KING EDWARD'S BODY IS BORNE TO THE TOMB

VICTORIA MOURNS LOSS OF A BELOVED SOVEREIGN

Impressive Public Memorial Services Held To-day in Front of the Parliament Buildings Attended by Thousands of Mourners

In no city of the British Empire have the manifestations of grief at the loss of the dearly-beloved sovereign his late Majesty, King Edward VII., been more impressive than those in Victoria to-day, when the whole populace seized the occasion of the funeral of the dead monarch to pay a last tribute to his immortal memory. The beautiful weather prevailing, together with the magnitude of the solemn event, assisted in making the demonstration of the most notable and impressive character.

Flags drooping at half-mast, the buildings draped in their "trappings of woe," the booming of minute guns, the solemn tolling of bells, the strains of the Dead March from "Saul" reaching the ear from the sacred edifices of the city and from the brass bands, the beat of muffled drums, the slow procession of hundreds of loyal subjects of the Crown, the dense crowd assembled in front of the parliament buildings, and the silence over all—these were outward manifestations of the profound grief of the people of this Outpost of Empire at the passing of King Edward the Peacemaker.

All business was suspended for the day, and from early morning until late in the afternoon the streets wore a deserted appearance, save for the slowly moving procession to the parliament buildings and the throngs wending their way to church. Services were held in all the sacred edifices of the city and the congregations exceeded in number that recorded on any other occasion.

Parade Through Streets.
The spectacular feature of the day's proceedings was the great parade of the united fraternal and secret societies through the leading streets of the city to the parliament buildings, where the public memorial services were held. These were in the procession massed on Yates street above Douglas. Chief Langley acted as chief marshal, being assisted by W. H. Price, chairman of parade committee, and Charles Holmes, secretary. A start was made promptly at 2.30, the order of parade being as follows:

- Brass Band.
- Loyal Orange Lodge.
- Ancient Order of Foresters.
- St. Andrew's Society.
- Independent Order of Odd Fellows.
- Independent Order of Foresters.
- Sons of St. George.
- Knights of Pythias.
- Fraternal Order of Eagles.
- Knights of Columbus.
- Young Men's Institute.
- United Commercial Travellers.
- Ancient Order of United Workmen.
- Native Sons and Pioneers.
- Sons of England.
- Chinese Residents.

The route of march was down Yates to Government and direct along the latter thoroughfare to the parliament buildings. The procession was one of the longest ever seen in Victoria and the scene as the mourners passed through the streets lined with thousands of spectators was most impressive. All street traffic had been suspended to allow of the passage of the procession and the beat of order was maintained.

A picturesque feature of the procession was the presence of a large delegation of Chinese residents, representing the Chinese Consolidated Benevolent Society, the Chinese Board of Trade and the board of trustees of the Imperial Chinese school, and including all the leading merchants. The stores in Chinatown were all shuttered during the day and signs of mourning were to be seen on many.

Japanese residents also were represented in the assemblage and displayed symbols of grief.

On Parliament Square.
Thousands had already assembled at all vantage points in and around parliament square when the procession arrived at the scene. His Worship Mayor Morley and other representatives of the official life of the city, clergymen of various denominations and the Arion Club were stationed on the platform in front of the spacious main entrance to the buildings, or grouped on the wide stone steps overlooking the broad lawn, which held a dense mass of people with bared heads, when the proceedings, solemn and impressive, opened.

His Worship Mayor Morley in clear, distinct tones which were heard to the outer edge of the crowd owing to the solemn stillness which prevailed, made a brief opening address which voiced the grief of Victorians for the loss of their dearly loved King. His Worship's remarks were in honor an attempt to portray how deeply the people dwelling in this city by the sea, in this distant corner of the Empire, felt the removal of the hand of death of that sovereign whom they had come to love and reverence for the many noble qualities which had endeared him to the whole world.

or in hymn form, "O, God Our Help in Ages Past," was sung, many of the thousands assembled assisting in swelling the chorus. Rev. Herman A. Carson, B. A., then read the 90th Psalm after which Rev. T. W. Gladstone made the invocation. Another hymn "Rock of Ages"—one of his late Majesty's favorites—was then sung.

Capt. Wolley's Address.
Capt. Phillipps-Wolley then delivered the following address, his voice sounding clearly and his words being listened to with an attentive silence, which was a tribute alike to the solemnity of the occasion and their eloquence:

"We are gathered here to-day to do honor to our mighty dead, the King of England, the Emperor of India, the supreme lord and ruler of the Dominions over Seas, but above all, the head of our Empire, and the representative of our race.

"This is no place, and I am no person, to pronounce an eulogy upon King Edward the Seventh. That will be done by our spiritual leaders in the cathedrals and churches of our nation to a people upon its knees; and moreover, in any except such hallowed surroundings, it is difficult for an ordinary Briton to bring himself to that frame of mind in which an eulogy would be anything but an impertinence.

"Out of the immediate presence of God, natural human pride will have sway, and we, when we think of our dead, must be filled with that pride beyond all speech which makes British lips dumb because no words of man are adequate to express it.

"Let the others praise him. He was ours, the people's king. We knew him as he knew us, and we loved him. His throne was not the one men saw. His throne was his mother's throne, earned by love and loyalty to and understanding of his people, and by unceasing labor for them to the very last. This throne of Edward the Seventh was the heart of Britain.

Gaunt and Unafraid.
Must I prove it? Do you remember how we twice prayed for him, and how God gave him back to us; that was in the time of sorrow. Do you remember in the playtime, so little time ago, when his horse had won the Derby, how the burly, genial sportsman led that horse through the vast throng of his subjects, one of them, unattended, unguarded, and unafraid? What other ruler of a mighty nation, nowadays, dare do that?"

Look back through history, and you will find the secret of our late King's safety in the story of all our greatest monarchs.

Alfred was the first ruler in Christendom who devoted himself utterly to the welfare of those he ruled, and in his steady labor, his love of his country, and his love of sport, he was absolutely one with his people. Edward the First is called the first English king, and so like was he to his people in body and mind that his very faults were theirs, and they loved him better even when they were contending with him than they would have loved any other.

Time forbids me to go through the glorious roll, but the strength of Britain's kings has always lain in the fact that they were really kings, men who worked and led, the heads and representatives of their kin, and their kin was the British people.

But to bring the whole story home to you, I must for one moment consider another word. What is this Empire which is on every man's lips; this Empire of which Edward VII. was the head? Is it a geographical term, describing the area over which one man rules? Surely it is more than this. If it were only this it would mean very little to us or to the world, and it would matter little how long it lasted.

Life Work of the Race.
But to me, at least, it seems that this Empire is the life's work of the British race; the expression of the British ideal; the monument to the mighty dead of our own kin; the very best that we can devise for the betterment of man, to insure perfect fair play for rich and poor, weak and strong alike. I believe that God created the world. I believe that Christ came to teach the world; and I believe that the British Empire exists to spread Christ's doctrine, and to illustrate them, however imperfectly, by her practice.

If this be not true, then there is no good reason for the permanence of our race, but I have good warrant for my belief that it is true.

Perfect fair play between man and man; the duty of the strong to help the weak; the nobility of self-sacrifice; these seem to me to lie at the root of all Christ's teaching.

Warden of the World.
Is there any nation to-day which illustrates these teachings as our nation does? Where is the race whose laws are more fair than ours; where is the nation whose women are held in greater honor and respect, where, as

THE LATE KING EDWARD VII, WHO WAS BURIED TO-DAY.

MEMORIAL SERVICES AT VANCOUVER

Buildings Draped in Purple and Black—Judge McInnes Will Deliver Funeral Oration

Vancouver, B. C., May 20.—Vancouver is a city of mourning to-day. Business is suspended and the streets look gloomy even in the bright sunshine with their lines of buildings draped in purple and black and citizens wearing the insignia of grief in memory of the late King. With every promise of ideal weather the great memorial service at Recreation park this afternoon will be attended by many thousands of people who will bear the funeral oration pronounced by Judge W. W. E. McInnes. At the precise moment when the services begin every car in the city will come to a standstill for three minutes. In the deserted streets some little necessary work was being done this morning, but early this afternoon even the auto-cabs, the small theatres, which run almost continuously, closed their doors. A salute of 101 minute guns was fired this morning.

TO SUPERVISE THE CONSTRUCTION OF C.N.R.

J. P. Forde, Formerly a C. P. R. Engineer, Has Been Appointed by the Government

J. P. Forde, for a number of years resident C. P. R. engineer at Revelstoke, has been appointed supervisor of construction of the Canadian Northern railway in the province, by the British Columbia government. Mr. Forde recently resigned his position with the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. In view of the fact that the government guaranteed the bonds of the Canadian Northern railway for the line that will be built in British Columbia, it is the intention through Mr. Forde to closely watch construction work, and it will be his duty to see that the standards of grading and tracklaying stipulated in the agreement are lived up to. When work is well under way, Mr. Forde will have a staff of assistants.

SPRING RIDGE WILL GET IT

AGREEMENT IS NEAR ON NEW HIGH SCHOOL SITE

Council and School Board in Accord on the Main Points of Proposition

As a result of the conference held last evening between the members of the streets committee and a deputation representing the school board, it is practically settled that the new High school will be located on the proposed site at Spring Ridge. The school board and the city council are in agreement on the main points, and it is now only a question of arranging details. As a result of the discussion last evening a recommendation will go to the city council that the city grant for site purposes the 3 1/2 acres of land which it owns at Spring Ridge and makes an appropriation of $12,000, in addition, to enable the necessary grading work to be done to prepare the site ready for building purposes. Besides the committee representing the school board a large number of residents of Spring Ridge were present. Ald. Bannerman said there was a feeling on the part of the city council that the High school should, if possible, be located at Spring Ridge. Personally, he was of the opinion that it was the very best site available. It was very central and it would, he thought, be found to be much cheaper than the piece of property which had been mentioned as a site in the vicinity of the Jewish cemetery. There was only one thing which could be advanced in favor of the latter site, and that was that the outlook was better than Spring Ridge offered. But this would have to be weighed against the inconvenience which would be caused the children attending a school situated so far from the centre portion of the city. He had no misgivings that were the children themselves consulted in the matter they would unanimously vote in favor of the Spring Ridge site.

INAUGURATES BIG EMIGRATION SCHEME

Melbourne, May 20.—Mr. McKenzie, the Victorian minister of lands, and Mr. Elwood Mead, chairman of the water commission, have sailed for Great Britain in connection with the government's immigration scheme. They will probably spend the month of July in Great Britain. The main object of their mission is to promote emigration from Great Britain to the irrigated lands in Victoria. It is hoped that forty thousand suitable immigrants will be brought to the colony within the next two years.

FUNERAL SERVICES AT FEDERAL CAPITAL

Militia Regiments Take Part in Ceremony in Front of Parliament Building

Ottawa, May 20.—The King's funeral was most impressively observed in the Capital. Stores were closed and church services were held this morning by all denominations. Earl Grey attended Christ Church Cathedral and Sir Wilfrid Laurier the Basilica.

Two thousand of the city militia formed a square facing parliament buildings, with Earl Grey, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, cabinet ministers and the headquarters staff in the centre, and thousands of citizens, most of them in mourning dress, looking on. The troops presented arms, then stood with arms reversed while the massed bands played Chopin's funeral march.

At 1.30, on a signal given by city whistles in different parts of the city, the whole industrial life came to a complete standstill for three minutes. Street cars and vehicles stopped. No sound was heard but the solemn tolling of the church bells. Then the bands played the Dead March in Saul, crepe was removed from the colors and the drums and the ceremony concluded with the singing of the national anthem.

To-night minute guns will be fired on Nepean point from 6.24 to 7.31. As the last gun is fired every flag in the city will be simultaneously lowered.

GOVERNMENT OF VICTORIA, AUSTRALIA, WILL SETTLE IMMIGRANTS ON IRRIGATED LANDS

Melbourne, May 20.—Mr. McKenzie, the Victorian minister of lands, and Mr. Elwood Mead, chairman of the water commission, have sailed for Great Britain in connection with the government's immigration scheme. They will probably spend the month of July in Great Britain. The main object of their mission is to promote emigration from Great Britain to the irrigated lands in Victoria. It is hoped that forty thousand suitable immigrants will be brought to the colony within the next two years.

KINGS AND CITIZENS PAY TRIBUTE TO DEAD

Millions Witness Impressive Pageant in London—All Traffic and Manufacturing Cease While Funeral is in Progress.

(Times Lensed Wire.)
London, May 20.—The body of King Edward VII. was laid to rest to-day in St. George's chapel at Windsor, where seven other British kings are buried. The funeral was one of the most impressive in the history of the world.

The procession left Westminster hall at 9.50 a. m. Probably two and a half million people saw the pageant pass. Hundreds of spectators fainted in the dense throngs that lined the route over which the procession moved and forty ambulances were busy.

Spectators began arriving at midnight and at dawn the streets were jammed. Simultaneously with the starting of the procession every train and street car in Great Britain stopped from two to fifteen minutes. Manufacturing throughout the kingdom was suspended while the funeral was in progress. It required two hours and seven minutes for the procession to cover the distance from Westminster hall to Paddington station. The funeral train arrived at Windsor at 12.34 p. m.

The Funeral Pageant.
A great throng had gathered before Westminster's gate long before the portals were thrown open for the procession to move out.

Sombre black was the keynote of the color scheme, occasionally enhanced by the royal purple decorations. In bright relief against this background were the gay colored uniforms of royalty and of the officers of the royal army and royal navy.

The weather to-day was warm and bright. Shortly after the procession started the horse on which the Duke of Connaught was riding became frightened and the Duke was nearly unseated. The animal was quieted and the Duke rode on in the procession.

Every phase of English official life was represented in the great funeral pageant. Officers of the headquarters staff, comprising the warriors of the British army, were in line.

At the head of the column marched the Royal Life Guards, the pick of military Britain. In glittering array marched the advance guard, Knights, Marshals, Foot Guards, Drummers, Royal Scots Fusiliers, the Irish Guards, Royal Dragoons, and detachments of practically every military body, with bands and gorgeous uniforms.

Officers and men from the home fleet of the Royal Navy, natty blue jackets and marines, were in line.

In the column marched military detachments from nearly every European country. The Slav, the Teuton, the Frank, the Latin, in their various uniforms presented a brilliant spectacle.

Among the civilian mourners appeared the staff of the royal household, judges of the high courts and members of the privy council.

The headquarters staff of the British army included Lord Roberts, Lord Kitchener, Sir George White, of the Gordon Highlanders, and General Lowe.

Lords of the admiralty came next, Admiral Sir Arthur K. Wilson, first Lord of the Admiralty; Sir John Fisher, senior naval lord, and Sir Edward Hobart Seymour, admiral of the fleet.

