THE BEE.

New Orleans City Paper,

CONDUCTED BY J. BAYON.

NEW ORLEANS:

TUESDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 8, 1835.

The Bee is singularly opposed by its contemporaries all of whom however it treats with courtesy or neglect. The editors of three journals have admitted very [illegible]justifiable and [illegible] communications not so much against any articles in this gazette, as against the editor. This species of personal attack from anonymous correspondents is diametrically opposed to the dignity and independence of the press. Our contemporaries must have perceived that neither the editor of the Bee, nor any of his assistant, indulges in those unjustifiable personalities against any writer—whose [illegible] may appear in the columns of this paper. [illegible] with [illegible] they have [illegible] to pass over [illegible] letter: [illegible] why should we not [illegible] Bee [illegible] as we [illegible] do us!

A [illegible] format of Saturday, which had editorially [illegible] us as [illegible] indefatiga- [illegible]ble,' and [illegible] to [illegible] between [illegible] and [illegible] published a communi- [illegible] himself [illegible] [illegible] made on us because [illegible] on Connell, and did not [illegible] those [illegible] extracted. Yet that [illegible] Courier might have read the same stanzas published in the Courier, the evening before being published in the Bee—although this we did not know [illegible] our [illegible] had them in type. [illegible] Courier [illegible] exempted from all notice, as should [illegible] [illegible] the case with us. No editor is responsible [illegible] original & selected articles to the correspondents of the journal; and we have frequently stated that the columns of the Bee are open to any proper communication.

The Courier finding that we alone had been attacked for a ridiculously alleged [illegible] to both, was determined the same day to join in the fray, and permitted some B'hian Booby to let fly a popgun at the Bee, in a very improper attempt to inculpate ourselves, on account of an assertion made in an article concerning jurors and the trial by jury: yet it must have been evident to any candid mind that when speaking of the use of the French language in the courts of justice, we desired solely to alleviate the duties of jurors. Believing that if counsel and judges were authorised and required to speak in one language only, much valuable time would be saved to all concerned; and the ends of justice be [illegible] efficiently and more speedily attained. If we were in error, our columns were open to refutation. But none should have presumed to assert that we wished to have abolished the French language among our citizens—an assertion not only unwarranted and presumptous in our assailant; but one which shows that he either did not understand us, or that he designed wilfully to misrepresent. Yet none of his assertions can avail his purpose: the Creoles, like every other class of citizens —excepting a few malignant individuals—are well aware of our being the determined friend [illegible] cate of all.

A [illegible] sign himself [illegible] of ours on the St Charles theatre, [illegible] credit for talent, but denies us any for justice, we can with much more truth return the compliment, and remind him of the Athenian, many measure others by their own standard—'Justice' and all others may be assured that though in our more juvenile days we might have condemned for the sake of sarcasm in theatrical critiques, we are now invariably guided by the mass educis recti; and can assure but for the sake of impartiality and justice, in conformity with the educated axiom of criticism laid down by the Roman satirist Juvenal, judex damnatur cum nocens absolvitur, that judge is guilty who acquits the guilty.

And now be it distinctly understood that we do not intend to [illegible] of other journals: let our articles [illegible] upon go for what they are worth [illegible] give us credit for talent; and [illegible] will give us credit also for impartiality.

We received a communication signed 'B J,' and intended to have published it but it has been mislaid. We agree in general with the opinions of the writer; yet we should like to have his name, and future communications from him.

The cotton market is rather dull with us, in consequence of being without further advices from Europe since the 8th of October, prices (as we observed) have advanced. Planters do not like to [illegible] present price of 12 cents except for the very best quality; but holders [illegible] and the price will rapidly advanced towards the end of the year; for the Liverpool packet of the 1st October will certainly furnish more cheering intelligence. [illegible] Europe—particularly if it had then been ascertained that the crops of the present year will be short of las year's.

Sugar should also command a good price for our planters, as the crops in Jamaica are very reduced.—It is true that those in Cuba are about on fourth greater this year than last, on account of the increase of plantations and the good system adopted: and hence speculators in Russia, Germany, France and England have given large orders on Havana. But the crops of this state will hardly average more than 35,000 hhds: and will not be more than sufficient for domestic consumption. Our planters may therefore be induced or obliged to raise their prices; but they should not be too hasty in disposing of their stock.

