

A GORGEOUS EVENT

ORANGE SHOW TO COST $100,000
—TO BE HELD FEBRUARY
17TH TO 24TH

Over $100,000 will be expended to make the first national orange show California's most gorgeous mid-winter event.

The orange show organization, composed of business men of the city of San Bernardino, has appropriated $19,000 for the expense of arranging the exposition, and the citrus fruit growers of the state will expend an additional $80,000, or more, in the construction of their exhibits.

Natural orange trees are to be used for decorations, and will be brought from the choicest orchards in the citrus belt.

The detailed plan for the exposition, which will be held on February 17 to 24, has been completed. Then months of preparation and $100,000 in expense will culminate in the week's portrayal of the beauties of the citrus fruits of California.

An interesting feature of the exposition will be the demonstration by the manufacturers of implements and articles used by citrus fruit men. Such industrial exhibits play an important part in the exposition, but will be housed in a separate pavilion as nothing but oranges, lemons and other citrus fruits will make up the orange show proper.

BRUCE BROWN CLOSES

The three weeks' campaign at the Central Christian church came to an end with Sunday night's service. Beginning with a week's rally, which no one thought of extending for a longer period, it has been the most successful meeting the church has had since its organization. Thirty-two additions are the visible results, but the spiritual awakening and revival of interest in the church has added to the unity and harmony which exists in a marked degree.

The morning sermon Sunday was on "The Family of God," and surely made every hearer, if he were not a Christian, long to be a member of that family.

The evening discourse on "Christ Before Pilate" was a fine one, and the manner in which the evangelist put the question, "What will you do with Jesus Christ?" made a person wonder how anybody not a follower of Jesus could refuse to accept him.

The men's Bible class, with an attendance of thirty-six, scored ninety points out of a hundred in the contest with Broadway church. Nine men of this class have come into the church during this meeting.

The "annual meeting" of the members of this church will be held, as usual, on New Year's eve. Rollcall of all the members, the election of the church officers, reports of all departments of the church, and a social time, which will include a reception to the new members, will occupy the hours till the New Year is ushered in. This is always a most interesting occasion.

The last meeting of the present official board will be held this evening at 7:30.

—EXPERT MINING LAWYER COMING

Among recent additions to this community is the family of Mr. S. W. Shaull, a corporation lawyer of renown, who come here from Marquette, Mich. They have purchased a home at 431 San Fernando road and Mr. Shaull will join his family here in January. It is to be sincerely hoped that they find our matchless climate health-giving, for it is in search of health that they give up their home in the East.

Mr. Shaull has made a speciality of mining law and is considered among the best informed men on the subject in the United States, his opinions on complicated mining questions being sought from the Atlantic to the Pacific. He is also assistant manager of several of the largest iron mines on the Marquette range.

A recent issue of the Daily Mining Journal of Marquette, Mich., contains an account of an important case in which Mr. Shaull was one of the attorneys for the plaintiff and in which the largest money judgment ever handed down in the Michigan courts is involved, the amount being $1,044,721. This case was decided in favor of the complainants.

LOCAL TEAM WINS AGAIN

Our local baseball club journeyed to Long Beach Sunday and defeated their crack team in a hard-fought eleven-inning game with a 2-to-3 score. The local team has been playing excellent ball the past few weeks. They have a series of three games with the Oxnard team, beginning on New Year's day.

ITEMS FROM TROPICO

HOLIDAY AFFAIRS KEEP OUR NEIGHBORS BUSY—PER-SONAL MENTION

One of the most charming of the many dinner parties given Christmas was the one with which Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Appenfelder entertained at their home Friday. The decorations were suggestive of the happy Yuletide, holly, Christmas bells and poinsettias being most effectively used. A Christmas tree laden with gifts for all was a pretty feature, and the climax was reached when the hostess impersonated Santa Claus and distributed the Christmas remembrances. The handsome lace centerpiece that adorned the dining table had been sent by Mrs. Appenfelder's sister from Cincinnati, Ohio, and is a work of art. Upon this was placed a large vase that simply overflowed with brilliant poinsettias. Seated with this charming hostess and the good Saint Nicholas, her husband, were Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Newbill of Alhambra, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Newbill, Miss Pauline and Master Robert Newbill and Mrs. M. C. Cressap of Los Angeles; Miss Lois Newbill, Mrs. B. A. Doggett, Mrs. Ashley Sheward and Myron Sheward of Los Angeles; Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Newbill, Miss Bernice and Teddy Newbill of Lankershim and Mrs. Louise Purnell of Tropic.

David Loper of Los Angeles was the week-end guest of George Van Hazelen of West Park avenue.