The Duke of Norfolk, Earl Marshal of England, rode alone on a handsome charger. Following him, bearing white staves, came Lord Belper, the Duke of Buccleugh, Earl Waldegrave, Lord Carrington and Earl Beauchamp. Each of the noblemen was attended by six aides.

DRAPED GUN CARRIAGE

The draped gun carriage, bearing the casket, followed in the wake of the military and civil forces. The heavy rumbling carriage was drawn by one hundred soldiers with a party on each side of the casket composed of non-commissioned officers of the Life Guards and of the Royal Household Cavalry. Outside these were lines of honorary pall-bearers.

The slow pace of the funeral car marked the time for the entire cortege. Hedging the pallbearers came detachments of men at arms, halberdiers and musketeers, women of the guard in magnificent scarlet and gold uniforms.

Following the royal catafalque came Admiral Prince Louis of Battenberg, who is allied to the British royal house.

King Edward's favorite charger, decked in full state trappings with purple and cream trappings under the forehand and, followed Prince Louis, in the stirrups were the big spurred

Wellington boots of a field marshal, reversed to denote the death of their owner.

King George.
Preceded by the royal standards rode King George V., with his aide and equerry, attended by the Duke of Connaught, King Edward's brother, and Kaiser Wilhelm, Edward's nephew, wearing the uniform of a British field marshal, who rode on either side and slightly behind the British monarch, King George, whose face was worn and sad, was dressed in the uniform of a British general.

The royal division was closed with the Earl of Granard, field officer in waiting and master of the horse.

Then followed seven European monarchs: King George of Greece; King Alfonso, of Spain; King Manuel, of Portugal; King Hakon, of Norway; King Frederick, of Denmark; King Albert, of Belgium, and King Ferdinand, of Bulgaria.

Grouped behind them, riding three abreast, was a display of lesser royalty such as the world never has seen before. Chief among them was Arch Duke Franz Ferdinand, of Austria; Prince Henry, of Prussia; Prince Henry, of Holland; the Crown Prince of Serbia; Prince Arthur of Connaught; the Duke D'Aosta; the Duke of Pife; the Grand Duke Michael, of Russia; Prince Francis, of Trent; Prince Alexander, of Trent; the Grand Duke of Saxe-Coburg Gotha; the Crown Prince of Romania; and Montenegro; Prince Mohamed Ali, of Egypt; Prince Yusouf Eszedin, of Turkey; Prince Tsai Tso, of China, minister of war and uncle to the Emperor; Prince Charles, of Sweden, and nearly 50 other scions of the ruling houses of Europe.

Queen Mother and Queen Mary.
A long line of carriages followed, the first containing the queen mother and her sister, the Dowager, Duchess of Devonshire, the Princesses Louise and Victoria.

In the next carriage rode Queen Mary, Queen Maud of Norway, the Duke of Cornwall and his sister Princess Mary.

In the succeeding four carriages rode the princesses of the British royal family. Then followed the diplomats of foreign nations.

The first carriage contained Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, former president of the United States and special minister of his country at the funeral of King Edward. Foreign Minister Pinchon of France, and Said Khan of Persia accompanied Roosevelt.

Theodore Roosevelt wore evening dress and black studs, and on his arm was a mourning band.

In the next carriage rode Lord Strathcona, of Canada, Sir G. Reid, Australia, and Sir Hall-Jones, of New Zealand.

In the next carriage was Ambassador White and Lieutenant-Commander Belknap and Major Mott, the latter two Roosevelt's aides.

The carriage of Whitelaw Reid, U. S. ambassador to Great Britain, was near the front of the carriages in which the foreign diplomats rode. The ambassador did not take part in the procession.

People Watch in Silence.
Besides the House of Parliament the cavalcade wound slowly from the main gate of Westminster hall, while the royal military band alternately played Beethoven's and Chopin's funeral marches.

The procession passed along Parliament street, the government buildings on either side being draped in black and purple, white flags at half staff stirred listlessly in the breeze.

The procession moved along Parliament street and Whitehall to Charing Cross, thence through Cockspur street to Pall Mall, up St. James' street to Piccadilly. Through the Mall the procession passed the famous London clubs, draped in mourning.

Down Piccadilly past Hyde Park to the Paddington station the line of march led through solid bands of silently watching people.

To the spectators who thronged balconies, windows and roofs the casket, with its white embroidered pall, was clearly visible. On top of the pall the royal insignia was embroidered. On a cushion at the head of the casket rested the royal crown, while one at the foot bore two orbs, regal and imperial, while in the middle rested a sceptre.

As the procession approached Hyde Park corner, St. George's hospital came into view. The building's roof was packed with people and even the ash leading from Constitution Hill was black with spectators. The windows of Apsley house, the residence of the Duke of Wellington, were filled. The Duke was accompanied by the Duke's step-daughter, the Duchess of Devonshire.

The Duke's step-daughter, the Duchess of Devonshire, was accompanied by the Duke's step-daughter, the Duchess of Devonshire.

Along this part of the route stands the Duke of Devonshire's residence. The Duke's step-daughter, the Duchess of Devonshire, was accompanied by the Duke's step-daughter, the Duchess of Devonshire.

GREATEST AND BEST MOURNED

KING WHO ENDEARED HIMSELF TO PEOPLE

In Reformed Episcopal Church Rev. T. W. Gladstone Paid Tribute

The Reformed Episcopal church was appropriately draped with purple and black for the service this morning. There was a specially arranged service for the occasion, which was printed and distributed to the members of the congregation. Ernest Fetch sang "Crossing the Bar."

"Because the King is Near of Kin to Us" was the text chosen by the rector, Rev. T. W. Gladstone, who preached a short but impressive sermon. He referred to the fact that the words of the text were used by the men of Judah at the time King David returned after being driven from the throne by his son Absalom. At that time King David gave up in joy, as to-day it gave nearness in sorrow. Death occurred every day in the week. There was not a day but what the newspapers told of someone passing away, but on these occasions we did not mourn. When death enters the family, however, there is sorrow. To-day we felt as if death had entered the family for the King was near of kin to us.

There was joy when the news of his birth was told," said the preacher. "I remember the time of his wedding to the young queen, who is now his weeping widow. Later, in the year 1871, when he was stricken with typhoid fever, there was a great anxiety felt by all the nation, and when he recovered a great thanksgiving service was held in St. Paul's cathedral in London." Mr. Gladstone then referred to the work and training of the King at the time he was Prince of Wales in helping his widowed mother. The kinship was felt at the time of the death of Queen Victoria as it was to-day.

The coronation was a great occasion. Once it was postponed on account of the illness of the King. For nine years since then he had ruled and each year made his name more beloved throughout the world. Our mourning was as of one who had lost their greatest and best. He served not himself, but his generation. His kindly nature endeared him to all his subjects, but nothing could save him at the time appointed.

"Have we done our duty?" said the preacher "as he did. We cannot all fill exalted positions but we can all do our duty here."

Mr. Gladstone then referred to the fact that there was another king who was near of kin to us, a living king, ever whom death had no dominion. "When we look in the face of the Judge we shall see him whom we have learned to love," were his concluding words.

"THE DIRGE OF THE SEA." Moan, moan, thou mighty ocean, moan! O, split more than thine! To me thou seemest from afar to bring And thy dark depths unfathomed freely King.

A mournful sad thing. And hark!—the tolling bell. Hast thou fast hidden in thy breast? Tell me why thou wilt not rest. From ceaseless murmuring With renewed strength thine answer given.

Thy rocky caves and strongholds riven, Thy voice above the waves hath striven From the hollows to reply. With wild, my waters of the deeps Unbridled sorrows tell; A world-girt grieving bids my surges kneel As speeds the direful news from Britain's dell.

And hark!—the tolling bell. Edward of Britain to the core Lies stricken of the death wound sore. Tumultuous wave shall nevermore Our monarch's praises swell. Come, gone, forever, cease to mean! Oh, spirit, more than thing! Thy voice but wails the Empire's grief, We mourn for him, we Empire's chief, Our Empire's crowned head. What bonds of steel, strong-linked, did bind him to his people's mind?

"Himself unto his people's mind?" With patriotism wed. Great God of Nations to Thy care Commit we him, of Kings' most fair, May Heaven's crown be his to wear By great Jehovah's throne. With drum-beat and with martial tread We bear our King, our honored dead. Let his restorer, Prince, have speed—Our God rewards His own. "NIGHT."

Captain of Second Life Guards Ends His Life

London, May 20.—Captain Claude Champion De Crespiigny, of the Second Life Guards, a member of the Burlington Club polo team, that recently visited the United States, committed suicide by shooting. The captain was found, revolver in hand, seated at the roadside near King's Cliffe, in Northamptonshire, where he had been the guest of Lord Brassey. The suicide is a son of Sir Claude De Crespiigny and was thirty-seven years of age. He served with the British army in South Africa in 1899-1900 and with the West African frontier force in 1902. He was twice recommended by his commanding officers for the Victoria Cross because of deeds of conspicuous gallantry.

KILLED BY TRAIN. Roseburg, Ore., May 20.—An inquest will be held to-day on the body of Mrs. Francis Russell, aged 68 years, a prominent local woman, who was killed by a Southern Pacific passenger train at Wilbur last night.

Mrs. Russell had been visiting relatives at Wilbur. She was standing on the platform when the train rolled into the station, evidently intending to return home. Eye-witnesses say that she walked forward as the train neared. She was struck by the steam chest of the locomotive and hurled several feet.

When picked up by trainmen she was unconscious. There being no physicians at Wilbur she was placed aboard the train and brought to Roseburg. She died en route.

had been erected, all decorated in black and purple. The seats in the stands had brought exorbitant prices. As the procession reached Paddington station, the great crowd rose and stood uncovered while the Duke of Norfolk rode into the station. The body was taken into the station, where it was placed on the royal train and conveyed to Windsor.

At Windsor, At Windsor station the iron columns supporting the glass roof were covered with marguerites, white palms were everywhere. Detachments of the Grenadiers and Life Guards were drawn up in the station. A body of blue jackets, a detachment of Scots Guards, a corps of gentlemen-at-arms and yeomen of the guard were waiting as a guard of honor.

A special train containing Premier Asquith, the members of the cabinet and other persons of prominent in British political life, among them A. J. Balfour, Lord Rosebery and the military attaches arrived before the royal train. As the royal train drew in all stood at attention. The bands swung into the Chopin funeral march, the great bell of Windsor castle tolled and the royal salute, fired by the Royal Horse Artillery, boomed out from the castle grounds.

Procession to Chapel. There was a slight delay while the procession formed, then it moved toward the castle grounds, up the long walk to the foot of Round Tower, through Horse Shoe cloister to the steps at the west end of St. George's chapel, where the body will rest.

At the chapel door waiting Gentlemen-at-Arms, in splendid uniforms of scarlet tunics, burnished helmets and waving white plumes stood at attention, while the honorary pallbearers formed a line and the bearer party, lifting the casket, bore it up the steps.

The entrance of the funeral party in the St. George's chapel was one of the most impressive sights of the entire day. The brilliant, yet sombre procession, moving across the stretch of green turf overshadowed by gray stone walls, noble towers and frowning battlements, halted as the body of the King was borne into the chapel where the funeral services were read.

Within the chapel were nearly 50,000 floral tributes. The Archbishop of Canterbury and York and the Bishop of Winchester stood at the doors of the chapel, with other clergy, ready to receive the body of the King. As the royal party moved forward the guards stood with reversed arms and the choir chanted a hymn. The queen mother and the other ladies of the funeral procession were seated in the Prince Consort's chapel.

The Archbishop led the procession up the aisle. A Psalm was read, followed by the singing of the Liturgy, beginning "Man that is born of woman." The Liturgy was set to Wesley's music. The members of the Order of the Garter and of the Order of Chivalry were seated in the choir. The Knights of Windsor, and Gentlemen-at-Arms were seated near.

The casket, in which the King's body rested, was placed upon a purple bier in front of the altar. At the conclusion of the service, a deputy King-at-Arms stepped forward and proclaimed the death of Edward and prayed for a long life for King George, ending with "God Save the King."

Then the choir sang "Blessed Are the Departed" to Spohr's setting. The benediction was pronounced by the Archbishop of Canterbury, who afterwards, with the Archbishop of York, went to the communion rail and knelt in silent prayer. When the archbishops rose the congregation filed from the chapel while Beethoven's funeral march thundered and boomed from the great organ.

King Edward's body will eventually be removed to Albert memorial chapel, Windsor, for permanent burial. The chapel was built by Henry III, and dedicated to Edward the Confessor. It was named Albert by Queen Victoria in honor of her consort. Ambassador Reid, who did not participate in the procession, accompanied Mrs. Roosevelt and Ethel to St. George's chapel to await the arrival of the funeral party.

After the services in the chapel had been concluded, most of those who had taken part in the procession were entertained at luncheon in Windsor castle by King George V.

THE DRAMA IN CANADA

London, May 20.—Interviewed here Forbes Robertson said that there was a great future for the drama in the Dominion, as not only the principal cities but many of the smaller towns possess splendid theatres. Canada, however, has no dramatic companies entirely her own and performances are practically entirely confined to American or English touring companies, principally the former for not many English companies go there.

another nation which conquers to bring peace and fair play and prosperity, as we have done in India; or schools and the comfort of successful agriculture, as we have done in Egypt? Where is the nation which would hold the seaways of the world for the purposes of peace?

I verily believe that this Empire of ours has been built as the coral reefs are built, by millions upon millions of tiny lives, and every life a British life; and that the soul of it is compounded of the soul of its builders; that it stands to-day as the coral reef stands, as the barrier between the happy land and the angry destroying ocean, and that its destruction would be a disaster to the world.

And of this Empire he was the head. We know what his headship meant to us. Did you ever stop to consider what it meant to him? A brave man goes through the world with his head high and a laugh on his lips, whatever be the pains of his body or the worry and anguish of his mind; and a brave king whose countenance is as it were the weather gauge of his Empire must do more than the ordinary brave man.

The slide Little Heard of. We have seen Edward VII. always with a gallant smile on his face; we have seen him the centre and instigator of our revels; we have seen him as he ought to be, the splendid type and expression of the majesty of Britain, but we have heard nothing of the life of self-repression before he came to the throne; we have heard nothing of the immense amount of business which made up the greater part of his life when he was upon the throne. He shared his pleasures with his people, but he took all the burden of his pain upon his own shoulders.

Look for a moment through the records of his great mother's life, and you will find that she was the hardest worked Briton of her day. Notice that the new King, our present gracious sovereign, must be at his desk at 7.30 each morning; and wait for a year or two until you attempt to measure the work which is done by that great personage who is at once Britain's King and Britain's slave.