We have the pleasure of stating that Mr A B Roman will not be a candidate for the congressional senate—we say pleasure, because he is induced thus to sacrifice ambitious views, in order that he may faithfully fulfil the duties imposed on himself as president of the Orleans draining company—whose operations he has cherished and conducted.

Mr William Christy presents himself as a candidate for director of the Mew Orleans and Nashville railroad company, on the ground that he is [illegible] stockholder. A fair claim [illegible] worthy man, but unfriendly and unprecedently postponed.

Additional confirmations of the capture of Tampico by General Mehia have been received in town—which [illegible] now placed beyond a doubt. The port collector of Tampico in writing on this subject to the naval officer of Matamoras, adds that as soon as Mehia had landed and taken possession of the city, hundreds of Mexicans volunteered to augment his little army that defeated from this point—not only with the intent of assisting the state of Tamaulipas in its opposition to centralism, but of marching directly against Santa Anna himself.

When General Mehia left New Orleans for Tampico, he had resolved on becoming master of that city, which had virtually been promised him by the governor and inhabitants; and that to [illegible] an embargo on the whole seaboard line of the state of Tamaulipas.—This has effectually been done; or no ship has left Matamoras for Tampico since the landing, and none are permitted to depart except for Texas and New Orleans; and none to either except from those places. This system of blockade secures the operations of Mehia; and must effectually prevent the Mexican government sending any succors to Cos against the Texians.

The friends of Texas and of republican government in Mexico may perceive therefore that the issue of the present struggles of Santa Anna for supremacy & military control is certain; and the days of those struggles nearly numbered. The Texians have now their enemy completely or cooped up in San Antonio without [illegible] of succor, without provisions, without expected communication: so that capitulation or victory must [illegible] follow—and this may be brought by [illegible] from Texas.

Equally fortunate must the results be for Mexican republicanism: for Alvarez commanding in the south is devoted by the states of Oritaba, Tamaulipas, Hallisco and others; and Mehia in the north will be aided by the states of Coapiscoa, Michoacan etc—and a simultaneous movement will now be made on the city of Mexico itself. So much for the threatened consumption of Santa Anna, the conqueror of Tamaulipas and father of his country!!

What is the matter with Caddy's mouthing when playing on the flute? Why does he endeavor to make the flute imitate other instruments, and therefore often produce discordant and disagreeable sounds? Why does he restrict his playing to a few common or vulgar melodies—and not select the superior pieces of masters in order that his genuine merits may be tested or displayed? But why is a player of his calibre and instrument, elevated from the orchestra to the stage?

The [illegible] of the Louisiana Medical College commenced on Monday, with a lecture from Dr S Lo- [illegible]. The [illegible] for this school have been [illegible] the present year, and we hope that [illegible] merits of the professors are more fully [illegible] and developed—as the noon must be; and when [illegible] school shall be connected with a state university [illegible] is now projected, that it will successfully rival [illegible] institutions. Our physicians in general possess [illegible] talent than energy or research; but their [illegible] arguments will have passed away in simultaneous [illegible] force to promote the spirit and benefits of their profession.

The St Charles street shopping has been highly commended by journalists, who have however very sparingly confined their praises to the appearance of the [illegible] establishments. This [illegible] ing our justice in the present [illegible] and administration of [illegible] it therefore devolves on us as being impartially [illegible] of promoting objects of public interest and [illegible] to advert to the discipline established at Caldwell's theatre.

This we do also because we are greatly pleased with the order preserved and decorum displayed in that theatre—which is of course attributable to Mr. Caldwell, in his laudable intention of maintaining the legitimacy of the regular drama; and rendering his establishment not only one of recreation and amusement, but one where virtue and decency can enter and remain without being offended.