Mrs. James L. Fishback of Los Angeles spent Saturday evening as the guest of Mrs. Samuel A. Pollock, who entertained at her home on West Park avenue Saturday evening at cards complimentary to Mrs. Myra C. K. Shuey. Mrs. Shuey, who is spending her Christmas holidays at her home on Columbus avenue, will return to her school duties at Rochester the first of the week.

George Rice of Los Angeles, who has been a Christmas guest of Dr. and Mrs. Samuel A. Pollock of West Park avenue, spent Friday with Dr. Pollock as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Wientz of Burbank.

Mrs. Ira Tucker and son, Forest Tucker of San Dimas, who have been the Christmas guests of Mrs. Tucker's father and sisters, Mr. S. L. Borthick, Misses Freda and Ruby Borthick of West Seventh street, returned to their home Sunday, Miss Ruby Borthick motoring over with them.

Mrs. David H. Imler entertained with a Christmas dinner party at her home, Palm Villa, Christmas evening. It was truly a merry party that was seated with the hostess and enjoyed the Christmas cheer, as the guests were Mrs. Fanny Sawyer Quinn of El Monte, Mrs. Eva M. Blain and Mr. Merrill Blain of Los Angeles, Mrs. Frank I. Marsh and the family, J. B. Hickman, Miss Hickman, Miss Marjorie and Eugene H. Imler.

Word has been received of a painful accident that Mr. C. E. Kinney of Virginia place received a few days ago while on the desert near Banning. Mr. Kinney has been visiting some mining properties in which he is interested and while cranking the large auto truck, which is used to convey supplies to the mines, Mr. Kinney had his right hand broken and his back badly sprained. Mr. Kinney received medical attention in the mining camp and will return to Tropic the first of the year.

Miss Margaret Richardson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederic C. Richardson, has fully recovered from an attack of chickenpox and is enjoying her Christmas holidays.

PRESENT THE BRIGHT SIDE

A number of years ago there was introduced into the public schools the plan of teachers placing before children the correct sentence, the perfect object. This idea was conceived in the mind of a man with a big brain. He must have been a man who did not indulge in gossip. He must have been a man who did not slander his neighbors. He must have been a man who did not write sensational stories for city papers. Imagine, if you please, a child growing up in a neighborhood under such conditions that that child could not see and hear that which is imperfect. Who dares be the first one to give a child its first idea of imperfect things?

Newspaper publishers should present the beautiful to their readers. School teachers should present the beautiful to their pupils. Ministers should present the beautiful to members of their congregation. All teachers and instructors should present only the beautiful to persons whom they are instructing.

FIRE ON BROADWAY

LEAK IN GASOLINE TANK CAUSE OF BAD FIRE ON BROAD-
WAY MONDAY NOON

Mr. John Morris, who conducts the peanut wagon on Broadway near Louisa street, had the misfortune today to see his stock of merchandise go up in smoke. Mr. Morris had a gasoline stove in his wagon, which he used in popping corn and warming his lunch. Unknown to Mr. Morris, the tank had been leaking for some time. When he started the fire about noon today the stove exploded, scorching Mr. Morris' face and singeing his hair. He immediately ran out of the wagon, but did not give any alarm, thinking it would soon burn out. However, the leaking gasoline had saturated the floor and the wagon was instantly a mass of flames. Before Mr. Morris could give the alarm the officers at the fire station saw the blaze and the fire truck was on the scene in a few minutes' time and the blaze was soon extinguished, but not until the stock of candy, gum, cigars, tobacco, etc., was destroyed and the wagon badly damaged by the fire.

Mr. Morris is not in robust health and the destruction of his entire stock of goods is indeed a misfortune.

JOHNSON & LYONS CHANGE POLICY

Johnson & Lyons, the well-known grocery firm doing business at 572 West Broadway, will inaugurate a change in policy beginning January 1st. For the past several months they have been giving trading stamps and after a thorough trial of the system they feel they can give their customers more value for their money in other ways. Unless the merchant is a poor business man, the cost of the prizes must come from the customer's pocket. Messrs. Johnson & Lyons feel that their customers will appreciate the change. They intend to make "Quality" and "Service" the ends in view.

DEATH OF NOTED CHURCHMAN

Most Reverend Patrick William Riordan, archbishop of the archdiocese of San Francisco of the Catholic church, head of the church on the Pacific coast, died in that city early Sunday morning. He was to have celebrated the golden jubilee of his priesthood in 1915.