It is said that almost our King's last words were: "I think I have done my duty." With bent heads the nation will say amen to that, and may well ask itself, "Have we done ours?" That is a question for us to-day.

What of the Future? Darker than ever before, the storm seems to gather round Britain's Empire. Volcanic forces are at work within which may ruin or re-invigorate our body politic. Outside there is a graver menace than ever the sea-queen has yet faced.

It is for the race to assert itself once more; to say for its pride of place as it always has done by willing individual sacrifice; and especially is it for us, the outland sons of the great mother, to teach the world that, in spite of time and space of seas and continents which lie between, the British race in time of trouble is one and indivisible.

Wherefore fellow-citizens, remembering what I said about our Empire and of the King's office therein, I ask you, remembering the great dead, to pledge yourselves in Tennyson's noble words: "The King will follow Christ, and we the King."

The beautiful anthem, "Abide With Me," led by the Arlon Club, was sung, hundreds of voices being heard assisting in the rendition of this old favorite, which is one of the grandest compositions in the hymnal. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. Dr. Campbell, pastor of First Presbyterian church, and the throngs of spectators and participants in the solemn rites dispersed to the strains of the Dead March from "Riel," rendered most impressively by the band of the Fifth Regiment.

Conspicuous amongst those in attendance at the services in front of the parliament buildings were the members of the High School Cadet corps, looking very neat and soldier-like in their new uniforms, which were worn for the first time. This evening at 7 the cadets will attend the ceremony to be held at Work Point barracks, at which the Fifth Regiment and cadet corps from other schools in the city will be present. The R. C. A. will fill a regiment salute of 25-minute guns, while thearrison stand at attention and the Fifth Regiment band plays funeral marches. Following this will be a salute of 21 guns for the new King.

HILL MAY INVADE HARRIMAN TERRITORY

Believed to Be Behind Railway Which Will Be Built to California

(Times Leased Wire.) Helena, Mont., May 20.—That James J. Hill is back of the Gilmore & Pittsburg railroad in Southwestern Montana, and that he purposes not only an invasion of California, but also intends to protect his present northwestern territory by shortening the distance between the Twin Cities and Puget Sound and Portland, is indicated to-day by an official document filed with the secretary of state here.

This is a resolution adopted by the board of directors of the Gilmore & Pittsburg providing for the construction of a line from Armatrust, its present Montana terminus to Butte, and also to Whitefish on Dillon, Mont. When here recently, Hill and President Elliott, of the Northern Pacific, announced new routes into Helena, and as Helena and Butte are already connected by a Hill line, the extension of the Gilmore line, which is now constructed to a point in Idaho and headed for California, it is asserted, means an invasion of Harriman territory.

There has been a question as to the identity of the backers of the Gilmore line, but it is now believed that Hill is behind it.

SHOOTS HIMSELF.

London, May 20.—Captain Claude Champion De Crespiigny, of the Second Life Guards, a member of the Burlington Club polo team, that recently visited the United States, committed suicide by shooting. The captain was found, revolver in hand, seated at the roadside near King's Cliffe, in Northamptonshire, where he had been the guest of Lord Brassey. The suicide is a son of Sir Claude De Crespiigny and was thirty-seven years of age. He served with the British army in South Africa in 1899-1900 and with the West African frontier force in 1902. He was twice recommended by his commanding officers for the Victoria Cross because of deeds of conspicuous gallantry.

KILLED BY TRAIN.

Roseburg, Ore., May 20.—An inquest will be held to-day on the body of Mrs. Francis Russell, aged 68 years, a prominent local woman, who was killed by a Southern Pacific passenger train at Wilbur last night.

Mrs. Russell had been visiting relatives at Wilbur. She was standing on the platform when the train rolled into the station, evidently intending to return home. Eye-witnesses say that she walked forward as the train neared. She was struck by the steam chest of the locomotive and hurled several feet. When picked up by trainmen she was unconscious. There being no physicians at Wilbur she was placed aboard the train and brought to Roseburg. She died en route.

U. S. CONSULATE GUARDED BY MARINES

Force Landed at Bluefields From Gunboat Paducah—Outpost Fights Near City

(Times Leased Wire.) Bluefields, Nicaragua, May 20.—The American consulate at Bluefields is cordoned with American marines and bluejackets from the gunboat Paducah. The sailors have mounted machine guns, which command the main street of Bluefields, anticipating the sacking of the city by the forces of President Madriz.

Three hundred soldiers were landed by the Nicaraguan gunboat Venus last night below the city, and the forces of Madriz, reinforced by the troops, are now within three miles of Bluefields. Scores of Americans have taken refuge within the consulate, fearing that President Madriz's threat to bombard and sack the city will result in an attack upon Americans.

Three American gunboats are still within the waters off Bluefields and they have enough men to control the situation should they arrive in time. The armies of Madriz and Estrada face each other three miles from the city. Outpost fighting occurred during the night and the decisive engagement was expected to-day. Two divisions of Estrada's force were attacked by a Madriz division to-day and about 20 men on each side were killed before the Estrada force retreated.

ASPHALT PLANT DESTROYED BY FIRE

Blaze on Seattle Waterfront Causes Loss Estimated at $30,000

(Times Leased Wire.) Seattle, Wash., May 20.—Fire destroyed the Independent Asphalt Company's plant, the Occidental Fish Company's plant and the bunkers of the Vashon Sand & Gravel Company at 6 o'clock this morning. The loss is estimated at $30,000.

The fire started when hot asphalt, leaking from a tank, became ignited, and the asphalt furnished the spectacular part of the blaze. The fire boat Duwamish was early on the scene and poured three streams on the burning asphalt. A boiler of a donkey engine exploded, scattering the firemen for a few minutes. The dense smoke from the asphalt hung low over the waterfront and added to the firemen's troubles.

NEW GUN SYSTEM ON THE COLOSSUS

Some Interesting Particulars Respecting Great Britain's New Dreadnought

A naval correspondent of the London Standard thus describes the new gun system on the Colossus, the latest Dreadnought to be launched for the British fleet: It is understood that her principal feature will be a development of the gun arrangement started in the Neptune, completing at Portsmouth, in the first three batches of British Dreadnought battleships (the Dreadnought, the Bellerophon, the Temeraire and the Superb); the St. Vincent, the Collingwood, and the Vanguard, the 12-inch guns were so arranged that only eight of the ten could be fired on one broadside. In the Neptune it is understood that a compromise has been made between this arrangement and that followed in the Dreadnought cruisers of the Invincible type, the two beam turrets being placed on echelon, so that the guns of both can be trained on either broadside. In the Colossus and her sisters this plan has been carried further, and the five turrets, each containing two 12-inch 50-calibre guns, have all been mounted on the centre-line of the ship. This is the arrangement consistently followed by the United States since 1905, and has long been regarded in naval circles as the best arrangement, especially in view of the belief that broadside-to-broadside actions will be the rule in future naval wars. This change naturally increases the length of the ship, and with it the displacement. In the Colossus the tonnage will be about 21,500 (an increase of 5000 on that of the original Dreadnought), while the speed will remain at 21 knots.

By the end of the current financial year £1,263,460 will have been spent on the Colossus, exclusive of the cost of the armament (amounting in all to about £150,000). As the ship is to be completed by July, 1911, the total cost will probably work out to between £1,650,000 and £1,700,000.

IMPROVEMENT OF TRUNK ROADS

CITY ENGINEER'S REPORT PRESENTED LAST NIGHT

Consideration of Same Will Stand Over Until Next Meeting of Streets Committee

Copies of the report prepared by Angus Smith, city engineer, for a plan for the improvement of the trunk roads of the city, were distributed at last evening's meeting of the streets, sewers and bridges committee.

Gentlemen: I have, in accordance with your instructions, re-arranged my report to you of May 15th, as regards the pavement process. I would recommend that the trunk roads which I have chosen as follows: Outer Wharf road, Esquimaux road, George road, Douglas street, Hillside road, Cedar Hill road, Lascombes road, Fort street and Fairford road, be improved from the city limits towards the centre of the city; hereafter of the city limits with a minimum macadam averaging 12 feet in width, improving the city's approach until the roadway beyond a city boundary line.

The whole of the north arm of the Fraser river is to be dredged. The channel is largely used by lumbermen for towing logs. The Dominion government dredge, King Edward, now engaged at False creek, after two more weeks at present work, will be sent to the north arm, where she will stay until completion of the work.

Dredging on the Appleton bar on the Fraser river near New Westminster has been almost completed and is most satisfactory, recent surveys showing that there is not less than a depth of 22 feet at low tide and 27 feet at high water.

For years the worst feature of the entrance to the river, Engineer Turner took a contract to improve with a depth of 12 feet at low tide, showing an increase of fully three feet over the last survey, and 27 feet at high water. Other points of the river as far as New Westminster show depths averaging 40 feet.

An interesting feature at the sandheads, and one that is noted with pleasure by the department, is the fact that the channel is straightening. Hitherto it has been deflecting to the south, increasing the difficulties of keeping a channel navigable for large ships, in some places there being about five feet at low water. The channel now shows a depth of 10 to 15 feet at the lowest tide. The department is now waiting to see what effect the high water will have on the channel, and if it retains the straightened course the Fruehling will again resume operations, after which permanent work, probably piling the concrete, will be commenced.

A macadam roadway placed upon a firmly rolled sub-grade 6 or 7 inches in depth, well compacted with thorough rolling and treated with one of these products, and then covered with about 3-4 inch of screenings, and then rolled, will probably give better service as a road and last longer, with a cost of less than 12 inches of macadam similarly placed without the binder product.

Some of these products are known as Tarvia, Taroid, Texaco, Asphaltum, Pioneer Waterproof Asphalt, Westrumite Asphalt (dild cold), Barrett's Faving Pitch, Warrenite, etc., and some of the road oils are known as Standard Asphalt Road Oil, Standard Fruehling Road Oil, Standard Macadam Asphalt Binder, Indian Liquid Asphalt, Asphaltol, etc.

In different parts of the city, as shown in the schedule, macadam roadways have been passed and reported on to the extent of $157,000. The preliminary steps have been taken, so that the work of construction may now proceed. There are also passed by the city council, but not yet reported on, macadam roads to the extent of $55,100, showing that there have been steps taken for macadam roadways at present to the extent of $230,000.

There have been passed by the council and now in the process of construction, by day labor, permanent roadways at an estimated cost of $25,750, and there are also permanent roadways accepted, for which bids are being called amounting to $107,700, so that there are permanent roadways in the process of construction to the extent of $191,450. There have been passed by the council but not yet reported on, and consequently not yet accepted by the ratepayers, permanent roadways to the extent of $125,000, and there have also been passed by the council and reported on two streets, Fernwood road and Rockland avenue, and which are partially completed in the way of sidewalks and curbs, but the citizens requested, I estimate that it would cost $47,100 to asphalt these two streets.

I am attaching a list of streets upon which I would recommend that permanent pavement be laid at a cost of $114,000, the city taking the initiative. The pavement programme as outlined above is as follows:

Table with 2 columns: Street Name, Amount. Includes Trunk Roads ($157,000), Macadam roadways passed and reported ($185,000), Macadam roadways passed, not reported ($55,100), Permanent roads passed and in progress of construction ($3,750), Permanent roadways passed, reported, bids called for ($107,700), Permanent roads passed not reported ($126,000), Roads passed and reported on which change is asked ($47,100), Permanent roads recommended initiative ($114,000).

Total $968,910. City's share for construction of trunk roads per year for ten years will be $10,500, and the city's share for macadam roads for ten years will be $5,200, and the city's share for permanent roads for fifteen years will be $12,700. The city's annual payment for ten years will be, for the first ten years, $9,700 and for the five succeeding years $12,700.

ANGUS SMITH, City Engineer.

FRUEHLING TO DREDGE SOMASS RIVER

Will Proceed to Alberni at Beginning of July - Work in the Fraser

New Westminster, May 20.—Extensive dredging operations will be executed this summer by the Dominion department of public works, according to an announcement by G. A. Keefe, resident engineer. An important undertaking will be that at Alberni. As soon as the fishing season opens, about July 1st, the big dredge, the Fruehling, now engaged on the sandheads at the mouth of the Fraser, will proceed to Alberni, where she will dredge in the Somass river from deep water to Old Alberni. The principal work is the removal of a bar. The Alberni work is expected to take about two months' time.

The whole of the north arm of the Fraser river is to be dredged. The channel is largely used by lumbermen for towing logs. The Dominion government dredge, King Edward, now engaged at False creek, after two more weeks at present work, will be sent to the north arm, where she will stay until completion of the work.

SAYS INCREASED RATE WOULD RUIN INDUSTRY

Bellingham, Wash., May 20.—If the Great Northern and Northern Pacific railways increase the rates on lumber shipments as announced in a dispatch from Washington, D. C., the action will spell ruin for the business interests in the state, according to prominent lumber men of this city. It is declared that prices are now down far below what they were in 1907, and that so much territory has been taken from the Washington mills of late that increased rates to the eastern points remaining would be impossible for the millmen to stand. It is doubted here, however, if the roads will take the action announced, as it is declared the traffic men realize the conditions and would not care to end the lumber business in the state.

Lumbermen Declare Business Does Not Warrant Higher Freight Charges

Workers engaged in travelling the road at the entrance of the company's grounds experienced a hail of missiles. Some dived for trees and others crouched under wagons. The concussion was very severe, and the rain of debris terrific.

OFFERED TO SACRIFICE HIS STEP-DAUGHTER

Leader of Fanatics Believed-Her Death Would Save World From the Comet

Almo, Okla., May 20.—Henry Heilmann, leader of a band of religious fanatics, who wanted to sacrifice his 15-year-old step-daughter, Jane Warfield, to save the world from the comet, is under guard at the county jail.

Heilmann was a leader of a band of forty religious fanatics. They declared the coming of the comet was the vengeance of the Lord against the world and only a human sacrifice would prevent a great catastrophe. Heilmann offered his stepdaughter as the sacrifice.

Plans for the "offering" were made and Heilmann and his followers were preparing to take the girl's life when the officers were informed and interfered. The people of Almo were aroused by the threatened atrocity and a demonstration against Heilmann and his fanatics followed. Threats of lynching were made.

THE REST IS SILENCE.

Attended by a pomp and circumstance without parallel, but also by a solemn splendor in harmony with the occasion, the remains of the British sovereign who was in many respects the greatest who ever bore the name of Edward were borne to the tomb today.

But, sir, these rare gifts of practical efficiency were during the whole of his kingship yoked to the service of a great ideal. He was animated every day of his sovereignty by the thought that he was at once the head and the chief servant of that vast, complex organism which we call the British Empire.