In all the other theatres in this country, with the exception of the Orleans [illegible], the auditors are offended with graceless signs and grating sounds. The pits are usually devoted to persons of the meanest class, placed between the respectable auditors and the performers: so that immorality they have its full effect, and astonish or affright the audience. This is not indeed the case at the Camp street theatre; yet it like all others has its [illegible] honroost for 'ladies of a certain class' and its drams [illegible] for drunkards and smokers, to excite loungers and others to licentiousness and disorders. Not so with the theatre of Caldwell. He has no abiding place for the libidinous and disorderly; no pigeon holes or dram asylums within his theatre—but a convenient place for every respectable citizen according to his rank and means. The utmost decorum is observed as all times: and a mother or daughter can as safely sit unmolested and unoffended in her box or boudoir at this theatre, as in her parlour or drawing room at home.

This convenience will be magnified into a comfort and splendor when the boudoirs are completed, and the saloons finished: and then auditors may as safely visit this theatre for instruction as they would a church; and for amusement as they would a large private assembly, in which they were not immediate actors.

This must effectually render Caldwell's the most fashionable, altho' it may at first deprive him the support of the lewd and [illegible] with which he [illegible] will dispense. We [illegible] that [illegible] Caldwell is truly a [illegible]

ALMOST [illegible] made by three men to [illegible] the city jail—Titreville, Murray and Underwood. Knowing they were to be tried at the criminal court and fearing that Judge Canonge would give them a passport to the penitentiary at Baton Rouge to labor for their amusement, they seized the opportunity of the afternoon inspection of the cells by the jailer. While he was so engaged, Underwood fastened blankets to the grate of the window; and so let down his associates suspended by the shoulders. But the jailer did not sleep the sleep of suspence: for deserving the [illegible] on leaped on a low house adjoining the prison and [illegible] into the street, he raised an alarm, which arrested the attention of some passengers, who arrested the runaways: but not till one of them made a desperate effort with a large knife at his person, and very [illegible] with the skirts of his coat. The three were [illegible] committed to their cells, and [illegible] to be [illegible] the mercy or justice of [illegible]

The [illegible] feast of Carabe.

The following are the toasts given at the dinner of the artillery company of the legion of Louisiana.

1. By major Relf—Arrangements of the president of the United States—the people of Louisiana cannot repent having given their suffrages to [illegible] who chiefly led them to victory.

2 By Mr Guillo—The American Union.

3. The memory of Washington and Lafayette—by L Barbarin.

4. The governor of Louisiana—by lieutenant David.

5. The army of the United States—in time of peace or of danger, it shares the glory of the citizen soldiers: and we [illegible] are pleased to see them partake of our feast—by Barbarin.

6. The navy of the United States—terrible not by number, but by skill and courage—by Short.

7. The militia of Louisiana—happy in a fine climate with liberty, the prudent citizen will prepare for such ebullitions as may obscure [illegible] horizon.

8. D Prieur, mayor—to the honor of having received the suffrages of his fellow citizens he adds that of being a native of Louisiana and merits the honor and title—by Halphen.

9. A B Roman, late governor—Louisiana has not forgotten the benefits [illegible] effected for her—by Barbarin.

10. General Planche—At the side of Jackson he displayed the patriotism and bravery of Louisiana: in [illegible]pacing him at the head of the legion, we have paid merit a just tribute—by Relf.

11. The canonniers of New Orleans—as prompt in repulsing the foe with their shots, as in celebrating their saint's day with fireworks—by ex-governor Roman.

12. Major Buisson—the artillery company will never forget his friendship and remembrance they owe to their former chief—by Percy.

13. Major Relf—He knows all marches and countermarches, but chiefly the march to our hearts—by Maurice.

14. The American flag—The star of Louisiana [illegible] folds: we know how to honor and will defend it—by T W Collins.

15. Trappan and the abolitionists—quixotic fanatics, insolent hypocrites, their [illegible] are too contemptible to deserve [illegible] a moment—by N Hugerstot.

16. Colonel Twigg and his brave officers—they partake our pleasures, we [illegible] wait the opportunity to partake their perils—by C D Bruslé.

17. The fair sex—Louisiana—The hospitality of the creoles—The memory of Dominick you, and other toasts were afterwards proposed by the canonniers.

CITY COUNCIL—Monday, Dec 7.

The council met at 5 p m, according to adjournment.