Archbishop Riordan received his early education at the University of Notre Dame, Ind., and in 1864 went to Louvain, Belgium, to continue his education, returning two years later to fill the chair of theology in the Seminary of St. Marys at Chicago. He filled pastorates at Woodstock, Ill.; Joliet, Ill., and Chicago, and in 1883 he was consecrated titular bishop of Cabesa and coadjutor with the right of succession to the See of San Francisco, to which he was elevated a year later.

Right Reverend Edward J. Hanna, auxiliary bishop of San Francisco, has been mentioned as a possible successor.

WELL-KNOWN MASON DEAD

Col. Arthur McArthur, grand master of the Grand Encampment, Knights Templar of the United States, died suddenly at his residence at Troy, N. Y., on Sunday. He was born in Troy in 1850. He was publisher of a Sunday weekly paper and attended to his business duties until the day of his death. He was preparing to go to church when stricken by the death messenger.

HONOR THEIR DEAD

BRITISH BORN HONOR THOSE WHO HAVE GIVEN THEIR LIVES IN WAR

A large number of the Sons and Daughters of the British Empire of Glendale attended the memorial services at Trinity auditorium Sunday in honor of Lord Roberts and other British soldiers fallen in battle.

Lieut. Governor Wallace was chairman of the meeting. Stirring addresses and music were features of the meeting.

Reynold E. Blight, member of the board of education, said: "I am not neutral. It is impossible for me to be neutral. I am a staunch adherent of Great Britain in this fight. I cannot be otherwise."

"Some said that the spirit of the empire was dead. This war has shown its living vitality, the heroism and bravery and spirit of sacrifice which its children bear in their hearts."

The talk ended in a spirited plea that all should give to the cause as liberally as they could.

In his report as treasurer, John Alton said he had already forwarded 1300 pounds to the Prince of Wales fund and had sufficient money to send another 300 pounds for January. The contributions from all sources, prior to Sunday's meeting, amounted to $291.65. In addition, $500 had been remitted directly from Santa Monica, $500 had been given by the Sons of St. George, and $1500 had come from Santa Barbara. The Sons and Daughters of the British Empire, founded in Glendale at the opening of the war, have already spread over the entire San Fernando valley. Mr. Alton said, and promise to include every British descendant in Southern California. This organization is raising funds independently. The memorial services ended with the playing of national airs of Great Britain on the pipe organ.

SERIOUSLY INJURED

On Sunday afternoon at about 4 o'clock Mrs. R. L. Wales of 1610 West Fifth street, while walking along Sixth street at Brand boulevard with her little daughter, was struck by an automobile and knocked down. The machine did not stop, but continued on its way and Mrs. Wales managed to get up and walk as far as the Sixth street school, where she fell and was unable to rise. Another machine coming along at that time stopped and she was picked up and taken to the Glendale sanitarium, where her injuries were cared for. This morning it is reported that she is slightly better, but as she seems to be injured internally, it is not possible to determine just how serious the matter will be. Her limbs are also very badly bruised, but no bones broken. The child was not hurt at all and nothing is known as to the identity of the driver of the car which struck Mrs. Wales.

A BIG DEAL

John J. Graf of 1219 Lomita avenue, who is vice-president and general manager of the Sespe Consolidated Oil company, leaves this afternoon for Mexico to inspect 50,000 acres of land which the company may purchase if Mr. Graf finds it as represented. As part payment the Sespe company is to put up 1280 acres of oil land located in Ventura county near Fillmore. The deal will amount to $320,447.

Mr. Graf expects to return home about January 1.

WANDERINGS ENDED

YOUNG MAN FOUND DEAD ON SAN FERNANDO ROAD CHRIST-MAS MORNING

John D. Gallager was found dead in a vacant house between Glendale and Burbank on the San Fernando road Christmas morning. He was identified by a notebook, in which was his name and a notation in which it was asked that in case of accident D. F. Gallager of Philadelphia, Pa., be notified.

The body was discovered by a couple of hoboes, who reported their gruesome find to the Burbank constable, who called the Pulliam Undertaking company to take charge of the body. Upon examination it was found that the deceased had come to his death from heart trouble, and that he was twenty-two years of age.

Little of value was found in his clothes, with the exception of a cheap watch and a notebook, which showed that since leaving Philadelphia Sept. 2, he had visited nearly every state in the Union and part of Canada.

From the appearance of the body and notations in his notebook, the young man was well educated and probably belongs to a good family. The body is being held for a number of days at the Pulliam Undertaking company's chapel to give time for instructions to come from the East, if any are interested enough to give orders for the disposition of the body.

MR. RANDALL HERE

Congressman-elect Charles H. Randall of Highland Park was a Glendale visitor today. Mr. Randall expects to leave the middle of next month for Washington, where he will remain until the close of the present session of congress, getting familiar with the methods of that august body of which he will be a member next session.

