye bulls among men!" By good luck, I behold you both come back from battle, safe and sound, ye that are foremost of car-warriors and well-skilled in battle ! By good luck, I behold you again, ye heroes, that have forded that sea of troops in obedience to my command, ye that went to battle impelled by the desire of honoring me! Ye are heroes delighting in battle! Ye never retreat from battle! Ye are By good luck, I see you both !40-Having said to me as life! this, the son of Pandu, O king, embraced both Yuyudhana and Vrikodara, those tigers among men, and shed tears of joy.41 Then, O monarch, the entire host of the Pandavas became And all of them once more set cheerful and filled with joy. their hearts on battle." "43

SECTION CL

"Sanjava said,—'Upon the fall, O king, of the ruler of the Sindhus, thy son Suyodhana, his face bedewed with tears and himself filled with cheerlessness, became hopeless of vanguishing Filled with grief and breathing hot sighs like a snake whose fangs have been broken, that offender against the whole world, viz., thy son, experienced bitter affliction. that great and terrible slaughter of his troops caused by Jishnu and Bhimasena and Satwata in battle, he became pale and died up and melancholy, and his eyes became filled with tears. And he came to think that no warrior existed on the Earth that could compare with Arjuna. Neither Drona, nor the son of Rādhā, nor Açwatthāman, nor Kripa, O sire, is competent to stay before Arjuna when the latter is excited with wrath. [And Suyodhana said unto himself,]—Having vanquished in battle all the mighty car-warriors of my army, Partha slew the None could resist him! This my vast ruler of the Sindhus! host hath almost been exterminated by the Pandavas! there is no one that can protect my army, no, not even Purandara himself! He, relying upon whom I had engaged in this passage-at-arms in battle, alas, that Karna hath been defeated in battle and Jaydratha slain! That Karna relying upon whose energy I regarded Krishna as straw who came to sue me for peace, alas, that Karna hath been vanquished in battle !'-Grieving so within his heart, that offender against the whole world, O king, went to Drona, O bull of Bharata's race, for seeing him !10 Repairing unto him, he informed Drona of that immense slaughter of the Kurus, the victory of his foes, and the dire calamity of the Dhartarashtras."* And Suyodhana said,-Behold, O preceptor, this immense slaughter of kings! I came to battle, placing that grandsire of mine, viz., the heroic Bhishma, at our head!12 Having slain him, Cikhandin, his aspiration filled, stayeth at the very van of all the troops, surrounded by all the Panchalas, covetous of another triumph ! 18 Another disciple of thine, viz., the invincible Savyasāchin, having slain seven Akshauhinis of troops, hath despatched king Jayadratha to Yama's abode !14 How, O preceptor, shall I be freed from the debt I owe to those allies of mine who, desirous of victory to me and ever engaged in my good, have gone to Yama's abode?15 Those lords of Earth who had desired to give me the sovereignty of the Earth, are now lying on the Earth, themselves abandoning all their Earthly prosperity !16 I am a coward! Having caused such a slaughter of friends, I dare not think that I shall be sanctified by performing even a hundred horse-sacrifices!17 I am covetous and sinful and a tresspasser against righteousness! Through my acts alone, these lords of Earth, in their desire for victory, have gone to Yama's abode!18 Why, in the presence of those kings, does not the Earth yield me a hole (through which to sink), since. I am so sinful in behaviour and such a fomenter of intestine dissensions 1819 Alas, what will the grandsire with blod-red eyes, that invincible hero who hath conquered the other world, tell ^{*} Literally, "the fact of the Dhartarashtras having sunk (into distress).-T.

[†] Literally, "of persons whose coronal locks have undergone the sacred bath."-T.

[‡] Praluvdhas is explained by Nilakantha differently. He supposes that Duryodhana here characterises Cikhandin to be a deceitful fowler or hunter in consequence of the deceit with which he caused Bhishma's fall. This is far-fetched.—T.

[§] I adopt the Bombay reading.—T.

me in the midst of the kings when he meets me?*20 Beholdthat mighty bowman, Jalasandha, slain by Sātyaki! That great car-warrior, that hero, came proudly to battle for my sake, prepared to lay down his life!" Beholding the ruler of the Kāmvojas slain, as also Alamvusha and many other allies of mine, what object can I have for preserving my life?23 unreturning heroes who, fighting for my sake and struggling to the utmost of their powers to vanquish my foes, have laid down their lives!28 I shall today, O scorcher of foes, exerting to the measure of my might, free myself from the debt I owe them and gratify them with oblations of water by repairing to the Yamuna !24 O foremost of all bearers of arms, I tell thee truly and swear by the good acts I have performed, by the prowess I possess, and by my sons,26 that slaying all the Panchalas with the Pandavas I shall obtain peace of mind, or, slain by them in battle I shall repair to those regions whither those allies of mine have gone !26 I shall certainly proceed thither whither those bulls among men, slain, while engaged in battle for my sake, by Arjuna have gone ! Our allies, seeing that they are not well protected by us, no longer desire to stand by us! O thou of mighty arms, they now regard the Pandavas to be preferable to ourselves !28 Thyself of sure aim hast ordained our extermination in battle, for thou treatest Arjuna leniently since he is thy disciple ! " It is for this that all those have been slain who had endeavoured to secure victory to us! It seems that Karna only now wishes us victory! The man of weak understanding who, without duly examining another, accepteth him for a friend and engageth him in concerns, that require friends for their accomplishment, is certain to suffer Even so hath this affair of mine been managed by my best of friends !+ I am exceedingly covetous, sinful,

^{*} The Bombay edition reads this verse differently and introduces another after it which does not occur in the Bengal texts.—T.

[†] I am not sure whether I have rendered the 31st and the first half of 32nd correctly. The vernacular translators have made a mess of the passage. The difficulty lies with Surhittamais. I take take it to mean that Duryodhana says,—'Karna, Cakuni, Dusçāsana, with myself, had crooked-hearted, and characterised by avarice! Alas, king Jayadratha hath been slain, and Somadatta's son also of great energy, and the Abhishāhas, the Curasenas, the Civis, and the Vaçātis! 1 shall go thither today whither those bulls among men, slain, while engaged in battle for my sake, by Arjuna, have gone! In the absence of those bulls among men, I have no need for life! O preceptor of the sons of Pāndu, let me have thy permission in this!—"" 36

SECTION CLI.

"Dhritarāshtra said,—'After the ruler of the Sindhus had been slain in battle by Savyasāchin, and after the fall of Bhuri-cravas, what became the state of your minds? After Drona also had been thus addressed by Duryodhana in the midst of the Kurus, what did the preceptor say unto him then? Tell me all this, O Sanjaya!"

"Sanjaya said,—'Loud wails arose among thy troops, O Bhārata, after the slaughter of Bhuricravas and the ruler of the Sindhus." All of them disregarded the counsels of thy son, those counsels in consequence of which leaders of men, by hundreds, were slain! As regards Drona, hearing those words of thy son, he became filled with grief. Reflecting for a short while, O monarch, he said these words in great affliction!

"'Drona said,—O Duryodhana, why dost thou pierce me thus with wordy shafts? I told thee before that Arjuna is incapable of defeat in battle! Protected by the diadem-decked Arjuna, Cikhandin slew Bhishma! By that feat, O thou of Kuru's race, the prowess of Arjuna in battle hath been well tested. Beholding Bhishma who was incapable of being defeated by the gods and the Dinavas, actually slain in battle, even then I knew that this Bharata host is doomed! Upon the fall of him whom of all persons in the three worlds we had regarded to be the very foremost of heroes, who else is there upon whom we are to rely? Those dice, O sire, with which Cakuni formerly taken thee, O preceptor, for a friend, and had engaged thee in this battle. We did not, however, then know that thou art an enemy in disguise !'—T.

played in the Kuru assembly, were not dice but keen arrows capable of slaying foes !10 Even those arrows, O sire, sped by Jaya, are now slaying us! Though Vidura characterised them to be such, thou didst not yet understand them to be so!" Those words, again, that the wise and high-souled Vidura, with tears in his eyes, had then said unto thee, those auspicious words recommending peace, thou didst not then hear [12] calamity which he foretold hath now come! That frightful . carnage, O Duryodhana, hath now come as the result of that dis bedience by thee of Vidura's words !18 That man of foolish understanding who, disregarding the salutary words of trusted friends, followeth his own opinion, soon falls into a pitiable plight.14 O son of Gandhari, this great evil that hath befallen thee is the fruit of that sinful act of thine, viz., that dragging of Krishna in our very sight to the Kuru assembly, of Krishna who never deserved such treatment, who hath been born in a Know that all noble race, and who practiseth every virtue! this is but little, for in the next world direr consequences yet will be thine !15-16 Vanquishing the Pandavas at dice by deceit, thou hadst sent them into the woods, attired in deer-skins!" What other Brahmana, except myself, in this world, would seek to injure those princes that are ever engaged in the practice of virtue and that are to me even as my own sons?18 With the approval of Dhritarashtra, in the midst of the Kuru assembly, thou hadet, with Cakuni as thy help-mate, provoked the ire of the Pandavas!19 United with Duscasana, Karna then fanned that wrath! Disregarding the words of Vidura, thou hast repeatedly fanned it thyself! 20 With resolute care, all of you had surrounded Arjuna, resolved to stand by the ruler of the Sindhus! Why then have all of you been vanquished, and why also has Jayadratha been slain?21 Why, when thou art alive, and Karna, and Kripa, and Calya, and Açwithaman, O Kauravya, hath the ruler of the Sindhus been slain ?22 rescuing the ruler of the Sindhus, the kings (on thy side) had put forth all their fiercest energy. Why then hath Jayadratha Relying upon me, king Jayabeen slain in their midst?23 dratha had expected his rescue from the hands of Arjuna ! Ho, however, obtained not the rescue he had expected. I do not also see any safety for my own self !25 Until I succeed in slaying the Panchalas with Cikhandin, I feel like one sinking in the Dhristadyumna-mire !26 Having failed, O Bharata, in rescuing the ruler of the Sindhus, why dost thou pierce me thus with thy wordy shafts, seeing that I too am burning with grief?27 Thou seest not any longer on the field the golden standard of Bhishma of sure aim, that warrior who was never tired in battle! How then canst thou hope for success?28 When the ruler of the Sindhus and Bhuricravas also have been slain in the very midst of so many mighty car-warriors, what, do you think, will the Kripa, difficult of being vanquished, is still alive, O That he hath not followed in the track of Jayadratha, I applaud him highly for this!50 When I saw Bhishma himself, that achiever of the most difficult feats (in battle), that warrior who was incapable of being slain in battle by the very gods with Vāsava at their head, slain in thy sight, O Kauravya, as also of thy younger brother Dusçasana, I thought then, O king, that the Earth hath abandoned thee !51-53 Yonder the troops of the Pandavas and the Srinjayas, united together, are now rushing against me !88 For achieving thy good in battle, O son of Dhritarashtra, I will not, without slaying all the Panchalas, put off my armour!54 O king, go and tell my son Açwatthāman who is present in battle that even at the risk of his life he should not let the Somakas alone !5 Thou shouldst also tell him, -[Observe all the instructions thou hast received from thy Be firm in acts of humility, in self-restraint, in truth and righteousness! 6 Observant of religion, profit, and pleasure, without neglecting religion and profit, thou shouldst always accomplish those acts in which religion predominates !87 The Brāhmanas should always be gratified with presents. of them deserve thy worship! Thou shouldst never do anything that is injurious to them! They are like flames of fire!] 33 As regards myself, I will penetrate the hostile host, O slayer of foes, for doing great battle, pierced as I am by thee with thy wordy shafts !39 If thou canst, O Duryodhana, go and protect those troops! Both the Kurus and the Srinjayas have been angry. They will fight during even the night! 40—Having said these words, Drona proceeded against the Pāndavas and set himself to over-ride the energy of the Kshatriyas like the Sun overshadowing the light of the stars."

^{*} I. e., "he should, by every means in his power, avenge himself on the Somakas, those enemies of mine."—T.

SECTION CLII.

"Sanjaya said,-Thus urged by Drona, king Duryodhana, filled with rage, set his heart on battle. And thy son Duryodhana then said unto Karna,-Behold, the diadem-decked son of Pandu, with Krishna alone for his help-mate, penetrated into the array formed by the preceptor, -- an array that the gods themselves could not pierce, and in the very sight of the illustrious Drona struggling in battle and of many other foremost of warriors, slew the ruler of the Sindhus! O son of Rādhā, many foremost of kings lying on the Earth, slain in battle by Partha unaided by any one, in the very sight of the illustrious Drona and myself vigorously exerting ourselves, like a host of inferior animals slain by a lion! son of Cakra hath reduced my host to a small remnant of what How, indeed, could Phalguna, in spite of the resistance offered by Drona in battle, accomplish his vow by slaying the ruler of the Sindhus? If Drona had not himself willed it. O hero, how could the son of Pandu, in battle, have pierced that impenetrable array, overcoming his struggling precep-Truly, Phalguna is exceedingly dear to the illustrious preceptor! For this, the latter gave him admittance, without having fought with him. Behold my misfortune! the first instance promised protection unto the ruler of the Sindhus, Drona, that scorcher of foes, gave unto the diademdecked Arjuna admittance into the array! If he had in the beginning granted permission to the ruler of the Sindhus for his return home, without doubt, such an awful carnage would then have never occurred! Alas, Jayadratha, in hopes of saving his life, had desired to return home! 9-11 Having obtained from Drona a promise of protection in battle, it was I, fool that I was, who prevented him from going! Alas, today

my brothers having Chitrasena for their head, have all perished in the very sight of our wretched selves!*13—

"'Karna said,-Do not blame the preceptor! That Brahmana is fighting according to the measure of his power and courage and regardless of his very life !18 If Arjuna of white steeds, having transgressed him, penetrated into our array, the slightest fault does not, for that, attach to the preceptor.14 Phalguna is accomplished in weapons, possessed of great activity, endued with youth; he is a hero who has mastered all arms; he is distinguished for the celerity of his movements, Armed with celestial weapons and mounted on his ape-bannered car's the reins of whose steeds again were in the hands of Krishna, cased in impenetrable armour, and taking his celestial bow Gandiva of unfading might, the valiant Arjuna,16 scattering keen arrows and proud of the strength of his arms, transgressed Drona. There is nothing to wonder at in this.17 preceptor, on the other hand, is, O king, old and incapable of proceeding quickly. He is also, O king, incapable of exercising his arms long.18 It was for this that Phalguna of white steeds and having Krishna for his charioteer succeeded in transgressing the preceptor. For this reason also, I do not see any fault in For all that, when Arjuna of white steeds penetrated into our array, having transgressed the preceptor, it seems that the latter, however skilled in weapons, is incapable of vanquishing the Pandavas in battle!20 I think that that which is ordained by Fate never occurs otherwise. And since, O Suyodhana, in spite of ourselves fighting to the utmost extent of our powers,21 the ruler of the Sindhus has been slain in battle, it seems that Fate is all-powerful! With thyself we had all been exerting to the utmost of our might on the field of Fate, however, baffling our exertions, did not smile on us! We have always exerted to injure the Pandavas, relying both on deceit and prowess!28 Whatever act, O king, a person afflicted by Fate does, is frustrated by Fate, however, much the person himself may strive to achieve it !24 ever, indeed, a man endued with preservance should do, ought to be done fearlessly. Success depends on Fate !25 By deceit the sons of Pritha were beguiled, as also by the administration of poison, O Bharata! Burnt they were in the palace of lac. Vanquished they were at dice.26 In accordance with the dictates of state-craft, they were exiled into the woods. though done by us with care, have been baffled by Fate.27 Fight with resolution, O king, setting Fate at nought. tween thee and them, both striving to the best of your prowess, even Fate may prove auspicious to that party which excels the other.*28 No wise measures have been adopted by the Pandavas with the aid of superior intelligence. Nor, O hero, do we see, O perpetuator of Kuru's race, that thou hast done anything unwise from want of intelligence !29 It is Fate that settles the result of acts, wise or unwise! Fate, ever intent on its own purposes, is awake when all else sleeps!50 Vast was thy host, and thy warriors are many. Even thus the battle began. *1 With their small force, thy force, much greater and consisting of men capable of smiting effectually, hath been much reduced. I fear, it is the work of Fate, that is, which frustrated our exertions !82-

^{*} This is a triplet in the Bengal texts .- T.

MAHABHARATA.

"Sanjaya continued,—'While they were discoursing thus O king, the Pandava divisions appeared for battle.83 occurred a fierce battle between thy warriors and theirs, in which cars and elephants encountered one another. All this, however, O king, was due to thy evil policy!" "84

SECTION CLIII.

(Ghatotkacha-badha Parva).

"Sanjaya said,—'That elephant force of thine, O king, swelling with might, fought everywhere, prevailing over the Pandava force. Resolved to go to the other world, the Panchalas and the Kaurvas fought with one another for admission into the swelling domains of Yama.2 Brave warriors, encountering brave rivals, pierced one another with arrows and lances and [·] I render the second line freely, following Nilakantha.-T.

http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google Generated on 2022-02-03 12:56 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

darts, and quickly despatched one another unto Yama's abode. Dreadful was the battle that took place between car-warriors and car-warriors who struck one another and caused a fierce flow of blood. 4-4 Infuriate elephants, encountering infuriate compeers, afflicted one another with their tusks. Horsemen, solicitous of glory, pierced and cut down horsemen in that terrific melee with spears and darts and battle-axes. Foot-soldiers also, O mighty-armed one, in hundreds, armed with weapons, repeatedly rushed against one another with resolute courage, O scorcher of foes! So great was the confusion that the Panchalas and the Kurus could only be distinguished from each other by the tribal, the family, and the personal names we heard them The warriors, despatching one another to the other world with arrows and darts and axes, careered fearlessly on the With the thousands of arrows, however, O king, shot by the combatants, the ten points were no longer illuminated as before in consequence of the Sun having set.10 Pāndavas were thus fighting. O Bhārata, Duryodhana, O king. penetrated into the midst of their host." Filled with great wrath at the slaughter of the ruler of the Sindus, and resolved to lay down his life, he penetrated into the hostile army.18 Earth with the rattle of his car-wheels and causing her to tremble therewith, thy son approached the Pandava host,18 Terrific was the clash that took place between him and them, O Bharata, causing a tremendous carnage of troops.14 Like the Sun himself at midday scorching everything with his rays, thy son scorched the hostile host with his arrowy showers.15 Pandavas became incapable of even looking at their brother (Durvodhana). Despairing of vanquishing their foe, they set their hearts on flying away from the field.16 Slaughtered by thy illustrious son armed with the bow, by means of his gold-winged arrows of blazing points, the Panchalas ran away in all direc-Afflicted with those keen shafts, the Pandava troops began to fall down on the ground. Indeed, the Pandavas had never succeeded in achieving such a feat in battle's as was then achieved by thy royal son, O monarch! The Pandava ^{} Literally, "with shafts resembling his rays."-T.

61

host was crushed and grinded by thy son in that battle,19 as an assemblage of lotuses is crushed and grinded by an ele-As again an assemblage of lotuses becomes shorn of its beauty when the water (over which it grows) is dried up by the sun and the wind,20 even so became the Pandava host in consequence of thy son's prowess. Beholding the Pandava army slaughtered by thy son, O Bharata,21 the Panchalas, with Bhimasena at their head, rushed furiously towards him. ing Bhimasena then with ten shafts, and each of the sons of Madri with three,22 and Virata and Drupada each with six, and Cikhandin with a hundred, and Dhrishtadyumna with seventy, and Yudhishthira with seven, and the Kaikeyas and the Chedis with innumerable keen shafts, and Satwata with five, and each of the (five) sons of Draupadi with three,24 and Ghatotkacha also with a few, he uttered a leonine shout. Cutting off hundreds of other warriors and the bodies of elephants and steeds in that great battle by means of his fierce shafts, he behaved like the Destroyer himself in rage slaying created beings. + While engaged, however, in thus slaughtering his foes, his bow the back of whose staff was decked with gold, 25-26 Yudhishthira the son of Pandu, O sire, cut off into three parts with a pair of broad-headed shafts. And Yudhishthira pierced Duryodhana himself with ten keen shafts shot with great force.27 Piercing through Duryodhana's vital limbs, these passed out and entered the Earth in a continuous line. The troops that stood around then encompassed Yudhishthira23 like the celestials encompassing Purandara for the slaughter of Vritra. Then king Yudhishthira, O sire, who is incapable of being easily defeated, sped at thy son in that battle a fierce shaft. Deeply pierced therewith, Duryodhana sat down on his excellent car.29-50 Then a loud noise arose from among the Panchala troops. Even this, O monarch, was that tremendous uproar, viz.,-The king is slain! -The fierce whizz of arrows also was heard there, O Bhārata! Then Drona quickly showed himself there in that battle. Meanwhile, Duryodhana, recovering his senses, had firmly grasped the bow. He was then seen to rush towards the royal son of Pāndu saying,—Wait, Wait. —The Pānchālas also, solicitous of victory, began to advance with speed. Desirous of rescuing the Kuru prince, Drona received them all. And the preceptor began to destroy them like the bright-rayed maker of day destroying tempest-tossed clouds. Then, O king, there occurred a fierce battle, fraught with immense carnage, between thine and theirs encountering one another from desire of fight."

^{*} Or, "as a lake overgrown with lotuses is agitated on every side by an elephant."-T.

^{*} Sixteen lines, occurring after this in the Bombay edition, have been omitted in the Calcutta edition .- T.

SECTION CLIV.

Dhritarashtra said, - Having said all those words unto my son Duryodhana who is ever disobedient to my commands, when that mighty bowman endued with great strength, viz., the preceptor Drona, penetrated in wrath into the Pandava host. and when that hero, stationed on his car, careered over the field, how did the Pandavas check his course ?1-2 Who protected the right wheel of the preceptor's car in that dreadful battle? Who also protected his left wheel, when he fiercely slaughtered Who were those brave warriors that followed that fighting hero at his back? Who were those that stood in front of that car-warrior? When that unvanquished and great bowman, that foremost of all bearers of weapons, dancing along the track of his car, entered the Pandava host, I think his foes felt an excessive and unseasonable cold. I think they trembled like kine exposed to wintry blasts. 5-6 that bull among car-warriors, who consumed all the troops of the Panchalas like a raging conflagration, meet with his death ?"

'Sanjaya said,—'Having slain the ruler of the Sindhus in the evening, Pārtha, after his meeting with Yudhishthira, and that great bowman, viz., Sātyaki, both proceeded towards Drona.' Then Yudhishthira, and Bhimasena the son of Pāndu, with a separate division of the army, quickly proceeded against Drona.' Similarly the intelligent Nakula, and the invincible

Sahadeva, and Dhrishtadyumna with his own division, and Virāta, and the ruler of the Calwas, with a large force, proceeded against Drona in battle. Similarly king Drupada, the father of Dhrishtadyumna, protected by the Panchalas, proceeded, O king, against Drona. And the sons of Draupadi, and the Rakshasu Ghatotkacha, 10-12 accompanied by their forces, proceeded against Drona of great splendour. The Prabhadraka-Pānchālas also, six thousand strong, and all effectual smiters,13 proceeded against Drona, placing Cikhandin at their head. Other foremost of men and mighty car-warriors among the Pandavas,14 uniting together, O bull among men, proceeded When those heroic warriors, O bull among the against Drona. Bharatas, proceeded to battle,15 the night became pitchy dark, enhancing the terrors of the timid. And during that hour of darkness, O king, many were the warriors that laid down their lives.16 And that night also proved the death of many elephants and steeds and foot-soldiers. On that night of pitchy darkness, yelling jackals everywhere' inspired great fear with their blazing mouths. Fierce owls, perching on the standards of the Kauravas and hooting therefrom, foreboded fears. Then, Oking, a fierce uproar arose among the troops.18-19 Mingling with the loud beat of drums and cymbals, the grunt of elephants, the neigh of steeds,20 and the stamp of horse-hoofs, that uproar spread everywhere. Then, in that hour of evening, fierce was the battle that took place 21 between Drona, O king, and all the Srinjayas. The world having been enveloped in darkness, nothing could be noticed.22 The welkin was covered with the dust raised by the combatants. The blood of man and horse and elephant mingled together. 28 The earthy dust then disappeared. All of us became perfectly cheerless. During that night, like the sounds of a burning forest of bamboos on a mountain,34 frightful sounds were heard of clashing weapons. sounds of Mridangus and Anakas and Vallakis and Patahas, with the shouts (of human beings) and the neigh (of steeds), a drendful confusion set in everywhere, O lord! When the field of battle was enveloped in darkness, friends, O king, could not be distinguished from foes. All were possessed with a madness in that night. The earthy dust that had arisen, O king, was soon allayed with showers of blood.27 Then in consequence of the golden coats of mail and the bright ornaments of the warriors, that darkness was dispelled. The Bharata host then, decked in gems and gold, 28 [and abounding with darts and standards], looked like the firmament in the night, O bull of The field of battle then Bharata's race, bespangled with stars. resounded with the yells of jackals and the caw of crows,29 with the grunt of elephants, and the shouts and cries of the warriors. Those sounds, mingling together, produced a loud uproar, making the hair to stand on end. 80 That uproar filled all the points of the compass like the report of Indra's thunder. At dead of night, the Bharata host, seemed illuminated with the Angadus, the ear-rings, the cuirasses, and the weapons of the com-There elephants and cars, adorned with gold, 22 looked in that night like clouds charged with lightning. Swords and darts and maces and scimitars and clubs and lances and axes,18 as they fell, looked like dazzling flashes of fire. was the gust of wind that was the precursor (of that tempest-Cars and elephants constituted its dry clouds. The loud noise of drums and other instruments formed the peal of its thunders. Abounding with standards, bows formed ts lightning flashes. Drona and the Pandavas formed its Scimitars and darts and maces constituted its pouring clouds. Shafts formed its downpour, and weapons (of other kinds), its incessant gusts of wind. And the winds that blew were both exceedingly hot and exceedingly cold. Terrible, stunning, and fierce, it was destructive of life. There was nothing that could afford shelter from it. Combatants, desirous of battle, entered into that frightful host on that dread night resounding with terrible noises, 37 enhancing the fears of the timid and the delight of heroes. And during the progress of that fierce and dreadful battle in the night, 58 the Pandus and the Srinjayas, united together, rushed in wrath against Drona. All those, however, O king, that advanced right against the illustrious Drona,⁵⁹ were either obliged to turn back or despatched to the abode of Yama. Indeed, on that night, Drona, alone, pierced with his shafts elephants in thousands and cars in tens of thousands and millions of foot-soldiers and steeds.' "40-41

^{*} Drums of diverse kinds and sizes. - T.

The Bombay reading is aplava m and not Viplatam .- T.

SECTION CLV.

"Dhritarashtra said,-'When the invincible Drona of immeasurable energy, unable to bear (the slaughter of Jayadratha), wrathfully entered into the midst of the Srinjayas, what did you all think? When that warrior of immeasurable soul, having said those words unto my disobedient son Duryodhana, so entered (the hostile ranks), what steps did Partha When after the fall of the heroic Jayadratha and of Bhuricravas, that unvanquished warrior of great energy, that scorcher of foes, viz., the unconquerable Drona, proceeded against the Panchalas, what did Arjuna think? What also did Duryodhana think as the most seasonable step that he could adopt ? 3-4 Who were they that followed that boon-giving hero, that foremost of regenerate ones? Who were those heroes, O Suta, that stood behind that here while engaged in battle? Who fought in his van while he was employed in slaughtering the foe in battle? I think, all the Pandavas, afflicted with the arrows of Bharadwaja's son, were, O Suta, like lean kine trembling under a wintry sky. Having penetrated into the midst of the Panchalas, how did that great bowman, that scorcher of foes, that tiger among men, meet with his death? When on that night all the troops, united together, and all the great car-warriors combined, were being separately grinded (by Drona), who were those intelligent men among you that were present there? Thou sayest that my troops were slain or huddled together, or vanquished, and that my car-warriors were made car-less in those encounters. While those combatants became heartless and were being grinded by the Pandavas, what did they think when they sank in such affliction on that dark night ?9-10 Thou sayest that the Pandavas were hearty and exceedingly hopeful, and that mine were melancholy and heartless and panic-struck.¹¹ How, O Sanjaya, couldst thou mark the distinction on that night between the Kurus and the unretreating Parthas?¹⁸

^{*} This is a triplet in all the editions.-T.

"Sanjaya said,-'During the progress, O king, of that fierce night-battle, the Pandavas along with the Somakas all rushed against Drona.18 Then Drona, with his swift-going shafts, despatched all the Kaikeyas and the sons of Dhrishtadyumna into the world of spirits.14 Indeed, all those mighty car-warriors, O king, that advanced right against Drona, all those lords of Earth, were despatched (by him) into the region of the Then king Civi of great prowess, filled with rage, proceeded against that mighty car-warrior, viz., the heroic son of Bharadwaja, while the latter was thus employed in grinding (the hostile combatants).16 Beholding that great car-warrior of the Pandavas advancing, Drona pierced him with ten shafts made entirely of iron.17 Civi, however, pierced Drona in return with thirty shafts winged with Kanka feathers. And smiling the while, he also, with a broad-headed shaft, felled the driver of Drona's car. 18 Drona then, slaying the steeds of the illustrious Civi, as also the driver of his car, cut off from his trunk Civi's head with head-gear on it.19 Then Duryodhana quickly sent unto Drona a driver for his car. The reins of his steeds having been taken up by the new man, Drona once more rushed against his foes. so The son of the ruler of the Kalingas, supported by the Kalinga troops, rushed against Bhimasena, filled with rage at the slaughter of his sire by the latter.21 pierced Bhima with five shafts, he once more pierced him with And he struck Vicoka (the driver of Bhima's car) with three shafts and the latter's standard with one.22 Then Vrikodara, filled with rage, leaping from his own car to that of his foe, slew with only his firsts that angry hero of the Kalingas.28 The bones of that prince thus slain in battle by the mighty son of of Pandu with only his fists, fell down on the Earth, separated from one another.24 Karna and the brother of the slain prince, (and others), could not brook that act of Bhima. All of them began to strike Bhimasena with keen shafts resembling snakes of virulent poison,25 Abandoning then that car of the foe (upon which he stood), Bhima proceeded to the car of Dhruva,* and http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-googl Generated on 2022-02-03 12:56 GMT

crushed, by a blow of his fist, that prince who had been striking him incessantly.36 Thus struck by the mighty son of Pandu, Having slain him, O king, Bhimasena of Dhruva fell down. great strength,27 proceeding to the car of Jayarata, began to roar repeatedly like a lion. Dragging Jayarata then with his left arm, while employed in roaring, so he slew that warrior with a slap of his palm in the very sight of Karna. Then Karna hurled at the son of Pandu, a dart decked with gold.29 Pandava, however, smiling the while, seized with his hand that dart. And the invincible Vrikodara in that battle hurled that very dart back at Karna. Then Cakuni, with a shaft that had drunk oil, cut off that dart as it coursed towards Karna. ing achieved these mighty feats in battle, Bhima of wonderful prowess⁸¹ came back to his own car and rushed against thy And while Bhima was thus advancing, slaughtering (thy troops) like the Destroyer himself in rage, 22 thy sons, O m march, attempted to resist that mighty-armed hero. those mighty car-warriors covered him with a dense shower of arrows,38 Then Bhima, smiling the while, despatched in that battle, with his shafts, the driver and the steeds of Durmada unto the abode of Yama.34 Durmada, at this, quickly mounted upon the car of Dushkarna. Then those scorchers of foes, viz., the two brothers, riding on the same car, 85 both rushed against Bhima in the front rank of battle, like the Regent of the waters and Surva rushing against Taraka, that foremost of Daityas. 55 Then thy sons Durmada and Dushkarna, mounting on the same car, pierced Bhima with shafts.37 Then in the very sight of Karna, of Agwatthaman, of Duryodhana, of Kripa, of Somadatta, and of Vālhika, the son of Pāndu, st that chastiser of foes, by a stamp of his foot, caused that car of the heroic Durmada and Dushkarna to sink into the Earth. Filled with rage, he struck with his fists those mighty and brave sons of thine, viz., Durmada and Dushkarna, and crushed them therewith and roared aloud. Then cries of Oh and Alas arose among the troops. And the kings, beholding Bhima, said,—That is Rudra who is fighting in Bhima's form among the Dhartarashtras!41—Saying these words, O B'iar sta, all the kings fled away, deprived of their senses and urging the animals they rode to their greatest Indeed, no two of them could be seen running together.42 Then when on that night a great carnage had been caused among the (Kaurava) army, the mighty Vrikodara, with eyes beautiful as the full-blown lotus, highly applauded by many bulls among kings, repairing unto Yudhishthira, paid his regards unto him.43 Then the twins (Nakula and Sahadeva), and Drupada and Virāta, and the Kaikeyas, and Yudhishthira also, felt great joy. And all of them paid their adorations unto Vrikodara even as the celestials did unto Mahadeva after Andhaka had been slain.44 Then thy sons, all equal unto the sons of Varuna, filled with rage and accompanied by the illustrious preceptor and a large number of cars, foot-soldiers, and elephants, encompassed Vrikodara on all sides from desire of fight.45 Then, O best of kings, on that terrible night when everything was enveloped in a darkness as thick as a cloud, a dreadful battle took place between those illustrious warriors, delightful to wolves and crows and vultures." "46

^{*} The brother of the Kalinga prince .- T.

SECTION CLVI.

"Sanjaya said,—'After his son (Bhuricravas) had been slain by Sātyaki while the former was sitting in $Pr\bar{a}ya$, Somadatta, filled with rage, said unto Sātyaki these words:'—Why, O Sātwata, having abandoned those Kshatriya duties ordained by the high-souled gods, hast thou betaken thyself to the practices of robbers? Why would one that is observant of Kshatriya duties and possessed of wisdom, strike in battle a person that is turning away from the fight, or one that has become helpless, or one that has laid aside his weapons, or one that beggeth for quarter? Two persons, indeed, among the Vrishnis are reputed to be the foremost of great car-warriors, viz., Praddyumna of mighty energy and thou also, O Sātyaki! Why then didst thou behave so cruelly and sinfully towards one that had sat in $Pr\bar{a}ya$ and that had his arm cut off by Partha?*5 Take now in battle the consequence of that act of thine, O thou of wicked behaviour! I shall today, O wretch, putting forth my prowess, cut off thy head with a winged arrow 16 I swear, O Sātwata, by my two sons, by what is dear to me, and by all my meritorious acts, that if before this night passes away I do not slay thee that art so proud of thy heroism, with thy sons and younger brother, provided Jishnu the son of Pritha does not protect thee, then let me sink into terribe hell, O wretch of Vrishni's race!7-3—Having said these words, the mighty Somadatta, filled with rage, blew his conch loudly and uttered a leonine roar! Then Satyaki, of eyes like lotus petals and teeth like those of a lion, possessed of great strength, and filled with rage, said these words unto Somadatta !10-O thou of Kuru's race, whether battling with thee or with others, I do not in my heart ever experience the slightest fear!" by all the troops, thou fightest with me, I would not, even then, experience on thy account, any pain, O thou of Kuru's I am ever observant of Kshatriya practices. canst not, therefore, frighten me with only words scenting of battle or with speeches that insult the good!" thou wishest to fight with me today, be cruel and strike me with keen shafts and I also will strike thee !14 Thy son, the mighty car-warrior Bhuricravas, has, O king, been slain! also, and Vrishasena, have been crushed by me.15 today I shall slay, with thy sons and kinsmen! Stay with resolution in battle, for thou, O Kaurava, art endued with great Thou art already slain in consequence of the energy of that drum-bannered king Yudhishthira in whom are always charity, and self-restraint, and purity of heart, and compassion, and modesty, and intelligence, and forgiveness, and all else that is indestructible! Thou shalt meet with destruction along with Karna and Suvala's son !17-18 I swear by Krishna's feet and by all my good acts that, filled with rage, I shall, with my shafts, slay thee with thy sons in battle!" If thou fliest away from battle, then mayst thou have safety !-

^{*} Pataniyam is explained by Nilakantha as something that causes the patana or downfall of a person, hence, sin.-T.

Having thus addressed each other with eves red in wrath. those foremost of men began to shoot their shafts at each other. Then with a thousand cars and ten thousand horse,1 Duryodhana took his station, encompassing Somadatta. Cakuni also, filled with rage, and armed with every weapon,22 and surrounded by his sons and grandsons as also by his brothers that were ernal to Indra himself in prowess, (did the same). in-law, O king, young in years and of body hard as the thurder-bolt,23 and possessed of wisdom, had a hundred thousand horse of the foremost valour with him. With these he encompassed the mighty bowman Somadatta.24 Protected by those mighty warriors, Somadatta covered Satyaki (with clouds of shafts). Beholding Satyaki thus covered with clouds of straight shafts, 45 Dhrishtadyumna proceeded towards him in rage and accompanied by a mighty force. Then, O king, the sound that arose there of those two large hosts striking each other, resembled that of many oceans lashed into fury by frightful hurri-Then Somadatta pierced Sātyaki with nine arrows.26-27 Satyaki, in return, struck that foremost of Kuru warriors with Deeply pierced in that battle by the mighty and firm bowman (Sātyaki),38 Somadatta sat down on the terrace of his car and lost his senses in a swoon. Beholding him deprived of his senses, his driver, with great speed,29 bore away from the battle that great car-warrior, viz., the heroic Seeing that Somadatta, afflicted with Yuyudhana's Somadatta. shafts, had lost his senses, so Drona rushed with speed, desiring to slay the Yadu hero. Beholding the preceptor advance, many Pāndava warriors headed by Yudhishthira, surrounded that illustrious perpetuator of Yadu's race from desire of rescuing Then commenced a battle between Drona and the Pandavas, 22 resembling that between Vali and the celestia's from desire of the sovereignty of the three worlds. Then Bharadwaia's son of great energy shrouded the Pandava host with clouds of arrows, and pierced Yudhishthira also. And Drona pierced Satyaki with ten arrows, and the son of Prishata twenty, 85-84 And he pierced Bhimasena with nine arrows, and Nakula with five, and Sahadeva with eight, and Cikhandin with a hundred. 55 And the mighty-armed hero pierced each of the (five) sons of Draupadi with five arrows. And he pierced Virata with eight arrows and Drupada with ten." And he pierced Yudhāmanyu with three arrows and Uttamaujas with six in that encounter. And piercing many other combatants, he rushed towards Yudhisthira. The troops of Pandu's son, slaughtered by Drona, ran away in all directions, from fear, O king, with loud wails. 38 Beholding that host thus slaughtered by Drona, Phalguna the son of Pritha, with wrath excited a little, quickly proceeded towards the preceptor. 39 Beholding then that Drona also was proceeding towards Arjuna in that battle, that host of Yudhishthira, O king, once more rallied.40 Then once more occurred a battle between Drona and the Pandavas. Drona, surrounded, O king, on all sides, by thy sons,41 began to consume the Pandava host like fire consuming a heap of cotton. Beholding him radiant like the Sun and endued with the splendour of a blazing fire,42 and fiercely and continually, O king, emitting his ray-like arrows, with bow incessantly drawn to a circle, and scorching everything around like the Sun himself,49 and consuming his foes, there was none in that host that could The shafts of Drona, cutting off the heads of all those that ventured to approach him in the face, penetrated into Thus slaughtered by that illustrious warrior, the Pandava host,44-45 once more fled away in fear in the very sight Beholding that force, O Bharata, thus routed on that night by Drona,46 Jishnu asked Govinda to proceed towards Then he of Daçarha's race urged those steeds white as silver or vaccine milk or the Kunda flower or the moon, towards the car of Drona. Bhimasena also, beholding Phalguna proceed towards Drona,47-48 commanded his own charioteer, saying, -Bear me towards Drona's division !- Hearing those words of Bhima, his driver Vicoka urged his steeds,49 following in the wake, O chief of the Bharatas, of Jishnu of sure Beholding the two brothers resolutely proceeding towards Drona's division. 50 the mighty car-warriors among the Panchalas, the Srinjavas, the Matsyas, the Chedis, the Kārushas, the Koçalas, and the Kaikeyas, Oking, all followed them. O monarch, took place a terrible battle that made the hair to stand on end. With two mighty throngs of cars, Vibhatsu and Vrikodara attacked thy host, the former on the right and the latter in the front. Seeing those tigers among men, viz., Bhimasena and Dhananjaya, (thus engaged),52-58 Dhrishtadyumna, O monarch, and Sātyaki of great strength, rushed behind. Then, O king, an uproar arose there in consequence of the two hosts striking each other, that resembled the noise made by many seas lashed into fury by a tempest. Beholding Sātyaki in battle, Acwatthaman, filled with rage at the slaughter of Somadatta's son, rushed furiously against that Satwata hero at the van of battle. Seeing him rush in that battle against the car of Cini's grandson,54-56 Bhimasena's son, the gigantic Rākshasa Ghatotkacha endued with great strength, rushed at him, riding on a huge and terrible car made of black iron covered with bear skins. Both the height and the width of that large car measured thirty nalwas. Equipt with machines set on proper places, its rattle resembled that of a mighty mass of clouds. 67-68 No steeds or elephants were yoked unto it, but, instead, beings that looked like elephants.+ On its tall standard perched a prince of vultures with outstretched wings and feet, with eyes wide-expanded, and shrieking awfully. And it was equipt with red flags and decked with the entrails of various animals. 69-60 And that huge vehicle was furnished with eight wheels. on it, Ghatotkacha was surrounded by a full Akshauhini of fierce-looking Rakshasas armed with lances and heavy clubs and rocks and trees. Seeing him advance with uplifted bow and resembling the mace-armed Destroyer himself in the hour of universal dissolution, the hostile kings were struck with fear. At sight of that prince of Rākshusas, viz., Ghatotkacha, looking like a mountain summit, of terrible aspect, frightful, possessed of terrible teeth and fierce face, with arrow-like ears and high cheek-bones, with stiff hair rising upwards, awful eyes, blazing mouth, and sunken belly, with esophagus wide as a chasm, and a diadem on his head, capable of striking every creature with fear, possessing jaws wide open like those of the Destroyer, endued with great splendour, and capable of agitating all foes,

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:56 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

A nulwa measured four hundred cubits .- T.

[†] Nilaka ntha explains that these were Picachas.-T.

advancing towards them, 61-66 thy son's host, afflicted with fear, became highly agitated like the current of the Ganga agitated into fierce eddies by (the action of) the wind. Terrified by the leonine roars uttered by Ghatotkacha, elephants began to eject urin and the kings began to tremble.  Then, poured by the Rākshasas who had become more powerful in consequence of the night, there began to fall on the field of battle a thick shower of stones.69 And a ceaseless shower of iron wheels and Bhucundis and darts and lances and spears and Cataghnis and axes also fell there.70 Beholding that fierce and awful battle, the kings, thy sons, and Karna also, exceedingly pained, fled away."1 Only the proud son of Drona, ever boastful of his might in arms, stood fearlessly. And he soon dispelled that illusion that had been created by Ghatotkacha.72 Upon the destruction of his illusion, Ghatotkacha in rage sped fierce shafts (at These pierced the son of Drona,78 like angry Acwatthaman). snakes speedily piercing through an anthill. These arrows. having pierced through the body of Açwatthaman, became dyed with blood74 and quickly entered the Earth like snakes into an anthill. The light-handed Acwatthaman, however, of great prowess, filled with wrath,75 pierced Ghatotkacha with ten Ghatatkocha, deeply pierced in his vital parts by Drona's son, 76 and feeling great pain, took up a wheel having a thousand spokes. Its edge was sharp as a razor, and it was resplendent as the rising Sun. And it was decked with diverse gems and diamonds.77 Desirous of slaying him, the son of Bhimasena hurled that wheel at Acwatthaman. And as that wheel coursed swiftly towards Drona's son, the lattler cut it into fragments by means of his shafts.78 Baffled it fell down on the Earth, like the hope cherished by an unfortunate man. Beholding his wheel baffled, Ghatotkacha quickly 23 covered the son of Drona with his shafts like Rahu swallowing the Sun. Meanwhile, Ghatotkacha's son endued with great splendour and looking like a mass of antimony to checked the advancing son of Drona like the king of mountains (Meru) checking the (course of the) wind. Afflicted with showers of shafts by Bhimasena's grandson, viz., the brave Anjanaparvan, Açwatthama I looked like the mountain Meru bearing a torrent of

Then Acwatthaman, equal unto rain from a mighty cloud. Rudra or Upendra in prowess, became filled with rage. 81-82 With one shaft he cut off the standard of Anjanaparvan; With two others, his two drivers, and with three others, his Trivenuka. 33 And he cut off the Rakshasa's bow with one arrow, and his four steeds with four other arrows. carless, Anjanaparvan took up a scimitar. With another keen shaft, Acwatthaman cut off into two fragments that scimitar, decked with golden stars, in the Rākshasa's hand. The grandson of Hidimva then, O king, whirling a golddecked mace, quickly hurled it at Açwatthāman. son, however, striking it with his shafts, caused it to fall down on the Earth. Soaring up then into the sky, Anjanaparvan began to roar like a black cloud.84-86 And from the Like the Sun piercing welkin he showered trees upon his foe. a mass of clouds with his rays, Acwatthaman then began to pierce with his shafts the son of Ghatotkacha, that receptacle of illusions, in the welkin. Gifted with great energy, the Rākshasa once more came down on his gold-decked car. 87-88 He then looked like a high and beautiful hill of antimony on The son of Drona then slew that the surface of the Earth. son of Bhima's son, viz., Anjanaparvan, cased in an iron coat of mail, even as Mahadeva had slain in days of yore the Asura Beholding his mighty son slain by Acwatthaman, 32-0 Ghatotkacha, coming unto the son of Drona, fearlessly addressed the heroic son of Caradwat's daughter who was then consuming the Pandava troops like a raging forest-conflagration, in these words."1

"'Ghatotkacha said,—Wait, wait, O son of Drona! Thou shalt not escape me with life! I shall slay thee today like Agni's son slaying Krauncha!"22—

"'Açwatthāman said,—Go, O son, and fight with others, O thou that hast the provess of a celestial! It is not proper, O son of Hidimvā, that sire should battle with son! I do not cherish any wrath against thee, O son of Hidimvā! When, however, one's wrath is excited, one may kill one's own self! 94_-'

^{*} Açwatthāman and the Pāndavas were like brothers, for both were disciples of Drona. Ghatotkacha, therefore, having been Bhima's son was Açwatthāman's brother's son.—T.

Sanjaya continued,—'Having heard these words, Ghatotkacha, filled with grief on account of the fall of his son and with eyes red as copper in wrath, approached Açwatthaman and said, 55—Am I a distard in battle, O son of Drona, like gar person, that thou afrightest me thus with words? thy words are improper 96 Verily, I have been begot by Bhima in the celebrated race of the Kurus! I am a son of the Pandavas, those heroes that never retreat from battle!97 king of the Rākshasas, equal to the Ten-necked (Rāvana) in Wait, wait, O son of Drona! Thou shalt not escape me with life !98 I shall today on the field of battle dispell thy desire for fight !- Having thus replied unto Açwatthaman, that mighty Rikshasa, with eyes red as copper in rage, " rushed furiously against the son of Drona like a lion against a prince And Ghatotkacha began to shower upon that of elephants. bull among car-warriors, viz., Drona's son, shafts of the measure of the Aksha of a battle-car, like a cloud pouring torrents of Drona's son, however, with his own shafts, dispelled that arrowy shower before it could reach him. 100-1 time it seemed that another encounter was taking place in the welkin between shafts (as the combatants). then, during that night, shone resplendent with the sparks caused by the clash of those weapons as if with (myriads of) fire flies. Observing that his illusion was dispelled by Drona's son proud of his prowess in battle,103-8 Ghatotkacha, once more making himself invisible, created an illusion. assumed the form of a high mountain, crowded with cliffs and trees,104 and possessing fountains from which ceaselessly flowed spears and lances and swords and heavy clubs. Beholding that mountain like a mass of antimony, with countless weapons falling from it, Drona's son was not at all moved. The latter invoked into existence the Vajra weapon. *105-6 That prince of mountains then, struck with that weapon, was quickly des-Then the Rākshasa, becoming a mass of blue clouds troyed.

^{*} I. e., the weapon enduel with the force of the thunder .- T.

in the firmament, decked with rain-bow, 107 began to furiously shower upon Drona's son in that battle a downpour of stones and rocks. Then that foremost of all persons acquainted with weapons, viz., Açwatthaman, aiming the Vayavya weapon, 108 destroyed that blue cloud which had risen on the firmament. Drona's son, that foremost of men, covering then all the points of the compass with his shafts, slew a hundred thousand carwarriors. He beheld Ghatotkacha then fearlessly coming towards him with bent bow and accompanied by a large number of Rākshasas that resembled lions or tigers or elephants of infuriate prowess,109-111 some riding on elephants, some on cars, and some on steeds. The son of Hidimva was accompanied by those fierce followers of his, with frightful faces and heads and Those Rakshasas consisted of both Paulasthyas and Yātudhānas.* Their prowess was equal to that of Indra him-They were armed with diverse kinds of weapons and cased in diverse kinds of armour.118 Of terrible visage, they swelled with rage. Ghatotkacha came to battle, accompanied by those Rākshasas, who were, indeed, incapable of being easily defeated in battle.114 Beholding them, thy son Duryodhana became exceedingly cheerless. Unto him the son of Drona said,-Wait, O Duryodhana! Thou needst have no Stand aside with these thy heroic brothers and these lords of Earth endued with the prowess of Indra! I will slay thy foes! Defeat thou shalt not have! I tell thee truly! Meanwhile, assure thy troops !- 116

"'Duryodhana said,—I do not regard what thou sayest to be at all wonderful, since thy heart is large! O son of Gautama's daughter, thy regard for us is great!"

"Sanjaya continued,—'Having said those words unto Açwatthāman, he then addressed the son of Suvala, saying,—Dhananjaya is engaged in battle, surrounded by a hundred thousand car-warriors of great valour! Go thou against him, with sixty thousand cars! Karna also, and Vrishasena, and Kripa, and Nila, 118-19 and the Northerners, and Kritavarman, and the sons of Purumitra, and Dusçāsana, and Nikumbha, and Kunda-

^{*} Different species of Rakshasas. -T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:56 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

vedin,120 and Puranjaya, and Dridaratha, and Patakin, and Hemapunjaka, and Calya, and Aruni, and Indrasena, and Sanjaya, and Vijaya, and Jaya,121 and Kamalaksha, and Parakrathin, and Jayadharman, and Sudarçana,-these will follow thee, with sixity thousand foot-soldiers.122 O uncle, slay Bhima and the twins and king Yudhishthira the just, like the chief of the celestials slaying the Asuras! My hope of victory is on Already deeply pierced by Drona's son with shafts, all their limbs have been exceedingly mangled. Slay the sons of Kunti, O uncle, like Agni's son (Kartikeya) slaying the Asuras !184-Thus addressed by thy son, Cakuni proceeded quickly for destroying the Pandavas, filling thy sons, O king, with delight !125

"'Meanwhile, O king, the battle that took place between the Rikshasa and the son of Drona on that night was exceedingly terrible like that between Cakra and Pralhada (in days of old). 126 Ghatotkacha, filled with rage, struck Drona's son in the chest with ten powerful shafts fierce as poison or fire.127 pierced with those shafts sped by the son of Bhimasena, Acwatthaman trembled on the terrace of his car like a tall tree shaken by the tempest.128 Once more, Ghatotkacha, with a broad-headed shaft, quickly cut off the bright bow that was in the hands of Drona's son. 129 The latter then, taking up another bow capable of bearing a great strain, showered keen arrows (upon his foe) like a cloud pouring torrents of rain. 150 Then the son of Caradwat's daughter, O Bharata, sped many sky-ranging and foe-slaying arrows winged with gold towards the sky-ranging Rākshasa.131 Afflicted with those shafts of Acwatthaman, that vast force of broad-chested Rakshasas looked like a herd of infuriate elephants afflicted by lions. 113 Consuming with his arrows those Rākshasas with their steeds, drivers, and elephants, he blazed forth like the adorable Agni while consuming creatures at the end of the Yuga.188 Having burnt with his shafts a full Akshauhini of Rākshasa troops, Açwatthaman shone resplendent like the divine Maheçwara in heaven after the burning of the tripple city.*184 That foremost of victors, viz., Drona's son, having burnt thy foes, shone brilliantly like the blazing Yuga fire after having burnt all creatures at the end of the Yuga. 185 Then Ghatotkacha, filled with rage, urged that vast Rākshasa force on, saying,-Slay the son of Drona !186-That command of Ghatotkacha was obeyed by those terrible Rākshasas of bright teeth, large faces, frightful aspects,187 gaping mouths, long tongues and eyes blazing with Causing the Earth to be filled with their loud leonine roars,188 and armed with diverse kinds of weapons, they rushed against the son of Drona for slaying him. Endued with fierce prowess, those Rākshasas, with eyes red in wrath, fearlessly hurled at Acwatthaman's head hundreds and thousands of darts, and Catagnis, and spiked maces, and Acanis, and long lances, and axes, and seimitars, and maces, and short arrows, and heavy clubs, and battle-axes, and spears, and swords, lances, and Kunapas, and polished Kampanas, and Sthulas, and rockets, and stones, and vessels of (hot) treacle, and sthunas made of black iron, and mallets, all of terrible forms and capable of destroying foes. 189-48 Beholding that thick shower of weapons falling upon the head of Drona's son, thy warriors were much pained.148 The son of Drona, however, fearlessly destroyed with his whetted shafts endued with the force of the thunder that frightful shower of weapons looking like a risen Then the high-souled son of Drona, with other weapons equipt with golden wings and inspired by mantras with the force of celestial arms, speedily slew many Rakshasas.145 Afflicted with those shafts, that vast force of broad-chested Rākshasas looked like a herd of infuriate elephants afflicted by lions.100 Then those mighty Rakshasas, thus afflicted by Drona's son, became filled with fury and rushed against the former.147 prowess that the son of Drona then showed was exceedingly wonderful, for the feat he achieved is incapable of being achieved by any other being among living creatures,148 since, alone and unsupported, that warrior acquainted with high and mighty weapons burnt that Rakshasa force with his blazing shafts in the very sight of that prince of Rakshasas.149 Whilst consuming that Rikshasa force, Drona's son in that battle shone resplendent like the Samvartaka fire while burning all creatures at the end of the Yuga.150 Indeed, amongst those thousands of kings and those Pandavas, O Bharata, there was none, except that mighty prince of the Rākshasas, viz., the heroic Ghatotkacha, capable of even looking at the son of Drona in that battle, who was thus employed in consuming their ranks with his shafts resembling snakes of virulent poison. 151-52 The Rākshasa, O chief of the Bharatas, with eyes rolling in wrath, striking his palms, and biting his (nether) lip,158 addressed his own driver, saving.-Bear me towards the son of Drona !- Riding on that formidable car equipt with triumphal banners, that slayer of foes once more proceeded against Drona's son desiring a single combat with Endued with terrible prowess, the Rākshasa. uttering a loud leonine roar, hurled in that encounter at Drona's son, having whirled it (previously), a terrible Acani of celestial workmanship and equipt with eight bells.154-56 however, jumping down from his car, having left his bow thereon, seized it and hurled it back at Ghatotkacha himself. Ghatotkacha, meanwhile, had quickly alighted from his car. 187 That formidable Acani, of dazzling effulgence, having reduced to ashes the Rākshasa's vehicle with steeds and driver and standard, entered the Earth, having pierced her through.158 Beholding that feat of Drona's son, viz., his having jumped down and seized that terrible Açani of celestial workmanship, all creatures applauded it.159 Proceeding then, O king, to Dhrishtadyumna's car, Bhimasena's son, taking up a terrible bow that resembled the large bow of Indra himself,160 once more sped many keen shafts at the illustrious son of Drona. tadyumna also fearlessly shot at Acwatthaman's chest many foremost of shafts equipt with wings of gold and resembling snakes of virulent poison. Then Drona's son shot arrows and long shafts by thousands.161-62 Those two heroes, however, viz., Ghatotkacha and Dhrishtadyumna, struck and baffled Açwatthaman's shafts by means of their own shafts whose touch resembled that of fire. The battle then that took place between those two lions among men (on the one side) and the son of ^{} Acani literally means the thunder. Probably, some kind of iron mace. -T.

Tripura, belonging to an Asura of the same name. -T.

Drona (on the other) became fierce in the extreme and gladdened all the combatants, O bull of Bharata's race! Then, accompanied by a thousand cars, three hundred elephants, 168-64 and six thousand horse, Bhimasena arrived at that spot. The virtuous son of Drona, however, endued as he was with prowess that knew no fatigue, continued to fight with the heroic son of Bhima and with Dhrishtadyumna supported by his followers.* The prowess then that Drona's son displayed on that occasion was exceedingly wonderful,165-67 inasmuch as, O Bhārata, none else amongst all creatures is capable of accomplishing such Within the twinkling of an eye, he destroyed, by means of his sharp shafts, a full Akshauhini of Rākshasa troops with steeds, drivers, cars, and elephants, in the very sight of Bhimasena and Hidimya's son and Prishata's son168 and the twins and Dharma's son and Vijaya and Achyuta. + Deeply struck with the straight-going shafts (of Acwatthaman),169 elephants fell down on the Earth like crestless mountains. Strewn all around with the lopped off trunks of elephants, that moved still in convulsions, the Earth looked beautiful as if overspread with moving snakes. And the Earth looked resplendent with golden staves and royal umbrellas, 170-71 like the firmament at the end of the Yuga bespangled with planets and stars and many moons And Drona's son caused a bloody river of impetu-The blood of elephants and steeds ous current to flow there. and combatants formed its water. Tall standards formed its Drums formed its large tortoises; umbrellas, its rows of swans; yak-tails in profusion, its froth; Kankas and vultures, its crocodiles; weapons in profusion, its fishes; large elephants, the stones and rocks on its banks; elephants and steeds, its sharks; cars, its unstable and broad banks; and banners, its beautiful rows of trees. Having shafts for its (smaller) fishes, that frightful river had lances and darts and swords for its

^{*} The Bengal texts read Utkrishta-vikramas. The correct reading seems to be Aklishta-vikramas. Then again, Sahānujam seems to be inaccurate. I follow the Bombay reading Sahānugam.—T.

⁺ Achyuta, when used as a proper noun, refers to Krishna. It means -- 'of unfading glory' and not 'the immortal one.'-T.

snakes; marrow and flesh for its mire, and trunkless bodies floating on it for its rafts. And it was choked with the hair (of men and animals) for its moss. And it inspired the timid with cheerlessness and fear. And the wails of combatants constituted its frightful roar. And bloody waves were seen on its surface. 172-77 Rendered frightful by means of the foot-soldiers with which it teemed, Yama's abode was the ocean towards which it flowed. Having slain the Rakshasas, Drona's son then began to afflict the son of Hidimva with his arrows."78 Filled once more with rage, the puissant son of Drona, having pierced with many shafts those mighty car-warriors, viz., the Parthas including Vrikodara and the sons of Prishata, slew Suratha, one of the sons of Drupada. Then he slew in that battle Suratha's younger brother named Catrunjaya. 179-10 then he slew Valānika and Jayānika, and Jaya. more, with a keen shaft, Drona's son, uttering a leonine roar,185 slew Prishadhru, and then the proud Chandrasena. he slew with ten arrows the ten sons of Kuntibhoja.182 Then, Oking, Drona's son despatched Crutayush to the abode of With three other keen shafts equipt with beautiful wings and red eyes,188 he despatched the mighty Catrunjaya to the region of Cakra.* Then Acwatthaman, filled with rage, fixed on his bowstring a fierce and straight arrow.184 Drawing the string to his ear, he quickly shot that fierce and excellent arrow resembling the rod of Death himself, aiming at Ghatotkacha.185 That mighty shaft, equipt with beautiful wings, passing through the chest of the Rākshasa, O lord of Earth, entered the Earth, piercing through it.186 Ghatotkacha thereupon fell down on the car. Beholding him fallen down and believing him to be dead, the mighty car-warrior Dhrishtadyumna took him away from the presence of Drona's son and Thus, O king, caused him to be placed upon another car.187 that car-force of Yudhishthira turned away from the fight. The heroic son of Drona then, having vanquished his foes, uttered a loud roar. And he was worshipped by all men and ^{*} Slight differences are observable between the Bengal and the Benbay texts as regards the last three verses .- T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:56 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

all thy sons, O sire !*188 The Earth, strewn all around with the fallen bodies of dead Rakshasas pierced and mangled with hundreds of arrows, became fierce-looking and impassable as if strewn with mountain summits.189 Then Siddhas and Gandharvas and Picachas, and Nagas, and birds, and Pitris, and ravens, and large numbers of cannibals and ghosts, and Apsaras, and celestials, all combined in highly applauding the son of Drona." 190

SECTION CLVII.