COMETS IN THEIR COURSES. The apparently erratic movements of Halley's Comet are creating quite a stir in this little world of ours.

that they are accounted eccentric. The courses of Halley's Comet, beyond question, are just as orderly within their limits as the courses of all other heavenly bodies.

Our readers will bear testimony to the fact of our childlike faith in the beneficence of the power that rules the universe. A considerable number of them were nervous about the possibilities involved in the visit of Astronomer Halley's Comet.

engaged in some important business away off in the vast abysses of space, and that the comet, whose orbit is so eccentric, might take advantage of the situation and inflict a mischief upon an inoffensive and regular working orb which has never done it any known harm.

The works of man are accomplishing miracles in these days when knowledge encompasseth the world. A common sorrow to-day makes most of mankind kin.

The lumber cut of Canada for the past year is estimated at nearly a billion and a half feet, valued at about twenty-four and a half million dollars.

Some one is talking about inaugurating an eight-hour day for farmers and farm workers. They are entitled to it—providing an average for the year be struck. But if the reform means a further increase in the cost of living for city dwellers, may the Lord have mercy upon our bodies.

WM. HOLMES IS ACQUITTED

VERDICT OF NOT GUILTY AT NANAIMO ASSIZES

Deputy Attorney-General Maclean Says the Case is Not at an End

(Special to the Times.) Nanaimo, May 20.—After four hours and ten minutes deliberation the jury in the celebrated local murder case of Rex vs. Holmes, at a late hour last night, brought in a verdict of not guilty and William Holmes, charged with the murder of Gus Carlson, on September 13th last, was immediately discharged.

Deputy Attorney-General Maclean, visited in his room by your representative after the verdict was announced, said: "The case is finished. Mrs. Carlson was a crown witness and her presence will not be required any longer. We had a man on trial charged with the murder. He was acquitted by the jury and that ends the case so far as he or Mrs. Carlson are concerned."

Our Men's Clothing Dept. Comes Forward Saturday Morning With Surprisingly Good Values in Suits at $15

It is really surprising what $15.00 will do at this store in the matter of buying clothes, and good clothes at that. At this price a great many suits are included. There is all the smartness, snap and expert tailoring that you will find in any $25.00 suit, yet we are offering them to you at $15.00.

Silk and Net Waists, Values $8.50 to $15.00, for $3.50

Another one of our popular Waist Sales is scheduled to take place Saturday morning. The values are extremely good and comprise a splendid assortment of silk and net waists, beautifully made. They are in plain tailored effects, beautifully trimmed with lace, and a number of very charming and fascinating styles; in colors of garnet, green, navy, grey, brown, ivory and black.

THE NET WAISTS are made of all-over embroidery Brussels net, lined throughout with fine quality Japanese silk, full length sleeve. Also the new three-quarter length, in colors of ivory, ecoru and black. Values included range from $8.50 to $15. Saturday morning $3.50

Saturday Offers Splendid Economies in Boys' Boots, Priced to Sell $1.35 Quick in the Morning

CAMP BROTHERHOOD

The Canadian Camp Brotherhood has been established with headquarters in Vancouver, for the welfare of men who live in camps, lumbering, mining, railway construction, and the like. It is open to all men engaged in lumbering (in the woods or mills or on logs), mining, quarrying, raising, laying electric lighting, telegraph and telephone cables, etc., building railways, bridges, roads, docks and other public works.

At headquarters are club rooms, reading, writing and smoking rooms, employment bureau, letter bureau, baggage room, address bureau, surgery with a qualified doctor in charge. As far as possible the services of the brotherhood are at the disposal of all men who come within its sphere of operations, whether members or not, at the discretion of the director.

In the six months that the brotherhood has been in existence much good work has been done. There are now 340 members.

Reverence of a nation for all that is highest and best.

"And now Death, the great leveler, who comes to King and peasant alike, has called him to pass through the veil which separates the seen from the unseen. To the royal chamber came a call which all kings must obey. The name was heard by one only: it was not the name to which kindly titles are attached, it was the name his mother gave him at his birth—'Albert Edward Guelph,' and in response to that call the King passed on to fuller opportunities of service and to richer life, leaving the great nation to mourn the loss of one of the greatest and best of its kings."

"Lo, in the storied fame, where lie The golden rulers of the land."

They gather to-day to perform the last rites, and we of the overseas share the sorrow of the greatest Empire the world has known. The King has passed on and in passing has left the world poorer, but ours is not the sorrow of those who have no hope.

"God's in Heaven, All's right with the world."

OBITUARY RECORD

The funeral of the late Mrs. Harriett Charlton will take place to-morrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the residence of her son-in-law, J. O. MacLeod, superintendent of the railway mail service. There was a large number of sympathizing friends present, the late lady being widely known throughout the Maritime city. She was also known in this city, and several friends from here attended the funeral. Many floral tributes covered the casket.

The remains of the late Eugene Blanchard Clarke, the second son of Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Winterburn, will be interred in Ross Bay cemetery to-morrow afternoon. The funeral will take place at 2:30 o'clock from the residence, and at 2:30 o'clock from Christ Church cathedral.

At Vancouver on Tuesday the funeral of the late Mrs. Muirow, one of the pioneers of the Terminal City, took place from the residence of her son-in-law, J. O. MacLeod, superintendent of the railway mail service. There was a large number of sympathizing friends present, the late lady being widely known throughout the Maritime city. She was also known in this city, and several friends from here attended the funeral. Many floral tributes covered the casket.

Yesterday afternoon the funeral of the late Frederick Stockham took place from the Masonic Temple. The services of the Masonic order were conducted by the officers of Victoria-Columbia lodge, No. 1, under Worshipful Master A. F. Poffen. There was a large attendance of members of the lodge and many friends were also present. The pall-bearers were as follows: Bros. H. L. Salmon, S. Greenhouse and W. H. F. Richards, representing lodge No. 1 and Bros. George Glubler, W. Turpel and H. Callow, of lodge No. 2. Interment was made in Ross Bay cemetery.

A large number of friends attended the funeral of the late Ruden Roberts, which took place this afternoon at 2:45 o'clock from the residence of his son, H. Roberts, 29 Menzies street. The cortege proceeded from the house to the First Congregational church, where Rev. H. A. Carson conducted services of an impressive nature. Many beautiful floral offerings were presented, which testified to the esteem in which the deceased was held. The following gentlemen acted as pall-bearers: Messrs. A. Brak, Stevens, J. E. Andrews, Howell and W. Scowcroft.

CHALLENGE SHIELD SHOOT FOR CADETS

Third Match of Miniature Range Series Will Be Fired at End of This Month. The High school rifle team, which has been entered for the Canadian inter-school rifle competition challenge shield, donated by the Royal Military College Club of Canada, will consist of four members who will not be chosen until towards the end of this month, and who will shoot for the trophy at Clover Point the first Saturday in June at 2 p. m. The shoot will be held with an officer of the regiment as range officer, who will have to sign the result card and forward it to headquarters. The team will shoot at two targets, the two and five hundred yards, seven shots at each. At the same time all the other teams entered throughout the Dominion will be shooting on their respective ranges.

The entry accepted from the High school does not hold the High school cadets to one team only. The corps can enter other teams in the competition, but their scores will be held separately, and if the High school follows this course the teams competing from it will be competing against each other as well as against the remaining Canadian teams of four. The local cadets will shoot with the Ross rifle, mark 2. The Challenge shield is at present held by the Hamilton High school, and has to be competed for for twenty years, at the end of which time it will become the property of the school winning it the most times. There is a smaller shield given every year to the winning school which is the exclusive property of that school.

All competitors in this match must have been one year in the school and must be under the age of eighteen years. The Victoria High school has one more match to shoot in the miniature rifle competition promoted by the Canadian government and will shoot the last Saturday in this month. The University school is also in this competition.

For the Blesley rifle competition, from which the Canadian team of four to go to Blesley on the cadets' team was selected. Sgt. Major Stevens in the under sixteen class, scored 57 out of a possible of 105 for the High school, and Cadet Bensley scored 82. These boys, however, only secured tenth place on the list and will not be eligible for membership on the Blesley team. For the Hamilton High school team one cadet under 18 and one cadet under sixteen, each secured a total of 104 out of the possible, and will go to Blesley.

BEST LOCAL RUNNERS ENTER SCOTCH SPORTS

Four Teams in Relay and Six Entries in Five-a-Side Football Match. Entries for the St. Andrew's Society sports, to take place Tuesday, will be received up to one o'clock that day. The first event will take place at 1.30. Many of the local runners will not go to Nanaimo, for among the entries at St. Andrew's sports are: Andrew Moore, Y. M. C. A., the champion mile runner from California University; Joe Moore, of the High school, winner of the North Ward handicap; Harry Beasley, junior sprint champion; George Dickson, winner at three miles; W. Day, L. Beckwith and H. Winsley.

The relay race has drawn four entries. The Fifth Regiment, the High school, Y. M. C. A. and J. B. A. A.; while there are six teams in the five-a-side football match. The Foresters have entered three teams, and there are one each from West End, North Ward and St. Andrew's. Other entries are expected in this event. Arrangements for the sports are now completed. The sports will commence at 1.30. Souvenir programmes will be numbered and each programme carries a chance for a number of tombola prizes. Among these is a bag of oatmeal presented by the Brackman-Ker Company. Entries for all events will be received at the secretary's tent on the ground. The society will hold a grand ball on Tuesday night at the Assembly hall, Fort street.

SPORT NOTES

The California Rugby team going to Australia leaves to-night on the N. S. Makara for Sydney. The team numbers twenty men, selected from the University of California and from Stanford University. They will play in New South Wales and New Zealand.

R. G. Fetherston, Woodlands, Cedar Vale, writes again that the local Nimrods have not shot the she-pantler and her two cubs which prowl round in his vicinity. He draws attention to the fact that, with a holiday at hand, there is an opportunity for securing the panthers and the bounty offered by the government.

The N. P. A. O. rowing championships will be rowed on the north arm of Burrard Inlet. The start will be from Twin Island and the finish off Deep Cove. Vancouver oarsmen are in training for this event.

The Beavers have been shut out in three games this series by the Spokane Indians on Vancouver soil. Vancouver, however, is well up for the pennant, Seattle having only a slightly better percentage.

Nanaimo United and Ladysmith soccer team will play an exhibition match at Ladysmith on Saturday afternoon. Nanaimo is taking a strong team to meet the Island champions.

There will be a practice game at the Royal Athletic park to-night between the A and B lacrosse teams. After the game the selection committee, S. Lorimer, G. Okell and J. Dakers, will select the team that is to represent Victoria in the B. C. league match on Tuesday morning.

Then again there is a place in Macbeth where he disagrees with the umpire and exclaims, "Out, I say," Shakespeare would certainly have made a splendid ball fan.

Further proof that his soul was with the diamond, but enclosed in a sixteenth century body, is found in Richard III, where Shakespeare, apparently about to don his hat and board a trolley car, writes: "I will go root," and then having got to the ball-yard and taken a front seat in the bleachers, applauding a sacrifice play, the poet and scholar writes in King Lear: "Upon such sacrifices the gods themselves threw incense," but after the home team had got it in the neck and Shakespeare had returned to his poetic body, he wrote another chapter of Hamlet, in which he says: "The play as I remember pleased not the million." It must have been a bum game.

Referring to the players on the bench, he says in Romeo and Juliet, "Thou cannot sit at ease on the old bench," which is perfectly true of every aspiring ball player, and again in Love's Labor Lost, it is found that

PROOF FOUND THAT AUTHOR OF HAMLET WAS BORN FOUR CENTURIES TOO SOON

Had Shakespeare lived to-day instead of during the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, he would certainly be a baseball fan, instead of a poet and playwright for his works give out the fact that he was born with a baseball soul, and in Hamlet he says, as if applauding from the bleachers, "A hit, a hit, a very palpable hit," and in Julius Caesar, as if deriding the player who has made a bad play, "O, hateful error!" Then again there is a place in Macbeth where he disagrees with the umpire and exclaims, "Out, I say," Shakespeare would certainly have made a splendid ball fan.

Reminiscences of Vancouver Island Sport

By L. Fred Brown
 In Rod and Gun in Canada.

Deep in these woods are many subtle voices. By distance mellowed, through, the twilight coming. Night, clothed in hidden tongues, rejoices.

In owl's "Who-Who" and ruffled grouse faintly drumming. One article in the February issue of Rod and Gun, and its accompanying illustration of an angler wading a rapid in the Cowichan river, central Vancouver Island, brings to me a flood of hypnotizing recollection. During my first visit to that stream in 1908, and again last August and September, I was that angler's guest. During August, he and two English ministers, who were royal good fellows and superb camp cooks, entertained me at "Victim's" camp, nine miles from Duncan's station, away off in the big woods and amid the remote beauties along that superb stream—one of the wildest and fairest known to me. Even here, as I write, three thousand miles away from it, I can see in fancy its far-curving vistas of magnificent woods, and the sparkle and flash of its pellucid water glancing under sunlight or transformed under moonlight. I can see the tracks of deer, so wild they were tame, and that ranged along the racing frolics of that stream. I can hear it and the voices of "Victim" and his other friends with the water rushing about their rubber boot-legs. "Victim" stands in a class by himself on my long list of angling friends. It was easy for me to look at that picture of him in Rod and Gun, and lift the veil of anonymity with which he has sought to hide himself. How vividly I recall the tents and their beds, the camp fire, piles of kindling, the thick pieces of bark from the titanic Douglas firs and red cedars, and the lamb chops, "bajacks," and rude board table where we ate with savage appetites, and smoked and told stories until far into the night. Around the camp fire, in a rather terrifying and remote wilderness, anglers really know each other. It is like having one's heart under the X-rays, which unfold and disclose it. Nowhere has branding up a fire away in the night, and watching its glimmer and fitful bursts of tiny flames, gripped my heart harder than when I was with "Victim" and "lost" far off on Vancouver Island.

But the much-vaunted fishing was practically worthless so far as catching anything but a cold was concerned, although it was not all fishing to fish there. The wild, little river, the queer woods-sounds, the unexpectedness and novelty of our environment, the knowledge that we were in a virgin forest, and the unboundedness of the outing unique, were the things that counted. No; only three tiny finger trout were landed along the nine miles there, and only one two-pounder at the "canyon," five miles up from camp. A salmon or two were seen that would not rise to the fly. And I had fished crossed the continent from eastern Newfoundland to get "some real" good fishing. Hence, these tales, in a runlet flowing through a little cove of the centre of a populous region swarming with small boys, and a dozen times landed several big chubs and shiners when in Michigan. But in the Vancouver Island camp I did not get even one bite. If I do not count bites of the flies and mosquitoes.