CERTAINLY WORTH WHILE

Advertising in the Glendale Evening News is certainly worth while. A few evenings ago an advertisement appeared in The News offering for sale a pen of Ancona chickens. A gentleman from Oakland, Cal., who is spending the winter in Southern California, noticed the ad and, being somewhat of a poultry fancier, called on the owner of the fowls very early the following morning and, after being satisfied that they were worth the price asked, bought and paid for them on the spot. The owner in the evening when the chickens were delivered by him said that during the day nine different parties had called with the idea of purchasing, and he furthermore had answered several telephone calls, which conclusively shows that advertising in The News is certainly worth while.

SUFFERING FROM ACCIDENT

Charles Anderson, who resides at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Anderson, 203 Orange street, Glendale, is a constant sufferer as the result of an accident last June when in the instance of his team running away he had his back broken. On Sunday at noon his condition became much worse. At the present writing he is resting easier.

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Sparr of 534 Jackson street entertained with a Christmas breakfast on Friday morning, covers being laid for Mr. and Mrs. Hann, Mr. and Mrs. Boynton, Mr. and Mrs. East, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Wright, Mrs. Allen, Miss Lola East and Mr. Lester Scott.

RELIGIOUS AWAKENING

OVER THOUSAND CONVERSIONS AT THE BROWN AND CURRY REVIVAL

San Bernardino, in spite of bad weather, has just passed through a tremendous religious awakening at which 1260 confessed their faith in the Lord Jesus Christ and started out in the Christian life. It is estimated that 35,000 attended the meetings.

What this means to the local churches only the active workers realize, and the entire community must feel the good effect of such a meeting. January will find Brown and Curry at Long Beach, where a tremendous tabernacle has been erected for the crowds that will want to attend. Preachers and other volunteer laborers with hammer and saw pushed up the huge structure in a remarkably short time and already the good service thus rendered has proved a great blessing.

In a few weeks Glendale will up and at it in like manner. Preachers and carpenters will work side by side and the largest auditorium in the San Fernando valley will spring up like a mushroom. Glendale, Tropic and Casa Verdugo, judged by the earnestness of the local pastors and their finely organized churches, will undoubtedly experience the greatest awakening for God and his Christ ever known in these parts.

All interested feel that the opportune time for a great forward movement has come. Glendale, already known far and near as the city of churches, will become even more the town of church goers and lovers of truth and purity. The Christian forces of Glendale, Tropic and Casa Verdugo salute Brown and Curry.

FAMILY REUNION

A family reunion and Christmas celebration was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. S. Smith at 814 West Broadway.

Relatives and friends were present from Riverside, Fullerton, Ventura, Decle, Redlands, Los Angeles, Long Beach and Glendale, numbering thirty-three. The home was prettily decorated with the Christmas colors, red and green, having been carried out with pepper boughs, smilax and poinsettia red. After the usual Christmas dinner a nicely arranged program was carried out. Mr. Smith gave a speech of welcome also a short review of how the Christmas celebrations in his grandfathers and fathers' families had been celebrated for the past seventy years. Responsive remarks were made by some of the guests, recitations and songs were given by the children after which presents were distributed from a well-filled Christmas tree.

LARGE FAMILY GATHERING

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Adams of 1450 Ivy street entertained forty-eight of their relatives with Christmas dinner on Friday. The house was profusely decorated with smilax, poinsettias, holly, Christmas bells and in the living and dining rooms runners of red and green crepe paper led from the chandeliers to the walls, giving a beautiful effect. There were two large tables, one in the living-room and one in the dining-room, so that all of the forty-eight guests, ranging in age from five to seventy-five years, were seated. There were three native daughters and one native son in the gathering, and the guests had been born in states all the way from Maine to California. This is indeed a large and representative family, and the gathering together was enjoyed by all. In the afternoon a number of pictures were taken on the lawn, just to show the flowers and sunshine of a Christmas day in Glendale.

PACE-BOWERS WEDDING

At the Presbyterian Manse, 421 Cedar street, on Christmas eve, the pastor, Rev. W. E. Edmonds, united in marriage Mr. Russell S. Pace, until recently of Pasadena, and Miss Marie E. Bowers of Glendale. This happy young couple will reside at 426 South Jackson street, Glendale. Mr. Pace being employed by the Pacific Telephone company in this city. Many good wishes accompany Mr. and Mrs. Pace in the establishment of their home.

SECTARIAN NAMES

Pressure from members of the Society of Friends is being brought upon congress for a law that will insure to sects rights in their distinctive names. That is to say, these followers of George Fox and William Penn are having their patience severely tried by manufacturers and traders that attach the name "Quaker" to various kinds of vendible goods, liquid and solid, pernicious and nutritious.