The recorder and Messrs Caldwell, Schmidt, Berry, Baldwin, Allard, Gaiennid, Pichot and Thomas were present.

On reading the journal, Mr Pichot moved to sit in secret session, which the council did for upwards of an hour and a half.

The following letter was received from the mayor:

MAYORALITY OF NEW ORLEANS, December 7, 1835.

To the president and members of the city council:

Gentlemen—I have the honor to submit to you the resignation of Mr H S Harper, second lieutenant of the city guard. I have not as yet any candidate I could recommend to you to fill that office.

Respectfully gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
D PRIEUR, Mayor.

Mr Pichot moved to accept the resignation of Harper and to grant him a gratuity of 500 dollars, in addition to his salary. Made the order of the day for the next sitting.

A resolution from a committee was presented relative to the opening of Esplanade street, so as to estimate the value of lots and [illegible]—Adopted.

The resolution to cons[illegible] by the steps on the levee adjoining the [illegible] was considered.

Mr Gaiennid moved that [illegible] a bridge should [illegible] be constructed in front of Poly street, to cast into the river the filth of the lower limits of the city—Adopted.

The resolution to demolish that part of the railroad intersecting Lacourse and New Levee streets, was on motion of Mr Allard laid on the table.

The ordinance concerning the new market was postponed till Friday, on motion of Mr Pichot.

The resignation of Mr Farlane relating to a feast to be given to the members of the city council and of the corporation, was indefinitely postponed, on motion of Mr Pichot; so was that awarding 100 dollars compensation to Mr Harper.

Mr Gaiennid presented a report from the joint committee appointed to consider the resignation of the city surveyor; with a resolution to refuse it, to reinstate him the assistance of two clerks, with a salary of $2,000; and to keep his office in any convenient part of the city. Made the order of the day for next sitting.

Mr Schmidt presented a report on a former message of the mayor relative to a complaint made by the overseer of the drawbridge, with information on the subject; and accompanied with a resolution authorising the mayor to act on the subject without consulting the council—Adopted.

The committee on improvements presented a report authorising Mr Everiste Blanc to make certain improvements at his house, under the direction of the city surveyor; and to construct a fence round the plane plantation of the corporation at the expense of the city; 2d, to fill up the stream across the bayou rosch; and 3d, to continue the bridge from the bayou Fenelon to its junction with the bayou St John.

Mr Pichot opposed these resolutions, as leading to enormous expenses; did not believing it the duty of the corporation to construct the dividing fence recommended, but Messrs Gaiennid and Allard showing that the works were necessary, and that only a moiety of the expence would fall on the city, the resolutions were adopted, with an amendment that the expences should not exceed $300.

The same committee presented a report on the petition of inhabitants of the lower faubleau to be [illegible] ranch, with a resolution to incorporate all that part [illegible] between Poydras and Lafayette streets, bounded [illegible] clearly [illegible] the river, Bourgnet [illegible] Claiborne, Gaiennid and Allard, voting [illegible] Messrs Schmidt and Berry [illegible] the negative. The [illegible] members were non [illegible] venture.

The ordinary committee presented a report [illegible] petition of Mr J [illegible] for a lot of land [illegible] Orleans [illegible] with a resolution authorising [illegible] final act confirming Hollander's sale to [illegible] lot.

The [illegible] adjourned till Friday.

The [illegible] each bank at Pittsburgh has been sued to [illegible] said Manufacturers bank of that place. [illegible] are said to be liberal, spreading the [illegible] to the bank over the space of years, for [illegible] [illegible] an interest of [illegible] per cent.

In consequence of the suspension of the transportation of the mail on the Charleston Railroad as mentioned yesterday, orders have been given by the Postmaster General to the postmaster of New York, not to forward by the steam packets any other matter than such as may be desirous for delivery and immediate distribution at Charleston and Savannah. Until there is some other arrangement made, we are therefore, to be deprived of the chances for early communication with New York, which the steam packet have afforded us. The cause of difficulty between the railroad directors and department, we understand, to be, that the former desire to stand in the relation of common carriers and not contractors, and that the postmaster general is of opinion that he has no lawful authority, even if were good policy to grant this company such an exemption from the abilities of other mail [illegible]—Mobile Reg.