"Sanjaya said,—'Beholding the sons of Drupada, as also those of Kuntibhoja, and Rākshasas too in thousands, slain by the son of Drona, Yudhishthira, and Bhimasena, and Dhrishtadyumna the son of Prishata, and Yuyudhana, uniting together, set their hearts firmly on battle.3 Then Somadatta, once more filled with rage upon beholding Sātyaki in that battle, covered the latter, O Bharata, with a dense shower of arrows. Then took place a battle, fierce and exceedingly wonderful to behold. between thy warriors and those of the foe, both parties being solicitous of victory.4 Fighting on behalf of Sātyaki, Bhima pierced the Kaurava hero with ten shafts. Somadatta, however, in return, pierced that hero with a hundred arrows. Then Satwata, filled with rage, pierced with ten keen shafts endued with the force of the thunder, that old warrior afflicted with grief on account of the death of his son, and who was, besides, endued with every estimable virtue like Yayati the son of Nahusha. Having pierced him with great force, he struck him once more with seven arrows.6-7 Then, fighting for the sake of Satyaki, Bhimasena hurled at the head of Somadatta a new, hard, and terrible Parigha. Sātyaki also, filled with rage, sped at Somadatta's chest, in that battle, an excellent shaft, keen and equipt with goodly wings and resembling fire itself in splendour. The Parigha and the shaft, both terrible, fell simultaneously upon the body of the heroic Soma-That mighty car warrior thereupon fell down.10 holding his son (Somadatta) thus fallen into a swoon, Valhika ^{*} Tais is a triplet. -T.

rushed at Sātyaki, scattering showers of arrows like a cloud in season.11 Then Bhima, for Satyaki's sake, afflicted the illustrious Valhika with nine shafts and pierced him therewith at the van of battle.12 The mighty-armed son of Pratipa then (viz., Vālhika), filled with great wrath, hurled a dart at the chest of Bhima, like Purandara himself hurling the thunder.18 Struck therewith, Bhima trembled (on his car) and swooned The mighty warrior then, recovering his senses, hurled a mace at his opponent.14 Hurled by the son of Pandu, that mace snatched away the head of Valhika, who thereupon fell down lifeless on the Earth like a tree struck down by light-Upon the slaughter of that bull among men, viz., the heroic Valhika, ten of thy sons, each of whom was equal unto Rāma the son of Dacaratha in prowess, began to afflict Bhima.16 They were Nagadatta, and Dridaratha, and Viravahu, and Ayobhuja, and Dridha, and Suhasta, and Virajas, and Pramatha, and Ugrayayin.17 Beholding them, Bhimasena became filled with rage. He then took up a number of arrows, each capable of bearing a great strain. Aiming at each of them one after another, he sped those arrows at them, striking each in his vital part.18 Pierced therewith, they fell down from their cars, deprived of energy and life, like tall trees from mountain cliffs, broken by a tempest.19 Having with those ten shafts slain those ten sons of thine, Bhima shrouded the favourite son of Karna with showers of arrows. Then the celebrated Vrikaratha, brother of Karna, pierced Bhima with many arrows. The mighty Pandava, however, soon disposed of him effectually. 91 Slaying next, O Bharata, seven car-warriors among thy brothers-in-law, with his shafts, the heroic Bhima pressed Catachandra down into the Earth. Unable to bear the slaughter of the mighty car-warrior Catachandra, Cakuni's brothers, viz., the heroic Gavāksha and Carabha and Bibhu, 18 and Subhaga and Bhanudatta, those five mighty car-warriors, rushing towards Bhimasena, attacked him with their keen Thus attacked with those shafts like a mountain with torrents of rain,*24 Bhima slew those five mighty kings with five shafts of his. Beholding those heroes slain, many foremost of kings began to waver.25

^{*} This is a triplet.—T.

"Then Yudhishthira, filled with wrath, began to destroy thy ranks, in the very sight, O sinless one, of the Pot-born (Drona) and of thy sons.26 Indeed, with his shafes, Yudhishthira began to despatch to the regions of Yama the Amvashtas, the Mālavas, the brave Trigartas, and the Civis.27 cutting off the Abhisāhas, the Curasenas, the Vālhikas, and the Vaçatis, he caused the Earth to be miry with flesh and And he also despatched within a trice, by means of many shafts, to Yama's domains, the Yaudheyas, the Malavas, and large numbers, O king, of the Madrakas.29 Then a loud uproar arose in the vicinity of Yudhishthira's car, amid which was heard, -Slay, Seize, Capture, Pierce, Cut into pieces !50-Beholding him thus slaying and routing thy troops, Drona, urged on by thy son, shrouded Yudhishthira with showers of Drona, filled with great wrath, struck Yudhishthira with the Viyavya weapon. The son of Pandu, however, baffled that celestial weapon with a similar weapon of his own. Seeing his weapon baffled, the son of Bharadwaja, filled with great wrath and desirous of slaying the son of Pandu, sped at Yudhishthira diverse celestial weapons such as the Vāruna, the Yamya, the Agneya, the Tashtra and the Savitra. mighty-armed Pandava, however, conversant with morality, fearlessly baffled all those weapons of the Pot-born that were hurled or in course of being hurled at him. Then the Pot-born, striving to accomplish his vow 62-35 and desirous also, for thy son's good, to slay the son of Dharma, invoked into existence. O Bhārata, the Aindra and the Prājāpatya weapons. 36 that foremost one of Kuru's race (viz., Yudhishthira), of the gait of the elephant or the lion, of broad chest and large and red eyes, and endued with energy scarcely inferior, (to that of Drona), invoked into existence the Mahendra weapon. that he baffled the weapon of Drona. Seeing all his weapons baffled, Drona, filled with wrath, and desirous of accomplishing the destruction of Yudhishthira, invoked into existence the Brahma weapon. 88 Enveloped as we then were by a thick gloom, we could not observe what passed. All creatures also,

O monarch, were filled with great fright." Beholding the Brahma weapon uplifted. Kunti's son Yudhishthira, O king, baffled it with a Brahma weapon of his own.40 Then all the foremost warriors applauded those two bulls among men, viz., Drona and Yudhishthira, those great bowmen acquainted with every mode of warfare.41 Abandoning Yudhishthira, Drona then, with eyes red as copper in rage, began to consume the division of Drupada with the Vayavya weapon.42 by Drona, the Panchalas fled away from fear, in the very sight of Bhimasena and of the illustrious Partha.48 diadem-decked (Arjuna) and Bhimasena, checking that flight of their troops, suddenly encountered that hostile force with two large throngs of cars.44 Vibhatsu attacking the right and Vrikodara the left, Bharadwaja's son was encountered with two mighty showers of shafts.46 Then the Kaikayas, the Srinjayas, and the Panchalas of great energy followed the two brothers, O king, accompanied by the Matsyas and the Satwatas.46 Then the Bharata host, slaughtered by the diadem-decked (Arjuna) and overcome with sleep and the darkness, began to Drona, and thy son himself, endeavoured to rally The combatants, however, O king, were incapable of being then checked in their flight." "48

SECTION CLVIII.

"Sanjaya said,—'Beholding that vast host of the Pandavas swelling with rage and regarding it to be incapable of being resisted, thy son Duryodhana, addressing Karna, said these words:'-O thou that art devoted to friends, that hour hath now come in respect of thy friends (when thy help is most needed)! O Karna, save in battle all my warriors! Our combatants are now encompassed on all sides by the Panchalas, the Kaikeyas, the Matsyas, and the mighty car-warriors of the Pandavas, all filled with rage and resembling hissing snakes!8 Yonder, the Pandavas, solicitous of victory, are roaring in joy! The vast car-force of the Panchalas is possessed of the prowess of Cakra himself !*-

"'Karna replied,-If Purandara himself were to come hither for saving Partha, quickly vanquishing even him, I would slay that son of Pandu! I tell thee truly! Be cheered, O Bharata! I will slay the sons of Pandu and all the assembled Panchalas! I will give thee victory like Pāvaka's son giving victory unto I shall do what is agreeable to thee, in this battle Amongst all the Parthas, Phalguna is the that has come! At him I will hurl the fatal dart of Cakra's workstrongest. Upon the death of that great bowman, his brothers, O giver of honors, will either surrender themselves unto thee or once more retire into the forest ! When I am alive, O Kauravya, never indulge in any grief! I will vanquish in battle all the Pandavas united together,10 and all the Panchalas, the Kaikeyas, and the Vrishnis assembled together! ing porcupines of them by means of my arrowy showers, I will give thee the Earth !"-'

"Sanjaya continued,-'While Karna was uttering those words, Kripa, the mighty-armed son of Caradwat, smiling the while, addressed the Suta's son in these words: "2—Thy speech is fair, O Karna! If words alone could lead to success, then with thee, O son of Rādhā, as his protector, this bull among the Kurus would be considered to have the amplest measure of protection!18 Thou boastest much, O Karna, in the presence of the Kuru chief, but thy prowess is seldom witnessed, nor, indeed, any result (of thy boastful speeches) !14 Many a time have we seen thee encounter the sons of Pandu in battle. On every one of those occasions, O Sutu's son, thou hast been vanquished by the Pandavas.16 While Dhritarāshtra's son was being taken away (as a captive) by the Gandharvas, all the troops fought on that occasion except thy single self who was the first to fly away!'6 In Virāta's city also, all the Kauravas, united together, including thyself and thy younger brother, were vanquished by Partha in battle!17 Thou art not a match for even one of the sons of Pandu, viz., Phalguna, on the field of battle! How then canst thou venture to vanquish all the sons of Pandu with Krishna at their head ?18 Thou indulgest in too much brag, O Suta's son! Engage thyself in battle without saying anything! To put forth prowess without indulging in brag is the dity of good men." Ever rearing aloud, O Suta's son, like.

the dry clouds of autumn, thou showest thyself, O Karns, to be without substance! The king, however, does not understand Thou roarest, O son of Rādhā, as long as thou seest not These thy roars disappear when thou seest the son of Pritha. Partha near !" Indeed, thou roarest as long as thou art out of the range of Phalguna's shafts. These roars of thine disappear when thou art pierced with Partha's shafts.22 Kshatriyas evince their eminence by means of their arms; Brahmanas, by means of speech; Arjuna evinces his by means of the bow; but Karna, by the castles he builds in the air.28 Who is there that will resist that Partha who gratified Rudra himself (in battle)?-Thus riled by Caradwat's son,24 Karna, that foremost of smiters, answered Kripa in the following strain: -Heroes always roar like clouds in the season of rains,25 and, like seeds put in the soil, quickly yield fruits. I do not see any fault in heroes that take great burdens on their shoulders indulging in boastful speeches on the field of battle! When a person mentally resolves to bear a burden,26-27 destiny itself aids him in the execution. ing in my heart to bear a great burden, I always summon sufficient resolution.28 If, slaying the sons of Pandu with Krishna and the Sātwatas in battle, I indulge in such roars, what is it to thee, O Brāhmana?29 They that are heroes never roar fruitlessly like autumnal clouds. Conscious of their own might, the wise indulge in roars!50 In my heart I am determined to vanquish in battle today Krishna and Partha united together and fighting with resolution! It is for this that I roar. O son of Gotama!" Behold the fruit of these my roars, O Brāhmana! Slaying the sons of Pāndu in battle, with all their followers and Krishna and the Sātwatas, I will bestow on Duryodhana the whole Earth without a thorn in it! 32_

"Kripa said,—Little do I reck, O Suta's son, these delirious sayings of thine discovering thy thoughts, not deeds! Thou always speakest in depreciation of the two Krishnas and king Yudhishthira the just! He, O Karna, is certain to have the victory who hath on his side those two heroes skilled in battle! Indeed, Krishna and Arjuna are incapable of being defeated by the celestia's, the Gandharvas the Yakshas, human beings, the Nagas, and the birds, all clad in mail. Yudhishthira the son of Dharma is devoted to the Brahmanas. He is truthful in speech and self-restrained. He reverences the Pitris and He is devoted to the practice of truth and righte-He is, again, skilled in weapons. Possessed of great intelligence, he is also grateful. 84-86 His brothers are all endued with great might and well-practised in all weapons. are devoted to the service of their seniors. Possessed of wisdom and fame, they are also righteous in their practices. 57 Their kinsmen and relatives are all endued with the prowess of Effectual smiters, they are all exceedingly devoted to Dhrishtadyumna, and Cikhandin, and Janamethe Pandavas. jaya the son of Durmuksha,88 and Chandrasena, and Madrasena, and Kirtivarman, and Dhruva, and Dhara, and Vasuchandra, and Sutejana, 39 the sons of Drupada, and Drupada himself conversant with high and mighty weapons, and the king of the Matsyas also with his younger brothers all resolutely struggling for their sake,40 and Gajānika, and Crutānika, and Virabhadra, and Sudarcana, and Crutadhwaja, and Valānika, and Jayanika, and Jayapriya,41 and Vijaya, and Labdhalaksha, and Jayacwa, and Kamarasha, and the handsome brothers of Virāta,42 and the twins (Nakula and Sahadeva), and the (five) sons of Draupadi, and the Rakshasa Ghatotkucha, are all fighting for the Pandavas. The sons of Pandu, therefore, will not meet with destruction.43 These and many other hosts (of heroes) are for the son of Pandu. doubt, the entire universe with the celestials, the Asuras, and human beings,44 with all the tribes of Yakshas and Rakshas, and with all the elephants and snakes and other creatures, can be annihilated by Bhima and Phalguna by the prowess of their weapons.45 As regards Yudhishthira also, he can, with angry eyes only, consume the whole world! How, O Karna, canst thou venture to vanquish these fees in battle for whom Caurin of immeasurable might hath clad himself in mail? O Suta's son, is a great folly on thy part, since thou always

http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google Generated on 2022-02-03 12:57 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

"Sanjaya continued,—'Thus addressed (by Kripa), Karna the son of Rādhā, O bull of Bharata's race, smiling the while, said these words unto the preceptor Kripa the son of Caradwat: "-The words thou hast spoken about the Pandavas, O

Brāhmana, are all true! These and many other virtues are to be seen in the sons of Pandu.49 It is true also that the Parthas are incapable of being vanquished by the very gods with Vasava at their head, and the Duityas, the Yakshas, and the Rākshasas. For all that, I will vanquish the Parthas with the help of the dart given me by Vasava! knowest, O Brahmana, that the dart given me by Cakra is incapable of being baffled.51 With that I will slay Savyasachin in battle! Upon Arjuna's fall, Krishna and the uterine brothers of Ariuna62 will never be able to enjoy the (sovereignty of the) Earth without Arjuna (to aid them)! All of them, therefore, This Earth then, with her seas,52 will remain will perish. subject to the chief of the Kurus, O Gautama, without costing In this world everything, without doubt, him any efforts! becomes attainable by policy.54 Knowing this, I indulge in these rears, O Gautama! As regards thyself, thou art old, a Brāhmana by birth, and unskilled in battle !55 Thou bearest much affection for the Pandavas! It is for this thou insultest If, O Brāhmana, thou tellest me again such words as these, 55 I shall then, drawing out my scimitar, cut off thy tongue, O wretch! Thou desirest, O Brahmana, to applaud the Pandavas, 57 for frightening all the troops and the Kauravas, O thou of wretched understanding! As regards this also, O Gautama, listen to what I say!58 Duryodhana, and Drona, and Cakuni, and Durmukha, and Jaya, and Dusçāsana, and Vrishasena, and the ruler of the Madras, and thyself too, 59 and Somadatta, and Bhima, and Drona's son, and Vivingcati, all these heroes skilled in battle,—are here, clad in mail !60 What foe is there, endued with even the prowess of Cakra, that would vanquish these in battle? All those I have named are heroes, skilled in weapons, endued with great might, solicitous of admisssion into heaven,61* conversant with morality, and skilled in battle! They would slay the very gods in fight! These will take their places on the field for slaying the Panda-. vas, clad in mail on behalf of Duryodhana desirous of victory!

^{*} By falling on the field of battle .- T.

I regard victory to be dependent on destiny, even in the case of the foremost of mighty men. 68 When the mighty armed Bhishma himself lieth, pierced with a hundred arrows, as also Vikarna, and Jayadratha,64 and Bhuricravas, and Jaya, and Jalasandha, and Sudakshina, and Cala, that foremost of car-warriors, and Bhagadatta of great energy, 55 I say, when these and many others, incapable of being easily vanquished by the very gods, heroes all and mightier (than the Pandavas), lie on the field of battle, slain by the Pandavas,66 what dost thou think, O wretch among men, but that all this is the result of destiny? regards them also, viz., the foes of Duryodhana, whom thou ad rest, O Brāhmana,67 brave warriors of theirs, in hundreds and thouands, have been slain! The armies of both the Kurus and the Pandavas are diminishing in numbers. 48 I do not, in this, behold the prowess of the Pandavas! With them, O lowest of men, whom thou always regardest to be so mighty, " I shall strive, to the utmost extent of my might, to contend in battle, for Duryodhana's good! As regards victory, that depends on destiny !70-"

SECTION CLIX.

"Sanjaya said,—'Seeing his uncle thus addressed in harsh and insulting words by the Suta's son, Açwatthāman, uplifting his scimitar, furiously rushed towards the latter.' Filled with fury, Drona's son rushed towards Karna, in the very sight of the Kuru king, like a lion at an infuriate elephant.'

"'And Açwatthāman said,—O lowest of men, Kripa was speaking of the virtues truly possessed by Arjuna! Of wicked understanding as thou art, thou rebukest, however, my brave uncle from malice! Possessed with pride and insolence, thou braggest today of thy prowess, not regarding any of the world's bowmen in battle!* Where was thy prowess and where thy weapons when vanquishing thee in battle the wielder of Gāndiva slew Jayadratha in thy very sight? Vainly, O wretch of a Suta, dost thou indulge in thy mind the hope of vanquishing him who formerly contended in battle with Mahādeva himself! The very gods with the Asuras united together and with Indra at their head had failed to vanquish Arjuna, that foremost of all wielders of weapons, having Krishna only for his ally! How then, O Suta, hopest thou, aided by these kings, to vanquish that foremost heroes in the world, viz., the unvanquished Arjuna, in battle? Behold, O Karna of wicked soul, (what I do to thee) today! O lowest of men, O thou of wretched understanding, I will presently sever thy head from thy trunk!

^{*} In the second line of 4, utsedha and not udvritta is the true reading. So also Kanchit and not kinchit. The paraphrase, according to Nilakantha, is kanchit dhanurdharam na ganoyan, dec.,—T.

"Sanjaya continued,—'Thus saying, Açwatthāman made a furious rush at Karna. The king himself, of great energy, and Kripa, that foremost of men, held him fast." Then Karna said,—Of wicked understanding, this wretch of a Brāhmana thinks himself brave and boasts of his prowess in battle! Set him at liberty, O chief of the Kurus! Let him come in contact with my might !"— "'Açwatthāman said,—O son of a Suta, O thou of wicked understanding, this (thy fault) is pardoned by us! Phālguna, however, will quell this risen pride of thine!"

"Duryodhana said,—O Açwatthāman, quell thy wrath! It behoveth thee, O giver of honors, to forgive! Thou shouldst not, O sinless one, be angry with the Suta's son! Upon thee and Karna and Kripa and Drona and the ruler of the Madras and Suvala's son resteth a great burthen! Drive away thy wrath, O best of Brāhmanas! Yonder all the Pāndava troops are approching from desire of fight with Rādhā's son! Indeed, O Brāhmana, yonder they come, challenging us all!

"Sanjaya continued,—'Thus pacified by the king, the highsouled son of Drona, O monarch, whose ire had been excited, suppressed his wrath and forgave (Karna).16 Then the preceptor Kripa of noble heart, who is of a quiet disposition, O monarch, and whose mild temper, therefore, returned soon unto him, said these words.17

"'Kripa said,—O Suta's son of wicked heart, this (thy fault) is pardoned by us! Phalguna, however, will quell this thy risen pride!" "

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:57 GMT / https://hdl.handle. Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust

"Sanjaya continued,-Then the Pandavas, O king, and the Panchalas celebrated for their prowess, uniting together, approached in thousands, uttering loud shouts.19 Karna also, that foremost of car-warriors, endued with great energy, surrounded by many foremost ones among the Kuru warriors and resembling Cakra in the midst of the celestials, waited, drawing his bow and relying on the might of his own arms. Then commenced a battle between Karna and the Pandavas, 20-21 O king, that was exceedingly dreadful and characterised by loud leonine Then Pandavas, O monarch, and the Panchalas brated for their prowess,22 beholding the mighty-armed Karna, loudly shouted, saying,—There is Karna!—Where is Kurna in this fierce battle !23 - O thou of wicked understanding, O lowest of men, fight with us !- Others, beholding the son of Rādhā, said, with eyes expanded in wrath,24—Let this arrogant wretch of little understanding, this son of a Suta, be slain by the allied kings! He hath no need to live!25 sinful man is always very hostile to the Parthas! Obedient to the counsels of Duryodhana, this one is the root of all these Slay him !- Uttering such words, great Kshatriya car-warriors, urged by Pandu's son, rushed towards him, covering him with a dense shower of arrows, for slaying him. holding all those mighty Pandavas thus (advancing),27-28 the Sutu's son trembled not nor experienced any fear. seeing that wonderful sea of troops resembling Death himself,  that benefactor of thy sons, viz., the mighty and light-handed Karna, never vanquished in battle, O bull of Bharata's race, began, with clouds of shafts, to resist that force on all sides. The Pandavas also fought with the foe, shooting showers of shafts. 50-21 Shaking their hundreds and thousands of bows, they fought with Rādhā's son like the Daityas of old fighting with The mighty Karna, however, with a dense arrowy shower of his own dispelled that downpour of arrows caused by those lords of Earth on all sides. 83 The battle that took place between them, and in which each party counteracted the feats of the other, resembled the encounter between Cakra and the Dinavas in the great battle fought of yore between the gods and the Asurus.54 The lightness of arms that we then beheld of the Suta's son was wonderful in the extreme, inasmuch as all his foes, fighting resolutely, could not strike him in that Checking the clouds of arrows shot by the (hostile) kings, that mighty car-warrior, viz., Rādhā's son, sped terrible arrows marked with his own name at the yokes, the shafts, the umbrellas, the cars, and the steeds (of his foes). Then those kings, afflicted by Karna and losing their coolness, $6-57 began to wander on the field like a herd of kine afflicted with cold. Struck by Karna, large numbers of steeds and elephants and car-warriors were seen there to drop down, deprived of life. The whole field, O king, became strewn with the fallen heads and arms of unreturning heroes. With the dead, the dying, and the wailing warriors, the field of battle, O monarch, assumed the aspect of Yama's domains. Then Duryodhana, O king, witnessing the prowess of Karna, $5-41 repaired to Acwatthaman and addressing him, said,—Behold, Karna, clad in mail, is engaged with all the (hostile) kings !42 Behold, the hostile army, afflicted with the arrows of Karna, is being routed, like the Asura army overwhelmed with the energy of Kartikeva Seeing his army vanquished in battle by the intelligent Karna, yonder cometh Vibhatsu from desire of slaying the Suta's Let such steps, therefore, be taken as may prevent the son of Pandu from slaying that mighty car-warrior, viz. the Suta's son, in the very sight of us all !45—(Thus addressed). Drona's son, and Kripa, and Calya, and that great car-warrior. viz., the son of Hridika, beholding the son of Kunti coming (towards them) like Cakra himself towards the Daitya host, all advanced against Partha for rescuing the Sutu's son. while, Vibhatsu, O monarch, surrounded by the Panchalas. advanced against Karna, like Purandara proceeding against the Asura Vritra.'*46-47

"Dhritarashtra said,- Beholding Phalguna excited with fury and looking like the Destroyer himself as he appears at the end of the Yuga, what, O Suta, did Vikartana's son Karna do next ?48 Indeed, the mighty car-warrior Karna the son of Vikartana had always challenged Partha. Indeed, he ^{• 47} is a trip let .- T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:57 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

hal always said that he was competent to vanquish the terrible Vibhatsu. What then, O Suta, did that warrior do when he thus suddenly met his ever deadly foe?'*49-50

"Sanjaya continued,-'Beholding the son of Pandu rushing towards him like an elephant towards a rival elephant, Karna fearlessly proceeded against Dhananjaya.51 Partha, however, soon covered Karna, who was thus advancing with great impetuosity, with showers of straight shafts equipt with wings Karna also covered Vijaya with his shafts.50 son of Pandu then once more shrouded Karna with clouds of Then Karna, filled with rage, pierced Arjuna with three shafts.58 The mighty car-warrior Arjuna, beholding Karna's lightness of hand, could not brook it. That scorcher of foes sped at the Suta's son thirty straight shafts whetted on stone and equipt with blazing points. Endued with great might and energy, he also pierced him, in rage, with another long arrow on the wrist of his left arm, smiling the while. Karna's bow then dropped from that arm of his which had thus been pierced with great force.54-56 The mighty Karna. taking up that bow within the twinkling of an eye, once more covered Phalguna with clouds of shafts, displaying great lightness of hands. 57 Dhananjaya then, O Bharata, smiling the while, baffled with his own shafts that arrowy shower shot by the Suta's son.58 Approaching each other, those two great bowmen, desirous of counteracting each other's feats, continued to cover each other with showers of shafts. 59 The battle that took place between them, viz., Karna and the son of Pandu, . became exceedingly wonderful like that between two wild elephants for the sake a she-elephant in her season.60 the mighty bowman Partha, beholding Karna's prowess, quickly cut off the latter's bow at the handle.61 And he also despatched the four steeds of the Suta's son to Yama's abode with a number of broad-headed shafts. And that scorcher of foes also cut off from his trunk the head of Karna's driver. 68 Then the son of Pandu and Pritha pierced the bowless, the

^{*} The Bengal reading sudakshinas at the end of 49 does not seem I adopt the Bombay reading sudarunam .- T. to be correct.

http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-googl Generated on 2022-02-03 12:58 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

steedless, and the driverless Karna with four shafts.63 That bull among men then, viz., Karna, afflicted with those shafts, speedily jumping down from that steedless car, mounted upon that of Kripa. 4 Beholding the son of Radha vanquished, thy warriors. O bull of Bharata's race, fled away in all directions.65 Seeing them fly away, king Duryodhana himself checked them and said these words : 46-Ye heroes, do not fly away! Ye bulls among Kshatriyas, stay in battle! I myself will now advance for slaying Partha in battle ! I myself will slay Partha with the assembled Panchalas! fight with the wielder of Gandiva today, the Parthas shall behold my prowess to resemble that of the Destroyer himself at the end of the Yugu! Today the Parthas shall behold my shafts shot in thousands to resemble flights of locusts! The combatants shall behold me today shooting, bow in hand, dense showers of shafts like torrents of rain poured by the clouds at the end of the summer season! I shall today vanquish Partha Stay, ye heroes, in battle, and with my straight shafts !69-71 abandon your fear of Phalguna! Encountering my prowess, Phalguna shall never be able to bear it 12 like the ocean, the abode of makaras, unable to overcome its continents!-Thus saying, the king proceeded in rage, his eyes red in wrath, surrounded by a large host, towards Phalguna. Beholding the mighty-armed Duryodhana thus proceeding, Caradwat's son, 72-74 approaching Acwatthaman, said these words:-Yonder the mighty-armed Duryodhana, deprived of his senses by wrath,18 desireth to fight with Phalguna, like an insect desiring to rush into the blazing fire! Before this foremost of kings layeth down his life, in our very sight, in this battle with Partha, prevent him (from rushing into the encounter)! The brave Kuru king can remain alive in battle as long only as he doth not place himself within the range of Partha's shafts ! king be prevented before he is consumed into ashes by the terrible shafts of Partha that resemble snakes just freed from their sloughs! When we are here, O giver of honors, it seems to be highly improper that the king should himself go to battle for fight, as if he had none to fight for him! The life of this descendant of Kuru will be in great danger if he engagss in battle with the diadem-decked (Arjuna) like that of an elephant contending with a tiger!—Thus addressed by his maternal uncle, Drona's son, that foremost of all wielders of weapons, 76-81 quickly repaired unto Duryodhana and addressing him, said these words:—When I am alive, O son of Gāndhāri, it behoveth thee not to engage in battle, 82 disregarding me, O descendant of Kuru, me that am ever desirous of thy good! Thou needst not be at all anxious about vanquishing Pārtha! I will check Pārtha! Stand here, O Suyodhana! 82—

"'Duryodhana said,—The preceptor (Drona) always protecteth the sons of Pandu as if they are his own sons! always never interferest with those my foes !84 Or, it may be due to my misfortune, that thy prowess never becometh fierce This may be due also to thy affection for Yudhishthira or Draupadi! I myself am ignorant of the true reason!"5 Fie on my covetous self for whose sake all friends, desirous of making me happy, are themselves vanquished and plunged into grief! 66 Except thee, O son of Gotama's daughter, what foremost of all wielders of weapons is there, what warrior, indeed, equal to Mahadeva himself in battle, that would not, though competent, destroy the foe? O Açwatthaman, be pleased with me and destroy my enemies! Niether the gods nor the Danavas are capable of staying within the range of thy wea-O son of Drona, slay the Panchalas and the Somakas with all their followers! As regards the rest, we will slav them, protected by thee !85 Yonder, O Brāhmana, the Somakas and the Panchalas possessed of great fame, are careering amid my troops like a forest-conflagration !90 O mighty-armed one, check them as also the Kaikayas, O best of men, else, protected by the diadem-decked (Arjuna), they will annihilate O Acwatthaman, O chastiser of foes, go thither with Whether thou accomplishest it now cr afterwards, that feat, O sire, should be accomplished by thee !92 hast been born, O mighty-armed one, for the destruction of the Panchalas! Putting forth thy prowess, thou shalt make the world destitute of Panchalas! Even thus the reverend ones crowned with (ascetic) success, have said! It will be as they have said! Therefore, O tiger among men, slay the Panchalas with all their followers!" The very gods with Vasava at their head are incapable of staying within the range of thy weapons. what need be said then of the Parthas and the Panchalas? These words of mine are true 198 I tell thee truly, O hero, that the Pandavas united with the Somakas are no match for thee in battle !" Go, go, O mighty-armed one! Let there be no delay! Behold, our army, afflicted with Partha's shafts, is breaking and flying away !" Thou art competent, O mightyarmed one, aided by thy own celestial energy, to afflict, O giver of honors, the Pandavas and the Panchalas!" -"

SECTION CLX.

"Sanjaya said,—'Thus addressed by Duryodhana, Drona's son, that warrior difficult of defeat in battle, set his heart upon destroying the foe like Indra bent upon destroying the Daityas! The mighty-armed Acwatthaman answered thy son, saying,-It is even so as thou sayest, O descendant of Kuru! The Pandavas are always dear to both myself and So also are we both dear unto them! Not so, my father! however, in battle.8 We will, according to the measure of our might, fearlessly contend in battle, reckless of our lives! Myself, Karna, Calya, Kripa, and Hridika's son, could, O best of kings, destroy the Pandava host within the twinkling of an eye! The Pandavas also, O best of the Kurus, could, within the twinkling of an eye, destroy the Kaurava host, if, O mighty-armed one, we were not present in battle! We are fighting with the Pandavas to the best of our might, and they also are fighting with us to the best of theirs. 5-6 Energy, encountering energy, is being neutralised, O Bharata! The Pandava army is incapable of being vanquished as long as the sons of Pandu are alive! This that I tell thee is true! The sons of Pandu are endued with great might. again, fighting for their own sake. Why should not they, O Bharata, be able to slay thy troops! Thou, however, O king, art exceedingly covetous! Thou, O Kaurava, art deceitful! Thou art vain-glorious and suspicous of everything! For this, thou suspectest even us! I think, O king, thou art wicked, of sinful soul, and an embodiment of sin!16 Mean and of sinful thoughts, it is for this that thou doubtest us and others! As regards myself, fighting with resolution for thy sake, I am prepared to lay down my life !" I will presently go to battle for thy sake, O chief of the Kurus! I will fight with the foe and slay a large number of the enemy!18 I will fight with the Panchalas, the Somakas, the Kaikayas, and the Pandayas also, in battle, for doing what is agreeable to thee, O chastiser of foes!18 Scorched with my arrows today, the Chedis, the Panchalas, and the Somakas, will fly away on all sides like a herd of kine afflicted by a lion! royal son of Dharma, with all the Somakas, beholding my prowess, will regard the whole world to be filled with Acwatthamans !16 Dharma's son Yudhishthira will become exceedingly cheerless, beholding the Panchalas and the Somakas slain (by me) in battle!16 I will, O Bharata, slay all those that will approach me in battle! Afflicted with the might of my arms, none of them, O hero, will escape me today with life !17—Having said so unto thy son Duryodhana, the mightyarmed (Acwatthaman) proceeded to battle, and afflicted all bow-That foremost of all living beings thus sought to achieve what was agreeable to thy sons. The son of Gotama's daughter then, addressing the Panchalas and the Kaikayas, said unto them,19—Ye mighty car-warriors, strike ye all at my Displaying your lightness in the use of arms, fight ye with me coolly !20-Thus addressed by him, all those combatants, O king, poured showers of weapons upon Drona's son like clouds pouring torrents of rain. 11 Baffling that shower, Drona's son, in that battle, slew ten brave warriors amongst them, in the very sight, O lord, of Dhrishtadyumna and the sons of Pandu!32 The Panchalas and the Somakas then, thus slaughtered in battle, abandoned the son of Drona and fled away in all directions. Beholding those brave warriors, viz., the Panchalas and the Somakas, flying away, Dhrishtadyumna, O king, rushed against Drona's son in that battle.24 ed then by a hundred brave and unreturning car-warriors mounted upon cars decked with gold and the rattle of whose wheels resembled the roar of rain-charged clouds, *5 the mighty car-warrior Dhrishtadyumna, the son of the Panchala king. beholding his warriors slain, addressed Drona's son and said these words,26-O foolish son of the preceptor, what is the use of slaying vulgar combatants! If thou beest a hero, fight then with me in battle !27 I will slay thee! Wait for a moment without flying away !- Saying this, Dhrishtadyumna of great prowess struck the preceptor's son with many keen and terrible arrows capable of piercing the very vitals. Those swiftlycoursing shafts, equipt with golden wings and keen points, and capable of piercing the body of every foe, proceeding in a continuous line, penetrated into Acwatthaman's bedy, like freely-roaming bees in search of honey entering a flowering Deeply pierced and swelling with rage, like a trodden snake, the proud and fearless son of Drona, arrow in hand, addressed his foe, saying, 1-O Dhrishtadyumna, wait for a moment, without leaving my presence! Soon shall I despatch thee to Yama's abode with my keen shafts !52—Having said these words, that slayer of hostile heroes, viz., the son of Drona, displaying great lightness of hands, covered the son of Prishata from every side with clouds of arrows. 58 covered in that encounter (with arrows) by Drona's son, the Panchala prince, difficult of defeat in battle, roared at Drona's son, saying, 84—Thou knowest not of my origin, O Brāhmana, or of my vow! O thou of wicked understanding, having first slain Drona himself, I shall slay thee !55 I will not, therefore, slay thee today when Drona himself is still alive! thou of wicked understanding, after this night passeth away in the fair dawn, se I shall first and bringeth sire in battle and then despatch thee also to the region of Even this is the wish entertained by me !87 Standing before me, display, therefore, till then, the hatred thou bearest towards the Parthas, and the devotion thou cherishest Thou shalt not escape me with life!58 for the Kurus! Brāhmana who, abandoning the practices of a Brāhmana, devoteth himself to the practices of a Kshatriya, becomes slayable by all Kshatriyas even as thou, O lowest of men! "-Thus addressed by Prishata's son in language so harsh and insulting, that best of Brāhmanas, (viz., Acwatthāman,) mustered all his rage

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:57 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access_use#pd-googl and answered, saying,-Wait, wait !40-And he gazed at Prishata's son, apparently burning him with his eyes. Sighing (in rage) like a snake, the preceptor's son then covered Dhrishtadyumna in that battle (with a shower of arrows).41 mighty-armed son of Prishata, however, that best of car-warriors, surrounded by all the Panchala troops, though thus struck with arrows in that encounter by Drona's son, did not tremble, relying as he did on his own energy. In return he sped many arrows at Acwatthaman. 42-48 Both engaged in a gambling match in which the stake was life itself, those heroes, unable to brook each other, resisted each other and checked each other's arrowy showers.44 And those great bowmen shot dense showers of shafts all around. Beholding that fierce battle, inspiring terror, between Drona's and Prishata's son, Siddhas and Chāranas and other sky-ranging beings applauded them highly. Filling the welkin and all the points of the compass with clouds of shafts, 45-46 and creating a thick gloom therewith, those two warriors continued to fight with each other, unseen (by any of us). As if dancing in that battle, with their bows drawn to circles, 47 resolutely aspiring to slay each other, those mighty-armed warriors, inspiring fear in every heart, fought beautifully and with remarkable activity and skill.48 Applauded by thousands of foremost warriors in that battle, and thus resolutely engaged in fight like two wild elephants in the forest, both the armies, beholding them, became filled with delight. And leonine shouts were heard there, and all the combatants blew their conchs. 49-50 And hundreds and thousands of musical instruments began to be sounded. That fierce fight, enhancing the terrors of the timid, 51 seemed for a short time only to be waged equally. Then Drona's son, O king, making a rush, cut off the bow, and standard, and umbrella, and the two Pārshni drivers, and the principal driver, and the four steeds, of the high-souled son of Pri-And that warrior of immeasurable soul then caused the Panchalas in hundreds and thousands, by means of his straight shafts, to fly away.54 Beholding those feats of Drona's son, resembling those of Vāsava himself in battle, the Pāndava host, O bull of Bharata's race, began to tremble in fear. 55

Slaying a hundred Panchalas with a hundred arrows, and three foremost of men with three keen arrows, in the very sight of Drupada's son and of Phalguna, that mighty car-warrior, viz.. the son of Drona, slew a very large number of Panchalas that stayed before him. 66-67 The Panchalas then, as also the Srinjayas, thus slaughtered in battle, fled away, leaving Drona's son, with their banners torn.58 Then that mighty carwarrior, viz., the son of Drona, having vanquished his foes in battle, uttered a loud roar like that of a mass of clouds at the end of summer. 59 Having slain a large number of foes, Açwatthaman looked resplendent like the blazing fire at the end of the Yuga, after having consumed all creatures. 60 Applauded by all the Kauravas after having defeated thousands of foes in battle, the valiant son of Drona blazed forth in beauty like the chief of the celestials himself after vanquishing his foes." "61

SECTION CLXI.

"Sanjaya said,—'Then king Yudhishthira, and Bhimasena the son of Pandu, O monarch, encompassed Drona's son on all sides.' Seeing this, king Duryodhana, aided by Bharadwaja's son, rushed against the Pandavas in that encounter. commenced a battle' that was fierce and terrific, enhancing the Yudhishthira in wrath began to despatch fears of the timid. vast numbers of the Amvashtas, the Malavas, the Vangas, the Civis, and the Trigartas, to the domains of the dead. also, mangling the Abhisāhas, the Curasenas, and other Kshatrivas difficult of defeat in battle, made the Earth miry with The diadem-decked (Arjuna) of white steeds despatched, O king, the Yaudheyas, the mountaineers, the Madrakas, and the Malavas also, to the regions of the dead. struck with swiftly-coursing shafts, 5-6 elephants began to fall down on the Earth like double-crested hills. the lopped-off trunks of elephants that still moved in convulsions,' the Earth looked beautiful as if covered with moving Covered with the fallen umbrellas of kings that were decked with gold, the field of battle looked resplendent! like the firmament at the end of the Yuga bespangled with suns, About this time a fierce uproar arose near moons, and stars. Drona's car, in the midst of which could be heard the words,— Slay, Strike fearlessly, Pierce, Cut into pierces!—Drona, however, filled with rage, began to destroy by means of the Vāyavya weapon the foes about him, like a mighty tempest destroy-Thus slaughtered by Drona, ing gathering masses of clouds. the Panchalas fled away, from fear, 5-11 in the very sight of Bhimasena and the high-souled Partha. Then the diademdecked (Arjuna) and Bhimasena soon checked the flight of their troops13 and accompanied by a large car-force attacked the vast force of Drona. Vibhatsu attacking the right and Vrikodara the left,18 they both poured on Bharadwaja's son two dense showers of arrows. The mighty car-warriors among the Srinjayas and the Panchalas, with the Matsyas and the O king, followed the two brothers thus engaged (in that encounter with Drona). Similarly, many foremost of car-warriors, skilled in smiting, belonging to thy son,14-16 accompanied by a large force, proceeded towards Drona's car (for supporting the latter). Then the Bharata host, slaughtered by the diadem-decked (Arjuna) and overcome with sleep and afflicted by that darkness, began to break. Thy son himself, and Drona, both endeavoured to rally them.17 The troops, however, O king, could not be checked in their flight. that vast host, slaughtered with the shafts of Pandu's son,18 began to fly away in all directions in that hour when the world was enveloped with gloom. Many kings, abandoning the animals and vehicles they rode, fled away on all sides, O monarch, overwhelmed with fear.' "19

SECTION CLXII.

"Sanjaya said,—'Beholding Somadatta shaking his large bow, Sātyaki, addressing his driver, said,—Bear me towards Somadatta! I tell thee truly, O Suta, that I shall not return from battle today without having slain that foe, viz., that worst of the Kurus, the son of Vālhika! —Thus addressed, the charioteer then urged to battle those fleet steeds of

http://www.hathitrust.org/access_use#pd-googl Generated on 2022-02-03 12:57 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

the Sindhu breed, white as conchs, and capable of bearing every weapon.8 Those steeds endued with the speed of the wind or the mind, bore Yuyudhana to battle like the steeds of Indra, O king, bearing the latter in days of yore when he Beholding the Saproceeded to slaughter the Danavas.4 twata hero thus advancing quickly to battle, Somadatta, O king, fearlessly turned towards him.5 Scattering showers of shafts like the clouds pouring torrents of rain, he covered the the grandson of Cini like the clouds covering the Sun. Satyaki also, O bull of Bharata's race, in that encounter, fearlessly covered that bull amongst the Kurus with showers of Then Somadatta pierced that hero of Madhu's race with sixty shafts in the chest. Sātyaki, in return, O king, pierced Somadatta with many whetted arrows.8 Mangled by each other with each other's shafts, those two warriors looked resplendent like a couple of flowering Kincukas in the season of spring.9 Dyed all over with blood, those illustrious warriors of the Kuru and the Vrishni races looked at each other as if burning each other with their glances.10 Riding on their cars that coursed in circles, those grinders of foes, of terrible countenances, resembled two clouds pouring torrents of rain." Their bodies mangled and pierced all over with arrows, they looked, O king, like two porcupines.12 Pierced with countless shafts equipt with wings of gold, the two warriors looked resplendent, O monarch, like a couple of tall trees covered with fire-flies.18 Their bodies looking bright with the blazing arrows sticking to them, those two mighty car-warriors looked in that battle like two angry elephants decked with burning torches.14 Then, O monarch, the mighty car-warrior Somadatta, in that battle, cut off with a crescent-shaped arrow the large bow of Madhava.15 With great speed also, at a time when speed was of the utmost consequence, the Kuru hero then pierced Satyaki with five and twenty shafts, and once again with ten.16 Then Satyaki, taking up a tougher bow, quickly pierced Somadatta with five shafts.17 With another broad-headed arrow, Satyaki also, O king, smiling the while, cut off the golden standard of Valhika's son.18 Somadatta, however, beholding his standard cut down, fearlessly pierced the grandson of Cini with five and twenty arrows.19 also, excited with rage, cut off with a razor-faced arrow the bow of Somadatta, in that encounter.20 And he also pierced Somadatta, who then resembled a snake without fangs, with a hundred straight arrows equipt with wings of gold.21 mighty car-warrior Somadatta then, who was endued with great strength, taking up another bow, began to cover Satyaki (with showers of shafts).22 Sātyaki too, inflamed with rage, pierced Somadatta with many shafts. Somadatta, in return, afflicted Sātyaki with his arrowy showers.23 Then Bhima, coming to the encounter, and fighting on behalf of Satyaki, struck Vālhika's son with ten shafts. Somadatta, however. fearlessly struck Bhimasena with many whetted arrows.24 Then Sātyaki, inflamed with rage, aiming at Somadatta's chest, sped a new and terrible Parigha equipt with a golden staff and hard as the thunder.25 The Kuru warrior, however, smiling the while, cut off that terrible Parigha advancing with speed against him, into two parts. That formidable Parigha of iron then, thus cut off into two fragments, fell down like the massy crest of a mountain riven by thunder. Then Satyaki, O king, with a broad-headed arrow, cut off in that encounter Somadatta's bow, and then with five arrows the leathern fence that cased his fingers.28 Then, O Bharata, with four other shafts he speedily despatched the four excellent steeds of the Kuru warrior to Yama's presence.29 And then that tiger among car-warriors, with another straight shaft, smiling the while, cut off from his trunk the head of Somadatta's driver. 50 Then he sped at Somadatta himself a terrible shaft, of fiery effulgence, whetted on stone, steeped in oil, and equipt with wings of gold. That excellent and fierce shaft, sped by the mighty grandson of Cini, quickly fell like a hawk, O lord, upon the chest of Somadatta. 22 Deeply pierced by the mighty Satwata, the great car-warrior Somadatta, O monarch, fell down (from his car) and expired.83 Beholding the great car-warrior Somadatta slain there, thy warriors with a large throng of cars rushed against Yuyudhana.34 Meanwhile, the Pāndavas also, O king, with all the Prabhadrakas and accompanied by a large force, rushed against Drona's army. 25

Yudhishthira, excited with wrath, began with his shafts to strike and rout the troops of Bharadwaja's son in the very sight of the latter.36 Beholding Yudhishthira thus agitating his troops, Drona, with eyes red in wrath, furiously rushed against him.87 The preceptor then pierced the son of Pritha with seven keen arrows. Yudhishthira, in return, excited with wrath, pierced the preceptor with five arrows. 88 Deeply pierced by the son of Pandu, the mighty bowman (Drona), licking the corners of his mouth for a moment, cut off both the standard and the bow of Yudhishthira. 59 With great speed at a time when speed was of the utmost consequence, that best of kings whose bow had been cut off, took up another bow that was sufficiently tough and hard.40 The son of Pandu then pierced Drona with his steeds, driver, standard, and car, with All this seemed exceedingly wonderful.41 a thousand arrows. Afflicted with the strokes of those arrows and feeling great pain, Drona, that bull among Brahmanas, sat down for a while on the terrace of his car.48 Recovering his senses, sighing like a snake, and filled with great rage, the preceptor invoked into existence the Vayavya weapon.48 The valiant son of Pritha, bow in hand, fearlessly baffled that weapon with a similar weapon of his in that encounter.44 And the son of Pāndu also cut into two fragments the large bow of the Brāh-Then Drona, that grinder of Kshatriyas, took up another bow.45 That bull of Kuru's race, (viz., Yudhishthira), cut off that bow also, with many keen shafts. Then Vasudeva, addressing Yudhishthira the son of Kunti, said,46—Listen, O mighty-armed Yudhishthira, to what I say! Cease, O best of the Bharatas, to fight with Drona !47 Drona always striveth to seize thee in battle. I do not think it fit that thou shouldst fight He who hath been created for Drona's destruction will, without doubt, slay him. Leaving the preceptor, go where king Suyodhana is !49 Kings should fight with kings, they should not desire to fight with such as are not kings. Surrounded, therefore, by elephants and steeds and cars, repair thou thither, O son of Kunti, 50 where Dhananjaya with myself, aided by a small force, and Bhima also, that tiger among men, are fighting with the Kurus !51-Hearing these Generated on 2022-02-03 12:57 GMT / https://hdl.handlu Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitru words of Vāsudeva, king Yudhishthira the just, reflecting for a moment, proceeded to that part of the field where that slayer of foes, viz., Bhima, engaged in fierce battle, was slaughtering thy troops like the Destroyer himself with wide open mouth. Making the Earth resound with the loud rattle of his car, which resembled the roar of the clouds at the end of summer, king Yudhishthira the just, the (eldest) son of Pāndu, took up the flank of Bhima engaged in the slaughter of the foe. Drona also, on that night, began to consume his foes, the Pānchālas.'" 55

SECTION CLXIII.

"Sanjaya said,—'During the progress of that fierce and terrible battle, when the world was enveloped with darkness and dust, O king,1 the combatants, as they stood on the field, could not see one another. Those foremost of Kshatriyas fought with each other, guided by conjecture and the personal and other And during the progress, O lord, of that names (they uttered). terrible carnage of car-warriors and elephants and steeds and foot-soldiers,* those heroes, viz., Drona and Karna and Kripa. and Bhima and Prishata's son and Satwata,2-3 afflicted one another and the troops of either party, O bull of Bharata's race! The combatants of both armies, slaughtered all around by those foremost of car-warriors, during that hour of darkness, fled away on all sides. Indeed, the warriors, broke and fled away in all directions, with hearts perfectly cheerless. And as they fled away in all directions they underwent a great carnage. sands of foremost car-warriors also, O king, slaughtered one another in that battle. Unable to see anything in the dark, the combatants became deprived of their senses. the result of the evil counsels of thy son. Indeed, at that hour when the world was enveloped in darkness, all creatures, O Bharata, including even the foremost of warriors, overcome with panic, were deprived of their senses in that battle."+

^{*} The Bombay edition reads the first line of 3 differently. The Bengal reading is also defective. The correct reading seems to be Rathanága instead of Naranágu.—T.

[†] This is a triplet. -T.

"Dhritarashtra said,—'What became the state of your minds then when, afflicted by that darkness, ye all were deprived of your energy and furiously agitated by the Pandavas? How also, O Sanjaya, when everything was enveloped in darkness, did the Pandava troops as also mine once more become visible?"

"Sanjaya continued,—'Then the remnant of the slaughtered army (of the Kauravas), under the orders of their leaders, were once more disposed in (compact) array.10 Drona placed himself at the van, and Calya at the rear. And Drona's son and Cakuni the son of Suvala placed themselves on the right and the .left And king Duryodhana himself, O monarch, on that night, busied himself in protecting all the troops.11 Cheering all the foot-soldiers, O king, Duryodhana said unto them,-Laying aside your great weapons, take ye all blazing lamps in your hands!12-Thus cammanded by that best of kings, the foot-soldiers joyfully took up burning lamps. The gods and Rishis and Gandharvas and celestial Rishis, and the diverse tribes of Vidyādharas and Apsaras,18 and Nāgas and Yakshas and Uragas and Kinnaras, stationed in the welkin, also joyfully took up blazing lamps. Many lamps, filled with sweetscented oil, were seen to fall from the Regents of the cardinal and the subsidiary points of the compass. 4 For Duryodhana's sake, many such were seen to come from Narada and Parvata in especial, lighting up that darkness. The (Kaurava) army then, disposed in compact array, looked resplendent, on that night, with the light of those lamps,16 the costly ornaments (on the persons of the combatants), and the blazing celestial weapons as those were shot or hurled by it. placed five lamps and on each infuriate elephant And upon each horse was placed a large lamp. was that host lighted up by the Kuru warriors. + Set in their places within a short time, those lamps speedily lighted up thy army.17 Indeed, all the troops, thus made radiant by

^{*} Instead of mattagaje, the Bombay edition reads tatragaje.-T.

t There seems to be a mistake in this sloka in its reference to the The reading, however, that occurs in all the printed editions, In one manuscript I find Kaurava-yodhavargais (which I adopt) for Pandava-Kauraveyais. - T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:58 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112
Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access_use#pd-google

the foot-soldiers with oil-fed lamps in their hands, looked beautiful like clouds in the nocturnal sky illumined by flashes of lightning.18 When the Kuru host had thus been illuminated, Drona, endued with the effulgence of the fire, scorching everything around, looked radiant, O king, in his golden armour, like the mid-day Sun of blazing rays.19 The light of those lamps began to be reflected from the golden ornaments, the bright cuirasses and bows, and the well-tempered weapons of the combatants.20 And maces twined with strings, and bright Parighas, and cars and shafts and darts, as they coursed along, repeatedly created, O Ajamida, by their reflection, myriads of lamps.21 And umbrellas and yak-tails and scimitars and blazing brands, O king, and necklaces of gold, as these were whirled or moved, reflecting that light, looked exceedingly beautiful.22 Illuminated by the light of those lamps and irradiated by the reflection from weapons and ornaments, that host, O king, blazed up with splendour.28 Well-tempered and beautiful weapons, red with blood, and whirled by heroes, created a blazing effulgence there like flashes of lightning in the sky at the end of summer.24 The faces of warriors, impetuously pursuing foes for striking them down and themselves trembling in the ardour of the rush, looked beautiful like masses of clouds urged on by the wind.26 As the splendour of the Sun becomes fierce on the occasion of the conflagration of a forest full of trees, even so on that terrible night became the splendour of that fierce and illuminated host. 6 Beholding that host of ours thus illumined, the Parthas also, with great speed, stirring up the foot-soldiers throughout their army, acted like ourselves.27 On each elephant they placed seven lamps, on each car, ten; and on the back of each steed, they placed two lamps; and on the flanks and rear (of their cars) and on their standards also, they placed many lamps.28 on the flanks of their host, and in the rear and the van, and all around and within, many other lamps were lighted. Kurus having done the same, both the armies were thus lighted." Throughout the host, the foot-soldiers became mingled with elephants and cars and cavalry. And the army of Pandu's son was also illuminated by others (than foot-soldiers) standing with blazing torches in their hands. With those lamps that host became fiercely effulgent like a blazing fire made doubly resplendent by the dazzling rays of the maker of The splendour of both the armies, overspreading the Earth, the welkin, and all the points of the compass, seemed With that light thy army as also theirs became to increase. distinctly visible. 52 Awakened by that light which reached the skies, the gods, the Gandharvas, the Yakshas, the Rishis and others crowned with (ascetic) success, and the Apsaras, all came there. 88 Crowded then with gods, and Gandharvas, and Yakshas, and Rishis crowned with (ascetic) success, and Apsaras, and the spirits of slain warriors about to enter the celestial regions, the field of battle looked like a second heaven.34 Teeming with cars and steeds and elephants brilliantly illumined with lamps, with angry combatants and horses slain or wandering wildly, that vast force of arrayed warriors and steeds and elephants looked like the arrays of the celestials and the Asuras in days of old. 55 The rush of darts formed the fierce winds, great cars the clouds, the neigh and grunt of steeds and elephants the roars, shafts the showers, and the blood of warriors and animals the flood, of that tempest-like nocturnal encounter between those god-like men. 86 In the midst of that battle, that foremost of Brahmanas, viz., the high-souled Acwatthaman, scorching the Pandavas, O ruler of men, resembled the midday Sun at the end of the season of rains, scorching everything with his fierce rays." "+87

^{*} The second line of 30, as it occurs in the Bengal texts, is adopted by me. Slight differences of reading occur between the Bengal and the Bombay editions .- T.

⁺ As regards almost every one of these slokas, differences of reading are observable between the Bengal texts and the Bombay edition. The readings of the Bombay edition are almost uniformly better. Then again, many of those verses are disfigured with syntactical pleonasms and other grave errors. Abounding with tiresome repetitions that scarcely attract notice amid the variety of synonyms with which the language of the original abounds and amid also the melodious flow of the rythm, the defects become glaring in translation. At the altar, however, of faith-

SECTION CLXIV.

"Sanjaya said,—'When the field of battle which had before been enveloped in darkness and dust had thus become illuminated, heroic warriors encountered one another, desirous of taking one another's lives.*1 Encountering one another in battle, O king, those combatants, armed with lances and swords and other weapons, gazed at one another, under the influence With those thousands of lamps blazing all around, and with the more dazzling lamps of the gods and the Gandharvas, set upon golden stands decked with jewels, and fed with fragrant oil, the field of battle, O Bharata, looked resplendent like the firmament bespangled with stars. 8-4 With hundreds upon hundreds of blazing brands, the Earth looked exceedingly Indeed, the Earth seemed to be in a conflagration like to what happens at the universal destruction. +5 All the points of the compass blazed up with those lamps all around and looked like trees covered by fire-flies at an evening in the season of rains. Heroic combatants then, O king, engaged in battle with heroic rivals. Elephants engaged with elephants, and horsemen with horsemen," and car-warriors with car warriors, filled with joy, on that fierce night, at the command of thy son.3 The clash of the two armies, both consisting of four Then Arjuna, O monarch, bekinds of forces, became terrible. gan, with great speed, to destroy the Kaurava ranks, weakening all the kings."

"Dhritarāshtra said,—'When the invincible Arjuna, excited with wrath and unable to brook (the feats of the Kurus), penetrated into the army of my son, what became the state of your minds ?10 Indeed, when that scorcher of foes entered fulness, I have been obliged to sacrifice elegance, in rendering this section .- T.

^{*} The Bengal reading tathā loke is incorrect. The Bombay text correctly reads tadaloke. Then also, instead of the Bengal reading rajasacha samāvrite (which is faulty), the true reading is rajsa tamasā vrite. -T.

⁺ Lokanamabhave is explained by Nilkantha as pralaya-kale.-T.

into their midst, what did the soldiers think? What steps also did Duryodhana think fit to be adopted then?" were those chastisers of foes that proceeded in that battle Indeed, when Arjuna of white steeds against that hero? entered (our army), who were they that protected Drona?12 Who guarded the right wheel and who the left wheel of Drona's car? Who were those heroes that protected the rear of that battling hero?18 Indeed, when Bharadwaja's son proceeded, slaying the foe (along his route), who were they that proceeded in his van? That mighty and invincible bowman who penetrated into the midst of the Panchalas,14 that tiger among men, endued with great valour, who proceeded, as if dancing, along the track of his car, and consumed large throngs of Panchala cars by means of his shafts15 like a raging conflagration, alas, how did that Drona meet with his Thou always speakest of my foes as cool and unvanquished and cheerful and swelling with might in battle. Thou dost not, however, speak of mine in such words. other hand, thou describest them to be slain, pale, and routed, and thou speakest of my car-warriors as always deprived of their cars in all the battles they fight !'16-17

"Sanjaya continued,—'Understanding the wishes of Drona who was bent on battle, Duryodhana, on that night, O king, addressing his obedient brothers,18 viz., Vikarna and Chitrasena and Suparça and Duddharsha and Dirghavahu and all those that followed them, said these words:19-Ye heroes of great valour, struggling with resolution, all of you protect Drona from the rear! The son of Hridika will protect his right wheel and Cala his left !20-Saying this, thy son then urged forwards, placing them at the van, the remnant of the brave and mighty Trigarta car-warriors, saying,31-The preceptor is The Pandavas are fighting with great resolution. While engaged in slaughtering the foe in battle, protect him well, uniting together !25 Drona is mighty in battle; is endued with great lightness of hand and great valour. vanquish the very gods in battle, -what need then be said of the Pandavas and the Somakas?25 All of you, however, united together and struggling with great resolution in this terrible battle, protect the invincible Drona from that mighty car-warrior, viz., Dhrishtadyumna !  Except Dhrishtadyumna, I do not see the man amongst all the warriors of the Pāndavas that can vanquish Drona in battle!25 think that we should, with our whole soul, protect the son of Bharadwaja! Protected (by us), he is sure to slay the Somakas and the Srinjayas one after another.26 Upon the slaughter of all the Srinjayas at the head of the (Pandava) army, Drona's son, without doubt, will slay Dhrishtadyumna in battle.27 Similarly, the mighty car-warrior Karna will vanquish Arjuna in battle. As regards Bhimasena and others clad in mail, I will subjugate them all in fight.28 The rest of the Pandavas, deprived of energy, will be easily defeated by other warriors. It is evident, my success then will last for ever.29 reasons, protect the mighty car-warrior Drona in battle!-Having said these words, O chief of the Bharatas, thy son Duryodhana, so urged his troops on that night of terrible dark-Then commenced a battle, O chief of the Bharatas, 51 between the two hosts, O monarch, both actuated by the desire of victory. Arjuna began to afflict the Kauravas, and the Kauravas began to afflict Arjuna, with diverse kinds of wea-Drona's son covered the ruler of the Panchalas, and Drona himself covered the Srinjayas, with showers of straight shafts in that battle. And as the Pandu and the Panchala troops (on the one side) and the Kaurava troops (on the other), O Bharata, were engaged in slaughtering each other, there arose a furious uproar on the field. The battle that took place on that night was so terrible and fierce that its like had never been previously witnessed by ourselves or those gone before us.' "82-85

SECTION CLXV.

"Sanjaya said,—'During the progress of that terrible nocturnal engagment, O king, which was fraught with an indiscriminate carnage, Dharma's son Yudhishthira, addressed the Pāndavas, the Pānchālas, and the Somakas. Indeed, O king, for the destruction of men, cars, and elephants, king Yudhish-thira commanded his own troops, saying,-Proceed ye against

Drona only, for slaving him !* - At the command of the king, O monarch, the Panchalas and the Somakas rushed against Drona alone, uttering terrible shouts.4 Ourselves excited with rage, and loudly roaring in return, rushed against them, to the best of our prowess, courage, and might, in battle.5 varman the son of Hridikā rushed against Yudhishthira as the latter was advancing against Drona, like an infuriate ele-Against Cini's grandson phant against an infuriate compeer. who advanced scattering arrowy showers all around, rushed, O king, the Kuru warrior Bhuri, that grinder (of foes) in Karna the son of Vikartana, O king, resisted that mighty car-warrior, viz., Pandu's son Sahadeva, as the latter advanced for getting at Drona. King Duryodhana, in that battle, himself rushed against that foremost of car-warriors, viz., Bhimasena, advancing on his car like the Destroyer.9 Cakuni the son of Suvala, O king, proceeding quickly, resisted that foremost of warriors, viz., Nakula, who was conversant with every kind of battle.10 Kripa the son of Caradwat, O king, resisted Cikhandin in that battle, that foremost of carwarriors, as the latter advanced on his car.11 Duscāsana, O contending vigorously, resisted Pritivindhya as the latter advanced with resolution, (on his car) drawn by steeds looking like peacocks.12 Açwatthaman, O monarch, resisted Bhimasena's son, viz., the Rākshasa (Ghatotkacha) acquainted with a hundred kinds of illusion, as the latter advanced.19 Vrishasena in that battle resisted the mighty Drupada with his troops and followers, as the latter advanced for getting at Drona.14 The ruler of the Madras, O king, excited with wrath, resisted Virāta, O Bhārata, as the latter quickly advanced for the slaughter of Drona.15 Chitrasena, in that battle, resisted, with great force and shooting many shafts, Nakula's son Catanika, as the latter advanced for slaying Drona.16 The prince of Rākshasas, viz., Alamvusha, O king, resisted Arjuna, that foremost of car-warriors, as the latter advanced.17 Dhrishtadyumna the prince of the Panchalas, cheerfully resisted the great bowman Drona as the latter was engaged in slaughtering the foe.18 As regards the other mighty car-warriors of the Pandavas, that advanced (against Drona), other car-warriors of thy army, O king, resisted them with great force.19 phant-riders, speedily encountering elephant-riders in that dreadful battle, began to fight with each other and grind each other by thousands.20 At dead of night, O monarch, as the steeds rushed against each other with impetuosity, they looked like winged hills. 11 Horsemen, O monarch, encountered horsemen, armed with lances and darts and swords, and uttering loud shouts.22 Large numbers of men slaughtered one another in heaps, with maces and short clubs and diverse other wea-Kritavarman the son of Hridika, excited with wrath, resisted Dharma's son Yudhishthira, like continents resisting the swelling sea.24 Yudhishthira, however, piercing Hridika's son with five arrows, once more pierced him with twenty, and addressing him, said, -Wait, Wait !25 - Then Kritavarman, O sire, excited with wrath, cut off, with a broad-headed shaft, the bow of king Yudhishthira the just and pierced the latter with seven arrows.26 Taking up another bow, that mighty car-warrior, viz., Dharma's son, pierced the son of Hridikā in the arms and the chest with ten arrows.27 Then that warrior of Madhu's race, thus pierced, O sire, by Dharma's son in that battle, trembled with rage and afflicted Yudhishthira with seven shafts.28 Then Pritha's son, cutting off his enemy's bow as also the leathern fence that cased his hands, sped at him five keen shafts whetted on stone.29 Those fierce shafts, piercing through the latter's costly armour decked with gold, entered the Earth like snakes into an anthill. 50 twinkling of an eye, Kritavarman, taking up another bow, pierced the son of Pandu with sixty arrows and once more with Of immeasurable soul, the son of Pandu then, placing his large bow on his car, sped at Kritavarman a dart resembling a snake. *2 That dart decked with gold, sped by the son of Pandu, piercing through Kritavarman's right arm, entered the Earth. 88 Meanwhile, Pritha's son, taking up his formidable bow, shrouded the son of Hridika with showers of straight Then the brave Kritavarman, that great car-warrior among the Vrishnis, within less than the twinkling of an eye, made Yudhishthira steedless and driverless Thereupon the eldest son of Pandu took up a sword and a shield. Then he of Madhu's race cut off both those weapons in that Yudhishthira then, taking up a fierce lance equipt with a gold-decked staff, quickly sped it, in that battle, at the illustrious son of Hridikā. 37 Hridikā's son, however, smiling the while, and displaying great lightness of hands, cut off into two fragments that lance hurled from the arms of Yudhishthira, as it coursed impetuously towards him. 38 He then covered the son of Dharma with a hundred arrows in that encounter. with wrath, he then cut off the latter's coat of mail with showers of shafts. 32 Yudhishthira's armour decked with gold, cut off by Hridika's son with his shafts, dropped down from his body, O king, like a cluster of stars dropping down from the firmament.40 His armour cut off, himself deprived of car and afflicted with the shafts of Kritavarman, Dharma's son Yudhishthira quickly retreated from battle.41 The mighty car-warrior Kritavarman then, having vanquished Yudhishthira the son of Dharma, once more began to protect the wheel of Drona's car.' "43

^{*} A different reading occurs in the Bombay edition .- T.