In making this contest to determine a point of law so far as it has to do with interstate commerce, and so far as federal authority can deal with it, the Friends are making up an issue which is of general concern to adherents of religious bodies; and hence they deserve sympathy and any aid that may be needed. What they have had cause to object to some other group may be called upon to endure later, if the trading abuse is not legally estopped.

The fundamental issue at stake is one in which individuals, colleges and universities and all institutions, the names of which have national and international reputes, are as much concerned as are the sects. Publicity as publicity, whenever a contest of this kind comes, is forced to realize that it has limits; and that there are bounds beyond which advertisers may not go. Though the courts still divide on the right of a person to full control of depiction of his physical appearance in the public prints, the same being used to adorn an advertisement, public opinion is mounting on the side of the individual and not of the advertiser. Some day Harvard and Yale, to cite two conspicuous institutions whose names are freely capitalized by manufacturers, will act in self-respect, and go to the legislature for relief, just as the Friends now are doing. Then, with a sensible law enforced by the courts, a man who has pride in his alma mater will not have to endure seeing her name attached to forms of business that are degrading, and admirers of poets and prophets will not be compelled to note that their names and portraits adorn brands of goods the use of which makes men gross. Nor will it, we are confident, be possible always for vendors and advertisers to make free with the names and portraits of chief magistrates and rulers as they do now. In short, in this realm, as in others, the society of tomorrow is to have more taste and reverence than it has at present. The rights of persons and of institutions to control use of their names will be more positively defined and defended. That which has been identified with idealism can hardly be allowed to be the prey of commercialism.—Christian Science Monitor.

EXCELLENT REASONING

A temperance lecturer was enthusiastically denouncing the use of all intoxicants.

"I wish all the beer, all the wine, all the whiskey in the world was at the bottom of the ocean," he said. Hastily Pat arose to his feet.

"Sure and so do I, sorr," he shouted. "I wish every bit of it was at the bottom of the sea."

As they were leaving the hall the lecturer encountered Pat.

"I certainly am proud of you," he said. "It was a brave thing for you to rise and say what you did. Are you a teetotaler?"

"No, indade, sorr," answered Pat. "I'm a diver."

If we grab our troubles by the shoulders, square them around so we may look them in the eyes and size them up, we find that most of them are not so large or so fierce looking as we had imagined. Never let a trouble deceive you as to its dimensions or formidableness. Size it up and see whether or not it be a pigmy masquerading as a giant.

RECKLESS AUTOMOBILE DRIVING

It is needless to call attention to the dangerous practice so many automobile drivers have of driving recklessly. The use of a motor car is of great service, but the misuse of it by so many people is cause of terrible accidents. When people go on a pleasure ride, why is it not possible to get sufficient pleasure out of a fifteen or twenty mile speed instead of running at a speed of from thirty to forty-five miles, and turning corners and passing over road crossings without slowing down.

The increasing use of automobiles and the carelessness of their use is presenting a serious problem for consideration. The time has come when a careful driver of a motor car is not safe on the public highway in the midst of so many cars driven by careless drivers.

The Glendale Evening News is firmly of the opinion that before a man or woman is allowed to drive a car he or she should pass a rigid examination, and such person should be taught the importance of avoiding "road hog" acts.

In fact, the person who drives an automobile should be an intelligent, law-abiding citizen. A driver of a motor car has all kinds of chances under existing laws to make himself obnoxious to the public.

AWFUL PAWS

A gentleman who had married his cook was giving a dinner party, and between the courses the good lady sat with her hands spread on the tablecloth.

Suddenly the buzz of conversation ceased, and in the silence that followed a young man on the right of his hostess said pleasantly:

"Awful praise!"

"Yes, they may be," said the old-time cook, with heightened color, "and yours would be like them if you had done half my work."—Liverpool Mercury.

GOOD GUESSING

"Is the editor in?" asked the man with the unbarbered hair and the shiny coat, as he fished a roll of paper from his pocket.

"No," replied the office boy. "He has just gone out."

"This is the third time I've called to see him," growled the caller, "and each time you have told me that he has just gone out. 'What's the explanation?'"

"I don't know," answered the office boy, "but I guess he must have been born under a lucky star."—Lippincott's.

WORLD CONFLICT SEEMS LIKE DREAM

Don't you feel like rubbing your eyes sometimes, to see if you are really awake? And if it were only not so—if the world could only wake up and find it a horrible dream!