It was before deer could be legally shot; but their tracks were like those in a sheep-yard. And in those magnificent pools were often placid eddies where great trout could be seen, their gills opening and shutting as they laughed at us. Often the sunlight would fall on the water just right so we could see every fish in that pool. It was maddening—a case of "hear and yet so far." And as if to mock me, and make my chagrin too much to bear, just before the bird season opened the blue and woods' grouse, and the deer and the wild banded-pigeons would swarm about me, for three us in our order of respecting the law and avoiding possible arrest and fines. But we were there because we loved outdoors, being out with nature, and "house and free," far removed from letters and telegrams. And how "Victim" did bestir himself to make every body comfortable. He is a lawyer of Victoria, and a natural woods-tramp who could look a perfect figure in camp. How I watched his delight in being unshaved and free from white shirts, collars and cuffs! A stylishly-dressed English lady came down that stream in a big canoe handled by two Siwash Indians, and on the long run stopped while she sat in the bottom, tucked in blankets, and raised her log-nettle to peer through it at the black, short whiskers of "Victim," standing as he fished, waist-deep in that water, and dressed in a nondescript shirt, hat, and old trousers, bare-headed, and leaning, a counsellor or "barrister" learned in the law, a journalist of great culture and wide travel. But that woman stared at the "Indian" fishing, and asked him, "Mr. Indian, are you catching any fish?" She did not know she was interviewing a rare woods-tramp who could have talked Ibsen and esoteric Buddhism with her, and then cooked her a meal fit for the gods, served it on tin plates, with tea (that omnipresent English beverage) and toast, friend trout, honey, and country butter, a wild bird or two, and berries and fruits that certainly would have made her "sit-up and take notice." And he would have done all that with a modest grace that would have made her eyes pop with astonishment. But he let her pass and seek a late dinner that yet twenty miles away. She would have found a uniquely excellent raconteur under that dirty fishing suit, a man reeking with humor and good fellowship, a model host, a true Briton, and great lover of an English lord, just through his worship of the nobility. How odd it seemed to me, and how I appreciated his thoughtful courtesy in that camp, for was far from well. How I studied and liked him, a dyed-in-the-wool Englishman, who turned his horse to the left as he met a carriage on a Vancouver Island highway, and who liked to tease me by explaining how much better Canadian judges, customs, citizenship, patriotism, and manhood are than we have in the States. He reminded me that crime costs Uncle Sam every year almost one and a half billions of dollars, that many of the United States each have more man-slayers than the whole British Empire, including India, the Isles, Canada, and Australasia; and that, while Georgia and Tennessee execute but one homicide in a hundred, while the other ninety-nine, Canada executes nine out of ten murderers. He spoke of the involved procedure of our criminal courts, of the money-mad fever and thirst for social prominence and wealth and power that is wrecking the nerves and lives of so many Americans, and I hung my head and knew he was right. That it was amusing to see him doff his hat to the little British flag that he had flying in front of the tent, to hear him speak with such reverence of the Canadian rulers who were coming from Ottawa to Victoria—of Chipman, the commissioner of the Hudson's Bay Company; of Earl Grey, the Canadian governor-general; and of Lord Strathcona, who built and financed the Canadian Pacific Railway. "I wait you to hear those men speak," he told me, and forthwith he secured for me a Canadian Club at Victoria, to be a guest at the great banquet tendered those visiting British statesmen at the Empress hotel, which, by the way is the best hostelry in America, surpassing even the Hotel Plaza in New York City.

I hid me down to Victoria and heard those speeches. It was a most impressive function. English dignitaries were as thick as flies. I sat at the speakers' table, and looked at Mr. McBride, the wonderfully well-equipped premier of British Columbia, and who is an unique and rising man, and a magnificent speaker whom it will be interesting to watch as his career widens and broadens. The leading merchant of Victoria, the local bishop, the lieutenant-governor of British Columbia, Mr. (may be Lord) Dunsanuir, and above all, the two lions of the occasion, Earl Grey, quiet, and looking travel-worn after that big ride by rail, and the only and venerable noblest Roman of them all, Lord Strathcona, I have seen many prominent men, and have known some whose fame was world-wide. But I cannot recall as impressive and magnificent a white-haired dignitary as Strathcona, as yet virile enough to stand all that trip and its round of dinners and interviews, but who was and is long past eighty years old, and very soon to become a wonderful ruin through old age and its weakness.

Talk about the folly of going away to Vancouver Island to fish! That dinner given those British fellows was the very finest I ever attended, and really repaid me for months of travel and waiting. And mind, I owned all that to "Victim."

Premier McBride made by far the best speech. It was a delicious study in careful words, of the art of concealed art, repressed power, and of modesty, keeping well within a statesman's calibre for talking—a remarkable speech by a remarkable man whom all Canada is watching. He has a charm all his own, a grace of manner, an unassuming high plane of thought and talk and action that charm me even yet as I recall his admirable ease and excellent common sense. This is very high praise. The man fully deserves it, and more, for he is in a class by himself. This tribute to his worth is from one who talked with all those dignitaries but him. I did not meet him. No other man there so impressed me. But he was not tired, as Earl Grey was after so many thousands miles of travel and such a round of dinners, where every house in Victoria was open house for the city's honored guests. Earl Grey was tired, fagged, had been exhausted to the point of collapse because he had also been lost on the island in deep woods, at night; too, when he nearly tumbled over a precipice and narrowly escaped with his life, with his clothes torn and soiled, and he knowing he had done a foolish thing to pursue game he had seen, so far into the hills and woods. No wonder he was so self-conscious as he talked that gathering in Victoria; so worn was he that he had to refer to notes, and then forgot his points sometimes. It was asking too much of a tired and weary man. He was hesitating, parenthetical, half-finished sentences were left so as he jumped to others. But when he discarded notes and began to talk directly from his heart, what a hypnotic speaker! He had seemed a victim of stage fright. Now his points were dropping like trip-hammers, and driven home with the ability that made him Canada's honored head. He had breathless attention from his auditors. The rather bilious Yankee who had pitted him in his physical weakness and commonplaceness was forced to know that even the eloquent McBride had no power to away his hearers more fully. And how those "bloody English" cheered and loved the pathetic Strathcona, simple in words, powerful in exactness of speech—already an almost passing figure from off the field of Canadian public life! Long may he live, and happily! I had been kept awake in that hotel by the crowds, and was irritable and hypercritical. But when those speeches were made, I knew I had heard the best during a long listening acquaintance with America's best talkers, including those in the States.

And where did that old man get all the strength to travel so far, to receive committees, engage in such important discussions, and meet so many strong minds, and still be a man among such men? It was wonderfully interesting; I marvel at him yet. The visit of those men to the coast is historic, and is one of the most vivid memories of the Yankee who was privileged to witness it. What a scene that was in the superb banquet room at the Empress hotel! What absolute loyalty was stamped on the faces and into the hearts of those Britons as they rose as one man and sang "God Save the King!" And the patriotic feeling, the voiced sentiments, their quiet earnestness! It was like being at a Methodist love-feast. Those fellows, to the last man, if occasion arose, would spill their last life-drop of blood for flag, home, country and its monarch for the Union Jack and what it stands for. I have seen many strongly-awaked and ecstatic crowds in the States, but none so impressed me as did those singing Englishmen. And I was privileged to see and hear all that through the modest man who signs himself "Victim" in Rod and Gun for February.

The city of Victoria is uniquely attractive. It reminded me of "a land where it is always afternoon." Nobody seems hurried; everybody seems happy. It is a town crowded with quiet, neat homes of English middle classes, who are enjoying themselves, and will, until they are carried, feet foremost, out through their cottages to the lovely cemetery where they are to sleep for time and eternity. And they will be borne through year-long flower blooms that are on either side of their front walks. During forty-five years of travel I have scamped over very much of British as well as Yankee North America. I hope to "settle down" in Victoria, the restful, sleepy, beautiful, semi-like city of the west Canadian coast. And the hunting and fishing are really so superb that next month I shall start for that island again. Think of deer passing like flies within a mile or two of the line of the Esquimaux & Nanaimo railroad, yet less than twenty miles from Victoria, with its thirty thousand people. As I was driven along the fence not two hours' ride from that town, there along a wheat field I counted forty-nine blue grouse and wood grouse within pistol shot, all not sixty feet away. In the actual highway they would fly up and alight on logs which the carriage wheels grazed, and where they could have been killed with blows of the buggy whip. Back in those woods the children had been gathered to make a required school quorum—twelve of them, with no house but the log school-room in sight. That little lady teacher was being paid $30 a month for instructing those twelve youngsters.

Let the sportsman who looks for wildest, most attractive aspects of outdoors, joined with rarest sport in hunting and fishing, take the little steamer Tees from Victoria, and go up the outer coast to Lost Shoe Brook, whose water has never been vexed by a dozen tied flies, and he will learn what real trout fishing can be. And salmon! In one shed on one dock at Victoria a dozen busy stevedores were using hog-hooks to lay out on that dock a layer twice deep of "spring" salmon, fresh from little schooners just arrived from the salmon traps in salt water. Not one of these fish weighed less than thirty, and often up to sixty pounds. I saw a single fish there that tipped the scales at seventy-five and even eighty pounds. Yet no one was noticing that fish display which seemed common to those islands. A perfectly broiled and superbly served salmon steak, with butter in a nest of ice, and with deli-icious bread on the side, cost me twenty cents at the Empress hotel, with a fine orchestra to play music for me, and big napkins, finger-bowls, and perfect service. Fish are a drug in that market, and are shipped by train loads to the canning establishments from the docks at New Westminster on the mainland near Vancouver.

And that miraculously furnished isle showed me its whale! At one of its docks I saw five whales tied and ready for the men at the whale factory. No less than seventeen whales were seen by me on the trip from Vancouver to Victoria—great sperms eighty feet long, titanic humpbacks, and whales with fins that would show fifteen feet out of the sea; while far off in the States and south by east rose the white wealth of Mount Baker, like a dreamy cloud. Most fascinating were the tales of whale fishing as told to me by the courteous officials of the Pacific Whaling Company at their offices in Victoria, and views of the big harpoon whale guns fastened in the bows of their sixty-foot whaling steamers. Those gentlemen sent me enough whale blubber, and whale meat and ear drums, to say nothing of samples of whale bone, to gladden the diners of the great Canadian camp when I returned to attend its dinner at the Hotel Astor in New York. Before me are photographs of some of those whales—an eighty-foot skeleton set up, and ready to be taken down for shipment to a museum, and respectable hills of whalebone about to be ground into fertilizer. And "Victim" was the cause of my seeing all this. I take off my hat to him!

RARE BOOK TELS OF COMET

INTERESTING REFERENCE TO HEAVENLY VISITOR

Volume 100 Years Old, Owned by Victoria Lady, Mentions Halley's Discovery

An elderly lady residing in Victoria has very kindly shown the Times a rare volume which she has in her possession, in which is an extremely interesting reference to Halley's comet. This book, which was printed in Dublin in 1811, is styled "The Methodist Magazine for the Year 1811. Being a Continuation of the Arminion Magazine, First Published by the Rev. John Wesley, A. M." The reference to Halley's comet is in a short article contributed by a writer who signed himself B. R. Gosknan, and is as follows:

"The number of comets is supposed to amount to 450, but they do not all, after the manner of the planets, revolve in the same direction; for nearly one-half of them is observed to go agreeably to the order of the signs, and the other half in a direction quite opposite. Their revolutions, for which according to the principles of gravitation and projection, it is scarcely possible to account, are known to be performed in very eccentric ellipses, the lower focus of each of which is in or near the sun. Throughout their courses they are governed by the law of describing equal areas in equal times, which is known to regulate the motions of all the other bodies in the system. All their orbits have considerable inclinations to those of all the other planets—a circumstance which certainly could never have been the work of chance.

"Sir Isaac Newton was the first to deduce a series of sound reasoning from the hypothesis of gravitation, by which he clearly demonstrated that one and the same principle, viz. the power of gravity, produced and regulated all the motions of the mundane system.

"Dr. Halley knew that on that principle the time of a comet's return might be foretold almost as certainly as that of a planet, if its period could be once deduced from previous observations. To this arduous task he, therefore, applied himself, and from history collected such observations as seemed fully to satisfy him with regard to the periods of two of the comets, viz. that of 1680 and 1682. The former, indeed, of these eccentric bodies proving a period of 575 years, put the observation of its return at 90 great a distance as to make the certainty of its revolutionary period of no use for several ages to come. Its heat is supposed, when nearest the sun, to be 2,000 times greater than red-hot iron; and that being thus heated, it must retain its heat until it comes round again, although its period should be 20,000 instead of 575.

"The comet of 1682, having a period the shortest of all this philosopher, with a becoming confidence, predicted its return, and lived himself, within a few years, to see his own prediction accomplished. At the return of this comet to the sun, it came to Jupiter so near, and stayed in his neighborhood so long, as to acquire an accelerated motion by the united forces of the sun and Jupiter.

"Owing to this cause, when it left the sun, it, from necessity, went off with greater velocity than at any former period of the revolution, and shot forth into a wider immensity of space; consequently the time of its return was thereby made longer, and occasioned the doctor to say that it probably would not return until the end of 1758, or the beginning of 1759. At this time it really did appear."

KILLS TIMBER WOLVES WITH DYNAMITE

Prospector in Alaska Hurled Explosive Into Pack Which Surrounded His Cabin

Haines, Alaska, May 20.—A pack of timber wolves howling at his door, a rapidly rising creek threatening to carry away his sluice boxes and wipe out the work of weeks, and his rifle jammed and useless, Joe De Blondeau, a Haines prospector, hurled lighted dynamite into the yelping pack, blowing the animals to shreds and rescued his imperiled sluice boxes. The news of the little frontier incident just reached here.

Wrapping two sticks of dynamite in a sack, Blondeau attached a fuse and lighted it. Cautiously opening the cabin door he threw the sack into the midst of the wolves, and as the pack surged around it, the explosion came. His cabin rocked in the blast, a huge hole was torn in the frozen ground and the wolves were scattered over the claim. He estimates that he killed ten of the animals.

VALUE OF BREATHING.

The necessity for proper breathing in voice production to maintain good health was shown in a lecture recently by Mr. Cortlandt MacMahon, B. A., at the Institute of Hygiene, London.

"One cannot have a voice that is resonant and capable of doing a large amount of work," he said, "unless the health is good and the breathing properly managed. A good voice is invariably a condition of satisfactory bodily health, and one can go still further and say that a really magnificent voice is accompanied generally by a splendid condition of health."

The lecturer gave the following rules of health:
Practice breathing and physical exercises assiduously.
Breathe through the nose and out through the mouth when exercising.