SECTION CLXVI.

"Sanjaya said,—'Bhuri, O king, in that battle, resisted that foremost of car-warriors, viz., the grandson of Cini, who advanced like an elephant towards a lake full of water.¹ Then Sātyaki, excited with wrath, pierced his foe in the chest with five keen shafts. At this, the latter's blood began to flow.³ The Kuru warrior in that encounter similarly pierced with great speed the grandson of Cini, that hero difficult of defeat in battle, with ten shafts in the chest.³ Those warriors, drawing their bows to their fullest stretch, and with eyes red in wrath, began, O king, to mangle each other in that combat.⁴ The arrowy downpours of those two warriors, both excited with rage and resembling death himself or the Sun scattering his rays, were exceedingly terrible.⁵ Shrouding each other with their shafts, each stayed before the other in that battle.

For a short while that battle proceeded equally. Then, O king, the grandson of Cini, excited with rage and smiling the while, cut off the bow of the illustrious Kuru warrior in that Having cut off his bow, Satyaki quickly pierced him in the chest with nine keen arrows and addressing him, said,-Wait! Wait! That scorcher of foes deeply pierced by his mighty foe, quickly took up another bow and pierced the Satwata warrior in return. Having pierced the Satwata hero with three shafts, O monarch, Bhuri then, smiling the while, cut off his fee's bow with a sharp and broad-headed shaft.10 His bow being cut off, Satyaki, O king, maddened with rage, hurled an impetuous dart at the broad chest of Bhuri.11 ed with that dart, Bhuri fell down from his excellent car. covered with blood, like the Sun dropping down from the fir-Beholding him thus slain, the mighty car-warrior Acwatthaman, O Bharata, rushed impetuously against the grandson of Cini.18 Having addressed Sātyaki, O king, saying-Wait! Wait!-he shrouded him with showers of shafts, like the clouds pouring torrents of rain on the breast of Meru,14 Beholding him rushing towards the car of Cini's grandson, the mighty car warrior Ghatotkacha, O king, uttering a loud roar, addressed him, saying,16-Wait, Wait, O son of Drona! shalt not escape me with life! I will presently slay thee like the six-faced (Kartikeya) slaying (the Asura) Mahisha.16 shall today, on the field, purge thy heart of all desire of battle !- Having said these words, that slayer of hostile heroes. viz., the Rākshasa (Ghatotkacha), with eyes red like copper in wrath,17 rushed furiously against the son of Drona, like a lion rushing against a prince of elephants. And Ghatotkacha sped at his foe shafts of the measure of the Aksha of a car.18 and covered that bull among car-warriors therewith, like clouds pouring torrents of rain. With his own shafts resembling snakes of virulent poison, Drona's son, however, in that battle, quickly dispelled that arrowy shower before it could He then pierced that chastiser of foes, viz., Ghatotkacha, that prince of Rākshasas, with hundreds of keen and swiftly-coursing arrows, all capable of penetrating into Thus pierced with those shafts by Açwatthathe very vitals.

man, that Rakshasa, on the field of battle,15-81 looked beautiful, O monarch, like a porcupine with quills erect on its body. Then the valiant son of Bhimasena, filled with rage, 22 mangled the son of Drona with many fierce arrows whizzing through the air with the roar of the thunder. And he rained on Acwatthaman a perfect shower of arrows of diverse kinds, some equipt with heads like razors, some shaped as the crescent, some long and pointed, some frog-faced, some with heads resembling the boar's ear, some barbed, and some of other species.* Like the wind dispersing mighty masses of clouds, Drona's son, O king, without his senses being agitated, destroved with his own terrible arrows inspired by mantras with the force of celestial weapons, that fierce, unbearable, and unrivalled shower of weapons, whose sound resembled the roar of the thunder, and which fell incessantly upon him. then that another encounter was taking place in the welkin between weapons (as the combatants), 28-26 which was terrible, O king, and which filled the warriors with awe. sparks all around, generated by the clash of the weapons shot by those two warriors,27 the welkin looked beautiful as if illumined by myriads of fire-flies in the evening. Drona's son then, filling all the points of the compass with his shafts,28 shrouded the Rākshasa himself, for doing what was agreeable to thy sons. Then commenced a battle once more between Drona's son and the Rākshasa, so on that night of thick darkness, which resembled the encounter between Cakra and Prah-Then Ghatotkacha, filled with rage, struck Drona's son, in that battle, on the chest, with ten shafts, each resembling the Yuga fire. Deeply pierced by the Rākshasa, the mighty son of Drona began to tremble in that battle like a tall tree Supporting himself by holding the flagshaken by the wind. staff, he swooned away. 50-83 Then all thy troops, O king, uttered cries of Oh and Alas. Indeed, O monarch, all thy warriors then regarded Drona's son as slain.88 Beholding Acwat-

^{*} Nalikas, as used here, appear to have been some species of shafts. In an earlier note, relying on other authorities, I took it to mean some kind of air-gun.-T.

thaman in that plight, the Panchalas and the Srinjavas in that battle uttered leonine roars.  Then that crusher of foes, viz., the mighty car-warrior Acwatthaman, recovering his senses, forcibly drawing the bow with his left hand. 85 and stretching the bowstring to his ear, quickly shot a terrible shaft resembling the rod of Yama himself, aiming at Ghatotkacha. That excellent shaft, fierce and equipt with goodly wings, piercing through the chest of the Rākshasa, entered the Earth, O Deeply pierced, O monarch, by Drona's son who was proud of his prowess in battle, that prince of Rākshasas, endued with great strength, sat down on the terrace of his car. 88 Beholding Hidimva's son deprived of his senses, his charioteer, inspired with fear, speedily removed him from the field, bearing him away from the presence of Drona's son. 89 pierced that prince of Rakshasas, viz., Ghatotkacha, in that encounter thus, Drona's son, that mighty car-warrior, uttered a loud roar.40 Worshipped by thy sons as also by all thy warwarriors, O Bharata, Acwatthaman's body blazed up like the midday Sun.41

"'As regards Bhimasena who was battling in front of Drona's car, king Duryodhana himself pierced him with many whetted shafts.42 Bhimasena, however, O Bharata, pierced him in return with nine arrows. Duryodhana then pierced Bhimasena with twenty arrows.48 Covered with each other's arrows on the field of battle, those two warriors looked like the Sun and the Moon covered with clouds in the firmament.44 Then king Duryodhana, O chief of the Bharatas, pierced Bhima with five winged arrows and said, - Wait! Wait! 45 - Bhima then, cutting off his bow as also his standard with keen shafts, pierced the Kuru king himself with ninety straight arrows.46 Then Duryodhana, filled with rage, taking up a more formidable bow, O chief of the Bharatas, afflicted Bhimasena, at the van of battle, with many whetted shafts, in the very sight of Baffling those shafts shot from Duryodhana's all the bowmen. bow, Bhima47-48 pierced the Kuru king with five and twenty short arrows. Duryodhana then, O sire, excited with wrath, cut off Bhimasena's bow with a razor-faced arrow and pierced Bhima himself with ten shafts in return. Then the Bhimasena, taking up another bow,40-60 quickly pierced the king with seven keen shafts. Displaying great lightness of hand, Duryodhana cut off even that bow of his.52 the third, the fourth, and the fifth, bow that Bhima took up were similarly cut off. Indeed, O king, thy son, proud of his prowess and desirous of victory, cut off Bhima's bow as soon as the latter took up one. Seeing his bows repeatedly cut off.53-53 Bhima then hurled in that battle a dart made wholly of iron and hard as the thunder. That dart, blazing as a flame of fire, resembled the sister of Death." The Kuru king, however, in the very sight of all the warriors and before the eves of Bhima himself, cut into three fragments that dart. which coursed towards him through the welkin with the splendour of fire and dividing it, as it were, by a straight line such as is visible on the head of a woman parting her tresses. Then Bhima, O king, whirling his heavy and blazing mace. hurled it with great force at the car of Duryodhana. heavy mace speedily crushed the steeds, the driver, and the car also, of thy son in that encounter. Thy son then. O monarch, afeared of Bhima and shrinking within the narrowest compass, 55-58 ascended another car, viz., that of the illustrious Then Bhima, regarding Suyodhana to have been slain amid the darkness of that night, " uttered a loud leonine roar, challenging the Kauravas. Thy warriors regarded the king to be slain. " All of them uttered loud cries of oh and Hearing the wails of the afrighted warriors, and the roars of the high-souled Bhima, O king, king Yudhishthira also regarded Suyodhana to have been slain.63 And the eldest son of Pandu thereupon rushed quickly to the spot where Vrikodara the son of Pritha was. And the Panchalas, the Srinjayas, the Matsyas, the Kaikayas, and the Chedis," speedily advanced, with all their might, against Drona from desire of slaying him. There also occurred a dreadful battle between Drona and the enemy. And the combatants of both sides were enveloped in thick gloom and struck and slew one another.' "64

"Sanjaya said,-'Karna the son of Vikartana,* O king, resisted the mighty car-warrior Sahadeva, in that battle, who advanced from desire of getting at Drona.1 Piercing the son of Rādhā with nine shafts, Sahadeva once more pierced that warrior with nine straight arrows. Karna then pierced Sahadeva in return with a hundred straight shafts, and displaying great lightness of hand, cut off the latter's stringed bow. Then the valiant son of Madri, taking up another bow, pierced This feat of his seemed exceeding-Karna with twenty arrows. ly wonderful.4 Then Karna, slaying Sahadeva's steeds with many straight shafts, speedily despatched the latter's driver with a broad-headed shaft, to Yama's abode. The carless Sahadeva then took up a sword and a shield. Even those weapons were cut off by Karna smiling the while.6 Then the mighty Sahadeva, in that encounter, sped towards the car of Vikartana's son, a heavy and terrible mace decked with gold. Karna then, with his shafts, quickly cut off that mace which hurled by Sahadeva, coursed towards him impetuously, and caused it to fall down on the Earth.8 Beholding his mace cut off, Sahadeva quickly hurled a dart at Karna. That dart also was cut off by Karna. The son of Madri then, quickly jumping down from his excellent car, and blazing with wrath upon beholding Karna stationed before him,10 took up a car-wheel and hurled it at the son of Adhiratha. The Suta's son, however, with many thousands of arrows, cut off that wheel coursing towards him like the uplifted wheel of Death. that wheel had been cut off, Sahadava, O sire,11-19 aiming at Karna, hurled at him the shaft of his car, the traces of his steeds, the yokes of cars, the limbs of elephants and steeds and dead human bodies. Karna cut off all these with his shafts. Seeing himself deprived of all weapons, Madri's son18-14 Saha-^{*} Vaikartana may also mean one who has peeled off his skin or natural armour. To preserve dramatic propriety, the Hindu commentators explain it in this sense when it occurs in any such passage, for the real origin of Karna, vis., his procreation by the deity of the Sun, became known after his death.—T.

deva, struck by Karna with many shafts, left the battle. suing him for a while, the son of Radha, O bull of Bharata's race, 15 smilingly addressed Sahadeva and said these cruel words: -Do not, O hero, fight in battle with those that are superior to thee !16 Fight with thy equals, O son of Madri! mistrust my words !- Then touching him with the horn of his bow, he once more said,17-Yonder Arjuna is fighting resolutely with the Kurus in battle. Go there, O son of Madri, or return home, if thou likest !18-Having said those words, Karna, that foremost of car-warriors, smilingly proceeded on his car against the troops of the king of the Panchalas.19 That slayer of foes, that mighty car-warrior, devoted to truth, slew not the son of Mādri although he had got the opportunity, recollecting the words of Kunti. Sahadeva then, heartless and afflicted with arrows, and pierced with the wordy darts of Karna, no longer cherished any love for life. 1 That mighty car-warrior then quickly ascended the car of Janamejaya, the illustrious prince of the Panchalas." "22

SECTION CLXVIII.

"Sanjaya said,-'The ruler of the Madras shrouded on all sides, with clouds of shafts, Virāta with his troops, who was proceeding quickly for getting at Drona.1 The battle that took place between those two great bowmen resembled, O king, that between Vali and Vasava in days of yere. The ruler of the Madras, O monarch, with great activity, struck Virāta, that commander of a large division, with a hundred straight shafts. King Virāta, in return, pierced the ruler of the Madras with nine keen arrows, and once more with three and seventy and once again with a hundred. The ruler of the Madras then, slaying the four steeds yoked unto Virata's car, cut down with a couple of shafts, the latter's umbrella and standard. Quickly jumping down from that steedless car, the king stood, drawing his bow and shooting keen shafts.6 Beholding his brother deprived of his steeds, Catanika quickly approached him on his car in the very sight of all the troops.7 The ruler of the Madras, however, piercing the advancing Catanika with many shafts, despatched him to the abode of Yama.8 Upon the fall of the heroic Catanika, Virata, that commander of a large division, ascended the fallen hero's car decked with standard and garlands. Opening his eyes wide, and with prowess doubled by wrath, Virāta quickly covered the car of the ruler of the Madras with winged arrows.10 The ruler of the Madras then, excited with rage, deeply pierced Virāta, that commander of a large division, in the chest, with a hundred straight shafts." Deeply pierced by the mighty ruler of the Madras, that great car-warrior, viz., Virāta, sat down on the terrace of his car and swooned away.18 His driver then, beholding him mangled with shafts in that encounter, bore him away. Then that vast force, O Bharata, fled away on that night,18 slaughtered with hundreds of arrows by Calya, that ornament of battle. Beholding the troops flying away, Vasudeva and Dhananjaya14 quickly advanced to that spot, O monarch, where Calya was stationed. Then that prince of Rākshasas, viz., Alamvusha, O king, riding upon a foremost car equipt with eight steeds, having terriblelooking Piçāchas of equine faces yoked unto it, furnished with blood-red banners, decked with floral garlands made of black iron, covered with bear-skins, and possessing a tall standard over which perched a terrible, fierce-looking, and incessantly shricking vulture of spotted wings and wide-open eyes, proceeded against those advancing heroes.15-18 That Rakshasa. O king, looked beautiful like a loose heap of antimony, and he withstood the advancing Arjuna, like Meru withstanding a tempest,19 scattering showers of arrows, O monarch, upon Arjuna's head. The battle then that commenced between that Rakshasa and that human warrior, was exceedingly fierce. 20 And it filled all the spectators there, O Bharata, with delight. And it conduced to the joy also of vultures and crows and ravens and owls and Kanakas and jackals.21 Arjuna struck Alamvusha with six shafts and then cut off his standard with ten sharp arrows.22 With a few other arrows he cut off his driver, and with some others his Trivenu, and with one more, his bow, and with four others his four steeds. Alamvusha stringed another bow, but that also Arjuna cut off into two fragments. Then, O bull of Bharata's race, Pārtha pierced that prince of Rākshasas with four keen arrows. Thus pierced, the Rākshasa fled away in fear. Having vanquished him, Arjuna quickly proceeded towards the spot where Drona was, hooting as he went, many shafts, O king, at men, elephants, and steeds. Slaughtered, O monarch, by the illustrious son of Pāndu, the combatants fell down on the ground, like trees laid low by a tempest. While thus being slaughtered by the illustrious son of Pāndu, all of them fled like a frightened herd of deer."

^{*} The second line of 9 is read differently in the Calcutta edition. I adopt the Bombay reading .- T.

SECTION CLXIX.

"Sanjaya said,—'Thy son Chitrasena, O Bharata, resisted (Nakula's son) Catanika who was engaged in scorching thy host with his keen shafts.1 Nakula's son pierced Chitrasena with The latter then pierced the former in return with ten whetted shafts. And once more Chitrasena, O monarch. in that battle, pierced Catanika in the chest with nine keen shafts. The son of Nakula then, with many straight shafts, cut Chitrasena's armour from off his body. This feat of his seemed exceedingly wonderful.4 Divested of his armour, thy son, O king, looked exceedingly beautiful, like a snake, O monarch, having cast off his slough in the proper season. Nakula's son, with many keen shafts, cut off the struggling Chitrasena's standard, and then his bow, O monarch, in that encounter.6 His bow cut off in that combat, and deprived also of his armour, that mighty car-warrior then, O king, took up another bow capable of piercing every foe.7 Then Chitrasena, that mighty car-warrior amongst the Bharatas, quickly pierced the son of Nakula with many straight arrows. The mighty Catānika, excited with rage, O Bhārata, slew the four steeds of Chitrasena and then his driver. The illustrious Chitrasena. endued with great strength, jumping down from that car, afflicted the son of Nakula with five and twenty arrows.10 Then Nakula's son with a crescent-shaped arrow, cut off in that combat the gold-decked bow of Chitrasena while the latter was engaged in thus striking him.¹¹ Bowless and carless and steedless and driverless, Chitrasena then quickly ascended the car of the illustrious son of Hridikā.¹⁸

"'Vrishasena, O king, rushed with great speed, scattering shafts in hundreds, against the mighty car-warrior Drupada advancing at the head of his troops against Drona.*18 in that encounter, pierced that mighty car-warrior, viz., the son of Karna, in the arms and the chest, O lord, with sixty arrows.14 Vrishasena then, excited with rage, quickly pierced Yajnasena standing on his car, with many shafts in the centre of the chest.16 Those two warriors, mangled with arrows, and with shafts sticking to their bodies, looked beautiful like a couple of porcupines with their quills erect.16 Bathed in blood in consequence of the wounds caused by those straight arrows of keen points and golden wings, they looked exceedingly beautiful in that dreadful encounter.17 Indeed, the spectacle they presented was that of a couple of beautiful and radiant Kalpa trees or of a couple of Kingukas rich with their flowery burthens.18 Then Vrishasena, O king, having pierced Drupada with nine arrows, once more pierced him with seventy, and then again with three other arrows.19 Then shooting thousands of arrows, Karna's son, O monarch, looked beautiful in that battle, like a cloud pouring torrents of rain.20 Then Drupada, inflamed with wrath, cut off Vrishasena's bow into two fragments, with a broad-headed arrow, sharp and well-tempered.21 Taking up then another gold-decked bow that was new and strong, and drawing out of his quiver a strong, whetted, well-tempered, sharp, and broad-headed arrow,22 and fixing it on his string, and carefully aiming it at Drupada, he let it off with great inspiring all the Somakas with fear.28 That arrow, piercing through the breast of Drupada, fell on the surface The king (of the Panchalas) then, thus pierced through with Vrishasena's arrow, swooned away.24 His driver then, recollecting his own duty, bore him away from the field.

69

^{*} In the second line of 13, Avyayatturnam instead of Maharaja is the correct reading.—T.

After the retreat, O monarch, of that mighty car-warrior of the Panchalas,25 the (Kaurava), army, on that terrible night, rushed furiously against Drupada's troops whose coats of mail had been cut off by means of the arrows of the foe.26 In consequence of the blazing lamps dropped by the combatants all around, the Earth, O king, looked beautiful like the cloudless firmament bespangled with planets and stars.27 With the fallen Angadas of the combatans, the Earth looked resplendent, O king, like a mass of clouds in the rainy season with flashes of Afflicted with the fear of Karna's son, the Panchālas fled away on all sides, like the Danavas from fear of Indra in the great battle of yore between the gods and the Thus afflicted in battle by Vrishasena, the Panchalas and the Somakas, O monarch, illumined by lamps, looked exceedingly beautiful.*80 Having vanquished them in battle, Karna's son looked beautiful like the Sun, O Bharata, when he reaches the meridian.81 Amongst all those thousands of kings of thy side and theirs, the valiant Vrishasena then seemed to be the one resplendent luminary. 82 Having defeated in battle many heroes and all the mighty car-warriors among the Somakas, he quickly proceeded, O king, to that spot where king Yudhishthira was stationed. 88

"'Thy son Dusçāsana proceeded against that mighty carwarrior, viz., Prativindhya, who was advancing (against Drona), scorching his foes in battle. The encounter that took place between them, O king, looked beautiful, like that of Mercury and Venus in the cloudless firmament. Dusçāsana pierced Prativindhya, who was accomplishing fierce feats in battle, with three arrows in the forehead. Deeply pierced by that mighty bowman, viz., thy son, Pritivindhya, O monarch, looked beautiful like a crested hill. The mighty car-warrior Prativindhya then, piercing Dusçāsana with three arrows, once more pierced him with seven. Thy son then, O Bhārata, achieved there an exceedingly difficult feat, for he felled Prativindhya's steeds with many arrows. With another broadheaded arrow he also felled the latter's driver, and then his standard. And then he cut off, O king, into a thousand fragments the car of Prativindhya armed with the bow.40 with rage, O lord, thy son also cut off, with his straight shafts, into numberless fragments the banner, the quivers, the strings, and the traces (of his antagonist's car).41 Deprived of his car, the virtuous Prativindhya stood, bow in hand, and contended with thy son, scattering numberless arrows.42 Then Dusçãsana, displaying great lightness of hand, cut off Prativindhya's And then he afflicted his bowless antagonist with ten Beholding their brother (Prativindhya) in that plight, his brothers, all mighty car-warriors, rushed impetuously to that spot with a large force.44 He then ascended the resplendent car of Sutasoma. Taking up another bow, he continued, O king, to pierce thy son.45 Then many warriors on thy side, accompanied by a large force, rushed impetuously and surrounded thy son (for rescuing him).46 Then commenced a fierce battle between thy troops and theirs, O Bharata, at that dreadful hour of midnight, enhancing the population of Yama's kingdom.' "47

^{*} This sloka seems to be a vicious one. -T.

SECTION CLXX.

"Sanjaya said,—'Against Nakula who was engaged in smiting thy host, Suvala's son (Cakuni) in wrath rushed with great impetuosity and addressing him, said,—Wait! Wait!'—Each enraged with the other and each desirous of slaying the other, those two heroes struck each other with shafts sped from their bows drawn to their fullest stretch.2 Suvala's son in that encounter displayed the same measure of skill that Nakula displayed, O king, in shooting showers of arrows.8 Both pierced with arrows, O king, in that battle, they looked beautiful like a couple of porcupines with quills erect on their bodies.4 armour of each cut off by means of shafts with straight points. and golden wings, and each bathed in blood, those two warriors looked resplendent in that dreadful battle like two beautiful and brilliant Kalpa trees, or like two flowering Kingukas on the field of battle.6 Indeed, O king, those two heroes in that encounter, both pierced with arrows, looked beautiful like a couple of Calmali trees with prickly thorns on them. oblique glances on each other with eyes expanded in rage and whose corners had become red, they seemed to scorch each other with those glances. Then thy brother-in-law, excited with wrath, and smiling the while, pierced Madri's son in the chest with a barbed arrow of keen point. Deeply pierced by that great bowman, viz., thy brother-in-law, Nakula sat down on the terrace of his car and swooned away.10 Beholding his proud foe, that mortal enemy of his, in that plight, Cakuni uttered a roar loud as that of the clouds at the end of summer." covering consciousness, Nakula, the son of Pandu, once more rushed against Suvala's son, like the Destroyer himself of wideopen mouth.12 Inflamed with rage, O bull of Bharata's race, he pierced Cakuni with sixty arrows, and once more with a hundred long shafts in the centre of his chest.15 He then cut off Cakuni's bow with arrow fixed thereon, into two fragments. And then cutting off in a trice Cakuni's standat the handle. ard, he caused it to fall down on the Earth.14 Piercing next Cakuni's thigh with a keen, sharp, and well-tempered shaft, Nakula the son of Pandu's caused him to fall down on his car like a hunter causing a winged hawk to drop down on the Earth. Deeply pierced, O king, Cakuni sat down on the terrace of his car," clusping his flag-staff, like an amorous man clasping his Beholding that brother-in-law of thine laid low and deprived of consciousness, O sinless one,17 his driver quickly bore him away from the van of battle. The Parthas then, and all their followers, uttered a loud roar.18 Having vanquished his foes, Nakula, that scorcher of foes, addressing his driver, said,—Bear me to the host commanded by Drona!"-Hearing these words of Madri's son, his driver proceeded to that spot, O king, where Drona was stationed.*20 Against the mighty Cikhandin proceeding towards Drona, Kripa the son of Caradwat resolutely advanced with great impetuosity.21 chastiser of foes, viz., Cikhandin, then, smiling the while, pierced with nine arrows the son of Gotama thus advancing against him towards the vicinity of Drona.22 The preceptor

Fena and tena here are equal to yatra and tura .- T.

then (viz., Kripa), that benefactor of thy sons, piercing Cikhandin first with five arrows, once more pierced him with twenty.23 The combat that took place, O monarch, between them, was exceedingly dreadful, like that between Camvara and the chief of the celestials in the battle between the gods and the Asuras.24 Those heroic and mighty car-warriors, both invincible in battle, covered the welkin with their arrows, like clouds covering the welkin on the expiry of summer.25 ble of itself, that night, O chief of the Bharatas, became more terrible still to the heroic combatants engaged in battle.36 Indeed, of terrible aspects and inspiring all sorts of fear, that night became as it were the death-night (of all creatures). Then Cikhandin, O king, cut off, with a crescent-shaped arrow, the large bow of Gotama's son and sped at the latter many whetted shafts. Inflamed with wrath, O monarch, Kripa then sped at his antagonist a fierce dart 27-28 equipt with a golden staff and keen point and polished by the hands of the smith. Cikhandin, however, cut it off with ten shafts as it coursed towards him.29 That dart then, decked with gold, (thus cut off) fell down on the Earth. Then Gautama, that foremost of men, taking up another bow, so O king, covered Cikhandin with a large number of whetted shafts. Thus covered in that battle by the illustrious son of Gotama, 81 Cikhandin, that foremost of car-warriors, became weakened on the terrace of his car, Beholding him weakened, Kripa the son of Caradwat, in that encounter,32 struck him with many arrows, from desire of slaying him, O Bharata! (Cikhandin then was borne away by his driver). Beholding that mighty car-warrior, viz., the son of Yajnasena retreating from battle, st the Panchalas and the Somakas surrounded him on all sides (for rescuing him). larly thy sons also surrounded that foremost of Brāhmanas (viz., Kripa), 34 with a large force. Then commenced a battle once more, between car-warriors, O king, that struck one another. 25 The uproar that rose became loud as the roar of clouds, O Bharata, caused by rushing horsemen and elephants, O monarch, to smiting one another down. Then, O king, the field of battle looked exceedingly fierce. With the tread of rushing infantry the Earth of began to tremble, O monarch, like a lady moved by fear. Car-warriors, mounting on their cars, rushed impetuously,88 attacking compeers by thousands, O king, like crows seizing winged insects (in the air). Similarly mighty elephants with the juice trickling down their bodies, pursuing similar elephants, encountered them, O Bharata, furiously. So also, horsemen, coming upon horsemen, and foot-soldiers, coming upon foot-soldiers, 89-40 angrily encountered one another in that At dead of night the sound of retreating and rushing troops and of those coming again to the encounter became deafening. The blazing lamps also, placed on cars and elephants and steeds,41-42 seemed, O king, like large meteors falling from the firmament. That night, O chief of the Bharatas, lightened up by those lamps,48 looked like day, O king, on the field of battle. As the Sun, encountering the thick gloom, destroys it completely,44 even so the thick gloom of the field of battle was destroyed by those blazing lamps. Indeed, the welkin, the Earth, the cardinal and the subsidiary points of the compass,45 enveloped by dust and darkness, became once more illuminated by that light. The splendour of weapons and coats of mail, and of the jewels of illustrious heroes, became overshadowed by the light of those blazing lamps. During the progress of that fierce battle at night, 46-47 none of the combatants. O Bharata, could know the warriors of his own side. chief of the Bhāratas, slew son,48 and son, from ignorance, slew sire, and friend slew friend. And relatives slew relatives, and maternal uncles slew sisters' sons,49 and warriors slew warriors of their own side, and foes slew their own men, in that battle, O Bhārata. In that dreadful nocturnal encounter, O king, all fought furiously, ceasing to have any regard for one another.' "50

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:59 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

SECTION CLXXI.

"Sanjaya said,—'In that fierce and terrible battle, Dhrishtadyumna, O king, proceeded against Drona.1 Holding his formidable bow and repeatedly stretching his bowstring, the Panchala prince rushed towards Drona's car decked with gold. And as Dhrishtadyumna proceeded for accomplishing the destruction of Drona, the Panchalas and the Pandavas, O king, surrounded him. Beholding Drona, that foremost of preceptors, thus assailed, thy sons, resolutely contending in battle, protected Drona on all sides.4 Then those two oceans of troops encountered each other on that night, and looked like two terrible oceans lashed into fury by the tempest, with all living creatures within them exceedingly agitated.5 Then the prince of the Panchalas, O king, quickly pierced Drona in the chest with five arrows and uttered a leonine roar.6 Drona, however, O Bharata, piercing his foe in return with five and twenty arrows in that battle, cut off, with another broad-headed arrow, his bright bow. Forcibly pierced by Drona, O bull of Bharata's race, Dhrishtadyumna, quickly casting aside his bow, bit his (nether) lip in rage.8 Indeed, O monarch, the valiant Dhrishtadyumna, excited with wrath, took up another formidable bow for accomplishing the destruction of Drona.9 slayer of hostile heroes, that warrior endued with great beauty, stretching that formidable bow to his ear, sped a terrible shaft capable of taking Drona's life.10 That shaft, thus sped by the mighty prince in that fierce and dreadful battle, illumined the whole army like the risen Sun.11 Beholding that terrible shaft, the gods, the Gandharvas, and the Danavas, said these words, O king, viz.,-Prosperity to Drona !12-Karna, however, O king, displaying great lightness of hand, cut off into a dozen fragments that shaft as it coursed towards the preceptor's car.18 Thus cut off into many fragments, O king, that shaft of Dhrishtadyumna, O sire, quickly fell down on the Earth like a snake without poison.14 Having cut off with his own straight shafts those of Dhrishtadyumna in that battle, Karna then pierced Dhrishtadyumna himself with many sharp And Drona's son pierced him with five, and Drona arrows.15 himself with five, and Calya pierced him with nine, and Duscasana with three.16 And Duryodhana pierced him with twenty arrows, and Cakuni with five. Indeed, all those mighty car-warriors quickly pierced the prince of the Panchalas.17 Thus was he pierced by those seven heroes in that battle exerting themselves for the rescue of Drona. The prince of the Panchalas, however, pierced every one of those heroes with

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:59 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112
Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access_use#pd-google

http://www.hathitrust.org/access_use#pd-google Generated on 2022-02-03 12:59 GMT

three arrows.18 Indeed, O king, Dhrishtadyumna, in that dreadful battle, quickly pierced Drona himself, and Karna, and Drona's son, and thy son.19 Thus pierced by that bowman, those warriors, fighting together, pierced Dhrishtadyumna again in that encounter, uttering loud roars the while.20 Then Drumasena, excited with wrath, O king, pierced the Panchala prince with a winged arrow, and once again quickly with three other arrows. And addressing the prince, he said,-Wait! Wait !21 - Dhrishtadyumna then pierced Drumasena in return with three straight arrows, in that encounter, which were equipt with wings of gold, steeped in oil, and capable of taking the life of him at whom they are sped.22 With another broadheaded shaft, the prince of the Panchalas then, in that battle, cut off from Drumasena's trunk the latter's head decked with bright ear-rings of gold.25 That head, with (the lower) lip bit (in rage), fell on the ground like a ripe palmyra fruit separated from the stalk by the action of a strong wind.24 Once again piercing all those warriors with keen shafts, that hero, with some broad-headed shafts, cut off the bow of Radha's son, that warrior conversant with all modes of warfare.25 could not brook that cutting off of his bow, like a fierce lion incapable of brooking the cutting off of his tail.26 Taking up another bow, Karna, with eyes red in rage, and breathing hard, covered the mighty Dhrishtadyumna with clouds of arrows." Beholding Karna excited with rage, those heroes, viz., those six bulls among car-warriors, quickly encompassed the prince of the Pancha'as from desire of slaying him.28 Seeing the latter in front of those six foremost warriors of thy side, all the troops, O lord, regarded him to be already within the jaws of the Destroyer.29 Meanwhile, Sātyaki of the Daçārha race, scattering his shafts as he proceeded, reached the spot where the valiant Dhrishtadyumna was battling. so Beholding that invincible warrior of the Sātwata race advancing, Rādhā's son pierced him in that battle with ten arrows. 81 Sātyaki then, O king, pierced Karna with ten shafts in the very sight of all those heroes, and addressing him, said,-Do not fly away but stay before me !82—The encounter then that took place between the mighty Sātyaki and the illustrious Karna, resembled, O

Generated on 2022-02-03 12:59 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112
Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google

king, that between Vali and Vasava (in days of yore). 88 bull among Kshatriyas, viz., Sātyaki, terrifying all the Kshatrivas with the rattle of his car, pierced the lotus-eyed Karna in return (with many arrows).84 Making the Earth tremble with the twang of his bow, the mighty son of the Suta, O monarch, contended with Satyaki. Indeed, Karna pierced the grandson of Cini in return with hundreds of arrows and diverse other shafts, long, and barbed, and pointed, and calftoothed, and razor-headed.86 Similarly, that foremost one of Vrishni's race, viz., Yuyudhāna, in that battle, shrouded Karna with his arrows. For a time that battle proceeded equally. 37 Then thy sons, O monarch, placing Karna at their head, all pierced Sātyaki from every side with keen arrows. 88 with his own weapons those of them all and of Karna also, O lord, Sātyaki quickly pierced Vrishasena in the centre of the Pierced with that arrow, the valiant Vrishasena of great splendour quickly fell down on his car, casting aside his Then Karna, believing that mighty car-warrior, viz., Vrishasena, slain, became scorched with grief on account of the death of his son and began to afflict Satyaki with great Thus afflicted by Karna, the mighty car-warrior Yuyudhana, with great speed, repeatedly pierced Karna with many Once more piercing Karna with ten arrows, and Vrishasena with five, the Satwata hero cut off the leathern fences and the bows of both sire and son.43 Then those two warriors, stringing two other bows capable of inspiring enemies with terror, began to pierce Yuyudhāna from every side with keen shafts. During the progress of that fierce conflict that was so destructive of heroes, the loud twang of Gandiva, O king, was heard over every other sound.45 Hearing then the rattle of Arjun'a car as also the twang of Gandiva, the Suta's son, O king, said these words unto Duryodhana: 46-Slaughtering our entire army and the foremost of heroic warriors and many mighty bowmen among the Kauravas, Arjuna is loudly twanging his bow.47 The rattle also of his car is heard, resembling the roar of the thun-It is evident, the son of Pandu is achieving feats worthy of his own self.48 This son of Pritha, O monarch, will grind Many of our troops are already breaking! No our large host! 70

. .

one stays in battle !49 Indeed, our army is being dispersed like a risen mass of clouds dispersed by the wind. Encountering Arjuna, our host breaks like a boat on the ocean. 50 The loud wails, O king, of foremost of warriors, O monarch, flying away from the field or falling down in consequence of the arrows sped from Gandiva, are being heard !51 Hear, O tiger among car-warriors, the sound of drums and cymbals near Arjuna's car at dead of night, resembling the deep roll of thunder in the welkin !50 Hear also the loud wails (of afflicted combatants) and the tremendous leonine shouts, and diverse other noises, in the vicinity of Arjuna's car 158 Here, however, this Satyaki, this foremost one of the Satwata race, stayeth amid us. object of our aim can be struck down, we can then vanquish all our foes!64 Similarly, the son of the Panchala king is engaged He is encompassed on all sides by many heroic and foremost of car-warriors.55 If we can slay Sātyaki and Dhrishtadyumna the son of Prishata, without doubt, O king. victory will be ours!56 Surrounding these two heroes, these two mighty car-warriors, as we did the son of Subhadra, we will strive. O king, to slay them, viz., this son of Vrishni's race and this son of Prishata !57 Savyasāchin, O Bhārata, is before us, coming towards this division of Drona, knowing that Satvaki is engaged here with many bulls among the Kurus.58 a large number of our foremost of car-warriors proceed thither. so that Partha may not be able to come to the rescue of Satvaki now encompassed by many. Let these great heroes speedily shoot clouds of shafts with great force, so that Satyaki of Madhu's race may be speedily despatched to Yama's abode !60-Ascertaining this to be the opinion of Karna, thy son, addressing Suvala's son in that battle, like the illustrious Indra addressing Vishnu, said these words: 61-Surrounded by ten thousand unretreating elephants and ten thousand cars also, proceed against Dhananjaya !62 Dusçāsana and Durvishaha and Suvāhu and Dushpradharshana,—these will follow thee, surrounded by a large number of foot-soldiers!63 O uncle, slay those great bowmen, viz., the two Krishnas, and Yudhishthira, and Nakula, and Sahadeva, and Bhima the son of Pandu! 4 My hope of victory resteth on thee like that of the gods on their chief Indra! O uncle, slay the son of Kunti like Pāka's son (Kārtikeya) slaying the Asuras !65 - Thus addressed and urged by thy son, Cakuni, clad in mail, proceeded against the Parthas, accompanied by a large force as also by thy sons, in order to consume the sons of Pandu. Then commenced a great battle between the warriors of thy army and the foe. 66-67 When Suvala's son, O king, (thus) proceeded against the Pandavas, the Suta's son, accompanied by a large force, quickly advanced against Sātyaki, shooting many hundreds of shafts. Indeed, thy warriors, combining together, encompassed Sātyaki.68-69 Then Bharadwāja's son, proceeding against the car of Dhrishtadyumna, fought a wonderful and fierce battle at dead of night, O bull of Bharata's race, with the brave Dhrishtadyumna and the Panchalas.""

SECTION CLXXII.

"Sanjaya said,-"Then all those kings of thy army, incapable of being easily defeated in battle, angrily proceeded against Yuyudhāna's car, unable to brook (his feats).1 Mounting on their well-equipt cars, O king, that were decked with gold and jewels, and accompanied also by cavalry and elephants, they encompassed the Sātwata hero.2 Hemning him on all sides, those mighty car-warriors, challenging that hero, uttered loud leonine roars.3 Those great heroes, desirous of slaying him of Mādhu's race, poured their keen arrows on Sātyaki of invincible Beholding them thus advancing with speed towards him, that slayer of hostile hosts, viz., the mighty-armed grandson of Cini, took up and shot many shafts.5 The heroic and great bowman Sātyaki, invincible in battle, cut off many heads with his fierce and straight arrows.6 And he of Madhu's race also cut off the trunks of many elephants, the necks of many steeds, and the arms decked with Angadas of many warriors, by means of razor-faced arrows.7 With the fallen yak-tails and white umbrellas, O Bhārata, the field of battle became almost full and resembled the firmament, O lord, with stars.3 wails of the host thus slaughtered in battle, O Bhārata, by Yuyudhana, became as loud as those of shricking ghosts (in hell). With that loud uproar the Earth became filled, and the night became fiercer and more terrible.10 Beholding his host, afflicted with Yuyudhana's arrows and breaking, and hearing that tremendous uproar at dead of night making the hair to stand on end," thy son, that mighty car-warrior, addressing his driver, repeatedly said,-Urge the steeds to that spot whence this uproar cometh.12-Then king Duryodhana, that firm bowman. above all fatigue, endued with great lightness of arms and conversant with all modes of warfare, rushed against Yuyudhana.19 Mādhava pierced Duryodhana with a dozen blood-drinking shafts sped from his bow drawn to its fullest stretch.14 Thus afflicted with arrows by Yuyudhana first, Duryodhana, excited with rage, pierced the grandson of Cini in return with ten arrows.15 Meanwhile the battle that raged between the Panchalas and all thy troops presented an exceedingly wonderful sight.16 Then the grandson of Cini, excited with rage in that battle, pierced thy son, that mighty car-warrior, with eighty shafts, in the chest.17 He then, with other shafts, despatched Duryodhana's steeds to And that slayer of foes then quickly felled his Yama's abode. antagonist's driver from the car.18 Thy son, O monarch, staying on that steedless car, shot many keen arrows towards Satyaki's The grandson of Cini, however, displaying great lightness of hand, O king, cut off those fifty shafts sped in that battle by thy son.20 Then Madhava, with a broad-headed shaft, suddenly cut off in that encounter the formidable bow of thy son in the Deprived of both his car and bow, that puissant ruler of men then mounted quickly upon the bright car of Krita-Upon Duryodhana's retreat, the grandson of Cini. O monarch, afflicted and routed thy army at dead of night. 23

"'Cakuni, meanwhile, O king, encompassing Arjuna on all sides with many thousands of cars and several thousands of elephants, and many thousands of steeds, began to fight desperately. Many of them hurled towards Arjuna celestial weapons of great power. Indeed, those Kshatriyas fought with Arjuna, incuring the certitude of death. Arjuna, however, excited with rage, checked those thousands of cars and elephants and steeds, and ultimately caused those foes to turn back. Then Suvala's son, with eyes red as copper with rage, deeply pierced Arjuna, that slayer of foes, with twenty shafts. And once more shooting a hundred shafts, he checked the progress of Partha's Then Arjuna, O Bharata, pierced Cakuni with twenty arrows in that battle. And he pierced each of the great bowmen with three arrows.29 Checking all of them with his arrows, O king, Dhananjaya slew those warriors of thy army with excellent shafts endued with the force of thunder.*50 Strewn with lopped-off arrows, O monarch, and (dead) bodies by thousands, the Earth looked as if covered with flowers. 81 Indeed, strewn with the heads of Kshatriyas,—heads that were decked with diadems and handsome noses and beautiful ear-rings and (nether) lips bit in rage and wide open eyes, -heads that were graced with collars and crowned also with gems, and which, while life was in them, spoke sweet words,—the Earth looked resplendent as if strewn with hillocks overspread with Champaka flowers. 82-83 Having achieved that fierce feat, and pierced Cakuni once more with five straight shafts, Vibhatsu of fierce prowess,84 excited with rage, once more struck Uluka with an arrow in that battle. Piercing Uluka thus in the sight of his sire, viz., Suvala's son, 85 Arjuna uttered a loud roar, filling the Earth therewith. Then the son of Indra cut off Cakuni's bow. 86 And then he despatched his four steeds Then Suvala's son, O bull of Bharata's to Yama's abode. race, jumping down from his car, 87 quickly ascended the car Then those two mighty car-warriors, viz., sire and son, both riding on the same car, 38 showered their arrows on Partha like two risen clouds pouring torrents of rain on a The son of Pandu then, piercing both those warriors with keen shafts,89 afflicted and caused thy troops to fly away in hundreds and thousands. Like a mighty mass of clouds dispersed on all sides by the wind,40 that army of thine, O monarch, was dispersed on all sides. Indeed, that host, O chief of the Bhāratas, thus slaughtered on that night,41 fled away in all directions, afflicted with fear and in the very sight (of their leaders). Many abandoning the animals they rode, others urging their animals to their greatest speed,42 turned back from the battle, inspired with fear, during that fierce hour of darkness. Having vanquished thy warriors thus, O bull of Bharata's race, ⁴⁸ Vāsudeva and Dhananjaya cheerfully blew their conchs.

^{*} In the first line of 30, Vānaganais and not Vánaganān is the true reading.—T.

"'Dhrishtadyumna, O monarch, piercing Drona with three arrows,44 quickly cut off the latter's bowstring with a sharp Throwing down that bow on the Earth, the heroic Drona, that grinder of Kshatriyas,45 took up another that was exceedingly tough and strong. Piercing Dhrishtadyumna then with five arrows,46 Drona pierced his driver also, O bull of Bharata's race, with five arrows. Checking Drona with his arrows, the mighty car-warrior Dhrishtadyumna47 began to destroy the Kaurava host like Maghavat destroying the Asura army. During the slaughter of thy son's army, O sire,48 a terrible river, having blood for its current, began to flow. And it ran between the two hosts, bearing away men and steeds and elephants along its current.49 resembled, O king, the Vaitarani that flows, O lord, towards Agitating and routing thy army, the the domains of Yama. valiant Dhrishtadyumna,50 endued with great energy, blazed forth like Cakra in the midst of the celestials. dyumna and Cikhandin blew their large conchs,51 as also the twins (Nakula and Sahadeva), and Yuyudhana, and Vrikodara the son of Pandu. Having vanquished thousands of kings on thy side that were endued with great energy,52 those fierce warriors, viz., the Pandavas, desirous of victory, uttered loud leonine shouts, in the very sight of thy son and of Karna and the heroic Drona and Drona's son, O monarch!" "58

SECTION CLXXIII.

"Sanjaya said,—'Beholding his own army routed while being slaughtered by those illustrious heroes, thy son, well-acquainted with words, O monarch, quickly repairing unto Karna and also Drona, that foremost of all victors in battle, wrathfully said these words: "-2—This battle has been set on foot by you two in rage, having seen the ruler of the Sindhus slain by Savyasāchin!" You are beholding with indifference the slaughter of my army by the forces of the Pandavas, although you two are fully competent to vanquish those forces ! If you two now abandon me, you should have, in the beginning, told me of it !- We two shall vanquish the sons of Pandu in battle !- Even these were the words, ye givers of honors, that ye then said unto me! Hearing these words of yours, I sanctioned these proceedings. I would never have provoked these hostilities with the Parthas,-hostilities that are so destructive of heroic combatants, (if ye had told me otherwise)!5-6 If I do not deserve to be abandoned by you two, ye bulls among men, then fight ye according to the true measure of your prowess, ye heroes endued with great prowess!'-Thus pierced with the goad of speech by thy son, those two heroes once more engaged in battle, like two snakes vexed with sticks.8 Then those two foremost of car-warriors, those two bowmen above all bowmen in the world, rushed with speed against the Parthas headed by the grandson of Cini and by Similarly the Parthas, uniting together, and accompanied by all their troops, advanced against those two heroes, who were roaring repeatedly.10 Then the great bowman Drona, that foremost of all wielders of weapons, excited with rage, quickly pierced (Sātyaki) that bull amongst the Cinis, with ten arrows.11 And Karna pierced him with ten arrows, and thy son with seven, and Vrishasena pierced him with ten, and Suvala's son with seven.12 In that impervious wall of Kauravas around the grandson of Cini, these also stationed themselves, encompassing him. Beholding Drona slaughtering the Pandava army in that battle,18 the Somakas quickly pierced him from every side with showers of arrows. Then Drona began to take the lives of Kshatriyas, O monarch,14 like the Sun destroying darkness around him by his rays. We then heard, O monarch, a loud uproar amongst the Panchalas, who called upon one another, while they were being slaughtered by Some abandoning sons, some sires, some brothers. some uncles, some their sisters' sons, some friends, some their relatives and kinsmen, fled away with speed, for saving their own lives.15-17 Some, again, deprived of their sonses, ran against Drona himself. Indeed, many were the combatants of the Pandava army that were then despatched to the other world.18 Thus afflicted by that illustrious hero, the Pandava host, that night, O king, fled away, throwing down their blazing torches all around,19 in the very sight of Bhimasena and Arjuna and Krishna and the twins and Yudhishthira and Prishata's son.20 The world being enveloped in darkness, nothing could be seen. In consequence of the lights that were among the Kaurava troops, the flight of the foe could be ascertained. 21 Those mighty car-warriors, viz., Drona and Karna, O king, pursued that flying host, scattering numerous shafts.22 Pānchālas slaughtered and routed, Janārddana, becoming cheerless, said these words unto Phalguna,28-Dhrishtadyumna and Sātyaki, accompanied by the Pānchālas, had proceeded against those great bowmen, viz., Drona and Karna, shooting many This large host of ours hath been broken and routed (by them) with showers of arrows. Though their flight is sought to be checked, they are still incapable of being rallied, O son of Kunti !25—Beholding the host fly away, both Kecava and Arjuna, addressing the troops, said,-Do not fly away, through fear! Ye Pandava warriors, cast away your fears!26 Accompanied by all the forces and arraying them in good order, both of us, with uplifted weapons, are even now proceeding against Drona and the Suta's son for withstanding them :27-Then Janarddana, beholding Vrikodara advancing, once more addressed Arjuna the son of Pandu, as if for gladdening him, in these words :28-Yonder Bhima, who taketh delight in battle, surrounded by the Somakas and the Pandavas, is coming against those mighty car-warriors, viz., Drona and Karna :33 Supported by him, as also by the many mighty car-warriors among the Pandavas, fight now, O son of Pandu, for assuring all your troops !0-Then those two tigers among men, viz., the son of Pandu and he of Madhu's race, approaching Drona and Karna, took up their station at the head of battle.'s1

"Sanjaya continued,-'Then that vast force of Yudhishthira

^{*} The second line of 30 is read differently in the Calcutta edition. In consequence also of some differences between the two printed editions, 30 of the Calcutta text is 32 of the Bombay text.—T.

once more returned to battle, proceeding to the place where Drona and Karna were grinding their foes in battle.12 At dead of night a fierce encounter took place, resembling that of two oceans swelling at moon-rise.88 Then the warriors of thy army, throwing away from their hands the blazing lamps held by them, fought with the Pandavas fearlessly and madly.84 that terrible night when the world was enveloped with gloom and dust, the combatants fought with one another, guided only by the names they uttered. The names uttered by the kings contending in battle, were heard, O monarch, there, like to what happens, O king, at a self-choice. 86 Suddenly a silence overspread the field of battle, and lasted for a moment. again a loud uproar was heard made by the angry combatants, victors and vanquished.87 Thither where blazing lamps were seen, O bull of Kuru's race, thither rushed those heroes like insects (towards a blazing fire). 88 And as the Pandavas, O king, and the Kauravas contended with each other in battle, the darkness of night thickened around them.' "89

SECTION CLXXIV.

"Sanjaya said,—'Then Karna, that slayer of hostile heroes, beholding Prishata's son in battle, struck him on the chest with ten shafts capable of penetrating into the very vitals.1 Dhrishtadyumna quickly pierced Karna in return, in that great battle, with five shafts, and addressing him, said,—Wait! -Wait !2-Shrouding each other in that dreadful with showers of arrows, O king, they once more pierced each other with keen shafts sped from bows drawn to their fullest stretch. Then Karna, in that battle, despatched to Yama's abode the driver and the four steeds of Dhrishtadyumna, that foremost warrior among the Panchalas.4 He then cut off his enemy's foremost of bows with keen arrows, and felled, with a broad-headed shaft, the latter's driver from his niche in the car.5 The valiant Dhrishtadyumna, deprived of car, steeds, and driver, quickly jumped down from his car and took up a mace. Though struck all the while with straight shafts by Karna, the Panchala prince, approaching Karna, slew the four

71

steeds of the latter.' Turning back with great speed, that slayer of hosts, viz., the son of Prishata, quickly ascended the car of Dhananjaya. Mounting upon that car, the mighty car-warrior Dhrishtadyumna8 desired to proceed towards Karna. (Yudhishthira), however, bade him desist. Dharma's son Then Karna, endued with great energy, mingling his leoning shouts with it, twanged his bow loudly, and blew his conch with great force. Beholding Prishata's son vanquished in battle, those mighty car-warriors, 9-10 viz., the Panchalas and the Somakas, excited with rage, and taking up all kinds of weapons, proceeded, making death itself their goal, towards Karna, from desire of slaughtering him. Meanwhile Karna's driver had voked other steeds unto his master's car,11-18 that were white as conchs, endued with great speed, of the Sindhu breed, and well-broken. Then Karna of sure aim, contending with vigor, afflicted those mighty car-warriors among the Panchalas with his shafts like a cloud pouring torrents of rain upon a The Panchala host, thus afflicted by Karna, 18-16 fled away in fear, like a doe frightened by a lion. Horsemen were seen falling from their horses, and elephant-riders from their elephants, O monarch, and car-warriors from cars, all In that dreadful battle Karna cut off with razorfaced arrows the arms of flying combatants and heads decked And he cut off, O king, the thighs of others with ear-rings. that were on elephants 15-17 or on the backs of steeds or on the Earth, O sire! Many mighty car-warriors, as they fled away, felt not their loss of limbs or the injury to their anima's, in that battle. Slaughtered with terrible shafts, the Panchalas and the Srinjayas 18-19 took the motion of even a straw for Karna, (so great was their fright). Deprived of their senses, the warriors took their flying friends for Karna and fled away from these in fear. Karna pursued the broken and retreating host, O Bharata, shooting his shafts on all sides. Indeed, in that battle, the retreating warriors, deprived of their senses, were slaughtered in thousands.20-22 The Panchalas were incapable of making a stand, while they were thus slaughtered with mighty weapons by Karna, that illustrious hero.23 Others, only looked at by Drona, fled away on all sides.

Yudhishthira, beholding his army flying away,24 and regarding retreat to be advisable, addressed Phalguna and said.—Behold the mighty bowman Karna stationed there like Rudra himself armed with his bow !25 Behold him scorching everything around like the blazing Sun himself, at this fierce hour, this dead of night! These wails are being incessantly heard, O Partha, of thy helpless friends who are uttering them, mangled by the shafts of Karna! The manner in which Karna is aiming and letting off his shafts is such that no interval can be noticed between the two acts! He will, O Partha, annihilate all our friends! Do that now, O Dhananjaya, about the slaughter of Karna, which, according to thy judgment, should next be done and the time for which may have come!-Thus addressed (by Yudhishthira), Partha said unto Krishna, se-29—The royal son of Dharma is frightened today at the prowess of Karna! When Karna's division is thus acting (towards us) repeatedly, do thou speedily adopt that course which should now be adopted! Our army is flying away! slaver of Madhu, our troops, broken and mangled with Drona's shafts and frightened by Karna, are unable to make a stand! I see Karna careering fearlessly! so-sa Our foremost of carwarriors are flying away! Karna is scattering his keen shafts. I cannot, like a snake incapable of putting up with the tread of a human being upon its body, bear to see him thus careering at the head of battle, before my eyes, O tiger of Vrishni's race! Proceed, therefore, to that spot where the mighty car-warrior Either I will kill him, O slayer of Madhu, or let. Karna is! him slay me !88-84_

"Vāsudeva said,—I behold Karna, O son of Kunti, that tiger among men, that warrior of superhuman prowess, careering in battle like the chief of the celestials himself! O Dhananjaya, there is none else capable of advancing against him in battle, save thee, O tiger among men, and the Rākshasa Ghatotkacha! I do not, however, O sinless one, regard the time to have come, O mighty-armed one, for thee to encounter the Suta's son in battle! The blazing dart, resembling a mighty meteor, given him by Vasava, is still with him, O thou of mighty arms, kept for thee with care, by the Suta's son !58 He keepeth that dart by him, and hath now assumed a terrible As regards Ghatotkacha, he is always devoted to you and desirous of your good !39 Let the mighty Ghatotkacha proceed against the son of Radha! Endued with the prowess of a celestial, he has been begot by the mighty Bhima !40 him are celestial weapons as also those used by Rākshasas and He will vanquish Karna. I have no doubt of it!41 -Thus addressed (by Krishna), the mighty-armed Partha of of eyes like lotus petals summoned that Rākshasa. soon came before him,42 clad in mail, and armed, O king, with sword, arrows, and bow. Saluting Krishna as also Dhananjaya the son of Pandu48 he proudly said,—Here I am, command me!—Then he of Daçarha's race, addressed Hidimva's son, that Rākshasa of blazing mouth and fiery eyes and body of the hue of clouds, and said these words: 44-Listen, O Ghatotkacha, attend to what I say! The time is come for the display of thy prowess, and not of anybody else!45 Be thou the raft in this battle to the sinking Pandavas! Thou hast diverse weapons, and many kinds of Rakshasa illusion! O son of Hidimvā, the army of the Pandavas is being beaten by Karna on the field of battle like a herd of kine by the herdsman!47 Yonder, the mighty bowman Karna, endued with great intelligence and steady prowess, is scorching the foremost of Kshatriyas among the divisions of the Pandava host 148 Afflicted by his fiery arrows the Pandava warriors are incapable of staying in front of that firm bowman who is shooting showers of mighty shafts!49 Afflicted at dead of night by the Suta's son with his arrowy showers, the Panchalas are flying away like a herd of deer afflicted by a lion. 50 Except thee, O thou of terrible prowess, there is none else that can withstand the Suta's son who is thus engaged in battle! Aided by thy energy and might, do thou, O mighty-armed one, accomplish that which is worthy of thy own self, of thy maternal race, and of thy sires!52 It is even for this, O son of Hidimva, that men desire children, viz., for being rescued from difficulties! Do thou now rescue thy kinsmen!58 O Ghatotkacha, sires desire sons for achieving their own ob-Children, those sources of good, are expected to rescue their sires both here and hereafter!54 Illustrious thou art, and thy might in battle is terrible and unrivalled! While contending in battle, there is none equal to thee !55 O scorcher of foes, be thou the means by which the Pandavas who are routed by Karna with his shafts this night, and who are now sinking in the Dhartarashtra ocean, may safely reach the shore !56 night, Rākshasas again become endued with unlimited prowess, They become (at such an great might, and great courage! hour) warriors of great valour and incapable of defeat!57 Slay Karna in battle, at this dead of night, aided by thy illusions! The Parthas, with Dhrishtadyumna, will dispose of Drona !58-'

^{*} In the Bengal texts this is a triplet .- T.

"Sanjaya continued,—'Hearing those words of Keçava, Vibhatsu also, O Kauravya, said these words unto that chastiser of foes, viz., the Rākshasa Ghatotkacha⁵⁹:—O Ghatotkacha, thyself, the long-armed Sātyaki, and Bhimasena the son of Pāndu, these three, in my judgment, are the foremost ones among all our warriors! Go and encounter Karna in single combat this night. The mighty car-warrior Sātyaki will protect thy rear! Assisted by the Sātwata hero, slay the brave Karna in battle, as Indra in days of old had slain (the Asura) Tāraka, aided by (the celestial generalissimo) Skanda!

"'Ghatotkacha said,—I am a match for Karna, as also for Drona, O Bhārata, or for any illustrious Kshatriya accomplished in weapons! "This night I shall fight such a battle with the Suta's son as will form the subject of talk as long as the world lasts! "Tonight I will spare neither the brave nor the timid nor those that will with joined hands pray for quarter! Following the Rākshasa usage, I shall slay all! ""

"Sanjaya continued,—'Having said these words, that slayer of hostile heroes, viz., the son of Hidimvā, rushed against Karna in that dreadful fight, frightening thy troops. The Suta's son, that tiger among men, smilingly received that angry warrior of blazing mouth and blazing locks. The battle then that took place between Karna and that Rākshasa, both roaring against each other, O tiger among kings, resembled that between Indra and Prahlada (in days of yore)." 68

SECTION CLXXV.

