

ing, and redemption; the moral responsibilities and eternal destinies of humanity; his hatred of wrong and tyranny, and his stern sense of justice, which led him to impose upon the African slave the terrible penalty of the Mosaic code...

The civil contentions in the mother country drove across the seas multitudes of restless adventurers and speculators. The Indians were unsettled and demoralized. Habits of luxury and dissipation had taken the place of the severe frugal and rigid virtues of the fathers.

One of the first, and for many years the only, arrest of a fugitive slave in Massachusetts under the law of 1793 took place in Boston after the escape of a man named Thomas...

It will be seen by the article which we have addressed, that the fugitive slave in Massachusetts was not a legal emigrant. The crime of the judiciary of the Puritan State has never been admitted by the admission of its detestable claims.

By a history like this to look back upon, it strikes that the people of Massachusetts, at the present time, are unwilling to see their rights and authority of law, it stood upon any other exalted foundation of robbery and wrong.

It is an injustice case, as illustrating the general feelings of the Massachusetts Colonists—the withdrawal of 1692—originated with the Indian Tiensha, a slave in the family of the minister of Danvers.

It is a pleasant book for those long winter evenings. LITTLE GREEN BAY, October, 1850. New York: Leonard Scott & Co. For sale by Taylor & Manly, Washington.

It is the Whig party which, six years ago, was the champion of the Union, and who, in 1844, attempted to bring their votes for their Presidential candidate.

The condition of the free people of color in the United States is becoming very critical. They now constitute the only source of excitement between the States of the Union.

The free people of color are human beings, as such, entitled to justice and kind consideration at our hands. It is safe, we know, to assert that the small number of colored people who are in the United States.

Documents and affidavits concerning the conduct of the United States Marshal and other officers in the case of William and Ellen Crafts, submitted them to Mr. Crittenden, Attorney General.

But we have no right to threaten them with imprisonment, or to arrest them. They are American, colored though they be—here by no act of our own—here in the order of God's Providence.
