

Anti-Slavery Office,
New York, 24 April.

Dear Garrison, 1860.

Cheever has agreed to speak for us on Tuesday morning, making Hyatt's case his particular topic. He will read, of course. You should announce him in the Liberator.

Rude now, dear Garrison, super a word of exhortation from me in regard to the resolutions, which ought to be not only written in time to be offered, but printed and slips furnished the Reporters.
If you will send me the copy in time, I will attend to the printing; unless you choose to ~~print~~ take the slips from your own types.

The news that you are going to England gives me great pleasure, not that I do not want you at home, but that the cause seems to me to demand you more imperatively on the other side of the water.

The prospect seems good for our ~~four~~ meetings, so far as I can judge. I hope you will read the Scriptures as usual, and make at least a brief introductory address.

I want you also to speak Wednesday evening before the city Society with Phillips & Tilton. It will be the last of our meetings, & perhaps your last opportunity to speak before leaving the country.

In great haste,

Oliver Johnson.