"Sanjaya said,—'Beholding the mighty-armed Ghatotkachs. O king, proceeding towards the car of the Suta's son, Karna. for slaughtering him in battle, thy son Duryodhana, addressing Dusçasana, said these words:-That Rakshasa, seeing the prowess of Karna in battle, is speedily' advancing against Resist that mighty car-warrior! Surrounded by a mighty force proceed to that spot where the mighty's Karna. the son of Vikartana is contending with the Rākshasa in battle! O giver of honors, surrounded by troops and exerting thyself vigorously, protect Karna in battle! Let not the terrible Rākshasa slay Karna in consequence of our carelessness!-Meanwhile, O king, Jatāsura's mighty son, that foremost of smiters, approaching Duryodhana, said unto him,— O Duryodhana, commanded by thee, I desire to slay, with their followers, thy foes of celebrity, viz., the Pandavas, those warriors incapable of being easily defeated in battle! My father was the mighty Jatasura, that foremost of Rakshasas! Formerly, 6-7 having performed some Rākshasa-slaying incantations, the despicable sons of Pritha siew him! I desire to worship my dead sire by offering him the blood of his foes, and their flesh also, O monarch! It behoveth thee to grant me permission !- The king, thus addressed, became exceedingly delighted, and said unto him repeatedly,9-Aided by Drona and Karna and others I am quite competent to vanquish my Commanded, however, by me, O Rākshasa, go thou to battle and slay Ghatotkacha in the fight, that Rakshasa of fierce deeds, born of man, ever devoted to the welfare of the Pāndavas, and always slaying our elephants and steeds and car-warriors,10-11 in battle, himself all the while staying in the welkin! O, despatch him to Yama's abode!-Saying-So be it,—and summoning Ghatotkacha to the fight, 12 Jatasura's son shrouded the son of Bhimasena with diverse kinds of weapons. The son of Hidimva, however,

http://www.hathitrust.org/access_use#pd-google

unsupported, began to grind Alamvusha and Karna and the wast Kuru host, like a tempest crushing a mass of clouds. Seeing then the power of (Ghatotkacha's) illusion, the Rākshasa Alamvusha18-14 covered Ghatotkacha with showers of diverse kinds of arrows. Having pierced Bhimasena's son with many Alamvusha,15 without losing any time, began Thus afflicted by a flict the Pandava host with his arrows. him, O Bharata, the Pandava troops,10 at dead of night, broke and fled away like clouds dispersed by a tempest. thy host also, mangled with the shafts of Ghatotkacha,17 fled away at dead of night, O king, in thousands, throwing down their torches. Alamvusha then, excited with great wrath, struck Bhimasena's son in that dreadful battle with many shafts, like a guide striking an elephant. Then Ghatotkacha the driver, and all cut off into minute fragments the car, the weapons of his foe, and laughed frightfully. the clouds pouring torrents of rain on the mountains of Meru, Ghatotkacha poured showers of arrows on Karna, Alamvusha, and all the Kurus. Afflicted by the Rākshasa, the Kuru host became exceedingly agitated.18-21 The four kinds of forces, of which thy army consisted, began to press and crush one an-Then Jatāsura's son, carless and driverless,22 wrathfully struck Ghatotkacha, in that battle, with his fists. Thus struck. Ghatotkacha trembled23 like a mountain with its trees and creepers and grass at the time of an earthquake. Bhimasena's son, mad with rage, raising his own foe-slaving arm that resembled a spiked mace, dealt a severe blow on Jatāsura's son. Crushing him then in rage, Hidimvā's son quickly threw him down,24-25 and seizing him with his two arms he began to press him with great force upon the Earth. Jatāsura's son, freeing himself from Ghatotkacha,36 rose up and assailed Ghatotkacha with great Alamvusha also, dragging and throwing down the Rākshasa Ghatotkacha, in that battle, began to crush him in rage on the The battle then that took place between surface of the Earth. those two roaring and gigantic warriors, viz., Ghatotkacha and Alamvusha, became exceedingly fierce and made the hair stand on end. Endeavouring to prevail over each other by means of their powers of illusion, those proud warriors,27-29 endued with great energy, fought with each other like Indra and Virochana's son. Becoming fire and the ocean, and once more Garuda and Takshaka, so and once again a cloud and a tempest, and then thunder and a large mountain, and once again an elephant and a tiger, and then Rahu and the Sun, 31 they thus displayed a hundred differents kinds of illusion, solicitous of destroying each other. Indeed, Alamvusha and Ghatotkacha fought most wonderfully, 22 striking each other with spiked clubs and maces and lances and mallets and axes and short clubs and mountain-cliffs. 88 Riding on horseback or on elephants, on foot or on car, those foremost of Rākshasas, both endued with large powers of illusion, fought with each other in battle.34 Then Ghatotkacha, O king, desiring to slay Alamvusha, soared aloft in rage and then alighted with great quickness like a hawk. 55 Seizing then that gigantic prince of Rīkshasas, viz., Alamvusha, who thus struggled with him, he pressed him down on the Earth like Vishnu slaying (the Asura) Maya in battle.86 Taking a scimitar of wonderful appearance, Ghatotkacha of immeasurable prowess then cut off from his trunk, O king, his fierce and mighty foe's terrible head that was still uttering awful roars. 57-38 blood-dyed head by the hair, Ghatotkacha quickly proceeded towards Duryodhana's car. 49 Approaching (the Kuru king), the mighty-armed Rikshasa, smiling the while, threw upon Duryodhana's car that head with frightful face and hair.40 Uttering then a fierce roar, deep as that of the clouds in the season of rains, he addressed Duryodhana, O king, and said,41 -This thy ally is now slain,-he, that is, whose prowess thou hadst beheld! Thou shalt see the slaughter of Karna again, and then thy own !42 One that is observant of these three. viz., morality, profit and pleasure, should never see with empty hands a king, a Brāhmana, or a woman !*48 Live cheerfully till that time when I slay Karna !- Having said these words, he then, O king, proceeded towards Karna,44 shooting hundreds of keen arrows upon the head of Karna. The battle then that took place between that human warrior and that Rākshdsa, was fierce and terrible, O king, and exceedingly wonderful."

^{*} It is for this that I see thee with this head as a tribute.-T.

SECTION CLXXVI.

"Dhritarāshtra said,—'How, indeed, did that battle take place when at dead of night Vikartana's son Karna and the Rākshasa Ghatotkacha encountered each other?' What aspect did that fierce Rākshasa then present? What kind of car did he ride, and what was the nature of his steeds and what of his weapons?" What was the size of his steeds, of the standard of his car, and of his bow? What was the kind of armour he wore, and what the head-gear he had on? Asked by me, describe all this, for thou art skilled in narration, O Sanjaya!'

"Sanjaya said,—'Of blood-red eyes, Ghatotkacha was of gigantic form. His face was of the hue of copper. His belly was low and sunk. The bristles on his body all pointed upwards. His head was green. His ears were like arrows. His cheekbones were high. His mouth was large, extending from ear His teeth were keen, and four of these were high and His tongue and lips were very long and of a coppery His brows were long-extending. His nose was thick. His body was blue, and neck red. Tall as a hill, he was terrible to behold. Of gigantic frame, gigantic arms, and gigantic head, he was endued with great might.6 Ugly and of hard limbs, the hair on his head was tied upwards in a frightful shape. His hips were large and his navel was deep. Of gigantic frame, the circumference of his body, however, was not great." The ornaments on his arms were proportion-Possessed of large powers of illusion, he was decked also in Angadas. He wore a cuirass on his breast like a circle of fire on the breast of a mountain.8 On his head was a bright and beautiful diadem made of gold, with every part proportionate and beautiful, and looking like an arch.9 His ear-rings were bright as the morning Sun, and his garlands were made of gold and exceedingly bright. He had on his body a gigantic armour of brass of great effulgence.10 His car was decked with a hundred tinkling bells, and on his standard waved numerous blood-red banners. Of prodigious proportions, and of the measure of a nalwa, that car was covered with bear-skins.11 Equipt with all kinds of mighty weapons, it possessed a tall standard and was adorned with garlands having eight wheels, and its clatter resembled the roar of the clouds.12 His steeds were like infuriate elephants, and possessed of red eyes; of terrible aspect, they were variegated in hue, and endued with great speed and might.13 Above all fatigue, and adorned with long manes, and neighing repeatedly, they bore that hero to battle.14 · A Rākshasa of terrible eyes, fiery mouth, and blazing ear-rings, acted as his driver, holding the reins, bright as the rays of the sun, of his steeds in battle.15 With that driver he came to battle like Surya with his driver Aruna. Looking like a high mountain encircled with a mighty cloud,16 a very tall standard, touching the heavens, was set up on his car. carnivorous and awful vulture of blood-red body perched on it.17 He came, forcibly drawing his bow whose twang resembled the thunder of Indra, and whose string was very hard, and which measured a dozen cubits in length and one cubit in Filling all the points of the compass with shafts of the measure of the Aksha of a car, the Rākshasa rushed against Karna on that night that was so destructive of heroes." Staying proudly on his car, as he stretched his bow, the twang that was heard resembled the sound of the roaring thunder.20 Frightened by him, O Bhārata, all thy troops trembled like the surging waves of the ocean.21 Beholding that frightful Rākshasa of horrible eyes advancing against him, Rādhā's son, as if smiling, withstood him speedily.22 And Karna proceeded against the smiting Rākshasa, smiting him in return from a near point, like an elephant against an elephant or the leader of a bovine herd against the leader of another herd.28 The collision that took place between them, i. e, Karna and the Rakshasa, O king, became terrible and resembled that between Indra and Camvara.24 Each taking a formidable bow of loud twang struck and covered the other with powerful shafts.25 With straight shafts sped from bows drawn to their fullest stretch, they mangled each other, piercing their coats of mail made of brass.26 With darts of the measure of Akshas, and shafts also, they continued to mangle each other, like a couple of tigers or of mighty elephants with their teeth or tusks.27 Piercing each other's body, aiming shafts at each other, scorching each other with clouds of arrows, they became incapable of being gazed at.28 With limbs pierced and mangled with shafts, and bathed in streams of blood, they looked like two hills of red chalk with rivulets running adown their breasts.29 two mighty car-warriors, both struggling vigorously, both with limbs pierced with keen-pointed shafts, and each mangling the other, failed, however, to make each other tremble.30 long time that nocturnal combat between Karna and the Rākshasa, in which both seemed to sport, making life itself the stake, continued equally.81 Aiming keen shafts and shooting them to the utmost measure of his might, the twang of Ghatotkacha's bow inspired both friends and foes with fear.*30 At that time, O king, Karna could not prevail over Ghatot-Seeing this, that foremost of all persons acquainted with weapons, invoked into existence celestial weapons. Beholding a celestial weapon aimed at him by Karna, Ghatotkacha, that foremost of Rakshasas, invoked into existence his Rākshasa illusion.34 He was seen surrounded by a large force of terrible-looking Rakshasas armed with lances and large rocks and hills and clubs.+85 Beholding Ghatotkacha advancing with a mighty weapon uplifted (in his hands) like unto the Destroyer himself of all creatures armed with his fierce and fatal club, all the kings there were struck with fear.86 at the leonine roars uttered by Ghatotkacha, the elephants passed urine and all the combatants trembled with fear.37 Then there fell on all sides a thick rain of rocks and stones poured incessantly by the Rākshasas, who had, in consequence of midnight, become inspired with greater strength.*58 wheels and Bhucundis, and darts and lances and spears and Cutaghnis and axes also began to fall incessantly.39 that fierce and terrible battle, all the kings, as also thy sons and the other combatants, fled away in fear.40 Only one amongst them, viz., Karna, proud of the power of his weapons, and feeling a noble pride, trembled not. Indeed, with his shafts he destroyed that illusion invoked into existence by Ghatotkacha.41 Beholding his illusion dispelled, Ghatotkacha, filled with rage, began to shoot deadly shafts from desire of slaving the Suta's son.43 Those shafts, bathed in blood, piercing through Karna's body in that dreadful battle, entered the Earth like angry snakes.43 Then the valiant son of the Suta, filled with rage and possessed of great lightness of hands, prevailing over Ghatotkacha, pierced the latter with ten shafts.44 Ghatotkacha, thus pierced by the Suta's son in his vital parts and feeling great pain, took up a celestial wheel having a thousand radii.45 The edge of that wheel was sharp as a razor. Possessed of the splendour of the morning Sun, and decked with jewels and gems, Bhimsena's son hurled that wheel at the son of Adhiratha, desirous of making an end of the latter. That wheel, however, of great power and hurled also with great might, was cut off into pieces by Karna with his shafts, and fell down, baffled of its object, like the hopes and purposes of an unfortunate man.47 Filled with rage upon beholding his wheel baffled, Ghatotkacha covered Karna with showers of shafts like Rahu covering the Sun.48 The Suta's son, however, endued with the prowess of Rudra or of Indra's younger brother or of Indra, fearlessly shrouded Ghatotkacha's car in a moment with winged arrows.49 Then Ghatotkacha, whirling a gold-decked mace, hurled it at Karna. Karna, however, with his shafts, cutting it off, caused it to fall down. 50 Then soaring into the sky and roaring deep like a mass of clouds, the gigantic Rākshasa poured from the welkin a perfect shower of trees.51 Then Karna pierced with his shafts Bhima-

^{*} An aratni is a cubit measuring from the elbow to the end of the little finger.—T.

^{*} Both readings, viz., dsaktam and açaktam are correct. The former means 'engaged'; the latter, 'to the measure of his might'.—T.

[†] The second line of 35 is read differently in the Bombay edition .- T.

Rukshasas at certain hours were believed to be inspired with greater strength .- T.

sena's son in the sky, that Rākshasa acquainted with illusions, like the Sun piercing with his rays a mass of clouds.52 Slaying then all the steeds of Ghatotkacha, and cutting also his car into a hundred pieces, Karna began to pour upon him his arrows like a cloud pouring torrents of rain.53 Ghatotkacha's body there was not even two fingers' breadth of space that was not pierced with Karna's shafts. Rākshasa seemed to be like a porcupine with quills erect on his body.54 So completely was he shrouded with shafts that we could not, in that battle, any longer see either the steeds or the car or the standard of Ghatotkacha or Ghatotkacha himself.55 troying then by his own weapon the celestial weapon of Karna, Ghatotkacha, endued with the power of illusion, began to fight with the Suta's son, aided by his powers of illusion. 66 he began to fight with Karna, aided by his illusion and displaying the greatest activity. Showers of shafts fell from an invisible source from the welkin. 57 Then Bhimasena's son endued with great powers of illusion, O foremost of the Kurus, assumed a fierce form, aided by those powers, and began to stupify the Kauravas, O Bhārata! 88 The valiant Rākshasa, assuming many fierce and grim heads, began to devour the celestial weapons of the Suta's son. 59 Soon again, the gigantic Rākshasa, with a hundred wounds on his body seemed to lie cheerlessly and as if dead, on the field.60 The Kaurava bulls then, regarding Ghatotkacha dead, uttered loud shouts (of joy). Soon, however, he was seen on all sides, careering in new forms.61 he was seen to assume a prodigious form, with a hundred heads and a hundred stomachs, and looking like the Mainaka moun-Once again, becoming small about the measure of the thumb, he moved about transversely or soared aloft like the swelling surges of the sea.68 Tearing through the Earth and rising on the surface, he dived again into the waters. Once seen here he was next seen at a different place. 64 Descending then from the welkin, he was seen standing, clad in mail, on a car decked with gold, having wandered through Earth and sky and all the points of the compass, aided by his powers of illusion. 65

^{*} Mainaka, the son of Himavat, has a hundred heads.-T.

Approaching then the vicinity of Karna's car, Ghatotkacha, with his ear-rings waving, fearlessly addressed the Suta's son, O monarch, and said,66—Wait a little, O Suta's son? shalt thou go with life, avoiding me! I shall today, on the field of battle, quell thy desire of fight !67—Having said those words, that Rākshasa of cruel prowess and eyes red like copper in wrath, soared aloft into the sky and laughed aloud.68 Like a lion smiting a prince of elephants, he began to strike Karna, pouring upon him a shower of shafts, each of the measure of the Aksha of a car.69 Indeed, he poured that arrowy shower upon Karna, that bull among car-warriors, like a cloud pouring torrents of rain on a mountain. Karna destroyed that shower of arrows from a distance. To Beholding his illusion destroyed by Karna, O bull of Bharata's race, Ghatotkacha once more created an illusion and made himself invisible.71 He became a high mountain with many summits and abounding with tall And from that mountain incessantly issued streams of lances and spears and swords and clubs.72 Seeing that mountain, which resembled a mighty mass of antimony, with its streams of fierce weapons, on the welkin, Karna was not at all agitated.78 Smiling the while, Karna invoked into existence a celestial weapon. Cut off with that weapon, that huge mountain was destroyed.74 Then the fierce Ghatotkacha, becoming a blue cloud with a rainbow, in the welkin, began to pour upon the Suta's son a shower of stones.75 Vikartana's son Karna, who was called also Vrisha, that foremost of all persons acquainted with weapons, aiming a Vāyavya weapon, destroyed that dark cloud. 76 Then covering all the points of the compass with innumerable shafts, he destroyed a weapon that had been aimed at him by Ghatotkacha.77 The mighty son of Bhimasena then, laughing aloud in that battle, once more invoked into existence an all-powerful illusion against the mighty car-warrior Once more beholding that foremost of warriors, viz., Ghatotkacha, fearlessly approaching him surrounded by a large number of Rākshasas79 that resembled lions and tigers and infuriate elephants in prowess, some riding on elephants, some on cars, and some on horse-back, 80 all armed with diverse weapons and clad in diverse kinds of mail and diverse kinds of ornaments, in fact, beholding Ghatotkacha surrounded by those fierce Rākshasas like Vasava by the Maruts, 31 the mighty bowman Karna began to battle with him fiercely. Then Ghatotkacha, piercing Karna with five shafts,82 uttered a terrible roar, frightening all the kings. Once more shooting an Anjalika weapon, Ghatotkacha quickly cut off the bow in Karna's hand along with the arrowy shower the latter had shot. then, taking out another bow that was strong and capable of bearing a great strain and that was as large as Indra's bow, drewit with great force. Then Karna sped some foe-slaying shafts of golden wings at those sky-ranging Rakshasas. Afflicted with those shafts, that large force of broad-chested Rākshasas88-86 looked agitated like a herd of wild elephants Destroying with his shafts those Rākshafflicted by a lion. asas along with their steeds and drivers and elephants, 37 the puissant Karna looked like the divine Agni consuming all creatures at the time of the universal dissolution. Having destroyed that Rākshasa host, the Suta's son 88 looked resplendent like the god Mahecwara in heaven after having consumed the tripple city (of the Asuras). Among those thousands of kings on the Pandava side, O sire, 89 there was not a single one, O monarch, that could even look at Karna then, save the mighty Ghatotkacha, that prince of Rakshasas, who was endued with terrible energy and strength, and who, inflamed with rage, then looked like Yama himself. From his eyes, excited as he then was with wrath, flames of fire seemed to emanate, like blazing drops of oil from a couple of burning brands. 90-91 Striking his palm against palm and biting his nether lip, 50 the Rākshasa was once more seen on a car that had been created by his illusion, and unto which were yoked a number of asses looking like elephants and having the faces of Piçāchas. 98 Excited with wrath, he addressed his driver, saying,—Bear me towards the Suta's son!-Then that foremost of car-warriors proceeded on that terrible-looking car of his,"4 for once more fighting a single combat with the Suta's son, O king! The Rākshasa, excited with rage, hurled at the Suta's son s an Açani of Rudra's workmanship, terrible and furnished with eight wheels. Karna, placing his bow on his car, jumped down on the Earth and seizing that Acani " hurled it back at Ghatotkacha. The latter, however, had quickly descended from his car (before the weapon could reach it). The Acani, meanwhile, of great effulgence, having reduced the Rākshasa's car to ashes, with its steeds, driver, and standard, 97 piercing through the Earth, disappeared within its bowels, at which the gods were all filled with wonder. Then all creatures applauded Karna, 38 who, having jumped down from his car, had seized that Acani. Having achieved that feat, Karna once more ascended his car. 99 The Suta's son, that scorcher of foes, then began to shoot his shafts. O giver of honors, there is none else amongst all living creatures who can accomplish what Karna accomplished in that frightful battle. Struck by Karna with shafts like a mountain with torrents of rain,100-101 Ghatotkacha once more disappeared from the view like the melting forms of vapour in the sky. Contending in this way, the gigantic Rākshasa, that slayer of foes, destroyed the celestial weapons of Karna by means of his activity as also his power of illusion. Seeing his weapons destroyed by the Rākshasa aided by his powers of illusion, 102-3 Karna, without being inspired with fear, continued to fight with the cannibal. Then, O monarch, the mighty son of Bhimasena, excited with wrath,104 divided his own self into many parts, frightening all the mighty car-warriors (of the Kuru army). Then there came on the field of battle lions, and tigers, and hyenas,105 and snakes with fiery tongues, and birds with iron As regards Ghatotkacha himself, struck with the keen arrows that were sped from Karna's bow,106 that huge Rākshasa, looking like (Himvata) the prince of mountains, disappeared there and then. Then many Rakshasas and Piçachas and Yātudhānas,107 and large number of wolves and leopards, of fightful faces, rushed towards Karna for devouring him. 108 These approached the Suta's son, uttering fierce howls for frightening him. Karna pierced every one of those monsters with many swift-winged and terrible shafts that drank their blood. At last, using a celestial weapon he destroyed that illusion of the Rākshasa.109-10 He then, with some straight and fierce These, with broken shafts, struck the steeds of Ghatotkacha. and maimed limbs, and their backs cut by those shafts,111 fell

Generated on 2022-02-03 13:01 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google down on the Earth, in the very sight of Ghatotkacha. The son of Hidimvā, seeing his illusion dispelled, once more made himself invisible, saying unto Karna the son of Vikartana,—I will presently compass thy destruction!—'"113

SECTION CLXXVII.

"Sanjaya said,—'During the progress of that battle between Karna and the Rākshasa, the valiant Alayudha, that prince of Rākshasas, appeared (on the field). Accompanied by a large force, he approached Duryodhana. Indeed, surrounded by many thousands of frightful Rakshasas of diverse forms and endued with great heroism, he appeared (on the field), recollecting his old quarrel (with the Pandavas). His kinsman, the valiant Vaka, who ate Brāhmanas, as also Kirmira of great energy, and his friend Hidimva, had been slain (by Bhima). He had waited for a long time, brooding over his old quarrel.8-4 now that a nocturnal battle was raging, he came, impelled by the desire of slaying Bhima in fight, like an infuriate elephant or an angry snake.5 Desirous of battle, he addressed Duryodhana and said,—It is known to thee, O monarch, how my kinsmen, the Rākshasas Vaka and Kirmira and Hidimva, have been slain by Bhima. What shall I say more, the virgin Hidimva was formerly deflowered by him,6-7 disregarding us and the other Rakshasas! I am here, O king, to slay that Bhima with all his followers, steeds, cars, and elephants, as also that son of Hidimvā with his friends! Slaying today all the sons of Kunti, with Vasudeva and others that walk before them, I will devour them with all their followers! Command all thy troops to desist from battle. We will fight with the Pandavas!__8-10

"'Hearing these words of his, Duryodhana became very glad. Surrounded by his brothers, the king, accepting the words of the Rākshasa, said,"—Placing thee with thine in the van, we will fight with the foe! My troops will not stand as indifferent spectators since their enmity has not cooled!"—

That bull amongst Rākshasas, saying—Let it be so—unto the king, speedily proceeded against Bhima, accompanied by his cannibal force. Endued with a blazing form, Alāyudha rode

73

Generated on 2022-02-03 13:01 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

a car possessed of the effulgence of the Sun. monarch, that car of his was similar to Ghatotkacha's car.14 The rattle also of Alayudha's car was as deep as that of Ghatotkacha's, and it was decked with many arches. large car was covered with bear-skins, and its measure was a His steeds, like those of Ghatotkacha, were endued with great speed, resembled elephants in shape, and had the voice of asses. Subsisting on flesh and blood, and gigantic in size, a hundred of them were yoked unto his vehicle.16 the rattle of his car, like that of Ghatotkacha's was deep as the roar of a large cloud. His bow too, like that of his rival, was large and strong, and its string was as hard.17 also, winged with gold and whetted on stone, were as large as Ghatotkacha's, being of the measure of Akshas. The heroic Alayudha was as mighty-armed as Ghatotkacha,18 and the standard of his car, endued with the splendour of the Sun or fire, was, like Ghatotkacha's, perched upon by vultures and ravens. In form he was more handsome than Ghatotkacha, and his face, agitated (with wrath), looked blazing.19 With blazing Angadas and blazing diadem and garlands, decked with floral wreaths and head-gear and sword, armed with mace and Bhucundis and short clubs and ploughs and bow and arrows, and with skin black and hard as that of the elephant," riding on that car possessed of the splendour of fire, he looked, while employed in afflicting and routing the Pandava host, like a roving cloud in the welkin, decked with flashes of lightning. 91 (As Alayudha came to battle), the principal kings of the Pandava army, endued with great might, and armed with (sword and) shield, and clad in mail, engaged in fight, O king, with joyous hearts." "22

SECTION CLXXVIII.

"Sanjaya said,—'Beholding Alayudha of terrible deeds come to battle, all the Kauravas became filled with delight.1 larly thy sons having Duryodhana for their head, (were filled with delight) like raftless men desirous of crossing the ocean when thy meet with a raft.2 Indeed, the kings in the army then regarded themselves as persons reborn after death.* They all offered a respectful welcome to Alayudha. ing the progress of that terrible and superhuman battle between Karna and the Rakshasa at night,—a battle which though fierce was yet delightful to behold. - the Panchalas with all the other Kshatriyas smilingly looked on as spectators. Meanwhile, thy soldiers, O king, though protected (by their leaders) all over the field, and Drona and Drona, son and Kripa and others, uttered loud wails, saying,-All is lost! -Indeed, beholding those feats of Hidimva's son on the field of battle,6 all thy warriors were agitated with fear, and uttering cries of woe became almost deprived of their senses. troops, O king, all became hopeless of Karna's life." Duryodhana, beholding Karna fallen into great distress, summoned Alayudha and said unto him: "-Yonder Vikartana's son Karna is engaged with the son of Hidimva, and is accomplishing such feats in battle as are worthy of his might and prowess! Behold those brave kings slain by the son of Bhimasena, struck with diverse kinds of weapons (and lying on the field) like trees broken by an elephant!10 Amongst all my royal warriors, let this be thy share in this battle, allotted by me, with thy permission, O hero! Displaying thy prowess, slay thou this Rakshasa!" O crusher of foes, see that this wretch, viz., Ghatotkacha, may not, relying on his powers of illusion, slay Karna the son of Vikartana before thou finishest him!12-Thus addressed by the king, that Rakshasa of fierce prowess and mighty arms, saying, -So be it-rushed against Ghatotkacha.13 Then Bhimasena's son, O lord, abandoning Karna, began to grind his advancing foe with his arrows.14 then that took place between those angry Rākshasa princes, resembled that between two infuriate elephants in the forest fighting for the sake of the same she-elephant in her scason.15 Freed then from the Rākshasa, Karna, that foremost of carwarriors, rushed against Bhimasena, riding on his car of solar effulgence.16 Beholding Ghatotkacha engaged with Alayudha in battle and afflicted like the leader of a bovine herd when ^{*} I. e, they thought they obtained a new lease of life.-T.

engaged with a lion, Bhima, that foremost of smiters, disregarding the advancing Karna, rushed towards Alayudha, rid ing on his car of solar effulgence, and scattering clouds of Seeing Bhima advance, Alayudha, O lord, abanshafts. 17-13 doning Ghatotkacha, proceeded against Bhima himself.19 Then Bhima, that exterminater of Rakshasas, impetuously rushed towards him, O lord, and covered that prince of Rakshasas with Similarly Alayudha, that chastiser of foes, repeatedly covered the son of Kunti with straight shafts whetted on All the other Rākshasas also, of terrible forms and armed with diverse weapons, solicitous of the victory of thy sons, rushed against Bhimasena.22 The mighty Bhimasena, thus assailed by them, pierced each of them with five whetted Then those Rakshasas of wicked understanding, thus received by Bhimasena, uttered loud wails and fled away on all The mighty Rākshasa, beholding his followers frightened by Bhima, rushed impetuously against Bhima and covered him with shafts.25 Then Bhimasena, in that battle, weakened his fee by means of many keen-pointed arrows. Amongst those arrows sped at him by Bhima, Alayudha speedily cut off some and seized others in that battle. Then Bhima of terrible prowess, looking steadily at that prince of Rakshasas, 26-27 hurled at him with great force a mace endued with the impetu-That mace, coursing towards him like osity of the thunder. a flame of fire,28 the cannibal struck with a mace of his own. whereupon the latter (baffling the former) proceeded towards Then the son of Kunti covered that prince of Rākshasas with showers of shafts.29 The Rākshasa, with his own keen shafts, baffled all those shafts of Bhima. Then all those Rākshasa warriors, of terrible forms, (rallying and returning to battle), so at the command of their leader, began to slay the elephants (of Bhima's force). The Panchalas and the Srinjayas, the steeds and huge elephants (of Bhima's army), 31 exceedingly afflicted by the Rākshasas, became much agitated. Beholding that terrible battle,32 (fought between Bhima and the Rakshasas) Vāsudeva that foremost of men, addressing Dhananjaya, said these words: -Behold, the mighty-armed Bhima is succumbing to that prince of Rakshasas! Quickly proceed in Bhima's wake, without thinking of anything else, O son of Pāndu! Meanwhile, let Dhrishtadyumna and Cikhandin, and Yudhāmanyu and Uttamaujas, 84 these mighty car-warriors, uniting with the sons of Draupadi, proceed against Karna! Let Nakula and Sahadeva and the valiant Yuyudhāna, 35 O son of Pāndu, at thy command, slay the other Rākshasas! As regards thyself, O mighty-armed one, do thou resist this division having Drona at its head! O thou of mighty arms, great is the danger that threatens us now !- After Krishna had said so, those foremost of car-warriors, as commanded, 86-87 proceeded against Karna the son of Vikartana, and against the other Rākshasas (fighting for the Kurus). Then with some shafts resembling snakes of virulent poison and sped from his bow drawn to its fullest stretch, 88 the valiant prince of Rakshasas cut off Bhima's bow. The mighty cannibal next, in the very sight of Bhima, O Bharata, slew the latter's steeds and driver with some whetted shafts. Steedless and driverless, Bhima, descending from the terrace of his car, $9-40 uttered a loud roar and hurled a heavy mace at his foe. That heavy mace, as it coursed impetuously towards him with a terrible sound,41 the mighty cannibal baffled with a mace of his own. The latter then uttered a loud roar. Beholding that mighty and terrible feat of that prince of Rākshasas, 42 Bimasena, filled with joy, seized another fierce mace. The battle then that took place between that human warrior and that Rākshasa, became dreadful.48 With the clash of their descending maces, the Earth trembled violently. Casting aside their maces, they once more encountered each other.44 They struck each other with their clenched fists falling with the sound of thunder. rage, they encountered each other with car-wheels, and yokes, and Akshas and Adhishthānas, and Upaskaras, in fact, with anything that came in their way. Encountering each other thus and both covered with blood, they looked like a couple of infuriate elephants of gigantic size. Then Hrishikeça, ever devoted to the good of the Pandavas, beholding that combat, despatched Hidimva's son for protecting Bhimasena." "46-47

SECTION CLXXIX.

"Sanjnya said,-'Seeing Bhima in that battle assailed by the cannibal, Vāsudeva, approaching Ghatotkacha, said unto him these words: -Behold, O mighty-armed one, Bhima is powerfully assailed by the Rākshasas in battle, in the very sight of all the troops and of thyself, O thou of great splendour! Abandoning Karna for the present, quickly slay Alayudha, O mighty-armed one! Thou canst afterwards slay Karna!3-Hearing these words of him of Vrishni's race, the valiant Ghatotkacha, abandoning Karna, encountered Alayudha, that prince of cannibals and brother of Vaka. The battle then that took place at night between those two cannibals, viz., Alayudha and son of Hidimva, became fierce and dreadful, O Bharata. Meanwhile the mighty car-warrior Yuyudhana, and Nakula, Sahadeva, pierced with keen shafts the warriors of Alayudha, viz., those terrible-looking and heroic Rākshasas, who, armed with bows, were rushing impetuously at them. 6-7 The diademdecked Vibhatsu, O king, in that battle, shooting his arrows on all sides, began to overthrow many foremost of Kshatriyas. Meanwhile Karna, O king, in that battle, agitated many kings and many mighty car-warriors amongst the Panchalas headed by Dhrishtadyumna and Cikhandin and others.9 them slaughtered (by Karna), Bhima of terrible prowess rushed speedily towards Karna, shooting his shafts in that battle.10 Then those warriors also, viz., Nakula and Sahadeva and the mighty car-warrior Sātyaki, having slain the Rākshasas, proceeded to that place where the Suta's son was.11 All of them then began to fight with Karna, while the Panchalas encountered Drona. Then Alayudha, excited with rage, struck Ghatotkacha, that chastiser of foes, on the head, with a gigan-With the stroke of that Parigha, the mighty son of Bhimasena,12-18 endued with great prowess, seemed to be in a state of partial-swoon and sat down motionless. consciousness, the latter then, in that encounter, hurled at his foe a gold-decked mace adorned with a hundred bells and looking like a blazing fire. Hurled forcibly by that achiever of fierce feats, that mace crushed into pieces the steeds, the driver, and the loudly rattling car of Alayudha. Having recourse to illusion, the latter then jumped down from that car of his, whose steeds and wheels and Akshas and standard and Kuvara had all Relying on his illusion, he poured been crushed into pieces. a copious shower of blood.14-17 The sky then seemed to be overspread with a mass of black clouds adorned with flashes of lightning. A thunder-storm was then heard, accompanied with loud reports and loud roars of clouds.18 Loud sounds also of chat, chat, were heard in that dreadful battle. Beholding that illusion created by the Rākshasa Alāyudha, the Rākshasa Ghatotkacha,19 soaring sloft, destroyed it by means of his own illusion. Endued with powers of illusion, Alayudha, beholding his own illusion destroyed by that of his foe,20 began to pour a heavy shower of stones on Ghatotkacha. That terrible shower of stones, the valiant Ghatotkacha dispelled by means of a shower of arrows. They then rained on each other diverse weapons21-22 such as iron Parighas and spears and maces and short clubs and mallets, and Pinākas and swords and lances and long spears and Kampanas,23 and keen shafts both long and broad-headed, and arrows and disci and battleaxes, and Ayagudas and short arrows, and weapons with heads like those of kine, and Ulukhalas.24 And they struck each other, tearing up many kinds of large-branched trees such as Cami and Pilu and Karira and Champaka, O Bharata, and Ingudi and Vadari and flowering Kovidāra and Palkça and Arimeda and Plaksha and banian and peepul, and also with diverse mountain-summits decked with diverse kinds of metals.25-27 The clash of those trees and mountain-summits became very loud like the roar of riving thunder. Indeed, the battle that took place between Bhima's son and Alayudha was, O king, dreadful in the extreme, 28 like that in days of old, O monarch, between Vali and Sugriva, those two princes They struck each other with shafts and among monkeys. diverse other kinds of fierce weapons, as also with sharp scimi-Then the mighty Rakshasas, rushing against each other, seized each other by the hair.25-30 And, O king, those two gigantic warriors, with many wounds on their bodies and blood and sweat trickling adown, looked like two mighty masses of clouds Then rushing with speed and whirling the pouring rain.81 Rākshasa on high and dashing him down, Hidimvā's son cut off his large head.32 Then taking that head decked with a pair of ear-rings, the mighty Ghatotkacha uttered a loud roar.33 Beholding the gigantic brother of Vaka, that chastiser of foes, thus slain, the Panchalas and the Pandavas began to utter leonine shouts. 4 Then, upon the fall of the Rākshasa, the Pandavas beat and blew thousands of drums and ten thousands of conchs.85 That night then clearly indicated the victory of the Pandavas. Illumined with torches all around, and resounding with the noise of musical instruments, the night looked exceedingly resplendent.36 The mighty son of Bhimasena threw down the head of the slain Alayudha before Duryo-Duryodhana, beholding the heroic Alayudha slain, became, O Bharata, filled with anxiety, with all his troops. 58 Alayudha, having come to Duryodhana of his own accord remembering his former quarrel, had said unto him that he would slay Bhima in battle. 39 The Kuru king had regarded Bhima's slaughter to be certain, and had believed that his brothers would all be long-lived. Beholding that Alayudha slain by Bhimasena's son, the king regarded Bhima's vow (about the slaughter of himself and his brothers)already fulfilled."44

SECTION CLXXX.

"Sanjaya said,—'Having slain Alāyudha, the Rākshasa Ghatotkacha became filled with delight. Standing at the head of the army he began to utter diverse kinds of shouts." Hearing those loud roars of his that made elephants tremble, a great fear, O monarch, entered into the hearts of thy warriors. Beholding the mighty son of Bhimasena engaged with Alāyudha, the mighty-armed Karna rushed against the Pānchālas. He pierced Dhrishtadyumna and Cikhandin, each with ten strong and straight shafts sped from his bow drawn to its fullest stretch. With a number of other powerful shafts, the Suta's son then made Yudhāmanyu and Uttamaujas, and the great car-warrior Sātyaki, to tremble.5 The bows of those warriors also, O king, while they were engaged in striking Karna from all sides, were seen to be drawn into circles.6 that night, the twang of their bowstrings and the rattle of their car-wheels, (mingling together) became loud and deep as the roar of the clouds at the close of summer.7 That nocturnal battle, O monarch, resembled a gathering mass of clouds. The twang of bowstrings and the rattle of car-wheels constitu-The bows (of warriors) constituted its lightning flashes; and showers of shafts formed its downpour of rain. Standing immovable like a hill and possessed of the strength of a prince of mountains, that grinder of foes, viz., Vikartana's son Karna, O king, destroyed that wonderful shower of arrows shot at him. Devoted to the good of thy sons, the high-souled Vaikartana, in that battle, began to strike his foes with lances endued with the force of thunder, and with whetted shafts equipt with beautiful wings of gold.10 Soon the standards of some were broken and cut down by Karna, and the bodies of others pierced and mangled by him with keen arrows; and soon some were deprived of drivers, and some of their steeds.12 Exceedingly afflicted by the Suta's son in that battle, many of them entered the force of Yudhishthira. Beholding them broken and compelled to retreat, Ghatotkacha became mad with rage.12 Mounted on that excellent car of his that was decked with gold and jewels, he uttered a loud leonine roar, and approaching Vikartana's son Karna, pierced him with shafts endued with the force of thunder.18 Both of them began to cover the welkin with barbed arrows, and cloth-yard shafts, and frogfaced arrows, and Nalikas, and Dandas, and Açanis, arrows bearing heads like the calf's tooth or the boar's ear, and broad-headed shafts, and shafts pointed like horns, and others bearing heads like razors.14 The welkin, covered with that arrowy shower, looked, in consequence of those gold-winged shafts of blazing splendour coursing horizontally through it, as if hung with garlands of beautiful flowers.16. Each endued with prowess equal to that of the other, they struck each other equally with powerful weapons. None could, in that battle, find any mark of superiority in either of those excellent heroes.¹⁶ Indeed, that battle between the son of Surya and Bhima's son, characterised by a thick and heavy shower of weapons, looked exceedingly beautiful and presented almost an unrivalled sight like the fierce encounter between Rāhu and Surya in the welkin.'¹⁷

"Sanjaya continued,—'When Ghatotkacha, O king, that foremost of all persons conversant with weapons, found that he could not prevail over Karna, he invoked into existence a fierce and mighty weapon.' With that weapon, the Rākshasa first slew the steeds of Karna and then the latter's driver. Having achieved that feat, Hidimvā's son quickly made himself invisible.'

"Dhritarāshtra said,—'When that Rākshasa fighting by deceitful means thus disappeared, tell me, O Sanjaya, what did the warriors of my army think?" "

'Sanjaya said,-'Seeing the Rākshasa disappear, all the Kauravas loudly said,—Appearing next, the Rakshasa, fighting deceitfully, will certainly slay Karna !21-Then Karna, endued with wonderful lightness in the use of weapons, covered all sides with showers of shafts. The welkin being covered with the darkness caused by that thick arrowy shower, all creatures became invisible. 22 So great was the lightness of hands displayed by the Suta's son, that none could mark when he touched his quivers with his fingers, when he fixed his arrows on the bowstring, and when he aimed and sped them off. The entire welkin seemed to be shrouded with his arrows. 28 Then a fierce and terrible illusion was invoked into existence by the Rākshasa in the welkin. We beheld in the sky what appeared to us to be a mass of red clouds resembling the fierce flame of a blazing fire.24 From that cloud issued flashes of lightning, and many blazing brands, O Kuru king! And tremendous roars also issued therefrom, like the noise of thousands of drums beat at once.25 And from it fell many shafts winged with gold, and darts, and lances, and heavy clubs, and other similar weapons, and battle-axes, and scimitars washed with oil, and axes of blazing edges, and spears,26 and spiked maces emitting shining rays, and beautiful maces of iron, and long darts of keen points, and heavy maces decked with gold and twined round with strings, and

Generated on 2022-02-03 13:02 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google

Cataghnis, all around.47 And large rocks fell from it, and thousands of thunder-bolts with loud report, and many hundreds of wheels and razors of the splendour of fire.23 shooting showers of shafts, failed to destroy that thick and blazing downpour of darts and lances and swords and clubs." Loud became the uproar then of falling steeds slain by those shafts, and mighty elephants struck with thunder, and great car-warriors deprived of life by other weapons. so Ghatotkacha with that terrible shower of arrows all around, that host of Duryodhana, was seen to wander, in great pain, over the field.81 With cries of oh and alas, and exceedingly cheerless, that wandering host seemed on the point of being annihilated. The leaders, however, in consequence of the nobility of their hearts, fled not away with faces turned from Beholding that exceedingly frightful and awful shower of mighty weapons, caused by the Rākshasa's illusion, falling upon the field, and seeing their vast army incessantly slaughtered, thy sons became inspired with great fear. 88 dreds of jackals with tongues blazing like fire and of terrible yells, began to cry. And, O king, the (Kaurava) warriers, beholding the yelling Rākshasas, became exceedingly distressed.84 terrible Rākshasas with fiery tongues and blazing mouths and sharp teeth, and with forms huge as hills, stationed in the welkin, with darts in grasp, looked like clouds pouring torrents Struck and crushed with those fierce shafts and darts and lances and maces and spiked clubs of blazing splendour, and thunder-bolts and Pinakas and Açanis and disci and Cataghnis, the (Kaurava) troops began to fall down. 86 Rākshasas began to pour upon the warriors of thy son long darts, and treacle, and Cataghnis, and Sthungs made of black iron and twined with strings of jute. Then all the combatants became stunned.87 Brave warriors, with weapons broken or loosened from their grasp, or deprived of heads, or with fractured limbs, began to fall down on the field. And in consequence of the falling rocks, steeds and elephants and cars Those Yātudhānas of terrible forms, began to be crushed.88 created by Ghatotkacha with the aid of his powers of illusion pouring that thick shower of mighty weapons, spared neither those that were terrified nor those that begged for quarter." During that cruel carnage of Kuru heroes, brought on by Death himself, during that extermination of Kshatriyas, the Kaurava warriors suddenly broke and fled with speed, crying aloud,40-Fly, ye Kauravas! All is lost! The gods with Indra at their head are slaying us for the sake of the Pandavas !- At that time there was none that could rescue the sinking Bharata troops41 During that fierce uproar and rout and extermination of the Kauravas, the camps losing their distinctive features, the parties could not be distinguished from each Indeed, during that terrible rout in which the soldiers showed no regard for one another, every side of the field, when looked at, seemed to be empty. Only Karna, O king, could be seen there, drowned in that shower of weapons.48 Then Karna covered the welkin with his shafts, contending with that celestial illusion of the Rākshasa. The Suta's son, endued with modesty and achieving the most difficult and noble feats, did not lose his senses in that battle.44 Then, O king, all the Saindhavas and Vālhikas afrightedly looked at Karna who kept his And they all worshipped him, while they senses in that fight. looked at the triumph of the Rakshasa.45 Then a Catgahni equipt with wheels, hurled by Ghatotkacha, slew the four steeds These dropped down on the ground, of Karna simultaneously. on their knees, deprived of life, teeth, eyes, and tongues.45 Then jumping down from his steedless car, and seeing the Kauravas flying away, and beholding his own celestial weapon baffled by the Rākshasa's illusion, Karna, without losing his senses, turned his mind inwards and began to reflect on what he should next do.47 At that time all the Kauravas, beholding Karna and that terrible illusion (of the Rakshasa), cried out, saying,-O Karna, slay the Rākshasa soon with thy dart! These Kauravas and the Dhartarashtras are on the point of being annihilated !48 What will Bhima and Arjuna do to us? Slay this wretched Rākshasa at dead of night, who is consuming us all! They that will escape from this dreadful encounter today will fight with the Parthas in battle!49 Therefore, slay this terrible Rākshasa now with that dart given thee by Vāsava! O Karna, let not these great warriors, the Kauravas, these princes that resemble Indra himself, be all destroyed in this nocturnal battle !50-Then Karna, seeing the Rakshasa alive at dead of night, and the Kuru army struck with fear, and hearing also the loud wails of the latter set his heart upon hurling his dart.51 Inflamed with rage like a wrathful lion, and unable to brook the assaults of the Rākshasa, Karna took up that foremost of victory-giving and invincible darts, desirous of compassing the destruction of Ghatotkacha. 52 deed, that dart, O king, which he had kept and adored for years for (achieving) the slaughter of Pandu's son in battle, that foremost of darts which Cakra himself had given to the Suta's son in exchange for the latter's ear-rings,58 that blazing and terrible missile twined with strings and which seemed to thirst for blood, that fierce weapon which looked like the very tongue of the Destroyer or the sister of Death himself, that terrible and effulgent dart Vaikartana now hurled at the Rikshasa.54 Beholding that excellent and blazing weapon capable of piercing the body of every foe, in the hands of the Suta's son, the Rākshasa began to fly away in fear, assuming a body gigantic as the foot of the Vindhya mountains. Indeed, seeing that dart in Karna's, hand, all creatures in the sky, O king, uttered loud cries. Fierce winds began to blow, and thunders with loud report began to fall on the Earth. 56 troying that blazing illusion of Ghatotkacha and piercing right through his breast, that resplendent dart soared aloft in the night and entered a starry constellation in the firmament.57 Having fought, using diverse beautiful celestial weapons, with many heroic Rākshasas and human warriors, Ghatotkacha then, uttering diverse terrible roars, fell, deprived of life with that This also is another exceedingly wonderful feat that the Rakshasa accomplished for the destruction of his foes, viz., that at that time when his heart was pierced by that dart, he shone resplendent, O king, like a mighty mountain or a mass of clouds. 59 Indeed, having assumed that terrible and awful form, Bhimasena's son of frightful deeds fell down. When dying, O king, he fell upon a portion of thy army and pressed those troops down by the weight of his own body.60 Quickly falling down, the Rākshasa, with his gigantic and still :7/wu.89035511112 :cess_use#pd-google increasing body, desirous of benefiting the Pāndavas, slew a full Akshauhini of thy troops while he himself breathed his last. Then a loud uproar arose there made up of leonine shouts and the blare of conchs and the beat of drums and cymbals. The Kauravas, indeed, beholding the illusion of the Rākshasa destroyed and the Rākshasa himself slain, uttered loud shouts of joy. Then Karna, worshipped by the Kurus as Cakra had been by the Maruts upon the slaughter of (the Asura) Vritra, ascended behind the car of thy son, and becoming the observed of all, entered the Kuru host."

Generated on 2022-02-03 13:01 GMT

SECTION CLXXXI.

"Sanjaya said,—'Beholding Hidimva's son slain and lying like a riven mountain, all the Pandavas became filled with grief and began to shed copious tears.1 Only Vasudeva, filled with transports of delight, began to utter leonine shouts, grieving the Pandavas.2 Indeed, uttering loud shouts. he Tying the reins of the steeds and uttering embraced Arjuna. loud roars, he began to dance in transports of joy like a Then embracing Arjuna once more, tree shaken by a tempest. and repeatedly slapping his own armpits,4 Achyuta, endued with great intelligence, once more began to shout, standing on the terrace of the car. Beholding those tokens of delight that Keçava manifested, Dhananjaya, O king, with heart in grief. addressed him, saying,-O slayer of Madhu, thou showest great joy at a time scarcely fit for it,6 indeed, on an occasion for sorrow caused by the death of Hidimva's son! Our troops are flying away, beholding Ghatotkacha slain! We also are filled with anxiety in consequence of the fall of Hidimva's son! O Janarddana, the cause must be very grave when at such a time thou feelest such joy !* Therefore, O foremost of truthful men, asked by me, tell me truly (what that cause is)! Indeed, if it be not a secret, it behaveth thee, O chastiser of foes, to say it unto me! O slayer of Madhu, tell me what has destroyed thy gravity today! This act of thine, O Janard. dana, this lightness of heart, seems to me to be like the drying up of the ocean or the locomotion of Meru!10-

"'Vāsudeva said,—Great is the joy I feel! Listen to me, O Dhananjaya! This that I will tell thee will immediately dispel thy sorrow and infuse delight into thy heart !" of great splendour, know, O Dhananjaya, that Karna, his dart being baffled through Ghatotkacha, is already slain in battle!18 The man does not exist in this world that could stay before Karna armed with that dart and looking like Kartikeya in By good luck, his (natural) armour had been taken By good luck, his ear-rings also had been taken away. By good luck, his infallible dart also is now baffled, through Ghatotkacha !14 Clad in his (natural) coat of mail and decked with his (natural) ear-rings, Karna, who has his senses under control, could singly vanquish the three worlds with the very gods!15 Neither Vāsava, nor Kuvera, nor Varuna the lord of the waters, nor Yāma, could venture to approach him !16 Indeed, if that bull among men had his armour and ear-rings, neither thyself, bending thy Gandiva, nor myself, uplifting my discus called Sudarçana, could vanquish him in battle.17 thy good, Karna was divested of his ear-rings by Cakra with the help of an illusion. Similarly was that subjugator of hestile towns deprived of his (natural) armour.18 Indeed, because Karna, cutting off his (natural) armour and his brilliant earrings, gave them unto Cakra, it is for that that he came to be called Vaikartna.*19 Karna now seems to me to be like an angry snake of virulent poison stupefied by power of incantation, or like a fire of mild flames ! * From that time, O mighty-armed one, when the high-souled Cakra gave that dart unto Karna in exchange for the latter's ear-rings and celestial armour,-that dart, viz., which has slain Ghatotkacha,-from that time, Vrisha, having obtained it, had always regarded thee as slain in battle !21-22 But though deprived of that dart, O sinless one. I swear to thee that that hero is still incapable of being slain by anybody else save thee !28 Devoted to Brāhmanas, truthful in speech, engaged in penances, observant of yows, kind even unto foes, for these reasons Karna is called ^{*} A somewhat fanciful etymology which I have noticed in an earlier note.—T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 13:04 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

Vrisha.24 Heroic in battle, possessed of mighty arms, and with bow always uplifted, like the lion in the forest depriving leaders of elephantine herds of their pride,25 Karna always deprives the greatest car-warriors of their pride on the field of battle, and resembles the mid-day Sun at whom none can Contending with all the illustrious and foremost of warriors of thy army, O tiger among men, Karna, while shooting his arrowy showers, looks like the autumnal Sun with his thousand rays.27 Indeed, incessantly shooting showers of shafts like the clouds pouring torrents of rain at the end of summer. Karna is like a pouring cloud charged with celestial weapons.28 He is incapable of being vanquished in battle by the very gods shooting showers of arrows on all sides. Encountering the gods, he would mangle them in such a way that their flesh and blood would fall copiously on the field." Deprived, however, of his armour as also of his ear-rings, O son of Pandu, and divested also of the dart given him by Vasava, Karna is now like a man (and no longer like a god). 50 There will occur one opportunity for his slaughter. When his car-wheels will sink in the Earth, availing of that opportunity, thyself, exerting carefully, shouldst slay him in that distressful situation, when he will be engaged otherwise. I will make thee a sign before-Warned by it, thou shouldst act !81 The vanquisher of Vala himself, that foremost of heroes, wielding his thunder, is incapable of slaying the invincible Karna while the latter stands Indeed, O Arjuna, for thy good, with the aid weapon in hand. of diverse contrivances I have slain, one after another, Jarasandha and the illustrious ruler of the Chedis and the mightyarmed Nishāda of name Ekalavya! Other great Rākshasas having Hidimva and Krimira and Vaka for their foremost, as also Alayudha, that grinder of hostile troops, and Ghatotkacha, that crusher of foes and warrior of fierce deeds, have all been slain!" "82-38

SECTION CLXXXII.

"'Arjuna said,—How, O Janārddana, for our good, and by what means, were those lords of Earth, viz., Jarāsandha and the others slain?'—

"'Vāsudeva said.—If Jarāsandha, and the ruler of the Chedis, and the mighty son of the Nishāda king, had not been slain, they would have become terrible.2 Without doubt, Duryodhana would have chosen those foremost of car-warriors (for embracing his side). They had always been hostile to us, and, accordingly, they would all have adopted the side of the Kauravas. All of them were heroes, and mighty bowmen accomplish-Like the celestials (in prowed in weapons and firm in battle. ess), they would have protected Dhritarashtra's son.4 the Suta's son, and Jarasandha, and the ruler of the Chedis, and the son of the Nishāda, adopting the side of Suyodhana, would have succeeded in conquering the whole Earth.5 Indeed, with-O Dhananjaya, by what means they were slain. out the employment of means, the very gods could not have conquered them in battle !6 Each of them, O Partha, could fight in battle with the whole celestial host protected by the Regents of the world! (On one occasion), assailed by Valadeva, Jarasandha, excited with wrath, hurled for our destruction a mace capable of slaying all creatures.8 Endued with the splendour of fire, that mace coursed towards us, dividing the welkin like the line on the head that parts the tresses of a woman, and with the impetuosity of the thunder hurled by Cakra. Beholding that mace thus coursing towards us, the son of Rohiny hurled the weapon called Sthunakarna for baffling it.10 force destroyed by the energy of Valadeva's weapon, that mace fell down on the Earth, splitting her (with its might) and making the very mountains tremble.11 There was a terrible Rākshasi, of name Jara, endued with great prowess. She, O prince had united that slayer of foes, and, therefore, was the latter called Jarāsandha.12 Jarāsandha had been made up of two And because it was Jara that had united halves of one child. those two halves, it was for this that he came to be called Jarā-sandha.13* That Rākshasa woman, O Pārtha, who was there within the Earth, was slain with her son and kinsmen by means of that mace and the weapon Sthunakana.14 Deprived of his mace in that great battle, Jarasandha was afterwards slain by Bhimasena in thy presence, O Dhananjaya !15+ If the valiant Jarasandha had stood armed with his mace, the very gods with Indra at their head could not have slain him in battle, O best of men!16 For thy good, the Nishāda's son also, of prowess incapable of being baffled, was, by an act of guile, deprived of his thumb by Drona assuming the position of his preceptor.17 Proud and endued with steady prowess, the Nishāda's son, with fingers cased in leathern fences, looked resplendent like a second Undeprived of thumb, Ekalavya, O Partha, was incapable of being vanquished in battle by the gods, the Danavas, the Rikshasas, and the Uragas (together).19 Of firm grasp, accompanied in weapons, and capable of shooting incessantly day and night, he was incapable of being looked at by mere men.20 For thy good, he was slain by me on the field of battle. Endued with great prowess, the ruler of the Chedis was slain by me before thy eyes.21 He also was incapable of being vanquished in battle by the gods and the Asuras together. I took my birth for his slaughter as also for that of other enemies of the gods,22 with thy assistance, O tiger among men, from desire of benefiting the world! Hidimva and Vaka and Kirmira have all been slain by Bhimasena.23 All those Rākashas were endued with might equal to that of Ravana, and all of them were destroyers of Brāhmanas and sacrifices. Similarly, A'ayudha possessed of large powers of illusion had been slain by Hidimvā's son.24 Hidimvā's son also, I have slain by the employment of means, viz., through Karna with his dart. If Karna had not slain him with his dart in great battle,25 I myself would have had to slay Bhimasena's son Ghatotkacha! From desire of benefiting you, I did not slay him before.26 That Rākshasa was inimical to Brāhmanas and sacrifices.

^{*} Literally means, "united by Jara."-T.

[†] Nilakantha thinks that Sagadayā is one word, meaning "deprived of both the Rakshasa and the mace." This is far-fetched. -T.

Because he was a destroyer of sacrifices and of sinful soul, therefore hath he been thus slain!27 O sinless one, by that act as a means, the dart given by Cakra hath also been rendered futile. O son of Pandu, they that are destroyers of righteousness are all slayable by me !83 Even that is the vow made by me, for establishing righteousness! Thither where the Vedas and truth and self-restraint and purity and righteousness and modesty and prosperity and wisdom and forgiveness are always to be met with, 29 thither I myself always remain. Thou needst not be at all anxious about Karna's slaughter!" I will tell you the means by which you will slay him. Vrikodara also will succeed in slaying Suyodhana. I will tell thee, O son of Pandu, the means by which that will have to be compassed. Meanwhile, the uproar made by the hostile army is increasing.82 Thy troops also are flying away on all sides. Having achieved their objects, the Kauravas are destroying thy host. Indeed, Drona, that foremost of all smiters, is scorching us in battle.—'"ss

SECTION CLXXXIII.

"Dhritarāshtra said,—"When the Suta's son had such a dart as was sure to slay one person, why did he not hurl it at Partha, to the exclusion of all others? Upon Pārtha's slaughter by means of that dart, all the Srinjayas and the Pandavas Indeed, upon Phalguna's death, why would have been slain. should not the victory have been ours? Arjuna had made a vow to the effect that summoned to battle he would never refuse to accept the challenge. The Suta's son should have, therefore, summoned Phalguna to battle.3 Tell me, O Sanjaya, why did not Vrisha then, engaging Phalguna in single combat, slay the latter with that dart given him by Cakra?4 doubt, my son is destitute of both inteligence and counsellors! That sinful wretch is constantly baffled by the foe. How should he then succeed in vanquishing his enemies? Indeed, that dart which was such a mighty weapon and upon which had rested his victory, alas, that dart, hath, by Vasudeva, been made fruitless through Ghatotkacha! Indeed, it hath been snatched from Karna like a fruit from the hand of a cripple with a withered arm by a strong person! Even so hath that fatal dart been rendered fruitless through Ghatotkacha! As in a fight between a boar and a dog, upon the death of either, the hunter is the party profited, I think, O learned one, that even so was Vāsudeva the party to profit by the battle between Karna and Hidimvā's son! Ghatotkachahad slain Karna in battle, that would have been a great gain for the Pāndavas. If, on the other hand, Karna had slain Ghatotkacha, that too would have been a great gain to them in consequence of the loss of Karna's dart! Endued with great wisdom, that lion among men, viz., Vāsudeva, reflecting in this way, and for doing what was agreeable to and good for the Pāndavas, caused Ghatotkacha to be slain by Karna in battle.' 5-10

"Sanjaya said,-'Knowing the feat that Karna desired to achieve, the slayer of Madhu, the mighty-armed Janarddana, O king, commanded the prince of Rākshasas, viz., Ghatotkacha of mighty energy, to engage in single combat with Karna for rendering, O monarch, the latter's fatal dart fruitless. O king, is the result of thy evil policy !11-12 We would certainly have achieved success, O perpetuater of Kuru's race, if Krishna had not (thus) rescued the mighty car-warrior Partha from Karna's hands!13 Indeed, Partha would have been destroyed with his steeds, standard, and car, in battle, O Dhritarāshtra, if that master, that lord of Yogins, viz., Janārddana, had not saved him !14 Protected by diverse means, O king, and well aided by Krishna, Partha, approaching his foes, vanquishes Indeed, it was Krishna that rescued Partha from that fatal dart, otherwise that weapon would have quickly destroyed the son of Kunti like the lightning destroying a tree!"16

"Dhritarāshtra said,—'My son is fond of quarrel. His advisers are foolish. He is vain of his wisdom. It is for that, this certain means of Arjuna's death hath been baffled!" Why, O Suta, did not Duryodhana, or that foremost of all wielders, viz., Karna, possessed of great intelligence, hurl that fatal dart at Dhananjaya?" Why, O son of Gavalgana, didst thou too forget this great object, since, possessed as thou art of great wisdom, thou didst not remind Karna of it?" 19

"Sanjaya said,-"Indeed, O king, every night this formed the suject of deliberation with Duryodhana and Cakuni and myself and Dusçāsana! (And we said unto Karna),—Excluding all other warriors, O Karna, slay Dhananjaya! We would then lord it over the Pandus and the Panchalas as if these were our slaves !21 Or, if upon Pārtha's fall, he of Vrishni's race appoints another amongst the sons of Pandu (in his place for carrying on the fight), let Krishna himself be Krishna is the root of the Pandavas, and Partha is like their risen trunk! The other sons of Pritha are like their branches, while the Panchalas may be called their leaves.28 The Pandavas have Krishna for their refuge, Krishna for their might, and Krishna for their leader. Indeed, Krishna is their central support even as the Moon is of the constellations.24 Therefore, O Suta's son, avoiding the leaves and branches and trunk, know that Krishna is everywhere and always the root of the Pāndavas!25—Indeed, if Karna had slain him of Dacārha's race, viz., that delighter of the Yadavas, the whole Earth, O king, would, without doubt, have come under thy control !26 Truly, O monarch, if that illustrious one, that delighter of both the Yadavas and the Pandavas, could be made to lie down on the Earth, deprived of life, then certainly, O monarch, the entire Earth with her mountains and oceans and forests would have owned thy supremacy !27 We rose every morning, having formed such a resolution in respect of that Lord of the very gods, viz., Hrishikeça of immeasurable energy! At the time of battle, however, we forgot our resolution.28 Keçava always protects Arjuna the son of Kunti. He never placed Arjuna before the Suta's son in battle.29 Indeed, Achyuta always placed other foremost of car-warriors before Karna, thinking how that fatal dart of ours might be made fruitless by ourselves, O lord!20 When, again, the high-soled Krishna protected Partha in this manner from Karna, why, O monarch, would not that foremost of beings protect his own self?"1 Reflecting well, I see that there is no person in the three worlds who is able to vanquish that chastiser of foes, viz., Janarddana, that hero bearing the discus in hand !"32

"Sanjaya continued,—"That tiger among car-warriors, viz., Satyaki, of prowess incapable of being baffled, asked the mighty armed Krishna about the great car-warrior Karna, saying, 55—O Janārddana, even this had been Karna's firm resolution, viz., that he would hurl that dart of immeasurable energy at Phālguna! Why, however, did not the Suta's son actually hurl it then at him? 54—

"'Vāsudeva said,—Dusçāsana and Karna and Cakuni and the ruler of the Sindhus, with Duryodhana at their head, had frequently debated (on this subject. Addressing Karna, they used to say), 85 -O Karna, O great bowman, O thou of immeasurable prowess in battle, O foremost of all victors, this dart should not be hurled at any one else than that great carwarrior, viz., Kunti's son Partha or Dhananjaya! most celebrated amongst them, like Vāsava amongst the gods!" He being slain, all the other Pandavas with the Srinjayas will be heartless like fireless celestials !  - Karna having assented to this, saying,—So be it,—(the desire of) slaughtering the wielder of Gandiva, O bull amongst the Cinis, was ever present in Karna's heart!89 I, however, O foremost of warriors, always used to stupify the son of Radha! for this, he did not hurl the dart at Pandu's son owning As long as I could not baffle that means of white steeds !40 Phālguna's death I had neither sleep, nor joy in my heart, O foremost of warriors !41 Beholding that dart, therefore, rendered futile through Ghatotkacha, O bull amongst the Cinis, I regard Dhananjaya today to have been rescued from within the jaws of Death!42 I do not regard my sire, my mother, yourselves, my brothers, ay, my very life, so worthy of protection as Vibhatsu in battle !48 If there be anything more precious than the sovereignty of the three-worlds, I do not, O Sātwata, desire (to enjoy) it without Pritha's son Dhananjaya (to share it with me)!44 Beholding Dhananjaya, therefere, like one returned from the dead, these transports of delight, O Yuyudhana, have been mine !45 It was for this that I had despatched the Rākshasa unto Karna for battle! None else was capable of withstanding, in the night, Karna in battle !46-

^{*} Fire being the mouth of the celestials, without fire, the celestials become mouthless. Thus Nilkantha. -T.