CRYSTAL PALACE IN DANGER

H. M. Winckler, the assistant official receiver, declared at a meeting of the shareholders and creditors of the Crystal Palace Company in London recently that unless a favorable scheme of reorganization is brought forward, the famous pleasure resort will disappear before long.

ANTI-GAMBLING BILLS IN NEW YORK STATE

Passed by Senate and Fate Now Rests With Assembly Committee on Rules

Albany, N. Y., May 20.—The fate of all four of the Agnew-Perkins bills designed to put an end to bookmaking, oral or otherwise, at race tracks, now rests primarily with the assembly committee on rules. The senate yesterday passed the Agnew bill, prohibiting the publication of betting orders on horse races, and the Perkins bill, amending the penal law so as to make more stringent the prohibition against keeping gambling and betting establishments. The anti-oral-bookmaking bill and the measure making directors of racing associations responsible for gambling carried on at racing tracks, were passed by the senate some time ago, and have since been held up in the assembly. Yesterday's vote on the Agnew bill was 28 to 14, and on the Perkins measure 22 to 12. The assembly rules committee has promised to take the bills up for consideration next Tuesday.

NEW BISHOPS CONSECRATED.

St. Paul, Minn., May 20.—Papal Delegate Falcomi yesterday consecrated six new bishops of the Catholic church in the presence of many high dignitaries of the church. This is the first time in the history of the church where a group of priests has been raised to the Episcopal dignity before the same altar and a similar occurrence on record within a quarter of a century was when, Plus X, consecrated several French bishops in St. Peter's, directly after the separation of church and state.

One of the six, Rev. Father John J. Lawler, will be auxiliary bishop of St. Paul. The other nominees are the Mitred Abbot, Right Rev. Vincent Wehrle, who becomes bishop of Bismarck; N. D.; Rev. Patrick Heffron, named for the see of Winona, Minn.; Rev. Timothy Corbett, named for Crookston, Minn.; Rev. Joseph Busch, who will be bishop of Lead, S. D.; Rev. James O'Reilly, named for the diocese of Fargo, N. D.

MANY DIE ON SWISS ALPS.

More than 143 Persons Lost Their Lives in 1909.

Statistics of fatal Alpine accidents published here show an alarmingly high increase in the last few years. Fifty-three climbers were killed in 1901, but in 1908 the total was 108, and in 1909 no fewer than 143.

The number of casualties last year was due partly to the unusually unfavorable weather during the summer months, but the main cause of the steady increase is, no doubt, the growth of the practice of attempting difficult climbs without guides.

This in its turn is, especially in Austria, the result of the increased popularity of climbing as a sport among the poorer classes of the population, who cannot possibly afford guides, and very often not even a proper outfit for mountaineering, such as suitable boots, ropes or ice axes.

Every Sunday in the summer a number of young workmen, or even apprentices, attempt difficult ascents of such mountains as the Rax, which are within fifty miles of Vienna, and few week-ends pass without an addition to the roll of victims.

Another cause is the increased disdain shown by climbers for difficult rock ascents, which are here thought more interesting than glacier work. Besides these, twenty-nine persons met their death while looking for Alpine flowers.

NEW DECLARATION WILL BE DRAFTED

Will Be Used by King George When He Opens First Parliament in London

London, May 20.—It is said that instead of modifying the wording of the declaration which the King makes on the opening of the first parliament to the effect that he will maintain the Protestant religion, the government has now decided to draft an entirely new declaration of a positive and not a negative character. This will define Protestantism as accepted by the Church of England, and will only indicate by implication the doctrines which the King abjures.

THE UGLY DOG'S DEVOTION.

Lady Russell, of Swallowfield Park, Reading, writes to the London Mail to give some particulars of the dog which walked forty-five miles to return to his mistress, Mrs. Ainley, at Broughton Astley, Leicestershire. Jowser, a very large cross-bred terrier, was doomed to an early death when a puppy on account of his ugliness, but the late Mr. Ainley saved his life. As if to prove his gratitude Jowser showed the deepest devotion to all the family. When a daughter was dying he never left the bedside, and the girl's last wish was that he should have a collar, to be paid for out of her small savings. When Mrs. Ainley sent Jowser away to a friend the dog would not be comforted at his new owner's and at the first chance started for home. He took three days on the forty-five mile journey, and was found outside his old home much emaciated and too weak to move.

When "Work" Becomes "Labor"

There's Something Wrong.
Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Will Right It.

Neglect of the daily movement of the bowels, so necessary to health, soon poisons the whole system from the impurities retained in the body. Headaches, indigestion, biliousness and lassitude follow, and often more serious female disorders are brought on or aggravated.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills not only regulate the bowels, but they stimulate kidneys and skin as well to throw off waste matter and purify the blood. The result is quickly apparent in the disappearance of the headaches and biliousness, and the return of health and vigor. Thousands of women all over the world owe their present good health to Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

KEEMUN FROM SEATTLE TO DISCHARGE CARGO

Work at Docks Suspended for the Day—Restorer Will Carry Cable to East Coast

Steamer Keemun, of the Blue Funnel line, arrived from Puget Sound this afternoon to discharge the large consignment of freight which she has for this port. Included in the cargo is the cable which is designed to connect Vancouver Island with the mainland, duplicating the present cable which runs from Departure Bay to English Bay. The cable steamer Restorer will run alongside the big freighter and the cable will be hauled aboard by means of the special winding machinery. The water pipes consigned to the Esquimalt Waterworks Co. will be discharged on scows in Esquimalt harbor. The company has constructed a special slip in the neighborhood of Parson's Bridge, where the pipes are rolled up and loaded on wagons. These wagons are also specially constructed for the work. Each pipe weighs two and a half tons, so they are by no means easy to handle. The wagons with which they are distributed, however, are so made that the pipes are slung beneath the axle, and in this way one man can handle them easily. Already they are distributed as far as Four-Mile House. Steamer Keemun is not discharging today, work being suspended on account of the Royal funeral.

ROYAL GEORGE.

Second of Fast Line to Leave Avonmouth Docks on Thursday Next.

Steamer Royal George, formerly the Helopolis, which was purchased by the Canadian Northern for their service between Bristol and Montreal, will leave for Canada on Thursday next. This is the second of the big steamers, the Royal Edward having left a few days ago. These steamers do not share in the mail subsidies, but it is expected that later on a distribution will be made by which these vessels will get a share. The Royal lines are now the fastest steamers running to Canadian ports. They form one more link in the chain of Empire.

SURVEYORS LEAVING FOR OOTSA LAKE

Steamer Vado Making Special Trip to Bella Coola With E. P. Colley and Party

Steamer Vado, of the Hosoowitz line, did not arrive in port until last night, getting away again this morning, with an unusually large cargo for all Northern points. Among the passengers going up this trip are E. P. Colley and party, who are going into the Ootsa and Frasnes Lake district to conduct surveys. The steamer will make a special trip to Bella Coola with the party, and from there they will go 250 miles over the trail on pack horses to Ootsa, where the head-quarters of the party will be about fifteen or sixteen in the party altogether, and these will be divided into three sections for work. The lands to be surveyed are in the government reserves and will be open to pre-emption by actual settlers. The holds of the Vado were more than half filled when she left this port, and box shooks were piled in every nook and corner of the upper deck. At Vancouver about 45 cattle will be taken on deck. This will be one of the largest consignments taken north by the steamer. Coming south the Vado routed a consignment of frozen halibut from Kirbyville, a new fishing station just inside the Skeena river, from which boats operate. On Portland Canal the steamer will be about two feet on the ground when the steamer left. Building, however, was going on just the same as ever and people were crowding in. At Port Moody, on the American side, there are even more boats and houses being driven all over the flats and houses built on these. The result is most surprising. The Vado was late in getting away, and the special trip into Bella Coola will delay her even more, so that she will be sure to be late arriving back.

BELL MAKERS FOR CENTURIES

LONDON FIRM WHICH ANTEDATES ALL OTHERS

In Business Since 1570 as Casters of Sweet-Toned Bells

Ring out, wild bells, to the wild sky, The flying cloud, the frosty light, The year is dying in the night— Ring out, wild bells, and let him die.

Amidst the tawdriness, the racket and the alien squalor of our modern Whitechapel road, says a London exchange, stands a quiet, tidy, old Georgian house, and in one side of it an old-fashioned oak-shuttered office. In some ways it seems to be almost the only remnant of old England that is left between crowded Albion and grim Poplar. Only the other day, however, through the incident of the vicar of High Wycombe's official visit, it came to general notice that there existed here something even more interesting and romantic than merely an old house with side shutters.

Behind this unassuming exterior there still, in fact, prospers "the oldest-established business of any kind in England," and to one side of it, the highest and most endeared to the national heart. For over the door, in plain English—a refreshing change from the Yiddish posters that flare in the shop windows all around, we may still read the simple legend, "Messrs. & Stainbank's Bell Foundry, Established 1570."

Here then—or, at any rate, not far away—while Shakespeare was still a schoolboy, and two centuries before Schiller had arrived to immortalize the bell in splendid song on the eternal emblem of man's ascent from earth to heaven—there was being moulded the world's mightiest music by just such honest, simple-hearted fellows as may be seen even now busying themselves by pit and furnace in the actual foundry beyond the little courtyard.

To tell the exact truth, the original bell foundry in England, that was the present site in 1735, the existing house being at that time a country inn called "The Artichoke," standing then amongst pleasant fields. Without a break from that day to this, though the work of the foundry has gone on behind these quiet walls. The list of famous bells that have been, as one might say, "born" out of dull earth in these lowly precincts is almost bewildering. For, indeed, at the present moment there is only one other important foundry in England that, namely, at Loughborough—devoted exclusively to bell-making.

Sweet-Toned Bells.

Thus the famous "Big Bell" themselves—a reality amongst the sweetest and truest in the world—were made at Whitechapel. The present "temor," as the deepest bell of a peal is always called, was cast here in 1735. It weighed two and a half tons and it itself replaced a one-ton bell of the same weight that had been founded in 1629.

The legendary bells of Whittington's time can, of course, hardly be laid claim to.

Among other noted Whitechapel bells are the great bell of Westminster, the largest ever cast in London, the "clock bell" of St. Paul's, hung in 1709 and still in use; "Great Tom," of Lincoln cathedral, a famous bell that could be heard thirteen miles off; "Great Peter," of York Minster, which was first replaced a thirteen-ton bell, for a time the largest bell in St. James' cathedral in Montreal, weighing eleven tons, and the largest ever shipped—a significant ambassador of an old faith to a new world.

Quite apart from the external poetry that has woven itself round the being and becoming of bells, there is hardly an industry that has about it more individual character. These men of the Whitechapel foundry are no mere workmen-mechanics. They have been bred to the work, most of them, from their earliest years. The art of bell-founding is handed down from father to son. In this same Whitechapel foundry there are no fewer than three generations of one family working side by side to-day, and five generations of the same family have worked there—the grandfather for 45 years, the same grandfather for more than half a century.

In these times, perhaps, the men do not imagine, as Eliotmann would tell us, that the Christian angel and the Egyptian faun are fighting for the mastery, whilst the dumb metal grows to shape and sound. Even the old ritual of "baptising" the bell is not always followed out nowadays, though the vicar of High Wycombe has daily taken his part in founding the new peal that is to sound through the coming centuries over Buckinghamshire meadows.

But it is curious to notice with what tender care these rough workmen still watch over their silent charges. When he is to inspire the hopes and memories of a man is at work over something which is to inspire the hopes and memories of a nation, it cannot help becoming something of a labor of love! Besides, the bell-maker's craft needs, in any case, a kind of instinct of its own. For all its size and tonnage, a great cathedral bell is as delicately sensitive in shape, the slightest shade of fitness in one of its harmonies, and the thing becomes a useless discord.

Magie Harmony.

People who talk of "jangling" bells as being unmusical, have certainly no honest bell-founder to blame, for no bell can be unmusical unless it is badly made or badly rung. Indeed, every great bell has to be so perfectly proportioned in shape, size, weight and thickness, that each part of it shall sound a rightly differing note, and that the result shall be a perfect chord. In this way, while the "lip" which the clapper strikes gives out the "fundamental notes," the "waist" must sound a third higher, the "shoulder" a fifth higher, and the top of it the exact octave. So, the whole bell gives out a chord of which each note fades into the other. It is this harmony that lingers in the ear, and gives the bell its peculiar magic.

Throughout all these centuries—at any rate since the establishment of the Whitechapel foundry—the method of insuring all this has remained practically unaltered. The bell metal is still a mixture of copper and tin, in the proportion of 16 to 5. The metal is poured into a mould prepared by means of a "core," or solid inner cone, made of brick, and an outside "case," which goes over it like a tea-cosy. Between these the exact shape of the bell is touched off on a lining of clay. As with a violin, the accepted shape of a great bell is practically unimprovable, though all sorts of experiments have been tried. For small bells, however, mere hemispheres, like the bell of an alarm clock, serve well enough.

Tuning the Bells.

After the bell is founded, if it sounds sharp anywhere, it can, with great care, be filed down by an upright lathe till the right tone is produced. It is the great ambition of bell moulders to turn out a bell that shall be exactly right as it comes from the mould. This, by the way, is what has happened with the High Wycombe "Bells" which this issue proudly from the Whitechapel foundry a "maiden."

It is pleasant to hear that in spite of all new-fangled critical objections, this sacred old industry is still flourishing. From the Whitechapel foundry, hundreds in these last years to every quarter of the world—from Buenos Ayres to Quebec, from Calcutta to Colombo, from Hongkong to Tasmania. Even the United States—with a 45 per cent import duty—has come to England for its bells. One of the largest recently made at Whitechapel will, doubtless sound as sweet in the ears of Chicago, as did the bells of Fulham to Queen Elizabeth, when she came gliding in her royal barge down London's silver river.

STEAMER CYMERIC ASHORE NEAR COLOMBO

(Times Leased Wire.)
Boston, Mass., May 20.—The steamer Cymeric, with a cargo of merchandise from East India, valued at more than $1,000,000, is ashore near Colombo, Ceylon, and the cargo is endangered, according to a report received here today.

The Cymeric sailed from Calcutta for Boston, April 28th.

SHINGLES BURNED

Bellingham, Wash., May 20.—The dry kiln and 2,500,000 best grade shingles, the property of the Cavanaugh Shingle Company of Anacortes, was totally destroyed by fire yesterday, entailing a loss of $10,000. The plant, which is the largest in the city, will close for three weeks pending reconstruction. The cause of the fire is not known.

Steamer Makura, the finest of the Australian steamers, leaves this evening with passengers for Australia, New Zealand, Honolulu and Suva. The bookings for this voyage are not quite as large as usual, and less than a dozen will join her here.