This is the dream—can it be real? The Christian world has repeated the Ten Commandments and the Golden Rule. The industries, the education, the science and the philanthropy of half the world are suspended. The majority of the able-bodied men in Europe are now freezing and soaking in burrowed trenches and killing each other by the hundreds of thousands. The two civilizations to which the world has owed most of its progress for a thousand years are now pitted against each other, each announcing that it can survive only by the destruction of the other. The war so far is a deadlock. Neither side expects to gain much with the troops now in the field. These will destroy each other and the victory will go to whoever can send in the most after these are gone. France and Germany are now drilling boys from fourteen to eighteen, and old men from forty-five upward, for the final decisive slaughter after the middle generation is destroyed.

Individual liberty has disappeared and the modern status of woman has been forgotten. Women have only two purposes left—to grub the fields, while the men are gone, and to bear children who shall rehabilitate a Europe of generation after next. With brutal directness as an avowed governmental policy, the soldiers have been bred to their women before being sent out to die, that the breed may not disappear. And in Germany the brood women will be cared for by the state, so that the ranks of recruits for the levy of 1935 may not be jeopardized. But in Belgium there is no state to care for them. There, in the course of nature, the birth-rate must go on as usual for several months—and all the babies will starve to death. Born in an improvised shelter by the roadside, to a mother whose ration is one baker's bun and one bowl of cabbage soup a day, babies by the thousands are coming into the world in Belgium. On that ration mother's milk does not exist. There are no cows in Belgium and milk cannot be had, for money, work, love or crime. Calmly the world recognizes that these babies must all starve. But each individual mother is fighting to the last limit of desperation to save her own child, and if she can beg or steal one of the few cans of condensed milk that can be got into the country she will eke out its flickering life a few days longer—and then it will die.

In some parts of Poland the conditions are nearly as bad. And with most of the wage-earners of Europe drawing a cent a day in the army, the individual problem of the women and children of the poorer classes must be desperate. There is not a family in Europe today that knows whether all its members are dead or alive. Every household in Europe is looking daily for the report of the death or maiming of some member, and few are long disappointed. No propertyed family in Europe knows how soon it will be penniless, and no laboring family knows how soon its surviving members may be starving. No nation in Europe knows whether it will exist next year. The laboratories of Europe, where the secrets of nature were being delved for the relief of human ills, are all closed.

No one writes books, paints pictures, composes music, or discovers new truth. Among the millions in the ranks must be some whose genius would have ennobled the world forever—and they will be killed. Among the scientific researches left unfinished must be some which would have transformed the life of the world forever—and they will never be resumed. The current of civilization has been turned backward into a raging torrent of barbarism. It is a dream; a nightmare. But there is no power to awaken the world from it.—Fresno Republican.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

The cantata at the First Congregational church Sunday evening was one of the best ever given in Glendale. The evening was under the direction of Mrs. Coral Harrison Sloan, who not only prepared the program and drilled and directed those taking part, but also took a leading part herself. An original idea of Mrs. Sloan's was the reading of the "Shepherds of Judea" from "Ben Hur," which she rendered beautifully and held her audience spellbound throughout the reading. Another feature of the evening was the beautiful soprano solo, "My Soul

RESCUES FAIRY TALES OF CALIFORNIA INDIANS

German children read in Grimm's fairy tales of water-nixies in their own Rhine, of gnomes and wood-folk in their own Black forest, English children of their own English Puck and Robin Hood; Italian children encounter in the pages of the Pentameron the ogres of Calabria and the fairy princesses of Sicily. Why should not American children read about "coyote" and "grizzly bear," those famous heroes of native California myth?

A new world of fantastic native legend and miraculous adventure is being revealed by the University of California in the myths it is rescuing among the fast-vanishing Indian tribes of California. These are being given to the world as one feature of a monumental series, "The University of California Publications in American Archaeology and Ethnology," of which ten bulky volumes have been published during the past dozen years.

Some day these sands of native story will be sifted, and the magic touch of genius will turn into pure gold, for the delight of all the children of men, California's own rich gift to the world store of myth and legend.

Here are some bits of primitive California folklore, paraphrased from Prof. Pliny Earle Goddard's texts. (He took them down in phonetic writing from the lips of old Tom Hill, an aged Chilula Indian of the Bald hills of Northern California, or from the wife of Molasses, a very old woman who spoke the Hupa dialect of upper Redwood creek. These tales and "medicine" rigmaroles, used for love-charms, healing or for luck in hunting, have just been published by the University of California in the original language and also in translation, in a volume by Professor Goddard of New York, who is now of the staff of the American Museum of Natural History, entitled "Chilula Texts.")