"Sanjaya continued,—'Even thus did Devaki's son who is ever devoted to Dhananjaya's good and to what is areeable to him, speak unto Sātyaki on that occasion.'" 47

SECTION CLXXXIV.

"Dhritarāshtra said,—'I see, O sire, that this act of Karna and Duryodhana and Suvala's son Cakuni, and of thyself in especial, hath been very much against the dictates of policy. Indeed, when you knew that that dart could always slay one person in battle, and that it was incapable of being either borne or baffled by the very gods with Vāsava at their head, why then, O Sanjaya, was it not hurled by Karna at Devaki's son, or Phālguna, while he was engaged with these in battle before?'

"Sanjaya said,—'Returning from battle every day, O monarch, all of us, O foremost one of Kuru's race, used to debate in the night and say unto Karna,—O Karna, to-morrow morning, O Karna, this dart should be hurled at either Keçava or Arjuna!*-5—When, however, the morning came, O king, through destiny, both Karna and the other warriors forgot that resolution. I think destiny to be supreme, since Karna, with that dart in his hands, did not slay in battle either Pārtha or Devaki's son Krishna. Indeed, because his understanding was afflicted by destiny itself, it is for this he did not, stupified by the illusion of the gods, hurl that fatal dart of Vāsava, though he had it in hand, at Devaki's son Krishna for his destruction or at Pārtha endued with prowess like Indra's, O lord!

"Dhritarāshtra said,—'Ye are destroyed by desitiny, by your own understandings, and by Keçava! Vāsava's dart is lost, having effected the slaughter of Ghatotkacha who was as insignificant as straw!' Karna, and my sons, as all the other kings, through this highly impolitic act, have already entered the abode of Yama!' Tell me now how the battle once more raged between the Kurus and the Pāndavas after the fall of Hidimvā's son.' How did they that rushed against Drona, arrayed in order of battle and well-skilled in smiting, viz., the Srinjayas and the Pānchālas, fight?' How, indeed, did the Pāndus and Srinjayas withstand the smiting Drona when the latter, proceeding against them, penetrated into their host, excited with wrath at the slaughter of Bhuricravas and Jayadratha, reckless of his very life, and resembling a yawning tiger or the Destroyer himself with wide open mouth?¹⁴⁻¹⁵ What also did they do in battle, O sire, viz., Drona's son and Karna and Kripa and others headed by Duryodhana, that protected the preceptor?¹⁶ Tell me, O Sanjaya, how my warriors in that battle covered with their shafts Dhananjaya and Vrikodara who were solicitous of slaying Bharadwāja's son?¹⁶ How, indeed, did these excited with wrath at the death of the ruler of the Sindhus, and those at the death of Ghatotkacha, each side unable to brook their loss, fight that nocturnal battle?¹⁸

"Sanjaya said,—'Upon the slaughter, that night, O king, of the Rākshasa Ghatotkacha by Karna all thy troops, filled with joy, uttered loud shouts.19 In that dark hour of the night, they fell impetuously upon the Pandava troops and began to Seeing all this, king Yudhishthira became exceedingly cheerless.20 O chastiser of foes, the mighty-armed son of Pandu then addressed Bhimasena and said,—O thou of mighty arms, resist the Dhārtarāshtra host!81 In consequence of the slaughter of Hidimva's son, a great stupefaction overwhelms me!—Having ordered Bhimasena thus, he sat down on his own car.22 With tearful face and sighing repeatedly, the king became exceedingly cheerless at sight of Karna's prow-Beholding him so afflicted, Krishna said these words:-O son of Kunti, let not such grief be thine! Such cheerlessness does not became thee, O chief of the Bharatas, as it does Rise, O king, and fight! Bear the heavy an ordinary person! burden, O lord !24-25 If cheerlessness overtakes thee, our victory becomes uncertain !-Hearing these words of Krishna, Dharma's son Yudhishthira,26 wiping his eyes with his hands, replied unto Krishna, saying,—O thou of mighty arms, the excellent path of duty is not unknown to me!27 The dire consequences of a Brāhmana's slaughter are his that forgets the services he receives at other's hands! Whilst we were living in the woods, the high-souled son of Hidimva, 28 although then a mere child, did us many services, O Janarddana! Learning that Partha having white steeds had departed for the acquisi-

Generated on 2022-02-03 13:04 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google

tion of weapons,29 that great bowman, (viz., Ghatotkacha), O Krishna, came to me at Kāmyaka! He dwelt with us till Dhananjaya's reappearance. Whilst proceeding over many inaccessible fastnesses, he himself carried on his back the tired princess of Panchala. The feats he achieved, O lord, show that he was skilled in all modes of warfare. Indeed, that high-souled one accomplished many difficult feats for my bene-My affection for Ghatotkacha, that prince of Rakshasas, is twice that, O Janarddana, which I naturally bear towards Sahadeva!  That mighty-armed one was devoted to me! I was dear to him, and he was dear to me! It is for this that, scorched by grief, O thou of Vrishni's race, I have become so cheerless !34 Behold, O thou of Vrishni's race, our troops afflicted and routed by the Kauravas! Behold, those mighty car-warriors, viz., Drona and Karna, are contending earnestly in battle 185 Behold the Pandava host crushed at dead of night, like an extensive forest of heath by a couple of infuriate elephants! 56 Disregarding the might of Bhimasena's arms, O Mādhava, as also the variety of weapons that Pārtha bears, the Kauravas are putting forth their prowess?87 Yonder, Drona and Karna and king Suyodhana, having slain the Rākshasa in battle, are uttering loud roars!38 How, O Janarddana, when we are alive and thyself too, could Hidimva's son be slain while engaged with the Suta's son! 99 caused a great slaughter amongst us, and in the very sight of Savyasāchin, Karna, O Krishna, hath slain Bhimasena's son of great strength, the Rākshasa Ghatotkacha !40 When Abhimanyu was slain by the wicked Dhartarashtras, the mighty car-warrior Savyasāchin, O Krishna, was not present in that We also were all held in check by the illustrious ruler of the Sindhus. Drona, with his son (Acwatthaman), became the cause of that act.42 The preceptor himself told Karna the means of Abhimanyu's slaughter. While Abhimanyu was battling with the sword, it was the preceptor himself that cut off that weapon.43 And while fallen into such distress, Kritavarman most cruelly slew the steeds and the two Pārshni drivers (of the boy).44 Other great bowmen then despatched the son of Subhadra. For a little offence, O Krishna, was the ruler of the Sindhus slain by the wielder of Gandiva! 45 O foremost one among the Yadavas, that act did not give me great joy! If the slaughter of foes is just and should be achieved by the Pandavas,46 then Drona and Karna should have been slain before this! This is what I think! O bull among men, those two are the root of our woes!47 those two (as his allies) in battle, Suyodhana has become confident. Indeed, when it was Drona that should have been slain or the Suta's son with his followers,48 the mighty-armed Dhananjaya slew the Sindhu king whose connection with the affair was very remote! The punishment of the Suta's son should certainly be undertaken by me.49 I shall, therefore, O hero, now fight for slaying the Suta's son. The mighty-armed Bhimasena is now engaged with Drona's division. 50-Having said these words, Yudhishthira quickly proceeded against Karna, bending his formidable bow and blowing his conch fiercely.51 Then, surrounded by a Panchala and Prabhadraka force of a thousand cars, three hundred elephants, and five thousand horse, Cikhandin speedily followed in the wake of the king. Then the mail-clad Panchalas and the Pandavas headed by Yudhishthira beat their drums and blew their conchs. At this time Vāsudeva of mighty-arms, addressing Dhananjaya, said,52-54—Filled with wrath, yonder proceedeth Yudhishthira with great speed, from desire of slaying the Sutu's son! It is not proper that thou shouldst rely upon him in this !55—Having said these words, Hrishikeça quickly urged the steeds. Indeed, Janarddana followed in the wake of the king who was now at a distance. 66 At that time, seeing Dharma's son Yudhishthira, whose mind was afflicted by grief and who seemed to be scorched as if by fire, rush with speed from desire of slaying the Suta's son, Vyāsa approached him and said these words.*57

"'Vyāsa said.—By good luck Phalguna liveth still although he had encountered Karna in battle! Indeed, Karna had kept his dart, desirous of slaying Savyasāchin!58 O bull of Bharata's race, by good luck Jishnu did not engage in single combat with Karna! Each of them in that case, challenging the other, would have shot his celestial weapons on all sides.59 The weapons of the Suta's son would have been destroyed by The former then, afflicted by the latter, would certainly have hurled Indra's dart in that battle, O Yudhishthira!60 O foremost one of Bharata's race, (if this had come to pass), then great would have been thy grief! O giver of honors, by good luck the Rākshasa hath been slain in battle by the Suta's Indeed, Ghatotkacha hath been slain by Death himself making the dart of Vasava an instrument only! For thy good it is, O sire, that the Rākshasa hath been slain in battle! Do not yield to anger, O foremost one of Bharata's race, and do not set thy heart on grief! O Yudhishthira, even this is the end of all creatures in this world!63 Uniting with thy brothers and all the illustrious kings (of thy host), fight with the Kauravas in battle, O Bhārata!64 On the fifth day from this, the Earth will be thine! O tiger among men, always think of virtue !65 With a cheerful heart, O son of Pandu, practise kindness (to all creatures), penances, charity, forgiveness, and truth! Victory is there where righteousness is!— Having said these words unto the son of Pandu, Vyasa made himself invisible there and then." 66

^{*} This is a triplet in the Bengal texts .- T.

SECTION CLXXXV.

(Drona-badha Parva).

Sanjaya said,—Thus addressed by Vyāsa, the heroic king Yudhishthira the just refrained, O bull of Bharata's race, from himself seeking to slay Karna.¹ In consequence, however, of the slaughter of Ghatotkacha by the Suta's son that night, the king became filled with grief and anger.² Beholding thy vast host held in check by Bhima, Yudhishthira, addressing Dhrishtadyumna, said,—Resist the Pot-born!³ O scorcher of foes, thou hast, clad in mail, and armed with bow and arrows and scimitar, sprung from fire, for the destruction of Drona!⁴ Cheerfully rush thou to battle, thou needst have no fear! Let also Janamejaya and Cikhandin and Durmukha's son and ^{* 66} is a triplet in the Bengal texts .- T.

Yaçodhara, rush in wrath against the Pot-born every side. Let Nakula and Sahadeva and the sons of Draupadi and the Prabhadrakas, and Drupada and Virāta with their sons and brothers, and Sātyaki and the Kaikayas and the Pāndavas and Dhananjaya,7 all rush with speed against Bharadwāja's son from desire of slaying him! Let also all our car-warriors and all the elephants and horse we have,8 and all our foot-soldiers, overthrow the mighty car-warrior Drona in battle!—Thus ordered by the illustrious son of Pandu, all of them' rushed impetuously against the Pot-born from desire of slaughtering him. however, that foremost of all wielders of arms, received in battle all those Pandava warriors thus rushing towards him suddenly with great force and perseverance. Then king Duryodhana, desiring to protect Drona's life, rushed, filled with wrath, against the Pandavas, with great force and perseverance. Then commenced the battle between the Kurus and the Panda-The animals of both hosts as vas who roared at each other. also the warriors were all tired. The great car-warriors also, O king, with eyes closing in sleep and worn out with exertion in battle, knew not what to do. That night of nine hours, so terrible and awful, 10-14 and so destructive of creatures, appeared to them to be everlasting. + While they were being thus slain and mangled by one another,16 and while sleep sat heavy on their eyes, it became midnight. All the Kshatriyas became cheerless and heartless.16 Thy troops as also those of the foe had no more weapons and arrows. Passing the time thus, (most of) the warriors (of both armies) endued with modesty and energy17 and observant of the duties of their order, did not abandon their divisions. Others, blind with sleep, abandoning their weapons, laid themselves down. 18 Some laid themselves down on the backs of elephants, some on cars, and some on horse-back, O Bhārata! Blind with sleep, they ^{} Triyāmā, literally, consisting of three Yāmas, a Yāma being a watch of three hours. The first hour and a half of the night and the last hour and a half, being regarded as twilight, the night, truly as such, with the ancient Hindoos, consisted of only 9 hours.—T.

t Literally, "of a thousand Yamas,"-T.

became perfectly motionless, O king.19 Other warriors (that were yet awake) in that battle, despatched these to Yama's Others, deprived of their senses and dreaming in sleep, slew themselves, that is, their own comrades, as also their foes, taking all for their foes. Indeed, these fought in that dreadful battle, uttering various exclamations.20-21 Many warriors, O monarch, of our army, desirous of continuing the fight with the foe, stood with eyes drowsy with sleep.22 warriors, during that terrible hour of darkness, though blind with sleep, yet gliding along the field, slew one another in that battle. 83 Many amongst the foe, entirely stupified by slumber, were slain without their being conscious (of the strokes that launched them into eternity).24 Beholding this condition of the soldiers, O bull among men, Vibhatsu, in a very loud voice, said these words:26-All of you, with your animals, are worn out with exertion and blind with sleep! Ye warriors, ye are enveloped in darkness and with dust !*6 Therefore, if ye like, ye may rest! Indeed, here, on the field of battle, close your eyes for a while !27 Then when the moon will rise, ye Kurus and Pandavas, ye may again, having slept and taken rest, encounter each other for the sake of heaven !28-Hearing these words of the virtuous Arjuna, the virtuous warriors (of the Kuru army) assented to the suggestion, and addressing one another, 29 loudly said,-O Karna, O Karna, O king Duryodhana, abstain from the fight! The Pandava host hath ceased to strike us! 80-Then at those words of Phalguna, uttered loudly by him, the Pāndava army as also thine, O Bhārata, abstained Indeed, those noble words of Partha were highly applauded by the gods, the high-souled Rishis, and all the gladdened soldiers. 22 Applauding those kind words, O Bharata, all the troops, O king, worn out with exertion, laid themselves down for sleep, O bull of Bharata's race.88 Then that army of thine, O Bharata, happy at the prospect of rest and sleep, sincerely blessed Arjuna, saying, 84-In thee are the Vedas as also all weapons! In thee are intelligence and prowess! In thee, O mighty-armed one, are righteousness, and compassion for all creatures, O sinless one!35 And since we have been comforted by thee, we wish thy good, O Partha! Let prosperity be to

Soon do thou get, O hero, those objects that are dear to thy heart !36-Blessing him thus, O tiger among men, those great car-warriors, stupified by sleep, became silent, O monarch! Some laid themselves down on horse-back, some on the car-box, some on the necks of elephants, and some on the bare ground.38 Many men, with their weapons and maces and swords and battle-axes and lances, and with their armour on, laid themselves down for sleep, apart from one another.39 Elephants, heavy with sleep, made the Earth cool with the breath of their nostrils, that passed through their snake-like trunks spotted with dust.40 Indeed, the elephants, as they breathed on the ground, looked beautiful like hills scattered (on the field of battle) over whose breasts hissed gigantic Steeds in trappings of gold and with manes mingling with their yokes, stamping their hoofs, made even grounds Thus every one, O king, slept there with the animal Thus steeds and elephants and warriors, O bull of Bharata's race,48 very much worn out with exertion, slept, abstaining from battle. That slumbering host, deprived of sense and sunk in sleep then looked like a wonderful picture drawn on canvas by skilful artists.44 Those Kshatriyas decked in earrings and endued with youth, with limbs mangled by shafts, and immersed in sleep, having laid themselves down on the coronal globes of elephants, looked as if they were lying on the deep bosoms of beautiful ladies.45 Then the Moon, that delighter of the eye and lord of lilies, of hue white as the cheeks of a beautiful lady, rose, adorning the direction presided over by Indeed, like a lion of the Udaya hills, with rays constituting his manes of brilliant yellow, he issued out of his cave in the east, tearing to pieces the thick gloom of night resembling an extensive herd of elephants. +47 That lover of ^{*} The Moon is called the lord of lilies because the water lily is seen to bloom at moon-rise, just as the Sun is called the lord of lotuses because the lotus blooms at sun-rise. The direction presided over by Indra means the East.—T.

⁺ Daça çatāksha-kakup means the Kakup or direction presided by him of a thousand eyes; hence, the East.—T.

all assemblages of lilies (in the world), bright as the body of Mahādeva's excellent bull, full-arched and radiant as Kāma's bow, and delightful and charming as the smile on the lips of the bashful bride, bloomed in the firmament.*48 Soon, however, that divine lord having the hare for his mark showed himself reddish, shedding brighter rays around.49 Indeed, the Moon, after this seemed to gradually emit a bright halo of farreaching light that resembled the splendour of gold. 50 the rays of that luminary, dispelling the darkness by their splendour, slowly spread themselves over all the quarters, the welkin, and the Earth. 51 Soon, therefore, the world became illuminated. The unspeakable darkness that had hidden everything quickly fled away.52 When the world was thus illumined into almost daylight by the Moon, amongst the creatures that wander at night, some continued to roam about and some abstained.53 That host, O king, awaked by the rays of the Moon, bloomed (into life) like an assemblage of lotuses expanded by the rays of the Sun.54 Indeed, that sea of troops was awakened by the risen Moon like the ocean swelling up in agitated surges at the rise of that luminary.55 Then, O king, the battle once more commenced on Earth, for the destruction of the Earth's population, between men that desired to attain to heaven." "56

SECTION CLXXXVI.

'Sanjaya said,—'At this time Duryodhana, under the influence of wrath, approached Drona and addressing him said these words, for inspiring him with joy and provoking his anger.""

"'Duryodhana said,—No kindness should have been shown to our foes while they were heartless and worn out with toil and taking rest, expecially when they are all of sure aim! Desirous of doing what is agreeable to thee, we showed them kindness by then letting them alone. The tired Pāndavas,

^{*} Instead of Vrishodara, the Bombay text reads Vrishottama which I adopt.—T.

however, (having taken rest) have become stronger.3 As regards ourselves, we are, in every respect, losing in energy and The Pandavas, protected by thee, are constantly gaining prosperity.4 All weapons that are celestial and all those that appertain to Brahma exist in thee! I tell thee truly, that neither the Pandavas, nor ourselves, nor any other bowmen in the world, can be a match for thee while thou art engaged in battle !6 O foremost of regenerate ones, thou art acquainted with all weapons! Without doubt, by means of thy celestial weapons thou art capable of destroying the (three) worlds with the gods, the Asuras, and the Gandhar-The Pandavas are all afraid of thee! Thou, however, forgivest them, remembering that they were thy pupils, or, perhaps, owing to my ill luck !8-"

"Sanjaya continued,—'Thus rebuked and angered by thy son, Drona, O king, wrathfully addressed Duryodhana and said these words:9-Although I am so old, O Duryodhana, I am still exerting in battle to the utmost extent of my might! All these men are unacquainted with weapons. I am, however, well-versed in them. If, from desire of victory, I slay these men, there can be no more ignoble act for me to do. however, which is in thy mind, be it good or bad,10-11 I will accomplish, O Kauravya, at thy command! It will not be otherwise! Putting forth my prowess in battle and slaying all the Panchalas, I will doff my armour, O king! Thou thinkest that Arjuna the son of this to thee truly! Kunti was worn out in battle? 12-18 O mighty-armed Kaurava! listen to what I truly say regarding his prowess! If Savyasachin's wrath is excited, neither Gandharvas, nor Yakshas, nor Rākshasas, can venture to bear him. At Khāndava he encountered the divine chief of the celestials himself!14-15 illustrious Arjuna, with his shafts, baffled the pouring Indra. Yakshas, and Nagas, and Daityas, and all others, proud of their might,16 were slain by that foremost of men. That also is known to thee. On the occasion of the tale of cattle, the Gandharvas headed by Chitrasena and others were vanquished by him.17 That firm bowman rescued you while you were being carried away by those Gandharvas. The Nivātakavachas also, those enemies of the celestials, that were unslayable in battle by the celestials themselves, were also vanquished by that hero. Thousands of Dānavas dwelling in Hiranyapura, that tiger among men vanquished. How can human beings then withstand him? O monarch, thou hast seen with thy own eyes how this host of thine, although exerting so heroically, hath been destroyed by the son of Pāndu! 20—'

"Sanjaya continued,—'Unto Drona who was thus applauding Arjuna, thy son, O king, angered thereat, once more said these words: "-Myself, and Dusçāsana, and Karna, and my maternal uncle Cakuni, dividing this Bharata host into two divisions, (and taking one with us), shall today slay Arjuna in words of his, Bharadwaja's son, battle !22—Hearing these laughing, sanctioned that speech of the king and said,—Blessings to thee !23 What Kshatriya is there that would slay that bull amongst Kshatriyas, that unslayable one, viz., the bearer of Gindiva, that hero blazing forth with energy!24 the Lord of treasures, nor Indra, nor Yama, nor the Asuras, the Uragas, and the Rākshasas, can slay Arjuna armed with weapons!25 Only they that are fools say such words as those Who is there that would return thou hast said, O Bhārata! home in safety, having encountered Arjuna in battle?26 regards thyself, thou art sinful and cruel and suspicious of Even them that are employed in thy welfare, everybody! thou art ready to rebuke in this way !27 Go thou against the son of Kunti, for withstanding him for thy own sake! art a well-born Kshatriya! Thou seekest battle !28 Why dost thou cause all these unoffending Kshatriyas to be slain? art the root of this hostility! Therefore, go thou against This thy maternal uncle is possessed of wisdom and observant of Kshatriya duties! O son of Gandhari, let this one addicted to gambling proceed against Arjuna in battle!50 This one, skilled in dice, wedded to deception, addicted to gambling, versed in cunning and imposture,—this gambler conversant with the ways of deceiving,-will vanquish the Pandavas in battle!31 With Karna in thy company thou hadst often joyfully boasted, from folly and emptiness of understanding, in the hearing of Dhritarashtra, saying, 32-0 self, and Karna, and my brother Dusçāsanā, these three, uniting together, will slay the sons of Pāndu in battle! Later This thy boast was heard in every meeting of the court. Accomplish thy vow, be truthful in speech, with them! Later thy mortal foe, the son of Pāndu, is staying before thee! Observe the duties of a Kshatriya! Thy slaughter at the hands of Jaya would be worthy of every praise! Thou hast practised charity. Thou hast eaten (everything ever desired by thee). Thou hast obtained wealth to the measure of thy wish! Thou hast no debts. Thou hast done all that one should do. Do not fear. Fight now with the son of Pāndu! Later Having said these words in that battle, Drona stopped. The (Bharata) army then was divided into two bodies, and the battle commenced."

SECTION CLXXXVII.

* Sanjaya said, - When three-fourths of that night had worn away, the battle, O king, once more commenced between the Kurus and the Pandavas. Both sides were elated with joy.1 Soon after, Aruna, the charioteer of Surya, weakening the spiendour of the Moon, appeared, causing the welkin to assume The east was soon reddened with the red a coppery hue.2 rays of the Sun that resembled a circular plate of gold.2 all the warriors of the Kuru and the Pandava hosts, alighting from cars and steeds and vehicles borne by men, stood, with joined hands, facing the Sun, and uttered the prayers of the The Kuru army having been divided into two (first) twilight.4 bodies, Drona, with Duryodhana before him, proceeded (with one of those divisions) against the Somakas, the Pandavas, and the Panchalas.5 Beholding the Kuru host divided into two bodies, Madhava addressed Arjuna and said,-Keeping thy foes to thy left, place this division (commanded by Drona) to thy right !6—Obedient to the counsels of Madhava in respect of the Kurus, Dhananjaya moved to the left of those two mighty bowmen, viz., Drona, and Karna. Understanding the intentions of Krishna, that subjugator of hostile cities, viz., Bhimasena, addressing Partha who was then staying at the van of battle, said these words:8"'Bhimasena said,—O Arjuna, O Arjuna, O Vibhatsu, listen to these words of mine! The time for that object for which Kshatriya ladies bring forth sons is now come!' If at such a time thou dost not strive to win prosperity, thou, shalt then act meanly, like a veritable wretch!' Putting forth thy prowess, pay the debt thou owest to Truth, Prosperity, Virtue, and Fame! O foremost of warriors, pierce this division, and keep these to thy right!"—'

"Sanjaya continued,-'Thus urged by Bhima and Keçava, Savyasāchin, prevailing over Drona and Karna, began to resist the foe all around.12 Many foremost of Kshatriyas (among the Kurus), putting forth all their prowess, failed to withstand Arjuna who advanced at the very van of his troops, and who, like a raging conflagration, was consuming the foremost ones Then Duryodhana, and Karna, and Cakuni among his foes. the son of Suvala, 18-14 covered Kunti's son Dhananjaya with showers of shafts. Baffling the weapons of all those warriors, that foremost of all persons well-skilled in weapons, O monarch, covered them (in return) with his shafts. Aiming at their weapons with his (and thus baffling them all), Arjuna, endued with great lightness of hands and possessing a complete control over his senses,15-16 pierced every one of those warriors with ten keen-pointed shafts. The welkin was then covered with Thick showers of arrows fell. Darkness set in, and a loud and terrible uproar arose. When such was the state of things, neither the welkin, nor the Earth, nor the points of the compass, could any longer be seen.17-18 Stupified by the dust, all the troops became blind. Neither the foe, O king, nor we, could distinguish each other.19 For this reason, the kings began to fight, guided by conjecture and the names they Deprived of their cars, car-warriors, O king, encountering one another, lost all order and became a tangled Their steeds killed and drivers slain, many of them, becoming inactive, preserved their lives and looked exceedingly Slain steeds with riders deprived of life were seen to lie on slain elephants as if stretched on mountain-breasts. Then Drona, moving away from that battle towards the north, took up his station there, and seemed to resemble a smokeless

Beholding him move away from the battle towards the the Pandava troops, O king, began to tremble. Indeed, beholding Drona resplendent and handsome and blazing with energy, the enemy, inspired with fright, became pale and wavered on the field, O Bharata! While summoning the hostile army to battle, and looking like an elephant in rut,25-26 the enemy became perfectly hopeless of vanquishing him, like the Dānavas hopeless of vanquishing Vāsava. Some amongst them became perfectly cheerless, and some, endued with energy, became inspired with wrath.27 And some were filled with wonder, and some became incapable of brooking (the challenge). And some of the kings squeezed their hands,28 and some, deprived of their senses by rage, bit their lips. And some whirled their weapons, and some rubbed their arms.29 And some, possessed of great energy and souls under complete control, rushed against Drona. The Panchalas particularly, afflicted with the shafts of Drona, so O monarch, though suffering great pain, continued to contend in battle.* Then Drupada and Virāta proceeded, in that battle, against Drona, that invincible warrior, who was thus careering on the field. Then, O king, the three grandsons of Drupada, sa and those mighty bowmen, viz., the Chedis, also proceeded against Drona in that encounter. Drona, with three sharp shafts, took the lives of the three grandsons of Drupada. of life, the princes fell down on the Earth. vanquished in that battle the Chedis, the Kaikayas, and the Srinjayas. 88-84 That mighty car-warrior, viz., the son of Bharadwaja, then vanquished all the Matsyas. Then Drupada, filled with wrath, and Virāta also, in that battle, shot showers of shafts, O king, at Drona. Baffling that arrowy shower, Drona, that grinder of Kshatriyas, 85-36 covered both Drupada and Virāta with his shafts. Shrouded by Drona, both those warriors, mad with rage, began to pierce him on the field of battle with their arrows. Then Drona, O monarch,

^{*} In the first line of 31, the Bengal texts read Rijanam, probably referring to Daupada. The correct reading, however, is Rijendra in the vocative case, as in the Bombay edition.—T.

filled with wrath and desire of revenge, $7-38 cut off, with a couple of broad-headed shafts, the bows of both his antagonists. Then Virāta, filled with wrath, sped in that encounter ten lances and ten shafts at Drona from desire of slaying him. And Drupada, in anger, hurled at Drona's car a terrible dart made of iron and decked with gold and resembling a large Drona cut off, with a number of sharp and broadheaded arrows, those ten lances (of Virāta),89-41 and with certain other shafts that dart (of Drupada) decked with gold and stones of lapis lazuli. Then that grinder of foes, viz., the son of Bharadwaja, with a couple of well-tempered and broadheaded shafts,42 despatched both Drupada and Virāta unto the abode of Yama. Upon the fall of Virāta and Drupada, and the slaughter of the Kaikayas, 48 the Chedis, the Matsyas, and the Panchalas, and upon the fall of those three heroes, viz., the three grandsons of Drupada,44 the high-souled Dhrishtadyumna, beholding those feats of Drona, became filled with rage and grief, and swore in the midst of all the car-warriors, saying,45-Let me lose the merits of all my religious acts, as also my Kshatriya and Brahma energy, if Drona escape me today with life, or, if he succeed in vanquishing me !46#—Having taken that oath in the midst of all the bowmen, that slayer of hostile heroes, viz., the prince of the Panchalas, supported by his own division, advanced against Drona.47 The Panchalas then began to strike Drona from one side, and Arjuna from another. Duryodhana, and Karna, and Cakuni the son of Suvala,48 and the uterine brothers of Duryodhana, (stationed) according to their precedence, began to protect Drona in battle. being thus protected in battle by those illustrious warriors,49 the Pānchālas, though struggling vigorously, could not even gaze Then Bhimasena, O sire, became highly angry with Dhrishtadyumna, and, O bull among men, that son of Pandu pierced Dhrishtadyumna with these fierce words:—50+

^{*} I render this a little too freely. The form of the oath is,—"Let that man lose &.c., &.c., whom Drona escapes today with life or whom Drona vanquishes today."—

[†] This, in the Bengal texts, is a triplet.-T.

"'Bhimasena said,-What man is there who being regarded as a Kshatriya and who taking his birth in the race of Drupada and who being the foremost of all persons possessing a knowledge of weapons, would only thus look at his foe What man having seen his sire and stationed before him ?51 son slain, and especially, having sworn such an oath in the midst of the kings, would thus be indifferent to his enemy?53 Yonder stands Drona like a fire swelling with its own energy! Indeed, with bow and arrows constituting his fuel, he is consuming with his energy all the Kshatriyas !53 Soon will he annihilate the Pandava army! Stand ye (as spectators) and behold my feat! Against Drona himself will I proceed!54-Having said these words, Vrikodara, filled with rage, penetrated into Drona's division, and with shafts sped from his bow drawn to its fullest stretch, began to afflict and rout that host. 55 Then the Panchala prince Dhrishtadyumna also, penetrating into that large host, engaged with Drona in battle. The battle became furious. 56 Such a fierce encounter we had never seen or heard of before, O king, as that which now took place at sunrise of that day !57 The cars, O sire, were seen to be entangled with one another. The bodies of embodied creatures deprived of life were scattered all over the field.58 while proceeding towards another part of the field, were, on the way, assailed by others. Some, while flying away, were struck on their backs, and others, on their sides. 50 general engagement continued to rage fiercely. Soon, however, the morning Sun arose." "60

SECTION CLXXXVIII.

"Sanjaya continued,—'The warriors, O king, thus clad in mail on the field of battle, adored the thousand-rayed Āditya as he rose at morn.' When the thousand-rayed luminary, of splendour bright as that of burning gold, arose, and the world became illumined, the battle once more commenced.² The same soldiers that were engaged with each other before sunrise, once more fought with each other, O Bhārata, after the rise of the Sun.³ Horsemen engaged with car-warriors, and elephants

Generated on 2022-02-03 13:05 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112
Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google

with horsemen, and foot-soldiers with elephants, and horsemen with horsemen, and foot-soldiers with foot-soldiers.4 warriors engaged with car-warriors, and elephants with elephants, and horsemen with horsemen, O bull of Bharata's race. Sometimes unitedly and sometimes separately, the warriors fell upon one another in battle.5 Having fought vigorously in the night, many, tired with exertion, and weak with hunger and thirst, became deprived of their senses. The uproar, O bull of Bharata's race, made in consequence of the blare of conchs, the beat of drums, the roar of elephants, and the twang of outstretched bows drawn with force, touched the very heavens, O king! The noise, made also by rushing infantry and falling weapons,7-3 and neighing steeds and rolling cars, and shouting and roaring warriors, became tremendous. noise, increasing every minute, reached the heavens. The groans and wails of pain, of falling and fallen foot-soldiers and car-warriors and elephants, became exceedingly loud and pitiable as these were heard on the field.10-11 When the engagement became general, both sides slew each other as also their own men and animals.12 Hurled from the hands of heroes upon warriors and elephants, heaps of swords were seen on the field, resembling heaps of cloths on the washing ground.18 again, of uplifted and descending swords in heroic arms resembled that of cloths thrashed for wash.14 That general engagement then, in which the warriors encountered one another with swords and scimitars and lances and battle-axes, became exceedingly dreadful.15 The heroic combatants then caused a river there that ran its course towards the regions of the dead. blood of elephants and steeds and human beings formed its Weapons formed its fish in profusion. It was miry with blood and flesh. Wails of grief and pain formed its roar. Banners and cloths formed its froth. 16-17 Afflicted with shafts and darts, worn with exertion, spent with toil on the (previous) night, and exceedingly weakened, elephants and steeds, with limbs perfectly motionless, stood on the field.18 With their arms (in beautiful attitudes), and with their beautiful coats of mail, and heads decked with beautiful ear rings, the warriors, ad rued with implements of battle, looked exceedingly resplendent.*19 At that time, in consequence of the carnivorous animals and the dead and the dying, there was no path for the cars all over the field. Afflicted with shafts, steeds of the noblest breeds and high mettle, resembling elephants (in size and strength), worn out with toil, were seen to tremble as, with great efforts, they drew vehicles whose wheels had sunk in the Earth. The whole of that host, O Bharata, resembling the ocean for vastness, then became agitated, and afflicted, and inspired with terror, with the exception only of Drona and Arjuna. These two became the refuge, these two became the saviours, of the warriors of their respective sides.20-28 Others, encountering these two, proceeded to the abode of Yama. vast host of the Kurus became greatly agitated, and the Pānchālas, huddled together, became no longer distinguishable. During that great carnage of Kshatriyas on Earth, on that field of battle enhancing the terrors of the timid and looking like a crematorium, neither Karna, nor Drona, nor Arjuna, nor Yudhishthira, 24-26 nor Bhimasena, nor the twins, nor the Pānchāla prince, nor Sātyaki, nor Dusçāsana, nor Drona's son, nor Duryodhana, nor Suvala's son,27 nor Kripa, nor the ruler of the Madras, nor Kritavarman, nor others, nor my own self, nor the Earth, nor the points of the compass, se could be seen, O king, for all of them, mingled with the troops, were shrouded by clouds of dust. During the progress of that fierce and terrible battle, when that dusty cloud arose, 39 all thought that night had once more come over the scene. Neither the Kauravas, nor the Pānchālas, nor the Pāndavas, could be distinguished, so nor the points of the compass, nor the welkin, nor the Earth, nor even land, nor uneven land. The warriors, desirous of victory, slew foes and friends, in fact, all whom they could perceive by touch of their hands. The earthy dust that had arisen was soon dispelled by the winds that blew, and drenched by the blood that was shed. Elephants and steeds and car-warriors and footsoldiers, 31-88 bathed in blood, looked beautiful like the (celestial) forest of Pārijāta. Then Duryodhana, Karna, Drona, and Dusçāsana,84 these four (Kaurava) warriors, engaged in battle with four of the Pandava warriors. Duryodhana and his brothers. encountered the twins (Nakula and Sahadeva). 85 And Rādhā's son engaged with Vrikodara, and Arjuna with the son of Bharadwaja. All the troops, from every side, looked on those terrible encounters.86 The car-warriors (of both armies quietly) beheld that beautiful battle, that superhuman engagement between those fierce and foremost of car-warriors conversant with every mode of warfare, riding on their own beautiful cars that performed diverse delightful evolutions. Endued with great prowess, struggling vigorously and each solicitous of vanquishing the other,87-88 they covered each other with showers of shafts like the clouds at the close of summer (pouring torrents of rain). Those bulls among men, riding on their cars of solar effulgence, so looked beautiful like congregated masses of clouds in the autumnal sky. Then those warriors, O monarch, filled with wrath and desire of revenge, 40 mighty bowmen all, challenging, rushed at one another with great vigor like infuriate leaders of elephantine herds.41 Verily, O king, death does not take place till its hour comes, since all those warriors did not simultaneously perish in that battle.42 Strewn with lopped off arms and legs, and heads decked with beautiful ear-rings, and bows and arrows and lances and scimitars and battle-axes and (other kinds of) axes, and Nalikas and razorheaded arrows and cloth-yard shafts and darts and spears, and diverse kinds of beautiful armour, and beautiful cars broken into pieces, and slain elephants and standardless cars looking like cities, and vehicles dragged hither and thither with the speed of the wind by driverless steeds in great fright, and large numbers of well-decked warriors of great courage, and fallen ^{ 42} is read differently in the Bengal texts. The Bengal reading, however, is incorrect. In the first line, for tāsmin samāgame, the Bombay reading which I adopt is rājannanāgate. In the second line, instead of sarvena (ins. of sarva) the correct reading is sarve na, the last being the nagative particle. The palatal n is a mistake. It is the dental letter, meaning not. The sense of the passage is that so dreadful was that encounter that all the warriors would certainly have perished. The fact, however, that none of them still perished was due to the truth that death never appears until its proper hour comes.—T.

^{*} I adopt the Bombay reading of the first line of this verse.-T.

fans and coats of mail and standards, and ornaments and robes and fragrant garlands, and chains of gold and diadems and crowns and head-gears and rows of bells, and jewels worn on breasts, and cuirasses and collars and gems that adorn head-gears, the field of battle looked beautiful like the firmament bespangled with stars, 45-49

"Then there occurred an encounter between Duryodhana filled with wrath and desire of revenge and Nakula filled with the same feelings. 50 Madri's son cheerfully shooting hundreds of shafts, placed thy son on his right. At this loud cheers were bestowed upon him.51 Placed on the right by his cousin-brother in wrath, thy son, viz., king Duryodhana, filled with rage, began, in that battle, to wonderfully counteract Nakula from that very side.52 Thereupon Nakula, endued with great energy and acquainted with the diverse courses (in which a car may be conducted), began to resist thy son who was engaged in counteracting him from his right. Duryodhana, however, afflicting Nakula with showers of shafts and resisting him on every side,58-54 caused him to turn back. All the troops applauded that feat (of thy son). Then Nakula, addressing thy son, said, -Wait, Wait,-recollecting all his woes caused by thy evil counsels,' "55

SECTION CLXXXIX.

"Sanjaya said.—Then Dusçāsana, filled with wrath, rushed against Sahadeva, causing the Earth to tremble with the fierce speed of his car.' Mādri's son, however, that crusher of foes, with a broad-headed arrow, quickly cut off the head, decked with head-gear, of his rushing antagonist's driver.² From the celerity with which that act was accomplished by Sahadeva, neither Dusçāsana nor any of the troops knew that the driver's head had been cut off.³ The reins being no longer held by anybody, the steeds ran at their will. It was then that Dusçāsana knew that his driver had been slain.⁴ Conversant with the management of steeds, that foremost of car-warriors, himself restraining his steeds in that battle, fought beautifully and with great activity and skill.⁵ That feat of his was applauded by friends and foes, since, riding on that driverless car, he careered fearlessly in that battle. Then Sahadeva pierced those steeds with keen shafts. Afflicted with those shafts, they quickly ran away, careering hither and thither." For catching hold of the reins, he once laid aside his bow, and then he took up his bow for using it, laying aside the reins. those opportunities the son of Madri covered him with arrows. Then Karna, desirous of rescuing thy son, rushed to that spot. Thereupon Vrikodara, with great care, pierced Karna in the chest and arms with three broad-headed shafts sped from his bow drawn to its fullest stretch.10 Struck with those shafts like a snake with a stick, Karna stopped and began to resist Bhimasena, shooting keen shafts." Thereupon a fierce battle took place between Bhima and Rādhā's son. Both of them roared like bulls, and the eyes of both were expanded (with rage).12 Excited with wrath, and rushing towards each other. with great speed, they roared at each other. Those two delighters in battle were then very close to each other. were they that they could not easily shoot their shafts at each Thereupon an encounter with maces happened. Bhimasena speedily broke with his mace the Kuvara of Karna's car. That feat of his, O king, seemed highly wonderful. valiant son of Radha, taking up a mace, hurled it at Bhima's Bhima, however, broke it with a mace of his own. taking up a heavy mace once more, Bhima hurled it at Adhiratha's son.19-16 Karna struck that mace with numerous shafts of beautiful wings sped with great force, and once again with Thus struck with Karna's shafts, that mace turned back towards Bhima, like a snake afflicted with incanta-With the re-bound of that mace, the huge standard of Bhima¹⁷⁻¹⁸ broke and fell down. Struck with that same mace, Bhima's driver also became deprived of his senses. Bhima, mad with rage, sped eight shafts at Karna,19 and his standard, and bow, and leathern fence, O Bhārata. Bhimasena, that slayer of hostile heroes, with the greatest care, O Bhārata, cut off, with those keen shafts, the standard, the bow, and the leathern fence of Karna. The latter then, viz., the son of Rādhā, taking up another invincible and golddecked bow, shot a number of shafts, and quickly slew Bhima's steeds of the hue of bears, and then his two Pārshni drivers.²⁰⁻²² When his car was thus injured, Bhima, that chastiser of foes, quickly jumped into the car of Nakula like a lion jumping down upon a mountain summit.²⁸

"Meanwhile Drona and Arjuna, those two foremost of carwarriors, preceptor and pupil, both skilled in weapons, O monarch, fought with each other in battle,24 stupifying the eyes and minds of men with their lightness in the use of weapons and the sureness of their aim, and with the motions of their cars.25 Beholding that battle, the like of which had never been witnessed before, between preceptor and pupil, the other warriors abstained from fighting with each other and trembled.26 Each of those heroes, displaying beautiful evolutions of his car, wished to place the other on his right.27 The warriors present there beheld their prowess and became filled with wonder. Indeed, that great battle between Drona and the son of Pandu resembled that, O monarch, between a couple of hawks in the welkin for the sake of a piece of meat. Whatever feats Drona performed for vanquishing the son of Kunti, 28-29 were all counteracted by Arjuna performing similar feats. When Drona failed to gain any ascendancy over the son of Pandu, the son of Bharadwaja, that warrior acquainted with the course of all weapons, invoked into existence the Aindra, the Pacupata, the Tāshtra, the Vā yavya, and the Yāmya weapons. 50-51 As soon as those weapons issued from Drona's bow, Dhananjaya destroyed them quickly. When his weapons were thus duly destroyed by Arjuna with his own weapons,32 Drona shrouded the son of Pandu with the mightiest of celestial Every weapon, however, that Drona shot at Partha from desire of vanquishing the latter, was shot by Partha in return for baffling it. Seeing all his weapons, even the celestial ones, duly baffled by Arjuna, Drona applauded the latter in That chastiser of foes, O Bharata, regarded himself his heart. superior to every person in the world acquainted with weapons, in consequence of Arjuna having been his pupil. Thus resisted by Partha in the midst of all those illustrious warriors, 35-56 Drona, struggling with vigor, cheerfully resisted Arjuna (in return), wondering all the while. Then the celestials and Gandharvas in thousands, 87 and Rishis and bodies of Siddhas, were seen on all sides in the welkin. Filled with (those as also with) Apsaras and Yakshas and Rakshasas, 38 it once more seemed that the welkin was darkened by gathering clouds. An invisible voice, fraught with the praises of Drona and the high-souled Partha, was heard to repeatedly course through the When in consequence of the weapons shot by Drona and Partha all sides seemed ablaze with light, $5-40 the Siddhas and the Rishis that were present, said,—This is no human, nor Asura, nor Rākshasa, nor celestial, nor Gandharva battle! Without doubt this is a high Brahma encounter! This battle is exceedingly beautiful and highly won-We have never seen or heard of its like !41-42 times the preceptor prevails over the son of Pandu, and sometimes the son of Pandu prevails over Drona! No one can find any difference between them !48 If Rudra, dividing his own self into two portions, fights himself with himself, then may an instance be had to match this. No where else can an instance be found to match it!44 Science, gathered in one place, exists in the preceptor. Science and means are in the son of Heroism in one place is in Drona. Heroism and might are in the son of Pandu.45 None of these warriors can be If they wish, both of them can withstood by foes in battle. destroy the universe with the gods !46-Beholding those two bulls among men, O monarch, all invisible and visible creatures said these words.47 The high-souled Drona then, in that battle, invoked into existence the Brahma weapon, afflicting Partha and all invisible beings.48 Thereupon the Earth with her mountains and waters and trees trembled. Fierce winds began to blow. The seas swelled in agitation.49 The combatants of the Kuru and the Pandava armies, as also all other creatures, became inspired with fear, when that illustrious warrior uplifted that weapon. so Then Partha, O monarch, fearlessly baffled that weapon by a Brāhma weapon of his own, at which all that agitation in nature was speedily pacified.⁵¹ At last when none of them could vanquish his antagonist in single combat, a general engagement took place between the two hosts, causing a great confusion on the field.⁵⁵ During the progress of that dreadful battle between Drona and the son of Pāndu (as also of that general engagement), once more, O king, nothing could be distinguished.⁵⁵ The welkin became covered with dense showers of shafts as if with masses of clouds, and creatures ranging the air could no longer find a passage through their element.' "⁵⁴

SECTION CXC.

"Sanjaya said,-'During that fearful carnage of men and steeds and elephants, Dusçasana, O king, encountered Dhrishta-Mounted upon his golden car and exceedingly afflicted with the shafts of Dusçasana, the Panchala prince wrathfully showered his shafts upon thy son's steeds.2 Covered with the shafts of Prishata's son, O king, Dusçasana's car, with standard and driver, soon became invisible. Afflicted with those showers of arrows, Dusçasana, O monarch, became unable to stay before the illustrious prince of the Panchalas. Forcing, by means of his shafts, Dusçasana to turn back, Prishata's son, scattering his arrows, proceeded against Drona in that battle.5 At that time Hridika's son Kritavarman, with three of his uterine brothers, appeared on the scene and attempted to oppose Dhrishtadyumna. Those bulls among men, however, viz., the twins (Nakula and Sahadeva), following in the wake of Dhrishtadyumna who was thus proceeding like a blazing fire towards Drona, began to protect him. Then all those great car-warriors, endued with might and excited with rage, began to strike one another, making death their goal.8 Of pure souls and pure conduct, O king, and keeping heaven in view, they fought according to righteous methods, desirous of vanquishing one another.9 Of stainless lineage and stainless acts, and endued with great intelligence, those rulers of men, keeping heaven in view, fought fair battles with another.10 There was nothing unfair in that fight and no weapon was used that is regarded unfair. No barbed arrows, nor those called nālikas, nor those that are poisoned, nor those with heads made of horns, nor those equipt with many pointed heads, nor those made of the bones of bulls and elephants, nor those having two heads, nor those having rusty heads, nor those that are not straight-going, were used by any All of them used simple and fair weapons and of them. *11-12 desired to win both fame and regions of great blessedness by fighting fairly.13 Between those four warriors of thy army and those three of the Pandava side, the battle that took place was exceedingly dreadful but divested of everything unfair.14 Dhrishtadyumna, exceedingly quick in the use of weapons, beholding those brave and mighty car-warriors of thy army checked by the twins (Nakula and Sahadeva), proceeded towards Drona.15 Checked by those two lions among men, those four heroic warriors encountered the former like the winds assailing a couple of mountains (standing on their way).16 Each of the twins-those great car-warriors-was engaged with a couple of antagonists. Meanwhile Dhrishtadyumna poured showers of arrows upon Drona.17 Beholding the invincible prince of the Panchalas proceeding against Drona, and those four heroes (of his own army) engaged with the twins, Duryodhana, O monarch, rushed to that spot, scattering showers of Seeing this, Sātyaki quickly approachblood-drinking arrows. Those two tigers among men, viz., the ed the Kuru king.18-19 two descendants of Kuru and Madhu, approaching each other, became desirous of striking each other in battle.20 Recalling to mind their behaviour towards each other in childhood and reflecting with pleasure on the same, they gazed at each other and smiled repeatedly.21 Then king Duryodhana (mentally) blaming his own conduct, addressed his ever dear friend Satyaki, and said,22-Fie on wrath, O friend, and fie on vindictiveness! Fie on Kshatriya usage, and fie on might and prowess,23 since thou aimest thy weapons at me and I too am aiming at thee, O bull of Cini's race! In those days thou wert dearer to me than life itself, and I also was such to thee !24 Alas, all those

^{*} All these arrows inflicted bad wounds and could not be easily ex-Shafts of crooked courses were condemned because the combatants could not easily baffle them, not knowing at whom they would fall. -T.

"Sanjaya said,—'Unto king Duryodhana who said so, Sātyaki replied,—This has always been the usage of Kshatriyas, viz., they have to fight even with their preceptors ! If I am dear to thee, O king, then slay me without any delay! Through thee, O bull of Bharata's race, I would then enter the regions of the righteous! 12 Exhibit, without delay, all thy might and prowess! I do not desire to witness this great calamity of friends!52—Having replied and rejoined thus, Satyaki, O monarch, fearlessly and in utter disregard of life, quickly advanced against Duryodhana.88 Beholding him advance, thy son received him. Indeed, O king, thy son poured on him of Cini's race a perfect shower of arrows.84 Then commenced a terrible battle between those lions of Kuru's and Madhu's races, resembling an encounter between an elephant and a lion. s Duryodhana, filled with wrath, pierced the invincible Satyaki with many keen arrows shot from his bow drawn to its fullest stretch. 86 Sātyaki quickly pierced the Kuru prince in return with fifty keen shafts in that battle and once more with twenty and again with ten shafts.87 Then in that encounter, O king, thy son, smiling the while, pierced Satyaki in return with thirty arrows shot from his bowstring drawn to his ear. 53 Shooting then a razor-headed arrow, he cut off in twain the bow, with arrow fixed thereon, of Sātyaki. Endued with great lightness of hand, the latter then, taking up a tougher bow, shot showers of shafts at thy son. As those lines of arrows advanced for compassing the death of Duryodhana, $9-40 the latter, O king, cut them into pieces, at which the troops With great swiftness, the Kuru king afflicted shouted loudly. Satyaki with three and seventy shafts equipt with wings of gold and steeped in oil and shot from his bow drawn to its All those arrows of Duryodhana, as also his fullest stretch. bow with arrow fixed thereon, 41-42 Satyaki quickly cut off. The Satwata hero then poured showers of shafts on his anta-Deeply pierced by Sātyaki, and feeling great pain, Duryodhana, O king, in great distress, sought shelter in an-Having rested awhile and refreshed himself, thy son once more advanced against Sātyaki, 48-44 shooting showers Smilingly, O king, Sātyaki of shafts at the latter's car. ceaselessly shot multitudes of shafts at Duryodhana's car. shafts of both mingled with one another in the welkin. consequence of those arrows thus shot by both falling fast on every side, 45-46 loud sounds like those of a raging fire consuming a mighty forest arose there. With those thousands of arrows shot by both, the Earth was densely covered.47 The welkin also became filled therewith. Beholding then that foremost of car-warriors, viz., that here of Madhu's race, to be mightier than Duryodhana,48 Karna rushed to that spot. desirous of rescuing thy son. The mighty Bhimasena, however, could not brook that attempt of Karna49. He, therefore. quickly proceeded against Karna, shooting innumerable shafts. Cutting off all those shafts of Bhima with the greatest ease, Karnaso cut off Bhima's bow, arrows, and driver also, with his Then Pandu's son Bhima, filled with rage, took up a mace, 51 and crushed the bow, standard, and driver of his antagonist in that encounter. The mighty Bhima also broke one of the wheels of Karna's car.52 Karna, however, stood on that car of his which had one of its wheels broken, immovable as (Meru) the king of mountains. That beautiful car of his which had now only one wheel, was borne by his steeds,58 like the single-wheeled car of Surya drawn by the seven celes-Incapable of brooking the feats of Bhimasena, Karna, continued to fight with the latter,54 using diverse kinds of shafts in profusion and diverse kinds of other weapons in that Bhimasena also, filled with wrath, continued to fight with the Suta's son. 65 When the engagement became general and confused, (Yudhishthira) the son of Dharma, addressing all the foremost of warriors among the Panchalas and the Matsyas, said,56-They that are our life, they that are our heads, they amongst us that are endued with great strength, -those bulls among men,-are all engaged with the Dhartarashtras!57 Why do ye then stand thus as if stipified and deprived of your senses? Proceed thither where those car-warriors of my army are fighting !68 Driving away your fears and keeping in view the duties of Kshatriyas, (engage in fight,) for then, conquering or slain, ye will gain desirable goals!" If you prove victors, you may perform diverse sacrifices with profuse gifts to Brahmanas! If, on the other hand, you are slain, becoming then the equals of the celestials, you will win many regions of blessedness!60-Thus urged by the king, those heroic and mighty car-warriors engaged in battle, observant of Kshatriya duties, quickly proceeded against Drona.61 The Panchalas then, from one side, assailed Drona with innumerable arrows, while others headed by Bhimasena began to resist him from another side. 42 The Pandavas had three crookedminded mighty car-warriors amongst them. They were Bhimasena and the twins (Nakula and Sahadeva). These addressed Dhananjaya loudly and said, 48-Rush, O Arjuna, with speed and drive away the Kurus from Drona's vicinity! preceptor can be deprived of his protectors, the Panchalas may then slay him easily !64-Thus addressed, Partha suddenly rushed against the Kauravas, while Drona rushed against the Pānchālas headed by Dhrishtadyumna. Indeed, on that the fifth day (of Drona's command), those heroic combatants, O Bharata, were grinded and crushed with great celerity (by Bharadwāja's son)." '65

SECTION CXCI.

"Sanjaya said,—'Then Drona caused a great carnage among the Pānchālas like the slaughter caused by Cakra himself in rage amongst the Dinavas in days of yore. The great carwarriers of the Pandava army, endued with mighty and energy, though slaughtered, O king, by Drona's weapons, were not yet afeared of Drona in that battle. Indeed, O monarch, those mighty car-warriors, viz., the Panchalas and the Srinjayas, all rushed against Drona himself for fighting with him. Loud and fierce were the yells they uttered as they rushed towards Drona for encompassing him on all sides and were slaughtered by him with shafts and darts.4 Beholding the slaughter of the Panchalas in that battle by the illustrious Drona, and seeing his weapons overwhelm all sides, fear entered the hearts of the Pāndavas. Beholding that dreadful carnage of steeds and human beings in that battle, the Pandavas, O monarch, became hopeless of victory. (They began to say unto each other)-Is it not evident that Drona, that warrior conversant with the mightiest of weapons, will consume us all like a raging conflagration consuming a heap of straw in the season of spring? There is none competent to even look at him in battle! versant with the ways of morality, Arjuna (who alone is a match for him) will not fight with him !8-Beholding the sons of Kunti afflicted with the shafts of Drona and inspired with fear, Keçava, endued with great intelligence and devoted to their welfare, addressed Arjuna and said, - This foremost of all bowmen is incapable of being ever vanquished by force in battle by the very gods with Vasava at their head !10 however, he lays aside his weapons, he becomes capable of being slain on the field by even human beings! Casting aside virtue, ye sons of Pandu, adopt now some contrivance for gaining the victory," so that Drona of the golden car may not slay us all in battle! Upon the fall of (his son) Açwatthaman, he will cease to fight, I think.12 Let some man, therefore, tell him that Acwatthaman hath been slain in battle!-This advice, however, O king, was not approved by Kunti's son Dhananjaya.18 Others approved of it. But Yudhishthria accepted it with great difficulty. Then the mighty-armed Bhima, O king, slew with a mace a foe-crushing, terrible, and huge elephant, named Açwatthaman, of his own army, belonging to Indravarman the chief of the Malavas,14-18 Approaching Drona then in that battle, with some bashfulness Bhimasena began to exclaim aloud,—Açwatthāman hath been slain!16—That elephant named Açwatthāman having been thus slain, Bhima spoke of Açwatthaman's slaughter. Keeping the true fact within his mind, he said what was untrue.17 Hearing those highly disagreeable words of Bhima, and reflecting upon them, Drona's limbs seemed to dissolve like sand in water.18 Recollecting, however, the prowess of his son, he soon came to regard that intelligence as false. Hearing, therefore, of his slaughter, Drona did not become unmanned.19 Indeed, soon recovering his senses, he became comforted, remembering that his son was incapable of being resisted by foes.20 Rushing towards the son of Prishata and desirous of slaying that here who had been ordained as his slayer, he covered him with a thousand keen shafts equipt with kanka feathers.21 Then twenty thousand Panchala car-warriors of great energy covered him, while he was thus careering in battle, with their shafts.22 Completely shrouded with those shafts, we could not any longer see that great car-warrior who then resembled. O monarch, the Sun covered with clouds in the season of rains.23 Filled with wrath and desirous of compassing the destruction of those brave Panchalas, that mighty car-warrior, that scorcher of foes, viz., Drona, dispelling all those shafts of the Panchālas, then invoked into existence the Brāhma weapon. At that time Drona looked resplendent like a smokeless and blazing fire.24-25 Once more filled with rage, the valiant son of Bharadwaja, slaughtering all the Somakas, seemed to be invested with great splendour.26 In that dreadful battle he felled the heads of the Panchalas and cut off their massive arms looking like spiked maces and decked with golden ornaments.27 Indeed, those Kshatriyas, slaughtered in battle by Bharadwaja's son, fell down on the Earth and lay scattered like trees uprooted by the tempest.28 In consequence of fallen elephants and steeds, O Bharata, the Earth, miry with flesh and blood, became impassable.29 Having slain twenty thousand Panchala car-warriors, Drona, in that battle, shone resplendent like a smokeless and blazing fire. 30 Once more filled with rage, the valiant son of Bharadwaja cut off, with a broad-headed arrow, the head of Vasudana from his trunk. 11 Once more slaving five hundred Matsyas, and six thousand elephants, he slew ten thousand steeds.52 Beholding Drona stationed on the field for the extermination of the Kshatriya race, the Rishis Vicwāmitra, and Jamadagni, and Bharadwāja, and Gautama, and Vacishtha, and Kacyapa, and Atri, and the Sikatas, the Pricnis, Garga, the Vālikhilyas, the Marichipas, the descendants of Bhrigu and Angiras, and diverse other sages of subtile forms. quickly came thither with the Bearer of sacrificial libations at their head, and, desirous of taking Drona away unto the region of Brahman, 88-35 addressed Drona, that ornament of battle, and said,—Thou art fighting unrighteously. of thy death is come. se Laying aside thy weapons in battle, O Drona, behold us stationed here! After this, it behoveth thee not to perpetrate such exceedingly cruel deeds! 57 Thou art versed in the Vedas and their branches. Thou art devoted to the duties enjoined by truth. Especially, thou art a Brahmana! Such acts do not become thee! 88 Lay aside thy weapons. Drive away the film of error that shrouds thee. Adhere now to The period for which thou art to dwell in the the eternal path. world of men is now full. 89 Thou hast, with the Brahma weapon, burnt men on Earth that are unacquainted with weap-This act that thou hast perpetrated, O regenerate one, is not righteous!40 Lay aside thy weapons in battle without delay, O Drona! Do not wait longer on Earth! Dot not, O regenerate one, again perpetrate such a sinful act!41-Hearing these words of theirs as also those spoken by Bhimasena, and beholding Dhrishtadyumna before him, Drona became exceedingly cheerless in battle.42 Burning with grief and exceedingly afflicted, he enquired of Kunti's son Yudhishthira as to his son (Acwatthaman) had been slain or not.48 Drona firmly believed that Yudhishthira would never speak an untruth even for the sake of the sovereignty of the three worlds.44 For this reason that bull among Brahmanas asked Yudhishthira and not any body else. He had hoped for truth from Yudhishthira from the latter's infancy.45

"'Meanwhile, O monarch, Govinda, knowing that Drona, that foremost of warriors, was capable of sweeping all the Pandavas off the face of the Earth, became much distressed. Addressing Yudhishthira he said, 46-If Drona fighteth, filled with rage, for even half a day, I tell thee truly, thy army will then be annihilated !47 Save us then from Drona! Under such circumstances, falsehood is better than truth! By telling an untruth for saving a life one is not touched by sin.48 There is no sin in untruth spoken unto women, or in marriages, or for saving kine, or for rescuing a Brahmana.  - While Govinda and Yudhishthira were thus talking with each other, Bhimasena (addressing the king) said, -As soon, O monarch, as I heard of the means by which the high-souled Drona might be slain, so putting forth my prowess in battle I immediately slew a mighty elephant, like unto the elephant of Cakra himself, belonging to Indravarman, the chief of the Malavas, who was standing within thy army. I then went to Drona and told him,-Acwatthaman has been slain, O Brahmana! Cease then to fight!51-59-Verily, O bull among men, the preceptor did not believe in the truth of my words. Desirous of victory as thou art, accept the advice of Govinda !58 Tell Drona, O king, that the son of Caradwat's daughter is no more! Told by thee, that bull among Brahmanas will never fight !54 Thou, O ruler of men, art reputed to be truthful in the three worlds.-Hearing those words of Bhima and induced by the counsels of Krishna,55 and owing also to the inevitability of destiny, 0 monarch, Yudhishthira made up his mind to say what he was Fearing to utter an untruth, but earnestly desirous of victory, Yudhishthira distinctly said that Acwatthaman was dead, adding indistinctly the word elephant (after the Before this, Yudhishthira's car had stayed at a height of four fingers' breadth from the surface of the Earth. " After, however, he had said that untruth, his (vehicle and) animals touched the Earth. Hearing those words from Yudhishthira, the mighty car warrior Drona, 58 afflicted with grief for the (supposed) death of his son, yielded to the influence of despair. At the words again of the Rishis, he regarded himself a great offender against the high-souled Pāndavas. Hearing now about the death of his son, he became perfectly cheerless; and filled with anxiety upon beholding Dhrishtadyumna, Oking, that chastiser of foes could not fight as before." "55-60"

^{*} This verse is omitted in the Bombay text. There can be no doubt, however, about its genuineness.—T.

