PREFACE.

In the publication of the edition of the "Manual of the Cor-PORATION OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK," for the year 1868, the Compiler has had many and unusual obstacles to contend with, all tending to retard the progress of the work. The authority for the compilation was not given by the Common Council until nearly three months of the year had expired; it was the first attempt of the present Compiler at "book-making:" it was decided, after consultation with experts in that art, to begin a new series with the present issue, enlarged to a size uniform with the proceedings and documents of the Common Council, which necessitated entirely new engravings, both on stone and wood; a great delay occurred in procuring paper (which had to be made to order), while the usual and characteristic printing-office delays have been of a more than ordinarily provoking description. The largest edition heretofore published contained about eight hundred duodecimo pages; the present volume contains nearly one thousand large octavo pages, in much smaller type, and more compactly arranged and printed, so that the book contains nearly double the amount of matter embraced in any former compilation, much of it of a very useful, if not interesting character, particularly in the information relating to many of the most prominent Educational, Charitable, and Correctional institutions of the city.

The old Charters of the city, of 1686 and 1730 (Dongan and Montgomerie), are contained in the present volume, printed as closely as modern type will permit, verbatim, et literatim, et punctuatim, as they appear in the original parchment copy on file in the office of the Comptroller. The successive amendments, or modifications also appear in full, including the latest, of August 31, 1868. A comparison of the full and ample power for self-government, vested by the charters of 1686 and 1730 in this vi Preface.

FREE CITY (see page 19), with the present stunted and emasculated city charter of 1857 (which, to the credit of our people be it said, never received their approval), must afford food for reflection to all thoughtful men; and it is quite possible the time is not far distant when the respect and attachment of every inhabitant of this city for and to the great principles of freedom that underlie our system of government by the People, may assert themselves with a power and force that may render the publication of this duly authenticated copy of the original organic law of this city a matter of great public convenience, if not importance.*

In collating and arranging the matter comprised in the Manual for 1868, all precedent was set aside, and an entirely new system adopted. It was sought to afford the minutest detail of the working and management of the more prominent and useful institutions in the city, so that any person wishing to become informed upon any subject touching such institutions, could be placed in possession of the desired information without being compelled to refer to any other source. The minutest details of the principal State or Metropolitan Commissions, intrusted with the administration of many of the most important of the governmental departments of this city, are also given. The Historical matter, the Compiler hopes, and confidently anticipates, will be found both valuable and interesting.

The enviable reputation secured for former editions of this work by the original Compiler, imposed the duty upon his successor of endeavoring to preserve it. If, as a book of reference, relating to the city of New York, its government and institutions, it may be accepted by the public as equal in usefulness to any former publication of the kind, or, at least, that the established reputation of the book has not suffered at his hands, it will be extremely gratifying to him, and is certainly all, by way of commendation, that can be reasonably expected by the present

COMPILER.

^{*}A comparison of the Charters, as contained in the Manual, was instituted with the original parchment copy, by Henry B. Dawson, Editor of The Historical Magazine, and Francis J. Twomey, Deputy Clerk of the Board of Aldermen, a practical printer and proof-reader. both of whom youch for its accuracy.

An Act

TO AMEND THE CHARTER OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK.

PASSED APRIL 2, 1849; THREE-FIFTHS BEING PRESENT.

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

Section 1. The legislative power of the Corporation of the city of New York shall continue to be vested in a Board of Aldermen and a Board of Assistant Aldermen, who together shall form the Common Council of the city. The Board of Aldermen shall consist of one Alderman from each ward, who shall be elected by the people of the respective wards for two years. The Board of Assistant Aldermen shall consist of one Assistant Alderman from each ward, who shall be elected in like manner, and shall hold their office for one year.

§ 2. The election for charter officers shall be held on the day of the general State election, when all charter officers eligible by the people shall be chosen, and the officers who shall be elected shall be sworn into office on the first Monday of January thereafter; and the laws of the State regulating elections shall apply to elections of charter officers; but the Common Council may, by law, extend the time for the canvass of the votes. The Mayor shall hold his office for a period of two years.

§ 3. The Common Council, during the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty, may hold its sessions as often as each Board shall, by resolution, appoint, and thereafter the Common Council shall annually hold only three stated sessions of not exceeding one month each, commencing on the first Monday of January, May, and September. The Mayor may convene the Common Council, or the Board of Aldermen only, at any time between the sessions, if, in his judgment, any exigency shall have arisen to render such a proceeding necessary, on the request, in writing, of a majority of the members elected to each Board, specifying the purposes for which such meeting is called; in which case the action of the Common Council shall be confined to the matters in reference to which it shall have been so convened, or to such other matters as may be submitted by the Mayor for its consideration during such session; and the respective Boards may adjourn from day to day until such business shall be completed.

§ 4. The Boards shall sit in separate chambers, and the doors shall be kept open, except when the public welfare shall require secrecy. The majority of each shall be a quorum to do business, but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and may compel the attendance of absent members. Each Board shall appoint a President from its own body; shall choose its Clerk and other officers: determine the rules of its own proceedings: be the judge of the election returns and qualifications of its own members; keep a journal of its proceedings, and have power to direct special elections to fill its own vacancies; to compel the attendance of members; to punish them for disorderly conduct, and expel a member by a vote of two-thirds of all the members elected, after five days' notice and opportunity of being heard has been given to him; but such resolution of expulsion shall be of no effect unless it contain a provision for a special election within two weeks thereafter to supply such vacancy; provided, however, that such special election shall not be ordered unless there be at least two months of the term of the expelled member unexpired. The Clerk of the Board of Aldermen shall, by virtue of his office, be Clerk of the Common Council, and shall perform all the duties heretofore performed by the Clerk of the Common Council, except such as shall be assigned to the Clerk of the Board of Assistant Aldermen; and it shall be his duty to keep open for inspection, at all reasonable times, the records and minutes of the proceedings of the Common Council, except such as shall be specially ordered otherwise. The two Boards shall have concurrent powers, and a negative on each other's proceedings, and shall in all cases act as separate bodies, and shall not appoint joint committees, except a committee on accounts. Each Board may originate, amend, concur in, or reject any law, ordinance, or resolution; but no law shall pass either Board, except by a majority of the members elected. Neither Board shall adjourn for a longer period than three days, except by a resolution to be concurred in by the other body.

§ 5. It shall be the duty of the clerks of the respective Boards to publish all ordinances and amendments of ordinances which shall be passed, and also the proceedings, in the newspapers employed by the Corporation, except such parts as may require secreey, and whenever a vote shall be taken in either Board upon the passage of a resolution or ordinance which shall contemplate any specific improvement, or involve the sale, disposition, or appropriation of public property, or the expenditure of public moneys or income therefrom, or lay any tax or assessment, such resolution or ordinance shall, before the same shall be sent to the other Board, and immediately after the adjournment of the Board at which the same shall have been passed, be published, with the ayes and noes, with the names of the persons voting for and against the same, in at least two newspapers, as a part of the proceedings; and no act, resolution, or ordinance which shall have passed one Board shall be acted upon by the other Board on the same day, unless by unanimous consent, except in case of invasion, insurrection, or pestilence.

- § 6. If any ordinance or resolution passed by each Board, as provided by sections twelve and thirteen of the amended charter of one thousand eight hundred and thirty, shall not be returned by the Mayor within ten days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the same shall become a law in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the close of the session of the Common Council shall prevent its return, in which case it shall not be a law until the expiration of five days after the commencement of the next session of the Common Council, by whom the ordinance or resolution shall be reconsidered, if returned within such time, and be disposed of in the same manner and with like effect as if presented at the preceding session.
- § 7. No money shall be drawn from the city treasury except the same shall have been previously appropriated to the purpose for which it is drawn; and all appropriations shall be based upon specific and detailed statements, in writing, of the several heads of the departments, through the Comptroller.
- § 8. The Board of Assistant Aldermen shall have the sole power of impeachment of all city officers, not otherwise provided for; and pending such impeachment, and until the final disposition thereof, the party impeached shall not exercise any of the functions of his office. The Board of Aldermen shall have the sole power to try all impeachments; when sitting for that purpose, they shall be on oath or affirmation, truly and impartially to try the impeachment, according to evidence, and no person shall be convicted without the concurrence of two-thirds of all the members elected to said board. Judgment in case of impeachment shall not extend farther than removal from office, and disqualification to hold any office under the city charter; but the party convicted shall be liable to indictment, trial, judgment, and punishment according to law.
- § 9. The executive power of the Corporation shall be vested in the Mayor, the heads of departments, and such other executive officers as shall be from time to time created by law, and neither the Common Council, nor any committee or member thereof, shall perform any executive business whatever, except such as is or shall be specially imposed on them by the laws of the State, and except that the Board of Aldermen may approve or reject the nominations made to them, as hereinafter provided.

§ 10. There shall continue to be an executive department, which shall be known as the "Police Department," and the Mayor of the city shall be the head thereof. There shall be a bureau in this department, and the chief officer thereof shall be denominated the "Chief of Police."

It shall settle and adjust all claims whatsoever by the Corporation or against them, and all accounts whatsoever in which the Corporation is concerned, either as debtor or creditor. The chief officer of this department shall be called the "Comptroller of the city of New York." There shall be a bureau in this department for the collection of the revenue accruing from taxes, the chief officer thereof shall be called the "Receiver of Taxes," who shall nominate, and with the advice and consent of the Board of Aldermen, appoint, so many clerks as shall be authorized by the Common Council; provided that nothing in this act contained shall be held to interfere with the tenure of office of the present Receiver of Taxes and Deputy Receiver of Taxes, as established by the act passed April 11, 1848. An Act

FURTHER TO AMEND THE CHARTER OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK.

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. The legislative powers of the Corporation of the city of New York shall be vested in a Board of Aldermen and a Board of Councilmen, who, together, shall form the Common Council of the city.

The Board of Aldermen shall consist of one Alderman from each ward, who shall be elected by the people of the respective wards for two years. The Board of Councilmen shall consist of sixty members, to be elected from as many districts, who shall be sworn into office on the first Monday of January next succeeding their election, and shall hold their offices for one year, and shall receive the same compensation as the Aldermen.

§ 2. The members of the Board of Aldermen, first elected under this act, shall be classified as follows: On or before the first Tuesday in December, succeeding the next general election, the Clerk of the city and county of New York shall, in the presence of the Mayor, Recorder, and Comptroller, or a majority thereof, draw from a box, to be provided for the purpose, in which two ballots shall have been deposited, having thereon, respectively, either the word "odd," or the word "even," one ballot; if the ballot so drawn shall have thereon the word "odd," then the term of office of the Aldermen chosen from wards having an odd numerical designation, shall expire on the first Monday of January, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five; and in case the ballot having thereon the word "even," shall be drawn, then the term of office of the Aldermen having an even numerical designation shall expire on the first Monday in January, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-six. At all subsequent elections, Aldermen shall be elected for the full term of two years.

- § 3. For the election of Councilmen, the said city shall be divided into sixty districts of contiguous territory, and as near as may be of equal population, each of which shall choose one Councilman. The Common Council shall so divide the city into such districts, on or before the first Monday in September next, and thereafter, within one year after the State and national census shall have been completed, the Common Council shall, in like manner, redistrict said city.
- § 4. Every act, resolution, or ordinance, appropriating money, or involving the expenditure of money, not rendered imperative under the provisions of any State law, shall originate in the Board of Councilmen; but the Board of Aldermen may propose, or concur with amendments, as in other cases.
- § 5. A vote of two-thirds of all the members elected to each Board shall be necessary to pass any act, ordinance, or resolution of the Common Council, which shall have been returned by the Mayor with his objections.
- § 6. No Alderman shall hereafter sit, or act as Judge of the Court of Oyer and Terminer, or in the Courts of General or Special Sessions in the city and county of New York; but this section shall not prevent his exercising the power of a magistrate, in the arrest, commitment, or bailing of offenders, except that he can not let the bail, or discharge a person arrested or committed by another magistrate.
- § 7. All ferries, docks, piers, and slips shall be leased; and all leases and sales of public property and franchises (other than grants of lands under water, to which the owners of the upland shall have a pre-emption right), shall be made by public auction, and to the highest bidder, who will give adequate security (no lease hereafter given, except as the same may be required by covenants of the Corporation already existing, shall be for a longer period than ten years, and all ferry leases shall be revocable by the Common Council, for mismanagement, or neglect to provide adequate accommodations). All persons requiring any ferry lease or franchise, under the provisions of this act, shall be required to purchase, at a fair appraised valuation, the boats, buildings, and other property of the former lessees, actually necessary for the purposes of such ferry. Previous notice of all sales referred to in this section shall be given, under the direction of the Comptroller, for thirty days, in the newspapers employed by the Corporation.

- § 9. No money shall be expended by the Corporation for any celebration, procession, or entertainment of any kind; or on any occasion, except for the celebration of the anniversary of the National Independence; the twenty-fifth of November, "Evacuation Day," and the anniversary of the birthday of Washington, unless by the vote of three-fourths of all the members elected in each Board of the Common Council.

- § 12. All work to be done, and all supplies to be furnished by the Corporation, involving an expenditure of more than two hundred and fifty dollars, shall be by contract, founded on sealed bids or proposals, made in compliance with public notice, for the full period of ten days; and all such contracts, when given, shall be given to the lowest bidder, with adequate security. All such bids or proposals shall be opened by the heads of departments advertising for them, in the presence of the Comptroller, and such of the parties making them as may desire to be present.

Every person offending against either of the provisions of this section, shall be a competent witness against any other person offending in the same transaction, and may be compelled to appear and give evidence before any Grand Jury, or in any court, in the same manner as other persons; but the testimony so given shall not be used in any prosecution or proceeding, civil or criminal, against the person so testifying.

- § 15. No contract by the Supervisors shall be valid unless expressly authorized by statute, and such as are authorized must be made in the manner provided in the twelfth section of this act.

^{*}The amended charter of 1857 provided for the annual election of six Councilmen from each of the then four Senatorial Districts of this city, making twenty-four members in the Board. By an act of the Legislature (subsequent to the taking of the Census in 1865, which gave the city an additional Senatorial District), the number was reduced to five from each of the five Senatorial Districts, making the number of members constituting the Board twenty-five. In 1867, the Legislature passed an act continuing the members of the Board of Councilmen for that year in office for the year 1868. At the charter election, in December, 1867, five persons were nominated and elected in each Senatorial District; and, in addition, a sixth candidate was nominated in each district, independent of the regular nomines, and was also elected. A litigation ensued between the twenty-five members elected in December, 1867, and the twenty-five holding over under authority of the State Legislature, which resulted in

- IV. No motion or resolution shall be debated or put unless it be seconded, nor until it be stated by the President; and every such motion shall be reduced to writing, if any member desire it.

- V. When the Board shall be equally divided, including the vote of the President, the question shall be lost.
- VI. A motion or a resolution may be withdrawn at any time, before action is had on it, by consent of the Board.
- VII. All questions relating to priority of business shall be decided by the President without debate.
- VIII. The President shall preserve order and decorum, and decide all questions of order, subject to an appeal to the Board.
- IX. Whenever the President shall wish to leave the chair, he may substitute a member in his place; but such substitution shall not continue beyond the day on which it is made.

- 1. A Standing Committee.
- 2. A Select Committee.
- 3. A Committee of the Whole.

XVIII. A motion to refer or lay on the table, until it is decided, shall preclude all amendments or debate.

A motion to postpone, until it is decided, shall preclude all amendments of the main question.

A motion to adjourn shall always be in order; and that and a motion for the call of the Board shall be decided without debate; but no motion whatever, except to admit a member to explain his vote, shall be entertained by the Chair, after the ayes and noes shall have been ordered, until the result of the vote shall have been announced by the Chair.

XIX. No act, resolution, or ordinance sent from the Board of Aldermen shall be called up for final passage on the same day it is presented to this Board, unless by the consent of thirteen members; nor shall it be acted upon the same day it passed the other Board, unless by consent of twothirds of the members, except in case of invasion, insurrection, pestilence, or in such cases as do not conflict with the charter.

XX. It shall be the duty of the Clerk to publish all ordinances and amendments of ordinances which shall be passed, and also the proceedings, in the newspapers employed by the Corporation, except such parts as may require secrecy; and whenever a vote shall be taken upon the passage of a resolution or ordinance which shall contemplate any specific improvements, or involve the sale, disposition, or appropriation of public property, or the expenditure of public money, or the income therefrom, or lay any tax or assessment, he shall, before the same is sent to the other Board, and immediately after adjournment, cause the same to be published with the ayes and nays, with the names of the persons voting for and against the same, in at least two newspapers, as a part of the proceedings, and shall thereafter cause the same to be engrossed and certified; and send to the other Board every act, resolution, or ordinance which has originated in and passed this Board, and which requires a concurrent vote of the Board of Aldermen; and shall deliver to the Mayor, certified in like manner, all such acts, ordinances, and resolutions which shall have been received from the Board of Aldermen and concurred in by this Board, and which are required to be submitted to him for his approval; and shall certify to the other Board the proceedings of this Board in reference to all acts or business originating in the other Board.

XXI. It shall be the duty of the Clerk to make and keep a list of all messages, acts, resolutions, ordinances, and reports, not finally or specially disposed of, in order of priority, which list shall be the "General Orders."

XXII. Every member who shall be present when a question is put, shall vote thereon, unless the Board shall excuse him, or unless he be immediately interested in the question, in which case he shall not vote. But no member, on a taking of the ayes and noes, shall be permitted to vote, unless present when his name is called in regular order, except by consent of a majority of the members present.

XXIII. Any member may move for a reconsideration, provided he do so at the time of the next meeting, and while the act, resolution, or ordinance is in possession of the Board; such motion having been once put and lost shall not be renewed except by the consent of thirteen members.

XXIV. Every member, previous to speaking, shall rise in his place and address the President.

XXV. When two or more members rise at the same time, the President shall name the member who is to speak first.

XXVI. No person shall speak more than twice to the same question, without leave from the Board, nor more than once until every member choosing to speak shall have spoken.

XXVII. A member called to order shall immediately sit down, and the Chair shall decide the point of order; and the Board, if appealed to on such or any other decision, shall decide the same without debate. If there be no appeal, the decision of the Chair shall be submitted to.

XXVIII. The previous question shall be admitted only when demanded by a majority of the members present, and until decided shall preclude all amendment or debate, and must be put in this form: "Shall the main question be now put?"

XXIX. When the previous question shall have been ordered, and there shall be amendments pending, the question shall first be taken upon such amendments in their order, and then upon the main question, without further debate or amendment.

XXX. The quota of patrolmen for the county of New York, and whose services are to be paid for by the contribution of said county to the Metropolitan Police Fund, shall not exceed one thousand eight hundred, and such additional numbers as the Board of Supervisors of said county shall, by resolutions, determine to be necessary. The quota of patrolmen for the city of Brooklyn, and whose services are to be paid for by the contribution of said city to the general Police Fund, shall not exceed three hundred, unless Upon proper representation of any such action of any of the above towns or villages, the Board of Supervisors of the county in which such town is situated, or the trustees of such incorporated village, shall cause the sum so voted to be collected with the other expenses of said town or village. A special town meeting or village election, for the purpose or purposes aforesaid, may at any time be held, if required, in the manner provided by law for special town meetings, as now authorized in respective incorporated villages within the said district. But unless so voted as aforesaid, the counties of Richmond, Westchester, and Queens, and such towns in the county of Kings as are not within the bounds of the city of Brooklyn, shall not become liable to the imposition of any tax, for the general or partial expenses of the Board of Metropolitan Police, provided for or incurred by this act, and only in any case according to the provisions of voting aforesaid, and then such proportion of the general or partial expenses is to be imposed upon the town or towns so voting, in proportion to the number of patrolmen employed by such town or towns. The number of patrolmen for such district may be increased from time to time by said Board of Supervisors, upon like application. The expenses of such police force and officers, and a station-house or place of detention in any such district, to be estimated by the said Board of Metropolitan Police, shall be charged upon the taxable property of said district, and shall be levied and collected in the annual taxes levied thereon for town and county expenses.

§ 13. Each member of the Metropolitan Police force of the Metropolitan Police District shall hold office respectively during his good behavior, and shall be liable to removal from membership of the said police force only after written charges shall have been preferred against him, according to the rules and regulations of the said Board, and the same shall have been publicly heard and examined after the notice to him thereof by the said Board, in manner to be prescribed by said rules and regulations. But no person shall ever be appointed to membership in the police force of the Metropolitan Police District, or shall continue to hold membership therein, who is not a citizen of the United States, or who has ever been convicted of crime, or who can not understandingly read or write in the English language, or who shall not have resided within the State during the one year next preceding his appointment. Any person arrested by the Police in the city of Brooklyn may be taken before a magistrate on Sunday, at the usual place of holding his court, for the purpose of being bailed, in proper cases, until the next public sitting of such magistrate, then to be taken before him, to be dealt with according to law.

§ 14. Vacancies in the police force shall be filled up as follows: Inspectors must be appointed from among those who are captains; captains must be appointed from among sergeants; and sergeants must be appointed from among patrolmen.

$ 15. The Board of Police of the Metropolitan Police District, whenever expedient, shall, on the application of any president of an incorporated village within the said district, or corporation, or person or persons, showing the necessity thereof, detail regular patrolmen of the police force, or appoint and swear any additional number of special patrolmen of the police force, to do special duty at any place within the Metropolitan Police District, upon the corporation, person, or persons by whom the application shall be made, contributing to the Metropolitan Police Fund, by payment to the Treasurer, not exceeding the sum of two dollars and fifty cents per diem of service on such detail of special duty; but the patrolmen so additionally and specially appointed shall be subject to the orders of the Superintendent of Metropolitan Police force, and shall obey the rules and regulations of the said Board, and conform to its general discipline, and to such special regulations as may be made, and shall wear such dress or emblems as the Board may direct, and shall, during the term of their holding appointment, possess all the powers, privileges, and discharge all duties of the Metropolitan Police force applicable to patrolmen. The persons so appointed may be removed at any time by the Board of Police, without assigning any cause thereof, upon notice to the person or persons who applied for the appointment as afore-

§ 16. The Board of Police may also, upon any emergency or apprehension of riot, tumult, mob, insurrection, pestilence, or invasion, appoint as many special patrolmen, without pay, from among the citizens, as it may deem desirable; and, during any day of public election, it may also appoint, to perform duty in the city of New York, not exceeding five hundred special patrolmen, who may be paid out of the Police Fund, contributed by said city, three dollars each for their services as such special patrolmen; provided, however, that each special patrolman so appointed shall make oath, before any Commissioner of Police, the Superintendent of the Police force, or the Chief Clerk of the Board of the Metropolitan Police, at the time of appointment, that he will not interfere, in any manner, with the election taking place on the day for which he is appointed, otherwise than by depositing his own vote, and providing that such pay may be withheld, and he may be duly prosecuted as for a misdemeanor, if the terms of such oath be violated; and during the service of any special patrolman authorized as aforesaid, he shall possess all the powers, privileges, and perform all the duties that may be, by orders, rules, and regulations, from time to time, prescribed. Every such special patrolman shall wear a badge, to be prescribed and furnished by the Board of Metropolitan Police.

§ 17. In every case, the Board of Metropolitan Police shall determine the circumstances thereof, and order payment of the annuity to be made by draft, signed by each Trustee of the said fund. But nothing herein contained shall render any payment of said annuity obligatory upon the said Board, or the said Trustees, or chargeable as a matter of legal right. The Board of Metropolitan Police, in its discretion, may at any time order such annuity to cease.

§ 68. 1. All property or money alleged or supposed to have been feloniously obtained, or which shall be lost or abandoned, and which shall be thereafter taken into the custody of any member of the Metropolitan Police force, or Criminal Court of the city of New York, or which shall come into the custody of any police justice, shall be, by such member or justice, or by order of said court, given into the custody of and kept by the Property Clerk of the Metropolitan Police; and all such property and money shall be particularly registered by said Property Clerk in a book kept for that purpose, which shall contain also a record of the names of the persons from whom such property or money was taken, the names of all claimants thereto, the time of the seizure, and any final disposition of such property and money.

any man disposition of such property and money.

2. Whenever property or money shall be taken from persons arrested, and shall be alleged to have been feloniously obtained, or to be the proceeds of crime, and whenever so brought with such claimant and the person arrested before some magistrate for adjudication, and the magistrate shall be then and there satisfied from evidence that the person arrested is innocent of the offense alleged, and that the property rightfully belongs to him, the said magistrate may thereupon, in writing, order such property or money to be returned, and the Property Clerk, if he have it, to deliver such property or money to the accused person himself, and not to any attorney, agent, or clerk of such accused person.

3. If any claim to the ownership of such property or money shall be made on eath before the magistrate, by or in behalf of any other persons than the persons arrested, and the said accused person shall be held for trial or examination, such property or money shall remain in the custody of the Property Clerk until the discharge or conviction of the persons accused.

4. All property or money taken on suspicion of having been feloniously obtained, or of being the proceeds of crime, and for which there is no other claimant than the person from whom such property was taken, and all lost property coming into the possession of any member of the said Metropolitan Police force, and all property and money taken from pawnbrokers as the proceeds of crime, or by any such member from persons supposed to be insane, intoxicated, or otherwise incapable of taking care of themselves, shall be transmitted, as soon as practicable, to the Property Clerk of the Metropolitan Police District, to be duly registered and advertised for the benefit of all persons and parties interested, and for the information of the public, as to the amount and disposition of the property so taken into custody by the police.

5. All property and money that shall remain in the custody of the Property Clerk for the period of six months without any lawful claimant thereto, after having been three times advertised in public newspapers, shall be sold at public auction, and the proceeds of such sale shall be paid into the Police Life Insurance Fund.

6. If any property or money placed in the custody of the Property Clerk shall be desired as evidence in any police or other criminal court, such property shall be delivered to any officer who shall present an order to that effect from such court; such property, however, shall not be retained in said court, but shall be returned to said Property Clerk, to be disposed of according to the previous provisions of this act.

§ 69. The persons in the respective offices of Superintendent, Inspectors, Captains, Sergeants, and Patrolmen of the Metropolitan Police District, at the time of the passage of this amended act, and who have taken and subscribed an oath of office, and the Surgeons of Police, are hereby constituted members of said Metropolitan Police force, and are hereby continued in office during good behavior, subject to such promotion as may have been provided by previous sections hereof, and to removal from office only according to the provisions of this act.

§ 70. The Board of Police shall, at all times, cause the ordinances of the cities of New York and Brooklyn, not in conflict with the provisions of this act, to be properly enforced. And it shall be the duty of said Board, at all times, whenever consistent with the rules and regulations of the Board, and with the requirements of this act, to furnish all information desired.

§ 71. This act shall take effect immediately.

The act amending the foregoing, see "Session Laws 1866."

TO AMEND THE METROPOLITAN POLICE LAW, CONCERNING THE POLICE LIFE INSURANCE FUND.

PASSED MAY 2, 1868: THREE-FIFTHS BEING PRESENT.

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Section sixty-six, of chapter four hundred and three of the Laws of 1864, is hereby amended, so as to read as follows:

§ 66. All fines imposed by the Board of Police upon members of the Metropolitan Police force by way of discipline, and collectable from pay or salary, and all rewards, fees, proceeds of gifts, and emoluments that may be paid and given for account of extraordinary services of any member of the Metropolitan Police force (except when allowed to be retained by said member), and all moneys remaining for the space of one year in the hands of the Property Clerk, or arising from the sale of unclaimed goods, and all proceeds of suits for penalties under the act hereby amended, shall be deposited and paid into the bank wherein the Treasurer of the Board of Metropolitan Police shall keep an account. The payments so made shall constitute and be deposited and kept as a fund, to be called the "Police Life Insurance Fund," and the Commissioners of Metropolitan Police are hereby declared to be the Trustees of the said fund; and they shall have power, and it shall be their duty, from time to time, to invest the same, in whole or in part, as they shall deem most advantageous for the objects of said fund, and they are empowered to make all necessary contracts and take all necessary remedies in the premises.

§ 2. Section sixty-seven, of chapter four hundred and three of the Laws of 1864, is hereby amended, so as to read as follows:

§ 67. Any member of the Metropolitan Police force who shall, whilst in the actual performance of duty, and by reason of such performance of duty, and without fault or misconduct on his part, become permanently disabled, physically or mentally, so as to be unfitted to perform police duty, and any such member who shall, after ten years of membership, become superannuated by age, or rendered incapable of performing police duty, by disease contracted without misconduct on his part, may be placed on the pension-roll of the Police Life Insurance Fund, and granted and paid a pension not exceeding three hundred dollars a year from the said fund. If any member of the Metropolitan Police force, whilst in the actual discharge of police duty, shall be killed, or shall die from the effect of any injury received by him whilst in the actual discharge of said duty, or shall die after ten continuous years of service in the force (such death not being caused by misconduct on his part), leaving a widow, the name of such widow may be placed on said pension-roll, and a like pension granted and paid to her from said fund so long as she remains unmarried. If such member, dying as aforesaid, shall leave any minor child or children, but no widow (or, if a widow, then after her death), the name or names of such child or children under the age of eighteen years may be placed on said pensionroll, and a pension from said fund granted and paid to such child or children, if more than one, to be divided equally between them; such pension, or share of pension, to cease on such child or children respectively arriving at the age of eighteen years, or whenever earlier discontinued by order of the Board. In every case the Board of Metropolitan Police shall determine the circumstances thereof, and order payment of the pension to be made by draft, signed as said Board shall direct. But nothing herein contained shall render any payment of said pension obligatory upon said Board, or the said Trustees, or chargeable as a matter of legal right upon the said Police Life Insurance Fund. The Board of Metropolitan Police, in its discretion, may at any time order such pension, or any part thereof, to cease. Pensions existing at the date of this act may be modified and increased in pursuance of the provisions of this section; the increase to take effect from the first day of January, 1867, or any later date, at the discretion of the Board of Metropolitan Police.

§ 3. This act shall take effect immediately.

Chapter 563.

AN ACT CREATING THE OFFICE OF "METROPOLITAN FIRE MARSHAL," AND PRESCRIBING ITS POWERS AND DUTIES.

PASSED MAY 4, 1868; THREE-FIFTHS BEING PRESENT.

The People of the State of New York, in Senate and Assembly represented, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. There shall be an officer of and for the Metropolitan Police District, to be known as the "Metropolitan Fire Marshal." The Board of Metropolitan Police shall appoint a proper person to be the "Metropolitan Fire Marshal," and one Assistant, who shall reside in Brooklyn, who shall take the constitutional oath of office, and hold such office during the pleasure of said Board, and until a successor shall be appointed and duly qualified by taking the constitutional oath of office. The Board shall also have power to appoint not more than two clerks, whose salary shall be fixed by said Board, to be known as the Chief Clerk and Assistant Clerk, respectively, to the Fire Marshal. Appointment to such office and clerkships shall be by resolution of such Board. In the adoption of such resolution, the votes of three-fourths of all the members, taken by ayes and noes, to be entered in the minutes of the proceedings thereof, shall be required. The business office of the "Metropolitan Pire Marshal" shall be in the central department of the Metropolitan Police.

§ 2. It shall be the duty of the "Metropolitan Fire Marshal" to examine into the cause, circumstances, and origin of fires (occurring in those portions of the Metropolitan Police District in which regular patrolmen of the Metropolitan Police are authorized and appointed), by which any building, vessels, vehicle, or any valuable personal property shall be accidentally or unlawfully burned, destroyed, lost, or damaged, wholly or partially; and to especially inquire and examine whether the fire was the result of careless. ness, or the act of an incendiary. The "Metropolitan Fire Marshal" shall take the testimony, on oath, of all persons supposed to be cognizant of any facts, or to have means of knowledge in relation to the matters herein required to be examined and inquired into, and cause the same to be reduced to writing, verified and transmitted to the Board of Metropolitan Police, with his report in writing embodying his opinion and conclusions in relation to the matter investigated. The "Metropolitan Fire Marshal" shall report in writing to the Metropolitan Fire Department, the Board of Metropolitan Police, the Unsafe Building Commission, to the District Attorney, to the New York Board of Fire Underwriters, to the owners of property, or other persons interested in the subject-matter of investigation, any facts and circumstances which he may have ascertained by such inquiries and investigations, which shall, in his opinion, require attention from or by either of said boards, officers, or persons; and it shall be the duty of the "Metropolitan Fire Marshal," whenever he shall be of opinion that there is evidence sufficient to charge any person with the crime of arson, to cause such person to be arrested and charged with such offense, and furnish to the District Attorney all the evidences of guilt, with the names of witnesses, and all the information obtained by him, including a copy of all pertinent and material testimony taken in the case; and he shall specially report to the Board of Metropolitan Police, as often as such Board shall require, his proceedings and the progress made in all prosecutions for arson, and the result of all cases which are finally disposed of.

- § 3. The "Metropolitan Fire Marshal" shall have power to issue a notice in the nature of a subpœna, in such form and subscribed in such manner as the Board of Metropolitan Police shall prescribe, to compel the attendance of any person as a witness before him, to testify in relation to any matter which is, by the provisions of this act, a subject of inquiry and investigation by the said Marshal. The said Marshal shall be, and is hereby, authorized to administer and verify oaths and affirmations to persons appearing as witnesses before him; and false swearing in any matter or proceeding aforesaid shall be deemed perjury, and shall be punishable as such. Upon the presentation of satisfactory proof of due service of any such notice, in the nature of a subpœna upon any such witness, and of a failure by such witness to obey the same, it shall be the duty of the Board of Metropolitan Police to make an order that the said witness be arrested and brought before the said Marshal, to testify what such witness may know in relation to the subject-matter of inquiry. Such order may be executed by any member of the Metropolitan Police force, by arresting and bringing such witness before the said Marshal; but such witness shall not be detained longer than is necessary to take such testimony. The "Metropolitan Fire Marshal" shall have authority at all times of the day and night-in performance of the duties imposed by the provisions of this act-to enter upon and examine any building or premises, when any fire shall have occurred, and the buildings and premises adjoining and near to that in which the fire occurred.
- § 4. The compensation of the "Metropolitan Fire Marshal" shall be a salary of five thousand dollars per year, and that of the Assistant Marshal twenty-five hundred dollars. The compensation of the clerks shall be fixed by said Board, but shall not exceed twenty-five hundred dollars for the chief clerk, and eighteen hundred dollars for the assistant. Such salaries shall be paid monthly by the Treasurer of the Board of Metropolitan Police. The Board of Metropolitan Police shall estimate and cause to be raised, as a part of the general expenses of the police, and in the same manner as the Metropolitan Police Fund is estimated and raised, all sums necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

- § 5. Whenever the words Marshal, or said Marshal, are used in this act, they shall be deemed and taken to mean and refer to the "Metropolitan Fire Marshal," unless otherwise expressly provided.
- § 6. It shall be the duty of the Board of Metropolitan Police to supervise and direct, whenever it shall be of opinion that the public interest will be subserved thereby, the investigations, examinations, and proceedings of said Marshal, and make all needful and proper rules and regulations in relation to the duties of the office, and the manner of performing the same, and shall detail any members of the police force to aid and assist in the performance of such duties; and they shall, with their annual report to the Legislature, submit a summary of the transactions, proceedings, and official action of said Marshal.
- § 7. All provisions of law creating, authorizing, or recognizing fire marshals in any portion of said district, except as herein provided, are hereby repealed.
 - § 8. This act shall take effect immediately.

REGULATIONS.

Notices of all issues of fact already joined and triable in the city of New York, with a notice that the same have not been disposed of, to be served on the Clerk, and be put on the calendar for the ensuing January Circuit.

During the first week of that Circuit, motions to correct the calendar may be made.

After that week the calendar will remain unchanged, and continue the calendar for every successive Circuit during the year, until all the causes on it shall be tried, each Circuit beginning on the calendar where the immediately preceding Circuit left off, and new causes to be placed in order at the foot of the permanent calendar.

After the first week of each Circuit [during which motions to correct the calendar may be made], the calendar of the causes which may have gone down at the previous Circuit and the new issues will be entered as part and in continuation of the permanent calendar; and so on, from Court to Court, until the end of the year.

These regulations do not affect the question of noticing the causes for trial, as the Statute may require.

Hereafter no causes will be reserved, generally, after they are placed on the day calendar.

No cause on any day calendar will be passed, except where the counsel is actually engaged in a trial of a cause in another court in the city, or in the Court of Appeals; and then only until such an engagement is discharged, or upon proof of the absence of a witness duly subpenaed.

Parties, by consent, may apply to the Clerk, and have any cause on the Circuit Calendar reserved generally, and set down for a particular day, before it is placed on the day calendar; and may, on filing with the Clerk a like consent, have the same placed on the day calendar, or apply to the Court, on a notice of two days therefor.

SPECIAL CIRCUIT CALENDAR,

At any Circuit, until further orders, any causes belonging to either of the following classes may be placed on a Special Circuit Calendar, unless the trial is likely to occupy more than one hour.

1st. Where the action is on contract, and the answer merely denies the allegations in the complaint, without setting up any new matter.

2d. Where the action is on contract, and new matter is set up in the answer, and there shall be reason to believe that the defense is made only for the purpose of delay, or where it shall appear in such action, by affidavit, that the cause can be tried in an hour.

To entitle the cause to be placed on such calendar, the plaintiff's attorney must give a notice of four days, to be heard before a Judge at Chambers, that he will move to have the cause placed on such calendar; and if the motion be granted, the cause may be heard on any subsequent Friday.

If the motion be founded on the belief that the defense is for delay, or that the cause can be tried in an hour, affidavits must be served at the time of notice.

The plaintiff's attorney must deliver to the Clerk of the Circuit a like notice one day before such Friday, containing also the number of the cause on the General Circuit Calendar.

If the cause shall actually occupy more than one hour on the trial, the trial may be suspended, at the discretion of the Court, and the cause be put down at the foot of the calendar; and the party moving the cause on the short calendar, may be charged with the costs of the term.

Causes so reserved may afterward be placed upon the day calendar, on the application of either party to the Judge at Chambers, (provided two days' previous notice of such application be given to the adverse party), or by consent of the attorneys, filed with the Clerk.

In announcing this much-needed and long-desired improvement, the Postmaster earnestly requests the public to second these efforts to improve the postal service by the general adoption of the house-door letter-box, the use of which will result in greatly increased rapidity in the delivery of letters.

It is hoped that those householders who have not hitherto provided letter-boxes will not object to doing so, as by that means, at a very moderate expense, they can promote the convenience both of themselves and their neighbors, and, at the same time, render an important aid to the public service.

THE COLLEGE.

THE FREE ACADEMY OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK, although Academic in name, was intended, from its very first inception, to furnish a complete Collegiate education.

It was found, however, as the number of graduates increased and spread themselves over our land in places where their Alma Mater was known only by its name, that the impression was made thereby that they had not enjoyed a Collegiate education, and this imposed upon them the unpleasant necessity of vindicating their claims to liberal learning, by explaining their status as graduates of the New York Free Academy. This cloud which rested upon the graduates began to cast its shadow upon the institution itself.

The number was increasing from year to year of those who repaired to Colleges to finish their education, not because of their superior facilities, or the overshadowing fame of their teachers, but simply to graduate from an institution having the name as well as the functions of a college. It was the general conviction of the graduates and students that it would be an act of policy as well as of justice to give the Institution the name to which it was fairly entitled, both by its course of study and by the act of the Legislature empowering it to confer collegiate degrees.

For these reasons, on the recommendation of the Board of Education, the Legislature changed the name to that of "The College of the City of New York," the change to take effect May 1, 1866.

An Act

TO ERECT THE "FREE ACADEMY OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK" INTO A COLLEGE.

PASSED MARCH 30, 1866.

The People of the State of New York, in Senate and Assembly represented, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. The Free Academy in the city of New York, heretofore established under the authority of law, by the Board of Education of the city and county of New York, and now under the supervision, management, and government of the said Board of Education, shall henceforth be a separate and distinct organization and body corporate, and be known as "The College of the City of New York," and as such shall have the powers and privileges of a college, pursuant to the Revised Statutes of this State, and be subject to the provisions of the said statute relative to colleges, and to the visitation of the Regents of the University, in like manner with the other colleges of the State.

- § 2. The members of the Board of Education shall be, ex officio, the Trustees of said College, and shall have and possess the powers conferred upon, and be subject to the duties required of the trustees of colleges by the Revised Statutes.
- § 3. All acts of the Legislature now in force in regard to the said Free Academy, and to its control, management, support, and affairs, and which are not inconsistent with the foregoing provisions of this act, shall continue in force, and are hereby declared to be applicable to the College hereby incorporated as aforesaid.
 - § 4. This act shall take effect on the first day of May next.

REQUIREMENTS FOR ADMISSION.

The examination of candidates for admission takes place immediately after the general examination in June. No student can be admitted to the College unless he resides in the city, be fourteen years of age, have attended the common schools in the city twelve months, and pass a good examination in

Spelling, Algebra, as far as quadratic equations,

Reading, inclusive, Writing, Geography,

English Grammar, History of the United States,

Arithmetic, Elementary Book-keeping.

No candidate can be examined for admission, unless he present to the President of the College a certificate in the form prepared by the Executive Committee, signed by the Principals of the Schools of which he has been a member, and specifying the age of the candidate, the Grammar Schools of this city which he has attended, the dates and the length of time of his attendance in each. If the number qualified for admission be more than can be admitted, the preference is to be given to those who have attended the Grammar Schools the greater period.

At either of the regular examinations candidates may be admitted to any class, to pursue the studies of any one or more departments, provided they shall have attended the Grammar Schools the requisite period—shall be of the proper age—shall pass the proper examination for admission, and also an examination satisfactory to the Faculty, in the previous studies of the class or departments to which they wish to be admitted. No person is allowed to be present at the examination for admission except the instructors in the College, and the members of the Board of Trustees; neither the names of the candidates nor the schools from which they are sent are made known to the instructors conducting the examinations, but each candidate is designated, during examination, by a number given to him on a card by the President. Only the names of such as have passed a good examination are afterward ascertained, in order to be inscribed on the Rolls of the College.

Candidates for admission to the Freshman Class must be fifteen years of age, and must pass an examination in the studies pursued by the Introductory Class, in addition to the usual examination for admission.

Students are not allowed to reside or board in the College; they reside or board with their parents or guardians. By removing from the city they forfeit their right to remain in the institution.

Graduates may become resident graduates and continue their studies at option.

THE STUDENTS' LIBRARY.

The Students' Library contains four thousand volumes, embracing varied and useful reading matter carefully selected.

The Library is open to the students every day throughout the academic year, from 81 to 9 A.M., and from 21 to 3 P.M.

The collegiate year commences on the first Monday in September, and ends about the beginning of July. It is divided into quarters of about ten weeks each.

Tuition, fifteen dollars per quarter, Vocal Music, German, and Drawing, each two dollars. Entrance fee, five dollars.