SURVEYS FOR NEW INTERIOR RAILWAY

Parties Starting Work From Fort George and Lytton—News of Fort George

News from the interior just received states that large parties of surveyors have started out from Lytton and Fort George to delimit the route of the proposed British Columbia-Alaska line, which will go north from a point in the neighborhood of Lytton, and pass through the rich country of which Fort George is the centre. This is simply one more web in the network of lines which will very soon open up the whole of British Columbia. There are at the present time no railways running north and south, but these are sure to follow the east and west lines. They are just as much a necessity as the others and, in fact, the country cannot properly be opened up without them. Steamships are all right on the coast, but the interior has to be served and by railways.

Just now the country north of the C. P. 3, is served by automobiles, no less than eighteen carrying passengers to and from the northern centre from along the Cariboo road. A telephone line is just being constructed to link up the new town with the rest of civilization. The construction work is in charge of William West.

The first women to take up residence in Fort George went in a few days ago. They were Mrs. M. Y. Halm and Mrs. C. Houser. They received a great ovation on landing and were each presented with a town lot by the South Fort George Townsite Company in recognition of the fact. The ladies were former residents of Quesnel.

The Fort George Tribune says that shaving costs 25 cents in the town, and that whisky is not for sale because the people, with the exception of three, are Christians, and don't believe in wrecking humanity and stunting the growth of succeeding generations.

HON. FRANK OLIVER TO VISIT PROVINCE

Going Into Dawson From the Peace River Country and Back by Coast

Victoria will in all likelihood during the coming summer be favored with a visit from the Hon. Frank Oliver, minister of the interior. A special dispatch from Ottawa appearing in the Toronto Globe of May 13th, says: Hon. Frank Oliver will leave for the west in the course of a week or so, and will spend the greater part of the summer there. The minister has under contemplation a unique trip during the summer from Edmonton north through the Peace River district and Mackenzie river right up to the Arctic ocean, thence overland to Prince Rupert, and from there down to Prince Rupert and Vancouver. A detachment of Mounted Police will accompany him over the route from Edmonton to Dawson if he finds that he has an opportunity to take the trip.

DO YOU NEED MORE BLOOD

To Restore Health, Vigor and Energy—Then Turn to DR. A. W. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD.

Are the lips and gums pale? Does the inner side of the eyelids show lack of blood? Are you pale, weak and easily fatigued?

This is the test you should apply, and if blood is lacking in quantity or quality, you can be sure that Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food will be of greatest possible assistance to you.

While put up in pill form, this medicine is more like a food because it supplies to the system in concentrated form the very elements which go to create rich, red, invigorating blood.

A few weeks' use of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food will do wonders for any person who is pale, weak and anaemic. It is sometimes spoken of as particularly a woman's medicine, because so many women are subject to anaemia and general weakness arising from lack of rich, red blood.

With the use of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food vigor and energy are restored, the complexion improves, the form is rounded out. 50 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

LORD KITCHENER'S RETURN HOME

SCENES AT LONDON AND SOUTHAMPTON

Striking and Memorable Meeting Between Field Marshal and Lord Roberts in London

The war correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph, writing from Southampton under date of April 27th, sends his paper a striking description of the scenes attendant upon the arrival of Lord Kitchener at that port. Following are excerpts from his account: After nearly eight years' absence from England, Field Marshal Lord Kitchener of Khartoum landed to-day at Southampton. In appearance he is unchanged, still, as always, in the prime of life—a Viking among men, straight, upstanding, several inches over six feet in height. The same grave, steady gaze as of yore, the occasional relaxation into a smiling mood, no more; for although an Irishman and proud of it, of subaltern or field marshal, he has never "guffawed," or rocked with laughter. His popularity appears undiminished, for at Southampton, shortly after midday, as later on when he arrived in town, thousands of men and women, who had been waiting for hours to catch a glimpse of Lord Kitchener, vociferously cheered him, as if he were newly returned victor from another campaign. And there were those who say that the British people are ungrateful, and have no memories. It was curious to observe how he whom men call "K. of K." somewhat shyly tried to slip the ovations, the rush, and the demonstration of welcome of the public. In London he has returned to his former address in Belgrave square, the guest of old and tried friends.

I proceeded on the Oceanic on her round to Cherbourg and Southampton. Quite early I met him this morning on the deck as the steamer was leaving the famous French port and heading back for England. His greeting was most kind and hearty, although I dare say, had he regarded me merely as a journalist, he would have wished me somewhere else. He had nothing to retract of all the pretty things he was credited as having said about the beauty of American ships. Less so, I think, than the military school. He had found nothing so good anywhere else, and had recommended both Australia and New Zealand to copy it for their own use in the training of cadets. These two colonies, like every other civilized people, were keenly interested in the problem of the best means of self-defence. They recognized it as a duty they owed to themselves and their free institutions, so that they could stand face to face against any interference from outside sources.

"The material, personnel and so forth are first-rate, and no doubt they will be well able ere long to take right good care of themselves. But it will take time and energy, and they have enough of the latter. These colonies are very prosperous, and are in a most promising condition."

"The scheme I have drafted for it quite involves no greater outlay than if quite so much as that proposed under the defence acts. For £1,700,000 a year Australia will in due course have a complete system that makes her secure against attack. She will no longer need to look to the mother country for instant aid in the event of danger. The amount in money is but trivial to such a rich country."

He found his tour most interesting and enjoyable. The East was moving forward, and Japan had proved most enlightening. India could take care of herself, and the army there was all right. As for the Japanese infantry, they were ideal, active soldiers. Their quickness and aggressiveness in the field were most admirable. They could not wish for better troops.

"But for all his travels and sight-seeing, he was glad to be home again. The old land was the best land of all to us. There was no need to carp about it, or our country's position in the world's affairs."

"England is not degenerate, she produces as fine men as ever in abundance," had said Lord Kitchener to me in one of our talks, and then, swiftly turning full face to me, he added, "I assure you in no sense decadent."

"England is not degenerate, she produces as fine men as ever in abundance," had said Lord Kitchener to me in one of our talks, and then, swiftly turning full face to me, he added, "I assure you in no sense decadent."

words. I have dared to do this, to repeat them, because, in a flash of his lightning speech, he had disclosed his soldierly mind, that which all should know, and I risk reproach and loss of his good favor therefor. The words had instantly recalled to me the grand phrase of Faulconbridge: "Come, the three corners of the world in arms, and we shall shock them."

The civic deputation having assembled in the ship's library, the mayor, addressing Lord Kitchener, said: "Your Lordship: I should like to say how pleased we are that you selected the Oceanic to travel by, and decided to land at Southampton."

"I can assure you that we have received many distinguished men at this port, and we are very proud that we have the honor to-day of receiving a freeman of the borough. Eight years ago we made you a freeman, and are proud of it."

"We have watched with interest your work in India. We have followed your visit to the Manchuian battlefields and your visit to that country with equal interest. Then we read with great pleasure of your magnificent reception in Japan, and particularly in America, and to-day we are delighted at seeing you again in old England. (Cheers.)"

"The moment it was known that you were coming here I had numerous requests to arrange for a public reception, and had much pleasure in doing so, and although things are not many of people on the ship, I can assure you there is an enormous crowd just outside waiting to give you an enthusiastic welcome."

Lord Kitchener replied: "Mr. Mayor: It is with the greatest pleasure that I find myself back once more in old England. I thank you very much for welcoming me home as a freeman of Southampton. I have always looked forward to coming back and seeing Southampton again."

Captain A. Swain, the United States consul, was introduced to His Lordship by the mayor. Shaking hands with Lord Kitchener he said: "I have an idea that Lord Kitchener is the biggest Englishman alive."

Lord Kitchener replied, with a laugh: "The United States, I must say, gave me a splendid reception."

As Lord Kitchener passed down the gangway into the shed he received the respectful salutations of the spectators, but the crowd outside the barriers who had come to cheer, were disappointed for he quietly walked round to the Ocean quay, which was quite deserted, and, entering a carriage with the mayor and sheriff, drove out of the docks to the southwestern hotel for lunch.

Portions of the report of the Telegraph of the proceedings of Kitchener's arrival in London read as follows: At 4.45 p. m. exactly the train conveying Lord Kitchener in a saloon, the second carriage from the engine, ran into the Waterloo station, and as His Lordship stepped on to the platform there was almost a rush of his friends to shake hands with him. At the same time the waiting crowds gave vent to their long pent-up interest by raising a resounding cheer. Not a few of the minor railway officials, some of whom had seen service with the field marshal, joined in the greeting. In response Lord Kitchener removed his hat, bowed as well as he could from the front of the train, from constant salutations—and smilingly acknowledged the greeting. In these few seconds people had a splendid opportunity of seeing him. His sun-burnt face—almost as ruddy as the rose-colored tie he was wearing—looked no older, though rather fuller, and the deep-set, far-seeing eyes gleamed with pleasure when he smiled and bowed his acknowledgments. To each and all the queries of his friends concerning his health he replied with a laconic but genial "fit," or "splendid." He looked both. When he replaced his headgear it was only to remove it as friend after friend pressed forward to shake his extended hand.

Among the first to speak to Lord Kitchener was Lord Knollys, who conveyed a cordial message and a "command" from the King, and Sir Arthur Bigge, who welcomed the eminent soldier on behalf of the Heir Apparent. Then Lord Roberts stepped forward. Up to that moment "K. of K." had offered a splendid defence to the pressing exuberance of friend and admirer alike, but as the older field marshal made his way through the tall, top-hatted throng, the younger soldier advanced with one big stride, and was heard to exclaim, "My dear Chief," as he opened a brief and warm conversation.

"Is there anybody else?" Lord Kitchener asked, smilingly, as he drew himself up to his full height once more. Of course, there were literally hundreds; but they were not privileged. So Mr. Tall, who had withheld his own welcome towards the end, stepped in front, and directed Lord Kitchener to a private motor-car. In waiting, His Lordship shook hands with Major Beddingfield and Major Marker, his fellow-travellers, entered the car and drove away. As he did so another great cheer was raised, and repeated time after time before the main thoroughfare was reached.

IMPORTANCE OF THE EVENING NEWSPAPER

Interesting Address by Judge Parry at Dinner of the London Press Club

The Press Club held their annual dinner at the Criterion restaurant, London, recently, with Mr. Herbert Jewell presiding, Judge Parry, who was the principal guest, proposed the toast of the club. Noticing that the club's home was in Wine Office court, he commented humorously upon the connection between the press and wine, remarking that a wine merchant's catalogue contained many of the epithets which were peculiarly attributable to the press. They would see the light, the dry, the reliable (laughter), and the tawny (renewed laughter). It was not for him to teach them how to allude to the vagaries of John Jones on foreign shores without drawing on themselves thousands of actions for libel. Why was it he asked that the duffers were always put to dramatic criticism? As a dramatist himself, he had suffered. If a man wanted to write about cricket he must, at all events, play the game; if he wrote financial articles, he had probably lost money on the stock exchange (laughter.) Even in painting, a man had to fall to paint a picture before an editor would ask him to write art notes. But in drama it seemed to be entirely otherwise. Dramatic critics had always been men who had never written plays, never played in plays, and who knew nothing whatever about what went on behind the curtain.

Speaking generally, he thought that the British press was a great thing. As they said in Lancashire, it was "a'reet." Of course, the press was no place for new ideas; it was no place for really eloquent writing. The press was a business thing. It had to be read in railway trains, and anybody who worried would be a nuisance. Just as now we were getting from the sun heat and light, which started from the sun many thousand years ago, so now we were reading in the press the ideas of men who had departed. But what about the next generation? They would have to put up with the ideas of Bernard Shaw, Chesterton, Harold Cox, Hall Caine, and Leo Masxe. He was glad that he would not be there (laughter.) Another thing that occurred to him about the modern press was the supreme importance of the evening newspaper. In the morning paper they were only told the horses that was going to win; in the evening paper they were told the horse that had won—and they were not always the same. (Laughter.)

One hopeful thing about the English press was that it was not written by Englishmen; at least not largely. It was written by Scotch, Irish, and Welsh predominated, and the unfortunate Englishman was having a bad time. They had a prime minister who was a great English barrister, instructed by a Welsh solicitor, on behalf of an Irish client. (Loud laughter.)

WOMEN ADMIRE MARRIAGE. Numerous offers of marriage have been received by Constable Denihan, who recently rescued a man from drowning in the Thames. England. The fact was commented on by Sir Albert de Rutzen at Bow street, London, when Denihan was presented with a reward of £5 from the commissioner of police for his gallantry. Sir Albert said there was no danger, however great, a police constable should not be ready to face at a moment's notice, and it would be very difficult to understand a finer action by any man than that of Denihan.

"I understand," proceeded the magistrate, "that you have since had notice of offers of marriage. Well, I don't wonder at it, and if any one of these good people succeeds in winning your affections, I congratulate her."

Denihan was cycling by at night time when he heard that a man had jumped into the river. Diving himself of his tunic and helmet, he plunged in to the rescue, seized his man, and got him to the bank. The man was then unconscious, but the officer brought him round by means of artificial respiration.

The officer bashfully admitted that the offers of marriage had come to him from ladies living in London and in different parts of the country, but expressed his great regret that he had mentioned them to anybody, as he had also been in receipt of a good deal of chaff from his comrades. In any event he did not intend to take advantage of any of the offers, however flattering their terms.

BUILDING WILL BE BRISK THIS SUMMER

Demand for Houses Good and Few New Ones Left of Many Built Recently

Building operations are likely to be very brisk this summer, according to D. H. Bale, the contractor. At the present time there is a good deal of work on hand and the activity will increase very largely in the near future. Mr. Bale says that he is at present building five houses and he expects to commence five or six more within the next few weeks. The only difficulty is one that is experienced in every line of work, and that is securing men to do the work.

"There are a great many large buildings under way at the present time," said Mr. Bale. "The erection of these will serve the business community, but very soon there will be a great demand for dwellings. There are a few new houses not sold just now, but by fall all these will be taken and there will be a great many more needed."

During the past week or two there have been a great many houses change hands. Inquiry of the brokers show that the sale of houses is an important part of the business of some of these; indeed, a few who make a specialty of this line of business sell hardly anything else. One man tells of selling about half a dozen dwellings within as many days, while another has sold two large houses and three cottages in a week. The houses which were built some time ago, and for which there was at one time no inquiry, have mostly been sold, and for those left there is a great deal of inquiry.

THE KAISER'S THEATRES.

Personal Expenditure of Half Million Dollars in a Year.