SECTION CXCII.

"Sanjaya said,—'Beholding Drona filled with great anxiety and almost deprived of his senses by grief, Dhrishtadyumna, the son of the Panchala king, rushed at him.1 That hero had, for the destruction of Drona, been obtained by Drupada, that ruler of men, at a great sacrifice, from the bearer of sacrificial libations.2 Desirous of slaying Drona, he now took up a victorygiving and formidable bow whose twang resembled the roll of the clouds, whose string was possessed of great strength, and which was irrefragible and celestial. And he fixed on it a fierce arrow resembling a snake of virulent poison and possessed of the splendour of fire. That arrow, resembling a fire of fierce flames, while within the circle of his bow, looked like the autumnal Sun of great splendour within a radiant circle. 2-5 Beholding that blazing bow bent with force by Prishata's son, the troops regarded that to be the last hour (of the world). Seeing that arrow aimed at him, the valiant son of Bharadwaja thought that the last hour of his body had come. ceptor prepared with care to baffle that shaft. The weapons, however, of that high-souled one, O monarch, no longer appeared at his bidding. His weapons had not been exhausted although he had shot them ceaselessly for four days and one night. On the expiry, however, of the third part of that the fifth day, his arrows became exhausted. Seeing the exhaustion of his arrows, and afflicted with grief on account of his son's death, and in consequence also of the unwillingness of the celestial weapons to appear at his bidding,10 he desired to lay

^{*} The celestial weapons were all living agents that appeared at the bidding of him who knew how to invoke them. They abandoned, however, the person whose death was imminent, although invoked with the usual formulæ.—T.

aside his weapons, urged thereto by the words of the Rishis also. Though filled with great energy, he could not, however, fight as before.11 Then taking up another celestial bow that Angiras had given him, and certain arrows that resembled a Brahmana's curse, he continued to fight with Dhrishtadyumna.12 He covered the Panchala prince with a thick shower of arrows, and filled with rage, mangled his angry antagonist.18 With his own keen shafts he cut off into a hundred fragments those of the prince as also the latter's standard and He then felled his antagonist's driver.14 Then Dhrishtadyumna, smiling, took up another bow, and pierced Drona with a keen shaft in the centre of the chest.16 Deeply pierced therewith and losing his self-possession in that encounter, that mighty bowman then, with a sharp and broad-headed arrow, once more cut off Dhrishtadyumna's bow.16 Indeed, the invincible Drona then cut off all the weapons, O king, and all the bows that his antagonist had, with the exception only of his mace and sword.17 Filled with rage, he then pierced the angry Dhrishtadyumna, O chastiser of foes, with nine keen arrows capable of taking the life of every foe.18 Then the mighty car-warrior Dhrishtadyumna of immeasurable soul, invoking into existence the Brāhma weapon, caused the steeds of his own car to be mingled with those of his foe's.19 Endued with the speed of the wind, those steeds that were red and of the hue of pigeons, O bull of Bharata's race, thus mingled together, looked exceedingly beautiful.20 Indeed, O king, those steeds thus mingled together on the field of battle, looked beautiful like roaring clouds in the season of rains, charged with lightning.21 Then that twice-born one of immeasurable soul cut off the shaft-joints, the wheel-joints, and (other) car-joints of Dhrishtadyumna, 23 Deprived of his bow, and made carless and steedless and driverless, the heroic Dhrishtadyumna, fallen into great distress, grasped a mace.23 Filled with rage, the mighty car-warrior Drona of unbaffled prowess, by means of a number of keen shafts, cut off that mace while it was on the point of being hurled at him.24 Beholding his mace cut off by Drona with his arrows, that tiger among men, (viz., the Panchala prince), took up a spotless sword and a bright shield decked with a hundred moons.25 Without doubt, under those circumstances, the Panchala prince determined to make an end of that foremost of preceptors, that high-souled warrior."6 times sheltering himself in his car-box and sometimes riding on his car-shaft, the prince moved about, uplifting his sword and whirling his bright shield. The mighty car-warrior Dhrishtadyumna, desirous of achieving, from folly, a difficult feat, hoped to pierce the chest of Bhardwaja's son Sometimes he stayed upon the yoke, and in that battle.28 sometimes under the haunches of Drona's red steeds. movements of his were highly applauded by all the troops.  while he stayed amid the trappings of the or behind those red steeds, Drona found no opportunity to All this seemed exceedingly wonderful. 80 movements of both Drona and Prishata's son in that battle resembled those of a hawk careering through the welkin for a piece of meat. 81 Then Drona, by means of a dart, pierced the white steeds of his antagonist, one after another, not striking, however, the red ones amongst them (that belonged to himself). Deprived of life, those steeds of Dhrishta. dyumna fell down upon the Earth. Thereupon the red steeds of Drona himself, O king, were freed from the entanglements of Dhristadyumna's car. 33 Beholding his steeds slain by that foremost of Brahmanas, Prishata's son, that mighty car-warrior, that foremost of fighters, could not brook it. 54 Though deprived of his car, still that foremost of all swordsmen, armed with his sword, sprang towards Drona, O monarch, like Vinatā's son (Garuda) making a swoop at a snake. The form, O king, of Dhrishtadyumna at that time when he sought to slay the son of Bharadwaja resembled the form of Vishnu himself in days of yore when at the point of slaying Hiranyakaçipu. 86 He performed diverse evolutions. In fact, O Kauravya, the son of Prishata, careering in that battle, exhibited the well-known one and twenty different kinds of motion.37 Armed with the sword, and shield in hand, Prishata's son wheeled about, and whirled his sword on high, and made side thrusts, and rushed forward, and ran sideways, and leapt high, and assailed the flanks of his antagonists and receded backwards, and closed with his foes, and pressed them Having practised them well, he also showed the evolutions called Bhārata, Kauçika, and Sātwata, as he careered in that battle for compassing the destruction of Drona. Beholding those beautiful evolutions of Dhrishtadyumna as he careered on the field, sword and shield in hand, $8-40 all the warriors, as also the celestials assembled there, were filled with wonder. The regenerate Drona then, shooting a thousand arrows in the thick of fight, cut off the sword of Dhrishtadyumna as also his shield decked with a hundred moons. Those arrows that Drona shot, while fighting from such a near point, were of the length of a span.41-42 Such arrows are used only in None else have arrows of that kind, except Caraclose fight. dwat's son (Kripa), and Partha, and Açwatthaman and Karna.42 Praddyumna and Yuyudhana have, and Abhimanyu also had, such arrows. Then the preceptor, desirous of slaying his disciple who was unto him even as his own son, fixed on his bowstring a strong shaft endued with great impetuosity. That shaft, however, Satyaki cut off by means of ten arrows,44-45 in the very sight of thy son as also of the high-souled Karna, and thus rescued Dhrishtadyumna who was on the point of succumbing to Drona.46 Then Keçava and Dhananjaya beheld Sātvaki of prowess incapable of being baffled, who, O Bhārata, was thus careering in the car-tracks (of the Kuru warriors) and within the range of the shafts of Drona and Karna and Kripa, Saying, - Excellent, Excellent! - both of them loudly applauded Sātyaki of unfading glory, who was thus destroying the celestial weapons of all those warriors. Then Keçava and Dhananjaya rushed towards the Kurus.47-49 Addressing Krishna, Dhananjaya said,-Behold, O Keçava, that perpetuator of Madhhu's race, viz., Sātyaki of true prowess, sporting before the preceptor and those mighty car-warriors, and gladdening me and the twins and Bhima and king Yudhishthira !50-51 acquired by practice and without insolence, behold that enhancer of the fame of the Vrishnis, viz., Sātyaki, careering in battle, sporting the while with those mighty car-warriors ! All these troops, as also the Siddhas (in the welkin), beholding him invincible in battle, are filled with wonder, and applauding him, saying,—Excellent, Excellent!—Indeed, O king, the warriors of both armies all applauded the Sātwata hero, in consequence of his feats." "

[·] I adopt the Bombay reading .- T.

SECTION CXCIII.

"Sanjaya said,—'Beholding those feats of the Satwata hero, Duryodhana and others, filled with rage, quickly encompassed the grandson of Cini on all sides.1 Kripa and Karna, as also thy sons, O sire, in that battle, quickly approaching the grandson of Cini, began to strike him with keen arrows.2 king Yudhishthira, and the two other Pandavas, viz., the two sons of Mādri, and Bhimasena of great might, surrounded Sātyaki (for protecting him).8 Karna, and the mighty carwarrior Kripa, and Duryodhana and others, all resisted Sātyaki, pouring showers of arrows on him.4 The grandson of Cini, however, contending with all those great car-warriors, baffled, O monarch, that terrible downpour of arrows so suddenly created by his foes. Indeed, in that dreadful battle, Sātyaki, by means of his own celestial weapons, duly resisted all those celestial weapons aimed at him by those illustrious warriors.6 The field of battle became full of many cruel sights upon that encounter of those royal combatants, resembling that scene of yore when Rudra, filled with rage, had destroyed all creatures. Human arms and heads, and bows, O Bharata, and umbrellas displaced (from cars), and yak-tails,8 were seen lying in heaps on the field of battle. The Earth became thickly strewn with broken wheels and cars, and massive arms lopped off from trunks, and brave horsemen deprived of life. O foremost one among the Kurus, large numbers of warriors, mangled with falling arrows,9-10 were seen in that great battle to roll and writhe on the ground in agony or the last spasms of During the progess of that terrible battle resembling the encounter in days of old between the celestials and the Asuras," king Yudhishthira the just, addressing his warriors, said,—Putting forth all your vigor, rush, ye great car-warriors, against the Pot-born !12 Yonder the heroic son of Prishata is engaged with Drona! He is endeavouring, to the utmost of his might, to slay the son of Bharadwaja!13 from the aspect he is presenting in this great battle, it is evident that filled, with rage, he will today, overthrow Uniting together, all of you fight with the Potborn !- Thus ordered by Yudhishthira, the mighty car-warriors of the Srinjavas's all rushed with great vigor for slaying the son of Bharadwaja. That mighty car-warrior, viz., Bharadwaja's son, quickly rushed against those advancing warriors, knowing for certain that he would have to die. Drona of sure aim thus proceeded, the Earth trembled violent-Fierce winds began to blow, inspiring the (hostile) ranks with fear. Large meteors fell, seemingly issuing out of the Sun,18 blazing fiercely as they fell and foreboding great The weapons of Drona, O sire, seemed to blaze up.19 Cars seemed to produce loud rattles, and steeds to shed tears. The mighty car-warrior Drona seemed to be divested of his energies.20 His left eye and left hand began to twitch. holding Prishata's son again before him, and bearing in mind the words of the Rishis about his leaving the world for heaven, he became cheerless. He then desired to give up life by fighting fairly.21-22 Encompassed on all sides by the troops of Drupada's son. Drona began to career in battle, consuming large numbers of Kshatriyas. That grinder of foes, having slain four and twenty thousand Kshatriyas, then despatched to Yama's abode ten times ten thousand by means of his shafts of keen points.24 Exerting himself with care, he seemed to stand in that battle like a smokeless fire. For the extermination of the Kshatriya race, he then had recourse to the Brāhma weapon.25 The mighty Bhima then, beholding the illustrious and irresistible prince of the Panchalas carless weaponless, quickly proceeded towards him. 26 Beholding him striking at Drona from a near point, that grinder of foes took up Dhrishtadyumna on his own car, and said unto him,27-Save thee there is no other man that can venture to fight with the preceptor. Be quick in slaying him. The burden of his slaughter rests upon thee !28-Thus addressed by Bhima, the mighty-armed Dhrishtadyumna speedily took up a strong, new, and very superior bow capable of bearing a great strain.29 Filled with rage, and shooting his arrows in that battle at irressistible Drona, Dhrishtadyumna covered the preceptor, desirous of withstanding him. 80 Those two ornaments of battle then, both foremost of fighters and both filled with rage, invoked into existence the Brahma and diverse other celestial weapons. 31 Indeed O king, Dhrishtadyumna covered Drona with many mighty weapons in that encounter. Destroying all the weapons of Bharadwaj's son, the Panchala prince, 58 that warrior of unfading glory, began to slay the Vaçatis, the Civis, the Valhikas, and the Kurus, them, that is, who pro-Drona in that battle. Indeed, O king, shooting showers of arrows on all sides, Dhrishtadyumna at that time looked resplendent like the Sun himself shedding his thousands Drona, however, once more cut off the prince's bow and pierced the vitals of the prince himself with many arrows. Thus pierced, the prince felt great pain. 55 Then Bhima of great wrath, holding the car of Drona, O monarch, slowly said these words unto him, *6-If wretches amongst Brahmanas discontented with the avocations of their own order, but well versed in arms, did not fight, the Kshatriya order then would not have been thus exterminated !" Abstention from injury to all creatures hath been said to be the highest of all virtues. The Brahmana is the root of that virtue. As regards thyself again, thou art the foremost of all persons acquainted with Brahma. Slaying all these Mlecchas and other warriors, who, however, are all engaged in the proper avocations of their order, moved thereto by ignorance and folly, O Brahmana, and by the desire of wealth for benefiting sons and wives, indeed, for the sake of an only son, why dost thou not feel shame ?89-40 He for whom thou hast taken up weapons, and for whom thou livest, he, deprived of life, lieth today on the field of battle, unknown to thee and behind thy back!41 Yudhishthira the just hath told thee this. It behoveth thee not to doubt this fact !- Thus addressed by Bhima, Drona laid aside his bow.42 Desirous of laying aside all his weapons also, Bharadwāja's son of virtuous soul said aloud,—O Karna, O

Karna, O great bowman, O Kripa, O Duryodhana, I tell you

repeatedly, exert carefully in battle! Let no injury happen to you from the Pandavas! As regards myself, I lay aside my weapons !44.- Saying these words, he began to loudly take the name of Acwatthaman. Laying aside his weapons then in that battle, and sitting down on the terrace of his car, 46 he devoted himself to Yoga and assured all creatures, dispelling their fears. Beholding that opportunity, Dhrishtadyumna mustered all his energy.46 Laying down on his car his formidable bow with arrow fixed on the bowstring, he took up a sword, and jumping down from his vehicle, rushed quickly against Drona.47 All creatures, human and otherwise, uttered exclamations of woe, beholding Drona thus brought under Dhrishtadyumna's Loud cries of oh and alas were uttered, as also those of oh and fie. As regards Drona, abandoning his weapons he was then in a supremely tranquil state.49 Having said those words he had devoted himself to Yoga. Endued with great effulgence and possessed of high ascetic merit, he had fixed his heart on that Supreme and Ancient Being, viz., Vishnu. 50 Bending his face slightly down, and swelling his breast forward, and closing his eyes, and staying on the quality of Goodness, and disposing his heart to contemplation,51 and thinking on the monosyllabic Om representing Brahma, and remembering the puissant, supreme, and indestructible God of gods, the radiant Drona of high ascetic merit,52 the preceptor (of the Kurus and the Pandavas), repaired to heaven that is so difficult of being attained by even the pious. Indeed, when Drona thus proceeded to heaven, it seemed to us that there were then two Suns in the firmament⁵⁸. The whole welkin was ablaze and seemed to be one vast expanse of equable light when the Sun-like Bharadwaja of solar effulgence ascended to the skies.54 Within the twinkling of an eye, however, that effulgence disappeared. Confused sounds of joy were heard, uttered by the gladdened celestials,55 when Drona thus repaired to the region of Brahman, Dhrishtadyumna standing, unconscious of it all, beside him. Only we five amongst men, behelds the high-souled Drona rapt in Yoga proceed to the highest region of blessedness. These five were myself, Dhananjaya the son of Pritha, and Drona's son Acwatthaman, 57 and Vasudeva of Vrishni's race, and king Yudhishthira the just, the son All else, O king, could not see that glory of the wise Drona devoted to Yoga while passing out of the world. In fact, all human beings were unconscious of the fact that the preceptor attained to the supreme region of Brahma, a region mysterious to the very gods, and one that is the Indeed, none of them could see the precephighest of all. tor, that chastiser of foes, proceed to the region of Brahma, devoted to Yoga, in the company of the foremost of Rishis, his body mangled with arrows and bathed in blood, after he had laid aside his weapons. 88-61. As regards Prishata's son, though everybody cried fie on him, yet, casting his eyes on the lifeless Drona's head, he began to drag it.62 With his sword then, he lopped off from his foe's trunk that head, his foe remaining speechless the while. Having slain Bharadwaja's son, Dhrishtadyumna was filled with great joy,68 and uttered leonine shouts, whirling his sword. Of a dark complexion, with white locks hanging down to his ears, that old man of five and eighty years of age, used, for thy sake only, to career on the field of battle with the activity of a youth of sixteen. mighty-armed Dhananjava the son of Kunti (before Drona's head was cut off) had said,64-65-O son of Drupada, bring the preceptor alive, do not slay him !- He should not be slain !even thus all the troops also 66 had cried out. Arjuna, in particular, melted with pity, had cried out repeatedly. Disregarding, however, the cries of Arjuna as also those of all the kings, 67 Dhrishtadyumna slew Drona, that bull among men, on the terrace of his car. Covered with Drona's blood, Dhrishtadyumna then jumped from the car down upon the ground.68 Looking red like the Sun, he then seemed to be exceedingly fierce. The troops beheld Drona slain even thus in that battle.69 Then Dhrishtadyumna, that great bowman, O king, threw down that large head of Bharadwaja's son before the warriors of thy army. " Thy soldiers, O monarch, beholding the head of Bharadwaja's son, set their hearts on flight and ran away in all directions.71 Meanwhile Drona, ascending the skies, entered the stellar Through the grace of the Rishi Krishna (-Dwaipāyana)

the son of Satyavati, I witnessed, O king, the (true circumstances about the) death of Drona. I beheld that illustrious one proceeding, after he had ascended the sky, like a smokeless brand of blazing splendour. Upon the fall of Drona, the Kurus, the Pandavas, and the Srinjayas, all became cheerless 73-74 and ran away with great speed. The army then broke up. Many had been slain, and many wounded, by means of keen shafts.75 Thy warriors (in particular), upon the fall of Drona, seemed to be deprived of life. Having sustained a defeat, and being inspired with fear about the future,76 the Kurus regarded themselves deprived of both the worlds. Indeed, they lost Searching for the body of Bharadwaja's son, O monarch, on the field covered with thousands of headless trunks, the kings could not find it. The Pandavas, having gained the victory and great prospects of renown in the future,77-78 began to make loud sounds with their arrows and conchs, and utter loud leonine roars. Then Bhimasena, O king, and Dhrishtadyumna the son of Prishata," were seen in the midst of the (Pandava) host to embrace each other. ing the son of Prishata, that scorcher of foes, viz., Bhima, said, "-I will again embrace thee, O son of Prishata, as one crowned with victory, when that wretch of a Suta's son shall be slain in battle, as also that other wretch, viz., Duryodhana !81-Having said these words, Bhimasena the son of Pandu, filled with transports of joy, caused the Earth to tremble with the slaps on his armpits.  Terrified by that sound, thy troops ran away from battle, forgetting the duties of Kshatriyas and setting their hearts on flight.3 The Pandavas, having become victors, became very glad, O monarch, and they felt great happiness derived from the destruction of their foes in battle." "84 ^{} Deprived of both the worlds, having sustained a defeat, they lost this world, and flying away from the field, they committed a sin and lost the next world.—T.

SECTION CXCIV.

"Sanjaya said,—'Upon the fall of Drona, O king, the Kurus, afflicted with weapons, deprived of their leader, broken, and routed, became filled with grief.' Seeing their foes (the Pandavas) prevailing over them, they repeatedly trembled. eyes filled with tears, and hearts inspired with fear, they became, O king, melancholy, and cheerless, and destitute of exertion, and deprived of energy through grief. loud wails, they gathered round thy son. Covered with dust, trembling (with fear), casting vacant eyes on all sides, and their voice choked with tears, they resembled the Daityas after the fall of Hiranyaksha in days of yore. Surrounded by them all as if by small animals struck with fear, thy son, unable to stay in their midst, passed away.5 Afflicted with hunger and thirst, and scorched by the Sun, thy warriors then, O Bhārata, became exceedingly cheerless. Beholding the fall of Bharadwāja's son which was like unto the dropping of the Sun down upon the Earth or the drying up of the ocean or the transplantation of Meru or the defeat of Vasava, beholding that act incapable of being quietly witnessed, the Kauravas, O king, fled away in fear, terror lending them greater speed.7-8 ruler of the Gandharas (viz., Cakuni), behloding Drona of the golden car slain, fled, with the car-warriors of his division, with speed that was much greater. Even the Suta's son fled away in fear, taking with him his own vast division, that was retreating with great speed, with all its standards.10 The ruler of the Madras, viz., Calya, also, casting vacant looks, around, fled away in fear, taking with him his division teeming with cars and elephants and steeds.11 Caradwat's son Kripa, too, fled away, saying,-Alas, Alas,-taking with him his division of elephants and foot-soldiers the greater part of which had been Kritavarman, O king, also fled away, borne by his swift steeds, and surrounded by the remnant of his Bhoja, Kalinga, Āratta, and Vālhika troops.13 Uluka also, O king, beholding Drona slain, fled away with speed, afflicted with fear and accompanied by a large body of foot-soldiers.14

81

some and endued with youth, and repeated for his bravery, Dusçāsana, also, in great anxiety, fled away, surrounded by his elephant division.15 Taking with him ten thousand cars and three thousand elephants, Vrishasena also fled with speed at sight of Drona's fall.16 Accompanied by his elephants and horse and cars, and surrounded also by foot-soldiers, thy son, the mighty car-warrior Duryodhana, too, fled away, O king.17 Taking with him the remnant of the Samsaptakas whom Arjuna had not yet slaughtered, Sucarman, O king, fled away, beholding Drona slain.18 Riding on elephants and cars and steeds, all the warriors of the Kaurava army fled away from the field, seeing Drona of the golden car slain.19 Some urging their sires on, some their brothers, some their maternal uncles, some their sons, some their friends, the Kauravas fled away.20 Others urging on their brethren in arms, or their sisters' sons, or their kinsmen, fled away on all sides. 91 With dishevelled hair, and accoutrements loosened, all fled away in such a manner that even two persons could not be seen running together.—The Kuru army has been totally destroyed, even this was the belief of everybody.22 Others amongst thy troops, fled away, O king, throwing off their coats of mail. The soldiers loudly called upon one another, O buil of Bharata's race, saying, Wait, Wait, do not fly, but none of them that said so themselves stood on the field. Abandoning their vehicles and cars decked with ornaments,34 the warriors, riding on steeds or using their legs, fled away with great speed.

"While the troops, deprived of energy, were thus flying away with speed, so only Drona's son Açwatthāman, like a huge alligator coming up against the current of a stream, rushed against his foes. A fierce battle took place between him and many warriors headed by Cikhandin and the Prabhadrakas, the Pānchālas, the Chedis, and the Kaikayas. Slaying many warriors of the Pāndava army that were incapable of being defeated with ease, and escaping with difficulty from the press of battle, that hero, possessed of the tread of an infuriate elephant, saw the (Kaurava) host running away, resolved on flight. Proceeding towards Duryodhana, Drona's son, approaching the Kuru king, said,—Why, O Bhārata, are the troops flying away as if in fear?29 Although flying away, thus, O monarch, thou dost not yet rally them in battle! too, O king, dost not seem to be in thy usual frame of mind!10 Upon the slaughter of what lion among car-warriors, O monarch, hath thy force fallen into this plight? Tell me this. O Kaurava : 1 O king, these all that are headed (even) by Karna. wait not on the field! In no battle fought before did the army fly away thus !32 Hath any evil befallen thy troops, O Bharata? -Hearing these words of Drona's son on that occasion, Duryodhana, st that bull among kings, felt himself unable to impart the bitter intelligence. Indeed, thy son seemed to sink into an ocean of grief like a foundered boat. 84 Beholding Drona's son on his car, the king became bathed in tears. with shame, O monarch, the king then addressed Caradwat's son, saying. 85—Blessed be thou, say thou, before others, why the army is thus flying away !- Then Caradwat's son, O king, repeatedly feeling great anguish, told Drona's son how his sire had been slain.86

"'Kripa said,-Placing Drona, that foremost of car-warriors on the Earth, at our head, we commenced to fight with only When the battle commenced, the Kurus and the Panchalas. 87 the Somakas, mingled together, roared at one another and began to strike down one another with their weapons.88 the progress of that battle, the Dhartarashtras began to be Seeing this, thy sire, filled with rage, invoked into existence a celestial weapon.89 Indeed, Drona, that bull among men, having invoked the Brāhma weapon, slew his enemies with broad-headed arrows, by hundreds and thousands.40 ed by fate, the Pandavas, the Kaikayas, the Matsyas. and the Pānchālas, O foremost of regenerate ones, approaching Drona's car, began to perish.41 With his Brāhma weapon, Drona despatched unto Yama's abode a thousand brave warriors and two thousand elephants.42 Of a dark complexion, with his ^{} Celestial weapons were invoked with mantras, as explained in a pre vious note. They were forces which created all sorts of tangible weapons Here the Brahma weapon took the form of that the invoker desired. broad-headed arrows.-T.

gray locks hanging down to his ears, and full five and eighty years old, the aged Drona used to career in battle like a youth of sixteen.43 When the enemy's troops were thus afflicted and the kings were being slain, the Panchalas, though filled with the desire of revenge, turned back from the fight. When the enemy, turning back, partially lost their order, that vanquisher of foes, (viz., Drona), invoking celestial weapons into existence, shone resplendent like the risen Sun.45 Indeed, thy valiant sire, getting into the midst of the Pandavas, and having arrows for the rays that emanated from him, resembled the mid-day Sun at whom none could gaze.46 Scorched by Drona as if by the blazing Sun, they became cheerless and deprived of their energy and senses.47 Beholding them thus afflicted by Drona with his shafts, the slayer of Madhu, desirous of victory to the sons of Pandu, said these words:48-Truly, this foremost of all wielders of arms, this leader of the leaders of car-divisions, is incapable of being vanquished in battle by the slayer of Vritra himself! Ye sons of Pandu, laying aside righteousness, take care of victory, so that Drona of the golden car may not slay all of you in battle!50 he will not fight after the fall of Acwatthaman! Let some man falsely tell him that Açwatthaman has been slain in battle !61-Hearing these words, Kunti's son Dhananjaya approved them not. The advice, however, met with the approval of all others, and of even Yudhishthira with some diffi-Then Bhimasena, with a tincture of bashfulness, said unto thy sire, -Acwatthaman hath been slain!-Thy sire, however, did not believe him.58 Suspecting the intelligence to be false, thy father, so affectionate towards thee, enquired of Yudhishthira as to whether thou wert really dead or otherwise.54 Afflicted with the fear of a lie, solicitous at the same time of victory, Yudhishthira, beholding a mighty elephant, huge as a hill, and called Açwatthaman, belonging to the Mālava chief Indravarman, slain on the field by Bhima, approached Drona and answered him, saying, 55-56-He for whom thou wieldest weapons, he, looking upon whom thou livest, that ever dear son of thine, viz., Açwatthaman, hath been Deprived of life he lieth on the bare ground like a young lion!-Aware fully of the evil consequences of falsehood, the king spoke those words unto that best of Brahmanas, indistinctly adding elephant (after Acwatthaman). ing of the fall of his son, he began to wail aloud, afflicted with grief.58-59 Restraining (the force of) his celestial weapons, he fought not as before. Beholding him filled with anxiety and almost deprived of his senses by grief,60 the son of the Panchala king, of cruel deeds, rushed towards him. Seeing the prince who had been ordained as his slayer, Drona, versed in all truths about men and things, 61 abandoned all his celestial weapons and sat in Praya on the field of battle. Then Prishata's son, seizing Drona's head with his left hand, and disregarding the loud admonitions of all the heroes, cut off that head!—Drong should not be slain,—even these were the words uttered from every side !62-68 Similarly, Arjuna also, jumping down from his car, quickly ran towards Prishata's son, with arms upraised and repeatedly saying,64-O thou that art acquainted with the ways of morality, do not slay the preceptor but bring him alive !- Though thus forbidden by the Kauravas as also by Arjuna,65 thy sire, O bull among men, was slain by the cruel Dhrishtadyumna! For this, afflicted with fear, the troops are all flying away! Ourselves also. for the same reason, in great cheerlessness, O sinless one, are doing the same !66-

"Sanjaya continued,—'Hearing of the slaughter of his sire in battle, Drona's son, like a snake struck with the foot, became filled with fierce wrath.⁶⁷ And filled with rage, O sire, Açwatthāman blazed up in that battle, like a fire fed with a large quantity of fuel.⁶⁸ Squeezing his hands and grinding his teeth, and breathing like a snake, his eyes became red as blood.' "⁶⁹

SECTION CXCV.

"Dhritarāshtra said,—'Hearing, O Sanjaya, of the slaughter, by unrighteous means, of his aged sire, viz., the regenerate Drona, by Dhrishtadyumna, what did the valiant Açwatthāman say,' he, that is, in whom human and Vāruna

Generated on 2022-02-03 13:54 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

and Agneya and Brahma and Aindra and Narayana weapons are always present ? Indeed, learning that the preceptor, that foremost of virtuous men, had been unrighteously slain by Dhrishtadyumna in battle, what did Acwatthaman say? The high-souled Drona, having obtained the science of weapons from Rāma, had imparted (a knowledge of) all the celestial weapons unto his son, desirous of seeing the latter decked with all the accomplishments (of a warrior).4 There is only one person in this world, viz., the son, and none else, whom people desire to become superior to themselves. All highsouled preceptors have this characteristic, viz., that they impart all the mysteries of their science unto either sons or devoted disciples.6 Becoming his sire's pupil, O Sanjaya, and obtaining all those mysteries with every detail, the son of Caradwat's daughter has become a second Drona, and a great is equal to Rama in knowledge of Acwatthaman weapons, to Purandara in battle, to Kartavirya in energy, and Vrihaspati in wisdom.8 In fortitude that youth is equal to a mountain, and in energy to fire. In gravity he is equal to the Ocean, and in wrath to the poison of the snake." He is the foremost of all car-warriors in battle, a firm bowman, In speed he is equal to the wind itself; and above all fatigue. and he careers in the thick of fight like Yama in rage.10 While he is engaged in shooting arrows in battle, the very Earth becomes afflicted. Of prowess incapable of being baffled, that hero is never fatigued by exertion.11 Purified by the Vedas and by vows, he is a thorough master of the science Like Rama the son of Dacaratha, he is, like the ocean, incapable of being agitated.18 Hearing that the preceptor, that foremost of righteous persons, had been unrighteously slain in battle by Dhrishtadyumna, what, indeed, did Açwatthaman Indeed, Acwatthaman hath been ordained to be the slayer of Dhrishtadyumna, even as Yajnasena's son, the prince of the Panchalas, was ordained to be the slayer of Drona!14 What, oh, did Açwatthaman say, hearing that his sire the preceptor had been slain by the cruel, sinful, and mean Dhrishtadyumna of little foresight?" "15

Generated on 2022-02-03 13;58 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

SECTION CXCVI.

"Sanjaya said,—"Hearing of the slaughter of his sire by Dhrishtadyumna of sinful deeds, Drona's son was filled with grief and rage, O bull among men.1 Filled with rage, O king, his body seemed to blaze forth like that of the Destroyer while engaged in slaughtering creatures at the end of the Yuga. Repeatedly wiping his fearful eyes, and breathing hot sighs in rage, he said unto Duryodhana, these words, viz. - I have now learnt how my sire has been slain by those low wretches after he laid aside his weapons, and how also has a sinful act been perpetrated by Yudhishthira disguised in the garb of virtue! I have now heard of that unrighteous and exceedingly cruel act of Dharma's son! Indeed, amongst those engaged in battle, either of these two, O king, must happen, viz., victory or defeat. Death in battle is always to be applauded. That death, in battle, of a person engaged in fight, which takes place under circumstances of righteousness, 5-6 is not deserving of grief as has been observed by the sages. Without doubt, my sire has gone to the regions of heroes!7 Having met with such a death, I should not grieve for him. The humiliation, however, of a seizure of his locks, that he sustained in the very sight of all the troops while he was righteously engaged in battle, is tearing the very core of my heart! Myself alive, my sire's locks were seized:8-9 why should sonless people then entertain a desire of offspring?+ People perpetrate unrighteous acts or humiliate others, moved by lust or wrath or folly or The cruel and wicked-souled son of Prishata hatred or levity. hath perpetrated this exceedingly sinful act in total disregard of ^{*} Dharmadhwojin literally means a person bearing the standard of virtue; hence, a hypocrite sanctimoniously talking only of virtue and morality but acting differently.-T.

⁺ I think the correct reading is aputrinas and not putrinas. If it is putrinas, literally rendered, the meaning is,-'Why should persons having children, feel any affection for the latter !'-It is worthy of remark that the author of Venisamhara has bodily adopted this verse, putting it in the mouth of Acwatthaman when introduced in the third Act .- T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 13:54 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google

Dhrishtadyumna, therefore, shall surely behold the dreadful consequences of that act,10-11 as also the false-speeched son of Pandu, that has acted so worngly! Today the Earth shall certainly drink the blood of that king Yudhishthira the just who caused the preceptor, by an act of deceit, to lay aside his weapons! I swear by truth, O Kauraveya, as also by all my religious acts,12-14 that I shall never bear the burden of life if I fail to exterminate the Panchalas! By every means shall I contend with the Panchalas in dreadful strife!15 tainly slay in battle Dhrishtadyumna, that perpetrator of unrighteous deeds! Mild or violent, let the means be what they will.16 I shall effect the destruction of all the Panchalas before peace becomes mine, O Kaurava! O tiger among men, persons desire children17 so that obtaining them they may be rescued from great fears both here and hereafter. My sire, however, fell unto that plight, like a friendless creature,18 although myself am alive, his disciple and son resembling a mountain (in might)! Fie on my celestial weapons! Fie on my arms! Fie on my prowess !19 since Drona, although he had a son in me, had his locks seized! I shall, therefore, O chief of the Bharatas, now achieve that by which I may be freed from the debt I owe to my sire now gone to the other world! He that is good never indulges in self-praise.21 Unable, however, to brook the slaughter of my sire, I speak of my prowess Let the Pandavas, with Janarddana among them, behold my energy today,22 while I grind all their troops, achieving what is done (by the Destroyer himself) at the end of the Yuga! Neither the gods, nor the Gandharvas, nor the Asuras, the Uragas, and the Rākshasas, so nor all the foremost of men, shall today be able to vanquish me on my car in battle! none in the world equal to me or Arjuna in knowledge of weapons.34 Entering into the midst of the troops, like the Sun himself in the midst of his blazing rays, I shall today use my celestial weapons!25 Today, applied by me, innumerable shafts, sped from my bow in dreadful battle, displaying their terrible energy, shall grind the Pandavas!26 Today all the points of the compass, O king, will be seen by the warriors of our army shrouded with my winged arrows of keen points as if with torrents of rain !27 Scattering showers of shafts on all sides with a loud noise, I shall overthrow my foes like a tempest felling trees.28 Neither Vibhatsu, nor Janarddana, nor Bhimasena, nor Nakula, nor Sahadeva, nor king Yudhishthira, nor Prishata's wicked-souled son (Dhrishtadyumna), nor Cikhandin, nor Satyaki, O Kauravya, knoweth that weapon which I have along with the mantras for hurling and withdrawing it !2 -30 Formerly on one occasion, Nārāyana, assuming the form of a Brāhmana, came to my father. Bowing unto him, my father presented his offerings unto him in due form.81 Taking them My father himself, the Divine Lord offered to give him a boon. then solicited that supreme weapon called Nārāyana. 22 Divine Lord, that foremost of all gods, addressing my sire, then said,—No man shall ever become thy equal in battle." This weapon, however, O Brahmana, should never be used in It never comes back without effecting the destruction of the foe."4 I know none whom it may not slay, O lord! Indeed, it would slay even the unslayable! Therefore, should not be used (without the greatest deliberation). 85 mighty weapon, O scorcher of foes, should never upon persons that abandon their cars or weapons in battle, or upon those that seek for quarter or those that yield themselves He who seeketh to afflict in battle the unslayable with it, is himself exceedingly afflicted by it! 56-37-My sire thus Then the lord Nārāyana, addressing received that weapon. myself also, said,—With the aid of this weapon, thou too shalt pour diverse showers of celestial weapons in battle and blaze with energy in consequence of it!—Having said these words, the Divine Lord ascended to heaven. 88-89 Even this is the history of the Nārāyana weapon which has been obtained by my sire's son. With that I will rout and slay the Pandavas, the Panchalas, the Matsyas, and the Kaikayas, in battle, like Cachi's lord routing and strying the Asuras.

The last line of 37 is read differently in the Bombay edition. kantha accepts that reading, and explains it in his gloss, remarking that the grammatical solecism occurring in it is a license. The Bengal reading, however, is more apposite.-T.

My shafts, O Bharata, will fall upon the contending foes in those particular forms which I shall wish them to assume. Staying in battle I will pour showers of weapons as I desire. 40-40 I will rout and slay all the foremost of car-warriors with sky-ranging arrows of iron-mouths. Without doubt, I will shower innumerable battle-axes upon the foe.48 With the mighty Nārāyana weapon, a scorcher of foes that I am, I will destroy the Pandavas, causing an immense carnage amongst them! 44 That wretch amongst the Panchalas, (viz., Dhrishtadyumna), who is an injurer of friends and Brahmanas and of his own preceptor, who is a deceitful wretch of the most reprehensible conduct, shall never escape from me today with life!"4-Hearing these words of Drona's son, the (Kuru) army rallied Then many foremost of men blew their gigantic conchs.46 And filled with delight, they beat their drums and dindimas by thousands. The Earth resounded with loud noises, afflicted with the hoofs of steeds and the wheels of cars.47 That loud uproar made the Earth, the sky, and the firmament also echo with Hearing that uproar, deep as the roll of the clouds, the Pandavas,43 those foremost of car-warriors, uniting together, took counsel of one another. Meanwhile Drona's son, having said those words, O Bharata, touched water and invoked the celestial weapon called the Narayana," "40

SECTION CXCVII.

"Sanjaya said,—'When the weapon called Narayana was invoked, violent winds began to blow with showers of rain, and peals of thunder were heard although the cloudless.1 The Earth trembled, and the seas swelled up The rivers began to run in a contrary course. The summits of mountains, O Bharata, began to split. verse animals began to pass by the left side of the Panda-Darkness set in, the Sun became obscure. kinds of carnivorous creatures began to alight on the field in joy. The gods, the Danavas, and the Gandharvas, O monarch, all became inspired with fear. Beholding that tremendous agitation (in nature), all began to loudly ask one another about its cause. Indeed, seeing that fierce and terrible weapon invoked by Drona's son, all the kings, inspired with fear, felt great pain.'

[·] Literally, "the animals kept the Pandavas to their right."-T

"Dhritarāshtra said,—'Tell me, O Sanjaya, what counsel was adopted by the Pāndavas for the protection of Dhrishtadyumna when they saw the Kauravas once more advance to battle, rallied by Drona's son who was scorched by grief and unable to brook the slaughter of his sire?'7-8

"Sanjaya continued,—'Having before beheld the Dhartarashtras fly away, Yudhishthira, seeing them once more prepare for furious battle, addressed Arjuna, saying, -After the preceptor Drona had been slain in battle by Dhrishtadyumna like the mighty Asura Vritra by the wielder of the thunderbolt,10 (the Kurus), O Dhananjaya, becoming cheerless, gave Desirous of saving themselves, all of up all hopes of victory. them fled away from battle.11 Some kings fled, riding on cars borne along irregular courses, without Pārshni drivers, and divested of standards and banners and umbrellas, and with their Kuvaras and boxes broken, and all their adornments displaced Others, struck with panic and deprived of their senses, themselves striking the steeds of their cars with their feet, fled precipitately.12-13 Others, riding on cars with broken yokes and wheels and Akshas, fled, afflicted with fear. Others on horseback were carried away, their bodies half displaced from their saddles.14 Others, dislodged from their seats, and pinned by shafts to the necks of elephants, were quickly carried away Others were trodden to death all around by by those animals. elephants afflicted and mangled with arrows.15 Others, deprived of weapons and divested of armour, fell from their vehicles and animals down upon the Earth. Others were cut by car wheels or crushed by steeds and elephants.16 Others, loudly calling after their sires and sons, fled away in fear, without recognising one another and deprived of all energy by grief.17 Some, placing their sons and sires and friends and brothers (on vehicles) and taking off their armour, were seen washing them with water.13 After the slaughter of Drona, the (Kuru) army, fallen into such a plight, fled away precipitately. By whom then hath it been rallied? Tell me, if thou knowest!19 The sound of neighing steeds and grunting elephants, mingled with the clatter of car-wheels, is heard loud.20 These sounds, so fierce, occurring in the Kuru ocean, are repeatedly swelling up and causing my troops to tremble !21 This terrific uproar, making the hair to stand on end, that is now heard, would, it seems, swallow the three worlds with Indra at their head!" I think this terrible uproar is uttered by the wielder of the thunderbolt himself! It is evident that upon the fall of Drona Vāsava himself is approaching (against us) for the sake of the Kauravas !28 Our hair has stood on end, our foremost of car-warriors are all afflicted with anxiety. O Dhananjaya, hearing this loud and terrible noise,24 I ask thee who is that mighty car warrior like the lord of the celestials himself, that, rallying this terrible and swelling host, is causing it to return ?28-

"'Arjuna said,—He, relying upon whose energy the Kauravas, having addrest themselves to the accomplishment of fierce feats, are blowing their conchs and staying with patience,26he, about whom thou hast thy doubts, O king, as to who he may be that is roaring so loud, having rallied the Dhartarashtras after the fall of the weaponless perceptor,27—he, who is endued with modesty, possessed of mighty-arms, has the tread of an infuriate elephant, owns a face like that of a tiger, always achieves fierce feats, and dispells the fears of the Kurus,28-he, upon whose birth Drona gave away a thousand kine unto Brahmanas of high worth,-he, O king, that is roaring so loud, is Acwatthaman!29 As soon as he was born, that here neighed like Indra's steed and caused the three worlds to tremble at that sound!" Hearing that sound, an invisible being, O lord, (speaking audibly) bestowed upon him the name of Acwatthaman (the horse-voiced). That hero, O son of Pandu, is roaring today! 181 Prishata's son, by an exceedingly cruel act, assailed Drona and took his life as if the latter were without a protector! Yonder stayeth the protector of that Drona! 22 Since the prince of the Panchalas seized my preceptor by the hair, Acwatthaman, confident of his own prowess, will never forgive him . Thou, O monarch, hast told thy preceptor a falsehood for the sake of kingdom! Although thou art acquainted with the dictates of righteousness, thou hast yet perpetrated a very sinful act !34 Thy ill fame, in consequence of the slaughter of Drona, will be eternal in the three worlds with their mobile and immobile creatures, like Rāma's in consequence of the slaughter of Vāli!*35 About thyself, Drona had thought,—The son of Pandu is possessed of every virtue; he is, besides, my disciple! He will never speak an untruth to me!—Thinking so, he gave credence to what thou Although in speaking of Açwatthāman's death thou hadst added the word elephant, yet thy answer to the preceptor was, after all, an untruth in the garb of truth!87 Thus told by thee, the puissant Drona laid aside his weapons and, as thou sawest, became indifferent (to everything), exceedingly agitated, and almost deprived of his senses. It was even a disciple who, abandoning all morality, thus slew his own preceptor full of affection for his son, while, indeed, that preceptor was filled with grief and unwilling to fight !89 Having caused thy preceptor who had laid aside his weapons to be unrighteously slain, protect now the son of Prishata if thou canst, with all thy counsellors !40 All of us, uniting together, shall not be able to protect Prishata's son today who will be assailed by the preceptor's son in wrath and grief! 1 That superhuman being who is in the habit of displaying his friendship for all creatures, that hero, hearing of the seizure of his sire's locks, will certainly consume us all in battle today !42 Although I cried repeatedly at the top of my voice for saving the preceptor's life, yet, disregarding my cries and abandoning morality, a disciple took the life of that preceptor!48 All of us have passed the greater part of our lives. The days that remain to us are This exceedingly unrighteous act that we have perpetrated has stained that remnant.44 In consequence of the affection he bore to us, he was even as a sire unto us!

^{*} Daçaratha's son Rāma, during his exile, slew the monkey-chief Vāli, the brother of Sugriva, while Vāli was engaged with Sugriva in battle. Vāli had done no injury to Rāma. That act has always been regarded as a stain on Rāma.—T.

the dictates of the scriptures also, he was a sire unto us! Yet he, that preceptor of ours, has been slain by us for the sake of short-lived sovereignty !45 Dhritarashtra, O king, had given unto Bhishma and Drona the whole Earth, and, what was still more valuable, all his children !46 Though honored by our foe thus, and though he had obtained such wealth from him, the preceptor still loved us as his own children!47 Of unfading energy and prowess, the preceptor has been slain in battle only because, induced by thy words, he had laid aside his weapons! While engaged in fight he was incapable of being slain by Indra himself.48 The preceptor was venerable in years and always devoted to our welfare. Yet unrighteous that we are and stained with a levity of behaviour, we scrupled not to injure him !49 Alas, exceedingly cruel and very heinous has been the sin that we have committed, for, moved by the desire of enjoying the pleasures of sovereignty, we have slain that Drona!50 My preceptor had all along been under the impression that in consequence of my love for him I could, (for his sake) abandon all,—sire, brother, children, wife, life itself!51 And yet, moved by the desire of sovereignty I interfered not when he was about to be slain! For this fault, O king, I have, O lord, already sunk into hell, overcome with shame !52 Having, for the sake of kingdom, caused the slaughter of one who was a Brāhmana, who was venerable in years, who was my preceptor, who had laid aside his weapons, and who was then devoted, like a great ascetic, to Yoga, death has become preferable to me to life !' "58

SECTION CXCVIII.

"Sanjaya said,—'Hearing these words of Arjuna, the mighty car-warriors present there said not a single word, O monarch, agreeable or disagreeable, unto Dhananjaya.¹ Then the mighty-armed Bhimasena, filled with wrath, O bull of Bharata's race, reproaching Kunti's son Arjuna, said these words:²—Thou preachest truths of morality like an anchoret living in the woods or a Brāhmana of rigid vows and senses under complete control: A person is called a Kshatriya because he rescues others from wounds and injuries. Being such, he must save himself from wounds and injuries! Showing forgiveness towards the three that are good, (viz., the gods, the Brahmanas, and preceptors), a Kshatriya, by doing his duties, soon wins the Earth as also piety and fame and prosperity. perpetuater of thy race, art endued with every attribute of a Kshatriva! It does not, therefore, look well for thee to speak like an ignorant wight! O son of Kunti, thy prowess is like that of Cakra himself, the lord of Cachi! Thou dost not transgress the bounds of morality like the ocean that never transgresses its continents! Who is there that would not worship thee, seeing that thou seekest virtue, having abandoned the wrath cherished by thee for thirteen years? By good luck, O sire, thy heart today followeth in the wake of virtue! thou of unfading glory, by good luck thy understanding inclineth towards compassion! Though, however, thou art inclined to adopt the path of virtue, yet thy kingdom was snatched from thee most unrighteously! Dragging thy wife Draupadi to the assembly, thy foes insulted her!9 Clad in barks of trees and skins of animals, all of us were exiled to the woods, and undeserving though we were of that plight, our foes nevertheless compelled us to endure it for thirteen years !10 O sinless one, thou hast forgiven all these circumstances, every one of which demands the exhibition of wrath! Wedded as thou art to the duties of a Kshatriya, thou hast quietly borne these!" Remembering all those acts of unrighteousness, I came here with thee for avenging them! (When, however, I see that thou art so indifferent, why,) I myself will slay those low wretches that despoiled us of our kingdom !18 Thou hadst formerly said these words, viz.,—Addressing ourselves for battle, we will exert to the utmost extent of our abilities!-Today, however, thou reproachest us!18 Thou now seekest virtue! Those words, therefore, that thou saidst formerly are untrue. We are already afflicted with fear. Thou cuttest, however, the very core of our hearts with these thy words,14 O crusher of foes. like one pouring acids upon the sores of wounded men! Afflict-

^{*} I expand the original to make the sense clear .- T.

^{*} The first line of the 23rd verse in the Bengal editions, is made the second line of that verse in the Bombay text. There seems to be a mistake, however, in both the texts. Vishnu slew Hiranyakaçipu without allowing the latter to say anything unto him. Vide Vishnu Parāna. If, instead of HiranyakaçipuHarim, the reading be Hianyakaçipum Haris, the line may then be connected with Bhima's speech, and the comparison would become more apposite.—T.

was in the habit of using irresistible illusions. By an illusion itself hath he been slain today! O Partha, what is there that is improper in this ?27 Drona having been thus punished by me, if his son, from rage, uttereth such loud roars, what do you lose by that ?28 I do not think it at all wonderful that Drona's son, urging the Kauravas to battle, will cause them to be slain, unable to protect them himself!" Thou art ac-Why then dost thou say that I am a quainted with morality. slayer of my preceptor? It was for this that I was born as son to the king of the Panchalas, having sprung from the (sacrificial) fire !50 How, O Dhananjaya, will you call him a Brāhmana or a Kshatriya, with whom, while engaged in battle, all acts, proper and improper, were the same? 81 O foremost of men, why should not he be slain, by any means in our power, who, deprived of his senses in wrath, used to slay with the Brāhma weapon even those that were unacquainted with weap-He that is unrighteous is said by those that are righte-Knowing this, O thou that art ous to be equal to poison. well versed with the truths of morality, why dost thou, O Arjuna, reproach me?" That cruel car-warrior was seized and slain by me. I have done nothing that is worthy of Why then, O Vibhatsu, dost thou not congratulate me? 34 O Partha, I have cut off that terrible head, like unto the blazing Sun or virulent poison or the all-destroying Yuga fire, of Drona. Why then dost thou not applaud an act that is worthy of applause?85 He had slain in battle only my kinsmen and not those of any one else. I say that having only cut off his head, the fever of my heart hath not abated!86 The very core of my heart is being pierced for my not having thrown that head within the dominions of the Nishādas, like that of Jayadratha! It hath been heard. O Arjuna, that one incurreth sin by not slaying his foes. this is the duty of a Kshatriya, viz., to slay or be slain.88 Drona was my foe. He hath been righteously slain by me in battle, O son of Pandu, even as thou hast slain the brave

^{*} The Nishādus were and to this day are the lowest caste in India.—T.

Having slain thy grandsire in Bhagadatta, thy friend !" battle thou regardest that act of thine to be righteous. Why then shouldst thou regard it unrighteous in me for my having slain my wretched foe ?40 In consequence of our relationship, O Partha, I cannot raise my head in thy presence and am like a prostrate elephant with a ladder against his body (for helping puny creatures to get on his back). It, therefore, behoveth thee not to reproach me :41 I forgive all the faults of thy speech, O Arjuna, for the sake of Draupadi and Draupadi's children and not for any other reason !42 It is well known that my hostility with the preceptor has descended from sire to son. All persons in this world know it. Ye sons of Pandu, are ye not acquainted with it?48 The eldest son of Pandu hath not been untruthful in speech. I myself, O Arjuna, am The wretched Drona was a hater of his disciples. not sinful. Fight now. Victory will be yours !- "44

SECTION CXCIX.

(Nārāyanāstra-mokshana Parva.)

Dhritarashtra said,—"That illustrious person who had duly studied the Vedas with all their branches, he in whom the entire science of arms and modesty had dwelt, he through whose grace many foremost of men are still capable of achieving superhuman feats that the very gods cannot achieve with ease, alas, when he, viz., that Drona, that son of a great Rishi, was insulted in the sight of all by the low, wicked, meanminded, and sinful Dhrishtadyumna, that slayer of his own preceptor, was there no Kshatriya who felt called upon to dis-Fie on the Kshatriya order, and fie on wrath play his wrath? itself!1-4 Tell me, O Sanjaya, what the sons of Pritha, as also all the other royal bowmen in the world, hearing of Drona's slaughter, said unto the prince of Panchala!'s

"Sanjaya said,-"Hearing these words of Drupada's son of crooked deeds, all the persons present there, O monarch, remained perfectly silent.6 Arjuna, however, casting oblique glances upon Prishata's son, seemed, with tears and sighs, to reproach him, saying,-fie, fie. -Yudhishthira and Bhima and the twins and Krishna and the others stood bashfully. Satyaki, however, O king, said these words: - Is there no man here that would, without delay, slay this sinful wight, this lowest of men, who is uttering such evil speeches? Pandavas are all condemning thee for this sinful act of thine, like Brāhmanas condemning a person of the Chāndāla class!10 Having committed such a heinous act, and having incurred the censures of all honest men, art thou not ashamed to open thy lips in the midst of such a respectable assembly?11 O despicable wretch, why did not thy tongue and head split into a hundred fragments while thou wert about to slay thy own preceptor? Why wert thou not struck down by that act of sin?12 having perpetrated such a sinful act, thou art again applauding thyself in the midst of human beings, thou incurrest the censures of the Parthas and all the Andhakas and the Vrishnis!18 Having perpetrated such an atrocious act, thou art again displaying such hatred towards the preceptor. For this thou There is no use in keeping thee deservest death at our hands. alive for even a single moment!14 Who is there, save thee, O wretch, that would cause the death of the virtuous preceptor, seizing him by his locks ?15 Having obtained thee, O wretch of thy race, thy ancestors for seven generations and thy descendants also for seven generations, deprived of fame, have sunk in hell." Thou hast charged Partha, that bull among men, with the slaughter of Bhishma! The latter, however, viz. that illustrious personage, himself accomplished his own death.12 Truly speaking, thy uterine brother, (viz., Cikhandin.) that foremost of all sinners, was the cause of Bhishma's death. There is none in the world that is more sinful than the sons of the Panchala king!18 Thy father had created Cikhandin for the destruction of Bhishma. As regards Arjuna, he had only protected Cikhandin while Cikhandin became the cause of the illustrious Bhishma's death!19 Having got thee that art condemned by all righteous men, and thy brother, amongst them, the Panchalas have fallen off from righteousness and, stained with meanness, have become haters of friends and preceptors !20 If thou again speakest such words in my presence, I shall then break thy head with this mace of mine that is as strong as the thunder-bolt!21 Beholding thee that art the slayer of a Brahmana, since thou art guilty of nothing less than the slaughter of a Brahmana, people have to look at the Sun for purifying themselves! 22 Thou wretch of a Panchala, O thou of wicked conduct, speaking ill of my preceptor first and then of my preceptor's preceptor, art thou not ashamed ?25 Bear thou but one stroke of this my mace! I myself will bear many strokes of thine !24-Thus rebuked by the Satwata hero, Prishata's son, filled with rage, smilingly addressed the angry Satyaki in these harsh words ! 5-

"'Dhrishtadyumna said,—I have heard thy words, O thou of Madhu's race, but I have forgiven thee! Being thyself unrighteous and sinful, desirest thou to rebuke them that are righteous and honest?26 Forgiveness is applauded in the Sin, however, does not deserve forgiveness. is of sinful soul regards the forgiving person powerless." Thou art a wretch in thy behaviour! Thou art of sinful soul! Thou art wedded to unrighteousness! Thou art censurable in every respect, from the tip of thy toe to the end of thy hair! Desirest thou still to speak ill of others?28 What can be more sinful than that act of thine, viz., thy slaughter of the armless Bhuricravas while sitting in Prāya, although thou wert repeatedly forbidden?29 Drona, having arrayed his forces, had been fighting with the aid of celestial weapons. He had laid aside his weapons and I slew him. O thou of crooked heart, what is there in that act that is improper?  How can he, O Sātyaki, blame such an act who himself has slain a foe that had desisted from fight on the field, a foe that was sitting in Praya like an ascetic, and whose arms had been cut off by another?"1 That valiant enemy of thine had displayed his prowess, having struck thee with his foot and thrown thee down on the Earth. Why didst thou not then slay him, showing thy manliness? 32 When Partha, however, had already vanquished him, it was then that thou, acting most unrighteously, didst kill the brave and valiant Somadatta's son! so Whithersoever Drona had sought to rout the forces of the Pandavas, thithersoever I proceeded, shooting thousands of arrows.34 Having thyself acted in such a way, like a Chāndāla, and having thyself become worthy of reproach, desirest thou to reproach me in such harsh words? 85 Thou art a perpetrator of evil deeds, and not I, O wretch of the Vrishni race! art the abode of all sinful deeds! Do not again blame me! se It behoveth thee not to say anything unto me after this! This is the reply I give thee with my lips. Don't say anything more !87 If, from folly, thou repeatest such harsh words, I shall then, in battle, despatch thee, with my arrows, to Yama's abode!38 By righteousness alone, O fool, one cannot vanquish his enemies. Listen now to the unrighteous acts of the Kurus also! Pāndu's son Yudhishthira was sometime before unrighteously deceived (by them)! O Sātyaki, Draupadi also was persecuted by them unrighteously !40 The Pandavas, with Krishnā in their company, were also exiled and they were robbed of their all, O fool, most unrighteously !41 By an act of unrighteousness, again, has the ruler of the Madras been withdrawn from us by the enemy! By an act of unrighteousness also was the son of Subhadra slain!42 On this side, it was by an act of unrighteousness that Bhishma the Kuru grandsire was slain. Bhurigravas, too, was, by an act of unrighteousness, slain by thee that art so acquainted with righteousness!43 Even thus have the enemy, as also the Pandavas, acted in this battle! Possessed of courage and acquainted with morality, all of them, O Satwata, have acted thus, for gaining victory !44 High morality is difficult of ascertainment. Similarly, immorality also can with difficulty be comprehended. Fight now with the Kauravas, without returning to the home of thy fathers !- "45

^{*} The Bengal reading is vicious. I adopt the Bombay reading which is Gurorguruncha bhuyopi, meaning, "the preceptor's preceptor again." The fact is, Arjuna was Satyaki's preceptor; Drona, therefore, was the latter's preceptor's preceptor .- T.

"Sanjaya continued,—"Hearing these harsh and cruel words (from Dhrishtadyumna's lips), the blessed Sātyaki began to tremble from head to foot.⁴⁶ Filled with rage, his eyes assumed the hue of copper. Keeping his bow then upon his car, he grasped his mace, sighing like a snake.⁴⁷ Rushing then towards the prince of the Panchalas, he said unto him in great wrath,-I will not speak harshly to thee, but I will slay thee, deserving as thou art of slaughter !48—Seeing the mighty Satyaki rushing, from wrath and desire of revenge, at the Panchala prince, like Yama against one like his own self,49 the mighty Bhima, urged by Vasudeva, quickly jumped down from his car and seized him with his arms. 50 Endued with great strength, Sātyaki, who was rushing in great wrath, proceeded for a few steps, forcibly dragging after him the mighty son of Pandu who was endeavouring to hold him back.51 Then Bhima, firmly planting his feet, stopped at the sixth step that foremost of strong men, viz., that bull of Cini's race. 53 Then Sahadeva, O king, jumping down from his own car, addressed Sātyaki, thus held fast by the strong arms of Bhima, in these sweet words:53-0 tiger among men, O thou of Madhu's race, we have no friends dearer to us than the Andhakas with the Vrishnis and the Pānchālas!54 So also the Andhakas and the Vrishnis, particularly Krishna, cannot have any friends dearer than our-The Panchalas also, O thou of Vrishni's race, even if they search the whole world to the confines of the sea, have no friends dearer to them than the Pandavas and the Vrishnis." Thou art even such a freind to this prince; and he also is a similar friend to thee. Ye all are to us even as we are to you!57 Acquainted as thou art with all duties, remembering now the duties thou owest to friends, restrain this wrath of thine that has the prince of the Panchalas for its object! Be calm, O foremost one of Cini's race!58 Forgive the son of Prishata, and let Prishata's son also forgive thee! Ourselves also will practise forgiveness. What is there that is better than forgiveness ?59-,

"'While the grandson of Cini, O sire, was thus being pacified by Sahadeva, the son of the Pānchāla king, smiling, said these words: 60—Release Cini's grandson, O Bhima, who is so proud of his prowess in battle! Let him come at me like the wind assailing the mountains, 61 till, with my keen arrows, O son of Kunti, I quell his rage and desire for battle and take his life! 62 Yonder come the Kauravas! I shall (after slaying Sātyaki) achieve this great task of the Pāndavas that has presented itself!*3 Or, let Phālguna resist all the enemies in battle! As regards myself, I will fell this one's head with my arrows.*4 He taketh me for the armless Bhuriçravas in battle. Release him. Either I will slay him or he will slay me!*5— Hearing these words of the Pānchāla prince, the mighty-Sātyaki, held fast in Bhima's clasp, sighing like a snake, bagan to tremble.*6 Both of them, endued with great might and possessed of powerful arms, began to roar like a couple of bulls. Then Vāsudeva, O sire, and king Yudhishthira the just,*7 with great effort, succeeded in pacifying those heroes. Having pacified those two great bowmen, those two heroes whose eyes had become blood-red with rage, all the principal Kshatriyas (of the Pāndava army) proceeded against the warriors of the hostile army for battle.'"*68

SECTION CC.