In October, 1849, the Rev. John Ryan, S.J., purchased ground on Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets, between Fifth and Sixth avenues, on which the Church and College were erected. The College opened in 1850, with ninety pupils; the academic year closed with one hundred and twenty scholars. In 1852, a parochial school for girls was erected and placed under the care of the ladies of the Sacred Heart. The parish children are instructed in the Christian doctrine, and are also taught the various branches of an English education. The ladies devote the Sunday to the instruction of such children as can not attend school during the week. The average attendance of girls is from six hundred to six hundred and fifty. In 1852, land was purchased, and a parochial school for boys was built in Nineteenth street, near Seventh avenue, which was placed in charge of the Christian Brothers. The average attendance is about four hundred and fifty. Connected with the Church of St. Francis Xavier are various charitable societies: the Conference of St. Vincent de Paul, devoted to the poor of the parish; a mutual benevolent society, composed of working men, designed for the relief, pecuniarily and otherwise, of its members in time of sickness; a sodality for men, numbering several hundred members, the object of which is to promote the practice of Christian piety; and a society for encouraging the youth of the parish in practice of the Christian virtues among the young men of the parish, numbering three hundred members, who hold weekly meetings under the direction of one of the clergymen. There are, in addition, confraternities of women, boys, and girls, each having distinct libraries of their own. The catechism is taught every Sunday to more than two thousand five hundred children, divided into separate and distinct classes, and every week a large class of poor children are instructed in the principles of the Christian religion. The Jesuit Fathers, in addition to ministering to the spiritual wants of the parish, and controlling the different societies, sodalities, &c., are also intrusted with the spiritual care of the city prison, the public hospitals, alms-house, work-house, and prison on Blackwell's Island, the house of correction on Randall's Island, &c.

The College building (not yet completed), was erected in 1862, and is one hundred and twenty feet long by one hundred and sixty feet wide. In 1862, the number of students was three hundred and fifty; the number now exceeds five hundred and fifty. The College was incorporated in 1860, with the privilege of a University, by the Regents of the University of the State of New York. The course of study comprises two distinct departments—the classical, and the English or commercial. There is, besides, a preparatory class, in which beginners are prepared for either. The classical course comprises three progressive grammar classes, in which students receive that training which will enable them to apply themselves successfully to higher studies, and the undergraduates' classes are four in number. These are Classics, Belles-Lettres, Rhetoric, and Philosophy, corresponding to the appellation of Freshman, Sophomore, Junior, and Senior classes, more generally known in American colleges. The commercial course, which is completed in three years, comprises the various branches of an English education, together with the study of the modern languages. A complete course of mathematics, chemistry, natural, intellectual, and moral philosophy is taught in the different classes. Conspicuous among the several associations of a literary character, connected with the College, is the Xavier Alumni Association, composed of graduates of the College, and other similar institutions in the country, and the St. Francis Xavier's Debating Society, which is composed exclusively of the students of the College. The students' library consists of several thousand volumes, many of them being very rare and valuable works. The College possesses a rich museum, containing a well arranged cabinet of minerals, many geological specimens, an extensive assortment of shells, and one of the finest botanical collections in the countrv.

The services of the professors are rendered gratuitously; and there are as many as fifty free scholarships. The museum, and the botanical, mineralogical, and geological collections are accessible to all desiring to visit and inspect them.

This College, though chartered in 1857, did not go into active operation until 1865.

Until this institution was founded, there was no school in the United States devoted to this most important branch of science. Heretofore, with few exceptions, smiths, grooms, coachmen, and others (although having no preparatory education) were, nevertheless, intrusted with the medical and surgical treatment of valuable animals. This evil led the trustees to found the present institution.

The Dispensary is open daily, except Sundays and holidays, from 10 A.M. till 3 P.M. The office for the dispensing of medicines is open from 8 A.M. till sunset. On Sundays and holidays medicines are dispensed from 8 to 10 A.M.

This institution was organized in 1790, and was the first of the kind established in this country.

The object of this Dispensary is to give the services of the physician and the necessary medicines to the poor and needy—the physicians attending at their own homes those whose ailments prevent them from going to the Dispensary. No price is asked—no money taken—the only requisite is that the applicant should have some bodily ailment that may be cured or alleviated by the science of medicine or surgery.

The present building, on the corner of White and Centre streets, was erected in 1830. After nearly forty years of usefulness, it is found to be no longer serviceable; in the judgment of the Trustees, a new one, offering larger and better accommodations, has become an absolute necessity, and the managers are now energetically engaged in the effort to realize sufficient means to creet the new Dispensary building.

An Attending Physician for each class is present at the hour above specified, to treat patients able to attend at the Dispensary.

The Visiting Physicians are at the Dispensary at least twice each day. A register is kept at the building to receive the name and residence of applicants who are too sick to come to the Dispensary.

The Apothecary is in attendance, to put up prescriptions, from 9 o'clock A.M. till 5 P.M. (except Sundays), from the 1st of October to the 1st of March; and, during the remainder of the year, from 8 A.M. to 6 P.M. On Sunday, from 9 to 10 A.M., and from 1 to 2 P.M.

The rooms of the Dispensary are open at hours corresponding to those of the attendance of the Apothecary. Patients are not treated at the building on Sunday; but applications are received for the services of the Visiting Physicians, and their prescriptions dispensed, at the hours stated above.

^{*} The House Physician has charge of Vaccination at the Dispensary.

This institution furnishes, without charge, medical and surgical aid and medicines to the sick poor of the Eighteenth and Twenty-first Wards.

It is designed to relieve and restore to health and labor the poor who are afflicted by sickness.

It restores to many their only means of support, and thus prevents pauperism and crime.

It vaccinates all who apply, and furnishes vaccine matter, free of charge, to physicians in any part of the State.

It is a most important sanitary protector of the citizens of these wards, and by far the most inexpensive.

It looks after and checks the spread of contagious diseases—the Visiting Physicians being the first to be apprised of their existence and apply the remedy.

It, therefore, is a protector of the lives and health of our citizens.

It is economical to the taxpayers, for it keeps many of the sick poor and their families from becoming a charge on the city, in the hospitals and alms-house.

Its managers and fourteen attending physicians all serve it without any charge.

It is dependent upon voluntary contributions for its support.

The benefits of this charity are not intended for any who are able 'o supply themselves.

The Dispensary Building is situated at the corner of Second avenue and East Twenty-third street.

All who desire to obtain a better personal knowledge of the necessity for such institutions, their practical benefit to the sick poor, and their claims on the liberality of our citizens, are invited to visit the Dispensary and judge for themselves.

OFFICE HOURS AND GENERAL REGULATIONS.

The House Physician is in attendance at the office from 9 o'clock A.M. until 3 P.M. to receive the names of applicants for the services of the Visiting Physicians, to supervise and classify patients, and to act in any department in the absence of the attending Physician; as well as to prescribe for cases requiring immediate relief. He has also charge of vaccination at the Dispensary. His attendance on Sundays and holidays corresponds to the time of the Apothecary's presence.

The Visiting Physicians come to the Dispensary at least twice each day, Sundays and holidays excepted. A register is kept at the office to receive the names of applicants for their services. On Sundays and all legal holidays they come once only, viz. 10 A.M.

The Apothecary is in attendance to put up prescriptions from 8 o'clock am until 6 P.M., Sundays and all legal holidays excepted, from the first of April to the first of October, and during the remainder of the year, from 9 A.M. to 5 P.M. On Sundays and holidays, from 9 to 10 A.M., and from 1 to 2 P.M.

The rooms of the Dispensary are open at hours corresponding to those of the attendance of the Apothecary. No patients are treated at the office on Sundays or holidays, but applications for the services of the Visiting Physicians are received, and their prescriptions are dispensed at the hours stated above.

The purpose of this Dispensary, which is one of our city's medical charities, is to supply medicine and the most approved medical and surgical services, gratuitously, to the sick and destitute poor within that section of this city which is bounded by Pike and Allen streets, First avenue, Fourteenth street, and the East river, from Fourteenth street to Pike street, the place of beginning.

It also gives great attention to vaccination, which is freely performed upon all who apply for it, without respect to the station, or to the pecuniary circumstances of the applicant. The great public benefit immediately conferred by vaccination induces this Dispensary to consider every application for it a case of emergency which fully justifies this course. Those able to pay for vaccination are always invited to, and generally do contribute to the funds of the Dispensary.

From this it will be apparent that the medical benefits of this charity are not conferred upon those who are able to supply themselves.

Any one who is desirous to participate in the good work of medical relief to the poor may do so by contributing the sum of five dollars, which will constitute the donor a member of this Dispensary for one year from the time of payment.

Donations may be handed to any of the trustees, or to the Treasurer, Robert R. Crosby, Esq., No. 118 East Twenty-fourth street.

This Hospital was incorporated in the year 1852, and was organized on the 25th day of February of that year by Sampson Simson, Benjamin Nathan, John D. Phillips, John I. Hart, Henry Hendricks, John M. Davis, and S. M. Innes, who will readily be recognized as among the leading Hebrew gentlemen of our city. The lot upon which the Hospital is erected was donated by the late Sampson Simson, and the Trustees also received from the late Judah Touro, of New Orleans, a bequest of $20,000.

The building, located in West Twenty-eighth street, is four stories in height, and extends through to Twenty-seventh street, and contains one large and several small wards on each floor.

Although the Hospital was originated by gentlemen of the Hebrew faith, and supported entirely by the Jewish population, yet the benefits of this excellent institution are freely extended to all—of every religion or nationality—and the visitor will always find, under the care of its officers, sufferers who widely differ in matters of religious belief.

Since the opening of the institution, over 4,000 in-door patients have been treated, and over 2,000 out-door patients have been visited and supplied with medicines.

and thirty Managers, two of whom are in daily attendance at the corner of Fifty-first street and Lexington avenue.

The Nursery and Child's Hospital was founded in the year 1854. Its objects were the care of the infants of wet nurses, and the daily care of the children of those who were obliged to leave them while they labored for their support. It had been discovered that nearly all the infants of wet nurses died, and that they were sacrificed to the children of the rich, who paid high prices to induce women to take from their own infants the nour-ishment intended for them, and bestow it on less healthy but more wealthy children. So readily was the want of such a charity understood, that in less than three weeks from the inception of the idea, ten thousand dollars were subscribed, and in less than three months the house selected was full, and many had to be denied for want of room. But the necessity for dividing the sick children from the healthy ones induced the founding of a Child's Hospital. In a short time the two institutions were merged into one. The arduous labors, the unexpected obstacles, the sorrowful cases, and the unmerited abuse bestowed on those who were devoting their lives to the task of saving infant mortality were sufficient to appall the stoutest hearts. But success attended every effort, and after receiving from the State the sum of ten thousand dollars, and also aid from the city authorities, the Nursery and Child's Hospital seemed sufficiently established to warrant a further extension of its charity. The numbers of illegitimate infants denied admission, in accordance to rules, appealed to the heart of the foundress of the Nursery. The other managers, not appreciating this need, she stood alone for some time. The city authorities, however, comprehended the necessity for a Foundling Hospital, and gave twenty-five thousand dollars, and the ground adjoining the Nursery, for a Foundling Hospital. But no sooner was the building erected, than the civil war broke out, and it was taken for a Soldiers' Home. At the close of the war it was the first hospital vacated by the soldiers, and it was then restored to its original purpose. During these years, however, the question of the proper management of Foundling Hospitals had been thoroughly studied, and it was discovered that the prevention of an evil was much better than its doubtful cure. Diligent inquiry proved that the mothers who exposed their infants were not those who were hardened by crime, but those whose sense of shame and remorse impelled them to infanticide and suicide. A Lyingin Asylum was therefore opened in the upper wards of the Foundling Hospital, and there, surrounded by kind hearts and religious influences, is born many a child who, but for such a refuge, would be cast out in our vacant lots or sewers to perish miserably.

The tale of sorrow, of misplaced confidence, of remorse, and pentience is told to one female, and the histories of those who have been restored to the path of virtue, though known only to the Managers, and perhaps the parent, encourage the labor of love; and, as time rolls on, and the charity extends, God still blesses and sustains it, and the feeling of opposition to the Foundling Hospital, once universal, is now changed. A large Board of Lady Managers earnestly labor together in the Nursery and Child's Hospital, which, as has been stated, embraces four charities: The Nursery, the Hospital, the Foundling's Home, and the Lying-in Asylum. The two buildings now full, contain three hundred and twenty-six immates. The connecting building, now in process of erection, will enable them to receive, in all, five hundred or more.

Each patient is expected to pay four weeks in advance, at the rate of $6 per week, for males; females are charged $5 per week. This charge, from accurate calculation, has been found to be less than the present actual cost of each patient, exclusive of any charge for medical or surgical aid.

The doors of the institution are always open to suffering humanity, of whatever denomination, regarding it as but a poor exemplification of the Divine virtue of charity to turn from the door any of God's creatures, simply because he may have worshipped Him at a different altar, or prayed in a different form.

The number of free patients, and those only able to pay a mere trifle, was one hundred and fifty-five.

REGULATIONS FOR VISITORS.

The friends of the sick are allowed to visit them twice a week, viz.: On Tuesdays and Fridays, between the hours of 3 and 5 in the afternoon.

Visitors are respectfully requested to retire when the bell announces the expiration of the visiting hours.

On Sundays, members of associations, &c., are permitted to visit their beneficiaries, and others, only in cases of extreme illness.

No article of food or drink is to be given to the sick by their friends; all must be left with the Sister in attendance, who will give or withhold it, according to the condition of the patient.

The city of New York has many general hospitals, as well as others appropriated to specific purposes; it also contains several under the control of nationalities and religious denominations. Among the latter, the Jewish, the German, St. Vincent's and St. Francis' (Roman Catholic), and St. Luke's (Episcopal) Hospitals may be named. Recently, the large and influential body of Presbyterians have organized such an institution, which has been liberally endowed by James Lenox, Esq. It has not yet erected hospital buildings; but the site donated for that purpose is that large and eligibly situated plot of ground lying between Madison and Fourth avenues and Seventich and Se

The plan of instruction adopted in this institution is progressive in character, requiring attendance at college during three sessions. Students in their first year will be occupied chiefly with the fundamental branches; working in the Anatomical Rooms, the Laboratory, and the Pharmacy; they will receive an outline of the other branches. In their second year they will continue the same branches, in their higher departments, and receive full instruction in Medicine, Surgery, and Obstetrics. In their third year the instruction in these three subjects will continue, and they will enter into practical medical work, under the supervision of their Professors, and will review the fundamental branches. Hygiene will be continued through the three years, and will be taught practically as well as theoretically.

Examinations are held at the close of each term, on the subjects therein taught, and a general examination takes place at the end of the third year.

It is the aim of the College to make its students accurate observers, careful practitioners, and thorough hygienists.

The liberal sentiment of New York has opened to women the great City Hospitals and Dispensaries, with their admirable Clinical Lectures. Among these may be mentioned Belleve Hospital, which receives annually from ten to twelve thousand patients, over five hundred being obstetrical cases; the Charity Hospital, which contains usually about one thousand patients, the large proportion being affected with chronic diseases; the Fever and Small-pox Hospitals, the Hospital for Epileptics and Paralytics, the Nursery Hospital, the Insane Asylum, the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary, and the Demitt and other City Dispensaries.

The New York Infirmary also, with its long-established practice, places annually between six and seven thousand patients under the constant observation and care of its students, thus affording unequaled opportunities for practical medical study.

FEES FOR THE WINTER COURSE.

Full Course of Lectures (each ticket $15)	$105	00
Matriculation Ticket	5	00
Demonstrator's Fee	10	00
Graduation Fee	30	00

College fees must be paid in advance.

For intelligent students, whose means are very small, every effort will be made to render the expense as light as possible. Communications from such students to the Secretary of the Faculty will be considered confidential, and meet with kind consideration.

Board may be obtained from $3.50 a week upward.

TEXT-BOOKS.

The following text-books are recommended to students: Practice of Medicine—Flint; Surgery—Erichesen's Surgery and Paget's Surgical Pathology; Obstetrics—Cazeaux; Anatomy—Gray's Anatomy and Holden's Dissector; Physiology—Dalton; Materia Medica—Biddle; Chemistry—Fowne.

Every student, upon matriculating, will be required to deposit with the Secretary a certificate of good moral character, from a physician of good standing, clergyman, or other responsible person.

 Λ full term of lectures at any regular Medical School will be accepted as one of the sessions of this College.

The College edifice in Fourteenth street was destroyed by fire in the latter part of May, 1866. By an arrangement with the Governors of the New York City Hespital, who, with great promptness and liberality, came forward to meet this emergency of the University, and assigned all the necessary accommodations for the purpose, the course of lectures will be carried on at that edifice even more effectively, the Faculty believe, than in the late building.

Pupils are provided for by the Institution in all respects, clothing and traveling expenses excepted, at the rate of two hundred and sixty dollars each per annum. Clothing will also be furnished by the Institution, if desired, at an additional annual charge of thirty dollars. Payment is required semi annually in advance.

The regular time of admission is at the close of the vacation, which extends from the last Wednesday in June to the first Wednesday of September. No pupil will be received at any other time, except in very extraordinary cases.

No deduction will be made from the annual charge in consequence of absence, on any account whatever, except sickness, nor for the vacation.

Application from a distance, letters of inquiry, etc., must be addressed, post-paid, to the Principal of the Institution. The selection of pupils, over twelve years of age, to be supported at the public expense, is made by the Superintendent of Public Instruction at Albany, to whom all communications on the subject must be addressed. Children of indigent parents, under twelve years and over six, may be admitted to the Institution by certificate of any Overseer of the Poor, or Supervisor.

Should objection exist to the admission of any individual, the Board reserve to themselves, or their officers, a discretionary power to reject the application.

The above terms are to be understood as embracing the entire annual expense to which each pupil is subjected. Stationery and necessary school books are furnished by the Institution. No extra charge is made, in case of sickness, for medical attendance, medicine, or other necessary provisions.

This excellent Institution was founded half a century ago, by the efforts of Samuel L. Mitchell, LL.D., Samuel Akerly, M.D., Rev. John Stanford, and other philanthropic citizens of that day. Its first act of incorporation bears date April 15, 1817. The illustrious name of De Witt Clinton appears as the first President of its Board of Directors. His successors in that office were Samuel L. Mitchell, LL.D., James Milner, D.D., Robert C. Cornell, Harvey P. Peet, LL.D., and the present incumbent, Benjamin R. Winthrop.

The school was opened in May, 1818, with a class of four pupils, which, in little more than a year, increased to about fifty. The first teacher was Rev. Abraham O. Stansbury, who was succeeded by Horace Loofborrow. In 1831, Harvey P. Peet was appointed Principal. Under his able administration the Institution has prospered beyond expectation or example, and is now much the largest of its kind in the world. Dr. Peet retired from the active duties of his office on the first of September last (1867), but still retains a share in the management of the Institution as Emeritus Principal, and as a member of the Board of Directors. In the office of Principal he is succeeded by his son, Isaac Lewis Peet, A.M., who had been the Vice-Principal for the preceding fifteen years.

For the first eleven years the pupils from a distance and their teachers boarded in hired houses in the city. In 1829 the Institution was removed to a new building in Fiftieth street, between Fourth and Fifth avenues. This building was three times enlarged to accommodate the increasing number of pupils, and finally, as the progress of population in the vicinity threatened to leave no room for safe out-door exercise of the deaf-mute children, the buildings were sold to Columbia College. In December, 1856, the Institution was removed to its present beautiful, convenient, and salubrious site, called Fanwood, on Washington Heights, about nine miles north of the City Hall. The entrance to the grounds is at the corner of Tenth avenue and One Hundred and Sixty-second street. Access to the Institution is by the Hudson River Railroad, which has a station at One Hundred and Fifty-second street, about half a mile from the Institution; and more conveniently, by the Third Avenue horse-cars to Harlem, or those of the Eighth Avenue Railroad to Manhattanville, taking at either place the Carmansville stage, which runs every forty minutes to the gate of the Institution.

The grounds of the Institution embrace thirty-seven acres, extending from Tenth avenue to the Hudson river. The buildings are admirably planned for their purpose. They are built of brick, with basements, copings, and lintels of granite; the principal fronts faced with vellow Milwaukee brick. They are in the form of a double hollow square, consisting of a front building one hundred and fifty feet by fifty-five feet (the main entrance looking toward the river), two wings standing back at right angles, each one hundred and twenty feet by forty-six feet, a central building of equal depth with the wings, and sixty feet wide, and a school-house, one hundred and fifty feet by fifty-five feet in the rear, connected with the other buildings by covered corridors. The buildings are all of four stories, including the basement, except the school-house, which has but three. In the central building, however, the two upper stories are thrown into one for the chapel, which is a handsome room, well lighted, both from side windows and a dome, and is sixty feet by eighty feet, with the ceilings thirty feet high. It will seat six hundred or seven hundred persons. Under the chapel is the great dining-room, where nearly four hundred and fifty deaf-mutes take their meals together.

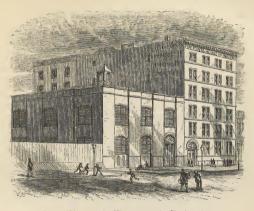

When Dr. Peet took charge of the Institution in February, 1831, the number of pupils was eighty-five. When it was removed to its present site, in December, 1856, there were about three hundred. The number returned to the Legislature, on the first of January last, was four hundred and thirty-nine, and several have entered since. There are twenty teachers, thirteen of whom are educated deaf-mutes, and about sixty other employees residing in the buildings.

The Institution was originally founded as a private charity, and it has received, chiefly from benevolent citizens of New York, many thousands of dollars, in the form of donations, subscriptions, and legacies. But private benevolence very soon proved inadequate to provide for the numbers of indigent deaf-mutes who stood in need of the precious privileges of education, so long inaccessible to that unfortunate class of persons. The Legislature extended pecuniary aid to the Institution as early as 1819; and its grants have been continued, and made from time to time more liberal, till now every deaf-mute in the State, of suitable age and capacity, whose parents or guardians are not wealthy enough to pay all his expenses, may be admitted into the Institution as a beneficiary of the State. The law requires the State pupils to have reached the age of twelve years; but deafmutes in destitute circumstances, between the ages of six and twelve, may be placed in the Institution at the expense of their respective counties. These two classes, the State pupils and county pupils, embrace nearly ninetenths of all the pupils of the Institution. Twenty-five are beneficiaries of the State of New Jersey, and twenty-eight are supported by their own friends. The New York State and county pupils are from every part of the State. One hundred and twenty-two are from the city of New York, fortytwo from the county of Kings, and the rest from more remote parts of the State.

The system of instruction is based on an expanded and improved language of signs (or gestures) as the principal means, while written language is the object of instruction. It is held that the teaching articulation to the deaf and dumb is, in most cases, time and labor wasted. Lessons in articulation are, however, given to the two classes of the semi-deaf and the semi-mute (those who learned to speak before they became deaf) who are judged likely to be benefited by such instruction.

The regular course of instruction is eight years, at the end of which the deaf-mute pupil usually returns to his or her friends, able to converse easily and rapidly with intimate friends by the manual alphabet, and with strangers by writing; to read books and newspapers, and to transact business by means of a pen or pencil.

Some of the more diligent and gifted are retained three years longer in the High Class, the members of which study such branches as Natural Science, Logic, and the Mathematics, and some of them French, Latin, and Greek. This class has proved a valuable nursery of teachers for this and other institutions.

The Five Points' House of Industry is located at No. 155 Worth street, New York city. The particular objects and purposes of this association are:

- I. To assist the destitute to support themselves, by providing for them employment, protection, and instruction, according to their necessities.
- II. To provide partial or entire support, with suitable instruction, to children and others incapable of self-support, and not satisfactorily provided for by their parents, guardians, or by existing institutions.
- III. To imbue the objects of its care with the pure principles of Christianity, as revealed in the Holy Scriptures, without bias from the distinctive peculiarities of any individual sect.

The institution was incorporated March 3, 1854. It is supported by the voluntary contributions of the charitably disposed, and is not in any way sectarian.

The House of Mercy, an Episcopal benevolent institution, is situated on the North river, at the foot of Eighty-sixth street. It occupies a very spacious old-fashioned double house, standing in the center of about half an acre of ground. It was founded in the year 1854, by and through the untiring efforts of Mrs. William Richmond, widow of a clergyman of that name.

After having secured the home, Mrs. Richmond took upon herself the arduous duties of matron, in which position she remained for about nine years. Finding her health and strength unequal to the double responsibility of collecting funds and managing domestic affairs, it was thought best by the trustees, with Mrs. Richmond's approval, to place the institution in the care and under the immediate direction of the Sisters of St. Mary.

The Sisterhood of St. Mary consists, at the present time, of seven consecrated sisters, two probationary sisters, two postulant sisters, and four associate sisters. They are not permanently connected with the House of Mercy, nor any other institution, but are simply a band of women who have given themselves up entirely to useful work, and are devoted laborers in that field which tends to educate, reclaim, elevate, and purify their fellowcreatures. The daily habits and customs of these sisters are in strict accordance with the principles of the Episcopal Church, in which they were reared and by which they were consecrated to their Christ-like labor. One style of dress, which is very simple, is strictly adhered to the year round.

The adoption of a fixed style of dress is pre-eminently useful, inasmuch as their calling requires them to go into places of greatest disrepute in broad daylight. Thust is readily to be seen that this outward indicator of an inward purpose wards off suspicion, protects from insult, and is a necessary mark of distinction between its wearers and the unhappy class with whom they are in daily contact.

The Board of Trustees of the House of Mercy is composed of fifteen gentlemen, some of the members being clergymen of high standing in the Church, and others laymen of pecuniary means and undoubted benevolence. There are two attending physicians, two consulting surgeons, and one chaplain.

The first object of this institution is to have a watchful care over young girls between the ages of twelve and twenty years, who have strayed from paths of rectitude. At no period of life is the mind so susceptible to lasting impressions as during this. The entire management of the House is systematically of the most cheerful kind, and adapted to bring out the best impulses; but there seems to be an obstacle, obvious to all, which is that, having but one building, it is not possible to classify the inmates; consequently, all are thrown together, and this has been found a great detriment to the work of reformation. The city courts are constantly sending girls to this institution who come from the lowest places of infamy. It is easy to see that those who have been under discipline for months must suffer from such new associates, however watchful their guardians may be. In consideration of this, the State Legislature appropriated twenty-five thousand dollars toward a new building, on condition that a like sum was raised for the same purpose by the friends of the institution, which has been done. The annual expenses of this house are ten thousand dollars, which is raised mainly by contributions. All services rendered by those intimately connected with this institution are free gifts.

The success of this institution is written in the lives of those whom it has fostered; by referring to the annual reports and other recorded authorities, it is interesting to note that some who entered have returned to their friends, some have reformed, had places secured for them where they could earn an honest living, and have ultimately married and settled respectably in life. Neither creed nor country is any obstacle to their entrance here; indeed, the majority of the inmates is made up of all the different sects.

The statistics of the House for the past year are as follows (Ninth Annual Report, 1868):

Number of inmates at the time of last report		. 46

Of these twenty-five have returned to friends, eight gone to service, eight sent to hospital, three sent to other institutions, three died, thirteen left with permission, and six sent away, leaving the present number forty-six.

The aims of the Mission are twofold. First, to rescue fallen women from the saares and temptations which surround and entangle them, with the hope of restoring them to virtue and to society. Secondly, to save their souls from spiritual death, by pointing out to them the symbol of Redemption, as their only refuge for this life and the life to come.

To accomplish these objects, Christian men go out upon the streets two evenings in the week, with cards of invitation and religious tracts, trying, by kind words and urgent appeals to conscience, to persuade these poor despised ones to forsake their evil ways, and to come to the Mission Rooms, where a kind reception awaits them, where Christian ladies lovingly welcome them, listen patiently and sympathizingly to the story of their wrongs and their confessions of guilt, offer them simple refreshments for the body, counsel them in their various difficulties, and draw them to that Saviour who never turns a deaf ear to the ponitent.

MANNER OF COMMITMENT.

Truant and disobedient children, and such as require discipline for any cause, and those wishing to be provided with a home in the country, between seven and fourteen years of age, belonging to the city of New York, may be committed to this Asylum.

An order of commitment from a police magistrate, or a surrender from parents or guardians, is required as the condition of admission.

Children may be taken to any police court in this city by their friends, or by a police officer, and upon a proper affidavit that they are in the condition above specified, such order or commitment will be issued by the police magistrate.

When parents or friends desire to surrender children, it is only necessary to bring them to the House of Reception and sign the proper form of surrender.

The notice of commitment which is sent to parents, though sent in all cases, is of real use only when children are arrested by the police, and committed without the knowledge of their friends.

Children are kept only a few weeks at the House of Reception, and are then sent to the Asylum in One Hundred and Seventy-sixth street, where they remain until finally discharged. While in the Asylum, they are kept constantly at school six hours a day.

MANNER OF DISCHARGE.

Children committed by a magistrate to the House of Reception may be discharged by the same any time within twenty days from commitment, by application to him at his court; but after twenty days children can be discharged only by the Directors of the Asylum, and no application for discharge will be received by them except for extraordinary reasons until children have been in the institution at least three months.

Application for discharge must be made at the office, No. 71 West Thirteenth street.

INDENTURING.

Children having no friends to care for them, and those whose friends choose to give them up wholly to the care of the Asylum, are provided with homes in the country. Many of them are sent to Illinois, and indentured till of age. Girls are of age at eighteen, and boys at twenty-one.

No children will be removed from the Asylum without previous notice being given to their parents or friends.

Employers are bound by the indentures to provide for children in sickness and in health with proper medical treatment, sufficient food, lodging, and washing, suitable for apprentices; to cause them to be instructed in reading, writing, and arithmetic, as far as and including compound interest; to watch over and guard their morals; and at the end of indenture to give them a suit of new clothes, besides those in wear, and pay the girls $50, and boys $100.

Section 24 of the charter provides as follows:

"The Board of Directors shall be the guardians of every child indentured by virtue of the provisions of this act. They shall take care that the terms of the contract be faithfully fulfilled, and redress any grievance in the manner prescribed by law. And it shall be the duty of the employer, as often as once in every six months, to report to the said Board of Directors the conduct and behavior of such apprentice."

MISCELLANEOUS.

The average time which children are kept in the Asylum is six months. Some are kept a longer and some a shorter time, according to circumstances.

In case of the serious illness of a child, its friends are informed of the fact and allowed to visit it.

While at the House of Reception children may be visited once a week on any day but Sunday, between the hours of 8 and 12 a.m., and 2 and 4 r.m.

Visiting days for friends of children at the Asylum, the last Thursday in each month.

Address letters for the Asylum, "Station M," New York. Business letters should be addressed to House of Reception, No. 71 West Thirteenth street, New York.

The New York Juvenile Asylum was incorporated in the year 1851, and has now been in active operation sixteen years. It receives children from seven (7) to fourteen (14) years of age, belonging to the city of New York, who are committed to its charge for destitution, disobedience, truancy, begging, vagrancy, and incipient crime.

The requisites for admission to this institution are, a commitment from a magistrate or a surrender from the parent or guardian, with satisfactory evidence that the child is in the condition specified, and entitled to the care and support of this Asylum.

Many children whose friends desire to place them here and are able to pay for their support, are received as boarders, without expense to the city.

Children committed merely for destitution, and for the purpose of being provided with homes in the country, are retained a short time, for a brief course of instruction and discipline calculated to fit them for the relation of apprentices, while those committed on account of habits that require correcting are kept for a longer period, until they are believed to be reformed and can be returned to friends able to provide for them, or apprenticed with reasonable expectation that they will do well. This institution is strictly educational and reformatory in its character, and receives a class of children requiring, in some respects, a different course of treatment from those usually committed to the House of Refuge, being less hardened, more susceptible to kindly influences, and requiring less time for improvement and reformation.

The Asylum is located in One Hundred and Seventy-sixth street, between Tenth and Eleventh avenues, near High Bridge, where it has twenty acres of land beautifully situated, and buildings for the accommodation of five hundred (500) children. Its office and House of Reception is at No. 71 West Thirteenth street, and has rooms for the temporary accommodation of one hundred and fifty (150) children. Pupils remain here about five weeks before being transferred to the Asylum, and are, in both departments, kept regularly in school six hours per day. Before and after school, each day, they are employed in the work of the institution, and, at the Asylum, cultivate the land, make and repair clothing, &c.

Twelve thousand nine hundred and forty-two (12,942) children have been committed to this institution since its organization, two thousand eight hundred and eighty-six (2,886) of whom have been placed under indenture in country homes.

During the year 1867, nine hundred and thirty (930) children were committed to the Asylum, making, with those remaining January 1, 1867, a total of one thousand four hundred and eighty-one (1,481) in the institution during the year. Of these, six hundred and eighty-seven (687) were discharged to their friends, one hundred and eighty-five (183) were indentured, and twenty-four (24) transferred to other institutions. The average number for the year was six hundred and eighteen (618).

Only two deaths have occurred in the Asylum in more than four years, or fifty-one months.

The institution has an agency in the State of Illinois, and its Western work is confined exclusively to that State. Two men, residing there with their families, are constantly employed in finding homes for children, and in visiting those who have been settled.

The Directors of the Asylum are the legal guardians of these children until they become of age, and are required by their charter to see that the terms of indenture are faithfully fulfilled. Employers are bound to provide for the children in health and sickness; to give them at least four months' schooling each year, until they have a good common-school education; to watch over and guard their morals; and, at the expiration of their apprenticeship, give them a good outfit of clothing, and pay them a specified sum of money. They are also required to report to the Board, at least every six months, the health, education, and deportment of their apprentice. Children are placed only with families who are highly recommended by the most respectable citizens.

The city of New York pays one hundred and ten dollars ($110) per year toward the support of each child while in the Asylum. This amount does not cover the actual expense for food and clothing while in the institution, and the balance, together with the entire expense of the Western work, is obtained by private contributions.

Efforts are now being made to increase the capacity of the institution by the erection of additional buildings at High Bridge, for the accommodation of two hundred (200) girls and small children, and the Legislature has appropriated fifty thousand dollars ($50,000) for this purpose, to be paid to the institution when an equal amount has been contributed by private individuals.

The Board of Directors is composed of twenty-four (24) members, well known to the community as among the most prominent and influential philanthropic citizens of New York, and not only give their time to this work without compensation, but contribute largely of their means for its support.

The Mayor of the city, and the Presidents of the Boards of Aldermen and Councilmen, and Commissioners of Public Charities and Correction, are also members of the Board of Directors of this Asylum.

This institution is not a place of punishment, nor a prison, but a reform school, where the inmates receive such instruction and training as are best adapted to form and perpetuate a virtuous character, to establish habits of industry, and to advance them in those branches of knowledge which are taught in the common schools of the State.

They are, accordingly, provided with a home every way pleasant and comfortable; are furnished with steady employment of a kind to enable them to earn their own support after their discharge; have appropriate seasons of recreation; are well fed and clothed, and, when sick, are attended by the house physician and carefully nursed; are regularly gathered into school at certain hours on five days of the week, and on the Sabbath are furnished with suitable religious and moral instruction. In order to accomplish the wise ends contemplated by the beneficent provision of the State, the inmates must remain a sufficient time to receive such training and discipline as will serve to reform their evil habits and to establish in them correct principles and habits of industry. The Managers, therefore, are guided in their decisions as to the term during which inmates shall be retained in the House by their conduct while confined, and, with a due regard to the previous history of the inmate, either prolong or shorten the period of confinement according to the circumstances of greater or less delinquency in each case. Applications for the discharge of inmates are frequently made within a few weeks after their commitment, which, however, can not be entertained. Only in special cases, the circumstances of which can be stated at the city office, will applications be received by the Indenturing Committee under twelve months from the date of committal.

Parents, guardians, and other near friends of those children sent from the cities of New York and Brooklyn, are permitted to visit them once in three months, and on their first visit will receive a card designating these periods. Where friends reside at a distance from the city, they will be permitted to see their children at any time they are in the city, provided their visits are not oftener than once in three months. If unable, from residing at too great a distance, to visit their children, they will be permitted to write to them once within the prescribed period, and to receive letters in return.

In case of the serious illness of any child, the friends will at once be advised of its condition.

The House of Refuge is on Randall's Island, in the Twelfth Ward of the city of New York, and the ferry at the foot of East One Hundred and Seventeenth street can be reached at all hours, either by the Second or Third Avenue Railroad. The city office is at No. 516 Broadway, opposite the St. Nicholas Hotel, and is open between the hours of 9 A.M. and 4 P.M., where the relatives and friends of children can procure information respecting their welfare.

The Union Home and School is the first institution established in the country to take care of the orphans of the late war. It was established in the city of New York on the 22d of May, 1861, within forty days after the fall of Fort Sumter, and was incorporated by an act of the Legislature on the 22d of May, 1862. It has now over two hundred orphans, and applications for two hundred more, who will be accommodated so soon as the requisite room is arranged and fitted up for them. They have now two houses, one in the city of New York, and the larger one at Deposit, a village in Delaware county, New York, on the Eric Railroad. The children maintained by them have come from all parts of the United States. Some are children of loval men who, though Southerners by birth, joined the ranks of the Union army, and died in the good cause; the only restriction being that they must be the orphans of Union soldiers or sailors, or of men who have been entirely disabled. When their relatives or friends are able to support them, they are allowed to withdraw them from the institution. and many have been thus withdrawn. Many, likewise, have been adopted by patriotic persons, and our family, therefore, is constantly changing. The object of the institution being to relieve the widows of the charge of their children, and to afford them good instruction until such times as they are by some improvement in their circumstances, enabled to take them home or until they are old enough to learn a trade and support themselves. Since the establishment of the institution, it has provided, temporarily or permanently, for two thousand two hundred and ten orphans. The number received for the last year was four hundred and twenty-six.

The clergymen of all denominations are allowed to visit the institution and give instruction to the children, but are prohibited by the rules from inculcating or teaching any doctrine peculiar to any one sect, or to comment favorably or unfavorably upon any one denomination. The institution is open at all times and under all circumstances to visitors.

The Catholic Protectory is one of the institutions organized by the Legislature of New York for the purpose of co-operating with the proper authorities in a very important branch of the great public work of charity and correction. By thus associating individual with collective efforts, an efficient and economical provision is made for the material and moral wellbeing of a portion, at least, of the destitute children of the State and city.

The Protectory, by its charter, is empowered, and, to the extent of its means, even bound to take and receive into its care three clarses of children: all of which must be between seven and fourteen years of age.

The Board Meeting will be held on the second Friday of each month. The Executive Committee will meet on the Friday preceding, and the Education Committee on the Tuesday preceding the Board meeting.

RULES AND REGULATIONS.

Children may be admitted between the ages of two and eight.

No child shall be received without producing a certificate of health, signed by a physician.

Children shall not be indentured under twelve years of age.

Homes in the country must be invariably provided, unless there offer a good opportunity of apprenticing a boy to a trade.

Persons taking children must produce good testimonials of character, circumstances, &c.; a note from a minister is required, certifying that they are members of some religious denomination.

A boy is entitled, at the expiration of his term of indenture, to ——, which sum his master should pay by yearly installments into the hands of the Treasurer, to be by her placed in trust for the child. But should he leave his place before the expiration of his time, or so misconduct that he becomes an unworthy object, this sum, or such as shall have accrued, shall revert to the institution. This rule applies equally to boys and girls.

It is requested that the person to whom a child is indentured shall communicate with the Board as to his welfare, before the expiration of two months.

Six months' schooling is required for the two first years of a child's apprenticeship.

Three months' trial will be allowed. If, at the expiration of that time, the child is insubordinate, he may be returned. After that the Board does not hold itself in any way responsible.

A child placed in the institution by a surviving parent or guardian with the intention of withdrawing when at the age of twelve, shall be charged 75 cents per week.

No parent shall be allowed to withdraw a child whose board has not been paid, or who can not offer security for its future payment. This should be clearly understood when the child is entered.

No child shall be transferred without the knowledge and approbation of the Indenturing Committee.

HISTORY OF THE COLORED HOME.

In the autumn of 1839, a few ladies convened at the residence of Mrs. Maria Banyer, No. 20 Bond street. Their object in meeting was to take into consideration the destitute condition of our colored population, and to devise a plan for the alleviation of their unobtrusive suffering.

There were present upon the occasion, "Mrs. Maria Banyer, Miss Jay, Mrs. Wm. W. Chester, Miss Few, Mrs. Mott, Miss Miller, Mrs. Chrystie, Mrs. Goddard, Mrs. Innis, and Miss M. Shotwell."

The suggestion of the plan, it is believed, originated with Miss Shotwell; this was followed by a donation of $1,000 from Miss Jay for the acomplishment of the object.

"At a subsequent meeting, a Board of Managers was formed, a constitution framed and adopted, and the society organized under the name of 'The Society for the Relief of Worthy Aged Colored Persons.'

"The Board consisted of four officers, seven managers, and one adviser, namely: Mrs. Anna Mott, First Directress; Miss Mary Shotwell, Second Directress; Miss Few, Treasurer; Miss A. H. Livingston, Secretary; Mr. Parsons, Adviser."

^{*} From the last Annual Report of the Home.

Twelve individuals were presented at the first meeting as worthy of relief, and for the first four years the pensioners were accommodated in a building on the North river, known as "Woodside."

In 1842, Mr. —— Horsburgh made a liberal donation of $2,000, which formed the nucleus of a fund for the erection of a permanent building.

In 1843, the Society purchased the property on Fortieth street and Fourth avenue. On this purchase there was left standing a mortgage of $1,000, which was paid off during the year 1845, through the liberality of Mr. Horsburgh, the former donor.

The Society was incorporated by the State Legislature in 1845, under the title of "The Society for the Support of the Colored Home." A petition was also made to the Legislature for a repeal of certain acts passed March 11, 1839, and May 26, 1841, which appropriated $10,000 for a State Hospital in the city of New York. The petition asked for a transfer of the money named in the said acts to the Colored Home. The acts were repealed, and the money appropriated was transferred to the managers of this institution, "to be applied to the erection of a permanent building on the real estate belonging to the said Colored Home in the city of New York, for the support and relief of disabled colored sailors and other destitute and infirm colored people."

During the same year, a large number of paupers were received from the Almshouse, and in 1846 an agreement was made with the Commissioners of the Poor to receive at a very low rate all the colored paupers of the city, reserving the right to "reject such applicants as the resident physician should medically pronounce unfit patients for the Colored Home."

In 1847, Maria Shatzel, widow of Jacob Shatzel, bequeathed property estimated at about $10,000, to be appropriated for the support of a Lyingin Department.

In 1848, the Society purchased forty-four lots of ground on First avenue, between Sixty-fourth and Sixty-fifth streets, and began to erect more commodious buildings, which were completed in March, 1849. These are the buildings at present occupied. The following fall the inmates were transferred to the new Home.

