

Def. Doc. - 2815-D

Excerpts from: "Fuehrer Conferences - German Navy 1940"

Critical Examination of Britain's situation on 21 October 1940.

3. The generally very weak striking power of the Italian armed forces, combined with tactical weakness, which has led to a very low estimation of Italian warfare and operational capacity on the part of the British, and which has given them time for a hitherto undisturbed intensification of British-defenses on the Suez Canal.

4. Help from the U.S.A., which is already very considerable, combined with the expectation of further strong support after the presidential election.