The Monster with Two Heads

The oldest and wisest of four brothers went down the creek. As he walked along he heard something making a noise on the hillside, and he saw small branches dropping from redwood trees. Then a two-headed monster appeared. It gave chase. He ran until he was almost dead for want of breath. Finally, his breath was gone—he died. The monster which had killed him carried the body across the creek and up the hill to the house of Those Who Eat People—a house so covered with moss no one would notice it.

A day passed, and another. Worried, another of the four brothers set out. When he came to the place where the village used to be he heard something making a noise. It was the two-headed monster going along, and he made a noise in the forest like the blowing of the wind. The monster killed the second brother and carried him up the hill. Now two of them were gone.

Worried because those who had gone forth did not return, still another brother set out toward the north.

Now three were gone, and there was only one left. He was the youngest brother, and only so high. He said to his grandmother:

"Today I'm going visiting."

"My grandchild, why do you say that? They'll eat us all up!"

Then she put a belt on the youngest brother. It was this wide!

"When you're about to lose your breath, point with this belt," she told him.

Then the youngest started out.

Across the stream, up on the hillside, the redwoods were moving back and forth. It was the two-headed monster—and the monster chased him until his breath was nearly gone. He was about to be killed. But he pointed the belt. The monster fell in pieces—dead.

Then the youngest brother followed a track up the hillside. Near the head of the canyon stood a house on which ferns were growing. He went in. There sat an old woman and a boy.

"What made that noise?" said the boy. (Beside him lay a net, made to catch people, for they lived on human beings, and the hillsides were white with bones.)

The boy took up his net. But the youngest brother pointed his belt at him, and the boy fell into two parts.

The old woman seized the net. The youngest brother pointed the belt at her. She died.

"People shan't do this way!" said the youngest brother. "They must live right! They shan't eat people!"

So he burned down the house and went home to his grandmother, and after that they lived well.

The Old Made Young

Here is a California legend told by the wife of Molasses—an old, old Hupa woman—and from her withered lips it had an added wistfulness:

"He-who-came-down-for-the-world came walking from the north. He came to the Middle of the World. He came where the hill stands which points toward the sky. He made hills stand up on either side. There used to be one that stood up—

"People used to go up this hill, and become young again. When one who is old like me went up this hill, toward the east, he became young again. It used to be that way!

"Then one who lives in the south said, 'This hill shall be mine only!' For he didn't like it that those who climbed the hill should be young again.

"But it used to be that way!"

Invulnerable Grizzly Bear

Panther lived with his brothers. He used to spend all his time hunting, but every time before he set out he used to say to his brothers, "You must not go to the top of the west ridge!"

One day the brothers said to each other, "Why does he always tell us that?"

Up on the ridge they saw, away off at the end of the timber, an old man lying with his legs crossed and his wife sitting beside him.

"Old man!" they shouted. "Come over and help us pound!"

"What did you say?" asked the old man.

"Come help us pound!"

"All right," he said. And he put on his grizzly bear skin blanket.

The two boys ran home and slid to the door of the house. They heard him coming.

"Boys, open the door for me!" he called. When they didn't get through, he climbed up on the roof and came down the smoke-hole. The boys gave him some venison and he ate it. When he had finished it, they gave him another helping, and he ate that—he ate all the meat in the house—he ate the untanned hides. When he had finished everything, he said: "Well! I'll go home!"

The boys opened the door, but he was so filled he couldn't get through, so he climbed out the smoke-hole.

When Panther, the oldest brother, came home he carried two deer.

"Didn't I tell you not to go up on the west ridge?" he said to his two brothers, and he slapped them and winched their faces.

All that night Panther was busy flaking arrow-points. In the morning he set out, carrying five quivers full of arrows. He came where the old man was lying and he shot him twice.

"Alo!" the old man cried. "What did you put in the fire that snaps so?"

"It's not the fire snapping this time," said the old woman. "He's shooting at you!"

Then the old man jumped up and took down the grizzly bear blanket and put it on. The young man kept shooting back at him as he ran. Finally Panther had only one arrow left from his five quivers-full.

"Between his toes!" called the old woman.

Panther shot him there between the toes, and the old man rolled over dead.

The Bewitched Maiden

Two men lived with their sister across the creek from Littewhwinawdin. Once upon a time an old man came from the west and said: "You'd better bring some acorns across the mountains to me!" They loved their sister very much, but they concluded they would go and carry loads of acorns across to the coast. However, they warned their sister not to leave any acorns outside the house.

They set out toward the west with their loads. They went into the forest, they went up the ridge, they crossed the creek, they came to the ocean, and then they reached the house of the man who had asked them to bring acorns. There they sat down by his door.