In the year 1858, the number of inmates having greatly increased, the room used for religious service was found entirely inadequate for the purpose. A committee was accordingly appointed to devise and carry out a plan for a chapel. The building was erected under the supervision of the late chaplain, Thomas McFarlane, who kindly offered his services. This devoted minister, after ten years faithful labor among a people he loved, died in the summer of 1866. The expenses of erecting the chapel were defrayed chiefly by private contributions.

This building fronts on Sixty-fifth street; from either end of it extend, at right angles, the male and female wings, capable of accommodating one hundred and twenty persons each. These wings (four stories high) are connected in the rear by another building of two stories, which is divided into small apartments containing from five to eighteen beds each. The lateral wings consist of four wards each, extending the whole length of the building. Each ward contains twenty-eight beds. The basement of the chapel is occupied by the Physicians and Matron. The buildings form a hollow square, in the center of which is a flower garden. There is also, on each side of the wings, a plot of ground, one of which is used as a vegetable garden, and the other affords pasturage for a cow.

The wards are heated by means of stoves, and, until recently, the only ventilation has been that afforded by the windows and doors. This was found so entirely insufficient that the Board of Managers introduced, during the past summer, at the expense of about $1,000, a system of ventilation which has thus far given satisfaction. Neither the condition of the treasury, nor of the buildings, would warrant an expensive outlar.

Within the past two years, two very much needed improvements have been made—the introduction of baths supplied with hot and cold water, and the establishment of a complete laundry. To two members of the Board the Managers are indebted for these additions.

The Society began its work in 1839, with 12 pensioners; now 800, more or less, are cared for annually in the institution. The average number in the "Home" is 215, fluctuating from 150 in the summer to 300 during the winter. The "Home" consists of four distinct departments—Hospital, Home for the Aged and Indigent, Nursery, and Lying-in Department. The number of admissions to the "Hospital" is greater than to the other three divisions combined.

In the "Home" are many who have been with us for a number of years; one, especially, has been in the institution nearly twenty-four years.

The "Lying-in Department" has admitted to it, annually, fifty females, who leave, when able—some for places of service among respectable and Christian people; others, it is feared, for their old haunts of misery and vice.

The "Nursery" consists of children over three years of age, who can not be admitted into the Colored Orphan Asylum. The average number in this department is about twenty. While all is, doubtless, done for these children in the way of mental and religious culture that could be expected in an institution of this kind, they have not all the advantages that could be desired.

Many touching scenes could be drawn from the lights and shadows of the different departments, showing at once the exceeding sinfulness of sin, and the wonderful power of divine grace upon the regenerate heart.

The charity is designed for the colored poor of the city and county of New York. These are received on application to the Superintendent of the Outdoor Poor, George Kellock, No. 1 Bond street. All others must apply to the Resident Physician at the Home, and pay a stipulated price in advance, as agreed upon at the time of admission. Under these regulations, all who apply are admitted, provided they be needy, and willing to comply with the rules of the institution.

No special denomination is represented in the government of the "Home." The right hand of fellowship is extended to all. The greater number of the inmates being, however, of the Methodist persuasion, the services are generally conducted after their manner by a chaplain of their own church, John Arrell. Ministers and missionaries of all other religious denominations are, nevertheless, at full liberty, under the authority of the chaplain, to administer spiritual instruction agreeably to the desire of the seeker and in accordance with their own peculiar views.

The Reading Committee of the Board of Managers, and others, visit the sick frequently, and endeavor to comfort them during their sojourn with us, and to prepare them for whatever change may await them.

The Chaplain, Resident Physician, Steward, and Matron, receive a salary for their services; with these exceptions the aid is taken from the more able inmates, who are paid a pittance (fifty dollars monthly in the aggregate for their industry.

The institution is supported in part by the liberality of private individuals, and in part by a monthly revenue from the Commissioners of Public Charities and Correction. These gentlemen pay a stipulated price for the board of the pensioners admitted under their direction, but it is not much more than half sufficient to meet the necessary expenditures. The Legislature of the State appropriated $10,000 in 1845, and about $12,000 in 1866. No further aid has been received from this source.

The Managers have also received from the estate of Chauncey Rose, through J. Corning, $16,000, paid at different times.

Although many individuals have been very liberal in times gone by, and others still contribute nobly to this worthy charity, it is a subject of sad regret that this institution is so little known, and so little aided by the affluent of our city. Appeals, modest but earnest, have been made from time to time for help, but still the treasury is favored by few such donations and legacies as flow into the coffers of no more deserving, though more public charities. The responsibility of these deficiencies rests not with the Managers, but with those who have heard, yet refused to obey the just appeals in behalf of these obscure and much neglected people.

An effort was made in 1850 to give light employment to the more ablebodied inmates. A workshop was established, in which simple and useful articles were made by those having a mechanical turn. The resident physician reported subsequently that the plan worked well and was highly valued by the patients, who received trifling rewards for their industry. In consequence, however, of the necessary expense, the operations were suspended. It is a great mistake to judge of the success of such labors by the amount gained or lost in dollars and cents. With proper facilities and management, no pecuniary loss need result: but if it should, the incalculable advantage of employment to the mental and physical health of the inmates is more than a compensation. Many diseases are aggravated by, and others consist mainly of mental hallucinations, and in such cases diversion for the mind is absolutely essential to a cure.

Dr. James D. Fitch held the position of Resident Physician for twentysix years. In 1866, he was compelled, by enfeebled health, to resign the duties of his office. The reports of the Managers make frequent mention of his zealous labors in behalf of the temporal and spiritual welfare of those over whom he was placed.

In the year 1864, Mrs. Mary A. Wells, for eighteen years the faithful First Directress, resigned the duties of her office.

"Her failing health rendered her retirement from all active labors at the 'Home' necessary; but her absence is deeply lamented by those who have been long associated with her in this work of love, and who have leaned upon the arm of her strong faith in many dark and trying hours." She was succeeded by the present First Directress, Miss C. L. Westerlo.

We would also mention in this place the name of Mrs. Samuel J. Becbee, who has been connected with the "Home" from its earlier days, and who has, for twenty-one years, filled the office of Second Directress. In this capacity, at a ripe old age, she still takes a lively interest in the work.

Such, in brief, is the history of the Colored Home, the first and only institution of its kind in the country. During the twenty-eight years of its existence it has become one of the most important of our city charities. Its life has been a checkered one. It has had to contend against more than the usual obstacles that are incident to works of charity. Popular prejudice has, for a long time, been turned against the down-trodden race for whom the ladies here associated have labored. In the summer of 1863, "the rage of a lawless mob threatened the safety of the 'Home' and the lives of its inmates; but the eye 'which neither slumbers nor sleeps' was upon us, and delivered us from our peril, and to Him, whose everlasting arms have been round about us, we would render our humble and grateful acknowl-edgments." It is also a just cause of thankfuiness that these people at last are lifting up their heads in hope; that the dark clouds which have environed them appear to be broken.

The object of this charity is to meet every want, temporal and spiritual, of those who apply for assistance. Striking incidents could be culled from the reports, of those who have come to this institution from the lowest, vilest haunts, but have left it, washed and redeemed. Many do not end thus favorably. Some die without hope; others, with or without temporary convictions, go back to their evil ways, to return, after a time, to the Hospital, laden with the fruits of their iniquity. During their stay in the "Home," many of these give unmistakable evidence of sincere repentance, but being removed from religious influences, they yield to the enticements of their companions in crime.

HOME FOR THE FRIENDLESS.

Young females, of good moral character, destitute of funds, friends, or home, shall be received into this institution, by order of a Manager, or at the discretion of the Matron, until their cases can be examined, after which, if approved as worthy applicants, they shall be boarded and employed, till suitable places can be found for them, with the understanding that in all cases they shall conform strictly to the rules of the House, accept cheerfully such situations or service places as may be deemed suitable, and endeavor to acquit themselves creditably. Adults applying for admission after having been once provided with a good situation, will be required to pay fifty cents per week for board, unless it be specially remitted by the House Committee. Invalids may not be admitted.

Friendless and destitute girls, under the age of fourteen and over three years of age, and boys under ten, and over three years old, either orphans, or abandoned by their parents, may be received and provided for until permanent homes in Christian families can be secured for them, by adoption or otherwise. It is requested that those making application in behalf of children, present a written statement embracing such particulars as may be known of their history, viz.: age, name, birth-place, name of parents, occupation, religion, country, &c.; that a correct record may be entered on the Home Register. Also, that a line may be obtained from some regular physician, certifying that the child is in good health. Children for whom admission to the Home is desired, should have a permit signed by a Member of the Committee or Board. They may then be placed in charge of the Matron until their cases shall have been considered and acted on officially.

All inmates of the institution, of sufficient age, shall be expected—after putting their own clothing in order—to appropriate a suitable portion of their time to manual labor, while they remain, and to be under the control and direction of the Matron. They must at no time leave the House without her permission, until regularly dismissed. They will be expected to rise and retire at the hours specified, keep their rooms well arranged, be neat and tidy in dress and person, industrious during working hours, and listen attentively to such advice as shall be given by the Managers, Matron, or Visitors. They will also be expected to endeavor, here and elsewhere, to learn and perform faithfully the duties belonging to their several spheres in life, that they may thus become a blessing to themselves and others.

The discipline of the institution shall be strictly parental in its character. Unquestioning obedience is required of the children, and the order and decorum of a well-regulated Christian family shall be carefully observed.

Those applying for children or adults, must in all cases furnish satisfactory reference. In cases of children where adoption or apprenticeship is proposed, final action on the application must be referred to the Executive Committee, or a sub-committee, duly appointed.

A stated correspondence shall be held with all persons to whom the children may be given or apprenticed. The Managers of the institution shall act as the guardians of such children as are committed to their care, not only when under their direct supervision, but also in the case of death of foster-parents or of the unfaithfulness of any who may have them in their charge.

Application may be made at the Home-Wednesdays and Saturdays, from 2 to 5 o'clock P.M.

A donation to the Society of $20 entitles the donor to a life-membership, and to a copy of the Advocate (the organ of the Society) for life.

SUGGESTIONS

RELATIVE TO APPLICATIONS FOR CHILDREN AS ASSISTANTS, OR MEMBERS OF THE FAMILY CIRCLE.

In a majority of cases these applications are made either by those, or through those who, being subscribers to the Adocate, are acquainted with the principles of our Society, and actuated by the pure desire to benefit those whom they would receive into their families. But this is not always the case. Occasionally we receive applications from persons with whom the benefit of the child is quite a minor consideration. This kind of application has of late seemed to be on the increase, and perhaps it may not be inappropriate again to state what are the views of the Board on this point.

1st. They desire to secure for those whom they transfer to the guardianship of others, good religious, moral, and domestic influences.

2d. A kind, firm, judicious, and uniform treatment.

3d. Suitable instruction in the various departments of housewifery; on which account they greatly prefer to place such young girls as are not adopted with ladies who keep few or no domestics, and themselves take an active part in their own family arrangements.

4th. For the same class they desire such school advantages "as are needful for persons in the ordinary ranks of life."

5th. Persons applying for children must bring testimonials as to character, circumstances, &c.; and here the Society suggests the importance of procuring such testimonials—not from a man's mere business acquaintance, but from persons whose knowledge extends to his wife and family circle, and his social characteristics. These are main points of inquiry; and it is hoped those who recommend persons as fit to be intrusted with children will consider the serious responsibility which such a recommendation involves.

6th. Persons applying for children by letter, will save both parties much time and trouble, by at once stating particulars—the number and circumstances of their family, their proximity to church and Sabbathschool, the intellectual, moral, and social characteristics preferred in a child, the kind of work likely to be required, the amount of schooling likely to be received, &c. &c.

7th. In families where apprentices or young men are employed, a more vigilant oversight will be expected.

8th. Guardians and children will be allowed three months' trial, at the expiration of which, the child may be either indentured or returned to the Home.

9th. The Society will, in all cases, expect to hear respecting a child's welfare and conduct within six weeks after its transfer to a guardian's family. The non-compliance with this requirement causes them much anxiety, and the Secretary much unnecessary labor.

10th. For children under nine years of age, the Board would gladly accept good homes in either city or country; but those over nine, they seldom place in any but a country home.

BY-LAWS RELATING TO APPLICANTS FOR CHILDREN.

Persons applying for children must be regular attendants at a Protestant place of worship, and recommended by their Pastor. The children must live in the family, and regularly attend church on the Sabbath, and, when not too inconvenient, Sunday school. Only those approved by the Board or Executive Committee may select children.

If mechanics, or to teach any business, they must have recommendations from at least two respectable persons that they are capable of teaching them the trade.

Neither boys nor girls will be permitted to go to tavern or boarding-house keepers, nor where liquor is sold.

Girls may be placed in private families, but where there are apprentice boys or young men employed, a more vigilant oversight must be exercised.

Employers and children will be allowed three months trial; at the expiration of this time, if either be dissatisfied, the child may be returned to the Home. Girls over the age of ten, thus returned, shall be entitled to two dollars per month, or an equivalent in clothing; said wages or clothing to be accounted for to the Indenturing Committee.

Persons having children indentured to them, must provide them suitable education and maintenance, inform the Executive Committee of their welfare at least once a year, and, at the expiration of their indenture, give them such sum of money, or its equivalent, as shall be agreed upon by the Indenturing Committee when the children are apprenticed.

Should circumstances occur, by death in the family where the child has been apprenticed, or should there be other sufficient reason, the indenture may be transferred to another person, with the consent of the Executive Committee, or the child may be received again at the Home.

Those who have children sent out to them will be expected to pay the expense incurred in sending them.

This Institution comprises St. Catharine's Convent, occupied by the Sisters of Mercy, and the House of Mercy, occupied by destitute young women, of whom the Sisters take charge.

The average number of these is one hundred. They receive religious instruction, and are supplied with food and clothing until employment can be procured for them elsewhere.

The Sisters also visit the sick and dying poor in their own homes and in hospitals.

The State Prison at Sing Sing, and the City Prison in Centre street, are regularly visited by them, and they instruct the inmates in their moral and religious duties.

The House of the Good Shepherd,

Eighty-ninth street and East river.

This institution was commenced in Fourteenth street, New York, on the second day of October, 1857, by five religious of the Order of Our Lady of Charity of the Good Shepherd. By reception of novices since that period, the community has increased to seventy-five members and six out-door sisters, eleven of whom are engaged in forming a foundation of the Order in Boston.

Their aim is nothing less than to reclaim and thoroughly reform the most hardened, the most abandoned, and the most loathsome of the human family.

It is a House of Correction, attempting by moral means alone to reform the worst abuses and to provide a home, a quiet and happy retreat, for the immates of the houses of infamy. Although the sisters live in separate houses, yet one or more of them are always present, night and day, to direct and control the penitents in their various duties, striving always to gain their affection, in order to be able to bring them to contrition and remorse.

On application to the institution, so long as any room remains to accommodate them, young women coming from any part of the country, or of any religion whatever, are received without being questioned, and the same uniform kindness is paid, and the same accommodations and training provided for all, without the least regard being paid to the particular religion to which they have been educated.

As no force is used to compel persons to enter the institution, so they are under no restraint to remain; but, on application to the Mother Superior, can at any time leave, though, while under protection, they always remain within the inclosure, where they are trained, educated to useful occupations, and, when thoroughly reformed, the religious give them a perpetual home, or send them into the world safe, useful, and virtuous members of society.

The institution is divided into three classes, each of which is entirely separated from one another, excluding all communication between the respective inmates.

The first consists of Magdalens, who are penitents who have been converted, and are leading the life of religious under the rule of the Third Order of St. Teresa.

The second class is that of the penitent women and girls who have been received into the asylum in order to be converted.

The third class is that of the Preservation, composed of children who are in danger of falling, and mostly those of bad parents.

Another class has been opened this year for girls within the ages of fourteen and twenty-one, convicted by the Government.

The Prison Association of New York,

Office, Room No. 38 Bible House.

The Prison Association was organized in 1844, and chartered by the Legislature in 1846. It was formed on the suggestion of the Board of State Prison Inspectors, of which the Hon. John W. Edmonds was, at the time, chairman. Many leading citizens of New York took part in its organization, among whom may be mentioned the following, all now deceased: Benjamin F. Butler, William Kent, Theo. Sedgwick, John Duer, Ogden Hoffman, Theo. Frelinghuysen, Dauiel Lord, Archbishop Hughes, Bishop Wainwright, and Rev. Dr. Milnor.

The officers for 1868 are:

John David Wolfe, President.

Hon. John T. Hoffman, Francis Lieber, LL.D., John H. Griscom, M.D., Hon. Theo. W. Dwight, LL.D., Hon. Charles J. Folger, and Hon. John Stanton Gould. Vice-Presidents.

E. C. Wines, D.D., LL.D., Corresponding Secretary.

Cephas Brainerd, Esq., Recording Secretary.

William C. Gilman, Treasurer.

Abraham Beal, General Agent.

The above officers, together with an Executive Committee of twenty-five members, constitute a Board of Management.

The objects of the Association, as stated in the charter of incorporation,

- "1. The amelioration of the condition of prisoners, whether detained for trial, or finally convicted, or as witnesses.
- "2. The improvement of prison discipline and the government of prisons, whether for cities, or counties, or States.
- "3. The support and encouragement of reformed convicts, after their discharge, by affording them the means of obtaining an honest livelihood, and sustaining them in their efforts at reform."

The act of incorporation imposes important duties, and confers high powers on the Association.

Among its other duties, it is required "to visit, inspect, and examine all the prisons in the State, and annually report to the Legislature their state and condition, and all such other things in regard to them as may enable the Legislature to perfect their government and discipline."

The members of the Association are thus made by law inspectors of prisons, and the powers conferred upon them are stated as follows in the statute: "It shall be the duty of the keepers of each of the said prisons to admit the said inspectors, or any one of them, into every part of such prison; to exhibit to them, on demand, all the books, papers, documents, and accounts pertaining to the prison, or to the persons confined therein; and to render them every other facility in their power to enable them to discharge the duties above prescribed. And for the purpose of obtaining the necessary information to enable them to make such report as is above required, the said inspectors shall have power to examine on oath, to be administered by either of the said inspectors, any of the officers of the said prison, and to converse with any of the prisoners confined therein, without the presence of the keepers thereof, or any of them."

Corresponding with the three objects of the Association, named above, are three departments of labor, called the Detention Department, the Discharged Convict Department, and the Prison Discipline Department.

In the first two of these departments the Association employs a general agent to aid the Standing Committees on detained prisoners and discharged convicts. The agent visits frequently all the detention prisons in New York and Brooklyn; inquires into cases that need special attention; imparts suitable counsels and exhortations; calls often upon the families of the imprisoned, with a view to mitigate and relieve their suffering; examines complaints; sees complainants, and gets them to withdraw their accusations, where they are without foundation, or where the interests both of justice and humanity would be better served by such withdrawal; attends upon the criminal courts of both cities; hastens up cases that seem to require immediate trial; procures counsel for prisoners who have neither friends nor money to obtain such service for themselves: inquires into the antecedents of persons on trial, at the instance of the judges; procures necessary witnesses; obtains the discharge, without trial, of prisoners who are manifestly innocent; adjusts numerous difficulties originating in mistake, passion, drink, or some frivolous cause, many of which would otherwise grow to formidable proportions; very frequently heals family differences, and reconciles hostile parties by his wise and timely interpositions; receives prisoners on their discharge; furnishes needful clothing to the deserving; procures temporary board for such as require it; obtains situations for them; purchases tickets or gets free passes for those who desire to return to their friends at a distance, or go to work in the country; and performs other offices innumerable of kindness and philanthropy to the fallen and the unfortunate, for whose benefit this Association was organized.

The results of twenty-three years' work in the Detention and Discharged Convict Department, so far as they are susceptible of being represented in figures, may be summed up as follows:

83,314 persons visited in prison.

23,716 complaints examined.

6,508 complaints withdrawn.

7,216 prisoners discharged from custody.

14,481 released prisoners aided with board, clothing, tools, or money.

3,804 discharged convicts provided with situations, the great majority of whom have done well, regaining a respectable standing in society, and eating the bread of honest toil.

This gives a grand total of 137,841 cases in which relief—moral, material, or both—has been extended to persons who have been arrested and imprisoned, whether justly or unjustly, on a charge of crime. Besides the aid thus given to the accused and the convicted, relief, more or less extensive, has been afforded to thousands of persons connected with the families of prisoners.

But prisons themselves need reforming as well as prisoners. Prison discipline is a problem which still awaits solution. The world is yet in its infancy on the whole subject of the disposal and treatment of criminals. The investigation and discussion of this great theme constitutes the theater of the labors of the Prison Discipline Department. To facilitate this study and aid in the inauguration of the needed reforms, the Association is made by law the inspector-general of the prisons of the State. Many hundreds of inspections of prisons of every grade have been made; an immense mass of facts collected; numerous able essays written, some of them amounting to full treatises, on all important points connected with prison discipline; and material reforms introduced into the administration of our prisons.

A few of the improvements in this department, inaugurated through the agency of the Prison Association, may be specified in this connection:

The present prison law of our State is the work of the Association.

The punishment of the lash has been abolished by law as an instrument of prison discipline.

The right of inflicting punishment on prisoners is confined to the head of the prison.

Libraries, ample in size, and composed of well-selected books, are now found in all our State prisons and county penitentiaries.

Secular instruction, embracing most of the branches taught in common schools, is given to all convicts in State prisons, who need and desire it, by teachers appointed and paid by the State.

The dietary of our prisons has been greatly improved; and this is especially true as regards the supply of vegetables in their proper season.

The principle of rewards, as a stimulus to good conduct and industry, has been adopted as an element of prison discipline.

To reclaim and reform the criminal is now recognized as the true end of punishment.

Finally, there can be no doubt that many thousands of dollars are annually saved to the community, through the benevolent labors of the Prison Association, in a lessened expenditure for criminal administration, and the diminution of thefts and other depredations upon the property of citizens.

The design of this Association is the elevation of the moral and physical condition of the indigent, and, so far as is compatible with these objects, the relief of their necessities. The first principle of the Association is founded in the admission that the alms of benevolent societies and of private liberality are often misapplied and as often abused by those who receive them. To guard against these evils, it covers, by a minute division of labor and responsibility, the entire city.

Its arrangements are: First, a general division of the entire city into twenty districts, with a local Advisory Committee in each, one of whom is also a Manager in the Central Board. Next, it subdivides the districts into 350 sections, and appoints a visitor to each section, whose field of labor is compressed to a limit which admits of his personal attention to all the needy therein. It thus covers every avenue, street, and alley within the bounds of this great metropolis. It ministers to all, not otherwise provided for, irrespective of creed, color, or country, in a way to benefit the recipient, and promote the best interests of the community.

The number of families thus annually relieved varies, according to the pressure of the season, from four to fifteen thousand, containing from fiteen to sixty thousand persons. The expenditures correspondingly differ, being from $40,000 to $90,000 annually. During the twenty-four years of its organization it has relieved 164,000 families, containing 693,000 persons; disbursed among them over $1,000,000, and made over $00,000 visits. The labors of the visitors are entirely gratuitous.

All its sources are derived from voluntary donations and subscriptions. Every annual contributor to the association becomes a member, and is thereby entitled to the privilege of referring applicants thereto for aid.

The benefits of this institution are extended gratuitously to the indigent residents of New York city and its environs, as well as to all crippled soldiers who have served in the United States army. A moderate charge is made, according to the circumstances of other patients, the amount being handed to the treasurer to assist in defraying the expenses of the establishment, which is otherwise wholly dependent upon private contributions for support.

These benefits consist in supplying professional services and surgicomechanical devices, however expensive the latter may be, if essential to the cure of incipient cases of deformity, and in treating hopeful cases, whether congenital, the sequence of paralysis, or the result of scrofulous disease. Trusses are made to relieve ordinary and extraordinary ruptures, with reference to the special indications that may present. Supporters for women, laced stockings, and every variety of bandage are furnished the indigent so long as requisite for relief.

Children from four to fourteen years of age are received as in-door patients to the extent of the capacity of the institution; and, during their detention, they are not only medically treated, but educated and clothed, free of charge to the indigent. The only requirement of an indigent applicant for treatment is the decrepit condition of the patient.

STATISTICS.

Out-patients treated during the first five years, six thousand nine hundred; in-patients treated during the same period, two hundred.

The accommodations for in-patients have been limited to twenty-eight beds, in an ordinary dwelling house, and where they are now being treated until the hospital is completed.

Academy of the Sucred Beart,

Manhattanville, New York.

This institution is under the direction of the Ladies of the Sacred Heart. The society of which they are members dates its origin in France from the commencement of the present century.

The education of young ladies of the higher class is especially the object of this institute. At the death of the foundress, Madame Barat, which occurred in 1865, the Society of the Sacred Heart already numbered ninety-seven Houses.

The first colony of the Order arrived in the United States in 1818, and settled in St. Louis, Missouri. Other foundations have subsequently been established in the South and West.

Madame the Princess de Galitzine, having been sent from France to visit the Houses in America, soon after her arrival in May, 1841, conducted a colony to New York, where, in September of that same year, a school was opened in Houston street, under the direction of Madame A. Hardey. In 1844, the school was removed to Astoria, Long Island.

The rapid increase of the Academy, the difficulty of access, and other disadvantages, rendered it desirable to seek a more eligible location. In 1847, the ladies purchased their present magnificent site, known as the property of Jacob Lorillard.

The Academy has over three hundred boarding pupils. A day school is attached to the Academy, which counts nearly the same number of children from the surrounding district, who receive gratuitous instruction.

The New Roman Catholic Cathedral,

Fifth avenue, between Fifty-first and Fifty-second streets.

This magnificent building was projected by the late Archbishop Hughes; the corner-stone was laid August 15, 1858. It is situated between Fifty-first and Fifty-second streets, on the east side of the Fifth avenue, running back to Madison avenue. The building, with its appurtenances, will occupy the entire block. The site is the most elevated on Fifth avenue, there being a gradual descent both southerly and toward the Central Park on the north. A more eligible location could not have been chosen for so vast and imposing a structure.

During the years 1858 and 1859 the foundations were laid, and a part of the structure built, when the work was suspended until the accession of Archbishop McCloskey, who caused the work to be recommenced, and gave new energy to its prosecution.

The foundations are of immense blocks of stone, laid by derricks, in cement mortar. The first base-course is of Maine granite, similar to that used in the Treasury Building at Washington, and it rests solidly upon the chisel-dressed upper surface of the foundations. Above the base-course the whole structure is of fine white marble. It is from the quarries at Pleasantville, Westchester county, which have been leased for the cathedral. The architect says that it is of a very dense and highly crystalline character; producing, when cut, a very beautiful effect from the reflection of the faces of the crystals, especially in the columns and finer parts of the work.

The style of the building is pure Gothic or "decorated," which prevailed in Europe from 1250 to 1400, and is free alike from the heaviness of an earlier period and from the over-ornamentation and eccentricities of a later period. On the continent the finest examples are at Amiens, Rheims, and Cologne, and in England the naves of York, Lincoln, and Westminster.

The Fifth avenue front will be, of course, the finest outside portion of the building; and its decoration will be of a character unsurpassed in this country. The towers at the two corners will reach the height of three hundred and twenty-eight feet from the ground to the top of the cross. The following are the dimensions of the building proper: Extreme length outside, 332 feet; extreme breadth at transepts, 174 feet; general breadth, 183 feet.

The towers will be thirty-two feet square at the base, and of the same area from base to the point at which the form changes to the octagonal. The width of the front, between the towers, will be one hundred and five feet. The towers maintain the square form to the height of one hundred and thirty-six feet, when they change to octagonal lanterns or domes, fifty-four feet high, and then rise in spires to a further height of one hundred and thirty-eight feet, making three hundred and twenty-eight feet in all.

The central gable between the two towers will be one hundred and fifty-six feet high above the pavement. The main entrance, twelve feet in depth (being the thickness of the wall), will be richly decorated, flanked on either side by a large, painted window, and embowered in carved devices of religious significance. The width of the opening of the door is thirty feet, and its height fifty-one feet. It has columns with bases and foliage caps, and the arch is richly ornamented and fringed with a double row of foliated tracery. Terminating at the top in a mock finial, it will form itself a symbol of the whole front. The gable over the main entrance will be richly paneled with traceries, with a shield bearing the arms of the diocese in the central panel. The moulding over the gable will be crotcheted, and have large, rich finials of American foliage. Across the front gable, over the entrance, there will extend a row of niches, with statues of saints and martyrs, seven feet and six inches high. Above this will be a large rose or circular window, twenty-six feet in diameter—a splendid blossom of Gothic tracery, with a hundred shafts of marble radiating from the center, and holding triangular pieces of painted glass. Above this is the window of the main gable, richly paneled and decorated.

The towers at each side will be divided into three stories; the first with doors corresponding to the main entrance, the second with a window richly decorated, and the third with four small windows on each side. Above the square tower will be octagonal lanterns fifty-four feet high, with windows, and above this, as we have before stated, the richly paneled spires. The towers and spires are to be ornamented with buttresses, niches with statues, and pinnacles on the towers, so arranged as to disguise the change of form from the square to the octagon. The inside of the towers will be twenty feet in diameter and octagonal in form.

The transept fronts are divided into a nave with two side aisles with doors and windows with niche-traceries, &c. The doors are twenty-five feet wide by forty-four feet high, and windows twenty-seven feet wide by fifty-seven feet high. The height of the transept gables is one hundred and seventy-five feet to the tops of the crosses which ornament them.

The Madison avenue front is to be used merely for the entrance of the priests, and will not be remarkable for ornamentation, though the same general effect will be preserved, to prevent too great a contrast.

There will be in all one hundred and three windows, set in double tiers at the sides, the lower thirty-two feet in height, and the upper twenty-eight feet, giving a lofty and grand effect. They will be glazed, with double lead sash, with two thicknesses of glass, and with an air space between them to prevent the down currents of air, which are very disagreeable in many ordinary churches. The glass will be stained in rich and varied patterns, giving the interior that "dlm, religious light" which from time immemorial has been considered so essential.

The interior of the building will be divided into nave, transept, and choir. The following are the dimensions: Internal length, 306 feet; breadth of buildings, 96 feet; breadth of chapels on each side, 12 feet; total breadth, 120 feet; internal length of transepts, 140 feet; height of nave, 108 feet; breadth of nave 48 feet.

The nave and transepts have a central nave and two side-aisles, with chapels in the nave, with a width of ninety-six feet without the chapels, and of one hundred and twenty feet with them. The choir and sanctuary have a central nave and four side-aisles, with an extreme width of one hundred and sixteen feet. The height of the side-aisles will be fifty-four feet, and their breadth in the nave twenty-four feet. The nave will be divided from the aisles by thirty-two clustered columns of white marble. The arches of the nave and aisles will be of brick plastered and decorated in colors.

The choir will have five bays, and will be arranged with double aisles on either side of the central aisle. The chapel of the Blessed Virgin is in the aisle at the right of the central aisle, and the sacristics in the aisle at the left. The high altar at the eastern side will be of white marble, with a magnificent altar-screen of colored marble columns, with white marble niches and statues.

The main part of the building will be first completed, the towers being the latest portion of the work. When finished it will be the largest, most expensive, and probably the finest building of the kind in the country.

It is bullt, as were the churches of the olden time, by the free-will offerings of the Catholic community. Its total cost is estimated at four millions of dollars.

This magnificent building is 95 feet front on Fifth avenue by 165 feet on Forty-third street. It is capable of seating comfortably 2,000 persons. There are eight large school-rooms in the basement, and a Lecture room in which 1,200 persons can be accommodated. The building cost about $700,000. The congregation, which is a Reform one, was organized in 1845, and consists of about 400 male members, composed of the little of the German of the city. The congregation is also owner of one of the most beautiful of the many cemeteries adjacent to the city.

This Society was founded by its present President, Mr. Henry Bergh; chartered by the Legislature of the State of New York, April 10, 1866, and its jurisdiction extends over the entire State.

The necessity and value of such an institution has long been felt, and the great reforms already effected by it, in suppressing abuses inflicted on the brute creation, have obtained for it the favor of all right-minded people. It is purely benevolent in all its operations, avoiding politics and sectarianism in every form, and depends for its support on the voluntary contributions of the humane portion of the public.

A DESCRIPTION OF THE EDIFICE OF THE NATIONAL ACADEMY OF DESIGN.

The building for the National Academy of Design occupies the whole of a lot situated at the northwest corner of Fourth avenue and Twentythird street, eighty feet wide on the street, and ninety-eight feet nine inches long on the avenue. It is three stories high, besides the cellar. The lower, or basement story, contains—First, the Janitor's apartments, the floor of which is raised one step above the sidewalk, occupying the whole end on Twenty-third street; Second, the rooms of the School of Design, the floor of which is four feet lower than that of the Janitor's rooms, thus giving a ceiling sixteen feet high, and which occupy three-fourths of the whole basement story. The accommodations for the School are ample. It occupies three studies or alcoves on Fourth avenue, lighted by large windows, and a hall for casts and models, the whole covering a space of forty-seven by sixty-eight feet. The Life School occupies a hall in the north side of the building, twenty-seven by fifty-four feet, and partially lighted from a court-yard. The entrance to all the rooms in this story is by a door in the southern end of the Fourth avenue side.

The principal story is reached by a double flight of steps on the Twenty-third street end, and is entered by a large door-way, from which a hall, eighteen feet wide, runs nearly the whole length of the building. The whole Fourth avenue side is occupied by a suit of four rooms; the most southerly is the Reception Room, twenty-two by twenty-six feet; the next two, each the same size as the Reception Room, are for the Library. The most northerly is the Council Room, which is twenty-two by forty-five feet. To the west of the Central Hall are ladies' and gentlemen's Dressing Rooms; and a Lecture Room, which is immediately above, and the same size as the Life School Room, in the story below.

The upper story is for the Exhibition Galleries. In the center is a hall thirty-four by forty feet, divided by a double arcade, supported on columns of polished marble. In this hall is hung the works of Art which belong to the National Academy. Around this are the Galleries, all opening out of it; one thirty by seventy-six feet; one twenty-two by forty-six; one twenty by forty; one twenty-one by thirty—all lighted by sky-lights; also, a Gallery for Sculpture, twenty-one feet square, lighted both from the roof and the side.

Visitors to the Galleries will enter at the main entrance in the first story. On the left of a person so entering, is the ticket office; on the right, the umbrella depository. Passing through the vestibule, the visitor enters the Great Hall; in front are the stairs leading up to the Galleries above; four steps, the whole width of the hall, lead to a platform, where he gives up his ticket and buys his catalogue; from this a double flight leads to another platform, from which a single flight reaches the level of the Gallery floor.

These stairs, together with all the doors, door and window trimmings, mantles, &c., are of oak and walnut combined, oiled and polished. The halls and vestibules are floored with mosaic tiles.

On the exterior, the walls of the basement story are of Westchester county gray marble, with bands of North river graywacke. The walls of the first story are of white marble, with similar bands; and of the third story of white and gray marble, in small oblong blocks, forming a pattern of checker-work. The building is surmounted by a rich areaded cornice of white marble.

The School of Design, in the basement, is lighted by wide double windows, with segmental arches, each pair of arches supported in the middle on a clustered column, with a rich carved capital and base, and resting, on each side, on a carved corbel. All the other windows in the building have pointed arches, and those of the first story have their archivolts decorated by voussoirs of alternately white and gray marble. There are no windows in the upper story upon the streets, but circular openings for ventilation, filled with elaborate plate-tracery. The principal entrance is very high. A broad archivolt, enriched with sculpture and varied by voussoirs, alternately white and grav, springs from columns, two on each side, of red Vermont marble, with white marble capitals and bases. Under this, the tympanum above the door is filled with an elaborate pattern, in mosaic, of small tiles. The double flight of steps, leading to this door, is an important feature of the building, being entirely of marble, having, under the platform, a triple arcade, inclosing a drinking fountain, and being richly decorated with sculpture.

All the carving is carfully studied from natural forms. The flowers and leaves of our woods and fields have furnished the models for all the sculpture, which has been designed, under the direction of the Architect, by the stone-carvers who have done the work.

The builders of the Academy have seized upon the opportunity afforded them, by the erection of their costly building, to show, by actual example, the proper and only possible way of making a building rich in sculptured ornament. The stone-carvers have cut these capitals and archivolts with the feeling and purpose of sculptors executing independent and original works of art. The result, thus far attained, has shown that the only difference between a carver of good leaf capitals, and the producer of heroic human sculpture, is in the amount of his knowledge and power.

HISTORICAL MEMORANDA OF THE ACADEMY AND ITS EXHIBITIONS.

In the early part of the autumn of 1825, there was formed in the city of New York a "Drawing Association," for artstudy and social intercourse, which embraced among its members the greater portion of the artists then in the city. This Association prospered in such a degree, that it soon became necessary to extend its field of operations. The attempt to effect this object resulted in the foundation, on the nineteenth day of January, 1826, of the present National Academy of Design. The "Drawing Association," thus remodeled and renamed, adopted a Constitution and By-laws, and elected Samuel F. B. Morse, President; Henry Inman, Vice-President; John L. Morton, Secretary; and Thomas S. Cummings, Treasurer.

The new Academy was chartered by the Legislature of New York on the fifth day of April, 1828.

Of the twenty-five original founders of the Institution, only four are now living: Messrs. Morse, Cummings, Durand, and Evers.

The Society, having no apartments of its own, held its meetings in rooms generously loaned to them by the Historical and Philosophical Societies, which were then established in the old Alms-house Building in the Park, fronting Chambers street, which is now the site of the new Courthouse.

The first Annual Exhibition of the Academy was held in the year 1826, on the second story of a building at the southwest corner of Broadway and Reade street. One room only was occupied, and that a small one, being but fifty feet long and twenty-five feet wide. It was lighted in the evening by six ordinary gas-burners, which fact was advertised as a notable attraction! It was really notable as being the first instance on record of a public exhibition of pictures at night. This first Exhibition failed to pay expenses, and the members were assessed to make up the loss.

The second Exhibition (1827) was held in a room on the third story of the Arcade Baths in Chambers street, about midway between Broadway and Centre street, a building which afterward became Burton's Theater, and which is now the United States Marshal's office. It was leased to the Academy by D. E. Tylee for three years, at three hundred dollars per annum. The third, fourth, and fifth Exhibitions (1828, 1829, and 1830) were held at this place.

For the sixth Exhibition (1831) greatly increased accommodations were obtained in a suit of rooms on the third floor of the Mercantile Library in Clinton Hall, then at the corner of Nassau and Beekman streets. These apartments were leased by the Academy for ten years, at an annual rent of five hundred dollars; and here the Exhibitions from the sixth to the fifteenth inclusive (1831 to 1840) were held.

In 1840, at the expiration of the Clinton Hall lease, the Academy again removed, and this time went up town, settling for another decade on the upper floor of the Society Library Building, at the corner of Broadway and Leonard street. These galleries were larger and more commodious than any yet occupied by the Society. The annual rent at the Society Library was increased to one thousand dollars. The Exhibitions from the sixteenth to the twenty-fourth inclusive (1841 to 1849) were held here.

In 1850, the institution moved yet further up town, having purchased the property on Mercer street, in the rear of Broadway, with the lease of a lot on the latter street as an entrance. This site had been occupied by Browers' stables, and was the up-town terminus of the Broadway line of stages. A suit of six fine galleries was creted here, with a total length of one hundred and sixty-four feet, and a breadth of fifty feet. The whole of this property was placed in the hands of Messrs. Sturges, Leuppe, Edmonds, and Cummings, as Trustees of the Academy, and was so ably managed by them, under the charge of Mr. Cummings, that, after years of patient labor, it produced the first means of any amount ever in the possession of the Academy. After five years of occupancy, this property was sold for about one hundred and twenty thousand dollars, netting the institution a clear return of sixty-nine thousand dollars, and leaving, after the payment of all outstanding indebtedness, a balance of nearly sixty thousand dollars. All honor to Messrs. Sturges and Leuppe, through whose purse and friendly aid such happy results were obtained.

The Exhibitions of 1850 to 1854 (twenty-fifth to twenty-ninth), inclusive, were held in these galleries.

After the sale of the property at No. 663 Broadway, it became necessary to find other accommodations for the Exhibitions, and temporary quarters were secured in the gallery over the entrance to the Rev. Dr. Chapin's Church, at No. 548 Broadway. Here were held the thirtieth and thirty-first Annual Exhibitions, in 1855 and 1856.

For the thirty-second Exhibition, in 1857, the old rooms, No. 663 Broadway (remaining then unchanged), were rented by the Society.

In 1858, a suit of galleries was fitted up by the Academy on the upper floor of the buildings erected by Maltby G. Lane in Tenth street, on the corner of Fourth avenue. The thirty-third, thirty-fourth, thirty-fifth, and thirty-sixth Exhibitions, 1858, 1859, 1860, and 1861, were held at this place. The rent here, of three thousand dollars per annum, proved to be too heavy, and the lease was relinquished.

The thirty-seventh and thirty-eighth Exhibitions, 1862 and 1863, were held in the galleries of the building known as the Institute of Art, No. 625 Broadway, under a temporary arrangement with the proprietor, Mr. Derby.

All subsequent Exhibitions have been held in the present building, corner Twenty-third street and Fourth avenue.

WINTER EXHIBITIONS.

The Winter Exhibitions of the Academy will commence each year about the middle of November, and will continue until the fourth of March following.

These Exhibitions will in no wise change or interfere with the regular Annual Exhibitions in the Spring; but, as auxiliary thereto, are intended to afford to Artists uninterrupted facilities for the exhibition of their works at all times, and for a longer or shorter period as may be convenient or desirable to them; and also to provide a continuous gallery for the public entertainment and instruction.

The Winter Exhibitions will differ from the Annual Exhibitions of the Spring, in the following important particulars:

First.—All original works will be eligible, whether previously exhibited or not, or whether by deceased or by living Artists, excepting only works which have been in the Spring or Winter Exhibitions immediately preceding.

Second.—Works may be added to the Exhibition at any time, or may be withdrawn therefrom after reasonable notice.

Works for the next Winter Exhibition will be received during the first week in November, 1868. All further details will be duly communicated to Exhibitors in the usual circulars and blank lists.

And if any public cartman shall ask, demand, receive, take, exact, or extort any greater rate, price, pay, or compensation for carting and transporting any article or thing whatsoever, than is mentioned, allowed, expressed, and limited, it shall not be lawful for him to receive any compensation for the carting or transportation; and the asking or receiving shall be deemed a violation of the law.

PUBLIC PORTERS.