"Sanjaya said,—"Then Drona's son began to cause a great carnage amongst his foes in that battle, like the Destroyer himself at the end of the Yuga. Slaying his enemies by means of his broad-headed arrows, Açwatthāman soon piled a mountain there of the dead. The standards of cars formed its trees, and weapons its pointed summits. The lifeless elephants formed its large rocks; the steeds, its Kimpurashas; and bows, its creepers and plants. And it resounded with the cries of all carnivorous creatures that constituted its feathery population. And the spirits that walked there formed its Yakshas.-* Then roaring aloud, O bull of Bharata's race, Acwatthaman once more repeated his vow in the hearing of thy son, -Since Kunti's son Yudhishthira, assuming only the outward garb of virtue, had caused the preceptor who was (righteously) engaged in battle to lay aside his weapons, I shall, in his very sight, rout and destroy his army! Having rushed and mangled all his ^{*} Kimpurushas were fabled creatures, half men and half steeds. Not a mountain but had its Kimpurushas, according to the Hindu belief. Yukshas were a sort of superhuman beings infesting inaccessible hills and mountains.—T.

troops, I shall then slay the sinful prince of the Panchalas. Indeed, I shall slay all of them, if they contend with me in battle. I tell thee truly, therefore, rally thou thy troops !"-Hearing these words of Acwatthaman, thy son rallied his troops, having dispelled their fears with a loud leonine roar. The encounter then, O king, that once more took place between the Kuru and the Pandavalarmies, became as terrible as that of two oceans at full tide.9 The terrified Kauravas had their The Pandus and the Panchalas fears dispelled by Drona's son. had become fierce in consequence of Drona's slaughter. 16 Great was the violence of that collision, on the field of battle, between those warriors, all of whom were cheerful and filled with rage and inspired with certain hope of victory." Like a mountain striking against a mountain, or an ocean against an ocean, O monarch, was that collision between the Kurus and the Panda-Filled with joy, the Kuru and the Pandava warriors blew thousands of conchs and beat tens of thousands of drums.15 The loud and stunning uproar that arose from among those troops resembled that of the ocean itself while churned (of old by the gods and the Danavas).14 Then Drona's son, aiming at the host of the Pandavas and the Panchalas, invoked the weapon called Narayana.15 Then thousands of arrows with blazing mouths appeared in the welkin, resembling snakes of firey mouths, that continued to agitate the Pandavas.16 In that dreadful battle, those shafts, O king, like the very rays of the Sun, in a moment shrouded all the points of compass, the welkin, and the troops. 17 Innumerable iron balls also, O king, then appeared, like resplendent luminaries in the clear firmament.18 Cataghnis, some equipt with four and some with two wheels, and innumerable maces, and disci with edges sharp as razors and resplendent like the Sun, also appeared there.19 Beholding the welkin densely shrouded with those weapons, O bull of Bharata's race, the Pandavas, the Panchalas, and the Srinjayas, became exceedingly agitated.* In all those places, O ruler of men, where the great car-warriors of the Pandavas contended in battle, that weapon became exceedingly powerful.31 Slaughtered by the $N\bar{a}r\bar{a}yana$ weapon, as if consumed by a conflagration, the Pandava troops were exceedingly afflicted

Generated on 2022-03-03 14:06 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized ,

all over the field in that battle.28 Indeed, O lord, as fire consumeth a heap of dry grass in summer, even so did that weapon consume the army of the Pandus.28 Beholding that weapon filling everyside, and seeing his own troops destroyed in large numbers, king Yudhishthira the just, O lord, became inspired with great fright.24 Seeing his army in course of flight and deprived of itssenses, and beholding Partha standing indifferent, Dharma's son said these words:25-O Dhrishtadyumna, fly away with your Pānchāla troops! O Sātyaki, you also go away, surrounded by the Vrishnis and the Andhakas !26 Of virtuous soul, Vasudeva will himself seek the means of his own safety! He is competent to offer advice to the whole world. What need is there of telling him what he should do?27 We shouldnot any longer fight! I say so unto all the troops! As regards myself, I will, with all my brothers, ascend a funeral pile !28 Having crossed the Bhishma and the Drona oceansin this battle that are incapable of being crossed by the timid shall I sink with all my followers in the vestige, represented by Drona's son, of a cow's hoof?29 wishes of king Duryodhana be crowned with success today, for I have today slain in battle the preceptor that always cherished such friendly feelings towards us, so - that preceptor, who, with out protecting, caused that child unacquainted with battle, viz., the son of Subhadra, to be slain by a multitude of wicked warriors, si -that preceptor, who, with his son, sat indifferently, without answering, when Krishnā in such distress, dragged into the assembly and sought to be made a slave, asked him to say the truth,82-that preceptor, who, while all the other warriors were fatigued, cased Duryodhana in invulnerable armour when the latter desired to slay Phalguna and who, having cased him so, appointed him to protect Jayadratha, 88-that preceptor, who, being acquainted with the Brahma weapon, scrupled not to exterminate the Panchalas headed by Satyajit that had exerted themselves for my victory,34—that preceptor, who, whilst we were being unrighteously exiled from our kingdom. freely told us to go into the woods although he had been solicited by our friends to withhold his permission! 55*

I adopt the Bombay reading of the 2nd line of 35 and think that Nilakantha explains it correctly.—T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 14:06 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

that great friend of ours hath been slain! For his sake, I will, with all my friends, lay down my life !se __After Kunti's son Yudhishthira had said this, he of Daçarha's race, (viz., Keçava), quickly forbidding the troops, by motion of his arms, to fly away, said these words: 87-Speedily lay down your weapons, all cf you, and alight from your vehicles! Even this is the means ordained by the illustrious one, (viz., Nārāyana himself,) for baffling this weapon!38 Come down on the Earth, all of you, from your elephants and steeds and cars! If you stand weaponless on the Earth, this weapon will not slay you! 39 In those places where you will fight for quelling the force of this weapon, the Kauravas will become more powerful than you!40 Those men, however, that will throw down their weapons and alight from their vehicles, will not, in this battle, be slain by this weapon!41 They, however, that will, even in imagination, contend against this weapon, will all be slain even if they seek refuge deep beneath the Earth ! -The warriors of the Pandava army, hearing, O Bharata, these words of Vasudeva, threw down their weapons and drove away from their hearts all desire of battle.48 Then Bhimasena the son of Pandu, beholding the warriors about to abandon their weapons, said these words, O king, gladdening them all:44—None should lay down his weapons here! I shall, with my shafts, oppose this weapon of Drona's son!45 With this heavy mace of mine that is decked with gold, I shall career in this battle like the Destroyer himself, quelling this weapon of Drona's son!46 There is no man here that is equal to me in prowess, even as there is no luminary in the firmament that is equal to the Sun.47 Behold these two strong arms of mine like unto the trunks of a couple of mighty elephants, capable of pulling down the mountains of Himavat!48 I am the one person here that possesses the might of ten thousand elephants! I am without a peer, even as Cakra is known to be in heaven among the celestials !49 Let people witness today the energy of these two arms of my broad-chested self, while engaged in baffling the bright and blazing weapon of Drona's son! 50 If there be none (else) capable of contending against the Narayana weapon, even I shall contend against it today in the

http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google

very sight of all the Kurus and the Pandavas!51 O Vibhatsu, thou shouldst not lay Gandiva aside! will then attach to thee like the Moon!50-Thus addressed by Bhima, Arjuna said,—O Bhima, even this is my great vow, viz., that my Gandiva shall not be used against the Nārāyana weapon, kine, and Brāhmanas !58—Thus answered by Arjuna, Bhima, that chastiser of foes, riding on his car of solar effulgence, whose rattle, besides, resembled the roar of the clouds, rushed against the son of Drona.54 Endued with great activity and prowess, the son of Kunti, in consequence of his extreme lightness of hand, within the twinkling of an eye, covered Açwatthāman with a shower of weapons.55 Drona's son, smiling at the rushing Bhima and addressing him (in proper words), covered him with arrows inspired with mantras and equipt with blazing points. 56 Shrouded with those shafts that vomited fire and resembled snakes of blazing mouths, as if covered with sparks of gold, 57 the form, O king, of Bhimasena in that battle looked like that of a mountain in the evening when covered with fire.58 That weapon of Drona's son, directed against Bhimasena, increased in energy and might, O king, like a conflagration assisted by the Beholding that weapon of terrible energy thus increasing in might, a panic entered the hearts of all the combatants of the Pandava army with the exception of Bhima. 60 Then all of them, throwing down their weapons on the Earth, alighted from their cars and steeds. 4 After they had thrown down their weapons, and alighted from their vehicles, that weapon of exceeding energy fell upon the head of Bhima. 62 All creatures, especially the Pandavas, uttered cries of Oh and Alas, beholding Bhimasena overwhelmed by the energy of that weapon,"68

SECTION CCI.

"Sanjava said,—Beholding Bhimasena overwhelmed by that weapon, Dhananjaya, for baffling its energy, covered him with the Varuna weapon. In consequence of the lightness of Arjuna's arms, and owing also to the fiery force that shrouded Bhima, mone could see that the latter had been covered with the Varuna with his steeds, driver, and car, became incapable of being gazed at like a fire of blazing flames in the midst of another towards the Asta hill, even so the fiery shafts (of Acwatthaman)

Shrouded with the weapon of Drona's son, Bhima,

As at the close of night, O king, all the luminaries run all began to proceed towards Bhimasena's car. Indeed, Bhima himself, his car, steeds, and diver, O sire, thus shrouded by Drona's son, seemed to be in the midst of a conflagration. As the (Yuga) fire, after consuming the entire universe with its mobile and imm bile creatures when the hour of dissolution comes, at last enters the mouth of the Creator, even so that weapon of Drona's son began to enter the body of Bhimasena. As one cannot perceive a fire if it penetrate into the sun or the sun if it penetrate into a fire, even so none could perceive that energy which penetrated into Bhima's body. weapon thus investing Bhima all around, and seeing Drona's son swelling with energy and might, the latter being then without an antagonist, and observing also that all the warriors of the Pandava army had laid down their weapons and that all the mighty car-warriors of that host headed by Yudhishthira http://www.hathitrust.org/access_use#pd-googl had turned away their faces from the foe, those two heroes, viz., Arjuna and Vasudeva, both endued with great splendour, quickly alighting from their car, ran towards Bhima.10 two mighty men, diving into that energy born of the might of Acwatthaman's weapon, had recourse to the power of The fire of that weapon consumed them not, in consequence of their having laid aside their weapons, as also in consequence of the force of the Varuna weapon, and owing also to the energy possessed by themselves.12 Then Nara and Nārāyana, for the pacification of the Nārāyana weapon, began forcibly to drag Bhima and all his weapons.18 dragged by them, Kunti's son, that mighty car-warrior, began to roar aloud. Thereupon that terrible and invincible weapon Generated on 2022-02-03 14:06 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized / of Drona's son began to increase (in might and energy).14 Then Vasudeva, addressing Bhima, said,—How is it, O son of Pandu, that, though forbidden by us, thou, O son of dost not yet abstain from battle?15 If the Kurus could now be vanquished in battle, then we, as also all these foremost of men would certainly have continued to fight. Behold, all the warriors of thy host have alighted from their cars! For this reason, O son of Kunti, do thou also come down from thy car! Having said these words, Krishna brought Bhima down from his car. The latter, with eyes red as blood in rage, was sighing like a snake. When, however, he was dragged down from his car and made to lay aside his weapons, the Nārāyana weapon, that scorcher of foes, became pacified.

"Sanjaya continued,—When, by this means, the unbearable energy of that weapon became stilled, all the points of the compass, cardinal and subsidiary, became clear.20 breezes began to blow, and birds and animals all became quiet. The steeds and elephants became cheerful, as also all the warriors, O ruler of men !21 Indeed, when the terrible energy of that weapon, O Bhārata, became stilled, Bhima of great intelligence shone resplendent like the morning Sun.22 The remnant of the Pandava host, beholding the pacification of the Nārāyana weapon, once more stood prepared on the field for compassing the destruction of thy son.23 When, after that weapon had been baffled, the Pandava host stood arrayed, Duryodhana, O king, addressing Drona's son, said,24—O Açwatthaman, once more use that weapon speedily, since the Panchalas are once more arrayed, desirous of victory !25-Thus addressed by thy son, O sire, Açwatthaman, sighing cheerlessly, replied unto the king in these words:26-That weapon, O king, cannot be brought back! It cannot be used twice! If brought back, it will, without doubt, slay the person calling it back !27 Vāsudeva hath, by what means thou hast seen, caused it to be baffled! For this, O ruler of men, the destruction of the foe hath not been compassed in battle !28 Defeat and death, however, are the same. Rather, defeat is worse than death! Lo, the enemy, vanquished and compelled to lay down his arms, looks as if deprived of life !29-- Duryodhana then said,-O preceptor's son, if it be so, if this weapon cannot be used twice, let those slayers of their preceptor be slain with other weapons then, O foremost one of all persons acquainted with weapons !30 In thee are all celestial weapons as well as in the Three-eyed (Civa) of immeasuarble energy! If thou wishest it not, even Purandara in rage cannot escape thee!^{$1}—'

"Dhritarāshtra said,—'After Drona had been slain with the aid of fraud, and the $N\bar{a}r\bar{a}yana$ weapon baffled, what, indeed, did Drona's son, thus urged by Duryodhana, then do, sa beholding the Pārthas once more arrived for battle, freed from the influence of the $N\bar{a}r\bar{a}yana$ weapon, and careering at the head of their divisions?'ss

"Sanjaya said,—'Remembering the slaughter of his sire, Drona's son, owning the device of the lion's tail on his banner, filled with rage and casting off all fears, rushed against the son of Prishata.84 Rushing at him, O bull among men, that foremost of warriors, with great impetuosity, pierced the Pānchāla prince with five and twenty small arrows. 25 Dhrishtadyumna, O king, pierced Drona's son that resembled a blazing fire, with four and sixty shafts. 86 And he pierced Acatthaman's driver also with twenty arrrows whetted on stone and equipt with wings of gold, and then his four steeds with four sharp arrows.87 Repeatedly piercing Drona's son, and causing the Earth to tremble with his leonine roars, Dhrishtadyumna then seemed to be employed in taking the lives of all creatures in the world in dreadful battle. 53 Making death itself his goal, the mighty son of Prishata, O king, accomplished in weapons and endued with sureness of aim, then rushed against Drona's son alone.89 Of immeasurable soul, that foremost of car-warriors, viz., the prince of Panchala, poured upon Açwatthaman's head a shower of arrows.40 Then Drona's son, in that battle, covered the angry prince with winged shafts. once more he pierced the latter with ten shafts, remembering the slaughter of his father.41 Then cutting off the standard and bow of the Panchala prince with a couple of well-shot shafts equipt with heads like razors, Drona's son began to grind his foe with other arrows.42 In that dreadful battle, Acwatthman made his antagonist steedless and driverless and carless, and covered his followers also with thick showers of shafts.48 this, the Panchala troops, O king, mangled by means of those arrowy showers, fled away in fear and great affliction.44 Beholding the troops turning away from battle and Dhrithtadyumna exceedingly afflicted, the grandson of Ciniquickly urged his car against that of Drona's son.46 He then, afflicted Acwatthaman with eight keen shafts. And once more striking that angry warrior with twenty shafts of diverse kinds,46 he pierced Açwatthāman's driver, and then his four steeds with four With great deliberation and displaying a wonderful lightness of hand, he cut off Açwatthaman's bow and stan-Sātyaki then cut into fragments the gold-decked car of his foe together with its steeds. And then he deeply pierced Açwatthāman in the chest with thirty arrows in that battle.48 Thus afflicted, O king, (by Sātyaki), and shrouded with arrows, the mighty Acwatthaman knew not what to do.49 When the preceptor's son had fallen into that plight, thy son, that mighty car-warrior, accompanied by Kripa and Karna and others, began to cover the Sātwata hero with arrows.50 All of them began quickly to pierce Satyaki from every side with keen shafts. Duryodhana pierced him with twenty and Caradwat's And Kritavarman pierced him with ten, son Kripa with three. and Karna with fifty. And Dusçasana pierced him with a hundred arrows, and Vrishasena with seven. 51-52 Sātyaki, however, O king, soon made all those great car-warriors fly away from the field, deprived of their cars. 53 Meanwhile Acwatthaman, O bull of Bharata's race, recovering consciousness, and sighing repeatedly in sorrow, began to think of what he should do.54 Riding then upon another car, that scorcher of foes, viz., the son of Drona, began to resist Sātyaki, shooting hundreds of arrows.55 Beholding Acwatthaman once more approaching him in battle, the mighty car-warrior Satyaki once more made him carless and caused him to turn back.56 Then the Pandavas, O king, beholding the prowess of Sātyaki, blew their conchs with great force, and uttered loud leonine roars. 57 deprived Açwatthāman of his car thus, Sātyaki of unbaffled prowess then slew three thousand mighty car-warriors of Vrishasena's division.58 And then he slew fifteen thousand elephants of Kripa's force, and fifty thousand horse of Cakuni. 59 Then the valiant son of Drona, O monarch, riding upon another car, and highly enraged with Sātyaki, proceeded against the latter, desirous of slaying him. 60 Beholding him approach again, the grandson of Cini, that chastiser of foes, once more pierced and mangled him with keen shafts fiercer than those he had used before. 61 Deeply pierced with those arrows of diverse forms by Yuyudhana, that great bowman, viz., the angry son of Drona, smilingly addressed his foe and said,62-O grandson of Cini, I know thy partiality for Dhrishtadyumna, that slayer of his preceptor, but thou shalt not be able to rescue him or thy own self when attacked by me !68 to thee, O grandson of Cini, by Truth and by my ascetic austerities, that I shall know no peace till I slay all the Panchālas!64 You may unite the forces of the Pandavas and those of the Vrishnis together, but I shall still slay the Somakas !65-Saying this, the son of Drona shot at Satyaki an excellent and straight arrow possessed of the effulgence of the Sun, even as Cakra had hurled in days of yore his thunder at the Asura Thus shot by Acwatthaman, that arrow, piercing through the armour of Satyaki, and passing through his body, entered the Earth like a hissing snake entering its hole. 67 armour pierced through, the heroic Sātyaki, like an elephant deeply struck with the hook, became bathed in blood that flowed from his wound. His bow with arrow fixed thereon being then loosened from his grasp, he sat down on the terrace of his car, strengthless and covered all over with blood. ing this, his driver speedily bore him away from Drona's With another shaft, perfectly straight and equipt with goodly wings, that scorcher of foes, viz., Açwatthāman, struck Dhrishtadyumna between his eyebrows. The Panchāla prince had before this been much pierced; therefore, deeply wounded by that arrow, he became exceedingly weak and supported himself by seizing his flag-staff. Beholding Dhrishtadyumna thus afflicted by Açwatthaman like an infuriate elephant by a lion, five heroic car-warriors of the Pandava army, viz., Kiritin, Bhimasena, Vrihatkshatra of Puru's race, the youthful prince of the Chedis, and Sudarcana the chief of the Mālavas, quickly rushed against Açwatthāman. 71-78 with bows, all these rushed with cries of oh and alas. those heroes quickly encompassed the son of Drona on all sides. Advancing twenty paces, all of them, with great care, simultane-

Generated on 2022-02-03 14:06 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-googl ously struck the angry son of the preceptor with five and twenty Drona's son, however, with five and twenty shafts resembling snakes of virulent poison, cut off, almost at the same time, those five and twenty arrows shot at him.76 Then Acwatthaman afflicted the Paurava prince with seven sharp shafts. And he afflicted the chief of the Malavas with three, Partha with one, and Vrikodara with six shafts.77 Then all those great car-warriors, O king, pierced Drona's son unitedly and separately with many shafts whetted on stone and equipt with wings of gold. The youthful prince of the Chedis pierced Drona's son with twenty arrows, and Partha pierced him with three. 79 Then Drona's son struck Arjuna with six arrows, and Vasudeva with six, and Bhima with five, and each of the other two, viz., the Malava and the Paurava, with two arrows. 30 Piercing next the driver of Bhima's car with six arrows, Açwatthaman cut off Bhimasena's bow and standard with a couple of Then piercing Partha once more with a shower of arrows, Drona's son uttered a leonine roar.81 With the sharp, well-tempered, and terrible arrows shot by Drona's son, the Earth, the sky, the firmament, and the points of the compass, cardinal and subsidiary, all became entirely shrouded both in his front and rear.82 Endued with fierce energy and equal to Indra himself in prowess, Acwatthaman then, with three arrows, almost simultaneously cut off the two arms, like unto Indra's poles, and the head, of Sudarçana as the latter was seated on his car.83 Then piercing Paurava with a dart and cutting off his car into minute fragments by means of his arrows, Açwatthaman lopped off his antagonist's two arms smeared with sandal paste and then his head from off his trunk with a broad-headed shaft.84 Possessed of great activity, he then pierced with many arrows resembling blazing flames of fire in energy, the youthful and mighty prince of the Chedis who was of the hue of the dark lotus, and despatched him to Yama's abode with his driver and steeds.85 Beholding the chief of the Malavas, the descendant of Puru, and the youthful ruler of the Chedis slain in his very sight by the son of Drona, Bhimasena, the mighty-armed son of Pandu, became filled with rage. That scorcher of foes then covered Drona's son in that battle with hundreds of keen arrows resembling angry snakes of virulent poison. Endued with mighty energy, the angry son of Drona then, destroying that arrowy shower,86-88 pierced Bhimasena with sharp shafts. The mighty-armed Bhima then, possessed of great strength, cut off with a broad-headed arrow the bow of Drona's son and then pierced Drona's son himself with a Throwing away that broken bow, the highpowerful shaft. souled son of Drona^{8 9-90} took up another and pierced Bhima with his winged shafts. Then those two, viz., Drona's som and Bhima, both possessed of great prowess and might, 91 began to shower their arrowy downpours like two masses of rain-Gold-winged arrows, whetted on stone and encharged clouds. graved with Bhima's name, 52 shrouded Drona's son like gathering masses of clouds shrouding the Sun. Similarly Bhima was soon shrouded with hundreds and thousands of strong arrows shot by Drona's son. Though shrouded in that battle by Drona's son, that warrior of great skill, 98-94 yet Bhima felt no pain, O monarch, which seemed exceedingly wonderful. Then the mighty-armed Bhima sped ten gold-decked arrows, of great keenness and resembling the darts of Yama himself, at his foe Those shafts, O sire, falling upon the shoulders of Drona's son, 95-96 quickly pierced his body like snakes penetrating into Deeply pierced by the high-souled son of Pandu, Acwatthaman, or closing his eyes, supported himself by seizing his flagstaff. Recovering his senses within a moment, O king, Drona's son, 98 bathed in blood, mustered all his wrath. Forcibly struck by the high-souled son of Pandu, Acwatthaman,10 endued with mighty arms, rushed with great speed towards the car of Bhimasena. And then, O Bharata, he sped at Bhimasena, from his bow drawn to its fullest stretch, a hundred arrows of fierce energy, all looking like snakes of virulent Pandu's son Bhima also, proud of his prowess in battle, disregarding Açwatthaman's energy, speedily showered upon him dense arrowy downpours. Then Drona's son, 0 king, cutting off Bhima's bow by means of his arrows,100-102 and filled with rage, struck the Pandava in the chest with many keen shafts. Incapable of brooking that feat, Bhimasena took up another bow, 108 and pierced Drona's son in that

Generated on 2022-02-03 14:06 GMT / https://hc Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.k battle with five keen shafts. Indeed, showering upon each other their arrowy downpours like two masses of clouds at the close of summer, those two warriors,104 with eyes red as copper in rage, completely covered each other in that battle with their shafts. Frightening each other with the terrible sounds they made with their palms,105 they continued to fight with each other, each counteracting the feats of the other. Then bending his formidable bow decked with gold, 106 Drona's son began to gaze steadfastly at Bhima who was thus shooting his shafts at him. At that time Acwatthaman looked like the meridian Sun of blazing rays in an autumnal day.107 So quickly then did he shoot his shafts that people could not see when he took them out of his quiver, when he fixed them on the bowstring, when he drew the string, and when he let them off. 108 Indeed, when thus employed in shooting his arrows, his bow-O monarch, seemed to be incesasntly drawn to a fiery circle. 109 Shafts in hundred thousands, sped from his bow, seemed to course through the welkin like a flight of locusts.110 those terrible shafts decked with gold, shot from the bow of Drona's son, coursed incessantly towards Bhima's car. 111 prowess, O Bharata, that we then beheld of Bhimasena, and his might, energy, and spirit, were exceedingly wonderful. 112 for, regarding that terrible shower of arrows, thick as a gathering mass of clouds, falling around him, to be nothing more than a downpour of rain at the close of summer, 118 Bhima of terrible prowess, desirous of slaying the son of Drona, in return poured his arrows upon the latter like a cloud in the season of Bhima's large and formidable bow of golden back, incessantly drawn in that battle, looked resplendent like a second bow of Indra.115 Shafts in hundreds and thousands, issuing from it, shrouded Drona's son, that ornament of battle, in that encounter.116 The showers of shafts, shot by both of them, were so dense, O sire, that the very wind, O king, could not find room for coursing through them. 117 Then Drona's son, O king, desirous of slaying Bhima, sped at him many gold-decked arrows of keen points steeped in oil.118 Showing his superiority to Drona's son, Bhimasena cut off each of those arrows into three fragments before they could come at him.

of Pandu then said, - Wait, Wait! 1119 - And once more the mighty son of Pandu filled with rage, and desirous of slaying the son of Drona, shot at him a terrible shower of fierce Then Drona's son, that warrior acquainted with the highest weapons, quickly destroying that arrowy shower by the illusion of his own weapons, cut off Bhima's bow in that encounter.121 Filled with rage, he then pierced Bhims himself with innumerable shafts in that battle. great might, Bhima then, after his bow had been cut off, hurled a dart at Açwatthaman's car, having whirled it previously with great impetuosity. The son of Drona, displaying the lightness of his hands in that encounter, quickly cut off, by means of sharp shafts, that dart as it coursed towards him with the splendour of a blazing brand. Meanwhile the terrible Vrikodara, taking up a very strong bow, and smiling the while, began to pierce the son of Drona with many arrows. Then Drona's son, O monarch, with a straight shaft, pierced the forehead of Bhima's driver. The latter, deeply pierced by the mighty son of Drona, 122-26 feil into a swoon, O king, abandoning the reins of the steeds. The driver of Bhima's car having fallen into a swoon, the steeds, O king, began to fly away with great speed, in the very sight of all the bowmen. Beholding Bhima carried away from the field of battle by those running steeds,127-28 the unvanquished Açwatthāman joyfully Beholding Bhimasena borne away from blew his huge conch. the field, all the Panchalas,129 inspired with fear, abandoning the car of Dhrishtadyumna, fled away on every side. Drona's son, shooting his shafts fiercely, pursued those broken troops, causing a great carnage among them. Thus slaughtered in battle by the son of Drona, those Kshatriyas fled away in all directions from fear of that warrior." "180-81

SECTION CCII.

Sanjaya said,—'Beholding that force broken, Kunti's son Dhananjaya of immeasurable soul proceeded against Açwatthāman from desire of slaying him.' Those troops then, O king, rallied with effort by Govinda and Arjuna, stayed on the field of battle.² Only Vibhatsu, supported by the Somakas and the Matsyas, shot his arrows at the Kauravas and checked their onset^{3*} Quickly approaching Açwatthāman, that great bowman having the mark of the lion's tail on his banner, Arjuna addressed him, saying, —Show me now the might thou hast, the energy, the knowledge, and the manliness, that are in thee, as also thy affection for the Dhārtarāshtras and thy hatred for us, and the highest mettle of which thou art capable! Even Prishata's son, that slayer of Drona, will quell thy pride today! —Come now and encounter the Pānchāla prince, that hero resembling the Yuga fire and like the Destroyer himself unto all his foes, as also myself with Govinda! Thou displayest thy pride in battle, but I shall quell that pride of thine!"

"Dhritarāshtra said,—'The preceptor's son, O Sanjaya, is possessed of might and worthy of respect! He beareth great love to Dhananjaya and the high-souled Dhananjaya also loveth him in return! Vibhatsu had never addressed Drona's son before in this way! Why then did the son of Kunti address his friend in such harsh words?"

"Sanjaya said,—"Upon the fall of the youthful prince of the Chedis, of Vrihatkhatra of Puru's race, and of Sudarcana, the chief of the Malavas, who was well-accomplished in the science of arms,10 and upon the defeat of Dhrishtadyumna and Satyaki and Bhima, and feeling great pain and touched to the quick by those words of Yudhishthira, and remembering all his former woes, O lord, Vibhatsu, in consequence of his grief, felt such wrath rise within him that he had never experienced its like before.11-12 It was for this that, like a vulgar person, he addressed the preceptor's son, who was worthy of every respect, in such unworthy, indecent, bitter, and harsh language.18 Addressed, from wrath, in such harsh and cruel words by Partha, O king, Drona's son, that foremost of all mighty bowmen, became highly angry with Partha and especially with Krishna. The valiant Acwatthaman then, staying resolutely on his car, touched water,14-15 and invoked the Agneya weapon incapable of being resisted by the very gods.

^{*} I adopt the Bombay reading .- T.

Aiming at all his visible and invisible foes, the preceptor's son,16 that slayer of hostile heroes, inspired with mantras a blazing shaft possessed of the effulgence of a smokeless fire, and let it off on all sides, filled with rage.17 Dense showers of arrows then issued from it in the welkin. Endued with fiery flames, those arrows encompassed Partha on all sides.18 Meteors flashed down from the firmament. A thick gloom suddenly shrouded the (Pandava) host. All the points of the compass also were enveloped by that darkness.19 Rākshashas and Picāchas, crowding together, uttered fiece cries. Inauspicious winds began to blow. The Sun himself no longer gave any heat. 20 Ravens fiercely croaked on all sides. Clouds roared in the welkin, showering blood.*1 Birds and beasts and kine, and Munis of high vows and souls under complete control, became exceedingly uneasy.22 The very elements seemed to be perturbed. The Sun seemed to turn round. The universe, scorched with heat, seemed to be in a fever.38 The elephants and other creatures of the land, scorched by the energy of that weapon, ran in fright, breathing heavily and desirous of protection against that terrible force.44 The very waters being heated, the creatures residing in that element, O Bharata, became exceedingly uneasy and seemed to burn.25 From all the points of the compass, cardinal and subsidiary, from the firmament and the very Earth, showers of sharp and fierce arrows fell and issued, with the impetuosity of Garuda or the wind.26 and burnt by those shafts of Acwatthaman that were all endued with the impetuosity of the thunder, the hostile warriors fell down like trees burnt down by a raging fire.27 phants, burnt by that weapon, fell down on the Earth all around, uttering fierce cries loud as those of the clouds.28 Other huge elephants, scorched by that fire, ran hither and thither, and roared aloud in fear, as if in the midst of a forest conflagration.29 The steeds, O king, and the cars also, burnt by the energy of that weapon, looked, O sire, like the tops of trees burnt in a forest fire. 80 Thousands of cars fell down on Indeed, O Bharata, it seemed that the divine lord all sides. Agni burnt the (Pāndava) host in that battle, 21 like the Samvarta fire consuming everything at the end of the Yuga.

"Beholding the Pandava army thus burning in that dreadful battle,82 thy soldiers, O king, filled with joy, uttered leonine shouts. Indeed, the combatants of thy army, desirous of victory and filled with joy, speedily blew thousands of trumpets, O Bhārata, of diverse kinds. Darkness having enveloped the world during that fierce battle, the entire Pandava army, with Savyaçāchin, the son of Pāndu, could not be had never before, O king, heard of or seen the like of that weapon which Drona's son created in wrath on that occasion. Then Arjuna, O king, invoked into existence the Brahma weapon, se-se capable of baffling every other weapon, as ordained by the Lotus-born (Brāhman) himself. Within a moment that darkness was dispelled.37 Cool winds began to blow, and all the points of the compass became clear and bright. then beheld a wonderful sight, viz., a full Akshauhini (of the Pandava troops) laid low. 88 Burnt by the energy of Açwatthaman's weapon, the forms of the slain could not be distinguished. Then those two heroic and mighty bowmen, viz., Keçava and Arjuna, freed from that darkness, 89 were seen together, like the Sun and the Moon in the firmament. Indeed, the wielder of Gandiva and Keçava were both un-Equipt with its banners and standard and steeds, with its Anukarsha uninjured, and with all the mighty weapons stored on it remaining uninjured, that car, so terrible to thy warriors, freed from that darkness, shone resplendent on the And soon there arose diverse sounds of life mingled with the blare of conchs and the beat of drums, from among the Pandava troops filled with joy.42 Both hosts had thought that Keçava and Arjuna had perished. Beholding Keçava and Arjuna, therefore, (freed from that darkness and the energy of that weapon), and seeing them reappear so quickly, the Pāndavas were filled with joy, and the Kauravas with wonder.48 Unwounded and full of cheerfulness, those two heroes blew their excellent conchs. Indeed, seeing the Parthas filled with joy, thy soldiers became exceedingly melancholy.44 those two high-souled ones, (viz., Keçava and Arjuna), freed (from the energy of his weapon) the son of Drona became very cheerless. For a moment he reflected, O sire, on what had happened.45 And having reflected, O king, he became filled with anxiety and grief. Breathing long and hot sighs, he became exceedingly cheerless.46 Laying aside his bow then, the son of Drona speedily alighted from his car, and saying,-O fie, O fie, Every thing is untrue!—he ran away from the fight.47 On his way he met Vyāsa, the abode of Saraswati, the compiler of the Vedas, the habitation of those scriptures, unstained by sin, and of the hue of rain-charged clouds.48 Beholding him, that perpetuater of Kuru's race, standing on his way, the son of Drona, with voice choked in grief, and like one exceedingly cheerless, saluted him and said,49-O sire, O sire, is this an illusion, or is it a caprice (on the part of the weapon)! I do not know what it is! Why, indeed, hath my weapon become fruitless? What breach (has there been in the method of invocation)?50 Or, is it something abnormal, or, is it a victory over Nature (achieved by the two Krishnas) since they are yet alive? It seems that Time is irresistible !51 Asuras, nor Gandharvas, nor Piçāchas, nor Rākshasas, nor Uragas, Yakshas, and birds, nor human beings,52 can venture to baffle this weapon shot by me! This fiery weapon, however, having slain only one Akshauhini of troops, hath been pacified! 158 This exceedingly fierce weapon shot by me is capable of slaying all creatures! For what reason then could it not slay Kecava and Arjuna both of whom are endued with the attributes of humanity !54 Asked by me, O holy one, answer me truly! O great Muni, I desire to hear all this in detail!55-

"'Vyāsa said,—Of high significance is this matter that thou enquirest of me from surprise! I will tell thee everything, listen attentively! He that is called Nārāyana is older than the oldest ones. For accomplishing some purpose, that Creator of the universe took his birth as the son of Dharma. On the mountains of Himavat he underwent the severest ascetic austerities. Endued with mighty energy, and resembling fire or the Sun (in splendour), he stood there with arms upraised. Possessed of eyes like lotus petals, he emaciated himself there for six and sixty thousand years, subsisting all the while upon air alone. Once more undergoing severe austerities of another kind for twice that period, he filled the space be tween Earth and heaven with his energy.60 When by those austerities, O sire, he became like Brahma,* he then behold Master, Origin, and Guardian of the Universe, the Lord of all the gods, the Supreme Deity, who is exceedingly difficult of being gazed at, who is minuter than the minutest and larger than the largest, 61-68 who is called Rudra, + who is the Lord of all the superior ones, who is called Hara and Cambhu, who has matted locks on his head, who is the infuser of life into every form, who is the First cause of all immobile and mobile things,68 who is irresistible and of frightful aspect, who is of fierce wrath and great soul, who is the All-destroyer, and of large heart; who bareth the celestial bow and a couple of quivers, who is cased in golden armour, and whose energy is infinite,64 who holdeth Pināka, who is armed with thunderbolt, blazing trident, battle-axe, mace, and a large sword; whose eye-brows are fair, whose locks are matted, who wieldeth the heavy short club, who hath the moon on his forehead, who is clad in tiger-skin, and who is armed with the bludgeon;65 who is decked with beautiful angadas, who hath snakes for his sacred thread, and who is surrounded by diverse creatures of the universe and by numerous ghosts and spirits; who is the One; who is the abode of ascetic austerities, and who is highly adored by persons of venerable age; 66 who is Water, Heaven, Sky, Earth, Sun, Moon, Wind, and Fire, and who is the measure of the duration of the universe. Persons of wicked behaviour can never obtain a sight of that unborn one, that slayer of all haters of Brahmanas, that giver of emancipation. $10. Only Brahmanas of righteous conduct, when cleansed of their sins and freed from the control of grief, behold him with their ^{*} Nilkantha explains this to mean that when he became unconnected with the world, rising superior to everything connected with the world.—T.

⁺ The terrible .- T.

[‡] Amritasya yonim, literally, the origin or cause of immortality, i, e, he from whom immortality springs. Hence, as explained by Nilakantha, the phrase means the source of salvation, for those only that are emancipate become immortal as the Supreme Soul itself.—T.

In consequence of his ascetic austerities, Narayana mind's eye. obtained a sight of that unfading one, that embodiment of righteousness, that adorable one, that Being having the universe for his form. Beholding that supreme abode of all kinds of splendour, that god with a garland of Akshas round his neck, Vasudeva, with gratified soul, became filled with delight which he sought to express by words, heart, understanding, and body. Then Nārayana worshipped that Divine Lord, that First cause of the Universe, 68-69 that giver of boons, that puissant one sporting with the fair-limbed Parvati, that high-souled Being surrounded by large bands of ghosts and spirits,70 that Unborn one, that supreme Lord, that embodiment of the Unmanifest, that Essence of all causes, that one of Unfading power. Having saluted Rudra, that destroyer of the Asura Andhaka, the lotus-eyed Nārāyana, with devotion filling his heart, began to praise the Three-eyed one (in these words):71-O adorable one, O first of all the gods, the creators of everything, (viz., the Prajāpatis.) who are the regents of the world, and who, having entered the Earth,-thy first work,-had, O lord, protected it before, have all sprung from thee ! " Gods, Asuras, Nagas, Rākshasas, Piçāchas, human beings, birds, Gandharvas, Yakshas, and other creatures, with the entire Universe, we know, have all sprung from thee !" Everything that is done for propitiating Indra, and Yama, and Varuna, and Kuvera, and the Pitris, and Tashtri, and Soma, is really offered to thee! Form and light, sound and sky, wind and touch, taste and water, scent and earth, *74 Time, Brahman himself, the Vedas, the Brahmanas, and all these mobile and immobile objects, have sprung from thee! Vapours rising from diverse receptacles of water, become rain-drops, which, falling upon the Earth, are separated from one another. When the time of the Universal dissolution comes, those individual drops, separated from one another, once more unite together and make the Earth one vast He that is learned, thus observing the expanse of water.75

^{*} I. c., the five attributes perceivable by the five senses, with the five objects of Nature with which they are directly connected or inwhich they manifest themselves .- T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 14:13 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112
Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google

origin and the destruction of all things, understands thy One-Two birds, (viz., Icwara and Jiva), four Acwatthas with their wordy branches, (viz., the Vedas), the seven guardians (viz., the five essences or elements and the heart and the understanding,) and the ten others that hold this city (viz., the ten senses that constitute the body), have all been created by thee, but thou art separate from and independent of them! The Past, the Future, and the Present, over each of which none can have any sway, are from thee, as also the seven worlds and this Universe :77 I am thy devoted adorer, be graceful unto me! Do not injure me, by causing evil thoughts to penetrate my heart! Thou art the Soul of souls, incapable of being known. He that knows thee as the Universal Seed attaineth to Brahma.78 Desiring to pay thee respects, I am praising thee, endeavouring to ascertain thy real nature. O thou that art incapable of being understood by the very gods! Adored by me, grant me the boons I desire but which are difficult of acquisition! Do not hide thyself in thy illusion!]79-

"'Vyasa continued,-The blue-throated god of inconceivable soul, that wielder of Pinaka, that divine Lord ever praised by the Rishis, then gave boons unto Vasudeva who deserved The great God said,-[O Nārāyana, through my grace, amongst men, gods, and Gandharvas, thou shalt be of immeasurable might and soul! Neither gods, nor Asuras, nor great Uragas, nor Piçāchas, nor Gandharvas, nor men, nor Rākshasas, nor birds, nor Nāgas, nor any creatures in the Universe, shall ever be able to bear thy prowess! No one amongst even the celestials shall be able to vanquish thee in battle !*1-32 Through my grace, none shall ever be able to cause thee pain by weapon or thunder-bolt or fire or wind or with any object that is wet or dry, or with any mobile or immobile thing! Thou shalt be superior to myself if thou ever goest to battle with me ! 34-25 Thus were these boons acquired by Caurin in days of yore. Even that god now walketh (as Vāsudeva), beguiling the universe by his illusion.86 Nārāyana's asceticism was born a great Muni of the name of Nara, equal to Nārāyana himself. Know that Arjuna is none else than that Nara !37 Those two Rishis, said to be older than the oldest gods, take their births in every Yuga for subserving the purposes of the world.88 Thyself also, O thou of great heart, hast been born as a portion of Rudra, by virtue of all thy religious acts and as a consequence of high ascetic austerities, endued with great energy and wrath " Thou wert (in a former life) endued with great wisdom and equal to a god! Regarding the universe to consist only of Mahadeva, thou hadst emaciated thyself by diverse vows from desire of gratifying that god.90 Assuming the form of a very superior person, that blazed with splendour, thou hadst, O giver of honors, worshipped the great god with mantras, with homa, and with offerings. 91 Thus adored by thee in thy former life, the god became gratified with thee, and granted thee numerous boons, O learned one, that thou hadst cherished in Like Keçava's and Arjuna's, thy birth, acts, and ascetic austerities, are superior also! Like them, in thy worship, thou hast, in every Yuga, adored the great god in his Phallic form. 98 This Keçava is that devoted worshipper of Rudra who has sprung from Rudra himself! Keçava always worships the Lord Civa, regarding his Phallic emblem to be the origin of the Universe.94 In Keçava is always present that knowledge in consequence of which he views the identity of Brahma with the universe, and that other knowledge by which the Past, the Present, and the Future, the near and the remote, is all seen as if the whole were before his eyes. gods, the Siddhas, and the great Rishis, adore Kecava for obtaining that highest object in the universe, viz., Mahādeva. Keçava is the Creator of everything. The Eternal Krishna should be adored with sacrifices. 95-96 The Lord Keçava always worshipeth Civa in the PhaHic emblem as the origin of all The god having the bull for his mark cherisheth greater regard for Keçava.] 7-

"Sanjaya continued,—'Hearing these words of Vyāsa, Drona's son, that mighty car-warrior, bowed unto Rudra and regarded Keçava as worthy of the highest regards." Having his soul under complete control, he became filled with delight, the marks whereof appeared on his body. Bowing unto the great Rishi, Açwatthāman then, casting his eyes on the (Kuru) army, caused it to be withdrawn (for nightly rest). Indeed, when, after the fall of Drona, the cheerless Kurus retired from the field, the Pāndavas also, O monarch, caused their army to be withdrawn. Having fought for five days and caused an immense carnage, that Brāhmana well-versed in the Vedas, viz., Drona, repaired, O king, to the region of Brahman! "101

SECTION CCIII.

"Dhritarāshtra said,—"Upon the slaughter of that Atiratha, viz., Drona, by Prishata's son, what did my sons and the Pāndavas next do?"

"Sanjaya said,—"After the rout of the Kuru army upon the slaughter of that Atiratha, viz., Drona, by Prishata's son, Dhananjaya the son of Kunti, beholding a wonderful phenomenon in connection with his own victory, asked Vyāsa, O bull of Bharata's race, who came thither in course of his wanderings, saying—O great Rishi, while I was engaged in slaying the foe in battle, with showers of bright shafts, I continually beheld before me, proceeding in advance of my car, a person of blazing hue, as if endued with the effulgence of fire. Withersoever he proceeded with his uplifted lance, all the hostile warriors were seen to break before him.4-5 Broken in reality by him, people regarded the foe to have been broken by me. Following in his wake I only destroyed those already destroyed by him. O holy one, tell me who was that foremost of persons, armed with lance, resembling the Sun himself in energy, that was thus seen by me? He did not touch the Earth with his feet, nor did he hurl his lance even once. In consequence of his energy, thousands of lances issued out of that one lance held by him !8-

"Vyāsa said,—Thou hast, O Arjuna, seen Cankara, that First cause from which have sprung the Prajāpatis, that puissant Being endued with great energy, he that is the embodiment of heaven, Earth, and Sky, the Divine Lord, the protector of the universe, the great Master, the giver of boons, called also Içāna! O, seek the protection of that boon-giving Deity, that lord of the universe! ⁹⁻¹⁰ He is called Mahā

Generated on 2022-02-03 14:13 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

deva (the Supreme Deity), of Supreme Soul, the one only Lord, with matted locks (on head), the abode of auspicious-Of three eyes and mighty arms, he is called Rudra, with his locks tied in the shape of a crown, and his body attired in That boon-giving lord of the universe, that Supreme Deity, is also called Hara and Sthanu. He is the foremost of every being in the universe, he is incapable of being vanquished; he is the delighter of the universe and its Supreme ruler." The first cause, the light and refuge of the universe, he is ever The Soul and the Creator of the universe, and having the universe for his form, he is possessed of great fame.18 The Lord of the universe, and its great Ruler, that puissant one is also the master of all actions. Cambhu, he is Self-born, he is the lord of all creatures, and the origin of the Past, the Future, and the Present.14 He is Yoga and the lord of Yoga; he is called Sarva, and is the Lord of the lord of all the worlds. He is superior to every-The foremost of everything in the Universe, and the highest of all, he is called also Paramesthin.16 The Ordainer of the three worlds, he is the sole refuge of the three worlds. Incapable of being vanquished, he is the Protector of the universe, and above (the necessity of) birth, decay, and death.16 The soul of knowledge, incapable of being compassed by knowledge, and the highest of all knowledge, he is unknowable. Through grace, he giveth unto his worshippers the boons they That Lord hath for his companions ceslestial beings of diverse forms, some of whom are dwarfs, some having matted locks, some with bald heads, some with short necks, some with large stomachs,18 some with huge bodies, some possessed of great strength, and some of long ears. All of them, O Parths, have deformed faces and mouths and legs, and strange attires.18-19 That Supreme Deity, called Mahadeva, is worshipped by followers that are even such. Even that Civa, O son, endued with such energy, proceedeth through kindness, in advance of In that fierce battle, O Partha, making the very hair stand on end, who else, O Arjuna, than the divine Mahecwara, that foremost of all bowmen, that deity of divine forms, could even in imagnation venture to vanquish that force which was protected by those great smiters and bowmen, viz., Açwatthāman and Karna and Kripa ?*1-82 None can venture to stay before the warrior that hath Mahecwara walking before There is no being in the three worlds that is equal to At the very scent of the enraged Mahadeva, foes in battle tremble and become senseless and fall in large numbers.34 For this the gods in heaven always adore and bow to him. Those men in this world and those other men of pious conduct,25 that devoutly worship the boon-giving, divine, and auspicious Rudra, obtain happiness here and attain to the highest state hereafter.26 O son of Kunti, bow unto him that is peace, unto him called Rudra, of blue throat, exceedingly subtile, and of great effulgence;27 unto him called Kaparddin, him that is terrible, him that is of tawny eyes, him that is boon-giving; unto that great ordainer, of red locks, and righteous conduct; unto him that always does auspicious acts;28 unto him that is an object of desire, him that is of tawny eyes, him that is called Sthanu; him that is called Purusha; unto him that is of tawny hair, him that is bald, him that is exceedingly subtile and of great effulgence; 39 unto him that is the giver of light, him that is the embodiment of all sacred waters, him that is the God of gods, and him that is endued with great impetuosity; unto him that is of manifest form, him that is called Sarva, him that is of agreeable, attire; so unto him that has an excellent head-gear, him that is of handsome face, him that is of a thousand eyes, him that is the giver of rain; him that has the mountains for his habitation, him that is Peace, him that is the Protector, him that has barks of trees for his attire; 11 him whose arms are decked with ornaments of gold, him who is fierce, him that is the lord of all the points of the compass; him that is the lord of the clouds and of all created beings; sa him that is the lord of all trees and of all kine; him that has his body shrouded with trees; him who is the celestial generalissimo, him who inspires all thoughts; 88 him who has the sacrificial laddle in his hand, him who is blazing, him who wields the bow, him who is Rāma's self; him who has diverse forms, him who is the lord him who has the munja grass for his universe, attire; 4 him who has a thousand heads, a thousand eyes, a thousand arms, and a thousand legs !55 O son of Kunti, seek the protection of that boon-giving Lord of the universe, that lord of $Um\bar{a}$, that god of three eyes, that destroyer of Daksha's sacrifice; st that guardian of all created things, that being who is always cheerful, that protector of all beings, that god of unfading glory; that one with matted locks, that mover of all superior beings, that one whose navel is like that of a bull and who hath the bull for his mark; 57 that one who is proud like the bull, who is the lord of bulls, who is represented by the horns of the bull, and who is the bull of bulls; that one who hath the image of the bull on his banner, who is liberal to all righteous persons, who can be approached by Yoga only, and whose eyes are like those of a bull; 38 who owneth very superior weapons, who hath Vishnu himself for his arrow, who is the embodiment of righteousness; and who is called Mahecwara; who is of vast stomach, and vast body; who hath a leopard's skin for his seat, 30 who is the lord of the worlds, who is bald, who is devoted to Brahma and who loveth Brāhmanas; who is armed with the trident, who is boon-giving, who wieldeth the sword and the shield, and who is highly auspicious!40 who wieldeth the bow called Pināka, who is divested of the battle-axe; * and who is the protector and lord of the universe! I place myself in the hands of that divine Lord, that grantor of protection, that god attired in deer-Salutations to that Lord of the celestials who hath Salutations ever to him of ex-Vaicravana for his friend! cellent vows, to him who hath excellent bowmen for his companions,41-42 to him who himself wieldeth the bow, to that god with whom the bow is a favorite weapon, who is himself the shaft impelled by the bow; who is the bowstring and the bow, and the preceptor teaching the use of the bow!48 Salutations to the god whose weapons are fierce, and who is the foremost of all the gods! Salutations to him of diverse forms, to him who hath many bowmen around him!44 Salutations ever to him who is called Sthanu and who has a large number of excellent bowmen for his companions! Salutations to him who destroyed the tripple city! Salutations to him who slew (the Asura) Bhaga! 46-46 Salutations to him who is the lord of trees and of men! Salutations to him who is the lord of the (celestial) Mothers, and of those tribes of spirits known by the name of Ganas! Salutations ever to him who is the lord of kine and of sacrifices! Salutations ever him to who is the lord of waters and the lord of the gods,47 who is the destroyer of Surya's teeth, who is of three eyes, who is the grantor of boons; who is called Hara, who is blue-throated, and who is of golden locks!48 I will now tell thee, according to my knowledge and as I have heard of them, all the divine deeds of Mahādeva of supreme wisdom.49 If Mahādeva becomes angry, neither gods, nor Asuras, nor Gandharvas, nor Rākshasas, even if they hide themselves in deep caves, can have peace !50 In days of yore, Daksha, for performing a sacrifice, had collected the necessary articles. Mahādevea destroyed Indeed, he became very stern on that sacrifice in wrath. that occasion.61 Shooting an arrow from his bow, he uttered The celestials then became filled with anxiety terrible roars. and fright. 12 Indeed, when Mahadeva became angry and the Sacrifice (in its embodied form) fled away, the gods became exceedingly frightened at the twang of Mahadeva's bow and the sound of his palms. 58 The gods and the Asuras all fell All the waters swelled down and submitted to Mahadeva. up in agitation, and the Earth trembled.54 The mountains split, and all the points of the compass and the Nagas became stupified. The universe, enveloped in a thick darkness, could no longer be seen.55 The splendour of all luminaries with The Rishis, filled with fear, became the Sun was destroyed. agitated, and desirous of their own good as also of all creatures, performed propitiatory rites. Surya was then eating the Smilingly Cankara approached principal sacrificial oblation. him and tore out his teeth. The gods then, humbling themselves to him, fled away, trembling. 56-58 Once more Mahadeva aimed at the gods a shower of blazing and keen arrows resembling flames of fire mixed with smoke, or clouds with lightning.59 Beholding that arrowy shower, all the gods, bowing down unto Mahecwara, assigned to Rudra a substantial share in sacrifices. In fright, the gods, O prince, sought his protection. His wrath being dispelled, the great god then re-established the sacrifice. 61 The gods that had fled away came back. deed, they are to this day afraid of Mahecwara. Formerly the valiant Asuras had, in heaven, three cities. 2 Each of those cities was excellent and large. One was made of iron, another of silver, and the third of gold. The golden city belonged to Kamalaksha, the silver city to Tarakaksha, and the third, made of iron, had Vidyunmalin for its lord. With all his weapons, Maghavat (Indra) was unable to make any impression on those cities. 4 Afflicted (by the Asuras), all the gods sought the protection of Rudra. Approaching him, all the gods with Vasava at their head, said, 65-These terrible dwellers of the tripple city have received boons from Brahman! Filled with pride in consequence of those boons, they are greatly afflicting the universe. 66 O Lord of the god of gods, none, save thee, is competent to slay them! Therefore, O Mahādeva, slay these enemies of the gods! O Rudra, creatures slain in every sacrifice shall then be thine !- O lord of the universe, I will overthrow these Asuras!  Thus addressed by the gods, Mahādeva thus accepted their request, moved by the desire of benefiting them. And Hara made the two mountains, viz., Gandhamādana and Vindhya, the two bamboo poles of his car.69 And Cankara made the Earth with her oceans and forests his battle car. And the three-eved deity made that prince of snakes, viz., Cesha, the Aksha, of that car.  And that god of gods, the wielder of Pinaka, made the Moon and the Sun the two wheels of that vehicle. And the trippleeyed Lord made Elapatra and Pushpadanta the two pins of the yoke.71 And the valiant Mahadeva made the Malaya mountains the yoke, and the great Takshaka the string for tying the yoke to the poles, and the creatures about him the traces of the steeds.73 And Mahecwara made the four Vedas his four steeds. And that lord of the three worlds made the supplementary Vedas the bridle-bits.73 And Mahadeva made Gaytri and Savitri the reins, the syllable Om the whip, and Brahman the driver. 74 And making the Mandara mountains the bow, Vāsuki the bowstring. Vishnu his excellent shaft, Agni the arrow-head,76 and Vyau the two wings of that shaft, Yama the feathers in its tail, Lightning the whetting stone, and Meru the standard, "6 Civa, riding on that excellent car which was composed of all the celestial forces, proceeded for the destruction of the tripple city. Indeed, Sthanu, that foremost of smiters, that Destroyer of Asuras, that handsome warrior of immeasurable prowess, adored by the celestials, O Partha, and by Rishis possessing wealth of asceticism,77-78 caused an excellent and unrivalled array called after his own name, and stood immovable for a thousand years.79 When, however, the three cities came together in the firmament, the lord Mahadeva pierced them with that terrible shaft of his, consisting of three knots.80 The Danavas were unable to gaze at that shaft inspired with the Yuga fire and composed of Vishnu and Soma. 31 While the tripple city commenced to burn, the goddess Parvati repaired thither to behold the sight. She had then on her lap a child having a bald head with five clumps of hair on it. 32 The goddess asked the deities as to who that child was. Cakra, through ill feeling, endeavoured to strike that child with his thunder-bolt.83 The divine lord Mahadeva (for the child was none other), smiling, quickly paralysed the arm of the enraged Cakra. 44 Then the god Cakra, with his arm paralysed, accompanied by all the celestials, speedily repaired to the lord Brahman of unfading glory.85 Bowing unto him with their heads, they addressed Brahman with joined hands and said .-Some wonderful creature, O Brahman, lying on the lap of Parvati,36 in the form of a child, was beheld by us but not We have all been vanquished by him! fore, desire to ask thee as to who he may be !87 Indeed, that boy, without fighting, hath with the greatest ease vanquished us all with Purandara at our head!-Hearing these words of theirs, Brahman, that foremost of all persons acquainted with Brahma,  reflected for a moment and understood that boy of immeasurable energy to be none else than the divine Cambhu. Addressing then those foremost of celestials with Cakra at their head, Brahman said, 89-[That child is the divine Hara, the Lord of the entire mobile and immobile Universe.

^{*} Having given it away to Rama, his disciple.-T.

Generated on 2022-02-03 14:13 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112
Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google

is nothing superior to Mahecwara." That Being of immeasurable splendour who was beheld by you all with Uma, that divine lord, had assumed the form of a child for Umā's sake." Let us all go unto him! That divine and illustrious one is the Supreme Lord of the whole world." Ye gods, ye could not recognise that master of the Universe !- Then all the gods with the Grandsire repaired to that child endued with the effulgence of the morning Sun. Beholding Mahecwara, and knowing that he was the Supreme Being, the Grandsire Brahman thus adored him: - 98-94 Thou art Sacrifice, O lord, and thou art the stay and refuge of the Universe! Thou art Bhava, thou art Mahadeva, thou art the abode (of all things), and thou art the highest refuge!95 This whole universe with its mobile and immobile creatures, is pervaded by thee! O holy one, O lord of the Past and the Future, O lord of the world, O protector of the Universe, let Cakra, afflicted with thy wrath, have thy grace !] 6-

"Vyāsa continued,—Hearing these words of the lotus-born Brahman, Mahegwara became gratified. Desirous of extending his grace, he laughed aloud. The celestials then gratified (with praise) both Umā and Rudra. The arm of the thunderwielding Cakra resumed its natural state. 98 That foremost one of all the gods, that Destroyer of Daksha's sacrifice, that divine lord having the bull for his sign, became gratified with the gods.99 He is Rudra, he is Civa, he is Agni, he is Everything, and he hath knowledge of Everything. Indra, he is the Wind, he is the twin Acwins, and he is the lightning.100 He is Bhava, he is Parjanya, he is Mahādeva, He is the Moon, he is Içana, he is Surya, he is He is Kāla, he is Antaka, he is Mrityu, he is He is the Day, and he is the Night. He is the Fortnight, he is the Month, he is the Seasons. He is the morning and evening Twilights, he is the Year.103 He is Dhatri, he is Vidhatri, he is the Soul of the universe, and he is the doer of all acts in the universe. Though himself without body, he it is who is the embodied celestials.103 Endued with great splendour,

^{*} All these terms imply Death or the Destroyer .- T.

he is adored and praised by all the gods. He is One, He is Many, he is hundred thousand.164 Brāhmanas versed in the Vedas say that he hath two forms. These are the terrible and the auspicious. These two forms again are multifarious.105 His terrible forms are Fire, Vishnu, and the Sun. His auspicious forms are Water, Light, and the Moon. 106 Whatever is highly mysterious in the several branches of the Vedas, in the Upanishads, in the Puranas, and in those sciences that deal with the soul, is that god, viz., Maheçāwara.107 Mahādeva is even such. That god is again without birth. All the attributes of that god are not capable of being enumerated by me,108 even if, O son of Pandu, I were to recite them continually for a thousand years. Even unto those that are afflicted by all the evil planets, even unto those that are stained with every sin,109-10 that great protector, if they seek him, is gratified with them and granteth them salvation! He granteth, and again taketh away, life and health and prosperity and wealth and diverse kinds of objects of desire. The prosperity is his that is seen in Indra and the other gods.111 He is ever engaged in the good and evil of men in this world. In consequence of his supremacy he can always obtain whatever objects he desires.118 He is called Mahecwara and is the lord of even the supreme In many forms of many kinds he pervadeth the uni-The mouth which that god has is in the Ocean. It is well known that that mouth, assuming the form of a mare's head, drinketh the sacrificial libation in the shape of water.114 This god always dwelleth in crematoriums. worship that Supreme lord in that place where none but the courageous can go.115 Many are the blazing and terrible forms of this god that men speak of and worship in the world.116 Many also are the names, of truthful import, of this deity in all the worlds. Those names are founded upon his supremacy, his omnipotence, and his acts. In the Veda the excellent hymn, called Cata Rudriya, hath been sung in honor of that great god called the infinite Rudra.118 That god is the lord of all wishes that are human and heavenly. He is omnipotent, and he is the supreme master. Indeed, that god pervadeth the vast universe.119 The Brahmanas and the Munis describe him as the First-born of all creatures. First of all the gods; from his mouth was born the wind." And since he always protecteth the creatures (of the universe) and sporteth with them, and since also he is the lord of all creatures, therefore is he called Pacupati.181 And since his Phallic emblem is always supposed to be in the observance of the vow of Brahmacharya, and since he always gladdens the world, therefore is he called Mahecwara.122 The Rishis, the gods, the Gandharvas, and the Apsaras, always worship his Phallic emblem which is supposed to stand upright.125 That worship maketh Maheçwara glad. Indeed, Cankara (at such worship) becomes happy, pleased, and highly glad.184 And since with respect to the past, the future, and the present, that god has many forms both mobile and immobile, he is, on that account, called Vahurupa (many-formed).125 ed of one eye he blazeth forth in effulgence, or he may be regarded to have many eyes on every side of his body. since, in wrath, he possesseth the worlds, he is for that reason called Sarva.126 And since his form is like that of smoke, he is for that reason called Dhurjjati. And since those deities, viz., the Vicwedevas, are in him, he is for that reason called Vicwarupa.127 And since three goddesses adore and have recourse to that Lord of the universe, viz., Firmament, Water, and Earth, he is for that reason called Tryamvaka. 128 since he always increaseth all kinds of wealth and wisheth the good of mankind in all their acts, he is for that reason called Civa.189 He possesseth a thousand eyes, or ten thousand eyes, or hath them on all sides. And since he protecteth this vast universe, he is for that reason called Mahādeva. 180 since he is Great and Ancient and is the source of life and of its continuance, and since his Phallic emblem is everlasting, he is for that reason called Sthanu.181 And since the solar and the lunar rays of light that appear in the world are spoken of as the hair on that Three-eyed one, he is for that reason called Vyomakeça.182 And since, afflicting Brahman and Indra and Varuna and Yama and Kuvera, he destroyeth them ultimately, he is for that reason called Hara.188 And since he is the Past the Future, and the Present, and, in fact, everything in the universe, and since he is the origin of the Past, the Future, and the Present, he is for that reason called Bhava.154 word Kapi is said to mean Supreme, and Vrisha is said to mean That illustrious god of gods, therefore, is called righteousness. Vrishākapi. 156 And since Mahecwara, by means of his two eyes closed (in meditation), created through sheer force of will a third eye on his forehead, he is for that reason called the Three-eyed. 186 Whatever of unsoundness there is in the bodies of living creatures, and whatever of soundness there is in them, represent that god. He is the wind, the vital airs called Prāna, Apāna (and the others) in the bodies of all creatures, including even those that are diseased.187 He who adoreth any image or the Phallic emblem of that high-souled god, always obtaineth great prosperity by that act.188 Down wards from the two thighs are fiery, and half the body that is auspicious is the moon. So also half his soul is fire and half the moon. 139 His auspicious form, full of energy, is more blazing than the forms of the gods. Amongst men, his blazing and terrible form is called fire. 140 With that auspicious form he practiseth Brahmacharya. With that other terrible form that he has, that supreme Lord devoureth everything.141 And since he burneth, since he is keen, since he is fierce, since he is endued with great prowess. and since he devoureth flesh and blood and marrow, he is for this called Rudra. 142 Even such is the deity called Mahadeva. armed with Pināka, who, O Pārtha, was seen by thee, engaged in slaying thy foes in advance of thy car.148 After thou hadst vowed to slay the ruler of the Sindhus, O sinless one. Krishna showed thee this god, in thy dream, sitting on the top of that foremost of mountains.144 That illustrious god proceedeth in advance of thee in battle. It is he who gave thee those weapons with which thou didst slay the Danavas. 145 The hymn approved of by the Vedas, and called Cata-Rudriya, in honor of that god of gods, that excellent, famous, life-enhancing, and sacred hymn, has now, O Partha, been explained This hymn of four divisions, capable of accomplishing every object, is sacred, destructive of all sins, and competent to drive away all stains and kill all sorrows and all The man that always listens to it succeeds in vanquish-

Generated on 2022-02-03 14:14 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized /

ing all his foes and is highly respected in the region of Rudra. The person who always attentively reads or listens to the recitation of this excellent and auspicious account, appertaining to battle, of the illustrious deity, and who worships with devotion that illustrious Lord of the universe, obtains all the high objects of desire, in consequence of the three-eyed God being gratified with him. Go and fight, O son of Kunti, defeat is not for thee, thee that hast Janarddana on thy side for thy adviser and protector!—'151

"Sanjaya said,—'Having addressed Arjuna in these words, the son of Parāçara, O chief of the Bharatas, went away to the place he came from, O chastiser of foes!"