"Come in!" someone called. When they had finished eating supper, the old man said, "Well, let's go to the sweathouse." They went into the sweathouse and lay down close to each other. The old man got up. "Are you asleep?" he asked. They made no answer. When he kept on asking, they knew what he was about to do—at dawn he was going to kill them by magic. So the strangers moved the old man's sons and lay in their places. The old man felt about and rubbed something in the mouths of those he supposed to be his visitors. About dawn there was a noise in the sons' throats that made the noise. Then the old man found what he had done.

"You had no good intentions when you asked us to bring you loads of acorns," said the wise brother to the old man.

The old man replied that if he would not tell what he had done, he would give him a woman and a gift of red obsidians. The brothers refused, but made up the loads of surf fish and seaweed which had been given them in return for the acorns, with mortars in the middle of the pack.

"Well, let's go back," said one of the brothers. They started back, but as they were going up the ridge they heard that the old man's sons had died from the magic he had intended for the brothers.

The brothers went along until the sun was in the west and they had come to the place where they had intended to camp, but fearing that their sister might leave acorns outside the house, they went on.

The old man was walking after them, vainly trying to overtake them. They heard him coming. One of the brothers told the other to sit down below the trail. He himself crouched above the trail, with a knife in his hand. When the old man came to a log over which he had to climb, one of the brothers jumped up and stabbed him. The other caught hold of the old man and stabbed him repeatedly. Then they cut him to pieces.

So they came back from the west, and it was warm weather as they passed along. As they came along the ridge on their way home, nearly overcome with the heat, they heard a noise in the direction of their village. Their sister, for whom they had hurried back, lay dead—she had been killed by magic poison the night before, as she was bringing in acorns.

But they did not feel so badly, for they had already cut in pieces the old man who had caused her death.

OUT-OF-DATE POSTERS

Billboards and posters are eyesores at any time, but they are doubly worse when advertising some event that is past. Glendale is graced with a few of these out-of-date advertisements. "The Whip," a show that was in Los Angeles more than a month ago, is being advertised in some of the business windows on Brand boulevard. It is likewise being advertised on a little building on Broadway.

McDonald, who was defeated for the office of assemblyman Nov. 3, has life-sized pictures posted on a half dozen buildings in this city, one of the buildings being the little city hose building in the eastern part of the Bentley-Schoeneman Lumber Co. yards.

The Barnes circus, which was in Glendale Nov. 20, is being advertised from the windows of a number of vacant rooms in this city. If there is a sure sign of deadness in a city, it is the presence of a lot of out-of-date advertising posters.

It should be the duty of some one to destroy these out-of-date advertising posters.

PHILANTHROPY OF CONVICTS

Let us not despair of human kind, so long as there remains a spark of nobility in the human breast. These sparks of nobility may be found often times where least to be expected. For illustration:

Over in the Illinois penitentiary, at Joliet, the convicts, of their own initiative, have put into operation a plan to raise a fund for the support of families of men serving terms in the prison. This, by the way, is a philanthropy that the state itself should perform. When the law deprives a family of its bread-winner, law-breaker though he may be, the innocent wife and children of the convict should not be made to suffer because of his crime. Some provision should be made by the constituted powers for the maintenance of convicts' families, says the Pasadena Star.

These prisoners at Joliet, more thoughtful than the state which imprisons them, will spend their spare time in the prison shops and turn their product over to an agent to be sold for the benefit of the wives and children of the prisoners. And who, think you, proposed this commendable philanthropy? It was one of the most notorious safe-blowers in Joliet prison. This looks pretty good for human nature, doesn't it?

DRY CLEANED

A colored Baptist was exhorting: "Now, breddren and sistern, come up to de altar and hab yo' sins all washed away."

All came but one man.

"Why, Brudder Jones, don' yo' want yo' sins washed away?"

"I done had my sins washed away."

"Yo' has! Where yo' had yo' sins washed away?"

"Ober at de Methodist church."

CENTURY OF PEACE

Peace has existed between England and the United States just one hundred years.

Just a century ago a body of grim-faced men met in Belgium and affixed their signatures to a long, legal looking document, thereby bringing to an end the war of 1812. Fifteen days later, on January 9, 1915, the battle of New Orleans was fought, there being no means of direct communication between the fighters and the peacemakers. Four years later England and the United States agreed not to fortify the Canadian border.

Because of the terrible war between England and other European countries, the celebration of this centenary has not been forwarded by either the United States or England. It would, in the opinion of local English subjects, not be in keeping with the feeling of sadness that now prevails in the hearts of both Americans and English.

But both English and Americans are inwardly rejoicing that for 100 years has perfect peace existed between the two greatest English speaking nations in the world.