Every public porter shall wear, in a conspicuous place about his person, so as to be easily seen, a brass plate or badge, on which shall be engraved his name, the words "public porter," and the number of his license; and it shall be unlawful for any other person to wear or exhibit any badge purporting to be, resembling, or similar to the badge of a public porter; and no public porter shall permit any other person to wear his badge, or use his name in any way whatever, in the transportation or conveyance of any thing.

Public porters shall be entitled to charge and receive for the carrying or conveyance of any article, any distance within half a mile, twenty-five cents if carried by hand, and fifty cents if carried on a wheelbarrow or handcart; if the distance exceeds half a mile and is within a mile, one-half of the above rates in addition thereto, and in the same proportion for any greater distance.

No public porter or hand-cartman shall be entitled to recover or receive any pay or fare from any person for the transportion of any article or articles, unless his name and number of his license, and the rates shall be fixed, and the badge worn, agreeably to what is herein stated.

If any public porter shall ask or demand any greater rate of pay or compensation for the carrying or conveyance of any articles than is herein provided, he shall not be entitled to any pay for the said service; and to so ask, demand, or receive any such greater pay or compensation, shall be deemed a violation of the law.

Joint Proceedings of 1857).

By resolution, approved October 1, 1857, the "Daily News" was substituted for the "Evening Post," to publish the official proceedings of the Board of Councilmen (see same Vol. p. 287), and by a subsequent resolution, approved December 23, 1857 (see same Vol. p. 417), the "Daily News" was designated as a full "Corporation paper."

By resolution, approved June 7, 1861, the "Metropolitan Record" was designated as one of the "Corporation papers," in place of the "New York Day Book" (see Vol. XXIX. p. 145, Joint Proceedings of 1861).

By resolution, adopted, notwithstanding the objections of his Honor the Mayor, by the Board of Aldermen, December 26, 1861, by the Board of Councilmen, December 28, 1861 (see same Vol. p. 352), the "World" was designated as a "Corporation paper."

By resolution, approved April 4, 1862, (see Vol. XXX. p. 32, Joint Proceedings of 1862), the "New York Daily Times" was designated as one of the "Corporation newspapers."

By resolution, adopted, notwithstanding the objections of his Honor the Mayor, by the Board of Aldermen, June 30, 1862, by the Board of Councilmen, December 5, 1862, the "New Yorker Zeitung" was designated one of the "Corporation papers" (see same Vol. p. 282).

By resolution, approved March 15, 1860, (see Vol. XXVIII. p. 61, Joint Proceedings of 1860), the "New York Daily Transcript" was designated as a "Corporation paper."

By resolution of the respective Boards of Aldermen and Councilmen, the "Transcript" is authorized to publish, in extense, the proceedings of each Board. Such authorization was given by the Board of Aldermen, Poecember 9, 1862, (see Proceedings of Board of Aldermen, Vol. LXXXVIII. p. 554), and by the Board of Councilmen (Vol. LXXXVIII. p. 704).

Section 2 of Chapter 237 of the Laws of New York, passed at the session of the Legislature for 1863 (p. 410, provides that "No portion of the sums which shall hereafter be raised by tax or assessment, in the city and county of New York, shall be paid for advertisements in the newspapers authorized by the Mayor and Comptroller of the said city, who shall designate four papers having the largest daily circulation, and any six others, in their discretion, not to exceed ten in all."

The four papers selected are the following: The "New York Herald," the "New York Tribune," the "New York Leader," and the "New York Dispatch." The "New York Sun" and the "New York Times" were subsequently added.

Pursuant to Chapters 506 and 806, Laws of 1867, the following Newspapers were designated by the Mayor and Comptroller, and are now the official newspapers as contemplated in said act: Transcript, Express, and News, daily; Atlas, Leader, and Citizen, weekly.

By resolution of the Boards of Aldermen and Councilmen, respectively, the Clerks of the said Boards have been directed to furnish their proceedings, as hitherto, to the papers authorized by the Boards, or the Common Council, to publish the same.

The direction, as above given, passed the Board of Aldermen, June 18, 1863, (see Proceedings, p. 714), and the Board of Councilmen, also, June 18, 1863, (see Proceedings, p. 696).

From the foregoing, it appears that the following are now the "Corporation papers," viz.:

The Commercial Advertiser, April 15, 1862; The New Yorker Staats Zeitung, April 15, 1862; The New Yorker Demokrat, April 15, 1862; The Daily Sun, April 29, 1857; The Daily News, December 23, 1857; The New York Transcript, March 15, 1860; The Metropolitan Record, June 7, 1861; The World, December 28, 1861; The New York Daily Times, April 4, 1862; The New York Herald, June 11, 1863; The New York Tribune, June 11, 1863; The New York Leader, July 2, 1863; The New York Leader, July 2, 1863; The New York Atlas.

TO ASCERTAIN BY PROPER PROOFS THE CITIZENS WHO SHALL BE ENTITLED TO THE RIGHTS OF SUFFRAGE.

PASSED MAY 13, 1865; THREE-FIFTHS BEING PRESENT.

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. There shall be four persons appointed by the Board of Commissioners of Metropolitan Police for each election district in the city and county of New York, and there shall be the same number of persons appointed by the Board of Supervisors of the city of Brooklyn, to be known as Inspectors of Registry and of Elections. The Inspectors in the city of Brooklyn shall be appointed by a two-thirds vote of all the members elected to said Board of Supervisors of said city of Brooklyn. The said Inspectors shall make the registry hereinafter provided for, for said cities, and shall hold the elections hereinafter mentioned, and preside at the same, and have and possess all the powers and be subject to all the duties and liabilities of Inspectors of Elections. Such appointments shall be made during the months of August and September in each year, by resolution of the said Boards respectively, and the persons so appointed shall take and file in the office of the Chief Clerk of the Commissioners of Metropolitan Police and in the office of the City Clerk of Brooklyn, respectively, the oath of office prescribed by the Constitution, and receive a certificate of such appointment in such form as shall be prescribed by said Commissioners of Metropolitan Police and by said Board of Supervisors respectively. The said Inspectors, so appointed for the city and county of New York and for the city of Brooklyn, and the Inspectors of Election in each of the other election districts in this State in which any part of an incorporated city or village is included, shall meet annually, on Tuesday, three weeks preceding the general election, at nine o'clock A.M., at the place designated for holding the poll of said election, and organize themselves as a Board for the purpose of registering the names of the legal voters of such district; and for this purpose they shall appoint one of their number chairman of the Board, who (except in the city and county of New York and in the city of Brooklyn) shall administer to the other Inspectors the cath of office, as prescribed by the Constitution, and the same oath shall then be administered to the chairman by one of the other Inspectors. The said Board shall then proceed to make a list of all persons qualified and entitled to vote at the ensuing election in the election districts of which they are Inspectors. Said list, when completed, shall constitute and be known as the register of electors of said district. The said Inspectors, at their first meeting on Tuesday, three weeks preceding the general election, shall have power, if necessary, to sit two days for the purpose of making said list, provided that at the annual election next prior to said meeting the number of voters in the district of which they are Inspectors exceeded four hundred. In like manner, the said Board of Commissioners of Metropolitan Police and the said Board of Supervisors, respectively, shall appoint two persons to be Canvassers of the votes cast at elections for each election district of the city and county of New York and the city of Brooklyn, who shall, in like manner, take and file the oath of office and receive the certificate of appointment as above provided, whereupon they shall, in the respective districts for which they are appointed, possess and exercise the powers and perform the duties prescribed by law for Canvassers of votes in election districts in the place and stead and to the exclusion of the three Canvassers now provided by law for such election district. Vacancies occurring in any of such offices shall be immediately filled by the said Board of Commissioners of Metropolitan Police or Board of Supervisors, respectively, in the manner above provided. In case, on the day of election, any Inspector or Canvasser shall for any reason fail to appear, his place may be supplied in the manner now provided by law. No person shall be eligible to be, nor shall he be appointed Inspector of Registry and Elections or Canvasser for any election district for the city and county of New York or city of Brooklyn, unless he shall be a qualified voter within the Assembly District in which such election district is situated, and liable to jury duty in Courts of Record therein, nor unless he can read, write, and speak the English language understandingly; but such person shall not be required to be a resident or voter in the election district for which he shall be appointed. Inspectors of Registry and Elections, and Canvassers appointed in pursuance of this act, shall receive compensation at the same rate and be paid in the manner now provided for the compensation of Inspectors of Registry, Inspectors of Election, and Canvassers, and during the time they shall hold such offices shall be exempt from the performance of military and jury duty. The Board of Commissioners of Metropolitan Police and the Board of Supervisors of the city of Brooklyn, respectively, shall designate and appoint polling-places and places of registry in each of the election districts of the city and county of New York and Brooklyn, and give notice thereof to the Inspectors of Registry and Election of such districts, respectively. The business of registry shall be carried on at the places so designated for that purpose, and the polls of election shall be held at the places so designated for such purpose. In cities, no building or part of building shall be designated or used as a place of registry or polling-place in which, or in any part of which, spirituous or intoxicating liquor is sold, or has been sold within sixty days next preceding the time for using the same, and no place shall be designated or used as a pollingplace in the cities of New York and Brooklyn unless the same be lighted with gas, provided there is a suitable place then lighted with gas in the district. The said Inspectors of Registry and Elections shall also form a Board of Inspectors of Elections, for the purpose of holding an election, by appointing one of their number to be chairman, and three shall form a quorum for transaction of business, but it shall not be necessary for them to take any other or further oath of office than is herein provided. The several offices of Inspectors of Registry and Elections and Canvassers herein named and created are, and shall be, in all courts and proceedings, deemed and held respectively to be election district officers. It shall be the duty of the said Inspectors and Canvassers, respectively, to be in constant attendance during the hours allotted for the discharge of their several duties; and any Inspector or Canvasser who shall willfully absent himself from his duties, leaving less than a majority of his Board, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by fine, not less than twenty-five dollars, nor more than one hundred dollars. Any person acting as such Inspector or Canvasser without the qualification herein prescribed, and any person who shall pay or cause to be paid for the services of such Inspector or Canvasser, or who shall willfully or knowingly appoint or consent to appoint any such officer without such qualification, shall, on conviction thereof, be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished therefor according to law.

§ 2. Said Registers shall each contain a list of the persons so qualified and entitled to vote in said election district, alphabetically arranged according to their respective surnames, so as to show in one column the name at full length, and, in another column, in cities and incorporated villages, the residence by the number of the dwelling, if there be a number, and the name of the street or other location of the dwelling-place of each person. It shall be the duty of the said Inspectors, except in the city and county of New York and in the city of Brooklyn, to enter in said list the names of all persons residing in their election district, whose names appear on the poll list kept in said district at the last preceding general election, and in all cities of the State to enter the number of the dwelling and name of street or other location, if the same shall be known to, or can be ascertained by such Inspectors; and for this purpose said Inspectors are authorized to take from the office in which they are filed the poll lists made and filed by the Inspectors of such district at the general election held next prior to the making of such register. In case a new election district shall be formed, except in the city and county of New York and the city of Brooklyn, the said Inspectors shall enter in the list the names of such persons entitled to vote in the new election district whose names appear upon the poll list of the last general election kept in the district or districts from which said new election district is formed. The said Inspectors shall complete, as far as practicable, the said register on the day of their meeting aforesaid, and shall make four copies thereof, and certify the register and each of the copies to be a true list of the voters in their districts, so far as the same are known to them. Within two days thereafter, the said original list, together with the lists taken from the offices as aforesaid, shall be filed by said Inspectors in the office of the Town Clerk of the town, or City Clerk's office of the city in which such election district shall be; or, if such election district is in a city in which is a County Clerk's office, in the office of the County Clerk in said city, and one copy of said list shall be kept by each of said Inspectors, and carefully preserved by him for their use on the day or days hereinafter mentioned, for revision and correction of the same. One copy of said list shall, immediately after its completion, be posted in some conspicuous place in the room in which such meeting shall be held, and be accessible to any elector who may desire to examine the same or make copies thereof.

§ 3. The said Boards of Inspectors shall meet on the Friday of the week preceding the day of the general election, in their respective election districts, in the city and county of New York and in the city of Brooklyn, at the places designated as provided in the first section, and in the other election districts of the State at the place designated for holding the polls of election, for the purpose of revising and correcting said lists; and for this purpose in cities they shall meet at eight o'clock in the morning, and remain in session until nine o'clock P.M. of that day and the day following; and in other districts they shall meet at nine o'clock in the morning, and remain in session until seven o'clock P.M. of that day. The said Board of Inspectors shall also meet on the Monday before the first Tuesday of November in each year, and in cities shall meet at eight o'clock in the morning of that day and continue in session until nine o'clock in the evening of that day; and out of cities shall meet at nine o'clock in the morning of that day, and continue in session until seven o'clock in the evening of that day; and they shall then revise, correct, add to, and subtract from, and complete the said lists; and shall, on that day, add to the said list the name of any person who would, on the said first Tuesday of November, be entitled, under the provisions of the Constitution and the laws of the State, to exercise the right of suffrage in their respective election districts. But in making such addition on that day, or on any prior day, they shall not place on the said list the name of any person, except in strict compliance with the provisions of section two and section four hereof, and the other provisions of this act.

§ 4. The proceedings of said Board of Inspectors shall be open, and all persons residing and entitled to vote in said district shall be entitled to be heard by said Inspectors in relation to corrections or additions to said register. One of the lists, so kept by said Inspectors as aforesaid, shall be used by them on the day or days for making corrections or additions, for the purpose of completing the registry for such district. No additions shall be made to the said register of the name of any person, nor shall the name of any person be placed thereon, except of one who shall have appeared in person before the said Board; and any person not born in the United States, on applying to have his name placed on the registry, shall prove that he is a citizen of the United States, by producing a certificate of naturalization from a court of competent jurisdiction; nor shall any other proof of his being a citizen be received, unless he shall first show to the satisfaction of the Board of Registry that he is unable to produce such certificate.

§ 5. It shall be the duty of said Inspectors, at their meeting for revising and correcting said list, to erase therefrom the name of any person inserted therein who shall be proved to the satisfaction of said Inspectors to be a non-resident of said district, or otherwise not entitled to vote in said district at the election then next to be held. Any elector residing in said district, and entitled to vote therein, may appear before said Board of Inspectors and require his name to be recorded on said alphabetical list, and, upon complying with the requirements of this act, the same shall be recorded. Any person so requiring his name to be entered on said list shall make the same statement, as to the street or number thereof, and where he resides, required by the provisions of this act of persons offering their votes at the election, and shall be subject to the same pains and penalties for refusing to give such information, or for falsely giving the same, and shall be also subject to challenge, either by the Inspectors or either of them, or by any other elector whose name appears upon said alphabetical list, and the same oaths may be administered by the Inspectors as may by law be administered to persons offering to vote at an election. Any person whose name is upon the registry of any election district in the city and county of New York or city of Brooklyn, applying to have his name placed on the registry of any other election district, shall prove to the satisfaction of the Board of Registry that his name has been erased from such former registry before his name shall be placed on the registry where he makes such application.

§ 6. After said list shall have been fully completed, the said Inspectors shall cause four copies of the same to be made, each of which shall be certified by them to be a correct list of the voters of their district, one of which shall be filed in the office of the Town Clerk of towns, and in cities in the office of the County Clerk of the county, and one of which copies shall be retained by each of the said Inspectors. It shall be the duty of the said Inspectors carefully to preserve the said list for their use on election day, and to designate one of their number, or one of the clerks, at the opening of the polls, to check the name of every voter voting in such district whose name is on the register, and no vote shall be received at any annual election in this State unless the name of the person offering to vote be on the said registry made and completed, as hereinbefore provided, preceding the election; and any person whose name is on the registry may be challenged, and the same oaths shall be put as are now prescribed by law. This section shall be taken and held by every judicial or other tribunal as mandatory and not as directory. And any vote which shall be received by the said Inspectors of Election in contravention of this section shall be void, and shall be rejected from the count in any legislative or judicial scrutiny into any result of the election.

- § 7. The clerks at each poll, in addition to the duties now prescribed by law, shall enter on the poll list kept by them, in columns prepared for that purpose, opposite the name of each person voting, the same statement or minute as hereinbefore required of Inspectors in making the registry; but such entry is not to be made by them if the registry contains correctly the name and residence of such voter. Every elector, at the time of offering his vote, shall, if required, truly state the street in which he resides, and, if the house, lodging, or tenement in which he resides is numbered, the number thereof; and the clerks of the polls shall truly enter in the appropriate column of the poll list, opposite the name of the elector, the street in which the elector resides, and the number, in case the house, lodging, or tenement is numbered, and, if the same is not numbered, then the clerks shall enter "not numbered" in the column of the poll list for entering the number; and in case of refusal to make the statement as aforesaid, the vote of such elector shall not be received. Any person who shall willfully make any false statement in relation thereto shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction, be punished with a fine of fifty dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail of the county, or the city prison of the city where such voter offers to vote, for a period of ten days, or by both such fine and imprisonment.
- § 8. After the canvass of the votes, the said poll list and said register, so kept and checked as aforesaid, shall be attached together, and shall, on the following day, be filed in the Town Clerk's office of the town in which said district shall be, and in case the district is in a city, in the County Clerk's office in such city, to be used by the Inspectors in making the list of voters at the next general election.
- § 9. Except in the city and county of Now York and the city of Brooklyn, the said Board may, if necessary, on the day or days of the making and the correction of such lists, appoint a clerk to assist them in the discharge of the duties required by this act; and the same oath shall be taken by such clerk as is required by law of clerks of the polls and of elections.
- § 10. The registers shall, at all times, be open to public inspection at the office of the authorities in which they shall be deposited, without charge.
 - § 11. The members of the Board of Registration and their clerks shall each receive the same compensation as is now allowed by law for Inspectors of Election, for each day actually employed in the making and completion of the registry, to be paid to them at the time and in the manner in which they are paid their other fees. The necessary blanks and instructions, and other incidental expenses incurred in executing the provisions of this act, shall be provided and paid for in the manner now provided for the payment of incidental expenses of election of the like character.

§ 12. The said Board shall have and exercise the same powers in preserving order at their meetings under this act as are given to Inspectors of Election for preserving order on election days.

§ 13. Any one of the Inspectors may, at any authorized meeting of the Board, administer the oath or oaths now required by law to test the qualification of electors, and may also administer, on the day of the making and completion of the list, to any elector of the district who may be offered as a witness to prove the qualification of any person claiming the right to be registered, the following oath: "You do swear, or affirm, that you are an elector of this election district; that you will fully and truly answer all such questions as shall be put to you touching the place of residence and other qualifications as an elector of the person now claiming the right to be registered as a voter in this district." And whoever shall willfully swear falsely upon such examination shall be deemed guilty of perjury.

§ 14. Any person who shall cause his name to be registered in more than one election district, or who shall cause his name to be registered, knowing that he is not a qualified voter in the ward or district where said registry is made, or who shall falsely personate any registered voter, and any person causing any such act, or aiding or abetting any person in any manner in either of said acts, shall be punished for each and every offense by imprisonment in the State Prison for not less than one year. All false swearing before said Board of Registration shall be deemed willful and corrupt perjury, and, on conviction, punished as such. If any member or officer of said Board shall willfully violate any of the provisions of this act, or be guilty of any fraud in the execution of the duties of his office, he shall be punished for each and every offense by imprisonment in the State Prison for not less than one year.

§ 15. The same list required to be made and perfected at general elections shall, in the same manner, be made and perfected by the Inspectors at all elections for charter officers in the several cities of this State, and the provisions and requirements of this act, so far as the same may be, are made applicable to such elections, except that in the city of New York the Inspectors of Registry shall not meet on the Tuesday or Wednesday three weeks preceding the charter election, to prepare the register of electors, but shall meet on the Friday and Saturday preceding the charter election, to which occasion they shall use the register of electors made and perfected at the general election immediately preceding, which said register shall be revised, corrected, and completed in the manner herein provided for revising, correcting, and completing the register of electors made on the Tuesday three weeks preceding the election at general elections.

§ 16. The Secretary of State shall cause this law to be printed, and a sufficient number of copies thereof sent to the County Clerks of the several counties to supply each of the officers named in this act with a copy, and it shall be the duty of said County Clerks immediately to transmit a copy of the same to each of the Inspectors of Election in each city and county.

§ 17. Nothing in this act contained shall be held to apply to any vote cast or offered to be cast, nor to any voter under or by virtue of the provisions of any law enacted to enable the qualified electors of this State, absent therefrom in the military service of the United States, in the army or navy thereof, to vote. Nor shall the provisions of this act apply to any election district within the boundaries of which is contained no part of any city or incorporated village.

§ 18. This act shall take effect immediately.

An Act

AMENDATORY OF, AND SUPPLEMENTARY TO CHAPTER SEVEN HUNDRED AND FORTY OF THE LAWS OF EIGHTEEN HUXDRED AND SIXTY-FIVE, ENTITLED, "AN ACT TO ASCERTAIN BY PROPER PROOFS THE CITIZENS WHO SHALL BE ENTITLED TO THE RIGHTS OF SUFFRAGE," PASSED MAY THIRTEENTH, EIGHTEEN HUNDRED AND SIXTY-FIVE.

PASSED APRIL 25, 1866; THREE-FIFTHS BEING PRESENT.

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

Section 1. Inspectors of Registry and Elections, Canvassers of votes cast at elections, and poll clerks for the several election districts of the city and county of New York, shall be appointed by the Board of Metropolitan Police, in manner following, to wit:

Proper persons to discharge the duties of the several offices above named for the several election districts, shall be selected, notified, and examined in relation to their qualifications; and, if approved, the constitutional oath of office shall be administered to each, and filed as provided in the act hereby amended, and a certificate of appointment issued and delivered to each, as the Board of Metropolitan Police shall order and direct. Whereupon such persons shall, by resolution of such Board, be appointed to fill said several offices. Persons so appointed to such offices in the city and county of New York, and persons appointed to like offices in the city of Brooklyn shall, in addition to other qualifications provided by law, be qualified voters in the respective cities where the election districts for which they are respectively appointed are situated; but they shall not be required to be residents of, or qualified voters of or in the election or assembly districts in which they are to serve; nor shall the persons appointed as aforesaid be required to be liable to, or qualified to do jury duty in courts of record. If vacancies shall occur in any such office, either before or on the day of election, they shall be filled, in the city and county of New York, by resolution of the Board of Metropolitan Police; and absence from duty during the proper hours of duty may be deemed and held by the Board of Metropolitan Police as evidence of a vacancy. If it shall be discovered at any time that any person appointed to any office above named for any election district of New York or Brooklyn is ineligible, disqualified, or unfit to hold such office, the Board by which the appointment was made may, by resolution, declare the office to be vacant, and appoint a proper person to fill such vacancy. It shall be the duty of any person selected as aforesaid for any election district in the city of New York, on receiving notice thereof, to appear before the Board of Metropolitan Police, in conformity with such notice, and take and subscribe the constitutional oath of office, and, on being duly appointed, it shall be his duty to perform the duties of such office. Any such person who shall neglect or refuse to appear and qualify, as aforesaid, or neglect or refuse to perform the duties of such office, shall be liable to a penalty of fifty dollars, to be sued for and recovered in any court of record, in the name of the Treasurer of the Metropolitan Police, for the use and benefit of the Metropolitan Police Fund.

& 2. The Inspectors of Registry and Elections, at their first meeting to make the register of electors, as provided in the act hereby amended, may, in the city and county of New York and in the city of Brooklyn, use the poll lists of the general election then last past to aid them in forming the said register; but no person shall be placed on such register if he shall be objected to by one of the Inspectors of Registry and Elections, or by a qualified voter of the city within which the election district is situated, unless he shall be known or proved, to the satisfaction of such Inspectors, to be at the time a qualified voter in such election district; nor shall the name of any person be placed or retained on such register without the concurrence of three of the four Inspectors, nor except in compliance with section seven hereof. No person born out of the United States shall be placed on such register unless he shall, to the personal knowledge of three of such Inspectors, have been duly naturalized, or shall prove his naturalization, as provided in the act hereby amended. When the question is raised upon the naturalization of a person, proof shall be made to the satisfaction of the Inspectors, by his own oath or otherwise, that the person claiming to be placed on the register is the identical person named in the certificate he produces. When the register shall be completed, the Inspectors of each district in New York shall cause a copy thereof to be filed by the bureau of elections in the office of the Chief Clerk of the Metropolitan Police. Canvassers of votes cast at elections in New York and Brooklyn shall each sign, with his own proper name, and mark with numbers, from number one consecutively, each page of paper on which such canvass is written; and the Canvassers of each district shall, within twenty-four hours from the completion of the same, in addition to other copies required by law to be made and filed, make and file a copy in the bureau of elections, in the office of the Chief Clerk of Metropolitan Police. Poll clerks in the several election districts of the city of New York shall file in the bureau of elections, in the office of the Chief Clerk of Metropolitan Police, within twenty-four hours after the completion of the canvass, their original tallies, from which the canvass is made up, of the votes cast and counted at the election, signed with their respective names, and indorsed with the number of the election district and ward. Officers who shall fail or refuse to comply with any of the provisions of this act, shall forfeit thereby all claim to payment for services as such officers. Inspectors of Registry and Elections, and Canvassers of votes cast at elections in and for the cities of New York and Brooklyn, shall hold their offices for one year, and shall hold all elections during that year, and shall, during their term, be exempt from military and jury duty. The register made under the provisions of this act, and the act of which it is amendatory, shall be the register used at all general, municipal, charter, or special elections, during the year succeeding the making thereof.

$ 3. Formation of Wards.

In 1683, the city of New York was divided into six wards, under the designation of "South," "Dock," "East," "North," "West," and "Out" Wards. For map showing the boundaries of these wards, see page 212 of Manual of Common Council for 1848.

The Montgomerie Charter, dated January 15, 1730, designates, in addition to the above, the boundaries of the "Montgomerie" Ward.

By an act of the colonial government, passed February 28,1791, the wards are designated numerically from 1 to 7, and the bounds of each described.

By an act of the Legislature, passed March 8, 1803, the wards are increased to nine, numerically designated, and boundaries described.

The Tenth Ward was erected from the Seventh by act of March 18, 1808.

The Eleventh and Twelfth Wards were formed, and the boundaries of all described, by an act passed April 25, 1825. (Chap. 195, Laws of 1825.)

^{*} The Constitution of 1777 did not specify the time when the Governor should enter on the duties of the office. Governor Clinton was declared elected July 9th, and qualified on the above day. On the 13th February, 1787, an act was passed for regulating elections which provided that the Governor and Lieutenant-Governor should enter on the duties of their respective offices on the first of July after their election.

[†] The Constitution of 1821 provided that the Governor and Lieutenant-Governor shall, on and after the year 1823, enter on the duties of their respective offices on the first of January.

The total length of Stone Block Pavements now laid, or in progress, is 78 miles 2,580 feet.

In estimating for this table the double measurement of intersections has been avoided.

^{*} The contract for this work has been made, but its undertaking has been deferred indefinitely, under a resolution of the Common Council. Its estimated length is therefore omitted.

THE FOLLOWING TABLE EXHIBITS THE YEARLY REVENUE DERIVED FROM CROTON WATER, AS COLLECTED BY THE DEPARTMENT, FROM ITS INTRODUCTION INTO THE CITY IN 1842, WITH THE ANNULI INCREASE OR DECREASE THEREOF TO DATE:

HISTORICAL.

The Battle on Harlem Reights.

A PAPER WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK HISTORICAL SOCIETY, AND READ BEFORE THAT BODY, BY HENRY B. DAWSON, OF MORRISANIA, N. Y.

ON a former occasion, Mr. President, I had the honor to present, for the consideration of the Society, a narrative of "The Military Retrieate in West-chester County, in 1776;" and, by a retrograde movement, entirely in harmony with those which I then described, I have the privilege, at this time, of inviting the attention of the Society to one of the earlier operations of the same Campaign—the action on the Harlem Heights, on Monday, the sixteenth of September, in the same year.

It is not my purpose, Mr. President, to raise the curtain of the Past so far that all the details of the earlier portions of that eventful Campaign may be exposed; but justice to my subject requires a passing allusion, at least, to some of them, in order that the importance of the action which I am about to describe may be properly understood by all my hearers.

The enemy, commanded by General Sir William Howe, and greatly strengthened by the arrival of heavy reinforcements from Europe, had landed at Gravesend-bay, on Thursday morning, the twenty-second of August; and, with an Army of not less than thirty thousand effective troops, he had subsequently occupied all the South-western portions of Long Island. At the same time, General Sullivan, at the head of a small force of undisciplined and imperfectly-armed American troops, had occupied Brooklyn and its vicinity; and he was diligently preparing for a proper and timely opposition to the enemy, should a rapid movement on New York be attempted; while General Washington, in person, with the main body of the Army, at the same time, was as diligently and laboriously preparing for the defence of the lines, within the City, and for the obstruction of the enemy's progress by water, should the immense naval power, then at Staten Island, attempt to oc-operate with his Army.

Heavy reinforcements having been sent to Brooklyn, to counteract this movement of the enemy, on Sunday, the twenty-fifth of Auguste—three days after the enemy had landed at Gravesend—General Sullivan was superceded in the command of Long Island by General Israel Putnam, whose presence with the American Army had been uninterrupted, in consequence of the want of success which had attended his secret effort, some months previous, to sell himself and his Country to the Commander-in-chief of his Møjesty's troops, then besieged in the Town of Boston. The unscrupulous disobedience of that officer, in disregarding the positive orders of General Washington; his entire inattention to the defence of the outposts of his position; his suspicious removal, from the plains beyond the hills, of the patrols which his immediate predecessor had established; and his equally suspicious withdrawal of the very guards which had been mounted to protect the pass which alone afforded a convenient communication between the enemy's encampment and the flank of his own position, had led to and produced the terribly disastrous defeat of the American forces at Brooklyn, on Tuesday, the twenty-seventh of August; and had sent into captivity, or into the presence of their final Almighty judge, three General officers, and not less than twelve hundred of the best of the American troops, beside demoralizing, to an alarming extent, every portion of the Federal Armies, and filling every section of the Country with the greatest alarm.

This was followed, in the night of Thursday, the twenty-ninth of August, and on the following morning, by the retreat of the American Army from Long Island to New York—that most masterly movement in which an over-ruling Providence, in an especial manner, co-operated with the General-in-chief, Generals Alexander McDougal and John Glover, and acting Quarter-master-general Hugh Hughes, under whose personal direction the wreck of General Putnam's command was plucked from the hand of the victorious enemy, and restored to the service of the Country.

On Sunday, the fifteenth of September, the enemy also effected a passage from Long Island, landing on the eastern side of the Island, between Turtle Bay and Corlies' Hook, where breastworks had been thrown up to oppose them. On this occasion, too, as will be remembered, the American forces, through the cowardice of some of their number, escaped from the City only through another of those remarkable instances of the especial interposition of Almighty power, in some respects similar in character to that to which I have heretofore referred.

The breastworks which had been thrown up, along the margin of the river, to prevent the debarkation of the enemy, were occupied by the command of General John Morin Scott on the right, and a body of Connecticut militia on the left—the former embracing the New York Regiments commanded by Colonels Lasher, Malcolm, Drake, and Humphrey, numbering, in the aggregate, about eleven hundred; the latter including the Regiments commanded by Colonels Hinman, Cook, Talcott, and Baldwin, and Majors Newbury and Strong, numbering, in the aggregate, about fifteen hundred effective men. As the columns of boats, which bore the first division of the enemy's troops toward Kipp's Bay, approached the bank of the river, the Phaenix and Roebuck, each of forty guns, and the Orpheus, Carysfort, and Rose, frigates, of thirty-two guns each, which had been anchored off the landing-place, for the purpose of covering the debarkation, opened a well-directed and incessant fire on the lines, in that vicinity, and filled the troops, who manned them, with the greatest consternation. Immediately afterward, and before the enemy could reach the shore, the Connecticut Regiments, which formed the left of the line, retreated with the utmost precipitation, while the two Brigades commanded by Generals Parsons and Fellows, embracing eight Regiments from the same State—three thousandstrong—which had been ordered to support the lines, flew in every direction and in the greatest confusion, notwithstanding the exertions of their superior officers to form them. Mortified and exasperated beyond his usual measure, General Washington rode up to the cowardly fugitives and attempted to rally them, but his attempts were fruitless and ineffectual; and on the appearance of a small party of the enemy—not more than sixty or seventy in number—who had landed without opposition, the disorder of these doughty champions of a free Government increased, and the fourteen Regiments ran away, in the greatest confusion, without firing a single shot.

It was on this occasion that General Washington, "as fame hath said," in a paroxysm of mortification and rage, "threw his hat on the ground, "and exclaimed: 'Are these the men with whom I am to defend Ameri-"ca?" and "sought death rather than life."

Having driven in the left of the American lines, and turned the flank of the position, the enemy's advance took immediate measures to cut off the retreat of General Scott's Brigado—which occupied the right of the lines—and such other of the American forces as were still below them, within the City; and as the main body, soon afterwards, debarked on the Stuyvesant meadows, near the residence of Mr. Stuyvesant, some distance below the landing-place of the advance, it required all the tact and military skill of Major Aaron Burr to lead them, by an unfrequented and sheltered road, beyond the reach of the enemy. In this, however, as I have already remarked, a singular interposition of Divine power, in favor of the Americans was witnessed—a circumstance which was as marked in its character, and almost as influential in its effects, as that had been which had concealed and secured the retreat of the Americans from Brooklyn, on the morning of the thirtieth of August.

I need not detain the Society by repeating the narrative of the detention of some of the General officers of the enemy's Army, and their respective staffs, for refreshments, by Mary, the wife of Robert Murray, the incident to which I refer; nor to recount the effect of that detention, farther than to express the belief that the corkscrews and goblets of Mary Murray as effectually "bowed" her guests "at her feet," for a season, and to as good a purpose, as the mallet and tent-pin of Heber the Kenite, in the hands of Jael his wife, on the plains of Za-anaim, had done, in the detention of Sisera, "when he asked water and she gave him milk, when "she brought forth butter in a lordly dish."

Having effected a landing, in force, on the island of New York, the enemy immediately pushed forward to the high grounds, in the vicinity of our suburban villages of Yorkville and Manhattanville; and, during the evening, he rested with his right on Horen's Hook, near the foot of East Eighty-ninth street, and his left on the bank of the Hudson, near Bloomingdale; while his outposts and pickets extended to the Southern border of the Harlem Plain, from McGowan's Pass on the East, along the Vandewater's Heights-the present site of the Bloomingdale Lunatic Asylumto the high ground in front of the present village of Manhattanville, on the bank of the Hudson, on the West. At the same time, defeated and disgraced by the cowardice of those who had been posted in the lines, and mortified and dispirited with the general result of the Campaign, the fragments of the American Army gathered around their noble chief, and occupied the high grounds which extended from the Harlem Plains, Northward, to the King's Bridge-a position which affords unusual facilities for defence; while the out-posts and pickets, under trusty officers, were thrown out on the Plain, between the two Armies, and the scouts moved to the Eastward, as far as Harlem.

At the most advanced of the out-posts of the American Army on the West, which occupied a house on the Plain-not far from the site of the present village of Manhattanville-a body of Connecticut Light troops, known as "THE RANGERS" and commanded by Lieutenant-colonel Thomas Knolton, was posted; while, at some further distance to the Southward and Eastward, on the high ground below the Plains, were posted the Second and Third Battalions of British Light Infantry, commanded by Majors Turner Strabenzie and the Hon, John Maitland, and supported by the Forty-second, or Royal Highland Regiment-the well known "Black " WATCH ;" while farther to the South-east, along the high grounds which skirt the lower margin of the Plains, were the First and Fourth Battalions of British Light Infantry, commanded by Majors Thomas Musgrave and John Johnson; on the high ground, near the upper extremity of the Cen. tral Park, which is now occupied by a square stone block-house, was posted a large body of German troops, under the command of Count Donop; while, supporting the whole, a short distance in their rear, was the remainder of the reserve of the Army-embracing three Battalions of British Grenadiers, the Fourth Highland Battalion, and the Thirty-third Regiment of the line, commanded by General, the Earl Cornwallis.

The night of the fifteenth of September, was thus spent by the respective forces; and both of them appear to have quietly sought the repose to which the labors and anxieties of the day had entitled them. At an early hour on the following morning, however, a heavy body of the enemy's Light Infantry moved down the hill to the Plain in his front; and, advancing toward the position occupied by Lleutenant-colonel Knolton, it opened a fire at fifty yards' distance; evidently supposing that, like the Connecticut troops whom the enemy's advance—of whom this attacking party had been a part—had encountered at Kipp's Bay, on the day before, these, also, would fly from the presence of an armed enemy, without a blow, and with as much confusion and dismay. In this the enemy was mistaken; and he had met, at length, some of those who had measured his strength on Bunker's Hill, and shown no alarm. It is true, they were citizens of the same State which had sent General Putnam into the field; and that they had served under the same vine-clad standard which had been trailed in the dust by the cowards at Kipp's Bay, on the day before; but they had witnessed the degradation of Connecticut and of America with the most intense indignation; and every eye bespoke a determination to wipe out the stain, and every heart beat in unison. The enemy's fire, therefore, was promptly returned, and every man stood in his place without flinching, until, from the pressure of greatly superior numbers, the picket was ordered to retire; when, in the same perfect good order, it fell back on the main body, on the high ground, North from the Plains, now the property of the Brothers of the Christian Schools. The enemy pursued the retiring picket, as it fell back, until he came within sight of the main body of the American Army, on the heights; when "he sounded "his bugles in a most insulting manner, as is usual after a fox-chase," indicative of his supreme contempt; and then he retired, without molestation, to the high ground whence he had come in the morning.

In the meantime, Colonel Joseph Reed, the Adjutant-general of the Army, who had witnessed the entire engagement, had gone "over" to General Washington—who was then on the high ground West of the Eighth-avenue, now owned by the Sisters of the Sacred Heart—for the purpose of soliciting some support for "The Rangers" who were contending so gallantly with the enemy; but the latter, with that severe caution which forms so striking a contrast with the reckless movements of some of our modern General officers, and in the absence of any exact information of the enemy's strength, appointments, and positions, complied with the request indirectly, and only after the most urgent solicitation.

The more perfectly to ensure success, therefore, a disposition was made on the Plain, before the enemy's position, as if an attack on his front was contemplated; while, at the same time, Lieutenant-colonel Knolton, with his Battalion of "Rangers," and Major Leitch, with three Companies of Colonel Weedon's Regiment, from Virginia, were detached from the main body, with orders to move, by detours — the former, to the Eastward of the enemy, by way of the Maretje Davit's Vly; the latter, by way of the bank of the Hudson-river, to the Westward of his position—and to fall on the enemy's rear, after the feint on his front should have drawn him from the heights on which he was posted, into the Plain.

In order still more to ensure success, the Adjutant-general, who had been on the ground, was ordered to conduct the column of attack which was commanded by Major Leitch; while Lieutenant-colonel Knolton, who was sufficiently acquainted with the ground, and sufficiently prudent and trust-worthy, was permitted to conduct his command without any assistance; and every appearance indicated a successful result.

The feint was, in the highest degree, successful; and, when it appeared on the enemy's front, near the extreme left of his line, the Light Infantry, in force, rushed down the hill which is now intersected by One hundred and twenty-eighth-street, between the Eleventh and Twelfth-avenues, to the Plain below, and took possession of some fences and bushes which were there, in the immediate vicinity of the Marctje Davit's Vly—a marshy streamlet which, at that time, rose in the Plain, near the present line of One hundred and twenty-fourth-street, between the Tenth and Eleventh-avenue; crossed the present line of the Eighth-avenue, near the same street; and, after flowing in front of the McGowan's Pass, emptied its waters into the East river, at One hundred and eighth street. Of course, the feint fell back as the enemy advanced; and both parties opened a heavy, noisy fire—the feint, intentionally, taking good care to preserve sufficient distance to prevent any disagreeable consequences from the fire of the enemy.

In the meantime, the two columns of attack were pursuing their secret courses—that under the command of Adjutant-general Reed and Major Leitch, along the waterside, at the foot of the high bank of the Hudson, which effectually concealed it from the enemy; that under Lieutenant-colonel Knolton across the valley which now separates the high grounds on which stand, respectively, the institutions of the Brothers of the Christian Schools and of the Sisters of the Sacred Heart; over the high ground now occupied by the latter institution; and thence down to the Plain, in the vicinity of the Vly before referred to. In consequence of some unauthorized interference, by subordinate officers, however, these columns were not so successful as the Commanderin-chief had desired; although that under the Adjutant-general gallantly scaled the high bank of the river, moved down on the enemy from the West, and attacked his left flank; and Lieutenant-colonel Knolton's command, at the same time, moved up the Vly, and fell on his right flank, from the Eastward.

As the consequence of this interference with General Washington's Orders was serious—calling forth the most pointed and explicit denunciation in his General Orders, on the morning after the engagement—it may be proper to remark, in this place, that beside those staff-officers in whose commands, in the same General Order, the Commander-in-chief reposed express authority, in all cases, General Putnam and General Grene were the only officers whose activity, on that occasion, has been particularly referred to; and upon one of these two, without doubt, that remarkable General Order was designed to operate—historical students, generally, but especially those who have read the history of the enemy's operations on Long Island, in August, 1776, or the correspondence which arose from the disregard of General Washington's orders for the movement of reinforcements from the valley of the Hudson, in the fall of 1777, will not hesitate a moment in designating the particular individual to whom the General Order in this case also referred.

As has been stated, the enemy was drawn from the Heights to the Plains, by the feint on his front, when the two attacking columns, led respectively by the Adjutant-general and Lieutenant-colonel Knolton, fell on his flanks; and the action commenced. Within a few minutes, Major Leitch received three balls in his side, and was carried to a neighboring farmhouse, where he was attended, under special orders from General Washington, by John Pessenger, a butcher from the City of New York, then one of the Commissaries of the Army. Within a few minutes afterwards, Lieutenant-colonel Knolton also fell, mortally wounded; and, after having been mounted on the horse of the Adjutant-general, he was carried from the field by that officer, and died soon afterwards, it is said, in the house of Colonel Morris,° now occupied by Madame Jumel—then the Head-quarters of General Washington.

During ten minutes, the troops, thus suddenly bereft of all their superior officers, continued the action with the greatest resolution, when the enemy gave way, and was pursued, some two hundred yards, in a Southeast-erly direction, from the margin of the Vly, where the action began, to an open plain, where, in a cleared field—near the present intersection of the Tenth-avenue and One hundred and twenty-first-street, and sheltered behind a fence covered with bushes—in imitation, doubtless of the very "reb-"cels" whom he affected to despise—the enemy renewed the contest. The Americans, disregarding the advantages which the shelter afforded to the enemy, pressed forward on his front; and, with the aid of two field-pieces which were brought to bear on him, they routed him a second time, with the loss of five of his men, who were slain on the spot.