SECTION CCIV.

"Sanjaya said,—"Having battled fiercely for five days, O king, the Brāhmana (Drona) endued with great strength, fell and repaired to the region of Brahman! The fruits that arise from a study of the Vedas arise from a study of this Parvan also. The great achievements of brave Kshatriyas have been described here." He who readeth or listeneth to the recitation of this Parvan every day is freed from heinous sins and the most atrocious acts of his life. Brāhmanas may always obtain herefrom the fruits of sacrifices. From this Kshatriyas may obtain victory in fierce battle. The other orders (viz., Vaiçyas and Cudras) may obtain desirable sons and grandsons and all objects of desire!"

FINIS DRONA PARVA.

Generated on 2022-02-03 14:14 GMT

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

The progress of the English translation of the Mahabharata under the enterprise and supervision of Mr. Protap Chundra Roy, has been noticed by us at intervals in the last three years, and a few days ago we had to acknowledge the receipt of a fresh instalment of the work. now quote with pleasure, an extract from the letter of a French professor of note in Paris, affording additional testimony to the unique: value of the great Hindoo epic, and to the advisability of clothing it in an appropriate English dress. M. Sylvain Levi, Professor in the Schoolof Higher Studies in the French capital, writes as follows :-

"The Mahabharata is not only the largest, but also the grandest of all Epies, as it contains throughout a lively teaching of morals under a: If ever national spirit may be fostered in glorious garment of poetry. India, it is only through a study of national antiquities, national literature, and national ethics."

It is to be regretted that the woak is so costly, but the fact that it is of national importance, and has made sufficient progress almost to guarantee its completion, and further that the cost under any circumstances would be unavoidable-lead us to recommend strongly that an effort should be made to get it out of hand. The work has to be done, and the cost will probably be Rs. 100,000, but as one half the task has been accomplished, Governmental and private support should be forthcoming for its completion. Statesman, April 25, 1888

REVIEW.

THE MAHABHARATA, Translated into English Prose. By PROTAP CHANDRA RAI. Calcutta: Bharata Press.

This vast national undertaking has now advanced onethird of the way towards completion. Unlike most enterprises of great extent, the promoters of which generally tire of their task, and hurry it on to an ignominious end, this translation certainly improves as it proceeds, and shows that more and more pains are being taken to render it accurate The point now reached is that portion of the Bhishmaand valuable. parvan which rehearses the Bhagavad-Gita, or "Song of the Lord," so justly famous as the exponent of the most exalted view of Hinduism. This part of the book is sure to be very well read, for it not only sets forth clearly the dogmas of esoteric Hinduism, but, at the same time, presents that religion in its most favorable aspect.

The translator now carefully annotates as he proceeds, using as his guides the works of Sankara, Sridhara, Telang, and the famous Comment of Nilakantha. Literal exactness has been essayed rather than elegance; and this is especially commendable, for the whole narrative is presensed in its simple nakedness without any attempt at artificial adornment, and, better still, without any attempt, by dexterous manipulation of words, to give a higher or different meaning to that of the ancient writers. The text, in fact, is presented word for word, as far as the nature of the two languages admits.

It is true that exception may be taken to the translation in many It is impossible that this should not be the case. A task of this nature bristles with difficulties, and scholars will ever be divided in opinion on hosts of passages; still there can be no doubt that the translator gives us in his work a reasonably accurate version in English of the entire book, and, by doing so, places the mass of traditions it contains within easy reach of the entire civilised world. Sanskritists themselves will be glad of the aid which this version affords, in readily searching for facts, and bringing together comparative passages, the precise terms of which can be afterwards verified by the Sanskrit text. The translation, therefore, even to the specially qualified, is an admirable labour-saving Another detail, facilitating reference to the original, is now being introduced,—viz., small figures, indicating where the Sanskrit stanzas commence; thus, any line of the translation can with rapidity be compared with the original.

It must never be forgotten that Pratap Chandra Roy commenced this great and costly labour at his expense, with the noble intention of distributing as many copies gratis as his means could afford. redeemed his promise, and is now faithfully supplying part by part free of cost, to those who early established their claim to the privilege. Others are supplied at varying prices, according to their means; but in every case the price asked is insignificant, and far beneath the prime cost of There are however, indications that the more careprinting the book. ful way in which the work is now being done, is exhausting the resources of the brave-hearted man who has undertaken the task. It is most earnestly to be hoped that the work may not have to stop for want of funds. It is more than a national enterprise; it is a work in which the whole civilised world is interested; and it would not only be a disaster, but a disgrace, if the translator did not receive the support necessary to enable him to complete his gigantic enterprise.

FREDERIC PINCOTT.

From the "JOURNAL DES SAVANTES" of Sept. 1886.

THE MAHABHARATA.

The Mahābhārata of Krishna-Dwaipayana Vyāsa, tran-Published by Protap Chandra slated into English prose. Roy, Calcutta, Bhārata Press, in 8vo., 1883-1887;—the first four volumes.

The translation of the Mahabharata is certainly one of the most arduous undertakings which Philology can possibly It is not that the text is difficult to render into any other language, but the poem has more than two hundredthousand verses. This is colossal, and no one, who commences this task can flatter himself by thinking that he will be able to bring it to a termination. Among us, a trial was attempted by M. Hippolyte Fauche, who, midway, was surprised by death. He was full of courage, but had come to the In India there has been a new translaend of his strength. tion, this time in English, which was commenced four years ago, and has reached the 5th volume. It has every chance of On our part we sincerely wish that it may succeed. success.

Babu Protap Chandra Roy, who was come forward to accamplish this work of time, unites in himself all the conditions which safe-guard him from failure. He knows the language of the original better no doubt than others can know it, he writes English with perfect correctness, as is testified to by the most competent judges, he is animated with an enthusiasm which sustains him in his hard work, and he has taken every precaution so that this grand project may be continued after him, if by any chance he should fail to accom-The personal history of the Babu is very plish it himself. touching, and deserves some notice, as a knowledge of the details will enable one to appreciate better the publication which he is carrying on with such rare energy and at such self-sacrifice.

Mr. Protap Chandra Ray has been a librarian and commission-agent (Mercantile), and by his labors has honorably Having lost his wife, of whom he earned a competency. very fond, and having setteled well his only daughter, he resolved to devote his fortune, of which his family had no further need, to the publication and diffusion of the grand monu-With this view he brought ments of Brahmanical literature. out at first a Sanskrit edition of the Mahabbarata, then a translation into Bengali, which reached its fourth edition. He also edited the Rāmāyana, with Sanskrit text and a translation into Bengali, and the Harivansa, with text and tran-These were by no means the speculations of a The Babu, as generous as he is talented, distributed gratis the works which he printed, and his only object was to place before his countrymen, and make them like more and more grand epics of his nation. It is with this same intention that he has undertaken the English translation of Mahabharata. In borrowing the language of his rulers, he hopes to advance more effectively his country's glory, which is the passion of his life. One cannot but admire the proselytising ardour. It shows that the Babu admires without limit this poem by Vyasa, in which, according to our classical tastes we cannot share, but which is felt by the most intelligent in India. It is true that the Mahabharata does not hesitate to place itself, from the beginning of the poem far above the Vedas, and it gravely relates that when the gods placed the four Sacred books on the one side and the Mahabharata on the other side of a scale, it was the Mahabharata which out-weighed the hymns of the Rishis. shaken faith like this is necessary to uphold courage and to remove mountains. The faith of Babu Pratap Chandra Roy as as religious in its character as it is patriotic, for he looks upon the Mahabharata, as the most sacred school of morals and of virtue. This is not exactly what we think, but this is the conviction of the whole Indian peninsula.

The Babu has expressly established a Society for his publications under the title of Datavya Bharata Karyalaya, that is, a society for the distribution of the Mahabharata

The Press which the society has organised is called the Bharata Press. Among the founders and benefactors of this society the Babu could count from the very beginning the highest of Indian potabilities, the Maharaja of Kashmin the Gaekwar of Baroda, the Maharaja of Travancore, the Maharaja of Burdwan, the Nizam of Hydrabad, the Maharajas of Darbhanga, of Faridkote, of Jeypore, of Dhar, of Rewa. the Maharaja Holkar, the Maharaja Sir Joteendre Mohun Tagore Bahadoor, the Nawab Khajeh Abdul Gani, Princesses like the Mahranis Sarnomoyi and Sarat Sundari; European professors as Mr. Max Muller of Oxford, Professer Garbe of Koenigsberg, Dr. E. Windisch of Leipsic, Mr. Fausboll of Copenhagen, Professor Herman Jacobi of Westphalia, Mr. William Emmett Coleman of San Francisco, Mr. H. B. Witton of Hamilton in Canada; authors Indian and foreign Journal-Among his patrons, the Babu can also count the right Honorable the Marquis of Hartington, Sir Arthur Colvin, M. P., Mr. R. Rost, Librarian of the India office, Dr. W. W. Hunter, the statistician, Mr. C. P. Ilbert, and a large number of distinguished persons. A very wealthy Babu, Govinda Lall Roy, of Rungpore has taken upon himself to pay the cost of printing one of the largest cantos of the Mahabharata, the Vanaparva, which has 17,478 slokas or 34,956 verses, that is, cost of printing two large octavo volumes. It was the object of Babu Govinda Lall Roy, by this act of generosity, to celebrate and sanctify the marriage of his daughter. He has done at the same time, great honor to himself.

The Viceroys, the Marquiss of Ripon and Lord Dufferin, Sir Rivers Thompson and Sir Steuart Bayley, Sir Charles Aitchison, the Lieutenant Governor of the Panjab, have all favored with their approval the publication which the natives have most gratefully welcomed. It offers to them, all things considered, more healthy reading than the novels and romances sent out from Furope, which are much in vogue among We can understand why the Government has encouraged this movement in the Metropolis as well as in the It is aware that there are many temples in India provinces.

The Press in India, and latterly of the whole world have given a warm reception to the new translation. In India, among other journals we name the Bengal Times, the English man, the People's Friend, the Hindu Patriot, the Pioneer, the Civil and Military Gazette, the Hindu, le Petit Bengali,—a newspaper published in French in Calcutta, the Ries and Rayyet, the Gazette of Bombay, the Statesman, the Indian Mirror, the Express, the Indu Prokash, the Amrita Bazar Patrika, the East, the Indian Chronicle, &c. &c.

Next to Indian journals, the newspapers of the united states of America (North) have unanimously shown the great est sympathy:—the American-Book-seller, Critic and Good literature, the Century, the Harvard Herald, the American Antiquary; all the Journals of New York, the Science of Cambridge in Massachusetts; the Journal of the Great Salt Lake City of the Mormons; the Public Library of Millvankee in Wisconsin; the religio-philosophical Society of Chicago in Illinois, &c., &c. Also journals published in England, France and Italy have kindly recommended the translation to the public and have not been niggard in their expressions of praise.

However disinterested the translator of the Mahābhārata has shown himself to be and though he has received good support from his associates and his benefactors, he has not been able to secure all the resources required for the undertaking on the plan in which he has conceived it. It appears, that the entire cost of the work has been estimated at about 250,000 francs, upto the present time, however, only one-third of this amount has been secured. We hope, however, that the translator will succeed in getting the necessary funds, and it should be the prayer of every lover of literature and they should make strenuous efforts that an undertaking of this kind which offers such good guarantees of success, does not sadly fail for want of support.

It will profit the world to have at last a complete and faithful translation of the Hiudu epic, M. l'abbe' Gorresio, http://www.hathitrust.org/access_use#pd-googl Generated on 2022-02-03 14:14 GMT Public Domain, Google-digitized / associate of the Institute of France has given us an admirable translation of the Ramayana; but we have all along felt the want of a translation of the Mahabharata, and it will be great regret to all if the opportunity of getting it in its integrity, in a language which is accessible to every body, be allowed to pass, when moreover the re-production is being made with the required efficiency. When a century ago (1785) Mr. Wilkins published in calcutta an extract from this grand poem, and made it known through the episode of the Bhagavadgita, the world was dazzled with its magnificence. the reputed author of the Mahabharata appeared greater than even Homer, and it required a very little indeed to induce people to place India above Greece. This excessive admiration is excusable, but when the first feeling of rapture had passed away, and the nature of the entire work was known, public opinion and public judgment were modified and a more fair opinion was formed of the poem. In spite, however, of the just reservations made in this direction, it has not the less been admitted that this prodigious Hindu epic is one of the grandest monuments of its kind of human intelligence If this poem is cherished by and charms India and ginius. on account of the numerous traditions which are cotained in it, and if according to our tastes, which are somewhat more austere than those of the Brahmanas, we find in it great defects, our curiosity, nevertheless, is not less keen,-and this requires to be satisfied. Hindu intelligence has furnished so many proofs of its power and fertility by its sacred poetry, its religious books, its systems of philosophy, by its laws and by its drama, that it is neccessary for us to know in what manner this epic was conceived. Of the two principal poems to which it has given birth we know one, and it remains for us to know the other. Up to the present time we have had only fragments, selected with care, thanks to Messrs Paire and Foucaux amongst ourselves; to Schlegel and Bopp in Germany &c. What we have got has made us wish for the remainder, and if the learned world assists a little Mr. Protap Chandra Roy and his colleagues who are as disinterested and as learned as he is, we shall possess the entire work as it The Datavya Bharata Karyalaya has been working for the last eleven years and it is necessary that is should be maintained till this noble undertaking is entirely accomplished. Only one-third of the work has been finished. 18 cantos which the Mahabharata contains, 5 have already appeared in English: the Adiparva, 8487 slokas, the Sabha 2709 slokas, the Vana 17478 slokas, the Virata 2376 slokas, the Udyoga 7657 slokus,—total 38,699 slokus or 77398 verses, out of a total of 212,000.

From what we know already of the Mahabharata we see clearly what it is. A faithful and elegant translation will have the great merit of giving it to us in its entirety, but will not change in any way the opinion which we ought to form of it-This tremendous Epic which surpasses all other by its extent and its irregularity, is the delight of the Hindu because he finds himself depicted in it, and he admires it with all its It does not, however, charm us in an equal degree, who live with Homer and Virgil, with Lasso and Milton, with out taking into account other poems almost as beautiful as theirs. But every critic will admit that this Epic has preserved all the traditions of a vast population who regard it as the repository of their glorious annals. Inspite of the episodes which are very diffuse and sometimes very unreasonable there is in the Mahabharata a historical basis of which there cannot At an epoc not definitely determined be the least doubt. but nevertheless real, two great royal families the Kurus and the Pandus had a dispute amongst themselves for the throne, not that of the whole of India, but, of that portion of the peninsula which in the present day is comprised of the provinces under the governments of the North West and the Punjab. In our times archaeology has determined the site of the battle-field where this great struggle took place, and how vague soever are the indications given in the poem, it has been found possible to ascertain the disposition of the two armies on the field of battle and the varied chances of the fight which appears to have lasted for several days.

Generated on 2022-02-03 14:14 GMT / h[.] Public Domain, Google-digitized / htt_l

The above is the real plot of the poem, round which have been grouped all sorts of legends. The Hindus have as much regard for them as for their religious faith, and these traditions are added to all their other superstitions. According to M. Alexander Cunningham, the plain were the great battle was fought extends between two rivers,-the Saraswati and the Drishtavati, the one on the north and the other on the south, not far from Thanessar, Ambala and Paniput. This plain is called the Kouroukshetra-the field of the Kourous, and also Dharmakshetra—the field of houor. The people of the provinces have not forgotten those grand events, and even in our days it is their custom to assemble there annually and to hold a solemn festival.—It is a place invested with a religious and partiotic character, to which pilgrimages are made. People come here to warship the monuments which have the reputation of being sacred, but the origin and purpose of which are not known to them. They worship them with a piety as keen as it is blind. It appears that in the seventh century of our era (if one may judge from the writings of an eye-witness, Hionen-thsang, the Chinese pilgrim) this vast plain, where so many heros perished, was still covered with This popular piety continued quabated heaps of their bones. under the rule of the Arabs and the Moguls and as the multitudes were not always tranquil in their enthusiastic demonstrations, the ruler of the country had recourse to force, more than once, to suppress emities and bloody affrays. The Kurukshetra is nearly in 30 degrees latitude north and 74 degrees longitude east.

Thus the Mahābhārata is not a work of pure imagination, and though as poem it is far below the Iliad, it hears at least this resemblance to the latter, that it relates to the great deeds of a nation, the memory of which ought to last foreven. But the Mahābhārata has this advantage over the Iliad,—the people, who, in the present day celebrate by solemn rites the valour of those heros are themselves their successors—residing in the very same locality, while Asia Minor of our times has not the slightest idea of the Trojans of Priam or the Greeks

Generated on 2022-02-03 14:14 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-googl of Agamemnon. The nations who have succeeded each other twenty times in the soil where the Trojan war took place, have lost all vestiges of glorious past with which they have nothing in common, In India, on the contrary, tradition has not been entirely effaced, and is still recognizable even under the changes which have taken place. The Mahābhārata is still a favorite study, and will, we doubt not, continue to be so for yet a very long time in the country where the deeds of valour which it relates were performed.

(Sd.) BARTHELEMY-SAINT HILAIRE.

TEASLATION OF MAHABHARATA—It gives us much pleasure to notice that His Highness the Maharajah of Alwar has given a donation of Rs. 500 which together with Rs. 300 paid by His Highness on a former occasion will in some measure help the able translator to bring on this very important work. It is a known fact that the completion of Mr. Pratap Chandra Roy's Englis translation of the Mahabharata has been seriously retraded for want of liberal assistance in the shape of money. It is hardly creditable to the nobles and Princes of land, that while they are villing with one another in paying lakhs towards objects proposed by the Europeans, and of no benefit to the country at large they are so very backward in redeeming the glorious history of their ancestors from obscurity, which is calculated to throw the lustre on the present and past generations af our country. We cannot but deeply deplore the shallow tendency of the age which would obliterate the past and the furture of our country in the pursuit of selfish aims for present aggrandizement. and Rajputana Herald Wednesday, April 25, 1881.

THE INDIAN CLASSICS IN ENGLISH.

For the first time English readers are in the way of complete access to the most important of Hindu poems. We have to thank the enterprise of Pratap Chandra Roy of Calcutta for this. But some readers may ask at the outset, What benefit is there in the study of the ancient Hindu epics?

It might seem that there was very little. the poetry, the ethics that these writings contain are those of the intellectual infancy of the race. They appeal to other standards than ours; in that "large twilight" the actions of men and of gods, their very thoughts and imaginations, take on an air of supernatural strangeness that is unequaled even by the wild genius of the Norse races, in whose sombre thoughts and deeds modern dramatic art seeks to interest us. But the Hindu epics are, after all, the more interesting; they have a nearer significance for us than anything in the Norse mythology. The "Mahabharata," one of the longest of these poems, has wider romantic element in it than King Frithiof's "Saga"; its action is cast upon a grander scale, and its heroes belittle all others in mythology. There is crudeness in their exaggeration. But the Hindu poems, early though they are, contain ethical and human elements that are unknown to the Norseman. It is in this that their enduring, their growing, interest remains for the mind of Europe and of America.

Wilkins was the first English scholar to break ground in this rich field, his "Bhagavad Gita" having preceded Sir William Jones's earliest translation by several years. Wilkins indeed went to India in 1770, while Sir Wiliam Jones did not follow him until 1783. Wilkin's translation, published in 1785, lies before us; and since that date a number of versions of the "Bhagavad Gita" have followed and in more languages than one. Parraud, Proben, Herder, Schlegel, and Mayer are among its translators;

[2]

* * and Chandra Roy, is now engaged in turning the entire "Mahabharata" into English prose. In this great enterprise he has engaged with no thought of making money, but actually at the cost of a part of his fortune.

"'Animated from my earliest days," he tells us, "with the desire of rendering the great religious works of India easily accessible to my countrymen, I cursed the fate that condemned me to inactivity and silence. But I never lost heart. occupation which offered me the most chance was that of bookseller and general agent, and to it I betook myself. After some years of unremitting toil I achieved a success in my business which I considered fair enough. I might have retired, but I commenced the publication in Bengali prose of the "Mahabharata," the great Sanskrit epic of Vyasa, a perfect storehouse of religious and moral instruction, imparted not by dry precepts only, but enforced by the history of living men, princes and warriors, sages and hermits. My edition consisted of 3,000 copies, and it took me a little more than seven years to complete it," Of these, 1,000 copies were distributed free among his countrymen, and Mr. Roy then resolved to establish a permanent institution for the gratuitous distribution of the great Sanskrit works of ancient India. The result was the Bharata press of Calcutta, supported by contributions from the native Princes and from foreign well-wishers of the undertaking. It has distributed some 20,000 volumes of the Hindu classics in the Bengali translation.

[13]

But Mr. Roy's amiable enthusiasm did not stop with this. He determined to make a literal translation of the entire "Mahabharata" into English prose, and to supply the work at a moderate subscription price to those who could afford it, and gratis to those who could not. More than a third of the translation has been done, and has been published in an edition of 2,500 copies. But recent letters from Mr. Roy show that new subscriptions to his great work are needed for its completion;

It has now gone as far as the famous "Bhagavad Gita," upon which so many translators have tried their hands. Among the latest of these is Mr. Chatterji, an educated Hindu, who professes to represent the highest Brahmin culture.

The translation is very carefully adapted to the New-England market, and it lacks flavor of sincerity throughout. On the other hand, Mr Chandra Roy's prose version into English prose is a work that deserves the hearty support of all English readers who are interested in the poetry and philosophy of the East, and to such we shall be doing a favor in saying that subscriptions for the work may be sent either to William E. Coleman, San Francisco, or to Prof. Max Muller, 7 Norham Gardens, Oxford, England. New York Times 4th March, 1888.

TITUS MUNSON COAN.

Generated on 2022-02-03 14:14 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.8903551111 Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-goc

THE MAHABHARATA

OI

KRISHNA-DWAIPAYANA VYASA

TRANSLATED

INTO

ENGLISH PROSE.

Published and distributed chiefly gratis

BY

PROTAP CHANDRA ROY.

DRONA PARVA.

(SECTION VIII-XXIX.)

CALCUTTA:

BHARATA PRESS.

No. 1, Raja Gooroo Dass' Street.

1888.

(The right of translation is reserved.)

85

OF WISCONS!

LITERARY BROTHERHOOD.

A misunderstood and misapplied line of Shakespeare tells us that "one touch of nature makes the whole world kin." The truth of this. as generally taken, has a fresh illustration in a portrait and a letter which reached Hamilton a few days ago. The portrait is that of Mr. Protap Chandra Roy, of Calcutta, and the letter was written by him. Mr. Roy is the head and front of the Datavya Bharata Karyalaya, an Indian society for the circulation of ancient Indian literature; and at present he is engaged in translating into English prose, and publishing, the Mahabharata, the great epic poem of India. This poem is really a series of religious, moral, metaphysical, philosophic and political disquisitions strung upon a thread of narrative. This not only gives to the modern world a living picture of Indian life, morals, manners, politics, religion and philosophy as they existed more than two thousand years ago, but they transmit to us some of the most sublime poetry and some of the deepest and noblest thoughts that have ever been given to It is matter for wonder, and much more for regret, that the Mahäbharata has never been fully translated into English. only fragments of this longest, and in some respects greatest, of all epic poems have ever appeared in any European tongue.

The importance of placing this great work, together with its sister epic, the Rámāyana, cannot be overstated. Unfortunately the Datavya Bharata Karyalaya is not a wealthy society. Its Sanscrit and English publications are either distributed gratuitously or sold for merely nominal prices, and the considerable sums needed for the compilation of the work are supplied mainly by benevolent persons who take an interest in popularizing among Hindoos their own epics and in translating those immortal works for the use of Englishmen. Under these circumstances, it was thought that the Indian government might properly give material aid; but the question arose how such a thing could be done. events clustering about that project illustrate not only the fact that the world is small but the more important fact of the brotherhood of man. For a private gentleman living in Canada has had something to do with promoting the patriotic scheme of an Indian pandit living on the banks of the Hoogly. Mr. H. B. Witton, of this city, was a member of parliament at a time when Lord Dufferin was Governor-General of Canada; and his lordship was pleased to take an interest in Mr. Witton's studies, which embrace the Sanscrit language and literature.

Generated on 2022-02-03 14:16 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 Public Domain. Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#hd-oogle When the gentleman named learned of the pecuniary difficulties of the Indian society, he naturally took steps to procure for it the good offices of Lord Dufferin, now Governor-General of India. Although it is impossible to say with absolute certainty that the application will be crowned with success, Mr. Roy writes that Lord Dufferin has received him very graciously, and that he has little doubt of a favorable termination of the matter. A hundred years ago Cowper wrote:

Is India free? And does she wear

Her plumed and jeweled turban with a smile of peace?

Or do we grind her still?

To-day India wears her plumed and jeweled turban with more of peace and security that ever before in her long and stormy history.

The circumstance, too, is a happy illustration of the reality and pervading influence, of the British empire. Differing in race, religion, language and even in color, two gentlemen living on opposite sides of the earth approach each other as fellow-students of an ancient literature. The one studies it as the literare of his fore-fathers, the other as a literature possessing great interest to all students. And both seek to extend a knowledge of Sanscrit writings through the powerful aid of a British statesman. Perhaps some will reflect that the republic of letters knows no country, language or race, and that the incident noted is but an exchange of friendly offices and kindly recognition among fellow-citizens of that widespread community. The Hamilton Daily Spectator, May 31, 1888.

Printed and Published by Protap Chandra Roy, at No. 1, Rājā Gooroo Dāss' Street, Calcutta.

Generated on 2022-02-03 14:16 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google

THE MAHABHARATA

OF

KRISHNA-DWAIPAYANA VYASA

TRANSLATED

INTO

STATE HISTORICAL SO:

1888

ENGLISH PROSE.

OF WISCONSIN

Published and distributed chiefly gratis

BY

PRATAP CHANDRA ROY.

DRONA PARVA.

(SECTION XXIX-LVI.)

CALCUTTA:

BHARATA PRES.

No. 1, Raja Gooroo Das' Street.

1888.

(The right of translation ireserved.)

82

.....

NOTICE.

A second edition of fasciculi 1—23 of the English Translation of the "Mahābhārata," which had been exhausted, is now in the press and subscriptions are, therefore, again being received for the work. The rates remain as before, viz.,

Rs. 50, or, 25, (according to circumstances) for the entire work including all charges.

Rs12 for those who want to have their names entered in the Free list. This amount includes only packing and postage charges. The Kāryālaya is always willing to suit itself to the convenience of its subscribers, and the two higher rates may be paid by respectable instalments, if they cannot be paid in a lump sum.

A third Edition of the text of the Mahābhārata, in Nagri characters, has also been commenced, and will be completed simultaneously with the last number of the first Edition. Postage and packing charges remain as before, Rs 6/6.

Early application necessary in order to save disappointment.

Pratapa Chandra Roy, Secretary Dātavya Bhārata Kāryālaya.

Printed and Published by Pratap Chandra Roy, at No. 1, Rājā Gooroo Dāss' Street, Calcutta

1 mil

Generated on 2022-02-03 14:16 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google

THE MAHABHARATA

OF

KRISHNA-DWAIPAYANA VYASA

TRANSLATED

INTO

ENGLISH PROSE.

Published and distributed chiefly gratis

BY

PRATAP CHANDRA ROY.

DRONA PARVA.

(SECTIONS LVIII-LXXXVIII.)

CALCUTTA:

BHARATA PRESS.

No. 1, Raja Gooroo Dass' Street.

1888.

(The right of translation is reserved.)

80

NOTICE.

Intending subscribers to the English Mahabharata will please apply for copies without delay. The extra number of copies taken in hand is 1500 only, which is likely to be exhausted soon.

1 Raja Goroo Dass' Street, Datavya Bharata Karyalaya. Calcutta.

PRATAP CHANDRA ROY.

NOTICE.

The Dātavya Bhārata Kāryālaya has sustained an irreparable loss. It's manager, Babu Durga Charan Banerjee, breathed his last on the 30th of July. In him this Institution has lost one whose place it will not be easy to fill. Babu Durga Charan was an eminent Sanskrit scholar, his forte having been ancient Sanskrit literature. He was regarded an authority on the Mahabharata, the Ramayana, and the Puranas. He was not only well versed in Sanskrit, but his attainments in English also were respectable. He could thus bring a judgment aided by western methods of thinking to bear upon all abstruse and contested passages of our scriptures, and his success has been signal. In him the Kāryālaya, therefore, has lost a pillar of strength.

Further, he used to super vise the work of the office. In this capacity, he used to discharge his duties with a single-heartedness that could be expected only of him or his like. I had frequently to leave Calcutta on business, for the purpose of collecting funds. The office, on those occasions remained in the sole charge of Babu Durga Charan, and it is my peculiar pleasure to record that not in a single instance had I any cause to complain of the way in which the Babu discharged his duties.

Owing to the scantiness of funds, the remuneration the Babu used to draw was hardly sufficient to meet all the demands of his large family. Yet, such was his contented disposition that he never asked for a higher remuneration.

The death of the deceased, sufficiently regrettable on other grounds, is specially so under the present circumstances of the Karyalaya. The institution is at present engaged on six several publications, viz., a Bengali translation of the Mahabharata, about to be completed; two editions of the English Mahabharata issuing regularly, one consting of the first twentyfour parts, and the other of the remaining portion; and three editions of the Sanskrit Mahabharata in three equal portions. That at such a juncture the Karyalaya should suddenly be deprived of the ripe scholarship and the able managment of Babu Durga Charan, cannot but be considered as a heavy calamity to it. All well-wishers of the Institution will certainly sympathise with us in the loss we have sustained. The deceased has left a widow, a widowed daughter, and two sons yet at school utterly unprovided for.

A short notice of the life and character of the deceased will be published as soon as possible, with an account of his principal works.

Printed and Published by Pratap Chandra Roy, at No. 1, Rājā Gooroo Dāss' Street, Calcutta.

Generated on 2022-02-03 14:19 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google

THE MAHABHARATA

OF

KRISHNA-DWAIPAYANA VYASA

TRANSLATED

INTO

ENGLISH PROSE.

managheren

Published and distributed chiefly gratis

BY

PRATAP CHANDRA ROY.

DRONA PARVA.

(SECTIONS LXXXIX—CX.)

CALCUTTA:

BHARATA PRESS.

No. 1, RAJA GOOROO DASS' STREET.

1888.

(The right of translation is reserved.)

BABU PRATAPA CHANDRA ROY,

Respected Sir,

* * In all my experience in life I have not found a work that has interested me as much as that noble production of the wise, and, I do not hesitate to say, inspired men of ancient India. In fact, I have studied it more than any other work for a long time past and have made at least 1000 notes which I have arranged in alphabetical order for the purpose of study.

The Mahabharata has opened to me, as it were, a new world and I have been surprised beyond measure at the wisdom, truth, knowledge and love of the right which I have found displayed on its pages. Not only so but I found many of the truths which my own heart has taught me in regard to the Supreme Being and His creations set forth in beautiful clear language, so that as the christian Scriptures say, "He who runs may read."

I am, with great respect, Your Obedient Servant, F. A. HASSLER M. D. PH. D.

Printed and Published by Pratap Chandra Roy, at No. 1, Rājā Gooroo Dāss' Street, Calcutta.

Generated on 2022-02-03 14:19 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access use#pd-google

THE MAHABHARATA

OF

KRISHNA-DWAIPAYANA YYASA

TRANSLATED

INTO

ENGLISH PROSE.

Published and distributed chiefly gratis

BY

PRATAP CHANDRA ROY.

DRONA PARVA.

(SECTIONS CIV-CXXVIII.)

CALCUTTA:

BHARATA PRESS.

No. 1, RAJA GOOROO DASS' STREET.

1888.

(The right of translation is reserved.)

VIJA TA.

Another year has rolled away, and has brought us all a year nearer The Indian Christmas has come and gone, gladdening all hearts, comforting all homes, reconciling all misunderstandings and diffusing peace and good will all over the country. For three days only the goddess Durga remained in our midst, and has left again for her home The occasion is held in such among the eternal snows on mount Kailása. great sanctity, and is so dear to us all, that it were almost sacrilege, to let it pass without taking advantage of it in the manner our time-honored custom enjoins. To all our friends and patrons we wish a happy Vijaya, and many, many returns of the same. May my fellow countrymen always take pride in being loval subjects of their sovereign! May the rule of our beloved Queen-Empress, which bids fair to be the most prosperous in the pages of history, shine with resplendant effulgence in the archives of the world! May the goddess Cakti, the symbolical manifestation of Divine power and energy, always shield her from danger ! goddess vanquish her enemies! "May children of our children say-her court was pure, her life serene !"

May the illustrious statesman who shortly lays down the reins of his august office, enjoy peace and happiness in the land of his birth! the Marchioness of Dufferin, who with the sympathies of a woman, and the feelings of a woman felt so keenly for her follow-women of this country, always enjoy peace and happiness! May Durga prosper her noble institution for the alleviation of the sufferings of the women of this country! May Parvati grant health and happiness to the undaunted soldier who struck terror and dismay into the hearts of our enemies, and who planted the British flag in every creek and corner of May the counterpart of a noble heart that succumbed to the knife of an assassin in a distant land, who has just commenced a vigorous and popular administratom, earn even greater fame and renown, than his much deplored brother! May the large hearted scotchman, the bearer of an illustrious name, who now rules over the destinies of our countrymen in the west, be happy in the happiness of his subjects! May the Almighty shower His choicest blessings on the righteous and just Governor who now rules Bengal! May his administration of the country he unique in the pages of history as one of continued prosperity, and happiness! May the veteran financier who rules the Gangetic plateau be as popular with his subjects as his illustrious father! May Sir James Lyall, earn that reputation and that love and esteem of his subjects, as his illustrious predecessor did! And last, though not least, what shall we say of Sir Charles Aitchison! "Take him for all in all, the like of him you shall not find." May God grant him peace! And may he be happy in the company of his kind-hearted consort, and of his children! May England send out rulers of his stamp to bind the people with hooks of affection! And may our governors imitate the example he has so nobly put before them! May happiness and joy always mark the career of the members of the Supreme Council, of Secretaries to the various governments, of Political Agents, and of all other Government officers who have befriended the Karyalaya!

May our Princes, Chiefs, Zemindars, and the aristocracy of the country, always tread the path of virtue and vie with one another in ameliorating the condition of the people of the country! And may they always be staunch friends of the paramount power. May our friends and patrons across the ocean be happy! To the Marquis of Ripon, the Earls of Lytton and Northbrook, the Duke of Manchester, Dr. Rost, Professor Max Müller, Sir Monier Williams, Professors Fausboll, Lauman, and Bloomfield, Miss Mary Scott, Mrs. Mercer, Mr. Pincott, and to all friends and patrons I wish a happy Vijaya and many returns of May joy and happiness always be theirs! May the departed soul of the beloved wife of my much esteemed friend Mr. Frederick Pincott, enjoy perfect peace and happiness! To the Editors of Indian as well as of foreign papers I offer the best wishes of the season ! To the noble scotchman who has made India his home, and who has devoted his life and soul for the benefit of his Indian fellow subjects, my gratitude is simply immense. May many years of active and useful life be still spared unto him! And may his noble efforts be crowned with glorious success ! We now take leave of our patrons and friends wishing every one a happy Vijaya, and many returns of the same, and all joy and happiness. If God spares our lives, we shall meet again

PRATAP CHANDRA ROY.

Printed and Published by Pratap Chandra Roy, at No. 1, Rājā Gooroo Dāss' Street, Calcutta.

THE MAHABHARATA

OF

KRISHNA-DWAIPAYANA VYASA

TRANSLATED

INTO

ENGLISH PROSE.

Published and distributed chiefly gratis

BY

PRATAP CHANDRA ROY.

DRONA PARVA.

(SECTIONS CXXIX-CXLVI.)

CALCUTTA:

BHARATA PRESS.

No. 1, Raja Gooroo Dass' Street.

1888.

(The right of translation is reserved.)

85

THE TRANSLATION OF THE MAHABHARATA continues to appear with great regularity, and seeing how much has been done, it would be a great pity if for want of funds the work had to be abandoned. The translation has been very highly spoken of, we believe, by scholars and savants, and M. BAR-THELEMY ST. HILAIRE has reviewed the work very favourably in the "Journal des Savants." The government have themselves given to the Babu considerable pecuniary help in his undertaking, and have just sanctioned a grant of Rs. 175 per part for the Numbers that are yet to be published. The Native Princes have also given some support; but their help has been scarcely commensurate with the magnitude of the work and its special Indian interest. More than half of the translation has now been done; but BABU PROTAPA CHANDRA Roy informs us that about Rs. 30,000 is still needed, and this amount ought easily to be made up. The Patiala State has already helped the Babu with Rs. 1,000.

The "Civil & Military Gazette," Monday, November 19, 1888.

NOTICE.

The Karyalaya very often gets complaints of non-receipt of numbers of the English Translation of the Mahabharata. Such complaints go against the Society as well as against the Post offices, but neither the Subscriber nor the Society knows who is really to be blamed. So long the Karyalaya has, resupplied copies of the translation on demand almost free of any charge but in so doing it is now found that good many sets of the work have been rendered incomplete and quite useless. Such greatloss cannot possibly be over looked. In future, missent, mislaid, or lost copies will only be resupplied free of cost on condition that notice of non-receipt of a number of the book is given immediately on receipt of the next number. In all other cases a charge of Rupee one will be made for such resupplied number. I hope subscribers will be careful in preserving the successive fasciculi of the work as they are received.

PRATAP CHANDRA ROY, Secy., Dātavya Bhárata Ka gālaya,

SIR CHARLES AITCHISON, K. C. S. I.

The most popular Governor that has perhaps as yet adorned any of the gubernatorial chairs in India, has just left the country. Every one who has come into contact with Sir Charles, knows what metal he was He was popular with the European as also with the native community. What I have to say about him is all said in the letter that follows this notice and which was presented to him at Lahore. His reply is also given. Sir Charles Aitchison and family left Lahore on the evening of the 15th November. Although there was a Congress meeting at the same hour which must have prevented many from being present at the Railway platform, still there was a large gathering of ladies and gentlemen. H. H. the Maharaja of Faridkote, with the first prince and staff, was also there. Sir Charles and Lady Aitchison spoke kindly to all present. It was with much self-command and with many a throbbing of the heart, that the parting word was exchanged. The Hindu, the Sikh, the Moslem, and the Christian all felt alike for the noble-minded person, who was, in all human probability, leaving the country for good. The poor Chuprassis even, who stood with their faces bathed in tears, were not forgotten by their noble master, when he said farewell to all. When the train began to move, "three cheers" were proposed, and given very heartily.

We cannot close this poorly written account of Sir Charles without mentioning the noble efforts of Lady Aitchison to found a Zenana Hospital at Lahore, with the help of Lady Dufferin's fund. We were present at the opening of the hospital by the Marchioness of Dufferin and Ava. It already promises to be a very useful and popular institution, and will hand down the memory of Lady Aitchison, after whom it has been called, to generations yet unborn.

We beg to close these lines here with a fervent prayer to the Giver of all good for the peace and happiness of Sir Charles and Lady Aitchison and family,

PRATAP CHANDRA ROY.

The Honourable

SIR CHARLES UMPHERSTON AITCHISON,

K. C. S. L. C. L. E., L. L. D., D. C. L.

HONOURED SIR,

As Founder-Secretary of the Datavya Bharata Karyalaya, I beg leave to address you on behalf of the Institution, on the eve of your departure from India. The presentation of addresses has always been the practice of Political Associations, but for reasons that will be apparent from the following lines, and actuated by feelings of deep personal gratitude to you, I have been led to swerve, for a moment, from the sphere of letters into the domain of the feeling. If, in doing so, I am guilty of an indiscretion, most sincerely do I crave pardon at your hands.

It is not my purpose to enumerate the various administrative and other reforms carried out by you. They must be sufficiently well known to the people, and are sufficiently appreciated by them, to need any eulogy from me. Suffice it to say, that all through the period of your service whether working as a District Officer, or when in charge of the onerons duties of the Foreign Office, or as Lieutenant-Governor of the Panjab, or, finally, as Member of the Supreme Council, you have always earned the approbation of your Sovereign, and the esteem and good-will of her subjects in India. It is not those only who have come in direct contact with you, but the whole of the Indian people have always appreciated and admired your abilities, and have loved and revered you as a just Governor. The Punjab specially is under a debt of immense and endless gratitude to you. In times of imminent trouble, when the people have looked up to you for protection, you were always ready to help and succour them. The Punjab University was but an infant, a few months old, when the reins of government were placed in your hands, and under your fostering care and wise nursing she has now become the Alma Mater of the people of the land of the Five Rivers. The Aitchison College owes its existence to you. The conclusion of your tenure of office in the Punjab was marked by your appointment as President of the Public Service Commission, and it was your presence at its head that made the Indian people look forward to it with confidence, and with a hope for manifold benefits. You have nobly vindicated the trust, and have satisfied the aspirations of the people.

But administrative abilities, and even impartial justice, both of which you possess to such an eminent degree, are not the only merits of a Governor, especially in a country like India. They should be seasoned and tempered with a genuine sympathy for the people, and a desire to treat them with kindness and forbearance, to recognize their merits, and to be indulgent to their failings, and an anxiety to educate them, and lead them on in the path of progress and reform. Your noble mind found the ban.

41 whi

hada

lte

ide

out this grand secret of success, and you have now earned a fame, as a paternal Governor, such as seldom falls to the lot of an English official. Your constant efforts to understand the people and their aspirations, your treatment of them as fellow-men, your magnanimous disposition, and your genial temper—these, above all, have made you the idol of the people. Thus it is that, though an alien Governor, you are beloved by all. Your departure from the country is a blow to all your friends and admirers, and will be felt not only by the masses of the Punjab, but by all India.

To us your kindness has been constant and great. If the translation of the "Mahabharata" is ever completed, it will be much on account of your hearty assistance and co-operation. Personally, my gratitude to you is immense. It is no empty word of adulation, but the sincerest expression of a feeling and grateful heart, when I say, that I shall always treasure up your revered and noble name in the book of my memory, and I only echo the sentiments of my countrymen when I say that they will do the same.

Your subjects in the Punjab, and your admirers all over India, are sincerely sorry to lose you, but their regret would be less if they could be assured that, even when far away, you will have the time and the opportunity,—as you will undoubtedly have the will,—now and then, to cast a look of sympathy to the two hundred and fifty millions of India. From the inmost recesses of their hearts will they send up prayers for the peace, prosperity, and well-being of you and yours. They will never forget you, and they hope you will not forget them. Your name will remain a household word among them, and will be handed down from father to son, and from generation to generation, with feelings of love, esteem, and reverence.

May you have a safe and happy voyage to your distant home! May many years of active and useful life yet be spared to you! May your name, which is already known and honoured in so many varied spheres, travel farther and wider still, and redound to your credit on all sides, and to the glory of the nation whom you so well represent! May your name shine with redoubled effulgence in the Gallery of distinguished Indian Statesmen,—among those of Bentinck and Canning, Mayo and Ripon! May the Almighty shower His choicest blessings on you and yours! May your countrymen learn the lesson you have taught, and imitate the example you have so nobly placed before them! May England send out Governors of your stamp to unite the people in the bonds of affection and kindness, and thus strengthen the foundation of her Empire in India!

1, RAJA GURU DASS' STREET;
CALCUTTA,
The 10th November, 1888.

I have the honour to be,
Honoured Sir,
Your most obedient Servant,
PRATAP CHANDRA ROY,

S 4.00

PRATAP CHANDRA RAI

DEAR SIR,

I thank you sincerely for the very kind but all too flattering letter of 10th November, which you have done me the honor to present to me at Lahore, on behalf of the Datavya Bharata Karyalaya. Nothing can be more gratifying to a public officer at the close of his career than to know that, notwithstanding all his shortcomings, and in spits of mistakes, he carries away with him the respect or the the affection of those with whom he has been brought into contact in official life, and specially of those, whom he may have been called upon to govern and whose destinies he must, therefore, of necessity, have influenced for good or for evil. I quit Iudia with many deep regrets. I leave behind me friends of more than a quarter of century, for many of whom I have not only a sincere regard, but the deepest affection. It is impossible that I should ever forget this country or its peoples, and wherever my lot in life may be cast in the future, I shall never cease to take the warmest interest in all that concerns India and to labor with such powers as God may be pleased to leave to me for its highest welfare.

It is very little that I have been able to do for your society. But what I have done has been a work of love. The great Epic which you are translating into English is full of lessons and instruction for us. I hope the translation will soon be completed, and I am sure, that it will not only stimulate the efforts of scholars in the further development of oriental studies, but will do much to help those engaged in the practical work of administrations to form intelligent views of the social and religious life of the people.

With best wishes for the prosperity of your society, and the success of its labours,

I am, Dear Sir, Yours very truly (Sd.) C. U. AITCHISON.

ANCIENT INDIA AND MODERN ENGLAND.

More than a hundred years ago, Warren Hastings, the first governorgeneral of India, warned his countrymen that it was their bounden duty to learn something concerning the ancient literature of India. The reason for his admonition was that such knowledge is essential to their interests as rulers, and to the welfare of the millions of Hindus it has fallen to their lot to govern. At the time his words were spoken, they fell on the ears of a small, and for the most part listless, auditory. Nevertheless they were words of wisdom, and like seed scattered by the wayside, some fell into good ground and brought forth fruit an hundredfold.

The work Hastings urged to be done was for years dependent on the personal exertions of a mere handful of men. But Wilkins, Colebrooke, and Sir William Jones, and the little band who worked with them, were a host in themselves, and their persevering zeal at length won the ear of the British public. In later years the government of India has recognized its obligation to do its whole duty in regard to ancient India. Governmental surveys have colleted and published the numerous inscriptions scattered through the country, some of which are of rare historical value and go back to the time when Buddhism was the dominant power in India. Rock-cut temples, stupas and monuments of hoary antiquity have been exquisitely photographed before the touch of time has utterly despoiled them of their former glory. Ancient manuscripts have been carefully sought after, the country being mapped out for that purpose into districts, each of which is in charge of some gentleman, native or English, having recognized fitness for the work intrusted to him.

These investigations have already produced marvelous results. The ancient Indian tongue is now known to be the vehicle of a literature that can be traced from our own times continuously back for a period of at least three thousand years. The suspicion, which obtained credence within the memory of living men, that that language was the invention of a cunning priesthood, aidded by Satan, and intended to deceive, has given place to a careful study of its merits, that has changed the entire bent of linguistic inquiry. It now takes undisputed rank as the elder sister of the Aryan family of languages, and is honored for faithfully preserving lineaments of the primitive Indo-Germanic speech that other members of the Aryan stock have lost.

During the last few years students throughout the civilized world have vied with each other indesciphering the more important of the ten thousand ancient Indian manuscripts known to exist, and samples of the cream of this marvelous literature are not difficult to obtain. Aided by the British government, Max Muller has published the Rigveds, the revered of the sacred Hindu scriptures, and an English translatinese hymns is also now accessible. Other scholars have also go the public fruits gathered in other fields of this old literature, so can easily trace the religious and intellectual life of the Hindus a longer period of development than we can follow any other mental the Indo-Germanic family.

It is gratifying to know that the Hindus themselves contribute to accomplish these results. Their scholars not only edit ancient but often discuss, in English, subjects pertaining to their ancient ture with a force, breadth and precision western scholars might and wealthy Hindus often give princely sums to have important li works gratuitously printed. The Spectaton has before referred to praiseworthy work, in this field of labor, done by Mr. Protan Cha Roy, a Hindu gentleman of Calcutta. He has circulated, free of cos recipients, several editions of the two great Hindu epics, and is engaged on a translation of the Mahabharata into English prose. magnitude of his undertaking is seen from the length of the poem, wl contains two hundred and twenty thousand sixteen syllable-lines. make sure his work would go on if he died, Mr. Roy organized his sociates into a society. He distributes a number of the copies print free of all cost, and for the rest accepts a contribution to the socie merely sufficient to cover the cost of postage. The issue on such term of so immense a work involves an outlay beyond the means of the most philauthropic publisher, and Mr. Roy has accepted proffered aid from many sources. In five years he has about half finished his labor of love

We have just learned from India that Lord Dufferin, for the Indian government, has sanctioned a grant of 175 rupees for each fasciculus Mr. Roy has yet to publish to complete his translation. His lordship's timely aid to this commendable enterprise is worthy alike of his sagacity as a stateman and his generosity as a nobleman. Such work as Mr Roy is doing has high value, judged from a literary standpoint; but it has the higher merit of weaving subtile bands of intellectual union between the Hindus and the British, which bind firmer than hooks of steel and is a patriotic service to the empire of inestimable value.

"Spectator" Hamilton Canada September 5th 1888.

Printed and Published by Pratap Chandra Roy, at No. 1 Rājā Gooroo Dāss' Street, Calcutta.

in incident

問題

加加

800

Elle

THE MAHABHARATA

OF

KRISHNA-DWAIPAYANA VYASA

TRANSLATED

INTO

ENGLISH PROSE.

Published and distributed chiefly gratic

BY

PRATAP CHANDRA ROY, c. I. E.

DRONA PARVA.

(SECTIONS CXLVII-CLXIII.)

CALCUTTA:

BHARATA PRESS.

No. 1, Raja Gooroo Dass' Street.

1889.

(The right of translation is reserved.)

89

Copy of a Letter from Professor E. B. COWELL.

Cambridge

22nd November 1888.

MY DEAR FRIEND.

Your letter of the 30th October was a real pleasure to me to receive. It carried me at once back to Calcutta,

"Annihilating all that's made files all the same

To a green thought in a green shade,"

I shall always keep your letter as a most vivid reminder of Calcutta and old days as well as the memorial of a distant friend.

I greatly value your translation of the Mahabharata, and it will be of great value in many departments of research. Only the other day a friend of mine wrote to show me how an old Welsh folklore story is found in a recent part of your translation.

With my most sincere thanks for the copy of the translation which you so kindly send to me and my best wishes for your happiness and health.

THE SHAPE OF THE STATE OF THE S

Believe me, Yours most Sincerely (S.d) E. B. COWELL.

Extract from a letter dated 24th Nov-1888 from Professor Blumhardt of Oxford.

"I am extremely pleased with your English Translation of the Maha-"bharata; it is excellent. You have indeed undertaken a Herculean "task, and one that has already brought you lasting renown. I am "indeed sorry to learn of the death of your Manager Babu Doorga "Charan Banerjee and trust you may have strength and aid to accom-"plish this grand undertaking."

Copy of a letter from Major-general C. B. LUCIE SMITH dated Worthing, England, 28th Nov 1888,

DEAR SIR,

I beg to thank you for your kind letter, and to reciprocate most heartily your good wishes.

The successive numbers of the English translation of the Mahabharats reach me regularly, and I watch with great interest the progress of the noble work you are giving to the world.

Hoping that every prosperity may attend you and yours during the New year,

I am, Dear Sir,
Faithfully yours
(S.d) C. B. LUCIE SMITH

Copy of a letter from Sir Charles Tupper, High Commissioner for Canada, dated 9 Victoria Gardens London 25th October 1888.

DEAR SIR,

I duly received your letter of the 28th instant, and have not only received from Mr Witton the copies of the hitherto published parts of your English translation of the Mahabharata but also the further parts which you have been so good as to send me. I have not yet had time to peruse the work which, however, appears to be one of a most interesting nature, and I am sure it will repay the study which I intend to devote to it as soon as I have sufficient leisure.

Again thanking you,

I remain,
Yours faithfully
(S.d) CHARLES TUPPER

Printed by Kāli Dāss Sen, at No. 1, Rājā Gooroo Dāss' Street, Calcutta.

THE MAHABHARATA

OF

KRISHNA-DWAIPAYANA VYASA

TRANSLATED

INTO

ENGLISH PROSE.

Published and distributed chiefly gratis

BY

PRATAP CHANDRA ROY, c. I. E.

DRONA PARVA.

(SECTIONS CLXIV-CLXXXIV.)

CALCUTTA:

BHĀRATA PRESS.

No. 1, RAJA GOOROO DASS' STREET.

1889.

(The right of translation is reserved.)

From the "Journal des Savarts" November, 1888,

Original from UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN

as the general-in-chief of the army of the Pandavas. longer than the Illiad. - Drona, after whom this canto has been named, canto of the Mahabharata, consists of 17,818 verses,-that is, it is nobly displayed to aid erudition so solid. The Drona Parva, -The 7th to induce the literary world to feel an interest in such perseverance act of devotion and not a speculation. This example is sufficiently rare the editions and translations of the principal Sanskrit works. It is an fortune and intelligence to this immence work. He distributes gratis Already for many years, Mr. Pratapa Chandra Roy has consecrated his monument, which holds their most cherished traditions, inspires in them. greatly their sense of patriotism and their pride, which this poetic poem, and to facilitate its perusal by foreign nations, is to flatter of the natives. They have a passionate admiration for their national English Government has by this generosity secured the sincere gratitude nearly 25,000 Francs. This favor has been well bestowed, and the recently, honored this publication by a subscription of Bell,000, that is, Lieutenant General, Governot of Bengal, Sir Stewart Bayley, has, quite -The Mahabharata, we have here a translation of 45,000 verses. The to complete it. Ont of 214,000 verses which comprise the gigantic epic, half way in his undertaking. We sincerely hope that he will be able Mr. Pratapa Chandra Roy has, with the Drona Parva, reached nearly

THE GREAT EPIC OF INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

Sin- The Emperor Akbar, though himself unable to read and to write, took a lively interest in the literature of his Hindu subjects. did what neither the Court of Directors of the old East India Company nor the present Government has ventured to do. He commissioned his Prime Minister, Abul-Fazl, to translate Sanskrit books into Persian. that he might himself be able to form an opinion of the religious, social, and philosophical ideas which swayed the minds of his Indian subjects. We have no reason to suppose that Abul-Fazl himself, or even his brother Faizi, acquired a thorough knowledge of Sanskrit. They did what was done at first by English scholars in India. They employed Pandits to translate the original texts into Persian, and charged themselves with giving to the language of the translation a more elegant form. Next to the Vedas, the two great epic poems, the Mahabharata and Ramayana, seem to have excited Akbar's special curiosity, and we are told that the Rāmāyana was translated for him by Abdul-Kadir, while the translation of different portions of the "Mahabharata," is ascribed to the same, to Abu-l-Fazl, Faizi, Nakib Khan, and Shaikh Mohammad Sultan Thanesvari.

Akbar died in 1605, and nearly two hundred years elapsed before the famous epic of the "Mahâbhārata" became known to the scholars of Europe. Episodes from it were published in the original, and in English, French, and German translations. But the idea of turning the whole of the most gigantic of epic poems into English seemed too appalling to European scholars. The Sanskrit text, supposed to consist of 200,000 verses, has never been printed in England. Italy set a bold example, by entrusting Gorvesio with an edition of the other great epic, the "Rāmā-yana," which was published at the expense of the Sardinian Government, with an excellent translation in truly classical Italian. In India, however, two complete editions of the Sanskrit text of the "Mahābharata" have appeared, one even accompanied by a commentary; and, to judge from the scarcity of these books, there must still be a considerable demand for their ancient classics among the natives of India.

At last the bold idea of bringing out a complete translation of the "Mahabharata" was taken up by a native gentleman, Pratap Chandra Roy. He tells us himself that he was originally a bookseller and general agent. After having made a fortune sufficient for himself, he devoted his leisure to a scheme of bringing out texts and translations of the great Sanskrit works of antiquity. He began with an edition in Bengali of the Great Epic in 3,000 copies. When this was disposed of, partly by sale, partly by gratuitous distribution, he determined to found a society for publishing and distributing ancient Sanskrit texts. This society he called the Datavya-Bharata-Karyalaya. It was supported by subscriptions, chiefly, if not entirely, from native gentlemen. Within the course of seven years that society has distributed two editions of a Bengali translation of the Epic of 3,000 copies each. A fourth edition is now in progress. An edition of the "Harivansa," an appendix to the "Mahabharata," in 3,000 copies, has been exhausted. Of the "Ramayana," both text and translation are now nearly completed, and the English translation of the "Mahabharata," has reached to nearly half of the whole work.

Such unselfish devotion to a truly patriotic work deserves the recognition of the Indian Government, as well as of the British public, and I am glad to see that Pratap Chandra Roy has lately received the distinction of C. S. I. Nor has the gratitude of Sanskrit scholars been less fully expressed. It is quite true that the "Mahâbhärata" is not a difficult work to read; still, there are few Sanskrit scholars who would not prefer to read large portions of it in English rather than in Sanskrit. We must not forget that this so-called epic poem has become a kind of encyclopæia into which almost any subject could be inserted, whether it referred to the Great War or not. The description of that war would probably occupy not more than a tenth part of the whole poem. All the rest consists of later additions. If we could trust tradition, the story of the war occupied originally 8,800 verses only. No amount of criticism, however, will ever succeed in disentangling the original poem from all that has grown up around it.

But though, on the whole, the text of the Mahabharata is easy to read, there are not wanting cruces, which give great trouble to the scholar. It does not seem as if the translator had collected many MSS in order to find out whether any of them supplied better readings. He generally follows the guidance of native commentators, even in cases where their interpretations are clearly far-fetched and artificial. Under the circumstances this was, perhaps, the most practical plan. Several critics in America and Germany have laid down the rule that no translation is of any value which is not based on a collation of all accessible MSS. a study of all native commentators, and lastly, on an exact knowledge of all the peculiarities of an author's style. Such preaching sounds very well, but it is mostly no more than ill-disguised arrogance. A critical edition of the text of the Mahabharata would no doubt be most welcome, but in the meantime a readable translation of the text as it now stands is welcome too. Anyhow, Mr. Pratap Chandra Roy may feel; convinced that all honest lovers of India and Indian literature are grateful to him for having lifted the veil from that vast picture of ancient India which is displayed before our eyes in the pages of the Hindu Iliad, and he may well answer his captious critics with the old Greek saying, which might be rendered in Sanskrit by "Sreshthham sreyaso mitram."

You, Sir, have lately allowed Pratap Chandra Roy to be heard through your columns, and have appealed for funds to carry out this vast and useful enterprise; therefore, I desire hereby to support that appeal, as one which ought to find a generous answer from all sincere lovers of Oriental literature. Subscriptions may be sent to Pratap Chandra Roy himself, at No. 1, Raja Gooroo Dass' street, Calcutta.—I am, Sir, yours obediently.

F. MAX MULLER.

7, Norham-gardens, Oxford, May 20.

The Daily Teligraph-Monday, 27th May, 1889.

An extract from the letter of Edwin Arnold Esq :-

Editor—"Daily Telegrapk"

London

27th May, 1889.

"Dear sir,

admire and sympathise with your courageous enterprise, but I may remark that, comparing several passages of your translation with the Sanskrit, I have found it generally excellent, terse, faithful and most useful. I wish you all success and am personally anxious that the bold task should be accomplished.

With best wishes and warm regards, your always most truly Edwin Arnold." 1

b89035511112a

Date Due

UE 31	'66
MAR 8	1976		1	-
KLT 3-	5-251			_
		The second 1 1
		-
2000 5

89035511112

Generated on 2022-02-03 14:28 GMT / https://hdl.handle.net/2027/wu.89035511112 Public Domain, Google-digitized / http://www.hathitrust.org/access_use#pd-google