The Kaiser spends $500,000 a year—amounting roughly to an eighth of his civil list—on supporting the royal theatre and opera houses in Prussia. This curious fact was revealed in the budget committee of the Prussian Diet by the minister of finance, Baron Rheinbaben, who was defending his demand for a government grant of $212,500 for the purpose of modernizing the royal opera house in Berlin.

It was stated that the Emperor devotes $250,000 annually from his private purse towards the upkeep of the three royal playhouses in Berlin alone, and his Majesty contributes proportionately to the support of the three other royal theatres situated at Wiesbaden, Hannover and Cassel. The Kaiser's expenditure consists of contributions equivalent to the annual deficits.

The expenses at the opera houses and theatres have been vastly increased by his Majesty's fondness for lavish productions. The gorgeous revival of Verdi's "Aida," produced under his personal direction in 1908, cost $20,000. One of the costumes worn by the King of Egypt was embroidered in gold and cost $750.

It is announced that the municipality of Berlin is ready to purchase the royal opera house at Berlin, and it is rumored that it will be converted into a naval museum. If the transaction is carried out the Kaiser will fulfil his long-cherished ambition of erecting a magnificent new opera house more in keeping with the present splendor of Berlin, and costing about $5,000,000.

THREE MEN KILLED IN RAILWAY ACCIDENT. Three Others Sustain Injuries When Work Train Collided With Freight. Kamloops, May 19.—Three men lost their lives as a result of the collision near Ashcroft on Saturday. Through some misunderstanding the steam shovel work train which is working about a mile east of Ashcroft, was allowed to leave the yard about midday, and before it had gone 200 yards it crashed into an incoming freight. Engine 512, which was pulling the freight, piled on top of a freight car which was being pushed by the work train engine. One man of those riding on the dump car was killed outright, and another died before he could be extricated from the wreckage which pinned him down. Four others who were badly injured were rushed off to the hospital here, one of them being a Galician and a son of one of those killed at the wreck, died on Sunday night.

CHILD DROWNED. Boy Disappears and is Found in Post Hole Several Hours Later. Vancouver, May 19.—The young son of Alexander Mathew, of 450 Eighteenth avenue east, was accidentally drowned in a strange way Tuesday, while playing in the yard of a neighbor. The child was alone, and without attracting notice fell into an open hole which had partially filled with water. As soon as he was missed the distracted mother began a search for him, but he could not be found for several hours.

VARICOSE ULCERS HEALED BY ZAM-BUK. Mrs. Alex. Young, Martin's River, Lunenburg Co., N. S., writes as follows: "I feel I must acquaint you with the great benefit I have received from Zam-Buk. For years I had been troubled with varicose veins and sores on my leg, and could get nothing to heal these. The family doctor treated me, but instead of getting better, the trouble seemed to get worse. I then tried various remedies, but still to no avail, and I almost gave up in despair, thinking I would never get a cure. About three months ago I heard of Zam-Buk, and what a wonderful healer it was, so I laid in a supply and gave the Zam-Buk treatment a fair trial. It surpassed my highest expectations, and only a few boxes were needed to effect a complete cure.

TO PREPARE DATA ON ROSSLAND CAMP HALF MILLION DOLLARS FOR NEW SEWERS. Scheme Outlined by Mining Committee of Progressive Association. By-Law Will Probably Be Submitted at Next Meeting of Vancouver Council.

Rossland, May 19.—An enthusiastic meeting of the Rossland Progressive Association, held at the city hall, the mining committee brought forward a scheme under which there would be a tabulated list of all the claims and prospects with the financial conditions the owners would desire observed in the event of any capitalist becoming interested in any particular property. C. Dempster, who is closely in touch with New York capitalists, said it was easier to get capitalists interested in British Columbia than in any other country. They knew the excellence of the mineral lands and that their interests would be well protected.

DUNCAN NOTES. (Special Correspondence.) Duncan, May 19.—Dr. and Mrs. Dyke left on Monday last for England. They expect to be absent six months. Dr. McLean is taking Dr. Dyke's place during his absence. Mrs. Matilda Dougall arrived on Saturday from Hazelton, where she has been all winter. At present she is the guest of Mrs. H. Morton. On Monday evening one of the most enjoyable concerts ever held in Duncan took place in the local opera house, under the auspices of the King's Daughters, when Senor Paul Porfira, Portuguese Violinist, appeared, assisted by Miss Lucille Palmer, soprano, and C. H. Harper, pianist. Although the audience was not a large one, every number of the programme was thoroughly appreciated.

MAY HAVE BOY SCOUTS. Rossland, May 19.—Some time ago Major A. D. McKenzie of the Rocky Mountain Rangers, initiated a project for forming a company of school boy cadets. At the time the teachers of the town expressed themselves as quite willing to do all they could to help forward the movement, but somehow the matter fell into abeyance. Major Mackenzie now comes forward with the same idea, the only difference being that the company would be termed Baden-Powell's scouts instead of cadets. If the teachers of the city will give the proposal their support it should be a great success. Major Mackenzie and his officers have expressed their willingness to give up the requisite time to drilling the lads.

CHARGED WITH STABBING. Vancouver, May 19.—Constable Lucas came down from Van Anda bringing with him Arthur E. Crane, a miner, who is charged with having stabbed and seriously injured John Willison on a row at the Van Anda hotel last Saturday evening. Onlookers said that Crane seemed to have been looking for trouble all the evening, and finally ran into Willison. A quarrel arose between them, and Crane drew a knife, cutting Willison in several places. He was so badly injured that he had to be removed to the Van Anda hospital, where he now lies. Crane was committed for trial, and will come up before Judge McInnes on May 23rd, by which time Willison should be sufficiently recovered to be able to give evidence.

Uncle Walt The Poet Philosopher. One merchant said to his toiling clerk: "I'm greatly pleased with the way you work. The chap who tends to his duties right is bound to win the worldly fight, and you're bound to get to the top some day; meanwhile, I guess I'll advance your pay." O glad was the heart of the clerklet then, and he buckled down to his work again, and he made things hum in the blamed old store; as things had never been hummed before. In t'other store room, across the street, the clerks were working with frozen feet; the merchant carried a scowl all day, and groaned as he gave them their meagre pay; he never praised them when hard they wrought, but kicked and scolded, and made them hot; and so they soldiered and foped away the passing hours of each golden day. There's something wrong if you lay the blame on the men who help you to play the game, when things go crooked and trade is hum, your men would help you to make things hum, if they'd been treated in proper shape—been given posies instead of crap.

HEWLINGS & CO. 1109 BROAD. Phone 1734. $400—240 ft. LAKE FRONT, Shawnigan Lake. $1,500—COTTAGE, fruit trees and 8 1/2 acres cultivated, waterfront, Shawnigan Lake.

C. H. RICHARDSON 415 FORT STREET, Room No. 1, Upstairs. THIS IS WORTH LOOKING INTO. FOR SALE. A MOST DESIRABLE BUNGALOW situated on car line, close to Beacon Hill Park and the sea, James Bay district, comprising 6 rooms, 2 bed, bath kitchen and breakfast room and double parlor; woodshed attached; alley at back; lot 50x120. This house has just been renovated outside. The owner has left the city and wishes to sell.

NEW WESTMINSTER ASSESSMENT. New Westminster, May 19.—The net taxable assessment of the city of New Westminster for the year 1910 is $7,249,010, an increase of $1,857,565 over that of last year. The total assessment this year, including exemptions, is $10,889,820. The tax rate remains the same as it has for the past several years, being 24 mills gross, or about 20 mills net. This year only two discounts will be allowed for prompt payment of taxes, one of 1-6 for taxes paid on or before August 1st, and the other of 1-10 on taxes paid on or before September 1st. The other discounts of 7 1/2 and 5 per cent, which prevailed in the past, have been abandoned.

SUGGESTS SAFEGUARDS AT CAPILANO RIVER. Coroners Jury Recommends That Lifebelts Be Placed on the Banks. North Vancouver, May 19.—The inquest on the bodies of Minnie May Pement and Albert Pement, the brother and sister who lost their lives in a tragic manner on Sunday afternoon in the Capilano river was held before Coroner A. P. Diplock. The jury brought in a verdict of accidentally drowned. A rider was added recommending that notice boards be placed at the most dangerous places on the river, and that a few life belts be hung there. The jury complimented the police on the prompt manner in which the bodies had been found.

DIAMOND DRILLING. Moyle, May 19.—A diamond drill is to be put into operation at the Sullivan mine at Kimberley. The Sullivan was acquired some few months ago by the Consolidated Mining & Smelting Company of Canada. Since that date a good force of men has been employed at the property and regular shipments of ore have been made to the company's smelter at Trail. The action of the management of the Consolidated Company in deciding to install a diamond drill at the mine is taken here to mean that extensive operations at the Sullivan are planned.

BOOMS UNIVERSITY SITE. New Westminster, May 19.—The municipality of Coquitlam has a university site to bring to the attention of the university commission which is believed to offer a number of exceptional advantages. There are 500 or more acres available fronting on the Fraser river and lying between the Coquitlam and Burrard rivers. Publicity Commissioner Wade went over the proposed site with Rev. Major McArthur, and a number of other prominent men from Coquitlam. The matter will probably be brought to the attention of the Lower Mainland university committee through Mayor J. G. New Westminster vice-president of this committee.

IMPRESSIVE SCENES AT SCHOOL SERVICES

Memorial Exercises Held in Metropolitan Church Marked by Attentiveness of Scholars

The special memorial services to the public school children held in the Metropolitan church, yesterday were remarkable for their impressiveness. The solemnity of the occasion was reflected in the quiet attentiveness of the scholars to the speakers, even the younger children appearing to fully realize the mournful nature of the service. With the girls, almost without exception, arrayed in white dresses bearing purple rosettes, and boys wearing emblems of mourning the appearance of the church was remarkable. The High School cadet corps, which attended the second service, added a semi-military color to the proceedings.

At the service for the juvenile scholars there were present children from South Park, North Ward, Kingston Street and Victoria West schools. Addresses especially designed to meet their understanding were delivered and appropriate hymns sung, in which they joined with heartiness.

The older pupils attended the second service which was held shortly after 3 o'clock. The exercises were opened by Rev. Dr. Campbell who explained the nature of the service. Following a prayer and Hymn, Herman A. Carson read from the Scriptures.

Rev. W. Leslie Clay delivered the address, which eulogized the dead King and his work as a peacemaker. His successful cementing of the English and French nations was especially referred to as a greater achievement than any attributed to Napoleon.

The service closed with a benediction delivered by Rev. Dr. Campbell, after which the scholars marched from the church to the strains of "The Dead March in Saul."

Among those who were on the platform were Mr. George Jay, Dr. E. B. Paul, M. A., Mr. Staneland, A. B. McNeill and Mrs. Jenkins.

felt that the council had not gone far enough in making the proposition which it had. The members of the board felt that it was something in the nature of a "half-baked" proposition which had been laid before it by the council. What was wanted from the council was a concrete scheme, in black and white, setting out that the area in question would be made ready for the purposes of a site and handed over to the school board at a cost not exceeding the sum which the board had available as purchase money.

Ald. Fullerton entered into a lengthy exposition of the merits of the Spring Ridge site and the ease with which the matter could be adjusted to meet the wishes of the school board. The members of the latter body were, he thought, laboring under a misunderstanding. The council did not ask the board to do the work of regrading. The city would do that. The whole sum involved in the proposition in making the site ready for the erection of the building would not exceed $46,000. A uniform grade would be given from the street car track right back to Fernwood road and the land when levelled would make one of the finest sites in the city.

Replying to questions, Mr. Jay said the board would require all the property in the whole block, save that portion of land on which stands the Baptist church.

Trustee McNeill felt that the city council should put its proposition in writing in detail before the school board. The city ought to be prepared to purchase the necessary land, do the regrading and lowering of the streets, and state what the school board would have to pay as a purchase price. If the project were put on that basis he would be prepared to support it.

Mayor Morley, being appealed to by the chairman to say a few words, expressed himself as desirous of hearing the views of the others and reserving his judgment in the matter. He remarked that he was sure they all knew he was in favor of Spring Ridge as opposed to the site at the Jewish cemetery.

Dr. Lewis Hall, ex-mayor, took the position that the school board should have all the land that would be required on the understanding that if the school board would make an adequate appropriation the site would be handed over all in readiness for building purposes. Personally, he was of the opinion that the board could well afford to expend $50,000 on acquiring such a site. He would impress upon them that in the opinion of contractors who had been consulted in the matter it would cost much less to erect a building on the sand-pits area than on the site offered at the Jewish cemetery. Then there was another point to be considered. On the land which would be utilized at Spring Ridge was a fine brick cottage worth at least $5,000, and this could be preserved as a residence for the caretaker of the High school. The question of sewerage facilities was an important factor in the present situation, as between the rival sites, it was undeniable that were the Jewish cemetery property chosen the city would have to expend an immense sum of money in order to provide the necessary sewerage facilities.

Ald. Hannerman, after making some calculations, announced that the city could possibly get all the property required for the purposes of a site, do the necessary regrading and prepare the area ready for building at an expenditure on the part of the corporation of about $12,500. The total cost would be in the neighborhood of $43,000. He asked Mr. Jay if the latter thought the school board would be willing to make an appropriation of $30,000, instead of $25,000 for the purposes of a site, to allow most of the thing being financed on this basis.

In reply, Mr. Jay said he could give the committee no assurance on that point. A meeting of the board would have to be summoned to discuss the matter. The council should remember, however, that the board would dislike to cut down their main appropriation to provide for the erection of the building.

J. E. Beckwith, ex-alderman and a resident of Spring Ridge district, thought the school board should keep in mind the fact that the building, if erected on the sand-pits, would cost $5,000 less than if the site at the Jewish cemetery were chosen.

After some further discussion the committee decided to make a recommendation to the city council on Monday evening on the lines suggested by Ald. Hannerman—that the city give the lots it owns there, provide the sum of $12,500 for the purposes of acquiring other necessary property, does all the work of regrading and preparing the site for building, provided that the school board makes a grant of $30,000 to complete the total sum necessary to be expended.

ROAD MAKING IN GERMANY.

The construction and maintenance of streets and roads is a matter of great public interest in Germany, says the last issue of Construction. From every standpoint—military, agricultural, commercial, hygienic, economic—the question of good roads is deemed of the utmost importance. One of the matters now receiving the special attention of German scientists, highway authori-

Many Reasons Why You Should Purchase Your Go-Cart Here

There are a great many reasons why you should purchase the new Go-Cart or Baby Carriage here. First of all because we handle the very best carriage made—the Whitney.

For fifty years this carriage has been recognized as the leader, and this year's productions easily surpass their previous efforts. These carts are built of best materials, and finished in a superior manner. They have numerous special, patented features not found in other carts.