The enemy next fell back to a buckwheat-field, on the summit of the hill—where the Bloomingdale Lunatic Asylum now stands—and thither he was promptly pursued, and forced to resume the action.

The spirited conduct of the American troops during the period of the engagement, to which my remarks have, heretofore, been confined, had placed the Second and Third Battalions of the Royal Light Infantry, and the two Battalions of the Highland Watch who supported them, in the greatest peril; and as the tally-ho which the former had indulged in, earlier in the day, was now fairly turned on the enemy, as the rude militia and "The Rangers' pressed closely after his jaded platoons, while the latter fell back from field to field, and from the plain to the hill-top, the respective Commanders watched the movements with the greatest interest.

The enemy's general officers appear to have considered the subject as one possessing the greatest importance; and it is perfectly evident that they were not without suspicions that an attempt would be made by the victorious Americans to beat up the main body, in its position on the high-ground below the Plains. To counteract such a movement, should it have been really intended, the two Battalions of Brunswickers, commanded by Colonels Block and Minnegerode, were hastily moved to McGowan's Pass for the purpose of securing that important defile; the First and Fourth Battalions of British Light Infantry, commanded by Majors Thomas Musgrave and John Johnson, a strong body of German Chasseurs, and two field-pieces, supported by Colonel Linsing's Battalion of Brunswick Grenadiers, led by the Count Donop, one of the most gallant officers in the enemy's service, were moved forward to strengthen the fugitives who were still struggling manfully, with their desperate pursuers, in the buckwheat-field, on the brow of the Heights; and, at the same time, the remainder of the reserve of the Royal Army, embracing three Battalions of British Grenadiers, the Fourth Highland Battalion, and the Thirty-third Regiment of the Line, under General, the Earl Cornwallis, as before stated, together with the Fifth Regiment of the line, and, probably, others from other Brigades, were put in motion, and hastened, by a forced march, toward the scene of anticipated danger.

In the meantime, General Washington was not unmindful of the safety of the gallant men who were so nobly redeeming the character of the American Army; and, from the reinforcement which the enemy had received, finding that they, also, required support, he advanced a part of Colonel Griffith's and Colonel Richardson's Maryland Regiments, with some detachments from the Eastern Regiments, which were nearest to the place of action, and thereby rendered the force of the assailants sufficiently strong to continue the engagement, even with the advantages which the greater number of troops gave to the enemy.

During two hours, the opposing forces fiercely battled for the possession of the buckwheat-field; and, at the end of that time, the enemy fell back a third time, taking refuge, first, in an orchard near the old de Peyster house—on One hundred and fourteenth-street, between the Ninth and Tenth-avenue; next, in a hollow which separates two spurs of the high ground, between the present line of the Eighth and Ninth-avenues; and, finilly, up another hill—one of the spurs referred to, near the intersection of the Eighth avenue and One hundred and ninth-street, not far distant from the position occupied by the main body of the enemy's reserve.

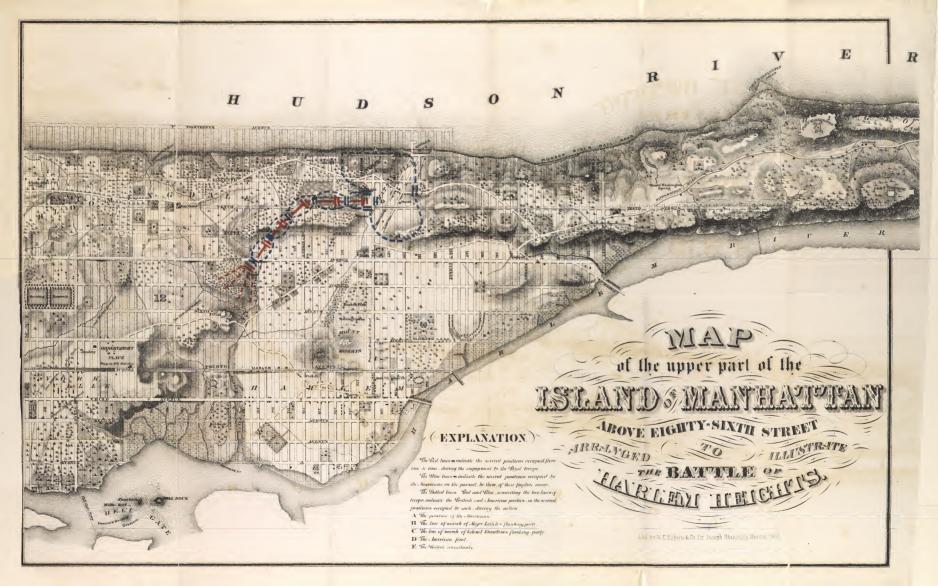

At that moment, the head of the columns, by which the reserve of the Royal Army, under the Earl Cornwallis, and the other supporting parties, were hastening to the field, were seen in the distance by General Washington; and as the ground then occupied by the Americans offered no advantages for defence—while, at the same time, it was not considered prudent to risk a general engagement at that time—orders were issued for the withdrawal of the assailants; "and the enemy," as General Washington remarked, "was well contented to hold the last ground to which he had been driven."

Thus ended the Battle of Harlem Heights—an engagement which has been characterized by one of the most eminent Generals of the British Army—himself one of the luckless outpost on the Heights of Harlem, on whom the brunt of the Battle had fallen—as "one of the briskest engage-"ments, on a small scale, during the War, although an affair of outposts," and notwithstanding, as he continues, "no proper detailed account of it "has ever been published."

The loss of the Americans in this engagement was Lieutenant-colonel Knolton and sixteen privates killed, and Major Leitch and a few privates wounded; while that of the enemy was so remarkably severe that no other evidence will be required to prove the skill and determination with which the engagement was conducted by the Americans, even after they had lost all their superior officers. Of the Light Infantry, seventy were killed and two hundred and ten were wounded; of the Forty-second Highlanders, a Sergeant and three privates were killed, and two Captains, an Ensign, three Sergeants, a Piper, two Drummers, and forty-seven privates were wounded; and of the German Chasseurs an officer and seven men were wounded—making a total of seventy-four killed, and two hundred and seventy-four wounded.

Lieutenant-colonel Knolton, of whom General Washington said, in General Orders, he "would have been an honor to any country," died during the day, lamented by the entire Army; and he was buried with the honors of war, on the next day, "below the hill, where a redoubt was thrown up "on the road"—a spot which is particularly designated on Sauthier's Map of that vicinity; and which is now on the exact line of One hundred and fifty-fourth-street, between the Ninth and Tenth-avenues. Major Leitch, carefully attended by his faithful nurse, John Pessinger, and watched by General Washington, whose friend he was, lingered some days; but careful nursing and friendly attention availed not—he died of lock-jaw, on the first of October following.

The effect of this affair was immediately apparent. On the following morning, General Washington noticed it in the General Orders to which I have referred; and "LETTCH" and "VIRGINLA" were given out as the Parol and Countersign of the day. After thanking the officers and men who participated in the affair, and contrasting the behavior of the troops with that of the Connecticut troops at Kipp's Bay, on the day before, he appealed to the Army, and urged both "officers and men to act up to the "noble cause in which they were engaged, and to support the honor and "liberties of their Country." Although, in itself, it was, comparatively, a small affair, at that time it was equivalent to a victory. Governor George Clinton, himself a witness of the Battle, two days afterwards, wrote from the Camp in these words: "It has animated our troops, gave them new "spirits, and erased every bad impression the retreat from Long Island, &c., "had left on their minds. They find they are able, with inferior numbers, "to drive their nemy, and think of nothing now but conquest."

Notes Concerning the Destruction of Livington's Press,

By a Party from Connecticut, November 23, 1775.

[The destruction of a printing-press, in the city of New York, by a party of intruders from Connecticut, was so remarkable an event, even in the days of the Revolution, that we offer no apology for preserving, in this volume, the following Notes concerning it.—J. S.]

[From The Constitutional Gazette, November 25, 1775.]

New Yors, November 25.—Thursday morning the 23rd instant, about twelve o'clock, a party of Light Horse from Connecticut, amounting to about one hundred, entered this city, and in the utmost regularity proceeded to the house of Mr. James Rivington, Printer, and after surrounding the same, with bayonets fixed, a number alighted and placed three centinels at each door; when a few of the party entered the house, and denanded his types, which were accordingly surrendered, and put up in bags, then they destroyed the whole apparatus of the press. The business being thus finished without the least noise or opposition, the surrounding spectators consisting of about fifteen hundred inhabitants signified their approbation by three huzzas, and immediately the party went out of town with their booty, without offering the least insult to any of the inhabitants.

[From The Pennsylvania Journal, December 6, 1775.]

NEW HAVEN, November 29.—On the twentieth of this month sixteen respectable inhabitants of this town, in company with Captain Sears, set out from this place for East and West Chester, in the province of New York, to disarm the principal Tories there, and secure the persons of Parson Seabury, Judge Fowler, and Lord Underhill.

On their way thither they were joined by Captains Richards, Scilliek, and Mead, with about eighty men. At Mamaroneck they burnt a small sloop, which was purchased by Government, for the purpose of carrying provisions on board the ASIA. At Eastchester they seized Judge Fowler, then repaired to Westchester and secured Seabury and Underhill. Having possessed themselves of these three caitiffs, they sent them to Connecticut under a strong guard. The main body, consisting of seventy-five, then proceeded to New York, which they entered at noonday on Thursday the 23rd, on horseback, with bayonets fixed; in the greatest regularity went down the main street, and drew up in close order before the printing office of the infamous James Rivington. A small detachment entered it, and in about three-quarters of an hour brought off the principal part of his types, for which they offered to give an order on Lord Dummore. They then faced and wheeled to the left, and marched out of Town to the tune of Yankee Doodle. The vast concourse of people assembled at the Coffee House Bridge on their leaving the ground, and gave them three very hearty cheers.

On their way home they disarmed all the Tories that lay on their route; and vesterday arrived at here, escorted by a great number of gentlemen from the Westward, the whole making a very grand procession. Upon their entrance into Town they were saluted with the discharge of two cannon, and received by the inhabitants with every mark of approbation and respect. The Company divided into two parts, and concluded the day in festivity and innocent mirth. Captain Sears returned in company with the other gentlemen, and proposes to spend the winter here, unless public business should require his presence in New York. Seabury, Underhill, and Fowler, three of the dastardly protesters against the proceedings of the Continental Congress, and who it is believed had concerted a plan for kidnapping Captain Sears, and conveying him on board the Asia, man-of-war, are (with the types and arms) safely lodged in this Town, where it is expected Lord Underhill will have leisure to form the scheme of a lucrative lottery, the tickets of which cannot be counterfeited; and Parson Seabury sufficient time and opportunity to compose sermons for the next Continental Fast.

NEW YORK HARBOUR, 6th December, 1775.

My Lord—Since my Dispatches sent by the November Packet this Province has experienced a fresh outrage from the Connecticut people. Near one hundred of their horsemen with Isaac Sears, Samuel Broom, and other turbulent fellows at their head, came into the City of New York and going up to Mr. Rivington's house, part of them dismounted, went into his printing office and took away all his types with other articles out of the shop, and then, to the disgrace of the City, were suffered unmolested to leave the Town. But before they quitted the Province they ill treated and took prisoners some inhabitants of West Chester County; particularly The Reverend Mr. Seabury, and burnt one sloop belonging to persons friendly to government.

Mr. Rivington injured to ruin throws himself on the benevolent consideration of the British State. The freedom of Mr. Rivington's publications, and especially in his last paper herewith transmitted, drew this law-less violence upon him.

Your Lordship's most obedient servant.

WM. TRYON.

[From The Middlesex Journal, London, January 11, 1776.]

New York, December 7.—The contents of last week's New York Gazetteer occasioned Mr. Rivington, the printer, to be surprized and surrounded on the 23rd of November, by seventy-five of the Connecticut light horse, with firelock sand fixed bayonets, who bursted into his house between twelve and one o'clock at noon, totally destroyed all his types, put an entire stop to his business, and reduced him, at upwards of fifty-three years of age, to the sad necessity of beginning the world again. The astonished citizens beheld the whole scene without affording the persecuted proscribed printer the least assistance. The printing of the New York Gazetteer will be discontinued, until America shall be blessed with the restoration of good government.

Proceedings of the New York General Committee.

At a meeting of the General Committee for the City and County of New York:

Thursday, November 23, 1775.

A motion was made by Lancaster Burling, and seconded by Joseph Totten, in the words following viz:

Mr. Chairman: I move that Isaac Sears, Samuel Broome, and John Woodward, be cited to appear before this Board, to answer for their conduct in entering the City this day, with a number of Horse, in a hostile manner, which I consider as a breach of the Association.

Friday, November 24, 1775.

The Committee re-assuming the consideration of Mr. Burling's motion of last night, Mr. Burling agreed to withdraw the same.

Ordered, That Abraham W. De Peyster, Benjamin Kissam, and John Berrian, be a Sub-Committee to draught and report, without delay, a Petition to the Provincial Congress, praying them to take into their serious consideration some expedient to prevent the inhabitants of any of the neighbouring Colonies coming into this, to direct the publick affairs of it, or to destroy the property or invade the liberty of its inhabitants, without the direction of the Continental or Provincial Congress, or the Committee of Safety, or the Committee of the County into which such inhabitants may come, or of the Continental Generals, unless there should be an invasion made into this Colony.

Tuesday evening, December 5, 1775.

A draft of a Petition to the honourable the Provincial Congress for the Province of New-York, was read.

Ordered, That the same be fairly copied, and signed by the Chairman of this Committee, and delivered to the Chairman of the Congress.

VI.

Proceedings of the New York Provisional Congress.

Friday morning, December 8, 1775.

A Petition of the General Committee of the City and County of New York, was read and filed, and is in the words following, to wit:

"To the Honourable the Provincial Congress for the Province of New-York."
"The Petition of the General Committee for the City and County of New"York humbly showeth:

"That your Petitioners having been informed that a body of troops, from
"a neighbouring Colony, did lately make their publick entry into this city
"at noon-day, and did seize and earry off the types belonging to one of the "publick printers of this Colony, without any authority from the Conti"nental or this Congress, your Petitioners, or any other body having power
"to grant such authority; and being apprehensive that such incursions,
"should they be repeated, will be productive of many great and evil conse"quences to the inhabitants of such place into which they may be hereafter
"made, do therefore conceive it highly necessary, in the present situation of "publick affairs, as well for the sake of the internal peace and harmony of "each Colony, as for the maintenance of the general union of the Continent,
"now happily subsisting and so essential at this juncture, that each of the "associated Colonies on the Continent should have the sole management
"and regulation of its publick matters by its Congress or Committee, unless "otherwise directed by the k matters by its Congress or Committee, unless "otherwise directed by the k nonurable the Continental Congress.

"Your Petitioners do most humbly pray that this honourable House of Delegates would be pleased to take the premises into their consideration, and devise some expedient to prevent, for the future, the inhabitants of any of the neighbouring Colonies coming into this, to direct the publick affairs of it, or to destroy the property or invade the liberty of its inhabitants, without the direction of the Continental or this Congress, or the "Committee of Safety, or the Committee of the County into which such "Inhabitants may come, or of the Continental Generals, unless there should be an invasion made into this Colony.

"And your Petitioners shall forever pray, &c.

"JOHN BROOME, Chairman pro tem."

The said Petition was taken into consideration, and debates arose thereon; and after some time spent thereon,

ORDERED, That Mr. Scott, Mr. Hobart, Mr. Thomas Smith, Mr. Ganse-voort, and Mr. Brasher, be a Committee to take the said Petition into consideration, and report thereon with all convenient speed.

Tuesday morning, December 12, 1775.

The Committee to whom was referred the Petition of the General Committee of the City and County of New York, reported it as their opinion, that a Letter should be written to the Governour of the Colony of Connecticut on the subject-matter of the said Petition, and they reported a draft of such Letter; which was read.

And the question being asked, whether the Congress will receive the said report, it was agreed to be received, and by order was read a second time.

And many debates arose thereon, and amendments made and debated on, until the morning is so far elapsed, that the further consideration thereof is ordered to be deferred till the afternoon.

Tuesday afternoon, December 12, 1775.

The Congress resumed the consideration of the draft of the Letter to the Governour of the Colony of Connecticut, which was reported in the morning by the Committee appointed to consider the Petition from the City of New York.

After some time spent therein, and many amendments made thereto, the same was again read, and is in the words following, to wit:

"In Provincial Congress," NEW YORK, 12th Decr., 1775.

"SIR:

"It gives us concern that we are under the necessity of addressing you "on a subject that has given great discontent to inhabitants of the City and County of New York. We are informed by a Petition from the Gen"eral Committee, that a body of troops from your Colony lately made a
"publick entry into this city at noon day, and seized and carried off the "types belonging to one of the publick printers, without any authority "from the Continental or this Congress or their Committee; while we "consider this conduct as an insult offered to this Colony, we are disposed "to attribute it to an imprudent though well intended zeal for the publick
"cause, and cannot entertain the most distant thought that your Colony will approve of the measure. It is unnecessary to use arguments to show the impropriety of a proceeding that has a manifest tendency to inter"rupt that harmony and union which at present happily subsists throughout, and is so essential to the interest of the whole Continent. It is our earnest desire that you would take the most effectual steps to prevent any "of the people of your Colony from entering into this for the like purposes, "unless invited by our Provincial Congress, a Committee of Safety, or the "General Committee of one of our Counties, as we cannot but consider such "intrusions as an invasion of our essential rights as a distinct Colony; and

"common justice obliges us to request that you would give orders that all "the types be returned to the Chairman of the General Committee of the "City and County of New-York. We beg you will not consider this requi-"sition as an attempt to justify the man from whom the types were taken; "we are fully sensible of his demerits, but we earnestly wish that the glory "of the present contest for liberty, may not be sullied by an attempt to "restrain the freedom of the Press.

"The same body of troops, we are informed, seized the Mayor of the "Borough of Westchester, the Rector of that Parish, and one of the Justices "of the County, and carried them to your Colony. Mr. Seabury, we are "informed, is still detained. If such should be the case, we must entreat "your friendly interposition for his immediate discharge, the more espe-"cially as considering his ecclesiastick character (which, perhaps, is vener-"ated by many friends to liberty), the severity that has been used towards "him may subject to misconstructions prejudicial to the common cause.

"And the more effectually to restrain such incursions which, if repeated, "may be productive of mischief of the most serious consequence; and as "we would be exceedingly sorry to give room for jealousies among individ-"uals in your Colony, that we are desirous to damp the spirit of liberty or "countenance any of its enemies among us; we propose to apply to the "Continental Congress, not by way of complaint, but for such a general "regulation on this subject as may as well prevent such jealousies, as any "future incursions by the inhabitants of either Colony into the other for "the apprehending or punishing any enemy or supposed enemy to the "cause of liberty without application to the Congress, the Committee of "Safety, or the Committee of the County, within the jurisdiction of which " such persons shall reside, or command of the Continental Congress.

"We are sir, with the utmost respect and esteem,

"Your most obedient servants.

"To the Honourable Jonathan Trumbull, Esq., sent to Governour Trumbull.

"Governour of the Colony of Connecticut."

And debates arising on the said letter, as now amended, and the question being asked, whether the said letter is approved of, and shall be ordered to be engrossed and sent, it was carried in the affirmative, in manner following: For the Letter's being engrossed and chester; Col. McDougall, Mr. Sands, from New York.

4 New York. 2 Tryon. 2 King's. 2 Westchester. 3 Albany. 4 votes. 2 Ulster. 2 Dutchess. Dissentients, Col. Graham for West-2 Suffolk.

Against the Letter.

Ordered therefore, That the said Letter be engrossed and signed by the President, so as to be ready to be transmitted when directed.

RESOLVED, UNANIMOUSLY, That the thanks of this Congress be, and they are hereby given, to those of the inhabitants of the Colony of Connecticut, who so cheerfully gave their aid, at the request of the Committee of West-chester County, in the late suppression of the insurgents in that County, against the cause of liberty.

Mr. Scott then moved, and was seconded by Mr. Hobart, that the Congress enter into, and add a resolution, in the words following, to wit:

AND WHEREAS, Considering the situation of some of the Counties in this Colony, aid for the like purposes may often be most conveniently had from a neighbouring Colony, or a distant County within this Colony; that the power heretofore given to Committees, for calling in the assistance of a neighbouring County, be extended so far as to enable the County Committees, respectively, to apply for assistance from a neighbouring Colony, or any County within this Colony.

Debates arose on the said motion, and the question being put, whether the Congress will add such resolution to the next preceding, it was carried in the affirmative, in the manner following, to wit:

For the Affirmative.

For the Negative. 2 King's County.

2 Westchester.

2 Dutchess.

3 Albany. 2 Suffolk.

2 Tryon.

4 New York.—Mr. Thomas Smith and Roosevelt, dissenting.

2 Orange. 2 Ulster.

2 Ulster.

19 votes.

ORDERED, THEREFORE, That a Resolution be entered, in the words following, to wit:

AND WHEREAS, Considering the situation of some of the Counties in this Colony, aid for the like purposes may often most conveniently be had from a neighbouring Colony, or a distant County within this Colony:

Resolved, That the power heretofore given to Committees for calling in the assistance of a neighbouring County, be extended so far as to enable the County Committees, respectively, to apply for assistance to a neighbouring Colony, or any County within this Colony.

December 14, 1775.

A Letter from John Jay, Esq., dated the 26th of November last, was read and filed, and is in the words following, to wit: "PHILADELPHIA, November 26, 1775.

"The New England exploit is much talked of, and conjectures are numer"ous as to the part the Convention will take relative to it. Some consider it "as an ill compliment to the Government of the Province, and prophesy that "you have too much Christian meekness to take any notice of it. For my "own part, I don't approve of the feat, and think it neither argues much "wisdom or much bravery; at any rate, if it was to have been done, I wish
"our own people, and not strangers, had taken the liberty of doing it. I
"confess I am not a little jealous of the honour of the Province, and am per"suaded that its reputation cannot be maintained without some little spirit "being mingled with its prudence.

"I am, sir, with respect and esteem,

"Your most obedient servant,

"John Jay.
"To Colonel Nathaniel Woodhull, at New York."

[Letter from the Provincial Congress of New York to the Continental Congress.]

In Provincial Congress.

"NEW YORK, December 18, 1775. "GENTLEMEN: -We take the liberty to enclose you the copy of a letter "we thought proper to write to Governour Trumbull, fon the 12th inst.] on "the subject of a late inroad made by some of the inhabitants of Connecticut "into this Colony, and also a resolve of thanks for the friendly assistance "given by them on another occasion, at the request of the Committee of "Westchester. By the first of these, we conceive we have done what was "necessary to support, in a friendly manner, that honour and independency, " with respect to every particular Colony, which we think necessary, not "only for our internal security, but also for maintaining our proper weight, "as a Colony, in the scale of Continental Union. By the other, we show our "readiness to receive any assistance from our neighbours, when properly "afforded on requisition, and suitably to acknowledge such assistance. You "will observe, gentlemen, that to prevent those jealousies which the intro-"duction of armed men from any neighbouring Colony, unless properly re-"quested, will naturall beget, we give his Honour, the Governour of Con-"necticut, notice, that we intend to apply to the Continental Congress for "a regulation on that head. Such a regulation we think necessary for sup-"porting the cause of liberty, and to prevent its enemies from improving "the want of security arising from inroads by our neighbours, to the preju-"dice of the common interest.

"We therefore request your endeavours to procure such a regulation, by "authority of the Continental Congress, and are, gentlemen, with great "respect, your most obedient servants.

"By order

"To the New York Delegates in Continental Congress."

January 11th, 1776.

A letter from the delegates of this Colony at Congress was read and filed, and is in the words following, to wit:

"ner in which you have supported the dignity and independency of our "Colony, and demanded reparation on the subject of the Connecticut in"road. An interposition so rash, officious, and violent, gave us great "anxiety, as it was not only a high insult to your authority, but a direct "tendency to confirm that fatal spirit of jealousy and distrust of our eastern brethern, which has done so much injury to our cause, and which every

"wise and virtuous patriot should study to suppress.

"The government of Connecticut, we are persuaded, will not only do you the justice which you have required, but adopt effectual means to re"strain their inhabitants from similar attempts in future. In this expecta"tion, we shall take the liberty to defer the application to Congress which "you direct, until we are favoured with a copy of Governor Trumbull's an"swer to your letter.

"To THE HONOURABLE CONVENTION

" OF NEW YORK."

March 8th, 1776.

On reading the letter from the Delegates of this Colony on the subject of the inroads from Connecticut, entered on the 11th, day of January instant,

Ordered, That a letter be wrote to the Delegates of this Colony, informing them the Governour and Representatives of the Colony of Connecticut have not as yet given any answer to the letter from this Provincial Congress, on that subject, nor returned nor made any restitution for the types or property taken away from James Rivington

June 13th, 1776.

A letter from Governour Trumbull, explaining the reasons why he had not sooner answered the letter of this Congress of last winter, relative to the people of Connecticut, carrying away James Rivington's types, was received and read, and is in the words following, to wit:

"HARTFORD June 10th 1776.

"SIR; I received your letter of the 12th December ultimo, and paid a "particular regard to the contents, but the subject matter being of public "concern, by the usuage and custom of this Colony, I was not warranted to "give an answer before the same was laid before the General Assembly, "which was soon after to convene. When the Assembly met I early laid "your two letters before them. They appointed a committee to take into "consideration the subject matter of your letters, who never made report "untill near the close of the Assembly, and in the hurry and multiplicity of "important business than-crowding, their report was passed over without "the Assembly making any resolve thereon. On my return home I found "the unhappy omission; but as the Assembly had the matter under con-"sideration, I could not with propriety make any answer thereto; therefore, "of necessity, it was delayed till the sitting of this Assembly. And can, "gentleman, give you the strongest assurance that the delay in answering "these letters was not from any disregard to your respectable body, nor for " want of inclination to cultivate the utmost harmony between this and the "Province you represent; and you may be assured nothing shall be wanting " on our part to restore and effect the same. Your candour in imputing the "intrusion of a number of our people into your Capitol (in the manner they "did) to an imprudent though well intended zeal for the public cause, gives "me real pleasure and can give you the strongest assurance that this Colony "by no means approve their conduct; yet a severe censure at this time upon "them in this unhappy and enervated state of Government, might be "attended with such inconveniences as you will readily apprehend, and "would be needless for me to point out; and which I dare say will suggest "to you at once a satisfactory excuse for our not taking such measures as "might have been expected in times of peace and quiet, though in such "happy seasons, the proper resort for the private injury must have been to "the courts of law, which are the only jurisdiction who can legally take "notice of violences of this kind. As to the public insult, you candidly ex-"tenuate, by saying that it was noonday, not in darkness of night, which "would be accompanied with terror, though we by no means approve or "justify the people of this Colony taking any part therein; but the same "candour you have expressed in your letter, I presume will induce you to "view the matter, so far as it respects this Colony or any of our people "being concerned therein, in a still more favourable light, when you reflect "that the head or leader in the whole transaction was a respectable member "of your City and Congress, who we consider as the proper person to whom "the whole transaction is imputable, and who belongs and is amenable to "your jurisdiction alone, and, therefore, the affair cannot be considered as "an intrusion of our people into your Province, but as a violence or disorder "happening among yourselves, and not an intrusion from another Colony; "and you have the power to compel the gentleman we point out to return

"and restore that property which was taken away, by such methods as you "think most proper. Care was taken that the person of Mr. Seabury, who was brought into this Colony, was released and set at liberty. Your "desire signified to us to prevent any of the people of this Colony from "entering into yours for the like purposes, unless invited by your Pro"vincial Congress or Committee, we esteem very reasonable, and you may "rely upon it we do and shall discountenance and endeavour to prevent "any such like incursions.

"The approbation you express in your other letter of the same date, of "our people, on request affording you their assistance in Westchester "county, and which came to hand at the same time, gives us much pleasure, and shall be ready at all times to afford every friendly aid. We hope what "is said on the subject of your letter will prove satisfactory, both as to the "matter and the occasion of delay in not sooner giving you an answer. And "we hope every jealousy may be removed, and the most friendly harmony
"and intercourse may be renewed and kept up between this Assembly and "your Provincial Congress, and with whom we sincerely wish to hold the "most free and amicable correspondence, especially at this time of common "danger and oppression.

"And am with esteem and regard, Sir,
"Your most obedient humble Servant
"Jonth. Trumbull.

[From The Gentleman's Magazine, November, 1776. Vol. 46, page 509.]
Case of Mr. James Rivington, Printer at New York.

This case has been communicated to the public in evidence of the Oppressive principles of the leaders of the American opposition. It is, indeed, a deplorable case, as it exhibits a melancholy proof of the malignancy of mankind when acting under the influence of passion or prejudice. Dead to the feelings of humanity, and forgetful of the precepts of religion, they seem to delight in the oppression of others, while freedom from oppression is the great object for which they themselves contend. It is not however, our design, in selecting this case, to aggravate or inflame. Our views are very different. We look upon Mr. Rivington as a muchinjured citizen, and wish to be instrumental in procuring him redress. Every one who reads his case, must commisserate the condition of a man deprived of his livelihood, and exiled from his family for no crime; on the contrary, for the noblest of all principles, that of opposing the torrent of popular delusion, and standing firm in the cause of constitutional freedom and his country.

This gentleman, when every other press was under the control of the Congress, with a Candour and firmness which will ever do him honour, admitted into his paper the performances of all parties. This impartiality was however, very displeasing to the leaders of faction. They perceived, that the prejudices of the populace was removed, and their resentments abated by the arguments of their opponents. They, therefore, attempted first by threats to intimidate the printer from publishing any thing in defence of the British Legislature; but this proving ineffectual, they withdrew their subscriptions, and persuaded others to imitate their example. The Clergy, in the interest of the Congress, made the liberty of Mr. Rivington's press a topic for invective in their pulpits, and applied the influence of their characters, and the motives of religion, to induce their congregations to stop the circulation of his paper.

The multitude in New Jersey were so inflamed by these arts, that they carried his effigy about their streets, accompanied with every mark of ignominy, hung it a whole day on a tree, and at night cast it into a bonfire, in terrorem to the offender. Their resentments, at last, were directed, not only against the printer, but against such as should dare to read his papers.

The following extracts from some of these arbitrary decrees, passed by the Committees of New Jersey, Rhode Island, &c., will be a sufficient specimen of their spirit and manner.

"RESOLVED, That this Committee will henceforth take no more of his "Rivington's) papers, pamphlets, or any other public performance of his "press, neither will we deal with him in any other way; and we heartily "recommend that our constituents may take this matter into serious consid-"eration, and as far as it shall carry conviction to them, treat him with a "correspondent conduct."

After a profusion of abuse, the Committee of Newport, in Rhode Island, declare,

"Wherefore we think it our bounden duty to hold up that infamous parricide, James Rivington, to the continent, in this odious light;

"RESOLVED, therefore, that it is the opinion of this Committee, that no 'further dealings or correspondence ought to be held with the said Riving"ton, and we recommend it to every person who takes the paper called "Ricington's Gazetteer, immediately to drop the same; and also take the lib"erty to recommend a similar conduct towards him to the other towns in "this colony.

"HENRY WARD, Clerk."

This was a language well understood in America. To contradict the express pleasure, or to differ from the sentiments of committeemen, were sufficient evidences of disaffection; on a mere suspicion of which many have, to their cost, found themselves exposed to the severest punishment.

Accordingly, the printer was so deprived by these manœuvres of many hundreds of his customers, and had great difficulty, or found it impossible, to obtain his legal dues from many others. Some of the people of Connecticut, not content with this exercise of their resentment, stopped the postrider, and took his Gazetteers out of the mail, and committed them to the flames .- Mr. Rivington being undismayed by their threats and violence, continued to print and circulate performances which opposed their measures, and exposed their reasonings, giving at the same time the fullest and freest admission to whatever was written on the side of the Congress .-The factions, not being able to withstand their antagonists in argument, determined to secure the press to themselves; and, in order to do this, projected a plan to seize the person of the printer, and oblige him to comply with their demands. With this view, a body of armed ruffians concealed themselves at night in the neighborhood of his dwelling-house, whilst two of them in sailors habits knocked at his door, enquired for him under the plea of business, and as soon as he was within their reach, seized on him. and attempted to carry him off by force to the armed body; but fortunately for the printer, his cries brought some of his neighbours to his relief, who rescued him from their hands. His house was also beset by a great mob, threatening immediate destruction if he did not surrender himself. To elude their search, he was obliged to conceal himself in a neighbouring house, in the chimney of which he continued many hours in despair of surviving until the morning. Unable to find him, the mob dispersed, and he escaped on board his Majesty's ship King Fisher, the commander of which, Capt. James Montagu, gave him a generous reception. On the departure of the King Fisher, he was removed on board the Asia, man of war, Capt. George Vandeput, who afforded him a kind and hospitable asylum. While he was on board these ships, the Provincial Congress at New York took his case under consideration, and, on his making a submission, recommended to the people, that he should be permitted to return unmolested to his family, and to earry on his business. But notwithstanding his submission had been accepted, and he had thrown himself into their power, on the faith of the resolve of the Congress, the Republican faction were determined to deprive him of the capacity of offending them any longer; and having expressed much indignation at his newspaper of the 16th of November last, (containing an explanation of Lord North's motion for accommodating the American disputes, the address of the town of Manchester to his Majesty, and a computation of the whole force employed by Great Britain in the last year of the late war, amounting to 499,000 men,) a body of 75 light horse, armed with firelocks and bayonets, came suddenly, about noon-day, on the 23d of November, into the city, surrounded his house, whilst a detachment took possession of it, seized all his printing-materials, and, after plundering and destroying many copies and other property, they carried away the printing-types in bags upon a cart to the town of New Haven, in Connecticut: at once putting a stop to the exercise of his profession, and forcing him to quit his house and a large family, and seek an asylum in his native country.

Four days after this robbery, he received a letter by post from the Λ rmy at Cambridge, of which the following is a copy :

"MEASTER REVINGTON,

"Will you never have don printing Tory I swear now your 499,000
"Paper Men are strong marks of your Tory Principles, and if you dont
"leave of, some of us will very soon pay you a Visit, which perhaps will "not be friendly. Take Advice before it is too late from a Person who "owes you no Ill will, but who loves his Country,

"JEDIDIAH YANKEE, "Cambridge.

"To Mr. Rivington, Printer in New York, these."

It appears, from undoubted evidence, that the avowed design of the republican mob was to secure his person, and by torture and mutilation (as an amputation of his ears and slitting his nose) to force him to a discovery of the several authors of a long list of books, and other political pieces published in his newspapers, in defence of the rights of the British Parliament, which must inevitably have involved many respectable persons in misery and destruction. Finding, from such frequent attacks and avowed plans against him, that he must either lay aside his business, risk his property and life, or forfeit his honour, and renounce his principles; and being apprized of the designs of the Congress to seize on the friends to Government; he determined to leave the place, and accordingly embarked for England. Some time before his departure, two persons deputed by the faction, came to him with overtures, proposing, that if he would discover the names of the writers in his paper, and of some political pamphlets which he had published, he should have ample protection, be received into favour, and be supported in a most profitable manner in his profession. He rejected these proposals with the indignation becoming a man of honour.

By these cruelties he is now driven from America, without business, and deprived of the means of maintaining a family, consisting of twelve persons, whom he left behind him in New York. Added to all this, he has been proscribed and proclaimed an enemy to America; of many thousand pounds due to him, he has no prospect of collecting a fifth part; and the odium which has been excited against him, by his opponents, is so high, that it will be difficult for him, even when the present disputes subside, to recover his former extensive business. His greatest enemies can assign no other reason for the punishment inflicted on him, and the hardships he has undergone, than that, acting agreeably to the principles which ought to govern a person in his profession, he published impartially performances written on both sides of the present American question.

Let every Englishman who may read this plain narrative, learn to value as he ought the blessings of equal liberty and law, which he enjoys in this country: let him not suppress his generous indignation at the perfidy of the traitors, who, while they were declaiming on the eacred nature of property, were destroying the property of their fellow subjects; while they clamoured against tyranny, were abolishing the freedom of the press; whose religion is selfskness, inhumanity, and hypocrisy; and whose liberty is the power of persecuting others.

CORIOLANUS.

A Description of the City of New York, 1806.*

BY A RESIDENT OF PHILADELPHIA.

NEW YORK, August 1806.

After tea, I walked through a part of the City, and fairly lost myself. It has, at least some parts of it, a very brilliant appearance in the evening, particularly Broadway. The shops are mostly open and very handsomely lighted, which gives then an air of great splendour. There appear to be many handsome walks here, at least they appear so at night. Opposite to my lodgings stand two houses which were built towards the conclusion of the Seventeenth Century, as I am informed by the iron dates annexed to the wall. They are certainly uncouth enough, and are built with the gable ends fronting the street; from that part of it where the roof commences, a man might walk up the wall to the peak of the roof with tolerable safety, the mason having kindly built it so as to form steps of about ten inches in height. They were probably once thought handsome, but tastes are strangely altered, and the taste in which they were built was probably the taste of a Dutchman.

* * * * *

Yesterday I visited Mrs. P——, and was very politely received, and invited to dine with the family to-day. They seem much pleased with this City, and its inhabitants. Mr. ——, particularly, says he has received more attention from people of the first rank, during his short residence here, than he would have done for years in Philadelphia. Mr. ——inhabits a house of a size, and in a relative situation for gentility, which in Philadelphia would rent for two hundred dollars per annum; here, he pays five hundred dollars; nor is it considered as uncommonly dear. Some rent for fifteen, and I have been told one or two for eighteen hundred dollars; but they are large and elegant, and occupied as Coffee-houses. House-ent, generally, is said to be much dearer than at Philadelphia, and provisions likewise.

You have doubtless heard of what I have thought the very absurd custom which prevails here of the people's changing their places of abode every first day of May: the true cause is said to proceed from the landlord's

^{*} The tone of this article is remarkable, because it treats of New York and her inhabitants as it would treat, now-a-days, of a city and people in a distant foreign nation; rather than as those which were under the same general Government, and less than a hundred miles distant. No better evidence of the character of the people of that period than is afforded by this article—J. S.

ncreasing the rent so often, that it becomes necessary. This may be true; it has at least some plausibility.

Notwithstanding Mrs. P——— seems so well reconciled to her new place of residence, I think she would willingly exchange it for the old one. It is true, she extols the streets, the markets, &c., of this City; yet it seems to be the praise which we generally bestow on something with which we ought to be contented, rather than something with which we are so.

Yesterday afternoon I wandered about New York, from dinner time till nearly night. I commenced my ramble at the Battery, which is a very fine walk indeed, commanding a view at once rich, various, picturesque, and in some directions unbounded. I stopped to gaze at every thing which in any degree excited interest. Every thing which is done here in a different manner, from that in which it is done at Philadelphia, I examined with as much attention as I could. For example, I observed that the method of weighing foreign produce here, to ascertain the amount of the duties or debenture, is very inferior to that practised by the weigh-masters at Philadelphia. There, when teas are to be weighed, from twelve to forty or more chests (according to their size) are weighed at once; here I saw them weighed singly, though their separate weight was less than ninety pounds. Bags of coffee are here placed in the dish of the scales, or balance, by which method no more than ten or twelve bags can be weighed at a time; and, when weighed, they cannot be taken out, without considerable inconvenience and loss of time. At Philadelphia, from twenty to twenty-five bags (or other envelops which admit of it) are piled on a plank, of ten or twelve feet in length, previously laid across the dish of the scales, and, when weighed, can be conveniently and expeditiously removed. The same inferiority in practice was evident in every other instance which fell under my observation. The time which is thus wasted is very great; and I am very certain that the same number of persons would weigh a given quantity of goods in Philadelphia in half the time that would be consumed here in doing it. How it happens that they continue to practice a method so slow and awkward, in a place where so much business is done, I know not : yet it is so.

At the wharf, I met with Mr. C.——. C.——. of Philadelphia, in whose favour I have drawn a draft for a small sum he kindly offered me; observing, that as I wished to stay here longer than I first intended, and this being an excellent place to get rid of cash, I might perhaps want it. This I do not think will be the case; yet it is better to leave the City with a full purse than in debt: admitting I could obtain credit, which, by the bye, has already been the case. A barber, having reaped my chin, and being unable to obtain specie in exchange for a bank-bill I gave him, gave me credit. He could not help it, otherwise I know not if my face would have procured for me what was the result of necessity.

I continued my ramble 'till I reached the extremity of that part of the City which fronts East-river. Here is a manufactory of stone ware, which I entered; two of the workmen were turning vessels of different forms, one on a wheel, exactly like those used by the potters at Philadelphia; the other was of a singular kind. The perpendicular iron spindle, on which is fixed the block on which the operator forms the vessel, is about fifteen or eighteen inches long, its point resting on a place prepared for it on the ground about four or six inches below the level of the shop floor; about half way up, was fixed a wheel, apparently three feet and a half in diameter, formed like that of a cart, except that the spokes extended in a horizontal direction, from the hub to the felloe. At the upper extremity of the spindle was what I have already mentioned, the block; the whole not exceeding twenty inches in height. On the right hand was a board, on which stood a vessel of water; in front, on the same level, was another, to receive the vessels when formed: the operator sat on a third one, having balls of wrought clay at his side.

After striking on a ball, he rose, and placed the end of a long pole against one of the spokes of the wheel, and whirled it round with great velocity for a short time, perhaps half a minute; the velocity it acquired by this operation was very great, and continued more than a sufficient time to enable him to regain his seat, and form a vessel capable of containing half a gallon, when the same process was repeated.

The furnace where the vessels receive their hardening very much resembles a baker's oven, except that the height is greater—about five or six feet. The one I saw, to begin with the entrance, had a door-way about four feet wide, and nearly the height of the kiln. The bottom on which the ware rests is formed of two arches, extending from the centre to each side, and is full of flues, to give a passage to the heat. The upper part, or roof, contained nine flues, four on each side, and one at end opposite the entrance, and, I believe, over the fire-hole. The whole building was of considerable thickness, and built principally of stone.

About a quarter of a mile from the kiln above described, is another immense building, constructed for the same purpose, which is circular, not less than thirty feet high, and wide in proportion; but as I did not enter it, I can say little as to its internal appearance. I was told by a youth who seemed to possess some knowledge of the subject, that it had never been used; but I saw evident traces of the action of an intense fire on that part of the inside which was visible. Perhaps it is the gigantic offspring of some inventive projector, and now stands as a monument of his disappointment.

The earth of which the stone ware is made, is found at South Amboy, beneath a covering of white sand. The person who wrought on the wheel above-mentioned informed me, that clay, equally proper for the purpose, is found on the banks of the Deleware, somewhere between Trenton and Philadelphia; that the ware was glazed with salt, thrown into the furnace during the burning; that the time occupied by the latter process was twenty-four or twenty-five hours; that the heat must be gradually and carefully increased, otherwise nothing would prevent the ware from cracking and becoming useless.

