In support of the Guerrillas on the Island of Bohol, a dive bombing attack was made on the town of Tabilaran. The pushover for the attack was at 7,000 feet. Releases were generally at 1,500 feet, and pullouts at 1,000 feet. All planes strafed in the bombing run. The attack proved to be very successful, with a score of about six buildings destroyed, and oil dump was afire with smoke to 500 feet, and fifteen additional buildings were either burning or smoking badly when the strike returned to base.

Probable machine gun fire was received from positions near the target area, but none of our planes were hit.