I am still perplexed to find my way through the crooked streets of this City, nor do I think I could obtain a tolerable knowledge of them in a month. The houses appear to me to be huddled together without regularity, like trees in a forest; and when I think I am travelling in the road I wish to go, I frequently find myself in one which runs in a contrary direction.

No person is compelled to walk here. If he wishes to visit any of the public places of amusement in the neighbourhood, he may travel in style, in an excellent and handsome hackney-coach, provided with good horses, careful drivers, and an obsequious footman, for twenty-five cents. Wishing to go to Vauxhall gardens, about two miles from my lodgings, I walked up Broadway to St. Paul's church, where I was saluted with "Sir, do you wish to ride to Vauxhall." I answered in the affirmative, and stepping to a coach, presented the driver with twenty five cents, which I had been told was the fare, and was surprised when told it was a dollar; that 4 might enter which made it 25 cents each. Scarcely had I turned, before a party was formed and entered the coach; I added one to the number, and in a short time was set down at the place of destination; and, after paying fifty cents for a ticket, entered the garden, and witnessed the representation of "The Agreeable Surprise." It was but indifferently played. However, the humour of Twaits could not fail to relax the muscles of the gravest philosopher; consequently, mine did not remain immoveable. After the play was over, the spectators were to be amused by the ascent of a balloon from a stage at the back part of the garden. Had it ascended the sight would have been very grand, for it took fire, by some accident, and was therefore held down, and consumed in a moment. The gardens seem to be extensive, and laid out with taste. They were handsomely lighted. I will not, however, attempt a more particular description of them, till I have visited them in the day time.

I very much regret not having an acquaintance to conduct me through the various windings of this labyrinth, to all the places worthy of a visit. Mr. P— promised to show me the most remarkable, if he could; but the time of this gentleman is too valuable to be trifled away in gratifying the curiosity of a stranger.

Will you believe it, I have not seen a waggon, cart, or dray, since my arrival? Those things which I have seen most resembling carts, are built, lightly, like those of Philadelphia, without front, side, or tail boards. They have posts at the corners, with two other pieces annexed to the front ones, running longitudinally, to support the load. I have seen something like a dray, except that it is shorter, lighter, and tail of it is about one and a half, or two feet from the ground; these have likewise supporters at the corners, where they carry any thing which requires packing, as bottles,

&c. It is done by placing a bed on the car. I have seen no teams of horses, nor covered waggons, like those so frequently seen at Philadelphia; and all the carmen wear long coarse linen frocks.

If, in this land of freedom, no one is doomed to groan beneath the iron yoke of slavery, yet he that visits New York, during the summer season, will probably see many sweating beneath a wooden yoke of labour. These are the venders of milk: instead of awkwardly travelling along, with a heavy bucket of milk in one hand only, they are thus accoutred. A piece of wood, which I call a yoke, about two feet long, is made to fit around the back of the neck, and rest upon the shoulders. To each end is affixed a chain, with a hook at the end. This chain is of such length as to enable them, the carriers, by stooping a little, to hook the handles of two large milk vessels, made of tin, resembling a grocer's tea-canister; containing three or four gallons of milk. One of these is thus carried on each side, to the houses of their customers. A loud cry, of "Milk's come," awakened me from a late nap, this morning; and when I arose, and went to the window, saw a Dutchman thus yoked. It being something singular, I thought you would be amused by a description of it.

There are no wharves here where fire-wood is regularly landed for sale; nor is it lawful to land it. It must be carried from the vessel to the car, and from thence to the house of the purchaser. It is said to be very dear. Pumps, of a large size, with long, clumsy, wooden handles, are found in the middle of many of the streets. Their removal is said to be gradually taking place, and it is expected they will soon be succeeded by something less clumsy and unsightly: they do not, however, furnish the inhabitants with all the water they use, the greater part being led through the streets and into the houses, from the water-works of the Manhattan Company.

There are few or no genteel Taverns in this city; or, if there are, I have seen none. There are, indeed, many of a superior kind, such as the Phœnix and Tontine Coffee-houses, hotels, &c., and a great number of what Philadelphians would call "Sailor's lodging-houses." When I say genteel, I mean such as those which men of respectability, in the middle ranks of life, are accustomed to frequent in Philadelphia. Some of the Coffee-houses are very large, and have a fine appearance: here, public sales of various articles of merchandize are frequently held.

The yards of the houses of this city are not so large and commodious, generally, as those of Philadelphia. The one attached to my lodgings is certainly not more than sixteen feet square, though the house is of a large size; nor, judging from the blocks of buildings, I cannot call them squares, do I think many of them can be even of a moderate size; this, to a Philadelphian, would prove very disagreable.

Many of the wharves are large and convenient, and have extensive ranges of excellent brick stores erected on them: many are very narrow, and inconvenient in the extreme, and make a poor appearance. I would like to remain here a considerable time; I would then have an opportunity of visiting the environs of the City, which are said to abound in beautiful and picturesque scenery.

I have visited New Federal Hall, or rather that part of it which is erected. When completed, it will be the largest and most elegant building I have seen. The lower story, or, perhaps, more correctly speaking, the foundation, is built of a fine brown stone, which is brought from some part of New Jersey; what is called the back front of the edifice is of the same material. The whole structure is not less than two hundred and fifty feet in length, and a proportionate breadth : it consists, or will consist, of three connected divisions under one roof; the two wings are built on the same line, while the central part recedes from it a considerable distance: this part is ornamented with four plain columns of white marble, closely connected with the front wall, which is built of the same material, adorned with pilasters, &c., which produce a good effect. It appears to be the intention of the builders to an nex a lofty portico to front of the edifice, which will give it an air of magnificence, which it can, in my opinion, never possess without it. Large quantities of marble are preparing for it; but as I have not seen the plan, I can only guess at what it will be, when finished, by that part which is so already.

Old Federal Hall is not a building to my taste; it has an old, but, to me. not a venerable appearance. The upper story projects over the lower, and is supported by brick pillars, forming a continuation of open, arched entrances, to a sheltered walk, extending along two sides of the building, between the pillars and the body of the lower part. This gives it somewhat the appearance of a market place, except that it has no stalls. The front of the upper part is supported by four large pillars, rising, not from the ground, but from the floor of the second story. Yet this building may have been constructed according to the most approved laws of architecture; and in the opinion of good judges may be very handsome: but, as I am not an architect, I call those structures elegant, or otherwise, as they appear to me to be one or the other. Those who do not like my description of this, or any thing else I may happen to see, may accuse me of want of taste, if they will. To skill in descriptions of buildings, particularly, I candidly disclaim all pretensions, and only endeavour to convey some notion of them to you, not in architectural terms, but in as plain English as I am able to write.

Trinity Church, in Broadway, is a dark colored stone building, ornamented with a steeple but little embellished; the windows are of the Gothic kind, having pointed arches, and apparently leaden sashes, and small glasses, such as were sometime since to be found in old buildings in ^{*} Evidently referring to the present City Hall .-- J. S.

Philadelphia; it has a portice in front, formed, I believe, of six clusters of brown pillars, four in each, apparently six inches in diameter, supporting a perpendicular section of a dome, surmounted with a mitre.

The Park is a handsome walk, but cannot be compared without disadvantage to the Centre Square a Philadelphia. It is, nevertheless, a very agreeable place, in which one may be sheltered from the noonday heats, and enjoy the cool breeze of evening. As it is situated at or near the intersections of several fine streets, and commands a view of several public buildings, these circumstances may make it, in the opinion of some, superior to the one above mentioned, yet, as a walk, or as a garden, it must certainly yield to it: it has also the additional misfortune of being unfashionable. This fickle and arbitrary dame frequently interferes with our enjoyments. The walks in the State House yard were once frequented by fashionable people: they had their day. The walk surrounding Mr. Dunlap's grounds succeeded them: this beautiful place is now but little visited. Centre Square is now as fashionable amongst the pedestrians, and this also will probably share the fate of the others, when once its walks shall be too deeply impressed with vulgar footsteps.

Last evening I walked to the Battery: there I found little company, and none with whom I could claim acquaintance: I therefore leaned over the railing which encloses the ground, and amused myself by listening to the regular and monotonous dashing of the waves, as they broke against the wall on which I stood: the evening was cloudy and starless, and scarce the solitary sound of a single tongue interrupted the silence which pervaded the walks. I do not nove remember in which of the elements the poets have been pleased to fix the residence of "pensive Melancholy;" but I think, should she be at a loss, a temporary one might be found for her on the water, when the winds are not too boisterous.

I have purchased a plan of this City, which enables me to find my way much more readily than before; it will likewise enable you to form a clearer conception of the streets, &c., of it, than you could from any description I am able to write.

I am quite alone here, though in the midst of many thousands of my fellow-creatures, for I have no claim on the attentions of any one: this reminds me of some eminent Englishman, who advised his friend to seek solitude in London, observing, that it might be more readily found there than in the country. I wandered about the streets from breakfast till dinner time, and from then till night, gazing at every thing new to me: sometimes I find myself in a strange neighbourhood, and am compelled to have recourse to my plan for information, or to the kindness of some good-natured passenger; at others I am accosted with, "Sir, I am a stranger here; "will you direct me to this or that part of the City?" I then produce the wonder-working plan, and send the stranger about his business, or we go together, and amuse ourselves with our own embarrassments, which we are sure to attribute to the crookedness and irregularity of the streets, and which we heartily join in condemning. This to a Philadelphian seems extremely strange: accustomed to behold at every corner the junction of two streets, which directly cross each other; to see in most cases the termination of them from the spot on which he stands, to pursue their direction from any spot to the extremity of the city, he is confused at the winding course those of New York take; he supposes himself travelling in a road which will lead him to the part he wishes to go, but finds himself at last in an opposite quarter of the town; in all their turnings, branches, and terminations, he can see nothing but confusion and perplexity; and it is only by continual repetitions of the same walk that he is at last able to find his way, without trouble and without inquiry.

Many of the houses of this City are large and elegant, particularly those in part of Greenwich street, Broadway, and a few others. They are generally covered with slate, or tiles of various colours; they mostly have the projecting cave and richly decorated mouldings, cornices, &c., which contribute to give a building a grand and imposing appearance; like the houses of Philadelphia, they are built of various materials; the principal part are of bricks, few or none of marble; some white marble fascia and window heads in the Philadelphia taste; these are few in number, and very many have no fascia at all, having the front wall plain, from the ground to the roof, which gives them a naked appearance; to me unpleasing, perhaps because I am unaccustomed to see them so.

This morning I accompanied "mine host" to the Fly-market, which is the principal one in this City; this being the case, a description of it alone will serve. It consists of three separate ranges, in one continued line, commencing at Pearl-street and ending near East-river, the whole forming a line perhaps as long as one of the ranges of the Philadelphia High-streetmarket. It generally resembles them also, but differs in particulars. The floors are of wood, which in wet weather makes them slippery and inconvenient. I do not find here that great plenty and variety of provisions in general, as at Philadelphia, nor are they quite so cheap. Fish, however, form an exception to this rule; they may be had in greater plenty, variety, and freshness; I have seen them jumping about on the stalls (which are enlosed on all sides, like a box, open at the top). I have seen none of what we call Snappers, and have been told they are not to be had here in such plenty as at Philadelphia; if this is the case, the lovers of turtle-soup must be content to feast on their favourite dish less frequently. I have not seen one pound of butter for sale since I have been here; but you must not suppose there is none to be had; yet it is said to be neither very good nor very plenty.

There is not found here that regularity or convenience which distinguish the markets of my native City. The fruit, vegetables, &c., with their owners, are exposed to all the injuries of the weather; they are ranged on the side of the market-house, in the street, on the pavement, so that there is no more empty space than is barely sufficient to accommodate the foot passenger. I found no waggons or carts loaden with the produce of the neighbouring country, ranged along the streets. Every thing which is exposed for sale, may be bought without walking half the distance which is necessary to do at Philadelphia; this is a convenience indeed, but it is a negative one.

Water-melons are plenty, but not of a large size, nor do I think of a very good quality; I have seen shallops loaded with them at the wharves on the North river, where they were exposed for sale. The cries of "Hot corn," &c., frequently saluted my ears, and reminded me of home. Not-withstanding I had so often been told of the custom of conveying fresh water in casks, on cars, through the streets of this City, it appeared very strange to me when I first saw it practised: where it comes from I forgot to inquire, and perhaps it is as well for you I did, for I should have probably told you as much as I knew myself, and made my letter longer than it will otherwise be.

Of the people of this City I can say but little: nor can it be expected I should learn much respecting them, during so short a residence here: the impressions I have received from my slight intercourse with them, is not unfavourable: they seem sufficiently polite and attentive: but as I offer them no incivilty, it would be strange if I received any. I have taxed the good nature of some of them pretty highly, by stopping them to ask my way when I have been at a loss to find it. They are by foreigners deemed more polite than my fellow citizens; but if they are, we must not look for the distinction in a boarding-house; for here I have made no positive ac quaintance with any in the house excepting "mine host;" I know not why, but think I should become more acquainted with a Philadelphia family in the same time. An actual acquaintance with the characters. dispositions, &c., of one or more persons cannot be made immediately in any place; but on entering into some families we are received as boarders, and in others as members of the family; every one who has ever been absent from home, will feel the truth of the distinction.

The public walks have a good appearance, but their beauty is rather borrowed than intrinsic, as I have before remarked; their situation with respect to the streets is very favourable, as it frequently affords a greater variety of objects on which the eye of the observer may rest, than would be the case if the course of the streets was more direct and regular. By way of example, from the Park you have a view of New Federal Hall, the Alms-house, St. Paul's and Trinity churches, the Theatre, and several fine streets. The public buildings are likewise seen to much advantage for the same reason, as is the case with the Banks of the United States and Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia; both being visible from other streets than those on which they front; and, by the way, I must observe, that I have not seen a single finished building which will bear a comparison with either of the two latter edifices. From the Battery, the prospect is extensive, various, and beautiful; the Jersey shore, with its new City lately incorporated; North-river, East-river, Long, Staten, Gibbet, and Governor's Islands, with the fort and barracks on the latter, vessels entering the harbour and leaving it, wherries and other boats going to and from the various places in the neighbourhood, &c., form a beautiful, lively, and interesting picture.

It is perhaps necessary to inform you that what bears the name, is not really a Battery, but only the site where one has been. It is now simply an extensive public walk, enclosed (as are the others) with an open railing, and bounded on two sides by the water; it is this which makes it so interesting, and were I an inhabitant of New York, I should like to pass the fine summer evenings there, particularly when the moon casts her mellow lustre on the surrounding waters, "when the busy hum of men" has subsided, and all is tranquil; when the slumbering winds just fan themselves into action, and bring refreshment to the panting bosom.

I am not much pleased with the outside of most of the Churches here (the inside I have not seen); they are mostly built of rough-looking stone. and have much the appearance of country Churches. There are some exceptions: St. Paul's, though built of stone, is tolerably handsome; it is situated in Broadway, and has a handsome steeple, which I would describe correctly if I could. The lower part (the tower) is built of fine brown coloured stone, and is ornamented with columns of the same material. higher up are two rows of columns, one over the other, surrounding the succeeding part of the structure; these appear to be wood, painted white. and are, at least a part of them, of the Corinthian order; the upper part of the front of the church is supported by four large pillars of the brown stone, so often mentioned, and forms a portico; in a niche stands a statue of the venerable apostle. The front of the yard, which is large, and occupies a complete New York square, is separated from the street by an iron palisade; the other three sides by a brick wall: the steeple is the finest in New York, and appears to great advantage. I had forgot to mention that on the four sides of the steeple, between the (lower range) columns are four clocks, or faces of them, to proclaim to passengers the slow but certain progress of time.

Patterson, August, 1806,

I arrived here last evening, after a very wet journey, of five hours, from New York: but this is, as usual, proceeding too rapidly. I ought to have told you that, previous to my departure, I called upon Mr. Murray, Secretary to an institution, called, I think, the Society of the Arts, and was told I might be gratified with a sight of their collection of statues, casts, &c., by calling the next morning at nine o'clock. As I had engaged a seat in the stage, which was not to start till twelve, I pleased myself with the expectation of seeing what is said to be the best collection of this kind on this side of the Atlantic. I was disappointed; the driver of the stage-coach gave me notice to prepare myself to depart at ten, so that I was compelled to relinquish my intention, and had the additional mortification of being obliged to wait his convenience till twelve, when I bade adieu to New York, entered the ferry boat, and after a short passage across the North river, landed at the city of Jersey.

So great was my vexation, that I question if I had not deferred my departure, for a few days, had not one or two powerful reasons prevented me.
That terrible season, when pestilential diseases commonly spread distress and sorrow through the cities of the United States, was present. The weather for some days had been warm, wet, and oppressive: those citizens
I conversed with labored under great anxiety, and every day expected to hear that the fever had made its appearance amongst them. Had I remained, and been attacked with a pain in my head (being a stranger), I might possibly have visited the Hospital against my will. At home we have equal reason to expect the dreaded visitor; I therefore thought it best to proceed on my journey.

I expected to be enabled to give you a more correct account of Vauxhall-gardens, and, therefore, visited them in the day-time; but when I arrived, found the gate shut; nor could all the noise I was able to make, by beating against it, induce those on the inside to admitme. The players were rehearsing, and I was obliged to walk to my lodgings, which were a long way off, and the heat extremely great and oppressive.

The only description I can give you of them is as follows : they are situated at the extremity of Broadway (at least to reach them one must follow the direction of that street), and consists of an enclosed space of ground. said to be three acres, but apparently more, laid out handsomely in walks and grass plots. Some of the front walks have arched frames erected over them for the reception of lights, which at night produces a very pleasing effect; like all places of the kind, this is planted with trees, and provided with summer-houses for the accommodation of company; it is adorned with busts and statues; but as I had but a slight acquaintance with these good people, I can give you but little account of them. I thought I saw old father Homer in a corner of the Garden, and a few others of less note. In the front of the grounds stands the Summer Theatre, where a company perform for the amusement of those who choose to visit it. The price of admission is fifty cents for Box, Pit, or Gallery; in truth they are all one and the same thing, for the spectators sit in the open air. Those who are inclined to dispute for the best seats, would here have nothing to do.

During my stay at New York, I visited the Shakespeare Gallery, opposite the Park, which contains a large number of pictures representing the principal scenes in Shakespeare's plays; many of them I had seen, some did not suit my taste, or, if you will, my want of taste. Among those which did are the following: that representing Scene Second, in Act the first, of the Tempest, where Prospero tells Caliban,

"For this, be sure, to-night thou shalt have cramps, Side stitches."——

The mildness and dignity apparent in the features of the former, and the beauty of his daughter, are strongly contrasted with the savage ferocity and canine expression so visible in the face of the latter, and produce a good effect.

Scene the fourth, Act the third, of Cymbelline; Scene the first, Act the fourth, of Midsummer Night's Dream; Scene the first, Act the fifth, of the Tempest, Ferdinand and Miranda playing at chess: this is a fine picture; the countenance of Miranda is the most beautiful I ever saw; there is life in the whole figure, a smile plays on her lips; and she appears almost animated. There are others perhaps as good, but I did not particularly notice them. There are likewise some good paintings; a full length picture of the venerable Washington, a bust portrait of Mr. Jay, one of David Garrick, said to be exquisite, and some others.

Having now bade adieu to New York, of the beauty, convenience, and advantageous situation of which, so much has been said, and which has so frequently been compared to Philadelphia, with disadvantage to the latter, I shall endeavour to point out, without attempting to decide between the disputants, in what particulars, so far as I had an opportunity of judging, it may justly claim the advantage, and in which it is not equal to its rival.

Its situation as a commercial City is the principle one. This is too well known to need elucidation. Here it has a manifest advantage, and a very important one; this, in the opinion of the mere merchant, will establish its claim to superiority. The manufacturer will likewise probably think that the best City, where he can find the best market for the articles he manufactures. Whether this is not counterbalanced by the dearness of houses, &c., &c., is a question which deserves the attention of those who are interested in its decision. It is not the number of dollars he may receive in a given time, which will make a reasonable man deem himself wealthy; but the intrinsic value of the dollars themselves, as it happens to be affected by the prices of the necessaries of life.

The neighbourhood of New York abounds with many beautiful prospects, far superior, as they are of a different kind, to those in or near Philadelphia. Those of the latter are confined, though, as far as they extend, are very beautiful and romantic; some may be pointed out, which I have not seen exceeded by any in or near New York. The prospects from several parts of the banks of the Delaware are very fine, comprehending a part of the City, with its wharves and shipping, the opposite shore of Jersey, with the town of Camden, &c. Perhaps few can be found on so small a scale which are more interesting than those which may be seen from any part of High-street, west of Centre-square. On the right is seen the Schuylkill, above the Upper Ferry, apparently rushing from the bosom of a forest, thence flowing with dignity and gentleness between swelling and verdant hills, crowned with woods, and adorned with handsome buildings, the whole forming a scene well worth the attention of a landscape painter, who could not readily, in my humble opinion, find a more interesting subject. However, if extent and variety are considered, New York has decidedly the advantage.

The markets for provisions—on this subject it is useless to dwell: those who have seen both will scarcely venture to compare those of New York with the prodigious ones of Philadelphia, considered in every point of view, except the plenty and prices of fish, in which particular I have already mentioned the superiority of the market of New York.

The people of New York may better amuse themselves on the water than the Philadelphians; their insular situation, the extent and beauty of the neighbouring shores and islands, and the vicinity of the sea, gives them an evident superiority. For their excursions on land I cannot say so much; they want extent, variety, and interest; and, if I am not much deceived, are very inferior, in the pleasures they are calculated to afford, to those of Philadelphia, of which the small number of pleasure carriages I have seen in New York affords a strong presumptive proof. The City itself is not so handsome, if want of regularity constitutes want of beauty, if narrow streets* are inconvenient and displeasing, if a great want of trees lessens the pleasure of the spectator; in these particulars I think New York is very much inferior to its rival. Of the inhabitants I know so little, that I will be silent. Of the general salubrity of the air, those who are desirous of information may consult the bills of mortality; in this particular, I believe, Philadelphia claims the superiority.

^{*} It must not be supposed that all the streets are narrow, but that they are generally so.

"Old Ely Market Butchers."

BY THOMAS F. DE VOE.

The good old stock of gentlemen of the white frock fraternity, who originated from that once celebrated place called "Fly Market," have now almost passed out of existence, even those who transacted their calling in either of the "Old Market" places of that day, but few are left, and soon all, in the ordinary course of nature, will disappear forever; leaving behind, however, some recorded evidence of many services rendered by them, as bright examples, and as being among the most patriotic, benevolent, and worthy citizens of "Old New York."

Before introducing them here, it would be well to say something in relation to that famous old market place, which although among the things of the past, yet how many pleasing memories it must call up from the storchouse of those "Old New Yorkers," who still linger on the verge of eternity, with the many recollections of "Old Fly Market," as being one of the most noticeable features of "Olden Time."

In the year 1699, this market place was established at the intersection of Maiden lane and Pearl street—the latter being then commonly known as the "Smith's Fly," and occasionally as Queen street—which started from the "City Gate" and the "Fly Block House," at Wall street, and ran along the shore of the East river to the present corner of Peck slip, from which place the first ferry to "Breucklein" was established.

Seven years after, a small wooden structure, as a covering for the market-people (who principally came from Brooklyn), was erected in the center of Maiden lane, east side of the present Pearl street, over a large open drain, which started from near the foot of "Rutger's Hill" (present corner of Gold street and Maiden lane) and emptied itself into the Slip or "Key," then known as the "Countess's Key," which took its name from, and in compliment to the Countess or wife of the Governor—Richard Coote, Earl of Bellamont.

This market place, soon after, was named "The Market House at Countces's Key," by which name it was known nearly thirty years, previous to which period it was accepted as the "Fly Market." The name of the slip was also changed about the same time to "Smith's Fly Slip."

The docking out and gaining land from the East river added street after street, and in the course of time three separate Market houses were put up: the first ran from the east side of Pearl street, to the west side of Water street; the second from the east side Water to the west side of Front, and the third, or "Fish Market," ran from the east side of Front to near the west side of the present South street. All these buildings, in the latter part of the year 1821, were demolished. $^{\circ}$

We find among the Ancient Romans there were three kinds of established butchers, viz. Two Colleges or Companies, composed each of certain numbers of Citizens, whose offices it was to furnish the City with the necessary Cattle, and take care of preparing and vending their flesh. In the year 1108, they were licensed by Royalty in England, under Henry the Second, and among the Guilds which amerced to the Crown they stood second. They were afterwards incorporated by King James the First, under his Letters Patent, bearing date the 16th day of September—the third year of his reign in England 1606—and in Scotland the nine and twentieth. They were incorporated by the name of "Master, Wardens, and Commonalty of the Arts or Mustery of Butchers of the City of London."

By the changes of inheritance to the Crown, a re-incorporation usually followed, when a grant passed the Royal Seal, and "all the Freemen of the Art of Butchers" were again bound to Royalty.

Their Arms were azure (blue), two axes salterwise (in the form of St. Andrew's cross) argent (silver) between three Bull's Heads couped (cut evenly off), attired or (with the horns gold) a Boar's head gules (red) between two Garbes (wheat sheaves) vert (green).

Among the Jews, to exercise the office of Butcher with skill and dexterity, was of more reputation than to understand the liberal Arts and Sciences. This office is yet highly honored, because it provides wholesome or "Cosha Meat." In 1660, when our city was under the Dutch Government, the Butchers chosen were obliged to be sworn before they could be accepted by the Government to furnish good animal food for the Burghers and other inhabitants of New Amsterdam.

So important were the position and duties of the professional butcher estoemed, in the early and middle periods of our history, that it was held paramount that he should exhibit evidence of good character, sobriety professional ability, and practical skill; and these had to be certified or endorsed by two or more well known citizens, as a security, that he could and would fulfill all the duties of his craft, faithfully, in preparing and selling wholesome, healthy meats. In addition to this, he was compelled to submit to a previous apprenticeship, under the supervision of an honest, reliable, skillful, established Master Butcher. With these well-certified credentials, he could then, and not till then, receive his Diploma or License, to kill and sell in the Public Markets such meats as were at all times fit food for human beings.

An "Old Fly Market Butcher" was expected to know every thing that related to the animal for slaughter. As to feeding, sex, breed, age, fatness, healthfulness, weight (both alive and dressed); to know how to slaughter humanely and cleanly; to cut up and dissect scientifically; to put it on the stall artistically, and then dispose of it with satisfaction to both buyer and seller. Sometimes he was also called upon (but two instances to my knowledge, in this market), by the Clerk of the Market (under an old Law—but a good one), to examine the flesh of an animal cut up on another stall exposed to sale—where there were doubts of its wholesomeness—and decide whether the animal of such flesh had died a natural death from disease, or by over-bleeding, or otherwise unwholesome; or whether it had been slaughtered in a healthy state. I have also known some to judge correctly—merely by looking at the flesh in pieces hanging on a stall—whether such flesh came from an Ox, Cow, Bull, Steer, or Heifer, and the same, in like manner, with all the other animals. This, however, is but a mere outline of the "Art or Mystery," or rather the professional knowledge of an "Old Fly Market Butcher."

Among the notable Butchers, prior to the Revolution, was John Pessenger, who served an apprenticeship with Andreas Regler. He was born in the wigwam of some friendly Indians (Mohawks) in the year 1742, while his parents were attempting to escape from the murderous Indian and French enemies, fighting against the Colonists, who had burnt their dwelling and destroyed their crops, near a place called Stone Arabia, in the State of New York. A few years after the Village of Saratoga, with some thirty families, were sacrificed by them, and at this time his brother, Seffrenes, was carried into captivity and detained by them for ten years before he was able to escape to his parents, who had long given him up as one of the murdered victims.

John married a young widow (with an only daughter, named Dorothy, who, after the Revolution, became the Wife of Henry Astor⁵), by whom he had two sons, named Andrew and John, both of which became Butchers in the "Fly Market." Andrew, in 1797, began business and continued until the War of 1812, when he entered into the Naval Service, on board of the U. S. Sloop of War Wasp, and was in the engagement between that vessel and the British Sloop of War Reindeer, on the 28th of June, 1814. In the list of "severely wounded" in that action we find the name of Andrew Passenger; he dided of his wounds.

The other son, John, Jr., in the year 1796, purchased, at public auction, stand No. 62 in the same Market, where he continued until drafted for service in the same war, from which he was honorably discharged. He had previously served out his time in an Artillery Company, under the command of Captain John Menus. He died in 1818.

The patriotism of the father, John Pessenger, Sen., early led him into the "Liberty Boys," and when the Continental troops were assembled in the city he was solicited to supply a portion of them with provisions; and being well known among the Farmers and Graziers of West chester County and Long Island, he was enabled to keep them well supplied: which fact brought him to the notice of General Washington, who found in him a trustworthy and confidential man.

On the retreat of the Continental Army to Harlaem Heights, Pessenger accompanied them, and became installed with additional duties in the purchasing of Cattle and other live stock.

The morning on which the Battle of Harlaem Plains was being fought, Pessenger was engaged in a barn at his vocation, slaughtering for the Army, when he received a message from Washington for him and his men to discontinue his work and attend to the wounded; and to Pessenger's especial care he recommended his friend, the severely wounded Major Leitch; and when afterwards leaving them, with much feeling Washington said, "Pessenger, I commit Major Leitch to your charge, and do not leave him, until I see you again, unless I am killed." Pessenger had the wounded Major conveyed to a farm house, where he remained with him, doing all, and more than all, that was ordered by the surgeon. The next day Washington visited his sinking friend, and found, from the nature of his wounds, that he could not live: although, no doubt, from the careful nursing and attention, he lived some fourteen days, when he expired. Pessenger said that Washington was very much affected upon each visit, and especially so when the Major died.

Pessenger continued with the Army to White Plains, where his acquaintance with the country greatly assisted to furnish provisions for the Army. In the mean time the British General Howe, then in the possession of the City of New York, had been very anxious to procure several persons, who were acquainted with the country round, to procure him the necessary supplies, and having heard through one Manold—a Tailor in New York (who happened to be Pessenger's brother in-law)—his relationship with Pessenger, whom he induced to visit Pessenger, and, with large rewards, to engage him if possible. Manold found Pessenger and offered him 500 guineas as a bonus, and a large salary besides, to engage in the service of Howe. Pessenger's patriotic blood was up in a moment, and quickly told his brother-in-law that "General Howe could not buy him with "all his golden guineas, and he might take them back and tell Howe to—" use them in some other manner. At the same time he threatened Mānold with bodily harm if he did not leave the place immediately.

When peace was proclaimed, Pessenger returned and took possession of his habitation (corner of the Bowery and Bayard street), as well as his old stand No. 1 Fly Market, from which he had been deprived of for seven long years; but affliction soon followed by the death of his beloved Wife.

Washington became President of the United States in 1789, and shortly after removed his residence to Franklin square, then known as No. 1 Cherry street, in this city, and where he sought Pessenger to furnish his table with meats, which in the course of time led Pessenger to occasionally visit Mr. Tobias Lear, the Secretary of Washington, at the latter's residence, where, after a time, he became acquainted with one of Mrs. Washington's waiting maids, Miss Maria M. Henigar, the daughter of Christopher Henigar, remarkable for her constitutional health and beauty. The visits became quite agreeable to both parties, and finally it was so interesting, that when Mrs. Washington moved to Philadelphia, Miss Henigar could not be induced to remove with her, as she had made up her mind to join Pessenger in the holy bonds of matrimony.

This remarkable woman celebrated her one hundredth year on the 19th of August 1867, being born—or, in the words of the Church Register—"Maria Margaretta, daughter of Christopher and Eva Hennegar—Born August 18, 1767." Her death, however, took place a few months after her hundredth year celebration (being 100 years 6 months and 11 days), having outlived her husband—the patriotic John Pessenger, over fifty-six years—as we find his death recorded on the Fourth day of July, 1811.

George Powers, Sen., is another name which demands from history at least a line of record; although tradition says he was a Hessian soldier, who, during the Revolution, came over with the British Troops to help quell the patriots, my examination of the subject, however, I think, will convince those interested that he was not one of those hirelings; but, on the contrary, he was one of those who suffered much for the love of his adopted country.

Fifteen years before the Revolution took place, we find George Powers serving—with Israel Horsefield, Sen., a Butcher in the "Old Slip Market," who had purchased of the Captain—which brought Powers from "father-land"—a certain time-service as payment for his passage. This time-service, or any portion of it, Powers was privileged afterwards to redeem, by paying a certain sum of money; which gave him the name of a "Redemption-ist." There were also another class of poor Emigrants, whose time was sold for their passage, without this privilege of redeeming themselves, before the expiration of their time—these were called "Servants."

When Powers' term of service had expired, we find he had gained not only a knowledge of his profession, but also saved money enough to commence business in the "Fly Market." From several old documents yet in existence, enables us to show that he had been occasionally engaged in the purchase and sale of slaves—which was quite a common occurrence in that day—as well also as in the purchase of "White Servants," one of which he advertises in 1774, as a "Run Avay—a white boy, named George Wilmot, Twenty years old, of thin visage, light colored hair, with a mole on his left cheek. Had on when he went away, a light drab jacket, blue duffil Trowsers, and a hat. All persons are hereby warned from harbouring or giving him any credit on my account."

"George Powers, Butcher in the Fly Market."

On the breaking out of the Revolution, Powers took sides with the "Sons of Liberty," and joined a Company called "The Brooklyn Troop of Horse," under Captain Adolph Waldron, who was an Innholder at Brooklyn Ferry. This Troop was first in the service of General Greene, who ordered them to seize all the fat stock of the disaffected for Commissary Brown on Long Island. They next drove off stock under General Woodhull, and after the defeat at Brooklyn, in the month of August 1776, as they were proceeding eastward to join Colonel Livingston, they were ordered off the Island by Colonel Potter. Powers, with several other Troopers, crossed the Sound from Huntingdon to Norwalk, leaving their horses behind, which were lost to them; and we find these men in Dutchess County, New York, two months after, in destitute circumstances; when they received their pay from the Convention.

Before the termination of the War, although it was known to be near, Powers received privilege to return to Brooklyn, where he again commenced business, as we find on the twelfth of October, 1782—"Ran Away from George Powers, Butcher, at Brooklyn Ferry, a young negro fellow named Cato"—for which he offers two guineas reward. Then early in 1784 he also gave "Notice, that all persons indebted to George Powers Senior, of Brooklyn Ferry, are desired to pay their respective debts to no person but himself; likewise not to trust any person on his account."

Powers' early return gave him many advantages—first: in establishing a profitable business before the British Troops left the country; then there were offered many opportunities for investing a small amount of money in various ways, as in teams of horses, cattle, wagons, &c., which the retreating British Troops could not carry away with them. These investments, after a few years, returned large profits. His gains were laid out principally in landed property in the Town, which afterwards became very valuable.

In 1785, an Independent Meeting-house was incorporated in the Town, in an old brick house, now located about No. 43 Fulton street (Brooklyn). In this building the Protestant Episcopal Service was read; and from that beginning afterwards originated St. Ann's Church. Among its first officers appear George Powers, Secretary. Two years after, he became a Church Warden, which office he held until his death, which occurred in the month of April, 1826, when he was aged eighty-two years. In the mean time he was frequently a lay Delegate to the Diocesan Convention. He was also one of the Vestry, as well as one of the most liberal benefactors of the Church, giving one thousand dollars on one occasion. He, however, was considered wealthy, being in possession of a large and valuable property, which afterwards proved so, when his estate was sold for about five hundred thousand dollars.

^{*} See Historical Magazine, Vol. 11, Second Series, November and December Nos., 1867.

Powers retired from business in the Fly Market about the year 1790, and turned his attention in keeping fine stock, to employ his time and the many acres of land belonging to him. Some of his fine Cattle are yet in the recollection of an "Old Fly Market Butcher" (Daniel Burtnett, Esq.).

In the month of February, 1793, we find—"A Calf was brought to the "Oswego Market" (which once stood on the southeast corner of Broadway, and running down Maiden Lane) "yesterday, raised by Mr. George Powers of Brooklyn, but 22 months old—the four quarters of which weighed 744 lbs., Hide 100 lbs., Tallow (Rough Fat) 87 lbs.—Total 931 lbs." Then nineteen years after, (in March, 1812)—"Fat Beef for St. Patrick's day:—The three year old steer exhibited at the 'Coffee House' (then corner of Wall and Pearl street) this day, supposed to be one of the best ever seen of his age, and fatted by George Powers, at Brooklyn, will be offered for sale by (one of his old Apprentices) David Marsh, No. 38 Fly Market, on Saturday next."

Jotham Post, another prominent character, was in his day considered one of the most expert and scientific Butchers in the profession. He studied the anatomy of the animals which he converted into food, as the surgeon studied that of man. He was a man of education, yet his kind and trustful disposition of times, by the unscrupulous, led him to be imposed upon.

He was born and brought up in the village of Jericho, Long Island, where he served an apprenticeship, and became attached to the Society of Friends.

In the year 1768, we find him named as one of the Executors to the estate of Susan Wright, and then attending at the Fly Market. After the Revolution had begun, he removed to Brooklyn, for better protection, as he was a man of peace, and therefore not called upon to take up arms; he was, however, obliged to swear allegiance to King George the Third. While living in Brooklyn, there were many occasions offered during the War, by which he could display the kindness of his heart, in the relief of the sick and needy, or the poor afflicted prisoner.

Soon after peace was proclaimed, he removed to New York, in Cherry street, where, in 1784, he, with some twenty-three Fly Market Butchers, certified to the good conduct of Richard Variano (another in the same market). Four years after, the Federal Constitution was before the Convention assembled at Poughkeepsie; when meetings of all classes of citizens were held, relative to a Grand Procession in New York City. The Butchers were not behind their comperers, as a general interest was exhibited every where, not only in our city, but in all the principal cities, Boston, Philadeiphia, Charleston, Portsmouth, Albany, Newark, &c., or wherever a Federal procession was held, there the Butchers were conspicuous; and, I may add, it was one of the most prominent acts in the general history of the Butchers of the Union. Among those in our city, who were deeply engaged, were Jotham Post, William Wright, John Lovell, Jacob J. Arden, Alexander Fink, and John Perrin. They prepared and arranged the details, and conducted their part of the Procession in a very liberal and splendid manner.

^{*} See "The Market Book," Vol. 1, p. 605.

On the morning of the 23d day of July, 1788, the Procession paraded in and near the Park (then called the "Fields.") At 10 o'clock, a salute of Thirteen guns were fired from the small Federal ship Hamilton (then on wheels in the procession), as a signal to move. In the Second Division (of which there were Ten(the Butchers were out over one hundred in uniform, headed by Jotham Post, Alexander Fink, John Lovell, and Jacob J. Arden. A Flag of fine linen, neatly painted, displayed on the Standard the Coat of Arms, viz.: three bullock's heads, two axes crossways, a boar's head, and two garbs, supported by an Ox and a Lamb, with the motto—

"Skin me well, dress me neat, And send me aboard the Federal Fleet."

Then appears a Slaughter-house, with cattle dressed and killing; a Market, supported by ten pillars, and another partly up, under which was written, "Federal Market," supported by "En" in letters of Gold: "Federal Butchers." The one in front was supported by William Wright, and the one in the rear by Mr. John Perrin. On one of the platforms stood a Butcher's stall, on which Andrew Pessinger (previously noticed) occasionally hung the various pieces of meat he cut from the quarters of beef lying on the Block.

The procession, after leaving the Park, proceeded down Broadway into Whitheall street, turned into Great Dock street (now lower end of Pearl), up through Hanover square into Queen street (now the part of Pearl above Wall). Here, at the corner of Wall street, they passed an emblem representing the "Thirteen States," inclosed in a circle of about two feet in diameter—Thirteen stars; ten of which were brilliant, one (designed for New York) half illuminated, and two almost obscure, with the initials of North Carolina and Rhode Island. On they went, through Queen street into Chatham, up Division into Arundel (Clinton), turning to the left—

- "In humble verse. But see the Butcher tribe!
- " Choice meat, already drest, the stall supplies, into Bullock (Broome) street, and through Bullock into Bayard's lane (Broome, on the west side of the Bowery to the high grounds known as Bunker Hill, or Bayard's Mount, which lay east of Bayard's House (the highest part) near the present corner of Grand and Mulberry streets.
- " And many a figure on the canvass flies."

On the eastern slope of this hill were ten extensive tables, loaded with provisions, waiting for these numerous guests. These tables projected in divers radiating lines from one common center, which was a little elevated, for the use of the Members of the Congress, civil and legislative magistrates, and strangers of distinction, who had a complete view of the whole.

The Butchers, on that day, furnished a capital bullock, weighing, dressed, one thousand pounds, which they roasted whole, and presented to the procession generally.

At the time of this procession, the Federal Constitution was before the Convention: ten States had previously ratified it: New York, however, had not yet done so, although it was under consideration: and only two days passed before she counted the eleventh State.

In the preparation of this grand procession, the Butchers and others, with their emblems, were representing New York as another pillar to support the fabric, with the broad foundation stone, already permanently laid on an imperishable rock; while the over-cautious and careful framers-(among whom we boast of a Hamilton)-were establishing, with jealous wariness, every section of these might we constitutional pillars of Liberty : nor left until they were pronounced perfect. Aiding their efforts, these One hundred patriotic Butchers issued forth to assist their co-laborers in the Convention, to place this pillar on a base so strong, that all future generations and ages might stand and feel secure upon its broad platform. And when the undermining, unconstitutional jobbers and disunionists, with their nefarious tools, sought to undermine, blast and divide this glorious structure into sections, their unhallowed stealthy purpose was seen and understood by the many patriotic descendants and successors of this famous One hundred, who, as one man, rose in an united strength, and moved onward and forward, wiping them from the face of our soil, thus made sacred to Republican Liberty.

Jotham Post® continued in the Old Fly Market until about the year 1795, when he gave up his business, having been induced to accept the office of Assistant Alderman of the fifth Ward, during the years 1794, and '5; and afterward that of Alderman of the same Ward, for the years of 1796 to 1800. In the mean time, he became the Superintendent of the New York Hospital, where he remained many years, and gave general satisfaction.

Alderman Post is yet spoken of as having been an honest, conscientious and humane Magistrate, as well as a suitable person for the care of the sick, maimed, or dying which were placed under his charge, while Superintendant of that noble institution. He died on the 25th of January, 1817, aged 77 years, leaving several sons to whom he gave collegiate education. William followed his father's profession; Wright and Jotham became Physicians, and Joel and Jotham (the latter giving up his practice) engaged as wholesale dealers in Drugs and Medicines. Jotham, Junr, served several terms in the Legislative Councils of our State, with marked ability and honor; he died in the month of May, 1817, at the age of 46 years.

William Post succeeded at his father's stall, No. 41 Fly Market, where through a long, active, and industrious life, he sustained the character of an honest man and a valuable member of society. With his profession he became a large shipping Merchant; and while two of his ships were coming out of the port of Gaudaloupe, they were unfortunately wrecked, becoming a total loss, which misfortune nearly ruined him. Mr. Post afterwards confined himself more closely to his profession, which he well understood in all of its various details; and more particularly in the curing and packing of beef taken from the very fine animals which he largely dealt in. His occasional style of advertising some of these choice animals, appears to us now as being quite original; in one of which he thus notices: "Miss Newsham—having for these six months past, been the admiration of all who have beheld her, propose, on Thursday next, at Mr. William Post's in Viney (Winne, now Mott) street—directly behind the 'Bull's Head' in the Bowery. (on the site of the present Bovery Theatre) to afford her admirers an opportunity of taking their last survey of her substantial personal qualities.

"F To prevent mistaken notions, the public are respectfully informed that Miss Newsham is an English Cow, bred by Mr. Robert Heaton, at Newsham in Yorkshire, (England) and fatted by him at Throg's neck, near Westchester. Her beef will be exhibited (on Stall No. 41) in the Fly Market, on Saturday next, April 16th, 1796."

About the year 1807, Mr. Post changed his stand to No. 29; and, two years after, he again changed to No. 39; in the mean time, he, with William Wright, supplied the City Poor, through the Committee of Ways and Means, who, in consequence of the many suffering poor, during the Winter of 1807 and 8, called upon Messrs. Post and Wright to furnish, "an extra quantity of beef, for the purpose of supplying with food, certain objects of charity, who are not within the Alms House;" for which Cattle they were obliged to pay "from six to seven dollars and a half, per hundred weight," during that long inclement season; and they asked relief for the loss sustained by them, in delivering "Twenty-six thousand and seventy-five pounds weight of beef, exclusive of, and over and above, the regular supplies of the Alms House." The Committee in their Report says-" From the prompt manner in which they supplied the Committee when called upon, and which far exceeded the quantity calculated upon, obliged them from the pressing demand, to purchase," at the above prices, they recommend, "That they be allowed for the beef so furnished the Committee, Four dollars and Twenty-five cents for each hundred."

Dr. Wright Post was justly ranked among the most eminent Surgeons and Physicians in the United States. It is said that some of his surgical operations were of the most extraordinary nature, and attended with wonderful success; and for above thirty-five years hewas the chief Surgeon of the New York Hospital. He died at his country seat, at Throg's Neck, in 1828, in the 63d year of his age. The generations of Jotham Post, Senr., are now quite numerous, highly respectable, and many of them very wealthy.

John Perrin, Senr., is also found among those who were conspicuously engaged in the "Great Federal Procession;" and a Butcher, on Stand No. 54 Fly Market. Although not so brilliant in "book learning," as some, he was possessed of quick perceptive faculties, a good judgment, and which, combined with industry, enabled him to pass through life successfully. He was born in Roxbury, Massachusetts, in the year 1762; and served an apprenticeship in Boston, as did also his brother William. After the Revo lution, business being dull in Boston, both brothers proceeded to New York, where John became engaged in the Old Fly Market, and William in the Oswego Market, which then stood on the corner of Broadway, running down Maiden lane.

In 1784, John Perrin was deeply engaged, in behalf of the profession, against the authorities, for an infringement on their rights, but was not at that time successful. He was not, however, to be shaken from his purpose; and with several other leading men, he continued to labor for about five years, when his efforts were crowned with success.

Mr. Perrin brought up a large family, of whom three of his sons were Butchers—John, Junr., David, and William, all of whom inherited the patriotism of their father, which they displayed by giving their services, in various positions, in the War of 1812. The father deceased the previous year (1811,) aged 49 years.

John Perrin, Junr., is yet living, and one of the last five of the "Old Fly Market Butchers." He may be set down as a most remarkable man for his age, now above eightly years, with a stature as erect as at the age of twenty years, and a finely formed body. He was always fond of a good horse, and the consequence was that he became an excellent rider: in fact, when Secenty-two years of age, he made a match for two thousand dollars, that he would ride a favorite mare of his, under the saddle, twenty miles on the Union Course, within an hour's time. This match was to come off on the same day that Lantern and Ethan Allen trotted their team race. However, the parties became so well satisfied of his great powers of endurance, (having this fact proved from his private or practising trials) that they forfeited to him.

In the year 1804, he joined the "Old Butcher Troop," then composed wholly of Butchers: the yearfollowing, he was elected Cornet; soon after, its Second Lieutenant; afterwards, its Lieutenant; and, finally, the Captain of this trustworthy Troop. He was an excellent officer, besides being one of the most expert swordsmen of the day. The war of 1812 brought his Company into service, some of which were dafted men, and the balance composed of volunteers—all of them were Butchers, except one, a cartman (named Brombush). It was ordered into service at the Wallabout, where it performed three months' duty. Their dress was a blue, short-tail coat trimmed with silver lace, which cost $60; buckskin breeches, $15; long boots, $15 to $20; a leather cone cap, with falling, or hanging, red horse-hair $$20. \;\;$ They were attached to the command of General Jacob Odell, of Westchester County.

John Perrin, Junr., when a boy of 10 years old, was stout enough to dress a Lamb in his father's place, near the "Old Bull's Head," (the present Bowery Theatre) put the carcass in a wheelbarrow, and wheel it to the Fly Market. Then it was the custom, in hot weather, to slaughter small animals on the morning of the day the meat was to be used.

After the death of his father he came in possession of his stall; where he remained until the Market was torn down. He then purchased a stand at public auction, No. 14, in the Fulton Market; but he afterward changed it for No. 24, where he continued until he gave up business.

He was a good judge of small stock, which he dressed with great neatness and cleanliness: he also displayed much taste in arranging his meats on the stall, which at times—in cool weather—rather partook of a beautiful painting than the reality. He was an excellent salesman; and this, with a gentlemanly deportment, honest dealing and industrious habits, have procured him prosperity and respectability, which he now meritoriously enjoys in his green old age.

John Pell, after the Revolution, served an apprenticeship with Joseph Mott; and, about the year 1790, he began business in the Fly Market, on one of the moveable stands in the lower Market, by selling "shall meat," in large joints and the carcass. By close economy, fair dealing, and industry he saved a few hundred dollars, when he became anxious to obtain a fixed stall.

About this period, the Common Council had the subject before them, to enlarge the lower Market house; and called on the "neighbourhood" to subscribe, but as subscriptions came in slowly, John Pell, with several other Butchers, agreed and petitioned the "Councils" that "each of them would willingly pay One hundred dollars towards repairing or enlarging the Market, if they would accommodate them with fixed stands, when it was finished." They also stated that they had served regular apprenticeships and produced characters which were certified by several Revolutionary officers, besides many old substantial Butchers, as being honest, industrious, and of irreproachable characters. The "Councils," however, had not yet concluded whether to enlarge or rebuild, but recommended the Mayor to "License all persons of good character who shall apply for a License, provided they had served a regular apprenticeship." The next year (1796) the "Councils" ordered a new building; when, so numerous were the applicants for stands, the "Councils" concluded to sell Fourteen at public Auction; on the 14th of November, of that year; and Mr. Pell purchased No. 70, for which he paid £385. On this stand, he commenced as a Beef-butcher, never striving to do a large business, but one which he could personally attend to, with the assistance of a Journeyman and an apprentice.

An old Fly Market Butcher, yet living, and yet doing business in the Fulton Market on Stand No. 21, was one of his early apprentices; and he speaks of his "Old Boss," John Pell, as having had a strong, but a well educated mind, honest and just in all his dealings, and a gentleman of the "olden time."

He would never importune a stranger, or a regular visitor to the market, to purchase his meat: if, however, they came to his Stall, he was generally successful in making a sale to them. He considered it wrong to run after, or to drum up, trade, or to hold out any inducement whatever, other than square honest dealing, to obtain customers. At an early period, Mr. Pell said to this apprentice—"Olley, my boy, if you sell my meat for a penny a pound, always give just weight;" "Take all that it amounts to;" and "pay all bills or debts in the same manner."

All his transactions, says this apprentice, were noted down in a book either by Mr. Pell or himself; and when his gains had amounted to a few hundred dollars, it was immediately laid out in real estate; and he became wealthy.

When his apprenticeship had ended, in the year 1816, Mr. Pell gave him a dinner. On that day, after his work was done, Mr. Pell asked him to change his dress, and come into the parlor, (which at that period was used on all great occasions). He went, and there he saw spread out a large table covered with all that was substantial and luxurious, including wines and other good things that went to make up a banquet for that day.

There were present several of Mr. Pell's intimate friends, to whom he was introduced: after which Mr. Pell stated, that his old and faithful apprentice was now out of his time; and as he had done so much better than he expected, throughout his apprenticeship-"because" says he, "when he applied to me to take him, I thought him too small, and was loth to take him. I also asked him, 'Why he did not engage work with ----, who would give him more wages?' Says my apprentice—'That man swears, and uses other bad language-and you don't.' Then, my friends, I concluded at once, that that little delicate boy would suit me, and he has. He has studied my interests, and I have studied his." Mr. Pell, then handed him a roll of money, which he said "he had collected, at various times, from the sale of his perquisites, while he was occasionally absent from my stall engaged in other duties during his apprenticeship." This roll of money and the introduction was a good start: and, although he has made much money and lost a great deal since, yet the same man-although now almost worn out-with the same character, still lives in Albert Fisher, one of the last five of the "Old Fly Market Butchers."

John Pell, in his day, was somewhat prominent and influential as a public character; and although, not an active partisan, yet he was sought after and compelled, by the public voice, to accept the office of Assistant Alderman of the 10th Ward, for the years of 1810, '11, and '12. He also early in life became attached to St. Stephen's (Episcopal) Church, where he became a prominent member. In the month of August, 1819, in the 50th year of his age, he died as he had lived, a good Christian.

Thomas Gibbons was another most worthy, generous and public-spirited-gentleman, who like the preceeding, was among the last to leave the "Old Fly Market." Mr. Gibbons was a man of decided talent, which he often displayed in defence of the profession: always on the lead to encourage agriculture, as well as paying special attention to the breeding of fine stock—in getting up Fairs, offering premiums, paying liberal prices for choice cattle, etc. In public or private meetings, benevolent societies, or patriotic celebrations, Thomas Gibbons was always found in the foremost rank.

The general illumination in honor of Peace between the United States and Great Britain, took place, in New York, on the evening of 27th February, 1815, when the various public buildings, hotels, private residences, stores, &c., were adorned with transparencies, patriotic mottoes, &c., all brilliantly lighted up. By common consent, the Butchers, on the previous Saturday evening (25th) dressed their stalls and splendidly illuminated all the public Markets. Mr. Gibbons' Stall especially attracted much attention; and, on the following Monday evening, his house, No. 213 Bowery, the press says, had a large "Transparency representing a FAT Ox, leading to the slaughter, with the motto, Peace and Plenty."

Perhaps no event however was so conspicuous with the butchers (except the Federal Procession, in 1788) as that of the Canal Celebration, when the skill and liberality of Mr. Gibbons stood forth boldly and bountifully, although greatly assisted by many others in the profession. (For this account, see "The Market Book," vol. i. p. 506.)

As early as 1806, Mr. Gibbons became engaged in purchasing fine or premium cattle; and, in 1809, he purchased the celebrated pair of "Connecticut River Cattle," from a Mrs. Partridge. In 1813, he advertised to show "The most complete carcass of Beef," on his Stall No. 14, Fly Market. This Ox was fatted by Mr. Oliver Bagg, West Springfield, Connecticut River. Other fine animals followed; and, in 1820, "The extraordinary pair of Cattle, Monarch and Sovereign, raised by Philip Fink, of Orange County, which Mr. Gibbons purchased at Twenty-five cents per pound." A few days after, the press informs us that Mr. Gibbons has sent to the President of the United States, an elegant piece of beef, cut from the "Monarch," the largest and finest of his cattle.—Oh! what a world is ours! While a President is feasting on a Monarch, on one side of the water, the people are mourning for the death of theirs, on the other. (George III.)" [°]

^[*] The next year (1821) a report of the assassination of George the Fourth in Ireland, was got up in the Fly Market, one morning, before breakfast, and before nightfall it was through the city. In a week or two, it had spread through the country—the press says—"With the rapidity of lightning. It started from this city in the Steam Boat.

The next year (1821) Mr. Gibbons purchased twenty fine cattle which had taken the first premium, at the Spring Show and Fair of the New York County Agricultural Society; and had all their beef for sale on the 17th of March (St Patrick's day) on his and his many friends stalls in the Fly Market, from which place he advertises, "the price will be one shilling a pound."

Two days after, a Card appeared in the press dated from the Debtors prison, "With gratitude, the prisoners in the Debtors' Jail acknowledge the receipt of a plentiful donation of "Premium Beef" from Mr. Gibbons and the joint society of Butchers of the Fly Market." Even after the removal of Mr. Gibbons to the New Fulton Market, he did not forget the poor imprisoned debtors, who had then much increased in numbers; but, with a few friends, he had an extra festival prepared for them, on the 4th of July, 1824, which was thus acknowledged in the press. "The Butchers of Fulton Market have displayed their disposition to make the jubilee of our Anniversary general, by bestowing the means of a festival upon the debtors of the City prison. The benevolent acts of that class of our citizens affords us the highest gratification at all times. They are daily bestowing meat upon the poor, the fatherless, and the infirm." Then follows-"The poor debtors render their thanks to the good people of Fulton Market, for the abundant supply for the 4th of July, of meats, fish, vegetables, lemons, sugar, and brandy. Their healths shall be drunk this day at 12 o'clock." These donations were continued, years after, not only to imprisoned debtors. but to benevolent societies, old associates who had been unfortunate, or friends in need, he would lavish gifts or loans with a generousness, that at times they appeared excessive or at least too confiding. In fact, his generosity in the end, to a false friend named Sykes, ruined him and struck him down, even to death's door. A communication, in the press, thus notices his death.-" Died, on the 17th (November 1832) instant, of a short but severe illness, Thomas Gibbons, an old and respected butcher of this city. As an old friend, we cannot permit his name to go down to the tomb without paying a small tribute to one whose acts of benevolence when living were calculated to draw forth the admiration and praise of society at large. But a few years since, possessed of an ample fortune, his only ambition was that of bestowing it on the needy without distinction; and it may be truly said, that owing to his extreme liberality may be attributed his misfortunes; and we may add, that his fine feelings of humanity led him into for Albany, accumulating a host of additional circumstances, diverging on each side of the river as it advanced. At Manlius, this 'airy nothing' found a local habitation and name, being there membedied in the tangible form of a handbill. This we found reprinted in the 'Western Farmer,' published at Palmyra, accompanied with a string of sage reflections on the mutability of buman affairs, and the anticipated emancipation of the Irish nation. Our Southern friends also appear to have greedlly swallowed the rumour, and likewise to have made all the needful additions, which were wanting to render the story complete. The Editor of the Savannia Republican has even given the name of the assassin."

acts that prudence forbade, or self-preservation could not justify, which eventuated in poverty, but not dishonor: and we can bear testimony that he bore up against accumulated difficulties with that spirit of Christianity that truly belonged to him. Persecution alone would occasionally compel poor frail nature to yield, but it was momentary. To say aught that could be said against this good man's life, it was only tarnished by misfortune.

Another prominent man in the profession was David Seaman, who, after serving "a regular apprencticeship with John Doughty, Junior, Butcher, of No. 50 Fly Market," (a resident of Brooklyn) made application in 1795, by petition, stating that he "has understood a certain number of Stands were to be granted in Fly Market, and hopes by this recommendation that he may be one of the number," &c.

The following sixteen old Fly Market Butchers certified to his being honest, sober, industrious, and well versed in his business:

John Garrison,	Wm. Post,	John Doughty, Junr.,
David Marsh,	David Mann,	Isaac Varian,
John Fink,	Jacob J. Arden,	George Messerve,
Joseph O. Bogart,	John Lovell,	Stephen Hilliker,
James Hunt,	Edward Patten,	John Smith,
	G. Cornell.

With all these vouchers, Mr. Seaman was unsuccessful in obtaining a Stand, at this time; but, the next year, some fourteen Stands were sold at public sale by the Corporation, when Seaman purchased No. 71, for the sum of £290. These fourteen Stands were the cause of a prominent law-suit with the Corporation, after they had torn down the Fly Market buildings, and driven all the Standholders out of business, by which they obliged those who had money to purchase Stands in the Fulton or other public Markets, if they wished to continue business; and those who had none, were obliged to live as they could.

This suit at law, was conducted by David Seaman, who, in the end recovered cost, interest, and expense from the Corporation, who then settled with the other thirteen Butchers, on the same terms, the whole of which amounted to $10,272.46.

While living in Brooklyn, Mr. Seaman became much interested in the growth of the Town; and being naturally gifted with a quick and working mind, he greatly assisted in the formation of a Fire department, and in the establishment of better Ferry accommodations. He was elected a Trustee of the Town, for the years 1810, '11, and '12, and also one of the Fire Engineers for several years, besides various other duties. About the year 1814, he removed to the City of New York, where he soon became prominent in the profession; and for his many voluntary acts of kindness, in defending the rights of many besides those of the profession, he gained the respect and esteem of all who knew him.

He joined the Fire-department as a member of Engine Company No. 32; and was afterwards placed in the responsible office of Fire Warden. In 1832, he was elected Assistant Alderman of the 10th Ward; and, two years after, was sent to the Legislature, where by a consistent, noble, and generous conduct, he gave general satisfaction and also gained numerous friends. There had been, and was at that period, considerable political feeling between the friends of Daniel D. Tompkins and those of De Witt Clinton, both of which were represented in the Legislature, although the latter was greatly in the minority.

The Senate, on the 12th of April, 1824, passed a resolution—"That De Witt Clinton Esq. be, and he is hereby, removed from the office of a Canal Commissioner;" which was immediately after concurred in by the Assembly. Although David Seaman belonged to the "Tompkins party," he spoke and recorded his vote, and the only "Tompkins" vote, against the removal of Clinton from an office in which he was merely serving as an adviser, and without compensation; and, withal, without even cause or notice.

Mr. Seaman plainly told his party, after the votes were announced, "Gentlemen: by the injustice of your votes, you have made De Witt Clinton the next Governor of the State of New York;" and so it proved: their partizan acts awakened indignation among the conservative men, especially among the prominent citizens of the City of New York, who called a public meeting in the Park, on the afternoon of the 19th inst. (just one week after) to stigmatize the Senate and Assembly which removed De Witt Clinton, and to return him thanks for his gratuitous services.

Among the Resolutions passed, was the following—"That James Bene dict, John Morss, and David Seaman, three members of the New York Delegation, who had the firmness and independence to discharge their duty in voting against the removal of De Witt Clinton, deserve the thanks of this meeting and the thanks of this whole community."

At this period, Mr. Seaman had gained a large share of popular confidence and respect; and, no doubt, if he had been ambitious, his position would have been further advanced, but having enough of this world's goods and honors, his principal desire was quietness; and this he enjoyed but a few years after in this world, as we find this worthy man's death recorded in the month of October, 1828, in the 55th year of his age.

We now turn to David Marsh, once the occupant both of the Fly and Fulton Markets—in the former, on Stand No. 38, until the year 1813, when he changed it for No. 46, where he remained until the buildings were torn down; and while in this Market he did a large and profitable business.

Among the profession, he was considered one of the best Beef-butchers, as well as an excellent judge of cattle; in fact, he was often sought by many of the Agricultural Societies; and in all the Fairs held by the New York County Agricultural Society, David Marsh was selected as one of the Judges on fine Cattle. He was a gentleman of simple habits, unpretending and generous; of a most pleasant and social turn, and much respected for his public and private worth.

In the year 1793, we find Mr. Marsh, with several other Fly Market Butchers, belonging to Fire Engine No. 19, with Isaac Varian, another, as the Foreman. Mr. Marsh then resided on the west side of the Bowery, about where Houston street enters the Bowery—the opening of Houston street, carried away his old residence; when he built and removed into a new house, on the east side of the Bowery, a few doors below Houston, where some of his children yet reside.

In the year 1806, the Board of Health, after conferring with a Committee of Butchers, appointed seven of the profession to take charge of all the slaughtering. These were found to be David Marsh, William Wright, Jacob Tier, William Chivers, Daniel Winship, Jacob Varian, and Christian Miller. These services were rendered without compensation; and so well were they performed, that no complaints are to be found on record, either of unwholesome meats, or filthy slaughtering places, while they were recognized by the Board of Health.

In 1822 and '23, David Marsh was elected the Assistant Alderman of the Eighth Ward; and, in 1829, '30 and '31, to the office of Alderman of the Eleventh Ward; and he gave general satisfaction. But this was in the day, when honest, capable men were sought after to fill official positions.

Mr. Marsh occasionally made a display of premium animals, when extraordinarily fine; but usually his Stall was seldom without the choicest meat; some of which often found its quiet way into the Debtors' prison, benevolent societies, the poor or the Soup Houses: but for the recorded thanks which were often noticed, the next day, by the press, we, at this late day, would have been without that information.

It was once a common saying, among the friends of Mr. Marsh, that they "never saw Uncle David angry"—" or even out of humor." Among those who patronized him in the "old Fly Market," were several well known leading men—some may yet be living—who, for a joke, succeeded in perplexing and annoying him. They had previously agreed to meet at his Stall, at a certain busy hour, on a Saturday morning. They came on him suddenly, and all claimed to be waited on first. It was Uncle David here, and Uncle David there; we want our meat, and we want to pay for it. They bothered him so, that at last he went and sat down in his chair. "Now," said he, "if you don't all leave the market immediately, not one of you shall have an ounce of meat from my stall." It was said, that it was the first time they ever saw him annoyed.

Mr. Marsh was a sincere Christian, and a working member of the Protestant Episcopal Church; for many years attached, and one of the principal officers of, "St. Stephen's," at the same time, deeply engaged in the advancement of its Sunday School; and although, in the latter years of his life, a large heavy man, there were very few Sabbath-days when his scholars found his pleasant countenance absent from his Class. He died in the year 1831.

One of the last five of the "Old Fly Market Butchers," Andrew C. Wheeler, now an old man, appears the living representation of a model Butcher, having a clear ruddy complexion (without being intemperate); a perfectly smooth skin; upright in his figure, rather fleshy; with a bright and genial expression; and enjoying perfect health. In his day, he was one who well understood his profession in all its details; and might truthfully be termed an expert, in judging fine or premium cattle; being frequently called upon to assist in awarding premiums; often becoming a liberal patron in purchasing the same, by which he secured many showy exhibitions; and they appeared almost annually.

We find, in the year 1804, Mr. Wheeler with a petition before the Councils, asking for a Stand in the Fly Market; but, as there were none vacant, he was obliged to wait several years before he obtained Stand No. 41, on which he remained until the buildings were removed: then he purchased Stand No. 10, in the new Fulton Market; which he soon after changed for No. 19. On this latter Stand, I have often seen him displaying his beautiful ments, so scientifically cut up and handsomely arranged, that it appeared as if there was not one joint out of place, and the whole representing such an apparent picture, as to excite the attention of all passers by. In fact, I must acknowledge that I often attended there to study or avail myself of a lesson thus afforded on his Stall, as well as on those of the late George Haws.

Under the old Market Laws, the Market Committee was composed of certain members from both Boards of the Common Council, had control of the Markets, and were occasionally assisted in their various duties by consulting some of the principal Butchers of the several Markets, who were ever willing to give such information or propose such measures as would tend to the general good.

The Market Committee, in view of certain advantages, in 1835, sent Notes of Invitation to several prominent Butchers, who met with them and mutually agreed, that the Licensed Butchers should meet together and elect one Committee man from each Market, who from their number selected an Executive Committee of three, to consult with the Market Committee, at their various meetings. The Committee-men appointed/Andrew C.Wheeler, Daniel Burtnett, and George Pesinger, who were in attendance many years; and although changes were made at the annual elections of the members of the Common Council, yet the assistance of this Executive Committee was of so much importance, that they yearly—"Resolved, That the Clerk of this (Market) Committee, give notice to the Executive Committee or Butchers, requesting their action as formerly;" and it continued until just previous to the adoption of the Laws of 1843, licensing the "Meat Shops."

The duties and powers of these two Committees were various; they not only had the arrangement of the Markets, but a supervision over the Clerks and employees; settlement of difficulties; and, above all, they also were the Sanitary Inspectors, who, through the Clerks, attended to the cleanliness, and seized or ordered the meats or other unwholesome provisions out of the Markets. The eye of the professional and practical man was then daily and hourly in attendance, to guard and protect the public against diseased, dead, or spoiled meats or unwholesome provisions, without taking a dollar from the city Treasury.

Of the quick perception and practical knowledge of the profession, I refer to the following incident: One of the Executive Committee, Daniel Burtnett, was passing through his (Washington) Market one morning, when he discovered a case bullock, (one which had died a natural death from disease or other cause) cut up in pieces, and displayed for sale on — Stall. So sure was he of its being unfit for sale, that, without consulting any others, of the profession, he immediately informed the Clerk of the Market to have it taken out of the Market immediately. It was done; thrown into the Butcher's cart; and carried away to the offal dock. The Butcher's excuse was, that his journeymen had not informed him of his neglect, until it was seized; and but for the Butcher's good character, but less knowledge of his profession, his license would have been revoked, and he turned out of the Market.

After the old Market Laws were abolished—which took place in 1843—Mr. Wheeler left his old Stand and the Market forever, as the new Law had given a death blow to all the public Markets: and it also opened the door for the introduction of meats from a poorer class of animals, which has continued to grow worse and worse, and now we find that nearly three-quarters of the animals brought to the New York Markets are not fit for human food. This fact is too well known by every "old New Yorker," who is troubled at all with a refined or an epicurean taste.

A certain Editor, in the month of December, 1822, thus spake of "Good Living.—The English have long been celebrated for the excellence of their Roast Beef. So much so that poets have tuned their harps to the theme, whenever they have been so fortunate, (which is not very often according to the best accounts) as to come in for a fat slice of this delicious food. But if the laudable enterprize of our Butchers does not abate, we need not fear being behind hand in this respect. Indeed, we can now sing—as well as John Bull can by substituting 'Old England' for Columbia. We have been invited to view a lot of beef, which the reader will see by referring to our advertising columns, is to be offered in the Fulton Market to morrow morning, by Mr. A. C. Wheeler, and which we must confess has put us in the spirit of writing this paragraph. And we have no doubt, that those who visit the Market themselves in the morning, and out in for a share, will have a keen appetite for their dinners."

'Huzza for the roast-Beef of Columbia, Huzza for Columbia's roast-Beef,'

Daniel Burtnett, one of the last of the five "Old Fly Market Butchers," is still found on the busy walks of life; yet possessing an active, firm, and capacious mind, which, through life, has enabled him to sustain with ease and patience, the various duties detailed upon him, as well as the sore afflictions which all are liable to. His life, although varied, has been one of industry and integrity, which has procured him prosperity and respectability.

Mr. Burtnett served a long term in the Fly Market with a most worthy butcher, Eliphalet Wheeler, who instilled into him, besides his profession, the principles of honesty, integrity, and patriotism. While an apprentice, the war of 1812 took place, which brought forth thousands of volunteers of all classes, for various purposes.

The Master-Butchers, on several occasions, during the War, tendered their services to the General Government for the purpose of aiding in the erection of Fortifications. They first selected Brooklyh Heights as the field of their labor, on the 10th of August, 1814, and a right good jolly time they made of it; again, on the 25th of August the press notices—"The Butchers amounting to about two hundred, worked with a zeal and ardor almost unprecedented, and nearly completed the sodding of Fort Greene," Long Island. This large band of Butchers carried the Flag which was displayed at the celebration of the Federal Constitution, in the year 1788, already noticed. Then, again, on the 14th of September, with one hundred and twenty volunteers; and again, with one hundred and eighty, on the 20th instant following.

In the meantime, a meeting of the boys was called, when Daniel Burtnett, Valentine Merkle, and Henry Sparling were appointed a Committee, to make the arrangements with the "War Committee," who assigned this party of One hundred butcher-boys a location to work on the right of McGowan's Pass. The location, now, is just above Yorkville, near Fifth avenue.

Early the next morning, they started, headed with a fine band of music; following in the ranks was a large banner on which was painted

"Friends of our Country,
Free trade and Butchers' rights,
From Brooklyn's Fields to Harlaam Heights,"

They quit work at sundown, after having thrown up a breastwork of about one hundred feet in length, twenty in breadth, and four feet in beight, sodded complete; the material of which was carried from the foot of the hill and adjacent grounds. (See The Market Book, vol. i. p. 481.)

Mr. Burtnett began business on Stall No. 43 Fly Market, where he continued until the building was torn down. The next year, the Corporation exacted a premium of three hundred and ten dollars for Stand No. 56, in the Washington Market, where he conducted for many years, a large and profitable business—in fact until he was drawn away by the responsible duties of the office of President of the Citizens' Insurance Company; to this was added, in 1860, the election of President of the National Citizens' Bank; besides the clerical, religious, and other duties which now engage the greater portion of his time.

Mr. Burtnett remained and served as President of the National Citizens' Bank, six years; and so well did he perform the duties, that when he resigned, the Board of Directors presented him with highly complimentary resolutions, beautifully framed, which, in a late visit, I saw suspended against his parlor wall.

I have here presented a simple, plain unvarnished sketch of the few incidents attending those good "Old New Yorkers," who, in their day, presented men of real mark, of real worth, of real substance; and of all and every good which establishes the attributes which belongs to good citizens. These, however, are not all which the "Old Fly Market" has produced; as volumes of useful, wholesome, and interesting information could be written on the lives of the following eminent names:

An Ristorical Summary

OF THE SEVERAL ATTACKS THAT HAVE BEEN MADE UPON THE CITY OF NEW YORK, AND OF THE MEASURES THAT HAVE BEEN ADOPTED FOR ITS DEFENCE, FROM 1613 UNTIL 1812.*

BY SAMUEL L. MITCHELL, M.D. LL.D.,

I.

Capture of New York, by Captain Argal, in 1613.

We have been informed, that Verzazzano discovered New York, about the year 1524. Hudson visited it in 1609; and the Dutch sent vessels in 1610, to open a trade with the natives.

In 1613, we have the first instance of invasion by an armed force. Argal, the Governor of Virginia, after having destroyed the French settlements in Acadia, attacked the Dutch at New York, on his way homeward. Hendrick Christiaensen, the Dutch governor, submitted himself, and his people, to the Governor of Virginia; and through him to the King of England.

TT.

Restoration of the Dutch authority in 1614, and t'e continuance of it until 1664, when the English took it.

In 1614, Elkens, a new Governor, came out from Amsterdam, with a reinforcement. He threw off all dependence on the English, and bade them defiance. He built the fort at the South-western extremity of the island, where the Custom-house and parade now are. The States General of Holland made a Grant of it, under the title of New Netherland; under this possession, it was long held and known.

No important occurrence took place, until the reign of Charles II. King of England. In 1664, this Sovereign, disregarding the rights, claims, and settlements of the Dutch, granted all New Netherland to his brother James,

^{*}The following sketch was originally prepared, by Doctor Samuel L. Mitchell, for his private use. They are chiefly memoranda, arranged chronologically and with historical conexion, on a subject always interesting, and especially so at the time when they were brought together, in the year 1812. The author's attention was directed to it, in his official capacity as a Member of Congress; and although the materials for a thorough investigation of the earlier periods are much more ample at the present time—and some errors may be readily detected in the work, and differences of opinion may arise respecting other points, it is deemed best, to reproduce the document entire, for the future benefit of the historian who may refrect the whole by correction and addition.

As an exhibit of the defences of this City, at the opening of the War of 1812, this paper is peculiarly important. J. S.

Duke of York and Albany. This Grantee was afterwards the noted James II. of England, who was declared to have abdicated the throne; who was, thereafter, hospitably received by Louis XIV:, and whose successor was William III. the Dutch Stadt-holder. The Patent was dated the twelfth of March, pursuant to which, Colonel Richard Nichols, and his associates, proceeded with four frigates and three hundred soldiers, directly to Manhattan for the conquest of the Dutch. On the twenty-seventh of August in that year, the City of New Amsterdam capitulated to the English; and on the twenty-fourth of September, Fort Orange, [Albany] made a similar submission. In commemoration of the titles of their ancient Lord, the former has since been called New York, and the latter, Albany. The same year, the Duke conveyed New Jersey to Berkely, Carteret, and their associates.

III.

Extinction of the English power and restoration of the Dutch, in 1675.

In 1665, a Code of laws was compiled, called the Duke's Laws. They were transmitted to England, and confirmed by the Duke, in 1666.

In 1667, the Treaty of Breda was ratified. By this, New Netherland was confirmed to the English; and as an equivalent therefor, Surinam was ceded to the Dutch. This year, Nichols retired, and was succeeded by Lovelace, whose most remarkable act was, the purchase of Staten Island from the natives. In 1678, a Dutch war having broken out, a small squadron under the command of Benckes and Evertsee, after having committed ravages in Virginia for the annoyance of the English commerce, came to New York for the purpose of regaining their lost possessions. On the thirtieth of July, the Dutch ships moored under the fort, landing their men, and entered the garrison without giving or receiving a shot. The City and all New Netherland immediately assented to the same humble concession.

IV.

Restoration of the English authority in 1674, and the continuance of it, until the abdication of King James II. in 1688.

In 1674, Peace was made between England and the States General of Holland, by the Treaty of Westminister. In the Sixth Article of this instrument, New Netherland was restored to the English; and the English territories in Guiana to the Dutch. On this occasion, the Duke of York confirmed his title by a new Patent; and appointed Major Andros to be his Governor. To his authority the Dutch submitted, as far Westward as Delaware-river.

In 1682, the Duke of York re-leased to William Penn, his rights West of the Delaware; and especially his territories since called "the three lower "Counties on Delaware," now the State of Delaware.

In 1683, the first legislative Assembly was held under Governor Dougan, who, on his arrival, issued a Proclamation to the Sheriffs, for choosing Representatives to meet him on the seventeenth of December, in that year.

In 1685, the Duke of York succeeded his brother, Charles II., as King of England. He was the last male of the Stuarts who reigned, and was called James II. of England. By this event, the Proprietary government was changed to a Royal government. Dougan was restored to the administration of affairs in New York, in 1686. New York, among the other colonies, though favored with Charters of incorporation for its two principal cities, experienced the effects of that Prince's arbitrary rule, by being deprived of legislative Assemblies and printing-presses, and by being annexed, with the Jersies, to the jurisdiction of the four New England Colonies, under Governor Andros, as Captain-general and Admiral of the whole, in 1688. In the month of December of that year, James abdicated and went to France; and his daughter, Mary, and William, Prince of Orange, succeeded him, in February, 1689. At this time, Jacob Leisler seized the fort at New York, took command of the garrison, and ruled New York by a Committee of safety, until William and Mary were proclaimed there.

V.

Proceedings relative to Fortifications at New York, from the Protestant Revolution in 1688, to the Treaty of Utrecht, in 1713.

WILLIAM was entering upon the great Continental War in Europe, when he died, in 1701. The first Governor he appointed for New York, was Henry Sloughter, who reached his government, (3 W. & M.) and called the Assembly together, in April, 1691. The War into which William was plunging the nation, was continued with great vigor under his successor, Queen Anne.

Sloughter, in his speech of the seventeenth of August, 1692, mentions to the Assembly, that "the fortifications are out of repair." He was succeeded by Benjamin Fletcher, who, in his Speech to the Legislature, on the twelfth of September, 1693, recommends that "a Fort be built in this City." The Earl of Bellomont took the administration (10th W. & M.) in 1698. On meeting the Legislature, on the nineteenth of May, he uses these words: "I cannot but observe to you what a legacy my predecessor has left me, "and what difficulties to struggle with; a few miserable, naked, half-starved "soldiers, not half the number the King allowed pay for; the fortifications, "and even the Governor's-house very much out of repair, and in a word, the "whole Government out of frame. It hath been represented to the Gov-"ernment in England, that this Province hath been a noted receptacle of "pirates, and the trade of it under no restrictions," &c. The governor died towards the end of 1700. Colonel Smith, senior Councillor, administered the Government, until the arrival of John Nanfan, (13th W.) in 1701. Lieutenant-Governor Nanfan, on meeting the Legislature on the twentysecond of April, 1702, (1 Anne) recommended among other things, "that the "payments of the soldiers be more certain, and the fortifications put in a "good posture of defence." This same year, Governor Cornbury recommended in his speech of the twentieth of October, "to provide for the de-"fence of the City and Port of New York, which seemed to him to be very "much exposed, and likewise for the defence of the frontiers," &c. This was the year the session was held at Jamaica, in Queen's County, on account of the yellow-fever.

The great warfare concerning the succession of a grandson of Louis XIV to the Crown of Spain, was now carried on. England, Holland, and their allies, were leagued against France. The British Colonies in North America trembled lest a French Navy should assail them on the oceanic side. An attack from the French was also dreaded from the Canadian frontier, and from the savages in their alliance.

Under these impressions, excited by the formidable conflicts of Marlborough and Villars, Governor Cornbury, in his speech of the thirteenth of April, 1703, employs these words: "Gentlemen: I must acquaint you, that "since your adjournment, I have received information that the French in-"tend to attack this place, by sea, this Summer. I think the best way to "prevent their design, will be to erect two batteries of guns at the Nar-"rows, one on each side, which I believe is the only way to make this "Port safe."

In his speech of the twenty-ninth of May, 1706, Governor Cornbury says: "The repeated advices our merchants here have received from their corres-" pondents in the West Indies, of the design the French have of attempting "this Colony, has made me think it of absolute necessity to call you together "at this time, that all proper measures may be taken for the defence of this "place, which, as yet, lies very open, naked, and defenceless. There are "two things, therefore, which I shall chiefly recommend to your care : one "is the providing a fund for the fortifying of this City; the other, is the "providing a fund for the repairing of Her Majesty's Fort, which is ex-"tremely out of order, and for mounting the guns, most of the carriages "being rotten and unserviceable. These two things are of absolute neces-"sity, and without which, it is to be feared, this place will become a prey "to a powerful enemy, who can design no less than to lay waste and de-"stroy it, as they have done the islands of Nevis and St. Christopher, &c. "Gentlemen: I must take notice to you, that the last Assembly did pass "an Act for the raising 1500l. towards erecting Batteries at the Narrows, "which would have been of very great use at this time, had the money "been collected; but it has not. I am sensible that some malicious, ill-"minded people have reported that I had taken that money into my hands. "That the truth hereof may be known and I justified, I recommend to you "to make strict inquiry into that tax."

The same Governor, in his speech of the twenty-seventh of September,

1706, observes: "I must again recommend to you the providing a fund for "repairing and maintaining Her Majesty's Fort in this City, which yet wants "several things to put it in a posture to resist an enemy, if we should be "attacked, which we very narrowly escaped this Summer. Whether you "will not think fit to fortify the Narrows, to prevent any attempt of the "like nature for the future, I leave to your consideration; but in my judg-"ment, I look upon that to be the best way to cover this City from any attempt the French may intend to make upon us: and I choose to mention "it to you at this time, the rather because Captain Red Knap, whom the "Queen has been pleased to appoint to be her engineer in these parts, is "now here, and will, if you desire it, give you an account of what he thinks "proper to be done to answer that end."

After all these urgent calls on the part of the Executive, the Legislature, which seems to have been uniformly hard to move, passed an Act for raising 3000L towards defraying the expense of fortifying the City of New York, on the twenty-first of October, 1706.

In his speech of the seventh of April, 1709, Governor Cornbury again says: "I must in particular desire you to provide for the necessary repairs of the fortifications of the Province."

Governor Robert Hunter, in his speech of the first of May, 1712, remarks,
"that these letters from the Governor of Bermuda, as well as other good
"advices which I have received, will convince you of the necessity I lie
"under of calling for one more of the independent Companies from Albany,
"for the security of this place, [New York] not being very sure upon what "parts this storm is to break."

From all which it appears, that it was the fashion a Century ago to express great apprehension, to form grand projects, and to do very little.

VI

The series of events relative to Fortifying New York, from the death of Queen Anne in 1714, to the arrival of Lord Loudoun with a fleet, in 1756.

In his Speech of the fifth of June, 1716, (2 Geo. I.) Governor Hunter observes, that "the vast preparations of France, &c., justify my appre"hensions, and I hope will be sufficient to induce you to put yourselves in "a better state of defence against the evil day to come. The strength of "this fort is very little proportioned to its use, which I take to be not only
"the security of this Province, but in a great measure, that of the Con"tinent."

Afterwards, Governor Burnet (10 Geo. I.) in his Speech of the fifteenth of May, 1724, addressed the Assembly thus: "When you are informed of "the ruinous condition of the buildings of this Fort, (which is the only "strength of this Town and Harbour,) you will agree with me, that an "immediate and sufficient provision to repair it, is the most frugal method "to go about so necessary a work; what you have formerly provided, has "been fully employed by me for that service; and I will order an estimate of the extraordinary repairs now wanting, to be laid before you."

In a Message to the Assembly, of the fourth of November, 1725, and in his Speech at the opening of the Session, on the sixth of April, 1726, Governor Burnet urges the importance of making repairs to the Fort and buildings. This he repeats in his Speeches of the twenty-seventh of September, 1726, and the thirtieth of September, 1727.

A thorough repair of the Barracks in the Fort is earnestly requested by Governer Cosby in his Speech of the sixteenth of October, 1783, (6th Geo. L.) In his Speech of the twenty-fifth of April, 1784, Governor Cosby recommends to the Assembly, "the safety and protection of the Harbor of "New York, and of the Frontiers, no time being so fit to guard against our "future enemies as a time of Peace; the duration of the present Peace be"ing uncertain. I therefore earnestly recommend to you to make use of "the present time, and to give a sufficient sum for the erecting of a Bat"tety at the point of rocks, by White-Hall, and of new Fortsat Albany and "Schenectady. I will cause to be drawn such plans for these purposes, "as I think will best answer the end, and make an estimate of the "expense."

On the twenty-first of November, 1734, an Order of the Corporation of the City of New York was made out, under the signature of Robert Lurting, then Mayor, giving the Assembly their consent to the insertion of a Clause in a Bill now under commitment, for erecting a Battery on Copsee Rocks, saving to that Corporation the undoubted right they have to the soil, from high water mark to low water mark, from Whitehall to Eld's Corner. (1 Journal of Assembly, 678.)

In the Speech of the fourteenth of October, 1736, Governor Cosby again urges attention to the Fortifications; and reiterates it in the Speech of the fifth of April, 1737.

Governor Clark, in his Speech of the fifth of September, 1738, recommends Fortifications, and measures of defence. In his Speech of the fifteenth of April, 1741, he addresses the Legislature in these terms (144ħ Geo. II.) "There is great cause to apprehend a speedy rupture with "France; your situation ought, therefore, to awaken you to a timely provision against that event, in fortifying this Town in a better manner "than it is at present, by erecting Batteries in proper places, upon some of "the wharves facing the harbor, others upon the side of Hudson's River, "adjoining the town, and one at Red Hook upon Long Island, to prevent "the enemy landing upon Nutten Island." Then follows a list of ordnance and stores for New York, prepared in consequence of an order of the Lords for Plantations, &c. (Lott's Journal of the New York Assembly, i., 795.) Various Resolutions on the Speech are recorded. Ibid, 829.

Governor Clinton, in his Speech of the seventeenth of April, 1744, (17 Geo. II.) expresses apprehensions of a French war, and calls attention to fortifying the City. The Battery on Copsee Rooks appears to have been a very popular subject; and to have excited great interest at that time. In Lott's Journal of the Assembly, ii., 25, is a long enumeration of what Governor C. judged expedient to be done for the security of New York, Albany, Oswego, and Ticonderoga. On the thirty-first, he assured them by a special Message, that "it was absolutely necessary there should be a Battery of "six guns at Red Hook, on Nassau Island, which would effectually prevent "the enemy's lying there to bombard the City, or their landing any force or artillery on Nutten Island. In case of any such attack upon us, this "Battery might be easily supplied and maintained by the force of the "country. It would likewise be proper to raise another Battery on the front of the Great Dock of this City, in order to flank the East side of "Copsee battery, as the Flat Rook battery does the Westward."

In the Speech of June twenty-fifth, 1745, the same Governor observes, that "in order to put the Province into a proper posture of defence, it is "necessary that such other Fortifications be erected about this City, with "all possible despatch, as may be sufficient to enable us to repel any force that may attack us on this quarter. For this purpose a strong Battery of twenty guns, at the East end of the Town, in the Harbour, and some "other Batteries, in other parts of the City, should be forthwith erected; "of which I will direct plans to be laid before you. It is worth considering, whether, as matters are now circumstanced, this City may not have "a considerable share of the War."

In his Speech of the Twenty-fourth of October, 1752, Fortifications are seriously recommended once more. By reason of the prevalence of the Small-pox in the City of New York, in 1753, the Legislature met at Jamaica, on the thirtieth of May, and received in Governor C.'s Speech, another hint upon Fortifications.

In a Message from Lieutenant-Governor De Lancey, of the thirty-first of October, 1753, more money is asked for Copsee Battery. And in his Speech of ninth April, 1754, he observes, that "Copsee Battery in this City, is in a "ruinous condition; and I am persuaded, you will think it absolutely "necessary to put it into good repair." In his Speech of twentieth August, 1754, Governor D. tells the Council and Assembly, that "schemes have been "formed to attack Albany and New York at the same time; the former by "a land force from Canada, and the latter by a naval armament. Let me "therefore earnestly solicit you to provide in time for your security." In the Speech of twenty-eighth November, he complains heavily "of the ruin "ous condition of the Fortifications, and of the necessity of repairing them "and erecting others." In the Speech of fourth February, 1755, (28 Geo. II.) the Fortifications of New York are again recommended "to be repaired, "altered, or other works made."

In 1756, Lord Loudoun came to New York with a large fleet, and quieted all apprehensions. We find but little more on the subject of Fortifications in the Metropolis, during the continuance of the Canadian War, which terminated in 1759.

VII.

A Summary of the proceedings from the arrival of the friendly British fleet, in 1756, to the extinction of the royal authority by the meeting of the Continental Congress, on the fifth of September, 1774.

The presence of this fleet, and the success of the Provincial and British arms on the side of Canada, Illinois, and Louisiana, rendered the people easy as to their situation; nor did Governor Hardy, whose administration terminated in 1757, (31 Geo. II.) nor Lieutenant-Governor DeLancey, during his second administration, which lasted until 1760, nor Colden, who ruled until 1764, trouble the Legislature much about Fortifications. And the like stillness on that subject seems to creep through the administration of Governor Moore and of his successors, Dunmore and Tryon, up to the time of the Revolution, which may be dated from the fifth of September, 1774, when the Continental Congress first assembled at Philadelphia.

After the dangers from the French and Indians were past, difficulties are between the Colonies and the Mother country, in which New York fully participated. As a Civil War began, the next efforts of the Colonists were to fortify, not against their old enemies, but against their late friends and fellow-subjects; and this new posture of affairs rendered it necessary to take additional precautions for defence and security.

VIII

The means used to defend New York, from the commencement of the Revolutionary War, to its termination, by the Peace signed at Paris, in 1783,

As early as May, 1775, the Continental Congress was consulted by the City and County of New York, through their delegates, how they ought to conduct themselves with regard to the British troops expected there. Congress took the matter under consideration, and recommended among other things, for the present, a defensive conduct as long as that should be consistent with their safety; but if they invade private property or commit hostilities, to repel force by force. They advised the removal of warlike stores from the City, the procuring of places of retreat for women and children, and the keeping in constant readiness, a force for repelling insult and injury.

On the twenty-sixth of that month, Congress exhorted the Provincial Convention of New York, to persevere the more vigorously in preparing for their defence, inasmuch as it was very uncertain whether the differences could be accommodated; and that the Militia be in readiness to act at a moment's warning.

George Washington, a Delegate from Virginia, accepted the appointment of General and Commander-in-chief of the American armies, on the sixteenth of June, 1775. On the sixth of October, Congress decreed that the Provincial Convention of New York be directed immediately to render Hudson's river defensible; that in doing this, they be particularly attentive to form such works as may be finished before the winter sets in; and that the Convention be directed to inquire whether there are not some other places where small batteries might be creeted, so as to annoy the enemy on their passage, particularly a few heavy cannon at or near Moore's-house, and at a point on the shore, a little above Verplanck's Point.

On the fifth of January, 1776, Congress passed this Resolution: that having conferred with the gentlemen sent by the Convention of New York, and resumed the consideration of the Report on the state of that Colony, they decreed that "no further fortifications be erected at Martler's Rock, on "Hudson's River, and that a point of land on Puplopen's Kill on the said "river, be without delay effectually fortified."

Congress, on the ninth January, passed a resolve in these memorable words: "that it be recommended to the Committee of Safety of the Province of New York, to appoint proper persons to inquire into the propriety "and practicability of obstructing or lessening the depth of water in the Narwows, or in any other place at the entrance of New York, or of any way of "fortifying that pass, so as to prevent the entrance of the enemy;" and also to inquire whether the depth of water in Hudson's River, below the Battery, may not easily be lessened, so as to prevent large ships passing up, and to make an estimate of the expense, and Report their proceedings in the premises immediately to Congress.

On the twenty-sixth of the same month, a Committee of three members of Congress, consisting of Messers. Harrison, (Va.) Lynch (S. C.) and Allen, (Penn.) was appointed to repair directly to New York, to consult and advise with the Council of Safety of that Colony, and with General Lee, respecting the immediate defence of the City of New York; and that General Lee be allowed to follow the determination of the said Committee thereon. And the said Committee was further instructed to consult with General Lee and the Committee of Safety about the fortifications on Hudson's River, and about fortifying the pass at Hell Gate. In case the City cannot be defended, the inhabitants are recommended immediately to remove their most valuable effects to a place of safety.

Eight thousand men were voted for the defence of New York on the fourteenth of March, 1776; and on the fifteenth, the Governors of Connecticut and New Jersey were requested to hold their Militia in readiness for that service, to be paid when on duty, as Continental troops, and on the ninth of April, two hundred thousand dollars were ordered to be sent to New York, for the Continental troops there.

Congress, on the sixteenth of May, 1776, directed their President to write to General Washington, requesting him to repair to Philadelphia, sw soon as he conveniently could, in order to consult with Congress upon such measures as may be necessary for carrying on the ensuing cam paign.

In consequence of a conference held with Generals Washington, Gates, and Mifflin, Congress, on the thirtieth of May, authorized the Commander-in-chief to direct the building of as may fire-rafts, row-gallies, armed boats, and floating batteries, as may be necessary and suitable for the immediate defence of the port of New York and Hudson's River.

On the twenty-third of July, Congress informed General Washington that they had such entire confidence in his judgment, that they gave him no particular directions about the disposition of the troops, but desired he would dispose of those at New York, the Flying-camp, and Ticonderoga, as to him shall seem most conducive to the public good.

The Convention of New York having represented, on the twentieth of August, that for want of blacksmiths they were greatly delayed in obstructing the passage of Hudson's River in the Highlands, which is an object of great importance, Congress ordered that the Convention of New York be empowered to employ for the purpose aforesaid, the blacksmiths that are now engaged in building the Continental frigates at Poughkeepsie.

General Washington's letter of the thirty-first of August, reached Congress on the second of September, inclosing the determination of a Council of War, and the reasons for quitting Long Island. In consequence of that decision, the City, with all its fortifications and appurtenances, was given up to the British fleet and army, under Admiral and General Howe. They fortified it and its environs strongly, to secure themselves against the American forces.

On the twentieth of September, 1776, Congress appointed a Committee of its own body, consisting of Mr. Sherman, (Conn.) Mr. Gerry, (Mass.) and Mr. Lewis, (N. Y.) to repair to Head-quarters, and inquire into the state of the Army, and the best means of supplying their wants.

During this season, the Commander-in-chief was zealously employed in providing the means of safety to New York. Between April and August, he undertook various tours and expeditions to accomplish this object. The historian records with pleasure the exertions of Washington for the security of New York. His biographers ought to give him credit for the pains he took to guard so important a station from an invading enemy. The public will peruse with interest, the following extract from his own book of accounts and vouchers, now to be seen in the office of the Register of the Treasury.

These official papers are among the most memorable that exist. After the General had resigned his Commission, he made a Statement of his Accounts with his own pen, and presented himself with them in his hands at the Treasury. There he continued, personally to attend, until they were passed. In this honorable manner he underwent the ordeal of fiscal examination. This remarkable collection of documents exists in the Treasury, as an example to all public agents, of the correctness and fidelity of George Washington. They are contained in a box by themselves, and are marked on the outside by a suitable inscription.

The extract, from a book in his proper handwriting, was copied in the course of these inquiries concerning the general defence:

The first demolition of the Fortifications after the peace of 1783, and the subsequent alarm of a French invasion, in 1797 and 1798.

AFTER the restoration of peace, and the retreat of the enemy in November, 1783, the fortifications left by them, and by the power of which, in addition to their Navy, they had held the place since September, 1776, were for a considerable time neglected and undevalued. Old Fort James was deliberately demolished, and its site, together with the adjacent grounds, formerly the Governor's Garden and a military battery, chiefly converted into public walks and open areas. This happened in 1788 and 1789, about the time that the Constitution of the United States was under consideration, and going into operation. Every thing was quiet until the French revolution broke out. The first Convocation of the notables at Versailles, in 1787, had excited little attention among a people then engaged in the solemn and arduous task of holding a Convention of their statesmen, for the purpose of settling their own government upon a more eligible plan. Nor did the Third Estate, when they erected themselves into a National Assembly, in 1789, excite any other sensation than a wish among a republican people, that liberty might be established upon a rational system among them. It was not until about 1796 and 1797, when Washington was retiring from the presidency and Adams succeeding him, that the irritation between the United States and France grew serious. At New York there was great apprehension lest we should be attacked by a French squadron. The State of New York made pressing remonstrances to Congress, to protect the City in its forlorn and helpless condition. The States having, by the Constitution, ceded to Congress the power to provide for the common welfare and general defence, the people was clamorous for protection. All this was conceded on the part of the general government, but the State was at the same time reminded, that it had not power to pass any law impairing the obligation of contracts; and a balance of two million, seventy-four thousand eight hundred and forty-six dollars due from New York to the United States, by an award of the Commissioners of Accounts, dated Philadelphia, December, 1793, must first be paid, that thereby Congress might be enabled to make the needful appropriations. The discussion between the State and the Nation grew so serious on this point, that some persons talked of sequestering that part of the public debt standing on the books of the Treasury, to the credit of New York. Whereupon the State, in 1797, to prevent such a proceeding, sold all its six per cent, and Deferred Stock, to the Bank of New York. At length, after much altercation, Congress declared by a Law, passed in May, 1798, that where any State which was found indebted to the United States, by the Report of the Commisioners for settling Accounts between the United States and the individual States, should, with the President's approbation, proceed to finish or complete any fortifications heretofore commenced by such State, for the defence of any port or harbor within the same, or shall make and erect any additional fortifications, under the President's directions and conformably to law, such State should be allowed and credited therefor, on account of the said balance. Under this provision, batteries of wood and sand were erected in the City and on several of the neighboring islands. Such was the fervor of the day, and such the apprehension of the inhabitants, that they formed themselves voluntarily into companies, for doing labor on the public works. Even the Professors and Students of the Columbia College, went in a body to Governor's Island, and worked with shovels and wheel-barrows. At length the fortifications were completed, and a sense of security occupied the public mind.

The second demolition of the Fortifications in 1804.

During the severe winter of 1804, the scarcity of fuel was so distressing, that the Corporation of the City, under a permission from the Legislature, ordered the inflammable part of the fortifications to be converted into fire-wood, for the relief of the destitute inhabitants. Under this sanction a considerable part of the works that had been constructed only six years, was destroyed by the Municipality. The batteries having been constructed with timbers filled in with earth, and the wood not yet too rotten to burn tolerably well.

XI

From the second destruction of the Fortifications, to their construction upon a regular and enlarged plan and of durable materials, under the authority of Congress.

No sooner was this work of demolition achieved by the people, than the clamour for protection and defence by fortifications, became louder than ever had been known. The French fleet was no longer a subject of dread; but it was now apprehended that an attack might be made by the English. From the proud and irritated Britons, it was feared there might be an invasion, as terrible as that of 1776. The fermentation was exceedingly great on the occasion. The merchants took the lead in subscribing and despatching Memorials to their Representatives and Senators, for the information of Congress. Their naked and deplorable condition was depicted in alarming colors, and the national administration reproached for unfeeling and culpable delay.

On the sixth of January, 1806, Doctor Mitchell presented to the Senate of the United States the Memorial of the Merchants of the City of New York, complaining, among a multitude of other grievances, of the defenceless condition of the ports and harbours of the United States, and praying the immediate interposition of Congress. This was read and referred to Messrs. Mitchell, Smith of Maryland, Adams, and Tracey, to consider and report upon.

On the twenty-eighth, the Chairman made a full and formal Report in favour of further appropriations for the defence of New York,

On the twenty-first of April, 1806, appropriations were liberally made towards the completion of the works, to the amount of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars for fortifications in addition to the existing appropriations, and two hundred and fifty thousand dollars for building fifty gunboats. And on the third of March, 1807, an Act was passed, appropriating an additional sum of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

After all this was done, a most plaintive set of Memorials were presented to both houses, signed by the inhabitants at large assembled in Ward-meetings, stating the naked and destitute situation of the City, and praying that their harbour might be put into a state of permanent and adequate defence.

The business of procuring appropriations for the defence of New York, appears to have been pursued unremittingly by Senator Mitchell. On the eighteenth of December, 1807, eight hundred and fifty-two thousand five hundred dollars was appropriated for building one hundred and eighty-eightgun-boats for the protection of the ports and harbors of the United States, and for such other purposes as, in the opinion of the President, the public service may require. The President had recommended this mode of defence, and his recommendation at that time had such sway, that nothing could withstand it. The bill for gun-boats was supported by the

New York delegation, we presume, not because so many of them were necessary, but because nothing else could be got, and gun-boats were better than nothing.

This was followed by another appropriation on the eighth of January, 1808, of a million of dollars, to enable the President to afford more effectual protection to our ports and harbours, and preserve therein the respect due to the constituted authorities of the Nation, by causing such of the fortifications heretofore built or commenced, as he might deem necessary to be repaired or completed, and other fortifications and works to be erected.

In the journals of the day, we find the following vote of thanks was tendered to Doctor Mitchell, of the Senate, who appears conspicuously to have advocated appropriations for the defence of the City.

"At a very numerous and respectable meeting of the Republicans of the "City of New York, convened in pursuance of public notice, on Tuesday "evening, the twenty-third of December, 1806, resolved unanimously, that "the thanks of this meeting be expressed and immediately communicated to Samuel L. Mitchell, our Senator in the Congress of the United States, for his prompt and patriotic exertions in procuring the port and harbour "of New York to be put in a state of defence.

"By order of the Meeting,

"Thomas Farmar, Chairman." S. Cowdry, Secretary."

During the Summer Session of 1809, by an Act passed on the fourteenth of June, an additional appropriation of seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars was made for completing the fortifications commenced in the seaport towns and harbours, out of which the expenditure to the year 1811 has been paid. Under the two Secretaries at-war, Dearborn and Eustis, have the existing works, except those on Staten-Island, been erected.

Experiments on firing shot across the Narrows.

The Commandant of the Corps of Engineers of the United States, being desirous of establishing, by unequivocal experiments, the accuracy and effect of a thirty-two pound shot fired across the Narrows, requested Captain Chauncey, Commandant of the Navy-yard and flotilla in the harbour of New York, to favour him with his assistance. Captain Chauncey obligingly ordered Gun-boat No. 6, commanded by Lieutenant Kearney, on that duty.

In order to give the utmost authenticity to the intended experiments, the Commandant asked Brigadier General Morton, who had previously intimated his wish to have the minds of the citizens of New York satisfied as to this important fact, to attend on the occasion, with such other gentlemen as he might thing proper. Accordingly, Captain Macomb, of the Engineers, went in the morning of board of No. 6, and was soon after joined by Captain Chauncey, General Morton, Colonel Curtenius, Major John Bleecker, and Captain Anthony Bleecker, of the Brigade of Artillery. The gun-boat dropped down to the Narrows, and came to anchor in twelve feet of water, on the edge of Hendrick's Reef, at three hundred and fifty yards distance from Long Island shore. The direct distance across the Narrows from this place is fourteen hundred and eighty-six yards; but as bushes and other obstacles rendered it difficult to place a target to advantage in that direction, a spot free from any obstacles was chosen on a bluff under the sothernmost private signal staff on Staten Island, from the obliquity of which, the distance was increased to seventeen hundred and fifty yards, or one mile. The target consisted of a small white flag, containing one yard square of bunting. The following table exhibits the result of the experiments from the reef:

1 2 8 4 5 6	82 pr. do do do do do do	8 lbs. do do do do do do	1750 do do do do do do	2 yards 10 yards do 6 yards *	5 Yards.	‡ 2 yards.	3 yards

The gun-boat then warped as near as possible to the shore, and within the line of wharves on Long Island; and from this position made the following experiments. The gun in this instance and the foregoing, was pointed and fired by Captain Chauncey:

Shot.	Charge.	Distance.	Right of Target.	Remarks.

For the purpose of ascertaining the result of the firing, Major Bleecker, Captain Macomb and Mr. Muhlenberg, of the Navy, were stationed in a barge near the shore, and examined the result of the several shots.

A Description of the Fortifications, as they appeared toward the close of the year 1808, extracted from a letter written by the Hon. Samuel L. Mitchell "With pleasure I offer a brief account of the fortifications undertaken "by the War Department for the defence of New York. In the beginning "of April, 1808, a sentiment was expressed in an answer to the Concurrent "Resolutions of our State Legislature, by myself and my colleague, Gen-"eral Smith, that out of the money appropriated by Congress for the gen"eral defence New York should largely participate. I am happy to see that "the confidence we reposed in the Executive has not been disappointed. "General Dearborn has directed a great deal of work to be done. A foun-dation is laid for much more; and I have no doubt that eventually our "City will be placed, not only in a respectable, but a formidable state of "defence.

"The Chief Engineer, who planned these fortifications, and who actually superintended their construction, is Colonel J. Williams, the learned and ingenious Director of the American Military Academy at West Point, and "President of the American Military Philosophical Society. The high "professional talents displayed by this gentleman, in projecting the works, whave been very ably seconded by Captain Whiley in carrying them into "operation. I shall describe them as they are. On a subject to which I have long devoted myself, and which I view with more than ordinary solicitude, I have taken as much care as I could to avoid mistakes. It is a matter of congratulation that all these structures are composed of permanent and durable materials, and will descend in good order to our successors.

"1. GOVERNOR'S ISLAND. Fort Columbus is now finished. It consists "of four bastions, three curtains and an attached casemated ravelin with "two retired flanks, the whole capable of mounting ninety-six guns, and "might without inconvenience bring half its force at one instant against "any passing ship, while it completely commands the East River. It is a "work composed of a walled rampart, eight feet thick at its base, dimin"ishing by its slope to six feet at the line of the cordon, with counter forts
"of five feet in depth, at the distance of thirteen feet from each other, sur"mounted by a solid brick parapet of ten feet in thickness; the ditch is "about forty feet wide, with a walled counterscarp, a walled covert-way
"and sodded glacis extending to the water's edge. This has a very beau"tiful appearance from the city, and is highly ornamental to the harbour.

"At a point of the island, extending westward to the very edge of "the channel, a permanent foundation of solid masonry has been placed "on a bed of rocks, which till now much endangered the navigation "at the entrance of the East River, as this point was totally submerged "except at very low water; on this foundation is erecting a castle, "being three-fifths of a circle of two hundred feet in diameter, which is "designed to be casemated with bomb-proof arches, and to cover two tiers of heavy metal. The lower tier will consist of twenty-seven French "thirty-five pounders, about equal to the English forty-two pounders. "The second tier will consist of thirty-nine twenty pounders; and the "terrace over the bomb-proof will form a barbette battery upon which "forty-five Columbiads," carrying a fifty pound shot, are to be placed.

"forty-five Columbiads," carrying a fifty pound shot, are to be placed. "This casemated castle will be about forty feet high, mounted with one "hundred guns. It consists of thirteen arches of thirty feet span, two feet "thickness, and twenty-four feet in length. The cross-walls, which are "piers to the arches, are seven feet thick between the arches and twelve at "the termination of the segment. The guns are to be mounted in such a "manner that the centre of motion will be immediately under the muzzle "of the gun, so that although the angle of fire is fifty-four degrees, the "mouth of the gun occupies always the same place, which permits the "throat of the embrazure to be so small, that a shot could not pass between "the gun and its side, and the line of fire cross at twenty feet distance. "The interior of the circle is open to the heavens; and the apertures for "the smoke amount to one hundred and forty-four square feet in the "rear, besides facility of the smoke spreading along the gallery or occu-"pying the superior space, the height between the platform being twelve "feet; but the muzzle extending beyond the throat of the embrazure, "which is smaller than the port hole of a ship, not much can return. "In this respect it must be confessed the probable inconvenience of "the smoke does not amount to the tenth of that of a ship's decks, since "there are more than ten times the space and apertures for it to spread "in and escape through. The walls of the castle are eight feet thick on "the ground tier; they will be seven on the next tier, there being a " recess of one foot for the joists of the second floor to lie upon, and in the " mass of the wall, arches are turned over each pair of embrazures, so that "if it were possible to batter a breach into the lower tier, the upper one "would rest upon those arches, and exhibit the appearance of a bridge com-" posed of very solid piers; the outside cut work of the wall is laid in what "is called Flemish bond, and each stone is dove-tailed in such a manner, "that no one can be dislocated without being first broken to pieces; over "each embrazure is a flat arch of remarkable neatness and strength. The "first platform will be ready to receive its guns at the close of this season. "This account of the castle may be closed by observing, that within its

"This account of the castle may be closed by observing, that within its "walls is an inexhaustible well of the finest water, from which all the "shipping of New York might be watered with ease.

^{*} This gun is a new invention, cast at Foxall's foundery on the Potomac It is different from the English carronade, and has been proved to carry a shot at the distance of six bundred yards through a breastwork thicker than the sides of a ship of the line, with the addition of three feet of earth and finscines behind it.

"2. Bedlow's Island.—A mortar battery commands all the channel "and anchoring ground to the full distance that a shell can be sent. The "form given to this front is irregular, on account of the position of the "island, and the irregular shape of its bank; but it has been calculated to "have the greatest sides of the angles perpendicular to the line of approach," and the shorter sides to flank them. This battery is on the level of the "ditch of a star fort in its rear, which not only commands it, but commands "and protects Ellis's Island.

"3. ELLIS'S, or OYSTER ISLAND.—The old wooden parapet is taken "down at Ellis's Island, and the platform for a gun battery is completed. "The parapet is walled up, and its cannon are received.

"4. CITY of New York.—A foundation was prepared, by encompass"ing with a polygon of blocks, a space of two hundred feet diameter in a "south-west direction from the extremity of the island. The blocks form
"seven sides of an octagon, two sides on the town side being made into "one. Within the space that will be enclosed, a foundation has been laid,
"and a castle erected similar to that on Governor's Island, and already "described.

"Off Hubert Street, a foundation was laid for a circular battery of about twenty guns in one tier, which will cross fire with the one last described, so as to render it impossible for an enemy's ship to lie off the town in the North River, in like manner as the batteries before described, will make it impossible for any attack to be made on the East River, so that even if it were to be allowed that all these batteries could be passed, the city of New York would be safe, while the enemy at the same hazard would have

"5. I might easily prolong my communication, by informing you of the "laboratory, magazine and arsenal erected under the direction of Colonel "Williams, at the place where the King's Bridge and Bloomingdale roads "separate, about two miles and a half from the City Hall. It would be "pleasing to me to describe the naval force stationed by Mr. Secretary "Smith in the harbour, under the command of the gallant Commodore "Rogers. And the task would be no less agreeable to make known to you "the various and important measures adopted in pursuance of the Laws of "the Commonwealth, for the public safety, by Governor Tompkins. But "a detailed enumeration of these several matters would lead me far beyond "my limits. I therefore conclude by expressing my fervent wishes for your "health and prosperity."

"SAMUEL L. MITCHELL.

"New York, October 9, 1808."

XIV.

Works of defence under the authority of the State itself, in 1810 and 1811.

WHILE the fortifications described in the foregoing Section were going on, the Legislature of New York appropriated money for the construction of forts and batteries at the Narrows. This has been applied in erecting formidable works at Signal Hill on the East side of Staten Island, under the direction of a Board of Commissioners. The greatest advantage has been taken of the ground, and Fort Richmond, Fort Morton and Fort Tompkins have been added to the national fortifications.

XV.

Report made to Congress on the 17th of December, 1811, on the actual condition of New York, as relates to its means of resisting an enemy.

This description made by order the Executive, at this very late period, may be considered the best document extant on the subject.

FORT COLUMBUS is described as situated on Governor's Island, within half a mile of the City. It is a regular enclosed work of masonry, comprehending four bastions and a ravelin. It has sixty heavy guns mounted; a brick magazine that will contain five hundred barrels of powder. It has also brick Barracks for two Companies of men and officers, and a furnace for heating balls red hot.

On a projecting point of the island stands a stone fortress called CASTLE WILLIAMS, with fifty-two cannon carrying forty-two and thirty-two pound shot. These are mounted on two tiers under a bomb proof. On the terrace above, it is intended to mount twenty-six Columbiads, that will discharge bullets of fifty pounds weight. It contains two stone magazines which will hold two hundred and fifty barrels of powder. The arches of the second tier will answer as barracks to accommodate three hundred men. There is also on that island, a stone magazine which will contain two hundred barrels of powder, a brick arsenal, a wooden gun-house, and wooden barracks for three hundred men and their officers.

On Bedlow's Island, lying nearly opposite, is a star fort of compact masonry, mounting twenty-four heavy guns. There is within a stone magazine which will hold two hundred barrels of powder. This work likewise has barracks of brick, for one Company of men and the complement of officers and a brick arsenal.

On Ellis's Island, opposite Fort Columbus, is an enclosed circular battery of masonry, mounting fourteen heavy guns, with barracks of stone and wood for one Company of soldiers, with their commanders.

Within about one hundred yards in front of the parade at the Southwestern extremity of the City, and at the point of junction between East and Hudson Rivers, is an enclosed circular battery of stone, with twentyeight heavy cannon mounted. It has two capacious magazines and cisterns, with barracks for officers and men.

About a mile up the Hudson stands North Battery. It is an enclosed semi-circular work of stone. It contains sixteen heavy cannon mounted. It has a stone magazine, and a furnace for heating shot.

Within the City itself, and near the Custom house, is a spacious arsenal

of brick. It contains one brass twenty-four-pounder, seven twelve-pounders four brass howitzers, and twenty-two iron eighteen-pounders, all mounted on travelling or field carriages, with the necessary implements and tackle There is also a fine three-story magazine of brick.

Where the Bowery Road divides into the Harlem and Bloomingdale branches, and three miles Northward from the Old City Hall, is an Arsenal, a Magazine capable of holding five hundred barrels of powder for supplying the fortifications in the harbour, and a Laboratory for making ammunition and repairing arms, and doing every thing necessary for aiding the field and garrison service. These are all handsomely and firmly constructed of stone and brick, and the ground is enclosed with a high and substantial wall.

From this display of facts it appears, that in the works already fit for service, there are now mounted a formidable array of artillery, to wit:

In Castle Williams	. 52
On Bedlow's Island	. 24
On Ellis's Island	. 14
In South West Battery	. 28
In North Battery	. 16
In the Arsenal near the Custom House	. 34
m-+-1	000

Making an effective force of two hundred and twenty-eight pieces of artillery now fit for immediate use. To these must be added the twentysix pieces for the third tier of the castle; and four mortars for the bomb battery on Ellis's Island, which will make two hundred and fifty eight cannon and mortars arrayed for our defence.

The full complement of artillerists estimated to be necessary for manning the number of guns above specified, is estimated as follows:

Castle Williams1	,014
Bedlow's Island	312
Ellis's Island	182
South West Battery	364
North Battery	208
The travelling pieces at the Arsenal near the Custom House	442

Amounting to three thousand three hundred and two artillerists, necessary to work the guns now fit for service in the city and harbour of New York.

New York, July 2. Sunday the 24th ult. being the Anniversary of the Festival of St. John the Baptist, the Ancient and Right Worshipful Society of FREE AND ACCEPTED MASONS, of this City, assembled at Spring Garden the next Day, and being properly cloathed, made a regular Procession in due Form, to the King's Arms Tween in Broad Street, near the Long Bridge, where an elegant Entertainment was provided; and after drinking his Majesty's, and several other loyal Healths, the Day was concluded in the most social manner, and to the entire Satisfaction of all the Company.—
The New York Mercury, July 2, 1753.

The Case of the London Company of COMEDIANS, lately arrived from Virginia, humbly submitted to the Consideration of the Publick; whose Servants they are, and whose Protection they intreat.

A Sour Expedition to New York seems likely to be attended with a very fatal Consequence, and our selves haply censur'd for undertaking it, without Assurance of Success; we beg leave, humbly to lay a true State of our Case before the worthy Inhabitants of this City; if possible, endeavour to remove those great Obstacles which at present lie before us, and give very sufficient Reasons for our Appearance in this part of the World, where we all had the most sanguine Hopes of meeting a very different Reception; little imagining, that in a City, to all Appearance so polite as this, the Muses would be banished, the Works of the immortal Shakespear, and others the greatest Geniuses England ever produc'd, deny'd Admittance among them, and the instructive and elegant Entertainment of the Stage utterly protested against: When, without Boasting, we may venture to affirm, That we are capable of supporting its Dignity with proper Decorum and Regularity.

In the Infancy of this Scheme, it was proposed to Mr. William Hallam, now of London, to collect a Company of Comedians, and send them to New York, and the other Colonies in America. Accordingly he assented, and was at a vast expence to procure Scenes, Cloathes, People, &c. &c. And in October 1750, sent over to this Place, Mr. Robert Upton, in order to obtain Permission to perform, erect a Building, and settle every Thing against our Arrival; for which Service, Mr. Hallam advanc'd no inconsiderable Sum. But Mr. Upton on his Arrival found here that Sett of Pretenders, with whom he joined, and unhappily for us, quite neglected the Business he was sent about from England; for we never heard from him after.

Being thus deceived by him the Company was at a Stand, 'till April 1752, when by the Persuasion of several gentlemen in London, and Virginia Captains, we set sail on Board of Mr. William Lee, and arrived after a very expensive and tiresome Voyage, at York River, on the 28th of June following: Where we obtained Leave of his Excellency the Governor, and performed with universal Applause, and met with the greatest Encouragement; for which we are bound by the strongest Obligations, to acknowledge the many and repeated Instances of their Spirit and Generosity. We were there eleven Months before we thought of removing; and then asking Advice, we were again persuaded to come to New York, by several Gentlemen. &c. whose Names we can mention, but do not think proper to publish: They told us, that we should not fail of a genteel and favourable Reception; that the Inhabitants were generous and polite, naturally fond of Diversions rational, particularly those of the Theatre: Nay, they even told us, there was a very fine Play-house Building, and that we were really expected. This was Encouragement sufficient for us, as we thought, and we came firmly assured of Success; but how far our Expectations are answered, we shall leave to the Candid to determine, and only beg leave to add, That as we are People of no Estates, it cannot be supposed that we have a Fund sufficient to bear up against such unexpected Repulses. A Journey by Sea and Land Five Hundred Miles, is not undertaken without Money. Therefore, if the worthy Magistrates would consider this in our Favour, that it must rather turn out a publick Advantage and Pleasure, than a private Injury; They would, we make no Doubt, grant Permission, and give us an Opportunity to convince them, we were not cast in the same Mould with our Theatrical Predecessors : or that in private Life or publick Occupation. we have the Affinity to them .- Ibid.

CHARLES LOVE, Musician, from London, at his lodgings at the house of Mrs. George, in the first lane from the Bowling Green, that leads to the North River, proposes teaching gentlemen musick on the following instruments, viz. New York July 23. Last Thursday 22 Ladies of Pleasure, who were taken out of several Houses of ill Repute in this City, were committed to the Work house; and next Day, five of them, who could give but a poor Account of themselves, were condemn'd to receive 15 Lashes each, at the Whipping Post, which was performed accordingly, before a vast Number of Spectators, with Orders to depart the Town in 48 hours after, under Pain of Imprisonment; nothing appearing against the Rest, they were dismissed.

We hear there are private Letters in Town from London, of the 12th of May, which say, That Sir D'Anvers Osborne, Knt was to embark within six Weeks after that Date, for the Government of this Province.—The New York Guzette: or the Weekly Post-Boy, July 23, 1753.

In as much as it was yesterday the declared Intention of the Presbyterian Church in this City, to make use of the Version of Psalms, Known by the Name of Mr. Watts's, in their publick Worship; this may serve to acquaint all concerned, that an Impression of those Psalms was done here in the Year 1750, in order to supply two or three neighboring Congregations; which are now almost all sold off, and a new Impression begun, which would have been finished as Leisure Time permitted; but as there is likely to be a small Demand quickly for them, the Impression will be now proceeded on immediately, and finished with all Dispatch; so that in a very few Weeks they will be ready: And all such Families of this City, as shall take three or more of them at once, shall any time before the first of November next, have them at the wholesale Price of 2s. per Book, and singly 2s. 4d. plain bound, and others who incline to have them neatly bound, will have them at the Difference in the Binding.

On a Notification some Time ago, that the new Version of Psalms by Tate and Brady, was to be introduced into that Church, an Impression was immediately made of them, which fell upon the Printer's Hands; he presumes therefore, that all such as occasioned his Damage in those, will prefer the Purchasing these of him to any others.

New York, October 15.—Of the Arrival of his Excellency Sir DANNERS OSBORNE, Baronet, and the Manner of his Reception, we gave an Account in our last. On Monday the 8th, the Honourable George Clinton, our late Governor, arrived from his Country Seat, and his Excellency Sir DANNERS OSBORNE, was elegantly entertained at a publick Dinner, by the Gentlemen of the Council: And on Tuesday the Corporation voted him the Freedom of the City, to be presented in a Golden Box.

On Wednesday his Excellency's Commission was first published in Council; and while the usual Oaths were taking, the Corporation, the City Representatives, the Militia Officers, the Clergy, and all the principal Inhabitants, assembled in the Parade, and together with the Council, waited on his Excellency, attended by a Company of Foot, and a vast Concourse of People, to the City Hall, where his Excellency's Commission was a second Time published. Thence his Excellency, in like Manner attended, returned to the Fort, amidst the repeated Shouts and Acclamations of the People, where the usual Healths were drank; the Guns in the Common and Harbour firing, and the Bells of all the several Churches in the City ringing. As soon as the Crowd was a little dispersed, the Corporation waited on his Excellency with the following Address.

To his Excellency, Sir DANVERS OSBORN, Baronet, Captain General and Governor in Chief, of the Province of New York and the Territories thereon depending in America, and Vice-Admiral of the same.

The Humble ADDRESS of the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New York.

May it please your, Excellency

W E the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New York, beg Leave most heartily to congratulate your Excellency, upon your Appointment to the Government of this Colony, and your safe arrival amongst us.

As the Course of your Education, and your abilities for public Affairs, abundantly qualify you for the high Station to which you are advanced, and the important Trust reposed in you by our dread Sovereign; so must your affluent Fortune naturally dispose you to discharge your office with Integrity and Resolution.

While we cannot on the one Hand, expect the favourable Smiles of his Majesty (who has ever proved himself the Father of his People.) without that cheerful submission to his Prerogative, which is the indispensable Duty of all his loyal subjects; so are we on the other Hand, sufficiently assured, that your Excellency will ever be ready to vindicate our loyal Rights and Privileges, and be as averse from countenancing, as we are from brooking any Infringements of our inestimable Liberties, Civil and Religious.

As your Excellency's Arrival must remove every Pretence for those Animosities, which have, for some Time past, unfortunately subsisted amongst us: We flatter ourselves, that they will be buried in Oblivion, and happily succeeded by a firm and uninterrupted Peace and Tranquility, and that every one in a publick Station, will shew himself influenced by a publick Spirit; wherein, while we all agree, it will scarcely be possible to differ about the means of promoting the true Interests of the Community. This we hope and believe, is the sincere Design of the good People of this City, and herein we are confident of having the Honour of your Excellency's hearty Concurrence.

To which his Excellency was pleased to return the following ANSWER:

Mr. Mayor and Gentlemen of the Corporation.

I RETURN you my hearty Thanks for your kind Congratulations, and benevolent Sentiments upon the present Occasion.

I shall make it my utmost Endeavour to deserve your Esteem by always concurring in such Measures as may promote in every Branch, the true Interest, Peace, and Tranquility of this City and Community.

After which his Excellency, with the Council, and many other Gentle men, dined with the Corporation, who gave him an edegant and splendid Entertainment. The most universal Joy appeared in the Evening: Two and Forty Cannon were discharged in the Common: Two large Bonfires were erected: Some Thousands of the Populace crowded the Common; and the whole Town was for several Hours most beautifully illuminated. All which presaged, and gave us the most sanguine Hopes, and agreeable Prospect of his Excellency's being the blessed Instrument of making us a happy People, under his Administration: But to the great and inexpressible Grief of all the Inhabitants, his Excellency, after frequent Complaints of Indisposition, died suddenly, on Friday last, and the next Day was decently interred in a Vault prepared for the Purpose, in the Chancell of Trinity Church.

As soon as his Excellency's Death was publickly known, in the City, the Gentlemen of his Majesty's Council met at the Council Chamber in the Fort, where the Honourable JAMES DE LANCEY, Esq; produced his Majesty's Commission, appointing him Lieutenant Governor and Commander in-Chief in and over this Province; whereupon the said Commission was immediately published in Council, and the usual Oathstaken; After which the same was again published without the Fort, and his Honour was pleased to issue the following Proclamation.

By the Honourable James De Lancey, Esq;

His Majesty's Lieutenant Governor and Commander-in-Chief, in and over the Province of New York, and the Territories, depending thereon in America.

A PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS by the sudden Death of his late Excellency Sir Danvers Osborne, Baronet, late Captain General and Governor in Chief of this his Majesty's Province of New York, the Government hath devolved on me, by Virtue of his Majesty's Commission given at the Court of Kensington, the Twenty-Seventh day of October, in the Twenty First year of His Reign, constituting and appointing me to be Lieutenant Governor of this His Majesty's Province of New York in America.

I HAVE THEREFORE, for his Majesty's Service, thought fit, with the Advice of His Majesty's Council of the said Province, to order and direct, and I Do, by Virtue of the Powers and Authorities unto me granted by His Majesty, hereby order and direct, That all Officers, Civil and Military, within the said Province, do continue in, hold, exercise and perform, their several and respective Offices, Places, Trusts and Employments, until further Order; of which all His Majesty's Subjects concerned therein, are to take Notice and govern themselves accordingly.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at Fort George, in the City of New York, this Twelfth Day of October, in the Twenty-Seventh Year of the Reign of our Sovereign Lord George the Second, by the Grace of God, of Great Britain, France and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, and so forth, and in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Seven Hundred and Fifty Three.

By His Honour's Command

JAMES DE LANCEY.

Geo Banyar, Dep. Secry.

GOD SAVE THE KING.

-The New York Gazette: or, the Weekly Post Boy, Oct. 15, 1753.

In gratitude to the Memory of his Excellency Sir Danvers Osborn, Baronet, our late Captain General and Governor, we should think ourselves deficient, did we not mention the farther Particulars of his Reception, which could not be inserted in our last; which was

That on Monday Morning last, his Excellency Governor George CLINTON, came from the Country to Fort George, where Sir Danvers soon after met him; and the next Day, Governor Clinton went to the house of the Honourable Joseph Murray, Esq; where Sir Danvers lodged, to visit him; and on the same Day, Sir Danvers, with the Corporation, and several other principal Gentlemen, were elegantly entertained at Dinner, by the Gentlemen of his Majesty's Council. The next day, his Excellency's Commission was published in the usual Manner in Council; and then was attended from the Fort to the City Hall in great Solemnity, by the Gentlemen of his Majesty's Council, the Members of the Corporation, the Clergy of all denominations, principal Magistrates, Officers, Merchants, and all the Inhabitants of this City, amidst the general Acclamations of the People, the ringing of Bells, firing of Guns, and other Demonstrations of Joy, agreeable to so happy an Event, and beyond what has been usual on the like Occasions; and after the publication of the Commission at the City Hall, his Excellency returned to the Fort, where his Majesty's, the Royal Family, and other public Healths were drank; and then his Excellency, after being presented with a most dutiful and affectionate Address from the Corporation, went to an elegant Dinner prepared by them, attended by his Majesty's Council, the City Members, and several principal Gentlemen. The Evening was concluded with fring a great Number of Cannon, Bonfires, and other Demonstrations of Joy, the whole City being handsomely illuminated. But as his Excellency found himself indisposed, retired to his Lodgings soon after Dinner, and could not attend the Rejoichings in the Evening: It gave great Concern to many.
